Pope Delivers A Message To Blacks And Teen-Agers

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Pope John Paul II staged a one-float parade down New Orleans' Mardi Gras route Saturday, swayed and clapped his hands in time with gospel music and, in this city known for its pleasure spots, advised teen-agers to save sex for marriage.

In a speech to black Catholics, the pope decried the lack of equal opportunity their race still suffers in American society. Addressing Catholic educators, he urged them to inspire their students with "social consciouness ... to remove the sources of injustice in society."

Heavy rains marred the start of an afternoon Mass at New Orleans University, forcing the estimated 150,000 worshippers to huddle under umbrellas and plastic sheets and recalling the cloudburst which stopped the pope in mid-sermon at Mass in Miami on Friday.

But shortly after John Paul climbed to the altar, the downpour stopped, the umbrellas closed, and Archbishop Philip Hannan told the celebrants: "Your prayers have lifted the cloudes."

In his homily at the Mass, the pope decried divorce "and its ready availability in modern society."

"The plight of the children alone should make us realize that the refusal to forgive is not in keeping with the true nature of marriage," he said. "What must be seen is the ineffectiveness of divorce."

He also pleaded for forgiveness of the debts of developing countries that find it hard to repay their loans. "We must arrive at solutions," he said.

Later, as the sun set, the pope took a seat of honor at a special academic convocation at Xavier University, the nation's only predominantly black Catholic university. It was the final stop in a busy day before the pope headed back to the archbishop's residence for the night.

Before the pope arrived at a youth rally in the Superdome, more than 50,000 young people had chanted "we want the pope, we want the pope" but the reception, when finally he appeared, seemed restrained. When John Paul was in New York eight years ago, Madison Square Garden rocked with cheers.

But the crowd came alive after the pope's speech, when a mini-Mardi Gras parade was staged for him, complete floats and three marching bands.

Surgeons Begin Mission To Syria

By JEAN McNAIR
Associated Press Writer

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A team of plastic surgeons began the first leg of a journey Saturday to Syria on a unique mission to treat people with birth defects and disfiguring wounds suffered in the civil war in Lebanon.

The 11-member volunteer team of surgeons, nurses, a urologist and an anesthesiologist plans to operate on about 50 patients in the Syrian capital of Damascus in the first of several trips to the Middle East scheduled over the next 16 months.

They took off from Norfolk International Airport on Saturday afternoon, en route to Syria after a brief stopover in New York.

Dr. Charles E. Horton, a Norfolk plastic surgeon heading the team, spent two years visiting doctors and government officials in the Middle East to negotiate the trip.

"I have met the people and the patients, and I've been impressed with their sincerity and their kindness," Horton said in an interview.

"They have the same sorrows and aspirations as other people in the world have, and yet our whole picture of the Middle East has been of bombs and terrorists and airplane missions and mines and all the things that make us feel that this part of the world is different," he said.

The two-week trip is the first by Physicians for Peace, a non-profit

Officials Consider State-ECU Tilt More Than Just A Ball Game

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

The 18-year-old football series between East Carolina University and North Carolina State, which has resulted in six Pirate victories, has been much more than just a date on the schedule, present and former school officials say.

"It's meant a lot to both schools, as much or more to State as East Carolina," said Pat Dye, the Pirates' head coach from 1974-79. "It is a good football game for both schools. It has been a big money maker for North Carolina State, not just East Carolina."

The Pirate-Wolfpack series will be interrupted in the 1988 season when a one-game moratorium issued by North Carolina State officials is implemented.

The ruling was recommended by the North Carolina State Athletic Council and approved by NCSU Chancellor Bruce Poulton. It came in response to the melee involving ECU supporters following the 1987 season opener at Carter-Finley Stadium in Raleigh.Sept. 5.

The moratorium marks an interruption in ECU's longest running series and the most popular game on the schedule, which has accounted for seven of the top 10 crowds at Carter-Finley Stadium.

The 1986 contest, won by State, 38-10, drew 58,650 — the largest crowd ever to witness a football game in North Carolina.

"It was a big game when we played," said Dye, now head coach at Auburn University in Auburn, Ala. "It was a natural game for both schools. It didn't cost a lot of money to go and play. If North Carolina State University came to Greenville, it would be a good game there, too."

N.C. State holds a 12-6 advantage in the series between the in-state rivals, but the Pirates have won three of the last five games.

The initiation of the series in 1970 was the culmination of about five years of work, according to former ECU Chancellor Leo Jenkins.

"We thought we were outgrowing the Southern Conference," said Jenkins, the school's chancellor from 1960-78. "We won the conference and were beating teams easily. We wanted to reach a step higher, and it was suggested that we either start a new conference or go independent.

"We decided to go independent and began efforts to schedule Duke, Carolina, State and Wake Forest."

Jenkins said the idea of an ECU-NCSU game was met with opposition.

"It was a very difficult struggle to have East Carolina play against State," Jenkins said. "Many people didn't want the series started. The chancellor at that school at the time didn't want it, but members of our faculty privately said it would be a good series and we should pursue it."

Opinions voiced by the opponents to the game made Jenkins even more determined to get the game on the schedule.

Gaylord Perry's Wife Dies In Florida Wreck

LAKE WALES, Fla. (AP) — The wife of former major league pitcher Gaylord Perry was on her way to visit her daughter and her new granddaughter when she died in a traffic accident, officials said.

The accident occurred Friday when another car ran a stop sign and hit her car broadside, officials said.

Blanche Manning Perry, 48, of Gaffney, S.C., was killed instantly in the 10:35 a.m. accident on U.S. 27, according to the report filed by Florida Highway Patrol officer Roger Glasco.

A photographer on the scene said rescue workers needed more than an hour to free Mrs. Perry from the mangled car. Both drivers were alone and wearing safety belts.

The driver of the other car, Harold I. Arnold, 66, of Winter Haven was listed in critical condition at Winter Haven Hospital with cuts to his face, chest and legs. According to the FHP report, Arnold ran a stop sign in his 1986 Oldsmobile and hit the left front of the 1982 Oldsmobile driven by Mrs. Perry. Arnold's car flipped twice, but he survived the crash.

Mrs. Perry had been en route to Winter Haven Hospital to visit her daughter Amy Espaillet of Sebring, who gave birth to girl Thursday. Perry was supposed to come down this weekend.

Perry, a native of Hertford County, pitched for 21 seasons in the major leagues with eight teams. He began his career with the San Francisco Giants in 1962 and stayed with the Giants until 1971.

Perry moved on to Cleveland, Texas, San Diego, the New York

Students Plan Constitution Events

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Lectures, assemblies and birthday parties equipped with cake, punch and balloons are among ways students in the Pitt County schools will celebrate the bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution this week, said school officials.

"We're trying to let these children know who we were then," said Suzanne Carson, a social studies teacher at Farmville Middle School. She also represents Bethel on the Pitt County committee for the Bicentennial of the Constitution.

"We're doing a Constitution week next week, however we'll continue to teach about the Constitution this year" and the next five years in celebration with the country.

Activities in Farmville Middle classrooms include discussions on "What if the U.S. was not a Democracy," "The Constitution and how it works for you? and the Preamble and Bill of Rights.

Students will hear President Reagan say the Pledge of Allegiance Wednesday at 1 p.m., and Dr. Charles Ward, chairman of the Pitt County Bicentennial for the Constitution, will speak during an assembly that afternoon.

Teachers in the school will serve the students birthday cake and punch, Ms. Carson said.

At South Greenville School, the PTA has planned Constitution Day Wednesday for the students, said Rebecca Oats, principal.

State representatives Ed Warren and Walter Jones Jr., and Sen. Tom Taft will participate in the 9 a.m. activities at the school, she said.

Henry Clark, writer of "What the Constitution Means to Me," will read his award-winning essay, and "the PTA is going to give all the kids red, white and blue cupcakes," she said.

Wearing red, white and blue, listening to patriotic songs and observing a tiered, Styrofoam cake with 200 lights, made by the PTA, all are part of the celebration, Ms. Oats said.

Teachers at Bethel Elementary School will have a bicentennial resource center in the library, and there will be mini-lectures on the intercom during the week, said Janie Manning, principal.

Fact sheets on the Constitution will be distributed to teachers to be included in their lessons, and the students also will watch President Reagan.

Red, white and blue will be worn Thursday for opening ceremonies on the front lawn. The North Pitt High School ROTC will perform during the program along with the Bethel school band.

Daisy Lee Latham, a former Pitt County history teacher, will speak to the students, and there will be a birthday party during lunch complete with hats, streamers, cake and Constitutional regalia such as pencils, she said.

Chicod Elementary also will have groups viewing the television and participating with the president, said Principal Charles Johnson.

Seventh and eighth-grade social studies students also will be given copies of Declaration of Independence and the Constitution in booklet, he said. Activities will be scheduled during the week to incorporate the Constitution into daily lessons.

"We're trying to make it a part of the regular day as much as we possibly can," Johnson said.

Students at Grifton Elementary School will view various television specials on the Constitution that have been taped by the media center at the teachers' request, said Principal Nanelle Congleton.

They also will present programs over the itercom and will be writing stories and creating drawings and posters to celebrate the event, she said.

Various speakers will talk with groups of students at J.H. Rose High

Difficult Talks Expected

MOSCOW (AP) — This week's talks in which the United States and Soviet Union will try to work out details of an arms control agreement will be difficult because of U.S. intransigence, a Soviet official said Saturday.

Deputy Foreign Minister Alexander Bessmertnykh told the official news agency Tass that despite a show of U.S. optimism, the meetings between U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze will have to settle major issues to be a success.

"We are in for difficult talks in Washington, and it is not easy so far to predict what the outcome will be," said Bessmertnykh, who will be part of Shevardnadze's delegation.

Shevardnadze will meet in Washington with President Reagan on Tuesday and have three days of talks with Shultz.

Bessmertnykh said the major problems were the U.S. position on the future of its nuclear warheads for West Germany's 72 Pershing 1A missiles and production of Pershing 1B missiles.

group founded by Horton to help the medically needy in foreign countries.

Israel, Syria, Jordan, Egypt and a Palestinian hospital on the West Bank of the Jordan River agreed to participate in the missions. This marks the first time the Middle East countries have cooperated on a medical project that serves political enemies, Horton said.

"When I proposed this to the people from those areas they were enthusiastic," he said. "They wanted to do this."

Most of the patients will be needy Syrians and war victims taken to Syria from Lebanon, Horton said. Their problems include burn scar contractions, facial disfigurement and birth defects.

A second trip is scheduled in January to the Palestinian Hospital at Ramallah, a city in the West Bank held by Israel. The team plans to travel to Jordan in April, Egypt in September 1988 and Israel in December 1988. Different teams of doctors will participate in each mission, Horton said.

Most of the countries will pay hospitalization and transportation costs for patients. Private donations will be used to pay the $35,000 to $40,000 cost of sending the medical team on each trip, Horton said.

Pope Has Message

The pope, who has a pronounced fondness for music, smiled, waved and seemed to be enjoying the show.

"Our prayers are with the pope," said a huge banner in Polish. Another said "Say not, I am too young." And many others said "Totus Tuus" (Totally Yours), the pope's motto of devotion to the Virgin Mary.

The leader of the world's Roman Catholics received a warm reception in a city where 37 percent of the population is Catholic. His first major speech of the day, by contrast, was to one of the smallest constituencies of the church, American blacks.

The remainder of John Paul's third day of his 10-day visit also saw him meeting with educators in the Superdome complex, celebrating an open-air Mass and joining an academic convocation at Xavier University.

The pope stood smiling and waving as his popemobile moved past the crowds that lined Canal Street waving yellow and white flags. By Carnival standards the crowds were small and restrained, only two or three deep in places, but there was no lack of enthusiasm.

To his black audience, the pope spoke of the economic imbalance "even in this wealthy nation."

"Far too many of your young people receive less than an equal opportunity for a quality education and for gainful employment," he said, adding that "the church can never remain silent in the face of injustice."

He said the non-violent struggle by blacks for their civil rights "stands, in the memory of this nation, as a monument of honor." And he said that by his work for blacks, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., contributed to "the improvement of American society itself."

Addressing the pope, Bishop Joseph Howze of Biloxi, Miss., said lingering racism hindered development of black leadership within the church. The pope in turn urged greater efforts at evangelism among the black community.

"It is important to realize that there is no black church, no white church, no American church," the pope responded. He said there is only one church of Jesus Christ and it must be "a home for blacks, whites, Americans, every culture and race."

There are 1.3 million black Catholics in the United States — about 5 percent of the total black population and 2½ percent of the total Catholic population.

Officials Say ECU-State Game Important

"Their argument against it was that people would not pay money to see ECTC (East Carolina Teachers College)," he said. "We were not ECTC at that time, but the advocates against the series were calling us that.

"They thought the idea of a series was foolish. They were saying 'it's a big college, they'll murder you,' (but) I didn't see any murdering going on. We were told that State-East Carolina would not draw. At the time, they (State) were playing Wyoming in front of about 11,000 people and Buffalo, which is not even playing football anymore. Finally, we started playing and kept the series going."

While the NCSU-ECU series blossomed, other Atlantic Coast Conference teams dropped the Pirates from their schedules, leaving the Wolfpack as the only team in the state on the East Carolina schedule.

The Wolfpack won the game in 1970, 23-6, but East Carolina rebounded in the 1971 contest, winning 31-15. Since then, the game has been a special part of the football season, according to Jenkins.

"It's a good series, and it's still a good series," Jenkins said. "It's not a tragic blow. We could end up with six home games. We could bring in good teams here. There are possibilities.

"I think it is unfortunate. The school should not have been reprimanded for the actions of just a few."

Meanwhile, Bill Cain, ECU's former athletic director, said the relationship between the two schools has improved with the series.

"We feel we've had a good relationship with N.C. State," said Cain, the school's athletic director from 1975-80. "It's always been a big money game for us. It meant the same then as it does now.

"We enjoyed going to Raleigh. It's been a good rivalry for the two schools. It has grown as far as the number of fans and interest and it's lived up to its expectations as a big game for East Carolina and N.C. State."

The game also helped in the development of the Pirate football program, according to Cain, who works in ECU's health, physical education department.

"Certainly, as we were growing, we were identifying with State in the ACC and its close proximity to East Carolina," Cain said. "Our fans got into it, there's no doubt about that.

"As long as I can remember, we always sold out our allotment of tickets and were constantly requesting additional tickets."

Former ECU Chancellor John M. Howell said the school's reputation prospered nationally after North Carolina schools refused to schedule the Pirates.

"Historically, East Carolina has played the other teams, but State continued to play us," Howell said. "I think that the national reputation of the ECU football team came after the (Division) 1-A teams in North Carolina wouldn't play us. We went on beyond the ACC teams and went on to play teams outside North Carolina and started beating some of them.

"It's nice to play teams close by so fans can go to games with some regularity, but, today, the games are just an airplane ride over the ACC teams. We've been able to develop some good rivalries with teams like Temple University. I think that has caused ECU to be known nationally for football."

Howell said the ECU-NCSU series provided thrills through the years.

"It was a very good competition during those years," he said. "We won sometimes, and they won sometimes."

The loss of the game on the 1988 schedule leaves the school with a tremendous hole to fill, said Jack Edwards, Pirate Club president.

"When Dr. Ken Karr took over as athletic director in 1980, the program was about $400,000 in debt, and he was given a mandate to get the program out of debt," Edwards said. "Now, the program's about $500,000 in the black.

"In order to stay in Division I, we have to play seven Division I teams and the logical teams to play us are Carolina, Wake Forest and Duke, but they won't play us."

The absence of North Carolina teams on the Pirate schedule forces ECU to play big schools for revenue sources, leaving the team overmatched in some cases, Edwards said.

"These would be very lucrative games and would have tremendous fan interest, plus we could be more competitive with those teams than we've been with some teams we've played like Auburn and Penn State," he said.

"In order to overcome the indebtedness, Dr. Karr chose games that would bring us $150,000 to $200,000 in order to get us out of debt. The N.C. State series was an exception to all of this.

"We could be competitive and bring in big dollars so this is a tremendous blow not only from the the standpoint of a keen rivalry and a lot of fun for the fans, but from the standpoint of big dollars. It is going to be difficult to replace that game with one that will bring us $200,000. At this point, this leaves a tremendous void."

The group will meet every Wednesday. Preschool children's Bible programs and nursery are provided. For more information call Jean Tursam at 830-0599 or Debbie Christiensen at 756-4671.

Keynote Address

Rick Atkinson, a Pulitzer Prize winning journalist and deputy national editor of the Washington Post, will deliver the keynote address at the N.C. Honors Association meeting at 10 a.m. Friday in Room 244 of Mendenhall Student Center, East Carolina University.

Atkinson's presentation, "Honors and the Fourth Estate," is part of the NCHA annual meeting of honors students from colleges and universities in the state. The program emphasizes the opportunities available for students who are high academic achievers.

Arrests Made

Greenville police said three arrests were made Friday and Saturday.

Officer R.J. Brewington said David Earle Wilkes of 1923 A Norcott Circle was arrested at 6:30 p.m. Friday on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon.

Officer P.W. Worthington said Glen Junior Martin of Route 6, Box 272, Goldsboro, was arrested at 6:38 p.m. Friday at the intersection of Paris and Halifax streets and charged with possesion of a fictitious driver's license, possession of drug paraphenalia and driving with his license revoked.

Officer M.R. Benton said Darryl Thomas Moody of Route 3, Box 118 Siler City was arrested at 2:57 a.m. Saturday on charges of assault on a female and damage to real property at the Hampton Inn.

Grants Awarded

Gov. Jim Martin has announced that 31 coastal communities will receive $201,397 for natural resources planning.

Included in the grants are Washington, N.C., with $8,400 for waterfront redevelopments; Chocowinity with $2,333 for subdivision regulations and an annexation study; Ahoskie with $1,500 for an annexation study, and New Bern with $8,428 for waterfront redevelopments.

Towns and counties will use the funds for 42 different projects, including land use plan updates, waterfront redevelopment studies and stormwater management plans.

The grants will be administered by the Division of Coastal Management and partially matched by local funds.

New Group To Meet

The Eastern Regional AIDS Support and Education Group will meet Monday at 8 p.m. in First Presbyterian Church. Officers and board members will be elected and bylaws will be adopted.

For more information call Jerry at 757-3990 or Stan at 756-8453.

Nursing Seminar

The East Carolina University Division of Continuing Education will sponsor the seminar, "Creative Literature: An Aid to Nursing," Wednesday through Nov. 18 from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Dr. Genevieve M. Bartol, associate professor of the ECU School of Nursing, will present selective readings which will give nurses new insight to illnesses and how to deal with patients. Participants will be assigned readings and asked to join in class discussions.

The seminar will be held in the ECU Nursing Building, Room 208. For more information call 757-6143.

Thefts Probed

The theft of two air conditioning units worth $1,175 from Pitt County Memorial Hospital was among eight incidents reported to Greenville police on Friday.

Officer K.M. Smeltzer said the theft was reported at 3:05 p.m.

Officer D.R. Wyrick said the front, rear and passenger windows of a truck parked on a gravel lot off Moye Boulevard were shattered in an incident reported at 8:39 a.m. Wyrick said damages totaled $375.

Officer L.E. White said a larceny by trick at the Christian Bookstore on Plaza Drive was reported at 8:30 a.m. A man buying a card told the cashier some change had fallen behind the desk, and then stole cash from the register while the cashier bent to pick it up, White said.

Officer J.G. Bridges said the theft of four tires and rims worth $900 from a truck at Glendale Court was reported at 9:54 a.m.

Officer E.M. Haddock said the theft of a bicycle worth $175 from Ringgold Towers was reported at 2:03 p.m.

Officer H.D. Hines said the larceny of a checkbook from the Piece Goods Shop at Greenville Square Shopping Center was reported at 5:52 p.m.

Smeltzer said the larceny of $50 and a wallet with credit cards and $3 cash was reported at 10:20 p.m. at the Off the Cuff Lounge at the Sheraton.

Officer M.J. Nobles said a breaking, entering and larceny was reported at 10:45. A video cassette recorder worth $300 and seven tapes worth a total of $56 were taken from a home at 404A E. Roundtree Drive, Nobles said.

Trustees Plan Organizational Meeting Friday

The East Carolina University Board of Trustees will hold an organizational meeting for the 1987-88 academic year on campus Friday with four new members to be sworn in.

In addition to the new members, two trustees were reappointed for new terms on the 13-member board during the past summer

New members named by Gov. James Martin are W. Howard Rooks of Alexandria, Va., and J. Craig Souza of Raleigh, both ECU alumni. Trustees appointed by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors are L. Vincent Lowe Jr. of Wilson and D. Wayne Peterson of Tarboro.

The board is scheduled to elect officers. Trustees whose terms expired last spring included C. Ralph Kinsey Jr., chairman, of Charlotte, Louis Singleton of Greenville, Harvey Beech of Kinston and James Dixon of Greensboro.

ECU trustees whose terms expire in 1989 include Sandra Babb of Raleigh, Thomas Bennett of Winston-Salem, William E. Dansey of Greenville, Roy D. Flood of Murfreesboro and Max R. Joyner of Greenville. Scott E. Thomas of New Bern, president of the ECU Student Government Association, is the 13th member of the board.

The meeting will begin at 9 a.m. in the Van Landingham Room of the Home Economics building on campus.

Happy Birthday

Maggie Degraffenreid
September 13, 1987

On this very special day, Dear Mom, we surely would like to say how much we really love you in our own special way.

You've given so much to others, asking nothing in return. That's why the Lord has richly blessed you for all the good deeds you've done.

This comes straight from our hearts. We love you so very much.

Your Children

Program Scheduled

The Pitt County Community Schools will sponsor a jazz-dancercise program on Mondays and Thursdays for four weeks beginning Monday.

A fee will be charged for the classes, which will be held at W.H. Robinson School from 6:45 p.m. to 7:45 p.m. each day. For more information call 355-2639.

Housekeeping Week

The housekeeping department of Pitt County Memorial Hospital and employees will celebrate National Housekeeping Week starting Sunday and continuing through Saturday.

Events will be held during the week honoring efforts and achievements of department employees.

ENCSD Homecoming

The Eastern North Carolina School for the Deaf, Wilson, will have its annual homecoming day Saturday.

The alumni meeting is from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., while barbecue chicken plates will be sold from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

A soccer game, ENCSD versus Beddingfield High School, will begin at 2 p.m. and the queen will be crowned at halftime.

The Wilson Association of the Deaf dance will be from 7 p.m. to midnight in the Veterans of Foreign Wars Hall.

Chapter Speaker

Hugh Fawcett, director of telecommunications for Lawrence Behr Associates, will address the first fall meeting of the Coastal Plains Chapter of the North Carolina World Trade Association Tuesday at the Greenville Sheraton.

Fawcett is a former product sales manager for Nothern Telecom. During his 13-year career with Computer Consules Inc., he designed and marketed data base retrieval systems used by telephone companies worldwide.

A native of Florida, he graduated from Northwestern University and attended the University of Chicago School of Business.

A social hour begins at 6 p.m. prior to the dinner and presentation. For more information call Janice Faulkner, chapter president.

School Open House

An open house for parents will be held during the first meeting of the Third Street School PTA Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the media center.

Officers for the 1987-88 academic year are Kathryn B. Strickland, president; Dottie Blades, vice president; Willie Mae Gibbs, secretary; Walter Council, treasurer; Darilyn Sharpe and Dottie Blades, ways and means co-chairmen; Ann Maxwell and Sandi Tripp, volunteer coordinators; Cyndra Gasperini and Franceine Rees, publicity officers; Sadie Stamp, hospitality chairman, and Annie Cable, grounds committee chairman.

Mildred and Jimmy Lewis are parent representatives of the membership board, and Nancy Harris is the teacher representative.

Workshop Host

The Regional Rehabilitation Center at Pitt County Memorial Hospital will be one of 10 hosts nationwide to co-sponsor the National Wheelchair Athletic Association for a two-day wheelchair sports workshop.

The free workshop will be Saturday from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sept. 20 from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. at East Carolina University's Minges Coliseum. It will present general information and hands-on experience on five wheelchair sports by some of the top athletes in each sport.

For more information about registration and local accomodations call Jim Barrett at the center, 551-4329.

AHEA Certification

D.H. Conley High School teacher Brenda Little has met requirements to become certified as a home economist by the American Home Economics Association.

The certification, newly established in the home economics profession, is granted to home economics professionals who have a baccalaureate degree in home ecnomics and demonstrate proficiency in professional practice through completion of an examination. To maintain certification, a person must complete 75 hours of approved continuing education every three-year period.

Ms. Little is a member of the executive committee of the East Carolina University School of Home Economics Alumni Society and is the society's representative to the ECU Alumni Board. She serves on the publicity committee of the Home Economics Division of the North Carolina Vocational Association and has served three years as a Pitt County Family Violence Program advocate counselor.

Eakin Says Thanks

East Carolina University Chancellor Richard R. Eakin thanked alumni and friends of the university for their support in an address Saturday at the ECU Alumni Leadership Conference.

"The wise counsel, hard work, and financial gifts of our alumni leadership have helped us progress to our well-deserved reputation as a comprehensive university noted for excellence," Eakin said during the luncheon.

"We appreciate the help of our alumni and seek to make them evermore proud of East Carolina University."

The Wake County chapter of the alumni association was recognized as the most active chapter in 1987, and its president, David A. Cook, was named Volunteer of the Year.

Cook earned a bachelor's degree in business administration with an emphasis in accounting in 1983. He is controller and manager of finance and accounting for PuriDyne Inc.

A native of Wilson, Cook was class president his senior year at ECU. His wife, Mimi Freid Cook, is also an ECU graduate.

Sponsored by the alumni association and the ECU Office for Alumni Relations, the conference theme was "Casting Our Shadow."

The East Carolina University Foundation Inc. also held its annual fall meeting Saturday.

Schulken Named Editorial Page Editor For Reflector

MARY C. SCHULKEN

Mary C. Schulken has been named editorial page editor of The Daily Reflector, according to D. Jordan Whichard III, general manager.

The position is a new one for the Reflector and formalizes Ms. Schulken's role as one of the paper's editorial writers and editorial page coordinator.

Ms. Schulken will be responsible for presenting the editorial positions of The Daily Reflector as developed by the newspaper's management and editorials staff. She will select other opinion and commentary from nationally recognized columnists and cartoonists. Her responsibilities will include future development of the editorial and op-ed pages. She will report to Managing Editor Alvin Taylor.

Ms. Schulken is a native of Lake Waccamaw and graduated from Hallsboro High School in 1974. She attended East Carolina University on a Golden Star scholarship in English and journalism from Star-News newspapers of Wilmington. She received a bachelor's degree in English with a journalism minor from ECU in 1979. She was a staff member of the student newspaper and worked in the folklore archive devising a cataloguing system.

Ms. Schulken became a staff writer for The Daily Reflector in 1980, covering Pitt County schools, agriculture and the communities of Winterville, Ayden and Grifton. She worked as interim editor of the Williamston Enterprise in 1984. She formally began editorial writing and copy editing duties at The Daily Reflector in June 1986.

She is married to Bion Schulken, a native of Whiteville, and they live at Route 1, Winterville.

Walk This Way

Walking may seem like a pretty simple form of exercise. But the fact is, each step involves an almost infinite number of movements. Which means an almost infinite number of things can go wrong. Thankfully, there's a new shoe designed specifically for walking. The Body Shoe® from Hush Puppies®. Only The Body Shoe features the Comfort Curve™, a special sole designed to follow the natural movement of the foot. With the Comfort Curve, your shoe flexes where your foot flexes, which makes for a more efficient and more comfortable motion. So the next time you're out walking, whether it's to get in shape or just to get the mail, we suggest you wear The Body Shoe. After all, where you walk is your business. How you walk, is ours. Available in styles and sizes for men and women.

Dr. Dennis Sinar, a chapter medical advisor and gastroenterologist at the East Carolina University School of Medicine, will speak on technology laser therapy.

Fisheries Board

The N.C. Marine Fisheries Commission will have a business meeting Friday at 10 a.m. in the N.C. Marine Fisheries Building, Morehead City.

Items to be discussed include the public hearings Aug. 24-31 and five shellfish lease applications.

For more information call the Division of Marine Fisheries toll free at 1-800-682-2632 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Workshops Set

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department and the Greenville Aquatics and Fitness Center are offering two workshops on breast self-check.

The Pitt County Medical Society is presenting each workshop on early detection and prevention of breast cancer. The first session will be held Sept. 28 at 7 p.m. at the Aquatics and Fitness Center; the second, Sept. 29 at noon at the Jaycee Park Building on Cedar Lane. It is suggested that each participant bring a bag lunch.

For information call Theresa Holley, 758-6892. Each workshop is free, but participation is limited, she said.

City Ushers Union

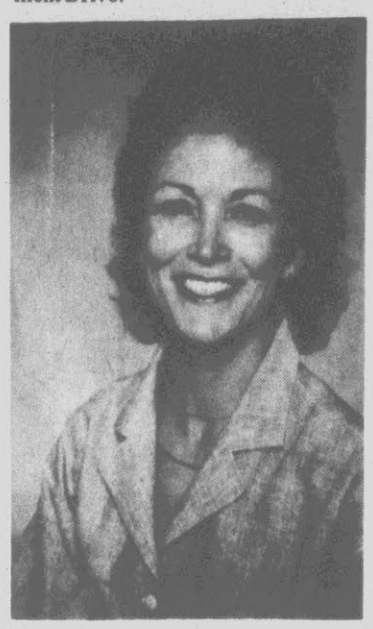
The City Ushers Union will meet at Saliva Chapel Free Will Baptist Church Monday at 7:30 p.m.

National Honor

Dr. Karen L. Shaw, a local dentist, has been selected by the editorial board of Dental Economics Magazine as first runner-up in a national competition for an editorial board position.

As one of the top three candidates for an editorial board position, Dr. Shaw will attend a meeting of the board in Las Vegas, Nev., to contribute in the planning for the magazine's content for the coming year. She is not, however, a member of the on-going board.

She is in private practice of family and cosmetic dentistry at 120 Oakmont Drive.



DR. KAREN SHAW

'Talent Night' Set

The Women's Ministries of St. Paul Pentecostal Holiness Church will sponsor a "Talent Night" Saturday at 7:30 p.m.

An offering will be received for the Falcon Children's Home.

Curriculum Support

A statewide committee of science, industry and education leaders has organized to support the new earth science curriculum in North Carolina's public schools, vowing to make it a model for the nation.

"We as a group of volunteers wish to provide immediate and long-term support to establish the earth science curriculum in North Carolina as a model to be emulated by states across the country," said Dr. Charles Q. Brown of East Carolina University.

Brown, who co-chairs the 40-member support group, is professor and chairman of the geology department at ECU and is president of the Southeastern Section, National Association of Geology Teachers.

Earth science, which includes such studies as geology, oceanography, astronomy, meteorology and others, has been added recently as an elective to the science curriculum in high schools in North Carolina.

The governor's science advisor, Earl Mac Cormac, is scheduled to keynote the first meeting of the new Education and Industry Committee for Earth Science in North Carolina with an address, "Earth, Geometry and Dimension." The initial meeting is scheduled at the N.C. State University Faculty Club in Raleigh Sept. 17, beginning at 9 a.m.

'Rescue Day' Set

The Winterville Rescue Squad will hold its annual "Rescue Day" fund-raiser on Saturday.

Activities will include a parade at 8:45 a.m., a rescue competition between state squads at 10:30 a.m., and a fund-raising auction at 5 p.m. Fire equipment will be on display, and other events will be held during the afternoon.

Salem Fall Auction

The Salem United Methodist Women will sponsor a fall auction and plate supper Saturday from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. on the grounds of the church in Simpson.

There will be activities for the children and a variety of talents and items, many handmade, will be auctioned.

Fall Conference

The fall conference and annual meeting of the American Cancer Society, North Carolina Division Inc., will be held Saturday and Sunday in the Sheraton-Crabtree Inn, Raleigh.

After the annual meeting, the North Carolina division headquarters, 11 S. Boylan Ave., Raleigh, will be dedicated as the W.C. Calton Cancer Education and Prevention Center.

Calton, a longtime supporter of the American Cancer Society and chairman of the building fund and personnel committee, is a former president and chairman of the board of directors for the state division.

Nurses Association

District No. 30 of the North Carolina Nurses Association will meet Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Willis Building. Clare LaBar, president of the association, will speak on the nursing shortage.

Farm EXPO Plays To Small Crowds

GRIMESLAND — The Carolina Farmer EXPO ended Saturday, still playing to the small number of people that turned out for the event on it's opening day Thursday as well as Friday.

Held at Oakland Farm off N.C. 33 just east of Grimesland, the exposition featured between 40 and 50 exhibits where various pieces of equipment and farm technology were being displayed.

The show also included more than 450 acres of demonstration crops, including 12 varieties of cotton, 100 varieties of corm, 53 varieties of soybeans and several varieties of peanuts.

The 20 varieties of tobacco grown at Oakland Farm this year had already been cut by the time the exposition began. But they were viewed during a field day held in July.

Rep. Charles Rose of Fayetteville, a member of the House Agriculture Committee, attended the exposition Friday afternoon said said there was "a lot of good technology, a lot of impressive equipment in a very beautiful setting."

But Rose, just as sponsors of the show had earlier, said attendance was hurt because "farmers are still mighty busy in the fields right now."

"I've enjoyed my visit," Rose said. "You always learn something when you come to a farm show.

"They've done a good job," assembling the equipment and technology displayed by exhibitors and in handling the demonstration crops, Rose said.

NSPE Scholarships

The National Society of Professional Engineers will provide grants and scholarships to aid high school seniors interested in pursuing engineering careers, said Mark Ledford, local chairman of the nationwide scholarship program.

Students are selected based on academic standing, participation in extra-curricular activities, evidence of leadership, character and self-reliance, comments of teachers and administrators, and financial need.

Scholarships are provided through companies and educational institutions. Recipients receive awards of $1,000 to $4,000 with some full scholarships.

Applications must be submitted the the local chapter by Dec. 1. National winners will be selected by May 1.

For applications and more information call Ledford at 752-1137 or a high school guidance counselor through Nov. 1.

Support Group

The local Alzheimer's Support Group will have Dr. Harold Kallman as its speaker Tuesday at noon.

The support group meeting for caregivers of people with Alzheimer's disease will be held in the Senior Citizens' Center behind the Pitt County Office Building, 1717 W. Fifth St. The Mental Health Association in Pitt County and the Pitt County Council on Aging co-sponsor the group.

Kallman is director of the Geriatric Division of the East Carolina University School of Medicine. He will talk about "Expectations Of Alzheimer's Disease As It Progresses."

AARP Guest Speaker

Helen Forsht, assistant state director of the American Association of Retired Persons, will speak in Greenville Monday.

Ms. Forsht will address members of Greenville Chapter No. 2016 of the AARP at 2:30 p.m. at Memorial Baptist Church, 1510 Greenville Blvd. S.E.

Embezzlement

WILMINGTON (AP) — John Braswell, the former co-director of Cape Fear Technical Institute's scandal-ridden Pender County continuing eduction program, pleaded guilty in Pender County Superior Court to 12 counts of embezzlement by a state employee.

Judge Napoleon Barefoot, who earlier this week disqualified himself from involvement in the CFTI-fraud case because his wife has taught at the school for many years, agreed to accept Braswell's plea Thursday but did not impose sentence, said Assistant District Attorney Michael DeSilva.

Braswell, originally charged with 36 counts of embezzlement, is one of nearly 20 people who have been indicted so far in connection with a State Bureau of Investigation probe into widespread fraud that has rocked the school.

The probe, dubbed "Capecon," uncovered a scam in which bogus classes with phony student rosters were used to obtain state funds to pay instructors and supervisors. Officials figure the state lost at least $1.4 million and may have lost more than $5 million in payments for bogus classes since 1980.

8 Die In Downpours

BEIJING (AP) — Eight people were reported dead and one was missing after heavy rains hit coastal Zhejiang province for four days, an official report said Saturday.

The downpours were caused by the interaction of a typhoon and a cold spell, the state-run Xinhua News Agency said.

Rain that fell between Tuesday and Friday flooded 328,000 acres of farmland, the news agency said.

It gave no details about the casualties.

State Could Benefit Most From Candidate Forum

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina politicians tried to get political mileage out of an educational debate among presidential candidates, hoping to help the South influence the eventual winner.

Both Democrats and Republicans lauded Friday's debates at the Dean Smith Activity Center for shedding light on the differences between the parties. But both sides said North Carolina, the South and America's children might be the ultimate beneficiaries.

"The real winners today were the children," said Bill Friday, former president of the University of North Carolina System. "This is the first time to my knowledge that representatives, at the highest level, of both major political parties have affirmed the primacy of education for the next several years. And they did it with an obvious display of knowledge."

"It's good exposure and good for North Carolina," said Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan after seven Democrats and two Republicans appeared in the separate debates. He said the 15-state Southern regional primary in March helped draw the early attention to the region.

"If the Southern Primary is going to work ... things like this will make it work," Jordan said. "... I do think that, number one, anything would be better than '84 and number two, I do think that it's going to cause all the candidates, the Republicans and the Democrats, to be more in focus on the ideology of the South."

In the debates, Democrats Bruce Babbitt, former governor of Arizona, Delaware Sen. Joe Biden, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, U.S. Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, U.S. Rep. Al Gore of Tennessee, the Rev. Jesse Jackson and Illinois Sen. Paul Simon called for more money for education while criticizing the Reagan administration's efforts. They emphasized education spending as a way to bolster the nation's economy.

Republicans U.S. Rep. Jack Kemp of New York and former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont emphasized the importance of teaching moral values, maintaining local and parental autonomy and fostering competition between public and private education. But they did not rule out massive financial infusions to the educational system.

None of the candidates who appeared in the forum were claiming victory, but the same could not be said of rival political factions. Democrats made much of the failure of four GOP candidates to appear, while Republicans said education should not be left to the federal government.

"I think the Democrats have found an issue that's going to take them into the White House in 1988," said former Gov. Jim Hunt, a Democrat.

"Republicans don't answer the questions," he said. "They really don't believe it's the federal role. That's why some of these candidates didn't come here. What could they possibly say?"

Ken Eudy, executve director of the state Democratic Party, agreed the GOP has turned its back on programs that need federal coordination and funding.

"We can only see how stark the contrast is between Democrats and Republicans on education," he said. "Reaganomics is being uncovered as the sham it was."

But Republican Gov. Jim Martin said Democrats were shooting at shadows.

"They put forward a group of candidates who are going to have no impact on the voters because of the forum," Martin said. "It's not a question of who has a greater number of candidates. They're trying to say there's a lack of interest in education, but there was no lack of interest in the candidates who showed up. And those who didn't all have good excuses."

Rep. Coy Privette, R-Cabarrus, said the biggest message from the forum would be that "Democrats want more spending and more federal involvement and Republicans want more parental control."

"If I were a Democrat, I would be most frustrated deciding who to support," Privette said. "There was no Democrat really who came out front today."

Attacks by Democrats on U.S. Education Secretary William Bennett drew strong responses from several onlookers.

"I thought for a minute he was a candidate for president," said Privette. "It seemed like every one of them was shooting at him. But people say you only throw stones at trees that bear good fruit."

But Albert Shanker, president of American Federation of Teachers, said Bennett deserved criticism for his comments about the teacher unions like the National Education Association.

"He's not bashing the NEA, he's bashing teachers," Shanker said. "Does Mr. Bennett really want a country more like Poland, where employees just salute when the leader tells them what to do?"

Jordan, one of several potential statewide candidates at the forum, declined to say which speaker most impressed him.

"I hope to be on the ticket with that nominee," he said. "So I need to be very cautious. I don't need to alienate any of them."

Quick Cleanup

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Within an hour after Pope John Paul II's historic visit, it was difficult to see that Columbia had hosted an event that had been in the planning stages for about a year.

While spectators were still filing out of Williams-Brice Stadium where an ecumenical service was held Friday evening, flowers were collected and a grass-sweeper cleared the field of magnolia leaves. Within 90 minutes of the pope's departure from the stadium, the University of South Carolina's midfield emblem, a giant "C" painted on the grass, was once again visible, in preparation for tonight's football game.

Earlier in the day, cleanup was just as quick. The first half of the pope's motorcade route took him several blocks down Assembly Street from St. Peter's Church to College Street where the popemobile and entourage turned to enter the university campus. Clean-up crews followed close in the wake of the procession.

Within 20 minutes, yellow ropes keeping what had been a modest crowd from the street and brown parking meter wrappers warning motorists not to park on the street were removed. Street crews began almost immediately to take down water supply stations.

Before the pope had left the grounds of the Horseshoe at USC, maintenance crews were already cleaning up trash and breaking down setups and platforms in the grassy area.

Foes Will Go Nose To Nose

ATLANTA (AP) — Two old foes in the long-running debate over smoking and health will find themselves on a common battleground once the American Cancer Society completes its headquarters move from New York to Atlanta.

RJR Nabisco, the corporate giant that owns one of the nation's largest cigarette manufacturers, moved its headquarters this month from Winston-Salem, N.C., to an office-retail complex northwest of Atlanta. The cancer society's board on Sept. 1 approved its move to a four-acre site near Emory University.

The two are among the leaders in opposing coalitions representing the multibillion-dollar tobacco industry and anti-smoking health groups.

The American Cancer Society fired the first shot in 1955 with the publication of a study of 200,000 male smokers in the United States. It provided the first link between cigarettes and cancers of the lungs, larynx, esophagus and bladder.

"In 1954, when we published preliminary findings, tobacco consumption actually went down," said Lawrence Garfinkle, the society's vice president of epidemiology and statistics. "It went down again in 1958, when we published the final report."

The anti-smoking forces may indeed be winning. The Atlanta-based Centers for Disease Control reported last week that fewer than 27 percent of Americans smoked last year, the lowest level ever reported.

But R.J. Reynolds Tobacco, the RJR Nabisco division that holds nearly 33 percent of the U.S. tobacco market, still showed an increase in sales last year. Its cigarette sales totaled $5.9 billion, an increase of $444 million over 1985.

"Certainly, you can't say (the anti-smoking campaign) hasn't had an impact," said David Fishel, an R.J. Reynolds spokesman. "But from our point of view, the biggest impact was in 1983, when the federal excise tax doubled."

Some analysts suggest the decision to move RJR Nabisco headquarters to Atlanta was in part intended to distance the parent company from the cloud of controversy hanging over the tobacco industry.

Chief executive officer F. Ross Johnson, who raised many eyebrows when he announced the move to Atlanta only a few weeks after taking office, said it was strictly a business decision. He said he wanted to give the cigarette division greater decision-making flexibility, and he wanted RJR to be able to attract young, highly specialized professionals for its headquarters staff.

"You find them (in Atlanta) because that's where they want to live," he said. "They have a distinct lifestyle. They are interested in the arts, or they are interested in education. They look for not only their own style of living but for peers like themselves.

"You're not going to find that in a Winston-Salem or a Greensboro."

Last February, Johnson let it slip that he was considering spinning off RJR's tobacco units while keeping a majority of the stock. A month later, he apparently decided the profits were too attractive to give up.

Democrats Gather For FunFair

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Democrats gathered in a renovated warehouse Saturday to celebrate the renewal of their party and hear four of their presidential candidates expound on education, defense and the economy.

Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., who conceived the idea for the FunFair as a celebration of Democratic victories in 1986, told a forum for the presidential candidates that "just a few years ago, folks were saying the Democratic Party was dead. Do you believe that?"

The crowd of party faithful responded with a rousing "no" and waved American flags.

The challenge facing Democrats, Sanford said, is "how do we move from the twilight of the Reagan years into the sunshine of Democratic progress once again."

The seven Democratic candidates have been dubbed "the Seven Dwarfs" because of their similarities, but Sanford said they were better described as "seven blocks of granite immovable in their principals" or as "seven pillars of wisdom — they know whereof they speak."

Attending the forum, held at the Market Center in downtown High Point, were former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee and the Rev. Jesse Jackson. Sen. Joe Biden of Delaware and Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis were expected at festivities after the forum, and Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois could not attend because of his daughter's wedding.

Hodding Carter, a commentator for ABC-TV and spokesman for the State Department during the Carter administration, said the 1988 election would be the first election without an incumbent in 20 years and would follow "eight long years" of a Republican presidency.

More importantly, he said, it comes at a time when the country has never been as divided between "those who have never had it so good and those who have never had it so bad since the Great Depression." He said the Reagan adminstration's goal seems to be to "comfort the comfortable and afflict the afflicted."

The candidates were asked how they would improve education in light of cuts by the Reagan administration.

Jackson said that the national attitude about education needed to be changed and that education was not a social program "but our first line of defense."

He also said the nation needs a real commitment to vocational education and education for the handicapped. "I would rather have Roosevelt in a wheelchair than Reagan on a horse," he said.

Jackson said parents must become partners in their children's education, and children must demand more of themselves by saying no to drugs, alcohol and unwanted pregnancies.

"A democracy does not guarantee success, but it does guarantee opportunity," he said.

Gephardt said his goal was that the United States have the best educated people in the world by the year 2000. He said school systems that produce better students should be given more money. And finally, he said, the president must send a message of the right values.

Babbitt said he would begin by firing Secretary of Education William Bennett, and by concentrating more on preschool education. He said the student loan program should be expanded to include every student who needs it.

The nation needs a president who emphasizes to parents their role in education, he said. "That's how we can revolutionize education," he said.

Gore said he would "restore the federal government as a full partner" in the educational process and set clear goals, such as 100 percent literacy by the year 2000. He also urged accountability and responsibility for teachers.

When asked how to ensure military strength, Gephardt said the nation needed a new defense strategy with no more Beiruts; equipment for that strategy, such as minesweepers for the Navy; and enough people.

"I've never been lobbied for training and personnel," he said.

Babbitt said the country needs a rational and strong foreign policy.

"Ronald Reagan sees a world in which America is losing. ... America is winning. American ideals are sweeping this world," he said.

Gore pointed out that he was a Vietnam veteran and said the United States should learn the lessons of that war, including that in a guerrilla war, an army must have the support of the people.

"In Nicaragua, the contras don't have the support of the people in the countryside," he said.

But he said the United States must remember that there are "interests in the world worth standing up for." He urged an increase in conventional readiness and "intelligent and verifiable pursuit of arms control."

Mikhail Gorbachev, leader of the Soviet Union, may be no different than his predecessors, Gore said. But the United States needs a president who "will test him, negotiate with him and explore the limits of what can be done."

Jackson said the country had learned that "a fully alert missile system and a sleeping president is a formula for failure. The president must be awake."

And he said the United States must not assume responsibility alone for the preservation of freedom, as he said it has done in the Persian Gulf."

Miss Teen Winner: 'I'm Ordinary'

MISS TEEN — Christa Tyson of Monroe says she always considered herself as being not pretty enough to enter beauty pageants. But the judges of the Miss U.S. Teen pageant disagreed last month. (AP Laserphoto)

An AP Member Exchange Feature

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — Judges in the Miss U.S. Teen pageant last month wouldn't agree with Christa Tyson's self assessment.

"I'm ordinary," said the 17-year-old Parkwood senior. "I never thought I was pretty enough or poised enough for pageants."

Even so, Miss Tyson was chosen above candidates from the 49 other states and Puerto Rico, and walked away from the Aug. 22 pageant with the Miss U.S. Teen crown and quite a few prizes including a $5,000 scholarship.

Miss Tyson sees the title as an opportunity to travel and a learning experience that will help her throughout life.

"Hopefully I won't be as nervous about going to college and going through interviews since the pageants," Miss Tyson said. "I hope they've given me more poise and grace to handle a lot of different situations."

"It's easy for me to see how Christa has gained from the pageants," Carol Tyson said of her daughter. "She has gained so much self confidence, and she has had to clarify her thinking on what she wants to do in life and how she really feels about certain issues."

North Carolina Teen pageant director Ron Simmons said the interview was one of Miss Tyson's best areas.

He and his wife, Elise Moss, North Carolina pageant directors for the past five years, brought contestants from Mississippi, Georgia, Alabama, and Ohio to Huntsville, Ala., for mock interviews three days before the national pageant.

"We had an attorney in Huntsville as one of the interviewers and she was really amazed at Christa's maturity and her grasp of the issues," Simmons said. "All the girls had really prepared beforehand."

"Today in pageants, you have to think on your feet," Miss Tyson said. "They are looking for scholarship and leadership and community service, really leaning toward the all-American image."

The U.S. Teen pageant included evening gown, finalists' on-stage questions, and an optional talent competition as well as interviews.

Unlike the child beauty queen with the dream of one day being Miss America, Miss Tyson didn't start competing in pageants until her freshman year in high school.

Ironically, that late start may have helped her, Simmons said.

"A lot of kids get an earlier start nowadays, but I think so often, when they start really young, they get burned out and become pageant professionals," he said. "By starting later, there is not so much training and the real person shows through more."

"There are so many good things about Christa," Simmons said. "She is such a sincere person."

Miss Tyson agreed that being sincere is the key to success.

"You have to always be honest with judges and genuine," she said, "because in interviews they can see right through you if you're not."

"Pageants aren't for everybody," Miss Tyson said. "When I started I was just doing it because it was a lot of fun."

Competing for fun led her to capture the Miss North Carolina Teen crown in March. She was also named Miss Junior Civitan International in June.

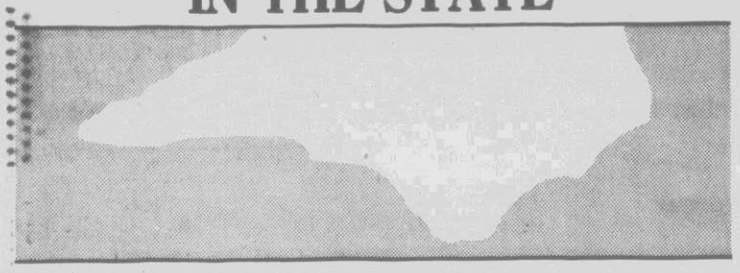
Now her two titles keep her busy with community events, pageant appearances and promotions.

"I have Civitan events some nights and state pageants start in January so it's really exciting," Miss Tyson said. "It might get tiring, but I love to travel and I wouldn't have been able to do this if I hadn't won."

Amid all the hustle and bustle, she keeps her priorities in perspective and said that grades and school activities are at the top of the list.

"Before the pageant people schedule me to be somewhere they always check because they know school is most important, especially now with it being my senior year and trying to get into college," she said. "They know I have to cheer on Friday, so they arrange to fly me out on Saturday morning."

IN THE STATE



No Dracula Here

BREVARD, N.C. (AP) — Dismal associations of Count Dracula conjured by Transylvania County's name could be draining the lifeblood from the area's tourism industry, says an analysis by a Charlotte advertising company.

FacFind Inc. recommends that the Tourism Development Authority bury references to Transylvania County in promotional advertising, substituting references to "the Brevard area." The study noted that some tourists asked about the name gave such responses as "Dracula" and "scary," although others knew it was a county in North Carolina.

"Thus, at best, the name depicts the area in which Brevard is located; at worst it depicts horror stories," said the study presented last week.

Although Brevard recently slid from No. 1 to No. 32 in the latest "Places Rated Retirement Guide," county officials said that did not reflect on the county name. And they said there are good reasons not to exorcise Transylvania from tourism literature.

"The fact is, we work for Transylvania County; we're a Transylvania County agency," said TDA member Mac Morrow. "I don't think you'll find Dracula lurking around here."

