UNC Board Approves Five-Year 16 Campus Development Plan

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)— Ignoring pleas by four black members to delay acceptance of it, the Board of Governors of the University of North Carolina has approved a five-year plan for development of the 16 campus institution.

Friday's decision was by a 23-4 vote. The calls allows only small enrollment increases with little expansion of the degree programs. The plan is in a 750-page document that was presented to the board two weeks ago.

Julius L. Chambers of Charlotte, one of the black members, had urged the panel to delay approving the report pending completion of a long overdue study of the status of the system's five predominately black colleges.

He also asked the panel to eliminate language in the report which he argued was uncomplimentary to the Department of Health Education and Welfare (HEW). Until recently, HEW had been pushing the system to step up its integration and had asked for the study of the black schools. Results of the study are to be inserted later into the long range plan.

Among Chambers' objections was that the long-range plan would permit the predominantly white Wilmington campus to embark on master's degree programs while predominantly black Fayetteville State University would only be permitted to "do some planning with another school for a master's program."

The board was "setting the stage for the closing of several of these (predominantly black) schools and the merger of programs in the schools that remain," Chambers charged.

UNC President William C. Friday vigorously denied the charge, contending that the study of the black schools hasn't been completed because chancellors of those schools sought the delay. A year ago, Friday asserted that the plan was incomplete because the system had lost the black vice president who had been working on it.

Cutting black schools out of the system is not his policy and nothing has ever been said about merger of black schools, Friday said.

In explaining the masters decisions, Dr. Raymond Dawson, vice president for academic affairs, said, "it seemed to us Wilmington was at a higher state of readiness."

Last year when the board voted to set up a new veterinary school at North Carolina State University rather than North Carolina A&T, a major issue between the governors and HEW was the state of readiness of predominantly white schools.

William Thomas of the Atlanta HEW office said officials failed to follow their desegregation plan which called for consideration of racial impact and the need to improve black schools when setting up new programs.

Friday, however, managed to get the new Secretary of Health Education and Welfare, former University of Alabama president David Mathews, to stop Thomas's efforts to begin enforcement procedings against the university.

Under the long-range plan, only two of the 16 schools would begin granting degrees higher than the levels they now award. They are East Carolina University's medical school and UNC-Wilmington's master's program in marine sciences.

ECU would be authorized to plan for certain biomedical doctorate programs needed in conjunction with its new medical schools.

The plan's enrollment growth policy allows for a 5 per cent expansion from 92,000 to 109,000 in its five-year life, a growth rate of 3 per cent per yar. Recent annual growth rates have been around 7 per cent.

Mockery Of Cease-Fire

By MICHAEL KEATS

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Trigger-happy gunmen and kidnapers made a mockery of Lebanon's cease-fire Saturday and threatened to scuttle a parliament session on which a final peace hinged.

Sporadic fighting in Beirut and the countryside, coupled with further kidnapings, claimed at least 120 lives in the first 24 hours of a 10-day "trial truce" during which parliament was supposed to meet to elect a new president. The 11-month-long civil war toll stood at 16,000 dead and more than 33,000 wounded.

Among the dead were 20 men found near Baabda, believed to be Moslem mental patients taken from an asylum near Asfouriyeh during a Christian attack.

Snipers fired at random victims all over Beirut.

Roaming bands of gunmen took advantage of the truce to start a new outbreak of looting in the commercial areas. Witnesses saw gangs stealing furniture from wrecked apartments and two buildings housing banks in the downtown area went up in flames.

With gunmen controlling the streets, fuel supplies dried up—particularly in the eastern Christian sector of Beirut.

Three drivers of autos attempting to take in fuel were seized by leftists and burned alive, witnesses said.

Looters had stolen the tables and chairs from the Chamber of Deputies which, under the terms of the truce, is supposed to meet before April 12 to elect a new state president.

The Moslem leftists have linked the election of the new President and the resignation of the present incumbent, Suleiman Franjieh, with demands for political and social reform, as requisites for a final peace.

The question of ensuring security for any meeting of the 99-man Parliament was open to doubt. With no effective police force guarding the truce anarchy still ruled the streets despite a sharp drop in the level of fighting.

House Speaker Kamel Assad conferred with political leaders by telephone Saturday on the security question and also spoke with Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat and rebel army commander Brig. Gen. Aziz Ahdab, the radio said.

Even if a new President was chosen next week there still remained the uncertainty that Syria, whose peace initiatives have won the support of the United States and special U.S. ambassador L. Dean Brown, could convince Franjieh to resign before his presidential term expires in September.

Pickets Down

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Picket lines in the Teamsters strike went down around North Carolina and South Carolina late Saturday afternoon as word of a tentative settlement was received.

The agreement at Arlington Heights, Il ., where negotiations were held, involved the Teamsters and the Trucking Employers Inc., which involves union drivers in North Carolina and South Carolina.

W. C. Barbee of Concord, president of Teamsters Local 71 and Council Nine, said word of the tentative agreement was received about 5 p.m. and "we terminated the strike, calling picket lines down in North Carolina and South Carolina."

Tentative Settlement In Teamsters Union Strike

By NICK GREGORY

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, Ill. (UPI) — Labor Secretary W. J. Usery Saturday announced settlement of the three-day nationwide Teamsters Union strike which brought violence to the highways and layoffs in the factories.

The pact was technically tentative, since it must be ratified by the 400,000 Teamsters—some 160,000 whom were still on strike following partial agreements worked out Friday and earlier.

The agreement reached Saturday supersedes the earlier pacts.

But already thousands of drivers were reported returning to the roads under the earlier agreements, reached during negotiations at the Arlington Park Hilton Hotel outside Chicago.

The agreement appeared a victory for Usery, who refused to ask invocaton of the Taft-Hartley Act in the three-day strike, and for Teamsters President Frank Fitzsimmons, who drew a hard line and called the first national trucking strike in the nation's history.

It was also heartening news for President Ford, who had stuck by Usery's policy of relying on collective bargaining.

Ford, returning to Washington from two days' campaigning in Wisconsin, said, "I want to compliment the negotiators and Secretary Usery for their efforts to work out a settlement through the collective bargaining process."

It was not certain how soon all Teamsters would be back on the roads or at other jobs. Machinery to send out ballots on the pact was due to start up Monday.

Fitzsimmons said, "We have notified and will notify our unions today that as far as we are concerned they should put their people on record to be available for work. The strike is over."

Economic danger signals had mounted with every day of the strike. The auto industry announced shutdown plans. But, a few hours after the agreement, American Motors Co. scrapped plans to stop production and idle 11,000 workers in Milwaukee and Kenosha, Wis.

Usery and Fitzsimmons emerged from negotiations which had lasted most of Friday night and Saturday.

The secretary said, "The negotiating committee will recommend approval to its membership. I look forward to seeing it ratified as soon as possible."

Fitzsimmons said, "This was hard bargaining by both sides."

Joins ECU Med School

GREENVILLE, N.C. (UPI) — Dr. James L. Mathis, a nationally-renowned psychiatrist, has joined the faculty of the planned school of medicine at East Carolina University, school officials announced Saturday.

Dr. William E. Laupus, dean of the school, said Mathis, presently chairman of psychiatry at the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond, will be professor and chairman of the department of psychiatry at ECU.

Mathis is an official examiner for the American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology, the certifying organization of psychiatrists. In addition, he has served as consultant to the Peace Corps, the Oklahoma City Police Department and the Youth Reception Center in New Jersey.

American Motors Workers To Return To Work Monday

DETROIT (UPI) — American Motors Corp. announced Saturday that workers at all plants will report for their normal shifts Monday in the wake of the tentative agreement settling the three-day-old Teamsters Union strike.

"All employes are to report to work on their normal shifts," a company spokesman said.

AMC earlier said plans to suspend car production and lay off 11,000 workers at plants in Milwaukee and Kenosha, Wis., would continue because of only a partial settlement of the Teamsters strike.

However, with the complete settlement, the company spokesman said there was no reason to go ahead with the earlier plans.

The Milwaukee parts and body plant, which had also been idle this week, was to have been closed for the entire week starting Monday. AMC officials had also told about 8,500 workers Friday at the Kenosha plant not to work for a week.

Some 1,100 workers at AMC's Brampton, Ont., plant were also involved in AMC's original decision.

The Cyrus D. Corbett family of Greenville Rt. 6 received the Farmers' Home Administration District Farm Family of the Year award Friday.

Donald Norman, district director of the Farmers' Home Administration presented Corbett a letter from the state director of FHA and a certificate for becoming the district winner of the Farm Family of the Year. Norman explained that Corbett was selected as the district from the eight nominees of the 14 county district. According to Norman, the 10 district winners in North Carolina will compete for the state and national farm family awards.

After working in construction for 10 years, Corbett moved to Pitt County. Corbett was unable to work for a year because of a leg injury he received at his construction work. In 1964 he decided to try farming and applied for credit through the Farmers' Home Administration. During the year he farmed with his brother as a sharecropper and was given a tractor by the Vocational Rehabilitation Department.

Corbett started his farm with 15 acres of tobacco, 40 acres of soybeans, some corn and some peanuts. Today he owns 80 acres of tobacco, 70 acres of peanuts, 200 acres of corn and 350 acres of soybeans. Corbett's wife, Rachel, two sons, Carlton, 18, William, 16, and daughter, Deborah, 12 all work together on the farm and the two sons plan to become farmers.

"FHA has been a tremendous help to me," Corbett said. "It was the boost I needed at the time and I worked with the program they designed for me and we've made it."

Blake Comby Sets Broadcast Record

By JERRY RAYNOR
Sunday Reflector Editor

East Carolina University senior William Blake Comby has unofficially set a new world record for continuous radio broadcasting. If Comby's broadcast feat is verified and accepted by the Guinness Book of World Records, it will then become an official record. The 220-hour plus broadcast marathon has been sponsored by Radio Station WRQR, Farmville, with a broadcast site in Greenville.

At noon on Friday, the English major, broadcasting minor student edged past the 216-hour continual broadcast record by one person that now stands as the official world record.

Comby concluded his broadcasting achievement at 4:05 Friday afternoon.

Asked how he felt after being in one spot since noon on Wednesday, March 24, Comby admitted "I feel a little punchy, but otherwise fine.

"I've really enjoyed this. Had a great time, and met lots of really nice people. It's been hectic, it's been gruelling, but great fun.

A native of Connover, Comby is a bachelor and is in his last senior quarter before graduating. He admitted, ruefully, that the marathon will "not result in any credit at the university."

Comby said his immediate plans are to rest a bit. "I'll be catching up on sleep and get myself rested. I'll be spending the night (Friday) at the ECU Infirmary. I feel fine, but they want me to do that anyway."

Comby kept his strength up by resorting to substantial portions of high-protein candy and drinking ginseng tea.

On Land In Southside Area

SCLR Expected To Be Successful Bidder

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Seaboard Coast Line Railroad is expected to be the successful bidder for a 95,841 square foot parcel of land in the Southside redevelopment area to be sold by the Greenville Redevelopment Commission here April 12.

Seaboard—which qualified as a bidder for the land March 8—so far is the only prospective bidder for the property.

Redevelopment Commission spokesman Kirby Boyd said the commission is expected to accept the Seaboard bid if it meets the $12,495.33 minimum acceptable bid (13-cents per square foot) for the parcel. The Commission has a meeting scheduled for the night of April 12.

The railroad plans to construct a 1,000 foot-long connector on the property to tie its tracks to those of the Southern Railway. That will give Seaboard trains access to Southern tracks and the Texasgulf phosphate mine at Lee Creek, near Aurora.

SCL vice-president Raymond Bullard said negotiations are now under way with Southern for trackage rights from Greenville to Aurora. He noted that Coast Line feels traffic from Texasgulf over the connector will be "substantial."

Bullard said SCL has 16,500 miles of track serving 13 states "in which a vast amount of U.S. farm acreage is located." Even with no direct access to the Texasgulf mine at the present, SCL "system-wide . . . handled nearly 40 million tons (of phosphate) in 1975."

The parcel under consideration by Seaboard is located South of 14th Street in the area of the current intersection of Southern and Seaboard tracts. Generally the land is bounded on the north by the present Southern main line, on the west by SCL tracks, on the east by Pitt Street and on the south by Wyatt Street.

The proposed connector would cross the proposed Pitt-Clark Street connector in the Southside area.

Southern officials said that railroad now moves one local train per day in each direction over the Chocowinity to Lee Creek branch line. Relatively little of the traffic in phosphate moves through Greenville, the Southern spokesman said, noting much of it moves to ports at Morehead City and Norfolk for export.

Neither Southern nor Texasgulf officials could say how much phosphate moves from the Lee Creek mine by rail through Greenville, or its destination.

But Seaboard spokesmen in Three Killed In Attempt To Collect Loan Money

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — An underworld attempt to collect $50,000 from a Fort Lauderdale man backfired Friday night when he pulled a gun holstered under his dining room table and killed a reputed gangland enforcer and his two companions, police reported Saturday.

Police booked Patrick "Patsy" Truglia, 36, on an open charge of homicide in the shooting deaths of James "Big Jim" Capotorto, 33, Wayne Bruce Neeld, 24, and a third unidentified man who uses the alias of "Bobby Dee."

Capotorto, 6-feet-4 and 300 pounds, was a known loan shark collector and gangland enforcer, police said.

Detective Jack Lovell said they were also "all tied up in drugs, although Truglia says he's not. We'll see about that later."

Lovell said Truglia told him the three men were trying to collect the $50,000 they said was owed them by Nick Russo, a friend of Truglia's who has disappeared.

The three men had first beaten Truglia three days earlier, and renewed their threats on Thursday, Lovell said.

When they arrived at Truglia's home they demanded he turn over his Lincoln Continental automobile along with all the jewelry in the house.

Truglia agreed, but his wife, Mary Lou refused and started shouting, Lovell said. Truglia told her to give up the car's registration and the jewelry but Capotorto, for some reason, slapped Truglia across the face.

Then, Lovell said, Capotorto to Mrs. Truglia, striking her and knocking a tooth out.

Truglia told Lovell that Capatorto then made a sign as though he wanted Bobby Dee to shoot him.

That's when Truglia reached for a nine millimeter automatic pistol he kept in a plastic holster attached to the bottom of the table, drew the weapon and fired 13 shots, Lovell said.

Lovell said Neeld was the only one of the three who was armed and Truglia shot him before he had a chance to open fire.

Detective Sgt. Frank Scheuler said Truglia fired the shots "very accurately" into the head, neck and chest of the victims.

Candidate O'Herron Visited Greenville

GOING TO THE PEOPLE—Ed O'Herron (second from right) Democratic candidate for governor, visited Greenville Saturday to meet the people in an effort to garner votes. Standing next to O'Herron (third from right) is Charles M. Vincent, a Greenville lawyer and O'Herron supporter. (Reflector photo by Betty Hatch)

Democratic gubernatorial candidate Ed O'Herron was greeted by local supporters Saturday at noon at the Greenville airport and afterwards made several stops, including Ballentine's Buffet restaurant, to meet city residents.

When asked his opinion of the recent passage of higher education bonds and revenue bonds for industry and hospitals, O'Herron said, "I am very gratified to see that all three passed. I had previously endorsed them."

O'Herron had no comment to make concerning the withdrawal of candidate Hargrove "Skipper" Bowles. He did note that the announcement of Republican David Flaherty as a candidate was expected and he though Flaherty's resignation of his position as N.C. Secretary of Human Resources was "appropriate."

When asked his opinion of the possibility that some funding may be taken back from the ECU medical school, O'Herron said that was a decision that would have to be made by the General Assembly.

Campaign Trail Spreads Out

By IRA R. ALLEN
United Press International

The political trail wound Saturday from a Wisconsin barnyard to a white tie dinner three blocks from the White House.

Democrats gathered in caucus to start the convention delegate selection process in Kansas and Virginia, to select Oklahoma's final nine delegates and to hear testimony in Newport, R.I., on the shape of the party's platform.

President Ford, who got up with the cows in Campbellsport, Wis., to start a day of campaigning among the state's dairy farmers, was, along with Democratic front-runner Jimmy Carter, on the guest list for the Washington press corps' annual Gridiron Dinner at a hotel within sight of the White House.

Carter spent the day in Washington in "private meetings."

Henry Jackson campaigned for Tuesday's Democratic primary in New York State and Morris Udall spent Saturday in Wisconsin, where Ford finished two days of campaigning by late afternoon.

Ford was the first president in more than half a century to visit Fond du Lac, Wis., and got a big welcome from an estimated 40,000 persons. "I thank you from the bottom of my heart," Ford said, plunging into the crowds.

Udall was to get campaign help Monday from 1972 nominee George McGovern, who until now has said he will back any of a number of liberal candidates but not endorse one.

Ford, who talked about farm problems, encountered one of the most basic of them while touring a barnyard and had to change suits before sitting down to a country breakfast.

TOBACCO BELL—This 300-pound replica of the Liberty Bell made of tobacco was presented to the Smithsonian Institution by the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., in Washington Friday. It symbolizes North Carolina's major agricultural crop. Worth over $4,000 it features every detail of the original bell including the crack. The bell will be used in a Bicentennial exhibit recreating the U.S. International Exhibition held in Philadelphia in 1876. (AP Wirephoto)

Carter Gets 12

United Press International

Oklahoma gave Jimmy Carter another 12 national delegate votes Saturday in his bid for the Democratic presidential nomination, and the front-runner from Georgia easily outdistanced his opponents in local caucuses in Kansas and Virginia.

Democrats meeting in a state convention in Oklahoma City agreed to send 12 of their 37 delegates to the national convention in New York committed to Carter — one more than had been expected.

Fred Harris, the former Oklahoma senator near the bottom in every primary race so far, received seven votes. Oklahoma's 18 other delegates will be uncommitted.

Partial returns from county caucuses in Kansas and Virginia went heavily in Carter's favor. Those delegates later will help choose national delegates.

15 Murdered In Argentina

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — Right-wing death squads, dragging their victms from their beds, murdered 15 young men and women Saturday in the biggest wave of killings since the overthrow of President Isabel Peron.

Police said two of the victims had been blown to bits with explosives.

N.C. GOP $34,000 In Debt

RALEIGH (AP)—The North Carolina Republican party is $34,000 in debt and settling that should be the group's top priority, said Kent Hayes, new director of the party.

Hayes, 24, took over this week. The position has been open since William L. Russo was fired by the party's central committee. Russo is now working in the Ford campaign.

Most of the people hired by the state party when Thomas Bennett was chairman have been removed by Bob Shaw, elected chairman last November.

Pro-Abortion Demonstration

ROME (AP) — Over 100,000 screaming women marched through the streets of Rome today in a mammoth pro-abortion demonstration. They denounced the Vatican, the Christian Democratic party and demanded that abortion be made free and legal in Italy.

Police said the demonstration was the largest ever by women in the capital. Armed police guarded the Christian Democratic headquarters along the route of the march and all traffic came to a halt.

Wallace To Stay In Race

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)— Pledging to remain in the Democratic presidential race "right on through to the convention," Gov. George C. Wallace is taking a week-long break from campaigning to tend to state business and reaccess his campaign tactics.

After a final day of campaigning for the April 6 Wisconsin primary, Wallace returned here Friday night and is scheduled to remain in the state until next Saturday when he has a tentative commitment for a campaign appearance in Michigan.

American Party Proposal

RALEIGH (AP)—As part of its platform adopted Saturday, the North Carolina American party said it "proposes to make the federal government abide by the Constitution."

To reach that goal, the party's platform called for elimination of federal activities in "education and forced school busing," welfare and aid to Communist countries. Also in the platform were calls for a balanced federal budget, reduced federal controls on business and use of private property and restoration of "the military might of the United States of America."

Argentine Controls

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Argentina's new military government has announced plans to control runaway inflation through government employe layoffs, higher prices and taxes and stress on production and foreign capital.

The economic program, which also bans wage increases, was regarded as a bitter pill for many Argentines who have seen their real wages shrink in recent years. A separate Labor Ministry ruling said workers who violate a strike ban will be jailed.

Spanish Demonstration

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Thousands of helmeted riot police, the largest contingent since the death of Generalissimo Francisco Franco four months ago, took over central Madrid Saturday to scatter leftwing demonstrators demanding political freedoms and amnesty.

Stakes Political Life

TOKYO (UPI) — Prime Minister Takeo Miki Saturday staked his "political life" on settling the Lockheed bribery scandal and promised a full investigation of new charges his party got money from the CIA.

"I stake my political life on settlement of this (Lockheed) question," Miki told a televised news conference. "I will not dissolve the Diet (parliament) until the truth of the scandal is brought to light nor am I considering stepping down at present."

Cotton Mill To Close

WAKE FOREST, N.C. (UPI) — The Royal Cotton Mill, which has operated in this small Wake County town for 75 years, will shut down in two weeks.

The decision to close down the mill followed a year of operating in the red, company officials said.

Nine Dead In Hotel Fire

By MARIA C. GARCIA

MIAMI (UPI) — A fast spreading blaze believed started by a firebomb roared through an old boom-era Miami hotel Saturday killing nine elderly persons and forcing others to leap from windows.

Seven of the victims were found dead in the ruins and two others, who had been critically injured, died later at a hospital. A dozen other persons were hurt in the pre-dawn blaze, and 11 of them were hospitalized. Two were in serious condition.

Fire officials said the blaze may have been started by a firebomb, which would account for "the acceleration of the flames."

A former hotel employe, who had been fired recently, was taken into custody for questioning in the case.

The fire broke out about midnight in the three-story Avondale Hotel, an old ornate wood and stucco structure housing 32 tenants and located three blocks from Flagler Street—Miami's main street. Another old adjacent hotel, the Saragosso—which was unocuppied—was damaged by the flames and a third hostelry, the Miami Bridge Hotel suffered water damage and was evacuated as a precautionary measure.

The blaze was discovered by a tenant, David de Bernardis, who said he rushed down the hall to inform the landlord, Ramiro Gomez.

Fire Chief Don Hickman said age was a factor in driving the death toll so high. "Had those old people been a little stronger, They could have stepped out onto an adjacent roof," he said.

New Wheeler Air Service Is Delayed

ASHEVILLE (AP)—Service from Kinston to Raleigh to Asheville by Wheeler Airlines will not begin Monday as the airline had announced, according to Asheville mayor Eugene C. Ochsenreiter Jr.

Ochsenreiter said the Asheville City Council has not decided to permit the commuter airline to use the city's airport and would not do so until it had studied its contracts with other airlines.

Warren Wheeler, president of the airline, told The Asheville Times that, in view of the city council's feelings, he now hoped to start on April 12. Wheeler said his Kinston to Raleigh service was dependent on the start of Asheville to Raleigh service.

Cities now served by the airline are Raleigh, Beaufort, Morehead City, Elizabeth City and Norflok, Va.

Rocky Mount said "an educated guess . . . we're handling 15 to 30 car loads per day." The spokesman emphasized, however, "it should develop into considerably more . . ."

Max Ragor, industrial clerk for Seaboard in Rocky Mount said the agreement with Southern and construction of the connector track should be completed within the year. Under the agreement, he explained, Seaboard trains would operate over Southern track, reimbursing Southern for a portion of the maintenance of the track.

The plan would make rail service to Texasgulf's mine more competitive and probably result in better rates for the mining company shipments.

Seaboard officials said the cost of the connector—including land acquisition—is estimated at about $250,000.

Two Year Accreditation Is Granted Alcoholic Center

The Walter B. Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center (WBJ-ARC), Greenville, has been advised that the facility has received a two-year accreditation from the Board of Commissioners of the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals (J.C.A.H.) on the recommendation of the Accreditation Council for Psychiatric Facilities.

In a letter to Donald H. Hayes, WBJ-ARC Director, Dr. John D. Porterfield, Director of J.C.A.H., stated, "The Commission wishes to commend you and your staff for maintaining standards deserving of accreditation and for your constant effort to improve the quality of patient care."

"Needless to say, we are pleased and excited about receiving this two-year accreditation," Hayes said. "It speaks well of the quality rehabilitation program we have at the Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center and for the dedicated staff we have to deliver services to our clients."

The two-year accreditation is to continue until January 23, 1978. The WBJ-ARC received its first accreditation in 1975 for one year. The two-year accreditation is the longest period of accreditation which can be granted by the J.C.A.H. The WBJ-ARC is the only state-supported Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center in North Carolina to receive a two-year accreditation to date.

According to Hayes, some of the meaningful advantages of accreditation are: it provides an objective evaluation of a program's services based on nationally recognized standards developed by professionals; it provides a form of recognition that is respected by health professionals and consumers; it provides an educational experience, not a punitive exercise; it provides incentive for the continual upgrading of a program's services; it may qualify a program as a provider for Medicare, Blue Cross, and commercial insurance; it identifies for the public, third party payers, and other providers and programs and services of quality in the field of alcoholism, and others.

Would Reduce Cross-Over Risk

The city has held up the construction of tennis courts on Elmhurst School property because of the possibility that N. Overlook Drive will be extended through that area.

The school board had voted to construct the tennis courts on the north end of the Elmhurst School property to serve Rose High School. The courts would also be available for public use, with the high school having priority.

The proposed road would tie in via N. Overlook to Elm. It would cross the school property, and then university property north of Ficklen Stadium. Past Charles Street it would follow a route westward which would carry it to Hooker Road. East of Elm, N. Overlook presently goes to Brownlea, from which Greenville Boulevard and 14th Street can be reached.

If there is any possibility that this route can be developed, we think the city should do so. The reason is because of the increasingly busy Southern railway tracks which lie parallel to the route. On the other side of the tracks is 14th Street and we can see more and more danger as traffic leaves 14th to cross over to areas south of the tracks. By having thoroughfares on each side of the tracks much of this dangerous cross-over traffic would be eliminated.

We recognize there would be some danger to school children from the thoroughfare along the school property. It would be no more dangerous than the present situation with the busy railroad and 14th Street bordering the property. Certainly a fence would be built along the street right-of-way to minimize the danger to children.

Thoroughfares chew up a long of ground space and no solution to traffic problems in the area is ideal. We believe, though, that development of this new thoroughfare parallel to 14th Street and the railroad will make for a lot safer situation than we presently have.

One Answer To Tennis Court Problems

If the tennis courts are not built on the Elmhurst School property, the question arises as to where they should go.

Obviously with schools, churches, university and city recreational facilities in the Elm Street-14th Street area, space is rapidly running out.

We recognize the desirability of keeping Rose High tennis facilities in close proximity to the school. One answer might be for the city schools to build some new courts in the East Greenville area and then trade them for the recreation tennis courts across Elm Street. That would make the Elm Street courts the primary Rose High tennis courts. Naturally everyone would have access to the other courts located in a less congested area.

Attention On 'Free' Calls

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Budget-conscious state legislators are wondering if all those free telephone calls to Raleigh which citizens can make are a worthwhile investment.

The annual cost of "in-wats" telephone service to a variety of state agencies is currently costing $94,380 per year.

The State Library started the service back in 1968, but limited the calls to libraries seeking information, or ordering books and materials; not public inquiries.

When the present administration came to Raleigh, though, the fad caught on across state government, and the number of free long-distance telephone operations quickly jumped to 14 lines in nine different agencies.

Cut Out

The legislative Governmental Operations Commission suggest to budget-makers in May that all except the service in the State Library be eliminated, including one placed in service while the General Assembly is in session to answer citizen questions about legislative matters.

It is known, several lawmakers say privately, that use of that free incoming telephone has not been entirely limited to legitimate citizen inquiry, but has spread to personal use by some legislators.

The Department of Human Resources has the largest number of phones on the system: three for general information; one in the disability section, and one in the secretary's office.

The Department of Insurance has two lines; the governor's ombudsman has one, and the consumer division of the Attorney General's office, the air pollution section of Natural and Economic Resources, the Department of Transportation, and the Highway Patrol each have one.

The question, some legislators think, is whether the taxpayers should pay for telephone calls when individuals seek information or assistance.

More Divorces

More than 68,000 people (men, women, minor children) were intimately involved in the state's 22,000 divorces last year. That total is up from 20,049 divorces in 1974.

Marriages declined from 45,015 in 1974 to 42,000 in 1975.

Statistics show the state's birth rate continues to decline, down 15 per cent since 1971 when births totaled 95,527. The 1975 figure is 81,000.

A Proclamation

Those proclamations usually associated with governmental or private agencies honoring an individual on retirement, promotion, etc., are usually filled with high-flown legalese and redundant with "Whereas" and "Therefore" clauses brimming with cliches.

The state's Commission on Children With Special Needs felt compelled to honor Ray Shurling who left the legislative staff to take the reins of the state's juvenile training school program.

Carey S. Fendley, director of the N. C. Association for Retarded Citizens, found a way around the triteness: "Whereas—wherefore—or whatever, be it known to whomever—wherever that (we) do wish to proclaim in capital whereas'-wherefore's and whatever's, to all the whomever's-wherever . . . our sincerest appreciation . . . to the man who said, "They should," then took the job and said, "They would."

Shurling, the proclamation noted, "can discern the difference between issues. Where there are children with suede shoes and children with no shoes, he has no difficulty in seeing that the issue is not suede, but shoes," Fendley wrote.

Sunday Morning Notes

J. C. Galloway of Rt. 3, Greenville brought by an old tobacco bill which was dated April 1, 1904. It is interesting that at that time tobacco sales were still going on in April.

"Price was 2½ cents per pound and warehouse charges were same as now," Galloway wrote, "two and one half percent of 2½ cents compared to 2½ percent of $1 now per pound."

The bill was from Parham's Warehouse and the sale was made for M. M. Galloway. Two hundred and forty six pounds brought $6.15. Weighing fee was 25 cents, auction fee 25 cents and commission 15 cents, so the sale netted $5.50.

That was, of course 72 years ago.

Write-ins were not legal in the recent North Carolina presidential primary, but some folks wrote them in anyway. There were write-in votes for Hubert Humphrey, John Kennedy, Frank Church, Edward Kennedy. Edmond G. Brown (governor of California) got the most at three.

All were duly written on the ballots, but they were wasted votes, since they can't be counted in a primary election.

ALVIN TAYLOR

She asked the druggist, "Do you have 'Pretty Feet?'"

The druggist, straight-faced, looked down, then back up, "Well, no prettier than usual, I guess."

District Attorney Eli Bloom says he got a call from a lady around 11 o'clock one night.

"Mr. Bloom", she asked. "How can I keep my husband home at night?"

"Well, I don't know," the district attorney answered. "Is he running around with other women?"

"No, sir," the lady answered.

"Does he support the family," Bloom asked.

"Yes, sir," she replied.

"Well, the only thing I can suggest is that you go to the drug store and get some expensive perfume and spray it on you," Bloom said. "Maybe that will keep him home."

ABM's Last Gasp

By JIM WILLIS
Associated Press Writer

NEKOMA, N.D. (AP) — How much did it cost, all in all? Some say $5.7 billion and some say 20 years of research by dedicated men.

Now some of the citizens of this prairie town near the Canadian border want to convert missile silos to the storage of grain. And some are thinking of converting the 13-story, 200-foot square Missile Site Radar building into a vocational education school, or a barley malting plant, or a pasta factory.

40 Years Ago Today

April 4, 1936

The end of the Lindbergh baby kidnap-murder case was written into the records today as Bruno Richard Hauptmann, the man convicted for the crime, was executed at the New Jersey state prison.

Despite last-minute rumors to the contrary, New Jersey Gov. Harold Hoffman failed to come up with another stay of execution. It was reported that the governor had on his desk a reprieve, properly filled out, at the time of the execution. He had wanted to sign it, it was said, not because he believed Hauptmann to be innocent of the crime, but because he believes there are unhidden mysteries to the case.

It was not until half an hour before the time for Hauptmann's trip to the electric chair that the governor finally laid the repieve aside. He did so after a long conference with state Attorney General David T. Wilentz.

Carter Uproots Liberals

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

MADISON, Wisc.—The stunning collapse of liberal dominance which has controlled Wisconsin's Democratic party in recent presidential primaries is sundering old ideological ties and opening the way for Jimmy Carterism—defined by one erstwhile ideological purist as "just plain winning."

Indeed, "just plain winning" is clearly the former Georgia governor's most notable asset here, more important by far than his appealing personal campaigning style and his masterfully ability to fudge issues.

Thus if, as seems likely, Carter next Tuesday beats Rep. Morris Udall, the last of the liberals still in contention (despite dairy farmer resentment over Carter's farm policies), the main reason will be this: massive desertion from the liberal cause by leaders of the Democratic left who exploited the "liberal" issues, particulary Vietnam, in 1972 and 1968 to make George McGovern and Eugene McCarthy winners of the Wisconsin presidential primary.

"We've had it with the cloistered virtues of doctrinal purity," we were told by Jeff Sykes, Carter's chief agent for the 2nd Congressional District, the most liberal in the state. In a letter to all 2nd District Democrats this week, Quaker Sykes, an antiwar militant who backed John Lindsay in the 1972 primary and then became a McGovern fund-raiser, said that the object of politics is "to win elections"—a remarkable change from four years ago.

Likewise, the enlistment in Carter's cause of Donald O. Peterson, long-time Democratic national committeeman, ended a quixotic Peterson movement for electing uncommitted delgates in reality committed to Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey. Peterson, who tried to ride Vietnam to national power, has now tied his future squarely to Jimmy Carter.

More significant for Carter is the defection from the liberal cause of state Sen. Timothy Cullen, political and personal ally of Wisconsin Rep. Les Aspin, a Udall stalwart. Cullen came to Carter's camp despite intimate connections with the United Auto Workers union (UAW), which has ordered its locals to back Udall in seven of the state's nine congressional districts (including Cullen's senatorial district).

Cullen says his constituents are beginning to question all "liberal" programs and are taking a harder line on drug abuse, welfare frauds and gun control. "We are like Massachusetts," Cullen told us. "We've moved as far to the right in the last four years as they have."

To Cullen, then, the Democratic future belongs far more to Jimmy Carter than Mo Udall. The same sentiment has brought Carter two former state chairmen, William Gerrard, a fund-raising intimate of Gov. Patrick J. Lucey, and Richard Cudahy.

Moreover, throughout Carter's campaign swing last week his mere presence on the scene attracted vast curiosity and attention, culminating in a fund-raising luncheon at the Athens Restaurant here jam-packed with Democrats who have just lately heard of Carter. More impressive than the turnout of Carter supporters was the presence in the restaurant of several incognito members of the state legislature, there without notice to watch the Georgia peanut farmer in action.

(Goldsboro News-Argus)

The people of Pitt County have demonstrated that they are far bigger than the never-say-die critics of East Carolina University and its medical school.

In the recent bond vote providing millions for expansion of higher education facilities around the state, the people of Pitt County voted "yea."

This was despite the fact that not a penny of the bond funds is earmarked for East Carolina University.

And it is despite the fact that there are still those around the state who are bent on sabotaging the ECU medical school effort.

To win the medical school, the people of Pitt County — and many across the state, especially in the east— had to fight the traditional forces that hold that all wisdom and all influences for good must be centered upon and emanate from Chapel Hill.

These are those who feel that any funds appropriated to any other institution in the state system must first be extracted from what rightfully "belongs" to the University at Chapel Hill.

The people of Pitt County, guaranteed the medical school by an enlightened General Assembly over objections of the Board of Governors, easily could have turned thumbs down on a bond issue from which "their" institution would receive nothing.

But vengence is not in their makeup. They voted for the best interest of all the people of the state, without regard to what they, personally, stood to gain or lose.

Strength For Today

TRUE RICHES

God's greatest gift to man is love.

Many people deny this by the way they live. They make it plain that they think money is the greatest gift of God, or power, or the opportunity for self-indulgence. Other people, with more elevated standards, assume that the greastest gifts with which we can be endowed are health and an engaging personality.

But as God's arm reaches down into human affairs, surely the greastest gift he leaves with us is love. Animals do not have it (at least not in the way humans do). Any person who lacks the capacity to love lacks a major element of humanity. A mother's love for a child, the love of a husband and wife for each other, the love existing between friends — when we behold these realities we behold God's greatest gift to human hearts.

He who has love and nothing else is wealthy. He who lacks love but has every privilege the world can confer is poverty-stricken and miserable.

Some Don't Attract Investors

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (SP) — While the most popular stock market indicator, the Dow Jones index of 30 industrial stocks, has risen about 75 per cent from its low point on Dec. 6, 1974, many top executives are hardly satisfied.

Their feeling is like that of a lot of other Americans who, upon reading the good news about an economy once again moving forward, are inclined to think that they are excepted. They want to be included.

The big surge in stock prices, they say, has been concentrated in the bluest of the blue chips, leaving hundreds of other substantial companies in a very black mood.

The vast majority of companies are still experiencing difficulty in attracting attention to their shares, said C.V. Wood, Jr., chairman of the Committee of Publicly Owned Companies, of which 667 chief executives are members.

In material prepared for the Senate Finance Committee, Wood, who is president of McCulloch Oil Corp., called attention to what he said was a continued flight of small investors from the equity markets.

It is those investors, the committee believes, who provide the backbone of financing for some of the second and third tier companies — substantial, profitable companies that somehow don't attract the big institutional funds.

The institutions, it seems, choose to concentrate their money in the "establishment" companies, a good many of which are included in the compilations that make up the popular industrial average.

Odd-lot trading — which is trading in units of less than 100 shares, and which is supposed to be indicative of small investor activity — has not picked up in the most recent rally, despite a general upsurge in volume.

In February, Wood said, investors sold 11.2 million shares in odd-lots, and bought only 4.9 million shares. And something of the sort has been going on in mutual funds also, with redemptions running uncomfortably high.

The committee long has urged Congress to change the tax laws to encourage more participation by individual investors. It urgently seeks, along with other groups, a reduction of the double tax on corporate dividends.

The committee also seeks a $1,000 capital gains exclusion on securities transactions, and encouragement of employe stock-ownership plans as a means to broaden the shareowner base, which surveys show has been shrinking.

The problem, however, might not be entirely related to taxes. Some students of stock market activities feel they detect a fundamentally changed attitude in small investors, both toward the market itself and to the future in general.

Many of these investors were victimized by the wild up-down churning of the market in the late 1960s and are determined not to be caught again. Some of them seem to be less confident of vigorous, uninterrupted economic growth.

What this seems to indicate is that the individual investor, burned a few times but possessed of essential common sense, is still inclined to play it safe for a while more. He wants more assurance. And maybe he wants tax relief too.

Dark Horse Starts Fast

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J.—Gov. Edmund (Jerry) Brown, Jr. of California has performed a feat reminiscent of Republican Wendell Willkie's dark-horse nomination drive in 1940.

Just two weeks after announcing his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination, Brown has become one of the top contenders. In a national survey of Democrats completed last Monday, Brown wins 9 per cent of the vote, running ahead of three other Democratic contenders who have long campaigned for the nomination—Sen. Henry Jackson, Rep. Morris Udall and Fred Harris.

Sen. Frank Church, who announced his candidacy at approximately the same time as Brown, receives 3 per cent of the vote.

At the same time, Jimmy Carter and Sen. Hubert Humphrey remain deadlocked at the top of the Democratic list, receiving 30 and 29 per cent of the vote, respectively.

Brown's Youth Could Be Factor

Brown, a phenomenally popular governor of California at 37 years of age, owes a good deal of his rating among Democrats nationwide to his popularity with party members in the West. He does fairly well, however, in other sections of the nation, with 6 per cent of the vote outside his home region.

Ironically, it was Thomas Dewey's youth, as much as anything, that helped eliminate him from the 1940 presidential race. When World War II took an ominous turn in May with the German invasion of France and the Lowlands, Dewey, who up to that time had been far in front of his Republican competition for the nomination, began to weaken. Willkie, an older, more experienced man, took the lead at convention time and became the nominee.

"Here is a list of people who have been mentioned as possible presidential candidates for the Democratic party in 1976. (Respondents were handed a card with eight names.) Which one would you like to see nominated as the Democratic candidate for President in 1976?"

Choices Of Democrats For 1976 Nomination

Jimmy Carter	30 %
Sen. Hubert Humphrey	29
Gov. George Wallace	13
Gov. Edmund (Jerry) Brown	9
Sen. Henry Jackson	7
Rep. Morris Udall	4
Sen. Frank Church	3
Fred Harris	1
Undecided	4

Choices Of Democrats For 1976 Nomination

	LATEST	Mid-March	Early March	Feb.-March	Late January
Carter	30 %	28 %	26 %	12 %	4 %
Humphrey	29	30	27	18	17
Wallace	13	16	15	14	18
Brown	9	—	—	—	—
Jackson	7	11	15	5	5
Udall	4	4	5	3	3
Church	3	—	—	1	1
Harris	1	2	3	1	1

Among Independents

Carter also continues to be the first choice of 31 per cent of independents for the Democratic nomination, holding a 2-to-1 lead over his closest challengers, Wallace and Humphrey. As with Democrats, Brown is also the fourth pick of independent voters for the Democratic nomination, winning 11 per cent of their vote.

