Supported By Soviets, Cubans

Popular Forces Reported Near Victory

LUSAKA, Zambia (UPI) — Soviet-equipped forces were close to victory Saturday in a drive to capture a key pro-Western stronghold in central Angola.

Pro-Western military sources said the Popular Movement troops, backed by Cuban soldiers and Soviet weapons, were on the brink of capturing the town of Cela.

The sources said Cuban troops were carrying the brunt of the battle for Cela, a former supply base for some 1,000 South African troops fighting the Soviet-backed forces.

About 7,500 Cuban soldiers are fighting alongside the pro-Soviet Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola.

In Moscow, the Communist party newspaper Pravda Saturday quoted Cuban Premier Fidel Castro as saying he decided to aid the Popular Movement "after the intervention of the South African racists."

"The war in Angola is one of the dirtiest wars ever launched by imperialism," Castro said and indicated he did not intend to withdraw his forces from the former Portuguese colony.

The Western-equipped National Union for the Total Independence of Angola said it had captured the strategic town of Quibala near Cela, inflicting heavy losses on the pro-Soviet army.

Quibala, 50 miles north of Cela, is on the road to the Cambambe hydroelectric dam, which supplies most of Luanda's power.

On the eastern front, National Union forces, supported by South African troops manning heavy artillery, repulsed a Popular Movement assault on the railway town of Luso, pro-Western sources said.

The battle situation in northern Angola was unclear but the Popular Movement said it had pushed the National Union's ally, the National Front for the Liberation of Angola, up to the Zaire border.

National Union officials said the National Front was still retreating under the Popular Movement's offensive and had not effectively regrouped.

Over the past two weeks, the Popular Movement claims to have captured all the National Front's northern strongholds and to have cut off reinforcements of men and equipment from Zaire.

Snow Hits North Carolina

By The Associated Press

Snow spread across North Carolina Saturday morning, from Asheville in the mountains as far east as Raleigh-Durham, Rocky Mount, Wilson, Greenville, Fayetteville and New Bern. It was to be followed by clearing and bitter cold over most of the state today.

Oddly, Winston-Salem, Greensboro and Charlotte had none, but skies were partly cloudy and the temperature was in the 30s at midafternoon.

Snow was reported in the afternoon over the coastal area south of Albemarle Sound. The western egde of the area was 20 miles west of Wilmington. Heavy early afternoon snow was reported at Cherry Point and near Beaufort.

To the East, snow fell at normally warm Cape Hatteras and in the Northern Coastal plain area. Snow was reported at Elizabeth City and traces of snow were reported at Wilmington.

The Highway Patrol reported numerous fender-bender type accidents in the East on roads that became slick as temperatures dipped quickly in the late afternoon and early evening.

It began about 8:30 a.m. in Raleigh and was continuing, with little accumulation, at midafternoon.

An inch was expected before tapering off in mountain areas. The highway patrol said all roads, except for some minor arteries, were open.

Saturday night readings were expected to range from just above zero in the mountains to the teens in the central portion of the state and the 20s near the coast.

Cold and windy with bright sunshine was today's forecast. Temperatures are expected to reach only into the 20s in the mountains and remain in the 30s elsewhere.

Local Conditions

Greenville experienced its first real snowfall of the season yesterday. Snow started to fall around nine o'clock yesterday morning and fell continuously until the early afternoon.

Area law enforcement agencies reported hazardous road conditions last night and icy roads were expected in some areas today. Although few accidents were reported within the city, numerous minor accidents occurred as drivers lost control of their cars on icy county roads.

Trooper Brinson of the State Highway Patrol said roads were too icy for cars to get up much speed last night, but as the ice melts in spots, serious accidents could occur from icy patches in the road.

The Department of Transporation was working yesterday to put sand and salt on hazardous road sections. Sand was also being put on bridges in the city.

Empty Ship Adrift

WHALEBONE, N.C. (UPI) — An empty 500-foot Victory ship was adrift in the stormy Atlantic near Oregon Inlet Saturday after the tug trying to haul the vessel had to drop its tow in the face of 45-knot winds and 15 foot seas.

Coast Guard officials said the 123-foot tug Taurus reported at noon it was slowly being blown toward the beach near Oregon Inlet and dropped its tow about 1:30 p.m. four miles from the inlet.

The 205-foot cutter Cherokee was dispatched from Norfolk, Va., to try to find the ship. A Coast Guard spokesman said the Cherokee was expected to arrive in the area about midnight Saturday. It planned to either attempt to take the Bemelguese in tow or follow it until weather conditions improved enough to permit towing.

No one was aboard the Bemelguese that was being towed from Philadelphia to Brownsville, Tex. The vessel was registered to Luria Bros., Inc.

The tug, unable to keep any eye on the drifting ship because it lost its radar when a large wave broke over the wheelhouse, reported visibility in rain and snow was about a mile or less. Shore patrols dispatched from the Cape Hatteras Coast Guard station were also unable to immediately spot the frifting vessel.

The tug was being battered by winds from the northeast when it dropped the tow. By evening the winds had dropped to 30 knots and shifted to the northwest, raising the possibility the Bemelguese might be blown out to sea.

"We haven't been able to locate it. We don't know if it's aground," said Lt. J.G. John Leslie at the Coast Guard's Portsmouth, Va., headquarters.

He said warnings had been broadcast to vessels that might be in the area to keep a watch for the drifting vessel.

Lebanese Accept New Cease-Fire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Premier Rashid Karami announced shortly after midnight that Lebanon's warring factions have accepted a new cease-fire "in order to save the nation from total collapse."

The premier said the truce should take hold at 2 a.m. and should be followed by:

— A lifting of the two-week Christian siege of the Tal Zaatar and Jisr Al Pasha Palesitinian refugee camps.

— Withdrawal of Christian forces from the Dbaye refugee camp north of Beirut which they conquered last Wednesday.

— An end to the five-day-long encirclement of the Damour-Jiyyeh-Saadyat area south of Beirut by Moslem and Palestinian forces.

Karami said Arab ambassadors helped in reaching the latest accord — the 24th since Lebanon's civil war erupted nine months ago.

The premier said the truce was necessary "in order to end the bloodshed of innocents and save the country from total collapse.

"I hope this step will be followed by another step -the meeting of the coordination committee — which I will summon soon to ensure a total cessation of hostilities," Karami said.

The committee, which includes representatives of the warring factions, has not met for the past 15 days.

Before Karami's surprise announcement was made, leftist and Palestinian forces were stepping up their country-wide assault on Christian and army positions.

Church bells rang across Lebabanon summoning Christian reinforcements to the burning capital and the beleaguered towns of Damour and Saadyat.

Rocket, mortar and machinegun fire rocked every district of Beirut as the bloodiest fighting in nine months of civil war swept the divided nation.

Beirut's jammed hospitals, short of blood, medicines and bed space, turned away hunreds of wounded. A spokesman said only "seriously wounded patients" were being admitted.

Christian leaders appealed for the intervention of Lebanon's Christian-led army to save their beleagured positions from what appears to be inevitable defeat.

Two shells landed in Beirut's Yarze district near the residences of the U.S. and Japanese ambassadors, but no one was hurt.

Police said at least 248 persons were killed and 580 wounded over the past 48 hours, bringing the estimated toll since April to nearly 8,900 dead and 19,000 wounded.

No More Private Dealings

SPRING LAKE (AP) — The town manager of the Cumberland County town of Spring Lake said Friday occurances of the town's aldermen engaging in private business dealings with the town would "cease immediately."

In its Thursday editions, the Fayetteville Times said that thousand of tax dollars were paid to three aldermen and a former aldermen for business deals.

Prisoner's Hunger Strike

RALEIGH (AP)—A hunger strike among the inmates of Death Row at Central Prison has "just about fizzled out."

"There were only about eight that didn't eat breakfast this morning," Capt. B.R. Watson said Saturday.

The fast which had been expected to last only one day, began with breakfast Friday when only one of the 103 Death Row inmates requested breakfast, officials said.

Warden Sam Garrison said the condemned men had notified him several days ago of their intention.

"They didn't want me to waste that food," Garrison said, "so I cut back on the menu."

He said the inmates "just wanted to show their support for people on the outside" who are fighting against the death penalty.

Sanford Out Of Hospital

DURHAM, N.C (UPI) — Democratic presidential hopeful Terry Sanford was discharged from Duke Medical Center after completing three days of tests.

Sanford, 58, was given a clean bill of health by doctors and boarded an afternoon plane for Washington, where he was to appear with other Democratic presidential candidates on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Two Dead In Crash

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Two people were killed Friday afternoon in the crash of a twin-engine jet at Ft. Bragg.

One of the victims was identified as Orville Pirtle, a photographer for the Department of the Army. He was classified as a civilian employe assigned to the Airborne Communications and Electronics Board at Pope Air Force Base.

The name of the pilot was withheld pending notification of relatives. An Air Force spokesman said the pilot was apparently attached to the Maryland Air National Guard.

To Discuss Tax Debt

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — State Corrections Secretary David Jones and Bruce Dent, tax collector for the town of Spring Lake, have agreed to meet and discuss Jones' alleged debt of $850 in back taxes, penalties and interest.

Dent said Jones has failed since 1972 to pay his assessments on property owned jointly by the corrections secretary and his brother, Wilton Jones, in the Cumberland County town of Spring Lake. Dent said Wilton Jones had paid taxes on his share.

Jaycee Observances Begin On Monday

Selection of the Greenville Jaycees' Distinguished Service Award recipient on Thursday night will highlight the week long observance of Jaycee Week, which begins here Monday.

The observance marking the 38th anniversary of the Greenville chapter will be held in conjunction with both state and national Jaycee birthdays. The national organization is celebrating its 55th year of operations.

The Greenville Jaycettes, made up of wives of local Jaycee members, will observe the club's 23rd anniversary during Jaycee Week.

Events scheduled this week, in addition to the annual DSA banquet on Thursday, include a reception for the DSA winner following the banquet, and a prayer breakfast on Wednesday, 8 a.m., at the Riverside Restaurant.

Jaycee Week Co-chairman Sterling Hight said that East Carolina University Chancellor Dr. Leo Jenkins will speak at the Wednesday breakfast and officials of both the city and county have been invited to attend.

This year, following an initial presentation in 1975, the Jaycees will present a Boss of the Year Award as part of the banquet activities on Thursday evening at the Candlewick Inn, according to DSA chairman Mike Peters. The evening will get underway at 6:30 p.m. with a social hour, he said.

During the banquet, the Jaycees will recognize an outstanding young man of the community for his leadership and service during the past year and also the boss of a Greenville Jaycee who has supported the chapter through and on behalf of his Jaycee employee.

As in the past few years, this

Given Death Sentences

WILLIAMSTON, N. C. (AP) — Two men and a woman have been convicted of murder in the slaying of a North Carolina highway patrolman and have received the death sentence.

A Martin County Superior Court jury deliberated nearly five hours before returning the verdict Friday night against Frankie Jerome Squire, Joseph Seaborn and Faye Beatrice Brown.

Judge John Webb sentenced the three to die in the gas chamber Feb. 27. However, state law provides for automatic appeal in such convictions.

The three were tried in the Sept. 2 slaying of trooper Guy Thomas Davis Jr. of Windsor. Davis was killed by a shotgun blast when he stopped a car in Williamston a short time after a bank was robbed in nearby Jamesville.

School Board Meets Monday

The Central Office at 431 West Fifth Street is the location for the January regular school board meeting Monday at 8 p.m.

Some of the agenda items to be taken up include per-pupil expenditures; elementary teacher planning time; the free lunch policy; status reports on the proposed middle school and the Eppes property; resignation and election of teachers as well as substitute teacher lists; long-range plans and the bond issue; and non-professional sick leave.

$200,000 Renovation Plans For Proctor Hotel

The Redevelopment Commission announced that approval has been given to a $200,000 rehabilitation plan for the former Proctor Hotel structure at the corner of Third and Evans Streets.

Commission executive director Joe Laney said that both the city building inspector and the Construction Review Committee of the Central Business District Project Advisory Committee approved the plan.

Leroy Cherry, president of Cherry Oaks Inc., purchased the hotel property in 1975, it was noted, and after renovations are completed, plans to change the name of the structure to "The Cherry Building."

Most of the first floor of the building, as shown in an artist's rendering, will become the downtown offices of First State Bank, according to Don Langston, president and chairman of the bank's board, who confirmed that an agreement has been reached with Cherry to occupy the ground floor subject to approval of applications by state and federal banking agencies.

A drive-in teller window, with an entrance and exit along Third Street, is planned by the bank, Langston reported.

Cherry said that he plans to have the first floor of the building ready for occupancy in 60 to 90 days and he indicated that the second floor, to which he has committed leases, should be ready within 30 to 60 days after first floor completion.

The owner pointed out that a new elevator will be installed in the building and the structure will have all modern conveniences.

Billy Laughinghouse, chairman of the Redevelopment Commission, said that he was "very pleased" that the building is being rehabilitated and he added that he looked forward to other property owners along the mall and CBD area following Cherry's example.

Laney commented, "Mr. Cherry's ambitious undertaking is an excellent example of the effort which comes when private

Five Accidents Reported

A total of five traffic mishaps were investigated by Greenville Police Friday and Saturday resulted in an estimated $3,450 in damages, according to police reports. No charges are recorded on police records.

Heaviest damage occurred early Saturday afternoon when a car driven by Margie Holt Langley of Winterville went out of control on Memorial Drive and struck a utility pole. Damage was estimated at $1,000 to the auto and $500 to the utility pole.

An estimated $900 damage was done to a car driven by William Raymond Culp of Lot 42 Pinewood Trailer Park early Saturday morning. Culp was entering E. Tenth Street from College Hill Drive and said a car run the stoplight and struck his vehicle. The car then left the seen and has not been located.

Cars driven by Rebecca Doss Edmunson of 403 Rawl Rd. and Sylvi Briley of 1403 Drum Ave. collided Friday afternoon at the intersection of N. Pitt Street and Mumford Road. Police estimated damage at $300 to the Edmunson vehicle and $250 to the Briley auto.

A Friday morning wreck occurred at the intersection of Verdant and E. Tenth Streets when cars driven by Robin Cheryl Clark of Durham and John Ricky Sykes of Rt. 1, Box 376A collided. Police estimated damage at $150 to the Clark vehicle and $100 to the Sykes car.

Cars driven by Queenie Worthington James of C-6 Glendale Court and James H. Shortridge of Haines City, Fla. collided Friday afternoon at the intersection of Wilson and Dickinson Avenue. Police estimated damage at $250 to the James car with no damage to the Shortridge auto.

"Career Day" Set For 37 Aycock Students

Thursday will be a big day for 37 students at Aycock Junior High School, all members of the Introduction to Vocations classes under the direction of Mrs. Pam Penland.

For the students, Thursday will be an active Career Day in which they will be "at work" all day on the job at one of the 23 firms, agencies or businesses in Greenville that have volunteered to take a student worker for a full day's work—with a few volunteers taking a couple of students.

There will be no pay, but the reward for the student will be a valuable one, a taste of experience and knowledge of what it will be like to be an adult doing some particular work.

Participating stores, agencies, banks, doctors, etc. who will be giving students a work day opportunity are: John's Bicycle Shop; H.L. Hodges Company; Friend's Architect; Wachovia Bank; Pitt-Greenville Airport; Overton's Supermarket; John's Florist; Tommie Willis Interiors; Pet Kingdom; Three Sisters store; Cozart's Auto Supply; Harris Supermarket; Joli's store; Nichols Discount City; King's Department Store; Charles Street Texaco; the Department of Social Services; Dr. J.F. Barwick; Dr. J.M. Collie; Agricultural Extension Service; Greenville Police Department; N.C. Forest Service; the ECU Athletic Department; and Dr. J.L. Lewis, Jr.

"The Career Day project is a culminating experience for ninth grade students who have been involved in a semester of Introduction to Vocations. The Students have been placed according to their interests and abilities," Mrs. Penland states. "Employees have agreed to involve the students in their work as much as possible in order to simulate a day of work."

Mrs. Audrey Whitehurst, Director of Secondary Education for the Greenville City Schools, spoke enthusiastically about the cooperation of local people and firms in the program.

"This is really a fine example of the right kind of spirit where local people show they have a real concern in helping our young people. I am personally, and as a school staff member, truly grateful for this demonstration of willingness to work with our young people and our schools," Mrs. Whitehurst commented.

Supt. of City Schools Glenn Cox also expressed his appreciation for local people and firms making it possible for the ninth graders to have the career day as part of their school training.

Jaycee Observances ...

week's Jaycee observance will also serve as the focal period for the sale of jelly as part of a statewide effort to raise funds to provide a burn treatment facility in the state.

Functioning as a service organization, the Greenville chapter has been involved in a variety of projects aimed at benefitting the community. The Jaycees' first major project involved the construction of Guy Smith Stadium on Memorial Drive.

Following the stadium project, an option was taken by the Jaycees on 500 acres of land which later became the Pitt-Greenville Airport. The Boys' Home All-Star Game, played here for the past 14 years, continues to provide financial support for Boys' Home at Lake Waccamaw.

Fund raising on behalf of the Sheltered Workshop here was also a key Jaycee function, as well as the chapter's drive to finance purchase of the city's first rescue squad ambulance.

Jaycee Park, located near Eastern Elementary School, is now in operation and provides recreational facilities for Greenville residents.

Jaycee activities fall under three caterogies: internal, external, and ways and means.

Through internal projects, the Jaycees work to improve its members through programs that are designed to educate and provide motivation, organization, ability and fellowship.

External programs involve the club's community service work and projects change each year as the need of the community are brought to the attention of the club.

Ways and means projects are designed to provide enjoyment for the community, as in the case of the July 4th celebration, Rodeo and circus, while bringing in revenue for the chapter to continue external programming.

The Greenville Jaycees currently number approximately 140 members.

Jaycee directors include Charles Asbell, Frank Butler, Allen, Hahn, Bryant Kittrell, Jamie Lagasca, Mike McCormick, Wilton Rivenbark, Warren Stroud, John White and Glenn Willingham.

The Jaycettes, offering support and assistance for their Jaycee husbands in club activities, work primarily with crippled and handicapped citizens and with the pediatrics ward at Pitt Memorial Hospital.

The organization is also involved in a variety of service projects throughout the year, including a number of activities at Christmas designed to provide a brighter holiday season for less fortunate persons.

Directors are Ellen Goldfarb, Diane Myers, Diane Moore and Evelyn Stroud.

Most Are Calm About Predicted Quake

No Wilmington Exodus

WILMINGTON, N.C. (UPI) — There was no reported mass exodous from Wilmington this weekend despite a psychic's prediction that an earthquake "most likely" would hit the area Saturday.

Most residents of the port city appeared to disbelieve the prediction of the major tremor, but one study showed that about 3,000 people had purchased earthquake coverage since the prediction of self-described psychic Clarisa Bernhardt.

Mrs. Bernhardt predicted Jan. 10 that an earthquake with a measurement of eight on the 10-point Richter scale would devastate Wilmington "definitely within the next 365 days, probably during the week of Jan. 14-20 and most likely Jan. 17, 1976."

Wilmington businessman T.M. Costello said most people in the city didn't believe the tremor would hit, but he had purchased an earthquake policy.

"At least I'll have a little cushion to fall back on if it does come," said Costello.

Insurance agent Carter S. Haas said he'd sold 200 "just in case" earthquake insurance policies last week.

He said most of the people weren't frightened, but "some of the people are scared to death."

"We've got one old lady who lives in a trailer. She is sleeping by her door. You can hear the fear in her voice when you talk to her," Haas said in an interview.

Two sociologists from the University of Colorado's Institue of Behavorial Science went to the area to study the reactions of area residents to the earthquake scare.

They hired 20 students from the University of North Carolina at Wilmington to assist them. Dr. Eugene Haas and David Mileti wanted to survey Wilmington residents to gauge the effect of the Mrs. Bernhardt's prediction.

Geologists asked the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to make a seismic check of Wilmington last year because they had noted the area was rising, a condition that elsewhere occurred prior to an earthquake. Carolina Power & Light Co. is constructing a nuclear power station in the area, and that could cause even more damage should an earthquake ever hit Wilmington.

But geologists said there was "no scientific evidence" to support the prediction of an immediate danger to the area.

Aerosal Plant Explosions

By KEN FRANCKLING

CUMBERLAND, R.I. (UPI) — A series of explosions blew a side wall out of the Peterson-Puritan Aerosol Inc. plant Saturday.

Police said more than 20 of the 30 employes working in the Peterson-Puritan Aerosol Inc. were injured by the blast. At least two suffered severe burns over 60 per cent of their bodies.

"Small explosions were going off all over the place," said Ray Hamel, owner of a nearby gasoline station. "Then the roof got engulfed in flames."

"Most of the damage was in the personnel and experimental departments," said a fire official, estimating 25 per cent of the building was burned or destroyed.

"We got a call about 9:20 a.m. saying there was a loud explosion and a huge cloud of black smoke over the building," he said.

One side of the building, about 80 feet long, was shattered and several 10 to 15-foot holes were blown through the front of the cinder block building.

"The biggest worry at first were several large gas storage tanks next to the building," said Hamel, "but, the fire was brought under control."

The fire department evacuated a nearby Boys Club and two homes because of heavy fumes.

"I saw black smoke coming I left my service station, went up to a cliff that oversees the whole building. I saw a whole wall pushed outward," said Hamel. "A man was running around trying to get the big tractors started. He couldn't even get in because they were all covered with cinder blocks."

Company manager Robert Boronski said the cause of the explosion was not immediately known, but the building was still standing and was not a total loss.

Boronski said the walls were constucted so they would blow out during an emergency. "We wouldn't want something like this contained."

"If they weren't blowout panels, we probably would have had some fatalities," said fire official Robert Jolly. He said the initial explosion occurred in an area loading the aerosol cans.

Teen-Age Boys Survive 17 Days In Snow Caves

OREGON CITY, Ore. (UPI) — Three teen-age boys who survived a record 17 days huddled in snow caves on Oregon's tallest peak were pronounced in excellent condition Saturday. They vowed to return to the scene of their ordeal.

"It was the first time I was ever on a mountain," said Matt Meacham, 16, College Place, Wash. "There were times when I wished I would never see a mountain again. But now I want to climb some more. I like it."

Meacham, along with his more experienced companions, Randy Knapp, 18, Walla Walla, Wash., and Gary Schneider, 16, Weston, Ore., were walking down the slopes of 11,235-foot Mt. Hood at the 7,800-foot level Friday when found by searchers.

Knapp's mother, Mrs. Lucille Knapp, said her son was eager to return because "when you hear the song of the mountain, then you've got to climb."

Survival experts said the 17-day ordeal broke the previous record on Mt. Hood, set by three men who spent six days in a snow cave in March, 1974. More than a dozen climbers are known to have died on Mt. Hood in the last 50 years.

"We had to keep our cool," Knapp said. "If we had panicked we never would have made it."

"The Lord watched over us and guided us," Knapp said. "We can thank the Lord for delivering us."

"We hadn't eaten a meal for the last eight days," he said. "But we had enough jello pudding for two cups each until a couple of days ago."

"By that time we knew we would make it," Meacham said."

After living in seven different snow caves they dug themselves, the youths hiked out Friday when the sun came out. They had survived avalanches and a tumble into a crevasse. Once they were buried under more than 40 feet of snow.

"We had to dig 40 feet of tunnel to get out of one snow cave," Knapp said, "and there was at least 40 feet of snow on top of us."

On the fifth day they ran out of stove fuel, leaving them with only one candle to melt snow. So they filled plastic bottles with snow and hung them under their shirts, thus producing two or three quarts of water a day.

Mountain experts said the boys were helped by good equipment — double sleeping bags, insulated mats and wool clothing—and, "They did just about everything right."

They left Dec. 31, intending to spend five days hiking around it.

The three were brought by helicopter and ambulance to Willamette Falls Hospital for treatment by Dr. Cameron Bangs, a nationally-known specialist in cold weather injuries.

"These young men were very well trained, but also very well trained, but also very lucky," Dr. Bangs said. He said Meacham, who suffered some frostbite, and Knapp probably would remain in the hospital a few days and Schneider might leave this weekend.

FOOD—Gary Schneider, 16, Weston, Ore., eyes his first hot meal in several days at Willamette Falls Hospital. He and two other teen-agers straggled off Mt. Hood Friday after being missing in snow storms for 16 days. They subsisted on pancake mix and water for the last three days.

New Irish Violence

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — A bomb dumped on the bar of a crowded Roman Catholic pub in Belfast Saturday killed at least two persons and wounded more than a dozen others, police said.

The blast followed the first shooting death of a British soldier this year and the Irish Republican Army assassination of an Irishman the outlawed group claimed was an undercover agent with the British army.

"Barbed Wire Enema"

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — George C. Wallace has staked out a group of opponents that won't be on any ballot and seldom respond to public criticism. He's running against the nation's federal judges.

The Alabama governor fired the opening salvo in that campaign last week, claiming "thugs and federal judges" were working together to take over the country.

"A good vote for George Wallace might give a political barbed wire enema to some of these federal judges," Wallace told a news conference filmed by his campaign organization for possible use in television commercials.

Penalties Law Proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A high CIA spokesman said Saturday the Ford administration plans to propose a law threatening criminal penalties against former agents and other sworn government employes if they release classified information endangering American spies.

"There is no sanction whatsoever against any person revealing a national security secret unless you intend to harm the United States. So there is a loophole you can drive a tank through in the law," he said.

But he stressed such a proposal, still on the drawing board, would protect federal workers from "frivolous" federal charges and also allow news media to dig for secret information.

Spanish Strikes

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Police broke up rallies by hundreds of striking bank workers Saturday, but released dozens of union leaders accused of labor agitation.

In downtown Madrid, police dispersed a demonstration by 700 striking employes at the main branch of the Banco de Santander. Authorities also broke up rallies at two other banks.

But most banks operated normally despite the city-wide walkout.

Ordered To Meet Again

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal judge has ordered Patricia Heart to meet again with a prosecution psychiatrist who she said was abrasive and hostile toward her during a previous examination.

Miss Hearst's attorneys had sought during a two-day evidentiary hearing to prohibit Dr. Harry Kozol of Boston from interviewing the newspaper heiress again. But U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter rejected their arguments Friday.

Third Countries Missionaries

ATLANTA (AP) — An Australian evangelist says Third World nations, formerly the destination of many European and North American missionaries, are now sending thousands of missionaries to Western countries.

"There are 250 agencies in Africa, Asia and Latin America that are sending missionaries to other countries," said the Rt. Rev. A. Jack Dain, chairman of the Lausanne Committee for World Evangelization which met this week.

Charleston Search Halted

NORTH CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP)—A search of a Charleston County landfill has been halted until more definite information can be gotten regarding location of bodies linked to a mass slaying in Florence County last month.

"We're primarily interested in this site," Charleston County Police Chief John Ball said Friday, but he added that something more specific was needed.

New State Youth Director

RALEIGH (AP)—Raymond Shurling, 46, has been named director of state youth services succeeding David Jordan, who resigned several weeks ago to return to Charlotte.

Convicted On Six Counts Of Murder

By JON SWEET

NORTH PLATTE, Neb. (UPI) — Erwin Charles Simants was convicted Saturday of six counts of first degree murder by a jury which said it could not have functioned impartially without judicial restrictions on pretrial news coverage.

The jury took four hours to return the guilty verdict against Simants. He showed no visible signs of emotion when Lincoln County District Judge Hugh Stuart read the guilty verdict on each of the six counts.

Simants was charged with six counts of first degree murder in the commission of a sexual assault in connection with the Oct. 18 deaths of six members of the Henry Kellie family in the small farm community of Sutherland located 24 miles west of North Platte.

Convivtion of first degree murder in Nebraska carries a sentence of life imprisonment or the death penalty. Stuart set Jan. 29 as the date for sentencing.

The case sparked national attention over court-imposed orders that limited news coverage of pretrial proceedings.

The Lincoln County Attorney's office requested an order to limit the release of pretrial information, including confessions Simants made to a 13-year-old nephew, his mother and to law officers.

Stuart later refined the order, and the Nebraska news media appealed the free press-fair trial issue to the U.S. Supreme Court, which has agreed to hear the case.

Stuart polled the jury following the verdict. The jurors voted, 9-1-2, that they could not have heard the case impartially had the confessions been published or broadcast and voted, 11-1, that it was proper to sequester them and prevent them from reading or hearing news accounts during the trial.

Jury Foreman Richard Anderson, a North Platte insurance adjuster, was the only juror to vote that he could have ruled impartially without the gag order or the sequestration. In his profession, Anderson said, "We have to rely on facts rather than heresay."

The prosecution, which demanded the death penalty from the outset and rejected several plea bargaining attempts by the defense, introduced during the eight days of testimony evidence which showed two of the victims, Florence, 10, and her grandmother, Audrey Marie, 57, were sexually assaulted. Circumstantial evidence was introduced that an attempted sexual assault was made on a third victim, Deanna Kellie, 7.

Before reaching the unanimous guilty verdict, three votes were taken, one during two hours of deliberations Friday night and two during Saturday's two hours of deliberation.

Anderson said the jury voted, 10-2, Friday night before retiring for the night, and voted, 10-2 and 11-1, Saturday before reaching an unanimous decision. He said the negative votes were cast by jurors who accepted the defense plea that Simants was not guilty by reason of insanity.

The defense said Simants was under servere mental duress

Hobgood Honored

RALEIGH (AP)—A group of North Carolina lawyers has honored Superior Court Judge Hamilton Hobgood for "highest excellence in the administration of justice."

The North Carolina Academy of Trial Lawyers cited Hobgood, who presided over the widely publicized Joan Little trial here last summer, in a special award Friday.

Miss Little was acquitted of murder in the icepick slaying of Clarence Alligood, a Beaufort County Jailer she accused of sexually assaulting her.

ECU-Pitt Hospital Agreement

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)— An agreement under which the East Carolina University Medical School will use Pitt County Memorial Hospital as a teaching hospital has been worked out.

William A. Dees, chairman of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors, announced at a meeting of the governors Friday that an affiliation agreement between the hospital and the medical school was signed Dec. 16 after differences on representation on the hospital board and regulations governing the hospital staff were worked out.

UNC President William C. Friday said the signing "concludes all major pending business as far as the board of governors is concerned in terms of allocating funds and getting the construction projects under way for the medical school."

Before the four-year medical school can begin admitting students next fall the agreement, along with the rest of the medical school's plans, must be approved by the Liaison Committee on Medical Education, the joint accrediting agency of the American Medical Association and the American Association of Medical Colleges.

Friday said an informal visit from LCME officials has been scheduled for next month and a formal accreditation visit is expected in the spring.

The agreement calls for 40 per cent ECU representation on the hospital's board of directors and comparable representation on the hospital executive committee. UNC had proposed 50-50 representation and the hospital wanted to keep two-thirds representation on both panels.

Williams Says Ruling Is "No Victory"

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Black activist Robert Williams said Saturday the decision by Union County authorities to drop kidnap charges against him had not changed his opinion of American justice.

"This is supposed to be a victory," Williams, 49, told a news conference. "People expect me to say, 'Ah yes, black people can get justice.

"What is the justice in a situation where a man has been hounded around the entire world for 14 years on a trumped up charge?"

On Friday, Union County Dist. Atty. Carroll Lowder announced he was dropping the charges because Mrs. Bruce Stegall, 64, his principal witness was too sick to testify.

Williams said authorities were afraid a trial would show that state and local officials trumped up the charges in 1961 to silence his civil rights activities.

He and four others weree accused of kidnaping Mr. and Mrs. Stegall, a white couple, during racial unrest on Aug. 27, 1961. The Stegalls were released unharmed a few hours later.

Williams and his family fled the country and lived in Cuba and China before returning to the United States in 1969.

Last November, the Michigan Supreme Court ordered him returned to North Carolina. He appeared in Monroe for a bond hearing in December and was released under $10,000 bond.

Stegall died last January and Mrs. Stegall is said to be in poor health.

Williams, who says he had nothing to do with any abduction, claimed he had planned to file a $1 million lawsuit in U.S. District Court charging Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., the former state attorney general, former Gov. Bob Scott and others with conspiring to violate his rights.

However, he said he was not sure whether he would pursue the matter now that the charges against him had been dropped.

"I feel cheated because I was denied a trial," Williams said. "I was looking upon the trial as my forum to expose the dirty tricks tactics of the authorities."

He continued, "They hoped I wouldn't come back. They hoped I'd keep running. But what they don't know is there's a difference between running and strategy."

The trial had been docketed for this month's term of Union County Superior Court.

Williams heard of Lowder's decision while driving from his home in Baldwin, Mich., to Charlotte. He planned to appear in court in nearby Monday on Monday for a pre-trial hearing.

During the news conference, Williams waived a letter which he said was written to him by a former State Bureau of Investigation agent. He said the agent told him that he staked out Williams' home in 1961 at the insistence of state authorities and that the incident should be investigated. Williams was president of the local chapter of the NAACP at the time.

Cocky Rooster Chases Away Cats And Dogs

DUNEDIN, Fla. (UPI) — Pete is an irascible panhandler and intensely jealous of his territory, but not much of a security guard at the service station he calls home.

A full-time resident of the station for the past eight-and-a-half years, Pete, a five-pound white rooster, doesn't hesitate to challenge and run off any dog or cat that might stray into the area.

"One of my customers has a dog that walks with him all the time," said station operator Harold LaValley. "He used to come through here all the time and bring the dog with him. But Pete kept chasing the dog out and finally he learned not to come into Pete's territory.

"Now the dog walks clear around the station on the sidewalk and waits by the lot for his owner to come out."

At the first sighting of an intruder Pete puffs up his chests, swaggers across the concrete and pecks, kicks and crows until the intruder leaves.

LaValley tried once to keep a hen at the station with Pete but he wanted no part of that.

"He pecked her and broke her eggs and finally we had to give her away before Pete killed her," LaValley said. "He's strictly by himself and doesn't want anything around him he doesn't like."

Although apparently fearless of cats and dogs, Pete flunked his test as a guard.

"One night I got broke into here. I had a car in the wash bay overnight and Pete was on the floor," LaValley said. "The police came in through a window to investigate and heard a noise under the car. "The officer cocked his shotgun and ordered whoever was under the car to come out with his hands up. Then Pete came strutting out."

Morgan Says Curbs Needed On The FBI

RALEIGH (AP)—Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., says curbs should be placed on the Federal Bureau of Investigation because of its repeated abuses of the law.

In a speech to the North Carolina Academy of Trial Lawyers Friday, Morgan cited as abuses the tapping of Dr. Martin Luther King's telephone, and FBI actions against such groups as the Ku Klux Klan and Black Panthers.

"Regardless of how you feel about these organizations, regardless of how you feel about Martin Luther King—and I have mixed emotions—no man has the power to indict in secret, to sit in judgment and to impose sentence in secret," Morgan said.

"If these things don't constitute a threat to the American people and American liberty, I fail to understand our system of government," Morgan added.

Morgan, a member of a special U.S. Senate Committee probing intelligence activities, cited numerous "abuses of power" by former FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover.

He said that "the country must never again let a man hold such a powerful position for such a length of time." Hoover was FBI director from 1924 until his death in 1972.

Morgan also said there is "little doubt in my mind but what the assassination of President John F. Kennedy was in retribution for our attempts to assassinate" Cuban Premier Fidel Castro.

Productive Year Is Evident

The Redevelopment Commission sees the year 1975 in its annual report as "extremely productive."

The Shore Drive project, the first redevelopment project for the city, was virtually completed during the year and the Town Common Park was completed.

The report pointed out that around $4 million in new construction was carried out during the year with the N. C. National Bank building finished and the N. C. Employees Credit Union building nearing completion.

Tax revenues of some $30,000 annually will be derived from Shore Drive buildings as compared to around $3,000 annually when the area was occupied by mostly delapidated housing.

Work has also proceeded in the Central Business project with the downtown mall completed during the year.

Various other projects and activities have moved along during the year.

It is not easy to recall the deplorable conditions of the Shore Drive area before this project was initiated over a decade ago. There was much opposition at the time, but few can deny now that the land has been put to much better use. We believe the people who once lived in the area, for the most part are now living in better housing.

We think the Central Business District area will be equally impressive once the planned work is completed and business is stimulated to the point where all downtown structures will be improved.

There has been criticism of urban renewal projects in some municipalities around the nation, but we believe that these federal funds have been used to good advantage in Greenville.

Qualification Is The First Criteria

Anne Armstrong, a Texas Republican, has been nominated as United States ambassador to Great Britain and, if she is confirmed, she will be the first woman ever to serve in that position.

Recognizing this, Mrs. Armstrong pledged to "work doubly hard to be a credit to this office and to American women in particular."

The appointment is signficant, of course, in that Mrs. Armstrong will be the first woman ambassador to Great Britain. But the first criteria, as always, should be her qualifications. From what we've read she seems well qualified for the office, and the fact that she is a woman will be all the more credit to our nation.

A Future Seafood Center

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—Manteo and Wanchese are famous names, at least to Tar Heels.

But in coming years, those two names may become known worldwide as the site of a seafood center.

Manteo and Wanchese were two Indians who traveled to England with Sir Walter Raleigh, and the interest aroused by the visitors and their work in promoting the Albemarle region helped attract early settlers.

Manteo and Wanchese will again play a major part in helping the Albemarle: "The diamond is about to be polished and the expansion of Wanchese Harbor (on Manteo Bay, Roanoke Island) into a major fish-handling and seafood processing port is part of the plan," says Robert E. Leak, director of the economic development division of the state's Department of Natural and Economic Resources.

National Prominence

Thomas Broughton, assistant director of the division, predicts the development will "bring national prominence in seafood merchandising to North Carolina.

State development leaders are pulling out the stops in rhetoric to describe the plans for "a new concept in development of North Carolina's seafood industry," which they say can capitalize on a location near the center of the "greatest reservoir of natural food in the entire United States."

Gov. James E. Holshouser joins the chorus as he predicts the project at Wanchese "will unlock one of the great reservoirs of natural food in all the oceans, at a time when we are faced with dwindling supplies of finfish and shellfish . . ."

And James E. Harrington, secretary of the development agency, calls this "the single most important project in northeastern North Carolina."

Wanchese Harbor—state and federal funds permitting—is envisioned as the most completely integrated seafood facility in the country.

The state would spend $3.5 million (the General Assembly willing) on a Ports Authority complex to provide home port for a fishing fleet and a harbor refuge for 180 ships.

The state would provide docks, roads, utilities, sewage treatment, and ship services, while making land along the harbor available for development by private industry for seafood receiving, processing plants, and transportation facilities.

Seafood Park

In short—a North Carolina seafood-industrial park, on a harbor, much like the highly successful Research Triangle Park near Raleigh, but with different activities naturally.

The General Assembly has already put up half a million for planning, with additional funds sought in the next three years.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Congress holds the key for inlet and channel work leading into Wanchese Harbor to let the big fishing boats in.

The Corps of Engineers will get $70,000 for advance design work. State officials hope federal construction funds will be approved in 1977—in the amount of $21.8 million. The state must put up $878,000, for a total investment of $22.7 million to build jetties into the ocean and build a clear channel at Oregon Inlet; provide a channel from the inlet through Roanoke Sound to the Harbor; and enlarge Wanchese Harbor to 15 acres of water, 14 feet deep.

Officials predict an investment of $30 million from private industry in a five-year period, and jobs for more than 640.

Seafood now taken on the Carolina coast has a dockside value of approximately $18 million; value after processing of some $72 million. Experts say seafood available for harvest could easily produce $250 million at dockside; a billion dollars at retail annually. That would make the industry one of the state's biggest.

This nation now imports 75 per cent of its seafood—and much of that is caught by foreign trawlers in sight of the Outer Banks, but sold in Maryland or Virginia.

INSIDE REPORT

Warning Signal From Oil

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—The American oil industry, its habitual paranoia over the future heightened by President Ford's signing of the energy bill, is posting warning signals of deepening dependence on foreign oil.

Developments within the industry now being signaled began long before Mr. Ford's fateful decision. But what oil men, correctly or not, regard as betrayed by the White House seems to be intensifying the trends: cutting corners on federal regulations at the cost of production; elimination of less profitable production; continuing emphasis on foreign over domestic operations; diversification into non-oil operations.

One oil expert sums it up by forecasting that many companies will "go into a maintenance mode" domestically—keeping up present operations without expansion. Confirming that, the vice president of one of the huge Seven Sisters sees forced divestiture of his company's integrated oil activities in the foreseeable future and perhaps nationalization beyond that. This mood could exaggerate the worst effects of the new energy law, causing reduced domestic production and increased imports—to the detriment of this nation's security.

What the oil executives are doing may well be heightened by their habitual paranoia, but they are not bluffing to win government favors. To the contrary, since Mr. Ford's energy bill approval, the oil men have clammed up about their plans. But many clearly feel that since Mr. Ford has accepted what they see as permanent government controls, the industry can ignore the national interest in making decisions.

For big oil to say "no more Mr. Nice Guy" mocks a consuming public conditioned by politicians castigating the industry. But some objective observers believe the oil companies generally did not profiteer and did act in the national interest during the Arab oil embargo. Now, however, more and more companies are starting to live up to the industry's sour reputation.

The warning signals fall into four general categories of activity, which combined could have catastrophic effects:

Warning Signal No. 1: One company is using its low-priced "old" oil as fuel for its tanker fleet to bring in higher-priced foreign oil—a process that beats the regulatory system penalizing holders of "old" oil. To some experts, convinced controls are permanent, such evasion of government regulations will proliferate. The net impact: higher imports.

Warning Signal No. 2: One company is planning to shut down costly production of lowgrade crude in California's Wilmington offshore field because the government regulated price of $4.21 a barrel is uneconomic. The Federal Energy Administration (FEA) may soon reverse itself and increase the price, but that won't solve the problem. With a weighted average of $7.66 for "old" oil under the new bill, the FEA simply cannot make this sort of production profitable.

Thus, there is a danger of more and more low-grade fields closing down. For many, production cannot be resumed.

Strength For Today

A CRUSADE OF PETITION

Several years ago the then Archbishop of Canterbury suggested that Christians the world over spend five minutes every day in an act of spiritual recollection and committal. The basis of this period of prayer would be The Lord's Prayer. He asks that the words "Our Father" be kept in mind at all times.

Outlining the program, the Archbishop recommended that every Sunday "we think especially of the words, 'Hallowed be Thy Name,' picturing what the world would be like if that came to pass. On Monday the subject of the prayer would be, 'Thy Kingdom come'; on Tuesday, 'Thy will be done.' On Wednesday we will pray especially for daily bread—not mine nor yours, but our daily bread, the need of all God's children. On Thursday our supplication will be for forgiveness—as we forgive; on Friday for freedom from unnecessary temptation and deliverance from the evil which has a hold upon us. On Saturday we will remember for whose glory we ask all this and in whose power we can accomplish it."

Sunday Morning Notes

Utilities Director Charles Horne interrupted Business Manager Curtis Howell at last week's utilities meeting. Howell had just reported the dismal news that the electric operation was in the red for the month.

Horne explained, though, that the utilities had paid a larger than usual bill to VEPCO because of a longer billing period.

"Excuse me, Curtis," Horne said after the explanation. "We'll go on to something more desirable."

The rest of the departments were in the black.

A customer ordered a milk shake for his dog who was tied up to a parking meter out front of Beddingfields the other day.

The clerk promptly began fixing it . . . paused, then asked, "Does he like it thick or thin?"

The customer replied that the dog liked them thick.

Lady called to say that she and her husband had been reading about those pet rocks and she wanted to know what they were.

We explained that as best we understood it the pet rock was nothing but an ordinary rock in a box. Included with it is a cleverly written instruction book for the care and handling of the pet rock.

ALVIN TAYLOR

She seemed relieved. "We went to the dictionary and found an animal called a 'roc'," she said.

We assured her that that wasn't what the pet rock was all about. After she hung up we took a look at the unabridged dictionary.

"Roc" it defined as "a legendary bird of great size and strength believed to inhabit the Indian ocean area."

Probably the first rule would be to keep the roc well-fed. Otherwise it might eat its owner.

Like the first robin of Spring, the first sign of an election year came at The Daily Reflector office last week.

Someone came by and wanted to see the files which included the election Tabulations of 1972.

A patron purchasing one of those tiny stickers which would renew his license plate for another year and looked at it suspiciously. "Will that stay on?" he asked the clerk.

Sen. Robert Morgan reflected on the "insurmountable work load" for members of the U.S. Senate, where Morgan recently completed his first year.

Two-Way Street

(Henderson Dispatch)

Representative Fountain says that Federal revenue sharing is most likely to be continued by Congress. And there are reasons why it will.

For one thing, local governments all across the country have become accustomed to this windfall of income and are not of a mind to give it up. Their spokesmen on Capitol Hill know that as well as any one. It is a good political gimmick.

At the same time, it enables the locals to do things they could not afford otherwise. It means greater spending on their part in providing facilities and activities which in former times were scarcely known and which had to be bypassed.

Here at home, both the county and the city receive scads of cash from revenue sharing, from the special one cent sales tax and various grants which come from Washington and Raleigh. One has only to analyze the mushrooming expenditures in recent years.

Time was when services could be available only in proportion to what could be realized from taxes, mostly on property. Even that is more than ever before.

