GREENVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA
Go, little book

With such a gentle command, the old writers sent their volumes into the world.

We, too, are sending forth a book, in the pages of which we hope you will find reminders of all that has been pleasant in your days at this college. As you turn the leaves, may you enjoy in retrospect the best and happiest of your experiences here—quiet hours in the library, jolly gatherings at the Hut, good talk among friends, strolls through the green woods of the west campus, laughter along the halls, and the keen intellectual enjoyment of the classroom.
We have woven the account of our past year around the story of King Arthur and his knights. The Age of Chivalry represents the spirit which we hope abides in us all. The loyalty, the courage, the love of truth and honor, the reverence for good and noble things, the unswerving devotion to great causes which made the knights peerless are the qualities which are most precious to us. We have, therefore, linked our story with theirs.

And now, to those who cherished the happy memories preserved in these pages and who will read these words and view these scenes with the partial eye of one who loves her Alma Mater—

Go, little book.
DEDICATION

Because we wish to show, as well as we may, how we have appreciated his sympathetic help and guidance in the publication of the Tecoan, we dedicate this volume to

January 19, 1901—February 22, 1929

For three and a half years her life was an inspiration to all in this college who came under the spell of the loveliness of her face and character, the charm of her personality, the graciousness of her manner, and the beauty of her spirit. The strings of her violin are muted, and the tones of her rich contralto voice are silenced, but they will echo on.

Growth

Oaks grow in stature as the years advance
And spread their branches far and wide.
Then, as they stand there, sturdy, ever fast,
Acorns are dropped to form new oaks again.
So we have gained in knowledge and in truth.
Maturing, growing stronger day by day,
Until we now are ready in our turn
To give again what has been given to us.

A mighty oak our Alma Mater stands
And gives us, resting in her sheltering shade,
Nurture and protection till we grow
Like her—upright, and tall, and strong.
Young oaks that now will start the task anew,
Replenishing the grounds that nourished them,
Striving to be always "not less than best"
A living pattern of the parent oak.

The Actes and Historyes of the Most Glorious
Order of Seniors

(Written in view of the definition that "History is a pageant, not a philosophy," and with apologie to Sir Thomas Malory.)

The First Book of the Order of '29

Chapter 1
Our Arrival

In September, 1925, we, the members of the Order of '29, departed from our homes for to seek adventures at college.

And when we were come, all the Y. W. C. A. girls made great joy of us, and nobly counselled us unto the way of doing things.

Chapter 2
Election of Our First President

At the meeting of the Order, all manner of girls were nominated for president of the Freshman Order, but none prevailed but Annie Shields Van Dyke. Wherefore all members cried at once, "We will have Annie Shields unto our president." And so anon was the election made, and she was sworn unto her classmates for to be a true president, to stand with true justice from thenceforth the days of this office holding.

Chapter 3
How the Sophomores Ever Rebuked Us

We were besieged with a tyrannical Sophomore band, and ever they rebuked us and suffered us to sing laundry lists, work, and amuse them. And so we endured all that nine month, and never displeased man, woman, or child, but always we were meek and mild.

Chapter 4
Of the First War the Order of '20 Had and How They Won the Field

And then the examinations approached and great strokes were smitten on both sides, and a few men overthrown, hurt, and slain; and great valiances, prowess, and feats of war were that week showed, which were over long to recount the noble feats of every man, for they should contain a whole volume. President Wright rode into the battle exhorting the student body to do well. Each Freshman drew out Excalibur, his sword, and anon hewed and slew subjects downright. We slew a great giant named Eng'ish, which was a study of an huge quantity and height. The Freshmen shorted him and smote off both his legs by the knees, saying, "Now art thou better of a size to deal with than thou were." We fought nobly and slew six subject: in that battle. Thus the battle endured long. And when it was known that six subjects were slain, there was great joy, and we followed the chase in our Sophomore, Junior, and Senior years, and slew downright all of them we might obtain. And them that were failed, the Credits Committee let the instructors search their hurts and wounds, and commanded them to spare no salves nor medicines till they were whole.

