Lebanese President To Step Down

By MICHAEL KEATS

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI)— Bowing to intense pressure from all factions, holdout President Suleiman Franjieh Saturday signed a constitutional amendment allowing the immediate election of a new Lebanese president.

Franjieh's move became a foregone conclusion after the Christian Phalangist party, Lebanon's most powerful rightwing military force, added its voice to the demands of Moslems and leftists for his resignation.

The Christian president's action raised new hopes for an end to the year-long civil war, which has accounted for 100 deaths and 150 injuries in the last 24 hours. Shelling of residential areas subsided to the lowest level in a month.

A presidential announcement made no mention of when Franjieh would actually step down. He has held out against signing the amendment since it was passed by parliament two weeks ago.

Parliamentary speaker Kamal Assad said a House committee would meet Monday to fix a date for parliament to convene to elect a new president. Political sources expect the meeting within the next 10 days.

Leftists, who demanded Franjieh's resignation as part of any pernament peace agreement, immediately said the election of a new president was only a prelude to a political solution.

"The signing of the constitutional amendment has no content or meaning if it is not the first of a series of measures leading to a change in the structure of the government," the leftists' radio station said.

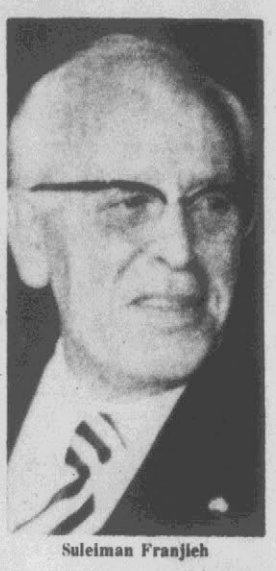

Political sources said Franjieh had a stormy meeting with Phalangist leader, Pierre Gemayel in which the Pahlangist chairman argued that any delay in signing the amendment would lead to further deterioration in the security situation and jeopardize relations with Syria.

Gemayel later said the next step on the road to peace was finding a successor who could "secure the confidence of the majority of Lebanese" and not present a challenge to any Lebanese or Arab faction.

The two most often mentioned candidates ware Raymond Edde, a veteran politician who has leftist support, and Elias Sarkis, the governor of the Central Bank, who has the support of conservatives and also of Syria.

The political maneuverings halted ground fighting between warring factions, except for isolated shooting incidents in some areas.

Palestine Liberation Army troops patrolled buffer zones, set up to separate the warring factions, and the rebel army group of Brig. Gen. Aziz Ahdab said several Lebanese army officers would join the PLA and Syrian army officers charged with policing the cease fire.

Elections In Portugal First In Fifty Years

By NAT GIBSON

LISON, Portugal (UPI)— President Francisco da Costa Gomes dropped the curtain on Portugal's violence-marred campaigns, appealing for a peaceful turn-out today in the nation's first free legislative elections in 50 years.

"It is not with dead and wounded that the Portuguese will build the free, prosperous and socially just country that we all want," he told a natioal television audience Saturday.

The president made his election eve speech after campaining officially ended at midnight with fist fights between conservatices and leftists in several parts of Lisbon. At dawn an explosion and fire at a leftist party headquarters in Coimbra killed an 18-year-old youth, but police said the blaze appeared to have been accidental.

"It was unfortunate that there were acts of violence that objectively could only serve the interests of those who do not want to see the consolidation of pluralistic democracy in Portugal," he said.

The voting today was timed to coincide with the second anniversary of the military coup that toppled the right-wing dictatorship that had ruled Portugal since 1926.

The Socialist and Popular Democratic parties were expected to be the front runners in the voting with the conservative Center Democratic Social party following close behind.

Predictions gave the Communists about 12 per cent of the vote, which also was being contested by eight splinter parties claiming to be more radical than the communists.

More than 6.5 million of the 9 million Portuguese registered to vote, but politicians said the turn-out could fall below the 92 per cent scored in last year's constituent assembly.

Small Turn Out For Protest

By JOHN F. BARTON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Anti-busing protesters roared approval from the steps of the U.S. Capitol Saturday as their leaders from Louisville, Boston and West Virginia urged them to "boycott the system" and demanded judges favoring busing be removed from office.

Capitol police estimated the crowd at from 2,000 to 3,000, well under the 40,000 protesters leaders predicted would turn out. The demonstration was organized by Union Labor Against Busing, a coalition of more than 60 union locals in Louisville.

Jack Shore, a union member from Louisville who wore a "Jackson for President" button, said, "Of course we are disappointed. It's a sign that people in the country are lazy. We have a lot of lazy people in this country."

Those who did march in sweltering heat down Constitution Avenue from near the White House to the steps of the Capitol gave strong support to speakers who demanded busing be stopped and denounced the Departments of Housing and Urban Development and Health Education and Welfare.

Many carried placards bearing photos of Alabama Gov. George Wallace, Confederate flags just below the U.S. flag, and signs declaring "Resist Communist Forced Busing" and "Stop Forced Busing Now."

Boston City Council President Louise Day Hicks said, "I think busing is the primary issue in anybody's campaign today. We are seeing our great cities being torn apart by busing."

"If you stop the forced busing, you will stop the violence," Mrs. Hicks said.

Philip Loving, who described himself as a Catholic minister of service from Detroit, was cheered when he urged the crowd to "withdraw your money from the system" because tax money was being used for busing.

Loving, a black man who said he was a member of the Metro Area Parents of Detroit, said the government was controlled by "a small group of men in this country who want to attain wealth and power ... On the outside they are what I would call respectable men. But on the inside they are dirty men."

Leads Again

RALEIGH (AP) — For the eighth year in a row, North Carolina's defensive driving course has been cited as the best in the nation, state Motor Vehicles Commissioner Edward L. Powell said Friday.

Powell said he was notified of the award by Vincent L. Tofany, president of the National Safety Council.

Record Crowds

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — A record crowd of 28,000 persons visited the Carowinds amusement park near here Saturday, forcing officials to turn away would-be visitors by mid-afternoon.

Police said traffic backed up almost five miles on Interstate 77 north of the exit

Rally Participation

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)— The Faculty Assembly of the University of North Carolina system has called on its members to take part in a rally the North Carolina Association of Educators has planned for May 1 in Raleigh to dramatize the NCAE's demand for a 16 to 19 per cent pay hike for educators.

The assembly, which represents the faculties of all 16 campuses of the university system, approved a resolution calling on faculty members to "attend the May 1 rally as a show of support for a 16 per cent cost-of-living salary adjustment."

Zoo Construction Begun

ASHEBORO, N.C.(AP)—The North Carolina Zoo has begun construction of its first natural habitat for animals.

Gov. Jim Holshouser turned the first shovel of dirt for the zoo's African section at a ground-breaking ceremony Friday.

Shortly afterward, Zoo director William Hoff grabbed a public address system microphone and shouted to a pair of workmen on two nearby bulldozers, "Gentlemen, start your engines."

Tentative Agreement

RALEIGH (AP)—A tentative agreement which is expected to end an 11 day strike by some nurses at the Columbus County Hospital in Whiteville has been announced by state Labor Commissioner T. Avery Nye Jr..

Final approval of the agreement is expected Monday, Nye said Friday. He said that meanwhile the striking nurses have withdrawn their pickets and are expected to begin returning to their jobs over the weekend. Terms of the settlement were not revealed.

Calls For Review

DURHAM (AP) — A thorough review of North Carolina's criminal laws was called for Friday by Howard Lee, candidate for Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor.

In a law day speech at North Carolina Central University, the former Chapel Hill mayor said, "The challenge facing us today is to seriously consider our system of justice to make sure that it continues to protect the welfare and the safety of society. We must insure that our control of crime is swift, just and effective."

Ban On Burning

RALEIGH (AP)—As forest fire danger in North Carolina's woodlands remained severe, a total ban on fires was ordered in all 22 state parks.

Ron Johnson, parks and recreation director, said the burning ban even included smoking.

He said the ban will be lifted as soon as enough rain has fallen to ease the threat of fire.

The parks director said in addition to the fire and smoking ban hiking trails in some of the parks will be closed. Signs will be posted telling visitors which trails are closed.

Meanwhile, the state Forest Service announced that 81 fires were reported in the state's woodlands Friday. This compared with Thursday when 51 fires burned 122 acres.

The Forest Service added that "no relief is in sight in the immediate future" from the hot dry weather which has made the woods dangerously combustible.

State Forester Ralph Winkworth noted that a statewide ban on permits for burning in or near woodlands has been in effect across the entire state since April 9.

"This is the longest period in our history that burning permits have been canceled," Winkworth. He praised the people of the state for their cooperation in making the burning ban effective.

School Board Meets Monday

The regular April meeting of the members of the Greenville City School Board will be held at 8 p.m. Monday, April 26 in the multi-purpose room of Sadie Saulter Elementary School.

Principal agenda items include the 76-77 Greenville City School budget; the election of staff and teacher personnel for the coming school year; and a general review of the curriculum for grades K-12 for the 76-77 school year.

Among other items on the agenda are a status reports on the redistricting system for elementary schools and planning progress on the proposed new middle school.

Defers Hearing

City Manager Jim Caldwell announced that the City Council will not conduct a public hearing on the Blue Law on May 6 as previously scheduled due to a legal advertising error.

Caldwell noted that due to a mistake in the legal advertising on the Blue Law, the rezoning of the Wilbur Harris property located on N. C. 30, and on the amendment to the zoning ordinance concerning mobile homes in Highway Commercial Districts, the hearings will be postponed until June.

According to the city manager, all public hearings held by the Council must be advertised as required by the N. C. General Statutes.

The three items, he added, will be properly advertised and set for public hearings at the June 3 regular meeting of the Council.

Resolution Seeks Reinstatement ECU Bed Tower Funds

A resolution requesting the Board of Governors of the University of North Carolina give "top and number one priority to the reinstatement of funds for a bed tower addition to Pitt Memorial Hospital as clinical facilities for the ECU School of Medicine in the 1977-1978 legislative session" was signed Friday afternoon here.

Signers of the resolution included Pitt County Commissioners and Pitt Memorial Hospital trustees. It will be presented to the UNC Board of Governors, with copies sent to the Governor, the lieutenant governor and the state treasurer.

Displeasure with the removal of the $3.8 million placed in escrow for the bed tower project by a joint House-Senate budget committee was voiced at the hospital trustee meeting last Tuesday.

The board met with Sen. Vernon White and Representatives Horton Rountree and Sam Bundy Thursday night to discuss the situation. The Thursday meeting was held in place of a meeting earlier scheduled for April 26.

Hospital administrator Jack Richardson said in essence, the resolution expresses the realization that the state faces a "critical tax situation . . . and budgetary needs" this year, but at the same time, he said, asks the Board of Governors to make reinstatement of the $3.8 million "number one in capital funding requests for 1977 . . . insuring replacement of these funds."

According to Richardson, preliminary timetables call for the additonal bed space to be needed in the "early 1980's," with a "two year contruction phase."

Helicopter With 12 Aboard

Crashes Off Louisiana Coast

CAMERON, La. (AP)—A helicopter carrying 12 persons to an oil company drilling platform crashed into the Gulf of Mexico on Friday and searchers said there was no sign of survivors. It was the second tragedy involving Louisiana offshore oil workers in eight days.

Four bodies were found floating amid debris from the helicopter. Teams are searching for eight others.

"We feel there were no survivors," said Jim Michell, personnel director for Petroleum Helicopters Inc. which owned the Bell 205. The craft went down 60 miles south of Cameron, a small town on the Louisiana coast near the Texas border.

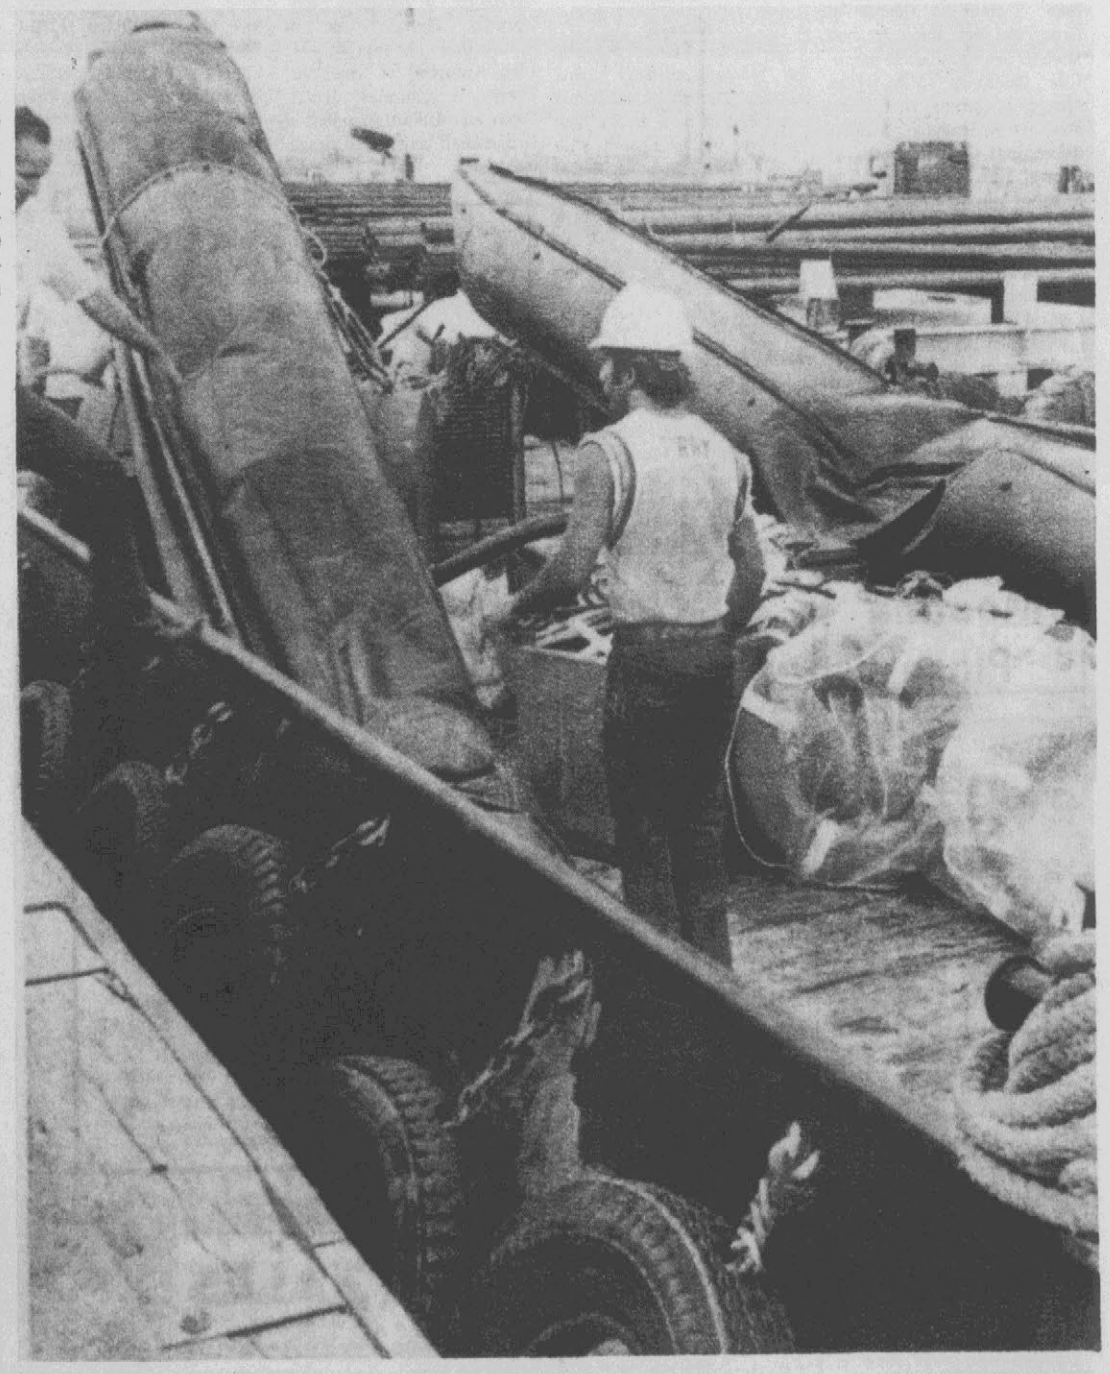

In New Orleans, word of the deaths rippled through a Coast Guard hearing where testimony was being taken about the sinking of an offshore oil rig last Thursday. Thirteen persons died in that incident.

A spokesman for Petroleum Helicopters said there was no indication as to why the craft went down. A dispatcher monitoring the radio said he heard a switch click open on a microphone and then heard a loud noise.

The helicopter shattered in the crash. Rescue teams, who reached the scene in minutes, said they found parts of the fuselage and rudder.

The pilot was identified as Walter Barger of Nederland, Tex. Other workers, employed by Dolphin International Inc., of Lafayette, La., were not immediately identified.

Court Keeps Campaign Funds Closed

By CHRIS CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ignoring the pleas of seven presidential candidates for over $1.4 million in matching funds, the Supreme Court is keeping the government's campaign fund spigot closed tight.

The court refused on Friday to allow the Federal Election Commission to pay out the funds to presidential candidates and their parties until Congress and President Ford agree on a bill to revive the FEC.

The court's decision increases the financial pressure on Republican challenger Ronald Reagan and six Democratic candidates, who asked the high court to allow the funds to flow again. Ford has a $910,000 request pending with the FEC, but did not join in the court action.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said in Lincoln, Neb., it was "unconscionable" for the FEC funds to be held up.

"It may not hurt the President, but the other candidates in both parties are hurting because they expect matching funds," said Church, who said he is due more than $75,000.

The Supreme Court decision came on a motion filed by the seven candidates and the Democratic National Committee. The high court issued orders in January for the FEC to be reconstituted. But while Congress worked over a bill to do that, the commission lost its powers to disburse the matching funds.

Both houses have passed differing versions of a bill to reconstitute the commission, and a House-Senate conference is to iron out the differences next week. Ford has indicated he may veto the bill.

Three Wrecks Investigated

Three automobile mishaps were investigated by Greenville Police involving an estimated $2,850 in total damage.

The heaviest damage occurred early Saturday morning at the dead end on Ninth Street. A car driven by Donnie Ray Williams ran into a fence, sign and tree on the East Carolina University campus. Police estimated damage at $2,000 to the car and $300 to the fence, sign and tree. Williams was charged with careless and reckless driving.

Cars driven by Marvin Hoyle Turner Jr. of 1003 Overlook Dr. and Lori Ann Smith of Raleigh collided Friday morning at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Evans Streets. Police estimated damage to the Smith vehicle at $375. No damage was reported to the Turner car and no charges were filed.

In another Friday morning accident, cars driven by Beverly Ennis Spence of Williamston and Joseph Linwood Jenkins of 201 S. Nichols Dr. collided at the intersection of Second and Cotanche Streets. No charges were filed in the wreck which caused an estimated $100 damage to the Spence car and $150 to Jenkins' auto.

Charlotte Man Shot

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — A Charlotte man was found shot to death off a city street Saturday and police said he may have been killed with his own gun.

Police identified the victim as Ralph Littlejohn, who had been under investigation for allegations of illegal drug sales. Officers said Littlejohn had been known to carry a pistol and that .22 caliber cartridges were found in his pocket, though there was no weapon on the body.

Warns "Innocent" Whites To Leave Rhodesia

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Ugandan President Idi Amin Saturday warned all "innocent" whites to leave Rhodesia quickly "or identify yourselves with the black majority," Radio Uganda reported.

Amin said black nationalist guerrillas have received fresh military supplies and "it will not be long before freedom fighters take decisive military action" to overthrow Rhodesia's white supremacy regime.

The monitored broadcast coincided with reports of new violence in Rhodesia and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's departure on an African tour aimed in part at promoting a peaceful transition to black rule in that divided nation.

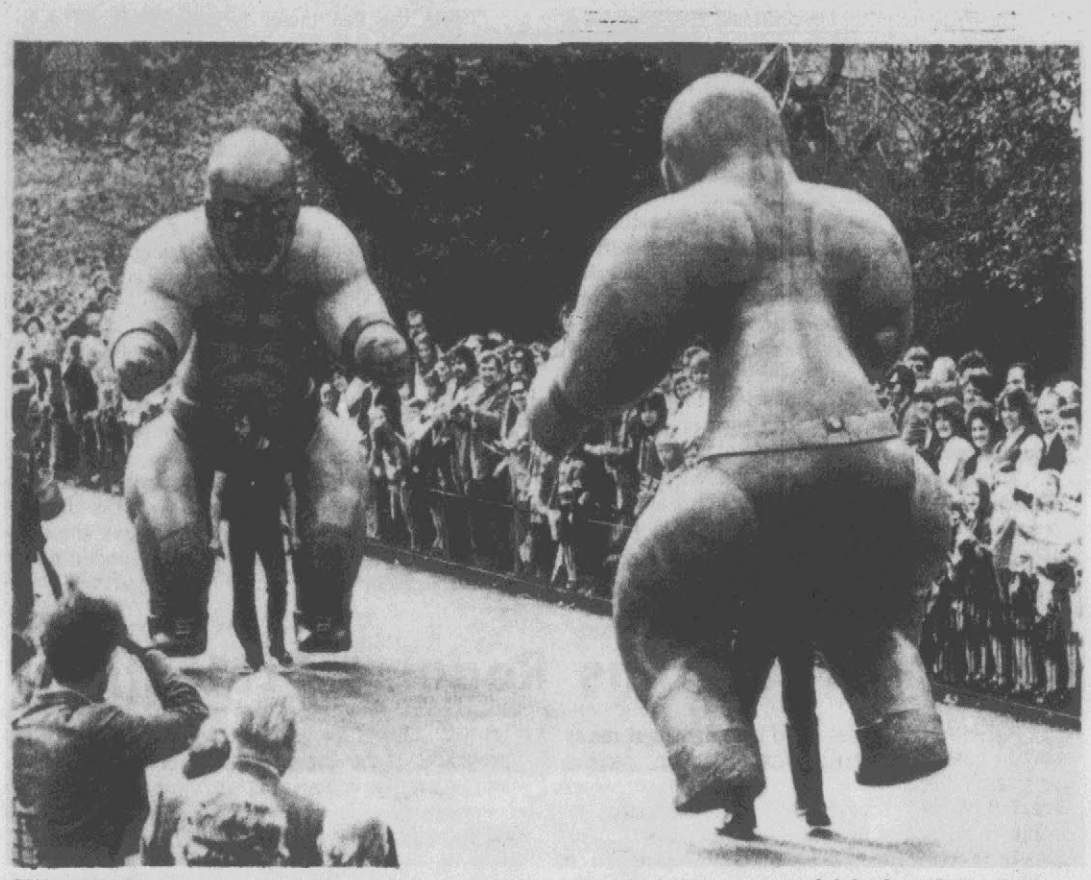

In Salisbury, security forces said Saturday black guerrillas killed one soldier and seriously wounded two others in an ambush in southeastern Rhodesia. Two guerrillas were killed in the clash, security forces said.

Amin, chairman of the 47-nation Organization of African Unity, warned "all innocent Europeans to get out (of Rhodesia) quickly or identify yourselves with the black majority," Radio Uganda said.

Otherwise, Amin said, the whites would have only themselves to blame for the coming bloodbath.

The warning came shortly before Kissinger was due in Kenya on the first leg of a seven-nation African tour. Uganda is not on his itinerary.

Amin previously attacked Kissinger's trip, calling the secretary a "murderer of Palestinians and Africans" and warning other African leaders that Kissinger was trying to promote a policy of "divide and rule" among them.

Urges Pressure

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A top California labor official is urging Democratic leaders, including Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., to pressure the city's Board of Supervisors into resuming negotiations with striking city workers.

In telegrams sent Friday to eight party leaders, Executive Secretary John F. Henning of the AFL-CIO California Labor Federation urged the officials to "use your personal influence to persuade the Democrats who control the San Francisco Board of Supervisors to open negotiations at once in order to end the crisis that has partially paralyzed the city government."

Asks For Reassessment

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — West Germany has indicated that black African states will have to back off from last year's anti-Zionism resolution if they want Western support for the U.N. drive on racial discrimination.

West Germany's Dietrich von Kyaw Friday urged a "reassessment" of the resolution, which defined Zionism as a form of racism, "in order to undo the harm done" to the U.N. Decade for Action to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination (1973-1983).

Demo Platform Issues

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Detroit Mayor Coleman Young and Rep. Brock Adams, chairman of the House Budget Committee, argued Saturday whether cutting the federal deficit should be a high priority in the Democratic party's 1976 platform.

They were among 66 witnesses — including union officials, feminist Gloria Steinem, farmers, politicians and rank-and-filed Democrats— to testify before the third of four regional hearings held by the Democratic Platform Committee.

Claims U.S. Evasions

JAKARTA (AP) — South Vietnam today accused the United States of evading its obligation to help in its reconstruction.

Tran Duong, the leader of the South Vietnamese delegation to the Asian Development Bank — ADB — meeting, said the United States "went too far" by placing an embargo on Vietnam and by freezing all assets and accounts of South Vietnamese banks and individuals.

CD Party Accuses U.S.

ROME (UPI) — Stung by charges that an Italian premier took Lockheed bribe money, the ruling Christian Democratic party accused Americans Saturday of trying to undermine Italy's economic and political system.

It also attacked Sen. Frank Church of Idaho, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, as "an immature and irresponsible" publicityseeker.

Police Indicted

MOBILE, Ala. (UPI) — Five Mobile police officers were indicted Saturday for threatening to lynch a black robbery suspect.

The five policemen, all white, were charged with assault and battery of Glenn Diamond, 27, of Prichard, on the night of March 28.

Hunger Strike Continues

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — The hunger strike being waged by most of the death row inmates at the Central Correctional Institution showed little sign of abating Saturday.

Only a handful of the 20 men condemned to die in the electric chair have been eating the meals being routinely brought in by prison officials. The inmates are protesting a tightening of security in the cells, which includes loss of certain privileges for the prisoners.

The regulations are being tightened in what one prison official called a "security crackdown" because of the increase of persons sentenced to death in the state. The new regulations become effective May 1, and follow the moving of the inmates from the first floor of one cell block to a second level.

Through the hunger strike, the inmates said they hope to focus attention on the changes they feel are too restrictive.

Sam McCuen, spokesman for the Department of Corrections, said prison officials have no plans to do anything about the hunger strike.

"The food is there for them to eat," he said. "if they don't want to eat it, that's okay. We will continue to put food in the cells."

McCuen said prison officials "aren't too concerned" about the fast and said a few more men ate lunch Saturday than on Friday, the day the strike began.

McCuen said 17 of the 20 prisoners failed to each the noon meal on Friday, while 13 refused to eat Friday night and 17 refused to eat Saturday morning.

He said 15 men refused to eat Saturday lunch, and said it is the same handful of inmates who are continuing to eat meals.

Leaders in the hunger strike appear to be Jack Leland Allen for the white inmates and Frederick C. Davis for the black inmates. There are a few more blacks than whites on death row in South Carolina, and all are men.

All 20 were convicted of murder.

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — Gov. James B. Edwards' attempt to committ the entire South Carolina delegation to Ronald Reagan fell victim to an adverse parliamentary ruling Saturday but the former California governor was till expected to get a majority of the delegates.

Edwards, who has longed described himself as a "Ronald Reagan Republican," asked the convention to invoke the unit rule. Under that rule, the state's 36 delegates would be required to vote as a block for the candidate a majority of them wanted to support.

If the rule had been invoked, Reagan would then have gotten all 36 votes at the convention because the majority of the delegation is expected to back him.

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Alabama Gov. George Wallace, on the last stop of a two-day, 10-city campaign tour of Texas, Saturday told a smattering of supporters some of the country's leaders have "paralysis of the head."

Wallace talked briefly with reporters during a late news conference attended by about 150 supporters. After the news conference, he flew to Philadelphia to appear on the television interview show "Issues and Answers" with other presidential candidates. The show will air today on ABC.

Wallace, who supports upgrading U.S. military strength, said his chief Democratic opponent in Texas — former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter — campaigned in liberal Massachusetts by advocating trimming $15 billion from the military budget.

"If you cut $15 billion out, chances are we'll give it away to somebody 15,000 miles away who spat in our face in Vietnam and other places," Wallace said.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Ronald Reagan's forces made it a near sweep in the Arizona State Republican Convention Saturday, obtaining 27 of the state's 29 delegate votes.

In the four congressional districts, Reagan captured 11 of the 12 delegates. In the at-large selection process, he won 16 of 17. The other two votes went to President Ford.

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—Jimmy Carter challenges the combined forces of organized labor and the party machine in Pennsylvania's primary Tuesday. Another victory could end the presidential dreams of Henry Jackson and Morris Udall.

Should Carter score a clear-cut win in the third largest state, it could loose a surge by the former governor of Georgia for the Democratic presidential nomination and leave the Jackson and Udall candidacies in shambles.

Dies From Wreck Injury

A Farmville man, injured Saturday morning in an automobile accident, died Saturday afternoon in Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

The victim was identified as Johnny Earl Johnson of 406 S. Barrett St. in Farmville. He was involved in a one-car accident early Saturday morning when the car he was driving went out of control on U.S. 264A just east of Farmville. The car ran off the road and into a ditch. Johnson died of severe head injuries suffered in the accident.

Foster Parents Held Meeting In Greenville

Dr. Walter Ward, physician on the staff of Bowman-Gray Medical School, was the keynote speaker Saturday at the day long meeting of the N.C. Foster Parents Association held at St. James United Methodist Church.

Panelists for discussions were Miss Carol Silibant, Direcotr of Social Services, Raleigh; Miss Margaret Wright, Regional Division of the Office for Children, Winston-Salem; Maurice Whitaker, Regional Division of the Office for Children, Greenville; and Mrs. Sarah Allen, Field Consultant of the Greenville office of the Office for Children.

Foster parents, state and regional representatives from across the state were in attendance.

The purpose of the association is to create interest in recruiting quality foster parents for children. Those attending Saturday's meeting shared discussions on problems and solutions to problems during the day long session.

Anyone interested in information on the N.C. Foster Parents Association should contact the state president, David Swygert, P.O. Box 10533, Charlotte, N.C. 28234.

To Establish More Thorough Procedures For Parolees

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The chairman of the state Board of Paroles says the panel will meet this week to establish more thorough procedures for evaluating potential prison paroles, particularly repeat offenders.

Parole Board Chairman Jack Scism's announcement of the meeting was made Friday, three days after a 32-year-old parolee from the Huntersville Prison Unit was arrested and charged with murder and kidnapping in the mutilation-slaying of Vickey McKinney, a 19-year-old Charlotte coed.

The parolee, Leroy Johnson, was set free Nov. 21 after serving 10 years of an 18-year prison sentence on a number of convictions. The 18-year prison sentence was a consolidation of a number of sentences which, if served concurrently, would have meant a total of 70 years behind bars.

The results of an autopsy on Miss McKinney were released Friday and revealed she had been raped. Police also said she had been shot at least once and that her body was mutilated.

"If he's guilty we obviously made a mistake when we paroled him," Scism said. "We'll set up procedures which will be more thorough on repeated offenders and we'll look more carefully for hidden things in the prisoner's background."

Speaking in Rocky Mount Friday night, Scism said 70 per cent of the prisoners successfully complete their paroles. He said the parole board is criticized from both ends — those who want paroles made easier to obtain and police officers who feel criminals should receive longer sentences.

"The parole board is getting criticized because no one sees its successes and only the failures are publicized," said Scism.

In an earlier intrview Thursday, Scism said that psychological tests ordered in 1965 when Johnson was arrested on kidnapping and armed robbery charges were never sent to the parole board before the man was freed. The tests indicated Johnson was "irritable and hostile," a frequent user of drugs and had a subnormal intelligence.

TM Program Plans Set

Eddie D. Bright has announced plans to teach the Transcendental meditation Programme in eastern North Carolina. He will be teaching courses in Raleigh and also helping to establish and teach courses in the New Bern, Washington, and Greenville areas.

A graduate of Farm Life High School in Vanceboro and Mount Olive College, Bright attended Maharishi International University in Fairfield, Iowa for nine months and worked for three months in Chapel Hill. He has just returned from France where he completed the final phase of study to qualify as a teacher of the T.M. Technique.

Valid Concerns For The Board

The Pitt Memorial Hospital board of trustees is most concerned about the recommendation that $3.8 million be dropped from the ECU Medical School appropriation.

The funds are there to finance a third bed tower for the new hospital. The board has called a meeting for Monday with eastern legislators to discuss the cut in the funds.

It is expected that the funds will be restored in the 1977-79 budget, but as one hospital official pointed out, there is nothing binding about this understanding. One Legislature can't bind a future Legislature to an appropriation.

There was also concern expressed that the slash in the appropriations could be the opening wedge for the die-hard opponents of the school to get a foot in the door and bring about still further cuts which would hopelessly cripple the school's development.

These concerns are very valid and we commend the hospital's board of trustees for being alert to the potential dangers to the hospital's and the medical school's development.

While the bed tower is designated for construction at an indefinite time in the future, it may be needed more quickly than anyone thinks. There will, after all be a number of new physicians coming here as faculty members of the medical school and that will mean new patient loads at the hospital as it becomes a regional referral center. Thus we could be hard pressed for bed space in a relatively short time.

Since nothing can be made binding concerning the 1977-79 budget we are accepting on faith the understanding that the funds will be restored in time to finance the construction.

On the other hand the medical school would not be, if it had not been for the staunch support of legislative leaders through some of the most withering and, we think, unwarranted criticism ever unleashed in this state.

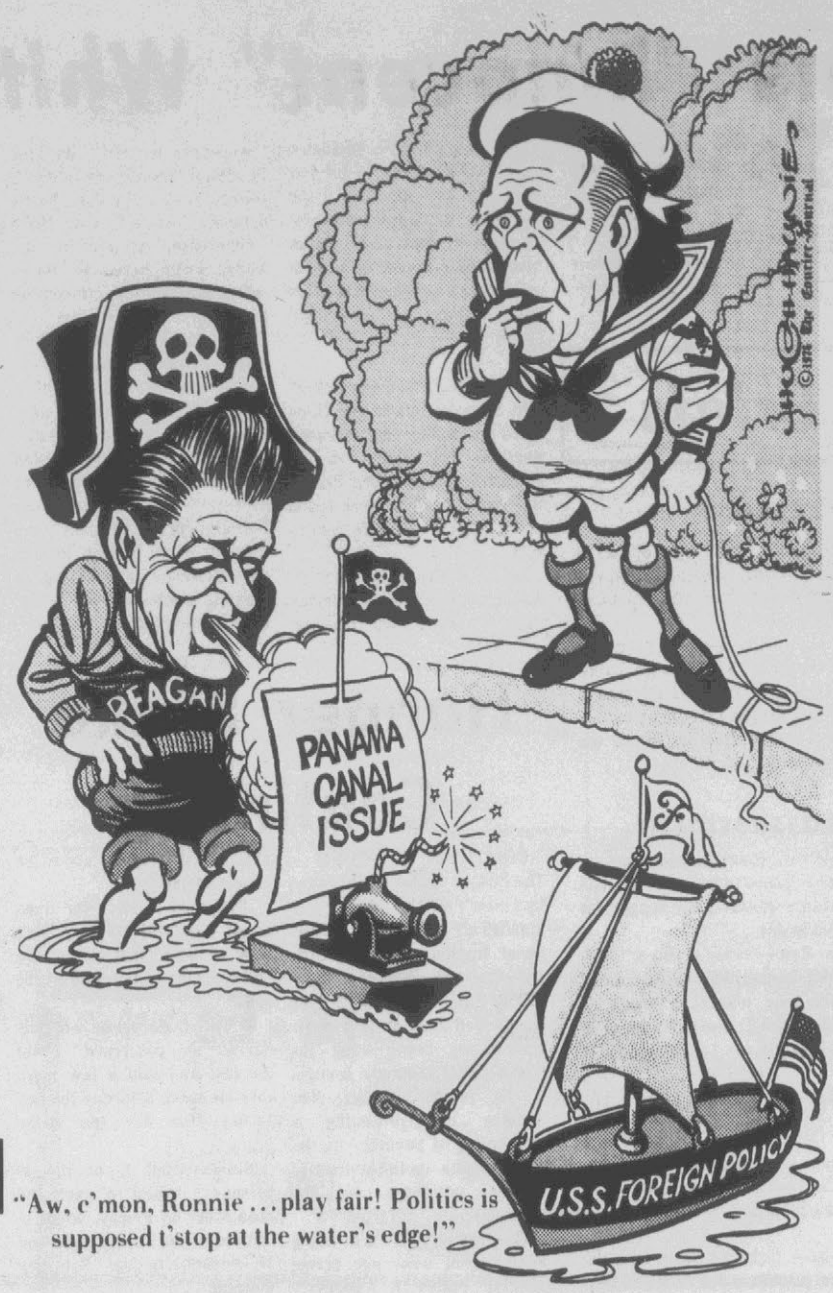

Given that and given the assurance that the cut will not affect the accreditation progress of the medical school, we would have to believe the understanding that the project will be re-funded next year is to be honored.

Pension Programs Require Protection

Recent news stories have indicated that many small businesses are dropping their pension programs because of the cost and paper work created by the Federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.

It is regrettable that this act, designed to protect the employe's interests in a pension program, is having the effect of costing some employees the entire program.

There must be ways that administration of ERISA can be simplified, and Congress should study this problem immediately.

THIS AFTERNOON

The Treasurer's Bombshell

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—State Treasurer Edwin Gill invited the leadership of the General Assembly to his office in the Albemarle Building on a recent early morning to drop a bombshell in their laps.

He had no intention to doing so, literally. Nonetheless, in the course of the meeting, a telephoned bomb threat was received in the building, and treasurer, lieutenant governor, speaker, and the rest had to hastily adjourn to other quarters.

The Real Bomb

Legislators weren't nearly as scared by the telephone call as by the news which Gill handed them: Blue Cross and Blue Shield, which handles the hospital-medical insurance for state employees, is raising rates.

The total bill for this coming fiscal year will be $7.5 million higher than anticipated, and that is for just nine months of the year, since the hike would take effect October 1. The total annual bill for employee insurance runs more than $40 million; dependent coverage is paid by the employee, in addition.

At a time when legislators are trying to cut the budget, raise new funds, and provide a raise for teachers and other state employees, Mr. Gill's news was bad, indeed.

"This request for more money during these difficult budgetary times does not give me any pleasure and, I assure you, I would not make such a request except for my concern for the well-being of our teachers and state employees," the treasurer said. He also outlined three options: reduce the insurance coverage to cut cost; let the employees pay the increased cost; or increase state spending for the insurance. He recommended the state increase its spending.

Legislators will lean toward that solution, but some are already figuring the dollars will have to come out of the pay raise which employees have been promised—such fringes are, after all, a part of the benefits and paying out $7.5 million more for insurance will just have to come off the raise, some legislators say.

Bonus, Instead

Meanwhile, the tax withholding idea put forth by Lt. Gov. James B. Hunt and endorsed by Gov. James E. Holshouser that some $75 million from the next fiscal year be pulled into the 1976-77 fiscal year and spent for pay raises is beginning to raise legislative eyebrows.

There has been little public reaction, but there is a growing mood that using next year's money for this year's expenses—which would also have to be paid next year if spent for a recurring item like pay raises—is not a very good suggestion.

Those legislators who have studied the proposal now conclude that problems outweigh merits: it would be a gamble on increased income next year; the raises plus other necessary increased spending piles up into the foundation for increased spending in the following year so that in two or three years the shock is great; and budget cutting efforts are proving futile in terms of amassing big dollars.

Additionally, several responsible lawmakers now conclude that while any tax hike proposal—even one on luxuries and alcohol—would be political suicide in an election year, that is really the only way out. If a substantial pay raise is to be given.

Some are beginning to believe that following Hunt's suggestion will inevitably lock the General Assembly into a hefty tax increase in 1978 or 1979 as the "future shock" of the scheme multiplies.

There is a growing mood in the legislature to bypass a recurring salary raise in favor of a $500 bonus for each state employee—that would be paid once and not guaranteed to keep the budget at a higher level in future years. Some sly politicians also see it as a method whereby employees next year would end up fighting for another bonus rather than seeking an even higher salary increase.

Sunday Morning Notes

Carl Whitfield, field representative with the Governor's Safety Program who is stationed in Greenville was going to Nags Head via Currituck County recently.

On a long bridge he came up behind a Model A Ford coupe in which two men were riding.

The ancient car caught Whitefield's attention. Then Whitfield, a retired highway patrolman, noticed that the car was swinging wildly from one side of the bridge to the other.

Fearful for his own safety and for others, Whitfield dropped his car back some distance from the old Ford and cut on his blinker lights to warn other motorists as best he could.

The swinging back and forth continued across both lanes of the bridge until the car reached the other side.

Then the vehicle pulled quickly into a service station and, as it did, the radiator erupted, sending a geyser of water skyward.

The exasperated Whitfield pulled in behind. He explained that he was not a policeman but he was a retired officer.

"What kind of driving were you doing back on that bridge?" Whitfield asked the man.

The man replied as only Hoigh Toiders can;

"Well it was running hot and I tried to hold it in the wind. I threw it to the starboard side and then to the port side."

Whitfield broke up. "I thought you were drunk," he laughed.

He exhibited a change of address mailing. It carried a Post Office stamp of April 25.

"No more complaints about the Post Office," he said "It's dated April 25 and we've already got it on April 19."

That's service.

We were feeling pretty good about the Postal Service — until News Editor Don Schlienz came up the same day with a Gallup Poll special delivery letter.

That one carried the postmark of April 12, and took seven days to get here.

On To Washington

(Chapel Hill Newspaper)

The largest journalism school in the United States these days doesn't even have a dean or faculty. It is located in Washington, D.C., and anyone who has lived there for a year or longer is eligible to write a book. Previous training is unnecessary; the important thing is being at the right place at the right time. Right now, somewhere in that wide expanse, several hundred people are writing books about women who have had affairs with former presidents. Othere are writing books about affairs with senators and congressmen and members of the cabinet, or just plain affairs.

The Washington core of journalism graduates only compose a small group who deal in sex. Already over a hundred books have been written about Watergate. People are waiting with baited breath as to what Martha Mitchell will have to say about the whole thing, and some publisher will be at John Mitchell's door waving money and asking for a rebuttal. All the dirty things written in the world used to be fiction. Now fiction is mild compared to some of the factual reporting out of Washington.

Washington dooropeners and doorclosers, cooks and waiters, butlers and maids, taxi cab drivers, bellhops and bell captains turn into prolific writers overnight. All they need to know is a little scandal, find a publisher with a little dough, and the sky is the limit. Robert Parker, who labored for thirteen years as maie d' of the Senate dining room, has just been offered an advance of $50,000 to tell all.

Once we decide to leave Dodge City and take it a bit easier, we might move on to Washington. By that time we will have to come up with a new idea, one that will immediately get the public's attention. As a starter we thought we might call our little offering, "How we spent a year in Washington and didn't discover anything." There are a score of senators and congressmen who can furnish us with the basic information. The rest can be just plain fiction similar to the truths and halftruths we have been reading for the past couple of years.

Better Way Is Sought

By ROBERT MUSEL

MAIDSTONE, England (UPI) — One day Nick Stacey, director of Social Services for the County of Kent, was studying figures showing it cost $100 a week to keep one person in a home for the aged and $120 a week to keep an inmate in a mental hostel.

There must, he thought, be a better way of utilizing the hundreds of thousands of pounds this was costing for what was obviously not the happiest way of dealing with the problems of the old and mentally ill.

Why not, he wondered, offer this money instead to volunteers who wanted to help the helpless but could not afford the time off from work it would require?

If this could be done those who could be treated at home would have the security of their own surroundings and only intractable cases would have to go to institutions.

Out of these thoughts emerged what is called "The Special Community Care Project," now in the final stages of choosing 200 people in need of help to test whether the theory will work in practice.

They will be divided into two equal groups. The first 100 will be assisted by volunteers who will be paid by the Social Services Department. The second 100 will be sent to the kind of institutions to which they normally would have been admitted.

The experiences of these two groups will be used as a yardstick to determine whether

40 Years Ago Today

April 25, 1936

Ralph M. Garrett, president of the Person-Garrett Tobacco Company, said today that the war scare across the continent was not as bad as was feared in the U.S. and probably would not hurt foreign sales of American tobacco.

Garrett recently returned from a tour of Europe in the interest of the tobacco industry. The chief country he visited was England, which receives a large percentage of tobacco sold to foreign countries. About 60 percent of the tobacco sold in local warehouses goes to foreign markets.

However, England is now beginning to buy more of its tobacco from its colonial possessions, Garrett said. Therefore, the American tobacco is growing less in demand.

"While English colonies have been growing tobacco for some time, they have gone in for raising the weed on a more extensive scale," the tobacconist stated. He added that Canada, South Africa and India are also growing tobacco in increasing quantities now, threatening America's sales to England.

The China market has collapsed completely, according to Garrett. This leaves England as the main foreign market left open to American-grown tobacco.

Garrett said that, in his opinion, the way for local growers to secure a good price for their product is to reduce their acreage. Too much tobacco, he explained, will almost certainly reduce the price offered to growers.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Barbarians At The Gates

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

FORT WORTH — Ronald Reagan's noon rally in downtown Fort Worth last week was most ominous for President Ford not for what was said but for who was there: former campaign workers of Gov. George C. Wallace seated on the platform and a goodly number of Wallaceites in the crowd.

The remarkable gathering of over 3,000 lacked the sleek, chic look of Texas Republicans and seemed much more like a typical Wallace rally—women in house dresses, sport-shirted men, lots of small American flags. If the virtual collapse of Wallace's candidacy is sending right-wing populist Democrats across party lines to Reagan, President Ford is in deepening trouble here.

Portents of a record Republican turnout in the May 1 primary suggest the Wallaceite crossover. Combine that with Reagan's increasingly vigorous attack on the President and continued bumbling by the Ford high command, and Mr. Ford might well lose the primary that would at least keep Reagan alive and perhaps restore his momentum. "If we lose here," one Ford insider confided to us, "it's going to be a long spring and summer."

Nobody can accurately forecast this state's first real Republican presidential primary, partly because nobody knows who will enter Republican polling booths in the absence of party registration. No longer are Ford Republicans even certain that Texas Democrats would never forsake their own primary with all those juicy sheriff's races.

That certainty has been eroded by remarkable campaign crowds drawn by Reagan — some 700 last week at Harlingen on the Mexican border, formerly no man's land for Republicans. Unprecedented Republican absentee voting — surpassing Democratic totals in Houston, Dallas and San Antonio — prompts Republican state chairman Ray Hutchinson to predict a Republican turnout exceeding 300,000 (compared to a previous high of 114,000 in 1972). Private polls (not Reagan's) point to a possible 400,000 votes with heavy Wallace-to-Reagan switches.

This crossover is being promoted by the campaigning of a Reagan far more self-assured and combative than in the early New Hampshire days. Reagan's most potent point has been his contrasting of Mr. Ford's campaign promises about retaining the Panama Canal with actual negotiations to ultimately transfer operations to Panama. That fits Reagan's broader theme: that Mr. Ford takes different positions on the campaign trail and back in Washington on one issue after another.

The new element introduced at Fort Worth last week was the charge that the President, while posing as a fiscal conservative, favors liberalized welfare payments. "Sometimes you wonder how many times you're going to be deceived," says Reagan. Thus, his Reagan. Thus, his indictment is of duplicity in sinister Washington unknown to Texans. "Who are these people in Washington," asks Reagan, "to tell us that we might be frightened or panicked by hearing the truth about our problems?"

Strength For Today

SUCCESS IN FAILURE

Many years ago a private diary kept by a Swiss professor, Auguste Amiel, became one of the great masterpieces of Swiss literature. They way in which it reached this eminence tells us something about the relative nature of success and failure.

As a youth Amiel was very precocious. His family sent him to the university, and everyone expected great things from him. But none of these hopes came true. Although he became a professor, Amiel produced no great works and made little impression upon his colleagues and students.

But secretly he was keeping a journal in which he was analyzing himself and the meaning of success. After his death the journal was published and proved to be not only great literature, but encouragement and support to thousands who believed themselves to be failures. Ironically, Amiel achieved outward success by convincing thousands that success was an inward matter of personal conviction.

Benefits Of Goodwill Gained

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — In the 1971-1972 fiscal year, corporations underwrote $2 million of programming on public television. In the 1975-1976 year they invested more than six times that amount in the noncommercial medium.

A good deal of this money was offered to the nonprofit stations in the spirit of good citizenship by corporations recognizing that they share in and must contribute to the betterment of society.

But some of the money undoubtedly was channeled for strictly commercial reasons — because public television has developed a high degree of credibility, and a greatly desired, affluent-influential audience.

The increasing support of corporations is being viewed in two ways:

In the most positive view, the support is encouraging because it helps diversify the source of contributions to public television, and thus reduces the risk that any one group, including government, will control the medium.

What critics fear could become a negative side of the story is that some corporations might tend to be interested only in the ability of the medium to develop sales, and thus gradually and subtly begin to influence programming.

Frank Little, Public Broadcast Service vice president for development, doesn't think this will happen. "They give us the money and they have no control over the program," he said. "The projects always originate with us."

Little, whose organization disseminates throughout a link of 265 outlets the best programs developed by individual stations, independent producers and foreign broadcasters, is aggressively seeking corporate support.

He notes that "a lot of people have been trying to infer for years that corporations contributing enormous amounts of money would like to control the product, but they understand at the outset that they have no control."

At best, he said, "It gives them an opportunity to make a significant gift to the American public and to reap enormous amounts of corporate goodwill."

Can this be construed negatively? "Lots of people like to pick holes," he said, "but corporate underwriting is responsible for some of the most significant TV offerings we've been able to present."

Programs such as "The Ascent of Man," "Nova," Alistair Cooke's "America," Shakespeare's "Much Ado About Nothing," Henry Fonda as Clarence Darrow, and "The Adams Chronicles" were financed through grants from, respectively, Mobil, Polaroid, Xerox, IBM (twice) and Atlantic Richfield.

The only mention of the corporate underwriter in any of these programs is recognition at the beginning and end of the production, and then only briefly.

What many companies have discovered is that no advertising sometimes is the best advertising.

Mail Center Good Target

By LES SEAGO
Associated Press Writer

MEMPHIS (AP)—It's called a "Bulk Mail Center" and it makes a good target for critics, skeptics and Postal Service naysayers.

The center is big, expensive and processes almost 300,000 packages a day for 12 Southern states. There's plenty of opportunity for error.

Covering almost 400,000 square feet, surrounded by high chain-link fences and patroled by pistol-carrying security guards, the Memphis Bulk Mail Center and 20 others just like it across the country have been drawing a lot of criticism lately.

Packages that have gone into the center have come out as trash. Other packages have simply disappeared in the center's five miles of computer-operated conveyor belts.

One congressman, Rep. Charles H. Wilson, D-Calif., called the bulk mail system "a management plunger of the first magnitude."

The people running the $33 million Memphis Bulk Mail Center don't contend that the system has operated without error.

"We're not happy with the damage," said D. Robert Hoffman, the center's customer service manager.

"We had some difficult problems when we started up," he said. "We had a learning curve and a maintenance problem...But we like to think things aren't as bad as they were when we first got started."

The Associated Press recently made an unannounced visit to the Memphis Center to look into reports of damaged parcels, mismanagement and severe maintenance problems.

Hoffman and Jack Dodson, the center's general manager, were not reluctant to discuss their problems as well as their successes.

Dodson, Hoffman and most other high-ranking officials of the bulk mail system are not longtime career postal employes. Both have backgrounds in industry, engineering and electronics and came to the Postal Service when the bulk mail handling system was created three years ago.

"We're doing something completely new here," Dodson said. "It was completely different from what the Post Office had been doing."

The bulk mail system was set up to take packages—2nd, 3rd and 4th class mail—out of the postal mainstream, sort them with the aid of computers and distribute them.

It costs about $1 million a month to operate the center— about 10 cents a package—and Dodson said he is pleased with improvements since the center began processing packages in September.

By Christmas, the center was operating at 160 per cent of its scheduled load, processing packages for Tennessee, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, North and South Carolina, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and a portion of Kansas.

"We kind of learn as we go," Dodson said. "There have been monumental pressures, but I'm amazed at the morale of our people."

Inside the cavernous building, conveyor belts carry packages from the 32 unloading docks through a maze of sorting stations that aim them toward other bulk mail centers or to Post Offices within the 12 Southern states served by the Memphis center.

At the sorting stations, a package slides down a great steel incline and onto a moving belt that whips it past a worker who reads the destination zip code and punches it into the computer.

The moving belt deposits the package onto a tray drawn along an overhead rail. If everything goes well, the computer tilts the tray at the proper drop point and the package is loaded into a truck headed for its destination.

"We take a damage rate of about four-tenths of one per cent, but you take four-tenths of one per cent of 28,000 packages (1,120) a day and you still have an awful lot of damage," Hoffman said.

Mail handlers pull damaged parcels from the conveyor belts anywhere in the system. Some are given first aid— a quick tape job— and placed back in the system immediately.

"It's all included in that fourtenths of a per cent," Hoffman said.

The damage rate has been higher and some mail wound up in the Memphis sanitary landfill as trash early this year.

Postal inspectors are still looking into that incident which drew widespread attention from news media.

"I can't comment on that because the inspectors are on the case," Dodson said. "But I can say that we have taken steps— expensive steps— to see that it doesn't happen again."

Now all trash from the sorting center is inspected by postal supervisors before it is allowed to go out the door.

Standing on a catwalk over one sorting station, Hoffman pointed to a cardboard box that burst as it tumbled down the steel slide. Out popped a 40-lb universal joint for a tractor.

Some of the President's tacticians in Washington feel Reagan is going over to the right fringe, outside the national consensus. But Ford backers in Texas do not disagree basically with Reagan's pronouncements — only with his supporters.

Establishment Republicans complain Reagan has surrendered his Texas campaign to right-wing extremists. They consider Ray Barnhart, Harris County (Houston) Republican chairman and Reagan's state oc-chairman, too far to the right. Hank Grover, former candidate for governor now campaigning hard for Reagan, is viewed well to Barnhart's right. Beyond even Barnhart and Grover are those very un-Republican Wallace populists ready to intrude into the Republican primary May 1.

This apprehension of the barbarians at the gates is enhanced by the vow of local Reaganite leaders to deny Sen. John Tower, Mr. Republican in Texas for 15 years, an at-large seat on the state delegation. Purging Tower suggests a change in party control from the genteel conservations of Dallas to the populist right-wingers of Houston.

Simultaneously, there is accumulated dismay among establishment Republicans over Ford campaign blunders, notably the President's signing of the energy bill. When the Dallas Times-Herald last week bannered a story that Ford campaign manager Rogers Morton had all but ruled out Texan John B. Connally for Vice President, the President's Texas supporters were apoplectic. Indeed, some regular luncheon diners at the Dallas Club round table that day were so furious they announced a Ford-to-Reagan switch.

The dilemma this poses is typified by one prominent Republican pondering the state of politics the other day in the 49th floor Petroleum Club. Because of ties to the oil industry, he could not publicly support Mr. Ford following the energy bill approval. Now, he was angered and puzzled by Morton's slight to Connally. But he could never back Reagan, if only because of his Texas supporters — "a bunch of damn kooks."

The superior Ford organization, using telephone banks and targeting strategic areas, might yet prevail — aided by the excitement generated by another presidential visit to Texas next week. But not if Reagan's rhetoric has entranced all those Wallace Democrats to explode the tight little circle of Texas Republicanism and prolong the increasingly bitter fight for the party's presidential nomination.

Raw Statistics Offer Intriguing Perspective

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Dr. Douglas Southall Freeman, the great historian and editor, once lectured a young associate on the ideal education of an editorial writer. Assuming a modest command of the English language, he said, it was desirable that a writer pursue his studies in three areas of importance.

It was important, said the sage of Richmond, that an aspiring editor know something of economics, literature, and law. It was very important that he master the rudiments of history and government. And it was absolutely important—it was altogether indispensable—that he seek a command of—would you guess? Statistics.

This was grim news to the young associate, whose mastery of statistics was then limited to the calculation of an Earned Run Average. Dr. Freeman was dead serious. Early on, he had made his reputation in such areas as economics, taxation, and public finance. He regarded a table of statistics with genuine affection. It was like horses. Some persons have a way with horses: They do not trust horses, but they are not afraid of them either. The doc could meet a page of figures with easy equanimity, eyeball to eyeball, calmly prepared for whatever deception might be at hand. Statistics? He loved 'em.

The image of this venerable mentor came vividly to mind the other day, when the Census Bureau published its handsome new bicentennial editon of Historical Statistics of the United States. Dr. Freeman would have scratched its ears and made it whinny. What was the mackerel catch in 1889? What trends might be deduced from the number of baseball diamonds in public parks from 1924 to 1970? Why did 1,699 Italians emigrate to the United States in 1833 and only 105 arrive in 1834? With figures such as these to play with, who needs the paperback novel?

The new "Historical Statistics" comes in two splendid volumes. At $26, the set is a bargain. Here are most of the milestones or benchmarks by which we can measure where we have been and where we are going.

In the first census of 1790, the enumerators found just under four million Americans, including 757,000 Negro slaves. The 558,000 households were scattered loosely over 865,00 square miles along the eastern seaboard. There were only 24 "urban territories" then, and only two cities with as many as 25,000 inhabitants. The new Federal government was spending $4.3 million a year. The birth rate was downright fantastic—55 per 1,000 population. The rate was 18.4 in 1970.

Glancing over the pages, one gets a glimpse of a hard-working people. On the farms, in the mines, in fisheries, in manufacturing, Americans have sweat it out for the good life. In 1890, to pick a year at random, the typical non-farm worker had a cash income of only $475 a year. The manufacturing employee put in a 60-hour week at 20 cents an hour. But prices in 1890 were geared to income—round steak at 12 cents a pound, bacon at 10.7 cents, butter at 25 cents, a quart of milk, delivered to your door, for under 7 cents.

The statistics speak eloquently of the upward striving of our people. In 1890, more than 13 percent of us were illiterate; only 3.5 percent of the people were high school graduates. The average per pupil expenditure in that year was $11; by 1970, that figure was nearly $900 per pupil.

Our nation also has known its dark chapters. In 1900, police reported 230 homicides, for a rate of 1.2 per 100,000 population. In 1970 we had 17,000 homicides and a rate of 8.3. Some of our progress plainly is progress to the rear.

The passing decades have brought us larger deficits, larger bureaucracies, and smaller percentages of eligible voting. They also have brought us longer lives, shorter work weeks, better health care, and greatly expanded education. The neat tabulations of data are more than mute figures; they fairly sing of Americans in peace and war, in good times and bad.

Not many readers, perhaps, would share Dr. Freeman's rapture at 1,200 pages of statistics. But for any writers, teacher, or researcher who wants a perspective on our nation, this two-volume set is meat, drink, and banana split for dessert.

A Welcome Breather For American Public On The Economic Front

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

The most significant thing about the recovery trend is that the substantial gains have been made without swings of excesses which would mean a return to an unsupportable boom curve.

What we have experienced this year is just about what was forecast months ago by President Ford and his advisers, only a bit better. It has been far better, of course, than what Ford's political critics had predicted as they fought for still more deficit spending and a quick pumping of credit.

Government stimulants have played a part. We are still in the process of building up a record deficit, due in part to tax cuts but mostly to a tremendous rise in spending. This outpouring of money, although with credit ease, has been important.

But the real force underlying the recovery has been a return of consumer confidence, encouraged by a slowing of inflation and the realization that the recession hit bottom about a year ago. The consumer has been quick to return to more normal spending habits and this demand has made itself felt through the entire system.

During the first quarter of this year, the total production of goods and services (gross national product) rose at an annual rate of 7.5 percent. At the same time, inflation as measured by the GNP price index slowed to an annual rate of 3.7 percent. Both figures were better than expected.

This performance, which reflects gains along a broad front, has caused Administration economists to forecast continued strength right on through next year. The rate may ease off a bit, since the current GNP gain is about twice what's considered normal. If maintained too long, the economy would bump against ceilings imposed by both raw materials and industrial capacity. This would set up another dangerous inflationary situation.

Thus, at some point, the growth rate will ease off somewhat. This would mean a sudden downturn. Right now, for example, the consumer is short of restocking — buying what he put off in the past. Also, merchandise inventories, allowed to run down during the recession, now are being rebuilt. This accounts for much of the zip in the recovery rate.

Any softness encountered as the normal consumer side of the economy satisfied its demands may well be offset by two major areas which lagged behind recovery. One is home building and the other is capital spending by business on plant and equipment.

Hone building now is on an uptrend, but with the gain limited largely to single family units. Such things as big apartments and condominiums are still on the sick list. Money lenders still regard them as high risk.

Spending on plant and equipment will be slow picking up any real steam. Right now, there is a lot of unused capacity. But as business becomes convinced that the economy is on a real uptrend, the rate of investment is production for the future will rise.

Inflation, of course, remains as the real threat to recovery. The slower pace of recent months is deceptive, at least in part. Too much of its flows from lower food prices and a temporary lowering of fuel costs. The 3.7 percent rate of the first quarter may well turn out to be the low for the year.