Revenue sharing by the Federal government increases the public debt by borrowing. The Fed certainly doesn't have the money from ordinary tax income, and in some areas that is rising by leaps and bounds; for example, Social Security. This is not handled by counties and cities, but those who pay feel the pinch, whether all individuals share in the levies or not.

Congress cannot allocate billions of dollars annually to local governments out of money it doesn't have, except as it goes further into debt. But debt is of little concern to beneficiaries. What pleases them is having more money for what is wanted, some of it perhaps needed while other things could be done without. But the country is in the groove and readily goes along with little thought to what the future may hold by way of the inevitable pay day. At best it's a two-way street.

Terror Has No Limits

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — The man described to a Senate committee as one of the foremost Western experts on political crimes says that terrorism has by no means reached its peak.

"One of these days," said Brian Crozier, Director of the Institute for the Study of Conflict, "someone is going to make a home-made atom bomb. There are already thefts of fissile nuclear material. No doubt about it."

Crozier appeared at a hearing of the Senate Judiciary Committee on internal security some months ago and since then has been tapping his formidable sources for clues to the direction terrorism may take as it seeks ever more sensational targets.

"OPEC shows that nothing is really impossible," he said, referring to the kidnapping of Arab and other oil ministers in Austria.

"Targets which are spectacular but at the same time soft are easily available. Some high-risk targets require technical expertise and the kind of inside knowledge that few terrorist groups appear to possess but this could be supplied by foreign backers, Russia, for example."

Or, he said, some of it could be supplied by a relative newcomer on the scene — the free-lance mercenary who offers his services to political terrorists although he himself is not politically motivated. This could add an even more dangerous dimension of expertise to some groups whose exploits have been somewhat amateur even when violent and successful.

Even before the OPEC coup, the terrorist underground, Crozier said in an interview, was discussing the possibility of attacking nuclear power stations, or stealing nuclear or chemical and biological warfare materials. They were exploring the possibility of poisoning the water supply of a

40 Years Ago Today

January 18, 1936

Rudyard Kipling, Great Britain's famous poet-imperialist, died early today in the Middlesex hospital at the age of 70. His body was taken to the hospital chapel to await cremation.

Story-teller to the world, Kipling brought the glamour of empire-making out of India and sent over the threshold of East and West a procession of lovable characters and unforgetable phrases.

The author of "Kim," "Captains Courageous," "Gunga Din" and "Recessional" found as much popularlity in America as elsewhere in the English-speaking world.

New Jersey Governor Hoffman intensified today his search for other persons beside Bruno Richard Hauptmann who might have been involved in the kid-slaying of Charles A. Lindbergh Jr.

A Newark, N.J. newspaper said the Governor's home at Douth Emboy is under heavy guard because of letters threatening the lives of Mrs. Hauptmann and the Governor's three children. The letters were apparently written in anger of the 30-day reprieve the Governor granted Hauptmann two days ago.

Suggests Arms Sales To China

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Christopher Phillips' main professional interest is in the development of trade with the People's Republic of Rhina, but his concern of late has been increasingly political.

Since the Shanghai communique of 1972, said Phillips, the United States has followed a standpat policy toward the mainland nation. "There has been no significant political progress since then," he said in an interview.

In that communique, both sides agreed to work toward normalization of relations. But, said Phillips, who has had extensive diplomatic experience, "there has been no movement."

Phillips, now president of the National Council for U.S.-China Trade, believes the over-all interests of the United States, including trade, depend heavily on some evidence of progress toward full recognition by each country.

In his opinion, the Chinese may be getting a bit impatient. "I'm wary that some elements of the Chinese leadership might say there is no future in this for China," he said. "We cannot have indefinite stagnation."

Phillips, whose organization is made up of about 300 companies interested or involved in China trade, recognizes that the President might face some immediate obstacles, but he asked pointedly:

"Is there anything that can be done to convey to the Chinese that we are serious?"

The sooner the better, said Phillips, a Republican and former deputy representative to the United Nations. "I am not arguing this just to enhance our trade with China," he said, but he indicated a move could be made in that area.

"Arguments have been made that perhaps we should reconcile our policy of no sale of any kind of military goods to China," he observed. "There are those who say strictly defensive military equipment might be desirable ..."

Such a move, he suggested, might make clear to the Chinese that they and the United States have a continued mutuality of interest in seeking to contain the threat of Soviet Union expansionary goals.

While not personally advocating such a move, said Phillips, "I would be willing to sit down and argue the merits." One danger, he suggested, was that the Soviets might react sharply, destroying detente.

Whatever effort is made to further our relations with China, Phillips feels, would be beneficial if it resulted in improved trading activity. He believes that by 1985 China's gross national product will be one of the five largest.

Divided Over U.S. Future

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N. J., — Against a backdrop of debate concerning the direction and character of American foreign policy, the U.S. public is divided over the question of whether American power in the world will increase or decline. At the same time, there is widespread agreement that the influence of two American rivals, Russia and China, will increase.

While 42 per cent of the public feels American strength will increase during 1976, about the same number, 44 per cent, believes it will decline.

However, nearly two-thirds of Americans expect both Chinese (65 per cent) and Russian (63 per cent) power to grow. Both figures represent the largest proportion of Americans expecting either Chinese or Russian strength to increase since these surveys were initiated in the early '60s.

American Outlook Now More Positive

Although the current figures represent a more restrained view of American influence than was prevalent in the U. S. during the 1960s, they are considerably more positive than was the case two years ago at the outset of 1974. At that time only one American in three, 29 per cent, expected U.S. power to increase.

The uncertainty of Americans concerning the expansion of U.S. power is shared by citizens in many other nations— most notably some of our closest allies. For example, only about one third or less of the citizens of West Germany, Great Britain, Canada, Switzerland and Sweden expect American power to increase.

While Americans are most likely to predict increasing influence for the Chinese and Russians, this view is generally shared in the other nations surveyed. Although there is a great deal of indecision concerning Chinese and Russian power in some of the countries participating in the survey, the weight of opinion among those expressing a viewpoint is, almost without exception, that the strength of both China and the U.S.S.R. will grow during 1976.

"Which of these do you think is likely to be true of 1976: a year when America will increase her power in the world, or a year when American power will decline?"

Following are the latest results and the trend for the U.S.:

American Power Expectations

Smuggling And Conspiracy In Vitamin Field?

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

ROCHESTER, Minn.—The story of what happened to Donna Schuster and to Donald E. Hanson might have been written in the pages of George Orwell's 1984. You will find it, instead, in the columns of the Rochester Post-Bulletin. The story involves the Food and Drug Administration. The story is pure and unadulterated outrage.

Mrs. Schuster is 46; Hanson is 44. They are partners in a small vitamin distributing business. Neither may fairly be described as a vitamin nut, but they have strong convictions about organic foods. Now they are under indictment as smugglers and conspirators. This past Monday they were mugged and fingerprinted by U.S. marshals. If convicted, they face fines and imprisonment.

This is the awful crime with which they stand accused—that they received through the United States Mail a quantity of a substance known variously as amygdalin, Laetrile, or Vitamin B-17. The compound is a derivative of apricot pits, though it appears widely in other fruits and vegetables. It is harmless. It is no more addictive than black-eyed peas.

The two Minnesotans were set up by customs agents and postal inspectors like a pair of plump pigeons. Affidavits on file in U.S. District Court in Minneapolis tell the incredible tale. The narrator is Richard J. Hoglund, a special customs agent "assigned to investigate the smuggling of prohibited medicines into the United States." Hoglund has worked hand in glove with another special agent in San Diego, Gene L. White.

On Dec. 3, 1975, according to the affidavits, an informant told White that he had been hired to smuggle 8,400 tablets of Laetrile into the United States. These were secreted in a garage on Dwight Street in San Diego. White went to the garage with a search warrant, and sure enough: There he found the horrid red and yellow tablets. Vitamin B-17; He was aghast at the depravity of man.

The informant slipped White the names and addresses of persons to whom the tablets were to be mailed. The shrewd eye of Agent White detected a conspiracy afoot. White thereupon arranged with his informant to smuggle additional quantities of this dreadful substance. Special Agent Lorentzen joined the squad.

These two ministers of implacable justice then packaged up a small quantity of amygdalin tablets, marked them with the return address of "J. Hoover," San Diego, and mailed them from the Post Office at National City, California, to Mr. Don Hanson, in care of Donna Schuster, 1724 Hiawatha Court, Rochester, Minn., being careful to give the proper zip code.

Meanwhile, Special Agent Hoglund in Minnesota had been kept advised. The mind of man boggles at the secret messages that flowed cryptically across the land. It was arranged for these frightful packages to be delivered at the address aforesaid between the hours of 11:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. on December 23. Postal Inspectors Bill Burgess in San Diego and Richard Stack in Rochester were added to the law enforcement team.

Mrs. Schuster lives in the country. She heard the mailman honk, went out, got the package, and went inside. Almost immediately, staked-out agents knocked at her door, presented a warrant, and raided her home. Vitamins! Other agents simultaneously raided Hanson's home at 1617 Fourth Ave., S.W. Aha! More vitamins! They were arrested, then indicted and arraigned.

What a monstrous affair is this! The hoity-toity, know-it-all experts of the FDA have declared Laetrile to be worthless in the treatment of cancer. Very well. They regard its marketing as quackery and fraud. All right. These experts are the direct professional descendants of experts who in another age were confident that mental illness should be cured by drilling holes in the skull, the better to let the demons out. This is the "medical establishment" at work.

Well, if this is the Orwellian fashion in which the medical establishment throws its weight around, to hell with the medical establishment. In a presumably free society, it is infuriating that non-conforming men and women should be arrested and prosecuted for importing and selling a harmless derivative of apricot pits. What in the name of the founding fathers is happening to our country?

The two defendants have retained counsel. They will fight. Those who believe in individual freedom will be rooting for them all the way.

Recovery Outlook Good For The Economy, But Consumer Is Key Factor

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

The early days of the new year have given a brighter hue to the recovery outlook.

In its annual forecast, the Commerce Department saw the output of goods and services rising, in real terms, by 6 percent to 7 percent. And business analysts, cautious last fall as they looked ahead to 1976, are firming up their own forecasts, not far off the Commerce Figures.

Investors have waded into the stock market with near unprecedented enthusiasm, reflecting a belief that recovery will not stumble and set the stage for a new recession later this year.

Behind all this is some slight evidence that the consumer, who will be the key factor in determining how far and how fast recovery carriers, is in a better mood — has gained confidence. He worries less about his job and, with inflation slowing, is willing to ease off on his purse strings. He has buying power — money and credit.

One example of a changing attitude is Christmas sales. When they are finally totaled up, crock pots and all, they may well set a record. And retail executives meeting in New York this week forecast that 1976 will be another banner year.

And after months of trying to whistle up business, the auto makers saw new car sales shoot up in December. This industry has been depressed for nearly two years.

Would-be home buyers are showing new interest, which is encouranging to the home building industry as it tries to recover from a long and deep slump.

Details of the Commerce Department's forecast make it clear that expectations for continued growth this year relies heavily on consumer spending. Capital spending by business will remain slow, with barely enough rise from 1975 to offset the cost of price increases.

Statistics show the consumer in position to be a strong customer, if he so decides. Personal income, which is a measure of the total flow to individuals, is on a strong upward course. At an annual rate of around $1.280-trillion, it is slating sharply up, after slowing in the fall of 1974 and actually dipping briefly during the past summer. This figure indicates a tremendous potential purchasing power.

There are about 85-million people at work, near 92 percent of the labor force. This is a major fact often overlooked, since attention centers on the unemployed, currently 8.3 percent. It should be remembered, too, that the 85-million at work are drawing the highest wages and salaries ever. And as inflation slows, the potential buying power rises. The number at work will rise as the year goes on.

On consumer prices, the prospect is that the information rate will slow to 6.5 percent this year, compared with a 1975 rate of 8 percent. This easing trend may help modify wage settlements, which represent a big inflation threat this year.

There is the prospect that interest rates, on balance, will be less of a brake on the economy. Short term rates have softened recently. And so have rates in the long term market. This, no doubt, played a part in the Commerce forecast for construction this year.

Construction outlays were predicted at $143-billion, or 16 percent above 1975's severely depressed rate. Much of the expected increase is attributed to the outlook for a real rebound in housing starts. Starts are forecast at 1.6-million, compared with an estimated 1.1-million last year.

This would be a sharp rise and may be on the optimistic side because of the tremendous price increase in housing. There is ample mortgage money available. The problem is that so many buyers have been forced out of the market by prices which make monthly payments, plus the heat bills, beyond their reach.

On the political side, the rate of growth projected by Commerce will be attacked by Democrats. Election year rhetoric will center on the unemployment forecast, an annual rate of 7.5 percent. Critics will claim that there must be a faster return to so-called full employment, despite the fact that this goal has never been reached except during periods of war.

President Ford's defense will be that the nation cannot afford to risk efforts for a quick return to boom times. A rapid recovery would invite more double digit inflation and another recession, or worse.

Records of the past offer a reassuring note: Going back 120 years, there have been 27 ups and downs. The average for the ups is 33-months, and this one started last spring.

Warning Signal No. 3: According to reliable reports in both the industry and the government, Phillips is purchasing more European refineries. By importing the refined product, it can then increase profits.

"The profit today is abroad, not at home," one oil executive told us. Although Gulf has been hurt by nationalizations in Kuwait and Venezuela, other companies want to expand overseas. Mobil has been particularly aggressive and astute in stepping up Saudi Arabian operations, and Exxon is following the same course there. Asked by a friend what his company would do if Congress ordered divestiture, the top executive in one of the Seven Sisters replied "We'd divest our U.S. operations."

Warning Signal No. 4: One major firm is seriously considering purchasing a major retail food chain—fitting a pattern of widespread diversification into non-oil operations by big oil. Mobil recently acquired Marcor, parent company of Montgomery Ward. Standard of California has bought 20 per cent of Amax, a mining concern.

By such diversification, major companies' get into non-regulated industries and hedge their bets against future divestiture or even nationalization. In the process, however, production efforts decline.

These warning signals come when production is falling ever more rapidly, plans for some domestic refinery construction have been postponed and bids on offshore oil leases are meager. Such bleak portents would seem to dwarf FEA chief Frank Zarb's cheery year-end message that Americans are finally conserving energy by lowering their thermostats and buying small cars.

WHAT ARE WE WORRYING ABOUT?

In Which An Urban Cat Proves A Poor Mouser

We've always known that our cat was immensely talented. For instance, she periodically decorates our white bedspread in an elegant paw print pattern, and she has "hand" fringed the skirt on our sofa. She also helps me re-pot my plants—she digs them up and I plant them back. But until last week Phillip and I were convinced that the only hunting talent she possessed was eating stuffed birds off the Christmas tree.

We found out last Wednesday that we were wrong. We were eating dinner when all of a sudden we heard a noise under the sink.

"What in the world is that?" I asked Phillip. "It sounds like our disposal has indigestion."

"If it's eaten any of the same things I'm eating now, you're probably right," he grumbled. "Turn the stupid thing on and see if it throws up."

I stuck my tongue out, then walked over to the sink and turned on the disposal. It churned with its usual voracity. And the noise under the sink was still there.

"Well, I can't imagine what it could be," I said. "I guess I'd better have a look." So I bent over and stuck my head under the sink. And what should I come to nose to whisker with but a mouse!

Now for some reason the average sane individual is scared to death of mice. And if mice frighten sane people, you can imagine how I reacted.

"Arrrrgh-e-eeee!!" I shrieked, jerking my head out and slamming my fingers in the door. "There's a mouse under there!"

GAIL MICHAELS

"You're kidding," said Phillip. "This is the 20th century. Mice don't live in houses any more. They only live in laboratories and comic books."

"See for yourself," I answered hysterically. "It's either a mouse, or my Brillo pad has grown fur."

"Okay, I'll take your word for it," he said, declining to confront the beastly visitor. "Get the cat. She'll take care of our guest."

"She's an urban cat," I replied. "I'm not sure she knows what a mouse is."

However, since we had no other alternative, we threw the cat under the sink. The first time she came out with the Brillo pad. But the second time she came out with the mouse.

"Good girl!" Phillip screamed. "Now take it out the door!"

The cat had other ideas. After all, a mouse in the house is worth two in the field. She headed for the living room, gleefully threw the mouse up in the air, caught it by the tail, and proceeded up the stairs. Phillip charged after her with a broom, jumping backwards every time she flipped the mouse. Thirty seconds later the mouse and the cat, in that order, came streaking back into the living room.

"Why don't you stop them?!" Phillip hollered.

"I can't," I yelled, looking down from my perch on the light fixture. "I have to dust these light bulbs."

"I've got her!" he proclaimed. "But where's the mouse?"

Twenty minutes later Phillip finally trapped the mouse in the master bedroom, and dragged it out of the house under a plunger.

I crawled out of the baby bed and surveyed the scene of the chase. The house looked like the film site of Starsky and Hutch.

"What are we going to do?" I wailed dismally, picking up a lamp and a couple of chairs.

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

The first session of the 94th Congress convened January 14, 1975 and immediately approved the recommendation of its Democratic Caucus to abolish the House Committee on Internal Security and transfer its staff, files and jurisdiction to the Judiciary Committee. It should be noted that many members voted for termination thinking, like many of us, that the function of the former Committee would be carried out by the Judiciary Committee. Nearly one year has passed and the Committee has not held one internal security related hearing.

As you know, Internal and National Security matters have been under attack throughout the year. The F.B.I. and C.I.A. have borne the brunt of this verbal and written abuse. I now understand the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Internal Security is on the brink of abolishment because of a lack of adequate funding.

It is obvious to me and hopefully to all freedom loving Americans, that something has to be done to change the direction our nation is heading. A recent F.B.I. report estimates there are over 15,000 terrorists organized in 21 separate groups in the United States. From January 1972 through October of this year some 7,700 bombing incidents, both actual and attempted, occured in our United States. Many of these incidents were either claimed by or otherwise attributed to such groups.

It has been reported that a concerted effort will be made by certain revolutionary groups to disrupt our nation's Bicentennial celebration in 1976. Needless to say, we can't sit idly by and watch our nation deteriorate from within, therefore; I urge every member of The American Legion and all other concerned citizens, to inform their Senators and Representatives that the obligation to maintain a viable internal security mechanism rests in large measure with the Congress of the United States. We have already seen the abolition of the Subversive Activities Control Board, the Attorney General's List, and the Internal Security Division of the Justice Department. Time is of the essence. Please contact your Member of Congress and seek their commitment to support the Legion's philosophy.

Some Teachers Reluctant To Use Their Ultimate Weapon

By G. G. LaBELLE
Associated Press Writer

Halfway through the school year, teachers in hundreds of school districts across the nation are working without labor union contracts.

Many say they're afraid to strike; they fear they would lose more pay while on the picket line than would be gained in contracts negotiated during a year of tight school budgets.

Nevertheless, tight budgets have helped to cause an unusually large number of strikes in other districts this year. These strikes have obscured the less dramatic months of negotiation, mediation, arbitration and uncertainty for teachers working without contracts.

The National Education Association, the largest group representing teachers in negotiations, estimated recently that contracts were unsettled in up to 1,000 districts that have had no strikes. It listed 140 strikes so far this school year, compared with 121 in the whole '74-'75 school year.

Officials at NEA had expected fewer strikes in '74-'75 because they felt teachers would recognize tight finances in schools and hold back demands. Later they said more walkouts resulted from hardpressed schools reducing offers and, in some cases, asking for pay cuts.

In Pensacola, Fla., where teachers are working without a contract, Jackie Barrineau, the local union leader, said teachers in her district turned down a contract offer that included a $60 cut in the $8,000 annual base salary. The teachers had asked for a $10,000 base, but later reduced it to $8,240.

Most union leaders are reluctant to talk about the reasons why teachers faced with offers like Pensacola's don't strike.

"No comment," said Helen Dobbins, leader of an NEA affiliate in suburban Chicago. Dorothy B. Jacobs, a union leader in Hartford, Conn., where teachers are working without a contract, would say little more than that a strike is "the ultimate weapon."

Two reasons are obvious: in most states, teachers face jail, fines or worse for striking. And the same tough economy that makes teachers ask for more pay also makes them fearful of losing income through strikes.

Under Florida law, striking teachers could also lose retirement pay and be fined up to $100 a day each.

Laws are similar— though not always as stringent— in other states, and teachers' organizations are fighting them. Mrs. Jacobs, leader of the American Federation of Teachers-affiliated union in Hartford, says the group is lobbying in the Connecticut legislature for an end to the nonstrike law and for binding arbitration.

Mrs. Jacobs' union first asked an 8 per cent raise in one year in the $9,362 to $17,225 pay scale. The school board offered no increase and the dispute went to arbitration. The arbitration panel suggested an 8.9 per cent hike in the first year of a two-year contract and 5.9 per cent in the second.

The union sees that as the basis for further negotiations, Mrs. Jacobs says. Barbara Kenny, the school board president, says the board still is studying the nonbinding suggestion.

Mrs. Kenny says the reason no raises were offered by the board is simple: the schools don't have the money.

The situation is similar elsewhere. Dale Moore, an official in the school system in Sacramento County, Calif., where 160 special education teachers are still without a contract, noted that a new state law limits increases in school budgets to 7 per cent over the previous year. The school system has offered the teachers a 6 per cent raise; the teachers have asked 14 per cent.

In this impossible situation— with both schools and teachers facing growing costs— the long negotiation process continues.

Mrs. Dobbins in the Chicago suburbs has been negotiating since last April.

Mrs. Jacobs and Mrs. Kenney have been involved in the Hartford talks since last March. First there were negotiations, then mediation, then arbitration. Mrs. Jacobs says the union now has passed a resolution to prepare for "the ultimate weapon" — a strike.

In Pensacola, the next step is a fact-finding, which Ms. Barrineau hopes will begin late this month. Throughout the negotiations she has had to continue teaching her second grade class.

After Payment Of Ransom

Kidnaped Man Released

RELEASED—Alan Bortnick, 27, talks with reporters Saturday in Washington after Bortnick was released after being held for five days in which he was blindfolded and tied to a bed until his father paid kidnapers a six-figure ramson, the FBI said. Alan was abducted Monday night from the trucking company where he worked as comanager. (AP Wirephoto)

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Kidnapers who held a trucking firm executive's 27-year-old son for five days released their hostage Saturday and escaped with a six-figure ransom, the FBI said.

Alan L. Bortnick of Silver Spring, Md., co-manager of the Square Deal Trucking Co. in northeast Washimgton, was released about 4 a.m., the FBI said. Spokesman Steve Ramey said Bortnick was "very fatigued" and had suffered "superficial facial cuts," but was in good condition.

The FBI was looking for two men who abducted Bortnick Monday evening and held three company workers at bay with a shotgun and a handgun. The suspects wore ski masks at the time of the kidnaping, Ramey said.

Ramey said the kidnapers telephoned Bortnick's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Bortnick of Chevy Chase, Md., about one hour later and demanded "a very substantial amount of money." Ramey said the elder Bortnick is co-owner of Square Deal Trucking.

He said attorneys for the Bortnick family placed the ransom "in six digits." Ramey said though the amount was reduced once from earlier demands by the kidnapers, it was "still a very substantial amount." He said reports that the ransom amounted to $250,000 was "a rumor I have heard."

Ramey said calls were made to the family every day up to the release—often several calls in a single day—dealing with the ransom, instructions that authorities not be notified, and information regarding the Bortnicks' son. They were assured he was unharmed, Ramey said.

Metropolitan Police were notified of the kidnaping and the FBI entered the case following the ransom demand. Ramey said at the request of the family he was not authorized to explain why the episode lasted for five days.

About 1 a.m. Saturday, another call was received at the Bortnicks' home instructing them to take the money, in cash, to a phone booth at a gasoline station in Silver Spring. A friend of the family who ran the errand was called about 1:30 a.m. at the phone booth and instructed to take the cash to a secluded crossroads in Sandy Spring, Md. about 12 miles to the north.

A "gym bag" full of money was dropped at the specified location and, three hours later, Bortnick informed his parents of his release by telephone. No details of that conversation or Bortnick's subsequent conversation with the FBI were released.

This question was then asked to discover attitudes on Russian power:

"Which of these do you think is likely to be true of 1976: a year when Russia will increase her power in the world, or a year when Russian power will decline?"

—A Review—

Cinderella In An Exciting Context

To break with tradition can be a very dangerious thing, but the East Carolina Workshop production of It's Magic Cinderella breaks with tradition and does it very successfully. Director Mick Godwin took the original story of Cinderella, added song and dance routines, a few notable characters and ended with a very strong production.

In breaking away from the original story of Cinderella who would have ever dreamed of Cinderella's flamboyant Fairy Godmother (Janice Vertucci) interrupting her Miami vacation to assist in Cinderella's (Robin Kinton) preparation for the Princes' party, or the use of Peter P. Pumpkin (Joe Riley) "prince of the pumpkin patch" to introduce the story.

One of the unusual concepts for the production was the fact that everyone sat on stage with the actors. By doing this a better rapport was established between the actors and the audience. Several times the audience was led into response to questions from members of the cast.

The dance by the mice in their transformation into Cinderella's escort to the party is sparkling. The strength of this number can be attributed to the dancing of the Pink Rat Terri Leggette and the choreography by Rodney Freeze.

The East Carolina Workshop production of It's Magic Cinderella is very fine entertainment for persons of all ages. Those fortunate enought to have seen this production will never think of Cinderella in quite the same way again!

It is hoped that this production will be given again and played for a longer time so that more people can have the opportunity to see it.

investors and developers participate with the federal and city governments in the basic objective of urban renewal—in this case the rehabilitation and revitalization of downtown Greenville."

The director added that the renovation of the hotel building, as well as the First Federal Savings and Loan Building, now underway, "greatly compliments the new Evans Street Mall and gets 1976 off to a fine start in the rehabilitation of present buildings in the CBD area."

The chairman of the CBD Project Advisory Committee, E. Hoover Taft Jr., observed, "Mr. Cherry's initiative in renovating this building confirms my personal belief, held over the past six years, that the Central Business District Project will convert a declining business area into a vibrant competitive area not matched in all of Eastern North Carolina."

The chairman added, "I look forward to seeing more property owners in downtown Greenville undertaking similar programs for their buildings."

Capt. Robert Gray of Tiverton, R.I., was the first person to sail the American flag around the world. It was aboard the ship Columbia, the name he gave to a large river he discovered in what later became Oregon.

N.C. Pay Raises Likely Despite Tight Money

By DOLLIE L. SMITH
UPI Capitol Reporter

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — If politicians have anything to do with it — and they do — North Carolina teachers and state employes will receive an election-year pay raise despite a tight-money situation.

The proposed five per cent cost-of-living increase for the more than 103,000 state workers was listed by the 1975 General Assembly as the top priority item for lawmakers when they convene May 3 to reassess the budget for 1976-1977.

Since then, almost every candidate for state office or the legislature has promised all-out efforts to muster the monies for the pay hike even though economists have predicted the state's revenues will fall about $50 million short of budgeted programs for the current fiscal year.

The proposed $70 million pay raise was a victim of the budget ax during the 1975 session as legislators were forced to cut nearly $300 million to balance the recommended budget for 1975-1977.

Gov. James E. Holshouser Jr. is keeping quiet on the pay raise issue, saying it is too early to know what revenues will be available by May.

When asked about the subject, many candidates couch their answers in terms of "if the money is available." But one candidate, Democratic gubernatorial hopeful Lt. Gov. James B. Hunt, went so far as to tell a recent meeting of educators, "We're going to do it if we have to turn the capitol upside down."

It was Sen. Thomas E. Strickland, D-Wayne, the only announced candidate for governor, who last week put the pay raise issue into perspective by predicing that political pressures would produce the pay raise even if it meant cutting back on programs.

"The old political system will start operating," he said. "In our system, when everything else fails, it does seem to work.

"I've seen legislators, governors, and everyone else take one stand today and then the political pressure builds up and all of a sudden you've worked out a problem you thought you couldn't work out."

The last legislative pay increase was a 7.5 per cent raise for teachers and state employes and an additional five per cent increase for highway patrolmen effective July 1, 1974.

However, since then, Peggy Oliver of the of the State Personnel Department estimates that at least 50 per cent of the 57,000 employes other than teachers have received bigger pay checks through automatic annual increases, classification changes, salary range changes and merit increases between four and five per cent.

That, she said, did not include promotions. Only about one-fourth of the 57,000 workers are frozen at top pay scales and unable to get any increase, she said.

Carolyn Hinton of the Department of Public Instruction said 16,495 of the 46,350 state paid teachers, principals and supervisors during the current school year were locked in at top scale wages, dependent on legislative action for any pay increase.

However, she noted that teachers with a bachelor's degree receive annual increases during their first 12 years of experience. Teachers with a master's degree get annual pay hikes during the first 13 years of teaching.

While the average monthly salary for state teachers between the 1973-1974 and 1974-1975 school year increased seven per cent, monthly wages for Tar Heel manufacturing production workers between 1974 and 1975 climbed only four per cent.

Between 1973 and 1974, monthly pay increases for the two groups averaged around six per cent, according to state statistics.

The U.S. Labor Department reported that between May of 1974 and May of 1975, weekly earnings for full-time workers in the nation rose nine per cent.

According to personnel department figures, the average monthly salary for state workers other than teachers increased eight per cent between 1973 and 1974, but only one per cent from 1974-1975.

While the North Carolina Association of Educators (NCAE) and the State Employes Association (SEA) have led the fight for the pay increase, the department of public instruction has maintained a low profile on the issue.

"We're not opposed to the increase if the money's there, but we're not for it at the expense of existing programs," said Tom I. Davis, public information officer for the Public Instruction.

"Some are saying cut back our kindergarten and exceptional children's programs to get the money. We'll fight that."

SEA Executive Director Emmett Burden contends state employe salaries are lagging behind industry wages, adding that by July 1 state employes will have gone 24 months without a pay raise.

Burden and NCAE Assistant Director Lloyd Isaacs estimate the cost of living during that period will have risen between 16 and 20 per cent.

Burden pointed out that on Oct. 1, the federal government gave its workers a five per cent pay increase. Also, he said, 50 per cent of the state work force in non-teaching positions earn $8,000, and less than four per cent make above $19,000 a year.

North Carolina's teachers' pay ranks 23rd in the nation, and the state's average teacher's salary of $11,511 trails the national average by $800 a year, Isaacs said.

Final Efforts Underway To Purchase Jockey's Ridge

JOCKEY'S RIDGE... Once funds have been raised to purchase an additional 125 acres adjacent to the 140 feet twin sand dune at Nags Head, Jockey's Ridge can formally become a state park. (Photo by Aycock Brown, Manteo)

ROCKY MOUNT — One summer morning in 1973, Carolista Baum of Chapel Hill stepped into the path of a bulldozer at Nags Head, and declared to the operator she would not move. The deafening machine, she said, was about to destroy Jockey's Ridge, one of the highest natural sand dunes in the world, and major tourist attraction in North Carolina's Outer Banks. The bulldozer's operator politely ceased his work and stepped down — further development of the property was halted.

The fight to save this twin sand dune, which rises majestically 140 feet from the Atlantic Ocean on one side and from the Roanoke Sound on the other, has progressed greatly since this first dramatic move over two years ago.

Carolista and her husband, Walter, along with their organization, "People to Preserve Jockey's Ridge," have taken great strides in achieving their ultimate goal of making the dune a state park and off-limits to future land development.

To assist the "People to Preserve Jocket's Ridge" in the final stage of their national fund raising drive, Planters National Bank today announced it will be seeking contributions from North Carolina citizens to obtain the some $180,000 still required to purchase the balance of land needed to formally make the Jockey's Ridge area a state park. Once the remaining 125 acres of land can be purchased, the park can become a reality for the state and protection of the dunes can be assured.

Interested citizens can help in the cause to make the Jockey's Ridge area a state park by giving a contribution of at least $5, which makes possible the donation of one square foot of Jockey's Ridge to Dare County and all of North Carolina's citizens.

These donations can be made at PNB offices in Rocky Mount, Raleigh, Greensboro, Greenville, Nags Head, Buxton, and Manteo. Funds collected by PNB will go to "People to Preserve Jockey's Ridge, Inc.", a non-profit organization, which will acquire the land needed to make the state park complete.

The fight to save Jockey's Ridge has been a long and trying one, according to Mrs. Baum, but the feat has been well worth the effort. Literally thousands of people have become interested and active in the campaign to save the dunes. Balloons, bumper stickers, posters, kites, tee shirts, place mats, and note pads bearing "Save Our Sand Dunes" emblems have been purchased by citizens throughout the nation to help keep the dunes unharmed. Two songs, "Shining Star Over Jockey's Ridge" and "A Natural High: The Ballad of Jockey's Ridge" were composed for the sole purpose of the campaign to protect the dunes, and a 15 minute documentary film, "Jockey's Ridge: Time and Eternity", was also made, featuring as narrator the late N. C. governor Luther H. Hodges.

The Baums and their organization have succeeded in raising money to purchase options on most of the Jockey's Ridge property, which was owned by 35 parties when the campaign began.

First of all, the group managed to persuade the 1975 General Assembly to appropriate $500,000 for the specific purpose of acquiring land to set aside for the state park. And as a result of efforts directed at Washington, D.C., the U.S. Department of the Interior approved Jockey's Ridge and nearby Nag's Head Woods for inclusion in the National Registry of Natural Landmarks.

With its $500,000 appropriation and about $750,000 in federal matching funds, the State of North Carolina focused its efforts on buying two of the largest tracts around the dunes. After the Council of State approved the asking prices, 257 acres of Jockey's Ridge and the surrounding area were purchased by the state.

One hundred twenty-five acres of privately owned, but optioned land remain to be purchased before Jockey's Ridge can be formally dedicated as a state park. The cost will be approximately $180,000, which must come from private sources. Planters National Bank, on behalf of the "People to Preserve Jockey's Ridge" organization, urges North Carolina citizens to donate at least one square foot of this remaining property to the state and its people by a donation of $5.00 or more. A parchment certificate with a picture of Jockey's Ridge will be awarded to each square-foot donor.

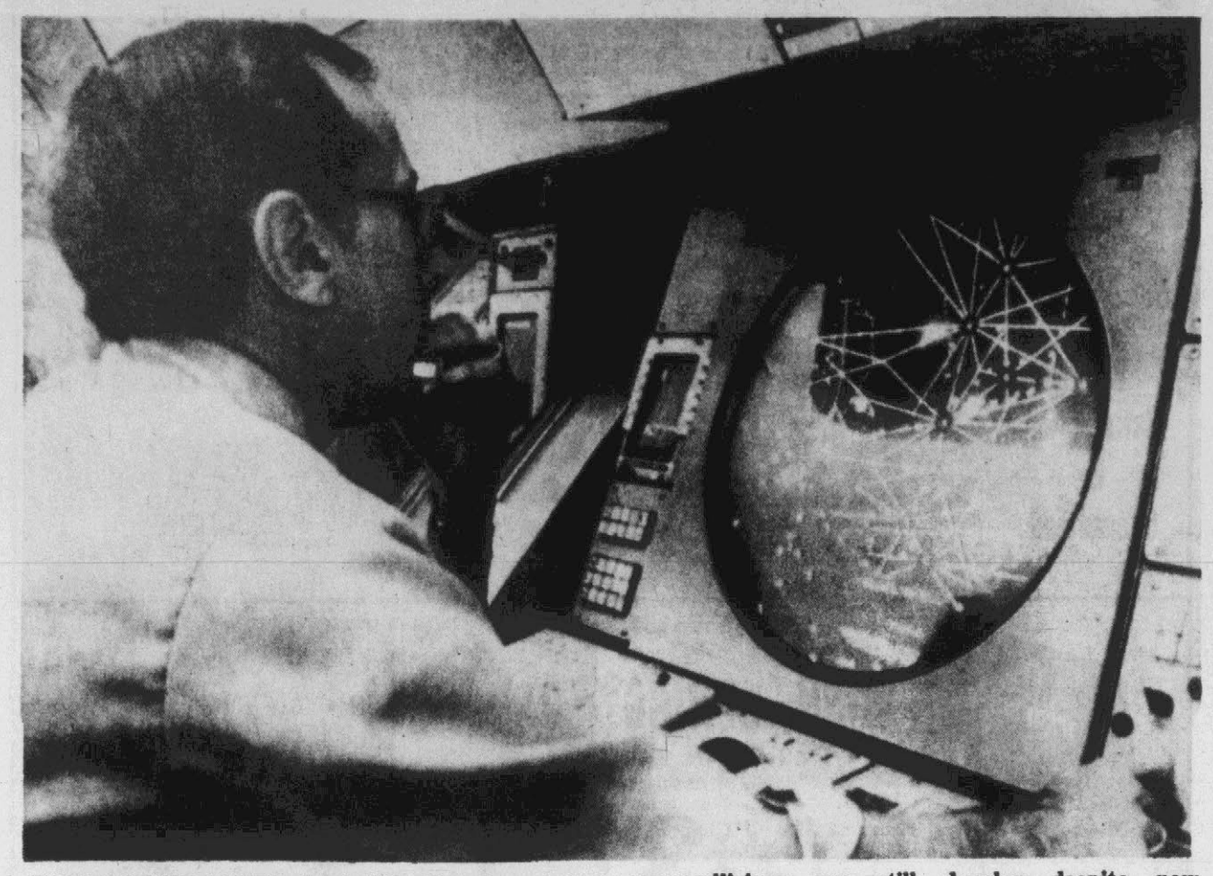
New Mid-Air Crash Safeguards Still Not Foolproof



AN FAA CONTROLLER checks his radarscope at the Air Route Traffic Control Center. Ernest Grob says near-collisions can still develop despite new safeguards. (UPI Photo)

By MICHAEL ROSENBAUM

AURORA, Ill. (UPI) — A Federal Aviation Administration official says near collisions still can develop between airliners despite new safeguards built into FAA air traffic control equipment.

Ernest Grob, operations officer at the FAA Air Route Traffic Control Center in Aurora, Ill., said the problem is not in the equipment, but usually arises due to a lack of coordination among controllers.

"Any time you say air traffic controllers don't make mistakes, you're just kidding somebody," Grob said in an interview.

FAA controllers direct terminal traffic from airport control towers. The controllers at the regional centers direct all planes flying at higher than 18,000 feet between airports, directing them along routes sometimes referred to as "highways in the sky."

Last Nov. 26, on one of the highways over Lake Michigan, an American Airlines DC-10 jumbo jet was ordered to drop 2,000 feet to avoid a collision with another airliner. In the emergency maneuver, 24 persons received minor injuries. The weeks that followed brought a rash of reports of near collisions.

The FAA reported 158 near collisions before Nov. 1. Only 21 took place within FAA controlled air and all were blamed on controller error.

Grob said the rash of reports sped up by almost two months the installation of a conflict alert system at Aurora, to signal controllers when airplanes get too close.

Each plane must be cushioned horizontally by five miles of air and by 1,000 feet of space above and below. The conflict alert system projects where planes will be in two minutes and, if a plane is headed into another's protected zone, a conflict alert notice flashes, with the numbers and altitudes of both planes.

The system was developed more than a year ago and scheduled for Feb. 1 operation at Aurora. It was tested out at the Kansas City, Mo., and Fort Worth, Tex., centers because, Grob says, the Aurora ARTCC was not the best place to work the bugs out of the system.

The Aurora ARTCC controls flights in a 109,000 square mile area, a relatively small region that includes O'Hare International Airport in Chicago. O'Hare is the world's busiest airport, though, and Aurora has the busiest of the FAA's 26 control centers.

Grob said an airliner taking off from O'Hare is directed along its first 30 miles of flight by controllers at O'Hare. At that point, the plane moves into territory covered by the Aurora ARTCC.

A New York bound plane will travel through several of the 43 zones in the Aurora region, each zone handled by a different team of controllers. The plane then travels through several zones controlled by the Cleveland ARTCC. Cleveland hands off the plane to the New York ARTCC and that control center gives up its jurisdiction to one of New York's airports.

When traffic is heavy, Grob said, a controller might order a pilot to change altitude, but forget to mention the change when the plane passes into another zone. The next controller might not notice the difference when checking the radar screen, creating a potential hazard.

"It generally happens because a number of small things are overlooked," Grob said.

Grob maintains that the equipment at the Aurora ARTCC contains almost all the safeguards controllers can use to avoid such incidents. Radar installations at seven sites feed plane locations, speeds and altitudes of FAA controlled planes to a computer system which projects identification numbers and altitudes alongside marker blips on radar screens.

The addition of the conflict alert completes the system, Grob said, but he added that the conflict alert is just a tool, which cannot replace controller's alertness.

"As long as people are involved in it you'll never eliminate all the problems," Grob said. But he says 21 errors is a good record when all the air traffic handled by the FAA is considered.

Grob says the controllers feed a maximum of 70 planes an hour to O'Hare, and take up another 70 departures. The flow of planes doesn't change much from day to day, but Grob says weather conditions can severely cut the capacity of an airport.

Airport control towers do not stack up planes in holding patterns. When O'Hare is working at capacity, the Aurora ARTCC places planes in racetrack shaped routes as far from Chicago as Dubuque, Iowa and Pullman, Mich.

During bad weather, the Cleveland ARTCC might also be stacking up planes bound for O'Hare, before transfering them to Aurora's holding patterns. In the worst periods, the airlines will cancel flights.

Grob says pressures are great at the Aurora center and the training of controllers is intense. A new controller takes 4½ years of training, classes and handling planes before becoming a $22,900 per year journeyman controller. Grob said about 75 of 100 controllers at Aurora flunk out or quit before that time.

Police Say Crimes In Suburbs Are Growing

By JAMES LAWRENCE

DENVER (UPI) — Suburban police chiefs blame a breakdown in family ties and society's indifference as the main reasons for an alarming increase in criminal activity in the suburbs.

"We raised a generation of people who don't care about anything or anyone," said Jerry Putnam, police chief of Aurora.

"Many young people of today have no respect for the rights or ownership of other people, and society has accepted it."

In recent years, suburban crime statistics in most metropolitan areas have reached levels once limited to the core city. Police chiefs there say their biggest problems are burglary and larceny, usually committed by 16 to 25 year olds. A small percentage of youths are causing the problems, said the officers.

"There is no shame in breaking the law anymore," said Putnam. "The crime rate isn't going to go down until the attitude of the general public is changed."

Lakewood, west of Denver, is an upper middle-class community and the state's third largest city. Despite its outward appearance of trimmed lawns, good schools and clean streets, crime has increased there in all categories but rape.

"We're finding the age bracket among criminal offenders is getting lower all the time," said Lakewood Police Chief Pierce Brooks. "We have cases involving kids in the low teens who are expert burglars, and the greater percentage of our thefts are committed by teenagers."

Authorities in Westminster, Littleton, Wheatridge and Golden reported similar problems. They said peer group pressure, an inadequate court system and personal gain contribute to the increase in crime. Littleton Police Chief Marion Hobson said his city of 35,000 had an 18 per cent increase in burglaries, mostly by professionals. He said most crimes were committed by residents. Youths between 16 and the early 20s are the primary offenders.

"In too many instances the parents aren't taking the time to rear their children properly because they're too busy with their jobs," Hobson said. "The kids end up with no sense of direction, values and respect for others."

The chiefs advise overhauling the court system. Most youthful offenders receive probation because of the system's inadequacies and large caseloads.

The Lakewood chief favors making parents of offenders accountable for their children's actions:

"If necessary, the whole family should be made to go out on weekends and work for the neighborhood or county to pick up trash and fix places their kids destroyed."

He also advocates a minimum sentence for all criminal acts, and banning cheap handguns.

"We have to start somewhere. There are some who don't deserve a second chance. I think the pendulum has swung too much to the liberal side."

The chiefs said crime statistics are rising because many offenders believe their chances of escaping arrest are better in the suburbs, which have smaller police forces. Most said their staffs were below average in manpower.

Meantime, Denver Police Chief Art Dill doesn't think offenders are leaving the core city for the suburbs.

Dill said Denver is low on the list of metropolitan areas reporting increases in serious crimes in 1975. The FBI said the city's crime rate rose five per cent, and 50 per cent of the illegal acts were committed by young people.

Kenneth Huck, chief law enforcement official in the middle income community of Westminster, said criminal activity there had leveled off, after a substantial increase during the past six years. Huck blamed the economic situation:

"A lot of kids were used to having more than what they have now. They have no sense of responsibility for their acts, and often the parents reenforce this feeling. The attitude of many parents is to get their children out of trouble without suffering any embarrassment themselves."

Ruby Rests After Fling

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Ruby Keeler tapdanced her way into the hearts of American audiences — first as a teen-ager in New York speakeasies, then on Broadway, and eventually in dozens of Hollywood musicals.

After a time in the speakeasies of the Prohibition Era, she made her broadway debut as a chorus girl in "The Rise of Rosy O'Reilly" in 1923. She became a Ziegfeld girl and was the toast of Broadway in the 1920s, appearing in such musicals as "The Sidewalks of New York," "Bye-Bye Bonnie," and "Show Girl."

She moved to Hollywood in 1931 to star in "42nd Street," a movie that set the nation to humming the title song and others, like "Shuffle Off to Buffalo."

That show launched a series of light musical comedies in the movies for Miss Keeler, including "Gold Diggers," "Footlight Parade," and "Go in Your Place."