The results reported today are based on the responses of Democrats and independents out of a total sample of 1,460 adults, 18 and older, interviewed in person during the period March 26-29. Of the total sample, 710 respondents consider themselves Democrats and 434 say they are independents.

bona-fide celebrity possibly on the way to the White House—that has made Carter capable of uprooting Wisconsin liberals for whom winning has suddenly become paramount and for whom ideological commitment to once-sacred-cow issues has become foolish.

On the stump, Carter was precisely consistent with past rhetorical efforts in other primary states, showing little if any change by way of wooing liberals in this liberal state as contrasted to the Democrats in North Carolina or Illinois.

Just as in the past, he refused here to get pinned down on hard issues. In an exchange with reporters which grew angry after repeated equivocations, the candidate refused to state flatly whether he would or would not use America's vast food surpluses as a bargaining level against the Soviet Union. He slipped in an undercut against President Ford that was clearly unfair, charging him with letting "electronic" materials "and Pepsi-Cola" keep moving to Russia last year despite a decision "to withhold sales of grain."

In fact, the withholding of grain was a unique case to prevent another great grain robbery. It had nothing whatsoever to do with bargaining levers against Moscow, or favoring the President's corporate buddies.

But Wisconsin Democrats once committed to unalloyed liberal crusades could not have cared less. They weren't listening to rhetoric, but hoping they have gambled correctly that Jimmy Carter is going to be nominated for President; hoping, in short, that they have picked a winner who will end an eight-year Republican rule and give them a piece of the action.

completed — was ordered closed last October, a week after it became operational. Twelve sites were to have been built in various parts of the country to protect the nation and its military installations from enemy missile attack. But Congress decided that the usefulness of the ABM system in intercepting enemy intercontinental missiles was essentially nullified by the Soviet Union's switch to multiple warheads. So the decision was made to cancel the multi-billion dollar system that had caused such a controversy in the '60s between Congress and the Defense Department.

The complex of missiles, radar and computers in Nekoma and other prairie towns 100 miles northwest of Grand Forks took eight years to build. An ABM site in Montana was partially constructed, then torn down. Work never began on the 10 other ABM sites because of a 1972 U.S.-Soviet treaty limiting each nation to two ABM sites.

Robertson, walking through the huge missile site radar building, finds it strange. "It's silent now and the lights don't even blink."

When the ABM site here became fully operational last October, it had 447 military personnel, 135 government civilians and 1,200 private contractor employes, most of them living in nearby Langdon. By Oct. 1, the military will be cut to 25, and the rest to about 500 while the decision is made on what to do with the white elephant on the prairie.

A Conservative View

Newest Book Calls Ted Kennedy Out On Fouls

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Somewhere in this broad land, to judge from the polls, a goodly number of voters have been waiting for Teddy. They can forget it. With publication of Robert Sherrill's "The Last Kennedy," the senior senator from Massachusetts no longer remains in the ball game. He's been called out on fouls.

The book is a bombshell. It picks up on the piece Sherrill wrote in July, 1974, for the New York Times, amplifies the conflicting evidence, and comes to a crushing conclusion: Kennedy's cover-up of the Chappaquiddick tragedy makes Nixon's cover-up of the Watergate scandal look like a child's game of peek-a-boo.

Kennedy's manipulation of "everything and everyone," in Sherrill's view, "was undoubtedly the most brilliant cover-up ever achieved in a nation where investigative procedures are well developed and where the principles of equal justice prevail at least during some of those moments when people are watching."

A dozen other books, to be sure, long ago sought to expose the half truths and whole lies of Chappaquiddick. Sherrill's stinging narrative carries a special quality all its own. He comes to this wretched affair as a certified liberal: He is Washington correspondent for the Nation. His profound disappointment in Edward Kennedy—his shame and scorn for the senator's conduct—can be sensed like hot tears, unshed, beneath the cool discipline of his prose. In quite another context, I myself once knew the feeling.

It will be seven years this July since Mary Jo Kopechne died in the watery wreck of Kennedy's Oldsmobile sedan. Many persons will have forgotten the characters in this drama, the lines they spoke, the roles they played. Sherrill's gift is to bring it all back.

Everything that we know— really know— of Chappaquiddick can be summed up in a few sentences. On July 18, 1969, Kennedy went to a cookout party on Chappaquiddick Island at Edgartown, Mass. The guests included five men, all of them old Kennedy friends, and six young women, all of them veterans of Robert Kennedy's 1968 campaign. Some time that night, Kennedy's car went off a narrow bridge. Mary Jo Kopechne's body was retrieved the next morning.

On July 25, Kennedy pleaded guilty to a charge that he "did operate a certain motor vehicle upon a public way and did go away after knowingly causing injury. . .without stopping and making known his name, residence, and the number of his motor vehicle." Kennedy was sentenced to two months in the workhouse, suspended. His driver's license was suspended for one year.

Those are the bare bones of the story. After seven years, those bare bones are about all we have. Twelve critical hours are still blank. As Sherrill makes clear from an exhaustive examination of the record, it is impossible to this day to put together a clear, corroborated account of who attended the party, what they had to drink, when Kennedy and Miss Kopechne departed, whether they left together, how and when Kennedy got across the channel to Edgartown, whether the young woman drowned or was asphyxiated. And so on.

This is because some of the evidence was destroyed, some of the police work was amazingly feeble, and a long-delayed inquest was conducted with curious ineptitude. Mainly, the mysteries remain because everyone clammed up. They stonewalled it. "The word is Nixon's," remarks Sherrill, "but the practice is Kennedy's."

"I don't believe the public is generally aware of how very successful simple silence can be in a situation like this," Sherrill says. In the case of Watergate, Nixon kept talking and his aides kept babbling, and relentless and unfriendly investigators could not be suppressed. In the case of Chappaquiddick, Kennedy made one cotton-candy statement, his friends locked their lips, and the bloodhounds of justice curled up like puppies and slept. After a while, the frustrated press went away.

"The Last Kennedy" is a reminder that books can affect history. One thinks of Tom Paine, Edmund Burke, Emile Zola, Harriet Beecher Stowe— a list could be long extended of writers whose works, in and of themselves, shaped the course of events. Sherrill's damning version of "J'accuse," coming in a spring when an untarnished Kennedy could have his party's nomination for the asking, will find its place on this significant shelf.

Revision Of Income Tax System Can Open New Pandora's Box In U.S.

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

One of the truly remarkable things about the people of this country is that they don't stage a revolt, or at least a sit-down strike, every April when the federal income tax deadline rolls around.

For most income producers, the tribute to Washington is a burden, in some degree, It cuts into what taxpayers can spend for their own needs and desires. And as heavy as the tax load is, it is never enough to pay the government's bills. The continuing deficits fire inflation, which is another tax, only in a different form.

But paying the tax, as rough as this may be, is only part of the burden imposed by Washington. The mechanics of trying to figure out Caesar's due drives taxpayers up the wall, or sends them flocking to lawyers, accountants, or store front operators for help. The laws, the rules and regulations have become something of a sadistic maze.

Like so many "made in Washington" messes, this one has a political explanation: Except for the so-called loopholes Congress has voted into the tax structure as it increased levies, today's schedule of rates would simply be unbearable. The long list of deductions, exclusions, credits and exemptions serves to cushion the impact of the steeply graduated rate structure.

The result isn't limited to confusion on tax returns. It involves inequities between taxpayers, depending on the source of income dollars and the use made of them. And with the pinch of inflation, the Treasury sees signs of rising resentment among taxpayers. More seem to be giving themselves the benefit of the doubt when it comes to using the loopholes.

Each loophole has its defenders, as well as its critics. The home buyer likes the idea of deducting his mortgage interest from otherwise taxable income. Those who give to churches, educational and charitable organizations prize these deductions. And then there's the write-off of some state and local taxes, income from municipal securities and deductions for medical expenses, to name a few more.

But the Treasury under Secretary William Simon apparently has concluded that the system isn't working too well and is bound to create real trouble between the tax collector and the taxpayer as time goes on. The Treasury long has had a fear that federal tax law compliance, called "voluntary," would decline as the burden of state and local taxes rose.

In a recent speech, and also in testimony before Congressional Committees, Simon has said that the Treasury is thinking of a radical revision of the tax structure. This would simply wipe out the so-called loopholes and greatly reduce the tax rate schedule. He has talked of a starting rate of say 10 percent-12 percent with graduates up to a top rate of 35 percent-40 percent.

The Secretary estimates that such a system would yield just as much revenue as the current structure which starts at 15 percent and goes to 70 percent. The burden of taxes would be shifted in major ways. But generally speaking, most taxpayers with income up to $20,000 would benefit. That's about 85 percent of the taxpayers.

In the past, Congress has been reluctant to close the loopholes, although they have played a part in Presidential elections for years. (It might be noted that nearly all the loopholes have been voted when the Democrats were in power.) The start of course, was in the first income tax law. But since rates were low, loopholes were not of much value until the old Roosevelt New Deal got going in the 1930s. Politically, it made hay out of "soaking the rick," but was careful to preserve old shelters and erect some new ones.

Four years ago, loopholes played a part in the McGovern-Nixon campaign. But while the Democrats won a two-to-one majority in the House, they failed to carry through. They did take a swing at depletion allowances for oil, but backed off on other counts.

Just this week, the Ways and Means Committee voted a new system for interest on municipal securities. If states and cities wish, they can issue fully taxable bonds, with the U. S. Treasury paying a subsidy to cover the higher interest rate. This taxable interest would make the bonds less attractive to high income investors, so would, in a way, amount to some loophole plugging.

But there was another consideration. Under present conditions, pension funds, foundations and other major tax exempt organizations stay away from securities. The interest rate is lower and these investors have no interest in the tax exempt feature. The real aim seems to have been to provide a new market for municipal securities.

Certain Jobs Seem To Gravitate To A Person

I've always wondered why certain jobs end up being assigned to one sex or the other. Take cleaning the bathroom for example. You would think that a job like that would call for the sheer brute strength of a man, but the only men I know who clean bathrooms are janitors—and they don't even do it at home. Then, of course, there's my husband. Getting him to clean the bathroom is like asking Lawrence Welk's orchestra to play "Classical Gas" in anything faster than 2-4 time.

The other day I finally got fed up with his attitude. So I told him, "You clean the bathroom. I have to study for a test."

"Can't it wait another week?" he asked.

"Not unless you want to wear shoes in the shower to keep your feet clean."

"But I can't clean the bathroom. I don't know how," he said, burying his head in a newspaper.

I gave him a disgusted look. "What's to know? If you can tell the difference between a sponge and Comet, you can clean a bathroom."

"But I might get rough, red hands!" he argued.

"If you don't clean the bathroom," I threatened, "I'll feed you tuna noodle surprise every night for the next week."

Faced with this strangling prospect, he consented to clean, but only after I showed him how. So we gathered together our cleaning supplies and trooped upstairs to the bathroom.

"First you do the bathtub," I explained. "This is a fiberglass tub, so you use something that won't scratch it. Here's the sponge."

GAIL MICHAELS

"You put more elbow grease into petting the cat," I grumbled.

"If you don't like the way I do it, do it yourself. Now for the toilet." He walked over and flushed it. "That's done. Now what's next?"

"YOu call that cleaning?!" I screamed.

"What's wrong with it? That's new water, isn't it? Now that we're finished here, let's go clean the other bathroom."

"Never mind," I sighed. "I'll do it myself."

He looked at me and grinned slyly. "I kind of thought you might."

Several nights later he told me, "You know, I think you're right. We should exchange jobs once in awhile. For instance, this year you ought to prepare the income tax return."

"But I don't know how," I said, burying my head in a pile of diapers.

"I'll show you," he answered generously. "Here's the IRS short form." He handed me a booklet over 20 pages long. "Read it."

"I can't read all that fine print," I protested. "It might blind me."

"If you don't read it, I won't ever clean the bathroom again."

"Big deal."

"Now look," he continued persistently. "Here's the part about exemptions. That's the most important."

I skimmed over the section. "From what it says here, we'd get more money off if we were single," I said. "Why don't we do like that couple on Sixty Minutes and get a divorce in Haiti. We could have a nice vacation and for less than what we would save by filing as singles."

"Unfortunately, we're not in that tax bracket," Phillip said grimly. "But don't tempt me."

"Okay but I think we ought to at least itemize all the household expenses instead of taking the general exemption."

"Are you crazy?!" he screamed. "We'd have to pay more taxes then!"

"I know but itemizing the expenses gives my work more prestige. Now either I do it my way, or YOU fill it out. What's it going to be?"

"I'll fill it out," he groaned.

I gave him my sweetest smile. "I kind of thought you might."

Chicago School Officials Await Busing Order

By TERRY E. JOHNSON

CHICAGO (UPI) — While many urban school systems are under court orders to bus public school students to achieve racial integration, Chicago school officials and community leaders are waiting.

School officials are waiting for the federal Office of Civil Rights to approve plans to transfer teachers to achieve a racial balance. The Illinois Board of Education is waiting for the Chicago Board of Education to come up with plans for integrating students.

And civil rights leaders of Operation PUSH and the NAACP are waiting and hoping they won't have to use the final weapon: cross-district busing.

Unlike Detroit, Boston and Milwaukee, no lawsuits have been filed in Chicago to force the board of education to implement a student busing plan.

The Chicago Board of Education, however, was found to be in violation of federal desegregration guidelines by the federal civil rights office.

School officials were ordered to submit a plan for faculty integration of all public schools or face the possible loss of $150 million in federal aid from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The school board submitted a 500-page document to federal officials calling for the transfer of 2,500 teachers and to achieve a 70-30 racial mix within 18 months. Federal officials are studying the plan but a similar one was rejected previously.

The Illinois Board of Education also had ordered the Chicago school district, along with nine others, to submit plans for student and faculty desegregration within 30 days or be placed on probation.

State School chief Joseph Cronin said if a district fails to desegregrate after an extended period of probation, the board of education could, as a last resort, refuse to spend federal funds in the district.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, national director of Operation PUSH, said the plan submitted by Chicago school officials to transfer faculty does not go far enough.

"There's no way the plan guarantees that the most experienced teachers will be transferred to schools where they are needed the most," Jackson said.

"Our organization, along with several other community groups, is researching the possibility of filing a lawsuit to force the school board to implement a cross-district busing plan.

"Busing has become the new code word for urban racism. If we need to use the bus, then we must use it," Jackson said.

Carl Fequa, executive director of the Chicago chapter of the NAACP, said his organization was considering alternatives to busing. He said there are "many complicated factors relating to the Chicago school districts and busing.

"We have to look at the housing situation here and the fact that the school district has a majority black student population," Fequa said. "Cross-district busing would take a lot of planning and meet strong resistance," he said.

Fequa, whose national organization has been a strong supporter of busing, said "whether or not busing is going to be a solution in Chicago is another question. The whole issue of busing here," he said, "will have to be re-thought through."

Chicago Schools Supt. Joseph P. Hannon called student desegregration guidelines issued by the state unrealistic.

Hannon, whose appointment as schools superintendent was attacked by Jackson, also released a staff report saying the most important factor to integrating schools is "open housing" because "segregation in schools is largely a result of segregated housing."

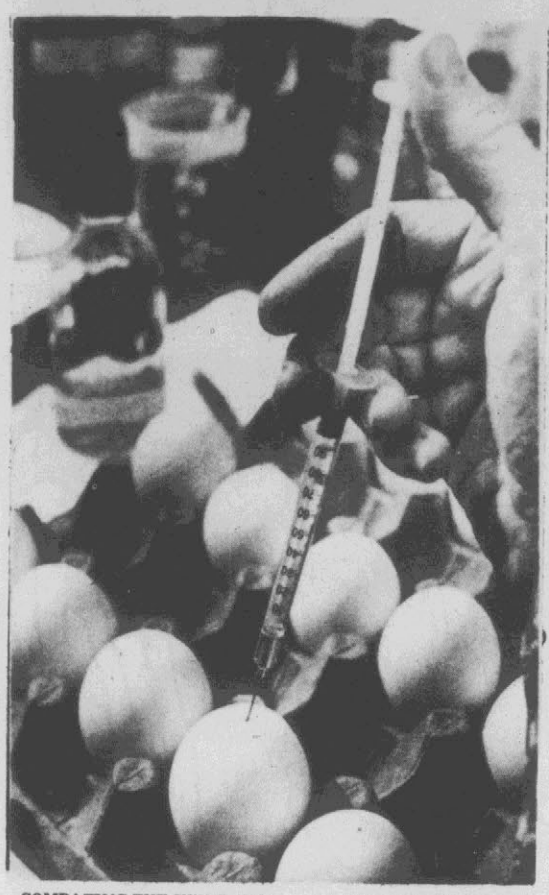
The report also indicated that any attempt to meet state guidelines would "trigger population shifts that may not be desirable for the city in the long run."

Figures compiled by school officials show a steady increase in the number of black and other minority students attending city schools. The figures show that between 1970 and 1975, black enrollment in Chicago public schools increased from 54.6 to 58.4. In the same period, white enrollment dropped from 34.6 to 26.8.

Leon D. Finney Jr., executive director and president of The Woodlawn Organization (TWO), said because of the current racial mix in Chicago schools, any busing plan would have to cross district lines.

"If busing is the only alternative," Finney said, "I'd like to see our organization negotiate with the board before going to the courts. We've got to determine if busing is the solution. And if it is, it's the solution of the last resort."

Split Exists On Flu Plan



COMBATING THE SWINE FLU—A technician at the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta uses a hyperdermic needle to inject the virus of the swine influenza into an egg in the process used to make the serum for the disease. The subject of swine influenza is being discussed at the CDC by state public health officials and private physicians from across the country. (AP Wirephoto)

ATLANTA (P) — State public health officials and private physicians are split over President Ford's plan for nationwide immunization against a swine-type flu virus. Too much, say some; too little, say others.

About 300 public health officers and immunologists, heads of state medical associations and private physicians from all 50 states met here Friday at the National Center for Disease Control, which will coordinate the proposed vaccination program.

"I question the national scare tactics that have been used," said Dr. George Behnke of the Wisconsin Medical Society. "I think they (the government) have overreacted to this thing. I wonder how much politics is involved."

But while Behnke and others criticized the immunization program, it appeared to have at least some supporters at the meeting.

"Our responsibility is prevention," said Dr. George E. Hardy of Birmingham, Ala., president of the National Association of County Health Officers, speaking in support of the program.

Ford asked for $135 million for flu vaccine for 213 million Americans and the House Appropriations Committee approved the request Friday.

In making his request, the President warned that "unless we take effective counteraction, there could be an epidemic of this dangerous disease next fall and winter here in the United States."

Crackdown On Prostitution

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP)—For the second time in as many weeks, Fayetteville police are cracking down on prostitution with the emphasis this time on men, particularly servicemen.

Police Det. Bill Johnson said more than 70 warrants have been obtained against 37 persons, 30 of them men. The warrants were obtained by undercover agents, he said.

Of those named in the warrants, 14 are Marines from Camp Lejuene and six are soldiers stationed at nearby Ft. Bragg. A major thrust of the crackdown is discouraging military personnel from coming to Fayetteville to engage the services of prostitutes, Johnson said, adding that the arrests are also expected to reduce the local drug traffic, especially heroin.

Among the charges are engaging in prostitution, aiding and abetting prostitution and crimes against nature.

Two weeks ago, a similar crackdown resulted in 35 arrests.

The prostitution offenses are misdemeanors, but 10 of those accused are charged with crimes against nature, a felony with a maximum prison sentence of 10 years.

By late Friday, 11 persons had been arrested.

GREEK TOURISM

ATHENS (UPI) — American tourists headed the list of foreign visitors to Greece in 1975, the National Tourist Organization announced Wednesday. Out of 3,172,986 foreigners who visited Greece last year, 458,575 were U.S. citizens.

NCSU Woman Elected

RALEIGH (AP)—Even though men outnumber women four to one, students at North Carolina State University have elected a woman president of the student body.

Lu Anne Rogers, a junior from Roxboro majoring in architecture, won the presidency in balloting Thursday. She won by a 864-853 margin over Bobby Strickland of Raleigh. This year, Miss Rogers served as president of the student senate, the second highest elected student office.

Agnew Rejects Requests

CROFTON, Md. (AP) — Former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew has rejected requests that he make public the transcripts of plea bargaining sessions that led to his removal from office.

"Very recently, I read the transcripts at the Federal Judicial Center in Washington. The transcripts contain no information which is not already known and which has not been fully discussed by the news media," Agnew told the Associated Press Friday.

Sons-In-Laws Take Issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Nixon's two sons-in-law vehemently deny that they thought the former president was mentally unstable or would take his own life shortly before he resigned.

Edward Cox and David Eisenhower took issue with the way they and Nixon are portrayed in a new book on Nixon's last days as president by reporters Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein, who won a Pulitzer Prize for the Washington Post with their reporting of the Watergate scandal.

Quake In Turkey

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — An earthquake has killed four persons and demolished scores of homes in Turkey's eastern province of Agri, on the Russian border, the Turkish state radio reported today.

The radio said 1,500 head of livestock also perished in the quake which struck the remote and mountainous region Friday night.

Optimistic Over Finances

WASHINGTON (AP) — New York City's financial health is being described optimistically by Mayor Abraham Beame, who says his city should be "self-sufficient" by 1978. But federal officials say they see several obstacles to such success.

Crash Suit Settled Out Of Court

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A multi-million dollar lawsuit against Eastern Airlines was settled out of court for an undisclosed amount of money Friday.

Members of a federal jury said the settlement came minutes before they were going to return a verdict favorable to the airline.

The settlement came in a suit filed on behalf of the family of Charles McDonald. McDonald, 44, a Charleston, S.C. newspaper executive, was one of 72 persons killed in the crash of an Eastern jet near Charlotte Sept. 11, 1974.

The suit was orginally filed for $1.75 million but during closing arguments the plaintiffs asked for "not less than $10 million" to punish the airline.

Attorneys for the airline, anxious to avoid a jury decision on punitive damages, approached the attorneys for Mrs. McDonald while the jury was out Friday.

Jurors said they had taken a preliminary vote on actual damages and had basically settled on awarding $500,000 to McDonald's widow.

The jurors spent three weeks listening to highly technical and often tedious testimony.

Of the 78 cases that could have been filed as a result of the crash, 66 have been settled out of court. Another five are pending in courts in Charlotte, Miami, Chicago and Charleston.

More Reckless In '76

RALEIGH (AP)—Instead of wearing seat belts and driving more safely, North Carolinians appear to be acting more recklessly than they were last year, Motor Vehicles Commissioner Edward L. Powell has concluded.

Powell's gloomy outlook was precipitated by Friday's release of traffic accident figures through February. There were 195 fatalities as of Feb. 29 compared to 193 in the first two months of last year. And, he said, the total number of accidents went up 12.8 per cent.

County roads—33.9 per cent—had the highest increase in accidents, but all other types of roads also showed increases in accidents this year compared to the first two months of 1975.

In North Carolina, there would be a decline of 294 deaths and there would be 33,883 fewer persons injured if only 60 per cent of the people wore seat belts, Powell said.

Halifax Celebration Opens On April 9

COSTUMED VISITORS . . . will be on hand to greet visitors at the Constitution-Burges House when Halifax celebrates the 200th anniversary of the Halifax Resolves the weekend of April 9-11, with one event set for April 12. (Photo courtesy Div. of Archives and History)

By BEVERLY WOLTER,
Dept. of Cultural Resources

Halifax — In this land of red clay fields, its highways lined with pines with occasional dogwoods and redbuds poking through, events that took place as far back as 200 years ago are being commemorated in a weeklong celebration of those earlier happenings.

Then, people looked forward to a new regime, a new government, when 148 men, meeting April 12, 1776, in the fourth Provincial Congress of North Carolina drew up a document, the "Halifax Resolves," which declared for the first time in the colonies, that a "full and final separation from Great Britain" should be made.

The Resolves were not only a declaration for North Carolina, but also were a recommendation to the Continental Congress meeting in Philadelphia that independence should be declared by all the colonies.

The people in Halifax and Halifax County, which includes Roanoke Rapids, Weldon, Littleton, Enfield and Scotland Neck, are planning to commemorate that event of 1766 with a weeklong program of activities.

Some will be events such as bands playing, parades, tableaux, clogging, dancing and craft demonstration. More lasting will be activities that involve restoration of buildings and the erection of a visitor center and amphitheater.

Gov. James E. Holshouser Jr. will be the principal speaker on Monday, April 12.

Cultural Resources has been involved in the project to help restore historic buildings and in constructing a visitor center for the Halifax state historic site. The center will be the largest in the state. Its displays are geared not to one event or one locale but to the Roanoke Valley area comprising Halifax, Northampton, Warren and Bertie Counties.

Besides the center, a new amphitheater will be dedicated. Its first use will be June 14-28 when a new outdoor drama, "First for Freedom," will be presented. Written by Maxville B. Williams, an educator and native of Halifax County, and directed by Ira David Wood, a Raleigh theater producer and director, the play concerns the signing of the Resolves.

A major event preceding the Monday activities will take place Saturday, April 10, designated "Agriculture Day," when Quentin West, administrator of the economic research service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, will speak.

An exhibit of agricultural equipment of the past will be shown through the week.

Friday, April 9, will be "Crafts Day," with emphasis on crafts exhibits and demonstrations.

A special religious service is scheduled on Sunday, April 11. The final three days of the festival have been set aside as "education days" for special visits by school children.

Musical activities will go on throughout the festival with string bands, folk singers, military bands, church choirs, and a group called "The Alley Cats" taking part. "The Alley Cats" are a band of retired men who get together to practice banjo music of the '20s on Sunday nights.

Chicagoan Is The Last Of The Old Organ Doctors

BY POLLY ULLRICH

CHICAGO (UPI) — C. Omar Whaley settled himself behind his 1906 Packard reed organ, fingered the keys, and pulled out a stop.

"Let's give it some brilliance," he sang out, and broke into the hymn, "Let the Lower Lights Be Burning."

Whaley smiled. "It's my cup of tea, I just love organs," he sighed.

At a vigorous age 77, Whaley has restored more than 250 reed organs, a variety that went out of style at the turn of the century.

Whaley fields telephone calls from collectors around the United States who ask for advice about the organs.

"Whaley's the only expert I know of," said Ralph Wieand, an organ specialist at the Lyon-Healy music company in Chicago. "He is the one I tell people to call. When he dies, I don't know what we'll do."

Whaley will inspect a reed organ at a home for $5 and carfare.

For a complete $100 overhaul, an organ is transferred to his small workshop at home on the northwest side of Chicago. There, he takes it apart, cleans and shellacs it, and replaces parts.

Many are in bad repair, some have been patched. "But I never sneer at someone's efforts to make an organ play," he said.

Disassembled organs — he calls each an "opus" — are carefully scattered throughout his tiny kitchen and basement workshop.

He pointed to one with a modern brand name. "I can tell this was originally a Svhultz organ, made in 1904. They can't fool me."

"I JUST LOVE ORGANS", says 77-year-old C. Omar Whaley, who has restored more than 250 reed organs. (UPI Photo)

Whaley said he labors over each organ for six weeks. "That allows time for the glue to set. Besides, I'm an old man, and I deserve some leisure," he said.

Reed organs are played by pushing two pedals under the keyboard, while fingering the keys. The pedals suck air into the bellows and through reeds.

Whaley says demand for reed organs has boomed.

"The sky is the limit," he said. "People will pay $700 to $800 for a piece of old junk. People get the fever and they start collecting."

Whaley's "fever" began at an early age when he was forbidden to touch the family organ in Janesville, Wis. His parents were musicians.

"When I was little, I was told I couldn't go near the organ, kids mustn't get near it," he said. "So I marked out organ pedals on the carpet with chalk, and played an imaginary keyboard."

"When I finally was allowed to play, I took to it like a duck to water."

The passion took hold for good in 1938, when he restored his first reed organ. He bought it in Dixon, Ill., for $2.

"During the early '40s, I would go out to Freeport and Rockford (Ill.) and get six reed organs at a time, renovate, and sell them," he said.

Whaley restored and donated a Packard reed organ to the Chicago Historical Society in the late 1930s. He can't remember the exact date.

But he does remember the public Christmas concert in 1940, when he played Christmas carols on that organ.

When he got to "Silent Night," he told the crowd, "Let's crack the ceiling," with singing.

"And they did!" he remembered. "That brought tears to my eyes."

Now, Whaley says the supply of reed organs is dwindling.

"The best place to find them is way out in the country in towns where people live a long time in the same house. You can find them in woodsheds and attics."

"I was 70 years old and in debt when my mother died," he said. "Now I enjoy my life here, and I love these organs."

He retired as a secretary for a Chicago company in 1965, and retired as an organist in 1971, after 50 years of playing for 10 Chicago-area churches.

"I don't want to play for people any more," he said. He looked at his sturdy, old hands. "My hands are getting stiff, and I'm tired of having to be at a place at a certain time to play."

Then he strode to his favorite "opus," the hand-carved oak Packard that dominates his living room. He sat down with a flourish.

Tut Treasures Will Tour U.S.

By TIMOTHY M. PHELPS

CAIRO (AP) — For 3,300 years the golden treasures of Tut-ankhamun, the boy king, lay hidden beneath the desert sands of Egypt's Valley of the Tombs of the Kings.

Finally, in 1922, British archeologist Howard Carter's candle illuminated the wondrous ancient cache, the likes of which had never been seen by the Western world.

In November a portion of Carter's discovery will begin a two-year tour of the United States. The exhibition will begin in Washington and will visit Chicago, New Orleans, Los Angeles and Seattle, ending up in New York at the Metropolitan Museum.

Officials of the Metropolitan predict the exhibit and a "merchandising" campaign of well-made copies will spark a new fashion craze for ancient Egypt in clothes and jewelry.

Egyptian officials expect to boost American tourism to Egypt and hope to use the country's share of the profits from admissions and the sale of the copies to build a special museum for the collection near the Giza pyramids.

Bruce Hoheb of the Metropolitan is hard at work in a small side room of the cold, dark Egyptian Museum in Cairo making molds of jewelry and other items from Tut-ankhamun's tomb.

"Many people when they think of Egyptian art think of still, stock figures," Hoheb said. But through his work he has come to appreciate what a "practical, lively, sensuous group of people" the ancient Egyptians were.

"I was stunned. Some of their stuff is really powerful sculpture," he said.

Headlining the exhibit will be the massive gold mask inlaid with stripes of blue glass that covered the head of Tut-ankhamun's mummy. Dr. Abdul Kader Selim, director general of the Egyptian Museum, says the stunning mask is insured for more than $1 million but is easily worth over $10 million.

Others among the 55 items selected for the show are:

The roughly 3-foot-tall statue of the goddess Selket, made of wood and covered with gold leaf. The statue, described by Hoheb as a "sumptuous nude," has never before been out of its case since Carter discovered it standing guard over Tut-ankhamun's internal organs. One of four miniature coffins holding these organs is also in the exhibit.

A shrine of wood covered with sheet gold. Scenes delicately etched into the gold depict the young king (he died at 18) and his queen, hand in hand, fowling in a papyrus boat, at sport in the marshes, and Tut-ankhamun, seated next to a lion, shooting birds with arrows supplied by his queen.

Statues, jars, jewelry — the kind of things a king would need in his afterlife.

Hoheb said the reproductions of the jewelry and other items would be done in different materials to suit different pocketbooks.

Some small items of jewelry might sell for a few dollars whereas a few exact replicas in the original materials of gold and semiprecious stones might go for thousands, he said. Even Selket is being reproduced, not from a mold but by Hoheb's skillful hands.

Find Thicker Skinned Men

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — It has now been scientifically proved that women's skin is thinner than men's and it's also softer, or "significantly more compressible," as the researchers say.

Dr. Johnny Bliznak and Dr. Tom W. Staple used a new x-ray technique to measure skin thickness in 418 patients at the Mallinckrodt Institute of Radiology here and substantiated what some have long suspected. The difference is only a fraction of a millimeter but it is a difference and it occurs no matter what the weight or height.

For instance, the median skin thickness of a 120-pound, 25-year-old woman is 1.17 millimeters, while the skin of a man of that weight and age is 1.41 mm thick.

Their study, published in "Radiology," showed there was no significant difference in skin thickness between blacks and whites. They also found that skin thickness decreases with age and is somewhat greater in obese patients. "Height and race do not have a statistically significant bearing on skin thickness values," they concluded.

Fleet Of Floating Hotels Growing In Miami

By BARNEY SEIBERT

MIAMI (UPI) — While many of the proud ocean liners of another era are now useless relics permanently docked, more than one million seafarers will book passage this year on Miami's growing fleet of "floating hotels."

That makes the South Florida port the undisputed leader of the world's pleasure cruise business.

Twice as many travelers will set sail from Miami than even New York.

"No one disputes us when we say we have the world's greatest concentration of cruise ships here," said port director Robert Waldron.

Fifteen cruise ships call Miami home this year. Next year, it will be 17.

In addition, another 250,000 or so passengers will walk the gang planks of cruise liners at Port Everglades in Fort Lauderdale, 25 miles to the north.

Some of the cruise liners operating out of Miami are virtual floating gambling casinos, but publicist Douglas Gillett of the Port of Miami doesn't think that's the real reason for the bull market in winter cruises.

"It's the floating hotel concept, the water, the groceries, the cuisine. All the ships operating out of here have Miami water aboard and the food is pure. There's less chance of Montezuma's Revenge (a common term for intestinal upsets) than there is staying at a resort hotel on some island in the Caribbean," he said.

Cruising was a minor part of Miami's sea commerce a quarter century ago. Only 61,000 passengers boarded ships in the city in 1950.

The total had soared to 851,164 in 1973, then dipped to 728,201 in 1974, the year of the Arab oil embargo. Last year the total rose to 804,926, and this year the figure will be more than 1 million, Gillett said.

"I see no reason we shouldn't go over the million mark," said Waldron.

Nearly half of those boarding liners at Miami will be taking "quickie" three or four-day cruises. But last year, for the first time, the number of persons taking one-week cruises exceeded the total on the shorter cruises. Meanwhile, demand for two-week cruises has remained virtually unchanged at about 10 per cent of the total passengers for the past five years, Gillett said.

There are eight passenger terminals at the Port of Miami and on Saturdays every one is in use. Mondays and Fridays are the next most important with five terminals in use.

Along with the 15 cruises ships which call Miami home port, the city is a port of call for five other liners involved in the Caribbean and South American cruise business. However, these contributed fewer than 5,000 to last year's passenger count.

Many of the 15 cruise liners are American-owned but all operate under foreign flags. Some are Liberian, some Panamanian, some Italian, Greek, Norwegian, Dutch.

The largest of the Miami cruise liners are the 27,250-ton sister ships TSS Carnivale and TSS Mardi Gras, each of which carries more than 800 passengers on week-long cruises to such ports as San Juan, P.R., St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands, Nassau and St. Maarten. The smallest is the little SS Bon Vivant of 6,644 tons, which hauls up to 350 passengers on three or four-day cruises to Nassau and Freeport in the Bahamas. The Bon Vivant is to be replaced by the newer, larger SS Vera Cruz next season.

Miami got a boost last year when the Army Corps of Engineers completed a dredging project which deepened the channel into the port to 39 feet. "It is deep enough now to handle any passenger ship afloat," Gillett said. The channel is 900 feet wide and all the Miami-based cruise ships enter the port and dock without the help of tugs.

However, the port is still hampered by a "dog-leg" turn in the channel off the south tip of Miami Beach. Pilots are reluctant to steer the largest of liners around that dog-leg and that is the reason Britain's giant Queen Elizabeth II is still using Port Everglades this year instead of the Port of Miami.

"The next project for us will be cutting through spoil banks from dredging to give us a straight channel into the ocean," Gillett said.

The Port of Miami is located on Dodge Island, just off downtown Miami in Biscayne Bay and linked to the mainland by a causeway. The causway also carries a railroad spur to the port.

Ocean cruising pumps about $100 million into the Miami economy each year. The port provides jobs for 3,000 persons, directly, creates work in related fields for about 12,000 others, Gillett said.

Heating System Selection Is a Key Energy Decision

Choosing the proper heating system for a new home is a major decision — one that will have a major influence on your future energy needs and costs. The right heating system gives you not only comfort and convenience, but it is an important factor in determining resale value.

Present and future fuel supplies are major considerations in your heating system selection. Energy demands and energy resources are changing every year in the United States and elsewhere in the world.

Equipment and energy prices are rising, so get full information about operating, installation and maintenance costs.

INSULATION

Whatever heating system you choose, the better the insulation, the more efficient the system. Insulation should form a complete thermal blanket around the heated portion of your home. To achieve this, install insulation in all floors, walls, ceiling and/or rafters, fitting it snugly to prevent heat flow.

The purpose of insulation is to slow heat flow from one area to another. Its effectiveness is measured by its "R" value or "Resistance." The higher the "R" value, the better the insulation. Different materials require various thicknesses to meet a specific R-value. Ratings of R-19 are recommended for ceilings, R-11 for walls and floors.

Since approximately 40% of your home heat can escape from an uninsulated ceiling, and 16% each through walls and floors, adequate insulation usually pays for itself within the first few years of installation.

Concert Choir To Perform Thursday

The ECU Concert Choir under the direction of Brett Watson will appear in concert in Wright Auditorium on Thursday, April 8 at 8:15 p.m.

The concert will open with two sacred motets by Victoria, the greatest of the renaissance Spanish composers. The motets will be sung from Wright balcony in the tradition of 16th century cathedral singing. Charles Ives' musical setting of Psalm 24 and Hugo Wolf's Six Sacred Songs will be performed from the Wright stage.

Featured on the program will be Johann Sebastian Bach's Cantata No. 4, Christ Lay in Death's Dark Prison. This cantata for Easter, the most popular of all the Bach cantatas, deals with the crucifixion of Christ and the joy of the triumph of life over death. The cantata will be performed with harpsichord, brass, and string orchestra.

The second half of the concert will include Five Flower Songs by Benjamin Britten as well as folk songs and spirituals. Jackie Willis Rausch of Morehead City and Vickie Lynn Spargo of Raleigh will be featured as soloists.

An admission fee of $1.00 will be charged. Proceeds will be used to help defray expenses of the choir's upcoming spring tour.

Jan de Gaetani Recital Is Scheduled For Tuesday

Mezzo-soprano Jan de Gaetani will be appearing in the Mendenhall Student Center Theatre on Tuesday at 8:00 p.m., under the sponsorship of the Student Union Artists Series Committee.

Miss De Gaetani's command of contemporary masterworks and her virtuosity in the baroque, classical, and romantic repertoire are making her one of America's most active singers.

She also appeared extensively in Europe - performing in England, France, Switzerland, Finland, Scotland, Holland, and Spain.

Miss De Gaetani is a graduate of the Juilliard School. She has been Artist-in-Residence at the Universty of Wisconsin and a faculty member of the Juilliard School. Now Artist-in-Residence at the Aspen Music Festiva, Miss De Gaetani also conducts master classes at universities throughout the country. She is Professor of Voice at Eastman School of Music.

A First Joint Effort

Broadway Company Coming

For the first time in the history of North Carolina, and perhaps the U.S., a federal agency, a state agency, a university agency, and a student government agency are combining funds to bring a Broadway acting company to a week's university residency. The Acting Company will open a week's stay at the East Carolina Playhouse with Shaw's Arms and the Man in McGinnis Auditorium at 8:15 on Monday, April 12. The residency in McGinnis will run from Monday through Thursday.

The Acting Company is a professional repertory group from New York under the artistic direction of John Houseman,

The Robber Bridegroom, is now nominated for two Tony Awards. The Company will perform three major plays: Arms and the Man, The Way of the World, and the salty and southern new musical, The Robber Bridegroom.

The cost of hiring a successful New York company would usually be prohibitive, but grants from the National Endowment for the Arts, the N.C. Arts Council, the ECU Foundation, and the ECU Student Government Association combined to book this group for reasonable prices.

The Company will perform Arms and the Man on April 12th, The Way of the World on the 13th, and The Robber Bridegroom on the 14th and 15th, all at 8:15 p.m. in McGinnis Auditorium.

