A university emerged.
When it began

it was small and insecure
but on the threshold of a great adventure.
Some years were lean,

some were good, but even the lean years
were good,
because the university was striding forward.
With an ever-increasing curiosity,
it grew — watching students come and go and helping them to become more aware.
In its sometimes not told story of the sometimes not told despair of adolescents, became adult. Life became fact and reality. I shed a tear for those who stumbled and gloriéd in those who learned to cope...
It was a catalyst,

a mixer and leveller,
producing leaders
and thoughtful followers.
Becoming of age,

the university emerged.
It was proud,
yet humble.
So much had been done,
but the tasks undone
and the challenges untried
loomed on the horizon and clearly portended a beginning.

Board of Trustees
Represents the People

East Carolina University is owned and operated by the people of North Carolina, who exercise their rights through their representatives, who are the Board of Trustees.

The Board, consisting of people from all walks of life, deals effectively with the problems of the University.
Leo W. Jenkins
President

"To Serve," the motto of East Carolina, was also the motto of President Jenkins. In November, 1965, Dr. Jenkins first raised the question of separate university status for East Carolina. "Here already stands a university. Why not declare it so?"

Thus began his struggle again to serve the people of North Carolina. Debating throughout the state, he brought the question of a university to serve the East home to the people. Pressured by the demands of the public, the legislature made its decision . . . in favor of President Jenkins and the people of North Carolina.
Administration Expands Facilities

Administration consisted of two major divisions: the division of academic affairs, headed by Dr. Robert L. Holt, and the division of business affairs, headed by Mr. F. D. Duncan. Together these two divisions administered the student life and financial aspects of the university.

Business was conducted from the new nursing building, where the administration offices were temporarily located until they would be moved into the newly redecorated Witchard Hall.

Summer School Brings Watermelon Feasts, Ice Cream Cones, Bingo, Hot Days

To many summer school was a must; to others it was a means of finishing college sooner. To still others it was merely a pastime. Whatever the reason, one found the traditional summer school spirit through the luscious watermelon feasts on the mall and fun-filled nights of bingo-ice cream parties at the University Union. These aided in relieving the monotony of the continuing school year and cooled the heat of summer days.

Summer school entertainment for 1967 at East Carolina featured several nationally prominent entertainers. Headlining the attractions were jazz comic Flip Wilson and singer-guitarist Anita Sheer. Fireworks on the Fourth of July and the varied entertainment offered by the nightspots in town provided students diversion from their studies.

September brought approximately 9700 more people to Greenville as East Carolina University began a new term. A period of self-analysis began for a sizeable percentage of this group. Their parents were gone for the first time, and the agony of facing a new and unknown roommate was about to begin for all incoming freshmen. Well-known statistics, saying there was one out of three chances of remaining in school, faced each one. The responsibilities of the real world thus came into each person's life.

Drop-Add, Registration Cause Lines, Confusion

"Form double lines over there!"
"Stop those students slinking through that back door!"
"May I borrow your pen?"
"I didn't know 50,000 students were on campus!"

As pre-registration, drop-add, and the mad rush on the book store began, these phrases were heard flowing freely about campus. This was a time seldom enjoyable and only occasionally tolerable.

Left: Drop-add forms in hand, students wait to reach the file to obtain new courses for their schedule. Below Right: The necessity of buying textbooks means another line, this time in the bookstore.
Returning alumni, balloons, and colorful floats depicting the Mardi Gras theme of the 1967 East Carolina Homecoming were characteristic of the traditional Saturday morning parade. Afternoon brought on the main event: The Citadel-East Carolina football game, which ended in a disheartening 21-19 defeat for the Pirates, the first loss of the season. Night signaled the arrival of Chad and Jeremy, who preformed in Memorial Gymnasium, and The Happenings, who provided the music for a dance in Wright Auditorium.

Trees, light poles, bulletin boards, and walls covered with an assorted array of campaign posters; ballot boxes situated in the lobbies of dormitories and the University Union; a hopeful look covering the faces of certain students; and newspaper headlines proclaiming party victories characterized the SGA elections at East Carolina University.

For the first time in the school's history, the two party system appeared to be firmly established. Winning candidates from the Student and University parties were about equal in number.

Elections Show Evidence of Strong Two-Party System

Colorful banners appear on the East Carolina campus as a prelude to upcoming elections.
With the cool fall weather arriving, football games emerged as the most distinctive aspect of the weekend scene at East Carolina. The excitement provided by a close game warmed the crowd and brought out the often lacking school spirit among the members of the student body as the football team battled its way to a tie for the Southern Conference Championship.

Adding an extra touch of excitement was the resounding blast of the “Rebel Yell” cannon that shook the stands after every Buc touchdown in Ficklen Stadium. The cheerleaders contributed an extra spark by leading cheers throughout the season with the help of megaphones and loudspeakers.

Dr. Kim Keynotes Model United Nations

Delegates from 45 colleges and universities convened April 5 on the East Carolina campus for a four-day session of the Middle South Model United Nations. Over 400 students from East Carolina participated.

"The challenge of the United Nations: Today and Tomorrow," the opening address, was presented by Dr. Kim of the East Carolina Political Science Department. President of the General Assembly was Douglas Adams of Duke University, Durham, North Carolina.

Discussion of forty different resolutions presented a wide variety of views from both sides of the "iron curtain."

Studying, often referred to as cramming in the student vernacular, was the activity that predominated the lives of East Carolina's scholars. The University's curriculum required many hours of preparation outside of class; but many students were guilty of procrastination, which resulted in an all-night cram-in. Examination week often found students unprepared for the rough schedule of tests ending in long hours of attempted study with the help of coffee and other stimulants.

Fall quarter brought a number of notables to the East Carolina campus through the Popular Concert Series and Lecture Series of the Student Government Association and the University Union Coffee House.

Ian and Sylvia began the new term with a folk concert on the mall. They presented a variety of music with English and American ballads, Negro blues, cowboy ballads, and French-Canadian songs. Pop Singer, Glenn Yarbrough, accompanied by the Stanyan Street Quartet highlighted Parents’ Day October 7 with an afternoon mall concert. Chad and Jeremy played two Homecoming concerts for the usually large Homecoming crowd. Wright Auditorium was the site for the “Pop-Folk” concert of the Serendipity Singers in November. An instrumental and vocal group, the nine members entertained with a combination of songs and comedy.

Syndicated Washington columnist of the Chicago Daily News, Peter Lisagor, initiated the Student Government Association Lecture Series with a discussion entitled “LBJ’s Use of Men and Materials.” The former South Vietnamese ambassador to the United States, Dr. Tran Van Chuong, visited East Carolina November 14 with a talk on “What Next in Vietnam?”

Folk singing was the featured event at the University Union Coffee House with the Steve Baron Quartet and Raun McKinnon providing the entertainment.

Building Expansion Takes Parking Facilities

With the expanding of the University, parking problems became more and more eminent. Parking space had always been limited at East Carolina; but as new classroom buildings were erected in a large portion of the student parking area, many students had to park their cars in less convenient areas. The administration, however, did much to combat this increasing problem by developing more student parking places around New Austin and the New Music Building and between Erwin Building and the Pamlico Room. The parking situation for women students was alleviated to some degree by the widening of the campus street in front of the dormitories and the creating of parking spaces.

"No Parking" signs with obvious violations exist on almost every road. Above Right: Finding one's car after parking it can prove to be frustrating on a late winter afternoon. Middle Right: Campus police, equipped with radio, nylon jacket, and innumerable pink slips, seek offenders at every turn.
Cafeteria Efficiency Improves

1967-68 saw increased competition between the East Carolina Cafeteria and the downtown Greenville establishments. The cafeteria had a slight edge at the beginning of the year with the introduction of the "sloppy joe." However, Happy's Billiard and Lunch soon countered with the hamburger steak, black-eyed peas, and French fries. On the whole, competition was very keen for the patrons of gourmet food at East Carolina University.

All things being equal, however, this year saw only slight increases in cafeteria prices; and the efficiency of the system improved tremendously. The students seemed very happy with the newly opened Pamlico Room and were tolerant, if not happy, with the food.

Above Left: Keeping the food warm and on display at the same time is always a problem, but the cafeteria attempts to solve it with lights and heating from underneath the pans. Building Testifies Growth of University

Pilings and cranes, pipes and dirt piles, building frames and workmen, steady bangs and a great deal of noise characterized East Carolina University's growth. Among the new buildings were the new Minges Coliseum with its nine-lane Olympic-size pool, a new science building, a new home economics building, a heating plant, a ten-story women's dormitory, and an addition to Joyner Library.

Below: New Minges Coliseum nears its final stages of construction.
Students Find Weekend Diversions in Downtown Greenville

This year the final blow was struck! In recent years the economy of Greenville has been increasingly based on a common denominator, beer. The All-American boy, who dated the All-American girl, found no place to go. That former paragon of Americanism and virtue, the ice cream parlor, was changed to the Georgetown Beer Tavern.

This tavern joined the existing hangouts of students: The Rathskellar, the Coach and Four, the Fiddlers Three, and The Ruins.

As the library surrendered its audience of sleepers and conversationalists on Friday afternoons, these were the places to go. But there were others also. The East Carolina University Playhouse and other school sponsored programs were supplemented by the two downtown theaters and the religious sponsored “The Itch” and “The Catacombs.” Hope was still alive, therefore, even after so disastrous a mishap as the loss of the ice cream parlor.

"Fun in Fantasyland" served as the theme of the All-Sing sponsored by Alpha Xi Delta and presided over by Master of Ceremonies, Baron Hignite. The program was begun by Alpha Xi Delta with a portrayal of some children's fairy tales such as Peter Pan, the Three Bears, Cinderella, and Red Riding Hood.

Winning sorority was Alpha Delta Pi, who presented a satire on registration called "Registration is a Constipation." Honorable mention went to Chi Omega. First place in the fraternity division went to Phi Kappa Tau with its medley of popular songs, and honorable mention was given to Sigma Pi Epsilon. The professional division winner was Sigma Alpha Iota Fraternity.

Vietnam concerned everyone in one way another throughout the year. Reflecting great amount of interest in this issue is the debate between Dr. John East and Cleveland Bradner. Resolved: That the sense of South Vietnam is vital to the national interest of the United States. The late attracted an overflowing crowd necessitating a move from the Educational Psychology Auditorium to McGinnis Auditorium in order to accommodate all who wished to be admitted.

Taking the affirmative was Dr. East who tendered: "The fabric of freedom is a flawless web where there can be no flaws." siding the policies of President Lyndon B. Johnson and Secretary of State Dean Rusk, he took the position that the goals of the United States in Vietnam were simply to provide the South Vietnamese with the right to choose their own form of government, whether democratic or communist.

Assuming the negative side of the question posed, Professor Bradner approached the problem from a philosophical standpoint. He stated that America was moving toward a militarily oriented government rather than a civilian one and that the whole problem could best be solved through strengthening the United Nations. "Under the present circumstances," said Mr. Bradner, "The United States is merely furnishing 'free mercenaries.'"

Fads and fashions were generally synonymous. Keeping up with the growing fashion world was a challenge for students on college campuses across the nation. East Carolina was not to be omitted from this pandemonium. Long straight hair, leather boots, textured stockings, loud colors, wild prints, plaid slacks, and mini-skirts were a few of the fads seen on this campus. As fashions changed with taste and time, so went the fads.

