Croatian Hijackers Making Multiple Demands

By ARTHUR HIGBEE
PARIS (UPI) — Croatian terrorists who killed a New York policeman with a bomb they left behind hijacked a U.S. jetliner across the Atlantic and dropped propaganda leaflets over London and Paris Saturday, then asked to talk with President Ford. French police told them to surrender or die. Minutes after the TWA Boeing 727 landed at Paris' Charles de Gaulle Airport with 52 passengers and 7 crew members still aboard, the hijackers also demanded to see proof that 4 major U.S. newspapers had printed their 2,400-word manifesto as they ordered.

The terrorists—five men and a woman, two of whom reportedly had explosives taped to their bodies—released two more of the hostages, an airline steward and an ill passenger, at the Paris airport. They earlier had let off 35 passengers at Gander, Newfoundland, en route to Europe.

It was the first hijacking of a U.S. domestic flight in nearly four years.

The hijackers insisted on talking with Ford, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger or U.S.

Ambassador to France Kenneth Rush. The task fell to Rush, who quickly went to the airport, after an attempt to establish a telephone link between the plane and Washington failed.

A spokesman in Washington said Rush only planned to talk, not to "negotiate."

French security forces shot out the plane's tires with three bullets to prevent it from taking off again, and French police offered the terrorists two alternatives—surrender, to either U.S. or Yugoslav authorities, or death.

There was no reply reported immediately from the plane, parked on a distant runway with its cabin lights switched off and bathed in the glare of three searchlights.

There was no indication what the terrorists, who identified themselves as "Fighters for Free Croatia," wanted to talk with Rush. Presumably one topic was the fate of the hostages they still held.

The hijackers left behind one bomb and possibly two in the United States before they took over the New York-to-Chicago flight with 94 persons aboard Friday night and turned it toward Montreal and then Newfoundland.

One of the bombs, found in a locker at New York's Grand Central Station with the terrorists' lengthy manifesto, exploded and killed one policeman and injured three others. The hijackers threatened to have a second explosive detonated "in a busy location" if the four newspapers did not print the manifesto as they demanded.

When they landed in Paris, the hijackers insisted on seeing proof their cause was getting publicity in the four newspapers—the New York Times, the Chicago Tribune, the Washington Post and the Los Angeles Times.

"They want to see copies of the papers," a TWA spokeswoman said in Paris. "We are flying the papers in Sunday morning on flight 800. It gets in at 8:25 a.m. (2:25 a.m. EDT)."

A similar demand to a fifth newspaper, the International Herald Tribune published in Paris, could not be met. The Herald Tribune's Saturday edition already was on the streets and it does not publish on Sunday.

The terrorists dropped thousands of leaflets, demanding

Croatia's independence from Yugoslavia and accusing President Tito—himself a Croatian—of "systematic genocide" of the Croatian people, over the center of London and again over Paris' Champs Elysees. They left behind other bundles of similar leaflets which were dropped, in accordance with their instructions, by helicopters over New York and Chicago and a light airplane over Montreal.

In Belgrade, the government said it was taking all measures necessary to prevent the plane from landing in the Yugoslav capital.

The last "successful" hijacking in the United States began Nov. 11, 1972 when three men—two suspected rapists and a prison escapee—hijacked a Southern Airways DC9 jet on a flight from Birmingham, Ala., to Memphis and flew to Cleveland, Toronto, Knoxville, Tenn., Lexington, Ky., Havana and back to Key West.

Indian Hijack Ended

LAHORE, Pakistan (AP) — Police ended a 21-hour waiting game Saturday and stormed a hijacked Indian Airlines jet at Lahore airport, capturing six skyjackers and freeing seven crew members who had been held hostage, Foreign Ministry officials said.

The 71 passengers aboard the twin-engine Boeing 737, commandeered while on a domestic flight over India, had been released earlier.

There were no injuries reported among the passengers and crew. But it was not learned immediately whether any of the hijackers or police were hurt.

Pakistani officials refused to discuss the details of the commando-style raid or give the nationalities or other description of the hijackers. But sources in New Delhi said all of them were Asians, and the pilot told reporters the gang's leader spoke Urdu, a principal language on the Indian subcontinent.

The pilot, V.N. Reddy, said the hijackers first demanded to be taken to Libya but then changed their destination to Lahore when he told them his fuel supply was too limited. Government officials here would not divulge the demands made by the hijackers during subsequent negotiations.

The Pakistani Foreign Ministry scheduled a briefing for later today.

According to officials of the two governments, the hijackers took over the plane at pistol point shortly after it left New Delhi's Palam International Airport on a flight for Jaipur at 7 a.m. local time Friday (9:30 p.m. EDT Thursday).

Kissinger Warning

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger warned that all of Africa might turn militantly radical unless the black-white conflicts over Rhodesia and the disputed territory of Namibia are quickly ended.

He told a news conference two days before setting out on a new peacemaking mission to the region that "war already has started in Africa."

The secretary was referring to the black guerrilla movements seeking to topple white minority rule in Rhodesia and to free Namibia, also called Southwest Africa, from South Africa's grip.

However, Kissinger gave no sign that he considers the violence sweeping the cities of South Africa itself to be part of the war to which he referred.

Talking about the armed struggles under way in southern Africa, Kissinger said:

"The history of these struggles is that they lead to escalating violence, drawing in more and more countries and have the danger of foreign intervention and the probability of the radicalization of the whole continent of Africa."

The secretary told reporters that depending on the progress he makes, he may meet with Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian D. Smith, head of the white minority government that declared Rhodesia's independence in defiance of Britain.

Aside from South Africa, no country in the world has recognized the Smith regime.

Kissinger defined as his major goal the creation of some form of negotiating framework that could bring together the presidents of African states near Rhodesia and Namibia, the Rhodesians, South Africans and leaders of the black nationalist movements seeking independence.

Any such negotiating framework, he emphasized, would need to be convened by the British government, which still claims sovereign responsibility for Rhodesia.

Before his news conference, Kissinger had an hour-long meeting with President Ford, who said afterwards that while there is no guarantee the upcoming trip to Africa will be successful, "it's worth the risk on a continent vital to all of us."

"It's a very important mission," Ford said, with Kissinger standing by his side outside the White House. "It has many complicated elements. There are risks."

"But my feeling is the United States can play a constructive role in helping the various parties work out the complexities," he said.

Brooks Exonerated

RALEIGH (AP) — Atty. Gen. Rufus Edmisten said late Saturday that the evidence shows that labor commissioner candidate John Brooks "has committed no chargeable offense."

"Brooks was acting as an attorney who was attempting to protect the interests of his client and he did not intend, nor did he in any manner commit any criminal act," Edmisten said in a telephone interview from his office.

Brooks faces Jessie Rae Scott in Tuesday's Democratic runoff.

Edmisten's decision was in a letter to Wake County Dist. Atty. Burley B. Mitchell Jr. which said, in part:

"It is my conclusion and the conclusion of my senior deputies that the evidence does not warrant any prosecution of Mr. Brooks and that the evidence exonerates Mr. Brooks of any wrongdoing."

Pilot Club Role In Pitt 76 United Fund

The Pilot Club of Greenville will be responsible this year for the Retired Citizens Division of the Pitt County United Fund, according to an announcement by Don Parrott, UF campaign chairman.

Mrs. Juanita McCarthy of Greenville will serve as chairman of the solicitation project for the club, it was pointed out by the organization's president, Mrs. John T. Jenkins.

"The Pilot Club with Mrs. Jenkins as president and Mrs. McCarthy as chairman is our final division coordinator for the 1976-77 United Fund campaign," Parrott reported.

He added, "I could not be more proud to complete our selections with the Retired Citizens Division. These citizens have done so much for our community and continue to support the efforts of the United Fund."

The Pilot Club, according to Mrs. Jenkins, is an international classified service club for business and executive women.

"The Pilot Club is happy to have the opportunity to render another community service by again assisting the Pitt County United Fund in soliciting the retired citizens of Pitt County," the president pointed out.

She said that, "In this way, we feel that we can project the image of Pilot International not only in Greenville but in Pitt County as well. Also, as a group of civic minded women, the United Way of giving appeals to us."

Mrs. McCarthy, who serves as treasurer of the Pilot Club, is executive director of the Pitt County Mental Health Association, an agency of the Pitt United Fund.

'Salute To Agriculture' Being Held Today

Today is "Salute to Agriculture" Day in Pitt County, and the event is being observed with varied activities scheduled to take place from 2 to 5 p.m. at the Pitt County Fair Grounds.

The salute is sponsored by Pitt County Agribusiness Association, of which Larry Land is president. Land is sales manager of Coastal Chemical Company. Coordinating the program with Land is Kelly Barnhill, chairman of the association's Project Committee. Barnhill is proprietor of Hendrix Barnhill Equipment Company.

For this salute, emphasis is on agriculture equipment rather than farm products, with a show of farm equipment and implements typical of that being used today in cultivations on Pitt County farms.

Displays will include big tractors, tillage and planting tools, grain harvesters, curing facilities and specialized equipment.

One of the highlights of the Pate explained that a search committee will be formed to study possible successors; of these, two candidates will be presented to the UNC Board of Governors and UNC President William Friday for a final selection.

Reynolds has never identified political candidates, foreign officials or other company employees who received any of the contributions or rebates. In admitting the questionable overseas payments, Reynolds President J. Paul Sticht said that rebates and kickbacks are an established practice by most international shippers, and Sea-Land was forced into it by competitors.

"The company tried to compete without paying rebates or engaging in other questionable practices which prevailed in the industry even though they violated the Shipping Act of 1916," he said. "We understand

Fire Damages Apartment

APARTMENT BLAZE — A fire started at Apt. No. 83 River Bluff about 11 p.m. Friday night and caused extensive damage before it was extinguished about 1:15 a.m. The residents, Kathy Pinyoun and Lynn Gordon, were not home at the time of the fire. Greenville Fire Dept. officials determined that the blaze began in the living room, but the cause is not known. Fire damage was heavy to the living room, stairs, stairway and second floor hallway. Medium fire damage and heavy smoke and water damage was reported in the rest of the apartment. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Obituaries

Briley

Mr. Charlie Briley Jr. of Rt. 5, Greenville, died Saturday in Pitt Memorial Hospital. He was the husband of Mrs. Ella Lee Briley. Funeral arrangements, which are being handled by Flanagan and Hardee Funeral Home, are incomplete.

Butler

Mrs. Mable Rouse Butler, 72, widow of Walter B. Butler, died in Miami, Florida, Thursday. Graveside services will be held Monday morning at eleven o'clock at the Cherry Hill Cemetery. The body will remain at the Wilkerson Funeral Home until the funeral hour.

Mrs. Butler was born in Craven County and lived in Greenville for many years. She had made her home in the Miami area for the past thirty years.

Worsley

Mrs. Mollie Worsley of Parmele died Friday night in Pitt Memorial Hospital. She was the wife of Ernest Worsley.

Funeral arrangements, which are being handled by Flanagan and Hardee Funeral Home, are incomplete.

Neighbor

MCKINNEY, Tex. (UPI) — W. M. Jeter has proved that neighbors do more than play their stereos too loud and wake up the neighborhood with a noisy lawnmower on Sunday mornings.

Jeter, 71, said he was tired of seeing his neighbor in this north Texas community, Julia McDade, 73, living in a rickety shack with dirt floors, a wood burning stove and an outhouse.

So Jeter, using materials from an old parsonage, built Mrs. McDade a two-bedroom home. When she moves in later this month, it will be the first time she has lived with indoor plumbing.

"Mr. Jeter is some neighbor," she said.

Accidents Listed

Seven city traffic accidents Friday and Saturday caused $6,125 in damages, according to police department records.

A car driven by John Chavasse Saffell of Henderson sustained $2,000 in damages early Saturday morning when it crossed the median on Tenth St., west of Rock Spring Rd. Saffell was charged with careless and reckless driving.

A collision Friday afternoon on Dickinson Ave., east of Memorial Dr., did $600 damage to the car operated by John Henry Taylor, 1055 W. Rockspring Dr., and $800 to the truck driven by Jerry Robert Lee, 106 Bunch Lane.

A rear-end collision occurred late Friday afternoon on E. Fifth St., west of Summit St., involving cars driven by Addie Lou Vanderford of Robersonville, Anthony Harris Gentry of Rt. 2, Roxboro, and Mark Alan Rimer of Rt. 1, Waxhaw.

Damages were $1,000 to the Gentry auto and $100 to the Rimer vehicle. The Vanderford car was not damaged. Rimer was cited for a safe movement violation.

Nichols parking lot, west of Hooker Rd., was the scene of an accident Friday afternoon involving cars driven by Connie Louise Armstrong, 100 David Dr., Colonial Trailer Park, and Joan Pierce Wilson of Ayden. Damages were $300 to the Armstrong car and $600 to the Wilson auto.

Vehicles operated by Bobby Jen Letchworth, Lot 28, Colonial Trailer Park, and Pamela Douglas Johnson of Rt. 2, Robersonville, collided Friday afternoon at S. Memorial Dr. and W. Sixth St., doing $100 damage to the Letchworth auto and $300 to the Johnson car.

The intersection of Evans and Ninth Streets was the site of a two-car mishap late Friday

The Bomb Went Off

NEW YORK (UPI) — A bomb planted in a subway locker by Croatian terrorists blew up in the faces of policemen trying to defuse it early Saturday at the department's firing range in the Bronx. One died instantly and three others were badly hurt.

Mayor Abraham D. Beame denounced the bombers as "madmen." The bomb, in a pressure cooker-type container, was found in a locker at a subway entrance to Grand Central Station late Friday night after police were directed there by a message relayed from the Croatian hijackers of a New York-to-Chicago Trans World Airlines 727 jet.

Enclosed with the bomb, described by one officer as a "high-order explosive," was a communique from the "Fighters for a Free Croatia," a separatist group within Yugoslavia, which the hijackers demanded be printed in newspapers.

Killed in the 12:45 a.m. blast was Bomb Squad Officer Brian Murray, 26, of Long Island, a six-year veteran of the force who is married and has two children.

Bomb Squad Sgt. Terence McTigue, 41, was in critical condition and underwent surgery at Jacobi Hospital.

Two others were taken off the critical list after surgery. They were Fritz Behr, inspector in charge of the department's Scientific Research Department, in fair condition; and Bomb Squad Officer Harold Dworkin in stable condition. Both suffered extensive eye injuries and lacerations.

After finding the bomb shortly around 10 p.m. and cordoning off the Grand Central area, police removed the bomb in a heavily armored truck to the Rodmans Neck firing range in the North Bronx, where bombs are normally disposed of.

The officers attached a remote control device that snips the wires. "When that happens, it either detonates or it is neutralized. It did not explode, so they waited for perhaps two minutes. Then the men went up to the device and it exploded."

Acting Police Commissioner James Taylor said it was not known why the bomb went off.

Murray was the first Bomb Squad officer to be killed by a bomb in decades. The unit is widely acclaimed for its professionalism and cool in disposing of scores of devices each year.

Several Incidents Noted

Several incidents of breaking and entering and larceny were reported this weekend, according to the Greenville Police Dept.

Kathy Ann Cannon, 408 S. Eastern St., told police that someone stole her purse from her car Friday night while it was parked at Fifth and White streets after a traffic accident. It contained items valued at a total of $270, including $50 cash and a check for $120.

A tractor truck owned by Roy Mills Logging Co., Rt. 1, Goldsboro, was entered Friday night or Saturday morning and robbed of items totaling $150 while it was parked at N.C. Equipment Co., SM. Memorial Dr. Damage to the vehicle was estimated at $20.

John William Douglas, 803

Hooker Rd., reported that a wallet belonging to Allison Joy Bragdon, containing $115 cash, was taken Friday night from a car parked on S. Evans St. behind the office of Dr. James J. Smith. The investigation is continuing.

Candidates On Abortion

By WESLEY G. PIPPERT
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Jimmy Carter traveled 5,400 miles and was cheered by hundreds of thousands of persons—but always there were the anti-abortion placards and chants of "Life! Life!"

But the Democratic presidential nominee's strategy for dealing with the abortion issue—which he calls "a very serious problem for me"—emerged during his first full week of campaigning.

It appears Carter will:
—Restate opposition to a constitutional ban on abortions but express it in stronger, more moralistic terms.

—Seek to tie President Ford, who supports a state option amendment, to the federal government's funding of 300,000 abortions last year.

—Deny abortion is a showdown between the Catholic church and himself.

—Contend any politician who seeks advantage on the issue will receive "an adverse reaction."

How effective this will be remains to be seen. The Catholic bishops, who expressed "disappointment" with Carter's position after their meeting before Labor Day, said Friday they were "encouraged" at Ford's support for a constitutional amendment allowing states to set their own abortion policy.

Ford said Saturday he was "not at all" trying to exploit abortion as an issue.

"My position on this very emotional and vital issue has been well known—I have not brought it up," Ford told reporters. "It's a position the American people are interested in and his (Carter's) views and mine ought to be set forth on the record. I've done it and I trust he will."

Although saying they were "encouraged," the Catholic leaders left the White House Friday without bestowing blessing on Ford, saying "we neither endorse nor oppose candidates." They also said they were "not totally satisfied" even with Ford's stance—they want the Constitution to carry an outright ban on abortions, overturning the 1973 Supreme Court decision liberalizing policy.

This bishopric determination indicates the public ferocity which Carter has met on the trail.

The anti-abortion opposition to Carter was the sharpest in Scranton, Pa where a nighttime crowd of 2,500, mostly Carter supporters but also including "pro-lifers," shouted and surged almost out of control as Carter approached to shake hands. The Secret Service whisked him into his hotel.

At every stop in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin and Florida, Carter was confronted by the chants and the placards.

By RICHARD E. LERNER
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Spurning Jimmy Carter's criticism, President Ford said Saturday he would campaign "on the side" while concentrating on business—then did a little of both by signing the New River bill into law at a White House ceremony.

And in another illustration of his strategy of carrying a "presidential" image, Ford conferred with Henry A. Kissinger to discuss the secretary of state's trip to Africa.

Escorting Kissinger outside, Ford cautioned there is "no assurance of success, but it's worth the risks, I think, for world peace and the continent that is vitally important to all of us."

Ford took a swipe at Carter a moment later, when a reporter asked him to respond to the Democratic nominee's charge that he was "hiding" at the White House, afraid to face voters.

"A few weeks ago, he was complaining that I was campaigning too much and not spending enough time on government business," he said.

Deliberations Begin In Roger Hinson Trial

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Jurors in the conspiracy and armed robbery trial of former Cabarrus County commissioner Roger Glenn Hinson began deliberations Saturday after being charged by Superior Court Judge William Z. Wood.

Judge Wood took more than an hour and a half to give the jury its instructions, charging the jury with the case at 4:48 p.m. The jurors, who were not

"Now that I'm spending virtually 100 per cent of my time on being president, he is being critical of the fact that I'm not out politicking."

"As I said before, I think his positions are inconsistent here, as they have been in many cases ... The President ought to be President and get that job done and politick if and when he can on the side."

The White House said Ford scheduled a Sunday meeting with his Republican running mate, Sen. Bob Dole, who told The New York Times Friday Ford might be making a mistake in staying in the White House—noting he tried it in his 1972 Kansas Senate race and nearly lost.

The White House said Ford scheduled a Sunday meeting with his Republican running mate, Sen. Bob Dole, who told The New York Times Friday Ford might be making a mistake in staying in the White House—noting he tried it in his 1972 Kansas Senate race and nearly lost.

Hinson, 33, was accused of arranging the 1974 armed robbery of more than $20,000 in coins and cash from his Mount Pleasant coin shop and a Lexington coin dealer present at the time of the robbery. If found guilty, Hinson faced a maximum sentence of 40 years in prison.

"Hinson came into this court wrapped in a beautiful white cloak of innocence but all the evidence has ripped this cloak," Dist. Atty. Bob Roberts said during final arguments. "Why should the law be applied differently for Roger Hinson?"

In final testimony, attorneys for Hinson called to the stand seven character witnesses, including Hinson's Methodist minister, the Rev. Robert W. Little, and Central Cabarrus High School Principal M.L. Barnes, who said he and Hinson were friends. Thirteen other character witnesses stood and were recognized but did not testify.

Martin Brackett, an assistant defense attorney, told the jury they should discount testimony by the state's key witness, Grover Michael Poplin, 29, saying he was a liar and a thief.

Accused Of Beating Inmate

Mecklenburg Deputies Resign

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Two Mecklenburg County deputies accused of beating a county jail inmate who had a history of mental problems have resigned from the force.

Ron White, shift supervisor when the incident occurred Aug. 24, and John Chedister handed in their resignations Friday to Sheriff Donald Stahl. The resignations were effective immediately.

Stahl, who had conducted an investigation into the incident, refused to say whether he had asked for the resignations. Neither of the deputies could be reached for comment.

Stahl began his investigation when he learned from a local television news reporter that the prisoner, Gregory James Taylor, reported he had been beaten and kicked by prison guards after he cursed another prison official.

Taylor, who is awaiting a new trial on first degree murder charges in the death of a storekeeper, was hospitalized at Charlotte Memorial Hospital.

Stahl said his investigation is complete, but he would not divulge the results. An FBI investigation was also started, but a final report has not been sent to the Justice Department, which will determine whether Taylor's civil rights were violated.

Stahl said his investigation could lead to disciplinary actions against other jail employees, who he contends violated office rules after the incident occurred.

The sheriff last month said Deputy George Phillips broke some rules by telling news reporters of the incident before reporting it to Stahl.

Sunday Hours For Collins' TV Show

"McDuff," the new NBC serial show starring Johnnie Collins, III of Greenville, will be aired locally over WITN-TV, Channel 7 at 7 a.m. each Sunday morning.

In a telephone conversation, Collins said the show is being aired across the U.S. and in Canada at 10 a.m. on Saturday mornings on all NBC stations — "that is, with the exception of the Washington station, the one broadcasting to my home town," he said.

Collins admitted being disappointed that his show is being aired at this early Sunday hour in his home area, but said he's hopeful that this may change.

"I called the people at WITN," he said, "and although it's understandable they could not make any firm commitment on the spot, I'm hopeful they will consider giving the program an airing at the same time as other stations on NBC."

No Coasting In Last 2 Years

It was buried in a news release sent out by the ECU news bureau concerning the 68th annual convocation which opened the school year for the university.

Dr. Leo Jenkins would retire in 1978 "after 18 years at the helm of East Carolina."

The release went on to quote Jenkins as saying that he assumed the ECU trustees would appoint a search committee to select his successor as chancellor during the coming year. This would allow ample time to have that person "ready to assume responsibilities in July, 1978."

"In the meantime, I shall do my best as your chancellor until my successor assumes this role," Jenkins told the faculty.

The release brought a phone call to The Daily Reflector from the Associated Press. Was this Jenkins first announcement of his retirement? As far as we knew it was, although it was well known that he was soon to reach the mandatory retirement age. The only way this can be breached is by special permission — something that is not expected in Jenkins' case.

Could a fabulous era for East Carolina University, Greenville, the eastern area and the entire state be coming to an end so suddenly? Well, it is two years away and Leo Jenkins, who only a few months ago was an important prospect for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, still has a couple of projects to get out of the way.

One, which is nearly done, is the completion of the Fine Arts buildings. It will house the School of Art and is named after Jenkins. The first section was completed some time back and the second section, which will include a gallery, is nearly finished.

Then there is the ECU medical school, finally funded by the Legislature last year and now well on its way toward admitting its first four year class in the fall of 1977. More than anything else, in all probability, Jenkins would like to see the medical school operating successfully before he leaves the chancellorship.

Finally, Jenkins announced that the $2.5 million fund-raising drive which will increase seating capacity of Ficklen Stadium to 35,000 will soon get underway. The chancellor has long been devoted to sports at ECU, saying that everything is emphasized at the school. One of his first successful dreams upon becoming president of the institution was the beginning of Ficklen Stadium. Now with retirement two years away he would like to see it completed.

There have been many progressive efforts made by Leo Jenkins since he took the reins at East Carolina. Those of us who know the man recognize that there won't be any coasting in the time prior to retirement. We can be sure that the medical school will be operating and we can expect the stadium expansion to be carried out. And who knows what other projects will be launched during the remaining time?

Registration Idea Rapped

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The problem is not getting more people on the books registered to vote, but to get those already registered interested in voting and into the polls, says State Elections Board Director Alex K. Brock.

He is opposed to the idea of postcard registration which is being put forth by some leaders both nationally and in North Carolina.