The East Carolina Playhouse is offering single tickets for any evening performance at $5.00 each. A special trio ticket is available for $10.00. The trio ticket permits seeing all three shows at a reduced rate. The Company will also perform a matinee of The Diary of Adam and Eve on April 13th at 3:30. The matinee is $1.50. Produced with children in mind, it appeals to all ages.

Phone reservations and more information can be obtained by calling 758-6390 between 10-4:00 Monday thru Friday.

PATTI LUPONE . . . above, of The Acting Company, is nominated as Best Featured Actress in a musical for the forthcoming Tony Awards. She will be seen at ECU in "The Robber Bridegroom" which is also nominated for Best Musical Book. The Acting Company will present a total of four plays during their residency here. On Collecting Weapons

The Lure of Antique Arms. A Handbook for Beginning American Gun Collectors. By Merrill Lindsay. New York. David McKay Co., Inc., 146 pps, illustrated. $9.95.

Arms collectors will immediately recognize the name of the author, Merrill Lindsay, as that of a man well qualified to write a beginner's handbook on the subject. He's the author of several specialized books on guns—including One Hundred Great Guns Twenty Great American Guns and Kentucky Rifle, among others.

In The Lure of Antique Arms, the author makes good use of his extensive knowledge and collecting experience to provide a handbook in the best sense of the word, i.e., a book to introduce the novice to arms collecting in an informative, easily grasped context.

At the same time, it's an unusually attractive book, with excellent photographs clearly reproduced. The book itself is worthy of collecting for it's own beauty.

Lindsay deals with an increasingly important question among collectors—whether or not to collect contemporary, authentic reproductions of rare and expensive weapons. His answer to this question is "yes"—provided the reproduction meets certain criteria.

A logical arrangement is a key strength of this book. The author begins in the first chapter with brief descriptions of nine major categories of weapons—hand cannon, snaphaunces, flintlocks, percussion, etc. In the second chapter Lindsay explains "Parts and Accessories;" and then moves on into other areas of collecting and care of guns in the remaining eight chapters.

Readers who enjoy history, gun lover or not, will find The Lure of Antique Arms of more than passing interest. For example, there's the revealing story of reversals suffered by Samuel Colt before he made it big as a manufacturer of weapons. Lindsay calls Colt "the glamour boy of U.S. revolvers."

Some old timer collectors may take exception to Lindsay's emphasis on the rapidly escalating monetary value of antique arms and the growing scarcity and demand for good pieces. Since these factors are a realistic part of collecting, however, Lindsay would have been amiss had he failed to give this aspect of collecting its due place.

As in any field of collecting, the search for a wanted item is the high point in collector thrills. The author gives searching hints in a chapter, "Where to Look" and relates some of his own personal acquisition experiences.

Other chapters cover pointers on "How To Spot A Rarity;" "What To Collect;" "Who Made Guns In The U.S.;" and "How To Care For Guns." There is also a helpful glossary of arms collectors terms, and extensive bibliography and a good index.

The Lure of Antique Arms is a fine introductory volume with a bountiful spread of attractive black and white photographs. It's a good book to own, and ideal as a gift book for a gun lover or prospective collector.

"The Contrast," Now A Musical

Old Show, New Setting

The East Carolina Playhouse will make its contribution to the Bicentennial celebration when it opens a musical version of America's first comedy of manners, The Contrast. The tuneful adaptation will open in McGinnis Auditorium on Wednesday April 7th at 8:15 and run through April 10.

The Contrast was written by Royal Tyler in 1787. This new production has music by Don Pippin and lyrics by Steve Brown.

The story focuses on a young British gentleman who entertains himself by having two love affairs at the same time. Neither of the two girls, who happen to be best of friends, has any knowledge of the other's involvement. At the same time, the young man is engaged to be married to yet a third woman. When the man soon finds out that he is bankrupt, he tries to break off his engagement and marry the richest of the other two girls. At this point, one of the girls' older brother arrives on the scene. When he meets and accidentally falls in love with the young man's fiance, the play turns into a hilariously complicated game of who ends up with whom.

Edgar Loessin and Mavis Ray teamed up to direct and stage this production with Barry Shank directing the music. Carol H. Beule designed the period costumes and John Boyt designed the scenery.

Tickets are $3.00 and can be purchased at the McGinnis box office daily from 10:00 a.m. through 4:00 a.m. Phone reservations can be made by calling 758-6390.

"THE CONTRAST"... cast numbers among its players the two shown here, Barbara Richardson and Rodney Freeze. The musical of early America will open at McGinnis on Wednesday and continue through Saturday, with performances at 8:15 p.m. Tickets at $3.00 are now available.

Wildlife Film April 7

"Frontiers of Wildlife Photography," a widely acclaimed factual film by British biologist-photographer John Paling will be shown at ECU Wednesday, in the Mendenhall Student Center Theatre.

Dr. Paling and several other faculty biologists at Oxford University developed photographic techniques for filming wild animal life several years ago, using odd items of equipment to achieve special effects.

In 1967 he was awarded a grant by Eastman-Kodak to construct a specially-designed filming "river" in his studio. Later he received a Winston Churchill Fellowship to travel around the world filming and lecturing.

In 1973 he was a visiting professor at the Univeristy of California at Santa Cruz, where he lectured on the frontiers of wildlife photography and filmed the research being carried out on elephant seals living on remote Pacific isles.

Other honors include the British equivalent of an "Oscar" for the best factual film shown on television in 1972.

Book News

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By MARGARET SHEERAN

The Children's Services Division of the American Library Association has announced the winners of the prestigious Newbery and Caldecott awards for 1975. The Newbery award, for the most distinguished contribution to Children's Literature, was awarded to Susan Cooper for The Grey King. This book continues the story of Will, the youngest Old One, and his participation in the battle with the forces of dark. In this volume, the fourth of five in the Dark is Rising series (other titles are Over Sea, Under Stone, The Dark is Rising, and Greenwitch) has Will coming to Wales to awake the Sleepers, and bring them to the aid of the forces of light. A strange boy, Bran, and his dog, Cafall, help Will in his quest. The Grey King broods over the Sleepers, and tries to prevent the quest. The runners-up for the Newbery award were The Hundred Penny Box by Mathis, and Dragonwings by Yep.

The Caldecott award is given to the artists of the most outstanding picture book of the year. Leo and Diane Dillon received it this year for Why Mosquitoes Buzz in People's Ears retold by Verna Aardema. This cheerful African animal tale makes a good vehicle for the strong, clean watercolors the Dillons have used. The animals and plants are stylized and abstract, with emphasis on color and shapes. Tomie de Paola's Strega Nona and Peter Parnell for The Desert is Theirs were the runners up for the Caldecott award.

Mary Jemison was captured as a child by the Senaca Indians in 1758 during the French and Indian War. She remained with the Senacas in New York the rest of her long, happy life, although she had many opportunities to return to the white community. She told her story in 1823, and Lois Lenski retells the first two eventful years after her capture in Indian Captive. The book gives an immensely satisfying detailed description of Indian life at the time, with special emphasis on the Anglo-Saxon traders, soldiers and captives Molly comes to know. Mary Jemison's life is a moving story of courage and strength and Lois Lenski has told it well.

Another book dealing with the life of women in the early days of American history is Hidden Heroines: Women in American History by Elaine Landau. Ms. Landau gives some special attention to individual pioneering efforts by women, but she is mainly concerned with the lives of ordinary women from colonial times through the passage of the Nineteenth Amendment. This book is very brief, of course, and cannot give a detailed picture of the scopes of women's lives in this 300 year period, but it does manage to convey an idea of the great difficulties faced by women (and men) in settling this country, and the resourcefullness with which many met the challenges.

DANCE IN AMERICA... 90 minute special, will air over PBS television on Wednesday, April 7 beginning at 9 p.m. The broadcasts celebrates the 50th anniversary of dance pioneer Martha Graham, whose new work "Adorations" will receive its initial television premiere. Husband and wife team David Walker and Takako Asakawa (shown here) dance the roles. Music is drawn from the works of Albeniz, Cimarose, John Dowland and Frescobaldi.

Manuscript Endowment Fund Set Up At ECU

A special endowment fund has been established at East Carolina University to help render financial support to the operation of the East Carolina Manuscript Collection.

The University Manuscript committee has inaugrated the endowment as a means whereby patrons of the collection may actively contribute to the advancement of the ECU manuscript program. An initial gift for the endowment was received recently from Drs. Joseph F. and Lala C. Steelman, professors in the Department of History.

Collector director Don Lennon said "the creation of an endowment fund has been a pressing need of the Collection for several years. This generous gift by the Steelmans has made it possible for us to officially establish the fund."

Lennon added that the endowment is envisioned as a long-range undertaking intended to help underwrite the future operation of the repository.

"It is hoped that our friends and patrons across North Carolina will see fit to contribute over a period of years to the fund," Lennon said. "Although we do not plan to mount an active financial campaign at the present time, we anticipate that many of our supporters will desire to voluntarily participate in assuring a bright future for the Collection."

The manuscript collection at East Carolina University was begun in 1965 as a research repository for the preservation of historical documents. During the past decade it has grown to the point that it presently contains over a half million documents including 19th and 20th century correspondence, diaries, ledgers, scrapbooks, and other unpublished materials. Included in its holdings are the personal papers of governors, congressmen, judges, military leaders, missionaries, social and cultural leaders, and hundreds of North Carolina families.

Found Handicapped Are Eager To Learn

By SUSANNE BURKS
Albuquerque Journal

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M. (AP) — Nineteen-year-old Donna Jean Nodine is handicapped and has never been to school — but she's bright and "eager to learn."

Kindergartener Mark Abeyta is confined at home to recover from rheumatic fever, and Paul Lapierre, a sixth grader, has been hospitalized for weeks with fractures received in a football game.

Suzy Mound, a high school sophomore, faces a six-week stay at home to recover from a stubborn, extended illness.

All are students of Kathryn Peloquin in Albuquerque Public Schools' homebound program, which enables youngsters to continue their education even while incapacitated.

Mrs. Peloquin, one of 13 teachers in the program, also teaches a third grader with emotional problems, a 10th grader with mononucleosis and an eighth grader on chemotherapy.

Together they're representative of the people and situations with which homebound — this year renamed "home and hospital" — teaching deals: school youngsters of all grades in circumstances ranging from the mundane to the tragic, in settings ranging from the well-to-do to the poverty-stricken to the sterility of hospital rooms.

Mrs. Peloquin said she had had students who graduated directly from the program and several students who later died.

"Even when they're terminal, we take them. It means a lot to these students," she said.

Jones, Weaver Carry Purple To Victory

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Raymond Jones and Mike Weaver guided the Purple team to a 21-14 victory over the opportunistic Gold squad in the annual Purple-Gold intrasquad game last night.

Weaver, who guided the Purple team with precision, despite being caught for losses on several occasions, scored the first of his team's three touchdowns on a sprint out of six yards.

Then, Jones, who banged his way to 98 yards in 24 carries from his fullback station, carried over from the two and the one for the other two scores. Ken Ashley kicked all three PATS for the 21-point total.

Both of the Gold team's scores came on heads-up plays. The first was an 88-yard punt return by Jim Bolding that sparked the Gold to an early 7-0 lead. The other touchdown came in the third period when Jones fumbled at the four and the ball squirted into the end zone, where Ed Nelson fell on it for the score. Junior Creech booted both of the extra point kicks.

The Purple defense, led by All-America candidate Harold Randolph, bottled up the Gold most of the night. Randolph led the way with 14 tackles, 10 of them primary, as the Purple checked the Gold on just 98 yards in 39 rushing plays. The Gold added 94 more yards on five of 10 passes including one 55-yarder from Jimmy Southerland to Terry Gallaher.

The halfbacks didn't really get the ball that much on either team. Willie Hawkins picked up 45 yards in just 11 carries for the Purple, while Eddie Hicks lugged it just six times for 32 yards for the Gold. Vince Koanko at fullback was the leader with 40 yards in 13 carries, while Bubba French had 38 in nine carries.

Defensively, Larry Paul led the Gold with 11 tackles, while Tommy Summer had nine, and Zack Valentine and Oliver Felton each had eight.

The Purple kept a lot of pressure on the Gold all evening, driving on the first series to the 38 before turning it over on a punt. The second series, starting at the Gold 36 after a bumble, went to the 24 before another fumble returned it to the Gold. Gold then drove down to the 43 before a penalty (one of nine for 80 yards) stopped them.

The Purple appeared getting a drive together early in the second period, moving to the 42 before a penalty and a sack killed them. Mike Umphlett punted away, and Bolding got it at the 12, cut to the sideline and picked up sharp blocking. He broke into the clear just across midfield and went the full 88-yards for the opening score with 8:44 left in the half.

The Purple marched right back, with Hawkins' 55-yard kickoff return to the Gold 43 getting it going. Weaver hit Umphlett for a first down of 19 yards to the 18, and Jones carried twice to the six. Weaver kept it on the right side for the score on the next play, and the score was tied at 7-7 with 5:29 left in the half.

Purple then forced a punt and it took just five plays to score. Jones burst through for 16 yards, and a penalty pushed it 15 yards further to the Gold 21 on the first play after the kickoff. Jesse Ingram added 11, and Weaver got six to the two. Jones broke through from there for a 14-7 lead with 2:23 left in the half.

A late 29-yard field goal was wide by Purple's Ashley.

Early in the second half, the Purple got backed up on the one by a Rod Allen punt downed in the shadow of the goal. But on the second play, Jones fumbled at the four, and Nelson recovered it as it bounced into the end zone, tieing it again at 14-14 with 8:04 left.

But once more, Weaver guided the Purple back down the field to put them back up, this time for good. From the 39, Weaver moved it in two plays to the 48, and a 15-yard penalty added yardage to the Gold 37. Three plays put it on the 26, and Jones broke through to the 12, but the ball was pushed back to the 34 on a penalty. Jones got it right back on the next play, eating up 16 yards to the 18. After a first down at the three, it took three plays to finally get it in, with Jones again scoring, this time from the one. Ashley's boot made it 21-14 with exactly one minute left in the third period.

Both teams had threats in the final period, with the Gold getting to the 15 before two losses cost them the ball on downs at the 22.

Coach Pay Dye, who observed the game from the press box, was disappointed that the halfbacks didn't run as much as he would have liked.

"It's obvious that Mike Weaver is in command at quarterback," he said. "And I was pleased with the work of Mike Umphlett and Raymond Jones' running. It's really hard to single out people, however, until we have a chance to grade the film."

Dye added that the Pirates did a lot of things on the field in the game that weren't part of the basic East Carolina offense. "It wasn't a pure wishbone attack, and that was easy to tell. Anytime you don't get 300 yards rushing, it's a poor outing in the wishbone."

Whitworth, Haynie Leading Shore Golf

By KEN PETERS
AP Sports Writer

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Kathy Whitworth and Sandra Haynie, the two top money winners in women's professional golfing history, matched par 72s Saturday and shared the third-round lead in the $200,000 Dinah Shore Winners Circle Golf Championship at 214.

The two had begun Saturday's round at Mission Hills Country Club two strokes back of co-leaders Pam Higgins and Jan Stephenson, who had completed 36 holes of the 72-hole tournament at four under par.

But Miss Higgins had a 76 Saturday to fall two strokes off the pace, and Miss Stephenson struggled to a 78 to fall four strokes back.

Saturday's round was made more treacherous by desert winds swirling across the 6,370-yard par 36-36-72 Mission Hills layout. Shako Higuchi, who finished with a 69 before the wind started, was with Miss Higgins two strokes behind the leaders.

Three strokes back of the leaders at 217 were Judy Rankin, with a 71 Saturday; Kathy McMullen, with a 74, and Jane Blalock, who had a 72.

Miss Whitworth, No. 1 on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour with nearly $600,000 in career earnings, had led the field of 60 most of the day Saturday, but hampered by the wind, she struggled to a 39 on the back nine after firing a 33 on the front.

She temporarily lost her share of the lead to Miss Haynie on the 167-yard par-3 17th, as she bit into the trap then took three to get down.

But Miss Haynie, playing in the group behind, returned the favor and dropped back into a tie for the lead after she hit her tee shot at 17 wide and had to settle for a bogey.

Mrs. Higuchi, who tied for third in this rich event last year, shot her way into contention after an opening-round 77 and a 70 Friday.

A resident of Tokyo who plays infrequently on the LPGA circuit, Mrs. Higuchi is making her first LPGA start of 1976.

Miss Whitworth, despite her problems with the wind Saturday, said she feels confident going into Sunday's final round.

"I felt really good coming out to play this morning," she said. "But the greens are giving me a lot of trouble, they are hard to read.

"But I am happy with my position going into the final," she continued. "The pressure is always there, but the veterans know how to take it."

Miss Haynie, No. 2 on the LPGA all-time money list with $450,000 in earnings, said, "I played fairly steady. I feel like I'm bitting the ball pretty well.

"I'm pleased with the way I've played over all."

Miss Higgins, who Friday rated herself a 25-1 shot to win the tournament, said she liked her chances better after Saturday's third round, despite her 76.

"Actually my odds are better now," she commented. "I am, after all, in third place going into the final round."

Sandra Palmer, last year's Winners Circle champion, had her problems Saturday, as she finished with a 77 for a 223 total. Miss Palmer, plagued by inconsistency, had a 76 in the opening round, then shot a 70 Friday.

Bucs Sweep All-Day Twinbill From Appalachian State, 3-2, 11-1

By WILLIE PATRICK
Special To The Reflector

Saturday was a special day of sorts for Glenn Card, the East Carolina University Pirate centerfielder.

Card's parents made the trip from Red Oak, Va., to see the doubleheader with Appalachian State. And the group got to see Card make a significant contribution to ECU's doubleheader sweep, 3-2 and 11-1.

At about 8:30 p.m., long after the majority of the fans had departed for the sanctity of home, downtown or Ficklen Stadium, George Williams said that the doubleheader capped "one of the finest days in Pirate baseball history." Card, meanwhile, was just as happy.

Card belted a two-out single through the middle to score Steve Bryant from second base in the 15th inning, ending the longest game by innings in modern day school history (15).

"It was a great feeling, standing on first base and watching the throw to the plate," said Card. "Because I knew that they wouldn't be able to catch Steve."

Indeed the Apps didn't. They did seem to catch the offerings of starter Dean Reavis in the opener though, nicking the ace of the staff for eight hits in as manny innings. A line-drive double by Chris Plemmons scored Malcolm McLean in the seventh, thus evening a fourth-inning run scoring single by Sonny Wooten of the Pirates.

After Reavis yielded a single and was charged with misplaying a bunt to open the eighth, Williams summoned Bob Feeney to the mound. Feeney retired the next three batters to end that threat.

In the 11th, it was Plemmons again doubling for the Apps, this time scoring Randy McDaniel from second.

Joe Roenkert walked to open the 11th for ECU, advanced on a sacrifice by Wooten and moved to third on a wild pitch. Card grounded out, Roenker holding then, with a 2-1 count to Pete Paradossi, a balk was called on Dave Rudisill, scoring Roenker.

The only benefit the protests from the ASU bench gained was that the ride back to Bone was prolonged by five minutes. Feeney held off the Apps through the 15th, setting the stage for Card's heroics.

Card is batting at a .193 clip following the doubleheader, his single being his, the only safety in eight trips. Card is quick to point where the real value of a base hit lies, though.

"It was satisfying to be able to do something like this for the team and because my parents got to see it," said Card. "They didn't see the Maryland game (in which Card blasted a three-run homer in the 12th to stop the Terps) so today was something special."

After yielding a run in the first, ECU came out swinging in their first time up in the nightcap to put the game out of reach. Ten men went to the plate, with six crossing home plate. Charlie Stevens had a two-run triple in the inning, and rbi's were recorded by Robert Brinkley, Rick Koryda and Howard McCullough.

The Pirates belted the ball for five more runs in the third. A 40-minute delay for the lights to be turned on came before ASU started the fourth.

And lacking nothing but a blare of trumpets and a song and a dance, Terry Durham continued to shut the visitors off with five singles for the game to end a baseball version of "The Longest Day."

The two victories evens ECU's Southern Conference mark at 3-3 and puts ASU at 0-4 in the league. Overall, East Carolina has a 14-3 mark; ASU is 9-9.

The Pirates travel to Pembroke State University Monday for a 7:30 p.m. game against the Indians.

Early fans saw the greatest collection of all-time Pirate baseball talent gathered at Harrington Field Saturday morning as the Gold Graybeards, coached by Earl Smith, defeated the White Graybeards, coached by Jim Mallory, 3-2, in a six-inning contest.

The White Graybeards scored two early runs, but couldn't scratch again off Pete Barnes and Harry Land. Earl Boykin, Larry Crayton and Ben Baker pitched for the White Graybeards.

True to form, Smith was ejected late in the game and watched from the sidelines as his club hung on for dear life and the victory.

Yankees Waive Claim To Pitcher

By MARTY MERZER
Associated Press Writer

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The New York Yankees withdrew their claim to free-agent pitcher Andy Messersmith Saturday, saying the "wearing of the Yankee uniform is not something which anyone will be allowed to take lightly."

Thus Messersmith, the first free agent under Peter Seitz' landmark arbitration decision, remains a free agent, free to deal with all 24 clubs—even the Yankees if he wished.

"The Messersmith matter is closed as far as the Yankees are concerned and I notified the commissioner of that this afternoon," said George Steinbrenner, general partner of the Yankees.

"Someday, Andy may feel entirely different about representing the New York Yankees and, if that day should come, we would certainly be willing to meet to pursue that possibility."

Steinbrenner said the Yankees were convinced that they had dealt with Messersmith and his agent "both morally and legally."

Messersmith, the winningest pitcher in the National League the past two years while hurling for the Los Angeles Dodgers, has steadfastly maintained he never lost free-agent status. The Yankees claimed, however, that Herb Osmond, Messersmith's agent, had entered into a written agreement with them last Sunday morning.

Osmond and Messersmith say that agreement was not a binding contract on the star right-hander. It was without his signature and Osmond never had authority to bind Messersmith to a contract anyway. "I don't have the power of attorney," Osmond said Thursday while in New York to appear before Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Kuhn had been expected to make a decision Saturday—but the Yankees made one of their own instead.

Steinbrenner said the Yankees had been determined to proceed in the Messersmith hearings because it was "imperative that certain facts be set straight."

He said one of those facts was allegations that the Yankees did not always act in good faith. He also denied that the Yankees plied Osmond with drinks in order to persuade him to sign an agreement for his client.

"This alleged statement was totally false and was damaging," Steinbrenner said. "Mr. Osmond's own testimony under oath stated that, in the seven hours he was with Yankee personnel in negotiations that day (March 27), that he only had a total of 1½ bottles of beer," Steinbrenner said.

"If that could, by any stretch of the imagination, be considered as 'plying him with drinks,' then the liquor stores are in trouble. The Yankees just don't operate in that way."

Steinbrenner also said the Yankees felt that it must be brought to the attention of all parties that there are many difficulties which must be recognized in contract negotiations between agents representing ball players and ball clubs."

In New York, Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players Association, said Steinbrenner beat the commissioner to the punch because he knew the Yankees' claim was going to go down for the count.

"I think it was wise of them," Miller said "because neither the commissioner nor anybody else could sustain the claim. The claim was phony."

Steinbrenner said he felt confident of a favorable decision from Kuhn. "We had a real strong case," he said. "But I dont know if we would have won. That was up to the judge."

Steinbrenner said he detected "a small note of sympathy" in Kuhn's voice when the commissioner was told about the Yankees' decision. The Yankee owner said he didn't think the commissioner was going to make a decision Saturday.

Miller laughed when informed of Steinbrenner's opinion, saying: "It was a face-saving move.

Rams Battle Past Warriors

SNOW HILL—Greene Central scored twice in each of the fourth and sixth innings to ease past Eastern Wayne, 4-1, Saturday for the Rams' second win in five tries.

Donald Wooten went the distance for the Rams striking out three, walking none and giving up five hits. Larry Ward lost the game striking out nine and scattering six hits.

The Rams pushed over their first two in the fourth. Thomas Hooker led off with a double and was wild pitched to third. A single by Ronnie Whitley and Mike Chase singled in Whitley. Eastern Wayne cut the lead to one in the sixth as John Milkovitz singled and took second on Billy Sugg's single. Both moved up on a wild pitch and Milkovitz scored on a ground out.

The Rams got it back in the bottom of the frame. With one out, Russell Brann singled and Dal Blizzard walked. Both scored on a double by Jay Carraway.

Pirates Blank Pembroke, 9-0

The East Carolina tennis team bounced back from Thursday's loss to N.C. State to plaster the Braves of Pembroke State, 9-0, yesterday in a match played on the ECU courts.

The Pirates played their top two seeds, Tom Durfee and Jim Ratliff, but gave their other regulars a rest. Joe Zahran, Gerry Felton, Tim Hill and John Freeman came through with victories to push the Pirates forward.

"Our team has plenty of depth," Coach Neal Peterson said "We really looked good out there today. We have now got it where we can put our number ten guy in the match and he will do the same job a number five man can do."

The win ups the East Carolina record to 4-6 on the season. The Pirates are 1-1 in the Southern Conference and will face the defending Southern Conference champion Appalachian State today in a match on the ECU courts.

The summary:

Jim Ratliff (ECU) defeated Gary Carter, 6-1, 6-0.
John Freeman (ECU) defeated Lu Hoang, 6-3, 3-6, 6-1.

Geiberger Breaks Out Of Tangle For Greensboro Open's Lead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Al Geiberger, who went into a decline after winning the 1966 PGA national championship then resurrected his career nine years later, flashed that shy, almost embarrassed smile of his.

"Surprised," he said. "I guess that's the best way to describe it. I'm surprised to be leading by four strokes. There were so many guys so close I didn't think anybody could really pull away."

But the unassuming Geiberger romped away from a closely bunched field with a late birdie-eagle-birdie burst, fashioned a second consecutive six-under-par 65 and established a commanding, four-shot lead Saturday in the third round of the $230,000 Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament.

While the lead is one of the largest three-round margins of the year, it really isn't comfortable, Geiberger said.

"This is the kind of course where anybody can get hot, shoot some really low numbers. I've got to go out tomorrow and try to shoot a low number. I can't just relax and try to coast in. There are too many guys back there looking at me.

"Most of the tournaments I've won have come where I had a big lead, three or four shots, at the end of three rounds," he said, and grinned again.

"I guess maybe I needed the big lead."

The quiet, low-key Geiberger, one of seven men who shared the lead early in the mild, sunny day, romped away with from the closely bunched field with his six-under-par effort that was built around the birdie-eagle-birdie beginning on the 13th hole.

The lanky 38-year-old veteran, whose revitalized career has produced three titles in the last 18 months, finished 54 holes with a 200 total, matching the best three-round score of the year on the tour and 13-under-par on the 6,643 yards of rolling hills and piny woods that make up the Sedgefield Country Club course.

When the day's activity started in almost ideal playing conditions, 15 men were locked within two strokes of each other at the top. When it was over, only Mike Hill and Miller Barber had the soft-spoken, shyly-smiling Geiberger still in sight.

Hill, playing in the same threesome with Geiberger, shot a 69 that was marred only by a three-putt bogey on the final hole and produced a three-round total of 204. The 45-year-old Barber birdied the last hole for a 69 and a tie for second, four shots back.

Everyone else was far back—five or more strokes behind Geiberger and almost hopelessly out of title contention—going into Sunday's final 18 holes of the chase for the $46,000 first prize.

The group at 205, five shots back, included Lee Trevino, defending champion Tom Weiskopf, Mark Hayes, Bob Menne and Mike Morley.

Morley, a non-winner who challenged several times this season before being sidelined with the flu, had a 64, the best round of the tournament, Trevino shot a 66, Weiskopf and Hayes 68, Menne 69.

"I just caught fire," Geiberger said of the decisive scoring burst he inaugurated with a low, hooking shot from among the trees on the 13th hole. It came to rest some three feet from the cup and he made the putt for birdie.

The next hole, a 477-yard par five, Geiberger reached with a four-iron second shot. He holed a putt of about 25 feet for an eagle and his lead was stretching out.

On the next, the 15th, he converted another long putt, some 25-30 feet, and was in firm command.

But the key to his round, he said, came on the first two holes with tough pars. He missed the green on the first, had a very difficult chip but got it to within a foot and saved par. He had to hole an eight-foot second putt on the next hole, then made it from 10-12 feet for birdie on the third.

"I could have been two or three over par real easy and instead I was one under," said Geiberger. "It was a big boost."

He scored a duece from about 30 inches on the seventh hole, needed only a five-footer on the ninth and took his only bogey of the day on the 16th, where he was bunkered.

"I played very well, overall," said Geiberger, a former Greensboro champion and the runner-up here last year. "But I'm surprised to be four strokes in front."

Jenkins Powers Jags To 5-2 Win

FARMVILLE—Mike Jenkins had three hits, stole four bases, and scored three times to lead the Farmville Central Jaguars to a 5-2 baseball victory over Tarboro, Saturday.

The Jaguars have put together a winning streak of sorts taking their last two games. The win gives them a 2-5 overall mark.

Carroll Griffin went all the way for the Jaguars giving up just three hits.

Farmville Central started the scoring in the first getting a single run. Jenkins led off with a single, stole around to third and scored on Tommy Cobb's sacrifice.

Emerson Hobgood reached in the second being hit by a pitch and David Cochran walked. Griffin hit into a fielder's choice forcing Hobgood but Scott Evans followed with a basehit scoring Cochran.

Tarboro cut the lead to 2-1 in the top of the fourth as Thorne singled, took second on an error, third on a wild pitch and scored on a fielder's choice.

Farmville Central added two more in the sixth as Jenkins singled and scored on Evans' single. Evans came on a hit by David Winborn.

Farmville Central travels to Southern Nash, Tuesday.

After A Few Key People, The Mets Are Just So-So

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — It's the same old story. Once you get past Tom Seaver and some of the other front-line pitchers, the New York Mets are just another baseball club ... and maybe not even that.

Ever since 1969, when the team shed its image of laughable losers by winning the World Series, the Mets' image has been Seaver, the three-time Cy Young Award winner. It's been Jerry Koosman. It's been Jon Matlack. It's been strong arms and weak bats.

Last December, when the Mets went into the trading market, they figured to come out of it with more bats. They didn't. They came out with less — and another arm.

They sent Rusty Staub, their only consistent run-producer, to Detroit and got a solid fourth starter, 35-year-old Mickey Lolich, the majors' all-time left-handed strikeout pitcher. Lolich suffered through one of his worst seasons, a 12-18 record and 4.77 earned-run average — but he did it with the Tigers, 1975's worst team in the majors.

The deal also brought the Mets rookie outfielder Billy Baldwin, who showed potential in the minors. But veteran observers say he's probably a year away from major league performance.

So once again, the starters — right-hander Seaver and southpaws Matlack, Koosman and Lolich — and the bullpen crew of Bob Apodaca, Tom Hall, Skip Lockwood, Rick Baldwin and Ken Sanders will shoulder the load.

After last year's less than sterling finish, Yogi Berra finally got the axe and Joe Frazier, who managed five pennant winners in 10 years in the minors, became the new manager.

The team Frazier fields will have Jerry Grote behind the plate, Ed Kranepool and Joe Torre alternating at first base, Felix Millan at second, Bud Harrelson at short and Wayne Garrett or rookie Roy Staiger at third. The outfield, from left to right, will end up with Dave Kingman, Del Unser and Mike Vail.

Like Grote, the left-handed swinging Kranepool had his best season last year, hitting .323 — but in only 325 at-bats, facing right-handed pitchers almost exclusively. Torre, who'll move from third base to first and face the southpaws, was a disappointment last year. He hit only .247 with 35 runs batted in after having a .282 average with 70 RBI for the Cardinals the year before.

Millan and Harrelson are one of the slickest-fielding keystone combinations in the majors. Millan is also adept with the bat, spraying hits and advancing runners. Harrelson missed most of 1975 with injuries but should be back at full strength.

Third base has been the Mets' sore spot since the club's inception. Garrett has played it most of the past seven seasons. The team keeps trying to replace him — without real success. His latest challenger is Staiger, the International League's RBI leader last year.

Kingman, who never found a home in San Francisco, provided the Mets with their only real power in his first year with them, hitting a club-record 36 home runs — but with only 88 RBI anb a .231 average.

Unser, acquired from Philadelphia in the 1974 deal that sent Mets' relief ace Tug McGraw to the Phillies, was a solid glove in center field and a steady batter with a .294 average.

Vail burst onto the scene for the Mets last year, tying the National League rookie record of hitting safely in 23 straight games and, in 38 games, batting .302.

Petty's Competition Looking Tough

By JERRY GARRETT
AP Motorsports Writer

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — Richard Petty, the six-time NASCAR Grand National stock car king, can usually count on padding his victory total with a couple of races a year at the cozy little North Wilkesboro Speedway. But while he's no less of a threat in Sunday's Gwyn Staley 400 here, the competition looks a lot tougher than usual.

That's evidenced by the fact Petty's qualifying speed of 106.479 miles per hour was only seventh fastest. That speed easily would have put his Dodge on the pole here in both races last year.

Petty started on the front row for last year's Gwyn Staley race and the Wilkes 400 and won them both, running his victory total here to 13 in 29 appearances.

Petty should get strong challenges from at least eight other drivers, led by pole winner Dave Marcis.

Marcis and the next two qualifiers, Benny Parsons and Darrell Waltrip, each broke the qualifying record for the five-eighths mile track.

Marcis is having his best season ever, and has won the only other short track race on the circuit so far this year. Parsons, the only driver to finish every race so far this season and the leader in the points standings, is a threat for victory every time he races.

Waltrip is expected to improve on his third and seventh-place finishes here last year, principally because he is competing in better equipment this season, with a top-notch pit crew.

There is a lot of interest in what Cale Yarborough can do, especially after the awesome speed his Junior Johnson Chevrolet showed during the Atlanta 500 two weeks ago.

Bobby Allison, who trails only Petty for track champion honors, is back again after a two-year absence here and should be a factor, although his new Mercury isn't running quite as well as he had hoped.

Speeds are up through the field this year, with the first 10 starters all having qualified faster than last season's pole speeds here.

Lennie Pond of Petersburg, Va., led Saturday's qualifiers for the Gwyn Staley 400. Pond actually qualified Friday but decided to stand on his speed of 105.962 m.p.h. He will start in the fifth row next to Richard Childress of Winston-Salem, who was clocked at 105.327. Both drive Chevrolets.

Only 28 cars made qualifying attempts during the two-days of time trials, reducing the field by two cars.

In other action Saturday, Rick Pearson of Spartanburg, S.C., beat Dean Combs of North Wilkesboro by about 100 feet in a 100-lap race for NASCAR Baby Grand stock cars. Pearson, a son of NASCAR star David Pearson, drove a 1973 Capri, while combs piloted a 1976 Vega.

Third place went to Roger Hamby of Ferguson, also in a 1976 Vega.

Pirates Place Eighth In Meet

East Carolina failed to win an event in the ten-team track and field meet held yesterday at the University of South Carolina, but had a few fine performances against strong competition to finish eighth in the event.

One world record was logged in the meet by Harvey Glance of Auburn. Glance finished the 100 meter dash in a very quick 9.9 to tie the mark held by Valerie Borzov of the USSR and Florida high school sensation Houston McTear among others.

Auburn won the meet with 128 points while South Carolina placed second with 83.2, N.C. State pulled out third with 65, while Clemson finished fourth with 61.6. North Carolina was able to take fifth with 61, while Georgia Tech placed sixth with 47. Cornell finished seventh with 37, while ECU captured eighth with 27. Furman with 22 and Georgia with 14.2 rounded out the field.

For East Carolina, which took only about 15 men to the meet, fine performances in the hurdles and dashes gave them most of their points. Calvin Alston, the top ECU sprinter not currently injured at this time, did well in both the 100 and 200 meter dashes. The freshman runner placed third in the 200 meters with a fine time of 21.0 Glance of Auburn won the event in 21.3 In the 100 meters, Alston placed sixth in a time of 10.6.

In the 110 meter hurdles, ECU placed two in the top four. Sam Phillips coming off an injury, ran a fine time of 14.0 to place second while Marvin Rankins, the favorite of the race, finished fourth in 14.3.

Exhibition Season Beginning Final Week

Homers Key Reds' Win

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Pinch-hitter Terry Crowley's game-tying homer triggered Cincinnati's seven-run ninth inning and Bill Plummer's three-run homer capped it, giving the Reds a 13-7 victory over the New York Mets in exhibition baseball Saturday.

Crowley slammed Ken Sanders' first pitch in the inning for the homer, then an error by shortstop Jack Heidemann opened the door to the rest of the Reds' burst, with hits by George Foster, Mike Lum, Merv Rettenmund and Plummer driving in the runs.

The Mets, dropping their ninth game in 11, had taken a 7-6 lead with five runs off Will McEnaney in the eighth inning on singles by Felix Millan Ed Kranepool, Joe Torre and Heidemann and Benny Ayala's double.

Lum drove in five runs with three singles for Cincinnati while Milner had four hits—including a homer—and four RBI for the Mets.

Wake Leads Tournament

DURHAM, N.C. (AP)—Wake Forest, still riding largely on David Thore's good form, broadened its lead to six strokes Saturday in round two of the Big Four college golf tournament.

Thore shot an even par 71 at the Duke golf course, a stroke behind teammate Tim Saylor, North Carolina State's Tom Reynolds and North Carolina's Bill Sibbick. In Friday's play at MacGregor Downs in Raleigh, Thore was the only contender to shoot under par when he hit 71 on the par 72 course.

The Demon Deacons, defending NCAA champions, finished the two rounds with a total of 730 strokes while N.C. State remained in second place with 736. Duke moved from last to third position with a two-round total of 752 while North Carolina finished with 761.

Misses on short putts drove the scores up for several players. But, for the most part, the 6,856-yard course played well Saturday under sunny skies.

North Carolina will host Sunday's play which will begin at 8:30 a.m. at the Chapel Hill Country Club. The final round will be played at Wake Forest.

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Two of the top three receivers in the National Football Conference last season were running backs and both played for the Minnesota Vikings — Chuck Foreman and Ed Marinaro. Foreman ranked first with 73 catches and Marinaro finished third with 54 receptions.

A's Blank Cleveland, 7-0

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Oakland pounded out 15 hits and Stan Bahnsen and Jim Todd limited the Cleveland Indians to seven hits in the A's 7-0 exhibition baseball victory Saturday.

Cleveland Manager Frank Robinson, who may return as a designated hitter, made his first game appearance this season. He singled and walked in two DH appearances.

Bahnsen blanked the Indians on six hits until he was replaced with two outs in the eighth by Todd.

Dennis Eckersley retired the first six A's batters, striking out four of them, but was tagged for consecutive hits by Phil Garner, Ken McMullen, Rob Picciolio and Billy North and two runs in the third inning.

North drove in two runs on three singles, while Picciolio, Garner, Sal Bando and Billy Williams each had two hits. Bando tripled in the eighth inning when the A's scored three times against reliever Don Hood.

Throw Saves Win, 8-7

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Right fielder Tom Grieve cut down Larry Bittner at the plate to halt a four-run Montreal burst and preserve an 8-7 exhibition victory for the Texas Rangers Saturday over the Expos.

The Rangers led 8-3 at the start of the ninth, but errors by shortstop Mike Cubbage and second baseman Roy Smalley opened the gates to the rally. With the score at 8-6 and the bases loaded, Jim Dwyer lashed a single to right that scored one run. But Bittner, carrying the potential tying run, was out at the plate when he tried to score from second on the hit.

The Expos touched Rangers starter Bill Singer for three runs in the first inning but Texas rallied for six runs in the fourth off Expo starter Dennis Blair.

Smalley had a pair of run-scoring singles and Toby Harrah drove in two runs with a single and a sacrifice fly to lead the Ranger attack. Nate Golbert had three hits for the Expos.

Singer settled down after the rough start and did not allow a run in the remaining five innings he worked.

Parker Leads Bucs To Win

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — Dave Parker drove in three runs with a homer and a single to help the Pittsburgh Pirates defeat the St. Louis Cardinals 6-4 Saturday in exhibition baseball.

Parker singled home a run in the first inning, then added a two-run homer in the third that gave Pittsburgh a 3-1 lead against starter Bob Forsch.

St. Louis pulled to a 3-3 tie before Pirates shortstop Craig Reynolds bounced a two-run, bases-loaded double down the first base line in the fifth-inning off reliever Mike Wallace.