Coeds Contribute
Spirit, Vitality

East Carolina coeds added much to the reputation of the University. If anyone doubted the validity of this statement, he needed only to ask the male students at Carolina, State, or Duke.

There could never have been a typical East Carolina University coed because each had her own characteristics. Each in her own way added something to make East Carolina the school that it was. The University did not make the girls, but the girls made up a good part of the University.
Greenville Experiences
Beauty, Hardships
of Winter

"The ice was here, the ice was there, the ice was all around." The words of Coleridge had definite meaning for Greenville residents during their ice storm, which covered everything in sight with a beautiful sheet of ice. Nothing was left out: motorcycles, cars, roads, trees, and buildings. The ice worked its gorgeous wonders everywhere. The students with stalled cars, no heat, no lights, and dead telephones thought the ice was beautiful too!

East Carolina Initiates International Studies Abroad

Under the leadership of Dr. Ralph Napp and Dr. Hans Indorf, the International Studies Abroad organization was organized to expand the number of foreign exchange students and to expand the number of American students studying or traveling abroad.

Membership was not limited to foreign language students only but to any who wished to pursue a major field of study abroad. Under this program a nine-hour course was offered in the Political Science Department for studying political processes in Western Europe.

East Carolina University students this year came in touch more than ever before on this campus with the international aspect of academic life. A program of foreign film exchange as well as an increased number of foreign professors and students added a new dimension to East Carolina’s enrollment.

No one knew quite why the wall was built or how it became an institution. The fact that the wall and its constantly changing array of characters had become a part of the University was undeniable. Many people met and became friends while taking advantage of the free “open air” atmosphere. Many made a habit of visiting the wall before or after classes. Far from being a Berlin Wall or the “good wall makes good neighbors wall” of Robert Frost, this wall was one that brought people together in common interests and goals.

Soda Shop Furnishes Refreshment, Meeting Place

As crowds poured from the classroom buildings, the University Soda Shop became the action spot for between-class activity. Mass confusion resulted as everyone pushed his way up to the counter and began shouting his order to the frantic workers. Music from the jukebox, talk of week-end plans, laughter, and friendly chatter filled the air for the congregation of friends around the tables and along the side counters. Yes, this was the soda shop scene that became so familiar to the students of East Carolina.

Saturday mornings often found the East Carolina campus deserted. Many students packed their bags and left on Friday for a two-day vacation away from dormitory life. Many who remained spent Saturday morning in bed and tried to catch up on some much-needed sleep. A few earnest students in the library caught up on some past assignments or pushed ahead in their studies. All in all, activity was relatively limited and quiet as the rise of the sun brought Saturday morning.

Rain Brings Out Umbrellas, Boots

When typical monsoons engulfed the East Carolina campus, coeds were dressed for the weather in their bright-colored raincoats and high leather boots. The sidewalks were much too narrow as students with their opened umbrellas rushed from class to class. Occasionally an unexpected cloud spilled its contents as classes changed, and unprepared students were forced to trudge unprotected in the rain. After getting settled with wet hair and drenched clothes, students often looked out the window only to find that the sun was now peeking through the clouds once again.

Initiating the Popular Concert Series for winter quarter was singer-pianist Ray Charles, who presented the first concert in East Carolina’s new Minges Coliseum. Playing before an overflowing crowd, Ray sang a wide variety of songs including popular hits, blues, and ballads. Second on the calendar was the Danish Gymnastic Team, organized and directed by Erik Flensted-Jensen. Presenting a series of physical acrobatics, the program was divided into 14 parts and accompanied by music written by two members of the team.

Highlighting the winter term was the first annual Carousel Weekend. This program began with a lecture by Al Capp, famous for creation of Lil’ Abner. Martin St. James, returning to the East Carolina campus for the second straight year, performed in Minges Coliseum with a display of his hypnotic powers. Climaxing the weekend was a concert by the Lettermen on Saturday afternoon and a dance that night. The Buckinghams and the Monzas provided the music.

Rounding out the winter entertainment of the University Union Coffee House Series were the Grimm Brothers. These three Chicagoans gave a two-hour performance every night for a week with a show consisting of political and sociological satire.

"In sickness and in sorrow, till death do us part" described the marriage of each East Carolina student to his University. If true, many marriages were put to a severe test during the flu epidemic that struck the campus. Pleas for infirmary excuses were met with the usual cooperation, and patients were whisked speedily in to see the doctors. Green and blue pills supplemented by tasty syrup were the order of the day. Fortified with renewed vigor, the students were then able to resume the never-ending struggle for knowledge and learning.

Beginning with approximately 170 girls visiting each of the eight sorority houses for two consecutive nights, the process of elimination and decision-making began. Since each sorority had a quota of 13 pledges, competition was stiff.

Skit parties at each house initiated the second phase of rush. Returning by invitation only, the sisters and rushees were able to meet and get better acquainted. On Friday night the highlight of the week's activities, the preferential party, was given at each house. After these parties, each rushee went to the Panhellenic Room to sign a preference sheet for the sorority she wished to join. Each sorority went through this same procedure; and the Panhellenic Council, with the help of Dean White, tallied the two preference sheets.

Saturday the girls picked up the bids they had received and returned to their respective houses to begin the pledge period officially.
Mortar Boards, Diplomas Symbolize Transition to New Roles

“They came, they saw, and they conquered.”
Thus the graduates of East Carolina realized their most recent phase of education completed. They began to look forward to the challenge of tomorrow. The beginning of their education in realities was, hopefully, made more meaningful by their years at East Carolina. Their goals and ambitions then became the ambitions of those who took their places here.

Sixteen Girls Represent School At Public Events

Chosen during the spring by a general student body election, the sixteen college marshals served as the official hostesses for school sponsored events. The main requirement for election to this position was an overall B average that must be maintained throughout the school year.

One of the sixteen girls was picked as chief marshal. She assumed the responsibility of coordinating duties and making the assignments during the year.

Thirty-Nine Receive National Recognition

WHO'S WHO AMONG AMERICAN COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES chose 39 East Carolina men and women to be honored during the 1967-68 school year. Selections were made on the basis of citizenship, leadership, academic records, and contributions to the University. Emphasis was placed on extra-curricular activities rather than scholarship alone. In making the selections the committee felt these activities were also a measure of the students' abilities.

Sports
High spots of the 1967 football season included an 8-2 overall record, an all-time East Carolina offensive record, the Southern Conference's individual rushing record, and a total of some 10 school, team, and individual marks.

Three players—Neal Hughes, Butch Colson, and Kevin Moran—were honored by numerous all-star outfits.

The Pirates got off to a six-game winning streak and envisioned another conference championship, but the Citadel came to Ficklen Stadium on Homecoming and lessened ECU's chances of winning the conference title.

The other loss was to West Texas State, also at home. The Buffaloes brought as much talent to Ficklen Stadium as any visiting team had that season.

The Pirates began the season against William and Mary in a hurricane and struggled three quarters before erupting for 20 points in the final period to turn the tables.

No such problem occurred the following week against Richmond. The Bucs, after grabbing a 7-0 lead in the first quarter, pushed out front by 20-7 at halftime and added a field goal in the final half for a safe 23-7 decision.

Playing before the largest crowd ever assembled at Davidson for a football game, East Carolina got off to a quick lead; but in the middle of the second period it found itself trailing. Down 17-14 with five and a half minutes left before intermission, the Bucs went ripping on to two touchdown drives to regain a lead they never lost.

The undefeated Pirates rolled into Ficklen Stadium for their first home game played against Southern Illinois University. The Salukis were a slight favorite to derail the Bucs, but the game turned out to be all East Carolina. Fella Rhodes got the Pirates their first touchdown as he went winging 61 yards with a stolen pass, a blow from which SIU never recovered.
The following week another nationally-ranked passer, Wally Oyler, came to visit ECU. He and his Louisville teammates were treated equally as well as the previous stars the Bucs had encountered.

The Pirates went all the way to Iowa for their sixth straight victory, and it turned out to be the most exciting of the year. Neal Hughes turned in, what Coach Clarence Stasavich termed, the single greatest effort by one of his players. Hughes scored three touchdowns and passed for a fourth.

Hughes had one touchdown run of 86 yards, netted 134 on the ground, and passed for another 104. Colson bullied his way for 74 yards to give the Pirates a 27-26 victory over Parsons.

With the biggest crowd ever in Ficklen Stadium for the Homecoming game, the Pirates were dealt a poor hand by fate. The Citadel, a team filled with sophomores, chose this date to use up most of its good fortune for the year.

The Pirates had 25 first downs to the Citadel's 11, netted 242 yards rushing to 91 for the South Carolinians, and gained 181 yards passing to the Citadel's 155. But the final score was 21-19 for the Citadel, and the winning streak was broken. As it turned out, this was the deciding factor in the conference race. Had the Pirates won or tied, they would have owned outright or shared the Southern Conference title with West Virginia.

The Pirates, after leading early, fell behind twice to the Cadets and on the second occasion put on another stirring late game offensive push that brought a touchdown. Still trailing by two points, they tried a two point conversion that failed.

Colson churned out his best effort of the year as he gained 153 yards and completed a pass for another 22 yards.

Below: Bucs pick up tough yards in Homecoming match.
Down 28-7, Furman came back to lead 29-28 late in the fourth quarter in one of the biggest offensive displays involving two teams in the history of Ficklen Stadium. With the clock running out, the Pirates drove for the winning touchdown with Neal Hughes hitting Tom Grant with a 17-yard pass for the score and making it 34-29. East Carolina gained 321 yards rushing and 142 passing for a total of 463. Furman got only 55 rushing but gained 335 passing.

With Butch Colson out nursing his injured leg, the Buffaloes turned it on in the last half to win 37-13 after holding only a 16-7 margin at half-time. Colson gained 102 yards rushing, all in the first half, compared to the team’s final total of 120. This yardage indicated what happened to the Pirate offense after he left the game. Hughes had another good night passing, hitting 10 of 18; but the overall speed of West Texas with the heart of the Pirate offense on the bench was too much to contain.

Pirates Finish First in State Meet

Compiling a dual-meet record of ten wins and one loss, the Varsity cross-country team had a highly successful season. In championship competition the Pirates finished first in the State meet and second in the Southern Conference meet. Coach Bill Carson’s top eight runners were Don Jayroe, Ken Voss, Randy Martin, Terry Taylor, Charles Hudson, Ron Dibling, Dave Wight, and John Osborne. ECU had three members of the eight-man All-Conference team: Don Jayroe, Ken Voss, and Randy Martin.

Cheerleaders Attend Clinic

Under the direction of head cheerleader, Chick Krautler, the East Carolina varsity cheerleading squad led the student body in cheering the mighty Pirates on to many victories. Consisting of fifteen cheerleaders and a pirate mascot, the varsity squad gave a hundred per cent effort to every game. Through the rain at the William and Mary game, after the disappointment of homecoming, and through the struggle of basketball season, the cheerleaders continued.

Prior to the start of football season, cheerleaders Sherry Robertson and Chick Krautler attended the nation’s only All-College cheerleader clinic at the University of Southern Mississippi. Many new cheers, double stunts, chants, pom pom routines, and spirit ideas were brought back to the East Carolina squad.