The scheme to replace the traditional personal visit to the registrar with the quick-and-easy postcard registration may work only to swell the registration rolls with non-voting names, Brock thinks.

North Carolina has worked hard to keep those registration books purged of non-voters, people who have moved, and the deceased; even to the extent of checking death certificates, and mailing out termination notices to people who neglect to go to the polls for four years.

Too Simple?

Postal registration boils down to a simple process: every post office would provide registration cards which could be filled in by would-be voters. Postage free, the cards could be dropped in the slot and forwarded to the local elections office.

"We would end up with a lot of people registering in the wrong places, and a lot of people just filling out cards and dropping them in the slot. You'd be surprised how many people hang out around a post office — waiting on the bus, waiting out a sudden shower of rain, looking over the wanted posters.

"There would be lots of people just filling out cards and dropping them in the slot ... not just once, but several times," Brock complains.

Meanwhile, back at the local elections office, the process would be missing the personal contact, the discussion over precinct numbers and voting place locations, and the oath.

Better effort could be spent in educating citizens about the responsibilities of citizenship, urging them to

Sunday Morning Notes

Local Attorney Fred Mattox was in Myrtle Beach recently and picked up an Amoco map of North and South Carolina.

He checked the map for Greenville, N.C. — home base — and it was there all right.

There was also a designation along side Greenville with an arrow pointing to the city.

"East Carolina Teachers College," it read. The map carried a May, 1976 date, incidentally.

Oh well. GO... ECTC.

One of our reporters visited the ECU campus to see how things were going on the first day of registration Tuesday.

"All the coeds are walking around in cut-off Levis with their check books sticking out of the left rear pocket," our journalist reported.

With the cost of education these days, what could be more necessary than a check book on registration day?

Two friends were discussing ordering a pizza.

"You want a large one?" one asked.

"How large is large?" the young lady replied.

She was told that the ad said it was 15 inches.

"That sounds large to me," the girl answered. "My car tire is only 14 inches."

That's one way of measuring it.

The new McDonald's is open at the corner of Tenth and Cotanche Street and the interior is carefully done in an East Carolina University motif.

There are the ECU colors of purple and gold. There is a portrait of Chancellor Jenkins and one of the late athletic director Clarence Stasavich.

Other Editors Say An N.C. Institution

(Henderson Dispatch)

"The Lost Colony," which has just closed its 36th production season in the Waterside theatre at Manteo on Roanoke Island, is vastly more than pageantry, as brilliant as that is. It is a distinct North Carolina institution of which the people of the State are properly proud.

In all America, there is nothing quite like it for its inspirational, educational and entertainment value.

To sit through the performance is as if the audience were transported back nearly 400 years in history to the beginning of the settlers. One feels he is living with the colonists who defied the Atlantic wilderness and came to build a new world of freedom, only to encounter privation and sacrifice, and eventually to disappear almost without a trace as to their fate in one of the major mysteries of the nation.

The drama grips the very heart of the audience. We have never heard of any person who attended a performance and did not come away with a soulful of pride and deep gratitude in the fact that he or she is an American and a descendant, in the larger sense, of the brave men and women who pioneered civilization on this continent.

All this has been said and repeated over and over many times in the third of a century since "The Lost Colony" began in 1937. We were there in the first season and twice since, and are anxious to go again. It's something which grows on one in the knowledge that this was the very precise spot where the events depicted took place "in the beginning" of America.

The pageant has the longest run of any ever produced in this country. Since 1937, it has been repeated every summer except during the blackout years of World War II. And its popularity is as great as ever and increases with each passing season.

It has in a sense been the making of the Outer Banks as a summer appeal to the thousands who go and then go again and even again. It is a financial success because the people love it, and may never lose its inspiration to the 66,854 who paid to attend in 1976, and the thousands in other years.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Mr. Busing And Company

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — An Aug. 26 telephone conversation between the Senate Democratic cloakroom in Washington and Sen. Walter Mondale's campaign entourage in New York City made clear that he had not abdicated his old title of "Mr. Busing."

Cloakroom aides explained that the Senate that day was considering an amendment limiting federal courts to busing orders only as a last-resort desegregation weapon. Since his nomination for Vice President, Mondale has declared distaste for busing and promised "to work with the courts to achieve the elimination of ... unnecessary busing." Yet, the Democratic cloakroom was authorized Aug. 26 to record Mondale in opposition to the amendment.

Accordingly, he was "paired" with an anti-busing Senator, who withheld his vote. Mondale certainly was not alone. Nationally renowned Democratic Senators, most of whom publicly lament busing, helped defeat the amendment, 46 to 38 — preceded by desultory Senate debate and followed by massive public inattention.

That reflects the way Congress now handles forced racial school busing, the most unpopular social experiment since prohibition. While publicly denouncing busing to please 80 per cent of their constituents, many

Two Economies Are At Work

By JOHN CUNNING

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — If the political candidates paid more attention to the surveys of consumer sentiment they would find a revelation that almost screams out for their attention.

It is this: A good many America families, perhaps a majority, are still deep in the recession, often unable to obtain necessities and pay their bills. And they lack confidence in the government's economic policy.

How then do surveys sometimes show Americans are becoming more confident? Simply because the views of low-income families are sometimes offset by the optimism of upper-income families.

This distinct split in the fortunes of upper- and lower-income families is often disguised by generalizations about personal income, car sales, bank savings accounts, tourist revenues and the like. But it is there.

It is only when the generalizations are examined that the evidence of two economies emerges one of which is strong, the other weak.

Researchers at the University of Michigan report, for example, that for upper-income families the recession is over and confidence is rising, but that for those with incomes below $12,500 confidence continues to drop.

For those with incomes of $15,000 or more, they report, there is an increase in the proportion of people who feel better off financially than in 1975. They feel favorably disposed toward new cars, houses and other big-ticket items.

Among those with incomes below $12,500, the same researchers say, there has been very little satisfaction reported concerning individual financial situations.

Jay Schmiedeskamp, who directs the Survey Research Center at the university, comments that at this stage of the business cycle it isn't highly unusual for attitudes of upper-income families to recover more swiftly.

"However, at present, the difference is unusually large," he states in a report on the center's activities.

Sindlinger & Co., which conducts daily surveys on consumer attitudes, recently headlined its report to clients:

"Consumers Remain Economically Split. Upper-income consumers continue to fare well but lower-income majority is hit hard by inflation and unemployment."

Sindlinger arrives at the conclusion that 70 per cent of Americans are still battling inflation, recession and unemployment on replies to his survey of Household Money Supply.

Four questions are asked of families contacted by the company's telephone interviewers: What is your current income compared with six months ago? What is your expected income six months from now? What is your expected job security in the next six months? How do you expect business to fare locally over the next six months?

Campaign's Interest Low

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J.—The upcoming presidential debates — the first of which is less than two weeks away—may provide the spark needed to ignite voter interest in the 1976 race, an interest found to be seriously lagging thus far in the campaign.

Evidence of voter apathy is seen in the latest barometer of election interest and in the latest measurements of voter registration. In fact, present indications are that our national voting participation may be even poorer this year than in 1972 (which was the lowest since 1948), with the distinct possibility that non-voters will outnumber voters in the November election.

Only about half (49 per cent) of all persons interviewed in the latest survey say they have given "quite a lot" of thought to the coming elections. This figure virtually matches the percentage recorded at this time in 1972—when voter interest had dropped to a low point—and falls below the figure found in August 1968, when 58 per cent indicated they had quite a lot of interest.

In terms of registration, 71 per cent nationwide now are registered. By way of comparison, 75 per cent were registered at this time in 1972 and 77 per cent in 1968.

Democrats are lagging behind the GOP in the registration battle, in contrast to four years ago when the two parties ran about even in this respect.

The latest surveys show 81 per cent of Republicans registered to vote compared to 75 per cent of Democrats. Four years ago, 80 per cent of Democrats. Four years ago, 80 per cent of both Republicans and Democrats were registered.

As in the August 1972 surveys, young adults (18 to 29) have the poorest registration record. To date only half of young adults (50 per cent) are registered to vote, compared to 72 per cent of the 30-to-49 age group and 85 per cent of the over-50 group.

4 In 10 Non-White Are Unregistered

At the present time, the registration level for non-whites, 62 per cent, falls below the national level. However, the efforts of the National Coalition on Black Voter Participation and other groups to register non-whites this year may prove to be as successful as the efforts of four years ago. Gallup surveys at this time in 1972 showed equal proportions of whites and non-whites registered to vote, with the percentage of registered non-whites having increased sharply since early 1972.

To obtain data on the characteristics of those who are registered and those who are not, the Gallup Pool regularly asks this question of samples of the U.S. resident non-institutionalized population of voting age, numbering 150 million persons:

"Is your name now recorded in the voter registration book in the election precinct or election district where you now live?"

Following is the table showing the percentage registered to vote among some of the important groups in the voting population:

	Per Cent Registered
NATIONAL	71%
18-29 years	50
30-49 years	72
50 and over	85
Republicans	81
Democrats	75
Independents	60
Whites	72
Non-whites	62

Following is the trend in registration levels during previous presidential election years, based on surveys conducted at a comparable point in time:

	Per Cent Registered To Vote
TODAY	71%
1972	75
1960	77

(The latest finds in the above table are based on in-person interviews with 3,127 persons, 18 and older, taken in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the periods Aug. 6-9 and 20-23.)

To measure interest in the elections, this question was asked: "How much thought have you given to the coming November elections—quite a lot or only a little?"

Here are the latest results and the trend:

	Quite a lot 49%	Some 19%	Little 24%	None 8%
LATEST
1972	50	17	28	5
1968	58	16	22	4

(The latest results in the table above are based on 1,287 adults, 18 and older, interviewed in person in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period Aug. 27-30.)

Sen. Stuart Symington of Missouri, another retiring Senate veteran whom Biden thought he had won over, entered the chamber while Byrd was speaking. Symington opposed the amendment.

Symington was joined by the Senate's other famous Democrats: Hubert Humphrey, Edmund Muskie, George McGovern, Adlai Stevenson III, Thomas Eagleton — and, astonishingly, Henry M. Jackson, who campaigned against busing in this year's Massachusetts primary.

None took the floor to explain his position. A top

Mondale aide told us the Senator wanted to preserve the Scott-Mansfield "compromise" language "that was so painfully worked out a few years back." Here is Catch-22. While promising to work with the courts against unnecessary busing, Mondale supports a statute which prevents any congressional influence on the courts.

A clearer rationale was provided in the debate by liberal Republican Sens. Jacob Javits of New York and Edward Brooke of Massachusetts, who made it plain they regard busing as a positive good. In contrast, Biden told the Senate: "Unfortunately, in my

A Conservative View Caught Up Be By A Season Of In-Between Times

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

SCRABBLE, Va.—Life is a succession of times, as the Preacher told us long ago; a time to be born, and a time to die; a time to weep, and a time to laugh; a time to get, and a time to lose. What the Preacher left unsaid is that the times are separated by the in-between times; and we are passing through one of these now.

Things happen, of course, in the in-between times, but nothing very memorable happens. Across our broad land, candidates are campaigning for public office, but it will be a month before the races heat up. In Washington, the Congress is pattering toward adjournment. The courts offer nothing climactic. The markets rock like docked rowboats, going nowhere in particular. And there is no speeding up the in-between times. One waits them out.

Here in the Blue Ridge Mountains, we see the tag end of summer. It is nothing much to look at. When I was a city boy, I used to hear it said of wispy old men, unkempt and scraggly, that they had "gone to seed." To live in the country is to understand the image. The fields that were clothed in green in June are patched with brown; they are raveled at the edges like old towels. The crabgrass spreads a rough and ragged shroud.

This is the worst of all times for the gardener. Only a few weeks ago, the vegetable plots were bursting with the summer's harvest: cucumbers, prickly to the touch; tomatoes as bright as Christmas balls; okra, eggplant, blackeyed peas, zucchini, peppers red and green. And the corn! The stalks stood soldier—straight, row on disciplined row, the ripening ears as ready for inspection as the rifles of Marines. Present arms! Nothing beats a neat platoon of golden bantam corn.

Facing South

Tommie Stays Close To Things A-Growing

CHEROKEE COUNTY, Ala. — "The first thing you'd think of when you had stomach trouble used to be calamus root," says Tommie Bass. "You didn't have Roloids or Tums and things like that to carry in your pocket. In the place of that, why folks carried a piece of calamus root and they'd just put that in their mouths and swallow the juice and folks that had good teeth would chew it."

At 68, Tommie still keeps a piece of calamus root nearby, just in case. Well known as an herbalist, he sees hundreds of sick people each year. They come from all over the South, some labeled "incurable" by physicians, some unable to pay doctor's fees, some bothered by chronic headaches, nervous disorders, skin diseases, ulcers; they find the shed under the big shade trees of Cherokee County, Alabama, where Tommie mixes his tonics, salves and ointments.

Nobody knows exactly who decided which herbs cure and which ones kill. Supposedly, folks learned through trial and error. Tommie's mother and father found out about the medicinal plants from their parents who brought most of their know-how to Tennessee from England, and then learned some more from the Indians. Later, Tommie's parents moved from the mountains to the region of North Alabama and reared four boys and two girls. The Indians of Tennessee have long since disappeared, Tommie's parents are dead.

One of the first chores Tommie remembers was finding herbs in the woods for his father who shipped them, along with furs, to faraway companies.

"I've never actually had a regular job; never have tied down. I've been a free lance worker all my life," Bass says. He went to school for a couple of weeks, but learned to read and write at home. He first pulled a cross-cut saw when he was six; he picked cotton when he was 10. While his siblings and friends drifted away to marriages and jobs, he stayed with his sick mother, tending her and the business at home for years. He never married.

A truck driver came to Tommie with stomach trouble; he said the doctor had given him a prescription, but it made him so sleepy he had to pull off the road. "I've got to drive my truck," he said. "If I don't, I'll lose my job."

"So I let him have an eight ounce bottle of this tonic I make out of herbs," says Tommie. "And by Ned, he took it with him, that was on Friday. He come back on the next Friday and said he felt good and had eat everything except onions... his stomach hadn't bothered him."

Tommie says he couldn't understand why a doctor would give the man sleeping pills "where all he needed was something to sterilize his stomach or help the gas on his stomach."

Unlike a pharmacist, Tommie gathers his cures from leafy thickets, pastures, ditches, and the dank forest floor — wild alum, blue flag, bonset, maypop, ox-eye daisy, Indian hemp, goldenrod.

"Angelico has an aroma like a wet hog," he says. "The tops of the plant are used as a stimulant for the heart and for rheumatism."

"Dandelion can be eaten raw or cooked like spinach. A kidney liver medicine, it also can be roasted to make a fine coffee."

The roots, bark, berries and leaves of the blackberry plant are good "for a tore-up stomach."

Many of Tommie's patients with ulcers and nervous disorders are from urban areas. He's been to a couple of cities but doesn't think much of them.

"You get in the city and everybody's in a rush and a push and a-jar. I'd rather be close to nature, close to where things are a-growing and a-living."

opened the shop 14 years ago. His widow, who carries on the business today, estimates there now are 40 or 50 such stores across the country.

Mrs. Andrea Bahadur who, with a partner, Mark Skwarek, operates the Go Fly a Kite store, says "the hobby is expanding, not so much in flying kites but in making them."

When her late husband, Surrendra, opened the original shop, he sold only fighter kites which he had imported from his home in Rampur.

These kites, quite common in India, are very maneuverable, Mrs. Bahadur said. "Opponents battle it out at perhaps 5,000 or 10,000 feet and the first one to cut his opponent's line wins," she explained. "The first kite I ever learned to fly was a fighter."

"But anyone can learn to fly a kite. Just stand still and play out the string. Or have a friend stand off some distance with the kite held aloft, facing into the wind. Then you just gently pull on the string.

"You do need at least a slight breeze, of course, but you don't have to run to get a kite in the air," she said.

According to Mrs. Bahadur this is one reason why kite flying is so popular. "Older people who are retired, who can't play tennis because it involves a lot of running around, fly kites."

She ticked off other reasons, too: you can fly a kite anywhere; it is inexpensive compared with some hobbies and you're getting more in touch with nature.

The shop is a melange of fantastic shapes and colors. There are 25-foot-long dragon kites from Thailand, hand-screened silk and paper three-dimensional kites from China, high-performance kites from West Germany, exotic designs from Japan and beautiful cloth kites from Belgium and Brazil.

"We get a lot of designers coming in," Miss Seastrom said. "Kites are used to decorate restaurants, boutiques, for barmitzvahs, weddings. Also private homes. People have done bedrooms and even kitchens with them."

Mrs. Bahadur tries "to fit the situation" when people come into the store to make a purchase. "We ask, first, who is going to fly it. Second, where are they going to fly it. (You wouldn't fly a tissue paper kite in a stiff breeze at the seashore, for example). And how much do they want to spend."

You can buy a plastic delta wing kite for as little as $1.29 — that's without the string. The average sale is around $10. If you want a hand-painted job, the cost can run you $500 or more.

opinion — and I must be honest — it (his amendment) does not eliminate all busing. I wish it did." Like many other Americans who are definitely not segregationists, Joe Biden concluded long ago that busing produces discord but not good education or lasting integration.

Such clear positions are becoming rare. While professing to abhor busing, President Ford seldom bestirs himself (and ignored the Roth-Biden amendment). Nobody knows exactly what Carter, also avowedly anti-busing, would do in office. Meanwhile, Fritz Mondale and a Senate majority prosper politically by talking anti-busing and voting pro-busing.

It is gone, all gone. The zucchini crumpled overnight, as if a pup tent had collapsed. In the cucumber patch, only entrails remain. A few tomatoes survive, but the dying vines have the look of torn curtains. The brave company of corn is a tattered, ragtail band. And because this is an in-between time, it is too soon to put the beds down for winter and it is too late to plant anything but turnips. September gardeners are children who can't find anything to do.

This has been a dismal season for our farming neighbors. Rappahannockers—the old-line Rappahannockers, as distinguished from immigrant urban aliens — are mostly cattle people or peach-and-apple people. It has been a terrible time for the cattle people. They are losing their shirts, and they keep going on faith, hope and credit. The orchard people have had two bad years in a row. Last year the trees groaned under a massive crop; you could scarcely give your apples away. This year saw a killing freeze at the peak of the April blossom, and the crop was close to a dead loss. In a dry summer the fields produced poor hay. Now we wait for the restoring snows, but the wait is long.

In these latitudes we are blessed with four distinct seasons, and the blessing—mixed as it is—helps to get us over the in-between times.

Life in Hawaii and Florida and Southern California has its undeniable pleasures, but it lacks something in contrast. In another month we will revel in the full-blown glory of autumn, in crisp nights and Indian summer days, and the seediness will pass. Already the dogwoods are turning; the gums are shedding russet leaves, and one of the Preacher's "times" is at hand—the time of blankets and open fires, the putting away of screens, and the flurry of little decisions. Florida is a great place, to be sure, but my friends in Florida do not know what it is to get out the fur-lined boots and to discover that mice have been nesting in the toes.

Sooner or later, the larger in-between time will run its course. In my own world of politics, everything waits on November 2. The Preacher did not mention a "time to elect," but for those who feed on election returns, the quadrennial hour is meat and drink and after-dinner coffee and peach cobbler for dessert. When that Tuesday night rolls around, it will be just as the gentleman said—a time to mourn, and a time to dance; a time to embrace, and a time to refrain from embracing. For there is indeed a time to every purpose under heaven; and before long the methodical clock, which now ticks away the minutes, will coil its strength and strike the clangorous hour.

Every parent tends to think that his child is above-average in intelligence. Phillip and I are no different. Each time that Meg says a new word or masters a new skill, we become a little more smug in our conviction that she is singularly brilliant. Phillip pretends that he doesn't see anything particularly extraordinary in her behavior, but he gives himself away by little remarks like, "Did you see that article about that eight year old kid in western North Carolina who's a genius? It said that his parents didn't suspect anything until he was 14 months old and he wrote the whole alphabet by himself."

"It's phenomenal, isn't it?" I answered. "It seems like they would have had some clue before then."

He was silent for a few moments as he watched Meg playing on the floor. Then he asked very nonchalantly, "How long is it until Meg is 14 months old?"

So we had great expectations when Meg was asked, at the age of around seven months, to be a "model" for a child development class at ECU.

"I don't know whether this is a good idea or not," I told Phillip the morning we were to appear. "Meg is so advanced. She might give those kids the wrong ideas about what a baby her age is supposed to be doing."

"Oh, come on, Gail. You know she's just a normal baby. I want you to promise me that you won't be disappointed if the teacher doesn't tell you that she should be enrolled in first grade next fall."

"Oh, be quiet. Meg is gifted, and I'm not going to let anyone tell me different."

That afternoon when Phillip got home from work, the first thing he asked me was, "Well, how did it go today? Did Meg explain the theory of relativity to the class?"

"No, she didn't - she was too busy discussing the relative merits of Picasso and Matisse."

"I deserved that, I guess," he said. "What did she really do?"

"She picked up a couple of raisins, looked in a mirror, flirted with a boy on the front row, and fell off some crawling toy the teacher put her on."

"What did the teacher say about her?"

I shrugged my shoulders. "She said she was normal."

"That's all? Nothing else?" he asked, unable to conceal his amazement.

"That's all. Now, would you pull Meg out of the dishwasher so that I can finish loading it?"

He pulled our inquisitive daughter away from the area which she was exploring and hugged her protectively. "I'm glad to see that you're calm about it. So all she said was that Meg was normal?" he repeated.

"That's all."

He set the baby on the floor; then I heard him whisper to hear, "We know better, don't we?"

Letter to the editor:

The city of Greenville, i.e., Greenville Utilities Commission welcomed a new resident this week. Because of a high outlay of cash due to moving expenses, a gentleman found it impossible to make an exorbitantly high utilities deposit ($82.00) after moving into his new home. He contacted GUCO, trying to explain that if they could possibly wait until the receipt of his first pay check, which was a matter of two days, that he would be able to make the deposit... which was refused in a definite and rude manner. No money, no lights. Credit references were given, all assurances made that the deposit would be made within 48 hours.

It was suggested that he contact a utilities official. This official explained the necessity of a deposit, but under the circumstances he would try to obtain a delay for the gentleman, since he was gainfully employed and of reputable character. Within 24 hours the gentleman was again notified by GUCO that he had to make the deposit within a day's time. It was, with much difficulty.

Those of us who have been residents of Greenville for many years feel embarrassed trying to welcome a new friend from another state while trying to explain that he has moved to a city where the dollar comes first and friendliness and understanding toward the problems of a newcomer don't count. Thank you, GUCO — it's great doing business with you!

Will Get Pension, Twenty Years After Firing

By THOMAS C. COTHRAIN
Associated Press Writer
CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Twenty years after she was fired from her teaching job for belonging to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the state of South Carolina has decided to give Mrs. Septina Clark a pension. She says it proves she was right all along.

Mrs. Clark, 78, learned of the state's action in a letter from Gov. James B. Edwards, who told her she had been "unjustly required to resign your job."

"I felt that was better to me than the money — for them to realize that I was right during that time," said Mrs. Clark, in an interview in her modest, two-story frame home here.

The fight to appropriate the first installment of $3,600 was led in the legislature by black state Rep. Joseph R. Murray, D-Charleston. Murray says although the first payment was made as a contribution, he expects the pension to become part of the permanent appropriations bill next year.

One of Charleston's main civil rights figures during the 1950s and 1960s, Mrs. Clark said she and other black leaders urged several hundred black teachers to defy the state and declare their membership in the NAACP in 1956 after the legislature passed a law barring any state employee or teacher from belonging to the group.

Only 11 agreed to announce their affiliation with the NAACP. They were all fired, but only Mrs. Clark, then 58, qualified for a pension.

The civil rights group challenged the firings in state court, but the case was dismissed. NAACP officials told Mrs. Clark they would take the matter to federal court, but the case was pushed into the background by others of wider impact.

The daughter of a slave who had supported Confederates during the civil War, Mrs. Clark began teaching school in a one-room log cabin on nearby John's Island in 1916. There were 136 pupils and one other teacher. She was 18 at the time, and had only a certificate allowing her to teach.

Later she taught in Columbia, where she earned a bachelor's degree at Benedict College in 1942. Her husband had died of kidney ailment in 1925.

She eventually moved back to Charleston, where she was fired after a 41-year teaching career. Her involvement in the civil rights movement deepened, and she studied at the Highlander Folk School in Tennessee, then regarded as a training ground for black radicals. She began teaching black adults to read so they could pass the literacy tests then used in the South and become registered voters.