Leaf Shortage

WILMINGTON (AP) — The latest crop report shows that the flue-cured tobacco crop is falling short of predictions and far short of the effective quota, said Fred Bond, general manager of Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp.

A September report estimates that 675 million pounds will be produced, Bond said Friday after a meeting of Stabilization's board of directors. An earlier estimate indicated that 720 million pounds would be produced.

The effective quota this year was about 740 million pounds. The effective quota is figured by adding the amount the previous year's crop fell short of its quota to the quota set by the federal government for this year.

Much of the shortage is in the Old Belt, Bond said. Stabilization directors from the Old Belt expressed concerns about reports of poor-quality tobacco in their area, he said, and despite the reports, "there is some excellent tobacco in the Old Belt."

Objections Raised

GREENSBORO (AP) — A police practice of wearing plastic gloves when writing traffic citations in an area frequented by homosexuals has drawn objections as an unnecessary and offensive procedure.

"How often do you see a police officer wearing gloves making a routine traffic stop?" asked Randall Busby, a bar owner who was ticketed in the Commerce Place area for an expired inspection sticker during a recent license check.

"In spite of an outstanding education program ... the actions of the patrol officers in wearing gloves demonstrates a glaring lack of education and knowledge," he said.

Reagan Questions Sandinista Sincerity About Peace Accord

By MERRILL HARTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Saturday that a Central American plan for ending the conflict in Nicaragua "falls short of the safeguards for democracy" contained in a proposal that he has offered jointly with House Speaker Jim Wright.

Reagan, in his weekly radio address to the nation, spoke more harshly than previously about the plan agreed to in Guatemala City on Aug. 5 by Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega and the leaders of Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras.

Unlike the plan Reagan advanced last month with Wright, D-Texas, the peace proposal by the five Central American leaders makes no demand for a termination of Soviet involvement in Nicaragua and Soviet assistance to Ortega's government.

During his radio broadcast from Camp David, Md., Reagan suggested that Ortega is making a mockery of the agreement he signed with others on Aug. 5.

"Only eight days after signing the peace agreement, Sandinista police used attack dogs, nightsticks, electric cattle prods and government-organized mobs to break up a peaceful demonstration," he said. "So, too, the six independent Nicaraguan political parties have called efforts by the communists to manipulate the National Reconciliation Commission, set up under the plan, a Sandinista maneuver to fool the international public."

"They accuse the Sandinistas of violating the spirit of the Guatemala agreements, and this week we learn that Daniel Ortega will be in Moscow on Nov. 7, the date the Central American peace plan is to go into effect, celebrating with his Soviet allies the anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution," Reagan added.

He said that "at the appropriate moment" he will submit to Congress a request for $270 million to assist the Contra fighting force over the next 18 months, and said that without the pressure brought against Managua by the resistance fighters, Ortega would never have signed the Guatemala City plan.

Costa Rican President Oscar Arias, who crafted the Central American peace plan, urged the Reagan administration to hold off seeking new aid for the Contra rebels.

"You won't find one single Latin American nation ... who would be in favor of military support for the Contras, who would be openly in favor of a military solution in Nicaragua," Arias said in an interview on John McLaughlin's program "One on One."

"We are for the first time trying to solve our problems with our own solutions. And we deserve the chance," he said.

His comments were made prior to Reagan's radio address.

Reagan, in an interview published in U.S. News & World Report, said he presented his criticisms of the proposed peace plan to Pope John Paul II in their discussion on Thursday, but did not ask for a reply from him. The president declined to disclose any views the pope set forth.

In his radio addres, Reagan noted the observance of the bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution, saying that "as we reflect on our Constitution this week, we must seek to further its purpose here at home and all across the world."

"The cause of freedom is America's cause, and one of the most exciting movements in this direction in the past 10 years has been in Latin America," he said. "And yet, for all the progress in this region, one country, and its 3 million inhabitants, have seen that dream of freedom trampled."

"Many Americans have learned over the last few months what has really been happening in Nicaragua," Reagan added, "how a democratic revolution was betrayed, how a tiny elite has been creating a totalitarian Marxist-Leninist dictatorship to satisfy their own personal lust for power and to give the Soviet Union a beachhead in the mainland of this continent, only 2,000 miles from the Texas, a clear national security threat."

The president said that "we welcome the Guatemala plan, but it falls short of the safeguards for democracy and our national security contained in the bipartisan plan I worked out with the congressional leadership," he said. "That is why ... there should be no uncertainty about our unswerving commitment to the Contras. It is their effort that has made the peace initiative possible."

Reagan called on the Sandinista government to display "real signs of freedom" in Nicaragua, by reopening the newspaper, La Prensa, and allowing it to operate freely, and by granting religious freedom, abolishing the secret police and sending foreign advisers home.

The Sandinista regime, he said, "has a long way to go in living up to its pledge of democratic reform.

2 Missing After Boat Overturns

SOUTHPORT, England (AP) — A man on an ocean fishing expedition swam through the night to get help Saturday after he and three others were left clinging to a cabin cruiser that capsized in high winds and heavy seas, officials said.

Patrick Vaccaro, 18, reached shore after swimming more than 10 hours off western England, police said.

Stephen Woodbridge, 33, was plucked from the sea by a helicopter, in poor condition after surviving in the water for 20 hours, but the remaining two were missing, officials said.

A coast guard spokesman said rescuers were looking for Colin Brookfield, 30, and Geoffrey Clements, 18.

"Life expectancy at these temperatures is about six hours," said the spokesman, speaking anonymously in keeping with British practice.

Woodbridge was in intensive care with severe hypothermia, said Dr. John Watt, who treated him.

Vaccaro was described as "comfortable," officials said.

Vaccaro said the ordeal began when a big wave struck Woodbridge's 15-foot cabin cruiser at 3:30 p.m. Friday and overturned it about four miles off Southport in Merseyside, northwest England.

"All four of us were clinging to the upturned boat for about four hours," said Vaccaro. All were wearing life jackets, he said.

He said he decided to swim for shore, kicked off his shoes and, holding onto the orange buoy from the boat, began to swim.

"I knew it was only four miles," Vaccaro said.

Costs Jeopardize Papal Visits

ROME (AP) — The millions of dollars spent on Pope John Paul II's trip across the United States and elsewhere are traditionally paid for by local churches and governments, while the Vatican faces a growing operating deficit.

A top official for the Roman Catholic Church in the United States says skyrocketing costs of transporting and protecting the pontiff may prevent similar extended papal visits in the future.

"I expect this may be his last tour like this across the United States," said the Rev. Robert Lynch last week. He is associate general secretary of the U.S. Catholic Conference, which is supervising the 10-day U.S. tour.

John Paul's American pilgrimage, his second as pontiff, will cost the conference about $22 million, said Lynch, noting that travel costs increased by 70 percent since the last U.S. papal trip in 1979.

Vatican officials have said John Paul's 36 foreign voyages to date are mostly financed by local church groups through special donations and sale of souvenirs. The Vatican traditionally doesn't reveal figures on what it pays for the trips.

Papal lodging is generally not a problem, since the pope and his entourage usually stay at church residences. Other expenses are often donated, like the two bulletproof "popemobiles" given by the West German Mercedes car manufacturer for the U.S. visit.

Millions of dollars in security costs, however, are also traditionally footed by host governments. In the case of the U.S. trip, much of the expense for Secret Service, National Guard and local police protection will fall on U.S. taxpayers — a fact that has drawn criticism.

In Columbia, S.C., where the pope visited Friday, city costs were estimated at about $120,000, spurring complaints from some local citizens.

Such financial strains seem at odds with the Roman Catholic Church's aura of great wealth, an impression strengthened by its vast array of treasures housed in the Vatican Museum and apartments.

And questions are invariably raised about the big expenses related to the pope's globe-trotting.

Before John Paul's trip to Australia last December, a letter to the editor of the International Herald Tribune asked, "How many jet-borne papal visits did the projected $56 million Vatican deficit pay for?" and suggested that the money should go instead to food and medical aid in the Third World.

In fact, according to Vatican officials speaking on condition of anonymity, the actual Vatican outlay for papal trips is so modest that a commission of cardinals studying ways of reducing the Vatican deficit has exempted the travels from a list of possible cost-cutting areas.

The Vatican has projected its worst-ever budget deficit for 1987 — a total of $63 million. The 1986 budget deficit was put at $56 million.

The budget covers expenses for the curia, or the church's central administration; Vatican Radio; diplomatic missions and the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano. It does not include the Vatican bank, headed by U.S. Archbishop Paul C. Marcinkus, which is considered an autonomous organization.

A Vatican statement on its finances said the deficit was caused by "drastically insufficient wealth of the Holy See, with its total revenue not reaching even half of the expenses necessary for the activities of the (church's) central adminstration."

English No Problem

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Arizona Gov. Evan Mecham is part of the entourage that welcomes the pope to Phoenix on Monday. And he was asked what he will say to John Paul II.

"Golly, I don't know," Mecham replied. "I don't know whether he speaks English or not. The right things will come. We'll welcome him, that's one thing."

The pope speaks seven languages, including English.

Minor Incident

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A man in a white suit, shouting "I am a servant of God," approached the stage as Pope John Paul II spoke at a youth rally at the Superdome on Saturday and was hustled away by police.

Police Capt. W.J. Levett said Secret Service agents questioned the man "rather thoroughly" before letting him go.

"He was just a little over-emotional," Levett said. "When they get that close to the pope, they can't allow it."

Greene Was 'Cartwright To End'

By SUE MANNING
Associated Press Writer

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Lorne Greene "was Ben Cartwright to the end," Michael Landon said after the death of his former "Bonanza" co-star, who portrayed the firm but compassionate father on one of TV's most popular series ever.

Greene died Friday at age 72 at St. John's Hospital, where he developed pneumonia while recovering from an Aug. 19 operation for a perforated ulcer.

The cause of death was respiratory arrest followed by cardiac arrest, said hospital spokeswoman Mary Miller.

With Greene when he died were his second wife, Nancy, their daughter, Gillian, and twins by his first marriage, Linda Bennett and Charles.

"He was Ben Cartwright to the end. He was ready with no complaints," Landon, who had visited him in the hospital, said in a statement.

"The last time I saw him he couldn't speak," said Landon, who portrayed Cartwright's youngest son, Little Joe. "I took his hand in mine and held it. He looked at me and then slowly started to arm wrestle like we used to and he broke into a smile and nodded and everything was OK. I think he wanted me to know everything was OK."

Services were scheduled Monday at Hillside Memorial Park in Culver City, said Roxanne Lawrence, Greene's secretary. Greene, a barrel-chested man with white hair, bushy black eyebrows and a deep, resonant voice, began his career as a newscaster in Canada, where he was born to Jewish immigrants from Eastern Europe.

After "Bonanza" finished its 14-year run, he took on different TV roles, playing a detective in "Griff," a space commander in "Battlestar Galactica" and a fire chief in "Code Red." He appeared in recent years in dog food commercials.

But Greene was most closely tied to his image as widower Ben Cartwright in the old West, owner of the vast Ponderosa ranch and stern "Pa" to three headstrong sons — Adam, played by Pernell Roberts, Hoss, played by Dan Blocker, and Little Joe.

"I think the biggest thing I remember about him is how he, and particularly how he and Michael Landon started to live their roles," said David Dortort, creator and producer of "Bonanza."

"There was a real family feeling on the show."

Landon would seek advice from Greene in a real father-son sort of relationship, Dortort recalled. "They weren't acting," he said. "The camera wasn't on them."

Greene had planned to perform again as Cartwright in a television movie. "Bonanza: The Next Generation," will begin production as scheduled on Oct. 26 at the Lake Tahoe-area site of the original series, Dortort said.

Unlike the sometimes stern, humorless Cartwright, Greene was full of good spirits. He even built a replica of the Ponderosa ranch house in Arizona, complete with a staircase that led to nowhere.

"Bonanza" made Greene a multimillionaire. He invested in real estate, and ran thoroughbred horses at Santa Anita and Del Mar race tracks in Southern California.

Greene was a little-known actor in 1959 when he was cast for the NBC series. After a shaky start, "Bonanza" zoomed in popularity and was seen by an estimated 400 million people in 80 countries.

The series was so popular that Jack Gould, then-television critic for The New York Times, wrote in 1965:

"President Johnson reputedly has enough respect for the 'Bonanza' popularity not to schedule a speech that could clash with such decisions as might be simultaneously reached at the Ponderosa."

NBC canceled "Bonanza" in January 1973, but the 431 episodes will be seen in reruns for years to come.

Roberts quit the show in 1965 and Blocker died in 1972 of a blood clot after a gall bladder operation.

Greene, who was born Feb. 12, 1915, in Ottawa, based his character on his own father, Daniel Greene, a maker of orthopedic boots and shoes.

Reggae Star Dies In Robbery Try

By LLOYD WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — Three motorcyle gunmen trying to rob reggae star Peter Tosh at his home killed him and another man and wounded five people when they resisted, police said Saturday.

They said Tosh's longtime companion Marlene Brown was among those wounded in the Friday night attack on the home of the former "Wailer," who was one of the founding fathers of Jamaica's vibrant music of revolution.

Outside Jamaica, Tosh, 42, was perhaps best known for his collaboration with Rolling Stones lead singer Mick Jagger in "(You Got to) Walk and Don't Look Back," a song written by Smokey Robinson. He was nominated for a Grammy in 1985 for best reggae recording for "Captured Live."

Police said the assailants arrived on motorcycles at Tosh's home in the affluent St. Andrew suburb of this capital, demanded money from those present and fired when the victims refused to comply.

Officers declined to provide further details, and said there were no arrests by Saturday evening.

Jamaica Radio said the attackers used 9mm pistols. It identified the other fatality only as "Doc."

Ms. Brown, whom local newspapers have called Tosh's wife despite the couple's lack of a legal bond, and three others were in stable condition Saturday at University Hospital.

But Jeff Dixon, a disc jockey with Jamaica Broadcasting Corp., was in critical condition with a bullet wound in the head, according to hospital officials.

Police identified the others wounded as Santa Davis, a drummer in Tosh's band; Dixon's wife Yvonne, and Michael Robinson, described by Jamaica Radio as another musician.

A Kingston radio station on Saturday rebroadcast an interview with Tosh in which the singer-songwriter lamented the role of money in society and concluded it caused more harm than good.

"It hasdamaged the minds of many people," Tosh said in the interview. "It has killed many people and it could kill me."

Tosh, an advocate of legalization of marijuana, was known to smoke huge marijuana cigarettes called "spliffs" on stage during concerts.

Jamaicans reacted with sorrow and anger to the death of Tosh, who with Bob Marley and Neville Livingstone formed the three-man core of the The Wailers. The group is credited with making reggae popular far beyond the shores of this verdant, English-speaking island.

As news of his murder was broadcast, fans gathered near Tosh's home and at the hospital, and radio stations played his songs by the hour.

"Peter Tosh gave to Jamaica and the world an unforgettable library of musical works which will be played and sung by many generations of people," former Prime Minister Michael Manley said in tribute.

In 1978, before a Kingston crowd of 30,000 that included then-Prime Minister Manley, Tosh smoked a big marijuana cigarette on stage and berated Manley for 30 minutes for not legalizing "ganja."

Tosh had several run-ins with police and was jailed for possession of marijuana in the mid-60s.

Tosh was born Winston Herbert MacIntosh on Oct. 9, 1944, on a farm in west Jamaica. He made his first guitar out of a piece of board and tin, using plastic for strings, according to musicologist Dermot Hussey.

His first concerts were in Kingston's teeming slums in the early 1960s. In 1963, he helped found The Wailers and gained fame with hits including "I Shot the Sheriff," "Get Up, Stand Up," and "Stir it Up."

Tosh and Livingstone left the band in 1973, just as the album "Catch a Fire" was winning reggae an international audience. The two went their separate ways partly because Marley, who died of a brain tumor in 1981, was taking over the starring role.

Tosh formed his own band — Word, Sound and Power — and wrote songs characterized by their political content. "Mama Africa" denounced apartheid in South Africa; "Legalize It" favored the legalization of marijuana.

Reggae has diverse origins, with influences from the Jamaican Rastafarian religious sect, Africa, and New Orleans. Tosh was a Rastafarian and he considered smoking marijuana a religious rite.

Carter Cancer Said Inoperable

ATLANTA (AP) — Billy Carter, diagnosed as having inoperable cancer of the pancreas, will remain in Emory University Hospital's intensive care unit for "another day or two," a hospital spokeswoman said Saturday.

"We don't expect any remarkable change in his condition over the next few days," said spokeswoman Judy Smith.

Carter, the younger brother of former President Jimmy Carter, was admitted to the hospital Tuesday suffering from jaundice. Tests revealed an obstruction of a bile duct in his pancreas, causing the jaundice, and a biopsy identified the cancer.

During a six-hour operation Friday, doctors relieved the obstruction but found the cancer was inoperable.

"The prognosis is poor," Emory cancer specialist Dr. Martin York said Friday. "It is impossible to put a time on survival with pancreatic cancer. I have had patients who have survived as long as two or three years, but for most, it is not as long as that."

Carter, 50, a gas-station owner in Plains, Ga., became the best known of Jimmy Carter's siblings for his irreverent jokes and comments on political issues, which on occasion caused the president embarrassment.

A sister, evangelist Ruth Carter Stapleton, died in 1983 of pancreatic cancer, the same disease that also killed their father, James Earl Carter, in 1953.

Firefighters Looking For Rain

By ROGER PETTERSON
Associated Press Writer

All but one major forest fire in Oregon should be contained this weekend, fire officials said Saturday, but thousands of weary firefighters battling huge conflagrations in northern California were hoping for rain to speed the fight, which has cost four lives.

Firefighters in Washington mopped up the last of their blazes, while crews in Arizona and southern California each had one out-of-control fire. Crews in Montana hoped to have a 175-acre fire in rugged terrain contained by Sunday morning.

Since a wave of lightning storms began setting fires Aug. 28, more than 1,100 square miles of forest, brush and grassland have gone up in smoke in the West.

A fourth firefighter was killed in California, in the Stanislaus National Forest, the Forest Service said Saturday. A tree the man was cutting down knocked down another tree that fell on him Friday, said spokesman Kirk Landuyt. The three previous deaths involved vehicular accidents, two of them blamed on dense smoke.

Crews in Washington were aided Saturday by cool, humid weather with no wind.

But no rain fell overnight anywhere in California, where mammoth fires still burned in northern forests in the worst fire outbreak in state history. More than 865 square miles had burned in that state alone.

A slow-moving storm came ashore on California's north-central early Saturday and held out some hope of rain south of Lake Tahoe in the Sierra Nevada, the National Weather Service reported.

Of the 558,636 acres charred in California by 1,247 fires, nearly a quarter of the acreage was in the northernmost part of the state in the Klamath National Forest, where almost 6,000 firefighters continued trying to tame 32 major blazes and 40 smaller ones.

The Klamath fires were roughly 40 percent contained, with 250 miles of fire lines around the perimeters, "but we still have a long way to go," said state forestry department spokesman John Garland.

But in the Stanislaus National Forest, in the Sierra Nevada about 130 miles east of San Francisco, a complex of fires that burned more than 100,000 acres was 75 percent contained, and should be completely contained by Monday night, Forest Service officials said.

In Mendocino County, along the coast north of San Francisco, 68 fires were all reported contained. But inland, two of three major blazes remained out of control in the Mendocino National Forest.

Fire officials in Oregon said all but the 28,100-acre Silver Complex of fires 25 miles north of Grants Pass should be contained by firebreaks Sunday. That complex was 25 percent contained Saturday morning, said Forest Service spokeswoman Patty Burel.

The 650 Army soldiers sent to Oregon from Fort Ord, Calif., were shifted to that fire Friday after finishing mop-up chores on another blaze. They nearly doubled the number of firefighters battling the Silver Complex fires.

The 18,400-acre Galice fire 20 miles west of Grants Pass in the Siskiyou National Forest was 85 percent contained by Saturday morning, Ms. Burel said.

Oregon Gov. Neil Goldschmidt visited a fire camp Friday at Valley of the Rogue State Park and congratulated Oregon National Guardsmen and firefighters from as far away as Michigan and Arizona.

"This is probably the largest (National Guard) call-up we've had in modern times," Goldschmidt said. "You made us proud. You ought to be proud of yourselves. Way to go!"

In southern California, the Silverado fire in the Cleveland National Forest was 60 percent contained Saturday at 3,200 acres and full containment was expected Sunday, said Forest Service spokesman Tom Horner.

That arson fire had briefly threatened homes and nearly 1,200 firefighters were battling it in steep terrain.

In southern Arizona, a brush fire in the Coronado National Forest had burned 2,700 acres in the Santa Catalina Mountains just outside Tucson. Officials planned to have 130 firefighters, including inmates from state prisons, battle that blaze Saturday.

'Miracle Babies' Face Challenges

By CHRIS ANGELO
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — As little Evelia tosses her light brown curls, not a trace can be seen of the long gash she suffered on her head when a hospital collapsed in the September 1985 earthquakes. She was trapped by tons of concrete for the first five days of her life.

Approaching their second birthdays, Mexico's 19 "miracle babies" who spent from eight hours to nearly nine days in the rubble of two hospitals are starting to talk. One of Evelia's words is "papitas," Spanish for potato chips, which she eats with gusto.

Doctors who give the babies regular checkups say only one has any physical problems related to the earthquake injuries or the days without milk, water or medical attention.

Their biggest challenges are to overcome poverty and being treated as something special, the medical teams say.

"With the exception of one or two who are all right as far as money is concerned, most are low income families," Dr. Miguel Angel Carreon of the Hospital Infantil said of the children he sees. "What we watch most closely is their nutritional condition."

When Juarez Hospital, and the nearby General Hospital, collapsed in the Sept. 19 earthquake, some babies were hurt by falling debris. While they were trapped, the wounds became infected, and the infants became dehydrated. Some developed metabolism problems.

One baby, Jesus, had two operations in the past year on a hip joint that was deformed when infection spread through his body, Carreon said.

Relatives are caring for the 11 babies whose mothers were among the estimated 9,500 who died in the earthquake that registered 8.1 on the Richter scale.

The Richter scale is a gauge of the energy released by an earthquake, as measured by the ground motion recorded on a seismograph. A magnitude of 8 signifies a "great" earthquake, capable of tremendous damage.

Evelia and Lucia both call two men "Papa" — their real fathers, and the husbands of the aunts who took them in.

Lucia's aunt, Marcelina Rojas de Castillo, says the attention of her own seven children, aged 13 to 20 will spoil Lucia, who will be 2 on Sept. 18.

"She sweeps, washes clothes, sings 'Las Mananitas.' She likes to dance," Mrs. Castillo said. "She cries when you tell her 'no' and does it anyway."

She races down the street where she lives at the edge of city with two other cousins, aged 3 and 2, and delights when her father brings her six sisters home weekends.

Although Lucia has plenty of attention, her six sisters were seriously neglected. Two were found to be suffering second- to third-degree malnutrition. The six now live during the week at a Roman Catholic boarding school, a plan arranged by U.S. Private and Voluntary Organizations using monthly donations from Abe Pollin, owner of a sports arena in Maryland.

Most days, Lucia tags along with her 19-year-old cousin Maria de los Angeles to the open-air market where her uncle sells apples, bananas and other fruit.

Her hair in pigtails, she plays under the tables and runs between stands, rarely letting go of her brown-haired doll, a present from her father when she was six months old.

Come nap time, the yellow and blue hammock goes up. She's slept in one at home since she was able to scramble out of her crib.

Lucia's father, Moises Rojas Machorro, sells tomatoes on the sidewalk.

Evelia and her 4-year-old brother spend some days at another market, where their father, Victor Manuel Alvarez, and aunt and uncle sell used clothes and shoes, costume jewelry and other items.

Usually one of the adults stays home to care for the children.

They earn about $46 a week together, plus what the aunt makes one day a week at a market in another city.

"You sell to keep eating," the uncle, Reynaldo Becerra de Aguillon, said. "Right now I'm selling brooms."

During the past year, Becerra and his wife built two small bedrooms above the neat kitchen-living-dining room where they, their two children, aged 9 and 11, and Evelia live.

Alvarez and his son have a room with a kitchen next to the Becerras in the house, a series of rooms around a patio. They recently estimated the cost of building a full bathroom at $330.

Libier Marquez, a social worker at the Hospital Infantil, says the 14 families they see are economically and emotionally more stable than a year ago.

"Now all the fathers have jobs and stable incomes. It was not always that way."

SECOND BIRTHDAY — Victor Manuel Alvarez holds his daughter, Evelia, one of 19 "miracle babies" who survived from about eight hours to nearly nine days in the rubble of a hospital that collapsed in the Sept. 19, 1985, Mexico City earthquake. Evelia will celebrate her second birthday soon. Doctors say only one of the children has any problems related to the ordeal. (AP Laserphoto)©

Philippine Fighting Leaves 13 Dead

By EILEEN GUERRERO
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Communist rebels battled troops in fierce fighting near Manila that began at 5:30 a.m. Saturday and still raged more than 15 hours later, with at least 13 combatants killed, military sources said.

A top guerrilla chief, Satur Ocampo, appealed Saturday for support against the "bankrupt and worn-out" government of President Corazon Aquino, shaken by a failed coup and Cabinet crisis.

Mrs. Aquino delayed an announcement on changes in her Cabinet, which resigned last Wednesday following the Aug. 28 coup attempt by Col. Gregorio "Gringo" Honasan and about 1,500 followers.

A government-backed Coalition for Peace called for a "march for peace" to Camp Aguinaldo to show support for the president and for the loyal troops who put down the coup attempt. But the march drew only some 800 participants.

Saturday's fighting broke out when a patrol encountered about 60 rebels of the communist New People's Army in San Juan village, about 30 miles west of Manila.

Military sources, who demanded anonymity, said fighting went on into the night and that at least six soldiers and seven rebels were killed. One source said troops seized about a dozen firearms.

The government-run Philippines News Agency said two helicopter gunships were sent to support the soldiers.

Rebels also raided municipal halls in nearby Pilar and Orion, about 10 miles to the south. There were no reports of casualties.

The towns are located across Manila Bay from the capital on the historic Bataan peninsula, where a U.S.-Filipino force battled Japanese invaders in World War II. Communist rebels, fighting an 18-year-old insurrection, now control numerous communities on the mountainous peninsula.

A military source said the rebel attacks were believed aimed at drawing security forces from another Bataan town, Balanga, where intelligence reports said Ocampo was hiding.

But as the fighting raged, Ocampo, an official of the rebel National Democratic Front, was actually with reporters at a 45-minute news conference in the Sierra Madre mountains about 80 miles east of Bataan.

Ocampo appealed to the Filipino people "to support the revolutionary peoples' government now emerging throughout the country as an alternative to the bankrupt and worn-out ruling system."

He said last month's coup attempt and the subsequent resignation of Mrs. Aquino's 25-member Cabinet showed the government was unraveling.

He said the United States was maneuvering to prevent the collapse of the Aquino administration, but its efforts would only further isolate the 54-year-old president. He predicted that the armed forces and political conservatives would emerge with stronger influence.

Ocampo said that "these maneuvers will push the economic and political crisis deeper toward national disaster."

Mrs. Aquino had told reporters she would begin announcing Cabinet changes by Saturday. But her spokesman, Teodoro Benigno, said she decided to delay any announcement until she was ready to make public all the changes at once.

Benigno refused further comment Saturday. There was no indication whether the president was having problems finding qualified candidates to accept the posts.

On Thursday, Mrs. Aquino urged Filipinos to stage public rallies to show support for loyal elements of the military in a bid to recapture the spirit of the February 1986 "people power revolution" which swept her to power.

But only about 800 people, many of them students, workers, Roman Catholic priests and nuns, turned out for Saturday's march to the military headquarters, scene of the fiercest fighting in the failed coup.

German Train Derails

BERLIN (AP) — Two coaches of an East German express train derailed near Magdeburg, injuring 13 people, four of them seriously, East Germany's official ADN news agency reported Saturday.

The accident occurred late Friday as the train left Magdeburg station, bound from Leipzig to Wismar, on the Baltic coast, ADN said.

The locomotive engineer was suspected of driving too fast and was under investigation, ADN said.

Michael Jackson Launches World Tour

By JIM IMPOCO
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — Michael Jackson "moon-walked," gyrated and postured through 16 songs before a sell-out crowd of 38,000 frenzied fans at a baseball stadium Saturday night, making his first concert appearance in more than four years.

The singer drew shrieks of "Maike-ru," the Japanese pronunciation of Michael, as he sailed through his array of stylized poses, karate kicks and his trademark moon-walking — sliding backward while appearing to move forward.

"Ordinary people just can't move like that. It's superhuman. Nobody has talent like that," said Atsuko Nogi, 22.

The 29-year-old American superstar dazzled the crowd of mostly Japanese at Korakuen Stadium with an array of special effects during the nearly two-hour extravaganza. But the dance steps and all but two of the songs were largely recyled, vintage Jackson standards.

Giant panels of blinding light slowly rose from the stage, dimmed suddenly and Jackson appeared on the stage to a rousing ovation.

Beams of green light showered Jackson, at times enveloping him in the shape of a twister. Stunts included a disappearing act in which Jackson, clad in a skintight black metal-studded outfit and standard sequined-glove most of the night, emerged from the opposite end of the stage.

About 700 lights, 100 speakers, two 24-by-18 foot screens and three lasers using 40 mirrors created a set at times reminiscent of a Steven Spielberg movie. Jackson's spokesmen refused to disclose the cost of the production.

Four dancers, four singers and seven musicians shared the stage with Jackson, changing into dozens of different costumes ranging from spacemen decked out with fiber-optic lights to ghouls.

It took a while for Jackson to warm the crowd up. Early attempts to have the audience sing along fell flat. But most of the audience was on its feet and roaring before the finale.

"It's sensational. Just like, well, Madonna," said Eriko Ameko, 19, who flew 1,000 miles from Okinawa to attend the concert.

It was the first show of Jackson's 13-concert Japan tour and kicked off a world solo tour that will take him to Australia, New Zealand, Europe and the United States. Jackson has not performed live since his "Victory Tour" played to less-than-full capacity crowds 4½ years ago.

All 367,500 tickets to shows in Tokyo and three other cities were sold out within hours of going on sale. "No act has ever sold out more than five. We've sold 13," Frank Dileo, Jackson's personal manager, told The Associated Press.

Sometimes It's Nice Just To Have Someone To Talk To.

Sometimes the elderly don't see anyone all day.

Some can't get around by themselves. Some aren't in good health and have no family or friends to take care of them. And for some, the simple task of going to the grocery store is impossible.

These people are right here in Pitt County and they have someone who cares. You care. Through your support of the United Way in Pitt County you give these elderly people, and a great many others, something to look forward to.

Through the United Way's support of Home Delivered Meals for the elderly, you reach out to these people with a helpful hand, or a meal, or a visit.

This year the United Way needs over one million dollars to support over thirty organizations in Pitt County. Organizations that care about the people in Pitt County.

Organizations that care about you and are there for you when you need them.

We need your support.

Please Give.

Death Of Woman In Suttee Ritual Prompts Pilgrims To Visit Village

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A small village in the desert state of Rajasthan is becoming a magnet for Hindu pilgrims after a young woman there committed the outlawed rite of suttee — burning herself to death on her husband's funeral pyre.

Thousands of people have visited tiny Deorala since the 18-year-old woman died amid the flames Sept. 4, performing a rite that has been illegal since 1829 but still persists in rare cases in remote villages.

Indian newspapers on Saturday carried stories of the death and pictures of pilgrims staring at the barricaded suttee sthal, or place of fiery death in the village about 100 miles southwest of New Delhi.

A.K. Saxena, police superintendent of Sikar district, confirmed by telephone that the suttee occurred. "I went to the site the following day and it is true," he said. He refused to give details.

Newspaper accounts said the young widow, Roop Kunwar, went to her death in traditional fashion — dressed in the gold and finery she wore for her wedding only eight months earlier.

She placed her husband's head in her lap and commanded the funeral pyre be lit by a relative as a crowd of about 4,000 chanted "suttee mata ki jai" — "long live mother suttee."

The Times of India said a rumor is spreading in Deorala that the widow had only to raise her hand and the fire started by itself, a sign of divine intervention.

The Telegraph of Calcutta said the young woman was no "illiterate village belle." She had been to high school, a considerable education for an Indian village woman.

Her husband, 24-year-old Maan Singh, died of gastroenteritis, an inflammation of the the stomach and the intestines.

The Times quoted her father-in-law, Sumer Singh, as saying there was no way to dissuade Roop Kunwar. "How could we hold out? With every passing minute the spirit of suttee was taking possession of her soul," He said.

Her own father, Pal Rathore, learned of her death at his home in Jaipur, about 60 miles away. He told the Times he felt "bittersweet" and saddened by the death but consoled by pilgrims' worship of his daughter as a "devi," a goddess.

Police arrived only after the suttee and made no arrests, perhaps mindful that officers who stopped a suttee in the Rajistan village of Devipura in 1985 had to fire tear gas to quell a crowd of 40,000.

Newspapers say no arrests are likely until after a religious rite next week, 13 days after the death. Charges of abetting a suicide may be filed then, the reports said.

After the 1985 suttee, Yaduvendra Sahay, keeper of the Royal Palace Museum in the Rajastahan capital of Jaipur, said one or two women commit the death rite in the state each year. Rajasthan is home to the Rajput warrior caste, which had a strong tradition of suttee in the past.

The practice has its beginnings in Hindu legend which tells of Sati, the wife of a god, setting herself afire to avenge a slight to her husband. It was given impetus by 13th-century Moslem invaders who often kidnapped unprotected women such as widows.

Even today, a widow's life in rural India can be lonely and dreadful.

In Deolara, teacher Cheetar Singh told the Times he could understand the young widow's suicide.

"After all, she had no life to look forward to," He said. "Remarriage was out of the question in this tradition-bound community. She had no children. Our society treats a widow as a 'kulachani' " — an evil omen, an economic liability.

"She has to remain barefoot, sleep on the floor and not venture out of the house. She is slandered if seen talking to any male," Singh said. "It was better that she died than lead such a life."

In death, Roop Kunwar is being venerated. The Indian Express reports that since her death, 25,000 people have visited the sati sthal.

Officials Lose Jobs In Economic Moves

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — The Communist Party dismissed three deputy premiers from the 64-member Cabinet in this month's second reshuffle of key economic posts, the party daily Scinteia said Saturday.

The party's executive political committee added two deputy premiers at its meeting Friday, the daily said. It said the changes were "to strengthen the management of activity of some sectors and economic ministries."

President and Communist Party chief Nicolae Ceausescu presided over the meeting, it said.

On Sept. 3, the committee restructured key economic departments and pinpointed shortfalls in fulfilling plan targets. It requested "firm measures for the radical improvement of the entire activity."

Vital sectors such as coal, oil and chemical production have been behind targets in recent years and serious energy shortages over the past three winters have led to stringent conservation measures.

On Friday, Dimitrie Ancuta, Ion C. Petre and Aneta Spornic were relieved as deputy premiers to be given other tasks, the party daily said.

Stefan Andrei, a senior party offical, and Ion Constantinescu were named deputy premiers overseeing economic activities, it said.

Constantinescu was relieved of his post as ministry state secretary at the State Planning Committee, but no mention was made of who would take over that post.

Andrei, 56, served as foreign minister from 1978 to 1985, when he was appointed a party secretary responsible for economic problems.

Arrest-Arms Link Eyed

TURIN, Italy (AP) — A Swiss man has been arrested on a U.S. arms trafficking warrant and could be connected to the Iran-Contra arms affair, authorities said Saturday.

Sources in the Turin police department, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Walther Demuth, 63, of Bern, was arrested at the Jolly Hotel Ligure by anti-terrorism police on Sept. 8. His arrest was revealed only Saturday.

An international warrant issued Aug. 20, 1986 by judicial authorities in New York charges him with illegal commerce of military materials and defrauding the American government, police said.

Demuth is head of the Swiss company Helitrade, which deals in arms and aircraft, according to the police report. Police said that at the time of his arrest, he was involved in selling five second-hand French planes to Iran.

The police sources said Demuth was believed to be connected with the U.S.-Iran arms case, but no further details were available about that purported link.

Police said they were examining what they described as "very important" documents found on Demuth concerning arms deals. They said they were trying to find out if he committed any crime in Italy before deciding whether to send him to the United States for possible prosecution.

U.S. and Italian judicial officials were scheduled to meet Monday at the Turin Court of Appeals to discuss the case, police added.

Neither Helitrade officials nor Swiss authorities could be reached for comment Saturday.

FROM PITT COUNTY — Debutantes Elizabeth Ashley Layne of Greenville, left, and her brother, Frank Broadhurst Layne, are waiting for their turn in the spotlight with Judith Paige Latham of Bethel and her father, Ramon Bonner Latham.

N.C. Debutante Ball Held Friday

RALEIGH — Ashley Elizabeth Allen led 224 debutantes from across the state in forming the traditional cartwheel figure at the annual Debutante Ball held Friday evening at the Civic Center.

Her escort was Charles Lee Smith III, chairman of the ball. Miss Allen's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Arch T. Allen III of Raleigh.

Seven debutantes from Martin and Pitt counties made their formal bows to society, including Amanda Moore Johnson, daughter of Ann Moore Johnson of Greenville and W.L. Johnson of Naples, Fla.; Judith Paige Latham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ramon Bonner Latham of Bethel; Elizabeth Ashley Layne, daughter of Elizabeth Holland Layne of Greenville and the late Frank Dow Layne; Tracye Taylor O'Bannon, daughter of Suzanne Turcotte of Greenville and John N. O'Bannon of Marshall, Va.; Amanda Frances Prince, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Brian Prince of Williamson; Martha Moye Cherry Taylor, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Allen Taylor of Greenville, and Nancy Battle VanNortwick, daughter of Kay VanNortwick of Greenville and N.O. VanNortwick III of Fountain.

Wally Hinkamp and his orchestra provided music for the presentation of debutantes.

For her presentation, Miss Johnson wore a gown designed by Bianchi of Boston. The gown was also worn by her mother in 1960 and her sister in 1980. Made of candlelight silk peau de soie, the gown had a high bodice appliqued in hand-clipped alencon lace embroidered in pearls and crystal beads. A tie ending in an obi bow accented the back of the gown. The skirt was fashioned with two side panels of the beaded lace appliques.

Miss Latham chose a formal gown of white satin and re-embroidered alencon lace fashioned with a fitted basque bodice designed with a portrait neckline beaded in pearls and iridescents. The elbow length Victorian sleeves of satin had insets of lace, pearls and iridescents. The gathered skirt flowed into floor length and was edged with re-embroidered alencon lace.

A white designed gown of silk and slipper satin was selected by Miss Layne. The dress has a fitted bodice with an off-shoulder neckline. The puffed sleeves were highlighted with hand-embroidered leaves made of seed pearls and iridescents. The full skirt fell from a fitted waist in folds with the leaf pattern repeated on the back.

Miss O'Bannon's gown was by Bianchi. Fashioned of white peau de soie, the neckline was worn off-shoulder. The gown had puff sleeves and a straight skirt. Alencon lace trimmed the bodice with iridescents and pearls.

Miss Prince selected a gown designed with a low fitted bodice that extended below the waistline, corded in silk satin. The bodice was of alencon lace beaded in pearls and iridescent sequins which featured a portrait neckline. the neckline was edged with lace scallops and the full satin puff sleeves were accented with beaded alencon lace. The full bell skirt flowed into the back with puffs of sastin accented with beaded lace appliques that continued to the hemline.

Miss Taylor was dressed in a gown created by Priscilla of Boston. The fitted gown of organza over peau de soie was designed with spaghetti straps and a bodice of Belgian lace beaded with pearls. A border of matching lace and pearls accented the gown hemline. The gown was worn by her sisters, Lauren, Eliza and Adelia when they made their debuts.

A formal gown of white delustered satin charmeuse was worn by Miss VanNortwick. The gown had a bateau neckline and short, petal sleeves. A fitted cap under-sleeve of imported English net was embellished with appliques of re-embroidered alencon lace beaded with pearls and iridescent sequins. The elongated bodice featured princess lines and the dropped waistline was enhanced with sprays of beaded alencon lace flowers. The full skirt was edged at the hemline with embroidered lace.

Terpsichorean Club members and their ladies formed their traditional figure just prior to the formal presentation.

The Embers and the Waller Family played for a dance at the Carolina Country Club after the formal presentation. This was followed by a buffet breakfast.

On Saturday morning, a morning dance was held at the Carolina Country Club with music provided by three groups — the Waller Family, Junior Walker and the Allstars and Xenon. A parents' cocktail party was held at the Capital City Club Saturday evening and the debutantes and their marshals attended a dance at Radisson Plaza. Music was provided by The Maxx and the Magnetics.

Activities on Thursday included registration followed by rehearsal at the Civic Center. Debutantes and their parents attended a cocktail party during the evening. Mothers of debutantes were honored at a buffet luncheon given Friday by Mrs. Hubert Murry Lewis, honorary chairman. Chief marshals and debutantes attended a luncheon.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Reject Flawed Exemption Policy

When it meets Monday, the Pitt County Board of Education should reject the exam exemption policy before it on the premise it is flawed and cheats students of valuable test-taking experience.

The proposal is a deficient measure that hurts students by not preparing them to take exams. It is a permissive policy that remunerates mediocrity and pats students on the back for simply being in class — something they are required to do anyway.

Instead of approving this slipshod approach to final exams, the board should request administrators formulate a policy with no exemptions or one that allows only seniors with strong A averages to bypass finals.

The proposed policy coddles students by requiring only those with a grade of D to take finals. A no-fault clause letting students who do take the exam waive the score if it damages their grade makes the measure even less credible.

The board should reject the policy with the knowledge the approach is not consistent with the goal of excellence in education. Students should be rewarded for good performance and effort, not just showing up and occupying a classroom seat.

Some students do need incentive to be in class, and facts indicate basing exam exemption on attendance increases the number of students in classrooms regularly. But the philosophy is not the correct approach to attendance or exams. Attendance is necessary to learning but exams are essential to test cumulative knowledge.

Good systemwide attendance is also required for a county to increase state education monies, since funding is based on average daily membership — how many students attend class regularly. But it is a disservice to use exam policy as the strategy to increase revenues for a school system — while sacrificing quality education.

In an excellent school system, students are rewarded for achievement, not babied into attending class. For Pitt County to be one of the top-quality school systems in the state, it must have an exam policy with more punch than the one the board is considering.

Approving the proposed policy would be a mistake. Rejecting it will be a step toward excellence.

"I SAID... DON'T WORRY — EVERYTHING'S UNDER CONTROL!"

A Story Of Southern Hospitality

Alvin Taylor

Sunday Morning Notes

Pat Dubber, wife of the late Col. A E Dubber who was Greenville's redevelopment and housing director for many years, sent in the story of her sister's nephew who experienced car trouble near Wilson recently.

Malcolm J. Odel, Jr. of Amesbury Mass. wrote:

"While the Civil War might still be simmering in some corners of the USA, it certainly is not in Wilson County. This Yankee, stranded on a country road on the way from Washington, D.C. to Atlantic Beach, N.C. encountered extraordinary kindness he'll never forget.

"It was nightfall on a Friday and I was on my way to join my family for a weekend on the coast when my car suddenly quit on a country road outside the crossroad community of Stantonsburg. It was soon apparent that major repairs would be required.

"To make a long story short, not one but two of the nicest 'country boys' one could hope to meet went out of their way to get me back on the road. When that proved to no avail, one of them, proprietor of a small store — took my car keys from my hand and replaced them with his own."

He quoted the man as saying, "Now, you let me get my friends at the dealership in Wilson 15 miles up the road to fix up your car. You take my car and go join your family for the weekend."

Odell said he protested, insisting his wife could borrow a car and come pick him up.

"Not on your life," the man said. "It will be midnight before she gets here and that's no time for a lady to be out driving on strange roads."

Odell continued, "What could I say? So I humbly accepted his offer — a lovely car with air conditioning and a nice radio to boot. Three days later my wife and children picked up our car in Wilson — properly repaired at a fair price — and returned the borrowed car. Our profuse 'thanks' seemed pitifully inadequate given the circumstances, thus this letter.

"We certainly learned the true meaning of 'Southern Hospitality' — and we hope the next time our friends in New England hear a southern drawl they might remember our tale!"

A nice story. Too often a breakdown on the highway means a long wait until someone comes who is willing to help. That's a far cry from the days when rural homes took in travelers for the night rather than leave them at the mercies of the elements. While that doesn't happen anymore, there are still people who go out of their way to help the stranded motorist.

Hard To See

Americans largely live in a sheltered society far removed from realities faced by a multitude of repressed peoples in other lands. It's hard for us to visualize torture as an instrument of choice among outwardly civilized societies but the unbelieveable is too believeable for doctors from 18 countries who met last week in Paris to discuss how to treat people who had been tortured.

Their numbers included physicians, psychiatrists and psychologists. Dr. Richard Mollica was among them. He is co-director of Harvard University's Program in Refugee Trauma.

"Unlike the ordinary immigrant to the United States, our patients have been through the different layers of Dante's Inferno", says Dr. Mollica.

Some of the torture victims and refugees have problems as complex and profound as those suffered by survivors of the Holocaust. Crazily enough, doctors working in repressive societies are often themselves targeted for persecution. Mollica says practicing medicine is considered by some to be a political act.

Meetings of those attending the Paris gathering were closed to the public and the press — to protect participants who might face persecution back home because of their involvement.

Coping with every conceivable form of physical and psychological torture requires a special knowledge that is just beginning to be understood. Mollica described one of his patients as an Argentine grandmother who lost a child to torture and saw her grandchild given to the torturers for adoption.

We're told the number of refugees (displaced persons) in the world now total 15 million, more than at any time since World War II.

How many suffer serious physical or psychological trauma is not known.

Delegates to the meeting represented health care centers in South Africa, Argentina, Belgium, Bolivia, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Denmark, France, England, Norway, Holland, West Germany, El Salvador, the Philippines, Sweden and the U.S.

They are combatting a madness difficult to conceive in today's world.

Wishful Thinking In The Soviet Union

Jim Hoagland

Imagine a confidential memo to Mikhail Gorbachev:

We are flattered, Comrade General Secretary, that you have asked your economic advisory group for an explanation of the Soviet economy's performance during the first six months of 1987. As you know, our private estimates show a mixed set of opportunities and challenges.

We are, alas, where we expected on what the capitalists call GNP. The rate of growth is down to 2.4 percent from 4.2 in 1986. With 3 percent inflation taken for granted but not admitted publicly, this means a flat or negative growth rate this year.

Moreover, this suggests industrial production will decline for the next two to three years, as your program of buying quality control by paying productive workers and penalizing laggards takes hold. Our inspectors are actually rejecting shoddy goods and managers are cutting pay at inefficient factories as they go onto a nominal profit-loss basis.

The 4 percent increase in agriculture is encouraging (even if highly tentative, since major harvesting has not begun), while the 4 percent drop in export revenues is just as disappointing. We have had to cut back sharply on imports from the capitalists and the Third World, further slowing production.

Western pundits will doubtlessly stress the negative side of these statistics, which we have shared with a few European diplomats. These "analysts" will start predicting again that if you cannot show that your reforms are "succeeding" within two or three years, then Ligachev and the Old Liners will be able to play on public discontent and oust you.

Let the wishful ones think what they will. For in mistaking the scope of what you are trying to accomplish, they exaggerate the strength and force of the opposition you face. That makes it easier for you to ask for understanding and perhaps even concessions from the Americans and Europeans.

These wishful thinkers have not understood how your efforts to "democratize" the party also maximize your power, by legitimizing your putting your people in and sweeping the Old Liners out. That process, we estimate, will be irreversible within a year. You can afford these statistics.

But more fundamental is the failure by these wishful outsiders to see how truly Leninist your economic program is. They do not pay attention to your commitment to change only the way work is organized and rewarded, without sacrificing party control or state ownership.

Because you and Deng Xiaoping have frankly admitted that the Soviet and Chinese economic systems have seriously underperformed, the wishful thinkers believe that all communist countries are now turning to capitalist methods for economic salvation.

They say that capitalism is creeping into the strongest redoubts of communism, that Adam Smith's Invisible Hand is dangling a pinky over the Iron and Bamboo curtains, from Hungary to Hanoi. U.S. right-wing circles find this notion psychologically reassuring, and left-wingers say our adaptation shows that we really are like Westerners after all and can be trusted.

Do they really think we would follow the path of that wild man Deng?

After all, the Chinese have made their goal the doubling of per-capita income at the turn of the century.

That stress on the individual is alarmingly anti-socialist. Your goal of doubling national production by the year 2000 is the correct one. We change not to create rich people, but to boost GNP points each year, after this initial adjustment period.

Unlike the Chinese, we in your economic team are committed to never allowing a parallel system of work where one person can "hire" others and exploit them with "wages." And under Soviet law we cannot allow a single person to be unemployed, no matter how unprofitable the factory.

Jim Hoagland is associate editor and chief foreign correspondent of The Washington Post.

Making Pesticide Industry Accountable

Cody Shearer

LOS ANGLELES — If the Environmental Protection Agency were to declare tomorrow that a particular pesticide posed a serious threat to the public's heatlh, the American taxpayer would have to reimburse the pesticide company in question for the revenue it would have collected from its sales and pay for the disposal of the toxic. That's what you call unfair play.

For those not acquainted with the special-interest-tainted regulations governing the chemical industry and the environment, welcome to the "indemnification" provision of the sexy Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, Rondenticide Act (FIFRA). It is cherished by the chemical industry because it means security with a capital S.

Consider this. If the pesticide chlordane were removed from the market place by the EPA, it would cost taxpayers roughly $53.2 million. The pesticide alachlor would cost $161.5 million and benomyl, $78 million. In sharp contrast, these indemnification costs dwarf the size of the annual budget — $70 million — of the EPA's own Office of Pesticide Programs.

Special favors for the chemical industry will be a hot topic when Congress reconvenes next week. FIFRA reform is expected to go to mark-up in the Senate Agriculture Committe in middle or late September, beginning the legislative process that could easily produce meaningful reform of the nation's pesticide control laws.

At the core of these reform efforts is altering favored industry provisions, like indemnification, as well as "reregistering" some of the most potent pesticides that have been on the market since the early 1960s, when Rachel Carson wrote "Silent Spring."

After all, the majority of these older pesticides, still in widespread use today, have never been adequately tested to see if they cause birth defects or other genetic mutations. Registration simply means these chemicals will have to undergo the same rigorous testing and analysis new pesticides must now pass before being permitted on the market. It is possible that under FIFRA reforms that some of these long-used chemicals will not meet the requirements of reregistration and will have to be withdrawn from the marketplace altogether.

Concern about the safety of these existing pesticides was put in sharper focus past spring, when the National Academy of Sciences issued a new study on pesticides that revealed chemicals used in fresh and processed foods may account for an additional 1.46 million cases of cancer among Americans, many of them fatal.

The National Academy of Sciences study examined 28 pesticides and found nearly 80 percent of the cancer risk could be traced to just 10 chemicals applied to 15 commonly- eaten foods such as tomatoes, beef, potatoes, oranges and lettuce. Most of these pesticides were approved for use before 1978, when EPA began its tough registration requirements.

Lynne Cheney Indicts The Educationists And Bureaucrats

Jonathan Yardley

In recent years we've been inundated with homiletic reports on the state of American education, so it's tempting to ignore yet another: Lynne Cheney's "American Memory: A Report on the Humanities in the Nation's Public Schools."

