160 Feared Dead As Airliner Goes Down In Indian Ocean

By DAVID CRARY
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A South African Airways Boeing jumbo jet carrying 160 people crashed Saturday in the Indian Ocean near Mauritius after its crew reported smoke in the cabin and cockpit. All aboard were feared dead.

The jetliner crashed in early morning darkness minutes before it was to land at Mauritius for a refueling stop en route from Taiwan to Johannesburg.

Another South African Airways plane sent to take rescue officials to the island radioed that wreckage was spotted about 130 miles from Mauritius. An empty life raft and a suitcase were seen, but no sign of survivors.

The passengers came from 11 countries. No Americans were reported aboard.

The airliner was on a regularly scheduled flight from Taipei and was due to land at Mauritius for refueling at 4:13 a.m. before resuming its flight, officials said. Mauritius is an island chain about 500 miles east of Madagascar, a much larger island east of southern Africa.

The cockpit crew last contacted the ground 10 minutes before the scheduled landing, when they told air traffic controllers about an emergency.

The plane "reported that it was doing an emergency descent from its flight level down to 14,000 feet because it had smoke in the cabin, smoke in the cockpit," Mauritius controller Servan Sing told The Associated Press.

He said the jet was cleared to begin an instrument landing system approach.

"It said, 'Roger.' It was going, moving for that, going to that point, and after that we had no contact," he said.

There was no immediate indication what caused the smoke.

Search boats were on their way through heavy swells to the site of the wreck. Officials said planes would rejoin the search at daybreak Sunday, trying to pick up the signal from the box containing the jet's flight data records.

The plane carried 141 passengers and 19 crew. The SAA office in Taipei did not release a full passenger list but said in a statement that those on board included 30 Taiwanese; 47 Japanese; 70 South Africans, including the crew; three from Hong Kong; two Australians; two Mauritians, and one person each from Britain, Denmark, Holland, West Germany and South Korea.

Airline officials said that in addition to 140 registered passengers and 19 crew members, a baby not on the register was taken on board in its mother's arms. The baby's nationality was not immediately available.

Authorities Frustrated, Inmates Edgy As Stalemate Continues

By JOSEPH B. FRAZIER
Associated Press Writer

Tempers flared Saturday among Cuban inmates holding 120 hostages at two federal prisons they have controlled for nearly a week, and frustrated authorities said they cut off water supplies to try to end the stalemate.

One of the 1,100 Cubans inside the Atlanta penitentiary argued with another inmate by two-way radio and said he was ready to kill some of the 94 captives and later in the day a fire broke out in one section of the prison. The rioting inmates are protesting an agreement between the United States and Cuba that could return them to their homeland.

"I've got the rednecks (Americans) in here. We'll kill them all. We all have our knives out," the inmate said in Spanish to another Cuban, presumably of a rival faction.

One inmate was removed from the prison Saturday after being stabbed in a fight with another Cuban, said Michael Quinlan, director of the federal Bureau of Prisons. The inmate was treated at a local hospital and returned to a secure part of the prison. Authorities control an administration building and a cellblock where the man could be held.

Saturday evening, thick black smoke was seen pouring from the right side of the prison, and at least six Atlanta Fire Department trucks, including a hook and ladder vehicle, rushed to the scene.

U.S. Justice Department spokesman Thomas Stewart said the fire was in a segregation building formerly used to house inmates held in solitary confinement. He said firefighters were battling the blaze from a position away from the building, because it is an area now controlled by the Cubans.

Stewart said the fire apparently was started by inmates, but he would not speculate on their motive.

"Among the inmates there are people who want to destroy the entire prison," he said. "That's one of the many factions we're dealing wiht."

Authorities said earlier Saturday they had shut off the water to the Atlanta prison Friday, and the rioting inmates have not been given new shipments of food, Quinlan said. But a prison the size of Atlanta's normally would have enough food in house to last several weeks, another official said.

"We are asking for water," an inmate known as "Pepito" said in a radio conversation Saturday.

Asked what authorities hoped to gain by cutting off food and water, Quinlan replied, "Quick resolution of this situation."

Water pressure in the prison has dropped since the inmates damaged much of the facility in their fiery takeover. Authorities were unsure how long the water remaining in the system might last the inmates.

Officials in Louisiana cut off gas, electricity, water and food supplies to the Federal Detention Center not long after the riot began there Nov. 21. Officials said they have restored

Elizabeth Dole Makes Campaign Stop For Husband

By GRE. J LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Former Secretary of Transportation Elizabeth Dole returned to her home state Thanksgiving weekend, stopping in Greenville to drum up support for the presidential campaign of her husband, Sen. Robert J. Dole of Kansas.

The Salisbury, N.C., native addressed approximately 50 of her husband's supporters at a campaign breakfast Saturday morning at the Sheraton Greenville.

Mrs. Dole, who had served as transportation secretary in President Ronald Reagan's administration since Feb. 7, 1983, resigned from her post in September in order to campaign full time for her husband.

"If I can't be literally by my husband's side, then I want to be at least figuratively by his side, working full time in his campaign," she said.

Mrs. Dole said she has been involved in fund-raising, public speaking on behalf of her husband, talking about issues, and becoming involved in the strategy and planning of the campaign as well.

Mrs. Dole was the nation's eighth secretary of transportation, serving longer in that capacity than any of her predecessors.

"I have to admit that it did pull at my heartstrings when I left because it was a job that I loved," she said. "It was a job which was challenging, tough and demanding."

Now she faces the challenge of getting her husband elected to the highest public office in the land.

"I have watched with awe, his ability to cut through the complexities of tough issues, and to use a keen and creative mind to come up with an answer to a tough problem," she said.

Mrs. Dole says leadership is one of her husband's strengths.

She cited her husband's participation on the Social Security Commission and the 1985 Farm Bill as evidence of his leadership.

"I urge Dole supporters to get the message out, that he is running on a record, not a resume," she said. "This is a record of effective lead-

Official Says Typhoon Toll At Least 500

By MIGUEL C. SUAREZ
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — At least 500 people were killed when giant waves churned up by typhoon Nina smashed coastal towns and villages on southern Luzon island's Sorsogon province, the provincial governor told reporters Saturday.

Officials said scores of people were missing, more than 1,000 were injured and hundred of thousands were homeless after the typhoon struck late Wednesday night.

Provincial Gov. Raul Lee addressed local journalists who flew to his province, 235 miles southeast of Manila, aboard a military helicopter.

"The stench of death and formalin was all over the town," said a Filipino reporter, speaking from the city of Sorsogon, the capital of Sorsogon province. "People were burying their dead, many without coffins and without the usual blessing of a priest."

The waves and winds of up to 128 mph knocked down bridges, power and communications lines in Luzon's Bicol region and several islands to the south before the typhoon moved out to the South China Sea on Thursday.

'80s ROUNDUP — Since 1973, over 70,000 wild American Mustangs captured in helicopter roundups have been placed in domestic settings. On Friday, 150 of the horses will be brought to Ayden's East Carolina Stockyard where they will be auctioned for $125 a piece. (Photo courtesty U.S. Bureau of Land Management)

Auction Will Find Owners For American Mustangs

By SUE HINSON

Take Wendy Lowe's advice. Do something wild. Adopt an American Mustang at the East Carolina Stockyard in Ayden Dec. 4 through Dec. 6.

Sponsored by the U.S. Department of the Interior's Bureau of Land Management, the auction will begin at 8:30 a.m. on the fourth and will include two days of exhibitions in which Ms. Lowe will use Mustangs she obtained while living in Pennsylvania to demonstrate that the "horses can be trained.

"In fact we were able to ride one of my horses only three weeks after we adopted him," she said.

Now a resident of Jacksonville, Ms. Lowe and a friend, Mona Tobias, spearheaded the effort to bring the Mustangs to eastern North Carolina.

"There was already some interest here, so we built on that base, spread the word further and now have over 70 people interested in adopting the horses," she said.

According to Ms. Lowe, what recommends the horses most is the challenge they present. "If you can get one of these animals to trust you and make something of it, it brings a sense of satisfaction that's almost unequalled. Too," she said, "adopting these animals often saves them from starvation."

Most of the 150 horses being trucked into Ayden in the coming week come from Nevada, Wyoming, California and Oregon, where herds roam the country's little remaining open range land.

To date, over 70,000 animals captured in roundups have been placed throughout the United States, 790 of them in North Carolina. But, according to Bureau spokesman Robert Ward, more homes are needed.

Until 1971 when the Free-Roaming Wild Horse and Burro Act was passed to provide for the protection, management and control of herds, the horses faced starvation and indiscriminate slaughter. Yet even under the protection of the act and with no natural predators, herd populations have continued to rapidly increase, Ward said.

Anyone who has not already applied to adopt one of the horses but is interested in obtaining a Mustang can obtain the forms necessary for adoption from auction officials.

"About 70 people have already spoken for the horses, so those will go first on Friday, but if anyone who has not filled out a form and wishes to get one of the horses they could probably get one Saturday," Ms. Lowe said.

Qualified applicants may adopt up

Merchants Expect Good Retail Sales

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Despite predictions of a poor Christmas season which followed the Oct. 19 stock market plunge, the managers of some of Greenville's largest department stores say that sales this year are expected to top the 1986 Christmas season, one of the best on record.

"We're looking forward to a good holiday season, contrary to what you've heard," Greenville Banks, manager of Belk's at Carolina East Mall, said. "We're optimistic."

Banks said "traffic is robust this morning (and) we're looking forward to a great day," an hour after the store opened Friday. "Sales were brisk for the first hour and we should have a monumental sales day. People were standing in line at 8 (a.m.)"

Banks predicted that this Christmas seson will be "a good coat season, although we've not had the weather." And he said "sweaters, knits of all kinds," as well as men's suits and sport coats, will be good items this year, with microwave ovens, mixers and food processors, also high on the list.

At J.C. Penney's at The Plaza mall, manager Bill Hopper said, "I think the stock market crash hurt a month or so ago," but he said "people are out buying now. We're really ex-

The family will be at the home on Route 2, Four Oaks.

Typhoon

The government's weather service said Nina was the strongest of 15 tropical storms and typhoons to hit the country this year.

In Manila, officials said final figures on the death toll and damage were not expected for days because of poor communications.

President Corazon Aquino proclaimed a "state of calamity" in 11 provinces Friday and expanded her proclamation to cover seven more Saturday, the presidential palace announced. The proclamation enables the government to impose price controls in the affected areas and to commandeer suplies needed for relief and rehabilitation.

Officials of the Philippine Red Cross and the government's Office of Civil Defense in Manila said Saturday they could confirm 308 deaths so far in eight provinces. They said they expected the toll to mount substantially as communications improve.

"When the final reports are in, we will see that this disaster is much bigger than what our figures now indicate," said Belen Tan, a civil defense supervisor.

Wife Of Candidate Makes Stop

ership that's been proven time and time again.

Mrs. Dole said that one of the most pressing problems the nation faces is the budget deficit.

"What we're doing is asking our children and our grandchildren to sacrifice for us, and I don't think that's what we intend to do", she said. "We've got to get the deficit under control, tighten our own belts across the board and make certain that our children don't have to pay the terrible price which we are asking them to pay as long as this problem remains unsolved."

Mrs. Dole says she believes her husband can win the presidential election because he is the most electable Republican, the Republican candidate to have the most Democratic and Independent support.

"That's the key," she said. "We've got to take this ball across the goal line, we've got to have a nominee who can win in the general election."

Mrs. Dole said in the event her husband is elected, her role would be the traditional one, utilizing the platform of first lady to make a difference for people.

She also said she would continue working on transportation safety issues, and on the drug abuse problem.

"I would be an activist first lady," she said. "I would want to do whatever I can to make a positive difference for people."

Prior to accepting her cabinet post position, Mrs. Dole, a graduate of Harvard Law School, served as assistant to the president for public liaison. In that position, she directed Reagan's major outreach program at the White House.

She was responsible for assuring that the views of groups such as business, labor, and agriculture were considered when the president's policies were being developed.

Airliner Goes Down

"I feel so guilty. I have sent my best friend to his death," said Yu Wen-su, who learned of the crash in the airline's office in Taipei, Taiwan. Yu said he had instructed Lin Wu-hsuing, a technician, to go to Johannesburg to repair a machine his company had sold to a South African firm.

In Seattle, Liz Reese, spokeswoman for Boeing Commercial Airplane Co., described the jet as a 747-200B "Combi," a jumbo configured to carry both passengers and cargo.

Transport Minster Eli Louw told reporters at a crisis command post at Johannesburg's Jan Smuts Airport that all aboard Flight SA295 were believed to have died. The crash was the worst in the 53-year history of the state-run airline.

"It's a very sad day for SAA," he said. The airline has had three fatal crashes in its history, the last in 1968 when a Boeing 707 crashed in South-West Africa, killing 122 people.

President P.W. Botha of South Africa went on national television to express sympathy for friends and relatives of the victims and to thank the French, U.S., Mauritian and Australian governments for assisting in search operations.

The combination passenger-cargo plane also was carrying 29 metric tons of freight. It can accommodate a maximum of 206 passengers.

A French naval ship, military planes from the French-governed island of Reunion and planes from Mauritius and South Africa were involved in the search officials said.

A U.S. Navy P-3 aircraft had also been dispatched from Diego Garcia, the Pentagon said in Washington. Australian authorities also had been asked for assistance.

The weekly, non-stop Taipei-Mauritius flight covers about 5,300 miles and is SAA's longest route, 95 percent of which is over water. Mauritius is 2,000 miles east of Johannesburg.

Most of the Japanese aboard were employees of Nippon Suisan, a shipping and fisheries company, who were headed to Johannesburg to replace crewmen on a fishing vessel in the Indian Ocean.

A Japanese couple on their honeymoon also were aboard, according to the Japanese Foreign Ministry.

At Johannesburg's Jan Smuts airport, a Taiwanese couple living in South Africa were waiting for their 6-year-old daughter to arrive on the flight.

"I feel so terrible I cannot even talk," said Sherry Chen Lin, whose husband, Vincent, is working on a water project along the South Africa-Lesotho border.

In Taipei, officials of the airline earlier asked about 20 anxious relatives and friends of the missing Taiwanese passengers jamming the office to return home, but the few remaining there burst into tears at the news of the crash.

Sentenced

GREENSBORO (AP) — A former Greensboro broker said that heavy personal debts and the desire to save his job led him to take $187,180 in commissions by claiming sales he didn't make.

U.S. District Judge Frank Bullock sentenced Richard Eugene McNeill Jr., 36, to two years in prison. Bullock also ordered McNeill to repay the money he had taken.

Tempers Flared Saturday Among Inmates Holding 120 Hostages

electricity periodically so inmates could watch television reports on the incident, and that the center has electrical generators.

Officials also said the inmates apparently were collecting rainwater and had soft drinks available in the commissary. In addition, 40,000 pounds of meat was delivered to the center a few days before the riot.

The 950 inmates in Louisiana blamed federal officials for a breakdown in negotiations to free 26 hostages, and demanded that a Roman Catholic bishop be allowed to mediate talks.

"America do not be deceived. The (Bureau of Prisons) is delaying release by denying Archbishop San Roman from attesting to the agreement," said a red-and-white banner staked into ground in the Federal Detention Center near Oakdale.

Auxiliary Bishop Augustin Roman of Miami has said he was willing to join the negotiating team but prison officials have asked him not to.

"America we will release everyone when Archbishop Roman tells us the agreement is agreed. This is the only change with the agreement," read another inmate banner posted Saturday.

There are no plans to allow outsiders to participate in hostage negotiations with the inmates at either prison, Quinlan said.

"However well-meaning the offers may be, taking into the negotiations new third parties could well set back the negotiations," he said.

Prisoners seized their hostages in wild rioting that left one dead, 53 injured and the facilities severely damaged by fire and looting. Oakdale inmates have controlled the facility since Nov. 21; Atlanta inmates began their takeover Monday.

The riots began after inmates learned that Cuban leader Fidel Castro had agreed to take back up to 2,545 of the refugees who fled Cuba during the Mariel boatlift of 1980. Many of those were mentally ill or had criminal records; most were held in Louisiana and Atlanta.

In other radio conversations monitored from outside the prison Saturday, one Cuban was heard to say, "Everything's OK." Another replied, "No, nothing's right." And an inmate using the code name "Charlie," identified by federal officials as the leader of one faction, complained, "What the hell's going on here? I'm trying to sleep."

"Charlie" was also heard to tell his fellow inmates, "Do things slow; everyone is very nervous. Do things right and with a cool head."

Inmates soldered shut a door that had been a major passageway "so we can't get to you, and you can't get to us," according to a conversation between Charlie and other inmates. It was unclear whether the action was aimed at federal officials or rival Cuban factions. The monitored radio conversations simply "could involve machismo" among inmates, Stewart said.

Negotiations between federal officials and the rioting inmates in Atlanta continued via telephone Saturday, he said. No face-to-face talks have been held since Thursday, when a proposal to free 50 hostages was vetoed by the Cubans.

Quinlan said the situation appeared to be closer to resolution at Oakdale than in Atlanta.

"The situation at Oakdale is that the discussions with the detainees have continued. We had been optimistic yesterday there might be a resolution. We do not see any change in that, although there has been a delay. We are still in agreement on substantive issues, and the situation hopefully will be resolved soon."

At Atlanta, "we do have discussions, and that's a very positive sign, and we want to continue to develop those discussions and to refine all the details of the issues. But at this point, they are not as well defined at Atlanta as they are at Oakdale," he said.

Asked whether lack of trust among the Cubans or between Cuban and federal negotiators was to blame for the breakdown, Mark Sheehan, another Justice Department spokesman, said, "I don't think there is a lack of trust. Negotiations don't necessarily follow a level path."

"Any time they ask us for something, they have to be prepared to give something," Stewart said.

Rocket Launched

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — An Air Force Titan 34D, the nation's most powerful unmanned rocket, roared into space Saturday night with a secret military satellite that a civilian expert said would provide instant warning of an enemy missile attack on the United States.

The 16-story-tall rocket blazed spectacularly away from its launch pad here at 10:27 p.m. and etched a fiery path in a star-filled sky as it propelled the satellite toward orbit. The flight appeared to be normal during the nearly six minutes the booster was in sight.

The Air Force did not announce the launch in advance, which has been its practice on military space launches for several years.

pecting a super December and Christmas season."

In fact, Hopper said sales during the month of November were "up about 20 percent," and "I would say as of now, compared to last year, we're quite a bit ahead."

"The store has been remodeled on the inside," to give additional selling space," Hopper said, and "people are out buying now."

"As far as the overall season, it's still an unknown quantity. But I think it (sales) will be up ... better than last year. I'm pretty stable in that since we're already definitely up."

Locklear said one of the hottest items at Nichols has been the Natendo television game. "We could sell 100 to 150 today without any problem at all," at $200 to $225 each, with accessories. But he said "we're having difficulty getting them. The manufacturers is having a problem fulfilling their agreement. It's a matter of having quantities to sell."

Locklear said "a lot of interest" has also been shown in the Fisher Price VCR. But again, he said quantities are limited.

Jerry Powers said the K-Mart store in Greenville Square Shopping Center, is "expecting a good Christmas season again this year ... better than last year.

The K-Mart manager said "toys ... remote control cars, trucks ... we're getting a lot of calls for." And animated dolls and bears are also "selling well."

"One of the hottest items," Powers said, are "scooters ... the self-propelled tupe you push with your feet. They're selling real well," as are video cassette recorders and compact disc players.

At Sears' Carolina East Mall store, "We're very optimistic about the Christmas season," manager Stacy Whittington said.

"Today — the day after Thanksgiving — traditionally kicks off the Christmas shopping season (and) we have a very optimistic outlook. We feel like it will be better," than last year. although "we can't put a number on it," Whittington said.

"We feel like disposable income is up over last year (and) we have an ample supply of most items. But as always happens, some of the real run-a-way items may be in short supply."

What's selling well other than the traditional items such as sweaters and other wearing apparal? "Camcorders, small space saving appliances are good," Whittington said. And "cordless tools are a big item this year."

Roberts Liardon

November 30 & December 1 7:30 p.m.

Roberts Liardon was born in Tulsa, Oklahoma. He was born again, baptized in the Holy Spirit, and called to the ministry at the age of eight, after being caught up to heaven by the Lord Jesus. He was powerfully commissioned by the Lord to study the lives of God's great men and women ministers and learn why they succeeded and why they failed. Six years were spent in preparation for that calling and vision God had given to him.

At age 14, Roberts began preaching and teaching in denominational and non-denominational churches, Bible colleges and universities. He has traveled extensively in the United States and Canada, and his missions outreach has taken him to Africa, Europe and Asia. Ministering the Gospel with great anointing from God and the power of the Holy Spirit, Roberts challenges people to walk in the Spirit with the blessed Trinity.

Arrests Made

Greenville police said six arrests were made in the area Friday.

Officer E.M. Haddock said Tyrone Marshall Quinerly of Route 1, Grifton, was arrested at 9:30 a.m. at Carolina East Mall and charged with the theft of walkie-talkies worth $1,000 each and two pagers worth $300 each.

Officer T.V. Woolard said Lloyd Haddock Jr. of 302-A W. 2nd St., Ayden, and Clinton Delavagus Gaye of 2122 S. Village Drive were arrested on two counts each of possession of stolen property at 2:15 p.m. The arrests were made in connection with the thefts of two cars, which were later recovered, from Phelps Chevrolet on Nov. 21, Woolard said.

Officer T.E. Nevelle said George Washington Myers Jr. of 121 Fleming St. was arrested on a charge of larceny in connection with an incident at J.C. Penney's at The Plaza at 6:27 p.m.

Officer E.E. Laughinghouse said Joe Nathan Hardy of 1407 N. Washington St. was arrested on a charge of shoplifting at Harris Supermarket at 7:50 p.m.

Officer D.C. Johnson said David Lewis Richardson of 309 Roundtree Drive was arrested at 5:35 p.m. on a charge of larceny at The Plaza.

Job Service

Terri Dickens, labor market analyst in the Greenville Job Service office, said that 7,247 people used the service in the four months ending Oct. 31.

Ms. Dickens said only 954 people filed for one or more weeks of unemployment insurance.

She said those seeking employment fell into six categories: professional, technical and managerial, 497; clerical and sales, 1,296; services, 801; processing, benchwork and machine trades, 1,065; structural work, 519, and miscellaneous occupations, 784.

Of the applicants, 3,617 were high school graduates and 2,150 had education beyond high school. A large number of those people were college graduates, the labor analyst said.

Unemployment Rose

October unemployment rates showed a slight increase in 77 of the state's 100 counties, according to figures released by the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina.

The state's seasonally unadjusted rate of unemployment increased to 3.9 percent from 3.5 percent, the ESC reported. The October figures show the state's labor force at 3,354,100 with 3,224,900 employed and 129,200 unemployed.

In Pitt County 53,020 people are employed out of a labor force of 54,680, leaving a 3 percent unemployment rate, up .1 percent from September, according to the commission.

Food Drive Set

Food collection bins have been placed in Farm Fresh locations across eastern North Carolina, including Greenville, the company said.

Food items collected will be distributed by the North Carolina Food Bank for distribution to the needy.

Highway Naming Will Honor East

The late U.S. Senator John P. East will be honored with the naming of a section of U.S. 264 in Pitt County for him during a ceremony Thursday.

Gov. Jim Martin will attend the ceremony, which will be held just off the eastbound lane of U.S. 264 at Secondary Road 1204, about 2 miles west of Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

East's widow, Priscilla, and their daughters, Kathryn and Martha, will join Martin and other state, local and federal officials at the 2 p.m. public ceremony.

A Springfield, Ill., native, East was a professor of political science at East Carolina University from 1964 until his election to the U.S. Senate in 1980. He served in the Senate until his death in June 1986.

The N.C. Board of Transportation voted unanimously last week to honor East by naming a portion of U.S. 264 the John P. East Freeway.

The section to be named for East is 7.5 miles between Greenville and Farmville that was constructed at a cost of $13.1 million. Construction began in March 1984 and the section was opened two weeks ago.

Weather Blamed In Two Of State's Traffic Deaths

By The Associated Press

Wet roads have been blamed for at least two of North Carolina's 11 traffic deaths during the Thanksgiving holiday, including a 1-year-old girl, the state Highway Patrol said Saturday.

The infant, Kristy Luanne White of Asheboro, died at 8:10 p.m. Thursday when the car in which she was riding hit a utility pole off U.S. 220 south of Randleman in Randolph County.

A patrol spokesman said the child was riding in the front seat of her father's lap when their car, driven by the child's mother, spun out of control in a heavy rain and slid backward off the left side of U.S. 220, hitting the utility pole.

Both parents, Janet Allred White and Rodney White, were injured in the wreck.

In the latest accident, the patrol said Ronald Luther Fields Jr., 19, of Butters was killed shortly before 1 a.m. Saturday when the car he was driving west of Bladenboro ran off the left side of N.C. 211 and struck a tree, throwing Fields from the car.

Rozella Jones Atkins, 60, of Mount Airy, was killed at 5 p.m. Friday on N.C. 89 in Surry County, 7 miles west of Mount Airy, the patrol said. Troopers said she was a passenger in a car that lost control on wet pavement and struck a guardrail. Ms. Atkins was thrown from the vehicle, the patrol said.

Clarence Albert Jones, 38, of Washington, D.C., was killed at 9:35 p.m. Friday on a rural road in Sampson County near Clinton. The patrol said his car ran off the road, overturned, throwing him from the vehicle, which he was driving. The car then landed on him, troopers said.

Kimberly Jean Jackson, 17, of Windsor, was killed at 12:10 a.m. Saturday on a rural road in Bertie County near Windsor when the car she was driving ran off the road and overturned, the patrol said.

Gary D. Coultas, 21, of Camp Lejeune, was killed at 4 p.m. Thursday on a state road about 6 miles west of Jacksonville in Onslow County, troopers said. He was a passenger on a motorcycle that ran off the road and struck a ditchbank, the patrol said.

Wanda Hamm Vanhoy, 31, of Pinnacle, was killed at 5:45 p.m. Friday on U.S. 52 in Forsyth County when she walked into the path of an oncoming car, troopers said.

John Clifford Coble, 71, of Graham, died at 3 p.m. Thursday when he stepped into the path of a car on N.C. 87 in Alamance County.

George Elmer Bryan, 71, and his wife, Mildred, 59, of Murrells Inlet, S.C., died at 7:05 p.m. Wednesday when they were hit by a car while walking across U.S. 17 south of Elizabeth City.

Robert Lee Sauls, 29, of Temple Hills, Md., died at 10 a.m. Thursday when he was thrown from his car in Greene County.

The deaths brought this year's North Carolina traffic death toll to 1,421, compared with 1,497 during the same period last year.

The North Carolina State Motor Club estimated 17 people would die on state roads over the 102-hour Thanksgiving weekend that started at 6 p.m. Wednesday and runs through midnight Sunday. The holiday period claimed 18 lives last year and 20 in 1985.

Crash Kills Three From N.C.

WILLIS, Va. (AP) — Federal investigators converged at the heavily wooded site Saturday of a downed single-engine plane to determine why the plane crashed, killing all three North Carolinians aboard.

Deputy Jerry Yopp, an investigator with the Floyd County Sheriff's Department, said officials from the Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board were having difficulty reaching the crash site, located in a ravine on the back of Buffalo Mountain in western Floyd County.

The dead were identified as pilot Francis Bryson Greene, 41, of Mocksville, N.C., his 17-year-old son Francis Bryson Greene Jr., also of Mocksville, and the plane's owner, Wayne Douglas Hargett, 43, of Lexington, N.C.

The three were en route Friday from Lima, Ohio, to Mocksville, N.C., in a light-weight Piper Cherokee PA-32 when the controls of the plane apparently malfunctioned, Yopp said.

"They had had contact with the Greensboro, North Carolina airport and had advised them that they had lost their controls," the deputy said, estimating the time of the crash to be between 5:30 p.m. and 6 p.m. "That was the last contact anyone had with the plane."

Rocky Johnson, who lives near the site of the crash about 2 miles south of Willis, said he heard the plane before it went down.

The engine "was cutting out real bad," he said. "I told my wife, 'Sounds like we're going to have a plane crash.'"

Johnson said he went outside and saw a flash in some woods near his house. He and a neighbor ran three-quarters of a mile to check for survivors in the burning plane.

"It hit in the woods and it blew all to pieces," he said. "There wasn't nothing left but shrapnel."

Yopp said police themselves had problems trying to reach the victims.

"It took awhile for people to get in to determine the plane had crashed," he said. "We had to take four-wheel drives to an open area and then we had to go approximately 150 yards down through a thick wooded area on the side of a mountain.

"The plane was still burning when we got there," he said. "We found the three bodies laying at various places on the ground. They were already dead. Two of them, we just found parts. It was quite gruesome."

Yopp said the plane apparently had exploded on impact.

The plane, which was flying in the rain and fog that covered much of the western part of the state Friday, crashed into the side of the mountain.

"If he lost his controls, he had no way of determining how high he was," Yopp said.

COMING BACK — Dwayne Brown, right, nearly died three years ago when he and eight other youths drank a corrosive chemical from a wine bottle. Brown lost 80 pounds after his stomach and esophagus were removed at N.C. Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem. He's eating again and is going to college. NASA Considers Durham

RALEIGH (AP) — Tiny microchips may be the bait that lures a NASA-funded Center for Space Computing to Duke University.

The Microelectronics Center of North Carolina is preparing to build protypes of the microchips that may provide the brains of a scaled-down supercomputer for a U.S. space station.

The chips are the product of collaborations by computer scientists and engineers from the Triangle area. Each chip would be crammed with more than 1 million transistors on a square only slightly larger than one-third of an inch.

The entire supercomputer, composed of 128 chips and some other hardware, would fill a volume no larger than 1 cubic foot.

Officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration were briefed on the work earlier this month, and they liked what they heard, according to John H. Reif, a Duke computer professor who heads the Blitzen supercomputer project and would direct the proposed center.

"It was NASA's feeling the Research Triangle area is an ideal location for the development of an advanced system like the Blitzen system," Reif told the News and Observer of Raleigh.

Group Urges State To Reject Waste Site

MOCKSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — If Congress passes a bill to locate a temporary, nuclear waste site in the Southeast, it would mean that some high-level waste would be transported on North Carolina highways, threatening life and property, environmentalists say.

"We cannot wait to act until a site here or just across the border is picked," said John Runkle, an attorney for the N.C. Conservation Council. "Now is the time for North Carolinians to wake up or taste the waste."

Eleven sites in North Carolina, Tennessee, South Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi and Kentucky would be considered for a temporary storage facility under a bill Congress is expected to act upon before the end of the year, Runkle said.

The bill was approved by the Senate earlier this month as part of an appropriations bill. Senate and House conferees will try to resolve differences before the end of the year.

Jerome Saltzman, a spokesman for the U.S. Department of Energy's Office of Civilian Radioactive Waste Management, has defended the proposed temporary storage facility, saying from Washington that it would allow more efficient and safer storage than available at nuclear power plants.

The site, called the monitored retrievable storage facility, would be chosen by the Energy Department no later than October 1989 and used until officials select a permanent facility to store such high-level waste as spent fuel rods from nuclear reactors. The agency would chose three finalists from two states by January 1989.

The agency would compensate the host state's costs with $50 million annually and exempt it from consideration for the permanent site.

Claudine Cremer, congressional district assistant to Rep. James Clarke, said during a news conference Friday that a site in Oak Ridge, Tenn., as well as other Tennessee and South Carolina sites would pose grave danger to North Carolina.

"Any of these locations would mean some transportation of high-level nuclear waste on our highways and would represent a dramatic increase in such a high-level nuclear traffic," Clarke said in a written statement read by Ms. Cremer.

She and others also said an accident in South Carolina and Tennessee would threaten life and property in North Carolina.

"Radiation knows no boundaries," Runkle said.

Rep. Steve Neal and Rep. Bill Hefner said in statements read at the news conference that they support a bill proposed by Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., for a commission to study the nuclear waste disposal issue and to determine whether a temporary site is necessary. The Energy Department has three Western finalists for the first permanent U.S. repository for high-level nuclear waste, and two North Carolina sites are among a dozen being considered in the department's on-again, off-again search for an Eastern repository.

"One suspects the real purpose of creating a storage (facility) is to make it, over many years, the de facto Eastern dump, in case other sites prove technically or politically unfeasible," Neal said in a written statement.

Runkle urged Gov. Jim Martin to exercise his right to veto any plan to make North Carolina a waste site, to oppose any plan for a temporary site and to develop a site waste policy. A site in Davie County that Duke Power company considered before abandoning plans to build the Perkins Nuclear Power Plant is reportedly among the 11 candidates.

Runkle said a temporary site is unnecessary because most nuclear plants have enough room to store their waste until a permanent repository is found.

The news conference was sponsored by the Conservation Council, the Davie Opposes Nuclear Trash organization, the Elk River Coalition of eight Western North Carolina groups, and the N.C. Radioactive Waste Roundtable.

Award-Winning Farmer Sets Sights On Success

RALEIGH (AP) — The interest in farming may be declining among young people, but Frank W. Howey Jr. sees a career on the land as a way to incorporate a number of jobs — agronomist, mechanic, veterinarian and entrepreneur.

Howey, a 21-year-old agronomy major at North Carolina State University, owns his own farm near Monroe and lives and works in the university's greenhouses. He spends his time watering plants, monitoring the temperature and caring for others' research projects.

And now he is an award winner. Howey earned the title of Star American Farmer at the national Future Farmers of America convention this month. The honor goes annual to an FFA member who has shown initiative in developing his or her own farm operation.

Howey will travel to Europe in March with other FFA winners to visit agribusinesses in France, West Germany and Belgium.

Howey's roots are in the land. Eight generations of Howeys have farmed, and Frank Howey will follow that lead when he graduates in May.

"I've just always enjoyed farming," Howey said. "It's not that I believe that is my heritage. I just believe a person ought to enjoy doing what he does for a living. I just enjoy farming and being outside."

Since his high school days in the Future Farmers of America chapter at Sun Valley High School in Monroe, Howey has been building his own farming operation. In seven years, he has increased his net worth by $260,000.

Howey started out in high school, buying a few cattle and renting land. Today, the operation he owns includes 1,250 acres of full-season and double-cropped soybeans, 480 acres of wheat, 50 acres of oats, 280 acres of grain sorghum, seven acres of fruits and vegetables and 66 head of beef cattle.

Before coming to N.C. State as a junior, Howey spent two years at Wingate College near his home. That allowed him to live at home, keeping up with farm operations and commuting to classes.

Since he became a student at N.C. State, Howey had divided his time between his studies, his farm and his work at the greenhouses. One full-time employee and Howey's family help keep his farm going while he is away.

Howey has been active as treasurer of N.C. State's Agronomy Club and as treasurer for the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences Council, a liaison group involving students and faculty.

He is also a member of the N.C. State soil judging team, which recently placed third in regional competitions in Alabama and will go on to national competition in South Dakota in April.

Howey is optimistic that he has chosen a good career.

"As a farmer, I'm many things: agronomist, mechanic, veterinarian. But mostly I'm a businessman," Howey said. "I think the business part of farming is very important.

"If a farmer can produce a crop but doesn't know how to properly market it, he will not be very successful," Howey said.

In the future, Howey sees fewer farmers producing more of the nation's food. These farmers will have to use the most up-to-date technologies and keen business skills to succeed, he said.

Although many young people are leaving family farms, in some ways, now is a good time to get into the business, Howey said. Using farm equipment and land are both reasonably priced, he said.

"Farming's not easy and it's not for everybody," Howey said.

"I've always been optimistic," he said. "There are a lot of economic problems on the farm. We will have to use our leadership to address issues that concern farmers and propel American agriculture into the 21st century."

YOUNG FARMER — While many young people might pass up life on the farm, Frank Howey Jr. of Monroe sees it as part of a multifaceted career that he would like to pursue. He was recently selected national Star American Farmer by Future Farmers of America. (AP Laserphoto)

Trash Problems

EDEN, N.C. (AP) — A lack of containers for trash means people dump their rubbish on others' property, leaving those land owners holding the bag, county officials and land owners say.

Littering in Rockingham County is punishable by a maximum fine of $50 or up to 30 days in jail. But because it's so hard to catch people who dump their trash, the county holds people like Pete Hankins responsible. Hankins owns property in Rockingham County where trash is being dumped. He estimates the cleanup at $900.

"Authorities say I'm responsible," Hankins said. "I've got a job. I've got to make a living. I can't spend all my time looking for someone dumping this garbage."

Hankins said the whole problem is caused by county officials. A Solid Waste Plan designed by state officials in 1971 recommended a landfill in the center of Rockingham County with 30 collection sites throughout the county. The landfill was built — the collection sites were not.

Problems Ignored

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — The recent tumultuous times at PTL doesn't seem to have hurt the housing market too much at Heritage USA.

Many who own homes are not bailing out on their investment despite the financial problems of the television ministry, and those who are looking to sell apparently aren't having to search too far for buyers.

When Sarah Jerrell put her condominium at Heritage USA up for sale last month, she had to wait only the time it took her buyer to get a loan to sell it. She never advertised.

Dixie Stone, 69, of Miramar, Fla., had wanted to move to Heritage USA for several years but couldn't get a job transfer. But after retiring from the federal government, she bought a condominium in September in a subdivision on the grounds of Heritage USA, which includes a theme park.

"I have believed since the very beginning God is going to turn this place around," she said. "And it's going to be the biggest Christian center in the United States."

PTL, which is $60 million in debt, is in the midst of being reorganized after filing for protection under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code.

Skydiving Record

LODI, Calif. (AP) — A pair of parachutists — one from North Carolina — have set an endurance record by dropping from the sky on an average of every 5½ minutes for a total of 255 times in one day.

"I was freezing and I was shaking and I was sick to my stomach, but I never thought about giving up," said Cheryl Stearns, a 32-year-old pilot from Fayetteville, N.C., who is the first woman to jump consecutively for 24 hours.

"They call her the 'Falling Angel,' " Russell Fish, a 34-year-old computer company financial officer said of his skydiving partner. "There was nothing more beautiful than looking down below me and seeing her canopy open up."

After drinking a little hot chocolate, Stearns and Fish began a marathon of jumps from 2,000 feet at 4:36:19 p.m. at the Lodi Airport, about 50 miles east of San Francisco.

They used a tag-team of airplanes to set a pace of one jump about every four minutes. But fatigue and a shrinking nighttime crew of parachute packers slowed them down.

About 23 hours and 40 minutes later, the diving duo tied the 250-jump record set by David Huber in Washington state on July 3-4, 1985, then each jumped five more times to set their mark.

Dolls Stolen

WILMINGTON (AP) — Thieves have stolen a Duplin County woman's Christmas.

"I'm just sick," Libba Grant said. "I can't believe anyone would take Christmas dolls."

Mrs. Grant of Kenansville is still tallying her losses from a break-in at her business, Dolls by Libba, on N.C. 24 between Kenansville and Warsaw.

The culprits made off with handmade merchandise intended for dozens of stockings across the country. Gone are the 20 Bubba and Sister dolls that Mrs. Grant embroidered herself. Gone are the music boxes, the gingham animals, the clown dolls, the porcelain dolls, the quilts, the scented candles, the tree ornaments and the 4-foot-tall Liza Minnelli dolls.

Gone, too, are the Indian princesses with the white velvet wraps and boots.

"It sort of looked like fur," said Mrs. Grant, who spent months crafting the gifts for display in her shop, a converted tobacco barn.

Thieves got through the front door the weekend of Nov. 21 and 22 and cleaned out almost all of the inventory. Mrs. Grant estimates her uninsured loss at $8,000.

The thieves' biggest catch, according to Mrs. Grant, were the 20 individualized cloth dolls she has copyrighted as "Bubbas and Sisters." The 14 Sisters and six Bubbas each took Mrs. Grant about two weeks to make.

"I always have a waiting list," said Mrs. Grant, who's been marketing the $65 dolls since 1981.

Each is distinct and carries a Dolls By Libba label, traits that might make the loot easy to trace, Mrs. Grant hopes.

Antlered Intruder

RALEIGH (AP) — Sometimes you just can't do a thing with your antlers.

Five women were in the Mett's Hairstyling in Garner Friday when a buck deer came into the stop — through a large plate-glass window.

The buck, as they say, stopped here. Briefly.

"Suddenly we heard this crash, and there was a deer," said Carol Metts, who was setting hair. "A big buck. He turned around and ran out. It just scared us to death. We thought a plane had crashed into the house."

"It was absolutely the most frightening thing I have ever dealt with in my life," said Anna Hudson, who was under a dryer when the deer appeared. She remembered him as "a huge fellow."

Another customer was having her hair curled when the deer came through the glass, said Mrs. Metts, who owns the shop with her husband, Jack.

"She was having a blow dry and curl with a curling iron on her hair when the deer came in and she jumped up out of the chair.

Thousands Pay Last Respects To Mayor Harold Washington

By PAUL A. DRISCOLL
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Thousands of tearful mourners filed into City Hall throughout the night and into the gray, drizzly morning Saturday to pay their last respects to Harold Washington, the city's first black mayor.

And, in another sign of mourning, a riderless horse led the city's annual McDonald's Charity parade.

SOMBER MOMENT — Chicago police officers carry the coffin of Chicago Mayor Harold Washington into City Hall Friday afternoon. The late mayor will lie in state in the building's rotunda through midnight Sunday. (AP Laserphoto)

Jackson, who cut short a visit to the Middle East when Washington died, called him "a friend, a brother, a leader."

"With Harold we won against the odds, the Red Sea was divided, we got across. ... He broke the old machine of exclusion and built a new rainbow organization of inclusion," Jackson said.

The civil rights activist was accompanied by three black aldermen who have been mentioned as possible successors to Washington, who died of a heart attack Wednesday at the age of 65.

Jackson did not offer an endorsement, but urged unity in choosing a replacement for Washington, who was in his fifth year in office.

At City Hall, some mourners dropped little mementoes on a table at the foot of Washington's casket: a single, wilting rose; a small cross; a worn blue political button like those thousands wore when Washington campaigned successfully against the regular Democratic organization.

"It's very pitiful," said a somber middle-age black woman, who identified herself only as G. Malone. "It was a very great loss .. He was a good man."

Steady rain failed to deter the stream of mourners, most of them middle-age blacks for whom Washington symbolized pride and hopes for a better deal for minorities.

Hundreds of whites also came to grieve.

Alton Miller, Washington's press secretary, said 120,000 people filed past the mayor's body between 4 p.m. Friday and 9 a.m. Saturday.

It was unfortunate, she said, that Washington didn't have "two or three" terms "to accomplish his dreams." Washington defeated her and a third Democrat in the 1983 primary, and halted her comeback bid in the primary earlier this year.

Even out-of-towners were among the mourners.

"I think he was a really good mayor, with a lot of really good ideas," said Crystal Baller, 24, of Joliet. "But he didn't get a chance to use them."

Anne Wiberg, 49, a suburbanite, said: "I was really proud of him. He helped a lot of minorities and that's what we need in this day and age."

Washington's body was to lie in state until late Sunday. His funeral is set for Monday.

Officers Shoot Boy

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Police shot and killed a 14-year-old boy who had fired on officers with a rifle after chasing his mother from his home, police said.

Three officers opened fire on the boy, Timothy M. Baumel, in a busy part of town about 15 blocks from his home, said police spokesman Dave Simpson. Baumel died at Portland Adventist Hospital, police said.

Baumel had earlier barricaded himself in his home with a rifle, Simpson said.

His mother, Neva Baumel, 49, had met officers at a nearby grocery store, telling them her son was "uncontrollable" and had chased her out, threatening to shoot anyone who came to the home, Simpson said.

She said her other children, ages 11 and 17, were hiding in the garage, according to Simpson.

Police said they approached the home and saw the boy leave on foot with a rifle, and they followed.

Baumel fired a shot in an officer's direction, and several more shots were heard, but the officer said he did not know what the boy was aiming at, Simpson said.

Three officers ordered him to drop the weapon but he instead shot at them and they returned fire, Simpson said.

The shooting will be reviewed by the Multnomah County district attorney's office and a grand jury, Simpson said. An autopsy was scheduled for Saturday, said Paul Horan, a spokesman for the county medical examiner's office.

Motives Questioned

By JOAN MOWER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., on Saturday said the White House — instead of promoting peace in Central America — is seeking new money for the Nicaraguan Contras so they can "step up the war."

Coelho, delivering the Democratic response to President Reagan's weekly radio address, said Colin Powell, the president's new national security adviser, has played a role in the efforts to aid the Contras.

"This Thanksgiving week, the president's new national security adviser went to Congress demanding new money for airplanes, helicopters and supplies so that the Contras can step up the war," Coelho said.

"That's not the road to peace in Central America," he said. "Instead, the president should join (House) Speaker (Jim) Wright, and put the power and prestige of the Oval Office behind the drive for peace in Central America," Coelho said.

In an interview Saturday, Rep. Dave Bonior, D-Mich., an opponent of aid to the Contras, said administration officials "have come up and they have talked" about a $30 million package which, he said would be used to strengthen the Contra air force.

"It almost doubles the size of the Contra air force," he said.

Planes and helicopters can be used to increase deliveries of "lethal and non-lethal" goods, Bonior said.

But a Republican congressional aide, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said aircraft used to drop food and other life-supporting items are viewed as non-military equipment.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz has publicly backed the peace plan, which calls for the Contras to put down their arms by Jan. 5. Shultz said on Nov. 11 that the administration would not seek additional aid for the Contras until next year to give the peace process "every chance."

The Republican source on Capitol Hill said Powell apparently was summoned to appear before the Democrat-controlled House Intelligence Committee recently to talk about Contra aid. Intelligence committee matters are secret.

In Santa Barbara, Calif., Marlin Fitzwater, Reagan's spokesman, said he was unaware of any such requests for aid by Powell or by anybody else.

"I'm sure we continually consult with Congress on the status of the Contras," Fitzwater said, "but in no way does that conflict with Secretary Shultz's statements that we support peace" in Central America.

Sober Dealings

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan said Saturday that Soviet adventurism in Nicaragua, Afghanistan and elsewhere poses "a major impediment" to improved superpower relations that will not be masked by a nuclear missile treaty.

Reagan, in his weekly radio address to the nation, said U.S. leaders must not drop their guard just because the two superpowers are poised to sign a treaty outlawing medium-range nuclear missiles.

"We must deal with the Soviets soberly, and from strength, in the name of peace," the president said in the address delivered from Rancho del Cielo, his 688-acre ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains north of Santa Barbara.

Reagan previewed his coming summit in Washington with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Delegate Survey Says Majority Undecided: Dukakis Leads Pack

By RICHARD L. VERNACI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The overwhelming majority of Democratic leaders who are automatic delegates to next summer's national convention have no clear idea who they want as the party's 1988 presidential nominee, according to the campaign season's first Associated Press delegate survey.

Democratic delegates who are uncommitted — 278 — outnumber those with an early candidate preference by nearly 4-1. The leader among the candidates, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, has lined up just 23 delegates who will cast 22.5 votes at the convention.

To gauge the extent of candidate support two months before the first 1988 presidential caucus, The AP interviewed 354 of the 416 Democratic superdelegates, a group that includes members of the Democratic National Committee, governors and past party leaders.

The AP survey found that Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt trails Dukakis with 13 convention votes while Illinois Sen. Paul Simon has 12. Sen. Albert Gore Jr. has 10.55, Jesse Jackson 9.8 and Bruce Babbitt four.

But these early commitments largely represent "favorite son" support and their significance is far overshadowed by the 278 superdelegates who say they are uncommitted. In all, 76 superdelegates expressed a preference for one candidate or another.

"To be honest, I'm undecided and not particularly happy about it," said Kathy Farley, a Democratic National Committee member from Colorado.

Elaine Kamarck, who tracks delegates for Babbitt, and Matt Seyfang, who handles these duties for Gephardt, believe some party insiders may be reluctant to commit themselves so soon after the campaign burnouts of Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware and former Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado.

Tad Devine, director of delegate selection for Dukakis, predicted that the party regulars would withhold judgment until they see how the candidates do at the polls beginning with the Iowa caucuses on Feb. 8.

"At some point these things crystallize," Ms. Kamarck said. "There's never been a candidate named 'Uncommitted' elected president."

In addition to the 390 convention votes held by the automatic delegates, 253 members of Congress are to be selected in April as convention delegates. In all, these superdelegates, holding more than 15 percent of the delegate vote, are an influential voting bloc whose uncommitted status would make them a key force should there be a deadlock among the declared candidates.

Most of the remaining 3,517 Democratic delegates will be chosen during primary and caucus elections in which they are pledged to support a particular candidate.

"This should not be taken as an indictment of the candidates," said Ms. Kamarck, linking the bloc of uncommitted superdelegates to a similar large undecided category in public opinion polls. "It means that the race is still as unformed in the minds of the party officials as it is in the public at large."

For the survey, AP bureaus in every state, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico reached 354 of the 416 superdelegates — the only delegates known before the party's official primary and caucus season opens in Iowa Feb. 8. (There are no automatic delegates to the Republican convention.)

In Atlanta, some of the Democratic superdelegates will cast only fractions of votes; the 416 represent 390 of the 4,160 votes that will be cast on the convention floor, and the 354 people contacted by AP account for 341.25 convention votes.

The AP Democratic Delegate survey found:

—Dukakis supported by 23 delegates with 22.5 votes;

—Gephardt with 13 delegates who each cast a full vote;

—Simon with 14 delegates with 12 convention votes;

—Gore with 11 delegates, or 10.55 convention votes;

—Jackson with 11 delegates, or 9.8 delegate votes; and —Former Arizona Gov. Babbitt with four delegates who each cast a full vote.

The regionalism of the candidates' early support was unmistakable. Dukakis, for example, drew 12 votes from New England, nine from Massachusetts, while Gephardt received 8 votes from the Midwest, including five from Missouri and two from Iowa.

Simon got eight votes from the Midwest, including five from Illinois, while all seven of Gore's votes from the South came from Tennessee, and three of Babbitt's four votes from the West were from Arizona.

The exception is Jackson, who grew up in South Carolina and lives in Illinois but drew his support elsewhere.

Few of the uncommitted delegates said they were likely to make a choice soon. Only 18 of the 278 undecided delegates said they were leaning toward any particular candidate.

Kennedy's Son To Run Campaign

BOSTON (AP) — Edward M. Kennedy Jr. will run his father's re-election campaign for Senate next year in what could be a prelude to his own entrance into electoral politics.

Although no official announcement has been made, Kennedy, 26, who lost a leg to cancer in 1973, has been named chairman of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's campaign, a member of Kennedy's staff confirmed Friday.

His sister Kara, 27, will act as vice chairman and focus on the news media; brother Patrick, 20, is to work on grass-roots organizing, said the staff member, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The junior Kennedy has considered running for office in the past and has developed an international reputation as an advocate for the handicapped.

John Florescu, a Washington-based television producer and friend of the Kennedy family, said he would be "not at all" surprised to see Kennedy's interest in elective office revive. For now, though, Kennedy's sole focus is the re-election of his father, Florescu said.

"He wants to do a tremendous job and try to get younger voters who aren't familiar with Ted's record and bring in a new generation of supporters," said Florescu, who discussed the upcoming campaign with Kennedy. "There was no suggestion it was a deliberate positioning move."

Neither the senator nor his son could be reached for comment Friday. The senator's offices were closed Friday, and there was no answer at the family's Hyannisport home. His son's telephone number is unlisted.

State Rep. Mary Jane Gibson has seen Kennedy in action on Beacon Hill pushing legislation to help the handicapped assume a more active role in society.

"He was very well-spoken and quite moving," Gibson said.

Staff Changes

BOSTON (AP) — Gov. Michael S. Dukakis shook up his Democratic presidential campaign staff Friday, accepting the resignation of press secretary Patricia O'Brien and promoting field director Jack Corrigan to director of campaign operations.

The departure of O'Brien, 50, had been rumored for several days. Boston newspapers reported she had alienated many of Dukakis' inner circle and had fallen short of expectations in dealing with the press.

The changes were the latest in a series of moves at the senior level of the Dukakis campaign, starting with the departure of campaign manager John Sasso two months ago. Sasso was forced to resign, along with political director Paul Tully, after the two men were implicated in the production of a video tape that undermined the candidacy of Sen. Joseph Biden.

NWS Forecasts Wet, Stormy Winter Along The East Coast

By GUY DARST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — This winter may be something like a rerun of two years ago, according to the National Weather Service:

—Wet and stormy on the East Coast.

—Cold from the Appalachians to the Great Plains.

—Warm and dry in the Southwest and warm along the coast of Oregon and Washington.

These predictions are partly the result of expected changes in wind patterns, said Donald L. Gilman, the chief long-range forecaster for the National Weather Service, at a news conference Friday.

The predictions include:

—The eastward-bound winter storm track from Texas through Georgia will start over the Gulf of Mexico instead of Texas.

—Wind that normally blows storms onto the Pacific Coast from the West will turn northward and blow them more onto the Pacific Coast of Canada.

—The wind that normally blows out of Canada from northwest to southeast into the U.S. Midwest will blow more from north to south.

The gulf origin of East Coast storms means they will carry much more moisture than normal. Washingtonians are sensitive about these things, having been battered by 17 inches of "flurries" on Nov. 11, and Gilman had to decline requests to predict snow amounts.

"Whether it's snow or rain depends very much on what the circumstances are at that time. The most logical thing to expect is sometimes it'll be one, sometimes the other," said Gilman.

"The temperatures will probably be so variable from week to week that how they'll balance up over the whole season is beyond our ability to predict."

Gilman called the Nov. 11 storm a "once in a lifetime event."

California had a dry winter last year, and two in a row can mean water shortages. Gilman said he hoped it wouldn't replay 1976-1977, and said he believed there are indications that "once in a while the pattern will shift enough ... so the storm will come straight in" bringing moisture to California instead of Canada.

Winter last year was influenced by the so-called "El Nino" warm equatorial current from the western Pacific onto the coast of South America. This current is still there but weakening and the forecast "does not really depend very much on what happens with El Nino," said Gilman.

California's dryness last year cannot be blamed on El Nino because "there is no consistent relationship between El Nino and West Coast precipitation," Gilman said. In the 1972-1973 El Nino year, the coast got more rain than normal.

Asked about the September prediction of the Old Farmers Almanac that the country is in for three severe winters in a row, Gilman stressed the word "somebody" in his reply: "I'm sure that somebody will get three bad winters in a row, but that's about all you can say."

WINTER OUTLOOK — Donald L. Gilman, chief of the prediction branch, U.S. Weather Service, tells reporters that the outlook for this winter shows the greatest likelihood of cold weather is in the Midwest and Deep South. Unseasonably mild weather is predicted for the Southwest, while stormy, wet weather is forecast for the East Coast. The outlook covers the months of December through February. (AP Laserphoto)

FCC Eyes Offensive Programs

By DEBORAH MESCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission will soon send a signal to broadcasters on how to clean the raunch from radio and television airwaves.

The FCC is examining about two dozen complaints filed since April when the agency toughened its stance on indecent programming, officials say, and several complaints will be ready for action soon.

"Within the next month or two we will see some dismissals or enforcement actions," said one FCC official, speaking on condition of anonymity. Actions could range from warnings to fines to license suspensions and revocations.

Broadcasters complain that the FCC has given them little more than a 25-word definition of what will be considered indecent: "Material that depicts or describes, in terms patently offensive as measured by contemporary community standards for the broadcast medium, sexual or excretory activities or organs."

The agency said last week that such material may be aired between midnight and 6 a.m., when children are not likely to be in the audience.

Obscene material — defined as appealing to prurient interests, depicting sexual acts in a patently offensive way and lacking artistic, literary, political or scientific value — cannot be aired at any time, the FCC reminded.

Though broadcasters welcomed the time guidelines, they left open the possibility of going to court for a clarification of the indecency standard.

"If it's vague, how does the broadcaster know what to do?" said Jeff Baumann, general counsel of the National Association of Broadcasters. "Does that then chill broadcasters in terms of what they put on the air.

"Broadcasters are not clamoring for the opportunity to put on material that violates the law," he said. But, he added, "if a standard is so vague and subject to interpretation, a commission down the road could use it to give broadcasters a great deal of trouble."

In its ruling last April, the FCC said it would no longer limit indecency to the "seven dirty words" in comedian George Carlin's monologue of the same name, which became the basis of a 1978 Supreme Court ruling. The FCC said it would apply the 25-word definition embodied in that decision.

The FCC also said provocative material aired after 10 p.m. would no longer be safe from government sanction because many children were still listening to radios and watching TV at that hour. At first it declined to say when such material would be safe, but last week acceded to requests for clarification by recognizing the midnight-6 a.m. "safe harbor."

In all other respects, the FCC's ruling last week reaffirmed its findings of indecency against three radio station owners, and said broadcasters can look to those cases for guidance on what they can and can't air.

In one of the three cases, Pacifica Foundation Inc.'s KPFK-FM, Los Angeles, was cited for broadcasting a program the FCC said contained explicit depictions of homosexual acts. Pacifica, which has taken its case to a federal appeals court, defended the program, saying it was a discussion about a play running in Los Angeles about safe sex and the disease AIDS.

Morning-show personality Howard Stern, whose program is aired by Infinity Broadcasting Co. stations WYSP-FM in Philadelphia and WXRK-FM in New York City, was warned "innuendo may be rendered explicit by surrounding sexual explicitness."

KCSB-FM, licensed to the University of California at Santa Barbara, was warned for airing a rock song with sexually explicit lyrics.

FCC officials have resisted giving more definitive descriptions of what it considers indecent, saying that would pose constitutional problems — words that could be considered indecent in one context might not be in another.

Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 6062 would like to express their heartfelt gratitude and appreciation to the following organizations and the many individuals for their support in bringing the "HOLIDAY ADVENTURE IN TOYLAND" show to our community on November 17, 1987.

Freed Frenchmen Welcomed Home

By JOEL DONNET
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — Frenchmen Jean-Louis Normandin and Roger Auque came home to a tumultuous welcome Saturday after being freed by their kidnappers in Beirut.

Normandin, 36, a lighting engineer for the Antenne 2 network, spent 20 months in captivity before his release Friday. Auque, 31, a free-lance journalist, was held for 10 months.

Premier Jacques Chirac and Foreign Minister Jean-Bernard Raimond met the former hostages at Orly Airport after they were freed by the clandestine Shiite Moslem Revolutionary Justice Organization.

"Thanks to all of those who worked for our release," Normandin said to his Antenne 2 colleagues as he held his young son in his arms and fought back tears. "Please, don't ask me too much."

A boisterous crowd swarmed around the Mystere 20 jet after it stopped on the tarmac in front of the VIP lounge at Orly. Officials, family members and journalists jostled one another to have a word with the freed Frenchmen. The plane had stopped at Corsica before heading to Paris.

Auque thanked those involved in obtaining his release, adding that "in September, I was informed that I probably would be freed." He repeated the allegation he made shortly after he was released in Beirut that "the majority of the kidnappers were Palestinians."

Both men appeared to be in good health.

The latest releases left 20 foreigners, including four Frenchmen and eight Americans, missing after being kidnapped in Lebanon. In addition, Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite is missing after he vanished last January during a mission to mediate with Islamic Jihad, which holds some of the hostages.

The longest-held foreign hostage in Lebanon is Terry Anderson, 40, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press. He was kidnapped March 16, 1985 by the Islamic Jihad.

Normandin and Auque left the packed airport lounge after about 10 minutes.

Shortly before they arrived home, the afternoon newspaper Le Monde hit the streets with a report that "the payment of a ransom contributed to the conclusion of the negotiations with the kidnappers." It gave no details.

In a brief speech at the airport before the arrival of Normandin and Auque, Chirac denied "this deceitful allegation with no basis" and wondered aloud what could have been behind it.

"We will continue to do all that is in our power and which conforms to our dignity to obtain the release of the (three) last French hostages," he said, referring to diplomats Marcel Carton and Marcel Fontaine and journalist Jean-Paul Kauffmann.

Chirac said the release would help improve relations with Iran.

But he said France would not normalize its ties with the Persian nation as long as groups allied with Iran "continue to hold hostages in Lebanon in contempt of human rights, in contempt of international rules."

Asked by reporters if France had made any commitments to the kidnappers, Charles Pasqua, the interior minister who led the French government team working for the hostages' release, shrugged and said everyone must continue to think about those who remain in custody.

"For us, this is a beginning, not an end," he said.

Joelle Kauffmann, wife of hostage Jean-Paul Kauffman, said she hoped Friday's release was not an isolated case.

"They told us in recent months that there had been a global negotiation for a release of all of the hostages, and not drop-by-drop," she said. "I don't know if the government sees what has happened today as a semi-victory or a semi-failure."

The Revolutionary Justice Organization released a statement in Beirut saying the freeing of Normandin and Auque "closes the file of the French hostages with our organization. We hold no other Frenchmen." It does, however, hold two Americans.

In an earlier interview from Beirut with Radio Television Luxembourg, Auque said his greatest fear in captivity was not death or abuse but that he would go crazy.

"The hardest thing was constantly returning to memories and recognizing that one has made a lot of mistakes, that one has sometimes hurt others, that one has not always been very good, and one starts to mix up his thoughts and has problems focusing his attention on one idea for more than a minute. At that instant, one understands that he is starting to show mental weakness."

Iran Threatens To Strike First

By SAMIR F. GHATTAS
Associated Press Writer

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran's president, Ali Khamenei, said Saturday that Iranian forces would carry out a pre-emptive strike against U.S. naval units in the Persian Gulf if Washington endangers Tehran's regional interests.

"I declare that in order to confront the U.S. we will not wait for it to strike at us first," Khamenei was quoted as saying by the official Islamic Republic News Agency.

"If we feel that the U.S. is bent upon continuing its provocative and mischievous acts or may try to endanger our interests in the Persian Gulf we will certainly strike."

Khamenei also heads the Supreme Defense Council which decides war policy. He was addressing a group of 500,000 military volunteers in Shiraz in the southern Fars province, IRNA said, monitored in Nicosia.

In Bahrain, U.S. military sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said American forces located 13 mines in the northern gulf in the past 10 days.

The mines were in a main shipping channel southwest of Iranian-held Farsi Island.

The Pentagon announced in Washington that the 19th convoy of U.S.-flagged Kuwaiti tankers sailed out of the gulf Saturday through the Strait of Hormuz.

The United States has reflagged 11 Kuwaiti tankers as part of its program to protect commercial shipping from the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

Iranian and U.S. forces have engaged in three major armed confrontations in the gulf since the Navy began escorting the tankers through the gulf in July.

In the first confrontation on Sept. 21, U.S. helicopters attacked an Iranian landing ship that was caught laying mines. Four Iranian crewmen were killed and 26 wounded.

Rockets from U.S. Army MH-6 helicopter gunships sank an Iranian speedboat and disabled two others after a U.S. helicopter was fired on near Farsi. Six Iranians were captured, but two died of wounds after being rescued by U.S. forces.

Four U.S. destroyers bombarded oil platforms at Iran's offshore Rostam oilfield on Oct. 19. U.S. officials said then the attack was a limited reprisal for an Iranian missile attack three days earlier on the products tanker Sea Isle City, one of the reflagged tankers.

The Sea Isle attack wounded 18 crewmen, including tanker's American master.

Khamenei said Saturday that Iran holds the upper hand in its "confrontation" with America, but is closely watching developments in the region and is determined to counter the "dangerous" U.S. policy, IRNA said.

Latin Presidents Talk Debt Terms

ACAPULCO, Mexico (AP) — Eight Latin American presidents on Saturday hammered out details of a joint strategy to back their demands for better debt payment terms from U.S. and other foreign creditors.

Officials said the common stance will be announced in a manifesto to be released Sunday at the end of the eight-nation summmit in this Pacific coastal resort.

"This is a message for us," said Luiz Carlos Bresser Pereira, Brazil's finance minister. "And it's a message also for creditor countries." He commented in a brief interview Friday night at a dinner at the San Diego Fort, an 18th-century fortress overlooking Acapulco's spectacular bay.

The negotiating points, according to officials, will reflect the debtor nations' shared conclusion that they cannot repay their debts without adequate financing. The manifesto also will say that interest charges on the debts should be compatible with the debtors' economic growth.

Gorbachev Grants Brokaw Interview

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev was "very amiable and very charming" during the first personal interview of a Soviet leader by a U.S. television network, NBC anchorman Tom Brokaw said Saturday.

Gorbachev's one-hour exchange with Brokaw will be aired in full by NBC in the United States on Monday at 8 p.m. EST, network officials have announced.

Brokaw told The Associated Press after the interview conducted in the Council of Ministers room at the Kremlin that the 56-year-old Communist Party chief chatted informally with NBC executives before and after the taping.

"He was very amiable and very charming and, well, let's just say he didn't get there by accident," Brokaw said. "He was obviously trying to seize the moment.

"We definitely got the impression he is really looking forward to his trip to the United States," said NBC's Moscow correspondent, Sandy Gilmour, who took part in the informal exchanges before and after the interview.

Brokaw said he managed to get through most of the questions he had prepared on the subjects of arms control, human rights, Gorbachev's personal life, his campaigns for more openness and rebuilding of Soviet society and the economy, and the case of ousted Moscow party boss Boris N. Yeltsin.