Freshman cheerleaders, headed this year by co-captains Brenda Masters and Kay Whitney, were selected at the beginning of fall quarter. The eight freshman cheerleaders strived to promote school spirit at all of the freshman home games and at the varsity Homecoming game.
Soon after the Pirates moved into new Minges Coliseum, Earl Thompson, a Greenville youngster, who transferred to ECU from a junior college, set a school scoring record with 31 points.

Posting an 8 and 16 record for the season, the ECU netters faced such teams as North Carolina State, Richmond, and St. Peter's.

Dr. Jenkins announced plans for a holiday tournament next Christmas. Rapidly an outstanding field consisting of Cornell, William and Mary, Virginia, Delaware, VPI, Baylor, and the Air Force Academy were named to join the Pirates in the eight-team festival.

With a 7-7 record for the season, the ECU swimming team looked forward to the National AAU Indoor Championship in Minges Coliseum in April. At the end of the regular season, the team had won the Southern Conference Championship for the third year in a row. ECU had four All-American records to its credit: Les Gerber, One Meter Diving; Mike Hamilton, 100 and 200 Meter Butterfly; Richard Tobin, Three Diving; Mike Tomberlin, 100 and 200 Meter Backstroke. The team was ranked sixth in the National AAU Indoor Championship.

Highlights of the season were the meets with two of the top ranked teams in the nation, North Carolina State and Florida.

The highlights of the 1967-1968 season were a 19-10 victory over the Citadel, the defending Southern Conference Wrestling Champions, and a 17-17 tie with Old Dominion, rated as one of the top three teams in the South. Pirates Tie for Conference Title

Led by the University’s first All-American, Richard Narron, the Pirate Baseball team finished the season in a tie with West Virginia for the Conference title. It won twenty-three games and set a new record for wins in one season for an East Carolina team. The team finished 11-3 in the conference and 23-5 overall.

The season started with seven lettermen and open positions all over the field. Coaches Smith and Williams placed a reserve at first base, moved the shortstop to second base, borrowed a football player for shortstop, moved a catcher to left field, and borrowed a basketball player to pitch. These fellows combined with the veterans and reserves became one of the finest teams in the history of East Carolina. When the season was over, the results were as follows: Allstate; Richard Narron, Jim Snyder, and Dennis Burke. All-Conference; Richard Narron, Jim Snyder, Lynn Smith, and Dennis Burke. All-District III N.C.A.A.; Richard Narron and Jim Snyder. All-American; Richard Narron. The team ranked number 20 in the final N.C.A.A. University Division Polls.

Leading the Pirate Baseball team in batting last year, Richard Narron went on to become the first All-American ball star from East Carolina. Majoring in business administration, the Goldsboro junior began his career in baseball in high school. While playing American Legion baseball, he was selected to the All-State team for two years.

Son of Sam Narron, of Middlesex, the East Carolina "super-star" signed with the New York Mets late last year. After six months of National Guard training, he began to play for the Mets and will continue through the summer. At the end of the baseball season, Narron planned to return to school here.

Speaking of his experience with the Pirate ball club Narron replied, "It is a great team with the best coaching. He (Coach Earl Smith) is a student of the game."

Posting a record of seven wins and three losses, the 1967 track team broke and set 11 varsity records. Tri-captains Jim Cargill, Charles Hudson, and Ed Whyte worked with Coach Baxter Berryhill as the thinclads set new records for ECU.

Varsity records broken or set are as follows: one mile, 4:21.9 by Charles Hudson; two miles, 9:54 by Terry Taylor; three mile, 15:57 by Terry Taylor; 440 relay, 42:7 by Bill Cothren, Clem Williams, White Whitfield, and Ed Whyte; high jump, 6 feet 4 in. by Peter Moe; broad jump, 23 feet 3 3/4 in. by Ed Whyte; triple jump, 45 feet 1 in. by Peter Moe; discus, 135 feet by Allen Hall; and 120 high hurdles, 11.4 by Jim Cargill.

With the christening of The Leo W. Jenkins, the team's new shell, the 1967 crew team launched its second year of competition with a won-lost record of 4-1.

Coached by Andre Brousseau and led by captain Al Hearn, the team competed for the first time in the Dad Vail Regatta, one of the top crew events in the country. The meet with Asheville College also proved another first, the first crew event ever held between two North Carolina schools.

Lacrosse Team Records Disappointing Season

Led by player-coach Kirk Voorhees, the 1967 East Carolina Lacrosse Club played five games losing all but the one to the University of Richmond.

The Pirates went to Richmond April 28 to play for the Southern Conference Lacrosse Championship, a mythical title. The first half saw Richmond start off with a flurry of "lunching" only to be destroyed by the ECU "lunchers," who sent three men out of the game in the first half.

Richmond held a one goal lead going into the last half; but that was quickly destroyed by the Pirates, who scored three in the third period and four in the final period to win it, 7-22.

Coaching of Dr. Tom Paul and the experience of returning lettermen, Howard Permar and Drayton Stott, led the 1967 East Carolina golf team to a successful season with a 6-5-1 record and second place in the Southern Conference Tournament. The tournament was held on the 7000 yard Dunes Club at Myrtle Beach, South Carolina.

The well-balanced squad was undefeated on the home course, and the entire 1967 squad returned.

"No program of education can be considered adequate which does not include the training of the mental, social, spiritual, physical, and aesthetic properties of the body," explained Jack Boone, Director of Intramurals. As a part of the physical education program, intramurals were designed to provide a high degree of student spirit.

Intramural sports program at East Carolina University provided an opportunity for every male student on the campus to participate in some type of competitive sports activity.

Team sports included in the intramural program at East Carolina University were basketball, bowling, cross country, golf, softball, touch football, track, and volleyball. Badminton, foul shooting, horseshoes, table tennis, tennis, and wrestling were the individual sports offered.

Executive Branch Works for Students

Elected by and from the student body, the Executive Branch of the Student Government Association was headed by five executive officers. Along with a president, vice-president, secretary, and historian, the four class presidents served on the branch.

This year the branch worked to benefit the students by completing a faculty evaluation and by devising a Student Complaint Board.

Legislature Strives for Improvements

Composed of dormitory and day student representatives, the S.G.A. vice-president, and S.G.A. speaker, the Student Government Legislature worked in a broad capacity to serve the students of E.C.U.

In addition to making laws, the legislature approved all budgets for campus activities, ratified constitutions of new organizations, and strived for improvements most desired by the students. These included revised traffic laws, a new dress code for women, and additional lights around the girls' dormitories.
Committees Deal with Special Problems

Appointed by the S.G.A. president, committee chairmen worked with their various committees in areas of student government that required special attention. These were problems such as elections, entertainment, internal affairs, faculty evaluations, and special events. The committees sought to evaluate and administer in these fields of student activity.

Elected at the beginning of the term, Summer School Student Government carried on the duties of the regular term Student Government. In addition to governing the student body and handling disciplinary problems, the members organized a Blood Drive, created a Student Book Exchange, and worked to keep spirits high during the struggle for University status.

Men's and Women's Honor Council, each composed of seven members and one alternate, had jurisdiction over all violations of the honor code. Cases such as lying, cheating, stealing, and any matter which broke the rules of the honor code were brought to the attention of the council to be dealt with in the proper manner.

Councils Deal With Honor Code Violations
Judiciaries Enforce Campus Regulations

Operating separately to serve their respective constituents, the Men's and Women's Judiciary Councils tried all cases of violations of university regulations which did not involve breach of the Honor Code. The Judiciaries worked in co-operation with the S. G. A. and the administration to enforce school laws.

Men's Judiciary was composed of seven members and one alternate. The Women's Judiciary consisted of eleven members and two alternates.

Employed for the Student Government Association, Walter Quade and Cheryl Mears gave much time and dedication to filling the needs of the campus. Walter worked diligently for the Buccaneer, East Carolinian, Key, and Rebel; and Cheryl worked equally hard as secretary for the Student Government. Though they were kept busy, they managed to find time to share in recreation and fun with other East Carolina University students.
Board Regulates Publications

Serving as an advisory and supervisory board responsible for counseling in fiscal matters and directing the four S. G. A. publications—Buccaneer, East Carolinian, The Rebel, and The Key—the Publications Board operated as an official branch of the Student Government.

The Board composed of administration officials, faculty advisers of the publications, student editors and business managers of publications, and student members at large elected by the S. G. A. approved all contracts, elected editors, set salaries, and advised publication plans.

Neither wind, sleet, snow, nor lack of electricity kept the deadlines from arriving on their appointed dates. With this fact firmly in mind, the members of the yearbook staff spent many a night in the office burning the midnight oil and, thanks to winter storms, an awful lot of candles as they strive to put together the best yearbook ever.

This was the first year as a university! Determined to make an everlasting chronicle of the year's exciting events, staff members started work in September.

A lot of laughter rang through third floor Wright, and sometimes there was grim silence as each staff member pursued his particular job. The end of the year brought satisfaction and a little nostalgia as the finished yearbook arrived ready for distribution.

A student supported and operated newspaper, The East Carolinian, redefined and improved its coverage of campus events and topics during the 1967-1968 school year. News and editorial topics ranged from local to national and international subjects as they affected students on campus. Race relations, dress codes, and political races dominated most of the early publications.

Besides improving in news coverage and editorial objectives, the newspaper made several tangible changes in its physical organization. A new precedent was set by printing a freshman orientation issue in the summer. The addition of journalism courses and a uniform style increased the quality of writing. More money was appropriated for enlarging the paper facilities and with the hope of increasing the number of publications per week.

By providing these changes, the staff worked to move The East Carolinian out of the category of an organization or club and into a responsible position as a valuable communication medium for the students of East Carolina.

Key Orients Students

Informing the student body of the various organizations, policies, and activities of East Carolina University was the job of the Key. Published during spring quarter by a staff chosen the previous winter quarter, the Key was given to incoming freshmen who attended orientation in the summer. The remaining student body received in the fall copies to be used as reference books throughout the year.

Rebel Wins All-American Honor Rating

Competing with college literary magazines across the country in the Associated Col-giate Press’s Critical Service, The Rebel walked away with one of the few highly veted All-American Honor Ratings.

One judge said in the critique, “I rarely give one superior rating, and I have never seen this number to any issue before.”

The Rebel is published quarterly at East

Carolina University by students interested

“waking up” the campus community by means of poetry, short fiction, essays, in-

Religious Groups Reflect Spiritual Interest
Baptists Acquire New Student Union

Moving into its new student center was the zenith of the year for the East Carolina Baptist Student Union. It sought to provide a place for students to meet, discuss, have recreation, and enjoy fellowship in a Christian atmosphere. Members of the Union strove to practice their Christian concern and to relate their dedication to Christ through creative service. At Christmas the members of the Union gave a Christmas party and caroled for the Greenville citizens. The Baptist Student Union sponsored a summer mission project.

To provide Christian Fellowship for all East Carolina students and to work together in promoting good will were the founding principles for the East Carolina Christian Fellowship. The fellowship participated in many philanthropic activities in the Greenville area such as aiding a needy family with food and clothing, visiting a children’s ward at Pitt Memorial Hospital, and sending a needy child of Greenville to a Christian summer camp. Each week the Fellowship’s approximately fifteen members met to further their Christian goals for the benefit of students and the community of East Carolina University.
Encouraging and fostering an active participation in church life and promoting fellowship in a Christian atmosphere while at the university were the purposes of the members of the Campus Christian Fellowship. With the coming of spring and winter, many of the fellowship’s members ventured to the beach retreats of the organization. At the Eighth Street Christian Church, the members met weekly for dinner and worship. Their goal was to strengthen and preserve their Christian ideals.