"We used the election laws," she said. "We knew we needed voters, but we felt we had to eliminate illiteracy before we could get them."

She participated in many of the major civil rights marches in the South, became a friend of the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., and was with him when he received the Nobel Prize for peace.

"I really don't go along with violence," she said. "I feel we can do it non-violently." Violence never achieved any of the gains blacks sought during their long struggle in the South, she added.

"The only thing I felt is that when I went into a town to educate the people, I had to make them know what they wanted," she says, recalling the days when she was around the South teaching.

"Social change has really come but you had to fight to survive, and you still have to." The main weapon is education, Mrs. Clark added.

"Young people still feel it's better to fight back than to be nonviolent." But they'll learn if they live long enough.

New Rioting In Transvaal Province

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Police Saturday killed one black rioter and wounded others who set fire to a government building and tried to storm a police station near Pretoria to avenge the killing of a black schoolgirl by police.

The rioting was the first in the Transvaal Province in nearly two weeks during which antigovernment protests centered among South Africans of mixed race in the port and suburbs of Cape Town, 1,040 miles south of Pretoria.

Riot police chief Maj. Gen. Dawid Kriel said one black was killed and five others wounded Saturday to bring the death toll to 331 in 12 weeks of nationwide racial strife.

Thousands View Body Of Mao

HONG KONG (UPI) — Thousands of Chinese, weeping and wearing black armbands, filed past the body of Mao Tsetung in Peking's Great Hall of the People Saturday on the first day of an official week of mourning for the founder of modern China.

Amid the mourning, the political power struggle shaped up with more messages from Communist party organizations and, for the first time, the military which indicated their would be no immediate rapprochement with the Soviet Union.

Claims Christian Attack Repelled

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Moslem leftists and their Palestinian allies claimed today they repulsed an attempt by right-wing Christian troops and armor to punch into Moslem-held west Beirut during the night.

A leftist spokesman said this was the first concerted Christian attack in Lebanon's 17-month civil war designed to break through leftist defenses along the front line that bisects Beirut.

Pope Meets Rebel Bishop

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy (AP) — Rebel Bishop Marcel Lefebvre met Pope Paul VI today, seven weeks after the Vatican suspended the French prelate from his priestly functions because of his defiant rejection of change in the church.

Bishop Lefebvre smiled as he left the Pope's hilltop summer residence and confirmed to reporters that he had been received by the pontiff.

A Vatican statement on Aug. 27 had said that "The arms of the Pope are open" to receive the maverick bishop.

Ancient Scenic New River Saved

By HOWARD BENEDICT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Culminating a 14-year environmental battle, President Ford Saturday signed legislation that will save headwaters of the scenic New River in North Carolina from being flooded by a power project dam.

"This majestic and beautiful river and the land surrounding it have been preserved for future generations," the President said in a Rose Garden signing ceremony.

Among those attending were North Carolina Gov. James Holshouser, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and several members of the North Carolina congressional delegation.

The measure formally designates 26.5 miles of the waterway as a wild and scenic river, and invalidates any Federal Power Commission license along that stretch.

Appalachian Power Co., a subsidiary of American Electric Power Co., was granted an FPC license to dam the New River in Virginia and create electricity generating reservoirs that would have backed up into neighboring North Carolina.

The utility company fought hard against the bill, contending the added source of hydroelectric power is needed and that the $845 million project would have provided up to 1,500 local construction jobs. The twin dams and two reservoirs envisioned would have generated 1,800 megawatts of power daily.

The issue, first proposed in 1962, divided lawmakers and residents of North Carolina, who opposed the project, and those of Virginia, who wanted it.

The Virginians argued the project would provide badly needed jobs and power for their state. The North Carolinians contended it would force the relocation of more than 3,000 residents, flood thousands of acres of farmland and destroy the ecology of the historic river.

Environmental and conservation groups nationwide protested the flooding of the river, regarded by geologists as second in age only to the Nile. The Interior Department also opposed the project.

It attracted national attention last spring when, just before the North Carolina primary, Ford designated the 26.5-mile segment of the river as part of the Wild and Scenic Rivers System. He lost that primary to Ronald Reagan.

The legislation became necessary when a U.S. court of appeals upheld the FPC license for the power project.

Viking Walk

By RICHARD SALTUS
AP Science Writer
PASADENA, Calif. (AP) —

The first part of a "planetary two-step" begins today when the Viking 1 orbiter deserts its robot lander to begin a "walk" around Mars.

Joining in the dance later is the Viking 2 orbiter, which will leave its lander in the charge of the first orbiter while it heads north for a close look at the Martian polar cap.

The logistics of this program will result in a "fairly complicated operational period," mission director Tom Young said Friday.

The purpose is to bring the orbiters, with their cameras, heat and water-measuring devices, over parts of Mars they have been unable to study closely up to now.

Since the Viking 1 lander has entered a period of low activity, it no longer needs the orbiter overhead to serve as a radio relay station with earth.

The Viking 1 orbiter today will carry out a maneuver that will shift its orbit 40 degrees in longitude each day. These "steps" will take it completely around Mars in about nine days.

The ship will then synchronize its orbit over the Utopia Plain, where the Viking 2 lander is beginning its search for life. That will free the Viking 2 orbiter to leave its station Sept. 30 for a look at the polar cap.

The poles are of great interest to Viking scientists. Many believe that what was once a thicker Martian atmosphere is now frozen into the polar caps as carbon dioxide and water ice. The orbiters' scouting will help determine how thick the cap is, exactly what gases are locked into it, and what its temperature is in various places.

Young said the Viking 2 orbiter, which had a gyroscope failure that caused it to wander from its position and break radio contact during descent of its lander, has now been restored to the best condition possible.

The orbiter is still using a reserve set of gyros, he said, because the main gyros are believed to be irreparable.

Falls Arts Festival Set For Roxy Theater

A Fall Arts Festival covering a six hour period is being held from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturday, September 18 at the Roxy Music and Arts Center, 629 Albemarle Avenue in Greenville.

There is no admission being charged; however, a 25 cents donation will be appreciated. All donations received will be applied to improvement work on the community center building.

Among events taking place during the day will be a plants display; a fashion show by Carmen Smith of Annapolis, Md. along with a creative dance; pottery and macrame; a glassblowing demonstration by an art student from East Carolina University; and other art events.

All during the day, local musicians, singly and in groups, will perform inside and outside the Roxy building. Refreshments will also be available. The public is invited to attend.

Criminal Justice System Said Failing Under Load

By WILLIAM STEVENS
ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Every time a television cop says, "You have the right to remain silent..." Stanley J. Reiben says he feels sad, even though he played a role in making the famed "Miranda warning" part of the nation's criminal justice scene.

Reiben, for a generation one of the top defense lawyers in the United States, says he feels sad because, to many Americans, the "Miranda warning" signifies fairness in the judicial system — and that, he says, is just not so.

Rather than getting better, more swift, sure and fair, Reiben says, "The criminal justice system is breaking down under the load."

"The poor have virtually no chance at all, it is getting harder for the middle class, and soon — unless there are changes — only the very rich will be able to get fair treatment in the criminal courts," Reiben says.

As counsel to the New York State Assembly Codes Committee, Reiben has come up with a proposal he says would help restore balance in the criminal court system, though he is quick to concede the idea is does not answer all the problems.

In its simplest form, Reiben's proposal calls for creation of a "Grand Jury Counsel," who would present cases to a grand jury. If the grand jury returned an indictment, the case would then be prosecuted by the district attorney.

Under the current system, the district attorney presents the case to the grand jury and then, if an indictment is returned, prosecutes the defendant.

This leads, says Reiben, to a "scoreboard mentality" among district attorneys and forces them away from their basic trust which is "to protect the innocent and punish the guilty."

"It stands to reason," he says. "If the district attorney presents the original case to the grand jury and gets an indictment then he is going to make every effort to secure a conviction, even if in so doing he ignores the basic tenets of justice."

"I accuse no district attorney of being evil simply because he is human. I have never met an in-office district attorney or assistant who admits he manipulates a grand jury. But I've met literally hundreds of former prosecutors who've regaled me with stories of how they handled grand juries."

He cited a case he was involved in at one time in which the prosecution withheld from the grand jury the fact that a key witness was actually an undercover police officer, not the convicted criminal he was portraying.

"That grand jury," he recalls with a slight smile, "thought it was hearing testimony from a real mobster and all they were actually hearing was a policeman who had been working on the case for a long time — don't you think he had a vested interest?"

As the people's representative, Reiben says, the district attorney "should be speaking for a system of justice." But that often is not the case because the prosecutor eventually begins to believe he is

"ordained as a protector of society and so he wraps all his actions in a cloak of sanctity."

"This has a snowball effect... Everybody must produce... It becomes a game of how many indictments, how many convictions? The temptation to achieve a score — a victory — is overwhelming."

"Meanwhile, the standards by which justice should be measured and by which cases should be presented and tried — fair, valid, true and complete — get thrown out the window."

Reiben, 61 years old and silver-haired with an elegant taste in clothing, has successfully defended 64 persons accused of murder in New York State. His part in the use of the "Miranda Warning" came when he was chief counsel for George Whitmore, a 19-year-old black accused in the 1963 slayings in Manhattan of Emily Hoffert and Janice Wylie, a niece of author Philip Wylie.

The case, in which it was eventually established that Whitmore's confession was false, was cited by U.S. Supreme Court Chief Justice Earl Warren as being a major cause of the Miranda rulings.

That ruling requires arresting officers to inform suspects of their rights to remain silent and have an attorney during all phases of the criminal justice process.

Another man, Richard Robles, eventually was convicted in the slayings.

Reiben says the grand jury counsel would have a built in check on the temptation to "run up a big score of indictments."

"The indictments would go to a district attorney who would not have a vested interest in gaining a conviction."

Is About Same

NEW YORK (AP) — A recent survey of electricity users shows there is little significant difference in the use of electrical appliances between income groups.

The study, conducted by General Public Utilities Corp., showed that virtually all families have combination refrigerator-freezers, but more low income than high income homes use electric water heaters. Room unit air conditioners are owned by 28.5 per cent of low income families as compared with 44.4 per cent for high income families. The greatest spread was found in the ownership of color TV, with 56.8 per cent of the less wealthy owning them, compared with 83.7 per cent of more wealthy families.

ARRIVING AT MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM . . . are Ann Watson and her father, William Henly Watson for the annual Debutante Ball.

Debutantes Make Formal Bows On Friday

RALEIGH — The traditional cartwheel figure featuring 1976 debutantes and their chief marshals was a highlight of the formal presentation held here Friday evening.

Miss Sue Carson Joyner of Raleigh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walton K. Joyner, led the debutantes in forming the figure. The formal bows to society were made by 210 young ladies from North Carolina in Memorial Auditorium.

Debutantes from Martin and Pitt Counties this year included: Mary Virginia Winslow of Hamilton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Brown Winslow; Karen Elizabeth Green, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Green and Kathryn Elizabeth Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Roberson Wilson, both of Robersonville; Mary Glen Peele, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Oscar Peele Jr. and Helen Faye Rogers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Javan Howard Rogers, both of Williamston.

Catherine Elizabeth Deyton, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Guy Deyton Jr.; Helen Ruth Fleming, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Van Calvin Fleming Jr.; Catherine Elizabeth Garrett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Corydon Dwight Garrett; Sarah Cassandra Sugg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Bruce Sugg Jr.; and Margaret Ann Watson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Henly Watson, all of Greenville.

A gown of sheer silk with a scoop neckline and fitted bodice outlined in applied Venise lace was worn by Miss Winslow for her formal bow to society. The gown featured an empire waist and the full A-line skirt had Venise lace appliques and satin in a border at the hem.

Miss Green selected a formal length gown, designed by Frank Masandrea, of imported silk beaded with Venise lace rosettes centered with pearls in a cluster pattern with embroidered leaves. The cap sleeve gown had a high neckline, fitted bodice and sheath A-line skirt.

Miss Wilson was wearing a dress by Bianchi of New York and Boston of white peau de soie with a fitted bodice and scoop neckline. The neckline was trimmed with a border of seed pearls, crystal beads and iridescent sequins. The sleeveless dress had a full flowing skirt.

A southern bell original style formal gown of silk organza was chosen by Miss Peele. The gown had a square neckline with a V-back, fitted waistline and embroidered apron effect with lace appliques on the skirt.

Miss Rogers was attired in a full length white dress with an Elizabethan collar. The sleeveless dress featured lace extending the full length of the gown.

Miss Deyton was wearing a high-waisted halter-back dress with iridescent sequins on the bodice. The full chiffon skirt featured a white chiffon panel extending down the front.

An imported French formal gown of white silk peau de soie was selected by Miss Fleming. The gown featured a scoop neckline highlighted by seed pearls and roche beads. The empire waistline extended into front and back pleats. The sleeveless gown was fashioned with a flowing skirt.

A gown of white organdy over peau de soie styled with a low rounded neckline and empire waistline was the selection of Miss Garrett. A scattering of seed pearls in a flower design highlighted the bodice. The A-line skirt extended into a short train.

which featured a high Venise lace see-through neckline. The Venise lace was repeated on the bodice and on the border of a double tiered flounced hemline.

A gown of white satin crepe over peau de soie and reem-broidered French lace was worn by Miss Watson. The gown was fashioned with a raised collar adorned with borders of lace, stems of pearls and covered buttons continuing to the empire waistline. The short sleeves were capelettes of applied lace motifs re-embroidered with pearls. The flowing skirt of the white ball gown fell in gathers to a floor length.

Wally Hinkamp and his orchestra provided music for the presentation and the Ambassadors played for the dance immediately following the presentation at the Carolina Country Club.

The weekend was busy for the girls, their families and marshals. Following registration at Memorial Auditorium Thursday, a rehearsal was held. A cocktail party honoring the debutantes and their parents was held Thursday evening at the North Ridge Country Club.

Mothers of the girls were entertained at a coffee given by the Honorary Chairman, Mrs. Joseph Walker Yates Jr., at the Carolina Country Club Friday at noon.

Three groups — the Mar-velettes, "Janice," and Bill Deal and the Rhondels — provided music for dancing Saturday morning at the Carolina Country Club, while "Janice," and Bill Deal and the Rhondels played again for the Saturday night dance at the North Ridge Country Club.

The traditional figure just prior to the presentation of the debutantes was formed by members of the Terpsichorean Club and their ladies.

Marines Killed In Attempted Burglary

BLUFFTON, S.C. (AP) — Two Marines, who apparently swam three-fourths of a mile across a river to burglarize the isolated island home of a millionaire, were shot to death by the owner of the estate, authorities say.

Henry S. "Harry" Cram, a 69-year-old plantation owner described by neighbors as an avid outdoorsman and proficient with firearms, fired two shots from a .38-caliber revolver, instantly killing the Marines, Beaufort County Coroner Roger Pinckney said Friday.

The men were identified as Sgt. John M. Adams Jr., 20, of High Point, N.C., and Lance Cpl. Lawrence R. Powell, 21, of Union Town, N.J.

Pinckney said they apparently swam across the May River from Bluffton to reach Cram's estate on a 40-acre isolated island in the southeastern corner of South Carolina.

Pinckney said one of the dead Marines wore a rubber diving suit and the other was dressed in cut-off fatigues. He said they both had knives, one of them a Bowie knife which he described as "the largest I ever saw."

Pinckney, who said not all details were immediately available, gave the following account:

The two men entered the modern, three-home complex through an open screen door in the bedroom of Cram's son, Peter. One man wore a stocking over his face; the other had a pillowcase over his head.

They tied up Peter and led him to his parents' bedroom.

When they reached the bedroom, one of the men stood in front of Peter and the other stood behind him with a knife at his back.

One of the Marines said, "Peter, tell your father to throw the gun out the door."

Peter then yelled to his father that the men had knives.

Cram opened the door, his son dropped to the floor, and he fired the gun, hitting both Marines in the head. The coroner said the two men died instantly.

Apologizes For Error In Ad

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Error in a political advertisement relating to Howard Lee's military career elicited an apology from House Speaker James C. Green, Lee's opponent in Tuesday's runoff for the Democratic lieutenant governor's nomination.

The Green ad, which appeared Friday in several North Carolina newspapers, said Lee had no military service. Actually, Lee spent about two years in the Army as a personnel specialist and English instructor in Korea.

The ad, which placed a list of Green's accomplishments next to Lee's, said the House Speaker served World War II.

Samuel Johnson, Green's campaign manager, issues a public apology after learning of the error. He said the mistake was inadvertent.

Will Accept TV Debate

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Republican gubernatorial runoff candidates David Flaherty and Coy Privette said today they would accept a televised debate challenge from Democratic nominee Jim Hunt before the November general election.

Flaherty and Privette, who meet in a runoff election for the GOP nomination Tuesday, said they would be so anxious to debate if nominated that they would accept virtually any terms.

NCCC Full Time Coordinator

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Council of Churches has appointed a full time coordinator to stir up support within churches for the proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution (ERA).

Tibbie Roberts of Morehead City was named to the task. For the last five years she was Christian social involvement coordinator of the state's United Methodist Women and is chairman of the administrative board of the First United Methodist Church of Morehead City.

said 75 per cent have been halted and the rest will be ended in the next few months "if determined to be illegal."

Former Rep. Wilmer Mizell, a Republican who represented the 5th district, including Winston-Salem, from 1968 to 1974 said Saturday he received political contributions from Reynolds officials but had no reason to believe any involved corporate money.

"We've received contributions from individuals of Reynolds and of course those have been recorded and are public record," he told. The Associated Press in a telephone interview.

"We had no reason to question the individual gifts that came to the campaign from individuals that were employees of Reynolds."

Reps. Stephen L. Neal, D-N.C., who defeated Mizell in 1974 and is being challenged by Mizell this year, praised Reynolds for the voluntary public disclosure and said he thinks "it would be a matter of public interest to know who these contributions were made to."

Neal said he received two contributions of $200 and $500 from relatives who work for Reynolds, but got no corporate money.

A&P Exclusive at A&P... 14 Historic American Scenes on a superb set of Genuine English Dinnerware.

LIBERTY BLUE

GENUINE ENGLISH IMPORT

STAFFORDSHIRE DINNERWARE

Come in and see this elegant selection of Liberty Blue Staffordshire Dinnerware. Study the amazing detail delicately etched in each design—and collect a set of your own to enjoy for generations.

A&P is featuring this beautiful dinnerware at extraordinary low prices. It is in the spirit of our country's bicentennial year that we bring you this unique dinnerware. We are asking no minimum purchase requirement—allowing you to buy as many featured and complete pieces as you wish every time you visit A&P.

Liberty Blue includes 14 scenes from America's quest for independence. Scenes of Paul Revere's famous ride, George Washington crossing the Delaware, the Boston Tea Party and more. The very names and events we are commemorating this year.

American History... Made in Staffordshire, England.

Two hundred years ago America declared its independence from England. During the same time the potters of Staffordshire, England were busy developing a new technology in the design and manufacture of dinnerware—a process that copied all the detail and depth of hand-crafted copper etchings. The Staffordshire potters used etchings of current events from the Revolutionary War to decorate their dinnerware. They did not know that one day their "Staffordshire Blue" would be the prized possessions of museums. Nor did they ever dream that one day the new nation called the United States would use their same design to celebrate its independence from England!

A&P's "Liberty Blue" is the exact replica of 14 "Staffordshire Blue" designs. To ensure total authenticity Liberty Blue was manufactured in the famous factory at Staffordshire, England. Now at A&P you can get the same exquisite beauty, the original designs—at a fraction of the cost.

Drive-In Church Service Draws Crowds

FLOOD DAMAGE was extensive to some homes on Haystack Rd. in Palm Dessert during Friday's non-stop rains. Mobile home owners were also effected. (AP Wirephoto)

GARDEN GROVE, Calif. (AP) — When the Rev. Robert Schuller steps to the pulpit each Sunday, many of his parishioners are still sitting outside the church in their cars. That's just the way the positive-thinking minister wants it. Next to his glass-walled Garden Grove Community Church is a special 1,700-car drive-in area, where worshipers can watch Schuller preach while they listen to his upbeat sermon on their car radios. Camera crews film the proceedings as a choir warms up the audience before the Rev. Mr. Schuller starts preaching. The services are televised as a weekly program, "The Hour of Power," viewed on more than 100 stations. Spectators fill the pews inside, and an overflow crowd often sits on folding chairs just outside. But most of the crowd attracted each week to the suburban Los Angeles church wait in their cars as two big glass wall sections roll aside to give them a clear view of the performance. They hear it all on a special AM radio channel. Unlike some ministers who use the airwaves to preach, the Rev. Mr. Schuller shuns the fire-and-brimstone approach for a low-key philosophy he calls "possibility thinking." He never calls people sinners, for example, and insists that Jesus Christ didn't either. "A person becomes who he believes he is," the Rev. Mr. Schuller said in an interview. "If you call someone a sinner, it only reinforces a negative self-image. Jesus told people they were the salt of the earth and the might of the world." Michael Mason, administrative executive for the church, predicts church members will contribute $1.5 million this year and television viewers will donate an additional $6 million. The minister started his Community Church in 1955 at a vacant drive-in theater. Now his Garden Grove complex has its own church and a 14-story headquarters, called the Tower of Power, topped by a 90-foot neon cross. In the works is a larger, $15 million church shaped like a star with 10,000 glass windows. The Rev. Mr. Schuller, who earns $37,500 a year, said he is aware that some have criticized his brand of Christianity as sanitized and saccharine.

Air Crash Memories

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Two years ago today, at 7:33 a.m., an Eastern Airlines jet flew into the ground near here, killing 72 persons. Ten persons, including two crew members, escaped from the wreckage before it was swept by fire. For those who survived, the emotional and often physical scars are still fresh. Stewardess Collette Watson, 28, of College Park, Ga., said she was overcome by tears of terror during a rough landing in bad weather last spring. She has asked for a job on the ground after a year back flying. She made a scrapbook of articles about the crash and her escape from the burning wreckage. She can't explain why she keeps the articles. "I could care less if I ever see them again," she said last week. Francis C. Mihalek of Charleston, S.C., keeps a bag of charred clothes in his attic for reasons he cannot explain. The clothes were taken off him when he arrived at a hospital after the crash. He still has the black and cordovan Bostonian shoes, caked with mud from the cornfield where the jet went down near the Charlotte airport. Thursday, Mihalek sued Eastern for $1.8 million. Numerous other suits stemming from the crash have been filed and already settled. Richard Arnold IV, 33, of Portland, Ore., says the burns he suffered over 45 per cent of his body now cause him "emotional and mental distress...as well as humiliation and embarrassment."

1976 Poster Boy

MISENHEIMER, N.C. (AP) — Seven-year-old Andy Estes is now among his peers as "the Arthritis Kid." The red-haired, freckled boy does not have the crippling disease, but he has become something of a local celebrity as the poster child for the American Arthritis Association's 1976-77 campaign to raise money to fight the disease. "I guess somebody could assume he has it since arthritis is not always visible," said Andy's mother, Mrs. Vallin Estes. "But he's supposed to tell people, 'I'm a healthy kid and I hope other kids won't have it.' They call him a symbol of hope that other children in the future might not have arthritis." Andy refers to arthritis as "a pain you can have in your fingers that when you exercise it, it doesn't hurt."

Phase II

Phase II of the Greenville Utilities Commission's Operation Flush, a program designed to rid the city's water mains of unwanted sediment, will get underway Monday, Sept. 13 and continue through Friday. Wade Lewis, superintendent of GUCO's Water and Sewer Department, said that Phase II will be conducted in the area of the city bounded by the Tar River on the north, Cemetery Road on the east, Cotanche Street on the west, and Fifth Street on the south. The flushing operation, which follows a similar effort Sept. 7-10 in residential areas north of the river, will be conducted between the hours of 10 p.m. and 6 a.m., he said, in order to minimize the number of customers who will be inconvenienced. Lewis asked residents in the flushing area not to be alarmed if they see open water hydrants. He noted that selected hydrants will be left open for long periods so that the force of the flowing water will loosen and flush out rust scales.

DOES YOUR CHILD HAVE A READING PROBLEM?

The Learning Advancement Center, Inc.
Greenville, N.C.