Wage settlements threaten a general rise in the price level. It is estimated that spread of the 10 percent pay hike won by the teamsters through the economy would mean a built-in inflation factor of 7 percent to 7½ percent. But the expectation is that this year's pay raise will settle around 8 percent, on average. this will add to inflation, as much of the extra cost will be "passed on."

Politics of this presidential election year also poses a threat. President Ford is pictured as satisfied with the economy's performance, as reflected in statistics on sales, production and employment gains and the slower inflation. But the Democrats find themselves on a spot. They had counted on the economy as an issue and thus are put in the position where they have got to slug for more.

Ford, using the veto, probably can avoid any radical spending break through by the Democrats. But even a serious threat in Congress could send consumers on a buying spree, to "beat inflation." This could jolt things.

On balance, though, the outlook for the next year, maybe two, is on the reassuring side. We may be in for a welcome breather, after a hectic decade.

Today In History

Today in History
By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, April 25, the 116th day of 1976. There are 250 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

In 1945, the delegates of 45 nations met in San Francisco to organize the United Nations.

On this date:

In 1898, the United States declared war on Spain.

In 1917, China entered World War I against Germany.

In 1959, the St. Lawrence Seaway was opened to traffic.

In 1974, the flooding Mississippi River reached its highest crest in 100 years at St. Louis.

Ten years ago: The chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, Democrat Richard Russell of Georgia, suggested a public opinion survey in South Vietnam to determine whether the Vietnamese wanted American troops to remain.

One year ago: President Ford called for mandatory jail terms for those convicted of violent crimes.

Today's birthdays: Singer Ella Fitzgerald is 58. Retired ballerina Melissa Hayden is 48.

Thought for today: It ain't no sin if you crack a few laws now and then, just so long as you don't break any — actress Mae West.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago today, Gen. George Washington instructed his officers to put a stop to the practice of trampling through and damaging farmers' fields.

A Trip With Baby Has Unforgettable Aspects

By GAIL MICHAELS

Taking a trip with a baby is like stealing the puck at a hockey game. In both cases you're asking for it.

Before the baby came, I dreamed of being a world traveller. I pictured myself dressed in a carefree, wrinkle-free travelling outfit as I stepped gracefully through the ruins of the Roman forum, nibbled on Danish pastries in Copenhagen, and let an elephant stomp on my shocking pink Samsonite luggage at the London Zoo. Now the only dreams I have about travelling concern how to get to the grocery store without having to carry a diaper bag. Any more ambitious travel plans actually inundate me with terror.

And with good reason. The last trip we took was to Charlottesville, Virginia to visit my sister. The packing was the easy part. All that entailed was crushing a porta-crib, a plastic bathtub, various and sundry toys, a bag full of baby food, three suitcases, a stroller, two hanging bags, and five boxes of Pampers into one Toyota Corolla. The only way we managed to get everything into the car was by tying the trunk hood to the bumper. Then, as a preventive measure, we had to tie the bumper to the car. By the time we finished, we had so much twine wrapped around the car that it looked like we were going to Charlottesville via the post office.

But finally we were ready to go. Phillip settled himself comfortably behind the wheel of the car and strapped the baby into her safety shell on the other bucket seat. I smoothed down my carefree, wrinkle-free travelling outfit — blue jeans and my Ayden Collard festival t-shirt — and jumped into my niche in the back seat between the plastic bathtub and a stuffed rabbit with one leg bitten off. Comfort was impossible. One cannot be comfortable when one is riding for five hours in the back seat of a Toyota with one's legs propped above one's head because five boxes of Pampers are resting where one's feet should be. It was the Japanese variation of a tiger cage.

Moreover, 30 minutes into the trip, the baby voiced loud dissatisfaction over her own comfy little perch and joined me in the back seat — where she proceeded to chew through one of the straps on the diaper bag, to shred half a box of Pampers, and to take up whatever space there was for resting my left arm.

Four hours, 30 minutes, two pleated legs, and one unsocketed arm later, we arrived in Charlottesville. Four days later we left Charlottesville.

"We've enjoyed seeing you so much," my mother, who was also visiting, sniffled as she hugged the baby close. "I just can't stand not seeing the baby more often than we do. When are you coming down to Atlanta to visit us?"

I took one look at my hyperactive baby and another look at my trussed-up car. "We'll see what we can do," I muttered. "In about 18 years."

Portugal Tests Institutionalized Democracy

By PETER UEBERSAX

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — They say the red carnations, symbols of the Portuguese revolution, have long wilted.

But the carnations on the desk of Francisco Sa Carneiro look as if they had just opened. Only there are few red ones among them. Most are pink, and some are white.

Like many Portuguese politicians and most Western diplomats, Sa Carneiro, 44, sees Portugal entering a new era.

He believes the country is headed for political and economic stability after two years of turmoil sparked by the April 25, 1974 military coup that ended half a century of rightwing dictatorship.

The two years, Socialist leader Mario Soares said, were "dramatic and difficult," but they have finally resulted in "a victory for freedom and the institutionalization of democracy."

This belief is expected to be confirmed in Portugal's two-phased general elections: of a new parliament April 25 and of a president in June.

Soares' Socialists and Sa Carneiro's Popular Democrats— the two parties representing the center in Portugal's postrevolution politics — are likely to do well.

"People are tired of ideologies," Sa Carneiro said. "They have turned toward solving practical problems."

The capital's Rossio square, which once echoed with the shouts and cheers of youths expressing their revolutionary fervor, is now the meeting place of sullen-faced throngs of unemployed and refugees from Portugal's dismantled colonial empire.

The shelves in the shops have thinned out. Many goods — mainly imports — are no longer available and butter and meat are sometimes hard to find.

Gasoline, the most expensive in Europe, sells for $2.50 a gallon, or twice the hourly wage of the average industrial worker.

Control of the press has been wrested from the Communists, but fewer and fewer Portuguese can or want to spare the 12 cents to learn what's happening in their country.

But no matter how sad some aspects of Portugal look from the outside, resident observers are optimistic.

"It's like the stock market," one Western diplomat explained. "Portugal's situation is still bleak, but the indicators point upward, and the shares rise in anticipation of the recovery."

There are many indicators pointing toward recovery.

The army, a source of much of the turmoil before moderates took command in the wake of an aborted coup by left-wing officers last November, seems to have tired of its political role.

Led by highly respected professionals such as army chief of staff Gen. Antonio Ramalho Eanes, the armed forces have promised to let civilians run the country once the new government has been formed.

They will concentrate, as President Francisco da Costa Gomes put it, on "improving operational capacity, cohesion and discipline."

Western military observers in Lisbon say the 6,000-man brigade, possibly equiped through foreign military aid, would be a welcome contribution to NATO where Portugal has been militarily almost inactive — first because her colonial wars drained her lifeblood, and later because of problems created by the revolution.

Another indication of recovery is the draining of the political "swamp" formed by the more than 100 political parties that sprang up after the coup.

Through a process of elimination, activity has been channeled, as in many Western countries, into four parties standing, respectively, for conservative, liberal, socialist and communist beliefs.

trouble and plaster housewalls with their symbols.

The polls give the Socialists, Popular Democrats and the Center Democrats— in that order— a good chance to capture 20 to 35 per cent of the vote. They predict the Communists and their allies will drop from last year's 17 per cent to about 12.

The three big parties all promise to make economic recovery their first business. They agree that both the government and private enterprise must play their role, even though they disagree on the respective share.

Whatever way is chosen to cure a 20 per cent inflation rate, 25 per cent unemployment swelled by 300,000 colonial refugees, a $1.5 billion a year drain on reserves and other economic ills, Portugal can count on foreign help.

Initial pledges from the United States, Western Europe and international organizations already total $600 million, a hefty sum for a small nation of 9 million with a still largely agricultural economy.

Diplomats say more is almost certain to come.

"The one thing that would immediately dry up all U.S. and European help would be a left-wing takeover, which is highly unlikely, or a turn back toward Portugal's Fascist past," one Western diplomat said.

The question is whether the Portuguese have the expertise to untangle the economy.

Business leaders point out its ills also include sinking productivity — the gross national product dropped a disastrous 15 per cent last year— and the reluctance of private enterprise to invest in a country where labor usually gets the last word in disputes with management.

One snag in the political future is seen in the refusal of the Socialist party to share power with other parties after the election.

"We are confident we will emerge as the strongest party in the vote," Socialist spokesman Rodolfo Crespo said. "We don't want any coalition because it is better for the country to have a homogeneous government to tackle the problem of reconstruction.

"If we don't win, we'll remain outside. A strong opposition is important in a democratic country."

The betting, however, is that despite this all-or-nothing attitude the government will be a center-left majority coalition of Socialists and Popular Democrats. The Communists would lose their one cabinet post.

Communist party secretary Alvaro Cunhal, who keeps wooing the Socialists, has warned that an election victory of non-Marxist parties would plunge Portugal into a "dark night of terror and blood."

The fact that the question of party alliances has become the hottest political topic shows that the country has moved a long way from last year when many Portuguese went to bed fearing they might wake up under a new totalitarian rule.

It is one of many changes that are also evident in small ways.

In the hotels, bellboys are no longer too proud— or too revolutionary minded — to carry a client's luggage. They again gladly accept the work and the tip.

And Lisbon police, who were fearful of provoking the ire of citizens after the revolution, are again smugly ticketing parked cars.

the experiment is viable as it stands or what modifications are necessary to make it so.

John Turner of Stacey's staff said they were optimistic. He said the "meals on wheels" project — delivery of cooked food to the housebound — was already an efficient and effective combination of paid help (the cooks and kitchen staff) and volunteers (those who transported and served the food).

"We look at it this way," he said. "Few old people, if they had a realistic choice, wish to go into an old people's home. Although in many cases there will come a stage when the old person's frailty will be such that full-time residential care is necessary, permanent admission to a home should be delayed as long as possible.

"This can only be achieved by providing a wide variety of services in the community.

"Mentally handicapped people are now living longer. It is thought that many of them could live out of hospitals and hostels if the right kind of community support was forthcoming.

"The aim of Special Community Care is to enable a person who otherwise would be admitted to a residential institution to remain in the community by arranging the provision of services to be paid for by the Social Services Department and carried out by members of the local community."

Turner said that this should prove a more economic use of resources because it should be cheaper to help people while they are in the community than when they are in residential care.

Kent expects to have the scheme in operation sometime in the summer. It believes other local authorities will be watching progress carefully and for this reason it is establishing the experiment as a three-year research project in which the personal social services unit of the University of Kent will be involved.

Turner says they are still working on the solution of a number of preliminary problems. For example, they anticipated that relatives already taking care of an old or mentally affected person might ask for payment under the scheme. It has been decided, however, that payment will only be made for additional, not existing services, he said.

Southerners Restoring Old Buildings

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — America's 200th birthday has rekindled the desire of many Southerners to restore monuments of the region's past so they can be shared by the future.

Antebellum homes nestled among magnolia trees in Mississippi, a Victorian-era opera house in Columbus, Ga., and an old fort in Mobile are among the thousands of projects that have caught the fancy of history buffs in time for the bicentennial celebration.

They are among the projects expected to attract large numbers of tourists but there are many others, such as restoration of an old railroad depot in Pascagoula, Miss., designed simply to preserve a bit of local history.

Marion Miller of the Mississippi Bicentennial Commission said the bicentennial has led to a flood of restoration projects in the state, some promoted at the local levels and others by the state.

Other Southeastern states report a similar interest in restoration.

The American Revolution Bicentennial Administration is interested in making the restoration and preservation of historic sites part of the nation's birthday celebration, but officials note that such projects must share federal financial assistance with other facets of the bicentennial.

Barbara Barker, assistant to the regional director of the administration's Atlanta office, says that each state received a one-shot $200,000 appropriation from Congress for bicentennial projects, plus another $40,000 a year in unappropriated funds raised by the sale of bicentennial medals.

"The money going to the states is kind of minimal and you just aren't talking about a lot of money when the funds are divided between heritage, of which restoration is a part, festival activities and forward-looking horizons programs," Miss Barker said.

She said that in many states, communities and private groups were financing the restoration work and making it their own contribution to the bicentennial.

Ann Parkman, project officer in charge of the Mississippi commission's grant program, said that when "you consider the limited amount of funds we have available, I think you'll see that we are simply trying to inspire other people to go ahead and begin some of the projects that have been needed for a long time."

Mrs. Parkman said restoration's share of federal money going for bicentennial projects in Mississippi totaled about $30,000.

"It's heartbreaking when you consider that we've had requests for $250,000 in restoration work," she said.

Despite limited funding, a number of restoration projects are underway in Mississippi.

The Manship House in Jackson, one of the few structures in the city to escape the torch during the Civil War, was deeded to Mississippi and will be restored in keeping with its antebellum origins.

Officials explained that many of the restoration projects are small and local in nature.

In Clarksdale, local groups are working to build a Coahoma County Indian Museum and in Jackson, the Department of Archives is collecting Spanish documents dealing with Mississippi history.

"It's local people that are doing much of this work," Miss Miller said. "They have been interested, but if the bicentennial hadn't come along, much of this work wouldn't have been done."

In North Carolina, the state Capitol is being refurbished. The building dates from the 1830s and once housed the entire state government. It has become largely a historic shrine with the departure of the legislature and a new government buildings.

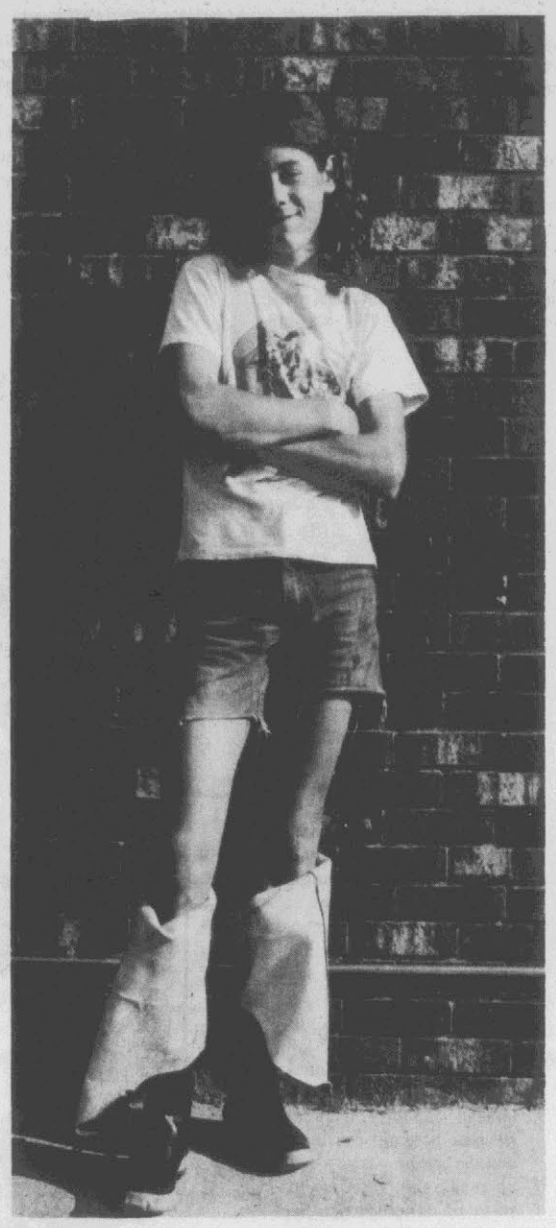

Some $620,000 has been committed to the project.

In Alabama, Warner Floyd of the state Historical Commission said a number of major projects are underway or recently completed.

Floyd said Mobile hopes to have its restoration of Fort Conde, built in the early 1700s, finished by the middle of the year at a cost of some $3 million. Floyd said there was an increasing interest in preserving landmarks of the civil rights struggle, including the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church in Montgomery where Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. began his ministry.

In Georgia, restoration work has been slowed by budget constraints, but future projects are under study. Two structures under consideration are the Springer Opera House in Columbus, a Victorian era theater, and Birdsville Plantation in Jenkins County, one of the oldest plantations to remain in the hands of a single family.

In Tennessee, restorations have ranged from work on the Rhea County Courthouse in Dayton, the scene of the Scopes monkey trial, to the restoration of the Rughby Colony in east Tennessee. The Colony was founded in the 1880s to allow the youngest sons of the English gentry to develop skills and live in a Christian environment.

War Governors Plaque Given

The North Carolina Sons of the American Revolution presented a plaque Saturday commemorating the state's four Revolutionary War governors.

The plaque honors Governors Richard Caswell, Abner Nash, Thomas Burke and Alexander Martin, and will be placed in the State Capitol rotunda.

Lynn Johnson, an art major at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, designed the bronze plaque.

Other plaques in the rotunda commemorate the Edenton Tea Party, the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence, the Wilmington Patriots Resistance to the Stamp Act, and North Carolina Signers of the Declaration of Independence.

Second Annual Festival Slated

NEW ORLEANS, La. (UPI) — The second annual France-Louisiana Festival will be held in New Orleans from July 4 through July 14. The festival will be part of the special Bicentennial celebration and will begin with a series of events on Independence Day and end with Bastille Day observances on July 14.

Workshop Expands Facilities, Activities

Dedication ceremonies will take place at the Eastern Carolina Sheltered Workshop Sunday April 25. The Workshop has grown from its original small downtown office in 1965 to 50,000 square feet at present.

Construction of an additional 12,000 square feet began in April 1975 and has been completed. According to Howard Dawkins, executive director of the Workshop, the new addition includes a woodworking shop; refinishing area complete with a stripping and painting room; garage area that includes a tune-up bay, lubricating bay and a car wash bay; storage and display area for finished items; framing and caning room; sewing classroom: and two other subcontract rooms. Renovation of the building included tripling the evaluation area; adding a conference and visual aid room and a new laundry. Building plans also included 1,800 square feet of loading dock outside the new addition.

When all of the new buildings are completed the new additions will have cost in excess of $400,000.

Brief History

The Eastern Carolina Sheltered Workshop was granted a charter by the State of North Carolina August 24, 1965. Dr. Douglas R. Jones was chairman of the board of directors when the charter was granted.

Tom Boring was employed as the first Executive Director in May of 1967. Temporary operation was started on June 15, 1967 in an office on North Greene Street.

On December 11, 1967, 20 acres were purchased in the new industrial park. The first budget was $67,000.

The workshop was opened to clients in October, 1967. On November 20, 1967 a boarding home for 15 male clients was opened in downtown Greenville. In February of 1968 the Workshop had grown to 19 clients.

Jack Stoughton, treasurer, reported at the April, 1968 board of directors meeting that the federal government had awarded the workshop a grant of $284,705; another $179,364 came from the state and $55,341 from Pitt County, Martin County and local contributions.

In October, 1970 Howard G. Dawkins was elected executive director of the Eastern Carolina Sheltered Workshop.

Dr. William Fulford, Chairman of the Board of Directors advisory committee recommended at the December 10, 1970 meeting that the Workshop purchase from Havelock Mobile Homes Corp. six units of four semi-private rooms with baths at a cost of $63,000. A seventh unit was to be purchased as a recreation and social area. The units were to be used to house 44 clients and a house father and mother. The units were to be used until permanent dormitories could be completed. Vocational Rehabilitation purchased the furnishings for the units.

In March of 1971 a metal building of 5,000 square feet was added for work space. This grant was obtained through Vocational Rehabilitation for construction.

In 1970 66 new clients came in the Workshop for evaluation and 40 remained for training.

Due to the continued expansion of the facility, the Workshop now provides services for 350 clients. Forty of these clients are boarders of the Workshop the other clients are transported to the Workshop daily on one of eight vans.

Programs

The Workshop is made of five major programs; the adult day activity program (ADAP), the personal and social adjustment program, vocational evaluation program, the work therapy program, and the work adjustment program.

The work activity program is funded through the North Carolina Department of Mental Health. This program is available for those individuals not able to be employed on the competitive job market but who are able to function in a sheltered work environment.

Individuals are placed in the Workshop through Vocational Rehabilitation and then into the ADAP program after completing a six weeks evaluation or work adjustment training. Periodic evaluations are made to determine the client's progress. Greg Moore is the ADAP coordinator.

Clients are measured and compared with employability potentials and industrial standards in the vocational evaluation program. According to Ron Hartis, director of the vocational evaluation program, the program's main concern is to identify the strengths and weaknesses of the client to better understand the rehabilitative needs of each individual.

The Workshop provides within its work adjustment program a chief work adjustment coordinator, Jack C. Wynne, III, two assistants, Chuck Clodfelter and Kathryn Lamb; a recreation director and behavior modification specialist, Bill Holland; and 21 work areas with supervisors assigned to each area.

Work Adjustment is a training process utilizing individual and group work, or work related activities, to assist individuals in understanding the meaning, value and demands of work, to modify attitudes and to develop functional capacities, according to Wynne.

Personal and Social Adjustment at the Eastern Carolina Sheltered Workshop and Vocational Rehabilitation Center refers to a segment of Adjustment Services dealing with individual and group needs used daily which are important to the total vocational rehabilitation of the clients. PSA services include classroom instruction, group counseling, family counseling, individual counseling, behavior modification, practical experiences, audio visual aids, and delivery of services to the clients.

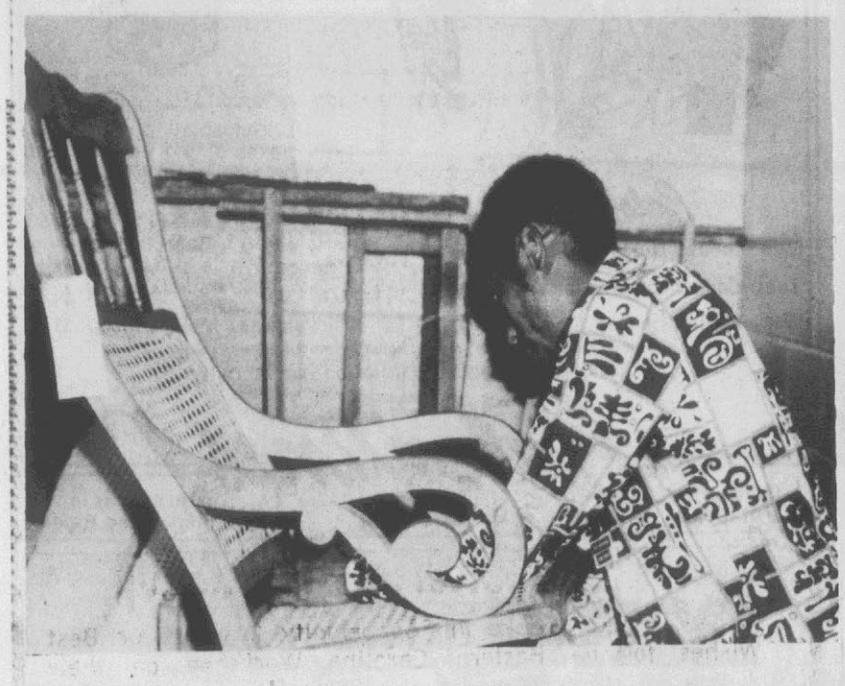

The Work Therapy Program is probably the most well known program offered at the Workshop. The Workshop provides services and produces a number of products for the community including furniture refinishing, custom picture framing, lawn maintenance contracts for industries, telephone refurbishing, dog and cat collars, and woodcraft.

The goal of the Work Therapy Program is to train the client and to hopefully help the client acquire the skill needed to gain a place in the job market.

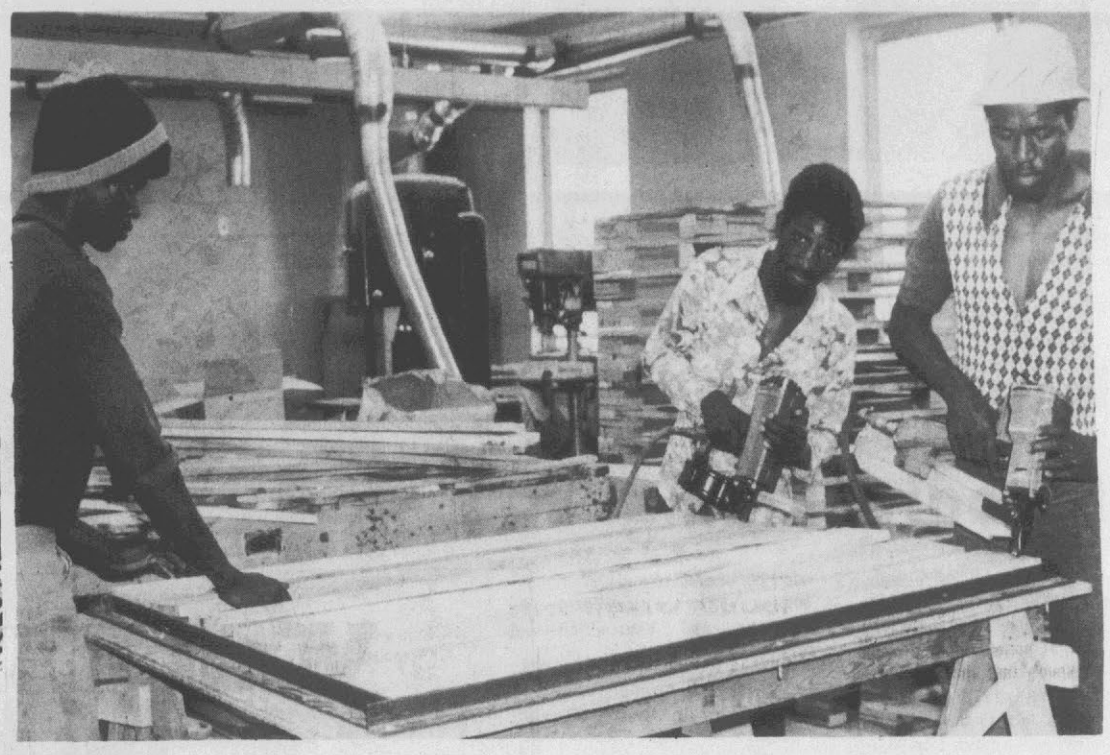

Other facilities of the Workshop include a laundry and a cafeteria. A health services office is coordinated by Mrs. Rena Jones who conducts health screening of clients and provides first aid and health services and referrals for clients.

With the continued expansion of the Workshop's facilities and the increased client enrollment, the future goal of the Workshop according to Dawkins is to construct permanent boarding facilities for the clients at the Workshop.

Hits Republican Leadership

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — AFL-CIO President George Meany charged today that seven years of Republican leadership have produced only recession, unemployment, inflation and the biggest budget deficit in U.S. history.

In a blistering attack, Meany said all the services Americans expect from their government are being "cut to the bone" by President Ford's vetoes.

"The President ... tells us that America has to save its money, that America can't afford to care for the sick, can't afford to feed the hungry, can't afford to educate her children decently, can't afford to keep her cities from falling apart," said organized labor's chief spokesman.

"Well, don't you believe it," Meany declared. "The only thing this country can't afford is four more years like the last seven."

In a speech prepared for a legislative conference of the American Federation of Teachers, he charged that Ford is clinging to the same fiscal policies that created the worst recession in 40 years, the highest unemployment rates since the Depression and the sharpest interest rates since the Civil War.

On the other hand, he said, the fiscal policies of Presidents Truman, Kennedy and Johnson brought America its greatest prosperity.

What Ford criticizes as "spend thrift social-welfare policies," Meany said, "built more homes than ever before, enriched and expanded educational opportunities and made great strides toward achieving a better life for the poor and for the average American."

The labor leader told the teachers that while Ford insists his policies are turning the economy around, unemployed and discouraged workers total more than 10 per cent of the workforce; one-third of the nation's industrial capacity remains idle; millions are running out of jobless benefits, and municipal workers, including teachers, are being laid off by the thousands.

"It isn't spending that's wrecking the American economy, it is unemployment — deliberately created and perpetuated by the administration," Meany charged.

He called full employment the best and quickest way to balance the budget. And he repeated an earlier pledge that the AFL-CIO would go all out to see that Congress enacts pending legislation that would require cutting the jobless rate to 3 per cent within four years.

"We in the labor movement have had enough," he said. "We want a better life for all ... and we are looking for political leaders who share our confidence and our goals."

Adjustments Board Granted Two Requests, Denied One

The Greenville Board of Adjustments, meeting Thursday night, granted two requests for special use permits and denied a request for a variance from the requirements of the City Code.

The board, after conducting a public hearing during which no opposition was voiced, granted a request by Nautilus of Eastern North Carolina for a special use permit in order to operate a health and exercise club in the structure located at 1002 Evans Street.

The property, it was pointed out, is currently zoned for Downtown Commercial Fringe usage.

A request by E.L. Clark for a special use permit in order to allow a beauty shop and a barber shop at 400 N. Greene Street was granted following a public hearing.

The business will be operated on property zoned for Highway Commercial usage.

The board voted to deny a request by Hugh Hardee Jr. for a variance from front setback requirements in order to extend the office on the warehouse located on the south side of NC 30 just inside the city limits.

The request was denied on the basis that certain city code provisions were not met. The property is zoned for Unoffensive Industry usage.

A request by Mrs. Lois Vincent for a special use permit in order to operate a kindergarten or nursery in the structure located at 428 Pittman Drive was tabled until the May meeting of the board.

Scholarship For Ayden Girl

Betsy Bea Gaskins of Ayden has been awarded a James M. Johnston Scholarship for undergraduate nursing study at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Gaskins Sr. of Ayden.

A senior of Ayden-Grifton High School, Miss Gaskins is on the Honor Roll, a member of the National Honor Society and of the Gifted Talented English IV Class. She was co-chief marshal and received the French II Award and Personal Scholastic Achievement Award in Chemistry.

The amounts of the Johnston Awards vary according to need and range from $500 to $4,350.

School Issues Licenses For Skateboard Riding

CARSON, Wash. (AP) — If a kid wants to "hang 10" with his skateboard at Carson Elementray School, he can't do it without a license. And he can't go elsewhere to use his board because the school's principal runs the only smooth pavement in town.

Carson is an unincorporated community 50 miles east of Vancouver, Wash., on the Columbia River Gorge. Except for a highway, the only smooth, paved surface in town is the school's recreation area.

Principal David Peitzel, after seeing 30 or 40 skateboarders at a time careening around the schoolyard at a time, began to worry about the possibility of accidents.

He decided to require parental permission before letting any of his 265 charges mount a board and do their usual turns or "hang 10" — ride with all toes gripping an edge of the board.

Then he went further. He set up his own licensing system, and declared the school grounds off-limits to any unlicensed skaters.

To get the license, applicants have to pass a test — administered by Peitzel.

"It's fun," said Jody Grover, 12. "I passed the test the day before yesterday. I had to drive in a straight line, turn to the right, turn to the left, then go fast with a quick stop."

So far, a dozen fourth, fifth and sixth graders, including four girls, have rolled their way to a license.

Lynne Roeder, 9, said, "I like skateboarding because you can go fast, you can get places quicker and you can get your mind off things."

But she has one problem with the license requirement. "I don't have a pocket on these pants," she said.

Each license is laminated and looks much like an auto license. It even carries an expiration date — the end of the school term.

Peitzel said he tried skateboarding himself, with the possibility of winning his own license in the back of his mind.

"I watched the kids," he said. "They put one foot on that thing and gave a kick with another one. I put one foot on and kicked, but the foot on the skateboard kept going, and I kind of fell over.

"I decided not to try for my license."

Services Mark Conference End

Sunday services marking the end of the week-long 55th Annual Ministers and Workers Conference of the Church of God in Christ of Greater North Carolina will be held at noon today at the West Greenville recreation Center.

The conference, which began last Monday, was held at the Wells Chapel Church of God in Christ, Fifth and Hudson Streets, with Bishop L. B. Davenport, D. D., minister.

Church districts represented during the week were Wilmington, Fayetteville, Whiteville, Rocky Mount, Kinston, Asheboro, Thomasville, Windsor, Charlotte, Laurinburg, Asheville, Greensboro, Edenton and Greenville.

Business Notes

RESULTS IMPROVED

Evans Products Company's results for the first quarter improved substantially over the first quarter of 1975, the company reported.

Net earnings for the quarter were $3.1 million, or 18 cents per primary common share on revenues of $165 million. In the first quarter of 1975, Evans reported a net loss of $1.5 million, or nine cents per primary common share on revenues of $181 million, including revenues of $35 million from operations sold.

First quarter results included a gain before taxes on the sale of assets of $500,000 in 1976 compared to a gain of $7.2 million in the first quarter of 1975.

NAMED TO BOARD

Three Beaufort County business and professional leaders have been named to the board of First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. in Washington, it was announced by Lewis R. Holding, president.

Elected to the local board are: Dick Paul, president and chief operating officer of WITN-TV in Washington; C. H. Rodman, Washington Certified Public Accountant; and Dr. David Thomas Tayloe, pediatrician.

JOINS FIRM

Jeannette Cox of Jeannette Cox Agency announced that Connally Branch, Realtor, of Greenville, has joined her firm, specializing in residential real estate.

Branch had been associated with Wedco Realty in marketing and development prior to joining the Cox Agency.

Branch, who is from Garner, graduated from East Carolina University with a degree in business and real estate. He is married to the former Janie Davenport of Morehead City.

ATTENDED CONVENTION

Jeannette Cox, president of Jeannette Cox Agency Inc., representative for Homes For Living in Greenville, recently attended the annual convention of the Homes For Living Network in Atlanta.

The Network, with headquarters at St. Louis, Mo., is a national marketing organization of over 1,300 Realtor offices providing services to the home buying and selling public.

Over 1,000 persons attended the four-day session.

RECORD EARNINGS

Income before securities gains and losses totaled $454,000 or 54 cents per share, an increase of eight per cent over the same period last year. Net income was $444,000 compared to $428,000, and on a per share basis, increased six per cent to 53 cents from 50 cents.

At the end of the first quarter, PNB's deposits totaled $214,009,000, an increase of $26,384,000 or 14.1 per cent over the $187,625,000 reported last year.

Total loans were $124,191,000, up from $115,664,000, reflecting a 7.7 per cent increase from the comparable period in 1975.

INCREASE NOTED

Martin Marietta Corp. reported that net earnings for the first quarter 1976 increased to $9,413,000 or 40 cents per common share, from $3,455,000 or 15 cents a share in the corresponding 1975 period.

Sales in the 1976 quarter were $259,534,000 which compares with $223,171,000 in the first quarter a year ago, the company reported.

Martin Marietta Aggregates operates a plant at Fountain.

BW APPOINTMENT

Burroughs Wellcome Co. announced the appointment of Vincent P. Fagan to the position of superintendent of the Chemical Manufacturing Division in Greenville.

A graduate of Fairfield University, he joined the company in 1969 as a second shift supervisor and has served since as chemical production supervisor and section head. He was appointed department head in 1973.

MERGER ENDORSED

The shareholders of Branch Banking and Trust Co. voted to approve a proposed merger between BB&T and The Bank of Matthews in Matthews.

Under the proposed plan of merger, 235 shares of Branch Corp. stock will be exchanged for each share of Bank of Matthews common stock outstanding. Branch Corp. is the parent holding company of Branch Banking and Trust Co.

AGREEMENT REACHED

Jack Wallace, president of Nelson-Wallace Inc., and Jeannette Cox, owner of Jeannette Cox Agency, announced that they have entered into a co-brokerage agreement for the sale of Wedco built homes in Lake Ellsworth and River Hills subdivisions.

Under terms of the agreement, specific homes have been assigned to the Cox Agency for brokerage by Nelson Wallace, which is the marketing agent for Wedco in the subdivisions.

Grain Crop Projections

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is tentatively projecting a huge 1976 grain harvest that could help slow anticipated increases in the price of food in the coming year and a half.

The Department's Outlook and Situation Board said Friday the 1976 wheat crop could turn out to be some 2 billion bushels, second only to last year's record crop of 2.1 billion bushels and that a record corn crop of nearly 6.4 billion bushels is a possibility.

Bumper grain production last year contributed significantly to a slowdown in retail food prices, department experts say. Last year's record corn crop of 5.8 billion bushels has meant reduced feed costs for livestock producers, triggering a larger production and lower consumer prices for grain-fed beef, pork, poultry and dairy products.

But there is new evidence that retail food prices, after sagging in recent months, are going to start rising again. The main reason is that supermarket beef prices, which figure heavily in family grocery bills, are beginning to climb or will climb in the near future.

Retail food prices dropped during the first three months of this year, mainly because of substantial declines in meat prices. Farmers have borne the brunt of this, receiving lower prices for meat animals, particularly cattle.

But prices of live cattle have rebounded sharply the past month. Wholesale prices have shot up and experts say those increases are bound to be felt at retail meat counters this spring.

According to the Agriculture Department, the price of choice-grade steers, which produce the tenderest cuts, jumped more than 26 per cent from mid-March to mid-April and wholesale beef carcasses rose 22.6 per cent during the same period.

Whether the full increase at that level will be passed on the consumers is hard to determine, department experts said. Middlemen have had wide price margins between what they pay producers for live cattle and what they charge consumers for beef at retail stores, and part of the gains may be absorbed by them.

But if past history is an indicator, shoppers this month or next will feel at least some effect of the beef price climb.

Government experts say retail food prices will resume their rise after three months of dropping back slightly. But they say the increases will be much smaller than in recent years.

Although not yet willing to predict what might happen to food prices for all of 1976, the Agriculture Department says the gain will be substantially less than the 8.5 per cent rise in 1975. Food prices climbed 14.5 per cent in each of the two previous years, and the department says this year's increase will be the smallest since 1972, when food costs rose about 4.5 per cent.

While predicting the large grain crops, department officials warned "there are no reliable techniques of anticipating" problems that could alter 1976 output. The eventual supply for U.S. buyers will depend on how much world demand is made for U.S. grain. But given the size of crops and exports now projected, there will be large buildups in grain "carryover" reserves by the time 1977 harvests are ready.

Dr. Rose To Teach HRM 654 Course

Dr. A. W. Rose, Professor of Sociology at the University of Miami, Coral Gables, Florida will be the instructor for HRM 654 "Human Relations: Interpersonal and Intergroup Behavior" which begins April 29. Registrations are now being accepted in the Pepperdine Office in Building 293 — Joint Education Counseling Center. Required text books for the course are also available.

The course is a study of the dynamics of relationships between and among individuals, groups, organizations, and societies. Dynamics studied include authority, communications, conflict between systems, and synergy of systems.

As a social psychologist, Dr. Rose has some eighty publications and has served as Distinguished Visiting Professor at The Sorbonne in France, the University of Lausanne in Switzerland, Lovanium University in Kinshasa, Zaine, Haile Selassi I University in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, Saint Louis University in Missouri, and the University of Montreal in Canada. For further information concerning the graduate programs offered by Pepperdine at Cherry Point, contact Ms. Bambi Foss at 466-2491 or 447-1858.

Band Boosters Set Garage Sale, Instrument Collection

Instrument collecting and a spring garage sale will constitute a joint effort by members of the city-wide Band Booster to secure needed instruments and funds for planned expansion of the band program in all the Greenville City Schools.

The dual event will take place Saturday, May 1 at the parking lot of Hooker Memorial Christian Church, 1111 Greenville Boulevard, beginning at 9:30 a.m. and continuing until mid-afternoon.

All citizens of Greenville and the area who may have on hand band instruments not being used—particularly flutes, clarinets, trumpets and trombones, are urged to consider making a donation of such instruments for use in the elementary school phase of the city band program.

Other instruments will also be gladly accepted. Receipts for tax deduction purposes will be given for any instrument donated.

The spring garage sale will feature a bake sale, plant sale, and a traditional garage items sale. Persons who have items they would like to contribute for the sale are urged to bring them early.

All proceeds realized will be used in efforts to extend and expand the overall band program. The city-wide Band Boosters Club this year represents joint efforts for the band program in all schools.

DiRenzo To Speak Friday

"Personal Character and the American Presidency" is the topic of an address by social psychologist Gordon J. DiRenzo which has been scheduled at East Carolina University Friday, April 30.

The public is invited to attend DiRenzo's presentation, at 10 a.m. in the Biology Auditorium. His visit is sponsored by the ECU Department of Sociology and Anthropology and the ECU Student Government Association.

An internationally known scholar in the area of personality and politics, DiRenzo has done research in functional relationships between personality systems and social systems.

His numerous publications include "Personality and Politics (Doubleday), "Concepts, Theory and Explanation in the Behavioral Sciences" (Random House), and "Personality, Power and Politics" (University of Notre Dame Press).

DiRenzo has studied at Notre Dame, Harvard, Columbia and Colorado Universities, and joined the faculty of the University of Delaware in 1970 as Unidel Professor of Sociology.

His career has included teaching positions at several U.S. universities and special appointments at the University of Rome.

Four PTI Lectures

A series of four lectures on computer systems technology will be offered as a community service beginning April 29 at Pitt Technical Institute.

The lectures, which will be offered at no charge to the general public, will be conducted by William C. French, field service engineer in Greenville with Modular Computer Systems Inc. of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

The series continues the first three Thursdays in May from 7-9 p.m. in Room 55 in the Administration Building at Pitt Tech.

The lectures will include topics concerning the architecture of computer systems that can control the following applications: business, power generation and distribution, inquiry-retrieval, factory automation, hospital automation, communications, scientific computation, laboratory automation, host processing and high speed telemetry systems.

Pirates 'Drill' Keydets, 11-1, 11-0

LEXINGTON, Va.—Terry Durham and Dean Reavis each pitched two hitters, while the East Carolina Pirates had a field day with their own bats in ripping Virginia Military Institute 11-1 and 11-0 yesterday.

The sweep of the doubleheader gave the Bucs their 19th and 20th victories of the season, as against six losses. They are now 7-5 in Southern Conference play.

Durham, who fanned the first four batters he faced, set two new school strikeout marks. The four in a row established a new consecutive mark, and his total of 11 snapped the old record of eight held by Dave LaRussa.

The lone run against him was unearned.

Reavis, not to be outdone, also tossed a two-hitter, striking out eight. He did not allow a baserunner after the third inning, and faced only one more than the regulation 21.

Neither one allowed a walk.

Hitting turned into a parade for the Pirates, who banged out 17 in the opener, led by Howard McCullough's three. In the second game, the Bucs slacked off to 12 hits, with Bobby Supel leading the way with three—all extra base hits (two homers and a double). Both of them had four runs-batted-in.

The Pirates got the run parade going in the third inning of the second game, with one. Geoff Beaston reached on a fielder's choice and Sonny Wooten lofted a fly ball that appeared to be destined to end the inning. But the Keydet outfielder overran the ball, which fell in behind him for a double, easily scoring Beaston.

In the fourth, the Bucs added three more. Addison Bass doubled and Ken Gentry reached on an error. McCullough drove in his first run, with a single scoring Bass. Beaston then singled in both Gentry and Supel, running for McCullough.

The fifth saw the Bucs put the game out of reach for the Keydets as six big runs scored.

With one down, Charlie Stevens got it going with a solo home run. Bass and Gentry followed with singles, and McCullough hit a long drive that went as a double. He drove in both runners, but was thrown out trying to make his hit a triple.

Beaston followed with a second solo home run, and Steve Bryant singled. Wooten then cracked out the inning's third home run.

The Pirates added one more in the sixth. Glenn Card singled and Stevens was hit by a pitch. Gentry walked and McCullough added his fourth RBI with a sacrifice fly.

Lennie Snead had singled for VMI in the second, but they didn't get another runner on base until the seventh. With two away, Russell Puckett reached on an error. John Sanford then hit a ground-rule double, scoring Puckett.

Supel, playing on his own in the second game, opened that contest with a home run, letting VMI know that the long day wasn't about to be over.

It stayed 1-0 until the fourth, however, then four more Pirate runners rounded the bases. Robert Brinkley singled , stole second and went to third on a passed ball. McCullough singled in Brinkley, with Jeff Joyner running for him. Supel then banged out his second homer of the game, a three-runner that upped the lead to 5-0.

Joe Roenker led off the fifth with a walk, and Stevens singled. Both moved up on a wild pitch, and Rick Koryda reached on an error, scoring Roenker.

In the sixth, Supel got things going with a double and moved to third on a wild pitch. Bryant sacrificed him in.

The final four came over in the seventh. Stevens and Koryda walked and McCullough singled, with Paradossi running for him. The hit scored Stevens. Supel walked and Bryant reached on a fielder's choice that was errored, letting Koryda and Paradossi score. Wooten then singled in Supel with the 11th and final run.

VMI had only two baserunners. Scott Snow got to second on a single and a sacrifice in the second, but was thrown out stealing. Then, in the third, Gary Varney doubled, but died at second, and no other Keydet reached first safely.

Error Sparks Texas Rally

DETROIT (AP)—Right fielder Rusty Staub's ninth-inning error on Gene Clines' pinch-single gave Texas the tie-breaking run and the Rangers went on to a 5-4 victory Saturday over the Detroit Tigers.

Jeff Burroughs started the inning against Detroit relief ace John Hiller with a single and pinch-runner Dave Moates was bunted to second. Tom Grieve was then walked intentionally and Clines, batting for Mike Cubbage, lined a single to right.

Moates held up momentarily at third, then dashed home to put the Rangers ahead 4-3 when Staub over-ran the ball. Grieve took third on the error and Roy Smalley's sacrifice fly to Staub scored him with what proved to be the winning run, offsetting Ben Oglivie's pinch-home run in the bottom of the ninth.

The Rangers had tied in the eighth when Smalley singled, raced to third on Len Randle's single to center and scored when Juan Benequiz hit into a double play. Texas got a pair of runs in the seventh on Grieve's second homer of the season.

The Tigers scored three runs in the third. Aurelio Rodriguez led off with a walk, took second on a passed ball and scored on Tom Veryzer's single. Veryzer was bunted to second, moved to third on Ron LeFlore single and scored on Alex Johnson's sacrifice fly. LeFlore then stole second and came home on Willie Horton's single to left-center.

Rampants Rally To Claim Third In Perry Event; Wilson Is 7th

By CHIP LAMBETH
Reifector Sports Writer

WILLIAMSTON—Trailing by one, the Rose High Rampants rallied for six seventh inning runs and set Saratoga down in order in the bottom of the seventh to take a 10-5 victory over the Cougars, Saturday.

The game was the second in the final day of play in the Gaylord Perry Tournament. In the day's first game, Wilson shattered Roanoke, 16-4.

Before the game, Rose coach Ronald Vincent commented that the Rampants were just not getting the breaks this year. Friday night Mike Belton pitched one of his best games ever in a Rampant uniform but lost to South View, 3-2. But the Rampants got the breaks when they needed them Saturday.

The Cougars had rallied for three runs in the last of the fifth over-coming a 4-2 Rose lead. But the Rampants slapped the ball all over the Williamston park and got help from three Saratoga errors pushing over six runs to win the game.

Jim Wilkerson started for the Rampants and made it through the fourth but had to be relieved in the fifth by Wright Hooks who won the game. Wilkerson gave up six hits, walked four and struck out five but gave up the go-ahead runs in the fifth. Hooks plugged the leak in the Rampant defenses although he gave up a run-scoring single in the fifth.

In the earlier game, Wilson spotted Roanoke four first inning runs, went ahead with five in the bottom of the frame and put the game out of reach with six tallies in the third and five in the fourth.

Roanoke opened the game with Ken Gurganus walking. Walks to Reid Bullock, Charlie Smith and Ricky Jenkins forced Gurganus in. David Spruill doubled to left center scoring Bullock and Smith and an error let Jenkins score.

Wilson's David Ellis reached on an error starting the Titan's rally. Jeffery Harris singled and a hit by Mitch Barnes moved him to third. Donnie Prince doubled them both across and a hit by Russell Smith drove in Prince. Leith Williams singled in Smith.

Wilson batted around in the third getting three hits. Billy Thomas got the first and scored when Ellis reached on a fielder's choice. Harris and Smith hit run-scoring singles and Babe Allen walked forcing in a run.

Mitch Barnes' two-run homer in the fourth highlighted the final rally. Roanoke put a man on with a single in the fifth but failed to score. The game was called at the end of the frame.

After going down in order in the first, Rose broke down the door in the second batting around. Mike Brewington beat out a high chopper to third and stole second. Eddie Connolly singled to third moving Brew to third and Hooks hit into a fielder's choice scoring Brewington as he slid under the catcher's tag. Wilkerson was safe on an error scoring Connolly and walks to Lee Shearin and David Dixon scored Hooks.

Saratoga countered with two in the third. Ted Rodgers doubled and later scored on a sacrifice fly. John Whitley doubled, took third on Bob Wheeler's hit and scored on a wild pitch.

Dixon grounded out in the fourth scoring Wilkerson who had walked.

Rodgers led off the fifth with a single and after Wheeler walked, both scored on a single by Kenny Cherry. Hooks walked David Goff and then gave up a hit to Tim Shelton scoring Cherry as Saratoga went up, 6-5.

Sratoga put two on in the sixth on third-strike passed balls but left them.

Connolly ignited the seventh inning rally with a bases-loaded driving in the tieing and go-ahead runs. Greg Sasser reached on error as did Jay Chenier. Both stole up and Connolly scored them.

Hooks hit into a force at third but the ball was errored letting Mark Shank, running for Averette, and Connolly score. Greg Lee walked and both he and Hooks scored on a single to right by Dixon.

Cherry went all the way for Saratoga walking four, striking out five and giving up seven hits.

Connolly had three of the Rose hits, Brewington two. Rodgers had two for Saratoga.

Reds Seeking Chinese Stars

By NORM CLARKE
AP Sports Writer

CINCINNATI (AP) — Bob Howsam, who flew a third of the way around the world to sign a Chinese baseball prospect, has lost a battle to the Taiwan military—but he still thinks he can win the war.

The Cincinnati Reds president caused a stir a year ago when he announced he had signed two Taiwan standouts who had helped their Far East country win four consecutive Little League World Series titles.

"The potential is there. We haven't given up," said Sheldon Bender, director of player personnel for the world champion Reds.

Bender said Howsam has reopened efforts "through proper channels" to free pitcher Eng-Jey Kao and catcher Lai-Hua Lee from a mandatory three-year military service commitment.

Howsam and chief scout Joe Bowen, who 26 years ago signed Los Angeles Dodger great Maury Wills, signed the two last March and planned to have them work out with the Reds during spring training.

The two applied for exit permits last year, but were denied them due to the mandatory military hitch.

Kao and Lee were batterymates in 1974 when Taiwan swept through the Little League finals, winning all four of its games by shutouts. "We were impressed with their knowledge of the game and fundamentals," said Bender.

"We have a contact working on their release," said Bender. He said he is concerned that a three-year delay would seriously hurt the chances of Kao and Lee to advance in the Reds minor league farm sytem.

When Kao and Lee were unable to attend the 1975 spring training, the Reds set their debut for this spring. If that fell through, the two were to spend this summer with the Reds' rookie club in Billings, Mont.

"Now we are hoping for next year," said Bender. "If not, maybe never."

The 20-year-old Kao, a left-hander, is considered the best prospect of the two. He was Taiwan's pitching star in a 1974 world tournament held in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., for post-Little League players. Taiwan won all four of its games by shutouts, with Kao appearing in all four games. He went the full seven innings for victories in two, was the winning pitcher in the third and pitched the final two innings in relief in the title game.

Lee is 19 and described as very quick behind the plate.

Bender said Howsam had hopes that the unprecedented signings would open inroads for future talent flow from Taiwan.

Yankees Win In 11th Frame

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Chris Chambliss' fourth hit of the game, a one-out single in the 11th inning, scored Roy White from second base and gave the New York Yankees a wild 9-8 victory over the Kansas City Royals Saturday.

The Royals blew a chance to win in regulation time when Jim Wholford missed third base as he raced home on John Mayberry's apparent single with two out in the eight inning and the score tied. New York third baseman Graig Nettles appealed to umpire Nestor Chylak and what looked like a run-scoring hit became an inning-ending forceout. There was no argument from the Royals.

Kansas City also failed to score after putting runners on first and third with none out in the third inning and had Fred Patek thrown out at the plate to end the sixth when he tried to score on Frank White's double.

The Yankees, who rallied for four runs and an 8-8 tie in the bottom of the seventh after the Royals had scored five times in the top of the inning, began their winning rally on Roy White's one-out single off Marty Pattin, 0-2, the fifth Kansas City pitcher. White moved into scoring position when Thurman Munson was hit by a pitch and Chambilss followed with a ground single to right field.

Chambliss, who has driven in at least one run in eight consecutive games, capped New York's tying rally in the seventh with a run-scoring single.

Wohlford's pop-fly double—which fell untouched just 30 feet from home plate—triggereed the Royals' five-run seventh. They rapped relievers Dick Tidrow and Saprky Lyle for six hits, including Amos Otis' game-tying double and RBI singles by Hal McRaie, Al Cowens and Patek, and scored the final run of the inning when Cowens raced home unmolested from third base while the Yankees had Patek in a rundown between first and second.

Ziegler's 67 Good For Lead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Grim-faced Jack Nicklaus and shaken Barney Thomson fell victim to varying forms of disaster and happy-go-lucky Larry Ziegler, with a scrambling five-under-par 67, swept into the third round lead Saturday in the $175,000 New Orleans Open Golf Tournament.

The hard-hitting Ziegler, who received the greatest exposure of his 10-year journeyman career with a third place finish in the recent Masters, established a two-stroke lead with his 54-hole total of 204.

That's 12 under par on the 7,080-yard Lakewood Country Club course, a tame and timid tabby for the first two days of the tournament but, suddenly toughened by 25 mile an hour winds, it turned into a raging tiger that claimed its victims with near regularity.

Nicklaus, the game's outstanding performer, and the 6-foot-5 Thompson, the second-round leader, were the most prominent casualities.

Standing on the 11th tee, Nicklaus was tied for the lead. When he walked off the 12th green he was tied for eighth, five shots off the pace. A couple of birdies by Ziegler and a double bogey-bogey stretch by Nicklaus, wandering tight-lipped and angered through trees and traps accounted for the swing.

All of Thompson's woes came on one hole, the par-four 14th. He was second alone when he went to the tee. He wasn't in the top 10 when he finally finsihed the hole. He hit two in the water, was short with his next one, over the green with his next, reached the putting surface in seven and twoputted for a horrendous nine.

Lyn Lott and Vic Regalado, a former Mexican Masters champion, shared second place at 206. Each shot a 69.

Hubert Green, a three-time winner this season, John Mahaffey and Mac McLendon, who won the national team title with Green a couple of years ago, were at 207. McLendon and Mahaffey, the runner-up in Tallahassee last week, shot 68s and Green had a 69.

At 208, only four shots back and within range in the closely-bunched field were defending champion Billy Casper, Lee Elder, Jim Colbert, Miller Barber and Tom Evans. Barber and Evans shot 69s, Casper a 70, Elder and Colbert 71s.

Ziegler, whose close friend Joe Garagiola was handling the telecast of a 14-inning baseball game that cut the viewing time of this tournament to 15 minutes, chipped in twice to turn a potentially poor round into a leader.

"The first eight holes I just played awful," Ziegler said. "It looked like I was gonna shoot 75. I wasn't thinking about the lead. I was just trying to keep from shooting a bad score."

But his work with the wedge prevented the troubles that beset most of the others. Barber, among the leaders, hit one out of bounds and made double bogey. The Hill brothers, Dave and Mike, both were in contention at one time or another but Dave finished with three bogeys and double while Mike played his last five holes five over, including two double bogeys.

Thompson, of course, took the worse beating. He was only two strokes out of the lead when he went to the 14th tee. Nine strokes later, when he walked off the 14th green, he was seven shots back.

"It kind of puts you in shock," he said.

Nicklaus appeared on the verge of another collapse the equal of that horrendous 45 strokes required to finish the last nine holes at the Bing Crosby early this season. He double bogeyed 11th with a drive that was badly pushed and a second shot that hit a tree. he bogeyed the next from a bunker. And he double bogeyed the 16th, putting him five over par for six holes. He was looking at a 41 for the back nine but birdied the last two to save some dignity.

Ziegler, who chipped in twice in Thursday's first round, did it again to save par on the first hole and dropped one from deep rough for birdie on the 12th.

"Four chip-ins for the week is a swing of maybe eight strokes," he said.

He reached one par five in two and two-putted for bird, missed pitching in by six inches on another hole and dropped two birdie putts of about 12 and 25 feet—none of which appeared on the national television coverage.

THEIR IDOL—Jack Nicklaus is surrounded by young admirers seeking autographs after he carded a five-under-par 67 for the second round of the New Orleans Open Friday. Nicklaus was in contention for first place throughout the third round, but fell behind Larry Ziegler when the day was over. (AP Wirephoto)

Reds Squeeze Past Montreal

MONTREAL (AP)—Dave Concepcion's two-run single in the 11th inning gave the Cincinnati Reds a 6-4 victory over the Montreal Expos Saturday.

Dan Driessen led off the 11th against Don Carrithers, 0-1, with an infield single and Johnny Bench was safe when third baseman Larry Parrish bobbled his grounder. Mike Lum bunted the runners ahead and Cesar Geronimo was intentionally walked to load the bases before Concepcion delivered his single to right-center field. The victory went to reliever Rawly Eastwick, 1-0.

Montreal grabbed a 1-0 lead in the first on Gary Carter's run-scoring single to left off Pat Zachry and made it 2-0 in the fourth on Pete Mackanin's sacrifice fly.

The Reds struck for a run in the fifth on Lum's homer, then went ahead 4-2 in the sixth on Joe Morgan's three-run blast, also off starter Steve Rogers. A walk to Pete Rose's and Ken Griffey's single preceded Morgan's third homer of the season.

Mackanin's single gave the Expos a run in the bottom of the sixth and they tied it 4-4 in the seventh on Ellis Valentine's first homer of the season, a leadoff shot againts reliever Pedro Borbon.

Champions

WILLIAMSTON—The Williamston Tigers captured the championship of the Gaylord Perry Invitational Baseball Tournament last night with a 7-6 victory over Fayetteville South View.

The title was the first for the hosting Tigers in the four years of the annual event, named in honor of the Williamston native now the ace pitcher of the Texas Rangers.

Wild Pitch Helps Giants

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Jim Rooker's wild pitch in the third inning with the bases loaded allowed one run to score and set up another that gave the San Francisco Giants a 3-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday.

The Giants, handing the Pirates their fourth straight loss, got to Rooker, 1-1, for a first-inning run on Von Joshua's leadoff triple and a sacrifice fly by Darrel Thomas.

In the third, Thomas led off with an infield single and went to third on Bobby Murcer's single to right. Gary Matthews walked to load the bases, Thomas scored on the wild pitch and Chris Speier's sacrifice fly drove in Murcer, who had moved to third on the wild pitch.

Winner Ed Halicki, 2-2, scattered eight hits before being lifted in the eighth inning after Rich Hebner led off with a single. Gary Lavelle took over and the Pirates averted a shutout on Willie Stargell's single and Dave Parker's grounder.

Rudi's Homer Keys Athletics

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Sports Writer

CLEVELAND (AP)—Joe Rudi's two-run homer in the ninth inning Saturday vaulted Oakland to an 8-7 victory over the Cleveland Indians and snapped the A's four-game losing streak.

Rudi's first homer of the season, a shot off Tom Buskey, 0-1, that curled around the left field foul pole followed a two-out walk to Caludell Washington.

It wiped out a 7-6 lead Cleveland had built with two runs in the bottom of the eighth on Rick Manning's triple, Buddy Bell's RBI-single, Boog Rowell's single that sent Bell to third and a sacrifice fly by Rico Carty.

The Indians took a 4-0 lead through the first two innings but the A's struck for five in the third, three of them coming on Don Baylor's second homer of the year.

The A's made it 6-4 in the fourth on an infield hit by Garner, a walk to Haney and a single by North but Cleveland got the run back in the seventh on singles by Bell and Powell and Carty's sacrifice fly.

Clemson Lone ACC Unbeaten

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP)—Maryland scored 12 runs in the sixth inning to defeat Virginia 14-8 Saturday in the semifinals of the Atlantic Coast Conference baseball tournament here.

The victory for Maryland means they will face Clemson Sunday in the ACC championship series. Maryland must defeat Clemson twice to take the title.

Virginia pitcher Harry Thomas hurled a perfect game through the first four innings and a no-hitter for five before the Terrapins blasted him and three other Cavalier pitchers in the sixth.

Before the deluge, Virginia had held 4-0 lead with runs in the first, third and fourth innings.

The Cavaliers, who had played four games in three days, appeared to have depleted their pitching ranks by the sixth inning of Saturday's game.

Clemson edged Maryland 2-1 earlier Saturday on a run-scoring single by Steve Tucker and an RBI double by Alan Hoover in the top of the ninth inning.

The Tigers were held to five hits in eight innings by Maryland pitcher Bob Ferris before David Caldwell opened the ninth with a towering triple to center field.

The count was 2-2 on Tucker he blooped a single to center field to tie the game. Maryland already had scored in the fifth.

Ferris walked Bill Foley and struck out Robert Bonnette. Hoover, a designated hitter, then blasted his double to center field to drive in Foley on the winning run.

Earlier, Virginia blasted 17 hits off three Wake Forest pitchers to take an 8-2 victory and advance in the losers' bracket of the tournament.

The loss drops the Deacons, 22-11, from the three-day event.

After giving up runs in the first, third and fourth innings to take a 3-1 lead, the Cavaliers added two more in the fifth to sew up the victory.