Informality Pervades Canterbury

Canterbury was many things to many people, for this reason it was successful. Each student was able to feel free to “Do his own thing and to be his own self.” Canterbury was sponsored by the Episcopal Church, but students of all denominations and no denomination attended. There was no membership in a formal sense. A sense of communion of God and Man was ever present in all of Canterbury’s activities. Officers were non-existent because nothing must be done to establish artificial ranks with their tendency to divide. Individuality and informality were the basis for relationships between the students in and out of meetings.

Although many of the students made the Canterbury rooms a second home, organized groups met twice a week to offer the Eucharist, to eat, and to talk in the “no holds barred” jam sessions which followed supper.

Christian Athletes Sponsor Spring Football Game

Founded in September, 1963, by the participants in athletics at East Carolina University, the Fellowship of Christian Athletes presented a program to confront athletes and coaches, and through them the youth of the nation, with the challenge and adventures of following Christ through the fellowship of the Church. The members of the fellowship pushed their goals by sponsoring a football game in April and entertaining the youth of Greenville at sports events throughout the year.
Free-Will Baptists Buy New House

Free Will Baptist Youth Fellowship was organized on the East Carolina campus to promote and keep interest in the denomination. Having weekly dinner meetings in the Youth Hut, the fellowship was tied together by informative and recreational programs. In July the Free Will Baptists will move to their new location on East Tenth Street.
Hebrew Youth Undertakes Chanukakh Party

Hebrew Youth Fellowship afforded the Jewish students on campus an opportunity to gather for Bible study and prayer. This year the fellowship gathered in April for its Chanukak party and annual Passover dinner. This occasion continued the purpose of social and cultural benefit for the Jewish population on campus.

Catholic Students Attend Campus Mass

Weekly mass and confession were activities of the Newman Club, an organization for Catholic students. These were designed to enhance the spiritual and temporal lives of members. Religious, social and cultural activities, and the availability of a priest on campus was considered vital to the spiritual enrichment of the members. Socials and suppers with the priest were enjoyed by all members. Their motto “Cor ad cor quiritur” means “Heart speaks to heart.”

Clubs Further Interest in East Carolina
American Student Affiliate Chapter of the American Chemical Society was formed to instill in its members a professional pride in chemistry through intellectual stimulation arising from professional association. The society stimulated and maintained an interest in modern developments in chemistry through field trips to industry and lectures by guests. The club sponsored the sales of chemical handbooks and a symposium for high school seniors.

Physics Institute
Conducts Field Trip

Interested students found membership in the East Carolina Section of the American Institute of Physics. Through lectures and movies, the students had the opportunity to acquire a deeper understanding of physics and the work of physics. During the year the members took trips designed to help maintain their interest in physics. Their year was closed by an annual picnic with the faculty of the physics department.

Education majors who had a profound desire to teach children in kindergarten through the sixth grade and who had an outstanding interest in children were qualified for membership in the East Carolina University Chapter of the Association for Childhood Education. The members were able to further their understanding of children this year by visiting the Meadowbrook Child Care Center. Selling mums this year at Homecoming in conjunction with a local florist was the main money-making project. This money was used to give the children at Meadowbrook a Christmas party.

Promoting an increased knowledge of the science, design, development, construction, languages, and application of modern computing machinery was the founding principle for the Student Chapter of the Association for Computer Machinery at East Carolina. The association aimed to stimulate an interest in computer science and its applications in other disciplines. The chapter consisted of approximately twenty-three members who were able to advance their knowledge of computers by attending a National convention in Washington, D. C. this spring. During the year, the chapter gave demonstrations for the Merit scholars and high school students.
Circle K Ushers for Campus Activities

Serving as a service organization on campus, the Circle K club of East Carolina University was very busy. Membership consisted of any men students who were invited and maintained a “C” average.

Club members served in numerous ways. They participated as ushers to all plays and lecture series on campus. They also conducted their annual fruit cake sale, from which the proceeds were used for a Christmas party for underprivileged children.

Fidelio Society Renders Public Services

“Personal fulfillment through musical service” was the motto for the Fidelio Society, whose membership consisted of music majors in good standing. The society this year helped with the Greenville Day Care Center and gave pre-schoolers a basic idea of music. The members had a tutoring program for students wanting extra help with music courses. They also gave high school and junior high students private instruction on band and orchestra instruments, piano, and voice. The society was a society designed to stimulate the minds of its members and others by providing service and recreational projects for itself, school, and the community.

Honoring all freshmen, a picnic began the year for the East Carolina Home Economics Chapter. Creating an understanding of community and family and encouraging professional development of college home economics students were the main purposes for the chapter's founding here in 1934. Each member participated in preparing a spaghetti supper in October. The chapter gave outstanding chapter member, outstanding senior student, and outstanding freshman in the department awards at its annual awards banquet.

Gymnastic Club Excels Through Competition

"To promote action through action" served as the founding motto of the East Carolina Gymnastic Club. The club consisted of twenty members who had a keen desire to achieve and a willingness to work. Since its founding, the club has grown by leaps and bounds. This year the club participated in the Greenville Christmas parade and hosted an exhibition by a Danish gymnastic team. It engaged in meets and exhibitions with Furman, Saint Andrews, Elkin, Duke, and the University of North Carolina.

Karate Club Demonstrates Fitness of Mind, Body

Teaching various aspects of karate and representing East Carolina in competition kept high the interest of the Karate Club members. Members of the club gave several demonstrations during the year. Progressive belt awards, upon qualification, were awarded members for their achievements in karate. Practice twice weekly kept the club’s thirty members physically fit and ready for competition.

Industrial and Technical Education
Club Urges Professionalism

Persons eligible to join the Industrial and Technical Education Club included any student majoring or minoring in industrial and technical education or engineering. The club emphasized the need of technical and industrial education in eastern North Carolina. It promoted fellowship, professionalism, and growth among students in the department. The group subsidized a loan fund which it made available to all members. Before Christmas, the club collected books for the fighting men in Viet Nam and toys for the underprivileged children of Greenville.

Law Society
Studies Government

Speakers and discussion programs concerning national and international controversies were designed to lead the members of the Law Society to a better understanding of the role of the law profession in society. Stimulation of the student's intellectual curiosity concerning law and government was attempted. Membership was open to all students interested in the law profession. The society gave them an opportunity to learn about the skills and nature of the profession.

Recreational Mathematics Interests Club

Stimulating interest in recreational mathematics and providing a social atmosphere for learning new things about mathematics were the purposes of the full-time mathematics students who made up the membership of the Maria D. Graham Mathematics Club. The club was divided into two divisions: a junior division consisting of freshmen and sophomores and a senior division consisting of juniors and seniors. This year the club was honored at a picnic given by the Mathematics faculty. Members also had a beach trip in the spring.

Members of the National Society of Interior Designers at East Carolina University worked to foster close relationship between the interior design profession and the student representing the profession to the public and trades. Members were given the opportunity to a better understanding of interior design as a profession through association with a group of people who had common interests and goals. Monthly discussion groups gave them an opportunity to compare ideas and trends and hear opinions of experts. Members promoted interest in interior design as a profession by awarding two scholarships for graduate and undergraduate students.

Right: Officers of the National Society of Interior Designers study colors and textures of various fabrics. Below: Future interior decorators look over booklets presented to the group by a guest speaker.
Physical Education Majors Club Emphasizes Physical Fitness

Open to all physical education majors, the Physical Education Club promoted interest in physical education as a profession. Principles and goals set up by the club were five-fold. It encouraged students to enter the field of physical education and recreation. Students were encouraged to engage in a program of physical fitness and to become increasingly more professional. Members of the Physical Education Club tried to benefit the citizens of North Carolina by offering the students an organization that would enable them to do a better job in this area of education. The club offered students an opportunity to gain the latest information in this field.

Students with a major or minor in political science were qualified to become members of the East Carolina University Political Science Club. Under the leadership of Dr. Hans H. Indorf, this club strove to create an organizational outlet to stimulate professional interest and to promote intellectual thought and discussion in political science. In their meetings, members discussed with noted professors from the Political Science Department, the fields of diplomacy, international relations, and international law. The club sent two of its membership to the Middle South Model United Nations.

Consisting of twenty-eight members, the Pre-Medical Society invited a number of speakers from medical schools to speak to the club on the latest advancements in medical science and to show supplementary films. Under the advisership of Dr. Lawrence and Mr. Derrich, the club strove to congregate all students interested in the medical profession into a society which, through its unity, would help all members achieve their goals in life.
Members of the Society for the Advancement of Management strove to provide a bridge between the theoretical training of school and the practical world of business and management. The group took tours of businesses in this area. This organization received an honor when Ronald Ketcham, local president, and Robert Boyd were elected to the positions of president and vice-president in the North Carolina Society for the Advancement of Management. The society honored the management major with the highest overall average at the annual School of Business Convention by giving him a management award.
Providing opportunities for sociology and anthropology students, faculty, and other interested persons to associate, to interchange ideas, and to promote interest in sociology and anthropology was the primary function of the Sociology Club. The club had monthly meetings with speakers on poverty and other aspects of sociology. As a social service project for the region, the club featured a Sociology and Anthropology Day in May.

“Fame is nothing; the deed is everything.” This was the motto of the East Carolina University Student Nurses’ Association. It strove to promote professional and social unity among the student nurses. The club had many programs with speakers from the field of nursing. In November a veteran flight nurse spoke to the group on aerospace nursing. A film on flight nursing was shown. At Christmas the members caroled for the patients at Pitt Memorial Hospital and the Greenville Nursing and Convalescent Home.

Student Party Pursues "Quests for Quality"

Operating for the purpose of initiating programs in the Student Government Association and urging administrative and student officers to enforce these programs, the Student Party of East Carolina was very active. To introduce its programs to the students, it sponsored candidates in the campus elections. Sixty persons comprised the membership, which concentrated most of its activity during fall and spring elections.

Special interest in the mentally retarded and underprivileged children of the area was the basis for most of the projects of the local Student National Education Association. By selling fruit cakes at Christmas and candles made by retarded children, the members collected funds for the Sheltered Workshop of Pitt County. Underprivileged children benefited from the tutoring program in which a club member helped one child for two hours each week during the entire year.

The Student National Education Association of East Carolina University worked to provide valuable opportunities for students preparing for a teaching career. The organization strived to help its members develop an understanding of the teaching profession through participation in work of local, state, and national education associations. Club activities were designed to help students develop an understanding of the history, ethics, organizations, policies, and programs of the education profession and to gain practical experiences in working together on educational problems.

University Party Works for Campus Unity

Participating in campus elections and politics highlighted the East Carolina University Party. As the second political party on campus, the party was founded to create student interest in Student Government and to meet a need for campus political parties and political organization. Its members won seats in the Student Legislature and four positions on the Executive Council of the Student Government Association. In February, candidates were nominated for spring elections. The party had the honor of having a large majority of its members participate in the North Carolina Model United Nations Security Council.