WHAT? The Learning Advancement Center is to provide reading skill development for students who have difficulty learning to read.
WHY? All people are individuals. Each of us learns best in our own particular way and at our own pace. This is especially true of students learning to read. Some students require a special way of learning and progress at a different pace.
HOW? The Learning Advancement Center uses the highly individualized, structured, and self-paced Hoffman Reading Program as its curriculum. This program provides a motivating, competency based and success oriented presentation that can turn learning to read into a pleasurable experience for the student.
WHO? Any student reading at a level below their ability and grade level could benefit from this program.
WHEN? After school and special summer hours are to be arranged.

Howard Lee for Lieutenant Governor!

We're voting for Howard Lee for Lieutenant Governor on Tuesday, September 14.

We need your support and your vote. Here is an opportunity to bring courageous, hard-working, honest leadership to the office of Lieutenant Governor and help move North Carolina forward again.

We're behind Howard Lee all the way.

VOTE Howard Lee for Lieutenant Governor
Tuesday, September 14
Paid for by Citizens for Lee
Gretchen Dunn, Treasurer

Your Daily HOROSCOPE
from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: There is likely to be a slowing up of activity today and tonight, nevertheless you are able to solve whatever perplexities that come up. Much patience is required of you at this time.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Find the philosophy of life that is best suited for you. Sidestep one who is detrimental to your best interests.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make an effort to eliminate any personal drawbacks. Make future plans. Evening is the best time to enjoy the company of friends.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have to spend more time on a new project to be successful. Avoid the temptation to spend more money than you can afford.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) If you are undecided just how to gain a personal aim, wait until the sun goes down and then your mind is clear.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Arrange your practical activities more intelligently. Closest tie can now give you good advice that should be followed.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Try to gain the goodwill of new acquaintances of worth who can help you advance. Think along constructive lines.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You may be confused early in the day but later you get right answers to puzzling situations. Stay on the right side of life.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Any annoying problems in the morning can be eliminated later in the day. Take time for meditation and improve your thinking.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Persevere and accomplish a great deal, despite interruptions that may arise. Take no chances with your reputation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Handle important tasks early in the day so you will have free time later. Be sure to show increased devotion to loved one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have to be tactful at home to ease the tension and have more harmony. A new interest could meet with delay.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Much care in motion is necessary or you could get into trouble. Plan time for meditation that can be most helpful to you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be charming and magnanimous of nature, but may find it difficult to make up the mind and could lose out if the power of decision isn't taught early in life. Direct the education along practical lines. Don't neglect ethical training.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Your Daily HOROSCOPE
from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day and evening when you are able to concentrate your efforts on problems at hand. Cultivate the friendship of a bigwig who is in a position to help you advance.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You can handle duties efficiently and gain the respect and cooperation of bigwigs. Show others that you can be trusted.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You are very creative during morning hours and should take advantage of it. Get rid of situations that stand in the way of happiness.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Discuss with a close tie how to get ahead faster in the future. Entertain prominent persons who might be in a position to help you.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Look to some good friend for the advice you need that will make you a more productive and successful person in the future. Take time to visit relatives.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Show a monetary wizard that you are a practical person and you gain his fine support. Handle a civic matter wisely.

Drug Abuse By Elderly

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — The drug problems of the elderly are a growing concern of doctors, according to Dr. W. Wells Lipscomb, a Berkeley psychiatrist.

Some older people abuse mind-altering drugs in an attempt to escape from loneliness and boredom. Others are unintentional victims of the "spaced-out grandma" syndrome — peculiar behavior resulting from the interactions of drugs prescribed for the ailments of old age, he says.

The "spaced-out grandma" syndrome is apt to develop, Lipscomb says, when patients are overtreated for the multiple conditions common in old age, such as sleeplessness, high blood pressure, arthritis and mood swings.

The problem is apt to arise when doctors prescribe multiple prescriptions for these ailments, producing in the patient's system a cocktail of different drugs which can cause strange behavior.

The chemical psychosis clears up as soon as the patient is taken off the drugs, he said.

Flash Floods Bring Death, Damages To California, Arizona

By United Press International
Tropical storm Kathleen left six persons dead with the toll expected to rise and building, highway and crop damage in the millions in Southern California and Arizona Saturday. The first such near-hurricane blow in almost 40 years in the southwest United States spent its last wind and rain over the deserts and mountains into Nevada and headed into Idaho and Utah. Flash flood warnings from the U.S. Weather Bureau were still in effect in mountain areas but a spokesman said Kathleen no longer had a center and that it was rapidly dissipating as it moved inland. Hardest hit of all in Friday's torrential rains and 76 mile-per-hour winds was the town of Ocotillo, population 450, in southern California near the Mexican border.

A wall of water at least 40 feet high roared out of a mountain canyon a mile east of the town and carried away a 60-foot high bridge and more than a quarter mile of interstate highway. Lt. Bruce Anderholt of the Imperial County sheriff's department said two bodies had been recovered from automobiles caught in the path of the giant wave. The storm battered Yuma, Ariz., killing an elderly man when a palm tree fell on his mobile home. Eleven persons were treated at the Medical Center for injuries, most of them caused by objects blown by the wind. One airplane was destroyed and seven damaged at the airport. Another man was drowned in the El Centro, Calif., and two persons died of injuries suffered as the result of rain-slicked roads in Los Angeles.

Kidnaper Faces 20 Year Prison Term

RALEIGH (AP) — A Massachusetts man faces a 20-year prison term after pleading guilty to kidnaping a young Morrisville woman at a Raleigh shopping center last June 2.

According to a federal warrant David Lucien Leroux, 30, of Wilbraham, Mass., kidnaped Janice Faye Marcom, 19, as she sat in her car at the shopping center and forced her to drive to Jessup, Ga., about 350 miles away. Leroux returned to Raleigh the next day with Miss Marcom. She was unharmed.

Leroux told federal officials that he intended only to take Miss Marcom's car but that he panicked when she screamed.

In handing Leroux the 20-year sentence Thursday, U.S. District Judge John D. Larkins added a provision that he could be released at any time at the discretion of the U.S. Board of Pardon.

Leroux was apprehended on a bus to Petersburg, Va. He boarded the bus after returning Miss Marcom to Raleigh, a court official said.

Should Be Punished

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — Lt. Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. says whoever is responsible for a phony letter of endorsement supposedly signed by Hunt should be punished as much as the law will allow.

The letter, received by various persons across the state Thursday, urges Democrats to vote for Howard Lee in Tuesday's runoff against House Speaker Jimmy Green for the Democratic lieutenant governor's nomination.

total value of farm cash receipts at a total of $86,899,000.

In the 1974 tabulation, Pitt County ranked third in the "all crops" category (crops without poultry and livestock products); it ranked first in tobacco; second in corn; eighth in soybeans; and ninth in peanuts. The 1976 value of Pitt County crops has been estimated at about $110 million. Pitt County also appears in the top ten rank of two categories of livestock and products—eighth in hog production and sixth in egg production.

Agriculture Extension Agent Ed Yancey said that "the farm equipment to make this production possible should have appeal to non-farmers as well as to farmers. We hope the public will take this opportunity to see this excellent display."

Ceremony To Link Two Queens

The linking of two British queens who reigned four centuries apart will take place this week in Manteo.

The dedication of the Queen's Rose Garden at Manteo's Elizabethan Gardens and the presentation of a portrait of Sir Walter Raleigh to the Garden Club of North Carolina will bring two well-known English citizens to North Carolina during the week.

On Wednesday, Sept. 15, the Raleigh portrait, commissioned just this summer, will be presented to the Garden Club of North Carolina, whose members will be holding an annual board meeting in New Bern. Special guests for the occasion will be Geoffrey Edmund Gilbert and Mrs. Gilbert of London, England. Gilbert is a direct descendant of the famous Raleigh, courtier of Queen Elizabeth I. He is 11 generations removed from Sir Humphrey Gilbert, half brother of Sir Walter Raleigh.

Then on Saturday, Sept. 18, His Excellency Sir Peter Ransbotham, British Ambassador to the United States, will dedicate the newly created Queen's Rose Garden at the Elizabethan Gardens in Manteo.

"The idea is to link the two Elizabeths during this bicentennial year," commented Mrs. Marion Odom, chairman of the board of directors of Elizabethan Gardens.

The Sir Walter Raleigh portrait, a gift of Mr. and Mrs. William P. Kemp of Goldsboro, will hang in the Elizabethan Gardens' Gate House along with the 16th century portrait of Queen Elizabeth I already there.

The portrait is a copy of the famous portrait of Raleigh that now hangs in the National Portrait Gallery of London.

At the rose garden dedication, Mrs. Odom will receive a "Queen Elizabeth" hybrid tea rose sent by Queen Elizabeth II from her own garden and presented by Ambassador Ransbotham.

The dedication program includes a luncheon, a tour of the gardens, the 5 p.m. planting ceremony and an informal tea. The event is open to the public and invitations for the occasion have been mailed to legislators, congressmen, other North Carolina officials and prominent citizens, Mrs. Odom said.

In addition to the new Queen Elizabeth rose and many other rose varieties, the Queen's Garden features a 15th century sundial from the John Hay Whitney estate. Whitney was once ambassador to the Court of St. James. Sir Peter Ransbotham will dedicate the sundial which is located on the brick pathway access to the garden.

The 45 by 50 foot cloistered rose garden is located close to the ancient oak at the historic site of the first English settlement in the new world.

The Elizabethan Gardens, first dedicated in 1951, are designed by Lewis Clarke, an Englishman by birth, and were first envisioned as typical of the kind of garden a successful colonist might have built on Roanoke Island had the colonization succeeded, and as a memorial to the first English colonists in America.

During its 24-year history the gardens have received memorial gifts from a number of estates and philanthropists including a statue of Virginia Dare, first white child born in the new world.

The Garden is located in the Fort Raleigh National Historic Site, adjoining the theatre where the historical drama "The Lost Colony" is produced annually during the summer months.

Andy Griffith Among Hollywood Theater Stars

North Carolina's own Andy Griffith starring in his first modern dramatic classic will be a highlight of the 1976 season of Hollywood Television Theatre which premieres Thursday, September 16 at 9:00 p.m. on Channel 25, Greenville.

Griffith stars as the Father in Luigi Pirandello's twentieth century classic, "Six Characters in Search of An Author," on Thursday, September 23 at 9:00 p.m. John Houseman co-stars as the Director. For this innovative production exploring the nature of illusion and reality, producer Norman Lloyd transposed the setting from a theater to a television studio. Stacy Keach directed. The drama also stars Julie Adams, Beverly Todd and James Keach.

For the season premiere on Thursday, September 16 at 9:00 p.m., Julie Harris recreates her Tony Award winning portrayal of Mary Todd Lincoln in the television premiere of James Prideaux's "The Last of Mrs. Lincoln."

The third Hollywood Television Theatre program "The Fatal Weakness" provides Eva Marie Saint with a stylish, elegant high comedy role on Thursday, September 30 show at 9:00

An incident that took place in the Roman city of Antioch in the year 287 is the basis for "Philemon," a musical story which airs Thursday, October 7 at 9:00 p.m. An unemployed actor-clown persuaded by the city's Roman commander to impersonate the great Christian leader Philemon finds himself becoming the man he portrays. The play was written and composed by Tom Jones and Harvey Schmidt, authors of "The Fantasticks" and "I Do, I Do."

The final Hollywood Television Theatre program this fall is a repeat of one of the series' productions, Frederic Hunter's "The Hemingway Play." This imaginative dramatization, on Thursday, October 14 at 9:00 p.m., brings together four characters, each representing a different age and different aspect of the great writer.

Hollywood Television Theatre is a KCET production by Norman Lloyd.

Four Dance Companies To Give Performances

Four dance companies under the auspices of the Triangle Dance Guild will be presenting a season of dance in three locations during the 1975-76 season.

Betty Jones' "Dances We Dance;" the North Carolina Dance Theater; and Lotte Goslar's Pantomime Circus are the four companies to be making appearances in Raleigh, Durham and Chapel Hill.

The schedule of performances are: (Hours of performance unknown) —Raleigh (Stewart Theater) —Sept. 22, Dances We Dance; Oct. 11, N.C. Dance Theater; Feb. 11, Pantomime Circus; and Apr. 8, Pantomime Circus.

—Durham (Page Auditorium) —Sept. 24, Dances We Dance; Oct. 13, N.C. Dance Theater; Feb. 10, Pantomime Circus; and Apr. 6, Pantomime Circus.

—Chapel Hill (Memorial Hall) —Sept. 21, Dances We Dance; Oct. 15, N.C. Dance Theater; Feb. 8, Pantomime Circus; and Apr. 2, Pantomime Circus.

Season tickets for the four performances are available under the following categories: Donor, $100; Patron, $50; Sponsor, $25; General Public tickets, $12; Tickets for persons over 65, $7; and student tickets, $7. Checks are to be made payable to: Triangle Dance Guild, Inc., and can be ordered from: Box 5217, Raleigh, N.C. 27607. Tickets for the four performances can be for one town only, and cannot be mixed between the three towns.

For additional information, interested persons are to call Chapel Hill, 933-1161; Durham, 684-4059; or Raleigh, 737-3105.

Appointed Governor

Robert L. Hause, professor of music and conductor of the University Symphony, East Carolina University, has been appointed Governor of Province 20 of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia fraternity for 1976-79.

As Province Governor, Prof. Hause will have responsibility to oversee the programs, activities and operations of active chapters in North Carolina. Kent Neely Manager Of Playhouse Theater Shawnee, Oklahoma native Kent Neely has been named Manager of the East Carolina University Playhouse Theater for the 1976-77 season. Neely succeeds Albert Pertallon, now on a leave of absence to attend the University of Michigan.

A graduate of Wayne State University in Detroit, with undergraduate work at Oklahoma City University, Neely has a major in theater and a minor in oral interpretation.

A first-time faculty member at E.C.U., Neely is also an assistant professor in the Drama Department in addition to his position as Playhouse manager.

As an actor, Neely has performed in a number of plays, including A Flea In Her Ear, Streetcar Named Desire and After The Rain. At Wayne State University, he directed Barefoot In The Park.

Although no firm plans for the forthcoming Playhouse season are ready to be announced, Neely said, "Five productions are planned with the first one to come about the end of October. These will be staged at McGinnis or at the Studio Theater."

Relating his early impressions of East Carolina University, Neely said, "The thing that impresses me is that from what I've seen, looking at the past record, I'm surprised at the quality of productions that have been offered here. It is outstanding. The Drama Department here must have some remarkable talent; as the plays they have produced are ones that are usually only capable of being produced with much larger production companies and budgets.

"It seems too," Neely continued, "that the department here is really very serious about student work, in giving students a chance to be involved in better quality work than is available in most university theaters. I'm happy to be here."

Neely is married to the former Esther Jane Cook, also a native Oklahoman (Tulsa). He is a member of the American Theater Association.

Six Musical Events Set For Carowinds Park

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Carowinds theme park has announced that six musical groups and performers have been booked in the Paladium amphitheater for a special Bluegrass Music Weekend, Saturday and Sunday Sept. 18 and 19.

Mac Wiseman, Bill Monroe and the Blue Grass Boys, The Country Gentlemen, and Jim and Jesse are to appear both days during the weekend. Lester Platt is scheduled to appear on that Sunday and The Lewis Family is to perform on Saturday.

Park officials said the Bluegrass Show is to be at 3 and 7 p.m. both days.

Lester Platt, of Grand Ole Opry fame, began his professional musical career in 1944 and formed the Foggy Mountain Boys with Earl Scruggs in 1948. The partnership was terminated in 1969 and Platt formed The Nashville Grass. He performs on many television shows and at more than 50 college campuses each year.

Well-known in gospel, bluegrass and country music circles, The Lewis Family formed their musical group in the late 1940's and began performing on front porches and in small churches near their eastern Georgia home. Since then, the seven-member group has produced its own television show and makes a number of major public appearances.

Mac Wiseman started playing the guitar when he was 12 and worked as a feature radio singer from 1944 to 1951. He made his first record in 1951 and went on to record "Jimmy Brown, The Newsboy" which topped the record charts for 33 weeks. Wiseman performs on a number of major television shows and engagements around the world.

An originator of bluegrass music, Bill Monroe has been a star of the Grand Ole Opry for 34 years, has recorded for MCA Records for 19 years and was elected to the Country Music Hall of Fame in 1970. In 1930, Monroe started his radio career as a member of The Monroe Brothers, Charlie and Bill. Eight years later he formed his own group, The Blue Grass Boys.

The five-member Country Gentlemen feature a bluegrass musical style which is a blend of folk, country, rock, blues, jazz and classical music. The Washington, D.C., group was formed 15 years ago and currently appear at college campuses, night clubs, fairs, concerts and on many television shows in and out of the United States.

The musical team of Jim and Jesse McReynolds started their musical career in 1947 with a number of amateur local appearances and joined the Grand Ole Opry in 1964. Since then they have had their own syndicated television shows and have recorded such hits as "Freight Train" and a popular hit album entitled, "Mandolin Workshop."

Carowinds, located astride the North Carolina - South Carolina border along I-88 south of Charlotte, N.C., is open for weekends through Oct. 3.

RECORD AUCTION — A painting by 18th century American artist, James Peale, titled "Washington and His Generals at Yorktown 1781" was sold at Christies in London for $315,000, the highest sum ever paid at auction for an American painting. The painting was sent for sale by an anonymous descendant of General Lafayette, one of the generals depicted. (AP Wirephoto)

Book News

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By WILLIE MAE GIBBS

Readers who, perhaps, already enjoy a particular craft will discover new ideas and designs to stimulate them in the new craft books at the library.

THE BOOK OF HANDICRAFTS edited by Eve Harlow is full of beautiful, practical things that can be made for personal use, for the house, and as gifts. The wide range of 27 different crafts includes the traditional favorites such as quilting, patchwork, knitting and embroidery, new revivals in beadwork, needlepoint, collage, macrame and batik, and exciting decorative crafts such as candlemaking, jewelry and corn weaving. With the help of the patterns and instructions throughout this book, one can make furnishings, decorative accessories for every room, personal handicraft accessories, and knitted, crocheted or embroidered clothes at a fraction of the price they would cost to buy. The projects in this book are arranged to lead naturally from the basic techniques to those more complex. Instructions do not assume a prior knowledge but are simple enough that even a beginner can make handicrafts an absorbing and profitable pastime.

Boutiques sell individual and original clothes, gifts, jewelry and accessories — unique things quite unlike the usual run of mass-produced goods. But boutiques can also be expensive! Now in BOOK OF BOUTIQUE CRAFTS, Joan Lonolney opens the door for you to a boutique all of your own. Clear instructions and simple diagrams, together with dozens of live drawings and photographs make it easy to follow the designs which are shown. The book is in four sections, and deals with clothes, including knitting and crochet, with patchwork and applique, leather and fur, both real and fake, and with delightful jewelry made from everything from paper to real silver. Confronted by the dazzling variety of boutique clothes, toys, gifts, colours, textures and and crafts found in this book, your only problem might lie in deciding what to make first!

For those whose creative urge takes them into the kitchen, Christina Foyle's PARTY BOOK is an excellent book to have on hand. In this book Mrs. Foyle has gathered together a wealth of party recipes which will provide ideas for a lifetime of lively parties. Consideration has been given to the fact that many busy housewives use ready-prepared foods. Many of the recipes can be prepared in minutes and yet are wonderfully attractive too look at and equally exciting to eat. Mouth-watering illustrations give visual guidance in the preparation of many dishes. With this book as an aid anyone can plan a party large or small and still have time to enjoy it!

Featured In Art In America

The Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art has recently been featured in the July/August issue of Art In America, a national art journal.

The publication's editor, Elizabeth C. Baker, toured the Southeastern United States to assess the status of its visual arts, and featured in her article, entitled

Writers To Meet Tuesday

The first meeting of the Greenville Writers Club for the month of September will take place Tuesday, at 8 p.m. in the office of "New East" Magazine, Wilcar Executive Center, 223 W. 10th Street.

Persons attending are asked to use the front door entrance, and to use the parking lot either in the front or the rear of the building.

"Southern Exposure", were the cities of Atlanta, Miami, New Orleans, and Winston-Salem.

Miss Baker said, "Winston-Salem harbors a unique, regional institution, the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art, which is engaged in searching out and exhibiting worthy artists throughout the whole Southeast region... Despite the difficulty of getting a grip on the Southeast as a whole, one institution is trying to do it. The Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art (SECCA) at Winston-Salem, has been in existence since 1956. The center has the only broad, non-local exhibiting program in the South. While there are a number of juried regional shows, all of which draw from the entire region, SECCA actually goes out and hunts artists down. There is no question that the Southeast despite many worthy local museums, needs this kind of broad intercommunication and it can be hoped that SECCA and its enterprising director (Ted Potter) in their new quarters will be able to furnish it."

Francis Speight Being Honored

The Associated Artists of Winston-Salem will launch their 1976-77 season with a reception honoring Francis Speight, Tar Heel artist, at the Hanes Community Center Tuesday, Sept. 14, beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Ms. Audrey Nicholson, president of Associated Artists, announced that the program would include an exhibit of Speight's work and the showing of a special film, "Eye of the Artist," produced by the North Carolina Art Society and portraying Speight's career as an artist and teacher.

Speight retired earlier this year as artist-in-residence at East Carolina University. He still teaches during the summer at Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, Philadelphia, Pa., where he studied for five years and remained as a member of the arts faculty from 1925 until 1961.

Speight has received numerous awards and prizes for his paintings, including the medal for achievement in art given him by the state of North Carolina in 1964. He is a member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters.

His work, particularly his landscapes, is shown at many museums across the country, including the Metropolitan Museum, New York; the Toronto Art Gallery, Toronto, Canada; the North Carolina Museum of Art, Raleigh; the Pennsylvania Museum of Art, Philadelphia; The Boston Museum, The Duke University Museum, and the Greenville (N.C.) Art Center.

Speight grew up in Bertie County, near Windsor. He now makes his home at Greenville.

Ms. Nicholson said the program would be open to the public without charge. It will be in the Hanes Center auditorium. Speight's paintings will be shown in the center gallery.

Arts Council Meeting On September 15

Dr. Charles Moore, interim chairman of the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, announces the first fall meeting of the newly formed council. The meeting will be at 8 p.m. Wednesday, September 15, in the Fletcher Music Building on the East Carolina University campus. (Exact room location will be posted in the lobby of the building on the night of the meeting).

Among topics to be discussed are adopting the charter and by-laws, other organizational matters, and grant and aid proposals.

'AD ASTRA' . . . Workmen put the finishing touches on a sculpture titled "Ad Astra" in front of the Smithsonian Institution's Air and Space Museum recently. The work, by Richard Lipold, of New York, soars to a height of about 100 feet, symbolizing the conquest of space. It is a three-planed shaft, only five feet across at the base and ending in a pointed tip which supports a triple star cluster near the apex. (AP Wirephoto)

Good Season For 'The Lost Colony'

MANTEO—When Paul Green's first and longest-running symphonic drama, "The Lost Colony" ended its 36th production season August 28, the story of Sir Walter Raleigh's ill-fated English colonists had run longer than "South Pacific" or "Mame".

Despite a season darkened by six rainouts, including a serious threat from Hurricane Belle, "The Lost Colony", which has played for 1,932 performances, was attended by a paid audience, of 66,854 persons this summer, according to the chairman of the board of the Roanoke Island Historical Association (RIHA), Thomas J. Pearsall.

"The Lost Colony" employs a cast and crew of more than 170 persons each season, and retains a full-time administrative staff of nine persons in Manteo on a year-round basis.

The RIHA will hold its annual meeting this year in Raleigh on Nov. 30, during North Carolina Culture Week, according to Pearsall.

"The Lost Colony" 1977 production season will open next June 17 and close Aug. 27, Pearsall said.

Band Boosters To Meet

The Greenville City Band Boosters will hold their first meeting of the 1976-77 school year on Tuesday, September 14th.

The organization is beginning its second year as a city-wide supporter of the instrumental music program in Greenville. Last year the Band Boosters conducted several highly successful fund raising campaigns which made possible the purchase of equipment and materials, and supported special social and educational events for the band members and a one week summer band camp at Chowan College.

All returning members and those with an interest in the Band program in the City Schools are urged to attend. The meeting will begin at 8:00 p.m. in the Band Room of Rose High School.

The first weather bulletins were issued by the U.S. government, Nov. 1, 1870

CHRISTMAS STAMPS—Designs of the two 1976 Christmas stamps are based upon an 1855 Nathaniel Currier print and a madonna and child painting executed two hundred years ago. The Currier lithograph is titled: "Winter Pastime." John Singleton Copley's "Nativity" was painted in 1776. (AP Wirephoto)

Ethnic Gifts

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ethnic gifts are expected to be big sellers this coming Christmas, according to retail store buyers at the 83rd California gift show in Los Angeles.