Veteran Drivers Keeping Close Eye On Distaff Driver In Race

By GARY KALE
UPI Sports Writer

TRENTON (UPI) — Johnny Rutherford, 1974 Indianapolis champion, turned in a top lap of 165.2 miles an hour during Saturday's three-hour practice session as veteran male drivers watched Janet Guthrie keep her cool with a speed of 151.9 m.p.h. in preparation for Sunday's Trentonian 200 mile auto race.

Twenty-six cars took their turns in a practice run and Guthrie's clocking was the 20th fastest of the lot.

Tom Sneeva, the former Seattle school teacher, fashioned a 165.1 mph for the second best speed and Gordon Johncock was next fastest at 164.9 mph. A.J. Foyt, who will be seeking an unprecedented fourth Indianapolis victory next month, gunned his car to a speed of 164.5 mph around the one and a half mile track.

"I knew I was handling myself well," said Guthrie, who has borne the brunt of some harsh comments from male drivers. "I was merely trying to go as fast as reasonably possible under practice conditions. I was making sure I could pick my groove when qualifying begins before tomorrow's race.

"I don't think there are any pressures on me. I'll run well with the men."

Jackie Stewart, retired Formula 1 Grand Prix champion who maintained his contact with auto racing as a TV color commentator, said Guthrie, "looked a bit excited. You always know because their visors begin to steam up."

Saturday's practice was marred by one accident, a rookie, Gary Allbritain hitting the cement wall coming out of the dogleg turn and the loss of a wheel by Tom Frantz. Allbritain's car was damaged on the right side and appeared to need extensive repairs. Frantz braked to a stop near the pit area without noticeable damage to his car.

Bill Vukovich probably is most adamnant in his opinion of Guthrie, saying he'd eat crow and tender an apology if she turned out to be a better driver than he suspects she is right now.

"Indy racing is too demanding physically for women," said Vukovich, who finished second here in 1973 and third in 1974. "They are out of their element in this sport. I'll eat my hat if any woman can match my endurance. Their neck muscles can't take the strain. After 40 laps, Guthrie won't be able to steer a car.

"Women are the greatest thing since popcorn but not in the car. As a racedriver, Guthrie stinks. If she was a man, she wouldn't be here. Not with her credentials but it's a thing of the times with woman now."

USAC director Dick King, however, is of another mind.

"From what I've seen, Guthrie looked pretty good today," King said. "I've seen some pretty good drivers get in their cars and not make it because they didn't have the foresight to take some advance runs at a track. Janet appears confident.

"Remember, 75 per cent of applicants for USAC championship licenses are turned down. I told her this morning 'hang in there kid. Everything will work out'. I know a lot of guys are on her tail but some of them weren't too good when they started."

King said the chief steward will make the final decision before Sunday's race which of the drivers are capable of making the qualifying run.

This is the second race in the Indy type car program for 1976. Bobby Unser won the opening rac at Phoenix, an event in which another woman driver, Arlene Hiss was severely criticized for driving poorly and slowly.

Wilkes Leads Golden State

DETROIT (AP)—Jamaal Wilkes, who only scored two points the first three quarters, poured in 15 in the final period to break up a close game and send the Golden State Warriors to a 113-96 National Basketball Association victory Saturday over the Detroit Pistons.

Detroit, which trailed by as many as 16 points late in the third quarter, pulled to within three at 86-83, with &;30 left in the game, then Wilkes went on his scoring binge and Phil Smith helped out to send the Warriors to a 2-1 advantage in the best-of-seven quarter-final series.

Smith wound up with 34 points while Rick Barry, who had a poor shooting day in the nationally televised game, had 19.

Bob Lanier grabbed 10 rebounds and scored 12 points in the first quarter for Detroit, then George Johnson and Cliff Ray did a superb defensive job the rest of the way to stymie the Pistons' ace.

Lanier wound up with 23 points and the next highest Piston was Archie Clark with 13.

Detroit surged to a 14-4 lead in the opening minutes before Golden State battled back. Detroit's last lead was 36-34, eight minutes into the second period.

Twins Take It On Sacrifice

By BRENT KALLESTAD
AP Sports Writer

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP)—Dan Ford's sacrifice fly in the 14th inning gave relief pitcher Bill Campbell and the Minnesota Twins a 2-1 victory Saturday over the Baltimore Orioles.

Luis Gomez started the winning rally in the nationally televised game with a single up the middle off loser Grant Jackson, 0-1. He moved to third on Danny Thompson's fourth hit of the game, a long double to right-center field, and came home on Ford's fly ball to right.

Campbell, 2-1, pitched 5 1-3 innings of two-hit ball to pick up the victory.

The Twins opened the scoring with a first-inning run when Rod Carew hit a two-out single, stole his seventh base of the season and scored on a double by Craig Kusick.

The Orioles tied it in the fourth when Brooks Robinson, who had started the inning with his 2,800th career hit, scored on a single by Mark Belanger.

Manges Shines In Terp Drills

By GORDON BEARD
AP Sports Writer

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP)—Mark Manges threw three touchdowns to wingback Dean Richards, the last with 6:53 remaining, and led the Red team to a 20-13 victory over the White in the annual University of Maryland spring football game Saturday.

Manges, who will be a junior in the fall, completed 14 of 18 passes for 176 yards and also gained 112 of his team's 145 on the ground.

Richards, who lettered last season as a freshman, caught four passes for 91 yards with his TD receptions going for 35, 1 and 45 yards.

Following a scoreless first quarter, Manges teamed with Richards on the 35-yarder for a 6-0 lead. The score was set up when punter Mike Sochko kept the drive alive by copleting a seven-yard pass from punt formation.

A pass interception by safety Chris Ward and a 32-yard return enabled the Red team to score again with :28 remaining in the first half. After his team took over on the White 13, Manges completed two passes, the last from one yard out, to make it 14-0.

The White team, which had a 50-yard touchdown run by Steve Atkins called back in the second period, scored twice in the second half on runs by Atkins and pulled to within 14-13 with 9:26 to play.

But the Red team came right back to score the clincher. After gaining 28 yards on three running plays, Manges completed a 10-yard pass to Gary Ellis and then connected with Richards for 45 yards and another TD.

Atkins rushed for 133 yards on 25 carries and his teammate in the White backfield, Tim Wilson, picked up 57 on 11 carries.

Tim O'Hare, a sophomore who practiced only five days during the spring because of a shoulder injury, quarterbacked the White team for most of the game. He completed six of 13 passes for 68 yards.

"I thought it was a good spring game," coach Jerry Claiborne said. "We had some big offensive plays and there was some good hitting on defense."

"We have the makings of a good football team and right now we can put together a good starting unit," Claiborne said. "But we've got to get some depth, especially at defensive end and in the secondary. We'll have to work on that when we return in the fall."

Claiborne said that Manges, who now weighs 219, is bigger and stronger than last season. Although they played on opposing teams Saturday, the possible running backs who will start with Manges next season are Atkins at 223 pounds and Wilson at 215.

"The only disappointment," Claiborne said, "was the kicking game. Sochko kicked well early in the spring before hurting his ankle. We should be strong in this phase but we've got to get better than we were today."

Williamston In Finals; Rose Beaten

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

WILLIAMSTON—Three separate times in the sixth inning, Saratoga lost the ball—and with it the ball game, as the Williamston Tigers rallied for a 6-5 victory and a trip to the finals of their Gaylord Perry Invitational Tournament Friday.

Meanwhile, South View joined them in the championship game, nipping Rose High School of Greenville, 3-2, on a long seventh inning triple in the bottom of the seventh.

Rose was to meet Saratoga Central in the consolation game, while South Granville, an 8-4 winner over Wilson met Plymouth, a 17-1 victory over Roanoke for fifth. Wilson and Roanoke played for seventh place.

The trip to the finals is the second one for the Tigers, who were runners-up in the second event. Rose, making its third appearance in the four-year-old tournament, will be playing for something other than the title for the first time, having been the runner-up in 1973, the initial year, and the champion last season.

The Rampants' Mike Belton joined up with Timmy Locklear of South View in a tight hurlers' duel in the final game of the second round. Both allowed just four hits, and several of them could be credited to bad hops. Belton struck out 11 and walked four—one of them costing the game eventually. Locklear fanned 12 and walked five.

South View, taking a 13-1 record into the game, got a run in the second. Mike Lucas walked and Drake Johnson ran for him, stealing both second and third. On the latter, catcher Eddy Connolly's throw to third was off target, and Johnson sped home on the error for a 1-0 Tiger lead.

Rose, after putting a runner on second in the first frame, and one as far as third with one out in the third, finally broke the ice in the third. David Dixon opened with a walk and Greg Sasser also got a free trip. Belton helped himself with a single to center, scoring Dixon and moving Sasser to third.

Lucas caught Sasser too far off third and made a peg to that base in the attempt to get the runner. But just as Lucas let the ball go, Sasser broke for home, and the return throw bounced off him as he slid into the plate with the go-ahead run.

But it was to be the final Rose score, despite several other good threats. In fact, Rose had a man in scoring position in each of the remaining innings, but was uanable to get the key hits they needed.

The best threat came in the fifth when Sasser opened the inning with a triple. Locklear sailed a pitch over Lucas' head, and Sasser took off for home again. The ball hit one of the backstop uprights, however, and bounced straight back to Lucas, who put the easy tag on Sasser.

South View tied it up in the fourth. David McAllister singled and stole second. He scored when Bill Austin reached on a bad hop single.

But Belton kept the Tigers at bay until the bottom of the seventh when he issued a leadoff walk to Bill McAllister. With one away, Locklear launched a long, long fly to the deepest corner of the Williamston ball field in center. It fell in easily, and McAllister scored with no problem to win the game.

In the other winners' bracket game, Williamston saw Saratoga push over five runs in the first inning. Starter Eric Godard issued walks to Ralph Bailey, Joe Jones, and John Whitley to load the bases. Bob Wheeler singled in two runs, and Kenny Cherry singled. An error on the play let Whitley score the third run, and David Goff singled in Wheeler. Another error let Cherry score the fifth run.

Williamston got one back in the third. Butch Davis reached on a fielder's choice and came around on a hit by Lee Pearson and a fly ball that was dropped, hit by Tommy Gardner.

Then, in the sixth, Williamston took advantage of the lost balls to score five runs to win it. With one down, Godard got it started with a double—because of a ball lost in the lights. Greg Roberson followed with a hit, and Herbie Rogers hit a long fly to right that was dropped, scoring Godard. Mike Koesy singled in Roberson, and with two outs, the breaks came again.

Tim Hardison lofted what appeared to be a routine fly to left center, but neither fielder spotted the ball until it hit the ground behind them. By the time it was chased down, Rogers, Koesy and Hardison had all circled the bases, putting Williamston into a 6-5 lead that they held.

Gardner got the win, having come on in relief of Godard in the opening frame.

After scoring a run on a walk, a sacrifice, a balk and a sacrifice fly, Plymouth unloaded for seven runs in the third. They had five hits in the frame, while Roanoke made three errors. Plymouth added four more in the fourth and five in the sixth as they collected a total of 11 hits and Roanoke made eight errors.

The lone Roanoke run came in the fourth off two doubles, by Reid Bullock and Ricky Jenkins.

South Granville, with a six-run fourth inning, including five hits and two Wilson errors, downed the Titans, 8-4, in the other game.

Three Records Fall As Rose Is Again Pitt County Track Winner

Rose High School again captured the Pitt County Track Meet yesterday, outdistancing second place Farmville Central.

The Rampants finished the meet with 79½ points, while the Jaguars, the only other team to have won the title, came in with 49½.

Conley was third with 28, while North Pitt finished with 15. Ayden-Grifton is not competing in track this year.

Only three new records were set in this year's meet, two of them by William Joyner. Joyner's 9.6 second timing in the 100-yard dash, and his 21.9 run in the 220, broke the 1973 marks set by Al Hunter. Hunter's 100 was times in 9.7, while he did the 220 and 22.0.

The other record went to Doug Paschal, in the shot put. There, the senior weight man tossed the steel ball 54 feet, 2 inches, erasing the mark of 49 feet 9¾ inches set last year by him.

Paschal also won the discus, but not in record distance.

Joining those two as double winners were Mike McLawhorn of Rose, who tied for the long jump title, and won the triple jump; and Jeff Wilkes of Farmville Central, who took both of the hurdle events.

Overall, Rose won eight individual events, along with one of the relays. Farmville Central captured three, plus the other relay. Conley won two events and North Pitt, one.

Summary:

Falcons Top Greene Central

PIKEVILLE—Charles B. Aycock rallied for five runs in the fifth inning Friday night to take a 6-2 victory over Greene Central's Rams.

The loss dropped the Rams to 5-3 in the Eastern Carolina Conference, while they are 7-6 overall.

The Rams got both of their runs in the first inning. Jeffrey Warren walked and stole second, and Jay Carraway reached on an error, also stealing up. Thomas Hooker then singled both runners over.

The Falcons, held in check by Greene Central without a hit, finally got something going in the fifth. Randy Pittman walked and Chuck Pace reached on an error. Crumpler walked, loading the bases. Dunn singled in Pittman, and an error let Pace score. Finch doubled, driving in both Crumpler and Dunn, and a hit by Lancaster brought around Finch.

The final run came in the sixth. Pittman doubled, moved up on an out and scored when Crumpler reached on a passed ball on the third strike.

Summerlin held the Rams to only two hits.

Panthers Pin Firebirds, 5-4

SPRING HOPE—Three errors in the top of the fourth keyed a North Pitt rally and the Panthers held off a late comeback by Southern Nash to hang on to a 5-4 victory gained with only one hit.

Aubrey Wynne pitched the win for the Panthers striking out three and walking none. He gave up seven hits including three home runs. "It was the best game he's pitched here in three years," said Coach Pat Smith. "even though he gave up three home runs; its a real short fence."

Smith said the three homers Southern hit had the Panthers backed up to the fence and under the ball but it was just out of reach.

North Pitt got a run in the first as Dwight Vernelson walked, moved to second on an out and scored on Brown's hit.

Jay Bedsworth opened the third with a walk for the Panthers. Eddie Hemingway followed with a walk and Vernelson was hit by a pitch. Noel Whitley hit into a force nailing Bedsworth at home but the relay to third was errored letting Hemingway and Vernelson score. Roy Brown was hit by a pitch and Wynne reached on an error scoring Whitley and Brown.

Robin Fassnacht and Strickland homered for the 'Birds in the fourth and Fassnacht scored on an error on Perry's sixth inning single cutting the lead to 5-4.

Scott Fassnacht singled and moved to second on an out in the seventh but a pop-up ended the game.

Conley In 4-0 Victory

WHEAT SWAMP—D. H. Conley rolled up a 4-0 shutout victory over North Lenoir Friday.

The Vikings scored one run in the fourth inning. Nugie Worthington walked and stole second. He scored when Roger Jenkins singled.

In the fifth, the Vikings added three more. Donnie Cox doubled and Curt Clemmons got a hit. Brian Forrest doubled both of them over. Forrest then stole third and scored on an error on the play.

Nash Gets 7-0 Win

The rule may not have been the only factor in Aycock's 7-0 loss to Nash Central but it sure did help.

The rule said in effect that if a wild pitch crossed a chalk line behind home plate, a runner was awarded an extra base from that which he was attempting to reach.

The rule came into play in each of the first three innings. Nash put Edmundson on in the first with a walk and he stole second. A wild pitch moved him to third and he came around when the ball crossed the line.

With the play occuring in the second and third, Aycock's Mike Williams was behind, 3-0, and pitching a no-hitter.

Nash added two more runs in the fourth on a single and a sacrifice fly and a two-run single in the fifth finished the Nash scoring.

Rose Girls Run Past Lady Jags

The Rampettes captured first place in seven of the 11 individual events, and took two of the three relays.

Rose had two double winners. Lara Miles took the discus and the shot put, while Christie Gardiner won the long jump and the 440-yard dash.

One new school record was set as Bonnie Lee won the 110-yard hurdles in 16.3 seconds.

Rose returns to action on Wednesday, hosting the Division I Conference meet. Farmville Central entertains Southern Nash and C. B. Aycock on Monday.

Veterans Aid Boston Victory

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — With John Havlicek sidelined for a playoff game for only the fourth time in 14 years, the Boston Celtics called on two players at varying stages of their careers to pick up the slack.

And that's exactly what veterans Don Nelson and Steve Kuberski did Friday night as the Celtics edged the Buffalo Braves 101-96 for a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven National Basketball Association playoff.

Nelson, retiring after 14 years as an NBA player and hoping to become an official, scored 22 points, including 12 in a hot first period and four crucial free throws in the closing seconds.

Kuberski, picked up by his old Boston team after being released by Buffalo last November, contributed 12 points, hitting Boston's first four baskets in the fourth period as the Braves threatened to take the lead.

"Everybody who played in Havlicek's spot went out of sight—Nelson, Kuberski and even Glenn McDonald in the short time he was in there," Boston Coach Tom Heinsohn said. "Nelson got us off to a great start. Then Kuberski did it in the fourth quarter when you gotta have somebody throwing the ball in at that time."

"I hit on a couple of quick ones and that got my confidence going," Nelson said. "It's nice to come through like this at any time, but these games mean a lot more so it's real sweet."

"Nellie had a great first quarter and I was fortunate to get in and pick up the slack," Kuberski said. "It's kind of nice to play well against Buffalo after they didn't think I could play with them. They put me out in the cold with the season well under way."

"They've got five starters who can really score, and even without Havlicek they're tough," Buffalo's Bob McAdoo said after scoring 40 points. "Nelson fit in very nicely and Kuberski played about as good as I've ever seen him play."

With Havlicek still listed as doubtful for the third game of the Eastern Division semifinal Sunday in Buffalo, the Celtics avoid talking about any sweep.

"This was certainly a great relief to win this one without John," Heinsohn said. "If we had lost tonight, we could have been in serious trouble. Without John Havlicek everyone had to play a super ball game to beat them—and that was at home."

"We're going back to Buffalo and concentrate on the things we do best—running, rebounding, mainly running," McAdoo said. "We have not been running well in the first two games. We're also going to have to improve our defensive play if we're going to get back in the series."

The NBA West semifinals continue tonight with Golden State meeting Detroit in a series tied at one game apiece. Along with the Boston-Buffalo game Sunday, Phoenix will play Seattle.

HOGAN WON 3

NEW YORK (UPI) — Only Ben Hogan, in 1953, ever won three of professional golf's four major championships in a single year. Hogan won the Masters, the U.S. Open and the British Open that year. He did not compete in the PGA Championship, the fourth major event.

Rampettes In Romp Over A-G

Rose High School's girls' softball team took its first victory of the year Friday, romping past Ayden-Grifton, 29-9.

The Rampettes pushed over 14 runs in the first inning. Lou Foreman slapped a grand-slam homer and Barbara James hit a two-run round-tripper to key the big inning.

Rose added three in the second and two in the third, the latter pair on a two-run homer by Peggy Leggett. Rose also scored four in the fourth, and three each in the fifth and sixth.

Ayden-Grifton got one in the first, two in the fourth and six in the fifth.

Karen Haseley, Juanita Burney and Ruby Gardner led the A-G hitting with two each.

Fran Gray, Peggy Leggett, and Hester Staton each had six hits for Rose, Jill Carney, Barbara James and Karen Jeffreys each had four, Lou Foreman had three, and Susay Dickerson and Marty East each had two. Marty East was the winning pitcher.

Ayden-Grifton Downs Farmville, 12-9

By CHIP LAMBETH
Relfector Sports Writer

LITTLEFIELD—Vern Davenport's fifth inning grand slam home run gave Ayden-Grifon the runs it needed as the Chargers took their 13th win against one defeat beating Farmville Central, 12-9, Friday night.

Both teams had scored a run in the first but two extra-base hits in the A-G third gave the Chargers a 4-1 lead. Rod Kornegay's fourth inning homer made it 7-1 and after Farmville Central caught up with a three in the fifth, Davenport put the game on ice with his smash.

There was a lot of pitching done by a lot of pitchers. Farmville Central started Carroll Griffin but Griffin gave up six earned runs in three and two-thirds innings. Ricky Smith pitched to one batter in the fourth striking him out. The Jaguars threw two more at the Chargers with similar dismal success and Phillip Gordon finished the game.

A-G began the game with Mike Teachy who made it to the sixth. Chris Riggs relieved him but tired in the seventh with one out and two on. Dennis Cristiano finished the game for A-G. Teachy had scattered 13 hits.

Mike Jenkins led off with a Farmville Central walk and stole second. Tommy Cobb brought him around with a single to left for a 1-0 lead.

A-G lead off man Kornegay also walked in the bottom of the first and moved around on an out and a passed ball. He scored on Cristiano's ground out.

The Jaguars rallied for three in the top of the fifth scoring on two singles and an error. But the Jaguars were not close for long. Ned Craft led off the A-G fifth with a single, Teachy walked and Eddie Taylor walked. Davenport then hit a 2-2 pitch over the wall in left giving the Chargers the ball game.

Farmville Central kept coming back, however, getting two in the sixth and three in the seventh. In the sixth, Don Holloman singled and scored on an error and David Cochran scored on Cobb's sacrifice fly. David Joyner walked in the seventh and scored when Holloman's single to right was errored. Holloman scored on a double by Cochran and a double by Jenkins scored Cochran. The rally ended with Jenkins on second as a strike out and a ground out ended the game.

Let Grumman teach you to fly the new way

Before you look into learning to fly, think about this. Grumman American Flying Centers have the newest techniques to let you learn to fly comfortably, as fast as your own learning pace will allow. And that means efficiency which is easy on your pocketbook. Grumman American Flying Centers are run by people who know how to teach as well as fly. And you learn in the kind of airplanes you'll be flying in the years ahead; simple, smooth-flying airplanes that deliver the speeds you want without the fuelwasting fat and flab that flying's out to fight.

Eckersley Fires Two-Hitter At Oakland For His First Victory

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

If Dennis Eckersley had any home town pride he'd stop doing these terrible things to the Oakland A's.

In his rookie season of 1975, the Oakland native beat the A's twice, including a shutout in his first major league start. And those were the only two games the Cleveland Indians captured from the A's. Friday night the 21-year-old right-hander fired a two-hitter as the Indians blanked the A's 3-0 in their first 1976 meeting.

Elsewhere, the Kansas City Royals edged the New York Yankees 3-2, the Boston Red Sox trimmed the Chicago White Sox 9-2, the Milwaukee Brewers shaded the California Angels 4-2 and the Detroit Tigers nipped the Texas Rangers 7-6. Baltimore and Minnesota were not scheduled.

Eckersley, who had an earned run average of 23.62 and had failed to get past the third inning in his two previous appearances this season, struck out 10 and limited Oakland to singles by Billy Williams in the second inning and Claudell Washington in the ninth as the A's suffered their first shutout in 66 games. Charlie Spikes drove in one run with a triple and scored on Doug Howard's sacrifice fly.

Royals 3, Yankees 2

Buck Martinez homered and Jim Wohlford and Hal McRae contributed sacrifice flies as Paul Splittorff bested Catfish Hunter, 1-3, the only Yankee pitcher to have lost a game this season, in the first night game at rebuilt Yankee Stadium. Chris Chambliss and Lou Piniella homered for the Yanks.

Red Sox 9, White Sox 2

Home runs by Carlton Fisk and Carl Yastrzemski helped Luis Tiant win his third game without a loss. Fisk's third homer of the season launched a three-run second inning and Yastrzemski's three-run shot capped a four-run seventh as Boston teed off on Wilbur Wood.

Brewers 4, Angels 2

Milwaukee rallied for three runs in the eighth inning, two of them unearned on a two-out throwing error by California shortstop Orlando Ramirez. Don Money opened the inning with a double and came around with the tying run on George Scott's single and Darrell Porter's sacrifice fly. After Sixto Lezcano singled, Kurt Bevacqua grounded to Ramirez, but his throw to first was wild as two runs crossed.

Tigers 7, Rangers 6

Rusty Staub's sacrifice fly in the seventh inning drove in the tie-breaking run after Alex Johnson walked and took third on a single by Willie Horton, who hit a three-run homer in Detroit's five-run second. Texas had tied the score with two runs in the top of the seventh on two-out singles by Juan Beniquez, Mike Hargrove and Tom Grieve and an error by second baseman Jerry Manuel. Aurelio Rodriguez also homered for Detroit.

Bear Grass Gets Victory

AURORA—Bear Grass beat Aurora 6-2 in a baseball game Friday. No other details were available.

Wild McGraw Fails To Put Out Atlanta Fire

By KEN RAPPOPORT

The Philadelphia Phillies needed their top fireman in the ninth inning and dialed a hurryup call for Tug McGraw.

But instead of fanning the batters, he just the fanned the flames.

By the time the smoke had cleared, the "stopper" of the Philadelphia bullpen had walked four batters and had given up a two-run double that provided the Atlanta Braves with a dramatic 6-5 victory Friday night.

"I can't remember when I've been that wild," said the usually reliable McGraw. "I was off...but by just a little bit."

After seeing an almost certain victory turn to defeat in the five-run Atlanta explosion, Philadelphia Manager Danny Ozark was just as astounded.

"He was throwing the ball as well as he can," said Ozark. "His pitches were good and so was his velocity. But he was missing—that's all."

"What a game," said Bristol. "Sometimes you have to play past the manager's mistakes."

Bristol referred to a mistaken lineup card he handed the umpires at the start of the game that listed two shortstops and no starting pitcher. The error wasn't caught until the seventh inning.

In the other National League games, the Montreal Expos beat the Cincinnati Reds 5-4, the Houston Astros trimmed the New York Mets 3-1, the San Diego Padres beat the St. Louis Cardinals 5-1, the San Francisco Giants whipped the Pittsburgh Pirates 7-3 and the Chicago Cubs nudged the Los Angeles Dodgers 4-3 in 11 innings.

Until the ninth inning rally, Atlanta had been handcuffed by Philadelphia starter Jim Lonborg and two relievers. But when Gene Garber opened the ninth by giving up a single and two walks, Ozark called on McGraw.

Expos 5, Reds 4

Pete Mackanin's two-out single in the eighth inning scored two runs and a third came home on an error as Montreal rallied to beat Cincinnati.

Astros 3, Mets 1

Cesar Cedeno drove in all three Houston runs and reliever Ken Forsch recorded his sixth save of the young season as the Astros beat New York.

Padres 5, Cardinals 1

Giants 7, Pirates 3

Gary Matthews, who didn't hit his fifth home run last year until August 10, belted his fourth and fifth homers of the 1976 season and drove in three runs to power San Francico over Pittsburgh.

Cubs 4, Dodgers 3

Manteo Shocks Jamesville, 4-0

MANTEO—Manteo High School held Jamesville in check, despite giving up 11 walks, and gained a 4-0 victory Friday night.

Jamesville, which got only two hits off Stan Kee to go with the 11 walks, had six men put out on the basepaths during the contest. Kee struck out seven.

Edwin Lilley tossed the loss for the Bullets, giving up four hits, striking out four and walking three.

Manteo took the lead in the fifth inning. Mike Butler walked and moved up on a wild pitch. Harry Niser doubled him in, and an error on the play let Niser score too.

The other two runs came in the sixth. George Roberts reached on an error and Robert Heroux on a fielder's choice. Stan Kee tripled in Roberts, but Heroux was caught in a rundown and put out. Tom Daniels then reached on an error, scoring Kee.

The defeat dropped the Bullets to 8-3 overall. They are 5-1 in conference play. Jamesville plays host to Bath on Tuesday.

Marcis Again Is On Pole

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — For the fourth time in the nine races in which he's competed this season, Dave Marcis will be on the pole Sunday for the 21st annual Virginia 500 Grand National stock car race at Martinsville Speedway.

Marcis earned the No. 1 spot for the richest short-track event in NASCAR history when he turned in a qualifying speed of 86.286 miles per hour Friday in a Dodge over the .525-mile track.

While Marcis failed to crack the Virginia 500 and track qualifying record of 86.369 m.p.h. set in 1973 by David Pearson, he picked up the $1,000 bonus by leading the trials that determined the first 20 spots for Sunday's 1 p.m. EDT start.

Pearson, the Mercury driver who's won four of the five races in which he's competed this year, took the outside pole at 85.809 m.p.h. in his first start on a track under a mile in length.

Trailing Marcis and Pearson in the qualifying were Grand National point leader Benny Parsons with a speed of 85.026 m.p.h. and Darrell Waltrip at 84.820 m.p.h. Both were driving Chevrolets.

Buddy Baker was fifth in a Ford at 84.171 m.p.h. and Lennie Pond was sixth in a Chevrolet at 84.022 m.p.h.

Rounding out the top 10 were Cale Yarborough in a Chevrolet, Bobby Allison in a Mercury, 14-time Martinsville Speedway winner Richard Petty in a Dodge and Neil Bonnett in a Chevrolet.

Earlier this year, Marcis won the pole at Rockingham, N.C., Atlanta and North Wilkesboro, N.C. his only race victory came in the Capital City 400 at Richmond, Va.

Of those in the field, only Petty, Pearson, Marcis and Yarborough have won at the local track.

The last 10 qualifying spots were at stake today in time trials that were to be followed by an $11,030, 150-lap NASCAR National Championship Modified race in which the entries included Allison and national champion Jerry Cook.

Behind-Scenes Audience Survey

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — When the A.C. Nielsen ratings company asked a Manhattan family to keep a diary of its television-watching for a week, the young man on the phone accepted readily. He wanted to see how the system works, so he didn't tell the company that the man they were looking for — his grandfather — had been dead 11 years.

He only explained that his home had three residents and three black and white TV sets.

And so it came to pass that he, his 23-year-old sister and their 43-year-old mother each were mailed a Nielsen diary. It covered a period from 6 p.m. on Thursday, March 18, to 1:59 a.m. on Thursday, March 25.

Each home to which the diaries were sent, Nielsen says, represents 3,200 households. The responses only will affect the ratings, programming and financial fortunes of New York area stations.

They aren't part of the national Nielsen surveys of viewing habits, which are done in two ways. One is with an Audimeter, hooked to TV sets in 1,200 homes. It records what is watched, but not who is watching. The other method is a diary kept by 2,400 across the United States. Each diarist records who is watching what and when. Each diary is personally delivered by a Nielsen agent who gets from each household data dear to advertisers — age, sex, education, income, that sort of thing.

Nielsen says the national diaries cover 34 weeks of viewing, with only a third of the 2,400 homes filling in diaries on a given week. The rest have to wait their turn.

By contrast, our New York area Nielsen family only got to fill in the diary for a week, no more. The family's fun ended March 25. The results of the survey won't be available to Nielsen subscribers until this week.

The family put down their age, sex, race, the non-English languages they speak — Czech and French, in this case — and the language they speak when together, English.

They also noted the number of TV sets in their home, that all three sets worked and that one was plugged in to both cable TV and to Home Box Office, a pay TV operation supplying recent movies and special shows.

And they put down that they can watch programs on seven VHF channels — three stations being network-owned — and four UHF channels.

For their help, they received a "token" of Nielsen's appreciation — four quarters.

We have given them false names for this article — the 21-year-old will be called "Jack," his sister "Jill," and their mother "Prudence."

What sort of jurors were they? Ideal, from one standpoint: Their age span was 21 to 43. The networks consider viewers aged 18 to 49 the most desirable audience. Such folks usually have more money to spend than other age groups.

Two other pluses: Each was employed and each was attending college, a good combination of spending power and better-than-average education.

A check of their diaries showed that Jack, Jill and Prudence had, over a week's time, watched a total of 42 hours of TV. Nielsen says that was about the average for a household in 1975.

But the networks didn't fare too well. The jurors only saw 12 hours of network programs, only 3½ hours of that in prime evening time, and they watched no daytime network shows at all on weekdays.

They also proved no fans of local TV news programs offered by Fun City's six commercial stations. They didn't watch any. Nor did they watch any early-morning network show, not even NBC's "Today" show.

But they did watch 10½ hours of non-network shows on cable TV or pay TV on the set in Jill's room, while 6½ more hours went for non-commercial public TV programs on station WNET-TV here.

The remaining 13 hours were spent watching local entertainment shows on the commercial network-owned or independent stations.

Prudence was the big public TV buff in the house. She watched 5½ hours of such public TV shows as "The Adams Chronicles" and "Bill Moyers' Journal." Her 2½ other hours were spent on Sunday, watching a pro tennis game on NBC by day and "60 Minutes" at night on CBS.

Six of Jack's 18 TV hours were spent watching pro or college basketball games on cable TV. He also spent another six hours watching "Star Trek" reruns on independent station WPIX.

He logged but four network hours — one night of NBC's "Tonight" show, and on a Monday night the "CBS Evening News" and ABC's "Buster and Billie" movie. He also watched one night of "Adams Chronicles" on public TV, and a movie for an hour on WNEW, an independent outlet.

Sister Jill, who works until midnight five days a week, spent only 5½ of her 16 viewing hours on network shows — four nights of NBC's late-night "Tomorrow" show, one hour per show, and an hour's worth of NBC's 90-minute "Saturday Night" program.

She also saw ABC's half-hour "Make a Wish" kid show on Sunday. Another 4½ hours went for two recent movies on pay TV, the rest on a one-hour local talk show and late-night movies on commercial stations.

She didn't watch any public TV, mainly because she was working during the prime-time hours the better shows of public TV are aired.

Prudence, a divorcee who works as an executive secretary and is studying economics at Hunter College here, was asked why the bulk of her viewing involved public TV instead of commercial programs.

"Because I find the programs are so much better," she said briskly.

We asked the three Nielsen jurors one last and no doubt foolish question: Do they consider themselves typical viewers?

"Obviously not," said Prudence, the public TV fan.

"I hope not, I really hope not," laughed daughter Jill.

"No way, because I know some typical viewers," he said. "And they turn on the tube and they sit there, and anything that plays they watch."

Head Start Not Defunct

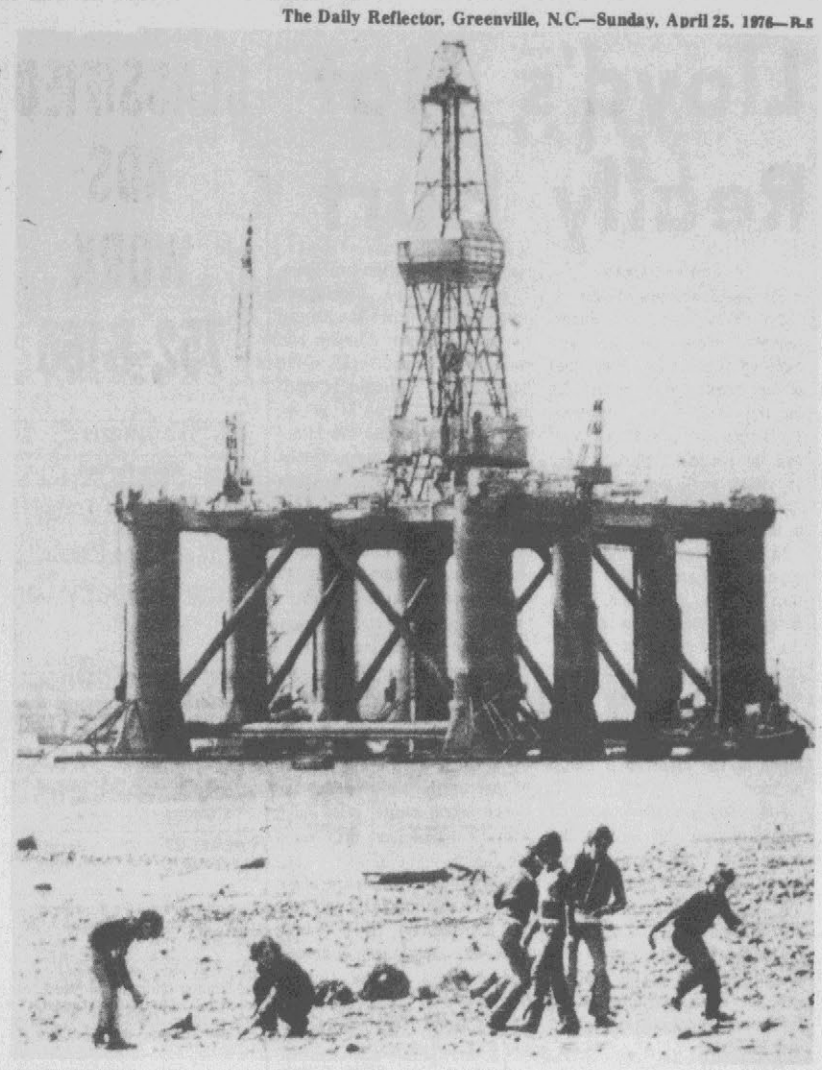

BOSTON (AP) — The Associated Press erroneously described the federal government's Project Head Start program as "defunct" in a story on early childhood education on April 5.

The program, a federal demonstration project, is still operating, but with budget increases of less than one per cent a year for the past 10 years, according to the National Head Start Association.

Federal funds for public schools, on the other hand, have increased almost 240 per cent during the same 10-year period.

The budget increases for Head Start have not kept pace with inflation, and some communities have dropped the program after being forced to make up funding gaps caused by inflation and small federal increases.

The program now serves less than 10 per cent of those who are eligible. The Ford administration has recommended a $434-million Head Start budget for fiscal 1977, $20 million less than the budget for 1976. The Head Start Association estimates an increase of $40 million is necessary in fiscal 1977 "just to maintain the existing level of program services without reducing the number of children served or severely diluting the quality of program services offered."

OUT OF WORK — This new 18-million pound oil rig, for which there is no work because of a slowdown in oil exploration in the North Sea, lies in the River Thames off Tilbury. The 28-foot-high, 18,000-ton Kingsnorth UK, built in Finland to a Norwegian design, is the largest structure ever to be floated up the River Thames. (AP Wirephoto)

Finns To Share In Bicentennial

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. (UPI) — Most countries in the world will salute America on her 200th birthday this year but none with the fervor of the people of Finland. What few Americans know is it was John Morton, a Pennsylvanian of Finnish descent, who cast the deciding vote in favor of the Declaration of Independence. To commemorate the occasion, a giant Finnish-American Bicentennial Festival will be held on Sunday, June 20, at Liberty Island in New York, site of the Statue of Liberty, and a special ceremony will be held at the Delaware monument in Chester, Pa., on Aug. 29 to celebrate the landing of the first Finns in America in 1621.

Lloyd's Not Really Hurt

By LOUIS NEVIN
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Supertankers blow up or run aground, oil rigs sink and planes crash with big payoffs for the victims. All represent big losses for Lloyd's of London, the world's biggest insurer of ships and planes, but a spokesman calls them "a drop in the bucket."

In little over two months a super bulk carrier blew up in the Western Pacific, a brand new tanker ran on the rocks of the Brittany coast of France, an oil rig sank in a North Sea storm and a California court ordered payment of $1.5 million to relatives of just two casualties of the crash of a DC-10 airliner.

Some 300 lawsuits connected with the 346 who died in the crash near Paris two years ago are still pending and the final bill could come to more than $200 million.

The Lloyd's spokesman deplored the loss of life but he said the insurance business as far as his group was concerned was booming.

Three other British companies, doing business in the more prosaic auto, household and life insurance fields in the United States, however, reported big losses last year.

Insurance companies are notoriously close-mouthed on the size of losses that hit them, as well as the amount of premiums paid on policies.

Reliable estimates, though, put Lloyd's losses on the three maritime disasters at over $40 million. Lloyd's share of the Turkish air line's DC-10 is believed to be less than 40 per cent.

But when seen in the context of Lloyd's assets, the losses don't amount to much.

The huge group, the spokesman said, has 8,500 members organized in 150 underwriting syndicates. Each member must place at the disposal of Lloyd's a minimum of 75,000 pounds ($150,000) before being elected to membership. That means a total of $1.2 billion although London experts believe the figure is close to $2 billion. In addition, the spokesman said, the group takes in annually in premiums on policies around $4 billion. Each year, a proportion of earnings goes into an emergency contingency fund which is believed to amount to several billion dollars more.

That means total funds available for payment of losses are around $10 billion — enough to cover a lot of disasters.

Maritime disasters create other problems than mere money loss. In addition to the loss of life, some wrecks have given rise to huge pollution problems. This aspect was highlighted nine years ago when the American-owned Torrey Canyon ran onto Seven Stones Rocks in the Isles of Scilly, eventually spilling its entire cargo of 120,000 tons of crude oil into the Atlantic Ocean at the approaches of the English Channel. Beaches of southwest Britain were fouled throughout the summer despite government spending of more than a million pounds ($2 million) in Operation Cleanup.

Since the Torrey Canyon, four supertankers, including the oil-bulkore carrier Berge Istra, 227,556 tons, have blown up — three of them within a two-week period at the end of 1969. All of them were empty and in ballast at the time except the Berge Istra, which was laden with Brazilian iron ore bound for Japan.

No pollution problems arose from the four tankers. Nor was any caused by the Olympic Bravery, 270,000 tons, newest and greatest of the Onassis fleet.

Built at St. Nazaire, France, she was on her way in the early hours of Jan. 24 to go into mothballs in a Norwegian fjord pending better times for the tanker business when she ran onto the fang-like rocks of Ushant just off Brest less than 200 yards from land. The Atlantic Ocean and the rocks began tearing her to pieces, while human marauders from shore stripped her fittings, including 20 cases of Scotch whisky in the owner's apartments.

The end finally came for Olympic Bravery March 13. With gales gusting to 90 miles per hour, the ship broke up to become what a Lloyd's spokesman called "the most expensive insurance write-off in history."

The tanker broke in half just behind the wheelhouse superstructure. The stern floated free and sank. The forward section remained impaled on the rocks. Underwriter estimated the Lloyd's vessel's value at $2 million for scrap.

The Lloyd's man said: "We do seem to have been hit worse than usual recently, but it would take a string of big payouts really to hurt."

Open House At Air Station

An open house will be held on Saturday, May 1 at the Marine Corps Air Station at Cherry Point. Opening hour is 10 a.m., with events to be concluded at 4 p.m.

Among various attractions provided for visitors will be performances by the Blue Angel Precision Flying Team, the Navy's Parachute Team, and a demonstration of the versatile AU-8A Harrier, the only high performance jet capable of a vertical take-off.

In addition to these highlight outdoor performances, a number of indoor displays are being prepared for public viewing.

Corn Spilled By Derailment

WEST END, Pa. (AP) — Calvin Carter was watching late news on television when one of his two dogs began barking.

"I looked out the back door and there's this mountain of corn coming toward me," Carter said. "You should have seen it. It made a loud, hissing noise."

The corn, which settled just short of Carter's back porch, was part of the cargo on a 100-car freight train bound from Columbus, Ohio, to Philadelphia. As the train was passing Carter's home, located across a narrow street and down a slight hill, 14 of the cars derailed, spilling the corn.

There were no injuries and the cause of derailment was not determined, a railroad spokesman said.

3 YEARS OR 100,000 MILES WARRANTY
ON THE PURCHASE OF A NEW TOYOTA

RECORD BREAKING SALE

WE'RE GOING TO SELL 200 NEW TOYOTAS FROM NOW UNTIL MAY 30.

12 MONTHS OR 12,000 MILES USED CAR WARRANTY

Most good used cars, if they're guaranteed at all, are only covered for a month or two. At Tarheel Toyota, we're just as willing to back our good used cars as our good new cars. So we guarantee the motor, transmission and rear end for 12 months or 12,000 miles. This warranty applies to all cars selling for more than $1000.00 or more on a 50-50 basis with all work being done in our shop. It doesn't apply to any sports cars, high performance engines or 4 speed transmissions (except economy cars). If you're in the market for a BETTER USED CAR, COME OUT AND LOOK AT OURS. We'll show you some as good as new. Guaranteed. (Owners name furnished upon request.)

PLAN YOUR HOME

SOUTHERN COLONIAL PLAN SHOWS 4 BEDROOMS

ELEGANT DESIGN OFFERS TRADITIONAL CHARM, PLENTY OF SPACE

By Jerry Bishop

Return to the days of gracious living with the Biloxi, a substantial Southern Colonial design. Four large bedrooms, two and one half baths, plentiful storage space, and zoned living areas are contained in more than 2300 sq. ft. of living space.

Reflecting its rich tradition, this brick-layered design sports four stately columns, tall shuttered windows, and the customary front porch. Inside, the plan boasts a lavish use of space and effective zoning.

Entry is into the large foyer, with immediate access to coat closet, basement, or stairway to the second floor. At right, the formal living and dining rooms provide an area for entertaining away from family living areas. Cross-traffic is minimal, and sliding glass doors link dining room and terrace.

Informal living areas are set to the left of the foyer and are dominated by the sweeping family room that extends the width of the home. Brightened by a cozy wood-burning fireplace, the room allots more than enough space for the various activities of a large family and is expanded by sliding glass doors to the patio. A combination half bath and laundry is situated off the family room for convenience.

A long corridor kitchen is well-placed to serve both family room and dining room and displays an abundance of counter space.

Filling the upper level of the home, four bedrooms are generously proportioned and handy to two full baths. Ample closet space is provided, as well as a large walk-in storage room. If not needed for storage, the windowed room makes a suitable play area for children.

The Biloxi also shows a full basement that adds another 1177 sq. ft. of space as well as a double garage with family room entry.

Manufacturer's claim — That these snips have blades of high carbon steel which were found in tests to require the use of 10 to 30 per cent less force than forged snips ... that the lightweight handles are made of high-strength aluminum alloy ... that the snips come in three sizes, 7-inches, 10-inches and 12½-inches and are made for all indoor-outdoor purposes ... and that the blades are easily replaced by removing two screws.

Manufacturer's claim — That the adhesive is used by cutting two equal portions from the resin and hardener bars, working them together in your hands and applying to surfaces ... that the adhesive dries completely in two hours and can be sanded, drilled, filed and painted ... that it will not sag or shrink ... and that it withstands extreme temperatures and can even be applied at the bottom of a pool.

THE PRODUCT — A professional pipe wrench now made for the do-it-yourself market.

Manufacturer's claim — That the wrenches feature I-beam pearlitic malleable iron handles, contoured for good gripping .. . that the steel hook jaws and nuts have been heat-treated for maximum strength and toughness ... that the hook jaws are full-floating to give easy one-hand adjustment ... and that the wrenches come in four sizes, 8, 10, 14 and 18 inches.

Manufacturer's claim — That this tape has a layer of self-adhesive asphalt under the facing and seals permanently against water, weather and ultra-violet light ... that you cut the needed length of tape, peel off the protective release paper and press it into position ... that the tape conforms to any contour with hand pressure and stays firm and pliable without shrinking or creeping ... and that the bond gets stronger with time.

'Thirty-five do-it-yourself problems are discussed in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N. J. 07666.)

(The snips are manufactured by Stanley Works, 195 Lake St., New Britain, Conn.; the adhesive by American Grease Stick Co., P.O. 729, Muskegon, Mich. 46443; the wrench by Ridge Tool Co., 400 Clark St., Elyria, Ohio. 44035; and the tape by Evode Inc., 401 Kennedy Blvd., Somerdale, N. J. 08083.

Suggests Landlord, Tenants Get Together On Difficulties

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Landlord and tenant confrontations have been documented over the years in songs, poetry, dances, but it is about time the two kissed and made up. Both are having difficulties.

That advice comes from landlord George Burke of New York, who was given title to his father's 13-family hot water tenement in the South Bronx four years ago. Landlords may be pictured as big bad dragons, and tenants are often treated as second-class citizens, he points out, but it's because there is little communication and open-mindedness. A little more understanding could go a long way.

"I had heard so much about tenements and the people who lived in them that I had expected the worst," he says. "But I got a totally different reading. I was surprised at the pride they took in their homes. And they had legitimate gripes."

In his compassion on his first visit, he would have liked to have given the tenants in the 75-year-old building everything they needed. But it was impossible. Taxes alone are 25 per cent of his rent role, he contends.

"One women desperately needed a refrigerator, but I knew there might be a chain reaction and I couldn't put refrigerators in 13 apartments. I suggested that she contribute $25 to it. That limited other requests to those who really needed them — two additional tenants."

More than 20 years ago, Burke's father bought the building in which he was operating his pharmacy. But the neighborhood has gone down rapidly in the last years, even though the building may be one of the best of the old ones in a mix that now includes some buildings that have been rehabilitated.

"There are lots of problems. For example, how can you afford to put a new bathroom in an eight-room apartment that rents for $68? Especially when a contractor wants thousands to do the job. In addition to a rotting floor — you could put your arm right through it — the corroded pipes needed replac ing . . ."

He says he was getting calls about leaks, konked out boilers, that sort of thing, at night and "if you aren't on the premises you get a whopping bill."

In solving these problems, he may have made his "best move," he said. Two college students now manage the building, hire contractors, collect rents and generally supervise it. A rent-free, small-salaried superintendent cares for the house. Meanwhile, Burke can run his advertising business in Manhattan and make occasional visits.

"The kids managed to get the bathroom done for $400," he observed. "Their relationships with tenants are very good. And the assignment has been good for them, too, as they were more or less street kids."

In the beginning they had a lackadaisical attitude, but Burke impressed on them that "when human values are at stake, you don't postpone solutions." In any event, a proud moment came when they introduced him to someone as "our friend, the landlord."

"There are insurmountable problems. You can't put adhesive on corroded lead pipes," he explained. "If you touch them they fall apart, so they must be put into molds and soldered. To repipe the house would cost thousands."

Two years in arrears in taxes and marked with "unrealistic violations" — he has been asked to rebuild a staircase that hasn't been used in 20 years and to replace an unused iron gate that serves no purpose — his days of being a landlord are numbered, he says. He is being swept into the insurmountable situation that has resulted in "10 to 50 thousand buildings" being abandoned in New York, he says.

"Every kind of tax incentive is given to draw people into the city, why shouldn't tax advantages be provided to such blighted areas to help these low-income people maintain their homes?"

He has been touched by the understanding of his tenants. After the initial peek-a-boo-the-landlord-is-here grapevine period, things settled down, and they would invite him to see how they cared for their apartments and he would explain his financial problems. They "know the score," he said.

"I'd like to see them take over the building and turn it into a cooperative, but they just can't handle it themselves. After another year the city will foreclose, but I hope these people get some kind of break," he said.

'Knowledgeable' Professor To Start Anew

By BETTY HATCH
Reflector Staff Writer

How does a young woman go about making a place for herself in the world? She might teach. She might write for and edit magazines and other publications. She might serve as a staff reporter on a newspaper. She might think of writing a novel.

Dr. Sally Brett has done these things. She is currently an assistant professor at East Carolina University, teaching English and journalism courses. She has professional experience in journalism and three degrees in English, and is now starting on a new project — the establishment of a mass media writing program at ECU which would encourage professional writing and the application of humanities to editing and writing .

The basic aim of the program is to hire two or three professional editors as editors-in-residence to teach courses in editing, commercial writing, abstracting, freelance writing and other similar skills necessary for writing for publications other then newspapers.

"I think editors are as good, if not better, as teachers of editing than writers are," explained Dr. Brett. "A writer wants to write, not edit.

"There is a very strong ethical code involved in being an editor. You don't rewrite; you get the writers to rewrite. You're not ever supposed to be visible to them and they're not supposed to feel they wrote what you wanted."

The new program is based on the differences between newspapers and other types of professional media.

Styles Differ

"A newspaper has an assigned audience," she said. "The writing has a certain style and involves more pressure. Magazine styles differ. They present the humanist viewpoint. We also want to teach the humanist essay, which is what people like Harry Reasoner are doing now.

"A writer needs to learn how to analyze a market and magazine styles, and how to research a story. Writing is the best way to learn. You don't write unless you have something to say and want to learn."

The program would ideally include students other than English majors and minors. Participation from students in social science fields would also be important.

"A good writing program builds a student's confidence in his own viewpoint," said Dr. Brett. "Literature teaches what people are really like. Such a program shouldn't be oriented toward a job for the student after graduation."

Dr. Brett joined the English department faculty in September, 1975, but she says that so far she has been "very favorably impressed with the students here." She said she also wants to take some time this summer to "explore the area," to get to know the people and the region better.

She has travelled much since her birth in Chattanooga, Tenn., and has lived in Kentucky, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Texas, Tennessee, North Carolina and Arkansas.

Her journalistic experience, in her words, is "from practical experience only." Her first job involving news writing was at the news bureau at Birmingham-Southern College in Alabama, where she received her BA degree in English.

"I worked with Don Brown, the director, who had worked on the Birmingham 'News' 15 years and had won several awards. He was a good journalist; he knew his business. He took me on as a kind of apprentice and was the first person who ever made me rewrite something I had written. When he moved to the Chamber of Commerce magazine I did some free-lance work for them."

Her next job was with the M. D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute, Houston. She served as assistant editor of medical publications which included working on the cancer yearbook. This was her first editing job.

Reporting Job

She returned to Birmingham but had trouble finding a reporting job because she was female. She finally went to work for a weekly suburban paper, the "Shadles Valley Sun." She had known the editor at Birmingham-Southern so she was hired, although at a minimal salary.

"We had an advantage in that we did not publish every day," she noted. Their paper beat out local daily papers on stories because they had more time to follow up leads and research stories and only had to concentrate on one section of the city. She learned much about city government through her work and supervised an eight-page educational supplement to the weekly issues.

She decided to return to school and became a teaching assistant in a writing program at Florida State University in Tallahassee. While completing work on her M.A. degree in English, she found that "you learn a lot about writing by trying to teach it.' ' She later went to work in Tallahassee for the Computer Assisted Instruction Center, writing technical publications, and for the Public Service Careers Program under the U.S. Department of Labor, doing job task analysis describing jobs and designing a curriculum to train for those jobs.

Her next position was with the St. Augustine "Record" in Florida as a staff reporter. It was similar to her job in Birmingham on the "Shades Valley Sun" — small, underpaid staff covering city government — although it was a daily paper in a larger city. She was in charge of a 16-page weekly entertainment issue which featured eight pages of local news and features. She learned there to use a camera and became more interested in arts and crafts.

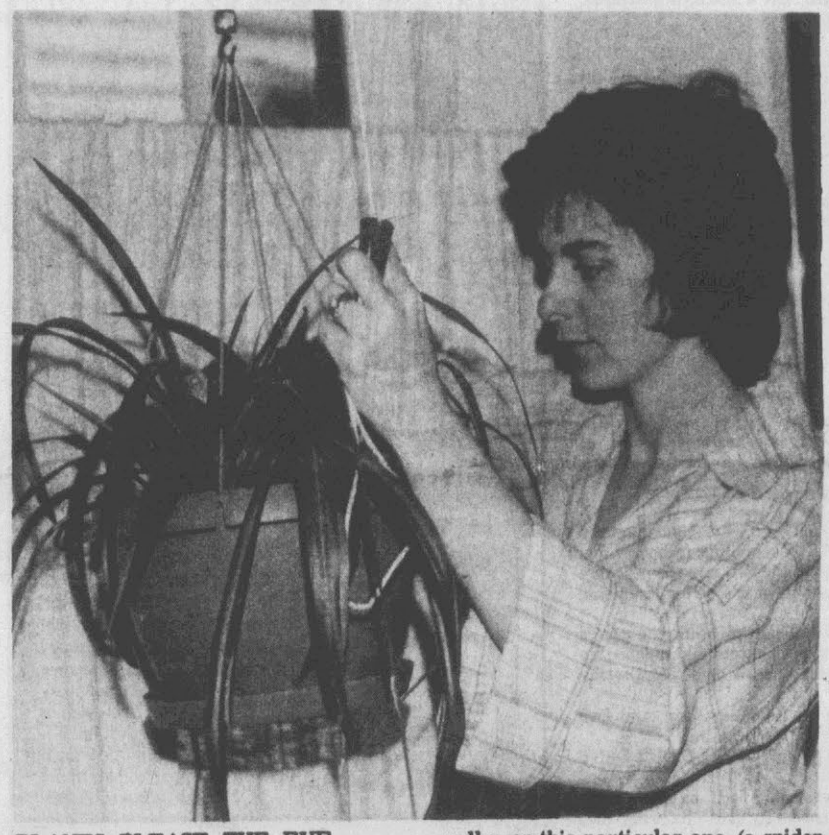

"I met some absolutely fascinating people in that city," Brett commented. "I loved it. I also realized that people notice by-lines and that they know when you really enjoy the things you write about."

At the same time she was teaching a junior college class for adults at night, and she discovered that she wanted to teach more than she wanted to be a journalist. So she went back to school again for her third degree, a PhD. in modern British literature from Florida State. She taught during her studies and spent summers working as free-lance editor for the Florida Bar Association's handbook for newsmen (published by the FSU Press)

MUSICAL CORNER . . . Dr. Sally Brett prepares for dinner by getting out napkins to grace the dining room, one of several rooms in the house decorated with objects made by her husband, George. These hand-made musical instruments represent his skill as a craftsman in fabrics and metals. They met at a bluegrass festival and enjoy travelling to various areas of the country, especially to see the predominant forms of arts and crafts across the nation.

PLANTS PLEASE THE EYE . . . Along with the many art objects in the Bretts' home are numerous plants, some of which are hung from the high ceiling and are hard to reach. The pulley on this particular one (a spider or airplane plant) enables Dr. Brett to lower the plant for watering and raise it up again for sunlight.

KEEPING UP WITH THE WORLD . . . Dr. Brett finds it important to keep up with new trends in the world of publications, especially magazines. As an assistant professor at ECU teaching English and Journalism courses, she encourages her students to read and to get practical work experience in the field of their choice. Dr. Brett will be in charge of a mass media writing program starting during the 1976-77 school year which will focus on writing for media and publications other than newspapers.

Kenya Woman Seeks Master's In Clothing

By DAVID KINNEY
UNC-G News Bureau

GREENSBORO—The letter travels halfway around the world before it reaches Dorothy Mbota Muinde. It is from her son.

In it, he tells her about his life in the countryside, of the things he has learned and what he is doing. Enclosed, always, are examples of his school work.

In her dormitory room at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, Mrs. Muinde carefully examines each piece of paper. The handwriting of her six-year-old stirs memories; she sees his face shining in the bright East African sunlight. Behind him looms Mt. Kenya, resting place of Ngai, high god of the Kikuyus.

As a Christian, the daughter of a retired Congregational minister, Mrs. Muinde does not honor Ngai. But the giant peak, which soars 17,040 feet into the sky to cradle glaciers beneath an equatorial sun, holds meaning for her as it does for all Kenyans.

It was in Machakos, 40 miles east of the capital city of Nairobi, that she was born 31 years ago. Then, as now and always, the giant mountain cast its long shadow over the land, a land whose people were Africans but whose government was British. Uhuru—freedom—was, and would remain for the next two decades, only a dream.

But when independence came in 1963, Dorothy Muinde was not there to savor it. One of 10 children in her family, she had been sent to the United States to study after finishing elementary school. She spent half-a-year at Palmer Memorial Institute, near Greensboro, then went to live with a minister's family in New York State.

There she finished high school and earned a bachelor's degree in home economics from State University of New York at Oneonta. After graduation, she returned to her homeland to teach. She eventually married, gave birth to a son, and joined the faculty of Kenyatta University College.

But she knew there was more she needed to know. So she applied for and received the first D. Elizabeth Williams International Fellowship from the American Home Economics Association Foundation. The fellowship was founded by Miss Williams, a UNC-G alumna and former home economist with the Guilford County Extension Service who now lives in Charlotte.

Since weaving is a traditional African craft and Kenya's textiles industry is expanding, Mrs. Muinde decided to get a master of science degree in clothing and textiles. Seeking a school strong in her field and located in a textiles-oriented area, she chose the School of Home Economics at UNC-G.

"And the climate is very hospitable," she added. North Carolina is somewhat like her home in the highlands where it never gets too hot and the temperature drops down into the 50's during the rainy season. At least it's more like home than New York was.

When she completes her degree and returns to Kenya this summer, Mrs. Muinde will be the only person in the country with a specialized degree in clothing and textiles. As she sits in class now, she constantly sifts through what is being taught for that which she can use then.

For example, dress patterns have to be imported to Kenya and are expensive. So, she has taken a draping course to learn how to design her own. These and other skills she has learned here Mrs. Muinde will teach her students, who in turn will teach still others.

"I am also spending what little pocket money I have on books, teaching aides and materials," she added. "I am also writing to different companies to get costs of these things. Those that I can't afford to buy now, I will order when I return home."

Although most clothing in Kenya is cotton, Mrs. Muinde is learning everything she can about most fibers. Like a sponge, she is soaking up knowledge that can be wrung from her and sopped up by others.

Despite moves to emphasize Kenya's African heritage, there is no way the nation can return to its tribal roots. "It is not like going back because we have been fully influenced by the western culture," she explained.

It is the future which beckons Dorothy Muinde. You can see it in her face when she talks about education, the profession to which she, two of her brothers and two sisters belong. You can hear it in her voice when she talks about her son and the younger brothers and sisters still at home.

It is also there when she describes Kenyatta University College, named for the nation's president and the personification of its struggle for independence. The college, founded in 1964, is housed in barracks once occupied by British soldiers.

"We haven't been able to utilize all the buildings even though we have approximately 4,000 students," she noted. The campus, located 12 miles from the capital, covers a vast area and has its own shops and theatres. The streets which criss-cross the campus are named after the African nations.

Unlike the situation in some of its neighboring countries, Kenya's blacks and whites live and work together in harmony, Mrs. Muinde said. A quarter of the college's faculty are Americans, another quarter British. When General Amin purged the Asians from Uganda, half of them settled in Kenya.

The Swedish government has built a college of science and one for the study of medicine there. The Norwegians are helping the government upgrade Kenyatta's Department of Home Economics into a full-fledged school. And the Peace Corps continues its work among the nation's people.