And there was sorrow and lamentation when it was told that it was death for some of our classmates' college life, which were taken away by examinations.

Book the Second

Chapter 1
How the High and Mighty Sophomores Rebuked the Freshmen

When the Order of '29 had after a long vacation rested, we returned unto the halls of learning again, and now we were the high and mighty Sophomores. We did send to the Freshmen commands to acknowledge us the lords of creation and to conform to the statutes and decrees made by the noble and worthy Sophomores. We rebuked them for about a sennight, but the Freshmen forgave all that was done against them.

Chapter 2
How a Damsel Was Loved and Married

And as good fortune would, there came a very perfect gentle knight to Nell, one of our damsels fair, and cast great love to her and she began to have great fancy unto him. And ever

the more the knight beheld that lady the more he loved her, and so he burned in love that he was past himself in reason, and when he went unto supper he might not eat for his love was so great. And then the knight went unto the damsel, and either made great joy of the other. There-when the knight plighted his troth unto the lady to be true and faithful unto her. And there she promised him her love, certainly to love him and none other the days of her life. And anon they were wedded with great nobility, and they loved ever together.

THE THIRD BOOK
CHAPTER 1
In Which the Order of '20 Take to Themselves a President
Now leave we the Sophomore year and speak of the Junior year. And at a meeting that was held the members of the Order of '29 made Lillian Colson president, and she was made to have charge of our Order's affairs. And Lillian proved a noble and wise president.

In this year the Juniors made merry at three one-act plays, "The Beau of Bath," "Figureheads," and "Glory of the Morning."

CHAPTER 2
How the Juniors Held a Banquet
Then the Order of Juniors let cry a banquet, that it be holden on the night of May the twelfth. A great array was made in the banquet room, and well may ye wit that there was all manner of meat plentifully. And the Juniors were glad of their coming, and all that night we had good cheer. A good part of the time was spent in dancing and caroling. Thus dured the feast long, and after the feast was done we had a merry rest.

THE FOURTH BOOK
CHAPTER 1
In Which the Order is Made Right Glad by the Coming of New Members
Then the members of the Order of '29 put on the armour of Seniorhood and plunged over the heads in deep study for to well learn all we might.

And it happened that new members were let in, and when the old members of the class heard of their coming, we made great joy, and said openly, "These damsels are passing welcome."

CHAPTER 2
A Great Journey on the Basketball Court
Then they blew to the field, and there the Order of '29 encountered with the Order of '30, and there the Order of '29 had a fall.

We fought for a great while and gave many strokes of great might and took many great strokes.

And when the game was over, we went unto the dining room and there was a great feast and great revel, and the prize was given to the Order of '30.

"Smilin' Through"
So it befell in the month of September that our president Lillian Colson called unto her the Order of the Seniors and also gave us warning that in December we were expected to give a play. And so we made ready for the occasion. And then on two evenings set we made merry with "Smilin' Through." The stage was all bedashed with mosses and flowers in the best manner, and the participants were arrayed in costumes suiting their respective parts. The actors were all at ease and threw an enchantment over the audience, and the spectators marvelled much at their acting and praised them mightily. After the play was given the Seniors made great joy of the success that was come, and passing glad were we of the actors.

Commencement and Farewell
And all in haste the members of the Order of Seniors got ready for commencement in the most honourablest wise that could be devised. Then on Sunday a minister was fetched to preach the Baccalaureate Sermon, and he blessed the class with great royalty and devotion. Then the faculty gave us the order of graduation, and we received our degrees on June the third, and then we departed from them after taking leave of our friends with the greatest colour and sorrow that was ever made.

LILYAN COLSON, President.