Home Furnishings Daily, a trade newspaper, said buyers were going for ethnic motifs, but not necessarily authentic work from groups such as American Indians, African tribesmen and Far Eastern craftsmen. The African look is bigger on the East Coast, the paper said.

WASPs Of WWII: America's Forgotten Heroines

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
United Press International

They are the forgotten heroines of World War II, some 1,000 spunky young women who flew warplanes on thankless but dangerous missions at home so the men could go to battle on the enemy's turf.

In their baggy GI-issue overalls which they dubbed their "zoot suits" and struggling with 30-pound parachutes, they logged 60 million miles, ferrying fighters and bombers to points of embarkation, towing targets for combat pilots and anti-aircraft batteries to shoot at, flight testing new aircraft or training other pilots in instrument navigation.

When one was killed, as 38 of them were, they sometimes had to pass the hat for money to send the body home for burial.

A total of 1,074 female flyers earned their wings as WASPs (Women's Air Force Service Pilots) between 1942 and late 1944 at bases in Houston and Sweetwater, Texas. It was an experimental program established by Gen. H.H. "Hap" Arnold, then commanding general of the Army Air Force, and under the direction of Jacqueline Cochran, the famed aviatrix.

Today, many of them are grandmothers, but they are still fighting for a status denied them since 1944 when male civilian pilots helped defeat a bill before Congress which would have made them military officers.

"Many of these guys (civilian pilots) were facing the draft and they didn't want to wind up in the walking army because we were filling the pilot jobs," explained Bee Falk Haydu of Newton N.J., president of an organization of ex-WASPs called the Order of Fifinella, named for the little lady gremlin with flying goggles which Walt Disney designed as the WASP emblem during World War II.

And nothing makes a WASP madder than for the Air Force to intimate that it's new undergraduate pilot training program for females is a "first."

The WASPs, though under civil service at the time, were trained by the Army Air Force, issued uniforms, ate in the mess halls and were accorded most of the military privileges of the second lieutenants they expected to be.

"We didn't compel a salute, but we returned it when we got one," recalls Mrs. Haydu, who trained at the old Avenger Field at Sweetwater.

They called themselves the "guinea pigs." They were housed in barracks, marched to meals, did calisthenics, and were hauled to classes in Army trucks with wooden seats they called "cattle trucks."

"The flight training, ground school, physical education, Morse code, radio techniques, military drill and courtesies, barracks inspection and every other aspect of military training was the same as that given to the male cadets," said Mrs. Haydu, who at 56 today helps her husband run a hot dog packing business in Neptune City, N.J. while continuing to fly.

The WASPs would go on to fly the hot pursuit planes such as the P-51, P-40, P-47, P-38 and P-39 on domestic missions, or the twin-engine bombers such as the B-26 and B-25. Two were checked out in the Superfortress B-29. Another flew the jet fighter which was just coming onto the scene.

Some of the names would go down in aviation history. Jacqueline Cochran. Nancy H. Love. Dora Dougherty Strother. Barbara Erickson. Cornelia Fort.

Cornelia Fort, 24, of Nashville, Tenn. She was the first of the 38 women to die while flying for American military forces. An eyewitness to the Japanese invasion of Pearl Harbor from the cockpit of a tiny Cub hovering over Hickam Field, she later joined the Women's Auxiliary Ferrying Squadron, a forerunner to the WASP program.

Before she was killed in a bomber crash in Texas, Miss Fort wrote in a woman's magazine about the experiences of the girl pilots:

"We get up in the cold dark in order to get to the airport by daylight. We wear heavy cumbersome flying clothes and a 30-pound parachute. You are either cold or hot. If you are female your lipstick wears off and your hair gets straighter and straighter. You look forward all afternoon to the bath you will have and the steak. Well, we get the bath but seldom the steak. Sometimes we are too tired to eat and fall wearily into bed."

In the reviewing stand at Avenger Field in March, 1944, Gen. Arnold presented the Air Medal to a pretty brunette named Barbara Erickson for her skills as a ferry pilot and administrator.

Today Mrs. Barbara Erickson London is still flying as a partner in a California aviation firm. Her oldest daughter, Terry, recently became the first woman pilot for Western Airlines as second officer on a Boeing 737.

Bee Haydu in 1943 used her earnings from a secretarial job to learn to fly, traveling on weekends between East Orange, N.J., and Martins Creek, Pa. She resents the suggestions by some that the WASPs were rich girls off on a lark.

"There was nothing glamorous about ferrying airplanes around from place to place, scrounging a place to sleep at night and then getting up early the next morning to go again," she said. "It's more akin to driving a truck."

The WASPs were paid $175 a month during training, $250 a month after graduation. From that they had to pay room and board and buy their uniforms.

Though they expected to be put on military status eventually, they received no benefits, such as insurance or hospitalization, and did not qualify for educational or housing assistance under the GI bill. The 38 who were killed got no consideration.

"In some cases we had to take up donations to get the body sent home," Mrs. Haydu recalls.

Mostly for the recognition they feel they are due, the ex-WASPs are still lobbying Congress to pass a bill providing that the time they spent attached to the Army Air Force "be considered active duty for the purposes of all laws administered by the Veterans Administration."

The House rejected a bill similar to one still pending in a Senate committee which specifies "no benefits shall be paid to any person for any period prior to the date of enactment of this act."

Since the cutoff date for most World War II veterans benefits has long since passed, the primary beneficiaries would be women who eventually received Air Force commissions. Their WASP time could be counted toward retirement.

It would qualify the ex-WASPs for VA mortgage loans. But despite active support in Washington from retired Col. William Bruce Arnold, son of the general who organized the WASPs, the bill seems destined to die in Sen. Vance Hartke's Veterans Affairs Committee.

The Indiana senator, replying to frequent queries from Mrs. Haydu, cites strong opposition from the Veterans Administration.

A spokesman for the Veterans Affairs Committee told UPI if military benefits were extended to the WASPs then the Merchant Marine and other civilian employees during wartime, such as military telephone operators, would ask, "Why not us, too?"

And a Veterans Administration spokesman said, "Our legislation has been limited to those who acquired veterans status through military service."

"The WASPs were employees under contract mainly to ferry aircraft and their service was quite valuable. But their service was in the same status as the Merchant Marines, which had many hazardous runs, and there were many other civilians who engaged in contract for employment pursuits."

The WASPs, he added, "were not subject to military discipline or orders, nor were they limited to military pay. As a result, they were never considered components of the armed forces.

"To do so now would open the door. If military status were given to this group only, it would be discriminatory to all other groups."

The VA spokesman said he had never heard the figure of 38 killed in service — or any other figure — but added there were "industrial accidents all the time."

"There is more at stake here than a handful of benefits for a few of the WASPs," says Ms. Betty Cross, another officer of the Order of Fifinella. "We are going unrecognized."

Mainly it's the recognition they want. "When you talk about a WASP today, they think you mean a white Anglo-Saxon protestant," Mrs. Haydu said.

The gals will try to muster more support when members of the Order of Fifinella gather Oct. 22-24 for a reunion in Hot Springs, Ark. In the face of the opposition from the VA, they are pressing for a hearing before the Hartke committee takes a vote.

The women say they expected at the time to be militarized and wanted to be militarized, and that Gen. Arnold and the Air Force wanted them to be militarized.

Early in 1944, when the passage of a bill to militarize the WASPs seemed imminent, it was decided to send the women to the Army Air Force Tactical School at Orlando, Fla. for a three-week course to help prepare them to become Army officers.

But this program was dropped when the bill sponsored by Congressman John Costello of California was defeated and the decision was made to scrap WASP training altogether.

In a speech to the last class of WASPs, before the program was disbanded in December, 1944, Gen. Arnold said, "You and more than 900 of your sisters have shown that you can fly wingtip to wingtip with your brothers. If ever there was a doubt in anyone's mind that women can become skillful pilots, the WASPs have dispelled that doubt." Jacqueline Cochran, who was director of the program from its inception to deactivation, told that same class: "What the WASPs have done is without precedent in the history of the world."

Help Is Needed

Volunteer Greenville is announcing the following volunteer opportunities:

Girl Scout Assistants and Girl Scout Leaders are needed to coordinate Girl Scout Program activities. It would also include sharing the girls' interest, friendship, and being able to spend time on a regular basis with the group of girls.

Volunteer Bus Driver is needed by the Easter Seal Society to drive a van for the Easter Seal's Daily Transportation Program.

Boy's Club has a need for special interest instructors in the areas of music, art, and drama. Also program aids for the gamesroom, arts and crafts, sports, and group clubs.

Den Mothers are needed by the Boy Scouts. It would involve meeting with a group of 8, 9, 10 year olds one afternoon a week to help them to become a Cub Scout.

Further information on these and other volunteer opportunities may be obtained by calling Volunteer Greenville at 752-4137 (Extension 255) or by visiting the office at 1710 West Third Street.

Postman Has A Friend On Route

MIDLOTHIAN, Va. (AP) — Postman Ralph Branch has unauthorized company each day as he makes his deliveries on a 10-mile route.

His buddy is a mixed-breed dog named Bullet who travels beside and in front of the mail truck as Branch delivers the mail.

"Every day," said Branch, "Bullet picks me up on Fitzhugh Avenue and follows me all day from the time I start until the time I stop — including lunch."

At the end of the route, Bullet sits and watches as Branch drives away.

Branch said the dog belonged to an area resident.

Voight, North Carolina Surprise 18th-Ranked Florida By 24-21

By PAT LEISNER
Associated Press Writer

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Tailback Mike Voight plunged three yards for a touchdown in the middle of the fourth period to give the North Carolina Tar Heels a hard-fought 24-21 victory over the 18th-ranked Florida Gators in college football Saturday night.

Florida threatened from the North Carolina three-yard line when time ran out in their first game of the year.

Voight, the Atlantic Coast

Conference's 1975 player-of-the-year, gained 142 yards on 35 carries to pace the Tar Heels to their second straight victory of the season. They beat 20th-ranked Miami of Ohio last week, 14-10.

After a scoreless first quarter, placekicker Tom Biddle put the Tar Heels on the board first with a 30-yard field goal.

North Carolina led until the Gators scored a second touchdown in the third quarter with 31 seconds remaining. That gave the Gators a brief 21-17 lead.

Voight's touchdown was set up by a fourth-down gamble when quarterback Bernie Menapace passed 12 yards to fullback Billy Johnson, who caught the ball on the ground at the six-yard line.

Menapace passed and ran for two touchdowns, connecting with tight end Brooks Williams on a 12-yard play in the second period, then raced eight yards on a keeper in the next quarter. Florida quarterback Jimmy Fisher ran for one touchdown and passed for another to keep the Gators in the game.

A 38-yard pass interference call put the ball on the Gators' seven and gave Biddle his chance at the field goal for the 3-0 Tar Heel lead in the second. He had missed an earlier 37-yard attempt.

Later, Menapace capped a short 45-yard drive with a 12-yard pass to Williams for a touchdown and a 10-0 lead.

Duke Upsets Tennessee

By MATT YANCEY
Associated Press Writer

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Sophomore quarterback Mike Dunn scored two touchdowns and tackle Hank Russell sparked Duke defense to give the Blue Devils a 21-18 football victory over Tennessee Saturday night.

Dunn, a second-team freshman All-American last year, scored twice on one-yard plunges in the second quarter, following drives of 48 and 64 yards. Vince Fusco kicked all three extra points for the Blue Devils.

Duke's signal caller completed four of nine passes for 46 yards and ran for 36.

Russell, a senior who played both offense and defense last season, dumped Tennessee quarterback Randy Wallace on two key plays, the first a two-point conversion attempt in the second quarter and the second for a 10-yard loss that halted a third-quarter drive 2 with the Vols down 21-12.

Early in the fourth quarter, Wallace pitched to tailback Kelsey Finch for an eight-yard touchdown to bring the Vols within three points. Jim Gaylor missed his second conversion attempt.

A fired-up Vol defense then halted Duke and Tennessee again took over on their 39 with 10 minutes left. The Vols then drove to Duke's 11 in 10 plays, helped by a 15-yard penalty against the Blue Devils.

Gaylor went back for a fake field goal attempt as quarterback Joe Hough passed to Frank Foxx, stopped three yards short of a first down to halt the drive.

The Blue Devils, avenging a 21-17 loss to the Vols three years ago, were hit for two critical 15-yard penalties in the second half. But Tennessee also suffered two critical penalties early in the game.

Tennessee opened the scoring when Foxx plunged over from the 2 in the first quarter, climaxing an 80-yard drive.

It appeared the Vols would have a chance to score again when Stanley Morgan returned a punt 39 yards deep into Duke territory. However, the Vols were penalized for clipping, putting the ball back on their own 17 and they had to punt four plays late.

Also scoring touchdowns were Wallace on a one-yard run in the second quarter and Duke tailback Art Gore on a 24-yard run in the third quarter.

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP)—William and Mary's Indians gave Virginia Military a quick touchdown on a first-play fumble Saturday, then roared back on the running of Jim Kruis and the passing of Tom Rozantz for a 34-20 Southern Conference football victory over the Keydets.

Kruis, a 188-pound junior tailback, ran 30 times for 151 yards and two touchdowns and Rozantz hit six of 14 passes for 118 yards and a third score.

Conley Takes 28-18 Victory

MOREHEAD CITY — Quarterback Jeff McDaniel ran for three touchdowns and threw for a fourth to lead the D.H. Conley Vikings to a 28-18 victory over West Carteret Saturday night.

McDaniel connected with Tim McClanahan for a ten-yard scoring strike after setting up the touchdown with a 45-yard completion to Charles Nobles. They extended their lead when McDaniel scored the first of his three touchdowns on a two-yard run.

West Carteret scored after a blocked punt at Conley's 15. Three plays later, Johnny Joyce ran eight yards for the game's opening score. Joyce scored again following a turnover. On the next play Joyce hooked up with Arthur Becton on a 59-yard pass and run play.

The two teams traded safeties.

Conley's next skirmish is with Havelock on the road.

Justice Will Speak At Club

Charlie "Choo Choo" Justice, former All America triple-threat tailback for the University of North Carolina Tar Heels, will be the featured speaker at the weekly meeting of the Greenville Sports Club Tuesday at 12:00 at the Ramada Inn.

Dean Smith, UNC basketball coach and coach of the winning USA Olympic team, will be featured one week from Tuesday.

Justice will be introduced by local insurance man W. M. "Booger" Scales, a civic leader who was one of the key men in the fund drive to build Ficklen Stadium. The field house at East Carolina University is named after Scales.

The Greenville Sports Club meets weekly during football and basketball seasons for a dutch lunch. Speakers will include ECU coaches and other coaches and sports personalities from around the state. NBC Sportscaster Billy Packer is among the group scheduled. Assistant Recreation Director Charles Vincent is program chairman.

"We have almost attained our goal in membership," says Club President Jack Edwards. "We are limited because of the dining facilities, but we do have room for 20 more members." Present membership is 130.

Anyone interested in joining should contact Secretary-Treasurer Phil Dixon at 758-3116 or send a check for $25 annual dues (for 27 meetings) to Greenville Sports Club, Box 545, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

The H & H Trucking Company, Inc., got things moving along early last night for the East Carolina Pirates, and by the time the dust had settled in their wake, the Bucs had crushed Southern Mississippi, 48-0.

Before a record opening night crowd of 17,400, the Bucs pulled off what must be one of the shockers of the early season. Southern was as much as an 11-point favorite going into the game, but it was only minutes before the Bucs showed that the experts were wrong.

The H & H boys, Willie Hawkins and Eddie Hicks, each pushed over 100 yards for the game, and each scored on long runs off Mike Weaver's option flicks. Hawkins scored once on a 79-yard dash down the sidelines with one option, while Hicks took one right through the middle for 65, and scored another on a 14-yard option play.

The Hawk raced for 128 yards, while Hicks finished with 133.

Weaver, who led the wishbone offense with precision, hit Terry Gallaher for a 44-yard touchdown pass, and successfully got the Pirates on the scoreboard every time he quarterbacked the Bucs.

Gerald Hall raced 70 yards for a score off a punt return, while Jimmy Southerland passed three yards to Eric Walker for the other.

Pete Conaty rounded out the scoring with a perfect six-for-six PAT kicking mark, and he added two 25 yard field goals for 12 points.

The Buc defense did a superb job, holding the Golden Eagles highly-touted rushing attack to only 61 yards in 44 tries. The Eagles hit 11 of 18 passes for 112 yards, and threatened only on a couple of occasions, each time being thrown back with nothing.

The Bucs took their first possession down the field but had to settle for a field goal and a 3-0 lead. From the Buc 13, the Pirates drove down with Raymond Jones doing a lot of the work, including one 15-yarder that pushed the ball past mid-field. Weaver added a 19-yarder that put the ball on the 14, but the drive stalled there, and Conaty's toe provided the punch with 8:35 left.

It didn't talk long for the first touchdown after the Bucs got it back on a punt. Taking over on the 18, they moved in three yards on a Jones dive up the middle. Then, Weaver took the ball around the right end, optioned it back to Hawkins, who raced down the sidelines, leaving the Eagles far behind on a 79-yard touchdown run. Conaty's kick upped the lead to 10-0 with 5:28 showing.

The Bucs weren't through with their scoring in the period, however, getting another after just four plays.

Hall went back after the Bucs defense held following the kickoff and took the Southern Mississippi punt at his own 30. After a few key blocks opened the holes, Hall was off to the races, streaking 70 yards to pay dirt and a 17-0 lead with 3:32 left.

Late in the period, the Bucs got it back on their own 45 after Zack Valentine recovered a fumble. Vince Kolanko raced 13 yards on the first play to the Southern 42, and the Bucs moved it from there.

With Weaver working the option to perfection, the Bucs steadily moved it down field, but again the drive stalled, this time at the eight, and Conaty again kicked a 25-yarder with 10:42 left in the half, making it 20-0.

After sitting out the next series, Weaver came back the next time to push in another score. From the 24 of the Bucs, he pitched out to Hicks for runs of 11 and 21 yards, then went to Hawkins for nine. He kept for two more plays, netting 14 yards, and the Hawk added seven more to the 14. Hicks took another pitch out from there for the score, raising it to 27-0 with just 39 seconds left.

Southern crossed midfield only once in the half, to the Buc 48, but were promptly hurled back.

After stopping Southern in four plays after the second half kickoff, the Bucs used just four plays to get back into the end zone. From their 46, the Bucs pushed to the Southern 44 in three tries, and from there Weaver hit Gallaher on the fly pattern and an easy score. That ran it to 34-0 with 11:20 left in the quarter.

After another series, the Bucs did it again — and once again in just four plays. From their 10, they got 16 from Hicks, five from Kolanko and four from Tom Daub to the 35. Hicks, facing an eight-man line, burst right through from there, and there was no one to stop him after that as he waltzed 65 yards to the end zone and a 41-0 lead with 7:51 to play in the third period.

The final touchdown came in the last period after John Morris broke through to block and recover a Southern punt at the seven. Two plays netting nothing, but a penalty put the ball on the three. Southerland hit Walker in the end zone from there to put the icing on the cake, 48-0 with 9:24 left.

Southern did manage to threaten a couple of times in the late stages of the game, moving to the 19 before Valentine picked off a pass two plays into the final period. The only other threat came on the final Southern series after the Eagles recovered a fumble at the 48, and took it to the 11 before three straight losses cost them the ball on downs.

Now, it's on to Raleigh next week for the game with arch-rival N.C. State, a surprisingly 0-2 at this stage of the season. That comes Saturday night in State's Carter Stadium.

Wake Forest Holds Off State For 20-18 Win

By DALLAS LEE

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C.

(AP) — Freshman running back James McDougald sparked a slumbering Wake Forest offense with a two-yard, fourth period touchdown and long gainers Saturday night as the Demon Deacons whipped North Carolina State, 20-18, in an Atlantic Coast conference football game.

McDougald's two-yard scoring run followed several second half dashes which brought the home field crowd of 28,900 to its feet repeatedly.

N. C. State quarterback Johnny Evans repeatedly passed and ran the Wolfpack into easy reach of the Deacon goal line but was frustrated by penalties and a stubborn Wake Forest defense led by linebacker Don Cervi.

Evans rallied the Wolfpack with the help of two pass interference calls and scored from one yard out with 1:54 remaining to come within two points of the Deacons.

But McDougald and fullback Stan Rolark kept the Deacons alive after kickoff with several running plays as the clock ran out.

N. C. State struck first with Jay Sherrill's 25-yard, second quarter field goal.

But Wake Forest answered five minutes later with a 25-yard field goal by Bob Hely.

Several plays after Wake Forest recovered a Wolfpack fumble in the second quarter, Deacon tailback John Zegliniski started left with a pitchout, stopped and rifled a left-handed pass to flanker Solomon Everett at the goal line for a touchdown and the Deacons led 10-3 at halftime.

Hely booted a 20-yard field goal for Wake Forest in the third period and Evans scored on a one-yard run for the Wolfpack in the fourth.

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP)—Ciro Piccirillo's 23-yard field goal with in the final 54 seconds broke a 7-7 tie and gave the Clemson Tigers a 10-7 victory over The Citadel Bulldogs in a non-conference college football game Saturday.

The winning field goal was set up on a pass interception by Clemson's Randy Scott at The Citadel's 44-yard line with 4:14 left in the game.

It took the Tigers 11 plays to make it to the seven-yard line before Piccirillo kicked his game-winning field goal.

The Citadel rallied and drove to the Clemson 19 before Scott intercepted his second pass with seven seconds remaining to sew up the Tiger victory in the season opener for both teams.

A 20-yard field goal attempt by Piccirillo late in the third quarter with the score tied at 7-7 was blocked by The Citadel's Kevin White. The attempt came after the Tigers had driven to

Royals Get 8-6 Victory

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Amos Otis capped a five-run ninth inning with a three-run homer to rally the Kansas City Royals to an 8-6 victory over the Minnesota Twins in a nationally televised game Saturday.

Kansas City's victory snapped the Twins' six-game winning streak and gave the hard-pressed Royals only their third victory in the last 13 games.

The Royals, frontrunners in the American League West, now lead Oakland by 5½ games. The A's met Texas Saturday night.

The Twins had taken a 6-3 lead in the eighth before the Royals tagged Twins reliever Bill Campbell for five hits, including Otis' game-winning blast, his 17th homer of the year.

Al Cowens led off the ninth with a single and, with one out, went to third base on Frank White's single. Successive singles by pinch-hitter Jamie Quirk and Jim Wohlford narrowed the gap to 6-5 before Otis' clutch shot to deep left field.

Reliever Mark Littell picked up his eighth victory in 11 decisions. Campbell, 15-5, took the loss for Minnesota.

Reds Top Giants, 8-5

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Dave Concepcion's three-run double in the eighth inning wiped out a San Francisco Giants lead and carried the Cincinnati Reds to an 8-5 victory Saturday.

With two out in the eighth and down 5-4, Bill Plummer and pinch-hitter Joel Youngblood singled and Pete Rose walked, loading the bases. Concepcion then delivered his game-winning blow off Gary LaVelle, 8-6. Tony Perez hit his 17th homer in the ninth for the Reds' final run.

Terps Bury Richmond

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Mark Manges threw touchdown passes of 45 and 31 yards, rallying Maryland to a 31-7 victory over Richmond after the underdog Spiders scored first in Saturday's football opener for the 12th-ranked Terps.

The 31-yarder to wingback Chuck White midway through the third period gave Maryland a 21-7 lead and Mike Sochko added a 36-yard field goal four minutes later following a fumble recovery by defensive guard Ernie Sall.

Manges, who completed seven of 11 passes for 146 yards, pulled the Terps into a 7-7 tie with his 45-yard TD toss to wingback Dean Richards less than two minutes after a three-yard run by fullback Milton Ruffin that put Richmond ahead in the second quarter.

A 34-yard pass from Manges to White set up a one-yard TD run by fullback Tim Wilson 18 seconds before the half ended and tailback Alvin Maddox scored from the nine in the fourth period.

Steve Atkins, Maryland's powerful sophomore tailback, ran for a career high of 169 yards on 20 carries, and Richmond tailback Ed Kreilis gained 130 yards on 27 attempts.

The Spiders, who lost their season opener last week, stopped Maryland's first scoring drive on a pass interception in the end zone by Jeff Nixon. Johnnie Jones missed field goal attempts for Richmond of 40 yards of more in each of the first three quarters.