Miss Keeler was married to Al Jolson for 11 years. They were divorced in 1939.

Ruby Keeler is now 65. Last year she had brain surgery in a Montana hospital for an aneurism. She is recuperating at her home in Newport Beach.

Miss Keeler is the widow of a Southern California real estate man, John Lowe. After their 1941 marriage she spent most of three decades in retirement, raising their four children and making occasional television appearances.

She came out of retirement in 1971 to star in a hit revival of the 1925 stage musical "No, No Nanette." She described it as her "last fling."

Looking To Small Farms

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — The "family farm" is the most effective for productivity in agriculture, says a Stanford Food Research Institute professor.

Boosting world food output depends more on what happens on millions of small farms than in a few spectacular, large-scale projects, according to Pan Yotopoulos.

"Three-quarters of the world's people are poor," says Yotopoulos. "Contrary to popular belief, there is substantial evidence that the productivity of land is generally higher on small holdings than on larger ones."

Diligent, highly motivated work by family members and the supervision of owner-managers may explain the advantage, he suggests.

On a global scale, agriculture development should try to capitalize on the high productivity of the peasant and the small farm.

Relatively simply technology, like hoes, may prove more beneficial than tractors or other advanced technology in the long run. This is particularly true in less developed countries where advanced technology may require relatively large amounts of capital, result in fewer farm jobs and hence add to the unemployment problems of urban areas.

Yotopoulos suggests that "paracommercial" marketing techniques be developed at the commune, village or regional level to help small farms. Village fairs can provide a "hothouse that nurtures new seedlings" until they are ready to compete in regular markets.

Efforts to quickly link small farms' produce to urban areas are "likely to be uneconomical and should be resisted," he adds.

"The people who profit from such schemes are invariably not the rural poor themselves but rather the sellers and producers of transportation and other services in the modern sector."

County School Lunch Menu

Lunchroom menus for the Pitt County schools during the coming week have been announced as follow:

Monday—roast beef, mashed potatoes with gravy, peas and carrots, rolls, cake square, milk;

Wednesday—fried chicken, mashed potatoes with gravy, seasoned green beans, rolls, cookie, milk;

Thursday—barbecue on bun, buttered potatoes, steamed cabbage, sliced peaches, milk;

Pennsylvania Exports Grew

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Pennsylvania's exports to foreign countries increased 42.5 per cent during 1974, according to State Commerce Secretary John J. O'Connor, jumping to $3.2 billion from the previous year's total of $2.2 billion

Almost 160,000 jobs in the state now depend upon international commerce, O'Connor said, compared with just 100,000 in 1971. O'Connor estimates another 15,000 or 20,000 jobs are the direct results of the approximately 100 foreign-owned firms operating manufacturing plants in the state.

Prices Lowered Consumption

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — Americans ate about 1.5 per cent less food in 1975 than they did the previous year, a Texas Agricultural Extension Service marketing specialist says.

Dr. Russell McDonald said most of the drop is in animal-related food products, and attributed the decline to higher prices for fed beef, pork and poultry during 1975.

Calls For Unions' International Role

By LASZLO K. DOMJAN

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — A longtime labor leader turned university professor believes global unions are needed to bargain with the growing number of multinational corporations.

"It's a matter of economic survival," Ernest Calloway said.

Calloway keeps track of interlocking directorates and big-money power plays as part of his duties as a professor of urban affairs at St. Louis University. He joined the university after retiring as the longtime research director for the Joint Council of Teamsters.

Without unions that cross national boundary lines, organized labor has no way to deal with a corporation that can quickly shift operations from the United States to Asian countries, Calloway said.

In such cases a company finds workers whose wages may be less than a tenth of those of American workers and who are willing to put in long hours and six-day weeks without extra reward.

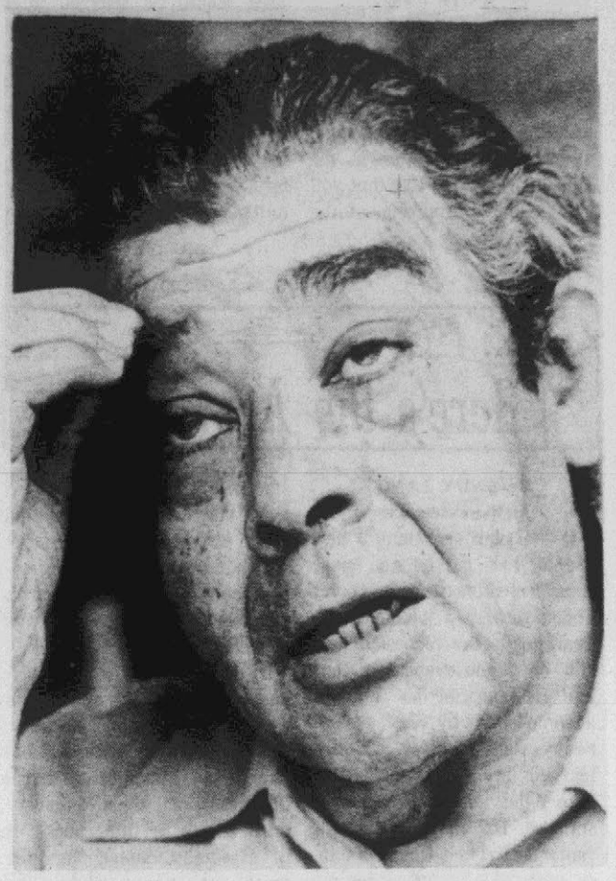
"It has been the historic pattern of American unions to follow the growth patterns of industry," Calloway said.

"If corporations are global, then we need global unions to bargain with them."

Calloway said the leadership of organized labor is aware of the problems posed by international corporations, and some of the labor hierarchy is getting around to the global union concept. However, he believes the unions are moving too slowly.

"Forty or fifty years ago we were importing labor from eastern Europe and we were outproducing everyone," he said.

"Now we are sending our money abroad to manufacture goods in areas where labor costs are low. We're losing jobs. Not only do we have to compete with the Japanese but with the Americans who are heavily invested in Japan."



ERNEST CALLOWAY believes global unions are needed to bargain with growing number of multinational corporations. (UPI Photo)

The automobile and shoe industries are prime examples of foreign competition which has cost American workers their jobs, he said.

"We are only five hours from Birmingham, England, and the American-owned automobile plants there. The world is shrinking and labor has to respond," Calloway said.

"In many instances our approach has been very reactionary. Proposals such as protective trade restrictions are all wrong. That's not going to work."

While rank and file union members appreciate these problems, Calloway believes they fear "the mistaken notion of an equalizing tendency" of contracts under an international union.

The fear, which Calloway said is unfounded, is that U.S. union members would subsidize the wage and benefit improvements achieved in contracts for foreign workers by giving up some of their benefits.

"You can develop an international framework for collective bargaining agreements, with regional addendums tacked on for a particular country," he said. "Wages and benefits would no doubt continue to stay ahead for American workers."

Calloway does not expect global unions to be formed in the immediate future. Many American unions now have "international" as part of their title, he said, but that simply means those unions have locals in Canada.

"Sooner or later we are going to have joint collective bargaining, where the automobile workers of England and Germany and the United States get together and say, 'Let's see how we can work in common on collective bargaining,'" he said.

Calloway's choices for a start on international unionism include the auto, steel and transportation industries, all of which have heavy involvement by multinational corporations.

"The logical place to start would be Mexico, because it's so close," Calloway said. "England and West Germany would be good, too, because they're so highly unionized already.

"Let's recognize the new economic facts of life. This is not a radical proposal. It's a logical extension from national to international unionism."

Halt Migration To Four Cities

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Alarmed by forecasts that Bogota could have 10 million inhabitants by the year 2,000, Medellin 8 million, Cali 6 million and Barranquilla 4 million, the Colombian Economic Development Ministry has embarked on an ambitious plan to halt migration to the cities.

The ministry plans to make intermediate cities of about 100,000 population like Girardot, Villavicencio and Buenaventura more attractive places to live by improving municipal services and employment opportunities.

Inflation Hiked Medical Costs

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — Inflation has caused a 73 per cent increase in medical costs since 1960, and most of the remainder came from Medicare and Medicaid, a Texas A&M University economist says.

Dr. Philip Gramm told the Texas Medical Association "fiscal irresponsibility on the part of the federal government is the reason for the great bulk of medical price increases.

"Balancing the budget and stopping the inflation would go a long way toward stabilizing medical care prices."

He said Medicare and Medicaid will only cause costs to rise and quality to fall.

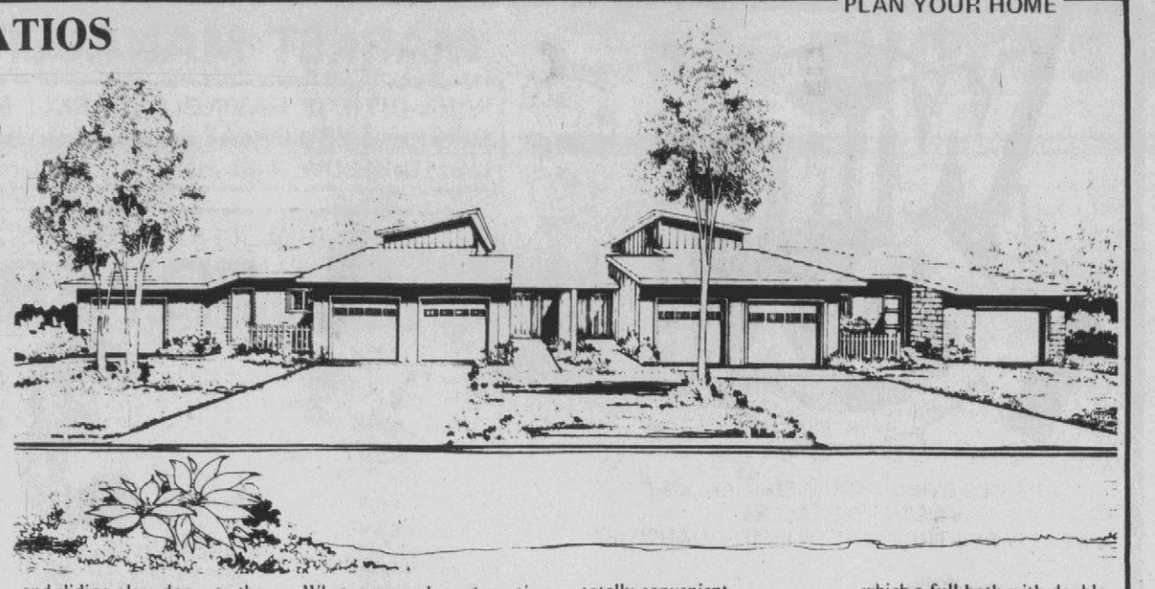
PRIVATE PATIOS BENEFIT HANDSOME FOURPLEX

By Jerry Bishop

Private, semi-enclosed patios, generously proportioned rooms, and cathedral ceilings contribute to the desirability of the Laclede, an original contemporary fourples. Two bedroom apartments and three bedroom units meld to achieve a harmony of design and a group of highly livable dwellings.



Brick siding and wooden fencing accent the up-to-date facade, and two half-story sections crown the exterior. Inside, the plan strives to make the rental units into homes. Besides the patio, each unit also enjoys a garage, two full baths, and an open dining room and kitchen.

In the two bedroom units, entry is into a closeted hallway with access to garage and living/dining room. Kitchen and living/dining room form an unrestricted area that houses a laundry nook and opens to a large patio. Two bedrooms and two baths make up the sleeping area, and the master bedroom is benefited by a private bath and sliding glass doors to the patio.

Three bedroom units display a different floor plan and an unusual one and one half story arrangement. Complete with coat closet, the entry merges with a 23-ft. living room edged in windows and sliding glass doors. What approaches an entire wall of glass joins patio to living room and produces a bright, airy effect seldom found in apartment units. Bordering the living room is an open dining room and U-shaped kitchen, and a laundry niche is tucked under the stairway, out of sight but totally convenient.

Furnished with sliding glass doors to the patio, the first floor master bedroom also sports double closets and a compartmented bath, which opens to the living room for efficiency. A stairway near the entry leads to two upper level bedrooms which sandwich a full bath with double sinks.

Cathedral ceilings add light and air to each of the four units, and adequate storage space is included. Two bedroom units merit a single garage, lined with storage area, and three bedroom units show double garages.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

The choice of a suitable wall material is the prime consideration when you decide to finish an attic, a basement, a garage, a carport or any room in the house. Everything else that will be put into the makeup of the area should be selected after the decision on the kind of walls you want.

What you eventually choose is likely to be a compromise between what your first preference was and what you can afford, a condition we are all familiar with in the purchase of a house, a car or even a suit or dress.

Technology has made the selection of a wall material somewhat more confusing than it was years ago. But the proliferation of available products has a definite plus side. You can now choose from among numerous materials that come somewhere near your budget no matter how low or high it is.

A well-stocked building center or lumberyard will have dozens of different wall materials on hand, and within each type there will be a number of varieties. You can be sure, too, that no matter how many kinds are on display or available for inspection, there are many more that can be obtained on order. Should you not find what you want or have seen in a home or business office, ask about it. Generally, but not always, such items are more expensive than those in stock.

Standard gypsum board is the big seller among the dry wall materials, chiefly because of its reasonable price. Many other types are available, among them those with an extra fire rating (standard boards have a good fire resistance), those with special kinds of backings for various purposes and those with different facings that do not require finishing. The standard gypsum board has a plain paper covering that usually is painted or covered with wallpaper or some other flexible material.

Wood paneling remains a favorite, having both a literal and figurative warmth. Boards usually are installed vertically, but can be put up horizontally to achieve some special effect. Plywood and hardboard sheets, as well as many other materials that come in 4' by 8' and other large sizes, are also classified roughly as paneling.

Plywood consists of layers of real wood bonded together; the facing can be any of the softwoods or hardwoods, so that when you buy a sheet of fir plywood or birch plywood, it is the facing which gives the product its name. Hardboard is made of wood chips reduced to wood fibers which, with lignin, their natural binder, are reunited under heat and pressure in multiple presses to form the panel.

Other wall materials include insulation wallboard, acoustical board, particle board, fiberboard, asbestos cement board, fiber-glass panels, plastic laminates, cork and such things as brick and stone veneer, plastic brick, ceramic tiles and mirrors.

So, when you decide to finish a room, shop around and see what's available. Even if you already have settled in your own mind what you're going to use, it's an interesting experience.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find the answers to 35 problems in Andy Lang's "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N. J. 07666.)

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I plan on having a new asphalt roof put on my house soon. I mentioned to the roofer about getting a textured appearance to the roof such as I saw on a house about a year ago. He said that this could be accomplished by the use of heavyweight shingles, which I learned are more expensive than the standard weight shingles. But the house I saw (unfortunately, it was in another state, so it isn't easy for me to see it again) seemed to have standard weight shingles. At least, they were the same kind as on neighboring houses, yet they had a more interesting appearance. Can you hazard a guess as to how this effect was achieved?

A. — I suspect that the roofing you saw was applied in what are called ribbon courses. This rugged roof texture is obtained by applying a triple thickness of shingles every third, fourth or fifth course. It is especially suited for the large roof areas of a long ranch. There are other ways to achieve textured effects, but this is the one used most often.

Q. — I intend to reupholster an old sofa which is still sound. I plan to use a plastic covering over foam rubber, but a neighbor showed me his sofa done that way years ago, and the covering is now quite stiff and brittle, so he advises against it. Do you see any reason why I can't go ahead with my plan?

A. — A plastic can be used over foam rubber provided the plastic has a fabric backing so the plastic itself does not come into direct contact with the foam rubber. This prevents any chemical or other reaction between the two materials.

Q. — Can I replace a section of a damaged cold water pipe that runs across our basement ceiling? I am very handy with tools but have never tackled this kind of project.

A. — Can you do it? Yes. Should you do it? That's another matter. It's not an easy job, but more important, local ordinances often forbid making a repair of that type unless you are a licensed plumber. Better check first.

While a professional plumber sometimes can make such a replacement with a single piece of pipe, many do it with two lengths of pipe. After the water is shut off, the damaged pipe is cut with a hacksaw from 4 to 6 inches from a joint. First the short piece is unscrewed, then the long one. One length of new pipe is screwed into one joint and a union added to one end. The other piece of new pipe then is screwed in. The two lengths are brought together with the union. Again, a warning: be sure first that the repair is not against the law and be certain in your own mind that you can handle such a project.

(For either of Andy Lang's helpful booklets, "Make Simple Plumbing Repairs" or "How To Use Foam Rubber," send 30 cents and a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N. Y. 11743. Questions can not be answered personally.)

New Mortar Said Safer

NEW EAGLE, Pa. (UPI) — A manufacturer here says he has developed a heat resistant material to repair mortar gaps in home fireplaces, the origin of many home fires.

The National Fire Protection Association quotes the Allied Block Chemical Co. as saying fireplace and related fires in homes were responsible for a loss of more than $19 million last year.

Many could have been prevented by a visual inspection to spot disintegrating mortar, the manufacturer said.

Mortar material used in fireplaces is not heat resistant. After use, it tends to crumble, leaving what the company says are dangerous gaps between bricks, in the backwall, the hearth and around the flue. Heat escaping through the gaps can easily ignite wood framework, the company said.

The firm claims its newly developed fire plug can withstand temperatures up to 3,000 degrees Fahrenheit. The product will harden even when subjected to heat, the manufacturer says, adding that the material is many times harder than original mortars and cannot be scraped away with a knife.

Renewed Interest In Using Steel

By LASZLO K. DOMJAN
United Press International

While the all-steel house promoted after World War II and again a decade ago never caught on, there is growing interest today in steel underpinnings for conventional-looking frame houses.

Steel structural supports, such as wall studs, floor joists and roof trusses, are being used in an increasing number of residential construction projects.

Other steel products commonly in use in homes include siding, doors, windows, kitchen cabinets, generally in combination with more traditional materials.

Steel manufacturers say their product has several advantages, among them durability, uniformity of quality and eaue of assembly.

Prices of steel building materials, they say, become competitive with wood when all factors are taken into account.

They cite possible labor savings because precut steel materials make for easier assembly; elimination of callbacks caused by such problems as warped or twisted wood; material reduction since steel joists can be spaced 24 inches apart, rather than the 16-inch spacing normally used for wood studs, and reduced maintenance for steel exterior materials.

A virtually all-steel house, built three years ago in Canada, was the subject of a report at a recent international conference of steel experts in St. Louis, sponsored by the University of Missouri-Rolla and the American Iron and Steel Institute.

Larry W. Ife, an engineer with the Steel Company of Canada, Ltd., builder of the experimental house, said the structure was built in a Hamilton, Ont., subdivision. An identical wood frame house was built a short distance away to be used for comparison.

After initial tests were run, the house was rented and has been occupied the last three years. Tests are performed periodically.

Ife said the tests concerned the main structural parts — wall studs, roof trusses and floor joists. The other steel materials on the house were installed mostly for promotional reasons.

Ife said the steel studs had no significant effect on the insulation qualities of the building. Concern about condensation and dusting on the studs proved unfounded, he said. The steel roof trusses proved to be durable, he added.

Vibration characteristics of the steel floor joists were of major concern because the plywood subflooring on steel joists has a somewhat metallic sound.

"Our tests show there would not be any noticeable difference of performance under normal transient vibrations such as caused by someone walking across the floor," Ife said.

Because use of so much steel in a house is unusual, he said, potential builders and buyers "look at steel hypercritically."

"Some of this is psychological," Ife said. "There's no real difference in the floors, but it sounds different. Once it is understood that steel is very easy to erect and has all its advantages in terms of durability and maintenance, it sells itself."

Steel building materials can be especially attractive in developing countries, the conference was told.

Alejandro L. de la Barra, a Mexican civil engineer, said prefabricated steel parts for housing with simple assembly instructions could save architect's fees as well as time in construction.

"There exists in Mexico a need for economical steel structures that can be easy to design, fabricate and erect," he said.

"Due to the small size and weight of the (steel building parts), these have been erected in inaccessible areas, with transportation done by very primitive means, such as mules."

Women Should Not Be Put Off In Desire To Build Something

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Although home building books are usually slanted toward men, women should not be put off in their desire to try a building project. Some building jobs may look complicated or they may sound complicated when advice is given verbally. But if a woman acquires a good book, even though it has been written perhaps for a male do-it-yourselfer, and she follows directions, she may be amazed at what she can do.

The two valuable assets in home building are a strong back and patience. If a woman has those she may need nothing more than a good book.

Now, Robert Scharff, well-known author of many do-it-yourself books, including a very useful one on wood finishing, has written "The Complete Book of Home Remodeling." Since he knows what he wants to say about a project, he conveys the message well and the clarity of his instructions can provide impetus.

As he points out, "there is not any job that a competent do-it-yourselfer cannot tackle." He also believes "many so-called amateur improvement projects are superior to professional ones because the amateur is doing the work on his own home."

How do you become competent? You practice working on little projects before you tackle big ones. It is just like anything else — employing dexterity in golf or tennis or whatever. Practice makes perfect.

The book irons out many of those confusing irregularities in lumberyard parlance by providing charts showing the various kinds of boards, common defects in them and board foot content. There is a breakdown by sizes of boards showing that an 8-foot 1 by 2 board is really a 1 by 1½ and so on. There are charts, too, on softwoods and hardwoods and the various kinds of nails required for jobs. Illustrations include common, casing, finishing nails. There are measurements of nails diagrammed in inches and a table giving the approximate number per pound.

Knowing about boards and nails will give you confidence. It is the terminology that often overwhelms women and lumber yards aren't always helpful.

Another good illustration for beginners is one that shows how to nail two pieces of wood together in various positions — toenailing, clinching, skewing, staggering, are all methods that may be required for a particular job.

Even if you never build a brick wall, you will like to know the names of the different patterns masons use in laying brick — Flemish, English, common and running bonds.

Building some shelves is a way to get acquainted with boards and the use of levels so that things will come out even.

There is an excellent chapter in the book on painting and wall covering.

The most valuable piece of information may be the basic post and beam construction which is not difficult but requires more elaboration than most books provide. In this connection he illustrates different methods of post footings — in tamped earth, with a concrete collar, post anchor and so on.

Gardening Questions

Q. We would like to build a patio at the back of our house. There is a large maple tree which would be in the center of this patio. What kind of surface material can we use to build the patio and yet not damage the maple tree? (J. V., Winston-Salem)

A. Any materials used should be porous enough to permit water and oxygen to reach the rather extensive root system of the tree. Use rock quarry screenings to create a level surface and place loose brick on top of the screenings. The brick may be placed as close together as possible. (Bill Stanton, extension forest resources specialist)

Q. Please settle an argument. What is the most popular canned vegetable? (L. G., Fayetteville)

A. Tomatoes. The average American eats 56 pounds a year. This compares to about six pounds of canned corn and snap beans and four pounds of peas. Americans also eat about eight pounds of pickles annually. (Douglas Sanders, extension horticulturist)

Q. Last year we planted a clump of pampas grass. It has been well cared for but has grown very little. How can we make it grow? (C. R., Ayden)

A. Your pampas grass needs time to become well established. Fertilize with a half cup of any complete fertilizer for necessary nutrients. A mulch around the plant will prevent its being heaved out of the ground and killed as a result of freezes. Probably, additional time is all that is needed for the plant to grow. (Henry J. Smith, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. I plan to grow some vegetable plants in a cold frame. Someone told me I should keep the top of the soil dry. Why? (W. T., Rose Hill)

A. To reduce the possibility of "damping-off," which causes young plants to decay at the soil line and topple over. Proper watering and ventilation can help you keep the top of the soil dry but good moisture below the soil surface. (W. W. Reid, extension horticulturist)

Nominating Process Will Begin Tomorrow In Iowa

EDITOR'S NOTE — The process of nominating the 1976 presidential candidates begins Monday in Iowa. And like the nominating ritual for both parties in all states, it will be wide open under political party reform rules that are stronger than ever.

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Political reformers have reshaped the presidential nominating system, and the changes could help Republican Ronald Reagan and might, ironically, send Democrats back to a smoke-filled room to bargain on their candidate.

The process begins Monday (Jan. 19) in Iowa where Democrats will hold caucuses in more than 2,500 precincts, the first step toward the eventual selection at a state convention of delegates to the national convention.

Under the reform rules adopted by both major parties the caucus-convention procedure is wide open, with everyone able to participate and any candidate who can inspire a following having a shot at winning delegates.

But most of the delegates, about 75 per cent of them, will be chosen or committed in primary elections in 30 states. There were 23 primaries in 1972.

The primaries and the conventions have some important common features under the new rules. First, they make it easier for a dark horse to win convention delegates, especially in the case of the Democrats who have adopted a proportional representation rule and have eliminated winner-take-all primaries.

Secondly, they favor the candidate with charisma and the ability to excite activist supporters.

People who troop through the snow to vote in primaries early in the year or stay through all-night caucuses are generally the political activists who support ideological candidates of the right or left.

The great mass of middle ground voters tend to prefer centrist candidates in November but frequently they don't bother to vote in the primaries.

This year none of the Democrats seems to be attracting the kind of devoted throngs of young supporters Eugene McCarthy and George McGovern drew.

But on the Republican side, Ronald Reagan, former California governor and movie star, appears to have the charisma and ideological commitment to enlist the activists.

The very reforms that have opened the nominating process and made delegate distribution agonizingly fair have made it less likely that any Democratic candidate will go to the national convention in New York next July with a commanding lead.

However, surviving candidates should have blocs of faithful delegates whose votes could be traded. So the final horse-trading and nominating of a presidential candidate may be done in the smoke-filled rooms the reforms were supposed to end.

The caucuses, conventions and primaries of both parties are open to any interested citizen who wants to take part — although both Democrats and Republicans are trying to limit participation to party members.

Secret meetings have been banned. The sessions at which delegates to the various meetings are chosen must be open and advertised in advance.

In addition, old rules which allowed politicos to control a meeting by voting masses of proxies have been banned by both parties. Democrats permit a form of proxy voting, but only a person who actually shows up at a meeting may leave a proxy, if he departs before the meeting ends.

So the candidate who can get the most fans to the early caucuses will get the biggest share of a state's national convention delegates.

On the eve of the first caucus, Reagan appears to be the only candidate of either party possibly capable of packing caucuses with his supporters. He is clearly identified as a strong conservative with a committed constituency to draw from.

Unless President Ford can stir his supporters enough to tramp through the snow and sit through all-night caucuses, all the patronage and prestige of the White House may not be enough to offset a youth-oriented Reagan assault.

In addition to what reformers have done to the caucuses, the new rules have encouraged some states to switch from conventions to primary elections because they are less vulnerable to challenge and simpler to supervise. Primaries also tend to favor candidates with clearly established ideological appeal.

The main reason is the Democrats' new rule on proportional representation, forbidding winner-take-all primaries. The biggest casualty is the California primary, which traditionally has come late in the season and has awarded the nation's largest bloc of delegates to the statewide winner.

In 1972 McGovern beat Hubert Humphrey in California, took all the delegates, and clinched the Democratic nomination. In 1964 Barry Goldwater took California over Nelson Rockefeller and sewed up the Republican nomination.

Now the winner in each congressional district in California gets that district's delegates instead of the statewide winner getting them all. Consequently, the state's delegation is likely to be divided among several candidates.

The possibility of a brokered convention is enhanced by another new rule adopted by the Democrats for 1976 — the right of a candidate to approve or disapprove of any delegate selected at the state level as pledged to him.

This means the delegate is more likely to be personally committed to the candidate to whom he is publicly pledged. And that means the candidate will be better able to control his own delegates and wheel and deal with their votes.

Organized labor, which found its power embarrassingly trimmed by the reforms in 1972, could be a far more significant force at a brokered 1976 convention.

This time labor leaders are preparing to run in their states pledged to the candidate most likely to carry the state. This way most of them are likely to get to the convention, unlike 1972 when many bet on the wrong horse or tried in vain to get elected as uncommitted delegates.

In the event of a deadlocked, multi-ballot convention, the labor delegates would pose a sizeable and cohesive bloc once their original commitments had expired after the first few ballots.

Koreans Prefer Hot Floor Sleep

By JAMES KIM

SEOUL, Korea (UPI) — Although the country has many western-style homes, most South Koreans prefer to sleep on a hard floor heated by coal briquettes.

The winter season here extends over a five-month period lasting until March, and Koreans are exposed to temperatures as low as 20 degrees below zero.

To withstand the cold, along with frequent heavy snowfalls, Koreans sleep on the "ondol" floor heated by "yontan" coal.

Ondol is a cement or clay floor covered by varnished paper with several hot air passages underneath leading from a furnace where coal briquettes are burned. If the system is properly designed, the heat turns the entire floor into a sort of radiator, which also heats the room air.

There are numerous types of ondol paper, many with colorful designs, and the more affluent use steel pipes heated by an oil burner instead of the traditional air passages.

On ondol you don't bother to use a bed. You simply spread a mattress on the hot floor, cover yourself with a blanket and go to sleep.

When South Korea began refining oil in 1964, the government, aware of the limited coal deposits here, encouraged the use of oil as the major fuel, and many households converted to oil-heating systems even for ondol.

When the energy crisis struck two years ago, the government reverted to a "coal primary, oil secondary" fuel policy. Rising prices made coal briquettes far cheaper than kerosene or diesel fuel.

A yontan is a round cake of coal hardened in a cast containing 19 holes. It is 5.5 inches high, with a diameter of six inches, and weighs nearly eight pounds. Experts say each yontan yields 4,600 calories of heat.

Last winter, authorities had to impose a yontan rationing system to meet rising demand caused by hoarding by dealers and consumers. No restrictions are anticipated this year, however.

A piece of yontan costs 7.2 cents, and three pieces are normally required to heat an average-size room for eight hours.

According to official statistics, 13.5 million pieces were used daily last year — nearly half of them in Seoul. Authorities estimate this year's average will be about 14.3 million.

For the winter season, 10 million tons of coal, or two-thirds of South Korea's annual coal production, is needed. They predict an adequate supply for this winter.

The yontan-ondol system can have deadly side effects. A faulty heating system can produce carbon dioxide leakage, and each year several hundred persons die from gas poisoning, officials say.

Art, Antique Trade Is Up

NEW YORK (AP) — Sotheby Park Bernet's announcement that trading through its auctions in America has returned to 1973 record levels is regarded as good news for New York's international art and antiques trade. The firm's regulated public auctions in New York are regarded as the barometer of the market.

Much of the success of the season, which opened in early September, was attributed by Parke Bernet president John Marion to noticeably increased American buying and bidding against international competition.

Net sales of $32,674,039 of property were recorded September through December. The results represent a 28 per cent increase over the same period last year and are 3 per cent behind the same period for the preceding year, which ushered in the record 1973-74 season.

Jan de Gaetani Concert Set

JAN DE GAETANI . . . mezzo-soprano, will appear in concert January 26 at 8 p.m. in Mendenhall Student Center. Tickets are priced at $4.00 each.

Mezzo-soprano Jan De Gaetani will be appearing in the Mendenhall Student Center Theatre on January 26, at 8:00 p.m. under the sponsorship of the Student Union Artists Series Committee. Miss De Gaetani's command of contemporary masterworks and her virtuosity in the Baroque, classical and romantic repertoire are making her one of America's most active singers.

In a single season, 1973-74, she appeared five times with the New York Philharmonic, twice in Carnegie Hall, with the American Symphony Orchestra and the Contemporary Chamber Ensemble, as well as in recitals and chamber concerts throughout the country in the major university concert series. She also appeared extensively in Europe, performing in England, France, Switzerland, Finland, Scotland, Holland, and Spain. Her activities in the coming season will take her to Europe again as well as to Japan with the BBC Orchestra conducted by Pierre Boulez. Each year she premieres several works written especially for her by leading American and Euorpean composers.

Miss De Gaetani is a native of Ohio and a graduate of the Juilliard School. She has been Artist-in-Residence at the University of Wisconsin and a faculty member of the Juilliard School. Queen's Marines, Black Watch To Give Raleigh Performance

MEN OF THE ROYAL MARINES . . . and the Black Watch in current uniforms and in authentic reproductions of the uniforms worn by the same regiments in America during the War of Independence.

In their first joint appearance in the United States since 1776, the massed bands, pipes, drums, and dancers of Her Majesty's Royal Marines and The Black Watch are making a coast to coast tour of the United States which includes their engagement here in Raleigh at Reynolds Coliseum under the auspices of the Raleigh Jaycees and the Wake County Bicentennial Commission on February 5 and 7 at 8:00 each evening.

Tickets to this royal salute to 200 years of American Independence are priced at $3.00 for students and $4.00 for adults and are available at the Reynolds Coliseum Box Office, all Kerr Drug Stores, and from the Wake County Bicentennial Commission.

This year as the Queen of England visits the U. S. and the British Government loans a rare copy of their much cherished document of freedom, the Magna Carta, they have chosen the Royal Marines and The Black Watch to mount a production in celebration of the many years of friendship between Great Britain and the United States.

In the spectacle the Royal Marines, in their blue uniforms topped by white helmets and The Black Watch, in their traditional kilts and towering headdresses, perform with the pomp and ceremony that the British alone can create, playing the martial music that has stirred the courage of their men in battle for centuries. And in a tribute to the United States on the 200th anniversary of its independence, they play many American marches and tunes, and, in part of the program, perform in the same uniforms they wore during the War of Independence.

In addition there is an display of ancient sword dancing, precision march formations, and the sound of the pipes of The Black Watch.

ECU Percussion Concert Wednesday

Contemporary percussion music will be featured in a concert by the ECU Percussion Ensemble to be given Wednesday night at 8:15 p.m. in the Recital Hall of the A. J. Fletcher Music Center.

Selections to be performed are Michael Udow's The African Welcome Piece; Michael Colgrass' Three Brothers; Dance by Ronald Lo Presti; Traces by Randall Shinn and Fred Brownold's Manhattan Rag.

In addition to the compositions listed above, Harold Jones, director of the ensemble, will present several solo works by modern American and Japanese composers.

The ECU Percussion Ensemble has performed in the eastern United States at music meetings, at community fine arts programs and in a number of college contemporary music festivals.

There is no admission charge to Wednesday's concert and the public is invited to attend.

Superman's Girl Next On ECU Lecture Circuit

Noel Neill will be appearing at East Carolina University on Thursday, at 8:00 p.m. in the Mendenhall Student Center Theatre. She will be describing her experiences and the highlights of Superman - on and off the screen - with a question and answer period. The program will also include an audience participation period as well as action packed Superman films.

Noel Neill wanted to be a newspaper woman ever since she was old enough to hold a pencil in her hand. Today, Noel is probably the most famous newspaper gal in the world. She's Lois Lane, Star Reporter for the Metropolis Daily Planet. As every television fan knows, she has been out-scooping Clark (Superman) Kent for front page news.

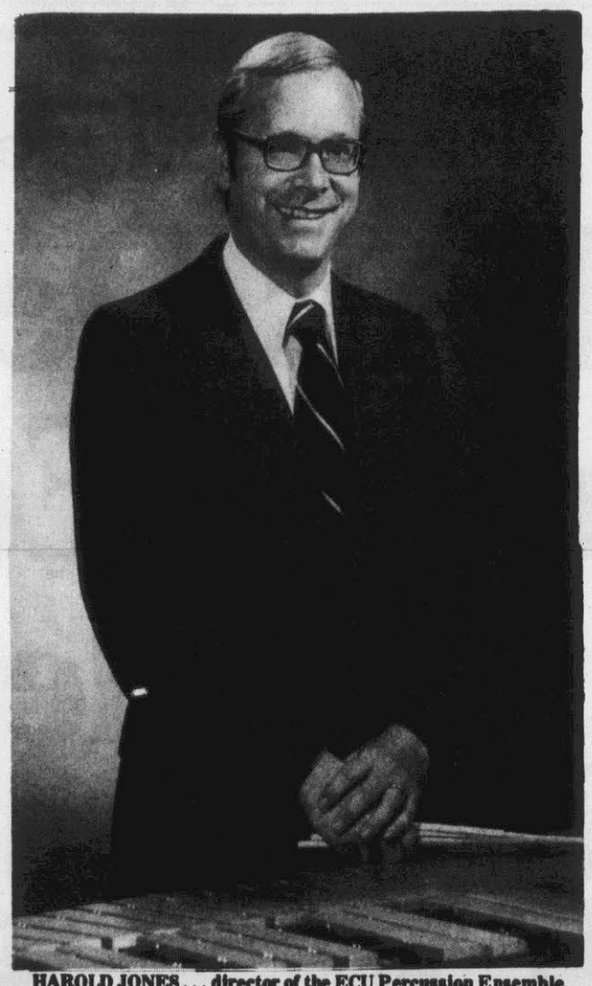
Noel got her newspaper training from her father, David Neill, News Editor of the Minneapolis Star-Tribune. She earned her first money by writing articles for Women's Wear Daily, a trade publication.

Her newspaper career was short lived. One summer she was spotted by Bing Crosby at NBC and he signed her to sing at the Del Mar Turf Club.

After the season at Del Mar, Noel was signed to a long-term contract by Paramount Studios and made her professional screen debut in the movie "Henry Aldrich for President" with Jimmy Lydon. Other Paramount releases she has appeared in include "Submarine Command," "Greatest Show on Earth," "Here Come the Waves," "Music Man," and "The Big Clock." She was loaned-out to do the "High School Hero" series which was followed by the original Superman serial for theatres.

Tickets for the public are $2.00 each.

The first science magazine was the American Journal of Science and Art, printed in New York City and issued in July 1818.



HAROLD JONES . . . director of the ECU Percussion Ensemble, which will give a free concert at the Fletcher Recital Hall at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday.

Woodwind Recital

At 8:15 p.m. Thursday, the East Carolina University Faculty Woodwind Quintet will present a concert of woodwind music in the Recital Hall of the A. J. Fletcher Music Center.

For this concert, the quintet will perform J. S. Bach's Fugue in G Minor and Concerto No. 1 (after Vivaldi); Two Miniatures by Benjamin Lees; Peter Mueller's Quintet No. 1 in E. Flat; and Jean Absil's Danses Bulgares.

There is no admission charge and the public is invited to attend.

Barbara Plummer Recital

Barbara Plummer of Raeford, a student of Peter Takacs, will present her senior piano recital at the Recital Hall of the A. J. Fletcher Music Center at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

For her senior program, she has listed Mozart's 12 variations on Ah, vous dirais-je, Maman; several Schumann pieces — Waldszenen, Opus 82, Eintritt Jager auf der Lauer, Einsame Blumen, Verrufene Stelle, Fruendlich Landschaft, etc; and selections from Villa-Lobos' Prole Do Bebe.

There is no admission charge and the public is invited to attend.

Hospitality House

Today's "Hospitality House" is devoted to an Alaskan theme, with a film and guests focusing for the 45 minute period on America's 49th state on Kay Currie's weekly show over WITN-TV, Channel 7, from noon until 12:45 p.m.

Kay is showing a film on the Trans-Alaskan pipeline which was produced by the Aleysha Pipe Line Service Company. The film tells the story of the 800 mile long construction task, the largest ever undertaken by private industry — one that costs an estimated $5 million daily.

Other facets of today's show include the appearance of George and Gisela Ives of New Bern. Ives is president of the Ives Oil Company of New Bern. He and his wife were early visitors to the pipeline scene. Also on the show is a white Samoyed snow dog, furnished by the East Carolina kennel of Greenville.

Last Year's Rock And Jazz

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER
United Press International

The best rock album of the year undoubtedly was Led Zeppelin's "Physical Graffiti" which became an instant gold record. It included several numbers which Led Zeppelin featured in its American tour.

The year was very kind to Neil Sedaka, who found new popularity as both artist and composer. It is quite possible that Sedaka's hit song, "Love Will Keep Us Together," which made the husband-wife team of the Captain and Tennile an overnight sensation, will be chosen as the record of the year. It was the best-selling single of 1975, finishing ahead of Glen Campbell's "Rhinestone Cowboy" and the Elton John Band's "Philadelphia Freedom." Olivia Newton-John's "Please, Mr. Please," finished lower in the ratings but was a fine song.

And "Rhinestone Cowboy" should be an easy winner as country record of the year, while album honors in this field probably will go to John Denver's "Back Home Again."

Bruce Springsteen came on late in the year as a superstar with "Born To Run," and the Grammy award electors may name him the male artist of the year, although Freddy Fender and Roger Whittaker also made big splashes. Gloria Gaynor was a leading candidate for new female artist of the year, along with Jessi Colter and Emmy Lou Harris.

Broadway produced some musicals which made excellent original cast recordings. In my opinion the best Broadway show LP was "The Wizard of Iz," which offered several good songs, notably "Ease On Down the Road."

And of all movie sound tracks, my favorite was "Funny Lady."

A Vigorous Show Influenced By Organic Forms

"The Greenville Twelve" is the name of a show that opened last Sunday at the Greenville Art Center and is to remain on view during the month of January.

This is a strong collective exhibit, revealing some fine talent put to good use. Most of the group are young. All are teacher-artists in the Greenville City School system art program.

If any one thing stands out prominently as a unifying factor in this show, it's the obvious role the influence of organic forms plays in many of the works on view.

The vigor, the hidden energy inherent in nature have in many instances been successfully translated to canvas, paper, sculpture, ceramics and other media employed in this multi-media show.

This results in an exhibit where texture and surfaces are as important as color and design in the concept of individual pieces. Raised, billowy smooth surfaces with a definite feminine connotation; and irregular projecting surfaces, rough and masculine, constitute a dual variation on the ways in which an artists can be inspired by nature's forms.

The Greenville Twelve exhibit gains much from the excellent mounting it has received — and like all shows at the Art Center, it suffers somewhat from the lack of proper lighting.

Teacher-artists in the city school system exhibiting in this January show are: Steve Donald, Marsha Eakes, Norma Gray, Valerie Pfeifer, Bob Karl, Susan Mason, Cynthia McAllister, Cathy Jessen, Billy Stinson, Edith Summey, La Veta Weatherington and Ron Williams.

With this excellent show to kick off the Bicentennial Year, to be followed by a one-man show in Feburary by Ed Reep, there's no doubt that the Greenville Art Center is off to a flying start for 1976.

North Carolina Atlas, A Fine Research Tool

North Carolina Atlas — Portrait Of A Changing Southern State. Edited by James W. Clay, Douglas M. Orr, Jr., Alfred W. Stuart. Chapel Hill, N.C. The University of North Carolina Press. 1975. Large format, 331 pps, illustrated. $17.95.

"A geological controversy concerning the Coastal Plain province relates to the number, nature, and age of a series of coastal terraces that rise in a step-like manner from east to west."

The terraces, with soft-rolling names — Coharie, Sunderland, Wicolico, Talbot-Penholoway and Pamlico, step down progressively from the most westward region of the Coastal Plain to the ocean bordered marshes.

Another geological controversy centers on the so-called "Carolina Bays," shallow, elliptical depressions appearing by the thousands most prominently in the southern area of the coastal plains. What quirk of nature developed these elongated sand rimmed, peat filled depressions all in a northwest-southeast direction?

Intriguing information on North Carolina's physical characteristics are but one part of the rich mine of information contained in North Carolina Atlas.

Facts on just everything you may need to know about North Carolina, past and present, will likely by found in concise form in the pages of this book.

In tightly edited text, dozens of contributors, knowledgeable persons in a wide range of fields, have provided up-to-date facts and figures on the state's people, physical resources, economy, and services.

A score of cartographers, working with chief cartographer James W. Clay and staff cartographer Jefferson L. Simpson have produced over 500 cartographic figures that are integrated with the text to produce a well coordinated means of providing information which, while often highly technical, is always still easy to grasp.

A word must be said about the visual appeal of the charts, maps, and tables. The colors are varied, bright and clear. The method of presentation in each instance deals lucidly with essential elements of information.

North Carolina Atlas is divided into seven parts comprising 17 divisions covering basic subjects such as history, urbanization, vegetation and soil resources, climate and air quality, education, agriculture, manufacturing, outdoor recreation, cultural arts, etc.

A glance at the index reveals individual items as diverse as curing country hams; military draft rejection rates; coastal marshes; hydrologic cycle; Indians and Irish potatoes; phosphate and pyrophyllite; skiing and slavery; temperature inversions and theater; tomatoes and tornadoes.

An added dimension of beauty is given this superbly produced book by the inclusion of a few excellent black and white photographs representative of all sections of North Carolina.

In the foreward, Governor James E. Holshouser, Jr. notes: (North Carolina Atlas) . . . is "a unique contribution to the understanding of the problems and opportunities that face the people of North Carolina. Such an awareness is a logical prelude to planning the state's orderly development."

North Carolina Atlas is perhaps of utmost value to planners in all areas of state, county and municipal governments and agencies. Here, in one place, is basic information on a complete spectrum of soil conditions, economics, educational levels and other data needed for current plans and future projections.

It is equally valuable, however, as one of the finest research tools available to students, writers, journalists or anyone with a need for comprehensive facts and figures about North Carolina.