University Union Serves Students

Under the directorship of Miss Cynthia Mendenhall, Miss Anne Sherrill, and the student officers and committees, the University Union presented coffee house programs, football dances, and a varied array of other activities for the benefit of the student population.

In the University Union a student found social, cultural, and physical activities. It was the service center for the entire university family.

Sponsoring tournament and intramural competition, the Women’s Recreation Association worked to encourage sportsmanship, leadership, and interest in athletics for the women students of the university. The association’s schedule included track meets, tennis, volleyball, field hockey, swim meets, basketball, softball, archery, and water shows. Ending the year’s activities was a spring banquet, where awards were presented to the winning intramural teams and the individual sorority and fraternity winners.

Aquanymps practice to perfect their "star" formation.

To swim front and back crawl, breast and side stroke, and to float were the only qualifications for membership in the Aquanymps of East Carolina. Under the supervision of Mrs. Gay Blocker, the girls met each Tuesday night for practice in synchronized swimming. This year the Aquanymps presented a Spring Water Show and hosted an Invitational Synchronized Swim meet for colleges in the Southeast.

Coeds Display Talents in Hockey, Modern Dance Clubs

Under the leadership of the Women's Recreation Association, the Field Hockey and Modern Dance clubs attracted girls who possessed talent and interest in these activities. Promoting the mastery of body movements served as the main purpose of the member of the Modern Dance club. The members and their director, Mrs. Josephine B. Saunders, attempted to foster an interest in modern dancing. While conditioning the body, students worked to develop poise, grace, and agility. Demonstrations of the dance techniques learned during the year were presented in a spring concert.

Members of the Field Hockey club formed a team which competed with other teams throughout North Carolina. The girls won many of the games they played.

Young Democrats Encourage Political Activity

Members of the Young Democratic Club of East Carolina worked to promote the Democratic party on the state and on the national level. The club was interested in stimulating in young people an active interest in governmental affairs and in fostering and perpetuating the Democratic Party.

The club tried to stimulate this interest by inviting speakers of national prominence. Terry Sanford, who spoke on October 18, was one outstanding example. A number of interesting speakers from the faculty, including Dr. Cleveland Bradner, also spoke to the club.

The Young Democratic Club was open to any student who professed allegiance to the ideals of the Democratic Party.
Young Republicans Work for Two-Party System in State

Desiring to work toward a revitalization of a sound, conservative, free enterprise philosophy of government was the requirement for membership in the Young Republican's Club at East Carolina. The club strove in all its doings to help restore the two party system in North Carolina. Films and speakers at the meetings helped the members to see their places in local, state, and national government.

WECU Acts As Voice of University

Consisting of approximately twenty-seven members, WECU radio served as the voice of East Carolina University. It kept the campus population informed on news, weather, and social events of the campus. The only qualification for membership was an avid interest in broadcasting. In November, it conducted its annual United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund Drive. During examinations, the station broadcasted twenty-four hours a day for the enjoyment of those students who were studying late.

Women's Residence Council Initiates New Rules

Women's Residence Council, a new addition to the East Carolina University campus, has proposed many ideas to the Administration of the University. Formed to bring about a unified relationship among women students, to insure correct interpretation of women's rules, and to promote a high standard of conduct among East Carolina coeds, the Women's Residence Council passed a new dress code and organized committees to study situations to benefit the women students of East Carolina.
Founded on the East Carolina campus in 1962, the Men's Residence Council functioned to promote a system of government for the college men's residence hall, to foster social activities, and to develop a fraternal relationship among the men students. These goals were accomplished by the formation of a court to interrupt bad conduct in the men's halls; annual dances; monthly newsletters to members of the residence halls; and a yearly publication, "The Hill."

Angel Flight, sponsored by Arnold Air Society, was a national service organization comprised of college women selected from over one hundred college and universities in the United States. The General Chennault Flight at East Carolina sought to help maintain a high morale within the local Air Force ROTC by serving as official hostesses; to further, through service, the recognition of the AFROTC; and to acquaint its members with the Air Force, AFROTC, the space age, and air education.

East Carolina University unit supported these goals by helping with blood drives, collecting for UNICEF, participating in AFROTC Week, sponsoring a children's Christmas party, presenting gifts to hospitalized children, and helping with the AFROTC annual marchathon. These activities were well rewarded, for the local Angels received recognition as the Outstanding Flight in Area B-2.

Arnold Air Society Sponsors Marchathon

The Motto of Arnold Air Society, “The warrior who cultivates his mind, and polishes his arms,” best exemplified the members of this professional service organization. Through this motto, the members always strived for the best that education offered; but they were ever ready to defend their country in time of need. To be eligible for membership, one must have attained a “B” average in his Aerospace studies curriculum and a “C” average in his overall academic work.

Arnold Air Society sponsored Angel Flight, a coed auxiliary branch of this service organization, and the East Carolina Precision Drill Team, which represented the cadet corps and East Carolina University in parades and other activities across the state. Arnold Air also sponsored an annual Blood Drive for the National Red Cross, the annual Marchathon for the March of Dimes, an annual Christmas party for underprivileged children in the community, and the Military Ball. Cadets participated in Civil Air Patrol training and other projects.

Cadets Receive Flight Instruction

Through the Air Force ROTC Flight Instruction Program at East Carolina University, nineteen senior cadets had the opportunity to learn how to fly. A source of pilot candidates to the Air Force, the program provided a course of instruction that determined whether those who met the high mental and physical requirements had the aptitude necessary for success as an Air Force pilot.

The Flight Instruction Program provides a complete course of instruction which enabled the cadet to receive the F.A.A. private pilot's license. The student also received ground schooling, which covered instruction in basic principles of aero-dynamics, meteorology, and navigation.

To provide an opportunity for the growth of friendship and to serve as an impetus to promote “Esprit de Corps” among the cadets, the Air Force ROTC met for its ninth annual Dining-in in the south cafeteria. The Dining-in began with a social period, in which the cadets and the guests met one another. In addition to the dignitaries from the University and the state, Major General Burns, Commander of the 19th Air Force, attended. Major General Burns gave a speech in which he discussed the future of the young Air Force officer. The awards presentation for the outstanding work of selected cadets was another feature of the evening.
Leadership Training
Promotes
'Esprit de Corps'

Through the Leadership Training Program, cadets were given the opportunity to plan and direct their own training activities. Besides teaching cadets how to recognize and analyze problems, leadership training gave an understanding of military customs, traditions, and the code of conduct of an Air Force Officer. Perhaps the greatest advantage of the Leadership Training Program was the esprit de corps that it promoted within the cadet group.

Air Force ROTC
Conducts Marchathon

Air Force ROTC Week and the annual Marchathon were two of the most important activities during the year. The purpose of Air Force ROTC Week was to create an interest in the two-year Air Force ROTC program and to promote a better understanding of the United States Air Force and Air Force ROTC. The annual Marchathon was a project through which the corps raised money for the March of Dimes. This year the Marchathon netted the goal of $2500.

Cadets Train in Field

"Yes sir, I'd love to march on Saturday afternoon!"

This attitude prevailed at Summer Field Training for Air Force ROTC cadets. The training was varied and intense. Military discipline was rigid, and cadets were expected to perform at their maximum level of ability. Marksmanship and survival training were two aspects of the varied curriculum. One Air Force officer stated, "Summer training is the single most important aspect of the cadet's overall training."

Corps Travels to Seymour Johnson

The Corps of Cadets made several trips to various Air Force bases this year. The purpose of these trips was to acquaint the cadets with the various facets of Air Force life. This year the cadets visited Seymour Johnson Air Force Base near Goldsboro, North Carolina. They toured the base facilities and observed the many different Air Force activities at the base.

Greeks Contribute to University Life
Responsibility Comes With Being a Greek

As a Student became a Greek, he began to have special obligations, special functions, and a special loyalty. He gave up sleep for studies, meetings, or projects. He learned to give of himself for a greater, more important whole. As he assumed the responsibilities of leadership, scholarship, and friendship, the Greek gained the prize of caring that comes from the responsibility to something or someone other than oneself.
To unify the eight sororities on campus was the purpose of the Panhellenic Council. The Council was composed of one junior and one senior representative from each sorority. The presidential position was rotated among the different sororities each year.

Sponsorship of Formal Rush during the winter quarter and the strengthening of the entire Greek system were among Panhellenic's endeavors.

To acquaint the non-Greek with the sorority system on campus, the Panhellenic published Wheels of Sisterhood, a pictorial story of each sorority which explained finances, services, and goals.
IFC Fetes Underprivileged at Christmas

"Operation Santa Claus," a joint project of the Inter-Fraternity Council and Panhellenic, treated 208 children in the Sally Branch and Mineola Schools to stockings full of fruit, candy, and gifts. Members of the fraternities and sororities entertained the children with music, games, and Santa himself.

IFC served as the unifying and governing body of the fraternities. Composed of the president and representatives of each fraternity, the council held judicial power in violations by fraternities of the Inter-Fraternity Charter or their respective charters.

Greek Week, a week of competitive activities among fraternities, began with Greek games. Barbara Taylor reigned as Greek Week Queen.

Ending the week was the annual banquet at which awards were presented. These included Greek-Week Award for the best skit of Greek Skit Night. The Outstanding Greek Award, the Service Award, and the award to the fraternity with the highest scholastic average were other honors given fraternities by IFC.
Alpha Delta Pi
Wins Greek All-Sing

"You can go to college, you can go to school, but if you're not an ADPi, you're an educated fool. That's all." This favorite chant was frequently heard from the "little white house on the corner" as the sisters of ADPi sounded off in their living room. Sounding off really paid, however, when the strains of "Registration is a Constipation" won the Alpha Xi Delta Greek All-Sing.

Then came Homecoming! Staying up until 5:00 A.M., hanging awnings, and blowing up balloons were worth the loss of sleep when the ADPis took first place in the decoration competition. They also boasted Homecoming Queen—Nancy New.

Alpha Delta PIs were represented in many campus activities including Secretary of the Student Government Association; President of Honor Council; Editor of the Buccaneer; Vice-President of Pan-Hellenic; State Student Legislators; Model UN pages; and Pi Kappa Alpha, Theta Chi, and Phi Alpha Sigma Sweethearts.

The sisters made dolls for Viet Namese children and won the WRA Participation Award. Highlighting the year was the Faculty Basketball game with the football players as cheerleaders. Their annual Parent's Day and Rose Ball weekend were events to remember.

In the organization of the sorority, mass confusion did reign. Remember the Big Weekend when the water pressure was off in all but one shower!

Even though the Alpha Phis spent time working for the Heart Fund, the Arthritis Drive, and other community projects, they still had time for house activities. What happened to the attempt to steal that fraternity flag, girls? The sisters did not do a very good job dousing Debbie when she was pinned either! They did succeed in getting themselves wet. Winning first place in the Homecoming Float competition was consolation for Friday night's last minute efforts. Dizzy, but awake, Dennis and Lizzie worked laboriously all night.

Even with a house full of girls, who occasionally rolled the rooms, the well-loved Mom survived another year.

"Book Learning" was also stressed at the Alpha Phi house. The sorority presented a scholarship trophy to the sister with the highest average.

Alpha Xi Delta
Initiates Mothers’ Club

Ridiculous was the word passed around the Alpha Xi House. A remnant of work on the homecoming float with the Kappa Sigmas was a piano sitting in the driveway. Some strong males could have helped the weaker sex cart it away instead of stealing their trophies! Then Halloween pranks brought broken pumpkins to rest on the front steps. It was a great life!