Rose High School scored twice in less than two minutes in the third period Friday night and captured a 13-0 victory over the winless New Bern Bears.

The win was the first in two starts for the Rampants, now 1-1. New Bern is 0-2-1.

The Rampants got their first touchdown after Derek Brewington recovered a fumble near midfield, and was face-masked on the tackle. A long pass from Jeff Aldridge to Cliff Randolph put the ball on the three plays later, and MacDonald Washington cracked over from there.

Two plays after the kickoff, David Northrup picked off a Bear pass and returned it to the seven yard line and it took only two more plays for Robert Williams to knife over from the three.

Brewington added a PAT kick after the first score.

Rose had several other opportunities as the game wore on, but never could get in again. The game ended with Rose on the five.

The Bears also had a few chances, but after the very early minutes, the Rampant defense almost completely stifled them. After eight rushing plays, the Bears had picked up 45 yards, well over five per play. But by the time they had run 26 more (a total of 34 for the game) they had a net of just four yards rushing. In those 26 plays, Rose held them to minus 41 yards on the ground. The Bears hit just three of 16 passes for 44 yards.

Northrup led the Rampant defensive attack, with help from reserve Raymond Wooten, who threw the Bears for several losses.

Curtis Little, the sophomore fullback who got the lone score in last week's loss to Goldsboro, was the workhorse during the first half for Rose, but suffered possible knee injuries following a Bear interception late in the half, and his status for the rest of the season is questionable.

The first half was lackluster, although each team did manage to get the ball into the others' territory several times.

New Bern crossed the midfield stripe twice, on its first two possessions. They moved from their own 21 to the Rose 42 before being forced to punt. Then, on their next series, then went from the Rose 41 to the 20 before three straight losses pushed them back to the 38. That second drive was set up when Robbie Morris recovered one of two lost fumbles by the Rampants, who mishandled the ball seven times in all.

Rose, meanwhile, had three opportunities in Bear land but could make none pay off. They moved from the Rampant 20 to the Bear 48 on their first series, which ended on the fumble at the 41.

The next time came in the second period, when Rose moved from its 32 to the Bear 42 following a punt. But after a first down there, a penalty pushed it back to the 47, and the Rampants got no yardage in three attempts and kicked it away.

Late in the half, Rose got the ball at the Bear 46 after a punt, but two plays later it was intercepted. Little was injured on the play, whittled dead with just nine seconds left on the clock.

New Bern drove from its own 41 to the Rose 32, with Jim Powers hitting Kenneth Hattley for 27 yards on a pass for the big play. But Brewington recovered a fumble at the 40 and returned it to the 48 of the Bears before being stopped. The Bears got 15 yards tacked on that for face-masking, giving Rose the ball on the Bear 37.

Two plays netted only a yard, but on third down, Aldridge lofted the ball to Randolph, who wrestled the ball from a Bear defender at the three.

Washington cut over right tackle on the next play for the final three yards and the first score of the game. Brewington's kick made it 7-0 with 5:54 left in the period.

Two plays after the kickoff, Powers went back to pass from his 26, and Northrup stepped into the ball's flight at the 31, racing to the seven before being tumbled out of bounds.

Williams hit for four to the three, then went wide to the left to slant into the end zone for the remaining six points of the night. That came with 4:13 to go in the quarter.

Both teams had chances again after that, although New Bern's was only fragmentary. The Bears got the ball at midfield after Rose fumbled a punt, but after pushing to the 45, the defense Rose up to throw the Bears for a six yard loss before forcing another kick.

Rose moved the ball from the Bear 46 after a punt to the Bear 27 when a fourth down play failed when Washington slipped as he was handed the ball.

A 51-yard aerial from Aldridge to Mark Conway set up another threat as that moved the ball from the Rampant 22 to the Bear 27. Both nothing could be gained from there, and a 51-yard field goal attempt (following a couple of penalties against Rose) was just wide. Rose at first faked the kick, with Washington nearly making it to the end zone, but the first penalty nullified that.

The last two threats came following a Bear penalty that moved it to the New Bern 47, but an interception killed that drive. The last came when Rose took over on an interception on its own 33, and drove to the five just as time ran out. Reserve quarterback Scott Brady had a 36-yard run in that series.

The Rampants return to the road this Friday, facing another tough opponent from the Division II ranks, Kinston, one of the favorites in that conference's race this year.

Huskies Blast Virginia, 38-17

SEATTLE (AP) — Tailback Ronnie Rowland rushed for 183 yards and two touchdowns and fullback Robin Earl ran for 108 yards and two more TDs to lead Washington to a 38-17 victory over Virginia Saturday in an intercollegiate college football season opener for both teams.

The victory spoiled the head coaching debut of the Cavaliers' Dick Bestwick, who took over the ailing Virginia program from the departed Sonny Randle.

The 6-foot-5, 250-pound Earl broke a 17-17 tie early in the final period with his nine-yard touchdown run that put Washington ahead 24-17.

Rowland, a 6-2, 195-pound junior, who rushed for more than 1,000 yards last year at San Jose City College, scored his second touchdown less than four minutes later on an 18-yard run for a 31-17 Husky lead. Freshman Joe Steele's 45-yard TD gallop with 6:24 left in the game capped Washington's 21-point fourth-quarter spurge.

Virginia, which has had only one winning season in its last 23, led twice briefly. Andy Hitt's seven-yard scoring pass to Billy Copeland gave Virginia a 7-3 first-period lead. But Earl's first touchdown on a one-yard run on the first play of the second quarter put the Huskies back on top 10-7.

Virginia led again 14-0 on David Sloan's one-yard run three minutes later. But Rowland's five-yard TD run gave Washington a 17-14 halftime lead. Freshman Brian Moreland's 41-yard field goal gave the Huskies a 3-0 lead early in the first period.

Dorsett, Defense Doom The Irish

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Ninth-ranked Pittsburgh turned a pair of interceptions into quick second-period touchdowns and Tony Dorsett tormented Notre Dame again by rushing for 181 yards as the Panthers rolled to a 31-10 victory Saturday, handing the Irish their first opening-game loss in 13 years.

Pitt quarterback Robert Haygood scored twice on one-yard dives just two minutes, 11 seconds apart early in the second quarter after Notre Dame's Rick Slager had passes intercepted by LeRoy Felder and Jeff Delaney in Irish territory.

Meanwhile, a swarming Pitt defense led by tackle Randy Holloway stiffened after Notre Dame stormed 86 yards on 11 plays following the opening kickoff.

Slager, who completed all three passes on the drive for 52 yards, threw 25 yards to tight end Ken MacAfee, giving Notre Dame a 7-0 lead with less than five minutes gone.

However, Dorsett, who stunned Notre Dame with a record 209 yards as a freshman in 1973 and eclipsed that with 303 a year ago, quickly swung the momentum to Pitt.

On the Panthers' first play from scrimmage, he burst through the right side for a 61-yard gallop to the Irish 23. Five plays later, he tied the score 7-7 with a five-yard dash around right end.

In four games against Notre Dame, Dorsett has rushed for a record 754 yards on 96 carries. He rushed 22 times Saturday.

Vol Star Arrested

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Bernard King, University of Tennessee basketball star, was arrested Saturday for the second time this year.

Police said King was arrested in a parking lot and charged with possession of marijuana. He was released on $60 bail pending a city court hearing Sept. 28.

Connors, Borg Win

Evert Tops On Clay

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Chris Evert solidified her position on the throne of women's tennis Saturday by crushing Evonne Goolagong 6-3, 6-0 in the final of the U.S. Open Championships.

Earlier, Jimmy Connors regained his image as a court killer and Sweden's Bjorn Borg drained the last bit of fire out of temperamental Ilie Nastase to gain the final round in the men's division.

The aggressive American from Belleville, Ill., and the methodical 20-year-old from Stockholm will meet at the West Side Tennis Club Sunday for the $30,000 first prize.

Miss Evert's surprisingly one-sided victory, following triumphs over her Australian opponent in the 1975 Open here as well Wimbledon, hoisted her onto the pinnacle once shared by such tennis greats as Helen Wills Moody, Maureen Connolly and Billie Jean King.

The women's match, last of a straight-set series in the center court, was played before another capacity crowd of 16,244. Unlike their previous meetings here and at Wimbledon, the Evert-Goolagong rerun was quick and merciful.

The graceful Australian, with rare natural talent and a rich repertoire of shots, was no match for the icy, computer-like stroke-making Miss Evert from Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

After a shaky start, in which she lost two straight games and won only one point, Chris rallied to take 10 games in a row in the 55-minute match. While she played well, Miss Goolagong practically donated her points with loose, effortless play.

She was uninspired. Connors played perhaps the finest tennis of his career in smashing Guillermo Vilas of Argentina 6-4, 6-2, 6-1. Borg was almost as devastating in wiping out Nastase 6-3, 6-3, 6-4.

"I will never play here again," said Nastase, who created a near riot a week ago with his boisterous and profane behavior on center court in a match against Hans-Jürgen Pohmann of West Germany. "These crowds are the worst I have ever seen. I can't play my game."

In his match against Borg, Nastase was so proper the crowd sat in disbelief. The single controversial gesture of the match came not from Nastase but from the normally stoical, undemonstrative Borg.

On the first point of the eight game in the second set, shortly after he had scored a second service break for a 4-3 lead, Borg hit a smash that struck close to chalk sideline.

The linesman, Pat Riley of North Little Rock, Ark., promptly yelled, "Out!"

Borg, without saying a word, strode to the other side of the court and examined the spot where he thought the ball hit. He asked the linesman to examine it.

The linesman insisted he had made the right call. The umpire, Denny Mackie of Eugene, Ore., questioned him. The umpire asked for an opinion from the linesman on the other end of the court. This one, John Colen of Tacoma, Wash., motioned that he thought the ball was good. It was an impasse.

"Will the linesman yield?" Mackie asked. Riley yielded, placing the decision squarely in the lap of the umpire. The umpire, contradicting the first linesman, then announced, "The ball was good—15 love."

Borg, who was serving, walked to the umpire's chair and suggested that the point be played over. The umpire agreed. Borg served and Nastase—obviously in a gesture of good sportsmanship—pushed the ball into the bottom of the net.

The crowd, which had wanted to boil him in oil because of his profanity last Friday, gave him polite applause.

The 5-foot-10, 150-pound Connors was devastating in his match against the big, athletically built Vilas, twice Grand Prix champion in the last five years.

Jumping, sliding and scooting around the court, he was like a prize fighter trying to bring his opponent to the canvas. Not once did he temporize. He never let the South American up for air.

There was no letup in his attack. He just kept hitting away with sledge hammer blows off of both wings. Vilas was constantly on the defensive.

Asked later why he was never able to get into the match, Vilas responded: "When a man hits a ball at you at 200 miles per hour, you can not hit it back at 400 miles per hour. He was too good."

Connors said he was fresh from two days of practice and felt that he was playing the same standard of tennis he exhibited in 1974 when he crushed the great Ken Rosewall of Australia 6-1, 6-1, 6-4 in the Wimbledon final and repeated the act here, 6-1, 6-0, 6-1.

"When I came off the court," Connors said, "I turned to someone and remarked, 'Shades of Rosewall.'"

"I was very serious, very eager before the match," Connors said. "I got afraid the eagerness might wear off. I didn't get rattled. I didn't say anything. I felt that I played one of my finest matches."

Someone asked him if he thought he could have beaten any player in the world. Connors replied tartly: "Yep."

He said he had played Borg seven or eight times in their careers and recalls losing to him only once.

"Everytime we play, we kill each other," he said. "Bjorn hits a high, bouncing shot and I am always jumping up in the air and hitting the ball above my shoulders. Against Vilas, I felt I couldn't miss a shot. I only wish I can play as well against Bjorn."

Connors chastised newsmen for repeatedly referring to the fact that he had not won a major championship since 1974, although he has gained the finals in a number of events.

"In 1974, I won 99 of 103 matches I played," he said. "I was the best player in the world except for one—the one who made me. I get teed off when you writers keep referring to what I did in 1975 and not mentioning 1974. I think anyone would have been proud to play as I have in the last two years."

Burns Leads World Open

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — George Burns engineered a two-stroke swing on a single hole against Ray Floyd and, with a two-under-par 69, retained a one-shot lead Saturday in the third round of the $200,000 World Open Golf Tournament.

Burns, who has led or shared the top spot all the way in this chase for a $40,000 first prize, had dropped back into a share of the lead with the on-rushing Masters champion going to the 16th hole at the 7,007 yard No. 2 course at the Pinehurst Country Club.

But Burns made birdie four and Floyd, playing in the same threesome, took a fat six.

Burns, a former Maryland football player just completing his rookie year, finished 54 holes with a 202 total, 11 under par. Floyd shot a third round 67 in the beautifully sunny, mild weather and was second at 203.

"I've had a chance to win the last two tournaments I played," Floyd said, "and each time I shot a bad last round. That's not like me. You look at my record over the last four years and I usually play good in the last round."

"I just put too much pressure on myself. I can do that. I figured if I won both tournaments I had a good chance at player of the year, the Vardon Trophy, maybe leading money-winner. A fellow could achieve a lifetime full of goals in one year."

Connors never lost a service. The closest he came was in the eighth game of the opening set when Vilas, after three deuces, worked his way up to a break point. But Connors hit a strong backhand and followed it to the net for a winning volley. He was never in trouble on service after that.

He broke service in both the opening games of the second and third sets, having one hot streak in the third set when he won nine consecutive points including a break of Vilas' service at love.

Borg, young, strong and quick, was equally impressive against Nastase, rated by his peers as the finest shotmaker in the sport.

"This is probably my last tournament of the year. Probably. I'm not going to put that kind of pressure on myself Sunday. I'm just gonna go out and play the best I can and if it's good enough to win, fine. The world's not going to end if I don't win a golf tournament. And that's the only attitude you can have."

It was another two strokes back to Tom Watson at 205, who shot a 69. Bob E. Smith, with a 70, and Hale Irwin, with a round of par 71, were at 206. The group at 208 included Tom Weiskopf, whose 66 was the best round of the day; Jerry McGee, 71, and Forrest Fezler, who had a 72 despite three double bogeys and two bogeys.

"I'm anxious, looking forward to the last round," said Burns, who won the Scandinavian Open shortly after turning pro last year but has yet to win in the United States. "I'm ready to go to the first tee right now. I'm confident. I just hope I can play as well as I have and I hope I can keep on making the putts. I hate to say it again, but it was my putter that kept me in there again." The key, of course, was the 504-yard 16th hole. Floyd and Burns were tied when they went to the tee. When they walked off the green Burns had a two-stroke lead.

He reached with two big wood shots and two-putted from about 30 feet for the go-ahead birdie. Floyd, who had played the par fives six under par in the first two rounds, drove into the woods, had to chip out, put his third in a bunker, blew it out to about 30 inches and missed the putt. It was a bogey six.

"I just went to sleep," Floyd said. "I forgot I had to get it in the hole. I counted the little putt already made. I'd counted my chickens, so to speak."

He bounced back with a five iron to six feet and a birdie on the next hole, cutting Burns' margin to a single shot.

Williamston Rips Roanoke

ROBERSONVILLE — The Williamston Tigers romped to their third straight lopsided victory Friday night as they powered past Martin County rival Roanoke, 40-0.

The first half of the contest was a tight one, with Williamston pushing in six points, and stalling a Roanoke drive inside the ten.

But in the second half, the Tigers got moving and added 34 points to their total.

Sam Short provided the first score of the evening, pushing over from the two yard line. That play climaxed a 50-yard drive and staked the Tigers to a 6-0 lead that held the rest of the half.

Roanoke drove down inside the ten, helped along by a 39-yard run by David Spruill, but a penalty, and incomplete pass and a loss killed their momentum and they turned over the ball on downs.

Following the second half kickoff, Williamston drove from its own 34 yard line for the second score. Mike Koesy got the points on a six-yard run and Tony Speller added a two-point conversion.

After Roanoke picked off a Williamston fumble later in the period, the Redskins bobbled the ball back and Short picked it up at the 'Skin 48, racing all the way for the score. Grady Winstead booted the PAT for a 21-0 lead.

Williamston added another touchdown in the period, after an interception at the Redskins' 38. Joel Hagan went over from the seven for the score.

Two final scores went up in the fourth period. Koesy went in from the three and Ronnie Horton took a 10-yard pass from Hank Edwards for the other. The first had been set up by another interception, at the Roanoke 24, and the second followed a punt at the Roanoke 42.

Williamston, now 3-0, plays host to Murfreesboro Friday, while Roanoke, 0-3, is at home to Elm City in an Eastern Plains loop game.

The West Craven Eagles denied the North Pitt Panthers their first victory of the season Friday night, slipping past the Panthers, 14-9.

North Pitt's passing game proved the weak link as it was unable to provide needed yards. The Panthers completing only one of eight passes. Larry McGlawhorn connected with Donnie Daniels on the Eagles' thirty-one yard line for a gain of 7 yards.

The completed pass came too late, however, for the Panthers with just thirty seconds left on the clock.

Further ground drives proved fruitless for North Pitt as the Eagles' defense held firm, running the clock out. The West Craven defense also controlled yardage for the entire game with the Panthers only 193 yards while the Eagles ran for a total of 219 yards.

Daniels led North Pitt with 104 yards rushing, carrying the ball 23 times. Dexter Coward of West Craven ran the ball 60 yards for West Craven on 15 carries.

The first score of the game came with Don Dawson of West Craven running to the outside for the touchdown from the Panther 21, with 3:11 left in the first quarter.

A conversion attempt by Dawson was good, making the score 8-0.

Jay Bedsworth of North Pitt attempted a field goal later in the period from the Eagle 35, but it failed.

North Pitt again failed to score with three minutes left in the second period. McGlawhorn threw an incomplete pass to Tim Corey at the Eagles on downs.

With 37 seconds left in the second period, North Pitt's Larry Spencer was injured while blocking and did not play again.

At 8:43 in the third quarter, Daniels of North Pitt drove from the Eagles fourteen yard line for the first Panther touchdown of the year. The extra point conversion failed.

In the next period of play North Pitt punted from its 45 after not being able to move the ball. Jeff Nelson of the Panthers recovered the fumbled punt by Shade Greene of West Craven, on West Craven's seven yard line.

On fourth down, Bedsworth of the Panthers kicked a field goal which put North Pitt in the lead, 9-8 with 27 seconds to go in the third quarter.

But Dawson of West Craven ran from the Panthers five for another touchdown with 7:36 to go in the game. The Eagles' extra point failed, leaving West Craven in control of the game, 14-9.

North Pitt returns to action Friday at Lillington.

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Cleveland Barons have named former National Hockey League defenseman Harry Howell as assistant to General Manager Bill McCreary.

Howell, who spent 17 years with the New York Rangers and 21 in the NHL, will assume his new position immediately, it was announced Friday. He still holds the Rangers' record of games played, with 1,160. He completed his playing career as a player-coach in the World Hockey Association with the San Diego Mariners.

Howell, 43, won the Norris Trophy as the NHL's top defenseman in 1966-67 and was named to the league's first All-Star team.

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Stingers of the World Hockey Association have signed goalie Paul Hoganson and 20-year-old Barry Melrose. The signing were announced Friday.

Hoganson joined the World Hockey Association team last December after being obtained from the New England Whalers. Later in the month, he took over the job as the Stingers top goalie and started 31 straight games, posting a 3.61 goals against average for 45.

Melrose, a second round draft pick of the Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League, played his junior career with Kamloops of the Western Canadian Hockey League. Last season, Melrose had 12 goals and 49 assists for a total of 61 points.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Nelson Leclair has been named head coach of the Grand Rapids Blades of the U.S. Hockey League, team officials said Friday.

Leclair, 35, a native of Kapuskasing, Ont., was player-coach of the defunct Stevens Point, Wis. Flyers last year. As a wing, he scored 45 goals and 61 assists for 106 points.

Gary Ford, a former Muskegon Mohawk, of the International Hockey League, center, was appointed Leclair's assistant.

WARREN, Mich. (AP) — Roger Young of Detroit and Mike Moal of Oakland, Calif., pedaled their way to first place Friday in the U.S.A. Board Track Bicycle Championships.

In second place were Dave Boll of Palo Alto, Calif. and Fred Markham of Los Gatos, Calif. Tim Zasady of Mt. Prospect, Ill. and Ted Waterbury of Columbus, Ohio finished third, led for tonight at Warren.

Farmville Outlasts Eastern Wayne, 33-27

FARMVILLE—The Farmville Central Jaguars outpowered 4-A Eastern Wayne Friday night to take a 33-27 victory over the Warriors. Carroll Griffin tossed four touchdown passes, while Keno Farrow raced 87 yards for the other score.

All four of Eastern's touchdowns came on passes from Steve Matthews.

The game wasn't decided until the closing minutes, however, as both teams scored final period touchdowns, and only an end zone interception by the Jaguars kept the Warriors from having a chance to put it out.

Eastern Wayne got on the scoreboard first, scoring the lone first quarter touchdown. That came on a 71-yard pass from Matthews to John Mickovitz on the first play from scrimmage by the Warriors.

Farmville then scored on back-to-back possessions in the second period. The first came on a 40-yard pass from Griffin to Mike Jenkins on a fourth-down play. That tied it 7-7.

On the next possession, Farrow broke away for his long run, and Griffin passed to Tim Hall for the two-point conversion and took a 15-7 lead into half-time.

Eastern came back on the third play of the second half to score on another long Matthews to Mickovitz aerial, this one of 76 yards. But the PAT pass failed, leaving them a point back, 14-13.

Following a long punt return, Eastern scored on a fourth-down screen pass from Matthews to Leo Tazwell, and the two connected again for a 21-15 lead.

Farmville came roaring back to score a pair of touchdowns, however, taking a 27-21 edge into the final period. The first game on a 37-yard Griffin aerial to Farrow, and the second on a 20-yard toss to Jerry Rackley. That came right after Eastern had fumbled the kickoff, and the pass was twice batted before settling into Rackley's arms.

Late in the game, the Jaguars moved the ball to the one yard line, but failed to score on a fourth down play and turned the ball over.

Eastern later faked a punt, but failed to make the yardage and Ted Dunn took a six-yard throw from Griffin to sew up the victory, giving the Jaguars a 33-21 edge.

However, it was far from over, with 2:18 left, Matthews hit Tony Hendrix from the 24 to pull the Warriors within striking distance.

They then recovered an on-sides kick, and with 1:23 to go had pushed to the 17. But there, Scott Evans picked off a pass in the end zone, and the Jaguars ran out the clock to preserve the victory.

The win evened the Jaguar record at 1-1 on the year. They entertain Plymouth on Friday.

Ahoskie Rolls Past Chargers

AHOSKIE — Ayden-Grifton's Chargers ran into their second straight buzzsaw Friday night as they visited the Cougars of Ahoskie. Ahoskie handed the Chargers their second loss in as many starts, 27-6.

Smiley Watson was the villain of the game, scoring all four of the Cougar touchdowns, mostly on short runs.

The Chargers were crippled by interceptions and fumbles, as they turned the ball over six times. Two of the turnovers came on interceptions, and four on fumbles.

Ahoskie returned in only twice, as Ayden-Grifton picked off one interception and got one fumble.

Watson's first touchdown came in the first period and Watson cracked over from the one yard line.

He added a second score in the second quarter, this time from the two yard line.

Ayden-Grifton got on the board for the first time in the season as William West scored on an eight-yard run, closing the gap to 13-6 at the half.

Ahoskie then added touchdowns in each of the final periods. Watson scored in the third on a 23-yard run, then came back to pick up his fourth TD on a three-yarder in the final stanza.

Ayden-Grifton offered several other threats in the contest, but their turnovers usually ended their hopes.

The Chargers return to action on Friday, traveling to Washington.

It Was Bad, But It Got Worse

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

When Whitey Herzog was thrown out of the game in the third inning he knew it was going to be bad night—but he didn't know how bad.

At the time his Kansas City Royals were only behind by a merciful 4-0 score. But before it was over, the Minnesota Twins scored 14 more runs for an embarrassing 18-3 victory over the failing American League West leaders.

Winning has been a problem for the Royals of late. They have lost 10 of their last 12 and have lost most of their lead in the West.

The strain of recent weeks possibly caught up with Herzog Friday night. He argued about a close play at third and as a result, was kicked out by umpire Russ Goetz.

The fates weren't completely unkind to Herzog, though. The second-place Oakland A's had a chance to gain ground on the Royals, but threw away a two-run lead in the 10th inning and lost a 5-4 decision to the Texas Rangers.