There is much to do. Mrs. Muinde is anxious to return and rejoin the effort. The mountain and the boy are waiting.

Valuable Experience

She found her experiences teaching journalism there very valuable in influencing her teaching methods. She had too many students apply for one class, but rather than turn them down she sent them out on the streets.

"We were only two blocks from the capitol so I sent the students out on a beat every week. They were amazed at how much they learned, such as being able to corner a politician in an elevator and get a story from him. They found out that when they walked into a room and starting taking notes, people noticed them and wanted to know which paper they were from."

Her later jobs, prior to ECU, included teaching writing to management analysts at the Bureau of Management Services (Fla.), doing rewrites for the 6 p.m. news at a television station and editing a study on the Mathematical Development of Children.

She applied in April, 1975, for a grant to bring editors-in-residence to ECU starting in December, 1976, but she said she has been assured that the program will get off the ground even if the English department has to provide funds. In the meantime she has plans to explore the area this summer and hopefully to begin work on a novel she has wanted to write for a long time.

"It would probably be based on my expereinces at Birmingham-Southern," she explained. "The women at the college were Southern and female, so they were not allowed to experience things of their generation, such as participating in the civil rights movement. They were programmed to marry and marry well. A lot of them were trapped by this and made decisions that later caused them great unhappiness."

So her work goes on. Like many other women around her, she wants to contribute to others while fulfilling herself as a person and an artist. And her progress so far makes it seem likely that she will accomplish her goals.

Report That Golf Pro's Affections Are Under Par

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I'm well over 21, and old enough to know better, but six months ago I started dating the golf pro at our club.

It all started when I took some lessons from him to improve my game. One thing led to another very quickly, and he asked me to marry him. I was walking on air. Then he said we would have to postpone the marriage for about a year due to some financial obligations he had to clear up first.

In order to speed up the marriage I let him have $2,500. Then I found out that he has been seeing another woman. Now I realize that he was only using me, but I must admit he certainly improved my game.

I have too much pride to report him to the club manager, but I would like to get my money back. Any suggestions?

TWELVE HANDICAP

DEAR TWELVE: Forget your pride and tell the club manager that the golf pro is under par in integrity. And don't get so chummy with professional swingers again unless you can remember to keep your head down and your eye on your purse!

DEAR ABBY: I have a nodding acquaintance with a woman who goes overboard when it comes to "remembering" people on their birthdays, anniversaries and all the holidays.

She remembers people she never sees and hardly knows, and I, for one, wish that she would quit "remembering" me because I feel guilty if I don't acknowledge her card.

I always write her a "thank-you" note because I don't feel right ignoring her "good wishes." It's easier than calling her on the phone because she likes to visit, and I don't care for long drawn-out telephone conversations. (She kept me on the phone once for nearly an hour when I phoned to thank her for sending me an Easter card.)

Tell me, Abby, is it necessary to acknowledge a greeting card? If you say it isn't, I'll dance for joy.

A BUSY LADY

DEAR BUSY: Don't dance, dear. All expressions of good wishes should be acknowledged. Get a stack of postcards, and do it the easy way.

DEAR ABBY: I am a high school freshman, and my mother still wants me in the house by 12 o'clock sharp every time I go out on a date.

How can I let her know that I'm not a baby any more?

LYNNE

DEAR LYNNE: She knows. That's why she wants you in the house at 12 o'clock sharp.

DEAR ABBY: Is it still "in style" for a young man to ask the father of a young lady for her hand in marriage, or isn't that done any more? Our children, who are 19 and 21, tell us that this is "corny" and that we are old-fashioned to expect it. We would like your opinion.

OLD-FASHIONED PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: It may be "corny," but there's a kernel of good manners there. It is a formality, however. When a fellow asks for a lady's "hand," he usually has both feet in the door.

DEAR ABBY: Can you tell me why I change my handwriting from day to day? It's beginning to bother me.

One day I'll slant my writing to the left, and the next day I'll slant it to the right. Some days it's straight up and down.

Then there are days when I feel like spreading the letters out, and other days I write with the letters all crunched up close together. It's to the point where I can't identify my own handwriting.

I'm a legal secretary for a reputable law firm, and I've been asked lately, "Is this your handwriting?"

WORRIED OUT EAST

DEAR WORRIED: Graphologists tell us that one's handwriting reflects one's personality and character, and possibly the state of one's mind. If I were you I'd consult a psychiatrist.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing from my hospital bed where I have been confined for three weeks. I'll be here for at least another three weeks for treatment, but that's not my problem.

My problem is a relative who comes to visit me nearly every day. I never saw that much of her when I was well, and she aggravates me. She always brings me bad news and the worst kind of gossip. If I have other visitors while she's here, she doesn't let anybody else talk. She is a very loud and overbearing person. And she's an authority on everything.

She asks questions that are none of her business, such as: "How much does it cost to stay here and how much is covered by insurance?" Then she ends up by telling me that most people go home sicker than they were when they came to the hospital because there is so much disease around there.

Also, she said, "You aren't really sick at all; it's all in your head."

Abby, how can I keep that woman out of here? I don't want to put a "Do not disturb" sign on my door because I like company—but not her! What can I do?

TRAPPED IN THE HOSPITAL

DEAR TRAPPED: Enlist the help of your nurses and/or your doctor. Ask them to please tell the woman that her visits are upsetting and she is not to come again.

Before placing filled jars in the processing kettle, tightly screw down screwbands and leave in tightened position. Do not tighten screwbands further after processing.

Holt-Massey Vows Said On Saturday Afternoon

Miss Carolyn Ann Massey and Ernest Harvey Holt II were united in marriage Saturday at 3:00 p.m. at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. James Bailey. A program of nuptial music was provided by Dr. David Foster, organist, and Mrs. Julian J. White, soloist.

Parents of the couple are Mrs. Moulton Braxton Massey Jr. and the late Mr. Massey of Greenville, and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Harvey Holt of Greenville.

Given in marriage by her brother, Moulton Braxton Massey III, the bride wore a formal length gown of organza. The long sleeve gown featured an open portrait neckline accentuated by double flared ruffles of organza extending down the deep scooped back. The fitted bodice featured floral sprays of Venise lace. The full flared skirt was edged at the hemline of the chapel length train in a double ruffle flounce bordered in the floral Venise lace.

Her veil was a chapel length illusion mantilla edged in a floral gown, held in place by a Juliet cap trimmed in the Venise lace flowers.

Miss Deborah Massey of Greenville, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Serving as bridesmaids were Mrs. Michael J. Lucas of Reidsville, sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. Jeffrey Hazelton of Winterville, cousin of the bride, Miss Betsy Kempton, Miss Molly Merritt, and Mrs. Charles C. Clark, all of Greenville.

They wore formal length gowns of red voile dotted in white over red taffeta. The sleeveless gowns were styled with a deep V-neckline. The fitted bodice featured a wrap effect off centured by a silk flower in white. The hemline of the gathered skirt featured a deep border of solid white voile banded in red and white striped grosgrain ribbon. The gowns were complimented by a triangular scarf of the dotted voile also bordered in the stripped ribbon. They wore white straw garden hats and carried baskets of daisies.

MRS. ERNEST HARVEY HOLT II

Serving as best man was Ernest Harvey Holt. Ushers were Michael J. Lucas of Reidsville, Johnnie Holland of Monroe, Charles C. Clark, Kim Harbin, and Larry Hatton, all of Greenville.

After a wedding trip to Sea Island, Ga., the couple will reside in Greenville.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Willie Louis Faison of Wake Forest announce the engagement of their daughter, Wanda Lynn, to John Wells Billmyer Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Wells Billmyer of Huntington Beach, Calif. The wedding will take place in July.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Advertisers have known for years what I am just starting to suspect.

Americans will buy anything if the pitchperson has a foreign accent.

'Ill buy a camera from Sir Laurence Olivier that I don't need, a car from Ricardo Montalban that I can't afford, and a headache from Joan Fontaine that I already have.

It's more than just the authoritative way in which a product is presented to us. I think Americans are just plain impressed with people who speak another language—even if it is their own.

It's dumb when you think about it. Take coffee. The housewife's authority on good coffee has to be Mrs. Olson. Old "spout mouth" whips in and out of houses like a revolving door spreading the richest kind of whole-bodied goodness wherever she goes.

Think about it. Sweden exports about two cups of coffee a year—not exactly their gross national product. So why should I believe Mrs. Olson?

Or ballpoint pens. I watched skier Jean-Claude Killy sit before a roaring fire penning a bit of prose to someone with his new pen and went out and bought a couple of dozen. Since when is France the ballpoint pen capital of the world?

In our minds we have built up myths about different countries. We believe that all European women are beauties and have flawless skin. (Would it shock you to know that I once saw a contessa with a cold sore?)

We know that all Italians are good cooks, the Irish smell like soap, and the Japanese are fanatically neat and would never throw a candy wrapper on the floor.

And when it comes to men, we all know it's Frenchmen like Louis Jordan who would send us flowers or Englishmen like Peter Sellers who would fly us first class anywhere in the world.

I even bought the bit from the Spanish beauty who said, "I am a shy person. Please go out and buy my wine so I won't have to make any more commercials."

FOOD TRENDS

CHICAGO (UPI) — Consumer attitudes and behavior toward the supermarket industry will be discussed at a workshop during the Super Market Institute's annual convention in Dallas starting May 2.

Trends will be reported by Yankelovich, Skelly and White, based on that organization's study for the Food Distribution Information Council:

Other subjects to be covered at the four-day convention include the effects of the USDA grading change on retail meat programs and consumer research on the controversial Universal Product Code system. Many consumer activists oppose UPC because it would eliminate the need for individual price marking of products.

Face it, we're still under the influence of the old world. I expect any day now on the bicentennial minute to hear: "The voyage from Southhampton to the Colonies was a rough one and would have been rougher without Mother Hill's Seasick Pills. They soothed upset tummies, brought down fever, and took care of irregularities. The Pilgrims arrived in their new country feeling refreshed and ready to revolt. This is Queen Elizabeth and that's the way it was."

Couple Weds In Noon Ceremony

Miss Teresa Elizabeth Messner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stanley Messner of Greenville, and Whitney Francis Phillip Miller III, son of Mr. and Mrs. Whitney Francis Phillip Miller Jr., of Greenville, were united in marriage Saturday at high noon in St. Paul's Epsicopal Church.

The double ring ceremony was solemnized by the Rev. Lawrence Patrick Houston Jr., minister of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, assisted by Father Maurice Spillane, priest of St. Paul's Catholic Church, New Bern.

Organist, Mrs. Ernest Robert Irwin, presented a program of nuptial music prior to the ceremony. Mrs. Lee Todd Pair, soloist, sung "More," "Whither Thou Goest" and "The Wedding Prayer" as the benediction.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore her mother's wedding gown. The gown was fashioned in candlelight featuring a fitted bodice of chantilly lace over satin, styled with a scooped neckline outlined in clipped chantilly lace centered in seed pearls. The sheer yoke of illusion was also trimmed in the lace and pearls. The long fitted sleeves of lace featured calla points with closures of satin buttons at the wrist. Her bouffant skirt and attached cathedral train were designed in tiers of imported illusion interspersed with bands of chantilly lace.

She wore an illusion veil bordered in lace to compliment her gown held in place by a Camelot headpiece that was trimmed in lace, beaded with pearls. She carried a bouquet of white roses, yellow roses, white carnations and baby's breath.

Miss Pamela Hilton Messner, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. Mrs. Johnny Elmo Wilson, sister of the bridegroom, served as matron of honor. They wore formal length gowns of voile printed in a floral pattern in shades of blue, green and orange on a maize background over maize taffeta. The gowns were styled with an open V-neckline featuring a flared collar. The short, flared sleeves were also fashioned in the sheer printed fabric. The bodice front featured a gathered panel centered by a rose in the self-fabric. The honor attendants wore blue ruffled brim hats to compliment their gowns and each carried a long-steammed yellow rose.

Bridesmaids were Miss Leigh Bryan Messner, sister of the bride, and Miss Barbara Jean Dail of Greenville, Miss. Margaret Leslie Sloan and Miss Anne Lenzner of Raleigh, Miss Bonnie Kirk Bell of Southern Pines, and Miss Evelyn Ketchin Buie of Laurinburg. Their dresses were identical to the honor attendants with ruffled brim hats in maize, and they also carried a long-stemmed yellow rose.

The honorary bridesmaids were Miss Wandra Kay Elks and Miss Katherine Davis Williams of Greenville, and Mrs. Eddie George Anderson of New Bern.

The bridegroom's father served as best man. The ushers were Johnny Elmo Wilson of Aurora, Jeffery Stewart Barwick, William Curtis Lee, William Federick Whiteford, James Clifton Paige II of Greenville, Eddie George Anderson of New Bern, and Jimmy Phillip Hunt of New Orleans, La.

The mother of the bride selected a formal length gown of pink knit designed with a V-neckline and capelet sleeves. She carried a white orchid on her handbag. The mother of the bridegroom chsoe a formal jacket dress in spring green and carried a yellow orchid on her handbag.

Mrs. W. F. P. Miller Sr., grand mother of the bridegroom, wore a peach ensemble and a corsage of white carnations. Mrs. James Con Lanier Sr., the bride's grandmother, wore a blue formal length gown with a matching coat and a corsage of white carnations.

Assisting in receiving and serving were Mrs. Charles Frederick Bath, Mrs. Clarence Bennett Tugwell Jr., Dr. and Mrs. Eric Lindsey Fearrington, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Roy Hardee, Mr. and Mrs. Barnie Hayes Barrett, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Lee Pair, Mrs. Patrick Joseph Dayson, Mrs. Kenneth Joseph Davis, Mrs. Virgil Scoville Clark and Mrs. Robert Boyd Hungate.

Miss Robbin Louise Miller sister of the bridegroom, received at the guest book. Miss Patricia Clark Tugwell, Miss Patricia Lynn Bath and Miss Jennifer Lynn Davis also assisted in serving. The Parish Hall was decorated with spring flowers and greenry.

The parents of the bride honored the bridal party and out-of-town guests at a champaigne lunch at the home of the bride following the reception. Spring flowers and greenry were used throughout the home.

On Friday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Whitney Francis Phillip Miller Jr. entertained at a dinner at Houston's honoring the wedding party and out-of-town guests following the rehearsal.

The bride graduated from St. Mary's College, Raleigh, and has recently been employed by the State Personnel in Raleigh. The bridegroom attended East Carolina University and graduated from Durham School of Prosthodontics in December. Following a wedding trip to South Carolina and Florida, the couple will reside in Greenville, where the bridegroom will be associated with Whit's Dental Labortory.

Deputy Grand Regent Visits WOTM

Greenville Chapter No. 1308, Women of the Moose, heard a talk by Mrs. Margaret Bost, deputy grand regent for North and South Carolina, at a meeting Thursday night at the Moose Temple.

Mrs. Bost, of Salisbury, was introduced by Mrs. Wilma Turner, senior regent of the Greenville chapter, who presided over the meeting.

The visiting WOTM officer spoke on membership. She outlined the advantages and priviledges offered by WOTM membership and stressed the importance of the chapter contantly seeking to expand its membership.

Prior to the meeting, Mrs. Bost was guest of the chapter officers at a dinner at the Three Steers.

On her first visit to the Greenville chapter, Mrs. Bost was accompanied by Mrs. Judith McKnight, junior graduate regent of the Salisbury WOTM chapter.

Co-Workers from chapters in Tarboro, Wilson, and Roanoke Rapids were also guests of the Greenville chapter as was Mrs. Arthur Fisk, a member of the Gastonic chapter, whose husband was recently named secretary of the Greenville Moose Lodge.

Following the meeting, the group had refreshments served by Greenville WOTM members.

Design Seminar Starts Wednesday

Jan Pinkston, an interior design consultant with 20 years experience in the decorating field, will teach a three-course design seminar here Wednesday and Thursday.

The seminar, entitled "Planning a Look to Live With," will focus on the use of color and the "total room" concept, a lesson in how to completely decorate a room.

Each four-hour course costs $3 for participation. The do-it-yourself courses are sponsored by Belk-Tyler. Anyone interested in pre-registering may call Mrs. Edna Cox or Miss Jan Heidenreich, 758-2176, Ext. 41.

Ms. Pinkston, a native of Chicago, Ill., graduated from Auburn University and received a degree from the Chicago School of Interior Design. She taught interior design for two years at Rowan Technical Institute and Catawba College. She has had 10 years experience teaching retail seminars and was instrumental in the design of the first 70 homes in Columbia, Md., a model city.

It's possible for home canned foods to contain the poison causing botulism—a serious food poisoning—without showing signs of spoilage. To avoid this risk, your canning equipment needs to be in top shape and it's important that you follow reliable canning recommendations. As a precaution, it's a good idea to boil home-canned vegetables and meats before tasting. Bring vegetables to a rolling boil, then cover and boil for at least 10 minutes. (Boil meats, spinach and corn 20 minutes). If the container of food has a bulging end or lid, a leak, or spurts liquid or has an off odor when opened, destroy it out of reach of children or pets, without tasting the food.

Gets His Exercise Digging Up Civil War Cannons

KEY WEST, Fla. (UPI) — Three days a week, 62-year-old Howard England takes his shovel, goes out to old Fort Zachery Taylor and tries to dig up another Civil War cannon.

England has found 18 cannons so far, but says he still has 180 to go.

Instead of a cannon, England sometimes finds a brass button, a mini ball, a clay pipe or a fragment of china. Occasionally he finds a scrap of bone from a slave or a prehistoric Indian and several times he has found potentially dangerous Civil War shells with its charge still active.

Since 1968, the retired naval architect-historian has made Fort Taylor his personal labor of love. At first he worked only on weekends, but after retiring three years ago from the now-deactivated Key West Naval Base, he began digging three days a week at the fort.

So far, England has spent 9,000 hours on the project and $400 for tools. His only help is from volunteers, who currently include 10 sailors assigned to the nearby Boca Chica Naval Air Station.

At his present rate, England figures it will take him 11 more years to complete the job. But if all goes well, Florida may get title to Fort Taylor this year from the federal General Services Administration. Then England may get some excavating machinery and complete the job in two or three years.

Fort Taylor was one of a chain of forts begun during the Mexican War to protect America's Atlantic and Gulf Coasts. Stephen Mallory, first a U.S. Senator from Florida and later navy secretary of the Confederacy, loaned some of his slaves to work on it.

The old 1844 model Columbiad cannon and more modern Rodman and Parrot guns commanded all of Key West from the fort, which then was 1,200 feet off shore and connected to the southwest tip of the island by a causeway.

Mallory was so impressed with the fort and its armament that he dissuaded Jefferson Davis from ordering it attacked. Thus Key West became the only city in the Confederacy to remain in Union hands throughout the Civil War.

At the time of the Spanish-American War in 1898, Fort Taylor was modernized and 12-inch coast defense rifles replaced the Civil War muzzle loading cannon. Because the second floor casements interfered with the trajectory of the new guns, it was ordered removed and the lower rooms filled in.

That's how England's cannons and the bones got there.

The cannons were dumped into the rooms and a contractor was hired to haul in sand and earth to fill the rooms. Unbeknown to the Army, which then controlled the fort, the contractor dug up sand from a cemetery that had been destroyed by a hurricane in 1846. The bodies in the marked graves in the cemetery were moved after the hurricanes, but the bodies of slaves had been buried in unmarked graves and their bones became part of the Fort Taylor fill.

When the fort's commander learned where the contractor was getting his sand, he ordered him to find another source. So the contractor went to nearby Boca Chica and scooped away earth from an Indian burial mound some 3,000 to 4,000 years old, and its bone fragments also found their way into Fort Taylor, along with some indian tools fashioned from conch shells.

England became interested in Fort Taylor when a woman wrote to a Miami newspaper (the Miami Herald) in 1968 asking why old Fort Jefferson on Dry Tortugas, 78 miles away, was a national monument but Fort Taylor, used in the Mexican, Civil, and Spanish-American Wars, as well as World Wars I and II, was nothing more than an unmarked mound of earth.

He tried to interest the National Park Service in the project and Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., introduced a bill in Congress to make the fort a national monument. But Park Service Director Ronald Walker replied two years ago that all the money it had was needed for "exciting" parks and monuments and the Interior Department wasn't interested in Fort Taylor.

The Navy got title to the fort in 1947 and filled in the last of the water separating it from Key West. When the Key West Navy Base was deactivated three years ago, the fort was handed over to the General Services Administration.

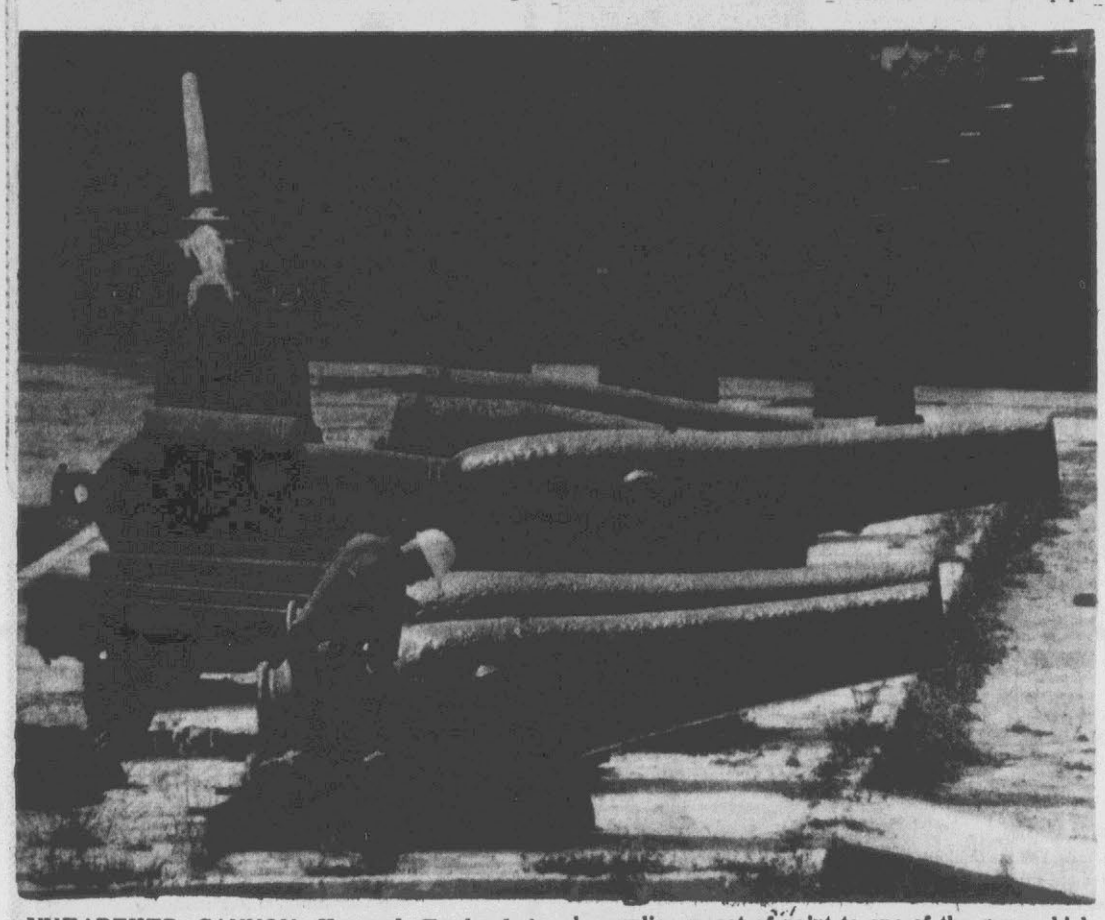

For the last two years, Florida has been dickering with the GSA to give it the site for a state park.

England says there are too many cannon buried at Fort Taylor to be displayed there. When he finishes his excavations, some of the cannon will probably be moved to other historic forts in Florida.

He hopes some of the remaining surplus cannon can be swapped to the National Park Service, "because they have some of the other things, such as small arms, we need for our museum."

England says he isn't really concerned about any recognition for his labors because he has been repaid with personal satisfaction and good health.

"The kind of exercise I've been getting is the best kind," he said. "I only weigh five pounds more than I did 30 years ago."

UNEARTHED CANNON—Howard England is dwarfed by the large cannons he has uncovered. Here he applies a coat of paint to one of the guns which were covered by several feet of debris. (UPI Photo)

Mineral Is Named For South Dakotan

RAPID CITY, S.D. (AP) — The curiosity of an amateur mineralogist has led to the discovery of a new mineral in the Black Hills and international recognition for the lucky finder.

Milo Olmstead of Rapid City will be remembered as the man who discovered Olmsteadite, which was named in his honor. The new phosphate mineral has been found at two locations in the Black Hills.

The discovery process dates back to 1973.

W.L. Robers, curator of mineralogy at South Dakota School of Mines and Technology, sent samples of a thick, deep brown-to-black, prismatic phosphate crystal to the University of Chicago for analysis. The samples were culled from the Hesnard Mine near Keystone.

It was reported that the samples contained potassium, niobium, iron and phosphorus. X-ray and crystal study showed the possibility of a new mineral.

Several months later, Roberts submitted other tabular crystals of an unknown brown phosphate that Olmstead had collected from the Big Chief pegmatite near Glendale. X-ray pictures revealed that the two materials were identical.

Roberts suggested that the new mineral be named Olmsteadite to honor Olmstead, "whose keen judgment led to further examination of the new species." The International Mineralogical Association concurred.

The process of proving new mineral discoveries is exacting, Roberts said. All physical properties must be proven: color, dimensions, hardness and specific gravity. A complete chemical analysis is established.

When all of the data have been assembled, they are submitted to the association's Commission on New Minerals and Mineral Names for comparison with all existing reports from around the world.

If it proves to be a new mineral, it is approved, named and added to the list of the world's minerals.

SOLUTION OF YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE

PARIS, Mo. (UPI) — A Missouri conservation agent recently fined a hunter $100 for illegal possession of a hen pheasant. The man said he thought the bird was a hawk. But the agent said the explanation didn't solve anything because shooting hawks also is illegal.

Car Problem In Romania

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Traffic accidents tend to become a "problem of public health" in Romania, press reports here say, despite the fact that only about 10 in 1,000 people of Romania's 21.4 million population own a car.

According to official statistics that were made public for the first time, 29,158 car accidents occurred in the 1964-74 period in this country.

This resulted in 14,400 deaths and 25,042 injuries. Despite efforts for better traffic control on roads, and severe driving regulations, the death toll in 1975 increased by 13 per cent over the year before, to 1,620.

Excessive speed, failure to pay attention and irresponsible driving contributed to an acceleration in the number of accidents and casualties, which paralleled the increase in traffic and drivers.

Accidents in which alcohol was a factor have been the most serious ones, Victor Beda, chief of the police traffic department said in an interview. One in every 1.7 alcohol-related accidents resulted in a fatality, he said.

To cope with the nation's car appetite, a meeting of the academy of medical sciences recently asked for new regulations and enforcement efforts for about 1.4 million license owners.

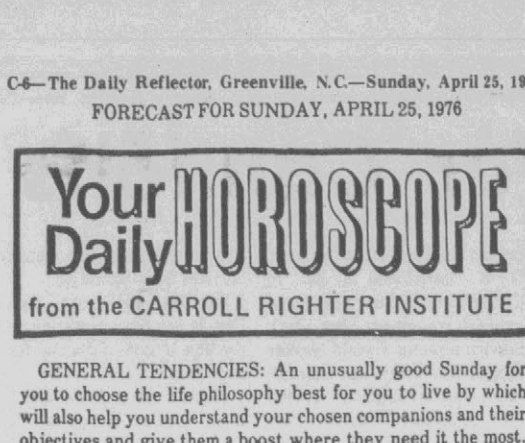

Officials give credit to a school educational program, the training of special intervention teams and the refusal to serve alcoholic drinks to drivers in public road restaurants.

For the weak-willed, "self-education"—the power to resist the bottle — was recommended.

Predicts Large Trade Surplus

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — The United States will have an agricultural trade surplus of almost $13 billion this year, an economist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service predicts.

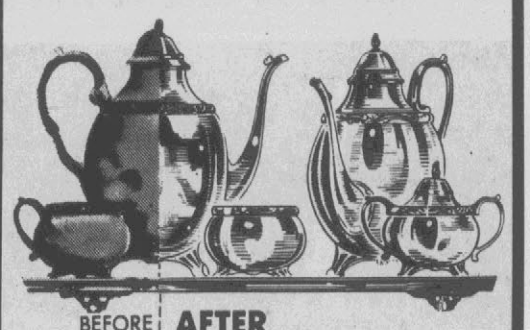

Dr. W.E. Black said the surplus will be an increase of about $1 billion over 1975 totals. He predicted the U.S. will import about $10 billion in agricultural goods, and will export about $23 billion.

Rattlers Emerge When Spring Comes To Prairies

BY DANIEL CHISZAR

KEOTA, Colo. (UPI) — Rattlesnakes are among the most hated creatures alive.

They are ugly and seldom inspire poetry.

But just like the migrations of robins and the blooming of flowers, their emergence from hiding is a sure sign of spring.

Each spring for thousands of years they have slithered from their mysterious denning areas to scatter onto the dusty western plains. This year is no different.

Prairie rattlesnakes spent the last few weeks basking in the sun near communal dens, recovering from a long winter hibernation until ready to leave separately for other areas.

Jeff Kimble, a blond, bearded outdoorsman from Centennial, Wyo., stumbled onto a half acre of dens about eight years ago. He returns periodically to study the reptiles.

On a recent trip back, Kimble drove his pickup truck off the road near the Wyoming-Colorado border and bounced along the dry prairie in a dusty cloudy, steering around gullies and sagebrush. He pulled the truck into a ravine near some chalky white and brown cliffs, climbed out and strapped a six shooter on his hip.

Falcons, badgers, lizards and rattlers are at home here. The jagged peaks of the Rocky Mountains are barely visible 10 miles to the west.

Kimble once counted a minimum of 200 snakes in the area within 20 minutes. He claims there could easily have been 500.

"They'll be leaving in a day or two," he said. "Then they'll be moving out in all directions. Everywhere you step you'll be walking on snakes."

With Kimble was Dave Chiszar, an animal behaviorist from the University of Colorado who has studied rattlesnakes for three years.

"There's no way of telling how many snakes are here," Chiszar said. "I'm willing to bet we're standing on the main aggregate area for about five miles in all directions, maybe more."

They walked carefully into the area and within minutes found five or six rattlers sunning themselves at the mouth of a deep hole in the earth.

The prairie rattlers felt the vibrations of footsteps. The broad flat heads rose up looking directly at the two men. One snake began rattling but most were still sluggish from the hibernation.

"The rattle is meant to scare," Chiszar said. "The snake doesn't want to tangle with the hiker who stumbles on it. What it wants is for you to leave it alone. It's actually a timid creature."

The prairie rattlesnake is the most common western rattler, found from the Mississippi River to California. Lawrence Klauber, a herpetologist and foremost rattlesnake authority, says the creatures can probably live at elevations up to 10,000 feet.

Few people die from rattlesnake bites these days, even from the fangs of the prairie rattler which has the most deadly venom of the species.

"I'd say the prairie rattlesnakes are among the most dangerous of the North American rattlers," Chiszar said. "It is theoretically possible that a guy could die if he gets a strike directly into the bloodstream but it's unlikely. He'll get sicker than hell though."

The old time-tested remedy of a slight cut across the wound and sucking the venom out remains the best remedy for snake bite, he said, but it must be done immediately after the strike to be effective.

Other rattlers were near their dens basking in the sun and becoming more active as their body temperatures warmed. The dull green skin with brown blotches could barely be distinguished form the surrounding terrain. Most of the snakes slid off into nearby dens soon after sensing the men's presence.

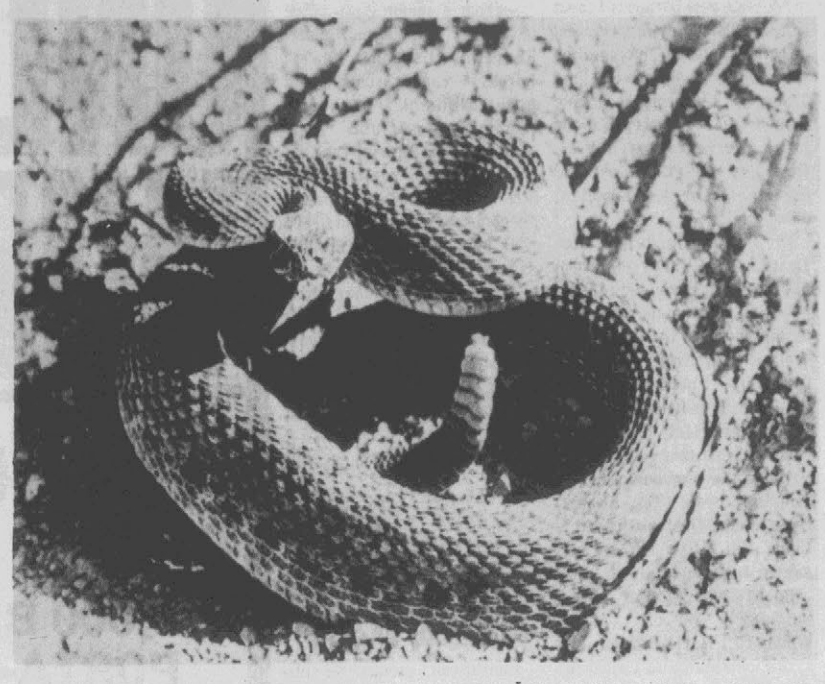

In a nearby arroyo, however, the two men crept up on a three-foot rattler before it had a chance to slip away. For 30 minutes they sat less than six feet from the coiled snake while it rattled and threatened in a striking position.

The snake rarely moved except when one of the men changed position. Then its flat head slowly turned to follow the movement.

A rattler has a striking distance of roughly two-thirds its body length. The strike is faster than the human eye can follow. Klauber says the snakes vary in temperment but will generally avoid a fight if they nave a choice.

"Well, I think we've terrorized this old boy about enough," Chiszar said, and the men picked up their equipment and walked off, leaving the snake still coiled and rattling.

On the way back to the truck, they stopped to watch another group of rattlers retreat to the safety of a crack in the ground. The same snakes will be able to find their way back to the same crack in the ground next fall. Those that make it back.

Biological Controls Of Insects Hawaii's Goal

By CILE SINNEX
Associated Press Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — Scientists fighting a critical battle against pests here are creating an unusual example of replacing pesticides with biological controls.

"Hawaii is probably the most vulnerable spot on earth," says Dr. John Beardsley, a University of Hawaii entomologist. "But we probably have the best opportunity of achieving biological control."

In the face of environmental concern about pesticides, scientists everywhere are increasingly interested in biological control — using natural predators to fight crop pests. Entomologists have worked on such natural controls here for nearly 60 years.

"We have spent more per capita in Hawaii looking for insects' natural enemies than any other state I know of," says Dr. Asher Ota, an entomologist for the Hawaii Sugar Planters Association. "We are very afraid."

Afraid with good reason. Agriculture is Hawaii's third-ranking source of income, and sugar cane and pineapple represent more than 90 per cent of the half-billion-dollar-a-year agriculture industry.

Hawaii's semitropical climate and the constant stream of planes and ships from thousands of miles away allow as many as 20 new species of foreign insects to establish themselves here every year. Such species can flourish because they have left their natural enemies behind them. And if an insect stowing away on an incoming plane happens to have a taste for sugar or pineapple, Hawaii's economy is threatened.

Hawaii has more entomologists "per square mile than any other place in the world's fighting immigrant pests, Beardsley says. Among them are exploratory entomologists who roam warmer parts of the world looking for insects that will kill pests in Hawaii. One entomologist returned from four months in Asia recently with 750 different insects to test.

The hottest import at the moment is the statphylinid beetle, which is being groomed to take o the souring beetle, a pest that breeds in rotting pineapple stumps and has been linked to a fungus disease in sugar cane.

If entomologists are satisfied that the statphylinid will attack the souring beetle without harming beneficial insects or otherwise upsetting the natural balance, it will be turned loose in the fields in large numbers. Hundreds of other insects from seven species have failed in previous laboratory tests.

One of the entomologists' biggest recent victories was the downfall of the banana skipper, a caterpillar that eats leaves from banana trees. Pesticides that would have killed the beast were banned by federal regulations. But scientists quickly discovered an insect in Thailand that would devour the caterpillar, and within a year the banana industry was safe.

The state and private industry spend about $300,000 a year in the search for insect predators and consider it a bargain. In the long run, Ota says, the constant use of insecticides would cost more than natural control.

The prime example is the sugar industry — nearly 250,000 acres completely free of pesticides.

As the tourist industry grows, bringing more and more jetliners, so grows the chance for unwanted insect stowaways. But U.S. Department of Agriculture inspectors routinely check all arriving planes.

The department also disposes of garbage arriving in Hawaii aboard planes and ships to prevent still more insects from getting a foothold.

"We're one of the few institutions in the world doing preventive entomology," says Ota. "We've been worried for years about the so-called Fijo disease of sugar cane."

The fungus disease, which is transmitted by an insect called the leaf hopper, exists in Fiji and Australia. Because leaf hoppers also exist in Hawaii, the disease could spread through cane fields here like wildfire, says Oa.

Before one infected leaf hopper arrives in Honolulu International Airport and starts looking for a mate, scientists hope to find varieties of cane that are less susceptible to the fungus.

There is one bright spot in the scramble to stay ahead of the insects. Almost none of Hawaii's native insects has become a pest. Most of the state's crops are of foreign origin, and only foreign pests have developed a liking for them.

On The Young Side

By JANET GANTT

Rose High students returned from the Easter holidays to finish the last three days of a busy school week.

Carousel was the center of conversation around the campus during the week. The musical production was performed three times on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights. Assemblies were held on Wednesday and Thursday afternoons to enable students to see excerpts of the play. Congratulations are extended to the entire cast and directors for an excellent production.

Dr. Robert Augspurger of the East Carolina University School of Business presented an interesting program on computers to members of the Math Club Wednesday afternoon. As a follow-up, members participated in a field trip to the ECU Computer Center to practice what they had learned. Visiting the Computer Center Thursday were Tim Casper, Lynn Gantt, Debbie Girdharry, Linda Hill, Mike Jeffreys and Janice Johnson.

Bobby Kim, Paige Levey, Suzanne McGee, Anita Whichard, David Sowell and Liza Zickerman also visited the center.

Volunteer Greenville

Mike Davis and Mrs. Susan Mescher attended a recent Rose High Student Government Association meeting to discuss Volunteer Greenville with the homeroom representatives. Mrs. Mescher talked to the group about "Volunteerism" in different areas of work in the Greenville area. The Student Government was urged to start a 4-H Club at Rose High to broaden the span of volunteer work in the school.

Petitions for candidates running for S.G.A. or class offices were collected during the week. Candidates for an office in the Student Government Association are: Mary Lou Dienier, James Foreman, Bobby Kim, and Dave Middleton for president; Janet Gantt for secretary; and Vanessa Teel for treasurer.

Seeking a senior class office for 1976-77 are: Lynn Calder, Kenneth Gladson, Cheryl Forbes, Freager Saunders and Billy Williams, president; Cristina Baro and Hope McMillan, secretary-treasurer.

Voting will take place Thursday and Friday, April 29-30. All students are encouraged to vote and participate in the selection of the leaders of the school government for the next school year.

City School Lunch Menu

Lunchroom menus for the coming week at Greenville elementary schools have been announced as follow:

Wednesday—school-baked pizza, tossed salad, fruit crisp, milk;

Thursday—beef stew with vegetables, corn, rolls, strawberry shortcake, milk;

Book Fair At School Monday

FALKLAND—The Falkland Elementary School will sponsor a student book fair Monday through Thursday from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m.

Books will be on display in the media center. The book fair committee invites all students, parents and visitors to attend the fair. All profits will be used for media center materials.

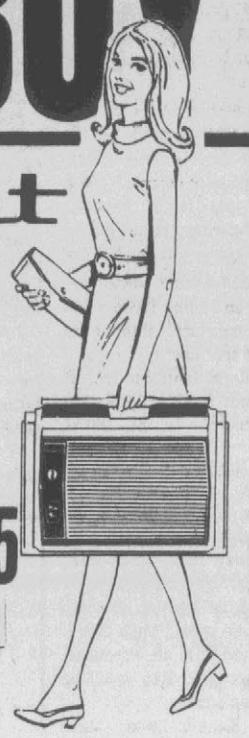

The media coordinator is sponsoring the event with Vivian Humphrey serving as book fair chairman. The committee includes Susan Keigler and Patricia Dail.

K.B. PACE ACADEMY

Will be testing students for the 1976-77 school year on April 28 and 29. Arrangements for testing students for grades 1 - 10 may be made by calling the academy office at 756-2244 between 8 a.m. and 3 p.m., Monday - Friday. Parents wishing a personal interview, a tour of the school or observation of classes in progress may call Mrs. Carol Whitaker, Headmistress, for an appointment.

Who Are The Poor? It Depends On Who's Asked

By DAVID E. ANDERSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Who are the American poor?

The question, vital in determining social policy, has almost as many answers as the people who ask it. Everyone seems to have a different formula for deciding the answer.

According to the Census Bureau, there were 24.3 million poor people in the United States in 1974, the last year for which figures were available. That was more than 10 per cent of the population.

Poverty generally is defined as the lack of adequate food, housing, clothing, medical care and other "necessities," but how that is determined can be complicated and controversial.

The definition is important because it determines who is eligible for billions of dollars in federal assistance for food stamps, job training, health care and other social welfare programs.

The Census Bureau, which uses the terms "poverty," "low income" and "poor" interchangeably, measures poverty by a complicated system based essentially on sliding income. Its current measure, figured in 1974, sets the poverty threshold for a nonfarm family of four at $5,038. Any family below that annual income is considered poor.

The government's definition of poverty was first worked out in 1964 by the Social Security Administration. It was revised in 1969 by an interagency committee of various federal departments involved in anti-poverty and welfare programs.

The 1964 index uses a range of poverty incomes taking into account such factors as family size, sex of the family head, number of children under 18, and farm and nonfarm residences.

At the heart of this definition was a "nutritionally adequate food plan," the "economy" plan devised by the Agriculture Department for "emergency or temporary use when funds are low."

In 1975, the "economy" food plan was superseded by the department's "thrifty food plan," in which specific food items were changed but the cost was essentially the same. In a 1955 survey of food consumption, the department had determined that families of three or more spend about one-third of their income on food.

The poverty-level income for such families was set at three times the cost of the economy food plan. For smaller families or persons living alone, the income level was slightly higher to reflect proportionately larger fixed expenses, like rent.

In 1969, the interagency committee changed the poverty formula to allow for changes in the Consumer Price Index as well as food prices. Also, the poverty threshold for farm families was raised from 70 per cent to 85 per cent of the income ceiling for urban families.

At the Census Bureau, the CPI became the peg for adjusting poverty level incomes because items in the economy food plan alone "did not fully reflect increases in the over-all cost of living during the 1960s," the bureau said.

In April, to reflect consumer price increases over the previous year, the Labor Department raised to $5,500 its yardstick for poverty-level income, which determines eligibility for its job training programs.

Critics of the government's way of defining poverty argue that the situation cited by the Census Bureau was reversed in the 1970s. In the past two years, they said, food prices rose faster than the prices of all goods measured by the CPI.

The critics said that under the current threshold of $5,038 for a family of four spending one-third of income on food, each person has only about $1.15 a day for food.

"Many of the factors that combine to produce a poverty situation revolve around a basic root cause-effect — poor health resulting from inadequate diet," say Mariellen Procopio and Frederick J. Perella Jr., members of the U.S. Catholic Conference's antipoverty Campaign for Human Development.

They say the Agriculture Department has called its "economy" or "thrifty" food plan a "minimally nutritious diet for emergency or temporary use," but that it nonetheless is used to determine food stamp allotments.

Agriculture Department spokesmen conceded in congressional testimony in 1969 that the food plan "is not a reasonable measure of basic money needs for a good diet."

They said, "The public assistance agency that recognizes the limitations of its clientele and is interested in their nutritional well-being will recommend a money allowance for food considerably higher than the cost of the Economy Food Plan."

Others believe that the one-third guideline for spending on food is inaccurate.

Herman P. Miller, former Census Bureau director, has suggested a more realistic figure of 1:3.5, which would raise the poverty-level income for a family of four from $5,038 to $6,867 and the number of officially poor Americans from 24.3 million to 44 million.

Yet another version of the income required to live decently is the "lower budget" of the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The budget reflects the agency's idea of enough income to insure a fairly nutritious diet, adequate clothing, housing, medical care, education, transportation and insurance, and some money for occasional luxuries like entertainment or a vacation.

Under the BLS guideline, an urban family of four needs $9,198 to maintain a modest way of life. If it were used to define poor families, it would include about 60.3 million Americans.

According to the Census Bureau, even though the number of poor people in the United States rose by 1.3 million in 1974 because of inflation, there actually were fewer that year (24.3 million) than in 1959, when there were 39 million.

Critics of the government figures counter that in 1959, the standard used to measure poverty represented 54 per cent of the median U.S. income, which stood at $5,417. In 1974, they say, the poverty standard was only 40 per cent of the median income, which had risen to $12,840.

"This means," said Procopio and Perella, "that the standard relative to the cost of living and to the norm generally accepted by most Americans as a decent living has been cut more and more by the government over the years."

If the 54 per cent of median income were used today, the poverty threshold would be $6,934 instead of $5,038 and would cover about 46 million rather than 24.3 million people.

The Census Bureau also keeps tabs on the number of people whose income is less than 125 per cent of the poverty ceiling, or $6,298 a year, which the bureau defines as "near poor" or working poor.

This means their budgets are so marginal that any unexpected emergency, such as illness or job layoff, would throw them into the poverty category. Procopio and Perella estimate nearly 40 million persons would be in the poverty category if it were defined by this standard.

One popular belief is that the rise in poverty income standard from $2,943 in 1959 to $5,038 in 1974 indicates the poor are gradually becoming more affluent.

Not so, say Procopio and Perella. They argue that inflation in the past two years has undermined the general rise in incomes, and left the buying power of the 1974 poverty ceiling 4 per cent lower than in 1973.

Even though the poverty ceiling rose 11 per cent in those two years to match the Consumer Price Index increase, they say, 70 per cent of the CPI gain reflected "substantial increases" in food, housing and transportation.

These boosts hit the poor hardest because they represent the bulk of low-income budget expenses.

Procopio and Perella believe the government's definition of the poor is unfair. They endorse the 1969 recommendation of the President's Commission on Income Maintenance Programs, which would simply set the poverty ceiling at half the average median income of U.S. families.

Today, that would mean a poverty income of $6,420 or less — half the present U.S. median income of $12,840 — instead of $5,038.

"This standard would result in a conservative estimate of poor people at about 40 million, or about one in every five Americans," they said.

What do the non-experts think?

A Gallup Poll taken in January, 1975, indicated the American public believes that $8,372 a year was the very least a family of four would need to make ends meet.

Delegates To State Meet

Donald Tucker, MD, John L. Wooten, MD and R.W. McConnell, MD have been elected as delegates from Pitt County to the annual meeting of the North Carolina Medical Society to be held in Pinehurst May 6-9.

Four physicians from Pitt County have been elected as delegates from medical specialty sections. They are: Jack H. Welch, MC, Anesthesiology; Jack Wilkerson, MD, Family Physicians; William W. Fore, MD, Internal Medicine; and Ira Hardy, MD, Neurological Surgery.

The House of Delegates serves as the policy-making body of the North Carolina Medical Society. Each county medical society is entitled to one delegate for each 25 members or major fraction of 25 while At-large Delegates consist of past presidents and secretaries of the State Medical Society. Medical specialty sections are also entitled to a voting member in the House.

Chapter Attends Show Premiere

The Greenville Alumnae Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc. attended the premiere showing of "Countdown at Kusini" and a theater party Friday evening at the Sunset Park Theater, Rocky Mount.

The subscription fee was $5 and all proceeds from the benefit showing went to the scholarship fund.

The motion picture, released by Columbia Pictures, was financed totally by the 85,000 members of Delta Sigma Theta, largest black sorority in the world, and is a presentation of D.S.T. Telecommunications, Inc., the sorority's production subsidiary.

"Countdown at Kusini," a drama of political intrigue and revolution in modern day Africa, is the first American motion picture to be filmed in Africa by black American professionals. It was directed by Ossie Davis from a screenplay by Davis, Ladi Labebo and Al Freeman Jr.

First N.C. Civil War Subject Of PBS Film

For most ordinary people in North Carolina, the war of 1776 was a bitter civil war.

Many of these North Carolinians wished only to be left alone, but most of them suffered in a war that divided family against family and race against race.

Six stories of such people are told in a new documentary film to be broadcast over the UNC-TV Network at 7:30 p.m. tonight on Channel 25, Greenville.

Entitled The First Civil War, the 30-minute film was written, produced and narrated by Richard W. Hatch.

The film tells six stories. The first depicts sanctions imposed by the Wilmington-New Hanover Committee of Safety on James Hepburn, a North Carolina merchant who traded with England.

Other segments tell about the Highway Scots Immigrants who lost the Battle of Moores Creek, the neutral Moravians and Quakers, the Cherokee Indians, the slaves who sided with the Tories.

The Quaker scene is adapted from the historical drama "The Sword of Peace" by William Hardy. Hardy, who directs the Indian drama "Unto These Hills," also did research for the Cherokee segment.

Carolina Today

Entertainment is the forte of many of appearing in the coming week on the early morning show, "Carolina Today" over Channel 9, WNCT-TV. Persons scheduled to be on the show are:

—Monday, April 26—6:15 a.m. A spokesman from "Hot Grog," playing at the Roxy Theater, will be on hand. 7:10 a.m., Evelyn Spangler and Joyce Cutler will speak about Pitt County beautification; and 7:30 Italian clothes designer Lucino Franzoni will appear with George Coffman.

—Tuesday, April 27—7:10 a.m. Cast members of Plymouth High School's "Sound of Music" will perform; and 7:30 a.m. a representative from the Belk-Tyler interior decoration program

—Wednesday, April 28—7:15 a.m. The guest will be a representative of the Greenville Art Center's Sidwalk Art Show coming up May 1; and 7:30 a.m. music is to be presented by members of the Sadie Saulter Elementary School Chorus.

—Thursday, April 29—6:30 a.m. A spokesman for the Job Service will fill this early time slot; and 7:30 a.m. music will be provided by The Misty Trio of the Rock Ridge community of Wilson County.

—Friday, April 30—7:15 a.m. Piano music and singing will be presented by the Wilson Christian School in connection with an auction sale; and 7:30 a.m. Musician-in-Residence guitarist Stan Baumgartner of Edgecombe County

Impersonator To Perform

Impersonator Murray Soloman will re-create the late W. C. Fields on the stage of East Carolina University's Mendenhall Student Center Theatre Thursday, April 29, beginning at 8 p.m.

In authentic costumes and make up which takes four hours to apply, Solomon will present the wit and wisdom of Fields as a performer and as a person.

Among the Fields roles included in the presentation are drinker, doctor, lawyer, bartender, carnival-show barker and even temperance lecturer. The show is enhanced by special lighting, recorded tape and several costume changes, and will be concluded with a question and answer period.

Solomon says he strongly identifies with W. C. Fields because he disliked children, loved to drink and "didn't play games." On stage he will incorporate Fields' classic comedy material into glimpses of the immortal comedian's private life.

Hospitality House

Historic Bath, the Outer Banks and Pirate Blackbeard are the focal points of Kay Currie's "Hospitality House" today over WITN-TV, Channel 7, from noon til 1 p.m. This program marks a return of "Hospitality House" to the air after a two weeks absence.

John Tankard and Bob Lewis, co-chairmen of plans for a summer outdoor drama, 'Queen Anne's Bell, being planned for Bath, discuss this project. The drama is based on the history of Bath.

The Outer Banks will be represented by Margie White on fashions and an artist-writer team, Donald and Carol McAdoo. Ms. White is fashion coordinator for Galleon Espanade at Nags Head; the McAdoos have a new book on the Outer Banks, Reflections, just published.

Dealing with pirates, writer-actors Bland Simpson and Jim Wann will talk about their production of "Hot Grogg" which will show in Greenville April 26-May 1.

Seventh Grader Jimmy Bearden And His Father

Visits Centuries Old Whitechapel Bell Foundry

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

Agnes Fullilove seventh grader Jimmy Bearden and his father, Dr. James Bearden, were the first Americans to get a preview look at the six-ton Bicentennial bell currently being cast by the famed Whitechapel Bell Foundry in London.

It happened because the visit to the foundry by the Bearden father and son team coincided with one of the stages in the casting of the bell.

WHITECHAPEL FOUNDRY . . . or more commonly called Church Bell Foundry, was visited by Greenville seventh grader Jimmy Bearden (shown before the firm). Jimmy and his father, Dr. James Bearden, recently toured the centuries old London firm as the guest of Donald Hughes, one of the firm's present owners.

"He noted," Dr. Bearden said, "that the bell had just been taken out of the mold and we would be the first Americans to see it. It was a huge bell, still down in a pit where two workmen were brushing around the inscription."

The simple inscription encircling the bell reads—"To the People of the United States of America, From the People of Britain, 4 July 1976, Let Freedom Ring."

Until very recently, it was generally assumed that the bell making firm dated back to the year 1570. However, Dr. Bearden mentioned that newly discovered data fairly well substantiates that the firm's history can be traced back to the year 1420—which gives Whitechapel an unusually long production span covering a 556 year period.

"That means the foundry was turning out bells nearly three quarters of a century before Columbus discovered America," Dr. Bearden said.

An impressive number of the world's most famous bells have been cast by Whitechapel Bell Foundry, located at No. 34 Whitechapel Road in London.

Among this distinguished roster of bells is the American Liberty Bell, cast by the firm in 1752. The Whitechapel original was broken soon after it was hung and was recast in facsimile by the firm of Pass and Stowe of Philadelphia. The recast bell is the one that proclaimed the Declaration of Independence on July 4, 1776, thus acquiring the name "Liberty Bell." The Liberty Bell did not receive its famous crack until 1835, when it was rung to toll the death of Chief Justice Marshall.

A recent article on the firm appearing in the "Wall Street Journal" points out that breakage occuring in bells made for ringing casts no reflection on the craftsmanship of the firm—that because of the composition required for a true ring, bells are brittle and must be handled with care to allow proper vibration or else the metal will break.

Dr. Bearden reports that during his tour of the foundry, Hughes observed that ancient methods of manufacture at Whitechapel have changed little over the centuries.

"Bell cores are made of yellow London clay, horse manure, and cow hair," Hughes related, and added he had visited an up-to-date foundry and saw bells being cast of new material, but "they crack; the old way is best."

Questioned by Dr. Bearden about the source of basic materials available to Whitechapel for casting bells, Hughes told him "we no longer get clay right here at the foundry. We must go outside London. We get the horse manure just down the street at a brewery stable and at a police stable."

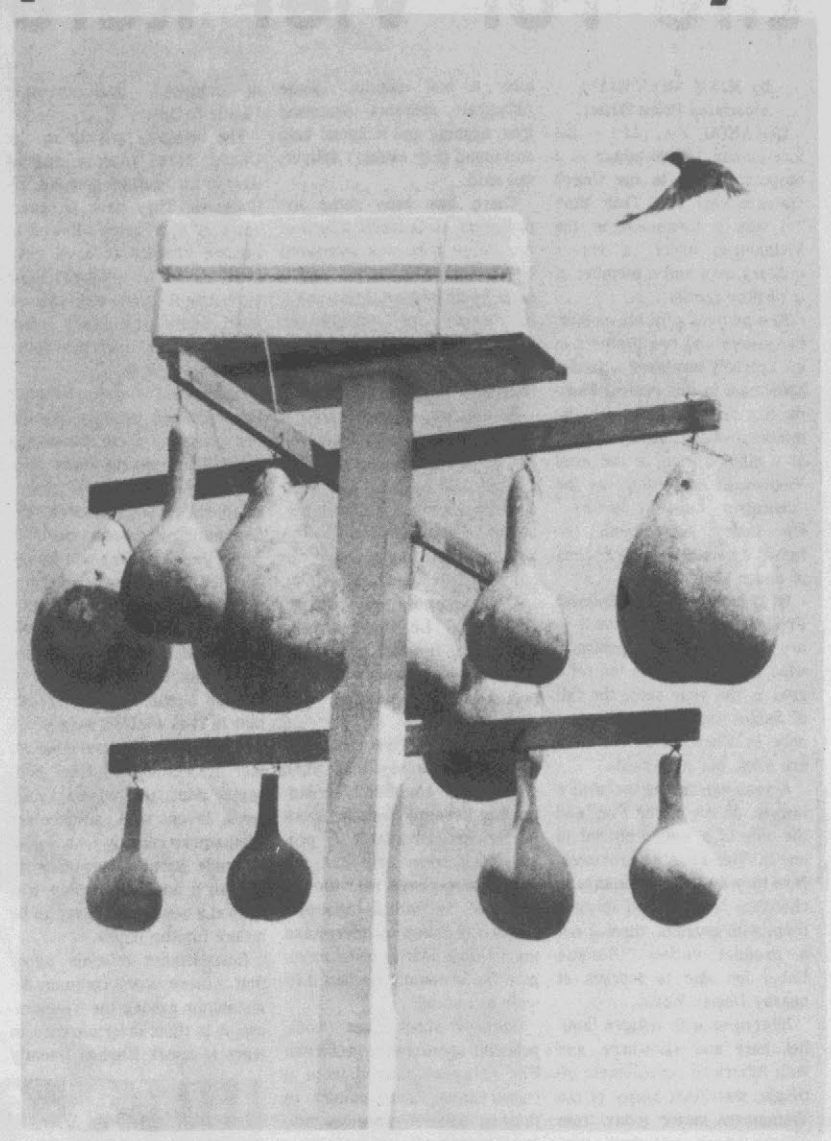

In addition to the six-ton Bicentennial bell being prepared by the foundry for presentation by the British people to Americans, the firm is presently occupied with another order going overseas to England's former colony.

"Mr. Hughes showed me and Jimmy some small replicas of the Liberty Bell," Dr. Bearden related. "He's casting these for a man in the United States, an order of some 2,000 bells which will sell for $800 and up."

Dr. Bearden said the idea of visiting the foundry occurred as a result of the feature article on the firm carried in a February 1976 issue of "The Wall Street Journal."

"It occurred to me the Whitechapel Bell Foundry would be an ideal place to take Jimmy. It's a place rich in history and has the kind of operation that would appeal to a boy his age.

"Jimmy thoroughly enjoyed our visit and the opportunity to meet and talk to Mr. Hughes. I feel this is a lesson in history he'll remember for a long time."

Book News

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By MARGARET CLARK

Every now and then a book comes along with such high adventure, humor and nostalgia that it appeals to both young and old. GRANDPA AND FRANK by Janet Majerus, is one of those books. The time is 1947, the place a farm in Illinois. Twelve-year-old Sarah McDermott, a most engaging young heroine, was orphaned at age five. Ever since, she has lived on the farm with her Grandpa, to whom she is very close, and her Uncle Frank who has a "mean streak as wide as the Mississippi." Grandpa has had a stroke and as a result has begun doing some rather odd things, such as wandering around outdoors wearing only his shoes and hiding dead mice in his closet. Frank, who wants full control of Grandpa's farm, has announced that, come Labor Day, he is going to have Grandpa committed to the County Home. To Sarah, this is intolerable. Resolved to find a doctor who will certify that Grandpa is of sound mind, Sarah and her thirteen-year-old neighbor, Joel, "kidnap" Grandpa and set out on a hazardous and hilarious 180-mile odyssey to Chicago over back roads in a Model-A pickup—with Joel at the wheel. In a masterpiece of understatement that reflects what happens on the trip, Joel observes that Sarah is "always making things sound so simple, and they hardly ever end up that way."

With THE OTHER SIDE OF MIDNIGHT, Sidney Sheldon became known to millions as a master storyteller. Now, in his new novel, A STRANGER IN THE MIRROR, he once again employs his skills to tell this tale of an all too brief, passionate love between a great star and a beautiful starlet. This is the story of Toby Temple, super star, adored by his vast TV and movie public, fawned on and feared by the most powerful men and women in show business. The world's funniest and wealthiest comedian. Toby Temple is the loneliest of men.

Jill Castle, a sensual beauty carrying within her a terrible secret, comes to the nightmare world of Hollywood to pursue dreams of stardom. Born to be desired, Jill is taught only to hate.

And then she meets Toby.

Toby and Jill are fated to love, their affair destined to end in tragedy. The denouement will chill and stun you!

Elizabeth Cadell has once again artfully blended romance and mystery in her latest novel, GAME IN DIAMONDS. Set in the rambling English countryside, Lady Charlotte Merrion lives on her grand estate as she always has—in the dignified, traditional manner of her class. Lady Charlotte's prime interest is her grandson, Paul Merrion. Paul is engaged to the racy, flamboyant—but absent—Diana Framley. His looks and charm, to say nothing of his money and easy good nature, make him a target for any woman aiming at a matrimonial prize. In spite of his engagement, this peaceful town becomes the setting for Paul's romance with Lydia Cresset, a young music student from London. Intrigued by the origin of an ancient brick tower on the estate, Paul and Lydia begin what seems an innocent archaeological lark only to suddenly find themselves discovering the mysterious and vastly important meaning of the strange signs found on the bricks themselves.