Bake Mcbride had three hits in three at bats for the Cardinals and drove in a run with a sacrifice fly off winning pitcher Bruce Kison. Lou Brock had a pair of singles for the Cardinals.

Royals Smash White Sox

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — The Kansas City Royals ripped three White Sox pitchers for 19 hits, took advantage of seven errors and crushed the Chicago White Sox 14-0 in exhibition baseball Saturday.

Dennis Leonard gave up only three hits—two of them infield singles—in the seven innings he pitched for Kansas City. He walked one batter and struck out four.

Jim Wohlford and Tom Poquette were Kansas City's hitting stars with three apiece. Wohlford had a triple while Al Cowens and Buck Martinez had doubles.

Shortstop Manny Estrada committed five of the Chicago errors and the Royals had five unearned runs. Claude Osteen yielded six hits and nine runs, four of them unearned, in the two innings he pitched. Jesse Jefferson hurled the next four innings and was tagged for 10 hits and three runs.

Game Called In Eleventh

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — Tom Paciorek's eighth-inning single forced a 3-3 tie and the Atlanta Braves and Philadelphia Phillies had their exhibition game Saturday called after 11 innings because of darkness.

The game started late to give the Braves time to bus over to the West Coast from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., where they had played the Yankees Friday night.

The Phillies took a 2-0 lead in the first as starter Preston Hanna walked three men before issuing a bases-loaded single to Jay Johnstone. The Braves tied it in the second on a leadoff home run by Darrell Evans, a double by Earl Williams, a walk and a sacrifice fly by Rod Gilbreath.

Philadelphia went ahead 3-2 in the fourth on Johnstone's home run, but the Braves drew even in the eighth on a single by Lee Lacy, a wild pitch and Paciorek's hit off third baseman Mike Schmidt's glove.

Ron Reed pitched seven innings for Philadelphia. Atlanta used six pitchers, none of them going more than two innings.

Horton Sparks Detroit Win

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — Willie Horton homered in the third inning, then drove in the tie-breaking run in the seventh with a sacrifice fly Saturday that gave the Detroit Tigers a 6-4 exhibition baseball victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Horton's second homer of the spring came after the Tigers capitalized on Boston starter Luis Tiant's wildness for three runs in the second inning.

Carlton Fisk, who had four consecutive hits in the game, belted a three-run homer off Detroit starter Ray Bare to tie the score 4-4 in the sixth.

Detroit got the tie-breaking run off Diego Segui when Ron LeFlore beat out an infield hit, took second on a sacrifice, stole third and scored on Horton's fly to deep center. The Tigers picked up an unearned run in the ninth.

Brewers Belittle Giants By 14-7

SUN CITY, Ariz. (AP) — A 17-hit attack, including George Scott's three-run homer in the fourth inning, carried the Milwaukee Brewers to a 14-7 exhibition baseball victory over the San Francisco Giants Saturday.

The Giants, who collected 14 hits off three Milwaukee pitchers, including starter and winner Jim Slaton, jumped out to a 2-0 lead before the Brewers exploded in the bottom of the third. Milwaukee also added two runs in both the fourth and seventh innings and three runs each in the fifth and sixth.

Chris Arnold homered for the Giants.

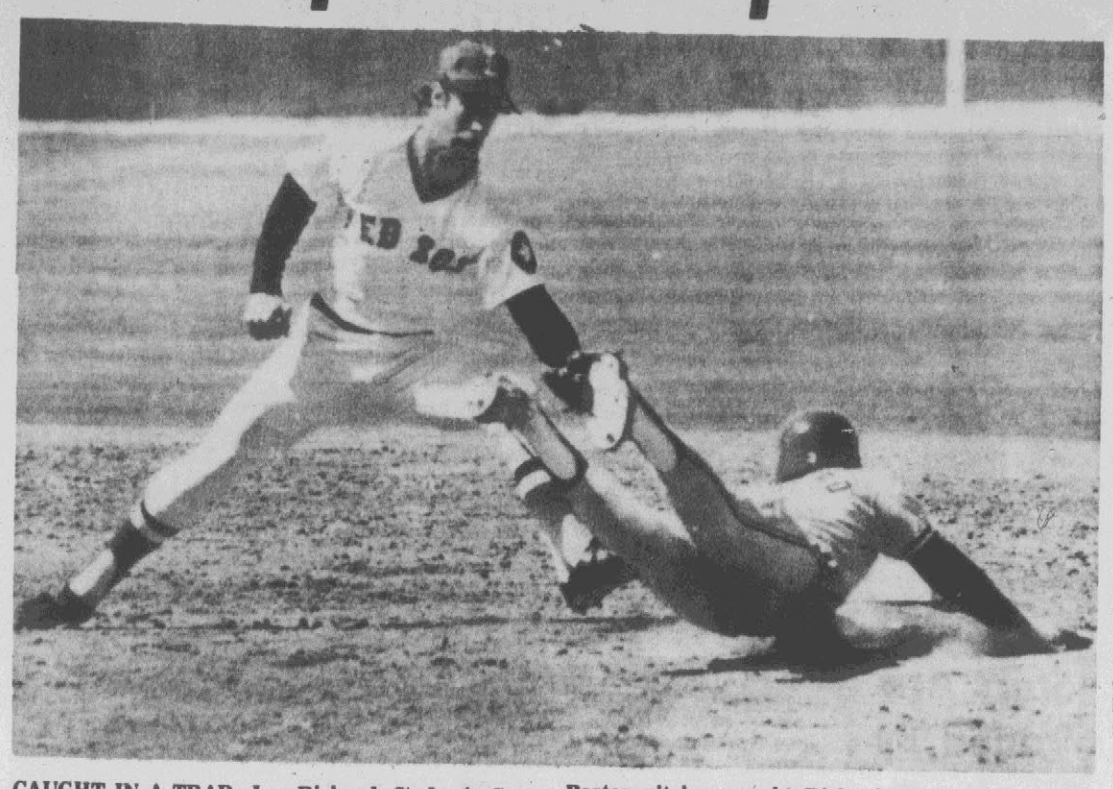
Rampants Top Bertie In Sloppy Contest



CAUGHT IN A TRAP—Lee Richard, St. Louis Cardinals' infielder, dives for second base but is tagged out by Boston Red Sox shortstop Rick Burleson in the fourth inning of a game at Winter Haven Friday. Boston pitcher caught Richard playing too far off first, threw the ball to first baseman Carl Yastrzemski, who then tossed to Burleson to get Richard in the rundown. (AP Wirephoto)

WINDSOR—Rose High School plagued by its own mistakes, took advantage of Bertie miscues to pull out a 5-4 win over the Falcons Friday afternoon.

The win kept the Rampants unbeaten in Division I early play.

The game was marked more by things that shouldn't have happened than by good baseball. Bertie committed seven errors, and all five of the runs it gave up were unearned. Rose, in the meantime, booted the ball on five occasions, but one of the Falcon runs was earned.

Jim Wilkerson started the game for the Rampants, but gave way to Henry Baker in the fourth, and the Snake got the victory. Wilkerson, in three-plus innings, allowed five hits, struck out two and walked two. Most of his problems, however, came from his teammates. Baker, in his four innings of work gave up two hits, struck out two and walked one.

Mike Dawson, who went all the way for Bertie, allowed just two hits, and, like the Rampant moundsmen, had to shake his head at the antics of his teammates. Dawson struck out four and walked four, plus hit one.

Rose pushed over its first run in the opening inning. Lee Shearin reached on an error, as did Mike Brewington. With two away, Wright Hooks singled to left, and Shearin, trying to beat the throw home, was struck in the back by the ball coming into the plate, letting him score safely.

The Rampants boosted their lead to 2-0 with another unearned run in the third. Shearin walked to open the inning and Eddy Connolly also got a walk. Hooks reached on an error, loading the bases, and a sacrifice fly by Mike Belton scored Shearin.

Bertie came up with three runs in the bottom of the third as the Rampants suddenly lost their defensive poise. With one down, Mike Bryant singled to left. He stole second, and when the ball got through into center, he moved on to third. Ricky Vick then reached on a second error and courtesy runner Thomas Harrell stole up. Andy Flood then grounded out, scoring Bryant. The relay home in an attempt to get a double play was way wide, and Harrell moved to third as the ball was chased down.

Bertie got the lone earned run in the fourth. Jack Curlings opened the frame with a blast to deep center, easily making third for a triple. A walk to Bill Eubanks chased Wilkerson, but Baker also walked Pat Hill to load the bases. Dawson then hit a grounder back to third, played too late to the plate to get Curlings with the fourth run.

Both teams missed out on a couple of other threats, but Rose finally got its rally going in the seventh.

David Dixon led off with a walk and moved to second on an out. A passed ball put him on third, and he scored when Mike Brewington reached on an error. Connolly was safe when his grounder to short was thrown away at second, moving Brewington on to third. Jay Chenier, running for Connolly, stole second, and a wild pitch scored Brewington with the tieing run and put Chenier on third. Hooks reached on still another error, the third of the inning, and Chenier scored on the play and that proved to be all Rose needed.

The victory boosted the Rampant record to 5-1 overall and 2-0 in Division I play. Bertie is now 2-2 overall and 0-2 in the league.

A game between the two, scheduled for Saturday afternoon, in Greenville, was postponed until April 14. Rose returns to action on Tuesday, hosting Northern Nash.

Don Nelson Comes Off Bench To Fire Up Celtics In 119-115 Win

By The Associated Press

Don Nelson's nearing the age of retirement, but he's hardly ready for the old folks' home. You should have seen him kick up his heels Friday night.

The Boston forward, retiring at the end of this season, came off the bench twice with youthful vitality and fired the Celtics to a 119-115 National Basketball Association victory over the Houston Rockets.

"I just got in the flow of things," said Nelson, tuning up for the NBA playoffs. "I'm not in top-flight playing shape but I felt pretty good tonight, which is kind of surprising. I didn't get that tired."

Nelson, who's been a bench-rider most of the season while the Celtics were cruising to the Atlantic Division title, "played super," according to Coach Tom Heinsohn.

"He won the game for us," said Heinsohn. "When Nellie comes in, you can tell whether he's got it within the first 30 seconds. You know whether he can go well, he can come down and be in the play and when not. He was moving in the flow of the play tonight."

In the other NBA games, the Buffalo Braves beat the Atlanta Hawks 01-93; the Milwaukee Bucks stopped the Kansas City Kings 120-107; the Phoenix Suns trimmed the Portland Trail Blazers 106-103; the Detroit Pistons whipped the New Orleans Jazz 116-102; the Philadelphia 76ers defeated the Washington Bullets 96-94; the New York Knicks stopped the Chicago Bulls 110-95 and the Los Angeles Lakers outscored the Seattle SuperSonics 113-105.

Nelson scored seven points within a minute late in the last period to trim a Celtics' deficit from six points to 115-114. Then Dave Cowens put in two baskets and a free throw for the last five points of the game to salt away the victory.

Braves 101, Hawks 93

Bob McAdoo fired in 42 points and sparked a fourth-quarter rally that brought Buffalo its victory over Atlanta and put the Braves into the NBA's post-season playoffs.

Bucks 120, Kings 107

Suns 106, Trail Blazers 103

Paul Westphal blocked a shot, then fed a pass to Curtis Perry, whose layup gave Phoenix its victory over Portland.

Pistons 116, Jazz 102

76ers 96, Bullets 94

Knicks 110, Bulls 95

Lakers 113, SuperSonics 105

Gail Goodrich scored 37 points and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar had 23 to lead Los Angeles past Seattle.

Things Going Well For Acker

It's taken Frank Acker a couple of tournaments to adjust to the highly competitive collegiate golf scene, but with a top finish in last week's Furman Intercollegiate Tournament, the Fayetteville, N.C., native has restored confidence in his game.

Acker, who came from relative obscurity last year to win the North Carolina High School Championship, was tabbed as one of the top layers in the state at Terry Sanford High School. He lettered for three years at Terry Sanford, playing in the number two and three position.

Acker got off to a slow start in the Pirates' first tournament of the year, the Pinehurst Invitational. He failed to break 80 during the entire tournament and played poorly during the first two rounds of the Camp Lejeune Invitational event.

"I was really disgusted with the way I was playing in those two tournaments," said Acker. "I really wasn't that nervous, but I was hitting the ball so badly. I just hadn't had enough practice time and consequently my game was suffering."

Acker came back to fire a 74 in the last round of the Camp Lejeune tournament to propel the Pirates into a tie for second place in the team standings and followed that up with a top finish in last week's Furman Intercollegiate tournament. He put together rounds of 72-76-77-225 to finish among the top 15 individuals.

"The 74 in the final round at Camp Lejeune gave me the confidence I needed going into the Furman tournament," explained Acker. "I hit the ball real well at Furman and I was just pleased to play well on such a tough course. But I was disappointed that the team played so poorly during the final round. We should have been right up there in the top ten and we blew it."

The Pirates were in 13th place at the end of the first round but then fired the low round of the second day to move into fifth before dropping to 16th place in the final round.

"I hit the ball well and had a real solid round the first day," said Acker. "I think I may have felt some pressure during the final two rounds, but I think I played a lot better than my scores showed. Our team will now have some time off to get ready for the conference tournament. We're going to have to be at our best because both Furman and Appalachian State finished ahead of us in the Furman Intercollegiate."

The Southern Conference Championships will be held at the Country Club of South Carolina in Florence later in April and Acker feels the Pirates will be ready.

"East Carolina has finished in second place for the last three years," said Acker. "We've got talent on our team that's as good as anybody in the conference. I think it's about time we won the conference championship. I know I will be ready."

Colonels Find No Fun In City

By The Associated Press

Coach Hubie Brown of the Kentucky Colonels finds that New York is a nice place to visit, but he wouldn't want to play basketball there.

"It's embarrassing to come into New York and get killed all the time," says Brown.

Friday night was one of those times. The New York Nets routed Kentucky 111-87 in the American Basketball Association, beating the Colonels for the eighth straight game and the 10th time in 15 meetings this year.

"This is the only club that really gives us a hard time," said Brown, whose club hasn't won in New York all season.

"We're not getting anything out of three positions—center Artis Gilmore, forward Wilbert Jones and point guard Bird Averitt," said Brown. "Those three positions are killing us every night. We've had 30 turnovers each night in four out of our last five games."

In the other ABA games, the San Antonio Spurs defeated the Indiana Pacers 118-108 and the Spirits of St. Louis stopped the Virginia Squires 110-109.

Led by Al Skinner, the Nets ran off the last 12 points of the first half to come from behind and beat Kentucky, clinching second place in the ABA. Skinner scored six points on two fast-break layups plus a pair of free throws as the Nets surged from a 38-36 deficit to a 48-38 lead in the last three minutes of the half.

Spurs 118, Pacers 108

Spirits 110, Squires 109

The Spirits of St. Louis drove to 17-point leads in the second and third quarters and then held off Virginia's determined bid in the final 12 minutes to beat the Squires.

Martinez Gets Coaching Honor

A Master Coach is one who has served for at least ten years as either freshman coach, assistant or varsity coach of swimming, diving or water polo in a college or university and satisfies at least four of seven criteria. Those seven are: 1) win 50 percent of dual meets; 2) win a conference championship; 3) produce a national collegiate swimming champion; 4) produce an Olympic team member; 5) been active on CSCA committees; 6) conducted coaching institutes or schools or have participated in institutions or schools as a member of the faculty; 7) earned a masters degree.

Martinez satisfies six of the seven, lacking only an olympic member. During his coaching era of 1954-68, Martinez reigned atop the Carolinas Conference and Southern Conference each year. It was Martinez who started the current streak of 11 consecutive Southern Conference championships at East Carolina by winning in 1966-67-68. Also, Martinez twice coached Pirate teams to the NAIA national championship, in 1957 and 1959. One of his clubs also finished second in the NCAA College Division championships.

In addition to his excellence at East Carolina, Martinez started the Greenville Swim Club, revived a dying spirit of swimming in eastern North Carolina, has owned and operated the Raynez Swim School for 16 years, served on the olympic committee, served as chairman of the NAIA Swimming Coaches of America, chaired the North Carolina AAU Age Group for eight years, and has been voted a life member of the AAU.

For Martinez, this represents a second very prestigeous award for his many contributions to swimming. In 1968, Martinez was awarded the first Robert Kiputh Award, an award given to one person each year in the United States for contributing to the excellence in swimming as voted by the AAU.

Martinez now serves on the East Carolina University faculty in the Department of Health and Physical Education.

By CHIP LAMBETH
Reflector Sports Writer

D.H. Conley had one of the first kind of days Thursday losing to Havelock, 18-0. They almost had anorther Friday losing to Ayden-Grifton, 9-4.

Friday, Ayden-Grifton had one of the latter type of a day. Oh, the Chargers had their good plays, but they had some strange ones, too.

Like Ned Craft getting three bases on a errored pop-up to the Conley catcher. Or like Paul Setliff being forced at second after missing a steal sign. Or like Craft being caught between first and second after reaching on an overthrow of first.

Still, the Chargers got nine runs which beat the Vikings.

Dennis Cristiano started the game but did not pitch up to his usual capacity. He was bothered by a gusty wind which helped him miss the strike zone and when the wind stopped blowing, Conley hit his pitches out of the way. Cristiano was rocked for six hits in four innings. He struck out four and walked none. The three runs off him, all unearned, could have been prevented by good defense.

Quinn Morris started for Conley but was relieved in the third by Kevin Adams. Adams lasted three frames and was pulled in the sixth for Donnie Cox.

A-G got its first run in the bottom of the first when Steve Noble slammed a 3-2 pitch over the centerfield fence. Conley had put a man on third in the first but Craft picked him off to end the threat.

A-G added four more in the second. Vern Davenport and Jed Hardy drew walks. Eddie Taylor singled and an error on the play scored Davenport. Paul Setliff walked to load the bases and Al Butts hit into a fielder's choice that was errored at home. The miscue let both Hardy and Taylor score as Butts moved to second. Noble grounded out and an error on that play let Setliff and Butts score.

Paul Ricciarelli walked, Rod Kornegay singled and Davenport walked to reload the bases but a ground out ended the inning.

The Vikings picked up three in the top of the third. Curtis Clemons reached on an error and Joey Baggett singled. Donnie Cox grounded to third setting up a possible double play but the ball was errored leaving the bases loaded. Mike Phillips walked as did Byron Tyson forcing in two runs and Randy Edens singled in Cox.

The Chargers got two of them back in the bottom of the frame. Taylor walked and Setliff sacrificed him to second. Setliff was safe as the ball was errored at first moving Taylor to third. Butts hit into a fielder's choice that got Setliff at second. Setliff had missed a steal sign on the play. Taylor scored on the confusion at second. Noble walked moving Butts to second.

Craft grounded to Donnie Cox at second forcing Noble. Cox threw to first but the ball was wide and Craft headed for second. But Noble, unaware he was out, remained on the base. Craft had to turn around and go back to first but all he ran into was Edens with the ball.

Conley got its last run in the sixth as Roger Jenkins singled and scored on a hit by Cox.

Cox, Phillips and Edens had two hits each for the Vikings, Taylor had a pair for A-G.

Stars Are Traded By Charlie O.

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — Oakland A's Owner Charles O. Finley has avoided his annual contract showdowns with slugger Reggie Jackson and pitcher Ken Holtzman by trading the two to Baltimore.

In his blockbuster announcement Friday night, the A's owner insisted the salary disputes had nothing to do with the six-player deal with the Orioles.

He said he had been "trying to consummate this deal for the past two months" and that it "was made because I felt it would lead to another world championship."

The A's got 29-year-old right-hander Mike Torrez, 20-9 last season with a 3.06 earned-run average, and outfielder Don Baylor, who batted .282, hit 25 homers and stole 32 bases for the Orioles last American League baseball season.

The other players in what Finley said was "a straight three-for-three trade with no money involved" were Bill Van Bommel, a minor league pitcher for the A's since 1971, and Paul Mitchell, a 26-year-old right-hander the Orioles brought up from their Rochester farm club late last season.

Jackson, the A's' highest paid and most colorful player, went into seclusion with friends, declining comment. His agent and partner in several Arizona business ventures, Gary Walker, said, "I've never seen Reggie more reflective in his life. He has to give it a lot of thought.

"It isn't necessarily true that he will be going."

Walker said the trade "presents a tremendous amount of problems" for Jackson because of the outfielder's business interests in Arizona and California. "He would have played for a lot less in Oakland than anywhere else," Walker said.

Holtzman said, "As much as I hate to leave Oakland, this might be my one chance to get some security in the game. I'm glad more for financial reasons."

In Baltimore, Orioles' general manager Hank Peters said, "Charlie (Finley) and I have been talking about this thing off and on ever since last winter...It will affect our payroll, but it doesn't worry me. We have several other unsigned players. I have to believe that Jackson and Holtzman are willing to sign."

Jackson, whose $140,000 salary was cut 20 per cent this year, was seeking a three-year contract for about $200,000 a year.

Tigers Hold Off R. Rapids

ROANOKE RAPIDS—Williamston used a five-run fourth inning to gain a big lead, then had to hold on to pull out an 8-7 victory over hosting Roanoke Rapids Friday.

The Tigers grabbed the lead with two runs in the first inning. Mike Kosey walked, stole second and moved to third on a wild pitch. He then scored on Ken Herman's single. Tim Hardison was hit by a pitch, and Butch Davis hit into a fielder's choice, scoring Herman.

Roanoke Rapids came back with one in its half of the frame. David Butts reached on an error and stole second. Glenn Ezzell doubled him in.

The Tigers added a third run in the second. Don Wynne walked, moved up on Koesy's infield grounder, and scored on a hit by Herman.

In the fourth, the Tigers appeared to break it open by scoring five runs. Herbie Rogers walked and stole second. Wynne doubled him in, and Koesy reached on an error. Herman singled in Wynne and Hardison reached when his third strike was errored. Davis grounded out, scoring both Koesy and Herman on the play. Hardison scored on a passed ball, and that made it 8-1.

Roanoke Rapids rallied for two in the fifth. Chris Carsey got a hit and scored on Ezzell's second double. Chuck Allsbrook reached on an error, scoring Ezzell.

Three more came over in the sixth. Eddie Cooke singled and Kevin Knox walked. Lee Emory walked to load them up and Cooke scored on an out. Carsey singled in Knox and Emory.

Roanoke Rapids came back within one with a final inning run, but the Tigers were able to put out the fire just in time.

No Danger Of Lonborg Trade

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Ken Holtzman pitches for the Baltimore Orioles, Mike Torrez toils for the Oakland A's and only Bowie Kuhn knows who Andy Messersmith belongs to, but Jim Lonborg still hurls for the Philadelphia Phillies...and that's where he'll stay as long as he keeps pitching like he did Friday.

"As long as he proved he could pitch, we always wanted to keep him. That's the best curve ball I've ever seen him throw," said General Manager Paul Owens after the veteran right-hander, who'll be 33 in two weeks, gave up just one hit in seven scoreless innings as the Phillies downed the Detroit Tigers 4-1 in exhibition baseball.

Lonborg was off to a 6-3 start last season, including two shutouts and a 1.92 earned run average that was tops in the National League at the time. But he pulled a muscle and then hurt his shoulder the following week while favoring the original injury. He won just two games after June 13 and didn't pitch at all in September.

"I have to feel better because of what Jim has done this spring, because of his great competitiveness and his attitude," said Manager Danny Ozark. "We really had no intention of trading him as long as he proved to be sound physically. I think he knows how we feel about him."

"Well," said Lonborg, "that's good, because this is the club I want to be with. I drove myself coming back from the injury because I knew I would be pitching for somebody. If I had a choice, it would be Philadelphia."

In other strong pitching performances, Minnesota's Jim Hughes, Steve Luebber, Vic Albury and Bill Butler combined on a four-hitter and the Twins edged the Houston Astros 1-0 on Lyman Bostock's 11th-inning single; Dick Ruthven and Elias Sosa pitched the Atlanta Braves to a three-hit 3-1 triumph over the New York Yankees and Craig Swan hurled five shutout innings as the New York Mets edged the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-4 on home runs by Wayne Garrett, Bruce Boisclair and Ron Hodges.

Joe Rudi drove in four runs to help the Oakland A's beat the San Diego Padres 9-3 before their stunning trade with Baltimore and rookie Andres Mora's two-run single enabled the Baltimore Orioles to nip the Texas Rangers 2-1 after their stunning trade with Oakland.

The Boston Red Sox boosted their record to 7-2-1 by downing the St. Louis Cardinals 6-5, home runs by Bobby Darwin and Sixto Lezcano led the Milwaukee Brewers over the Chicago Cubs 7-4 and Ed Halicki pitched six solid innings in the San Francisco Giants' 4-2 triumph over the Cleveland Indians.

The Chicago White Sox took advantage of three Cincinnati errors to score four unearned runs and beat the Reds 5-1, the Kansas City Royals blew a 6-1 lead and then edged the White Sox' 'B' squad 7-6 on Ruppert Jones' ninth-inning single and Steve Yeager's leadoff home run in the 11th inning lifted the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 5-4 victory over the California Angels in the first game of their 'Freeway Series.''

Jamesville Trims Pirates

BATH—By the time he'd thrown the second pitch of the game, Bath High School's Billy Woolard knew it was going to be a long day. It turned out he was right as the Jamesville Bullets romped to a 9-2 win over the Pirates.

Wooldard's first pitch was slapped over the fence by Larry Pierce—but it was foul. The second delivery also went over the fence, but this time it was in dead center field, staking the Bullets to a 1-0 lead.

Bath came back to tie it up with a run in the second. Mark Butler walked and moved up on Jim Price's single. Woolard helped himself with a run-scoring single.

But Jamesville went right back out in the top of the third. Pierce reached on an error and Jerry Ange singled. Robbie Hardison's hit scored Pierce.

Jamesville added a third run in the fifth. Ange singled and stole up, and Hardison also singled, then too stole second. Billy Brown hit a popup to first that both the first baseman and catcher chased, and no one covered home. After the catch, Ange trotted home untouched.

After Bath picked up another run in the bottom of the fifth, to trail, 3-2, the Bullets exploded for five in the sixth. Edwin Lilley and Brown doubled in both Pierce and Ange. Jeff Holliday doubled to drive in Hardison and Brown.

In the seventh, the Bullets got their final run. Ange got a hit and scored on Hardison's double.

Sports Briefs

By The Associated Press

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit center Bob Lanier suffered a cervical spinal injury Friday with 31 seconds remaining in the second quarter of the Pistons' 116-102 National Basketball Association victory over New Orleans.

Lanier was taken to a suburban hospital, where Dr. Ben Paolucci, team doctor, reported X rays were negative. He said Lanier would remain in the hospital overnight but did not say how long Lanier would be out of the Pistons' lineup.

Lanier apparently was injured when he was hit in the back of the neck by New Orleans' Otto Moore, a former Piston, during a scramble for the ball after Lanier tipped in a shot.

Lanier scored 12 points and accounted for 13 rebounds before being hurt.

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Cincinnati Reds' All-Star catcher Johnny Bench will undergo X-rays today on his right hand, which was struck by a foul tip in Friday's game with the Chicago White Sox.s

Bench said the hand swelled immediately and became discolored. "I had trouble driving with it. I can make a fist but I have trouble getting the hand into my pocket," he said.

Preliminary examination indicated only a bruise, but the Reds called for X-rays as a precautionary measure.

Atlanta Gets First Choice

NEW YORK (AP) — The Atlanta Hawks, with more than two months to ponder what they will do with the No. 1 pick in the National Basketball Association's draft of college players, apparently are thinking in two directions.

One, choose either 7-foot Robert Parish of Centenary or 6-10 Leon Douglas of Alabama.

Or, trade the choice to the New York Knicks for center John Gianelli or Neal Walk, forward Phil Jackson and a substantial amount of cash, and New York, in turn, would draft Parish.

The Hawks, with the worst record in the Eastern Conference, secured the coveted No. 1 selection Friday by calling "heads" in a coin-flip ceremony with the Chicago Bulls, the team with the poorest record in the Western Conference, at the office of Commissioner Larry O'Brien. It was the first time since 1968 that the coin had come up heads.

M.B. "Bud" Seretean, the Hawks' president and general manager, had instructed Assistant General Manager Bob Kauffman, who was in O'Brien's office for the flip, to call heads if he had the opportunity because, "I've been going to Las Vegas for 25 years now and I've never rolled seven eight straight times."

Both Seretean and Kauffman watched the highly-regarded Parish in an All-Star game at Shreveport, La. Thursday night, and the towering center was highly impressive.

Quarterbacks Traveling In NFL Trades

By The Associated Press

Quarterbacks Steve Spurrier, John Hadl, Lynn Dickey and Bobby Douglass have been sent packing as the National Football League opened its swap shop with a burst of activity.

The NFL lifted its ban on trading Friday and the result was a flurry of deals that would have done justice to Wall Street. Spurrier, a former Heisman Trophy winner, was sent by San Francisco to Tampa Bay, Hadl went from Green Bay to Houston, Dickey went from Houston to Green Bay and Douglass was traded from San Diego to New Orleans.

Spurrier, a nine-year veteran who never lived up to the promise he showed at the University of Florida, was dealt to the expansion Buccaneers for wide receiver Willie McGee, linebacker Bruce Elia and a second-round draft choice.

"We have said all along that if we traded for an established quarterback, he would have to be one who is a good athlete," said Tampa Bay Vice President Ron Wolf. "In Steve Spurrier we think we have found the right blend for an expansion-team situation."

The trade of Spurrier clears the way for the much-rumored trade that would send quarterback Jim Plunkett from the New England Patriots to the 49ers.

Hadl, veteran cornerback Ken Ellis and two undisclosed draft choices were sent to Houston for Dickey, a five-year veteran who has spent most of his time warming the Oilers' bench behind Dan Pastorini.

"Any time you make an investment like this, it's expensive," admitted Bart Starr, the Packers' coach and general manager. "But if you break it down and analyze it, I think you can justify it."

For his part, Dickey was delighted. "After you've been around the National Football League for a while, struggling like I have, and then find somebody who wants you...what more can you ask?"

Douglass and a third-round draft pick became New Orleans property in exhange for linebacker Rick Middleton. Douglass, a 6-foot-4, 228-pounder, is known more as a runner than a passer. He set an NFL record for quarterbacks in 1968 with Chicago by gaining 968 rushing yards.

Last season, as a third-stringer at San Diego, he threw only 47 passes and completed only 15.

Several other trades were announced Friday.

San Diego picked up wide receiver Charlie Joiner from Cincinnati in exchange for defensive end Coy Bacon. "Coy is one of the real established linemen in the NFL," said Bengals General Manager Paul Brown. "He is a top pass rusher, has plenty of experience and wants to play for a contender."

The Colts sent tackle Dennis Nelson to Philadelphia for reserve quarterback Bill Troup; Oakland dealt linebacker Mike Dennery to San Diego for linebacker Franklin Tate, and the Oilers acquired the negotating rights to controversial running back Duane Thomas, formerly of the Washington Redskins.

Jury Denies Damages To Kapp In Decision

By ERIC PREWITT
AP Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Joe Kapp went for millions and came out with nothing in his legal battle against the National Football League.

"I'm disappointed, of course, and hope it doesn't hurt the players over-all," said the former quarterback who sued the NFL and lost.

A U.S. District Court jury, which listened to more than four weeks of testimony in the antitrust case, deliberated only six hours Friday before returning its verdict: that Kapp suffered no damages and that the New England Patriots had not breached a contract with him.

"I'm very sorry for Joe Kapp, who placed too much reliance in his agent, John Elliott Cook," NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said in New York after learning of the verdict.

"It's a possible turning point for settling these matters in collective bargaining rather than in court," added Rozelle, who testified for eight hours during the trial.

The NFL is being challenged in court by players on several other fronts, mostly over the controversial Rozelle Rule, and no collective bargaining agreement is in effect now.

Kapp, who contended he was forced out of football in 1971 after he refused to sign an NFL standard player contract with the Patriots, seemed to have won a key victory in late 1974 when Judge William T. Sweigert ruled in a pretrial summary judgement that several NFL rules—including the college draft and Rozelle Rule—violated antitrust laws.

But the NFL lawyers argued that Kapp and Cook devised a "game plan" to sue the NFL when the Patriots asked the quarterback to sign the standard contract. Kapp joined the Patriots in 1970, leaving the Minnesota Vikings after a bitter contract dispute, and played under a memo agreement calling for $600,00 for three seasons.

Rozelle ordered Kapp out of the Patriots' training camp in 1971 on the grounds that the collective bargaining agreement then in force required all players to sign such contracts. It was Cook's contention that the memo agreement was a legal contract and that the NFL contract contained illegal provisions.

Sweigert told the jury in final instructions Thursday that although some NFL rules violated antitrust laws, Kapp's counsel had to show the quarterback sustained damages because of the violations.

Kapp was the highest paid player in the NFL when he left, and his attorneys claimed damages to him amounted to possibly as much as $11.8 million.

"It's no longer '40 for 60.' It's old No. 1 at the cash register. He wants his right off the top," said William Willis, an attorney for the Patriots, while summing up the defense's case.

Kapp was voted most valuable player on the Vikings' 1970 Super Bowl team but refused a trophy by saying, "There is no most valuable Viking. It's 40 for 60," which he explained meant 40 players pulling together for 60 minutes.

Patriots President Billy Sullivan, after thanking Willis and the other NFL lawyers in the courtroom Friday, said, "I've been praying very hard the last few weeks. But I also truly feel justice was served."

BENDING FOR A BIRDIE—Ron Cerrudo bends at the knees as he watches a birdie putt go true on the 15th green Friday during the second round of the Greater Greensboro Open. Cerrudo was tied for second place with Don Bies and Bob Menne at six under par following the second day of play. (AP Wirephoto)

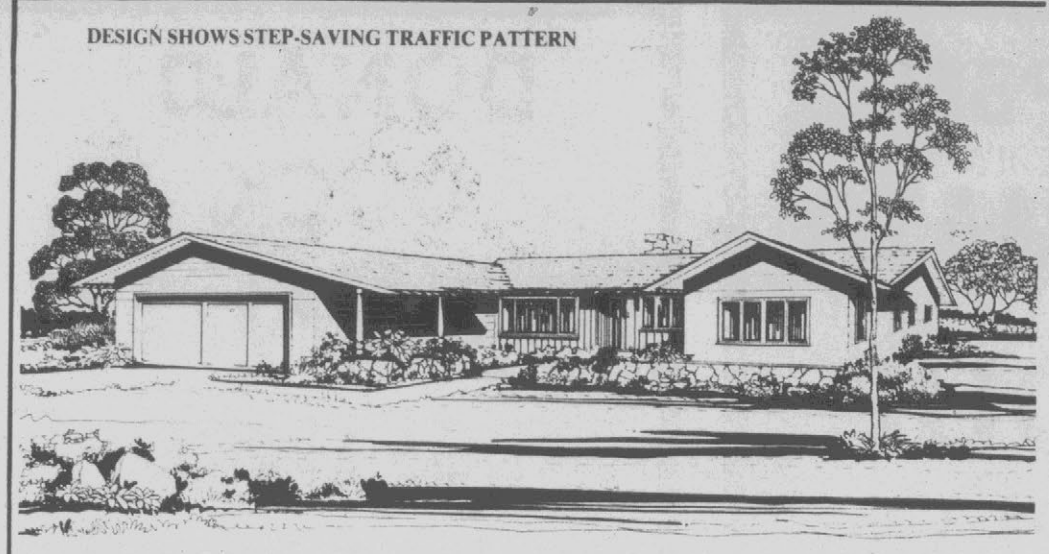
DESIGN SHOWS STEP-SAVING TRAFFIC PATTERN



RELAXED LIVING AIM OF RANCH STYLE PLAN

By Jerry Bishop

Every effort has been made to create a setting for enjoyable living in the Foxcliff, a three bedroom home that stresses convenience and informality. A workable traffic pattern minimizes steps and combines with a kitchen activity complex to fashion this livable dwelling.

Contrasting horizontal and vertical siding yield an exterior harmony punctuated by the gently sloping roof and stone chimney. Inside, the Foxcliff is a family home.

The foyer borders the kitchen complex, closed off by a folding door, and leads directly ahead to the living room. Equally adaptable to family relaxation or gatherings of friends, the living room corners a wood-burning fireplace for warmth and atmosphere. Sliding glass doors add light and extend the room outdoors to the large terrace.

Accessible from four sides, the kitchen complex is designated an important activity center. Work and play are fused by the inclusion of the angular snack bar, as well as a dining area, laundry nook, and boutiful supply of counter and floor space.

Behind the kitchen, a 13-ft. utility room offers storage space and suggests the possible use as a pantry.

Bedrooms are clustered around two full baths and include a comfortable master bedroom with double closets and private bath. Two smaller bedrooms are well supplied with closets and windows.

For the family that values informality and appreciates a step-saving floor plan, the Foxcliff offers both — and includes an appealing ranch style exterior. The plan is shown without a basement, but the utility room should solve any storage problems. In addition, the double garage, convenient to yard and kitchen, offers some storage space.

One way to eliminate most of the trouble that occurs inside a toilet tank is to replace part of the old equipment with one of the new units that does away with the float ball assembly.

Meanwhile, a large majority of homes still utilize the seemingly complicated mechanism whereby the float ball rides up and down in the tank as the water rises and falls. The term "seemingly complicated" is used deliberately, since the mystery disappears once you understand the operation.

To get a better idea of the workings of a toilet tank, remove the tank cover, turn the flush and watch what happens. Do this three or four times, noting how the float ball goes down as the water empties from the tank into the bowl, how it rises as the tank is refilled, and how it stops when the water reaches the proper level. It will then be much easier for you to understand the discussion that follows.

Probably the most common problem in this type of operation is the continuous trickle of water into the bowl when the toilet is not being used. This means that water is getting past the ball at the bottom of the tank even though the ball appears to be sitting properly on the valve seat. This tank ball is at the end of the vertical rod that goes up when you trip the flush lever. Why is water getting past this ball? It may be that the vertical rod is slightly bent or out of alignment and thus is not setting the ball perfectly on the valve seat. In either case, a small adjustment will correct the trouble. If this is not the problem, the valve ball itself may be worn and require replacement. It can easily be replaced by unscrewing it from the rod. Or the valve seat may be filled with grit. Smoothing it with sandpaper or steel wool will return it to working order.

The other big trouble-maker is the failure of the water in the tank to reach the desired level. If it rises too high, it will spill over into the overflow tube, the hollow pipe to the left of center in the tank. This produces a slight gurgling sound that can be heard even when the tank cover is in place. If the water does not rise high enough (it should be about one inch from the top of the overflow tube), then it may not be sufficient for a complete flush.

When the water level is too high, bend down, just a little, the float rod, the horizontal unit to which the float ball is attached. When the water level is too low, bend the float rod up a little. In each case, use both hands for the bending and work carefully so you do not throw the entire tank mechanism out of alignment. Two other possibilites are that the float ball is no longer buoyant and needs replacing or that the inlet valve to the left requires a new washer.

Whenever any repair requires a low level of water in the tank so that you can work better, there is a valve under the tank that can be utilized. To shut it off, turn it clockwise. Flush the tank and there will be no refilling until you turn the valve counter-clockwise.

Gardening Questions

Q. We have seven rhodendrons and eleven azaleas in separate beds. They were planted five years ago in a well-prepared bed, but they have grown very little and bloomed even less. None of the plants appear diseased. They just sit there. Any suggestions? (Mrs. M.D., Lexington)

A. Both rhododendron and azalea plants object to having their roots too deeply in the ground. It's a good guess that the beds were prepared with such organic matter as leafmold and peat moss. Weight of the rootballs of the plants could have caused them to sink several inches beneath soil line. If this is the case, carefully dig each plant and reset, so roots are barely covered with soil. When planting azaleas and rhododendrons, it is well to firm soil in the planting hole by tamping with your foot. (Henry J. Smith, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. Our peach tree has already bloomed and it looks like a good fruit set. Can I figure we will have a good crop of fruit? (B.C., Cary)

A. No. You can lose peaches by freezing weather for several weeks after bloom. The green fruit often is lost easier than the blooms. (Mel Kolbe, extension horticulturist)

Q. Last year my neighbor and I planted tomato plants on the same day, almost side by side. His plants grew about shoulder high and mine only got about knee high. They both produced well early but he was still picking long after mine were gone. What could have caused this? Our plants all looked healthy. (G.B., Durham)

A. It appears to me that you planted different varieties. Some varieties, such as Bonus and Patio, are determinate and only grow to about one and one-half to three feet in height. Other varieties such as Better Boy, Manapal, or Marion are indeterminate and will grow in height until after they are six feet or taller. (Albert A. Banadyga, extension horticulturist)

Q. Why do I have trouble obtaining an early stand of okra? (J.W., Williamston)

A. Because okra requires a soil temperature of at least 68 degrees to germinate and continuous warm soil to grow. Early temperatures are usually cooler than this. (W.W. Reid, extension horticulturist)

Radio Helps Handicapped

BROOKINGS, S.D. (AP) — More than 60 visually handicapped South Dakotans are expanding their news and literature intake through a new public radio service offered by KESD-FM at South Dakota State University.

