

Economy Indicators Jumped Last Month

By G. DAVID WALLACE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said today its index designed to show future economic trends jumped 1.4 per cent in May, the fastest rate of increase in 10 months.

The increase put the index of leading indicators, a composite of a dozen statistics selected to foreshadow the future, 13 per cent ahead of where it was a year ago, the Commerce Department said.

The index, increasing steadily since March 1975, augured continued economic growth and steady creation of new jobs.

However, administration economists have said they expect the nation's total economic output, or Gross National Product, for the current three-month period to grow at an annual rate of less than 5 per cent.

That would be well below the annual rate of 8.7 per cent registered in the first three months of the year.

The May jump in the leading indicators was the biggest monthly increase since 2.8 per cent last July. It doubled the increase of seven-tenths of a per cent in April, revised downward from an original 1.1 per cent.

The Commerce Department said of 12 components in the index, six advanced, two were unchanged, three declined and one was not available in time to be included.

The volume of new orders, up 5.2 per cent in May, exerted the biggest upward push on the index, the department said. The orders for consumer products were received by manufacturers and suppliers.

Other factors exerting an upward influence were a longer average work week, a faster growth in cash held by consumers and business, higher prices for key wholesale commodities, faster formation of new businesses and a greater volume of new building permits issued.

The largest factor holding back the index was the volume of contracts and orders received by manufacturers and suppliers of factories and their facilities. That component declined 1.9 per cent.

Also moving downward were stock prices and the size of the money supply after adjustment for inflation.

Unchanged where the layoff rate in manufacturing and the ease with which companies obtain supplies.

The pace of deliveries of supplies is taken as an indicator of demand in the economy, so that slower deliveries mean higher demand.

Libya Poses A Threat Of Intervening

By EDWARD CODY
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Libya has threatened to intervene in the Lebanese civil war on the side of the Palestinians and their Lebanese Moslem allies if the Christians overrun two besieged Palestinian camps on the east side of Beirut, a leftist broadcast reported today.

Beirut Radio said Libyan Premier Abdel Salam Jalloud, who has been trying to arrange another cease-fire in the escalating civil war, warned that "Libya would stand on the side of the nationalist movement and the Palestinian revolution" and would have nothing to do with a proposed roundtable peace conference.

Jalloud called off a peace-seeking meeting with Christian leaders. He said he would not talk to them until they stopped the offensive against the Tal Zaatar and Jisr al-Basha camps and agreed to a cease-fire.

Jalloud's threat raised the prospect of a confrontation between the several hundred Libyan troops in Lebanon as part of the proposed pan-Arab peacekeeping force and the thousands of Syrian troops who have invaded Lebanon since June 1 to prevent victory by the Palestinians and Lebanese Moslems.

There was no letup in the battle today in and around Beirut. The fighting still was hardest around the two Palestinian camps which the Christians have been trying to take for more than a week. But fires raged in the Christian-held port area. Mortar and artillery shells exploded at random in the Christian and Moslem sectors of the city. Fighting was reported in neighboring mountain areas.

Nearly 200 persons were reported killed Monday, pushing the estimate for 14 months of civil war to nearly 29,000 dead.

The West German government announced it was closing its Embassy and advised the 500 West Germans in the country to leave.

The Christian Amchit radio claimed Christian militiamen captured hilltop positions overlooking the two besieged camps, but Beirut Radio denied this.

The Palestinians charged that Syrian President Hafez Assad had sent 4,000 more troops and a new tank column into northeast Lebanon, raising the total Syrian strength in the country to 16,500 regulars. But Western diplomats estimated that only 500 more Syrians had crossed the border, bringing the total to about 13,000.

There are about 20,000 men in the three main Christian militias. The Moslem militias total about 15,000 men, and some 20,000 Palestinian guerrillas fight on their side.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy announced in Cairo that his government had requested another emergency meeting of the Arab League's foreign ministers to discuss the situation in Lebanon. Fahmy accused the Christians of breaking the cease-fire the league sponsored early this month.

Grant OK'd

First District Congressman Walter B. Jones announced approval today of a Community Development block grant to the city of Greenville in the amount of $1,909,000. An identical amount was granted to Greenville under this program last year, bringing the total amount to $3,818,000 obligated to the city.

These funds will be used for the residential development of the West Meadowbrook neighborhood, public works improvements, including street paving, lighting, sidewalks and traffic signals.

Seeks Repeal Of Statute Under Which He's Sued

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Missouri congressman has introduced legislation that would repeal the 1863 statute under which he is being sued for allegedly making false claims for official travel.

The same law is being used by two lawyers to sue Rep. Wayne L. Hays, D-Ohio, and Elizabeth Ray, a former employee who has claimed Hays hired her solely to provide him with sexual intercourse. Hays has admitted a "personal relationship" with Miss Ray but said she was placed on the staff of the House Administration Committee he then headed to do secretarial work.

The congressman filing the bill to repeal the law is Rep. William L. Clay, D-Mo. The measure would not affect the civil suit filed against him because the repeal would not be retroactive.

The 1863 law permits any citizen to sue a federal of-of three Jacksonville men on charges of making unauthorized use of an aircraft. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Trio In Plane-Theft Try

Three Jacksonville men were arrested early this morning by Greenville Police on charges of making unauthorized use of an aircraft after an attempt was made to steal a twin-engine plane from the Pitt-Greenville Airport.

Chief Glenn Cannon identified the three charged as Dewie Joseph Sandlin Jr., 22, Fernando Ruiz Ramos, 23, and John J. Siemer, 20. All were placed under $100,000 bonds pending hearing of the case in court.

Cannon explained that officers stopped a vehicle occupied by Ramos and Siemer at the airport about 2:30 a.m. While talking with the two, the investigators heard an aircraft start up then cut off several times, so they call for assistance.

Other officers, according to the chief, located a twin-engine plane on a ramp at the airport that had been untied, had its wheel chocks removed and that had hot engines. Searching the plane, police found Sandlin — a licensed pilot — hiding behind a seat in the rear of the aircraft.

The plane, Cannon said, a six-passenger Cessna 310, was owned by F & D Motor Company in Bethel, and valued at $85,000.

Chief Cannon, who noted officers also found a suitcase containing a .38 caliber revolver and a .25 caliber automatic pistol in the vehicle occupied by Ramos and Siemer, said local detectives, agents of the State Bureau of Investigation and Pitt County Sheriffs deputies are continuing to investigate the incident.

Bail-Out Plan Studied By Western World Leaders

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — A multibillion-dollar financial bailout for industrial nations, similar to the aid plan for New York City, is being studied by the Western world's powers.

Details aren't yet worked out, but U.S. taxpayers could contribute as much as $2 billion to an aid package that could total $6.1 billion.

Italy may be the first to receive help, U.S. officials indicated Monday, with Great Britain likely to be next in line.

The leaders of the U.S., British, Canadian, French, Italian, Japanese and West German governments discussed the need for special aid at their economic summit conference here Sunday and Monday.

"We recognize that problems may arise for a few developed countries which have special needs, which have not yet restored domestic economic stability, and which face major payments deficits," they said in a joint statement at the end of the meeting.

The significance of the aid plan, if it is put into operation, would be that the industrial nations would be committed to preventing the financial collapse of any of their group.

There would be a price to pay, however. President Ford said in a statement that any aid should be made available "in conjunction with a firm program for restoring underlying equilibrium." That means nations receiving aid would be expected to balance their budgets, even if it meant painful belt-tightening for their people.

This would be similar to the price New York is paying for Washington's help with its financial crisis. The city has had to agree to budget-balancing economies, and the loans to it are for relatively short periods.

Both Britain and Italy are running substantial budget deficits which U.S. officials contend are aggravating already serious inflationary conditions and causing the steady erosion in the value of the Italian lira and British pound.

The United States and other industrial nations have pledged more than $5 billion in temporary aid to help keep the British pound from falling farther. But U.S. officials have said any additional aid for Britain, or Italy, would probably come through the International Monetary Fund, to which the United States is the biggest contributor.

DAVID BEACHAM JR.

MEDICAL EXPENSE

David Beacham Jr., who will be 20 months old Saturday, has had three operations in his lifetime, and will probably have to have another soon.

"Junior" was born with hydrocephalus, commonly known as the "water head" condition. He now has a shunt which channels the fluid from the cranial area to his digestive system so it can be released. Now his doctors have determined that one of his kidneys is not operating properly and that this condition, too, may have to be surgically corrected. He's scheduled for tests in Chapel Hill July 12 but his parents, who also have three young daughters, have more than exhausted their funds.

His father, David Beacham, operates Duraclean Specialists here. The family has no phone at home, but may be reached through the business number, 752-0011. They live at Rt. 5, Box 290-A, Greenville. Contributions toward Junior's medical expenses will be greatly appreciated and well put to use, according to a friend of the family who told Hotline about the Beachams' situation. Checks may be made payable to Parker's Chapel Free Will Baptist Church and will, of course, be forwarded to the family. Checks should be designated for the David Beacham Jr. Fund.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

While Erma Bombeck takes a well-deserved one-week vacation, we welcome the opportunity to offer some of her most popular past columns.

I have a child who should be listed in the yellow pages under "auto parts." The motor in my car never turns over but that he is belted into the front seat with a smile on his face saying, "Where are we going?"

The truth is, he doesn't even care. He'll go to a drive-in library, a night depository slot at the bank, a tire center, an air hose at the gas station or a self-service ice machine.

The other afternoon, I coasted the car quietly down the driveway until I thought I was out of hearing distance. Then I started the motor, shoved it into first and as the kids say, "laid a patch." Out of the back seat came a voice, "Hey, Mom, where are we going?"

"How did you know I was going anywhere?"

"I saw you in the garage looking for your car keys," he said. "Where are we going?"

"We are going to follow a garbage truck from Ohio to Tampa. You want out?"

"No. How come you're so sore? Is it because when I'm in the car you can't sing duets on the radio with Glen Campbell?"

"No."

"Is it because I forgot my shoes again?"

"No. Frankly, I am worried about your spending so much time in a car. You're getting a station wagon palor. Not to mention the fact that you never get any exercise. You ride in the car to school and back, to ball practice, to the grocery, to the dentist, to church, to the movies, to the barber shop, to your friends' houses to play. It's about time you started using your feet."

"My what?"

"Your feet. They're what you'd have shoes on if you didn't blast out of the house in such a hurry to get into the car."

"I know what feet are," he said. "It's just they don't seem as much fun as riding in a car. Besides, if they're such a big deal how come Dad drives the car to his golf cart? And sits down to cut the grass? And..."

"Stop criticizing your father and hop out and get the mail out of the box."

He opened his mouth to say something, but looked at me and changed his mind. It's a long walk back up the driveway.