Witness Describes Zimbabwe Murders; Killers Are Hunted

By JOHN EDLIN
Associated Press Writer

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — The nation's top police official on Saturday inspected the farms where 16 white missionaries and children were hacked to death by a murderous band, whose leader he vowed to capture "at all costs."

A witness to the worst attack on whites since Zimbabwe's 1980 independence told Saturday of how the attackers used axes against their bound victims, and how they bashed a 6-week-old boy against a kitchen sink until he died.

Killed were seven women, five children and four men.

John Russell, who was away at the time of the massacre, became the only surviving adult member of the Pentecostal Christian commune called Community for Reconciliation. He said he would abandon the two homesteads, called New Adam's and Olive Tree.

"When this atrocity happened, I was on my way from the United States and Britain," he told reporters at the site of the killings, which occurred Wednesday night. "I was told on my arrival that this had happened. I have lost my wife ... I still can't believe it."

Home Affairs Minister Enos Nkala, who is in charge of police, said after being shown the massacre site by armed police: "We want Gayigusu at all costs. We want his head."

Gayigusu ("grinding the bush" in the local Matabele language), whose real name is Morgan Sango, is a notorious rebel leader authorities blame for many of the hundreds of slayings in western Zimbabwe's Matabeleland province in the last few years. He is believed to lead a band of about 20 men.

"It is a matter of time before we get him," Nkala said after inspecting the two farms southeast of Bulawayo, the province's administrative capital.

Members of Gayigus's gang fought under Nkomo's command in the seven-year war for independence, then returned to the bush when Nkomo did not win power in elections.

Nkomo, on a private visit to England, condemned the massacre as "dastardly and callous." He suggested it was aimed at wrecking talks he has been holding with Prime Minister Robert Mugabe aimed at merging the nation's two main politial parties. Nkomo and Mugabe led separate armies in the war that helped transform the white-ruled British colony of Rhodesia to black-governed Zimbabwe.

Nkala said the victims were axed to death after their hands were tied behind their backs and were left in the two burning houses.

Mrs. Esinathi Dube, a black domestic employee of the missionaries, told him she witnessed the killings.

"The first to be axed was Mrs. Russell, who was also chopped five times," she said, referring to Mrs. Hazel Russell, 46, a white Zimbabwean and John Russell's wife. "Then they called the Marais family into the kitchen one by one and chopped them with an ax while their hands were tied behind them."

David Marais, 35, his wife Katherine, 34, and their son Ethan, 4, were killed.

Mrs. Dube, choking back tears, said the gunmen summoned another family from the commune — Robert Hill, 38, his wife Gaynor, 27, and their son Benjamin, 3 weeks. "When they started chopping Gaynor, I started vomiting and fainting," she said.

The gunmen, who did not use their weapons, then set fire to the homesteads and fled into the night, she said.

A 6-year-old boy escaped before the slaughter and a girl of 13 was released to carry a note to authorities denouncing the Mugabe government. Two of the victims were Americans.

Haiti Says No Monitoring

By DONNA CASSATA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government of Haiti on Saturday denied congressional representatives on a presidential-appointed delegation permission to monitor the Caribbean country's first general elections in 30 years.

Rep. Benjamin Gilman of New York, a senior Republican member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and Jaime B. Fuster, Puerto Rican resident commissioner, learned of the decision from State Department officials at about 12:30 a.m. Saturday, Gilman said. Elections are to be held in Haiti on Sunday.

"I'm shocked and disappointed," Gilman said in a telephone interview later in the day. "This is an ill-conceived, arbitrary decision."

Twelve members of the delegation, including representatives of labor, business, education, the church and the law, were allowed to enter Haiti, a State Department spokesman said.

In denying permission to Gilman and Fuster, the military-dominated junta of Haiti cited an Oct. 14 letter to Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy, president of the National Governing Council, in which congressional leaders voiced concerns about human rights in the upcoming elections. The letter was signed by 46 members of Congress, including Gilman and Fuster.

President Reagan announced Wednesday that Gilman, Fuster and Walter Fauntroy, the Democratic delegate to Congress from the District of Columbia, would travel to Haiti to be official observers to the election.

Fauntroy had decided not to participate before Haiti announced that it would deny visas to the congressional delegation.

"We regret this decision which will deprive the observer delegation of the experienced judgment which members of Congress would have provided," said Ben Justesen, a State Department spokesman.

"Our embassy in Port-au-Prince sought to reverse the decision," he said.

Sunday's balloting is for a president and National Assembly to replace Namphy's junta, which has ruled the Caribbean nation since dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier fled to exile in France 22 months ago.

The joint congressional letter said "a transition to democracy in the post-Duvalier era requires a protection of the people's basic human and civil rights, including freedom of assembly and association, of the press, of labor unions and of speech."

The letter cited allegations of the direct involvement of Haitian security forces in a series of attacks on civilians, foreign and domestic journalists, and priests and community leaders. It also mentioned allegations that the junta had interfered in the work of the Provisional Electoral Council and failed to "demonstrate any meaningful commitment in the investigation of human rights abuses."

Gilman said he hoped the remaining delegation members would be able to successfully monitor the elections.

"I hope the process will go forward," Gilman said. "The president underscored his concern."

The State Department said the elections "are crucial in that country's determined march to democracy. Our observer team is an important signal to the Haitian people of the strong support the administration has given to that process."

Turkish Premier Ozal Expected To Lead Motherland Party Win

By EMEL ANIL
Associated Press Writer

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — The Motherland Party of Premier Turgut Ozal is likely to win a parliamentary majority in Sunday's elections despite a drop in voter support over the last weeks of the campaign, according to the latest public opinion poll published Saturday.

The Piar Polling Agency, whose predictions have generally proved accurate in previous elections, said 36.3 percent of the voters were backing Ozal's free market policies. That is down from 39.4 percent two weeks ago.

Piar said its margin of error was 2 percent.

It projected that Motherland would win 260 seats in the 450-seat National Assembly.

The poll indicated increased support for the Social Democratic Populist Party, which gained 10 percent points after two weeks of vigorous campaigning.

The Social Democrats were supported by 28.8 percent of those queried, which would translate into 145 seats in Parliament.

Seven parties are in the race. But the poll forecast that only three would be represented in Parliament. Under Turkish law, a party must get at least 10 percent of the vote to enter Parliament.

The center-right True Path Party led by former Premier Suleyman Demirel is expected to come in third with 19 percent of the vote and an estimated 45 seats, the poll said.

In the outgoing Parliament, which had 400 seats, the major party breakdown was: Motherland Party, 249 seats; Social Democratic Populist Party 54; True Path 45, and Democratic Left Party 27.

The Prosperity Party and the Nationalist Work Party had one seat each. There were 18 independents and five vacant seats.

Ozal advocated a larger Parliament to represent Turkey's 52 million people.

The poll said the Democratic Left Party, headed by former Premier Bulent Ecevit, will not gain any seats. Piar gave Ecevit's party 6.4 percent of the vote.

Unlike the military-supervised elections in 1983, which restored civilian rule and brought Ozal to power, Sunday's elections are open to all legally established parties.

In 1983, the military allowed only three parties to run. Two of those are now defunct. Their legislators joined other parties set up after the military relinquished power.

Former political leaders, barred from political activity until 1992 by the military, were freed from the ban in a September referendum. They are all in the running at the head of newly established parties.

As the campaign heated up, Social Democratic leader Erdal Inonu's star rose. Inonu, 62, a nuclear physicist turned politician, came across in TV speeches as a confident, unruffled leader with a sense of humor.

Inonu, son of the late President Ismet Inonu, likened the Turkish people to a "squeezed lemon" under Ozal's government, which has failed to keep inflation from soaring to 50 percent.

"Do you want to be squeezed for another five years?" Inonu asked voters.

Ozal countered by pointing to an economic boom that has seen Turkey grow by eight percent and seven percent over the past two years.

Ozal said he brought electricity and telephones to Turkey's remote villages, made massive infrastructure investments, liberalized foreign trade, and reduced bureaucratic controls.

In full-page newspaper advertisements Saturday, the Motherland Party invited Turks "to march to the year 2000 hand-in-hand."

The premier, who called the elections one year early, seeks Turkey's membership in the European Economic Community by the end of the century. As the result of import liberalization, Turkish shops are stocked with foreign gadgets, cigarettes and liquor. Exports keep rising steadily and may surpass $9 billion this year.

The campaign has been relatively calm except for bomb explosions a month ago at three local branches of the Motherland Party that killed one man and injured nine people. The assailants have not beeen tracked down.

Responsibility for the explosions was claimed both by the leftist underground Turkish People's Liberation Front and two previously unknown Islamic groups that charged Ozal with anti-Islamic policies. Police declined to comment on the conflicting claims.

Under Turkish law, electioneering had to end at 6 p.m. Saturday.

There are 26.3 million Turks eligible to vote. A high turnout was expected since failure to vote carries a fine of $13.

Polling hours were 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. A trend is expected to emerge by Sunday midnight but complete results are not expected before Tuesday.

Police Diffuse S. Korean Rallies

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A youth hurled a tear gas grenade at government presidential candidate Roh Tae-woo Saturday, and thousands of riot police broke up demonstrations in Seoul and other cities in a major show of strength.

Protesters shouted "Execute Roh!"

The grenade missed Roh, at a rally in the port of Inchon outside Seoul, and failed to go off. Officials said it glanced off a campaign aide.

Scores of police seized the attacker and dragged him away.

Thousands of police were guarding Roh after reports that radical students would stage an attack. He has escaped a series of assaults with firebombs, rocks and tear gas at campaign rallies prior to Dec. 16 presidential elections.

Police declined to discuss Saturday's attack.

Kim Young-sam, a major opposition candidate, told a rally in Taegu that the government was using bribery and corruption to try to win the elections.

Korean news reports estimated the turnout for Kim at 600,000 people. Opposition officials said 1 million people had attended.

About 20,000 riot police were deployed across the country Saturday after the National Coalition for Democracy called for protests in 26 cities to demand that Roh quit the race.

Violence erupted in Kwangju, Chonju and Chongju. Dozens of people were arrested as police used tear gas and protesters attacked offices of the governing Democratic Justice Party.

Still, the rallies attracted relatively small audiences and there were no protests in many of the designated cities.

The few hundred people who showed up for the protest in central Seoul were swamped by 5,000 riot police ringing the park where the meeting was to be held.

Riot police swept up and down sidewalks as protesters attempted to gather in the street outside the park.

"Execute Roh Tae-woo!" and "Punish Roh Tae-woo!,' protesters shouted.

About 12 coalition leaders and supporters were dragged into a police bus and taken away when they tried to enter the park. Police later arrested about 15 people in sidewalk scuffles.

The protesters scattered leaflets demanding Roh be punished for the bloody suppression by government forces of the Kwangju uprising in 1980. Roh was a general at the time and helped President Chun Doo-hwan take power that year with military backing.

Police tear gas dispersed about 200 students Saturday who hurled firebombs and rocks in an anti-Roh protest in Kwangju.

Dozens of youths attacked two offices of the government party in Chongju with rocks and firebombs. They smashed dozens of windows and gutted one office.

About 30 people were arrested in Taejon at a coalition rally. Three people were arrested in street demonstrations in Chonju, the coalition said.

Coalition officials said about 20 people were arrested for trying to stage a protest in Kangnung.

A rally by opposition candidate Kim Jong-pil in Pusan was disrupted briefly when a young man leapt onto the dias, cut his finger and wrote a slogan in blood denouncing the Korea Broadcasting System.

Opposition supporters contend the state-owned network slanted its coverage to favor Roh.

"Roh Tae-woo, Roh Tae-woo!," aoout 40,000 spectators chanted at Inchon as Roh attacked the opposition, charging it would plunge the country into chaos.

Roh said he would establish diplomatic relations with China and ensure regional peace if elected.

Early Voting Option

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — President Hussain Muhammad Ershad offered to hold early elections in a speech to the nation Saturday 24 hours after he declared a state of emergency to quell growing unrest.

The government meanwhile imposed strict press censorship, banning all reports on the political opposition and on anything deemed critical of the government. Curfews stilled the streets of Dhaka and four other cities.

Ershad's offer came in a 25-minute address broadcast over radio and television. The former army general, who seized power in 1982 in a bloodless military coup, did not specify when elections might be held or what offices they would fill.

But he hinted the elections would be for a new Parliament.

"If the people vote for a change of the government, I will not hesitate to happily hand over power to the victorious party," Ershad said.

He assured the nation that the elections, which were not to have been held until 1991, would be fair.

The opposition has accused Ershad's government of mismanaging the economy and rigging the balloting that elected him president a year ago. His Jatiya Party has a majority in the country's 330-seat parliament, elected in May 1986.

Through three weeks of demonstrations and general strikes, the opposition has been calling for Ershad to step down before any new election.

It wants a neutral caretaker government to administer new elections and decide the nation's form of government.

The two main opposition politicians, Sheik Hasina and Khaleda Zia, reportedly rejected the idea of new elections under Ershad's government when the president sought their support.

The two have been under house arrest since Nov. 11, a day after the unrest began. Ms. Hasina is the daughter of assassinated President Sheik Mujibur Rahman. Ms. Zia is the wife of slain President Ziaur Rahman.

Ershad offered Saturday to meet with the opposition, which has refused to enter into such talks.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Long-Term Plan Correct Approach

The need for additional space for Pitt County's offices is urgent and the county commissioners should address this issue with a long-term approach to expansion.

In addition, the board should also seek a cooperative relationship with Greenville when planning new office space. If an office relocation is expedient for both entities, it would best serve the citizens' interest for any new construction to be devised jointly. Since downtown Greenville would be a logical, practical site to relocate county offices, future city needs could easily be considered in any approach.

County needs are not minimal, and projections prove this point. The 474 employees working in the courthouse and county office building are expected to increase to 595 in the next five years. To accommodate this growth, planners strongly and correctly recommend the 85,725 feet of office space owned by the county be increased to 177,230 square feet. Three buildings purchased earlier this year by the county will provide only another 22,842 square feet — still 69,000 square feet short of the estimated need in five years.

City officials say they are running out of space to put employees — a situation which just isn't congruous with a growing city in need of an expanding staff.

With the requirements of both entities considered, it would be feasible for the two to coordinate long-term planning and financing for any building for space needs. A combined city-county complex housing a conglomerate of offices might be the best approach.

A structure of that type would be cost effective for the two to operate and efficient for the taxpayer who seeks city or county services. It would be beneficial to have all city and county administrative services and courthouse functions in close proximity. Centralization would be less confusing to the public and better serve taxpayers' needs.

Furthermore, the county commissioners should not take the easiest or cheapest approach to planning for future office needs. Even if it means tearing down existing structures on property — a move which might be difficult for the county commissioners to accept — relocating the county offices should be seen as an opportunity to meet space requirements well into the future. It is not an opportunity that should be approached with a Band-Aid or stop-gap effort.

The county commissioners should initiate a meeting with the City Council to discuss constructing an office complex downtown. Addressing the needs of both city and county in one effort would be a responsible, long-term approach to planning for space needs.

Scrambling For An Alternative

In 1986, in response to an appeal to save people of the world, an international agreement restricting use of ozone-destroying chemicals was signed by major industrialized countries. It was an effort to get their houses in order.

The prime target were chlorofluorcarbon compounds (CFCs) which are credited with damaging the protective ozone layer high above Mother Earth.

Since that agreement was signed in Montreal, there has been a scramble by manufacturers to find alternative substances to CFCs for such products as seat cushions, insulation for homes, refrigerators, air conditioners, carry-out containers and solvents to clean computer chips — it's a long list and a great deal of money is involved.

CFCs are used because they react chemically with few other substances, are not toxic and do not burn. Manufacturers are concerned over possibly losing the race to find substitutes for CFCs which have such widespread use.

Plastic foam makers, for instance, fear being driven out of business. Electronics manufacturers think they may get by with a big increase in recycling of CFC compounds, and automakers are relying heavily on hope that alternatives will be available for vehicle air conditioners.

The Environmental Protection Agency is under a Dec. 1 court deadline to decide whether to regulate CFCs. The agency expects to use that deadline to propose draft regulations to carry out the Montreal agreement.

So there's a race underway and the stakes are really big.

Holiday Hustle And Bustle Begins

Sunday Morning Notes

And now it's Christmas shopping season.

The rush is under way to get those gifts for mom and pop, a tie for Uncle Ed, and, of course, all kinds of toys for the kids.

The stores will be packed and will stay that way until every last gift is bought, wrapped and labeled in preparation for the Christmas morning custom of exchanging presents around the Christmas tree.

The gift giving mania grows larger every year and obliging merchants stock an ever larger variety of gift items to provide a wide choice. All the buyer has to do is know the right size and color to make the recipient happy on Christmas morning.

Of course, lots of the gifts will be delivered by the mystical Santa Claus who by tradition comes down the chimney on Christmas eve to leave the myriad toys which make the youngsters so elated. If you believe in Santa Claus you simply ignore the fact that the jolly old gent couldn't possibly fit in most modern chimneys. And then how about the manufactured fireplaces in many new homes and condos? And how about the homes that don't have fireplaces?

Anyway, Santa manages to visit in practically every home where there are children. The younger ones accept this miracle and the older ones don't ask questions.

It is also the season where dear ol' dad — or maybe it's granddad now — tells the stories about the sparse Christmases of his youth. The lone toy might have been a pair of roller skates, and an orange and a candy cane might have completed the Santa gifts. Somehow, though, even in those hard times, the Christmas dinner was never lacking. There was the traditional turkey, stuffing, gravy and all the trimmings. There was fruit cake and pumpkin pie for dessert. No matter how somber the stories of Christmas past might be, everyone seems to have dined well on Christmas day.

Well back in 1987, we are barely past the stuffing we had on Thanksgiving day and few are yet planning the Christmas meal. That will come after the gift shopping is done and many a cook will put all her — or his — skills into the dinner that will feed a family — or an army — on Christmas day.

If it sounds as if your columnist is jaded by it all, forget it. I love the hustle and bustle of the Christmas season, the anticipation of the day and the family gatherings it brings about. No matter how many Christmases you experience, each is new and exciting. May it ever be.

Bring Leadership Deficit Under Control

Walter Mead

For weeks the eyes of the world were fixed on the congressional and administration budget conferees. A crisis of confidence, said many observers. The last chance to fix the deficit, said others. On some days, little progress was reported and on those days the nation — or at least the media — shuddered. Would the conferees make significant budget cuts and so restore confidence to the shaken financial markets? Finally, the conference presented its results, and last week Wall Street neither crashed nor soared. It yawned.

What Reagan said of the majority report on the Iran-Contra affair, that they labored and brought forth a mouse, could be said with more justice of the budget negotiators. With $23 billion of cuts already assured by Gramm-Rudman, a month of face-to-face talks involving the most senior U.S. political leaders resulted in only $7 billion of additional 1988 cuts. More cuts were promised in 1989, after the election. We shall see.

The $7 billion was more illusion than reality. Federal budget estimates are just that — estimates. A strong economy means more income and fewer expenses for the Treasury, and a recession means the opposite. Seven billion dollars, less than 1 percent of federal spending, is simply too small a number to have any significance. In October, the deficit was $5 billion larger than originally estimated — virtually wiping out the ballyhooed $7 billion.

Under Gramm-Rudman, cuts were to be equally divided between the military and domestic budgets. Since the president was unwilling to accept $11.5 billion in defense cuts, and Congress felt the same way about domestic programs, tense negotiations were anticipated long before the market crash.

While legislators and administration officials welcomed the chance to pose as the nation's saviors in an economic crisis, the stock market crash had little to do with the decisions reached. The deal's general outlines — slightly higher taxes and slightly lower spending levels — had also been clear since Gramm-Rudman was enacted. It has been clear since 1981, that politicians of both parties lack either the vision or the courage to attack portions of the federal deficit that make the most trouble.

Republicans would like to cut middle class entitlement programs, but they fear the wrath of voters. Democrats dream of pruning what they regard as unnecessary weapons programs, but they too lack the stomach for the resulting political fight. It will take more than a stock market crash to break up this logjam.

In any case, it is far from clear that the federal deficit had anything to do with the crash. The deficits, after all, have been mounting for years and during most of that time stock prices rose regardless of the federal deficit. In fact, the federal deficit had begun to shrink in the months before the crash, and the Gramm-Rudman process insured further cuts were on the way.

It is also unclear that cutting federal spending is the wisest course in the wake of a crash. The time to cut the deficit was 1984 and 1985, when the economic expansion was young.

We need a Congress and a president who can do their part in these uncertain times. It is not enough for them to quibble over a few billion dollars in the federal budget. They must come to terms with the whole range of problems effecting the sluggishness and vulnerability of the world economy and declining U.S. competitiveness. Once the leadership deficit has been brought under control, and Washington is once again capable of bold and constructive economic action, the markets will stabilize and the economy can grow. And, who knows, we may even be able to get the budget and trade deficits down to reasonable levels.

Who'll Replace The Rat In The Barn?

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — Now that the secretary of state's office will no longer be the barn that houses the oldest rat in the Democratic party, North Carolina voters will have to decide what they want to do with it.

Thad Eure's decision not to seek a 14th term as secretary of state means a wide open race for the office, with a campaign that is likely to center more on the kind of candidates running than on any issues.

When Eure first won the office in 1936 he used the slogan: "Give a young man a chance." Young candidates are the first into this race.

Democrats would be hard-pressed to nominate a more faithful party activist than Brad Miller, a Raleigh lawyer who operated the party's phone banks in 1984 and who has held numerous other party posts in recent years. Miller, 34, is a bright and earnest lawyer, and he knows a good bit about grassroots organization. But voters will have to make an effort to get to know him because he is not likely to have a great deal of money to spend, and because his competition is likely to be much more recognizable.

Ray Warren, the only announced Republican at this time, would have much the same appeal as Miller. He's also a young lawyer who could be expected to bring a great deal of enthusiasm to the job. (The Congressional Club might oppose Warren and try to put one of its own on the GOP ticket.)

The second option for the Democratic voters is to nominate either a woman or a black to bring some variety to the ticket. Ever since Virginia Democrats swept into office with a ticket compromised of a white male, black male and white female in 1985, North Carolina Democrats have been wondering aloud if they could do the same thing. The slot for secretary of state would have to go to a woman or a black if this kind of rainbow ticket is to be arranged.

Betty Wallace, a deputy superintendent of public instruction and unsuccessful candidate for U.S. Senate in 1986, has talked of running. In 1984, former Wake Commissioner Betty Ann Knudsen unsiccessfully sought the nomination in a race with Eure.

Howard Lee, the former Chapel Hill mayor and former secretary of natural resources and community development in the administration of Gov. Jim Hunt, is the most widely discussed potential black candidate. But the name of outgoing Charlotte Mayor Harvey Gantt is also being discussed.

The third option is to take on an established political name. Here Rufus Edmisten appears. The former attorney general and unsuccessful 1984 gubernatorial candidate says he wants to run.

While Edmisten would be the apparent frontrunner for the nomination, he may also suffer from political burnout. Edmisten was roughed up pretty badly in 1984, and he hasn't helped himself since by lobbying in the legislature against positions which he took when he was a candidate and a officeholder.

Lee can also be seen as a failed politician. DNRCD was a mess when he left it and he's already lost one statewide race, that for lieutenant governor in 1976.

Still, these two men have followings. There are many Edmisten loyalists in the Democratic Party. Lee would be likely to draw considerable support from blacks and liberals, and from those who feel a black candidate on the ticket would help all Democrats running in 1988.

There are issues like corporate takeover laws and lobbyists regulation that could enter this campaign, but races for Council of State don't usually attract enough attention for issues to be noticed. This race, at least in the primary, is likely to be about how a ticket should be filled out, not about any particular issues.

The Problem Of Acid Rain: Pledges But No Progress

Michael Weisskopf

WASHINGTON — When President Reagan endorsed the recommendation by special envoys in March 1986 for a $5 billion technology program to combat acid rain, Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney hailed the endorsement as an "essential first step" in resolving an issue that has strained relations between the two nations for years.

Twenty months later, Canadians are still waiting for the second step. No projects have been undertaken or funded as result of the envoys' report.

How the report evolved is a principal focus of the federal trial of Michael K. Deaver. Prosecutors have charged that Deaver, while White House deputy chief of staff, pushed for the appointment of special envoys on acid rain, then lied to a grand jury investigating his lobbying activities after he left government.

Overshadowed by the revelations about White House politics is the story of an environmental initiative that was unveiled in the glow of summitry but faded after the klieg lights dimmed.

Last March, as he prepared for another meeting with Mulroney amid Canadian charges of bad faith, Reagan amended his budget to include the $2.5 billion government share of the program recommended by the envoys.

But the president's failure to seek the funds earlier, and efforts by the administration to claim credit for unrelated programs, have prompted critics on both sides of the border to question his commitment.

Testimony at the Deaver trial has fueled the criticism. Former White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan acknowledged that the appointment of special envoys was seen as a chance to "pass the ball" and move the acid-rain issue "off to the side" so as not to sour the March 1985 summit between Reagan and Mulroney.

According to Lynn McDonald, environmental spokesman for Canada's New Democratic Party, the envoy mission "was just a political gesture in lieu of action."

"It is now clear that it was nothing more than a public-relations effort," said Sen. George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, a leading advocate of acid-rain controls. He said the president moved to amend the budget only after his inaction became "painfully embarrassing" to Mulroney and it became necessary to "appease the Canadians."

Administration officials deny any weakening of commitment, saying that time was needed to study options for the costly program in an era of big budget deficits.

There was no such ambivalence when the special envoys — Drew Lewis for the United States and William Davis for Canada — called for a five-year, $5 billion U.S. program to develop cleaner methods of burning coal in power plants and factories.

The projects, which were to be financed jointly by government and industry, were to concentrate on technology that would result in "some near-term" reduction in transborder sulfur dioxide emissions from U.S. plants and that would be:

—Adaptable to existing plants.

—Geared to boilers that burn high-sulfur coal, the main source of acid rain today.

—Cheaper than current antipollution devices.

Ottawa has long complained that sulfur emissions from U.S. coal-fired boilers, chemically transformed in the atmosphere, fall on the Canadian side as acidic rain and snow, damaging lakes, rivers and forests and killing aquatic life.

At his March 1986 meeting here with Mulroney, the president said he fully endorsed the report, conceding for the first time that acid rain is a man-made problem. Until then, he had opposed all acid rain regulations, arguing that too little is known of the causes of the pollution to warrant costly control programs.

Mulroney, under pressure at home to gain U.S. concessions on acid rain, said that Reagan's endorsement showed "this is a front-burner issue."

But after Mulroney left Washington, the burner was turned off. There was no amendment to the fiscal 1987 budget seeking funds for the program. Indeed, the administration had objected to a $400 million, three-year Clean Coal Technology Program (CCTP) passed by Congress in December 1985. The program was designed to expand energy uses of coal by finding new ways to burn it cleanly-a mandate much broader than the envoys' search for inexpensive controls to cut acid rain in the near term.

By September 1986, however, then-Acting Assistant Energy Secretary Donald L. Bauer was arguing that nine projects selected for the congressional program at projected costs of $960 million-a third of it to be federal-would "fulfill the requirements" of the Lewis-Davis report.

"If these projects are fully successful, there may be no need for additional federal activity," Bauer told a House Science and Technology subcommittee.

But environmentalists accused the White House of budgetary legerdemain, and the Congressional Research Service issued a report last January asking if the Energy Department was "squaring a circle." The CCTP "does not represent a major downpayment" on the envoys' $5 billion program, said the research service, concluding that only three of the nine CCTP projects valued at $52 million might meet the envoys' criteria.

While the envoys were seeking "a new initiative" by Washington to control acid rain, the research service said, "the administration's response to the report has been largely an effort to show that existing programs are achieving the envoys' goals."

In his fiscal 1988 budget, submitted in early January, the president called the $400 million CCTP "a first step in carrying out" the envoys' plan and proposed another $350 million for the program over five years for projects "targeted closely" to the envoys' report.

Moreover, Reagan pointed out that public and private research efforts in clean coal (unrelated to the Lewis-Davis mission) will exceed $5 billion by 1992. Critics viewed the statement as another pass at double counting.

This time Ottawa cried foul. Canadian Environment Minister Tom McMillan called U.S. clean-coal technology efforts largely "irrelevant" to the envoys' objectives and said that U.S. programs and policies would not result in significant reductions of pollution for 25 years.

When Vice President Bush visited Ottawa Jan. 21, he said that he "got an earful" from Mulroney on acid rain and other issues, but was unable to pledge more money for pollution control.

But two months later, as Reagan prepared for another meeting with Mulroney in April, he amended the fiscal 1988 budget, requesting the full $2.5 billion recommended by the envoys for the demonstration of "innovative control technologies."

Energy Department spokesman Robert C. Porter said that officials did not intend to misrepresent existing programs as responses to the envoys. They sought to sort out CCTP projects and consult with industry before launching a new effort, he said, adding, "Had we rushed out with a $2.5 billion program, there would have been an equal number of critics who'd say we're spending money without justification."

The program is still in doubt, however. The Senate approved $850 million to be spread over two years, and the House $350 million for three years. They will try to resolve differences in a conference.

Although the March amendment mollified the Mulroney government, it did not still criticism from politicians and environmentalists in either country. Many of them urged cutbacks in U.S. sulfur emissions as the remedy for acid rain, and they opposed the envoy mission in the first place as a distraction.

"The whole program is a sham, and the administration's commitment to implement the program is developing as a sham," said David G. Hawkins, senior attorney for the Natural Resource Defense Council.

Curing Fears

Peter Wolfe

As AIDS, acquired immune deficiency syndrome, makes its deadly way through society, Americans have become unwilling witnesses to moral, ethical and political dilemmas arising in the epidemic's wake. Parents and school boards agonize over whether to allow AIDS patients in schools as students or teachers. The issue of mandatory AIDS antibody testing has become a litmus test for politicians on both left and right. And a question challenges the basic contract between physician and patient: Do physicians have a "right" to refuse to treat patients on the basis of the nature of their illness, or of their sexual orientation?

As one who cares for AIDS patients, I am discouraged to see some colleagues refuse to take care of AIDS patients. There have even been instances where care was refused when the physician only suspected the patient was gay.

Because the first American AIDS cases occurred in social groups distinct from the majority — homosexuals and intravenous drug users — AIDS patients have been stigmatized in the minds of many Americans who willfully remain blind to basic facts about the disease. For some of these people, AIDS is God's way of punishing homosexuals for their perversion. For others, AIDS is not their problem, something they do not want to think about.

AIDS is an infectious disease of the immune system. The causative agent HIV, human immuno deficiency virus, is spread through sexual contact and blood contamination. Up to 2 million Americans have been infected with HIV; an unknown, but significant, number of them will develop AIDS. AIDS has a 90 percent mortality rate two years after diagnosis.

Three main reasons probably motivate physicians who refuse to care for AIDS patients. The first is fear of contracting the illness. A second is fear of economic loss if other patients leave the physician's practice because they learn that their doctor also cares for AIDS patients. Finally, some physicians have a basic antipathy toward the patients or their life styles. The first two issues can be argued against on both ethical and scientific levels; the third is inarguable because it is emotional.

The history of medicine tells us unambiguously that physicians have the ethical obligation to treat all patients regardless of personal risk. Recently, the American Medical Association reaffirmed the obligation: "The tradition of the AMA since its organization in 1847, is that when an epidemic prevails, a physician must continue his labors without regard to the risk to his own health .... That tradition must be maintained."

The biologic behavior of the AIDS virus, coupled with inevitable human errors and accidents, makes it almost inevitable that some health-care workers become infected in the course of their duties; at the same time, it is quite clear that hospital-acquired infection is an extremely rare event.

Rarity is underscored by the avidity and sensationalism with which those events are reported: There have been only about a dozen hospital-acquired HIV infections documented despite millions of contacts with infected patients since the epidemic began. The few reported cases involve extraordinary exposure of broken or chaffed skin to large amounts of blood — or inadvertent self-injection of blood.

Experts could argue that the risk of a surgeon dying as a result of a slip of the scalpel might be greater if he is operating on a hepatitis B carrier than on an HIV carrier. Although HIV infection may have a higher mortality rate than hepatitis B, it takes far fewer hepatitis virus particles than HIV particles to cause successful infection; and hepatitis B can be deadly.

Were I a patient of a surgeon who insisted on knowing whether I've been infected with HIV, I would ask: "Are you infected with HIV or hepatitis B? A careless slip of the blade, and you might be a risk to me just as you think I might be a risk to you." Fortunately for surgeons and patients alike, such occupational transmission of AIDS is — and will continue to be — extraordinarily rare, in no way justifying discrimination against infected patients. To insist on mandatory testing of patients prior to surgery is bad science and worse ethics.

AIDS is not the first plague to bedevil humanity. From medieval Europe's black death to polio in this century, history furnishes many examples, good and bad, of how physicians have reacted to communicable diseases. We are no different from anybody else. We all share fear of the unknown, the fear of death. We, as a profession, know enough about AIDS to minimize our risk of contracting it.

U.S. Must Back Off In Central America

Michael Barnes

I have just returned from a trip to Central America to evaluate progress under the Arias peace plan, and I am struck by three lingering impressions.

The first is that there is a vast difference between the hopefulness, the prayerfulness and the guarded optimism with which Central Americans view their peace process, and the attitude of sullen contempt of our own government — evidenced most recently by high-level attacks on House Speaker Jim Wright's constructive role.

There is in Nicaragua today a burning desire for peace, a yearning that is matched elsewhere in the region. Nicaraguans are sick of war, sick of death, sick of shortages, sick of the oppressive political environment that the war and the Sandinistas have created. Sandinista leaders see the goals of the revolution being overwhelmed by war and scarcity.

The administration concludes from this state of affairs that its policy is working — that the Contras are forcing the Sandinistas to sue for peace, and that therefore more Contra aid will improve the terms. That is a dangerous delusion. What made the five-nation accord in Guatemala possible was not the Contra threat but the fact that the Central Americans made the Sandinistas an offer they could accept — that is, one that did not entail Sandinista suicide. Once such an offer was made, agreement was possible, and once agreement was struck, an astounding degree of positive movement was unleashed throughout Central America.

My second impression is that the Sandinistas have shown by their own positive steps that they are prepared to go the extra mile to make the process work. The most compelling evidence of that is their selection of Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo to head the National Reconciliation Commission and to be the intermediary for arranging a cease-fire with the Contras. No other Central American government has been prepared to grant such a role to a leading sympathizer with its armed opposition. The Sandinistas' absolute commitment to the peace process is demonstrated by their willingness to put their future in the hands of a person they consider to be an archenemy of the regime.

But that is not the only positive sign. In three short months a dramatic reversal has taken place in Nicaraguan politics. The Sandinistas have:

—Announced the imminent release of nearly 1,000 political prisoners.

—Announced legislation that would free the remaining 3,000 to 4,000 and lift the state of emergency on a determination by the accord's verification commission that U.S. and Honduran aid to the Contras had ceased.

These are only partial responses. Much remains to be done, and the skepticism of Nicaragua's critics is well founded. But the fact remains that Nicaragua has done more to comply with the agreement than any other country. No one could have predicted — certainly, no one did predict — such progress at the time the agreement was signed. What a contrast with the attitude of the Contras, who have taken out full-page ads in Costa Rican newspapers — paid for, no doubt, by the U.S. taxpayers — urging Costa Ricans to oppose their president's peace plan.

The agreement that was drawn up by President Oscar Arias Sanchez asks so little of the United States, compared with the wrenching political and military steps that the Central Americans have required themselves to take. This country is asked only to stop funding a rebel movement that violates international law and that is completely unnecessary for our own security. Yet Central America is making the difficult choices necessary to retain the momentum toward peace while our own government haughtily swears never to take the one action that is required of it to nurture the region's hopes.

Paul Simon's Coup And George Bush's Iowa Depression

Rowland Evans & Robert Novak

WASHINGTON — Sen. Paul Simon's presidential prospects will get a boost this week with the announcement that former Democratic national chairman Charles T. Manatt will be his campaign chairman.

Manatt, a multimillionaire Los Angeles lawyer-banker, gives Simon instant credibility with the Democratic establishment as more than a fringe liberal. In addition, the senator gets access to the West Coast money base, including fund-raisers for the aborted Gary Hart campaign.

It also helps Manatt, who endorsed Hart early and was embarrassed by his fall. The former California state party and national chairman also had talked seriously with campaign operatives for Sen. Albert Gore Jr., who is still looking for a national chairman.

Bush's Depression

A just-completed private poll that will not be made public shows Vice President George Bush has dropped more than 11 points behind Sen. Robert J. Dole in Iowa, his worst showing ever in the state where he defeated Ronald Reagan in 1980.

That is particularly bad news for the Bush camp. His top campaign aides have always been worried that if he fails to run first in either Iowa or New Hampshire, and loses, as seems likely, in Minnesota, Michigan and South Dakota, he will enter the March 8 Super-Tuesday primaries of mostly Southern states in dangerously weak condition.

Irked With Shultz

Senior White House aides were peeved when they opened their Thursday morning newspapers and found George Shultz, not Ronald Reagan, getting credit for the U.S.-Soviet intermediate-range missiles (INF) treaty.

They were particularly annoyed by the Washington Post treatment which — fairly or not — they blamed squarely on the secretary of state. Shultz not only was pictured on page one but was in the headlines leading the paper.

Dole's Pique

The softening of Sen. Robert J. Dole's image has not eliminated his tendency to snap at staffers, a fact demonstrated when he targeted Tim Archie, a low-ranking campaign press aide, for criticism over national television.

Asked on CNN about a gag order by newly-installed campaign manager William Brock, Dole replied, "you have to have a little discipline," then added: "I must say I get a little frustrated when I'm out on the trail somewhere and read that somebody I don't even know in my headquarters has said, well, I've never seen Bob Dole except ... in a blue suit — some fellow named Tim Archie had been there about a week. Now, I don't know ... why he needs to talk to the press."

Bhopal Disaster Victims Still Waiting For Help

EDITOR'S NOTE — The writer covered the 1984 gas leak in Bhopal, the world's worst industrial accident, and recently returned to the city.

By EARLEEN FISHER
Associated Press Writer

BHOPAL, India (AP) — Savitri has a new brick house in a fly-choked shantytown facing the hulking gray buildings of the deserted Union Carbide pesticide plant.

The two-story dwelling, its doorway festooned with ropes of orange marigolds, was built with money she received for her three dead sons.

Savitri's little boys were among the more than 2,800 people who died when a leak at the Union Carbide plant unleashed a deadly gas that wafted over nearby shantytowns and into the city of Bhopal at 1 a.m. on Dec. 3, 1984.

Some people died as they slept. Others awoke, eyes burning and throats choking, and tried to run, only to fall in flight.

Tens of thousands of survivors are left with disabilities that continue to kill.

As the third anniversary of the tragedy approaches, Union Carbide and the government of India are still wrangling over a financial settlement in the disaster.

Efforts to settle out of court have triggered new demands by activist groups that Union Carbide be brought to trial for murder even if it takes decades for a financial payment.

The survivors themselves know only that they have lost loved ones, that they are unable to work as long and as hard or earn as much, that they want money now.

Savitri, a 30-year-old woman who used to live in a mud-and-straw hut, was among the relatives of deceased gas victims who received stop-gap payments from the Indian government.

She was given 10,000 rupees for each of her three dead boys, a total of about $2,300.

"I lost three children. Only this one is left," she said, drawing her 7-year-old son, Anil, to her side. She also has a daughter, 14-year-old Shobha, but like many of the poor in India, she counts her children only in terms of sons who can earn money and later take care of aging parents.

"We all have breathing trouble and fall sick often. Our eyesight has gone weak," she said, speaking in Hindi through an interpreter.

"My sons could have earned a lot of money. There must be compensation for this," said Savitri, who like many shantytown dwellers uses only one name.

Her husband, a laborer for the railroad, was working in Iraq under an Indian government rail contract the night of the Union Carbide leak. His earning ability has not been impaired.

Down the lane from Savitri's house in the Jai Prakash Nagar shantytown, a 40-year-old cart-puller named Budharan lives with his wife and their nine children. Their whitewashed hut, made of mud mixed with straw, is scarcely 100 yards from the Union Carbide plant, but no one in the family died when the gas from a tank of liquid methyl isocyanate drifted over the shantytown, claiming its victims erratically.

The only job Budharan has ever known is pulling a heavy wooden cart to transport other people's goods.

"I used to earn 60 to 70 rupees ($4.60 to $5.38) a day, but now I have trouble breathing," he said, patting the grimy pink tunic covering his chest. "Now I hardly earn 10 or 20 rupees (77 cents to $1.50)."

Budharan worries about his two youngest children, Deepak and his twin sister Arti, born two months after the gas leak.

"The twins fall sick very often, sometimes fever, sometimes vomiting, sometimes dysentery," Budharan said. "We don't know why. Is it the gas or not?"

In the shantytowns, it's hard to tell what causes poor health. While their father spoke, Deepak and Arti played beside one of the open sewers that run past beside every lane in their shantytown. Half-naked, their skin as dirty as their clothing, they seemed oblivious to the flies on their arms, in the corners of their eyes, around their mouths.

But living conditions have improved in Jai Prakash Nagar since the gas leak. The narrow lanes are now paved. The sewage runs in concrete channels instead of dirt trenches that used to allow the foul mess to leach into the ground around open wells.

Most of the shantytown dwellers were squatters. After the gas leak, the government gave them legal rights to the land on which they had constructed their huts. Every house now has electricity, where only a few had it before.

Gas victims are entitled to free medical treatment at government hospitals and clinics, but many choose to see private doctors who for as little as 10 rupees will give them a packet of pills to ease their coughs.

R.K. Bisarya, a Canadian-trained surgeon who was Bhopal's mayor at the time of the Union Carbide disaster, runs a private clinic in the city of nearly 1 million. He said 12 of his gas patients had died in the last two years.

"We offer treatment to help now," he said. "In the long term, there's not much we can do. They get progressively worse, able to work less and less, and then they die."

How to count the number of dead, how to determine who is suffering — physically or emotionally — how to pay them, and how much: These are only a few of the questions hampering any settlement.

S. Sathyam, one of the government officials most closely involved in sorting out the claims, said 2,850 gas deaths have been recorded and 524,000 people have filed claims for personal injury.

He said many claimants cite mental anguish. Although not exposed to the gas themselves, sometimes living hundreds of miles from Bhopal, they said they were worried about relatives living in the city.

So far the Indian government has spent about $46 million for relief in Bhopal, ranging from payments to relatives of those who died to parcels of rice for families whose earning ability has been impaired.

Bhopal today is a bustling city. It bears no resemblance to the ghost town it was three years ago, when many people fled.

At Bhopal Talkies Square, a major intersection deriving its name from the cinemas on its corners, a traffic light has recently been installed. Instead of the one policeman who used to direct traffic, there are now six. Their main job is instructing motorists to look for the traffic signals and obey them.

Mine Collapse Kills 2

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — The wall of a coal mine shaft collapsed under the weight of a mudslide overnight, killing two people in the nation's second fatal mine collapse in a week, Hungarian radio reported Saturday.

It said one miner was rescued unharmed.

Salvage workers had difficulty restoring ventilation to the shaft in the Padrag pit at the Ajka mine in western Hungary because mud stopped up their equipment, the radio reported.

It said an investigation of the collapse was under way.

Last Tuesday, one Polish miner was killed and two miners were rescued alive when a wall caved in at the Beta pit of the Mecsek coal mine in south Hungary.

Pirates Topple Lancers In Season-Opening Game

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina's Pirates may lack experience and height, but Saturday night, they got something that they won't ever lack again in the 1987-88 season — a victory.

The Pirates, playing their opening game of the 1987-88 season, came through with a 65-57 victory over Longwood College, giving new coach Mike Steele his first victory as a Division I coach. It was also his 125th career victory.

Longwood, which had won its first three games before losing its first on Friday night to UNC Charlotte, hung with the Pirates throughout the evening, gaining the lead on several occasions in the second half.

East Carolina, which had enjoyed a hot hand in the first half (57.7 percent) went cold in the first 10 minutes of the second half and allowed Longwood to come back from a 9-point deficit to take as much as a 2-point lead on a couple of occasions.

But the play of Jimmy Hinton and Gus Hill led the Pirates back to hold as much as a 10-point bulge before the end.

"It was ugly, but it was a win," Steele said afterwards. "They outrebounded us, outshot us from the floor and the line, but we forced them into a lot more turnovers, and that was the difference in the game."

The Pirates finished with a 45.9 percentage from the floor, as compared to 51.1 percent for the Lancers. But ECU — thanks to a 32-16 ratio in turnovers — was able to take 14 more shots, hitting on four more, including one more three-pointer.

At the line, the Pirates hit on seven of nine, a fine 77.8 percentage, while Longwood made eight of nine, 88.9 percent.

Longwood held a 32-27 advantage on the boards, but East Carolina outrebounded them in the second half, 21-15.

"In the first half we were embarrassed on the boards: they're not that much bigger than us," Steele said. "But we came back well."

What kept Longwood in the game was their change from a man-to-man to a 1-3-1 zone defense in the second half. "When they went to that zone, it was like we were in a total state of confusion," Steele said. "We've worked against it before, but our guys are still at the stage that, if we work two or three days on something, they do it pretty well. But when we have to go from one thing to another pretty quickly, they just don't learn as quickly.

"I guess we'll have to keep using the excuse that we're inexperienced for a while," the coach added. "Right now, when we get one guy out of sync, nobody gets him back into it."

Steele was displeased with the number of easy baskets the Pirates missed. "I don't know how many layups we missed," he said. "We'd cause a turnover and get a two on one or three on two and just miss the shot."

At one point in the first half, it was pointed out, the Pirates had forced 13 turnovers, but had only 16 points.

"This could have been a very easy win for us if we had hit those shots and kept them from making a number of easy transition shots," Steele said.

East Carolina built up a quick 4-0 lead, but Longwood came back to tie it at 6-6 on a short jumper by Kevin Jefferson. Then, tied at 8-8, Longwood got its first lead on a 3-pointer by Dale Shavers, 11-8, with 15:28 left in the half.

East Carolina regained the lead at 16-15 on a 12-footer by Jimmy Hinton, who scored 10 first half points, and the Pirates never trailed again in the half.

Hinton, who flew around the floor like a pesky gnat, had three steals in the half to spark the Pirates out to as much as a 7-point lead, 28-21, and although the margin fell to three, the Pirates moved it back out to seven at the half, 32-25.

Hill scored the opening basket of the second half to extend the lead to 34-25, but the Pirates missed on their

Lady Pirates Fall, 93-75

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Jodie Whitaker paced the University of Kentucky's women's basketball team to a 93-75 victory over East Carolina University Saturday afternoon in the finals of the Lady Kat Classic.

The Lady Pirates, who lost their first game of the young season in the championship game, had slipped past Central Michigan on Friday to gain a shot at the title. (See story on B-6.)

Whitaker, named the tournament's most valuable player, dished out 14 assists in the game while scoring 16 points from her point guard position.

"I was pleased with the effort we gave," Coach Pat Pierson said of her Lady Pirates. "Kentucky is real strong in the backcourt and that's where they beat us."

The coach praised the play of Alma Bethea and Monique Pompili, both named to the all-tournament team. Bethea scored 24 points and pulled down 12 rebounds to lead the Lady Pirates in both categories. Pompili, playing with tendonitis, added 14 points while Gretta Savage had 17.

After the two teams played it even for much of the first half, Kentucky finally moved ahead for good with 7:15 left when Delitta Crowley hit a 15-footer for a 24-22 lead. Another basket later, the Kats went to a full-court press and outhit ECU 17-8 the rest of the way for a 43-30 edge at intermission.

Savage scored four of the first six points of the second half to cut it to 43-36, but Kentucky slowly pulled away after that, taking its biggest lead at 90-69 with 1:45 left.

Croley, the two-guard, led the Kentucky scoring with 25 and pulled down a team-high 15 rebounds. Center Pam Shrum added 20 points and 11 rebounds. Tracye Davis and Beth Ousley each added 10 points.

Duke Rolls Over Outmanned ASU

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Simulating Duke's defensive pressure in practice is next to impossible, according to Appalachian State coach Tom Apke, but beating one of the best teams in the Atlantic Coast Conference on their home court proved impossible for the Mountaineers Saturday night.

Kevin Strickland led a balanced scoring attack with 17 points as 15th-ranked Duke crushed Appalachian State 110-74 in the non-conference, season-opening basketball game.

"It's very difficult to open up your season against a team that puts defensive pressure on you the same way Duke does," said Apke, in his second season as head coach at the Southern Conference school. "Mike (Krzyzewski) is a great defensive coach. He's always been a great defensive coach. The first time you play against them is very, very difficult ..."

Duke forced 31 Mountaineer turnovers, 20 in the first half.

"We're a more talented team," Krzyzewski said. "We should have won and did. But I thought we played hard, and I thought we played hard for 40 minutes.

"I think we played pretty intense and it was nice to see it with a big lead," he added. "I think there is a tendency to let up. Being human, we all do that ..."

Duke led 55-20 at halftime and the outcome was never in doubt in the second period as six Blue Devils scored in double figures.

The Mountaineers pulled within 58-26 on a layup by Ben Miller with 18:41 left, but the Blue Devils went on a nine-point run over the next two minutes to increase the margin to 67-26.

In the opening half, the score was tied 4-4 before the Blue Devils reeled off 12 unanswered points to grab a 16-4 lead with 14:58 left.

The Mountaineers closed to within 20-14 on a dunk by Sam Gibson with 12:03 remaining, but Duke allowed only six points the remainder of the half.

The Blue Devils used their pressure man-to-man defense to go on two 13-0 runs midway through the half to grab a 46-16 lead with about four minutes left.

Phil Henderson sank a free throw with 1:28 remaining to give Duke its biggest lead of the half at 37 points.

"They scored enough points off their defense in the first half to give them the lead, let alone what they did score when they were able to set up ..." Apke said.

John Smith added 15 points for Duke, while Henderson had 13, Danny Ferry and Robert Brickey 12, and Greg Koubek 11.

Lebo's 28 Lifts UNC By Richmond

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Jeff Lebo scored a career-high 28 points, including 21 on 3-point field goals, as third-ranked North Carolina defeated Richmond 87-76 Saturday night in the championship game of the Central Fidelity Holiday Classic basketball tournament.

Earlier, Boston University defeated Southern Cal 75-53 in the contest for third place.

North Carolina freshman forward Rick Fox ignited an 18-6 Tar Heels' surge when he slammed home a missed jumper by teammate Pete Chilcutt to give the Tar Heels a 27-24 advantage with 6:04 left in the first half.

Lebo added a pair of 3-pointers and Ranzino Smith had two fast-break layups as the Tar Heels, 3-0, built a 43-30 intermission lead.

Richmond cut the lead to six points twice in tthe second half, the last time at 56-50 on a short bank shot by Peter Woolfolk with 12:55 remaining, but North Carolina scored the next five points and Richmond was unable to get closer than 10 points in the final eight minutes.

Syracuse Advances To Finals

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — The top-ranked Syracuse Orangemen beat Alabama-Birmingham 79-63 Saturday to advance to the championship game of the 10th Great Alaska Shootout. But center Rony Seikaly wasn't happy about it at all.

"I'm playing like a robot. I'm too athletic for this," Seikaly said after a 3-for-9 shooting performance from the field. "I try to block shots and play defense when this happens, anything to help the team.

"But there are always three, four people on me. What am I going to do? If we don't start hitting from the outside, it will be this way all year."

Syracuse will play for the title on Sunday against No. 17 Arizona, which swamped No. 9 Michigan 79-64 in Saturday's other semifinal.

"He's not happy we won, he's unhappy with the way he played," Syracuse Coach Jim Boeheim said of Seikaly. "At this stage of his career, he should be happy we won and he should be looking ahead to the next game.

"That's very European in the sense he wasn't happy about his individual game," Boeheim said of Seikaly, a native of Greece.

The rest of the Syracuse locker room was very happy after the Orangemen improved to 2-1.

Sherman Douglas scored 24 points to lead the Orangemen, who took a 47-26 halftime lead and coasted except for some trouble at the free throw line. Syracuse hit only 14 of 28 free throws.

"I think we did a great job using our half-court trap and pressing them both man-to-man and zone," Douglas said. "In the first half, the flow was going to me, and when I get on a roll it's kind of hard to stop."

Douglas took charge early, scoring consecutive baskets three times, twice off steals after he had driven the lane for layups.

Seikaly and Derrick Coleman intimidated the smaller Blazers, blocking shots and controlling the backboards. Seikaly had 13 rebounds and five blocks and Coleman had 19 rebounds, matching his career high set in the NCAA championship game last season against Indiana.

"We just tried to come out and pressure their guards and we went all-out on defense and that got the fast break going," Coleman said.

Douglas had 16 points and five steals by halftime as the Orangemen led 47-26. Thirteen of Syracuse's 21 field goals in the first half were layups.

"It was a difficult game to describe," said Blazers Coach Gene Bartow, who lost his first game in the state of Alaska after four victories. "I didn't think we played that bad and we were down by 21 points at the half.

"They are so quick. Seikaly and Coleman are awfully good players and when they are playing with intensity they are two of the best."

Alabama-Birmingham made a brief run at the Orangemen, scoring the first nine points of the second half. Syracuse reasserted itself, outscoring the Blazers 15-4 over the next six minutes, with Douglas again scoring consecutive baskets.

For the second straight game, UAB's starting five was ineffective in the first half. Larry Rembert, with eight points, was the only starter to score in the first 20 minutes.

Rembert finished with 18 points, eight on free throws. Michael Charles had 13, all in the second half, and Eddie Collins scored 13 as the Blazers dropped to 1-1.

Seikaly scored 12 for the Orangemen. Derrick Coleman had 11.

"We obviously have some problems putting things together, some players may not be trying that hard," Bartow said.

Boeheim said the team's poor free throw shooting was also "normal."

"We are not going to beat anybody from the free throw line," Boeheim said. "We work at it every day but that's something I have no control over. It's going to cost us but we have no real control over it."

Arizona 79
Michigan 64

Sean Elliott scored 14 points and helped neutralize Michigan's powerful front line in the other semifinal.

Michigan and Arizona scored 109 and 133 points, respectively, in Friday's games, but Arizona managed to slow the pace on Saturday, forcing Michigan to rely on an erratic half-court game.

After Michigan ran off the first five points, the Wildcats came back with nine straight.

The Wolverines regained the lead briefly at 19-18 on a jump shot by Glen Rice with 8:40 to go in the half. But two 3-pointers by Steve Kerr and one by Craig McMillan paced Arizona to a 39-30 halftime lead.

Poor shooting by Michigan in the second half allowed Arizona to pull steadily away. The Wildcats led by as many as 21 with a little more than four minutes to go.

In a consolation-round game, Michael Johnson's 26 points led host Alaska-Anchorage to a 90-84 victory over Southwest Texas State.

The lead changed hands eight times in the early going before Patrick Williams scored 12 consecutive points in a three-minute span to put Southwest Texas up 26-15.

Nine points by Johnson pulled Alaska-Anchorage to within 43-41 at halftime. Another scoring burst by Johnson in the opening minutes of the second half put the Seawolves, 4-2, ahead and five straight points by Brigham Young transfer Averian Parrish broke the game open with about 10 minutes left.

It was a bittersweet loss for Southwest Texas Coach Harry Larrabee, who coached Alaska-Anchorage's Division II team until leaving voluntarily two years ago.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Dean Garrett scored 25 points, and Rick Calloway added 19 as No. 6 Indiana, last season's national champion, defeated Miami, Ohio 90-65 Saturday.

The Hoosiers trailed 14-13 with 15:21 remaining in the first half but outscored the Redskins 10-2 in the next 3:12 as Calloway had four points.

Miami closed to 29-24 on a 3-pointer by forward Trimill Haywood, who finished with 13 points. But the Hoosiers scored six straight on baskets by Calloway, Keith Smart and Garrett to take a 35-24 lead with 6:40 left in the first half.

The Redskins outscored Indiana 7-2 in the next 1:14, pulling to within six on a basket by Karlton Clayborne. The Hoosiers then scored 12 of the half's final 15 points, led by Garrett with six, for a 49-34 halftime lead.

Indiana shot 22 of 34 from the floor for 65 percent in the first half, compared to Miami's 39 percent. The Redskins kept it close, though, by hitting all six of their 3-point shots, while the Hoosiers didn't attempt any.

In the second half, Indiana's lead fluctuated between 17 and 12 points. The Redskins trailed 67-55 with 8:37 to play, but the Hoosiers outscored Miami 23-10 in the closing minutes, scoring the last 11 points of the game.

Indiana made 17 of 23 free throws, while the Redskins made only four of seven.

Miami, 0-1, was led by Eric Newsome with 18 points, including four 3-pointers. Jeff Ferst added 12.

Kansas 81

LAHAINA, Hawaii (AP) — Jeff Moe scored eight of his 22 points during a 14-1 Iowa burst after Kansas Coach Larry Brown was called for a techincal foul and the 11th-ranked Hawkeyes went on to whip the seventh-ranked Jayhawks 100-81 Saturday in the semifinals of the Maui Classic basketball tournament.

The victory sent Iowa, 2-0, into Sunday night's championship game against the winner of the Illinois-Villanova game later Saturday. Kansas, 1-1, will play the Illinois-Villanova loser for third place.

In consolation bracket games Saturday, Chaminade met Stanford and Nebraska played Baylor.

Iowa ran off nine straight points in 1 minute, 20 seconds after Brown was whistled for a technical with Kansas trailing 29-28 at the 7:43 mark of the first half.

Moe sank two free throws after the technical and then made the front end of a 1-and-1 bonus to start the run. Bill Jones hit a jump shot from the baseline and tipped in a miss on a fast break and Kent Hill scored on a layup to make it 38-28 with 6:23 left in the half.

After Lincoln Minor made a free throw for Kansas, Moe nailed a 3-pointer from the top of the key, then swished a jump shot after a steal to stretch the Iowa margin to 43-29 with 5:12 to go.

Iowa led 54-39 at halftime and, with Moe hitting four 3-pointers, Kansas couldn't get closer than 14 points in the second half. The Hawkeyes shackled Kansas' Danny Manning in the final period, holding him to seven points after he scored 16 in the first half. He fouled out with 4:31 left.

Roy Marble also scored 22 points for Iowa, Jones had 15 and Hill 14. Archie Marshall added 16 points for Kansas.

Both benches emptied with 5:26 left in the game after 6-foot-10 Marvin Branch of Kansas swung at 6-3 Michael Reaves of Iowa, but order was quickly restored. Branch was called for a flagrant foul and ejected and both benches were assessed technical fouls.

Reaves made four free throws and Manning sank two, giving Iowa a 91-72 lead. Iowa's biggest lead was 84-61 after B.J. Armstrong's 3-pointer with 8:28 left.

next nine shots before hitting again, a 3-pointer by Reed Lose. Longwood used that period to pull back into a 34-34 tie before Lose hit.

But two free throws by Doug Poppe and a layup by Shavers put Longwood back up, 38-37.

The two swapped the lead over the next few minutes before Love scored in close to put ECU back up, 48-47 with 8:40 left.

The Pirates never trailed again. They built the lead to five at 52-47 and Longwood never closed within three after that. ECU slowly built its lead out to 65-55 before Jefferson scored the final basket of the game with two seconds left.

"Jimmy gave us a lift (in the first half). But there were several times when he could have pulled up and taken the jumper when he passed off," Steele said. "It's hard to catch a hard pass from two feet away, though.

"Gus Hill made some big baskets for us in the second half. He's coming off surgery and two years away from basketball, too," the coach added.

Hill finished with 19 points to lead the Pirate effort, while Hinton added 16. Lose and Love each had 11.

Longwood was led by Jefferson with 21 while Darryl Rutley hit 16.

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Senior center Darryl Martin scored 20 points to lead South Carolina to an 81-62 victory over Wofford in college basketball Saturday night.

South Carolina, 1-0, took command from the outset with aggressive man-to-man defense and surged to a 21-12 lead following Perry Dozier's dunk with 10:52 left in the half.

But for the next 5:53 the Gamecocks managed only one basket as Wofford, 1-1, chipped away at the lead and had a 1-point edge with 28 seconds remaining in the first half.

Hurricanes Trounce Irish, 24-0

MIAMI (AP) — Second-ranked Miami moved within one game of another national championship showdown by defeating No. 10 Notre Dame 24-0 Saturday on Melvin Bratton's two short touchdown runs and a defense that kept explosive Tim Brown under control.

Bratton, who fumbled at the goal line late in the first quarter for Miami's first lost fumble in 421 rushes, barreled 2 yards through the left side at 3:21, capping a short drive following Brett Perriman's 13-yard punt return.

The 35-yard drive included 22 yards in penalties as Notre Dame was flagged for pass interference, offside and a personal foul, the last two coming on consecutive plays and giving the Hurricanes first downs at the Irish 4- and 3-yard lines.

Greg Cox kicked a 30-yard field goal with 3:09 left in the first half, 11 plays after free safety Bennie Blades, Miami's all-time leader, made his 19th career interception at the Miami 8 and returned it to the 29.

Bratton scored again on a 1-yard plunge at 11:42 of the third period, capping an 11-play, 69-yard drive after Perriman's 12-yard punt return. Freshman Leonard Conley's 6-yard run with 5:04 left capped a 66-yard drive and wrapped up the scoring.

The victory was Miami's 31st in a row in the regular season and gave the Hurricanes a 10-0 record. They finish against eighth-ranked South Carolina next week and then meet No. 1 Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl on New Year's Night. Last year, Miami dropped a 14-10 national championship game to Penn State in the Fiesta Bowl.

Cotton Bowl-bound Notre Dame suffered its second straight setback and finished the regular season 8-3.

Brown, who came into the game ranked fourth nationally with 174.80 all-purpose yards a game and is favored to win the Heisman Trophy next Saturday, was involved in only 10 plays for 95 yards.

He returned three kickoffs for 42 yards, three punts for 14 yards — including a fair catch — caught three passes for 37 yards and rushed once for 2 yards.

Notre Dame was out to avenge a 58-7 humiliation by Miami in Gerry Faust's final game as coach two years ago. Instead, the Irish suffered their first shutout in 53 games — since a 20-0 blanking by Miami in 1983 — and their worst loss in Lou Holtz's two seasons as head coach.

Florida State.....28
Florida.....14

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Six years without a victory over an archrival seems like an eternity to a college football coach, and Florida State's Bobby Bowden felt the added pressure of being a heavy favorite against Florida.

"I think they would have had the real nooses up this time in Tallahassee — the pure rope if we'd lost this game," Bowden said.

But Florida State fans can put the rope away. Derek Schmidt kicked four field goals, and Dayne Williams scored twice on 1-yard runs to lead the third-ranked Seminoles to a 28-14 victory Saturday.

"The hardest thing about the whole thing was breaking the drought," said Bowden, whose team hadn't beaten Florida since 1980. "I've never had a psychological thing, or whatever it is, attached to a series in my life. Their advantage stood at six in a row, and it was getting away from us."

The victory was Bowden's 100th as coach at Florida State, and the Seminoles, 10-1 heading into the Fiesta Bowl against Nebraska, stayed in the race for the national championship before a crowd of 74,613 at Florida Field.

Bowden, however, preferred to focus on the events of the day, not what might unfold in the next few weeks in the battle for No. 1.

"I really don't care much," Bowden said of the national championship. "If we take care of our knitting and it happens, it happens. Right now, 10-1 means more to me."

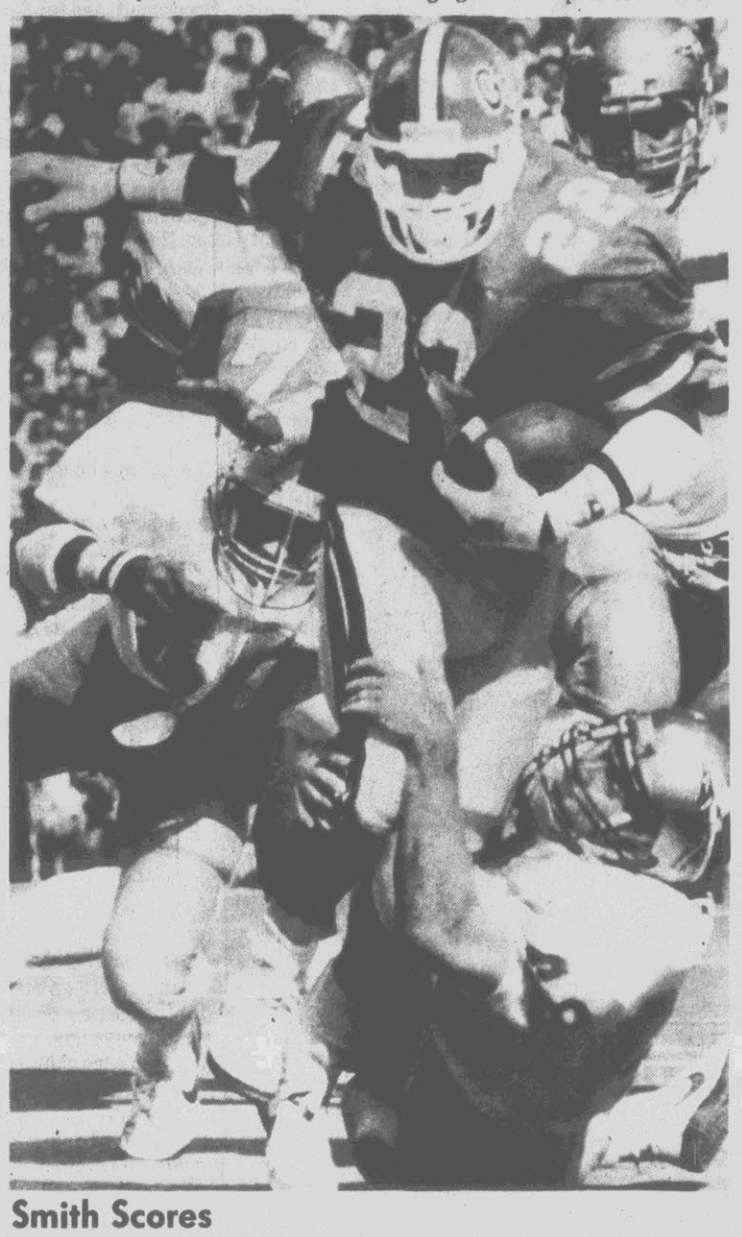
The lone blemish on Florida State's record is a 26-25 loss to second-ranked Miami, which will play top-ranked Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl. Bowden's record as Seminoles coach is 100-37-3 in 12 seasons, including a 5-7 mark against Florida.