Book News

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By MARGARET CLARK

Perhaps we need to be reminded that deceit and undercover operations have not always been at the service of low causes, such as the subversion of friendly governments, the assassination of chiefs of states with whom we were not at war, and the opening of Senators' mail. There was a time when dirty tricks had their place—in Bodyguard of Lies, Anthony Cave Brown tells the true story of the clandestine war of intricate deceptions that hid the secrets of D-Day from Hitler and sealed the Allied victory. The title comes from a Churchill epigram: "In war-time truth is so precious that she should always be attended by a bodyguard of lies." The book describes the many ways the Allies deceived and underminded Hitler, spied on and employed intelligence and counterintelligence against the Nazis in laying the groundwork for the crucial invasion of Europe on D-Day. The reader meets a large and fascinating cast of heroes and rogues and is swept through dozens of plot and counter-plot, stealth and treachery, lies and deceits. He learns the full story behind Churchill's agonizing decision not to warn the city of Coventry that it was about to be destroyed; he follows the deadly cat-and-mouse games between Allied agents in France and the Gestapo, the near fiasco of Montgomery's "double," who could not be kept sober, and the heroic but doomed efforts of the anti-Hitler German underground to eliminate the Fuehrer. These and many more explosive stories, of code-breakers and deceivers, of plots and ruses make this secret history of D-Day a most important work on World War II.

Helen Thomas writes in Dateline: White House of the human side of the Presidency as she has seen it from the inside, during the fifteen years she has covered the White House for UPI. From Kennedy to Johnson to Nixon to Ford, she has gone everywhere with the first families—Russia and China with Nixon, to Helsinki with Ford, down the Snake River rapids on a rubber raft with Lady Bird, to the hospital for the birth of a Kennedy baby. We see Kennedy, after John-John's birth responding to the question "Do you want your son to grow up to be President?" We see L.B.J. spearing a piece of bacon from a guest's plate . . . proclaiming "I am the king." We listen to Martha Mitchell's dramatic late night phone calls and we hear a confidante's report that Betty Ford played an important role in her husband's decision to pardon Nixon. Dateline: White House presents refreshingly candid and understanding portraits of the complex human beings—sometimes triumphant, sometimes tragic—who inhabit the White House.

Multimedia Celebration For Film About Reep

Music, watercolors and a film are all part of a multimedia celebration to take place at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday night at Mendenhall Student Union.

Artist Edward Reep, filmmakers Bob Rasch and Henry Stindt, and composer Otto Henry, all faculty members at East Carolina University, will be honored at the Wednesday reception which will feature the premiere showing of The Content of Watercolor, a 22 minute color film on Reep's watercolor work. In addition, there will also be an exhibit of a dozen watercolors.

The Content of Watercolor has been more than a year in the making. Following it's premiere here, it will later receive local and national distribution.

Rasch and Stindt, both faculty members of the Communications Arts Department at the ECU School of Art, have produced a film that involves the explorations, investigations, actions, reactions and harmonies between Reep, the artist and the way he expresses himself through the watercolor medium.

Music for the film was created by Dr. Otto Henry, ECU School of Music faculty member and a composer known most widely for his electronic compositions. Wade Hobgood, a graduate student in the ECU Art Department did the musical engineer work for the film.

The public is invited to attend this multi-media event. There is no admission charge.

Tattoo Image

Dave Yurkew has organized the First World Convention of Tattoo Artists & Fans to be held here Jan. 24-25. He said more than 100 artists, including 23 from foreign countries, have registered.

"The main thing I would like to see the convention do is get rid of the drunken sailor image," he said. "I don't tattoo drunks. I boot them out."

He said 40 to 45 per cent of his clients are women.

Twice Weekly Classes For Local Theater

Community theater classes are now scheduled to be held twice weekly. Stuart Aronson, director of the community project, has announced that because of the interest shown in the classes, a decision was made to double the amount of time devoted to them.

Classes will be held on Tuesday night beginning at 7 p.m. and on Thursday nights at 7:30 p.m. at the Methodist Student Center on East Fifth Street.

There is no charge and all persons 18 or over with an interest in any phase of theater is invited to attend.

Three Films Scheduled

Three is again the number of films to be shown during the coming week in the continuing series of children's films in the city's libraries.

The main film is The Dragon's Tears, the story of a dragon who lives in a mountain cave and terrifies the village below, except for one little boy who invites the dragon to his birthday party. The other films are Changes, Changes and The Mole As A Painter.

Show times are: Carver Library, 4 p.m. Tuesday; Sheppard Library, 7:30 p.m. Thursday; and East Branch Library, 4 p.m. Friday.

Carolina Today

Tax time is evident in the line-up of guest to make appearances on "Carolina Today" during the coming week, as two spots will be devoted to that annual January event.

Individuals and groups scheduled to appear on the early morning program over WNCT-TV, Channel 9 are:

—Monday, January 19—7:10 a.m. Hal Smith, president of the Greenville Jaycees, will have a special announcement to make. 7:30 a.m., Eugene Stone, a CPA from Rocky Mount, will discuss taxes.

—Tuesday, January 20 — Incomplete.

—Wednesday, January 21 — 7:30 a.m. Representatives from the N.C. Women's Political Caucus Committee will be the day's guests.

—Thursday, January 22 — 7:30 a.m., The Redeemers, a singing church group, will present a program of music.

—Friday, January 23 — 7:30 a.m., Hilton Boyd, of the Greenville Internal Revenue office, will be the second guest of the week to focus on taxes.

Poetry Forum Meets Tuesday

The second meeting of the East Carolina Poetry Forum will take place Tuesday night at 8 p.m. in Room 22 of the Mendenhall Student Union Center on campus.

All poets and persons interested in poetry are invited to attend. There is no admission charge.

Literary Awards Contest Details

The Hackney Literary Awards of the 1976 Birmingham Festival of Arts offer $2,000 in prizes for poetry and short stories. Winning manuscripts will be considered for publication by FOLIO, international literary magazine. Deadline is February 10 (postmark).

Residents of the USA and students in American colleges and universities are eligible to submit one manuscript in either, or both, categories. Short stories, limited to 5,000 words or less, poems, maximum of 50 lines.

Poetry may be short, related poems submitted under one title, total lines not to exceed maximum. Only original, unpublished manuscripts, which have not won prizes in other contests, may be entered. Winners are to be announced March 20.

Manuscripts should be typed, double-spaced. Cover sheet should include title, name and address of author and category entered. Author's name should not appear in the body of the manuscript. Enclose SASE for return of scripts and listing of prize winners.

Cecil Hackney, founder of the Hackney Corporation of Birmingham, has sponsored the contest since 1969 and expanded the event in 1973 to include writers from the entire nation.

The Birmingham Festival of Arts' twenty-sixth annual celebration will salute Greece and America's Bicentennial, March 19-28.

Free ECU Classes

The School of Music at East Carolina University is announcing that it still has openings in its Piano Program for Children. Minimum age is seven.

Class sessions are held twice weekly, meeting on the same day after school. In addition to piano instruction, students receive musicianship and theory training.

For additional information, parents may telephone E. Gregory Nagode at the ECU School of Music (758-6851) or at home (756-3879).

Gordleys In Joint Show

A collection of paintings and drawings by Marilyn and Tran Gordley, both members of the East Carolina University School of Art faculty, are now on display at Craven Community College New Bern.

Tran Gordley is associate dean of the ECU School of Art, and also chairs ECU's Department of Painting. Marilyn Gordley is a member of the ECU painting faculty.

Snake Handlers Appealing To Supreme Court

REV. LISTON PACK raises a rattlesnake while preaching in 1973. (UPI Photo)

By CHARLOTTE MOULTON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The little mountain church near Newport, Tenn., was filled on Aug. 4, 1973, when pastor Liston Pack lifted a brown wooden box from beneath the rostrum and took out a diamond back rattlesnake about five feet long.

Pack held it briefly and returned it to the box. Alfred Ball, a leader of the congregation, removed the snake a little later and handled it. A couple of others also held it. None was bitten.

The service was different from many others like it because an agent of the Tennessee Bureau of Identification was seated in the congregation. He was there because Pack's brother and another member of the congregation had died a few months earlier from drinking strychnine.

Snake handling and poison swallowing are central to the faith of the Holiness Church of God in Jesus Name, a small sect with churches scattered throughout the hills of southern Appalachia. Several states, including North Carolina, Alabama, Virginia and Tennessee, have outlawed the practice.

Nothing much has been done about enforcement, however, although the Tennessee Supreme Court in 1948 upheld the constitutionality of a state law which forbids displaying a dangerous snake "in such manner as to endanger the life or health of any person."

But after the poisoning incident at Newport, Tennessee sought an end to poison swallowing and snake handling in a civil suit. Pack and Alfred Ball were fined and sentenced to jail for 30 and 20 days on a finding that they had violated a court order in the state's favor.

The local court barred the handling of snakes but permitted the drinking of poison if not passed to any other person. The Tennessee Supreme Court eventually prohibited both practices on the ground they were a nuisance.

Recognizing it was removing "the theological heart of the Holiness Church," the Tennessee court nevertheless held that the state's interest in the welfare of its citizens permitted the ban.

Citing the Constitution's guarantee of freedom of religion, the lawyers for Pack and Ball are appealing to the U.S. Supreme Court. None of the court's previous cases have dealt with a state court's decision that "an individual's chosen method of worship constituted a public nuisance" and could be banned permanently, they said.

Their method of worship is based on Mark 16: 17-18, which reads:

"And these signs shall follow them that believe; in my name shall they cast out devils; and shall speak with new tongues;

"They shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover."

The state supreme court's lengthy opinion cited Ball's testimony explaining the practices:

"We don't take up serpents, handle fire or drink strychnine to test the faith of the people at all. That's not the point of it. These are signs that God said would follow the believers. They're not to test the faith of the person doing it. It's simply and only to confirm the Word of God. That's all God intended the signs for, and that's the only reason we do them."

The opinion noted that both the Old and New Testaments contain language which seems to conflict with the sect's view.

For instance, Ecclesiastes says: "Surely the serpent will bite without enchantment, and the babbler is no better."

And Paul in his first letter to the Corinthians warns, "Neither let us tempt Christ, as some of them also tempted, and were destroyed of serpents."

The Holiness Church of God in Jesus Name was founded in Tennessee in 1909 by George Went Hensley, who in a dramatic experience atop White Oak Mountain confronted and seized a rattlesnake which he took back to the valley and admonished the people to "take up or be doomed to eternal hell."

Find New Gold, Copper Deposits

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — New gold and copper deposits have been discovered in Catamarca Province in northwest Argentina, Economy Minister Antonio Cafiero announced.

Cafiero said the government is investing the equivalent of $393,000 in developing the La Alumbrera field. He said estimates show about one million tons of copper and a small amount of gold is present in the area.

The planet closest to the Earth is Venus.

On The Young Side

By JANET GANTT

Activities began to increase as students settled down after the Christmas vacation. A number of Rose High clubs held weekly meetings to organize their plans for the second semester.

The Key Club and Keywanettes were invited by the University City Kiwanis Club to be guests at their Monday luncheon meetings. The club members are able to experience the proceedings of a large civic organization first hand.

Governor's School

The Governor's School nominees for the school were announced this week. Congratulations are extended to Timothy Caspar, Charles Hayek, Bobby Kim and Monica Lee in academics, to Becky Clemens, Kelly Graham, Beth McConnell and Clara Patricia Pleasant in art.

To Cathy Braxton, James Foreman, Jackie Cox and Kent Phillips in choral music, and to Pam Bath, NamJi Kim, Jim Kittrell, Serena Matney, Jennifer O'Neal and David Sowell in instrumental music.

The Junior Rotarian for the month of February is Dave Middleton. Dave serves as junior class president and is a member of the Key Club. The Junior Rotarian allows student leaders to participate in the true proceedings of a major organization.

The American Legion is sponsoring a speech contest, offering scholarship awards. Participants will present a prepared and an extemporaneous speech on a topic concerning the U.S. Constitution. Mrs. Wende Allen is the coordinator.

New Club

A new club has been organized at Rose High. The Minority Affairs Club was passed by the Student Government Association last week.

Members elected officers at the meeting. Kelly Graham will serve as president, Anne Middleton, vice president, Anita Whichard, secretary, and Shirley Best, treasurer.

The society honors those who have succeeded in scholarship, character, leadership, and service.

ECU Coordinating 'Decisions' Series

"Great Decisions — 1976," a program of discussions of current issues, will be sponsored by East Carolina University's Division of Continuing Education again this year.

The program is offered by the Foreign Policy Association, a private, non-partisan organization which works to develop through education an informed and articulate American public opinion on major issues in world affairs

The basic requirement for involvement in the program is that at least five interested persons agree to meet once a week for eight weeks and discuss the topics covered in this year's "Great Decisions" booklet.

Topics include the Arab-Israeli conflict and prospects of peace in the Middle East, U. S. commitments in the Mediterranean, the new relationship between the U. S. and Latin American nations, the post-Vietnam role of the U. S. in Asia, the "American Dream" among nations, the part played by the U.S.A. in the current world economy, the threat to democracy posed by poverty in India, and changing U. S. foreign policy.

Further information about "Great Decisions" is available from Richard Morin of the ECU Division of Continuing Education, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C. 27834 or telephone 758-6143-6148.

Buying Cheaper Colombian Gas

IPIALES, Colombia (UPI) — Motorists from Ecuador, an oil exporter and a member of the OPEC cartel, are forming long lines at gasoline stations in this border town of Colombia, which is barely self-sufficient in its petroleum needs.

Regular gasoline has recently risen in price in Colombia from 11 to 13.5 cents a gallon, but that's still three times as cheap as in Ecuador.

Ipiales merchants are grumbling that the Ecuadorean motorists clog the town, park their cars on the sidewalks, and why should the Colombian government subsidize fuel only to have the Ecuadoreans, who have oil to spare, cart it away in their tanks?

Opening Four New Museums

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Colcultura, the Colombian State Culture Institute, will open four new museums in 1976 in the town of Guaduas and Floresta in the central Andes mountains, Sibundoy in the south and Cucuta on the Venezuelan border.

The museums will exhibit the work of local artisans.

Ford's Shots Topple Duke

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — Phil Ford, Walter Davis and Mitch Kupchak teamed up for 63 points to lead seventh-ranked North Carolina to an 89-87 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over Duke Saturday.

North Carolina, retaining firm control of the ACC standings with a 4-0 mark, improved its overall record to 12-1 with the win. The Blue Devils dropped to 1-2 in the league and went to 7-6 overall.

Ford scored 22 points, Davis had 21, Kupchak and 20 and Tommy LaGarde contributed 18 points in the Tar Heel victory.

Duke, leading 41-37 at the half and by as many as eight during the final period, was led by forward Mark Crow who scored 26 points, 16 of them in the final period. Tate Armstrong added 19 points for the Blue Devils while Willie Hodge had 14 and Dave O'Connell had 10.

Neither team was able to manage more than a four-point edge in the first half, and North Carolina, in the final period, trailed by eight at 73-65 with 8:18 on the clock.

Led by Ford and Davis, the Tar Heels outscored Duke 12-4 over a three mintue period and to even the score at 77-77. Duke grabbed a four-point edge but North Carolina tied it at 83-83 with 1:45 to go and went to its four corners offense.

Duke outshot North Carolina for the game, getting 54.1 per cent of their shots from the floor to 50 per cent for North Carolina and they beat the Tar Heels on the boards 43-35.

WILLIAMSBURG Va.—John Kratzer, Jack Arbogast and John Lowenhaupt each hit a pair of free throws in the final 40 seconds last night to preserve a 65-58 victory by William & Mary over East Carolina University.

The Pirates had put on a fine rally from as far down as 20 points in the second half to cut the lead to three points but time and the free throws finally became their worst enemy.

For the Pirates, it was their third straight Southern Conference loss, and perhaps the most bitter, since they did play better than they had in their previous two outings. Nevertheless, it was their play in the first half, and in the early minutes of the second that really did them in.

Turnovers, steals and their board work during that period put them down 20 points, 49-29 with 13:15 left in the game. At that point, East Carolina had scored just two points in the second half, and had gone scoreless for the first 4½ minutes.

But then, the Pirates began to play some defense, cut their turnovers, and find the range. They ran off eight straight points, and that turned the tide in their favor. They couldn't come back quickly enough, however. Following a three-point play by Al Edwards that cut the lead to 59-56, the Indians forced the Pirates to come out and foul to have a chance to get the ball. That ended the Buc comeback hopes.

Both teams played without regulars. William & Mary's Ron Satterthwaite watched from the bench, where he is recovering from an ankle injury. Buzzy Braman, with an ankle injury, and Ty Edwards, with pnuemonia, stayed home in Greenville for the Pirates.

The Pirates finished up with a 48.9 per centage from the floor and 60.0 from the line. William & Mary hit 51.9 per cent, while completing 71.4 per cent of their free throws.

Thanks to their play in the last 13 minutes, the Bucs held a 32-25 rebounding edge. Larry Hunt led the way with 12, while Edwards had 10.

East Carolina committed 27 turnovers to William & Mary's 24. Most of the Bucs came prior to their comeback.

"If we had played the first half like we played the second," Coach Dave Patton said, "we would have easily won. But I'm proud of the way they played (in the final 13 minutes). They gave a good effort and they hustled. They could have laid down and quit, but they didn't.

"I think I saw the turning point tonight. We finally got the guys to relax and play like they can."

The Bucs grabbed the initial lead in the game, as Reggie Lee and Lou Crosby hit early in the game for a 4-0 edge. But baskets by Mike Enoch and Arbogast tied it up, 4-4. The Pirates again went out as Billy Dineen and Edwards hit for an 8-4 edge.

The Indians then took control, using their pressure defense to rattle the Pirates and force turnover after turnover. Enoch and Jim McDonough hit to tie it up, and two free throws by McDonough put the Indians ahead for the first time, 10-8 with 12:59 left in the half.

Enoch then hit a jumper for a 12-8 lead before the Bucs could hit again. From a 14-12 edge, the Indians ran off eight more, three baskets by Lowenhaupt and one by Arbogast for a 22-12 lead.

East Carolina cut it back to five several times, but could come no closer, and finally trailed, 35-27 at the half.

The Indians pushed through 10 straight points at the start of the second half, while the Bucs were still trying to find the range. That ran their lead out to 45-27. Even after Hunt finally scored on a tap, baskets by Kratzer and Dennis Vail ran it out to 49-29 with 13:15 left.

East Carolina called time at that point, and the mood of the game began to change. The Bucs, with nothing now to lose, came back, running off eight straight points before McDonough hit a free throw to snap it. That made it 50-37. Baskets by Crosby and Hunt trimmed the lead to nine, but its looked like that might be as close as the Bucs would come.

William & Mary raised the lead to 12 again, 55-43, but a three-point play play by Hunt with 4:04 left trimmed it to 55-46. Lowenhaupt got two free throws, but Edwards and Crosby both scored, and Hunt added a free throw ith 1:50 to go, cutting it to 57-51.

Arbogast drove the lane for a basket, but Hunt came back with two free throws with 1:13 to play. Edwards then got a three-point play with 43 seconds to go, and the Bucs trailed only 59-56.

They couldn't get the ball back enough, however, and the Indians connected on six straight free throws to run out the clock.

Lowenhaupt led the Indians with 18 points, 14 of them in the first half. Enoch had 12 and Arbogast hit 11.

Hunt led the Bucs with 15, while Crosby had 14 and Edwards added 10.

The loss dropped the Pirates to 6-8 overall and 4-4 in Southern Conference play. William & Mary is 8-6 and 3-0 in the league.

The Pirates return home on Wednesday to play host to second place Richmond, seeking to start a turnaround for the rest of the season.

Buc Grapplers Pound Indians

The Pirates won nine of the ten weight classes; including three by falls. William & Mary's lone victor was Jim Hicks, who took the 134-pound level on a decision.

The victory boosted the Pirate dual meet record to 3-2 overall, while William & Mary fell to 4-4.

Ron Whitcomb, 177, captured his 20th victory of the year, against one loss during the evening, while Mike Radford, 190, boosted his record to 18-2. Paul Thorp at 158, ran his record to 17-5-1 on the season.

The Bucs return to action next Saturday night, traveling to Richmond, Va., to face the University of Richmond and Campbell College in a tri-meet.

Squad Restrictions Are Dropped By NCAA

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The nation's major football and basketball schools scored a pair of victories Saturday when the National Collegiate Athletic Association convention threw out the controversial limitations on squad size in all sports and took the first step toward creation of a "super division" for big-time powers.

The long-awaited proposal for a national football championship playoff was withdrawn pending possible NCAA reorganization at its next convention a year from now.

Elimination of squad size limitations adopted at last summer's special NCAA session on methods of economy was a victory for Alabama football coach Bear Bryant and Indiana basketball coach Bobby Knight, who had lost legal battles in an attempt to overturn the limits.

Saturday's convention action wiped out the football limitation of 45 players on the travel squad and 60 at home and the basketball restrictions of 10 players on the road and 13 at home.

"This just proves the infinite lack of wisdom displayed by those people last summer," Knight said from Champaign, Ill., where his No. 1-ranked Hoosiers played Illinois, their last game under the 10-man limit.

Bryant was unavailable for comment, but Sam Bailey, Alabama's assistant athletic director, said:

"The pleasing thing to us was that the membership voted to put squad limits back where we felt they should have been all the time—through conference legislation, not the NCAA."

Since the new unlimited squad sizes in all sports except hockey and soccer, whose intercollegiate federations have instituted their own limits, went into effect at the end of the NCAA convention late Saturday afternoon, it meant that teams could suit up as many players as they desired for Saturday night contests.

However, most major conferences said they probably would go back to their own league limitations which were in effect before last summer's NCAA action.

The action to rescind squad size limitations first passed Divisions II and III but was rejected twice by Division I, the major schools. However, they then turned around and approved proposals which erased the limits on home and road squads separately.

The delegates adopted a resolution proposed by the powerful, policy-making NCAA Council that at least made reorganization from three to four divisions a possibility at next year's convention.

In the resolution, the council directed the permanent NCAA Classification Committee "to review the advisability of creating Divisions I and IA in the sport of football" and to "review each member institution's present divisional status" in football.

Many of the 79 schools arbitrarily put in the lesser Division IA had objected to their classification and were unaware that they could appeal for the higher "Super" Division I, which tentatively includes 81 schools.

"This starts the operation to have reorganization, although nothing can be done until next year's convention," said Wade Walker, director of athletics at the University of Oklahoma.

Oklahoma belongs to the Big Eight Conference, one of the main backers of reorganization.

"I think reorganization can pass next year, but I don't think it'll be easy," said Big Eight Commissioner Chuck Neinas. "This action certainly indicates there is interest in reorganization, but it also underscores the need for Division I interests to adopt a strong, unified position."

The council decided to withdraw the championship playoff plan because many of the 134 schools currently in Division I will be in the lesser Division IA if reorganization occurs next January. The council felt it would not be fair to have members voting on a matter which might not concern them if or when it goes into effect.

In other action, the delegates:

—Upheld last summer's legislation that put limits on the size of all coaching staffs, meaning major football schools can have no more than one head coach, eight full-time assistants and two part-timers after Aug. 1.

—Refused to abolish last summer's legislation limiting recruiters to three off-campus visits with a prospect and also refused to limit head football and basketball coaches to on-campus recruiting.

—Eliminated the seasonal restrictions on recruiting and permits contacts during the summer before a prospect's senior year in high school.

—Boosted from 75 to 95 the number of prospects who may visit each school in football and from 12 to 18 in basketball while eliminating all restrictions in other sports.

—Turned down another shot at a national letter of intent which would have forced a prospect to attend the school he signed with or lose two year's eligibility.

Coles Sparks Clemson Upset

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (UPI) — Freshman Greg Coles connected for 18 points, 10 of them in the final six minutes, to give Clemson a 86-81 upset win over fifth-ranked Wake Forest in an Atlantic Coast Conference game Saturday night.

The Tigers improved their ACC mark to 2-1 and their overall record to 12-3 with the win. Wake Forest, which in two weeks knocked off three national powers to enter the rankings, fell to a dismal 1-3 in the ACC and slipped to 11-3 overall.

Clemson center Wayne "Tree" Rollins had 16 points in the Tiger win as did forward Stan Rome. Forward Colon Abraham added 11 in the victory.

Wake Forest guard Skip Brown led all scorers with 25 points for the night and guard Jerry Schellenberg added 17. Larry Harrison had 13 points and Rod Griffin contributed 12 for the Deacons who this year have beat Maryland, North Carolina and North Carolina State to vault into the rankings.

Wake Forest had a 46-45 edge at the half, and ran its lead to 70-64 at the six minute mark. However, the team went into a 3-2 zone that Clemson began to pick apart.

With 2:13 left to play, Coles, a guard, hit two field goals, both from 15 feet out, to give the Tigers a 78-76 edge. They ran their margin to 83-76 before the Deacons were able to get in another score.

Mounties In Upset

BOONE, N. C. (AP) — Appalachian State came from behind in the closing minutes for a 71-67 Southern Conference basketball victory over VMI Saturday night as freshman Tony Salvo sealed the triumph with two closing free throws.

Furman Nips 'Dogs

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP)— Ron Smith and Ray Miller led Furman in a last minute rally to defeat The Citadel 68-67 in a Southern Conference basketball game Saturday night.

Smith hit for 14 points on seven out of 10 field goal attempts while Miller, a forward, collected 19 points and 15 rebounds.

With 7:30 remaining in the game, The Citadel took the largest lead of the night on a Del French layup to make it 63-56. Then Furman outscored the Citadel 12-4 in the remaining minutes to take the one point victory.

Furman took the lead with 3:33 left in the game on a John Cottingham layup. But The Citadel's Rodney McKeever hit a 20-foot jump shot 20 seconds later to put the Bulldogs ahead 67-66.

Ray Miller then hit two free throws to put the Paladins out in front for the final time.

The victory was Furman's first Southern Conference triumph of the season following four consecutive losses. It also was Coach Joe Williams' 100th career victory at Furman.

The Citadel is now 4-10 overall with 1-5 conference record. Furman is 4-9 and 1-4 in the conference.

Richmond Eases Past Davidson

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—Larry Slappy contributed eight points to a 16-2 run early in the second half Saturday that gave Richmond a 20-point lead and the Spiders barely hung on for a 72-69 Southern Conference basketball victory over Davidson's Wildcats.

The Spiders, winning their sixth straight game to move to 6-1 in the conference and 8-5 over-all, were up by 36-30 at intermission and 38-32 when the five-minute streak began in the regionally televised encounter.

Richmond ran off 12 straight points during the spree that lifted its margin to 54-34 with 14:51 left, but the Wildcats then battled back behind John Gerdy and Eppa Rixey.

The Wildcats, now 1-3 in the league and 4-10 over-all, closed the gap to 63-61 with 6:03 left, but Steve McCurdy scored on a turnaround layup and John Campbell and Slappy hit on jumpers to restore the Richmond lead to eight points.

The closest Davidson got after that was the final score as the Spiders went to a four-guard, four-corner offense.

The Wildcats were led by Gerdy, who had 16 points on seven of nine from the floor, and Rixey, who scored 14.

Each team shot 50 per cent from the floor and Davidson had a 34-32 edge off the boards. The big difference was in turnovers, the Wildcats losing the ball 30 times to 20 for the Spiders.

Fountain To Speak

The Greenville Sports Club's featured speaker for Tuesday, is Reggie Fountain, internationally famous power boat driver of Tarboro. The buffet luncheon begins at 12:00 at the Ramada Inn, with the program beginning at 12:30 P.M.

At this meeting, applications for charter membership in the Greenville Sports Club will be available.

Pirate Matmen Among Honored

Four members of the nationally ranked East Carolina University wrestling team have been selected to the National Mat News Mid-Season All-American Team. The announcement came Friday from Dennis Diehl, editor of National Mat News, which is one of the top wrestling publications in the nation.

Mike Radford, a senior from Morehead City, N.C. was selected as the number five man in the nation in the 190 pound weight class. Radford, the two-time defending Southern Conference champion, has won tournament titles in the Neptune, Monarch and N.C. Invitational tourneys this year and owns a fine 17-2 overall record.

Marriott, a senior from Herkimer, N.Y. is the three-time defending Southern Conference champion in the 142 weight class. He won the Monarch Open this year and boasts a 11-2 overall record.

Mueller, a transfer from the University of Wisconsin at Stevens Point, was named the Outstanding Wrestler in the N.C. Invitational Tournament this year and is 14-2 for the season.

Whitcomb, a native of East Rochester, N.Y. owns tournament championships in the Neptune, Monarch, and N.C. Collegiate tourneys and has a 19-1 overall mark.

Steelers, Cowboys Clash In Super Bowl

MIAMI (UPI) — The survivors of a gang war against the products of the computer age—that's the best way to describe the opponents for today's Super Bowl X showdown at the Orange Bowl for the National Football League championship.

The defending champion Pittsburgh Steelers, a rock-em, sock-em roughhouse throwback to pro football's old blood and guts days, take on the Dallas Cowboys, an innovative group whose every move seems to be regulated by its master computer.

At stake is a $15,000 per man jackpot for the winners as opposed to a $7,500 losers' share. A total purse of $1.35 million will be distributed and the winner will receive the Vince Lombardi Trophy.

Kickoff is 2 p.m. EST and the game will be carried by CBS to an estimated viewing audience of 75 million.

The Steelers won the American Conference Central Division title with a 12-2 record and defeated Baltimore and Oakland in the playoffs to win the AFC crown and qualify for their Super Bowl title defense.

Dallas earned a playoff slot by finishing as the wild card (best runnerup) in the National Conference with a 10-4 record and then qualified for its third Super Bowl appearance with stunning upsets of Minnesota and Los Angeles, both division champions.

The strain began to show on both clubs late in the week and both were expected to be at an emotional high for today's confrontation.

The Steelers, many of whom were piqued at being cooped up away from the night life of Miami Beach, had some violent practices in mid-week and Coach Chuck Noll had to step in and taper down workouts.

"This is the biggest game in pro football," Landry said, "and the tension has been building and building. The players are starting to feel the pressure. I'm just glad we have 14 players who have been here before. Our 12 rookies seem to be in another world. They don't know what to worry about and what not to worry about. But they look at the old guys and they don't look worried, then the young guys think they don't have anything to worry about."

"We had sigs as early as last Wednesday that our players were getting restless, very ornery," Noll said. "They wanted to get on with it. I didn't want them ready to play in the middle of the week. I want them to be very ornery Sunday."

Both clubs will be near 100 per cent healthy. Three Steeler players were question marks early in the week and only defensive end Harvey Martin of Dallas had any injury to speak of, a muscle pull.

"Joe Greene will play," said Noll of his all pro defensive tackle. "He's not 100 per cent — he still doesn't have full movement in his left arm—but he's as close to healthy as he has been all season. He'll split the job with Steve Furness, who did a great job filling in for Joe through the second half of the season. We think the heat will be a factor and Joe's conditioning is not what it should be since he's missed so much time."

The weather bureau predicted partly cloudy skies, with temperatures expected to reach 75-77 degrees at game time.

"Loren Toews (linebacker) has come back well from his knee injury and will see some playing time," Noll continued. "And Lynn Swann has worked out in pads all week and has shown no ill effects from the concussion he received last week. He'll definitely start at wide receiver."

Landry said Martin had not worked following the title victory over Los Angeles, but that the defensive end seemed to regain his mobility in the warm Florida weather.

The game matches two of the finest defenses in pro football, each achieving its goal by different means. The Steelers swarm and attack on defense while the Cowboys defense is predicated on spacing and alignment and creating confusion.

Offensively, the Steelers rely on fullback Franco Harris, the most valuable player in last year's 16-6 Super Bowl victory over Minnesota, to carry their attack. Harris was second only to O.J. Simpson in the NFL rushing statistics this season and has an exceptional track

Desperation Shot Wins For Rocky Mount

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

ROCKY MOUNT—Lady Luck flirts with you, keeps you on a string, and just when all the chips are on the table, she turns her back and walks away.

That must have been the feeling that drowned the Rose High School Rampants Friday night when Jimmy Roberson's off-balance desperation heave from 30 feet away at the horn swished through the nets to give Rocky Mount a 73-71 overtime victory.

Rose had put on a fine battle, storming back from as far down as 13 points to take the lead late in regulation time, but they could not hit when they needed it. Rocky Mount, too, had the stutters with their shots, blowing chance after chance to win it outright.

Rose, after a brief lead in the overtime, tied it one last time on Curtis Keys' jumper, 71-71 with 24 seconds left. The Rampants got the ball back seconds later, but picked the wrong shot to put up. It bounced off the rim, and Rocky Mount pulled it down, calling for a time out.

When the ball went back in play, the Rampant defense did a good job of keeping the ball away from the Gryphons' top shooters, and with a second left, Roberson found himself with the ball. He threw it desperately, and through it went.

For once, the Rampants played a better game with the ball, having only 15 turnovers in the contest. They played a good tight defense, moving from zones to man and pressure defenses, forcing 22 Gryphon turnovers.

But poor shooting hurt them. They hit just 29 of 72 shots, 40.3 per cent. Rocky Mount hit 33 of 67, for 49.3 per cent. And both teams had horrible nights at the line. The Gryphons hit only seven of 21, 33.3 per cent, while Rose made 13 of 26, 50 per cent.

Perhaps, a cold first half by the Rampants was the real key to the defeat. The Rampants got the first basket on a jumper by William Barnes, but Rocky Mount blitzed them for the next three minutes, running off 11 straight points.

Jeff Battle started it off, tieing it up and then hit again for a 4-2 lead. Dennis Coit canned two in a row, and Charles Williams added another two-pointer. Battle finished the sting off with a free throw for an 11-2 margin before Rose finally hit again.

After that, two more baskets, by Ken Bulluck and Jeff Joyner ran the margin out to 15-4. Rose cut it back, however, to 15-8 before the end of the period.

Rocky Mount let them no closer, and pulled further out. A three-point play by Coit with 4:51 left in the half ran the lead out to 29-16, the biggest margin of the night.

Rose got three straight by Curtis Keys, Derek Brewington and Mike Brewington to pull back within seven. They came no closer, however, and went to intermission down 37-28.

Rose began to press in the third period and slowly whittled away at the lead. They hit the first two baskets of the second half to cut it back to 37-32. Rocky Mount went back out by 11, however, 47-36, before another six-point spurt by the Rampants late in the period cut it back to five, Rose then got a basket from Greg Ebron, and another by Mike Brewington, plus a free throw by him to trim the lead to 52-50 with 19 seconds left. Ricky Mercer hit a jumper with five seconds to go, however, running it back out to 54-50.

The Gryphons added two more at the start of the final period to up their lead to 58-50, but Rose again fought back. A three-point play by Joe Godette and a jumper by Jeff Barber cut the lead back to 60-57.

After three Rocky Mount free throws, baskets by Keys and Derek Brewington tied it up at 63-63 with 2:16 to go. Keys then hit two shots from the line with 1:52 showing for a 65-63 Rose lead.

Ronald Kearney drove in to tie ti up, but Brewington hit again with 1:05 to go to put Rose up. Battle then hit from underneath with 53 seconds to go, tieing it again, 67-67.

Both teams had chances after that, but missed.

In the overtime, Rose struck first on a free throw by Brewington. Rocky Mount then grabbed the lead on a shot by Joyner, 69-68. Mike Brewington tied it again, 69-69 with a free throw with 1:20 left, but missed on his chance to put Rose back out.

Coit hit a jumper with 40 seconds showing, and Keys knotted it again with 24 to go. Both had the chance again after that, but it was Roberson's final shot that decided it.

Battle led Rocky Mount with 17, while Bulluck had 16, Williams had 14, and Coit had 12.

Keys had 18 for Rose, while both of the Brewingtons hit 13 each.

In the junior varsity game, Rocky Mount rolled to an 86-67 win. Rocky Mount ripped out to a 25-14 lead, but Rose rallied to cut it to 41-33 at the half. They closed the gap further, but then fell back by 64-54 going into the final frame. Rocky Mount rolled up a 22-13 margin in that period.

Terry McKnight led Rocky Mount with 33 points, while Freddie Woods had 16 and Ben Pope had 11. Anthony Bryant had 21 to lead Rose, while Greg Guthrie had 14 and Loronzo Owens hit 12.

Rose, now 0-1 in Division I and 2-7 overall, hosts New Bern on Friday.

Pirates Dunk Furman Tankers

The win was the 33rd straight for the Pirates over Southern Conference competition.

Mann broke the record in the 500-yard freestyle with a time of 4:49.11. Teammate Tomas Palmgren held the old mark of 4:51.00.

"I wish we could use him at every position," Coach Ray Scharf said of Mann. "I wanted it bad," Mann added. "It was the best time of my life in that event."

Diver Lund Sox won the one-meter diving and placed second in the three-meter event to show improvement.

The Pirates' win streak in the league goes back to the 1961-62 season when the team nipped William & Mary, 48-47.

The Bucs return to the water this afternoon at 1 p.m., hosting a strong Maryland team. The Bucs will be looking for their first win over a Terrapin swim team.

Maltbie Clings To Stroke Lead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Roger Maltbie, scrambling desperately in the growing pressure of the third round, clung to a one stroke lead Saturday while gusty winds and a strange lack of motivation cost Johnny Miller any hope of another victory in the $200,000 Phoenix Open Golf Tournament.

Maltbie, a two-tournament winner as the 1975 Rookie of the Year, managed a hard-won 70, one under par on the 6,726 yard Phoenix Country Club course. He had a 54-hole total of 200, 13 under par.

Maltbie had to score a two-putt birdie four on the final hole to hold off the surprising threat of Bob Gilder, a rookie from nearby Arizona State.

Gilder fashioned a solid, five-under-par 66 in the bright, warm sunshine and was just one shot back at 201 going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $40,000 first prize.

Lee Trevino was another stroke back at 202 after a 68.

"I really don't care," Miller shrugged. "It had to happen sometime. I'm almost relieved it's over.

"I just wasn't very motivated out there. I wasn't gritting my teeth and going at it. I wanted to at least stay close, but now I'm not even in contention. Even a round in the very low 60s tomorrow wouldn't do it."

The par three holes were his downfall. He played them four over par, including a double bogey five on the eighth. Miller missed the green to the left, chipped on and three-putted from eight feet.

Jim Colbert shot a 70 and was in fourth place at 203. Jim Simons had a 66 and was next at 204.

Lanny Wadkins, a three-time runner-up in this event; Ben Crenshaw and Hale Irwin were at 205. Wadkins had a 66 despite a double bogey seven on the final hole; Irwin matched par 71, and Crenshaw had a 68.

Maltbie, a chipper, jaunty 24-year-old who has a habit of sticking his tongue out at putts that refuse to fall, had an erratic round that included five birdies and four bogeys.

Maltbie, who led through the first two rounds, held the top spot throughout the day despite almost constant challenges from Trevino, Irwin and the surprising Gilder, a look-alike for former basketball star Jerry West who was serving as a television commentator for this event. Gilder had never before made the cut in a tour event but responded to the pressure with solid putting following crisp shot making following booming drives.

Maltbie missed seven greens, but saved par on three of them. He got one in the water. He rattled around in the orange trees. He three-putted once. He was in almost constant trouble.

But he escaped with the lead "and that's all I care about."

Two of his birdies came on par five holes that he reached in two. He dropped one putt of 25 feet, scored again from 10-12 feet and almost made eagle with a sand wedge shot that left him a tap-in.

Terps Win

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Steve Sheppard, on the bench most of the first half because of foul trouble, scored 13 of his 20 points in the first 6½ minutes of the second half and led second-ranked Maryland to an 87-69 basketball victory over Navy Saturday.

Petty Starting In Unusual Place—Last

By JERRY GARRETT
AP Motorsports Writer

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — The perils of Richard Petty, stock car racing's favorite continuing saga, resumes with a new twist Sunday, as the six-time NASCAR Grand National champion starts at the back of the pack in the Western 500.

Petty, although qualifying with the 10th fastest speed, had to miss Friday's first qualifying session because of engine trouble. He made the field in time trials Saturday and will start the $117,000 race in 27th position, 14 rows back of pole-winner Bobby Allison.

"It's been 15 years since I can remember anything like that happening to Richard," said one long-time observer.

It might not have actually been that long, and ordinarily it wouldn't matter where a charger like Petty would start; he'd probably roar right through the pack in a couple of laps.

But passing should be difficult on Riverside International Raceway's twisting, 2.62-mile road course—one of the few NASCAR races not on a oval track.

"There are only a couple of places on this track where you can pass slower cars," said pole sitter Allison. "And it's almost impossible to get by cars that are pretty close to the speed your car is capable of.

"Richard is really going to have to punish his equipment to get to the front. This is the most competitive field we've had here in a long time."

Petty seemed unconcerned.

"We've had to catch up before," he said. "The important thing is that we're in the race.

"We don't have to be in front any time but the last lap."

About his mechanical troubles here, Petty said, "We're concerned anytime we lose an engine, but we think we've got the problem taken care of."

Petty was joined in the Saturday qualifying session by another expected frontrunner, Jimmy Insolo, who led the last stock car race here. He qualified with a speed of 110.027 miles per hour, with Petty next best at 109.699 m.p.h.

record in post-season play. Last year he set a Super Bowl rushing record with 158 yards.

Terry Bradshaw had the finest and admitted most consistent season of his six-year career and Swann ranks as one of the top clutch receivers in football. He caught 11 touchdown passes this season, many of them spectacular.

The Dallas offense relies on guile and deception and Landry probably is the top offensive innovator in the game today. His shotgun formation, with quarterback Roger Staubach lined up five yards behind the center in sure passing situations, has been a hot topic all week.

"The thing coaches dread is the unknown," Landry said. "If a team is not stereotyped, you worry. Pittsburgh has to spend time this week wondering what we're going to do out of the shotgun and it takes time away from other things they have to prepare for.

The Steeler front four of L. C. Greenwood, Greene, Ernie Holmes and Dwight White was spectacular in last year's Super Bowl, holding Minnesota to just 17 yards rushing.

Robert Newhouse is Dallas' leading rusher but the most interesting performance could be that of Preston Pearson. Pearson, who scored three touchdowns in the title game against the Rams, was cut by the Steelers in pre-season and picked up for $100 by the Cowboys after their running back corps was depleted.

The American Conference champion has won six of the last seven bowls and six of the nine played. Only Dallas has broken that string by beating Miami 24-3 in 1972. Landry, however, has another streak in mind, the fact that he has beaten Pittsburgh in their last seven confrontations, the last a pre-season matchup in September.

A capacity crowd of 80,187 is expected at the Orange Bowl. There will be the usual sudden death provision if the game is tied, with a coin flip, a three-minute intermission and then 15-minute periods until someone scores.

Latest odds had Pittsburgh favored by six points.

North Pitt Hands Chargers First Loss

BETHEL—North Pitt went on a third quarter scoring streak Friday night pulling away from a tenacious Ayden-Grifton team by as much as 22 points and went on to hand the Chargers their first loss, 69-55.

The two teams are tied for first place in the Eastern Carolina Conference race with 3-1 records. The Panthers had lost only once before Friday night, a 51-50 thriller at D. H. Conley. A-G was undefeated but had had some mighty close victories.

North Pitt won two other games Friday to make it a sweep. The Panthers took the preliminary J.V. game, 65-53, and followed that with a 40-34 win over the A-G girls' team.

The girls' contest was just as much a thriller as the boys. The Big Orange Machine warmed up fast and with Brenda Sneed behind the wheel, the Pant-HERS peeled off a 10-2 lead. Sneed dumped in six points, Kathi Manning four.

But in the second period, A-G got out of first gear and shifted into high as the Big Orange slacked off. Baskets by Cindy Potter, Toni Smith and Audrey McCarter cut the lead to 10-8 but Sneed mdae a three-point play. Potter and Cindy Brown hit cutting the lead to one, 13-12 and a bucket by McCarter with 3:02 left in the half put A-G ahead for the only time in the game, 14-13.

The Pant-HERS got it back on baskets by Ellen Dixon and Joy Forbes to lead at halftime, 17-14.

The third quarter momentum shifted back to the Pant-HERS as they doubled Ayden-Grifton, 16-8, taking a 33-22 advantage. Manning scored six for North Pitt but Dixon's bucket with just under a minute left in the period gave North Pitt a 33-20 lead.

The Chargerettes took the upper hand in the final frame but ran out of time. The closes they came was the final margin of six.

North Pitt outrebounded A-G by a whopping 49-33. Mabel James pulled down 20 for the Pant-HERS while Forbes had 11. Manning and Sneed had 10 points each.

The Chargers have North Pitt a tough time the whole game even though they were way behind at times. The Panthers took the lead mid-way through the first period but lost it in the closing minutes of the frame.

North Pitt regained the upper hand in the first minute of the second stanza and after giving it up once more, took it for good on a free throw by Kenneth Roberson. North Pitt went on a streak in the middle of the period moving away by seven, 25-18,and this splurge cost A-G the ball game.

The Chargers had started with a zone defense. But when North Pitt began to bomb the nets from outside. A-G's Bob Murphrey moved his team into a man-to-man.

"We had to come out of our defense," he said. "We didn't have any choice when we were down.

"We didn't get many good shots. Maybe that's a credit to their defense. We hit a spot when we didn't get good shots. They are really explosive. It was hard to get back in, they were doing everything right."

The Panthers took the edge not only in scoring in the second period. They outrebounded A-G 25-14 and out shot them, 38 percent to 28 percent. Both teams committed four turnovers but the difference came in the form of Panther Jesse Harris.

Harris had three key steals and two assists igniting the fuse. Harris had four steals in the second half and three more assists.