First Women Enrolled By Air Force Academy

By The Associated Press
The sign leading into the Air Force Academy read "Bring Me Men," but that didn't faze 150 women, the academy's first female cadets.

As the first-year cadets, or doolies, enrolled Monday in the shadow of the Colorado Rockies, 38 women were also processing in at the U.S. Coast Guard Academy at New London, Conn. Women were expected to join freshman classes later this summer at the Army and Navy academies.

The first to walk beneath the Air Force Academy banner was Joan Olsen, an 18-year-old from Elk Grove, Calif., who came early because, she explained simply, "I wanted to be the first."

The banner brought giggles from other arriving young women as they piled out of family station wagons, taxis and buses into the bright sunlight. Laden with suitcases and bags, the women got few offers of help from stern-looking upperclassmen, who just pointed to the baggage collection area and let the girls struggle.

The incoming Air Force cadets went through the usual long lines of processing, physical exams and the routine military haircut. The girls had a choice of four short hairstyles, including the familiar "Dorothy Hamill" clip made popular by the American Olympic gold medal ice skater.

The unfamiliar mixture of sexes caused confusion in some quarters.

"O.K., gentleman, ..." one apparently napping Coast Guard Academy upperclassman began an order to a group of newcomers that included men and women.

The Coast Guard Academy, run by the Department of Transportation, admitted women voluntarily. Congress ordered the change at the three military service academies under Defense Department jurisdiction.

The Merchant Marine Academy, run by the Commerce Department, admitted its first women last fall and tasted controversy when a woman cadet resigned under pressure after being accused of sleeping with a male cadet. Schools officials said the male cadet was not positively identified.

Hubby's Torrid Verse: Fantasy or Fact?

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1976 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to know if I am living with a talented poet or an incurable woman-chaser.

My husband and I are in our late middle years, and I thought him loyal until I found in his desk several hundred love poems he admits he composed himself. Some are as bland as unsalted popcorn, but most are more like enchiladas!

These impassioned poems of pleading, praise and ecstasy contain the names of more than a dozen women—Ginny, Julie, Linda, Jackie, Edna, Florence, etc. All, he insists, are casual encounters about whom he has fantasized.

Is it possible that there is no foundation whatsoever for all these torrid "love affairs" he so vividly described in his poems? Just how much "poetic license" should one be permitted?

POET'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Poets have vivid imaginations, but the only way you can tell whether your husband is fantasizing or philandering is to catch him in the latter. Meanwhile, renew his license and forget it.

DEAR ABBY: I wonder if you or your readers can come up with an answer to my problem.

I've just moved into a new home. My next-door neighbor is very likeable, and I enjoy her company. However, I visit her home only upon invitation.

Not so with her. She is at my door at least twice a day. Each day her visits become longer. Friday she stayed from 12 noon until 3 p.m. Today (Monday) she was here from noon until 3 p.m. again. Today I scrubbed the kitchen floor and turned on the dishwasher. Conversation was difficult, but it didn't slow her down.

In another town, six years ago, I had the same problem. When I suggested to my neighbor that perhaps she was visiting me too much, she left in a huff and never spoke to me again. I felt a loss as she, too, was a nice person whom I enjoyed as a friend.

I don't want to lose my new neighbor's friendship in the same way, but I don't want to resort to leaving my home daily just to avoid her. How can I discourage her in a way that will retain the friendship on a less frequent basis?

NEEDS SUGGESTIONS

DEAR NEEDS: Take your choice. You can keep quiet and let your neighbor barge in whenever she pleases for as long as she likes. Or you can tell her in a nice way that you need more time to yourself, so you'd appreciate it if she would please call first.

If she rejects your friendship because of your frankness, it's preferable to being trapped in your own home or having to leave just to avoid her. Who needs friends like that?

DEAR ABBY: Why did you have to write that column saying Indian men were better lovers than white men?

There are enough white women throwing themselves at my half-Mohawk husband without giving them added incentive.

Please tell those love-hungry white women that if they want an Indian lover, they should have married one, as I did.

Priorities For City's Streets

Greenville has set as its first priority under the Department of Transportation's seven year plan, the completion of a Pitt Street Bridge.

Second priority is the dual laning of Evans Street from Tenth to Greenville Boulevard.

Both these thoroughfares are on the state system and the work would be carried out by the Department of Transportation.

We think the Pitt Street bridge is a major need. Reade Circle is now being completed by the city and this downtown thoroughfare can be four-laned. The plan is to tie it in with Pitt Street and the bridge at Pitt would carry the traffic back onto North Greene which is already four-laned. With the construction of the Pitt Street Bridge a good thoroughfare would be available via, Green and Pitt, Reade Circle, Cotanche and Charles Boulevard north and south through the city.

The need for four-laning Evans Street is obvious. This street, currently a secondary road, carries more and more traffic into and out of the city each day. It is carrying traffic well beyond what was intended for it.

We hope that the Department of Transportation will expedite these recommended projects.

Disappointment Mars Taking Of Bids

Bids were taken, last week on the Family Practice Center and Eastern Area Health Education Center to be built adjacent to the new Pitt Memorial Hospital.

It was disappointing that the bids exceeded the $1.65 allocated for the project. Even with the alternatives deleted, the low bids still totaled $1.68 million.

The county commissioners hope that the bids can be brought in line with funds available through negotiation with the low bidders. If so, this project can soon get underway.

How To Lift Tar Heel Pay

By BILL NOBLITT

(First of Two Articles)

RALEIGH — Nobody likes to be last.

North Carolina, in March, had an average hourly wage in manufacturing jobs of $3.70 compared with $5.07 for the nation.

That makes this state dead bottom among the 50 in the nation; and 27 per cent lower than the national average.

It is certain from the tone of gubernatorial candidates struggling to get a grip on the problem and some solutions, and from the gnashing of teeth by other politicians and state economic development experts that 1977 will be a year of concern and change in the field of economic development.

George Little, Secretary of the Department of Natural and Economic Resources, has already signaled his intentions to make some major changes, even while on the last legs of the four years of the administration of Republican Gov. James E. Holshouser who will leave office next January.

Two Concerns

There are at bottom two primary reasons for the widespread concern over industrial growth for the state:

—To the politician it means not only helping the people of the state by bringing them greater income, but it means increasing state revenues without going up on tax rates;

—To the wage earner it means increased income, either at a new job paying more, or at the same job with higher pay because of the competition created by the new jobs.

When North Carolina's chief industry hunter, Bob Leak, quit his job recently to take a similar post in South Carolina, public attention focused on what has been going on, and what needs to be done in the future.

Little, as well as some of the candidates for governor, took another look at the Phase One Economic Development Strategy report prepared by the Research Triangle Institute under the guidance of former Natural and Economic Resources Secretary James E. Harrington.

That effort first produced in September, 1974, was put on the back burner after a major policy dispute within the Holshouser administration. But it will not stay there.

The meat of that study has now been passed to major legislative leaders in a memorandum on economic development prepared by Economist Lloyd O'Carroll of the General Assembly Fiscal Research staff.

Passive Approach
O'Carroll presented an analysis of present programs — which is largely critical — and an alternate strategy largely paralleling that developed by the Research Triangle study earlier.

Looking at the system which has been used under Leak's guidance, O'Carroll found it one which mostly waited on a prospect to ask for help.

"This type of passive approach depends... on a large number of contacts by potential prospects such as a retail store depends on customers coming to that store.

"If the flow of contacts diminishes or changes in quality, then pace and quality of development in the state suffer. A reduction in the number of contacts would leave fewer from which to choose.

"If a large portion of those contacts were from low wage industries, then in order to create needed jobs, the state may find itself in the position of attracting industries which may actually lower the average wage.

"There is some evidence that this has occurred, or, as one analyst put — we have gone from low wage, slow growth, to low wage, high growth," O'Carroll finds.

In sum, O'Carroll compared North Carolina to the small, retail store owner who advertises a little, but not very progressively, and waits on a shopper to wander in who might be interested in the wares.

The key shift which the analyst proposes — and one which the Research Triangle report, and Secretary Little suggest — is an activist recruitment effort instead of the present passive recruitment.

A Smothering Solicitude

The question is often asked: What's so wrong about "Big Government"? Now and then a little bill comes along to provide an answer. By way of example, consider the motorcycle helmet bill. To understand this issue is to understand what liberals, in general, support, and what conservatives, in general, oppose.

It is useless to try to delineate these differences on the big bills. I must have put a million people to sleep over the past 25 years, arguing a conservative position on the national debt. No one gives a hoot about the national debt. No one can comprehend a $75 billion deficit. No more than a dozen readers will stick issues are out there with the Milky Way, among the unreachable stars.

But motorcycle helmets? Here we come down to earth.

Back in 1966, Congress passed the Highway Safety Act. It was one of those broad-based bills that no one effectively could criticize. Who wants to be labeled a foe of highway safety? Among the law's provisions was Section 402, which authorized the secretary of transportation to establish safety program standards.

Once the idea of a federal safety law is accepted, it also becomes hard to criticize the delegation of authority. The Congress, after all, cannot be expected to write detailed standards for particular safety programs.

The difficulty is that once the authority has been delegated, it becomes almost impossible for Congress to supervise the exercise of the authority. A secretary of transportation, given the power to write rules and regulations having the force and effect of law, spits on his hands and gets to work. He writes law.

So it was in this instance. In June, 1967, the secretary handed down his edict on motorcycle helmets. It was a breathtaking piece of arrogance. The secretary issued an order commanding every state in the Union to enact a law requiring motorcyclists to wear helmets.

The order was backed by a formidable threat: If a state failed or refused to obey this command, the state would forfeit all of its federal highway safety funds and 10 percent of its federal highway construction funds.

Only one state, California, to its everlasting credit, refused to comply. Other states, often under bitter protest, succumbed to the lure of "federal money."

What it was, was bribery. The compulsory helmet requirement, in my own view, is doubtful on its merits; and it is wrong at law and wrong in principle.

On the merits, you can get argument either way — that

House Reform Argued

By JIM ADAMS

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — New procedures ordered by House Democrats to prevent payroll and expense account abuses are being implemented amid a fight over whether the full House will get a chance to say anything about the changes.

Democratic leaders met Monday night to discuss whether to have the full House consider the revisions, but they reached no decision.

Republicans planned to review the issue today. Some 106 GOP members have accused the Democrats of trying to ram through the revisions.

The House Administration Committee approved the new procedures Monday. They will take effect as committee regulations when published in the Congressional Record, probably on Wednesday.

But committee Chairman Frank Thompson Jr., D-N.J., said that if the House considers the reforms and rejects any of them, the committee would be obliged to follow the House's will.