Schmidt, the NCAA's all-time leading scorer in Division I, kicked field goals of 23, 53 and 37 yards, as Florida State fought back from a 14-3 deficit. Williams' first touchdown capped a 41-yard drive after a Florida punt and put the Seminoles ahead 18-14 with 4:50 remaining in the third quarter.

Edgar Bennett's two-point conversion run made it 20-18, and Danny McManus completed a two-point pass to Herb Gainer after Williams scored on another 1-yard run with 10:36 left in the game.

"I did a lot of talking to our kids last night and this morning about adversity," Bowden said. "We've won every game early this year, except for Miami. Our team really hadn't faced being down."

Florida, which got 100 yards rushing from freshman Emmitt Smith, finished the regular season with a 6-5 record for the second straight year. The Gators will play UCLA in the Aloha Bowl on Christmas Day.



Smith Scores

Smith, who carried 20 times, scored touchdowns on runs of 5 and 4 yards within a 2:26 span of the first half as Florida took advantage of an interception and Huey Richardson's blocked punt to take a 14-3 lead five seconds into the second period.

Florida State took charge in the second quarter, though, abandoning the pass for a powerful running game that produced 279 yards and two 100-yard runners. Sammie Smith finished with 116 yards on 17 carries, and backup tailback Dexter Carter gained 111 on 19 attempts for the Seminoles.

Florida built its 14-3 lead with the help of Ricky Mulberry's interception of McManus and Richardson's block of a Rich Tuten punt, both in the first quarter.

The Gators drove 37 yards in eight plays after the interception to take a 7-3 lead on Emmitt Smith's 5-yard TD burst with 2:21 left in the period. Richardson, a freshman linebacker, broke through on Florida State's next series to block Tuten's punt, and Florida recovered at the Seminoles 9 to set up Smith's 4-yard TD.

Smith, whose 1,341 yards rushing in 1987 is a single-season record for Florida, gained 82 yards in the first quarter. He managed just 18 the rest of the way, and the Florida State offense was at least partly responsible.

Nebraska.....24
Colorado.....7

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Keith Jones rushed for a career-high 248 yards, including touchdown runs of 50 and 44 yards, and fifth-ranked Nebraska ground out a 24-7 Big Eight victory over Colorado in a regular-season finale Saturday.

The Cornhuskers, rebounding from last week's 17-7 loss to Oklahoma and avenging a 20-10 upset to Colorado last year, raised their overall record to 10-1 and conference mark to 6-1 with a Fiesta Bowl date remaining against third-ranked Florida State. They finished the regular season in second place in the Big Eight, behind top-ranked Oklahoma.

Colorado concluded its season at 7-4 overall and 4-3 in the conference, good for fourth place.

The Huskers, who generated 419 yards on the ground, suffered turnovers on their first two possessions, then scored on their next two series to take a 10-0 halftime lead. They squandered another possible score just before the half when they allowed time to expire while poised at the Colorado 1.

But Nebraska quickly made amends, springing Jones for a 50-yard TD run barely three minutes into the third period for a 17-0 lead.

Colorado, which earlier had a field goal blocked and suffered two turnovers, countered with a 77-yard, 14-play drive for its only score with 4:57 left in the third period. Mark Hatcher passed 4 yards to freshman tight end George Hemingway for the score.

The Buffaloes threatened again early in the fourth period. But on third-and-1 from the Cornhusker 31, halfback J.J. Flannigan was dumped for a 2-yard loss by safety Tim Jackson, and the Buffs were forced to try a 50-yard field goal that failed.

Three plays later, Jones, who was held to 9 yards on nine carries against Colorado last year, took a pitchout off the right side and outran the Colorado secondary for his second score with 9:34 left.

Tennessee.....38
Vanderbilt.....36

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tennessee Coach Johnny Majors says his 16th-ranked Volunteers' 38-36 victory over Vanderbilt Saturday was one of the most harrowing games between the two rivals he has ever witnessed.

"There were as many big plays in this game, and as big a comeback as I can remember. It went right down to the wire," Majors said after his Vols scrambled from a 25-point deficit and upped their record to 9-2-1 overall, 4-1-1 in the Southeastern Conference.

"Neither team deserved to lose today, but since one had to, I'm glad it wasn't Tennessee," Majors said. "Now that the season is over, I can say that this team has played some of the best football I've ever been around."

The Vols trailed until fullback William Howard's 6-yard scoring run gave them a 32-28 lead, which was set up when Vanderbilt's Jeff Mayes fumbled a kickoff return and Tennessee's Chris Treece recovered it.

The Vols also scored on a scoring pass to Terence Cleveland, touchdown runs by Reggie Cobb and Keith Davis, and three field goals by Phil Reich.

Vanderbilt Coach Watson Brown, who watched his team slip to 4-7 overall and 1-5 in the SEC, said the Commodores turned in one of their strongest performances since he's coached them.

"I've been a head coach for seven years, and we've won more at other places, but we've never had one (team) fight like this one," he said.

"In a game like this you can't point to any one play. There were a lot of big plays in this game. ... I'm disappointed. ... We did everything we could to win," said Brown.

For the Commodores, quarterback Eric Jones scored on runs of 1, 1 and 10 yards and two strikes to flanker Carl Parker.

Vandy fumbled again, on a pitch from quarterback Eric Jones to fullback Andy Iacenda, and it was recovered by Charles Kimbrough to set up Reich's 33-yard field goal with 6:59 left in the third period.

Vanderbilt answered with its final score, the pass reception to Parker for 33 yards plus a 2-point pass completion with 3:24 to play.

The Commodores had a 20-0 lead at the end of the first quarter after Jones made two 1-yard scoring plunges and hit a 28-yard scoring pass to Parker.

Reich kicked an early second-quarter field goal of 26 yards, but less than four minutes later, Jones ran 10 yards for a touchdown and completed a 2-point pass to tight end Steve Kosanovich for a 28-3 lead.

Cleveland caught a 9-yard Francis scoring pass with 6:56 left in the second quarter, and Cobb ran the ball 1 yard for a touchdown five minutes later to narrow Vandy's lead at 28-18.

Less than five minutes into the third quarter, Davis ran a 20-yard touchdown for the Vols.

Arizona St.....24
Arizona.....24

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Gary Coston's third field goal of the game — a 30-yarder with two seconds remaining — gave Arizona a 24-24 tie with Arizona State Saturday in the regular-season finale for both Pacific-10 Conference football teams.

The Sun Devils, who haven't beaten the Wildcats since 1981, took a 24-21 lead on Alan Zendejas' 40-yard field goal with 2:45 remaining.

Fenner Statement Due On Monday

RALEIGH (AP) — A statement will be presented Monday in a Maryland court that will say whether murder charges against former University of North Carolina football player Derrick Fenner will be dropped, officials say.

Alexis D. Revis, a spokesman for the Prince George County State's Attorney's Office, said the statement will be released Monday, when a court hearing is scheduled for Fenner. She said the statement would contain the prosecutor's decision on the charges, but declined to comment further.

The Washington Post reported this month that police think Fenner may not have been involved in the May shooting of a Maryland man at a Hyattsville apartment complex.

Fenner also faces separate drug charges stemming from an incident April 9 in Clinton, Md.

Fenner is charged in the death of Marcellus Leach, 19, who died in what police say was a drug-related shooting. The trial on the charge is to begin Dec. 7.

Fenner, in a telephone interview from his home in Oxon Hill, Md., said Friday that he had not been told whether the charges would be dropped but he said he was optimistic.

"I've always been optimistic," he told the Raleigh Times. "I am charged with something I didn't do."

Fenner said if the charges were dropped, he hoped to return to Chapel Hill and play football again.

"Hopefully I could get back in school," Fenner said. "I wouldn't even go back to school if I couldn't play football."

Fear Part Of The Excitement For Ayers

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Yes, Ron Ayers admits, there are times when he has, indeed, been scared while hurtling down a straightaway at 170 miles an hour.

Ayers, president and manager of Honda-Suzuki of Greenville, recently captured the 1987 Top Gas Division championship of the International Drag Bike Association, an unusual feat for a man who has no factory backing and who races as an amateur.

A Durham native, the 41-year-old Ayers moved to Greenville in 1966, but it wasn't until 1981 that he first began an interest in bike drag racing.

"I read an article about a Honda sport bike that got great times, so I thought I'd go over to (the Kinston Drag Strip) and see what I could do," Ayers related.

He turned in a faster time than the magazine article had posted.

"One thing just led to another after that," Ayers said.

In 1983 he built his first engine and won seven of 11 local bike races he participated in. Then, in 1985, he built the Suzuki bike he currently rides and set a national American Motorcycle Association records, turning 163 miles per hour in the quarter-mile — a mark that still stands.

This year, for the first time, Ayers decided to go the whole schedule of IDBA races — eight scattered around the eastern half of the country, from New Jersey to Winsonsin to Louisiana. "We drove a total of 13,000 miles to make the tour," Ayers said.

In those eight, he reached the finals in five, winning two and finishing second in three. In two of the others, he had mechanical problems that kept him out of the finals. That helped him earn enough points to win the championship for the first time.

The Top Gas division is limited to bikes which run the quarter-mile on an 8.2 second index, or the eighth-of-a-mile in a 5.2 second index. "That means that if you go faster than that speed, you are penalized," Ayers said.

This year, Ayers won the Spring Nationals in Greensboro and the Sunshine Nationals in Cincinnati. He was the runner-up at the Super Nationals in Bowling Green, Ky.; the Firecracker Nationals at Norwalk, Ohio, and the Summer Nationals in Union Grove, Wis.

He locked up the championship with a third-place finish at the World Finals at Baton Rogue, La., with a quarter-mile qualifying pass of 8.23 seconds.

Ayers also led the entire country in an "all-class shootout" for the fastest reaction times. He was also one of five nominees for "heads up" Rider of the Year.

The best speed he's ever posted was a 171.96 mph he turned at the Kinston Drag Strip. "You just can't describe it," he said of the feeling of that speed knowing that there is little but a helmet and leather gear between him and the ground.

"A funny car driver once came up to me and asked if I was one of those guys who drove motorcycles in races. I told him I was and he told me he thought I was crazy," Ayers relates. "Now he drives that little frame with a fiberglass body on it a 100 miles an hour faster than I do. I think he's the one who's crazy."

And while he admits that he's been scared at times, Ayers says he's never taken a fall. "I've had some close calls, but I've always been able to control my bikes."

Others have not been as fortunate. At Greensboro this year, two riders were killed in mishaps — both friends of Ayers.' "I've tried to learn from every mistake I've made and from watching others. The reason for their accidents was low clearance on their bikes."

Ayers related that because of a crosswind on the course, the bikes were pushed into the side rails. The riders tried to turn the bikes, but because of low clearance of the headers, the bikes could only lean so far — and it was not enough.

"The IDBA raised minimum clearance after that, but I'd already had my clearance higher," he said.

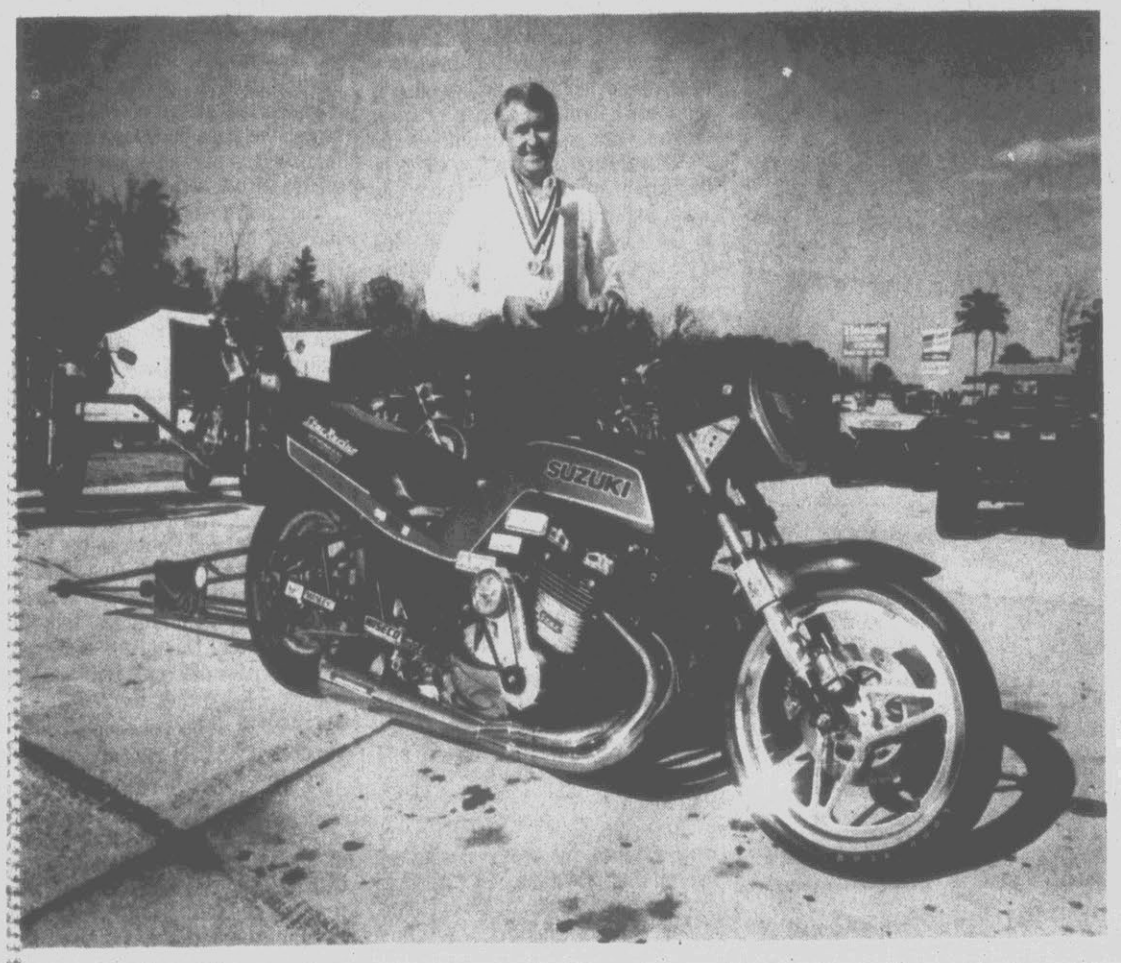
"You take every precaution, but things can still happen. I always inspect the bike for weld cracks before every run just to be sure."

Ayers also credits his crew for great support. He gets his cylinder head from Star Racing of Americus, Ga., his fail-proof remote starter from Cox Armature and Cahoon's Machine Shop of Greenville, and his work done by Jimmy Hardison of Honda-Suzuki of Greenville. Ayers' bike, by the way, is a highly modified 1985 GS1150 Suzuki, which uses nitrous oxide for fuel.

Ayers holds records at two North Carolina tracks for one-eighth-mile speeds. He turned that distance in 5.16 seconds at Kinston and 4.98 seconds at Coastal Plains Dragway at Jacksonville.

The Top Gas championship entitles Ayers to use the "#1" plate on his bike for the next year.

He's hopeful of gaining some factory sponsorship from Suzuki in the off-season, and then making "#1" a permanent fixture in Greenville.



Drag Bike Champion

Ron Ayers of Greenville shows off his Top Gas National Championship Trophy with the bike he drove to the 1987 title. Ayers, the president and manager of Honda-Suzuki of Greenville, has been racing for only a few years. The frame extension at the back of the bike keeps it from tipping over at the start of each race. Taylor To Miss First

WASHINGTON (AP) — Linebacker Lawrence Taylor will miss a game for the first time in his professional career Sunday when the New York Giants face the Washington Redskins, a Giants spokesman said Saturday night.

Taylor, an All-Pro in each of his six previous years in the NFL, was placed on the inactive list Saturday because of a pulled hamstring muscle in his right leg, spokesman Ed Croke said.

Taylor injured the leg on Nov. 15 in a game against Philadelphia and aggravated the injury last Sunday in the first quarter against New Orleans.

Taylor had started 106 consecutive games since joining the Giants in 1981 as a No. 1 draft pick from North Carolina. He was the most valuable player in the league last season and this year was the Giants third-leading tackler with 36 solo tackles and eight assists, while forcing two fumbles and intercepting three passes.

Browns-49ers Matchup Tops NFL Weekend Action

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

Marty Schottenheimer doesn't think his Cleveland Browns have proven anything yet. Roger Craig, who will have to carry the ball against them, thinks otherwise.

Which is what makes the Sunday night cable showcase game between the Browns and the San Francisco 49ers so intriguing.

"We are not elite," says Schottenheimer, whose team looked very elite demolishing Houston 40-7 last week. "Those types of tags are safe for teams that have won two or three championships. When we do that, we'll talk about being elite."

Craig and the 49ers fit that definition — San Francisco has won two Super Bowls in the '80s. Their view of Cleveland? They think they might see them in San Diego Jan. 31.

"They are very aggressive and probably have the best defense in the league right now. They hit with a vengeance," Craig says. "This will allow us to see how we stack up against a Super Bowl-type team."

Denver (6-3-1) at San Diego (8-2)

The Chargers may have been put in their place with a 34-3 drubbing by the Seahawks at the Kingdome last week. On the other hand, getting blown out in Seattle isn't uncommon and San Diego could re-establish its credentials with a win here.

Miami (5-5) at Buffalo (5-5)

Does this game matter? Whatever happens, in two weeks, both will probably be 6-6, along with the Patriots, Jets and Colts.

Yes, it matters, because the Bills came back from a 21-0 deficit to beat the Dolphins in Miami a month ago, so another win here gives them an edge in a tiebreaker.

Los Angeles Raiders (3-7) at Seattle (7-3) (Monday night)

The Raiders have lost seven in a row and other than the emergence of Bo Jackson in a 23-17 loss to Denver last week, there doesn't seem to be much hope that the streak will end now.

New Orleans (7-3) at Pittsburgh (6-4)

If the Saints had a more experienced quarterback than Bobby Hebert and a little more outside speed, they might be headed to the Super Bowl. As it is, they have won four straight, three on the road, and one more ensures them of their first winning season in 21 years of existence.

But while the city of New Orleans goes crazy, Coach Jim Mora continues to play it low-key, although he concedes that the win last Sunday that ended the New York Giants' chances of repeating as Super Bowl champion "is just about the most important win I've ever been around."

Houston (6-4) at Indianapolis (5-5)

Both these rising teams were convincingly taken down a step last week — the Oilers 40-7 at home against Cleveland, the Colts 24-0 in New England. The loser of this one may never get back up.

Or as Coach Ron Meyer of Indianapolis puts it: "We have the same obstacles facing both teams this week."

Green Bay (3-6-1) at Chicago (8-2)

"We stink," Mike Ditka said a week ago, so the Bears finally went out and beat a team like they should, crushing Detroit 30-10. Now Ditka says: "We're going in the right direction. We may improve."

This may be a little tougher.

New York Giants (3-7) at Washington (7-3)

This was supposed to be a big game. It's not but it could be a good one — the Giants want to win for pride; the Redskins want to win because they lost three to New York last year.

In reality, there's not much difference here except that the Redskins' strike replacements were 3-0 and the Giants' 0-3.

Doug Williams, though troubled by a sore back, will probably start for the Redskins, and may be better with more time to get used to his receivers. Phil Simms should be back at quarterback for the Giants though linebacker Lawrence Taylor's status remains in doubt.

Cincinnati (3-7) at New York Jets (5-5)

The recent games between these two have been strange, which figures — these are two of the NFL's least predictable teams.

Last year, for example, the Bengals beat the Jets 52-21 on the final day of the series, and each finished 10-6. But the Jets went to the playoffs and the Bengals didn't.

Philadelphia (4-6) at New England (5-5)

The Eagles regulars' were 4-1 until two weeks ago, when they barely lost to the Giants. No disgrace there, perhaps, but then came last week's 31-19 home loss to the Cardinals in a game in which they trailed 31-3 at halftime.

Tampa Bay (4-6) at Los Angeles Rams (3-7)

The fans who are yelling for Vinny Testaverde in Tampa Bay might look at Jim Everett as an example of the troubles a prime young quarterback can have. Even in Monday night's 30-26 win over the Redskins, Everett did less than the special teams and defense, which accounted for three of the four Los Angeles touchdowns.

St. Louis (4-6) at Atlanta (2-8)

St. Louis' lame birds are showing a few signs of life that may bode well for Baltimore, Phoenix, Memphis or Jacksonville next year.

Mountaineers Roll By Richmond

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — Doug Beaty rushed for 94 yards and one touchdown and Bjorn Nittmo kicked two field goals to lead Appalachian State to a 27-7 victory over Richmond Saturday in the first round of the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs.

It was the eighth straight victory for Appalachian State, 10-2, and marked the first time the school has ever won 10 games in a season. The Mountaineers will host defending I-AA champion Georgia Southern in the second round next Saturday at 1:30 p.m.

The Mountaineers took advantage of a blocked punt and two fumbled punt snaps for 13 first-half points.

The Mountaineers took the lead for good midway through the second quarter after a fumbled punt snap gave Appalachian the ball at the Richmond 30-yard line. Three plays later, Tim Sanders ran it in from the 5-yard line and Nittmo's extra point gave the Mountaineers a 10-3 lead.

Another fumbled punt snap later in the quarter gave the Mountaineers the ball at the Richmond 8-yard line, but the Spiders' defense held and forced a 27-yard field goal by Nittmo.

Beaty's 1-yard plunge in the fourth quarter closed the scoring.

Georgia Southern.....31
Maine 28,OT

STATESBORO, Ga. (AP) — Tim Foley's 42-yard field goal in overtime completed a comeback from an 18-pont halftime deficit as Georgia Southern, seeking its third national championship in a row, edged Maine 31-28 in the opening round of the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs Saturday.

Foley's game-winner atoned for a missed 37-yard attempt with five seconds left in regulation.

Trailing 28-10 at halftime, Georgia Southern's defense clamped a lid on the Black Bears' attack, holding the visitors to 96 yards in the final two periods after yielding 264 in the opening half.

The Eagles cut the lead to 28-18 on Ernest Thompson's 4-yard run with 6:34 left in the third quarter and Raymond Cross ran for the two-point conversion.

Foley kicked a 32-yard field goal with four seconds remaining in the third to cut Maine's lead to 28-21 and Georgia Southern, 9-3, tied the game with 7:54 left in regulation on Joe Ross' 12-yard scoring run.

Maine, 8-4, had built its lead on the passing of Mike Buck.

Buck threw a 23-yard touchdown pass to Sergio Hebra on Maine's first possession, but Southern came back for a 7-7 deadlock three minutes later on Raymond Gross' 13-yard run.

The Bears then took charge when Buck scored on a 1-yard run and stretched the lead to 14 points on a 2-yard plunge by Jim Fox.

Foley kicked a 32-yard field goal later in the period but Ray Wood lifted the halftime margin to 28-10 by scoring from the one.

The Eagles will face Appalachian State, a 20-3 winner over Richmond Saturday, in the second round of the playoffs next week.

Marshall.....41
James Madison.....12

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Tony Petersen passed for 387 yards and four touchdowns as Marshall University rolled to a 41-12 victory over James Madison Saturday in the first round of the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs.

The Thundering Herd — 7-4 in the regular season and ranked No. 11 in the division — — rolled up 499 yards in offense behind Petersen, a 6-1, 200-pound sophomore quarterback. He threw two scoring passes to Sean Doctor, who had nine receptions for 117 yards, plus an 84-yarder to Mike Baxter and a 20-yarder to Mike Barber.

Marshall limited the fifth-ranked Dukes, 9-3, to 281 yards in offense and recovered four fumbles.

James Madison, the top-rated independent in the division, didn't manage a first down until midway through the second quarter, and didn't score until backup quarterback Greg Lancaster entered the game after Marshall's fourth touchdown.

Lancaster's 17-yard pass to Leon Taylor set up Rodney Stockett's 6-yard scoring run. Lancaster completed a 22-yard pass to Taylor for JMU's only other score.

Manning Still Measures Up

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Danny Manning comes into the season two inches shorter than he used to be, but that may be the only way the Kansas All-American doesn't measure up.

Manning, who was listed as 6-11 during his first three years in college, was measured at 6-9 during the Pan American Games. It may be a minor mystery where the two inches went, but it is Manning's skills on the court that are truly mystifying.

"I always told them I didn't think I was 6-11," he said, rather sheepishly.

But most important for the Jayhawks in this now-you-see-it-now-you-don't game is the fact that Manning is making an appearance at Kansas at all this season.

The two-time Big Eight player of the year almost decided to leave school early and go into the NBA. But thoughts of family and the future won out over the immediate temptation of a lucrative contract.

"I had to look at it hard. Anybody would, I think," Manning said of going to the NBA. The presence of his father, Ed Manning, as an assistant on Coach Larry Brown's staff and the fact the tight-knit family highly values education finally swayed him.

"It's what is best for me and it's what my family wants me to do," said Manning, who averaged almost 25 points and 10 rebounds as a junior. "My family wants me to stay and get my degree, and that's important. I'm also looking forward to the opportunity to play in the Olympics. The NBA will always be there. Right now I'm just looking forward to having a good senior season."

"We talked about him getting his degree and reaching some of his goals during his college career," said Ed Manning, whom Brown hired as an assistant coach while Danny was a high school junior. "I think it's very important for him to get his degree."

And what about the Incredible Shrinking Manning?

"We take the heights that are passed on to us by a player's high school," a spokesman in the Kansas basketball office said in explaining the original error.

"The Pan Am measurements were done when the players were in their bare feet. We measured all our players this year in their shoes, since they'll be wearing their shoes while they play. That's how Danny came to be 6-10."

Whether he's 6-9, 10 or 11 doesn't matter to Jayhawk followers as long as all of him is theirs.

Three starters return from last year's 25-11 squad, but several newcomers and the return from injury of forward Archie Marshall gives hope for a second Final Four appearance in three years.

At 230 pounds, Manning is about 20 pounds heavier his freshman year. His progress from year to year has been noticable and steady. His play in the Pam Am Games, where he led the Americans with 14.6 points per game, only enhanced his standing among the elite.

Dating back to high school, he always has been known as a hard worker and strictly team-oriented, and Brown insists those qualities have only become more deeply ingrained.

Williams' Shot Lets Women Win

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Pam Williams hit a 15-foot jumper from the baseline with four seconds remaining to give East Carolina's Lady Pirates a 78-77 victory over Central Michigan in the opening game of the Lady Kat Classic Friday night.

It was the opening game for the basketball Pirates, who brought their new coach Pat Pierson a victory as a welcoming gift.

The Pirates, however, had to overcome blowing a 12-point lead midway through the second half, then hang on as three attempts to score the winning basket failed in the final 10 seconds.

That was a designated play set specifically for Pam," Pierson said. "She's a good shooter from the baseline and we knew that Central Michigan was looking for us to go inside. Rose Miller was especially important on that play (acting as a decoy)."

The first half of the game was, like much of the game, close. East Carolina held a 45-42 lead at intermission. Central Michigan came back and took the lead early in the second half, but never led the Pirates by more than one point.

The Lady Chippewas took their first lead of the half on a layup by Sue Nissen with 16:24 left, making it 50-49.

But, after the Pirates trailed 54-53, Gretta Savage paced East Carolina to 11 straight points, scoring five of them herself, powering the Lady Pirates into a 64-54 lead. That was eventually stretched to a 12-point bulge when Monique Pompili hit a 15-footer with 7:38 to make it 70-58.

Molly Piche then paced a Chippewa comeback, scoring six points over the next three minutes, to cut the lead back to one, 74-73. Sherry Kelly then scored off a layup after Nissen stole the ball for a 75-74 lead with 2:22 left.

Both teams missed shots after that, before Savage hit a jump hoot with 1:35 left for a 76-75 ECU lead. Central Michigan countered, with 1:11 showing, on a Piche layup for a 77-76 lead.

After another exchanges of misses, ECU got the ball and called a time out with 25 seconds left to play.

With 10 seconds left, Savage missed, got her own rebound and missed again. Another Pirate rebound led to another miss, but this time the ball went out of bounds off a Chippewa player, giving the Pirates one more chance with five seconds to go.

Williams made it enough.

The Pirates played much of the final two minutes without two of their top players. Alma Bethea left the game with cramps with 1:53 left and Pompili went out with a knee injury with just under a minute showing.

Both were expected to be ready for Saturday night's championship game with the hosting Lady Wildcats of Kentucky, which beat Louisville in the Friday nightcap.

Three Point Goals: O'Connor 1-1, Kelly 0-1.
Turnovers: CMU 19, ECU 21.
Technical fouls: none.
Officials: Crass and Courteau.
Attendance: 550.

East Carolina's scoring was led by Pompili, who scored 20, while Bethea added 17, Chris O'Connor had 13 and Savage, 11.

Central Michigan was paced by Nissen with 22, while Piche had 16 and Shirley Joiner had 11. Kelly and Nancy Melissa each added 10.

The two teams matched each other in rebounding, each with 38. ECU was led by Savage with nine, while Pompili had eight and Bethea had seven. Ninnen had 13 to pace the Lady Chippewas.

"It was a great win for these girls," Pierson said. "They've worked hard in preseason learning a new system as we beat a good team tonight in Central Michigan.

"I don't know a whole lot about Kentucky, but they have a lot of great athletes."

The Pirates, following the championship game in the Lady Kat, will return home to host their own Lady Pirate Classic which starts Friday.

1st Games Postponed

Ayden-Grifton and North Pitt have postponed their opening basketball games of the season, scheduled for Tuesday night.

The Chargers were to have opened by playing host to Washington High School, while North Pitt was to have visited Williamston.

No new date has been set for the Ayden-Grifton-Washington affair. The Williamston-North Pitt game has been reset for Dec. 9.

The status of Friday's games will be decided after the two schools meet in their 2-A Eastern Semifinal football playoff game. The winning team will also postpone Friday's game, while the loser will likely pick up its schedule.

Auburn Tops Tide, 10-0

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Auburn is headed for the Sugar Bowl, and quarterback Jeff Burger says the Tigers are going because an uncomplicated game plan gave them a victory over arch-rival Alabama and the Southeastern Conference crown.

"The offense just kept pounding and pounding and the defense played awesome," Burger said after seventh-ranked Auburn's 10-0 victory Friday over the 18th-ranked Crimson Tide. "That's all there is to it."

Alabama's first shutout loss in seven seasons knocked both the Crimson Tide and No. 6 Louisiana State out of Sugar Bowl contention.

Auburn, 9-1-1, will play undefeated and fourth-ranked Syracuse in the Sugar Bowl on New Year's Day.

Alabama, 7-4, goes to the Hall of Fame Bowl to play Michigan on Jan. 2, and LSU, which had a shot at the Sugar Bowl had Alabama won, will face No. 8 South Carolina in the Gator Bowl on Dec 31.

Burger's 44-yard pass to Lawyer Tillman was the big play during the only touchdown drive of the game, a 99-yard surge capped by Harry Mose's 5-yard scoring run that gave the Tigers a 7-0 halftime lead.

Win Lyle got the other Auburn points on a 23-yard fourth-quarter field goal after the Tigers had moved 69 yards to the Alabama 9. That drive was comprised entirely of running plays against a Crimson Tide defense that had been on the field most of the half.

Auburn Coach Pat Dye said his defense "just wouldn't let Alabama's offense get started in the second half. And our running game got on track."

Auburn, which ran for just 20 yards in the first half, finished with 185, including 157 by Stacy Danley.

Dye said Auburn, which finished 5-0-1 in the SEC to LSU's 5-1 and Alabama's 4-2, "pretty much had control most of the game, but we weren't ahead by much."

Linebacker Kurt Crain had 16 tackles and two interceptions as Auburn shut out Alabama for the first time since Notre Dame defeated the Crimson Tide 7-0 in 1980. Crain said the Alabama offense was thoroughly frustrated.

"They kept thinking they could run the ball, but we kept stopping them over and over," he said. "I don't think they really knew what to do."

Bill Curry, who went 0-7 against Auburn as the Georgia Tech coach before taking over at Alabama this season, said a key to the loss was the Tide's inability to cash in after Derrick Thomas blocked an Auburn punt at the 9 in the first period. Alabama disdained a field goal on fourth down from the Auburn 1, but the gamble misfired when a pass fell incomplete.

"We just couldn't establish ourselves on offense," said Bobby Humphrey, Alabama's top runner with 83 yards. "But what's done is done, and Auburn has a great defense."

Birdie Putt On 1st Hole Breaks Nicklaus Drought

LA QUINTA, Calif. (AP) — A long birdie putt on the first hole Saturday ended a Skins Game drought for Jack Nicklaus.

"After going 35 holes without a skin, it was kind of nice to get that monkey off my back," Nicklaus said. "It broke the ice and got me rolling."

Nicklaus hadn't won in this made-for-television event since the first hole of the 1985 Skins Game, but ended that string with a 25-foot putt on the first hole.

"It took the pressure off. After that, I was able to relax and enjoy it, and that's the way you want to play the Skins Game," he said.

Nicklaus birdied the first three holes he played, won two of them and then capped off the day with a winning, 30-foot birdie putt on the ninth.

"That damn Nicklaus," said Fuzzy Zoeller. "He played better today than he has all year. He made some putts out there."

Nicklaus finished the first nine holes on the extremely difficult PHA West course with $70,000 in winnings.

Zoeller won only one hole, but, with carryovers, it was a big one, worth $70,000, and pushed his Skins Games earnings to $695,000 in 45 holes.

Lee Trevino, the shortest hitter in the Hall of Fame foursome that is competing on the extremely difficult PGA West course, won the only other skin, worth $25,000, with a birdie on the par-5 eighth hole. Arnold Palmer was shut out. But he, along with the other three, will have another chance Sunday with another $285,000 up for grabs over the final nine holes.

"It's always nice to win a skin on the first day. That way you can relax the second day. I can't do that," Palmer said.

After his opening birdie, Nicklaus put it close on the second hole, but so did Zoeller and they halved the hole with birdies. The $15,000 for that hole carried over to the next, and Nicklaus won that one, worth $30,000, with an 8-foot birdie putt.

The next three holes were halved, with the prize money carried over after each, placing a $70,000 value on the seventh.

There, Zoeller played a delicate little pitch over the water to about four feet and just inside Trevino. When Trevino missed, Zoeller had the little putt for the big prize and rolled it home.

"I had no idea how much it was worth. I knew it was a lot, but I can't add that fast," Zoeller said.

None of the four could reach the green in two on the 565-yard eighth. Palmer, Nicklaus and Trevino all pitched to within about six feet in three. Palmer and Nicklaus missed their putts and Trevino made his birdie for the skin.

On the ninth, Trevino hit a great second shot from a fairway bunker to within 10 feet of the flag, and came scrambling out of the bunker shouting and waving and jumping.

Garner Is Still Among Unbeaten

By DAVID DROSCHAK
Associated Press Writer

Garner has rolled to a 13-0 record largely on the record-setting performances of running back Anthony Barbour, but a berth in the semifinals of the state 4-A high school football playoffs couldn't have been obtained without the forward pass.

Quarterback Stacy Best hit Robert Hinton with a 28-yard scoring pass with one minute remaining Friday night to lift the second-ranked Trojans to a thrilling, come-from-behind 28-24 victory over Richmond County.

Best also connected with Hinton on a 38-yard TD pass earlier in the contest, while Barbour rushed for 235 yards and scored on runs of 48 and 80 yards on the misty and rainy night. Barbour has rushed for 2,715 yards and scored 42 touchdowns — one score short of the unofficial state record set by Princeton's Mike Atkinson in 1979.

Garner will meet another 13-0 team in the semifinals as Northern Durham defeated Jacksonville 21-14. The Knights got three touchdowns from Russell McClain — the game-winner coming from 5 yards out with 10:11 remaining. Ronnie Thomas perserved the victory with his second interception of the contest with 36 seconds left.

The other 4-A semifinal matchup will feature undefeated Charlotte Harding and surprising Greensboro Grimsley. Harding downed Morganton Freedom 14-7, while Grimsley edged West Mecklenburg 10-6.

The defending 3-A champions are on a roll. Shelby, 12-1, intercepted four Chris Dillingham passes — returning two for scores — in its 49-0 victory over Asheville Erwin. The Golden Lions have outscored their opponents 134-6 in three playoff games.

Shelby will now play West Caldwell, also 12-1, after the Warriors defeated Lincolnton 26-6. Steven Patterson scored on three short touchdown runs to key the Warriors' victory.

Tarboro, 11-2, edged rival SouthWest Edgecombe 14-7 and will take on the winner of the Burlington Williams-Asheboro game postponed until Monday because of rain.

Top-ranked and undefeated Whiteville started slowly in its 2-A playoff game with East Duplin, but exploded for 26 second-half points to down the Panthers 32-0. Virgil Cokley rushed for 199 yards and scored on TD runs of 54 and 70 yards. Herman Jones also returned a kick 75 yards for a score and tight end Chester McGlockton caught a 53-yard scoring pass.

Whiteville, 13-0, will take on the winner of the North Pitt-Ayden-Grifton contest, one of three playoff games postponed because of wet grounds.

In another 2-A contest, Thomasville's Pat Weldon scored two touchdowns as the Bulldogs avenged a regular-season loss to Lexington and defeated the two-time defending champions 21-6. Thomasville, 12-1, rushed for 244 yards, while limiting Lexington to 82.

Defending 1-A champion Murphy now has won 27 of its last 28 games by thrashing Rosman 44-0. The Bulldogs, 12-1, won the contest despite 21 penalties for 225 yards.

"Penalties hurt us all night, but we are an aggressive team and those things are going to happen," said Coach David Gentry.

Quarterback Jeff Martin completed 13 of 25 passes for 237 yards and three touchdowns, including two to Carl Pickens, who was thrown out of the contest in the fourth quarter for fighting. Mel Nicely caught seven passes for 144 yards and a score. He also scored on a 45-yard run.

Murphy will take on East Montgomery, 11-2, in one 1-A semifinal matchup. The Eagles got 188 yards rushing from Dennis Greene, including an 89-yard TD scamper, to upset No. 2 and previously unbeaten Red Springs 12-0.

Tar Heels Struggle By Trojans

By The Associated Press

Dean Smith has seen enough basketball to know that winning on the road is no easy task, even if his third-ranked Tar Heels are considered the favorite.

The Tar Heels won their second game this season with an 82-77 triumph over Southern California in an opening-round game of the Central Fidelity Holiday Classic. Richmond downed Boston University 66-61 to set up Saturday night's title game at the Robins Center, which the Spiders call home.

"I would be amazed if we could beat Richmond right now at Richmond," Smith said. "Basketball's always been a home-court game and it always will be. I really will be surprised."

Smith may have based his doubts on his team's performance in beating the Trojans.

While North Carolina was making just 26 of 59 field-goal attempts and committing 17 turnovers, Southern Cal stayed in the game by hitting 13 of 25 shots from 3-point range.

"We made so many mental mistakes, too many for a North Carolina team," Smith said. "Maybe we'll come along. Maybe I'm being too impatient."

It was Southern Cal's season opener under second-year coach George Raveling, who has 10 new players on the squad.

"This game revealed the enormous potential our team has," Raveling said.

North Carolina held a 65-55 lead midway through the second half before the Trojans began their climb back. Sophomore guard Anthony Pendleton, who had eight of his game-high 20 points in the final 8:56, pulled Southern Cal within 69-67 on a layup with 6:29 left.

Ranzino Smith scored four points to spark an 11-4 North Carolina run, which was capped by Scott Williams' slam dunk for an 80-71 Tar Heels' edge with 49 seconds to play.

But Southern Cal got 3-pointers from Pendleton and Brad Winslow to cut North Carolina's advantage to 80-77 with 12 seconds remaining.

Smith was fouled on the ensuing inbounds play and made both free throws to seal the outcome.

Five Tar Heels scored in double figures, led by Smith's 19 points. Jeff Lebo added 15, Scott William scored 13 and J.R. Reid and Steve Bucknall has 11 each.

Virginia won its opening-round game in the Investors Classic, downing Columbia 83-58 at Charlottesville. Maryland knocked off Loyola, Md., 74-60 in the MCI Harbor Classic and Clemson defeated Oregon State 69-54 at Taipei, Taiwan.

All 12 Cavaliers who played scored at least two points in the victory, which was paced by Richard Morgan's 15 points. John Crotty added 14 for Virginia.

Columbia was within 11-7 before a 13-0 Virginia run put the Lions out of reach. Leading 40-26 at halftime, the Cavaliers clinched it with an 11-0 start to the second half.

Virginia was to meet Rhode Island, which defeated The Citadel 113-85.

Rudy Archer scored 21 points and dished out five assists to lead the Terrapins to a victory in the opening round of the MCI Harbor Classic at the Baltimore Arena. Mississippi defeated St. Joseph's 59-51 to join Maryland in the finals.

Elden Campbell's 22 points paced the Tigers. Jerry Pryor added 18 for Clemson in its season opener.

In addition to tonight's tournament championship games, No. 15 Duke starts the season against Appalachian State.

Howard Fails To Stop Playoffs; Suit Said Valid

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge on Friday denied Howard University's request to delay this weekend's start of the NCAA Division I-AA football playoffs while the school sues the NCAA over its exclusion from post-season play.

U.S. District Judge John Garrett Penn, in rejecting Howard's request for a temporary restraining order, refused to postpone the start of the playoffs for one week and also refused to order that the 16-team field be expanded by four schools.

The ruling means games scheduled for Saturday will be played, but Howard's $9 million lawsuit against the NCAA will continue in court.

"Any delay of these games would be a disruption which would cause severe hardship to the teams, their schools and their supporters," Penn said.

He recognized, however, "there are substantial and severe questions that are raised in the course of this litigation."

Howard lawyer Francis Smith said Friday's denial wouldn't be appealed, and that Howard would instead seek to a preliminary injunction to halt the second round of playoffs, scheduled Dec. 5.

Penn cited as particularly troubling Howard's ranking behind North Texas State in the final NCAA poll after the teams had been tied for 20th the previous week. In its final game, North Texas State beat a Division I-AA team with a losing record while Howard beat No. 14 Delaware State. Yet North Texas State moved ahead of Howard in the rankings, which were used by the NCAA in awarding playoff bids.

"I still can't understand how the ratings at the end of the season, with the ratings of the previous week, turned out as they did," Penn said. "It does seem Howard would have ended up with a higher ranking."

Penn said he made his ruling "with great difficulty," recognizing the plight of the team.

"They had one of their best seasons ever. I can understand the plight of the players. I can understand their disappointment," he said.

Howard President James Cheek said the denial of the restraining order would not deter Howard from continuing its legal battle against the NCAA.

"The factual situation (for the restraining order) is one we cannot overcome. Certainly to postpone the games would be disruptive to an awful lot of people," Cheek said.

"There is evidence we have been treated in a very shabby fashion," he said, promising to put members of the selection committee on the witness stand in a jury trial for civil damages.

"They will have to come clean. It's not only for Howard's benefit. It's going to benefit all small institutions and those who are considered other than big time."

Thousands of fans from the 16 schools have traveled to game sites and an NCAA lawyer said earlier Friday that teams had spent $200,000 getting to the stadiums.

"Tickets have been sold. Thousands of people have traveled from one part of the country to another. Families and friends of 16 schools have changed holiday plans and traveled to the sites," NCAA lawyer Donald Bucklin said.

The NCAA also said thousands of dollars worth of television contracts would be lost because TV schedules cannot be changed.

Earlier in the day, Penn asked the NCAA to supply more information about how this season's Division I-AA rankings were made during the season.

"I must admit, it does look interesting," Penn said after Howard lawyers outlined during a two-hour hearing how the team compiled a better record than any other in the playoffs, yet missed participation by one spot in the rankings.

Bucklin, pressed by Penn, said committee members apparently decided Delaware State was not as good as they had thought during the season, when the team was ranked as high as seventh.

He said North Texas State, with losses to two Division I-A teams, was eventually judged better than Howard because it had a tougher schedule. Howard played four games against teams below Division I-AA.

"But they knew that the week before," Penn said, pointing to North Texas State's tie with Howard for 20th in the Nov. 16 rankings.

"The only thing that happened to Delaware State was that they lost to Howard," university lawyer Francis Smith said. "Once it happened, it (the game) had to be denigrated or Howard would have to be included in the system and the NCAA did not want that."

"If this is their idea of fairness, then they must think we should still be pickin' cotton and strippin' tobacco," Smith told Penn.

PCS Sets Registering

Activities will be held each Saturday from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m.

Activities will be as follows:

☐Basketball: Boys ages 8-10, 9 to 10 a.m.; ages 11-12, 10 to 11 a.m.; ages 13-15, noon to 1 p.m.; girls ages 8-12, 11 a.m. to noon.

☐Cheerleading: Ages 9-12, 9 to 11 a.m.

☐Wrestling: Ages 8-12, 11 a.m. to noon.

Cost to participants will be $15 for one activity or $25 for two. Each participant will receive a t-shirt.

Bruce, OSU Settle Firing Suit

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — An out-of-court settlement under which Ohio State University will pay fired football Coach Earle Bruce $471,000 to drop a lawsuit is totally in the university's interests, its attorney says.

John C. Elam, who announced the settlement of Bruce's $7.4-million suit at a news conference Friday, was asked to assess the possible reaction of taxpayers and university contributors to the payment.

"I would think ... that those who are strong supporters of Earle Bruce, and those obviously run in the hundreds of thousands ... would be glad to hear that he's being made whole," Elam said.

"I never can speak for how a taxpayer might feel about any case. I can speak for myself, however, that I urged the trustees to make this settlement as being directly and totally in the interests of the university."

Bruce, 56, was fired Nov. 16 by university President Edward Jennings, who has never disclosed the specific reasons for his action. Athletic Director Rick Bay resigned in protest the same day. Bruce's dismissal took effect following the Buckeyes' season-ending victory over Michigan. The coach filed suit Nov. 20 in Franklin County Common Pleas Court.

In the suit, Bruce's attorney, John Zonak, accused Jennings of firing Bruce because Jennings knew the coach disapproved of Jennings' lifestyle. At a news conference announcing the lawsuit, Zonak accused Jennings of excessive drinking.

Elam said Jennings had improperly been brought into the matter.

"I believe that this was, and this is the basis of the settlement, a contract dispute between Coach Bruce and the university. Anything else, in my viewpoint, was improper," Elam said.

He said the incident had placed a "tremendous strain" on all those involved.

"That is one of the reasons why, in the statements that have been issued both by President Jennings and Earle Bruce, you will see the expressions of regret," Elam said.

"To state the obvious, all of you are certainly aware that every one of them have been in the eye of the needle and this has created tremendous pressures," he said.

Details of the agreement were disclosed by Elam at a hastily called news conference which neither Bruce nor Jennings attended. Except for prepared statements they issued, the agreement provided for both not to comment on the incident.

The two-page agreement stipulates that the university pay Bruce $471,000 within three business days.

"This is to make him whole for what he would have received had he continued in his employment between now and June 1989," Elam said.

Bruce was paid less than $90,000 annually as head football coach. Had he been allowed to stay as coach until his contract expired in June 1989, Bruce would have been entitled to about $140,000 in salary from the university.

"He also had a TV contract, a sporting equipment contract, miscellaneous clinics, and the figure that was arrived at, excluding any fees, any other rights, was $471,000" in earnings Bruce lost because of his firing, Elam said.

In addition, had Bruce continued as a university employee, he would have been eligible for early retirement at a potential cost to the university of $195,000. Other fringe benefits, such as health insurance, would have cost the university about $25,000 by June 1989.

Overall, the university's potential financial obligations to Bruce had he remained on the job and taken early retirement would have totaled $351,680, Elam said.

If Bruce finds a new job before July 1, 1989, he will have to pay back whatever he earns as part of the settlement.

Elam said the settlement was fair to both parties and that university trustees support the agreement. Edmund C. Redman, chairman of the Board of Trustees, said formal approval of the settlement was expected at the board's meeting next Friday.

Bruce declined further comment on the settlement, but Zonak told The Columbus Dispatch on Friday that Bruce proposed a settlement in a letter to the university before the suit was filed.

Smith #2 In Wins

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Jerry Tarkanian of Nevada-Las Vegas and North Carolina's Dean Smith head the list of the nation's winningest college basketball coaches for the third year in a row.

Tarkanian, whose 1986-87 team won 37 games to tie the NCAA single-season record, has won 473 games while losing 100 in 19 seasons as a head coach — five at Long Beach State and 14 at UNLV.

His winning percentage of .825 ranks second on the all-time NCAA list between Long Island University's Clair Bee (410-86—.827) and Kentucky's Adolph Rupp (875-190—.822).

Smith's 26-year record of 611-175—.777 puts him second among active coaches to both Tarkanian in winning percentage and Ralph Miller of Oregon State in total victores. Miller's teams have won 615 games.

Lou Carnesecca of St. John's is third and Indiana's Bob Knight is fourth for the second year in a row. Carnesecca's 19-year record is 423-145—.745 while Knight, in his 23rd season as a head coach, is 468-169—.735. Knight coached at West Point before going to Indiana.

The only newcomer in this year's list is Shelby Metcalf of Texas A&M, who is 16th. He replaces Virginia Tech's Charlie Moir, who is no longer coaching.

The Top Twenty Coaches list has been compiled for the 21st year by Elmore "Scoop" Hudgins, retired assistant commissioner of the Southeastern Conference.

Hudgins' formula lists the 20 coaches with the most victories at four-year colleges and then ranks them in order of winning percentage. The cutoff point this year is 397 victories.

Rounding out the top 10 are Don Haskins of Texas-El Paso, 493-215—.696; Lou Henson of Illinois, 481-234—.673; Davey Whitney of Alcorn State, 437-219—.666; Gene Bartow of Alabama-Birmingham, 476-243—.662; Norm Stewart of Missouri, 478-248—.658, and Don Donoher of Dayton, 412-240—.632.

Some Christmas Gift Ideas For Family Outdoorsman

By BILL SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer

With the Christmas shopping season officially under way, here are some gift ideas for the outdoorsman. Hunters can clip and save this and leave it where family members can find it.

Warm gloves are a vital part of a deer hunter's equipment, especially when he sits on a stand or stump for hours in freezing cold. There is an advantage to gloves or mittens because you don't have to know an exact size.

For the home seamstress, there's an even warmer variation on gloves. Make a muff of quilted fabric, lined with fur and covered with camouflage material. Attach a loop of string so the muff can hang around a hunter's neck. The hunter can sit with warm hands, then slip them out of the muff to take his or her shot without the muff falling and scaring anything within 100 yards.

Avoid giving boots unless you know exact size. Someone who wears ill-fitting footgear will pay many times the price paid by the purchaser.

It's also good to avoid rifles, shotguns and archery tackle. They all should be matched to the shooter. Gift certificates for the items, however, make wonderful presents.

Sleeping bags are a good one-size-fits-all gift. They come in two basic varieties: box bags and mummy bags. Box bags are roomier, and many models of box bags are made so two can be zipped together into a double bag.

Mummy bags are usually warmer since there is less room inside for your body to heat. Check with the retailer or the label on the bag to make sure it will protect your outdoor enthusiast in the coldest weather he's likely to face.

A family gift could be a new tent. Basically there are three kinds of tents: canvas, cotton-polyester and nylon.

A canvas tent is the most durable, most watertight, most expensive and heaviest.

Cotton-polyester tents are much less expensive, have fewer problems with mildew and mold than canvas tents and are lighter. But since they are not as water-repellant, they must be coated with polyurethane or other chemicals, so the fabric doesn't breathe as well as canvas. Make sure such a tent has good window ventilation.

Nylon tents are the tents of the '80s. They are lightweight and inexpensive. They are not as tough or durable, and they, too, require good ventilation becuase the fabric must be coated and does not breathe.

A knife is another wonderful gift. They range from small pocket utility knives to huge sheath knives. The trick is to get a good blade that will take a sharp edge and hold it.

A good, small flashlight can be invaluable. Make sure it has replaceable alkaline batteries. A small flashlight in his pocket can save a hunter a lot of trouble if he's caught in the woods after dark.

There are several varieties of camp lanterns and stoves. Lanterns can be battery-powered, liquid-fueled or propane-fueled. Stoves and heaters can be propane- or liquid-fueled. All have advantages and disadvantages.

If you want to give one of those items, match it to the gear the camper already owns. It's a lot less trouble if he needs to carry only one kind of fuel.

Deer Hunters Arrested

Wildlife enforcement officers have charged 44 people in a a five-county region with illegal deer kills during a week-long investigation called Operation Wolfpack.

From sunset on Oct. 11 to sunrise on Oct. 18, 23 officers under the command of Maj. C.J. Smith of the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission were dispatched to areas of Northampton, Halifax, Edgecombe, Warren and Franklin counties to look for people illegally hunting deer at night and violating other wildlife laws. Wildlife officers met jointly to plan their strategy. Some went to the woods and fields in cars and jeep, some used boats to patrol the Roanoke River and others were assigned to aircraft surveillance.

When Operation Wolfpack ended, officers had made 26 night deer hunting — or firelighting — cases, had charged two people with illegal doe kills, charged one with simple possession of marijuana, made cases on 17 other miscellaneous violations and recovered one stolen vehicle.

"We'd had reports from sportsmen of people hunting from the road before the season opened," said Smith, who oversees field operations from the Commission's enforcement division. "Sportsmen in those counties had also reported incidents of illegal deer kills last season."

With the eastern deer season already in its sixth week, the operation has deterred night deer hunting in those areas, but officers are still making arrests.

"As long as there are deer and a person has a reason to be out there with a weapon — that is to say if a hunting season is in — there's a segment of the population that's going to hunt deer at night," Smith said. "And we're not just enforcing the night deer hunting law. We're enforcing the laws that require licenses, tagging and reporting deer kills, and violations of county wildlife laws."

Several of the night deer hunting arrests made involved pairs of vehicles. Persons in the first vehicle shine a light looking for deer, while those in the second vehicle carry the weapons and shoot the deer.

"People try to get around the law that prohibits shining a light from a vehicle that is carrying a weapon," Smith said. "But the courts have upheld our charges when the front vehicle acts as the spotter (shining the light in search of deer) and the second vehicle is the carrier of the firearm."

He said the courts have ruled that "this is a joint effort between two parties to take deer with the aid of artificial light, and conviction rate has been high. If the courts didn't uphold this, there would be little a wildlife officer could do under these circumstances."

Several more such special operations are planned for areas around the state. Officers will work in groups and will use aircraft and boats to look for wildlife law violators.

"Our officers' safety is a high priority in these operations," Smith said. "Our policy us to have a second officer present when any officer is working night deer hunting cases or any other dangerous situation.

"The officers will notify other local officers and the telecommunications center in Raleigh and license plate number and a description of the suspicious vehicle, and the number of occupants in the vehicle before the vehicle is stopped. In many instances, the second officer will observe without making his presence known to the violators unless needed."

Whitetails Unlimited Needs More Members

Whitetails Unlimited Inc., a national non-profit organization dedicated to conserving whitetailed-deer, is looking for "sincere and dedicated sportsmen" to join the organization, according to David Hawkey, vice president.

"Many hunters tend to overlook the fact that the hunting right can be taken away and that they need to work on obtaining the respect of the general public," he said. "This requires more than the purchase of a hunting license. Their involvement in an organization such as Whitetails Unlimited not only improves that image but also works toward the well being of the white-tailed deer and its environment."

The organization was established in 1982 by Peter J. Gerl with "the enthusiasm, dedication and overall sportsmen's attitude associated with the 'number one big game animal in the United States,' the white-tailed deer, and channeling that into useful volunteer efforts and a heightened awareness of hunter ethics and hunter/landowner relations," Gerl said.

Whitetails Unlimited has established charter chapters throughout the United States from Michigan to Florida, but it needs more chapters. The group has developed and implemented programs to help curb some of the major problems confronting white-tailed deer. A national effort is being made to instill in the public an understanding of the environmental needs of the deer population.

"What we need are sportsmen and women who realize the need for an organization with national, state and local effectiveness — sportsmen who are willing to get involved and are not afraid to stand up and be counted," Gerl said.

A one-year membership costs $10 and includes a membership card, decal and four issues of "The Deer Trail" magazine. For more information about becoming a member or forming a local chapter, write to Whitetails Unlimited Inc., National Headquarters, P.O. Box 422, Sturgeon Bay, WI 54235, or call 414-743-6777.

Fish Are Safe to Eat

State Health Director Dr. Ronald H. Levine has reaffirmed that there is no evidence of illness among people who have eaten finfish caught along the North Carolina coast. Some consumers have expressed concern about eating such fish in the wake of an outbreak of red tide.

According to health officials, finfish caught in waters affected by the red tide have not caused illness when eaten by humans. However, they said, it is never advisable to eat fish entrails or any fish found dead or appearing to be sick or weakened.

"The Division of Health Services has been contacting individuals who are known to have eaten finfish caught during the period of red tide along our coast," Levine said. "Of the 60 to 70 people we have spoken with so far, none have shown any sign of illness as a result of eating the fish caught in the affected areas."

Motorists: Be Alert

By TOM FEGELY
The Morning Call

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — More deer are killed by motorists in Pennsylvania each year than are killed by hunters in more than half of the states.

This is prime time for roadkills as whitetails are in their peak rutting period, moving day and night and often throwing caution to the wind.

There's not much the motorist can do to avoid collisions except to be aware of the increased activities of both bucks and does, especially on back roads.

Deer crossing signs are so common that most motorists tend to ignore them; however, it is important to remember that the signs are strategically placed as the result of previous accidents involving deer.

Last year a record of 32,005 deer were killed on Pennsylvania roadways. That figure includes only the deer that were picked up by motorists and game protectors.

Many more, certainly, were injured and wandered off to die elsewhere. From a third to a quarter of the highway carnage always takes place in November and the first weeks of December.

According to the Pennsylvania Game Commission, roadkill figures this year were about 2,000 ahead of last year's going into this month.

It may come as a surprise that the highest kill figures are usually from the high human population counties. In 1986 motorists traveling on Bucks County roads killed 864 deer as compared to Potter County's 761. One hundred Philadelphia County deer fatalities were also recorded.

Of bigger concern is the chance of human injury and death associated with deer-vehicle collisions. Last year three human fatalities and 1,482 injuries were attributed to road collisions with deer.

In 1985 two people were killed and Wildlife Service Concerned About Chattery Martins

By JERRY NACHTIGAL
Associated Press Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — As songbirds go, it's difficult to find a more companionable creature than the purple martin.

The martin has been managed by man longer than any other North American bird species. Native Indians were erecting hollowed-out gourds as nest sites for the insect-eating swallow before the first Europeans arrived.

Today, hundreds of thousands of martin enthusiasts from Texas to Canada erect gourds and often elaborate multi-compartment houses made of aluminum or wood to attract the graceful birds to their lawns and gardens.

However, wildlife officials are concerned about the chattery martin. Studies by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service show the martin is declining within parts of its breeding range.

Breeding surveys conducted annually for the past 22 years show that martin numbers have steadily plummeted in Wisconsin, South Dakota, Ohio, Kansas, and Alabama.

"I actually stopped studying them because it became harder and harder to attract purple martins," said Dr. Richard F. Johnston, curator of the Museum of Natural History at the University of Kansas in Lawrence.

"In the mid-1960s, the birds in eastern Kansas experienced some kind of decline. That has continued. You can always find purple martins, but not in the numbers there used to be," Johnston said.

Huge numbers of aggressive starlings and house sparrows, which compete with the martins for nest sites, could be part of the reason for fewer martins in some states, experts say.

Scientists say pesticides, predators and disease could also play a role. In addition, massive die-offs have been reported in the martin's wintering range in Brazil, possibly due to pesticide poisoning. But while martin numbers have dipped in some states, wildlife officials are encouraged by population increases in Virginia, Texas, Oklahoma, North Carolina, Maryland, Louisiana, Kentucky, and Florida.

The Purple Martin Conservation Association, based at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania, was formed in 1986 in hopes of increasing the martin population through research, management and public education.

"I love the martins and most people who get acquainted with them love them," said Jamie Hill, executive director of the non-profit organization. Hill has studied martins for 10 years, and says the association "is my calling in life."

Catch & Release May Be Banned

ANCHORAGE (AP) — Natives in the village of Quinhagak say catch-and-release fishing by sportsmen violates the natives' religious beliefs.

"It is against the natives religion to allow their food to be played with and wasted," attorneys with Alaska Legal Services in Bethel wrote in a proposal to Alaska Board of Fisheries to ban the practice of catch-and-release on the Kanektok River.

The village and river are about 425 miles southwest of Anchorage.

The natives and their attorneys claim that fish released after being hooked by sport fishermen often die.

Mac Minard, fisheries biologist for the Alaska Department of Fish and Game in Dillingham, estimated as much as 30 percent of the fish released by anglers die.

Alexie Pleasant, a village leader, said Eskimos have been taught that fish and game resources should not be used for pleasure.

Assistant Attorney General Larri Spengler said she doesn't think the villagers' religious rights are being violated.

"Religious freedom issues do not come into play until people are forced to do something against their religion, or are forced to refrain from doing something. That doesn't appear to be the case in Quinhagak."

The religion argument was greeted with skepticism and anger by sportsmen.

"What they want is an exclusive subsistence area," said Tom Elias, president of the Alaska Sport Fishing Association.

David Law, a member of the Alaska Fly Fishers, called the proposed ban on hook-and-release ridiculous. It would set a dangerous precedent, he said.

Trouble between natives and fly-in fishermen on the Kanektok has been brewing for the past five years, Minard said. Heated words and shoves were exchanged in July after the ADF&G closed the river to commercial fishing, but left it open for sport fishing.

About 60 villagers took to the river in a flotilla of boats, confronting anglers they encountered. The Alaska State Troopers were called in to keep the peace.

Minard said the closure of the commercial season was because not enough salmon were making it back to their spawning grounds.

"But it made little sense to close it to sport fishing," Minard said. "They don't keep that many."

According to ADF&G records, anglers caught 1,900 king salmon this summer, releasing all but 375.

Subsistence fishermen caught 3,663 kings, and commercial fishermen netted 26,000. Nearly all the subsistence and commercial fishermen are natives, Minard said.

1,315 injured and in 1984 seven human deaths and 1,159 injuries were recorded, according to the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation.

Bears are also hit by vehicles on occasion. Of the 140 road-related bear deaths last year, nine took place in Pike County, eight in Monroe, and five in Schuylkill.

Take special care when driving the back roads and highways that wind through deer country, especially during the next month or so. If you see eyes glowing along the edge of the road, slow down.

And if a deer or two crosses in front of you, watch for others following them. Sometimes blowing the horn or blinking headlights snaps the deer out of their trances or sends them scurrying back in the direction from which they came.

Gary Sumrell shows off his prizes from the October Big Bass Contest held at River Park North and sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department. Sumrell landed the largest bass from the park during the month, a 3-pound, 10-ounce fish.

Decorating Touches Add To Holiday Party Fun

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Centerpieces, so important for a festive mood on Christmas and Hanukkah dining tables, get in the way when the serious business of eating starts.

So, concoct a centerpiece that can disappear just before the meal starts, suggest Beverly Reese Church and Bethany Ewald Bultman, authors of a new party idea book, "The Joys of Entertaining."

Mass small presents (one for each member of the party) on a square of fabric in the center of the table. Use matching napkins tied with the same sort of bows adorning the gifts. Open the gifts before dinner and discard the wrappings.

Here are some other holiday party decorating ideas from Church, a former party planner and florist, and Bultman, a writer and editorial photo stylist.

For original placecards, take photos with an instant-camera as guests come in, then insert each person's in an inexpensive dime store frame you've purchased ahead of time to fit the finished print. Each guest finds his or her place by his picture and gets to keep or exchange the favor.

The enticing aromas of cinnamon and cloves are associated with the Christmas holiday, so heat apple cider or apple juice and add the two spices. A delightful drink and a wonderful fragrance are the dual rewards of this simple ploy.

Recycle old Christmas balls as candle holders. Glue a washer to the bottom to keep the ball steady and pierce a hole in the ball. Add several inches of sand (using a funnel to insert) and place tall thin tapers in the ball. Cover the top with holly and mass the balls on a square of mirror in the center of the table. A variation on this theme is to core large red apples and fill with red candles.