Last Will and Testament

As many have gone before us, and so many yet to come will do, we, the Senior Class of 1929, depart from our Alma Mater with more serious thoughts as to the meaning of life than we entertained when we entered. Our years of college life are over, and now, like the knights of old, we go forth on a quest, the goal of which is all that seems noblest and best in the life of thought and in the life of action. In this future life we may find that the ideals we have formed, and the goals we have set seem intangible, and as evasive as the horizon. Perhaps we may often be discouraged and disappointed. But whatever our tasks may be, if we remember the precepts of college, we shall never be without a guiding light in all our undertakings. For these lessons of patience, of service, and of aspiration, we wish to leave our undying gratitude, with the hope that what we accomplish in the future may be acceptable to those whom we would repay.

Prophecy

Miami Beach, June 6, 1923.

Dearest Lilyan:

I am now convalescing and much to Bill’s chagrin, I still wish to try my luck once more in maintaining the world’s record for a time-flight around this old globe of ours. You, of course, have read the accounts of my attempts and failures, but Lilyan, there is one story that I shall tell to you alone.

I had been flying some twelve hours when suddenly night closed about me—the blackest I have ever seen—and in spite of my every effort, I felt consciousness slipping from me. In my subconscious mind there seeped the sensation of downward movement and even as I sensed this, a jolt sent me reeling into oblivion.

How long I remained in this state of mind, I do not know, but when I opened my eyes, I was blinded by penetrating light. As I became accustomed to this unnatural phenomenon, I saw dimly outlined before me a huge, transparent ball.

As I gazed into this crystal, before me unrolled a spectrum of human destinies.

And who do I behold first but you, Lilyan, a leader as always. You are sitting at your desk, writing a most enviable book. You are quite famous, and youth finds your frank, unmodified works much more interesting than the current fiction of the day.

Carrie Smith, now queen of cinema land, has supporting her in her latest picture, Martha Mooney, Jessie Thorpe, Margaret Womack, Floy Brewer, Emily Smithwick, Viola Scott, Carrie Mae Ward, and Ella Smith. Virginia Perkins, star at E. C. T. C., is now John Barrymore’s leading lady.

And next, the scene shifts from sunny California to our own Capital City. Here Mary Ward, Myrtle Mason and Margaret Faison hold most enviable positions in the Library of Congress. Also behind a heavily carved, pure mahogany desk, with a male secretary on her right and a reporter on her left, I see Lucile Sermons, dictating to the world, her version of the Kellogg Peace Treaty.

I see now a young day, hastening to catch a train. Reporters and photographers besiege her on all sides. It is none other than Julia Minor Wood, who is on her way to Reno to get her second divorce.

And next, I see that Bonner Swindell and Odessa Hillard are the heads of a most exclusive school for young ladies. Alice Foley and Clara Mallard are joint occupants of the chair of Mathematics and Science.

As much talked of, and as popular as Lindbergh, is Evelyn Ewell. She is becoming quite famous for her modernistic interpretative dancing, and everyone, the world over, is acquiring the E. E. Method of posing. Frequent visitors of hers are Vallie Sumrell, dean of Hillmont College, and Clyde Stokes, her assistant.

A fog descends; as it disperses, I see a ship steaming through the waves. On it is Annie Laurence, chief dietitian; Louise Atkinson, ship hostess; and Sarah Hinson, now a doctor, who is on her way to the Aegean Islands to discover some hitherto lost aspect of past civilization.

In the Sacred Heart Hospital, in New Orleans, Mary White, quite charming in her white uniform, is nurse and Rebecca Alexander and Catherine Hill are the welfare officers for the country.

The setting changes to far France. Here in the Sorbonne is Annie Shields Van Dyke. She is planning a career as a foreign ambassador from U. S. In the same city, W. T. Mason is studying conditions—economic and social—so as to gain an accurate background for her next history textbook.

In a thriving, progressive town, I glance into a photographer’s studio. Gertrude Stryon and Julia Lancaster are the proprietors, with Julia as head photographer.

My vision next shows a girl being escorted to a platform. Here she is presented with a solid gold loving cup, on which is engraved these words: “Tennis Champion of 1932.” The girl is none other than our own Mary Frances Jenkins.