Wildlife Conservation Summer Summits Set

Americans looking for an unusual vacation this year can renew their link with nature in three outdoor vacation opportunities offered by the National Wildlife Federation's Conservation Summits program.

Conservation Summits are six-day outdoor workshops designed for people of all ages with every type of nature interest. Each Summit is tailored to its location and provides a wide range of nature-oriented activities for participants, including families with children.

The Federation's three Summits for 1976 are:

—Blue Ridge Summit: Black Mountain, North Carolina June 26-July 2; Rocky Mount in Summit; Estes Park, Colorado July 4-10; and Adirondack Mountain Summit: Silver Bay, New York August 1-7.

Among the activities offered at these summits are fresh water biology, wildlife ecology, backpacking, outdoor cooking, folk history, birding, nature photography, wildflower identification, geology, and astronomy. Each course is conducted by an expert in that field. Teachers or students can earn academic credit through participation in a Conservation Summit.

For more information on all aspects of the Summit programs, including price and courses, write to: NWF Conservation Summits, Dept. JG, 1412 16th St. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

Notes On Events

Hollister Bicentennial Today

HOLLISTER—This small Halifax County community will observe its Bicentennial celebration today.

The event, sponsored by the Hollister Community Club will begin at 11:00 a.m. with outdoor religious services at the Community building.

At 12 noon, a dutch picnic lunch will be served at the Community Building. At 1:00 p.m., there will be games for the children. Music will be presented by the Hamm Family Band at 2:00 o'clock.

From 3:00 until 5:00 p.m., Mrs. Bob Rice will conduct two tours, beginning at the Community Building. The tour will include two churches, the Hollister United Methodist Church (begun as Lee's Chapel in 1870) and Harris Chapel Baptist Church (organized in 1879); and five homes. Those who have Colonial costumes are invited to wear them if they like.

Historic Halifax Hours

Historic Site Manager Gerald Butler has announced the spring and summer months schedule of hours for Historic Halifax.

The Visitor Center will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday each week, and on Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m. The center will be closed on Mondays.

Four of the total of eight buildings forming the site are now open—the other four will be opened during the next two years.

Groups planning to make tours are asked to make arrangements in advance by calling Butler or Mrs. Margaret Phillips, assistant manager, at 583-7191.

Wesleyan 76-77 Series

Tickets are now on sale and will continue on sale through April 30 for the 1976-77 Rocky Mount-Wesleyan Performing Art Series of events.

Dr. William G. Sasser, coordinator of the series, has announced the entertainments scheduled for the forthcoming ninth annual season.

The five events scheduled are: The Charlie Byrd Trio, featuring guitarist Charlie Byrd, in October; the Birmingham (Alabama) Ballet in November; the West Virginia Symphonette February; the Tuscon Boys Chorus in March; and in April, the Southern Folk Festival group.

Season tickets for the five events are $9 for adults and $6 for students.

Writers To Meet Tuesday

The second meeting of the Greenville Writers Club will be held Tuesday, April 27 at 8 p.m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Raynor, 2106 Pendleton Street.

Persons interested in any form of creative writing are invited to attend. Fiction and non-fiction manuscripts are read and discussed at the twice monthly held in various homes throughout the Greenville area.

New Juror For Sidewalk Show

Mrs. Edith Walker, director of the Greenville Art Center, has announced a change in juror for the 1976 Sidewalk Art Show.

John Scott Thomas of Rocky Mount, previously slated to be the juror, will not be able to fill this duty due to illness.

Mary Anne Jenkins, native of Greenville, now living in Raleigh, has agreed to be the show's juror.

Portrait Of Antonia Tonight At Ten

At the age of 28, Antonia Brico became the first woman to conduct the great Berlin Philharmonic. Her reputation as a talented orchestra conductor was established. However, her being a woman barred her fulfilling career expectations.

Antonia: A Portrait Of The Woman is a portrait of Brico's successes and disappointments, her music, and the frustrations and discrimination which have plagued her life. The one hour film shows today at 10:00 p.m. on Channel 25, Greenville.

Now in her early 70's, Brico is still eager to lead a major symphony orchestra. Her warmth, spirit and strength are captured by filmmaker Jill Godmilow and her partner on this film, former Brico student and current folk star Judy Collins.

ECU Show At Lenoir

An exhibit of modernistic sculpture and paintings by an East Carolina University grade student are featured this month and through the first week of May at the Lenoir County Art Gallery in the Main Building, Instructor Gerald T. Elliott has announced.

Rosie Thompson, a native of Florida and a former student at LCC, has the exhibit of unusual sculpture for viewers this month. Charles Wayne Kesler, who is working on his master's degree in fine arts at ECU is exhibiting the 11 new paintings on display. Both artists will be on hand at 10 a.m. Wednesday, April 28.

Children's Library Films

For the final week in April, young movie-goers in Greenville will be treated to four films in the weekly series of children's films shown in the city libraries.

The four films are The Chinese Village, an animated film about printed Chinese wallpaper at the governor's palace in Colonial Williamsburg; The Foolish Frog, another animated film; The Pledge of Allegiance, which tells the history and development of the American flag; and Attic Of The Wind.

Show times are: Carver Library, Tuesday, 4 p.m., Sheppard Memorial Library, Thursday, 7 p.m., and Carver Library, Friday, 4 p.m.

Canon Canonet 28
For results you never thought were possible.
Quality snapshots are the key note of the Canonet 28. Before you think about an instant loading 126 or pocketable camera, think about this. The larger negative size gives you truly sharper pictures—that's a fact. Not only this, you get shooting capacity up to 36 exposures on 35mm film—all completely automatically with the 28's sensitive auto electronic eye. Rangefinder focusing further insures pinpoint focus for any subject, and with the Canolite D Electronic Flash unit, even your flash is perfectly automatic. There's no doubt about it—for the quality you've been missing in your snapshots, the Canonet 28 is the logical solution.
• Fast, sharp Canon F2.8 lens
• Automatic flash with Canolite D
• Combined range/viewfinder shows shutter speeds, exposure warnings
• Fully auto exposure control, day or night
• Compact and lightweight
• Accepts a wider range of films than cartridge cameras

Mixed Success In A New Life For Viet Refugees

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Before joining 130,000 others in a desperate flight to the United States a year ago, Tran Minh Tri was a lieutenant in the Vietnamese army, a career military man and a member of a wealthy family.

Now he lives with his mother, two sisters and two brothers in a sparsely-furnished garden apartment in this central Florida city and he works for the minimum wage, $2.30 an hour, at a plant known in the local Vietnamese community as the "chocolate banana factory." His salary supplements the family's monthly welfare check of under $200.

Of 27 laborers in the Tropical Fruit Specialities Inc. plant, 16 are Vietnamese. They personify what has happened to the refugees in the year since the fall of Saigon last April 30 — not only in Florida, where there are 6,000, but nationwide.

A year ago the 16 included a lawyer, an Air Force Pilot and the wife of a senior official in one of Vietnam's 44 provinces. Now they dip frozen bananas in chocolate by hand and sprinkle them with peanuts, turning out a product called "Banana Bob," for sale to tourists at nearby Disney World.

Interviews with refugee families here and elsewhere, and with American resettlement officials, show that many of the Vietnamese suffer today from culture shock and from high unemployment. Many migrate from state to state in search of work or of reunification with relatives living elsewhere in the country. A fierce determination has developed among some Vietnamese to enroll in American schools, the interviews showed, even if the refugees have to sign up for welfare checks to support themselves while they study.

An estimated 61 per cent of the refugees who want to work have found jobs, according to federal officials. But examples of underemployment abound in every state. In Los Angeles, the former director general of Saigon's Interior Ministry does yard work. An Air Force colonel delivers newspapers. A medical doctor is a night watchman.

In Orlando, a former aide to Vietnam's Premier Nguyen Cao Ky works as a clerk for the gas company and teaches judo at the local YMCA.

The migration from state to state in search of jobs is bringing many of the Vietnamese eventually to California.

Gary McComber of the California Health and Welfare Agency expects the state's refugee population to reach between 44,000 and 53,000 by the summer of 1977.

Like California, the Washington D.C. area had an enclave of Vietnamese before Saigon fell, so the capital also has been the destination of many dissatisfied with their initial homes in America.

"This is a very mobile crowd," said Jeanne MacDaniels of the Washington office of the International Rescue Committee, "especially when the sponsorships break down after a few months." Some American sponsors promised jobs, housing and financial help and found they couldn't deliver, she said.

There has been some exploitation. In Orlando, a former Air Force pilot was sponsored by the manager of an apartment house who paid him nominal wages for maintenance work and charged the refugee for furniture donated by a church.

In another Florida case, a man sponsored a Vietnamese girl of 20 who spoke very little English. He escorted her to a county office for a blood test before it was discovered that he intended to marry her without the girl's knowledge.

A Vietnamese psychiatrist, Dr. Daniel Le Dinyh Phuoc, studied 157 families in Los Angeles. He said nearly half reported serious troubles with their sponsors.

Officials of private resettlement agencies say that when churches or community organizations became sponsors, more people were available to provide long term help and the relationships have held up. By contrast, individual sponsors frequently failed to understand the cultural barrier or to anticipate the economic burden they were assuming.

Culture shock has compounded sponsorship problems. The refugees moved from a conservative Asian culture to the fast pace of American life. Traditionally close Vietnamese family life may be the first casualty.

Psychiatrist Phuoc says Vietnamese usually relieve their emotional problems within the family, but in the United States, "I'm not sure how much it will help because the foundation of our families has been changed or destroyed.

"Women are working while men sit at home. Children are learning a language their parents cannot understand. Discipline, respect for age, even the food, all are different in the United States."

In California and elsewhere, women frequently have found it easier to find work than their husbands, mainly in secretarial jobs. Marital problems have been aggravated in some households where husbands feel humiliated at having to babysit while their wives support the family.

"My mother-in-law is very unhappy," psychiatrist Phuoc said. "In Vietnam she used to manipulate everyone in the family, tell them what to do. Here everyone is independent. Now she cannot sleep or eat and acts very depressed."

Many refugees have yet to understand the full size of their new country in relation to South Vietnam, a long and slender land with less than 10 per cent of the land mass of the United States.

One American who worked in Vietnam and now lives in the Midwest reports that refugees who settled in small towns suffer from crushing loneliness. "Even if they get help on the basics from their sponsors there is no socializing."

Only in New Orleans and Miami have sponsoring agencies taken over apartment buildings for the exclusive use of refugees, thus creating "Little Saigons."

The refugees are all in the United States under a special immigrant parole granted by Congress. They have no guarantee of ever being allowed to become citizens or even resident aliens. As a result, most government jobs are denied them, including military enlistment, the best job possibility for many refugees.

Uncertainty over whether Congress will approve legislation changing their status has raised fears among many refugees that if the United States establishes relations with the Communist government in South Vietnam, they will be deported in exchange for information about Americans still unaccounted for in the fighting. No amount of argument dissuades them from this viewpoint.

Some Vietnamese are reluctant to seek medical help, even when it is offered free. One father in Orlando, a former helicopter pilot, treated his young son's fever with an ancient Vietnamese remedy — a series of crude parallel scratches on the boy's back into which was rubbed a solution believed to be a cure for the illness.

Resettlement officials agree that if there is one common denominator among the Vietnamese, it is their determination to learn to speak English fluently and then to obtain training in a profession.

"They all want to go to school and many think someone should support them while they do it," said Ms. MacDaniel, who prefers the Ms. designation.

Federal resettlement officials have emphasized that only a handful of school districts have more than 100 Vietnamese students. Some school administrators in California, Texas and Florida had feared they would have more refugees than they could handle.

"Placement is a key factor," said Peter Wong, another California education official. "Vietnamese kids in Los Angeles and San Diego are doing well because they're all together. They can communicate and help each other.

"But some schools have only one student. They can't afford to have a bilingual program. They don't have any Vietnamese speakers to evaluate the child and they've made some horrible mistakes."

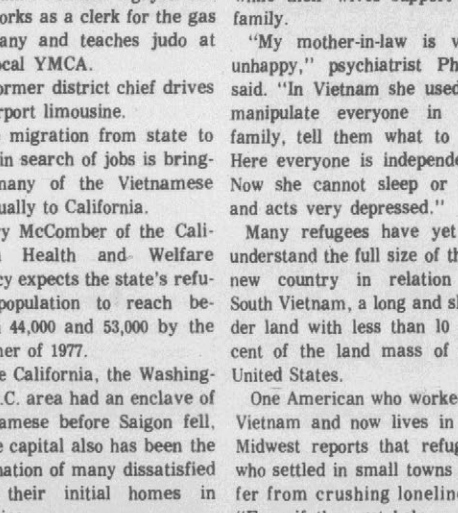

But it is to the children that the adult refugees always refer when they look to the future.

A former brigadier general, now a social worker in Orlando, said, "You know, nothing I do now is for me. My 29 years in the Army are all gone. Everything is for my children."

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

SUNDAY MORNING, APRIL 25, 1976

It's time to make those home improvements you've been wanting. For ideas check the Pages of this Home Improvement Edition. Find practical suggestions to help you modernize and improve home comfort. Advertisers, too, present their products and services for your selection.

Improvements—investments and realities

It's a banner year to fix up the home

A number of pressing realities make 1976 a banner year for home improvements. Families are traveling less, due to the skyrocketing costs of gasoline, motels, hotels and restaurants, and staying home more.

And that's where improving the home comes in.

Home-style vacations seem more desirable if houses can be remodeled to include such leisure-like amenities as patios, pools, outside cooking and seating areas.

As a result, wise homeowners are investing more than ever before in improving their properties with, as expected, attention to increasing their energy-saving potential. With heating costs soaring, better insulation, installation of storm doors and windows and even roofing are high on the homeowner's priority list.

Plans an advantage

It is to be remembered that home improvements properly planned and executed not only can produce substantial savings in heating and cooling costs, but also add value to the existing property. Thus there is a way for homeowners to cope with inflationary trends.

Advice and counsel is available at the local level from experts in planning and financing improvements.

According to Edgar V. Hall, executive vice president of the National Home Improvement Council, the investment in home improvements made last year by homeowners amounted to $23 billion. The Home Improvement Council has several thousand local councils operating in as many cities to assist people in their planning.

Easier money

Since loans for home improvements are easier to get than mortgages, people are staying put, making what they have stretch to suit their needs and many are doing all or at least some of the work themselves.

While money was tight and costly in 1975, there is every indication that it will be only costly in 1976.

Savings and Loan Associations have noted a dramatic change in availability of savings for home improvement loan purposes and are anxious to find homeowners to persuade them to make improvements on their homes.

Most people will either take out a separate home improvement loan or add the cost of the improvements to their mortgage.

Watch taxes

It is important to note that not all home improvements result in higher taxes. In many cases, sizeable improvements can be made without changing taxes at all.

Most tax increases result from improvements which add new living space, major additions, structural changes and repairs, or a new garage or patio.

Improvements

In many areas the homeowner can put on a new roof make any repairs to existing masonry, replace lighting and plumbing fixtures if they are not part of a complete modernization, paint the entire inside and outside, install lawn sprinkler systems, put in lawns and no-limit landscaping, make complete plaster repairs and redecorate, add closets, put in new ceilings, weather stripping, install a new driveway, add or replace gutters and downspouts, replace a worn-out furnace with a new heating system and restore or replace porches and steps — all without fear of a tax rise!

The National Home Improvement Council reminds the homeowner that even with a higher assessment and tax rise, home improvements result in increased value for their property and more comfortable living.

HOMEOWNERS' THING OF BEAUTY and joy is the new vinyl siding, Driftgrain, which never needs refinishing. The embossed wood grain texture by Johns-Manville is fade resistant, and will not scratch, dent or conduct electrical curent.

Custom fit windows, not stopgaps, cut loss of heat—reduce fuel bills

Millions of dollars of expensively-heated air will go through your windows this winter. What makes this even more painful is that millions of American consumers think that they have avoided this money (and heat) loss by using stopgap measures to cut fuel bills.

In the summer, of course, this money-losing process will be repeated as expensively-cooled air escapes and warm air enters via the same route.

Even with recommended insulation, which is very important, you're not going to the heart of your insulating problems unless your windows are doing their part to stop heat loss.

Who says so? Well, for one, the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) says that "almost 70 per cent of a typical single-family unit's heating load is associated with windows and doors."

Frank Gorell, president of Season-all Industries, Inc., world's largest manufacturers of aluminum custom-made storm windows and doors and replacement windows, pinpoints the problem more precisely: "It is sad to see so much time and effort go into partial solutions like weatherstripping and caulking. All the caulking in the world will not stop heat loss through glass.

"Engineers have proven that one square foot of glass can lose as much heat as ten square feet of wall. And weatherstripping is equally negligible if you do not have first-class windows with multiple panes of glass or storm windows.

"Why? Because engineers know that, with a typical single-glazed, double-hung window, almost three times the energy is lost through the glass as is lost around the sash area."

The only effective remedy for heat loss, says Gorell, is the use of good prime windows which prevent air infiltration or heat loss. If these prime windows are bad, they should be replaced with custom-fit windows (the most economical way to go).

For more effective savings, storm windows insulate the frame as well as the prime window. Other measures include replacement windows with insulating glass—or thermally-improved windows, which are here today and represent the standards by which tomorrow's windows will be judged.

Gorell points out that caulking and weatherstripping may be cheapest — but they are also least effective. "Replacing windows which are worn out with custom-fit types can be a simple job which can be done even by a do-it-yourselfer in less than an hour.

"There's no need for carpentry or masonry alterations if the window is made to fit the opening. Best of all, it's ready to save real money as soon as it's installed, instead of making you think that it does," he said.

For a booklet on things you should know about replacement windows, write to Fred Schmidt, Season-all Industries, Inc., Indiana, Pa. 15701.

The Bicentennial panel show lets your walls make history

Regardless of whether it's being caused by Bicentennial fever, nostalgia or just plain appreciation for antiques, the phenomenon is upon us. It is expressed in decorating trends and styles spanning various eras of U.S. history.

And picking up the heritage craze are major producers of paneling for the home — like Georgia-Pacific Corp. — who have introduced panels nationwide to combine the well-worn, well-loved look of fine antique woods from history.

History retraced

In addition, past deeds and long forgotten adventures that surrounded Valley Forge, The Oregon Trail, Portsmouth and Rio Grande are retraced with paneling lines bearing like names.

These "new" style panelings with the "old" look are part of a series called "The Great American Look in Paneling." Others included are Renaissance and Woodcut.

Colonial times

The six prefinished plywood panelings resemble: a planked-and-pegged deck of a clipper ship arriving at old Cape Cod, Early American simplicity of settlers in the Thirteen Colonies, handhewn remnants of a backwoods homestead along The Oregon Trail, weathered boards left by pioneers of the Western and Southwestern frontiers, and the polished elegance of fine furnishings from a Southern plantation.

Remodeling ease

The panels offer today's homeowner a great opportunity to carry out remodeling or building plans in shades of old times.

A single wall of paneling, for example, can change a very plain and ordinary room into a heritage showcase, with the right kind of antique knick-knacks and old prints hung in strategic places.

The job is an easy and inexpensive one, requiring perhaps only a few sheets of old-style paneling. Depending on the present walls, the paneling can be glued and/or nailed directly to the wall or put up with furring strips over crumbling plaster or uneven old walls.

Easy alterations

Windows and doors are easily trimmed with molding, according to "how to" instructions made available through retail building material dealers by manufacturers like Georgia-Pacific.

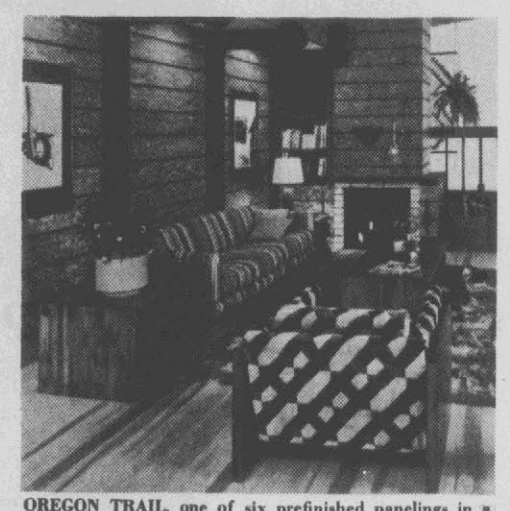

A few items like old stirrups, pots and pans, antique mirrors, stained glass windows or lamps add emphasis, and favorite old furniture can be put nearby.

Such alterations, easy and economical, can be worked all over the house, from recreation room to kitchen, bedroom to living room, attic or basement, setting the stage for any bygone-era decorating plan.

Idea brochures

Whether building a new home or remodeling an older one, paneling provides a sound, new wall surface that gives any room that brand-new look, even if the styling is old.

If you'd like to jump on the heritage bandwagon with the help of paneling, but are a little short on ideas, there is a series of six paneling idea brochures that can be of assistance. They are aptly called "The Great American Look in Paneling."

OREGON TRAIL, one of six prefinished panelings in a series from G-P, blazes a heritage trail for any by-gone decorating plan with its rustic, handcrafted look of a backwoods homestead. Other panel styles with heritage look are illustrated in six decorating idea brochures called "The Great American Look in Paneling."

Home improvement planning tips to help knowledgeable homeowner

By JACK MARSHALL
(1975 Quality Remodeler of the Year, Brand Names Foundation)

Listed here are 14 points to help you get the most — and easiest satisfaction when embarking on a remodeling project.

1. Put your ideas on paper. Keep a file of ideas from advertisements as well as editorial material.

2. Engage an architect if your remodeling involves any structural alterations. He can provide you with rough sketches or working drawings and also provide on-the-job-supervision.

3. Don't rush when selecting a contractor. Take time to check a man's bank references, talk with some of his former customers and personally look at a few of his completed projects. Investigate at least three contractors and invite each to submit a bid.

4. Let each contractor know you're considering other bids and give each candidate the same specifications. Name exact models, product types.

5. Make certain the contractor you hire carries adequate insurance: workmen's compensation, property damage, personal liability coverage.

6. Ask your contractor if he complies with the Code of Ethics of the National Home Improvement Council.

7. Don't automatically snap up the lowest bid for your remodeling project. Consider the interest and professional attitude an individual contractor shows toward your project.

8. Make absolutely certain your remodeling plans are not at odds with any building codes or zoning regulations.

9. Don't try to handle a job yourself unless you're fairly knowledgeable about building materials. This is especially true with plumbing and electrical work.

10. Don't introduce a lot of work changes once the remodeling is under way. These can be costly, will slow up time schedule and cause unnecessary friction between you and your contractor or architect.

11. Insist that the contract include exact date work is to begin, a schedule of step-by-step proceedings and an approximate completion date. If delays seem unreasonable and unnecessary, you have right to take action.

12. Don't sign a completion certificate (if work is financed) or make final payment until the contractor gives you a release from liens and you're 100 per cent satisfied.

13. Ask for a contractor's guarantee (usually for one year).

14. Finally, ask for a clean-up provision in your contract so your house will be returned to its original condition after the work is completed—at the contractor's expense.

Windows and doors are the worst fuel drainers

Windows and doors are the biggest fuel drainers in the average home. And since 70 million living units use 20 per cent of all the energy consumed in the U.S., the homeowner holds a great deal of responsibility — which he can use to save or lose money, not to mention the conservation of the nation's energy supply.

According to the National Home Improvement Council, the University of Illinois has calculated that ten 15 square foot windows will leak about 100 more gallons worth of fuel oil per season if they are only single glazed.

With a typical three by five foot single glazed, double-hung window, almost three times the energy would be lost through the window as is lost around the sash area.

Storm doors help, too, because heat loss through or around the door is about the same.

One square foot of glass can lose as much heat as ten square feet of wall.

For these reasons, few installations in the home pay off for themselves as quickly as do storm doors and windows and replacement windows.

Current estimates are that in four to five years, the homeowner will recover the cost of his installation.

Are raindrops falling on your head? Check for roof damage before storm

One sure way to discover whether your roof is leaking is to look for signs of water damage during a heavy rain. The problem then becomes one of waiting until the rain stops, since you can't get the roof fixed while it's raining.

On the other hand, when the weather is nice and the roof isn't leaking many people have a tendency to ignore the problem.

Actually, it isn't wise to wait until the roof leaks before doing something about it. It's better and often less costly to give the roof a "going over" every now and then. But do it from the ground, using field glasses, advises the Asphalt Roofing Manufacturers Association. It's easy and far less dangerous than walking on the roof.

Besides a leak, other signs that a roof might need to be replaced include cracked, curled or missing shingles. Best of all, try to determine the age of the roof. If it's of standard shingles, 15 years old or older, it's probably due for replacement.

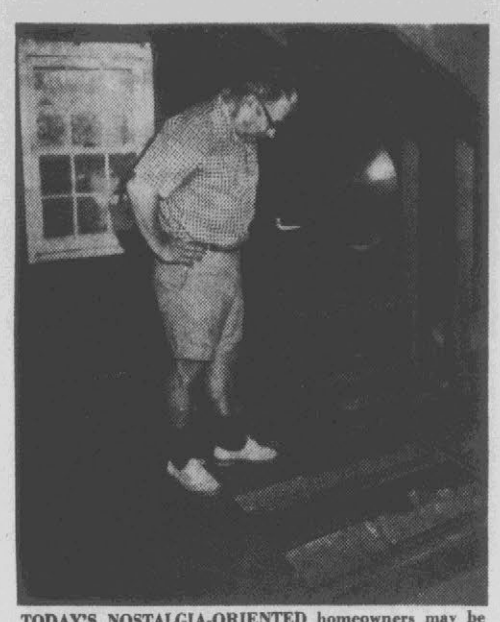

REROOFING WITH HEAVY-TEXTURED asphalt shingles adds eye-appealing dimension. Available in popular earthtone colors that serve to relate a home with its environment, these shingles are designed to last up to 25 years with little maintenance.

In any event, it's a good idea to call a professional roofer who can conduct an on the roof inspection. He can tell you if minor repairs are called for or whether the roof has to be replaced.

Should the situation call for reroofing, the professional roofer is also a good source of information on how to use roof design and color to improve a home's appearance.

Asphalt shingles, for instance, now come in heavy textures and earthtone colors that add dimension and depth to a roof. The rustic shades and deep shadow lines create attractive roofs that avoid the look of sameness. Designed to last up to 25 years, the new generation of asphalt shingles requires minimal maintenance.

TODAY'S NOSTALGIA-ORIENTED homeowners may be trekking into their attics to evaluate relics of yester-year stored there. Too often they find more than they'd bargained for because the attic isn't properly insulated with at least 6 inches of R-19 fiber glass insulation, according to the Certain-teed Home Institute. As a result, they're wasting up to 30% of the energy used to heat and cool their homes.

Exploring attic key to reduced utility bills

Today's nostalgia trend has provided the spark in many households for reducing utility bills. Homeowners exploring old trunks and boxes for yesterday's treasures have begun to notice that there's often something missing altogether in the attic — insulation.

"Twenty years ago, it was relatively inexpensive to use as much gas or oil as we needed to heat our homes comfortably," says Sharon Kay Ritchie, director of the Home Institute for Certain-teed Products Corporation.

"Back then, there was really no incentive for us to insulate our homes properly so they'd conserve energy. But that situation is completely reversed and many homeowners now realize that they can save up to 30% on their heating and cooling bills every year just by having six inches (R-19) of fiber glass insulation on the attic floor."

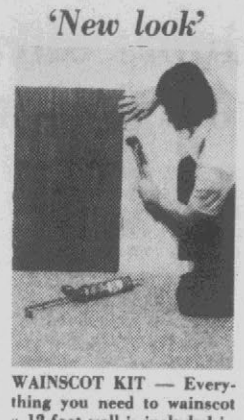

For example, if you spent $400 last year on your oil heating and air conditioning bill, you might have saved up to $120 of that with proper insulation.

Insulating the attic yourself is easily done in a day in most homes. And the initial cost of the insulation is generally paid back in heating and air conditioning savings in anywhere from one to three years. Of course, this depends on the amount of insulation now in your attic, the style of your home, and its general location.

"On the average," Miss Ritchie notes, "the 1,400 square foot home can be insulated for about $300 with six inches of fiber glass insulation or its R-19 equivalent. Savings on utility bills quickly pay for the insulation — and then continue for the life of the house."

Avoid bathroom hazards with safety checklist

Home improvement can take many forms, including remodeling and redecorating. But while pretty accessories can add much to your rooms, it's important to consider the safety of your home as well.

Bathrooms, in particular, offer many potentially dangerous pitfalls for you and your family. So, to insure that your bathroom is as safe as it is attractive, compare it against the following safety checklist:

1) Date and label all medicines and know their shelf life. Medicines that are used past their expiration date or used improperly can even be harmful!

2) Children and pets don't always know what's good for them . . . be sure all medicines and caustic cleaning compounds are stored in locked cabinets.

And, use caution even when discarding old medicines or empty cleaning product containers — keep them out of the reach of your small loved ones to prevent accidental intake.

3) Harsh chemical cleaners can be harmful to adults, if accidentally used improperly. Always read instructions before using any cleanser and, whenever possible, avoid hazardous ones.

For example, instead of using drain cleaners which contain dangerous lye and acid, use Drain Power, the first drain opener to use air pressure to unclog pipes.

4) To reduce the risk of slips and falls on bare bathroom floors, pick up hairpins and other small objects as soon as they are dropped and, if your floor surface is the type which gets slippery when wet, be sure to mop up spills immediately.

5) To prevent falls in the bath, line yours with a rubber mat or with decorative rubber decals. Install a handle or rod on the shower wall for extra protection.

6) Never use electrical appliances in or near water or damp surfaces. If your family relies on bathroom appliances which require electricity, plug them into outlets away from the sink or bathtub and unplug them when they're not being used.

If your bathroom measures up well to this checklist, the chances of bathroom accidents are lessened and that means more peace of mind for you.

Consider energy-saving when remodeling your house

Now, more than ever, remodeling the old house is an important alternative to moving. Interest rates on new mortgages are high, and the cost of new construction continues to climb.

With the energy crisis as a very real problem, however, it's important to consider how efficiently an old home uses energy.

Usually, when people are thinking of ways to save energy, they consider adding insulation or installing a new furnace. One product they usually don't think of as an energy saver is house siding.

Many consumers install new siding without finding out which type is a better insulator, according to Mastic Corporation, of South Bend, Ind.

Mastic, a manufacturer of vinyl, steel and aluminum siding, has tested the insulation properties of their own products. Vinyl has been found to be a much better insulator than metal siding.

According to a test conducted by an independent laboratory, vinyl siding provides 24.8% greater insulation against heat and cold than metal siding (American Society for Testing and Materials Test C-177).

"We cannot say exactly how much less your energy expense will be if you choose vinyl rather than metal siding, because every home is different," according to John P. Flanagan, Mastic sales manager.

"We make the results of this laboratory test public so that the consumer, who is concerned about saving energy, can make a better-informed choice when residing a home."

NEW SIDING CAN ACHIEVE a dramatic change in a remodeled house exterior, and it can also affect energy usage for heating and cooling. To save energy, Mastic Corporation, a major manufacturer of house siding, suggests the homeowner give serious consideration to the insulating properties of solid-vinyl siding before making a choice.

In addition to the energy-saving factor, vinyl siding has other advantages. It is solid color clean through, so the finish cannot be destroyed or scratched off. It will never need paint, and will not dent like metal siding.

Vinyl is easy to clean. Even an abrasive cleaner, such as scouring powder, cannot damage the finish, because it is solid finish all the way through.

Vinyl has become very popular along the coastlines and in highly industrialized areas because salt sea air and airborne industrial pollutants cannot damage it. Vinyl siding is chemically inert, with no coating or finish that can deteriorate.

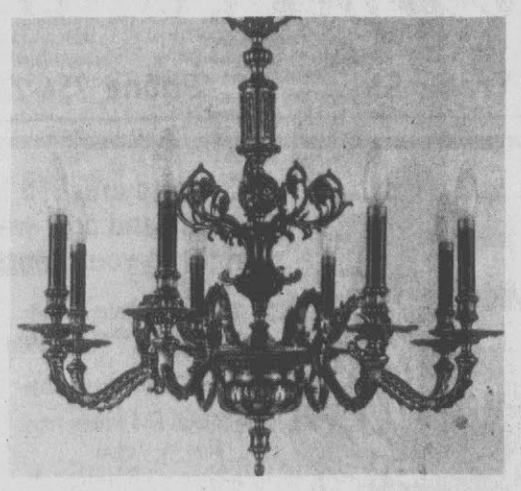

Safety is also a factor to consider in choosing siding. Vinyl siding cannot conduct electricity. Because metal siding will conduct electricity, it must be grounded by an electrician in some areas of the country. Vinyl siding does not magnify the rata-tat sounds of rain and hail.

Contour T-lok solid-vinyl siding has proved acceptable to such important building codes as Building Officials Conference of America, Inc. (BOCA), Federal Housing Authority (FHA), International Conference of Building Officials (ICOBO), Southern Building Code Congress (SBCC), and Underwriters Laboratory (UL).

Testing siding products for yourself is one good way to make the best decision on the investment of re-siding. To get a free sample of Mastic Corporation's Contour T-lok solid-vinyl siding to test for yourself, and a brochure about siding, write to Mastic Corporation, Dept. M, 131 South Taylor Street, South Bend, Ind. 46601.

PORTABILITY AND HIGH-EFFICIENCY make this 5,000-BTUH Carry-Cool® room air conditioner from General Electric a cool investment this summer.

Keep your cool with high-efficiency units

There's a breed of room air conditioners designed to provide summer comfort and do it with less electricity than used to be required.

They're called "high-efficiency" models, and they're aimed at smart shoppers who want to keep their cool in the face of rising costs for electricity.

One air conditioner maker that has recognized the growing need for high-efficiency air conditioning is the General Electric Company. GE offers a full line of high-efficiency units to answer nearly any cooling need.

Available from 5,000-BTUH bedroom size to a multi-room 27,000-BTUH unit, GE high-efficiency air conditioners fit most every type of window, and many can be installed through-the-wall as well.

General Electric High Efficiency units have Energy Efficiency Ratios (EER) of 7.5 and above. EER refers to the number of BTUs of cooling the unit produces for each watt of electricity used; the higher the number the more efficient the air conditioner.

General Electric's high-efficiency room air conditioners, depending upon the model selected, use from 7% to 40% less electricity than regular GE models of comparable capacity.

The latest addition to GE's line of high-efficiency models is a new personal portable Carry-Cool® model. This 5,000-BTUH unit has an 8.0 EER. It weighs just 51 pounds and has a built-in handle to enhance portability.

All told, GE offers 15 high-efficiency air conditioners from which to choose.

Doors offer fire protection, added energy conservation

Fire is a dreaded concern of every homeowner. It can sweep unmercifully through a home or apartment in minutes snuffing out lives as it goes.

For years, building codes have been formulated to provide as much protection from this reckless killer as possible. Today, fire-resistant construction is required throughout the country.

Few people, however, realize that there are varying degrees of protection available in building materials, especially in doors. A rating system has been used over the years to indicate the degrees of fire protection.

Most residential door systems fall into three categories — Class A (3 hour), Class B (1½ hour), and Class C (¾ hour). Class A doors are usually constructed for fire purposes only.

According to Pease Ever-Strait Door Systems, originators and world's largest producer of foam core steel doors, most doors used today carry a Class C rating or less. They meet minimum standards required by many building codes.

Recently Pease Ever-Strait Doors passed tests qualifying it as a Class B door with decorative moldings applied, thus making the company the first ever to receive certification for its regular production door.

The standard Ever-Strait door comes certified and labeled Class B (1½ hour) with no special ordering required. All doors except those with lights (or windows) or wider 3'6" measurements qualify.

"The advantage," a company spokesman says, "is that fire protection is gained without sacrificing beauty or energy conservation. The new Class B certified and labeled fire door uses the same magnetically weatherstripped steel frame previously available as an energy saver."

Pease said all standard door sizes are available. Now beauty, security, sound control, and fire protection come in one standard door assembly.

FIRES WILL HAVE A REAL DEVIL of a time with the new Pease Ever-Strait Class B 1½-hour rated door. The Class B label, found on the hinge edge of all standard 2'6", 2'8" and 3'0" single Ever-Strait doors, names the ASTM test services to which the door was subjected.

SECURED IN A SIMULATED block wall with heat sensing thermo couplings attached, the Pease Ever-Strait door is subjected to fire conditions exceeding those encountered in real life. Having successfully met the tough requirements of the ASTM E 152-73 tests, the Ever-Strait door was certified and labeled with the Class B 1½-hour rating.

THE PERFECT FLEXIBLE paint sander is Grind-O-Flex Abrasive Flap Wheel. Thousands of abrasive flaps per minute will not load up. Can be used on wood, iron railings.

Flexible sanding wheel for home workshop use

Clean-up and feather-edging of exterior painted sash and trim surfaces around the home, prior to repainting, can now be done in less time with Merit's flexible Grind-O-Flex Wheel.

Thousands of industrial abrasive cloth flaps per minute sand flat, round or slightly curved surfaces. Grind-O-Flex has the unique advantage of not loading up with paint. Also easier to use and more efficient than wire brushing.

The Grind-O-Flex Wheel has dozens of uses around the house. You can sand wood and ornamental iron railings. Sand gutters prior to repainting. Rusted garden and workshop tools can be easily cleaned.

Grind-O-Flex can be used on bench motors and ¼" and ⅜" portable drill motors. A 5" diameter x 1" wide wheel is available in a choice of fine, medium and coarse grits for about $5 from hardware stores, home centers and lumber yards. A reusable adapter for use in drill chucks is available for $1.

If not available from a local source Merit will fill mail orders. Please add $1.25 for postage and handling. A free home workshop brochure full of sanding hints for the hobbyist and home owner is available by writing Consumer Dept. MN, Merit Abrasive Products, Inc., 201 W. Manville, Compton, California 90224.

To help save on fuel bills

Finding the fountain of youth seems to hold more promise for today's homeowners than finding reduced fuel bills.

While Johns-Manville is not promising any fountains, their new Insulation Center located at the company headquarters in Denver, Colo., does promise quick and efficient service to homeowners and other building professionals seeking ways to conserve energy and reduce fuel bills.

If you wish expert advice on how, when and where to cut fuel costs, write: Johns-Manville Insulation Center, Drawer 17-L, Denver, Colo. 80217 or call the Center's action line: 303/770-1000, ext. 3111.

Helping hands

The large and growing network of home improvement centers across the country is providing the would-be do-it-yourselfer with a wide variety of services ranging from over-the-counter advice to remodeling clinics.

In addition to the do-it-yourself business, many home centers provide professional installation either by sub-contractors or by their own personnel.

And there is other help for the do-it-yourselfer. Publishers are inundating bookstores with new do-it-yourself books, packed with solid information and easy-to-follow drawings.

Industry, too, has jumped on the bandwagon, and well known manufacturers of building materials are offering detailed instructions of their products.

Paneling, for example, used to be an awesome task for the amateur but now with the availability of large 4' x 8' lightweight sheets it is easy to handle and the new adhesives make installation as easy to hang as some wallpaper. All paneling today is prefinished so that labor ends with installation.

Siding a house is a relatively new do-it-yourself phenomenon spawned by consumers' need to conserve labor dollars, and re-siding is one of the simplest weys to change the style of a house.

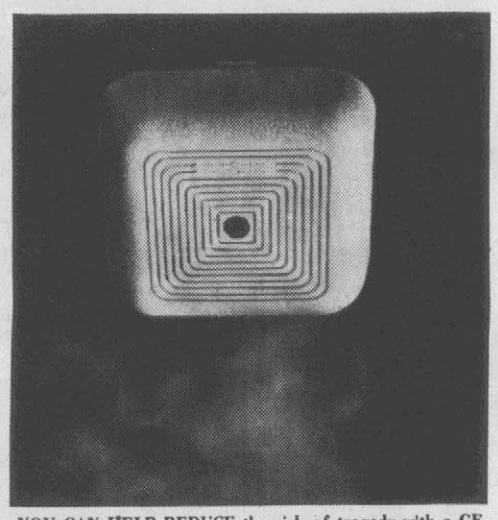

Home fires: an increasing cause for alarm, use important check list for their prevention

Twelve thousand Americans are killed annually in fires; another 300,000 are injured; and property damage extends to $3 billion.

In light of these statistics, obviously one of the most important and least expensive home improvements you can make is in the area of fire safety.

A quick check of the following points can make a vast improvement.

- Store gasoline, paints and other flammable materials in tight metal containers. Don't use flammable liquids near heat, a pilot light or while smoking.
- Have heating equipment checked annually; keep chimneys clean, and always use a screen to cover your fireplace.
- Sort and remove rubbish. Don't store things near the furnace or heater.
- Put lighters and matches where small children won't find them.
- Never smoke in bed.
- Don't overload electrical outlets.
- Replace inadequate home wiring and cracked or frayed appliance cords.
- Make sure that all appliances you purchase are U.L. or Factory Mutual tested.
- When a fuse blows, find the cause, and always replace a blown fuse with one the same size (no pennies).

YOU CAN HELP REDUCE the risk of tragedy with a GE Home Sentry™ Smoke Alarm for early warning of fire.

Use this check list periodically and correct any hazards you find without delay. Unfortunately, no matter how vigilant you are, a fire can still happen, so another big improvement you can make is to be sure you and your family are prepared for fire.

Consider the following:

- It's wise to have some kind of early warning alarm system. One of the newest, which utilizes space age technology, is the General Electric Home Sentry™ Smoke Alarm.

This smoke alarm sounds for early warning of fire, often when the smoke reaching the smoke alarm is barely visible. There is no way to guarantee against injury or loss of life in a fire. The GE Smoke alarm is intended to help reduce the risk of tragedy.

- Plan for escape from every area of your home. Discuss escape routes (there should be two from each room) with the family, especially the children. Actually rehearse escape with fire drills.

During the drills, you can sound the alarm by pressing the red test button. This way your family will become familiar with the sound and be able to react quickly.

- Sleep with bedroom doors closed. In the event of fire, you'll gain precious extra minutes to escape.
- If you see, smell, or hear any hint of fire, don't stop to investigate. Evacuate the family immediately and telephone the fire department from a neighbor's or other outside phone.
- Before opening the door when you suspect fire in another part of the house, feel the inside of the door with the palm of your hand. If it's hot, don't open it. If smoke is pouring into the room under the door, stuff bedding or clothing into the crack.

Check with your local fire department, they will be happy to give you more "fire improvement" information and may even be willing to send someone out to inspect your home. Become fire conscious and become fire safe.

Easy-care rooms to match family lifestyle

Simplicity is the key to a family room which is both functional and attractive. And with the various styles of contemporary furniture and accessories available today, the family room can be easily redecorated to suit your lifestyle.

Basics for a family room often include a couch, recliner lounge chair, one or two stationary chairs, end tables with lamps and, perhaps, several small, portable cube tables or a coffee table.

Determine your family's needs — you might want to include a larger card table with matching chairs, bookshelves and cabinets, too. You may find the latter items are especially useful if your family room doubles as a game room or den.

Whatever pieces of furniture and accessories you decide upon, remember they'll need routine maintenance to keep them looking their best.

Many styles are available in the new leather-look vinyls and in laminated and translucent plastics — good, durable materials for family room furnishings as they can be easily cleaned by spraying with Fantastik® spray cleaner and wiping with a clean cloth or damp sponge.

Chrome and stainless steel accessories may also be cleaned with the spray cleaner; on wood furniture surfaces, use a polish appropriate for the particular type of wooden finish.

A family room is meant to be used, not just looked at. By choosing furnishings for it that are stylish, functional and easy to care for, you'll have created a room the whole family can enjoy.

Woodchoppers safety rules

Woodchopping, an art almost lost in our country's historical past, is fast emerging again as Americans try to blunt the sharply rising costs of home heating.

Because of this growing interest, the Hand Tools Institute has issued some basic safety reminders in using these tools for one of the most basic chores known to man.

First, cautions HTI, make sure you select the proper tool.

Besides selecting the proper tool, HTI warns that the tool also should be in top condition.

For instance, never use tools with loose or damaged handles or cracked, chipped faces. Make sure the cutting edge of your axe, hatchet, woodchoppers maul, or wedge is sharp. Dull tools are dangerous and require more effort.

HTI also urges that you properly dress for your woodchopping job. Safety shoes are recommended. So are safety goggles to protect your eyes from flying chips or fragments.

HAPPY AND HEALTHFUL. A new GE ground fault circuit interrupting device, a GFCI wall receptacle, is protecting this girl from a possible fatal electric shock. Ground fault protection is now required by the National Electrical Code in the bathroom and outdoor receptacle circuits of all new homes built since January 1, 1975. GE supplies GFCI circuit breakers and easily installed receptacles, which are ideal for use in existing homes.

Ground fault—circuits protect family at home

Protect your family at home against possible fatal electrical shocks with new ground fault circuit interrupters (GFCI's). These new electronic devices offer an additional level of protection . . . protection for people not provided by conventional fuses and circuit breakers, which are designed to protect house wiring only.

A current flow as small as 11 milliamps can freeze you to a power source, and a current as low as 380 milliamps, or one-third of one ampere, can be fatal. Conventional household fuses and circuit breakers, however, trip at current levels in excess of their normal ampere ratings.

Most electrical shocks from ground faults are caused by careless use of electricity or by breakdown of insulation on electrical appliances in wet or damp areas.

GFCI circuit breakers made by General Electric are used in new home construction, particularly in the bathroom and for outdoor receptacle circuits as now required by the National Electrical Code. GE GFCI receptacles are ideal for retrofitting ground fault protection in existing older homes.

Six basic elements to look at when planning to remodel your bathroom

If your bathroom is rather drab, with old-fashioned fixtures and definitely in need of remodeling, it is probably like most — about 5 feet by 8 feet in size.

If so, you won't find too many idea bathrooms in advertisements or editorial this size to help you — most such baths are larger and your problem will be to convert the ideas found in such large rooms down to fit your space.

Therefore, before you remove the first wall tile or start tearing up the floor covering, take a few minutes to plan your bathroom remodeling.

There are six basic elements of better bathroom design for you to consider, according to Eljer Plumbingware, a leading manufacturer of plumbing products. Each is important to total bathroom planning.

• The basic plan of the bathroom must be a good one — one that will work even in the most restricted space. In many cases you will be working with all plumbing pipes placed on one wet wall. It will be most economical to take this arrangement and develop variety and design without a change in plumbing.

However, to create the best plan for your bathroom you may find it necessary to change some fixture locations. If this is desired, by all means contact your plumbing contractor because proper installation and adherence to plumbing codes are mandatory.

• Choosing the right fixtures is very important because remodeling your bathroom is pointless if built around a poor choice of fixtures. Don't skimp on quality, not if you want to be assured of satisfaction, performance and beauty in the years ahead. Be sure you consider colored fixtures . . . added spark for your bath at small added cost.

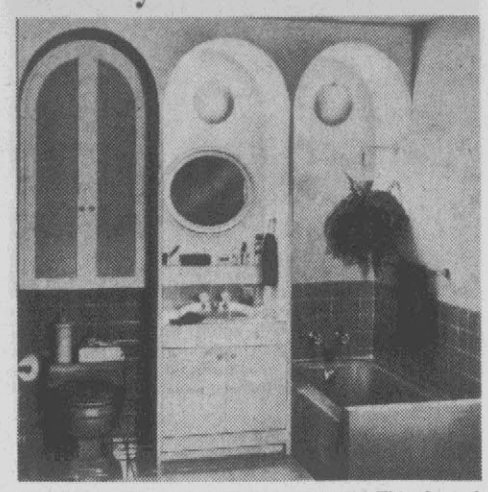

• Adequate storage is so fundamental yet so often overlooked in the bathroom. Be sure you provide space to store towels, tissues, cleansing materials, cosmetics, etc. . . . and storage space is probably more important in a small bathroom than in a large one.

• Lighting must be adequate for proper application of cosmetics, shaving, and believe it or not, reading. Let's face it, everyone needs a morale boost when they first get up in the morning — and warm lighting in the bathroom can at least make you look much better than you feel.

• Adequate ventilation is an item easily overlooked in bathroom remodeling. Ventilation can do more than just make the bathroom smell fresh — it can help keep it clean, warm, remove excess moisture and help control mildew.

• Every homeowner should have a bathroom that's easy to maintain. Begin by choosing quality fixtures, with finishes of glass-hard vitreous china or durable enameled cast iron. Consider the new, easy-to-maintain finishing materials such as vinyl wall coverings, laminated plastic surfaces, and ceramic tile for easy cleaning without sacrificing decorative appearance or utility.

Showers of water-saving tips

If yours is an average family, you use more than 80,000 gallons of water every year!

No one has to tell you that water rates are going up. So are rates for gas or electricity to heat that water.

And what about those sewage service charges many communities are passing on to residents in this form of direct-user charges. They are often based on the amount of waste water discharged from your home.

It all boils down to this: Save water . . . and you save money!

Saving water isn't difficult, says Kohler Co., a leading plumbingware manufacturer whose products include water-conserving toilets, showerheads and faucets. Depending on daily use, these products could save an average family of four some 30,000 gallons of water a year . . . or more!

The conventional toilet, for instance, uses five gallons of water per flush. It accounts for as much as 40% of all water used in the home. That's some 32,000 gallons of water flushed down the drain every year.

Kohler's "Water-Guard" toilet, on the other hand, flushes with 3½ gallons of water . . . 30% less than most other toilets. That's an annual savings of some 10,000 gallons of water, and a savings of 10,000 gallons less sewage . . . savings that could pay for the installation of the toilet in a few years.

"Water-Guard" features a flushing system designed to complement a new trapway that ensures positive flushing action with less water. This is a far superior system than the "Brick in the tank" which often wastes water because multiple flushes are required to clean the toilet bowl.

Water-conserving showerheads are even more efficient "dollar-savers" if your family enjoys showering.

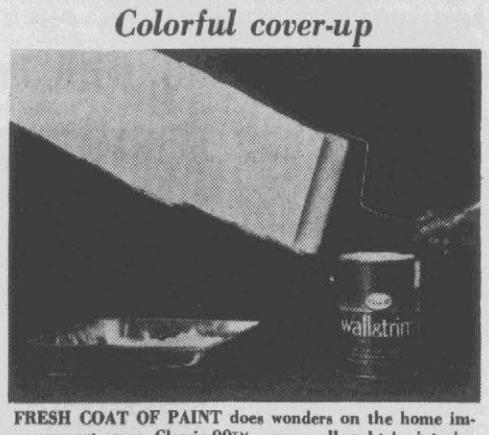

Kohler, for instance, offers showerheads with automatic flow control that can reduce water usage 50% or more . . . from the six to eight gallons per minute delivered by conventional showerheads to just three gallons per minute. Even at the reduced volume, the bather still gets a thoroughly satisfying and drenching shower.

With water-conserving showerheads, an average family of four could save as much as 20,000 gallons of water per year — plus many "fuel dollars" that would be burned up in the hot water heater, and many "sewer service" dollars, too — assuming each member of the family took a daily five-minute shower.

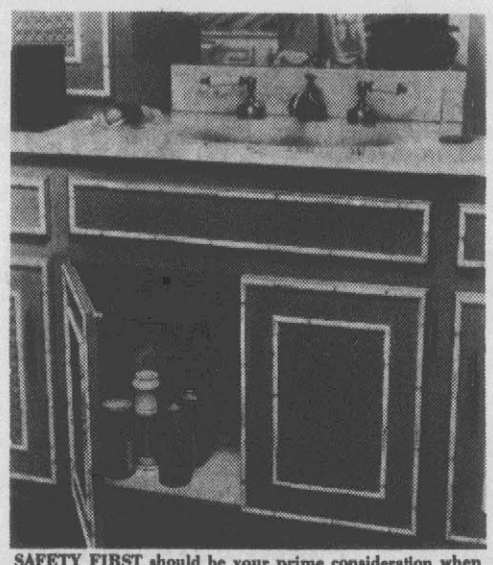

Flow control showerheads, in chromium or gold electroplate finishes, are designed so that they can easily replace water-wasting showerheads in existing installations.

Flow control is also an available conservation feature in certain Kohler faucets for lavatories and kitchen sinks. Water flow is limited to two gallons per minute per valve.

Colorful cover-up

FRESH COAT OF PAINT does wonders on the home improvement scene. Classic 99™, a new wall and trim interior paint from Sherwin-Williams, combines the main features consumers want in a latex: one-coat coverage over most surfaces, scrubbability, and a wide range of customized colors.

SAFETY FIRST should be your prime consideration when storing medicines and harsh cleaning compounds in the bathroom. Avoid storing them under sinks or in unlocked cabinets where children and pets may accidentally get at them. Better yet, avoid using harsh products altogether. For example, use Drain Power, the first drain opener to use pressure to clear clogged drains, instead of using dangerous crystal and liquid drain cleaners that contain harmful lyes or acids.

Save money and energy with proper insulation

The average homeowner can save up to 50% of his fuel costs with the proper insulation, plus half his energy consumption. Caulking and weatherstripping storm windows can save an additional 13%.

Insulation provides a barrier of tiny air pockets that slow the movement of heat.

In wide use throughout the country are fiber glass, rock wool, vermiculite and cellulose. These products are set in place, poured, or blown by machine into walls, under floors or above or below ceilings.

To check the efficiency of insulation, the homeowner should place a thermometer on the wall inside the house. With the room at 68 degrees and outside temperature about 50 degrees, a well-insulated wall should register about 65 degrees. If it's much lower than 65, the wall is in all probability not insulated.

Insulation is rated by its resistance to heat flow. This is called its R value. The higher the R rating, the more satisfactory its resistance.

A thickness of about three to four inches of blanketed fiber glass or rock wool is classified as R-11, meaning that it resists heat transfer as well as nine inches of lumber or four feet of brick.

How much the homeowner will save by installing insulation or adding to his existing insulation really depends on a number of factors.

However, it's safe to say that even though insulation represents an initial outlay of substantial funds, the average insulation job should save enough to pay for itself in four to five years.

Planning for livable kitchen

There's little doubt that remodeling the kitchen — the most lived-in room in your home — is an effective way to maintain the value of your house while adding to your comfort and convenience.

Some careful planning is required if you hope to get the twin benefits of good design at a price you can afford. The rule of thumb regarding counter space, for instance, calls for having twice as much space as you think is necessary.

At least four feet of counter space between major appliances is recommended by the National Kitchen Cabinet Association, Homemakers thinking about kitchen remodeling sometimes overlook the room that's needed for meal preparation or for stacking dishes, pots and pans before washing them.

If keeping down the cost of kitchen modernization is an important consideration, consider a work triangle that is compact, but not crowded. And think about the remodeling as a do-it-yourself project.

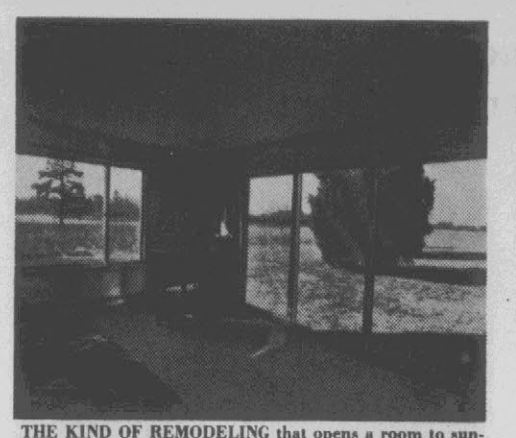

Another important consideration is the cabinets you choose. Since they are manufactured in a broad range of styles, materials and prices, base your selection on performance as much as appearance.

How do you determine whether quality has been built into kitchen cabinets? Look for the blue and white NKCA certification seal on the inside of a cabinet lock or drawer.

The seal is the consumer's assurance that the cabinets meet the rigid construction and performance standards of the American National Standards Institute (ANSI). Cabinets may display the NKCA certification seal only after the ANSI tests show they hold up structurally under the equivalent of at least ten years of normal use. The cabinets' finish must provide the equivalent of at least five years' service.

The structural tests are designed to measure such cabinet abuses as pulling on a door to reach a top shelf, overloading drawers and shelves or dropping cans in drawers. To pass finish tests, cabinets must resist stains, scratches, alcohol, steam, food spills, temperature changes.

Additional help in the selection of kitchen cabinets is available in a 16-page booklet, which may be obtained by sending 35 cents with your name and address to Nat'l Kitchen Cabinet Assn., P.O. Box 2978, Grand Central Station, New York, N.Y. 10017.

THE KIND OF REMODELING that opens a room to sunlight, fresh air and views is sure to be a wise investment. Here, Andersen Perma-Shield gliding doors and gliding windows have vinyl-clad wood sash and frames and double pane insulating glass for low maintenance and year-round comfort.

Remodeling your home could be the best move

The high cost, inconvenience and emotional trauma of moving have caused many families to stay where they are and modernize or expand their homes. Remodeling can be a wise investment that improves the value of the property or it can be a costly mistake.

As in any business, there are reputable, competent and professional remodelers. But there are some fly-by-nighters who may do little more than "take the money and run." How do you avoid the latter?

Thorough investigation

Andersen Corporation, which manufactures Perma-Shield windows and gliding doors, suggests you begin by talking with friends or neighbors who have had their homes modernized and are satisfied with the workmanship.

Get the names of at least three contractors. Ask them for the names and addresses of other satisfied customers. They should be happy to supply you with a list since their staying in business often depends on customer satisfaction.

Telephone or visit the people on the list and discuss the work they had done. Finally, check the remodeler's reputation with the Better Business Bureau or with a local bank that handles home improvement loans.

Some homeowners prefer to undertake their home improvement projects themselves. Many of the jobs designed to upgrade a home can be handled by any competent handyman.

Replacement windows is one. Andersen says the initial task is to be certain the new windows are better than the ones being replaced. Once the old window has been removed, the procedure for installing a replacement window is the same as in new construction.

Custom sizing

In most cases, stock windows to fit the rough opening can be purchased at local building supply dealers. If the replacement window is too short or too narrow, routine carpentry will adjust the size of the opening.

Well-built units such as Andersen's Perma-Shield vinyl-clad wood window have a factory-installed rigid vinyl anchoring flange to simplify installation.

Two booklets detailing how to install wood windows and gliding doors can be obtained free by writing to the Andersen Corporation, Bayport, Minn. 55003. Write Dept. DYW for the window pamphlet, Dept. DYD for the gliding door booklet.

Decorating doldrums easy to dispel, renew, don't redo, with imagination

If the condition of your home tells you it's time to redecorate but your checkbook says "no," don't despair! You can still spruce up your domestic surroundings without expensive refurnishing.

When the decorating doldrums hit your house, strike back. Here's how:

• Carpets looking dull and dirty? Renew them, don't replace them. Rugs and carpets need routine cleaning to keep them looking their best just as tile and linoleum floors do.

You can easily clean carpets yourself in about an hour with Spray 'n Vac rug cleaner. Just spray this no-scrub rug cleaner onto dirty carpets and, when the foam dries, simply vacuum the foam and dingy dirt away.

• Repaint — it's easy to do yourself. Use a color to coordinate with your carpets, or choose a neutral such as eggshell white or beige. Stay away from pure whites that tend to look grey on walls.

• Furniture getting worn and faded? Instead of buying costly new chairs or a new sofa, think about re-upholstering or using slipcovers.

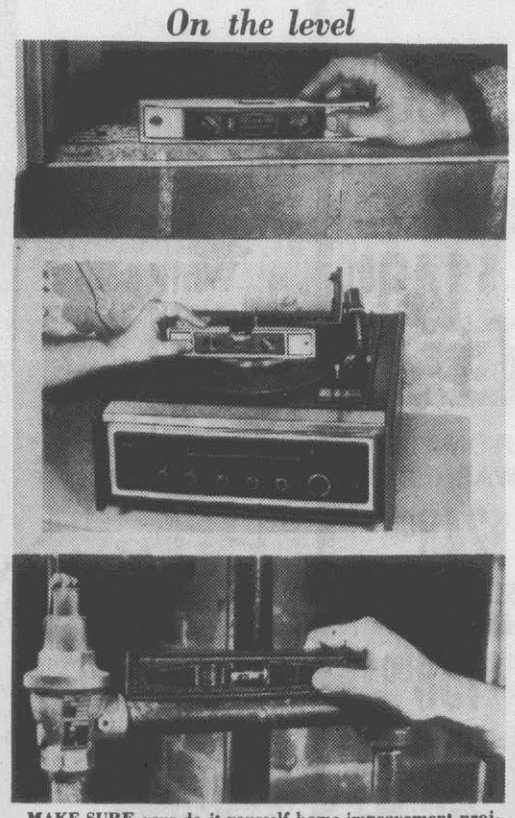

RENEW, DON'T REDO, your carpeting. When rugs and carpeting get dirty, clean them yourself to restore their beauty, instead of spending hundreds of dollars for replacements. With the no-scrub rug cleaner Spray 'n Vac, all you do is spray the foam onto the rug, let dry, and vacuum away dirt and soil.

Choose a pattern in one of the many interesting neutral colors that are so popular today, using accessories to pick up colors from your carpet and walls.

• Rearrange furniture to create a new and different look. For a change, move furniture to other rooms. You'll find that many pieces would look well in different areas of the house, too.