The temptation must be resisted. Cheney's report, which was issued recently, is a devastating analysis of the price we are paying for the bureaucratization of American education; though Cheney tries hard to look on the positive side, honesty and intelligence compel her to accentuate the negative.

There is little in "American Memory" that will come as a surprise to anyone who has followed post-war American education with reasonable care.

What gives the document its force is, first, that it summarizes the case against American education with clarity and pith, and, second, that it does so with unimpeachable authority.

Cheney herself is deservedly respected not merely as chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities, but as a published author; many members of the advisory committees that helped her with the report are well-known figures in education at all levels. "American Memory" is anything except a dispatch from the bush leagues.

Like virtually all government reports, it concludes on an upbeat note, with various cheerful recommendations for hauling the humanities out of the trough into which the educationists have pushed them.

These recommendations are uniformly sensible, and no doubt put forward in all sincerity, and if wishes were horses, they would all be in effect tomorrow morning.

But wishes are not horses, and the odds against any of these proposals ever being widely adopted are, if not insuperable, dauntingly high. So we do better to look on the darker side, to consider what the report has to say about things as they actually are, and as they are certain to remain into the foreseeable future.

"Long relied upon to transmit knowledge of the past to upcoming generations," Cheney writes, "our schools today appear to be about a different task. Instead of preserving the past, they more often disregard it, sometimes in the name of 'progress' — the idea that today has little to learn from yesterday.

"But usually the culprit is 'process' — the belief that we can teach our children how to think without troubling them to learn anything worth thinking about, the belief that we can teach them how to understand the world in which they live without conveying to them the events and ideas that have brought it into existence."

Cheney minces no words about who is to blame for this: "Education specialists who think in terms of process rather than content," the "educational theorists, administrators and bureaucrats" who have imposed on the public schools their conviction that "the purpose of education is to teach students how to think rather than imparting knowledge to them."

These are the people who have inflicted upon the schools the stunting sophistry that "schools should concern themselves not with intellectual life, but with practical life" — the people who have turned history into "social studies" and English into "language arts," and have given primary importance to "instructional objectives," "learning activities," "teaching strategies" and "evaluative measures."

All of this educationist cant may be hogwash, but it has become the received wisdom, and going against it as forthrightly as Cheney does is an act of not inconsiderable courage.

It is even grittier for someone in her position to pounce as vigorously as she does on the Scholastic Aptitude Test, which she correctly identifies as, under the present system, for too many students "the single most crucial experience of their academic lives."

She rightly says it is a test that, "in its verbal component, carefully avoids assessing substantive knowledge gained from course work," but she does not go far enough.

The public schools have become fixated on the SATs, and now concentrate on teaching students to improve their scores not in order to educate them, but to deflect criticism of the schools' effectiveness. Test-taking is all; education is nothing.

Further, it is certain to remain that way so long as the educationists are in charge. The prospects for showing them the door are not good.

"Between 1960 and 1984," Cheney points out, "while the number of teachers grew by 57 percent and the number of principals and supervisors by 79 percent, the number of other staffers, from curriculum specialists to supervisors of instruction, was up by almost 500 percent. Resources are increasingly being drawn into salaries for people who ... inevitably steer in the direction of process rather than content, toward skills rather than substance."

These people are already deeply entrenched, and as is true of all bureaucracies, they will become all the more so as their numbers increase. The dismal, inescapable fact of American primary and secondary education — and, more and more, of higher education as well — is that it is in the hands of people who are anything but teachers, people who are indifferent if not hostile toward the very knowledge that any responsible educational system seeks to transmit.

They are alumni of schools of "education" that emphasize teaching and administrative "process" while slighting, if not actually neglecting, what is to be taught.

Thus "a survey of 17 major institutions in the South showed that future teachers had a weaker general-education curriculum than most arts and science graduates," while "of particular concern to the history profession is the value placed on coaching ability when history teachers are hired."

Small wonder that the system produces students who do not know when the Civil War and World War I were fought, who think that the principal language of Latin America is Latin, who have no acquaintance with the Reformation or Chaucer, with the Magna Carta or Dostoevsky.

They know how to fill out an application for a driver's license, and indeed they know (more or less) how to drive, but Shakespeare and Mozart and Faulkner are not within their ken. They are in the deepest and truest sense ignorant people, yet the American system of public education has certified them as educated.

It is, as Cheney says, a system that "denies its students a great deal: the satisfactions of mature thought, an attachment to abiding concerns, a perspective on human existence"; indeed it is a system that holds students in contempt, for its underlying assumption is that they are incapable of genuine learning, only of absorbing "practical" instruction for "vocations."

It also denies them the knowledge of the past upon which to live in the present and to plan for the future. A citizenry ignorant of past wars is a citizenry that will elect leaders no less ignorant, and thus liable to lead it into wars it neither wants nor supports.

That alone should be ample "practical" reason for giving students the "intellectual" education that the educationists, in their own blissful ignorance, so scornfully spurn.

A Look At Deregulated Skies

Gregg Easterbrook

Recently a federal government report noted with alarm that "congestion of the airways" has become a menace to air travel safety. How recently? The year 1957.

It's not that the skies themselves are crowded. The three-dimensional U.S. sky volume, where a few thousand planes are present at one time, is immense compared to the two-dimensional area of U.S. highways, prowled by many millions of vehicles simultaneously.

Congestion is a problem not of the sky as much as of what we'll call the "undersky." The comparatively tiny regions that aircraft pass through at the beginning and end of their journeys — the runways, ground servicing facilities, and the "terminal control areas" (TCAs) proximate to the descent lanes into major airports — can easily become congested relative to traffic volume. So can the air-traffic control system that directs airplanes. From a safety standpoint this is significant because almost all aircraft accidents occur in the undersky: either on the ground (where the worst aviation disaster ever, the collision between two 747s on a runway in the Canary Islands, occurred in 1977) or near the ground as airplanes are taking off or landing.

Congestion hit in 1957 because the Boeing 707 had just been introduced, commercial jetliner travel was growing rapidly and several of today's major airfields did not yet exist. It has hit again in 1987, because lower air fares brought on by deregulation have dramatically increased public demand. In 1987, U.S. airlines are expected to board nearly 460 million passengers, about twice as many as 1976; total departures of commercial airliners, the main index of strain on the system, will be about 25 percent higher than before deregulation.

Meanwhile the number of traffic controllers has declined relative to air activity. A variety of statistical somersaults can be performed regarding how many air controllers is the right number, but the compelling figure is this: 287 departures per controller in 1981, 411 per controller in 1986. And there hasn't been a large new airport added to the U.S. aviation system since Dallas-Fort Worth, 13 years ago.

"One of the things we misjudged was airport growth," Elizabeth Bailey, vice chairman of the Civil Aviation Board when deregulation took place in 1979, explains. "We assumed that state and regional authorities would have incentives to build airports in order to bring in business, trade and tourism. We never anticipated how effectively local groups would organize to oppose airport construction." Only one major city, Denver, has plans to build a large new airport. Everybody wants cheap flights to his favorite destination, but nobody wants to live near a noisy airport.

Congestion of the undersky has not made air travel more deadly: at least, not yet. In fact, statistically it has become safer. During the eight years prior to deregulation, 1,455 people lost their lives in fatal accidents involving scheduled U.S. airlines. During the almost nine years since, 960 have been killed, even as the total number of flights and passengers has grown substantially. But warning signs that this trend may reverse — particularly, new incidence of what ought to be an avoidable problem, aircraft collisions — now have the public and the aviation establishment in a state of consternation.

Amid all the recent concern about reports of near collisions, it seems to have escaped public attention that the majority of such incidents involve not two commercial jetliners but one jetliner and one private plane. Only one midair collision between jetliners occurred worldwide in the past decade, a 1979 incident involving two Aeroflot transports over the Ukraine. But of the seven major commercial crashes in U.S. airspace during the past decade, two, the San Diego crash in 1978, and Los Angeles crash last year, involved airliners hitting private aircraft. No cause was common to the other five crashes; that makes private aircraft the current biggest killer in U.S. commercial aviation.

Here are a few other statistics about private planes to chew on. While no wrecks of major U.S. airliners occurred during 1986 (the Los Angeles crash involved an Aeromexico jet), 958 people were killed in general aviation accidents. During the first six months of 1987, there have been almost 150 reports of near collisions from commercial airline pilots; and about 460 reports of near collisions from private pilots. Adjusting for flight lengths and other factors, a private aircraft ride is about 40 times more likely to end in death than a commercial flight. A recent Federal Aviation Administration study of one major airport TCA found 21 unauthorized private aircraft cutting through during a two-hour period, each one a collision waiting to happen.

Owing to such concerns, the FAA recently expanded the TCA around Los Angeles International Airport, and imposed restrictions on nine other airports, bringing to 32 the total of restricted U.S. airports. "Restricted" does not mean small aircraft cannot use an airport. It means they can use the airport only under the direction of federal air-traffic controllers (most U.S. airfields do not require this), and in some cases only if equipped with a device called a transponder.

Southern California reaction to the new private aircraft regulations has been heated, because Los Angeles leads the nation in private aircraft registrations — and in 1987 near-collision reports. The reaction boiled down to: "You'll get me out of my private plane when you pry my dead fingers off the throttle." Meanwhile, in Washington, John Baker, president of the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association, the private plane lobby, graciously called the new safety provisions "pitiful."

A major reason these restrictions drive private aircraft owners crazy is that they take some of the glitz appeal out of flying. There are plenty of small airfields outside major metropolitan areas where private aircraft may come and go as they please. But what corporate executive or wealthy hobbyist wants to land among cornfields?

Small aircraft represent a special threat to commercial aviation for many reasons. One is they arrive at airports randomly, rather than on a predictable schedule. Air traffic controllers cannot anticipate how many private aircraft ought to be appearing in a particular area of the sky, as they can with commercial flights. Another factor is many private pilots are recreational flyers with far less experience than commercial pilots; not only do they make more mistakes, there is no way to enforce restrictions that airline pilots are supposed to abide by, such as adequate sleep and no drinking the day before a flight. But the basic problem is that they don't necessarily show up on radar.

Survival Hinges On U.S. Aid

William Sexton

MANILA, Philippines — Without vigorous behind-the-scenes intervention by American diplomats and military advisers, the Philippines might be ruled today by a rightist military junta.

And diplomatic sources here suggest that President Corazon Aquino's survival will depend on still more American support — this time in the form of substantially increased military aid.

The commanders who ultimately stood by Mrs. Aquino on Aug. 28 now expect sharply higher pay for their troops and massive new weaponry — and there isn't the money for either in the strapped Philippine treasury.

There isn't all that much in the U.S. Treasury, either, so life should be interesting during the next few months for Nicholas Platt, the just-arrived U.S. envoy to this bastion of American defense in the western Pacific.

Platt, 51, who headed Secretary of State George Shultz' personal support staff for the past two years, was only five days into his new post as U.S. ambassador to the Philippines when the crisis developed.

A high-society farewell for the ambassador's immediate predecessor was just breaking up when duty officers got news of the coup attempt, shortly after a moonless midnight as Thursday turned to Friday.

Kenneth Quinn, Platt's No. 2 when he headed the secretariat at the State Department and now deputy chief of mission here, immediately set up a crisis center and ordered a secure "hot line" hooked up to Washington. By day's end, it would prove a crucial link.

As top officers of one of the biggest U.S. diplomatic outposts gathered before dawn, things seemed to be going well. Military attaches radioed in from the field that Mrs. Aquino's Presidential Security Group had repulsed the attack on Malacanang Palace, two miles across Manila's sprawling downtown from the waterfront embassy. In the suburbs, the Philippine army and air force headquarters had fallen, but the all-important helicopter gunships of the Philippine air force were still secure.

By 8 a.m., moods switched. The army commander on Cebu, the Philippines' second-biggest population center, joined the mutiny. Camp Olivas, a military base strategically poised above Manila, followed.

Moreover, intelligence indicated other commanders were ready to turn against the government if Lt. Col. Gregorio Honasan, the coup leader, looked as if he would succeed in holding on at Camp Aguinaldo, the army headquarters in Manila.

And Mrs. Aquino's chief of staff, Gen. Fidel Ramos, was having difficulty rounding up troops deemed loyal enough to assault Honasan's foothold at Camp Aguinaldo.

There seemed to be a conviction within the military that the United States would remain neutral in the intramural struggle.

Although leftists here credit the downtown embassy building on Manila Bay with practically running the Philippines — it and the CIA and the big U.S. military commands at Subic Bay and Clark Field — Pratt was virtually powerless at that point.

Philip Kaplan, who as charge d'affaires (acting ambassador) had run the embassy during the four months it took to get Platt's Senate confirmation, even telephoned Mrs. Aquino archrival Juan Ponce Enrile seeking a declaration of support for constitutional government. The ex-defense minister turned him down.

By midmorning, in the embassy's view and that of many in the streets, the tide appeared set against Mrs. Aquino. That's when the hot line came into play.

President Reagan and Shultz were in Santa Barbara, Calif. Midmorning here is well past working hours there, especially during a presidential vacation. But Platt was plugged through with an urgent recommendation: If the president came down immediately with the firmest possible declaration against the rebels, the wavering Philippine military might be persuaded to stand with Mrs. Aquino.

Even on a presidential vacation it took only an hour to produce the presidential statement and relay it back to Manila.

"I am profoundly concerned ..." the president's written statement said. "The United States condemns this attempt at extra-constitutional action. I wish to make absolutely clear America's unqualified support of President Aquino."

The statement was fed to radio and TV stations across the Philippines. Military attaches, meanwhile, manned the phones, reading the declaration to every military commander they could reach.

They also called attention to the Lugar Amendment, sponsored by Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., that calls for suspending foreign aid to any country whose elected government is overthrown by the military.

By midday most Filipinos were aware of Reagan's declaration, and the loyal Philippine military had begun its assault on Camp Aguinaldo. By sundown, Aguinaldo and air force headquarters were back under government control and Honasan had fled.

Platt, a professional diplomat whose career includes stints in the National Security Council and the Pentagon, believes the White House's instant response to the Manila SOS was crucial in producing the turnaround.

"Gringo" Honasan's Aug. 28 rebellion wasn't so much a problem for Mrs. Aquino as it was a symptom of her problem.

"Although the coup attempt ... was quickly crushed ... ," the respected (and pro-Aquino) editor of the Manila Chronicle, Amando Doronila, wrote last week in a front page commentary, "there is no reason to be confident that the threat against the government has subsided.

"On the contrary, the coup has widened and intensified divisions within the government itself, within the armed forces, and between the civil government and the military," Doronila said. "If these cleavages are not bridged, they could bring the early collapse of the 18-month-old Aquino government."

Mrs. Aquino finds herself increasingly trapped between economic reality and the post-Marcos expectations of her constituencies, not just the military.

The peasants want land, the landowners want compensation, civil servants want salary increases, and so on.

There is one other difficulty people don't like to talk about. Mrs. Aquino is a woman. The Philippines is one very macho country.

Armed Police, Soldiers Join Services For Black Activist

By The Associated Press

Armed black police and soldiers in the black homeland of Ciskei ignored a minister's objections Saturday and took part in a church service marking the 10th anniversary of black activist Steve Biko's death while in police custody.

Nine Biko ceremonies were scheduled throughout South Africa.

The Ciskei service was in sharp contrast to the slogans, freedom songs, dances and political speeches at an earlier rally at Ginsberg, a nearby black township outside Biko's hometown of King William's Town. Police, however, banned the unveiling of a new tombstone at Biko's gravesite nearby.

Biko died Sept. 12, 1977, in police custody after 26 days of being kept naked in a Port Elizabeth police cell. An inquest found the cause of death was brain damage, although the judge said no one could be held responsible.

Thirty to 50 khaki-uniformed soldiers and police with rifles on Saturday surrounded the St. Matthew's and St. Charles' Anglican Church in Zwelitsha town in Ciskei. Several officers entered, took off their hats and sat down.

"Guns, which are a symbol of killing, are not welcome," said Anglican Bishop David Russell of Grahamstown. The officers ignored his requests to leave if they were carrying arms, which he called "disrespect for the church."

"When they came in I got the feeling it was clearly a security operation, but I think they were moved by the service," Russell said afterward.

A police major refused to remove his gun and sat in the front row, near the mother and widow of Biko. But by the time the two-hour church service ended, the major had kneeled at the altar and received Communion and later shook hands with Biko's older brother, Khaya.

The service included about 100 middle-age blacks and whites, mostly women, singing hymns and celebrating a Eucharist.

Biko's widow, Nontsikelelo, said she was not upset by the police presence at the church service, because she was used to them.

Many, but not all of the journalists attending the service left shortly after the police arrived lest they be detained under separate regulations and laws in the homeland, which give police wide powers.

The unveiling of a new tombstone for Biko's grave was canceled when organizers of the rally and ceremony said the outdoor meeting had been banned.

South African Police headquarters said in Pretoria no specific order was issued regarding the Biko memorial, but all outdoor gatherings are banned under 15-month-old emergency regulations which restrict freedom of speech, assembly and the press.

The rally of about 200 people inside a day-care center at Ginsberg, about 700 yards from the Biko home, was perfectly legal, the South African Police said.

The crowd, wearing yellow T-shirts with a picture of Biko, gathered at the Biko home, moved to the day-care center and later to the church in Zwelitsha.

Police confirmed they detained and questioned members of the Azanian People's Organization — Azapo — and its student wing, who were preparing memorial services during the week for Biko, founder of the Black Consciousness movement.

The Black Consciousness philosophy was based on the principles that blacks had to work for their own rights, without white help, and to break away from centuries of indoctrination in school, at work and in society, which inculcated an inferiority complex.

"Biko was a man of his time — perhaps the man of his time," said a message from Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu read at the rally in Ginsberg.

"You can silence a man with banning orders, detentions and harassment, and yes, you can even kill him, but Steve Biko and his ideas live on," said Tutu.

Muntu Myeza, publicity secretary for Azapo, founded two years after Biko's death to carry on the Black Consciousness movement, said in Ginsberg, "We must offer Steve Biko our apology why 10 years after his death we have not liberated ourselves. We don't want our liberation tomorrow or next week but we want it yesterday."

The government paid the Biko family $78,000 in an out-of court-settlement.

"I am just hoping that one day the truth — the real truth — will come out," Mrs. Biko said in a newspaper interview last week. "But the dissatisfaction is always there."

Under the 15-month-old national state of emergency, police have the power to restrict reporting about unrest, security force action, treatment of detainees, some forms of protest and statements classified as subversive.

However, no unrest took place in King William's Town in connection with the Biko memorials. Journalists freely attended and reported on statements and activities at the meetings.

Smith Whips FSU Past Pirates

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Sammy Smith was listed as the starting tailback when Florida State opened the 1987 football season, but he was unable to play in last week's opener because of an injury.

He returned to practice this week, but Coach Bobby Bowden still held him out of the starting lineup. He finally came on the field Friday night against East Carolina on the third series of the game.

And it wasn't long before he took control of the tight contest and broke it open as the eighth-ranked Seminoles rolled up a 44-3 victory over the Pirates.

It was the home opener for East Carolina and it marked the first time that Florida State had come to Greenville. And for a while there, it looked like being at home was just the thing the Pirates needed.

But Smith broke away on an 83-yard touchdown run in the second period and broke open a 6-3 ball game, turning the tide for the Seminoles.

"Smith's long touchdown run really took our steam away," Pirate Coach Art Baker said. "We were still in the game despite making numerous mistakes, but his run broke our will some. He is an awesome runner — what an exciting player to watch. We saw too much of him tonight."

All Smith did by the time it was over was to run for 19 times as he picked up a career high 244 yards — over 80 more than did the entire Pirate rushing attack.

Bowden, too, agreed that it was Smith that made the difference. "The big swing in momentum came on the Sammy Smith run," Bowden said. "I really didn't expect him to play that way in the ball game. He really hadn't looked very good in practice this week. Of course, he was coming off an injury, his wife had a baby and he had a dental appointment. I was really surprised at the day he had."

A hard rainstorm that drifted through Ficklen Stadium cooled the passing of Florida State quarterback Danny McManus, but he was still able to complete five of 13 for 110 yards, including a 59-yard touchdown pass to Randy White in the late stages of the third quarter.

Even then, with a comfortable 30-3 lead, the Seminoles kept up their passing attack behind second-stringer Chip Ferguson, who came on to hit seven of eight for 66 yards, helping to set up two scores.

Dexter Carter scored early in the final period on a five yard run, and Ferguson finished it off with a 10-yard run late in the game.

Placekicker Derek Schmidt booted field goals of 40, 36, and 28 yards and added five PATs, as he continued to build on his school career scoring record.

East Carolina's only score came on a 23-yard field goal by Chuck Berleth that — for a while — tied the game at 3-3.

"We played a great football team tonight," Baker said. "I said all week, and now I'm even further convinced that they can challenge for the national championship with a few breaks. They certainly didn't need any breaks tonight, but we gave them to them anyway."

The Pirates turned the ball over six times, losing five of 10 fumbles and having one interception.

Only one of the turnovers led directly to a Florida State score, however.

"You cannot expect to be in a game against a team like Florida State when you put the football on the ground 10 times and have an interception," Baker said. "We will work to correct our poor execution.

"Our defense gave us a great effort. We just kept them on the field too long after the first quarter," Baker added. After the first period, the Pirates held a 3:14 advantage. But FSU ended the game with almost a six minute edge, a turnaround of over nine minutes the final three periods.

"We started the game following our game plan to the letter. We had the football for nine of the first 15 minutes. But again, our execution was very bad tonight," the Pirate coach said.

Florida State scored on its second possession after both teams had driven into their opponents' territory. But ECU lost it on its first fumble at the FSU 25.

Helped by a 12-yard pass interference call and a 13-yard run by Carter, FSU moved to the ECU 24 from where Schmidt booted a 40-yard field goal with 7:04 left, giving the Seminoles a 3-0 lead.

The Pirates then ground out a long 74-yard drive that cumlinated in Berleth's field goal from 23 yards out. Hunter hit Don Gaylor for 13 yards and Anthony Simpson on a screen pass for 26 to the FSU eight.

But the drive stalled there, and after some confusion as to whether the quarter had ended before a penal-

Lendl, Wilander, Advance To Final

NEW YORK (AP) — Ivan Lendl is too hungry for a third U.S. Open title to worry about the appetite of the American tennis fan.

Lendl roared into his sixth straight U.S. Open final Saturday, sweeping Jimmy Connors 6-4, 6-2, 6-2. The two-time defending champion and No. 1 seed, will play No. 3 Mats Wilander of Sweden, whom he beat in the French Open final in June. Wilander advanced to his first final here with a 6-4, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4 victory over countryman Stefan Edberg.

Lendl never let Connors get untracked, particularly after a close first set in which he made one service break hold up.

"You don't want to give Jimmy Connors unnecessary chances, especially with the crowd starving for an American to win," Lendl said.

"Once I broke Jimmy, I felt very good. Jimmy started pressing more.

"It was relatively easy, without too much physical strain. Having to play two days in a row, you want to save every bit of energy you have."

Connors, seeking to end a three-year tournament title drought, was no match for Lendl's power and precision. He did give Lendl some problems in the first set, but the Czechoslovak's break in the seventh game stood up.

In winning his 20th consecutive match at the Open, Lendl broke in the first game of the second set and Connors couldn't get back into the match. Lendl continued his domination in the third set, breaking in the third game.

Then, Connors broke for the first time for 2-2. But it was merely a momentary lapse for Lendl, who took Connors' next serve and cruised to victory.

"I like short matches," Lendl said with a smile. "My mission is to win and get on with the next one."

It was his 14th straight win over Connors, who beat Lendl in the 1982 and '83 Open finals.

Lendl holds an 11-6 edge over Wilander, who has not beaten the top seed since 1985 French Open final. But that was on clay, Wilander's favorite surface. The Open is played on hardcourts, which has become Lendl's favorite surface.

The two have played twice at the Open, with Lendl winning in the fourth round in 1982 and the quarterfinals the next year.

"If I don't play very tough," Lendl said, looking to the final, "he will not make errors. Wilander will not give you anything."

He gave Edberg little. Reacting rather than plotting strategy against his close friend, Wilander advanced to his first final here.

Wilander, who arrived 15 minutes late in a protest of the 10 a.m. starting time — jumped to a 3-0 lead in the first set. He got sloppy and blew several good chances to break Edberg in dropping the second set,

Early Scoring Sinks Wolfpack

PITTSBURGH (AP) — University of Pittsburgh Coach Mike Gottfried, who still has nightmares about last year's 14-14 tie against North Carolina State, preached to his Panthers all week the importance of jumping into an early lead against the Wolfpack.

But even Gottfried was surprised how quickly the 18th-ranked Panthers established dominance over the Wolfpack in Pitt's 34-0 victory Saturday.

Craig "Ironhead" Heyward, who rushed for 115 yards on 23 carries, scored twice in the first five minutes following N.C. State turnovers as the Panthers, 2-0, breezed to a 27-0 halftime lead.

N.C. State tied Pitt last year by rallying from a 14-3 deficit in the final 3:46 of play.

"A good team takes advantages of turnovers and we showed something today," Gottfried said. "That's encouraging. I don't think those turnovers necessarily took N.C. State out of their game plan, but they did give us some confidence."

"We wanted to get on the scoreboard as quickly as possible," said Pitt quarterback Sal Genilla. "The defense got us the ball and we took advantage of it. We took it right to them, and that's what the coaches stressed all week."

The defeat was the Wolfpack's worst since a 45-0 loss to Virginia in 1984. N.C. State is 0-2 after going 8-3-1 last season.

"We came in here to win the football game but they're just a better football team," said N.C. State Coach Dick Sheridan. "They did to us what they wanted. I was a little surprised they were as good as they were. They just totally dominated the line of scrimmage."

Sheridan said Pitt "is definitely better than they were last year, all the way around. They did to us what they wanted, especially after they got ahead 14-0. I am surprised that they dominated us so much."

Pitt is nationally ranked for the first time in four years.

"We can be a Top 10 team," said Pitt linebacker Zeke Gadson. "As long as we know how to handle prosperity and keep our heads on our shoulders, we'll be all right. This team has a lot of confidence. Now we're going to approach our next game like we were 0-2 instead of 2-0."

Heyward scored on a 1-yard run with just 1:42 gone, five plays after Gadson intercepted Wolfpack quarterback Shane Montgomery on the first play from scrimmage.

Genilla, who completed 15 of 26 passes for 239 yards, made it 27-0 at halftime by throwing second-quarter scoring passes of 24 yards to Hosea

Holieway's Four Scores Lead Sooners' 28-0 Romp

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Quarterback Jamelle Holieway ran for 170 yards and four touchdowns as No. 1 Oklahoma hammered North Carolina 28-0 Saturday.

The Tar Heels held the Sooners scoreless in the first quarter, but Holieway directed Oklahoma's wishbone offense to a 21-point outburst in the second quarter.

Holieway scored on runs of 3, 4 and 1 yards and added another 1-yard touchdown run in the third quarter. The junior quarterback, having his best day statistically, had runs of 35 and 13 yards in Oklahoma's 70-yard touchdown drive that opened the scoring.

Mark Maye's passing kept the ball out of the Sooners' hands for much of the first half, but North Carolina, 1-1, missed a chance to take the lead in the first quarter when a pass off a fake field goal attempt from Eric Wetherington to placekicker Kenny Miller fell incomplete.

Maye connected on four passes in a North Carolina drive that reached the Oklahoma 4 in the third quarter, but the Tar Heels missed another chance when Maye was sacked by defensive end Darrell Reed on a fourth-and-5 play.

The victory came despite a record 19 penalties for the Sooners, who improved their record to 2-0.

Sooner freshman kicker R.D. Lashar missed on field goal attempts of 42 and 37 yards in the fourth quarter. The 37-yarder was missed because of bad snap from center.

North Carolina's offense was hurt by the loss of star running back Torin Dorn who gained 165 yards last week against Illinois and suffered a sprained ankle at the end of a 69-yard run.

Maye took up some of the slack with his passing but big plays by the Sooner defense kept the Tar Heels out of the end zone.

North Carolina marched from its 26 to the Oklahoma 3 in the third quarter as Maye hit five passes. But the Sooners' defense stiffened with cornerback Scott Garl sacking Maye.

Oklahoma finished with 462 yards total offense — 405 on the ground. Fullback Lydell Carr gained 95 yards on 14 carries for the Sooners.

North Carolina had 203 yards total offense. Maye hit on 16 of 35 passes for 168 yards. He had one pass intercepted.

Panthers Roll ...

Heard and 19 yards to Reggie Williams.

Heard's scoring catch midway through the second period made it 21-0 and completed a 65-yard scoring drive that included Genilla's 19-yard completion to Tuten.

Pitt blocked a 52-yard Mark Fowble field goal attempt late in the first half and Genilla, a senior making just his third major-college start, needed just five plays to get Pitt back in the end zone. He hit Bill Osborn for 20 yards and Tuten for 14 yards before finding Williams down the right sidelines.

Pitt boosted the lead to 34-0 in the third period when Osborn scored on a 15-yard run on a botched field goal attempt. Kicker Jeff VanHorne picked up the errant snap from center and handed to Osborn, his holder, who ran untouched down the left sidelines.

Heyward, the Panthers' tackle-sized 260-pound junior tailback, has gained 245 yards on 55 carries as Pitt has won its first two games for the first time since 1983.

Pitt rushed for 276 yards and passed for 281 yards and outgained the Wolfpack 557-168.

Gadson's interception, on a pass tipped by Wolfpack tight end Bobby Harrell, gave Pitt the ball at N.C. State's 26 with just 11 seconds gone. On a third-and-7 play from the 23, Genilla hit Williams for 20 yards and a first down at the 3.

After Heyward gained a yard, he plowed into the end zone behind a block from 265-pound fullback Dean Caliguire, a sophomore offensive guard who lines up in the backfield on short-yardage situations.

Heyward's second touchdown less than three minutes later allowed the Pitt defensive line to pass rush on almost every down. The Panthers were credited with four quarterback sacks, three by Gadson, for 42 yards in losses. Pitt had 11 sacks in its 27-17 opening game victory at Brigham Young.

N.C. State quarterbacks Montgomery and Preston Poag, constantly under pressure, managed to complete only 6 of 20 passing attempts for 61 yards.

Williams had eight catches for 154 yards while reserve running back Adam Walker had 77 yards on seven carries for Pitt.

Navratilova Tops Graf For 4th U.S. Open Win

NEW YORK (AP) — Defending champion Martina Navratilova staked her claim as the world's No. 1 female tennis player Saturday by beating top-seeded Steffi Graf to win her fourth U.S. Open title.

Navratilova handed Graf her second defeat in 63 matches this year with a convincing 7-6 (7-4), 6-1 victory at the National Tennis Center.

Graf will retain her No. 1 status when the new computer rankings are released Monday. But Navratilova said before the Open that she would consider herself No. 1 if she added the Open championship to her 1987 Wimbledon title even though they would be her only two titles of the year.

The second-seeded Navratilova rallied to win the first set in a tiebreaker after losing the first two games, then dominated her 18-year-old West German opponent in the second set by controlling play at the net.

Graf saved two match points in the final game before hitting a forehand beyond the baseline to end the match.

It was the third Grand Slam final between Graf and Navratilova this year. Graf won the French Open while Navratilova captured Wimbledon.

"They said I had a bad year," said Navratilova, who earned $250,000 for winning the Open. "I'd like to have a bad year like this every year."

Graf ended Navratilova's 21-month reign atop the computer rankings when she won the Virginia Slims of Los Angeles tournament last month.

"I'm more disappointed now than in the Wimbledon finals," Graf said. "(But) I'm still No. 1 and she's No. 2."

Randolph Leads Over Trevino And Strange

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — Sam Randolph, the 1985 U.S. Amateur golf champion seeking his first PGA victory, charged past veteran pros Lee Trevino and Curtis Strange and took a four-stroke lead after the third round of the $500,000 Bank of Boston Classic Saturday.

Trailing Trevino by two strokes and Strange by one when the round began, Randolph carded seven birdies without a bogey for a 7-under par 64 and a 54-hole total of 199.

Randolph, a 23-year-old former Southern Cal star, was just one stroke off the course record of 63 for Pleasant Valley Country Club's 7,110-yard layout.

However, he set another record in going 14 strokes under par. His three-round total of 199 was two strokes better than old mark shared by John Mahaffey and George Burns.

Playing in a threesome just ahead of Trevino and Strange, Randolph took the lead with five birdies for a 5-under 31 on the front nine. Then he added two more birdies for the 64 to go along with previous rounds of 67 and 68.

Trevino dropped out of a share of the lead with a bogey on the eighth green and, after making the turn, bogeyed three holes in a role. He finished with a 72 and a 54-hole total of 205.

Strange, the year's top money winner with record earnings of $697,000, had one birdie on the front nine, took a bogey on the 10th green and managed just one birdie the rest of the way for 70 and 204.

Defending champion Gene Sauers, bidding to become the only two-time winner at Pleasant Valley since the tour's first visit in 1965, Australian Wayne Grady and little-known Ray Stewart were tied for second at 203.

Sauers and Grady each shot a 3-under 68, while Stewart rode two eagles to a 65.

Smith Leads FSU...

ty flag, Berleth made the boot two seconds into the second quarter.

FSU again drove, going 44 yards in 11 plays to the ECU 19, where Schmidt again kicked, this time from 36 yards away for a 6-3 lead with 9:11 to go.

The Pirates put the Seminoles deep in their own territory with a punt to the 17. But on the first play, Smith took a quick pitch around the left side, broke loose, and raced 83 yards to score the first FSU touchdown of the night. Schmidt made it 13-3 with 6:21 left in the half.

The Pirates gave it right back, fumbling the kickoff, and FSU took over on the 20. The defense held and Schmidt's 28-yarder made it 16-3 with 4:49 left.

East Carolina drove to the Seminole 38 before running out of gas, then reached the 30 late in the half from where a 47-yard attempt by Berleth was short.

"The way the game started, with the crowd and the enthusiam, I was really afraid about the game in the first half," Bowden said. "If East Carolina could have continued the pressure they were putting on us, it would have stayed tight. We just wore them down. East Carolina fought hard, but we just had a little too much for them."

Schmidt missed a 36-yard field goal attempt early in the third period, but two plays later, the Pirates fumbled it away on their own 24. Smith carried three times to the one, and Williams pushed over from there, upping it to 23-3 with 6:23 in the period.

Three minutes later, FSU took over at their own 41, and McManus found White racing down the far sidelines, hit him perfectly and the play went 59 yards for the score, running it to 30-3 with 2:56 left in the quarter.

FSU took over again at the start of the final period, going 67 yards on just five plays — the first of which was a 52-yard rip by Smith around the left corner. Carter went in from five yards out with 13:13 left, and it was 37-3.

Midway the period, FSU took over on its own 18 following another Pirate punt, and Ferguson — mainly passing to Scott Dimare — led the Seminoles downfield. He hit DiMare for five passes for 54 yards, then carried the final 10 himself on a bootleg with 4:11 to go.

FSU wound up with 548 yards in total offense, while the Pirates had only 222 on 11 fewer plays.

The loss dropped the Pirates to 1-1 on the year while Florida State goes to 2-0.

East Carolina will travel to the University of Illinois next Saturday, meeting a Big Ten opponent for the first time ever.

then made the most of his opportunities the rest of the way.

"He played very badly and I played all right," Wilander said of the beginning of the match. "That was important because I wasn't as psyched up as I was for the Mecir match. It got me going."

Wilander had beaten No. 5 Miloslav Mecir, his nemesis, in the quarterfinals. In that match, he admitted his strategy was to be more aggressive and come to the net more often.

Against Edberg, there was no game plan.

"I said, 'I have to work on returns, I don't have time to play a lot of strategy games,' " Wilander said.

"I have to come to the net even if I don't feel 100 percent about it."

Wilander won an 18-minute game in the third set for a 2-0 lead.

"That might have been the most important game of the match," said Wilander, who, at 23, has won two French Opens and two Australian championships. "I had a lot of chances to break in the second set, but lost them. That got me going again."

Taylor Leads Cornhuskers By Bruins

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Steve Taylor, who set a rushing mark for Nebraska quarterbacks last week, threw a record five touchdown passes Saturday as the second-ranked Cornhuskers ended Gaston Green's string of eight 100-yard rushing games and defeated No. 3 UCLA 42-33.

The five scoring passes tied the Big Eight record set by Ralph Miller of Kansas against Washburn in 1938. Miller is currently the basketball coach at Oregon State.

Key plays by wingback Dana Brinson preceded Taylor's second-period scoring passes of nine yards to tight end Tom Banderas and 11 to tailback Ken Clark less than 4½ minutes apart as Nebraska erased a 7-0 deficit.

The speedy wingback set up the first touchdown with a 47-yard kickoff return to the UCLA 48 and the second with a 19-yard reverse after Cartier Walker blocked a UCLA punt at the Bruins' 34.

Green, who had rushed for 1,236 yards in his last eight games, scored three times on short runs — two in the final four minutes — but was held to 46 yards on 19 carries as UCLA, the Pac-10 favorite, again bombed against a highly-ranked Big Eight opponent. In addition, UCLA quarterbacks were sacked six times for losses totaling 50 yards.

The Bruins have dropped their last four meetings with Nebraska by a combined score of 166-59. They were ranked fourth in the nation last year when they lost to Oklahoma 38-3.

Leading 14-10 at the half, Nebraska broke the game open with two touchdowns in the first four minutes of the third quarter.

Clark dived across from one yard out, four plays after UCLA quarterback Troy Aikman was sacked and fumbled at his 12, with Nebraska linebacker Doug Welniak making his second recovery of the game. Welniak also had two sacks.

Just under two minutes later, Taylor fired a 48-yard touchdown pass to split end Rod Smith on the first play after a UCLA punt went out of bounds.

For the game, Taylor completed 10 of 15 passes for 217 yards.

Ohio St.....24
W. Virginia.....3

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — William White intercepted three passes and returned one for a touchdown as No. 5 Ohio State forced seven turnovers in a 24-3 victory over West Virginia Saturday.

Ohio State, opening its 98th football season, took a 10-0 lead in the first 2 minutes, 18 seconds of play as West Virginia fumbled the ball twice and was intercepted once.

West Virginia, meeting Ohio State for the first time in 84 years, dropped to 1-1.

For the game, West Virginia quarterbacks Major Harris and Mike Timko completed 6 of 22 passes with six interceptions. In addition, the Mountaineers lost fumbles the first two times they touched the ball.

Linebacker Chris Spielman had two interceptions for Ohio State and Greg Rogan had one.

West Virginia's John Talley fumbled the opening kickoff, leading to a 47-yard field goal by Buckeye placekicker Matt Frantz.

A.B. Brown of West Virginia then fumbled on the first play from scrimmage after the ensuing kickoff and three plays later, Jaymes Bryant scored on a 7-yard run. Frantz's extra-point kick made it 10-0.

Two possessions later, Ohio State made it 17-0 on a 23-yard pass from quarterback Tom Tupa to wide receiver Everett Ross.

West Virginia's only points came on a 27-yard field goal by Charlie Baumann early in the third quarter.

Notre Dame.....26
Michigan.....7

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Terry Andrysiak completed 11 of 15 passes for 137 yards, including an 11-yard touchdown toss to All-American flanker Tim Brown, and Notre Dame turned four of seven Michigan turnovers into scores for a 26-7 opening victory over the ninth-ranked Wolverines Saturday.

Braxton Banks scored on a 1-yard dive, freshman Ricky Watters on an 18-yard run and Ted Gradel kicked field goals of 44 and 38 yards as the 16th-ranked Irish silenced a partisan crowd of 106,098 — sixth largest ever in giant Michigan Stadium.

Demetrius Brown, starting his first game after the graduation of All-American quarterback Jim Harbaugh, tossed a 12-yard TD pass to Greg McMurtry for Michigan's only score.

Brown finished with 4 completions for 15 yards for 54 yards and three interceptions, each of which led to Irish scores. Michael Taylor came on in the fourth quarter and threw another interception and lost another fumble.

Michigan tailback Jamie Morris gained over 100 yards for the ninth time in his career. Morris finished with 19 yards on 128 carries, but fumbled twice, one of which led to a score.

Washington.....28
Purdue.....10

SEATTLE (AP) — Chris Chandler passed for three touchdowns, including two to Brian Slater, to lead 12th-ranked Washington to a 28-10 college football victory over Purdue on Saturday, spoiling Fred Akers' debut as the Boilermakers' coach.

Chandler, a fifth-year senior, overcame a sluggish start to finish with 200 yards on 13 completions in 31 attempts with one interception. Chandler had scoring passes of 41 and 30 yards to Slater and 16 yards to Darryl Franklin.

David Toy scored the Huskies' last touchdown in the final quarter when he grabbed a Darren Myles fumble in the air and returned it 26 yards.

The Huskies' Brandy Brownlee, a transfer from Southern Methodist, missed field goals of 47, 47 and 42 yards but had a 61-yard punt in the fourth quarter and a 49-yard punt that rolled dead on the Purdue 1.

A crowd of 70,492 watched the Boilermakers score their only touchdown on a 1-yard run by Myles. Downing directed the Boilermakers 56 yards in five plays in 54 seconds for the score.

Downing completed 23 of 44 passes for 237 yards.

Tennessee.....38
Mississippi St.....10

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Redshirt freshman tailback Reggie Cobb scored three touchdowns and Tennessee quarterback Jeff Francis exploited the green Mississippi State secondary Saturday as the 14th ranked Vols scored a 38-10 victory in a Southeastern Conference opener.

In the televised SEC game-of-the-week, Tennessee, 3-0, ended a three-game losing streak against State and picked up its eighth straight victory over two seasons. State fell to 1-1.

Cobb scored on runs of 23 and 9 yards and added a third touchdown on a 39-yard pass reception from Francis. Cobb's 42-yard gainer on a screen pass set up a fourth quarter Vol touchdown.

Francis, seventh in the nation in passing efficiency a year ago, came out throwing, and marched Tennessee 85 yards in eight plays for a touchdown. He hit four-of-four passes in the drive for 73 yards, including the 39-yard TD toss to Cobb.

Francis finished 13-of-23 for 227 yards.

Georgia.....41
Oregon State.....7

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Georgia tailback Lars Tate rushed for 132 yards and a school record-tying four touchdowns Saturday to power the 20th-ranked Bulldogs to a 41-7 victory over Oregon State.

Georgia, 2-0, mixing up its passing and running attack, moved to a 28-7 halftime lead as Tate scored on runs of 26 yards and 1 yard in the opening period and added a 3-yard TD burst in the second quarter. Quarterback James Jackson fired a 36-yard scoring strike to freshman tailback Rodney Hampton for the other score.

Tate equaled the Georgia school record with a 9-yard scoring run 7:25 into the third period when he got his fourth TD. Tate, a senior from Indianapolis, also had a four-touchdown game last season in matching the record held by several others.

So far this season, Tate has 350 rushing yards and six touchdowns. He had 218 rushing yards and two TDs last week as the Southeastern Conference Bulldogs opened the season with a 30-22 triumph over Virginia.

Georgia made it 41-7 over Oregon State with 1:41 left in the third period when Jackson, who connected on six of eight passes for 119 yards, scored from five yards out.

Tech Pops Citadel

ATLANTA (AP) — Rick Strom passed for 317 yards and three touchdowns to give Bobby Ross an easy victory in his Georgia Tech coaching debut Saturday as the Yellow Jackets overpowered The Citadel 51-12.

Strom, who completed 11 of 18 passes, sat out the remainder of the game after giving Tech a 37-6 lead with 11:10 left in the third quarter on a 48-yard pass to Robert Massey.

Strom's other scoring passes covered 49 yards to running back Malcolm King and 34 yards to Greg Lester.

Tech never trailed, taking the lead on its second offensive play of the day, a 2-yard run by King that came after Strom and Steve Davenport accounted for 79 yards on a pass.

Davenport made the reception at the Tech 30 and bounced off defender Terrance Young into the clear. He was finally chased down at the 2 by Anthony Jenkins.

Ross, who coached for five years at The Citadel and another five at Maryland, became the eighth coach in Tech's history last January when Bill Curry left to coach at Alabama.

King also scored on a 1-yard run later in the opening period.

Reserves accounted for Tech's last two touchdowns — 10-yard runs by Richard Hills and Stefen Scotton. Thomas Palmer kicked a 37-yard field goal in the third period.

Waltrip Is Set For Race After Strong Pole Run

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip says the time has come to put up or shut up.

Well, at least to put up.

Waltrip, who once was dubbed "Jaws" by fellow driving star Cale Yarborough, due to his penchant for promoting controversy with his mouth, is one of the favorites to win Sunday's Wrangler 400 NASCAR stock car race at Richmond Fairgrounds Raceway.

Since the three-time Winston Cup champion has won 70 races sinced 1975, that would not seem an unusual situation.

However, the hard-driving Franklin, Tenn., resident has had an "awful" season in 1987.

In 21 Winston Cup starts, Waltrip's best finish has been fourth, a feat he accomplished at the Firecracker 400 in Daytona in July and equaled at the Talladega 500 later that month.

When Sunday's 400-lap race takes the green flag at 1 p.m. EDT, Waltrip will be starting in the front row for the first time this season. He qualified second only to pole-winner Alan Kulwicki in the 30-car lineup.

"I felt like we could have beat Alan," Waltrip said. "But I'm happy. Now, we're going to have to go out and prove we belong up there."

In the first half of the season, Waltrip, in his first season driving for car-owner Rick Hendrick and working with crew chief and engine-builder Waddell Wilson, wasn't even competitive most of the time.

Since the Firecracker began the second half of the season, Waltrip says the team has been coming together.

"We've been ready to win a race for a while now," he said. "It just takes time to get everybody working together and thinking the same way. Now we've got that feeling. Time is running out. If we're going to get it done, now is the time.

"I know that everybody on this team has won before. We all know it's going to happen sooner or later. We all just feel like it's past due. If hard work was enough to get to Victory Circle, we'd have been there a long time ago."

Wilson, best known for his powerful superspeedway engines, built the power plant that put Waltrip's Chevrolet on the front row this weekend. It's the first time a Waddell Wilson engine has been on the front row at a short track since Buddy Baker qualified up front for the fall race at Martinsville, Va., in 1980.

"That's a good sign," Waltrip. said. "It's just another thing that shows we're going in the right direction."

Kulwicki, who will start from the pole for the second straight time on Richmond's half-mile oval, is looking for his first career victory.

"I think we can run with the rest of these guys all day," Kulwicki said. "We led 65 laps here in the spring and finished sixth. And our whole program is better now."

Perez Pitches Expos By Cubs

CHICAGO (AP) — Pascual Perez pitched a five-hitter and got home run support from Hubie Brooks and Mitch Webster as the Montreal Expos beat the Chicago Cubs 7-1 Saturday.

It was the Expos' sixth victory in their last seven games and kept them in strong contention for the National League East title.

Perez, a 30-year-old right-hander, improved his record to 3-0 in five starts since being brought up from the minor leagues Aug. 19.

He struck out a career-high 11 and walked two. Perez lost his shutout bid in the fourth when the Cubs scored with two out on a single by Rafael Palmeiro, a walk and a single by Jim Sundberg.

Perez then retired 12 straight before walking Ryne Sandberg with two out in the eighth.

Brooks put the Expos ahead in the first with his 11th homer, into the left field bleachers off loser Jamie Moyer, 11-13.

Two-out doubles by Andres Galarraga and Reid Nichols gave the Expos a run in the fourth.

Cardinals.....8
Mets.....1

NEW YORK (AP) — Tony Pena's two-run single capped a five-run first inning against New York ace Dwight Gooden and the St. Louis Cardinals routed the Mets 8-1 Saturday.

The victory gave the Cardinals a three-game lead over Montreal in the National League East, while the loss dropped the Mets into third place, 3½ games back.

The Cardinals drove Gooden to his earliest exit in 120 career starts, tagging him for six runs on five hits in two innings. Gooden, who had beaten St. Louis six straight times since April 24, 1985, hurt himself with three straight walks in the first inning.

St. Louis' Greg Mathews pitched an eight-hitter and Vince Coleman reached 100 stolen bases for the third straight season.

The triumph came a day after St. Louis rallied for three runs in the ninth inning and defeated the Mets 6-4 in the 10th. In that game, New York starter Ron Darling injured his right thumb and the Mets announced Saturday he would miss the remainder of the season.

Gooden, 13-6, began the game by striking out Coleman on three pitches. But Ozzie Smith doubled and Gooden issued consecutive walks to Tom Herr, Dan Driessen and Willie McGee, all on full count pitches.

Terry Pendleton followed with a sacrifice fly and John Morris got an RBI single for his first hit in nine career at-bats against Gooden. After Morris stole second, Pena, who had been in a 5-for-45 slump, singled, giving him five hits in 31 tries against Gooden.

ATLANTA (AP) — Ken Griffey doubled home the winning run with two outs in the 10th inning Saturday and the Atlanta Braves beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 10-9.

Griffey, who had a two-run double in the first inning, won it with his third hit of the game. Dion James opened the inning with a single off Alejandro Pena, 2-7, and was sacrificed to second. Gerald Perry was intentionally walked and Dale Murphy popped out before Griffey doubled.

Jim Acker, 2-6, the Braves' fifth pitcher, got the victory.

Atlanta scored five runs in the seventh for a 9-9 tie. Murphy had a sacrifice fly and Ted Simmons got an RBI single off Bob Welch, setting up pinch-hitter Graig Nettles' three-run homer against Tim Crews.

George Mason Pops Pirates

George Mason jumped on top early and rolled past East Carolina, 7-1, in a college soccer match Saturday.

The loss dropped ECU to 0-3 on the season and 0-2 in the CAA.

GMU went ahead early as Phillip Taplah knocked in a goal at the 19:56 mark of the first period. Mark Pulisic made it 2-0 when he scored at the 26:11 mark of the first period. Sam Sumo made it 3-0 when he got a goal at the 7:00 minute mark to complete the first half scoring.

Bob Lilley added two goals for GMU in the second half while teammates Gray Elleser and Larry Tobash had a goal apiece.

ECU's lone goal was scored by Steve McCarthy at the 9:30 mark of the second period to make it 3-1.

GMU outshot ECU 37-8. ECU's Mac Kendall had 17 saves while GMU goalie Brian Dunphy had five.

Tigers Top Hokies, 22-10

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Coach Danny Ford of No. 10 Clemson was happy with the way his Tiger defense held Virginia Tech in a 22-10 football win Saturday, but disappointed with a somewhat spotty offense.

"Needless to say, our offense has got to get better," Ford said after handing Frank Beamer his first defeat as Virginia Tech's coach. "We had good field position early in the game, and we don't come out with except six points."

Beamer, meanwhile, had predicted a rough debut against Clemson, but he said some of what he saw encouraged him.

"I saw some bright spots," Beamer said. "Our defense played tough most of the way. We had a great kickoff return by Jon Jeffries," who went 92 yards in the fourth quarter for the Hokies' only touchdown.

Clemson sophomore tailback Wesley McFadden rushed 21 times for 226 yards and two touchdowns, both in the second half. But afterward, Ford seemed more concerned with the way his offense had bogged down in the first half.

The Tigers had to settle for a pair of field goals from senior David Treadwell after Virginia Tech's Erik Chapman threw interceptions that gave Clemson the ball on Virginia Tech's 23- and 46-yard lines. Treadwell hit another field goal in the first half as did Virginia Tech's Chris Kinzer, leaving the Tigers with a 9-3 halftime advantage at rain-drenched Lane Stadium.