I see next two heads with, I suppose, one single thought. They belong to Clara Lee Spruill and Claire Jones. Together they are revising our old time geometry book so that in ten simple lessons the necessary knowledge may be acquired without study or preparation.

Along with these two aspiring geniuses is another in a different field—Irene Kahn. She is instrumental in elevating “Dorothy Dixism” to a gem of literary note. Her latest contribution is “The Heart Divine.”

And then the last picture merges into being. The world is apprehensively sitting by, watching the progress of Sara Ogletree and Mary Ward as they train for the future Olympic games. Their trainers are sure of an easy, full-ledged American victory.

As the last scene faded from view, I seemed to feel myself crumple and faint. When I regained consciousness, I was on an America-bound steamer, and I remember nothing of my accident. I had a bad case of nerves for weeks after, but now I am feeling much better. Please write me again soon and tell me of your new book. Love,

ELIZABETH.
I sit in the deepening twilight,
The shadows gathering 'round,
Half lost in idle dreaming,
In quiet unbroken by sound.

But waking me from my reverie,
Causing me deep unrest,
A voice calls to me softly,
"Friend, have you done your best?"

With a start I grasp its meaning;
I recall the tasks of the day:
I had shirked in a careless manner
The tasks that came my way.

But now as each day passes,
I make the voice a test:
When I hear it speak at evening,
I know that I've done my best.

Motto: "Not failure, but low aim, is crime"

To plan the thing we mean to do,
And stick until we put it through;
To learn our way and earn our way,
And do our duty every day;
To be content but with the best,
That is truly the Freshman test.

We're the Freshmen that have no fears,
The kind to whom high aims are dear;
And we're resolved our goal to make,
For the Freshman honor is at stake;
Let our ideal be every time,
Not failure, but low aim, is crime.

Senior Normal Class History

FOREWORD

FROM THE BEGINNING of time people have so lived that they might realize their ideals and ambitions. During the age of chivalry the greatest ambition of the youth of that time was to become worthy of the honor of knighthood—the highest symbol of honor, justice, truth, and bravery. Becoming a knight, however, was difficult, and knighthood was not a prize to be had merely for the asking. Years of preparation were necessary. Various stages along the way were known as page-hood, squire-hood, and knight-hood. Young men were first trained at home; then they were apprenticed to a knight. A person who thus lived with a knight was known as a page. When the duties of this first stage had been successfully performed, the young page became a squire; and after a definite period had passed, if he was deemed worthy, he was dubbed a knight, the highest rank of honor. Usually each young knight had some duty to perform which brought him additional honor and fame. In the days of King Arthur, the duty of every knight was to search for the Holy Grail.

The training of young men and women today may be compared to that of the knights of long ago. After the period of home training comes higher preparation in college. Then the graduate is ready to go out into the world and test in active life the high ideals which the period of training has given him. In bravery, in high ideals, in worthy ambition, the graduate resembles the knight. "The institution of Chivalry is dead, but the spirit still lingers and finds its way into whatever heart is kind and gentle enough to receive it."

PART I

PERIOD OF PAGES "C"

In the year 1927, Sir Education let it be known that there was room in Castle College at Greenville, North Carolina, for several hundred pages. Now there were in the lands of North Carolina, South Carolina, and Virginia, many young persons who were in readiness to enter. In September came a host of these people well equipped to begin their duties as pages. In order that the newcomers might be distinguished from other pages at the Castle College, they were known as Pages "C".

Pages "C" were soon informed as to their various duties and were put under the command of the Knights of Psychology, English, History, and others of similar degree. These young pages were noble and ambitious; so they set to work with a determination that won them praise.

It was soon found necessary to choose a leader for Pages "C"; so they were called together, and after much testing it was found that Page Batson was the most fit for the position. They chose for a motto by which to model their lives, this inscription, "Non sibi sed omnibus." They chose for their favored colors, blue and yellow, symbols of truth and light.