North Pitt's Cobby Deans was expectedly pleased with a lot of things. The game was more of a team effort that past outings and the Panthers put on a dazzling show of passing off and setting each other up.

On one fast break, Harris fed to Donnie Perkins who, unable to make the shot, fed back to Roberson as Perkins fell out of bounds with Roberson making the lay-up.

Deans said a key in the Panthers' spurt was the lane."The middle was open a lot in the last of the second quarter so we went to a low post in the third. It was the best game in a good while," he said.

Deans said he expected a tough game. He said the effort was aided by the Panthers' hitting the boards better than in previous games. He said the Panthers began to put pressure on the A-G offense which helped to break down their zone defense.

"Perkins did a good job and did a lot of things without the ball." Instead of going to Perkins mainly, Deans said the Panthers tried to mix things up and not rely on Perkins as the whole offense. "Kenneth and Virgil (Pilgreen) are adding a lot; this was Virgil's most consistant game."

Deans also said, "They gave up good shots to teammates with better ones. It was a good overall ball game by the whole team."

The lead was haggled over until Roberson tallied in a rebound giving North Pitt an 8-6 edge. Pilgreen added a bucket on a drive but the Chargers rallied to tie the game, 12-12 on Ogden Braxton's free throw and Paul Ricciarelli put A-G on top with a feed from Braxton, 14-12.

Roberson hit a lay-up and Perkins, on an assist from Harris scored likewise giving the Panthers the advantage, 16-14, only to see A-G slip up on a three-point play. Roberson's free throws with 5:52 left in the half started the bottom falling out.

North Pitt outhit A-G 13-8 in the remainder of the period for a 31-25 halftime lead.

In the third period North Pitt zoomed out to a 47-27 lead on a Perkins lay-up. The Chargers hit just eight points in the frame adding to their troubles. They failed to clean off the offensive boards for second and third shots and the shot they did get, as Murphrey said, were not good ones.

A basket by Roberson late in the period made it a 57-33 difference.

North Pitt eased off in the final frame giving everybody a chance to play and not run the score up.

North Pitt outrebounded A-G, 49-28, for the game with Perkins getting 15 and Roberson and Pilgreen 10 each. Braxton had ten for A-G.

Roanoke Rolls Past Saratoga Five, 81-64

ROBERSONVILLE—Roanoke's Redskins went on the warpath Friday night and came away with Saratoga's scalp, 81-64. It was the second straight conference win for the 'Skins and it was Saratoga's first Eastern Plains loss.

Saratoga romped to a 61-31 win in the girls' game to boost its record to 2-0 in the league. Roanoke is 0-2. Roanoke won the junior varsity game, 74-41.

Saratoga's girls jumped off to a 15-8 lead after the first eight minutes. They poured it on during the second period, allowing Roanoke only two points as they built the lead out to 29-10 at halftime.

Both teams hit 14 points in the third period to make it 43-24. Saratoga finished it off with an 18-7 margin in the final period.

Pat Tyson led Saratoga with 18, while Phyllis Ward had 13 and Pam Eastwood had 12.

The boys' game was a different story. The Redskins came out and pushed through 20 in the first period, holding Saratoga to 14. The 'Skins got just as many in the second frame, while Saratoga warmed to 17. That made it 40-31 at halftime.

Roanoke outhit its guest, 16-13, in the third frame and ran the lead out to 56-44. They finished it up with a 25-20 final quarter.

Ricky Purvis led Roanoke with 19, while Paul Jones had 17 and Ricky Duggins hit 10. Doug Smith led Saratoga with 18, with John Langston contributing 16, Murdock Suggs, 14, and Tim Edwards, 11.

Jaguar Matmen Crush Firebirds

FARMVILLE—Farmville Central's wrestlers romped to a 65-9 victory over Southern Nash High School Friday night.

The Jaguars had little trouble in winning their eighth match in 10 outings. Southern was able to take only two of the 11 weight classes, one on a pin.

Farmville's 11 victories included eight pins and two forfeits. The lone decision was a superior one.

Timmy Hall upped his record to 10-0 on the year, while Anthony Gorham is now 6-0. Horace Williams is now 9-1, while Robert Williams carries an 8-1 mark. John Dupree is 5-1.

Farmville travels to North Pitt on Monday.

Summary:

Heavyweight: John Dupree (FC) won by forfeit.

Aycock In Second Win

E.B. Aycock moved to its second win of the year Friday night, downing Wilson Coon Junior High School, 59-51.

Aycock eased out into a 15-14 lead after the first period, then increased that to 32-27 at the half.

The Jaguars held off a Wilson rally in the third period and held their lead at 43-30 going into the final period. Aycock outhit Wilson in that frame, 16-11 to gain the win.

Ronnie Chapman led Aycock with 22 points, while Curtis Little had 14 and Calvin Paige had 11. Emmanuel Tucker paced Wilson with 14, while John Taylor had 11.

The Aycock junior varsity went down to its third straight loss, 57-52, in the preliminary. The Jaguars Clubs were up, 14-12, at the end of the first period, but fell behind, 27-24 at the half. Wilson moved out to a 42-39 lead after the third frame, and outhit Aycock, 15-13, in the last.

Tim Pridgen led Wilson with 15, while Ben Howell and Will Webb each had 14. Cliff Kilpatrick paced Aycock with 18.

The Jaguars host Kinston on Tuesday.

Greene Central Stops Farmville Win Streak

SNOW HILL—Farmville Central, playing without the sick Mitchell Foskey, saw its chance to go into first place all alone in the Eastern Carolina Conference, drift away Friday night. Greene Central came through with a 53-39 upset of the Jaguars.

Foskey is down with the mumps, severly hampering the Jaguar attack.

Farmville Central's league-leading girls, however, vaulted past the Ewes, 42-23, while the Greene Central JVs took a 51-48 win over the Jag Cubs.

Greene Central jumped into a 13-10 lead in the opening period of the boys game, then made tracks in the second period. They pushed through 18 more points as the lead climbed to 31-22 at intermission.

The Rams continued to pull away in the third period, as their lead was upped to 45-32. Both teams slowed down in the final period, won by the Rams, 8-7.

Marvin Rouse led the Rams with 15 points, and also contributed 10 assists. Morris Applewhite added 12 more for the Rams.

James Baker led Farmville with 12 points, while Edward Thomas had 11.

In the girls' contest, Farmville moved out to an 11-6 lead in the first period, but had to battle to hold off the Ewes in the second frame. Both scored 10 as the lead moved to 21-16.

The Lady Jaguars pulled away again in the third period, building the lead to 28-18. They finished off the Ewes with a 14-5 margin in the final frame.

Seek Bus For Match

East Carolina University wrestling supporters are attempting to get a busload together to make the trip to Chapel Hill on Friday, January 29, for the match between the Bucs and Tar Heels.

Plans currently call for the bus to leave Minges Coliseum around 5 p.m. The match begins at 8 p.m.

Tickets for the bus will be $6 per person, with the match tickets not included. A full load must be insured before the bus will be chartered.

Conley Splits With Aycock

The boys won their game, 67-59, while the Aycock girls downed the Valkyries, 41-30.

Conley Downs Pitt Grapplers

HOLLYWOOD—D. H. Conley had little trouble with the North Pitt Panther wrestling team Friday afternoon, rolling to a 50-6 win.

The Panthers, largely declawed because of lack of numbers, had to forfeit five weight classes. One other weight was a double forfeit. Of the seven remaining weights, Conley won five, taking two of them on pins. North Pitt won the other two on decisions.

Three Viking wrestlers picked up their 13th wins in the match. James Johnson is now 13-0-1, Lo Carmon, 13-1; Charles Hanson, 13-3; Floyd Crandell is 12-2 and Alton Crandell, 11-4.

Summary:

114: Alton Crandell (C) decisioned Brent Harrell, 12-5.

State Pulls Out Of ACC Cellar

By The Associated Press

Thirteenth-ranked North Carolina State pulled itself out of the Atlantic Coast Conference cellar Friday night with its first conference win.

The Wolfpack, rebounding from a loss to Maryland Wednesday night, downed Virginia, 78-71, to even up its conference record at 1-1. Kenny Carr totaled 27 points in the winning effort and he helped hold off a second-half comeback by the Cavaliers.

In a nationally televised game Sunday, North Carolina plays host to N.C. State. The Tar Heels will be going into the game after playing the day before, and the Wolfpack will be playing less than two days after their game with Virginia.

"We struggled," N.C. State coach Norm Sloan said after Friday night's victory over Virginia.

"I was so glad to see some of our outside shots go in. It's hard when your're not relaxed, and we don't have a lot of confidence and poise yet," Sloan said.

The Wolfpack never trailed Viginia after Carr hit a short jump shot to give it a 4-3 lead early in the game. Carr and Phil Spence were able to hold Virginia's inside attack, and the Wolfpack was ahead by as many as 13 in the first half.

Virginia's Wally Walker and Dave Koesters put the Cavaliers in a menacing position in the second half. The State lead was cut to 58-55 with less than seven minutes to go.

But Carr, whose shots were not falling in the second half, suddenly picked up his earlier touch. He put in four free throws and a pair of layups in the next few minues and State was quickly back on top by 11.

"That's five straight games we've shot only 30 per cent the first half," Virginia coach Terry Holland said.

"I'm proud of our kids' second half comeback even though we lost," he said.

Aside from evening the Wolfpack's conference record, the game boosted the overall mark to 11-2. Virginia fell to 7-5 overall and 1-3 in the ACC.

As the ACC season nears the middle of the regular campaign, 18 ACC players are connecting on better than 50 per cent of their shots from the floor.

Maryland junior Steve Sheppard has been the conference leader all season, and he is in the top two nationally.

North Carolina's Mitch Kupchak, who ranked eighth in the nation at the end of last season, is behind Sheppard in the conference. Maryland freshman Larry Gibson is third statistically and N.C. State's Phil Spence is fourth.

Pace Gets Another Win

The victory boosted the Pace record to 5-2 overall.

Pace roared off to a 14-6 lead in the first period and built that to 32-16 at the half. They continued to outpace Greenville Christian in the third period, moving their lead out to 48-22. Greenville Christian put on a 19-12 rally in the final period, but were too far back for it to matter.

Dennis Ross led Pace with 26 points, while Peter Pace had 14. Steve Tyburski led Greenville Christian with 19 points.

DISTRIBUTORSHIP
WILL NOT INTERFERE WITH PRESENT EMPLOYMENT
NO SELLING REQUIRED
We are selecting distributors for fast moving products in Greenville and surrounding counties. These products publicized in newspapers, TV, magazines, etc.
Twenty year old company will place products in grocery, department, drug stores, super markets, gift shops, etc. Distributor will service these retail outlets monthly, requiring approximately 20 hours spare time per month.
CPA reports $99.00 and up possible profit per day. Figure the income you desire per month. Each location requires $168.00 investment. You may have 24, 36 or 48 locations. Company secures locations and installs products for you.
This is a bonafide offer and if you are not sincere about owning your own business, or do not meet the above financial requirements, let's not waste each other's time.

In tires, it's not the price you pay. It's how often you pay it.
This steel-belted Radial Tire carries the Michelin Warranty* for 40,000 miles on the original tread. (Many owners get much more.) Puncture resistant Michelins give precise steering, and smooth driving comfort. So stop in and start saving today.

40,000 MILE WARRANTY
*Michelin's Warranty for „X Radial Highway Passenger Tire shown here covers tread life, normal road hazards (excluding repairable punctures) and defects in workmanship and materials for 40,000 miles, when tire is used on passenger vehicles in normal service in continental United States, except Alaska. Credit or refund (at Michelin's option) is equal to current actual selling price multiplied by percentage of warranted mileage not run on tire.
Think Radial ... and Look to the Leader
MICHELIN
The Gas Savers
Because of the lower rolling resistance of Michelin "X" radials over conventional bias-ply tires, you might get as much as 10% savings over your present gas consumption. This means more miles per gallon of gas. It means extra dollars in your pocket.

FEW TREES . . . can compare with the maple for the beauty of its bark. The photograph above reveals a mosaic of clearly defined areas. These are touched with lines and dots of color on the gray and silver bark of the tree.

FROM EARLIER DAYS . . . Split shingles, once widely used as roofing material, are seldom seen today. The shingles on this farm shed are accumulating a growth of soft green moss.

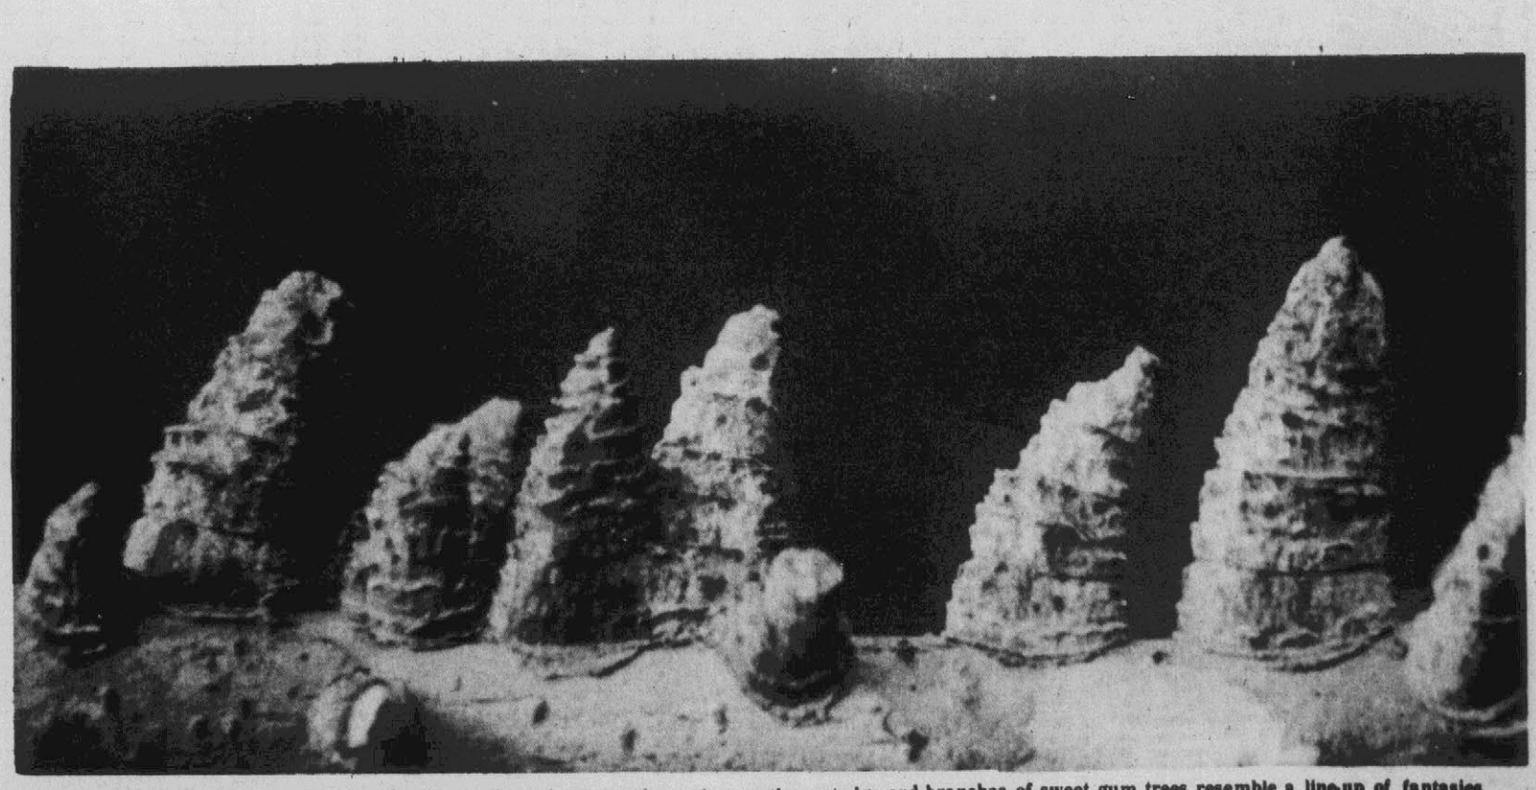
COMMONLY CALLED KNOTS . . . dark areas in timber show where limbs grew from the trunk of a tree. "Knotty" lumber is a favorite wood design for paneled wood walls.

Wood Bark
Wood Grain

SWIRLED . . . wood grain patterns, with cracks due to long exposure to weather, are from a cedar post from which the bark has long ago disappeared.

Photographs

By Jerry Raynor



LIKE A FOREST FANTASY . . . Easily viewed in leafless winter months, scaly growths on twigs and branches of sweet gum trees resemble a line-up of fantasies.

G-W STAFF CHANGES

Eddie Smith Jr., president of Grady-White Boats Inc. of Greenville, announced three staff developments within the company.

Smith announced the recent retirement of Richard Anderson, chief engineer, for health reasons. Anderson served with Grady-White since 1967 and was instrumental in the development of the fiberglass line of G-W boats, it was noted.

The president also reported the promotion of Jim Stoneman to the position of national sales manager. Stoneman has been with Grady-White Boats since 1972 as a sales representative in the southeast.

Grady-White Boats announced the addition of Bruce Collier as head of product development with responsibility for the design of new products, as well as engineering and redesign of existing products.

Corn Shipment Is Being Investigated

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is investigating the misgrading of a $6 million corn shipment loaded aboard a Polish supertanker in New Orleans that Sen. Dick Clark says is contaminated with large amounts of rocks, seashells and 10,000 cubic feet of corn dust.

The 3.2 million-bushel shipment had been destined for Poland before federal supervisors and Senate Agriculture Committee investigators discovered the misgrading, the chief of the Agriculture Department's grain division confirmed Friday night.

Clark, D-Iowa, said the presence of substantial amounts of foreign material was evidence of "willful" misgrading of the shipment.

Les Malone, chief grain inspector for the USDA, arrived in New Orleans and made plans to inspect the vessel, Rysy II, today.

Malone said the ship is anchored in the Mississippi River at the Cook Industries' Bayside grain elevator at Reserve, about 25 miles upstream from New Orleans.

A spokesman for Clark, who is a member of two Senate committees investigating grain inspection and export marketing, said the grading could not have been a mistake.

"Some guy graded it No. 3 yellow," an average grade, "and it's just a 25-foot high pile of garbage," he said. "Unless you're deaf, dumb and blind, that is substantial evidence of misgrading"

Export grain shipments are inspected by employes of private firms, operating under Agriculture Department licensing and supervision.

Under the Grain Standards Act, all grain destined for foreign buyers must be inspected. Intentional misgrading is illegal.

Several dozen inspectors and grain company officials have been indicted in the course of a two-year investigation of the grain export industry.

They have been charged with misgrading, short-weighing and theft of grain at New Orleans, the nation's largest grain exporting city, and other ports.

David Galliart, the Agriculture Department grain division chief, said in a telephone interview from Kansas: "We've been working on this for some time. I'm happy that we caught it."

As Agriculture Department officials left Washington for New Orleans to investigate, other officials met with representatives of Cook Industries, based in Memphis.

Clark did not say who was responsible for the misgrading.

However, Malone said the corn was loaded by both the Bayside elevator and a floating elevator at Reserve.

He said if any of the grain is found to be misgraded, it would be up to the Destrehan Board of Trade, Inc., to either certify that portion as lower quality and permit shipment at lower grade or order it unloaded.

The board has USDA authority for inspections at Bayside.

Congress May Settle Gas Competition

By JOHN LENGEL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The competition between two companies that want to transport Alaskan North Slope natural gas to the lower 48 states seems destined for settlement by Congress.

That's the prevailing view of congressional sources and officials of the two competing companies. Meanwhile, the companies' lawyers are taking each other's plans apart in hearings before the Federal Power Commission.

Several bills have been introduced and their sponsors expect hearings to be under way by spring in the House and Senate. The bills range from cutting short the FPC proceedings to simply mandating one or the other proposal for transporting the natural gas.

There is unanimous agreement on one point: There will be only one winner, one system for carrying an estimated 10 per cent of known U.S. natural gas reserves to market.

El Paso Alaska, a subsidiary of El Paso Natural Gas, a U.S. pipeline company, is planning a natural gas pipeline roughly paralleling the crude oil line which is under construction.

El Paso's gas would be liquified at Point Gravina on Prince William Sound and loaded into a specially built fleet of 11 tankers for delivery and distribution to Southern California.

Alaskan Arctic Gas Pipeline Co., a consortium of major oil company subsidiaries and pipeline companies, would build a pipeline across Canada. It would transport some Canadian gas as well. The gas would be distributed in the Midwestern states.

Arctic contends it will distribute gas where it is needed most, more cheaply and dependably than El Paso.

But El Paso argues that time is on the side of its "All American" route. Arctic, El Paso says, faces potentially fatal tests in pioneering a new route across unsettled native claim lands, and winning approval from Canadian authorities over Canadian company proposals.

The Interior Department, at the direction of Congress, studied both plans and found both to be feasible. Each should take approximately $7 billion and five years to build, at a minimum, the department said.

Time is of the essence to Arctic Gas, whose vice president, William Brackett, figures the FPC may not be ready to make its decision until late 1977. The FPC says it hopes to decide by next December. In any event court challenges are likely, unless Congress intervenes.

Environmentalists now generally favor the approach of El Paso because it would disturb far less virgin land. Brock Evans, the Washington director of the Sierra Club, was asked if conservationists would back their feelings in court. "Darn right," he said.

RECORD BREAKING WEEK—The stock market held the busiest week in its history this past week, with trading volume for the full on the New York Stock Exchange reaching a record 159.69 million shares. The one day voulme record was also set on Thursday when more than 38 million shares were traded. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials posted a gain of 18.58 points over last week. (AP Wirephoto)

Attention On Stock Market

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Record trading volume and a continuing rally brought a lot of attention to the stock market this past week, but where the money was coming from remained unclear.

The market's turbulent activity set those who analyze it to debating who was doing all the buying and selling, and why.

"I don't think the public is participating in the market as heavily as the volume would indicate. But they're back in, asking questions," said Henry Perrine, manager of an E.F. Hutton office here.

Perrine said the number of visitors to his office swelled as the market's pace picked up steam during the week.

"Whenever the market makes the front page of the newspaper, you get people coming in here," Robert Rau, a retired businessman, said Friday as he stood in the brokerage office watching the ticker tape.

There were nearly as many opinions on who was causing the activity as there are security analysts, but the number of trades in blocks of thousands of shares of a particular stock showed that large institutions, such as life insurance companies and banks, were actively in the market.

The New York Stock Exchange set a daily volume record Thursday, when 38.45 million shares were traded. The weekly volume record of 145.68 million shares set in the last week of January last year was also eclipsed by the week's 159.69 million shares traded. During the week the closely watched Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks added 18.50 points to close at 929.63.

In large part, the week's rally fed on itself as excitment grew about the market's large advance of the new year and the heavy volume that accompanied it.

Also, there appeared to have been a lot of cash that was on the sidelines as the investment community waited to see what the market was going to do. When the rally began and investor confidence grew with it, this money came into the market.

Next year you could be on scholarship.

An Air Force ROTC 2-year scholarship. Which not only pays your tuition, but also gives you $100 a month allowance. And picks up the tab for your books and lab fees, as well.

And after college, you'll receive a commission in the Air Force...go on to further, specialized training...and get started as an Air Force officer. There'll be travel, responsibility, and a lot of other benefits.

Corolla 2-Door Sedan — 1976's Lowest Priced Car

THE LIGHTS ARE BURNING BRIGHT ONCE AGAIN SO YOU CAN SEE OUR

12 MONTHS OR 12,000 MILES USED CAR WARRANTY

This guarantee applies to cars selling for $1000.00 and up. On a 50-50 basis. All work must be done in our shop. This warranty does not apply to any sport cars, high performance or air cooled engines or 4 speed transmissions (except economy cars). Most good used cars (even if they look like new) are only guaranteed for a month. Or for a thousand miles. No more. And some are not guaranteed at all. But at Tarheel when we say a used car is in excellent condition, we're willing to stand behind it. We're willing to do something a little extra for it. So we guarantee its motor, its rear end, and its transmission for twelve months or twelve thousand miles. If you're in the market for a better used car, come out to Tarheel and look at ours. We'll show you some as good as new. Guaranteed. Asterisk denotes warranted car.

PERSONALITY AND LOCATION

Situated on this wooded lot is a charming Williamsburg home. In this home from the elegant center foyer you will be tempted into the family room which offers an arched brick fireplace with complimentary wood box (so handy to store the evening's logs.) Also adjoining the foyer is the formal dining room accented with chair-rail and soft white and gold print wallpaper. You will find in this home a spacious old fashioned kitchen combined with family dining area, warmed with the morning sun, bringing out the beauty of the handsome cabinetry. Separate mixing and blending area, self-cleaning oven, dishwasher and disposal all add up to total convenience for your new kitchen. "Dad and Mom" will enjoy the privacy of the master bedroom being located downstairs, while upstairs are three lovely decorated bedrooms, a blue, a red, and a gold one. Excellent financing ca be arranged on this quality built home in one of Greenville's loveliest neighborhoods. Make a wise choice. Call us, we are builders of fine homes and we want you to know this home with so much personality.

An Open Letter

Dear Homebuyer,

You have the good sense to know that owning your own home is stacking the financial deck in your favor, but you also know that a home requires your time and effort. You have to mow the lawn, ponder property taxes, sewer and water bills and worry about termites, etc. But most of all as you go to buy a home you worry about value. If you pay too much for a home that is badly under financed, thus tying up your precious capital, you could be just as well off renting. There is an answer, to this dilemma, University Condominiums, a thriving community of attractive antique brick homes. The condominium concept takes most of the maintenance worry off your shoulder. But, most of all University Condominium offers the most value for your housing dollar. Also financing is available — $21,500 with only 5 per cent down. Come See Us Before We're Sold.

Bad Weather Said Scapegoat For Soviet Planners

By BARRY JAMES

MOSCOW (UPI) — The one excuse repeated over and again by Communist party officials for this years disastrous grain crop was that the weather was bad.

Now a Soviet writer has dismissed this as nonsense, saying that bureaucrats do more harm than the coldest winter or driest drought.

Writing in the magazine Nash Sovremennik, Yuri Chernichenko, a journalist specialising in agricultural problems, said Soviet weather is so repeatedly and regularly bad that it could be overcome with proper planning.

Chernichenko accused bureaucrats and planners of ruining some of the Soviet Unions best land in their attempts to boost production at any cost.

He said they pay no attention to such elementary details as contour plowing, crop rotation, timely sowing or the choice of the right seeds for the climate.

Chernichenko focused on the black soil zone of southern Russia and the Ukraine, once known as the breadbasket of Europe, where most of the winter wheat is sown. He said every third winter since 1891 was as cold as the one which was credited with destroying much of the winter wheat crop in 1972.

Yet in that year, he said, proper precautions and sowing would have saved more than 90 per cent of the lost crops.

"The level of land cultivation is defined not by the years with favorable weather, but by the seasons of poor weather," he said. The real problem, he added, is that the standard of agriculture does not keep pace with the science of agronomy "and the weather merely accentuates this weakness of ours. It is not the major cause of our bad grain crops."

Chernichenko listed these shortcomings in agricultural planning:

— Wrong plowing. Fields are plowed straight up and down, allowing water to run off and causing drought and dust storms. Only a small minority of farms practice contour plowing.

— Wastage of fertilizers. Chernichenko said only one farm in 30 digs the fertilizer into the roots of winter wheat where it counts. The rest spray from the air often onto bone-dry fields, and "the weeds are just as happy to get this kind of fertilizing." Some new wheat varieties produce enormous yields given adequate fertilization, but Chernichenko said planners parcel out inadequate quantities of fertilizers so that all farms get an equal share "but no wheat gets enough."

— Lack of crop rotation. Because the development plan usually calls for sowing on the maximum acreage, bureaucrats do not allow farmers to leave fields fallow. In the black earth zone, only nine per cent of fields are properly rotated. "Its a dead investment when we use new kinds of grains without crop rotation," he quoted agronomist Ivan Kalininka as saying. "The main thing is not how many hectares we sowed but the height, reliability and quality of the yield."

— Wrong choice of seeds. "We need grain that give a good crop under bad conditions," Chernichenko quoted another agronomist, Vasily Remeslo, as saying. Instead, the bureaucrats insist on using super varieties that look good on paper, but which require special care and intensive fertilization. Remeslo said regional authorities, "who do anything to fulfill and overfulfill their plans" treat agronomists like "errand boys" and reject their advice about the proper seeds to be used.

— Over-emphasis on winter wheat. Because the new varieties of seeds are theoretically high yielding, they get the priority for machinery and fertlizers. Yet Chernichenko said 1948 was the only year since the war when the Soviet Union succeeded in harvesting its entire winter crop. And only reasonable spring wheat harvests in recent years have staved off total catastrophe. Chernichenko said the amount of winter wheat lost in the black soil zone has increased from about 20 per cent to 58 per cent in the past 15 years. From 1968 to 1972, for example, the gross grain yield increased 24 per cent, but winter varieties accounted for only 7.5 per cent of the increase.

— Untimely sowing. Chernichenko said the development plan pays no heed to the delicate balance of nature. Workers who received a prize in August for completing their sowing ahead of the time stipulated by the plan saw the result of their efforts thrown away in April.

Because of bad farming and over cultivation, soil erosion is enormous. In the Don region alone, 19,200 acres is lost to erosion every year, Chernichenko said, and 27 million tons of soil are annually washed from the right bank of the Don river. Yet this could be prevented.

"We should learn how to refrain from sowing. We should admit that it sometimes happens that the soil is dry and that there are no guarantees of prospects for a good crop, that the risk is not justified. In such cases we should not waste seeds at all, but wait for the spring. The seeds we thus save will be an addition to our crop and not a detraction from it."

He condemned what he called a make-or-break philosophy that demanded ever greater results, instead of accenting safer but surer targets with grain varieties suited to climatic conditions.

"We would not use the wrong kind of gasoline for a Zhiguli (automobile) or an IL62 aircraft," he said. "The same goes for wheat. These new varieties are not adapted to bad conditions and under bad conditions they perform worse."

Seldom has such factual indictment of agricultural mismanagement appeared in the Soviet press. It seemed to support many of the worst things Western experts have been saying about the dead hand of bureaucracy on the nation's farms.

Although Nash Sovremennik is an intellectual magazine with a circulation of little more than 100,000, the publication of the article must have had high official support in a country where everything is censored. An explanation is that the magnitude of this years grain disaster — the Soviets produced an estimated 137 million tons of grain compared with a planned 215.7 million tons — has prompted some officials to open a serious debate about the agricultural problem. Similar but milder articles have appeared in other publications.

Nonetheless, the emphasis still is on ambitious production targets. The 1976-1980 development plan calls for an average annual harvest of 215-220 million tons, 22 per cent above the average in the 1970-1975 plan.

Rattlesnake Contact Is Just Part Of His Job

PIERRE, S.D. (AP) — Steve Thompson used to see rattlesnakes only in his dreams. Now he sees them every day in his work.

Thompson, 24, had never seen a live prairie rattlensnake when he became the South Dakota reptile control agent last summer.

Now he travels with snakes in his truck, talks about them in education programs and tries to charm them out of their dens in the rocky ridges of the state.

"At first, I went through some dreams of seeing snakes all over in the dark," he said. "It took me an awfully long time to actually get used to seeing rattlesnakes, because they blend so well with their surroundings."

A zoology major, Thompson took the job when he was studying snakes. He concentrates primarily on controlling the prairie rattler, the only poisonous snake among South Dakota's 18 varieties.

Rodger Pearson, Thompson's supervisor in the Agriculture Department, said the reptile control program is attempting to expand its educational efforts.

"Before Steve, a guy would go out and trap snakes on what I call the back 40," he said. "Steve has concentrated on controlling snakes in more public areas and in teaching people how to control the reptiles themselves."

Livestock losses from snakebites are not great, Thompson said, and he could not remember the last time a South Dakotan died of snakebite.

"The chance of getting bit by a rattlesnake is less than the chance of being struck by lightning," he said.

D. H. Conley Highlights

By CYNTHIA PATRICK

Monday the matmen of Conley suffered their first defeat of the season. First place West Carteret defeated the matmen by nine points with a score of 33.24.

The schedule for exams has been set for next week.

The schedule is as follows: Wednesday the second and fifth period exams will be given, Thursday third and sixth period exams will be given, and Friday first and fourth period exams will be given. Exams will last two class periods.

Tonight the Vikings will host C. B. Aycock, A dance sponsored by the JROTC will be held in the cafeteria after the game. Admission is $1.00 per person.

Dolly Exudes Femininity On And Off Stage

TWINS . . . Freida and Floyd Parton, two of Dolly Parton's five sisters and six brothers, are part of The Traveling Family Band, which accompanies her.

Accent On Living

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C.—Sunday, January 18, 1976—C-1

Dolly Parton exudes femininity from the top of the blond wig that has become her trademark to her bell-bottomed ankles and beyond.

"If I did that I'd bust my britches," she says, seemingly off-the-cuff in her stage performance as a member of her Traveling Family Band bobs up and down in imitation of the butterfly to which she likens love in a song.

And indeed she might. Her rhinestone-studded pantsuit is tight, very tight, but designed to outline but not reveal her hourglass figure that is also part of her claim to fame.

Her voice has a musical ring, in speaking as well as in singing, and it is just a little childish. She uses this quality to imitate a child's voice in several of her songs. She has an Appalachian Mountain accent, but it's rather de-emphasized, unlike her peer, Loretta Lynn. Once in a while her grammar isn't quite proper, but again it's not so amiss in every sentence as is Loretta's. It's as if she fits well her country image, yet is at the same time a polished entertainer comfortable in her star's role and not tainted by it.

After her first performance at North Lenoir High School last Saturday night, Dolly was hoarse, but she was cordial in granting an interview. "As soon as we get through talking, though, I'll have to rest my voice till the next show," she said. Asked if she had a cold, she said, "No, I almost never get colds. It's just that I've been working so hard lately."

Dolly and her band flew into Kinston from Lake Tahoe, Nev. Her bus, where the interview was conducted, met them there.

The Traveling Family Band is made up of Dolly's sisters, Rachel and Freida; her brothers, Randy and Estel Floyd; her "first cousin," Dwight (She pronounces it "D-wight"), and three other regulars not part of the family. She teases onstage and off with her brothers and sisters and other band members. "It's just great having them with me," she said. "It's almost like being at home We're on the road about 120 days a year, you know."

Home to her and her brothers and sisters is Sevier County, Tenn., near the N. C. line high in the Smokies. "There were 12 of us at home," she said, "six boys and six girls" Asked if her parents are still living, she answered, "Yes, indeed, they are. They're still young and they're doing better than they've ever done in their lives. They've got all of us grown now and it's not so hard on them the way it was when Mama was having babies and Daddy was working himself to death to keep us all going."

Her husband, Carl Dean, seldom accompanies her on tour or on trips to California and New York for television appearances. "He has his business and I have mine," she said. "He's a paving contractor in Nashville. When we're working, we're often away from each other, but when we're together we enjoy it." she said. "Once in a while when he wants to get away from a day or two, he'll come along on a short trip as a driver."

Dolly, who said she'll have her 30th birthday this month, has been a country music performer since she graduated from high school in 1964, but her musical career goes back to when she was five years old, she said. She's been "on the radio" since she was 10. "I can't remember when I didn't pick and sing and make up songs," she said. "Everyone in my family plays some instrument and sings."

Most of the songs she records, Dolly writes herself and she also writes for other performers. She seems to do best with ballads. Asked the source of her ideas, she said, "From you and everyone I meet—I get ideas from everywhere. I'm a very emotional person, I guess, so I have strong feelings about every experience I have or hear about and the song ideas just come."

Last year was a winner for Dolly in that she was named Female Country Entertainer of the Year. This year may be another big one. "We'll begin taping a tv show pretty soon," she said. "It's to be called 'Dolly' and will be a syndicated variety show. I'll have a lot of guests. I hope one of the stations in this area will carry it."

O.B. And Ronnie Enjoy The Work They Do

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

During the second half of the first performance of the Country Spotlight Show at North Lenoir School Saturday night, Ronnie Milsap and O. B. McClinton were holding a jam session in Ronnie's bus.

To the accompaniment of a transistor radio, the two country music stars were doing what each says he likes better than anything else in the world—making music.

"When you like your work as much as I do, it's not work," Ronnie said. "That goes for me, too," O. B. said. "I just love every minute I'm out on that stage. No matter how many times I go through basically the same routine, it's fun—fun to sing and talk and laugh and try to read the audience and give them just what they like. Some audiences like country sounds and nothing else, some down in Texas want to dance—anything they can dance to, they like—; some like one I had in Morristown, Tenn. recently like the 50's sound.

"Ronnie," O. B. said, "you ought to see that line out there. Some of those people have been waiting there an hour and a half in the cold to get in and see us. We've got to give them a good show and we've got to let them know we realize and appreciate how long they've waited.

"Country music fans are the most loyal in the world," O. B. went on. "If a pop artist goes very long without a song on the charts he's a nobody. A country star can go on booking shows even if he does have a slack spell. Record buyers ask for pop songs more often than not by the name of the song. But they'll go into a record store looking for a country sound and say, "Hey, whatcha got by Charlie Pride?"

Ronnie is a native of Robbinsville, N. C., but most of his childhood was spent at the N. C. School for the Blind in Raleigh. He went home only at Christmas and summers, because it's 400 miles from Raleigh to Robbinsville. Asked if this isn't hard on a child, he said quietly, "It'll make you strong."

Mrs. Mona Atwell was visiting Ronnie Saturday night. She says she's his biggest fan. He says she's his second mother. Her son, Larry, now deceased, was Ronnie's classmate at the School for the Blind and Ronnie went home with Larry to Charlotte for many weekends and short holidays. "Any time Ronnie's anywhere within a day's drive of Pineville, where I live now, I'm there to see him," she said. "I think he's wonderful."

Ronnie says he flies to most of his engagements, so as to have more time at home in Nashville with his wife and six-year-old son. "They used to go with me some," he said, "but it's hard now that he's started to school."

O. B. says his wife and three-year-old son, Shea, usually stay at home in Memphis, too. "It's a more normal life for them," he said. "Besides," he joked, "it would take my wife too long to fix her hair and makeup if she were on the road with me. She looks great when it's done, but she's so slow."

O. B. is from Senobia, Miss. "I'm Obie from Senobie," he said. He said he's always like to perform and would any time he got a chance, regardless of the place or the pay. He got his break, though, he feels when he was in the Air Force. "I had a few people who encouraged me while I was in there to go professional, and somehow or another I made it."

He admits that it's unusual for a person of his race to be into country music. "To quote the man who paved the way for me," he said, "I just never did sound like I was 'sposed to sound." He referred, of course, to Charlie Pride.

Both artists have other interests, (Ronnie, for instance is a collector of old radio show tapes and a ham radio operator), but each says the country music field is the only career he'd like to pursue. "I'll be in it the rest of my life if the public will have me," O. B. said. Ronnie nodded agreement.

HIS "SECOND MOTHER" . . . Mrs. Mona Atwell of Pineville, near Charlotte, poses with Ronnie Milsap. She is the mother of a friend who often invited him home for weekends and holidays during his school days.

UNC-G Student Appears In Movie With Burt Reynolds

By WILSON DAVIS
UNC-G News Bureau

GREENSBORO — This has been a busy fall for Stephanie Burchfield. In addition to studying dramatics at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, she made a movie with Burt Reynolds.

That's right. While other college girls who idolize Burt Reynolds had to be content with seeing his latest film, Miss Burchfield had a role in a movie with him.

Not only that — but in one scene she tried to "seduce" him.

Nineteen-year-old Stephanie, a senior at UNC-G, plays the role of a young street walker in United Artists' upcoming production of "Gator," which stars Reynolds in the title role. The movie, which is also directed by Reynolds, is set for release in late spring or early summer.

As for the seduction scene, Stephanie has had to field a lot of questions about that from classmates UNC-G — particularly the girls.

"The scene was very tastefully done," explained Miss Burchfield. She added that the movie will carry a GP rating.

In the bedroom scene, she is clad in "a little yellow nightie" when Reynolds enters. "When he sees me it's kind of a shock because he has a 12-year-old daughter. And then I try to seduce him and he says no and slaps me. I start crying and then he comforts me and says it's going to be okay."

That's about it, except for an earlier part in the movie in which she sees Reynolds for the first time at a political rally. Altogether, Miss Burchfield expects to have about 10 minutes of film time in the finished product.

But those 10 minutes required four weeks of her time at different intervals on the movie location at Savannah, Ga. For her work, Miss Burchfield said she was paid the minimum wage in the Screen Actors Guild. This was $605 per week, she noted.

How does it feel to play a close scene with Burt Reynolds?

"He's really, really nice," she replied. "He's very easy to work with. He's just like a good friend. He's more than a director."

The UNC-G student added, "He's so easy to play with. He has a wonderful sense of humor and is always cracking jokes. You not only feel comfortable but you are having a good time. He is the most talented actor I have ever worked with. He's really fun, he really is."

This was Miss Burchfield's second part in a Burt Reynolds movie. The first was a smaller role three years ago in the film, "White Lightning," which was made in Little Rock, Ark., her hometown. She got the part by auditioning for it as a 16-year-old student at Little Rock Central High School. A lot of other Little Rock people had small parts in the movie also, she recalled.

"I like the character a whole lot better that I play in this movie than the first," Miss Burchfield said. "She's a sensitive girl. In the other one, I played a very insensitive country hick. I had about 20 lines and my part was over in about two minutes."

However, it apparently was her competency in the first role that landed the second part three years later. Reynolds' manager telephoned Miss Burchfield this summer and that led to her part in "Gator."

Miss Burchfield transferred to UNC-G last January after spending two years at the University of Arkansas. She picked UNC-G out of a master catalog chiefly because it seemed to have a strong drama program. In the two semesters she has been in the Department of Drama and Speech, Stephanie

MISS CATHY GAYLE MCLAWHORN . . . is the daughter of Mrs. William O. McLawhorn of Ayden, who announce her engagement to Robert Theo Byrd Jr., son of Dr. Robert Theo Byrd of Raleigh and the late Mrs. Byrd. The bride-elect is the daughter of the late Mr. McLawhorn. The wedding will take place April 18.

Jarvis Memorial UMW Officers Are Announced

Mrs. J. C. Whitehurst Jr. has been selected president of the United Methodist Women at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church, it was announced today by Mrs. William G. Blount, chairman of the Nominating Committee.

Serving with her for the 1976-77 term will be: Mrs. W. H. Taft Jr., first vice president; Mrs. J. Ed Clement, second vice president; Mrs. Donald Cherry, treasurer; and Mrs. Dillon Watson, secretary.

Newly selected mission coordinators are: Mrs. Dan Warren, Supportive Community; Mrs. Charles Schwidee, Social Involvement; Mrs. Ralph Tucker, Christian Personhood; Mrs. Charles Kavanaugh, Nominations; Mrs. Jasper Lewis, Membership Chairman; Mrs. W. C. Taylor Jr., and Mrs. John Shannonhouse, Kitchen; Mrs. M. Jack Moye, Church Women United; Mrs. David Womack, Coupons; Mrs. J. B. Smith Jr., and Mrs. Harold Forbes, Memorial Flowers; Mrs. Charles Kavanaugh, Publicity; Miss Irene Fleming, Telephone; Miss Annie Turner, Program Resources; Mrs. Wyatt Brown and Mrs. Ralph Tucker, Nursery.

Group leaders will be Mrs. Dixie Greene, Mrs. James Carter, Mrs. F. E. Lansche, Mrs. Orren E. Dowd Sr., Mrs. Burke H. Stancil, Mrs. W. H. Taft Sr., Mrs. W. G. Blount, Mrs. L. E. Osswald, Mrs. W. M. Reading, Mrs. Marshall Starkey, Miss Laura Bell, and Mrs. Howard Clay.

Mrs. Whitehurst, in addition to church related activities, has been active in the Girls Scouts, the Parent Teacher Association and is a member of the Chicora Book Club.

She attended Greensboro College and Duke University, where she was awarded her A.B. degree in English. Prior to her marriage to Mr. Whitehurst, she taught for a number of years high school English in Danville, Va., and in Durham. She and her husband have three children, Elizabeth Ann, Mary Helen, and James Clarence, Jr. Her husband is president of Coastal Chemical Corp., Greenville.

UNC-G Student In...

has not appeared in any UNC-G Theatre plays. The first semester she had to concentrate on her academic studies, and this past term she was out of town at too many intervals working on the movie.

Now, the young blonde-haired student has decided to leave college after the current semester and go to Hollywood and seek an acting career. "I'm union now, and so I can get into a professional company," she explained. Her hope is to work on camera techniques in particular in an acting school while seeking some movie parts as well. She also would like to complete her undergraduate degree out there.

During the movie work, Stephanie said Burt Reynolds kept asking, " 'When you coming out to the big city, kid?' That was his line to me. So right as I was leaving (during the filming of "Gator"), I had an answer for him. I told him in December."

She said her short height, five feet, one inch, should be an advantage. "They like my size because I can play younger parts. Most people who are the age of the parts they would be playing don't have my experience. That's one reason I want to go out there now. They say if I come out while I'm young, I can get established and probably play younger roles. There's a big market for that."