The Tigers, 2-0, broke the game open in the first series of the second half after Virginia Tech elected to kick off even though Clemson had received in the first quarter.

"At the start of the second half, we decided to kick off in the hope that we would force a punt and get good field position," Beamer said. "Clemson had the field position throughout the first half. But that backfired. It quit raining just as the half started and Clemson marched foor a touchdown."

McFadden's 44-yard run with 12:54 left in the quarter, for the first touchdown of the game, capped a six-play, 70-yard drive that made the score 15-3. He then scored on an 89-yard run with 10:18 left.

Throughout the game, Virginia Tech repeatedly failed to capitalize on good field position and Chapman threw two interceptions and lost a fumble at the Clemson 22-yard line in the third quarter.

The first half had been a field goal contest as each team's running game stalled, with Treadwell going 3-3 on kicks of 27, 39 and 31 yards and Kinzer hitting his 48-yarder.

Virginia Tech got 38 yards from sophomore fullback Rich Fox, who rushed nine times but lost a fumble at the Clemson 1-yard line late in the third quarter.

The Tigers gained 308 net yards rushing, compared with the Hokies' 23, while picking up 23 yards passing compared with 37 for Virginia Tech.

Clemson came out the winner on fumble recoveries, recovering two of Virginia Tech's three fumbles but losing just one of the six Tiger fumbles.

Boggs' Single Lifts Bosox Past Orioles

BOSTON (AP) — Wade Boggs' run-scoring single with two out in the bottom of the ninth inning gave Bruce Hurst and the Boston Red Sox a 4-3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles Saturday.

Boggs, the American League batting leader, singled home Ellis Burks, who had reached base on a fielder's choice and had stolen his 22nd base of the season. Boggs' game-winning hit came off Orioles reliever Tom Niedenfuer, 3-5, and helped Hurst, 15-10, break a four-game losing streak and take over the major league lead in complete games with 15.

The Red Sox scored once in the first on singles by Burks and Marty Barrett, a force play and Billy Ripken's error on Dwight Evans' grounder to second. Boston got two runs in the third on Barrett's third home run, his first since June 10, plus a double by Boggs and a single by Mike Greenwell.

CLEVELAND (AP) — Brook Jacoby tripled in the tying run in the ninth inning and Cory Snyder delivered the game-winner with a sacrifice fly, giving the Cleveland Indians a 5-4 victory over the Minnesoata Twins Saturday.

Minnesota reliever Juan Berenguer, 6-1, retired Joe Carter to start the Cleveland ninth. Mel Hall then singled and scored on Jacoby's triple to right field.

Junior Noboa ran for Jacoby and scored easily when Snyder flied to right field.

Reliever Doug Jones, 4-4, picked up the victory with 1 2-3 scoreless innings as Cleveland snapped a four-game losing streak. The loss was only the third in 10 games for the Twins, leaders in the American League West.

TORONTO (AP) — Ernie Whitt hit two homers and drove in six runs, and Toronto smashed three consecutive home runs in the eighth inning as the Blue Jays pounded the New York Yankees 13-1 Saturday.

The victory put the Blue Jays in first place in the American League East, a half-game ahead of Detroit, pending the outcome of the Tigers' night game at Milwaukee.

Whitt hit a two-run homer, his 13th, in the fourth inning, following a triple by George Bell. He drove in a run with a grounder in a four-run fifth, and he started the Blue Jays' home run barrage off rookie Bill Fulton in the eighth with a three-run shot.

Overall, the Blue Jays rapped 19 hits, including a solo homer by Rance Mulliniks, against four New York pitchers. Mulliniks' homer came in the second inning off Rick Rhoden, 16-10, and put the Blue Jays ahead 2-0.

Winning pitcher Jimmy Key, 16-6, gave up six hits, struck out one and walked one in eight innings. He lowered his earned run average to 2.85, lowest in the league.

Rhoden lasted four innings and gave up four runs on seven hits.

Reliever Pat Clements gave up fifth-inning singles to Moseby, Fernandez, Bell, Barfield and Gruber and the RBI grounder by Whitt.

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Steve Balboni drove in three runs Saturday and the Kansas City Royals beat the Oakland Athletics 10-7, foiling Dave Stewart's bid for his 20th victory.

Charlie Leibrandt, 15-10, gave up six runs, five of them earned, in 5 2-3 innings. He gave up eight hits, including Mark McGwire's 43rd home run, and walked a season-high five. Gene Garber, the sixth Kansas City pitcher, went one inning for his second save.

Stewart, 19-10, was tagged for five runs on six hits in the second inning and chased during a three-run fifth. He failed in his first try at winning No. 20.

McGwire hit a two-run homer in the bottom of the second. McGwire and Mike Gallego doubled in the fourth, pulling the Athletics within 5-3.

Kansas City made it 8-3 in the fifth. Balboni hit an RBI triple after first baseman McGwire dropped his two-out popup in foul territory, Brett had another RBI double and Danny Tartabull singled home a run.

Tony Phillips hit a sacrifice fly in the Oakland eighth.

Botched Conversion Sinks Cavs

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Something always seems to happen to Virginia when the Cavaliers play Maryland.

With a chance to end a 15-game losing streak to the Terps, at least with a tie, the Cavaliers botched a two-point conversion attempt with 1:18 left as the Terps won 21-19 Saturday.

"It was just a bad connection," said Shawn Moore, a redshirt freshman who directed Virginia's two touchdown drives and scored on a five-yard run to give the Cavaliers the chance for a tie.

But Marcus Wilson couldn't hold the pitchout, and the Maryland hex continued for another year in the Atlantic Coast Conference opener for teams who lost against outside competition last week.

"I thought we had the right play called," Moore said. "The tight end had it sealed."

But Maryland linebacker Kevin Walker saw if differently.

"Even if he hadn't fumbled it," Walker said, "I think we would have stopped it at the line of scrimmage. We had a lot of red shirts out there."

Virginia Coach George Welsh dwelt more on lost opportunies, which could have produced a victory over Maryland for the first time since 1971.

"The third quarter killed us," he said. "If you start where we did, you've got to get more out of it than just two field goals. The offense sputtered too much."

Virginia, which trailed 14-7 at halftime, pulled to 14-13 on field goals of 24 and 31 yards by Mark Inderlied after converting two of five Maryland second-half turnovers.

But the Terps responded with a clinching 80-yard drive, with Bren Lowery scoring from the 6 for his second touchdown of the game to make it 21-13.

Lowery, who ran for 90 yards on 27 carries, also scored from the 9 on Maryland's first possession.

Virginia tied it 7-7 at 11:43 of the second period on a 35-yard pass from Moore to John Ford.

Rose Opens New Field With 21-0 Victory Romp

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Ten years from now, old hands around Rose High School may ask this trivia question — who scored the first touchdown at Percy Daniels Field.

The answer will be Timmy Moore, who ran the ball over from 16 yards out on the first Rampant series as Rose High School opened its own stadium Friday night.

Adrian Barnhill added an 87-yard gallop and David Daniels, a two-yard plunge as the Rampants crushed Terry Sanford of Fayetteville, 21-0, in the home opener of the year.

The stadium is still incomplete. There was seating only on the visitor's side, and the press box, public address system and scoreboard were still unusable.

But the didn't dampen the enthusiasm of the fans, who packed the opposite side of the field and lined the edges of the field.

For the third straight week, the defense of the Rampants was outstanding. It held a strong Terry Sanford team to only 70 yards in total offense, just 52 on the ground. The defense blocked a punt — that by Rexter Williams — to set up the final Rampant touchdown.

If there was anything that turned the game sour it was the bevy of yellow hankies that fluttered down in the field like an afternoon shower. Eleven penalties were called against the Bulldogs, for 122 yards, while Rose suffered 17, for 142 yards. Several times, the penalties killed scoring opportunities for the Rampants.

"I'm tickled to death with the win in our own stadium for the first time," Rose coach Chip Williams said. "I'm pleased with our progress so far and the intensity that we've shown.

"The only thing I didn't like was all the penalties," Williams said. "I really don't know what I have to do to straighten that up. I think that some of us were tight about playing in the stadium for the first time too. There was some question about whether we would be in here for the first game and the kids were anxious about that all week."

Williams praised Sanford as being a strong team, and that beating them was a feather in the Rampant cap.

Rose wasted little time in letting the Bulldogs know that they were in for struggle.

Sanford appeared to be ready to move after reaching the Rose 45 with a third down and four to go situation. But a 13-yard holding penalty tossed them back and Moore intercepted a pass by David Hedgecoe on the next play, giving it to Rose at the Rampant 43. A clip on the return moved it back to the 28.

Axel Smith picked up eight on first down and a 15-yard unsportsmanlike conduct penalty moved it on to the Sanford 49. Barnhill then churned out 11 more to the 38. Rose slowed there, but on fourth and seven, Moore took a quick pitch around and was hit short of the line of scrimmage.

But he broke that tackle and two more to surge to the 22, a 13-yard gain and a first down. Two more plays moved it to the 11, but Tom Moye fumbled and recovered the ball for a five yard loss on the next play.

Moore, however, took another quick pitch around the left side, shuffling off tacklers to go into the end zone with 3:48 left in the period.

Kevin Goodrich added the PAT for a 7-0 lead.

Rose was twice penalized on the following kickoff, which served to give Sanford the ball at the Rose 47 after a short runback. But Rose held for no gain and forced a punt.

The Rampants took over at the 13 yard line, and on the first play from there, Barnhill took the ball on a trap over left tackle, breaking through the line and into the open. Jeff Mahoney then delivered a key block to set him loose on an 87-yard sprint to the end zone with 1:33 left.

Goodrich's kick upped it to 14-0.

Sanford again reached midfield on its series, but got no further than the 44 before having to kick. Rose took over on the 16 and drove downfield behind a 19-yard effort by Daniels, a 13-yard pass from Moye to Billy Carr, and a 35-yard rip by Smith down to the 13.

But a procedure penalty, followed two plays later by a dead ball personal foul set Rose back to the 25, and a half-back pass from there was incomplete.

Twice more in the half, Sanford reached the midfield stripe, only to be turned back before crossing the 40. Rose got one more chance when Moore recovered a fumble at the Rose 49.

But the Rampants turned it right back when Moye hit John Ebron for a 17-yard gain, only to see the ball fumbled away on the tackle.

Early in the second half, Sanford faced a fourth and less than a yard at its own 44 and went for it, only to fall short. Rose overcame fourth and four at the 38 with a six-yard pickup by Moore, and a personal foul added 15 more to the 17.

But Rose was again hit by a penalty for illegal procedure, and then another for delay that forced a field goal attempt of 32 yards by Goodrich, but it fell short.

Minutes later, Rexter Williams broke through to block Hedgecoe's punt from the 19 and Rose took over at the four.

Moore picked up two on the last play of the third period, and Daniels got the next two on the first play of the final period. Goodrich's kick with 11:56 showing made it 21-0.

Thereafter, Rose went with a majority of its second unit, and twice blew more scoring opportunities when it fumbled the ball away, first at the Sanford 26 and then at the 13.

Sanford never crossed the Rose 40 and never had the ball in Rose territory in the second half.

The Bulldogs also played without their head coach, John Daskal, who was suspended following his ejection from last week's game with New Hanover by the school board. The suspension was for this game only.

Barnhill led the Rose offense with 117 yards on just six carries.

The victory boosted the Rampants to 3-0 on the year while Sanford falls to 0-2, its worst start in years.

Rose will have an open date next Friday before hosting Northern Nash in its Big East opener on Sept. 25.

"I think the open date will help us," Williams said. "It will give us a chance to fill some of our gaps. Our second group is improved, but we need some quality depth, especially in the offensive line. We are still thin there."

Not An Easy Task

Haywood Leads Indians To Win

SWAN QUARTER — William Haywood scored four touchdowns and rushed for 114 yards as he led Chocowinity to a 47-0 drubbing of Mattamuskeet High School Friday night.

It was the opening Tobacco Belt Conference game for the two teams.

Haywood scored the first touchdown after only seconds of the game had elasped, breaking away on a 42-yard jaunt. Dale Cole then hit Shawn Crawford for the two-point conversion, making it 8-0.

The Indians picked up three touchdowns in the second quarter. Haywood got the first on a six-yard run, and then Brad Tyson scored from 31 yards away. Greg Heggie then dashed 73 yards with the ball to open the lead to 28-0 at halftime.

Two more scores went up on the board in the third quarter for the Tribe. Haywood scored both of them. The first came on a 41-yard ramble, and the second on a three-yard run.

Tylon Warren closed out the scoring in the final period, scoring from 32 yards away.

Tyson added 95 yards on nine carries for the Tribe, while Heggie carried twice for 79 yards.

Tyson, Lee Van Crawford, Heggie and Scott Gaskins led the defensive effort, and coach DeWayne Kellum praised the play of the offensive line in the game.

Chocowinity is now 2-1 overall and 1-0 in TBC play. The Indians travel to North Edgecombe on Friday.

Conley Nips Pitt In Overtime

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

When it came down to the overtime, D.H. Conley coach Steve Craft felt the Vikings best chance to score was via the pass, and quarterback Bronswell Patrick made the hunch a reality.

Patrick lofted a 27-yard touchdown pass to Martin Patrick on the third play of overtime to give Conley a 7-0 win over North Pitt Friday night.

"I felt our odds in overtime for throwing would be better," Craft said. The Vikings got the ball first in the extra period and, according to North Carolina High School Athletic Association rules, had four chances to score from the Panthers' 10-yard line.

"We had receivers open all night," Craft said. "Bronswell hadn't had a great night but I still felt he would stick the ball in the receiver's hands."

Patrick threw for 90 yards on the evening, hitting on six of 12 passes.

"You have to give Bronswell Patrick credit," said North Pitt coach Larry Bolger. "After we shook him up (late in the fourth quarter), he came back like that."

The Vikings tried passes on both first and second down but failed to get a completion. Then on third down, Patrick ran in for an apparent score on a bootleg left.

However, a clipping penalty nullified it and moved the ball back to the 27.

Undaunted, Patrick set up to pass again, bought time by scrambling in the pocket, and then hit Martin Patrick (no relation) at the three. Patrick then bulled over two Panther defenders for the score.

"That showed a lot of character by our young men," Craft said. "We have a third and 26 and we put it in. Martin made a super catch. He took it and stuck in the end zone."

Conley, though, wasn't out of the woods yet. The Panthers too got four shots to score from the 10.

Three straight runs moved the ball to the two yard line where Michael Daniels went in for an apparent score. However, the touchdown was nullified when officials ruled that an inadvertent whistle had blown and that Daniels was actually down at the one.

The Panthers lined up again and tried to run Michael Blow in but he was stacked up at the line to end the threat and the game.

"We still had another play to get it in," Bolger said. "We tried a misdirection play and it didn't work."

To call the game a defensive struggle would be a gross understatement.

In the first half, North Pitt took the opening kickoff to the Viking 30-yard line but failed to convert on a fourth-and-seven situation.

North Pitt put together another drive early in the second quarter, moving all the way to the Viking 11-yard line. Things bogged down from there though as a penalty moved the ball back to the 15.

With a second and 14, Conley's Anthony Perry sacked North Pitt quarterback David Sawyer for a 10-yard loss. North Pitt never recovered and ended up punting. The drive was their deepest penetration of the first half.

Conley, meanwhile, made no offensive headway in the first quarter and did not move into Panther territory until the second quarter when the Vikings drove to the North Pitt 26.

With a third and 13 at the Panther 26, Patrick hit Jason Hanby with a screen in the flat behind the line of scrimmage but North Pitt's Eldred Smikle nailed him for a six-yard loss to end the drive.

"It was definitely a defensive struggle," Craft said. "Our defense stood toe to toe with them, nose to nose and I don't feel they pushed us around."

Conley put together its longest drive of the game on its second possession of the third quarter, moving to the Panther 12 before Patrick fumbled on fourth and two. The Vikings' Darryl Simpson recovered but the ball still went over on downs.

The Panthers had a final chance to win in regulation when they drove from their own 46 to the Viking 11 after recovering a fumble by Conley's Simpson. Michael Daniels keyed the drive with 35-yards rushing on the march.

North Pitt bogged down at the 11, with a holding call moving the ball back to the 17. Michael Blow then fumbled on the next play to give Conley the ball with just under two minutes remaining.

That was the final threat for either team until overtime and for North Pitt, it may have summed up the game.

"We had that one long drive in the fourth quarter," Bolger said. "Then we had a holding penalty and a fumble. It was a lack of execution on our part. They were mixing things up and we weren't picking up on it. You can't run power football without blocking."

Craft credited his defense as a key to the win.

"We felt like we could play defense (against them)," Craft said. "Offensively, we did not have a good night. Our biggest enemy was ourselves. We dropped passes. We missed assignments. We dropped the football. In overtime, (though) we did some good things."

The loss was the first of the season for North Pitt, which stands at 1-1-1. Conley wins its first game of the year to bring its record to 1-1.

"Any time you go into overtime, someone has to lose," Bolger said. "I thought both teams played a super defensive ball game."

Conley hosts Farmville Friday while North Pitt travels to Roanoke.

Roanoke Holds Off Jamesvile

JAMESVILLE — Roanoke scored two first half touchdowns and then held off a late charge by Jamesville to take a 14-12 win in a non-conference high school football game Friday.

Jamesville had pulled within 14-12 when Craig Dickerson threw a 76-yard touchdown pass to Eric Spruill in the final minute of regulation.

The Bullets went for two but Dickerson slipped down on a run-pass option play to end the game.

Roanoke scored both of its touchdowns in the second quarter. The first came on Corey Baker's 27-yard run. Marvin Earl Morning then kicked the extra point. Corey Mabry then scored on a 12-yard pass from Paul Council. Morning's kick made it 14-0.

Jamesville got on the board in the third quarter when Dickerson hit Kelby Moore with a 35-yard pass. The pass on the two-point conversion failed and Roanoke led 14-6.

Morning led both teams in rushing with 133 yards on 23 carries. Dickerson threw for 154 yards but had two passes intercepted.

Jamesville, 0-2, has now lost two games by a total of five points. The Bullets return to action Friday hosting Bath in their first conference game of the season.

Roanoke improves to 1-1 and returns to action Friday at home against North Pitt.

Jamesville's Eddie Fitzgerald had 12 tackles and nine solos to lead the Bullets' defensive effort.

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley swept a pair of volleyball matches Friday night, including a three-game match over defending 4-A state champion Durham Jordan.

Conley topped SouthWest Edgecombe in the opening match of the night, 15-3, 7-15, 15-7. Renee Tuten led service with five straight points while Rhonda Mills and Hannah Hill each contributed four in a row. Miriam Fulford had eight effective hits while Hill had two with three kills. Peggy Whitehurst had three effective hits.

Then, against Jordan, Conley dropped the first game, 15-9, but came back to capture 15-7 and 16-14 victories to top their foe for the first time ever.

In the second game, Fulford served up seven straight points to lead the way. Tracy Sumrell had nine hits in the match while Hill had six kills with three hits. Fulford added five kills and three hits while Mills had four hits.

"It was a good overall effort, teamwise, with good passes, especially against Jordan," Coach Martha McCaskill said. "That made the difference."

Conley is now 6-2 on the year and plays host to SouthWest in a dual match on Tuesday.

Wilmington.....2
Greenville Chr.....1

WILMINGTON — Wilmington Christian rallied from one game down to win a best-of-three volleyball match Friday afternoon over Greenville Christian.

GCA won the opening game, 15-8, but couldn't pull out the second as Wilmington gained a 15-12 decision.

GCA ran out of gas in the final game, falling 15-4.

Tina Stiltner was the top server for GCA with nine points while Christie Hardison was the top hitter with 10. Erica Spain led in sets with five while Amber Tripp recorded five kills.

Greenville Christian falls to 1-1 and will travel to Raleigh Friendship on Monday.

Trinity Boys, Girls

RALEIGH — Trinity Christian Academy took a trio of volleyball matches from other schools Friday in their first matches of the season. The Trinity girls came away with two wins in three matches.

The boys defeated Raleigh Christian, 11-1 and 11-3. to get their season started. They followed that up with an 11-8, 12-10 win over Faith Christian of Goldsboro. Trinity finished off the evening with a 5-11, 11-4, 11-6 win over Hookerton's Mt. Calvary Academy.

Against Raleigh, Kirk and Kreston Welch were the top hitters, while Kirk Welch was the top spiker. Danny Bunting served up six points, while Kirk Welch and John Griffin each had four.

Against Faith, Michael Harrell was the top server with six while the Welches again were the top hitters.

Brian Stocks, Griffin, Mike Chandler and Harrell were the top servers, while Griffin was the top hitter. Kirk Welch had four spikes.

The Trinity girls lost their first match, bowing to Raleigh Hilltop, 11-8, 11-3. Becky Stocks and Natalie Godwin were the leading hitters, while Jennifer Alexander was the leading server.

Trinity then defeated Faith, 6-11, 11-8, 11-7. Myra Gillin and Godwin were the leading hitters while Stocks was the leading server.

In the final match, Trinity downed Mt. Calvary, 11-4, 11-1. Rhonda Harris and Julie Godwin were the leading hitters, and Alexander, the leading server.

The girls return to action on Thursday, hosting Bethel of Kinston, while the boys are back in action at Raleigh on Sept. 25.

Greene Central.....2
Ayden-Grifton.....1
South Lenoir.....0

(Editor's note: the following matches were inadvertently omitted from Friday's Daily Reflector.)

SNOW HILL — Greene Central took an 8-15, 15-9, 15-13 girl's Eastern Plains volleyball win over Ayden-Grifton Thursday.

Lisa Grouke had 13 service points for Greene Central. Chanel Hooker added nine while Tomekia Blackman added six.

Ayden-Grifton's serving was led by Iris Brown with 10, Shawner Kinsey with seven and Mary Simmons with six.

The Lady Chargers came back to take a 15-7, 15-6 win over South Lenoir in the other match as Christie Carter had eight service points, Kinsey had seven and Leigh Teal added five.

Ayden-Grifton returns to action at home against South Lenoir and North Pitt Tuesday.

North Pitt.....2
Farmville C.....1
Pamlico.....0

BETHEL — North Pitt picked up two girl's high school volleyball wins in an Eastern Plains Conference tri-match against Farmville Central and Pamlico Thursday.

The Pant-Hers topped Farmville 15-10, 15-1 for the fist win as Pam Worsley had eight straight service points. Angie Purvis and Melissa Harrington added six each.

Farmville was led by Susie Stancill with seven service points while Ashley Manning had three.

Worsley also had 11 hits with two kills to lead North Pitt in that category. Amy Heath added six hits with two kills. Tracy Nichols had 11 assists for the Pant-Hers.

In the second match, North Pitt took a 15-2, 15-3 win over Pamlico.

Heath went 13-14 with four aces to lead the way for the Pant-Hers. Purvis went 14-15 with 14 points. The leading hitter was Heath with four while Worsley added three kills.

Farmville then topped Pamlico 15-7, 15-5 in the final match.

Susie Stancill had 10 serves to lead Farmville. Manning added seven service points.

Pamlico is 0-4 in conference while Farmville is 2-2. North Pitt improves to 4-0 in the EPC and 6-5 overall. The Pant-Hers return to action Tuesday at Ayden-Grifton.

Rose-Hunt

Rose High School's volleyball team defeated Wilson Hunt, two games to none, in Big East Conference action Thursday.

Details and scores of the match were not made available.

Rose returns to action on Tuesday, traveling to Wilson Beddingfield.

Washington Rally Tops Pamlico, 20-14

BAYBORO — Washington High School's Henry Rouse scored in the final period to rally the Pam Pack to a 20-14 football victory over Pamlico County Friday night.

Rouse, who carried the ball 34 times for 219 yards, led the Washington effort, scoring two of the three touchdowns.

Washington got off to a fast start, scoring twice in the first quarter. Rouse got the first score on a three-run run for a 6-0 lead. Later in the quarter, quarterback Franz Holscher scored from two yards away to up the lead to 12-0.

But in the second period, Pamlico came back to get on the scoreboard. Terrence Tatum got the tally from two yards out to make it 12-6 at intermission.

The third quarter saw the Hurricanes breeze into the lead as Tatum, who led the Pamlico rushing with 101 yards on 19 carries, again scored. He went over again from the two to tie the game. Bill Lovelace then hit Sandy Long on the two-point conversion to push the 'Canes into a 14-12 lead.

But Washington rallied behind Rouse's running and scored in the final period to pull it out. Rouse went over from the five and Holscher added the PAT.

The victory makes Washington 2-1 on the season while Pamlico is also 2-1 now.

Washington travels to Ayden-Grifton on Friday.

Chargers Pop Kinston, 18-0

LITTLEFIELD — Ronnell Peterson ran for 128 yards and one touchdown as Ayden-Grifton blanked 4-A Kinston, 18-0, in high school football action Friday.

Peterson opened up the scoring with a two-yard run in the first quarter. He then keyed the Chargers' second touchdown with 40-yard run. The Chargers scored when Darryl Moye hit Jeff Barrett from two yards out to make it 12-0.

Ayden-Grifton stretched it to 18-0 in the final quarter when Eric Blount scored on a one-yard run.

The Chargers rushed for 296 yards on the night while limiting Kinston to 75 yards.

Tony Reeves added 59 yards on only five carries while Blount carried 13 times for 48 yards.

Ayden-Grifton improves to 2-1 on the year while Kinston falls to 0-2. The Chargers return to action Friday when they host Washington.

Bears-Giants Game Tops NFL Openers

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Pro Football Writer

Two months ago, The Game was the talk of Chicago.

A month ago, scalpers were asking $300 a ticket.

Now, with a strike on the horizon, it may be the closest thing to a Super Bowl this season. The New York Giants at the Chicago Bears, the last two Super Bowl winners, on the opening Monday night.

It's only the second time the previous Super Bowl winners have opened the season against each other — the Los Angeles Raiders (1980) beat the San Francisco 49ers (1981) in 1982. If you're looking for omens, that's the year the players struck after the second week and stayed away 57 days.

How big is this game?

"It creates a sense of urgency on both sides," says Coach Bill Parcells of the Giants, who have won 12 in a row, nine in a 14-2 regular season and three more in the playoffs by a combined score of 105-23.

"But the NFL season isn't a sprint. It's a marathon. You can build it up as the biggest game of the season, but realistically it's not."

It's the first regular-season meeting between these two old rivals since 1977.

But they did meet in the 1985 playoffs, Chicago winning 21-0 en route to the Super Bowl in a game noted for the whiff on a punt by the Giants' Sean Landeta that gave Chicago its first touchdown. Parcells and Giants players say that loss provided the incentive for last year and look at this game as a way to prove they're better than EVERYBODY.

The Bears are basically the same team that went 14-2 last year, struggling through a weak schedule with what seemed like endless 13-10 wins. Then they lost 27-13 to Washington in the playoffs, a game short of an NFC title matchup with the Giants.

Chicago is still without Jim McMahon, recovering from surgery on the shoulder that sidelined him most of last year. Mike Tomczak will start rather than Doug Flutie, who played in the loss to the Redskins.

Tomczak is not in the same class with Phil Simms, MVP in the Giants' 39-20 Super Bowl victory over Denver.

But their defense is in the same class with New York's, a notch above everyone else. The Bears hope to exploit the Giants' offensive line, which has been spotty in preseason.

In fact, spotty has been the word for both teams, although each was 3-1 in exhibitions.

"I'd like to say it's a game of survival," says Chicago Coach Mike Ditka. "I don't know of another team that can put on the pressure the way New York does. If we can't keep our offense on the field, then we will be in for a long night."

Seattle (10-6) at Denver (11-5)

The Seahawks ended last season by thrashing the Broncos 41-16 at the Kingdome, leading Dan Reeves to complain about always closing in Seattle. Now he opens at home against the team he will probably battle for the AFC West title.

Seattle was the AFC's strongest team at season's end last year, winning its last four. But the abacus came up wrong for the playoffs.

This year, the Seahawks are conference favorite, their defense bolstered by four rookie linebackers — Tony Woods, Dave Wyman, M.L. Johnson and the irrepressible Brian Bosworth. More, however, may turn on the consistency of often inconsistent quarterback Dave Krieg.

Denver begins with seven new starters. Some are there because Reeves and defensive coordinator Joe Collier want more beef; others to replace retired veterans like Steve Foley, Louis Wright and Tom Jackson.

The offense, however, is probably stronger, with rookie wide receiver Ricky Nattiel giving John Elway one more toy to play with.

Miami (8-8) at New England (11-5)

Another traditional season-ender that's being used as a season-opener.

What passed for a Miami defense has already lost to injury its two best players — linebackers John Offerdahl and Hugh Green. That means Dan Marino, recovered from a dislocated finger, will need one of his routinely brilliant games to keep the Dolphins in it.

The Patriots will start Steve Grogan at quarterback for Tony Eason, who has a pulled groin. But that hasn't made much difference in the past.

"I think our football team is capable of winning the world's championship this year," says Coach Raymond Berry. "It's what I really believe."

Dallas (7-9) at St. Louis (4-11-1)

How far have the Cowboys fallen? This could be a battle to stay out of the NFC East cellar because Neil Lomax and his St. Louis friends have looked a little feistier in a 2-2 preseason than the guys who collapsed the past two years.

Dallas is 22-4-1 in openers but is coming off a 1-3 preseason in which the offense managed just three touchdowns. Herschel Walker, one of the many injured Cowboys, is expected back Sunday and should help.

'I had hoped we would be in better shape to start the season, but we will be slower starting than normal," says Coach Tom Landry.

Cleveland (12-4 at New Orleans (7-9)

The Browns seem to have no psychological scars from having missed the Super Bowl by 37 seconds. But Al Gross will start at free safety in place of Chris Rockins, who took some of the blame for John Elway's 98-yard drive to the game-tying touchdown in the AFC title game.

More important may be running backs Earnest Byner and Kevin Mack, who played just seven quarters together last year after each gaining 1,000 yards in 1985.

Bobby Hebert will be at quarterback instead of Dave Wilson for New Orleans, which improved under Jim Mora but still finished with its 21st non-winning season in 21 years. Some teams talk playoffs; Mora says: "I'll take 9-7."

Los Angeles Rams (10-6) at Houston (5-11)

This is the first test of the running soap opera that asks: Can Ernie help Eric live with Jim?

Ernie is Ernie Zampese, the Rams' new offensive coordinator, who is trying to integrate Jim Everett's passing into one of the league's most predictable offenses — Eric Dickerson right, Eric Dickerson left, and let the defense get field position.

Houston has been more predictable — 16-57 the last five years, worst in the NFL over that period. This year they're using new tricks — Mike Rozier hopes to improve by changing from No. 33 to 30.

Philadelphia (5-10-1) at Washington (12-4)

The Redskins won this 41-14 last year and there's little reason to believe it may not be the same again unless Reggie White and rookie Jerome Brown can wreak some defensive havoc for Philadelphia. The Eagles finished the preseason dismally, a 36-3 loss to Detroit and Randall Cunningham, who was staying in the pocket early, seemed to be returning to his scrambling ways.

Cunningham's problem is a porous offensive line and the lack of a running game, weaknesses the Redskins should exploit. George Rogers and Kelvin Bryant nursed their traditionally nagging injuries in preseason but the Redskins should be ready — they usually are for everyone except the Giants.

New York Jets (10-6) at Buffalo (4-12)

The Bills played the Jets close last year, just as they did a lot of other teams. They may beat them Sunday.

Two rookies, linebacker Shane Conlan and cornerback Nate Odomes will start on defense and two others, cornerback Roland Mitchell and end Leon Seals will see a lot of action.

But the Jets will play rookies too — Gerald Nichols, a seventh-round pick, will start by default at nose tackle. Injuries have robbed the defensive line of Joe Klecko, Tom Baldwin and Marty Lyons and without pass rush, Jim Kelly will produce some points.

Los Angeles Raiders (8-8) at Green Bay (4-12)

So look where James Lofton begins his career with the Raiders. Right back in Green Bay, which banished him after last season.

Both these teams have quarterback problems (Rusty Hilger vs. Randy Wright?), but Los Angeles (Irwindale?) has a defense, which is something lacking in ex-Titletown.

Atlanta (7-8-1) at Tampa Bay (2-14)

This is like a party without the guest(s) of honor. Vinny Testaverde will watch for the Bucs while Steve DeBerg does just what he did for Joe Montana, John Elway and Steve Young — hold the fort while the rookie learns.

Atlanta might have started its own rookie quarterback, Chris Miller. But the Smith family hasn't coughed up the requisite money so the starter will be David Archer.

San Francisco (10-5-1 at Pittsburgh (6-10)

It could have been predicted after the 49ers were dismantled 49-3 by the Giants in the playoffs last year, but Bill Walsh has started a modified housecleaning in San Francisco. While the five new starters are there primarily because of injury, Walsh cut a lot of veterans and has some new, young faces in the wings.

Pittsburgh's problem is the same as it's been since the Super Bowl years — not enough of those new, young faces. The latest failure is defensive end Darryl Sims, the No. 1 pick in 1985, who was cut Monday.

Cincinnati (10-6) at Indianapolis (3-13)

The three key names here are Cornelius Bennett, Gary Hogeboom and Anthony Munoz, all missing. But for this week at least, the Colts should miss Hogeboom and Bennett, their injured quarterback and holdout draft choice more than the Bengals should miss Munoz, probably the best offensive lineman in football, who will have to get in shape after ending his holdout this weekend.

The Colts are unbeaten under Ron Meyer, who went 3-0 after Rod Dowhower's team was 0-13. It could be a dangerous game for the Bengals, who start slowly and miss playoff berths because they lose games they should win.

Gladden Makes The Most Of End Of Game Role

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Dan Gladden didn't start for the Minnesota Twins, but he was there at the end to finish things for the Cleveland Indians.

"It's nice to be able to contribute to the cause," Gladden said after his three-run pinch homer in the 11th inning gave the Twins a wild 13-10 victory over the Indians. "When we started coming back, I knew I might have a chance to go in."

Gladden was the 18th and last hitter used by Minnesota Manager Tom Kelly. Gladden grounded out in the 10th before hitting his game-winning homer that completed a Twins comeback from a 7-1 deficit.

"I was out of bodies," Kelly said. "I didn't have anybody else. I was getting ready for (pitcher Steve) Carlton to pinch-hit."

In other American League action Friday, it was Boston 9, Baltimore 3; Milwaukee 5, Detroit 2; Toronto 6, New York 5 in 10 innings; Texas 7, California 2; Kansas City 9, Oakland 0, and Chicago 5, Seattle 1.

Gladden's homer was the 20th hit for the AL West-leading Twins, who improved their lead to 3½ games over Oakland. When he entered the game as a pinch-hitter in the 10th, Gladden broke his bat on a grounder to first.

"I came back and used a different model bat, and that was the story," Gladden said.

His game-winning homer came off Don Gordon, 0-3, Cleveland's fifth pitcher.

Tim Laudner, whose two-run pinch single had tied the game in the ninth, hit a one-out single off Gordon in the 11th. Second baseman Tommy Hinzo threw wildly to second on Chris Pittaro's ground ball, and one out later, Gladden hit his sixth home run.

"You can't give a good club four outs. We should have won the ballgame," Cleveland Manager Doc Edwards said. "With a 7-1 lead, you should put the game away."

The Indians had built their early lead with the help of two homers by Mel Hall.

Red Sox 9, Orioles 3

Todd Benzinger's third home run in four games touched off a four-run Boston rally in the fourth inning, leading the Red Sox over Baltimore.

Benzinger, who had three hits in the game, tied the score 3-3 with his homer as the Red Sox came from behind for their fourth straight victory.

Jeff Sellers, 7-7, allowed eight hits before leaving in the ninth as the Red Sox handed the Orioles their fifth straight loss. Calvin Schiraldi finished up.

Benzinger's homer, his fourth of the season, came off John Habyan, 4-5. After Boston loaded the bases, Marty Barrett singled across the winning run and reliever Mike Kinnunen walked Wade Boggs for another score. Mike Greenwell's sacrifice fly produced the fourth run of the inning for a 6-3 Boston lead.

The Red Sox added three runs in the eighth, two on a double by Greenwell, who had four RBI.

Brewers 5, Tigers 2

Greg Brock drew a bases-loaded walk to force in the go-ahead run and B.J. Surhoff added a two-run single to cap a four-run eighth inning as Milwaukee rallied to beat Detroit.

The Brewers tied the game 2-2 on an RBI single by Paul Molitor off reliever Mike Henneman, 9-2. Henneman was replaced by Willie Hernandez when the Brewers loaded the bases and the Tiger reliever promptly walked Brock on four pitches to give the Brewers a 3-2 lead. One out later, Surhoff singled to score two runs.

Ted Higuera, 16-9, won his fifth straight decision with a six-hitter and completed his 12th game of the season.

Higuera had thrown a three-hitter, one-hitter and two-hitter in his last three starts, but his bid for a fourth straight shutout was ended when Tom Brookens hit his 12th homer with two outs in the fifth inning. The homer broke Higuera's scoreless streak at 30 innings and tied the game 1-1.

Blue Jays 6, Yankees 5

Ernie Whitt hit a run-scoring, two-out single in the 10th inning to lead Toronto over New York.

Willie Upshaw led off with a single and stole second as Garth Iorg struck out for the second out. Dave Righetti, 7-4, walked Kelly Gruber to pitch to the left-handed Whitt, who had only three hits in his previous 29 at-bats.

But Whitt fouled up the strategy when he sent Upshaw home with a single to right.

The Blue Jays pulled into a first-place tie with Detroit in the AL East, both at 84-56. The Yankees remained six games behind in third.

David Wells, 2-3, pitched 1 2-3 innings and struck out two to pick up the victory. He got Don Mattingly to line out to second base with two out and two on in the top of the 10th. Mattingly had tied the game with a two-run homer in the eighth off Jeff Musselman.

Rangers 7, Angels 2

Jose Guzman, 13-11, scattered eight hits for his fifth straight victory and Tom Paciorek and Steve Buechele each hit two-run homers for Texas.

Guzman didn't allow a hit for 3 2-3 innings and uncorked a wild pitch to allow the first run off him in the fifth. He walked five and struck out eight.

Texas took a 3-0 lead off John Candelaria, 8-6, in the first inning. Larry Parrish singled to score one run before Paciorek hit his first homer of the season to make it 3-0. Parrish singled home another run in the third.

Dave Meier doubled in the fourth ahead of Buechele's 12th homer for a 6-0 lead.

Royals 9, Athletics 0

Bret Saberhagen pitched a five-hitter for his first victory in over a month and only his second since the All-Star break. Saberhagen, 17-8, walked two batters and struck out three as the third-place Royals stayed 5½ games behind the AL West-leading Twins.

Frank White supplied a big part of the offense and defense. He tripled and doubled, scored twice and drove in a run. His backhand stab of Alfredo Griffin's two-out grounder in the fifth preserved the shutout as the A's wasted a leadoff double by Mark McGwire.

Oakland starter Steve Ontiveros, 8-7, was the loser.

White Sox 5, Mariners 1

Carlton Fisk broke a tie with a two-run double in the seventh inning and Jose DeLeon and Bobby Thigpen combined on a five-hitter for Chicago.

Fisk broke a 1-1 tie when he doubled with the bases loaded off Mike Campbell, 0-4. DeLeon, 9-12, scattered five hits in 7 2-3 innings before getting relief help from Thigpen, who got his 10th save. At one point, DeLeon retired 13 batters in a row after a first-inning run by Seattle.

Cardinals Pull Out Win Over Mets In The Ninth

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

With a three-run lead, one out to go and their starter working on a one-hitter, the New York Mets thought they had wrapped up their sixth consecutive victory over St. Louis. The Cardinals thought differently.

"This will wake us up," Terry Pendleton said after his two-run homer capped a three-run Cardinal uprising in the ninth inning Friday night. St. Louis scored twice in the 10th to win 6-4 and increase their lead in the National League East to 2½ games over the Mets.

"We never thought we were dead," Pendleton said.

The victory assured St. Louis of being in first place Sunday night, regardless of the outcome of the remaining two games of the series at New York's Shea Stadium.

Mets starter Ron Darling had allowed just one hit, a bunt single by Vince Coleman in the sixth. Darling sprained his right thumb while diving to field the ball.

Precautionary X-rays were taken today, but Mets Manager Davey Johnson was already expecting the worst. "It doesn't look good," he said. "I think it's serious."

Darling pitched to only one batter in the seventh, giving up a walk, before leaving the game because of the injury. That left the Mets bullpen to hold the lead.

"Their bullpen did not get the job done," St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said. "But there's still a long way to go."

Another key matchup Friday night saw the Cincinnati Reds defeat NL West leader San Francisco 4-3 to close within four games of the Giants.

In other NL games, it was Chicago 8, Montreal 4; Pittsburgh 4, Philadelphia 2; Los Angeles 5, Atlanta 2; and San Diego 11, Houston 0.

With Roger McDowell, the Mets' third pitcher of the night, on the mound, Ozzie Smith walked to open the ninth. Two outs later, Willie McGee singled to center, scoring Smith to pull the Cardinals within 4-2. Then, with two strikes on him, Pendleton tied the game with a home run over the center field fence.

"I thought it was a good sinker," McDowell said. "This is definitely a feeling that we didn't want to have at this point."

In the Cardinal 10th, successive one-out singles by Coleman, Smith and Tommy Herr off Jesse Orosco, 3-8, scored one run and Dan Driessen followed with a run-scoring grounder.

Ken Dayley, 9-4, pitched two innings for the victory.

Home runs by Darryl Strawberry and Mookie Wilson had given the Mets a 4-1 lead. Strawberry's towering two-run homer, his 35th, capped a three-run first inning against starter John Tudor. Wilson homered in the second.

Reds 4, Giants 3

Two-run doubles by Dave Parker and Dave Concepcion supported left-hander Dennis Rasmussen, 2-1, who scattered five hits over six innings. Dave Dravecky, 9-10, took the loss.

"It was a great game," said the 39-year-old Concepcion, a utility infielder who got a rare start. "I'm just looking forward to sweeping. There's no way we can afford to lose any games this weekend. We've got to win tomorrow and Sunday to stay in the race."

Giants second baseman Chris Speier hit Rasmussen's third pitch of the game for his 11th homer. Cincinnati scored twice in the bottom of the first as Concepcion doubled, Tracy Jones reached on an infield single and Parker doubled.

In the second, Concepcion doubled home two more runs as the Reds took a 4-1 lead.

"We had our chances to win it. We just couldn't capitalize on them," Giants Manager Roger Craig said. "We didn't get the big hits. Give them credit. They were aggressive and had good pitching."

Cincinnati and San Francisco will play each other four more times in their final 21 games.

Dodgers 5, Braves 2

At Atlanta, Fernando Valenzuela pitched a four-hitter and Mike Marshall keyed a three-run sixth inning with a two-run single. Valenzeula, 12-13, had a shutout until Atlanta rookie Jeff Blauser hit a two-run homer in the seventh. Rookie Kevin Coffman, 0-2, lost in his second major league start.

Ralph Bryant homered for the Dodgers in the second.

Padres 11, Astros 0

Stan Jefferson had four hits and drove in four runs and Eric Show, 7-16, pitched a four-hitter for his third shutout of the year.

HERE'S WHO MAKES OUR LIFETIME GUARANTEE ON CAR REPAIRS POSSIBLE.
Herbert Powell

Because we offer the free Lifetime Service Guarantee on car repairs, my job as service manager is a little tougher. I have to make sure car repairs are done right the first time. Because if they're not, it's our problem, not yours.

Here's how the Lifetime Service Guarantee works. If you pay for any covered repair and it has to be done again, we fix it free. That's free parts and free labor. For as long as you own your Ford, Lincoln, Mercury, Merkur or Ford light truck.

The Lifetime Service Guarantee covers thousands of parts and repairs. And it doesn't matter how old your vehicle is, how many miles are on it, or even where you bought it. Add all this up and you've got the best car repair guarantee in America.

Ask us to see a copy of the Lifetime Service Guarantee. Then give us a chance to turn our guarantee into a lifetime reality.

Rains Making Water Murky

By The Associated Press

Recent rains along the cost have left water and fishing conditions rather murky along parts of the North Carolina coast, pier operators say.

"We've had some real bad weather here," said John Dudley of Dudley's Marina in Swansboro. "We haven't had much going on.

"It's rained over 10 inches the last four or five days," he said. "It looks kind of bleak right now until it clears up. I'm afraid it will bea couple of weeks for the fish to get straightened out. They won't bite when it's muddy and turbid."

It wasn't rainy everywhere. Here is a look at how selected spots along the N.C. coast fared last week.

Swansboro

Despite the weather, Dudley did say some fish were biting, most notably the king mackerel.

"We had one boat out today and it got five kings and a shark," he said.

Hatteras

The weather wasn't as severe in Hatteras and Dave Hissey of Pelican's Roost reported several nice catches.

"We had some small blues and flounder in the surf and we had puppy drum up to 10 pounds on Cape Point in Buxton," he said. "The inshore trollers found Spanish mackerel and albacore about six miles off the beach and in the sound there was some speckled trout."

Hissey said as the weather improves, the fishing also will.

Southport

Fishing conditions weren't ideal at the Long Beach Pier, but Tony Myers said the fish were still biting.

"It's still a little slow," Myers said. "We're getting a few spots, a few blues and the puppy drum has been pretty good. Last Saturday and Sunday we had a good speckled trout run and we caught a few Spanish and a few flounder.

Blue Crab Disease Concerns Fishermen

The 1987 spring crab season in the Pamlico River was one of the slowest on record, a situation that has created much concern and alarm, according to Terry Sholar, Pamlico district manager of the N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries.

Not only was the crab season slow, but blue crabs this year began showing up with ulcerous sores. DMF and N.C. Division of Environmental Management officials began investigations in July to determine the extent of the infection, its cause and factors responsible for the infection, said Bill Hogarth, DMF director.

Trawl net surveys were conducted in the river to determine the extent and distribution of the infection. Hogarth said the survey confirmed commercial fishermen reports that the diseased crabs were most prevalent on the south side of the Pamlico River between Durham's Creek and South Creek.

In the same general vicinity, DEM conducted extremely intensive water quality and bottom analyses. The laboratory results of this work have not been completed.

In addition, infected and uninfected crabs from the area, as well as from other areas of the state, have been analyzed. These analyses indicated the infected crabs contained no abnormal mineral or metal contents. In addition, some bacteriological analyses have been conducted and are continuing.

According to DMF officials, the disease appears to be "shell disease" in crustaceans. Biologists said the disease seems to be caused by a number of bacteria that invade and eat shell material once a break occurs in the outer protective layer.

Although it is generally associated with polluted waters, Sholar said scientists do not fully understand why the infection suddenly occurred, and are not sure of the specific bacteria involved. The disease has generally been seen in older crabs because they retain their shells for a longer period between molts and the disease can progress to a much more advanced stage.

Since the first of August, DMF has held 80 blue crabs in cages in the Pamlico River at four different sites identified by the trawl survey as being the areas of the highest infection. Sholar explained that the purpose of the cage, or "sentinel," studies is to try to infect healthy crabs, learn more about the geographic areas of infections and, eventually, discover possible factors associated with the disease. Although the results are preliminary, a high percentage of the caged crabs have become affected.

DMF officials will continue this study until definitive conclusions can be drawn. In addition, more bacteriological studies will be conducted to identify the organisms causing the infection.

As with the on-going study of fish diseases in the Pamlico River, DMF continues to be concerned with the overall water quality and health of the river, Hogarth commented.

Blue Marlin Blitz

The Outer Banks of North Carolina are well known by many anglers for its sports fishing, and lately the fishing has been nothing short of spectacular, according to reports by the Dare County Tourist Bureau.

Oregon Inlet Fishing Center was the scene of a lot of excitement recently when four big blue marlin were hooked and landed in a three-day span. The "blitz" began when angler Paril Tolson worked for 6 1/2 hours to land a 793-pound blue marlin.

The next day, a 958-pound blue marlin was taken in 2 1/2 hours by a Virginia fisherman while aboard a charter boat. According to the Tourist Bureau, before the exciting news of these two big fish could settle down, another fisherman boarded yet another marlin weighing 813 pounds. Then, the second largest blue marlin ever taken at Oregon Inlet Fishing Center was caught and weighed in at 1,020 pounds. A Maryland angler fought this fish for almost two hours before landing it.

Young, Powell Claim Wins

Beau Young and Jennifer Powell captured the City of Greenville Mixed Doubles Tournament, which was completed this week at River Birch Tennis Center.

Young and Powell defeated Tom Sayetta and Sharon Ricks, 6-4, 6-2, for the title.

Nelson Staton and Karen Ebinger downed Knott and Lib Proctor, 6-4, 5-7, 6-4, in the consolation bracket finals.

The tournament was sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department.

Don Newcombe of the Brooklyn Dodgers won the first Cy Young Award in 1956 at a time when there was only one award for both the National and American Leagues.

Outdoor News

"We had a strong southeast wind and it's got the water muddy. The water seems to be clearing up a little bit now, and hopefully the fish will be coming back in on us."

Topsail Island

Hollis Whitley of Jolly Roger Pier said Topsail Island had a couple of days of stormy weather and a couple of days of good fishing.

"They did real well last weekend in spots and croakers and they've been catching some bluefish," he said. "There is stil some Spanish around and some pompano.

"It was kind of stormy over the weekend and the seas were rough, but it's nice out there now. We've had a pretty good week."

Carolina Beach

At the Carolina Beach Fishing Pier Northern Extension, Joy Cash reported a good week.

"They've been doing pretty good," she said. "They're catching some spots and drums and they've caught a couple of kings and the Spanish mackerel has been biting."

Cash also reported some catches of catfish in the area.

Nags Head

Tom Ferguson of the Nags Head Fishing Pier reported runs of trout and spot and the first appearance of the year for puppy drum.

"We've had a nice trout run and some nice spot," he said. "We had some pompano yesterday."

Ferguson said he expected business and fish to pick up the next few weeks.

Powell On Team

Paige Powell, a 13-year-old eighth grader at E.B. Aycock Junior High School, has been selected for the North Carolina team in the Junior Wightman Cup tennis competition.

Paige, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Powell, will compete in the regional tournament which will be held at Hilton Head, S.C., Oct. 2-4. Two boys and two girls were each selected from three age groups, 14, 16 and 18, along with one "wild card" selection from each state. They will play in team competition patterned after the Davis Cup for the Southeastern championship. The winning team will advance to further competition.

Paige has been playing tennis since she was five, instructed by her father. She is now a student under Allen Farfour, the pro at Greenville Country Club.

She has won a number of age group tournaments across the southeast.

GCA Loses

WILMINGTON — Wilmington Christian scored a late goal to nip Greenville Christian, 3-2, in a soccer match Friday.

Wilmington scored the only goal of the first half at the 20 minute mark. Ray Conner kicked the ball in to give Wilmington the lead.

Conner scored again early in the second half to up the lead to 2-0.

But GCA rallied behind two goals by Franklin Huggins. He scored the first on an assist by Kevin Joyner at the 20 minute mark and then added an unassisted goal 10 minutes later to knot it up.

But Dexter Davenport scored four minutes later on an unassisted crossing shot to put Wilmington back up and end the scoring.

Wilmington took 18 shots on goal with GCA goalie Brad Dixon recording 15 saves. GCA had 15 shots while David Inman recorded six saves for Wilmington.