Along with the work of pages always came much feasting and frolicking together so that they might learn to be gentle, courteous, and friendly. The first of such affairs at the Castle College was known as "Welcome Festival," which was given soon after the admission of the new pages. Later in the year 1928 Pages "C" entertained Squires "D" with a similar festival.

In order that rivalry and gallantry might be early instilled in the hearts and minds of the pages they were privileged to join one of the orders of honor, the Order of the Laniers, the Emersons, or the Poes.

The greatest enjoyment that can come into the life of a page is to be allowed to participate in a tournament. Now Sir Education was kind, and he provided a Tournament of Basketball for his people. Great was the excitement, and long was the period of preparation. When the day dawned pages, squires, and knights from far and near came to witness the event. The young Pages “C”, sound in body and in mind, went away to battle and came away victorious. The rest of the day was spent in feasting and merry making.

As the close of the stage of Pages “C” drew nigh, many were deemed worthy of reward, and had bestowed upon them titles of honor. A half score of Pages “C” were given the shield of Athletics, a monogram much to be desired, as a reward for perseverance in play. Others were given the titles of “Member of Student Council,” “Member of Y. W. C. A. Cabinet,” “Marshal,” and the like.

After having received encouragement by seeing many of their companions dubbed knights, Pages “C” were sent forth on the errand “Vacation.” When this mission was fulfilled, they were to return to Castle College.

PART II
Period of Squires “D”

By September, 1928, the errand “Vacation” had been accomplished and Pages “C” returned and were re-named Squires “D”.

Again is was necessary to choose a leader; so the tests were made and Squire Batson again proved the most worthy, and she was chosen to lead Squires “D” to knighthood.

Once again the Tournament of Basketball was held, and once again Squires “D” were the victors.

The most trying time in a squire’s life comes in what is known as the testing period. The first stage of this period is known as “Practice Teaching.” Here, as before, Squires “D” proved their worth and won the honors. The second stage, known as “Examinations,” was the most difficult of all. Long was the period of study and preparation, and successful were the results. The squires were now ready for the greatest honor of their lives, knighthood.

PART III
Period of the Knight

June 3, 1929, was the appointed day for the ceremonies. When the memorable day dawned, several hundred Squires “D” rose quite early and donned their festive robes, which had been prepared for this service. When all was ready, these fine young squires marched in a long procession to the chapel of Castle College. Sir Knight Wright, the noblest and best of all the knights, was master of ceremonies. He called the Squires by name to come before him, and, after due ceremony, pronounced them Knights, and presented them with the good sword, Diploma. Each new knight was now ready to go forth over the Land of America in search of Life and Happiness.

Senior Normal Last Will and Testament

State of North Carolina
County of Pitt
City of Greenville

We, the Senior Normal Class of East Carolina Teachers College, aforesaid state and county, being of sound mind and in full possession of all our faculties do hereby make, declare and publish this document as our last will and testament.

We, having gone the last mile with our beloved teachers and friends, do now desire to dispose of our rights and privileges in the following manner, viz:

ITEM I

To our beloved Alma Mater, we leave our undying gratitude for the many noble services she has rendered us since we first entered her portals of learning. May her influence continue to follow us through life.

ITEM II

To the members of our faculty, who have won by their labors with us our admiration and ever-enduring friendship, we extend our deepest appreciation for what they have meant to us.

ITEM III

To the entire student body, we leave our faculty upon whom we will ever look with respect and reverence.

ITEM IV

Section I. To the Junior Normal Class who will come up to take our places we leave all rights and privileges as “D’s”. It is our desire that they make the best use possible of these, and we hope that they may become a better class than we have been.

Section 2. To the College students, we leave our best wishes for their success, both in school and in life.

Signed, sealed, and declared by the Senior Normal Class on the third day of June in the year of Our Lord one thousand nine hundred twenty-nine.

Senior Normal Prophecy

Strange things happen to us sometimes, and mysterious gifts are apt to fall "out of the everywhere" into our hands, just when we least expect them. I had said I would never again be surprised at anything, but when a newspaper dropped into my lap from the very air above me, I was willing to take back the rash statement I had made. My amazement increased when I read the name and date, "Teco Echo, June 3, 1950." Where did it come from? And what could it all signify to me?