The revisions were ordered by the House Democratic Caucus last week after alleged abuses, including the charge that Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, put Elizabeth Ray on the Administration Committee payroll as his mistress and that nine House members collected travel money to which they were not entitled.

Hays has admitted having a "personal relationship" with Miss Ray but says she was hired to do committee work.

Among other things, the revisions, would:

—Require all House members to certify each month their employees' duties, pay and relationship with their employer. A public accounting would be released every three months.

—Abolish congressmen's ability to draw up to $11,000 in cash a year for travel and stationery.

—Remove the authority of members to save left-over stationery money for their retirements, and abolish the $140 annual postage allowance.

—Require that documented vouchers be submitted by members for all expenses and provide that an accounting of every member's expenses be released publicly every three months.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Assad's Loss Is PLO Gain

By ROWLAND EVANS

and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Far sooner than expected, Syria's flawed attempt to impose peace on bloody Lebanon through military power has produced what both Syria and its enemy, Israel, want least: new prestige and political power for Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO).

That ironic outcome so quickly following Syrian President Hafez Assad's bold gamble to invade Lebanon with major military strength underscores the increasing difficulty of stopping the killings in Lebanon, split between Moslem and Christian (with Moslems in a small majority).

When Assad moved his tanks over the mountainous border early this month, he triggered this sequence: Israel quietly applauded, the United States secretly cheered and Arafat's PLO prepared for a massacre.

Assad wanted to pacify

Lebanon, preventing left-wing Moslems from turning into another "confrontation" state on Israel's borders. Assad would pull some American chestnuts out of the fire, ending sectarian warfare inside Lebanon and paving the way for a new U.S. round of diplomacy on the Arab-Israeli struggle.

Instead, Assad's forces, blessed with top-drawer Soviet equipment, have suffered severe casualties, including well over 100 dead and the loss of at least 25 modern tanks. This should not have been surprising, considering that all of Lebanon's political factions and its roving gangs of toughs have more arms than they can use.

But more significant for Assad's future in turbulent intra-Arab politics is his shocking loss of face. Arafat's own men in the PLO, for example, "arrested" the commander of Syrian-aligned Palestinian troops and marched him off to Arafat's headquarters in Beirut.

The toughness, ingenuity and organizational skills of Arafat's Palestinian force, coupled with the overlapping "other war" in Lebanon between right-wing Christians and left-wing Moslems, stopped Assad at critical points.

Taking advantage of Syrian military mistakes, the Palestinians forced quick withdrawal of invading Syrian tanks from Sidon, south of Beirut, denying that key port city to the Syrians.

Since Assad was unwilling to try seizing Beirut by brute military strength (producing certain human carnage), the Syrians blockaded the Beirut airport. With Beirut port and access highways unusable for supplies, Syria prepared to force Beirut's submission by starvation.

That strategy fell under Arafat's coup in persuading the Cairo-based Arab League to send in a "peacekeeping force" which immediately took over the airport to open it for emergency supplies.

Thus, the intricate web woven by Assad, with silent support from both Israel and the U.S., has now trapped Hafez Assad. All other efforts to end the 15-month civil war were quickly defeated by religious and class passions in Lebanon. But Assad's failure has more sinister implications for both the U.S.

and Israel, precisely because it elevates the PLO to new importance.

Although it is not widely known here even by some Mideast experts, the official U.S. policy of avoiding "contacts" with the PLO has become self-defeating in its inflexibility. Officials of the American embassy in Beirut were unwilling to question PLO security men in Beirut about the murders of two U.S. diplomats, even though only the PLO knew what really happened.

Now, with the PLO gaining new stature, the U.S. may have to accept a painful change in that policy — possibly foretold in President Ford's message of thanks to the PLO this week for helping evacuate Americans from Beirut.

For Israel, with its deathly though understandable fear of the PLO achieving new political maturity, the Syrian failure carries the danger of new PLO power just north of Israel in south Lebanon's once placid Litani valley. Arafat could use that new power to convert the Israeli-occupied west Bank of the Jordan River into an independent Palestinian state.

As for Assad, his move into Syria has tragically backfired exactly as we predicted two weeks ago, but with political implications not (Continued on page 5)

Other Editors Say Potomac Breeze

(Raleigh Times)

There is unquestionably an election-year taint to the righteous indignation with which Congress is addressing its recent sex scandals and Administration Committee corruption.

But the relatively small beginnings of reform initiated by Wayne Hays' successor on his first day in office is the most refreshing breeze from across the Potomac in many a day.

Chairman Frank Thompson, D-N.J., losing no time in sprucing up the scandal-ridden office, promptly fired four staff members. He also lent his support to recommendations of a three-member task force of the Democratic Steering and Policy Committee.

—Elimination of the abused policy which allows congressmen to pocket up to $11,000 annually in unused postage allowance funds.

—Reducing, from 20 to 15 cents, automobile travel allowance on trips home.

—Requiring a report every three months on how congressmen spend their allowances. The report would require detailed accounts on who is employed, at what salary and for what purpose.

It is regrettable that the reform is in great part inspired by fear of repercussions at the polls this fall. Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., voiced it well: "We either make these so-called reforms or the Republicans will, and there are a lot of people meeting here today who won't be back next year."

However, regardless of cause, these reforms, which only touch the tip of the iceberg of congressional abuses, are certainly welcome.

It may be, when all is said and done, that Elizabeth Ray's $14,000 salary was from the taxpayers' point of view the most effective and far-reaching expenditure of the entire fiscal year. It got the message to Congress that it's time for the House to get its house in order.

Bulls Snort And Bears Grunt

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — At least 100 distinctly different reasons have been offered by stock market bulls and bears in defense of their position over the past few months and all it adds up to is that bulls snort and bears grunt.

A quick survey of what have been offered as erudite theories and forecasts shows that neither bull nor bear has any special insight into the human and economic mechanisms that move the market.

The truth is that the market really hasn't moved very much in either direction since sometime last February, despite the forecasts of either imminent boom or recessionary gloom. It is stuck in its tracks.

The imagination of the forecasters has not been dulled, however. They have called into service every human activity, almost every institution and certainly every official government report, in support of their views.

What one can safely conclude, it seems, is that the market really doesn't reflect world events on a day-to-day basis, as many of the forecasters claim, but is instead a product of some underlying mass psychology.

That psychology does change, of course, but it hardly seems likely that investors on any particular day will be plunged into gloom or raised to ecstatic heights by what happens in the Mideast or in the Commerce Department.

Those reasons, it would appear, often are offered simply because the people in the stock market demand explanations, they insist on answers, ignoring the realization that if there were answers there would really be no market.

A market requires buyers and sellers, each possessed of enough money and conviction to seek to do something about the future, in which none of us has ever lived, and come back to report on what lies ahead.

It is this uncertainty that supports the market, that makes it, in theory anyway, an assemblage of random beliefs. And it is this uncertainty that permits such an outpouring of stock market opinion.

Looking back over some of those opinions offered during the past four months, one must conclude that contrary to the widespread notion, there is plenty that is free on Wall Street — but all of it is opinion.

Meanwhile, the most popular average of all, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, flirts with 1,000 points, sometimes exceeding the figure but never for long.

Through all the hostilities in the Mideast, despite continued inflation and unemployment, regardless of the tightening of the money supply by the Federal Reserve, in spite of Washington scandals, it hasn't dropped.

Through all the bright pronouncements of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, in spite of hefty corporate profits, in defiance of the theory election years make good markets, it hasn't risen very much.

Does anybody have the answer? Looking back over the forecasts made since February you'd probably be inclined to think that somebody must have the answer but that even that person probably doesn't know he has it.

Somewhere in those 100 distinctly different explanations there's a useable one, but which one, which one?

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are indicated today for the western halves of Oregon and Washington, the upper Great Lakes, from the Midwest to the Mid-Atlantic region and for northern New England. It'll be warm for most of the nation. (AP Wirephoto Map)

By The Associated Press
The National Weather Service says temperatures for July in North Carolina will be below normal, and rainfall will be above normal.
The average maximum temperature for the month is 87.7 degrees, and the average minimum is 67.2.
An average of 5.08 inches of rain falls in North Carolina during July.
It was foggy this morning. After the fog lifted, skies were partly cloudy. Scattered showers fell in the mountains.
High temperatures reached into the 80s again.
It will be fair tonight, with lows in the 60s. There's the possibility of some fog forming by sunrise Wednesday.
A weak high-pressure ridge now over the Southeastern states will slowly tend to break down as a cold front from the North-Central states gets closer. This will begin to affect North Carolina by Wednesday afternoon. It will cause a more moist flow of southwesterly air, increasing the chances of showers and thundershowers. They will be more numerous over the mountains and southeast coast, and widely scattered in central North Carolina.

Winds offshore will be southwesterly at 10 to occasionally 20 knots through Wednesday. Waves will be two feet or less through tonight.
The front will move across the state Thursday, causing more numerous showers in all sections. Skies will be clearing by Friday and fair on Saturday.
Temperatures will cool after the front passes, with highs in the 80s in the east and the 70s over the mountains. Overnight lows still will be mostly in the 60s, except for some 50s in the mountains.

By DALLAS LEE
Associated Press Writer
ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Jimmy Carter's aides claimed a presidential campaign record when they collected $232,000 at a $1,000-a-plate dinner Monday night. They gloated over exceeding a similar Carter extravaganza in Texas.
"We've got $232,000 in cash," said Wallace Hyde, chairman of the fund-raising dinner. "I think it's the largest of any campaign."
The final count could go higher, he said, claiming a crowd beyond expectation caused some confusion.
"It's been hard to keep up with everyone who came through the gate," he said. "Some people brought their money with them."
A Carter fund-raiser in Dallas, Tex., earlier this month netted $220,000 said campaign aides of the Democratic presidential frontrunner.
"Asheville has only about 62,000 people," said Hyde, 52, an Asheville insurance man. "Dallas had 844,401 in the 1970 census."
Although Carter heaped particular praise on North Carolina supporters, there were paying guests from South Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, Virginia and West Virginia as well, said Hyde.
Carter, former Georgia governor has enough pledged delegates to give him a first-ballot victory at the Democratic National Convention next month. He said his March 23rd primary victory in North Carolina was a key factor.
He said his March 23rd primary victory in North Carolina was a key factor.
"It was a tremendous boost," he said in an interview. "You can't imagine how it boosted the campaign all over the nation. The victory over Wallace in Florida was so narrow."
On the heels of the slim Florida victory, Carter vanquished