Subtle changes in a room's appearance can be achieved as simply as switching lamps, art and accessories between living room and bedroom: And, by moving items from room to room, you gain the benefits of refurnishing without spending a penny.

On the level

MAKE SURE your do-it-yourself home improvement projets are on the level! Now a full range of good-better-best Stanley top-reading torpedo levels with 360 vials offering varying features: Good: Economical magnesium and Cycolac® is "V" grooved for pipe work. Better: Durable, lightweight Cycolac® with magnetic strip which adheres to metal surfaces has three stations, plumb, level and 45. Best: Strong and light die-cast magnesium with magnetic strip and three replaceable acrylic vials comes in a vinyl pouch.

Wear resistant shingles

LIGHT AND LIVELY — Johns-Manville fiber glass shingles are ideal for reroofing because they are light enough to use over several layers of old shingles. Longer-lived than conventional asphalt, they are rated Class A for highest resistance.

Upholstery maintenance

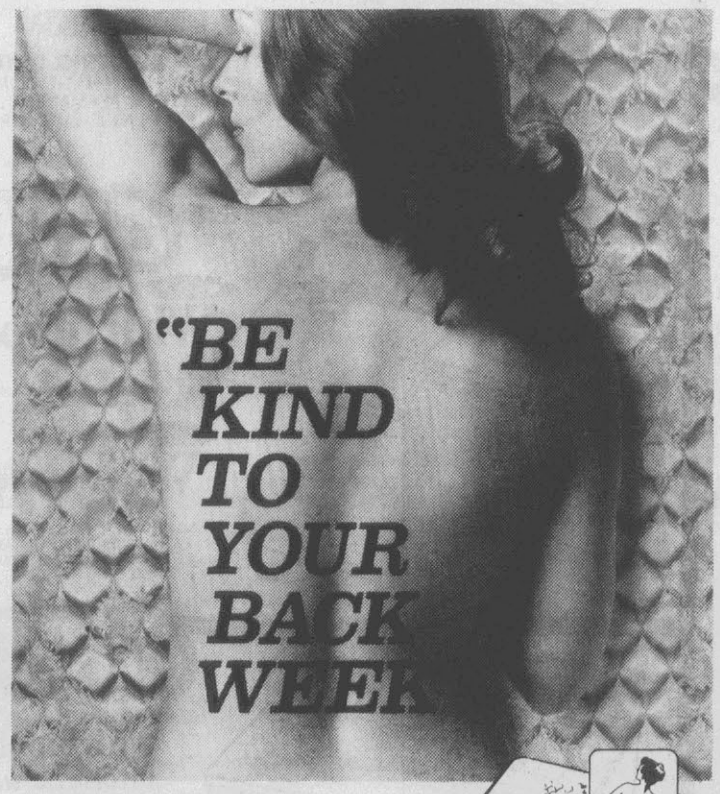

Upholstered furniture adds warmth and beauty to any home, and with some simple, basic care, it can stay attractive-looking for years.

Many people tend to overlook upholstered furniture during the course of their regular cleaning routine. This is an unfortunate mistake because, although the soil is not as readily visible, upholstered furniture collects just as much dust and grime as the tops of wood or even glass tables. Neglecting it allows gritty dirt particles to wear away and discolor the furniture's fabric — creating a stale odor in the process.

To maintain your upholstered furniture, vacuum it regularly using the appropriate attachment from your vacuum cleaner. Be sure to get into the seams and tufts where dust can build up.

Remove spots and spills as soon as possible. Spills usually sponge right up with a bit of water and a rubdown with a clean, dry cloth. And many stains can be as easy to remove with a spray of K2r® Spot-lifter. Just apply K2r to the soiled area, let dry to a fine white powder and then brush or vacuum the powder — and the spot — away.

Quality tools do better job

GOOD QUALITY HAND TOOLS are designed and made to make a job easier and enable the home handyperson to work well, efficiently and safely. It is just as important to have good screwdrivers, saws and measuring tools at your workbench as it is to use durable and high quality construction materials for home improvement projects. If you "cut corners" on either, the finished work will show it. There are three basic clues to good quality in hand tools, and they'll all be found in Crescent screwdrivers, pliers and wrenches; Lufkin tapes and rules; Nicholson saws and files; and Weller soldering equipment. Look for precision-machined tools with perfectly mated component parts. Materials and finishes are important, too — drop-forged alloy or carbon steels, chrome plating for resistance to corrosion, and U.L. wiring tags. And don't forget hand tools must be comfortable to use — balance, weight, size and handles are key factors to consider.

Designs for apartments are their departments

Most designers agree that working within the architectural limitations of the modern apartment building, and making older apartments reflect the needs and preferences of today's families is the major challenge they face at the present time.

Space-saving ideas were a feature of the new "Apartment Living" designer rooms at the American Mart in Chicago.

Each participating designer first envisioned who would be using his or her particular room and then sought to incorporate many uses into this one room because of size and space variables in both modern and older apartments.

Furniture and accessories for the rooms served as an inspiration when first approaching the interior design of these irregular-sized apartment rooms.

According to William Ishmael, A.S.I.D. designer, "Divergent styles are bound together by a bright colorful background and strong interior architecture."

Realizing the dining room is a luxury that may be missing in future apartments, Ishmael sought to make this room serve many uses with simple furniture that could be moved when the room serves other functions or combines as a library-study.

Textures in wall covering and draperies were considered important features in the over-all look by other designers as well as plants and accessories that add a touch of flair.

Easy-do décor reflects you

DECORATORS AGREE that your decor should reflect the real you . . . so don't be afraid to show your brass! What better way than with this do-it-yourself brass tipped chest which can be made very easily with glue, nails, table saw and sandpaper. With a coat of stain, paint or lacquer, the chest will be a welcome accent to a contemporary, early American or oriental setting. Free assembly instructions are available at local area building supply and home centers or by writing to: Stanley Hardware, Department FID, The Stanley Works, New Britain, Conn. 06050.

Tips on snips for the craftsman add dimension to hobbies, repairs

When it comes to handling repair work around the house, the modern craftsman needs at least one and possibly more metal cutting snips for his workbench. And sometimes this same person is also likely to use the same tools in fashioning handcrafts for some of his more leisurely workshop hobbies.

If you are a do-it-yourselfer who fits either or both of these types, you'll surely want to know how the work can go easier and faster and more pleasantly with the correct cutting implements.

J. Wiss & Sons Co., a leading metal snips manufacturer, says there's a basic assortment of snips that the home handyman should know about for cutting fiber glass, rubber, wire, leather and other tough materials. There are snips that make left or right handed cuts on sheet metal, and those primarily for cutting straight lines.

The hobbyist will also appreciate the capabilities of these same tools (recognized by numbers on their blades such as M1, M2, MPC-3 and A-10) in creating tin-can art and metal wall sculptures as well as for working with metal grill work, aluminum edgings, etc.

For this busy home craftsman, who undoubtedly is doing more of his own repairs today due to rising costs in professional services, Wiss has taken one of its top professional tools — M-41R pipe and duct snips — and packaged it for the consumer. Featuring compound lever action that transmits exceptional power with half the effort required of regular snips, they also have a patented ball spreading action for faster, cleaner cutting, even through seams. An extra sharp piercing tip permits you to start your cutting point anywhere on a flat metal sheet.

They cut any shape ducts — square, rectangular or round. They are ideal for cutting an opening to attach a downspout to a gutter and a myriad of other home improvement projects.

They are also excellent for cutting non-metallic sheet materials such as fiber glass panels, vinyl tiles, decorative plastic kitchen laminates, synthetic shingles and lots more. The ball bearing jaw plus the vinyl offset handles protect the hands from cuts and bruises. Wiss snips make a great gift for dad on any occasion. You'll find them attractively packaged at your local hardware store.

PROFESSIONAL COMPOUND ACTION snips M-41R by Wiss, is now available to consumers. It's capable of starting a cutting point anywhere on flat sheet metal, and is perfect for cutting a hole in leaders for downspouts.

Popular 'no-problem' doors will delight do-it-yourselfers

One of the "stickiest" problems do-it-yourselfers have faced is that of interior sliding and bi-fold doors. For years they've been limited to wood, which often warps, splits, rots, swells, cracks or peels; or metal, which rattles, dents, bends, shimmies and shakes.

Until now, the only antidote has been to purchase expensive hardwood doors; yet for most consumers the price is far out of line with their budget. As a result, otherwise fine remodeling projects have been finished with less than desirable doors.

A happy alternative has been provided with the introduction of pre-finished Grandor® "natural as wood" bi-fold and sliding decorator doors.

Unique Grandor is taking the country by storm because it totally eliminates the problems of wood and metal. It combines high density moulded polyurethane with a rigid built-in seal reinforcement system to exactly duplicate the high quality look and feel of the most expensive hardwood.

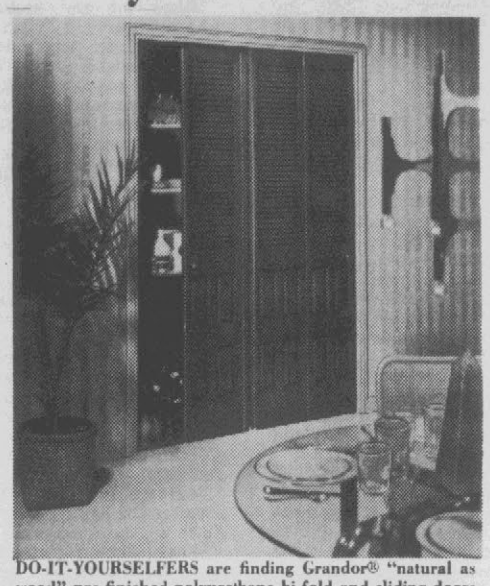

In fact, Grandor's woodgrain is so authentic that even the experts constantly mistake it for real oak.

Grandor is a perfect one-hour do-it-yourself project for any member of the family who can use basic tools. Each door set includes all hardware and pictorial step-by-step installation instructions.

Hand-finished by factory craftsmen in a choice of deep, rich walnut or neutral white, Grandor requires no preparation, sanding, staining or painting.

High quality and moderate price make it an ideal way to create a harmonious decorating theme for every room in the home. It is widely used for closet and storage areas in bedrooms, baths, foyers, kitchens, dining areas, living rooms, family rooms and wherever else the homeowner desires.

Two popular and basic styles, all panel and half louver/half panel, are offered in a variety of sizes which fit virtually all bi-fold and sliding door widths.

DO-IT-YOURSELFERS are finding Grandor® "natural as wood" pre-finished polyurethane bi-fold and sliding doors are an easy, sensible way to create a new decorative aura in any room in a minimal amount of time. This revolutionary new product's construction eliminates the many negative characteristics of wood and metal doors.

When the urge to redecorate your home hits, don't forget the family bathroom.

There's much you can do to spruce up this "everyone's" room, even though its furnishings can't be rearranged! Here are some of the ways you can do it:

• Cover plain, dull walls with an attractive, colorful wallpaper. Wallpaper can add brightness to a room. If there's a window in the bathroom, have a window shade made from leftover paper to match the walls.

• Hang some art. Many pictures and prints can safely withstand bathroom moisture — and they add interest to the room.

• Keep it shining. No matter how you decorate, a clean room always looks better than a neglected one. And, especially in the bathroom, it's prudent to kill germs while you clean. With Fantastik® Bathroom Cleaner it's easy to clean, disinfect and deodorize washable surfaces at the same time.

Spray tub and basin, shower curtain, tiles, floors, counter tops and other washable surfaces with the foaming bathroom cleaner and wipe off with a paper towel, clean cloth or damp sponge.

In addition to killing staph, strep and other household germs, you'll also help prevent mold and mildew growth for up to two weeks.

• Think green . . . plants, that is. Plants look great anywhere in the home — the bathroom is no exception. If you have enough space, try setting one on a pedestal; otherwise, a hanging plant would do nicely, too. It'll flourish in the room's moisture!

• Hang curtains in front of the bath; protect them with a plastic shower sheet. Shower curtains must be waterproof, but only on the side that gets hit by water — you can use almost any washable material to make a pretty curtain for the "dry side."

WINDOWS THAT SERVE to make the outdoors a visual extension of a room are part of the pleasure in family rooms. They also provide plenty of sunlight and fresh air. These wood framed sliding windows of ponderosa pine equipped with insulating glass keep heat loss at a minimum, thus conserving energy.

Family room windows reflect all viewpoints

Adding a family room to a comfortable older home can be as challenging as it is exciting. The excitement comes from daydreaming about the ways the family will eventually use the room for enjoyment or entertainment as well as from planning the interior decor.

Wondering how you'll be able to design a room that will meet the family's needs for comfort and convenience, yet conserve energy, is the challenge.

If you're thinking about adding a room to the back of the house, adjacent to a patio or backyard, ample window space that affords broad views, fresh air and sunshine is a must. Since windows offer the best opportunity for making a new room attractive as well as functional, choosing the right ones can give you all the natural light and fresh air you'll need and still conserve energy.

The quality of the window being installed has as much influence on energy conservation as its size and number. Precision-made wood windows with insulating glass, for example, save considerably more energy than routine, single-glazed metal-frame windows without a specific thermal barrier.

Well-built wood window units keep heat loss at a minimum in several ways. Since wood is a poor conductor, it makes an excellent insulator.

Insulating glass — two panes of glass with an insulating air space between — also reduces the flow of heat through the glass area. And factory-applied weatherstripping limits heat loss due to air infiltration.

Combined with wood sash, insulating glass reduces heating costs in other ways. Indoor condensation on the glass surface and the window frame is minimized. This allows a higher humidity level to be maintained at a lower setting on the thermostat, but with no sacrifice in comfort.

In addition, complete wood window units with insulating glass can be purchased at local building material dealers in a variety of styles and sizes that enable homeowners to get a balance of fixed and operable windows. In this way, a homeowner can utilize daylight and cooling breezes instead of relying exclusively on energy-consuming artificial light and air conditioning.

TODAY'S TAP WATER may contain undesirable or potentially dangerous impurities.

If the quality of water drops try household water purifier

City waterworks strive to make water safe and palatable, but recent reports show that there may be new potential health hazards to consider. Private supplies are also suspect.

Does your home water supply have undesirable and disturbing tastes and odors? Are you concerned about drinking it?

Encouragingly, a new three-way household water purifier removes all or substantially all of many undesirable or potentially dangerous impurities from water supplies, and produces high quality water for drinking and cooking. Called the "Aqua-Cleer," it is actually three different water conditioning processes in one system.

Manufactured by Culligan, the new purifier can be installed under the sink, in a crawl space, utility room, or basement. It will process 150 gallons of water a month — more than enough for the drinking and cooking needs of the average family — and at a fraction of the cost of bottled water.

Hundreds of similar systems have been operating for many years, both in homes and in kidney treatment centers, where they are utilized for the preparation of water used in the critical task of purifying the blood of patients suffering from kidney failure.

Aqua-Cleer units are also used to improve water for other health care needs, and for processing water for manufacturing pharmaceuticals, foods, cosmetics, and electronic components.

No method, using a single water purifier, can be as effective as the three-way Culligan Aqua-Cleer system. In this age of pollution, it is prudent to have the best possible water in your home, and it is reassuring to know that household water purifying equipment is available to provide it.

Homeowners side with durable vinyl for new maintenance-free exteriors

If you think "single eight" and "double four" are terms used in playing poker, you're in for a surprise. They're related to the siding on your home . . . especially if it's one of the newest siding products on the market — vinyl.

Vinyl siding comes in 10-foot lengths, according to the experts at the Certain-teed Home Institute, Valley Forge, Pa. It's available in 8-inch wide panels to simulate the standard clapboard found on many homes across the country.

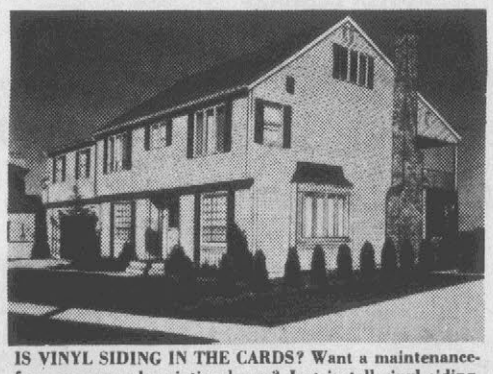

Another version, the double-four, gives the look associated with 4-inch wide clapboard siding. Both feature a wood-grain surface.

And there are vertical panels for yet another look, often desirable for more contemporary homes.

The intriguing thing about vinyl siding is that you can completely clad your home in it. There are accessories to make turning corners a snap. You can have vinyl soffit and fascia installed.

There is even a special fiber glass insulation which fits snugly behind the new siding to increase its thermal efficiency, cutting down on heating and cooling costs.

Vinyl siding is available in a range of gentle, muted tones to complement virtually any style home. The latest colors are harvest gold, sky blue, gray, green and yellow. And, of course, white is always popular.

IS VINYL SIDING IN THE CARDS? Want a maintenance-free, never-needs-painting home? Just install vinyl siding. One leading manufacturer of this innovative product, Certain-teed Products Corporation, reports that vinyl siding gives today's homeowner the break he needs when it comes to painting. Vinyl siding has the color molded clear through it and offers a limited manufacturer's warranty for 20 years.

You need all the helpful tools you can get when it comes to remodeling or redecorating your home. Have you thought of enlisting the aid of your camera in your projects? There are a number of ways photography can help you, both in planning and execution.

Cameras that deliver your pictures instantly are best because there is no wait for the drug store to return your prints. A good camera choice is Polaroid's new Super Shooter. It is inexpensive ($25.00) and allows a wide choice of film — both color and black and white in either a horizontal format or in the less expensive square format.

Here are just three suggestions for letting your camera help you out.

1. AN EYE FOR ADDING ON. Visualizing how a change is going to look is not easy, yet you want to know how your house will be affected when you close in the back porch or add a second story bedroom over the garage. Let your camera help.

It's cheaper to change roof lines or window placement on a photo than after the hammers and saws have started.

2. X-RAY VISION. The studding for the new room is up, the wires and pipes clearly visible now before the sheetrock closes them in. Now is the time to make an instant picture of the anatomy of those walls.

MAKING INSTANT PICTURES of your new walls before they are closed in will give you a valuable record of where all the wires and pipes are inside.

It will be like having x-ray vision later when you need to know just where those pipes and wires are within that wall. And if you are around at the time underground wires or sewer or septic systems are being installed, be quick with your camera to record those locations.

Put the pictures away in your "Household" file; they can save you time and money should subterranean troubles develop later.

3. NOW WHERE DOES THAT BELONG? When redecorating means taking everything off the walls, out of the shelves and out of the kitchen cabinets, a little preliminary snapping with your instant camera can find you smiling smugly when it's time to put everything back.

You have a record of exactly how the intricate wall arrangement fits together, the way the owl collection was arranged on the third shelf and where the company glassware was so neatly at home in the cupboard.

You'd be surprised how unreliable memory can be when it comes to putting things away.

Before long you'll be thinking of so many ways your camera can help you in your renovations and remodeling you'll be tempted to keep it in the tool kit.

Energy-saving appliances,now

The popularity of energy-saving appliances will reach a new high this year.

Today there are refrigerator/freezers which use about a third less electricity than other models not equipped with its special thermostatically controlled motor.

While it is true that the amount of electricity consumed by the refrigerator each operating hour is a modest amount, it's also true that the amount of electricity consumed 24 hours around the clock for 365 days adds up to a substantial figure.

The higher price tags on these models are offset by operating savings over a long period of time.

There are also dramatic developments in the production of high-efficiency air conditioning units, available in capacities from 5,500 to 28,000 BTUs.

Basically, high-efficiency air conditioning is a term applied to air conditioners which produce more cooling per watt of electricity consumed than standard air conditioners of the same capacity.

Cooling is also measured in BTUs. The ratio of BTUs per watt is called Energy Efficiency Ratio.

Save energy

Americans consume 50% more energy in their homes than in all their cars put together, according to the National Home Improvement Council; they squander about 233 million barrels of oil in their homes each year. And, if each family spent $400.00 to fix up its house to save energy, they would get their money back in cost savings in most cases in less than five years!

Unless directions indicate otherwise, thaw frozen foods before cooking and they will cook in less time. Here are a few more energy conservation tips that can save you money in the operation of your range:

How to Get the Most from Your Range

TOP OF RANGE COOKING

Keep reflector pans under units clean. Shiny, clean surfaces reflect the most heat, increase efficiency . . . Use pots and pans that cover the top range units to prevent heat loss around the sides of the pan . . . Use as little water as possible—it will boil more quickly . . . And use of tight-fitting lids allow vegetables to steam rather than boil, preserving their appearance and natural vitamins . . . Also, once boiling starts, the heat can be turned down to save energy and help prevent sticking. Turn the heat off two or three minutes before the end of cooking time. Retained heat in pan will finish the cooking.

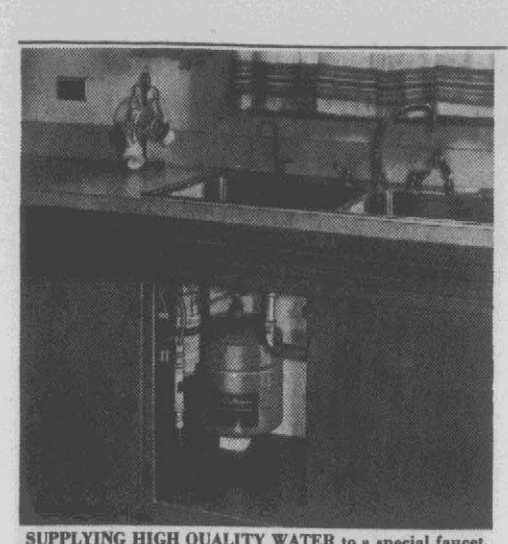

OVEN COOKING

Plan meals ahead—for soups, stews and casseroles that take a long time to cook, make double amounts. Then freeze half for future use . . . Plan entire oven meals around dishes requiring about the same baking temperature, and try to prepare several meals at once . . . Oven preheating requires no more than 10 minutes, and dishes needing more than an hour of cooking time may be started in a cold oven . . . Don't keep peeking in the oven. It wastes heat.

Greenville Utilities Commission

PRESENTED AS A CONSUMER SERVICE BY YOUR CONSUMER OWNED ELECTRIC UTILITY

SUPPLYING HIGH QUALITY WATER to a special faucet, this scientific purifier system can be installed directly under the sink, or wherever space permits.

Compact system brings better drinking water

Combining three different water conditioning processes in one purification system, Culligan's new compact Aqua-Cleer minimizes or eliminates most of the objectionable and potentially hazardous impurities from water.

Just how important is high quality water? Certainly, it is unexcelled as a thirst quencher. Free of chlorine and other objectionable tastes and odors, it is a delicious treat for kids and grownups alike, and it has no calories either.

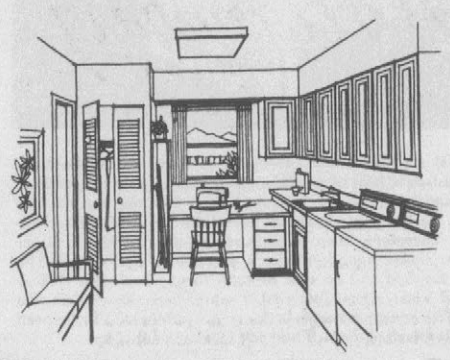

High quality water enhances the clarity of beverages. In coffee, this high quality water provides better flavor and brings out the delightful aroma; and in tea, flavors blossom to full bouquet.

Vegetables cooked in purified water have improved flavor and tenderness. Soups, bouillon, sauces and gelatin desserts made with it are improved by the absence of cloudiness, off-taste, and excessive minerals. The flavor of your favorite instant foods and beverages is improved, rather than impaired.

Any drink benefits when the water used to prepare it is brighter, cleaner, and more delicious. Frozen juices come back to life with true flavors. Ice cubes are harder, clearer, longer lasting, better tasting, and it is easy to run a small water line to the ice maker.

Water, free of excessive minerals and harmful trace chemicals, helps house plants thrive, and aquarium fish too. Photographic hobbyists will find that the lack of particles and sediment-forming substances in this water makes it superior for processing photographs.

The Culligan Aqua-Cleer water purification system provides up to 150 gallons of high quality water a month, which is ample for all these uses in the home or apartment, at a cost which is only a fraction of the cost of bottled water.

MOM'S ROOM is more than just a laundry area. It also serves as a hobby area for sewing, gardening and other crafts and hobbies.

Mom's rooms' as varied as mothers' interests

With the exception of preparing meals, laundry can take more of a homemaker's time than any other single task around the house.

To make the laundry area as pleasant as possible, designers are suggesting that it be conducive to other activities also, such as sewing, potting, painting or whatever crafts or hobbies match the homemaker's needs. They've dubbed it the "Mom's Room."

For homemakers with small children, the "Mom's Room" can even include a small play area where children can occupy themselves within watching distance, but out from underfoot.

What constitutes a perfect "Mom's Room" depends on mother's hobbies. But no matter what those hobbies may be, the laundry equipment will determine in part how much time mom will have to pursue her favorite hobby.

Large-capacity, automatically controlled dryers can help reduce laundry fussing, too. With GE's Automatic Electronic Control dryers, there is no guess-work in setting a timer or running back to the dryer to feel the clothes to determine if they're dry.

Tool safety handbook

Safety rules for both striking and struck tools are covered in literature offered by the Hand Tools Institute as part of its overall Consumer Safety Education Program.

The illustrated handbook "Striking and Struck Tool Safety" lists safety practices, various types of tools and their recommended care and sharpening procedure.

A "Hammer Safety Rules" flyer, developed in conjunction with the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, lists the salient rules of hammer safety and provides guidelines for proper use of each type of striking tool.

The hammer booklet can be ordered at 50 cents a copy. The rules leaflets — either hammers or struck tools — in lots of 100 for $3.00 from the Hand Tools Institute, 331 Madison Ave., N.Y., N.Y. 10017.

Restore and renew with simple household tips

Tight money is a problem many Americans are facing these days, but living within a budget doesn't necessarily mean you must do without. If you've put off redecorating your house because you think you can't afford it, read on.

There are lots of ways to refurbish economically. Here are just a few:

- Organize a community trading cooperative. Set the place, date and time and ask your neighbors to bring furniture and household accessories they no longer use, need or want. Then trade with each other to get new items for your homes.

This method helps everyone dispose of unwanted items and reduce clutter around their homes — and, you may each find exactly what you need to spruce up your homes for free!

- Renew, rather than redo, household basics. So, if draperies and slipcovers are looking drab, treat them to a thorough cleaning to restore their brightness. A good rule of thumb may be to restore before spending more.

For instance, before investing in a costly paint job because walls have gotten streaked and dirty, give them a dose of "elbow grease." Wash walls with a solution of Janitor In A Drum® industrial-strength cleaner and water to get them looking almost like new again, and use the money saved on paint to buy things you can't do or make yourself.

- Take advantage of accessories to brighten up rooms. Throw pillows are always good for accenting a couch — try several in a variety of hues if you wish to introduce new color to your living room.

Some small curios and knick-knacks can add interest and provide new focal points to tables and shelves.

- Practice "musical chairs" art — every few months rearrange paintings and other wall hangings or move them from room to room. You'll be pleasantly surprised with the results.
- Grow lots of plants. They look great in every room; many are inexpensive, easy to care for — and never go out of style.

Undercounter compactor

THEY'RE IN THE BAG: cartons, bottles, cans — dry trash of all kinds is easily handled and reduced to one-fifth its original volume in this Trash Compactor from Hotpoint. Handsome with its optional shiny black door panel of Lexan® resin, this undercounter model has a circular container with a carrying handle for ease in unloading. The appliance is also available in a free-standing model with a convenient cutting-board top accessory. In either style, it comes with reversible door panels in Avocado, Dark Coppertone, Harvest, and White.

More storage with less care

The American homemaker may let herself get carried away from time to time by fashion trends, but she knows exactly what she wants in a home: more storage space and maintenance-free building materials.

That's the word from General Electric's Contract Sales Division in Louisville, Ky., after ranking the home features requested by 3,000 women in different cities across the nation.

The most requested feature? A laundry with cabinets for storage, reports Jean Mattingly, GE's Manager — Home Modernization.

"If that comes as a surprise, consider the fact that the average family washes some 400 loads a year, and much of it is done in a damp, poorly lit basement," Miss Mattingly said.

Ranked second and third in the survey were an exterior of maintenance-free material, such as brick, and an interior with maintenance-free material, such as the new no-wax vinyl flooring.

"A kitchen with breakfast area, adequate counter area between major appliances and proper storage alongside each major appliance was cited with enough frequency to rank it fourth among most requested features," Miss Mattingly reported.

Storage also was a factor in the fifth, sixth and eighth most-wanted features, which were:

- Small appliance storage in or near the kitchen.
- Adequate closet space for the size of the home.
- Planned storage in the garage for bikes, lawn mowers and garden tools.

"Our ability to acquire goods has far outstripped the storage capacity of most older homes," Miss Mattingly commented. "We amass kitchen gadgets by the score, have extensive wardrobes for every season and type of weather, and often enough yard and garden equipment to stock a small nursery, which is why more storage inevitably becomes a major part of any home modernization project."

Rounding out the top 10 in most-requested features were: private front entry hall leading to all rooms, more built-in furniture units, and rooms designed with furniture placement taken into consideration.

VINYL SIDING NEVER NEEDS PAINTING — Only an occasional wiping with detergent and water keeps this GAF vinyl siding looking bright, clean, and cheerful as the day it's installed.

Soft shaded vinyl siding that's just right for hue

Now is the perfect time to replace dull, paint-hungry siding with easy-care, modern vinyl siding with its light, bright and cheerful look.

Soft shades of white, yellow, green, gray, tan, and gold are available in either a smooth or textured finish.

Space age product

Vinyl siding is a product of space-age scientific research. It is practically immune to the destructive forces which attack wood, corrode metal, cause colors to fade, and otherwise change and destroy commonly used building materials.

Vinyl is so durable that it is used as underground insulation impervious to rot; as plastic pipe resistant to corrosive liquids; and for highly resilient flooring that withstands the most punishing foot traffic in hard-use areas.

In addition to durability and resistance to wear, GAF Vanguard vinyl siding offers some other unique advantages.

Vinyl siding stays fresh and beautiful year after year with only an occasional wiping with ordinary household detergent and water. It will never rot or rust and is immune to insects and vermin. Nor does it need grounding, as does metal siding, since it does not conduct electricity.

GAF vinyl siding is available in lightweight, easy-to-apply panels which produce the effect of clapboard with 8" or 4" exposure, as well as in vertical panels 10' long.

Crowning touch

Accessories include matching Vanguard vinyl soffit and fascia systems to provide the final crowning touch to the installation or to give any building with overhanging eaves a neater, more finished appearance.

Vanguard plastic shutters, in contrasting and dramatic shades of black, green, and sparkling white, are available in sizes from 14" x 35" to 14" x 80".

Give your home a present: colorful, solid vinyl siding

As the country celebrates its 200th birthday, give your home a Bicentennial gift of lasting beauty and added home comfort: a whole new refreshingly different exterior cover.

What you do on the outside will give you added creature benefits on the inside. You'll also have the satisfaction of having one of the most attractive homes in the neighborhood.

The exterior of your home protects those valued inside walls and furnishings from the damaging effects of water entering from either rain or melting snow or ice.

The exterior must also have insulating properties to keep the cold out in the winter and the heat out in the summer. Similar properties for reducing the noise level must also be present in order to insure desired comfort.

An exterior sidewall cover that can perform these tasks and more is now experiencing enthusiastic popularity. It is solid vinyl clapboard and vertical styled sidings, available in a new variety of colors that can create handsome architectural effects when in use with other vinyl siding panels or with other natural siding materials such as stone and brick.

Attractive and durable

Solid vinyl siding products and accessories are manufactured by Bird & Son, inc., East Walpole, Mass. After years of research and development, they have emerged as one of the most attractive and durable building materials ever to come on the market.

Solid vinyl has the look of painted wood, without the work. It requires little or no maintenance. Dirt and grime may be removed with a minimum of effort.

It never needs paint or other surface coloring since the color of the vinyl runs throughout the material. It is impervious to pollutants in the air, and unaffected by fungi and termites.

It has proved its rugged durability over many years under conditions of severe corrosion and weather exposure. It will not support fire nor will it conduct lightning or electricity.

New colors

A variety of colors and styles allows for different and complementary architectural designs. The standard clapboard style with a satin smooth finish has been supplemented by the development of the BRANDED style. This new style accentuates handsome woodgrain textures, with vinyl-on-vinyl overtones.

Designed to mix-or-match colors in both product lines the colors include Oyster White, Sunshine Yellow, Quaker Gray, Apple Green, Lexington Green and Butternut Beige.

The Bird & Son solid vinyl sidings and accessories have been accepted for insured construction loans by the Federal Housing Administration (FHA Material Releases No. 494b and No. 687), and conform to the requirements of the Department of Commerce, National Bureau of Standards No. 55-72.

The firm also issues a siding warranty which covers defects of material and workmanship during the manufacturing operation.

SOLID VINYL CLAPBOARD-STYLED siding is one of the toughest and most attractive building materials available today. Manufactured by Bird & Son, inc., East Walpole, Mass., the siding comes in two finishes, smooth or BRANDED®, and a variety of colors.

SOLID VINYL soffit and fascia systems supplement the line of horizontal and vertical sidings. Solid vinyl gutters and downspouts, including all accessories, are also manufactured by Bird & Son, inc., East Walpole, Mass. They can't peel or blister like wood, or corrode, pit or dent like metal.

Built-ins and bold, dramatic area rugs maximize limited space imaginatively

Making maximum use of minimum space is a problem that has probably tantalized interior planners since people lived in caves. Success is often only a matter of combining a bit of imagination with easily available resources.

Built-ins — or the look of built-ins — is one of the devices used by designer Peggy Walker to create a sleeping and working alcove in a limited area.

A mattress is supported by a three-drawer base, a storage "box" serves as a headboard and a double-duty desk/table becomes a footboard. The result — sleeping, working, eating and storage are all organized into a few feet!

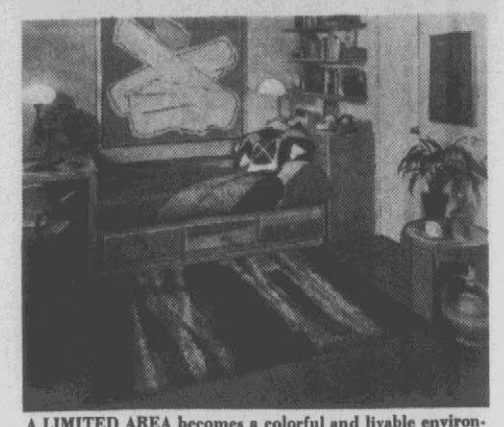

The same technique could as easily have made one bedroom work for two children, or expanded a small bedroom into a large private world for a teenager.

This neat spatial engineering is then turned into a warm and livable environment with the addition of a dramatic rug scaled to the available dimensions.

The impact of a strong design adds importance and heightens the illusion of more room than actually exists. A bold bedspread, pillows and an overscaled painting enhance the dynamics.

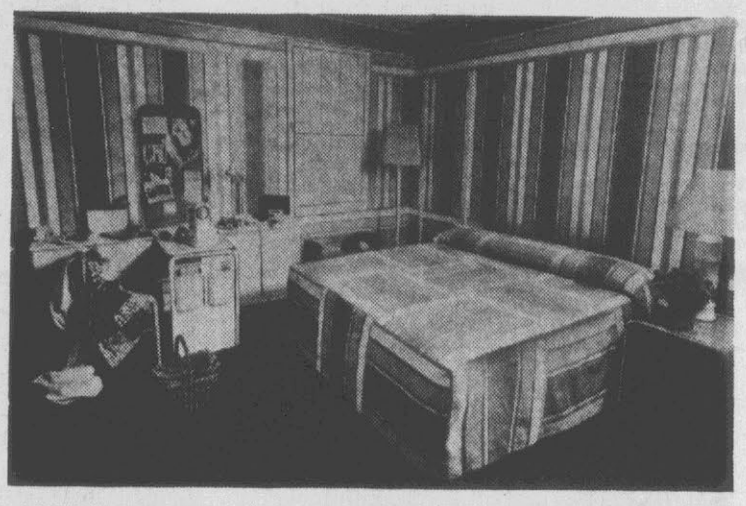

An area rug, in addition to providing color and drama, has the advantage of being movable to a larger apartment or home later. Particularly effective where the budget as well as the space is limited, a rug such as one of those from Ege Rya's New Look collection offers both decoration and function at a moderate cost.

Woven in Denmark of acrilan, the rugs have an eye-appealing high/low pile that gives dimension and texture and, in addition, they are long wearing and easy to care for. For rooms with considerable traffic or child activity, they can't be beat!

A LIMITED AREA becomes a colorful and livable environment with a bold area rug, vivid bedspread, pillows and over-scaled painting to add drama to skillfully engineered "built-ins." The high/low pile rug that creates the tone is "Hekla," from Ege Rya's New Look collection. It adds dimension, texture and warmth that offset the bare wood floor and natural wood bed platform and storage headboard. The moderately priced rug, made in Denmark of acrilan, is long-wearing and easy to care for.

Design for multi-purpose bedroom

WITH HOUSING COSTS AS HIGH AS THEY ARE, everyone looks to use space more efficiently. Designer Peg Walker solved a host of problems in this average size bedroom. First, the owners insisted they wanted a king size bed. And since like one out of four Americans they suffered with bad backs, they wanted an especially firm bed with a bedboard built into the foundation. Therefore, they purchased the new Simmons Super Maxipedic. Second, the lady of the house was pining for a place to do her sewing. The room has closets at either side of the bed and no view or light to speak of. Ms. Walker took the brilliant blue, yellow and white stripe and used it everywhere. As a result, the closet doors blend into the walls. The bedspread repeats the stripe in blocks. The beloved sewing corner is built around a wall-attached desk. When not in use, it folds up.

Here's one which is guaranteed to stump your friends: What can you buy which will contribute greatly to the comfort and liveability of your home — and which will pay for itself?

There are precious few items which fit in this category, but Frank Gorell likes to cite the product he manufactures and backs up his claim with official Government figures.

Frank Gorell is president of Season-all Industries, Inc., the world's largest makers of custom storm windows and doors and replacement windows.

"If you don't own storm windows," he says, "you're paying for them, whether you realize it or not, in the form of heat loss."

The U.S. Government puts it just as bluntly: "Storm windows will cut in half the heat that is needlessly lost through the windows of your house."

While every homeowner knows that the jump in his fuel bills has been "dramatic," perhaps not as many are aware that the payout period for an investment in storm windows has been shrinking steadily.

The National Bureau of Standards used to estimate that an investment in storm windows would pay for itself within a decade, and thereafter return an annual dividend of 13% or more on the investment. This applied to areas where the average winter temperature was 45°F; for colder climates, the payout was estimated at less than seven years with an annual return of 18% or more.

Since oil prices have gone up considerably since these estimates were made, the Federal Energy Office has now cut its estimates of the payout time to four years for storm windows and five years for storm doors. Obviously, as fuel prices go up even more, then these figures will have to be revised downward once more.

Another "hidden" maintenance cost is frequently overlooked by homeowners, who feel that their fuel bills stop when they shut down their heating plants in the spring. The use of air conditioners, whether the window type or a central system, is more expensive than it has ever been — again thanks to soaring fuel bills. Here, once more, the use of storm windows and doors will cut heat gain in summer and effectively reduce the load on the cooling system, cutting fuel bills.

Storm windows and doors go to work, as soon as they are installed, on the job of cutting fuel bills — winter and summer. And that's precisely what Frank Gorell means when he asks, "What can you buy which will contribute greatly to the comfort and liveability of your home — and which will pay for itself?"

"Go ahead, laugh.
But they gave me 20% off for it."

Carl Miller thinks he's putting one over on Lighting Designs, Inc. He and his wife came to our lighting center and picked out a new chandelier for their dining room.

He smiled when we told him he could charge it with his bank credit card. But when we told him we'd give him 20 per cent off a new fixture for his old one, he almost fell over.

Why don't you put one over on us? Come to Lighting Designs, Inc. and pick out your new chandelier. When we sell the new one and you pay for the old one, have a 20 per cent off smile on us.

How high is your ceiling IQ? Start from the top and see!

Technology has a way of replacing good with better, complicated with simple. And where the installation of tiled ceilings is concerned, technology has given us the best of both. Today, residential ceiling systems are not only easier to install, but produce a much more attractive finished surface.

Unless you've been in the market for a ceiling lately, you may not be aware of important recent developments. You should be, though, if you're planning to turn that basement into a much-needed recreation room, or intend to repair a damaged ceiling.

To test your "Ceiling I.Q.," take this quiz; you may be surprised at what you learn:

1. All suspended (lowered) ceilings show the metal gridwork which supports the tile. True or false?
2. When attaching a new tiled ceiling directly to an existing plaster or drywall surface, the original ceiling must be smooth and level. True or false?
3. Furring strips and furring channels are the same thing. True or false?
4. What special tools are needed to install a new tile ceiling?
5. Most home handymen (and handywomen) can install a 12' x 12' ceiling in less than a weekend. True or false?

ANSWERS

2. False. In fact, that's one of the chief advantages of the Integrid Furring Channel System. Leveling with shims and other devices is eliminated because the system levels itself.
3. False, again! Wood furring strips are becoming obsolete. Lightweight metal furring channels are a lot easier to handle since you use fewer of them, and they don't require extensive nailing. Also, you're assured of a permanently level ceiling because metal suspension systems can't warp like wood.
4. None. Not even a staple gun is required to install today's new ceiling systems; ordinary household tools will do the job.
5. True.

If you scored five correct, congratulations; you're a veritable ceilings genius. Four means you've a working knowledge. Less than that means it might be a good idea to brush up on current ceilings information before you go out to shop.

For free literature on Armstrong do-it-yourself ceilings, write to: Integrid Ceilings, Armstrong Cork Company, Department C. D. K., Lancaster, Pa. 17604.

INSTALLING A TILE CEILING is a lot faster and simpler now, thanks to new techniques like Armstrong's Integrid System. Lightweight metal furring channels replace old fashioned wood strips — and instead of stapling the tile, you simply lock it into place with a cross tee that snaps onto the channel. No special tools are required.

Choose showy shingles to roofscape your home

Have the roof of your home show charm and elegance, as well as give complete protection.

The roof area covers the largest single exposed surface of your home, and in addition to providing basic shelter, it should appear in distinct harmony with the architectural design of your home and its exterior surroundings.

Building materials manufacturer Bird & Son, inc., East Walpole, Mass., producers of asphalt roofing shingles, says homeowners are becoming more conscious of their roof's appearance due to the diversity of construction and color variation of roofing shingles now available.

Harmonizing the style and color of roofing shingles to the total environment of the home has been given the name of "Roofscaping" by Bird & Son.

New styles and colors

Today's look in asphalt roofing shingles has produced new innovative textures for all architectural styles, heavier weights and new colors for the roof, while still providing year-round protection from the elements.

The latest concept in heavyweight asphalt roofing shingles is the new WOODSMAN. It is a multiple tab strip shingle, with dark contrasting shadow lines, giving a rugged, random depth to the design.

In a heavier line there is the massive heavyweight Architect 70 shingle combining two surface layers, creating deep shadow lines for a thick, rustic appearance. This shingle gives the roof surface depth, dimension and a dramatic textured look.

Other roofing shingles in the Bird & Son single strip line include those which are randomed embossed and show vertical shadow lines along the exposed surface. These roofing shingles are named the Mark 25 and the Wind Seal JET.

High resistance to winds

They are manufactured with the well-known wind seal feature that bonds shingles together on the roof and helps prevent them from blowing off in strong winds. It gives the shingle high resistance to wind and other climatic conditions.

In addition to protection, color and style are probably the next most important factors. This vast area of cover has potential for all the modern design prerequisites: color, texture and construction.

Today's asphalt roofing shingles span the color spectrum. They are, for example, new earthtone colors: meadow, adobe, canyon, bayberry, desert brown, cypresswood; all especially designed to allow color coordination of the roof and home site.

Practically as important as the color range are the advances in color technology. In asphalt roofing shingles, color is provided by the countless mineral granules embedded in the top asphalt coating of the shingles. A scientific process gives these granules more natural color shades and makes them fade-resistant.

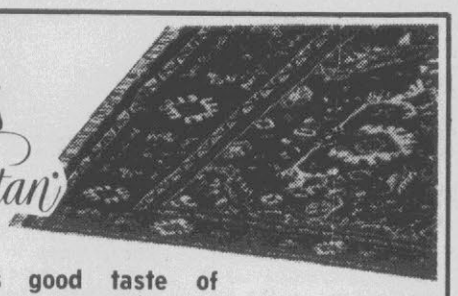

This heavyweight protection combined with the rich colors and varying roofing styles will give your home a distinctiveness unlike any other in the neighborhood.

Contemporary elegance in dining

SIMPLE, YET ELEGANT, this contemporary dining room would be a welcome addition to any home. Washable wall covering, Formica®, plastic and other washable surfaces make it easy to care for with Glass*Plus™ glass, appliance and cabinet cleaner. The round pedestal table with cushioned swivel chairs comfortably seats four; the low-styled counter and cabinet (in rear) provide both storage and serving space. Recessed lighting accents decorative accessories and lends a romantic mood to everyday dining.

Make sure your windows have their 'Thermal Factors' on

Will your windows be out-of-date soon?

That question may have seemed absurd a few years ago, when energy costs were much lower, but — these days — it's a sound economic question every homeowner should face.

Aluminum window manufacturers, working closely with government agencies, have come up with the answer to a logical question—how to measure the efficiency or "performance" of windows.

Now, thanks to newly-adopted voluntary standards by dozens of aluminum window manufacturers, you can get a "Thermal Factor" for a window, just as you get an air conditioner's BTU.

In brief, the "Thermal Factor" tells you everything you always wanted to know about your windows' efficiency. It rates thermal windows up to a maximum of 60 for effectiveness in fighting heat loss or gain.

New data by the Architectural Aluminum Manufacturers Association confirms that thermalized aluminum windows with half-inch insulated glass which meet the new standards will:

- save 35% to 42% compared to single glazed window or aluminum windows, and
- 9% to 17% compared to double-glazed, locally-assembled wood windows or non-thermal aluminum windows.

Both industry and government are moving rapidly to make this money-saving innovation available to homeowners:

(1) the NAHB (National Association of Home Builders) Research Foundation has verified the energy conservation benefits of the new thermal aluminum windows;

(2) the FHA/HUD has transmitted these voluntary standards to 23 of its northern field offices;

(3) dozens of manufacturers are producing windows to meet the new standards; and (4) an independent laboratory has been set up to qualify the new thermal windows.

The new windows provide resistance to heat loss (winter) and heat gain (summer) by utilizing (1) "thermal barriers" or air spaces, (2) dual glass panes and superior construction methods, and (3) weatherstripping.

The use of these new standards will have a significant impact on energy conservation, says Frank Gorell, president of Season-all Industries, Inc., the largest makers of storm windows and doors and replacement windows in the U.S.

Mr. Gorell, who is also a member of the Construction Advisory Committee of the FEA, points out: "Tests — verified by NAHB research — show that a house in, say, Chicago, could cut fuel oil costs about $70 a year with the new thermal windows compared to single glazed windows. Savings of an additional 25% could be realized in a house in Minneapolis, for example.

Gorell's Season-all Industries, one of the first to comply with the voluntary standards, makes the Nuprime Optima 135 aluminum replacement windows which scored 58 out of 60 possible points for efficiency. (The Nuprimes are made to replace existing worn-out or inefficient windows in all sizes.)

This means, authorities say, significant savings in fuel and the absence of condensation on windows when inside relative humidity stays below the maximum recommended by building authorities.

The new standards, 10 years in development and testing with the urging of HUD/FHA, are voluntary now but may become mandatory soon.

Says Gorell: "More and more Americans are realizing that saving energy is important to them — and to the country. They wouldn't dream today of buying an air conditioner without efficiency ratings. They must use the same care in buying windows which, after all, pay for themselves in fuel savings and demand a thermal rating which is their guide to efficiency."

Your nest's best friend: safe, protective roofing

The roof is your home's main defense against the elements. Properly chosen, it also can help protect your home against fire.

Whether you're building a new home or reroofing an older one, you should know a few things about roofing to give your home maximum protection.

Many elements currently are used in roofing shingles: fiber glass, wood, tile, slate and asbestos cement are the most common. Each has its advantages and disadvantages.

Asphalt shingles are the most popular, come in a variety of colors and shapes and are relatively inexpensive. Conventional asphalt shingles give about 15 years of good service. However, most provide only basic fire protection, and are rated Class C by Underwriters Laboratories.

Fiber glass shingles are rated Class A for fire resistance, the highest attainable. They cost slightly more than conventional shingles, but have a longer life.

Wood shingles and shakes are among the more beautiful roofing materials, but they have two drawbacks. Wood offers little resistance to fire, even in some cases after it has been chemically treated. Also, wood is very expensive.

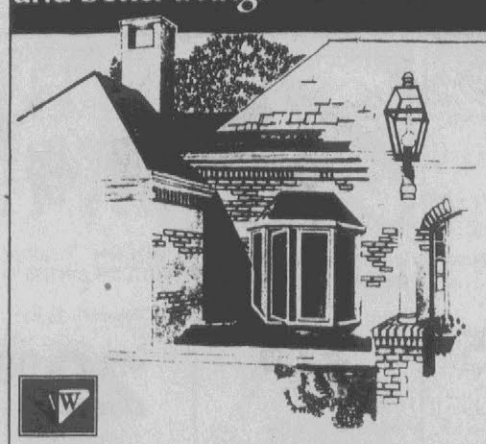

Slate is rock; it's permanent and it carries a Class A fire resistance rating. However, it is quite heavy and expensive. It's also costly to install and requires sturdy construction to support the extra weight.

Tile of clay or cement has a lot in common with slate. It's fire resistant but heavy and costly.

Asbestos cement shingles are made of mineral fiber, highly durable, with Class A resistance, styled to imitate shakes or slate shingles. They are moderately expensive and won't wear out or burn down.

The rod, including the deeply grained rings and ends, can be sprayed or brushed on with any type interior paint, or a wood tone finish which can be obtained with any of the varnish-based wood tones. In addition to the new unfinished look, extendable cafe rods are available in walnut, fruitwood and white with matching rings and ends. Brackets are designed for easy installation with instructions packed with each rod.

Central air conditioning can mean increased home resale value in future

So you're getting another big income tax refund this spring and you haven't figured out yet what to do with it.

One possibility is to "invest" it in central air conditioning.

Central air conditioning today is not only a sound investment in family comfort, but in future appreciation of your home, as well. You can generally anticipate recovering your initial installation cost when your home is sold, and in selling it faster than a comparable home without central cooling.

According to General Electric Company, the most common central air conditioning system is the so-called "split" system which takes advantage of ductwork already in place in many homes.

If you have a gas, oil or electric forced air furnace and adequate ducts, you are probably about half way to whole house comfort.

In this type of system, household air is circulated by the furnace blower over a cooling coil which has been installed on top of the furnace. The coil absorbs heat and wrings excess moisture from the air. The heat is passed by refrigerant tubing to an outside condensing unit, where another fan discharges it to the outside air.

A central cooling system can not only make every room in your home comfortable to work in, sleep in and live in, but it also will help protect your home and your valuable furnishings from the effects of excessive summertime humidity.

By controlling humidity, a central air conditioning system will help to reduce sweating pipes, peeling wallpaper, warped doors, sticky drawers, mildewed leather goods, and rusting of tools and sporting goods. And it will tend to reduce dampness and musty odors in the basement.

Handyperson's delight

NO LONGER will you have an excuse for putting off these thousand and one little odd jobs that always need doing when this Stanley automatic return push drill goes into action. It's all the drill that is needed to bore small holes in wood and plasterboard for a door hinge, towel rack or pencil sharpener. The ratchet action and the quick release chuck makes this 10½-inch drill with the no-roll feature a delight of the handygal as well as the handyman.

Early Americana with modern convenience

IN RECOGNITION OF THE NATION'S Bicentennial Celebration, the Heritage bath is the second in the American Standard Americana Collection, an exciting concept in bathrooms. The dominant color in this setting is Americana brown which proves itself the perfect complement to strong, contrasting hues as well as subtle shades. Reflecting the naturalness of our early pioneer days, the bath is aglow with wooden walls and flooring which have been stenciled in an Early American design. The clean modern design of the fixtures fit in perfectly with the warm ambience of the natural brown and earthtones.

Stir, whisk, and slice: you and your utensils

Whether your culinary talents focus on gourmet cuisine or traditional, everyday fare, chances are you may use many of the same kitchen utensils and instruments when preparing meals.

A well-equipped kitchen includes a wide variety of tools. Basic utensils for the conscientious cook include: an assortment of wooden spoons, a set of metal implements (big fork, spatula, solid spoon, slotted spoon, ladle and potato masher), a wire whisk, rotary eggbeater, four-sided grater, funnels, vegetable slicer and peeler, egg slicer, and food grinder.

And, not to be forgotten are the many implements used when cooking special dishes, such as pastry and basting brushes, French frying basket, and kitchen tongs.

You may vary this list according to your personal needs, but one thing you probably can't change is the problem of washing away the veneer of grease that often coats these many- and oddly-shaped utensils after they've been used.

Grease left on cooking implements can provide a breeding ground for unhealthy germs and bacteria. And often dishwashing detergent alone is not sufficient for getting rid of the sticky stuff.

To easily remove greasy food residue from cooking implements, soak utensils in a solution of Grease relief™ degreaser and hot water to lift and loosen grease before washing them in the usual way.

Very greasy utensils, such as basting brushes, may require a thorough soaking in full-strength degreaser to get them really clean.

Help is here for DIYs

And it has spawned a new acronym that is gaining a strong foothold in the language — DIY, for do-it-yourself.

Today's DIYer is one who has the good sense to do for himself those things not requiring specialized technical knowledge, and which will help him stretch his budget.

Doing it yourself, however, does not necessarily mean going it alone. Help is available to the DIYer in the form of a variety of instruction manuals, installation kits, how-to-advice clinics, handbooks, plans and the like.

For example, General Electric is making it easier for home handymen to replace out-of-date kitchen appliances.

The latest DIY aid is an illustrated six-page book for replacing a food waste disposer. It provides step-by-step instructions and diagrams on how to handle the electrical and plumbing work. And GE even has changed the design of three models to simplify their installation.

Another self-help is a replacement dishwasher installation kit which provides instructions, parts, materials and special tools needed to install a new GE model. The kit retails for $14.95, but enables the homeowner to do a job that might otherwise cost $40-$60.

Second hand 'junk' may be gem

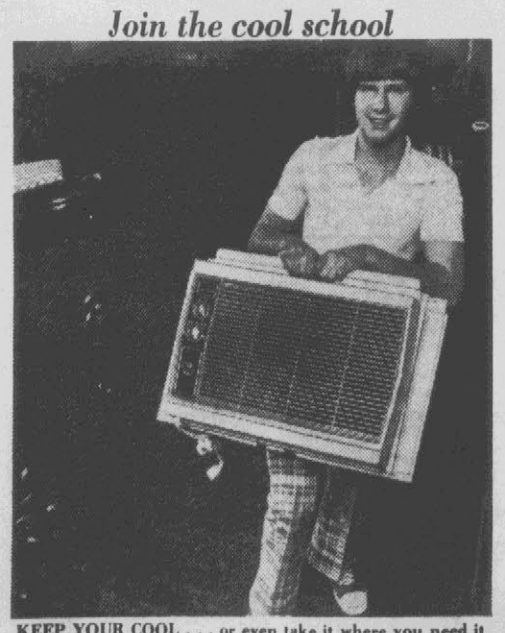

"Antique-like" items are constantly popping up in many second-hand stores, garage sales and, these days, even at auctions.

One might think that these once-beautiful pieces of furniture will never see a better day. They may be broken or damaged with age and wear, but they can be salvaged.

Second-hand pieces such as dressers, tables, chairs, desks and cabinets are probably the most inexpensive items on the market, and yet they have a lot of potential for becoming prize possessions of the smart do-it-yourselfer.

Anyone with a little knowledge of furniture stripping and/or refinishing can easily refurbish a handsome piece of old furniture. You can make it look like new again!

Soap Opera Star Is Azalea Queen

AZALEA QUEEN — Glamours Rita McLaughlin, who stars as Carol Stallings on "As The World Turns" Monday - Friday on CBS-TV was recently crowned Wueen of the Azalea Festival in Wilmington, N. C. In an interview she admitted to becoming addicted to hot buttered grits while visiting in the south.

Rita McLaughlin, who plays Carol Stallings in "As the World Turns" Monday — Friday on CBS-TV, is an example of someone who is not only talented as well as beautiful, but also extremely intelligent. Her busy career in television began when she was 11-years-old. In spite of her busy childhood, however, whe didn't stint on her studies and she was the valedictorian of her high-school class. Rita then graduated from Marymount Manhattan College in 1973 with a Bachelor of Arts degree in communication arts.

Her first TV role was that of Mr. Wizard's young assisant on "Watch Mr. Wizzard." Three years later, she became a regularly featured singer and dancer on the television series "Mitch Miller Sing-a-long."

Miss McLaughlin also appeared on "The Patty Duke Show" and had a running role on the serial, "The Secret Storm." In 1975, she appeared as a special guest speaker on television's "Hour of Power."

In addition to her work in television, Miss McLaughlin has appeared on Broadway, and has done numerous radio and television commercials.

She enjoys singing, tap dancing and playing the guitar. Her other hobbies include horseback riding and reading. She has laso written a chapter on her Christian testimony, which is included, with those of other personalities, in the book, "New Star Over Hooywood."

Miss McLaughlin, single, says she dates, but has no steady boy friend. "I'd like to be married someday. In fact," she continued, "I have the wedding all planned, down to the minister and the last bridesmaid, everything but the groom! But, I feel sorry for the man. I'm already praying for him. It's hard to be married to an actress, and especially me, because I'm so unpredictable."

It is not surprising, then, to hear two totally different answers shen asking about her goals for the future: "My first thought is, I'd like to lose five pounds," she laughed. The, on a more serious tone, "I don't want to sound like Pollyanna, but as far as the futue is concerned, I'm in God's hands."

Kentucky Derby To Be Telecast On Saturday

The bugle sounds. The horses start their haughty high - step onto the track. A hush falls and an electric sense of expectancy grows as the strains on "My Old Kentucky Home" reaches thinly across the infield. Here, in a gush of sentiment and schmaltz, is the annual renewal of the Kentucky Derby. This is the 102nd in the austere series, and it will be telecast by ABC Saturday, May 1, at 5 p.m.

By tradition, this is the ultimate in the Rites of Spring. It combines the sport of kings with the passion of the masses. Several years ago, pollster Lou Harris found that the Derby is the third most popular sporting event in America, ranking behind only the World Series and the Superbowl.

There was a time when Churchill Downs merely declared that the Kentucky Derby crowd was in excess of 100,000 and let it go at that. Nowadays, each body is carefully counted, just as the dollars are, and the roses and the julep glasses and the attending TV celebrities, and even the traditions. They have made the Kentucky Derby into formalized certified, organized Americana.

Becoming Americana has extracted some of the Derby's best juices, but it remains wonderfully original, raucous and ebullient. The kids cram together in the infield, sail Frisbees, sun themselves and do exactly what they would do anyplace else. The only real difference between the kids and the wealthy and famous adults in Millionaires Row boxes is that the kids have a great time and can't see the race while those in Millionaires Row have a great time and can see the race.

Everybody's come to praise the Run for the Roses. In the aura of bluegrass, under the twin spires, eyes cloud when the strains of "My Old Kentucky Home" are first heard, and tears appear when you realize you are standing in one of those rare places where beauty and history meet.

The names of the past Derby winners are everywhere; from Aristides, who ran first in the first Derby, to Warbucks, who finished last in the one two years ago.

Credit for making the Derby what it is today goes, in a large part, to a big, pink-faced Irishman, Colonel Mat Winn — who ascribed his 'longevity' to "good bourbon and hard playing." The Colonel got involved in the management of Chuchill Downs and his particular genius was in getting others to view the Derby. This was in 1902, and his biggest break came in 1915 when Harry Payne Whitney entered his filly, Regret, in the derby.

The crowds get bigger with each passing year ... commercialism continues its inroads. But the 'zing' will never leave the Kentucky Derby. So, take another sip of your mint julep and weep no more, my lady.

It Is Network Planting Time

The three major networks have been busy in the fields lately. They've been plowing up a goodly portion of their crops — the portion that never seemed to make it above the ground level. After they plowed, they cultivated, fertilized, poured over the seed catalogues, and then planted rows and rows of what they hope will be blue-ribbon-winners. Not from the State Fair, mind you. But from the Neilsen ratings.

Tossed over the fenced to go to seed from ABC's acre are "Swiss Family Robinson," "On the Rocks," "Good Heavens," "The Rookies," "Marcus Welby, M.D.," "Almost Anything Goes" and "S.W.A.T." CBS weeded out "Bert D'Angelo Superstar," "Medical Center," "Cannon," "Bronk," "Sarah" and "Popi." Suffering their most disastrous season ever, NBC hopes to 'bring home the bacon' by replacing "Ellery Queen," "The Rich Little Show," "Joe Forester," "Jigsaw John," "City of Angels,, "Movin' On," "Petrocelli," "The Mac Davis Show" and "The Dumplings."