In order for their mothers to get acquainted, the Alpha Xi Deltas started a Mothers’ Club. Beach weekend, Pink Rose Ball, and Thanksgiving Banquet were among the Alpha Xis’ annual events. Campus activities in which they participated were the Arthritic Drive, Cancer Drive, and the Heart Fund.

This year was the Delta Zeta's! Their Parents' Day was a huge success. They captured first place in volleyball competition among sororities. A joint effort with Sigma Phi Epsilon produced second place in the homecoming float division. "Bourbon Street" served as the theme of the float.

Outstanding members were Becky Barrow, Editor of the Key, and Jane Hinton and Patty Larson, Fraternity Sweethearts. Candlelights were numerous and some surprising. Sometimes even congratulation went wrong. Right, Sandra?

Conversation in the Delta Zeta house was short but exciting.

"Oh, what phone were you on?"
"Were you on the out or the incoming one?"

"Long-distance for Linda West!"
"Are last names really in vogue this year?"

The Kappa Sigma social was enjoyed as was the "ruins" exchange with the Sigma Chi Deltas. What a wonderful year to remember!

First Annual Greek Hunt

Kappa Delta girls worked in the student Government, strutted with the Marching Pirates, slaved over the Buccaneer, and enjoyed all the comforts of home in their house on Fifth Street.

Fun at the Kappa Delta House included pledges on a Greek hunt visiting every male Greek house on campus and DC babies in Gritland. Homecoming proved to be "A hot time in the old town" for the KD's with burning float and all!

Again the KD's hosted the annual White Rose Ball, selected a "King for a Day," and gave a trophy to the outstanding senior woman in the sorority.

Another great year was underway at the Sigma house. Sisters participated enthusiastically in student Government, Legislature, Honor Council, cheerleading squad, and as class officers and marshals. Annual social events included Founders Day Banquet, Spring Weekend, Senior-Send-On, Parents' Day Open House, and a Christmas party for underprivileged children in conjunction with Kappa Sigma Fraternity.

Living in the house was never dull. Rat pack formed headquarters in the pink room. C. B. kept watch out the window. (For the prowler?) Deannie Kazenish called after consecutive unscheduled serenades ... Where was the K A pumpkin? Fingers remained gauzed as the "floory foursome" played all night bridge games. Drake became a brother? "Fog Machine" continued in a daze, and "Motor" continued and ... continued.

Alpha Epsilon Pi Obtains New Quarters

After busily moving into a new house this year, the AEPIs built a new party room under the supervision of brother Mike "Thumbs" Klimkiewicz. The door of the "Executive Suite" that led to nowhere was one of the main attractions of the AEPI house.

The best intramural football season of the year, with a fabulous record of 3-6-2, was obtained only through the help of their coach, Dosik.

Presented annually by the AEPIs were a scholarship award, the Best-All-Around Brother, and The Master's Cup. The brothers of Alpha Epsilon Pi also participated in the 1968 Cancer Drive.

Kappa Alpha Upholds Old South Tradition

"How many Yankees were there?"
"Ten-Thousand!"
"How many rebels?"
"One!"
"What did he say?"
"Charge!"

This rebel yell, one of the favorite calls of the KAs, reflected that good 'ole Southern spirit with which all were so familiar.

What was life like at the KA House? On a typical Saturday, are found ... Spence and his pledges cleaning up at 8 a.m. Jackson writing up the weather report issued from the "Elite Suite." (Sweaterish in the morning to long-sleeved in the afternoon.)

The KAs also socialized, with the highlight of their year being "Old South." At Christmas, the Alpha Xi Delta Sorority joined the Rebels to entertain underprivileged children.

A few outstanding members of the Kappa Alpha Order were Bill Mosie, IFC President; Steve Morrisette, Speaker of the Legislature; and Steve Moore; SGA President.
Kappa Sigma Boasts Diverse Awards

Participation in campus intramurals, a Christmas party for patients in the hospital, and a car wash for the cancer society were only a few of the activities that the brotherhood of Kappa Sigma Fraternity enjoyed. Awards given by the Kappa Sigmas included a scholarship award, a leadership award, and an award for intramural achievement.

Developing the habit of sleeping through classes seemed to be another qualification of Kappa Sigma. "Sleepy" held the record for not opening his eyes until 3:00 on any afternoon. The funny thing was that the house was always clean when Dean Mallory popped in for his friendly chat! Luck or instinct??

As this year came to a close, the majority of the original charter members were leaving. The calls to Williamsburg ceased, but the telephone always remained busy at the Kappa Sigma house.

Looking back on the 1967-68 school year at the Lambda Chi House, one found Dudley Do-Right Austin, Piggy Reel, Turkey Turrocott, Monday Turner, Nose Simmons, and Lavalier 'em and Leave 'em Dickens. They were a few of the team who helped the Lambda Chis win the Inter-Fraternity Basketball and Volleyball.

The Lambda Chis were very proud of their sweetheart, Barbara Taylor, who won Inter-Fraternity Sweetheart.

Phi Alpha Sigma Boasts Homecoming Queen

Ending every conversation with "vote Nancy New" brought exciting results when Phi Alpha Sigma's sweetheart became East Carolina's Homecoming queen.

Nine boys seeking a close bond of brotherhood formed the fraternity last November. Pledges and brothers aided in securing furniture for the house and in building a party room. Amusing decorations were added to the house by a painter who studied psychedelic technique and a seamstress who practiced the art of backward application! Highlights of the year were Wimpy's words of wisdom, Spiderman's decisions, and the attempted theft of Phi Alpha Sigma's 350 pound Tiki God by adventurous E. C. coeds.

It was bound to happen! J. Bugg, the "field mouse," broke the mirror he sang to each morning, and it was not his fault. "Angle Kisses" walked by and said, "Hi Bud," just once too often. It was a shattering experience!

Among other shattering experiences that occurred at the Phi Tau House was the annual Woman Haters Week, when the Sigmas received the most Hated Sorority Trophy. The Phi Taus' display of musical talent won them the Alpha Xi Delta All-Sing. Another trophy given by the Phi Taus went to the senior male Greek with the highest average.

The Phi Taus' outstanding membership included members of Men's Judiciary, cheerleaders, and SGA vice-president.

Pi Kappa Alpha Boasts Scholarship Trophy

Music drifted along Fifth Street during preparation for Homecoming as the Pi Kappa Alphas were busily having a paint-in. The paint-in brought about a high time on the hill. The results were the Pikas' winning first place in the Fraternity House decoration division.

Dream Girl Ball and the concert by the sea were the traditional activities of the year. Brothers participated in the Blood Drive, sponsored an Easter egg hunt for faculty children, and received the IFC Scholarship trophy.

In addition to the successful rush program, Pi Kapps concluded an extremely good intramural program. Because of the Pi Kapps’ interest in the participation in fraternity athletics, they won the President’s Cup for two years consecutively.

Another exciting year at 505 East Fifth Street began as “Flips” took over the gavel. Busy pledges provided a new party room for combo activities and fun. Living quarters had a new air and new paint, but dirt still persisted!

Beer flowed freely as the fraternities competed for the cherished title of “Greek Beer Drinker of the Year.” The Sig Eps presented an award to the outstanding Greek athlete of the year. A new award in honor of Mom Harris was presented to the outstanding pledge and brother.

Homecoming with a Sig Ep finalist in the court, parties, beach weekend, and the Sig Ep Ball were a few of the happenings that made this year one to be remembered!

Theta Chi Rates Fourth in Nation

As the sun pulled away from the shore and the basement slowly leaked into West Fourth Street, one approached the house of the ox-men. In the background Mom was heard sipping her wacki-wacki tea above the noise of the bottles breaking against the basement wall. Drawing nearer, he found the red castle of the “blue shirt boys” and their “golden throne.”

Rated fourth among chapters in the United States by its National, Theta Chi served the University by participating in the blood drive and serving as cheerleaders. Among them were the head cheerleader and the treasurer of the Student Government Association.

At Christmas the Theta Chis and the Alphi Xi Delta Sorority gave a Christmas Party for underprivileged children. In January, the brothers enjoyed their Dream Girl Dance, which spotlighted the Theta Chi Dream Girl. The Theta Chis were also proud of their White Ball Representative, who won White Ball Queen.
“Come Hell or High Water,” the theme used by Alpha Kappa Psi, won for it first place in the Organizational Homecoming Float Division. Not only did the Alpha Kappa Psis win the float division, but they captured the “Spirit Flag” for three straight weeks!

Alpha Kappa Psis sent paperback books to soldiers in Vietnam and worked with UNICEF. Beach weekend and a business trip to Texas Gulf Service were highlights of their year. Who would forget the Hell’s Angel Party, where the “best-dressed” winner carried off a bottle of liquor?

Alpha Phi Omega Rates
High National Membership

To highlight the school year, the Alpha Phi Omegas sponsored the annual White Ball in January. Proceeds from the White Ball went to the Crippled Children's Organization. Alpha Phi Omega participated in community activities including helping with the Community Chest, United Fund, the tuberculosis Association, and Pitt County Crippled Children Association.

The Alpha Phi Omegas served the campus as ushers at campus movies, graduation, and other special campus activities. Leadership and service served as the motto of Alpha Phi Omegas, the largest service fraternity in the United States.

Delta Sigma Pi Participates in Fraternity National Election

For special information projects, members of Delta Sigma Pi business fraternity took business and observation trips to Washington, D.C., and to the Research Triangle Area in Raleigh, North Carolina.

They participated in the national election for Delta Sigma Pi of the year, at which an outstanding business leader was selected. Awards were given by the organization to the senior member with the highest average in General Business curriculum, to the outstanding pledge, and to the member most improved in scholarship.

Activities of Delta Sigma Pi included Rose Ball, National Founder's Day, and Red Cross Blood Drive. A Christmas party for underprivileged children was given with the Chi Omega Sorority. Delta Sigma Pi members participated in football and bowling intramurals.

Gamma Theta Upsilon Revises Campus Maps

Sending a newsletter to the alumni of the Geography Department and to others interested in geography was a project of Gamma Theta Upsilon, East Carolina's geography fraternity. Members also participated in a survey of past students in the geography department to discover their activities and background from 1960 to the present.

Furthering professional interest in geography and strengthening student and professional training by covering subjects other than those in the classroom were the goals of Gamma Theta Upsilon.

Special plans for the year included a week-end field trip to the Outer Banks of North Carolina and a trip to Washington, D.C. Projects sponsored by the fraternity included making campus maps and revision of campus maps given to E.C.U. students at the beginning of the school year.

Phi Mu Alpha Serenades at Christmas

Christmas spirit was at a height as Phi Mu Alpha sang Christmas carols at the girls' dormitories and sorority houses and later presented the annual Christmas Concert. Other activities for Phi Mu Alpha Sinforis Fraternity included Alpha Xi Delta All-Sing, Student Composers Contest, Contemporary Music Festival, and the presentation of the Messiah jointly with the East Carolina University Symphony Orchestra and Sigma Alpha Iota. Spring quarter brought the presentation of the Fraternal Spirit Award to the brother who had exhibited outstanding leadership and fraternal spirit during his membership. Phi Upsilon Colony Receives National Membership

Phi Upsilon Colony of Phi Upsilon Omicron was formerly the local honorary Phi Omicron. A petition for membership in the national fraternity was submitted and approved. Formal initiation took place in the spring.