Alabama Gov. George Wallace by attracting 54 per cent of the votes in North Carolina.
The Asheville production was sponsored by Hyde; Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., and several other supporters. It was held on the lawn of the palatial home of William A. V. Cecil, president of Biltmore Estate. The estate, a 250-room French Renaissance mansion with 1,200 acres of land and gardens, was built in the 1890s by magnate George W. Vanderbilt. It is now open to the public.
Carter addressed the tent-covered crowd briefly. He produced a few chuckles when he stated, in a serious tone: "I've done a good job getting votes. I'm not a good fund raiser."
He drew applause when he expressed assurance of winning the fall campaign, saying, "My goal is to carry all 50 states."
Joel McCleary, 28, of Asheville, Carter's finance chairman for the Western states and North Carolina, said he was most proud of Macon County in the mountains of western North Carolina. The county had a population of 15,788 in the 1970 census and, "Those people have raised more than 12 individual states," he said. "They brought 10 people at $1,000 apiece."
He credited Democratic party stalwart Oscar Ledford of Macon County, calling him the "Mayor Daley of western North Carolina."
Carter was accompanied by his wife, by national finance chairman Marris Dees of Alabama, and a team of Secret Service agents. He did not comment on many specific issues in his North Carolina visit. He spoke instead in the warm, evangelistic tone that has characterized his campaign.
As he and his family have campaigned, he said, "We have found that there's one thing that hasn't changed, and that is that basic common sense, sound judgment and moral character, and deep dedication and patriotism and concern about one another, and high standards of excellence and greatness still exist in the minds and hearts of Americans."
"If we politicians can just measure up to that, we'll have a great country again." Earlier publicity on the Asheville dinner stated that the purpose was to raise funds to pay back some $15,000 in donations from Morgan and 14 other contributors to Carter's Maryland campaign.
The North Carolina senator denied that.
"We were planning this already," he said. "In the Maryland primary, they got in a jam and needed money. Fifteen of us got together and gave $1,000 each, as sort of an advance."
Morgan addressed the airport crowd shortly after Carter's arrival.
"This crowd looks like a good start for the fall campaign," he said. "With the kind of candidate we have in Jimmy Carter, I believe we'll be able to put up a united front if we don't take anything for granted."
Carter's sister, Mrs. Ruth Stapleton of Fayetteville, N.C., also addressed the crowd. She said the North Carolina primary was "the first great, great victory for Jimmy. I believe it was a turning point."
Carter's Asheville visit was one of eight fund-raising events planned in major U.S. cities before July 7.

wearing helmets prevents accidents and promotes safety, or that the helmets detract so much from a cyclist's vision, hearing and sixth sense of other vehicles that they do more harm than good. The American Motorcycle Association, which presumably has the best interests of its 140,000 members at heart, flatly opposes the requirement.
As a matter of law, the requirement strikes me as a gross invasion of both states' rights and personal liberty. Appellate courts in Illinois, Idaho, Arizona and Michigan have found the secretary's order unconstitutional. Trial courts in at least six other states have taken the same view. Granted, many more states have upheld the edict; I find their reasoning bizarre.
As a matter of principle, the supporting rationales no more than Orwellian humbug. The idea is that without a helmet, the cyclist is more accident-prone; if he has an accident, public funds must be spent to clear the road and to cart him to a hospital; thus all taxpayers have an interest in requiring that helmets be worn. But this spurious reasoning, once accepted, could be extended infinitely. There is no human pursuit that does not carry some risk of accident. The smothering solicitude of Big Government, as manifested in this pompous compulsion, is what liberals tend to support and conservatives tend to oppose.
The tale has a happy ending. Last fall, Senator Jesse Helms (R-N.C.) and Congressman Stewart B. McKinney (D-Conn.) began fighting for an amendment to Section 402 that would specifically prohibit the imposition of a safety helmet requirement on the states. Conservatives don't win many battles, but they do win a few. They won this one, and a few weeks ago the amendment was signed into law.
But it took nine years to wipe out the arrogant edict. Nine years! Is it any wonder that candidates who oppose Big Government are pop-pop-popping along?

Farm Scene

What are "farm retail price spreads" and how do they affect you—the consumer.
If you bought a T-bone steak at $2.00 a pound, for example, a large part of what you paid falls between the farmer and your shopping bag. The farmer received only about 40 cents a pound for the steak from which the T-bone steak came. The difference in price between the steak and steer is an illustration of a "farm retail price spread."
Your T-bone starts out as part of a live animal, usually a steer weighing around 1000 pounds. The farmer sells the steer for 40 cents a pound (if the market is good).
The steer goes to a packer where it is dressed out to a 620 pound carcass. Excluding any value added by the packer's services, the carcass is worth 64.5 cents a pound.
After being cut and packaged, at which time some bone and fat have been removed and some moisture and meat are lost during the process, there is only 440 pounds of marketable meat. This meat now has a value of 91 cents a pound.
Add to the 91 cents a pound about 8 cents for slaughtering, 4 cents for transportation from slaughter house to actual store, 21 cents for labor to cut and package the retail cuts, 5 cents for packaging material, and about 2 cents for advertisement. With a little profit for each of the companies involved, you now have 440 pounds of meat to be marketed at approximately $1.40 a pound.
Why then did the T-bone steak sell for $2.00 a pound? Of the 440 pounds of usable meat, only 16 pounds are T-bone steaks. The other 424 pounds, chuck roasts, ground beef, and stew meat sell for less. So, if you average out the hamburger at 84 cent a pound, the T-bone at $2.00 a pound, and all other cuts, you come up with $1.40 per pound.
This example shows why there is such a "spread" between what the farmer receives for the live animal and what the consumer pays for the packaged ready-to-cook cut of meat.

HELMET PROTEST — Thousands of motorcyclists gathered in Madison Sunday for a rally protesting the state law requiring them to wear helmets. Estimates as high as 20,000 individuals and 11,500 motorcycles taking part in the protest were made. There were arrests, afterwards, of cyclists who rode home sans helmet. (AP Wirephoto)

Two Advertising Firm Associates Are Indicted

RALEIGH (AP) — Two associates in the company that handles North Carolina's advertising have been indicted by a grand jury on charges of conspiring to overbill the state.
Jerome H. Louchheim, president of Capital Communications of N.C. Inc., and Harry Julian Eng, a partner in the company, were charged Monday with conspiring to falsely bill the state for purported costs in handling the state's advertising contract.
Louchheim, who handled Gov. James E. Holshouser Jr.'s campaign advertising in 1972, was also indicted for fraudulently overbilling the state and on eight individual counts of feloniously obtaining property by false pretense between Dec. 4, 1973 and Sept. 1, 1974.
If convicted Louchheim could face up to 90 years in prison.
According to the indictments, the total amount falsely received by Capital Communications was $5,577.90.
More indictments may come from the investigation, Dist. Atty. Burley B. Mitchell Jr. said. He had requested the State Bureau of Investigation months.

One reform which the Democratic Caucus ordered to be considered by the full House would strip the Administration Committee of the power former chairman Hays won for it in 1971 to increase members' expense allowances.
In approving that resolution last Friday, the Administration Committee defied caucus orders and tacked all of the other reforms onto it so the House would be able to consider them all, not just one.
When the committee considered an other resolution Monday giving the House the ability to take back the authority Hays won, the panel voted 12 to 10 to also tack all the reforms onto it.
But the committee failed on a tie 11 to 11 vote to report out the new resolution. Thompson said the panel left it up to the Rules Committee whether to send the House a resolution giving members final say on all the charges or a resolution which he interpreted as letting them decide only the issue of removing power from the Administration Committee.

What is certain is that Assad's failure has brought the Mideast to another critical turn in the road, with the U.S. powerless to affect events.

Collapsed Bridge Again Fell During Repair Job

LAGRANGE, N.C. (AP) — A bridge under repair from a collapse June 17 collapsed again eight days later, last Friday, June 25, throwing workers and steel beams into the muddy, nine-foot-deep Neuse River.
Two men working on the Rockford Bridge on Jones Road, Secondary Road 1002, six miles south of LaGrange, were injured slightly.
One was Jatha Campbell, Lenoir County bridge supervisor, who received head lacerations and a cracked rib. The other was an unidentified worker on loan from Pitt County's bridge maintenance crew. He had bruise on the head and on a leg.
The Lenoir and Pitt County bridgecrews had nearly completed jacking up two connecting sections of the bridge's southern end when the southern section dropped about six feet. This was about two feet lower than the amount it had dropped on June 17. The northern section being jacked up did not fall.
Campbell said he and other workmen were underneath the bridge operating a jack when the collapse occurred. Steel beams being intalled began cracking as the collapse started. Workmen on top of the bridge jumped to safety into the river. Everyone was wearing life preservers.
"I heard something crack, and the next thing I knew I was fighting steel," Campbell said at his home, where he is recovering.
Five 200-ton jacks fell into the river along with steel beams.
A crane moved tree limbs and other debris so the injured man from Pitt County could be freed.
Campbell said the bridge fell because one of the steel pieces being used to hold it up temporarily while it was being jacked fell out of position.
A day before the second collapse, Campbell had predicted the bridge would be ready for reopening in three to four weeks. Now that schedule has been set back. State engineers

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market edged upward today, showing a bit of encouragement over a sharp rise in the government's index of leading economic indicators.

Trading was fairly quiet. The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up 1.97 at 999.35. Gainers held a 7-5 edge on losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

At the opening the Commerce Department said its leading indicators index climbed 1.4 per cent in May for its biggest increase in 10 months.

The data was taken as a favorable omen for the progress of the recovery from the recession.

But at the same time, analysts said, there appeared to be some concern that an up-trend at such a sharp rate might bring with it renewed upward pressure on inflation and interest rates.

Colt Industries was the most active NYSE issue, down 1/4 at 55 1/2. A 51,000-share block traded at that price in the over-the-counter market.

Atlantic Richfield rose 1 1/4 to 103 1/4 on top of a 1-point gain Monday, when directors approved a 2-for-1 stock split and an increased cash dividend.

The Big Board's composite common-stock index gained .13 to 55.36 in the first hour. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .09 at 105.01.

'Printless' Inmate Dies

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The "man without fingerprints" for more than 40 years has died in a South Carolina prison.

Robert James Pitts, a North Carolina native with a string of criminal convictions dating back to the 1930s, died Saturday at the South Carolina Central Correctional Institution at Columbia of an apparent heart attack. The death was disclosed Monday.

Pitts, about 62 at the time of his death, had his fingerprints removed by a New Jersey surgeon in the 1930s because of his tendency to forget to blot out the clues. He later said the operation was a mistake because instead of the anonymity he had sought, he was soon well known as "the man without fingerprints."

He had gotten the idea from a fellow inmate at Alcatraz where he was serving time for a 1932 auto theft. The prisoner told him about the doctor who wanted to experiment with the process.

The operation, described as lengthy and painful, involved having skin from his fingers removed. Then, his fingers were pressed to his chest for three months until skin from the chest with no prints grew on his fingertips.

After the surgery he left only a smudge instead of prints when he touched something.