What have they planted in place of the aforementioned?

Well, let's see . . . ABC's sowing "The Bill Cosby Show," "Captain and Tenille," "The Nancy Walker Show," "The Tony Randall Show," all featuring the title stars doing what comes naturally — be it comedy, music or just a plain old garden-type variety show. They've also found a new hybrid that mixes three glamorous gals — Farrah Fawcett Majors, Jaclyn Smith and Kate Jackson — in a series, "Charlie's Angels." Other series are "Most Wanted" with Robert Stack, "Holmes and Yoyo," "Mr. T and Tina" and "Feather and Father."

The crop CBS feels just may be the 'best ever' consists of three dramatic series, "Delvecchio," "Executive Suite" and "Spencer's Mountain." Situation comedies they hope will grow into winning species are "Alice," "All's Fair" and "Ball Four."

Perhaps the most industrious planting has been done by NBC in a desperate attemtp to 'save face' with neighboring farmers. The keystone of their new schedule is "the Big Event," which will showcase such major events as the TV premiere of "Gone With the Wind," top sports presentations, the dramatization of Arthur Hailey's "The Moneychangers" and NBC's 50th Anniversary special. Another TV 'first' from their experimental greenhouse is "Best Sellers," a season-long series of multi-part dramatizations of popular novels. There's a bushel basketfull of motion pictures to premiere too, and new series will be popping up come September, row on row. They are: "Van Dyke and Company," "Quest," "Serpico," "Gibbsville," "Baa Baa Black Sheep," "Snip," "Gemini Man" and "Quincy."

What's gonna' happen in September? They'll all be up, that's for sure. But, what about November? Well, we'll just have to wait and see. Some are bound to wither and die . . . no crop is perfect. But, nevertheless, the farmers, network type — that is — are all fervently hoping for a whopping bumper crop next Fall.

Actress Is Sculptress

Actress Victoria Wyndham is happy that she has been able to bring her vocation and her avocation together. Victoria plays Rachel Cory in the popular daytime serial, "Another World," colorcast Monday's-Fridays, on NBC-TV. In the script, Rachel is supposed to do a number of sculptures as a hobby. In reality, Victoria, who is an amateur sculptress, has done all of the statues herself.

The producers were discussing what they could do to have Rachel taking part in some activity in the story during her pregnancy. "Let me make something for Mac for Christmas," suggested Victoria, referring to her story husband, Mac Cory. "What?", the producers asked. "Let me sculpt something," Victoria suggested.

There was general surprise since no one knew that Victoria had this hobby. The actress had not devoted much time to sculpturing because she has been busy with her acting schedule and running her home for her family — husband Wendell Minnick and sons Darian, 5, and Christian, 4.

Victoria suggested sculpturing a horse which was Mac's favorite in the story. As a model, Victoria used one of her own riding horses. She said: "I knew I had to make the statue as good as possible to meet the high standards of our executive producer, Paul Rauch. The horse was a big success and the idea of a sculpture theme was accepted. The next piece I had to do was a head of Mac, played by the fine actor, Douglass Watson. The script said 'a small head.' But it kept getting bigger and bigger. It finally weighed 40 pounds. I like to work big.

"Paul Rauch gave me a 10-day deadline. I thought it looked like Doug but I was nervous about what the people on the show would think. Thank heaven they loved it."

ACTRESS AND SCULPTRESS— Victoria Wyndham, who plays Rachel Corey on NBC-TV Daytime serial, "Another World" actually does the sculptures that the scripts call for Rachel to do. She is shown here with the 40-pound plaster bust she made of her fellow actor, Douglass Watson, who plays her husband.

Since those first sculptures, Victoria-Rachel has done many more, moving from purely representational pieces to abstracts. Victoria is proud of her sculptures and was hurt when some viewers wrote expressing doubts that she did them. Victoria said: "Peter Lemay, our writer, is fantastic. He picks up germs of ideas the actor gives out and makes them into something real. That's what he did with the sculpture idea.

"I've never been formally trained. I did some art work in prep school and was an art minor in college. My sister, Felice Camargo, is a really fine artist. And I was in school with Bert Lahr's daughter, Jane. She sculpts too. When I saw how involved she was, I could see the possibilities for myself. I don't think I have enough technique for painting, though. There was always art around our house.

"My first recognition came as a surprise. I had a small part in a Dover, Conn., stock company production of Tennessee Williams's 'Summer and Smoke.' I also was the jack-of-all-trades. So they asked me if I could make a large statue of an angel, which the play calls for. I made one eight feet tall. One night, at the end of the run, a couple came backstage and asked if they could buy it. I was amazed. I was so flattered that I told them I wouldn't sell it — they could have if for nothing.

Arctic Man Lives To Be Free

A gentle man who lives alone in the Artic wilderness, serving hotcakes to an elk for breakfast and carrots to a bull moose for lunch, flees the grim avengers of the civilized world with the help of a loyal timber wolf in "Challenge to Be Free," a new adventure movie coming directly from theatres to the television screen as a family special in two parts, airing Sunday, April 25, 7 to 8 p.m., and Sunday, May 2, 7 to 8 p.m., on ABC Channel 3-12.

Veteran movie director Tay Garnett ("Bataan," "The Postman Always Rings Twice") directed the film starring Mike Mazurki as Trapper, a man who traps only to live and lives only to be free. Filmed entirely on location in temperatures as low as 60 below zero, "Challenge to Be Free" is one of the most successful outdoor adventure films of all time.

Trapper's peaceful life with the wild creatures he loves is shattered when he accidentally kills a lawman after rescuing a nearly frozen wolf from a trap. Pursued by 12 expert trackers and riflemen with 100 dogs through 1,000 miles of Alaskan wilderness, fighting blizzards, avalanches and icy frozen rivers, Trapper relies on his wits and the help of the wolf he saved to keep his promise to himself to live free or not live at all.

Seal Stars In Comedy

As everybody knows, "a rose is a rose is a rose." Or so the story goes.

But a seal is not a seal is not a seal is not a seal. Well, if a seal is not a seal, what is it? A seal is a sea - lion. And a bear. And sometimes named Sammy.

One particular seal, or sea - lion or bear, stars in "Sammy, the Way-Out Seal," a special two-hour comedy presentation airing Sunday, April 25, 7 to 9 p.m., on "The Wonderful World of Disney," NBC Channel 6-7.

Actually, the show is mistitled because Sammy is not a seal. He is a California sea - lion of the type normally seen performing in circuses. These sea - lions are considered to have powers of understanding that far exceed even those of dogs.

Centuries ago, Sammy's descendants were land dwellers and related to the bear family. At one time they were even called sea - bears. They earned the name sea - lion from sailors who thought the bulls, whose shoulder hair stands up like a mane when dry, looked like lions.

And their speed is deceptive. Most people think of sea - lions as fat creatures lumbering around on short, stubby flippers. In truth, sea - lions — given the proper terrain — can cover ground as fast as a running man. And they often climb steep, rugged cliffs to great heights.

Underwater they are as graceful as ballet dancers and love to play. Few California scuba divers have missed the experience of having one cavort around him. But they flee in a panic whenever their mortal enemy, the killer whale shows up. Once, a pack of the whales appeared off the coast of La Jolla, a famous Southern California resort, and the sea - lions in their frenzy to escape dashed out of the water, across the beach and ended up dodging traffic in the main street as they continued their frantic flight to freedom.

But usually they lead less hectic lives. And one thing can be said about them, whether they are on land, in water, in circuses or on television — they are fun.

Moneychangers

Christopher Plummer, critically acclaimed for numerous performances in TV specials, films and stage appearances, has been signed to co-star with Kirk Douglas in "The Moneychangers," the four-hour NBC World Premiere movie based on Arthur Hailey's best - selling novel.

He will portray Roscoe Heyward, a banking executive who vies with Alex Vandervoort (played by Douglas) for more power within a banking empire.

Production will start later this spring on the drama, tentatively scheduled to be colorcast next fall.

Among the highlights of Plummer's distinguished career are starring roles in the "Hallmark Hall of Fame" specials, including "Cyrano de Bergerac," "Johnny Belinda," "Little Moon of Alban," "A Doll's House," "Captain Brasshound's Conversion" and "Hamlet."

Weaver Joins Sonny, Cher

Versatile guest star Dennis Weaver plays the guitar, sings, and joins in comedy sketches on "The Sonny and Cher Show," Sunday, April 25, 8 to 9 p.m., on CBS-TV.

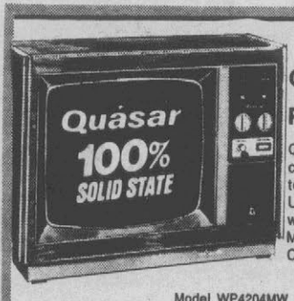

Weaver portrays a famous Russian skater who invites Cher to join him in a skating act, a writer just returned from a safari, a detective investigating the robbery of Sonny's Pizza Parlor, and a husband whose wife (Teri Garr) beats him.

Eight Year Old Will Debut

Eight-year-old Susan Deer of Indianapolis, Ind., had only one theatrical experience. She played a chimney sweep and she had no speaking lines.

Suddenly she found herself picked for the starring title role of "A Girl Named Sooner," to be rebroadcast as the first in a series of "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" April 26, 8 to 10 p.m., on Channel 6-7.

Susan plays Sooner, a waif raised by an eccentric old woman in the hill country of Indiana. The film also stars Cloris Leachman, Lee Remick, Richard Crenna, Don Murray and Anne Francis.

In the drama, young Sooner, abandoned in infancy, lives in the Indiana hinterlands with Old Mam, a colorful eccentric leading a hand-to-mouth existance which does not allow for Sooner to learn about the world. Sooner loves animals and her care for one caught in a trap set by Old Mam brings the child to the attention of the local narian, played by Crenna.

In the ensuing turn of events, which involve the sheriff (Murray) and veteri—his girlfriend (Francis), the veterinarian and his troubled wife (Remick) take Sooner into their home and care for her. In return, they receive the child's love, which brings happiness into their lives.

Susan Deer was asked to audition for the part by her school music teacher who had been contacted by an Indianapolis acting agency, one of several agencies that had been alerted by the Indiana Department of Commerce.

Susan, herself, is anything but an illiterate, backwoods girl. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Deer. Her father is a prominent lawyer.

The role required her to look dirty. She wore a tattered dress. Her face, legs and hands were smudged and her hair was oiled to make it matted. Extensive bathing was needed every night.

Asked about acting, she said, "Oh, yes, I forgot about that."

SCREEN DEBUT — Eight-year-old Susan Deer makes her acting debut as a waif with a pet bird in the title role of "A Girl Named Sooner," a world premiere drama to be colorcast on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" (April 26 (8-10 p.m.) on Channel 6-7.

Wayne Movie Airs Monday On ABC

Academy Award winner John Wayne and Robert Mitchum star in "El Dorado," a bruising, brawling, western adventure on "The ABC Monday Night Movie," April 26, 8:30 to 11 p.m., on Channel 3-5-12.

Soon after the end of the Civil War, two old friends, each with a fighting reputation, meet in Broken Heart Saloon in Eldorado, Texas. But J. P. Harrah (Robert Mitchum) greets Cole Thornton (John Wayne), with a pointed rifle. Harrah is sheriff and has heard that Thornton has been hired by rancher Bart Jason (Edward Asner) to take part in a range war. When Harrah explains that Jason has hired Thornton's gun in order to force water rights from Kevin MacDonald (R. G. Armstrong) a neighboring rancher, Thornton decides to ride out to Jason's and turn the job down.

Thornton is on his way back from Jason's after refusing the job when MacDonald's young son, Luke (Johnny Crawford), who had been stationed on a ridge with instructions to fire a warning if the gunman approached, wakes from a doze, sees him, and fires wildly. Thornton, thinking himself the target, shoots and drops the boy. Luke explains the error and then, to escape the pain of his wound, shoots and kills himself.

Thornton brings the boy's body back to MacDonald's place, but before he can tell the rancher what happened, his daughter, Joey (Michelle Carey), tries to shoot him. She fails and rides off in grief and fury.

As Thornton leaves, Joey ambushes him at a creek, dropping him with a rifle bullet in his spine. He manages to get back on his horse and to town where Doc Miller (Paul Fix) saves his life but warns that he'll never know when the bullet in his spine will act up. When he's well enough to travel, Thornton leaves Eldorado.

Liz Taylor Special Will Air Monday Night

Actors Rock Hudson and Roddy McDowall, directors Vincente Minnelli, Richard Brooks and producer Sam Marx contribute recollections of their long friendship with Elizabeth Taylor and their association with her in motion pictures in "Elizabeth Taylor: Hollywood's Child — An Unauthorized Biography." This "Monday Night Special" will be rebroadcast April 26, 11:30 p.m. to 1 a.m., on ABC Channel 3-5-12.

Miss Taylor's mother, Mrs. Sara Taylor, is also a guest.

Peter Lawford stars as host.

The English-born screen star, who has appeared in more than 40 motion pictures, will be represented on the program by excerpts from films that trace her career from child star to superstar.

The films include "Lassie Come Home" (her first), "Courage of Lassie," "National Velvet," "Cynthia," "Father of the Bride" (with Spencer Tracy), "Ivanhoe," "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" (with Paul Newman) "Butterfield 8" (her Oscar - winning picture for Best Actress), 'The Sandpiper" (with Richard Burton) and "Cleopatra" (with Burton, McDowall and Rex Harrison).

Born with a silver spoon in her lovely puckered mouth, Elizabeth grew up with every material thing she ever wanted — her art - dealer father saw to that. Her mother, a former actress, saw to it that she met the right people who would in turn make her a star. At age 11, she got her first taste of stardom with her role in "Lassie Come Home." Shortly thereafter came "National Velvet," and she was on her way to the top.

Tennis

NBC-TV will present first-time - ever live colorcasts of the semifinals and championship match in the $100,000 Family Circle Cup, one of the richest events in women's tennis, Saturday, May 1 (5 to 6:30 p.m.), and Sunday, May 2 (4:30 to 6 p.m.)

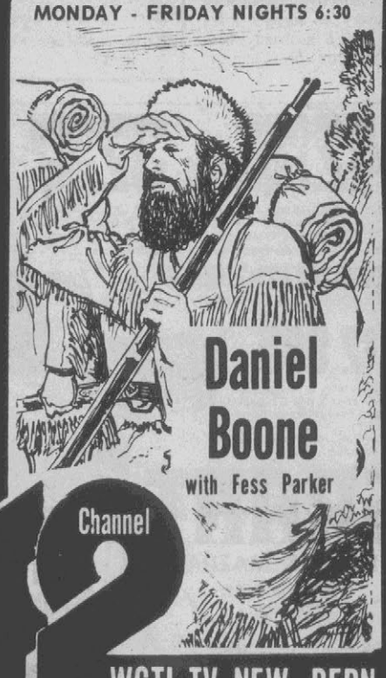

Highlighting the international field of 56 top players is defending champion Chris Evert, last year's leading money winner who is seeking her third straight Family Circle Cup title. Among the leading challengers is Martina Navratilova, the 19-year-old southpaw from Zechoslovakia who lost a straight set decision to Evert in last year's final.

PARADE THEME ANNOUNCED

"The Good Life" will be the theme of the 88th Pasadena Tournament of Roses Parade, to be colorcast New Year's Day.

Theme suggestions were received from 18 states and the Virgin Islands, and the winning entry came from Mrs. Pamela Rubel of Altadena, Calif.

Dierkop Is A Free Spirit

A FREE SPIRIT — Charles Dierkop portrays Officer Pete Royster, a cop with a bag of disguises, in NBC-TV series, "Police Woman." "Police Woman" is colorcast Tuesdays (9-10 p.m.) on Channel 6-7.

"I lead an unregulated life, except for the requirements of the studio. I'm an impulsive man who enjoys the quality of life, not the illusions," said actor Charles Dierkop, featured in "Police Woman."

He plays Officer Pete Royster, the policeman with a bag of disguises and a pushed-in nose, in the series starring Angie Dickinson and Earl Holliman (Tuesdays, 9 to 10 p.m., NBC Channel 6-7). Royster is portrayed as a sensitive man with intense loyalties to his colleagues: a a vegetarian and a non-smoker . . traits the actor says he sought to put into the characterization as a reflection of himself.

Dierkop siad: "I started out easy with the character but now I have a lot of room to work in. When the producers realized that my crazy hat got a good reaction, they let it stay. I'm always making changes in my dress. As I've explained to the director, if I'm stuck in a scorching desert, I'm not going to have my shirt buttoned and a jacket on my shoulders. I don't have a police image to protect. I'm a person in life and also on that screen."

The real Charles Dierkop is a free spirit who lives in a cabin in the Santa Monica Mountains of California, 10 minutes from the ocean and 45 minutes from the studio where "Police Woman" is filmed. He tries to maintain an unstructured existence, he says, especially when he's not working.

Although he wears a variety of clothes in the series, at home he prefers bib overalls and sandals. Dierkop owns two suits — one patchwork denim and the other an apricot-colored corduroy outfit. He makes his own sandals. One of his two bedrooms is gradually being converted into a leather workshop where he designs sandals, handbags and belts for himself and his friends. Essentially a loner, Dierkop studies the spiritual and metaphysical approaches to life. He says he has attained a level of sensitivity through what he describes as "mental pain."

Said Dierkop: "At one point, I learned nothing could be worse than my status at that time, so I began to undergo mental changes to help myself up and out of my depression. I learned, I experienced and that knowledge is put to everyday use."

He said awareness as a person and as an actor comes only when one can drop a facade and be totally natural. His philosophy calls for a life without goals.

"They are too limiting," Dierkop said. "It's like posting a 'No Peddlers' sign on your door because you are afraid you might buy if someone offers something you want. You have to have confidence to do what you want and not be limited by signs or such abstract thoughts as goals."

RED FOXX CHANGES NETWORKS

ABC-TV and comedian Redd Foxx ("Sanford and Son") have entered into a multimillion-dollar long-range agreement in which Mr. Foxx's services as a performer, producer and creator will be exclusive to ABC beginning with the 1977-78 season.

Under the terms of the agreement, Foxx will star in his own comedy-variety series.

BLAME IT ON THE STRIKE

The NABET strike at NBC has forced the delayed debut of Bobby Van's "Fun Factory" daytime show, which was originally scheduled for a mid-April premiere.

Surgeon Becomes Detective

Former "MASH" surgeon Wayne Rogers is now 'operating' in the lawless and lusty Los Angeles of the 1930s.

"For me, the challenge of 'MASH' was gone—there was no way I was going to get involved in that show for another season," said Rogers, who portrayed combat surgeon Trapper John for three years in the series.

Rogers traded his surgeon's scalpel for his current challenge, the starring role of private investigator Jake Axminster in "City of Angels," a 1930s detective drama that is colorcast on Tuesdays, 10 to 11 p.m., on NBC Channel 6-7.

"This detective role is a complete break from the combat sugeon bit," Rogers continued. "Trapper John and Jake are direct opposites. Where Trapper was a complete optimist, Jake is deeply suspicious. He's got a healthy case of paranoia."

According to Rogers, he has only a single regret about leaving "MASH."

"I really miss the people. We had some good times together," he explained.

GOLD— Roger Moore and Susannah York steal a romantic moment from the chaos of their lives in "Gold," a dangerous adventure of greed in an African mine making its television premiere on ABC-TV's "The ABC Sunday Night Movie" Sunday, April 25 (9-11:25) on Channel 3W-5-12.

'Gold' Airs Sunday Night

Thousands of miners are trapped underground by a raging current of water from a broken dam in "Gold," an adventure drama of international intrigue, making its television premiere as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," April 25, 9 to 11:25 p.m., on Ch. 3W-5-12.

Roger Moore and Susannah York star as lovers caught in an emotional flood as unpredictable and uncontrollable as the waters, with Ray Milland as the crusty mine owner and Bradford Dillman and Sir John Gielgud as conspirators lusting for South African gold at any human cost.

A disastrous mining accident — which was no accident — kills the manager of a South African gold mine. And the rowdy Rod Slater (Moore) takes over the operation, never suspecting that he is being used in an international plot to corner the gold market. Slater dutifully follows instructions to drill into an underground reservoir, unaware that this will unleash a flood of water that could result in mass murder.

While giant hammers break the underground rocks, Slater's personal life moves toward an emotional explosion as he becomes involved with his employer's gentle and neglected wife (Susannah York).

Drug Drama Presented

"Go Ask Alice," the award-winning film that was critically hailed as "the finest anti-drug drama ever presented on TV," again presents the true story of a high school girl who is lured into the vicious web of drug addiction, in an encore presentation on "The CBS Late Movie" Monday, April 26, at 11:30 p.m. on Channel 9-11.

William Shatner, Ruth Roman, Wendell Burton, Julie Adams and special guest star Andy Griffith head the cast. Jamie Smith Jackson made her movie debut in the title role. Ann Ryman, Mimi Saffain and Jennifer Edwards are featured in this story of a girl whose family and friends try to help her fight her way out of the pit of pills and back into the real world.

The film, honored with the first "pecial Jury Award" of San Francisco International Film Festival, inspired more than a thousand telephone calls and letters from schools, churches and civic groups requesting permission to screen the movie for drug abuse workshops. A typical viewers letter (from Seattle, Washington) said, "Until tonight, I felt my son was unapproachable on the subject of drugs. After the movie, we talked for two hours."

In the story, taken from an actual diary, the move to a new city and school puts great pressure on Alice, a sensitive high school girl. Hoping to be popular, she tries but fails to make friendships with the school's best-liked students. When one of them, Chris (Jennifer Edwards), finally invites her to a party, Alice jumps at the chance. Once there, she is turned on to drugs and soon is deeply addicted to the "teenage pill-culture."

When her parents (William Shatner and Julie Adams) finally realize what has happened, they confront Alice. Fearing they will turn her in, Alice and Chris run away, but after a bad trip on LSD. Alice turns to a priest (Andy Griffith) for help, and he convinces her to return home.

Alice's family and a friend (Wendell Burton) help her regain a normal life and she returns to school, only to be faced again with severe pressures.

Networks Try To Change Films

The television networks are still attempting to take successful feature films and turn them into successful TV series. Over the years, only six have made the grade on the small screen.

The idea behind the movie-titles-to-TV is they will have a sort of built-in public franchise because of the familiar title, theme and characters, that the audience flocks to the familiar rather than the new.

What these same program planners overlook is that relatively few people go to movies, even the major ones, as compared to the number who watch TV. Although there are the few exceptions such as "Jaws" and "The Godfather," a 'hit' movie is labelled in Hollywood as one which grosses $20 to $30 million.

If $30 million is the domestic gross of a major hit — and this occurs only infrequently — and if $3 is the average ticket price, it means only about ten million people will have seen it in the theaters. By TV standards, ten million people is Tom Snyder's ("Tomorrow" at 1 a.m.) 2.1 rating. This adds up to a less than sure-fire idea because these films are not generally known to the mass audience's TV needs.

Gets Advice From An Expert

PHOTOGRAPHER— A young orangutan plays with a camera as wildlife photographer Dieter Plage looks on, at the Bohorok Rehabilitation Centre in Sumatra, where captive orangs are "untamed" and returned to the wild, in "Orangutans: Orphans of the Wild" a special narrated by Peter Ustinov, Wednesday, April 28 (8-9 p.m.) on Channel 3N-9-11.

Can animals sense fear in humans? To hear wildlife photographer Dieter Plage tell it, when a full-grown, 500-pound gorilla charges you, not even your favorite roll - on deodorant is going to help.

"The way an animal senses that you are frightened," Plages says, "is when you either retreat or you have a certain odor. Your odor will tell him if you are frightened and will make him more aggressive."

Plage did the principal filming for "Orangutans: Orphans of the Wild," an hour-long special on the behavior of the gangly - armed, flat - faced, immensely engaging great apes, to be broadcast Wednesday, April 28, 8 to 9 p.m., on CBS Channel 9-11. Actor Peter Ustinov narrates the special.

According to Plage, "Orangs are shy, unaggressive creatures who go quietly about their everyday business and just want to be left alone." But mountain gorillas (which Plage filmed in Aaire for the special, "Gorilla," shown on TV last year) are another story. While they are also generally peace - loving, they will defend themselves if they feel threatened.

"If a gorilla charges you," says Plage, from first - hand experience, "you must stand absolutely still - which admittedly is very difficult, especially the first time. He will charge up to about a foot from your face, scream wildly and rear up on his legs. You must stand still, though. This is absolutely vital."

Plage recalls another such situation in Africa a few years ago when he took a slightly different tack. "I was walking through the jungle one evening when suddenly a lioness came charging out of the bush at me and stopped about 10 feet away. I absolutely froze. She crouched down, laid her ears back as a cat will do, whipped her tail back and forth in the grass and began to growl. This, I know, is a sign that the cat is about to charge.

"I must say my hair was standing on end, but I didn't move a muscle. After what seemed like hours I said to myself, 'Well, I have to do something,' because it looked like a stalemate. So I suddenly charged her. I must have taken her quite by surprise, for she got to her feet and ran away into the bush.

"So this is important: don't let animals get the idea that you're frightened. If you can, you must make them realize that you are not easily disposed of."

With masterful understatement, Plage adds: "The moment you run away, the gorilla — or lion or tiger or whatever— will come and catch you, and then your chances of getting out of the situation are very slim indeed."

Sanford And Son A Predicted Winner

"A winner and should be around for a long time" was the accurate prediction made by the Memphis Commercial Appeal when "Sanford and Son" premiered in 1972.

Indeed it was a 'winner' as predicted. In fact, it was so much of a 'winner,' that a series of specially selected episodes from the hit comedy program—now in its fourth season—will have its first colorcast Wednesday, April 28, 9 to 9:30 p.m., on NBC Channel 6-7.

Opening the series is, most appropriately, the original premiere of "Sanford and Son," "Crossed Swords."

In the episode, a porcelain figurine appears to be an item that could provide a monetary windfall for Fred and Lamont. (Portrayed by series' stars, Redd Foxx and Demond Wilson.) Lamont acquires the art object and when he tries to sell it, he is offered several hundred dollars. He decides to auction it instead.

Other praise when "Sanford and Son" premiered included: The Chicago Tribune—"not only funny but is unerringly understated to reflect the depth of the father-and-son relationship and the poignancy of their situation." UPI—"charming, witty, uproarious and even poignant in depicting the strained relationship between father and son."

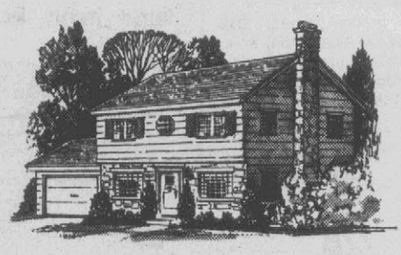

Redd Foxx has been making people laugh for the past quarter-century and it has been his ultimate weapon in keeping his perspective. "I hope," says Foxx, "it has helped others keep theirs."

He believes that there is nothing wrong with having a cause to believe in and to work for but he also believes that too many—from all backgrounds—go about it the wrong way and negate the good they are attempting to foster.

"We all have to do our own thing. Mine is to try and make people laugh. That is the best way I know to bring us all together. With all the problems in the world, there is still a lot to laugh about. If we all could just learn to laugh at ourselves and to laugh with people and not at them, many of those problems would dissipate."

An astute observer of people and things, Redd has pinpointed the foibles of our world with humor and accuracy.

KATT BOWS IN "CARRIE"

William Katt, son of film stars Bill Williams and Barbara Hale, has been signed by producer Paul Monash to make his film debut in "Carrie." Katt portrays a high school sports hero.

FEARFUL FLIGHT— Barbara Parkins stars as a dance hall girl who may be the next victim of a psychopath in the frontier town of Denver in "Law of the Land" a world premiere drama to be colorcast on "NBC Thursday Night at the Movies" April 29 (9-11 p.m.) on Channel 6-7.

'Law Of Land' Premieres

A frontier lawman and his young deputies make a frantic search to identify a psychopath with a deadly vendetta against prostitutes, in "Law of the Land," a World Premiere film on "NBC Thursday Night at the Movies," April 29, 9 to 11 p.m.

Jim Davis stars as Sheriff Pat Lambrose, a gruff veteran trying to guide and control his young deputies, who are played by Don Johnson, Charlie Martin Smith, Cal Bellini and Nicholas Hammond. Also starring are Barbara Parkins, Glenn Corbett and Andrew Prine.

The frontier town of Denver is on edge because of the murder of two young prostitutes, and the clues yield an array of suspects from a respected young army officer to one of the sheriff's deputies. He assigns a special guard to Jane Adams, a prostitute, and then hopes he can locate the killer in time to save her life.

"Law of the Land" was produced by John Wilder and directed by Virgil Vogel from a script by Wilder and Sam Rolfe. It is a projected series pilot.

HOLLYWOOD—Priscilla Presley will launch her professional career in the entertainment business when she co-hosts a new syndicated television show beginning this Fall. The yet-to-be-named show will focus on consumer rip-offs, and Pris will team with experts in various fields in conducting interviews and offering commentary.

Bobby Goldsboro is famous for the number of accidents he's had, but more recently it was his wife, Mary, who was injured. Mary fell while helping Bobby carry a small boat to a man-made lake on their Nashville ranch and cosmetic surgery will be necessary to repair the forehead laceration.

Speculation has it that NBC was aware in advance that Redd Foxx was about to sign a maior contract with ABC for the next season, but decided not to compete for the controversial star's services. NBC and Redd have had a long list of verbal battles, so his decision to go to another network and NBC's decision not to fight it is not surprising.

For those Henry Winkler fans, and there are millions, he lists among his favorite foods, tuna fish, as the one "I subsist off of."

Memorial services for veteran actor Santos Ortega, who played the role of Grandpa Hughes on "As the World Turns" since it premiered on CBS-TV 20 years ago, will be held Sunday, April 25, at the Episcopal Church of the Heavenly Rest, in New York City. Ortega died April 10 in Florida, where he was visiting. He was 76.

Ortega was born in New York City and started his theatrical career in the 1920's.

He won his first part in radio because of his Spanish name. However, his Castilian vocabulary was limited to his name, so he bluffed through the first rehearsal, then bought a Spanish dictionary. He went on to do many detective roles—he was the original inspector in "Ellery Queen" and "Nero Wolfe," series on radio.

He is survived by a son and a daughter.

Guests Named

Earl Holliman (of "Police Woman"), Rich Little ("The Rich Little Show") and the Captain and Tennille have been signed as guest stars for an edition of "The John Davidson Show," to air at a later date.

This will be Holliman's first appearance as a song-and-dance man on a variety program since 1958, when he performed on "The Rosemary Clooney Show." In 1963 he toured in summer stock in "Oklahoma," but most of his appearances in recent years, both on TV and the stage, have been in drama.

Rich Little returns "opening show" appearances with Davidson, who was guest on the premiere of the Little series in February.

The Captain and Tennille, major figures in the contemporary music field, round out the guest roster for the program, which will be taped in NBC-TV's Studio Four in Burbank, Calif.

Susan Oliver (Laura Horton on "Days of Our Lives") lives by her principles. At a time when many actors would give anything for commercial work, Susan refuses to plug a product she doesn't believe in - regardless of the money.

Metrano Discusses His Restaurants

When actors aren't acting, they usually talk about acting.

One is the The Hot Dog Store; the other is the Posh Bagel.

"I opened The Hot Dog Store in Beverly Hills (Calif.) five years ago (with Brock Peters) because we needed a Nathan's in town," he said, referring to the famous New York eatery.

He opened the Posh Bagel in West Hollywood recently because, frankly, he had to travel too far to the nearest delicatessen. He figured that others in the neighborhood felt the same way, so . . .

He loves cooking and supervises his restaurants closely.

Asked what came first, the cook or the comedian, he said: "I guess the comedian. I always had a yen for performing. But my main goal at first was to become a pro football player."

Metrano attended college on a football scholarship and majored in speech therapy. He left after two years to study acting in New York and began developing various comedy routines.

Said Metrano: "I read an article on Jackie Gleason, who was quoted as saying. 'If you're an actor, dancer, or comedian, go to Hollywood. If you like the stock market, stay in New York.'"

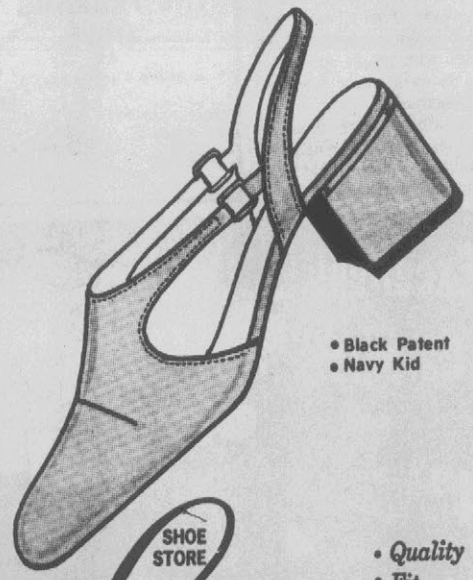

Shortly thereafter, an astrologer at a night club told him: "I feel you're in the wrong place. I feel you belong on the West Coast. There's where you'll prosper."

"It was a weird feeling," he said. "I looked back and there was a storm brewing in New York. That storm was always behind me as I drove along — until I got to St. Louis, the halfway mark. That's when the sun appeared."

A CHANGE?

Barbara Walters may be on the way to coanchorship of the "ABC Evening News." Division president William Sheehan confirmed that "one meeting" had been held between the network and the agent of NBC's "Today" star and cautioned that there were still too many ends to tie to say that it has been accomplished. He emphasized, however, that Harry Reasoner "definately" will still be in the picture.

Ali Will Defend His Title

World Heavyweight Boxing Champion Muhammad Ali will defend his title against challenger Jimmy Young during a live and exclusive telecast by ABC Sports on Friday, April 30, 9 to 11:30 p.m., on Channel 3-5-12, which also includes a 12-round bout between the No. 1 heavyweight contender, Ken Norton, and Ron Stander.

The main event, "The World Heavyweight Championship," will originate at the Capital Centre in Landover, Maryland, with veteran boxing announcer, Howard Cosell, reporting the action from ringside.

Ali has defended his title on live, home television only twice before — the last time against Ron Lyle in May, 1975, when nearly 55 million viewers saw the champion retain his crown.

The victory by Ali over Lyle provides some common ground between the champion and the challenger. Young, a 200 pound, 6'3" boxer from Philadelphia, also defeated Lyle last year in a 10-round decision in Honolulu, Hawaii.

Young comes to the April 30 bout with Ali, sporting a record of 16 wins, 4 losses and two draws, including five knockouts. He is ranked third in the world by Ring Magazine.

Ken Norton, who will meet Ron Stander in the second fight of the telecast, scored his most recent victory in January of this year when he defeated Pedro Lovell at the Las Vegas Convention Center in a fifth round technical knockout.

He has also added a new dimension to his career by acting in the motion picture, "Mandingo," and he is reportedly slated to make a second appearance in a movie to be produced this spring.

Norton's opponent, Stander, 6'1", 217 pounds, has a record of 27 wins, eight losses and two draws, including 19 knockouts.

The Council Bluffs, Nebraska, fighter has fought for the World Heavyweight Boxing Championship on one occasion, losing to the then-champion, Joe Frazier, by a knockout in May, 1972.

ABC Sportscaster Keith Jackson will provide ringside commentary for the Norton-Stander fight.

ALI—Muhammad Ali, World Heavyweight Boxing Champion, will defend his title against challenger Jimmy Young when ABC Sports will telecast live coverage of the "World Heavyweight Championship" Friday, April 30 (9-11:30 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

NUMISMATIC NO-MISS

Sixteen-year-old Charles Galioto, of the Bronx, N.Y., recently broke the world record for coin-catching on the "Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson." With Carson offering him encouragement, Galioto successfully caught 70 coins (by placing the coin on the forearm and catching it in mid-air) to break his former record of 62 coins, according to the Guinness Book of World Records.

Movie Offers A Message

If Gary Lockwood is trying so hard to be a 'natural man' — eating organic food, fighting pollution, etc. — then how come he gets involved in such far - out, technical movies?

It's a "loaded - for - Lockwood" question because he has the answer. On the set where he was making the science - fact movie, "Earth II," a two-hour film to be re-broadcast as the "CBS Late Night Movie," Friday, April 30, at 12:30 a.m. on Channel 9-11, Lockwood talked about it.

"We've got to clean it (Earth) up, or we won't have it much longer," he said. And that's why Lockwood wanted the starring role of an astronaut and founder of Earth II. He also starred in the classic MGM motion picture, "2001: A Space Odyssey."

"Earth II" is about a satellite nation orbiting 300 miles above Earth and dedicated to benefit mankind on Earth. Two internationally famous Earth and Space scientists — R. Buckminster Fuller for Earth, Dr. Kraft A. Ehricke for Space — are the technical advisors for the film.

The satellite Earth II has the capabilities to accurately predict weather on Earth, thus offering days - ahead warnings of disasters caused by hurricanes, tornadoes and typhoons; to locate vital minerals; to further space medicine research for burns, arthritis and heart ailments; to manufacture in zero gravity what can't be made on Earth; to serve as the springboard for further space exploration.

"This (the movie) has a message. We've got to do something and it looks like we can from space," declared the California - born actor who remembers clear, blue Southern California skies, the miles and miles - long green belt around Los Angeles and clean streams and rivers where fish thrived.

Lockwood and his wife, actress Stefanie Powers, live in an almost primitive section of the Malibu hills abutting the ocean. There, the Lockwoods and their neighbors are concerned enough to actively discourage pollution of the streams and woodlands.

It's A T-Shirt Craze

In a significant move that could have widespread effects on the T-shirt phenomenon, a company in Califronia has developed a concept called "Uppers," a new line of fully authorized and licensed celebrity collarless pull-overs that will be marketed via national chain stores.

These T-shirts will feature music personalities as well as other entertainment personages and projects, and will have full artwork approval by those illustrated on each shirt sold.

Since the impact of the T-shirt craze a few years ago, musical artists and other celebrities have virtually lost millions of dollars by unauthorized manufacturers and their dealers. Gypsy merchants are often seen selling T-shirts at rock concerts, selling them for as much as $10 apiece. Those featured on the shirts received no money from the sales. However, under the contract for the "Uppers," they will receive royalties on each shirt sold.

DEMOLISHED— Stock cars band away until there is one lone car still moving, in a "Demolition Derby" on "CBS Sports Spectacular," Saturday, May 1 (4-5 p.m.) on CBS-TV. Lee Leonard and Ken Squier report on the exciting motor sports event from Islip Speedway, Islip, L.I., N.Y.

Derby Airs Saturday

It's 30 minutes before I enter the racing field and I'm hearing the rattling in my axle wheel. My oil is getting warm as the driver starts me up to see if my engine is running smoothly. An adjustment on the carburetor and I'm ready for action. Who am I? I'm a demolition derby car competing in the main event.

My number is a bright red 56, and I'm a true veteran of these people and their fender - bending exercise. I've lasted so long, and my driver has already — poor man — replaced everything from my front headlights to my water hose. But, somehow, I manage to survive (and will again, in the "Demolition Derby," a "CBS Sports Spectacular" airing Saturday, May 1, 4 to 5 p.m.).

What memories I have of these terrifying episodes. One time in Los Angeles I lost two doors, and the pain was almost too much to take. My driver maneuvered me off the figure '8' until I caught my breath, and then he pushed me out onto the track again.

TO L. RICKETTS, DANVILLE, VA.: Producers usually film TV series 12 segments at a time, It's a gruelling schedule—6-day weeks, 12 hours a day—with a segment filmed each week. Unless it's a 'stable' series (such as "All In The Family," "Happy Days," etc.) filming stops after these 12 segments until the network gives a 'green light' to proceed with 12 more.

TO M. MYERS, GOLDSBORO, N.C.: Nick Nolte played Tom Jordache in "Rich Man,, Poor Man." In the role which spanned 20 years, Nolte had to go through a 35-pound appearance change, losing 20 pounds, gaining them back, then adding 15 more. An unknown actor before the film, Nolte's career should skyrocket now. Write to him c-o ABC-TV, 1330 Ave. of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10019.

TO K. BURGESS, LYNCHBURG, VA.: After 10 years on WDBJ-TV's "Panorama," Kathy Thornton is now pursuing a career in commercial advertising. Polly Ayres, active in theatrical groups in the Roanoke area, is now on the show. Polly's been with Ch. 7 for the past 2 years and 'subbed' for Kathy from time to time.

TO MRS. M. GRAHAM, DILLON S.C.: "The Sonny and Cher Show" will be back next year. Write to them c-o CBS-TV, 51 West 52 nd Street, New York, N.Y., 10019.

TO E. WILSON, WILMINGTON, N.C.: The three Ingalls girls on "Little House on the Prairie" are portrayed by Melissa Sue Anderson (Mary), 15, Melissa Gilbert (Laura), 11, and twins Lindsay and Sidney Greenbush (Baby Carrie), who are 5-years-old. Both Melissas did TV commercials prior to their roles in the series. The twins began their acting career when they played the role of Jill in the TV movie, "Sunshine." Write to them c-o NBC, 50 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y., 10019.

Oregon Bound

The true story of a family's 600-mile journey to the West on the Oregon Trail is being rebroadcast in a two-part drama on the Bicentcentennial series, "GO-USA," Saturday, May 1, 12:30 to 1 p.m. on NBC-TV. Part II of "Oregon Bound" will air next week.

John Sager and his wife, Elizabeth, leave their home in Missouri and head West with their five children toward the "promised land" of Oregon. On the way, John and Elizabeth die of camp fever. The children, and a baby born to Elizabeth just before her death, continue the journey on their own, with 13½-year-old John and 8-year-old Catherine taking over as 'mother and father.'

In the cast of the drama, written by Paul Ritts, are Bill Jordan and Aubri Martin as the parents; Tony and Julie Markes as John and Catherine; Laura Dixon as Elizabeth; Terri Lynn Wood as Matilda; and Moosie Drier as Frank. Whitman, the preacher, is played by Charles Shull; Rance Howard portrays Williard, leader of the wagon train.

Ashe Is Called King Arthur

America's number one tennis player in 1968, Arthur Ashe was also the first Negro to win the U.S. men's singles championship (1968) and the first amateur to win a major open tennis championship anywhere in the world. This quiet, thoughtful American, unlike some of his Negro sports colleagues, is no militant. He believed that nothing would be gained by a boycott of South Africa, and in 1968 expressed his willingness to play against that country should the United States meet them in the challenge round of the Davis Cup.

Ashe, who will be seen in action in a WCT Challenge Cup Match, Sunday, April 25, at 1:30 p.m. on NBC-TV, is the son of a Richmond, Va., policeman. He is a graduate of the University of California where he majored in marketing.

He began playing tennis when he was 10-years-old, and until 1957 took part only in Negro tournaments. Until 1964 his father, friends and coach, Dr. R.W. Johnson, paid his tournament expenses. Then promoters realized the young man's potential.

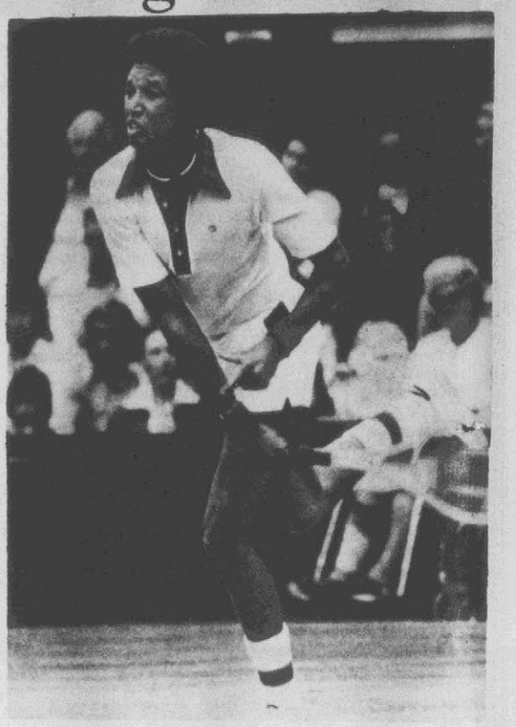

In December, 1968, Ashe played a key role in his country's efforts to obtain the Davis Cup from Australia.

He sailed through the 1969 Wimbledon Championships until he came face-to-face with Rod Laver in the semi-finals. Then, like many other fine players before him, he fell. Laver beat him in four sets.

He signed with the WCT pro group in 1970, and two years later became the first American to top $100,000 for a year's earnings.

After the past year, he is known as "King Arthur." During 1975 he won two of the three most prestigious singles titles in the world: The WCT Final in Dallas, and Wimbledon (the Masters is the third.) He played in fourteen finals in all, and won nine of them.

Although he's totally relaxed on the court, Ashe's whip-lash serve and all-round aggression make him an exciting player to watch. His even temperament and flawless manners have won for him two major sportsmanship awards—the William M. Johnston (1964) and the Harold Labair Memorial Trophy (1968). Away from the game he is an excellent angler, a top-notch basketball player and an outstanding swimmer. What's his secret? "Relaxation," Ashe says with a smile.

TENNIS STAR—Arthur Ashe of the United States will meet John Newcombe of Australia in a WCT Challenge Cup Match, the eighth in this series, televised from KeauhouKona, Hawaii on Sunday, April 25, at 1:30-3:30 p.m. on NBC-TV.

Identified By Colors

It all began 211 years ago at a meeting of The Jockey Club in Newmarket, England. The subject was the difficulty of telling the horses apart in a race because their riders wore no identifying marks.

Members of The Jockey Club hit on the idea of assigning different racing colors to individual owners, to be worn by their jockeys. Colors were chosen by 19 sportsmen, only three of whom were commoners, and duly registered.

The first colors, or 'silks,' that being what they were made of, were all solid shades, ranging from the Duke of Cumberland's purple to Jennison Shafto's pink. A black velvet huntsman's cap originally topped the silks but later was included in the color scheme.

Today, The Jockey Club (American), which authorizes and registers racing silks in this country, has 11,000 active sets of colors on its roster. They will be important to viewers of the Kentucky Derby, Saturday, May 1 (5 to 6 p.m., on ABC-TV), but will be even more so to the race chartmaker. He identifies horses by their racing colors, since saddle cloth numbers are hard to follow.

Racing silks range from basic two-color body combinations (all the one-color silks have long since been spoken for) to colors embellished by blocks, circles, diamonds, braces, frames, yokes, hoops, sashes, cross-sashes, sleeve chevrons and other designs.

Some silks bear the monogram of the stable or its owner. Others carry such devices as a radish, apple, pelican, drake, sea horse, mouse, or a humpty-dumpty—all in current use.

These addenda are not considered part of the official identification of the silks, according to a spokesman for The Jockey Club.

Orioles Meet Oakland

Bobby Grich and the rest of the Baltimore Orioles will host the Oakland Athletics Saturday, May 1, at 2:15 p.m. on NBC-TV.

Despite his outstanding defensive play in 1973, Bobby Grich, the 27-year-old all star second baseman for the Baltimore Orioles, found out - the hard way — that the glamorous categories of RBIs, homeruns and batting averages are the ones that bring players the biggest salary increases.

A lesson learned, Grich resolved that his accent for 1974 would be on homers, RBIs and average. Amazingly enough, he led the Orioles in homeruns (19), was second in runs batted in with 82, and raised his batting average 10 percentage points to .263. Although Grich did not fair as well with his bat last season, he wasn't far off his 1974 pace. He finished with a .260 batting average, dropped to fifth in Orioles homeruns (13), and fourth in RBIs with 57.

Defensively, Grich was again superb. Having been voted his third straight "Gold Glove" for excellence at second base, Grich led American League second basemen with 928 total chances, 423 putouts, 484 assists and 122 doubleplays.

Frank Lane, a baseball scout for the California Angels and one of the shrewdest judges of baseball talent, considers Bobby Grich the best second baseman in the American League today. During the last three years, Grich has handled more than 900 chances, the first American League second baseman to do so in 20 years.

"When you put your mind to it, you can do amazing things," Grich said. "I set the goals last winter and convinced myself I could achieve them.

"I made some adjustments in my stance and stroke. I was hitting up the middle and to right field last year, so I opened up my stance so I would pull the ball.

I swung a lead bat in front of a mirror, trying to develop a level swing that would enable me to hit the ball hard to left. I did pushups, lifted weights, and squeezed a rubber ball — everything possible to increase my strength.

"It helped. I could feel the difference."

Another thing that helps Grich keep his untiring pace of fielding 20 to 30 ground balls before every game and persistent dedication to be outstanding in every category is his jar of honey in his locker.

"I burn up calories at the park and I find I crave sweet things," says Grich. "So I nip on honey, even during games. It seems to rejuvenate me. Maybe it's psychological, but so what?

Redford Narrates Program

"The American Sportsman" provides a detailed look at the animal that once dominated the American wilderness when it presents "Following the Tundra Wolf," Sunday, April 25, 3:30 to 4:30 p.m., on ABC-TV.

Actor Robert Redford narrates the program which was filmed in northwest Canada. The film crew for "Following the Tundra Wolf" logged approximately 12,000 miles.

The focus of the program is the predator - prey relationship that has evolved for thousands of years between the tundra wolf and the caribou, a native North American reindeer.

The caribou is the faster of the two animals, but the average tundra wolf feeds upon 23 caribou, and in that way the breeding stock of the caribou remains strong.

The program shows how the wolves are not far off. But the wolves devise a plan to separate them. One wolf will start a stampede by chasing the caribou, a second will join him, and a third will dash to one of the fleeing caribou which appears to be weakened or vulnerable.

Pretty Face?

Akins, who stars as trucker Sonny Pruitt in the Tuesday Night "Movin' On" series (8 to 9 p.m., NBC Channel 6-7), looks a good deal like you might expect a trucker to look.

"My face has been variously described as '20 miles of bad road' or 'a face that could hold three days of rain' or 'a face that could stop a truck, and probably has,'" Akins reported.

He admits that having a distinctive face is an advantage to an actor. After about 50 movies and many dramatic roles on TV, most people recognized him but few knew his name. Now, after two years of "Movin' On," people are beginning to connect the name with the face.

"People used to come up to me and ask, 'Are you somebody?' I told them I was Claude Akins. They'd nod agreement, but they looked a bit uncertain about it," Claude continues.

"Now strangers know my name but, more often than not, they call me Sonny or Mr. Pruitt," he said with a wry grin.

Akins recalls a recent trip to Philadelphia, when a lady stopped him on the street and asked him if he was James Coburn. When he walked into an office, the receptionist gushed: "Omigosh, you're Ed Ames. I love your 'Try to Remeber,'" "No, ma'am," Akins responded politely. "I'm Chet Atkins." Back on the street, a passing man called, "Hi, Mr. Bronson."

"Now I've got to say something about that. My face may be a bit Neanderthal - but Charles Bronson's is downright Paleolithic."

'Darn Cat' Returns

A quick-tempered Siamese cat whose propensity for roaming through the neighborhood at night provides the occasion to stumble upon two bank robbers and their hostage in hiding in "That Darn Cat," a comedy to be colorcast on "NBC All-Disney Saturday Night at the Movies" May 1, 8 to 11 p.m., on Channel 6-7. Dean Jones and Hayley Mills star. The feature will be preceded by a documentary short subject, "Bear Country."

Darn Cat (also known as "D.C.") finds himself in an apartment occupied by two hoods and a terrified bank teller being held hostage. The bank teller manages to scratch part of the word 'help' on her watch and fastens it around D.C.'s neck before the cat escapes.

When the watch is discovered the mysterious situation is taken to the authorities, and an agent who is allergic to cats is assigned to the case. He attempts to follow D.C., but to no avail until he decides to use a miniature radio to track him, attaching it to the cat's collar.

One blind trail leads to another until the agent (Jones) is called off the case. Then, when the watch's ownership is established, he is back on the case.

Events move faster. The bank teller is about to be suffocated, stuffed into a laundry truck and sent out of town. D.C. finds one of the hoods and follows him to the house. The unsuspecting cat's movements are picked up via the miniature radio and the agent soon gains entry to the apartment.

The hoods don't buy his story. Revolvers are pulled, poor D.C. is thrown in the face of one of the hoods, the agent begins to sneeze, fists fly and pandemonium reigns.

But, as frequently happens, arrests are made, the teller is saved, and the agent realizes he is helplessly in love with one of D.C.'s owners, portrayed by Miss Mills.

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR LYNN REDGRAVE, star of "The Big Bus"

Were you raised strictly in British tradition?—J.S., Grand Rapids, Mich.

● We never dared breathe in the mornings because Dad was sleeping (he'd come home late from the theater). I was a very meek kid and lived in the shadow of my sister and brother, both tough cookies. I'd do anything to avoid conflict. But there was one time when I let it all out. I was 12, and Dad had ordered me to clean my lunch plate. I plucked up my courage, got all hot and shouted: "You're behaving like a Victorian father. Stop bossing me around. I don't like my lunch, and I'm jolly well not going to eat it." Dad was staggered, the family went into shock and I burst into tears.

FOR SEN. WILLIAM PROXMIRE (D.-Wis.)

Now that the Concorde can land in the U.S., do you still feel your decision to cancel America's SST was right?—D. O. Norris, Swansboro, N.C.

● More than ever. The Concorde is a noisy, polluting, uneconomical craft that proves the U.S. was right in canceling our Government-subsidized program. Maybe in the future we will have clean, quiet SST's. But until then, we should protect our own citizens from this environmental hazard.

FOR ROBERTA PETERS, Metropolitan Opera Star

I heard you don't like wearing pants. Why? You're so small, you're a natural for them.—B.G., Las Vegas, Nev.

● When pantsuits came out, I rushed out and bought a sexy evening outfit. Then I caught a glimpse of myself in a restaurant mirror. My thighs stuck out, and I had a wavy line, not a sleek one. Since then, I've worn trousers only in private. It's annoying because I love slacks. I'm between a size 6 and a size 8.

FOR BEN VEREEN, actor

Why do you wear an earring in your ear?—Mrs. P. M. Jago, Fords, N.J.

● I started wearing it when I did "Hair" a few years ago. It's a symbol of peace and tranquility, and since the world has not yet found either, I'm going to keep wearing the earring until it does.

FOR SUSAN ST. JAMES

Why are you a vegetarian? And why do you insist on making vegetarians out of your children?—Maryellen Wallace, Los Angeles, Calif.

● My philosophy is to vote for life. I don't believe in killing animals for food or for their leather or fur. I am raising my children to believe in the same philosophy.

FOR GLORIA STEINEM, editor of "Ms."

Have you always been self-confident?—D.V., Hutchinson, Kans.

● No. If I had, I would have saved myself a lot of trouble and heartache (although I was always bold when acting on someone else's behalf). Like many women, much of what I did was from force of habit. Only recently did I reject all those things I used to do automatically. I realized that self-assertion means telling the truth in a comprehensible way and not saying what you think other people want to hear.

FOR FANNE FOXE

Your former friend, Rep. Wilbur D. Mills of Arkansas, is saying that he will not run for re-election. Do you think the Tidal Basin scandal, in which you and he were involved, is the reason?—J.M., Waco, Tex.

● If I believed that the Tidal Basin matter forced him into retirement, I would feel very bad. But Mr. Mills was talking of retirement long before that happened.

FOR BRENDA VACCARO

Is it true that you had strange jobs just before you became an actress?—B.I., Lowell, Mass.

● Not strange but brief. When I was a swimsuit model, a buyer asked me how the suit felt. I was so revolted by his painted nails, sickly smelling cigar and leer that I told him what I thought—and got fired. I worked as a waitress in a coffee shop. A customer told me to get myself into the kitchen for coffee. He also quickly heard what I thought of his rudeness. I was fired. There were more, too.

FOR ANSON WILLIAMS, co-star of "Happy Days"

Do you think that your show is an honest depiction of growing up in the 50's?—K.W., Newport Beach, Calif.

● Not at all. I get the impression that the 50's were a very sluggish period of heavy repression and blandness. That's what triggered the youth rebellion of the 60's. Back then I don't think many people looked beyond their noses to see what was going on around them. In comparison, I think the 70's deserve the description, "the good old days," that most people associate with the 50's.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

● We're told that a couple of months ago, Hughes up and left the top floor of the Xanadu Hotel in Freeport-Lucaya, Bahamas, after two years there. He took off for Mexico. Here's why: He had applied for a license to operate the Government-run, shuttered casino at the Lucaya Beach Hotel and even offered to buy the hotel, provided he got the license. The application was filed but, so far, nobody has said yes or no. Hughes got mad at the delay and left, perhaps to put pressure on Bahamian officials. Tourism was up at Lucaya mainly because Hughes was there. Businessmen and islanders hope Hughes gets his license and comes back because that would mean more visitors to the island. Five of Hughes's personal staff remain at the Xanadu, so it seems he has plans to return.

One Texas Professor Says We Have Ample Evidence of Our Need to Quicken the Search for "Miracles" Through Nutrients

Professor at The University of Texas

Frank Wolfe

Dr. Roger J. Williams, member of the National Academy of Science, discovered pantothenic acid, a universal vitamin. He worked with colleagues in synthesizing this vitamin and in concentrating and naming folic acid. His most recent book on nutrition is "The Wonderful World Within You: Your Inner Nutritional Environment" due to be published by Bantam later this year.

Gary was a 7-year-old boy with what seemed to be a totally impossible health problem—he was classed as an idiot. He still wore diapers, he didn't recognize his parents and seemed unaware of the world around him. He could grunt, squeal and cry, but he couldn't utter a word.

This all changed. Gary was "turned on like an electric light." He now goes to school, he can talk and learn, and he exhibits almost average intelligence. His parents call it a miracle.

This is what happened: A psychologist referred his case to a biochemist who, by careful analysis, spotted several deficiencies in Gary's body and, with medical approval, supplemented Gary's diet generously with the needed nutrients. After 10 days on this regimen, he recognized his parents, could say Mama and Daddy and was curious about the names of things. He immediately began to talk.

Although Gary's case was an extraordinary one and was handled with extraordinary success, many people probably suffer unnecessary health problems which could possibly be solved by nutritional means. More and more physicians are including nutrition in their diagnosis and treatment.

Many readers of FAMILY WEEKLY may have health problems caused or aggravated by their diets. If you have reached middle age, you may have already been visited by such maladies as arthritis, mental depression, diseased teeth, emphysema, dependence on alcohol or the first warnings of heart disease. If you are younger than middle age, these visitors are probably on their way unless your eating and living habits are excellent.

When life was more primitive, people commonly did physical work and ate produce directly from a farm. Now we use an automobile for a two-block trip and consume hundreds of foods, some of which bear little resemblance to anything grown on a farm. Degenerative diseases are far more prevalent now, although we know so much more about nutrition and health.

The findings of scientists should open our eyes. We used to think that food consisted mostly of carbohydrates, proteins and fats. Now we know good food really contains about 40 different chemicals needed by our bodies. These chemicals are needed just as our bodies need oxygen. But whereas we need oxygen minute by minute, having no ability to store it, we do have some storage capacity for the 40 essential chemicals. They can be supplied day by day, week by week and, in some cases, month by month. And, of course, a deficiency of oxygen is noticed immediately; but a mild deficiency of iron, iodine, copper, manganese, zinc, vitamin C, the B vitamins, or the individual amino acids—to mention a few of the 40 essentials—can silently and without notice undermine our health.

If we eat the tissues of plants and animals, we are sure to get some kind of an assortment of the 40 needed nutrients. Why? Because all the 40 nutrients we need are also essential for plant and animal cells. Thus they are present in the metabolic machinery of these cells. However, when we carelessly process and refine our foods, we make deficiencies virtually certain! The widespread milling of rice and wheat, for example, removes most of the germ or embryo from these grains; this is where the needed minerals, vitamins and amino acids are concentrated.

Dr. Alan Stone, trustee of the American Psychiatric Association, said recently it was unfair for the public to blame physicians for all their troubles when individuals do not care adequately for their own bodies. He is right. Each individual should assume responsibility for avoiding nutritional deficiencies and pollutants that may endanger health. Individuals should also get adequate exercise. Physical exercise promotes blood flow and builds a strong heart and circulatory system—all of which help to deliver nourishment to the living cells in our bodies, including our brain cells. Without continuing nutrition, brain cells wither and die and can never be replaced.

> "The best medicines probably are the substances that occur naturally in our bodies. If we use these effectively, we can cooperate with nature to prevent disease."

Scientists know good nutrition is essential to sustain life and health. Nutritional experiments have been conducted with animals, and even green plants, insects, worms, bacteria, yeasts and molds have been studied—in the same way and with the same results. All these diverse living things reflect the same clear story, and we are obtuse if we fail to see the applications to human beings. The life and vigor of every kind of organism is closely dependent on how well that organism is nourished. Every kind of organism can be nourished at dozens of levels of quality.

Because of the many gradations between good nutrition and poor nutrition, every person should ask himself or herself, "At what quality-level is the nutrition I receive?" This question should especially be asked by every expectant mother, and it should be asked for all young children. Diets that are good enough to sustain adults may be inadequate to support reproduction or the growth of young people.

The exciting idea that health can be promoted and disease prevented by close attention to the nutritional environment of the cells and tissues of our bodies is gaining wide attention. And the validity is there: Dr. Linus Pauling has said that a proper balance of many complex natural chemicals is needed to make our bodies function in a healthy way. For health we do not need drugs, which are foreign substances not normally present in healthy bodies. The best medicines probably are the substances that occur naturally in our bodies. If we use these effectively, we can cooperate with nature to prevent disease.