Miss Burchfield said both Reynolds and the producer of "Gator" had promised to assist her in her efforts toward a film career. "Of course, there's only so much they can do. Most of it will be up to me. But if I need somebody, I feel like I can go to them."

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

If President Ford and Henry Kissinger really want to know how they're doing on the road to detente, they should check out what fashions are influencing American women.

At one time, people really trusted the government. When the United States embraced a nation in friendship, that was it! We all rushed out and bought clothes that reflected their culture. That was before we got stuck with a closet full of Nehru jackets, a style that flourished for about six days.

The other day as Maxine and I were picking our way through the racks in the sportswear department, I held up a red satin oriental jacket with black braided loops and a mandrin collar and asked, "Whatya think?"

"How much is it?"

"Twenty-six dollars."

"How old is Mao Tse-tung?"

"Eighty-one."

"You want an honest answer?"

"Of course."

"I wouldn't pay $26 for it if Barbara Walters wore it with a China Doll wig."

"Why are you so cynical?"

"Not cynical . . . just cautious. I was going to buy an angora sweater the other day, but I'm going to wait and see what direction we're moving."

"That's ANGOLA!" I said. "And besides, you're being too hard on this country. After all, our African bush jackets are still in and so are our Rssian boots and big fur hats."

"In until when?" snapped Maxine bitterly. "I have a $34 pair of knee-length boots hanging in the balance over the disarmament talks. One disagreement and they're out!"

"Maybe," I suggested, "by that time the White House will have established detente with New York City and we can palm them off as an American style."

"It's a possibility," she said. "But you know what I really dread? Those sheets that you wear draped over your head and secured with a black ring and those long black robes that are impossible to drive in."

"I know," I sighed. "It's a big price to pay for a couple gallons of gasoline and a quart of oil."

"Home Owned & Operated For Over 55 Years"

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

Invitations are being sent out this week by the North Carolina Art Society to its annual Beaux-Arts Ball to be at the North Ridge Country Club, Raleigh, Feb. 21.

Co-chairmen for the event will be Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Lilly Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Urquhart Jr. of Raleigh. The regional committee for the 1976 Bicentennial Beaux-Arts Ball includes:

Mr. and Mrs. James T. Cheatham III and Mr. and Mrs. James S. Ficklen Jr. of Greenville.

Proceeds from the ball will be used to supplement state appropriations and to further the N. C. Museum of Art's program of education throughout the state. The Art Commission has recently approved for purchase, a painting by Claude Monet, "Morning Mists."

A series of workshops for registered nurses giving care to aged patients will begin this month, conducted by the N. C. Nurses Association and cosponsored by the Duke University School of Nursing.

The workshops on "Standards of Gerontological Nursing Practice," are designed to assist nurses in improving the quality of nursing care for the elderly.

Nurses may participate who are employed in long-term health care facilities, geriatric units in hospitals, public health and home health agencies, office nursing, teaching or who have an interest in the practice area.

Workshop coordinator is Janet Gelein, assistant professor of nursing at Duke University School of Nursing and chairman of the NCNA Division of Gerontological Nursing Practice.

State cook offs held during the month of May will provide the preliminary elimination to elect the national finalist from each state.

Ancient Art Of Basket Weaving Is Being Taught To Indians

BINGEN, Wash. (AP) — The ancient and refined Indian art of basket weaving is being taught at the Adult Learning Center here — but only to Indians.

Some 28 students are also learning to string beads and make moccasins at college classes aimed at recapturing the nearly lost skills developed by their ancestors over thousands of years.

Most of the 28 students are from the Klickitat tribe, part of the Yakima nation. They meet three evenings each week at the center, just opened by Clark College in the old Bingen Elementary School building.

Teaching basket weaving is Elsie Thomas, 65, who learned the ancient art as a child from her parents. Ross Brewer, director of evening instruction at Clark College, says she is one of the last persons in the world with this knowledge.

She started her instruction in November by taking her pupils far into the mountains to dig cedar roots. They also gathered bear grass from an area in which their ancestors gleaned basket materials in the misty past.

Baskets woven by Indians from the Pacific Northwest employ a technique known as coiled basketry. One feature is an overlay decoration, applied as the basket is sewn.

Each basket is built up with coils of the cedar roots, while grasses and thin bark that is dyed various colors are used for the designs.

The baskets woven by Mrs. Thomas could sell for $85 to $185, says Nettie Kuneki, coordinator of the evening program.

"I doubt if we — the students — could ever get that good," she said.

It takes Mrs. Thomas about one week to complete each basket.

Her students say they are learning the old skills not only to perpetuate a tradition but "because we want Indian baskets and can't afford to buy them."

New Directions Is Luncheon Program Topic

The Welcome Wagon Club program on Wednesday at the Greenville Golf and Country Club was presented by Brenda Wilkins, director of New Directions.

This is a group home for children, aged 11-16, who have been defined as delinquent or pre-delinquent. The purpose and problems of the newly formed home were discussed.

Newcomers and guests introduced by Judy Feimster were: Ann Evans; Eloise Gabbert; Joanie Kamman; Emily Ashburn; Dottie Halevy; Linda Young; Tottie McKnight; and Estelle Morin.

President Treva Fidler announced that Lanie Shive was elected by the board to serve as parliamentarian and Emilie Mallard has accepted the position of Interest groups coordinator.

The Evening Group will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the home of Pat Swanda. The program on macrame will be presented by Karen Jones and Maria Kennedy. Everyone is asked to bring a shoebox and 20 feet of twine. Those planning to attend should call Mrs. Swanda, 756-4038.

Also on Tuesday the Gad-a-Bouts will meet at the Plaza Cinema at 9:30 a.m. for a trip to the Hope Plantation, Windsor. This is the restored Federal Period home of Governor David Stone (1808-1810). For more information and reservations call Robbin Clark, 756-6936.

The Bienvenue Book Club will meet Wednesday at 1 p.m. in the home of Barbara Radeka.

The next board meeting will be Jan. 28 at 10 a.m. in the home of Gloria Manning.

Couple Weds Friday Evening

Miss Katherine Diane Braxton became the bride of Billy Edward McLawhorne Jr. Friday at 7:00 p.m. in a double ring ceremony.

The Rev. Stanley E. Wingard officiated at the ceremony which was held at his home.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Sybil W. Braxton of Greenville, and the late Mr. T. J. Braxton Jr. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Billy Edward McLawhorne of Rt. 2, Ayden.

Engagement Announced

Mrs. Doris Dail of Greenville announces the engagement of her daughter, Beverly Sue Burroughs, to Jeffery Linwood Skinner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Skinner of Winterville. The wedding will take place Feb. 29.

Mrs. Rawl Is Hostess To Patient Circle

On Wednesday afternoon, The Patient Circle of the King's Daughters and Sons had its first meeting of the year at the home of Mrs. E.E. Rawl, with Mrs. Clara Moye Shackell, president, presiding.

Mrs. Harvey Turnage reported on Christmas cheer provided some of the patients at Greenville Villa. She also reported that the Greenville Unit of the King's Daughters and Sons will furnish one room at the new hospital in memory of Mrs. Hortense Moye and in honor of her daughter, Mrs. Shackell.

It was announced that the mayor of Greenville has proclaimed this week as the King's Daughters and Sons Week.

The Cherokee Children Mission School, involving 45 children, is interested in learning more about the Bible, so the Greenville Unit voted to have several kits, containing seven lessons each, sent to this school.

Mrs. C.A. Bowen gave a talk on Founder's Day. She reminded the group that 90 years, ago the order was started.

Mrs. Rawl, assisted by Mrs. T.I. Moore, served refreshments.

Caucus Workshop Is Announced

Susan Long, assistant professor of finance in the ECU School of Business, will direct a workshop program at the fifth annual convention of the N. C. Women's Political Caucus on the East Carolina University campus Jan. 24.

Ms. Long Will conduct a session on finance, "Getting Credit for Your Cents," which is designed for caucus participants who wish to know more about credit, banking and investments.

A graduate of Syracuse University, Ms. Long holds the Master of Business Administration degree from the University of South Carolina and is at present a Ph. D. candidate at USC.

Before joining the ECU faculty she was a programmer and systems analyst for the International Manufacturing Corp., a life and health insurance salesperson, and senior financial analyst for the third largest bank in South Carolina.

"The Smoke-Filled Room" (delegate selection), by Danya Yon of Charlotte, NCWPC president, and Jane Patterson, chair of the Guilford County Democratic Party;

"Hat in the Ring" (campaign techniques), by Mary Hopper, public relations officer for the Mecklenburg Public Library and several N. C. women who hold political offices;

"Passing the Buck" (state and local level caucus financing), by Shirley Mrshall, Chapel Hill Mayor Pro Tem; and

"Uppity Women Unite!" (commissions on the status of women), by Betty Barber, executive director of the N. C. Council on the Status of Women and former officer in the N. C. Republican Party.

The workshops will run concurrently from 9:40 to 11 a.m. following the convention's opening session at 9 a.m. in ECU's McGinnis Auditorium.

Other NCWPC officers and state government leaders appearing on the program are Mildred McGrath, Greenville mayor pro tem, who will officially welcome delegates; Pat Wingler of Greensboro, officer of the N. C. AFL-CIO;

Grace Rohrer, secretary of the N. C. Dept. of Cultural Resources Martha McKay of Chapel Hill, NCWPC organizer and former Democratic Party officer; and Judith Donnalley and Nelson Crisp of Greenville, president and vice president of the Pitt County Caucus.

The convention is coordinated by Tennala Gross, first district NCWPC coordinator, and by the ECU Division of Continuing Education.

Featured guests at the convention will include women office holders on local and state levels, political candidates and National Women's Political Caucus chairperson, Audrey Rowe Colom of Washington, D.C.

The convention informally begins Friday, Jan. 23, with a fund-raising reception at the home of ECU Chancellor Leo Jenkins.

Further information about the convention is available from the Office of Non-Credit Programs, ECU Division of Continuing Education, Greenville.

His Heart Must Be A Cash Register

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My mother is a widow. She raised my brother and me alone, and it wasn't easy. She does janitor work nights and is barely able to make ends meet.

My brother and his wife are going away for a two-week vacation, and they asked Mom if she would stay at their place to look after their dog. Mom said she would. My brother wants to charge her $25 a week. He says, "Where else can she get free room and board with a free telephone and color TV for that little?"

He wouldn't have to provide food for Mom because she's on a special diet and she buys her own.

I told my brother he ought to be ashamed of himself, and he said I was the one who was wrong—Mom's $50 would come in handy on their vacation.

Who's right?

DONNIE

DEAR DONNIE: You are. Your mother should be paid for staying there. Furthermore, your brother must have a cash register where his heart belongs.

DEAR ABBY: My son is being married soon. His father and I have been divorced for two years now. Do we have to sit together in the church and stand together in the receiving line just as though we were still married to each other?

Neither one of us has married again, but he has a shack-up girl friend. Where does she fit in? She is the pushy type who would do anything just to get into the limelight.

If she shows up, would it be proper for me to haul her into the alley and give her a few wallops before the ceremony? I'd sure like to. Thank you.

GROOM'S MOM

DEAR MOM: If the shack-up girl friend shows up, resist the urge to haul her into the alley and give her a few wallops. She could haul you into court for assault and battery.

You and the groom's father should sit "with the family" in the church—and stand together in the receiving line.

DEAR ABBY: My niece, who is 14 years old, ran off with her boyfriend last week, intending to elope. The boy is 15.

My brother (the girl's father) is very upset about it. He called the police and had his daughter and her "fiance" brought back.

Now the question: These kids are very much in love and want to marry. My brother is opposed to the idea because they are so young. I say, as long as the kids have spent a week together, why not let them marry and see how it works out?

What do you say?

CONCERNED UNCLE

DEAR CONCERNED: I think the kids should grow up before assuming the responsibilities of marriage. Having spent a week together is not sufficient reason to permit two children to marry.

Engagement Announced

MISS BETTY JO WILLIAMS . . . is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Roy Williams of Rt. 3, Ayden, who announce her engagement to Leland G. Cox, son of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Cox of Cove City. The wedding will take place March 7.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, JANUARY 18, 1976

Your Daily HOROSCOPE
from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Think out a plan of action for the future which has considerable breadth of vision and imagination. Then take it to companions so it can be made workable in your lives.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Good day for creativity and looking into the future in a more optimistic manner. Get into that amusement activity that lightens your spirit.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Take steps to have more happiness and harmony at home. Keep alert for some new outlet that will be just what you need.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Out to the places that will help you raise your vistas considerably and get you in proper mental focus. Later be with congenials.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You can gain inspiration you need to become more successful in your line of endeavor, or a new one. Discuss with bigwig.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Go after your personal wishes and aims today, but be sure to dress well for best results. Make fine new contacts.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Know exactly what you want to do in the days ahead, then take the right positive steps in such direction. Inspire others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 21) Plan how to gain personal aims. Join group affairs that better your social life. Culture is important, so choose right groups.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Gad about socially; get into charitable work. A bigwig will appreciate your ability and give you backing you need. Meditate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get together with persons you really like for whatever activities are mutually enjoyable and helpful. Take mate along.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Follow hunches and you know how to solve that puzzling situation. Be happy with mate and forget any extramarital activities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Clear up any questionable points with others and feel happier instead of stewing about conditions. Get into civic work for success.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Do what will improve your environment and make you feel happier, bring more success in the future. Get apparel in good order.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have excellent talents that need to be nurtured early in life and should have a fine education so there can be much success in this chart and fame as well. There is the ability to think big and to get big here, and your progeny would do well in any government circles or with big corporations, enterprises, etc. Compliment for any good work done. Give right religious training.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, JAN. 19, 1976

Your Daily HOROSCOPE
from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You can expect something out of the ordinary today where practical activities are concerned, so be prepared to act intelligently. Take time to build up vitality.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Advice from an expert is needed in your line of endeavor. Make sure that machinery is working properly at this time.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) An associate can make it possible for you to engage in a recreational activity that appeals to you. Be cooperative.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Look to a close tie for assistance that can make working conditions more ideal. Strive to be more efficient.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Talk over with an associate how to have increased success in mutual projects. Plan a trip with a friend.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A family tie who is clever at finances should be consulted now before you engage in a new venture. Improve your health.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You have fine ideas for achieving greater success but should talk them over with trusted friends for best results.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You find that you are now able to handle private matters more efficiently. Don't let an ailment go unattended.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Good to consult a financial expert for a plan you have in mind. Show more thought and understanding for others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Good day to consult a higher-up and gain the backing you need. Plan your time wisely for the rest of the week.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Ideal day to come to a better understanding with allies. Add to your roster of friends those who can be helpful.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Handle important obligations instead of procrastinating. Show increased devotion to loved one. Relax tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Discuss future projects with associates and come to a better understanding than in the past. Think constructively.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be full of practical ideas and will be able to work out details of such with precision, so be sure to give the best education you can. With good religious training your progeny can be very successful.

Officers Of Housing Body

WASHINGTON, N.C.—At its annual meeting in Washington the Mid-East Regional Housing Authority re-elected Mrs. Christine B. Farrior of Williamston Chairman for the coming year. W. J. Lupton of Hyde County was re-elected Vice Chairman. Other members of the Board are: J. H. Oden, Beaufort County, Thomas Wilkins, Washington County, Milton A. Ward, Bertie County.

In other board action, it was reported that the Board of County Commissioners in Beaufort, Hyde, Martin, Bertie, and Washington have recently adopted a resolution concurring in Pitt County is becoming a part of the Mid-East Regional Housing Authority's jurisdiction. The Pitt County Board previously adopted a similar resolution. This information will be forwarded to the Secretary of State and the authority's charter will be amended to add Pitt County.

Also, the authority agreed to start interviewing developers and architects prior to submitting an application to the Department of Housing and Urban Development for new Section 8, housing in all six counties.

The authority presently has 340 units of low-income housing and plans to construct additional low-income housing in the rural areas of all six counties. H.U.D. will be advertising for housing applications later this year and the authority intends to submit a proposal for housing then.

Seek Clean Fuel In Coal Fields

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI) — Research personnel from the Pennsylvania State University will soon begin collecting samples of coal from deep and strip mines in three states to determine the appropriateness of certain coals for liquification and gasification.

The researchers hope to obtain 1,300 samples of coal within the next 10 years. They will examine the coal to determine if it can be turned into clean fuel. They also will determine the potential of various coals for use in furnaces now burning oil.

The researchers plan to visit mines in Virginia, Eastern Kentucky and Tennessee.

Keep Fresh Air Inside The Car

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Carbon monoxide in the low levels that are often found in the passenger compartment of a car can narrow the driver's field of vision, slow down his action time and decrease his ability to concentrate.

Even these small amounts of carbon monoxide can be lethal because they can cause serious accidents. The National Automobile Club advises motorists to avoid driving for long periods of time in heavy traffic and to keep fresh air circulating through the car on open roads.

Legal 'Blue Cross' Insurance Opposition Melting

EDITOR'S NOTE — Lawyers once objected to group legal insurance, but their opposition has melted away. "They've gotten the message," says an advocate of this new insurance. "It's good service, and it's needed."

By LEE LINDER
Associated Press Writer

For a dollar a month, and even less, thousands of unionized workers across America are obtaining a variety of legal services. Other people have formed groups that hire lawyers to serve the groups' members at cut rate fees.

Group legal service, often labeled Legal Blue Cross, is a fringe benefit that labor unions, have been putting high on their bargaining lists lately. Under it, members get legal help in preparing a will, securing a divorce, buying or selling a home, or filing a lawsuit.

The relatively new concept of obtaining the normally-expensive services of a lawyer, when one is needed, for a small monthly fee, has excited growing interest because:

—Seventy per cent of all Americans, mostly in the middle class, are either not represented or are under-represented by lawyers, say insurance companies.

—Lawyers and insurance companies want to tap this tremendous market, aware of the millions it can bring in new fees and premiums.

—Unions and other groups are constantly seeking new benefits.

Harold Cramer, former chancellor of the Philadelphia Bar Association, puts it this way: "The poor have free legal services (legal aid societies, court-appointed attorneys) and the rich can afford all kinds of legal protection, but what about the people with moderate incomes? Now they can get help at reasonable prices."

In the past three years, more than 6,000 plans, about a third labor-sponsored, have been started.

These plans are financed in various ways: Monthly contributions by employers ... Deductions of a dollar or two a month from employe paychecks ... direct payment from a union's treasury to lawyers ... premiums to insurance companies ... an annual group membership fee which entitles a group member to free telephone conversations with a lawyer and legal aid at reduced rates.

"There's a new plan being set up every day, for teachers, students, farmers, tenants, almost any kind of group you can think of," reports Sandy DeMent, executive director of the National Consumer Center for Legal Services.

There is at least one bar association-sponsored plan, in Utah, where 1,100 family subscribers pay $80 annually and have the services of members of the Utah bar.

In California, where more than one million persons have some type of legal insurance, lawyers are allowed to form groups and sell prepaid plans. The procedure circumvents restrictions against lawyers advertising their services.

One obstacle to even greater expansion of group legal service is the Internal Revenue Service, which hasn't ruled yet whether work provided by a lawyer under the plan or the contributions of an employer to legal insurance can be taxed as part of a subscriber's income. A bill before the last session of Congress would authorize tax exemption.

Despite the tax uncertainty, group legal services has its enthusiasts.

"I think is a wonderful thing," says Herbert Carswell, 41, a Philadelphia Recreation Department employe who is a member of District Council 33, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Workers. He now is getting the divorce he's wanted for nearly a decade.

"Five years ago a lawyer told me it would cost $600, and I couldn't afford that," he says. "Now all I have to pay is the court costs, $150.

John Becker also thinks legal insurance "is beautiful." He's president of a United Automobile Workers local in North Wales, Pa. He convinced the union to hire a lawyer two years ago to provide limited legal help for the 2,000 members at an annual cost of about $2 each.

"About 400 already have used it, and many still don't believe the lawyer can do the work free," Becker says. "But it's happening. For instance three years ago my daughter, Linda, paid $200 to a lawyer to help her buy a house. Gertrude, my other daughter, also a member of the local, used the union service recently and it cost her nothing."

Richard Kirschner, District Council 33's attorney, set up the legal services program for 20,000 members with funding of $1 a month for each member from the employer, the city of Philadelphia.

"It satisfies a very real need of the low and middle income individual who would not normally consult a lawyer," Kirschner says.

The District 33 plan, prepaid and with limited services, is similar to 4,000 other "closed panel" arrangements. That means members must use a designated law firm or specially-hired attorneys.

The "closed panel" plans are the most popular so far, mostly because their costs can be controled.

But there also are "open panel" plans. About 20 in various parts of the country provide for free telephone consultation with lawyers for a yearly membership charge of $5. Other legal services are obtained at reduced lawyer fees.

Another "open panel" plan is patterned after Blue Cross medical insurance. Subscribers pay from $4 to $12 monthly and then their lawyer expenses are reimbursed in accordance with specific schedules — so much for a divorce, so much for a will, so much for defense against a criminal charge.

William J. Kinney, marketing and development vice president at Stonewall Insurance, says "The basis of the coverage is defense. We're not reimbursing people to go out and sue other people."

Insurance Company of North America (INA) developed a group legal services plan in 1972, but hasn't sold a policy yet, though it has state government approval to sell in New Hampshire, Pennsylvania, Louisiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Missouri, Nevada, Utah, Colorado, New Mexico, California, Oregon, Washington, North and South Dakota, and Alabama.

"It is difficult to start a new product line," says INA's John Weaver. But he believes the new insurance eventually will catch on.

Miss DeMent, whose National Consumer Center is sponsored by the AFL-CIO, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, National Council of Senior Citizens, National Education Association, National Farmers Union, and others, says lawyers once vehemently objected to group legal insurance "but this opposition now has melted away or gone underground."

Gene Locks, a Philadelphia lawyer who serves members in three unions, says 70 per cent of the legal work he handles "probably never would have reached a lawyer in the first place."

Locks goes several times a month to the union halls where he confers with members seeking legal help.

"The group determines what benefits they want for the membership," he says. "They call the shots and tell the lawyers they hire the kind of services they want."

Utilization, however, is low — generally 10 to 15 per cent — and Locks believes that's because people in the group don't really know what they're entitled to despite the letters and brochures they get.

Had Women's Bank 57 Years Earlier

CLARKSVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — When the First Women's Bank of New York opened its doors in New York City Oct. 18, it was hailed as the first all-women's bank in the country.

But records have shown the First Women's Bank of Clarksville began operating Oct. 6, 1919, about 1 month before the enactment of the 19th amendment giving women the right to vote.

The bank was started by Mrs. Brenda Runyon, wife of a prominent physician in this community straddling the Tennessee-Kentucky line, because she wanted something to do with her idle time.

"Everyone from the janitor up to the president was a woman," said Frank Runyon, her grandson and a Clarksville lawyer. "It was organized as the first financial institution in the world to be conducted by women. Everyone connected with it was a woman, although they didn't restrict the sale of stock."

Mrs. Runyon got the idea for the bank from a businessman whom she asked for advice on what she could do with her spare time, according to a June 1920 article in Ladies Home Journal.

"Some time later he asked me to come to his office and there he astonished me by suggesting that I start a woman's bank," Mrs. Runyon was quoted in the article. "I told him I knew nothing about banking except how to compute interest. He suggested that I could learn."

The bank opened with assets of $15,000 and took in deposits totaling more than $20,000 during its first day of operation, according to local records. The grand opening wasn't without a small amount of frivolity as men were presented with cigars and women were given brightly colored flowers.

An all-woman board of directors was elected in January 1920 and within 14 months the bank was able to pay a small dividend.

The bank remained operational fornearly seven years, until Mrs. Runyon injured her hip and could no longer take an active role in its operation.

On June 9, 1926, it merged with the First Trust and Savings Bank, which is still operating.

The bank was not Mrs. Runyon's only interest. She was the first woman to serve on the local school board and persuaded officials to install restroom accommodations for women in the courthouse.

SURVIVAL MECHANISM

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Biologists say killing blackbirds — regarded in many areas of the United States as pests — is only a temporary solution since they possess a survival mechanism which causes increased production of young if the total population drops.

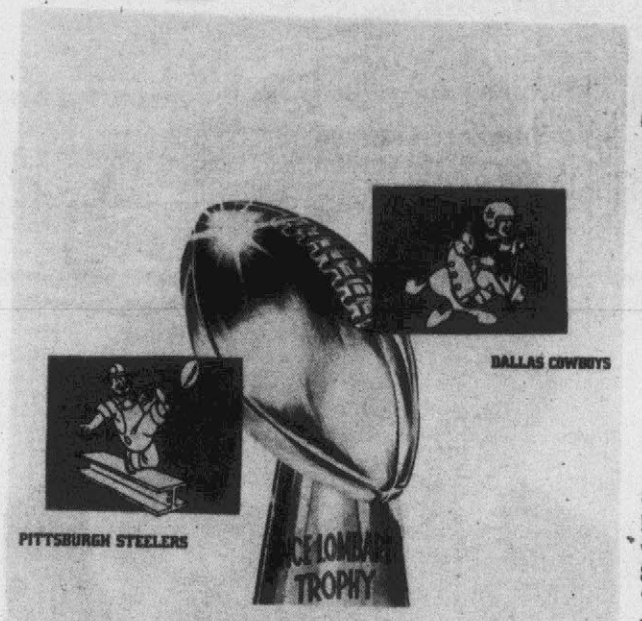
Super Bowl X Sunday On CBS



The Defending World Champion Pittsburgh Steelers return to Super Bowl X as the American Conference Champion where they will meet the National Conference Champion, Dallas Cowboys. The game that will virtually bring America to a stop as we take a break from life to cheer our team will be televised on CBS-TV, Sunday, January 18 at 2 p.m.

The World Champion Pittsburgh Steelers and their rugged, brilliant defense take on the rambunctious Dallas Cowboys, first wildcard team to make the Super Bowl, in Super Bowl X, pro-football's annual extravaganza. This year's game will be broadcast by CBS on Sunday, Jan. 18, at 2 p.m. from Miami, Fla.

Pittsburgh only gave up 20 points in two AFC playoff games against the Baltimore Colts and Oakland Raiders, two of the more explosive offensive units in the NFL. All three linebackers for the Steelers are All-Pro, and Jack Ham, Andy Russell and Jack Lambert performed exceptionally well during the playoffs.

Dallas defied all the odds-makers by upending favored Minnesota and Los Angeles, thus becoming the first "Wildcard" team to win the playoffs. Roger Staubach utilized the shotgun offense to perfection, and the young, hungry Dallas defense was an impenetrable wall against the Vikings and Rams, giving up only a total of 17 points.

If past Super Bowl contests are any guide, the Pittsburgh Steelers should emerge victorious. It is rare that a young, upstart team like the Dallas Cowboys win a Super Bowl. After all, critics point out, isn't it true that last year's Super Bowl victory gives the Steelers an edge on experience?

But a closer look indicates that the Dallas organization has experience where it counts. Roger Staubach has already led the Cowboys to one championship, in Super Bowl VI over the Miami Dolphins. Lee Roy Jordan is one of the most intelligent and mobile middle linebackers in the league. The offensive line has loads of experience and talent, with Ralph Neeley, John Niland and company erforming at All-Pro status.

Look for a low-scoring, close contest, with fumbles and interceptions possibly deciding the outcome. Both field goal kickers, Roy Gerela of Pittsburgh and Tony Fritsch of Dallas, are extremely accurate, and are also sure to be factors in the game.

While the Pittsburgh Steelers appear to have taken on that confident, Miami Dolphin-like air of satisfied success, the Dallas Cowboys are the young anxious club who are excited about their playoff victories. These two powerful ball clubs are sure to provide football fans with a thrilling conclusion to the 1975-76 season in Super Bowl X.

MacLaine Star Of Musical

Shirley MacLaine, three-time Oscar nominee and the star of last year's Emmy Award-winning special, "If They Could See Me Now," will star in "Gypsy In My Soul," a joyful musical, comedic and dramatic hour celebrating the theatrical chorus, whose members are representative of people in all walks of life. The special is to be broadcast Tuesday, Jan. 20, 10 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Lucille Ball is to guest star on the special (she and Miss MacLaine both began their theatrical careers in the chorus).

The word "gypsy" is the theatrical term for boys and girls of the chorus. The production opens with Miss MacLaine and Miss Ball and their gypsies rehearsing for their special. In the performance that follows, the show expands the concept to include all of us who may one day step out of our particular "chorus" and into a starring role. Whatever our aspiration, it is the hope of achievement which is the common bond between all of us.

Miss MacLaine is a four-time nominee for her starring roles in "Some Came Running," "The Apartment," "Irma La Douce" and "Two for the Seesaw." The actress also appeared in such musicals as "Can-Can," "What a Way to Go" and "Sweet Charity." She made her Broadway debut in "The Pajama Game," replacing the late Carol Haney, who had broken her ankle.

Shirley MacLaine stars in "Gypsy in My Soul," a musical, comedic and dramatic special celebrating the chorus "gypsy" (the theatrical term for boys and girls of the chorus.) The special, with guest star Lucille Ball, will broadcast Tuesday, January 20 (10-11 p.m.)

TV Bowl Kicked-Off

It's time for the annual TV Bowl, and some of the players didn't even get to finish the regular season. Their contracts were not not renewed by the owners. A few others are in the same boat, but playing out their options.

Pre-game warmups are about to begin, and one of the industry coaches is on the sidelines with one of the teams, giving a peop talk. Let's listen in:

"Ok gang, we gotta' good team now, a better group, so there's no reason why we can't go out there and win today. Man, I remember earlier 'When Things Were Rotten.' We'd put 'Fay' in and she never could score any points. 'The Montefuscos' never would come out to play. It interfered with their Sunday dinner. There were times I wanted to give McCallum the ball, but I never could find him. You'd think he was 'The Invisible Man,' or something.

"We tried 'Joe and Sons' in an effort to plug one hole, but they failed, too. 'Kate McShane' kept saying she had to go to the bar. I didn't know they held court that late in the day. 'Big Eddie' was slammed hard everytime he tried to move, and spent most of the time in 'Doctor's Hospital.' In fact, the whole part of the earlier season was a 'Medical Story.' It was ridiculous. 'Matt Helm' told me he was born on 'Beacon Hill' and when he opened his eyes, the first thing he saw was Howard Cosell, and he yelled, 'That's My Mama.'

"I should have sent them all packing, 'Three for the Road' all the way to the 'Barbary Coast,' or put them in a foster home with 'The Family Holvak.' I didn't have a 'Mobile One' in the bunch. They couldn't run, block or tackle. Now, let's see what you can do . . ."

"Grady" is opening at quarterback for the "Old Peacooks." "The Cop and the Kid" are right behind him.

"Barney Miller" is the opposing quarterback, and, of course, he'll play it for laughs. Foster Brooks is his 'tight' end.

"Baretta," disguised as "Carol Burnett," enters the game. There's a long pass from Mary Tyler Moore to Bob Newhart. "Petrocelli" is defending. Oh, what a collision. This is an "Emergency!" Someone call the "Medical Center."

Some are trotting off the field already. Wait a minute! This game is for "60 Minutes." Back comes the "S.W.A.T." team joined by "Joe Forrester" to form the old flying wedge. This is sure to help "Rhoda" score. There's an explosion. The "Swiss Family Robinson" pet volcano erupted to indicate halftime.

What a half-time show: the NBC movie, the CBS movie and the ABC movie. It will be midnight before they get this game over.

There's the second-half kickoff . . . "Cher" receives. Is she lateralling to Sonny? Not yet. They won't become partners again for a while, yet.

It's "Happy Days" on one sideline. They gather to "Welcome Back Kotter" who has been away in "The Little House on the Prairie" playing gin rummy with that con man, "McCoy." No delays, yells the ref, let's keep this game "Movin' On."

"Sanford and Son" have entered the game, but you can bet they won't get the ball and be the heroes. Archie Bunker will keep it "All in the Family." What's happened? Theball has become deflated. The "Switch" duo suspect "McMillan and Wife." Man, that's some "Police Story." To make everyone satisfied, "Hawaii Five-O" has been called in to investigate, but they do things only "One Day at a Time."

"Chico and the Man" finally show up near the end, but Tony Orlando is missing. Wonder if they'll find him by "Dawn"?

Well, back to the game. It's over. Already? Who won? You don't day! Nielsen is giving the scores . . . here it is . . . 19.8, 18.6, 17.3 . . .

HOLIDAY TRAVEL

Some cast members of the "Love of Life" daytime serial went home for the recent holiday season. Audrey Peters (Vanessa Sterling) spent the week after Christmas with friends and relatives in Florida. Deborah (Cal Aleata) was with her parents in Palm Beach soon after Christmas.

What's It All About?

"Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman", currently being seen on Ch. 9, at 4:30 p.m. Mon-Fri., is Norman Lear's innovative and slightly bent soap opera, and stars Louise Lasser in the title role, with Greg Mullavery, Mary Kay Place, Graham Jarvis, Doby Goodman, Debralee Scott, Victor Kilian, Philip Burns and Claudia Lamb.

This is a soap opera that can be taken on two levels. For those who love their soap operas straight, "Mary Hartman" offers the drama and pathos of the traditional soap opera. For those who like their television fare slightly bent, "Mary Hartman" is also laced with a wry sense of humor that is satirical, humanistic and realistic.

The series is set in the fictional town of Fernwood, Ohio, where the life and livelihood of the residents revolves around an automobile assembly plant. The heroine - Mary Hartman - is a befuddled housewife whose life seems always to be in constant turmoil. If she's not having with the waxy yellow buildup in her kitche, she's having trouble with her husband in their bedroom.

Sharing Mary's world in this droll scenario is her husband, Tom (Mullavery), their daughter Heather (Lamb), her parents Martha and George Shumway (Goodman and Bruns, respectively), her younger sister Cathy (Scott), her grandfather Grandpa Larking (Kilian) and her good friends Lretta and Charlie Haggers (Place and Jarvis).

Mary's all-American husband Tom works on the assembly line like most of the other residents of Fernwood. Tom has a lot more than his job on his mind, tho. He's also trying to protect his family from a mass murderer who struck in the neighborhood, and is also trying to explain to his wife - and to himself - why they've not had sex for weeks. Twelve-year-old Heather has her own problems. Some of them a bit abnormal.

Former Governor Terry Sanford of North Carolina will be one of the Candidates for the Democratic Presidential nomination who will be interviewed on "Meet the Press" Sunday, January 18 on NBC-TV.

Sanford On Meet The Press

"Meet the Press" will present interviews with four candidates for the Democratic Presidential nomination in a special one-hour program Sunday, Jan. 18. (Part one of this program was telecast on Jan. 11, when the other four candidates were presented.)

Guests on Jan. 18, will be Sen. Henry M Jackson of Washington; Sen. Lloyd Bensten of Texas; Rep. Morris K. Udall of Arizona; and former Gov. Terry Sanford in North Carolina, now President of Duke University. The program will originate in Washington, D.C.

"The two 'Meet the Press' programs are giving American voters, many of whom are unfamiliar with the Democratic candidates, a chance to size up eight out of the field of 10 before the primaries begin," said Bill Monroe, executive producer of the program.

He said invitations to appear on the broadcasts were declined by Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama and Sargent Shriver of Maryland, former head of the Peace Corps and former Ambassador to France.

Monroe will be moderator of the program which will air on NBC-TV.

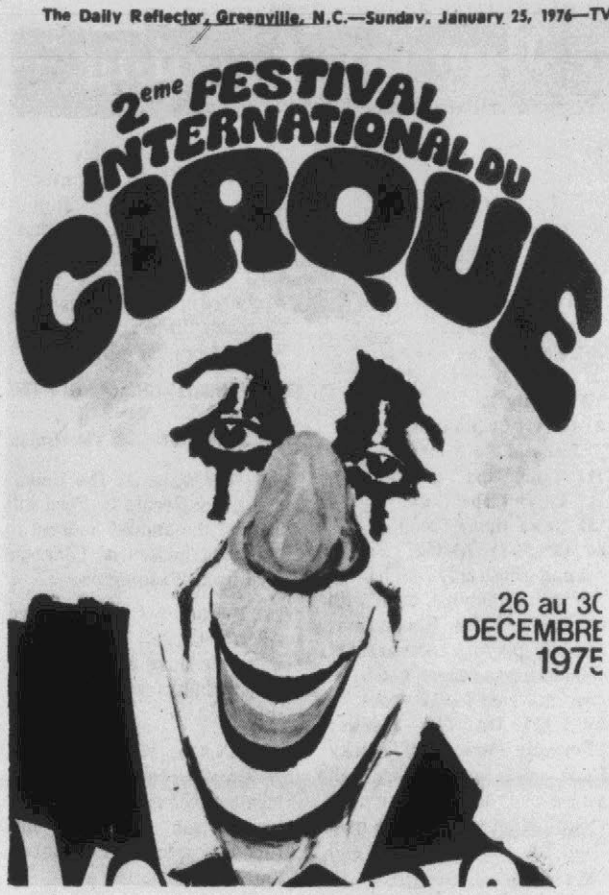
Circus Features 14 Great Acts

The "Monte Carlo Circus Festival," presenting 14 of the greatest acts in the world of circus, will be broadcast Sunday, Jan. 18, 8 to 9 p.m., on CBS-TV.

The gala event, hosted by Peter Graves, is the culmination of a five-day circus festival held annually in Monte Carlo. Initiated by Prince Rainier, a circus devotee, the "Festival" is the most prestigious event in the world of circus. A truly international gathering, the most spectacular circus performers from all nations were invited to Monte Carlo to participate in the all-star performance. This year, 40 acts assembled in the principality of Monaco, representing such countries as France, Holland, the United States, Italy and Mexico.

At the conclusion of the performances of Dec. 26, 27, 28 and 29, a jury of circus critics and aficionados, presided over by Prince Rainier and including, this year, Burt Lancaster and singer Mac Davis, selected 14 acts seen during the preceeding four performances which they deemed superior.

It is these acts, performing before a sold-out audience on Dec. 30, which will comprise the special. A highlight of the evening will be the presentation by the Prince and the Royal Family of statuettes and special awards to those artists demonstrating outstanding creativity and skill.



"The Monte Carlo Circus Festival," an hour-long special presenting 14 of the greatest acts in the circus world, will be broadcast Sunday, January 18 (8-9 p.m.) on Channel 3N-9-11. Hosted by Peter Graves, the special will feature acts deemed superior by a jury, presided over by Monaco's Prince Rainier, during the gala event.

Sunday Broadcast About New Jersey

A half-hour documentary about people living in rural isolation in New Jersey, "Walk a Country Mile" will be broadcast Sunday, Jan. 18, at 7 p.m., on UNC-TV. The program is an intimate look into the lives of three rural families, widely divergent in background and outlook.

One of the families is the Ramapo Mountain People, a close-knit community living in the abandoned mining town of Ringwood on the New York State border.

Dating back to the American Revolution and operated off and on for 200 years, the Ringwood mines closed in the late 1950's. The mountain people who had worked the mines for generations were left behind. They are still there, living in the old company houses, the majority without jobs or transportation.

Other segments concern the struggle of a Puerto Rican worker and his family, culturally and geographically isolated in a remote part of South Jersey; and an elderly couple, strongly attached to the land, who chop their own wood to heat their house and cart their water from a well.

"Walk a Country Mile" shatters the myth of the "easy-going country life." It reminds us that despite our increasing urbanization there is still a strong rural tradition, even in the most densely populated state in the nation. It makes you walk a country mile.

Godfrey Stars In Mystery

Arthur Godfrey's arrival on the "Ellery Queen" set to guest-star in "The Eccentric Engineer" episode turned back the clock for Tom Reese, who plays the recurring role of burly Detective Sergeant Velie on the series. (The episode will air Sunday, Jan. 18, 8 to 9 p.m., on NBC Channel 6-7.

This was the first time Reese had seen "the old redhead" since he was a contestant on Godfrey's "Talent Scouts" program 20 years ago.

"I was in New York at the time," Tom recalled, "trying to break through as a night club comic. Among other things, I did impressions of Humphrey Bogart, Vaughn Monroe and Billy Eckstein.

Arness In New Western

After pushing his way through the batwing doors of Dodge City's Long Branch Saloon as Marshal Matt Dillon of "Gunsmoke" for 20 years, you would expect James Arness to approach a new TV western with something less than enthusiasm.

Not so.

As Zeb Macahan, mountain man, in "The Macahans," the two-and-a-half hour sage of a pioneer family moving west that airs as a special movie presentation on ABC-TV Monday, Jan. 19, 8:30 to 11 p.m., on Channel 3W-5-12, Arness displays a verve that astonishes his colleagues.

"What I find so fascinating is Jim's total excitement about the project," exclaims Eva Marie Saint, another of the stars in the huge cast. "His feelings are so positive! It's unusual to find such enthusiasm in a man who has just come off a series after two decades. And there's not a trace of ego.

"At the beginning, when we were at the studio reading the actors who were vieing for roles, I found him to be very kind and warm.

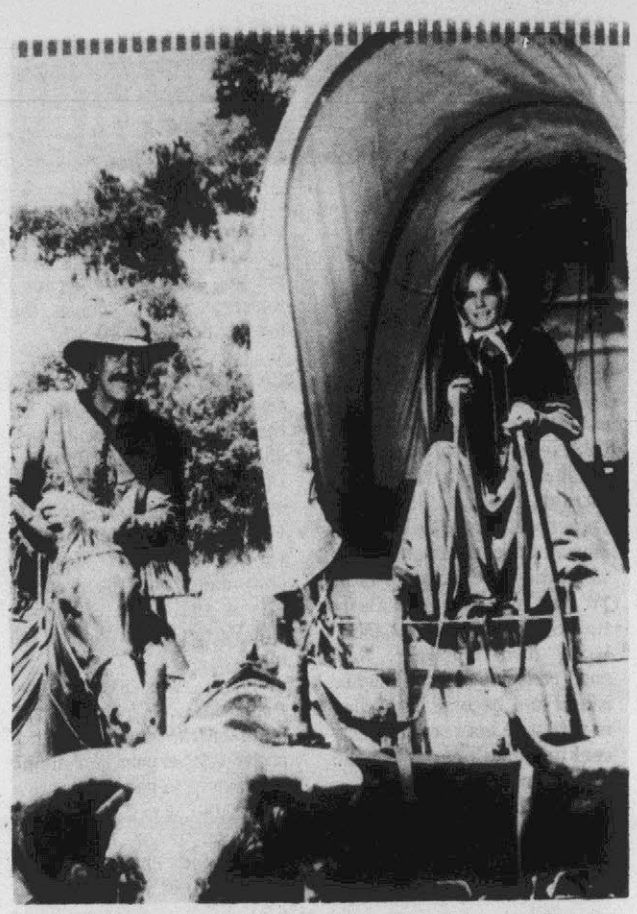
"He handled the reading and the actors, which is really a very tense situation, with a great deal of kindness and sensitivity. It was obvious that this film means a lot to him."

Arness, virtually unknown when he was selected for the Dillon role in 1955, became a TV star overnight. When the series headed for the last round-up after 20 years, executive producer John Mantley, who guided the last several years of "Gunsmoke," presented the idea of "The Macahans" to Arness, who was easily sold on playing Zeb.

"Two things about it appealed to Jim," says Mantley. "First, our desire to make this the most authentic western ever filmed for television, and, secondly, his role would be a complete departure from Matt Dillon."

As Dillon, Mantley points out, Arness was bound by the restrictions imposed on a U.S. Marshal, both in actions and locale.

"But Zeb is a totally free spirit," continues Mantley. "Matt couldn't go after someone because of personal vengeance. Zeb does, although his secondary motive is to protect his relatives. Matt had an image to maintain, so there was little chance for humor. Jim has great comedy timing, and the Zeb character will display this.



PRAIRIE SCHOONER . . . James Arness and Eva Marie Saint star as daring members of a Virginia family who trek west in a Conestoga wagon in 1861 in "The Macahans" airing as a special movie presentation on Channel 3W-5-12, Monday, January 19 (8:30-11 p.m.).

Wisdom Of Solomon, Children Of Divorce

"Almost 3,000 years ago, King Solomon demonstrated his wisdom by suggesting that a child be cut in half to satisfy two women, each of whom claimed to be the child's mother. The real parent, of course, withdrew her claim — and by doing so, established it."

On-camera reporter Barbara Walters recalls this story on "Children of Divorce," an NBC News special to be presented Monday, Jan. 19, 10 to 11 p.m. (This special was previously scheduled for Wednesday, Jan. 14.)

"Today, in courts throughout the country, the lessons of Solomon seems to have been lost," says Miss Walters. "Either that, or parents' values have changed. Now, many of them seem perfectly willing to divide their children.

"The process is known as a formal custody contest. Most parents avoid them, agreeing, between themselves, the issue of where and with whom the child will live. But about 10 percent of the divorcing parents take the matter to court. The parents pay the attorney's fees — but their children pay the price."

Ms. Walters notes that in nine out of 10 cases mothers are awarded custody of their children following a divorce.

"They get custody — and all the problems that go with it. What if fathers got custody? Financially, it might make sense. Men, after all, earn more than women. And there's growing agreement that fathers can meet their children's emotional needs, too. They can be just as loving as mothers. And the courts are beginning to recognize this."

It used to be, says Ms. Walters, that the only way a father could gain custody was by proving his wife an "unfit" mother. "Now," she says, "courts are starting to award custody on the basis of which is the better parent, assuming, in most cases, that both parents are 'fit.' This trend began in the West and has been moving eastward."