Pitts, however, never had much of a chance to reap the benefits from the surgery. In 1941 during a routine roundup of possible draft dodgers, Pitts was picked up. Police were amazed to find he had no fingerprints. But, they were able to identify him through other means. And, from then on, he was branded as "the man without fingerprints."

At the time of his death, he was serving a life sentence for the 1969 murder of a York, S.C., businessman during a robbery.

Former Judge To Be Charged

The prosecutor has quoted Carswell as denying any wrongdoing.

Carswell was arrested in a wooded area north of Tallahassee. He had driven to the area with vice officer George Greene after they met at a shopping mall men's room, according to authorities.

Three vice squad officers had staked out the men's room after merchants complained of homosexual activities there, Morrison said.

Greene filed an official report on the arrest Monday. He said Carswell touched him during the course of the car ride, but he did not describe the physical contact allegedly made.

Carswell's Supreme Court nomination by former President Richard M. Nixon was defeated by the Senate in 1970. Carswell is married and has four children.

Carswell, 56, checked into the hospital for what officials there called a nervous condition. He was admitted shortly after his arrest last Thursday.

Morrison said he could prove battery, a misdemeanor punishable by up to one year in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Indictments Confer July 12 On Selling Schedules

WILMINGTON (AP) — A Superior Court judge has upheld the indictments charging former U.S. Rep. James B. Gardner Jr. of Rocky Mount and Wilmington businessman Peter MacQueen with violating state securities laws.

Superior Court Judge Perry Martin heard arguments Monday from the defendants that pretrial publicity initiated by the state would make it impossible for them to receive a fair trial in New Hanover County.

But if they sincerely believed they could not get a fair trial there, Martin ruled, they should have requested a continuance, a special jury call or a change of venue.

A New Hanover County grand jury indicted Gardner and MacQueen March 29 for allegedly offering for sale and selling securities in 1973 without first having registered with the secretary of state as a dealer.

The securities involved shares in a limited partnership to be called Family Inns of Rowland, according to the state.

Each charge carries a maximum penalty of five years imprisonment and a $1,000 fine.

Investigating Explosion

Greenville Police and Fire Department officials are continuing their investigation of an explosion that heavily damaged a house at 1402 Chestnut St. last night.

Officials said fire department units were called to the scene at 9:45 p.m. and found that an explosion had ripped through the home, damaging both interior and exterior walls.

A preliminary investigation of the incident last night by Police, Fire Prevention Bureau inspectors and representatives of the Greenville Utilities Commission indicated that the blast resulted from a buildup of gas in the walls of the dwelling.

Police investigators said no leaks in the gas lines serving the home were found by utilities employees following the damaging blast.

The Flue-Cured Tobacco Advisory Committee will meet July 12 in Raleigh to make recommendations on flue-cured tobacco selling schedules.

The July 12 meeting is open to the public and will be held at 1 p.m. in the laboratory of AMS' Tobacco Division, Room 223, Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corporation, 1306 Annapolis Dr.

The committee will also recommend geographical boundaries and the market opening dates for Areas D and E. Last year, Area D included Northern Middle Belt markets and Area E included the North Carolina Virginia Old Belt markets.

Marketing areas are established by creating geographic boundaries based on production.

At a June 17 meeting in Raleigh, the committee recommended geographical boundaries for marketing areas A, B and C. Area A would include all Georgia-Florida markets. All South Carolina border-North Carolina markets except Fayetteville would make up Area B, and all Eastern North Carolina and Southern Middle Belt markets plus Fayetteville would comprise Area C. These recommendations have been adopted by USDA.

Recommended opening dates are July 8 for Area A, July 13 for Area B and July 20 for Area C.

The show, sponsored by the Greenville Jaycees, will open daily from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. and will feature the works of 45 North Carolina craftsmen from all parts of the state.

Some of the crafts being shown include leather, quilting, paintings, silversmithing, lapidary, and ceramics.

East Carolina Picks Welborn As Assistant Athletic Director

John Welborn, head wrestling coach at East Carolina University for the past nine years, has been named assistant athletic director for the school, effective July 1.

The announcement of Welborn's appointment was made this morning by Athletic Director Bill Cain.

"It is with a great deal of pleasure that I announce John's appointment," Cain said.

"With his success in athletics, he'll be a great asset to our program in this new capacity. He's well known in the athletic circles and has made a fine name for himself."

Cain added that Welborn will continue to coach the East Carolina wrestling team.

"I feel very privileged that I would be considered for this job," Welborn said. "I am happy that the administration has placed its confidence in me to do this job. After nine years with East Carolina as a coach, I have strong feelings about the university, and if I can help the university further in this capacity, I'm happy to do so."

"Bill Cain and I have worked closely during the past years, and we will continue to do so in this new relationship."

During his nine-year tenure as the East Carolina wrestling coach, Welborn has amassed an amazing record. He has a record of 84-10-3 during that period for a 89.4 percentage. His teams have won the Southern Conference wrestling tournament for the past five years, and East Carolina is the only school ever to have accomplished a five-year sweep. He has been Southern Coach of the Year for the past three years, since the award was instituted.

He also served as golf coach from 1968 to 1973, winning two league titles, finishing second three times and third once. He also coached soccer in 1967 and 1968.

A 1956 graduate of Appalachian High School in Boone, Welborn received his BS in physical education from Appalachian State University in 1964 after attending two years at UNC-Chapel Hill. He also received his masters in education from ASU in 1967.

He served as assistant wrestling coach at that university for one year, then spent three years at Alexandria Central School at Alexandria Bay, N.Y., as athletic director, head football, golf and wrestling coach. He returned to ASU in 1966, serving another year as assistant wrestling coach prior to coming to East Carolina in 1967.

While in high school he was a three-time state champion in wrestling, in addition to playing four years of football and baseball and two years of tennis.

He was undefeated as a freshmen wrestler at UNC, and added unbeaten years as a junior and senior at ASU picking up the North Carolina AAU title his senior year. While in service, he served as captain of the Fort Lewis team, where he was named to the All-Army team.

Welborn is married to the former Christa Brundl, and is the father of three children, Pamela 17, Johnny 13, and Christa Lynn 9.

Under his new position at East Carolina, Welborn will be primarily responsible for the non-revenue sports programs.

NEW ASSISTANT AD—John Welborn, for nine years wrestling coach at East Carolina University, was named today to fill the post of assistant athletic director at the school. Welborn will continue as wrestling coach as well as overseeing the non-revenue sports program of the university.

Carolina Dairy, NCNB Post Wins

Carolina Dairy and NCNB each picked up victories in the Babe Ruth League last night as the final week of the first season opened.

Carolina Dairy nipped Home Builders, 5-4, while NCNB took an 8-5 win over College View.

Champion Carolina Dairy, playing without their top players for most of the game, took the lead in the second. Lenn Jackson walked and Steve Smith singled, with Jackson scoring on an error on the play.

Home Builders came back to tie it up in the bottom of the inning. Jay Wood reached on an error and stole second. A balk moved him to third, and he scored when Jimmy Stallings grounded out.

Carolina Dairy came back in the fourth to score the go-ahead run. Kragie Gardiner reached on a fielder's choice and moved to third when Mitch Meeks singled. The two pulled a double steal with Gardiner scoring.

Another double steal brought a run in the fifth. George Wilson doubled and moved to third when Wayne Stokes reached on an error. The two then pulled off the twin theft for a 3-1 lead.

Two final runs scored in the sixth. Smart singled and stole second, and Gardiner got a hit, then moved up on a passed ball. Mitch Meeks walked to lead them up, and Skip Hill reached on an infield hit, scoring Smart. Gardiner scored when Wilson's infield fly was errored.

Home Builders rallied for three in the bottom of the seventh, however. Mickey McGrath singled and Doug Nichol reached on an error, scoring McGrath. Reggie Selby beat out an infield hit, and a double by Ronnie Chapman drove both in, but the rally died there.

Smart had three hits, while Hill and Wilson each had two for Carolina Dairy. Selby and Chapman each had two for Home Builders.

NCNB pushed over three runs in the second inning to move ahead. Glenn Moore and Don McGlohon both walked, as did Mike Campbell. Cliff Fearington's grounder was played to home, but errored, allowing both Moore and McGlohon to score. A wild pitch scored Campbell.

In the third, two more crossed. Moore singled and McGlohon walked. Both moved up on an out, scoring on a hit by Fearington.

The fourth saw NCNB run its lead to 6-0. Mark Shank doubled and scored on a hit by Will Barrett.

In the sixth, NCNB got another. Howard Wilkerson walked, moved up on an out and scored on two wild pitches.

College View rallied for five in the bottom of the sixth. John Haynes walked and hits by Ricky West and H. L. Austin loaded the bases. Henry Wooten singled in Haynes and West, and Patrick Wilson reached on a fielder's choice, getting Wooten at second. Marshall Crumpler was hit by a pitch, and a walk to Jimmy Clemmons forced in Austin. Mark Jones singled in Wilson and Crumpler, but it ended there.

NCNB then added one in the seventh.

Barrett led the NCNB hitting with two, while West had two for College View.

Tony Oliva Shrugs Off Pain To Deliver Killing Blow To Royals

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

There still is plenty of whip in his bat. There still are a few running strides left in his cranky legs though Tony Oliva's ravaged right knee has caused him agony that might have shelved others.

"Most people would never put up with the pain or put in the work he has just to play this game," marveled Minnesota Manager Gene Mauch after the 35-year-old designated hitter helped the Twins beat the Kansas City Royals 4-3 Monday night.

That's why the fans stand and cheer when Oliva comes to bat at Metropolitan Stadium. The three-time batting champion is the sole remaining link to the glory days of Twins baseball when he and Harmon Killebrew tore up American League pitching.

"I think Tony still hopes he'll be able to play every day again," says Mauch, who knows that will never happen because of seven operations on the tortured right knee — two of which came in 11 days. "Can you think of many people you'd rather see hitting in the clutch?"

Oliva walked to the plate in such a situation in the eighth inning Monday night, with the Twins down a run and Lyman Bostock on first base. He bounced a Mark Littell pitch off the right-field fence for a double, scoring Bostock, then pushed all he could on that game right leg and chugged into third base during the Kansas City throw home.

Covering the last 90 feet was left to Jerry Terrell, who pinched for Oliva and scored the game-winning run on Larry Hise's sacrifice fly.

In the other AL games Monday night, Boston battered Baltimore 12-8; Cleveland bested Milwaukee 5-3; Texas beat Oakland 3-2 in 11 innings, and Detroit downed New York 5-1.

Red Sox 12, Orioles 8
Boston rookie Butch Hobson — inserted in a shaken-up starting lineup after his arrival from the minors — celebrated with a double and a tie-breaking, two-run, inside-the-park homer as the Red Sox ripped the Orioles.