Candles and Hanukkah naturally go together and the holiday colors are blue and white. So, tie white candles with blue satin ribbons or mix blue and white candles together for decorations. One hostess the authors met in their quest for new party ideas collects antique menorahs which she uses to decorate her home during the festive holiday.

For Christmas decor, seasonal greens are appropriate. On mantels or down the center of the table, arrange Christmas greens or ivy in a serpentine pattern interspersed with red flowers. Add a row of brass, silver, crystal or cut glass candleholders.

Build gingerbread houses of varying sizes and styles and group on a mantel or tabletop.

Group dolls or stuffed animals — spruced up with holiday aprons, bows or collars — on a table or mantel or in a cradle.

Own a hobby horse? Give it a holiday necklace of greenery or place sprigs of holly in the mouth and set at the doorway.

Unusual party ideas for the holidays include a multi-generational letter-to-Santa party. Provide children with scissors, paper and paste and all the holiday catalogs you have received. The kids write and decorate a group letter to Santa while the parents string popcorn or cranberry beads, bake cookies or just visit with one another. If the party is held early in the season, the letter can furnish some clues to the children's heart's desires among gifts.

Another idea is a cooking-baking party. This is popular all over the country and has many variations, said the authors. Guests can bring a favorite recipe and the ingredients they will need to execute it. Or, the host may supply all the ingredients and recipes with copies to be taken away. After sampling everything, at party's end, all the guests leave with a box of mixed cookies for their own celebrations.

A simple way to entertain is to have a holiday tea. Put on baroque music, get out elegant dishes and serve Victorian favorites such as tea sandwiches, pound cake and cookies.

The secret to a happy holiday season is participation of many age groups, both authors agree. For parties to go smoothly, it's important to deal with the actual structure of the family.

If divorce, ill feeling or the absence of some family members mean a traditional family dinner would be uncomfortable, entertain in ways that minimize difficulties. For example, hold a large open house instead of a sit-down dinner. The open house can accommodate a large group of family and friends and ensure that everyone can have a good time.

"Tell everyone to drop in between noon and 4 p.m. You aren't seated at a table with people who don't get along," said Bultman. Furthermore, added Church, people with kids can come early while those who don't enjoy kids can come later.

On The House

By ANDY LANG

What's new on the market?

Manufacturer's claim — That it holds more paint and is easier to clean than non-open-pore foams ... that its structure consists of 12-sided, interconnecting cells that provide 97 percent void volume to hold paint ... that these cells allow cleansing solutions full access to the paint ... that the foam easily holds and releases water-based paints, yet at the same time absorbs oil, making it suitable for oil-based paints ... and that the applicator enables users to eliminate brush marks.

THE PRODUCT — A device that recirculates the rising warm air in a home and helps keep the temperature constant.

Manufacturer's claim — That this small device is mounted on the ceiling and equalizes floor-to-ceiling temperatures by directing downward a low-velocity, draft-free column of the warm air at the ceiling level ... that the product is made of impact-resistant plastic which can be painted ... that it is plugged into a 110-volt outlet and will equalize temperatures in rooms with ceiling heights up to 8 feet, with other models for rooms with higher ceilings ... and that it helps eliminate "hot spots" caused by improper circulation in air-conditioned rooms.

Manufacturer's claim — That the alarm offers dual AC-DC capability and maintains its power during a power outage with a 9-volt battery pickup ... that it features a bipolar dual ionization sensing chamber for early smoke detection and a preset sensitivity that helps reduce nuisance alarms ... that a continuous green indicator shows the unit is receiving AC power, while a blinking red indicator shows the detector is fully DC powered ... and that the alarm may be interconnected to as many as 18 units.

Manufacturer's claim — That the rigid foam backing on the mirrors enables the panels to be manufactured in ¾-inch thicknesses ... that this makes them half the weight of conventional wall mirrors and six times stronger ... that the mirror panels come in stock sizes and can be installed with an ordinary screwdriver and hammer ... that they attach directly to gypsum walls, plywood or cement by means of a simple fastener, spindle and lock washer ... and that each mirror is finished with four coats of pure silver, two coats of copper and a protective baked-on epoxy.

Here's The Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q.— What is the difference between common nails and box nails?

A.— These two types of nails are similar in many ways. The difference is that box nails are thinner and consequently less likely to split certain kinds of wood. On the other hand, their slimness makes them more susceptible to bending when driven into hard lumber.

Q.— Why do the pipes in my basement sweat and cause water to drip to the floor. Is there a way to prevent this?

A.— Cold water pipes in any house are likely to sweat when warm, moist air settles on them. It's condensation and is exactly what occurs on cold window panes. To prevent the pipes from this kind of sweating, wrap them in special tape made for the purpose or with some other kind of insulation. Since the warm, moist air will not condense on the tape or insulation, there will be no sweating or dripping.

Q.— The latch on our bedroom door doesn't fit into the strike plate attached to the jamb. It seems to be off only about an eighth of an inch. Can this be repaired or adjusted and will I be able to do it myself?

A.— A strike plate that fails to engage the latch by only a fraction of an inch can sometimes be repaired by filing the plate, but if the margin is more than that — even half an inch — the strike plate must be moved slightly. To do this, you may have to remove a tiny bit of the wood with a chisel. It's something you should be able to handle yourself.

Q.— Can I patch a hole in a screen which is about one inch square?

A.— Yes, but fiber glass mesh is a bit tougher than regular metal. You can buy little mending patches at your hardware store. If the hole is even smaller than one inch square, spreading some household cement across the opening will close the gap when the cement dries.

Q.— I am having my attic finished. Will choosing the attic bathroom's location save money if it is placed directly over the downstairs bathroom?

A.— Definitely. Ask your contractor whether the location you have chosen will be feasible.

Appreciation Potential Key In Buying A House

By CHANGING TIMES
The Kiplinger Magazine

The American dream isn't merely being able to buy a house; it's also cashing in big when you sell. That means looking for the house with the greatest appreciation potential.

According to a study by the National Association of Realtors, bigger may be better — at least compared to a couple of years ago. The median price of a four-bedroom house bought in 1985 increased almost 18 percent by June 1987, when it rose to $122,800. During that same period, three-bedroom houses appreciated about 11 percent and two-bedroom houses appreciated 12 percent, although from 1986 to 1987 the three-bedroom house increased the most in value.

In general, the least expensive house in a neighborhood is often the best buy because the pricier homes elevate its worth. Just be sure it is of similar design and has the same number of bedrooms as the other homes on the block, says Jim Klopfenstein, immediate past president of the Society of Real Estate Appraisers. Be wary of buying a house with unconventional architecture; it may make a statement about you but may not appeal to potential buyers.

Good signs of a prospering real estate market, Klopfenstein says, are homes selling in 90 to 120 days and actual sale prices that are 90 percent to 95 percent of asking prices. Of course, it helps if you happen to live in one of the hot spots or can move there. In that case your house may indeed be sitting on easy street.

The following are the 10 metro areas with the highest appreciation of median sales price of existing homes (information provided by the National Association of Realtors and the California Association of Realtors):

Providence $84,400, $109,800, 30.1 percent; Hartford $127,600, $157,000, 23.0 percent; Albany $73,300, $86,500, 18.0 percent; Washington, D.C. $102,800, $120,400, 17.1 percent; Detroit $57,500, $66,600, 15.8 percent; Philadelphia $73,600, $84,400, 14.7 percent; Jacksonville, Fla. $57,500, $65,800, 14.4 percent; New York $160,000, $183,000, 14.4 percent; Boston $156,200, $175,800, 12.5 percent; Anaheim, Calif. $149,400, $167,300, 12.0 percent.

Real estate that reaps riches, however, may also take a bite out of your paycheck. "U.S. Housing Markets," a publication of Lomas & Nettleton Co., an independent mortgage banker, conducted a housing affordability study that ranked 27 major metropolitan areas according to the percentage of average household income needed for the average conventional mortgage payment in 1986.

So while housing in the New York City area may be appreciating at a satisfactory clip, not many people can take advantage of it. New York is the least affordable housing market surveyed, with 37 percent of the relatively high average household income ($49,100) going for mortgage payments. Fewer than 15 percent of New York City households can manage the average monthly mortgage payment of $1,525.

Houses in the San Diego, Los Angeles and Boston areas, where more than 31 percent of the average paycheck goes to pay for mortgages, were only a tad more affordable.

At the other end of the scale, residents of St. Louis spent a mere 18 percent of their average salary ($42,700) on mortgage payments for the average home, priced at $80,900.

Cleveland, Indianapolis and Kansas City were next in line as the most affordable housing markets.

And Detroit had the distinction of having the most affordable housing among the 10 largest cities.

Sandwiched between least and most affordable localities were Columbus, Ohio; Chicago; Houston; Atlanta; Dallas-Fort Worth; Baltimore; Seattle; and Washington, D.C. Even San Francisco was considered middling affordable because, although housing prices are astronomical, average household income ($51,500) is also very high.

Heater Precautions

From BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS
A Meredith Magazine

Any machine that puts out heat is capable of starting a fire.

For the millions of people who use portable heaters during the cold months, the following precautions from Better Homes and Gardens will improve safety.

When shopping for an electric or kerosene heater, look for one that doesn't tip over easily when bumped into. Also look for the UL (Underwriters Laboratories) seal of approval, which indicates the product is made according to high safety standards.

Portable electric heaters range in price from less than $30 to more than $200, and they eat up around 10 to 15 cents' worth of electricity per hour.

In 1985, portable electric heaters caused 3,700 residential fires, resulting in 160 deaths. The main reasons for those fires included placing the heater too close to combustibles, putting articles of clothing near the heater to dry, and using extension cords that were too light, according to the Consumer Product Safety Commission.

For heaters that are made to plug into a standard 15-amp, 120-volt household wall receptacle, Underwriters Lab recommends a maximum heat setting of 1,500 watts per hour. That provides just enough heat output for an average-size room.

Shop for a heater that automatically shuts off when it tips over.

If you must use an extension cord, choose a heavy-duty one. Heaters draw a lot of power, which may damage a regular cord and cause a fire.

Be sure the grille that covers the heating element doesn't allow room for a child's fingers to be stuck through it.

Portable heaters that burn kerosene range in price from around $80 to more than $250. They consume two to 10 cents' worth of fuel per hour and produce up to four times the heat output of electric heaters.

Luxury Lifestyles Show Spotlights High Life

By Paul Feldman
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Margaret Cleven had already gawked at $135,000 Ferraris and $285,000 spa-equipped motor homes. But what really caught her eye was something to fit the Lifestyles of the Rich and Furry — a $10,500 marble-floored, four-foot-tall dog house.

"I think it's gorgeous," she said after surveying the French chateau-style mutt mansion. "But then again, my dogs woudn't fit in it — they're Dobermans."

Cleven was among several thousand people who paid $5-a-head to attend the opening session of the third annual Luxury Lifestyles Show at the Los Angeles Convention Center, a confab that kicked off the Christmas buying season with an alternatedly ornate, ostentatious, and outrageous display of merchandise from more than 300 exhibitors.

Need a pair of hand-made lizard-skin shoes for $400 to $6,000? Have a yen for a wok-like $3,400 satellite TV dish? Or, on a more mundane level, can't live without "Curb Service," a sturdy trash bag holder that eliminates the need for garbage cans for only $29.95?

They had 'em all, as well as a $2,500 pinstripe-style men's suit in which the owner's name is handwoven, repeatedly, into the fabric. "It's for people who are very wealthy and who have an enormous ego," declared designer Simon Boddington.

As well, Boddington acknowledged, the suit could come in handy if its owner ran out of business cards — in which case he could just cut a swatch of the cloth with a pair of scissors.

In spite of the recent debacle on Wall Street, most merchandisers at the show swore that their businesses have remained unaffected.

"We saw an improvement after the crash," asserted Howard Becker, president of Electronic Entertainment, Inc., which displayed car stereo systems ranging upwards to $7,000. "To me, the marketplace said, 'It looks like we're going to have to work for a couple years so we may as well bolt ourselves in our cars and go to work.'"

"People who have money will always have money," echoed N. Jonathan Woods, owner of the Pagliacci Gift Gallery of Laguna Beach, Calif., which specializes in lithographs and original oils by comic Red Skelton.

Among the Skeltons on display Friday was one titled "The Financier," which featured a gloomy clown staring at a Wall Street Journal chart depicting plummeting stock prices. But Woods, who said that Skelton originals run from $12,000 to $100,000, kept a smile on his own face, explaining "Artwork will always appreciate in value."

As for the equity of spending thousands on frills while many people remain hungry or homeless, most merchandisers said they rarely hear such questions from their consumers. But those that do, such as Cannon Garber of Animal Manors, Inc., which makes the marbled doghouses, had ready answers.

Coddling canines is better than wasting wealth on oneself, she said. "These are luxury items like jewelry and very fine cars. They are beautiful and functional. ... People in our society say 'How can you spend that money on an animal?' but they don't think twice on spending it on items for themselves."

As the crowds surged through the Convention Center — sponsors say 42,000 people attended last year and that that a total of 50,000 are expected this year — the show appeared to draw mixed reviews.

'Everything is really neat," said Cleven of Los Angeles. "But they're a little out of my price range; I'm here to browse."

Others, such as Zel Slayen, 73, of Los Angeles, were less impressed.

"I think this stinks," said the retired wholesale furniture salesman. "This is just a carnival, I'd rather see some beautiful interiors, some exquisite furniture and room sets. ... This is just a country fair. It's a gimmick. ... I didn't come to see pots and pans."

Indeed, despite its title, the show did feature a fair number of unlikely "luxury lifestyles,", including bagel cutters, Ginsu knives and oil paintings that looked hardly loftier than a black velvet Elvis.

Still, every salesman had his own schtick to explain why he was there, even Steve Risch, the president of The Jerky Hut Corp.

"This is a collage of the finest smoked meats and beef jerky," Risch said, as he snipped samples of pepperoni and "Gold Nugget" beef jerky. "It goes for $23 a pound. Hey, even filet mignon will only cost you about $7."

Retailers Extend Hours To Nab Shopper Traffic

By JOYCE M. ROSENBERG
AP Business News

Customers lined up outside stores and malls Friday as anxious retailers began the all-important Christmas shopping season by slashing prices and stretching hours.

The day after Thanksgiving lived up to its reputation as one of the year's busiest shopping days, but there were differences Friday — some consumers and many retailers were cautious because of the Oct. 19 stock market crash and economic uncertainty.

"I have less money to spend, but I'm still buying," said Mary Lynn Yaros of Hamilton Township, N.J., who had a trunk full of gifts by 9:30 a.m.

Many stores, scared by predictions that spending will be tight this Christmas, offered deep discounts and other promotions not usually seen so early in the season.

Sears cut prices during certain hours, and some department stores marked down merchandise by 20 percent to 40 percent.

A Gold Circle store in Buffalo, N.Y., was more innovative. It distributed boxes of Cracker Jack with special prizes: gift certificates that would save shoppers anywhere from $50 to $500.

"It's busy," said Fred Brookins, the store's assistant manager. "We've got Cracker Jack boxes all over the floor."

The Christmas season is critical to retailers because they earn half their annual profits from holiday sales.

Some retailers are optimistic about their prospects, but many others are leery. Financial analysts have lowered their forecasts for the season because of slow sales earlier this month.

Rich Winters, a vice president and district manager for Gold Circle, said he was encouraged by shopper turnout in his territory, which covers the Cincinnati and Dayton areas in Ohio and northern Kentucky.

Winters said the response appeared to suggest that consumers had recovered from their concerns about the stock market crash.

"From what we can tell, we believe there was a scare back there 30 days ago, and now people are recovering from it and they're out there buying," he said. "It's very promising."

But at the Lazarus department store in downtown Columbus, Ohio, where shoppers lined up 30 minutes before the store's 8 a.m. opening, manager Mike Trafford was more wary.

"It's just a tradition for Christmas shoppers and usually a terrific day, but it's not a total indicator of how the season will be," Trafford said.

James L. Moore Jr., president of Lovemans Inc., a Chattanooga, Tenn.-based department store chain, agreed. "There's a lot more uncertainty and I'd say this is our most challenging year in the past 10."

In Nashville, Tenn., department stores that opened two hours early also found shoppers waiting in line.

"We're mobbed — we had people waiting at the doors," said Charles Sharp, manager at the Castner Knott department store in Nashville's Green Hills Mall. "It's bigger and better than last year."

At Strawbridge & Clothier, a Philadelphia department store, clerks brushed aside requests for comment as the crowds grew. "We're too busy to talk," they said.

But not all stores were so fortunate.

Mike Winters, manager of a Chess King clothing store in The Mall in Johnson City, Tenn., said about two hours after opening that business was slower than last year's day after Thanksgiving.

"This time last year we did tons more than what we're doing now," he said.

Shoppers "are tighter this year" and seem to be looking for bargains more, Winters said. He also said they were not using their credit cards as much, paying cash instead.

Les Simpson, assistant manager of Four C's Jewelers in the same mall, found "a lot more people are comparing prices early and buying later on."

The stock market and concern over the economy appeared to have dampened the spirits of many.

"Everyone's kind of running scared, and I think people are going to tend to spend less," said Maria Elena Lavastida at a Sears in Miami. "I'll be a little more conservative in what I spend."

But economic worries did not dampen the spirits of all.

Airline Crippled

MONTREAL (AP) — Air Canada began a systemwide shutdown Friday after the government-run carrier was crippled by a groundworkers strike, stranding thousands of irate passengers from Vancouver to Montreal.

The airline's 8,500 groundworkers have been engaged in a series of rotating walkouts throughout the country because they have been working without a contract since June. Air Canada's management decided to stop flying after the strikes spread to the largest airports.

"This can no longer be considered a rotating strike but is rather a concerted effort to disrupt the operation of the airline," Air Canada President Pierre Jeanniot told a news conference.

Jeanniot said a few flights would operate until Sunday or Monday, but in the meantime "we will proceed with an orderly shutdown of operations."

Business Notes

CRS Designation

Jeff Aldridge of Aldridge & Southerland Realtors has been awarded the "Certified Residential Specialist" designation by the Residential Sales Council of the Realtors National Marketing Institute.

The institute said the CRS designation is a symbol of excellence in residential sales.

Those receiving the CRS designation must complete required residential sales courses offered by the Residential Sales Council and must demonstrate expertise in applied residential marketing, the institute said.

Approximately 15,500 people, less than 1 percent of realtor-associates, have received the CRS designation.

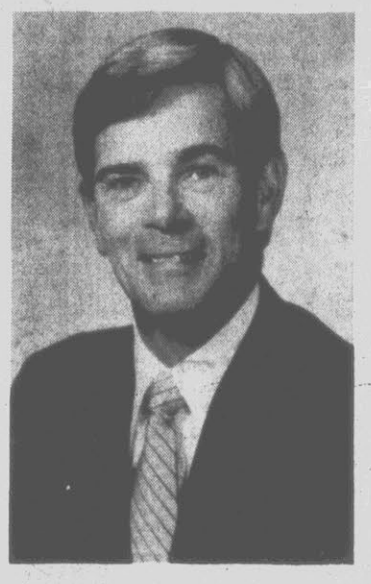
Senior VP Elected

Patrick N. Kelly has been elected senior vice president of First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Pitt County, according to Burney Warren III, president.

Warren said Kelly is responsible for the loan department, directing all lending activity in mortgage, consumer, equityline and commercial loans.

Kelly has been employed at First Federal since 1983 as vice president and senior loan officer. He previously served as senior vice president and senior loan officer with Manistee Bank & Trust Co., Manistee, Mich.

Kelly was recently appointed to serve a five-year term on the Greenville Utilities Commission. He is married to Kathy Kolasa.



PATRICK N. KELLY

Full Ownership

James D. (Jim) Little Jr. and Maxine S. (Mac) Little announced that they have recently acquired full ownership of General Heating Inc. at 1100 Evans St. in Greenville.

Little has been a stockholder in the business since 1979. The company, which was formerly owned by T.J. Morris and James Doyle Little Sr., was established in 1945.

The owners said General Heating, which employs 33 people with a mechanical engineer on staff, specializes in commercial, industrial applications (heating, air conditioning and ventilation) and custom built homes.

Account Position

Ken Stallings, vice president and manager of COECO Office Systems, announced the association of Claudie L. Smith with the firm as account representative for the Pitt-Greenville area.

Stallings said Smith will market copiers and facsimile machines.

Smith was previously associated with Winn Dixie in the Rivergate Shopping Center, including six years as manager. He and his wife, Teresa, have two children.

Practice Opened

Betty P. Robertson, who has a doctorate in psychology, announced the opening of her practice specializing in the emotional, social and behavioral disorders of children ages 10 and under.

The office is located at 107 Commerce St., Suite D-3.

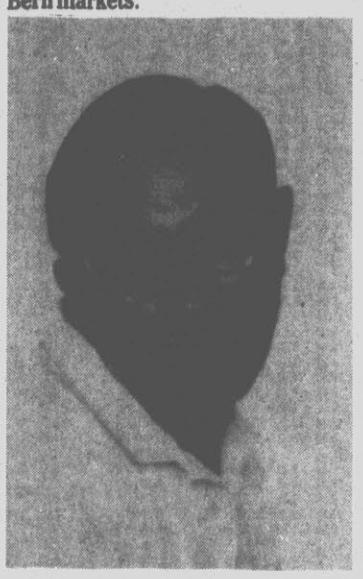
New Tour Business

Jimmy Wynne has announced the opening of 4 Wynnes Inc., Tours and Travels, at Route 1, Winterville.

Wynne said the business will offer both bus and air charter service and will work with organizations, corporations, schools and other groups in planning trips. He said the firm will emphasize snow skiing trips during the winter months with traveling services keyed to begin in March.

Wynne had been associated with Overton's Sports Center in Greenville for the past eight years in the retail business.

He said the tour and travel firm will concentrate in the Greenville, Washington, N.C., Kinston and New Bern markets.



JIMMY WYNNE

Staff Member

Pilot Freight Carriers Inc. of Winston-Salem has announced the addition of Joseph R. Casey to the company's sales staff at its Rocky Mount facility.

Casey, a 22-year resident of Rocky Mount, has had experience in transportation sales, according to the company, working 23 years with McLean Trucking and as terminal manager with P.I.E. in Rocky Mount.

Business Seminar

Staff members of AAA Employment, 101 W. 14th St., attended a training seminar in Greensboro recently titled "Getting Back to the Basics Utilizing the Six Phases of Business."

Franchise representatives from Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Pennsylvania attended the meeting sponsored by the Florida-based corporation.

Courses Scheduled

The Small Business Center of Pitt Community College is offering a two-week computer course and a small business tax seminar.

"Introduction to Microcomputers," a 12-hour course, will meet on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m for two weeks, beginning Monday. The course is designed for those who have never used a microcomputer.

A small business tax seminar will be held on Friday at 4 p.m. in Room 145 of the Everett Building at PCC. The seminar, presented by IRS personnel, will cover information on how to keep business records for tax purposes.

Bank Report Cited

Branch Corp., Wilson-based parent holding company for Branch Banking and Trust Co., announced that it has won two national awards for its 1986 annual report.

"Directions/Decisions," the firm's 44-page annual report, won first place in its category in the Nicholson award competition sponsored by the National Association of Investment Clubs.

The report was also chosen the best entry in the banking industry in the annual reports award program of the National Association of Over-the-Counter Companies.

Branch said more than 600 corporations entered their publications in the various categories of the Nicholson competition. More than 90 entries were received in the NAOTC awards program.

The annual report was written and edited by J.E.B. Davis, manager of financial reporting and analysis, and Lura "B" Regan, manager of corporate reporting.

Earnings Rose

Rose's Stores Inc. of Henderson announced that for the first three quarters earnings increased 2.3 percent to $16,877,000 despite earnings for the third quarter decling 1.5 percent to $6,112,000.

Sales for the quarter increased 12 percent to $310,679,000, the company reported.

The Rose's board of directors, meeting recently, declared a regular quarterly cash dividend of 4 cents per share plus an extra cash dividend of 5 cents per share to holders of voting common and non-voting class B stock. The dividend is payable on Jan. 4 to stockholders of record on Dec. 11.

New Employee

Sidney Knott has joined the staff of General Heating Inc. of Greenville with duties in the area of estimating, estimating training and supervision, and application of the "design-build" program from conception to project sale, the company said.

Knott, who was formerly employed with Electricon Inc., received his education from Danville Technical Institute, Danville, Va., and North Carolina State University.

The firm said Knott has had 36 years experience in the heating, ventilation and air conditioning trade and holds licenses for North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia.

Muffler-Brake Shop

The Midas Muffler and Brake Shop has opened at 3519 S. Memorial Drive across from Carolina East Mall, according to Moulton B. Massey III and Ernest H. "Buddy" Holt II of Greenville, owner-operators.

The spokesmen said the business will specialize in repairs to any part of the exhause, brake or suspension systems on domestic or foreign automobiles as well as most trucks, buses and recreational vehicles.

They said the Midas franchise system has been in existence for over 30 years and has over 2,000 independently owned shops worldwide in its network.

Holt, who has over 15 years experience in the automotive industry, is a Greensboro native and is married to the former Carolyn Massey of Greenville. They have three children.

Massey, who will be the executive manager of the firm, has spent the past seven years in the industrial chemical business. A Greenville native, he is married to the former Vandy Beamon of Ayden and they have one son.

Branch Manager

Great Century Mortgage Co., a subsidiary of Builders Federal Savings and Loan, announced the recent appointment of Jane Butts as branch manager of the firm's Greenville office.

Ms. Butts, who was formerly asociated with RIHT Management and Mavis Butts Realty, is a member of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce and has lived in Greenville for 18 years. She and her husband, Greg, have two children.

Great Century, a wholly owned subsidiary of Builders Federal Savings and Loan Association of Rocky Mount, offers mortgage lending services in Wake and Pitt counties.

Business Activity

The level of business activity in the southeastern United States increased 0.3 percent in September, according to the First Wachovia Southeast Business Index.

Over the past 12 months, the Southeast Index has gained 3.7 percent.

The index tracks the pace of economic activity in Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia, and the District of Columbia.

Two of the index components for the Southeast improved in September, while two were down from the previous month, First Wachovia said.

Nonagricultural employment rose 0.3 percent, and initial claims for unemployment insurance fell 1.8 percent during the month.

Residential building permit values, which reflect future construction plans, declined 0.9 percent. The average manufacturing workweek was down at 40.9 hours.

Higher nonagricultural employment was reported in 10 of the southeastern states. The largest gains occurred in Florida, North Carolina and Louisiana.

Fewer new unemployment claims were reported in all 13 states during September. The largest drops were recorded in Alabama and West Virginia.

Building permits registered increases in three states. The average manufacturing workweek rose or remained unchanged in six states.

Over the past year, job growth in the Southeast has exceeded the national pace.

Nonagricultural employment has increased 2.7 percent in the region since September 1986, while nationally it has risen 2.4 percent.

The seasonally adjusted unemployment rate in the Southeast was 5.9 percent in September, down 0.2 percent from August. At the national level, the umemployment rate was also 5.9 percent, down 0.1 percentage point from the previous month.

Over the past 12 months, unemployment rate for the Southeast has fallen 1.5 percentage points, while the national rate has decreased 1.1 percentage points.

December Meeting

The December meeting of the Eastern North Carolina Chapter of the American Production & Inventory Control Society will be held Tuesday at the Three Steers Restaurant on Memorial Drive.

Frank Grooms and Tommy Little of Yale Materials Handling Corp. will speak to the group on "Common Sense Manufacturing."

The meeting will begin with a social period at 6:15 p.m., followed by dinner at 7 p.m.

Forest Seeks Public Use

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — The Jefferson National Forest has become the nation's first forest to actively promote outdoor recreation, instead of just waiting for people to ask for information, Forest Service officials say.

"I think this is sort of a leading edge in national policy. We're going to see the Forest Service more involved in marketing," said Charles Blankenship, a forest staff officer for recreation and wilderness.

The pilot project, started in October, will initially try to promote tourism in the Mount Rogers National Recreation Area, a 115,000-acre stretch of the Jefferson forest in southwestern Virginia, near the Tennessee-North Carolina state line.

The area contains 350 miles of trails and Virginia's highest peak, the 5,729-foot Mount Rogers, but campgrounds are not always full.

PLAYING GAMES

Do you want someone playing games with your insurance premiums? In today's marketplace, it is all too easy to do.

Business insurance premium costs are controlled largely by your business sales figures and actual payrolls. By "playing" with these numbers and underestimating them, your policy deposit premium can be kept very low. Once the final year end audit is done, however, the game is over. You will pay the actual premium due.

Wouldn't you prefer to know your actual premium costs up front? Don't you hate big surprises at the end of a policy year?

We don't play games. We don't like surprises. Call us.

Markets Not Impressed By Hints Of Cooperation

By JAMES M. KENNEDY
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A few weeks ago, a round of interest-rate cuts by the Europeans would have been cause for celebration in the financial markets.

Indeed, a rate reduction aimed at stimulating growth in overseas economies might well have forestalled the historic collapse on Wall Street Oct. 19.

But five long weeks after Black Monday, such signals of international cooperation have provided little solace to the battered markets, analysts say.

In the wake of rate cuts by West Germany, France and the Netherlands this past week and a deficit-reduction agreement in the United States just days before, the dollar continued to weaken in foreign exchange trading and stocks stumbled along aimlessly.

"International cooperation is no better today than it was two months ago," said Michael Evans, who runs his own economic consulting firm in Washington, D.C.

Evans said the United States "blew a golden oppportunity" after the market collapse to make substantial cuts in the federal budget deficit and restore a modicum of confidence in the world marketplace.

But instead, said the economist, the budget negotiators dragged their talks out for five weeks and let the markets stew. The European interest-rate cuts, announced four days after the long-awaited budget compromise, also were seen as too little, too late.

"I think the European response was also very tepid," said Evans. "It was as if they were saying (to Washington), 'If you can't do anything better than that, we're not going to bail you out.'"

After the $500 billion plunge in stock prices Oct. 19, the markets looked to the United States and its trading partners to put together a package of initiatives that would rein in the burgeoning U.S. budget deficit while boosting economic growth abroad.

U.S. deficit cuts and interest-rate reductions by other industrial powers were being viewed as the key elements of such a package.

The framework of the plan was hammered out well before the market collapsed — at a February meeting of the trading allies in Paris. It was there that the industrialized nations produced the so-called Louvre accord aimed at stabilizing currency exchange rates through economic policy coordination.

When the market crumbled several months later, observers called it a message to the allies to live up to their Louvre promises.

Despite that alarm, responses since the crash have been limited to what amounts to a sloppy bucket brigade, many experts contend.

"We had a mini-fix on the budget and a mini-dose of cooperation from Europe," said Allen Sinai, economist for the investment firm Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc.

The markets were hoping for much more — both from Washington, in the form of bigger deficit reductions, and from West Germany, in the form of greater economic stimulation, analysts said.

Little more than the appearance of cooperation has been preserved, leaving the market susceptible to further shocks, said James Vick, chief currency trader for Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., a New York bank.

"These (rate reductions) were attempts to keep the cooperative atmosphere alive, but they still have a ways to go," said Vick.

The actions taken by the United States and the Europeans, although slight, have not been totally lost on the markets, however. Some observers say that at the very least the budget plan and rate reductions have inspired some stability in the aftermath of the crash.

Yet many economists and traders say bolder steps are needed to prevent further erosion in the financial markets. They say the situation requires another summit of financial ministers from the Group of the Seven — the United States, Britain, France, West Germany, Japan, Canada and Italy.

The markets also will remain sensitive to the progress of the deficit plan as it wends its way through Congress.

"Eventually there will be a G-7 meeting to continue the framework of the Louvre accord," said Sinai.

Such a meeting may not take place until Congress is finished with the deficit plan, which may push it into next year, some said.

In the meantime, the markets will continue to put pressure on policymakers, and officials will respond with measured doses of relief.

"It's a bit of a game," said Sinai. "They may be hoping that the crisis simply goes away."

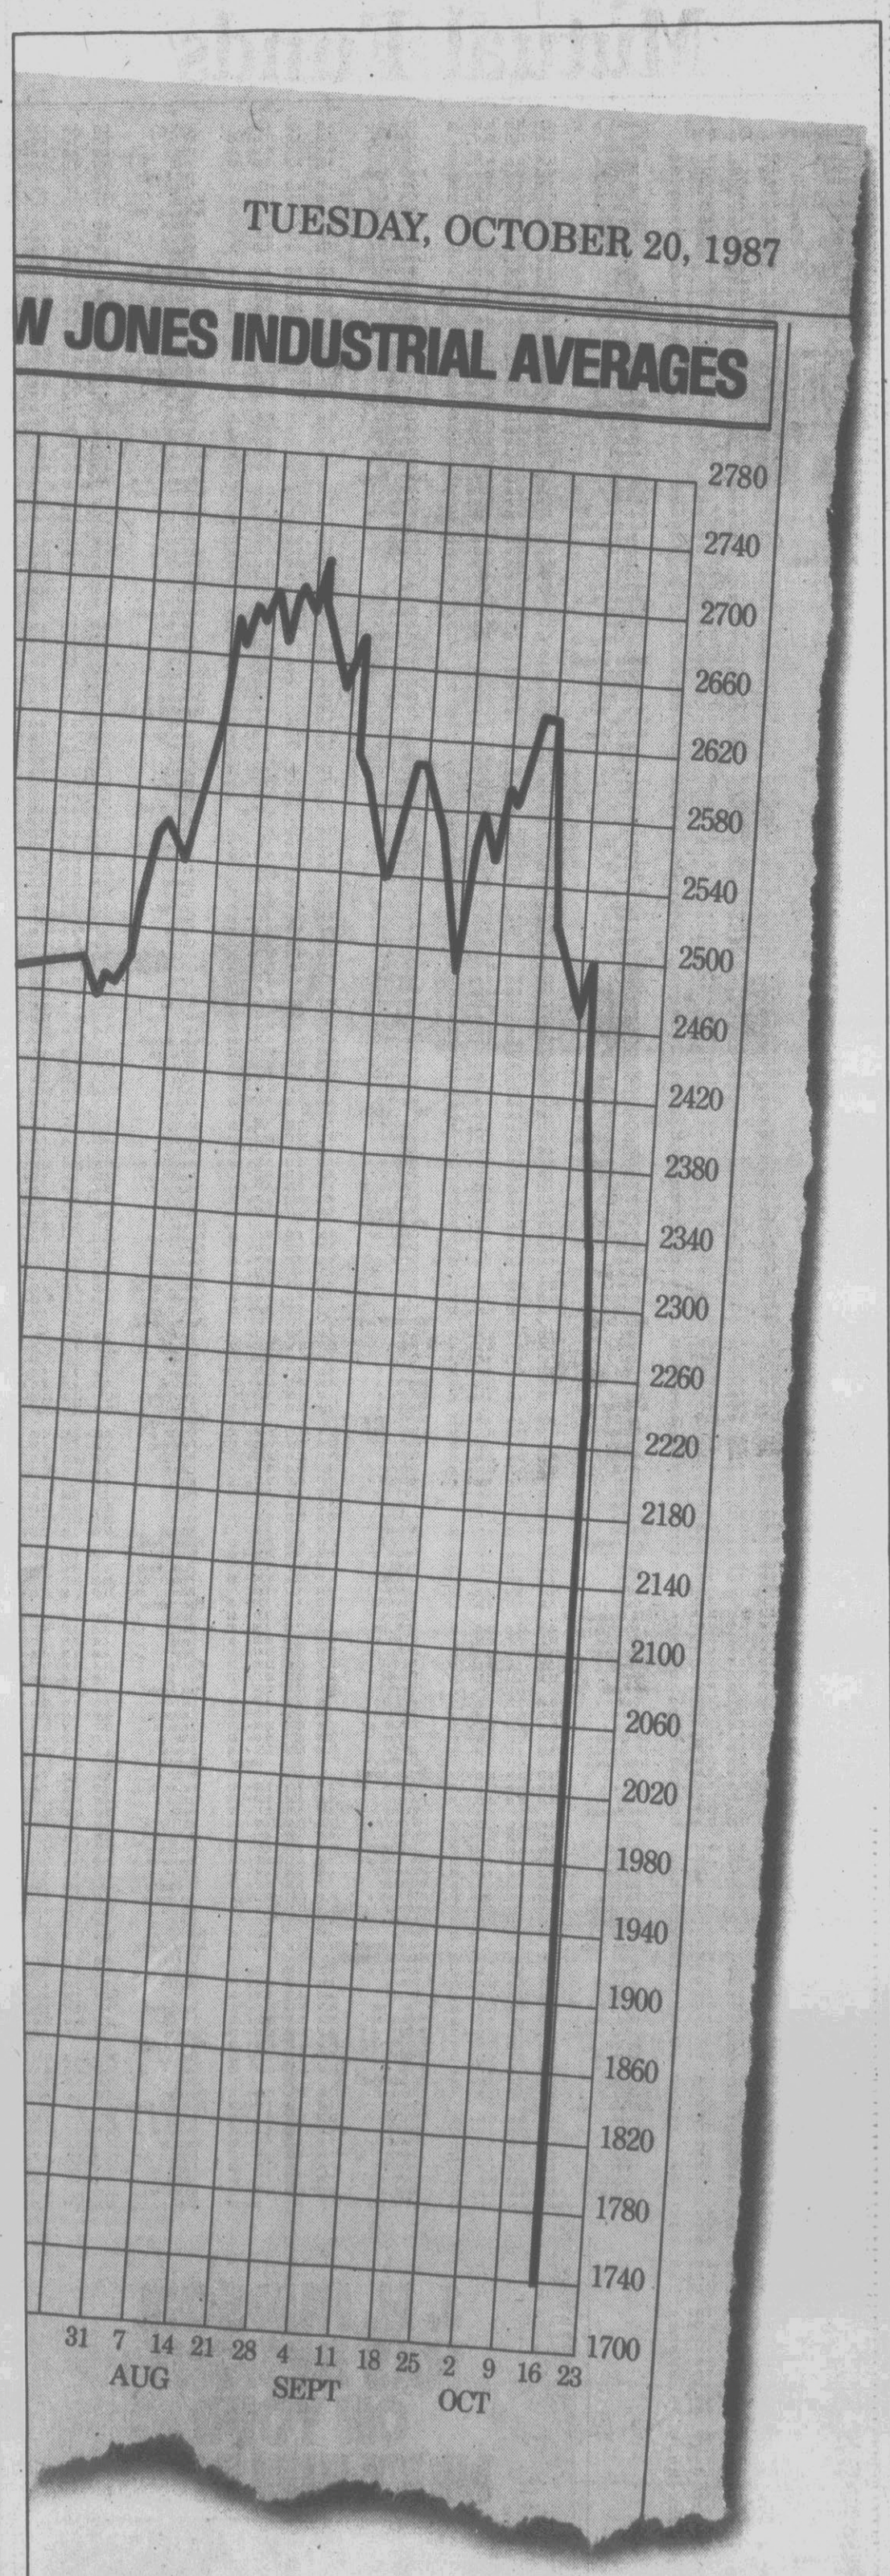
In other economic and business news this past week:

— A surge of auto sales and business investments helped the economy grow at a robust annual rate of 4.1 percent during the third quarter, the government said. The figure for the nation's gross national product in the July-September period was revised from an initial estimate of 3.8 percent a month ago and was generally in line with economists' expectations.

— The nation's trade deficit widened by $274 million from July to September to $39.8 billion, the largest three-month shortfall ever, the Commerce Department reported. But the U.S. trade deficit with Japan eased during the summer for the first time in nearly three years.

— After-tax profits of U.S. corporations posted their best showing in a year when they climbed 5.2 percent in the third quarter, compared with a 4.3 percent gain in the second quarter.

— Orders for big-ticket durable goods edged up 0.3 percent in October to a seasonally adjusted $109.6 billion after an even bigger 2.4 percent increase in September. Much of the strength came from a sharp jump in demand for civilian aircraft.



Flight Attendants Union Seeks Strike Authorization

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Leaders of American Airlines' flight attendants union are asking members for authorization to strike before the busy holiday travel season.

In a recorded message played on the Association of Professional Flight Attendants' telephone hotline, union negotiating team member Patrick Hancock said: "We believe that a positive vote on a strike ballot just before the Christmas holidays will move management to a settlement."

The union's board of directors voted in Chicago last weekend to submit a strike authorization ballot to its roughly 11,000 members. The union members have been working without a contract since April.

The union's leadership had said earlier a strike was not a part of its strategy.

In February, union President Patt Gibbs said, "Why would you be so stupid to put your people on strike when you know half your people won't go on strike?"

Friday's Wall Street Journal quoted Ms. Gibbs as saying the union board is now supporting a strike because it doesn't believe the company negotiated in good faith, since it unilaterally imposed a new contract June 1.

Ms. Gibbs said a straw poll of union members showed a "very solid majority" in favor of granting union leaders authority to call a strike.

American spokesman Al Becker said Friday the airline remained ready to discuss disputed contract issues. He said American has no first-hand knowledge of the strike authorization vote.

In Friday's phone message, Hancock said union leaders will hold meetings next week around the nation to discuss the strike ballot and "the recent proposal of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters."

Colleen Brennan, a dissident union member campaigning to oust Ms. Gibbs, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram she expects the union board to announce plans to merge with the powerful Teamsters union.

Ms. Brennan said Friday that union members may vote to authorize a walkout, but predicted few would be willing to actually strike because of the financial hardship.

Talks between American and the union, which centered on pay, broke off earlier this year. When the contract expired April 25, American imposed new work rules and slightly higher pay.

Prosecutor Says Defense Contractor To Plead Guilty

By JAMES MARTINEZ
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — A defense contractor and its president have agreed to plead guilty to charges of passing off as new used electrical connectors for military aircraft, a federal prosecutor said.

Edward Neil Bonavia of South East Connectors will plead guilty Monday to racketeering and also enter a plea of guilty to 30 counts of mail fraud on behalf of the Miami company, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Frederick Mann.

"This is the first racketeering conviction of a defense contractor in Florida and only the second in the country," Mann said.

In addition, Bonavia, 40, agreed to pay $200,000 toward the cost of the investigation, and the company $300,000 in fines, Mann said. Under the plea bargain, Bonavia also could receive up to 10 years in prison.

He is being held in the Metropolitian Correctional Institution south of here.

"This company would overhaul used parts and attempt to sell them as new. These inferior parts ended up in missiles, helicopters, B-52s and even F-4 fighter jets," Mann said.

The prosecutor said at the time of the indictment last December that it is not known whether the connectors — small plug-like devices used to distribute electricity around an aircraft — were responsible for any accidents.

The connectors are used in flight controls, navigational systems and armament controls, the indictment said, adding that the reworked connectors were risky because they "may work intermittently."

According to the indictment, some of the parts were used in aircraft ejection seats and the underwing bomb rails that carry Sidewinder missiles.

Seasonal Splendor Is Ever-Changing At Tryon Palace

Photo Story by George Hall and Lynn Brisson

True to the splendor of an age long past, the grand palace of Royal Governor William Tryon in New Bern will again stand bedecked for the coming of Christmas.

Wreaths made from pine and fresh fruit, giant boxwood garlands enveloping staircases, a mingling of spices, fresh breads and roasted hams have always given Christmas a special meaning. Every year brings new surprises, and this year is no different.

"Extensive research has been done on what would have and would not have been done in the 18th century," says Jean Prevost of Southport, Chairman of the Tryon Palace Commission Christmas Committee. "We will follow the findings of this research as closely as we can to make this celebration as historically accurate as possible."

One elaborate aspect of this year's celebration is the surtout de table ("above the table") arrangement that can be seen on the Palace dining room table. According to Susan Ferguson, Tryon Palace Assistant Horticulturist and staff coordinator for all interior decorations, a similar type of table decoration is listed in Governor Tryon's inventory.

It seems a friendly rivalry existed among 18th century hostesses to outdo one another with elaborate dessert tables. At the appropriate moment, the table would be unveiled resulting in audible gasps of delight from the guests. This year, the Palace decorators have followed this example with a 2-foot-wide, 5-foot-long mirrored display of sumptuously decorated desserts, miniature trees in handmade planter boxes, sculptures, flowers and abundant icing, all creating a spectacular display around a handmade Greek temple.

Designed and built by Bill Widener, Tryon Palace Maintenance Director, the temple stands nearly two feet high. Widener says the temple - made from basswood and cedar - took him more than three months to build.

Palace decorators expect a lot of oohs and aahs not only over the dessert display but over other foods featured throughout the complex.

Records indicate that food was a central part of 18th century Yuletide celebrations. So Mary Hosea, Christmas Foods Coordinator, is busily preparing marzipan, cookies, croquembouche (a French confection of cream puffs stacked into a pyramid), whole suckling pigs, pies and much more.

"This year the kitchen will be done more like it would have looked in the 18th century," Hosea explains. "Instead of so many finished products, food will appear more in the stages of preparation."

Because research reveals that food, rather than decorations, played a major role at Christmas in the 18th century, decorations at Tryon Palace have undergone subtle changes. Floral designers Lynn James of Elizabeth City and Dixie Dixon of New Bern are in charge of making the decorations.

"The decorations are even more authentic this year," says James. "We're trying this year to create a very living background."

Of course, Tryon Palace is only one "home" decorated for Christmas. Also decorated and open for touring are the Dixon-Stevenson, John Wright Stanly, Jones and Commission houses. All are decorated in the manner appropriate for each historical period.

The ca. 1880 Commission House, for example, will be decorated in the Victorian tradition and will have three distinct Christmas trees. A children's tree decorated with toys and other items is sure to delight the younger set.

"People should really enjoy the Commission House this year because they will be able to get ideas they can take home and use, such as the prune man," says Dixon. The traditional hot apple cider and ginger cookies will await visitors to the Commission House.

The Tryon Palace Christmas Celebration is a treat for all the senses, particularly on candlelight tour nights when dancers perform the minuet to 18th century music in the Council Chamber.

This year's celebration will get under way Wednesday, Dec. 9 and continue through Tuesday, Dec. 22. Hours are 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 1:30 to 4 p.m. Sundays. Six candlelight tours will be offered on Dec. 10, 11, 12, 17, 18 and 19 from 5 to 9 p.m. No tickets will be sold after 8 p.m.

Decorating workshops and special food tours will be featured on Dec. 15 and Dec. 16 beginning at 10 a.m. Call Tryon Palace at 638-1560 for more information.

Putting the finishing touches on a wreath made with fruits are Herb Rea, Tryon Palace Horticulturist in charge of outside decorations, and former assistant Clara Curtis.

Candlelight Wedding Vows Said

BETHEL — In a candlelight service, Joan Burton Andrews of Bethel and Raleigh and Samuel Lee Holder Jr. of Raleigh were married Saturday at 5 p.m. in the Bethel United Methodist Church.

Dr. Tommy Tyson of Chapel Hill and the Rev. Earl Dulaney, church minister, officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mary Wells Bunting Andrews of Bethel and the late Thomas R. Andrews Jr. Parents of the bridegroom are Julia Highsmith Holder and Samuel Lee Holder, both of Durham.

Mrs. Howard L. Hodges Jr. and Mrs. Molten B. Massey Jr., both of Greenville, directed the wedding. Acolytes were Ferrell Leighton Blount IV, Don Columbus Carson IV, William Morgan Whitehurst Jr. and Robert Cowley Young III, all of Bethel.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Russ Andrews of Raleigh, wore a formal gown of white silk duchess satin and candlelight beaded alencon lace. The beaded lace bodice featured a scalloped sabrina neckline cut to a V-back. The lace sleeves were accented with satin petals appliqued with alencon lace clustered on the shoulders and the semi-full satin skirt had a large bow at the back waistline. The hemline extended into a cathedral train. Her veil of cathedral length silk illusion was sprinkled with pearls and was attached to a Juliet caplet covered with alencon lace and pearls. The bride carried a flowing cascade of white dendrobium and japhette orchids, casablanca, lily buds and white tearoses.

Mrs. Mark Thompson of Winston-Salem, honor attendant for her sister, wore a floor-length gown of teal satin designed with a shirred full skirt. The gown had an off-shoulder sweetheart neckline, short sleeves and a fitted draped bodice. The open back was accented with a bow at the dropped basque waistline. She carried a clutch of white calla and casablanca lilies.

Bridesmaids included Mrs. Russ Andrews, sister-in-law of the bride, Elizabeth Scott Lane, Mrs. William Allen Skipper, Betty Grace Smith, all of Raleigh, Mrs. Thomas Deyton Hardy of Farmville, Mrs. William Oscar Peele of Williamston, Mary Foy Ragsdale of Atlanta, and Mrs. Robert Hall Squire of Richmond, Va. Their gowns and bouquets were identical to those of the honor attendant.

The ring bearer was John Mark Thompson of Winston-Salem and train bearers were Rushman Andrews of Raleigh and Wells Thompson of Winston-Salem, all nephews of the bride.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included David Harlan Batten, Victor Eros Bell III, J. Melville Broughton III, Lee Hamilton Price, James Bruce West, all of Raleigh, Mark I. Thompson of Winston-Salem, brother-in-law of the bride, and Daniel Hugh Woody of Durham.

After the wedding the mother of the bride entertained at a reception and dance at the Greenville Country Club. The Bill Bolen Band provided music.

The bridegroom's mother entertained at an after-rehearsal dinner at the Greenville Country Club followed by a dance given by friends and relatives of the bride. The Positive Proof Band of Chapel Hill provided music. On Saturday a wedding brunch was given at the Colonial Inn in Farmville by friends of the bride of Bethel.

The bride is a graduate of St. Mary College and was presented at the 1978 Debutante Ball in Raleigh. She is administrative assistant for Carolina Administrators of Raleigh. The bridegroom is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill where he was a member of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity. He is district vice president of Synco Properties of Raleigh.

The couple will live in Raleigh after a wedding trip to the British Virgin Islands.

Lisa Cayton, Stephen Jones Are Married

CHESAPEAKE, Va. — Lisa Jeanette Cayton and Stephen Mark Jones of Seabrook Island, S.C., were united in marriage Saturday in a 2 p.m. ceremony at the Immanuel Baptist Church in Chesapeake, Va.

Parents of the bridal couple are Mr. Thelbert Cayton of Farmville, and Mrs. Jean Johnson of Glencoe, Ala., along with the Rev. and Mrs. Martin E. Jones of Chesapeake.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a classical gown of satin and embroidered lace. The sculptured sweetheart neckline had a venise lace cameo with pearl droplets. The bodice, deep V-back and long, capped sleeves were beautified with jewelled embroidered lace. Window motifs of lace and pearls also accented the front skirt and cathedral train. Her fingertip veil was attached to a pearl beaded headband. She carried a cascading bouquet of white carnations and baby's breath blushed with bridal pink sweetheart roses and satin streamers.

Sandy Cayton of Greenville, sister-in-law of the bride, served as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Cindy Stallings of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom, Marie Jones of Greenville, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, and Ginger Jones of Virginia Beach, Va., sister-in-law of the bridegroom. Tiffany Jones of Greenville, niece of the bridegroom, served as flower girl.

The attendants wore a floor length gown of taffeta in daphne rose. The upper bodice featured majestic pouffed Elizabethan sleeves, sweetheart neckline, and flower-trimmed waist. Each were accented with a haircomb of baby's breath with satin bows and streamers. The matron of honor carried a nosegay of pink and burgandy carnations with baby's breath. Each of the bridesmaids carried nosegays of burgandy carnations, light pink alstromeria lillies and baby's breath.

The flower girl wore a floor length gown of taffeta in daphne rose accented with bows on the long sleeves and back. She carried a lace basket with pink and burgundy petals and wore a burgundy corsage of carnations with baby's breath.

Tim Jones of West Palm Beach, Fla. served as his brother's best man. Ushers were Michael Cayton of Farmville, brother of the bride, and David Cayton of Eufuala, Ala., brother of the bride. Groomsmen were Jim Cayton of Greenville, brother of the bride, Bill Jones of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, and Marty Jones of Virginia Beach, brother of the groom. Timothy Jones of West Palm Beach, nephew of the bridegroom, served as ring bearer.

The bride is a graduate of Farmville Central High School and attended Pitt Community College. The bridegroom is a graduate of Floyd and Kellam High School in Virginia Beach. He also received a two-year degree from Lake City Community College of Lake City, Fla., studying golf course maintenance.

The groom is currently employed with SeaBrook Island Ocean Club.

ABWA Officers Installed

Officers of the Pirate Charter chapter were installed in a candlelight ceremony conducted by Carrole Mulkey, outgoing president. Other officers are Kathy Green, vice president; Nina Redditt, secretary, and Susan Hamm, treasurer.

Mrs. Verdick is a past recipient of the chapter's Woman of the Year Award and has served in various chapter capacities including public relations committee chairman.

Certificates of appreciation were presented to outgoing board members and a certificate of merit was presented Ms. Green for her work as special projects chairman.

Cybil Shirley spoke on "Banking in Eastern North Carolina." She demonstrated how the use of new technology can help the individual with a financial profile.

Chapter Selects Holiday Project

Members will be participating in St. Peter's Church Giving Tree.

The group's Christmas social will be held Dec. 5 at the Colonial Inn in Farmville with Xi Gamma Xi chapter.

President Audrey Harsany welcomed Janice Hopkins of Tulsa, Okla., and Rosalie Trotman from Xi Gamma Xi chapter as guests.

The next meeting will be held Dec. 8 at the home of Beth Holland and a gift exchange will take place.

The Ronald McDonald House slide presentation was postponed until the Jan. 26 meeting.

NEW TEST FOR AIDS

NEW YORK (AP) — Blood banks, hospitals, health centers and physicians have been given a new tool to test patients for AIDS. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration has approved an investigative new drugs status for Fluorognost, an advanced AIDS confirmation test, according to Thermascan Inc., developer of the new checkup system.

Some 10,000 of the tests will be conducted at New York's Beth Israel Medical Center, the Sacramento Medical Foundation Blood Center, the Karolinska Institute, Stockholm, and the Institute of Hygiene, University of Innsbruck.

Fluorognost detects antibodies in one or two weeks after infection, compared with six weeks or more with current confirmation tests, says Detlev Baurs-Krey, Thermascan president.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Armour Bryant of Raleigh announce the engagement of their daughter, Robin Evans, to William Stuart Bost III, son of Dr. and Mrs. William Stuart Bost of Greenville. The wedding will take place May 7.

WHY A SOUTHWICK SUIT LOOKS LIKE IT WAS MADE FOR YOU.

Every Southwick suit embodies the fundamentally British/American attitude that what you wear should look like you, rather than your tailor. The classic lines of the natural-shoulder silhouette, careful tailoring, and the soft drape of natural fabrics all contribute to the total effect of ease, comfort, and elegance.

Moreover, when you come into our store, you'll also find pleasant surroundings and helpful people who will make certain that your Southwick suit is perfect in every detail.

Couple Marries In Bethel Saturday

BETHEL — The wedding ceremony of Barbara Renee Carney and Frank Carrington Myers took place Saturday at 1 p.m. in Reddick Chapel Baptist Church. The double ring ceremony was conducted by the Revs. Alonza Mills of Vanceboro and Farnie Moore of Greenville.

MRS. MYERS

The bride is the daughter of Willie Mae Carney of Bethel and the late Zebedee Carney. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Myers of Plainfield, N.J.

The bride was given in marriage by her mother and escorted by her brother, Lionel Carney of Cary. She is a graduate of Elizabeth City State University and N.C. Central School of Law. She is currently a vice president of C.Z.A. Inc. in Washington, D.C.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Elizabeth City State University and is a senior marketing representative for U.S. Sprint Communications Co. in Reston, Va.

Linda Jenkins of Bethel was matron of honor for her sister. Bridesmaids included Louise Dagher of Hayattsville, Md., Gail Edwards of Norfolk, Va., Sylvia Gilbert of Minneapolis and Jackie Lucas of Rocky Mount. The junior bridesmaid was Shanya Jenkins of Bethel, niece of the bride, and Akilah R. Ensley of Greenville was flower girl.

Gregory McCray of Plainfield was best man. Groomsmen were Keith Howard of Washington, D.C., Gregory Legget of Plainfield, Bryan Myers and David Myers of Plainfield, and Derrick Myers of Edison, N.J., all brothers of the bridegroom. The ring bearer was Sean Carney of Brooklyn, N.Y., cousin of the bride.

Presenting wedding music were organist Johnny C. Edwards of Greenville, pianist Patricia Carney of Bethel, vocalists Debra Leathers of Greenville and Johnny Oates of Washington, D.C., and trumpeter Lionel Carney.

The ceremony was directed by Linnie Perkins of Hampton, Va., and Mary Heartley of Raleigh.

The bride wore a formal gown of white satin with a cathedral length train. The high illusion neckline was trimmed with Venise lace accented with seed pearls and iridescents. The long puffed sleeves had lace inserts at the shoulders and ended in lace cuffs closed with satin covered buttons. The V-back was trimmed in lace, which also accented the basque waistline. Lace appliques accented the skirt and bordered the hemline. She wore a matching satin hat with an illusion pouf accented in pearls. The illusion blusher and fingertip veil were accented with pearls. The bride carried a silk cascade of white roses, baby's breath and stephanotis centered with daphne roses tied with matching streamers.

The matron of honor wore a floor-length dress of daphne colored rachelle lace over satin. It was styled with a satin cummerbund at the waistline with a front bow and puffed sleeves. The slim skirt had a back slit. She carried three silk daphne roses tied with matching streamers. Bridesmaids wore tea-length dresses of daphne rose covered in lace. The gowns had V-back necklines and puffed sleeves. The junior bridesmaids wore a daphne tea length dress styled with a satin bubble skirt and lace overlay. Each carried silk daphne roses with baby's breath and matching streamers.

The mother of the bride wore a tea length gown of gray. The bodice is silk and chiffon, and the gown features lace and a rounded collar. The mother of the bridegroom wore a blue floor-length gown of chiffon. Both wore white silk orchid corsages.

A reception was held after the ceremony and was given by the bride's mother. Greeting guests were Sally Jones of Washington, D.C., and Virginia Myers of Plainfield. Cake was served by Marilyn Carney of Cary and Lourine Nelson of New York poured punch. Ramona Ensley of Greenville presided at the guest register and receiving gifts was Ruby Williams of Greenville.

The parents of the bridegroom gave an after-rehearsal dinner in Bethel Friday evening. The bride was entertained at several miscellaneous showers prior to the wedding.

The couple will be living in Arlington, Va., after a wedding trip to Hawaii.

Wedding Ceremony Performed

WINTERVILLE — Audrey Yvonne Washington and Thurston Collins Blount of Winterville were united in marriage Saturday in a 1 p.m. ceremony at the Haddock Chapel Free Will Baptist Church.

Elder Tyrone Turnage officiated the double-ring ceremony and music was provided by Shirley Williams of Ayden.

Parents of the bridal couple are Elias and Allie Washington and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee Blount, all of Winterville.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her brother, Eric Washington, the bride wore a white taffeta gown featuring a Victorian bodice embellished with a schiffli embroidered yoke trimmed with chantilly lace. The ball gown sleeves were trimmed with chantilly lace and satin bows and the natural waistline was decorated with venise lace. The full skirt and semi-cathedral train featured chantilly lace baby ruffles and satin bow pick ups. Her beaded V-shaped headpiece, decorated with silk flowerettes, held the fingertip veil of illusion. She carried a victorian nosegay of white, purple and ruby roses accented with baby's breath and tips of greenery tied with streamers.

Sheila Wilder of Winterville served as her sister's matron of honor. Gwendolyn Adams of New Haven, Conn. served as her cousin's maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Carol Smith, Timothea Adams and Arlice Brogdon of New Haven, all cousins of the bride, Wanda Washington, sister of the bride, and Cynthia Patrick, cousin of the bride, both of Winterville, Sarah Blount of Winterville, sister of the bridegroom, Wanda Pannell of Fayetteville, cousin of the bride and Geseal Walston of Charlotte, niece of the bridegroom. Felicia Smith and Beneta Chaptman of Winterville, both cousins of the bride, served as junior bridesmaids. Flowergirls were Kimberly Patrick of Kinston, cousin of the bride, and Breanna Blount of Winterville, niece of the bridegroom.

The honor attendants wore ruby satin gowns with sweetheart necklines and puff sleeves. The asymmetrically draped peplum caught with a candy box bow draped the floor length sheath skirt with a back slit. They wore hats, and carried Bibles, and purple and white orchids, roses, and daisies tied with streamers.

The flower girls wore dresses identical to those of the junior bridesmaids in white trimmed with amethyst. They wore hair pieces and carried purple baskets trimmed with lace and purple streamers.

Robert E. Blount of Newport New, Va., served as his brother's best man. Ushers were William Patrick of Winterville, cousin of the bride, Marvin Blount of Winterville, brother of the bridegroom, Kenneth Brogdon and Tony Nobles of New Haven, cousins of the bride, Dennis Patrick of Ayden, cousin of the bride, Ronnie Campbell of Vanceboro, and Dilton Smith, Jr. of New Haven, Conn., cousin of the bride. Demetrus Patrick of Greenville, cousin of the bride, served as ring bearer and Norbert Smith of Winterville, cousin of the bride, served as junior usher.

The mother of the bride wore a fuschia polyester georgette dress blouson draped with a banner of georgette and she received a corsage. The mother of the bridegroom wore a suit of woven polyester and also received a corsage.

A reception was held at the Moose Lodge and the aunts of the bride served the head table.

The wedding was directed by Mary Brogden. Guests were greeted by Naomia Roundtree. Goodbyes were said by Curtis Smith, Dilton Smith and Jesse Lee. Lela Smith presided at the guest register.

The rehearsal dinner was hosted by the parents of the bridegroom. A surprise luncheon and a party were held honoring the couple prior to the wedding.

The bride is a graduate of D.H. Conley High School and St. Augustine College. She is currently employed by Britt Haven Nursing Home as a social worker. The bridegroom is a graduate of D.H. Conley High School and is employed by Cox's Trailer in Grifton.

After a wedding trip to an undisclosed location, the couple will reside in Winterville.

MRS. BLOUNT

Couple Weds In Morning Ceremony

CANDLER — Rhonda Lynn Sugg of Asheville and Raymond Martin Witmer III of Morgantown, W.Va., were married Saturday morning at 11 a.m. in the Good News Baptist Church. Steve Smith conducted the ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Ray Sugg of Asheville, formerly of Greenville, and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Witmer Jr. of Morgantown, W.Va.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Amalia Lawrence of Asheville was matron of honor. Bridesmaids included Wendy Mayo and Beth Ann Greenhill, both of Greenville, S.C., and April Strader of Reidsville.

Tobe Witmer of Morgantown, W.Va. was best man for his brother. Ushers included Craig Moran of Carlisle, Pa., Joseph Peters of Morgantown, W.Va., Frank Williams of Greenville, S.C., and Ray Sugg Jr. of Asheville.

The bride is a graduate of Bob Jones University with a degree in humanities. The bridegroom also graduated from Bob Jones University with a degree in church ministries. He is employed by The Appliance Store.

The couple will live in Morgantown after a wedding trip to the Bahamas.

Double-Ring Ceremony Takes Place

Wendy Ann Worthington and John Calvin Johnson Jr. were united in marriage Saturday at 3 p.m. in Piney Grove Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Michael Tart, brother of the bridegroom, conducted the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Reeves Worthington of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Lawrence Tart of Benson and the late Calvin Johnson Sr.

A program of wedding music was presented by pianist Kelly M. Hardison of Graham, Pam W. Smith of Greenville, organist, and Janet Page Worthington of Greenville, sister of the bride, vocalist.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of white bridal taffeta designed with a high neckline encircled with clipped re-embroidered alencon lace. The fitted bodice featured a sheer yoke of imported English net outlined in embroidered lace and beaded in pearls. Matching lace appliques extended over the bodice front to the modified Basque waistline which was edged in the re-embroidered lace. The fitted sleeves were styled with a double pouf of white taffeta at the shoulders accented by appliques of alencon lace with a sheer undersleeve fashioned in the English net embroidered in the alencon lace and outlined in pearls. The full skirt extended to a scalloped chapel length train which featured cut out designs of English net and accented by alencon lace which extended to the edge of the entire hemline. She selected a fingertip length veil with imported illusion trimmed in alencon lace and attached to a tiera of matching lace with irridescents. She carried a cascade bouquet of white roses and daisies.

Janet Page Worthington was honor attendant for her sister. She wore a tea length dress of violet satin designed with a full skirt cascading from a wide sash. The design featured pouf sleeves ending above the elbow and a tailored bodice with bateau neckline, open back with a large bow accenting the waistline. She wore a sprig of baby's breath in her hair and carried a nosegay of white daisies with white and violet streamers.

Bridesmaids included Christy Reeves Worthington, sister of the bride, and Tammy Michelle Edwards of Greenville, Lisa Rae Reason, cousin of the bride, of Wilson and Pamela W. Joyner of Simpson. Each wore dresses, baby's breath in hair and carried flowers like that of the honor attendant.

Honorary bridesmaids were Angela Paige, cousin of the bride, Dana Cole and Cindy Spivey, all of Greenville, Laura Smith of Ayden and Anita Eason of Gaffney, S.C. They each wore a corsage of yellow mums.

Christopher Roberts of Raleigh was best man. Ushers were Timothy Matthew Tart and Jonathan Kevin Tart of Greenville, and David Mark Tart of Statesville, brothers of the bridegroom, and Daniel Rauderbaugh of Conyers, Ga., cousin of the bridegroom.