The TV special explores the impact of divorce on the children of separated couples. The opinions of judges, lawyers, psychologists and researchers, will be presented as well as the views of adults and children who are going through the divorce process.

'First Ladies' Diaries'

A personal portrait of the wife of the nation's 28th President is the subject of "First Ladies' Diaries: Edith Bolling Wilson," a 90-minute special to be colorcast Tuesday, Jan. 20, 1:30 to 3 p.m., on NBC-TV.

The program, part of NBC-TV's observance of America's Bicentennial celebration, covers a four-year period reflecting the tension prior to the First World War and the vocal controversy over the worth of the League of Nations.

Elizabeth Hubbard (of NBC-TV's daytime series "The Doctors") stars as Elizabeth Wilson and Michael Kane stars as President Woodrow Wilson.

The presentation, the final program in a series of three "First Ladies' Diaries" specials, explores the relationship between Edith and Woodrow Wilson, revealing how the President's wife became an effective stand-in for her husband during his weeks of recovery from a stroke.

The fact-based drama, told from Mrs. Wilson's point of view, opens on a romantic note as the widowered incumbent President meets the widow of a Virginia businessman. Though his political aides and advisers strongly protest the growing courtship and suggestions of marriage, President Wilson does propose and Mrs. Edith Bolling Galt ultimately accepts.

The script by Audrey Davis Levin relates the strength of a determined woman, who possessed no outstanding governmental background but who nevertheless quickly learned the ins and outs of the highest level of politics in the land.

During an era when women had not yet been granted the right to vote, Mrs. Wilson virtually took over the reins of the White House when her husband collapsed during a cross-country trip to promote American involvement in the League of Nations.

The director is Nick Havinga, twice an Emmy Award winner. He has directed two segments of daytime dramas including "Another World," "The Guiding Light" and "Search For Tomorrow." In addition, he has directed two segments of "The ABC Late Night Mystery Theatre," a television version of "Much Ado About Nothing" and "School For Scandal" on PBS's "Theatre in America" series.

The writer, Audrey Davis Levin, is an actress who won an Emmy last year for her script for television, a 90-minute ABC daytime special entitled "Heart In Hiding."

Hector Elizondo stars as Abraham Rodriguez, a Puerto Rican father, who holds three jobs to sustain himself and his two young sons, played by Anthony Perez (front and Steve Dennis Vasquez, in "Popi," new half-hour comedy series premiering Tuesday, January 20 (8:30-9 p.m.) on Channel 9.

'Popi' Debuts Tuesday Night

"Popi," a new half-hour comedy series starring gifted stage and television actor Hector Elizondo, will make its debut Tuesday, Jan. 20, 8:30 to 9 p.m., on CBS-TV. The new series replaces "Joe and Sons."

Elizondo plays a Puerto Rican father, Abraham Rodriguez, who holds three part-time jobs to sustain him and his young sons. His two sons, Junior and Luis, are played, respectively, by Anthony Perez and Steven Dennis Vasquez. Edith Diaz portrays Abraham's girlfriend, Lupe, who lives next door.

Elizondo won an Obie Award for his performance of God in the off-Broadway production of "Steambath." He also starred in the Broadway production of "The Prisoner of Second Avenue."

"Big Macs"

The term, "Big Mac," was in use long before the famous restaurant chain made it a household word for hamburgers. It originally referred to the king-sized corncob pipe smokes by General Douglas MacArthur.

Robert Redford stars as a ex-soldier who turns his back on civilization in the 1830s to become a fur trapper in the wilds of the Rocky Mountains in "Jeremiah Johnson," which makes its television premiere on Channel 3W-5-12 on ABC-TV's "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," January 18 (9-11 p.m.).

'Widow' In Premier Drama

Michael Learned stars as a woman trying to raise two young children and maintain her emotional stability after her husband dies in "Widow," a World Premiere film to be colorcast Thursday, Jan. 22, 9 to 11 p.m., on "NBC Thursday Night at the Movies," on Channel 6-7.

After her husband's death, Lynn Caine withdraws socially for a period of time. Later, at a party, she meets Richard, an engaging and eligible man.

At first the relationship is satisfactory, but eventually the memory of her late husband, Martin, casts a shadow over the new friendship. In addition to the emotional upheaval, Lynn learns that Martin's extended illness exhausted their savings and she is left with virtually no money.

The teleplay by Barbara Turner is based on "Widow," Lynn Caine's best-selling novel about her own experiences. J. Lee Thompson directed.

Made In Paris

Ann-Margret stars as a vivacious fashion buyer in "Made In Paris," a gay romantic comedy with Louis Jourdan, Edie Adams, Richard Crenna, and Chad Everett of "Medical Center," on "The CBS Late Movie" Monday, Jan. 19, on Channel 3N-9-11.

Sent to Paris to buy the latest fashion designs, Ann-Margret, as Maggie Scott, meets the city's leading designer (Jourdan), an American newspaperman (Crenna), and her boss' son (Everett). All three fall in love with her while showing her the sights and moods of the French capital. The story is set against a gay background of lively songs, dances and spectacular apparel.

Redford Stars As 'Jeremiah Johnson'

Robert Redford stars as an ex-soldier who turns his back on civilization in the 1830s to become a fur trapper in the wilds of the Rocky Mountains in "Jeremiah Johnson," a television premiere on "The ABC Sunday Night Movie, Jan. 18, 9 to 11 p.m., on Channel 3W,5,12.

The movie was filmed entirely on location in the mountains of Utah, and Cue magazine critic William Wolf said the film "gloriously captures the majestic desolateness, the danger, and the primitive beauty of the wilderness," resulting in "a heroic document of the pioneer spirit."

Angry Baretta Speaks Out

Motivated principally by fear of governmental figureheads, the TV medium now maintains a tight, binding grip on all shows containing violence—once referred to as 'action'. Once the gunshots and punches are counted (with the excess number eliminated), what finally comes across the TV screen strongly resembles make-believe instead of real-life.

Robert Blake, who stars in ABC-TV's "Baretta" (Wednesdays, 9 to 10 p.m. on Channel 3W,5,12), is one TV cop who is uptight about these restrictions, and he's frank and candid about the dilemma.

"I ain't gonna do a show which shows that killing is fine. But when a man is hurt, he hurts. They say 'why do you have to show blood in a scene?' I said I'm teaching them it hurts. They think they are responsible. That's irresponsibility. They are teaching violence," states Blake.

The blunt-speaking actor isn't the only one who's angry. There are others—network executives included—who feel that this false picture of actual violence could lead impressionable youngsters to feel that the wrong way of life wasn't so bad after all.

"The focus now is on how many gunshots you have, not on content. I try to tell the moral of a show."

He continues with "There is a lot of sex and violence in the Bible, but nobody condemns it. The whole premise of kid shows is violence."

Does Blake, the perfectionist, like his own show? He replies: "I can live with what I do in 'Baretta.' I like the show much better now. It's important to feel you do some good. Maybe one kid won't stick a needle in his arm, maybe one won't leave home and wind up a wreck, because of what we have shown. I am not a politician or a brain surgeon. I'm a circus clown in the public eye. I'm here to entertain."

Vereen Voted Top Entertainer

Ben Vereen has been voted "The Entertainer of the Year" by the 8000 members of the American Guild of Variety Artists, becoming the first entertainer in the six-year history of the AGVA awards to win in three separate categories. He was also voted "Song and Dance Star of the Year," and "Rising Star of the Year."

Batter Up!

Members of the cast and crew of the comedy series, "On the Rocks," which takes place inside a minimum security institution, recently played baseball against an unusual team.

The opposing nine was composed of members of "The Seventh Step Foundation," a group of ex-prisoners. The final score was "The Seventh Steps" - 21, "On the Rocks" - 13!

Landon's Policy: 'Be Nice'

It's "Home on the Range" where you never hear a discouraging word—but it's "Little House on the Prarie" where you never hear a word spoken in anger.

Michael Landon, star and executive producer of the hit NBC-TV series, has some strict rules for the "brass" on his production staff and, boiled into two words, those rules say, "Be Nice."

Any executive on the show who tries to get his way be yelling at people is calmly told to cool it.

"The very worst thing you can do to a man is to make him think he is a coward," says Landon. "If a guy needs his job in order to feed and clothe his kids, he'll put up with a lot of abuse before he fights back. I have seen many men mentally shattered by some big-mouth who screamed and yelled in order to get his way. Most of those men did not deserve the abuse but they had to have their jobs, so they kept their mouths shut—and that made them feel like cowards.

"When a man knows he's being wronged and that he should yell right back at his boss but is afraid to because he fears being fired, then he has just convinced himself that he's a coward and that is one of the worst things you can do a person," says Landon.

"I don't blame a man for keeping his mouth shut in circumstances like that, but he will blame himself, and that is horrible.

Landon, who also directs many of the popular Wednesday night (8 to 9 p.m.) programs, practices what he preaches and the cast and crew thank him with hard work and total honesty.

Now and then crew members will make a mistake which can cost several hundred dollars to correct—but they never hesitate to bring the mistake to the boss's attention, because they know he doesn't demand or expect absolute perfection at all times, as do many other directors who explode at such times.

The Walton family, stunned, watches as their home burns, in a special two-hour episode of "The Waltons," to be broadcast Thursday, January 22 (8-10 p.m.) on Channel 3N-9-11.

Burbank Alarmed By False Alarm

"To judge by public reaction, the blaze was even more realistic than we had anticipated," reports Andy White, producer of "The Waltons," about the arson job his special-effects crew performed on the Walton family home during the filming of the special two-hour episode of the series to air Thursday, Jan. 22, 8 to 10 p.m., on CBS Channel 3N-9-11.

In the story, a fire destroys the Waltons' old house, inflicting equally devastating damage on the emotions and cohesive spirit of the now-homeless family.

For the filming, as in the script, the conflagration took place at night, lighting up the sky and causing a flurry of calls to the Burbank (Calif.) Fire Department from alarmed residents of the area near the Burbank Studios, where "The Waltons" is filmed.

"Of course," White points out, "we had given the Fire Department advance notice of our project and had obtained the necessary official permits. Furthermore, a Fire Department inspector and the studio fire department equipment were on hand to monitor our operations."

Nevertheless, White noted, the Fire Department checked the studio at least twice, to make sure the fire that alert citizens were reporting and "The Waltons" fire were one and the same.

This episode, "The Burn Out," was written by John McGreevey, who has penned 17 scripts for the series. He's also created more characters - excluding, of course, the Waltons themselves - they are the products of Hamner's writing and creativity.

This is McGreevey's second two-hour special for "The Waltons," the first having been "The Easter Story."

"I had written 'The Easter Story,'" he says, "and discovered the luxury of having two hours to deal with all the regulars - in fact I think 'The Easter Story,' because it was two hours, was a turning point for the series - it gave us the opportunity to explore each one of the kids, give each one of them a running story and resolve it and explore their characters."

McGreevey adds that the notion of pulling that "marvelous underpinning," the house, put from under the family was especially intriguing.

The characters he has created for "The Waltons" include a number of girls who have provided love interest for John-Boy, played by star Richard Thomas, and the wife of storekeeper Ike Godsey, played by Joe Conley.

Widmark In Late Movie

Richard Widmark and Karl Malden star in "Take the High Ground," an intriguing story of an infantry sergeant who molds raw recruits into formidable fighting men, on "The CBS Late Movie" Thursday, Jan. 22, 11:30 p.m., on Channel 3N-9-11.

Thorne Ryan (Widmark) is a U.S. infantry sergeant whose job is to transform average, easygoing American boys into a powerful fighting force. He longs for combat duty, but for the seventh time is given a batch of raw recruits to train. Embittered by his failure to get a transfer to combat duty, he deliberately risks his life. In one instance, he stands between one of the recruits and a target during rifle practice. His bitterness and resentment even force him to lose Julie (Elaine Stewart), the girl he loves. When faced with the reality of his situation, Ryan arrives at a surprising conclusion.

Moving Home

After spending six straight months on the road for all-location filming of "Movin' On" (Tuesdays, 8 to 9 p.m., on NBC Channel 6-7), series star Claude Akins looked forward to being home.

"I really hate leaving the family for such a long stretch," Akins said. "I don't like missing the interesting times of my kids growing up."

To film episodes for its current second season, "Movin' On" has been moving on through eight eastern and southern states and the District of Columbia.

"Last year, when we were filming the show in the western states, I could at least fly home occasionally to spend Sundays with the family.

"I'll admit this isn't the kind of show you could do on a sound stage in Hollywood, but I'm just lucky I have an understanding wife who can take full charge of raising our kids," Akins said.

HOLLYWOOD—Lee Majors and his wife Farrah Fawcett-Majors have reportedly separated, although neither are denying nor confirming the rumor. In fact, just a few days before the rumor surfaced, Farrah was on the set of "The Six Million Dollar Man" and she and Lee looked like anything but a couple on the verge of splitting.

Jaimie Lynn Bauer of daytime's "The Young & The Restless" openly admits she would like to marry and begin a family, but currently she's sharing her time with two men, whom she'll only identify as Mark and Henry. And Jaimie adds, "Neither are the husband-type."

Gossip has it that despite the outward signs of gladness by Cher Allman regarding her pregnancy, privately the singer isn't overjoyed by the pending arrival of her second child.

Look for Julie Kavner of "Rhoda" to have her own spin-off series next season. There are no details of what the show will be like, but apparently a pilot script is in the works.

Franks Sinatra had a grey, cashmere suit tailored to his measurements in London for a mere 1500 bucks. It was flown personally by a TWA courier so it wouldn't get crushed by baggage handlers.

"Tonight Show's" Ed McMahon will receive the Globe and Anchor Award from the National Marine Corps Scholarship Foundation in April. Ed's the fourth recipient of the award which goes to dedicated, well-known Americans for their patriotism and service to their country.

'Mary's Dream'

"Mary's Incredible Dream," starring Mary Tyler Moore in a unique and lavish hour-long musical presentation, containing 30 glittering production numbers that together depict a musical story of man's past, present and future on this planet, will be broadcast Thursday, Jan. 22, 10 to 11 p.m., on CBS Channel 3N-9-11.

The highly innovative special, which relies entirely on music, song and dance to spell out its theme, features outstanding guest stars, including Ben Vereen, a Tony Award winner for his performance in Broadway's "Pippin"; singer-musician Doug Kershaw; the Manhattan Transfer; Arthur Fiedler conducting the Hollywood Bowl Symphony Orchestra; the Roger Wagner Chorale; and the California Boys Choir.

Miss Moore (who is regularly seen as star of the multi-award-winning series, "The Mary Tyler Moore Show") steps out of her familiar role as Mary Richards into a fantasy world of dreams in the special. She portrays in dance a wide range of characterizations, from Eve in the Garden of Eden to a symbolic Goddess of War to Everywoman.

Vereen is also seen in a variety of roles, including that of Lucifer. Doug Kershaw plays Adam and Everyman. The Manhattan Transfer figures prominently throughout the special, providing songs fitting the varying moods and scenes. Supporting the stars are more than 250 dancers, singers and musicians.

Although Miss Moore is known to television audiences as a comedienne from her roles in "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and, earlier, "The Dick Van Dyke Show," she began her professional career as a dancer at the age of 17.

Donny and Marie Osmond will star in their own one-hour musical comedy-variety series, "Donny and Marie" which will premiere on Channel (3W-5-12, Friday, January 23 (8-9 p.m.). Major guests will be spotlighted in spectacular settings, among them an ice rink where 18 members of the Shipstad and Johnson Ice Follies will perform. The five other Osmond Brothers and 12-year-old brother, Jimmy, also will put in appearances on the show.

Osmonds Premiere

"Donny and Marie," a musical comedy-variety series featuring these two talented members of the famous Osmond musical family, premieres Friday, Jan. 23, 8 to 9 p.m., on ABC Channel 3W-5-12.

Marie, only sister in the Osmond clan, made her recording debut with the release of her first single, "Paper Roses." The record was an instant hit, and — within the next several months — Marie was named the best new female vocalist in the annual country music poll held by Cashbox, the record-business magazine. "Paper Roses," incidentally, was originally a country-music song, but was high on the easy-listening and rock-record charts as well.

The Osmond family first began to show a real interest in music as a result of an idea their father, George, had. After sensing that the family as a whole was not enjoying enough time together, he came up with plans for a 'family night.' The children would sing songs or dance for their parents, and they'd all tell jokes and stories. Mrs. Osmond would cook a special dinner, and before that they'd pray together. The idea worked so well that the Osmonds still — in spite of their numerous concert-nightclub-recording dates — observe this 'time together' almost weekly.

Originally, "The Osmond Quartet," comprised of Donny and Marie's older brothers, were the first to hit the big time. The two younger members of the family would sit on the side lines and watch their brothers perform.

Donny finally joined the group in 1969, and the name was then changed to "The Osmond Brothers."

After a five-year stint on the "Andy Williams Show," the group finally decided to 'go it alone.' Their first recording, "Movin' Along," wasn't much to talk about, but "One Bad Apple" was a over-whelming success.

What's Up Doc?

Barbra Streisand and Ryan O'Neal star in an outrageous salute to the days when comedy was king and the laughs flowed freely in "What's Up, Doc?," a television premiere on "The ABC Friday Night Movie," Jan. 23, 9 to 11 p.m., on Ch. 3W-5-12.

Peter Bogdanovich directed the zany romp, and Chicago Sun-Times critic Roger Ebert said, "Bogdanovich proves himself a master of screwball comedy — a genre which, until just now, everybody thought was dead." Judith Crist found the movie "a barrel of carefree laughs" that "captures the screen comedy essences of all the decades from Keystone on up."

Audiences obviously agreed; the movie grossed some $16 million in its first year of release (1972).

Striesand and O'Neal play out the looney tunes and merry maladies (cq) of the topsy-turvy screenplay as a shy and stuffy college professor from Iowa (O'Neal) meets an eccentric student (Striesand) who chomps carrots and asks the immortal question, "What's up, doc?," at every available opportunity.

Their unlikely relationship — unlikely to him, unavoidable to her — leads to such perfectly abnormal scenes as Miss Striesand hanging by her fingertips from a hotel window, a waiter calmly serving dinner while the room burns down around him, an exploding television set and a car chase that outppoeyes Doyle.

Grandpa on "Hee Haw"

"Hee Haw's" Grandpa Jones visited "The Waltons" set, and made a deal with Grandpa Walton (Will Geer) to guest on "Hee Haw."

Slither?

A slither is, er. . . kind of a slide with body English. Or, how about a long slip with curves?

Either way, it sounds like a maneuver adroitly performed in "greasy kid stuff" and represents the hit theme of the "CBS Friday Night Movie," Jan. 23, 9 to 11 p.m., on Channel 3N-9-11. The film stars James Caan, Sally Kellerman and Peter Boyle.

James Caan is cast as the thick-witted hero looking for the fortune promised him by an embezzler. Unfortunately, however, his quest for the hidden fortune leads him straight into double-trouble, and he soon realizes that he was much better off behind bars.

Now, just how does some sneaky, snakey footwork relate to the movie?

'Dick knew Harry.
Someone killed Harry.
Harry and Barry were friends.
So Dick met Barry.
Then someone got Barry too.
And now he's after Dick.
Slither.
We all have to sooner or later.' "

Sher paused and leaned back in his chair, then continued the lesson. "Our hero was created by Rick (Richter). He's not bright, but not dumb — sort of an average guy who was once a high school football hero. but has not had anything good happen to him in the last 10 years.

"He's naive, believes in the American dream — a Don Quixote whose windmills are the bizaree, crazy people he meets along the way."

The situations he stumbles into are sometimes funny, somethmes dangerous. They all seem impossible for him to escape from. S, how does he do it?

"Slither, naturally," beamed Sher.

Special For Savalas

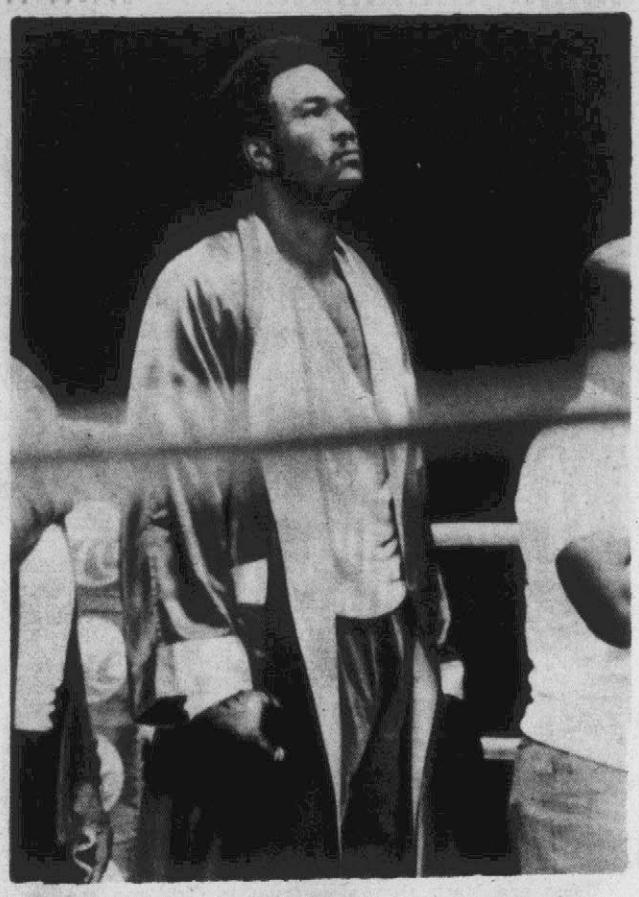
ACTRESS MOVES IN CIRCLES

Veteran actress Ann Shoemaker came out of retirement to play the role of Harry Truman's mother-in-law, Mrs. Wallace, on the recently televised special, "Collision Course." Miss Shoemaker remarked to fellow cast member E.G. Marshall (who played Truman) that she had played Sara Delano Roosevelt in both the stage and screen versions of "Sunrise at Campobello." She quipped, "I move in presidential circles."



Former World Heavyweight Champion George Foreman hopes to start his comeback trail with a bout against ranked contender Ron Lyle in Las Vegas, to be televised live and exclusively by ABC Sports on "ABC's Wide World of Sports," Saturday, January 24 (4:30-6 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Foreman-Lyle Fight Slated

ABC Sports will televise exclusive, live coverage of the heavyweight fight between former World Champion George Foreman and ranking title contender Ron Lyle from Caesars Palace, Las Vegas, Nevada, Saturday, Jan. 24, 4:30 to 6 p.m., on "ABC's Wide World of Sports."

The bout will be Foreman's first comeback attempt, aside from exhibitions, since he lost his heavyweight crown to Muhammad Ali, (only the second fighter to regain the heavyweight crown) in October, 1974, at Kinshasa, Zaire, Africa (a fight later televised exclusively on 'Wide World').

George Foreman and Ron Lyle are both rated as top contenders by The Ring Magazine and many boxing authorities believe this fight may mark a turning point in the former champion's career.

Since his loss to Ali, George Foreman has fought only exhibitions. However, the powerful young ex-champion is now under the tutelage of the legendary Gil Clancy, who guided Emile Griffith to four world title, and who has handled such other top fighters as Jerry Quarry and Jorge Ahumada.

Foreman's illustrious career began when he captured the gold medal in heavyweight boxing in the 1968 Summer Olympics. George waved a small American flag at the conclusion of the bout, clearly illustrating his patriotism.

His big chance came when he met heavyweight champion Joe Frazier in Kingston, Jamaca on Jan. 22, 1973. Foreman scored one of the most stunning upsets in boxing history when he floored a shocked Frazier six times in two rounds and became world heavyweight champion.

George then went on to demolish highly regarded Ken Norton in a quick two-round decision in Caracas, Venezuela, before succumbing to the quicknsss of Muhammad Ali.

Commenting on his Zaire loss to Ali, Foreman recently said, "Africa is past. My mental attitude is the best it has ever been. I'm in good shape at 216 pounds. The Bicentennial year, 1976, is going to be a good year for the country and for me."

Earlier this year, as seen live and exclusively on ABC, Ron Lyle was defeated by Muhammad Ali with an 11th round TKO in Las Vegas. On September 13th, Lyle met No. 6 ranked Ernie Shavers in Denver and came off the canvas after his first and only career knockdown to KO Shavers in the sixth round.

Michele Will Tell

TO J. H. SCALES, ROCK HILL, S.C.: "Birth Of A Nation" was filmed in 1914. Walter Lang (in black face) starred, but the names most remembered are D.W. Griffiths (1875-1948), director, and Billy Bitzer (1874-1944), cameraman. The monumental melodrama of the American Civil War was supposedly the biggest money maker of that time. It's become something of an embarrassment to Hollywood because of its anti-Negro bias. Various versions have been re-issued with sound effects. The film was adapted from Thomas Dixon's novel "The Clansman."

TO MRS. S. B. DAVIS, LYNCHBURG, VA.: Phillip Chancellor left "The Young And The Restless" to further pursue his theatrical career.

TO DENIS DICKERSON, GREENVILLE, N.C.: Is Elvis Presley married? No. Nor is he romantically involved with Cher. He'd probably like to be, tho. Who wouldn't!

TO LOUISE T., FLORENCE, S.C.: "Alias Smith and Jones" will not be back on TV. Pete Duel ('Smith') committed suicide, and Ben Murphey ('Jones') later starred in "Griff."

TO S. REDMAN, STAUNTON, VA.: Is "Grady" (Whitman Mayo) really that old? You betcha!

TO T. HUSSIER, CHERAW, S.C.: Enid Markey, now seen in the "Gomer Pyle" re-runs, did star as Jane in the first "Tarzan" movies.

TO R. F. LASSITER, KITTRELL, N.C.: Ellen Stewart left "As The World Turns" not by choice. The 'powers that be' felt that her role wasn't vital to the continuing plot.

Olympic Sportscasters

An outstanding team of ABC Sportscasters headed up by such names as Jim McKay, series host of "ABC's Wide World of Sports"; Chris Schenkel, host of ABC's Olympics coverage in 1968 and 1972, and the versatile former New York Giants football great Frank Gifford has been assembled for ABC Sports' exclusive television coverage of the 1976 Winter Olympic Games, it was announced recently by Roone Arledge, President of ABC Sports.

Mr. Arledge said, "All three of these excellent sports reporters has previous Olympic experience, and we will be calling upon their considerable talents, plus those of other staff sports broadcasters and our expert commentators as well, to bring U.S. viewers the best possible coverage of the 12th Winter Olympiad."

The three sportscasters who will form the nucleus for ABC Sports Innsbruck broadcasting contingent have impressive credentials.

Tar Heels Meet Wolfpack Sunday

Any basketball team that has to cope with the losses of players like David Thompson, Monte Towe, Moe Rivers and Tim Stoddard would expect to go through a long, rebuilding year. But the North Carolina State Wolfpack and their highly successful coach, Norm Sloan, doesn't see it that way. The Wolfpack challenges ACC rival North Carolina on Sunday, Jan. 18, beginning at 5 p.m. on Channels 3N-5-6-9.

"I'm very pleased that our recruiting year went as well as it did," says Sloan, who directed the Pack to the 1974 NCAA championship, "and I believe that with our returning players and our new people, we have the talent to compete successfully in our league."

"Of course," adds Sloan, "we're faced with a different situation than last season in that inexperience will be a definite factor. Nonetheless, we've been competitive right from the beginning and have developed into a fine team."

Muscular Kenny Carr is a key to the 1975-76 Wolfpacks' hopes of capturing an ACC title. The 6'7", Hyattsville, Md., native was the team's number two scorer last season behind Thompson, averaging 13.8 points and finishing third in rebounding with 201 in 28 games. As a freshman, Kenny was an all-ACC tournament selection.

Teamed with Carr is veteran Phil Spence, a 6'6" senior forward whose all-around play contributes mightily to the State cause. He topped the squad in rebounds last season with a 10.0 average, and was third in scoring at 13.1.

The center position was a weak spot for the team last season, but freshman Glenn Sudhop, a tower at 7'1" from South Bend, Indiana, is counted on to provide inside board and defensive strength.

Two other newcomers, Darnell Adell and Al Green, figure prominently in the Pack's backcourt strategy. Green is a superb shooter who averaged 29,8 points and seven assists for Western Arizona Jr. College last season, while Adell has exceptional quickness and is a strong leaper. Returning sophomores Craig Davis and Bobo Jackson, both who had playing experience last season, provide the backcourt depth.

State fans look forward to the kind of season that provided the Raleigh school with their first NCAA Basketball Championship ever in 1974. Thoughts of David Thompson floating in air or Monte Towe firing a pinpoint pass may still fill the eyes of Wolfpack followers, but the 1975-76 contingent just may help N.C. State forget the heroics of the past.

Forward Phil Spence of N.C. State battles a North Carolina player for a rebound in one of last season's contests. The Wolfpack meet the Tar Heels in an ACC duel on Sunday, January 18 at 5 p.m. on Channel 3 N-5-6-9.

Pro Bowlers Begin 15th Tour Season

Jan. 24—$65,000 Denver Open (3-4:30 p.m.) Colorado Bowl, Denver, Colo.

Jan. 31—$70,000 King Louie Open (3:30-5 p.m.) King Louie West Lanes—Overland Park, Kan.

Feb. 7—$65,000 Cleveland Open (3:30-5 p.m.) Buckeye Lanes—North Olmsted, Ohio

Feb. 14—$70,000 Fair Lanes Open (1-2:30 p.m.) Fair Lanes Towson—Baltimore, Md.

Feb. 21—$100,000 AMF Pro Classic (3-4:30 p.m.) Garden City Bowl—Garden City, N.Y.

Feb. 28—$100,000 Midas Open (3:30-5 p.m.) Bradley Bowl—Windsor Locks, Conn.

Mar. 6—$85,000 AMF Dick Weber 5-Star Open (3 to 4:30 p.m.) Don Carter's Tamarac Lanes—Tamarac, Fla.

Mar. 13—$65,000 New Orleans Lions Open (3:30-5 p.m.) Pelican Lanes—Metairie, La.

Mar. 27—$65,000 St. Louis Open (3:30-5 p.m.) Dick Weber Lanes—Florissant, Mo.

April 3—$80,000 Miller High Life Open (3:30-5 p.m.) Red Carpet Celebrity Lanes, Milwaukee, Wisc.

April 10—$80,000 Monro-Matic Open (3:30-5 p.m.) Imperial Lanes—Toledo, Ohio

April 17—$125,000 Firestone Tournament of Champions (3:30-5 p.m.) Riviera Lanes, Akron, Ohio

The format for ABC's live telecasts of pro bowling's big-money tournaments will remain the same as in the past. After week-long competition in each tournament, the five leaders advance to the finals. The first televised match sends the fifth-place finisher against the number four man, with the winner advancing to play the third-place bowler. The winner of that match then meets the second place bowler, and the winner of that match faces the leader as determined in the preliminary rounds.

During the series of bowling telecasts, ABC Sports will once again offer a bonus of $10,000 to any bowler rolling a perfect 300 game on a live telecast.

Steelers' Semi-Dynasty

The word 'dynasty' is a dangerous word in professional sports these days, akin to a corny joke. With the tremendous balance in all pro sports, few feel that any team can build a dynasty to rival the old Yankees, Packers and Celtics, all old teams who nearly completely dominated their respective sports ten and twenty years ago.

Well, the 1975 Pittsburgh Steelers want to at least establish a 'mini-dynasty' in the NFL by taking their second consecutive Super Bowl crown. Super Bowl X will be broadcast on Sunday, Jan. 18 at 2:00 p.m. on CBS-TV.

The Steelers humbled the Oakland Raiders in last week's AFC Championship for the second straight season. Coach Chuck Noll's powerful club will have to play their finest, however, to win their second Super Bowl.

Terry Bradshaw typifies the growing maturity of the Steelers. Now a veteran in his sixth season, Terry has shunned the 'dumb' image that plagued him his first few seasons. He enjoyed his finest regular season, as did the Steelers, courageously playing with a bad leg.

The real key to the offense, however, is Franco Harris, possibly the best all-purpose back in the league. Franco is constantly looked toward in crucial situations, whether on the ground or in the air. He is nicely complimented by Vietnam veteran Rocky Bleier, who always plays with tremendous effort and zeal.

Lynn Swann is one of the swiftest ends in the league, with excellent hands and an innate ability to get on a pass pattern. Frank Lewis and tight end Randy Grossman do equally excellent jobs.

Every fan knows about the Steel Curtain Defense of the Pittsburgh club, especially the front four of L.C. Greenwood, Joe Greene, Dwight White and Ernie Holmes. But the strongest asset of the entire team may just be their linebackers.

All three, Jack Helm, Andy Russell and Jack Lambert, are All-AFC. All of them! Enough said.

Mel Blount, J.T. Thomas, Mike Wagner and Donnie Shell support the defensive backfield, again doing an obviously superb job.

Few weaknesses, tremendous overall strength, excellent clutch players—sound like the basis for a dynasty? People in Steeltown, U.S.A. certainly believe so.

Super Bowl Special

'Pinocchio'

Danny Kaye and Sandy Duncan will star in a special 90-minute musical version of Carlo Collodi's classic, "Pinocchio," to be presented Saturday, March 13, on CBS-TV. Kaye will portray the kindly wood-carver Gepetto, and Miss Duncan will play the title role of his long-nosed, boy-like puppet who comes magically to life.

Jack Rothman and Bernie Wohl are producers of the special, which tells the tale of the little puppet person who first came to life in Collodi's imagination in 1880 and has delighted youngsters and youthful-hearted adults ever since.

The whimsical fantasy, to be directed by Ron Field and Sid Smith, with an original musical score written and conducted by Emmy Award-winner Joe Raposo, recounts the ingenuous adventures of Pinocchio from his creation and subsequent visit from the Blue Fairy, who brings him to life but warns him he must acquire truth, courage and unselfishness before he may become a real boy. It follows him through his encounters with a cruel puppet master, a wicked fox and a cat, a bewitched sojourn on Pleasure Island, where wayward little boys turn into donkeys, and finally a descent to the ocean floor to rescue poor Gepetto from inside a whale.

In addition to Kaye and Miss Duncan, the special will feature a number of top stars in 'cameo' roles, with casting to be announced shortly.

Conway Twitty: You Have to Have Lived To Sing From the Heart!

Remembering "Ari"— Backward Glimpses Of the Real Onassis

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR HARRY CHAPIN, composer-singer

● I think that, besides being very stupid, they're also terribly selfish. Jimi Hendrix and Janis Joplin could have given the public years and years of their talent had they not been addicts. My father, a jazz drummer, was a great admirer of Charlie Parker, the jazz saxophonist who also ended his life prematurely—through heroin. I was seven at the time. I remember Dad saying, "If you're really interested in music, don't put a filter between yourself and your senses." I never forgot those words. Musicians who are on dope don't take their work seriously. Geniuses who self-destruct are criminals. It's a crime to deprive the world of their art.

FOR HENRY KISSINGER

Why do you advocate that the U.S. give up control of the Panama Canal Zone?—Mildred Stork, Canton, Ohio

● The U.S. is seeking to establish a new and mutually acceptable relationship between our two countries whereby the U.S. can continue operating and defending the canal for a reasonably extended period of time. A new treaty would enable the U.S. to devote its energies to the efficient operation and control of the waterway and would leave other matters to the Panamanians. Moreover, it would hopefully provide a friendlier environment in Panama.

FOR VIKKI CARR

Do you think it's wrong for a woman to ask a man out?—B. B., Kenosha, Wis.

● No. A few years ago I realized a woman didn't lose her femininity if she invited a man to have a cup of coffee with her (and life has been much more pleasant as a result!). I think most men enjoy being asked for a date, rather than always having to be the ones who ask.

FOR MUHAMMAD ALI

Do you ever think of retiring?—J. B., Boise, Idaho

● I think about it only because I'll have to—in two years. That's after I've taken on Frazier, Foreman and Norton. When I give up the ring, I'll go into the ministry.

FOR PRINCESS MARGARET

● Its vastness. It's like 50 separate countries, all joined together. And when I realize that Britain can fit into either Oregon or Wyoming with room to spare, it makes America seem even bigger.

FOR ARLENE FRANCIS

Are you forgetful?—Bob Smith, Stockton, Calif.

● Only about glasses. I find them in the oddest places—like the freezer. And I belong to the brigade of those who push their specs up on their hairline, then spend the next two hours looking for them. In fact, I'm so remiss that, as a precaution, I keep spares all over—at the office, even at friends' homes—so that I'll never be caught without them.

FOR O. J. SIMPSON

I understand you might retire from football at the end of this season. Any special reason?—Jenny Baker, Mano, Ohio

● My plans are not yet finalized, but if I retire from football now, it will be because of my acting career. In 1975 I was offered a couple of real juicy parts, but I couldn't accept them because of football. I enjoy acting—it's stimulating and it's something I can do for the rest of my life.

FOR BILLY DEE WILLIAMS, star of "Mahogany"

How do you feel about films that have racial overtones?—Kenneth Myers, Savannah, Ga.

● I don't like them, and I wouldn't be in one if I could help it or unless it was absolutely necessary. Movies in which whites and blacks are against each other are not for me. I did it once, in "Final Comedown," and that was enough. The way to smooth out differences is by playing to people's intelligence, not their ignorance.

FOR SALLY QUINN, newswoman

You always seem to be in controversial situations. Tell me about your first one.—S. Reed, Washington, D.C.

● At 15, I had a date with this terrific hockey captain. It was snowing when he picked me up. He sped off and I asked him to slow down, but he called me chicken and went even faster. The car skidded and I said, "Either you slow down or I'll get out." He stopped the car, so I got out and walked home. I had a better chance half-frozen than completely dead. He never dated me again. I didn't care—consideration is more important than looks.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

Reading about Janet Lennon in FAMILY WEEKLY recently reminded me that the Lennon Sisters haven't been on the Lawrence Welk show for ages. What happened?—R. G., Gary, Ind.

Peggy Lennon

● According to Peggy Lennon, eight years ago, when the girls started marrying and raising families, they needed more money. They asked for a raise, but Lawrence Welk's policy is not to exceed union scale (then $210 a week). So they left. Welk discovered the girls, and Peggy stresses there were no bad feelings when they walked out. They haven't been in touch since the breakup, but they feel grateful to the bandleader for putting them "on the map," and are still extremely close to Welk's son, Larry. Peggy, Kathy, Janet and Dianne believe leaving the Welk show was a wise decision. They felt stifled singing the same kind of song week after week. "On the show we were children," said Kathy. "When we left, we became adults."

Through Halls of Love and Power, A Search for the Real Onassis

By Nicholas Gage
Author of "The Bourlotas Fortune"
(Holt, Rinehart and Winston, $8.95)

"He would come home and the moment he came in the door he would begin to tear off his clothes and throw them on the floor. Sometimes he would even throw himself on the floor and go to sleep right there on the carpet. An hour later he would be completely refreshed."

I first met Aristotle Onassis in 1969 when he was trying to negotiate a contract to build a $7 million refinery and industrial complex in Greece. I was then working for The Wall Street Journal and Onassis agreed to grant me an interview in Athens. To me, as a fellow Greek, Onassis had always been a puzzle. I had been proud of his success but disappointed by his apparent selfishness. With all his millions he had never donated a single school, hospital or library to Greece.

As the interview progressed, my suspicions began to be reinforced. "I'm a businessman," he told me at one point. "I'm out to make every million I can." I left the interview convinced that what made Onassis tick was simply lust for money.

But I later learned that there were many more sides to the man than I first suspected. For one thing, although he never openly gave to charity in his lifetime, he secretly did hundreds of charitable acts. As I learned more about him, I began to be fascinated by the contradictions. He was short and physically unappealing, but he mesmerized some of the world's most sought-after women. He was considered ruthless in business, but other shipowners told me he never could fire anyone who worked for him. He was envied by all the world, but his life was in the end a bitter disappointment to him.

My fascination with the mystery of Onassis finally led me to write a novel about Greek shipowners. My research took me through England, France, Greece and the Greek islands, talking to many Greek shipowners and their wives, children and mistresses. The result was a book called "The Bourlotas Fortune," which focuses on the competition between the old established Greek shipowners and an ambitious young upstart, like Onassis, who challenged their power and revolutionized the shipping business.

I talked with people who had known Onassis as an employer, a schoolmate, a business rival and a friend. Each disclosed a piece of the puzzle and slowly a picture began to form. I learned, for example, that Onassis' chief motivation was not greed but a sense of loss. He had spent his youth as the son of a well-to-do merchant in Smyrna in Asia Minor, and when the Turks attacked the city in 1922, massacring Greeks and Armenians by the thousands, his uncle and beloved grandmother perished and Onassis and the rest of his family were forced to flee.

Wide World

Aristotle Onassis: He knew instantly what women wanted him to be and to say.

"Onassis came from a family that was very well off, and suddenly he found himself poor--a refugee," Constantine Gratsos, Onassis' closest friend for almost 50 years, told me. "He wanted to recapture what he had lost, and he did it beyond his wildest dreams."

I also caught glimpses of Onassis' superhuman energy, his genius for business and his tremendous persuasive powers. "His energy was amazing," one of his chief aides in Greece told me. "He could go for two or three days without sleep and show no signs of fatigue at all." In Paris, Ingeborg Dedichen, who lived with Onassis from 1934 to 1946, told me what he was like after coping with a grueling business crisis. "He would come home and the moment he came in the door he would begin to tear off his clothes and throw them on the floor. Sometimes he would even throw himself on the floor and go to sleep right there on the carpet. An hour later he would be completely refreshed."

When talking about Onassis, people

Doris Lilly Remembers: Ari Was Selfish, Childish and (Doggone It!) Attractive

By Doris Lilly
TV Reporter and Author of "How to Marry a Millionaire"

Aristotle Onassis was the kind of man who could sign a contract with disappearing ink, never marry the women who really loved him and eat raw onions for lunch. He was also one of the stingiest men in the world. But, doggone it, he was attractive.

One night Ari and I were having dinner at El Morocco and a Greek friend of his gave me some worry beads. I liked them. Not gawdy, but sweet. Later, Ari, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr. and I drove over to P. J. Clarke's—a gregarious New York saloon that caters to alcoholic lovers, insomniacs, or both. A pair of seedy-looking hippies stopped by our table to gape, and Ari instructed me to give them my worry beads. I hesitated. "Don't worry," he crowed, "I'll send you some really good ones tomorrow." Sadly, for me, tomorrow never came. And when I reminded him of his oversight some weeks later, he shrugged and looked away.

Onassis and Miss Lilly at El Morocco, the New York night club, in the 1960's.

Howard Hughes, would pretend he was deaf when he didn't want to answer you. In actual fact, Howard's hearing is sharper than that of a cocker spaniel's. That man can hear a Kleenex drop.

Like so many successful men of my acquaintance, Ari needed little sleep. I asked him about this and he told me, "All I need is about three hours a night. I can stay up with no sleep at all for two days. Then I go to bed and sleep for 24 hours straight and wake up refreshed." He didn't know it then, of course, but this is a symptom of myasthenia gravis, the paralyzing nerve disease that took his life. But even if he had known, it wouldn't have made any difference. Ari lived life to the hilt. He never missed a beat.

Aboard the lavish Christina, Ari appeared more impressive than on land. Taller even—more handsome. He was secure in his winged, sea-girt citadel. The crew danced around him like a pack of ring-tailed monkeys. He wallowed in the spectacle. During lunch, which was generally doused in spiced lukewarm oil, Ari came into his own. (Later, Jackie brought fruit aboard—no doubt to allay an epidemic of scurvy.) Ari banged on the table and told ribald jokes. He reveled in the boat's appointments. "Look," he said, fingering the arm of my chair, "see, see, there's a hook there to hang your handbag." Marvelous. "Look at those cigarettes," he hollered, "see, see, they're named Old Sailor." Big laugh from all sides. The staterooms were named after Greek Islands. The room the ladies used to "freshen up" was called "Lesbos." Funny! In spite of all this ribaldry, ladies were instructed to wear dresses at lunch. Ari despised trousers on women. (Apparently he changed later, because that's all Jackie ever wore.)

But there was such honesty about this man, such naivete, that you couldn't help marveling at his ability to amass that fortune, to achieve his celebrity. But again—he was attractive, in spite of it.

Those great, round olive eyes were blotted out by his sunglasses—black shades that he wore at breakfast, lunch and dinner. Did he wear them in the bathtub? I know of someone who can answer that—Ingeborg Dedichen. When Ari met Ingeborg he was a struggling young beginner. Her father, a powerful Norwegian fleet owner, helped give him his start.

Says Ingeborg: "Ari was fearless, cool and level-headed. He demanded military obedience and was insanely jealous." To punish her for going out with an Italian, Ari forced her to eat spaghetti at every meal for two weeks. They stayed together for 12 years. But, although Ingeborg loved him, eventually he married Athina Livanos, the daughter of the fantastically rich Greek shipowner—Stavros Livanos.

Maria Callas loved him, too. When he left her to marry Jack Kennedy's widow, Maria said, "First I lost my weight, then I lost my voice and now I've lost Onassis."

But, damn it, in spite of everything, Ari Onassis was one of the most attractive men in the world. A genius? Make it three-fifths genius and two-fifths sheer fudge.