The victory went to veteran Ferguson Jenkins, 6-8, who made his first appearance as a reliever since 1970 and struck out eight over the final four innings.

Indians 5, Brewers 3
John Lowenstein and George Hendrick each slammed a home run as Cleveland handed the Brewers their fifth consecutive loss and ninth in 11 games. The Indians have won 13 of their last 19.

Rangers 3, A's 2
Jeff Burroughs looped a one-out single to center field in the bottom of the 11th inning to score Lenny Randle from second base and give Texas its victory over Oakland.

Gene Clines' two-run single in the bottom of the eighth inning had given the Rangers a 2-0 lead, but the A's tied it in the top of the ninth when Don Baylor and Gene Tenace hit home runs.

Oakland's Mike Norris had pitched 6 2-3 innings of perfect baseball until Mike Hargrove singled to left in the bottom of the seventh.

Tigers 5, Yankees 1
Rusty Staub and Aurelio Rodriguez slammed home runs to back a seven-hit victory for rookie Mark Fidrych, who won his eighth game in nine decisions as Detroit ended a five-game New York winning streak.

The Citadel To Stick With Southern Loop

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP)—The Citadel has decided not to join the ranks of teams leaving the Southern Conference, at least not for awhile.

Citadel president Lt. Gen. George M. Seignious II said Monday the school's athletic advisory committee had recommended the military institution retain its affiliation with the Southern Conference and continue efforts to gain Division 1 football status in the NCAA's proposed reclassification.

"The committee was unanimous in recommending that we be classified Division 1 in football and play within a conference, preferably a strong Southern Conference."

He said The Citadel may learn this week if its recommended 1-A listing by the NCAA's classification committee had been overturned.

"We are vehemently opposed to being classified a 1-A school and we've made a strong appeal to be classified a Division 1 school," Seignious said.

He said he and the school's alumni feel that The Citadel has a Division 1 football program. "We'll do whatever is necessary to maintain that classification," he said.

The NCAA presently functions within three classifications. The Citadel competes as a Division 1 football member, as do Southern Conference rivals East Carolina, Appalachian State, Furman, William and Mary and Virginia Military Institute.

Under the new four-division classification disclosed two weeks ago, only East Carolina and William and Mary were recommended for Division 1 status. Given Division 1-A listings were The Citadel, Appalachian, Furman, VMI and conference newcomers Marshall, Western Carolina and the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga. Davidson drew a Division 2 listing.

East Carolina, William and Mary, VMI and Davidson have announced they will withdraw from the conference in 1977.

The entire NCAA membership will vote on the reclassification proposal in January.

Seignious said, "It doesn't seem in our best interests to leave the conference until we learn where we will be classified and until we see if the proposed reclassification passes."

"We believe the reclassification will never be implemented. We have reason to think some schools who earlier announced they were leaving the conference will return if there is no reclassification. If there is a reclassification, we still have an alternative to seek a new conference six months from now," he said.

A-G Takes Game

LITTLEFIELD—Dennis Cristiano pitched a four-hitter and slapped a double in the fifth keying a three-run rally as Ayden-Griffon took a 3-1 Senior Babe Ruth League victory over Bill Clifton, last night.

Clifton had taken the lead with a run in the top of the fifth when Curtis Clemmons scored on an error on Clifton Clemmons's single to right.

A-G got the lead and the win in the bottom of the inning. Al Butts and Paul Ricciardi walked and both scored on Cristiano's double. Ned Craft singled but Cristiano was thrown out scoring. Craft moved around and scored on an error.

Cristiano struck out eight and gave up four hits.

Lions Upset Optimists, 6-5

The Lions came up with three runs in the sixth inning and pulled out a 6-5 upset victory over the regular season champion Optimists in the finals of the North State Playoffs yesterday.

The win will send the Lions into the City Tournament for a best-of-three series against the Exchange, winners in the Tar Heel League. That will begin Wednesday at Elm Street Park.

The Lions pushed in three runs in the top of the third to take the initial lead. Scott Galloway reached on a double and Roger Williams walked. Troy Hudson singled, driving in Galloway. Marshall Rand walked, as did Chris Smith, scoring Williams. Hudson then stole home for the 3-0 lead.

The Optimists came roaring back to score four in the bottom of the inning, however. Kenny Kirkland singled and Paul MacMillan doubled. Jeff Porter walked, loading the bases. John Hause then singled in two runs, and Tony Heath reached on an error, scoring the other two.

The Optimists added another tally in the fourth for a 5-3 edge. Andy Holloman walked, and moved to third on two passed balls. Sammy Hodges reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Holloman.

But in the sixth, the Lions came back to life to score three runs and pull off the upset.

Burney Carraway walked, as did Patric Land. Robert Still then ran for Land. Galloway singled, scoring Carraway and Williams walked, loading the bases. Hudson reached on an error, allowing both Still and Galloway to score, moving the Lions back ahead by one.

They held off an Optimist rally that left the tying run on third and the winning one on second in the bottom of the inning.

Galloway led the Lion hitting with two, while no one had more than one for the Optimists.

One Thing Sure At Wimbledon: There'll Be New Set Of Champs

By HARVEY HUDSON
Associated Press Writer
WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The Wimbledon tennis tournament, just into the second week of its 99th year, already has been assured something new this year — a new set of champions.

Some of last year's winners have tried to repeat and failed. Others didn't come back for another chance at what are considered tennis' most prestigious prizes.

When Vitas Gerulaitis of New York ousted Arthur Ashe in the fourth round, a new men's singles champion was assured. Billie Jean King announced after winning the women's singles for the sixth time last year that she would not be back to defend the title.

Ross Case and Geoff Masters of Australia, after losing the first two sets, came back and beat Gerulaitis and Sandy Mayer of Wayne, N.J., the men's doubles titleholders, in the quarter-finals Monday. The Australians won 3-6, 4-6, 9-8, 6-3, 6-1.

Kazuko Sawamatsu of Japan did not return this year to defend the women's doubles crown she won with Ann Kiyomura of San Mateo, Calif., last year. Miss Kiyomura is playing doubles this year with Mona Guerrant of Tempe, Ariz.

Margaret Court of Australia did not return to defend the mixed doubles title she won last year with Marty Riessen of Amelia Island, Fla.

With Ashe out of the running in the men's singles, Jimmy Connors has been made the favorite to capture the title he won in 1974 and lost in the final last year to Ashe.

Ilie Nastase of Romania, the temporarily reformed bad boy of tennis, now is the co-second choice, along with Roscoe Tanner of Lookout Mountain, Tenn. Tanner, with his lightning service that has been clocked at 140 miles per hour, met Connors today in the men's singles quarter-finals.

In other men's quarter-final matches, Gerulaitis faced Raul Ramirez of Mexico, Nastase faced Charles Pasarell of Puerto Rico, and Guillermo Vilas of Argentina played Bjorn Borg of Sweden.

Borg and Vilas, friends and doubles partners, withdrew from the doubles because of injuries. Borg has complained of a strained stomach muscle that forces him to play with anti-pain injections. Vilas has a sore wrist.

Chris Evert of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., was the only American survivor into the women's singles semifinals, but she was an even-money favorite to regain the title she won in 1974. Miss Evert beat Olga Morozova of the Soviet Union 6-3, 6-0 in Monday's quarter-finals.

Other women's quarter-final results: Virginia Wade, Britain, beat Kerry Reid, Australia, 6-4, 6-2; Evonne Goolagong, Australia, defeated Rosemary Casals, San Francisco, 7-5, 6-3, and Martina Navratilova, Czechoslovakia, outlasted Sue Barker, Britain, 6-3, 3-6, 7-5.

In Wednesday's semifinals, it will be Miss Evert against Miss Navratilova, and Mrs. Wade against Miss Goolagong. The winners meet Friday for the title.

Oliver's Hopes Ride With Pittsburgh Fans

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Sports Writer

Al Oliver, who is only the National League's leading hitter, is watching the votes just like Gerald Ford and Ronald Reagan; but the only chance he has of going to the All-Star Game is as a favorite son of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"I am a little disappointed that I'm not higher on the list," Oliver said after driving in four runs with two singles, a double and his 12th homer as the Pirates trounced the Chicago Cubs 9-2 Monday night.

That boosted his batting average to .352, but according to the latest All-Star voting announced Monday Oliver stands only 12th among NL outfielders.

It's not as if Oliver suddenly arrived on the scene. He began the season with a .292 career average and 1,172 hits, more than any active player his age — he's 29 — except Cincinnati's Johnny Bench, who had 74 more hits ... in 580 more at-bats.

"For seven years, I've been playing as well as I can and have contributed a lot to this team," Oliver said. "But for some reason, I just don't seem to get the votes."

In other NL action, the Philadelphia Phillies whipped the Montreal Expos 6-2, the Cincinnati Reds downed the San Diego Padres 7-3, the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Atlanta Braves 5-2, the Houston Astros drubbed the San Francisco Giants 8-2 and the New York Mets edged the St. Louis Cardinals 5-4.

Phillies 6, Expos 2
Garry Maddox celebrated the birth of a son by driving in three runs and Mike Schmidt hit his 21st home run in support of Steve Carlton's six-hit pitching. Maddox was informed in the top of the eighth that his wife had given birth to the couple's second son.

Reds 7, Padres 3
Joe Morgan drove in four runs with three hits, including his 13th homer of the season. Willie McCovey hit a three-run homer to give San Diego the early lead, but Morgan tied the score with a three-run homer in the third inning. Before San Diego starter Alan Foster could get out of the inning, a single by George Foster and a double by Tony Perez pushed across the go-ahead Cincinnati run.

Dodgers 5, Braves 2
Lee Lacy broke a tie with a sacrifice fly in the seventh inning and Bill Buckner followed with a homer. Bill Russell's two-run single in the sixth inning broke up a scoreless duel between unbeaten Rick Rhoden, 7-0, and Dick Ruthven.

Astros 8, Giants 2
Cliff Johnson knocked in three runs with a pair of doubles and Mike Cosgrove struck out 10 while pitching six strong innings. Johnson's two-run double gave the Astros a 2-0 lead in the second inning. Jose Cruz added a two-run single for Houston while Bob Watson had a two-run double.

Mets 5, Cardinals 4
A wild pitch by St. Louis relief ace Al Hrabosky with two out in the eighth inning allowed Dave Kingman to score from third base with the winning run. Earlier, Kingman increased his major league home run lead with his 26th of the season and John Milner added a two-run single, but Tom Seaver was unable to hold a 4-1 lead.

Judo Chances Seem Improved

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
BROCKPORT, N.Y. (AP) — High hopes on a realistic level sum up the attitude of the U.S. Olympic judo team as the Montreal Games approach.