Greenville falls to 0-2 on the year and travels to Raleigh Friendship on Monday.

Tom Leach of the Pittsburgh Pirates was the National League home run champion in 1902 with only six homers, a record low.

Effective September 16, we are discontinuing double coupons to continue to bring you lower grocery prices. Here's why:

1. To insure lower grocery prices for all our customers.

2. Independent surveys show the vast majority of our customers use coupons infrequently and yet they carry the burden of double coupon cost. We have decided to concentrate these savings on lower grocery prices to all our customers.

3. We are dropping double coupons to insure all our customers the best possible grocery prices.

4. Double coupons are an expensive promotion. The cost has to be spread across all food prices. All shoppers pay the price, not all receive the benefit. We have decided to eliminate this cost and concentrate on low grocery prices.

Joe Wilson, vice president and general manager of Sunnyside Eggs, says the egg industry is everything it's cracked up to be.

"It's an everyday challenge," Wilson said. "It's never a dull moment and I've been in the poultry business for 26 years. You've got something happening all the time — either you're watching the egg market, the grain markets, or working on feed formulation to form better feed conversions."

Sunnyside Eggs, which was founded in 1965 by two principals who reside in Florida, has two plants operating in Pitt County, one on state road 1708 and an in-line processing facility in the Roundtree community, employing about 150 people.

"They (the principals) were looking for an area with available labor, but more so available grain," Wilson said. "A lot of eggs are produced in the Midwest because of the available grain out there.

"They chose this area, being a heavily agricultural and grain area, and started building contract chicken houses and weathered through some lean years getting started up, getting in the market."

When Wilson joined the company in 1972, Sunnyside Eggs had about 300,000 birds laying. Today, that number has increased more than seven-fold.

"We've come right along and we'll peak out in November of this year," he said. "We currently have a few over 2 million birds laying, and we'll have about 2.4 million laying in November."

The firm also supplies eggs for a variety of food store chains which distribute Sunnyside products across the nation, according to Wilson, who said the company also has contract agreements with 26 area farm operators.

"Sunnyside is a complete operation," he said. "We grow our own pullets from day old on through all the laying stages. We manufacture all of our own feed, and all the corn is bought locally.

"We'll use about 2.5 million bushels of corn in this feed mill here next year just to feed our own chickens."

Wilson said the Roundtree operation includes nine houses with 100,000 birds in each.

"Our budget this year is projecting us to produce 43 million dozen this year," he said. "We are probably the largest (egg producers) in the state. We'll have 2.4 million birds producing by November, and we have only about about 7 million to 7.5 million laying in the state."

The state's poultry industry, which generated about $1.2 million in income, may be the largest in the nation, said Wilson, president of the North Carolina Poultry Federation.

"The (state) poultry business includes eggs, broilers, turkeys, ducks and, in all probability, North Carolina will, by composite average, be the largest in the country," he said. "We rank first in turkeys, first in ducks, second or third in broilers, sixth or seventh in eggs.

"Of course, you have other states that are first (in some areas), but when they (poultry products) are combined, we'll probably be one of the larger poultry producing states in this country because of the size of it."

Meanwhile, Sunnyside Eggs, through an automated and scientific researched feeding process, is able to predict how many eggs it will receive from each bird.

"In a 40-week period, we're looking for about 208 hen-housed eggs, and we figure on about an average of five eggs per week per hen," he said.

Wilson said the buying public doesn't realize how much work is involved in the egg industry.

"Basically, there are not many people who realize what goes into producing eggs and the quality of eggs that are produced in this country, not just by Sunnyside, but by all egg producers," he said.

The egg industry has also decreased the amount of time it takes to reach supermarket shelves, according to Wilson.

"On the in-line operation, the same day they're laid those eggs are washed, graded and in a carton ready to go to the stores and some of them leave that same day," he said.

"Eggs that were laid this morning are already in a carton out there in the cooler ready to be loaded on the trucks tonight. Most of our eggs within five days are in the consumers hands."

SHIPPING PREPARATION — Mary Williams, an employee with Sunnyside Eggs in Greenville, prepares racks of eggs for shipping at the Roundtree plant. The firm, which was formed in 1965, plans to process 43 million dozen eggs this year, according to company officials. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

American inventor James Rumsey is not popularly credited with inventing the steamboat. But he designed a water-tube boiler in the 18th century that eventually became the world standard for all steam engines, from power plants to ocean liners, says National Geographic.

Judge's Decision Concerns Officials

By DEBORAH MESCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge has opened the door just a crack to let the regional Bell telephone companies into electronic information services, but some in the industry fear he may not have opened it wide enough.

In a lengthy decision last week, U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greene set out the framework for an information-services network in which the Bell companies will transmit services provided by others.

The Bells, for example, will be able to process data to allow an electronic signal to be read by a caller's computer, or they could act as a centralized billing agent for information data bases.

But they still are prohibited from the more lucrative end of the business — selling electronic services that allow callers to bank and perform other financial transactions from home computer terminals, to read movie and other event listings, and to dial up airline schedules and hotel availabilities.

The technical details for a framework is only half the task of setting up an information-services network, said Hillary Thomas, chairwoman of the Videotex Industries Association.

"We also need to look at the economic impact of who plays what role because without the incentive the (Bell companies) may not be willing to make the investment in the infrastructure that would allow others to provide information services," she said.

One incentive the videotex association had sought for the Bell companies was a green light on electronic "Yellow Pages," but Greene continued that prohibition.

Though Greene was clear on that point, telephone experts said it was unclear what other limits will be placed on the Bell companies' involvement in the information services industry. He invited the companies as well as consumer and interest groups to submit proposals by the end of the month. Then he will develop the rules that will govern the industry in the future.

None of the Bell companies was happy with Greene's cautious approach. Much of their anger was directed at his refusal to lift restrictions preventing them from making telephone equipment and providing long-distance services.

They agreed that Greene's ruling would give them at least a foot in the door of the information-services industry, but they said it did not go far enough and warned it would delay delivery of such computerized services to the mass of Americans.

"The limited role he appears to have granted us will do little to facilitate the development of the information services industry in this country," said BellSouth Chairman John L. Clendenin.

Anita Worthington of Aldridge and Southerland Realtors in Greenville recently attended a residential real estate course in Chicago.

The course was presented by the Residential Sales Council of the Realtors National Marketing Institute, an affiliate of the National Association of Realtors.

The session was one of a series of courses which leads to qualification for the "Certified Residential Specialist" designation.

Familiarization Trip

Cindy Hartly of the Greenville Travel Center returned recently from a familiarization trip to West Palm Beach, Fla., sponsored by American Airlines and the Breakers Hotel.

Ms. Hartly also visited San Juan, Puerto Rico, sponsored by American Airlines and the El San Juan Hotel and Casino.

European Market

Hatteras Hammocks Inc. of Greenville has announced that it is introducing its products abroad.

Walter Perkins, president, and Jay Branch, vice president of Hatteras Hammocks, said that they introduced Hatteras products at the SPOGA international trade fair of sporting goods, camping equipment and garden furniture recently in Cologne, West Germany.

The spokesmen said over 900 firms from 42 countries presented their sporting and garden products at the show.

Hatteras Hammocks is a division of The Hatteras Group.

Grand Opening

Grand opening activities are scheduled from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. today at the new location of the Frame Shop & Art Gallery at 1413 S. Evans St., the firm has announced.

Midyear Convention

Maxine Anderson, manager of Quixote Travels, and her husband, Dale, attended the Travel Agents of the Carolinas' midyear convention and trade show in Naples, Fla.

The meeting included a speaker from Piedmont Airlines who discussed "Pricing and Yield Management: How We Determine Those Cheap Seats," while the trade show consisted of 52 exhibitors from airlines, hotels, cruise lines, tour companies and car rentals.

Limited Partner

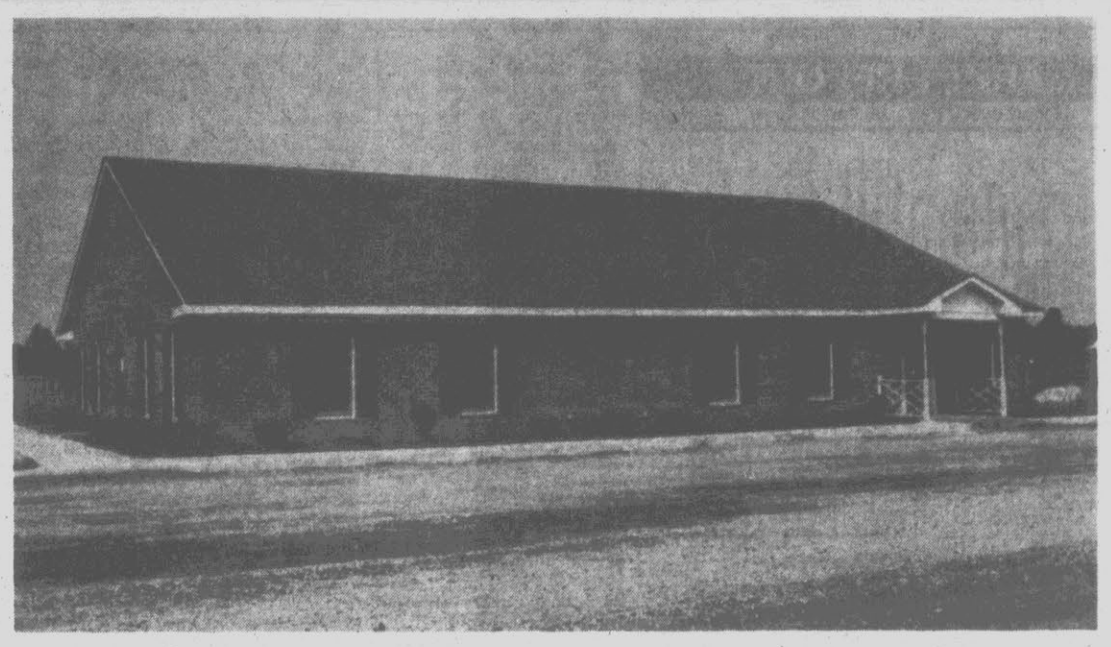
Wes Singleton, Edward D. Jones & Co. representative in Greenville, has accepted an invitation to become a limited partner in The Jones Financial Cos., newly created holding company for Edward D. Jones & Co., according to John Bachmann, managing partner.

Singleton has been with the company since 1982 and has been in the Greenville office for five years. He is a member of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church.

A native of Goldsboro, Singleton graduated from East Carolina University in 1981 with a degree in finance.

He and his wife, Phyliss, have two children, Tyler, 2, and Nick, 1.

Bachmann said the Jones Financial Cos. was created so Edward D. Jones & Co. could remain a partnership while expanding into other areas of potential business.



DAY CARE CENTER RELOCATES — Waldrop Acres Preschool Inc. recently opened a new facility at the corner of East Main Street and the Old Tar Road in Winterville. Waldrop Acres began operations in 1967 and is run by Joe and Gloria Moore. The new center, which will provide day care for preschool children and afterschool students, has 4,425 square feet. Purchase Offer

Western Steer-Mom 'n' Pop's Inc. has announced that Kelley & Partners Ltd., a New York and Florida investment firm, has made an offer to acquire substantially all of the shares of Western Steer-Mom 'n' Pop's Inc., owned by Marshall E. Digh, Charles F. Conner Jr. and related parties, and Countrywide Insurance Agency Inc.

Western Steer said the proposal, if accepted and consumated, would increase the ownership of Kelley, which is believed by the company to hold approximately 3 percent of the common stock, to approximately 34 percent.

Vice President

Wesley M. Beckner has been promoted to vice president by the board of directors of Branch Banking & Trust Co., according to Jerry W. Powell, senior vice president and eastern area manager in Greenville.

Beckner, a business services manager in Greenville, joined the bank in 1982 as a management associate and has worked as a business services officer in Morehead City and city executive in Havelock.

A Stroudsburg, Pa., native, Beckner is a graduate of East Carolina University with a degree in finance. He and his wife, Kathy, have a daughter, Lindsey.

Sales Reported

Brendle's Inc. of Elkin reported that sales for the three months ended Aug. 1 were $44,035,000, up 2.3 percent from $43,048,000 recorded in the second quarter of fiscal 1987.

The company said it incurred a net loss of $313,000, compared with net income of $864,000 in the same period a year earlier.

For the six months ended Aug. 1, sales were $76,532,000, compared with $77,525,000 in the first half of fiscal 1987. The company recorded a net loss of $1,662,000, compared with net income of $1,122,000 a year ago.

Brendle's, which operates 39 discount retail stores, has a facility in Kinston and is building a store in Greenville.

Workshop Planned

A continuing education workshop for insurance agents and adjustors, sponsored by Caremaster Inc., will be held Wednesday at the Greenville Sheraton.

The main topic of the session will be fire damage restoration and administration, and relationships between the insured and insurance company. Jeff Bishop from Dothan, Ala., will present the course.

The course is designed to heighten awareness about procedures available for fire, water and other disaster claims, including how to limit losses.

The Greenville Association of Adjustors will attend and have its September meeting following the seminar. For more information call 756-5700.

Financial Session

Jim Bengala and Hugh Thompson, local representatives with IDS/American Express Inc., have retured from a three-day national conference for top qualifying financial planners in Washington, D.C.

Senior vice presidents from the areas of advanced financial planning, mutual funds, certificates, unit investment trusts, limited partnerships and insurance gave information on the various services.

Thompson and Bengala also qualified to attended a private session with Dr. Norman Vincent Peele, author and lecturer.

Workshop Attended

Lana Grooms recently attended a two-day workshop in Greensboro and received certification in pulmonary function testing.

Mrs. Grooms, a registered nurse, is owner and executive director of Aware Inc. at 300 E. Arlington Blvd., Suite 4-A Parliament Place.

The firm offers confidential drug testing, substance abuse education programs for business and industry, and counseling, specializing in the treatment of substance abuse. Aware also provides audiometric testing, pulmonary function testing and workers' compensation management.

Mrs. Grooms graduated from the Alexandria Hospital School of Nursing and attended East Carolina University.

Negotiators Busy As Deadline Nears

By JANET BRAUNSTEIN
AP Auto Writer

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Negotiators for Ford Motor Co. and the United Auto Workers union continued talking through the weekend as the hours ticked off toward a midnight Monday contract expiration deadline.

UAW President Owen Bieber said that talks had stalled on some of the most critical issues, including the union's top demand for greater job security.

The union's contracts with Ford and General Motors Corp., the world's largest auto manufacturer, expire at the same time, but GM's local and national contracts have been extended until a settlement is reached at Ford.

The union will set a new deadline for GM talks once Ford's 104,000 active UAW workers begin voting on a new three-year contract.

Analysts and union members have predicted bargainers will reach a settlement relatively quickly at Ford, with at most a short strike. But they say the union's decision to settle with Ford first will complicate already difficult talks at GM, where a strike appears likely.

The UAW has demanded a contract guaranteeing Ford will employ the same number of UAW workers currently on its payroll. In addition to its autoworkers, the guaranteed employment level would include about 3,800 UAW workers at Ford's Rouge Steel subsidiary. Those workers ratified a contract of their own during the summer, but are eligible to move to Ford auto and parts plants.

Union leaders last week scheduled a meeting this Friday for Ford's 200-worker UAW bargaining council, which must vote on any tentative settlement before ratification can begin.

In addition, the union's 23-member executive committee, which consists of union executives and regional directors, must give its approval to a tentative agreement before union bargainers can accept it.

Bieber said Friday that negotiators continued to make progress on routine matters but had stalled on several critical issues.

"Unless something starts to happen and happen quickly, then I'm not very optimistic that we can meet our deadline," Bieber told reporters.

Bargainers were prepared to talk around the clock if necessary to reach an agreement before the 11:59 p.m. Monday deadline.

"We're in very intensive bargaining for the next three days ... and we're ready to spend as much time as it takes to get the job done," Ford spokesman Tom Foote said.

Rank-and-file Ford workers have authorized union leaders to call a strike if no settlement is reached by the deadline. Although they are supposed to wait until a strike is ordered, workers sometimes walk out on their own if they've received no word of an agreement by the deadline.

Ford, the world's most profitable automaker, earned $3.3 billion in 1986 and $2.9 billion in the first half of 1987. It also is the only Big Three automaker that has sold more cars and trucks this year than last year.

Young Man Flies High In New Acting Career

By CLAY DEANHARDT
Reflector Staff Writer

Damian McLawhorn flew with Superman. He met the Prince and Princess of Wales, filmed a commercial for a soft drink, acted in a British television series and appeared on numerous talk shows — all within the last year.

Damian McLawhorn is a 14-year-old with roots in Pitt County.

His father, Sgt. Howard McLawhorn of the U.S. Air Force, was born and reared in Ayden, and the McLawhorns have relatives that still live in the area.

The young actor's first break came when the producers of "Superman IV: The Quest For Peace" canvassed his school in London for an unknown to play a small part in the movie. After several screen tests and interviews, Damian was chosen to play the role of Jeremy in the movie.

Damian sounds confident and poised on the phone — more poised than one would expect a young man talking to a stranger from across an ocean to be — but then, why shouldn't he? At an age where most boys are reading comic books, Damian has lived one. While his peers are discovering that girls might just be neater than bugs, Damian has been hobnobbing with Marial Hemingway and Margot Kidder. He's not your average 14-year-old.

Or maybe he is.

In the movie, Damian plays a 10-year-old school boy who writes a letter to Superman as part of a class project. His request is simple: He wants the man of steel to end nuclear proliferation on earth. Eventually he gets to meet Superman, and watches as Superman tells the whole world he will honor the boy's request.

In real life, Damian attends London Central High School, where he is an eighth grade student. His biggest problem at the present moment — nuclear proliferation and class projects aside — is trying to fit everything he wants to do into one lifetime.

For now, however, he is content to concentrate on improving his acting skills and working on his grades in school. He has an agent in London, the best, he says, and projects are rolling in.

"Right now I'm filming a small part in 'The London Embassy,' a series for Thames Television. And I did a Coke commercial that should be out in the states soon — me and another guy," Damian said.

"It's (the television show) about the American embassy in London and how Americans and Londoners have relationships," Damian said. He plays the part of one of the embassy children, this time a 12-year-old.

Damian said he's been on four television interviews. "I hope to go on Terry Logan's show. He's like Johnny Carson in the states.

"When I was at the premiere (of Superman IV) I went up and I talked to Terry Logan and I asked if I could be on his show."

Logan was not the only British personality Damian met at the premiere. He said the best thing about all the attention was meeting Prince Charles and Princess Diana.

"I was nervous that I would bow wrong or something like that," he said.

"I was shaking. My hands were shaking. I thought they were very nice. I don't think they were anything like the paper says. She's pretty — very pretty, and she dresses really nice," he said.

Damian said the princess joked around with him about other cast members including Mark Tiller, who plays the evil Nuclear Man and is a bodybuilder.

Damian is 4 feet 11 inches, a height that has helped him play characters that are younger than he is.

"I'm short, like Michael J. Fox and Dustin Hoffman. Hopefully I'll turn out to be like them," he said. Fox is his favorite, he continued, "because he's really successful and a good actor and easy to get along with."

Filming the Superman movie gave Damian a head start to becoming like Fox. Christopher Reeves (Superman) gave him some acting tips, he said. "He said that I should always think positive and never let myself down in my acting."

The role of Jeremy was the first acting Damian had ever done, and he's never had an acting lesson. "My agent doesn't want me to attend acting school. She says it will spoil my natural talent," he said, laughing.

Damian said he heeded Reeves advice, but that he had plans in case an acting career wasn't in the cards. "I don't want to join the service (like his father)," he said. "I'm going to college for my four years, then if acting doesn't work out I'm going to come back and be a doctor." Damian said he wanted to attend college somewhere in Missouri.

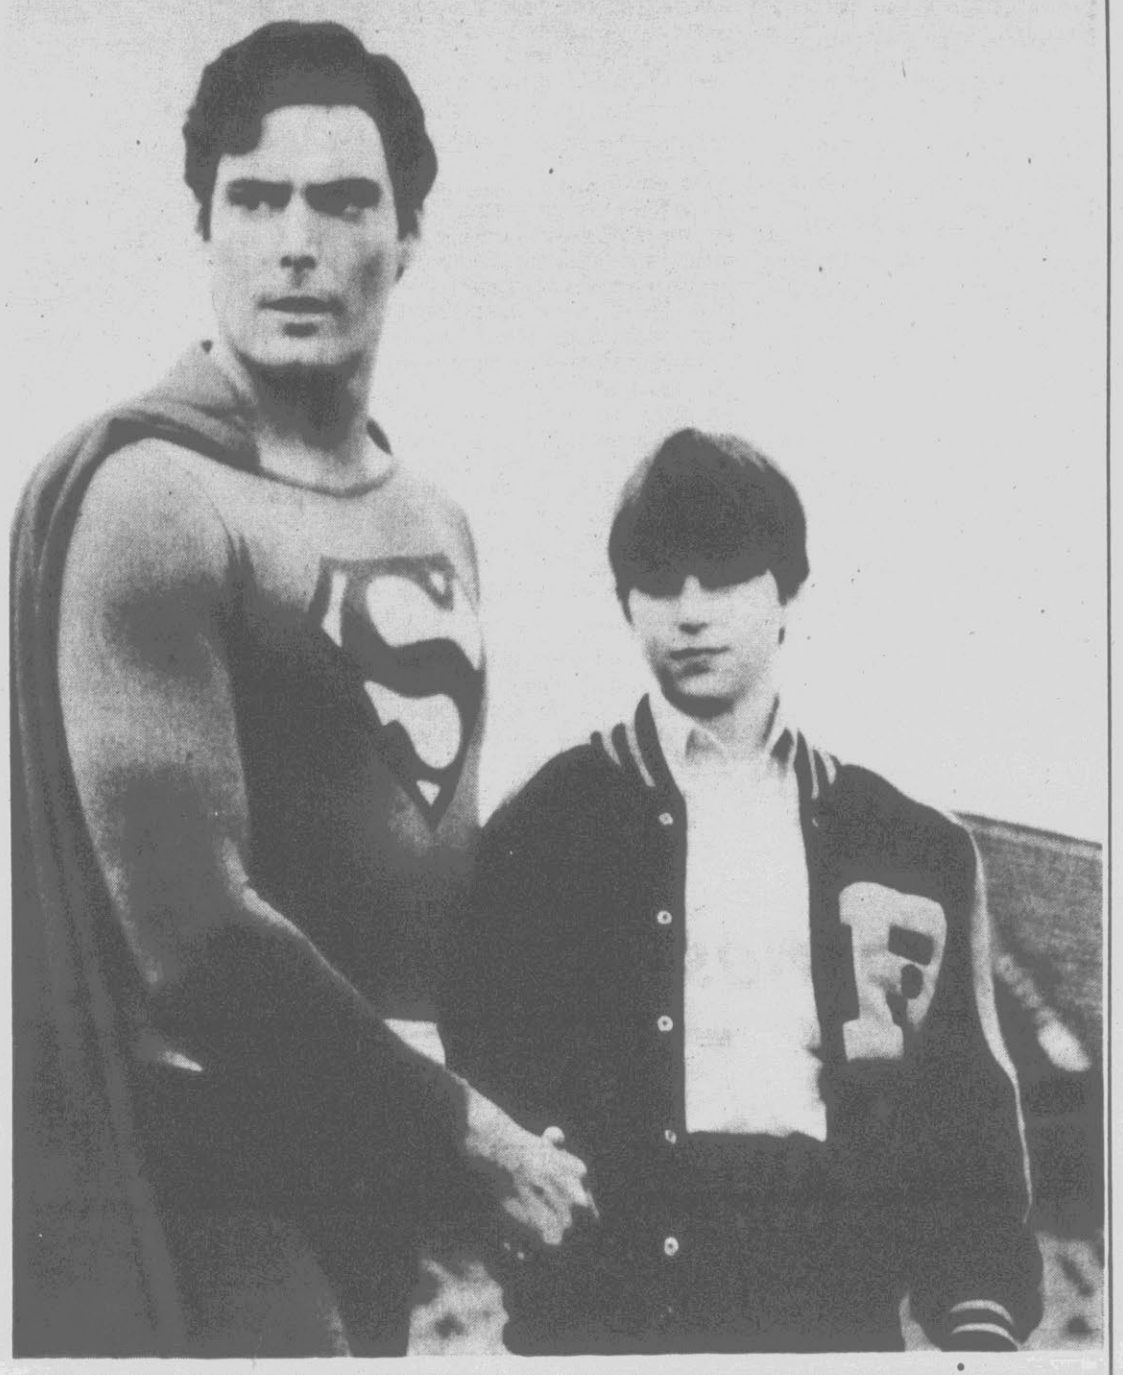
Of course at 14 there is still a lot to learn in life before making decisions. Damian said he has already learned some things about acting.

"I learned that it's not as glamorous and easy as I thought it was. It's hard work. You're not sitting around all the time," he said.

In addition to his stage and screen work, Damian has to keep up with the "third S" — school work. He said a tutor will help him make up for time lost on various film sets, and that he will have a chaperone when he is not at home.

Damian's father said he and Damian's mother were proud of their son, but looked at the whole situation realistically.

"We don't hold much expectation in it (acting). It's just something that he's doing, and we're glad he's doing it, but it is something that could end tomorrow, so it's not something we're putting all our hope in," he said.



UP, UP AND AWAY — Damian McLawhorn, a 14-year-old with Pitt County roots, as the character Jeremy, shakes hands with Superman (Christopher Reeves) in a scene from "Superman IV: The Quest for Peace." Damian plays a 12-year-old who asks the man of steel to end nuclear proliferation in the film, released recently by Cannon Films.

Jackie Collins Stirs Up Dirt Her Pals Dish Out

By NIKKI FINKE
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD — A small earthquake registering moderately severe on the Beverly Hills panic scale is rumbling from Malibu to Hollywood. Jackie Collins is finishing her 12th novel in 20 years, and her friends already are feeling the aftershocks.

Standing in the garden terrace of Hollywood hangout Spago, a drink in one hand, a slice of pizza in the other, producer David Niven Jr. whispers conspiratorially. "People keep saying to me, 'David, don't you think you should write a book?' But how can I when everything, everything, I have ever done, said or thought appears in Jackie's novels.

"There's nothing left," he laments. "I don't know why the headings on some of the chapters shouldn't be, 'I'd like to dedicate this to ....' "

At the other end of the restaurant, Alana Hamilton Stewart, ex-wife of actor George Hamilton and "Do Ya Think I'm Sexy?" singer Rod Stewart, admits she tells Collins too many intimate details about her marriages. "I trust her completely to change the names so I'll be safe. Otherwise," Stewart adds, her eyes opening wide, "I'll kill her."

Actress Angie Dickinson is warier. "I love her but that doesn't mean I trust her," she confides in a corner of the room. "I mean, she'll take notes right in front of me."

Super-agent Irving "Swifty" Lazar sees himself in every Collins book. "I'm always the guy getting out of bed!" he says. And "Tonight Show" producer Fred de Cordova is awaiting Collins' latest opus "to see if I'm in it."

As if on cue, the 46-year-old writer makes her entrance.

Dressed in her trademark animal prints (a black-and-white tiger-striped outfit this time out), the tall brunette has warm greetings ("Kiss, kiss") for everyone. After all, these are more than just friends. These are the sources for most of the tastiest parts of her novels. As she collects every gossipy morsel ("You must be joking. You're not? How wonderful!"), the ground imperceptibly shakes. If information is power, then Collins is an 800-pound gorilla. "It is amazing what people tell me," she says.

One of the publishing industry's best-selling quartet of novelists, along with Stephen King, Sidney Sheldon and Danielle Steele, Collins was crowned by literary critics long ago as the undisputed queen of flash-and-trash fiction. Indeed, she is expert at producing the sort of books that serious readers are embarrassed to be seen devouring.

These days, both her admirers and detractors agree that, if nothing else of merit, she accurately captures the people, places and peccadilloes of popular culture in her novels. That means fading film idols who contemplate face-lifts, Beverly Hills shopping sprees, Bistro Garden lettuce lunches and seedy Sunset Boulevard motel rooms.

No doubt, that's why Collins is now amusingly referred to as the Margaret Mead of Hollywood.

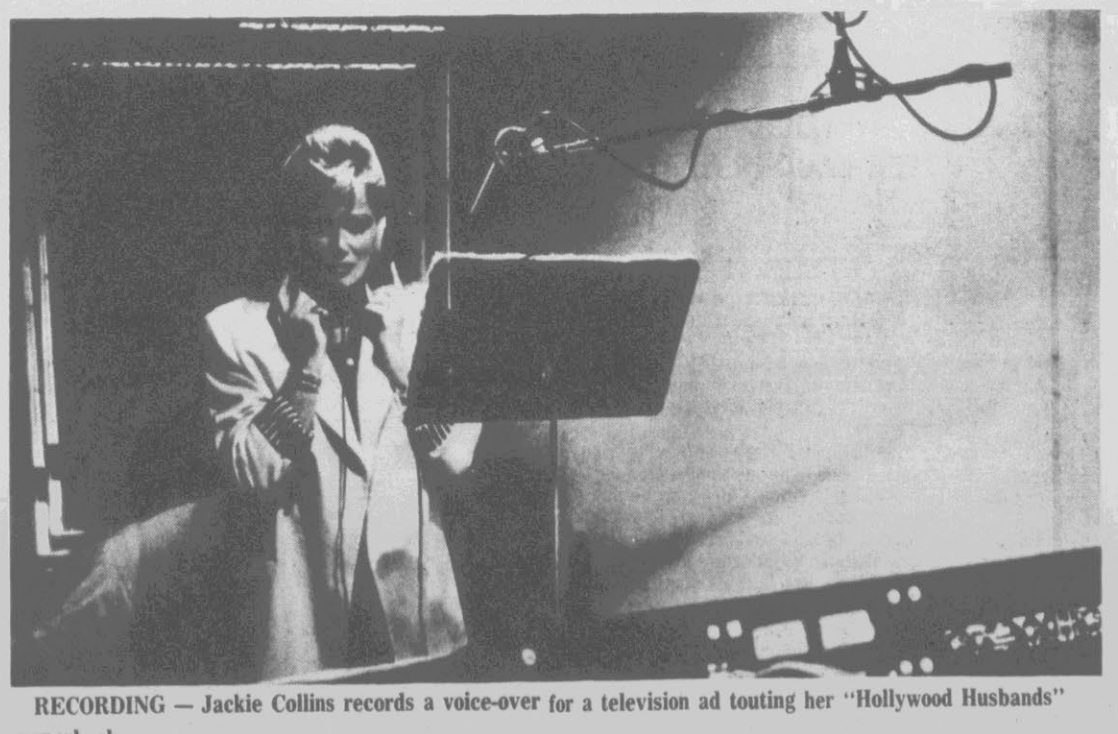
"I want to be remembered for writing books that really reflected the particular time I wrote them in," Collins says. So if her books contain a lot of sex and scandal, "that's just because they're mirroring what happens daily in Hollywood," she maintains.

Indeed, whether she lurks around the dinner table with her notebook at the ready, steals off to the bathroom at a private party or restaurant to jot down conversations, or sweet-talks a show business star into revealing private confidences, Collins is unabashedly blatant about prying into the private lives of her best-connected friends and associates.

"I think Jackie's lucky that she has lots of friends who lead such fascinating lives," muses Niven, one of her best friends. "Unfortunately, you're never credited for having given her these stories."

A few days after the Spago party, Collins is rummaging through an overstuffed desk drawer in the second-floor study of her Beverly Hills home, once owned by Carroll Baker. She triumphantly holds up a torn scrap of paper with scribbling on it. "Ah, here are some good lines," she says, as excited as an explorer who was found buried treasure.

There's the Hollywood wife who said she was going to make a will and leave her plastic surgeon to her husband. There's the producer recalling how every time his father punished him as a child, his mother would shout, "Don't hit him in the mouth! It will cost $600 to get his teeth fixed!" And there's the wife who threw a 20th-anniversary party and invited all her husband's mistresses.



RECORDING — Jackie Collins records a voice-over for a television ad touting her "Hollywood Husbands" paperback.

Sometimes, she'll go through the drawer filled with half-filled notebooks and newspaper clippings and magazine articles and look for "something good." Whenever she's in need of inspiration, "this drawer is invaluable," Collins says.

She seems to have a credibility with readers that other authors of the genre don't. "When people read my books, they know they're reading the truth."

For proof, just look at all the famous folks whose photographs Collins has snapped and scattered around the house: Louis Jordan, Shirley MacLaine, Roger Moore, Sean Connery, Sidney Poitier, Michelle Phillips, Elton John, Joan Rivers, John Ritter, Tony Danza, and, of course, best buddies Michael Caine and wife, Shakira. With friends like these, Collins doesn't even need to pump older sister Joan.

The British writer's biggest best-seller to date, "Hollywood Wives," was written while moving her family from London to Lotusland. It topped the New York Times best-seller list for 30 weeks in 1983, sold 5 million copies and wound up as a TV miniseries. The first day it hit bookstores, one Beverly Hills bookstore sold 50 copies, many to Hollywood wives who sent their chauffeurs in for it.

True, there was shock and horror in some quarters. One oversensitive Hollywood wife even accused Collins of writing about "my has-been husband." But everywhere else in town, Collins was suddenly everyone's newest best friend. "Hollywood loves success," she says smugly. And three years later, when she sat down to write "Hollywood Husbands," she found it almost researched itself. Real-life husbands volunteered their services as informants and told outrageous tales about close friends and rivals.

"I realized that it was their way of getting revenge against people who had done them wrong in business or in love. So that's one fact I learned about Hollywood husbands — they get even."

Her best book is always her next book, she maintains, and that one, "Rock Star," is scheduled for publication in February.

Why focus on rock stars? "Nobody's really excited about movie stars these days," she claims. Most of the action in the book takes place in and around Los Angeles. In fact, the book opens at the Malibu home of a rich record magnate and his wife, who are hosting a huge rock 'n' roll fund-raiser where three world-class rock stars are flying in to perform.

As usual, she will be writing about a scene she knows intimately. She claims to have met many of the biggest rock stars in the business at Tramp, the exclusive London and Los Angeles clubs owned by her husband, Oscar Lerman. "They would all come sit down at my table and chat and confide things. People like Ringo and Elton John. And I got to know all their managers, who are much more fun than the actual rock stars," Collins says.

And, once again, she is relying on her friends for help. Niven claims that Collins would phone him "every time she got stuck. And she does get stuck from time to time because she's happily married and not exactly frolicking around like rock stars or frequenting the places that rock stars frequent with their squeeze of the second."

Alana Stewart also was a source. "'Rock Star' is the one I'm waiting for," she whispers. "Jackie assures me that the characters are composites of several different rock stars. But, of course, Rod is one of them."

And what parties are her favorite for doing research? Irving and Mary Lazar's Oscar Night at Spago "takes a lot of beating," Collins says. "I've been to it three times in a row now. It's not to be missed because of the mixture of people, everyone from Barbara Walters to Kathleen Turner. I know people who leave town if they're not invited."

Some hosts might be offended if a guest were to eavesdrop and even take notes the way Collins does. Not Lazar. "I trust her," he says.

Her other favorite haunts for book material are record stores, shopping malls and supermarkets. She once wrote an entire scene for "Hollywood Wives" in her car while watching people in the parking lot of a supermarket. And she recently led a lunch group of 10 people to a sex shop to research the latest in condoms.

She also loves intimate dinners with VIPs she can catch off-guard.

Wedding Vows Said Saturday

WILLIAMSTON — Angela Elizabeth Ward, daughter of Ann Cooke of Williamston and Charles E. Ward of Spring Hill, Fla., and Clifton Ervin Warren Jr. were united in marriage Saturday at 2 p.m.

John Simpson conducted the double ring ceremony in the Williamston Church of Christ.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Ervin Warren Jr. of Route 1, Stokes.

Denise Rogerson of Tarboro was honor attendant and bridesmaids were Maryann Jenkins and Natalie Gurganus, both of Greenville.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included Hector Lewis of Stokes and Michael Ward of Williamston, brother of the bride.

Musicians for the ceremony were Betsy Hollis of Williamston, pianist, Lavern Crandell of Robersonville and Burt Jenkins III of Greenville, vocalists.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white bridal satin designed with an open sweetheart neckline. The fitted bodice was enhanced with beaded alencon lace which extended to a basque waistline accented with white satin cording. The short pouf sleeves featured ruffles of chantilly lace and the full circular skirt was embellished with a ruffle of chantilly lace at the hemline and extended into a chapel length train accented with cut-out designs of silk Venise lace. Her hat was trimmed with chantilly lace accented with pearls and beads. She carried a semi-cascade of white roses, stephanotis, gypsophilia spiked rose colored alstromeria and springerii. It was tied with white satin ribbons in love knots.

The attendants wore formal gowns of rosebud pink satin designed with an open, sweetheart neckline accented with appliques of rosebud Venise lace jeweled in matching sequins. The gowns had short, French pouf sleeves and fitted basque waistlines defined with satin cording. The sheath styled skirts featured peplums at the waist which extended over the gown back in a lap bustle with a candy box bow. Each carried a mauve silk rose clustered with miniature tiger lilies, gypsophilia, jasmine and greenery tied with lace ribbon streamers.

The mothers wore corsages of silk mauve roses.

A reception followed in the church fellowship hall. Patsy Gurganus presided at the register. Shirley Bryant served cake and punch was poured by Kelly Morris.

The couple will live near Stokes.

The bride, a graduate of Pitt Community College, is employed by Terry L. Whitford, CPA. The bridegroom attended Beaufort Community College in Washington and is employed by Daughtridge Oil Co.

An after-rehearsal pig picking was given by the parents of the bridegroom at their home.

MRS. WARREN

Double-Ring Vows Performed

ATLANTA--Mary Susan Williams and Paschal Gene Allen, both of Atlanta, were united in marriage Saturday at 4 p.m. in a double-ring ceremony performed by the Rev. John Minter in Peachtree Road United Methodist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Blanche Casey Williams of Greenville, N.C. and Carl Benjamin Williams of Overland Park, Kan. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur G. Allen of Columbus, Ga.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore an ivory cathedral-length gown of satin. The V front and back flowed into a fitted basque waist embellished with pearled and sequined French re-embroidered alencon lace. The gathered satin skirt extended into a full cathedral train edged with a border of pearled and sequined lace. Rows of beaded alencon lace and motif embellished the catheral train. Her headpiece formed a halo of beaded alencon lace topped with satin rosebuds and accented with pearls. An extended cathedral length veil was accented with pearls. Her bouquet was a cascade of phalaenopsis orchids and white roses.

MRS. ALLEN

Harriett Elizabeth Morrison of Cincinnati, Ohio, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Pamela A. Parmer, sister of the bridegroom of Columbus, Ga., Julie Favrot Vickers and Deborah Marshall of Atlanta, Monica McCarty Benning of Boston, Mass., and Susan Thatch Williams, sister-in-law of the bride of New Bern, N.C. The attendants wore tea-length jade green morie taffeta dresses and carried nosegays of rubrum lilies and eucalyptus.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Carl Hunter Williams, brother of the bride, of New Bern, N.C., Frank G. Lumpkin and Thomas Prescott, of Columbus, Ga., and John Thomas Hurt and Terry Stein, both of Atlanta.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Scott Atcheson, organist.

The mother of the bride wore a tea-length dress of silver grey chiffon with pink embroidered lace overlay. The mother of the bridegroom wore a beige lace tea-length gown.

A reception given by the parents of the bride followed the ceremony at the Capital City Club. A rehearsal dinner was held at the Commerce Club, hosted by the parents of the bridegroom. A bridesmaids' luncheon was given by friends and relatives of the bride at the Marriott Suites. Several showers and parties honored the couple prior to the wedding.

The bride is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, and is employed as an account manager with MTV Network in Atlanta.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Columbus College and is a vice president with the investment banking firm of Johnson, Lane, Space, Smith and Co. in Atlanta.

After a wedding trip to New England, the couple will live in Atlanta.

Guidelines Are Important

An actor whose name I've forgotten once said on a talk show, "Husbands and wives see one another at the worst possible part of the day -- a few minutes in the mornings when they're pressured and trying to get on with their day and in the evenings when they have no more to give and are irritable and exhausted."

It's true. How many of you have said, "I know I'm late and I didn't call, but you're my wife (husband) and I expect you to understand!"

We all play havoc with the most precious, fragile, important relationship we have: our family.

What would happen if a husband used the same guidelines at home that he used in other relationships?

Do you give your wife the attention you give Abdul-Jabbar?

Do you give her the praise you give your secretary when she moistens the sponge for stamps on your desk?

Do you listen to her with the intensity you devote to your auto mechanic?

Do you give her the same trust you give your banker?

At Wits End

Erma Bombeck

Do you pamper her as you do your golf clubs?

Do you love and protect her as you do your charge card?

Do you share with her the joy you reserve for the comic page or the office Christmas party?

Do you have the compassion for her pain that you do for the kid who parks your car and is going to have a root canal?

Do you have the patience with her that you have with your biggest client who puts you on hold?

Wives, do you have the honesty with your husband that you do with your gynecologist?

Are you as enthusiastic when he returns as you are when your washer repairman arrives?

Are you as interested in his day as you are in the menu at Baskin-Robbins?

Do you make his children seem as wonderful to him as you did when you explained them to their teachers?

Do you feel his disappointments as deeply as you did those of the cast of "Ryan's Hope"?

Do you have the same pride in his achievements that you felt when you got the mold off the grouting in the hall shower?

Do you feel the same glow for him that you did when they validated your parking ticket at the dentist's office?

Do you fuss with your appearance for him as much as when you visit your safe-deposit box?

It's something to think about.

Couple Marries In Cherry Point

CHERRY POINT — Victoria Ann De Stefano and John-Paul Hunter Lyons were married in Memorial Chapel Saturday at 1 p.m. The Rev. W.J. Thompson conducted the Catholic ceremony with Mass.

Parents of the bridal couple are Mr. and Mrs. Edward John De Stefano of Havelock and Janet B. Lyons of Greenville and the late Thomas C. Lyons Jr.

Kathy Monarch, organist, and Joyce Hall Wolf, vocalist, presented music for the double-ring ceremony.

Maid of honor was Denise Peters of Lansing, Iowa. Bridesmaids included Ann-Marie Lyons of Greenville and Michelle Lyons of Atlanta, both sisters of the bridegroom, Shiela Matthews of Greenville, Gail Ludwig of Sant Antonio, Texas, and Karen Eutsler of Silver Spring, Md.

Thomas C. Lyons III of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers included John De Stefano of Havelock, brother of the bride, David Karian of Long Beach, Calif., Rusty Carter of Chapel Hill, James Midgette of Birmingham, Ala., and Chris Romance of Reston, Va.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of bridal satin with a Victorian neckline accented with schiffli lace and seed pearls. The Victorian sleeves ending in a point were enhanced with schiffli lace and seed pearls. The flowing skirt was highlighted with motifs of schiffli lace edged in matching lace which extended into a cathedral-length train. She wore a bridal hat of Venise lace and seed pearls attached to a fingertip veil of bridal illusion with a rolled edged. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of silk roses and baby's breath with orchids.

Each of the attendants wore a full-length gown of violet taffeta accented with ruffles from the shoulder to the back, long fitted sleeves ending in a point and a peplum in back. There wore violet ribbons braided in their hair, Each carried a colonial bouquet of silk miniature white carnations with violet ribbon rosettes and baby's breath.

The mother of the bride wore a royal blue gown with long fitted sleeves. The mother of the bridegroom wore a tea-length dress of aqua silk jacquard designed with a high neckline. Each wore an orchid corsage and were presented silk long-stemmed violet roses.

The reception was held at the Staff Non-Commissioned Officers Club in Cherry Point. Dance music was provided by Richard Taylor. Tina Gainey was hostess for the reception.

After a wedding trip, the couple will live in Goldsboro.

The bride is office manager for H. Reid Hart, D.D.S., in New Bern and the bridegroom is employed by Jackson Builders in Goldsboro. The bride attended Lenoir Community College and East Carolina University. The bridegroom graduated from ECU with a degree in industrial technology and construction management.

MRS. LYONS

Hudson-Branch Vows Spoken

Parkers Chapel Free Will Baptist Church was the scene of the wedding ceremony of Jennifer Lynn Branch and Allen Jackson Hudson Jr. The double-ring ceremony was conducted at 7 p.m. Saturday by the Rev. Jimmy Roebuck.

Parents of the bridal couple are Mr. and Mrs. Horace Bruce Branch and A.J. Hudson Jr., all of Greenville.

Geneive Branch was honor attendant for her daughter. Cindy Wadford of Winterville and Karen Gray of Grimesland were bridesmaids. Bridgette Miller and Kimberly Miller, both of Grifton, were flower girls.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Tim Craft of Greenville and Bobby Manning of Belvoir, uncles of the bridegroom.

Pianist Donnie Miles and soloist Elaine Taylor presented a program of nuptial musicl.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a gown of white crystal organza with silk floss embroidered organza medallians and English net. The Victorian neckline was adorned with medallions and illusion yoke. The sleeves were Juliet pouf with illusion and floral design. The A-line skirt flowed into a semi-cathedral train with ruffles accenting the front and cascading down the back. She wore a wreath of silk flowers accented with pearls attached to a cathedral-length veil. She carried a bouquet of pink and white roses, baby's breath, lily of the valley accented with pearls, pink and white streamers.

Each of the attendants wore a tea-length dress of azalea pink taffeta styled with a fitted bodice, sweetheart neckline and full puffed sleeves. Each carried three-long stemmed pink roses tied with pink and white bow and streamers.

The flower girls wore tea-length dresses of white taffeta with pink sash, fitted bodice, sweetheart neckline and full puffed sleeves. Each carried a white basket with pink bows.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall, given by family and friends.

After a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va., the couple will live in Greenville.

The bride is employed by Wachovia Bank; the bridegroom, by Empire Brushes Inc.

The ceremony was directed by Linda Sutton.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents at the Three Steers. Geraldine Mintelli served cake and Bernice Evans poured punch. Both are aunts of the bride.

Vicki Woolard, cousin of the bridegroom, presided at the register. Several showers were given for the bridal couple by friends and family.

MRS. HUDSON

Solution Of Baking Soda Is Good Household Cleaner

About 43 million servings of food are heated in microwave ovens everyday! A solution of baking soda can clean the splatters and spills that food can create. Just add 2 cups of water and sponge down the interior of the microwave; be sure to clean the rubber seal around the microwave door so that it closes tightly and prevents microwaves from escaping. For tough microwave stains, sprinkle the baking soda on dry and rub lightly. Rinse and buff dry. To absorb microwave odors, leave an open box of baking soda inside the oven.

A great way to get rid of the smell of onion or garlic on your hands after chopping or cooking is to wash them in a solution of baking soda. The baking soda will neutralize the acid in the onion and garlic. Also, for wooden cutting boards that smell of onion and garlic, just sponge on a solution of baking soda.

To remove black shoe marks from floors and lineoleum, sprinkle a damp sponge with baking soda and rub into the marks. The baking soda crystals are strong enough to remove the marks, but too soft to scratch or harm your floor. Rinse and buff dry.

Your iron might not be as clean as it should be, signaling bad news for fresh, clean clothes. To the rescue, sprinkle some baking soda on a damp sponge and rub the bottom of the iron. The baking soda will clean without scratching. It's particularly effective when you find that something has melted on the bottom of your iron.

If your thermos, lunch box or cooler smells sour, just soak it in a solution of baking soda to neutralize the odors.

CONSUMER QUESTIONS

Question: Recently I have noticed more wrinkles on my permanent press clothes. I have to do a great deal of ironing, which is very time consuming. What do you suggest that I do to prevent the wrinkling?

Homemaker's Haven
Evelyn Spangler
Pitt County Extension Agent

Answer: Dryer drying is essential to remove the wrinkling from most permanent press and other no iron fabrics such as polyester, acrylic or nylon. However, sometimes these fabrics come from the dryer wrinkled so that they require ironing. For smooth and wrinkle free results we recommend the following:

In the washer:

1. Never use less than the medium water level when washing permanent press. Clothes must have room to circulate freely in the washbasket.
2. Avoid overloading. Permanent press loads should be smaller than regular loads.
3. Use the permanent press cycle, especially if washing clothes in hot water. This cycle automatically provides a cool-down rinse to minimize wrinkling.
4. Avoid laundering permanent press articles such as work clothes and heavy pants or jackets with lighter permanent press articles such as shirts or blouses.
5. Proper use of fabric softener will help minimize wrinkling.

In the dryer:

1. Always use the permanent press setting for permanent press clothes.
2. Use the proper temperature and dryness setting. Do not overdry.
3. Be sure to remove clothes from the dryer immediately when the tumbling stops.
4. Dry only a single washer load; do not combine loads for drying.
5. If only one or two articles are being dried, add a few similar articles, even though they are dry, to ensure proper tumbling.

If an article has heat-set wrinkles from wrinkles from laundering, it should be ironed to restore a smooth surface. If you follow all these suggestions and wrinkling still occurs, the permanent press finish on the garment has deteriorated due to normal wear and laundering. In this case there is little you can do and ironing will be necessary. Some fabrics, even though they are made of no iron fibers, may require some touch-up ironing. This is especially true if the fabric is woven rather than knit.

Question: I have noticed that my clothes are taking a great deal of time to dry. This does not happen every time, only occasionally. What could be causing this?

Answer: Several things could be causing the problem. Check to see that one or more of the following is not occuring.

1. Overloading.
2. Failure to clean the lint filter.
3. Obstruction in exhaust ducting, hinged hood cover, or extra long exhaust vent.
4. Mixing loads — drying heavy, hard-to-dry articles with light-weight articles.
5. Wrong temperature setting used if there is a choice.
6. Washer not spinning properly.

If none of these are occurring, then it will be necessary to have the dryer checked by a qualified service technician.

SCHOLARSHIPS DISTRIBUTED

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — More than $1 million in scholarships and student aid will be distributed to 600 colleges throughout the country through an educational development fund administered by the Independent College Funds of America here.

The money represents income from an endowment created in 1979 with $4 million in grants from the UPS Foundation, the charitable arm of the United Parcel Service. More than $6 million in student aid has been distributed since the fund was established.

BETSY DRAKE LEWIS' DECORATING TIPS

How can one enlarge a room? Mirror a wall...usually one wall is very interesting and produces a more interesting scale. Never mirror 2 walls...one, three or all four walls would be best.

Ash colored furniture, -pickled or washed furniture can have an enlarging effect. End tables and cocktail tables which have glass or open construction make a small area look larger.

If a room has dark paneling, paint it or wallpaper it in a light colored string cloth. If a room has upraised panels or molding, one could paint the wood and wallpaper just between the molding. Wallpaper behind all panels above, or above and below for unity. Remember, variety adds interest to any room. Pictures could be added to some wallpapered panels, while baskets and ferns could be added to others. Wall sconces could also be added for variety.

Creativity and imagination are the key to turning an ordinary room into a spectacular room. At Betsy Drake Interiors, we never run out of ideas and we have the resources to transform your dreams into reality. We invite you to visit our showroom soon or call to schedule an appointment in your home or office.

Henderson-Varner Vows Solemnized

ARCHDALE — Archdale Friends Meeting was the scene of the Saturday wedding ceremony of Laura Jean Varner and Eric Douglas Henderson. Isaac Harris conducted the double-ring ceremony at 2 p.m.

Daughter of Joyce S. Varner of Archdale and Bob Varner of High Point, the bride was given in marriage by her father. She is employed at Eastern Carolina Neurological Associates. She graduated from Chowan College and East Carolina University.