How Nature Fights Cholesterol Clogged Arteries Blood Pressure Dangers

Scientists Discover Body's Natural Defenses Against 3 Big Killers

By E. L. Robinson

Did you know that Nature blessed your arteries with a self-cleaning system? That natural forces war against lifeless matter forcing it out of your body? Recently, Medical Scientists were shocked to discover that scores of so-called "healthful" foods can interrupt nature's wonderful defense mechanisms . . . that those "good-for-you" foods actually contain substances that could cause dangerous cholesterol sludge. Doctors warn that this scummy, lifeless matter may choke arteries, hamper blood flow, and damage the heart. Right now, millions are suffering from cholesterol-clogged arteries. Yet they don't even realize it! What a pity! If they only knew about the PROTEIDE-PLUS diet, their arteries would tend to clear themselves!

As far back as 1950, medical scientists began extensive, searching investigations into the role of foods in cholesterol build-up. Thousands of victims of strokes and heart attacks were diagnosed, interviewed and carefully studied. Over 800 basic foods were analyzed. Close to 5000 laboratory tests and even autopsies were performed. From this mountain of world-wide research came startling new discoveries. Now-at-last the missing link between cholesterol, high blood pressure and heart trouble had been found. And most significant of all, it had been proven beyond doubt, that a wholesome PROTEIDE-PLUS diet was absolutely necessary to reduce cholesterol sludge in the arteries.

Now scientists know that certain foods containing cholesterol and saturated fats are not necessarily harmful correctly prepared. But when processed incorrectly, they become downright dangerous to the body. They know that cholesterol scum can become hardened like chalky soap powder, sticking onto artery walls. With passing time, it may choke the arteries, ending with crippling disease.

That's why it's so essential to use the wholesome PROTEIDE-PLUS diet of the right foods. Prepared properly, these delicious, truly healthful foods avoid burdening the blood circulatory system. Your arteries are helped to clear themselves. It's all so simple when you know the facts.

Now there is a safe, unbelievably easy plan that you can use at home—and it really works-whether you're 25 or 75. This plan involves no drugs, crazy diets or special treatments. It's yours to use without a penny's extra cost. Yet it brings the blessings of more health to your entire family. You'll all eat meals that taste wonderful. Yet these PROTEIDE-PLUS meals are made with economical, every-day foods sold in your local supermarket. And they're amazingly fast and easy to cook!

Some day everybody will adopt this simple, yet wonderful PROTEIDE-PLUS method. But why wait? Benefit from these great discoveries now—instead of in ten years. The new, 1976 edition of the famous Astor Scott Report gives you all the facts in plain English. So simple—even a schoolboy can understand it! Entitled "Cholesterol — The Invisible Killer", this fearless book dares tell it like it is about cholesterol. Pulls no punches on regular or processed foods, blocked arteries, etc.

Yes! You can trust this great report. It explains clearly and simply how to bring down dangerous cholesterol levels . . . how to reduce high blood pressure . . . how nature tends to clear out arteries automatically. You receive real inside facts on angina, ear noises, dizziness, colitis, stomach problems, poor blood circulation. Explains the significance of those strange, yellow lumps inside the eyelids.

This bold book tells you which foods to avoid at your local market . . . which foods to pick for better health . . . the effect of the PROTEIDE-PLUS diet on your complexion and body. You also learn of tasty, satisfying meals that are prepared quickly—without fuss or hard work in the kitchen.

Early Warning System Guards Against Heart Attacks

This nationally famous Early Warning System alone is easily worth the price of this book! Shows you how to recognize nature's early warning message of an impending heart attack from hours to days ahead! Gives you time to get quick, competent help to abort the attack! Written in plain English. Profusely illustrated. Created by a great doctor. Has already saved thousands of lives. Every family needs this system—now included in this great book.

A Search for the Real Onassis

who knew him best invariably used the word "genius." Andreas Lemos, a shipowner and historian who lives in Athens, told me about Onassis' revolutionary innovations in the shipping business–for example, financing ships with other people's money. He would obtain a long-term charter from an oil company for a not-yet-built supertanker and then use the charter as collateral to finance the building of the tanker. He also pioneered the idea of registering his ships under flags of convenience to avoid taxes and government regulations.

But it was Onassis' ability to bend men or women to his will that most impressed those who knew him. "He had such a strong presence and he could talk brilliantly on any subject," said a Greek woman who was close to the family. "He could convince you of anything."

Tina Livanos

Jacqueline Onassis

Wide World

Maria Callas

Women were always drawn to this complicated man–certainly not by his physical appearance. And his wealth wasn't the whole answer either, for he broke a number of hearts before he was rich. Even after he made his millions, there were many men as wealthy as Onassis who could not captivate a Maria Callas or a Jacqueline Kennedy.

"He had a great gift, a real genius, for charming people," Ingeborg Dedichen told me. "He could sit down at a table with a woman and know instantly what she wanted him to be and to say."

Onassis would set about stalking a woman who interested him with the same single-minded persistence that he applied to cornering a lucrative shipping deal. He could be the most attentive and generous suitor in the world–a quality which appealed to young Tina Onassis, whose father, Stavros Livanos, was famous for his penny-pinching ways. Onassis courted the 16-year-old girl with jewelry inscribed T.I.L.Y. (for "Tina, I love you") and after their marriage showered her with expensive presents.

To Maria Callas, Onassis showed a will as strong as her own. He charmed the fiery-tempered diva to the point where she gave up her career for the ten years she spent with him.

For Jacqueline Kennedy, Onassis revealed another facet of his chameleon-like personality. To her he was all-attentive, comforting and protective. According to a woman who was friends with both of them, "He managed to make her feel totally secure and pampered, as if she were the only woman in the world. And this is what Jackie needs."

In a word, Onassis could be anything to any woman, and that gift outweighs wealth, looks or sexual prowess.

Like the ancient Greek hero Ulysses, and many Greeks after him, Onassis was torn between love of home and family and the need to roam the world at will. According to Gratsos, who knew him from the time he was 24, "He was a wonderful family man. He loved his children more than anyone I've ever known. But he wasn't meant to be married; he was born to be a bachelor. He was a man who moves, who takes nothing and goes when he feels like it. To such a man, every woman he becomes involved with eventually becomes a burden."

Even Jacqueline Onassis found this to be true according to a woman friend of hers. She told me about riding with Onassis and his wife in Athens one day when Onassis suddenly, without explanation, told the driver to stop and let him out. While Jackie stared after him in surprise, Onassis continued on foot, staring into windows, greeting passers-by and generally enjoying his freedom.

As he grew older, Onassis began to think of his empire as a monument to his name. His son Alexander was the heir to the throne and he would, in Greek fashion, name his first son Aristotle, thus perpetuating the line through eternity. That's why Alexander's death was the greatest tragedy that could befall Onassis. "After his son died, he lost his will to live," said Gratsos. "He worked harder in order to forget, but the loss of his son crippled him."

Onassis was a student of all things Greek, especially classical Greek literature. He must have reflected ruefully, as he slowly lost his long battle with myasthenia gravis, on what became of all the Greek heroes who aspired to immortality. Immortality belonged only to the gods. Whenever a mortal was rash enough to seek it for himself, he was inevitably struck down for his hubris, or pride. Like his hero Ulysses, Onassis had had quite a journey–a trip which had included the greatest success, power and drama the world can give. But he also had been guilty of the overreaching pride–the hubris–that has always been the downfall of man. No doubt Onassis realized near the end that he had climbed too far toward the peaks of Olympus. FW

A UNIQUE OPPORTUNITY FOR COLLECTORS OF ART IN PRECIOUS METAL

The National Preservation of Wildlife Association and The Hamilton Mint Proudly Present

THE AMERICAN WILDLIFE COLLECTION

A Limited Edition of Pure Silver Ingots

A Single Minting of 50 Magnificent Proof Ingots, Limited to Just 10,000 Sets in .999 Fine Silver.

HERE IS A MAGNIFICENT TRIBUTE to the grandeur of America's wildlife. The Hamilton Mint, together with the National Preservation of Wildlife Association, announces the minting of a new collection of Pure Silver Ingots, portraying the beauty and diversity of the land animals, birds and sea life that inhabit America.

A COLLECTION OF BROAD SCOPE

"The American Wildlife Collection" Series of 50 ingots is one of the most comprehensive collections ever issued by The Hamilton Mint. It combines superb visual beauty with lifelike portrayals of each animal.

Among the native wildlife represented will be: the Wild Horse, the California Condor, the Gray Whale, the American Bison, the Wolverine and the Florida Manatee—all 50 subjects will comprise a fascinating panorama of nature for the naturalist as well as the collector.

A TREASURY OF MASTERPIECES

Each gleaming proof ingot will contain a full ounce (480 grains) of .999 fine silver, the finest and purest silver available. The image areas will be in frosted bas-relief, dramatically set against a brilliant mirror-like background. The entire set will contain 24,000 grains (over 4 troy pounds) of pure silver, more than the average family accumulates in a lifetime.

YOUR OWN PERSONAL SERIAL NUMBER

Your "American Wildlife" ingots will be custom minted to your order and will bear your own personal serial number plus The Hamilton Mint Hallmark. Serial numbers will be assigned in the order that applications are received, with the lower and potentially more valuable numbers going to the earliest subscribers. You will also receive a Certificate of Authenticity, certifying the limited edition status and precious metal content of the series.

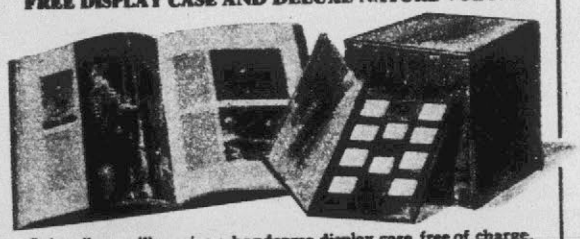
A SINGLE LIMITED MINTING WITH GUARANTEED PRICE PROTECTION

The edition will be strictly limited to just 10,000 proof sets in silver, issued at the rate of two-a-month for a period of 25 months. Once this edition limit has been reached, the minting dies will be destroyed, thus safeguarding the integrity of the edition.

The original issue price for each ingot will be just $14.95, and this price will be guaranteed to subscribers over the entire issue period no matter how high the price of silver may rise. And, a portion of the proceeds of each sale will go to the National Preservation of Wildlife Association, a non-profit organization dedicated to protecting our wildlife.

Please remember that there is a strict limit of 10,000 proof sets, so prompt action is essential if you wish to be included within the edition limits.

FREE DISPLAY CASE AND DELUXE NATURE VOLUME



Subscribers will receive a handsome display case, free of charge, to house the entire Collection. Also at no cost, you'll receive a special bonus, "Nature Atlas of America," a beautiful 255 page volume with 361 full color photographs and illustrations. This handsome book is a large 8½" x 11" and has a deluxe library binding.

ARCHIVE EDITION: 24 KT. GOLD ON PURE SILVER

You may also order these ingots in extravagantly beautiful 24 Kt. gold on .999 fine silver. Only 5,000 sets will be minted, thus making this edition quite rare. Each ingot will also be individually serially numbered and hallmarked and each will cost just $19.95.

Announcing an extraordinary Bicentennial tribute to the States — Official First Day Covers of

The Flags of the Fifty States

In America — for perhaps the first time — flags were banners of the People themselves. Symbols of their hopes, aspirations, and ideals. With Independence those flags became the emblems of thirteen Independent Sovereign States, deriving their powers from the consent of the people themselves. The perfect embodiment of independent spirit, traditions, determination, and sense of destiny which the Declaration of Independence proclaimed.

History remembers, for instance, that Virginia's Flag, which shows Virtue with her foot on Tyranny, was inspired in 1776 by George Mason's suggestion that his State's motto should be a defiant Sic semper tyrranis (thus always to tyrants). And that New Jersey's buff flag recalls the color chosen in 1779 by George Washington for the uniforms of New Jersey's regiments fighting for Independence.

Now, two centuries later, the thirteen flags have grown to fifty. Each intimately woven from the fabric of America's proud history.

An unprecedented event

It is fitting that as a part of the Nation's Bicentennial Celebration, the United States Postal Service will issue on February 23, 1976, an unprecedented series of fifty different Official Commemorative stamps portraying The Flags of the Fifty States. This will be the first such series to honor all fifty state flags, and like all firsts, certain to command the special attention of collectors everywhere.

Available to you: the First Editions

The assembled Governors of all fifty States and other leading citizens will gather in the Nation's Capital on February 23 to inaugurate the new stamps. At special ceremonies, first editions of the new stamps . . . First Day Covers . . . will be officially certified by the coveted, one-day-only, First Day of Issue postmark of our National Capital's Post Office. These will be but a small fraction of the total number of stamps eventually printed and available to the general public.

Appropriately, Fleetwood, America's oldest and largest purveyor of First Day Covers, will issue The Flags of the Fifty States in one complete collection of fifty Official First Day Covers. The first fifty collections have been reserved for the Archives of each of the fifty States. Identical collections are also available now to private citizens on an advance reservation basis.

A remarkable collection

As befits such a series, each will be extraordinary in every respect.

The individual cachets will portray one great citizen from each State who, under an Act of Congress, has been honored in the National Statuary Hall of the United States Capitol in Washington. These are men and women "illustrious for their historic renown or for distinguished civic or military services" to their State and Nation. They are the proud sons and daughters who have given substance to the vision of our Declaration of Independence.

A deluxe collector's album included

Collectors will also receive, without additional cost, a handsomely bound collector's album, with protective dustcase. To enhance the historical and educational value of this collection, an authoritative reference guide will be provided with biographies of the citizens honored on the cachets. And the fascinating history and significance of each state Flag.

A single, genuinely limited, edition

The Flags of the Fifty States will be issued only once — on the precise First Day of Issue, and only as a complete collection. The distinctive postmark will certify to you that it can never be issued again. The original issue price for the complete collection is $70, and you may pay for it in its entirety now, charge it to your MasterCharge or BankAmericard Charge account, or pay for it on a convenient installment program.

A collection of timeless significance

The Flags of the Fifty States deserve an honored place in your home. As constant reminders of the great and unique contributions which each of the States have made to the Nation born two hundred years ago this July 4th. And as a legacy which will continue to inspire you, your children, and their children for generations to come.

Subscription deadline: February 15

To take advantage of your opportunity to acquire this collection, your order should be postmarked no later than February 15, 1976 — the last date on which Fleetwood can guarantee acceptance of your order. Applications should be sent directly to Fleetwood, 1 Unicover Center, Cheyenne, Wyoming 82008.

WORLD GLOBE © RAND McNALLY © 1975 FLEETWOOD

Crafted expressly for this series, each of the fifty different cachets will pay tribute to the State's most distinguished citizen today honored in the National Statuary Hall of the United States Capitol.

Our National Capital's Post Office will officially postmark each First Day Cover. Available only at Washington, the coveted First Day of Issue indicia will forever certify the one day and the one place the first edition of the new stamp was inaugurated.

Each of the fifty Official commemorative stamps will be issued by the United States Postal Service pursuant to law. Since stamps will be issued only on February 23, 1976, artists' concepts are used herein for illustrative purposes.

Star Chat

By Peer J. Oppenheimer

Conway Twitty:

"I don't have the same lifestyle that a lot of other stars have. I enjoy the "down home" type of living—reading, fishing, doing things with my kids—not going to big parties."

"You Have to Have Lived To Sing From the Heart"

The story goes that when a young man named Harold Lloyd Jenkins first tried to break into the music business, he was advised that he should not use the name Harold Lloyd because of Harold Lloyd, the movie comic. His manager thought the name "Conway Twitty" would be different. They chose it from a map showing Conway, Arkansas, and Twitty, Texas.

That was many years, three movies and millions of records ago. Since then, Conway Twitty has successfully made the jump from rock and roll to country-western superstardom. Yet when he walked into the Sheraton Universal Coffee Shop recently, I had a hard time recognizing him. Straight-laced, middle-aged, he looked more like an accountant than a man of such a varied and colorful background. . . .

FAMILY WEEKLY: Is it true that your father was a riverboat captain on the Mississippi and that you learned to play the guitar sitting in the pilot's house, or is this just a publicity story?

TWITTY: It's true. From the time I was five until I was 21 I spent a lot of time on Dad's ferryboat.

FW: Ferryboat?

TWITTY: Yes, we went from the Arkansas side to the Mississippi side. Once in a while, we'd go up and down the river to turn on the channel lights.

FW: Did you work on the ferry or just play the guitar and sing?

TWITTY: I sure didn't do much work when I was five, but later, I worked as a deck hand. I earned my keep.

FW: You were a big hit as a rock-and-roll singer. What made you switch to country-western music?

TWITTY: I wanted to do country-western music ever since I got out of the Army in 1956, but didn't for two reasons: First of all, I did not think I could compete with people like Roy Acuff, Red Foley, Bill Monroe and all those country-western heroes. Secondly, it was a matter of age. I was only 23 then. In my opinion, that wasn't old enough to sing country-western. You have to know what it means to feel sad, to be lied to, cheated to—even do some cheating yourself—before you can sing those emotions from the heart.

FW: Why do country-western songs invariably deal with cheating and other depressing subjects?

TWITTY: Why are newspaper headlines always tragic? You never read about good deeds. People prefer sad stories. I've been married a long time, and most of that time's been good. We've got four kids—two boys and two girls. But when you're married as long as I've been, once every seven years or so something happens. You run into someone else. An incident that stands out in your memory. But in-between, you forget. You think of the baseball games and the wiener roasts and all the good times together.

FW: And yet country-western singers seem to stay married a lot longer than other people in show business. How do you explain that?

TWITTY: I can only speak for myself: I don't have the same lifestyle that a lot of other stars have. I enjoy the "down home" type of living—reading, fishing, doing things with my kids—not going to big parties. And of course I'm on the road about 200 days a year. Sometimes this has been hard on my wife. Recently, she decided she needed some other interests, so she's been going to college, taking home economics.

FW: In recent months, country-western songs have become sexier. How do you explain that?

TWITTY: There has always been reference to sex. But it's true, it has become more outspoken. Just as movies are. You didn't have things on the screen ten years ago that you see in R- and X-rated movies today.

FW: Have there been any especially sad events in your life?

TWITTY: I suppose the one that hit me hardest was back in 1969 when my dad passed away. I was with him.

FW: Did you compose a song about it?

TWITTY: No. I honestly don't know if I could.

FW: Did you ever want to do anything except become a singer?

TWITTY: When I got out of high school, I had an offer to sign with the Philadelphia Phillies. That was back in the early fifties. I didn't want to accept until I had enough money to buy a car so I could get around. So I went to Chicago and worked for the International Harvester Company until I had enough money to buy a 1948 Buick. It must be about 550 miles from Chicago to Mississippi and I used 14 quarts of oil to get back. When I got home, my mother told me that I had a draft notice. So I gave the car to my brother.

FW: And he kept pouring oil into it?

TWITTY: Somebody told us about something called Motor Cure that you pour into the crankcase. It's supposed to fill in all the cracks. Well, we used it. My brother drove that car for another 100,000 miles and never poured any more oil into it.

TWITTY: Yes, when I was 15, I wanted to do something worthwhile. Like becoming a doctor, a veterinarian or, most of all, a minister. I preached the Bible for two and a half years. By the time I was 17, I began to see things differently. I found out that the church deacons I had listened to were cheating people. It really threw me. A 100-percent shock!

"At one time, the 'Grand Ole Opry' was the best exporter of country-western music. Today, there are 6,000 stations broadcasting country-western music, so why should I obligate myself for 40 bucks a night?"

FW: Do you still feel that way?

TWITTY: No, today I understand that nothing is 100 percent. Everybody has some good and some bad in him.

FW: How come you appeared in the "Grand Ole Opry" only once?

TWITTY: It's a matter of economics. At one time, the "Grand Ole Opry" was the best exporter of country-western songs. Today there are 6,000 stations broadcasting country-western music, so why should I obligate myself for 40 bucks a night? I simply can't afford it.

FW: What about the future?

TWITTY: I have been on the road almost 18 years now; I don't think I can go another 18. That's why I want to get into the management business, to begin taking on other people.

FW: Are you a good businessman?

FW: What's a Twitty Burger?

TWITTY: My version of a hamburger. It took 12 years and an awful lot of money out of my life. That's when I decided to stick to what I know. And it isn't Twitty Burgers. It's country-western music.

Now-amazing medicated rub

Stops Arthritis Pain

-up to 3 hours at a time!

You've seen the dramatic EXOCAINE demonstrations on TV... read about EXOCAINE in leading magazines and newspapers. Now, try it FREE!

New York, N.Y. (Special—All over America, many grateful arthritic sufferers are today singing the praises of EXOCAINE.® And no wonder! For this different-kind-of-medicated rub not only reduces painful joint inflammation (like other rubs); but EXOCAINE is the only one that contains an anesthetic to temporarily desensitize and deaden nerve endings that transmit arthritic pain.

What Is Arthritis?

To help you understand the way EXOCAINE works, you should know that arthritis means "inflammation of the joints"... inflammation that can give you an aching back, stiff neck, sore knees, painful elbows, hands, or fingers; that can interfere with your work, your sleep, your enjoyment of life.

There are over 150 different kinds of arthritis and rheumatism! That's why, only a doctor should diagnose your problems and prescribe your medications. Usually they recommend analgesic tablets. But, for more relief than you can get from aspirin alone, many physicians also suggest rubbing in EXOCAINE MEDICATED RUB—where it hurts.

Great News!

Until recently, rubs contained only analgesics to help reduce arthritic joint inflammation. But now, EXOCAINE does more! That's because EXOCAINE not only reduces joint inflammation but also contains an extra ingredient... a fast-acting anesthetic to temporarily deaden and stop the transitory aches and pains of arthritis and rheumatism.

Your first trial should convince you that you've never used anything like pain-deadening EXOCAINE! Today, get this remarkable medicated rub at any drug counter; or take advantage of our FREE friend-winning introductory offer! Mail coupon—NOW!

WHAT GRATEFUL USERS SAY...

"I saw EXOCAINE on TV about a year ago. Because none of the other rubs gave me much help, I decided to try EXOCAINE. Words can't describe the wonderful relief EXOCAINE gives me." Mrs. E. K. Perryville, Md.

"My mother's been troubled by arthritis for years. Often her pains made her so stiff she could hardly get out of bed in the morning. I got EXOCAINE for her. Now she hardly lets a day go by without blessing me." Mrs. E. L., New York, N.Y.

"I get so much relief and comfort from EXOCAINE I wish I had heard of it sooner." W. H. Lakeview, Iowa.

What really counts is not what others say; but how EXOCAINE may help you! So, mail coupon—now!

* EXOCAINE does not interfere with your aspirin; or any other medications your doctor may advise.

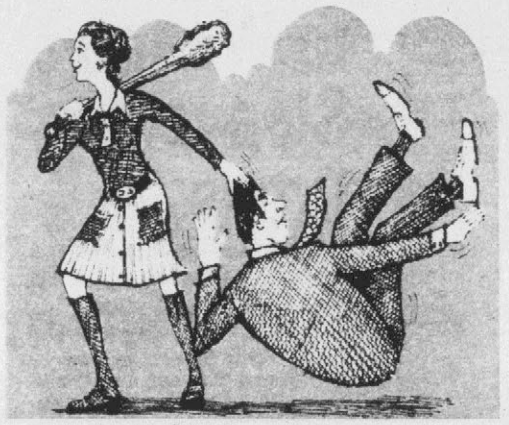
People Quiz

What Really Makes People "Lucky at Love"?

By John E. Gibson



True or False? Seeking the ideal mate isn't hard if you go about it correctly. (See number 3.)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Not how good-looking you are, but how satisfied you are with the way you look, determines the happiness of your love life.

2. Everybody loves somebody.

3. Seeking the ideal mate isn't hard if you go about it correctly.

4. Women have a more loving attitude toward their mates than do men.

ANSWERS

1. True. If you're not happy with the way you look, it's going to be more difficult for you to achieve romantic happiness. Psychological studies at McGill University confirm the findings of other investigations which show that men and women who are most satisfied with the way they look are also the most satisfied with their love relationships.

2. False. Dr. Raymond F. Gale, Professor of Psychology at Ball State University, provides a personality profile of the unloving individual in his treatise "Who Are You?" His studies show that this type of person "is a 'cold fish,' so to speak—insensitive to the feelings of others, yet extremely sensitive himself. He does not understand love—the one thing he craves and needs most. Because there are few others who understand or appreciate his unloving behavior, he is unlikely to receive the affection he needs." Also, a Veterans Administration study of men who manipulate women for romantic purposes yielded significant findings. This type of man, who cloaks his insincerity with smooth talk and false pretenses, was found to be incapable of love and narcissistic (he finds it hard to pass a mirror without at least one admiring glance). And he relates to women only superficially and with contempt.

3. False. The search for an ideal mate may not be exactly like finding a needle in a haystack, but that simile will do until another one comes along. As psychologist Richard Centers points out in his excellent monograph on "Sexual Attraction and Love," "People do not have 'the world to choose from' in seeking a mate or love partner. Their circles of acquaintances are quite limited and their contacts are few." He observes further that the type of person whose personality and general attributes mesh harmoniously with yours may be in short supply—and this might require a compromise. So, unless you're lucky, the search isn't likely to be easy. But whatever the case, no quest is more worthwhile or capable of paying richer dividends.

4. True—as evidenced by a team of University of Toronto psychologists whose studies showed that women express stronger affection, trust and admiration for their romantic partners than men do; that they are more socially sensitive, emotionally responsive and more receptive to love in the truly romantic sense. Woman Can't Sleep Tortured All Night

...Then she found those tiny blue pills that helped her fall asleep more naturally and wake up refreshed.

She can't sleep... it's one of those occasional nights when simple nervous tension keeps her awake tossing and turning. Lack of sleep oftentimes causes irritability and that downright worn-out feeling. Fortunately a little blue pill called Compoz works to help you unwind the minor and temporary up-tight feelings, so sound blissful sleep may be yours. This modern relaxant tablet contains no barbiturates so it helps you sleep more naturally. So don't suffer the agonizing torture of another sleepless night needlessly. Get Compoz today. Follow directions carefully and see if Compoz doesn't help you sleep sound tonight or tomorrow night. Compoz is not intended for serious or chronic conditions that need a doctor's attention, but only when those occasional sleepless nights occur.

For a free trial package of Compoz send 50¢ to cover postage and handling to Dept. FWA, Box 553, Union, N.J. 07083.

IT'S TIME SHE SWITCHED TO ONE OF TODAY'S MOST EFFECTIVE SCALP MEDICATION INGREDIENTS FOR TOUGH DANDRUFF PROBLEMS.

If your husband can't stand watching you scratching your scalp because the itching is "all but killing" you, you may need a tough dandruff shampoo called Psorex.

Psorex is a medicated shampoo that combats the scales of simple dandruff with one of the most effective scalp medication ingredients you can get for the problem. And Psorex also helps relieve the itching that can be caused by psoriasis, eczema and mild seborrhea. Start using tough, medicated Psorex Shampoo today, and keep on using it regularly, at least once or twice a week. You'll see how Psorex helps control even the most persistent scales of simple dandruff... and helps eliminate the itching. For a free trial sample of Psorex send 50¢ to cover postage and handling to Dept. FWAJ, Box 553, Union, New Jersey 07083.

Sports Mini-Profile

CHRIS McCARRON

Horse Racing's Brightest New Superstar

As a child growing up in Boston, red-haired Chris McCarron dreamed of becoming a hockey player for his beloved Boston Bruins. But when he reached 5-3 and stopped growing, it was obvious that he would have to follow the example of his older brother Gregg and become a jockey. His success in racing has been phenomenal. At the age of 19, he set a new world record by riding a total of 546 winners in a year. The incredible aspect to this record is that young Chris set it while still an apprentice jockey. He was an exercise boy at the Laurel Race Track in Maryland until he was allowed to ride his first race in January 1974. He finished last in that race but showed enough potential to convince trainer Odie Clelland to give him other mounts. He won his first race 16 days later and after that, just kept winning and winning. By bizarre coincidence, Chris beat out his own brother to win the race that set the new record. It was a close duel down the stretch with Chris's horse edging in front just at the finish. Chris's father, Herbert, was at Laurel that day. "I didn't know what to do, so I just screamed for both of them to finish in a dead heat," he recalls. "The way it turned out, I'm terribly happy for Chris, and Gregg is happy for him, too . . ."

Chris's rise to racing stardom has made a few changes in his lifestyle. As an exercise boy, he lived in a tiny room in the area of the stables at Laurel. Now he lives with friends in a well-kept garden apartment and has replaced his old car with a new sports car. But he's not indulging himself otherwise, and his mother is acting as trustee for his savings. "There's always a chance this could end tomorrow," the 108-pound jockey says. "The first time my brother sat on a race horse, he was thrown and kicked and nearly lost his sight in one eye. I've been thrown off horses a couple of times, and although nothing serious happened, there's always the danger in this sport of suffering permanent injury." —By Barry Abramson

The Doctor Lets You In

When Antibiotics Don't Work

Say you have an infection. If it's caused by bacteria, your doctor can give you an antibiotic. But if it's caused by a virus, antibiotics do not work. There are more than 500 different kinds of viruses that can cause trouble in man. About 90 percent of respiratory infections are virus-induced. And we are continuously finding that other illnesses are due to viruses. How does a doctor know for sure that he is dealing with a virus? First, he examines the patient and considers the patient's complaint. This usually gives him a clue. If he wants to be absolutely certain, he may order lab tests. But since it takes almost five days to grow a virus in a laboratory, then another five days to identify it, lab tests are usually ordered only when the infection seems more serious or persistent. The protection against virus infections is a vaccine. It stimulates antibody protection, hence increasing body resistance. There are vaccines against smallpox, flu, polio, etc. What about treatment? There are certain virus killers that are used against more serious virus infections, but they are rather toxic. A new virus killer called "interferon" has far less potential for toxicity, but it is not yet available, and studies are still being made.

BOB COUSY
Chasing the Dream

Bob Cousy, the ex-Boston Celtics superstar, speaks out: " 'Winning at Any Cost' may well be the chapter heading when future historians tell the story of the American society of our time. Success. Winning. They are words stitched into the national fabric along with the Stars and Stripes. Growing up during World War II, I remember learning early that America had never lost a war. . . . And years later we were ridiculing any 'no-win' policy in Vietnam. . . . Then came Watergate. Again, men of my generation showed they would do anything to succeed. 'I'd walk over my grandmother to win an election,' Charles Colson said. The operative words were 'Do what has to be done, but don't get caught.' We had come to a time and place in history where the White House itself offered the oldest of apologies for wrongdoing: the end justifies the means. Re-electing Richard Nixon was good for this country and its people; hence, any means justified that end. Which of us hasn't used that same excuse? If I would run over someone in a casual game of basketball, could I blame Charles Colson for his statement? The pressure is always there for most of us. Win or be fired, the coach is told. Sell the product or be gone, the salesman is told. 'Winning isn't everything,' Vince Lombardi told us, 'it's the only thing.' And he was right." From "The Killer Instinct," by Bob Cousy with John Devaney (Random House, $7.95).

Film director Sydney Pollack ("The Way We Were," "Three Days of the Condor") told FAMILY WEEKLY about the hardest part of his job: "It's what happens after a picture is finished that's difficult for me. I have to go out and sell the picture over TV, radio and to the press. After a while, I get sick of hearing myself talk. I feel cheap. It's not a good thing for a grown man to do! But I know I have to do this publicity work. A director invests a year of his life in making a movie (four months of preparation, three months of shooting and five months of editing). Actors have it a lot easier—they can make a couple of movies a year if they're in demand, and they don't have to sell themselves afterwards. If you're a star, people want to worship you, be like you or be frustrated because they can't get near you. Directors just don't have that kind of appeal or influence over the masses."

Sydney Pollack

JEANNIE AND JOHNNY MORRIS
From Russia, with mixed emotions

A couple of TV sportscasters (who happen to be married to each other), left their jobs last year and took off with their four kids for a year of foreign adventure, equipped with six suitcases and a van ("The Blue Beast"). Which country intrigued them the most? Jeannie Morris told FAMILY WEEKLY: "Russia was the most memorable, although certainly not the most enjoyable. The Intourist Bureau programs your visit so that you see only what it wants you to see and stay where you are told to stay. We found the female road gangs, the huge military presence and tired peasant faces very depressing. Also, the alcoholism rate is staggering and the Russians' diet seems to consist of sour cream and onions on every dish. But we were impressed as well. The people have an inner resiliency and were excited to meet us because they wanted to hear about life in America. We saw much evidence of striving for material improvement, both by the government and individuals, legions of whom were small-scale capitalists."

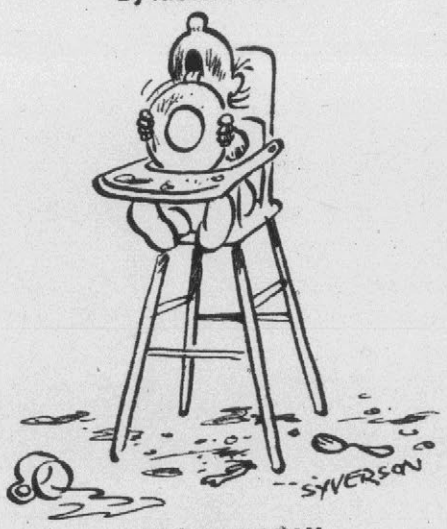
ARMOUR'S ARMOURY
By Richard Armour



COMING CLEAN

"Clean your plate," my mother said,
And clean my plate I did.
For I was an obedient,
Intimidated kid.

"Clean your plate," my wife says now,
And though she's not a scold,
From habit (and from cowardice)
I do as I am told.

But I've begun to balk a bit
And look askance, doggone it,
At those, including me, whose plate
Has too much piled upon it.

My neighbor unexpectedly discovered an excellent method of teaching his children the value of money. He tried to borrow some from them.

A visit to Grandma's farm was very exciting for our four-year-old Terri. One morning she asked permission to go into the hen house to look for eggs. Grandma said she doubted there would be any at that time of day. "Yes, there is," Terri explained, "I heard a hen giggling!"

SPECIAL BICENTENNIAL OFFER!

LIMITED TIME OFFER: SPECIAL BICENTENNIAL BINDING

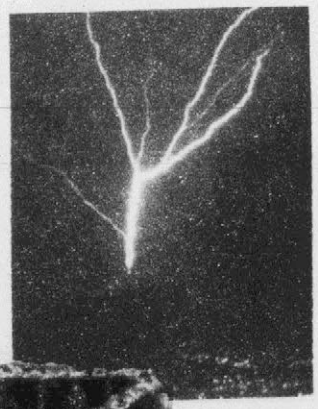
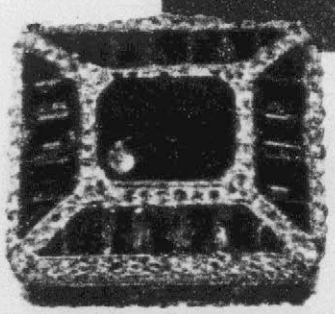
▲10-Volume Ready Reference ◀One-Volume Outline of Knowledge ▲19 Volumes of Knowledge in Depth

You and your family are invited to sample the most readable, the most understandable encyclopaedia ever created.



Triggered Lightning. Articles on "Lightning" appear in all three parts of the encyclopaedia. They work together to meet your family's learning needs.



Rare beauty. This emerald box comes from Iranian crown jewel collection. Through Britannica 3, you can learn about subjects such as "Gemstones" in detail.

Sacred setting of bygone civilization. A temple from pre-Columbian Mexico. Ancient cultures come to life in Britannica 3's many articles on religion and history.

For over two hundred years, the old idea of the encyclopaedia remained the same. But now, to meet the demands of our changing world with its vast amounts of information...now, there is Britannica 3. This is an all-new, completely redesigned encyclopaedia. It is written in clear, readable language... the language of today...so that even the most complex subjects become much easier for your entire family to understand.

What makes Britannica 3 unique?

New Britannica 3 is more than an encyclopaedia. It's a revolutionary new home learning center...America's only encyclopaedia arranged into three distinct parts.

1. The 10-Volume Ready Reference lets you get at facts, quickly and easily. Ideal for homework.

2. The 19-Volume Knowledge in Depth for readers who want to explore entire fields of learning.

3. The One-Volume Outline of Knowledge—your guide to the entire encyclopaedia...permits you to plan your own course of study on any subject under the sun.

BICENTENNIAL BONUS

"The Revolutionary Years"-the Britannica book of the American Revolution—included automatically with your purchase of Britannica 3!

- The history and drama, words and deeds of America's Founding Years. 1763 to 1790.
- A full-size hardcover volume—profusely illustrated, using color.
- Beautiful antique binding matches Britannica's First Edition published in 1768.

Britannica 3 covers more subjects more completely. It is more responsive to today's needs of your family. And when you judge by its 43 million words, Britannica 3 delivers more value per dollar than any other accepted reference work. So if you want more up-to-date facts about more subjects than you'll find in any other single source, you want the new Britannica 3.

Preview Britannica FREE

New Britannica 3 is like no other encyclopaedia you have ever seen. Indeed, it's the first new idea in encyclopaedias in 200 years. That's why we've created a special full-color Preview Booklet which pictures and describes this achievement in detail. Send for this free booklet. We'll also give you details on how you can obtain Britannica 3 direct from the publisher.

Would you believe...? I fell in love with an Encyclopaedia.

Sound crazy? Maybe it is. But a short time ago, I had an opportunity to get a sneak preview of Britannica's brand-new encyclopaedia and believe me, it's nothing like the old one that my family cherished for years. In fact, this one is in three parts. If you or your children need to have at your fingertips a way to find out about anything at all, the new Britannica 3 may get to you, too. There's no better family encyclopaedia around.

YOUR KEY TO THE FUTURE

It tells the exciting story of Britannica 3 in vivid text and beautiful full-color pictures. It includes actual entries from the pages of Britannica 3. Also, it has colorful, illustrated articles you'll want to share with your kids. It will show you far better than we can tell you here why Britannica 3 really is...more than a new encyclopaedia...it's a complete home learning center.

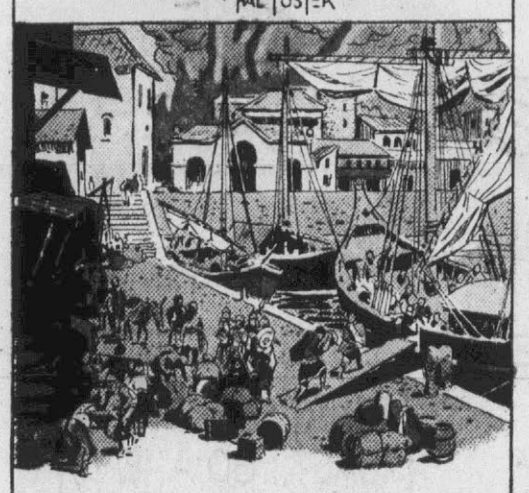
IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

BY HAL FOSTER



Our Story: PRINCE VALIANT LEADS HIS FAMILY DOWN FROM THE BURNING CITY AND BOARDS HIS SHIP. TO HIM IT HAD BEEN ONLY A ROUTINE EVENT.

BUT TO HECTOR THE SCHOLAR, IT HAD BEEN AN EPIC ADVENTURE: HE AND PRINCE VALIANT, SIDE BY SIDE, HAD BROUGHT THE QUEEN OF THE MISTY ISLES TO SAFETY! HE DRESSES TO SUIT THE PART.

THEY SAIL ON CADIZ WHERE HECTOR MUST LEAVE THEM TO CONTINUE HIS STUDIES. HE SALUTES VAL AS ONE HERO TO ANOTHER: "FAREWELL, SIR VALIANT, SOME DAY WE MAY SHARE ANOTHER ADVENTURE!"

FIRST THERE IS GOOD NEWS. THEY NEED FEAR NO PIRATES, FOR LAST YEAR BELLA GROSSI HAD ENLISTED THE VERY SCUM OF THE INLAND SEA ON HIS ILL-FATED BID TO BECOME TYRANT OF THE BALTIC SEA. NONE HAD RETURNED.

THEN THE BAD NEWS: ALETA IS IN REVOLT! "TOO LONG HAVE I BEEN COOPED UP ON SHIPBOARD. I NEED A HAIRDRESSER, A PERSONAL MAID! MY HAIR SMELLS LIKE SEAWEED, AND I'D LIKE A SALT HERRING!"

PRINCE VALIANT IS NOT COMPLETELY FEARLESS. "GUNDAR, PUT INTO TANGIERS, FOR I SEE A STORM APPROACHING IN MY WIFE'S EYES."

AT A SLAVE MARKET IN TANGIERS, ALETA SELECTS HER ATTENDANTS. SLAVERY IS NOT ALL WHIPS AND CHAINS, FOR MANY WILLINGLY SELL THEMSELVES INTO SERVICE TO AVOID A LIFE OF POVERTY IN THE CITIES' STINKING SLUMS.

JUGHEAD AND I ARE GOING TO BUILD A CLOCK FOR OUR TERM SCIENCE PROJECT, BUT I'M NOT SURE WHAT KIND!

HOW ABOUT A CUCKOO CLOCK?

MAYBE YOU OUGHT TO BUILD AN ATOMIC CLOCK! ANY CLOCK YOU BUILD WILL BE A BOMB, ANYWAY!

OH, YEAH? WELL, IT SO HAPPENS THAT I SAW PLANS FOR A TERRIFIC CLOCK IN A SCIENCE MAGAZINE THAT'LL MAKE WHATEVER PROJECT YOU AND YOUR PARTNER COME UP WITH LOOK SICK!

A FEW WEEKS LATER:

WAIT TILL THEY SEE THIS, JUG!

ARCHIE! JUGHEAD! WOULD YOU PLEASE RUN AN ERRAND FOR MR. WEATHERBEE? I'LL TAKE YOUR PACKAGE!

O.K., FAT BOY, STICK 'EM UP!

WHAT THE---?

DON'T TURN AROUND! KEEP YOUR HANDS ON THE DESK!

Y-Y-YES, S-SIR!

WE'LL RETURN TO OUR CRIME DRAMA IN A MINUTE, BUT FIRST, A WORD FROM OUR SPONSOR!

MR. WEATHERBEE, DID YOU SEE OUR SCIENCE PROJECT IN YOUR OFFICE?

A PROPER PLACE FOR EVERYTHING...

...AND EVERYTHING IN ITS PROPER PLACE!

CHIP, YOU HAVE TO DO SOMETHING ABOUT YOUR ROOM.

I NEED ALL THIS STUFF.

THAT'S HARD TO BELIEVE

WHAT'S IN ALL THOSE BOXES?

WELL, THIS BOX HAS ALL MY ROCK AND MINERAL STUFF...

THIS IS MY AQUARIUM STUFF...

THIS HAS ALL MY AUTOGRAPH STUFF...

WHAT ABOUT THESE?

JUST STUFF.

WE NEED TO THROW OUT SOME STUFF AND GET YOU A DICTIONARY.

I CAN'T WADE THRU ALL THIS SNOW!

REDEYE, YOU'LL HAVE TO SHOVEL A PATH DOWN TO THE CREEK FOR ME!

INDIAN CHIEFS DON'T SHOVEL SNOW!---THAT'S WOMEN'S WORK!

---BESIDES, YOU COULD USE THE EXERCISE

HAVEN'T YOU NOTICED?

NOTICED WHAT?

STEVE CANYON

MILTON CANIFF

STEVE AND BITSY BEEKMAN ARE ACCIDENTALLY GROUNDED ON A NARCOTICS SMUGGLERS' AIRSTRIP OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES...

...TO CONVINCE THESE PILOTS THAT I AM ON SOME SORT OF DRUG!

WHICH IS RIGGED TO FALL APART AFTER WE ARE ON OUR WAY FROM HERE.

YOU CAN BE CERTAIN THEY HAVE HIDDEN SOME CUT STUFF ON BOARD....

...SO WHEN WE CRASH IT WILL BE FOUND IN THE WRECKAGE

—AND WE'LL BE JUDGED GUILTY-ALIVE OR DEAD!

HEY, BEEKMAN, YOU'VE HAD TIME TO COLD TURKEY ANYTHING...

ROS SAYS YOU GOTTA SIGN AN ACCEPTANCE FORM!

ROS IS THE ONE I KNEW!

I THINK ROS IS NUTS — BUT WE'LL GO ALONG WITH THE GAG!

OKAY...

LET'S GO FOR A RIDE IN MY CAR!

OUR CAR!

WHAT DO YOU MEAN "OUR CAR"?!

IT'S MY CAR!!

WELL, I BOUGHT THE SEAT COVERS FOR YOUR BIRTHDAY!

OH, YEAH

AND I BOUGHT THOSE HUBCAPS FOR YOU AT CHRISTMAS!

ALSO, ALL THE TAPES FOR YOUR NEW TAPE DECK!

WELL, I GUESS YOU'RE RIGHT...

SO HOW ABOUT BUYING A TANK OF GAS FOR OUR CAR?!

AH-AH...

RUN FOR YOUR LIFE!

...CHOO

THAT WAS THE START OF THE WORLD'S GREATEST SNEEZE

IT TOPPLED BIG CHIMNEYS AND UPROOTED TREES

IT WAS FELT IN ASIA AND KENSINGTON, TOO AND EVEN ON THE OCEAN BLUE

AND IT FINALLY MADE A PALM TREE SWAY IN BOONA-BOONA FAR AWAY