I was never one to remain in suspense when the means of gratifying my curiosity was at hand; so I opened the paper hastily. From the records of thirty-one years yet unborn I shall quote some of the things I read.

The Normal Class of 1929 of East Carolina Teachers' College has brought to its Alma Mater glory and honor. The work of the Science Department has won the respect and admiration of all the world. The first trip to Mars, a most wonderful feat, was accomplished by members of this class.

The work of the teachers of this class has been such a wonderful success that every institution in the civilized world accords her due honor and lauds the work of her graduates. One of them has indeed discovered the royal road to learning, by succeeding in giving subject matter hypodermically to morons. Thousands of children have been educated as a result of this great discovery.

The history students of this class have done great research work. One of them has written a famous history of the arctic regions.

These are only a few of the many things which the Class of 1929 had accomplished. The whole paper was filled with accounts of the many great things that they had done.

These items are most interesting to me, so I pass them on to you and am glad to share with you this remarkable find of mine, that it may answer for, as satisfactorily as it did for me, the all-important question, "What is going to become of the Normal Class of 1929?"

Myrtle Leigh Peacock.

Junior Normal Class
All hail, East Carolina Teachers College!
You swung your famous portals wide,
And opened up your halls of pride
That we might enter and abide—
The Class of 1930!

One year has fled on golden wings
Since we entered these portals dear,
To prepare ourselves for the best things e'er
That life distributes year by year,
For the Class of 1930!

To thee, East Carolina Teachers College,
We promise our faith, our fidelity,
Our service, to enhance thy celebrity.
Our supplications for thy longevity,
The Class of 1930!

Willie Mae Whitt

Idyl Three . . . Le Court
The Ladies of the Court

In days of old the lady of the court was almost "too high for adoration." For her the knight journeyed forth on perilous quest; for her many a lance was broken in tournament, and many a shield hacked in battle. To win her bright smile the knight slew many dragons and fire-breathing monsters, and the protection of damsels in distress he made one of his strictest vows.

Nor was the lady unworthy of this deep esteem. In Arthur's Court the beauty, the charm, the wit of the world were assembled. Lissome Vivien, White Elaine, Gentle Enid, Guinevere, queen of beauty: where shall we see their like again?

In modern times women no longer live in courts; knights break for them no lances in tourney; there are no fire-breathing monsters to be slain; and, alas, where shall we find a tender damsel in distress? Yet in these latter days those qualities which once made women so revered, so admired, survive. In the modern girl we see repeated the finer qualities of the lady of chivalry. Beauty, loyalty, sincerity, charm, grace, and wit are ever the same. The modern girl, we feel, is peerless; and so we present to you our ladies of the court.

Tune: "On the Mall"

Let us sing a song of praise to our Society,
Hail to thee, O Sidney Lanier!
Loyal members ever proving your sobriety,
Though our fun to us will e'er be dear,
Then let us to our banner each a tribute pay,
Let us ever our motto uphold,
Always faithful, true, and loyal to thee, night and day,
Hurrah for the Green and Gold!

Tune: "Clayton's Grand March"

Oh, Emerson Society,
   Dear old White and Blue,
For you our hearts beat merrily,
   As we sing this song to you;
For when we see our colors there,
   Blue and White, everywhere,
We know that they mean only you
   And all you hold so true.
So here we are, the Emersons,
   Boosting for our clan.
Oh, Emerson, oh, Emerson,
   For you we'll always stand.

The Teco Echo

The TECO ECHO, the bi-monthly publication of East Carolina Teachers’ College, had its beginning in 1925. At that time the college had no newspaper edited by the student body. Since, however, a desire for college news published by the college community was felt, a special vote of the entire student body provided for the establishment of a semi-monthly newspaper.