Kansas City's lead, once at a mighty 12 games, remained at five.

While the Royals and A's seemed uninterested in winning the West pennant, the New York Yankees moved a step closer to wrapping up the East. The Yankees whipped the Milwaukee Brewers 6-4 and reduced their "magic number" for clinching the title to 12.

Elsewhere, the Baltimore Orioles edged the Cleveland Indians 4-3; the Detroit Tigers blanked the Boston Red Sox 1-0 in a game called after five innings by rain and the California

Angels stopped the Chicago White Sox 3-2.

Yankees 6, Brewer 4
Oscar Gamble's grand slam home run in the bottom of the eighth inning gave New York its triumph over Milwaukee. With the score tied 2-2, Gamble drove a 1-0 pitch 390 feet into the right field stands, capping New York's five-run rally in the eighth. It was Gamble's 14th home run in Yankee Stadium and 16th of the year, and his first-ever grand slam.

Orioles 4, Indians 3
Ross Grimsley, with two innings of relief help from Dyer Miller, pitched Baltimore over Cleveland and recorded the seventh victory in his last nine decisions. A two-base throwing error by Cleveland third baseman Buddy Bell provided Baltimore with the eventual winning run in the fourth.

Tigers 1, Red Sox 0
Ben Oglivie homered into the left field screen in the first inning and Detroit hung on to beat Boston in their rain-abbreviated game. Oglivie's 11th homer of the season, on the first pitch to him by Boston's Reggie Cleveland, decided the outcome of the game which was interrupted for 1 hour, 16 minutes by rain with two out in the Boston fourth.

Angels 3, White Sox 2
Nolan Ryan fired a three-hitter and struck out 18 batters and Bruce Bochte drove in two runs with a homer and a double to lead California over Chicago. The 18 strikeouts was his season high and one less than his major league record which he shares with Tom Seaver of the New York Mets and Steve Carlton of the Philadelphia Phillies.

Two Newcomers Getting First Season Underway

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

The Seattle Seahawks and Tampa Bay Buccaneers, newest members of the National Football League family, play their first regular season games Sunday when the NFL opens its 57th season.

For standings purposes, Seattle will play in the National Conference West and Tampa Bay in the American Conference West. And for morale purposes within the league, they will play one game against each of the 13 teams in their conference and one against each other.

The Seahawks begin at home against high-powered St. Louis, one of the favorites in the NFC East. Tampa Bay's opener will be against the Oilers in Houston.

Both new teams have some old names on their rosters. The Buccaneers' starting quarterback will be Steve Spurrier, long-time San Francisco 49er. The Seahawks also have avet-eran signal caller in Bill Munson, acquired from Detroit. He probably will back up starter Jim Zorn.

Both new teams open against clubs with title hopes. The Cardinals have speed to burn in all-purpose scatback Terry Metcalf and wide receiver Mel Gray, as well as NFC rushing champion Jim Otis. Imported to shore up the defense were veteran linemen John Zook and Marvin Upshaw, as well as No. 1 draft choice Mike Dawson and safety Mike Sensibaugh.

The Oilers enjoyed a 10-4 turnaround season last year that just missed earning them a playoff berth. The preseason was an 0-6 disaster with injuries causing major problems. But most of the wounded have healed, including starting running backs Fred Willis and Ronnie Coleman, both expected to start against the Buccaneers. Sunday's other openers have Pittsburgh at Oakland in a key AFC contest, Los Angeles at Atlanta, Philadelphia at Dallas, Denver at Cincinnati, Minnesota at New Orleans, the New York Giants at Washington, San Diego at Kansas City, Detroit at Chicago, the New York Jets at Cleveland, Baltimore at New England, and San Francisco at Green Bay. Miami plays at Buffalo Monday night to complete the first week's games.

The Pittsburgh-Oakland opener is a rematch of last year's AFC championship game which was won by the Steelers. Pittsburgh went on from there to take its second straight Super Bowl title.

The Steelers are back intact and so are the Raiders, except for the defensive line where injuries have forced some last-minute patchwork by Coach John Madden. To compensate for the loss of regulars Art Thoms and Horace Jones, Oakland probably will use only three down linemen with four linebackers.

With James Harris still nursing a broken thumb, Los Angeles will use Ron Jaworski at quarterback against Atlanta.

Minnesota center Mick Tingelhoff, who has a dislocated shoulder, and defensive end Carl Eller, out with a broken thumb, will miss the Vikings' opener in New Orleans.

Most other prominent injured players, including Washington quarterback Billy Kilmer, Cleveland wide receiver Paul Warfield, and Dallas defensive back Mel Renfro are listed as no worse than probable starters for the openers.

"Nate's high salary ($450,000 per year) and his desire to be traded didn't figure in our decision," Joe Axelson, president and general manager of the Kings, said concerning the deal. "But I felt it was time to rebuild after a short period of success.

Nate Joining With Dr. J

NEW YORK (AP) — Will the talents of Nate "Tiny" Archibald and Julius "Dr. J." Erving blend on the basketball court?

The New York Nets believe they will. Friday, the Nets confirmed the acquisition of Archibald from the Kansas City Kings for guard Brian Taylor, center Jim Eakins and their first-round National Basketball Association draft choices in 1977 and 1978. "Great players can play together," Nets Coach Kevin Loughery said when questioned about the Archibald-Erving combination.

"People thought that Earl Monroe and Walt Frazier wouldn't be able to play together when Monroe came to the (New York) Knicks," Loughery said.

Archibald, a native of New York, is the only player in the history of the NBA to win the league's scoring title and assists championship in the same season. He accomplished that feat in the 1972-73 season, averaging 34 points per game and collecting 910 assists.

Archibald, a 6-foot-1 guard, was a second-round draft pick of Cincinnati in the 1970 draft and went to Kansas City when the team shifted there in 1972. Earlier this year, Archibald announced he was happy in Kansas City and wanted to play in New York.

Fryman Helps Phillies From Faraway Montreal

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

The Philadelphia Phillies gave up on Woodie Fryman in 1972 but now find that the journeyman left-hander is one of their most valuable assets, even though he pitches for the Montreal Expos.

The Phillies lost Fryman on waivers to Detroit in 1972. Luckily for them, the 36-year-old pitcher still has some victories in his ancient arm, especially since four have come against the Pittsburgh Pirates this season.

Fryman's latest victory over Pittsburgh, where he began his major league career in 1966, came Friday night. Fryman tossed a nine-hitter in Montreal's 4-2 triumph.

The loss was the second for the Pirates in their last 15 games and both defeats have been to Fryman, who blanked Pittsburgh 1-0 on Sunday.

Meanwhile, the Phillies are thankful for small favors, like Pittsburgh losses, because they dropped their 12th game in their last 14, a 3-2 decision to the Chicago Cubs Friday night.

So the status quo at the top of the National League East standings was maintained, with Philadelphia, ahead by 15½ games Aug. 24, staying five games in front of Pittsburgh.

Elsewhere in the NL, the New York Mets shaded St. Louis 4-3 and Cincinnati downed San Francisco 4-1. The doubleheader San Diego and Houston and the game between Atlanta and Los Angeles were rained out.

Mets 4, Cards 3
Bud Harrelson's infield single capped a two-run rally in the seventh inning and helped the Mets beat St. Louis. Mickey Lolich, 8-12, picked up the victory with relief help from Skip Lockwood and Bob Apodaca.

Reds 4, Giants 1
Pete Rose drove in two runs with a double and a triple and Don Gullett pitched seven innings of three-hit ball, leading Cincinnati over San Francisco and snapping the Giants' four-game winning streak.

Petty's Place No Surprise

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Richard Petty seldom starts on the pole in a Grand National stock car race at the Fairgrounds Raceway track, but the Dodge driver from Randleman, N. C., is first to the finish line when the action starts more often than anyone else.

It was no surprise Friday when Petty qualified in the seventh spot for Sunday's Capital City 400, because he's often been at least that far behind in the past at the start while winning 13 races over the .542-mile track.

Chevrolet drivers will occupy the two lead spots for the 1 p. m. EDT race with Benny Parsons of Ellerbe, N. C., on the pole.

Parsons led Friday's time trials with a speed of 92.460 miles per hour, followed by last year's winner, Darrell Waltrip of Franklin, Tenn., who was clocked at 92.351 m.p.h.

Winning the third and fourth spots were Dodge driver Dave Marcis of Skyland, N. C., 92.163 m.p.h., and Buddy Baker of Charlotte, N. C., who hit 91.614 m.p.h. in a Ford. Marcis won the Richmond 400 here earlier this spring.

Two more Chevrolet drivers qualified fifth and sixth with Richard Childress of Winston-Salem, N. C., at 91.519 m.p.h. and National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing point leader Cale Yarborough of Timmonsville, S. C., at 91.284 m.p.h.

Then came Petty at 91.173 m.p.h. And, while Petty is in the spot he likes at the local track, his domination may be on the wane, for he's won only two of his last five starts here.

Also qualifying Friday were Bobby Allison of Hueytown, Ala., 90.770 m.p.h. in a Mercury; Dick Brooks of Porterville, Calif., 90.559 m.p.h. in a Ford; and Lennie Pond of Petersburg, Va., 90.199 m.p.h. in a Chevrolet.

Evert Captures Easy Victory

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Chris Evert's 100th consecutive victory on clay did not come easily.

She began her match against Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia at 11:43 a.m. EDT Friday. She finished at 6:35 p.m., exactly 6 hours, 52 minutes later.

Playing the match was easy enough, Miss Evert beating the 20-year-old Yugoslav 6-3, 6-1 and advancing to Saturday's women's singles final of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships against Evonne Goolagong.

Getting the match finished was not easy.

Play began under threatening skies at the West Side Tennis Club, and after 32 minutes the rain came, a heavy downpour that halted play at 12:15 p.m., with Miss Evert leading the first set 5-2.

When play finally was resumed, five hours, 44 minutes later, the temperature had dropped some 20 degrees. It was not ideal tennis weather.

Miss Jausovec became No.

100 on Chris' string, a feat that was commemorated by a cake presented to her after the match by a group of friends.

The match never was in doubt. After Miss Evert had her service broken in the first game—"Sometimes it takes me a while to get going," she said—the No. 1 seed and defending champion won the next five games and took command. Miss Jausovec has just scored a service break and was leading 15-0 in the eighth game when the delay came.

Miss Goolagong, meanwhile, had expected to meet fellow Australian Dianne Fromholtz in the early afternoon. Instead, she did not take the stadium court until 6:50 p.m., under the lights.

"It was a long day, a long night," Miss Goolagong said with a smile after her 7-6, 6-0 victory that set up today's showdown against Miss Evert. "I went back to my apartment and had them call me. There's nothing worse than sitting around the clubhouse all day. That's worse than playing in the rain."

Miss Goolagong struggled through the first set, breaking Miss Fromholtz' service in the 12th game and sending it into the tiebreaker, then coming from a 4-1 deficit and winning the tiebreaker 7-5.

She benefitted from an umpire's error in the tiebreaker which gave her an extra serve. It was an error that neither player noticed until after the match, and that umpire Judy Popkin called "a stupid mistake, very unfortunate, but when it was noticed there was nothing that could be done about it."

Tigs, USC Talking

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP)—Officials at the University of South Carolina and Clemson University are discussing plans to renew the basketball rivalry between the two state schools, hopefully by the 1977-78 season, USC head basketball coach Frank McGuire said Friday.

A Clemson spokesman said the talks had been under way since South Carolina dropped the Tigers from its basketball schedule after the 1971-72 season. "No date has been agreed on; no contract has been signed," he said.

The problem is finding an opening for the games since both schools have scheduled games for several years, he said.

McGuire said that he had hoped the two teams would meet during the coming season, but added, "we had a lot of contract commitments that prevented this."

Other details to be worked out are whether there would be one or more games a season, if there would be a home-and-home arrangement and if each would be in the other's holiday tournament, he said.

South Carolina won the last two meetings between the schools the year it dropped out of the Atlantic Coast Conference. South Carolina has won 74 of the 114 games between the Gamecocks and the Tigers.

AYDEN — Green was a popular color in Ayden Saturday with pots full of collards and Ayden residents wearing green Collard Festival T-shirts. Remarkably, the face of Brian DeMarcus, winner of the collard eating contest, was not green. DeMarcus ate five pounds of collards in thirty minutes.

The Second Annual Collard Festival Saturday morning activities included a series of contests, speakers and a parade.

Jim Graham, Commissioner of Agriculture, a guest speaker at the festival said that the "S" in southern might be changed "C" to stand for collards which is grown on about 1,000 acres in the state and is worth $100,000; for chittlins, and for Carter. I'll bet Jimmy Carter will have chittlins and collards in the White House," Graham continued. On a serious note the commissioner, who is serving as chairman of the Jimmy Carter Committee for Food and Agriculture for North Carolina, stated that Carter's election was imperative to maintaining the tobacco and peanut programs so important to the state's agricultural economy.

Howard Lee, a candidate for Lieutenant Governor was present at the festival and also made a few remarks.

"I just wanted to come to Ayden today to have some collards and cornbread with you and to wish the Town of Ayden the best of luck in its endeavors with this year's festival," Lee said.

Attorney General Rufus Edmistein said that he was glad to have the opportunity to be present at the festival and wished Ayden officials a successful festival.

Mamie Anderson was the winner of the Collard Cooking Contest. Ms. Anderson said that she uses side meat and pork with her collards.

The parade entries included, several bands, horses, floats, queens, officials, antique cars, clowns, and marching units. Before and after the parade rides and crafts displays directed most of the crowd's attention.

Pet Show winners include the following: Michelle Avery, most colorful cat; Diane Sladk, most unusual colored cat; Tammy Vandiford, most talented cat; Jill Bulow, best groomed cat; Augusta Hillyard, largest dog; Patricia Carter, most talented dog; Connie Smith, best groomed dog; Lamont Braxton, most obedient dog; Tammy Vandiford, smallest dog; Chris McLawhorn, most unusual animal with an alligator; Reed Humphrey, most talented animal with pigeons; Lisa Smith, most colorful, with a rabbit; Augusta Hillyard best entry, with a Newfoundland dog.

Pianist Loonis McGlohon presented a concert prior to the Miss Collard Festival Pageant Saturday night.

Miss Audrey McCarter was crowned Miss Collard Festival 1976 Saturday night. Runners-up include the following: 1st runner up - Cathy Vandiford and 2nd runner up - Teresa Taylor. Natalie Coley and Machele Bell tied for Miss Congeniality.

Today's activities will include a horse show at 1 p.m. and the finals of a softball tournament at 1:30 p.m.

ATRIUM HIGHLIGHTS CONTEMPORARY PLAN

By Jerry Bishop

Free intermingling of light, space, and activity is achieved by the use of a central atrium in this unusual contemporary plan.

The Leeds, today's featured home, will satisfy the family that values unrestricted space. Family room, breakfast area and kitchen occupy a substantial portion of the plan and blend with the sunlit atrium via sliding glass doors.

Dignified simplicity characterizes the facade, with privacy-protecting front and tall light-ensuring windows on three sides. Double doors open to the gracious foyer, which directs guests to living room, and family to bedrooms and informal areas.

Living and dining rooms, with windows to share the atrium, unite to fill entertaining needs. The dining room conveniently connects to the kitchen.

Set at the rear of the plan for noise control, the family room and kitchen fashion an extensive area that is visually increased by the use of sliding glass doors to the atrium and windows overlooking the patio. A raised hearth wood-burning fireplace contributes atmosphere, and built-in pantry and extra cabinet space are welcome features. Linking kitchen and carport, the utility room—also functions as mud room and laundry center.

The focus of the plan, the atrium, is a practical as well as attractive room. It promises totally private sunbathing or star-gazing and offers a proected area for plants and greenery.

Lining the left side of the design, three bedrooms and two baths are pleasantly spacious. The master bedroom, set at rear with a view of the patio, commands a private bath, dressing area and four closets.

A double carport, flanked by outside storage, is featured.

Where To Retire: Big Decision

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Where can we find a home with a scenic view ... do you know an inexpensive retirement village ... what is a good climate for older people? These are just some of the questions that are asked by people planning to retire.

More important, perhaps, but frequently overlooked by retirement folk, is the necessity of health and home maintenance services. It should be high on their list of needs, but those who find themselves in good health and are accustomed to things running smoothly in their city or suburban homes, may not give a thought to services they have always taken for granted.

Even city folk and people living in well populated suburban towns find services becoming scarce. The hospital could be 15 miles from a thriving suburban town, but even so transportation may be available. It is not always so accessible in less populated areas.

Retiring to an isolated area because "housing is a bargain" may have many drawbacks, caution people who have had the experience. Taxes may be low, the atmosphere tranquil, but the lack of services may be a missing link for older folk.

Here are some suggestions from retired people that may prove helpful to others who are seeking retirement housing:

—The dreamy little house in a small town may have everything going for it but convenience of health facilities. Before moving to it, find out where the doctor, dentist and hospital are located. Where can prescriptions be filled? What about eye examinations and new glasses? Find out how far you must travel for medical help in the event of an accident.

—Transportation is becoming more costly and being curtailed even in thriving communities. Is a car essential to your life in the town you are considering? Many persons do not wish to drive. Some can no longer drive for health reasons. Others want to curtail driving in the interest of economy. Is local transportation available? How often? Is it accessible to your home? You don't want to hire a car each time you must go to a railroad station or keep a doctor's appointment.

—Are there appliance servicemen within range of the prospective home? Washing machine, dishwasher and television are real pleasures for aging people but if you can't get them fixed promptly or must pay someone to travel long distances to repair them, they may become real luxuries.

In addition to a long wait for a repairman, you may need to pay travel time. One couple found repair costs prohibitive in their new home.

—Many people want to satisfy a long time dream when retirement comes around, by finding a remote spot where they can "get away from it all" to fish and walk. But they forget people and machines can break down. Even those in the best of health may find rustic living a bit more than they bargained for, cautions one 60-ish, young-in-heart couple.

They chose a remote spot in a mountainous area of the Northeast for roughing it. They would fish by day and she would knit and do needlepoint at night as they watched television by the fire. They gave up the idea after four months when their television — their "only link with the outside world" — broke down and they had to take it 30 miles to be repaired.

By that time "even our shoes were getting thin, the radio battery spares were corroding, we had a lot of clothes that needed to be dry cleaned and we were fed up taking garbage to a dump," said the man who had always looked forward to living in a fishing camp.

Such a place could be dreamy, they emphasize, "if you could afford to maintain two places, and it was a spare."

Even after this experience, this couple was disappointed again. They tried their luck at a retirement village, only to find that life in an area filled with old people is not for them. —Many people leave communities where they have been content and happy because they can't cope with taxes and maintenance of a big house. One couple solved that problem by buying a smaller house in the same community. They have the same services available to them, and they are able to travel far and wide with the profits they made on the bigger house.

One piece of information that all retirement folk emphasize was put by one man, who said, "old bones seem to need warm weather. There comes a time when it is a little late to pioneer."

Q. — We are considering the purchase of an old house, but haven't signed anything yet because we have found the water pressure isn't too good. We tested by a method we heard about, whereby the flow from some of the faucets decreased when the toilet was flushed. Could you tell us what is causing this insufficient pressure and whether it is serious?

A. — Insufficient water pressure can be due to any one of a number of reasons or a combination of them. The most common causes are low pressure in the street main, clogged pipes and a very old system in need of repair or replacement. There's just nothing you can do except hire a plumber or one of those trouble-shooting companies that make house inspections for a fee. If the house owners want to make a sale, they will agree to an inspection. If they refuse, be very wary.

Q. — Do you think the interest rates on mortgage loans will come down within a year or two? My wife and I want to buy a house, but feel that we can make a much better deal if we wait a year or two. A friend of ours who knows something about houses says we will save thousands of dollars if the interest rate drops even one per cent. We expect to pay about $30,000 for a new house and make a down payment of 20 per cent.

A. — Your friend's thinking is right as far as it goes, but it does not go far enough. He is completely ignoring the fact that the prices of houses keep going up every year. If you bought a house for $30,000, you would have to make a down payment of $6,000. Assume you got a 30-year mortgage loan for $24,000 at 9 per cent. Your monthly payments would come to $193.11 exclusive of taxes and insurance. Wait a year or two and the chances are the same house would cost $35,000. That would call for a down payment of $7,000 instead of $6,000. If the interest rate dropped a full per cent, which nobody in the world can do more than make a guess at, you would obtain a $28,000 mortgage loan at that rate over the same 30-year period. Now your monthly payments would be $205.45. All you would have done, therefore, is wait yourself into a larger down payment and a larger monthly payment.

Q. — In using a paste filler on walnut wood, do you rub with the grain or against it? I have heard conflicting opinions about this and, since I have a project of this sort coming up, I want to get it straight.

A. — After the filler has been applied with a brush, do the rubbing with a piece of burlap or similar material. Use a kind of circular motion, with the emphasis on the motion against the grain. It is this operation that pushes the filler into the wood. It is only after the pores of the wood have been filled that you use a clean cloth to wipe lightly in the direction of the grain.

Q. — Is it true that iodine can be used to cover up tiny scratches in a varnished table?

A. — Yes. But this camouflaging of the scratches will work only if the wood has a dark finish on it. Try it out first on the underside of the table to see if the iodine matches the color of the wood.

Q. — Some water was recently spilled on our coffee table and left marks on it. Unfortunately, we did not see what had happened until several hours later. What's the best way to remove the marks?

A. — If the table top had wax on it, it may be that the marks are only in the wax. In that event, use a wax remover and see if the stains disappear. If not — or if there was no wax on the table in the first place — rub the area with a cloth moistened with oil of peppermint. Rub a second time, but use a clean, dry cloth.

Trying to figure out what the home buying public wants at any given time is a problem that has always perplexed house builders and community planners.

No matter how many studies are made, the people who buy the houses continue to confound those who interpret the results. Just when it appears that a trend has been established on which to base future plans, the public moves in another direction or, at the very least, exhibits an indifference which hardly fosters the anticipated housing recovery.

As land and building costs have continued to increase, the price of a new, one-family house has gone up every year. Commerce Department figures released recently show that, in the second quarter of this year, the average price of such a house was $48,000. Prospective purchasers have been saying for a long time that they are being priced out of the market. Legislators have taken some steps to speed the sales of houses. Last year, it was decided to accelerate the movement of new unsold houses. A 5 per cent tax credit was given to the buyer of a new house or one started in the early part of the year, even though it need not be occupied until January 1, 1977. Provided certain rather easy conditions were met, the tax credits applied to regular houses, condominiums, cooperatives and mobiles. It spurred sales, but only to a degree and not nearly as much as expected.

There were changes in the laws governing closing costs, the idea being to make such costs less mysterious to the buyer. But the house purchaser found that knowing ahead of time what the closing costs would be did not make them less. And everyone concerned — sellers, buyers, lenders and real estate brokers — agreed that the extra paper work delayed the completion of sales. New amendments to these regulations have gone into effect in an attempt to cut some of the red tape.

For more than a year now, builders have attempted to bring down the costs of new houses by the elimination of so-called frills. The term so-called is used deliberately, because what is a frill to one family is considered a necessity by another. Include in that category an extra bathroom, since surveys show that many people say they don't need an extra bathroom if it adds to the cost of a house, which it certainly does.

In reality, most persons talk one way and act another, not exactly a new conclusion in or out of real estate. The latest figures by the Bureau of Census and the Department of Housing and Urban Development make it plain that as many families as ever want such things as extra bathrooms, central air conditioning, fireplaces, etc. When such items are offered as optionals at an extra cost in many housing developments, more persons elect for them than pass them by. But just when you try to read something significant in that, you learn that some builders report excellent sales at developments which offer only no-frills houses, similar to "stripped" models of new automobiles.

All of which explains the reason for the first sentence of this article.

Timely Gardening Questions

Q. How much cold will broccoli and cauliflower tolerate? (C.L., Burlington)

A. Not much. Although they are cool season crops, they will not tolerate temperatures much below 29 to 32 degrees. Unlike winter cabbage, they will be knocked out by a hard freeze. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Q. Please explain what is meant by "disbudding" a plant. (Mrs. C.G., Lincolnton)

A. Disbudding is the removal of some flower buds while they are yet small. The remaining buds will develop into flowers of larger size. Plants on which disbudding is commonly practiced include chrysanthemum, dahlia, peony, tea roses and camellia. (Henry J. Smith, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. How far apart should I set cabbage? (L.G. Wilson)

A. Seven to 10 inches if you want small, uniform heads. Ten to 14 inches if you want larger, less uniform heads. (W.W. Reid, extension horticulturist)

Q. What do people mean when they say, "Have your soil tested"? (W.B., Greensboro)

A. It means having your soil analyzed to determine the nutrient content and needs. It doesn't cost a penny. If you are willing to invest a little time, here is how you can get it done.