To advance home economics; to be of service to the profession; to organize a group of women with similar ideals and professional interest; and to encourage moral, intellectual, and professional development of members were the colony’s goals for the year.

Managing a machine that measures the number of twists in a piece of thread is an intricate part of fabric study.
Phi Sigma Tau recognized students with high scholarship and personal interest in philosophy. A B average and rank in the upper thirty-five percent of their class were required for membership in this fraternity.

Fine Arts Stresses Music, Theater
Directed by David Press and written by Arthur Schnitzler, "La Ronde" was presented to East Carolina University as a popular rondelay of love as practiced in old Vienna and told in ten interlocking scenes. Each scene was made for two persons, and each person played two consecutive scenes and served as the link between them. The soldier of the first scene left his lady of the evening to appear in the next scene with a parlor maid. From this scene of love, the maid departed to play a similar scene with the wealthy man who employed her.

George Schreiber's excellent lighting provided illumination for John Sneden's elegant set. Mary Stephenson's beautiful and stately costumes proved the right complement to the dignified setting.

After spending the afternoon elsewhere, the Count returns home to his wife, played by Jane Barrett.
Above: The Count, played by Taylor Green, and the Streetwalker, Bonnie Taylor, overcome "class distinction" via the powers of love. Left: Richard Bradner as the Poet and Jane Barrett as the Actress escape to the country for a weekend that unfortunately falls short of expectation.
"A Funny Thing Happened On the Way To the Forum" brought zany comedy to the East Carolina stage. Heads rolled, and sides split as the actors sang and danced their way into hilarity. Based on a book by Burt Shelvelove and Larry Gelbert, the play was set in ancient Rome, 200 years before the Christian era. The comedy unfolded under the direction of Edgar Loessin in an elaborate set designed by John Sneden. Brett Watson directed the music, and Mavis Ray the choreography.

R. Gregory Zittel, as Prologus the freedom searching slave, found himself in many complicated situations; but he always escaped through many clever and comical maneuvers. Hero, played by Richard Bradner, and Philia, played by Jenny Shipp, were the two young lovers determined to be together. The curtain lowered on the last act as the entire crew sang "A Comedy Tonight."

Above Right: The Courtesan, Gymnasia, is studied aesthetically by R. Gregory Zittel, in the leading role of Prologus, the slave, who attains his freedom through many clever maneuvers. Below: The entire cast opens the zany evening declaring to the audience that "It's A Comedy Tonight."

Jean Racine’s “Phaedre” as translated by Robert Lowell was the second production given by the East Carolina University Department of Drama this year. A prime example of French Classicism, the play was written by Racine in 1677. The plot was taken virtually in its entirety from the “Hippolytus” of Euripides; but thematically and dramatically, it was entirely Racine.

Staged on a majestically simple set of levels and crumbling columns the style was a modification of pure French classicism. With actor-in-residence, Amanda Meiggs, in the stellar role and guest actor from New York, Louis Turenne, as Theseus, the tragedy of a stepmother in love with her husband’s son emerges with intense power through a boldness and clarity of acting and direction. Discarding any rigidity in traditional French classicism, Director Loessin attempted to deal with lucidity of communication as the characters moved toward their tragic destination.

George Schreiber's fluid and intricate lighting brought John Sneden’s stark set into everchanging compositions and mood. The costumes designed and executed by Mary Stephenson, with inspiration from the arte-nouveau drawing of Aubrey Beardsley, were very effective in contribution to the classic simplicity in which the production was conceived. Rarely produced by college theatres, this play was an exceptional highlight in the ever-expanding repertoire of the Department of Drama.

"Romeo, Juliet" Brings Standing Ovation

"Romeo and Juliet" by William Shakespeare received its first East Carolina production by the East Carolina Playhouse in February at McGinnis Auditorium. This well-known tragedy of a boy and girl in love was directed by Edgar Loessin, who with the talents of set designer John Selden, made this play a truly moving tribute to the East Carolina stage. The costumes were designed by Mary Stephenson, and the lighting was directed by George Schreiber.

University Orchestra Presents "Don Juan"

Carefully selected by audition, members of the East Carolina University Symphony Orchestra strived to maintain the high standards set by the School of Music when the Symphony was formed. The only resident symphony orchestra in Eastern North Carolina, the group in October presented "Don Juan," a symphonic poem by Strauss. The Symphony Orchestra performed in the "Messiah" in December and gave a concerto in February.

Symphonic Band Plays in Contemporary Music Festival

Under the direction of Herbert L. Carter, the Symphonic Band toured South Carolina and performed at various high schools in that state during the month of January. It was hoped that the hours of practice would provide the band the highest quality of performance. The band also played at the Christmas Assembly, gave a concert in February, and participated in the Contemporary Music Festival at East Carolina University April 24-28. Having a limited enrollment, the band selected members through auditions.

Marching Pirates Arouse School Spirit

Marching Pirates and majorettes of 1967-68 paraded their way into the fall quarter with colorful uniforms, precision marching, and rousing renditions of the "Alma Mater" and "Dixie." The 100-member band provided an impressive background for pep rallies, football games, and the various parades in which they performed. Under the direction of George W. Knight, the Marching Pirates instilled a rousing sense of school spirit in the students, faculty and alumni of East Carolina University.

Conducted by George W. Knight, Jr., the Varsity Band provided musical experience for freshman music majors and for non-music majors with high school experience. Consisting of 70 instrumentalists, the band provided pep music for all home basketball games and gave concerts during the winter and spring.

Women’s Chorus Conducts Music Workshop

According to Director Mr. Paul Aliapoulios, the function of the Women’s Chorus was to provide a laboratory or workshop in two or three-part music for non-music majors. The chorus gave singing experience for many primary education majors. “This Is My Country” was one of several patriotic songs the chorus concentrated on this year. The chorus studied Christmas songs, folk-tunes, sacred and classical music. No audition was required for membership in the Women’s Chorus.

Men's Glee Club Travels to Morehead

Under the direction of Dr. Clyde S. Hiss, the Men's Glee Club of East Carolina University practiced three times a week this year in preparation of a concert with the St. Mary's Glee Club in Raleigh. For the first time, the Men's Glee Club traveled to Morehead City and presented an evening concert. According to Dr. Hiss, the Men's Glee Club strived to provide chorale experience to the non-music major and maintain a high quality of musical performance. Membership through audition was available to all.

Right: The Men's Glee Club and Women's Chorus combine efforts to present a Christmas program. Below: The Men's Glee Club of East Carolina University.
Women's Glee Club Sings in MESSIAH

Consisting of forty members, the Women's Glee Club of East Carolina University traveled throughout Eastern North Carolina to give concerts in the high schools. Under the direction of Miss Beatrice Chauncey, the Glee Club sang art, folk, and religious selections and participated in the Messiah and the Christmas Assembly presented on the campus of East Carolina University. Membership, by audition, was open to any woman student.
Concert Choir Sings in Christmas Assembly

Highlighting this year's activities for the Concert Choir was a spring tour of the Eastern Seaboard. The choir performed at several colleges and civic functions. Under the direction of Mr. Charles W. Moore, the choir practiced many hours in preparation for its performance in the annual Christmas Assembly.

Right: Members of the Concert Choir practice for the Christmas Assembly. Below: The East Carolina University Concert Choir.
Starting its second year as a performing group, the University Chorale, under the direction of Mr. Paul Aliapoulis, presented a spring concert for the student body and faculty. Throughout the fall and winter quarter, the Chorale conducted choral workshops for the area high school choirs. The University Chorale joined the two Glee Clubs, the Symphonic Orchestra, and the Concert Choir to present the annual Christmas Assembly.
College Artists
Present Shows

Seeking to contribute to the cultural advancement of East Carolina University was the chief aim of the College Artists. Under the supervision of director Norman Keller, the College Artists presented, during the academic year, art shows to the students and faculty of the University. The College Artists, a service organization, strived to provide ideas and promote fellowship among the art students and faculty.

Organized in 1963, the Poetry Forum was composed of students and all people interested in writing poetry. People throughout the country submitted their poetry to the Forum for criticism. At meetings of the Forum, reading and writing of modern poetry were discussed for the benefit of all members of the group. Many Poetry Forum members have had their poetry published in national literary magazines and in the University's literary magazine, the Rebel. In December, the Poetry Forum traveled to Fayetteville to give a dramatic reading for the Methodist College and the Fayetteville community.

The Fine Arts Series, sponsored by the Student Government Association of East Carolina University, presented an excellent series of concerts, which were attended by hundreds of students, faculty, and local residents. In October, the Czech Philharmonic Orchestra, under the direction of Ladislav Slovak, presented the Moldau by Smetana and A Serenade for Strings, Opus 5, by Eugen Suchon. The virtuosity of the hundred musicians had attracted many eminent men to the orchestra's podium since the first concert under Antonin Dvorak in 1896. Also in October, the Warsaw Quintet presented a program of classical and romantic music. The Quintet featured Bronislaw Gimpel, violin; Drzysztof Jakowicz, violin; Stefan Kamaša, viola; Aleksander Ciechanski, cello; and Wladislaw Szpilman, piano. The focal point of November was the performance given by the Chamber Symphony of Philadelphia. Performing selections from Don Quixote, the Symphony captivated its audience with its diversified interpretation of the grandiose "Largo," the tender "Andante," and the rustic "Allegro Moderato." Highlighting February was the appearance of the National Ballet, known throughout the world as the Resident Company of Washington, D.C.

Aerospace Department Enrolls Freshmen and Juniors in Air Force ROTC Programs Leading to Commission

Lt. Col. Douglas F. Carty, Director
TSgt. John L. Hamilton

Maj. Kevin T. Ryan, Jr.

Maj. Carl E. Tadlock

TSgt. Grover M. Thomas
To train, educate, and commission career-oriented second lieutenants to meet Air Force requirements was the mission of the Aerospace Department.

The Department taught Air Force ROTC courses under two programs which led to a commission: the four-year program and the new two-year program. In the four-year program, the student enrolled as a freshman. In the two-year program the student formally began as a junior. In both programs the cadets received financial assistance during the junior and senior years, leadership training at an Air Force base during a summer period, and pilot training in light aircraft for qualified seniors.

Air Force ROTC stressed quality, motivation, educational achievement, and service to one's country. The cadets studied world military systems, communication, aerospace power, and officer professionalism.

Expanded facilities in ceramics, printmaking, and sculpture accommodated the four hundred and fifty undergraduates and the sixteen graduate students in the Art School this year. With the appropriation of many new slides, the foundation of a technical library was begun. A new major in Design was added; and plans for offering AB, MA, and PhD degrees in the field of Art History were under way.

College of Arts, Sciences
Enlarges to Nineteen Departments

Headed by Dean John M. Howell, the College of Arts and Sciences provided the entire general arts curriculum for all liberal arts majors and served as the nucleus between the administration and the individual departments.

Composed of nineteen departments, the College of Arts and Sciences was the largest unit in the university this year. It was the first school divided into separate departments.

Professional training for actors, directors, and teachers was the basic aim of the Drama and Speech Department. Faculty and students joined in the productions.

McGinnis Auditorium was the setting for plays which brought entertainment to the student body and gave majors in this area an opportunity for actual involvement in productions.