The mother of the bride wore a tea length dress of champagne crep and lace and the mother of the bridegroom wore a mauve crepe dress. Both wore purple orchids.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents and Mr. and Mrs. William Ray Reason, aunt and uncle of the bride, entertained at a reception in the church fellowship hall. Cake was served by Mrs. Alma Reason, aunt of the bride, and punch was poured by Judy McLawhorn, cousin of the bride. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Chester Don Worthington and Mr. and Mr. Larry Walston. Mattie Ruth Rauderbaugh, aunt of the bridegroom, presided at the register.

MRS. JOHNSON

The parents of the bridegroom gave an after-rehearsal dinner at the Holiday Inn. A bridesmaids luncheon was given by Mrs. Douglas Paige and Angela Paige at the Colonial Inn.

The bride is a graduate of Pitt Community College and the bridegroom is a graduate of Mount Olive College.

They were entertained at several parties in Greenville and Benson prior to their wedding.

Mrs. Elvy K. Forrest Sr. directed the wedding.

Using Elevator Etiquette

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I work in a building that has elevators. Frequently I find that I cannot get out of the elevator because of the rush of people coming into the elevator once the doors open. Will you please print some rules of elevator etiquette? If you do, I will post copies on all bulletin boards in my building. Thanks very much in advance. — DEBORAH SCAILLET, TUKWILA, WASH.

DEAR DEBORAH: Do not enter an elevator until everyone who is getting out is out.

If you should find yourself in the rear of the elevator and want to get off, announce in a clear and audible tone, "Coming out, please!"

Gentlemen should not stand rooted to the floor in order to permit ladies to get out before them. Whoever is nearest the door should exit first.

If a man removes his hat in an elevator these days, he is either from the South or he has a lovely head of hair.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who is always late. She gives lame excuses, and seems to feel that this makes up for having kept a number of people waiting — sometimes as long as an hour!

How do we get across to her that she is very inconsiderate, if not downright rude? — TIRED OF EXCUSES

DEAR TIRED: If you want to give her the message that she's inconsiderate and rude, TELL her. If you want to cure her, the next time she's late — don't wait for her. The habit of being chronically late is reinforced when forgiving friends put up with it.

DEAR READERS: Make this Thanksgiving a good one for everyone. If you're driving, don't drink, and if you're drinking, don't drive.

DEAR ABBY: You seem to have such pat answers to all those problems you print in your column. If you don't make some of them up, I'm a monkey's uncle. — DOUBTING THOMAS, ATHENS, GA.

DEAR UNCLE: With the mail I receive, I couldn't begin to make up anything to top what my readers send me. Now, give your nephew a banana.

DEAR ABBY: A year ago I started dating a man I had known for years. I'll call him Bob. Bob had just broken his engagement to "Marilyn," a woman he had been living with for a couple of years. After they broke up, she left town.

The first time I stayed overnight at Bob's home, I noticed an 8-by-10-inch picture of Marilyn hanging in the corner of his bedroom. Three months later, I heard that Marilyn had committed suicide. After that, the picture was even more disturbing, but I didn't want to mention it at such a sensitive time.

Bob kept moving it around — on top of the TV, then on his dresser at the foot of his bed. I finally told Bob that the first thing I saw when I woke up in the morning was Marilyn's face, and it made me uncomfortable. The next time I stayed at Bob's, I noticed that Marilyn's picture had been moved to its original spot on his bedroom wall — where it remains.

I realize that it's his home, but I think the picture of an old flame — no matter how serious the relationship had been — belongs in an album or a drawer, out of sight.

What are your thoughts on this? Please answer soon. This has gone on far too long. — UNEASY IN VERMONT

DEAR UNEASY: Bob already knows that Marilyn's picture makes you uncomfortable, but keeping "her" in his bedroom is obviously more important to him. He is giving you this subtle message, so if you don't want to see the lady's face when you get up in the morning, stay out of Bob's bedroom.

Workshop Held By Quilters

A workshop on Christmas "cuddle quilts" was held last week by members of the Greenville Quilter's Guild.

Several quilts were prepared for presentation to the Ronald McDonald House. The quilts are given to children staying at the house while receiving treatment at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Plans were made to display quilts and quilted items at the Greenville Museum of Art during the spring.

A Christmas luncheon will be held Dec. 15.

Joyner-Brett Vows Solemnized

MAPLETON — Parker's Grove Baptist Church was the scene of the Saturday afternoon wedding ceremony of Lisa Livette Brett and Julius Joyner Jr. Performing the double-ring ceremony were the Revs. Hugene Fields and C.C. Lawrence at 4 o'clock.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Gorham of Decatur, Ga. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Julius Joyner Sr. of Greenville. He is the grandson of Rosa R. Lovett of Greenville.

A program of nuptial music was performed by John Eley Sr., organist, Debra Boone and Ralph Freeman, soloists. The wedding was directed by Helen B. Edwards of Atlanta, aunt of the bride.

The bride was given in marriage by her stepfather, Arnold R. Gorham. She wore a floor length gown with a chapel train of organza with chantilly lace over taffeta. The fitted lace bodice featured a scalloped Queen Anne neckline and organza bishop sleeves appliqued with garlands of scalloped chantilly lace. Seed pearls embellished the lace motifs. A chantilly lace flounce bordered the hemline of the skirt and train. She wore a Queen of Scots headpiece appliqued with beaded lace motifs accented with a cascade of silk flowers and pearl sprays. The layered veil of illusion flowed from a wreath of an illusion pouf at the back of the headpiece. She carried an ivory cascade of sweetheart roses, stephanotis and forget-me-nots accented with lace and satin streamers.

Jeanetta Eley of Raleigh served as maid of honor. She wore a floor length gown of burgundy rose silk organza with a double flounce neckline worn on the shoulders. The gown featured a slightly raised waistline and full flounced skirt which was caught in the back in a bustle effect. She carried double long-stemmed burgundy carnations accented with dusty rose satin streamers.

Bridesmaids were Marion Deloatch, Vanessa Marrow and Charlene Smith, cousin of the bridegroom, all of Greenville; Sherri Britt of Elizabeth City and Jackie Britt of College Park, Ga., both cousins of the bride. Intermediate bridesmaids were Donna Gorham of Decatur, Ga., sister of the bride, Wendy Edwards of Atlanta, Georgia and Lauren Hunter of Dayton, Ohio, cousins of the bride. Junior bridesmaids were Toye Gorham of Decatur, Ga., sister of the bride, and Ra-Shida Stiff of Raleigh, cousin of the bride. The bridesmaids wore gowns identical to that of the honor attendant in dusty rose and carried matching bouquets. The intermediate and junior bridesmaids carried single stemmed burgundy carnations accented with satin streamers.

Pamela Ward of Greenville, niece of the bridegroom was flower girl. Her attire was similar to that of the bridesmaids and she carried a basket with ivory rose petals accented with ivory bow and streamers.

George Mann Jr. of Norfolk, Va., cousin of the bridegroom, served as best man. Groomsmen were Alric Gorham of Decatur, brother of the bride, Warren Edwards of Atlanta, and Terence Sharpe of Dayton, Ohio, both cousins of the bride, Mekoda Potts of College Park, Ga. and Larry Davis of Altheimer, Ark. Intermediate groomsmen were Zollie McCoy Britt, Jr. and Taurus Shawn Britt of Murfreesboro, cousins of the bride, and Matthew Ward of Greenville, nephew of the bridegroom. Junior groomsmen were Bradley Gorham and Roderick Gorham of Creedmoor, cousins of the bride. Roderick Sharp of Washington, D.C. served as usher. Ringbearer was DeShon Whitaker of Como.

A dinner reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church. Hostesses were Cindy Jordan, Cynthia Askew, Carla Chavis, and Felecia Britt, all cousins of the bride.

The after-rehearsal party was given by the New Haven Baptist Church in the fellowship hall of Parker's Grove Baptist Church on Friday evening. Beatrice Lassiter registered guests. Several showers and a party were given for the couple prior to the ceremony.

MRS. JOYNER

The bride is a senior in the East Carolina University School of Nursing and a member of the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc. The bridegroom is a lance corporal in the U.S. Marine Corps, stationed at Camp Lejeune.

After a wedding trip to Norfolk, Va., the couple will reside in Greenville.

BETSY DRAKE LEWIS' DECORATING TIPS

Screens and room dividers play an important role in the open-plan theme of most of today's apartments and small houses. In these small living units, walls are often omitted between the kitchen and informal dining area, the living area and dining area and the living area and entry. This is done partially to cut down on the building costs and also to keep a small floor plan looking like a series of tiny interconnected box-like rooms.

There are areas, however, where you might want partial privacy or, at least, separation. If so, use a floor-to-ceiling, or ceiling-to-countertop divider to create a foyer, to screen traffic from the living room, or to separate the dining area from the kitchen or living room. For example, a ceiling mounted mini-blind or a ceiling mounted mirrored vertical can add interest and even enlarge a small area as well as provide privacy. Once, in a small cluster home, a ceiling mounted mirrored vertical was used as a custom shower curtain which enlarged and made a dramatic bath. A folding screen which has three or more rigid panels hinged together is used much the same way as room dividers; to divide space, to separate areas of activity and to conceal work areas. Folding screens also have another function. When a room has no outstanding architectural focal point, a decorative screen used in combination with a small furniture grouping is often used to fill the void and become the focal point of the room.

We, at Betsy Drake Interiors, wish each of you a happy and joyous holiday season. Keep in mind our After-Thanksgiving Sale continues through Monday, November 30. This will be a great time to do some thoughtful Christmas shopping.

Melton-Jordan Vows Exchanged

Mitzi Howard Jordan of Greenville and Douglas William Melton of Raleigh were united in marriage Friday at 4 p.m. in St. James United Methodist Church.

The Rev. Caswell Shaw performed the double ring ceremony. Music was performed by Frances Cain, organist, and Vivian and Mark Caughron, soloists.

The bride is the daughter of Mary Alice Jordan of Greenville and the late Francis A. Jordan. The bridegroom is the son of Don Melton of Raleigh and Carol Bonder of Naples, Fla.

Given in marriage by her family, the bride wore her mother's wedding dress of ivory chantilly lace and tulle over bridal satin. The lace bodice featured a sheer yoke styled with a high lace neckline and a scalloped lace peplum over a two-tiered skirt of nylon tulle which extended into a chapel train. Her double tiered elbow-length veil of silk illusion was attached to a headpiece of flowers extending into a spray of iridescent seed pearls, sequins and silk flowers. Her bouquet was a cascade of ivory roses, miniature pink carnations, stephanotis, dendrobium orchids, baby's breath and greenery with ivory and pink satin streamers.

Alison Jordan Peacock of Swansboro was matron of honor for her sister. Julie Melton of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom, was bridesmaid. Each wore a dusty rose tea-length satin dress with puffed sleeves and square neckline. The bodice was accented with diagonal layered pleats and a natural waistline. Each carried an arm bouquet of mixed flowers.

The bridegroom's father was best man. Ushers included Chris Jordan of Greensboro and David Jordan of Greenville, brothers of the bride.

A reception was held in the narthex of the church.

The couple was honored with several miscallaneous showers and parties prior to the wedding.

The bride received a bachelor's degree in nursing from Atlantic Christian College and is employed as coordinator of computer education at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The bridegroom received an master's degree in business administration from East Carolina University and is employed as a rate analyst for ElectriCities in Raleigh.

The couple will live in Raleigh after a wedding trip to Ixtapa, Mexico.

Sports, Holy Land, Aviators Shown on New Stamps

AN AMERICAN SAMPLER — Michael Pierce, an exhibition conservator from the National Gallery of Art, examines a "Swordsman Whirligig" before it is packed for shipment to the National Gallery in Washington, D.C. It is one of more than 100 pieces from the Shelburne Museum, Vermont, that will be in a show of American folk art that will travel across the U.S. for the next three years. Sports on stamps usually provide action illustrations as various countries honor athletic events and games of interest to local enthusiasts who are philatelists and even non-collectors.

Togo, the former French colony in West Africa, has issued an "action-photo" set of three stamps and a souvenir sheet to mark the first World Rugby Tournament held this year in Australia and New Zealand under the auspices of the International Rugby Board.

The 70-franc depicts a player lunging for control of the ball. The 130-franc shows a player carrying the ball and warding off opposing players with an outstretched arm. The 300-franc pictures a player trying to get past the huddle of the other team.

The souvenir sheet features a group of rugby players. In the border of the sheet are the flags of 16 nations that sent teams to the finals. The denomination is 1,000 francs.

Israel has issued a set of three stamps and a souvenir sheet dedicated to the "19th Century Exploration of the Holy Land." Three explorers who were responsible for opening up vistas in the area are honored on the trio of adhesives, reports the Israel Stamp Collectors Society.

One stamp shows the areas of the Jordan River and Dead Sea basins explored by an Irishman named Christopher Costigan in 1835. He died in Jerusalem and is buried on Mount Zion.

A second stamp depicts the areas explored by American Navy Lt. William Francis Lynch in 1848. The third illustrates the areas explored by John MacGregor, a Scotsman who mapped Lake Hula, the Sea of Galilee and the Kishon River in 1868.

Each stamp bears a tab in Hebrew and English with the names of the explorers indicated.

The souvenir sheet features the entire area explored by these men and is labeled "19th Century Exploration of the Holy Land."

A complete explorers set is available for $9.95, first-day covers for $15.95, from Israel Stamp Collectors Society, Box 854, Van Nuys, CA 91408.

In 1937, American aviator Amelia Earhart and her navigator Fred Noonan departed from Lae Airport, Papua-New Guinea, for Howland Island in the Pacific Ocean. Unfortunately, they never reached their destination. The incident remains a mystery today.

To commemorate the 50th anniversary of Earhart's last flight, the Papua-New Guinea Philatelic Bureau is releasing a special commemorative cover. The cost is 35 cents per cover. Covers may be ordered from the Papua-New Guinea Philatelic Bureau (U.S. Office), P.O. Box 321, West Hempstead, NY 11552.

Botanist Races To Save Endangered Plant Species

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Jonathan Shaw fears he's going to lose his race against time.

Shaw, a botanist at Bok Tower botanical gardens in Lake Wales, Fla., is involved in a nationwide effort to preserve about 3,000 plant species native to the United States that are in danger of being lost forever.

"A lot of this work will have to be done quickly," he said. "We can't sit on our hands."

Shaw says the country's leading botanical gardens will have to work together if they hope to succeed. Every new housing development or shopping center could hinder their chances of saving a rare species of plants.

"There's a genuine sense of urgency to this work," he said.

Shaw made his comments during a lecture before the Southeast regional meeting of the American Association of Botanical Gardens and Arboreta at the University of North Carolina-Charlotte.

The conference here drew authorities on botanical gardens from all over the Southeast, including Flamingo Gardens in Florida, Brookgreen Gardens near Myrtle Beach, S.C., and the new Atlanta Botanical Garden.

The conference also included tours of UNCC's botanical gardens and the nearby Davidson College Campus Arboretum.

Bok Tower Gardens is one of 19 botanical gardens and arboretums in the U.S. that belong to the national Center for Plant Conservation. The center, based in Cambridge, Mass., was created in 1984 to establish a living national collection of rare and endangered plants.

Other botanical gardens and arboretums participating in the network include the North Carolina Botanical Garden in Chapel Hill, the Missouri Botanical Garden in St. Louis, the Arnold Arboretum in Boston, the Nebraska Statewide Arboretum in Lincoln, the Desert Botanical Garden in Phoenix and the Waimea Arboretum and Botanical Garden in Haleiwa, Hawaii.

Although it is a national collection, the plants are maintained in the 19 participating institutions in the climates similar to what they encounter in the wild.

"The center's goal over the next 10 to 20 years is to bring into conservation the entire number of endangered and threatened plants," Shaw said in an interview. "After all, who are we to play God and allow plants with many potential benefits to be wiped out?"

According to the CPC, fewer than 10 percent of the 3,000 endangered plants in the United States are currently being cultivated by botanists so they can be preserved.

Shaw described efforts at Bok Tower Gardens to preserve rare and endangered plants in the high, dry, sand dunes of central Florida. He showed his fellow scientists a photograph of one species that was recently discovered growing in an automobile dump.

"Many of these endangered plants are growing on sites that are not protected by the state or federal government or a private agency," he said. "You can't take plants across interstate lines but you can wipe out an entire species if it's growing on your land."

Shaw said he and his colleagues at Bok Tower Gardens have been able to cultivate about 17 endangered species in their greenhouses.

"How many we'll be able to grow I don't know," he said in response to a question. "Perhaps we'll get to 50 or 60."

According to Shaw, Florida is third behind California and Texas in the number of endangered plants. The center lists Florida with about 220 plant species that are endangered, threatened or rare.

"Florida is an unsually rich area but there plants all over the country that are endangered," Shaw said. "I've been to the mountains of Virginia and North Carolina and there are plants that grow there that are not found anywhere else in the world."

Shaw has hiked countless miles in the countryside around Bok Tower Gardens looking for rare plants. Some 10,000 years ago, he explained, the "scrub habitat" of central Florida was a series of islands isolated from the mainland. When the seas receded, a lot of sand remained.

Because the islands were separated by water, not all of them had the same plant life. "This is one reason for the diversity of plants," he said.

Many of Florida's endangered plants grow on small parcels of land that are not under the protection of federal or state laws, he said. The Bok Tower Gardens has a state permit to collect plants and seedlings from some of these areas.

"Some of these areas are very small in acreage," he said. "It's on some of these sites that some extremely important plants grow. A number of these plants may have an important purpose in the future."

The new species that was discovered at the car dump has yet to be named. "It grows at three sites, all within 20 miles of the garden," Shaw said.

Botanical gardens will serve an increasingly important role to society in the coming years, Shaw said.

"We're doing something useful," he said. "Public gardens have served many roles over the years — medicine, taxonomy (classifying species of plants), the introduction of plants from abroad and education."

The preservation of America's endangered plant species will have far-reaching effects, he said. "It's very contemporary, very practical and very visionary," he said.

Pretty Pond Bay Area Added To Conservancy

CHAPEL HILL — The North Carolina Nature Conservancy has completed the acquisiton of the 7.5 acre Suggs tract located on Pretty Pond Bay in Robeson County near St. Pauls. Pretty Pond Bay is one of nine clay-based bays protected within The Nature Conservancy's Carolina Bays Program.

Carolina Bays are elliptical wetland depressions scattered across the coastal plain from New Jersey to Georgia. The greatest concentration of bays are in North and South Carolina.

The conversion of lands for silviculture, agriculture, residential and industrial developments has made the Carolina Bays a rapidly vanishing landform. Recognizing the ecological importance of Carolina Bays and the threat of extinction, in 1982 the conservancy included the bays in its national critical areas campaign to protect the rarest ecosystems remaining in the United States.

Pretty Pond Bay comprises 40 acres of the 414 acre Carolina Bays project and is home to several rare plant species. Michaux's sumac and small-headed marsh elder, two state listed endangered plants, have been found at the site. This particular species of marsh elder has been found in North Carolina only at Pretty Pond Bay and one other bay site.

Since its inception in 1977, the North Carolina Nature Conservancy has protected over 300,000 acres in North Carolina with funds obtained through gifts and grants from foundations, corporations and individuals.

Persons wanting more details on the conservancy are to write: N.C. Nature Conservancy, P.O. Box 805, Chapel Hill, N.C., 27514 or call 967-7707.

OPPORTUNITY IS KNOCKING

If your are self-motivated, quick and eager to learn, personable and diligent in the pursuit of your goals, we have a program designed to help you turn dreams into goals and goals into reality.

We're American Lincoln Homes, the nation's leading telemarketer of log and conventional home packages, and we're ready to share the secrets of our success with you - to show you everything you need to know to be successful.

How successful? Listen to what a couple of those who "answered the door" have to say:

In the past ten months, I've sold over $839,000.00 in home packages for American Lincoln Homes. That's $83,900.00 worth of commissions and the year isn't over yet!"

- Jerry Six
Goldsboro, NC

"With one more sale, I'll have booked over $70,000.00 in commissions since January. That kind of 'extra' income means a lot to me, and to my family."

- Mary Lou Batten
Wilson, NC

As your training proceeds, we'll give your as many qualified sales leads as you can handle. And, if you show us that you have what it takes to be successful, we'll enroll you in our start-up cash program. Once training is completed, you can begin to take advantage of our flexible hours and set your own schedule.

Our sales program is not for everybody. But, if $50,000, $75,000, 4100,000 in earnings per year is where you want to be, we want to talk with you.

Does it sound too good to be true? Isn't it worth a phone call to find out? Call, toll-free, today or send your resume to:

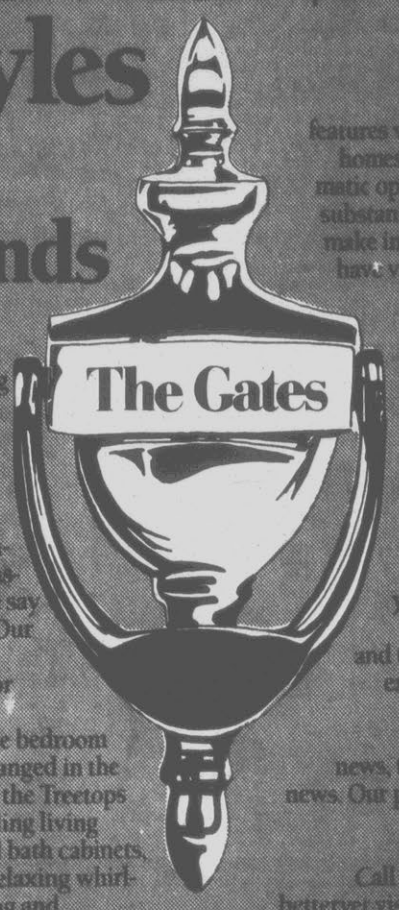
Homes With $100,000 Lifestyles For Thousands Less



If you've been thinking of a new home but you've heard that something really nice will cost at least a hundred grand, then you should look at the Gates. The Gates are all new townhomes which offer three custom designs. And when we say custom, we mean custom. Our plans were developed from the ground up exclusively for the Gates.

Beautiful two and three bedroom floorplans are carefully arranged in the private and quiet woods of the Treetops neighborhood. Vaulted ceiling living rooms, custom kitchen and bath cabinets, living room bookshelves, relaxing whirlpool baths, recessed lighting and expanded decks or patios are a few special features we've included. Most of our homes are complete with an automatic opening garage to protect the substantial investment you have to make in a car these days--plus you have valuable extra storage space. We've even installed a timer controlled sprinkler system to help keep the yards looking great. By the way, a nominal fee covers building exterior and yard care. Needless to say, that frees up a lot of time.

And if you've always wanted your own tennis court and swimming pool, you can enjoy the next best thing...the new swimming and tennis recreation area built exclusively for Treetops and Gates residents.

If all this sounds like good news, then get ready for the great news. Our prices currently range from $75,900 to $87,900...not a hundred grand.

Call us for more information or better yet, visit our model and discover the lifestyle you've been thinking about.

MOTHER GOOSE — A Mother Goose Christmas tree highlights the sunroom at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Michael House. Trimming the tree are ornaments representing nursery rhyme characters such as Old King Cole, Cinderella and Humpty Dumpty.

Holiday Homes Tour Set For Saturday

A Christmas tour of Ayden homes will be held Saturday, sponsored by the Ayden Home and Garden Club from 1 p.m to 5 p.m. with a candlelight tour from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Homes selected this year are those of Mr. and Mrs. C. Arlo Blocker, 802 W. Fourth St.; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cannon, Route 1, Ayden; Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Daughtry Sr., Route 2, Ayden; Dr. and Mrs. H. Wesley Gooding, 710 W. Fifth St.; Dr. and Mrs. Michael House, 703 Pine Forest Road the Pines, and Mr. and Mrs. Rudy Robinson, 710 W. Third St.

Various antiques will be viewed in the Blocker house, one of which is a grand piano approximately 150 years old and a reproduction of the "Newport" tall clock in Winterthur, Del.

The family Christmas tree in the entrance hall was decorated by the couple's granddaughter, Elizabeth Blocker of Greenville. Many of the ornaments are from European countries. The colonial decorating theme will be carried out throughout the house. Garlands of natural greenery will drape the stairway and entrance hall. Other greenery and poinsettias will also be used.

The Cannon's 80-year-old country farm house has a wraparound porch. The house features original chandeliers and antiques from four generations. Four Christmas trees will be decorated; the family's favorite is decorated with old-fashioned teddy bears, which are collected by Mrs. Cannon. An old-fashioned gumdrop tree will be in the breakfast room, red accents on a white tree in the living room and gold colored ornaments on the tree in the family room are each enjoyed by the Cannon family.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Daughtry live on "Hunter Cox Farm," which they call Hayfield Farm. The original house burned and was rebuilt with three rooms around the original chimney in 1929. A year later, the living room, sitting room and a bathroom were added. The house was completely renovated and the back structure was added in 1973-75. A point of interest is the original doors which hung inside the house and were placed around the lower portion of the dining room wall as wainscoating.

The original pack house, located besides the main house, was renovated and now houses a full-time horse trainer and instructor for the farm. The riding facility offers a complete lesson program year-round. The Daughtry family's favorite feature of the house is the tin roof. Mildred Cox Porter and Buren Cox, children of Hunter and Minnie Cox, original owners of the house, will be host and hostess for the event.

A ranch-style house built in the early 1850s is home for Dr. and Mrs. Gooding. He is a past collector of antique clocks, paintings and other memorabilia.

The white two-story plantation style house of Dr. and Mrs. House will be decorated in a traditional Christmas theme. Of particilar interest will be a tree decorated with limited edition Christmas ornaments in the living room. The sun room features a highboy built by Dr. House. The formal living room will be decorated with an Oriental theme. Native greenery will drape the entrance ahll and which will also be banked by poinsettias.

Native greenery and minilights will welcome visitors to the Robinson home. Mrs. Robinson decorates for the holidays using traditional ideas. The blue spruce tree in the living room will be decorated in all white featuring white lights, lace, pearls and beads. The mantel will be banked with greenery and will reflect the tree decorations.

For further information call 746-3425 or 756-0083.

DINING REFLECTIONS — Red velvet runners are used by Mrs. House on her dining room table. Mirror placemats reflect the red poinsettia centerpiece.

TREE ORNAMENTS — A variety of ornaments decorate the Christmas tree placed in the living room of Dr. and Mrs. House. Several white geese tied with ribbon and lace and old Santa faces highlight the tree.

'Purple Lady' Is Legend In Her Own Color

By MARGARET HABERMAN
Associated Press Writer

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — To ask Sonia Young her favorite color is redundant.

She drives a purple convertible, writes on a purple typewriter, eats off purple dishes with purple silverware and usually appears decked from head to toe in purple or a derivative thereof.

Her passion for purple has made her a local celebrity, but many people who have seen her in parades, on television or in the newspapers don't even know her name — just her sobriquet, the Purple Lady.

She's even listed in the telephone book under her alias, in case her fans have trouble finding her.

"I always liked purple as a child," said Young, who portrayed an orchid in a dance recital at age 5. "Whenever I could find anything in purple, I always wore it. When I designed my own paper dolls, they had purple clothes."

Young, 52, estimated that she's been wearing purple exclusively for about two decades.

"It got to the point that people would get real upset when they didn't see me in purple," she said, relaxing on a couch at her home wearing a purple dress, glasses, earrings and toenail polish.

"Even now, people will come up to me, if it's a shade they don't think is purple enough, they'll say, 'This is not purple.'

"I don't like any other color as well. I'm not happy wearing another color," she said. "I've tried on clothes that were blue. They don't look like me. I don't look right in them anymore. I wear lots of shades of purple, magenta, red plum, lavender. I have a wide range."

Bob Elmore, executive director of tourism for the Chattanooga Convention and Visitors Bureau, said she had been a familiar figure for years at events to promote civic projects or charitable causes.

"She's a colorful person and does some good work," Elmore said. "I see her wherever I go. You have a tendency to notice her. She's not exactly a shrinking violet."

Bernie Sellman, who has worked with Young for years as a supporter of the local community theater, said she had been good for the city as a booster of the arts.

"Sonia is an energetic woman who is always into everything," he said. "She's pro-Chattanooga. She's always looking to better, not only the theater, but everything.

"But she's never without her purple costume," he added. "All we have to do is spot purple and we know Sonia is around."

Young says she wore the color to help entertain children and put them at ease when she worked as a psychological examiner at a local speech and hearing center and also has used purple in several business ventures, including a job as an insurance broker.

"When I was in the insurance business — you could have five women in the room, including Raquel Welch, but I'm the one they'd notice first," she said. "I mean, purple hat, gloves, shoes, bag. They'd eventually get to Raquel Welch, don't worry. But it did get you into a lot of doors right away.

"Obviously, it has been something that I've used as a marketing point. Just like other people package groceries, I packaged me," she said. "But I've used it, one, to get through to children and, two, to help raise money for charities or to promote the opera, the symphony or whatever it was."

A tour of her home reveals an extensive purple collection. Some standard items include purple rugs and furniture, but the exotic also is represented in such things as a purple toilet seat, purple stethoscope and a 1970 purple Charger.

Book shelves include titles such as "The Color Purple" and the song, "Deep Purple," can be found among her records. Closets are filled with almost every imaginable item of purple clothing, from shoes to wigs to fur coats.

She frequently gets purple gifts from friends and has a list of stores on the lookout for purple accessories.

Young says she realizes some people view her as an oddity. "I don't worry about it ... I love to think that I spread some happiness wherever I go. There's not enough of it," she said.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Handling out-of-town matters should be your first priority today, but don't neglect other duties. Your judgment is particularly fine.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Find a quiet place where you can think and decide on what is really important to you. Listen to the advice of a trusted adviser.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Trust in your friends to give you the support and backing you need. Enjoy a happy family dinner tonight and feel content.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): This is a good day to gain the support of yoru superiors on a new project. Take the time to handle a public duty you like.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Get out early and meet some new people who can assist you greatly in the future. Plan out the details of an upcoming trip tonight.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Now is the time to get your home in order and make all necessary repairs. You'll find a way to create more harmony with your mate.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): A talented associate can show you some shortcuts which will make your job much easier. Settle a dispute with a good friend.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Step back and consider your financial situation; you may see there is an easy way to improve it. Get plenty of rest this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Your perception is excellent right now, but don't rely on your first impressions completely. Let your mate know what you want.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): You now have that extra time you've been looking for to seek out the data you need for a new and profitable business project.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): This is a wonderful time for you socially. Use your charm to calm down an angry friend. Be sure you drive with the utmost care.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Get the backing of an important superior for a new project. Be alert to situations which are developing around you this evening.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY Nov. 30

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Take care of some personal affairs for which you usually don't have time. You may have to bend over backwards to please your mate.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): A good friend may look to you for assistance today, so be willing to give it. The help you give now will be gratefully repaid soon.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Some duties, which at first seem tedious can open many new doors of opportunity for you. Be cautious in motion of any kind.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Avoid a fellow worker who is not thinking very straight right now. Have a delightful evening with your loved ones.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Study your budget carefully and make needed revisions. Be sure to leave room for recreations, but don't make them expensive ones.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Don't allow a family friend to force you into doing some errands you hadn't planned on, or you will miss an important business deal.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Stick to your routines, and don't go off on any silly tangents today. Determine the motivations of a co-worker, and you'll get along better.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Put practical matters aside for now and work on pleasing your good friends. Be sure you control your temper with your mate tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Put your family's wishes ahead of your own, and you'll feel very good about yourself. This is not a good time to have guests in.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Pay special attention to your communications with others, especially through the mail. Don't become involved in any arguments.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): If you make it clear to others what you want, you can get it easily now. Stay away from persons who usually give you a hard time.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Try to recognize what your true position is with acquaintances, and you can become a more popular person. Don't irritate your superiors.

Opening lead: King of ♠

There is a little larceny in all of us, so no matter how many brilliantly-played hands we come across, we always remember with a certain fondness those hands where a player stole his opponents blind! One of our favorites occurred in the World Open Pairs in Amsterdam some years ago.

Sitting South was a French player, S. Magnis. We do not know many players this side of the Atlantic who would consider his hand as being worth an opening bid. Certainly, his partner seemed to expect a bit more, because he pushed his side into a dreadful slam.

West led the king of spades and shifted to a trump. It seemed that there was no way for declarer to avoid losing a diamond trick, but a bold front and a fortunate lie of the cards permitted him to work a miracle. Declarer won in hand with the queen and immediately shot back a diamond to the ace and a low diamond from dummy.

Pity poor East's predicament. It looked as if declarer had a singleton diamond, so if he rose with the king and dropped partner's queen, declarer would be able to set up a diamond trick with a ruffing finesse for the jack. Therefore, he played low and declarer's queen won the trick!

Since West had not ruffed the queen of diamonds, marking East with the missing trump, declarer was able to ruff out all of dummy's diamonds, using a spade and two club ruffs as entries. No problem!

William Hogarth Exhibition Views Early Years Of British Art

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — William Hogarth, the first Englishman to be a great artist and the father of the British school of painting, is being celebrated in London where he found his fame.

"His period is the childhood of British art, the time when a national school emerged onto the international artistic scene," said Elizabeth Einberg, who chose the 223 pictures for the new Tate Gallery show, "Manners and Morals: Hogarth and British Painting 1700-1760."

The Tate hopes the exhibit will help to bring more than 2 million visitors, which is more than the gallery has ever seen in a given year.

The show will delight Britons, who for generations have had to listen to the French and Italian say there is no British school. Before Hogarth, British painting was dominated by foreigners, headed by the German-born, Dutch-trained Sir Godfrey Kneller, a fashionable portrait painter.

Hogarth was born in 1697 and Kneller died in 1723. By the time Hogarth died in 1764, the British art scene was completely changed.

Hogarth defended his country against the popular penchant for French and Italian fashion. In one painting, he even cheers roast beef over the foreigners' thin soup.

He was very much the Englishman: When he painted his best-known self-portrait he gave his dog pride of place.

"Hogarth was a genius with paint, largely self-taught and there was no one like him in the whole of Europe," said Einberg, assistant keeper of historic pictures at the Tate, in an interview.

"Hogarth had this enormous talent and the impulse to break through the conventions of his time which were centered on portraits, how people wanted to see themselves," she said. "When Hogarth painted portraits he pictured his sitters as they were, which was extraordinary in his day."

Hogarth's best portraits, such as the group work "The Graham Children," loaned by London's National Gallery, display a wonderful sense of the joy of life. The eldest girl in the picture holds two cherries, known as the fruit of paradise.

For the first time in British art, Hogarth also painted the life of the streets, the poor, the drink-sodden and the criminals. He portrayed the scandals of gambling, marriage for money and procurers for vice, as well as parliamentary elections conducted by bribery.

Engravings depicting these themes, such as "The Harlot's Progress," "The Rake's Progress" and "Marriage a la Mode," sold in the thousands. They became so popular they were pirated. In order to prevent further abuse of his work, Hogarth got a Copyright Act passed in 1735 which greatly benefited all artists and engravers.

"Because he painted such scenes, Hogarth has been thought of as a man without moral content, but he was the very opposite," Einberg said. "He painted those things because he hated them. He was an extremely moral man."

The exhibition displays the works of 61 other identified artists besides Hogarth. They are mostly portraits but there also are landscapes and scenes depicting the English love of gardens, horses and dogs.

One room is devoted to the Foundling Hospital, which took in unwanted children. Hogarth was a governor and he and his wife were foster parents.

In one of his greatest portraits, he painted the hospital's founder, Capt. Thomas Coram, who had made a fortune in shipping. Other artists gave works to the hospital and George Frederick Handel composed an anthem for it. His manuscript is in a display case.

Also in the case are tokens left with infants abandoned at the hospital by their mothers, who hoped that if their fortunes changed some day they would be able to identify and reclaim their children.

The tokens are mostly dated scraps of metal. One is a bead necklace, and another a lace cap with a heart-shaped piece of paper attached, the writing easily readable: "This cap is desir'd to be kept as a token. Born June 14, 1753."

The hospital still stands near the British Museum.

The last painting visitors see as they leave the exhibition is a 1756 view of Covent Garden on Market Day by Samuel Scott. There are crowds in the square in front of St. Paul's Church, wagons, baskets, a stagecoach and an overturned applecart.

There are still crowds in the square today and the buildings in the painting are still there.

The exhibition runs through Jan. 3.

Special Millpond Park Event

GATESVILLE — The last special event for 1987 at Merchants Mill Pond near Gatesville will be held Saturday.

The program, "Leave it to Beaver," will be presented beginning at 2 p.m. in the canoe rental area of the park.

Most of the program will be conducted in canoes on the millpond. A $1 canoe rental fee will be charged.

Due to the limited number of canoes available for the program, interested persons need to pre-register at the earliest possible date by calling the park office, 357-1191 between the hours of 8:30 and 9 a.m. Mondays through Fridays.

Those attending are to wear warm clothing with a change of clothing recommended. It is suggested that binoculars be brought along for the trip.

Edenton Event

EDENTON — An 18th century Christmas will be celebrated Dec. 6 in Historic Edenton, beginning at 2 p.m. and continuing until 5 p.m. The Cupola House and the James Iredell House will be decorated and open to the public without admission charge.

The Cupola House dates from 1725 and is an outstanding example of Jacobean architecture. A traditional holiday beverage as well as other refreshments will be served there.

The 1773 Iredell House was the home of U.S. Supreme Court Justice James Iredell and is one of North Carolina's State Historic sites. Here, visitors will receive copies of selected recipes from this year's festive array of food.

For more details, call 482-2637 or 3663.

Author Gail Godwin Writes About A Discordant South

"BLACK DAHLIA" AUTHOR — Mystery writer James Ellroy poses for a photo in a Long Beach, Calif. alley, near a bookstore where he was signing copies of his latest book, "The Black Dahlia," an account of the brutal 1947 murder of a young woman known by that nickname. The murder has never been solved. (L.A. Times photo by Rick Corrales)

By KILEY ARMSTRONG
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Fame was a far-off flicker when a 9-year-old Gail Godwin began typing up stories and sending them off to magazines.

The editors weren't impressed with those early endeavors. But at 15, she learned about another of writing's rewards: catharsis.

Frustrated while awaiting a phone call from a boy she liked, the only thing she could think to do was write about it. "Four or five hours later, I was making up things," she said. "By then, if he had called, I would have felt distracted. It was a good evening."

The incident taught the 50-year-old author that whenever she didn't understand life or felt it wasn't going her, she could change it through writing.

Seven books have emerged since her discovery, including "A Mother and Two Daughters," "The Finishing School" and the newest, "A Southern Family" (William Morrow & Co., $18.95).

It is her most autobiographical novel. In it, the author, who grew up in North Carolina, examines Southern and small-town sensibilities, sometimes painful family entanglements and the masquerades of daily life.

"It's like going into a cold stream," she said. "(At first) it's pretty awful. I get in slowly — put my ankles in, wet my wrists. Then I find some way to get the rest of me in. When you're in, it's numbing at first and then invigorating. When you get out you're so glad you did it."

Readers get caught up in the class struggles, power struggles and personal struggles of the quirky, convoluted Quick family after a murder-suicide claims one of its own. The writing is thick with juicy characters and biting observations, sweetened at unexpected turns with Godwin's sly, dry wit.

They'll also glimpse the creative personality inside-out through the character of Clare Quick, a successful New York author on a pilgrimage back to Dixie.

"If she had not been able to do what she did, she would have done damage. If not to others, then to herself," it is noted of Clare's writing career.

Godwin says many would-be artists cause trouble because they haven't found "the challenge of their art."

"Take the typical hometown gossip — a woman or man who could ruin lives. What they're doing is making up stories. ... They're sketching plots, changing things. If they had a book to put it in, perhaps they would stop doing it over the back fence."

Her own stories are spun from a combination of real-life friends and strangers. She has learned the art of watching. "For years, I'd walk into a room of people and wonder what they were thinking of me. ... But the more I lived, the more I realized what a waste of time it was.

"Sometimes it's embarrassing how much people reveal ... in their gestures, what they're wearing, how they're standing and sitting, in slips of the tongue."

One "Southern Family" character, Father Zachary, is based on a real priest with a similar name. "If I know the real people won't mind, I make the name similar to send them a signal," Godwin said.

"I find more and more that the one thing your friends or acquaintances cannot forgive you for is if you leave them out of the book totally."

There's one exception. After her portrayal as a 16-year-old in "The Odd Woman," Godwin's sister told her, "Don't put me in any more books because I don't like being frozen in time like that."

"She's a lawyer — so I respect her point of view," Godwin said with a chuckle.

The author recently gave a reading at the library in her hometown: Asheville, N.C., population 61,818.

"It was packed," she said. "Many of the people were in the book, or parts of them were in the book or in previous books. There was sort of a lovely aura of conspiracy among us all."

The author, who now lives in Woodstock, N.Y., understands small-town mores.

"People know what other people are doing," she said. "They make lots of judgments. They read one another like a novel. They also embroider on what they know. They speculate, maybe make more out of something than is there — or less. And they present their own facades."

Facades are a theme of "A Southern Family." Its characters, she notes, are "transfixed by the parts they've been playing. They can't get out of them until something really cataclysmic breaks up their little performance.

"Play-acting is just in our make-up," she said. "We present ourselves as different types of protagonists — goddess or warrior, instigator, troublemaker, magician.

"It's not all bad because we have to have models. But it can be deadly if you don't know you're doing it. If you do know, it can sometimes be very manipulative. (It's OK) as long as there's an element of play and understanding and knowledge of who you are."

For Southerners, she said, the role goes something like this: "We lost the (Civil) War, but we still have better manners and we're more interesting and glamorous and we tell good stories."

The history of slavery is the other part of being Southern, she said.

"Even those of us who didn't have relatives who did this feel vestiges of a collective guilt and sorrow that we were once oppressors," she said. "And this guilt is part of our style too."

"A Southern Family" doesn't shy away from Southern racism. Chilling flashbacks recall cruel acts of a previous generation.

"If you found a certain kind of older person sitting on a porch even today, you'd hear those things. But they're changing, too," said Godwin, noting how one character impresses his daughter when he "finally breaks down and says, 'The nice wife of that black doctor.'"

Each chapter is presented from one character's point of view. "You think this is a nice person and so and so is a villain.

Take a look at America through the eyes of Willard Scott in "America is my Neighborhood." Scott, the funny, folksy weatherman on NBC's "Today" show chats and laughs with some of the regular folks he meets on his many travels and remote broadcasts around the country. We visit the thousands of people he has met over the years from Middle America to the Big City - all the residents of Willard's national neighborhood - talking to their favorite down-home hero about their lives, homes, hobbies and dreams.

With his characteristics wit and charm, Willard introduces us to all kinds of Americans, among them a genuine old-fashioned milkman; his old pal, the original Bozo the Clown; the dauntless parents of fifteen children, who were honored by Nancy Reagan as one of the Great American Families; a group of championship cheerleaders and their coach, who wrote a special cheer for Willard; a brave young girl who overcame leukemia, and many others. He presents his own views and experiences with marriage, the fear of bridges, old-time radio, Thanksgiving, comedy, tragedy and much more. These profiles paint a picture that gets at the heart of hometown America and makes us feel a part of Willard's American neighborhood family.

In "I Think I Don't Remember," Art Buchwald takes you on a rollicking romp through the United States for the past twenty-four months, starting in the Rose Garden of the White House and reaching far beyond the Capital Beltway. A renowned chronicler of lame-duck chief executives, Buchwald has collected all the good news and the bad news of the last two years as best he can remember it.

During his life in Washington, he has covered six presidents and numerous vice-presidents, all of whom have in one way or another suffered from faulty memories. His favorite was Richard Nixon, but Ronald Reagan has done many things to make Buchwald's deadlines easier to meet. What he admired most about Reagan was his ability to drive through a car wash in a convertible with the top down and the only one who got wet was Jimmy Carter.

In "Humor And The Presidency," Gerald R. Ford lightheartedly ponders on the link between laughter and leadership, discussing the importance of humor in the political process and retelling many of his favorite funny stories. One of the best-natured presidents ever to grace the Oval Office, Ford was the butt of more than his share of jokes, not all of them kind.

He talks about what it's like to take a header down the steps of Air Force One and then have everbody makes jokes about it, how it feels when they start in on your family, and what you can do when the joking crosses over the line into ridicule. "Humor And The Presidency" makes a major contribution to two classic American pastimes: talking about politics and making fun of politicians.

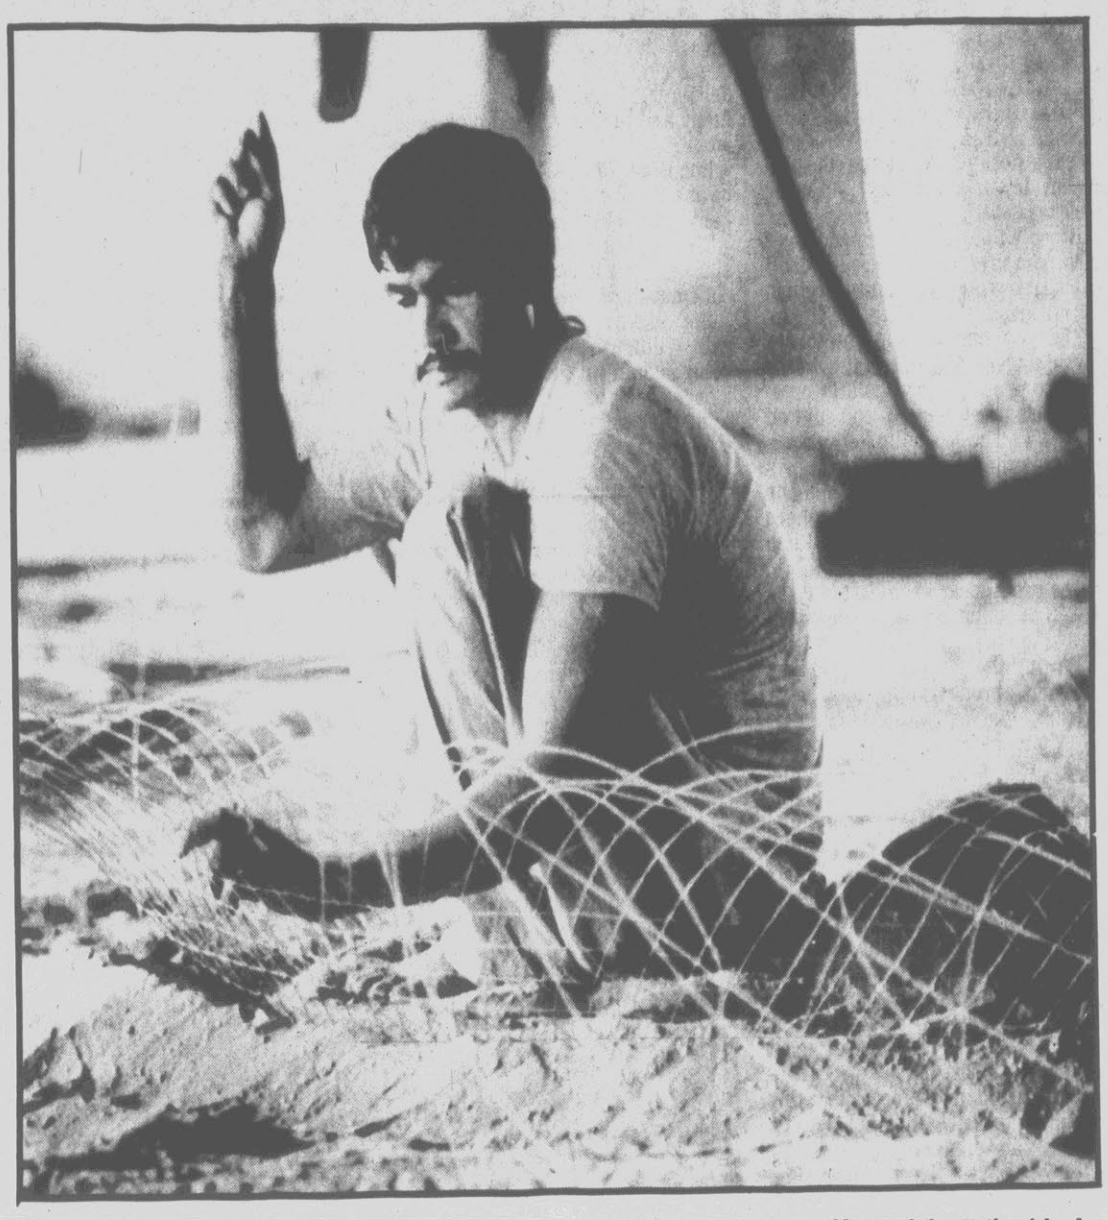
Dhow Ships Still Active Despite Gulf War Hazards



WEAVING WIRE FISH TRAP — A craftsman weaves a wire fish trap on the isle of Muharraq in Bahrain earlier this fall. By ALY MAHMOUD
Associated Press Writer

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Creaking wooden vessels seemingly straight from the voyages of Sinbad the Sailor stubbornly live on in Persian Gulf waters, spanning Bahrain's economic history from the days of pearl diving and fishing to those of oil-fueled dolce vita.

These dhows ply the Gulf heedless of the deadly hazards of the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war as well as the innovations of ultra-modern sea transport.

The boat comes in assorted sizes but is characterized by a narrow prow, a shallow draft and a short mast carrying a triangular, lateen-rigged sail. The smaller boats are used for fishing; bigger dhows transport light commodities between sea front hamlets. More sophisticated versions serve as luxury yachts for wealthy businessmen.

Some are equipped with motors, and others unfurl their white sails as they creep gracefully along the coastline, framed against a backdrop of domed mosques, office buildings and medieval-style huts.

The dhow business fell into periods of eclipse in recent years: in 1980 when the Gulf war broke out, in 1982 when a huge oil slick polluted the Gulf waters and poisoned fish, and in 1986 when the 15-mile-long Bahrain-Saudi Arabia causeway was inaugurated.

But sailors soon realized that neither Iran nor Iraq attacked dhows, the pollution was weathered, and the causeway was no match to placid sailing for rich vacationers.

Dhow carpenters returned to slipways, beaches and wharves, building Arabesquely designed boats of wood on special order for sheiks and princes, and simpler types for fishermen and import-export merchants.

The fishermen, who toss simple wire fish traps from their dhows, account for 6,000 tons of fish consumed annually by the 400,000 residents of the 33 tiny islands that make up the state of Bahrain.

The isle of Muharraq, home of the country's sole international airport, is the largest. Its residents are famous along the Gulf as skilled dhow carpenters, fishermen and traders.

A reception will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. Friday. The show will be up through Dec. 29. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Mondays through Fridays and 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturdays. For more details, call 638-ARTS.

Jukebox Collector

MADISON, Ohio (AP) — John Soulsby doesn't understand why visitors are so surprised at his collection of jukeboxes.

"Many say, 'Wow! You got so many jukeboxes.' And I usually say, 'Hey! How many stamps does a stamp collector have — one?' It's just like stamp collecting — you can't have just one."

Soulsby and David Reed, both of Madison Township, have jointly collected 135 of the bulky phonographs that can weigh 300 pounds and more.

"I always wanted a jukebox," Soulsby said. "I just thought it would be something unique to have."

The collection is stored in a barn, where they are lined up in rows of four and five deep. In their spare time, Soulsby and Reed restore some of them. Others, they'll use for parts or sell or trade with other collectors.

The two men say people collect jukeboxes for many reasons, including buying boxes as an investment. Reed, for example, bought his first Rock-Ola for $300, restored it, and sold it for $800.

"Some of them are very beautiful. I don't think there's anyone who doesn't like a jukebox or wouldn't like one in their recreation room," Reed said. "When you learn about one, it's simple after that."

The oldest jukebox in the collection is a 6-foot 1928 model. It resembles a late Victorian dining room cabinet, with doors that expose a Ferris-wheel disc holder. That's the mechanism that played the popular hits over and over. Back in 1928, listeners had only to drop a nickel into one of these jukeboxes to play some of their favorites.

In the 1940s, the jukebox symbolized the beginnings of audio art. The Wurlitzer Co. designed jukeboxes with colorful floral and peacock glass centerpieces, as well as intricate wood carvings.

Soulsby and Reed jointly own a 1946 Wurlitzer 1015 model, which is considered to be the classic jukebox of all time and is valued at more than $8,000. The post-World War II jukebox is in Soulsby's play room.

Because of its brilliant colors, the 1015 commands attention. Multicolored plastic tubes that slowly change from red to purple to yellow, green and orange, surround the Wurlitzer's oak frame. Sandwiched between the colored cylinders are thin tubes that hold water and create bubbles, adding a sensation of musical movement.

In 1951, the J.P. Seeburg Corp. began making 45 rpm records that were cheaper and easier to manufacture than the 78 rpm records in the old Wurlitzers. The 45s enabled Seeburg to produce its Model A jukebox designed to play 100 selections — 76 more than the Wurlitzer, which was becoming obsolete.

Indian And White Guy Present Zany Comedy

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Terry Ree is a stocky Sioux Indian who proclaims less-than-seriously: "Custer stole my land."

Bruce Williams is a former flower child who says about Ree, "If I don't eat what he cooks, he makes it rain in the kitchen."

The two humorists and country music singers, known as "the Indian and the white guy," regularly present their zany ethnic comedy on cable TV's The Nashville Network.

"I play the dumb white guy," says the 37-year-old Williams. "He's the stoic Indian. The Indians were here first. We're all immigrants. It's a parody on racism in a lot of ways."

The two appear each Saturday on TNN's "Country Kitchen" show with host Florence Henderson. On the program, the 38-year-old Ree has worn an apron saying "tomahawk gripper" and Williams has one that says "tomahawk target."

The two say they met "many moons ago" in college at Black Hills State in Spearfish, S.D., "a perennial national powerhouse in snowmobiling."

They began singing together to meet women, Williams says, and found that their comedy about ethnic stereotypes went over well. They worked together mostly in the Dakotas from 1968 to 1984, except for several months in Los Angeles about 10 years ago. There, they were regulars at The Comedy Store with rising comics David Letterman, Robin Williams and others.

They moved to Nashville in 1984, bought a recording studio and won appearances on TNN after auditioning. They now make about 200 personal appearances a year, some as the opening act for country stars such as the Oak Ridge Boys, Mel Tillis, Lee Greenwood, Roy Clark, Merle Haggard and Randy Travis.

The two also have recorded six albums and recently taped a one-hour special that will be shown on various public television stations.

They say their comedy act is similar to Abbott and Costello. "It's close to what we do: one straight guy and a goofball," Williams said.

"I liked them as a kid. As I got older, I saw the struggle they had; they were not good friends."

Williams said his favorite comic is Dick Martin because of "his obtuse approach. He's always coming in sideways." He also rates Robin Williams high. "He's 'it' at stand-up comedy," he said.

Ree said Jack Benny was "the best deliverer of comedy. He just looks funny and his body would make you laugh."

Bob Hope, Ree said, "is a legend to be as old as he is and still be doing it. I enjoy his delivery."

The two will do off-color material if audiences want them to. "We call it our smut show," Williams said.

But mostly it's ethnic material with Williams stereotyping Ree for being Indian and Ree even playing along.

"If I get embarrassed, who'll know if I turn red," Ree said.

Williams has a line of jokes focusing on "the government syndrome," asking Ree questions about his government checks and how good the government cheese has been tasting.

"We'll say anything for a laugh," Williams said.

"We don't try to offend anyone, but I suppose that's possible," Ree said. "Occasionally, I'm sure there's someone who takes offense."

Letterman, who stars on NBC's "Late Night With David Letterman," once gave the two some good advice. When all three were rising comedians, the two told Letterman they were worried that their material was too tame compared with what others were doing.

"He told us not to change," Williams said.

The music they play also has Indian themes: "Kawliga" (about a wooden Indian) and "Running Bear" (who loved little White Dove).

Both play guitar, but downplay their expertise.

"We're both scab guitar players," Williams said. "We're three-chord wonders."

On Miss Henderson's program, they show how to prepare desserts while mixing in comedy.

"It's a challenge to come up with 13 spots about adding water or 50 strokes," Ree said.

"I grill a mean steak," Ree said.

As for Williams, "I microwave what my wife cooks."

Children

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS has given an air date, Saturday, Dec. 5, to the Walter Cronkite report "The Children of Apartheid." Cronkite says, "What happens to South Africa may well be forecasted by the attitudes of the children today. This is the story that we went after." Among those interviewed are the daughters, respectively, of President P.W. Botha.

School Of Music Calendar

Five events in music under the auspices of the East Carolina University School of Music are scheduled in the early part of December.

All listed events are free and open to the public and unless otherwise noted, will take place at the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on campus.

The events are:

- Dec. 3 — 7:30 p.m., The Symphonic Wind Ensemble Holiday Concert, Wright Auditorium.
- Dec. 4 — 7 p.m., Chris Moore, graduate percussion recital.
- Dec. 6 — 3:15 p.m., Charles Bath, piano, faculty recital with guest violinist Joanne Bath.
- Dec 6 — 8:15 p.m., Trombone Ensemble concert.
- Dec. 7 — 8:15 p.m., Percussion Ensemble II concert.

New Bern Celebration

NEW BERN — Downtown historic New Bern will be the site of the Coastal Christmas Celebraton on Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 5 and 6.

The two-day event features several attractions and will be highlighted by a Christmas flotilla down the Trent River Saturday evening. Boats decorated from bow to stern are due to parade from the East Carolina Yacht Club before going on display in front of the Sheraton Hotel on Tryon Palace Drive at about 6 p.m.

Following the flotilla, there will be performances by the New Bern High School and and drill team; Santa's parade down Middle Street; lighting of the community Christmas tree and New Bern's decorations. A community chorus and sing-along will take place in the early evening hours.

Earlier, beginning at 10 a.m. Saturday, an art and craft show will be at the Holiday Showcase, sponsored by the Craven Arts Council and Gallery. The showcase will be open until 7:30 p.m. Saturday and from 2 to 4 p.m. on Sunday.

At 2 p.m. Saturday, the Lollipop Playhouse, a children's theater group, will give a performance at the former Kress Building.

The annual Jaycees Christmas Parade will begin at 2 p.m. Sunday.

For more details on activities, call 638-5781.

Two Chosen For Project

ATLANTA — Two North Carolina organizations, the North Carolina Black Repertory Company of Winston-Salem, and the Northeastern North Carolina Tomorrow program in Elizabeth City, have been selected to take part in a southeastern, three-year experimental arts development project.

Selection of these two institutions was made by the Southern Arts Federation with headquarters in Atlanta.

The federation program, known as a Rural and Minority Arts Regional Initiate, is designed to assist organzations such as these two to build stronger local and regional bonds, and to help further artistic growth and presentation objectives.

The N.C. Black Repertory tours North Caorlina with five productions over a period of nine months.

The Elizabeth City organization serves 16 northeastern North Carolina counties in efforts to initiate approaches to the cultural enrichment of the area.

ECU Faculty Participation

Charles Moore, chairman of the Voice Department of the East Carolina University School of Music, organized and administered the N.C. State Artists Auditions held recently at Elon Collge.

Moore is governor of North Carolina's unit of the National Association of Teachers of Singing, the sponsoring organization.

The auditions identified a performing artist under the age of 36 for participation in the Eastern Regional Artist Auditions, held in Charlotte. The eastern region includes the two Carolinas, the District of Columbia, Maryland, West Virginia and Virginia. Finals of the auditions will be held in San Antonio, Texas, in December.

Moore also recently attended the biennial national convention of Pi Kappa Lambda held in Tampa, Florida. He is president of ECU's Beta Zeta chapter of the fraternity.

Cash Award Provided For PFNC Play

The Paul Green Foundation of Chapel Hill will provide a cash award for the sixth annual Playwrights Fund of North Carolina, headquartered in Greenville. Competition for the award is open to North Carolina playwrights.

Postmark deadline for the submission of scripts has been extended to Dec. 15.

Typed, bound one-act or full-lenth plays must include a script-sized SASE.

They are to be sent to: Grigg Denton, Production Coordinator, Playwrights Fund of North CArolina, Inc., P.O. Box 646, Greenville, N.C., 27835.

The winning script will be given public presentations in Greenville in April, 1988, and with possible revision, will be given at the Southeastern Playwrights Conference to be held in Greenville June 16-20.

PFNC Announces Dec. 6 Auditions

Auditions for stage-reading presentations of "Bright Star" by Wilmington playwright Terry Theodore will be held at the Robert Lee Humber House, 117 West Fifth Street at 2 p.m. on Sunday, Dec. 6.

The play is the January selection of the Playwright Fund of North Carolina, to be presented twice — at the Greenville Museum of Art and at the Humber House.

Three female characters are needed for the play: one late teens, one mid-thirties, and one late sixties to early seventies.

Janice Schreiber will direct.

For more details, call 758-3628.

Fetchin Bones Group Creates Energy

Ever since bands like R.E.M. made it big in the early 1980s, mainstream music has become more and more accepting of "garage" bands with under-produced albums and a dependence more on raw energy than musical skill.

That's good, because it gives groups like Fetchin Bones a chance to explore the wide, wide world. The Bones, and other bands like them, have made the public realize that you can learn the music and the instruments, what you can't learn is creative energy. That you have to get naturally, and the Bones have it.

Their new album, "Galaxy 500," is evidence of the multiple creative forces that drive the band. With a pounding base, staccato drums and the singing/chanting/screaming talents of Hope Nichols, the new Bones' album is a fine example of the new rock and roll.

Of course, the new rock and roll, in many ways, is a return to the roots of the genre. Fetchin Bones' sound is a strong mix of country, blues and folk, combined to produce a stark rock beat reminiscent of early rockers like Chuck Berry. It all comes together with punk overtones, and the combination is explosive.

The opening track, "Stray," begins with the pounding beat of Clay Richardson's drum and Dana Pentes' bass. As the tune progresses into rapid fire guitar work and Nichols' impressive vocal attacks, the creative force that drives the band becomes evident in the energy and the lyrics.

The song, on the surface, is about watching a stray dog who wants to go inside homes and leave his mark on the occupants' lives. "Look you mangy mutt/ with those blue eyes you cut/ get the stray/ you howl outside houses/ you beg to come in and tear them apart/ and then you leave them breathless and their cupboards bare/ you catch a fresh scent in the air/ the stray never stays."

On the second level, this seems to be a song about people who jump from one love, one bed, to another, leaving behind a trail of used lovers and broken hearts. The "Stray" is a bad dog, and Nichols tells that at the end of the song.

The rest of the album has a similar feel to it. The songs can be taken on two different levels, generally, demonstrating the creative lines that many emerging artists are chosing over the pop-ish lyrics that infest most of today's music.

Aaron Pitikin and Errol Stewart share guitar playing duties on the new LP, and they do an admirable job of playing off of each other's talents to get the best possible combination.

"Galaxy 500" was produced by Don Dixon, the musical guru responsible for the popular success of R.E.M. and others. Dixon records in Charlotte, where Nichols grew up and Fetchin Bones is based, and has made the Queen City one of the hotbeds of rock in 1987.

And perhaps the one major fault of "Galaxy 500" lies in its production. Dixon is a wizard, and his talents may have been to formidable for the Bones. Hardcore Bones fans may be disappointed to find the band has cleaned up a little, but the result has been an album that is accessible to the public but true to its roots.

Fetchin Bones will play at the Brewery in Raleigh on Thursday as part of their current tour of the east coast. The band has a good reputation for live performance, and if the energy of the show is anything like the energy in the album, it shouldn't be missed.

ECU Wind Ensemble Christmas Concert

A special Christmas concert for children and adults is being presented by the East Carolina University Symphonic Wind Ensemble. The concert, sponsored by the Friends of the School of Music, will be presented in Wright Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. Thurday. It is free and open to the public.

According to Harold A. Jones, director of the ensemble, the concert will be under an hour in length and will feature audience participaton in the singing of several familiar carols. There will also be a traditional visit from St. Nicholas.

Ricky Bailey, Minister of Youth and Education at Memorial Baptist Church, is guest soloist. He will sing three traditional songs — "Greensleeves," "Gentle Mary Laid Her Child" and "Sweet Little Jesus Boy."

Familiar holiday music to be performed by the ensemble will include Leroy Anderson's "Sleigh Ride," Torme's "The Christmas Song," and Victor Herbert's "March of the Toys," among other selections.

ECU music student Davis Clark will conduct "Christmas Fugue" by Robert B. Brown.

Mrs. Barbara White, president of the Friends of the ECU School of Music, states this concert is sponsored as part of liaison btween the school and the community. The group also raises scholarship funds through memberships and their annual scholarship gala and currently offers 26 scholarships to ECU music students.

'Tosca' Is Next Opera Broadcast

WASHINGTON, N.C. — The 48th consecutive season of radio broadcasts of the Texaco-Metropolitan season, aired live from the stage of the Metropolitan Opera in New York City, opens Saturday at 1:30 p.m. with a performance of Puccinno's "Tosca."

The broadcast will be heard locally over radio stations WRRF, Washington and WTEB, New Bern.

Hildegard Behrens will sing the title role. Ermanno Mauro will sing the role of Cavaradossi, with Cornell MacNeil as Scarpia and Renato Capecchi as the Sacristan.

Conductor Christian Badea will make his debut as a conductor of the Metropolitan Opera orchestra.

The broadcast is scheduled to end at about 4:30 p.m.