The name for the publication was chosen by a contest. A reward of five dollars was offered to the student submitting the best and most appropriate name. Miss Christine Vick, at that time a member of the Senior Class and president of the student body, won the prize. The name was derived from (Te)achers (Co)llege with the “Echo” added.

In 1926, the publication was admitted into the North Carolina Collegiate Press Association, and has had two representatives, the editor and the business manager, at each meeting of the organization since that time.

Since 1926, the Teco Echo has been a member of the Columbia Scholastic Press Association of New York City. The two members of the staff previously mentioned are sent to each of the annual meetings. The Teco Echo won fourth place in the contest of the C. S. P. A. in 1928. Those who have represented the publication are Frances Smith and Deanie Boone Haskett, Zilpah Frisbie and Catharine Clark, Bessie Willis and Margie Caldwell, and Rebecca Alexander and Irene Kahn.

The faculty advisers are Miss Mamie E. Jenkins for the editorial staff and Mr. M. L. Wright for the business staff.

Cullie Stafford (Freshman): “Miss White asked us what is a parasite.”
Second Freshman (eagerly): “I know what a parasite is. Something you jump out of an aeroplane in.”

Miss Maguire, science teacher, gave a test, and one of the questions and its answer was as follows:
Question: “In what three states may water be found, and how may it be transformed from one to the other?”
Answer: “Water may be found in North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia, and may be transformed from one to the other by pumping.”

Katherine Lemmond: “What do you call a man who is an eye specialist?”
Lucy Best: “Have you been at E. C. T. C. two years and haven’t learned that? An optimist, of course.”

Miss Rose: “Who assassinated Lincoln?”
Bright History and English Major: “Wilkes Booth Tarkington, ma’am.”

Mildred Tingle threw open the window, letting in a snowy draft upon Della Lawrence.
Della: “Shiver my timbers.”
Mildred: “Do you think I got the heat?”

Mary Louise (to Janie Hunter, who had changed tables): “Say, Janie, you’ve changed your abode, haven’t you?”
Janie (feeling her hair): “Yes, I thought this bob would suit my type better.”

Lucy Lane (on Friday): “Where is the funny paper?”
Lib Poole: “This is not Sunday. I told you not to take that bath last night.”

Letha Newton: “You know, Nannie Ester, you look just like spring-time.”
Nannie Ester (timidly): “How you flatter!”
Letha: “Not at all. You are so fresh and green!”

Mary Kate Webster, who had been helping her father in his store, went to Denton’s one day, and asked for a box of powder. When the clerk brought it to her, she sweetly smiled and asked, “And now what else will you have?” The astonished clerk answered her: “Nothing.”

“A Freshman went to Hades once
A few more things to learn;
Old Satan sent him back again,
He was too green to burn.”

Katherine Lemmond: “Mr. Meadows, can a person be punished for something she hasn’t done?”
Mr. Meadows: “Of course not.”
Katherine: “Well, I haven’t done my memory work.”

Helen Blackmore: “I made a hundred on two subjects, Isn’t that grand?”
Margaret Carlton: “Sure thing! How did you rate that?”
Helen: “Just fifty on each.”
Jokes

Frances Darden (practice teaching): “Jimmie, give me three proofs that the world is round.”
Jimmie: “Well, you say so, pa says so, and ma says so.”

+++

Wire to Father: “Where is the money I wrote for last week?”
Answer: “In my vest pocket.”

Alice Tilly: “How come that girl didn’t return your hello?”
Edna Thomas West: “Aw! She’s a roommate of mine and never returns anything.”

Jennette: “Is there any art in kissing?”
Jimmie: “None except ‘Art thou willing?’”

Mrs. Bloxton: “How can you keep fish from smelling?”
Mildred Sasser: “Cut off their noses.”

Kay Lee Cleaninger (looking in at the Coffee Shop): “My, I can taste that dinner right now.”
Lillian Summerlin: “That’s fine. We can stand right here while you eat all you want.”

Lilyan Colson (Senior): “How do you like my room as a whole?”
Rachel McKey (Freshman): “As a hole, I like it all right; as a room, not so good!”