The department offered comprehensive study in the four basic arts: dance, radio and television broadcasting, and public speaking.

To widen the student's intellectual experience, the English Department this year added a galaxy of new courses to its offerings. Among these were four undergraduate and three graduate courses in linguistics, five courses in journalism, four courses in Chinese language, two courses in Chinese literature, and one course in oriental literature in translation.

Department-wide shift to three-hour courses permitted students to take a variety of courses. In the freshman composition program, three courses were required. The first quarter was devoted to rhetoric and the essay, the second to longer prose works and training in research, and the third quarter to the short story, drama, and fiction. These courses were supplemented by a composition laboratory designed to help students with basic problems in writing.

Personal research projects by the professors, seminars conducted by the department, and a gift from Duke University of petrographic microscopes highlighted the year for the newly formed Geology Department.

The honor of attending the International Geological Congress in Prague, Czechoslovakia, was awarded a member of the department. With one hundred per cent of its staff holding Ph.D.'s, the department offered three new undergraduate degrees: B.S. in Geology, B.S. in Geology for Earth Science Teaching, and a B.A. in Geology.

Thirty-five members of the Geography Department toured Europe, wrote papers, and studied historic locations and the geography of the areas visited.

Emphasis on Latin American studies and the addition of courses on Mexico and the economics of the Latin Americas aided in the creation of a new Latin American minor.

Seminars for seniors and graduate students were conducted every week.

As a result of rapid growth, the Foreign Languages Department was divided into separate departments, romance languages and German. Mr. James L. Fleming continued as director of the department of romance languages.

Russian, a Slavic language, was added to the curriculum under the German department, headed by Dr. Henry Wanderman. Modern laboratory equipment aided the students in acquiring knowledge and efficiency in foreign languages.

“Additional space allowed the department to stress quality for physical education majors and to serve better the entire student body,” declared Dr. Nephi Jorgenson, chairman.

To maintain the East Carolina Manuscript Collection, which had several thousand manuscript items, was the duty of the full-time curator employed this year by the History Department.

The department sponsored a Symposium for History and Social Studies teachers and published its fourth volume in the series of East Carolina University Publication in History. Transition from a college department to a university department was made through increasing emphasis on research and writing and through broadening the graduate curriculum.

Commissioned by publishing companies several members have worked to produce manuscripts for certain mathematics courses. Dr. Tullio Pignani and Mr. Paul Haggard completed Elements of Trigonometry and wrote a textbook, Analytical Geometry. Dr. Spickerman and Dr. Pignani collaborated to produce another book, Elementary Geometry.

The Mathematics Department received National Science Foundation support for an institute for secondary teachers of mathematics and in-service seminars for college teachers. The first of these supports fifty secondary school teachers. It is the first support that the university received relative to professional activities of college professors from other campuses.

Undergraduate and graduate curricula were continuously studied and up-dated to comply with the national trends of leading universities in the nation.

"Philosophy presents the students with an opportunity to think about things he is not ordinarily given an opportunity to think about," said Dr. Kozy, chairman of the Philosophy Department. This year a room was converted into a Philosophy Reading Room for the benefit of the faculty members and philosophy majors and minors. New books were added to the library, and portraits of great philosophers done by students in the Philosophy Art course were displayed in the library and offices of the faculty members.
Political Science Initiates Honors Program

To strengthen its program at the undergraduate and graduate levels has been the aim of the Political Science Department. At the undergraduate level, activation of a three-quarters honor program was offered for ten juniors and seniors in the top ten percent of their class. Development of the courses at the graduate levels also took place.

Through the varied instruction offered by this department the faculty hoped to develop quality and good citizenship to their full potential in the students.

Headed by Dr. Clinton R. Prewett, the Psychology Department had 389 majors. Fifty-one students worked toward their masters' degrees. The faculty added four members to the staff. These were Dr. Spurgeon Cole, Dr. Wayne B. Kinzie, Dr. James Preston Rogers, Jr., and Jay R. Steinberg.

Internship settings where students were placed for a six month period were Asheville, Winston-Salem, Greensville, Boone, Raleigh, Goldsboro, and Morganton. One student was located at the Bar Harbor Child Guidance Clinic in Maine.

Also a part of the Psychology Department was the Developmental Evaluation Clinic, headed by Dr. Malene Ions.

Left: A dedicated professor engages in continual research.
Efforts of the Sociology Department to develop in three broad directions—social welfare, anthropology, and sociology proper—led to an increase in course offerings and a new minor in anthropology. Students were given the opportunity to concentrate in social welfare and prepare themselves for public welfare positions. New courses offered were the American Indian, Population Problems, and the Child in Contemporary Cultures.

Five visiting professors taught in the department last summer. These included such outstanding sociologists as Dr. George Hillery of the University of Kentucky and Dr. Everett Wilson, Chief Sociologist on a special project of the American Sociological Association.

American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business accredits School at East Carolina University

Attainment of accreditation by the American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business enabled the department to keep the pace set by today's changing world. "Constantly changing business and economics put pressure on a school of business to stay modern," said Dean E. R. Browning.

To keep the department up to date in every way, three new majors were added to the school of business: management, marketing, and real estate. Modern equipment replaced the old.

To serve adequately the students, the university, and the state, the school of education this year was divided into five departments. Those were the department of Special Education with Dr. Gilbert Ragland, chairman; Department of Counselor Education with Dr. Frank Fuller, chairman; Department of Educational Administration and Supervision with Dr. Ralph Brimley, chairman; Department of Elementary Education with Dr. Frank Arwood, chairman; and Department of Secondary Education with Dr. James Batten, chairman. Dr. Sheldon Downes served as coordinator of the new program in vocational rehabilitation begun this year.

Majors in Speech Therapy and Mental Retardation were added to the School of Education. The change brought an audiologist to work with therapy in the developmental clinic.

The addition of a six-year program in supervision and guidance began the groundwork for the future doctoral program.

The Head Start Orientation Program, concerned with training interested individuals in working for Head Start throughout Eastern North Carolina, continued its work. The Home Economics Department offered two B.S. degrees: one in teacher education, the other in institutional management. Work on a masters program was initiated.

Dr. William Byrne Lectures to Biology Department

Speaking on his research in molecular biology of memory, Dr. William Byrne of Duke University highlighted the year for the Biology Department.

A biochemistry major was added to the curriculum; and graduate majors within the department of biology were established in the general areas of aquatic studies, physiology, and bio-chemistry.

Construction of a new Biology-Physics building was begun; and completion date was set as December, 1968. Additions in equipment included the purchase of a microdensitometer.

Chemistry Department Applies to American Chemical Society

Application to the American Chemical Society was made by the Chemistry Department this year. Although well received, it will take two years before accreditation comes through. Seven new members were added to the department's staff. These brought the total to fifteen, fourteen of which hold Ph.D.'s. The curriculum progressed greatly in its improved changes and was aided in its development by newly-purchased instrumental equipment.

Physics Department Opens Research Areas to Students

Nuclear physics, plasma physics, and magnetic resonance were three programs in which the Department of Physics did research this year.

Offering the B.S., A.B., and the B.S. in teaching, the department offered a program to prepare students to be professional scientists as well as secondary school teachers.

The department, every quarter, conducted a seminar program for faculty and students. Speakers from within the faculty, as well as visitors, were included.

Science Education Adds Practical Arts Course

To the curriculum of the science education department this year, a practical arts course in photography was added. A new project was the publishing of Newsletter for Science Teachers, which was circulated throughout the state.

Courses for in-service high school science teachers were provided, and the department worked with prospective teachers in the field of science.
Serving all departments and the whole university, the library science department welcomed the 20,000 additional square feet which housed the new North Carolina room and increased the size of the reading room. The budget for books and library material was doubled this year.

Members of the staff addressed various organizations within the university and as far away as Philadelphia.

No University Exists Without Students

Student classification was a bitter-sweet experience. To the wide-eyed freshman, classification was an albatross; to the third quarter senior, it was a laurel.

What caused the evolvement from albatross to laurel? The answer was simple: concentrated exposures to varied disciplines. Exposure to new, and sometimes conflicting, ideas caused two distinct responses: evaluation and positive or negative reaction.

This process had the power to transform adolescents into adults within four short years.
From freshman to senior, they never stop.

In Memoriam
Mary Hemphill Greene
1902-1968

Miss Greene, who had the longest record of service from 1928-1968, contributed immeasurably to the transformation of this institution from a small two-year teachers college to the large regional university it is today. To East Carolina University she gave continuity and character. Among the three generations she taught and influenced are individuals in every walk of life: senators, professors, journalists, lawyers, medical doctors, ministers, teachers, businessmen, farmers, and housewives. To each she was an eminent example of hope, dignity, integrity, and good taste.

A native of Abbeville, South Carolina, Miss Greene received the Bachelor of Arts degree from Agnes Scott College in 1924 and the Master of Arts degree from Columbia University in 1928. Miss Greene was elected to membership in Phi Beta Kappa. She was listed in Who's Who in American Education in 1963 and in the Directory of American Scholars in 1964.

The academic world and the field of journalism proudly claimed Miss Greene. Both mourn her untimely death January 21, 1968. As a professor of English, she is fondly remembered for her love of Shakespeare. As director of the campus News Bureau from 1945-1963, she earned the respect and admiration of the many newspaper editors with whom she filed news stories. As a member of the Publications Board of East Carolina University and as editorial adviser of the East Carolinian, she gave encouragement and counsel to young journalists.

Miss Greene is gone. Her example, her kindly humor, her admonition, and her greatness endure.
A university emerged, and it was almost a year old. Through the past 512 pages, an emphasis was placed upon the student; for he was the university. He made it what it was and what it would be.

As the editor sat in the quiet office with the final deadline met, she remembered the quiet of the office in early September. Plenty of clean desks and paper were available then, but now the typewriter ribbons were worn thin, and it was a struggle to find a pencil. Seeing the office so quiet made her realize that the Buccaneer was more than just copy, pictures, and headaches. It was people. From the first staff meeting when the traditional challenge to produce the "best book ever" was issued, so many problems arose that she wondered if the book would ever meet her satisfaction.

Several factors were emphasized heavily throughout the book. These were providing as nearly complete a history of the year as possible, capturing the life of the student, perfecting copy and layouts, and often re-doing them as many as five times. These goals were realized even though at many times the staff must have felt that a heartless witch sat in the editor's office saying repeatedly, "Do it over! You know when the deadline is."

Special thanks were due a great staff, those who stepped in at the last and those who stayed till the end. Whether they were faced with working in limited space, soliciting uncooperative organizations on campus, manufacturing pictures out of thin air, or sorting thousands of student portraits, the staff showed dedication to a common goal.

Large medals of honor went to Walter Quade, campus photographer; Mr. Lee H. Blackwell of Taylor Publishing Company; Mr. A. F. Smith of Smith Studios; Mrs. Mary Sorensen, literary advisor; and Dr. James H. Tucker, Dean of Student Affairs. These people were an integral part of the Buccaneer and gave it much of their time. The editor's parents and Alpha Delta Pi sorority sisters provided invaluable morale throughout the year.

Now that the end was in sight, the long hours, late evenings, and all week-end sessions seemed worthwhile. Those who looked into the Buccaneer office and wondered what went on would never know what they had missed—a great experience.