The bridegroom is the son of Charles Henderson of Trenton and the late Dorothea Henderson. He is a graduate of ECU and is employed by The Roberts Co.

Kimberly Gibbons of Greensboro was matron of honor for her sister. Bridesmaids included Melissa Henderson of Chapel Hill, sister of the bridegroom, Elissa Cox, Lorrie Varner and Robin Varner, both sisters-in-law of the bride, all of Trinity.

Marshall Tucker of Ahoskie served as best man. Ushers were Chris Henderson of Trenton, brother of the bridegroom, Chet Varner and Lee Varner, brothers of the bride of Trinity, and Ouss Sahhar of Washington, N.C.

Organist Mark Kirkman, pianist Ron Maxwell, and vocalists Leah Kendric and Joseph Gamble presented nuptial music.

The bride wore a floor-length gown with a cathedral train of bridal taffeta with re-embroidered alencon lace. The fitted bodice featured a bateau neckline with an illusion sweetheart yoke outlined with alencon lace, long tapered sleeves and basque waist. Alencon lace motifs with seed pearls and sequins appliqued the bodice, deep V-back and sleeves. A fluted edge rosette accented the back of the skirt and cathedral train. Scattered lace motifs appliqued the skirt and train. A border of scalloped lace encircled the skirt and train hemline. She wore a waltz-length veil of illusion with a fluted edge and fluted pouf attached to a bandeau of silk flowers and pearl sprays accented with cascading pearls and lily of the valley. She carried a cascade bouquet of gardenias, miniature carnations and stephanotis.

The honor attendant wore a ruby tea-length dress styled with a deep V back and short puffed sleeves. She carried a bouquet of miniature pink carnations, rubrum lilies and white carnations. Bridesmaids were dressed identically.

Sister Wants To Bridge Gap

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 24-year-old woman with a 38-year-old brother who has AIDS. We have never been particularly close, mainly because of the age difference, but I do love him very much.

Our family sees him about once a year because he lives far from most of us, and it is a very expensive trip. He resides in a remote area in Canada and has no phone, so the only contact we have with him is by mail unless he calls, which is not often. I write to him and ask how he is doing, but the response is always the same — "I'm doing OK."

I worry about him, and desperately want to help, but I don't know what to do. I realize that he will die in a few years, and I don't want to be kicking myself after he dies wishing I had done more for him while he was living.

Visiting him is not a practical idea because neither my husband nor I have the money for me to go. As far as I know, there is no known support group where I live for families of AIDS victims. Do you have any suggestions? — WANTING TO HELP

DEAR WANTING: The best medicine for an ailing person is a frequent cheery letter or card — to let that person know that he or she is not forgotten. Since there is no known cure for your brother's illness, don't keep asking how he is doing. Do write often, relating stories about your family, work and friends, and let him share in your life so that he will know you better, and feel closer to you. Just reading the magic words, "I love you," will make him feel better. Please send me his name and address and I will write to him, too.

Most states offer information on AIDS through their local hot lines, and many states have support groups for families of AIDS patients. Call (800) 272-AIDS for the location of a group in your area. God bless and good luck.

DEAR ABBY: I know a very nice-looking woman who is 35 years old. When she was 17 she was in a bad automobile accident, which left her unable to walk, so she's in a wheelchair. I'm a 62-year-old man who saw a lot of action in World War II and was commissioned on the battlefield. I look like a big strapping man, but I am impotent. I think I would be good for this woman I mentioned. I could look after her and treat her like a daughter — with no sex involved. People I have mentioned this to have laughed at me. What do you think? — CONSIDERING MARRIAGE

DEAR CONSIDERING: How does she feel about you? Does she know you have marriage in mind? Men do not normally marry to become "fathers" to their brides. Do not assume that because a woman is in a wheelchair she has no sexual feelings. (Most do.) I suggest you discuss your ideas (and plans) with the lady. She may have a few of her own.

Horizon Traveling Fashion Show Date Announced

The Horizon Fall Traveling Fashion Show will be staged in Greenville Sept. 25 at the Brody Medical Sciences Building starting at 8 p.m. The show is being cosponsored by the Pitt County American Cancer Society and Belk of Carolina East Mall.

The show will provide an evening of fashion and entertainment with professional models, choreography, music and multi-media presentation. This year's theme is "Passport to Fashion." Fashions will be representative of Russia, Great Britian, Italy, Norway, United States, Vienna and Paris. Fashions for both men and women will include coats and suits, weekend wear and evening clothes.

Show profits will be used to further the charitable projects of the American Cancer Society. Chancellor and Mrs. Richard Eakin of Greenville have been named honorary chairpersons.

"We were delighted with the opportunity to be asked to be honorary cochair for the American Cancer fund-raiser. Since we are new to Greenville, we are happy to contribute our time for such a worthy cause," said Mrs. Eakin.

Committee chairpersons for the show are Mrs. Ralph Hall, chairman; Dorson White, sponsors; Mrs. Ellis Hall, tickets; Harvey Flanagan, hospitality; Brenda Columbo, courtesy, and Barbara Woods and Barry Gaskins, publicity.

Coordinators are Frances Young, Bethel; Betty Lewis, Farmville; Nora Lee Craft, Ayden, and Winnie Nelson and S.J. Waters, Winterville.

Patron ticket-holders will have reserved seating and invitation to attend a reception to be held at 6 p.m. prior to the show. Patron and general admission tickets may be obtained by calling Mrs. Hall at 756-0262 or Rose Richards, Pitt County American Cancer Society, at 752-2574. Tickets are also available at The Salon and Kitchen Cupboard.

Couple Marries In Saturday Ceremony

Mary Phelps Adams and Roy Thomas Moore were united in marriage Saturday at noon in the Mt. Pleasant Christian Church. The Rev. Harrell Phelps performed the double-ring ceremony.

Music was provided by Ricky Sexton, pianist, Bernice Coward and Anita Little, soloist.

Parents of the couple are Alethia Phelps and the late Milton C. Phelps of Creswell, Mary Moore and the late George Moore of Farmville.

The bride wore a gown of ivory organza over satin styled with a high V neck, highlighted with a ruffled bodice and skirt. The dress was fitted with a natural waistline accented by a set-in tie belt and long full sleeves. She carried a cascade bouquet of roses and baby's breath in colors of ivory, mauve and blue.

Joann Lewis of Greenville was matron of honor. Her dress was made of mauve satin with a jewel neckline and full sleeves and was accented with a cummerbund belt.

Bridesmaids were Celestine Cresson and Debra LaGant of Richmond, Va. Their dresses were styled like the matron of honor's in blueberry blue. Their cascades were of blue and mauve roses.

Jimmy Little was best man. Ushers were Jerry Phelps, brother of the bride, and Durwood Moore, son of the bridegroom.

Tracy Phelps and Malissa Eastwood presented the guests with scrolls.

Nancy Elks presided at the guest register.

Rena Sexton and Shirley Phelps directed the ceremony.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Little. Cake was served by Jeanette James. Ruth Clifton poured punch. The reception was directed by Milly Nadeau of Chesapeake, Va.

The after-rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's mother, brothers and sisters.

The bride is employed by Burroughs Wellcome. The groom is self-employed.

After a wedding trip to Pennsylvania and Virginia the couple will reside in Greenville.

Priest Reaches Vast Flock Through Column

By ELAINE GRAYBILL
The Bloomington Pantagraph

BLOOMINGTON, Ill. (AP) — Even without benefit of cable television, the Rev. John Dietzen's flock numbers more than a million.

Dietzen is pastor in person to 6,000 Roman Catholics at Holy Trinity Church, and he is pastor to a million readers of his nationally syndicated advice column, "The Question Corner."

It answers readers' questions about how Catholic faith fits into their lives. It is distributed weekly to Catholic newspapers in the United States and Canada by the National Catholic News Service in Washington, D.C.

The mail brings up to 500 questions a week to the desk of the 59-year-old priest, whose clerical collar may be stuck into his pocket on a hot summer day but who finds his workload less like a burden than a hobby. Some questions he can answer dictating into a tape machine during a car trip; others may take up to 20 hours of research.

Some of the letters he gets are scrawled; others are neatly penned; some are typed single space and go on for pages. Those who write to him, he says, "generally are either very thoughtful people or people who have some serious personal anguish."

He answers two or three questions a week in the column. If there is evident despair, he writes personally.

A grieving parent wants to know if her stillborn son will receive salvation, even though he died before he could be baptized. How is it, another reader asks, that a former priest, now married, can receive the sacraments, and our daughter, who married a divorced man, cannot?

An old person with poor health asks, is it a sin to pray for good health? Another writes, "If a son has knowingly entered an invalid marriage, are his parents obliged to accept this? Can they refuse to forgive him? Can they receive the sacraments worthily without forgiveness in their hearts?"

Dietzen attributes the long life of his column — 13 years — to his approach. "I take people seriously, and respectfully."

Simple knowledge about Catholicism clears up a lot of problems.

"One of the things I have become more and more convinced about from this enormous mail," Dietzen says, "is that most of the tension and sometimes violent dissatisfaction with Christianity ... is from just not knowing the Catholic faith or the Christian faith. ... They know a few phrases and they know them well, and they are betrayed by those few phrases."

Dietzen sometimes is asked if he ever makes up questions. He doesn't have to. "If I never got another one," he says, "I'd have enough to last me 15 years."

Directness, simplicity and compassion are hallmarks, but don't call Dietzen the Catholic Ann Landers, because he will quickly point out the difference. In his column, he is acting as a priest. His advice deals with theology, he will remind you, not just human relationships.

Writing "The Question Corner" has taught Dietzen that theology grows out of experience, he says, and his own theology has grown from writing the column.

Through contact with readers, he has come to believe in the significance of "the pervasive love of God in people's lives." In many cases, "they thought there would be no tomorrow, and yet they have seen the power of good and hope and joy come out of those experiences."

He attributes that to "the mysterious power of love that we would call the work of Christ. It is really at work in the world. The people see it."

If they can't see it, he tries to show it to them.

Waterworks Center Opens Exhibitions

SALISBURY — The Waterworks Visual Arts Center opened its fall exhibition schedule Friday with a reception at the center at the corner of West Kerr and Water Streets in Salisbury.

The graphic works of Walter Piepke, Judy Jones and Walter Garde will be exhibited in the Murphy Gallery.

Piepke is a premier printmaking artist. A graduate of Rochester Institute of Technology, his works are in the permanent collections of the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Yale University Art Gallery.

Gallery II will exhibit the pen and ink of Betty Sedberry as she exhibits original drawings of historic and significant locations in and around Rowan County. Her works hang throughout the region.

George Edwards has made 75 instruments in his brief career as a violin maker. A video about the artist and his work will accompany the exhibit.

Matt Savino's large-scale clay sculptures will be exhibited in the Sculpture Garden. He recently had a solo show at the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art in Winston-Salem.

In the foyer, photographs will be exhibited by children in the summer arts camp photography class taught by Cynthia Brown.

The Waterworks will sponsor an exhibition walk-through by the center director Wednesday at noon. Call the center, 636-1882, by 10:30 a.m. Wednesday to order lunch, which is open to the public.

School groups and clubs may visit the Waterworks Visual Arts Center and arrange a guided tour of the exhibitions by calling the center (704/636-1882) at least one week before the requested tour.

The Waterworks Visual Arts Center is a facility of the Rowan Art Guild Inc.

Bluegrass Fest Attracts Cream Of Family Groups

By CHARLES HILLINGER
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

BIGHILL, Ky. — The Goins Brothers Family Band finished its set with "Head of the Holler in Kentucky" and "Windy Mountain," then headed offstage to rousing cheers, whistles and applause.

Birchie Howard, 72, rushed up to lead singer and guitarist Melvin Goins, grabbed Melvin's left arm and declared:

"Hold your horses. I'm from your neck of the woods. Why, we borrowed flour and fixins and broke bread together. Had grits that slap your eyeballs out. I want a picture of you boys to hang in my living room."

Goins, whose group includes four brothers and two shirttail cousins, said to follow him to his trailer, that he'd be glad to oblige.

It was as good an example as any of the spontaneity and conviviality that pervades the three-day, noon-to-11 p.m., bluegrass and country music festival held every August in this rolling Kentucky hill country.

From Ashland, Ky., the Goins brothers were one of 19 professional family musical groups performing at this year's 10th annual McLain Family Band Festival here in Bighill, population 150, up the road from Clover Bottom and Sandgap and not far from Idamay and Drip Rock — Eastern Kentucky hamlets on the edge of Daniel Boone National Forest.

More than 6,000 avid bluegrass fans came this year from as far away as Maine and California, England, France, Czechoslovakia and Japan to hear family bands from around the nation for an entry fee of $10 for each 11-hour session.

Cars, pickups, trailers, tents and campers dotted the blue-green hills of Raymond McLain's 73-acre farm at Bighill, a farm he bought 10 years ago especially to hold his annual family band get-togethers. Many of the bluegrass fans camped out on the farm during the three-day musical marathon.

"I had been thinking for years it would be nice to have a bluegrass festival each year featuring family groups exclusively," explained McLain, 57, who plays guitar in a band with seven of his family members.

"Then I found this farm with this marvelous hill forming a natural amphitheater. At the bottom of the hill is a grove of locust, wild plum and oak trees, a great backdrop for the stage. The rest is history."

McLain was sitting in a lawn chair beside the stage, relishing each group's performance. Bluegrass fans relaxed on chairs all over the hillside, many taking cover from the hot sun under multicolored canvas-topped shelters. It was 98 and muggy, so most were ensconced under a huge tent at the top of the hill where it was slightly cooler.

Families perform and families come to listen. "It's such a clean and wholesome atmosphere," volunteered Jane Lesh, 50, who drove down from Muncie, Ind., with her husband, Tom, 58, a professor at Ball State University. "We love bluegrass. People come here strictly for the music. No alcohol or drugs are allowed."

Raymond McLain talked about the versatility of musicians in family bands, how in most cases each member of a family band plays more than one instrument and sings. "It's easy-to-take music. There aren't many kinds of music where one person does two things at once, four people do eight things and make it sound like 12," McLain allowed.

The McLain Family Band is 20 years old. In the beginning there were four McLains in it. Now there are eight: grandmother Bicky, somewhere in her 70s, sings ballads; father Raymond plays guitar. Of the children, Raymond, 33, plays fiddle and banjo; Nancy Ann, 22, bass and mandolin; Michael, 20, banjo and guitar; Ruth McLain Riopel, 29, bass; Alice McLain White, 30, mandolin and bass and her husband, Al, 34, mandolin and guitar.

The McLain Family Band travels eight months of the year full time, four months part time, and has performed in all 50 states and 62 countries, including Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Romania, Yugoslavia, Taiwan, Japan, Nepal, North Yemen, Afghanistan and Iran. Raymond senior's wife, Betty, 53, manages the group and does the bookings.

Bicky, the matriarch of the band, is a widow. Her late husband had been president of three universities including the American University in Cairo, Egypt. She has taught courses in early American ballads in this country, England and Egypt.

"I sing the traditional ballads with the group. Sing the same songs my mother, grandmother, great-grandmother and several greats before her sang," explained Bicky McLain. At this year's festival she sang "Two Sisters," a song dating back to Mary Queen of Scots, and "Babes in the Woods," a song at least three centuries old.

"Many of the early Appalachian folk songs we sing were originally Scottish, Irish, English folk songs brought to this country by settlers in the 16th and 17th centuries," she noted.

George Alexander, 61, a music teacher from Ewell, England, heard about the festival and flew here for it.

And, Appleseed, a bluegrass group from Japan, was here to perform. Kaz Inaba, 27, played banjo; Mieko Otome, 25, Yoshiro Takahashi, 38, and Masuo Sasabe, 38, all played guitar. All sing as well. They sang "Blue Moon of Kentucky" and "Kentucky Waltz" in flawless English. If you closed your eyes you would think Mieko Otome, the female singer, was someone who'd lived her entire life in the Kentucky hills.

"My father, brother and I have a family bluegrass group in Osaka," Kaz Inaba said. "Father plays the banjo, my brother plays the mandolin. We don't sing bluegrass in Japanese. We sing it in English. Nobody knows the words we're singing over there. That's the problem. Japanese don't know bluegrass."

James B. Moore, 47, who owns his own energy business in Lexington, Ky., was here with his wife, Sarah, 38, and son, Joshua, 2. The Moores come every year. This year, as always, they brought along 150 pounds of sirloin steak and 200 pounds of pork chops to barbecue for the friends they see only once a year at the bluegrass and country festival.

Reep's Combat Book Released

"A Combat Artist in World War II," a 206-page hardcover book by Edward Reep, emeritus professor in the East Carolina University School of Art, has been released by its publisher, the University Press of Kentucky.

The book recounts Reep's experiences as an official combat artist-correspondent in the Italian campaign during the war, and includes numerous black and white reproductions of Reep's paintings and drawings of battlefields, soldiers and the war-torn Italian landscape.

Chester G. Starr, who was chief of the 5th Army's Historical Section, contributes a foreword to the book, noting how Reep preferred to get forward to the scene of action.

A California native, Reep joined the ECU faculty in 1970 as artist-in-residence, a position he held until retiring two years ago.

In addition to painting and teaching, Reep is an active exhibitor and writer. He is the author of a book, "The Content of Watercolor." Publication of his "Combat Artist" was assisted by an ECU grant.

World Tour

OTTAWA (AP) — Using psychedelic effects and quadraphonic sound, the revived British rock band Pink Floyd opened its world tour before 25,000 fans in the Canadian capital.

The group's 1973 "Dark Side of the Moon" album sold more than 4 million copies and was on the Top 100 charts for a record 10 years.

Next stops on the tour are Montreal and Toronto.

At Special Beginnings, We Go Through A Little More Labor So You Can Go Through A Little Less

Check into a hospital to have your baby and you'll probably be moved at least four times before you take the baby home. While that may be convenient for the hospital, it adds more stress and discomfort to a time when you already have plenty.

Special Beginnings, the new birthing center in the Women's Pavilion at Heritage Hospital, offers a gentler, more sensible way. Labor, delivery, recovery and post-partum care all take place in your private, beautifully decorated birthing room.

It's a little more work for our staff to bring the medical care to you instead of wheeling you around the building. But helping you relax and feel more at home actually reduces labor and recovery time in most cases.

Special Beginnings is more than just a new place to give birth; it's a whole new way to give your baby a good start in life.

To arrange a tour of the Women's Pavilion and Special Beginnings, call us at 641-7272 between 8:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY Sept. 13

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): A change of attitude can be helpful when dealing with others. Be more thoughtful of older friends. Make sure your car is running smoothly if you go out tonight.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): If you seek out new sources, you can get some fine financial advice. Rid yourself of old-fashioned ideas and practices which don't apply anymore. Be understanding.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Your good friends, as always, can be quite supportive and pull you out of that "blue funk" you've been in. Avoid an associate who tries to put down your ideas.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Let people see the logical side of your mind, and you can be quite impressive. More affection and thoughtfulness toward your mate is important now.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Give up on a past "friend" who always depresses you, and welcome a new one who can help you as much as you help him or her. Attend to your financial affairs tonight.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Settle a difference between yourself and a family tie who can introduce you to some important people. You may have some added expenses, so tend to your credit.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Stay away from boring people and routines. Be alert for new opportunities and ideas. Plan a trip which will broaden your horizons and get you out of a jam.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Make sure you keep any promises you've made even though this may temporarily weaken your bank account. Be sure that your adviser is giving you good advice.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Settle the source of a long-standing worry, and you can better deal with present situations. Listen to the advice of a co-worker who you know has good judgment.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Don't rely so much on outsiders when your intuition is working so well. Stop being such a hypochondriac, and use your mind to convince your body that it is well.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): A little more enthusiasm in your regular activities can bring you better results. Don't go off on any tangents. Visit some acquaintances and old friends this evening.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Give full attention to the home scene today, and get everything you've been neglecting in order. If you entertain tonight, you can make an excellent impression on guests.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY Sept. 14

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Carefully schedule your time and activities, or you'll flounder about without accomplishing anything. Work on building up your physical vitality and health.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): This would be a wise time to start economizing while you look around for more lucrative channels. Be prudent and make small repairs at home how--or big ones later.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Remain optimistic even if conditions around you now look bleak. Be tactful. Any display of temper around your friends could alienate them very quickly.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Don't jump to any erroeous conclusions as a result of envy. The person you're jealous of is bragging about nothing. Keep poised with your mate.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): You are bound and determined to obtain a wish at any price, but wait for a better time. Usually reliable friends may seem distant to you, but be tactful and thoughtful.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Avoid a higher-up who may be in an irate mood and looking for a "whipping boy." Don't take any risks with your credit or career. Rest up tonight after a hard day.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Keep in mind that the grass only appears greener on the other side of the fence. Stop listening to that person who's been trying to get you out of the way lately.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Although the work may not seem appealing, you've put it off too long already; get to it and stop procrastinating. Don't try to force your poing of view on others.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Try to be sympathetic and helpful concerning any gripes a partner may have. Any contracts should be followed conscientiously. Be true to your word.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): You may have the "Monday blues," but get right down to work and your mood will change. Don't be critical of a co-worker who is in the same state of mind.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Business before pleasure today. Don't put off important matters which can't wait. Be sure to to control your temper with others, and be more thoughtful of your mate.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Tempers are short today, so try to be cooperative with your family. It would be best to postpone visits from guests until a later time, or agruments would ensue.

Pre-emption is a two-edged sword. It often propels the enemy to uncomfortable heights. But it sometimes gives declarer an indication of how to play the hand. This example is from the recent Summer North American Championships.

After North's one heart opening bid, East had a normal weak jump overcall of two spades. North-South found it impossible to stop below six diamonds, a slightly inelegant contract.

West led a spade to his partner's ace, and declarer won the club shift in hand. With nothing to guide him, declarer would normally cash a high trump in one hand or the other and then finesse for the queen. The contract would be unsalvageable.

Here, however, declarer had good reason to suspect that West was more likely than East to hold the queen of trumps—because East has shown spade length in the auction, the odds increased that he would be shorter in diamonds than West. And once declarer decided to play West for long diamonds, he reasoned that he might as well protect against the possibility of a 4-1 divisio .

After winning the club shift in hand, declarer immediately ran the nine of diamonds. When that held, it was a simple matter to repeat the finesse, continue with a diamond to the ace and, after cashing the queen of clubs, return to hand with the king of hearts to draw the last trump. When the clubs broke evenly, declarer could claim the rest of the tricks.

East did nothing abnormal in the auction. It was just unfortunate that he had to pay such a high penalty for an action that would be taken by most players in his position.

Microwave Oven Buyers Face Decisions Galore

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

After a slow start in the early 1970s, microwave oven ownership has taken off in the last four years.

Between 1983 and 1986, ownership of at least one microwave went from one-third to two-thirds of American households and by the end of 1987, it's estimated 70 percent of American homes will have the appliance.

Last year, according to the Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers more than 12.4 million microwaves came on the market and a glimpse of the ads for the ovens makes it clear there are many different models and features to choose from. The very success of the product has contributed to the difficulty in making a wise choice.

Microwave ovens vary widely in terms of cooking power, which is measured as wattage, size of cooking cavity, and features such as turntables, computerized controls and sensors.

They range in price from under $100 for very small ovens with limited features and low wattage to a little over $350 for full-size, top-of-the-line models. Ovens with unusual features such as combination microwave and convection cooking or that include an oven hood and light for installation over a range can go up to $600.

The right oven is not necessarily the largest one with the most features.

One- or two-person households requiring only defrosting and heating of leftovers will be well-served by the small, inexpensive models. However, first-time buyers should know the industry has found that people find more uses for the oven than they anticipated after they get it home.

Studies also indicate the biggest drawback to even more buyers is the lack of space, according to Joy Schrage of Whirlpool Corp. That's why smaller units and those combining several functions such as microwave convection cooking and microwave-browning are popular.

One of the most desirable products for those with little counter space would be a combination toaster-microwave oven. At present, several companies offer browning-microwave combinations, but no one is claiming the unit can make a great piece of toast. However, if toast is not one of life's necessities, the combination appliance does offer some cooking benefits — for example, microwaving a chicken for fast cooking and then baking it for 10 minutes or so to brown and bring out the flavor, according to Kurt Sonnentag of Sunbeam.

Nowadays, so many different sizes and shapes are available that consumers with a specific spot in mind can probably find an oven that fits it. Before beginning to shop for an oven, it is helpful to know the choices range from sub-compact through small, medium and large sizes and that oven interiors range from about .4 cubic feet to 1.7 cubic feet.

Power ranges from 400 watts to a little over 700 watts. (It takes at least 500 watts to pop corn, a frequent request, according to Schrage, and the greater the power, the faster food will cook.)

Besides wattage, another variable is the number of power settings. Most ovens have at least a defrost setting (about 30 percent of full power), a mid-level setting and a full-power setting. The largest number of settings is 10, but only those planning to use the ovens for complex dishes are likely to need that many. The smaller the total wattage, the fewer levels are needed, according to Dixie Trout of Amana.

Two former drawbacks to microwaves — uneven cooking and too-moist food — have been improved on. The manufacturers have a number of ways to overcome overcooking, including ans, turntables and multiple entry for the microwaves. Food processors have improved packaging and recipes to minimize the moisture problem.

In addition, su h features as temperature probes that sense when the food is done and turn the oven off, browning elements and preprogrammed cooking have led to improvements. Controls are now mostly electronic, although a few mechanical contros which have knobs instead of touch pads are available.

Despite the many improvements, microwaves are still considered best at defrosting, heating, reheating and cooking foods such as vegetables and bacon.

They still have drawbacks when it comes to roasting meats and baking, although the larger, more expensive, more featured models expand the range of this appliance.

A good way to compare ovens is to read the use and care booklets which come with the appliances and explain special features. Some manufacturers maintai toll-free telephone numbers so prospective buyers can get additional information and answers to questions. Check to see if there is such a service by looking at the booklets.

Garden Clinic

Q. What is "foundation plant?"

A. Foundation plants or base plants are the shrubs planted around the foundation of a house or building. They are used to help erase the barren effect of a new yard and help the building look like it fits in or belongs in the landscape.

Q. Will witch hazel grow in North Carolina?

A. Yes. The native witch hazel (Hamamelis virginiana), species from abroad and hybrids of different species all deserve much wider use in the landscape. Desirable qualities include vigorous growth on problem-free plants that produce fragrant and attractive flowers in winter and colorful foliage in the fall. One reason witch hazels are not more popular is because most people are not shopping for plants when they are in bloom. Most people shop for plants in the spring and are dazzled by azaleas flowering around the then barren limbs of the witch hazels.

Q. How should tuberous begonias be stored for the winter?

A. Dig the tubers after frost has killed the foliage. Let the tubers dry for a few days in an open area, then store them in dry peat moss at 50 degrees F.

Q. Is there a new disease killing oak trees? I have seen a lot of dying trees lately.

A. We continue to see dead and dying oaks throughout North Carolina. The problem is called oak decline, and the triggering factor was last year's drought. A combination of fertilization and watering may be helpful for valuable shade trees, but there is no practical cost-effective measure for forests. If you think that fertilizing could help a tree in your yard, contact your county agricultural extension office for more information before fertilizing. It is easy to do more damage by fertilizing. Do not use a fertilizer high in nitrogen as this will encourage top growth, not roots.

For answers to your gardening questions, contact your county agricultural extension office.

On The House

By ANDY LANG

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Wooden decks rate high on the list of construction projects when considering how much of your remodeling dollars can be recaptured at resale time.

Experts on a subject which is somewhat difficult to analyze say about 50 to 60 percent of the original cost of a wooden deck will be returned to you one way or another when your house is sold. Usually, it is in the form of a higher price than if there were no deck, but often it is the appeal of the deck as a selling point. In any case, this prediction is likely to be inaccurate if the deck has not been properly maintained.

Most important in such maintenance is the preservation of the wood with some kind of coating, usually a finish that will enhance the wood's natural beauty while protecting it from damage caused by water, including cracking, splitting and pigment washoff. Some kind of stain, preferably one with a preservative in it, is the answer.

Richard Stankevich, product manager of the Darworth Co. of Avon, Conn., pointed out that many homeowners are choosing a stain that also is an oil-based wood preservative.

Such a product resists cracking, blistering and peeling while it protects against mildew and rot by keeping water absorption to a minimum.

Stankevich's main advice to do-it-yourselfers is to read the label on the container very carefully and to follow the directions to the letter. Some further advice from him:

Brushes are good all-purpose tools that can be used for tight spots and hard-to-reach areas. While a natural bristle brush is the right one for oil stains, a synthetic nylon brush is recommended for latex-based stains and oil-based stains and wood preservatives. Far and away the fastest and easiest method of applying the stain is with a sprayer. You can finish the job in one-third the time it takes with a brush. They can be rented; the airless sprayer tends to be more effective and neater, but the air sprayer also does the job well. When you rent a sprayer, make sure it has a minimum capacity of one gallon, otherwise you will be spending half your time filling the reservoir.

Before you start spraying, mask off all windows, doors, trim, etc., with newspaper and masking tape. Wear protective clothing and a painter's mask, since the stain vapors should not be inhaled. When you finish spraying an area and before the stain dries, go over it with a brush to make sure the stain gets into all the crevices and under any loose particles. This process, called backbrushing, will improve coverage and penetration and is especially important on textured wood. Break large areas into small ones and apply as much stain as possible without excessive dripping and running.

The work can be done with a roller, says Stankevich, but it does not cover as thoroughly as a brush. Also, you must keep a roller fully saturated with stain at all times, otherwise the deck will get lighter toward the end of each roll.

Shake stainers and stain applicator pads also can be used. The stainer looks like a scrub brush with a handle and does as good a job as a brush. Some people find it faster and more comfortable. Pads work well only on relatively smooth surfaces.

(All aspects of painting a house are discussed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Paint Your House Inside and Out," which can be obtained by sending 75 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y., 11743.)

Here's The Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — Can you tell me how to build a fireplace?

A. — Only if I had the time and space to give you a 5,000-word reply. There are many books on the subject. Try your local library or book store, or write to Lane Books, Menlo Park, Calif., 94025. An excellent edition by them is "How to Plan and Build Fireplaces."

Q. — I want to build a fireplace outside. Does it require a chimney and flue?

A. — If the fireplace is outside and not attached to the house, it needs only a short chimney or none at all. If it is attached to the house, it needs a separate flue even though it is actually outside.

Q. — Which uses more electricity, a regular electric oven or a microwave oven?

A. — The electric oven by a wide margin.

Q. — Where can I find out how to build a solar space heating system?

A. — Write to the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C., 20402. Send $1.50 and ask for their plans for "An Economical Solar Heating System for Home" — No. 033-000-00632-2.

Q. — I will be making some kitchen wall cabinets. How high should they be?

A. — The average height, including the base unit and the countertop, is 36 inches.

Q. — Is it safe to clean an old varnished cabinet with denatured alcohol?

A. — Yes.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y., 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Gather Plant Seeds For Spring Flowers

From FRIENDLY EXCHANGE

When blooms begin to fade this fall, hunt for tiny treasures in the garden. Save a fistful of money and earn even more satisfaction by collecting seeds from plants.

Seeds gathered from petunias, snapdragons, ageratum, marigolds or zinnias produce flowers that will brighten any yard the following spring. These five annuals offer a variety of colors, shapes, heights and continuous blooms.

Here's how to gather the seeds, according to Friendly Exchange magazine:

Petunias have star-shaped green leaves along the plant's stalk that hold seedpods in their centers. Usually the first thing to dry out and turn brown on a petunia, the pod will start to split open, resembling a small bird's beak. Pick and split open the pod to catch the cluster of tiny, dark-brown seeds.

When zinnia blooms dry and turn dark brown, they resemble bristly pinecones. Pinch, wiggle and pull out edges a few at a time. The seeds at the base look like small arrowheads. Depending on their dryness, colors range from light brown to almost black.

To gather algeratum seeds, pick off a dried blossom and slowly roll it between thumb and forefinger over a sheet of paper.

ANNOUNCING A UNIQUE MANAGEMENT CANDIDATE PROGRAM

$20,000 A Year Minimum Guarantee While You Train.

One of America's largest automotives sales organizations is offering opportunities for highly motivated men and women with the unusual combination of sales and management capabilities. Previous successful candidates have progressed to top level positions with six figure incomes. Additional opportunities may include travel to various towns.

FREE, NO OBLIGATION EVALUATION.
We want you to succeed as much as you do. So, as part of our evaluation process, we will invest the time and expense to determine your qualifications through an extensive interview process...and it only takes a couple hours of your time.

EXPERIENCE
We're looking for people with sales experience in clothing, insurance, banking and other fields that do not reward you in proportion to your performance.

EDUCATION GIVES YOU A HEAD START.
We prefer people who have earned a college degree, but we will make exceptions for unusually talented and high motivated people. We'll do this because many of the characteristics of successful candidates cannot be taught in college: ambition, "street smarts", sense of humor, commitment, and an unbeatable desire to succeed

Discover the Island.

Located oceanside in popular Atlantic Beach — minutes from Morehead City and a broad selection of shops, restaurants and entertainment places — Island Beach & Racquet Club is a resort condominium complex that provides a seaside escape from the ordinary at an extraordinarily affordable price.

Discover the Value!

At Island Beach & Racquet Club, spacious, fully-furnished, 2 and 3-bedroom, 2½-bath condominiums start at just $74,900, with only $7,490 down and $448.48 per month,* and feature a wealth of luxurious amenities, such as: • A balcony off the master bedroom • A screened-in porch • Central heat and air • A wet bar • A modernly-equipped gourmet kitchen • 4 swimming pools • 6 professional quality tennis courts. Visit Island Beach & Racquet Club and discover one of the best resort condominium values in Atlantic Beach. Or, for more information, complete and mail the attached coupon, or call 247-2779. Long distance, in NC only, call 1-800-682-3702. Outside NC, call 1-800-334-3702. Rentals are available. Offer of sale void where prohibited.

*Typical transaction. Total price of $74,900 based on $7,490 down is a loan amount of $67,410. Years 1-3 or 36 mortgage payments are $448.48 each at a fixed interest rate of 7%. Years 4-15 or 144 mortgage payments are adjustable rate mortgage payments. For example: 8¾% simple interest rate for years 4-15 or 144 mortgage payments would be $525.55 each.

Based on the weekly average yield on U.S. Treasury securities adjusted to a constant maturity of one year, with a margin of 300 basis points to the borrower rounded to ⅛ of a point.

Payment at the end of 15 years (payment 180) is a balloon payment of $52,704.91. The APR is 8.38%. Initial rate (7%) is subject to increase. Summey pays all closing costs, except pre-paids. All payments include principal and interest.

Beachwalk at Pine Knoll Shores, NC

Saturday, Sept. 26, 1987 / 11 A.M.

Location: From Morehead City, NC cross the Morehead City-Atlantic Beach Bridge. Go to first traffic light and turn right. Go 5 miles, sale will be on the left. From Swansboro, NC cross Emerald Isle Beach and stay on Hwy. 58 approx. 12 miles, sale is on the right.

Designed for the truly discriminating purchaser, Beachwalk at Pine Knoll Shores presents a luxury oceanfront residence in an exclusive, prestigious setting. Graced with an extraordinary array of design features, Beachwalk creates an atmosphere of spacious comfort. Its strikingly innovative floor plans offer commanding views of the Atlantic Ocean with a choice of luxurious three bedroom, or penthouse units. Destined to achieve recognition as a resort property of rare excellence. Beachwalk features the superiority of on-site steel reinforced concrete construction. The entrance area is highlighted by two glass-encased elevators that overlook the oceanfront pool and jacuzzi as well as the Atlantic itself as you rise above the sand and surf. Every home provides an exceptionally large sun terrace with magnificent exposure to refreshing breezes, beautiful vistas and the warmth of the sun. With professional attention given to the finest detail, all Beachwalk homes include carpeting with color coordinated wallcoverings in the baths, solid oak cabinets and kitchens fully equipped with the finest appliances. Tempered, insulated sliding glass doors open on to the large sun terrace and energy efficient specifications are included throughout.

Beachwalk at Pine Knoll Shores is a true classic in resort living. It combines a prestigious oceanfront location, innovative architectural character and spacious floor plans designed for luxury and elegance. You will find few beach residences anywhere comparable to Beachwalk at Pine Knoll Shores.

Ms. Bullard Enjoys Her Freedom

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Marcella Bullard has ordered a personalized license plate for her car reading, "Free 2 B Me."

"I am free," the Greenville resident said. "I'm doing what I want to be doing, preparing for what I want to do in the future. I feel good about myself, good about my activities, and I'm not even too upset that I don't have all the money I need and that I'm thousands of dollars in debt for my education."

Ms. Bullard is a grandmother who's a full-time student and part-time employee at East Carolina University. She has completed an associate degree at Pitt Community College and is pursuing a bachelor's degree in social work at ECU. Going on for her master's degree in social work is a likelihood. She plans to pursue certification as a substance abuse counselor and wants to work with young people.

Carolyn Means, her teacher at PCC, said, "It's been so much fun to watch Marcella grow and pull herself up from beyond her bootstraps. I really admire her."

Ms. Bullard was a wife and mother of one son during 21 years of marriage. She said she held some responsible jobs outside the home when she was married — up until five years ago — but her focus was her family and home. "I had no self esteem then," she said. "My marriage wasn't wonderful, but I know now that that was a reflection of my lack of love for myself, rather than a cause. I had never, until very recently, since I was a young child, loved myself."

Ms. Bullard was born in Melbourne, Fla., but spent most of her life in Gadsden, Ala., the eldest of three girls. Her happiest childhood years were those when her family lived in Alabama, where her maternal grandparents were a stabilizing influence in her life. Her parents separated before she started grade school and her mother remarried when she was six. Her stepfather was good to her and her sisters, she said, but had trouble finding a good job in Alabama. Consequently, the family moved first to the Detroit area and then to Chicago.

She did well academically, but never felt a part of things in elementary or high school. She graduated from high school with a major in business and landed a job in Chicago. Six months later, at 18½, she married to someone she had known only a short time. Their honeymoon was a trip to North Carolina, where her husband was taking a job. She's lived in this state ever since.

For many years she had no contact with her biological father because her mother preferred that she and her sisters did not. But she's now made contact with him and a half sister and half brother in Texas. She feels she has a good but not close relationship with him.

She said she was emotionally devastated by the ending of her marriage, but now sees it as "the best thing that ever happened to me. If it hadn't happened, I'd probably still be now where I was then spiritually and emotionally."

It was about a month after her divorce was final that she started to school at PCC. She earned a degree in Human Services Technology and collected 65 credits for transfer to East Carolina University toward a four-year degree. She was on the dean's list throughout her time there. Her practical work for human services was done at ADAP and working with learning disabled at South Greenville Elementary School and in the guidance counselor's office at Ayden Middle School.

She got into student activities at Pitt Community "just like an 18- or 19-year-old." She was involved in Student Government Association work for three years and served on the Lounge-Food Service Advisory committee.She was elected to the Gamma Beta Phi national honor society.

While she was in the Human Service Technology program, she received scholarships from both Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company and from the Mental Health Association in Pitt County. She said it was in this program that she heightened her self esteem to the point that she knew she could be happy on her own and could pursue any goal she chose.

She entered ECU last year and has been an honor student. This year she won the ECU Stevens Scholarship for social work and criminal justice students. a $500 award.

WORKING — Ms. Bullard (right) and her employer, Dr. Maria J. O'Neil, dean of the ECU School of Social Work, discuss a project.

Her life plan now includes working all she can full-time each summer and going to school fall through spring, with some part-time work during school time. She is currently employed in the ECU School of Social Work as a clerical worker.

Always, regardless of what kind of course load or workload she is carrying, she does community volunteer work. "This is something I do for myself," she said. "Helping other people is the major thing that makes life worthwhile for me. I couldn't be a whole person if I didn't do volunteer work."

She is currently working with gardening activities in the Rehab-Therapeutic Recreation Department of Pitt County Memorial Hospital, at the front desk of the Ronald McDonald House, and on an on-call basis with the Pitt County Family Violence Program.

She lives alone in a mobile home in a local trailer park. "It's small and it's cluttered with my books and my miniatures I collect — and it's mine," she said. "Mine and my two cats'."

She is proud of her son, Kenneth, an Air Force staff sergeant stationed in Sumter, S.C., and of her granddaughter, Tiffany, 3. She attends Unity Christ Church. She spends what little spare time she has tending flowers, enjoying music and dancing, reading, walking and visiting with friends.

"Some people might not see my life as fulfilling," she said. "My son's away, My grandchild's away, All my other relatives live in other states. But I've learned that people are meaningful in your life regardless, if you let them be. I have so many wonderful people to relate to.

"I love studying. I love my paid and my volunteer work. I look forward to having more material things in the future than I do now, once I get a good job. But, in the meantime, I'm happy. I'll work to pay back the money I'm borrowing for my education eventually. In the meantime, I don't have anybody to answer to anybody and I don't have anybody to blame for my wrong moves."

She said she likes to encourage other women to chart their own lives in constructive channels. "Who would have dreamed a few years ago of all the options that are open to me?" she said. "And what's has opened for me — or something equally as wonderful — is available to anyone who will take advantage of it."

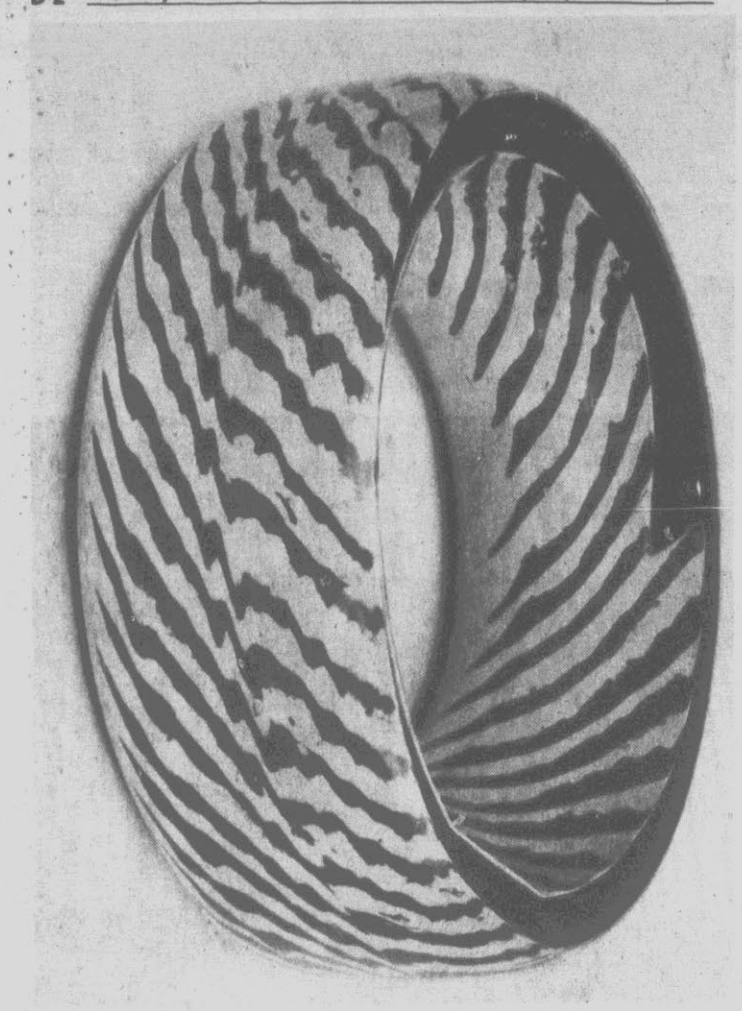
STUDYING — During minutes between classes in the Carol Belk Building at East Carolina University, Ms. Bullard studies her notes.

VOLUNTEERING — Ms. Bullard serves as a receptionist at the Ronald McDonald House several hours each week. She is shown with Nina Turnbull, a fellow volunteer.



WORK OF ART — This untitled sculpture by Hiroshi Sueyoshi is on display at East Gallery along with watercolors and oils by Virginia Wright-Frierson and other porcelains by Sueyoshi.

Exclusive Developments, Inlanders Cut Into Lifestyle Of Isolated Island

By ELIZABETH LELAND

The Charlotte Observer

DAUFUSKIE ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Ruthie Kapur cut the engine on her 1971 Ford pickup. The sound of the island rushed in — the chorus of tree frogs, the caw of crows, the gentle surge of surf in the calm of late afternoon.

"Listen," she whispered. "You don't hear no factories. You don't hear no cars. You don't hear nothing but nature and God."

Pines and moss-draped oaks formed a cathedral ceiling over the narrow dirt road. For a moment, Kapur lost herself in the stillness, in recollections of a barefoot childhood played out across Daufuskie's unfenced acres, of "Mullet Hole" where islanders fished for dinner and of old Haig Point plantation where they hunted deer.

There had always been a timeless quality about Daufuskie, an isolated island south of Hilton Head Island where many residents still do without indoor plumbing. Its salt marshes and dark, silent woods had seemed at once indestructible and impenetrable.

But time caught up.

Daufuskie is changing.

On the end of the island closest to Hilton Head, a few miles from where Kapur had stopped, gates and fences now cordon off exclusive developments. Two planks still jut out over the old fishing hole, but islanders can no longer go there. Residents of the new Haig Point development cross the creek on a nearby boardwalk wide enough for golf carts.

For islanders like Kapur, development has been bittersweet.

Daufuskie had been dying. The boll weevil destroyed the prosperous cotton crop in the early 1900s. Pollution from the Savannah River shut down the oyster houses by 1959. And in the years since, the very remoteness that insulated Daufuskie from development, the lack of bridges and any prospect of them, had driven the young to the mainland in search of jobs.

Haig Point brought Kapur back.

Her husband, Suresh, got a job there as a maintenance supervisor. For the first time in six years of marriage they could make a living on the island.

"I'm against it, and I'm for it," Kapur said of development at Haig Point and the adjoining Melrose tract. "I'm against it because I hate to see change. But I'm for it because it's let me live here."

Daufuskie was one of the last untouched sea islands off the Carolinas' coast. It is barely a mile southwest of Hilton Head across Calibogue Sound, and within view of the Savannah skyline farther down the coast. The only access is by boat. And because of that, development was slow to come.

Haig Point, a residential community, and Melrose, a country club, are designed with an eye to preserving 100-year-old oaks and magnolias, Indian oyster mounds and ruins of former slave cabins.

But islanders worry that when development spreads — and the developers say it will — wealthy, predominantly white vacationers will take over the entire island, forcing out the few dozen blacks and fewer whites who have lived quietly and simply on Daufuskie's northern and western shores.

There, Daufuskie remains as wild and mysterious as when novelist Pat Conroy taught in the two-room schoolhouse in 1969. Roads are often little more than sandy ruts cut through dense woods. Deer wander through the dimly lit interior; blue and white herons wade through the surf.

Conroy wrote about his experience in "The Water is Wide," which became the popular movie "Conrack."

"There is something eternal and indestructible about the tide-eroded shores and the dark, threatening silences of the swamps in the heart of the island," Conroy wrote. " ... beautiful because man has not yet had time to destroy this beauty."

Daufuskie has 61 permanent residents. By the year 2000, Beaufort County planners estimate there will be 10,600.

Some islanders blame Conroy for drawing attention to Daufuskie with his haunting descriptions of an island so isolated that children didn't know the name of the Atlantic Ocean.

John "Cleve" Bryan thinks development was inevitable.

Bryan's grandmother was born a slave on one of Daufuskie's cotton plantations and freed at age 20. His mother worked in the oyster houses that once lined the Intracoastal Waterway and provided a steady means of support for the mostly black islanders. Bryan crabbed for a few years after dropping out of school at age 13, but left at 17 to find better work, first in Savannah and then for 20 years as a sheet metal worker in New York.

He returned a few weeks ago.

"I like records, and in New York I would listen to that song, 'Dixie Road,' and I'd think of the island," he said. "This is the only place I love. I like the peace and quietness.

"But you can't stop change," Bryan said. "This will become another Hilton Head. I see it."

Bryan is a large, muscular man with a strong face that looks 20 years younger than his 62. His home, while he clears 5 acres, is a makeshift camp with a blue tent, a red pump and a shaving mirror hung from a pine tree. Every afternoon when tourists from Hilton Head come ashore for bus tours down Daufuskie's dirt roads, they stop and stare.

"They all want to take your picture," Bryan said. "There's always one joker in the back jumping like a jumping jack."

Islanders have been so inundated by media and tourists that few welcome strangers. They value privacy, but find themselves with less and less.

When Bertha Stafford hangs clothes to dry, she also hangs a hand-scrawled sign warning "Wet Clothes" — an admonition to construction trucks that for months have kicked up dirt along the dusty roads. The trucks were ferried across the sound on barges, and are lumbering reminders of the changing face of Daufuskie.

Exhibit Highlights Work Of Two Artists

An exhibition of watercolors and oils by Virginia Wright-Frierson and colored porcelain by Hiroshi Sueyoshi are on view at East Gallery, 646 Arlington Blvd.

A reception, open to the public, is being held from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. today. The show will be up through Oct. 13.

Before moving back to the East Coast from Tuscon, Ariz., Ms. Wright-Frierson had spent a number of years working primarily on a desert series of oils and watercolors.

She obtained her B.F.A. degree from UNC-Greensboro and studied at the Arts Student League in New York. She has done graduate work in Cortona, Italy, and at the University of Arizona and Tuscon Museum School.

She has had 10 one-person exhibits, won numerous awards and is represented in public and private collections. Ms. Frierson most often works in oil and in watercolor (with pencil). Currently she is living in Wilmington.

A native of Tokyo, Sueyoshi has lived in North Carolina since 1974. He has worked with Seagrove Pottery as a production potter and in Clinton as a pottery instructor. As North Carolina Arts Council visiting artist for four years he worked in Wilson and then in Wilmington. Currently, Sueyoshi has a studio and teaches pottery in Wilmington. He works primarily in thrown and handbuilt porcelain using the Japanese heritage and nerikoma techniques of sandwiching and faceting uncolored porcelain. His work has appeared in exhibitions and won awards across the country.

NCSU Blues Festival Set Saturday

RALEIGH — The North Carolina State University Blues & Bluegrass Festival is scheduled Saturday from 2 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Appearing on the Plaza behind the Student Center on the campus of N.C. State will be North Carolina Bluesman "Big Boy" Henry, the award-winning Bluegrass of Hickory Wind, the Rhythm and Blues of 5 Guys Named Moe, and local acoustic duo Terraplane.

The festival is presented by the NCSU Union Activities Board in cosponsorship with WQDR, PineCone and Center Stage. There is no admission charge and everyone is welcome. In case of rain, the event will be held in the ballroom of the Student Center.

Henry has been playing blues since the 1930s. He played at house parties, weddings and street corners in his home town of New Bern. He later combined fishing and playing music with such blues artists as Sonny Terry, Brownie McGhee, and Big Bill Broonzy. Some time in the mid-'50s, Henry settled down near Beaufort and gave up music. Then in 1980, he was "discovered" by younger musicians who urged him to start playing again. By 1985, Henry had won the W.C. Handy award for his single, "Mr. President," and another in 1986 for "Mr. Ball, Your Warehouse is Burning Down."

Hickory Wind performs a mixture of traditional and contemporary Bluegrass music. The five-member band formed in 1985 in High Point. Since then, it has performed at numerous festivals and competitions throughout North Carolina.