"I think our prospects are the best they've ever been," Jim Colgan of Chicago, the team manager, said during training at Brockport State University. "So much depends on the draw. If you draw into the Japanese and Russians right away, you're in trouble."

Japan won three gold medals in the six judo classes in 1972 while the United States has not won a medal in the Olympics or World Championships since 1965. Jimmy Bregman of Washington won a bronze in the 1964 Olympics and another in the 1965 World Championships.

Dr. Sachio Ashida, an associate professor of psychology at Brockport State and the U.S. team coach, is optimistic that the medal drought can end in Montreal.

Dr. Ashida, holder of a seventh degree black belt in judo, said his team will be in top physical condition by the Games and added, "They've already developed top team spirit."

Three of the best medal prospects are James Wooley of Houston, Allen Coage of Plainfield, N.J., and Tommy Martin of Stockton, Calif.

Wooley, a Pan American Games gold medalist, finished fourth in the open division at the 1972 Olympics. There are no weight restrictions in this division, but its competitors usually come from the heavy-weight and 205-pound class ranks.

Coage won a Pan American gold medal as a heavyweight and was described by Colgan as "an outstanding international competitor." Martin was a Pan American champion at 205 pounds.

The other three members of the team are Patrick Burris of Anaheim, Calif., in the 145-pound division; Teimoe Jonston-Ono of New York, 176, and Joseph Bost of Rahway, N.J., 139.

Burris won a bronze medal at last year's Pan American Games and a gold medal at the pre-Olympic competition at Montreal. Jonston-Ono was an alternate on the 1972 Olympic team.

U.S. Olympic Track Selectees Taking Few Days For Breather

By MELINDA S. EDEN
Associated Press Writer
EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — The 90-member U.S. Olympic track and field team — ranging in age from 16 to 38 — will report to training camp at Plattsburg, N.Y. in a week and begin preparation for the Montreal Summer Games.

But for now, the team members selected at the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials — along with friends, relatives, coaches and officials — have gone home for a rest after eight days of competition seen by about 105,000 persons at Hayward Field.

Illness, injury and age prevented some of America's finest athletes from receiving their just rewards after four years of sweat, determination and personal sacrifice. Some will retire.

Hurdlers Ralph Mann, 26, and Jim Bolding, 27, succumbed to younger competitors.

Steve Williams, America's hope for the 100 and 200-meter sprints, went home empty handed. The 22-year-old Florida Track Club star, one of many athletes who suffered hamstring injuries, had been rated a top prospect for the gold medal at Montreal in both dashes.

Bitter disappointment again struck Marty Liquori, 27, who suffered injuries during the 1968 Olympics and before the trials four years ago.

He reinjured a month-old pulled hamstring during the third lap of his 5,000-meter heat. His Olympic hopes ended when he quit on the sixth lap, burying his face in his wife's jacket.

Steeplechaser Mike Manley, who trained in nearby mountains to avoid Eugene's pollen-laden air, fell after striking a barrier in the second lap. The 1972 Olympian injured his right leg and did not finish.

Another steeplechaser, Mike Roche of the New York Athletic Club, crashed over the final barrier in third place. He fell flat but leaped to his feet and, with the crowd cheering wildly, sprinted past Don Timm for the final Olympic berth.

Decathlete Craig Brigham of Oregon, whose debilitating bout with mononucleosis caused pain even when he blinked his eyes just six weeks ago, said he probably would retire.

Brigham, 22, who finished eighth behind world record holder Bruce Jenner, will enter medical school at Northwestern this fall.

There were brighter moments, however, for Rhonda Brady, Jay Silvester and Willie Davenport.

At 16, Miss Brady, who finished first in the women's hurdles, is the youngest member of the U.S. team. Silvester and 20-kilometer walker Ron Laird are the oldest team members at 38.

Silvester, 1972 silver medalist in the discus, and hurdler Davenport, 33, will compete in the Olympics for the fourth time.

Mike Durkin, a law student from Chicago, may win a prize for entertaining the crowd. He tossed his jersey and shoes into the Hayward Field stands after earning the last spot on the 1,500-meter team.

"I would have thrown my shorts, too," Durkin said, "but my mother would die."

Judy Rankin Wins Tourney

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Sports Writer
CHAGRIN FALLS, Ohio (AP) — Slim, blonde Judy Rankin looked beat as she acknowledged her victory to the crowd gathered around the 18th green after the final hole of the $100,000 Babe Zaharias Invitational Golf Tournament.

She trudged to the press room and listened wearily while playing partner JoAnne Carner explained how a gamble on her drive on the 18th hole at tortuous Tanglewood Country Club cost her a chance at victory Monday.

That drive, a typical booming blast by the rugged Mrs. Carner, clipped a dead tree along the left side of the fairway and bounced out of bounds, the beginning of a double-bogey 6.

Mrs. Rankin, apparently under little pressure, played to a conventional par on the hole, finishing the tournament one under par at 287.

That was one stroke ahead of Jane Blalock and three ahead of Mrs. Carner, both of whom began the day tied for second, three strokes off Mrs. Rankin's pace.

The victory was good for $15,000 and a new single-season earnings record of $96,830. That total, with still half the 1976 season to go, broke Mrs. Carner's 1974 mark of $87,094.

"I'm going to leave the tour for a couple of weeks after the next three or four tournaments," said the suddenly animated Mrs. Rankin. "But I want to get over $100,000 before I do, for sure. That's a record I want because nobody else can ever be the first to do it."

Her fourth tournament victory of the year did not come easily, though.

Despite consecutive 69s in the middle two rounds of the 72-hole tournament, Mrs. Rankin almost gave it away on the final day.

Playing in a light rain, the veteran Ladies Professional Golf Association member "quick-hooked" her tee shot on No. 17 into a lateral water hazard. A bad lie caused her to hit a second shot off a cart path near the green, and that led to a double-bogey six that suddenly put both Miss Blalock and Mrs. Carner just one stroke away.

But Miss Blalock was already in the club house, and Mrs. Carner's bad tee shot finished her.

Miss Blalock won $11,000 for her even-par finish, while Mrs. Carner pocketed $7,600.

Grifton Gets Win

GRIFTON—Piggly Wiggly of Grifton took a 4-3 win over Winterville in the Southern Pitt Little League, yesterday.

Bernard Ricciarelli was the winning pitcher striking out 12, walking three and giving up four hits, one a home run by Kevin Battle. Doug McRoy was the losing pitcher.

Six-Year-Old Has Black Belt Briefs

By ELLEN SCHWEPPE
Associated Press Writer
CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Eyes narrowed in concentration, Matt Hodges studied the square board in front of him. He ran, let out a yell and split the one-inch thick pine board with one kick.

Breaking a one-inch board is one of the requirements for becoming a first dan, or degree, black belt holder in karate. Also required are the perfect execution of nine forms, or series of movements, and knowledge of karate terminology and philosophy.

Six-year-old Matt completed all the requirements without a hitch Saturday and became the youngest black belt holder in the history of the United States and possibly in the world.

Matt started when he was 3½ as the youngest student in one of six Korean karate academies owned by Sok Ho Kang in West Virginia.

"I usually don't take them so young," said Kang, a seventh dan black belt holder. "But Matt was mature; he listened to what I told him. He has good discipline and technique for his age."

The forms Matt performed are series of movements incorporating karate blocks and punches. To the untrained eye, they look like carefully choreographed dance steps.

"Each movement has a meaning," Kang explained. "Each form exercises every part of the body and uses different attacks and defenses."

Matt knows the reason for every movement in every form.

"Matt," he called out to the blond boy sparring in the center of the room with an imaginary partner. "What does this mean?" Kang crossed his arms at the wrists and turned sideways.

Matt mimicked the movement and replied, "You do that if someone tries to attack you with a stick."

The terminology Matt recited for his test included the Korean words for the nine forms, various karate movements and such things as the training school, student and training suit. But when the examiner came to the Korean term for karate instructor, kwan chang nim, Matt immediately answered "Master Kang."

"We brought Matt to Master Kang like a piece of clay," said Mrs. Mary Haber, Matt's grandmother. "We gave him to Master Kang to mold. He's not even my daughter's child when he's here. He's Oaster Kang's student."

Matt first became interested in karate when his parents, Robert and Pamela Hodges, took him to a tournament at Morris Harvey College. He decided right then he wanted to become a karate expert.

Matt's has suffered bruised shins and chipped teeth, but he "doesn't back off. He's never cried," said Mrs. Haber.

"Matt's been taught that practice is something he has to do at least three nights a week," she said. "Sometimes he comes four or five nights. His Korean name, Tor-Torie, means he's not afraid of anything, but he knows he's not supposed to practice on other children."

Groucho Happy Clear Drill Instructor And 'Infamous' In Death Of A Recruit

By LEE MARGULIES
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I must say I find television very educational," Groucho Marx once wrote. "The minute somebody turns it on, I go into the library and read a good book."

That was 26 years ago when Groucho was preparing to transfer his three-year-old radio quiz show to the tube. "You Bet Your Life" debuted on NBC-TV on Oct. 5, 1950, and quickly established its wise-cracking host as the star of yet another entertainment medium. Looking at the old black-and-white reruns now, younger viewers probably don't realize — and older folks may have forgotten — that "You Bet Your Life" was one of the country's top rated TV shows or many years. It won Groucho an Emmy, propelled a few contestants into professional careers and was successful enough to be the target of imitations and spoofs.

The book is light-hearted but not facetious and makes for interesting, informative reading. Groucho has located many of the people who worked on the series and includes their recollections as well as Groucho's. He also has compiled some of the great one-liners and exchanges that were aired, which provides a good many laughs.

Among the faithful who watch that old quiz show daily is Groucho himself. At his recent agent's invitation, I visited the famed comedian at his Beverly Hills home last week.

He is 85 now and an old man. The classic stooped walk is out, slow shuffle. The hands are wrinkled and the head is bald. Groucho lowered himself onto living couch after lunch and said he was ready to answer questions. I asked:

He said he enjoys watching the old show and seemed especially pleased that a new generation of children is getting to see it.

But the interview didn't interest him much. He clearly was happiest a short time later leading his visitors on a brief tour of the house and the memories he has stored there.

Earlier he had reminisced a bit about his first Broadway show, "The Man of Her Choice" (1906), and told two stories about Fanny Brice from his vaudeville days. I asked Groucho if he misses those days.

"No," he said, responding emotionally for the first time. "These are the best days now for me. I'm happy and healthy — and successful."

"And famous," added Hector Arce, who was sitting nearby.

Groucho looked at him for a moment and smiled. "Infamous," he said.

In "The Secret Word is Groucho," several persons who were interviewed express wonder that the contestants on Groucho's quiz show never bristled at his insults. Groucho explains that he was only kidding his guests and they understood that and loved it coming from him.