Beaufort Concert On December 6

WASHINGTON, N.C. — The newly-formed Beaufort County Choral Society will present its premiere Christmas performance at 3 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 6 in the First United Methodist Church, Washington. The concert is free.

The society, sponsored by the Beaufort County Arts Council, is directed by Don Gober of Ahoskie. He is minister of music at Ahoskie First Baptist Church.

In addition to the singers, a brass ensemble will be featured. The chorus will be accompanied by Barbara Owens on piano and organ.

Chester Arthur, the 21st president of the United States, was born in 1830 in Fairfield, Vt.

HOLIDAY GIFT GUIDE

Holiday gift-giving expresses joy of the season

Keeping the magic of Christmas alive with special gifts for your loved ones

There's a certain something in the air that seems to preserve the magic of Christmas long after childhood days of waiting up for Santa have passed. The beauty of winter, its falling snow seeming to dust the world with merriment and good will, creates a fairyland setting where visions of sugarplums seem all too likely to dance in our heads.

Coming in from the wonderland outdoors, the warmth of a crackling fire and the heady aroma of baking gingerbread seem to wrap themselves around us like a thick, soft blanket. The star-topped tree, its tinsel shimmering in the firelight, is a picture of enchantment whose spell few can resist.

And yet, the most potent ingredient to the magic that is Christmas is the joy of giving, for there is no other time of year when gift-giving creates more excitement or is more looked forward to.

There's the triumph of coming home with just the right gift, after hours of searching and waiting in line. And after the seemingly endless weeks and days of keeping them hidden, follows the fun of wrapping them with gaily colored ribbons and bows.

Gifts to treasure

Then the wonderful moment finally arrives: It's Christmas morning and you can bask in the thrill of seeing the glow in the eyes of all those loved ones to whom you've given a special gift.

Each holiday season brings with it the challenge and fun of finding new and different gifts that are sure to be enjoyed.

With gift-giving being an important aspect of holiday tradition, why not take the idea of tradition one step further and start a gifting tradition this year that is uniquely your own, as well as very personal.

Start a tradition

A beautiful ornament is a gift that can be enjoyed year after year, and passed on from generation to generation. You might want to make it your tradition to give certain people a different ornament each Christmas.

Whether it's something you've made yourself, or one of the dated glass or silver ornaments that are issued in a limited edition each year, you can be sure that your gift will be enjoyed for a long time to come.

Being as there are so many wonderful foods that are characteristic of Christmas, why not make it your tradition to give a basketful of holiday favorites to someone who you know would just love it.

You might fill it with gingerbread and plum pudding, imported Dutch cocoa and Swiss chocolates, or even some exotic cheeses, caviar and champagne.

Whether the basket is full of cookies and treats that you've baked yourself or festive imported delicacies, you'll know that every mouthful will be savored.

For a favorite niece or goddaughter, a strand of pearls or a charm bracelet that can be added to each year, makes a gift that will be enjoyed for a lifetime.

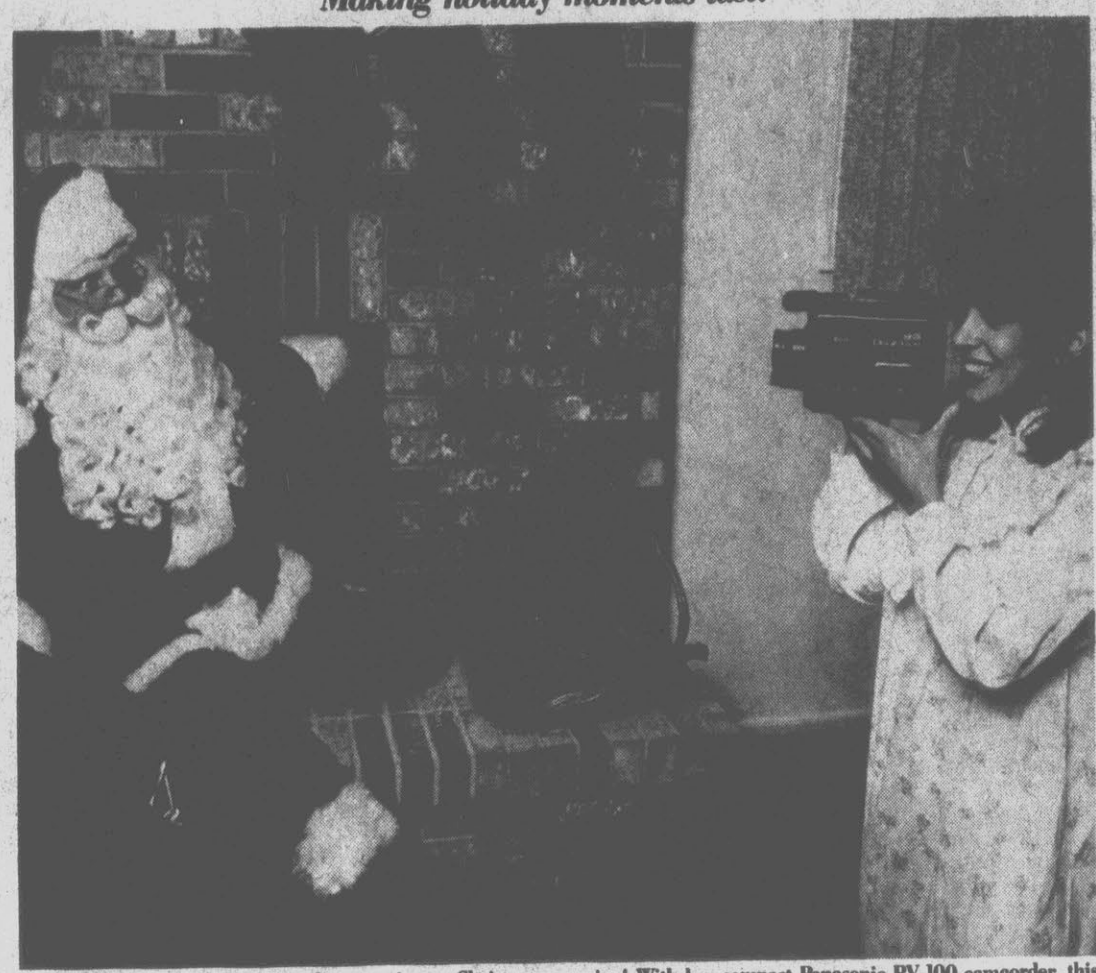
And for that favorite little boy in the family, why not begin an old-fashioned train set, adding a car or two each year.

For the grandpa who loves to smoke pipes, you might want to add to whatever pipes he may have collected by presenting him with one from a different country each year.

Uniquely yours

Whatever the gifting tradition you choose may be, you can be certain that it will be special, because it will be your own, and because it will keep the magic of Christmas alive for those you love, year after year.

Making holiday moments last!



THIS TIME it's Santa who gets a big surprise on Christmas morning! With her compact Panasonic PV-100 camcorder, this young lady has the jolly old elf just where she wants him—in focus and being recorded. The PV-100, which weighs only 3.1 pounds without batteries, utilizes small VHS-C cassettes that are made fully compatible with standard VHS recorders by an included adaptor. The Panasonic camcorder also features a high-speed shutter, a ½-inch CCD solid-state image sensor for excellent resolution, and seven lux light sensitivity for outstanding low light recording.

This year, Santa might have a special gift—an easy-to-use personal computer

Personal computers (PCs) that are easier to use and more powerful than ever are increasingly finding their way into the American lifestyle.

Unlike earlier home computers that behaved more as toys than productivity tools, these new systems are as powerful as most business computers, yet are simple enough to be used by a child.

"A computer could be the best investment you ever make in yourself or your family, so you'll want one that is simple to use, yet powerful enough to grow with your changing needs," according to John Frank, president of Zenith Data Systems, a major supplier of PCs to home, college and business users.

Designing a powerful personal computer that is simple to understand without hours of training is a significant development, and some new models—such as Zenith's "eaZy pc"—fill the bill, Frank said.

"In the past, novice computer users spent hours or even days laboring over the massive owner's manual, just to get started," Frank said. "The eager and impatient would jump right in and quickly loose their footing in all the computer terminology and commands."

Now, many PCs have instructions that are simple enough for elementary school students to understand. For example, the eaZy pc offers step-by-step directions right on the screen, so there is no need to thumb through reams of papers to find out what keys to press next.

Simple to use

As a result, families that have never used a computer before can be up and running virtually any software program written for PC/XT-compatible systems in only a few minutes.

The new simple-to-use PCs are as powerful as most office computers, which allows them to keep pace with future generations of educational and business software.

Personal computers can benefit the whole family. Writing becomes much easier and more enjoyable on a computer.

In fact, some software programs can teach proper spelling and punctuation right on the screen. This can allow children to get ahead in classwork and report writing, Frank said.

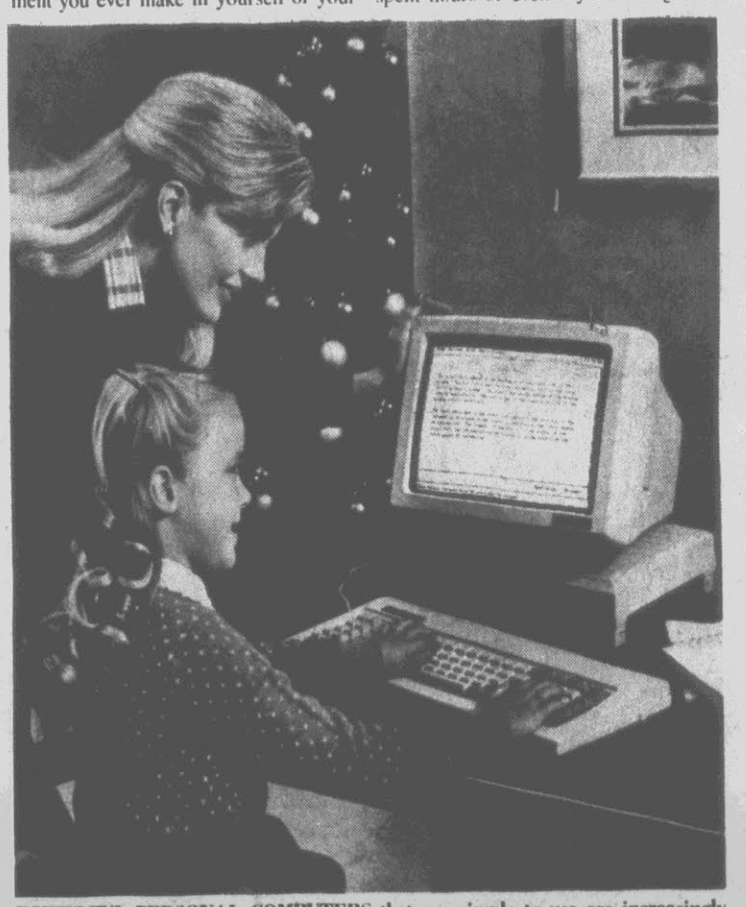
Many computers are purchased to help out with work taken home from the office. Late nights at the office can be minimized if work can be brought home on a floppy disk and completed or continued at home. This also can lead to higher productivity.

Easy on the eyes

Some new computers such as the eaZy pc are easy on the eyes by offering a larger 14-inch screen that displays black characters on a white background—just like a piece of paper.

The eaZy pc uses new, smaller 3½-inch floppy disks. These disks hold twice as much information as the larger 5¼-inch floppy disks that are widely in use today.

Most computer companies are moving to these smaller disks because of their higher storage capability, according to Frank.



POWERFUL PERSONAL COMPUTERS that are simple to use are increasingly finding their way into the American lifestyle. Many of these new computers—such as the "eaZy pc" from Zenith—offer on-screen instructions that are simple enough for elementary school students to use.

Winemaker...make me a perfect match

Does the mere sight of mistletoe innocently dangling in your florist's storefront make you break out into a cold sweat? Are you tempted to decline holiday dinner invitations because you can't bear the thought of facing your host empty-handed?

To avoid the Christmas shopping rush, do you plan vacations far away from friends and family during the holiday season? Is your idea of a personal gift a monogrammed fruitcake?

Let Paul Masson Vineyards give the sugarplum fairies in your pounding head a rest. This year, you can leisurely and confidently choose all of your gifts in one afternoon, in one store.

Since no two people are alike, your gifts shouldn't be either: Paul Masson offers a wide selection of award-winning wines which complement the personality of your recipient.

• The Sophisticates—These people are perfect. Their hair and dress are impeccable. Their life is a page out of Emily Post's book of etiquette. For them, only fine champagne will do.

Seek out Paul Masson's Centennial Cuvée, the vintage sparkling wine which celebrates a century of winemaking excellence...or look for any of the other champagnes by Paul Masson.

• Weight Watchers—For these calorie-counters, the very thought of holiday festivities is enough to add inches to their waistlines. Everything in their life is measured.

At a mere 55 calories per glass, the Light Chablis offers an elegant alternative to other "full-bodied" wines and liquors.

• Trend-Setters—These stylish individuals always seem to be fashionably ahead of the times. They've already been where everyone else is going. For them, Cabernet Blanc and White Zinfandel are current favorites, and are a natural companion to their chic holiday soirées.

• The Traditionalists—On the first day of every holiday season the traditionalist will give his or her loved ones two turtle doves and a partridge in a pear tree. For these people, times never seem to change.

Give yourself the gift of time: A gift for all seasons

There is little doubt that time is one of life's most precious gifts. This holiday season, as you hurry through stores contemplating what gifts to get friends, family and business associates, consider giving yourself a gift as well—a gift that can actually enhance the quality of life by organizing your time.

Time management, from both a personal and a professional standpoint, is a virtual necessity in today's fast-paced, fever-pitched world.

From meetings, business trips and project deadlines, to all those pressing family-oriented activities (dinner dates, shopping and "quality time" for the kids included), life can be a complicated, hectic maze of responsibilities.

And for the busy business person or dual-career woman managing a home as well as a job, it can be a nightmare.

Wouldn't it be great to find a single tool that could help organize the whole ball of wax—both professional and personal activities so that you wouldn't have to worry about finding the time to get it all done?

Such a tool exists, and it may well be the best gift you could ever give yourself, a friend or a loved one.

You can give yourself the gift of time, or more precisely the gift of time management, by giving yourself the Day-Timer planner/organizer system.

It is a simple, comprehensive pocket or desk-sized system that allows each Day-Timer user to record and consolidate all the information he or she would want or need to remember at any time.

"The real secret to getting more out of life, to enjoying more free time, is to control time rather than to let it control you," said Robert C. Dorney, renowned time management expert and co-founder of Day-Timers, Inc., producer and marketer of the nation's most popular time management tools and systems.

Birthdays, anniversaries, projects, mortgage payments, gas mileage, personal and business phone numbers, deadlines, priorities, expenses—anything and everything that is worth doing or recalling at a later date has a place in the Day-Timer system.

"Men and women, no matter their age, occupation or lifestyle, wish they had more time, when all they really need is a way to make better use of the time they already have," said Dorney.

"People allow their lives to be more complicated than need be. Time, as elusive as it is, can't be saved up or stored.

"There are only 24 hours in a day," Dorney continued. "But, when time is properly managed, we can reduce much of the stress in our lives, do the things we really enjoy doing, increase our personal productivity by leaps and bounds, and concentrate our energies on achieving our most important goals and objectives."

The Day-Timer system, whose devoted customers now exceed three million people throughout the world, resembles a simple "pocket secretary"—a portable office, so to speak.

Yet through the development and refinement of many different daily and weekly formats, in sizes to fit pocket, purse or brief case, and offering a host of optional accessories, the Day-Timer system is totally flexible and far more personal than any other planner/organizer system on the market today.

Each and every Day-Timer system comes with easy step-by-step instructions and helpful suggestions for how to best organize and prioritize one's daily activities.

Day-Timer time management systems are available only through the mail. They are not sold in any stores.

To receive a free copy of the 1987 full-color Day-Timer Holiday Gift Catalog, write Day-Timers, Allentown, PA 18001, or call toll-free, 800/523-9474.

Particularly during the hectic holiday season, we are all reminded how little time we have to do the things we enjoy most.

This holiday season, make a resolution to bring in the new year with less worry, less stress and a lot more freedom to do what you want with life's most precious gift.

This holiday, enrich your life...give yourself the gift of time.

THE MOST INNOVATIVE CREATION in watch design since the second hand: Fido Dido watches by Sutton. Four black and white styles all feature the striking Fido Dido graphic with the Fido Credo inscribed on the wrist band. Suggested retail: $40.

Fashion watches with dazzling graphics are great holiday gifts

This year, watches have moved from telling time to making a major fashion statement. Due to the vast selection of low to moderately priced watches, many enthusiasts are wearing several on each wrist!

According to Accent magazine, the leading trade publication for fashion jewelry and watches, over 105 million fashion watches were purchased in the United States in 1986.

"Watch sales continue to increase," says Mitch Plotnick, editor-in-chief. "We estimate an eight percent growth rate alone over 1985."

Wearable art

Renowned artist Peter Max has designed the latest in wearable art with the reproduction of 16 miniature paintings on colorful watch dials by Sutton Time.

The Maxwatch™, designed for the art enthusiast and the fashion conscious, is thin and elegant with chic leather bands. Originally available only at the art gallery, vivid Max art will stand out on any wrist.

Another attention-getter is Fido Dido™, the striking black and white graphic character with hair standing on end which uses the absence of color to get noticed.

Fido watches create a whole new concept in telling time, featuring a dial within a dial and the Fido Credo—the philosophy behind the face—inscribed on the band.

Termed a modern-day Everyman, each of the four outrageous Fido Dido watch styles is designed for that little bit of Fido in everyone.

From outrageous to hot, Sun East, a colorful graphic approach for the active lifestyle, brings the sun and surf to timepieces.

Bright collectible styles entitled Tropicbleu, Beach, Sea and Wave are manufactured by Eta, the makers of Swatch, which first introduced watches as a fashion accessory.

Just for the fun of it are Comic Time watches by Sutton. Each watch in the series features a complete comic strip of favorite cartoon characters including Nancy and her pal Sluggo, Robotman, Blondie, Hagar the Horrible, Hi and Lois and Beetle Bailey.

Comic Time watches are sure to appeal to the young at heart but, for the truly young, there's the Garfield plush watch.

This miniature plush Garfield sits on a fuzzy orange band and lifts up to reveal a digital timepiece. Kids love it, and it's the perfect way for the little ones to get in on the wristwatch craze.

Lots to watch out for

There's a lot to watch out for in timepieces for the holidays this year. By giving the gift of time to all your family and friends, you'll be remembered throughout the new year with each tick of the second hand.

JUST IN TIME FOR CHRISTMAS, Koss Corporation unveils the latest in infrared technology. The Kordlesspeaker™, has no speaker wires and cords, making it easily moved and installed in minutes.

Ideal gift for audiophiles, cordless speakers boast infrared technology

Ever since the makers of consumer electronic gadgetry discovered infrared light, they have feverishly developed many new products and applications using this technology. Their work has brought infrared light into millions of American homes.

It is infrared technology which makes possible wireless remote controls for television, VCRs, compact disc players and a host of other electronic items.

These and other products, such as cordless stereo headphones, have "unplugged" audio listeners and video watchers into a new world of convenience and freedom.

The latest use of infrared light, just unveiled by Koss Corporation, the world's leading manufacturer of stereophones, brings infrared technology to loudspeakers.

Unlike traditional speakers, they can easily be moved to different locations within a room in a mere matter of minutes. No longer is it necessary to drill holes in walls or hide speaker wires underneath a carpet.

The Kordlesspeaker™ is similar to other infrared items, as it utilizes a "line-of-sight" transmission of invisible infrared light. A transmitter converts audio signals from a stereo receiver, amplifier or television headphone jack into a beam of infrared light.

Then, small receivers (diodes) located on the speakers pick up the beam of light and reproduce the sound. The speakers are powered by D cell batteries.

With the convenience infrared technology offers, it's not surprising the electronics industry is maximizing its use in everyday household items.

Keeping an eye on Santa

WHEN THE WEATHER OUTSIDE IS FRIGHTFUL, nothing is more delightful than cuddling up in front of a Panasonic monitor/receiver television and VCR. The CTJ-2790R OmniArt TV features a large 27-inch diagonal screen, advanced Surround Sound circuitry, 155-channel cable compatibility and a stardust black cabinet. The PV-4768 video cassette recorder offers VHS Hi-Fi stereo, the Panasonic Hi-Tech 4 video head system and a built-in 25 watt per channel stereo amplifier, so there's no need for an independent hi-fi system hook-up.

Exotic gifts will entrance the fragrance and cosmetic lover, this holiday season

While scarves, ties, bathrobes and books are the standard fare of most holiday gift lists, this season, why not break with tradition and introduce the exotic into the festivities? Give items that reflect the centuries-old traditions of Japanese culture.

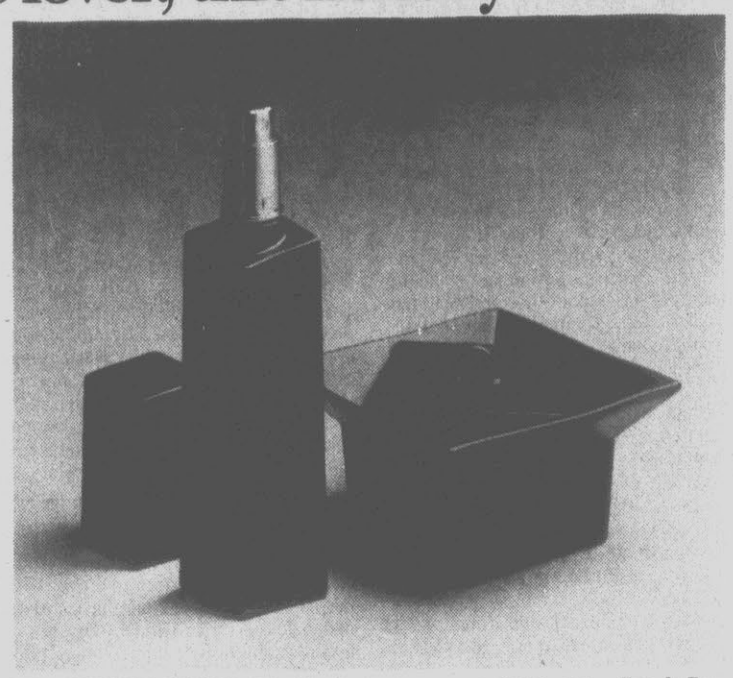
The following gift suggestions, provided by Tokyo-based Shiseido Cosmetics, one of the world's largest beauty companies, will introduce your family and friends to the mystery, romance and untold nature of Japan:

For the fragrance and cosmetics lover, Shiseido's 1987 gift collection offers a selection of fine fragrances, treatment products, soaps and makeup sets that incorporate the practices of ancient Japanese culture with the advances of modern day technology.

The highlights of the collection are Shiseido's Spirit of Zen Eau de Parfum and Room Fragrance in specially designed ceramic containers.

Demonstrating Japanese craftsmanship and philosophy in concept and presentation, the scent, a soft floral fragrance, takes its inspiration from Zen Buddhist traditions and ceremonies, while the containers reflect both modern day production technology and the age-old tradition of Japanese ceramics.

The decanter is refillable and the box will serve as an ideal holder for jewelry, potpourri and mementos—both will be exquisite reminders of the gift long after the holiday has passed.



THIS HOLIDAY SEASON, Shiseido Cosmetics presents Spirit of Zen Eau de Parfum and Room Fragrance in specially crafted ceramic containers, reflecting both modern day production technology and the age-old tradition of ceramics. Demonstrating Japanese fine craftsmanship and philosophy in concept and presentation, the scent, a soft floral fragrance, takes its inspiration from Zen Buddhist tradition and ceremonies, while the containers reveal the sense of precision, order and beauty that is Japan. Spirit of Zen Eau de Parfum—$40.00; Spirit of Zen Room Fragrance—$28.00.

The perfect presents for active people: Eyewear designed with sports in mind

Sporting goods top many Christmas lists, but sunglasses—an important accessory for outdoor enthusiasts—are not traditionally thought of as a holiday gift.

As America's love affair with fitness continues and the popularity of outdoor activities rises dramatically each year, the number and variety of sports have become amazingly diverse.

Since every sport has its own requirements for optimal eye protection and sight enhancement, the sports boom gives holiday shoppers an easy solution to the age-old what-to-buy problem: Protective eyewear designed with the needs of specific active sports in mind.

The glamorous, fun or dashing sunglasses from high-quality eyewear companies prove that serious eye protection and cosmetic appeal are not mutually exclusive. Gift-giving is also simplified by the unisex appeal of most styles.

Carrera, a leading manufacturer of sports eyewear, incorporates the latest in lens and frame technology in designing goggles and sunglasses that provide 100 percent protection from ultraviolet rays, and that meet the rigorous demands of active sports.

Skiers face a variety of unpredictable weather conditions, and need goggles to protect their eyes from the elements.

Reflective glare off snow reduces visibility and causes eye straining and squinting; rushing wind causes tearing and blinking.

Changing weather alters the appearance of the terrain (for example, clouds reduce depth perception by creating flat light), and skiing without goggles during a blinding snowfall is nearly impossible.

Carrera makes a variety of goggle lenses that accommodate different kinds of weather. The all-around Softsight is good for both bright sun and cloudy skies; Goldgreen enhances contrast and defines uneven terrain during rain, snow or fog; and Ultrasight cuts reflection and glare on very overcast and especially bright days, while enhancing natural color reproduction and preventing eye fatigue.

A special double-lens construction prevents condensation and fog from forming and causing blurred vision during bad weather.

Snug-fitting frames with foam cushioning and wide adjustable headbands that prevent uncomfortable face pressure are important, and aerating vents on the sides and top of the goggles are necessary to allow air to circulate for anti-fogging and clear visibility.

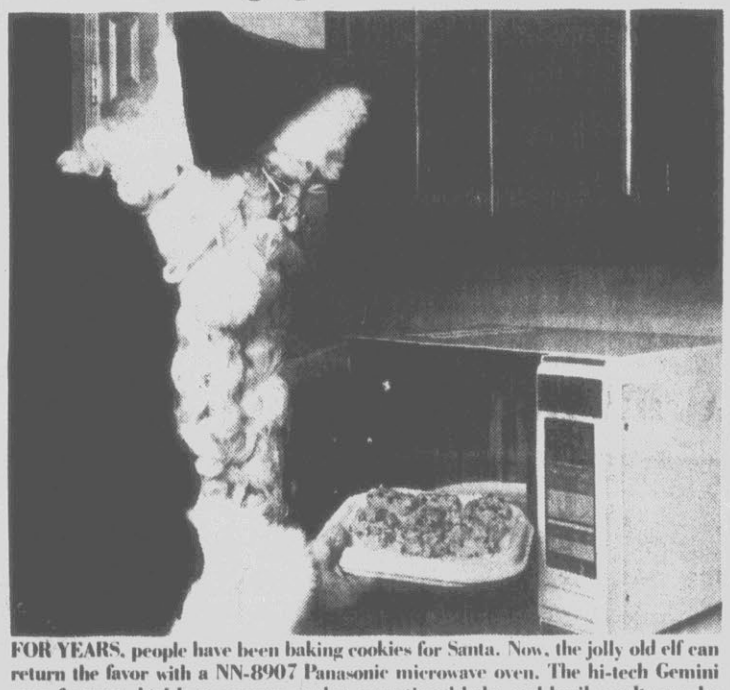
Bicycling's popularity has risen enormously lately, and equipment geared to the sport is flooding the market: Skin-tight Lycra spandex shorts, aerodynamically-designed helmets for safety, and padded fingerless gloves for blister-free palms and a sure grip.

In eyewear, bicycle enthusiasts need sun protection and good peripheral vision, as well as protection from wind and flying dirt and debris.

Shield sunglasses, with their wrap-style continuous lens, are an ideal solution (and their sleek design is very fashion-forward).

Carrera's racing-striped Sunrise shield features an unbreakable polycarbonate lens with broad temple connections that protects against glare and wind from the sides, and a special nosepiece that gives a comfortable, pressure-free fit.

Cooking up something special



FOR YEARS, people have been baking cookies for Santa. Now, the jolly old elf can return the favor with a NN-8907 Panasonic microwave oven. The hi-tech Gemini oven features dual heat sources so that exceptional bake and broil results can be achieved, in addition to the standard microwave function. Flat heating elements in the unit's ceiling and floor provide for even browning on everything from Santa's cookies to Mrs. Claus' holiday roast. The NN-8907 also offers a Euro-style cabinet, Genius sensor automatic cooking cycles and six power levels.

The unique holiday present that is sure to enchant the entire family: A colorful, exotic tropical fish aquarium

Of all Christmas presents, perhaps the most beloved is a living gift such as an aquarium filled with tropical fish. Colorful, varied and sure to be enjoyed by the lucky recipient, it's also easy to maintain and adds a unique decorative touch to any family room, living room or den.

In fact, a recent study by researchers at the University of Pennsylvania concluded it is even a benefit in relieving stress.

Bestowing a home aquarium upon a friend, relative or your own children has many positive benefits. Throughout the U.S., 10 million aquariums are being enjoyed in homes, offices, restaurants and hotels.

In order to select the best aquarium for your money, one that's filled with colorful tropical fish and easy to maintain, it's a good idea to do a little investigating.

Reliable source

First, you will want to locate a good dealer in your area. If you have a friend who has an aquarium, ask for a reference; otherwise the phone book lists most tropical fish retailers.

It is advisable to purchase a book that provides complete instructions on setting up and maintaining an aquarium.

One basic rule to follow, however, is to buy the largest aquarium possible since, the greater the water environment, the less chance of water problems.

If you receive an aquarium as a gift, you must assume all the responsibilities for maintenance.

When determining where to put your new aquarium, you should consider several factors. You will not want to put it in direct sunlight, since this will cause algae to grow on the glass and plastic accessories.

You will also not want to put it on your best carpeting since, during water changes, it is possible for some water to splash on the floor. And you should also be sure to put your aquarium on a firm stand since water is heavy.

After you have decided on the aquarium, your first accessory will be a tightly fitting canopy cover equipped with a fluorescent fixture. Fluorescent fixtures throw off a cool light and will not cause fluctuations in the water temperature.

While we are on the subject of water temperature, tropical fish require an environment maintained at around 75°F (25°C). You will therefore need a good heater and an aquarium thermometer.

A recent development in this technology is the liquid crystal digital thermometer which affixes to the outside of the aquarium yet measures most accurately the water temperature.

You will also need a quality filter. Your dealer can give you proper advice since there are several types of filters and your needs will vary with the size of your aquarium. If you are going to keep a lot of fish, you will also want a separate air pump to add oxygen to the water.

Planning decor

Decorating an aquarium is great fun. There are multi-colored gravels, highly decorative backgrounds and hundreds of ornaments, as well as plastic plants so real in reproduction it's almost impossible to distinguish them from live plants.

Most good retailers will have a complete assortment and your selection should be based on the size of your aquarium and the amount of money you decide to spend.

Once you have set up your aquarium, you should add a chlorine neutralizer to the water and add only a few fish initially. These few fish will help develop the proper biological conditions necessary to maintain a fully stocked aquarium.

After three to four weeks, assuming everything is functioning properly, you can then go ahead and add the rest of your fish.

Aquarium maintenance is a lot simpler than people think. Every two weeks a partial water change (not greater than 20 percent) by siphoning the water from the bottom of the aquarium is all that is required.

A device called the Hydro-Clean allows an efficient siphoning by separating the debris in the gravel and removing it with the water from the aquarium. On a monthly basis, your filter will require minimal maintenance. That's all there is.

NOVEL AND ENTERTAINING, an aquarium filled with tropical fish makes an ideal Christmas present for that very special someone. Adults will appreciate it as an eyecatching conversation piece while, for children, an aquarium provides an excellent learning experience which is also an enjoyable hobby. If you're interested in purchasing an aquarium, the experts at Tetra Sales are offering an informative full-color illustrated starter booklet. Two cameras for price of one

This holiday season, you can give the camera enthusiast in your life a fully automatic 35mm camera that shoots wide and close up—without changing lenses!

The remarkable Konica MR-70LX is like having two cameras in one. The fully automatic 35mm camera features a dual-mode lens system.

The Konica MR-70LX is so automatic all you have to do is point and shoot. Besides focusing on subjects automatically, the camera will set the appropriate exposure, film, and shutter speeds, load the film, wind and rewind the film and indicate when the light is too low. It even features a built-in electronic self-timer!

The Konica MR-70LX has an LCD window display that shows you everything you need to know to take great pictures—frame count, flash range, battery power, battery loaded, auto load signal, auto load mistake and reload, selftimer, film end, rewind, and a rewind completed and remove film indicator.

The camera also boasts a new built-in electronic auto flash system that is operable in only three seconds.

In short, the Konica MR-70LX does it all—ensuring great photographs every time, all the time!

THE FULLY AUTOMATIC 35mm Konica MR-70LX features built-in 38mm wide-angle and 70mm telephoto lens. Other features include auto-load/auto-wind/auto-re-wind, automatic pop-up flash indicator and quick charge flash (three seconds), and built-in lens cover.

SANTA IS TOO BUSY to write out his gift list so this year he has turned the job over to one of his elves. He's preparing the list while speaking into his Panasonic RR-980 microcassette dictating machine. The convenient hand control can be used for either recording or playback purposes, and the voice activation feature allows the unit to record when he speaks and to pause when he does. Later, his elf makes use of the Panasonic RR-970 transcriber to finish the job. The transcriber includes a headset, foot controller and feather-touch controls. Tape speed can be increased or decreased by up to 20 percent, and automatic backspace control gives foot-controlled rewind at variable time lengths.

Stunning ornaments add to collection

From a very simple beginning, six glass balls and 12 yarn figures, a new holiday tradition of ornament collecting was born.

Until 1973, when Hallmark Cards, Inc., introduced the first line of Keepsake Ornaments, Americans had little choice in tree ornaments.

There were no Tin Locomotives, no Rocking Horses, no Frosty Friends, no Clothespin Soldiers to adorn the tree.

Mass produced, multi-pack glass balls were the standard ornaments, with tinsel, angel hair or garlands used to "dress up" the tree.

Today, Keepsake Ornaments are cherished by collectors for their beauty and quality workmanship. Clara Johnson Scroggins, author of several books and articles on ornament collecting, including the recently released third edition of Hallmark Keepsake Ornaments: A Collector's Guide, began acquiring Keepsake Ornaments in 1973 and has amassed a personal collection of more than 30,000 ornaments.

"Each ornament has a special meaning for me," Scroggins said. "Several of the more valuable ornaments are the 1980 Frosty Friends ornament, now selling to collectors for $500, and the 1982 Holiday Wildlife ornament, now selling for $300 on the secondary market."

Since 1973, Hallmark has continued to expand its collection of Keepsake Ornaments. In 1975, handcrafted ornaments were introduced.

In 1976, to mark the Bicentennial year, Hallmark issued a special dated commemorative ornament and introduced the Baby's First Christmas ornament, which soon became one of the most popular captioned ornaments in the Keepsake line.

The Baby's First ornament was so successful that new commemoratives, including Mother, Love and Grandfather, were added in 1977.

The Keepsake line also has featured designs commemorating special events, including, in 1984, an Olympic Marathon Santa and an Uncle Sam ornament in honor of the Presidential election.

Last year, Hallmark marked the 100th birthday of the Statue of Liberty with a special ornament, and this year Hallmark commemorates the 200th anniversary of the Constitution with a special acrylic ornament, "We The People."

Hallmark continues the tradition of fine collectibles with the 1987 Keepsake Collection. The Christmas Time Mime, made of hand-painted fine porcelain with a wooden display stand, portrays a "Santa mime" with a limited edition run of 24,700 pieces.

Christmas Is Gentle, depicting two lambs in a delicate basket, is made of bone china, each individually hand-numbered, with a limited-edition run of 24,700.

A special edition Favorite Santa will especially appeal to collectors because of the intricate and nostalgic design.

And Holiday Heirloom is the first in a series of crystal bells in silver plated frames with a limited edition of 34,600.

There are still more surprises to be found this year, with Keepsake Magic Ornaments featuring light, motion and changing scenes.

Chris Mouse Glow is third in a series of lighted ornaments featuring mice and lights, and A Christmas Carol is second in a series of lighted ornaments featuring classic Christmas tales. Perfect Portrait is second in a series of light and motion ornaments

For the holiday season: Why not use your imagination to celebrate with a light touch?

If the pressures of holiday shopping and preparation are dragging you down again this year, here's a refreshing thought that can help relieve your stress, restore your sanity, and allow you to enjoy the seasonal magic as much as you did when you were a child—keep it light!

Why surrender these promising holidays to the heavyweights of years gone by—a new bicycle for Junior ("some assembly required"), Great-Aunt Jane's infamous plum pudding with her appropriately-named hard sauce—when you can create an ambiance of levity and excitement by using your imagination and thinking light.

Here are some ideas to get you started.

For dad, remember that this season reaches its climax with an eight letter word: Football. How about giving him foam for Christmas? A keg of light beer is the perfect accompaniment to "the thrill of victory and the agony of defeat."

Or, if he has fallen prey to the revival of elegance, give him a sleek, slim lighter from Dunhill or S.I. Dupont.

Gifts she'll enjoy

Mom will enjoy gifts that pamper her gently and subtly. Neutrogena's Skin Care Elegance Set contains handy one-ounce bottles of five lightweight but very effective products: Liquid cleanser and moisturizer for the face, bath and shower gel, lotion and oil for the body, all to silken and soften away winter dryness.

If she has a favorite fragrance, give her the light perfume version which spans the gap between perfume and toilet water, making it ideal for all occasions—Eau de Givenchy is a good choice.

The lady in your life will revel in light, feminine gifts. Of course, diamonds are always welcome and are a constant reminder of your love.

Luxurious skin softener

Question: When is heavy "light?"

When it's Neutrogena's Gallon of Rainbath Shower and Bath Gel. This rich golden gel bursts into riotous bubbles that perceptibly soften skin after only one use, leaving it deliciously scented. To complement: How about the lightest silk and lace teddy from Victoria's Secret?

For your man: Start with the wonderful lightplay of a kaleidoscope. Then satisfy his elegant side with a fine silk evening scarf or an ultrathin watch.

Teenagers are hardest to shop for. Look into the newest lightweight ski clothes or bulk-free silk thermals for your winter sports enthusiasts.

A daughter will enjoy the surprise of Neutrogena's Soap-by-the-Yard, to cleanse skin gently and rinse away quickly. Also consider antique crystal drop earrings to accessorize her wardrobe.

Your son will enjoy the kitsch of a giant inflatable dinosaur that stretches up to six feet.

For younger children who aspire to Spielberg's trade, the new inexpensive black and white video recorders will be a hands-down favorite.

Brighten an uncle's holiday with a pair of light-catching brandy snifters and a box of the first white chocolate cordials ever, from Godiva, of course.

And give your favorite aunt Neutrogena's Facial Care Classics trio—a great travel set including soap, liquid cleanser and moisturizer, all super light on the skin. She will also enjoy the cheerful tinkling of a delicate glass wind chime.

Keep grandma soft and cozy with Neutrogena's Winter-Care Polar Bear, a plush, white, T-shirted fellow who is an expert in the art of cuddling, paired with a generous bottle of Norwegian Formula Emulsion to lightly, but effectively soften her skin.

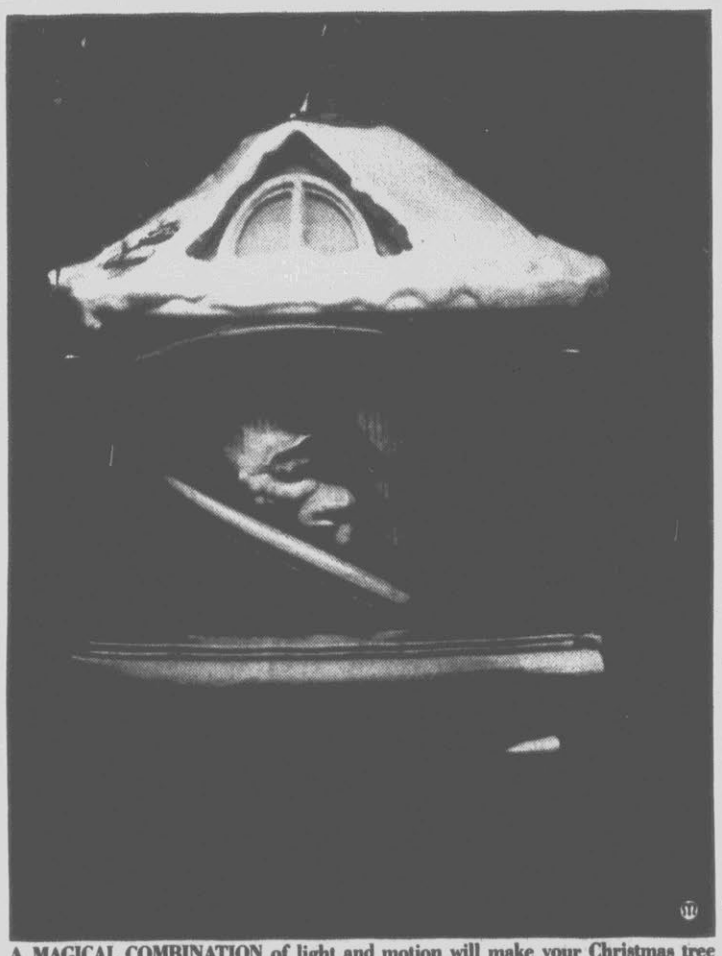
Something for everyone

For those who need special gifts, consider a portable laptop computer and travel desk for the recent graduate; a soft down comforter for newlyweds; and, for your most gracious host and hostess, a basket of Neutrogena Guest Soaps, a soft mohair throw, or a bottle of champagne.

For visitors who drop by unexpectedly, you may wish to stock up on tiny Neutrogena Winter-Care Mini Bear ornaments in dark brown with a one-ounce bottle of Rainbath, light brown with a liquid cleanser, and white with Norwegian Formula Emulsion.

In all your gifting, the lightest touch can create an atmosphere of fantasy and festivity throughout the holidays.

Consider these suggestions to help ease your shopping dilemmas, or let them spark your own imagination for the most dazzling holiday ever.



A MAGICAL COMBINATION of light and motion will make your Christmas tree come to life. Created by Hallmark Keepsake artist Ken Crow, this innovative "Christmas Morning" ornament depicts two children in pajamas sliding down a bannister. This unique 4 5/16 inch by 2 5/8 inch ornament attaches to a miniature light string for continuous motion, and is priced at $24.50.

Christmas greetings—say it with socks!

A GIFT TO GIVE TO YOURSELF and to your loved ones, Christmas socks from Camp will brighten the holiday cheer.

Yule gift of "resort" footwear can lead to a Caribbean vacation for two

With winter's approach come thoughts of holiday gift-giving, as well as where to go for a relaxing, warm winter vacation. Sun-drenched beaches, cool ocean breezes and romantic moonlit nights would be an inviting "escape."

However, how can you subtly suggest such an ideal vacation to the man in your life? Through his feet, of course!

Mesh Cooler footwear could solve both your gift-giving and hint-dropping dilemmas. Colorful, lightweight Caribbean Coolers from Hush Puppies would look terrific dancing the night away, lounging by the pool or strolling along a beach. It's fashion footwear that fits comfortably and stylishly into virtually any occasion.

Don't worry about trying to match Hush Puppies Caribbean Coolers to your mate's "resort" wardrobe. These attractive shoes are stocked in stores year-round, and come in colors of navy, white, natural and vibrant print patterns.

The comfortable casualness of these Coolers perfectly complements everything from Hawaiian print swim trunks to khaki shorts, denim jeans to dress slacks.

As further enticement, you may want to slip a few travel brochures inside the Coolers' shoe box to be certain that your "future travel companion" realizes he's received much more than a distinctive gift of comfortable footwear!

UNIQUE HOLIDAY GIFTS, these Hush Puppies Caribbean Coolers make terrific hint-droppers for winter vacations. Stocked in stores year-round, these lightweight mesh Coolers are available in natural, navy, white and colorful print pattern styles, and in a wide variety of shoe sizes and widths.

DON'T WORRY that you lost your other glove last year. Chances are that either a friend or a relative will buy you a new pair, like these Isotoner gloves, this year. Their one-size fit, and wide range of styles and colors, make them the best-selling and most appreciated gift of the season.

You've got a great gift on your hands for the holidays

It lies on the street in the dead of winter, is found helpless on the back seat of a cab, car or train, and waits aimlessly for its partner to return.

Once happy and warm, it's now ragged and lost forever. It's really sad when you lose a glove.

Why is it that so many people lose their gloves each year? According to Aris Isotoner, leading glove manufacturer, almost half of all adults buy a new pair of gloves each year, and 75 percent of all gloves are purchased as Christmas gifts.

So for those of you who think that a pair of gloves is "too ordinary" a gift to give at Christmas time, think again — you'll be doing a great favor to your friends and relatives who find it hard to admit that they lost the pair (or the one hand) that you gave them last year.

Suggestions for making your Christmas shopping less hectic

If you are one of those people who loves Christmas shopping but hates department store crowds, and if just the thought of piling into an overcrowded elevator with your arms overloaded with packages makes you cringe, then the advice that is usually given is to shop way ahead of time.

But for many, it just doesn't feel like Christmas unless they shop during the true holiday season, when shops are filled with garlands and bows, and Santa seems to be everywhere.

For those who want to enjoy finding those "just right" gifts without losing their Christmas spirit, the following shopping tips will be helpful:

• Museum gift shops are a wonderful place to find beautiful, unusual gifts. Especially if you visit the museum in the morning, you'll find books galore, along with everything from reproductions of Egyptian jewelry, to scarves, glassware, and beautiful prints of some of your favorite works of art.

You'll find all of this and more without having to battle the crowds that you'll find in the department store:

• Try hunting for gifts in small local shops, such as the pipe and tobacco shop for dad, or the liquor store for Uncle Harry.

The nearby lingerie store may have the perfect silk camisole for mom and, for the gourmet cook on your gift list, the housewares store around the corner will have all sorts of kitchen gadgets.

• While you are doing your day to day shopping, you can pick up small gifts as you go.

You'll find perfume for grandma at the drug store, and perhaps a potted poinsettia at the grocery store for your son's teacher.

• Another alternative is to purchase your gifts through mail order catalogs, where you'll find everything from clothing to bed quilts to kitchen gadgets.

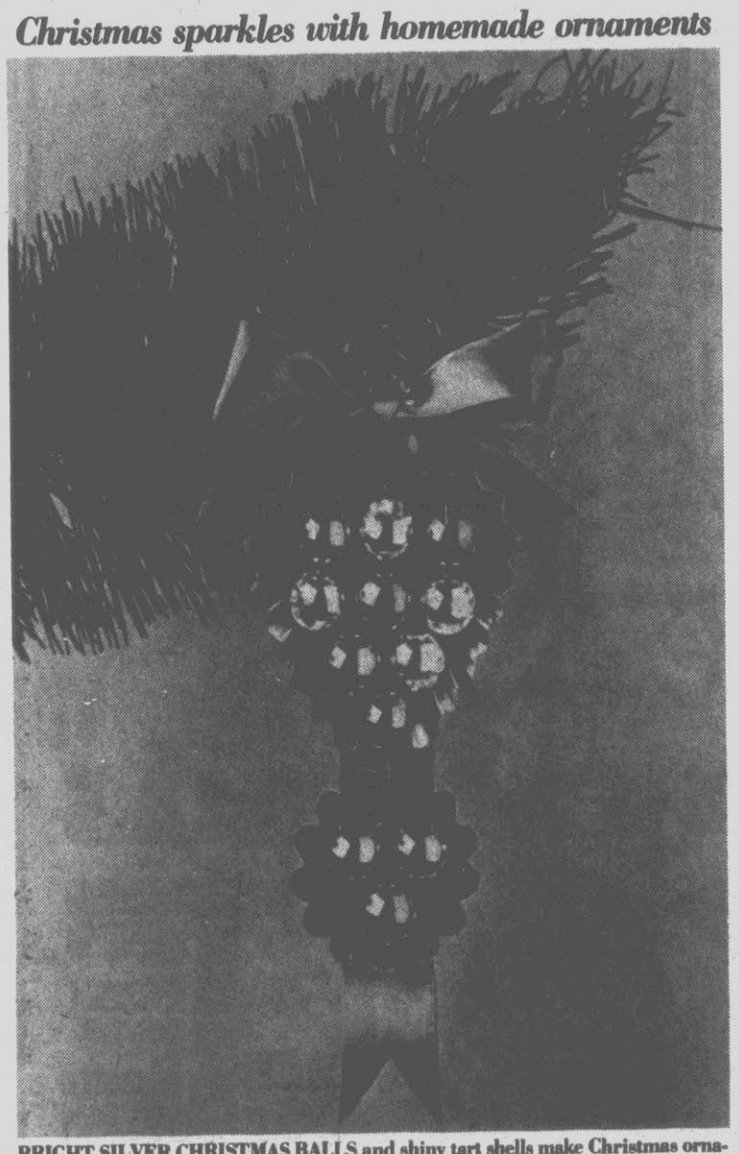
KIDS CAN RECORD THE JOY OF THE HOLIDAY SEASON on video this year with the PXL 2000—the first camcorder system designed especially for kids. This "breakthrough" video system produces 10 minutes of both video images and sound using standard 90-minute audio tapes. The PXL 2000 camcorder system by Fisher-Price, scheduled to hit toy store shelves this fall, includes the camcorder, a 4.5-inch black and white TV, a high-bias audio cassette, batteries, instruction booklet and hook-up accessories. The system will retail for approximately $225.

Christmas sparkles with homemade ornaments



BRIGHT SILVER CHRISTMAS BALLS and shiny tart shells make Christmas ornaments that will add sparkle to your tree. Fill the bottom of the tart shells with Elmer's Tacky Adhesive and place miniature Christmas balls inside to fill the shell. After drying, glue the backs of the shells to a green satin ribbon. Add a loop of heavy thread or yarn to the back of the ribbon for hanging, and a red holiday bow for a colorful touch.

The gift of sound

A GIFT FOR DAD'S CAR... If a sports car is out of the question, dad can still drive in class with Sony's new CDX-R88 car stereo that combines a CD player and tuner with 25W+25W stereo amplifier in one affordable package. The CDX-R88 features such technological advancements as the Single Aspheric Optical Lens, Unilinear Converter™ System with 2X over sampling digital filter and an auxiliary input which allows easy connection to an optional ½-DIN sized XK-8D cassette player or EVX-S8 Mobile Video 8® deck. Suggested retail price of the CDX-R88 is $750.

Catalog offers wide selection of support hose and other products

Just in time for holiday gift-giving for those who are special with special needs...you can order the ideal health care products, effortlessly, by mail, for those on your list requiring such items.

Anyone who has vainly searched retail drug and department stores to find his or her favorite support or elastic stockings, as well as other hard-to-find gifts, will welcome the opportunity to shop through the "Support Plus" catalog.

Drugstores all over the United States have discontinued offering a choice in support stockings and pantyhose because very few stores can sell an adequate quantity to make carrying the inventory worthwhile.

"That's where mail order makes sense," according to Eloise Janos, director of Customer Service for Support Plus.

"One warehouse serves 100,000 customers, while a retail store serves a neighborhood."

This holiday season, show you personally care by ordering from the vast array of health care products featured in the Support Plus catalog, which offers free shipping on Christmas gifts.

Send for your free copy today by writing to: Support Plus, 99 West Street, Box 500-M5, Medfield, MA 02052.

WHEN FILLING Christmas stockings, sheer support knee-high hose, featured in the Support Plus catalog, provides an ideal gift for those with special needs.

Bottoms up: "Fun-soled" athletic shoes for children

Colored hearts, cartoon characters, rhinestones, bright-colored fluorescent soles...the stuff kids' shoes are made of at Christmastime.

"Children love color," reports Frank Fernandez, children's athletic shoe buyer at Kinney Shoes. "The hottest thing today for kids are colored hearts and other figures on the sides of their athletic shoes and shoe bottoms in colors that pop.

"You can bet that most children will be looking for these shoes under their trees on Christmas morning."

Fernandez cites the following favorites for kids' athletic shoes:

- Kids want color—lots of it;
- Boys prefer hi-top basketball shoes with colored stripes;
- Girls adore colored hearts and rhinestones imprinted on their athletic shoes;
- Kids love athletic shoes with glow-in-the-dark characters. And, for parents, glow-in-the-dark is extremely helpful for keeping children safe;
- Velcro fastening tape closures are fun and easy to do for children who are too young to tie shoe laces; and
- Athletic shoes with rubber soles provide lots of cushioning and good comfort.

Kinney, "The Great American Shoe Store," offers the widest selection of quality, brand-name footwear and accessory items for men, women and children—from fashionable dress and casual shoes to high-performance athletic shoes, ballet and jazz shoes, and much more.

Founded in 1894 by George Romanta Kinney, Kinney Shoes now operates more than 1,500 stores throughout the United States, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Preventive maintenance kits top computer gift lists for this year

You need not know anything about computers in order to buy a much needed gift for the computer expert in your family. Do-it-yourself preventive maintenance products are the hot topic among computer users this year.

Three different, inexpensive and easy-to-use kits are available in ample supply this year at computer, stationery and office supply stores. Each contains an assortment of items that will be greatly appreciated by your computer user.

The Stat-Off® Static Control Kit enables computer users to neutralize the static buildup on computers, disks and carpets, that can be the cause of damaged circuitry, data loss, faulty operation and costly down time.

The Falcon Typewriter/Printer Preventive Maintenance Kit is an economical kit designed for cleaning and maintenance of electric and electronic typewriters as well as computer printers.

The "Clean The Machine!"™ Hi-Tech Maintenance Kit, the most comprehensive of the three, contains an assortment of products for static neutralization, as well as equipment cleaning and maintenance.

Spreading the Christmas spirit

With all of the goodwill and togetherness that abound during the holiday season, there's probably no better time than this to share our joy with those who may be less fortunate.

There are so many little ways in which you can bring the magic of Christmas into the lives of youngsters in a children's hospital, or elderly people in a home.

You might want to bring some gingerbread men that you've baked, or some candied apples, to a nearby children's hospital.

If you have a friend or know someone who is a volunteer, you could ask to come along and perhaps read Christmas stories to the kids.

If you don't know someone, you can call the hospital and tell them that you'd like to volunteer to spend some time with the children over the holidays, and they'll be more than happy to arrange something.

Getting together a group of your friends to sing carols at a home for the elderly is another way of spreading the Christmas spirit.

You could also bring ornaments you've made, giving them as small gifts to be hung where people confined to bed can enjoy them.

To spend just one hour singing or reading, to bring a few small toys or some cookies, or to do anything, big or small, that you can think of to share the happiness you feel at Christmas, can make this holiday a lot brighter for someone else.

Planning for the holidays? Don't forget about the kids!

"Children thawing in front of an open fire" is not an exact line from Mel Torme's 1946 Yuletide standard "The Christmas Song," but maybe it should be.

If you think about it, a traditional Christmas wouldn't be complete without rosy-cheeked children, rushing in from the cold after a long day of winter fun to snuggle by the fire.

Mom and dad thawing little numb noses and frozen fingers is a scene as warming to the heart as it is to the body.

Christmastime is often associated with many such family moments. While it is everyone's favorite time of year, the exhilaration of increased merrymaking on the "home front" can be particularly strenuous for young families with children between the ages of "kindergarten scholar" and "teeny-bopper."

The pressures that parents must deal with in keeping their children entertained during this joyous season are monumental.

Roses Inc., representing America's fresh-cut rose growers, suggest the following activities to lower parents' blood pressure, and to ensure that both parents and children enjoy what should be a relaxed and meaningful time.

Deck the halls

Somehow, the happy moments which make Christmas so enchanting wouldn't be as special if we couldn't share the "magic" with others. Holidays are synonymous with reunions and get-togethers with family and friends.

To welcome holiday guests to your home, hang a wreath or swag of Christmas greens with plaid or green bows or ribbons, and candy canes on the front door.

For an extra personalized touch, try adding fresh cut roses and a "treasure" supplied by each family member. The result will be a unique decorative door piece that includes your family's "signature."

Children love being included in grown-up plans! So, be sure to include them on your trip to the flower shop and let them pick out the roses to be used in your home decor. (Remember, if your schedule is a really hectic one, your florist is as near as your telephone and will deliver to your door. Or, you may find fresh roses at your local supermarket and can pick them up as you do your grocery shopping.)

If you are entertaining, let the eldest child supervise setting the dinner table. When plates and silver are arranged, have the "baby of the family" tuck a rose into each napkin at the table.

At the end of the evening, everyone will feel like they have been an important part of the celebration, and each guest can take home a rose as a remembrance of the good time they had.

Brighten every corner of the house by inserting sweetheart roses in tiny, empty, perfume bottles. Sweetheart roses fit perfectly in small hands and, after the roses are prepared, each child can then choose where he or she would like this special holiday decoration to be displayed.

When gathering to decorate the home, remember, roses make any room come alive with red and green holiday hues. Work as a team to lace the staircase banister with a garland of red roses mixed with traditional Christmas greens.

Or, put a red rose in a bud vase by the kitchen sink for Santa's helpers who get "stuck" with the holiday dinner dishes.

Gifts for little hands to give

Fresh roses are the "ultimate" gift for both teenage and younger children to give. Send the "apple of your eye" to school with red roses in a bud vase or a single rose in a "rose bowl" as a gift for a favorite teacher. (Don't forget: Male teachers like roses, too!)

Take your child along with you to call on a "shut-in" friend who can't go out of town this season. A personal visit means so much more when children accompany you.

Prepare a basket of fruit tied up with a big green ribbon and a Christmas red rose for the child to give. This gift, unlike any other, provides nourishment for the body and the soul.

Children attending Christmas services can feel like "big people" by laying a rose on the altar as your family's addition to holiday worship.

If you are invited to pay a visit to the neighbors, let the children spread holiday cheer by giving roses to the host or hostess as a gift of thanks in return for the courtesy and kindness shown throughout the year. Perhaps the rose gift would include one rose for each of your family members, or one per child.

Kids like roses, too!

Roses are unexpected "treats" for small children who help out with Christmas decorating, baking and gift wrapping. Kids of all ages get a thrill out of receiving roses which they can handle, care for and watch develop through their stages of life.

Your child's first vision on Christmas morning should be bright and cheery, so surprise each youngster that holds a place in your heart with a few roses on his or her night stand.

For your little girl's hair, shape bendable wire into a halo. Wrap with green ribbon and insert red roses with baby's breath to complement her holiday attire. Any little "gentleman" would look dashing with a single sweetheart rose and holly sprig boutonniere.

If your family is posing for a photo to send to faraway friends this year, use red roses and holiday greens for the "crowning" touch. Roses are always in season, and are available when you're ready to say "cheese."

On caring

Children and roses both need a little special attention from time to time. Handling and caring for their roses can help build a tender loving care attitude when youngsters are responsible for the rose in their charge.

Here's a few simple tips you can pass on that will help ensure you get the longest life from your roses!

- Any rose that has been out of water long enough for the base end of the stem to dry out will benefit from having an inch or more of the stem end cut off under water with a pair of shears. After making the cut, place the rose in a water-filled container for display.
- Keep your roses out of direct sun and hot drafts.

How to smooth the pre-holiday rush

Every season has its treasures, and winter brings special occasions for pleasant times and thoughtful moments.

With gift-giving a big part of this season, here are some ideas to ease the load on your pocketbook while keeping your calendar as free as possible for the fun times to come.

• Plan—Write things down and carry the list with you everywhere. Each day, check your list, chart your errands and coordinate trips to avoid retracing steps.

After the holidays, don't stop. Keep a running list of gift ideas, and shop too. By next year at this time, you'll have part of your gift shopping completed.

• Be flexible—Don't forget what friends are for. A hectic, busy day may make you feel as if you can't handle interruptions.

Be willing to take the time and savor the real value of people. Gifts are wonderful, but don't let them overcome the true meaning of the season.

• Take time for you—Feeling fatigued? Try these ideas to pep you up or wake you up. Take an early morning walk; give yourself a facial; keep a pitcher of juice or cold water in the refrigerator and don't forget to take vitamins daily.

A quick refresher: Spritz yourself with cologne. Or lie back, put your feet up and think of all the things you have done.

• Try these gift ideas—Tie kitchen gadgets with a bow for a quick gift or stocking stuffer. (Don't forget the old favorite—a wooden-handled spatula!);

A pretty book (blank inside) with pen or colored markers will please a poet friend;

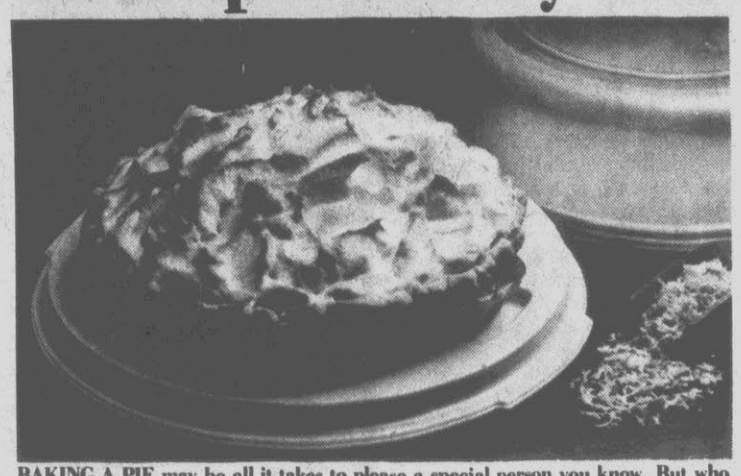
Kids love ugly rubber insects, practical joke toys and educational ones too. Be sure to look for toys that are safe for the age of the child;

A see-through food container filled with goodies will warm anyone's heart;

Give a teenager a portable utility file with blank tape cassettes inside. Or buy a cassette of music you know they'll like;

Consider the hobbies and interests of those on your list...the guitar player would love a gift certificate at a music store. An artist will appreciate one good brush. The fanatical contest devotee? Collect sweepstakes entry forms and wrap them up with envelopes and stamps; add a horseshoe paperweight for kicks;

Dried Indian corn with a bow makes a simple and fun gift for kids to present to grandmother and granddad. Or give them a bundle of wheat and oats for the birds tied with a big bow. This type of gift can be tacked to a front door or mail box, or hung from a tree.



BAKING A PIE may be all it takes to please a special person you know. But who says you have to do the baking? It's great if you have the time and inclination. If not, find a good bakery and present the pie in a high-quality container to help keep it fresh. An ideal choice is Rubbermaid's Servin' Saver™ pie keeper with its high cover and tight seal to protect delicate meringues.

Avoid post-Christmas hibernation by giving the gift of green this season

Is that wide tie your wife gave you for Christmas in 1973 still hibernating in the back of your closet waiting to come back in style?

Why not give a gift this year that will still be cared for 15 years from now? Why not give the gift of gardening?

Gardening can give enjoyment now and for many years to come—without ever going out of style.

More than just the plant

Instead of giving just a plant this holiday season, why not outfit a future plant lover with everything he or she will need to begin a hobby that will last a lifetime!

Caring for a plant from seed to maturity instills a genuine sense of satisfaction in the budding horticulturist, while providing a wide array of benefits, both therapeutic and aesthetic, particularly for children and the elderly.

Where to begin

When giving the gift of gardening, the experts at Garden Scene, the nation's leading manufacturer of horticultural accessories, suggest that you try to match a seed or plant with your future garden buff's home environment.

"For new home gardeners, it's best to pick a plant that will flourish indoors," says Garden Scene's plant expert, Robert Maronde.

"And if you know where the plant will be raised, all the better. For instance, if the plant will be in plenty of sunlight, a chrysanthemum is ideal.

"Or, if the person to whom you're giving the gift of green lives in a home without much direct sunlight, something like a watermelon begonia might be a better choice."

Choosing just the right planter

Once your select the right plant, the next step is to select an attractive, durable planter. Maronde recommends plastic planters over clay or wood.

"Clay and wood containers absorb and hold moisture," Maronde explains. "This moisture can pass through the base and sides of the planter and ruin or damage tables, shelves and floors."

Teens will feel more grown-up with upbeat gifts that will create a blast!

With the holiday season approaching, choosing appropriate gifts for teenagers can be a challenge. The fact that they are drawn to the adult world may be a good place to start, because teenagers enjoy things that make them feel more grown up.

Given that they have their own sense of style and taste, which probably won't be consistent with your own, here are gift suggestions that are sure to create a blast.

Personal stereo radios and tape players that look as good as they sound not only satisfy their music needs, but complement their lifestyle needs as well.

Teens like electronics with up-beat styling and fired-up colors. After all, teens wear portable stereo radios as much as they listen to them.

And clock radios can be just as much a part of a teen's bedroom decor as a poster of his or her favorite role model.

Bright colors and styling notwithstanding, teens also demand quality sound and feature details.

GE's multi-hued Sidestep, Onestep and Steppin' Up portable AM/FM radio cassette players, as well as Jammer™ clock radios, provide the features teens like in fashion electronics, as well as the sound and style.