Daily broadcasts for registered print-handicapped residents of eastern South Dakota are carried on a special subchannel heard only on specially adapted receivers licensed and provided by the state.

The programs include daily news as it appears in newspapers, novels, short stories, syndicated columns, magazine articles and other specially prepared materials.

Howard Hanson, director of Services to the Visually Impaired and himself blind, said that by the time most people have read a best seller and finished talking about it, a print handicapped person is still waiting for someone to read it to him.

Here's the Answer

Q. — The ceiling in one of our rooms has calcimine on it. I want to repaint it with latex paint. I thought the calcimine had to be removed first, but a friend of mine says this does not have to be done if latex paint is used. Is he right?

A. — No. The calcimine must be removed regardless of the type of paint being used. Most of the time it will come off easily by rubbing with a bristle brush dipped into warm water with a little detergent in it. In stubborn cases, you may have to use a scraper.

Q. — I'd like to paint the concrete walls of our basement with portland cement paint. Is it true this kind of paint should be applied while the walls are damp?

A. — For best results, yes. One other point. Portland cement paint should not be applied over any other type of paint.

Q. — Two of the sinks in our house drain very slowly, as does the bathtub drain. I have been told that the clogging can only be eliminated by removing the cleanout plug in the main line and unclogging that pipe. I have located the cleanout plug in the basement. How do I go about loosening the blockage?

A. — After removing the cleanout plug (keep a pail underneath it), use an auger or plumber's snake the same as you might in an upstairs fixture that is clogged. If the obstruction is farther along the pipe than the length of your auger, you'll need professional help, since a heavy-duty power auger will be required.

Q. — We have decided to wallpaper the ceiling in the master bedroom in our house. We also plan to paper the walls. Which should be done first?

A. — The ceiling. And remember to hang the paper across the width of the ceiling rather than the length.

Q. — I have used wood putty, the powder type that is mixed with water, and find that it always dries white. It takes color to some degree, but not very well. Is there any other way to color it?

A. — Yes. Use a water-soluble powder color in the mixture.

(Thirty-five do-it-yourself problems are discussed in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N. J. 07666. Questions can not be answered individually.)

Prove Crisis Unit's Value

ATLANTA (AP) — When police in Erie, Pa., first teamed with mental health workers in a 24-hour "crisis unit," it wasn't exactly a match made in heaven.

"The social service people thought the police were dumb cops with a hit-em-over-the-head attitude, and the police thought the psychiatrists were bleeding heart do-gooders," Police Chief Sam Gemelli told a meeting of the American Orthopsychiatric Association here.

"Now the shrinks are like part of the department; we're like one big happy family," he said. "We've demystified the closed police and mental health systems."

The director of the Erie County Mental Health-Mental Retardation Program, Dan Hatton, said Erie's Family Intervention Crisis Unit was begun in 1972 "because the police were making no dent in crime and we were making no dent in mental health care."

In 1974 more than 5,500 persons contacted police with a list of family disputes ranging from drinking money to infidelity, Gemelli said.

"During my 26 years as a policeman, I couldn't find anybody to help these people between 5 p.m. and 9 a.m.," he said. "Now anybody can get help anytime, from the poor family who's fighting over booze to the influential family who doesn't want anybody to report that the wife is crazy."

Educated In India Find Jobs Scarce

By JOHN NEEDHAM

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Kripal Singh, 22, is a graduate of Delhi University with a major in science. He works as a waiter in a hotel.

Guddi Ram, same age, same major, works as a clerk in a food shop.

Both are better off than Kesavan Neier, 24, unemployed since his graduation three years ago. He lives at home, gets money from his family and dislikes it.

Neither over-qualifies even for the category of India's "educated jobless," a far from select group that covers anyone who graduated from high school and cannot find a job.

It is generally agreed that there are no reliable unemployment figures for India.

Official statistics say 8 million workers in this land of 600 million are jobless and half the 8 million are educated.

But a conservative unofficial estimate puts the number of unemployed at 40 million, 17 million of whom are considered educated.

Even by official guess, the number of unemployed has doubled in six years.

Many social scientists, concerned by the lack of jobs for the educated, blame what they see as an outmoded educational system.

"Education does not normally produce unemployment," said one educator. "It only makes one more keenly aware of the deep deprivation that is already there."

Says another sociologist: "The colleges and universities are structurally incapable of providing effective education in the modern age."

Singh would agree. He's ready to throw in the towel he uses to wipe off tables at the hotel where he works.

"People take pity on my plight," he says. "But their sympathies end there. My fate is doomed unless some saviour comes along."

Ram, in the food shop where rice and wheat are stacked in bags on the floor behind him, says, "I know I am not fit for this job. But this is better than sitting at home."

Neier, his voice angry, says, "I have been knocking at various doors from the day I graduated in commerce three years ago. If I say or do something in my anger, people think I am a waster and a rudderless man. But what can I do?"

Many industrialists blame the government's economic policies for the growing unemployment.

"Unless the government has a more pragmatic and elastic economic policy, the country will suffer and the jobless number will keep growing," an official of the Indian Chamber of Commerce and Industry said in an interview.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi has announced a 20-point economic program that government officials hope will get things moving.

They point to India's "negative inflation" last year and to a year of good harvests as healthy signs.

But in the minds of all is the knowledge that despite many government plans over the years to create jobs, the unemployment rate keeps going up and with it the number of educated unemployed and underemployed.

Museum To Open Drive

A full day of activity is scheduled to kick-off the charter year membership campaign of the North Carolina Museum of History Associates, Inc., Monday (April 5). Membership chairmen from all over the state will participate in a reception at the newly-renovated Executive Mansion and hear a discussion by a former representative of Historic Williamsburg.

From District No. 2, membership coordinators are Dr. Henry C. Ferrell, Jr. and Mrs. W. S. Corbitt, Jr., both of Greenville, and Mrs. John R. Baggett, New Bern. The Museum Associates, formed late in 1975, is designed to support and promote the North Carolina Museum of History in two ways: to provide support for the museum from the public and to provide a means by which the museum can create a wider interest in its programs and the state historic sites.

JUST PASSING THROUGH—The Alabama section of the Bicentennial Wagon Train gets little more than a passing look from 76 year old W.G. Higgins as the train rolls through north Alabama into Huntsville. The only comments from Mr. Higgins as he dug in his garden was, "that ain't nothing use to haul togs to the sawmill on an old wagon. Had a team of four mules to pull that load. You can't rush 'em, four miles an hour is about all you can do." (AP Wirephoto)

Drawings May Be Michelangelo's

By EDWARD MAGRI
Associated Press Writer

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — Experts peeling whitewash from the walls of a church basement have found about 50 drawings believed to be by Michelangelo and once regarded as scrawls to be covered up.

Dioclecio Redig de Campos, director of the Vatican museums and an internationally recognized Michelangelo expert, said he has no doubt the large charcoal drawings covering the walls of a corridor under the basilica of San Lorenzo are by the Renaissance master.

"Obviously, Michelangelo used the place as his workshop and storeroom while working at the Medici chapels above, and he made the drawings to develop ideas or simply for fun," Redig de Campos said Friday.

Paolo dal Poggetto, director of the Medici chapel, made the discovery by chance while looking for a new safety exit for the crowds of visitors to Michelangelo's famed 16th Century Medici tombs.

"I'd better look under the whitewash here before knocking down the wall, I told myself," dal Poggetto said, recalling an earlier discovery of works by Michelangelo's pupils.

Under the whitewash, he found two angels, a cloaked man and a head of Christ. "And it was unmistakably Michelangelo," dal Poggetto added. "You could tell from the style, quality and grandioseness, the typical stroke."

Discovery of the first drawings was announced New Year's Day. Since then, two art restorers working with scalpels have been taking two layers of whitewash from the rest of the basement corridor walls.

"It has been a continuous surprise," dal Poggetto said. "We hardly hoped that the original discovery could lead us to an entire gallery of Michelangelo's drawings."

The drawings come in all sizes and show faces, legs and other isolated details as well as a great figure of Christ.

"Some details recall Michelangelo's known drawings on paper. Others recall his paintings and sculptures, dal Poggetto said. "Some drawings have been done over and over again in Michelangelo's typical overlapping of versions."

"They are of great interest," Redig de Campos said. "My opinion is they are certainly by Michelangelo. Of course, I'm not infallible and there are no known ancient documents to support the attribution, and no signature on the walls."

He said the Florentines covered them over with whitewash because to them "they were more or less scrawls. They cared only about accomplished works in the 16th Century."

The Florentine find was the third attributed to Michelangelo in a decade.

A wooden crucifix authoritatively identified as a Michelangelo work that had been missing for centuries was found in a convent near Rome in the 1960's. A sculptured head found a few years ago in the ruins of a demolished house in Rome's ancient Trastevere section was said to be the original head of Michelangelo's Pieta Rondanini.

Ambassador's Son Arrested

MAIDSTONE, England (AP) — John Thomas Jova, 24, son of the American ambassador to Mexico, pleaded guilty to drug smuggling and has been sentenced to 2½ years in jail.

His lawyer told a Maidstone court on Friday that Jova was the victim of a blackmail plot in which international drug smugglers took photographs of him in bed with a homosexual at a London party.

Jova, son of Ambassador Joseph J. Jova, was arrested last Dec. 9 at Folkestone Harbor as he arrived on a car ferry from France.

Prosecutors said John Jova was wearing a special vest with 16 compartments containing 2¾ pounds of 75 per cent cocaine.

N.C. Wilderness Camps Experiment Being Tried

RALEIGH—When Grady recently left a large western North Carolina training school and headed for the eastern part of the state, the 14-year-old had no idea he was making history.

Grady was not a runaway. His trip across the state had the full blessing of the state of North Carolina, including the governor, the General Assembly, the North Carolina Department of Human Resources, and particularly the Division of Youth Services—not to mention countless concerned private citizens who for years have been behind a national effort to reduce the number of children in state institutions.

Grady was leaving training school and 160 school mates for a wilderness camp. There, along with four counselors and 16 other boys who were not juvenile delinquents, he would work, play and live for an indefinite time.

He would clear land, help construct camp facilities, live in camper-built primitive cottages, plan and cook at least two meals a day over an open fire. He would for the first time know simple successes, such as sawing a piece of wood, hammering a nail, clearing land and building bridges. But most of all he would learn to be responsible for his own survival.

It was a history-making move for the state of North Carolina. Grady and Tom were the first of an estimated 50 children who, in the next few months, will be transferred out of the training schools into smaller community type facilities.

According to North Carolina Division of Youth Services Director Ray Shurling, facilities such as the wilderness camp have certain advantages over training schools. "In the first place, camps, while not cheap, cost less than institutions. More important, for many young people the wilderness type environment is more conducive to the development of greater self confidence, self esteem and encourages cooperation with others. In that setting everyday necessities such as cooking meals and building a shelter get done only if there is both individual initiative and interdependence."

Grady for instance, is an example of a child who had become institutionalized, or dependent upon the system. Only 14 years old, his involvement with the law had already consumed about half of his life.

Since 1970, when he was eight-year-old, he has been arrested for several charges of breaking and entering, larceny and shoplifting. He had been in training school a number of times. In an attempt to remain there, he consistently committed offenses just before his release time. Twice he was released and sent back home, but an afternoon of shoplifting would get him back into training school. Grady's mother is alcoholic and partially paralyzed. Grady remembers when he was eight that she murdered her husband in self-defense. His record at training school showed that he does well there . . . until it's time to go home.

At camp, Grady will learn how to work with others, to make decisions, and to take responsibility for his own survival.

According to Dr. Elmer Davidson, a pshychologist with the Division of Youth Services, "One of the best things about sending a child to camp instead of training school is they don't get into a beat-the-system culture." At wilderness camp, they become successful at getting things accomplished, because there are so many things that must get done in order for them to sleep and eat, he said.

The trend away from training schools, the increasing number of commitments to smaller community type facilities, including camps and group homes, is expected to increase in the next few years as the North Carolina Division of Youth Services seeks out a new alternative to training school.

Contracts have already been signed with three North Carolina camps

A Chair Is More Than A Place To Sit

ANTIQUES DEALER . . . Joe Kindig III of York, Pa., recently addressed the Tryon Palace Symposium held in New Bern. (ECU News Bureau photo)

By FRANCEINE PERRY
ECU News Bureau

NEW BERN—"Quite possibly prehistoric man tired of squatting and standing and deliberately sat upon the nearest stone whose top surface was about 17 inches above ground, and the chair was thus born," said antiques dealer Joe Kindig III.

"Since the earliest times of civilization, the chair has remained one of the most important items in interior furnishing."

Kindig, of York, Pa., discussed the anatomy of the chair through its evolution in colonial America at the eighth annual Tryon Palace Symposium. He was one of six experts who addressed the symposium participants on aspects of colonial life and decorative arts.

During the Middle Ages, the chair was not just a piece of furniture but a symbol of authority; it was a set of ruling for kings and justices and a place of honor for learned teachers, said Kindig. Even in the typical manor dwelling, the chair was reserved for the lord, and all other household members who were entitled to sit usually sat upon benches.

"New England colonists retained this medieval concept," he noted. "The average northeastern household possessed only one or two chairs, with benches making up the other seats.

"In the southern settlements, chairs occurred more frequently; as many as 14 or 16 might have been found in one hall. I have not been able to discover why this should be the case."

Illustrating with color slides, Kindig pointed out that early American chairs — the wainscot chair, the Brewster or "Pilgrim" chair, the ladder-back chair and the Cromwellian chair—were very like similar chairs of the period in use in England.

Early examples were not designed for comfort, with their rigidly upright backs and lack of padding. More than anything else, the finest survivals of 17th century America exhibit the fine work of the "joiner" and the "turner," important craftsmen in the production of colonial chairs.

"The first truly sophisticated chairs in the American colonies were the vertical, ornately carved pieces which featured cane seats and backs, a design which came from the Orient by way of Portugal," he said, noting that the English counterparts of these early cane chairs were broader than the American types, a difference which endured throughout the 18th century also.

Padded Leather

The cane inserts were later replaced by padded leather upholstery. In the early 1700's the Queen Anne style developed, a classic design with a padded balloon-shaped seat, cabriole legs and curved splat back.

The Queen Anne side chair's gradually sloping back was a concession toward comfort, as was the upholstered wing or "easy" chair.

The massive wing chair was a practical item in the 18th century's drafty houses," said Kindig. The wing chair is a good example of functional beauty; its lush padded upholsery provided warmth and its beautifully-turned stretchers provides support.

As the 18th century progressed, American chairs continued to resmble English chairs, with notable trends toward divergence. Similar in shape and overall design to chairs in the mother country, the chairs produced in America tended to be simpler and less often decorated with intricate surface carving and veneer work.

American "schools" of chairmaking were a result of the likelihood of water damage to furniture imported by sea.

"American colonists, even those of great wealth, tended to purchase their furnishings locally," said Kindig. "A chair imported from Boston to Philadelphia would be in great danger of water damage; therefore after 1735 each sizeable city fostered its own body of chairmakers who tended to produce similar products."

A Boston Chippendale-style chair is usually more delicately formed and lighter in design than similar Philadelphia chair, yet both differ from English chairs of the period. Even in the South, where the influence of England's design styles was stronger, there were noticeable differences, he said.

Place of Origin

"While some distinguishing characteristics do indicate a chair's place of origin, attribution of a surviving chair to an individual chairmaker is dangerous; styles and design ideas were repeated by the leading cabinetmakers on both sides of the Atlantic.

"They found inspiration in Chippendale's 'Directory' and other illustrated design books which were available throughout Britain and in the colonies."

Of whatever origin, certain qualities appear in the best chairs, said Kindig.

"There is a harmony of curve and line, seen in the crest rail, the sides of the back and splat, the seat edge and the legs. American chairs of the colonial period are ornamented by certain stylistic motifs of carving, such as the shell and the acanthus leaf, and by such design elements as ball-and-claw feet, 'C' scrolls, cyma curves, serpentining, and gadrooned edges.

"While some of this carving is two-dimensional and flat in appearance, the products of the best chairmakers possess a harmony between line and surface ornamentation."

Kindig believes one of the finest surviving late-colonial chairs, a piece in the style now popularly known as the "Martha Washington chair," is the Speaker's Chair in Independence Hall.

He pointed out the pattern of subdued carving along the chair's wooden arm supports, and its overall graceful and dignified form. "In the Speaker's Chair is visible the culmination of a developing art in a developing nation. The chairmakers and cabinetmakers of colonial American became creative artists in their success at combining the beautiful with the functional, the artistic with the natural."

Other topics of symposium lectures included early American music, colonial silver, tavern life and antique furnishings as reflections of history.

The symposium is ponsored each year by the Tryon Palace Commission and the East Carolina University Division of Continuing Education, in cooperation with the Tryon Palace Resoration and the N.C. Division of Archives and History.

From Photographer To Writer, Lee Zacharias Makes Switch

By WARREN NYE
UNC-G News Bureau

GREENSBORO—It took time for people to notice Ms. Lee Zacharias' photography, but when they did they gave her prizes for it.

It took time for her short stories to be noted, but when they were a publisher collected some and has put out a 114-page book of them.

Now, Ms. Zacharias, a lecturer in English at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, is working on her first full-length novel.

Photographer to short story writer to aspiring novelist—that's the rapidly developing career of Ms. Zacharias.

Her first book, "Helping Muriel Make It Through the Night and Other Stories," was published recently by the Louisiana State University Press.

In the book, Muriel (named after the cigar), has a place only in the first of the collection of stories. After that she's gone, like Ms. Zacharias' other characters who have appeared in her numerous short stories and then been discarded.

"I care very much about them," she said of her characters, "but I don't want to be many of them."

Breaking into the publishing world came after years of writing and editing for the award-winning photographer.

Quite a few of her years have been spent at universities.

She received her bachelor's degree in English from Indiana University. Then she went to Hollins College in Virginia for a master's degree, and finally to the University of Arkansas for a master of fine arts in English and creative writing.

Corresponding with her years in graduate schools is a long list of published short stories. In all, about 17 works lead up to the collection of stories which make up "Muriel."

Ms. Zacharias' loves include pop culture, product names and alternating current for her indispensable electric typewriter.

Her writing starts when things occur to her. "And then I write."

When she does sit down at the typewriter, she tends to stay there for a long time. That means 10 or 12 hours or whenever she reaches a good breaking-off point, she says.

She has visions of herself sitting on a deserted beach turning out her fiction, but knows it might never come true. There are no electric cords long enough to reach an outlet for the typewriter.

Her present job at UNC-G is the first full-time teaching position she's held.

Before joining the Greensboro faculty, she was a staff member of the Arkansas Poetry in the Schools, a graduate teaching assistnat in English at the University of Arkansas and assistant director of publications at Indiana University Research Center for the Language Sciences.

At UNC-G, she's teaching something—creative writing—which she says can't be taught.

Her workshops—she doesn't call them classes—are geared so students can teach themselves. It is the only way a person can learn to write, she insists.

The Chicago-born and Indiana-raised author says her novel is about one-third complete. She wants to finish it within a year because she has another novel "in my head . . . and it's timely."

People who want to write should not have a full-time job which requires writing, she advises. It's a duplication of energy. Instead, they should have menial jobs, work that can be left at the job and not taken home.

Ms. Zacharias says she does not write about herself. Her characters are creations, although they live in a time frame when the author was growing up. She's been told she has a "dark vision . . . whatever that means," she says. She'd rather consider herself "a bit of a black humorist."

Her own tastes in reading run to Vladimir Nabokov. "I admire very much his use of humor," she says of the man who she thinks is the greatest living writer.

Between spells of writing she gets part of her "trash reading" from newspaper accounts of the Patty Hearst trial and advice to the love lorn columns.

"If I don't get my fill of trash reading each day, I'm in trouble," she says. Other sources of "trash reading" are advertisements.

Sometimes she succumbs to the ads.

"I'm the perfect consumer. Anything I'm told I want, I want," she says.

Anyone interested in getting a taste of her writing can find it in the February issue of the magazine, "Redbook." The short story, "Disasters," is in the magazine and is one of the ones included in Ms. Zacharias' first book.

Statesman's Wife Wants To Be 'More Than Rose'

Editor's Note — "more than a rose in my husband's lapel," says Margaret Trudeau, and so she is. Whether she is challenging Canadian women to "pull up their socks and start working hard," or talking about a "bloody revolution" in her own mind, she is candid, free and, above all, herself.

By JIM POLING
Canadian Press Writer

OTTAWA (AP) — Margaret Trudeau once said that if being the wife of Canada's Prime minister destroyed the flower girl in her, "the best part of me" would be gone.

Today, five years after her marriage to Pierre Trudeau, 29 years her senior, the flower girl is still at war with the role of statesman's wife.

The conflict was obvious last month when Mrs. Trudeau, a 27-year-old mother of three sons, broke diplomatic etiquette several times during the prime minister's Latin America tour. She proposed an unscheduled toast in Mexico, wore a Liberal Party T-shirt at a public rally in Cuba, and sang, at a state banquet, a song composed for the wife of Venezuelan President Carlos Perez.

Back home, she said protocol turns people into robots and she wants to be "more than a rose in my husband's lapel. I'm not going to be locked away again as I have been in the past and told I'm not allowed to do anything because I have no rights."

Mrs. Trudeau was largely closeted in privacy for three years after her top-secret marriage in March, 1971. Until two years ago she was basically an unknown quantity, a silent and pretty face that seldom ventured out into the public domain.

Only once in those three years did she grant a full-scale interview, and in it revealed herself as a "thoughtful radical" and a loving type with an appreciation for the natural things in life.

More clues to her personality began to emerge when she entered the 1974 general election camapign, despite Trudeau's earlier pronouncement that the thought of using her in an election was repugnant.

In September 1974 she spent ten days in a Montreal hospital for what she herself described as "severe emotional stress." She had undergone, she said, "a bloody revolution" in her mind.

A month later, in a long televised interview, she discussed her case, said her marriage to a public figure was "a total catastrophe in terms of my identity."

"I prepared myself for marriage to Pierre Trudeau," she said. "But I didn't prepare myself for my marriage to the prime minister."

She criticizes what she calls the social stigma surrounding psychiatric care, and admits she was very frightened when she went to the hospital knowing she was "now classified as emotionally ill."

Her week is split between official and private tasks and although she prefers to do her own housework, she accepts that this is impossible in the official prime ministerial residence.

Feminists, she says, should realize that some women prefer the profession of housekeeping.

"Sometimes the women's movement lacks grace and I think women have been blessed with grace."

"I think the family is a very important part of society and I would hate to see it die," she said in Jamaica last year.

She assesses her views on abortion and birth control as "very liberal."

"Because I have been pregnant and given life, I find that personally I really believe a child to be alive from the moment it is conceived — that's a mixture of spiritual and physical feeling.

"That doesn't mean that I don't think some women should have abortion made available to them. I certainly can see many instances when it really is the best way."

"Women," she once said, "spend too much time worrying about their dress and too little time worrying about what's coming out of their eyes. It's now how you look, but how you are."

In a recent television interview, she challenged Canadian women to "stop bitching" and get out and work side-by-side with men. It's time, she said, for women to "pull up their socks and start working hard."

Her own tastes are moderate.

Last month, she called twice to an open-line radio show to explain her actions in Latin America. She said she merely had been expressing her feelings and did not think she had hurt her husband's image.

She described Trudeau then as "an incredibly strong man."

Although Trudeau is 56, she has no fears about life after he is gone.

"I'm so in love with now, how could I possibly go that far ahead to think what's going to happen?"

"I like time on my own and I'm quite independent. I don't need him to fill my hours to feel useful."

Couple Exchanges Vows In Ceremony On Friday

Mary Susan Ward and Michael Williams Mills were united in marriage Friday at 8:00 p.m. at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. L.E. Ward of Greenville. Parents of the bridegroom are Mrs. Pearlie Williams Mills of Greenville, and the late Mr. Lewis Allen Mills.

MRS. MICHAEL WILLIAMS MILLS

The Rev. Ralph Messick officiated at the double ring ceremony. Mrs. Douglas Ray rendered various piano selections before the ceremony and played "We've Only Just Begun" after the ceremony.

The vows were spoken in the living room. The mantel was decorated with an arrangement of cattleya orchids, dendrobiums, ferns and aspidistra with magnolia leaves.

The bride wore a formal length gown of peach gauze cloth and white lace. The gown was fashioned with a square neckline, empire waistline and long full sleeves, trimmed in lace. The gathered skirt was also trimmed in lace. She carried a white cattleya orchid tied with ribbon streamers.

The maid of honor was Betty Lou Ward, sister of the bride. She was dressed in a floral printed voile gown styled with a V-neckline, long puffed sleeves and empire waistline. She carried a yellow cymbidium orchid tied with matching ribbon.

The mother of the bride selected a formal multi-colored pastel print polyester knit gown with a V-neckline and long sleeves. She wore a corsage of pink cymbidium orchids. The mother of the bridegroom was attired in a formal gown of light green polyester knit and wore a corsage of a purple cattleya orchid.

The bride is attending East Carolina University. The bridegroom is a graduate of ECU and is employed by J.H. Hudson Co.

The couple will reside in Greenville.

The bride's table was covered with an off-white cutwork embroidered cloth and centered with an arrangement of snapdragons, daisies and greenery. Mrs. Richard Harrison of Washington, aunt of the bride, served the three tiered wedding cake and Mrs. Carlton Taylor, sister of the bridegroom, poured punch.

Vegetable Gardens Replacing Flower Beds In Backyards

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Suburban farming was once considered a joke with gentlemen farmers confessing that it cost a dollar to grow a green pepper or a potato, but last year a lot of people had the experience of finding a pepper could cost almost that much in stores in some areas. And potato prices skyrocketed.

Starting seeds, building a recreation area and conditioning home grounds have become major interests as the economy sends people back to the soil. Some are roof gardening and others grow whatever they can grow in sunny windows. There are dividends for outdoor workers — a day of toil can whittle the waistline and hips as you bend, twist and yank those weeds. Why pay a gymnasium fee when you can save money harvesting carrots and peas as you shed ounces for free?

— Plan the vegetable garden for maximum yield, not only for summer enjoyment but for long term economy by freezing and canning. Plant only as much as you can farm. Rotating a small plot may be far more rewarding than planting a big garden that can become a burden. Too much to handle can be discouraging.

— Grow the vegetables and fruits your family enjoys. Corn stalks take a garden out of horizontal conformity, but if only raccoons eat the corn, this is not the year to worry about the aesthetics. Beans, tomatoes, squash, lettuce, carrots and greens usually provide good yields, a nice assortment of vitamins and minerals. Tomatoes can be a lively challenge. Even sunny apartment windows can be good places to grow tomatoes and lettuce.

— A backyard garden close to the house is a better arrangement than one a good distance away because of the availability of water in case of drought. There may be some difficulty in getting the help needed to weed or to bring water to the far-off garden if it is needed. On chilly, rainy, muddy and very hot days, family helpers keep out of sight unless there is a firm schedule. They will want to munch on the production, but they don't want to do the work.

Some years ago a gardener found an easy way to get family and friends into the gardening act. He prepared a terrace under a shade tree not far from the family garden. Guests would leave their chaise longue or chair to second-guess the garden and they would never fail to pull some weeds. He had counted on the fact that "most people are busybodies," he said.

Vegetables serve a more useful purpose perhaps than, say, a big flower plot. But a border of flowers and herbs could serve two purposes — provide flowers (if you like marigolds) and discourage bugs. The claim has often been made that marigolds planted next to corn and tomatoes may discourage Japanese beetles. Some people use them to discourage aphids in a rose bed as well as bean beetles.

Even the early colonists used herbs to discourage bugs — tansy, a bitter tasting but aromatic herb, was even used indoors. Thyme is supposed to foil cabbage worm and some people sprinkle salt into the leaves. (One horticulturist uses kosher salt as soon as he sees the first cutworm.) Garlic in a garden has the reputation of being a mouse chaser.

SAVE ENERGY

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — A typical homemaker does 410 wash loads a year, says Jane Butel, manager of the Consumers Institute of a major appliance manufacturer. To reduce energy usage in washing, Ms. Butel suggests using a warm water rinse after a hot water wash, and cold water rinse after warm water wash. She said a homemaker following this practice can save about 7,100 gallons of hot water a year. If the water is heated electrically, she estimates the saving at up to $55 a year on utility bills.

Robinson-Viverette Vows Solemnized On Saturday

On Saturday at 7:30 in the evening, Southside Baptist Church was the setting of the candlelight ceremony where Hilda Grace Viverette became the bride of John Everette Robinson, with Rev. Lawrence Evans officiating.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Sue Hardy, organist. She accompanied Miss Jan Vick, vocalist, who sang "Gentle Shepard" and "Oh Perfect Love." The "Wedding Prayer" was sung by Miss Vick as the couple knelt at the altar.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Grace Corso of Greenville and Mr. Robert Littleton of Lexington Park, Md. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Robinson of Roanoke Rapids.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal length gown of candlelight organza designed with a high Victorian neckline encircled with scalloped ivory Venise lace. Matching lace outlined the sheer squared yoke and fitted cuffs of the full, bishop sleeves. The flared skirt extended to an attached chapel length train. Her headpiece was an elbow length illusion mantilla, edged in lace to compliment her gown. She carried a cascade of cymbidium orchids and pink rosebuds.

Mrs. Sharon Pierce of Goldsboro was matron of honor and Mrs. Cathie Livington of Stokes was the bridesmaid. Both attendants are sisters of the bride and wore matching formal length gowns of pastel floral prints with accessories. Each carried a long-stemmed pink rosebud.

The flower girl was Miss Jennifer Robinson, daughter of the bridegroom. She wore a formal length gown of sheer white taffeta underskirt, featuring an empire waistline with blue velvet ribbon. Her hair was adorned with a wreath of blue forget-me-nots and white baby's breath.

Tim Pierce of Goldsboro served as best man. The usher was David Livington of Stokes, and Christopher Viverette, son of the bride, was the ring bearer.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of fushia chiffon with matching accessories and was presented a corsage of white orchids.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside in Cherryville.

The bride was a former employe of Peoples Bank and Trust Co., Rocky Mount. The bridegroom is a technical sales representative of Springer Chemical Corp. Spartanburg, S.C.

Following the ceremony, the bride's parents entertained at a reception in the church fellowship hall. The refreshment table was centered with an arrangement of gardenias and pom pons. Those assisting at the bride's table were Mrs. Joan Southwick and Mrs. Jane Bunting, cousins of the bride.

Books Give Tips On Preserving

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Even before special lights for indoor gardening came on the market, determined apartment gardeners in air-polluted cities were raising crops of herbs and miniature vegetables.

The reasons are obvious. Nothing tastes better than the fruits of one's own labor. The satisfaction gained outweighs even the exhorbitant cost of raising fruits and vegetables indoors or on windy city terraces and rooftops.

Seedsmen all over the country now feature seeds for miniature vegetables and dwarf fruit trees suitable for gardening on a small scale, indoors or out.

Garden books are flooding the market. Some cover growing and harvesting alone, others include recipes as well.

Two new paperbacks in the latter class are part of a series published by the Ortho Book Division of a garden and farm chemicals manufacturer. They are particularly good values at only $3.98 each.

A Guide to Preserving Food for a 12 Months Harvest covers every possible method of home preserving, from canning and freezing to smoking and drying. There are directions for making cheese, cider and soap and grinding grain. The book is both graphic and attractive.

The basic research, text and many of the recipes were provided by Mariel Dewey, a farmer's wife from Gilroy, Calif., who has taught food preservation. The Dewey farm is a working one. In addition, her husband, George, is a farm advisor to the University of California.

The book should be required reading for city people who are increasingly moving to less populated and rural areas. Chapters also are included for campers, hunters and collectors who want to use antique utensils instead of just admiring them.

The second book, All About Pickling, lives up to its name, although the index is regrettably inadequate. It contains dozens of unusual recipes as well as old-fashioned ones, such as chow chow and pickled okra. Some are foreign recipes seldom found even in nationality cookbooks: Korean kim chee (pickled cabbage), Moroccan preserved lemons, East Indian lemon pickle and preserved fresh ginger root, for instance.

Don't Walk Out Of Daughter's Life

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am 23 years old, divorced and the father of a beautiful 2-year-old daughter.

Every week I drive 650 miles to see her. We love seeing each other, but when I prepare to leave, she cries and begs me not to go. It just tears me apart.

I love her so much I can't bring myself to let her forget me. Some of my friends are divorced, and they never see their kids. They say that it's just a matter of putting them out of your mind and that if I really loved Lisa, I would be a man about it, get out of her life and stay out.

Would it be more humane to Lisa if I just walked out of her life and never came back so that she could forget about me?

DESPERATE DADDY

DEAR DADDY: I disagree with your friends. In time Lisa will learn to accept the fact that you come and go. She will also realize that you love her. If you suddenly disappear forever, she'll assume you've deserted her. Continue seeing Lisa whenever possible and try to build a good father-daughter relationship.

DEAR ABBY: A man signed LOST IN HOUSTON asked you how to get his girl back, and you sloughed him off, telling him to get a new girl. A lot of help that was!

The guy said he has lost his temper and hit his girl. But it happened only once, and he promised he'd never do it again. The girl, however, refused to have anything to do with him after that because she had been married to a guy who beat her up and she wasn't going to take any more chances.

Abby, what happened to all that compassion and understanding you are supposed to have?

I'd have told the girl to grab a chair and hit the guy back. After all, the Bible says, "An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth."

NOT LOST IN CHICAGO

DEAR NOT: Violence begets violence. And I'm not about to tell a woman who has suffered at the hands of a wife beater to risk marrying another. Besides, she has only two eyes and a limited number of teeth.

DEAR ABBY: My trouble is my marriage. Two years ago I lied to my husband about a phone call. When he walked into the house, I was talking to my mother long-distance. I told him that she had called me, but actually I had called HER. When he got the phone bill he knew I had lied. He became very angry, and I have been paying for it ever since.

Shortly after that, our sex life stopped altogether. He said, "You've got about as much sex appeal as a 50-gallon drum." (He said that because I was overweight.) He said when I got down to normal size, our sex life would start again. Well, I put my mind to it and I lost 58 pounds. I thought I looked pretty good, but after we had sex once, he said I was still too fat!

He still says he can't make love to a liar. (The long-distance phone call.) But I can't live without love, and I don't think it's fair to be punished for one lie I told two years ago. What should I do? My husband is a regular Army man.

UNLOVED

DEAR UNLOVED: Something is drastically wrong, and it's not your weight or a lie you told two years ago. Army families can get free counseling from the chaplin on the base. Go! Your Army man is marching to the wrong drum.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Piano Player Admits She Is Backward

By MARIAN FOX
Associated Press Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) Frances Fairley used to be bothered by keeping her back turned on her audience when she played the piano; that is, until she learned to play backwards.

"I've been doing everything backwards since the day I was born," she said. "I don't do anything forward."

To play backwards, she has to scrunch herself up under the keyboard so she faces her audience, which is a pleasure conventional piano players don't get.

After she gets under the piano, she reaches for the keyboard like a gymnast on a chinning bar. Then with a little wrong-note fumbling, she finds the song. "Twelfth Street Rag."

"I'm not sure how I got started playing this way," she said. "I guess it happened one day when I was dusting around the piano. I just got to fooling around."

She said she'd been playing backwards about 35 years.

When she plays upright, she uses her whole body.

"But when I'm sitting with my back against the backboard, I only have from my wrist to my fingers. It takes agile wrists to do this."

Frances Fairley has never tried to promote her unusual skill, but gets requests to play backwards from students and listeners who have heard about her from someone else.

"I've had arthritis in my back 25 years so you can imagine how I feel when I get off the floor."

Mrs. Fairley was born and reared in Rutherford, Tenn., and made her debut at the keyboard when she was 4. "Chopin was my idol," she said.

She had such a passion for the piano that her parents had to lock the cover over the keyboard.

She was a difficult pupil when she began taking lessons. "My teacher couldn't explain anything because I couldn't keep my hands off the keys long enough for her to talk."

In 1947, she moved to Memphis and played with numerous groups and for more beauty pageants than she can remember. She has performed all over the South.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Dollie S. Sullivan of Rt. 8, Greenville, and the late Mr. Phillip Edward Sullivan Sr. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Alexander Stirewalt Sr. of Kannapolis.

The bride wore a full length gown of chiffon fashioned with a V-neckline and empire waistline. The bodice featured lace over chiffon and had long sleeves. Her elbow length veil was attached to a headpiece accented with pearls.

The maid of honor was Alice Malene Sullivan of Chicago, Ill., sister of the bride. The father of the bridegroom was best man and the usher was David Lewis Stirewalt of Kannapolis, brother of the bridegroom.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

Ruby Murchison, with her credo of teaching children, not subjects, tries to make her students "see themselves as responsible individuals," she told the National Education Association in an interview. She was recently named teacher of the year.

As one of her students put it: "She's not just interested in you because you are a student; to her, you are a person first of all."

The N. C. teacher summarizes her philosophy this way: "You must help a child to feel before you can help him to learn. I want to help young people feel important. That way, they will be able to take on responsibility—for themselves and for others, too."

Ms. Murchison is a seventh grade language arts and social studies teacher. A life member of the NEA, the N. C. Association of Educators and the Fayetteville unit of NCAE, Ms. Murchison is an outstanding teacher-leader as well as teacher.

She turned down offers to become a principal because "I want to stay in teaching—nothing makes me as happy as what I'm doing."

She teaches both gifted and underachieving youngsters and for this reason is a strong supporter of special categories of federal aid. "I feel that many persons who are on either end—extreme ends of the continum—will be forgotten because, to me, American society is geared for the average," she pointed out. Until federal aid can be increased much beyond current levels, she states, "I strongly believe that, without being earmarked, the money would tend to slide toward the middle."

NEA Secretary-Treasurer John McGarigal, at a recent reception, presented Ms. Murchison a plaque commemorating her distinguised service and an official NEA Bicentennial. N.C. Governor James Holshouser, who introduced her to President Gerald Ford at a March White House ceremony, declared that "what happens in the classroom ultimately depends on the quality of the teacher in the classroom and Ms. Murchison has gone far beyond the call of duty."

British Actor Makes Name As Chef-Caterer

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Some of the more elegant fare served in New York homes and banquet halls these days is being cooked and catered by a young English Shakespearean actor who has found the culinary art as rewarding as playing before the footlights.

David Robert Thorpe, who is in his 20s, began cooking for receptions in his homeland about five years ago to eke out the limited returns his Shakespearean performances brought in.

"I had tried TV commercials and made a good deal of money at it," said Thorpe, "but receiving up to $5,000 for one day's work promoting a breakfast food, as opposed to the $50 or so I earned a week for serious acting, gave me a distorted sense of values. So I turned to cooking, which I had always liked anyway."

Thorpe began catering while performing at Britain's Crucible Repertory Theater, setting up banquets that took their themes from the setting of the plays he was doing. His culinary talents attracted the attention of Sir John Pritchard, musical director of the Glyndebourne Opera House, who brought him to the United States.

Starting in San Francisco, Thorpe catered for notables like Metropolitan opera star Frederica von Stade. From there it was a quick step to New York City, where he is now catering dinners ranging from cozy affairs for a dozen guests to gatherings of 200.

"I make it a practice to have an interview with a prospective hostess and find out what sort of parties she has been giving," he said. "Then I usually suggest a different theme from what has been done before, not only in the food but in color motif and other things. Nick Grande, the decorator, works with me on flower arrangements, china, silverware and the like. These things can contribute greatly to the success of a party."

Thorpe tries to keep in mind that food should be colorful and tasty but not too filling, especially for a midday affair. A good example is a lemon fish soup he served at a luncheon I attended. With a green salad, it fills the bill but does not leave you feeling stuffed. Here is the recipe.