So did I.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A court-martial has acquitted S.Sgt. Harold Bronson, the first of three Marine drill instructors charged in the fatal beating of 20-year-old Pvt. Lynn McClure last December.

Five officers and three enlisted men deliberated for slightly more than three hours Monday before finding Bronson innocent of four charges and specifications in the case.

McClure died March 13 of injuries received when he was knocked out Dec. 6 during a close-combat drill with pugil sticks — padded, 12-pound staffs used to simulate combat with bayonet-equipped rifles. McClure never regained consciousness.

Bronson, a decorated Vietnam war veteran, supervised the drill. All the participants were assigned to the motivation platoon, a punishment unit at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot in San Diego that has since been abolished.

The Freeport, Fla., native was accused of involuntary manslaughter, assault, maltreatment of a recruit and violating an order to conduct close-combat drills only with supervisory officers present.

The acquittal followed testimony by medical experts, character witnesses and ex-recruits who saw or participated in the beating of McClure, who was described during the two-week trial as quarrelsome.

Defense lawyer Daniel Hunter told the court in closing arguments that McClure's death was "regrettable and unforeseeable" and he asked the board to treat it as "a training accident, gentlemen, nothing more, nothing less."

The defense lawyer said afterward that rebuttal testimony by Capt. John B. Ullman, former assistant director of the training branch that supervised McClure's unit, won the case for the drill instructor.

Ullman said a shortage of commissioned officers at the time McClure was injured made it impossible for Bronson to obey regulations requiring the presence of an officer during the mock bayonet fights. Ullman previously was granted immunity in exchange for his testimony and received a letter of reprimand as a result of McClure's death.

Maj. John B. Fretwell, the prosecutor, said the verdict "proves that S.Sgt. Bronson was a superb Marine and the jury believed it."

"I thought I was going to pass out," Bronson himself said after hearing the verdict.

Despite his size — he weighed only 110 lbs. — McClure, of Lufkin, Tex., was forced to defend himself in several successive pugil stick drills against six bigger men.

Bronson was the first of three Marine drill sergeants to face a court-martial as a result of McClure's death. Sgt. Henry Aguilar, 23, another member of the motivation platoon, is to be tried July 6. The third man to be tried, S.Sgt. Henry Wallrath, was a noncommissioned officer in charge of the platoon.

Elvis Retains His Old Magic

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Rock and roller Elvis Presley, now in his 40s, has as great a hold on some present-day young women as he had on their mothers.

Take 21-year-old Jean Hunter. The nursing student at the Guilford Technical Institute says, "I guess you have to compare yourself to a heroin addict or something like that. Once you've seen him, you're just sort of glued to him. The first time I saw him in concert, I was just mesmerized. It's just like an addictive drug. You just want more and more."

Not only will she be on hand at a Presley concert in the Greensboro Coliseum tonight, but she will try to get close to him when he arrives in town. And neither fences or anything else will keep her away.

Last September, when the Presley was in a hospital in Memphis, Miss Hunter and a friend went up to the 18th floor and ducked into a room near his. They convinced the elderly woman in the room to let them act as her visitors, so they could get a glimpse of their idol as he left the hospital. "When she got her look at Presley leaving, 'I started crying. I guess because I was so happy.'"

She and the friend managed to get into the room Presley had just left. The sink was full of what appeared to be his hairs. She cleaned out every one to add to her collection of Presley memorabilia.

And she had her picture taken sitting in the bathtub he used.

She once crawled under a fence that surrounds the Presley mansion in Memphis. The alarm went off, and the guards caught her running toward the mansion.

"I'll keep following him," Miss Hunter says. "People around her think I'm crazy. But there's a lot of people like me. Thousands and thousands of them."

Some day a writer will make a name for himself with a book on the adventures of Trump Coup Tommy. You may remember him: a player who would fail to make the simplest of contracts and on defense throw away thousands of points to the opponents; but give him a hand where the trumps were stacked against him, and Tommy became the Muhammad Ali of the green baize.

For once, Tommy and his partner bid more or less rationally. Tommy did not have quite enough to force to game after his partner had overcalled one no trump, but once North showed he had a near maximum no trump with spade support, Tommy felt he could venture on to game.

West led the ace of diamonds and continued the suit. Tommy discarded a club on dummy's king of diamonds and came to his hand with a diamond ruff. He led a low trump toward dummy, and when West discarded a club, a warm glow suffused his whole being. The situation was tailor-made for Trump Coup Tommy to swing into action.

Declarer called for dummy's ace of spades, cashed the king and ace of hearts and ruffed a heart in dummy. Now he made the crucial play—he cashed the ace of clubs! Had he not taken this precaution, East would have been able to discard his only club when declarer next led a diamond from dummy, and later East would ruff the ace of clubs.

With seven tricks in the bank, declarer now led the remaining diamond off the board, and East was helpless. Since it would not help to ruff with the king of trumps and return a trump, which would have established three trump tricks for South, East stuffed his last heart. Declarer ruffed low, led his last heart and ruffed with the jack of trumps. East overruffed with the king, but there was no way declarer could be stopped from scoring two tricks with the queen-nine of trumps, which were conveniently positioned behind East's ten-eight.

Delegates To Organize

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's 54 delegates and 54 alternates to the Republican National Convention in Kansas City plan to hold their organizational meeting in Greensboro July 11.

The meeting was to have been held immediately after the state GOP convention in Greensboro June 19, but a floor fight over rule changes and the delegate candidacy of Gov. Jim Holshouser extended the convention and the meeting was cancelled.

Most of the delegates and alternates are committed supporters of the presidential candidacy of Ronald Reagan.

Kent Hayes, executive secretary of the state Republican Party, said Monday it appears that Thomas F. Ellis, Raleigh attorney, will be selected chairman of the delegation. Ellis coordinated Reagan's successful North Carolina primary and delegate campaigns.

Worrying Today About The Sparkler's Safety

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

While millions of Americans are looking forward to Fourth of July fireworks displays, the government is worrying about the safety of the sparklers.

New regulations have been proposed to take some of the danger out of some of the more common varieties of firecrackers, but they will not go into effect until next year.

Note: Firecrackers are distinguishable from other types of fireworks in that they are explosive devices whose primary purpose is to produce a loud noise rather than a visual display.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission reports that in 1974, the latest year for which statistics are available, there were 3,300 injuries related to fireworks on July 4 alone. More than 60 per cent of the injuries were caused by firecrackers.

The Office of Consumer Affairs of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare has a few common-sense "Do's and Don'ts" for fireworks use:

—Don't hold fireworks in your hand unless the directions specifically say so.

—Do place the fireworks on a hard, smooth, level surface.

—Use fireworks outdoors only. Children should use fireworks only under close adult supervision.

—If the firework does not go off, wait at least 10 seconds after the fuse stops glowing before approaching it.

—At public displays, stay in designated areas to avoid fumes and sparks.

For further information, you can get a fireworks fact sheet from the Product Safety Commission by calling the group's toll-free hotline at 800-638-2666. Ask for Fact Sheet No. 12 (Maryland residents call 800-492-2937.)

For the future, the Product Safety Commission has issued rules limiting the amount of explosive powder that firecrackers can contain. The rules will go into effect on Dec. 5, 1976, unless there are major objections.

Under the regulations, no firework could contain more than 50 milligrams, equal to less than two one-thousandths of an ounce, of "pyrotechnic composition." (That means powder.)

Fifty milligrams is the amount of powder contained in a seven-eighths inch firecracker usually known as a "ladyfinger." The previous limit was 130 milligrams of powder. Larger firecrackers such as "Cherry Bombs" have been banned for several years.

The latest rules also ban colored sparklers that burn at temperatures as high as 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit and handheld Roman candles.

The new regulations would have no effect on organized displays such as the ones planned in the nation's capital and elsewhere for the Bicentennial. They would not affect local bans in 32 states.

Vaccine-Makers Ask Suit Safeguards

By JANET M. STAIHAR
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Manufacturers of swine flu vaccine are asking Congress to enact legislation providing federal reimbursement for claims filed by persons who might suffer a reaction from the immunization.

The drug producers say insurance companies are refusing to extend full coverage to them for the government's proposed nationwide influenza immunization program.

Leslie Cheek, vice president of federal affairs of the American Insurance Association, said the property-casualty insurance business is concerned over the potential amount of claims that could be filed because of the plan to immunize every person in the nation.

"Assuming that no one swine flu claim is found meritorious, it is conceivable that defense costs alone could range from $9.5 billion to $25 billion," said Cheek.

He expressed the industry's concern about litigation over inadvertent mislabeling and that normal quality control may break down under the pressures of a crash program to produce vaccine.

Cheek also said that "despite the extensive testing that already has been done and the side effects that have been isolated by such testing, some underwriters have indicated uncertainty as to what reactions the vaccine might produce in a larger population over a longer period of time, particularly among the very young and the elderly."

The administration bill would permit the federal government to provide indemnification against claims for injury related to inoculation with vaccine in the influenza immunization program.

Dr. Theodore Cooper, assistant secretary for health in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, testified before a House Commerce subcommittee Monday that tests have shown the vaccine to be safe, with low risk of serious reactions from the inoculations.

Nevertheless, said Dr. Cooper, because of the size of the immunization program "there may well be a number of suits filed against the manufacturer."

In negotiating contracts with drug companies, the government has said it would assume responsibility for testing the vaccine and take steps to make sure all persons vaccinated are notified of both risks and benefits. The drug companies would be responsible for the safety and purity of the vaccine.

Also testifying were polio vaccine developers Dr. Albert Sabin and Dr. Jonas E. Salk, who disagreed on whether the government should go ahead with the national immunization program.

"The vaccine will do better in people's arms than in the refrigerator," said Dr. Salk, who supports the plan.

"We should not use up our ammunition ahead of time," argued Dr. Sabin. "Don't find yourself without the ammunition — vaccine — next year."

Dr. Sabin recommended giving shots to people in high risk categories — such as the elderly or those with some physical ailment — to give them immediate protection.

Fire Destroyed Candler Firm

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A massive fire destroyed the Asheville Salvage Co. building in nearby Candler Monday night.

Volunteers from nine departments were able to keep the flames from spreading to a dry cleaning store, a television shop and the Enka-Candler Record newspaper.

The cause of the fire and the financial loss were not immediately available.

Traffic on U.S. 19-23 West was blocked for half a mile on each side of the fire.

Hydrants in the area were not sufficient for the number of engine companies which responded. Runs were made continually for water from nearby sources.

Earl Worley of Candler, who reported the fire, said, "I was leading my cow across the road to water her and I didn't see anything. I went back to get my pickup truck, and I saw fire all over the place."