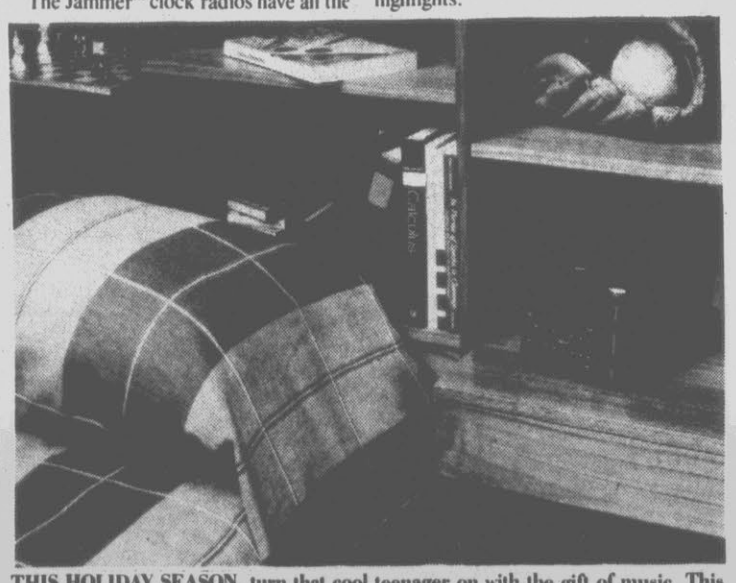
Each has tiny "bud" headphones stored in a built-in compartment with cord winder so that messy wires do not ruin the stylish look.

The bud headphones also allow the teen to listen to his or her music anywhere without ever disturbing family members or other people.

The Onestep and Sidestep sport side-mounted handles, making them easily portable for trips to the beach or to tote along on a skate board or bike.

The Jammer™ clock radios have all the basic clock radio features, plus "Bed Bud" headphones in a built-in winder storage compartment for private listening.

And they come in two unique color designs: P'Jammer™ in white and grey with pastel accents, and Nite Jammer™ in black with electric blue, red and grey highlights.



THIS HOLIDAY SEASON, turn that cool teenager on with the gift of music. This Nite Jammer™ AM/FM electronic digital clock radio by GE is designed for teens, and includes stereo "Bed Bud" headphones with built-in winder storage compartment.

FAMILY TOGETHERNESS MEANS SHARING THE FUN AND GAMES

For family togetherness this holiday season, everyone's joining in and sharing the fun—indoors, with jigsaw puzzles, space age board challenges, charades on paper, even computer software games; outdoors, it's a family day on the ski slopes.

That all-time family favorite, the jigsaw puzzle, is now more colorful than ever, with American Publishing offering a wide selection for holiday gift-giving, including classic scenes, cute animals and contemporary and abstract photography. The 550-piece puzzles retail for about $6.50, and the 1,000-piece sets for about $7.50.

The entire family will also enjoy hours of excitement playing Solarquest, the new space age real estate board game from Western Publishing.

Playing the game, children and their families will learn fascinating facts about the solar system, as they travel through space building monopolies of planets, moons and satellites—an "out of this world" gift for about $12.

Special version

And good news for the younger set—this year's best selling adult board game, Pictionary, has a version designed especially for children ages 7-11.

The words have been rated for reading levels by educators, allowing children of different ages to play together. Retails for about $15.

The business world, too, provides the basis for an unusual interactive computer game from Maxell this Christmas.

With the purchase of specially-marked 10-packs of 5¼-inch and 3½-inch computer disks, customers will receive a free 11th disk featuring a software game called "Business Advantage," based on real situations from Business Week cover stories.

The player, assuming the role of company president, analyzes the competition, the economy, markets and products, and then develops a strategic plan.

The program takes the player through a simulated year, and evaluates the results in terms of sales, return on investment and profits. The 10-packs retail for $16.99 and $35.99, respectively.

Thrill of skiing

Moving to the great outdoors, exciting gifts for family members or friends who have never experienced the thrill of skiing are coupons for the second annual "Let's Go Skiing, America!" program.

Round up the entire family for the January 8th National Learn-to-Ski Day, a free day of skiing, including lesson, equipment rental and access to beginner trails at more than 175 alpine and cross-country ski areas nationwide (no coupon needed—just call ahead to reserve a spot).

Or, pick up the free stocking-stuffer coupons at a local ski shop good for specially-priced discounts on the same all-inclusive package. For the names of participating ski shops, call 1-800-88-TO-SKI, toll-free.

HORS D'OEUVRE FOR THE HOLIDAYS—Entertaining is easy with a microwave oven from GE's Spacemaker line. It can be installed beneath cabinets to conserve valuable counterspace.

Use your microwave for easy holiday entertaining

If you own a microwave oven, chances are good you've come home more than once after a hard day of holiday shopping to pop in a frozen dinner or warm up a quick bowl of soup.

Most people rely on microwaves for convenience and seldom really "cook" with them.

If you're among those people, you're not enjoying the unit's full potential. A microwave is a great way to have fun and be creative in the kitchen—with delicious results!

Hors d'oeuvre in a hurry

Guests expected at seven and you're still in the office at six? Quick hors d'oeuvre don't have to be a plate of cheese and crackers.

With a microwave and five minutes, you can pick up any variety of frozen entrees, cut into bite-size pieces, stick in a toothpick and microwave.

Pizzas, stuffed crepes, even chicken nuggets all make delicious, hot hors d'oeuvre—in minutes.

For an elegant (and quicker) version of the classic favorite, a baked brie wheel, simply take a round of brie, slice off the top, and sprinkle with sliced almonds.

Place in the microwave on low for two to three minutes, and it's done. Garnish with some grapes and serve with finger-sized baguettes.

Even smaller units, such as GE's Spacemaker II and III series, can easily accommodate a variety of "fun" party dishes.

These units have optional hanging brackets, and can be mounted beneath kitchen cabinets to save counterspace—especially valuable when you're entertaining.

Recreational snacking

There's a commercial break during the Sunday afternoon sports event you're watching with friends. You want to offer your guests a snack but you don't have anything ready.

One of the most "fun" and popular ways to use a microwave is to make popcorn. Most microwaveable brands can be prepared in under three minutes and come in buttered, salted and plain varieties. Fill a bowl with your favorite and enjoy.

When giving the best is the only thing

Sometimes, for that very special person, giving the very best is the only thing to do at Christmas. For many, this means much more than just champagne and caviar.

Cunard Line makes it possible to "gift wrap" an ocean cruise as an ideal luxury present through its "Gift of Cruising" certificate package.

Handsomely presented in a gold-embossed box with royal blue velvet drawstring pouch, "The Gift of Cruising" includes an inscribed parchment certificate, solid brass luggage tags, facsimile cruise tickets and tempting travel literature.

Available in amounts of $1,000 or more, the certificate can be applied to any Cunard cruise on any of its seven ships—the ultra-deluxe Queen Elizabeth 2, Sagafjord, Vistafjord, Sea Goddess I and II, and the more informal Cunard Princess and Cunard Countess.

Recipients can then select the ship and cruise they prefer from itineraries that cover six continents and the seven seas.

For that person who truly appreciates fine art, a splendid gift would be a selection from the limited edition fine crystal designs by Orrefors of Sweden, one of the world's finest crystal producers.

Among the options are an abstract sculpture in glowing crystal, such as "Magic Eye," a cut sculpture in solid crystal for $1,675; or "Movement," a contemporary design suggesting an ocean wave, $1,500; or the "Columbi Egg," $750, shown originally as a focal prop in the film Risky Business.

Available in its own company boutiques in New York City and Costa Mesa, Calif., Orrefors is also carried by leading department stores throughout the country.

For a totally different type of gift for her, the Ladies Professional Golf Association suggests lessons from one of its coaching professional members.

Chances are, if she's already a golfer, there's nothing that would please her more than to shave a few strokes off her golf game, as she learns the finer points of driving, chipping and putting. Lessons are available from an LPGA member for $50 to $75 an hour.

For the name of a local LPGA teaching member, and to arrange a series of lessons as a Christmas gift, call your local public golf course or country club.

It might be time, too, to replace that old VCR with the latest state-of-the-art model. Sharp's digital VCR offers an array of features and special effects such as freeze-frame, slow motion and strobe from a broadcast channel or videotape that will delight any sports fan or video enthusiast.

WEEKEND PACKAGE FOR TV'S HOTEL FANS

Viewers of TV's Hotel can now check into the real St. Gregory, the Fairmont atop Nob Hill in San Francisco.

Hotel fans can ask for the Fairmont St. Gregory package for $170 per couple, plus tax, Friday or Saturday arrival. It's an exciting new package—a great Christmas gift because gift certificates are available!

Besides a night's stay in a deluxe room, the package includes dancing to a live band and a show by a name entertainer in the hotel's Venetian Room supper club; a St. Gregory cocktail (brandy and triple sec) per person on the house (and keep the glasses, with St. Gregory inscribed on one side and the Fairmont logo on the other, as souvenirs); plus postcards autographed by the cast of Hotel.

For reservations, call 800-527-4727, or the Fairmont Hotel 415/772-5000.

Walrus bulls eat an average of 100 pounds a day and may grow to weigh as much as a medium-sized car.

This year, go Hollywood for the holidays

Hollywood is celebrating its 100th year, and Vidal Sassoon highlights the timeless style of the silver screen with the "Flicks" Collection—hairstyles that can put you in your greatest role.

"Flicks" is a magnificent review of hairstyles featuring the '80s versions of cuts, perms and the vibrant haircolors portrayed by some of Hollywood's most dazzling beauties in their most unforgettable roles:

- The platinum blondes epitomized by Jean Harlow.
- The wave of hair across the eye that Veronica Lake made a national fad!
- Glowing redheads like Susan Hayward!
- The startling crewcut of Jean Seberg!
- The sensual imagery of Brigitte Bardot!

Quickly, easily and in time for all your holiday festivities, the experts at Sassoon have put together helpful at-home "how-tos," to make you the shining star this season.

- Breath-taking entrances—Start out Academy Award winning hairstyles with clean, shiny hair. Your holiday entrances will be around when you shampoo and condition with a system specially designed to remove buildup and product residue. Advanced Salon Formula prepares hair for all the season's demanding roles.
- Silent seductions—Warm up winter nights by taking a cue from the leading ladies of the Silent Screen. Sculpt a voluminous wave into your hair and style it to cover one eye. Your eyes will do the talking with a sexy glance, from beneath the wave.
- Romantic leads—A sweetheart neckline, lipstick-sealed mouth and glamorous curls provide the romance for that special evening. With your fingers, mold "kiss" curls in desired lengths and thicknesses to frame your face. Hold the shape with the supporting role of Sculpting Gel.
- Pin-up girl—Whether it's a loose easy style to sit in front of a warm fire, or a tight sophisticated chignon for a black-tie affair, you're sure to be the favorite glamour girl.

For the easy style, take a color-coordinated stocking to use as a feather-light hairtie. Cut one or two-inch-wide strips from around the leg of a clean, worn stocking. This forms a circle band, that is gentler to hair than elastic bands.

Pull hair up towards the crown and wrap a ponytail with the band, letting the loose hairs cascade.

For a polished style, brush hair tightly up towards the crown forming a ponytail. Secure it with one loop of a long band.

Now, instead of overlapping the band over itself, twist and wrap bands down the ponytail to form a crisscross pattern and hold loose, shorter hairs in place.

When you get to the end of the tail, twist it up towards the crown, forming a knot, and secure in place with bobby pins. The results: Chic bursts of color and a slick, tailored style.

- It's a wrap—After long days of shopping, decorating and holiday preparations, treat yourself to a new, elegant hairstyle in a matter of minutes.

Brush your wet hair against its natural direction and blow-dry as you wrap the hair across your forehead. It will be a new you making her holiday debut.

- Some like it hot—They say if she hadn't existed someone would have had to invent her. This season, Sex Kitten styles are a moment away, when you flip your hair upside down, spray with new aerosol Ultimate Hold Styling Fix and then finger style for a look of wanton abandonment.
- A one night star—Ever dream you could be Marilyn, Rita or Liz just for one night? That you could change your haircolor to match your clothing? Your mood?

This holiday, you can audition a new haircolor every night. Add translucent hints of dazzling reds, stunning blondes, sophisticated brunettes. Apply Colorific Color Styling Gel to wet hair and, while blow-drying, brush Gel through to the ends.

THIS HOLIDAY SEASON, Vidal Sassoon debuts the "Flicks" collection of innovative hair designs dedicated to the renaissance of silver screen glamour. Go Hollywood for the holidays!

'Tis the season to give limited-edition collector's plates

The holiday season is a time filled with cherished traditions, such as decorating the tree, baking dozens of Santa-shaped cookies, and hanging stockings over the fireplace.

Another time-honored Christmas tradition is giving and receiving limited-edition collector's plates. Today more than six million Americans enjoy the beauty of collector's plates, which feature artwork in a variety of styles from traditional to contemporary.

Plate collecting began with a Christmas plate when the Danish porcelain house of Bing & Grondahl issued the first true limited-edition plate—"Behind the Frozen Window"—in 1895.

Ever since then, collector's plates have proven to be one of the most enduring and popular of Christmas presents.

The newest Christmas issues are available at gift shops and collectibles dealers across the United States for prices generally ranging from $25 to $75.

Among the most highly regarded of the 1987 selections are two plates from the Edwin M. Knowles China Company.

"The Annunciation" is the first plate in a new Christmas series debuting this year: The Story of Christmas by Eve Licea.

This beautiful square-shaped plate depicts the angel Gabriel's announcement to Mary that she will be the mother of the Christ Child.

A combination of bas relief, geometric and natural designs, in gold and bold colors, makes "The Annunciation" a stunning example of the distinctive style which has earned artist Eve Licea so many fans.

When the annual six-plate series is completed, it will form a wall mural illustrating the Biblical Christmas story.

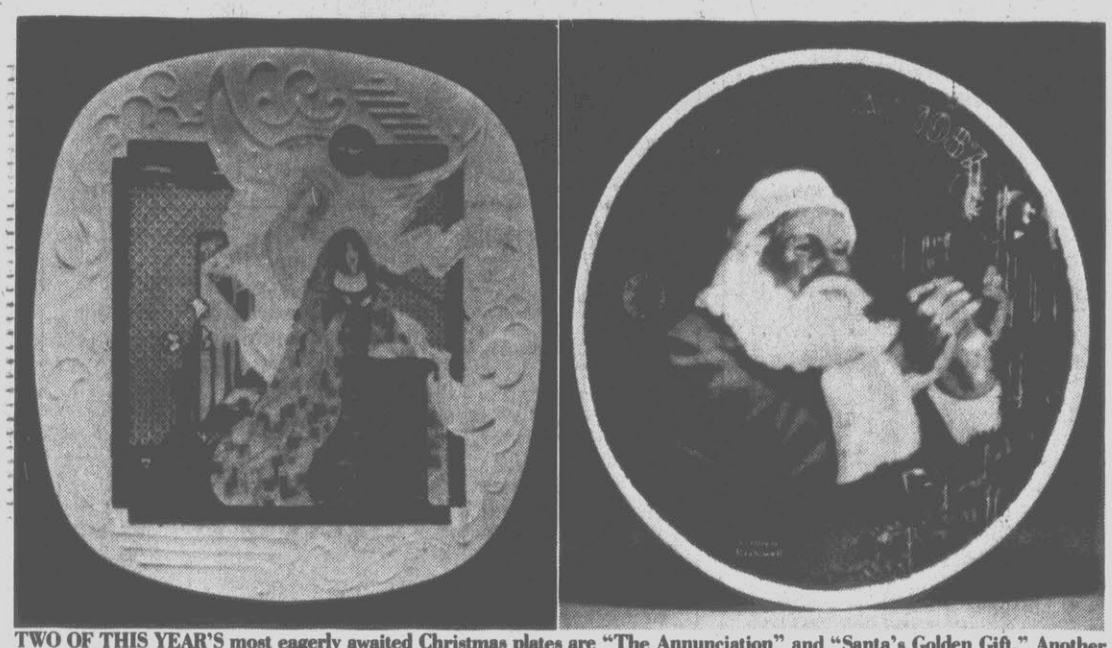
Another excellent gift choice is the latest addition to the long-running Rockwell Society Christmas series: "Santa's Golden Gift."

This plate features Norman Rockwell artwork originally created for a Western Union Telegram advertisement which appeared in 1935.

It shows a classic Santa with a red cap and a white beard, hanging a golden ornament on some lucky child's Christmas tree.

The 13 previous issues in the Rockwell Christmas series are among more than 6,000 past issues available on the "secondary market," where prices rise and fall depending on supply and demand.

When limited-edition plates are new, they are sold to collectors at issue price on the primary market. Once an edition is closed, no more plates are produced.



TWO OF THIS YEAR'S most eagerly awaited Christmas plates are "The Annunciation" and "Santa's Golden Gift." Another way to give affordable art this Christmas is to purchase a secondary market plate, many of which are available at reasonable prices.

U.S. Constitution Coins make this year's gift-giving meaningful—and easy too!

Socks, toys and perfume—standard holiday gifts—are nice enough, but why settle for "nice" when the gift you give can be a "once in a lifetime" remembrance!

Usually finding a rare and meaningful present is difficult, if not impossible. But this year the United States Mint is offering a gift idea that is both unique and timely: U.S. Constitution Coins.

"The coins are produced this year to honor the hope and promise which have been embodied in the Constitution for 200 years," said Donna Pope, the director of the U.S. Mint.

"As keepsakes of this year's Constitution celebration, the coins are perfect gift items, and are beautiful and affordable."

Polished to a high gloss, and engraved with images emblematic of the Constitution, the coins' artistic and patriotic value is capturing the attention of Americans across the country.

In fact, people have bought more than two million U.S. Constitution Coins in their first month of availability.

Unlike more common holiday gifts, U.S. Constitution Coins are tangible keepsakes of an important national symbol, and have value that will last for generations to come.

Because U.S. Constitution Coins commemorate the liberty that touches the life of each American every day, the coins can be appreciated by all, regardless of age.

The coins are ideal for display on the mantel, bookshelf or desk, and the included presentation case adds an elegant touch.

U.S. Constitution Coins also make wonderful jewelry. In fact, many jewelers offer settings which can turn the coins into beautiful pendants, rings and other attractive pieces.

As the official government keepsakes of the Constitution Bicentennial, they are sure to become a piece of American history.

And as a tangible symbol of our nation's founding document, U.S. Constitution Coins are one way Americans can literally take hold of the Constitution.

Silver U.S. Constitution Coins are available individually, and can be purchased in sets. The silver coins sell for $28 each.

During the hectic shopping season, it's reassuring to know that the coins can be easily found at 10,000 locations nationwide, including participating banks and savings and loans, and such retail stores as K Mart, Sears, Montgomery Ward and Service Merchandise.

This holiday season, instead of giving socks, stuff stockings with U.S. Constitution Coins.

SHARE THE PROMISE OF THE CONSTITUTION—Make your holiday gift giving truly special with U.S. Constitution Coins. Silver U.S. Constitution Coins are available for $28 at participating banks and savings and loans, and at retail stores like K Mart, Sears, Montgomery Ward and Service Merchandise.

Waiting for Santa

IT LOOKS LIKE SANTA HAS BEEN HERE ALREADY and left a special present to give to mom. It's just what she asked for, too... an Oster "Kitchen Center" brand food preparation appliance. Santa knows that it is a convenient time-saver in the kitchen... and it cleans up cluttered countertops, too. The unit features a sturdy stand mixer, a powerful doughmaker, a handy slicer/shredder/saladmaker and an Osterizer blender. Additional accessories, such as a mini food processor and an ice cream maker, are available. When you write to Santa, be sure and let him know what mom wants too... an Oster "Kitchen Center" appliance. It's the perfect holiday gift.

Dreams come true!

SANTA ANSWERED THIS CHILD'S LETTER!—with a brand new puppy and a bike from JCPenney's Christmas catalog. They'll be set for years of adventures with this single speed twenty inch "Vortex" bike with powerflow handlebars and contoured flash wheel disks. What a Christmas morning surprise!

This Christmas, why not an office that fits in a stocking?

This holiday season, shoppers will ask the same question they always ask this time of year—what do I get for the person who's got it all?

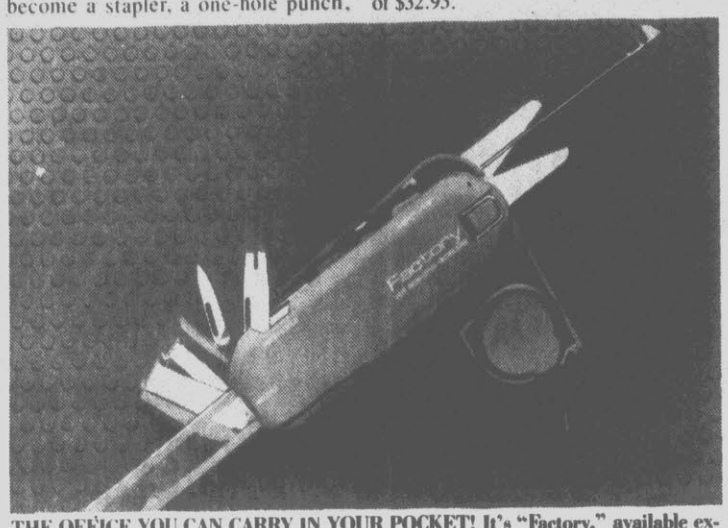
If you're looking for innovative new twists to some old ideas, the answer might just come from Plus U.S.A. Corporation.

Already hailed as the "must have" product of the year, Plus Factory resembles a Swiss Army Knife and contains everything you need to keep you out of the office.

Just imagine one pocket-size Swiss Army style tool that actually folds out to become a stapler, a one-hole punch, stainless steel scissors, a magnifying lens, a spring-loaded retractable tape measure, a stainless steel knife, a staple remover/screwdriver, and a tape dispenser with tape. There's even a compartment for storage!

This multi-functional tool was made for the busy student and professional on the go. The Factory from Plus U.S.A. Corporation is the one office you'll never want to leave behind!

The Factory is available at select gift, department and office supply stores nationwide in your choice of red, white, blue or black, for a suggested retail price of $32.95.



THE OFFICE YOU CAN CARRY IN YOUR POCKET! It's "Factory," available exclusively from Plus U.S.A. Corporation. Its Swiss Army Knife like design folds out to reveal nine miniature desk products: A scissors, hole punch, stapler, tape measure, carton opener, staple remover/screwdriver, magnifying lens, tape and storage case. There's even a convenient D-ring for your belt loop!

FESTIVE HOLIDAY DESSERT REMINISCENT OF DAYS GONE BY

Our image of a classic Dickensian Christmas centers on the holiday groaning board, laden with good things to eat, from roast goose to the traditional dessert of Victorian times, plum pudding, embellished with a fragrant hard sauce (so called because its main ingredient is brandy).

If you yearn for the flavor of times gone by, but don't have the time to recreate it from scratch in your own kitchen, you'll appreciate the offerings of such companies as Crabtree & Evelyn.

Their Miniature Plum Puddings are enjoyable just as they are, or can be combined with vanilla ice cream for an easy-to-make dessert, Plum Pudding Ice Cream, which is a 1980s update of a perennial favorite. The recipe below was created by Annabelle's Restaurant in Toronto.

PLUM PUDDING ICE CREAM

2 Crabtree & Evelyn Miniature Plum Puddings
5-6 tablespoons of good brandy
1 quart of vanilla ice cream

Remove the cellophane wrapping from the puddings, then wrap each in foil and place them in a steamer or double-boiler to steam for about 20 minutes.

Lift the puddings out carefully, remove the foil and the paper around the bases. Place them on a large plate and chop them into small chunks. Heat the brandy, pour it over the puddings, and flame. (If it doesn't light, don't despair—it won't affect the flavour.) Allow this mixture to cool completely.

Let the ice cream soften slightly, then tip it into a large mixing bowl. Fold in the pudding-brandy mixture and any juices on the plate as quickly as you can. Return the mixture to a freezer container and freeze until firm.

Make this Christmas last forever with a camcorder

Have you always wanted to capture the expressions of your family on Christmas morning and enjoy the moment again and again in the years to come?

This year you can, with the help of easy-to-use camcorders—the hottest consumer electronics gift idea of the year.

New Compact VHS camcorders—combination color video cameras and portable video cassette recorders—feature fully automatic functions for professional-quality "home movies" on videotape.

"The newest camcorders available this Christmas are so simple to use that even first-time camcorder users will be impressed by the results," said Gerald M. McCarthy, president of Zenith Sales Company.

More than 1.1 million camcorders were sold to dealers in 1986 and as many as 1.5 million of the popular units could be sold by Christmas Eve this year, McCarthy said.

New designs make it possible for some full-featured camcorders to weigh as little as 3.3 pounds (including cassette and battery).

McCarthy suggested that shoppers in the market for top-of-the-line performance should look for such features as autofocus, power zoom lens, high-speed shutter for crisp action shots, and low-light recording sensitivty.

"As an added convenience, some new models include an 'information center' on the camcorder's side that explains all your recording options," McCarthy said.

"And to further assure that you'll get the best possible images, these camcorders have a through-the-viewfinder playback feature that allows you to instantly review what you've just recorded," McCarthy said.

The playback feature also allows you to connect the camcorder directly to your TV or VCR for easy review or dubbing, McCarthy added. "Unlike some other compact systems, there's no need for a separate playback deck," he said.

Some of the most popular new camcorders use Compact VHS cassettes about the size of a deck of cards, which can offer up to 60 minutes of recording and can be played back in any VHS-format VCR with the use of an adaptor.

The perfect Christmas gift for the skier who has everything

No two skiers are exactly alike.

Some go for the bumpiest mogul runs while others search for verticals so steep that their skis don't even touch the snow.

Skiers don't even look alike anymore. Gone are the days when everyone used the same skis, boots and bindings, whether they fit or not.

And when it comes to clothing, today's skiers face even more choices. Jackets, pants, insulations and fabrics are all designed to match individual tastes and needs.

Technology has done wonders for the sport of downhill skiing but it has also made gift-giving more confusing, especially for non-skiers trying to pick out the perfect gift that will delight any skiing enthusiast.

This holiday season, however, gift-givers can relax. Now a gift is available that all skiers like and need—a lift ticket worth one full day of skiing.

In the past, you had to purchase a lift ticket for a specific day at the specific ski area. This limitation no longer exists with the arrival of the Universal Ski Ticket®.

Developed by Corporate Ski Incentives Inc. to be used by businesses as a gratuity, gift or incentive, the Universal Ski Ticket also makes the perfect holiday present.

It can be used at over 100 ski areas across the United States and Canada, making it an extremely versatile gift.

If the person on your list is planning a vacation to a top ski resort such as Mammoth Mountain in California, Aspen Highlands in Colorado, or Park City in Utah, buying a one-day lift ticket is an ideal way for you to help cover the cost of the vacation.

The Universal Ski Ticket will also be welcomed by those who would like to escape to ski areas located close to home.

Accepted in virtually every skiing state, the ticket's greatest advantage is that it can be used wherever and whenever the recipient decides to ski.

Universal Ski Tickets are a great way to get an entire family or group of friends outside enjoying the winter months, because people of all ages and athletic abilities love the thrill of skiing. It's one activity that the whole family can take part in together.

If everyone in the group hasn't had the opportunity to experience skiing, the Universal Ski Ticket can still be an ideal gift.

In the interest of safe skiing, it is recommended that beginners trade their Universal Ski Ticket for a group lesson and a related lift ticket that often goes with lessons.

A minimum of five tickets can be purchased for $32 each—even during holidays and on weekends, when tickets are at a premium.

Universal Ski Tickets are available from Corporate Ski Incentives, Inc., 447 Daniel Webster Highway, Merrimack, NH 03054 or by calling 617-229-2916. In the West, call 702-788-5663; in Canada, call 306-665-0666.

The one thing that all skiers enjoy is the sport. This year, you can give the skiers on your list the opportunity to enjoy it more often.

This season's chic

FASHION "CRUSE"-IN: Members Only's distressed look leather jacket is a great gift for any Tom, Dick or Harry Cruse. It features five pockets, action back, rivet detail, zip front and detachable mouton collar. Bomber jackets are hot fashion, and this fully satin-lined number will have them lining up with compliments.

Santa's advice: Contain yourself this Christmas

Christmas is coming! It's time to make your gift list and check it twice. This season, why not choose presents that will really be used and enjoyed all year long?

A Swedish manufacturer of storage systems for over 30 years, elfa, offers drawer units, shelving systems, and other products to organize and customize any room or special area.

Made with sturdy steel, see-through wire construction and Life-Bond epoxy coating (the same finish as your refrigerator), elfa products will last a lifetime.

Almost everyone on your list has a hobby or special interest that elfa can organize and make more enjoyable and, throughout the year, as they use elfa, they will think of you.

Easy to organize

Workshop owners will love the hanging wall grids with all sizes of hooks and baskets attached. Sewing corners can be organized with elfa drawers and shelving.

For those who work at home, offices can be made more efficient with elfa desk "component style" combinations.

Everyone on your list has closets, and elfa is absolutely the best product available for closet organization. Closet space can be doubled by utilizing wasted space beneath hanging clothes.

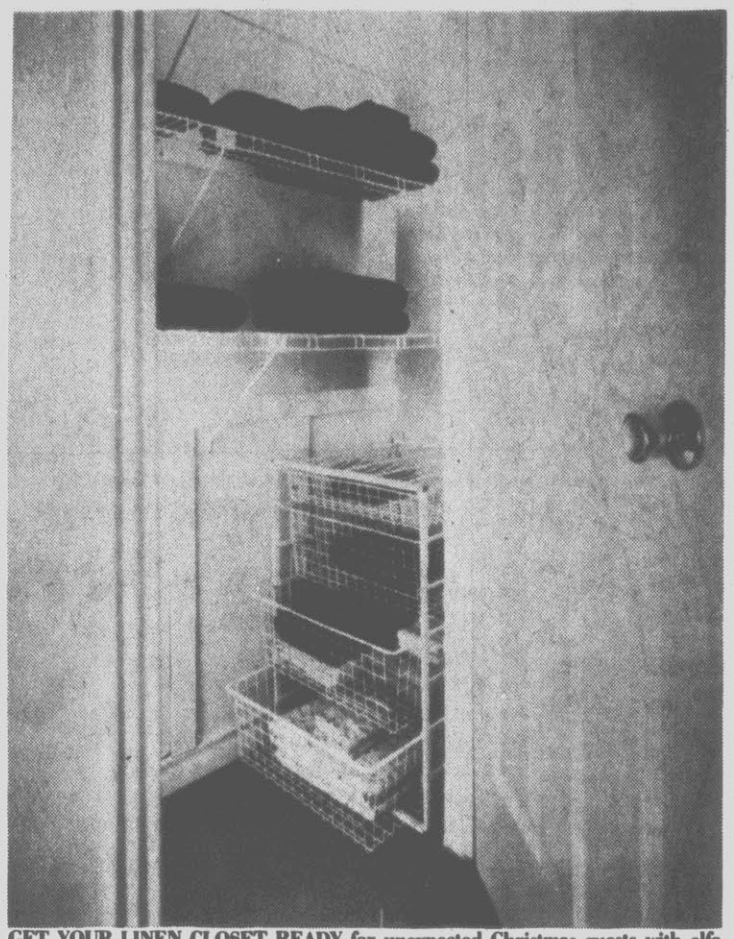
Sorting is a cinch

Laundry is something else everyone has, and sorting it is easy with elfa. The large baskets are perfect for holding sheets and towels, while other baskets separate lights from darks.

That way, the sorting's already done by the time washday rolls around. And when the wash is done, the baskets can be used to separate clothes for each family member.

Kitchens, pantries and linen closets are other areas with which we all must contend. These can be made into more attractive, functional areas with elfa baskets, drawer units and shelving systems.

For a free elfa product catalog and more tips on how to "Contain Yourself" and everyone on your Christmas list write: The Container Store®, Dept. N, 2818 Virgo Lane, Dallas, TX 75229.



GET YOUR LINEN CLOSET READY for unexpected Christmas guests with elfa products, and give elfa to friends this Christmas so they will be ready for you next year!

RING IN CHRISTMAS ON A COLORFUL NOTE... with Sony's Music Pops audio tapes for 10 to 15-year-old children. Available in four "flavors"—strawberry, lemon, orange and watermelon—in fluorescent color packing with bold graphic designs. The tape shells are opaque and colored to match the packaging. Music Pops can be purchased in two and four package configurations, at a suggested retail price of $4.99 and $9.99 respectively.

Tips for selecting just the right CD player, VCR or camcorder

A walk into a consumer electronics outlet often leaves the average shopper overwhelmed by the ever-changing models and features of today's popular products such as CD players, VCRs and camcorders.

To help you alleviate some of the confusion and decide what's important to you, use this checklist, compliments of Panasonic, to guide you through this holiday shopping season.

Panasonic also advises that you not hesitate about having the retailer demonstrate the unit, if possible, to make sure you're getting the product which best fits your needs.

Compact disc players

- Random Access Programmability—Choose favorite songs you want to hear in any order;
- Wireless Remote Control—So you can access most functions from your armchair;
- Repeat Key—Replay a single track, entire disc, or personally programmed selections;
- Headphone Jack With Volume Control—Listen in privacy;
- Digital Filter—Provides low distortion for clean sounding music;
- Skip Function—Skip directly to favorite tracks;
- Search Function—Search inward or outward at low and high speeds, with audible monitoring capability;
- Recall Key—Lets the user double check what's been programmed;
- Multi-Disc—Holds numerous discs at once in a cartridge for hours of continuous music;
- Large Integrated Graphic Display—Reveals valuable disc play and programming information at a glance;
- Flexibility—Units available for home, portable and car use.

VHS video cassette recorders

- High Quality (HQ) VHS—Enhances quality of VHS image;
- Hi-Fi Stereo Sound—Provides excellent sound reproduction, virtually distortion free;
- Three or Four Head System—Allows for exciting special effects in the standard and super long play modes;
- Cable-Compatible Tuner—Simplifies cable hook-up;
- On-Screen Display—TV screen displays all clock-timer functions and help features, ensuring accuracy of settings;
- Stand-By One Touch Recording—Enables you to begin recording almost instantaneously at the touch of a button;
- Wireless Remote Control—Command most functions from around the room;
- MTS Broadcast Stereo—Built-in circuitry to take advantage of expanded stereo television sound (where available);
- Bar Code Programming—Pass a wireless pen-like scanner over a printed sheet of bar codes to set time and day of desired TV program. Info is beamed into the recorder by pushing button;
- Built-In Power Amp—Hook stereo speakers directly to VCR for great sound without the need for added hi-fi equipment;
- Digital Special Effects—Experience picture-in-picture and TV memory capability.

Camcorders

- Standard VHS Format—Allows not only playback of your recordings, but also of pre-recorded, full-length VHS movies;
- Compact VHS Format—Cassettes and units in general are smaller than standard VHS format, and recording time per cassette is also reduced. Compatible with VHS playback systems;
- Low Light Sensitivity—Recordings with high resolution and outstanding picture quality, even under low lighting conditions;
- Automatic Iris—Adjusts unit automatically to changing lighting conditions;
- High-Speed Shutter—Provides exceptional blur-free slow/still motion for analyzing fast-paced action;
- Power Zoom Lens—Look for smooth zooming capability and quick framing action from wide-angle to telephoto;
- Instant Playback—Recordings can be played back from the unit itself for "on location" viewing;

This season, why not give a car stereo that outsmarts thieves?

If you're looking to give a car audio system to somebody you love this holiday season, you ought to face the facts. More car stereos are stolen in the United States than any other consumer electronics product.

Aiwa America, a leading car audio manufacturer, has designed an entire line of car audio systems with the hopes of changing the odds—welcome in the age of theft deterrent car audio products.

The new line of Aiwa car audio products incorporates a special theft deterrent cover that closes over the face of the unit. The cover is designed to blend in with the dashboard, concealing it from all who look in.

Aiwa's top-of-the-line CT-X5500 car audio system with AM/FM and auto reverse cassette deck, for example, has a theft deterrent cover that flips down to become the unit's control panel.

All functions are logically laid out on the panel and angled easily within the driver's reach, so the driver can safely control all system functions without taking his eyes off the road.

In addition to the deterrent cover, the CT-X5500 features a removable chassis for quick and easy carry-along convenience.

The driver simply pulls the unit right out of the car's dashboard and locks it in the trunk or carries it along in its custom-fit case. Thieves can't steal what's not there.

Aiwa's CT-X5500 is a full featured audio system with many advanced features normally found in home decks. The 20 watts-per-channel head-unit features an auto reverse tape deck, a digital quartz synthesized tuner, and a 5-band equalizer.

The tape deck features a bi-azimuth auto-adjusting amorphous head for true audiophile performance, music sensor, feather-touch IC logic controls, soft loading and eject, key off standby, feather touch electronic volume control, and Dolby B&C noise reduction.

The tuner section provides 18 user-selectable memory presets, both up and down auto seek tuning, auto scan tuning, local/DX switch, tuner monitor, and Aiwa's Active Tuning Reception Control (ATRC) for improved FM reception in all signal conditions. A CD-in jack and 3-way fader are also provided.

The Aiwa CT-X5500 is available nationwide at a suggested retail price of $450.00.

Say "season's greetings" with Yule gifts that have people-pleasing personality

Do you give presents with personality? Gifts that please all year 'round? Or, do you find yourself: (1) Buying sweaters for everyone, from grandpa to the pet pooch; (2) purchasing the most expensive-looking item with the most affordable price tag; or (3) dividing the world into men and women, the former who get ties and after-shave and the latter, scarves and perfume?

"The secret to people-pleasing gift-selection," says Pat Rienzi, vice president for Sanyo Electric, "is matching presents to specific lifestyles. This is our design principle: Appliances should make life easier and more enjoyable."

According to Sanyo research, people put convenience at the top of their wish lists. So instead of giving new brides—87 percent of whom work—a knick-knack that has to be dusted or a silver tray that has to be polished, consider a gift that can shave time off the morning routine.

Home-loving young people—10 million under 25 head their own households—have abandoned fast food fads for "dining out at home" in style, and would also welcome the chance to augment their home-entertainment centers with time-saving kitchen appliances.

Gifts chosen with thoughtfulness and wrapped with imagination are sure to make a hit. Here are some ideas for a really personal touch:

• Home-Baked Fun: Pack up a bake-it-yourself ingredient kit for your favorite holiday treat. For instance, give the essentials for making your gingerbread man recipe, including cookie cutters, oven mitt, spatula, decorations like sprinkles and currants and, of course, the recipe itself.

• Homey Office: For a cozy home office, a workday survival kit could contain a personal coffee maker, like Sanyo's Cafe San Jr.; a mug; gourmet coffee; and a box of chocolates or cookies, for those absolutely necessary coffee breaks.

• Instant Fitness Center: Create an at-home spa for health-conscious friends with an exercise mat, jump rope, taped music or routines and hand/leg weights. Add a personal-sized juicer and oranges for a refreshing pick-me-up at the in-house "health bar."

• Lazy Day Brunch: An elegant brunch cookbook deserves a practical complement—a space-saving toaster oven, like the Sanyo Toasty Deluxe, ideal for easy late-morning cooking. Round out the package with a variety of fancy jams and spiced teas.

• New Year's Resolution Help: "Get Organized" is on the top of many a resolution list. Help inspire a friend to get started in the kitchen, by giving a basketful of colorful, practical items: A drawer organizer; a lazy Susan; pretty shelf paper; a gadget goody, like a compact, hand-held, rechargeable can opener; and cheery tea towels.

YULETIDE PRESENTS WITH PERSONALITY—Wake up your favorite sleepyhead with holiday warmth that will last all year through. Wrap up a lazy day brunch kit with baked goodies and the Sanyo Toasty Deluxe toaster oven. Or, create a package of coffee-break essentials around the personal-sized Cafe San Jr., to bring that homey holiday feeling to the office.

Our books are filling fast for makeover appointments. To help with your wish list for the holiday season, the staff at Merle Norman is happy to assist you with that special party look, a professional daytime look, or more casual makeup needs. Make it easy on your Santa - come to Merle Norman to complete your makeup and skin care wish list.

Perfect gift for globetrotters: A stockingful of travel savings

What could be a better gift for the globetrotter in your life than a whole year's worth of affordable dream vacations?

For $45, you can give the gift of travel with a year's membership in Stand-Buys, Ltd., the nation's original discount travel club.

The avid traveler will be able to shop year-round from hundreds of tours, cruises and air packages to the most desirable destinations in the world, at many times up to two-thirds off the regular price.

Best of all, the trips are available to the member's entire family.

How does it work? Major tour operators, cruise lines, airlines and other travel suppliers often find themselves with space left on their trips.

To fill it, they make the trips available to Stand-Buys members from three days to eight weeks before departure—at huge discounts.

In addition to brief-notice, deep-discounted trips, members can save from 15 to 35 percent on trips that can be booked up to a year in advance. All club trips, whether short or long-notice, are guaranteed space.

So, whether that globetrotter dreams of an African safari, a grand tour of Europe, a Caribbean cruise, an excursion to the mysterious Orient or a week on the beach in Hawaii, a gift of discount travel club membership can make that dream a reality.

For information on gift membership, write Stand-Buys, Ltd., Dept. X3F, 311 West Superior, Chicago, IL 60610, or call 1-800-255-0200 toll free. In Illinois, the toll free number is 1-800-826-4398.

Perfumed 'n' pretty

ONE OF THE WORLD'S GREAT CLASSIC FRAGRANCES, L'Air du Temps offers a wide array of enticingly feminine gifts for special holiday moments. The gift she'll treasure forever... La Petite Poupée, an exquisite doll attired in a dress of rich moiré designed by Gérard Pipart, couturier for the House of Nina Ricci and winner of the coveted Golden Thimble award for the Nina Ricci spring-summer, 1987, Haute Couture Collection. The doll is accompanied by .2 oz. L'Air du Temps perfume in golden filigree flacon. Available at fine department stores just in time for Christmas gift-giving.

This holiday, treat everyone to a refreshing clothes shave!

Does your Christmas list include a business executive who insists on always looking perfect? An avant-garde sister-in-law who simply must be in the forefront of the newest technology? Or, a hard-to-shop-for friend for whom there seems to be no perfect gift?

Well, this holiday, you can please all these different people with one unique gift that's perfect for all ages, sizes, shapes and personalities...the Windmere Clothes Shaver™ fabric "pill" remover.

It's a clever new personal care accessory that shaves away those nasty little nubs that drive clothes into early "closet retirement."

Easy to use.

Lightweight, compact and portable, the Clothes Shaver is a clothes "saver!" It glides safely across the surfaces of fabric to clip off crisply unsightly "pills" and fuzz, bits of fiber that have become partially disengaged from the fabric.

Until now, these "uglies" were usually painstakingly removed with a scissors or by pulling, methods that often permanently damage fabric.

The Windmere Clothes Shaver, which works on just one "C" battery, gently removes "pills" and fuzz through the rotating action of its high-quality, finely-honed blades.

"Pills" and fuzz are sliced off smoothly and safely; they are then sucked up by vacuum action and deposited into an easy-to-remove bin.

CHRISTMAS COLLECTION: Games, puzzles and small activity toys are a good choice for holiday stocking stuffers and grab bag gifts. This assortment from International Games includes Deluxe Skip-Bo, about $10.00; UNO, about $4.00; Stun, about $3.50; Optical Conclusions, about $3.00; and Stampos, around $2.00.

New jewelry gives many changes to holiday wear

Every woman enjoys adding a new piece of jewelry to her collection and, when that item also serves to give greater versatility to her jewelry wardrobe, it's even more delightful, says Kae McCulloch, fashion consultant to the Jewelry Industry Council.

That's why new jewelry called 'enhancers' or 'add-ons' make excellent holiday gifts, she reports.

"A simple strand of pearls can become a handsome pendant, and two bracelets can join together to create an arresting necklace," she points out.

For day or evening

A case in point: One such set of bracelets features one bracelet in simple gold links, while the other is a single strand of matched diamonds. When they are joined together, the diamond part worn in front, they are perfect for evening wear.

What looks like a simple pin becomes a pendant, to be worn on a strand of pearls or chain. Or you may choose to use it to fasten together a long strand of pearls for a different look. Pin the pearls to one side for a swag effect.

New also are earring settings in gold in different designs that come with a selection of gemstones and pearls. Choose topaz, aquamarine or whatever stone you wish to complement the color scheme of your holiday apparel.

Easy transformation

A 60-inch string of pearls can unfasten to create shorter necklaces and even a bracelet, making this item of jewelry a day-to-evening set.

With a wise selection of basic jewelry, which might consist of several different lengths and sizes of gold chains, plus a couple of single and double strands of pearls, a woman can choose enhancers that will help her create many different jewelry 'looks' that will also go readily with her interchangeable earring collection.

"It's a wonderful and affordable way to expand your jewelry wardrobe," Ms. McCulloch advises.

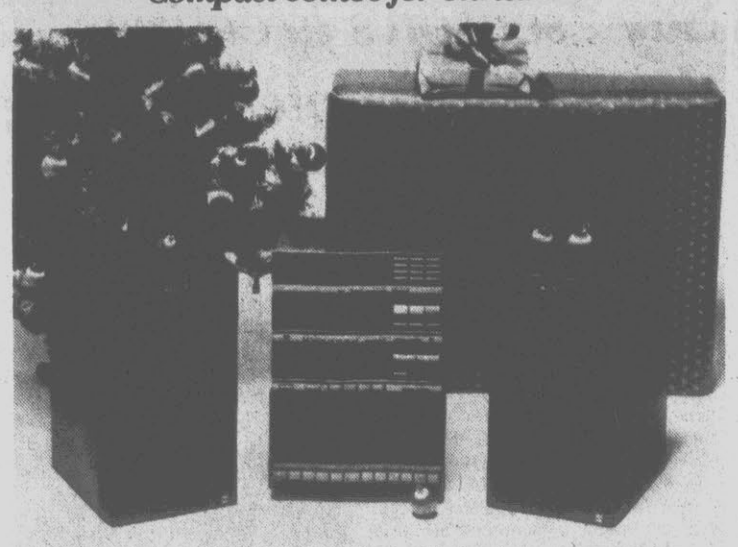
Compact combo for Christmas



FOR BIG SOUND IN SMALL SPACES, give them the new Sony FH-211W compact home entertainment system...featuring a DBFB (dynamic bass feed back) circuit for maximum bass response. The FH-211W consists of a 20-station random preset quartz frequency synthesis tuner, double cassette deck with Dolby® B noise reduction and high-speed dubbing, 7-band graphic spectrum equalizer with 3-preset memory and matched 30 watts per channel APM (3-way) speakers. Ideal for small apartments, dorm rooms and offices, the system can also be "packed up" with a supplied carrying handle to take along to a vacation home or on a boat. Shown here with CDP-17F (optional) compact disc player. The suggested retail price is $750 for the main system and $350 for the CD player.

Boardgame helps football fans' dreams come true

With football fans playing The Big Payoff all over the western states and soon the nation, T.V. viewers everywhere now can be put into the shoes of their favorite quarterback.

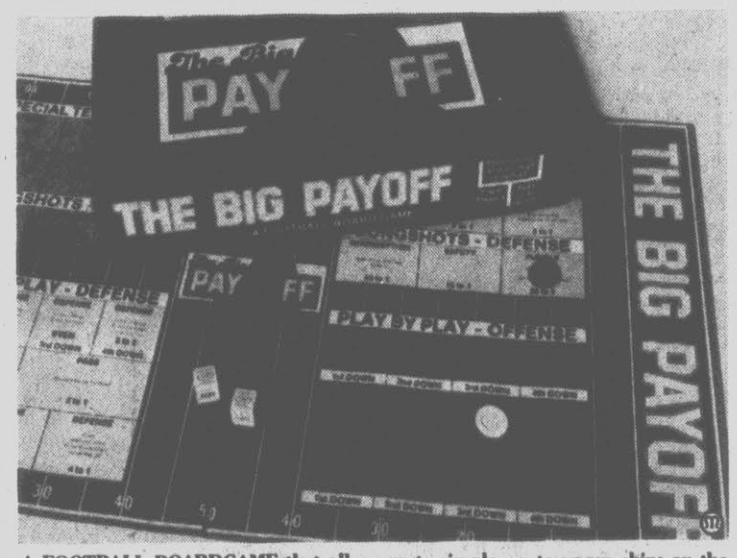
The Big Payoff is a football boardgame that allows one to six players to wager chips on the outcome of each televised play.

If your team is on offense you can predict whether they will run or pass, kick a field goal or throw for a touchdown. On defense, will your team grab an interception, recover a fumble or sack the Q.B.?

With excellent reviews from Playboy magazine and C.N.N., The Big Payoff is fast becoming America's number one selling boardgame.

The game is fun for the entire family, and would make an excellent Christmas gift for that young football fan since a beginner's version is included in every game.

If the game is sold out at your favorite retailer, you can order direct from the manufacturer by sending a check for $19.95 postpaid to Payoff Enterprises, Inc.; P.O. Box 69064; Portland, OR 97201; or by calling (503) 245-4647, Visa and MasterCard accepted.



A FOOTBALL BOARDGAME that allows up to six players to wager chips on the outcome of televised play, The Big Payoff puts T.V. viewers in the shoes of their favorite quarterbacks.

Fragrant indulgence: A Christmas of great luxury

A gift of true luxury never fails to give great pleasure, to make a lasting impression. An often unexpected indulgence, it captivates, pampers and seduces the senses.

Throughout the ages, the most sensual, most pleasurable of all gifts of luxury has been that of fragrance. The Queen of Sheba took gifts of fragrance to King Solomon when she visited him in 800 B.C.

Indeed, so highly valued was fragrance, that thieves in King Tut's tomb stole the fragrant oils but left the many objects of gold.

Today the allure and the mystery of fragrance continues in the four classic fragrances from Parfums Lagerfeld. For her: The sublimely romantic floral notes of Chloe, and the smoldering exotic scent of KL. For him: The masculine woodsy richness of Lagerfeld, and the sensory adventure of KL Homme for the man who lives on the edge.

This Christmas, giving a gift of luxury has never been more effortless, more highly individualized. All the Parfums Lagerfeld fragrances come specially wrapped.

Lagerfeld is tucked inside handsomely marbleized black and camel paper, and KL Homme captures its excitement in a mist of granite gray and blue with flashes of gold.

Charm her with private pleasures for the bath and the boudoir. Chloe's peach-colored dusting powder luxuriates in a shimmering frosted box with the signature embossed calla lily, and is paired with a sensuous spray of eau de toilette.

Indulge her with the sybaritic experience of KL's silken body creme and eau de toilette, adorned with its seductive symbol—the fan.

Make certain his days and nights are filled with pleasure. Give him the Lagerfeld Natural Elements: A splash of cologne, soap, marble soap dish, and marble-handled razor and toothbrush.

This year, deck the halls with best-selling angora

What are soft and furry, are available in a paletteful of colors, and are among the hottest-selling gift items for women at Christmas? Angora sweaters and sweater outfits, of course!

"We've ordered three times as many angora sweaters and outfits this year," said Bob Walling, vice president, general merchandise manager for Susie's, one of the nation's leading chains of women's fashion boutiques. "We're expecting angora to sell out as fast as it did last year."

The following are the most popular 1987-88 angora colors and styles, cited by Janice Gibney, buying vice president at Susie's:

• The most popular colors for angora this season are cream, peach, pink and black.

• Angora sweaters look best when matched with other fabrics such as velvet pants or wool skirts. "You can dress them up or down. Angora is perfect for both day and evening dressing," Gibney reports.

• Costume jewelry and other accessories make angora look extra special. A simple strand of costume pearls and pearl-studded earrings add to the elegance of angora.

• Mock turtle necklines, cable knit designs and crew necklines with buttons down the back are this year's most popular angora styles.

Susie's, with more than 250 stores across the U.S., offers a broad selection of quality, high-fashion dress and casual apparel and accessories for the contemporary woman.

The "stocking stuffer of the year" for second year running

A revolutionary new product that removes clothing wrinkles and will save consumers about one-third on their dry cleaning bills, Wrinkle Free brand fabric relaxant, has been selected as the "Stocking Stuffer of the Year" for Christmas '87 by an all-Elf panel of experts.

Passing the Elfian requirements to win the award is no easy task. Santa's Elves are bombarded with candidates each year, and have set down a number of stiff stocking stuffer guidelines that must be achieved in order to even be considered:

• All stocking stuffers must fit in a stocking (fair enough);

• All stocking stuffers should be a good product value (no lumps of coal);

• All stocking stuffers should be useful to as many people in the family as possible (to enable proper sharing of the bounty);

• All stocking stuffers should be reasonably priced (so as not to diminish the excitement of the presents under the tree).

Wrinkle Free meets all the above criteria. It is a product that can be used by anyone in the family to help maintain a daily neat appearance at work, for social occasions or on a business trip.

Its portable size (3 oz.) also makes it the perfect traveling companion (Santa keeps one in the sled), providing quick "presses" after arriving at the hotel or helping to remove wrinkles caused by seatbelts, reindeer harnesses and hours of sitting.

Wrinkle Free uses a patented new formula that is emitted in a fine, mist spray, similar to steam. Once the wrinkled fabric is sprayed, the solution quickly penetrates the clothing's fibers.

The Wrinkle Free formula then softens and "relaxes" the dampened fibers, enabling the user to smooth out wrinkles or reshape the fabric without staining. The fibers dry within minutes, eliminating the need for the application of heat.

The sweet smells of Christmas to enjoy the whole year through Christmas is certainly the most fragrant season. During this short period, the amount of fragrance purchased exceeds the total sold the rest of the year. With that in mind, here are a few "scent-sible" holiday gift suggestions.

Each contains two ounce bottles of both cologne and after shave with a useful novelty gift.

Select a genuine leather luggage tag with a privacy feature, or a leather key ring with brass accents, or a miniature ceramic shot glass mug. All sets are priced around $9.

To make her Yuletide sweeter, there's a Heaven Sent fragranced cherub candle. It features a decorated white candle holder with 3.5 ounces of Heaven Sent fragrance to burn. It's a hot buy for $5.50.

This same perfume offers those on-the-go a five-piece traveler gift consisting of moisturizing lotion, shower and bath gel, splash cologne and bath powder in a decorated, water-resistant, reusable cosmetic bag for under $9.

For your younger gal's needs, try Love's Baby Soft, the country's most popular teen fragrance. For about $5.50, you can get an adorable stocking stuffer: A choice of Love's Baby Soft, Love's Musky Jasmin or Love's Baby Soft Musk cologne spray in a Christmas cottage shaped box.

This Christmas, Members Only, the men's fashion setter fragrance, offers a special atomizer spray with 50 ml. of cologne for under $20.

If your wallet is as big as your love, buy him the limited edition 32 ounce designer bottle of Members Only that carries a hefty $150 price tag.

Time zone watches: Unique gifts

Looking for a truly unique gift for that special man in your life? If he commutes to Paris, London or Berlin, has to be in constant touch with farflung factories in Tokyo or Taiwan, or simply finds his business trips cross country take him into different time zones, today's executive needs a watch that will keep him apprised of local time in selected areas, says the Jewelry Industry Council, making the new multi-time zone watches a gift he'll treasure.

Two-zone and more time watches are not so much a luxury as a necessity in a world that grows smaller, both distance-wise and business-wise, each day.

Convenience at a glance

The businessman will find convenience in a watch that lets him know, by just a glance at his wrist, whether his factory in South America is starting its day, or if his family on the West Coast is awaiting his evening call.

There are many handsome stylings in multi-zone watches for holiday gift-giving. Some show analog and digital readouts. Some feature twin dials side by side.

There's even a flip-side watch, with dials on each side of its case. One watch features not two or three but five time zones on its dial.

Increasingly popular feature

While watches have long incorporated such other functions as measuring fractions of a second; calculating speed, distance and altitude; and even phases of the moon, the two or more time zone watch is fast gaining in popularity as trade and commerce make it a small world.

For the world-traveler or important executive with international ties, these new beauties are efficient, and require no attention as new batteries power them for from two to five years.

While time has been said to be of the essence, today's new watches have captured the essence of time in watches that are not only efficient but serve as handsome accessories to the well-dressed man's wardrobe, the Council affirms.

Ho, ho, ho—safe driving isn't a laughing matter

Over the river and through the woods—it sure sounds like fun, as long as the horse knows the way and the sleigh (or more likely, the car) doesn't break down.

Whether it's local shopping or a long trip to visit friends and family, we all spend more time in our "sleighs" during the holidays.

Before you get caught up in the hectic pace of the season, take a few minutes to prepare your car for winter driving.

The experts at Nationwide/Marlenn, major manufacturers of car care products, offer the following suggestions to help your car through the holidays.

Are the tires properly inflated? Now is the time to check tire pressure and add air if necessary. You should also consider changing to snow or studded tires, depending on the climate.

Add antifreeze to the radiator and check the fluid in the battery. If the fluid level is low, add distilled water.

Check your windshield wiper blades to ensure that they are in good condition before trying to use them in a storm. Drain and replace your windshield washer fluid.

For winter driving, use a solution with an antifreeze component to keep the fluid from freezing on the windshield.

Check the window and door seals. Are they in good condition? If not, frost can develop inside the car to make driving even the shortest distance treacherous.

Despite your precautions, winter driving can take its toll. By keeping a "driver survival kit" in the trunk, you'll be prepared for any road emergency.

To make your own kit, first buy a sturdy plastic case or tool box at your local automotive supply store. The container should measure at least 18"x 24", and be deep enough to accommodate several aerosol cans.

Nationwide/Marlenn offers a wide range of products to aid the do-it-yourselfer in solving winter's toughest driving problems.

For your driver survival kit, select Snap® Fix-A-Flat® to seal and inflate punctured tires in seconds. It's quick, safe and easy to use, and assures that you'll never again be forced to change a punctured tire during a blizzard.

Add a pair of jumper cables, at least two flares (to warn other drivers in case you do get stuck) and a flashlight. Be sure that the flashlight has fresh batteries, and carry extras for safety.

A small towel will come in handy, and a pair of lined work gloves will protect your hands from dirt and cold if you have to make emergency repairs.

Depending on the climate and terrain, you may want to keep a blanket and sandbags in the trunk. Cat box filler is a widely available, easy-to-handle alternative to sandbags, that provides excellent traction in the snow and ice.

Now that you're fully prepared for a winter of safe driving, consider assembling a driver survival kit for a friend or relative.

PREPARE YOURSELF—and the commuting executive, car-pool driver or new-car-owning teenager on your holiday gift list—for a winter of safe driving with an easy-to-assemble Driver Survival Kit. Snap® products, including Fix-A-Flat®, Wire Drier and Windshield De-Icer, assure that you'll be ready for any road emergency. Photograph courtesy of Nationwide/Marlenn.

GIVE YOUR FAVORITE STUDENT A CLASS RING FOR THE HOLIDAYS

Is the student on your holiday gift list a follower of fashion fads? If so, chances are that last year's neon sweat suits and scarves are this year's castaways. This Christmas, give the gift that can be worn with any fashion for years and years: A class ring.

According to ArtCarved Class Rings, a leading school ring manufacturer, a class ring is a symbol of achievement that'll bring memories back to life, as well as inspiration for the future.

Or, if your student prefers the dazzle of diamonds, or a distinctly contemporary look, today's class rings come in a wide range of fashionable styles designed to meet every preference.

And with the virtually unlimited personalization features available, each class ring can be custom-made to reflect every nuance of the student's personality.

GIVE DIRT THE BRUSH-OFF with Brush Up®, a new lightweight cordless vacuum cleaner from Eureka that works on both carpets and bare floors. With a 2000 r.p.m. motorized brush-roll, this rechargeable vacuum cleans up crumbs, pet hair and other dry spills. Not available in stores, Brush Up can be ordered directly from the manufacturer for $69.95 postpaid. Write Brush Up, Eureka, Bloomington, IL 61701, or call 1-309-828-2367.

Q. Since Nancy Reagan's cancerous lesion on her left breast was only about a quarter of an inch long, why did she have her whole breast removed?—H. Gordon, Arlington, Va.

A. Mrs. Reagan decided on a modified radical mastectomy because it is considered a conservative and proven surgical procedure. Also—unlike a lumpectomy, which may be less disfiguring—it calls in most cases for no immediate follow-up of radiation or chemotherapy treatments.

Q. They say Pat Cash, the Australian who won at Wimbledon this year, lives with a beautiful Norwegian, mother of their daughter. What is this beauty's name, and would you please run her photo?—Inger Lindeman, Galveston, Tex.

A. Anna-Britt Kristiansen and Pat Cash, unmarried as of this writing, are the proud parents of a son, Daniel. They reside in London.

Q. A few questions, if you don't mind, about Eddie Murphy: 1) Does he do drugs? 2) How much did he settle on his first manager, who sued him? 3) Is he really obsessed with Elvis Presley? —Sandy Sue Johnson, Mobile, Ala.

A. Murphy neither drinks nor does drugs. Reportedly, he settled out of court for $700,000 with Irving "King" Broder, who sued him for breach of contract. Murphy is a dedicated student of Elvis Presley's movies and recordings, has large photos of Presley on his walls.

Literary lovers: Simone de Beauvoir and Sartre in 1972

Q. You seem to have a smattering of knowledge concerning literature, which from time to time expresses itself in titillating trivia. Would you by chance know the name of the famous writer who, among his many mistresses, had two who were sisters? Was it H.G. Wells, the British novelist and womanizer?—H.S., Gambier, Ohio

A. H.G. Wells (1866-1946) had several mistresses, but no two who were sisters. One writer who had sisters among his mistresses was Jean-Paul Sartre (1905-80), the French existentialist author and philosopher. The sisters were Olga and Wanda Kosakiewiecz, whose company he shared with his lady, the late French writer Simone de Beauvoir.

Q. Queen Elizabeth of Britain has four children: Prince Charles, Princess Anne, Prince Andrew and Prince Edward. Is there a brain among them, or are all four regarded by their countrymen as "jerques"?—Amanda C., Lincoln, Neb.

A. The British royal family is not known for its brainpower. Prince Charles, heir to the throne, is probably the most intelligent of the queen's offspring. In some quarters, Andrew and Edward are judged to be "jerques." Princess Anne, however, once thought to be snitty and snobbish, has—by dint of strict attention to her public duties—earned the respect and admiration of her countrymen.

Q. Dolly Parton looks like a scarecrow on her Sunday-night TV variety show. They say she has lost 40 pounds. Is she suffering from bulimia or anorexia or some other disease, or is she just dieting? —Sis Johnson, Memphis, Tenn.

A. Parton, 41, says her weight reduction is the result of willpower and not disease.

ABC-TV

Dolly: Slim, not sick

Q. I am seriously thinking of becoming a schoolteacher and would appreciate your telling which states pay their teachers the highest average salaries.—Millie Benson, St. Louis, Mo.

A. As of the 1986-87 school year, Alaska was first, with $43,970 a year. Next came Washington, D.C., with $33,797; New York, $32,620; Michigan, $31,500; and California, $31,170.

Q. How old is Cher? How old is her young boyfriend, Rob Camilletti? Is Cher robbing cradles? Isn't her daughter by Sonny Bono, Chastity, older than Camilletti?—Joanne L., Dover, Del.

A. The singer-actress Cher is 41, Rob Camilletti is 23, and Chastity Bono is 18.

CHAMPION

THE FIGHTER was scared. He admitted he was scared. He was about to fight Mike Tyson, the undefeated heavyweight champion of the world, and he was, he confessed, terrified.

The bell rang.

The fight began.

"I just went out there throwing bombs," the fighter said.

And then?

"And then," the fighter said, "the dream ended."

The fighter woke up. The fighter no longer was fighting Mike Tyson. The fighter was Mike Tyson.

Tyson smiled, and his easy gap-toothed smile, plus his soft lisp, made him seem strangely gentle, made his awesome record and his oaken body—220 pounds compacted into a frame not quite 6 feet tall—seem like lies.

Thirty-two fighters have tried to figure out what to do to beat Mike Tyson in his brief, three-year professional career, and 32 have failed. Twenty-eight were knocked out, 20 of them in two rounds or less. Tyson is 21 years old. No heavyweight—not Dempsey, not Louis, not even Ali—accomplished so much so soon.

Tyson and his first trainer, Cus D'Amato, who died in 1985. Tyson became the heavyweight champ a year later.

ing, and he could someday be the best.

The only man who can beat Mike Tyson is Mike Tyson.

Mike Tyson fought himself for the first dozen years of his life. He flailed against the poverty and scorn and neglect that came with his territory, the black Brooklyn ghettos of Brownsville and Bedford-Stuyvesant. Before he reached his teens, he was a mugger, a thief, an inmate of a juvenile detention home. Officials there said he was sullen. They thought he was retarded.

"I always knew I was special," Tyson said, as he waited for a recent sparring session to begin. "I always knew I could do something exceptionally well. I just didn't know what it was. I didn't know how to go about finding out what it was."

At 13, at the Tryon School for Boys, for juvenile delinquents, Tyson's fists and fury caught the eye of a counselor, Bobby Stewart, an ex-fighter. After testing Tyson's skills himself, the counselor took the youngster, only 5 feet 8 but already close to 200 pounds, to work out at a boxing camp in the town of Catskill, N.Y.

The camp belonged to Cus D'Amato, the man who guided Floyd Patterson and José Torres to world championships, the man who battled the boxing establishment, who saw enemies everywhere and trusted no one.