1 plump smoked cod fillet
1 plump haddock fillet
½ pound peeled, deveined, uncooked shrimp
1-3rd cup butter
1-3rd cup flour
1 quart fat-free milk
Juice of 2 lemons
½ teaspoon dry mustard
1 quart fish stock

Poach fish and shrimp in milk over low heat till fish flakes easily. Drain and reserve milk. Add fish stock to milk. Melt butter without browning. Add flour to butter with pinch of mustard to taste. Cook one minute. Add mixture of milk and stock, stirring constantly. Add lemon juice, taking care not to curdle, simmer 15-20 minutes. Add fish and simmer 10 more minutes. Season to taste. Serve with croutons and chopped scallions. Serves 4. Good with chilled chablis.

OFFICIAL SPIRIT

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Brandy has been named the official state spirit of California in a formal resolution presented to the state's brandy producers by California Secretary of State March Fong Eu. At the same time, brandy produced in that state was granted a controlled appellation similar to those established by French wine and spirits producers. The appellation means that any product labeled California Brandy must be made from grapes grown only in that state.

NEW SYSTEM

CHICAGO (UPI) — Computer-assisted checkout systems now are operating in 35 supermarkets in the United States and 16 in Canada, says the Super Market Institute here.

The first such system in the U.S. opened in Ohio in June, 1974. In recent months, new systems have begun operating in supermarkets at the rate of about one per week across the country.

Under these systems, an electronic scanning device linked to an in-store computer automatically reads package bar codes that represent prices of merchandise.

Resistance Pockets In Communist Indochina

By ALAN DAWSON

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Resistance to the new Communist governments in Indochina poses growing problems in Laos, Cambodia and South Vietnam, reports from the area indicate.

Although their central governments are not seriously threatened by the opposition, all three nations have mounted military and secret police operations to break the resistance.

Official media in Indochina speak openly of "reactionary elements," a reference to both armed and passive rebels against the system.

In an attempt to determine the scope of resistance, UPI correspondents have talked with a wide range of persons inside and outside Indochina — diplomats and Communist officials, refugees and citizens — since the Communist victories.

The survey indicates that resistance is most widespread in Laos, with Cambodia and South Vietnam following in that order.

Rebellion poses the least threat in South Vietnam for two reasons:

Most senior officers capable of leading a nationwide rebellion fled in the U.S. evacuation last April. And the highly organized Viet Cong political infrastructure had an almost complete list of persons opposed to Communist rule.

The swift, military-led takeover in Cambodia and the longtime rightist-neutralist-Communist coalition in Laos left many anti-Communists in those two nations.

Some interesting anomalies have arisen since the Communist takeovers — not the least of which is that Laos should have the greatest resistance.

Most Laotians on both sides shunned the war in previous days and seemed content to let North Vietnamese, Meo tribesmen and Thai mercenary troops do the bulk of the fighting.

In Cambodia, the leader of the biggest armed resistance is a cousin of Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the chief of state of the nation. Reports say Brig. Gen. Norodom Chantarangsey leads a fairly large rebel force in eastern and southern Cambodia.

And in South Vietnam, a large number of the holdout armed rebels are members of the 25th Infantry Division, the poorest and most lackluster unit in the former Saigon army.

South Vietnam

Senior South Vietnamese officials, most recently Foreign Minister Nguyen Thi Binh, have admitted there are pockets of armed resistance both north and south of Saigon.

But the same officials in interviews with UPI indicated that they consider passive resistance, particularly among organized religions, the greater long-term threat to stability.

This explains why several hundred secret police in plainclothes were working in Saigon within a week of the "liberation" of the city April 30, 1975.

By contrast, it was August before the first uniformed police were seen on the streets.

Armed resistance apparently poses no threat to the Saigon government, although fighting continues in the western Mekong Delta and in the Southern and Central Highlands.

In the Delta, the fighting is centered in the former Long Xuyen, Chau Doc and Ha Tien Provinces, now a single province called Long Chau Ha. It is mainly conducted by the anti-Communist Hoa Hao sect.

To the north in the Highlands, both ex-Saigon soldiers and mountain tribesmen are involved. The tribesmen are led by the United Force for the Struggle of Oppressed Races (FULRO is its French acronym), which rejects any Vietnamese rule.

It has tied up several divisions of North Vietnamese soldiers but otherwise has made no discernible progress in halting the consolidation of the new government.

Resistance in Saigon, mostly passive, is something else.

Most residents of the capital are confirmed capitalists and the road to socialism will probably be very slow or very violent. So far it has been slow.

In the first weeks after victory, a number of soldiers were killed by Saigon residents and orders went out that men in uniform should travel only in pairs.

Some residents refused to carry out government orders, such as closing sections of the black market. They shunned North Vietnamese movies and refused to move out of Saigon to the countryside.

Then came the incident at the St. Vincent De Paul Roman Catholic Church Feb. 13.

One policeman and two rebels were killed in the all-night battle at the church — seen by some as an excuse for a government crackdown on dissenters and resisters.

Since then, all Catholics have been ordered to attend reeducation classes, the first major class of civilians so instructed.

A show trial for those captured at the church, including the curate, appears likely. The United States probably will be "exposed" at the trial as the overall leader of the resistance.

(There is, however, no evidence that U.S. officials are supporting the resistance, despite rumors of American-supplied arms being given to rebel forces.)

There also has been resentment over the confiscation of pagodas built on land donated by previous pro-American regimes, on the grounds the land belongs not to Buddhists but to the government.

The overall threat to the government, however, appears negligible if only because no major resistance leader has yet been identified.

Saigon residents believe two former generals of the previous regime are in the resistance movement. They are not. They are in the United States.

Cambodia

Sihanouk's cousin, one of the few non-corrupt generals in the army of deposed President Lon Nol, leads an unknown-sized force around the mountainous eastern and southern rim of the country.

One report said Gen. Chantarangsey was killed in January in fighting on Highway 4 but that has never been confirmed.

Other small rebel bands make forays into Cambodia from Thailand, but they seem seem accomplish little more than harassment.

What Phnom Penh said was the U.S. bombing of Siem Reap — 150 miles northwest of the capital — in February this year, may have been the work of rebels.

Most reports indicate those opposed to the government would rather flee than fight. Thousands of Khmers have walked to Vietnam and Thailand to escape the reported brutality of authorities.

Refugees are unanimous in stating that they fear the Khmer Rouge (Cambodian Communists), who forced them into hard labor in the fields.

Eyewitnesses have told of summary killings of Cambodians who complained about the hardships.

In the center of the country there appears to be no resistance. The Cambodians last month were able to take 14 diplomats on a road tour of the interior.

Most control of the population occurs at the province level or lower, meaning there is no central government against which a resistance can fight.

Laos

Because the Communist takeover of Laos was peaceful, many anti-Communists remain in the country.

The fact that many were shipped to reeducation centers and did not return caused many to flee to Thailand and others to go underground to fight.

There are few actual armed battles, although, on the border in northeast Thailand, gunfire can be heard often from across the Mekong River in Laos.

There appear to be two main, independent resistance movements.

One is in the north and conducted by Meo tribesmen, formerly organized and paid as soldiers by the CIA.

The other is in the panhandle south of Vientiane and is led by former rightist army officers.

Some reports say up to 80 per cent of the nation is still not controlled by Pathet Lao authorities.

One report, apparently true, is that officers in a reeducation center near Savannakhet in southern Laos overpowered their camp guards last month and fled to the jungle.

Less than two weeks later, anti-government forces blew up a key bridge on the new Ho Chi Minh Trail from North Vietnam to Laos.

Two groups have emerged claiming to lead the resistance to the Communist government, but both are based in Thailand and there is no way to judge their effectiveness.

In short, resistance in Laos is widespread. But whether leaders of a viable resistance will emerge remains to be seen.

At this point, none of the new Communist governments in Indochina appears threatened by anti-Communist movements.

A major reason is a lack of supplies. There is no indication significant amounts of aid are flowing to the rebels.

Without such aid, there seems no way the resistance can have a hope of toppling or even of tottering the Communist governments.

"Those people (resisters) are very brave," said a sympathetic diplomat. "But they couldn't win a war when the Americans were giving them everything. How can they win now?"

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

If there is anything in this world as fiercely independent as a microphone, I don't know what it is.

I mean, imagine the year is 1775. At the Provincial Convention in Virginia, statesman Patrick Henry rises to his feet to make an impassioned plea for liberty or death. He approaches the microphone and as the entire assembly awaits his first words he asks, "Can everyone in the back hear me?"

Those seven words have preceded more speeches than the proverbial cocktail hour.

In 10 years of lecturing, I have seen microphones go from an occasional passiave screech to real screaming militants. To begin with, microphones do not like to be touched by a union or otherwise. Because I am short, I tried to adjust one the other week. I gave it just a simple tweak, mind you, and it went as limp as a $2 permanent in a sauna. I gave the entire speech from a squatting sprinter's position.

Some microphones work great as long as you blow into them. So you stand there like an idiot blowing and saying, "Are we on? Can you hear me?" Everyone admits they can hear you blowing. It's only when you speak the microphone goes dead.

Others have a weird sense of humor. They're punch-line poopers. You'll be sailing along with a three-minute story, building to a big pitch and just as you say, "So why isn't the dog drinking his daiquiri?" the microphone goes silent and you're left muttering, "Gee, I guess you had to have been there."

Some speakers spend half their lives looking for the on-off switch of microphones. There aren't any. I've looked for them under the light, on the shelf, on the side, the goose neck, offstage. I suspect most of them are triggered by a remote control in a 1936 pickup truck in a garage acrosss from the auditorium.

I have been warned that some microphones are super sensitive and you have to talk right into them to be heard. These are usually the ones that cross you up by picking up your entire luncheon conversation including, "My God, do you mean the management is charging you $10 for this lunch! Has he never heard of the Geneva Convention?"

Some speakers, more secure than I, have dared to make fun of microphones. Recently, book columnist and reviewer Bob Cromie spoke in our town and opened with the traditional, "Can everyone in the back hear me?"

When someone yelled, "No!" he said, "then how did you know what I asked?"

All night long that microphone floated toward the door. Didn't surprise me a bit.

'James Joyce Of Russia' Chops Wood

By TERENCE J. ANDREW

VIENNA, Austria (UPI) — A young man who is winning acclaim as possibly the finest Russian novelist to emerge since Alexander Solzhenitsyn now works as a lumberjack in the Vienna Woods.

"I have been refused a visa to the United States, and it is the best job I can find here without speaking German," says Alexander "Sasha" Sokolov.

Six months ago he was still in the Soviet Union, threatened with confinement in a KGB (secret police) insane asylum because of his love affair with a pretty Austrian girl.

He was allowed to emigrate after he and his fiancee, Johanna Steindl, staged hunger strikes. She now is his wife.

Life as a woodsman is nothing new to the thatch-haired, 31-year-old writer. He wrote much of his first novel, "School for Fools," while working as a game warden on the banks of the Volga River.

It is the story of a former pupil at a school for the retarded and mentally disturbed. He develops schizophrenia as a result of treatment by his father, a chief prosecutor.

Sokolov could not get his manuscript published in the Soviet Union because the subject was taboo and the style did not conform to the Socialist realism demanded by the state.

He sent it abroad anonymously for publication.

"School for Fools" has been published in Russian by Ardis of Ann Arbor, Mich., and an English translation is to appear shortly.

Reviews have described it as possibly the most important Russian novel of the decade and have likened Sokolov to James Joyce.

Sokolov applied for a visitor's visa to the United States after he came here, and indicated he would have considered settling in America if offered a suitable job. But his visa application was turned down.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman declined to explain the rejection, but said there was no reason why Sokolov could not apply again. His wife's family has recently received word from U.S. consular officials that a second application would be worthwhile.

Sokolov said he has no immediate plans to reapply for a U. S. visa.

Sokolov met his wife when she was teaching at a translators' college in Moscow.

"The difficulties only started when we met each other," he said. "The KGB followed us around for the whole year we were together in Moscow.

"They planted a microphone in the ventilation shaft of our apartment. You could hear them testing it ... 'Are you receiving me? one, two, three.'

"Then they pretended there had been a murder on our doorstep. One day they came for me. They called out, 'Sasha, Sasha, we know you are in there.' When I did not come out, they shot the lock off the door and came in to get me.

"That was after my mother had told me I shouldn't come home any more."

The KGB took Sokolov to a local militia station and questioned him for several hours about the alleged murder, then released him.

Sokolov's family pressured him to give her up but he refused.

Finally, he was declared mad by his own father, a retired major general in the GRU (Soviet military intelligence) and was ordered to attend a mental examination.

"A worker at the hospital I was to attend told me a KGB car would be waiting at the other side. Then I would be taken to the KGB special clinic for dissenters. That is the end," he said.

"Some of my friends told me to accept going to prison for a while, for the experience and maybe to become better known. But I prefer to be here with Johanna, with my brain in one piece."

He began a hunger strike in Moscow and his fiancee simultaneously started hers at St. Stephen's Cathedral in Vienna.

They broke their fast after four days, and Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky intervened with Soviet authorities to win an exit visa for Sokolov.

Sokolov was born in Ottawa, where his father was posted at the Soviet Embassy. After breaking with his family, he denounced his father for having spied on Canada and the United States.

Sokolov and his wife now live in a two-room forestry worker's apartment in the Lainzer Tiergarten, a wildlife park on the edge of the Vienna Woods.

He says his only regret is that his job as a lumberjack leaves him little time for writing. But he has no immediate plans to change jobs.

As to returning one day to the Soviet Union, he believes this might be possible, and that his work might be published there, "but not for the next 20 years."

"Things are changing slowly in Moscow," he said. "The Soviet leaders have never been more confused."

"SASHA" SOKOLOV, who is winning acclaim as possibly the finest Russian novelist in a decade, works as a lumberjack in the Vienna woods. (UPI Photo)

California Strives Just To Keep Up With Growth

By MIKE SILVERMAN
Associated Press Writer

"More than 1,000 people are entering California every 24 hours in the greatest mass migration in the history of the world! ... The day we pass New York and become No. 1, we're going to throw the biggest party the state has ever seen!" — California Gov. Edmund G. Brown, September, 1962.

"This planet is a limited place and this country and state are limited ... There's a lot of overblown expectations." — California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., October, 1975.

California.

The name was coined to describe a mythical island paradise of beautiful women and streets paved with gold. Sixteenth century explorers, mistaking Mexico's western peninsula for an island, called it California and extended the title to the land further north.

Since the Gold Rush three centuries later, California has been a magnet for Americans hoping for a better life — and a place where those hopes often shattered against harsh realities.

Seldom have those realities been harsher than today, although less than a decade ago California was the image of the ideal place to live. Now the state is husbanding its once abundant natural resources and cannot provide jobs for nearly 10 per cent of its people.

In 1849, tens of thousands of people surged over the mountain passes to the Mother Lode, but many found only worked-out mines. Nearly half-a-million Okies, driven from their farms by the dustbowl of the 1930s, found the fertile valleys they thirsted for here — along with low wages and hostility from established residents.

But nothing in the state's history matched the wave of Americans who came to California starting with World War II — lifting the population from 7 million in 1940 to 20 million by 1970.

They made California the most populous and wealthiest state, with a median family income last year of more than $15,000, and a gross product of more than $160 billion — higher than all but five countries in the world.

Yet by the time the younger Brown was elected governor in 1974, his father's "mass migration" had shrunk from 300,000 to 100,000 a year. And 80 per cent of today's immigrants come from other countries with living standards far below the U.S. level.

Americans have stopped coming here partly because of economic problems — especially in the aerospace industry — and partly because the flood of new residents since World War II destroyed some of the very qualities that attracted them here.

Ironically, Californians in the mid-1970s must solve problems created by rapid population growth at the same time that the decline in economic growth is causing new troubles, chiefly unemployment and more people on welfare.

State officials see the challenge as an opportunity to provide a new kind of direction for the nation, for they feel California's problems are not so different from the rest of the country's — they merely have come to a head sooner.

"Everything that happens in California is important because it may be symptomatic of other American patterns," says Kevin Starr, San Francisco city librarian and author of the book "Americans and the California Dream."

Fines for polluters, restrictions to curb urban sprawl, laws to protect dwindling natural resources and to guard against danger from nuclear power plants — how California succeeds with these and similar measures may determine its future and set guidelines for the nation..

Californians are finding they can no longer take for granted even such basic symbols of their lifestyle as the heated swimming pool and the freeway. The one uses too much fuel, the second costs too much and produces too much smog, officials say.

Herman Muller, a retired store clerk who has spent the last 30 years in San Jose, is among the disenchanted.

"When I came here right after the war, this was just so beautiful, all the orchards stretching everywhere," recalls Muller, 67, who lives on a pension. "It was a nice town, you'd go downtown to shop, see a movie, meet your friends. Now it's just houses every place you go, they all look the same. Kids grow up for years and never know what downtown looks like."

The disenchantment isn't just starting. In 1971, California Poll, a respected public opinion survey, reported that nearly one of every three Californians would leave the state if they could. Among the unhappy, a third cited smog as the chief complaint, a third population crowding and a third taxes, cost of living and crime.

Statistics now reflect no such startling exodus, but in 1975 California lost three times as many people to Oregon and Nevada as it gained, and five times as many to Idaho. Since 1970, state population has grown only slightly, from 20 to about 21 million.

"The people who move to Oregon aren't going to Portland, which has problems of its own," says Nels Rasmussen, demographer for the state Department of Finance. "They're more likely to wind up in rural areas or small towns."

Of the 100,000 entering California annually now, up to 80,000 come from other nations — 35,000 from Mexico alone and many from Asia. Nearly 400,000 illegal entrants from Mexico are deported each year.

Roberto Lopez, 21, came legally to Delano six months ago from Mexico, looking for work as a mechanic. For him, California retains some of the qualities that once attracted Americans.

"My aunts and uncles came here years ago to work in the fields," Lopez said. "When we were growing up, we'd always hear there's lots of work in California. My friends want to come too because it's hard to find a job back home."

California's slower population growth has been coupled with a slowdown in the number of new jobs and a slight decline in the state's share of America's personal income.

Projections for seats in the House of Representatives in 1980 show California keeping its 43 seats, while fast-growing Florida jumps from 15 to 20 and three nearby states — Oregon, Arizona and Utah — pick up one seat apiece.

People aren't even visiting California as much as they used to. The Southern California Visitors Council — watchdog over such vacation meccas as Disneyland, Hollywood and Palm Springs — reports that the rate of tourism growth slowed from a 6 per cent annual increase during '65-'70 to less than 5 per cent for '70-75.

A major reason for fewer newcomers is the decline in California's once-mighty aerospace-electronic industry. The field employed 600,000 persons at its peak in 1967 because of the Vietnam war, the space race and booms in commercial aircraft and consumer electronics. It now has 490,000.

By 1973, the state had 7 per cent unemployment compared with 4.7 per cent nationally.

During the more recent recession, Burke says California wasn't hit as hard as the rest of the country because it's less dependent on manufacturing — the first area to suffer in a slump. But for the same reason, the recovery here is taking longer.

While national unemployment has dropped steadily in recent months to February's 7.6 per cent, the California rate has stayed close to 10 per cent.

Welfare benefits were going to 10.3 per cent of the state's residents in January.

At the same time it faces economic troubles, California confronts the damage of unrestrained growth on the environment.

In a state with one registered automobile for every 1.8 residents, smog has become a way of life — and death. Tom Quinn, chairman of the state Air Resources Board, says sulfates from fuel oil could kill 2,100 children and senior citizens in southern California between 1978 and 1980. The cost of equipping power plants and refineries with facilities to make emissions safe: $500 million.

If California is a national leader in polluting the environment, it also is a leader in trying to conserve it.

—In January, Quinn's board fined American Motors $4.2 million for allegedly failing to meet air pollution standards in some of its V8 engines.

—In February, the same board voted to all but eliminate lead additives from gasoline by 1980.

—The state Energy Commission earlier this year approved what it called the toughest energy conservation standards in the nation for new commercial and public buildings.

Voters this June decide the fate of a proposal that would establish strict safety conditions for building nuclear power plants. Utility companies argue that passage will force consumers to pay millions more for electrical energy from coal.

Cities also are countering urban sprawl by establishing their right to decide how and whether to grow.

Whatever the shape of California's future, it seems certain to differ from the expansiveness of the immediate past. Jerry Brown's popularity indicates his pessimism has struck a responsive chord in his constituents.

Brown is spokesman for a California of shrinking hopes and expectations — just as his father was the voice of a California that knew mostly growth and boom. The success of Jerry Brown's newly announced presidential ambitions might depend on whether the nation as a whole is ready for his somber message.

"This idea that we're charging forward with greater and greater success and more progress, that may be a little bit unrealistic," Brown said in an interview. "Just maintaining where we are and not slipping back too fast is already a major accomplishment."

Crime Talk

A public meeting to discuss the goals of the criminal justice system will be held here Monday by the Governor's Commission on Law and Order.

The meeting, one of a series being conducted around the state, will consist of two sessions, from 2:30 p.m. to 5 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. The sessions will be held in the Allied Health Building of East Carolina University, located at the corner of Charles Street and Greenville Boulevard.

Begin Revival On Wednesday

A spring revival will take place beginning Wednesday and continuing through Sunday at 831 Venter Street in Ayden, with services each evening at 7:30 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Rev. Whitfield of Williamston. Rev. Rufus Mabery, pastor of the Ayden congregation, invites the public to attend.

Celebrating National Boys' Club Week

Text By Jerry Raynor

Photographs By Tommy Forrest

The 30th Annual National Boys' Club Week is being celebrated throughout America beginning today and continuing through Saturday. In Greenville and Pitt County, members of the Boys' Clubs of Pitt County will join more than a million other boys from over 1,100 clubs in being encouraged to open the week's observances by attending church today.

The Boys' Club of Pitt County, now in its eighth year, was established in 1968 and chartered in 1969. Each year, the club has steadily grown.

The calendar year 1975, according to Chet Emerson, the club's executive director, "Was a year of tremendous public support. It was a good year in many ways," "Emerson said, "with really fine community support. This was the year we paid the mortgage on our building and we feel now we're on the way to better things ahead every year."

"Having monetary support from the United Fund for the past few years has also made an important difference" Emerson said.

This year, as in past years, the president of the United States will serve as honorary chairman of Boys' Clubs in America. A highlight of traditional observances will be the installing of the national "Boy of the Year" in a special colorful White House ceremony.

In the local observances, Emerson said one of the main objectives he and the Board of Directors hope to achieve is that "we hope to show that the same energies which can get a kid into trouble on the street can be a force for good and lead to productive, responsible pursuits. It's our aim to keep these young boys off the street by putting these energies to constructive use."

The Boy's Club of Pitt County has the services of five assistants working with Emerson.

The five are all presently funded by federal CETA funds which may expire at the end of the current fiscal year, June 30. The five, four young men and one young woman, are:

—Mike Hamer, Social Director; Matthew Ward, Program Director; Paul Hare, Program assistant and also a worker with the Bethel chapter; Debra Clement, Arts and Crafts Director; and Tim Pearce, Program Assistant.

For the summer of 1976 plans are once more, as last summer, to inaugurate a full scale program for the chapter in Bethel. The Bethel program now operates on week-ends. Boys from Ayden and Farmville areas are brought into Greenville to take part in activities at the Greenville club.

The week long celebration will get continue on Monday with an "open house" at the Boys' Club building located at 205 West Skinner Street (one and one-half blocks north of Dickinson Ave. across from the Pepsi Cola plant).

"This will be held from four until seven in the afternoon," Emerson said. "I want to extend an invitation on behalf of the board members, the staff, the boys and myself to the public to come by for a guided tour and to see the kids in action." Emerson said refreshments will be served.

Additional events scheduled locally in observance of the 30th Annual National Boys' Club Week are.

—Tuesday, April 6—Several older Boys' Club members will be chosen to take the place of staff members for a one-hour period. They will act in this capacity under the supervision of staff members. During evening hours, a special "game night" will feature prizes to be awarded all participants.

—Wednesday, April 7—Representative members will be excused from school to make a special visit to the City Hall and the Police and Fire Departments. Mayor Percy Cox will welcome the boys. They will be accompanied on the tour by Bobby Hall, president, Boys' Club of Pitt County, and director Emerson. The Wednesday evening event will be a Boys' Club party for members only with refreshments provided.

—Thursday, April 8—The afternoon event will be a Tug-Of-War between the boys and members of the staff. On Thursday evening, tournaments will be held in the games room with prizes to be awarded to different age groups.

—Friday, April 9—The two events for this date are a one-to-one basketball tournament and an Arts and Crafts contest.

—Saturday, April 10—A big field day event is planned for the final day of the week-long annual observance. This will constitute events in relay, jumps, dashes, and other events planned for boys of all age levels.

"All of us, the board, the staff, myself and, above all, the boys in the club want people to know the Boys' Club is in fact a community project," Emerson said. "And it is the community, through the United Fund, individual, business and corporate contributions that makes this fine program possible. "We're most anxious that everybody try to find time to come by the club to see for themselves what is being done, to experience the enthusiasm these boys have for the programs available to them at the Boys' Club."

Britons Volunteering To Try Catch A Cold

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — Several hundred Britons have volunteered for what must rank as the most unusual vacation in the country; they are going to spend 10 days trying to catch a cold.

The publicity that lured them into the queue for the Medical Research Council's establishment at Salisbury, where the first batch is now sneezing and snuffling, was irresistible as a brochure for the Riviera.

Free fare, free accommodation in comfortable, well-heated apartments, three good meals a day, a library, badminton and table tennis on premises set in one of England's loveliest landscapes and 35 pence (70 cents) a day pocket money.

With all that and more on offer in these bleak times of inflation and recession who would take much notice of a line which read: "Admittedly, there is a one-in-three risk of catching a cold, but the great majority of infections are minor and brief."

The new volunteers open the 30th year of the Common Cold Unit's attack on one of man's most prevalent ailments. They join an army of some 12,000 volunteers who have coughed and wheezed before them in the interests of humanity since the unit was opened in 1946.

In that year British scientists were still intrigued by prewar American research which appeared to demonstrate that colds could be experimentally transmitted from one chimpanzee to another. The American scientist, incidentally, reported that, wondering what his chimpanzees did when they were locked away for the night, he put his eye to the keyhole of their compartment — and found himself looking into a chimpanzee's eye.

Sir Christopher Andrewes, honorary consultant to the Unit, recalled that he talked about the new project to medical students at Bart's Hospital and pointedly remarked: "We can't get hold of any chimpanzees. But the next best thing is a Bart's student."

One hundred students took the hint and became the first subjects for the experiments at the Harvard Hospital complex built by Americans in 1941 as a gift to embattled Britain. The pattern established then still obtains.

Volunteers enjoying normal health are assigned in pairs to small apartments consisting of a sitting room, a clinical room, two bedrooms, bathroom and kitchen. They move in on a Tuesday and move out on the Friday of the following week when the apartments are made ready for new arrivals. Two hot meals a day are left at the door. They can drink tea, coffee, beer or cider.

They have radio and television, daily papers, bicycle riding in the countryside or walking if they want to, and a games room — but in all activities roommates must not approach closer than 30 feet to strangers. They must swab their table tennis rackets with disinfectant when they are through playing and the room must be aerated for an hour between matches.

The complex is on the outskirts of the cathedral city of Salisbury, but the volunteers are not allowed there because of the crowds. Nor are they permitted to go to nearby Stonehenge, the great circle of stones erected by prehistoric man (who also suffered from colds), for the same reason. A couple of roommates were strolling in the grounds of Longford Castle when they came upon its owner, the Earl of Radnor:

"Keep away," they warned fiercely. "You're not allowed within 30 feet of us. We're infectious."

What they meant was that they had been injected with a strain of cold virus then under investigation.

Looking back over 30 years Sir Christopher admits that a cure for the common cold — one of the early dreams of the research — is still as far away as ever. But science now knows a great deal more about colds, influenza and respiratory diseases in general and the current program is concentrating on establishing whether there are families of viruses still unrecognized.

"We know now what we didn't know at the time," said Sir Christopher. "There are cold viruses of many types and infection with one type doesn't give rise to immunity in others."

There may, in fact, be as many as 100 separate viruses causing colds which the unit categorizes thus: Abortive cold — symptoms appear but subside in 24 hours; Wild — two to four days; Moderate — headache, malaise, fever and associated symptoms taking about a week to disappear; Severe — fever, loss of appetite, headache, possibly a cough.

"Fortunately," Sir Christropher said in a book on the research, "colds for most people constitute a nuisance and not a menace to life otherwise we could not have worked with volunteers. Volunteers infected with one type of virus usually developed antibodies that would work against that type but not against a hundred."

Thus, he said, a composite vaccine that might be effective against all viruses was difficullt to imagine and a more accessible goal would be successful treatment and perhaps prevention.

The major advance of the unit was the isolation in 1960 of a family of viruses proved by use on volunteers to cause colds. They were named rhinoviruses because their habitat is the nose and one link in the elegant experiments which proved their existence was the sort of luck even scientists need. They ran out of a salt mixture called 199 and borrowed some from another laboratory. That batch proved to be more acid than their own formula and helped the viruses grow.

"The rhinoviruses seem to be the most important agent causing common colds," Sir Christopher said. "The original primary object of the whole investigation was to discover a test for the presence of a virus independent of inoculation and here it was."

Later came the discovery of another family of resident viruses, the coronaviruses, which can also cause colds. They live in other tissues of the body.

Sir Christopher regrets that despite the years of work the common cold is still a worldwide nuisance and still raises such questions as why some people never get colds at all and why the cold viruses are more troublesome in the winter than the summer. He has the highest praise for the volunteers who are and were the guinea pigs for the research.

"They came prepared to catch a cold," he said, "and not at all worried or fearful. Many in fact are disappointed if they don't get a cold and apologize for letting us down."

Library Association Is Combatting Illiteracy

CHICAGO (AP) — Johnnie Valdez dropped out of high school when he was 16. Although he's employed as a maintenance worker, he has little chance for advancement, because Johnnie — at 33 — still can't read.

Johnnie is one of about 21 million Americans — immigrants, school dropouts and people with learning disabilities — who are functionally illiterate. This means they cannot read or write well enough to function fully in society.

Now, says Robert Wedgeworth, executive director of the American Library Association (ALA), the nation's librarians are going about the mammoth job of helping the one out of every five adult Americans who can't read.

In California and Washington, where agriculture depends on migrant farm workers, librarians are manning bookmobiles that travel to migrant worker camps. The librarians hold reading classes right in the workers' homes, and have already given hundreds of men and women new hope for better jobs in the future.

On the national level, the ALA is writing guidelines for librarians in developing literacy programs. Included will be recommended materials, so that grown men and women don't have to read "Dick meets Jane ... see the dog run."

"The modern American library is much more than a keeper-of-the-print," says Wedgeworth. "The library has become a community center and referral point and finds itself often in the center of poor urban areas where its users need help in simply coping with life.

"When people come into the library to look at help-wanted ads in the paper and can barely understand what's written, then it's time for the librarian to step in where other American educational institutions have failed."

The reading programs currently involving many functionally illiterate are designed to help people take driver's tests, read a lease and a contract, tell time and read information on packages they may buy in the supermarket.

Librarians have found a need for programs at three levels: basic literacy skills, strengthening reading skills, and courses and preparation for high school equivalency examinations, which also involves some advanced reading assistance.

A host of libraries are tapping their communities for volunteers to tutor nonreaders on a one-to-one basis. Hourly sessions are tailored to the student's needs and may include dictating a life experience to the tutor and reading it, filling out a job application, or reading want ads.

Learning labs are centers within library walls specially equipped to help the new or nonreader. A staff coordinator is on hand for guidance, reading machines are available, and so are a variety of visual aids, games and puzzles.

Bandicoot Is Missing

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Its footprints — wherever they are — are like those of a small deer. Yet is is no larger than a rabbit, if indeed it exists at all.

It lives, or used to, in Australia. Or parts of Australia. It was last seen some 65 years ago — perhaps.

If ever there was a maybe-creature, it is the pig-footed bandicoot, a gentle marsupial which carries its wee young in its wee pouch, like the kangaroo.

It occupies less than one page in the Red Data Book on Mammals, the world listing of rare and endangered species.

The catalog freely admits that almost everything known about the pig-foot is hearsay and probably not admissible in court.

Its status is "indeterminate," which means that not enough is known about its presence to be sure that it has one.

The pig-footed bandicoot first appeared to the scientific mind when General Major Mitchell spotted the creature on his expedition to the Darling and Murray Rivers of New South Wales in 1836. It's been in trouble ever since.

The frightened, if historic, creature fled into a hollow tree, and when Mitchell's native guides retrieved it, it probably lost its tail in the process. It was thus presented to zoologists who dubbed it Chaeropus ecaudatus which means "tailless" pig-footed bandicoot.

In fact, one scientist in the Australian wilds drew a picture of the pig-footed bandicoot from memory, omitting the tail, and gave it to natives in an attempt to gather more specimens. The natives dutifully went into the woods and caught other, similar bandicoots — not the pigfooted variety — and to make them conform to the drawing, dutifully lopped off their tails.

The pig-foot is one of some 17 species and subspecies of bandicoots in Australia and New Guinea. It has a trunk-like nose, pointed ears and long, slender limbs.

Its pouch opens to the rear, and the young climb in and out posterially.

It lives on vegetation — onions, roots and so forth — and insects.

In response to an inquiry, W.P. Crowcroft, director of the Taronga Zoo in New South Wales, writes:

"I have made inquiries of the most knowledgeable mammal people here and they all confirm that the animal has not been seen since about 1910. There is a story that aborigines saw it in the late 1920s but it is of course dubious and not supported by a specimen. This is because they eat anything they catch, of course."

RABIES CONTROL

DOG VACCINATION CLINICS SCHEDULE

The Pitt County Community Health Department is again offering county wide dog vaccination clinics to the citizens of Pitt County as a convenience to them and in its effort to keep Pitt County free of rabies.

All dogs four (4) months old and over are to be vaccinated. Dogs receiving their first vaccination this year will need to be vaccinated again in 1977. For dogs that have been previously vaccinated, the vaccination is good for three (3) years.

The vaccine will be administered by licensed Doctors of Veterinary Medicine, using the latest advancement in vaccine development.

The General Statutes of North Carolina require that all dogs be vaccinated and that they display the vaccination tag at all times. This tag can also be used to identify your dog if lost or strayed. Please take your dog to the clinic nearest your home for this vaccination. Again this year, all of the clinics will be held in the evening as an additional convenience.

That's more than a success story, that's consumer confidence.

It sounds remarkable, but it's true.

Even in 1974, which was one of the worst years in automotive history, our sales were up. And not just by a small margin. Up by 120% over the previous year.

There must be a reason for this. And there is. A very simple one.

Many Americans are refusing to buy cars that are big, expensive, and guzzle too much gas.

Instead, they want a car that's practical and economical. A car they can have complete confidence in.

It comes with a responsive 4-cylinder engine. A 5-speed overdrive transmission. Rack-and-pinion steering. Front wheel disc brakes. And independent front suspension.

It also comes with reclining bucket seats. An adjustable steering column. Tinted glass. Thick, plush carpeting. And a rear window defogger.

What's more, all these features are standard equipment.

The new Fiat 131 is just one of many fine cars we sell. In all, there are 10 distinctive models to choose from. So if you're thinking of buying a new car, one that you can have confidence in, visit our showroom today.

Most good used cars, if they're guaranteed at all, are only covered for a month or two. At Tarheel Toyota, we're just as willing to back our good used cars as our good new cars. So we guarantee the motor, transmission and rear end for 12 months or 12,000 miles. This warranty applies to all cars selling for more than $1000.00 or more on a 50-50 basis with all work being done in our shop. It doesn't apply to any sports cars, high performance engines or 4 speed transmissions (except economy cars). If you're in the market for a BETTER USED CAR, COME OUT AND LOOK AT OURS. TV SHOWTIME

For The Week Of April 4-10, 1976

'The Story Of David' Will Be Presented In A Two Part Special

DAVID—"The Story of David," a two-part four hour special, traces the tumultuous life of the Old Testament character, David, from common shepherd boy to ruler of all of Israel, Timothy Bottoms (left) portrays young David in Part I, "David and King Saul," airing on ABC-TV, Friday, April 9 (9-11 p.m.) and Keith Mitchell (right) is seen as the elder David in Part II, "David the King," airing Sunday, April 11 (9-11 p.m.).

"The Story of David," a two-part, four-hour television special, will air on Palm Sunday weekend, Friday, April 9 (9 to 11 p.m.), and Sunday, April 11 (9 to 11 p.m.), on ABC Channel 3, 5 & 12.

This authentic drama of the story of David-from the life of a common shepherd boy to the ruler of all of Israel - brings to life one of the most fascinating stories in the Old Testament. It is a three-dimensional portrayal of the legendary figures of that era in terms which are understandable and relevant to today's viewers.

Part I, titled "David and King Saul," stars Timothy Bottoms as young David and Anthony Quayle as his mentor and eventual nemesis, King Saul. Susan Hampshire plays Princess Michal, David's first wife. Part II. "David the King;" stars Keith Michell as David and features Jane Seymour as Bathsheba and Barry Morse as King David's friend and adviser, Jehosephat.

Timothy Bottoms was intensely interested n the Biblican ruler of Israel long before he accepted the television role. The actor, who characterizes himself as "very, very very religious," says, "I always loved the Bible stories."

"Since David was one of my heroes, I played him that way even though he turned out to be a scalawag and handles his succession so badly. Once he got to the top, there was corruption.

"But," he notes, "I played David as a youth, when he was able to kill Goliath on the strength of his faith. I wanted people to like him as he was at that point in his life.

Keith Michell found new insights into the Biblical story when he accepted his role as King David in Part II.

"What struck me in the script was all the carrying on like David's adulterous affair with Bathsheba; You don't think of Biblical figures that way, but as very proper like the Victorians, whom you picture sitting around and reading. Actually they all probably had a marvelous time, but we don't realize it.

"The script not only is real, but so is the production," the actor said. "It's in no way a phony, studio type spectacular."

Anthony Quayle had a hairy problem - his beard - when he accepted the role of King Saul.

Among his extensive list of credits are numerous character roles and appearances in Shakesperean plays, and he is frequently called upon to let himself become hirsute for the parts.

Actually, the Biritsh actor doesn't much care for facial hair, "It makes me look so venerable, and I don't feel very dashing in it.

"'The Story of David,' however, presented no such problems. I had just finished growing it, and it saved me the trouble of sticking on whiskers."

Historic Meeting Is Recreated

What happened at the Potsdam Conference in 1945, where President Harry Truman, England's Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Soviet Premier Josef Stalin met for the avowed hope of achieving "a just and lasting peace"? What were some of the events taking place away from the conference which cast their shadows over Potsdam and the world?

These are among the questions examined in "'Truman at Potsdam," the "Hallmark Hall of Fame" special starring Ed Flanders as Truman, John Houseman as Churchill and Jose Ferrer as Stalin, which will be colorcast Thursday, April 8, 8 to 9:30 p.m., on NBC Channels 6 & 7.

The special, a dramatization of the recent book, "Meeting at Potsdam," by Charles L. Mee Jr., also spotlights Alexander Knox as Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson and Barry Morse as Secretary of State James F. Byrnes. David Schoenbrun appears as the narrator.

The actual conference took place at the Cecilienhof Palace in Potsdam, both on location and at Studios Hamburg.

In addition to focusing on the formal meetings and their hard implications for the future, "Truman at Potsdam" also relates the headline-making occurences in other parts of the world which affected the meeting - including America's perfection of the A-Bomb.

The play dramatizes some informal meeting Truman held individually with Churchill and Stalin. It shows that Truman was preoccupied with the conference even during his poker sessions with pals, including Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan (Played by Guy Doleman), naval aide James K. Vardaman (Lionel Murton), Press Secretary Charles Ross (Percy Herbert) and others. Churchill is seen in private discussions with his physician, Lord Moran (David Markham) and Stalin, making rapid-fire utterances to his foreign minister, V.I. Molotov (Alexander Boettcher).

'Women Of The Year' Selected

NBC-TV will present the fourth annual Ladies' Home Journal "Women of the Year" awards, honoring nine American women of achievement, in a live colorcast from New York Thursday, April 8, 9:30 to 11 p.m., on Channels 6 & 7.

The "Women of the Year, 1976" were selected by procedures reflecting both reader and professional opinion. The magazine's readers were asked in the January issue for recommendations in each of nine categories. They could nominate up to three people in each category by checking names suggested by the magazine or by writing in their own nominees.