Elizabeth Mathews: “My roommate has been gone home a week today.”
Betty Uzzell: “I noticed that your room had not been swept lately.”

History Teacher: “What happened in 1914 that affected even the people of this town?”
Blanche Clarke: “The Greenville Laundry was established.”

Miss Miller: “Are you sure this is a perfectly original theme?”
Pauline Ratcliffe: “Well, not exactly—you might find one or two words in the dictionary.”

Mr. Deal: “How many of you liked the first selection rendered by the Dennishawn dancers?”
Every hand went up.
Mr. Deal: “Ted Shawn said it didn’t take much thinking to enjoy that.”

Dr. Meadows (to Miss Sammon, who is keeping the library desk): “There’s a ‘Faerie Queene’ at the desk, is there not?”
Miss Sammon (blushing): “Oh, Dr. Meadows, you flatterer, you!”

Eliza Walters (drawing a house plan): “Which is the largest room?”
Janie Gold Hardee: “Room for improvement.”
THE NINETEEN TWENTY-NINE DECOAN

JUNIOR PROGRAM

This is station E. C. T. C. broadcasting from East Carolina Teachers College, Greenville, North Carolina. Tonight's program is under the direction of the Class of 1930 of this college. We were unable to get in touch with all the celebrities of this class and we consider ourselves indeed fortunate to secure a number of these noted artists which will come to you at this time.

The first number on the program will be a piano selection by Mme. Scaronoff, who will be remembered by many of you as Janie Ewing.

You have been listening to a piano solo by the world's greatest syncopated artist, Mme. Scaronoff, who is on the air from station E. C. T. C., tonight's program being featured by the Class of 1930 of East Carolina Teachers College, Greenville, North Carolina. The next number on our program is a reading by the renowned Mariah Credle Speakright, who is also one of the distinguished members of the Class of 1930.

This is station E. C. T. C. featuring a program sponsored by the Class of 1930. The number that you have heard was by Mariah Credle Speakright, the noted reader.

While tonight's program has been going on, numerous telegrams have come in from some of the celebrities who could not be with us tonight. I'm sure these will be of great interest to those of the Class of 1930 of East Carolina Teachers College.

Metropolitan Opera House, New York City

Sorry could not appear in tonight's program. Best regards to the Class of 1930.

Mildred Sasser.

Here is one from Paris:

Sorry we could not appear tonight. Have signed contract with Bergere Follies.

MAYO TWINS.

Here is another one:

Kalamazoo

Recent attack of influenza prevents my being on the air with the class of 1930. Best wishes to all.

KAY LEE CLOANINGER, Chief Executive.

The concluding number on the program will be a violin solo by Senorita Katrina Patricka, accompanied by Miss Evelina Jenningski at the piano.

More telegrams have just come. Here is one from Iola Tankard, director of physical education at Washington Collegiate Institution.

Sorry but the draw-bridge is open. Too far to swim.

This one from Dorothy Ward, dietitian at the Ritz Hotel in New York:

Best regards to the class of 1930!

Here is one congratulating one of our speakers of last night:

James, Jr., and I are enjoying bed-time stories.

JEANETTE

Last night Auntie Grace Whitley was on the air from station H. O. T. telling the favorite bed-time story "Lady Godiva."

This concludes our program. You have been listening to a program of the Class of 1930 of the East Carolina Teachers College at Greenville, North Carolina. This is station E. C. T. C. signing off. Good night, Class of 1930!!!

Farewell

Now you have come to the end of the 1929 Tecoan. We hope that you have enjoyed your first acquaintance with the book and that every picture has brought to your mind some cherished memory of happy hours at East Carolina Teachers College.

Annuals are not made for only one reading, however; they are friends which become more precious with the passing years. We believe that you will pore over these pages many times in the future. As the days depicted here creep further and further into the past, we hope that in this volume you will find that which you most wish to remember about your college life. We have made the book, hoping that it will be a lasting joy to you. May you find it so.