This is why Dr. Pauling advocates the use of relatively large doses of ascorbic acid (vitamin C) to fight the common cold. Ascorbic acid, a natural part of our makeup, is often in short supply.

The late Adelle Davis deserves a great deal of credit for making the public aware of nutrition. Unfortunately, her scientific background didn't equal the complexity of the problems. She found many right answers intuitively, but she could not substitute for bona fide medical scientists who work with biochemists to find ways to use their knowledge of nutrition and cellular needs. A desperate need exists for more such scientists.

Dr. David Hawkins, President of the Academy of Orthomolecular Psychiatry, has important responsibilities in connection with caring for the mental health of a large population on Long Island. By using nutrients in his practice—especially vitamins—he finds he can give the patients much better

AN EXPERT SUGGESTS:

- Exercise to make sure the nutrients in your food are delivered to all the cells of your body.
- Whenever possible, avoid taking drugs; they are substances that are not naturally present in healthy bodies.
- Ask your doctor—and keep asking—what food and supplements you need to prevent or alleviate disease.

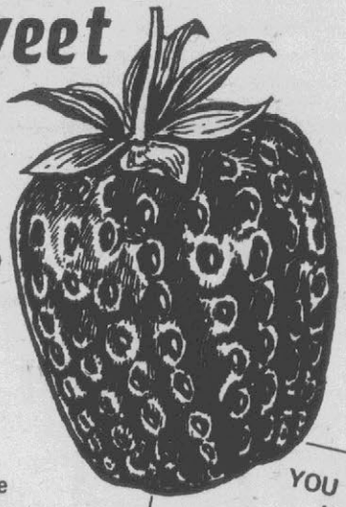

PLANT NOW - GAIN A YEAR

Why be satisfied with ordinary-sized strawberries when we guarantee you can have these extra-sweet

STRAWBERRIES

ACTUAL SIZE

50 for $ 3.75
100 for $ 5.95

CAUTION

The most frequently noted "complaint" on these marvelous berries is that most people just didn't think to order enough! Honestly - - you will want at least 50 of these plants to start - - even for smaller patches. Order plenty so you can take advantage of gain-a-season fall planting.

The last time you picked strawberries - - or bought them - - how many did it take to make a quart? Eighty? One hundred? More? Regular strawberries are so small - - most people lose count. But with these hardy plants you can expect quarts from just 30 strawberries! And these dark red, sweet and juicy Robinson berries are highly disease-resistant. They ripen very fast - - plus they produce lots of new runners to give you a bigger patch every year! Have wonderful, big strawberries for jams, freezer, fresh deserts for months! And get a head start - - by planting now you receive strong, healthy plants with well-developed crowns and roots. They are highly drouth-resistant and winter-hardy. Don't compare the Robinson with ordinary varieties.

Plants are all indexed virus-free so you get clean, nuclear planting stock. Meri-stemmed mother plants are held in isolation in University plant pathology greenhouses until indexed as virus-free. This means you get superior fruit, double yields and increased plant vigor.

An Unsolicited Letter From A Satisfied Customer

YOU CAN TELL THE WORLD HOUSE OF WESLEY

April 1, 1975
Bellevue, Nebraska

Dear Sirs:

I am writing you a line to let you know how my Giant Robinson Strawberries turned out. I ordered 100 plants in 1972 and they were sent to me just at the right time for planting. I set them out in medium good soil. I have never seen any strawberries like them. I have to take issue with you on one thing. You advertized that they grew as big as a golf ball. Many of them were as big as 2 golf balls. In all my years growing strawberries I have never raised so many lovely berries on such a small patch. We harvest around 80 quarts per season. I can give positive proof to you on this subject by the neighbors around me as they all share my crop of Robinson's beautiful (hardy) Giant strawberries.

We use the blue grass clipping and place it in the rows next to the strawberries while grass is green. We have never used fertilizer on them. They are the greatest. Thanks for selling me.

Your good friends,
Mr. and Mrs. G.C.G.

FREE GIFT

For your immediate order, a winter-hardy Hibiscus! Up to 50 huge exotic flowers on every plant!

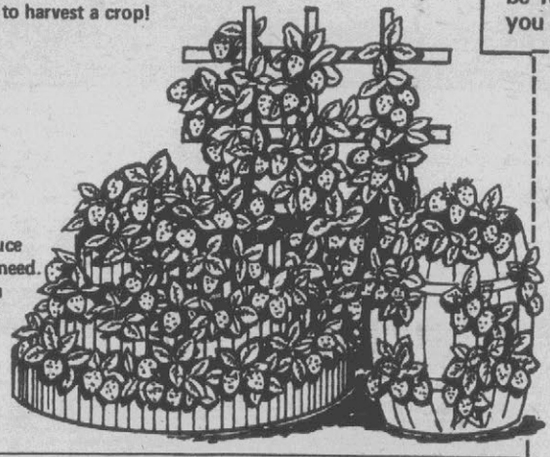

Include Strawberries In Your Garden

Even if you don't raise a garden - - you should grow strawberries. They are not hard to grow, yet they probably produce the greatest pleasure of all home grown fruits. Strawberry shortcake - - jams - - and eating fresh from the patch! In these days of high food prices a strawberry patch is an especially good investment. And you don't have to wait years to harvest a crop!

What To Do When You Are Short Of Space And Still Want Strawberries

A very small space (as small as 9' x 12') will produce all of the berries that an average-sized family will need. But if you don't have even a few feet to spare you can still have them. Drill holes in a nail keg. Fill it with dirt and put the plants in the holes. This is decorative as well as a good way to grow many delicious berries in a small space. Trellises and strawberry pyramids can also be made when space is limited.

OUR FULL PROTECTION GUARANTEE

All plants are guaranteed to be of high quality, and to arrive in good healthy condition or purchase price will be refunded. RETURN SHIPPING LABEL ONLY - - you may keep the plants. (One year limit).

Nutrition

service at much less cost. Mental health has been improved and mental disease actually has been prevented by nutritional means.

My own interest in nutrition as a prevention against disease has been increasing steadily for years. I spent 25 years exploring ways to make various living cells healthy and happy in the laboratory. Then I turned to the welfare of cells in our bodies.

When I first discovered pantothenic acid, one of the B vitamins, I had no knowledge of its usefulness in human health. But evidence began to come in quickly. I offer the following cases not as evidence of "cures" but only as indicators that further studies are needed.

- A former student, following a hunch, discovered that generous doses of calcium pantothenate (a salt of pantothenic acid) freed him from allergies caused by desert vegetation.
- A retired Army nurse experienced remarkable improvement in her memory after taking extra quantities of calcium pantothenate. (The possibility that memory loss can be prevented in some individuals by this vitamin strongly suggests that other nutritional treatments may work for others.)
- Some individuals seemed to be relieved of chronic constipation by taking pantothenate.

Other nutrients seem to prevent and relieve other conditions. A few years ago I developed severe cramps in my legs at night. But the pains disappeared immediately and completely when I began taking supplements of calcium and phosphate. Soon after this experience, I noticed a friend having difficulty shuffling cards because of painfully cramped hands. I suggested that he take the same supplements I had taken. He did—and they worked for him, too!

Slowly, slowly, the case for nutrition in medicine is building:

- More than 25 years ago Dr. William Kaufman in New England prevented joint disability in hundreds of patients by using niacinamide, an essential nutrient in massive doses.
- Dr. John Ellis of Mount Pleasant, Tex., has recently used vitamin B_6 extensively in the successful treatment of certain types of arthritis.
- Another physician tells me that a few milligrams of thiamin, vitamin B_1, taken daily, abolished her eyesight difficulties.
- Glutamine, a nutrient amino acid, is being used extensively to calm distressed stomachs and hasten the healing of stomach ulcers. Glutamine also seems to decrease the craving for alcohol in some alcoholics.
- There is evidence that some cases of anemia can be treated not only by iron supplements but by adding to the diet other nutrients such as pyridoxine, niacin, vitamin B_{12}, folic acid, vitamin C, copper or some of the essential amino acids.
- There is evidence that some mental diseases can be caused by the lack of iodine, magnesium, potassium, vitamin C, thiamin, niacinamide, pyridoxine, vitamin B_{12}, biotin, folic acid, riboflavin, tryptophan, inositol and other individual essential amino acids.
- And of course you've probably read that scientists are working on the nutritional implications of hypoglycemia, a form of disordered metabolism which probably afflicts about one person in 10. The symptoms of this disease include a feeling of general "good-for-nothingness." And there are mental symptoms such as depression, insomnia, headache, fear of psychosis, intense irritability.

This is why, after 55 years in the field, I believe strongly that good nutrition is the key to expanding our physical, mental and emotional powers.

Ironclad Guarantee

Our guarantee is simple. You must within 14 days see and feel your body toned up and feeling great—and look and feel years younger, or simply return unit for a prompt and complete refund.

"The Figure Trimmer"

The sensible exerciser that helps both men and women easily slim, firm and beautifully shape their bodies (in just minutes a day)

AT LAST — the ingenious easy new physical fitness system, to help you: lose inches and pounds, improve the shape of your body, increase your sex appeal and feel and look years younger — and now at a great new low, low price!

An Easy, Proven System That Takes Just Minutes A Day

It's easy—because you exercise while you lie on your back and do just 3 basic routines. And yet you exercise and tone every muscle in your arms, legs, abdomen, waist, back, neck and tummy — all the important, problem spots that you want to help keep trim, firm and beautiful.

We recommend you start at a moderate 2 to 3 minutes a day. You'll soon find that you want to increase this to 4, 5 and up to 15 minutes at a time. But, and this is important, you do it at your own pace and you find it easier and easier to exercise for longer periods. The rhythmic movements you use are so simple that any child of 5 can master them in one minute, because all you do is lift and bend your arms and legs and the "Figure Trimmer" won't let you make a mistake. A simple, fully illustrated instruction booklet for the basic exercises is included.

Use "The Figure Trimmer" Anywhere

Yes, use it in your bedroom, living room, office, even while you're away from home (it's so compact, it folds to fit right in a handbag or attache case and weighs only a mere 10 ounces). You never have to miss your regular exercise . . . use it anywhere you can lie down. Simply attach to bedpost, doorknob, etc., and it's ready to use.

To Help Weight Loss . . .

We recommend a moderate and sensible temporary 15 to 20% reduction in your normal food intake (while still eating exactly the same kinds of delicious foods you normally eat and like). We don't send you any fad or crash diet, because your own doctor will tell you that these are harmful. We suggest you continue this moderation until you reach desired weight loss. After that, just eat normally and continue exercises to feel and look better and younger.

Important Note:

Don't be confused: The competitive exerciser models you've seen on T.V. and in magazines for $7.95 and $9.95 work on exactly the same principal and in the same way as ours. By a special purchase from a manufacturer, we've been able to break the price wide open and offer "The Figure Trimmer" at this amazing low price!

NOT JUST A YEAR 'ROUND PARADE OF COLOR, BUT A LIFE-TIME SUPPLY OF THOUSANDS OF BREATHTAKING MUMS!

WHO SAYS MUMS ONLY BLOOM IN THE FALL?

Because, when in your life did you ever dream of seeing color-drenched masses of magnificent mums actually erupt into bloom not just in late summer and early fall . . . but month-after-month in ALL 4 SEASONS OF THE YEAR? And, as if that isn't startling enough . . . mums so desperate to bloom, you'll actually spend more time picking them than growing them. Yes, super-blooming NON-STOP miracle mums from Europe that literally bury themselves under a solid blanket of hundreds of florist-size blooms EACH AND EVERY SEASON OF THE YEAR — SPRINGTIME TO SNOWTIME! And even more incredible . . . in winter, by simply setting a few plants on your windowsills and endtables, you continue to enjoy living fireworks of color . . . masses of fresh florist-size blooms . . . for a magnificent winter-flowering paradise, plus armfuls of fresh-cut flowers ALL YEAR 'ROUND!

LIKE BLOOMS FROM ANOTHER PLANET

Yes, what you are now looking at, for perhaps the very first time in your life, is an amazing race of flowers so prolific . . . and specially developed by European plant scientists with such an inbred hardiness . . . not only do they reward you with blooms by the armful each and every season of the year . . . but mums so unusual, even the cut flowers actually last up to a full 3 weeks — and sometimes even a month! Why you'll fill your home with breathtaking mum bouquets — the same kind that florists sell for up to $1.50 a bloom . . . yours by the vaseful, ALL FOUR SEASONS OF THE YEAR, for a mere fraction of a penny apiece!

SO STRONG, SO HARDY THEY DEFY HEAT AND FROST — THRIVE MAGNIFICENTLY EVEN IN SUB-ZERO COLD!

Best of all, this spectacular collection of European NON-STOP miracle-mums are so easy to grow even a child can get "magazine cover" results. That's because these mums are sent to you in their own pre-sown, pre-treated growing pot . . . (the same as used by professional nurserymen and florists) . . . guaranteeing thick, strong rooting and sturdy, heavy branching. You simply plant them, water them, forget them . . . and then let nature reward you with the most spectacular 4-season parade of color you've ever seen. And remember . . . because these super-growing varieties actually multiply . . . for every armful of flowers you get this year you'll get hundreds more blooms next year — thousands more in the years to come!

FOR BUSHELS OF BLAZING BLOOM ALL 4 SEASONS OF THE YEAR . . . STARTING JUST WEEKS FROM TODAY ORDER NOW!

Now the price of these magic European mums is not the $4.00 or $5.00 apiece you might expect . . . but a mere $2.98 for a full 3-mum collection (that's only $1 apiece) . . . and each one all set to erupt into a dazzling show of beauty in just 60 days — or EVEN LESS. Think of it. Only $2.98 for a complete 4-season-rainbow collection, (one red, one gold, one white) of these magic European CHRYSANTHEMUMS that'll flood your home and garden with giant, saucer-size mums SPRING, SUMMER, AUTUMN . . . why even in the dead of WINTER too!

However, because supplies of these incredible European beauties are extremely limited . . . this offer may not be repeated this year. And since this is the time they must be shipped if you want to be the first in your neighborhood to enjoy Chrysanthemums by the armful all 4 seasons of the year, you must act immediately!

Joey Adams

By Joey Adams:

When the Insult Artists Get Squelched...

"Eighty-two-year-old Jack Benny to an audience in a moment of seriousness: 'I have a violin that was made in 1729.' Heckler in the audience: 'Did you buy it new?' "

In this era of masochistic comedy, some of our greatest personalities have considered it an honor to show up at roasts and be carved to pieces by friends who don't unintentionally hurt the ones they love. It's all premeditated murder, written and rehearsed especially for the occasion. But nothing is more devastating to a professional comedian than to be squelched by an amateur—or even by another comedian when he isn't expecting it.

Imagine, for example, how insult artist Don Rickles felt when he shouted at a lady pest at ringside: "If you were my wife, I'd give you poison"—only to have her answer, "If you were my husband, I'd take it." That's why every comedian worth his weight in laughs is constantly prepared for battle. Bob Hope once told me he never went out of his house unless his writers prepared him with ad-libs. But even the best sometimes get topped. Here are a few instances that are among my favorites:

Fred Allen to Max Asnas, who was the owner of New York's Stage Delicatessen: "Your corned beef gives me heartburn." Max: "What do you expect in a delicatessen—sunburn?"

Henny Youngman to a waiter: "My glass is empty—what do I have to do to get some water around here?" Waiter: "Why don't you set yourself on fire?"

Jackie Gleason to restaurateur Toots Shor: "When I walked on stage, the audience sat there open-mouthed." Toots: "You mean they all yawned at once?"

Eighty-two-year-old Jack Benny to an audience in a moment of seriousness: "I have a violin that was made in 1729." A heckler in the audience: "Did you buy it new?"

I remember listening one night to Don Rickles devastating a room full of stars. To Orson Welles he said: "Who makes those tents you wear?" To Dean Martin: "You could build a skating rink with the ice cubes you use in your drinks each week." To Ernest Borgnine: "Look at you . . . Anybody else hurt in the accident?"

But when he picked on Jackie Gleason, he got more than he had bargained for. "You are three of my favorite comedians," Don said to the fat one. "I wish you were just one of mine," Gleason snapped back.

Johnny Carson at one Friars Club (for performers) dinner, introduced Howard Cosell as "a legend in his own mind." He went on, "Just because it's free, Howard, you don't have to eat everything that's put in front of you. At least stop eating while I'm talking." Howard looked up and said, "I couldn't take you on an empty stomach."

Milton Berle's tongue can be declared a lethal weapon. He has put down everybody, even the Mayor of New York ("You look good, Abe—you've taken off a little height"). But even Berle was left without an answer once. Milton has a habit of picking on anybody at ringside who is smoking a cigar. Pretending to wave the smoke away, he groans, "Don't you ever inhale?" But one night a man was ready for him. "Not with you in the room," he answered.

Alan King was in a particularly vitriolic mood at the George Burns—Walter Matthau dinner. He introduced George Jessel as the oldest member: "His idea of an exciting night now is to watch his leg fall asleep." To Milton Berle: "I think the world of you—and you know the shape the world is in right now." To Walter Matthau: "Someday you'll go too far—and I hope you stay there."

Then he started on Henny Youngman: "I would like to introduce Johnny Carson," he said, "but I am forced to introduce Henny Youngman. A man who started out as a small-time night-club comedian and never lived up to his promise—take Henny Youngman, please . . ."

Henny finished with the toastmaster very quickly: "One thing about you, Alan—you've never lost an enemy."

Those squelches are love pats compared to the time I heard a minister devastate a profane comedian. It happened at an officers' club in Vietnam. After a pointless and blasphemous story, the alleged comic noticed all eyes were suddenly fastened on a quiet man at the end of the table. "For God's sake," blustered the storyteller, "are you a chaplain?" With a slight smile and deliberate emphasis, the chaplain answered, "Yes, for God's sake, I am."

Bob Hope told me that when he visits service hospitals around the world he likes to "louse up the joint." It's what they want. "One thing they don't want is sympathy," Bob explained. "They want me to walk into a ward filled with guys harnessed to all kinds of contraptions and say: 'That's all right, fellows, you don't have to get up for me.' "

Only once was Bob caught without an answer. We were going to St. Albans Hospital with a troupe of minstrels to cheer up the boys who had just come back from Vietnam. Most of them couldn't leave their chairs or their beds. As we approached one of the wards, ready to throw our punch lines, we heard someone singing above the clatter of our entrance. Then I saw that the singer was a wounded serviceman. He was pushing himself towards us in a wheelchair by the power of his two arms—the only useful limbs he had left.

"Say," Bob greeted him, "we're supposed to entertain you, and here you are meeting us with a song." And the crippled serviceman answered: "When I stopped looking at what I had lost and began looking at all I had left, I could sing again!" What could Bob Hope say to top that?

What You Don't Know (Or Do You?) About Depression

True or False? When you are feeling depressed, your eyes will usually give you away. (See number 1.)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. When you are feeling depressed, your eyes will usually give you away.

2. When young people are depressed, the odds are better than ever that love is the villain

3. You can be depressed without realizing it.

4. Some people are never depressed.

5. When the "blues" are getting you down, there isn't much you can do about them.

ANSWERS

1. True. When you look at a person who is depressed, he tends to look away quickly and is much less inclined to meet and hold your glance. This has been shown in psychological studies at Bristol University (England): depressed subjects have "a marked decrease in the normal level of eye contact." This tendency may be part of a defensive withdrawal. And in similar studies at Canada's York University, it was found that depressed individuals maintained eye contact with other persons only about one-fourth as much as nondepressed subjects did.

2. True—as indicated by a study, at the University of Bridgeport, dealing with the relationship of romantic love and depression in men and women students of college age. Findings were reported as follows: for 59 percent, depression was clearly linked to a love affair. Men and women were "severely depressed" in equal proportions, but women were more often depressed.

3. True. Just as you can feel depressed for no apparent reason, you can also be in the throes of a depression without realizing it at all. The masked depression or invisible blues, as it has been termed, has been made the subject of clinical studies reported to Britain's Royal Medical-Psychological Association. The studies show that masked depression is characterized by various bizarre disguises, ranging from paresthesia, which is an imaginary localization of such sensations as prickling, tickling, burning, to anorexia, the lack of appetite for food, no matter how tasty and delectable it is.

4. True—according to the findings of investigators at Washington University Medical School. Contrary to what many believe, not everyone has episodes of depression. However, psychologist Sven Wahlroos pointedly observes that "a person who cannot suffer and cannot be depressed lacks important dimensions in his personality and is never able to develop a deep and lasting relationship with another human being."

5. False. Psychological studies have demonstrated the effectiveness of depression-inhibitors that can give you a powerful assist in giving the blues the go-by. The technique is simple. The depressed person selects his own individual depression-inhibitor just by vividly imagining a special scene or situation that he feels would delight rather than depress him. An example of a depressed woman is cited: "She was asked to describe a scene, feeling or activity which she believed to be the opposite of the feeling of depression. She described a scene in which she was lying in bed looking at drapes that she had just made and feeling the warmth of the sun streaming into the room." Result: the subject reported that the identified scene terminated her depressive feeling, and it was effectively used as a depression-inhibitor in subsequent trials.

Thanks to Clairol's Final Net. Final Net's not an aerosol—no aerosol propellant mixed in. Final Net's concentrated, so you can spritz it on once to hold your hair all day. (And when you're in for a whole day of shopping, that's saying a lot.)

Not even you.

How Your Hairdo Can Reshape Your Looks

If hair is your problem (and when isn't it?), here's a complete cut-and-care beauty portfolio for keeping it heavenly looking and healthy.

Ever wonder why a certain hairstyle looks fantastic on your best friend, but on you—well, that's another story? The answer is as close as your bathroom mirror.

Liz

Liz has a small face. Her features are delicate, her forehead high. Wearing her hair away from the face only elongates her already too-high forehead and makes her features appear pointier, smaller. What Liz's face needs is the softness of gentle curls framing it. But Liz maintains that her wispy, thin hair simply won't hold a curl. If there's one thing her hair sorely lacks, it's body.

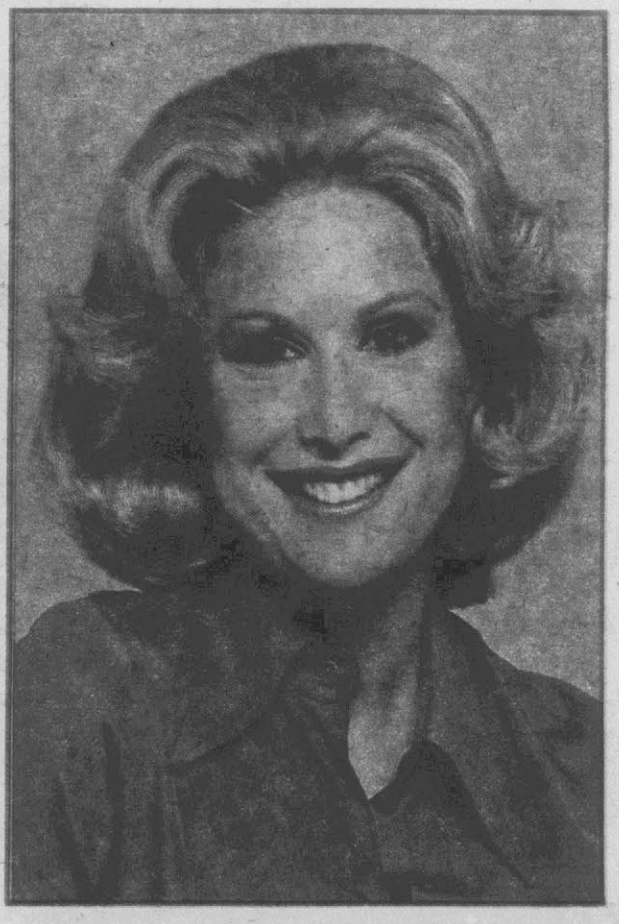

Solution

Liz used a shampoo-in haircolor close to her own natural shade to add body, bounce and shine while enhancing her own color. With the added body that haircolor gives to hair, she is able to wear her hair fuller and curlier to soften her smallish features. By bringing the hair in over the forehead a bit, she automatically shortens it and draws attention to her eyes. How to maintain her new curly look without having to sleep in rollers every night? A quick set with electric rollers and a spritz with a non-aerosol hair mist to hold her look together all day long.

Virginia

Virginia's face is long with width at the jawline. She had always heard that the answer to a wide jaw is to cover it up with hair brought in toward the face. And so it is, but not for Virginia. Bringing the hair in over the jawline makes her long face appear even longer because it looks thinner.

Solution

Instead, Virginia brushes soft curls ever so slightly forward just at the jawline. She brushes her hair up and away from her face—and all at once her eyes become the focal point! She has softened the jawline without lengthening her face. It's easy to maintain this soft, flattering style. Virginia's naturally curly hair has lots of body but does tend to be on the dry side, so she conditions it with a deep penetrating conditioner twice monthly. And as anyone who has naturally curly hair will testify, humidity can make even the most flattering style turn frizzy. Virginia uses a non-aerosol hair mist to keep her style under control—even on the most humid of days.

Take a good look at your face—is it round or long or square? Is your forehead high, is your nose prominent? Hard to tell? Not really. Simply pull your hair away from your face and take a good long look at the proportion. Once you've decided, play around with your hair. Try different parts or no part at all. Bring the hair down over the forehead or pull it away. Draw your hair in toward your jaw or cheekbones or eyes, or sleek it all back. Whatever looks best on you is the right way for you to wear your hair. All it takes is a little experimenting in front of your mirror. Take a look at what a difference a hairstyle can make.

On men, gray hair is distinguished. On me, it's just plain old. Is a peroxide haircolor my only choice?

Sure, it's unfair. I have only a few grays. If I were a man, I'd be growing them gracefully. Instead, I'm plucking them furiously.

I can remind myself that what counts is what's in my head, not on it. And I can rant and rave as loud as the next woman.

But when the fuss is finished, there'd still be those nasty grays in my hair. I, for one, don't want to live with them.

I've thought about hair-coloring, but I'm wary of peroxide. I've heard it takes some of the natural color out of your hair.

It's a gray a day now. I have a woman-to-woman talk with my best and beautiful brunette friend. It seems a peroxide haircolor is not my only choice. I can use Loving Care® Color-Lotion from Clairol, like she does. (News to me.)

It has no peroxide, just covers your grays without changing your natural hair-color. And it comes in 15 shades, one like mine.

I certainly know how to pick best friends. Loving Care did cover my grays, but didn't change that natural color I'd grown so attached to all these years.

And who'd have expected it to make my hair silkier, softer and easier to manage than before? I really like my hair now.

Get Your Hair Glowing

Right now, everything's changing for the prettier. Why not you, too? Change your hairstyle—choose a prettier color. That will give you the biggest lift of all.

Try a little change—maybe a little lighter, brighter. Add some highlights with hairpainting or frosting. Or look for a more dramatic difference for a whole new look.

You'll be surprised at how good it will make you feel—more alive, self-confident. And, the funny thing is, most people won't realize that you've changed your haircolor. They'll notice a difference, but they won't know what it is. "Wow, you look terrific! Have you lost weight?" Go ahead and tell them you've lost five pounds! Or just enjoy the compliments.

Here are four women who decided to make a change for the better. Their reasons are different, and so are the changes. But they're all much happier and so pleased with the new look.

Maybe the idea you've been looking for is right here. Maybe not. If you're looking for a slight change, choose a shade close to your natural color—maybe in a nonperoxide haircoloring that will wash away after several shampoos. Those won't lighten however. If you want to go lighter, choose a shampoo formula haircoloring a shade or two lighter than the color you have now.

Try on some wigs to experiment for more dramatic changes.

Sally

Her own blond hair had darkened, as blond hair generally does, and she really wanted to go back to the blond hair she had when she was little.

Sally chose the lightest shade in shampoo formula haircoloring. She was really surprised. It was so easy, and it really improved the condition of her hair. The haircoloring, buffered with conditioners, gave her hair more body and shine.

Mary & Sue

Mary and Sue are college roommates; graduation's coming up fast, and they want to look their very best for job interviews now. They know that shaping up their hair would give them the quickest change for the better. The first step was a good professional haircut. Look at the difference the softer styles make. Then Mary used a shampoo formula haircoloring to add pretty red highlights to her hair. Sue chose a brown shade to lighten her hair just a little.

Now, they not only look better, they feel better—much more confident about their chances for just the right job.

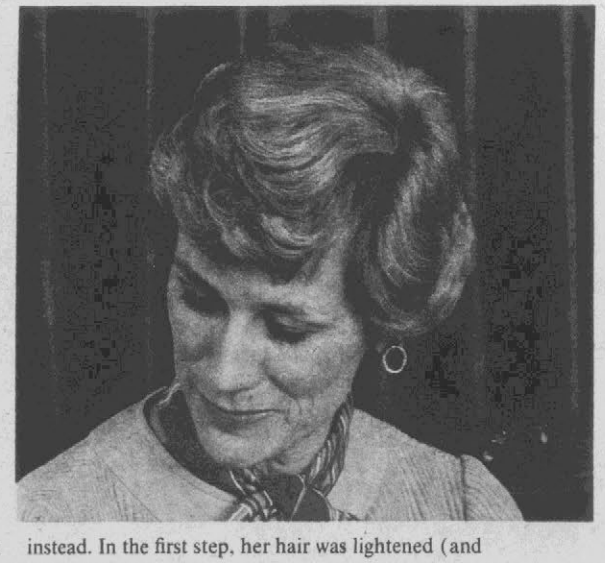

Ruth

Ruth had gray hair that was really quite pretty. But she began to think about changing it when a friend suggested that gray hair made her look older than she was.

That did it. Ruth decided to become a blonde. She tried out shampoo formula haircoloring on some strands of hair and discovered that hidden red tones showed up. And so she went to two-step blonding instead. In the first step, her hair was lightened (and the red tones disappeared). In the second step, a toner was applied to make her hair the delicate blond she wanted it to be. She loves it!

Continued

Springtime. Shape-up time. Time to start exercising before bathing-suit weather. Time to shape up your wardrobe, to shape up your hair—put it into pretty condition. Make it shiny and healthy-looking.

Try a new style, a prettier color. You can do it in six easy steps. And it's much easier when you understand the nature of the hair itself. So let's take it one strand at a time.

Each hair strand has an outside layer that, when magnified, looks like the shingles on the roof of a house. If you treat your hair kindly and condition it well, the "shingles" on each hair will lie smoothly together and your hair will shine. But if you treat your hair harshly, the "shingles" will rough up or wear off, causing your hair to become weak, dull and porous. Weakened hair is more likely to split, break and frazzle, and you can see what that looks like in the microphotos below.

Conditioning—the key to beautiful, healthy-looking hair—and the six-step program are described here.

How Hair Can Bounce and Shine!

1 The Cut

A good professional haircut is essential. Only a professional can shape your hair to best suit your face and your type of hair. However you plan to style your hair, make sure you get a blunt cut with scissors. The hair is cut cleanly, straight across the end. Avoid a razor cut, which creates ragged edges at the ends of the hair and makes the hair more prone to splitting. Then make appointments for regular trims every six weeks or so to keep the ends in shape and to maintain the style.

2 Shampoos

Choose a shampoo with a fragrance you love and a formula that suits your hair and your shampoo schedule. Read the labels to find the best ones to try.

If your hair isn't particularly oily and can go several days without shampooing and still look good, choose a shampoo for "regular" or "normal" hair. If you shampoo very frequently, you may prefer the formula for "delicate" hair.

If your hair is dry and flyaway and electricity sparks when you brush, choose a shampoo for "dry" hair, and pay special attention to crème rinses and conditioners after shampooing.

If your hair is very oily, the kind that feels matted down the day after shampooing, use a shampoo for oily hair.

If your hair is limp and fine, use a shampoo for "extra body."

If your hair has been colored, protect the color and keep it pretty with colorfast shampoos.

Once you have the right shampoo, be sure to use it to your best advantage. If you're shampooing every day, one lathering will probably be enough, unless your hair is very dirty or oily. After you get the lather in, be sure to get it all out. Rinse and rinse again. Any leftover shampoo will dull the hair.

Drawing by Barbara Fiore

3 Crème Rinses

If you use a good crème rinse after shampooing, your comb will glide through your hair—no tugging, no pulling. That's important. Your hair is weaker when it's wet, and you can damage it with rough treatment.

If your hair is fairly long, you may prefer a combination crème rinse and conditioner. Long hair is old at the ends. It's been handled longer than the rest of your hair. The cuticle is worn away, leaving the inner layer of hair exposed to the world. Since the inner layers of long hair are long chains of cells, they tend to separate. That's why long hair is particularly susceptible to split ends. The conditioners help to prevent splits and frazzles (really bad splits that have split many times) by nourishing the hair where it needs it most.

4 Conditioners

Deep-penetrating conditioning treatments at least once a month are an essential part of your program for good hair care. This is the conditioner you leave on for twenty to thirty minutes before rinsing it out.

This gives the conditioner time to get into the hair, fill in the gaps and smooth out the roughness in the outer layer. It reduces sponginess, smooths the hair and reduces the possibility of split ends.

If your hair is damaged, you may want to use penetrating conditioning twice a month or more, and use an instant conditioner after every shampoo.

5 Haircoloring

If you want the richness of new color and, at the same time, added body and shine to your hair, haircoloring could be just the solution. Buffered with special conditioners, haircoloring can make your hair "nice to touch" while it makes the color prettier,too.

So go ahead, make your haircolor prettier.

6 Styling

Treat your hair gently by using brushes and combs with rounded ends on the bristles and teeth. Avoid sharp curlers, pins and clips. They all break the hair. And never, never sleep on rollers. That's bad for your hair, and uncomfortable, too.

There's a whole range of electric appliances that can help you look great in a hurry. A blow dryer can style your hair as you dry it. Electric hairsetters and steam styling wands can put in curls in just a few minutes. Use a conditioning-setting spray to achieve longer lasting curls with electric rollers. And when your style is in place, a spritz of non-aerosol hair mist will keep it that way.

condition* saves your hair, you save 20¢

But the biggest payoff is what condition* does for your hair. Its thick, creamy, protein-rich formula helps recondition damaged hair. In 30 minutes this intensive treatment actually penetrates the hair shaft to help restore lost body. To help repair split, frazzled ends, condition* adds new fullness and bounce to hair. And makes it look healthy and shiny again. condition* It's always been good for your hair. Now it's good for your budget, too.

Little-Known Facts About Women In History

By Joe Catalano

Two of the Seven Wonders of the World, The Hanging Gardens of Babylon and The Great Mausoleum at Halicarnassus, were constructed at the request of women. The Mausoleum was built as a tribute to Mausolos, the ruler of Caria, by his wife Artemisia. The Hanging Gardens were the work of Nebuchadnezzar II for one of his wives.

- World-famed stage actress Sarah Bernhardt (1845-1923) had an artificial leg.
- Madame Curie, the only person ever to be awarded the Nobel Prize in both physics and chemistry, failed to be elected to the French Academy of Science by one vote because of the institution's refusal to admit a woman.
- The first American heroine ever to be publicly acknowledged was Hannah Duston. Captured by the Indians on March 16, 1697, after a village raid that took the life of her one-year-old son, she managed to escape, killing ten braves along the way. On June 8 of that year, the General Court of Massachusetts voted Hannah a heroine . . . but gave the 25-pound monetary award to her husband!
- Contrary to prevailing male opinion, the first recorded automobile accident (May 30, 1896) was not caused by a woman, but by a man. His victim? Evylyn Thomas, whom he hit on a New York City street while she was out bike-riding.
- The Hudson Tubes (subway trains running from New York City to Newark, N.J.) in 1909 designated certain cars as "For Women Only." The service, however, was discontinued after three months when it was reported that most women avoided the segregated cars in order to ride with the men.
- Until 1800, the word "hussy" was often used as an affectionate shortening of "housewife."
- The words of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" were written by a woman, Julia Ward Howe (1819-1910).
- Tennis got its start in America when Mary Ewing Outerbridge, on her arrival from Bermuda in 1874, set up courts at the Staten Island Cricket and Baseball Club.
- The first English language daily newspaper, "The Daily Courant," was founded in 1702 by a woman, Elizabeth Mallet of London.
- Belle Martell was the first licensed female prize-fight referee (license granted April 30, 1940). One month after her initial assignment, however, she retired.
- Women in Iran didn't get the vote until 1963. In one other Asian country—Kuwait—women still are denied the right to vote.

By Mike Senkiw Agronomist

Every year I see people pour more and more money into their lawns. They dig, fertilize and lime. They rake it all in. They scatter their seed and roll and water it.

Birds love it! Seeds which aren't washed away by rain give them a feast. But some seed grows, and soon it's time to weed, water and mow, mow . . . until summer comes to burn the lawn into hay, or crabgrass and diseases infest it.

That's what happens to ordinary grass, but not to Amazoy Zoysia.

"MOWED IT 2 TIMES," WRITES WOMAN

For example, Mrs. M. R. Mitter writes me how her lawn ". . . is the envy of all who see it. When everybody's lawns around here are brown from drought ours just stays as green as ever. I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in . . . Last summer we had it mowed (2) times. Another thing, we never have to pull any weeds — it's just wonderful!"

And from Iowa came word that the state's largest Men's Garden Club picked a Zoysia lawn as the "top lawn — nearly perfect" in its area. Yet this lawn had been watered only once all summer up to August!

Cuts Your Work, Saves You Money

Your deep-rooted, established Amazoy lawn saves you time and money in many ways. It never needs replacement . . . ends re-seeding forever. Fertilizing and watering (water costs money, too) are rarely if ever needed. It ends the need for crabgrass killers permanently. It cuts pushing a noisy mower in the blistering sun by 2/3.

CHOKES OUT CRABGRASS

Thick rich, luxurious Amazoy grows into a carpet of grass that chokes out crabgrass and weeds all summer long. It will NOT winter kill. Goes off its green color after killing frost, regains fresh new beauty every Spring — a true perennial!

For Slopes, Play Areas, Bare Spots

Your Own Supply of Plug Transplants

NO SEED, NO SOD!

There's no seed that produces winter-hardy Meyer Zoysia. Sod of ordinary grass brings with it the problems of seed, like weeds, diseases, burning out, other ills.

RESISTS WEAR & TEAR

Amazoy lawns take cookouts and parties — children playing on it won't hurt it, or themselves! Stays green right thru scorching heat and drought!

NO NEED TO RIP OUT PRESENT GRASS PLUG AMAZOY INTO OLD LAWN, NEW GROUND OR NURSERY AREA

Just set Amazoy plugs into holes in ground like a cork in a bottle. Plant 1 foot apart, checkerboard style. Every plug 3 sq. inches.

When planted in existing lawn areas plugs will spread to drive out old, unwanted growth, including weeds. Easy planting instructions with order.

PATENTED STEP-ON PLUGGER IS . . . . . FREE WITH ORDERS OF 600 PLUGS OR MORE

Amazoy exclusive! No one else can offer you this patented 2-way plugger. Saves bending, time, work. Light, rugged, invaluable for transplanting. Cuts away competing growth as it digs plug holes

Every Plug Guaranteed to Grow In Your Area • In Your Soil

- AMAZOY WON'T WINTER KILL—has survived temperatures 30° below zero!
- AMAZOY WON'T HEAT KILL—when other grasses burn out, Amazoy remains green and lovely!

Plug Amazoy into an entire lawn or problem areas. Plug it into poor soil, "builder's soil," clay or even salty, sandy beach areas. I guarantee every plug, regardless. Any plug failing to grow in 45 days replaced FREE. Since we're hardly in business for the fun of it, you know we're 100% sure of our product!

If it isn't Amazoy, you're not getting the plugs that made Zoysia famous.

Audrey Hepburn:

On Children, Undying Love— And Going Back to Work At 46

Audrey Hepburn: "I'm proudest of people's faces when they say, 'I loved you in that movie.' "

"I think men and women have been the same emotionally since the beginning and always will be."

After an eight-year absence, Audrey Hepburn is back in the movies playing a fortyish Maid Marian to Sean Connery's graying Robin Hood in Columbia's new "Robin and Marian." "How does she look?" is the question most people ask. The answer is sensational! That small perfect face is still unforgettable with those astonishing big, brown eyes that haunt you. The way she holds her head, that gentle, distinctive voice of hers—they're unchanged. Not only is hers still an uncommonly beautiful face, but it has acquired a maturity, a pensive quality. Yet, even at 46, Audrey still has something of the innocent about her.

In her absence from the spotlight, she married Dr. Andrea Dotti, an Italian psychiatrist nine years her junior. They have a son, Luca, age 5. Audrey has another son, Sean, 15, from her previous marriage to Mel Ferrer. Whenever it's possible for her husband to get away from his psychiatric concerns (which isn't often enough, according to Audrey), they spend their time traveling all over the world or relaxing at their country home near Lausanne, Switzerland. FAMILY WEEKLY talked with this enchanting beauty about her new career—as a devoted wife and mother.

FAMILY WEEKLY: It's been a long time between pictures.

AUDREY: Yes, but it didn't seem a long time to me. I didn't even realize that it had been an eight-year hiatus until some reporter mentioned it.

FW: What intrigued you so much about "Robin and Marian" that you returned to the screen after so many years?

AUDREY: I had a longing to do something romantic. I think a lot of people do nowadays. What could be more romantic than the story of a man who did heroic deeds and a woman who loved him very much? This is, perhaps, more a movie about their feelings as they matured and got older than about their actions, which were played up in Robin Hood tales of the past. It's a story of undying love.

FW: Is undying love possible in today's world?

AUDREY: I believe in it, but that's because I think the world in many ways stays the same. There are still Robin Hood types around—men with ideals and a sense of humanity. Undying love happens to some people and not all. That was as true hundreds of years ago as it is today. I think men and women have been the same emotionally since the beginning and always will be. It's the external forces around us that change.

FW: Does it bother you that a lot of gossip about your personal life has sprung up because you decided to make movies again?

AUDREY: It's something you have to learn to live with as an actor. When you're making

By Fred Robbins

movies, the gossip can be even worse. I'm a housewife first; my family is my main interest. I love making movies, but I love my children more. Time is so short. I think life is becoming more and more complicated, and it's a struggle just to keep abreast of things. It takes time to love, and that's why I haven't been making movies. I invest so much of myself in my children. They're not always with me, but I'm always there if they want to be with me.

FW: As a psychiatrist's wife, have you developed any theories on child-raising?

AUDREY: I have no theories, nor am I that much of an expert. I'm not even sure I'm a good mother, but I know I'm a devoted one. I've only had two children, you know, and there's a ten-years' age difference between Sean and Luca. I trust my instincts. I think motherhood is very elementary in that you just love a lot and try to guide your children as best you can. I give my children a lot of freedom and a lot of love. I try not to be overprotective, but I'm careful that they are secure. I think people are unnecessarily anxious about how to and how not to raise their children. Children, after all, do a lot of it themselves. But it is important that they feel loved. That they can't do by themselves.

"I never think about aging because it's a natural process. We all do it. But I think about dying. . . ."

FW: How have you managed to stay out of the limelight these last years?

AUDREY: Andrea and I don't go out a great deal. His work takes up a great deal of his time —he lectures and studies when he's not attending to his patients. I suppose we live a tame existence. Sometimes I'm recognized, but I don't make a fuss about it, and I try to blend into the crowd. I just try to be myself. We do go to the movies a great deal, though, simply because they are still one of the best ways to relax and escape from the rest of the world. Andrea finds them very therapeutic.

FW: So many actresses worry about getting older. Do you?

AUDREY: I never think about aging because it's a natural process. We all do it. But I think about dying, even though we all do that, too.

FW: You know your figure hasn't really changed in 20 years. How do you manage to stay so slim?

AUDREY: I've never had a weight problem, even living in Italy most of the year where everyone eats pasta and bread. In fact, I know it sounds crazy, but I think some pasta a day keeps the pounds away, at least for me. I don't do anything special. Like any woman, I try to look my best and I do care, but I don't have any special program or prescription.

FW: You've always represented the height of chic to women all over the world. Givenchy called you the most beautiful woman in the world and you were his favorite model. How do you feel about that image of Audrey Hepburn?

AUDREY: [Blushing] It's funny how things change. When I was young, I was full of complexes about the way I looked. I felt I was too thin and angular. But a woman can't be too thin today, and fashion has certainly changed. People don't think about haute couture fashion as the most stylish any more. For the most part, everybody dresses the same, and the same styles are available to every segment of the population. Jeans for instance. I'm glad they're so popular. I love jeans; I wear them all the time.

FW: After all these years of making movies, is there one movie of which you're proudest?

AUDREY: That's a very hard question to answer, and I don't want to sound banal, but I'm equally proud of all my pictures. They've all involved terribly talented directors, writers and actors. I've been extraordinarily lucky, especially when you consider that I started out as a dancer. What I'm proudest of is people's faces when they say to me, "I loved you in that movie."

FW: Do you plan to make more movies or have we lost you again for another long stretch?

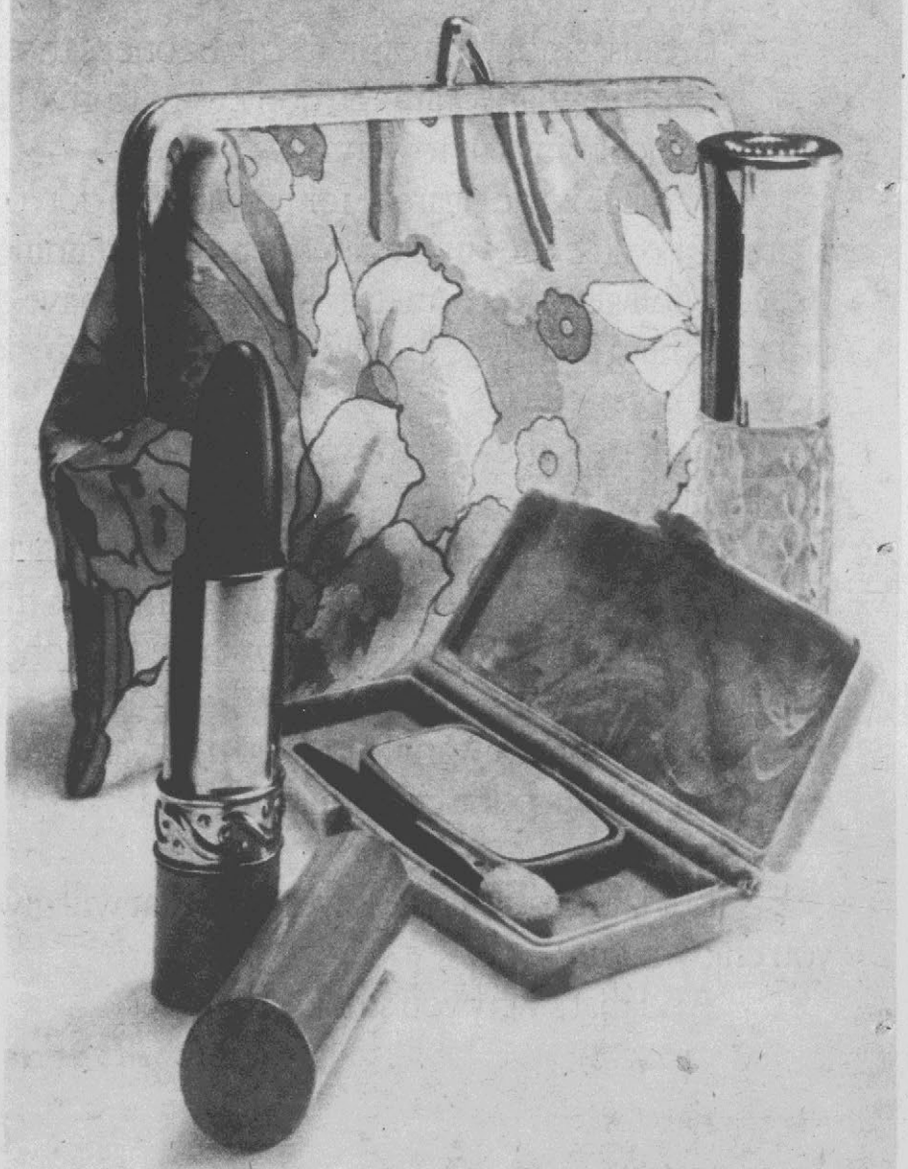

AUDREY: [Laughing] I really have no idea. I want to play everything by ear, and first things come first.

You know, my family. FW

Why do you smoke?

With what you've been hearing about smoking these days, you probably wonder sometimes why you smoke at all.

Yet you enjoy it.

And the chances are you don't want to give up any of that.

Which brings us to Vantage.

Vantage is the cigarette for people who don't entertain the idea of giving up cigarettes because they find cigarettes too entertaining.

Vantage is the cigarette for people who have come to realize that most cigarettes that give them the flavor they want also give them a lot of the 'tar' and the nicotine that they may not want.

Vantage is the cigarette for people who've found that most low 'tar' cigarettes don't give them anything at all.

The thing that makes Vantage special is that its filter is based on a new design concept that gives smokers the flavor of a full-flavor cigarette without anywhere near the 'tar' and nicotine.

Now we don't want to suggest that Vantage is the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette you'll find.

It isn't.

And that's why you smoke. Right?

Shortstop LARRY BOWA

"I Greet Each Day Like A New Season"

When Larry Bowa of the Philadelphia Phillies first broke into major-league baseball, he was told he'd never make it big unless he learned to control his nervousness and his volatile temper. So he took up Transcendental Meditation. "It really helped," says Bowa. "I used to let little things bother me. I'd always be worried and nervous when I went up to hit. If I had a bad day, I'd let it bother me the next day and the day after. No more. Now I look at each day like the beginning of a new season. Even the umpires tell me they like me now!" A skinny, 155-pounder, Bowa played American Legion ball in his native California, then made it to the major leagues the hard way. He was passed over in the draft, then signed by the Phillies as a free agent for $2,000. He spent four years in the minors before moving up to Philadelphia. His speed and deft work in the field impressed his teammates, but he was called a "Ping hitter" because of his weak performance in the batter's box. His frustrations over his low batting average drove him into temper tantrums and earned him the nickname of the "Gnat." "I had to take a mature look at myself," he says. "It took me some time." Bowa got help from his teammate, Dave Cash. He also became a switch hitter and started lifting weights in the off-season to strengthen his arms. In 1974 he stole 39 bases, the most recorded by a Phillie player in 65 years. Last year, he had 178 hits and a batting average of over .300. . . . His most important achievement, however, was in developing his self-confidence and ridding himself of the fears and anxieties that kept him from showing his real potential. . . . Bowa has led the National League in fielding percentage three times. He won the "Golden Glove" award in 1972. He and his wife, Sheena, have a home in Seminole, Fla., near the Philadelphia spring training camp.

The Bicentennial Council of the Thirteen Original States announces

The Official Bicentennial Spoon Collection

honoring the great patriots and momentous events of our country's struggle for freedom.

The Bicentennial Council of the Thirteen Original States, representing the official Bicentennial Commissions of all thirteen of our original states, is dedicated to making this nation's Bicentennial a time not just for celebrating but for remembrance and rededication to the spirit of the American Revolution.

It is in furtherance of this goal that the Bicentennial Council announces the minting of The Official Bicentennial Spoon Collection—a series of thirteen finely sculptured commemorative spoons that will honor great American patriots and outstanding events of the American Revolution.

In keeping with the importance of this collection, every spoon will be crafted with exceptional care and attention to detail. The handle will bear a sculptured portrait of an outstanding American patriot. And the bowl will bear an original work of art evoking that patriot's great contributions to the American Revolution.

Samuel Adams, for example, will be commemorated as a leader of "The Boston Tea Party." Thomas Jefferson will be shown writing the Declaration of Independence. Benjamin Franklin will be depicted signing America's vital alliance with France. And George Washington will be portrayed in his moment of greatest triumph, during the final surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown.

In addition, the collection will honor patriots whose individual acts of courage continue to inspire Americans to this day. Thus, Molly Pitcher will be shown at the Battle of Monmouth, unhesitatingly taking her wounded husband's place as a cannoneer. Caesar Rodney will be portrayed making his 80-mile ride to cast a tie-breaking vote for independence. And Nathan Hale—faced with a British hangman's noose—will be depicted making his defiant declaration of regret at having only one life to give for his country.

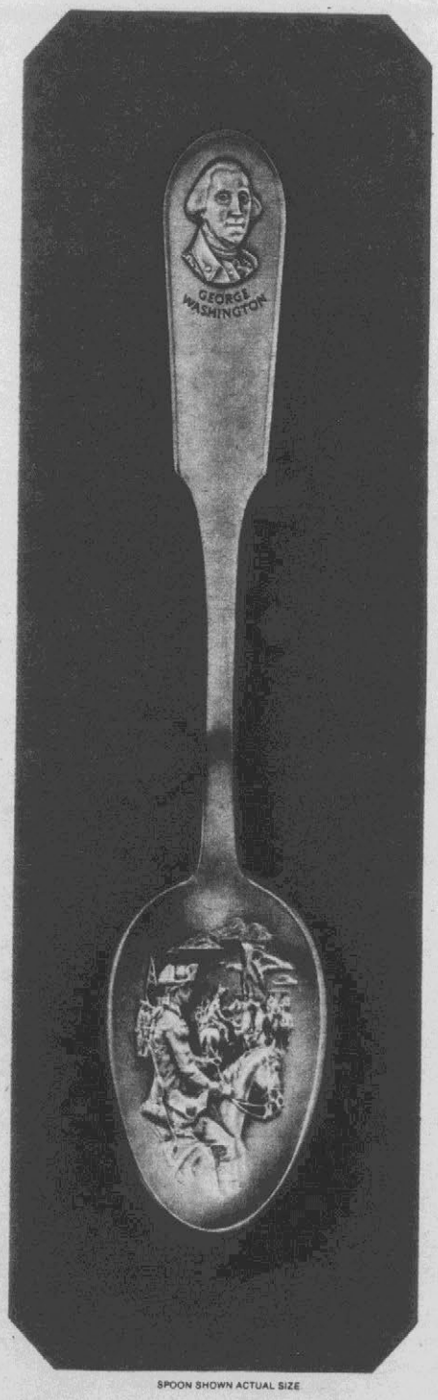

Minted in fine American pewter

Each portrait, and each scene, will be sculptured in meticulous detail and minted—in dramatic high relief—by the artists and master craftsmen of The Franklin Mint.

Moreover, all thirteen spoons will—appropriately—be minted in fine American pewter. For pewter was the traditional metal of early America, and has been prized throughout our history for its softly gleaming lustre and enduring beauty.

A strictly limited edition

The Bicentennial Council of the Thirteen Original States will issue The Official Bicentennial Spoon Collection in a single strictly limited edition that is available only by advance subscription. There is an absolute limit of one set per subscriber. And, when all subscribers have received their sets, the dies used to create the spoons will be destroyed, so that the collection can never be minted again.

SPOON SHOWN ACTUAL SIZE

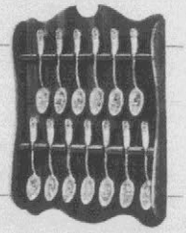

The collection will be issued at the rate of one spoon each month, beginning in June 1976. The original issue price for each spoon is just $15. And there is no need to send any payment at this time. Subscribers will be billed for each spoon with its shipment. Therefore, you will be able to acquire the complete collection on a convenient monthly basis.

Subscription deadline: April 30, 1976

As a tribute to the patriots who established our independence . . . as an official issue of lasting importance . . . as a work of art that will inspire all Americans, this is a collection well worth owning. A permanent — and extremely appropriate — commemorative of our 200th anniversary.

But this is the only time The Official Bicentennial Spoon Collection will ever be made available. And all subscription applications must be postmarked by April 30, 1976, to be accepted.

A handsome pine spoon rack, custom-crafted in authentic early American style to house and display all thirteen spoons, will be included as part of the collection.

ADVANCE SUBSCRIPTION APPLICATION

The Official Bicentennial Spoon Collection

Valid only if postmarked by April 30, 1976

ADELE AND "FAMILY"
Bambi is a grandmother

Seven years ago, Adele Bowman rescued a doe who had been injured by a harvester on the Bowman farm. "Bambi" recovered after months of being bottle-fed and kept warm and has since given birth to five fawns, fathered by wild stags in the neighboring woods, and is a grandmother twice over. "I never expected that I would be maintaining a refuge for three generations of deer, but I've never regretted time spent with the deer. Bambi is as gentle as her namesake," said 21-year-old Adele. "She comes when called, loves riding in our Land Rover, and is so popular that local housewives bring baked goods to her regularly, which she gobbles up, particularly the sweet biscuits and cakes."

Why it's hard to be an indifferent George Wallace watcher: "Thirteen years ago he could be sloughed aside as the cocky hero of a handful of racists. Since that time his power base has grown; he has moderated his stance, and he has become the idol of vast numbers who think 'the system' is working against them. . . . He is a determined man who is convinced that if he does not become President, he will influence drastic changes in the system anyway. He has looked death in the face twice and he is still very much alive. He believes that God saved him for a purpose. Wallace has bragged that his own populism is much like that of Huey Pierce Long, considered by many to be the greatest of Southern politicians. Like Long, Wallace is a rip-roaring, dyed-in-the-wool Southerner. He exudes the same cocky facade of fast-talking demagoguery. Like Long, he built his own image. He was the maker of himself. Neither man was a plastic-style twentieth century politician molded of soft putty by an advertising agency. Wallace, like Long, has a strong personality. He's a one-man show. His entire political operation revolves around him." From "Watch Out for George Wallace," by Wayne Greenhaw (Prentice-Hall, $7.95).

Wallace

Rev. Bryant, who died.

Sandy, whose husband, Mark, also died of cancer, says, "In a strange way, the day my husband died was a good day. We were able to share things. We talked."

Death is not something we look forward to or can accept easily. Cancer victims and their families must endure even greater suffering as the disease takes its toll. Sandy, a cancer widow, and the Reverend Bryant who was dying of cancer, tell how they faced the reality of death in an upcoming TV documentary on dying from which these conversations are excerpted. Sandy talking: "I gave him his last bath. I brought in flowers and read to him. He told me what he had intended to get his mother for Mother's Day. There was some hallucinating because of the morphine, but Mark sang songs and asked to have his friends come into the room. We talked and ate brownies. In a strange way, it was a good day. We were able to share things. In the early evening, he kissed me and he said, 'Let's call it quits, Poo.' He died about a half-hour later. There was for me then only an immediate glad acceptance that he had been released from physical suffering and freed to go a new and different way. And as he wished, his body was given to medical science and his eyes were given that another might see. We learned later that the cornea transplant was successful." The Reverend Bryant talking: "I can say right now that I'm living some of the greatest moments in life. I am the happiest man in the world. I don't think that any of the Rockefellers could be as happy as I am. The doctor has told me that I don't have much longer to live, but I'm not upset. I want to live as long as anybody, as long as I can, but I'm not going to die on account of death." These comments were excerpted from the PBS-TV special, "Dying," to be aired Thursday, April 29 at 9 p.m. (EST).

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY
By Richard Armour

A TIME FOR CELEBRATION

My glasses are essential,
My glasses case is, too.
I lose one or the other
Or both, each day, it's true.

Today was something special,
A day almost unique.
Instead of looking, looking,
For hours (it seems a week),

At once I found my glasses
And found my glasses case:
The latter in my pocket,
The former on my face!

Economist: A person who writes about something he doesn't understand and makes you think it's your fault.
–Paul H. Gilbert

"Uncle," said the earnest young man, "I am desperately in love with a beautiful young woman. How can I learn what she really thinks of me?"

"Marry her, my boy! Marry her!" –Conrad Fiorello

Bereaved: "Almost impossible." –Gene Yasenak

We were getting ready for a family swim. I asked my 5-year-old to get the towels. She protested, "Why do I have to do everything around here? I'm not the mermaid."

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: "I HAVE SPENT TWENTY YEARS IN THESE RUINS AND FOUND MUCH TREASURE," THE STRANGER SAYS. "THIS I WILL USE TO DECOY SHERIF KARMISH AWAY SO YOU CAN CONTINUE YOUR SEARCH."

SO PRINCE VALIANT PAYS THE WANDERER THE VALUE OF SOME PIECES OF JEWELRY, AND IN THE DARK OF NIGHT HE PLACES ONE PIECE IN A CREVICE.

THEN HE OFFERS HIMSELF TO SHERIF KARMISH AS A GUIDE AND SHERIF ACCEPTS READILY, FOR HIS RAGGED CLOAK IS SECURED BY A JEWELLED CLASP.

THE WANDERER LEADS THE WAY TO THE CREVICE AND POINTS OUT THE ORNAMENT. "THAT WOULD HAVE BEEN MINE HAD I THE STRENGTH TO GET IT." BUT SHERIF SETS HIS MEN TO WORK AND ERE NIGHTFALL THE PRIZE IS HIS.

IT SETS HIM DREAMING OF THE WEALTH TO COME. MEANWHILE, HE SENDS MEN DOWN TO THE VALLEY TO SPY ON THE RIVAL TREASURE HUNTERS, AND THEY REPORT THAT TWO MEN ARE WORKING NEAR THE RUINED STABLES.

VAL AND ZILLA HAVE FOLLOWED THE ANCIENT LEADEN WATERPIPE TO WHERE IT ENDS AGAINST SOLID ROCK. "WE ENCOUNTER MYSTERIES ON TOP OF MYSTERIES," GRUMBLES ZILLA.