Tabulations of a statistical sampling or reader preferences were presented to a blue-ribbon panel of women leaders who have been guided by the reader preferences, but not bound by them.

Members of the panel are: Liz Carpenter, Vice President of Hill and Knowlton and a member of the advisory committee of the National Women's Political Caucus; Helen DeRosis, psychiatrist and author; Sister Ann Ida Gannon, President of Mundelein College; Dorothy Height, President of the National Council of Negro Women and a 1974 Woman of the Year; Major General Jeanne M. Holm, first female Major General in the Air Force and a 1975 Woman of the Year; representative on the Status of Women of the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations; Frances Arick Kolb, National Organization for Women representatives; Eleanor Lambert, syndicated columnist and fashion authority; Lynda Johnson Robb, contributing editor, Ladies' Home Journal; Jill Ruckelhaus, presiding officer, National Commission on the Observance of International Women's Year; Margot Sherman, member of the board of directors and past president of Women in Communications; Ellern Strauss, founder of Call for Action and a 1973 Woman of the Year; Mrs. Harry Wagner Jr., First Vice President, General Federation of Women's Clubs; Margaret B. Young, author and chairman, Whitney M. Young Jr. Memorial Foundation.

The 1976 "Women of the Year" will each receive a special pendant designed by Al Durante. The 18-carat gold pendant with a single diamond is of modern design in the shape of the letter "W" and can be worn as pendant or pin.

"This is one of my most rewarding assignments," says Cartier's Durante. "I'm proud to have been selected to create this unique design for unique women.

SINGING—The World Action Singers and Reflection are students who have dedicated themselves to being involved in world action and service to mankind. Their music provides the bridge to reach people everywhere. This talented group will be in Wilmington, April 9th and 10th to share in the festivities as well as perform during the Azalea Festival.

Action World Singers Perform In Wilmington

The World Action Singers, coming to Wilmington, N.C.'s "Azalea Festival" April 9 and 10, are part of the Oral Roberts troupe and are students at Oral Roberts University in Tulsa, Oklahoma. These twelve sparkling, upbeat and talented young people will also appear on Oral Robert's Easter Special, airing Monday, April 12 at 10 p.m. on Channel 0.

Wherever the World Action Singers are, things are moving, the spirit is high, and "you just feel like something good is about to happen."

Two priorities are high on their list of favorite things: ministry and music. They blend them into one pleasing product that is served up regularly on the Oral Roberts weekly TV programs and specials. They also travel widely on personal appearance stints and do concerts for civic organizations and churches.

Their "brother" organization, Reflection, is composed of four young men who can "back up" the Singers or perform superbly as an independent group. They have a unique close-harmony sound that threats the ear, and a clean-cut all-American look that is equally pleasing to the eye. Reflection is a relatively new group, organized in May, 1975. They also appear regularly on the Oral Roberts series and do outside concerts. The Singers, a veteran group in show biz and ministry, was organized in 1969.

The two groups operate almost like one, with a rare sense of camaraderie. Asked to sum up their philosophy in one short phrase, a member said, "We would like to show people that our generation can be alive, happy, and 'with it' and still alive, the lord as the center of our existence."

A quick profile of a member of the Singers or Reflection looks liked this: A fulltime ORU student enrolled in 12 or 15 hours of study, maintaining an average or above average grade point; possessing good musical ability (most of the Singers have solo quality voices); a superabundance of stamina to withstand the many hours of rehearsal, travel and performance in addition to their studies; and a great love for Christ, for life, and for his fellow man. A tough standard to live up to!

ENTERTAINMENT CENTER

Whether or not you are famous for your parties and gracious hospitality, you should have an entertainment center. It's worth your consideration. A cheerful, flexible, much-lived-in area will fit into many family needs. This is a very clever way to arrange for the many built-ins that provide the much needed storage space. Whatever your particular family and entertainment requirements, think about a special spot for get-togethers.

That special spot for get-togethers should be comfortable as well as practical. Be sure that it has complimentary wall to wall carpeting.

Connors Uses Real Name In Film

"We're going for open - sky and outdoor adventure with more good old - fashioned excitement and intrigue," says Mike Connors of his role in "The Killer Who Wouldn't Die," airing as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," April 4, 9 to 11 p.m.

Ohanian, the name of the character Connors plays, is also the actor's real name. Of Armenian parentage, he was named Krekor Ohanian, but his first name has been anglicized to Kirk for his film characterization of a former homicide officer who has resigned from the force following the unsolved bombing murder of his wife, and is now operating a charter boat service out of a harbor near Los Angeles. However, his sleuthing days are not over, as he tries to help people in trouble.

"Ohanian is a non-franchised man whose very type of work will lead him into exciting and hazardous experiences," says Connors of his new role in the movie which is also serving as a pilot for a possible series.

Ivan Goff, who teams with Ben Roberts as the creators and producers of the movie, expresses it by saying, "One of the things that has disappeared from the screen is the romantic adventure film. We see a return to this type of story."

As Ohanian, Connors has exchanged his office and apartment for a boat. He lives on The Quest, a 53-foot ketch with a diesel auxiliary which has a 2,600-mile cruising range. It is owned by Goff who says a bit ruefully, "Mannix' gave me the wherewithal to buy it, but, then, due to 'Mannix,' I was always too busy to go out on it."

Mike was given a crash course in sailing by Goff's son, Kevin, and has now become a boating enthusiast.

Connors sees his role of Ohanian differing from Mannix in that he is playing him a bit more emotionally. "We're stressing his Armenian background," says Mike, "and the Armenians are an emotional people. They sing and dance a lot and are not hesitant about showing their feelings.

"After having been on the police force with all that hardness, Ohanian has now become a kind of free soul," Mike says. "He's living by his gut feelings and enjoying the open air and freedom of his non-scheduled and outdoor life."

OHANIAN—Mike Connors has left the police force for a "quiet" life as skipper of a charter boat, but he can't leave the danger that surrounds him in "The Killer Who Wouldn't Die," a world premiere movie and pilot for a potential series airing on ABC-TV's "The ABC Sunday Night Movie" Sunday, April 4 (9-11 p.m.) on Channel 3W-5-12.

Three Dogs Are Devoted To Master

Airing on "The Wonderful World of Disney" Sunday, April 4, 7 to 8 p.m., on NBC Channel 6-7, is "The 101 Problems of Hercules." This is the touching story of three dogs' devotion to their master.

Buckeye Jones (Harold Reynolds) and his trio of dogs, Hercules, a magnificent Hungarian Kuvasz; Boomer, a huge, bumbling, easy - to - please English sheep dog; and Lady, a quick, proud Border collie, are the best sheepherding team in the western territory in the 1880s.

When the cantankerous Buckeye takes a flock of sheep to the high mountain meadows in the spring, he is ambushed and wounded by renegade Indians. Forced to seek help, Buckeye leaves the high pastures and discharges the safety of the flock to the care of his faithful dogs.

With the arrival of early snows, the canine threesome move the sheep to the low foothills where they become scattered during a desert windstorm. Regrouping the animals while seeking water, Hercules and his crew battle a pack of vicious wolves and protect the herd. Later, two nefarious cowhands attempt to steal the flock and sell them at the railhead for a quick profit. Again, the canine shepherds thwart the enemy.

Meanwhile, Buckeye, who has reached safety, worries about the fate of the sheep and his dogs and decides to search for the animals, risking his own health and life. Before his perilous journey begins, he is gladdened by the sound of the approaching herd led by the resourceful Hercules, Boomer and Lady.

Mae West Is Cavett's Guest

"Dick Cavett's Backlot U.S.A.," a special entertainment event in which Cavett relives the golden days of the motion picture industry with such luminaries as his very special guest star, the legendary Mae West, in a rare television performance, Gene Kelly and John Wayne, making special guest appearances, and guests Mickey Rooney and new canine star Won Ton Ton, will be presented Monday, April 5, 10 to 11 p.m., on CBS Channel 9-11.

The special, shot behind the famous Paramount gate on the Paramount Studios backlot, brings to life Hollywood's heyday through the eyes and performances of some who lived it first-hand and others who experienced it vicariously from balcony seats in local movie houses.

Mae West performs some of the numbers that have made her inimitable style a part of show business folklore, including "Frankie and Johnny" and "After You've Gone." In this, her first television appearance in more than a decade and her first public appearance since her starring role in the film "Myra Breckinbridge," the very special guest star will also reminisce about her colorful career at the scene of many of her triumphs.

Within the melange of variety, music and reminiscences, Gene Kelly will give some insights into his classic dance routines, as Hollywood's special effects provide him with the proper weather. John Wayne, whom Cavett meets in a blacklot Western street, will cover that ara of filmdom.

Mickey Rooney, after recalling his years as a child actor growing up in a studio, is joined by a lively group of "backlot kids" for a major production number of song and dance entitled "We Got Us."

Trying not to be outshine by the likes of such show business giants, Won Ton Ton doggedly ingratiates himself to the stars gathered for the backlot celebration of the studio life style that made Hollywood the dream world of American moviegoers.

When she appeared at the studio to tape her rare performance, Miss West brought all the old vanishing entourage, the parade of costumers, captioned by veteran Edith Head, and, most of all, the on-set excitement of "waiting for the star."

As she finally swept into the scene, resplendent in Diamond Lil finery, the big sound taged echoed to spontaneous and prolonged applause. For older members of the crew it was a return to the halcyon movie days of 40 years ago, and for the younger ones it was a legend suddenly coming alive right before their eyes.

GUEST STAR—Very special guest star Mae West, making a rare television appearance, joins host Dick Cavett in a tribute to Hollywood's golden days, in "Dick Cavett's Backlot U.S.A.," special to be shown on Monday, April 5 (10-11 p.m.) on Channel 3N-9-11.

Noah Airs Monday

"Noah's Animals," a sprightly animated version of the adventures — and misadventures — aboard the Ark, adapted from the Bible story, will air Monday, April 5, 8 to 8:30 p.m., on ABC Channel 3-5-12.

The special, directed and co-written by veteran animator Shamus Culhane, is unique in that it tells the story of the perilous passage of the Ark and its passengers through 40 days and 40 nights of rain from the point of view of the animals who were brought aboard to preserve the species for the new world to come.

Among these animals are a doubting crocodile, who thinks Noah is a fool and tries to foment a mutiny among the more timid beasts, and a faithful polar bear, who stands up to the fierce croc to rally the animals behind their captain.

There's humor, action and excitement as the animals interact with their own special "personalities" on their way to the new land promised to Noah by God.

Shamus Culhane is "the man who made the dwarfs march home" in the Walt Disney classic, "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," and has been one of the outstanding talents in the field of animation for 50 years.

Canines Go To College

Public television goes to the dogs when "College For Canines," a 13-week dog training and care series, premieres Monday, April 5, 6 p.m., and Friday, April 9, 3:30 p.m., on UNC-TV.

Hosted by professional dog trainer Bruce Sessions, each of the programs in the series features "The Lesson of the Week" in basic obedience training; "In the Doghouse," a segment graphically suggesting solutions for typical canine misbehaviors; and "Medicine Chest," dealing with home health care of the dog.

Sessions and co-star, Sasha, a trained German Shepherd, demonstrate the obedience maneuvers in "Lesson of the Week" for three student owners and their untrained gods: Carol Kettel and Bouffant, an eight-year-old poodle; Sheryl Farrell and Heidi, an eight - month - old German Shepherd; and Don Alpert and Brutus, a scene stealing, ten-month - old mixed breed.

The obedience lessons include heel, sit, stay, down, down - stay, come, and stand for examination. After mastering these basic behaviors, the dogs learn to perform them without leashes and, finally, in response to hand signals.

Each week the "In the Doghouse" segment offers Sessions' solutions to such canine misbehaviors as excessive barking, jumping on people and car chasing.

In "Medicine Chest," produced in cooperation with the San Diego County Veterinary Association, Sessions discusses health care and common canine medical problems, including spaying neutering, fleas and nutrition.

Professional dog trainer, author and columnist, Bruce Sessions trained the Navy's first narcotic detector dog. After retiring from the Navy, Sessions opened a dog training school in San Diego which has an annual enrollment of 800 dogs. He is the author of How to Train a Watchdog, Canine Medical Handbook (in press), and the forthcoming The Encyclopedia of Dog Training and senior editor for International Dog Fancy Magazine.

On this first program, Sessions demonstrates the equipment necessary for training, enabling the viewer to prepare prior to the actual lessons, which begin with the second program.

'Family' Will Air Tuesday

FAMILY—John Rubinstein, as Jeff Maitland, and his wife, Nancy Lawrence Maitland (Elayne Heilveil), are wreathed in smiles at the christening ceremonies for their baby son, Timothy, in "Thursday's Child Has Far to Go" episode of the ABC-TV drama series, "Family" airing Tuesday, April 6 (10-11 p.m.) on Channel 3W-5-12.

It's a bit ironic that a show titled "Family" will not air in television's 'family hour' time period, but co-star James Broderick guesses the reason was because of the pilot.

"In the pilot, which was the opening show, there was infidelity upon the part of the son-in-law, but none of the other shows come anywhere near that," he said.

"We are careful about how we speak. There are no four-lettered words, maybe a 'damn' now and then, but that's all," Broderick adds. "This show is strictly about the importance of the family as a unit. They have respect for each other in spite of any differences they might have. It's a bright family."

This six-part mini-series airs Tuesday nights (10 to 11 p.m.) on ABC-TV, replacing "Marcus Welby, M.D." The pilot was shot a year ago, but no one bought the show until late last fall when ABC's Fred Silvermann decided to give it a shot."

The veteran actor says the new series won't compare with "All In The Family" because it is not a comedy. "Oh, we'll have comedy things but only to play off of. This is a family drama more than anything else."

Is the Lawrence family affluent?

"It was at one time, but now in the middle income range. I was a big corporation lawyer at one time, but left that to settle down with some work that brings less income. We are not living quite as high, now. We are well-to-do, but not rich."

Broderick believes the six-part mini is much better than a one-shot, two-hour pilot that most projected series get. It aids a network because, in his words, "We have a good mixture of scripts and ABC will get a much better idea of the show than it would with a one-shot deal.

"I signed for five years, should the show continue, and so did (co-star) Sada (Thompson). She and I go back a long way, to the live shows in New York in the early '50's, and we did Broadway together in 'Johnny No-Trump.' I love working with her."

Broderick, who is 48 and has three children of his own about the same age as the three "I have in the series," says viewers will see all the things that take place with an average family. "The material we're doing applies to so many people, but I guess with the late time period, the younger ones will miss it. The drama will be helped by the limited comedy we have."

The actor's favorite hobby, he says, is playing chess. He's been at it 25 years, and "I used to be pretty good, but never good enough to challenge (Bobby) Fischer."

Classic Giant

Oscar Wilde introduced the world to some of its most enduring fictional figures, from Dorian Gray, the strange, 19th century character whom he pictured with a striking literary device, to Lady Windermere and other men and women of no importance themselves who helped to illuminate the shallower aspects of British society in the 1880s.

Among such carefully carved caricatures, none appears as obviously redeemable as the title character in one of the Irish-born author's earlier and lesser known short stories, "The Selfish Giant."

EASY LIVING—Jack Nicholson and Karen Black were both Oscar-nominated for their performances as a restless wanderer and the tender, simple girl he loves and leaves in "Five Easy Pieces," a television premiere on ABC-TV's "The ABC Monday Night Movie" Monday, April 5 (9-11 p.m.) on Channel 3W-5-12.

Man Plots Murder

William Wyndom stars as a bachelor who devises an elaborate scheme in which he will be murdered by one of his own students in "Murder in the First Singular," to be presented as the "Tuesday Mystery of the Week" April 6, 11:30 p.m. to 1 a.m., on ABC Channel 3-5-12.

Alfred Emerson, middle-aged high school English teacher and a man overly devoted to his mother-played by special guest star Martha Scott — learns that he has a terminal disease and begins to develop his plot. Emerson's motive: his murder will double the value of the insurance beneficiary payment to his mother.

Emerson chooses for his killer young Peter Montopollis, one of his students who is also one of the school's scholastic and athletic standouts. Emerson shows the young man a gun and tells him when and where he is to do the killing. Montopollis does not know that his teacher is tape recording their conversations, editing them to provide evidence.

Searching For Identity

Jack Nicholson goes on the road as a young man in search of himself and finds a series of beautiful — and available — women instead in "Five Easy Pieces," making its television premiere on "The ABC Monday Night Movie," April 5, 9 to 11 p.m., on Channel 3N-5-12.

Nicholson was nominated for an Oscar (Best Performance by an Actor) for "Five Easy Pieces," as was Karen Black (best Performance by a Supporting Actress). Lois Smith and Susan Anspach are also starred and Ralph Waite ("The Waltons") and Sally Struthers ("All in the Family") have featured roles.

Nicholson is Bobby Eroica Dupea, the drifting son of a middle-class family of musicians, who has traded his keyboard for oil rigs and construction sites, escaping the family heritage of classical music (at which he was never very good) in beer binges and overnight affairs.

The "five easy pieces" of the title are piano compositions, showy and crowd-pleasing but really very simple and devoid of depth or meaning — much like Dupea's life—and the young man knows he must be on his way again, alone, seeking a way out of the easy special traps that welcome and frustrate him.

Modern Aviation Is Topic For Movie

"Spencer's Pilots," a one-hour drama concerning the modern-day adventurers of aviation—the charter pilots—who fight forest fires, fly medical emergency cases, handle special police assignments, and act as flight instructors, will be broadcast as the first part (9 to 11 p.m.) of a double-feature presentation on "The CBS Friday Night Movies," April 9, on Channel 9-13. "Hazard's People" follows as the second part of the double bill.

Starring in "Spencer's Pilots" are Christopher Stone (who appeared in "The Interns") as ex-air force flyer Cass Garrett, the hot pilot of the company whose sense of responsibility overrides his penchant for derring-do; Todd Susman (who has been seen in "M-A-S-H") as younger pilot Stan Lewis, who admires Cass and almost matches him in aerial skills; and Gene Evans (who starred in the first color television series, "My Friend Flicka") as charter owner Spencer Parish, an old-school flyer.

Also starring are Margaret Impert (who has been seen in "Cannon") as Linda Dann, a liberated woman who runs the Spencer Aviation office; and Britt Leach as Mickey (Wig) Wiggins, Spencer's ever-reliable mechanic.

Bill Bixby (who formerly starred in "My Favorite Martian") guest stars as daredevil stunt flyer Philo McGrew, who inveigels his friend Chris and, ultimately, Stan and Spence to perform two dangerous stunts at an Arizona Air Show. Linda Kelsey also guest stars as Philo's wife Cynthia.

Como Goes To New Orleans

SING ABOUT NEW ORLEANS—Perry Como and guest star Leslie Uggams sing "Way Down Yonder in New Orleans" aboard the steamboat Natchez on "Perry Como's Spring in New Orleans," the special to be colorcast on NBC-TV Wednesday, April 7 (9-10 p.m.).

"Perry Como's Spring in New Orleans," with singer Leslie Uggams and Dick Van Dyke as guest stars, will be colorcast Wednesday, April 7, 9-10 p.m., on NBC Ch. 6-7.

New Orleans at Mardi Gras time is the focal point for the new special which was taped on location at such places as Heritage Hall, Jackson Square and the French Market, as well as aboard the riverboat Natchez.

"This town is something, isn't it," said Como as he waved to the Mardi Gras throngs lining Royal Street in the French Quarter. The singer, who seems to thrive amid the seemingly endless activity which surrounds location taping of TV shows, said: "I'm happy to have the opportunity to get out of the studios. It makes a show more interesting for me and, I hope, more entertaining for the audience."

Songs Como sings during the special (alone or with his guests) include "Basin Street Blues," "Way Down Yonder in New Orleans," "When the Saints Come Marching In," "If I Ruled the World," "I Believe in Music" (backed by the Southern University Marching Band), "Do You Know What It Means to Miss New Orleans" and others . . . . all in the familiar easy - to - listen - to Como style.

That style, Como said, it not about to change. "This is what I do. I try to do it to the best of my ability and hope the people like it. You have to be yourself. It's the only way to go."

There was unique group of people on hand for the taping in New Orleans — the Perry Troupers, a Como fan club. Among them were three young women — Florence Callahan from New Milford, N. J., Gloria Mark, of Philadelphia, Pa., and Judi McCoy of West Palm Beach, Fla.

It's not unusual for the girls to travel around the country, or even abroad, to watch Como. Ms. Callahan has been as far away from New Jersey as Las Vegas, Nev., where she attended a Como concert. Ms. Mark went to London and watched Como when he was a guest star during the taping of a Julie Andrews special.

Said Ms. Callahan: "We all work and we try to schedule our vacations or take long weekends so that we may be able to watch Perry." We usually don't broadcast the fact that we travel to Perry's tapings. We do it on our own. We're not trying to prove we're hot shots."

Then why do it? Florence replied: "We enjoy it; We also get a chance to see places we might not normally visit. Perry is the added incentive."

'Bad Ronald' Airs

Drawings play an important part in the story of "Bad Ronald," starring Emmy winner Scott Jacoby in the title role, and airing as the "Wednesday Movie of the Week," April 7, at 11:30 p.m., on ABC Channel 3-5-12.

In the chilling screenplay by Andrew Peter Marin, based on a book by John Holbrook Vance and directed by Buzz Kulik, drawings of the mythical kingdom of Atranta dramatize the mentally disturbed youth's withdrawal into a fantasy world.

After he accidentally kills a young girl, Ronald is hidden by his mother, played by Kim Hunter, in a tiny, secret room in their house. To while away the endless hours, he turns to sketching. He draws a map of the mythical Atranta on the ceiling and, on the walls, he sketches knights and princes and a beautiful princess who resembled his mother.

As the story progresses, and Ronald's mother dies suddenly, leaving him alone in the secret lair, the drawings change, becoming more bizarre, showing the disintegration of his already unstable personality into schizoprenia.

"Before I started work," Graves says, "I did intensive research on studies of disturbed personalities by some well known psychiatrists in the field and also studied paintings by surrealists.

"All in all," he says, "I made about 40 drawings. Then I worked with Buzz Kulik on selecting the ones to use."

When a new family with three young daughters moves into the house, the face of the mother changes to that of Princess Fansetta, resembling Babs, the youngest girl. A male friend of the girls' becomes the evil duke and Ronald himself the handsome prince.

Scott Jacoby, who off - screen, leans more to sports than the arts, was quick to see that Graves' sketches fit the mood of the show, and said, "They give me the creeps."

Late Movie Is Wild Comedy

Sir Alec Guinness, Robert Redford and Michael Connors star in "Situation Hopeless - But Not Serious," a wild comedy-satire that spoofs the post-World War II world on "The CBS Late Movie" Thursday, April 8, 11:30 p.m., on Channels 9 & 11. Based on a best-selling novel by Robert Shaw, the screenplay pokes fun at the position of the little man in the big world, the recovery era in Germany and the outbreak of Hollywood war movies shot in Europe.

The story begins its satiric journey when a lonely German shop clerk and air raid warden (Guinness) captures two American pilots (Redford and Connors) and holds them prisoners in his cellar. He holds them 'captive' (warning them that they will fall into much worse hands if they escape) not out of hatred, or out of sympathy with the Nazis, but because he needs company.

The clerk keeps them in their cellar hideout for seven years after the end of the war maintaining the illusion that the battle is still rating and Germany is winning. He is a kind keeper, even attempting to provide them with female companionship one Christmas, but the deception cannot go on forever.

When he finally releases them, with no further information, the airmen see a Germany in the midst of a miraculous economic and physical recovery, and are convinced that America is losing - or has already lost - the war.

A wild chase sequence during their 'escape' from Germany leads them into the middle of a horde of screaming SS Troops doing battle - for a war movie.

WHERE DID THEY GO?

Seven years ago the cast members of "The Mod Squad" were very popular actors on television. Today, Peggy Lipton is a wife and mother, devoted to her home and family. Clarence Williams is active in stage productions in New York, and Michael Cole has appeared in two TV Movies of the Week and one "Police Story" episode. Tige Andrews, who played their boss, is still actively sought after for TV guest appearances.

John is rapidly becoming as much of a heart-throb as Henry Winkler of "Happy Days," who caused quite a stir himself during a recent visit to Australia.

Nick Benedict of daytime TV's "All My Children" and wife Michele have divorced, just a month after they were married in Las Vegas.

Richard Masur of TV's "One Day At A Time" is a bachelor both on and off the screen, but he confides he does date a special lady but perfers not to name her. However, they met in New York and have been dating the past two years.

Shock is the only word that befits the reaction in Hollywood to Claudine Longet's arrest in connection with the shooting death of her boyfriend, skier Spider Sabich. Reportedly, her ex-husband Andy Williams flew to Colorado to take custody of his three children, Noelle, Christian and Robert.

Jimmy ("J.J.") Walker, boasting about how tough the kids were in his high school, insists: "They even hadda do away without track team. Everytime the starter fired his pistol, the team fired back!"

It's Elvis

Elvis Pressley finds himself with a tent full of hilarious problems in "The Trouble With Girls" on "The CBS Late Movie" Friday, April 9, 11:40 p.m., on Channels 9 & 11. Marilyn Mason co-stars, along with guest-star appearances by Vincent Price, Joyce Van Patten and Edward Andrews.

Presley plays the manager of a traveling tent show in the 1920s who gets into difficulties with girls and assorted characters during a one-week stand in a midwestern town. But conflicts between the locals and the show's personnel can't dampen the riotous between Elvis and Miss Mason, one of the tent-show beauties.

BARNABY—Relaxing with some of man's best friends on his California ranch is Buddy Ebsen, who stars as the private detective on "Barnaby Jones," action series seen Thursdays, (10-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Finds Adopted Land

Not one drop of Scottish blood flows in the Nordic veins of Christian Rudolf "Buddy" Ebsen, but the soft-spoken former dancer perhaps ranks as Hollywood's foremost historical authority on the colorful folk of the land of lochs, moors and glens.

It was several summers ago, while on a European trip with his family, that the star of "Barnaby Jones," broadcast Thursdays, 10 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV, became enamored of the history of Scotland, especially the 16th Century period that embraced the brief stormy reign of Mary Stuart, "Mary, Queen of Scots."

Already a history buff whose attention had been principally drawn to the American Civil War period, Ebsen found in the Scots, "an interesting people who were strong, active, colorful and violent."

While doing research on Mary Stuart, across Scotland, Ebsen encountered a historian, Robert Kemp, then professor of history at Aberdeen University.

It was their friendship that led to the establishment of an academic prize at the University for "meritorious writing about Scottish History" by a student of that major.

Houseman Stars As Hazard

HAZARD'S PEOPLE—Oscar winner John Houseman (foreground) stars as an attorney with his own special flair, assisted by a group of young associates, John Elerick, Roger Hill, Doreen Lang and Jesse Wells (left to right), in "Hazard's People", world premiere drama to be shown as the second part (10-11 p.m.) of a double-bill presentation on "The CBS Friday Night Movie" Friday, April 9 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS TV.

Academy Award-winning actor John Houseman stars as renowned attorney John Hazard, whose style and flair as well as inherent sense of larceny in the pursuit of justice sets him apart from his peers in the legal profession, in "Hazard's People," drama to be shown as the second part (10 to 11 p.m.) of a double-bill presentation on "The CBS Friday Night Movies," April 9, on Channel 9-11. The drama follows "Spencer's Pilots," which is the first part of the double bill.

Also starring in the one-hour mystery drama are John Elerick, as Michael Crowder III, one of Hazard's three junior associates whose Ivy League dress and conservative manner masks an underlying wild streak, as evidenced by his affinity for racing fast cars; and Jessie Welles, as 24-year-old Tish Corelli, an attractive but aggressive member of the firm whose vulnerabilities occasionally emerge in her struggle to succeed in what largely has been a man's domain.

Roger Hill also stars as Ernest Clay, a hip young black associate who shows a streak of independence and is concerned about advancing the image of his race. Other starring roles are taken by Stefan Gierasch, as District Attorney Robert F. Powell, Hazard's astute courtroom adversary; and Doreen Lang, as Sylvia Freed, the firm's dedicated but tart-tongued secretary.

Guest starring are Michael Tolan, as the noted surgeon, Dr. Carl De Lacy, whose arrest for the murder of his mistress presents Hazard with an uphill fight when the district attorney brings forth a witness who claims to have seen the doctor disposing of the victim's body; and Hope Lang, as De Lacy's divorced wife, who supports her former husband in his time of trial.

Houseman, whose distinguished career has embraced virtually every phase of the entertainment world, diverted his attention to acting in recent years, winning an Oscar for his supporting role as the stiff-backed professor of law in "The Paper Chase" in 1973.

Early fame came to Houseman as a producer and director on the stage, in radio and motion pictures, and on television. He was co-founder, with Orson Welles, of the Mercury Theater, and continued that project in radio as editor of the Mercury Theater of the Air.

He has been artistic director of the American Shakespeare Festival at Stratford, Conn., director of the APA Repertory Company, an associate professor of English drama at Vassar College, lecturer at UCLA, and producer of such motion pictures as "The Bad and the Beautiful," "Julius Caesar," "Executive Suite" and "Lust for Life."

On television, he produced "The Seven Lively Arts," "Playhouse 90" and "The Great Adventure." In recent years, he has been director of the drama division of the Juilliard School, New York.

'First Easter Rabbit' Presented Friday

Stuffy, a rabbit who has a special mission—to remind everyone about the true meaning of Easter—is a key figure in "The First Easter Rabbit," the new, animated musical special to be colorcast Friday, April 9, 8 to 8:30 p.m., on NBC Channel 6-7.

Burl Ives, who sings and tells the story, speaks for the Great Easter Bunny. Robert Morse is heard as Stuffy, Stan Freberg as Flops and Paul Frees as Zero. Voices of other characters are provided by Don Messick, Joan Gardner, Dina Lynn and Christine Winter.

"The First Easter Rabbit" tells the story of a special rabbit, who enters the picture as a stuffed toy belonging to a girl named Glinda. When she becomes ill, a fairy appears, turns the stuffed rabbit into a real one and launches Stuffy on his Easter assignment. Characters he meets along the way include three rabbit comedy con artists-Flops, who spouts poetry and malapropisms; the soft-hearted Whiskers; and debonair Spots. Stuffy is threatened by a would-be villain, Zero, but finds a big friend at the right time.

In talking about his part as the Great Easter Bunny, Burl Ives wonders if it could have been because he has been eating rabbit food for so long himself.

Said Ives: "I've been on this very strict diet which really calls for me to eat mostly carrots and lettuce and other greens, so that's why I guess my assignment was appropriate."

BICENTENNIAL DRAMA—Maggie Low stars in the title role of "Deborah Sampson" a story based on a true incident in which a teen-age girl disguised herself as a boy and enlisted in the Continental Army. The drama will be rebroadcast on NBC-TV "GO-USA" Saturday, April 10 (12:30-1 p.m.).

Driver Role Led To Break

"I was flabbergasted," said Maggie Low about getting the title role in "Deborah Sampson," to be rebroadcast on NBC-TV's "GO-USA" Bicentennial series, Saturday, April 10, 12:30 to 1 p.m.

Explaining how it happened, Maggie continued, "I appeared as the lady taxi driver in our Nyack High School production of the musical, 'On the Town.' Our families were, of course, out front to see us, including my father, Carl Low, who plays Dr. Rogers in the serial 'Search for Tomorrow.'

"Chiz Schultz was also there because his daughter, Liz, was in the show. Nothing was said at the time, but four days later I received a telephone call from Rosalie Walton, who said she was casting director for the NBC series, 'GO-USA.' She told me that producer Chiz Schultz had recommended me for a part and I was invited to come in and audition.

"I came in four times and was finally given the part. This was my first television show, so I was scared."

In the drama, based on an incident that took place during the Revolutionary War, Maggie plays a young girl who disguises herself as a boy and successfully enlists in the Continental Army.

"It's different from any part I've played," said the 18-year-old, who became interested in acting when her parents ran a supper theater in Baltimore. "It isn't playing in men's clothes that does it, it's the period. I wear a costume used in the movie, 'Birth of a Nation.' I'm so thrilled.' "

Also in the cast are Ruth Hunt as Mrs. Sampson, Sascha Von Scherler as Mrs. Thomas, Alex Primrose as the Rev. Phillips, Michael Fairman as Chickering, Jack Bittner as Exra, Sean O'Connor as Tim, Frank Rohrback as Sgt. Crisp, Conrad Fowkes as Captain Webb and John Wardell as Gen. Patterson.

Michele Will Tell

TO E. GILL, ROCK HILL, S.C.: I dunno about some of the movies you listed coming on TV, but I DO know that "Deep Throat" won't be one that will. It would melt every TV set that had it on.

TO S. CROWNE, VALDESE, N. C.: "Kolchak" was dropped because of poor ratings. However, Darren McGavin isn't sitting around doing nothing. His latest film was the "Brink's Robbery," a recent movie for-TV.

TO R. CANODY, LYNCHBURG, VA.: "Password" is a syndicated show and TV channels have the option to drop it or run it.

TO M. CHRISTY, FLORENCE, S.C.: Tom Synder, host of "Tomorrow," is 39-years-old and a native of Wisconsin. He's been a broadcast journalist for over 17 years, lives in Beverly Hills with his wife and 10-year-old daughter. His hobby is collecting toy trains.

J. REAGAN, PIKEVILLE, N. C.: Carol Burnett pulls her ear at the end of each show as a way of saying 'good night' to her grandmother who raised her. She first began doing this on the "Garry Moore Show" way back in 1956.

TO D. KING, YORK, S.C.: 41-year-old Richard Dawson who is now on "Match Game '76" is best remembered for his role as Newkirk in "Hogan's Heroes," a role he played for 5 years. Write to him in care of the show, CBS-TV, 51 West 52 St., New York, N. Y. 10019.

TO MRS. R. DUKE, CLYDE, N.C.: You can get pictures of "Movin On" stars Claude Akins (Sonny) and Frank Converse (Will) by writing to them in care of the show, NBC-TV, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N. Y., 10020.

TO 'DIANNE IN STAUNTON' (VA.): Fonzie's role in "Happy Days" has become very popular. Much more so than that of Richie, portrayed by Ron Howard. Because of this, most of the segments are now written around 'The Fonze.'

'Masters' Is A Beauty

The quiet, elegant beauty of the Masters golf tournament is probably unsurpassed in all the world of sport. Ancient wisteria winds around the gently moving trees, and dogwoods and azaleas are in full bloom around the Augusta National golf course.

"From the first time you drive in the front gate you know it's different," declares Gay Brewer's wife, Carole. "The Open has the style of Oakmont or the style of Winged Foot, but the Masters is always the same."

CBS-TV, marking 21 years of providing exclusive live coverage of the two closing rounds of the Masters Tournament, will broadcast the prestigious golf competition Saturday, April 10 (4 to 6 p.m.) and Sunday, April 11 (4 to 6 p.m.).

On Friday, April 9 (11:30 to 11:40 p.m.), the network will broadcast highlights of early-round action in the 72-hole tournament.

With a select field of international professional and amateur golfers, the broadcasts will cover play on the par 3, 155-yard 12th hole; the par 5, 485-yard 13th; the par 4, 420-yard 14th; the par 5, 520-yard 15th; the par 3, 190-yard 16th; the par 4, 400 yard 17th; and the demanding par 4, 420-yard 18th hole, at the renowned Augusta (Ga.) National Golf Club.

For the first time in Masters Tournament history, if two or more golfers are tied for first place after 72 holes of play, they will immediately proceed to the No. 1 tee for a playoff which will also be broadcast by CBS-TV, continuing on to successive holes until a Masters champion is determined.

Jack Nicklaus, winner of a record fifth Masters championship last year, considered by many as the greatest Masters or any tournament ever played, is the defending champion. Nicklaus, with past Masters victories in 1963, 1965, 1966 and 1972, now has recorded a total of 16 major championship titles, more than any player in golf history.

GOLF—CBS Television Sports, celebrating twenty-one years of exclusive live coverage of the two closing rounds of the Masters Tournament will broadcast the prestigious golf tournament Saturday, April 10 (4-6 p.m.) and Sunday, April 11 (4-6 p.m.) Play will be covered from the 12th through the 18th hole at the Augusta National Golf Club.

Second Is Not Enough

Forget that Tom Weiskopf, the 32-year-old golfing veteran from Columbus, Ohio, has had a brilliant career on the links since becoming a touring professional since 1964. Forget that he has pocketed over $100,000 or more five different years, including the last four. Forget that he was unanimously proclaimed as the 1973 PGA Player - of - the - year, and went over the one million dollar mark in career earning in 1974. What upsets Weiskopf is his incessant failure to win major titles, and a curious personal penchant for losing strokes in the final round of a major tournament. Tom will be attempting to break some of his past misfortune in the 40th renewal of the Masters. CBS will televise the third round of play on Saturday, April 10, beginning at 4 p.m.

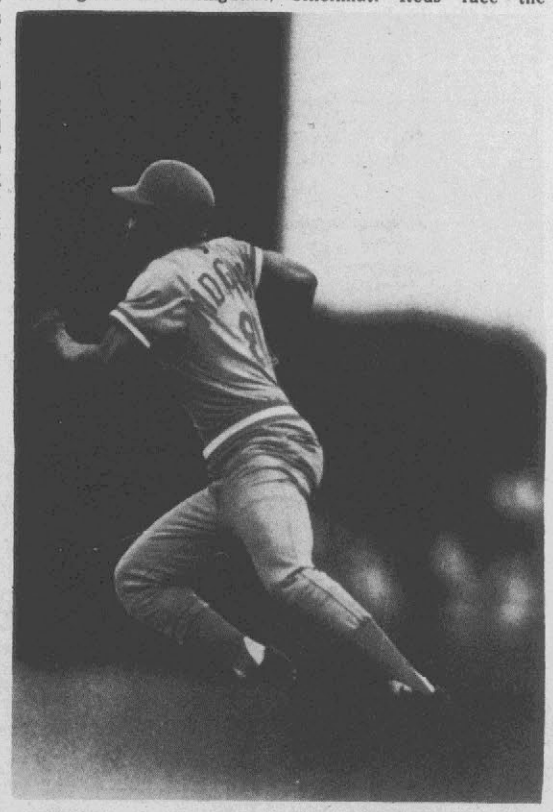
Weiskopf, the tall, lanky graduate of Ohio State, has been often compared to another famed golfing graduate from the midwestern school — The Golden Bear — Jack Nicklaus. The comparison may have actually hurt the temperamental Tom, who has been known to fume about course conditions and pin placements while the Golden Bear eases to victory. Tom's shots are a high, lazy arch — Jack's fire with a blazing speed. Both hit the ball tremendously long and have fine putting touches. In fact, in last year's Western Open, Weiskopf hit a drive 300 yards - plus that may have actually cost him the tournament by putting him in a precarious position behind a pump house.

Symptomatic of the Ohioan's bridesmaid habits are five second - place finishes at the famed Masters Tournament. After blowing a final - round lead in last year's classic at Augusta, Tom Lamented, "I feel lousy. I had the tournament won and let it get away from me." He also vowed that he wouldn't quit in his pursuit of the legendary Green Jacket until he won.

Despite these various shortcomings in major tournaments, one memorable eight - week stretch in 1973, during which he reeled off five tournament victories, still has many fellow professionals shaking their heads.

Red's Morgan Is Most Valuable Player

The major league baseball season gets off to a roaring start, when the World Champion Cincinnati Reds face the Houston Astros on Saturday, April 10. NBC will televise the game live from Riverfront Stadium in Cincinnati, Ohio, beginning at 2 p.m.



BASEBALL—Joe Morgan, National League MVP in 1975, will again be manning, second base for the World Champion Cincinnati Reds when they meet the Houston Astros on the premiere of NBC-TV's Baseball Game of the Week on Saturday, April 10 at 2 p.m.

Joe Leonard Morgan, second baseman for the champs, is current holder of the National Leagues' Most Valuable Player. At a mere 5'7" and 155 pounds, Joe is one of the most powerful "little men" ever to play the game.

Manager Sparky Anderson spares no lack of praise for his superb superstar. "I don't think there's any doubt but what he's becoming one of the great second basemen of all time," Sparky says.

Included on that list are players the caliber of Rogers Hornxvsby, Joe Gordon, Frankie Frisch and Charlie Gehringer, but none possessed the overall talents that "Little Joe" has. Since his arrival from the Houston Astros in 1972, he has accumulated an amazing set of statistics.