Out of Chapel Hill, 5 Guys Named Moe describe themselves as "a group of professional musicians performing music they love." Playing Blues, Rhythm and Blues, as well as original material, 5 Guys Named Moe will also perform as backup for Big Boy Henry.

Terraplane, a Triangle-based acoustic guitar duo, will be performing a Blues-based set.

Performances are scheduled as follows (all times are approximate): Starting at 2 p.m., Hickory Wind; 3 p.m., Terraplane; 4 p.m., Hickory Wind; 5 p.m., Big Boy Henry; 6 p.m., 5 Guys Named Moe. For additional information on the Festival, call the Union Activities Board at 737-2453.

Following the NCSU Blues & Bluegrass Festival, at 8 p.m., PineCone (The Piedmont Council for Traditional Music) presents the blues (vocal, piano and guitar) of Taj Mahal in the NCSU Stewart Theater. Call 737-3104 for ticket information.

Three Plays Set At St. Andrews

LAURINBURG — St. Andrews Presbyterian College's theater department is sponsoring three productions this fall, beginning with the Highland Players production of a one-night performance of "The Belle of Amherst."

Robin Voiers will play Emily Dickinson in the one-woman drama on Friday at 8 p.m.

"The Belle of Amherst" is a free performance, produced jointly by St. Andrews' English department and theater department. It will be performed in the Liberal Arts Building Auditorium at the college.

For more information contact the department of theater at St. Andrews at 276-3652 ext. 220.

Concert Series Begins Today

WILSON — The Arts Council of Wilson's "Sundays in September" concert series, free and open to the public, begins today at 5:30 p.m. at Toisnot Park with Howard Jay's magic, a community band and Jingles the Clown. At 7 p.m. the Monitors will perform selections of show tunes, beach music, rock and standards.

•On Sept. 20, the Youth Arts Council presents Mixed Emotion in concert from 4 p.m. until 6 p.m. on the lawn of the recreation center on Sunset Road. Picnics and Frisbees are encouraged by the sponsors, but in case of rain the event will be moved inside the center.

•The "Sundays in September" series will culminate on Sept. 27 with The Steel Bandits performing in the center court of Parkwood Mall at 4 p.m. The seven-member family band plays music ranging from classical styles to calypso.

For more information call the Arts Council at 291-4329.

Quilters Guild

The Pamlico River Quilters' Guild will hold its seventh annual quilt show Oct. 3 from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Oct. 4 from noon to 5 p.m. at the Civic Center in Washington, N.C. Quilted items for display must be brought to the Civic Center on Oct. 2.

For more information call 923-3371.

Bethel Festival Scheduled Oct. 3-4

BETHEL — Bethel's fourth annual Harvest Festival will be held Oct. 3-4.

The weekend's activities will be launched with the crowning of the 1987 Harvest Queen that Friday night, followed by a Saturday of contests, arts and crafts and entertainment.

The Harvest Queen Pageant will be held in the Bethel Elementary School auditorium at 7:30 p.m.

Candidates for the crown must be unmarried women students from the junior and senior classes at North Pitt High School. Each must have maintained a C average or above in coursework. Candidates should be prepared to participate in an introduction procedure in casual wear, a three minute talent presentation, an evening dress competition and, for the top five, an impromptu question and answer session. Anyone interested in competing can obtain additional rules and regulations.

Saturday activities will be held in downtown Bethel from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Included in the festivities will be plenty of food — baked goods, cotton candy, hot dogs, candied apples and a chicken dinner. An arts an crafts show will feature student art as well as a variety of contributions from the general public.

Entertainment and activities are planned for both adults and children. Balloons, clowns and T-shirts will be available for the children. Other activities include face-painting, string art, cookie decorating, a color wheel, a bean bag throw, darts, a bicycle decorating contest and a bubble gum blowing contest. Children will be entertained by Jo Jo the Clown's magic tricks, McGruff the Crime Dog, a petting zoo, pony rides, a hay ride, a train ride, and a fun-run. In addition, there will be bingo and a dunking booth for the adults.

The arts and crafts show will accept all categories and media. An entry fee of $20 will cover a car-size display space for the day. An art show will feature contributions of students from North Pitt Schools attendance area — Bethel Elementary, Stokes, Pactolus, Belvoir, Wellcome Middle School and the high school. Entries will also include preschoolers' creations from Bethel Tender Loving Day Care.

Entertainment will include a demonstration of the martial arts, the Steve Myott Show, Craven County Cloggers, Powell Brothers Gospel Group and a classic car show. A hot air balloon ride is scheduled for 5:30 p.m. A street dance with music by Take Five will end the weekend's festivities.

For additional information on participating in the pageant or other festival events contact Frances Young at 825-1891 or Herbie Carson at 825-0971.

Napoleon Bonaparte landed in France in 1815, forcing King Louis XVIII to flee.

Beginning Orchestra Classes Are Offered

Free beginning orchestra classes are being offered this school year to fourth grade students at Wahl-Coates and South Greenville schools. Students are responsible for providing their own instruments.

Registration meetings for parents of interested children will be held at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday at the Wahl-Coates band-orchestra room and at the same time Wednesday in the South Greenville auditorium. Parents will receive information about the orchestra program and instrument rental plans.

Jo Ann Moore is director of the Greenville-area elementary orchestras.

Playwrights Fund Opens With Reading

The Playwrights Fund of North Carolina opens its 1987-88 season Saturday with two staged reading performances of "Home Place" by Phil Hines.

Hines' two-act drama takes place in rural North Carolina in July. A brother's homecoming and a sister's death give the Chappell family some difficult decisions.

The cast of "Home Place" includes Hazel Shapleton as Leila Chappell, Lauretta Riggs as Nettie, Dick McKinney as Carl, Kip West as Nathan, Dennis Aedus as Louis Randall, Bonnie Tapscott as Teresa Matthews, John Griffin as Hugh Crump and Winki Phillips as Evelyn Crump. Greg Watkins directs.

Hines, a native of Troy, has been writing plays, directing and teaching playwriting since 1970.

"Home Place," written in 1980 and revised in 1986, was the winner of best new play (state award) and one of three finalists for a national award sponsored by the High Point Arts Council in 1982. A finalist for the Eugene O'Neil Theater Conference in 1982, "Home Place" has been represented by the William Morris Agency since 1983. The play received a stage reading at Lamb's Theater in New York in June 1985, and was accepted for the New York City Fall New Play Series that same year.

In 1987, the play was a finalist in the Minneapolis Mixed Blood vs. America Play Competition and the Playwrights Fund of North Carolina Competition for North Carolina Playwrights. "Home Place" was selected for production by Raleigh Ensemble Players in November and was one of five plays chosen for Southern Appalachian Repertory Theater Playwrights Conference in February, 1987. The Southern Appalachian Repertory Players produced "Home Place" this summer.

The Best Lunch Theater Ever performance will be at noon at the Greenville Museum of Art, Eighth and Evans streets. An encore performance, Playwrights Theater, will be at 8 p.m. in the performance space of the Humber House, Fifth and Washington streets.

The Playwrights Fund is recognized as a professional theater by the Theater Arts Section of the North Carolina Arts Council, a division of the Department of Cultural Resources. PFNC is a non-profit corporation supported by grants from the Theater Arts Section of the N.C. Arts Council, foundation contributions, corporate and individual memberships. For membership and other information call the Playwrights Fund at 758-3628.

Magician To Appear In Wilson

WILSON — Howard Jay, "Magical Educator," will bring his "Sense Of Wonder" series of magical performances to Wilson on Sept. 13 and 14.

Best known for his "Learning By Magic" performances in elementary schools throughout the Southeast, Jay believes that magic is a very powerful and effective educational tool. His performances, designed to encourage creative imagination, reading, and critical thinking, feature active audience involvement. The children "do the magic themselves" — waving finger-tip magic wands, imagining themselves as favorite storybook characters, and acting out adventures.

Howard Jay lives in Chapel Hill. During his 14 years in magic, he has performed throughout the United States, including appearances (and disappearances) on "Romper Room" and WRAL-TV's children's series "Sparks." He has a bachelor's degree in psychology from Duke University, and has written numerous magazine articles and a series of scripts for children's television.

Jay will be at Toisnot Park at 5:30 on Sept. 13. Admission is free and the public is invited. These performances are sponsored by the Arts Council of Wilson and the United Way as a part of the Sundays in September concert series.

Howard Jay will also present "The Wonders of Reading" at Rock Ridge and New Hope Elementary Schools on September 14, and at Elm City and Darden-Vick Elementary Schools on Sept. 15 as part of the Arts Council of Wilson's Art in the School's programming. For more information call 291-4329.

Playwrights Awards

DURHAM — A 17-year-old Charlotte girl, Karin Shook and a Statesville woman, Barbara O'Brien, have won a statewide one-act play competition sponsored by the North Carolina Writers' Network.

Each will receive the Wachovia Playwrights' Prize of $100, and have her work produced in Wilmington on November 13 and 14, as part of the North Carolina Writers' Network Fall Conference.

Runner-up in the contest is Patrick E. White, who teaches English at Pfeiffer College in Misenheimer. His play, "Sandwich," is about dramatic theory versus performance.

Karin Shook, a freshman at Hofstra University, graduated from East Mecklenburg High School in June. Her play, "Colored Scribbles," emerged from a monologue written for a 10th grade drama exam. It is about a middle-aged madwoman who does not realize she is about to be committed.

Barbara O'Brien's play, "Liza Has a Spell," is about a woman convinced her sister is having a "spell," when she herself is really the one with a problem. Ms. O'Brien, 28, has been writing plays for four years, one of which was produced at SART. A native of Albemarle, she works in Salisbury teaching mentally retarded adults.

For more information about the NCWN Fall conference, at which the plays will be performed, write NCWN, P.O. Box 1207, Wilmington, N.C. 28402.

Dance Seminars

The East Carolina Division of Continuing Education will sponsor four seminars on dancing.

"The Dance Factory" will be held Sept. 17-Nov. 19 from 5:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. in the Theatere Arts Building on the ECU campus. This course is for improving and maintaining fitness through dance.

"Beginning Ballet for Adults" is to train students in basic ballet dance. This seminar will be Sept. 15-Nov. 17 in the Theater Arts Building.

"Beginning Ballroom Dancing and Intermediate Ballroom Dancing" will be Sept. 18 through Nov. 20 in the Jaycee Park Administration Auditorium. This seminar will focus on learning and improving the foxtrot, rhumba, waltz and other ballroom dances.

Call 757-6143 for further information.

Coast Guard Cadets Get Required Spin At Dancing

By DEAN GOLEMBESKI
Associated Press Writer

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) — The air was hot and still as cadets formed a circle and moved their feet to orders that blared over loudspeakers at the Coast Guard Academy's huge, wood-paneled ballroom.

But instead of a sound of leather tapping in crisp, military unison on the parquet floor, there was a wave of awkward steps in a sea of nervous titters, catcalls and embarrassed chatter.

Another night of mandatory dance lessons had begun.

"One, two, three," shouted dance instructor Shelly Desmond as he deomonstrated the basic steps of the waltz. Cadets and their guests strained to watch as Desmond, dressed in a pink blazer, swirled about the middle of the ballroom with his wife, Norma.

"Keep your elbow out so she can rest her arm on it," Desmond continued, as some students cocked their arms and stiffly mimicked his movements.

A few more instructions, and then Desmond told the cadets to grab their partners and practice while he gave them the beat. When he had seen enough, Desmond played some music and watched again.

"Look at your partner, not me," he scolded.

For an hour, Desmond and his wife tutored the students on the waltz and the cha-cha. Also included in the curriculum is the swing, with most of the steps taught to today's music.

"I think I'm doing pretty well," freshman Doug Dillon, 18, of Arlington, Va., said after his dance lesson.

Dillon said he had heard mention of the mandatory dance lessons before coming to the academy, but hadn't paid any attention. For Jonathon Riffe, 18, of Tuscaloosa, Ala., the lessons were a surprise.

"They're different," he said. "I never had any prior experience with dancing. I was never interested."

For Desmond, the sight of young cadets struggling to move their feet to a non-military beat is nothing new. He's an Arthur Murray Dance School instructor and has been giving lessons at the academy for eight years. He enjoys the work and is keenly aware of the pressures under which the cadets come to learn.

"This is the first break they've had," he said. Cadets come to him after a full day of schooling and push-ups that begins at 5:50 a.m. during the summer.

"They can let their hair down a bit," he said. "They don't have to say ma'am or sir. It's part of becoming an officer and a gentleman — or lady."

Brenda J. Fullmer, the academy's social director, said the dance lessons were part of cadets' training in the social graces, or military etiquette. She said, for example, cadets were also taught how to treat guests.

The dance classes are given annually to freshmen, or fourth-class cadets, about a month after they arrive at the academy.

There are no dance requirements or lessons after the first year, but dances remain the top social events. During the Friday night lessons, upperclassmen assigned to the younger cadets gawk from the balcoy. Desmond said some upperclassmen occasionally contacted him for private refresher courses.

The youngest cadets, dressed in summer uniform, march in formation to their dance lessons. Once inside, the military fetters are loosened a bit. There's talking and laughter during the lessons, followed by 30-minute social periods after each session.

The free half hour is a treasured time for all cadets, but especially for those interested in finding dates for the future. The academy's commandant has decided that freshmen must attend at least two formal balls this academic year — doubling last year's requirement. Those who fail to attend the balls receive demerits.

The academy will conduct seven formal balls this year and nine informal dances, Mrs. Fullmer said, providing ample opportunity for freshmen to fulfill their obligation.

Poetry Forum

The East Carolina University Poetry Forum will have its first meeting of the year at 8 p.m. in Mendenhall Student Center Room 248 Tuesday. Hereafter, the forum will meet on the first and third Tuesday of each month when school is in session.

The informal workshop meetings of the forum are open to the public. Those wishing to have their poem discussed are asked to bring seven to 10 copies of each poem.

Ayden Workshop States Auditions

The Ayden Theater Workshop will hold open auditions for the drama "Dracula" today at 3 p.m. and Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Ayden-Grifton auditorium on N.C. 11 in Ayden.

Production dates are set for Halloween weekend. The cast will consist of a number of men and women ranging in ages from late teens to adult. The play is being directed by Kenneth Ginn, whose prior credits include Farmville's production of "South Pacific."

For more information call 746-4444 or 746-2121.

Museum Of Art Set To Reopen Sunday

The Greenville Museum of Art, 802 S. Evans St., will officially reopen its galleries to the public Sunday with a ribbon-cutting ceremony scheduled for 2 p.m. and an open house from then until 4 p.m.

The museum, housed in the former Flanagan-Wagner House, has been under renovation for the past 18 months and closed for the last four months. It serves the Pitt-Greenville community and northeastern North Carolina.

Sunday's reception will feature al fresco dining, music and three exhibitions. The September exhibition artist will be honored at the reception and will be on hand to talk with museum visitors.

Scheduled for exhibit are "Wild West Town," a scale model of an authentic western town of the 19th century by Greenville city policeman Mack Jones; "The Capital Collection," paintings and photographs by the Capitol Art League of Raleigh, and "Family Ties," a group of still lifes and portraits by a Kansas City, Mo., painter known as Linister.

GMA will resume its regular operation schedule on Tuesday. Hours are: Tuesdays, 10 a.m. to 8:30 p.m.; Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays, 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.; Saturdays, 11 a.m. to 2:45 p.m., and Sundays, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. The museum will be closed Mondays and on major holidays.

Indian Heritage Week Opens Sept. 20

North Carolina's Native Americans will celebrate their 10,000-year heritage when they observe Indian Heritage Week Sept. 20-26.

The eighth annual statewide observance will begin officially Sept. 20 with the Indian Heritage Week Festival at Town Creek Indian Mound near Mount Gilead. Miss Indian North Carolina will be crowned during the 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. affair, which will also feature speakers, Indian dancers, Indian arts and crafts, demonstrations and Indian traders.

At tribal centers and Indian organizations throughout the state, powwows, open houses and other activities are planned to call attention to the history and contributions of N.C. Indians.

The Triangle Native American Society sponsored an Indian Heritage Gala at the Holiday Inn in Raleigh on Saturday, and on Sept. 19 the Metrolina Native American Association will sponsor the Billy Mills 5K Fun Run in Charlotte.

"Native American heritage in North Carolina lives through the presence of 65,000 Indian people spread throughout 99 of the 100 counties," said N.C. Department of Administration Secretary James S. Lofton. North Carolina has the largest Indian population east of the Mississippi River.

"Their history is imbedded in the landscape," Lofton continued. "Eleven counties bear original Indian names while hundreds of waterways, towns and natural sites are identified by words of Indian origin. The permanence of Indian influence in North Carolina is evident."

North Carolina has six tribes — Cherokee, Coharie, Haliwa-Sapone, Lumbee, Meherrin and Waccamaw-Siouan — and three major urban concentrations in Charlotte, Fayetteville and Greensboro.

Indian Heritage Week is being coordinated by the N.C. Commission of Indian Affairs in the N.C. Department of Administration.

The commission is the only state government agency with the specific responsibility of addressing the needs of North Carolina Indians. Through its field offices and varied programs, the commission works to assure the rights of Indians to pursue their cultural, social and religious traditions and to increase economic and educational opportunities.

For a schedule of Indian Heritage Week activities or for more information, contact the N.C. Commission of Indian Affairs, P.O. Box 27228, Raleigh, N.C. 27611, or call 733-5998.

N.C. State Exhibit Features Donations

North Carolina State University Student Center Gallery will present the exhibition "Seeing An Idea" opening Wednesday with a reception from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. in the North Gallery.

Gifts and acquisitions since 1982 make up the exhibition which includes ceramics, textiles, sculpture, paintings and works on paper which also honors those people who have given art to the University.

The gallery is open daily from 9 p.m. to 10 p.m. in the University Student Center on Cates Avenue.

Telephone 737-3503 for more information.

Wilson's Work Being Shown

WILSON — The Arts Council of Wilson, 205 Gray Street, is exhibiting the work of J. Chris Wilson until Oct. 2 in Galleries I and II. Paintings from local private collections, earlier works and recent pieces will be shown, providing a chronology of the artist's range and vision.

A native of Georgia, Wilson recieved the M.F.A. degree from the University of Georgia. He has exhibited his work in Georgia, Florida, Tennessee, Virginia, and extensively in North Carolina. Private collections in North Carolina alone boast more than 100 pieces.

Wilson has been on the faculty of Atlantic Christian College since 1974.

There will be an informal reception at the Arts Council on Thursday, September 10 from 7 p.m. until 9 p.m. to honor the opening of Wilson's exhibit. Hosts for the evening will be Marie Blair, Betty Eagles, Tom and Virginia Graves, Pete Richard, Teeny Stronach, and Baxter Wells.

The exibit is open to the public. For more information call the Arts Council at 291-4329.

British Author Piers Paul Read Writes Stories Dry And Direct

By Phil McCombs
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Piers Paul Read, the British novelist, went to live in France in 1979 with his wife and children. He was having trouble writing and thought it would perk him up. Naturally, he didn't get a thing done. "As soon as people knew we had a house in Nice," he says in his soft rushing schoolboy accent, "I worked as a hotelier. All the brothers and sisters and cousins and friends came out."

This is the kind of hard-edged little irony Read likes best, and he tells it dry and direct, just as he does in his books — the poor, desperate author, his brain a clogged wasteland in the damp chill of his native Yorkshire, lighting out for sunny southern France only to have his spirit drowned in mindless seas of cheery fun.

But some good came of that year, too. Poking around in France, Read got an idea for a book, and now, with a first printing of 45,000 copies, Random House has brought out "The Free Frenchman" — a thick, meticulously researched, highly readable novel about the Resistance, and lack of it, after France's surrender to Germany on June 22, 1940.

With testimony in the trial of Klaus Barbie, the Gestapo's "Butcher of Lyon," recapitulating ugly events of the occupation, Read's novel is freshly relevant. Much of what happened in the "nation of collaborators" was later smoothed over by Gen. Charles de Gaulle as he sought to unify the country after the war, but Read relentlessly reexamines those grim years.

The warring factions in the Resistance; the terrible betrayals of friends and comrades; the easy acceptance of, and even enthusiasm for, the Petain government by so many, even as it branded de Gaulle and his Free French in London "traitors" and passed anti-Jewish laws more stringent than those of the Nazis; the Catholic Church's dismal record; Roosevelt's refusal to recognize de Gaulle; the Frenchmen who enlisted in the Nazi war machine — it's all there.

While the author has a reputation as a "literary" Catholic novelist, he's a storyteller of the old school — the narrative rips along as he progressively peels away the layers of time to reveal history's snake pit of political, sexual and familial passions.

In the novel, there's a bishop called Charles Ravanel. One day during the occupation, he is out walking with his great-niece when they see a man on a bicycle carrying a battered suitcase and, sitting on top of it, a boy 4 or 5 years old. As the riders pass, the man looks "down at the priest's cassock, then quickly away; but the child, who had the dark eyes, sallow skin and black hair of his father, stared at them as he rode past with tired, pitiful eyes."

Some critics have called his writing "melodramatic."

Read retorts quietly, "I think quite a large number of my readers are carried along, and like it."

At 46, Read is a slim, courtly man. With his graying dark hair drifting down over his ears, his conservative suit and regimental tie, he conveys the perfect impression of what an American might imagine a British intellectual to look like.

With this deliciously mad touch: blue ankle socks. Quite a bright blue, too. Above black oxfords.

"It's a wretched life, a writer's life," he says, shooting a hangdog look at his visitor in an apparent effort to start off on a sympathetic note. "My father always tried to put me off it." In America for the publication of his new novel, Read was interviewed on a recent weekend in Georgetown, where he and his wife Emily were staying with friends.

Read's fiction hasn't caught on widely here, but he is known for "Alive" (1974), his riveting nonfiction account of how the survivors of an Andes plane crash ate their dead comrades while awaiting rescue. The book sold 250,000 copies in hardcover and 4 million more in paper, earning the author enough to continue writing novels.

"I think the typical reader of 'Alive' was a 15-year-old boy and not the sort of person who can enjoy my novels," Read says with a small smile. The novel "Polonaise," his next book, "sold very disappointingly. The kind of person who liked 'Alive' didn't want to read about a quirky Polish novelist with sexual hang-ups."

Yet the topic intrigued him. He had met Polish novelist Witold Gombrowicz, a comic existentialist cult figure, in Berlin while on a Ford Foundation grant in 1963, and "based the character of Stefan Kornowski, who's the hero of 'Polonaise,' largely on this man ... I was going back to that period of history which I find so fascinating and which I think is crucial to European history, the Second World War and what leads up to it. But it's also dealing with sexual morality — (Kornowski) sort of dabbles in sadism and masochism, and the problem of being a writer comes into it. I think it's probably my favorite novel."

His nine novels range from historical sagas ("The Junkers," 1968) to tales of tortured personal and domestic morality ("Monk Dawson," 1969; "A Married Man," 1979). "The Professor's Daughter" (1971) is set in the political and cultural tumult of '60s America. In "The Upstart" (1973), a young man is driven to rage and criminality by the humiliating slights he suffers under the English class system.

Read speaks rapidly and with a charming diffidence about incarnating ideas in fiction. While there seems to be no flamboyance in the man — all is understatement and self-deprecating humor — there is in the intensity of his words a suggestion of the passion that fills his work. He develops his characters in a full, almost old-fashioned way, and pays a great deal of attention to plot. Things happen in his books.

"I like a bit of denouement," he says.

For Some, Eden Is Still A Three-Town Community

By ROBIN ADAMS
Greensboro News & Record

EDEN, N.C. (AP) — The sign at the edge of the city limits says, "Welcome to Eden."

That's not the way Marie Dean sees it.

"This is Leaksville, Spray and Draper to me," said Dean, a clerk at Leaksville Shoe Store. "No matter what, it will always be Leaksville, Spray and Draper."

That's the way it was Sept. 12, 1967, when the three small towns merged with the Meadow Greens Sanitary District to form Eden.

Overnight two mill towns, a trade and industrial center and the thriv ing, unincorporated space connect ing them were transformed into Rockingham County's largest city. The city will hold a 20th birthday party Sept. 11-13.

Yet, two decades after the consol idation, many people use the name Eden only when talking about the central area. The rest is Leaksville, Spray or Draper.

Residents still give directions by indicating which former town something is in, and many license plates still bear the former towns' names. The Police Department divides the city into four zones. You guessed it: Leaksville is zone one, Draper is zone two, Spray is zone three and the central area is zone four.

"It's just easier this way," police dispatcher Carl Grogan said. "Most of us home people still refer to the towns as Leaksville, Spray and Draper. We know that overall it's all Eden."

Eden has three post offices: the main office in Leaksville; branches in Spray and Draper. Fire departments are similarly dispersed across Eden. Even the latest telephone book has entries for the towns of Leaksville, Spray and Draper. The smaller print beside all three entires says, "see Eden, City of."

"We have grown together over the years, but it will be a long time or a lot of deaths before Leaksville, Spray and Draper die," said Jones Norman, Eden's first mayor.

In the vote 20 years ago, support for consolidation ranged from only three votes in Leaksville to a majority of almost 2-1 in Draper.

Approval came after consolidation had been rejected several times. What made the effort in 1967 successful was the thriving, unincorporated Meadow Greens Sanitary District that linked the three towns.

With the hospital, a strip shopping center, Fieldcrest Mills office headquarters and a new high school in the central area, residents from all three areas were linked.

But not everyone agreed they'd be better off as one city.

Weeks before the vote, local businessman John Dyer took out newspaper advertisements urging people to vote no. The Tri-City Jaycees and other proponents touted consolida tion as progress, but Dyer asked: "Progress for whom?"

His efforts failed.

Dyer then led a group of residents demanding a recount, and calling the vote unlawful because the newspaper notice announcing the vote had not been published 30 days before the vote as required by law. Dyer's zeal and the anticonsolidation effort fizzled.

When contacted several weeks ago, Dyer still would not discuss the consolidation.

Most people in Eden generally agree consolidation was the best choice. But when you win on the one hand, you lose on the other, said Jean Harrington, Downtown Revitalization Committee chairman.

"I won't dispute that economically it was a good thing," Harrington said. "But if you gain in one advantage, somewhere you give up something else. We lost the sense of community. That closeness is gone. But maybe that happened everywhere. Everybody got too busy to be neighbors or sit out on the front porch."

Grief G. Jones, a former Spray mayor, voted for the consolidation but grieves the loss of the old busi ness sections.

"For the individual towns, it may not have been a good choice, but overall it was for the better," Jones said. "The business areas from the old days are all shot. With the exception of Leaksville, the rest have gone. That was caused by the consolidation. But who's to say what would have happened to them if we hadn't consolidated?"

The Leaksville area remains the central trade and commercial area. Draper and Spray, the old mill towns, still have rows of clapboard mill houses and a few general stores nearby to serve the immediate needs of the residents.

Consolidation critics and supporters alike say the merger killed Spray and Draper, while Leaksville, the largest of the three, has thrived.

Leaksville's advantage has been that the main roads lead to it. Growth along N.C. 14, the major thoroughfare, is nearest Leaksville.

Businesses in Draper and Spray have had difficulty attracting customers and keeping the doors open.

About all that's left of Spray is the Spray Cotton Mill, a post office, a couple of general stores and the Spray traffic circle.

Unlike the two other towns, Spray doesn't have a downtown revitalization committee. Merchants or residents interested Spray's survival have joined The Boulevard Merchants Association. The Boulevard, the dividing line between Leaksville and Spray, is the only area with a welcome sign at each entrance.

"We did this intentionally," said Marty Melvin, the group's chairman. "We wanted people to know where The Boulevard is. You don't have to go through The Boulevard to get anywhere. We work to let people know where we are."

Draper, near the Virginia state line on the northeastern end of the city, is on its way back, said Steve Cochran, president of the Draper Village Association.

"We exist for the convenience of the people who live near here," he said of the group.

"What we need now is a drawing card — something to bring people downtown, to get the traffic moving in and out of town."

Draper's calling card, Cochran said, is its new industries nearby. The new Eden Industrial Park, Miller Brewery, Pluma Inc. and Pannell Knitting are all within a mile of Draper.

It's important for Eden that Leaksville, Spray and Draper survive, said Billy Vestal, president of the Old Leaksville Shopping District.

"By keeping Leaksville alive we are in essence keeping Eden alive," he said. "If we get people to stay and shop here, we all grow. If we as small associations attract new busi nesses, we increase the tax base in Eden."

After the consolidation vote, the real work started: Making three separate entities into one.

More than 30 streets in the three towns had the same name. No community wanted to give up its street names or its fire department, police station or post office. The first year, a 23-member board, with representatives from each of the former town boards, worked to ease into the changes — the biggest being a new name.

Residents overwhelming supported the name Eden, which is what William Byrd dubbed the area in 1728 when he led a survey party to establish the boundary line between North Carolina and Virginia.

Discarded proposals ranged from the obvious, Leaksville, to the silly, What's It. Others included Bull, LSD (for Leaksville, Spray and Draper), Good Will, Edenborough, Chaos, Greedyville, Jaycees, Crazyville, Sourtown and Rock City.

City Council member Daniel Squires said he thinks there has been much progress and mending in the last 20 years.

"There are some people who still refer to the old towns and some people who still call me an old Draper boy, but to most people this is Eden," said Squires, a former Draper Town Council member.

"Any reference to Leaksville, Spray or Draper now, I would say, is for identification purposes. In stead of saying north or south, we say 'in Draper,' or 'in Spray.' But this is normal. Sections of Greensboro have different names."

Jones, the former Spray mayor, said it might take another 20 years before the towns are just memories.

"It's just like Winston and Salem," Jones said. "You have to have a lot of funerals before you get rid of that. People like to be individuals and brag that they have the best whatever."

Low-Cost N.Y. Studio Specializes In The Gory, The Sleezy, The Raw

By JERRY SCHWARTZ
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In one scene in the Troma film "The Toxic Avenger," the hero — a hulking green fellow who is covered with boils and slime — makes fast work and fast food of three murderous cretins in a restaurant.

One is baked in a pizza oven. Another has his head turned into a milkshake. The third screams as his fingers are french-fried.

Excessive? Well, yes, but the Toxic Avenger is an excessive guy. At another juncture, he leaves an alleyway littered with eyeballs and bone marrow, a scene that the town police chief calls, "The most gruesome thing I've ever seen."

"Have you seen my mother-in-law? That's gruesome," replies a politician.

Excruciating gore, dumb humor, low-budget ingenuity — it's a textbook example of the Troma touch, the touch that has made the company a leading producer of exploitation films that revel in cheesiness.

Troma is not a grand Hollywood studio where starlets sashay, executives take meetings and do lunch, and directors throw around million-dollar figures like so much stale popcorn.

It is, instead, the cinematic toy of Lloyd Kaufman and Michael Herz, two wise guys who spin their escapist fare from a tenement adjoining a boarded-up fish store in New York's Hell's Kitchen.

"We're film nuts. We love movies," Kaufman says. But money also is a major consideration; Kaufman makes it clear that he does not intend to lose his shirt on a film version of Strindberg's "The Saga of the Folkungs."

Troma films have titles like "Class of Nuke' Em High," "Demented Death Farm Massacre ... The Movie," "I was a Teenage T.V. Terrorist," "Zombie Island Massacre," "Sizzle Beach, USA" and "Fat Guy Goes Nutzoid."

"We want to provide low-budget movies to what we perceive to be existing, set audiences," Kaufman says. "Rather than put all our eggs into a $20 million movie and aim it at nobody, we make films in a more modest fashion and aim them at groups we know exist."

The Troma braintrust knows that there are some people who will go to see any movie in which some poor soul is dissected by a maniacal sushi chef, or in which curvaceous females expose their breasts while humiliating teen-age boys.

Troma also knows that multiplex theaters are sprouting all across America's suburbs, and that, as Kaufman says, "You can't fill them all up with 'Crocodile Dundee.'" Theater owners want low-priced movies that will do good business for a week or two until "Rocky XV" arrives.

Troma also knows that there is a voracious appetite for video rentals. Troma movies generally appear only briefly in movie theaters and there is a great untapped reservoir of viewers who missed "Fat Guy Goes Nutzoid."

Early on, Kaufman and Herz put brothers, sisters, parents and others in their movies. "Most of my friends and relatives find it's fairly boring to be in a movie, so I'm having trouble recruiting these days," Kaufman says.

Not that he has to scramble for actors. "We're the off-Broadway of movies," he says. "We're the opportunity for young talent to gain experience."

Some Troma actors are paid $1,000 a week — but not many. Some are paid nothing. Many Troma movies do not have unionized crews and casts.

Troma specializes in pre-production work. Every scene is rehearsed extensively on videotape to cut down on the cost of shooting. Most of Troma's work is done on location — no need to build costly sets — but there is a Troma back lot in Jersey City, N.J.

The Troma system means the company, which is privately held and releases few figures, nearly always makes money.

"The Toxic Avenger" cost $1 million to make, far less than the average Hollywood feature. Some of the reviews were good, and a modest hit was born. So far it has brought in $15 million.

"A Hollywood studio, if they make a movie that makes $15 million, it's a disaster. For us, if we make $15 million, it's a wonderful, wonderful experience," Kaufman says.

Kaufman is not enamored of California. He finds Hollywood "a bit intimidating."

"We have a teeny presence in L.A. — a sort of woman and a phone. We want to expand. We'll probably have a door, maybe a sign. The only trouble we've had is finding the equivalent of Hell's Kitchen in Beverly Hills," he says.

The operation is New York, through and through. At ramshackle offices on Ninth Avenue, 30 people work in editing rooms and sales and executive offices.

The furniture in the executive office is not plush, the carpet is threadbare. There are no plans to replace it.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By SUSANNE HUX LONG

As youngsters fall into step with the school routine, we hope they won't neglect recreational reading. Attractive and interesting new books from Sheppard Memorial Library Children's Room are sure to entertain.

The 1987 Caldecott Medal Winner "Hey, Al!" by Arthur Yorinks is a departure from the familiar. Janitor Al and his dog Eddie spend their lives together in a one-room apartment.

Miserable in the cramped quarters and frustrated by life, they eagerly accept a change of fortune — even a change held out by a mysterious bird. Transported to a paradise island, Al and Eddie enjoy the good life — briefly, until circumstance teaches them an old lesson about contentment.

"Flossie and the Fox" is delightful, full of the best qualities of a folktale. Patricia McKissack authors the story of little Flossie, heading through the woods on an errand for Big Mama.

When innocent Flossie meets a strange creature in the woods who claims to be a fox, she is unimpressed. "Nope, I just purely don't believe it," she challenges, assigning the sly Fox the task of proving himself. The warm, funny story is enhanced by happy and vibrant illustrations.

Anyone who has loved an animal will appreciate "Rosalie" by Joan Hewett, a warm, realistic story about an important member of the family. Rosalie is an old and cherished dog who has a place in memories of many past adventures. Now gray-faced, deaf, slow, and sleepy, Rosalie does her best to remain a part of the children's lives, and they make tender allowance for the dog's age. Friends and neighbors sense the value of the aged Rosalie, and they love her, too.

This touching story makes a gentle point and should prove irresistable to dog lovers.

Rock Star Billy Idol Is Changing With Age But He's Pushing Punk

By EVAN RAMSTAD
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Billy Idol may have mellowed, but he's still proud to be a punk.

"It is definitely 10 years since punk rock happened. For a lot of people, it's something they've only read about in rock 'n' roll books," Idol said in a recent interview, as he neared the end of his U.S. tour before heading for Australia.

"The fact that there are a few people like me around does sort of keep that attitude and spirit going. But it has transformed itself as an ongoing thing that's just as alive in 1987 as it was in 1977."

The 31-year-old Idol has changed also. Critics say his latest album, "Whiplash Smile," is his most human and vulnerable effort, an emotional departure from his three earlier records which portrayed him as a rock 'n' roll bully.

His bleached, blond hair still is spiked and his self-described "filthy humor" still is evident, as when he begins concerts by emerging from between a huge pair of legs made of wood. But offstage, Idol wears wire-rimmed glasses and his trademark sneer is often replaced by a smile.

The change in image was widely noticed by critics when "Whiplash Smile" was released last fall with its hit singles, "To Be a Lover" and the lyrical ballad, "Sweet Sixteen."

However, Idol dismisses the change as a natural progression that didn't surprise his fans. "You could see the seeds of that subject change on my other albums. It's just never been quite so forcibly put down," he said. "I just felt it was about time to talk about the other side of my emotions."

"Rebel Yell," Idol's 1984 Grammy-nominated album, had the hits "Eyes Without a Face" and "Rebel Yell" and went double platinum in the United States. With the LP, he became "established," a survivor of punk rock.

"I guess when you look around, the shelf is pretty bare for most of the people who came out of that time. In some senses, it's a miracle that I'm still here," Idol said.

Inspired by the Beatles, David Bowie, Gary Glitter, Iggy Pop, the Sex Pistols and, to a greater extent than is immediately evident, the late Elvis Presley, Idol started in pop music in London in the late 1970s by forming a band with Tony James called Generation X.

Since going solo in 1981, he has at times fought the music industry in order to stay comfortable with his own development. He waited two years between albums because he didn't want to rush one out to please the record company, a mistake he said led to the demise of Generation X.

"That's really a punk rock attitude," Idol said. "It's to bring back that sort of need for artists to respect their own rights, rather than carelessly throwing them away to a record company or some kind of system they don't like."

That attitude prevents Idol from jumping on the bandwagon of political causes that are sometimes popular with other pop artists and producers.

"I think it's great when people take up a political cause or charity, but I think those groups are getting away from what they're about," he said.

"The record companies exploit the hell out of those things and use them to ingratiate the artist on people, rather than people liking the artist for his music. It turns out to have nothing to do with helping Ethiopians. It turns out to help the record companies. That's who really gets fed."

Idol accepts the punk roots he secured in Generation X with pride.

"It's fantastic to think that what we said in 1977 is true," he said. "You can break into the music world when there's a stranglehold. You can start new movements and they will keep going. They won't necessarily self-destruct even if the original groups did. The difficult thing is to impart the spirit that it had. And I was definitely a part of it.

"Punk rock isn't dead. It just smells funny."

Suzanne Somers Returning To TV In 'Smart' Role As County Sheriff

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Suzanne Somers is back on series television after an absence of six years and, guess what? This time, she ain't playing dumb.

Somers, the quintessential dumb blonde on ABC's "Three's Company" until she departed in a salary dispute in 1981, stars in a new, first-run syndicated comedy series called "She's the Sheriff," debuting this fall.

"I'm smart this year," Somers says. "I play a woman sheriff named Hildy Granger. She's appointed to the job when her husband, who had been sheriff, dies suddenly."

Ironically, Somers replaced Priscilla Barnes in the role before filming began. Barnes was the actress who replaced Somers when she left "Three's Company." Barnes ultimately couldn't reach a contract agreement with the producers.

It's the first regular television role for Somers since "Three's Company," although she made several pilots that didn't work out. Other than a few specials, a role in the miniseries "Hollywood Wives" and a few other appearances, she has spent most of her time on her nightclub act.

"For the last six years when we talked to the networks the phrase they all used was that they wanted a 'reality-based comedy with a woman of the '80s,'" she said. "I was never sure what that was. I enjoyed playing the dumb blonde, and people responded to it so much. So I figured why not stick with it.

"But now I'm really enjoying this contemporary woman. For the first time I'm the sane person in the middle with the crazies all around me. Previously, I was one of the crazies. I'm the voice of authority and those around me are out to lunch. I'm strong and I'm in a job usually held by a man. The deputies are opposed and I have to prove myself. Now I know what a woman of the '80s is."

Her chief nemesis as sheriff is Deputy Max Rubin, played by George Wyner. He feels he should have the job and is out to sabotage Hildy. Pat Carroll plays Hildy's mother. Taliesin Jaffe and Nicky Rose play her children.

The new show will also offer Somers a chance to do physical comedy. On "Three's Company," the pratfalls were adroitly handled by John Ritter.

"The audience tests show that the public likes it best when George Wyner and I go at it head-to-head," she said. "He's really the bad guy in the show, because he's always trying to get me in trouble. He will drive me so crazy that I go berserk. I love doing the physical things. I really learned a lot watching John Ritter."

The show, from Lorimar-Telepictures, has been widely sold across the country. It will is being touted in the "prime time begins at 7:30 p.m." campaign by NBC-owned stations who will put syndicated programming in that time slot before actual network prime time begins at 8 p.m. Eastern.

"I was guaranteed 22 weeks on the air," Somers said. "I said, 'Could you repeat that, please?' I kept waiting for the other shoe to drop, but it never did."

The networks rarely commit for more than 13 episodes. Most often, they will guarantee only about half that.

Somers' troubles on "Three's Company" began when her husband and manager, Alan Hamel, demanded a huge increase in her salary. The producers instead sent her character packing and she was on the show only as a brief "telephone call." The next year she was written out completely.

In retrospect, Somers said, "The way I left I would have done differently. Your business should not be public. A lot of egos got out of whack, including my own. But losing the power of a network show made me appreciate what I had. I was forced to go out and pursue a career in public appearances. If I'd had the safety of television I would not have pursued it as vigorously."

As her television career waned, her nightclub career took off. She is a headliner at the Las Vegas Hilton, and in 1986 critics named her "Las Vegas Entertainer of the Year."

"Now that I'm coming back to television I'm ready for the bullets at my feet," she said. "I've been in nightclubs, which was tough to get off the ground, but I wasn't torn apart by the critics the way I was in television. I'm ready for it."

Kinston Exhibits

Two exhibits are on display at the Community Council for the Arts, 111 E. Caswell St., in Kinston. "Clayworks" sculptural vases by Jim Thompson and "Souvenirs" drawings by Melissa Harris and Edwin F. Harris Jr. will be on display until Sept. 30 at the council building.

KELLY'S WORKS

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A retrospective exhibition devoted exclusively to Ellsworth Kelly's works on paper opens at the Fort Worth Art Museum Sept. 13.

The exhibition, which closes Oct. 25, will include 164 objects, encompassing figure drawings, portraits, collages and photographs, many of which served as studies for paintings and sculpture.

DOLLY IN QUEENS — Country singer Dolly Parton interviews hot dog vendor Ralph Minichino in the Queens section of New York for a spot on her forthcoming variety show. The Parton show is scheduled to make its television debut later this month. (AP Laserphoto)

Video Art Offers New Medium Of Expression To The Masses

By JOSEPH VEITZMAN
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The medium is new. So are the images: startling, funny, sometimes disturbing.

— A young woman moves around the corner of a white room. Nothing surprising there, until a fishbowl, a beach ball and other people start appearing — all in different scales, until the viewer loses his sense of what size things really are.

— People, a bus and a child on a tricycle move simultaneously through a picture composed of nine separate frames, creating a constantly changing pattern of movement and space.

— Russian citizens tumble and run down the Odessa Steps in the famous scene from Sergei Eisenstein's 1925 movie, "The Battleship Potemkin." But who's there alongside the grainy, black-and-white Eisenstein characters? A group of modern-day American tourists, in garish color, creating surrealistic situations.

These images all are a result of video art. Now within the reach of thousands because of budget-priced video cameras and editing equipment, video art has become a new medium, with its own stars, festivals and museum collections.

It includes, but can go far beyond, the special-effects music videos that have become popular in recent years. The new art form is developing at a steady pace in the United States, Japan, France, West Germany, Switzerland, Great Britain, Belgium and other nations.

Barbara J. London, assistant curator of the Video Section at New York's Museum of Modern Art, says the final product can be a videotape or a larger "environment" of TV sets showing a variety of tape clips.

"Video can be a documentary, something that uses images in a very abstract way, or can tell a story in an unconventional way," she said.

In recent years, artists have been advancing from visual effects created in a simple studio setting to works with superimposed images, changing color patterns and movements, and even animation.

The artist's goal can be pure amusement or a more important message. The video based on Eisenstein's classic scene, "Steps" by Zbigniew Rybczynski, seems to encompass such subjects as war, superfluous possessions and even romance. Rybczynski also created the nine-part image of people, bus and child.

One recent video, by Korean-born Nam Jun Paik, juxtaposes images of Korean and Western dancers and music together with symbols of Eastern and Western popular culture. Another, by German videomaker Michael Klier, using film from surveillance cameras, captures thought-provoking images of city life.

Some pieces of video art, dubbed "installations" or "environments," use multiple TV sets, sometimes set off by pieces of furniture, sculptures and special lighting and textures.

A recent exhibition in Paris included more than 100 sets, each showing a fragment of a huge, unified image.

The Polish-born Rybczynski, 36, a 1974 immigrant to the United States, is one of the most prominent video artists. His work includes more than 20 music videos and other projects.

"The development of video, in conjunction with computer technology, will lead to an incredible revolution in media," he said in a recent Los Angeles Times interview. 'I want to be at the front of that revolution."

California's Bill Viola, also 36, has created a series of videos and environmental installations. Anita Thacher created the woman in the white room.

London said video artists have rapidly developed contacts around the world, and there are many recent arrivals to the new medium.

Among them, she mentions Belgians Daniele and Jacques Nyst, who develop the subject of children's impressions of the world; American Laurie Anderson, whose latest projects have to do with the themes of artificial intelligence; British artist John Admas, who deals with political and economic power related to the media; and Brazilian Anna Bella Geiger, whose videos show relationships between different art expressions.

Some U.S. videotape shops are adding "experimental video" sections in response to customer interest.

"The time is right," London said. "Younger people grow up with television, with video, and they are comfortable ... with it. Young people at school are working now right away with computers, so there is less of a fear of technology than, maybe, a generation ago."

The New York museum's video collection has more than 450 videotapes, a permanent gallery, a study center and a circulating videotape library. It has also mounted a number of exhibitions of video art.

Arts Center

GREENSBORO (AP) — Groundbreaking ceremonies were held Wednesday for a $7.5 million art center at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

The center will house the university's Weatherspoon collection of American contemporary art.

Construction of the center is expected to take 18 months.

The center is being built with $3.5 million in private gifts plus $3.5 million and money for land purchase from the state.

Included in the private funding is a 1981 gift of $2 million from the late Benjamin Cone Sr. of Greensboro, the university said.

Choral Society

The Beaufort County Choral Society will have an organizational meeting and rehearsal Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Beaufort County Arts Council.

Singers are needed for a Dec. 6-7 presentation of religious and non-religious Christmas music. Don Gober from Ahoskie will be the director.

The Beaufort County Arts Council is sponsoring the group with a Grassroots Grant from the North Carolina Arts Council. Call 946-2504 for information.

Violinist Will Open Symphony's Season

Durham-native Nicholas Kitchen will open The North Carolina Symphony's 1987-88 Greenville season on Wednesday at 8 p.m. in Wright Auditorium at East Carolina University.

Kitchen is a 20-year-old violinist with a growing international reputation. And at this concert he will share a special occasion with the Greenville audience. They will be among the first to hear him perform on his Stradivarius violin, purchased this summer for his career use by the A.J. Fletcher Foundation.

Under the musical direction of The North Carolina Symphony's Gerhardt Zimmermann, Kitchen will be the soloist for Beethoven's Romance No. 2 in F major for Violin and Orchestra, Opus 50 and Max Bruch's Concerto No. 1 in G minor for Violin and Orchestra, Opus 26.

Other North Carolina audiences that will hear Kitchen and The North Carolina Symphony with the same program will be those in Asheville on Thursday, and in Durham on Friday.

Later in the 1987-88 season of The North Carolina Symphony, Greenville audiences will hear world-renowned cellist Lynn Harrell on Jan. 17, and soprano Roberta Peters on March 16.

For subscription or ticket information, call Peggy Shuping at 758-8866.

Q. Robert Bork, President Reagan's selection to fill the Supreme Court vacancy brought about by the retirement of Judge Lewis Powell—does he happen to be of Jewish-Mormon extraction, as I have heard?—R.F., St. George, Utah

A. Judge Bork, 60, is a Protestant. His first wife —the former Claire Davidson, who died of a malignancy in 1980—was Jewish. Two years after her death, Bork married Mary Ellen Pohl, a former nun 15 years his junior.

Q. Which actress is older, Jane Wyman or Lana Turner? And is it true that Lana and Ronald Reagan were secret lovers when they were both under contract to Warner Bros. in their early years? —H.J., Portland, Maine

A. Jane Wyman was born in St. Joseph, Mo., on Jan. 4, 1914. So, at least, she says. Lana Turner was born in Wallace, Idaho, on Feb. 8, 1920. Turner and Reagan were never "secret lovers," but Reagan recalls that he accompanied Lana to the premiere of "Jezebel," starring Bette Davis, in 1938. Turner and Reagan looked well together in photos, and for a while the Warner Bros. publicity department thought of pairing them in a phony romance, but nothing came of the idea. In 1940, Reagan married Jane Wyman, and Turner married the bandleader Artie Shaw. The Reagan-Wyman marriage endured until 1948, the Turner-Shaw marriage only until 1941.

Q. The canvases painted by the great Spanish artist Pablo Picasso from 1901 to 1904 are known as his "Blue Period." Is this because blue is the favored pigment in all those paintings or because Picasso chose to concentrate on the poor, the sick, the famished and the deformed for his models?—M. Contreras, Rio Grande City, Tex.

A. No one knows for sure why Picasso selected blue to dominate his paintings during his early art period. Some historians say he was surrounded by poverty-stricken and blind people in those days and that the color blue best reflected his depression. Others suggest that blue looked best in the lamplight by which he painted.

Q. Whatever happened to Boy George, the transvestite singer who was hung up on heroin? Is it true that he has been barred from performing in this country?—Charlaine W., Springfield, Va.

A. Pop star Boy George, 26, has been barred from entering the U.S. because of his heroin addiction and case history with drugs. He continues to record in London, where his latest album, "Sold," is doing well. His musical group, Culture Club, has been disbanded, and George insists that he's living with his parents and consulting a psychotherapist several times a week. He expects to be as good as new before the year is out. In July, however, he was prohibited from appearing on a Saturday-morning children's TV program, "The Wide Awake Club." George said at the time, "Some people are worried that I'm a bad influence."

Patty with fourth husband, Michael, and son Mackenzie

Q. Was the Oscar-winning actress Patty Duke ever married to Desi Arnaz Jr.? Did she ever have his son, in or out of marriage? How many times has she been married anyway?—Mish Morrow, East St. Louis, Ill.

A. Patty Duke, 40, has been married four times to date, but never to Desi Arnaz Jr. Nor has she ever borne his son. Her two boys—Sean, 16, and Mackenzie, 14—are both from her third marriage, to the actor John Astin. In 1985, while filming a TV production at Fort Benning, Ga., she fell in love with Army Sgt. Michael Pearce, whom she took as her latest husband in March 1986. Pearce, 32, currently is Patty's business associate and resides with her and her sons in Los Angeles.

Q. How old is Joan Baez? Was she ever married to singer Bob Dylan? Is she AC/DC?—B.R., Piedmont, Calif.

A. Vocalist Joan Baez, born Jan. 9, 1941, on Staten Island, N.Y., was linked romantically and professionally with Bob Dylan in the 1960s. In 1968, however, she married David Harris, a Stanford University anti-war and civil-rights activist who later pulled a jail term for draft resistance. They were divorced in 1973. In her recently published memoir, "And a Voice to Sing With," Baez writes frankly of her one love affair with a woman when she was 22. Joan Baez is heterosexual.