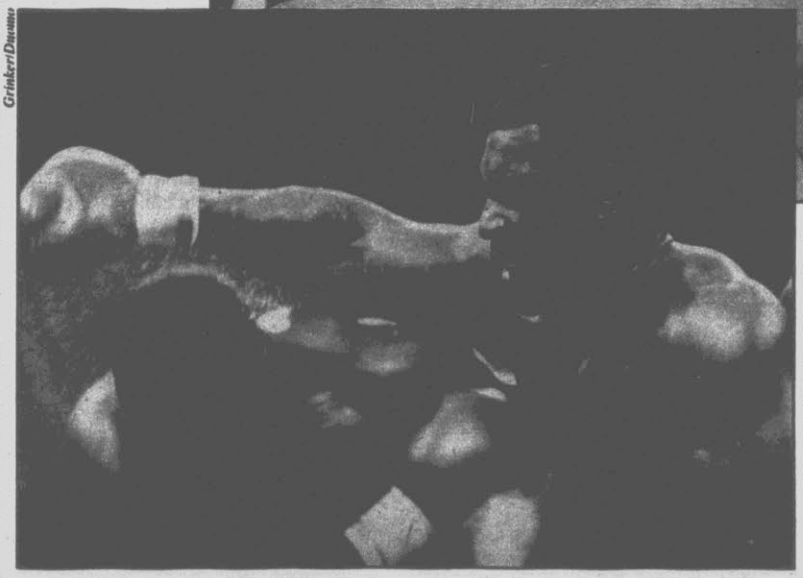
"I didn't trust him," Tyson recalled. "He looked so strange. The first day I met him, he said, 'You could be champ of the world, youngest heavyweight champ of the world.' That's what he said."

Tyson eventually moved into D'Amato's home, and the crusty old trainer became the father the once incorrigible kid had never known. Cus became Mike's guardian, legally. He shaped Tyson. He drove him. They watched hundreds of fight films together, studied the sport's ancient champions and older principles. D'Amato drummed into his disciple dedication and determination—the will to win.

"What makes you so good?"

"I just want to win," Tyson said.

Eddie Adams



Grinker/Daemmrich

Above: The champ visits Dallas Cummings, a patient at Children's Seashore House in Atlantic City, N.J., where he donated six TVs. Left: On Oct. 16 in the same city, Tyson slams Tyrell Biggs and retains title.

"He's so strong," said his sparring partner, Quick Tillis, after three rounds of punishment. "Stronger every day. Much stronger than he was a year ago."

The champ of the world pulled on his gloves. James "Quick" Tillis and James Broad, men who themselves had dreamed of championships, were ready to spar with him. In 1986, Tillis became the first fighter to last 10 rounds with Tyson. A year and a half later, Tillis' ribs were still sensitive. He wore a thick pad around his torso to cushion Tyson's body punches when they sparred.

When Broad sparred with Tyson, he wore the same pad. His ribs were not sore, and he wanted them to stay that way.

There were no fawning crowds, no rope-skipping rhythms, no fancy warm-up clothes. Just work. Three minutes of punching, a minute of rest, three more minutes of the punching that Tyson considers pleasure.

Outside the ring, two more sparring partners loosened up. One grunted and snarled as he shadow-boxed. "Getting ready to rumble!" he roared. Sure.

Tyson wore a custom-made headgear, a mini-headgear designed to protect his ears but not his jaw or his forehead. He had been taught that too many fighters, because they wore protective headgear in workouts, forgot that the head was vulnerable, forgot to protect it themselves with fists and footwork. Tyson never forgot. He crouched in the modified peek-a-boo style D'Amato had devised for him.

TYSON/continued

"He's so strong," Quick Tillis said, after three rounds of punishment. "Stronger every day. Much stronger than he was a year ago."

Tyson soared to the top with incredible speed, but not swiftly enough so the two people who raised him could see it happen. His mother, Lorna Tyson, who had tried to tame her son, died in 1982, and Cus D'Amato died three years later, exactly a year before Tyson became the youngest heavyweight champ, breaking the record set by D'Amato's earlier protégé, Floyd Patterson. "There's no Cus to tell me how I did," Tyson said before he won the title, "no mother to show my clippings to."

Tyson wishes his mother and his mentor could see the way he has whipped the demons of his childhood: Sullen? Retarded? He can act, charmingly, on the TV show Webster; he can mention George Bernard Shaw in conversation—and he wishes he had his mother and D'Amato with him now as he faces two new demons. Their names are fame and fortune, and they have proved themselves capable of destroying athletes as ruthlessly as poverty and scorn.

At 21, Tyson's lifestyle, even for the rich and ferocious, is unusual. He spends roughly a month preparing for each fight, doing nothing but training and eating and resting and staring at a TV set, and then, after he dispatches each opponent, he spends roughly a month not training, unwinding, doing whatever he chooses to do. "I'd like to be invisible," he says.

But he can't be. Like every superstar, like his friend Eddie Murphy, Tyson is pursued by temptation, which isn't so bad, and by innuendo, which is.

Tyson doesn't have to dignify rumors with a response—in the first place, he's the subject of fairly typical celebrity gossip, and in the second, who would have the nerve to bring it up to him?

"Boxing is something I can do better than anybody else on this planet," Tyson says. "But if I put my mind to something the way I do to boxing, there isn't anything I couldn't do."

"Could you be a doctor?"

"Yes. I could be anything I wanted to be."

Tyson grins. "You have to believe in yourself to love yourself," he says.

"You love yourself?"

"I do now," he says.

Tyson would love someday to be considered the greatest fighter who ever lived, and he may be—if he can survive wealth and acclaim. He also must beat the one legitimate challenger to his supremacy, the defrocked but still undefeated former champion, Michael Spinks (whose brother, Leon, incidentally, was knocked out by success).

In all likelihood, Mike Tyson—after meeting former champion Larry Holmes early in 1988—will face Michael Spinks late next year, in the richest, and perhaps roughest, bout of his still-budding career. In the meantime, he will fight lesser men, and sell toys.

"Beautiful!!" the director shouted.

"Hot!!" said the vice president of the advertising agency.

"Cut!!"

Tyson was shooting the commercial that is the heart of a $20 million marketing campaign created to launch a new home video game called "Mike Tyson's Punch-Out!!"

The object of the game is to defeat electronically a series of preliminary opponents and then advance to "The Dream Fight!!" against the champion of the world, Mike Tyson. The game duplicates Tyson's likeness—and, in theory, his proficiency.

Between takes on the commercial, Tyson dabbled at the game. The tune-ups bored him. He mocked an Hispanic fighter who performed an electronic flamenco dance before the opening bell. He pounced on an Asian fighter with the powerful name of Piston Honda. Easily, Tyson qualified to fight himself.

A small army of friends, aides and advertising and production people kept Tyson company, and he captivated them with his boyishness, his openness, his biceps and his impersonations—especially of his co-managers, Jim Jacobs and Bill Cayton, the co-owners of Big Fight Inc., both of whom dropped by and lived up to Tyson's portrayals of them.

One member of the crew working on the commercial mentioned that he lived in the Bronx, next to Montefiore Medical Center, and Tyson said, calmly, "The last time I was in Montefiore hospital, I was in handcuffs. I was under arrest. I remember standing there in the lobby, and there was this old lady looking at me, and I could tell she felt real sorry for me, and she didn't know it, but all I wanted to do was take her purse."

Tyson wasn't bragging, wasn't trying to impress people with how bad he once had been. Nor was he ashamed. He was very matter-of-fact. He seemed as at peace with his past as he was with his present.

Then he went back to the game—to "The Dream Fight!!" Mike Tyson fought Mike Tyson. "I've got an advantage," he said. "I know all my weaknesses."

"How'd you do?"

Mike Tyson shook his head. "I lost," he said. "In 10 seconds."

"Why?"

Mike Tyson smiled.

"I don't think he's meant to be beat," he said.

He could be right.

'Twas the night before Christmas and all through the house not a creature was stirring,

well, maybe just a little stirring.

WHEN TO PULL the plug? Who gets a new heart? What to do with a severely brain-damaged baby? Doctors face these questions of life and death daily.

Technology, the sorcerer's apprentice, has brought us incredible good, yet we're confronted with more confusion than ever before. Twenty-five to 50 percent of the children who need liver transplants die waiting. Should a surgeon transplant part of an adult liver, an operation that is not as good for the child? Or should he wait—and gamble?

Today, many doctors feel as if someone is constantly looking over their shoulders. They say that the threat of lawsuits hampers their ability to practice. The huge rise in malpractice insurance premiums has forced many obstetricians to give up altogether.

Medical ethics—or "bioethics," as the field is known—was almost unheard of in the 1950s. Today, there is a virtual ethical revolution. Most of the nation's 127 medical schools now teach ethics, and 100 full- or part-time ethicists are on medical school faculties. PARADE talked to doctors all over the U.S., asking them what ethical issues they confronted most often. Entire books have been written on each of these subjects, and there are no real right or wrong answers. But here, in a nutshell, are reactions of American doctors to these wrenching problems.

1. How do you decide when it's time to pull the plug? Not long ago, a woman who'd had a heart attack at a supermarket was brought into an emergency room. A neurologist declared her brain-dead. The doctor on call consulted the woman's two daughters, who said she never would have wanted to be kept on life-support machines. When the woman miraculously recovered the next day, the doctor asked point-blank whether she wanted to be resuscitated if she had another heart attack. "Damn straight," she replied. The doctor noted that the two daughters never reappeared. The woman died a few weeks later—after the hospital had gone to great lengths to keep her alive. The doctor was shaken.

There is "paranoia among doctors" about disconnecting life support, says Dr. Ronald R. Roth of Smithtown, N.Y. "Hospitals have gotten lawyers involved, and then there are lengthy documents to be signed and renewed. It's a tough question because there may be a disagreement between the family and the doctor. For years, there was a quiet way of doing it between doctors, nurses and the families. A patient might be more slowly resuscitated in case of emergency. But now nurses insist on the 'Do Not Resuscitate' order on medical charts."

There are other debates too. For example, if a patient is in what doctors call a "vegetative state," are food and water considered medical treatments?

Recently the Hastings Center, a think tank in Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., published guidelines to help doctors decide these very questions. Yet some doctors say the debate will never end. "Ideally," says Dr. Renate Justin of Terre Haute, Ind., "we should ask people when they're feeling pretty good what they would want. Doctors think people will get scared. But it's better to be clear."

2. What do you do when insurance companies won't allow ample hospital time? This issue is a sore point among doctors. "Some patients might be fine in the hospital after three days for a certain procedure," says Dr. Jennifer Gordon of Boston Children's Hospital. "But some who aren't ready to be released go home and get sicker. Then they have more complications and far more suffering. It's crazy."

Dr. Edouard Servy, who practices in Augusta, Ga., agrees. "Think of it," he says. "If a woman is having a hysterectomy, the insurance company might not reimburse her for more than three days. People are under stress because they have to be in the hospital, but then they have someone threatening that they won't care for them. Sometimes you get two phone calls a day from the insurance company saying, 'Why isn't that patient released?' They're trying to intimidate the physician and the patient. That's terrible. It might be our fault—some physicians might have abused the system—but you have to trust someone."

3. Who gets the one available kidney: a 45-year-old woman or a 53-year-old man? "I've had that kind of problem in emergency rooms," says Dr. Roth. "Two dying patients and only one surgeon. But I was in the military and faced disasters too. First, you evaluate the situation as best you can. You don't give blood to someone you don't expect to survive if someone else might live with that limited supply. I don't enjoy making those decisions, but reality is reality. A layman might have a hard time with that. But a doctor's decision-making process gets sharpened over the years."

4. How do you feel about abortion? Many doctors we spoke with support the Supreme Court and freedom of choice for women. Some mentioned women who had been raped or young girls who had been sexually abused. They talked about pregnant women carrying severely handicapped or brain-dead babies. Admitting that he was separating personal and professional feelings, one doctor said that, though he was against abortions, "I cannot allow myself to sway a woman from that decision." Doctors point out that there are complicated factors in each patient's life, and a doctor cannot make decisions for an individual. As one put it, "I don't know what I would do if I knew my wife were carrying a severely retarded child."

5. What happens when patients don't want to know they have cancer? "There are a lot of things you don't want to hear in this world," says Dr. Sheila Calderon of Dallas, "but you have to tell people the truth. Sometimes people are trying to protect their relatives, but if you explain that those are the rules, they usually understand." One doctor says it is important for people to know, so that they may plan their last days and make peace with their families.

"I think most of the time it's wrong not to tell a person," says Dr. Kurt Werner of Helena, Mont. "If a son asked me not to tell his mother she had cancer, I would try to explain that as long as she's competent, he can't run her life for her. Maybe he would give me some information that would change my opinion, although I think that would be rare."

"I can't very well treat someone and not tell the truth," says Dr. Justin of Terre Haute. "I am a poor liar."

6. What about in vitro fertilization? Dr. Servy, an endocrinologist, says, "I'm a Catholic, and the Pope says he doesn't want anyone making clones—that could be very bad for society. But that's not what we do. With in vitro, we take care of a patient and her disease. We work with women who could not have children otherwise, because their tubes are diseased or they've had an ectopic pregnancy. We're repairing an abnormality of nature. I get a lot of joy out of it, and so do the patients who have children."

7. What do you do with a baby so handicapped there is no hope of it leaving the hospital? "If a baby is born who has no hope of living past a few months," says Dr. William Selvidge of Merced, Calif., "then the unethical thing to do is to prolong suffering just to prolong life."

Dr. Gordon of Boston has watched children in vegetative states suffer through painful treatments day after day. One child had virtually no brain function and no hope of surviving. "It was totally insane," she says. "Each shift had as its aim keeping her alive for 12 more hours, yet the entire pediatrics house staff secretly wanted her to die. In this case, medical intervention was an extremely destructive force." The parents of the child divorced. The younger brother developed severe emotional problems because he was so ignored. The hospital had assumed the entire cost of the child's care—hundreds of thousands of dollars. "And yet I know that other children and adults with potential for perfectly normal lives couldn't get care because they couldn't afford it," adds Gordon. "All the money the hospital might have used to absorb those costs was spent on one child."

As Dr. Werner says, "I think it comes down to quality of life. You can't legislate that across the board." P

Hollywood and the Stock Market Crash

In Hollywood as elsewhere, the name Herbert Hoover usually is associated with the stock market crash of October 1929 and the subsequent Great Depression.

Fifty-eight years from now, when the name Ronald Reagan is mentioned, will it call up memories of the crash of October 1987 and perhaps another Great Depression?

That query was merely one of many raised in the screen colony last month when the stock market plunged 770 points in four days —Oct. 14, 15, 16 and 19.

During those four days, show-biz executives reportedly lost a fortune on paper. Lew Wasserman, chairman of MCA and generally regarded as the most powerful man in the film industry, was estimated to have dropped $61 million in personal wealth. Aaron Spelling, head of the TV production company bearing his name, was said to have lost about $18 million. Rupert Murdoch, owner of 20th Century-Fox, was credited with the loss of $1 billion, while Michael Eisner, chairman of Walt Disney, was said to have watched the worth of his assets plummet an estimated $80 million.

Being the make-believe town it is, Hollywood has few residents who accept those figures as even reasonably accurate. What is undeniable, however, is that the movie moguls were worth more before Oct. 14 than they were after Oct. 19.

The Medicine Works Or Your Money Back

Have you ever heard of a pharmaceutical company offering to refund your money if any of its physician-prescribed drugs don't work? Well, one such company is G.D. Searle of Skokie, Ill., producers of Calan, Banthine, Demulen, Lomotil and other drugs.

Two months ago, Dr. Sheldon Gilgore, president of Searle, introduced the "Searle Patient Promise." The program reimburses patients 100% of their out-of-pocket costs for the most recent prescription of any Searle drug with which they are dissatisfied.

"There is probably not a medicine cabinet in America," said Gilgore, "that does not have medicine in it that a doctor, well-intentioned, prescribed but which, for some reason, a patient cannot use."

If you are one of those patients, stuck with a Searle drug you cannot or will not use, take the drug to the doctor who prescribed it. He should have a refund certificate, which he must fill out and sign. You then mail this—along with your pharmacy receipt and any unused portion of the prescribed medicine—to Searle Patient Promise, Box 92110, Elk Grove Village, Ill. 60009-2110. Searle will promptly refund your out-of-pocket costs, including the cost of mailing.

Rationing Belly Dancers

The Egyptian government no longer is issuing new licenses to aspiring belly dancers. Authorities in Cairo report that enough is enough. An estimated 14,000 women already have been issued such permits, and the Islamic fundamentalists and Muslim extremists—some of whose fanatic members assassinated Egyptian President Sadat six years ago—are opposed to belly dancers and the nightclubs in which they shake.

Hispanics Rise

A recent report from the Census Bureau shows that the Hispanic population in the U.S. is growing at a rate five times faster than the non-Hispanic population.

In March, there were 18,790,000 Hispanics in the nation (or 7.9% of the U.S. population), consisting of the following subgroups:

Land of origin	Number	Percentage among Hispanics in U.S.
Mexico	11,762,000	62.6%
Puerto Rico	2,284,000	12.2%
Central or South America	2,139,000	11.4%
Cuba	1,017,000	5.4%

Barbra Streisand and boyfriend, composer Richard Baskin: She could teach a course

It is not particularly well known, but the singer-actress-director Barbra Streisand, 45, is one of the most philanthropic stars in show business. Several years ago, she gave $500,000 to help endow the Streisand Professorship in Cardiology at the UCLA School of Medicine. More recently, she financed the Streisand Professorship in Intimacy and Sexuality at the University of Southern California.

Though her formal academic background consists of attending Erasmus Hall High School in Brooklyn, Streisand—on the basis of her lengthy and intensive practical experience—may well be qualified to teach the USC course on Intimacy and Sexuality herself.

How to become a Straight-A Student

REGARDLESS OF YOUR PAST PERFORMANCE IN SCHOOL

All of us are capable of much more than we achieve. I learned this lesson the hard way—through my own experiences as a student. My grades in high school were so poor that I had to go through a special remedial program to get into college, and once in college I received several D's in my freshman year. But things changed. I went on to get a Ph.D. in Economics, and in the process I made an A in every course I took—in fact, I made an A on every test in every course I took! At the time I was attending classes at night, working at a full-time job, and taking care of home and family responsibilities—but I still had plenty of time left over for leisure activities.

How to Improve Your Grades

What was my secret for success? I knew exactly what to study for a test, when to study it, and how much to study. I have developed a complete system that turns studying into something you can excel at. It took me more than twenty years to develop my system but now it is available to you in just a few hours by reading my new book, GETTING STRAIGHT A's. I start out by teaching you the basic skills, such as how to read books more effectively, and how to write term papers. You will learn how to plan a course of study, how to select an instructor, where to sit in class, secrets of good note-taking, and what to do to successfully complete assignments at home. You will also learn how to efficiently prepare for tests and strategies for taking different types of tests—because performing successfully on tests is an acquired skill, not an innate ability. In my book I teach you the skills to become a test-wise student. I show you study tips that work, and the secrets of time management, so you will have more time to enjoy the good life. And I present all of this in a format that is easy-to-follow and enjoyable to read.

Become A Better Student or Your Money Back

You don't have to be a bookworm or genius to go to the head of the class. I have helped many other students reach the top—including those who previously had serious difficulties with their studies. Whether you are in high school, an undergraduate, or a graduate student, my book has something important to offer you. In fact, it may be one of the most important books you ever read! Let's face it: The grades you receive now will help you get into the college of your choice, and beyond that, perhaps the job of your choice.

I'll make you this guarantee: If you practice my techniques and don't see a significant improvement in your grades in just one semester, I'll give you your money back. No questions asked. You risk nothing. So why settle for less than your best? Aim for the top and you will see that it can change your life, as it changed mine. If you're a student or know one, help him or her start GETTING STRAIGHT A's now. Order your copy today!

GETTING STRAIGHT A's

What the Students Say:

"GETTING STRAIGHT A's" has helped me organize my thoughts and improve my study habits. I raised my grade point average from 2.2 to 3.5 in just one semester!"
—Diane Bedard, Virginia Commonwealth University

"Your book has contributed significantly to my achievement of straight A's in high school. It should prove indispensable to all high school students, because the efficient study methods can easily be worked into even the busiest schedule." —Kritis Das Gupta, Oxon Hill High School, Md.

What the Experts Say:

"At last—a lucid study that provides sound advice and is fun to read. Gordon Green may just be the new "Dale Carnegie" on how to succeed in school!"
—Sar Levitan, Director, Center for Social Policy Studies

—Terrel H. Bell, Former Secretary of Education

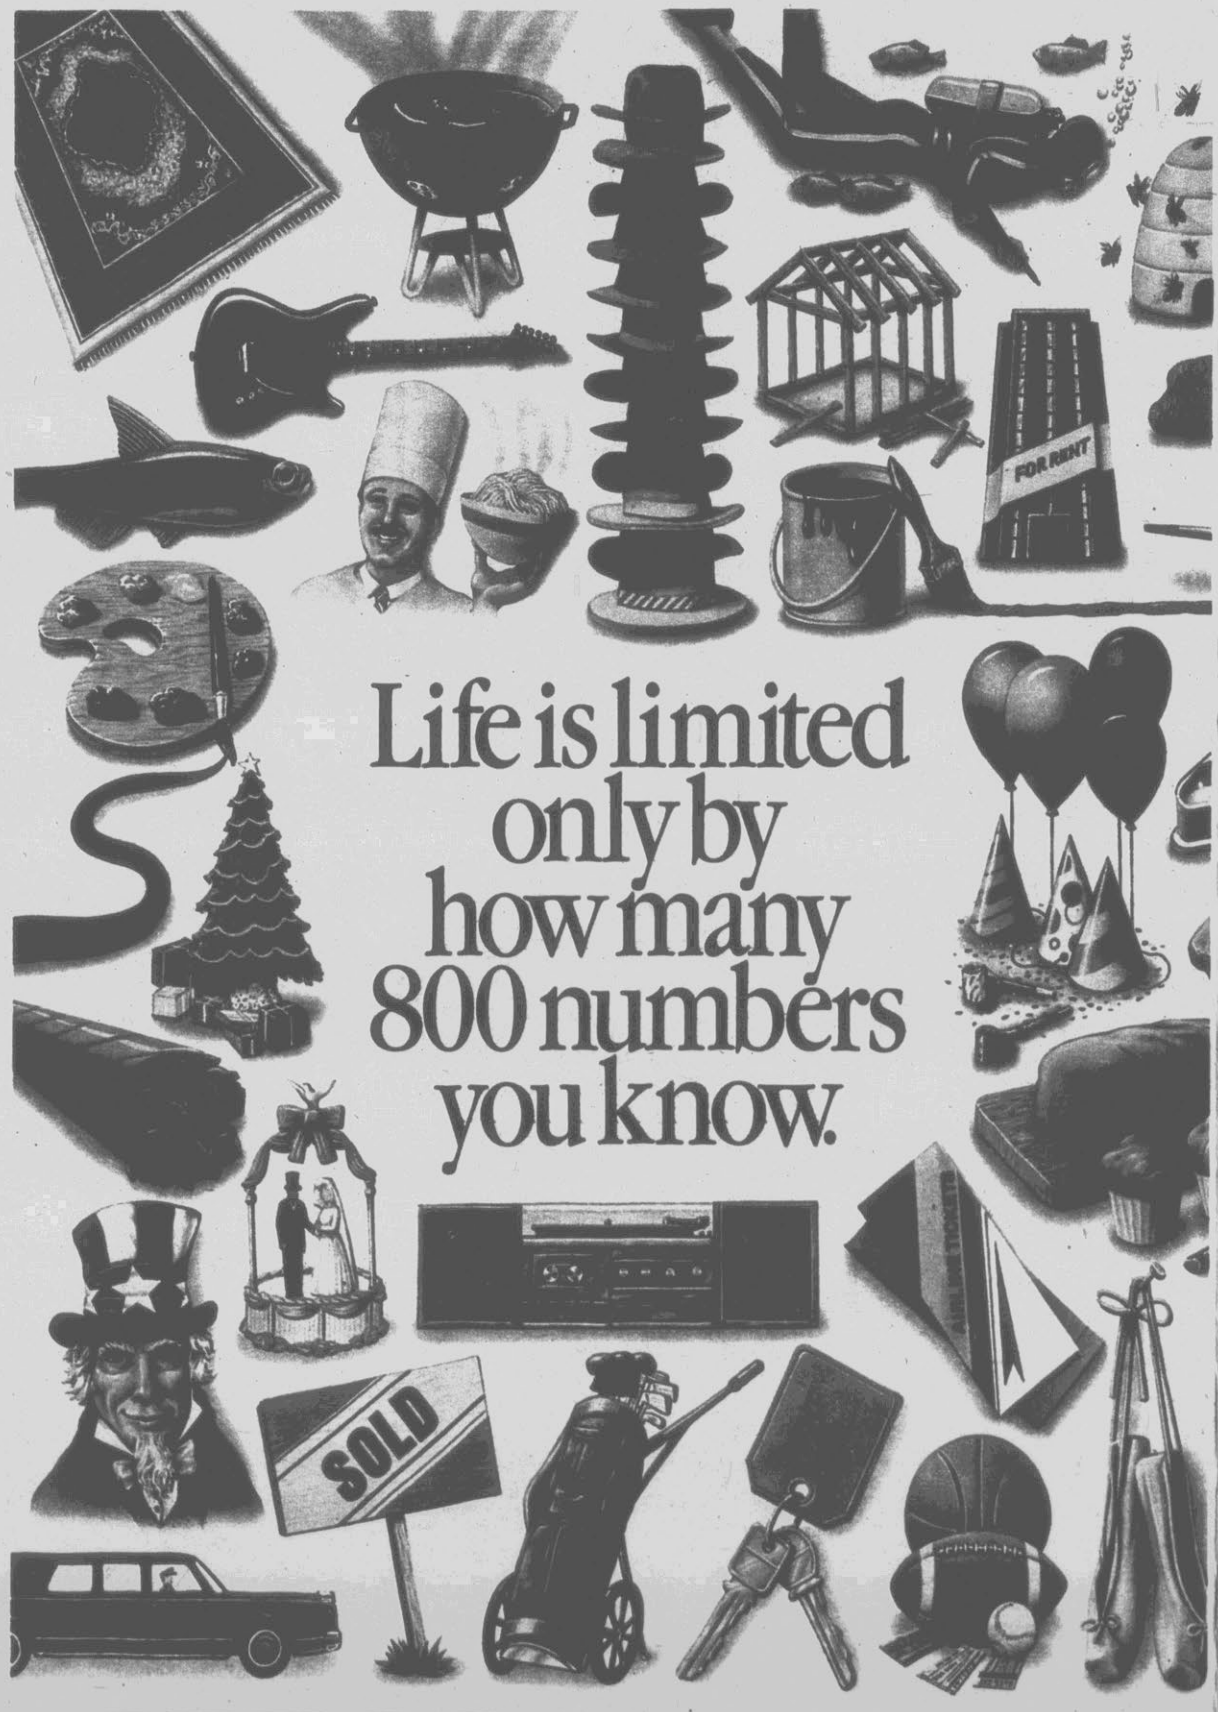
Burnett Turns Battle Of Sexes Into Comedy

Coleman hugs Burnett

Carol Burnett turns a remake of Neil Simon's comedy Plaza Suite into a tour de force for herself: She plays a different woman in each of the movie's three segments (all taking place in the same suite in New York's Plaza Hotel, at different times). She's the wife who plans a romantic weekend with her philandering husband (Hal Holbrook); a suburban housewife whose high school sweetheart, a successful Hollywood producer (Dabney Coleman), tries to seduce her; and the mother of a bride (played by Burnett's daughter, Erin Hamilton) who hides in a locked bathroom minutes before her wedding (Richard Crenna is Dad). ABC, Thursday, 9-11 p.m. EST. (In the 1971 movie, Walter Matthau played all three male roles, while three different actresses took the women's parts.)

AN ORPHAN GIRL FINDS A NEW LIFE

Tomorrow night (at the ridiculous time for a family show of 9-11 p.m. EST), CBS gifts us with a new version of The Secret Garden, the beautiful, emotionally charged story of Mary Lennox, a bad-tempered and lonely orphan who is transformed through her interest in things outside herself—a bedridden cousin, a neglected piece of earth. Also, fine new editions of the book in hardcover (Henry Holt, $18.95) and paper (Dell, $2.95) are in stores, as well as an evocative reading on audiocassette (Listen for Pleasure, $14.95).



Life is limited only by how many 800 numbers you know.

800. THE UNLIMITED NUMBER.

Want to rent a car? Buy wallpaper? Golf clubs? Want some new recipes? Want to discover exotic vacation spots? Want to learn how to install a kitchen sink?

Want to comparison shop without leaving the house? Find out about airline schedules and hotel reservations? All without paying for long distance calls?

All you need are 800 numbers (and a phone of course).

You don't need to go to the mall. In fact, you don't need to go anywhere.

There's even an AT&T Toll Free 800 Consumer Directory that lists thousands of 800 numbers belonging to companies across

Harvard Guide Points Way to Good Health

Your Good Health (Harvard University Press, $24.95) is a medical book that's different. Rather than describing symptoms and treatments, it discusses the nature of various diseases, how you can help prevent them and the way you should react to them. Its subtitle describes its approach very accurately: "How To Stay Well and What To Do When You're Not."

The Harvard authors, Drs. William I. Bennett, Stephen E. Goldfinger and G. Timothy Johnson, have an easy writing style and are well up on the latest information. The result is a thoughtful and informative book.

A CORRECTION

WILBUR MILLS

Former Rep. Wilbur Mills (D., Ark.) was incorrectly described as deceased in an article on Social Security in the Oct. 18 issue of PARADE. On the contrary, Mr. Mills—who is 78 and who retired from the House of Representatives in 1977—is alive and well and practicing law in Washington, D.C. He also lectures on alcoholism and drug abuse.

Mr. Mills, speaking after the article appeared, noted that—although he introduced and subsequently voted for, as part of a conference report, an amendment to raise Social Security benefits as the Consumer Price Index rose—he actually opposed the amendment up until it was approved in a House-Senate conference committee. PARADE's article said Mr. Mills had "led the effort" to win approval for the amendment.

Do You Know What These Words Mean?

Fuel-Injection. . .Digital Instruments. . .Turbocharger. . .Four-Valve Heads

Though protected by an air bag, an option in this Ford Tempo, the driver must wear a seat belt and a shoulder harness to remain safely positioned in an accident.

WHEN YOU bought a new car 10 years ago, your chief choices were: "Six or V-8? Two-or four-door? Color?"

Now consumers pay an average of $13,500 for a car, and the average driver keeps a car for seven years. Picking the wrong car can be costly. Your decision is far more difficult today, because there are so many new high-tech options—things like turbochargers, ABS brakes, 16-valve heads. Some of these additions increase driving pleasure and safety, but others raise your costs for fuel, repairs and insurance. The following explanations could help you to make an informed buying choice.

TURBOCHARGER. A turbocharger is an engine-mounted rotary pump designed to force a greater fuel/air mixture into your engine under pressure. This gives your engine more horsepower than if it has to breathe for itself. The pump spins at up to 120,000 rpm and is driven by the rush of gases out the exhaust pipe.

It takes 10 times as much horsepower to accelerate quickly up a freeway ramp as it does to maintain 65 mph once you're on the highway. A turbocharger provides more horsepower for acceleration yet allows highway cruising with a smaller engine (for better fuel economy).

Today's turbos are water-cooled for longer life, but a turbocharged engine often will be less durable than a "normally aspirated" (non-turbo) engine in the same car. It also usually will require repairs more often and more oil changes—every 3500 miles rather than 7000 miles. And, since extra power means burning more fuel, you get fewer miles per gallon with a turbo.

Shelly Katz

The least expensive turbocharged car is Chevy's $8240 Sprint—$2745 more than the same Sprint without a turbo. A turbocharged Calloway Corvette or a Porsche 911 costs $25,000 more than either car without the turbo. Typically, you can buy a turbocharged engine only as part of a "high-performance" package, which may put you into a high-risk group for automobile insurance.

A turbocharger is not for everyone—it's more expensive to buy and insure, more costly to repair and maintain, and should be allowed to "idle down" for 60 seconds before you shut off the engine each time you drive. But, if you love the turbo's sudden rush of power, you may find it all worthwhile.

FOUR-VALVE HEADS. A normal engine has two valves in each cylinder—one for intake, one for exhaust—operated by cams on a single shaft. Cars are available with double-overhead cams, hemispherical combustion chambers and four valves per cylinder. Most little four-cylinder engines have a total of 16 valves, such as the 16-valve Toyota Corolla FX16 and the Volkswagen GTI 16V.

Four-valve-per-cylinder heads dramatically increase horsepower without decreasing fuel economy. The valve gear has twice as many parts as a regular two-valve layout but is just as reliable. There are no drawbacks to a four-valve-per-cylinder engine, and the cost is only a few hundred dollars more than a two-valve-per-cylinder engine, though other performance options can raise the total package price by $2000 or more.

FUEL INJECTION. Computer-controlled electronic fuel injection for engines literally injects the fuel mixture into the cylinders. Formerly, air and fuel were mixed in the carburetor, and engine vacuum sucked the mixture into the cylinders. Fuel injection provides precise fuel management for higher gas mileage, better performance, less air pollution.

ANTI-SKID BRAKES. "Threshold braking" (a point reached just before your brakes lock up and skid) is the quickest way to stop. With anti-skid brakes, a computerized sensor in each wheel "knows" when the brake is about to lock, so it slightly releases the brake-fluid pressure to "pump" the brakes hundreds of times each second.

Anti-skid brakes represent the biggest safety advance in decades. As an option—for about $1000—they'll give you shorter stopping distance plus the ability to stop on slick roads while retaining steering control. Many makers offer anti-skid brakes as standard equipment, including pickup trucks by Chevrolet and Ford. No other option so dramatically improves both safety and driving performance for so small a price.

DIGITAL INSTRUMENTS. Most cars feature optional electronic dashboards instead of the traditional dials. Electronic instruments cost an additional $500 to $1000. Compared to traditional instruments, we find most electronic instruments hard to read, unreliable and expensive to fix.

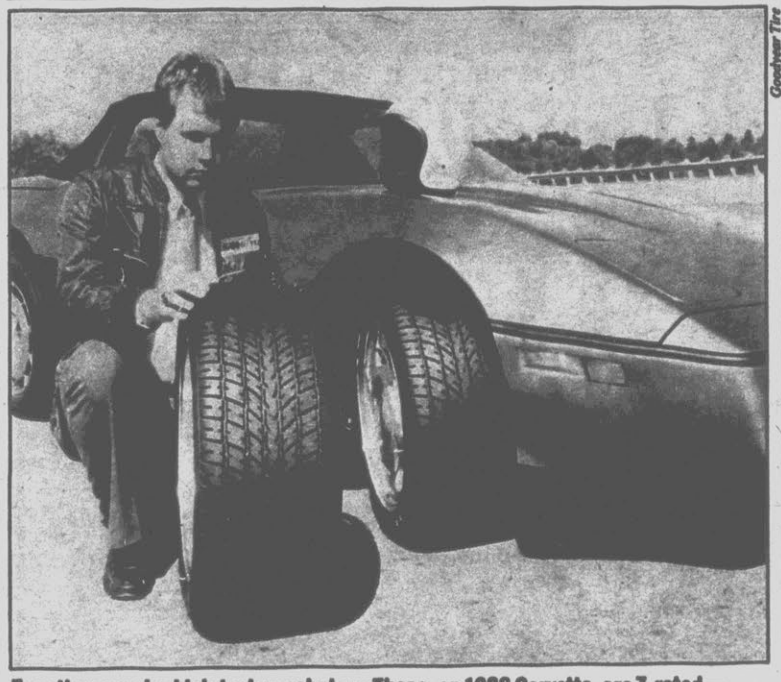
The most technically advanced dashboard is standard on every new Buick Riviera. It features a cathode-ray tube (CRT) in the center of the dash. You can tune the radio and adjust the heater by touching the right spot on the CRT screen. Some folks love this. We find it distracting. Many electronic dashboards come with a trip computer to calculate such things as how many miles you can drive before you need to stop for gas, or your average speed for the last two hours. We find it unnecessary. But nearly all drivers are grateful for the programmed computers that give the CHECK YOUR OIL reminder—especially since oil-change intervals are so much greater than they used to be.

FOUR-WHEEL DRIVE. The latest trend in passenger cars is four-wheel drive, which was designed not for clambering around in the woods but for giving sure-footed traction on slippery roads. Most systems allow you to switch from two-wheel to four-wheel drive when you need it. Audi's Quattro, VW's Quantum and the new Range Rover are permanently locked in four-wheel drive. Subaru is the only make we know of now offering three drive choices for one model: The Subaru station wagon comes in either full-time two- or four-wheel drive, or with "On Demand" (switchable) four-wheel drive. We like saving on gas money and extra maintenance costs with a part-time system.

Four-cylinder Toyota Corolla FX16 has four valves per cylinder, for more horsepower.

FOUR-WHEEL STEERING. Honda's Prelude Si 4WS and Mazda's white, four-door 626 Turbo 4WS offer steering for all four wheels. Honda's system is mechanical; Mazda's is mechanical and computer-controlled. In both, at low speeds, the front and rear wheels steer in opposite directions for easier maneuverability; at high speeds, all wheels steer in the same direction for quicker handling and better stability. It's an exciting concept and could become standard on all cars one day. For now, Honda charges a $1300 premium, Mazda $1100.

BY RICHARD AND JEAN TAYLOR-CONSTANTINE



Even tires require high-tech vocabulary. These, on 1988 Corvette, are Z-rated—meaning they can sustain speeds above 150 mph. They come with special suspension.

ADJUSTABLE SUSPENSION. Some Japanese cars—primarily sporty models like the Toyota Supra and the Mazda RX-7 GXL—can be ordered with computer-controlled shock absorbers that automatically become stiffer at higher speeds for sharper handling and stability.

We find these high-performance cars need the stiffest setting even at low speeds and would benefit from still stiffer settings for high speeds. Real driving enthusiasts prefer special shocks that are even stiffer than anything now available from car dealers, but everyday motorists probably won't notice the difference between "soft" and "sport."

This year, Lotus Formula One racers have the first "active" suspension ever put on a car. A complex on-board computer has motion sensors on the steering wheel and in the wheels and air-speed sensors on the front suspension that work instantly to prevent "lean" on corners, nosedive under braking and "squat" under acceleration. On rough roads, the suspension smooths out each bump.

British-based Lotus, though an independent subsidiary, is owned by General Motors, so it may be only a matter of time before this suspension system appears on a production car, probably a Corvette. It should be a breakthrough on the order of anti-skid brakes, and worth whatever price GM puts on it.

AIR BAGS. Air-bag exponents have been trying for 20 years to push automakers to put the devices into production cars. More than 20 lines of the '88 cars offer passive systems—motorized and non-motorized, two- and three-point, and optional and standard air bags. Mercedes-Benz offers passenger restraints and driver's-side air bags on all models. Optional air bags are offered on Ford's Tempo and Topaz models. Additional air bags cost upward of $800 each.

Anti-skid brakes are a huge safety advance. A great option, they give shorter stops, control on slick roads.

Air bags effectively cushion the impact in head-on collisions between 12½ mph and 30 mph, the speeds at which most fatal head-on collisions occur. They are relatively ineffective in side or rear impacts, rollovers and multi-impact accidents. For air bags to work properly, you must wear seat belts.

Air-bag critics say seat belts are just as effective in preventing fatalities, work in all types of accidents, cost $800 to $1000 less per car, and are much more reliable. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration argues that costs will fall as air bags are produced in large volume.

SEAT BELTS. Basically, these are active—you fasten them—or passive—they wrap around you. Most shoulder restraints are passive, and most lap belts are active. Many are three-point belts, with contact at both hips and at your shoulder. Passive restraints usually are fastened to the door, and you place your body into their fabric as you enter. Once seated, you close the door and the belt fastens automatically. Many new belts adjust at the shoulder to increase comfort.

Jennifer Beals

THIS WAS TWO YEARS AGO, AND the actress Jennifer Beals was doing the talk shows, plugging The Bride, an updated movie version of The Bride of Frankenstein, in which she played opposite Sting, the British rock star. I was to interview her in New York. When I got to CBS-TV that afternoon, one of the producers grabbed me. "We're in trouble. I saw this kid on the morning news. She doesn't give. 'Yes' and 'no' answers. No life, no pep, no enthusiasm. They couldn't pull it out of her."

That's all you need—an interview subject who doesn't come to play. It's the worst thing that can happen on live television. I'd rather have root canal.

I knew Miss Beals was beautiful. I knew she was a student at Yale. I knew that, for the time being, acting was only a summer vacation-type hobby. So I said, the heck with talking about the movie, and we talked about college. I think the interview went on for five or six minutes, which is a lot of time on TV, and she was terrific. It turned out that being a Yalie and getting her degree in American studies was what Jennifer Beals really wanted to talk about, and we—and the audience—had a wonderful time.

So much for getting ulcers by worrying about disasters that never occur.

Her first break was as an extra in My Bodyguard, while still in high school. Her starring debut was as the steelworker who lived to dance in Flashdance. Jennifer didn't actually do all that dancing—a professional dancer did—but no matter. She had such presence and beauty and freshness, no one complained.

Flashdance was one of those low-budget movies that reaps huge profits, and the offers poured in. Jennifer turned them down—all but the title role in Cinderella, an episode in Shelley Duvall's cable-TV series of children's stories, and a stage play in Buffalo.

Most young actresses who get the sort of instant acclaim Miss Beals received cash right in. Not Jennifer. She went back to Yale, took courses in Chicago on acting and directing, and also studied acting in New York.

This is what's called "professionalism," and now that she has her degree, it's paying off. Her new film, Kid Gloves, puts her in with the man some critics think is our greatest actor, Gene Hackman. Jennifer plays a young nurse who gets involved with a family of boxers.

This winter she and her filmmaker husband, Alexandre Rockwell, will rather shrewdly escape the rigors of snowy New York and head for Sri Lanka, in the Indian Ocean, to start shooting her next movie, a love story called Lay Over.

BORN: Dec. 19, 1963, in Chicago.
PERSONAL: Married Alexandre Rockwell, 1986. Graduated from Yale University, 1987.
FILMS: My Bodyguard, 1980; Flashdance, 1983; The Bride, 1985.
TV: Cinderella, 1985.

BRADY'S BITS

What is it about Yale and actresses? First Meryl Streep, then Jodie Foster and Jennifer Beals. The university stonewalls press queries about Jennifer's undergraduate days, but a pal tells me about a case of mistaken identity. It seems the Yale women's basketball team had a player named Jennifer Deal. Following one game, the sports pages carried her name as "Jennifer Beals." The next time the female Yalies played, the team enjoyed a rare sellout. Everyone wanted to see Miss Beals going for the hoop.

David Birney Takes A 'Long Journey'

By Evan Levine

Husband and wife teams are all over the small screen these days. Tim and Daphne Maxwell Reid are cooking on "Frank's Place"; Jill Eikenberry and Michael Tucker speak legalese on "L.A. Law" and planned each other's murder in the TV movie "Assault and Matrimony," and Dixie Carter and Hal Holbrook have designs on each other on "Designing Women." Now David Birney (formerly of St. Elsewhere") and Meredith Baxter Birney ("Family Ties") are furthering the trend in the CBS movie "The Long Journey Home," airing Sunday, Nov. 29.

The Birneys met throught their roles on the early '70s series "Bridget Loves Bernie," in which they played newlyweds. The on-screen and they married in real life. Fourteen years later, they're starring as husband and wife on screen again, in a suspense film about a woman who wants to have her missing-in-action husband declared legally dead so she can remarry. When he shows up unexpectedly, the two become involved in murder and international intrigue.

"We had looked for projects to do together for a while; this was the first thing we saw that we liked," says David Birney, who, with his wife, is also serving as co-executive producer of the project. "I hope we've been able to make a contribution, not just have our name in the credits." He says that acting as producer helps him function better as an actor because it gives him access to more information. "Actors are often the last to know what's going on," he claims. "Sometimes the only way you know a scene worked is because everyone has left the set."

The Birneys starred in "Talley's Folly" on stage, but they had been looking for a screen project for about three years. "It's very film noir," he says of "Long Journey." "It resembles movies I loved as a kid, like 'Odd Man Out.' We decided not to hold out for a film script that might never come along."

David Birney and Meredith Baxter Birney star in CBS's "The Long Journey Home," a romantic suspense story airing Sunday, Nov. 29.

Birney's rather eclectic taste in projects has included a starring role in the Broadway production of "Amadeus" and hosting "Beyond 2000," a syndicated science special. "I take projects that interest me," he says. "I did have to make a decision recently — I hosted 'Good Morning America' when it was in transition, and there's a chance they might have considered me as a permanent host. But I decided I didn't want that to be the only thing I do. I want the freedom to accept different projects."

Michele Will Tell

Dear Michele: My mother insists that Jack Lord of "Hawaii Five-O" died of a drug overdose. I say he took all the money he made on the show and retired to Hawaii where he owns a lot of property. Who is right? — PATTI COLLINS, GARRETTSVILLE, OHIO.

Lord is alive and doing very well! The 12-year run (1968-1980) of "Hawaii Five-O" made a wealthy man out of its star. The actor owned one-third of the show, and on the recommendations of his financial adviser, he made some shrewd investments in real estate with his substantial earnings. "We hold some leases on shopping centers and supermarkets and for us it has been a bonanza," admits Lord. As for the rest of the cast, their careers seem to have fizzled when the series folded.

Dear Michele: Is there anything in the works for Pierce Brosnan since he was not cast as James Bond? A new movie perhaps? — LINDA BUNNEK, ROSWELL, N.M.

Brosnan will be starring as Ian Dunross in the upcoming NBC miniseries, "James Clavell's Noble House." His most recent film, "The Fourth Protocol," was released earlier this year, and before you could say 007, the 35-year-old Irishman jetted off to India for his next film, "The Deceivers."

Dear Michele: Whatever happened to Al Lewis, who played Grandpa on "The Munsters"? — LAURA CHRISTIE, HOPWOOD, PENN.

Lewis, who starred as Grandpa Munster in this 1960s sitcom, currently runs a popular New York eatery aptly named Grandpa's.

Dear Michele: Does Barbra Streisand have a sister named Julie Budd? — DEBORAH FREEMAN, FRANKLIN, MAINE

Streisand has a brother Sheldon, and a step-sister Rosalind Kind, also a singer.

Dear Michele: Please settle a bet between my mother and father. Who is the actress who played Lana on "Three's Company"? — NICOLE DeWITT, PETALUMA, CALIF.

Ann Wedgeworth appeared as Lana Shields on this sitcom from 1979-80. The 52-year-old actress also starred as Bootsie Weschester on "Filthy Rich" (1982-83) and was nominated for a Best Supporting Actress Oscar in 1986 for her role as country singer Patsy Cline's mother in "Sweet Dreams."

THE Rook's Look AT GARMENT CARE

DICKIE ROOK

Watch Those Stains!

We're in the midst of the holiday season. December is the month for parties - office, tree-trimming and get-togethers with family and friends.

Unfortunately, too often the drinks and hors-d'oeuvres end up on your table linens or clothes.

A very common stain is a sugar stain from cocktails and soft drinks. If this stain is not removed promptly, it can caramelize in a warm closet and turn brownish in color. This stain is then difficult to remove, especially from natural fibers.

To avoid this problem, A CLEANER WORLD and the international Fabricare Institute, the worldwide trade association for launderers and dry cleaners, recommend that you have your garments cleaned as soon as possible after the spillage. Your clothes will last longer and remain beautiful if you watch out for stains.

Promised a Miracle

Rosanna Arquette and Judge Reinhold will star in "Promised a Miracle," a CBS movie scheduled to air in 1988. The pair will play Alice and Larry Parker, a married couple who allowed their diabetic son to die without treatment as part of a faith-healing experiment. The Parkers were charged with manslaughter in 1974.

Danner Joins "Tatteringer's"

Stage actress Blythe Danner has joined the cast of "Tattinger's," a new NBC series scheduled to premiere in the fall of 1988. Danner, best known for her work on Broadway ("Butterflies AreFree") and off-Broadway ("Major Barbara"), will play Hillary Tattinger, the ex-wife of Nick Tattinger (Stephen Collins). The series is being taped in New York City.

TV Chatter

In the TV movie "The Long Journey Home" (airing Nov. 29 on CBS), Meredith Baxter Birney ("Family Ties") plays a wealthy business woman whose husband was listed as missing in action in Vietnam more than 10 years ago. Just as she is about to remarry, her husband (played by real-life spouse David Birney) turns up to complicate his wife's life. A tale of revenge, doublecrosses, drug deals, government corruption and murder follows. "The plot has more twists than a pretzel," Meredith Baxter Birney says of the tortuous storyline. Working with her husband of 16 years was considerably less painful. But sometimes collaborating with the man you love can be difficult, too. "The pleasure (of working with one's spouse) is the shorthand we use because we know each other so well. We're very quickly able to see something, and with one look we're able to figure out what the problem is. Each handshake, each kiss, each gesture becomes loaded with more baggage, which makes everything much richer. The downside is that you end up spending more time together than is good for any relationship. David likes to joke, 'I married you for better or for worse... but not for lunch!'" she says, laughing. To give themselves a breather, the Birneys ate lunch separately on the set.

David Frost has interviewed kings and prime ministers, movie stars and mafioso in a career spanning more than two decades. So why is Frost hosting a TV series based on the "Guinness Book of World Records"? Why is he refereeing armadillo races and interviewing the winner of a jalapeno-eating contest, not to mention a jump-roping rabbi? Quite simply, David Frost, the brother-in-law of the Duke of Norfolk and confidant of queens, is having fun. Frost considers "The Spectacular World of Guinness Records," a half-hour, weekly syndicated show based on the network specials he hosted in the '70s, a break from his more arduous interview tasks. "My next job is interviewing all the 1988 presidential candidates," he says. "I'm also going to be doing (former presidents) Carter and Ford." After talking to Ford, maybe those armadillo races don't seem so slow after all.

David Letterman shares something in common with model/actress Lauren Hutton and boxer Michael Spinks: a prominent gap between his front teeth. "I didn't realize until nine years ago I even had a gap in my teeth," says Dave. "I was auditioning for a show for (producer) George Schlatter, and he said, 'Maybe if you fix your teeth...' I went home and looked in the mirror, and it was the first time I knew there was something wrong with my teeth." However, Letterman didn't make an appointment with the dentist. "I didn't have the money," he says.

It's tough disciplining your children when you play one of the most evil women on TV. Susan Lucci, also known as super-witch Erica Kane on "All My Children," reports, "When I'm strict with my daughter, she says, 'Stop acting like Erica!'"... Paranoid quote of the week comes from "Cheers" star Ted Danson: "It's very scary to have stuff because it can all be taken away from you."

SOAP OPERA WEEK

Soap opera actor returns to a role his fan loves

By Kimberly Redmond

Has Michael O'Leary permanently returned to "Guiding Light" and his role as Rick Bauer? I hope he's around forever. – K.R., Spartanburg, S.C.

Michael O'Leary

O'Leary has signed a long-term contract with "GL," so he'll be around for awhile.

Do soap opera actresses wear their own clothes or are their clothes provided for them by the show? – C.F., Los Angeles, Calif.

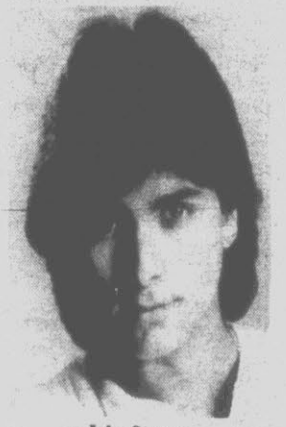
If the actress in question is a contract player, she would have a wardrobe that was bought exclusively for her. If she is playing a non-contract role, she would probably wear her own clothes.

When the actresses wear fur coats, they are nearly always on loan from a furrier whose name will usually be listed in the show's credits. Evening gowns are usually rented or also on loan.

What happened to Henderson Forsythe, who portrayed David Stewart on "As the World Turns"? I haven't seen him in months. – C.J., Gulfport, La.

Forsythe, who is no longer a contract player, was absent for most of last year because he has been doing theater work. He does return to the soap on occasion.

Is there any chance that "General Hospital" will bring back Blackie Parrish, played by John Stamos? – S.H., Houston, Texas.



John Stamos

It's unlikely that "GH" will ever bring Blackie back into the story, but if they did, Stamos probably wouldn't play the role. He's now a cast regular in the ABC series "Full House."

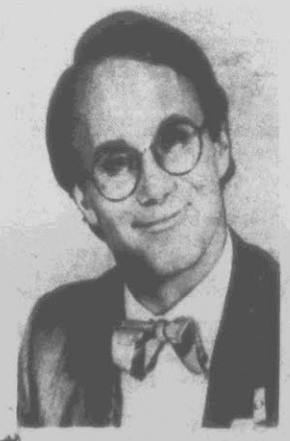
ASK ME ABOUT TV

'Adderly' actor admits his character is a nerd

By Toni D'Amato

We really enjoy watching the CBS show "Adderly" and the man who plays Melville. We would like to know more about him. – M.H.A., Darby, Pa.



Jonathan Welsh

Welsh says his interest in the arts began when he was 15 and continued through college where he earned B.A. and M.A. degrees in theater. "I came from a background of experimental theater; my first professional gig was 'Hair' in Toronto," he recalls. "My introduction to theater was in 1963 when I was about to get thrown out of school because I was uncontrollable. I went to a Catholic high school but was joking around because it was easy. Finally, a nun told me I had to do something with my life. She encouraged me to take up public speaking.

"I don't ever want to be negative and I don't want Melville to be that way," says Welsh. "He can be a bit of an idiot, a flake and a nerd, but negativity would defeat the whole purpose of 'Adderly.' "

Welsh, who lives in Toronto with his wife and two children, has a sense of humor which spills over to his character. "He can laugh at himself if he's found out. He can take it," says the actor, who recently completed filming "Switching Channels" with Burt Reynolds.

Is it true that Samantha and Sabrina of "Bewitched" were played by the same person? – A.S., Daytona Beach, Fla.

Yes. Both parts were filled by Elizabeth Montgomery.

My mom says Clark Gable and Vivien Leigh starred in "Gone with the Wind." I say it was Cary Grant. Who's right? – E.B., Augusta, Ga.

Your mother.

It's Shandling's own show but this actress fits right in

By Connie Passalacqua

Molly Cheek is an actress with nice but modest credits that include guest shots on "Family Ties" and "Dynasty." But you can say she wasn't chosen for her role as Nancy on Showtime's "It's Garry Shandling's Show" (airing Friday, Dec. 4) solely for her experience. She was probably chosen because she's both quick and smart – the kind of qualities needed to keep sane in this original and critically successful sitcom.

Molly Cheek, Garry Shandling

"Well, it's a lot different than when I was on 'T.J. Hooker' and I had to say lines like 'I'm Hooker trained,'" laughs the actress. "Actually, I knew from the audition that things would be different than on other shows. They (the producer and the directors) talked to you and told you what they were looking for."

The audition had other unconventional aspects. "You had to decide whether or not you could bounce off Garry," says Cheek, "because he doesn't exactly follow the script. When I did the test I brought in all kinds of improvisational props like turkey legs so I could show them I was as willing to go as far as they would."

Cheek says she was rewarded with a great job. "I feel like I'm stealing money going into work. Garry and (producer) Alan Zweibel are great comedy teachers. They teach you how to put yourself into what you do and trust your instincts, to have the courage to try anything until it works."

Cheek, a veteran of repertory theater and dozens of commercials, is thrilled to have an unusual television role – as the platonic best friend of a male lead. "People think you can't have a friendship with a male unless it's sexual," says the actress. "I have both male and female friends. But I'm also pleased the show did it this way because the other way (if she played his girlfriend) I'd be pretty limited – a couple of episodes and I'd be gone."

She particularly likes that Nancy has been given a lot of habits, many associated with males: "I get to go to the track and lose money." And it's better than doing any network show. "There's a freedom connected with this show and a trusting of what you can bring to it," she says. "There's a real allowance for change."

Networks Add A Little Spice To Tennis, Golf

By Marty Linehan

Individual sports such as golf and tennis boil down to one essential element: player against player. But it soon becomes obvious who the better players are — and after a while new tournaments seem a bit pointless. That's where TV comes in. The geniuses there are only too happy to add variety — by changing the rules!

On Sunday, Nov. 29, ABC offers the Stakes Game, a tennis hybrid. Ivan Lendl will take on John McEnroe, who hasn't been able to touch him in ages, and two other top players. ABC is hoping that a new scoring system that takes into account aces, defaults and strokes per rally will make the sport a bit more competitive.

Over on NBC, the same thing is happening in golf. The more-established Skins Game features golfers Fuzzy Zoeller, Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Lee Trevino. When they tee off, however, they won't be playing under conventional PGA rules.

* But for traditionalists, there's conventional sports a plenty. On Sunday, Nov. 29, regional NFL games will be broadcast on NBC and CBS. ESPN will top off the evening with the Browns vs. the 49ers. And on "Monday Night Football," on Nov. 30, ABC will be checking in with the Los Angeles Raiders vs. the Seattle Seahawks. The game will be played at Seattle's Kingdome, whose noise level makes Minneapolis's Metrodome seem like a Sunday-morning church service. We hope the Raiders' Brian Bosworth won't throw a tantrum if it gets too noisy.

* On Saturday, Dec. 5, the traditional Army vs. Navy game will be played in Philadelphia. Service teams have fallen on hard times in recent years, since recruits hoping to play in the NFL know that the after-graduation service obligation would interfere with a pro career. But there's one thing that service academies do better than any other schools — regimented cheers. When those servicemen shout "Block that kick," you'll hear a crisp, clean enunciation of every word.

* The regular college football season closes with the Saturday, Dec. 5 announcement of the Heisman Trophy winner. Among the leading candidates are flanker Tim Brown of Notre Dame, tailback Gaston Green of UCLA and, more remotely, linebacker Chris Spellman of Ohio State. Other dark horses include Syracuse quarterback Don McPherson and Holy Cross's two-way wonder Gordie Lockbaum.

More McKay

Jim McKay, longtime anchor of ABC's Olympics broadcasts, recently signed a long-term contract to continue working with the network. McKay will anchor the 1988 Calgary Olympics, his 10th as abroadcaster, and announce the figure-skating competition.

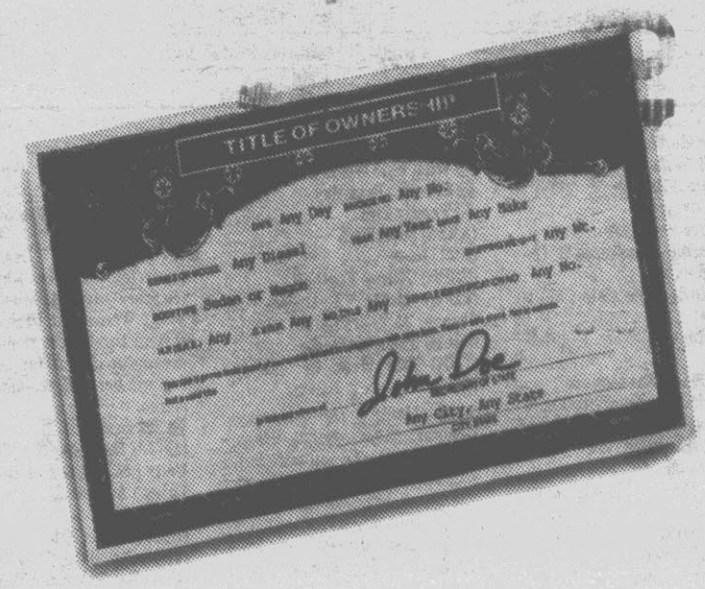
IF YOU OWN A DIESEL, THIS IS A $4,000 GIFT CERTIFICATE FROM PEUGEOT.*



Between now and December 31, you can consider yourself lucky to own a diesel car.

Because all you need do is show us proof of diesel ownership (no matter what the make) and we'll take $4,000 off the purchase price of any 1987 Peugeot 505 gasoline model. From the powerful Turbo sedan or wagon to the refined STX V6.

So bring us your diesel proof of ownership and be $4,000 closer to owning a high-performance Peugeot.

PEUGEOT 505
NOTHING ELSE FEELS LIKE IT.™

*$4,000 contribution consists of $3,000 from PMA and $1,000 from the Dealer. Delivery must be taken by December 31, 1987. Offer good while supplies last, and is not extended in conjunction with any other promotional offer. Not redeemable for cash. Void where prohibited. See us for conditions of the offer. ©1987 Peugeot Motors of America, Inc.

Party Trays for every occasion

We Cater to Your Good Taste

Our party trays look good enough to eat. And they are! Delicious arrangements of perfectly sliced deli-style cold meats and homestyle salads. Cooked to order chicken and ribs. A tempting variety of cheese. Accompanied by freshly baked breads, rolls or croissants. And the perfect final touches: flaky pastries, decorated-for-the-occasion cakes, fresh fruit bowls and fresh flowers for your table.

Freshness You Can Depend On

Good looking. Great tasting ... always. That's because we use the finest products available in our party trays. Top quality, famous brands and taste tempting local favorites. Fresh when we prepare your trays ... fresh when you serve them in our stay-fresh reusable party trays. Talk to our professional party planners. They will help you choose from one of our scrumptious selections shown below.

CARVEL

The Patio Door That Has Solved The "Ins And Outs" Of Energy Conservation.

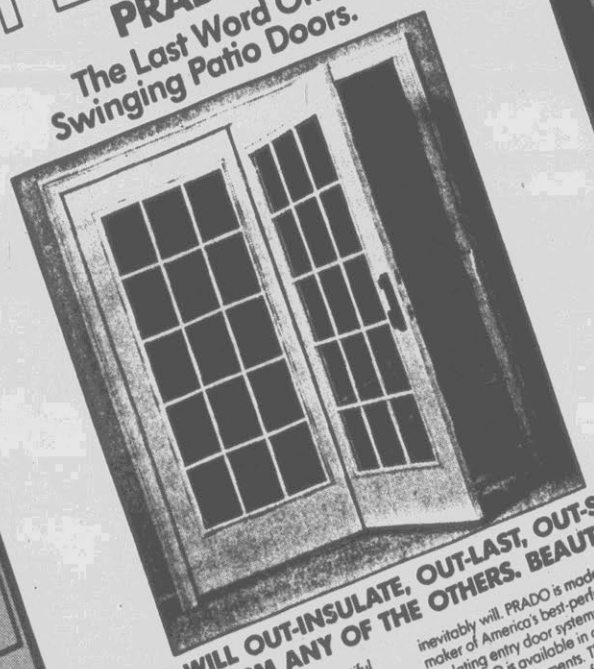
Carvel, a well designed wood-framed patio door glazed with Twinsul insulating glass can be a great source of Energy Conservation. The benefit provided by solar heat from natural sunlight admitted thru properly oriented glass areas was one of the first recognized applications of this natural resource.

For maximum protection against air infiltration, we use an outside sliding panel with a single plane weatherseal closing tightly against the face of this panel. Heavy-duty aluminum framed screens are on the inside where they are protected from weather and require less maintenance. Panel rollers are all-steel, ball bearing wheels mounted in tandem. A two-level stepped sill provides a guard against water infiltration. Wood components are properly treated, sealed, and receive an electrostatically applied finish in Clear, Colonial White, Nature Brown or Driftwood.

PEACHTREE.

PRADO

The Last Word On Swinging Patio Doors.



PRADO WILL OUT-INSULATE, OUT-LAST, OUT-SECURE, OUT-PERFORM ANY OF THE OTHERS. BEAUTIFULLY.

Here at last is PRADO, the classically beautiful swinging patio door that is also an extremely practical insulating door.

PRADO is the patio door for the times. No other swing patio door can come close to giving you the insulation that PRADO's polyurethane core does. And its beautifully crafted skins of steel make it extremely stable. PRADO will never check, crack or warp as wood doors inevitably will. PRADO is made by Peachtree, maker of America's best-performing, best-selling insulating entry door systems.

PRADO is available in a wide range of sizes and arrangements. They are ideal replacement doors and wonderful additions to new houses.

Come see all the advantages PRADO offers you, including the price.

• SEE HERE! It may not seem that way, but all of the long diagonal lines in the diagram, right, are parallel. If you are not convinced hold diagram flat, at eye level, and scan lines from corner to corner.

View design flat similarly from bottom up, and rows of small, vertical lines appear upright.

• SUM NUMBER! If three times this number exceeds one-third of it by 24, what is the number? Answer quickly, if you can.

The number in question is nine.

YULETIDE COLORAMA

Yuletide is a colorful time of year. How quickly can you fill blanks below with a familiar spate of colors to make sense?

1. Songsters, but not drivers, dream of a — Christmas.
2. To embark on a shopping trip, one must be in the —.
3. Battles for bargains may leave one — (and) —.
4. More long — could spur us on.
5. After the holidays, we're often in the —.

1. White. 2. Pink. 3. Black and blue. 4. Green. 5. Red.

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Handle is missing. 2. Hair is different. 3. Arm is moved. 4. Neckline is different. 5. Soda can is missing. 6. Shirt is shorter.

SPELLBINDER

SCORE 10 points for using all the letters in the word below to form two complete words:

LEMONADE

THEN score 2 points each for all words of four letters or more found among the letters.

Try to score at least 50 points.

Possible anagram: Lean, Made.