He has never batted below .290 for the Reds, and has stolen at least 58 bases. Joe has accumulated at least 111 walks each season, and has batted in 73, 82 and 67 over those three seasons.

And home run punch? "He may be," Anderson again declares, "the most powerful little man I ever saw."

An average of 20 home runs a season attests to his potent power. But Morgan also realizes that the strength of the Cincinnati lineup has made a big difference.

"At Cincinnati I've had Pete Rose batting ahead of me and Johnny Bench behind me," he admits. "That has to make a difference. I never had a Pete Rose batting in front of me at Houston.

Comedy Awards To Be Presented Saturday

Mel Brooks is named the Funniest Man in America and Lily Tomlin the Funniest Woman in America on "The Second Annual Comedy Awards" presentation to be aired Saturday, April 10, 10 to 11:30 p.m., on ABC Channel 3-5-12.

Additionally, the Academy of Humor honors Ms. Tomlin with two other top awards — the Funniest Television Comedy Special for "Lily!," televised last year, and the Funniest Performance of the Year in a Nightclub or Concert Presentation.

The awards presentation, hosted by Alan King, with co-hosts Hal Linden and Steve Allen, assembles the great names in comedy at the black - tie affair at the Shubert Theatre in Los Angeles and, in addition to the awards to be presented throughout the evening, the show is highlighted with comedy performances.

The scene for the evening is set by the musical production number of "I Wanna Make the World Laugh" featuring Bobby Van and a troupe of 16 dancers in a tribute to Mack Sennett. Ben Vereen performs a moving song and dance tribute to Bert Williams.

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR GOV. GEORGE C. WALLACE

When I visited your Capitol building, there were Confederate and state flags flying, but no Stars and Stripes. Why?—J. A. Anselmo, Hayward, Calif.

● Our state law that the Alabama flag should fly over the Capitol while Representatives are legislating on behalf of the people of Alabama has always been strictly observed. At such times, the U.S. flag has always flown. The Confederate flag flies beneath our state flag because the Capitol building was in the first capital of the Confederacy.

FOR SUSAN SARANDON, star of "Dragonfly"

Has your opinion of movie stars changed since you became one?—R.P., San Antonio, Tex.

● I was never in awe of them, but it was a relief to know they're human, too. Performers come in two categories—stars and those who want to be. The only bad experience I had was with Sophia Loren (on the set of the movie "Lady Liberty"). She was most unpleasant, for no reason. As the star, she should not have been threatened by me. I was distressed and puzzled. Up till then, I had found that the bigger the star, the nicer.

Why do some people feel guilty when they have a good time?—S.S., Asbury, N.J.

● Society and a puritanical upbringing. When we were children, we were told: "The devil finds work for idle hands," and we were convinced that if we weren't productively engaged, we were doing something wrong. We felt it was a sin to enjoy ourselves. If you ever feel this way, you may be able to overcome the guilt by telling yourself that deprivation is a form of sinning, too.

FOR BOB NEWHART

Since you play a psychologist, I'm wondering if you've ever been psychoanalyzed?—R. M. Eddix, Providence, R.I.

● No. I find that facing a live audience does the trick.

FOR ROSE F. KENNEDY

I enjoyed your book, "Times to Remember," and I wonder if you plan to write any more?—Robert H. Rose, Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

● Not now. I work for the retarded, and I'm encouraging my grandchildren to spend some school vacation time working with the retarded in summer camps and with the Special Olympics. I hope the proceeds from my book will be donated to older, orphaned, retarded people. At the moment, it's difficult for them to find good facilities.

FOR SHEILA MACRAE

What was your funniest experience?—H.R., Joplin, Mo.

● During a performance of "Redhead" in Connecticut, the audience laughed at a serious scene. I checked out my wig, my dress and my zipper. But I couldn't figure out why they kept roaring. Finally, I found out. Clinging to the bottom of my long gown was a skunk (I had dressed in the dark and had not seen it). I shrieked, the audience laughed even harder, and the skunk sprayed. After that, of course, I was in no condition to act, and the audience was in no shape to watch.

FOR LAWRENCE WELK

Why don't we ever see you do the new dances on your show?—K.H., Hackensack, N.J.

● Because I know nothing about them. I'm a creature of habit; I like the old stuff—fox trots, waltzes, tangos, polkas. There's no point in doing something I don't believe in and know nothing about. Modern dancing doesn't make my feet tap; but when I hear and play my kind of music, I can't keep still.

FOR BILL ANDERSON, country-western singer

Did your parents approve of your career?—B.I., Ogden, Utah

● They didn't encourage or discourage me. At first they were just amused. I remember Mom telling a friend, "He could have picked out something much worse, like stealing hubcaps." They kept hoping I'd get a "proper" job. (I think they still do.) Dad's advice was, "Whatever you do, do it the best way you can. If you want to collect garbage or put out fires or go down to the mines, do it. But I want you to be the best garbage collector, fireman or miner there is."

FOR JEANE DIXON

Will the African killer bees strike the U.S.? If so, when?—Bob Harris, Clay City, Ill.

● No, I don't think so. But I do sense a real possibility of a plague spread by rats throughout the urban areas of America.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

Isaac Hayes

I once heard Isaac Hayes say he was raised by his grandparents. Was he an orphan?—S.T., Hollywood, Fla.

● When Isaac was 18 months old, his mother died and his father left him and his older sister in the hands of their mother's parents, who were sharecroppers. But four years ago, Isaac Hayes Sr. finally saw the son he hadn't seen in 28 years. Isaac says the reunion was highly emotional. His father (who has a heart condition and diabetes) tried to explain why he had abandoned his son, but Isaac stopped him. He said that the past was unimportant and what they had to do was make up for lost time in the years ahead. Isaac Sr. is very proud of his talented son, and his most treasured possession is the first newspaper report about Isaac, now faded and worn. "No one believed me when I said I was your father," he reported, "but they sure will now."

What Is Medicine Finding Out Now?

By T. K. Irwin

America's "Top Doctor" Answers

John Neubauer

Dr. Cooper of H.E.W. reveals some dramatic medical breakthroughs.

Major medical advances in the past year or so have been developed to heal our ills and keep us well. This country's "top doctor," Theodore Cooper, Assistant Secretary for Health at H.E.W., puts it this way for Family Weekly: "Everything that doctors do for people now, and everything they will be doing for people, comes from research. I'm happy to say that the medical research community is very much alive and well." Here are some of the recent milestones.

ON THE HEART FRONT

An "Umbrella" Fitting: A 17-year-old girl, Suzette, had a hole in her heart, known as an atrial septal defect, which usually called for an open-heart operation. Instead, resorting to a new technique, New Orleans doctors used a catheter to thread a Dacron and stainless steel umbrellalike device to Suzette's heart to cover the hole. The hour-and-a-half procedure was the first successful attempt to mend this kind of defect without going through the open-heart surgery ordeal. Cardiac tissue is expected to grow over the device, permanently incorporating it. The new method shortens the hospital stay, doesn't require heart-lung machines, leaves fewer emotional and physical scars.

Life-Saving "Jolt": Each year at least 350,000 Americans die from cardiac fibrillation—when the heart's pumping action fails. To save such victims, an electric shock can be applied to the chest to restore normal heartbeat. But the jolt has to be given quickly. Now there's a portable seven-pound defibrillator that can be kept in a home, factory or ambulance to aid victims in the nick of time.

How can you (and your doctor) tell if there is a high risk of your ever having heart disease, besides the clues of high blood pressure, elevated cholesterol or susceptibility through a bad smoking habit? Last year, heart specialists in New York and at the Mayo Clinic produced evidence of another sign: a suspicious crease running from the lowest corner of the ear-opening diagonally down the ear lobe. Dr. Jack Sternlieb of the Mayo Clinic theorizes that the crease results from impaired blood supply to the ear. But unless you have telltale chronic chest-pain symptoms, don't worry if your ear lobes look creased.

BATTLING CANCER

Poison That Cures: Ordinarily, up to 85 percent of children with cancers of the lymph system succumb to the disease within five years. A new drug therapy developed by Dr. Isaac Djerassi, a Darby, Pa., blood specialist, achieved a 50-percent survival rate in such children, and he is trying the same treatment in adults. The treatment involves massive doses of a drug that poisons cells, which is followed by a second chemical that rescues normal cells but not cancer cells from the poison. For the lymphoma-type cancers, Dr. Djerassi says an 80-percent "cure" rate might be achieved with his therapy and other available therapies.

The two drugs also appear to improve dramatically the life expectancy of children with a highly lethal bone cancer called osteogenic sarcoma. Sen. Edward Kennedy's son, Edward Jr., whose leg was amputated because of a related bone cancer, is getting the combination drug therapy to prevent his disease from recurring.

Pion Therapy—Killer of Tumor Cells: Through a new approach known as pimeson or pion therapy, tumors may be destroyed by causing miniature atomic explosions within the cancer cells without much harm to normal tissue. Pions (a kind of nuclear glue) are about three times more effective in killing tumor cells than X-rays at a comparable radiation dose. They promise to greatly enhance the accuracy and effectiveness of radiation and to extend the usefulness of this therapeutic tool to cancers not currently treatable by other means. A pion therapy machine, however, is extremely costly and may not be readily available. Potentially, pion therapy could save the lives of about 50,000 cancer patients a year.

NEW MEDICAL TOOLS

Body Scanners — "Computer" X-Ray Wonder-Workers: "In diagnosing disease," Dr. Cooper points out, "total body scanning machines are probably the biggest breakthrough in radiology since the invention of the X-ray tube. They produce very detailed pictures of the brain and other organs, allowing physicians to see, for example, the precise size and location of tumors barely visible on standard X-ray."

The revolutionary machines produce pictures of any part of the anatomy in less than five minutes. They have revealed enlargement of the liver and spleen, abnormal cavities in the spinal cord and cerebral blood clots indicating types of strokes. The two major virtues of the scanners: discovered tumors can be treated at an early stage, and many risky exploratory operations to determine if an organ is diseased can be averted.

Coral for Arthritis: To replace or shore up diseased bone in people with arthritis, fractures or other disorders, coral from the South Pacific has been fashioned into artificial bones remarkably like the genuine. At Penn State University, scientists employing new techniques have devised pins, screws and bolts from coral to support even whole artificial joints. The material is also being tested as a substitute for human teeth.

New "Insight" for Kidneys: Easier diagnosis of suspected diseased kidneys is made possible by various endoscopes, instruments that examine the inside of hollow organs. The method permits the urologist to rule out the presence of malignant tumors without resorting to surgery.

FEATS OF SURGERY

Surgical "Refrigeration": A 42-year-old Naples, Fla., homemaker, afflicted with a brain tumor, seemed doomed because this type was regarded as inoperable. Taken to New York's Cornell Medical Center, she underwent a daring operation.

By cooling her body and totally arresting her circulation, surgeons were able to shrink the tumor away from vital areas of the brain and then remove it.

Heparin, an Anticlot Life-Saver: Lives of thousands of surgical patients can be saved each year if given heparin, an anticlotting drug, before and after major chest and abdominal operations. Reporting this finding, Dr. Sol Sherry of Temple University explained that in many patients blood clots form after an operation, break loose, then move through the heart and into the lungs, which can prove fatal. Dr. Sherry urges use of low-dose heparin in all patients over 40 who face major surgery.

Postcataract Lens Implants: More and more "spare" parts for our bodies keep coming along. Take cataracts, a leading cause of blindness—over 400,000 Americans undergo surgery each year to remove diseased lenses in the eyes. Up to now they've had to wear extra-thick glasses which can seriously impair peripheral vision; or contact lenses, an uncomfortable nuisance for the elderly.

The latest development: a plastic substitute lens permanently implanted within the eye, in front of the iris. It's unobtrusive and provides vision which is virtually as good as the natural lens. The patient's prescription is ground into the lens before implanting. Since the process is not applicable to all patients (such as diabetics), it's still a controversial issue.

Body-Chilling for Infant Surgery: Only a day-and-a-half old, the boy suffered from a deadly congenital heart defect. At Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston, doctors anesthetized him, put a plastic blanket over his body and covered it with cracked ice. When his temperature dropped to 77 degrees, the baby's chest was opened, and he was hooked up to a heart-and-lung machine that pumped cooled blood through his body. He lay in suspended animation, his heart motionless, his circulation at a standstill. Then, in less than an hour, surgeons rearranged the blood vessels leading from the lungs to his tiny heart.

The baby benefited from open-heart surgery aided by what is known as deep hypothermic circulatory arrest (total body chilling). Revolutionizing cardiac surgery in children under the age of one, it can prove a boon to many of the 11,000 babies born each year with critical heart defects.

FOR SAFER CHILDBIRTH, BETTER BABIES

Birth-Defect Test Is Safe: "This past year," Dr. Cooper notes, "we completed a major study that showed that amniocentesis is a safe and accurate way to detect genetic disease in the unborn baby."

This previously reported prenatal diagnostic technique, a needle tap of a pregnant woman's amniotic fluid, is recommended for those who have an increased risk of giving birth to infants with abnormalities.

Birth-Safety Predictor: At St. John's Hospital in Santa Monica, the new oxytocin challenge test has taken the danger out of hazardous births. It involves a drug (oxytocin) similar to a body's natural labor-inducing substance and a fetal heart rate monitor. With the test, a safe time for birth can be predicted.

BEAMING IN ON ULCERS

Lasers to Heal Ulcers? Traditionally, bleeding ulcers have been treated by drugs, diet or surgery. Now laser beams help control internal bleeding, markedly reduce the number of blood transfusions and the time spent in hospitals. According to doctors at the University of Southern California, the laser can be used for patients who are poor bets for surgery. The procedure, however, is still in an experimental stage.

Ulcer-Proneness Test: Taking a test may tell whether you're apt to come down with a peptic ulcer. A research team at Chicago's Michael Reese Hospital reports that a blood sample drawn from an arm vein can be checked for an "ulcer factor." Some of the blood is

BOON FOR DIABETICS

A Secretion as Important—Maybe—as Insulin: Evidence supports the theory that glucagon, a pancreatic hormone, plays as important a role in diabetes as insulin does. Too much glucagon perhaps contributes to higher levels of sugar in the blood. Lately a protein called somatostatin was isolated at the Salk Institute to inhibit the release of glucagon from the pancreas. Infusion of this drug reduced the patient's blood-sugar levels by 25 percent, even without insulin. Given with insulin, it may give diabetics a greatly improved chance of life free from such serious complications as blindness and kidney failure. For the time being, use of somatostatin is restricted to research studies.

MENTAL/PHYSICAL HEALTH

Personality and Heart or Cancer Vulnerability: Your "personality profile" could have an impact on what diseases you incur sooner or later. Long-term studies at Johns Hopkins University reported, not surprisingly, that victims of mental illness and suicide had nervous habits, were heavy coffee drinkers, tense and insomniacs. Heart-attack patients showed anger under stress, were tired on awakening and often depressed.

Most unexpectedly, the study revealed a link between personality patterns and cancer. The cancer-prone generally had placid, gentle, nonaggressive temperaments. Like victims of mental illness, they felt a remarkable lack of closeness to their parents. But why cancer? Specialists believe the body's immune system plays a vital role in protecting against malignancies; people susceptible to stresses involving loss of strong relationships might produce hormonal changes and failure of the immune system.

Heredity and Depression: In mental health research, striking biological advances include evidence that genes play an important part in schizophrenia and depression. Though schizophrenia itself is not inherited, there is almost certainly a familial predisposition to it.

BIRTH CONTROL

Hormonal Contraceptives: A new year-long contraceptive combines features of The Pill and IUD but avoids some of the drawbacks. The new device, initially launched under a Ford Foundation grant, is designed to be implanted by a physician to prevent pregnancy by slowly releasing a hormonal agent.

The latest FDA warning about oral contraceptives is that the risk of heart attack is three- to five-times higher among women on The Pill than women not taking it. Reports of studies announced last year indicate women over 40 especially should switch to some other form of contraception.

WHAT'S AHEAD?

"In future basic research," says Dr. Cooper, "we will be learning much more about how a single fertilized egg cell divides during pregnancy into different kinds of cells, such as bone, brain, muscle and kidney cells.

"We're going to have more studies on the health hazards in the environment and the work place, on the role of nutrition in health and on health problems of children.

"And an area of research that is attracting many bright scientists is research on the biochemistry and molecular biology of memory, learning, drug addiction and mental disorders."

To all those bright scientists in white coats, relentlessly seeking breakthroughs in the nation's labs and hospitals, we owe a vote of thanks—and, eventually perhaps, our lives.

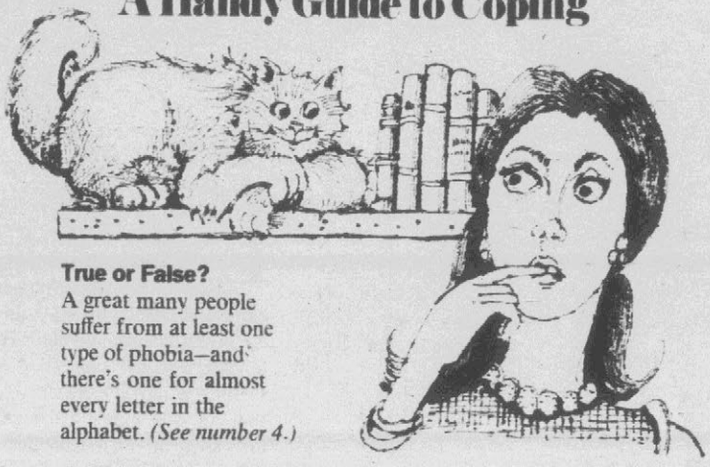
People Quiz

By John E. Gibson

Our Fears:

A Handy Guide to Coping



True or False?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Most of a person's fears, anxieties and apprehensions are self-generated and stem from within.

2. If you will simply try to ignore the various fears and anxieties which are part and parcel of daily living, most of them will gradually fade away and cease to trouble you.

3. There is a simple psychological yardstick that measures a person's fear of failure—and even his fear of death.

4. A great many people suffer from at least one type of phobia—and there's one for almost every letter in the alphabet.

5. A phobia is different from a rational fear in that there isn't much you can do about it, except learn to live with it.

ANSWERS

1. True—according to psychiatric studies, which show that primarily a person's fears and anxieties—feelings of apprehension, tension or inner restlessness—result from a disapproving conscience, which rightly or wrongly takes issue with some of his attitudes or actions. And other investigations have shown that people who are on the best terms with their conscience tend to have the fewest fears and inner conflicts, the greatest peace of mind. Some fears, of course, result directly from outside sources. However, there is a tendency on the part of many people to make external causes the scapegoat for fears and anxieties which are self-generated.

2. False. The best way to deal with your fears and apprehensions is to face them squarely. They will lose much of their power to intimidate you once you get them out in the open and subject them to a frank and objective appraisal. Most will fall into two categories: those you can do something about by taking action and those which prove groundless. Suppressing your fears, bottling them up and refusing to admit them, can result in physical as well as psychological problems. Studies have demonstrated, for example, that such suppression of feelings and emotions is frequently a factor in high blood pressure.

3. True. Investigations have shown that the person with a high fear of failure (as well as a high fear of death, among other things) is one who has a wide discrepancy between his real and his ideal self. To put it a different way, the greater the gap between your actual self and the person you feel you should be, the greater your susceptibility to these fears—and the stronger they are likely to be.

4. True. Phobias—defined as the obsessive and usually groundless fear of some particular object or situation—are so numerous that they run the gamut from A (acrophobia: a fear of high places) to Z (zoophobia: fear of animals), and even include phobophobia: a fear of being afraid—which is more common than you might expect. And some people even have a phobia about Christmas, for various reasons. ("I just dread Christmas! I'm so relieved when it's over.") Though this type of phobia has not been officially catalogued, perhaps it might be referred to as Santaclaustrophobia.

5. False. In a study conducted by a team of specialists at London's Institute of Psychiatry, men and women with long-standing specific phobias were given a rapid treatment that consisted simply of continuous exposure to their phobic objects (spiders, cats, birds, fear of water, etc.). The treatment was found highly effective. Example: a 20-year-old woman was terrified of cats. She was first told to fantasize that there was a cat beside her. After she got used to the "fantasy cat," a real cat was placed on a table six feet away. Looking at the cat provoked intense anxiety which subsided after about five minutes. The cat was then brought closer and closer by degrees, and after a few minutes she became able to touch and stroke the cat. The report concludes: "She spent the last 15 minutes of the two-hour session cuddling the cat on her lap, without anxiety."

Grass Seed Is For The Birds!
Zoysia Saves Time, Work, Money

GRASS SEED WILL NEVER GROW A LAWN LIKE THIS! SAVE WITH OUR SPECIAL INTRODUCTORY OFFER UP TO 200 AMAZOY ZOYSIA GRASS PLUGS FREE!

By Mike Senkiw
Agronomist

Every year I see people pour more and more money into their lawns. They dig, fertilize and lime. They rake it all in. They scatter their seed and roll and water it.

Birds love it! Seeds which aren't washed away by rain give them a feast. But some seed grows, and soon it's time to weed, water and mow, mow . . . until summer comes to burn the lawn into hay, or crabgrass and diseases infest it.

That's what happens to ordinary grass, but not to Amazoy Zoysia.

"MOWED IT 2 TIMES," WRITES WOMAN

For example, Mrs. M. R. Mitter writes me how her lawn ". . . is the envy of all who see it. When everybody's lawns around here are brown from drought ours just stays as green as ever. I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in . . . Last summer we had it mowed (2) times. Another thing, we never have to pull any weeds — it's just wonderful!"

And from Iowa came word that the state's largest Men's Garden Club picked a Zoysia lawn as the "top lawn — nearly perfect" in its area. Yet this lawn had been watered only once all summer up to August!

Cuts Your Work, Saves You Money

Your deep-rooted, established Amazoy lawn saves you time and money in many ways. It never needs replacement . . . ends re-seeding forever. Fertilizing and watering (water costs money, too) are rarely if ever needed. It ends the need for crabgrass killers permanently. It cuts pushing a noisy mower in the blistering sun by 2/3.

CHOKES OUT CRABGRASS

Thick rich, luxurious Amazoy grows into a carpet of grass that chokes out crabgrass and weeds all summer long. It will NOT winter kill. Goes off its green color after killing frost, regains fresh new beauty every Spring — a true perennial!

For Slopes, Play Areas, Bare Spots

Your Own Supply of Plug Transplants

NO SEED, NO SOD!

There's no seed that produces winter-hardy Meyer Zoysia. Sod of ordinary grass brings with it the problems of seed, like weeds, diseases, burning out, other ills.

Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass Was Perfected by U.S. Govt.; Released In Cooperation With U.S. Golf Assoc. as a superior grass.

Order guaranteed Amazoy now, get your bonus plugs FREE. Your order will be delivered at earliest correct time for planting in your area.

We ship all orders the same day grass is taken from the soil, shipping charge collect via most economical means.

Lee Marvin, at 52, looks like a character out of a Hemingway novel—lean, deeply tanned, strikingly handsome despite the gray stubble on his cheeks and chin. He quickly won the admiration of the British movie crew while he shot his new movie, "Shout at the Devil," about a flamboyant ivory poacher during World War I. The movie was shot in South Africa and Malta.

Lee has been called "Hollywood's favorite bad guy." He has earned a reputation for off-camera familiarity with his own three B's: "broads, booze and brawls." He seems, however, to have mellowed since his marriage five years ago to his second wife, Pam Feeley, who always travels with him and who was present during this interview:

FAMILY WEEKLY: Why did you turn down roles in big moneymakers like "Jaws" and "Earthquake"?

MARVIN: For many reasons. I thought "Jaws" was a piece of junk. They wanted me to play the part of the shark fisherman who, in the end, is had by the shark. I have too much respect for fishermen to cop out on a cheap story like that. In "Earthquake," you know what's going to happen, so why scare all the old ladies in Los Angeles? That's not my role in life really. Besides those are both sick films.

MARVIN: It's hard to find anything that's really good now. As your taste either develops or changes or decreases, or whatever it does, the targets narrow.

FW: I hear you like marlin fishing. When do you have time for it?

MARVIN: I don't care when it is, I go! There are so few great boats that the good ones have a waiting list that runs for years. Pam and I are lucky to have found this guy who, when we finish one trip, asks, "What time next year?" And Pam's not bad at fishing [proudly]. In fact,

FW: Is it true that you're building an extra room onto your house to mount your marlin?

MARVIN: Sure! I can't stick it in the bathroom or over the fireplace! It's 15 feet and one inch and weighs 1,320 pounds. You don't have the actual fish mounted. You saw off the bill of the marlin and save that for your trophy. Then you take very careful measurements because, as you probably know, they're pretty classically formed. The moulder puts it together and puts in a glass eye. Otherwise, the fish is mostly plastic. Then they ship it off to you.

FW: You once told me that it was impossible to take a vacation because you always have something on your mind.

MARVIN: I still have something on my mind. It's just that I've made up my mind that if I can't handle it, I don't think about it. I don't look for the answer any more.

FW: Why did you leave the Malibu movie colony to live in Tucson?

MARVIN: I think I wore it out. I spent 10 or 12 years there. It lost its uniqueness for me. Maybe it's the fact that I've seen the bigger surfs. It was time for a change, or, I should say, it was time for a change because nothing ever changes.

FW: Do you enjoy going off by yourself?

MARVIN: Listen, I do that wherever I am. I don't need to make a physical move to be by myself. I can do that in the middle of a riot. I just turn off mentally.

FW: Has doubling your family changed your life? [Lee and his wife have four children each by previous marriages.]

MARVIN: Not at all, especially with the kind of financial freedom I have. If I had to feed them by driving a delivery truck, I might have a problem. Now it's simply a matter of feeding them and let's see what they do. If anything, having more kids gives you more freedom. If you have only one or two kids, you're more likely to throw a lot of hysterical pressure on them about life and all that. But if you have a lot of kids, you tend to treat them equally: "Look, I'll give you the opportunity, but you have to do something with it." We're lucky now—we only have one child at home. She's 13. Listen—I don't pay too much attention to the kids until they get to the rebuttal stage and start bucking me. That can be anywhere from the teens on into the forties.

FW: Are you a strict father?

MARVIN: Nope, I'm only strict about myself: when I want to be in control and when I don't want to be in control.

FW: You seem very happy and relaxed. Are you?

MARVIN: Life has always been good to me. Every once in a while, bad times beat you to it. I like Jimmy Whitmore's line, "Ever since 1945, it's been gravy." That's a good line.

MARVIN: It gives them a tremendous opportunity they might not otherwise have. It's more than just a sightseeing tour. Movies can trap you in an endless number of places where you wouldn't even stop to go to the men's room. Also, if you're stuck on a job, you don't pay much attention to your surroundings. It's important to share what's around you: "Look at that beautiful tree," or "What a lovely garden." Besides, as every man knows, if you're staying in a motel or hotel, you've got two choices: dinner or the bar. That always leads to trouble or confusion or gun shots or letters from attorneys. I save myself a lot of trouble and bring my wife and kids along.

FW: Have you set any goals for your children?

MARVIN: I wish the heck they'd get out on their own. That's what I want, just for them to show up for Thanksgiving or send a Christmas card. I'd be content! No. Goals are individual.

FW: Many think education is learning to cope with problems. Do you agree?

MARVIN: Cope is a modern expression. Education takes many different forms. But education is all you can really give a child besides a certain amount of love.

FW: Pam tells me you have a puritanical attitude about life.

MARVIN: Very much so! I am a puritan. That's my stock.

FW: You recently turned down a beer commercial. Is that part of your puritanical thinking?

MARVIN: No! That has nothing to do with being a puritan. But I don't have to drink their beer. Otherwise. I would have to be flashing it in every bar I stepped into. Guys would say, "You've sold out." Now, I'm not selling out by any means, but they'd think so if I made the commercial.

FW: Puritanical thinking isn't exactly "in" today, is it Lee?

FW: What's your definition of Puritanism?

MARVIN: There was a marvelous ancestor of mine, Matthew Marvin, who came to America with Thomas Hooker (one of the early Colonial clergymen who settled in this country in 1633.) When they settled in Connecticut, Matthew headed up the militia. The farmers would have the Sabbath off and they enjoyed having a little ale. And it turned out that every Sunday they poured into the taverns, but nobody could get them to church. Matthew's way of handling this was to ride into town on Sunday morning with his militia and, at gunpoint, take the men out of the gin mills and into church. That's puritanical! Haven't you noticed how one guy simply does something because it has to be done, as against the guy who says, "But why did you do it?" The first guy answers: "Someone had to do it. Let's get on with it."

FW: You think we should treat life the same way, just get on with it, whatever comes along?

MARVIN: You have to.

The world's most incredible scissors at an incredible price! The idea originated with the Scandinavians — why not a scissors anatomically designed to fit the human hand instead of fight it . . . why not make it out of a cushion-y plastic that would rest rather than tire the hand? The brilliant result — a breakthrough in scissor design . . . is still selling in some better stores for $8 and more!

An Exciting New Dimension in Scissor Performance — Cuts Like Magic

You can whiz through the heaviest of velvets to the most gossamer of silks as fast, as perfectly as a professional dressmaker. You can turn corners, make circles, cut angles, zoom straight-as-an-arrow along a table edge so easily it's like the scissors is cutting all by itself (your fingers are along for the ride!)

And you can sas-shay through tricky patterns with incredible ease and precision, end your paper "rip offs" forever — cut coupons and recipes without ruining the rest of the paper! Quality-crafted with the famous Scandinavian features including soft plastic orange handle, and stainless steel blades, 8¼" long. Special safety "points" make it safe for the children's crafts, too! Weighs only 3 ounces. Order now — the sharpest buy of your life at ONLY $1.99.

Jobmanship

Should You Confide in Co-Workers?

It all depends. There are some things you might want to tell your boss. Other things you'd be wise to keep to yourself even if you almost choke on them. Trying to act as a personal listening post for a boss usually backfires. By telling what "people are saying" about him or her, you will definitely earn a special spot—as a gossip and troublemaker. But if a jealous co-worker is circulating lies about you that are serious, you might quietly confide in your boss. Bosses may do nothing about situations like this when they learn of them, but their knowledge will protect you when the false rumors reach their ears. Personal troubles are a whole category of their own. If there's serious illness in your family, it may be right to let people know. You may think you're behaving normally at work despite your worries, but others may notice erratic actions. If they understand the cause, they'll be more willing to overlook occasional lapses. However, when you're beset by marital and romantic difficulties or embarrassing legal, monetary and personal dilemmas, don't be too quick to let it all hang out. The one person you're telling it to may be all right. But what about that one person's other good friend who will soon be hearing the story? And the next person after that? Why compound your difficulties by smearing your image at work? Then you'll have two problems instead of one.

FREDA PAYNE

Within the past three years, Freda Payne's recordings of "Band of Gold" and "Bring the Boys Home" have sold over a million. These, along with her top-selling LPs—"Contact," "The Best of Freda Payne," "Payne and Pleasure,"—led to headline appearances in world-famed clubs, theaters and concert halls across the U.S. Before this, she caught the attention of Broadway audiences when, as Leslie Uggams's understudy in "Hallelujah Baby," she performed in the starring role. In 1973, she made her movie debut in "Book of Numbers." Born into a middle-class family in Detroit, Freda's world as a teenager was one of singing and dancing. At 18, she entered show business in the chorus of Pearl Bailey's night-club troupe, and later accepted an offer from Quincy Jones to join his tour with Redd Foxx and Billy Eckstine. International tours plus her recordings and TV guest spots have brought her the acclaim she enjoys today.

The Bible: More than meets the eye!

Millions of people read the Bible. Many others are puzzled by this and wonder what it is all about. Still others are aghast that the Bible can make devout and thoughtful neighbors of some and obnoxious fanatics of others. "The Bible saved our marriage," says one couple. A second couple says just the opposite.

Clearly, the Bible is not a simple book that one can sit down with and immediately understand in its fullness. One needs help and preparation before he can discover God speaking to him through the printed word.

Mindful of the incomparable value of the Scriptures and of the need for proper preparation before reading them, the Catholic bishops at the Second Vatican Council in 1965 wrote a special document On Divine Revelation. Written primarily for Catholics, it has since proven to be interesting and helpful to an even wider audience. The complete document is now available from many sources, but by way of simplifying it, we have prepared a less technical version. A free copy of this is yours for the asking. Simply mail the coupon. No one will call on you.

SLOW-COOKED SHORT RIBS IN WINE

6 lbs. well-trimmed short ribs cut into individual ribs
3 tablespoons liquid gravy seasoning
1 lb. fresh or frozen carrot chunks
1 lb. fresh or frozen small white onions
2 cloves garlic, crushed
2 bay leaves
¼ cup minute tapioca
½ teaspoon ground black pepper
½ teaspoon thyme leaves
2 teaspoons salt
2 envelopes instant bouillon
2 cups red wine
1 cup water

1. Brush short ribs with gravy seasoning and place in bottom of a 5½-qt. crock or slow-cooker. Add carrots, onions, garlic and bay leaves.

2. Combine minute tapioca, pepper, thyme, salt and instant bouillon. Sprinkle mixture over short ribs. Pour wine and water over all and cover.

3. Place crock in outer cooking shell. Cook on high setting for 4½-5 hours.

Makes 6 to 8 servings

APPLESAUCE AND HORSERADISH

1 jar (1 lb.) applesauce
2 tablespoons white horseradish

Blend applesauce and horseradish. Serve as a relish with hot or cold meats.

Makes 3 cups

BAKED RUM FRUIT

1 can (1 lb., 4 ozs.) cling peach halves, drained and halved
1 can (1 lb., 4 ozs.) pineapple chunks, drained
1 can (1 lb., 1 oz.) dark, sweet pitted cherries, drained
1 can (1 lb., 1 oz.) unpeeled apricot halves (reserve liquid)
1 cup brown sugar, packed
1½ cups light rum
1 pt. sour cream

1. Preheat oven to 350°F.

2. Combine fruits and apricot liquid in shallow 3-qt. baking dish. Sprinkle with brown sugar and pour 1 cup rum over fruit.

3. Bake for 1½ hours, uncovered, stirring once.

4. Pour on remaining ⅓ cup rum. Serve warm or cold with a generous spoonful of sour cream on each serving.

Makes 2 qts.

What's Smart: Buy short ribs or flank cut from chuck, the fore-quarter of beef. Be alert for specials or the meat manager's sale for a good price. Short ribs cut from the end of the rib roast generally have too much fat.

Is your cigarette less than More?

If it isn't More, it's less than More. Because More is the first 120mm cigarette. It's more in every way except price.

More has more style. It has more flavor. It has more. Over 50% more puffs than most 100mm cigarettes. Yet More doesn't cost more.

And what's more, More comes in both regular and menthol. They're both long, lean and burnished brown. Regular More delivers rich tobacco flavor while More Menthol packs a cooling blast. Puff after puff after puff.

You'll find that More and More Menthol smoke slower and draw easy for more enjoyment. They're more flavorful. Yet they're surprisingly mild.

More and More Menthol. They sit neat in your hand like they were made for it and fit your face like they found a home.

NANCY WALKER
"Only morons are happy"

The petite comedienne talks about the serious problem of modern man's depression: "Let's face it, how many people do you know who are truly happy? You'd have to be a moron to be happy in the midst of all the turmoil and political scandal around the world. So, if we want to keep our sanity, we cope as best we can. Many people today are taking an interest in psychiatry or meditation. But I don't think these are anything more than superficial, temporary answers to our present state of national depression. Perhaps the most important social development of this century is our new-found candor. Everyone from actors to housewives can now vent their feelings, bare their souls and confess their sins without the threat of being reprimanded. That's why there are fewer and fewer "closet" alcoholics and homosexuals. It's not that man is any more willing to condone 'antisocial' behavior, but when the truth is plainly in evidence and somebody is crying out for help, at least we can begin to deal with these problems and anxieties."

Why Americans never understood the Vietnam war and may never understand the war in Angola: "We had always supported a recognizable ally against a clearly discernible enemy: the French and English against the Germans, for instance, or the Chinese against the Japanese. But in Vietnam there was no language or cultural difference between friend and foe. Vietnam's disorienting effect on our society, the indeterminate nature of that war we couldn't seem to win or abandon, was reflected in our movie makers' inability to find an appropriate format for presenting the war to a mass audience. Central to the war movie is respect for action. But Vietnam made any action mere busywork and turned the mechanics of war into monstrosities. Likewise, the moral justifications of a 'good' war were missing. In countless World War II films, the enemy was shown destroying civilians and setting up puppet governments—now we were doing it." From "Looking Away: Hollywood and Vietnam," by Julian Smith (Scribners, $8.95).

Or would you rather be a bear? The bear taking his ease at the zoo has very little in common with that bear for fitness. Eileen Fowler, who says none of us will ever be the picture of health unless we get up early every morning and do some exercises outdoors. Here are Eileen's other five rules for physical fitness, in her own words: "1) Don't stay up late. 2) Don't eat large meals late at night. 3) Get plenty of sleep. 4) Don't live on a diet of fish and chips (french fries). 5) Don't choose a career in acting." Ms. Fowler, England's No.-1 fitness teacher, feels that it's harder to get the English to keep fit than it is Americans: "In America, you're obsessed with youth. In England, it's just the reverse. We're almost conditioned to grow old. We're convinced that until gray hairs and double chins appear, we're not respectable and distinguished. I've been fighting this inbred British nonsense for 40 years!" What's the first sign of old age? "My grandmother once told me that you are as old as your feet. Always remember that. If there is anything wrong with your feet, it will show in your face." Eileen Fowler is a podiatrist's godsend, and at 69, a testament to her fitness philosophy.

Pictorial Parade

. . . While Eileen Fowler, fitness expert, recommends a somewhat more active life with exercise—but plenty of sleep as well.

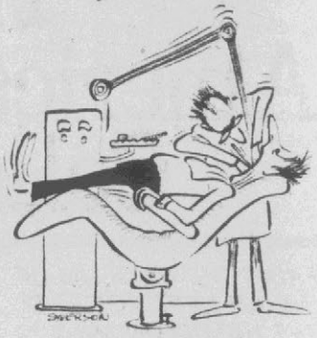
ARMOUR'S ARMOURY
By Richard Armour



TOOTH AND FRICTION

With all that scraping, all that buzz,
I don't know what the dentist does.
He knows: he has a little mirror

From time to time I jerk and wince,
And now and then he tells me,
"Rinse."
But with no mirror, I can't see

Though in the light, I'm in the dark
About the dentist's little lark.
I cannot see, he will not tell,
And, frankly, it is just as well.

"I've got good news and bad news," said the caddy. "The good news is that you just made a hole in one on the fourth hole."

"What's the bad news?"

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

by HAL FOSTER

Our Story: THE SEARCH FOR THE TREASURE ALMOST ENDS IN DISASTER WHEN PRINCE VALIANT IS CAUGHT IN A QUAGMIRE. HE LIES EXHAUSTED BY THE POOL AS ZILLA PROBES WITH A POLE. "THE BOTTOM IS SMOOTH AS MARBLE AND SLOPES DOWNWARD."

"A 'DEATH TRAP'!" WHISPERS THE SHEPHERD. "YET THE RUBY YOU GAVE ME CAME FROM ITS DEPTHS." THEN CLUTCHING HIS JEWEL, HE CLIMBS THE HILLSIDE TO HIS HOVEL.

FINDING THE GEM FILLS THEM WITH EAGERNESS. THEY REEXAMINE THEIR PLAN OF THE PALACE. "THE RIDDLE MENTIONS A DUNG HEAP, THAT MEANS STABLES. THE PLANS SHOW THE STABLES JUST ABOVE THE 'DEATH TRAP.'"

BUT TREASURE HUNTERS HAVE NEARLY DEMOLISHED THE STABLES IN THEIR SEARCH. "WHAT ARE THOSE IRON RODS FOR?" ASKS VAL. "TO PROBE UNDER THE SURFACE," ANSWERS ZILLA.

"WE ARE LOOKING IN THE WRONG PLACE. THE DUNG HEAP WOULD BE OUTSIDE, BENEATH THESE WINDOWS." IT DOES NOT SEEM A LIKELY PLACE TO FIND A TREASURE VAULT, BUT THEY SET TO WORK.

HE HAD PUNCTURED AN ANCIENT LEAD WATER PIPE. VAL IS EXCITED: "LOOK, ZILLA, THIS PIPE SUPPLIES THE WATER TO THE 'DEATH TRAP' WHERE A JEWEL WAS FOUND. THE TREASURE MUST BE NEAR."