The Commission on the Bicentennial of the United States Constitution announces

The Constitution Bowl

Commemorating the 200th anniversary of the signing of the Constitution—the unique document that established the liberties of all Americans

A single limited edition, available exclusively from Lenox

It stands as the greatest achievement in the progress of human liberty. And today—two centuries later—the birth of the United States Constitution, in 1787, remains a monument to the wisdom of our Founders. For this remarkable document managed to forge thirteen proudly independent states into a single union... and has become the most enduring national constitution in history.

Now, to celebrate that momentous event, the Bicentennial Commission has authorized the creation of a magnificent 10½-inch commemorative bowl honoring each of the thirteen original states.

The Constitution Bowl will be crafted here in America of Lenox® fine ivory china, and will portray the official flowers of all thirteen states. Elegantly bordered with pure 24 karat gold, the bowl is a masterpiece worthy of the occasion. A work of art to be displayed and enjoyed for its great beauty...and for its lasting significance to this and future generations of Americans.

In keeping with its importance, The Constitution Bowl will be issued in a single, limited edition available only until the end of this, the Bicentennial Year. The base of the bowl will bear the official emblem of the Commission. And each bowl will be accompanied by a signed Certificate of Authenticity to confirm its status as a limited edition commemorative issued under the auspices of the Commission.

To enter your advance reservation, simply mail the accompanying application directly to Lenox by October 5, 1987. Or, for your convenience, on credit card orders call TOLL FREE, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week (including Sundays), 1-800-537-1600 ext. 907.

A MUST FOR EVERY HOME!

ONLY $5!

For centuries man has been fascinated with wind toys, which date back to ancient China. Starting as an aid to forecast the weather, wind toys have become an international art form. Among these, the popular Whirligig Duck is a longtime American classic.

Delight everyone as they watch the Whirligig Duck's wings revolve in the slightest breeze as if in actual flight! Perfect for hanging outside your kitchen or living room window, over your patio or porch, next to your swimming pool, or anywhere the wind blows! The Whirligig Duck has an 11" wing span, and a 10" body and is beautifully decorated in vibrant colors—and because it's weather resistant, it's durable as well! No home should be without the Whirligig Duck—the ultimate outdoor conversation piece!

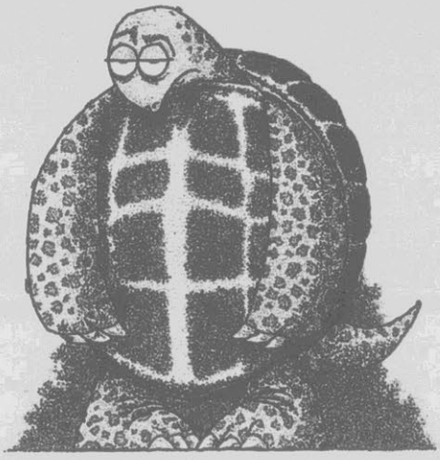
IF YOU HAVE DIARRHEA, HURRY AND READ THIS

Your problem stems from an excess of water in the bowel. New Equalactin™ relieves diarrhea by absorbing that excess water. So chew two Equalactin tablets. And hurry!



IF YOU HAVE CONSTIPATION, TAKE YOUR TIME AND THINK THIS OVER

Your problem stems from too little water in the bowel. New Equalactin relieves constipation by adding bulk to retain needed water. Restoring more normal bowel movements.

A little water makes a lot of difference. In fact, just a 10% variation in the water content of the stool can make the difference between diarrhea and constipation.

That's why if you suffer from symptoms of an irritable bowel, you may have diarrhea one day, and constipation on another.

Now there's a single new medicine that's proven safe and effective for relief of diarrhea or constipation.

Introducing, new Equalactin.

New Equalactin actually equalizes the delicate water balance in the bowel.

For gentle, predictable relief of constipation... chew two Equalactin tablets...and drink a full glass of water.

Then just relax... and think about something else for a while.

Capture the Spirit of America's Indian Youth

• From the reigning master of American Indian Art

• Actual size: 8½"
• 24K gold rim

BRAVE & FREE by PERILLO

The legends and customs of America's Indians have long held a fascination for us all. They are a proud people who have great respect for nature and her animals, and who teach their children these same values.

In this fine porcelain, limited-edition plate, Gregory Perillo—one of today's foremost Indian-subject artists—captures the kindred spirit between a young Blackfoot boy and a proud eagle. The exquisite detail in both subjects brings this plate painting to life—depicting the determination and strength these friends share.

Notable History of Appreciation

Perillo's breathtakingly realistic originals have earned sustained praise in the art market, and are so highly sought that they often multiply in value within months. Several of his previous offerings in the limited-edition plate field have seen prompt sell-outs and secondary market appreciation up to 746%!

Now The Hamilton Collection is privileged to offer "Brave and Free," the first issue in The Pride of America's Indians Plate Collection—a series of eight plates, each depicting an Indian child and animal from a different well-known tribe. "Brave and Free" is experiencing broad demand as collectors take advantage of this limited opportunity to own an affordable Perillo masterwork.

As an original issue owner, you will have the right—but not the obligation—to acquire all the plates as they are issued. Furthermore, under The Hamilton Collection 100% Buy-Back Guarantee, you may return any plate within 30 days of receipt for a full refund, releasing your series rights.

Each "Brave and Free" plate will be hand-numbered and accompanied by a same-numbered Certificate of Authenticity. Priced at an affordable $24.50, the edition is limited to a total of 10 firing days.

Prompt Response Suggested

But remember—the popularity of Perillo's art and the appeal of this superb plate has resulted in widespread demand for "Brave and Free." So to secure a reservation within the limited edition, you should respond promptly. To avoid any chance of disappointment, order today!

Norman Mailer Brings Tough Guys to Screen

Debra Sandlund, Ryan O'Neal in Tough Guys

Norman Mailer not only is a great writer, he's a guy with guts. First, he directs the movie of his own novel Tough Guys Don't Dance, a complicated Gothic tale of sexual obsession and murder. Then, along with the horror, he goes for laughs with these characters: an anguished writer who finds a human head in his marijuana stash and can't remember if he put it there; his greedy, philandering wife; a strange cop; a dying father; and assorted creeps, killers, crazies and drug dealers (not necessarily in that order). And, amazingly, he pulls it off. Yes, a headless nude corpse, vulgar language, suicide—and the movie (although certain to offend many) is a lot of fun. Cannon.

TELEVISION

It Can Take Courage To Go to School

Degrassi Junior High is a new PBS series about the emotionally charged everyday crises of 12- to 14-year-olds. But the young actors and stories are so authentic and appealing that the program may well develop a broad following. Its purpose is to comfort young people, who see their concerns portrayed realistically, and to help them make informed choices. It will strike you how much courage a child sometimes needs just to deal with the school day. Saturday at 7 p.m., but check listings, as date may vary.

AN IMPORTANT NOTICE TO ALL AMERICANS OVER 30 WHO DO NOT YET HAVE A WILL

Your complete LEGAL WILL drawn up– only $9

- LEGALLY VALID IN ALL 50 STATES.
- FEATURED ON TV AND IN NEWSPAPERS FROM COAST-TO-COAST.
- ALREADY USED BY OVER 500,000 AMERICANS.

In just 30 minutes, you can now protect your family (and save them huge problems and potentially-huge expenses) with an iron-clad, legally-valid will.

Up to now, it would have cost you and your family up to $150.00 (and possibly much more) to have your Will drawn up. Now, with the AMERICAN WILL KIT, you can have your complete Legal Will and save up to $140.00 and more (for both husband and wife).

Prepared by a team of legal experts, the highly acclaimed AMERICAN WILL KIT allows you to draw up your own Legal Will quickly and easily without an attorney—guaranteeing you a safe Estate Plan. It provides your family with everything you want for them.

Whatever your status—married, single, divorced, widowed—make sure you protect your family. MAKE SURE YOU HAVE A WILL BEFORE IT'S TOO LATE. (Keep in mind this important fact: Without a Will, the Court decides—not you—who inherits your Estate and who becomes guardian of your minor children.)

able Guide, written by an attorney, gives you important tips and special information that can be worth hundreds, even thousands of dollars, to you and your family.

This remarkable Kit is considered so beneficial, it has been featured on television and in newspapers throughout America—and already, over 500,000 people have used it.

IMPORTANT

Without a Will, the court (not you) will determine the outcome of your estate. Don't risk what you've worked a lifetime to earn.

EVERYTHING YOU NEED— FOR ONLY $9

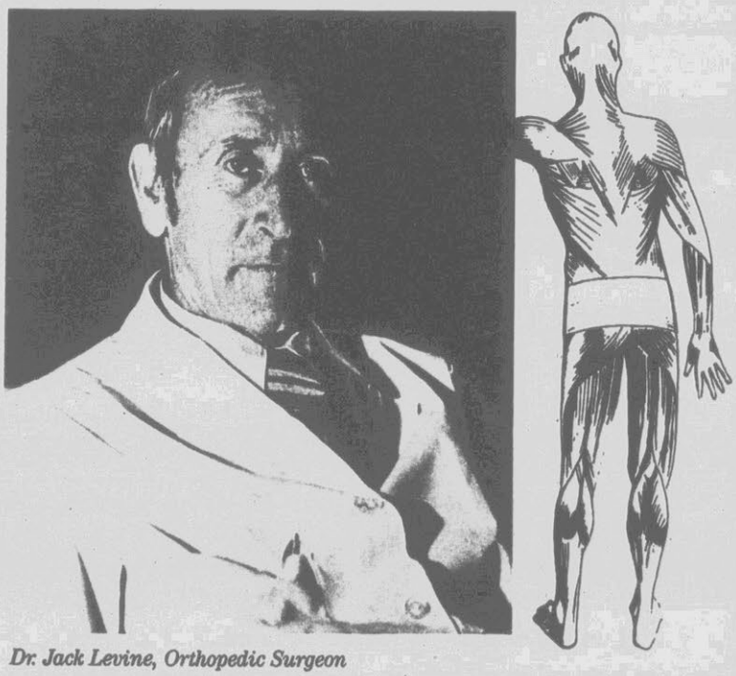
Do You Have A BAD BACK?

10,000,000 Americans do. Now the same orthopedist who's already helped thousands live without pain can help you get relief from back pain.



Dr. Jack Levine, Orthopedic Surgeon

Getting out of bed in the morning. Bending, lifting, sitting for long periods. Walking. Sitting down all day at work. Driving a car. Even these simple activities can be excruciatingly painful when you have a bad back.

But now there's relief. Real relief. From the same orthopedic surgeon who gave relief to over 100,000 people with painful knee problems. Dr. Jack Levine, Former Director of the Department of Orthopedic Surgery, Brookdale Hospital, Brooklyn, N.Y. and inventor of the now-famous Levine Knee Strap.

Using the same simple, but remarkably effective principles, Dr. Jack Levine has designed a back support that's revolutionary in design and effect.

Rather than an unsightly, cumbersome girdle or chafing harness, Dr. Levine has designed a simple, lightweight support to be worn over the widest area of the pelvis (Dr. Levine: "The pelvis is the spine's anchor"). Supporting precisely that area of the spine has proven effective in treating most lower back complaints.

The key to the Levine Back Support is that it provides support where it's needed.

And because the placement of the support at the base of the spine is so effective, it eliminates the need for bulky, unsightly devices.

The Levine Back Support weighs only 3 ounces. It won't be conspicuous under clothing and is completely adjustable so that one size fits all. In no way will it interfere with walking, sitting, or hamper your mobility. Since it's so simple to use and so comfortable, you can literally forget you're wearing it.

Better yet, it can help you forget you have a bad back.

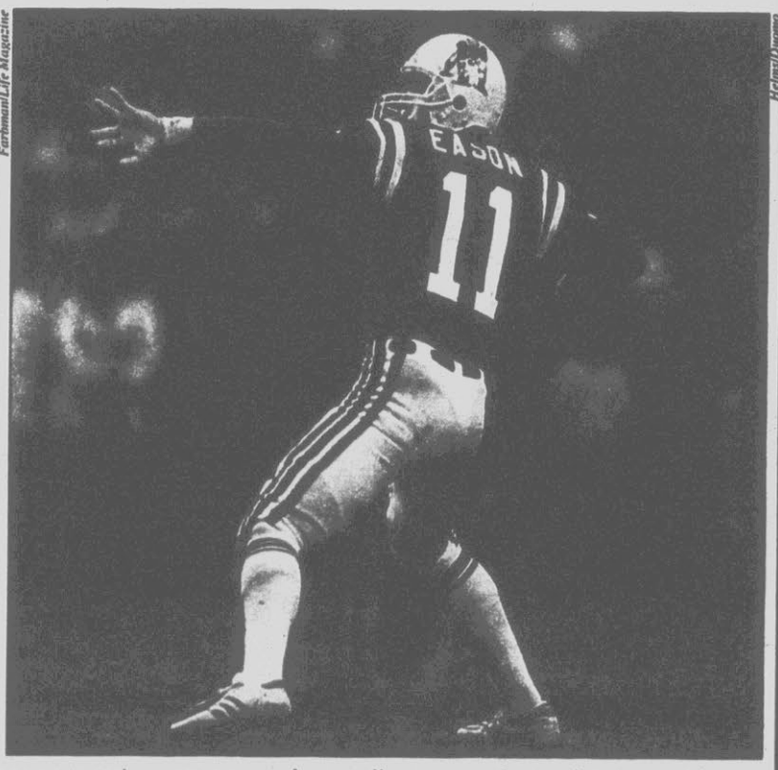
GAME

THE PREHISTORIC ORIGIN OF SPORTS

Farbman/Life Magazine



Helms/Duomo

WE CAN'T HELP OURSELVES. ON SUNDAY AFTERNOONS and Monday nights in the fall of each year, we abandon everything to watch small moving images of 22 men—running into one another, falling down, picking themselves up and kicking an elongated object made from the skin of an animal. Every now and then, both the players and the sedentary spectators are moved to rapture or despair by the progress of the play. All over America, people (mainly men), transfixed before glass screens, cheer or mutter in unison. Put this way, it sounds stupid. But once you get the hang of it, it's hard to resist, and I speak from experience.

Athletes run, jump, hit, slide, throw, kick, tackle—and there's a thrill in seeing humans do it so well. They wrestle each other to the ground. They're keen on grabbing or clubbing or kicking a fast-moving brown or white thing. In some games, they try to herd the thing toward what's called a "goal"; in other games, the players run away and then return "home." Teamwork is almost everything, and we admire how the parts fit together to make a jubilant whole.

But these are not the skills most of us use to earn our daily bread. Why should we feel compelled to watch people run or hit? Why is this need transcultural? (Ancient Egyptians, Persians, Greeks, Romans, Mayans and Aztecs also played ball. "Polo" is Tibetan.)

There are sports stars who make 10 times the annual salary of the President; who are themselves, after retirement, elected to high office. They are national heroes. Why, exactly? There is something here transcending the diversity of political, social and economic systems. Something ancient is calling.

Most major sports are associated with a nation or a city, and they carry with them elements of patriotism and civic pride. Our team represents us—where we live, our people—against those other guys from some different place, populated by unfamiliar, maybe hostile people. (True, most of "our" players are not really from here. They're mercenaries and with clear conscience regularly defect from opposing cities for suitable emolument: A Pittsburgh Pirate is reformed into a California Angel; a San Diego Padre is raised to a St. Louis Cardinal; a Golden State Warrior is crowned a Sacramento King. Occasionally, a whole team picks up and migrates to another city.)

Our worldwide passion for sports goes back to our beginnings as hunters and gatherers

Competitive sports are symbolic conflicts, thinly disguised. This is hardly a new insight. The Cherokees called their ancient form of lacrosse "the little brother of war." Or here is Max Rafferty, former California Superintendent of Public Instruction, who, after denouncing critics of college football as "kooks, crumbums, commies, hairy loudmouthed beatniks," goes on to state, "Football is war without killing . . . Football players . . . possess a clear, bright, fighting spirit which is America itself." (That's worth mulling over.) An often-quoted sentiment of the late coach Vince Lombardi is that the only thing that counts is winning. Former Washington Redskins' coach George Allen put it this way: "Losing is like death."

Indeed, we talk of winning and losing a war as naturally as we do of winning and losing a game. In a televised U.S. Army recruitment ad, we see the aftermath of an armored warfare exercise in which one tank destroys another; in the tag line, the victorious tank commander says, "When we win, the whole team wins, the whole tank wins—not one person." The connection between sports and combat is made quite clear. Sports fans (the word is short for "fanatics") have been known to commit assault and battery, and sometimes murder, when taunted about a losing team; or when prevented from cheering on a winning team; or when they feel an injustice has been committed by the referees.

The British prime minister was obliged in 1985 to denounce the rowdy, drunken behavior of British soccer fans who attacked an Italian contingent for having the effrontery to root for their own team. Dozens were killed when the stands collapsed. In 1969, after three hard-fought soccer games, Salvadoran tanks crossed the Honduran border, and Salvadoran bombers attacked Honduran ports and military bases. In this "Soccer War," the casualties numbered in the thousands.

Afghani tribesmen played polo with the severed heads of former adversaries. And 600 years ago, in what is now Mexico City, there was a ball court where gorgeously attired nobles watched uniformed teams compete. The captain of the losing team was beheaded, and the skulls of earlier losing captains were displayed on racks—an inducement possibly even more compelling than winning one for the Gipper.

Suppose you're idly flipping the dial on your television set, and you come upon some competition in which you have no particular emotional investment—say, off-season volleyball between Burma and Thailand. How do you decide which team to root for? But wait a minute: Why root for either? Why not just enjoy the game? Most of us have trouble with this detached posture. We want to take part in the contest, to feel ourselves a member of a team. The feeling simply sweeps us away, and there we are rooting, "Go, Burma!" Initially, our loyalties may oscillate, first urging on one team and then the other. Sometimes we root for the underdog. Other times, shamefully, we even switch our allegiance from loser to winner as the outcome becomes clear. (When there is a succession of losing seasons, fan loyalties tend to drift elsewhere.) What we are looking for is victory without effort. We want to be swept up into something like a small, safe, successful war.

The earliest known organized athletic events date back 3500 years to preclassical Greece. During the original Olympic Games, an armistice put all wars among Greek city-states on hold. The games were more important than the wars. The men performed nude; no women spectators were allowed. By the eighth century B.C., the Olympic Games consisted of running (lots of running), jumping, throwing things (including javelins) and wrestling (sometimes to the death). While none of these events was a team sport, they were clearly central to modern team sports.

They were also central to low-technology hunting. Hunting is traditionally considered a sport, as long as you don't eat what you catch—a proviso much easier for the rich to comply with than the poor. From the earliest pharaohs, hunting has been associated with military aristocracies. Oscar Wilde's aphorism about English fox hunting, "the unspeakable in full pursuit of the uneatable," makes a similar dual point. The forerunners of football, soccer, hockey and kindred sports were so-called "rabble games," recognized as substitutes for hunting—because young men who worked for a living were barred from the hunt.

So, perhaps team sports are not just stylized echoes of ancient wars. Perhaps they also satisfy an almost-forgotten craving for the hunt. Since our passions for sports run so deep and are so broadly distributed, they are likely to be hard-wired into us—not in our brains but in our genes. The 10,000 years since the invention of agriculture is not nearly enough time for such predispositions to have evolved. If we want to understand them, we must go much further back.

The human species is hundreds of thousands of years old. We have led a sedentary existence—based on farming and domestication of animals—for only the last 3 percent of that period, during which is all our history. In the first 97 percent of our tenure on Earth, almost everything that is characteristically human came into being. We can learn something about those times from the few surviving hunter-gatherer communities uncorrupted by civilization.

* * *

We wander. With our little ones and all our belongings on our backs, we wander—following the game, seeking the waterholes. We set up camp for a while, then move on. In providing food for the group, the men mainly hunt, the women mainly gather. Meat and potatoes. A typical itinerant band, mainly an extended family of relatives and in-laws, numbers a few dozen; although annually many hundreds of us, with the same language and culture, gather—for religious ceremonies, to trade, to arrange marriages, to tell stories. There are many stories about the hunt.

I'm focusing here on the hunters, who are men. But women have significant social, economic and cultural power. They gather the essential staples—nuts, fruits, tubers, roots—as well as medicinal herbs, hunt small animals and provide strategic intelligence on large animal movements. Men do some gathering as well, and considerable "housework" (even though we have no houses). But hunting—only for food, never for sport—is the lifelong occupation of every able-bodied male.

Preadolescent boys stalk birds and small mammals with bows and arrows. By adulthood they have become experts in weapons-procurement; in stalking, killing and butchering the prey; and in carrying the cuts of meat back to camp. The first successful kill of a large mammal marks a young man's coming of age. In his initiation, ceremonial incisions are made on his chest or arms and an herb is rubbed into the cuts so that, when healed, a patterned tattoo results. It's like campaign ribbons—one look at his chest, and you know something of his combat experience.

From a jumble of hoofprints, we can accurately tell how many animals passed; the species, sexes and ages; whether any are lame; how long ago they passed; how far away they are. Some young animals can be caught by open-field tackles; others with slingshots or boomerangs, or just by throwing rocks accurately and hard. Animals that have not yet learned to fear man can be approached boldly and clubbed to death. At greater distances, for warier prey, we hurl spears or shoot poisoned arrows. Sometimes we're lucky and, by a skillful rush, drive a herd of animals into an ambush or off a cliff.

Teamwork among the hunters is essential. If we are not to frighten the quarry, we must communicate by sign language. For the same reason, we need to have our emotions under control; both fear and exultation are dangerous. We are ambivalent about the prey. We respect the animals, recognize our kinship, identify with them. But if we reflect too closely on their intelligence or devotion to their young, if we feel pity for them, our dedication to the hunt will slacken; we will bring home less food, and again our band may be endangered. We are obliged to put an emotional distance between us and them.

* * *

So contemplate this: For a million years, our male ancestors are scampering about, throwing rocks at pigeons, running after baby antelopes and wrestling them to the ground, forming a single line of shouting, running hunters and trying to terrify a herd of startled warthogs upwind. Imagine that their lives depend on hunting skills and teamwork. And good hunters were also good warriors. Then, after a long while—a few thousand centuries, say—a natural predisposition for both hunting and teamwork will inhabit many newborn boys. Why? Because incompetent or unenthusiastic hunters leave fewer offspring. I don't think how to chip a spearpoint out of stone or how to feather an arrow is in our genes. That's taught or figured out. But a zest for the chase—I bet that is hard-wired. Natural selection helped mold our ancestors into superb hunters.

The clearest evidence of the success of the hunter-gatherer lifestyle is the simple fact that it extended to six continents and lasted a million years. After 40,000 generations in which the killing of animals was our hedge against starvation, those inclinations must still be in us. We hunger to put them to use, even vicariously. Team sports provide a way.

Some part of our being longs to join a small band of brothers on a daring and intrepid quest. The traditional manly virtues—taciturnity, resourcefulness, modesty, consistency, deep knowledge of animals, love of the outdoors—were all adaptive behavior in hunter-gatherer times. We still admire these traits, although we've almost forgotten why.

Teams and Totems

Teams associated with cities have names: the Seibu Lions, the Detroit Tigers, the Chicago Bears. Lions and tigers and bears . . . eagles and seahawks . . . flames and suns. Allowing for the difference in environment and culture, hunter-gatherer groups worldwide have similar names—sometimes called totems.

A typical list of totems, mainly from the era before European contact, was recorded by the anthropologist Richard Lee in his many years among the !Kung San people of the Kalahari desert in Botswana (see below at far right). The Short Feet, I think, are cousins to the Red Sox and White Sox, the Fighters to the Raiders, the Wildcats to the Bengals, the Cutters to the Clippers. Of course there are differences—due, perhaps, to varying endowments of candor, self-knowledge and sense of humor. It's hard to imagine an American sports team named the Diarrheas ("Gimme a 'D' . . . "). Or even the Big Talkers. And one in which the players are called the Owners would probably cause some consternation in the front office.

Imagine that your life depends on hunting skills and teamwork

Besides sports, there are few outlets available. In our adolescent males, we can still recognize the young hunter, the aspirant warrior—leaping across apartment rooftops; riding, helmetless, on a motorcycle; making trouble for the winning team at a post-game celebration. In the absence of a steadying hand, those old instincts may go a little askew (although our murder rate is about the same as among the !Kung). We try to ensure that any residual zest for killing does not spill over onto humans. We don't always succeed.

I think of how powerful those hunting instincts are, and I worry. I worry that Monday-night football is insufficient outlet for the modern hunter-gatherer, decked out in his overalls or uniform or three-piece suit. I think of that ancient legacy about not expressing our feelings, about keeping an emotional distance from those we kill, and it takes some of the fun out of the game.

Hunter-gatherers generally posed no danger to themselves: because their economies tended to be healthy (many had more free time than we do); because, as nomads, they had few possessions, almost no theft and little envy; because greed and arrogance were not only social evils but also pretty close to mental illnesses; because women had real political power and tended to be a stabilizing and mitigating influence before the boys started going for their poisoned arrows; and because, when serious crimes were committed—murder, say—the band collectively rendered judgment and punishment. Hunter-gatherers organized egalitarian democracies. They had no chiefs. There was no political or corporate hierarchy to dream of climbing. There was no one to revolt against.

So, if we're stranded a few hundred centuries from when we long to be—if (through no fault of our own) we find ourselves, in an age of nuclear weapons, with Pleistocene emotions but without Pleistocene social safeguards—perhaps we can be excused for a little Monday-night football.

A good anecdotal summary of professional sports and its admirers is Fans! by Michael Roberts (New Republic Book Co., 1976). A classic study of hunter-gatherer society is The !Kung San by Richard Borshay Lee (Cambridge U. Press, 1979). Most of the hunter-gatherer customs mentioned in this article apply to the !Kung and to many other nonmarginal hunter-gatherer cultures worldwide—before they were destroyed by civilization.

BORN: July 28, 1916, in New York City.
PERSONAL: Married to Liberty LeGacy, 1940-51; one son. Married to Wayne Clark, 1951-57. Married to Helen Gurley since 1959.
PRODUCER: Films include The Sting, 1973; Sssssss, 1973; Sugarland Express, 1974; The Girl From Petrovka, 1974; Jaws, 1975; The Eiger Sanction, 1975; MacArthur, 1977; Jaws II, 1978; The Island, 1980; The Verdict, 1982; Cocoon, 1985; Target, 1985.

QUICK! WHO WORKED ON THE FOLLOWING blockbuster movies? Jaws, The Sting, Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid, Cocoon, The Sound of Music, Planet of the Apes, *M*A*S*H* and The French Connection.

The answer: Richard Zanuck and David Brown. We know about Zanuck. His daddy was Darryl Zanuck, who ran 20th Century-Fox. But David Brown? Even the name is plain. Oh, yes, isn't he the husband of Helen Gurley Brown, who writes all those books about sex and edits Cosmopolitan?

David Brown is a courtly, 71-year-old New Yorker with a white mustache whose first exposure to showbiz was at Fairchild Publications' Women's Wear Daily in the 1930s. "I was working on the copy desk and used to fill in as third-string theater critic," he says. "The first-string critic covered the Broadway musicals, the second-string critic covered the night-club acts, and I got to cover Shakespeare and Eugene O'Neill."

After serving in the Army, he edited magazines (including Cosmo, though he didn't meet Helen there—he met her in Hollywood in 1958) before being lured to Hollywood by Darryl Zanuck as a story editor, picking out ideas for films Zanuck would make. There were fits and starts, and he came back to New York to write and edit books, including the first James Bond hardcovers. Then he teamed up with young Dick Zanuck at 20th Century-Fox, and they began making hits.

But Hollywood is Hollywood, and both men were summarily fired in a dramatic coup. "By the time I got downstairs," says Brown, "they were already painting out my name in the executive parking lot." The experience so shocked David that, to this day, even in the office of a company he partially owns, he doesn't keep any more books or knickknacks or pictures (including one of Helen) than he can quickly pack into a cardboard box and carry out under his arm.

But being fired turned out to be the best thing that ever happened to Dick and David. On their own, they've made some of the best movies of our time and, in the process, have become very rich men. They work at it. "One of us is on the set every day we're shooting," says David. They count the pennies.

Zanuck lives in California and handles things at that end; Brown lives in a turretlike apartment overlooking New York's Central Park and flies to L.A. when he has to. Whenever a reporter asks David the secret of making a good movie, he admits it's a gamble, like drilling for oil, and then adds with a grin, "But the critics don't review dry holes."

Despite his fortune and Helen's fame, the Browns retain something of a small-town, wide-eyed innocence. One night I took them to dinner at Elaine's, the Manhattan hangout for the stars, of which someone once said, "At Elaine's, all the men are suntanned and all the women are 5 feet 9." I still remember David and Helen nudging one another as famous people came through the door. "Isn't that so-and-so? Isn't that what's-his-name?"

Some of us get spoiled. The Browns have stayed as plain as their last name.

BRADY'S BITS

A couple of years ago, my daughter and I were flying to Los Angeles to attend the Academy Awards. We were in tourist class; the Browns were up front in first class. The Verdict, David's film with Paul Newman, had been nominated. And, by coincidence, The Verdict was being shown on our flight. The instant it was over, David rushed into tourist class. "What did you think? Did you like it?" he asked Fiona. She was still a college kid, but David really wanted to know.

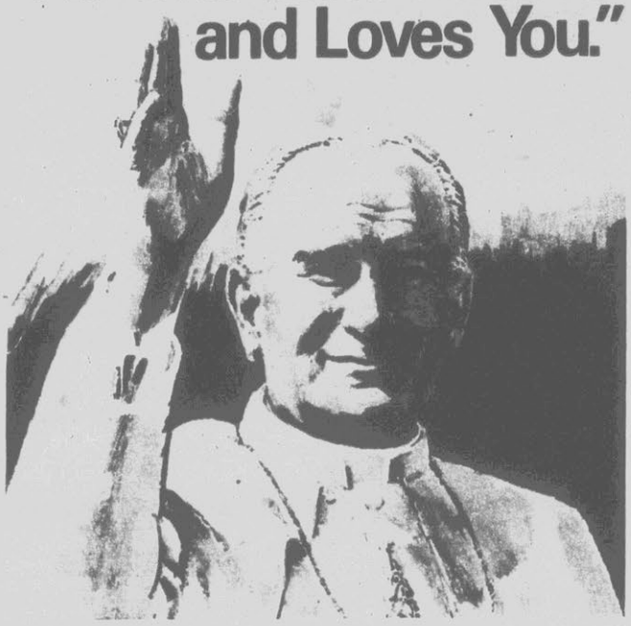
"As One Who Knows and Loves You."



Standing in the rain, but with undampened spirits, Pope John Paul II in Boston in 1979 said: "America has opened her heart to me. And on my part I come to you—America—with sentiments of friendship, reverence and esteem. I come as one who already knows you and loves you..."

This year, 1987, sees Pope John Paul return to our land. His visit revives old questions about the meaning of his office and its relationship to Christ and the Apostles. Hearing Pope John Paul II talk of love, we recall how St. Ambrose in the fourth century called the pope the "Vicar of Christ's love."

For some reflections on the ministry of the Holy Father to the Church and to the world, we are pleased to offer a free copy of our pamphlet: "The Papacy, Expression of God's Love." No one will call on you.

World Communism Marches On

Seventy years after the Russian Revolution erupted in Petrograd, how fares the world communist movement? It's fragmented, splintered, disjointed and decentralized, but its membership continues to grow—from 82.2 million in 1986 to 89.8 million in 1987, an increase of 7.6 million.

The 1987 Yearbook on International Communist Affairs—the authoritative reference book that covers Communist parties, revolutionary movements and Communist-front organizations the world over—recently published a list of the 10 countries with the largest Communist Party memberships. In order, they are:

Country	Membership
China	44,000,000
USSR	18,500,000
Romania	3,557,000
North Korea	2,500,000
East Germany	2,300,000
Yugoslavia	2,168,000
Poland	2,126,000
Czechoslovakia	1,675,000
Italy	1,596,000
Bulgaria	932,000

Where SATs Are No Longer Required

In the U.S., more than 1600 colleges and universities currently require Scholastic Aptitude Test scores from applicants. In the last 20 years, only four colleges have made the SAT scores optional for those high school and secondary school graduates seeking admission. The four are: Bates College in Lewiston, Maine; Bowdoin College in Brunswick, Maine; Middlebury College in Middlebury, Vt.; and Union College in Schenectady, N.Y.

Michael Jackson Quits Witnesses

Boever/Gamma-Liaison

Michael Jackson, in uniform, at gala with his friend Elizabeth Taylor: He's not talking

Members of the congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses in West Woodland Hills, Calif., report that the recent resignation of Michael Jackson from the sect has had no effect on the size of its membership. According to Richard Lucas, an overseer of the San Fernando Valley congregation to which the singer-dancer belonged, Jackson simply said he no longer wished to be known as a Witness.

Formally known as The Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society, the religious sect was founded in the U.S. in 1872 by Charles Taze Russell, whose followers were then called Russellites. The group's doctrine centers on the second coming of Christ, and each Witness is considered a minister of God.

Since he "dissociated" himself from the Jehovah's Witnesses a few months ago, Jackson, 29, has declined to discuss his decision.

Castro's Surgery a Mystery

Fidel Castro at Olympic tryouts in Cuba this June—shortly before the reported house call from Cairo

Several months ago, Dr. Ahmed Shafik, a world-famous proctologist who specializes in rectal surgery, flew to Havana. There, according to Al Ahram, Egypt's semi-official newspaper, Dr. Shafik performed emergency surgery on Fidel Castro, 60, Cuba's president.

Ever since he returned to Cairo in July, Dr. Shafik has been questioned by journalists and others—presumably intelligence agents—as to the nature and seriousness of the surgery. Everything from the removal of Castro's prostate gland to hemorrhoids has been suggested as a possible cause. To date, however, Dr. Shafik has provided no information.

The Ever-Shrinking List

Alaska, our largest state and the 49th to enter the Union, is the only one that levies neither a state personal income tax nor a state sales tax on its residents. Florida, Nevada, South Dakota, Texas, Washington and Wyoming impose no state personal income tax, while Delaware, Montana, New Hampshire and Oregon are free of state sales taxes.

The Government Okays New Hearts

Under recently approved guidelines, the federal government has agreed to reimburse hospitals for performing heart transplants on Medicare patients. But before Medicare will pick up the sizable tabs—generally $100,000 to $200,000 per case—the hospital will have to qualify as an approved heart-transplant site. That's no easy matter. Under terms of the guidelines, for example, an approved hospital must have performed heart transplants on at least 12 patients during each of the two preceding years and on another dozen patients prior to that. Moreover, 73% of those heart-transplant patients must have survived for at least one year, 65% of them for two years.

Those U.S. hospitals with the most experience in heart transplanting have applied for government approval. At this writing, eight have been certified: Stanford University Medical Center in Palo Alto, Calif., where more than 500 heart transplants have been performed since 1968; Baylor College of Medicine in Houston; the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond; the University of Minnesota Hospital in Minneapolis; the University of Arizona Health Sciences Center in Tucson; Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore; Methodist Hospital in Indianapolis; and Loyola University Medical Center, outside Chicago.

Late last year, the government reclassified heart transplants from an experimental surgical procedure to one that is "reasonable and necessary" and agreed, when strict screening requirements were met, to pay for the surgery. How many heart transplants Medicare will pay for under the new guidelines is anyone's guess.

Airport Slot Machines

Hank de Lespinasse

Tourists take one last shot at a fortune before flying out of Las Vegas

One of the major gambling concessions in Las Vegas consists of approximately 350 slot machines strategically positioned throughout McCarran International Airport. In fiscal 1986-87, the airport slots grossed $11 million, an all-time high.

The concessionaire who operates the airport slots is Michael Gaughan, co-owner of the Barbary Coast and Gold Coast hotel/casinos. Under his contract with Clark County, Nev., in which the airport is situated, Gaughan pays all the expenses and taxes in exchange for 23.9% of the gross, while the county takes the remaining 76.1%. Most of the slot-machine revenue at the airport comes from tourists waiting to depart.

Women and Books

For the past three years in this country, more women than men have purchased books. Last year, of the adults who bought books, 56% were women. Generally, females purchase more fiction (49%) than nonfiction (38%). Of the fiction they buy, the most popular category is romance.

These are some of the results of a Gallup Poll printed in Publishers Weekly and based on 6177 telephone interviews last year with women 18 and older.

'A Year In The Life' Becomes A Series

By Evan Levine

Call it Cosby with a twist: The modern, extended family is one of the hottest commodities on TV this season. Not just the typical nuclear family, but ex-wives, former lovers and best friends are all hanging around the old homestead these days. Into the fray comes "A Year in the Life," spun off from the acclaimed miniseries starring Richard Kiley. The miniseries followed a middle-class family from one Christmas to the next; the NBC series (premiering Wednesday, Sept.16) will pick up with the now-widowed patriarch (Kiley) and his four children.

"The show won't be so obviously seasonal," says Adam Arkin, who plays patent attorney Jim Eisenberg (Kiley's son-in-law) on the series. "The fact that the mini-series went from one Christmas to the next was really just to give it boundaries. I think it did a fine job of elevating reality, and I hope we keep that up. This will be more day to day life, and you'll see more facets of the characters."

Arkin is pleased with the way the series is developing, but says it's eerie how the life of his character parallels his own life. "It's felt very familiar," says Arkin. "Both Jim and I were preparing for a baby, and we both had a girl. On the show, the child was named after the mother-in-law; my daughter's middle name is after my mother-in-law."

The similarities are so easy to play, in fact, that Arkin worries that his character won't develop as much as he'd like. "Jim tends to have fairly comedic material written for him," explains Arkin. "I enjoy comedy, but I'm making a conscious effort not to settle for that. I don't want people to say 'Oh, this is the comedy part' when I come on. People are quick to peg you.

"When we started filming, the producers called everyone into their office to discuss characters and ask if we had any questions. I just had one. I asked the producers if they foresaw a time when my character would develop more of an edge. I won't tell you what happens, but I will tell you that they said yes."

NBC's "A Year in the Life," spun off from the acclaimed miniseries, stars (clockwise from top l.) Wendy Phillips, Jayne Atkinson, Adam Arkin, Richard Kiley and Trey Ames. The series debuts Wednesday, Sept. 16.

Here Arkin pauses. "Is the interview over?" he asks. When he's informed it is, he says he wants to say something. "You're the first person who hasn't asked me about my father (actor Alan Arkin)," he says. "Thank you."

For Arkin, with an actor father to follow and a character whose life may be following his own, it's one of the only times in his professional career when his life isn't completely entangled with someone else's.

Michele Will Tell

Dear Michele: What's happened to the on-and-off TV career of John Stamos? — BOBBIE JO WILSON, LEVITTOWN, PENN.

Stamos's two prime-time series, "Dreams" and "You, Again?," have not been ratings-busters. In fact, the former "General Hospital" star was seriously thinking about abandoning TV in favor of a movie career. ABC, however, decided to cast him in its new fall series, "Full House." He'll portray a tough guy helping his brother-in-law raise three (motherless) daughters.

Dear Michele: Please give me a brief biography of Barbara Hale, who played Della Street on "Perry Mason." — DR. G.E. MICHELS, HENDERSON, N.C.

Hale was born April 18, 1921, in DeKalb, Ill. The family moved to Chicago in 1940 where Hale worked as a stock clerk at Marshall Field's and studied commercial art at the Chicago Academy ofFine Arts. Her dream was to work as an animator for Disney Studios, but once she began modeling there was no longer any time for art. Hale's acting career blossomed out of a modeling job. She met her future husband, actor Bill Williams, at an acting class at RKO Studios. After setting her sights on Williams, Hale recalls, "I was cast in a picture called 'Lady Luck' with Robert Young. Bill was a national swimming champion when he was 17, and I asked him if he would give me some diving lessons. I knew full well what I was doing. I wanted to meet him." They married in 1946, and are theparents of two daughters, Jody and Nita, and one son, actor William Katt. Williams convinced his wife to do the "Perry Mason" series because he felt the series wouldn't last more than a few weeks.Hale wanted to stay home and be a housewife. But today, she's still playing Della in the successful "Perry Mason" TV movies.

Dear Michele: I loved Linda Fiorentino in "Vision Quest" and "Gotcha!" Where is she from, and how did she come by that sexy voice? — REGINALD HUMPHREY, YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO

Fiorentino, 29, was raised in South Philadelphia, and later moved to Turnersville, N.J. The original ambition of this 1980 graduate of Rosemont (Villanova's sister school) was to be a lawyer. But she abandoned her visions of becoming the female Clarence Darrow and moved to Manhattan to pursue an acting career. Fiorentino nabbed an agent and beat out Rosanna Arquette, Demi Moore and Rebecca de Mornay for the role of Carla in "Vision Quest" (1985). She attributes her throaty voice to "the wear and tear of years of smoking and cheerleading."

Series Schedule

Next month, NBC will broadcast major-league baseball's American League and National League championship series, and ABC will air the World Series. NBC's playoff coverage will begin on Oct. 6 and conclude with seventh games (if necessary) on Oct. 14 and 15. The World Series will air on ABC beginning Oct. 17, with Game One scheduled for the home park of the American league champion. This year's Series may feature the first day game in three years: Game Six (if necessary) will begin at 3:30 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 24.

Late Addition

Former "Capitol" star Deborah Mullowney has joined the cast of the new ABC series "Hooperman," which premieres Sept. 23. Mullowney will play a woman who is hired by Hooperman (series star John Ritter) to maintain his newly inherited apartment house. "Hooperman" is produced by Steven Bochco and Terry Louise Fisher ("Hill Street Blues," "L.A. Law").

TV Chatter

It's tough to be just another pretty face in a country that gave the world such great actors as Laurence Olivier, John Gielgud and Michael Redgrave. Amanda Pays, who plays Max's boss Theora on ABC's "Max Headroom," was a top model in England who found doors slamming in her gorgeous face when she tried to branch out into acting. "There's a terrrible stigma against good-looking actors in England," Pays says, apparently forgetting such beautiful Brits as Oscar-winner Julie Christie. "In Britain you're not taken seriously by casting directors," the 28-year-old Pays adds. "Think about the stars in the rest of the world. In France you have Catherine Deneuve. In England, we just can't deal with those glamorous stars. Because of the way I look, people thought I couldn't act my way out of a Hefty trash bag." Pays has found it even more difficult to act her way out of a computer glitch, which is what her co-star on "Max Headroom" basically is. Because of the show's special effects, the actress often finds herself speaking to a blank computer screen. Max's image is added later. "It's very weird for me as an actor. One tends to relate to Max as a one-dimensional 'thing' even though you have to treat him like a human being." In case you were wondering, Pays finally overcame her handicap of good looks with some help from her father, a top agent in Britain.

During the past two seasons, veteran New York stage actor Jerry Orbach has guest-starred twice on "Murder, She Wrote" as sleazy private eye Harry McGraw. Harry was so incompetent that Jessica Fletcher (Angela Lansbury) had to step in and solve his cases for him. Now that the character has been spun off to his own CBS series, "The Law and Harry McGraw," Harry will be less sleazy and more competent. So why was Orbach — who is best known for his role 27 years ago in the off-Broadway musical, "The Fantasticks" — selected for spinoff glory when other "Murder" guest stars (who include Milton Berle and Robert Goulet) may have been more recognizable? Says Orbach: "Originally the producers wanted me to be a recurring sidekick for Angela, but they found the character of Harry so interesting and likable, they decided to give him a series of his own. It's a compliment when you consider all the other wonderful actors who have been on the show." Harry also scored high in audience research testing, Orbach adds.

Dale Robertson, the star of the 1950s Western "Tales of Wells Fargo," is back in harness as the title character in NBC's "J.J. Starbuck." The series, produced by Stephen J. Cannell ("The A-Team"), focuses on Starbuck, a millionaire Texan who likes to help out people in trouble. Unlike other tycoons, who are usually portrayed as mean and devious, Starbuck is a saint. In the pilot, Starbuck commits so many acts of kindness that Michael Landon may sue for plagiarism. In fact, those who have seen the first episode nicknamed the show "Highway to Houston." Robertson, a former prizefighter, wants to downplay Starbuck's angelic nature.

SOAP OPERA WEEK

This 'SB' actress started her career on PBS drama

By Kimberly Redmond

Can you tell me something about Marcy Walker, the actress who portrays Eden Capwell on "Santa Barbara"? – L.T., Fredonia, N.Y.

Marcy Walker

Walker's acting career began when she went to New York from Illinois to audition for a role in the PBS production "Life on the Mississippi." She got the part, and went on to appear as Liza Colby on "All My Children." She appeared in that part for over three years before she gave it up and moved to California. Almost immediately, she landed the role of Eden on "SB."

Walker is married to Billy Warlock, who plays Frankie on "Days of Our Lives."

Where can I write to Deidre Hall since she's no longer portraying Marlena Brady on "Days of Our Lives"? – M.L., Rochester, N.Y.

You can write to Hall, who now co-stars on the NBC series "Our House," c/o Lorimar, 3970 Overland Ave., Culver City, CA 90230.

Deidre Hall

Can you tell me why Lisa Brown (Iva Snyder on "As the World Turns"), gave up her role as Nola Reardon on "Guiding Light"? – S.H., Baton Rouge, La.

At the time Brown had decided to give up her role of Nola, "GL" was going through a change in head writers, so the character was phased out of the show. Ironically, Douglas Marland, the head writer of "ATWT," created both Iva Snyder and Nola Reardon for Brown.

Mr. America

On Saturday, Sept. 19, Gary Collins will host his sixth consecutive "Miss America Pageant," which NBC will air live from Atlantic City. Collins will be joined by former "Good Morning America" correspondent Kathie Lee Gifford, and by three former titlists — Laurel Schaefer (1972), Dorothy Bentham (1977) and the current Miss America, Kellye Cash.

Witches?

Pamela Sue Martin and Tim Matheson will star in "Bay Coven," an NBC movie that will air Oct. 25. The pair play a married couple living in a seaside New England town who suspect that their neighbors are witches. Woody Harrelson ("Cheers"), Susan Ruttan ("L.A. Law") and James B. Sikking ("Hill Street Blues") also star.

Football Fans Rejoice As NFL Gets Underway

By Marty Linehan

The big day is here! It's a day that is fast approaching baseball's first pitch in April, the opening of the trout or hunting season and Christmas Eve when it comes to anticipation. The National Football League officially starts play Sunday, Sept. 13!

You thought they did that six weeks ago? No, they were only practicing — and getting hurt.

While the opening-day schedule doesn't hold too much promise in the National Conference (read that CBS), the American Conference (NBC) celebrates the year's opening with a double-header presentation. Possibly the best game of the day, Seattle vs. Denver, is the tail end of NBC's double-header in many areas.

But the big treat of the week has to be the Sept. 14 season opener of ABC's "Monday Night Football," featuring the Super Bowl XXI champion New York Giants battling the Super Bowl XX champion Chicago Bears. This one might even attract non-football fans.

Added to the ABC telecast will be analyst Dan Dierdorf, who spent last year in the CBS booth explaining how interior linemen tear off the heads of other interior linemen. Dierdorf, a former St.Louis Cardinal interior lineman, helps Al Michaels and Frank Gifford.

On the more genteel side, CBS presents the men's finals of the U.S. Tennis Open, on Sunday, Sept. 13. Pat Summerall, Tony Trabert and John Newcombe follow the bouncing ball.

On Saturday afternoon, Sept. 19, CBS is showing the Georgia Bulldogs-Clemson Tiger game, while ABC follows Boston College's Eagles to Los Angeles for their meeting with the USC Trojans.

NBC has major-league baseball on Saturday, Sept. 19, and it's all American League action. The network covers all the bases in the Eastern Division by showing either the Milwaukee-Detroit game or the Toronto-New York set-to.

And on Sept. 13, ABC starts hyping its 1988 Winter Olympics coverage with "ABC's Olympic Diary." It's a series of 200 colorful 30-second vignettes featuring Olympic action. It will be shown daily through the five months prior to the Winter Olympic Games.

The segments, to be presented in prime time and other selected time slots, will feature such Olympic moments as ice-skater Eric Heiden's five-medal surge in 1980, as well as the U.S. Olympic hockey team's big win that same year.

CASBYs Looking Like A Good Idea Gone Bad

By Bob Remington

Friday night on CBC, we'll find out whether the CASBY Awards are a hip acknowledgement of alternative music or just another good idea gone bad.

The CASBYs (Canadian Artists Selected By You) were begun in 1982 by Brampton, Ont., progressive rock station CFNY as the U-Know Awards, a tongue-in-cheek spoof of the mainstream Juno Awards. They U-Knows focused attention on new Canadian artists who didn't sell enough albums to qualify for a Juno or whose material was too raw for commercial radio. A few years ago, however, things changed. The U-Knows moved to television, were renamed the CASBYs, and it's been downhill ever since.

Although the CASBYs still recognize struggling new artists, critics say widespread national exposure on television has caused the CASBYs to become just another splashy TV awards show. And by all accounts, this year's edition was a gaffe-ridden fiasco. The CASBYs were taped in June before a Toronto audience that paid upwards of $110 a seat to hear artists lip-sync songs for TV and see the top award for best group of the year given to the wrong band.

Prices Effective Thru Sept. 26, 1987

It is our intention to maintain the prices in this circular until Sept. 26, 1987. However, special circumstances beyond our control may make it necessary to increase or reduce the prices before that date. For example, unusual market conditions in many commodities may result in price fluctuations after this circular is issued. In such cases, we reserve the right to revise our prices. You will be notified of the changes at our store prior to processing your purchase.

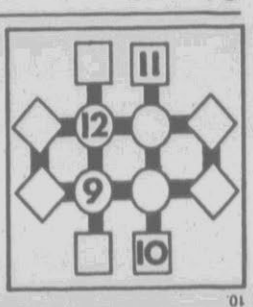
• SUM TEST! Place numbers 1 through 8 in blanks of the diagram at right so that the two horizontal and two vertical rows of four numbers each total 26.

Also, each group of individual shapes — circles, squares and diamonds — must also add up to 26.

Present numbers remain. All spaces must be filled.



Horiz., top row — 2, 11; second — 5, 12, 1, 8; third — 6, 9, 4, 7; bottom — 3, 10.

SQUARE OFF NAMES!

	1	2	3	4
1				A
2				D
3				A
4	A	D	A	M

Four short names can be made to form a word square above — that is, a cluster of words that reads the same across and down.

From the following clues, see if you can determine the four pertinent names:

1. Whatever ... wants she gets, in a popular song.

2. A Roman poet, full name Publius Ovidius Naso.

3. Miss Minnelli, for instance.

4. Chap one of the Bible (name in place).

Time limit: 1 min.

1. Lola 2. Ovid 3. Liza 4. Adam.

• JUMP SHOT! Challenge someone to jump as far as the head of the shadow he or she casts on the pavement. Kazam! When your friend jumps, his or her shadow jumps, too.

WRONG STUFF! Orbitting sports gear isn't the only thing wrong in this dot scene. Insert missing lines.

HOCUS-FOCUS

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Picture is missing. 2. Skirt is shorter. 3. Foot is moved. 4. Collar is smaller. 5. Head is turned. 6. Mat is missing.

PATCH WORK! Apply crayons or colored pencils neatly to this cabbage patch scene: 1—Red. 2—Dk. green. 3—Yellow. 4—Lt. brown. 5—Flesh tones. 6—Lt. green. 7—Dk. brown.

SPELLBINDER

SCORE 10 points for using all the letters in the word below to form two complete words:

CLEMATIS

- - - - - - - -

THEN score 2 points each for all words of four letters or more found among the letters.

Try to score at least 50 points.

Possible anagram: Last, mice.