First, get a soil sample box and information sheet from your county office of the Agricultural Extension Service. The information sheet will explain how to take a sample of your soil. Then mail the sample to the Soil Testing Laboratory of the N.C. Department of Agriculture, Raleigh, N.C. Within two weeks you will receive a report giving an analysis of your soil and telling you how much fertilizer and lime your soil needs to grow a good crop. You will need one box for each area to be tested. Fall is a good time to have soil testing done. (A.A. Banadyga, extension horticulturist)

Appalachian Center For Folk Arts

By JERRY MITCHELL
ASHEVILLE, N.C. (UPI) — Mention of the Appalachian region of the United States often brings to mind pictures of poverty-stricken families with little cultural background.

The Southern Highland Handicraft Guild, with substantial financial backing from the federal government, hopes to give the region a more positive image by building a center to preserve the dying folk arts still practiced in the area.

The project gained momentum with approval of a $1.5 million grant from the Appalachian Regional Commission. The grant is for the $2.2 million Southern Highland Folk Art Center to be located on the Blue Ridge Parkway near here.

"One of the most positive forces that is still alive in our country is the heritage of our mountain people," said Robert W. Gray, director of the guild. "These people are proud. They have something to be proud of. They stand tall.

"There has been too much emphasis on the negative aspects of this region and this center will accentuate the positive side."

The center, to be constructed and owned by the National Park Service, will include a museum, an arts and crafts demonstration area, a library, an auditorium, a craft sales area and an information lobby operated by the park service. It will be occupied by the guild which will be responsible for maintenance, operate the crafts shop and be in charge of formulating the center's programs.

The guild, formed in 1930, now represents about 500 individual members and 70 center memberships for groups of craftsmen. Some of members work at their crafts fulltime, others parttime or seasonally.

"We normally take in 30 or 40 new members per year. The only qualifications are that they live in the geographic area we service and their work meets minimum standards of quality set by the guild," Gray said.

The new center will have exhibits and demonstrations of such skills as broom-making from broom corn, woodcarving, toy-making, quilting, stitchery and weaving and pottery making. Natural materials available in the area are used. In basketweaving, honeysuckle vine, white oak and river cane are used.

"Toy-making has always been an inventive type of craft," Gray said. "Most rural people seem to be able to come up with ideas that will interest children."

Products sold in the crafts shop will range in price from $2 to several hundred dollars. The most expensive items are wood carvings.

Money from the shop sales will be divided equally between the shop and the craftsman. Gray said some parttime guild members make about $500 a year while some who work fulltime "do quite well."

Under a 30-year lease arrangement between the guild and the parks service, the guild will not be permitted to charge admission to the center.

"In the future we will be asking for foundation support and perhaps even National Endowment of the Arts support for certain programs," Gray said. "We are planning to continue our merchandising program and strengthen it."

He admits the project is the most ambitious yet undertaken by the organization.

"We know that the first two or three years we will operate in the red," he said. "There's no question about that."

Unfamiliar Plants Risky

NEWARK, Del. (AP) — Though there are few plants that eaten in small quantities will result in death, there are a great many plants that cause various degrees of poisoning and other disorders, says University of Delaware extension horticulturist Dr. Charles Dunham.

All children should have impressed on them the fact that they should not eat any plant they do not know, Dr. Dunham emphasizes.

If a child does eat some unknown plant parents should not panic as it is probably not serious. But just to be on the safe side, he advises, they should get a piece of the plant or a good description of it and call the nearest poison control center, which will advise on how to proceed.

'Business New Year' Mixed Stock Market

By CHET CURRIER
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed this past week, drawing little inspiration from the arrival of the traditional "Business New Year" after Labor Day.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks wandered aimlessly through the week's four trading sessions after the holiday Monday, finishing with atoken net loss of .75 at 988.36.

Most other indicators registered small gains. Standard and Poor's 500-stock index was up .35 at 104.65, and the NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks added

2.3 to 55.86.

Big Board volume averaged 17.38 million shares a day, up somewhat from 15.49 million the week before but still far short of its early-1976 pace.

Wall Streeters had been looking toward Labor Day with hopes for a fresh start for the market after a slack and uninspired summer.

But the market responded by repeating a performance it had given at least a dozen times previously this year — moving close to the 1,000 level in the Dow and then turning back again.

Brokers say the market's problem at 1,000 appears to reflect a supply of stock for sale that has built up over the past several years.

LITTEST HECKLER — A 3-year-old seems a bit dismayed at the activity here Friday as anti-abortion pickets lined the drive at a Carter supporter meeting here in Florida which Jimmy Carter attended as he stumped the state for votes. (AP Wirephoto)

Under that theory, many shareholders who intended to sell postponed any action through the bear market of 1973 and 1974 because of the low level of stock prices.

After the market's comeback since then, those investors seem to see the Dow 1,000 level as a signal to catch up on that postponed selling.

The week produced some encouraging signs from the retail sector of the economy.

Sears, Roebuck, the industry giant, forecast continued steady sales growth at least through the spring selling season of 1977.

"We have a sustainable rate of growth, and that's the best kind of growth to have," declared Arthur M. Wood, Sears' chairman.

And the Commerce Department reported Friday that retail sales in August rose 2.2 per cent on top of an upward-revised figure for July.

The market has often been sensitive to retail sales figures this year because of the important part consumer spending has played in the economic recovery to date.

But if that news engendered any enthusiasm, it was largely offset by reports that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries might have an unpleasant surprise for the industrialized nations at year-end.

OPEC, the reports said, might decide on a substantially larger price increase than had been previously expected.

As that speculation circulated on Thursday, international oil stocks and the general market declined.

On Friday, investors turned their attention to buying some of the domestic oil and coal stocks on the theory that they would benefit from a rise in foreign oil prices.

The weekly tally of NYSE-listed issues showed 1,050 gainers and 728 losers among the 2,070 traded.

New highs for the year numbered 216 against 29 new lows.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose .43 to 103.03.

The Associated Press 60-stock average advanced .8 to 318.7.

Pruitt-Igoe Housing Complex

Dream Ends In Rubble

By ED SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Twenty years after the $35 million Pruitt-Igoe housing complex opened as an urban planner's dream, the last of its 33 high-rise buildings has been reduced to rubble, ending what had become a nightmare of rodents, drugs and crime.

Wrecking crews finished demolishing the last of the 11-story buildings this week on the 47-acre tract. All of the 10,000 residents who once occupied its 2,900 low-income apartments had long since moved out.

"The concept of a very large, very high-density complex filled with low-income tenants has been discarded," John G. Roach, head of the city's Community Development Agency, said in an interview. He said similar projects had met the same fate elsewhere.

"What it really boils down to," said Thomas P. Costello, executive director of the city Housing Authority, "is that we have proved we can build buildings but we still haven't proved we can manage them."

When the federally funded project opened in various stages in the mid 1950's, it was designed for low-income working families. But soon most of its tenants were one-parent welfare families, Costello said, and the buildings fell into disrepair.

"They were vandalized and the people still didn't care," he said. With repairs, the project cost the government about $1 million per year to operate.

Vandals smashed windows with stones and bullets. Winter temperatures caused water pipes to freeze and burst, flooding apartments and ruining electrical equipment, including power supplies for elevators. The entire complex took on a bombed-out look. A $5 million rehabilitation program in 1966 failed to help.

As the condition of the buildings, rent strikes and other factors drove tenants away, the area became a target for rising crime. Robbers, drug dealers and other thugs made the vacant apartments their territory.

In August 1973, H.R. Crawford, assistant secretary for housing management for the Department of Housing and Urban Development, came to St. Louis in response to public pressure to announce that the complex would be destroyed.

The remaining 550 families living there were relocated in other subsidized housing by spring of 1974.

Graduates Too Picky, Says Law School Dean

By DEBORAH FRAZIER
DENVER (UPI) — If a law school graduate tends bar is it a sign law schools are overproducing attorneys?

University of Denver Law School Dean, Robert Yegge believes otherwise — claiming some graduates tending bar are "too picky" about jobs.

"There is the perception that lawyering is working for a large firm making $100,000 per year and there is nothing else for a lawyer to do," he said. "That is a folk notion. The jobs are there, but not in that conventional sense."

Although there are not enough "traditional" positions for graduates of the nation's 160 law schools, Yegge said in an interview, opportunities in business, industry, government, education and communications are abundant.

Legal training has always been an advantage, Yegge said, but as society has become more complex and all enterprises governed by more laws, the need for attorneys has increased.

"I have a theory that the law degree is the equivalent of a bachelor's degree at the turn of the century. Law is such a part of today's world that legal training is an introduction into almost anything."

Yegge said DU placed most of its 125-member graduating class in government related positions, with few entering traditional practice. Graduates have been hired by school districts, Federal Trade Commission, oil companies, Department of the Interior, numerous major manufacturing firms and a whole range of private concerns, he said.

In addition, DU graduates also are working in community legal projects, legal aid and other areas that either did not exist 25 years ago or could not afford a lawyer.

There was a time when only big business and the rich could hire lawyers, Yegge said, but that has passed with middle income persons retaining attorneys more frequently and legal aid offices providing services for the poor.

"All of these things take more lawyers. Of course, you will never make that $100,000 per year, and some law students don't want it. Most of the lawyers that are tending bar are too picky and have limited their own possibilities."

Yegge also rejected charges that an increase in the number of lawyers has led to more personal damage suits, including malpractice.

"I see the increased number of such suits as good. If a person has been wronged by a physician, he has the right to redress. If there are more people able to get their rightful redress, they hurry for more lawyers."

More legal actions are being filed as the result of legal aid and community legal services, he said, while the number of consumer rights and sex discrimination cases also has increased.

"These areas didn't really exist 10 or 15 years ago and they have the legal profession dealing with nonrich, noncorporate clients," he said. "I see such suits as a positive and necessary force for change in our society."

Phones Cheap In Rural Kentucky

By GEORGE W. HACKETT
Associated Press Writer
HYDEN, Ky. (AP) — Inflation hasn't caught up with customers of the Perry County Rural Telephone Co. Rates haven't changed since 1954.

The cost: $6.90 a month for a business phone, $4.10 for a residence, and $3.20 for a party line.

"We formed the company in desperation and never saw any need to gouge our neighbors," said Lula Hale, an original stockholder.

Miss Hale went on to explain that the tiny community of Ary had tried for years to obtain service but "the big firms weren't interested. They thought they would lose money on the deal."

The situation remained static until 1953 when Virgil Spurlock, a local resident, suggested a do-it-yourself project to the townspeople.

"He sold us on the idea of buying shares at $50 apiece and using the cash to set up our own lines," said Miss Hale.

"We got enough together and it wasn't long until we had telephones," recalled Miss Hale, now 85. "At one time, we were one of the smallest utilities in the nation."

nal investment back, plus a little more," Miss Hale said.

What's ahead for the utility? "Great things," according to Edward Mattingly, vice president and general manager of the parent firm, the Leslie County Rural Telephone Co.

He said the system is being modernized and, eventually, the Perry County subscribers will get a rate increase.

"It's not going to be much," Mattingly promised.

He said firms like his — it supplies an 800-to 900-square-mile area — are a "must" for the small towns that otherwise would have no communication.

Financing is usually handled through a Rural Electrification Administration loan. They became available in the 1950s "when bankers were reluctant to put up money for small telephone companies."

"I drifted into this business, with a little help from my dad," Mattingly said.

His father owned a service station and "he always was having trouble calling another city to get parts. One day, Dad decided the best solution was to buy his own phone company, and he obtained control of the Leslie County utility in 1947."

Mattingly said his job never is dull.

"You never know who is on the other end of the line," he said. "You get to meet a lot of interesting people that way."

WE ALSO INCLUDE THE ORIGINAL TARHEEL TOYOTA NEW CAR GUARANTEE 100,000 MILES OR 3 YEARS

Every car dealer in the country is talking "dependability" these days. At Tarheel Toyota we've decided to do something about it. A new car warranty that's longer than any other warranty in the world. (exclusively for Tarheel Toyota) Bill Draper can tell you why: "Nobody else in the world has a car like this. I've been in the factory in Japan, I've seen how the Toyota is made, the quality of the workmanship, the integrity and the craftsmanship that go into this car. I know the Toyota inside and out."

Until now most new car warranties haven't been much more than discounts on the car repairs you knew you'd need. Our warranty is our guarantee of faith in the Toyota.

"Nobody else in the world can put this kind of warranty on their car. My faith and my knowledge and experience with Toyota tell me I can do it. Toyota builds an automobile to last."

Our knowledge of the Toyota comes from research, from first hand information from our service department and from a great number of satisfied Toyota customers. For 100,000 miles or 3 years from the day you purchase your new Toyota, we guarantee to replace or repair your motor, transmission and rear end, if they fail under normal driving conditions.

We'll ask you to keep the vehicle properly maintained and we'll ask that you bring it back to Tarheel Toyota for any repairs covered by this warranty. We're offering the 100,000 miles, 3 year warranty in addition to the new car warranty offered by Toyota Motor Sales, USA. It's a promise, a guarantee of Toyota quality. Toyota dependability.

12 MONTHS OR 12,000 MILES USED CAR WARRANTY

This guarantee applies to cars selling for $1000.00 and up. On a 50-50 basis. All work must be done in our shop. This warranty does not apply to any sport cars, high performance engines or 4 speed transmissions (except economy cars). Most good used cars (even if they look like new) are only guaranteed for a month. Or for a thousand miles. No more. And some are not guaranteed at all. But at Tarheel Toyota when we say a used car is in excellent condition, we're willing to stand behind it. We're willing to do something a little extra for it. So we guarantee its motor, its rear end, and its transmission for twelve months or twelve thousand miles. If you're in the market for a better used car, come out to Tarheel Toyota and look at ours. We'll show you some as good as new. Guaranteed. (Asterisk denotes warranted car.)

A Barnyard Brilliant With Exotic Birds

Six year old Ellen Mae Rouse and her five year old brother, David are fortunate children. Because their father, Eugene Rouse, and his Panamanian born wife Maria have a hobby of raising exotic chickens, ducks, geese and guineas, Ellen and David have their own "at home" petting zoo. There's also a couple of pens of lovable Beagle puppies, plus a few cats and the family dog.

Unlike most contemporary barnyards, the menagerie at the Rouse home is a continuation of the old-fashioned way of raising feathered creatures. Hens with their biddies (baby chicks) wander about, scratching in the dirt and calling to their young to share in a tasty insect morsel. Half-grown silver-spotted guineas dart forward quickly in their peculiar mincing gait before stopping and uttering a strange cry. A bantam rooster, small and cocky, struts about and makes comically threatening gestures to large chickens who pay him no attention.

Scattered among the more commonplace efficient egg producing varieties of chickens are Cochins with their ruffles of feet feathers; Japanese chickens in dark iridescent plumage; bantams in brilliant plumages of bronze, gold, deep reds and blacks.

From the corner of a weathered wood barn, a hefty turkey gobler, accompanied on his stroll by his more sedate hen, appears. He makes a great show of pirouetting, lifting and spreading his strong tail feathers in a display almost as impressive as that of a pea fowl.

The one species of birds at the Rouse farm that most visitors soon discover are prone to assert their kingship are the Brown and the White Chinese geese. Sturdy, long-necked birds with polished yellow bills, they seem to take delight in frightening timid humans by stretching their necks and advancing with lusty hisses. It's merely their way of showing affection; however, to the uninitiated it might not seem that affection is what they have in mind.

Mrs. Rouse and the two young children are fond of their barnyard friends, but according to Mrs. Rouse, it is her husband the birds are most attached to. "They all know when Eugene is coming home," she said with a smile. "The moment they hear the sound of his truck, they come from wherever they are and flock together, waiting for Eugene to feed them."

FEEDING TIME . . . finds birds of many varied plumages and sizes gathering together awaiting the arrival of their master, Eugene Rouse.

Miss Hester Weds Mr. Morrow

Memorial Baptist Church here was the scene of the Saturday wedding ceremony of Wanda Faye Hester and John William Morrow III at 6:00 p.m.

The Rev. Norman Bennett and Chaplain John B. Narron, uncle of the bride, performed the double ring ceremony. A program of organ music was presented by Joe Goodwin.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson M. Hester of Greenville, the bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a formal gown of ivory silk organza over peau de soie. The empire bodice featured a V-neckline and short sleeves of sheer organza outlined with Venise braid and Venise flowerette appliques. The A-line skirt fell from an empire waist of braid into an attached chapel length train. The skirt and train were bordered with a insert of ivory bridal satin trimmed with braid and embellished with lace motifs. The bride's chapel length veil of silk illusion, bordered with Venise lace flowerettes, fell from a Camelot headpiece covered with matching lace. She carried a cascade of red antheriums surrounded by white baby's breath.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John William Morrow II of Charlotte.

The matron of honor was Mrs. June Graves of Alexandria, Va., sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Ms. Gail Hester, sister of the bride, and Mrs. Joan Evans, both of Greenville, and Miss Brenda Gurkin of Bear Grass.

The matron of honor wore a formal dress in pink crepe designed with a V-cut front, high neckline and sleeveless. It was enhanced with a pink floral cape collar. The bridesmaids wore dresses fashioned similar to that of the honor attendant. The matron of honor carried a nosegay of pink miniature carnations and baby's breath centered with a chase candle. The bridesmaids' nosegays featured burgandy carnations.

Ushers for the wedding were Lt. Col John W. Graves of Alexandria, Va., and Alan Gibbons of Greenville, brothers-in-law of the bride, and Charles Frederick of Charlotte. Escorts included Bert Dean of Roxboro, Ronnie and Donnie Morrow of Charlotte, brothers of the bridegroom, and Phil Hester of Hartford, Conn., brother of the bride.

The best man was the father of the bridegroom, John William Morrow II.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at Windy Ridge clubhouse.

After a wedding trip to Atlanta, Ga., the couple will reside in Spartanburg, S.C.

The bride attended East Carolina University and is employed by Disco, Inc. of Boston, Mass. The bridegroom is a graduate of ECU and is employed as broadcaster for the Philadelphia Phillies Baseball Club.

The good old days of cooking definitely did not cover 1876.

Not if one judges from The National Cookery Book compiled for the Women's Centennial Committees of the International Exhibition in Philadelphia a century ago.

Recipes from an Oneida Indian squaw include baked bear's meat that called for reserving excess grease to sell to traders for hair oil.

Directions for cooking mud turtle begin: "Put the turtles alive in boiling water ..."

A copy of the now-rare cookbook is in a recently opened exhibit in the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., that re-creates the Philadelphia fair. Only in part did the 300-page cookbook reflect the ethnic diversity of the 36 states of the period. The compilers included Dutch and German sauerkraut and cole slaw, French brioche, mayonnaise and omelets, African gumbo and okra, and even Italian spaghetti, but omitted recipes of Chinese, Irish, Mexican and Scandinavian heritage, although immigrants of all four nationalities had already settled in the United States.

Not all the recipes are as unappetizing as baked bear and mud turtle. Mississippi crab soup sounds pretty good, although it contains only six crabs in a strained broth made with beef or fowl, vegetables and a little spice.

Baked pork and beans are made almost the same way today as they were a century ago, but with one major exception: the centennial book called for cooking the beans all day in a iron pot or earthen crock covered with a home-made lid of flour and water dough.

"Earthenware crocks are to be had in New England, diminishing in size at the top, made expressly for this purpose," the book advised.

It's been said that you need to know how to cook to use most modern cookbooks. That was even truer a century ago, but women had one advantage we lack today. No girl's education was considered complete in those days without knowledge of cookery. Even a homemaker who could afford a cook had to know how to supervise the kitchen staff.

For that reason, most recipes gave sketchy directions, if at all. Ingredients were listed helter-skelter, rarely in order of use, and even measurements were often left to the discretion or guesswork of the cook, as in Madison apple pie, for example.

It called for rich puff paste filled with apples, topped with more crust and baked without sugar or any thickening. That came later. Cream and sugar, flavored with rose, cinnamon or allspice were to be poured in at serving time. A neat trick, for the upper crust from the hot pie. the cook first had to remove different assemblies. Robert Alligood, principal, introduced the members to the school policies. He was followed by Clarence Gray, who spoke on bus and cafeteria procedures and Dave Bumgarner, who delivered a speech on absence from school.

People then went through their change of classes in a quickened schedule designed to prepare everyone for the full days ahead.

The Student Government Association, under the leadership of President Bobby Kim, held its first session as a complete assembly. The election of sophomore homeroom representatives took place earlier in the week to insure full representation for everyone.

Sophomores Selected

Sophomores elected to serve were Alan Avery, Angela Best, Dietra Cannon, Sharon Connolly, Nancy Garrett, Linda Gilbert, Pennette Johnson, Till Jolly, Mary Maye, Tommy Moore, Sherry Quinn, Wade Stokes, Susan Tucker, Cathy Waller, Angela Worthington, and Steve Saieded.

Lenora Austin, Ruth Berbert, Lance Cain, JoLindy Daniels, Jeanette Dupree, Lee Hardee, Lori Jennette, Rosa Fing, Margaret McGlohon, Angela Morris, Annette Perry, Jane Short, Kathy Struter, Marsha Warren, Marianne Williams, and Ricky Reeves will serve the second semester.

They will join the juniors and seniors who were elected as representatives in the spring to form the SGA.

Magazine sales began for the entire study body Wednesday. A goal of six thousand dollars was set and students were urged to help in the project. The funds attained from the sale help to support the activities of the Student Government and aid in the undertakings of each class.

The WOOW reporter for the Rose High news bulletin was chosen in auditions. Characteristics sought in the selection were voice clarity and pitch. Karen Gordon will speak of the happenings on the school's radio bulletin, Friday nights at 8:25.

The Agricultural Extension Service will hold its annual craft workshop for leaders Wednesday and Thursday, Nov. 3-4, in Plymouth.

Classes will be conducted in: counted thread cross-stitch; fibre rush chair seating; beginner macrame; creative needlepoint; needle-weaving; nut head clothespin dolls; pine needle craft — beginning; silk screen printing; trapunto pillows; woodcarving; and 4-H crafts including brown bag owl boutique, leather look articles, macrame owl necklace and ojo de dios.

"This opportunity is provided each fall to assist persons in this section of the state who want to master a craft and are willing to then share what they have learned with others," said Mrs. Sue B. May, Pitt home economics extension agent.

Further information may be obtained by contacting Mrs. May.

Parents of North Carolina girls, ages three to 12, are advised that the nationally sanctioned statewide Little American Miss pageant will be staged Friday, Oct. 1, at the Holiday Inn West, Asheville. The pageant will be under the direction of Mrs. Emogene LeSueur of Tennessee.

Four different age divisions will compete in Asheville with a winner and three runners-up in each division. The four divisional winners will appear before the judges and one will be named the N.C. Little American Miss — 1976. The winner and three runners-up will become eligible to compete in the fifth annual national finals in Lake Charles, La., Saturday, Oct. 16.

No talent competition is involved and judging is on the basis of beauty, poise, personality and similar factors.

Entry information is available by writing Mrs. LeSueur, P. O. Box 3541, Carroll Reece Station, Johnson City, Tenn.

Judging and public preview of the 11th annual International Children's Art Competition will be held at the atrium of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, Washington, D. C., Wednesday.

Hosting the day long event will be the Christian Children's Fund of Richmond, Va. CCF has sponsored the international art show since 1965, this year receiving more than 10,000 entries from children in 12 developing world countries.

Artists and graphic designers in CCF's international headquarters volunteer their time and talent to screen down the children's entries to approximately 250 finalist paintings. Awards in the form of scholarships are given to top winning entries, with cash awards to the other winners. Winning paintings are formally exhibited during December in the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City.

MISS DEBRA DIANE STRICKLAND... is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Strickland of Rt. 1, Farmville, who announce her engagement to William Martin Hobgood, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thomas Britt of Farmville, and the late Mr. William Carroll Hogbood. The wedding will take place Oct. 17.

Activity Enriches Life Of Homebound

NEW YORK (AP) — A new program through which a variety of recreational, cultural, social and craft activities is brought into the homes of the disabled has been launched to help relieve the daily isolation of the chronically ill and homebound.

"The Quality of Life" program was begun less than a year ago in the borough of Queens by the Jewish Community Services of Long Island, a family counseling agency.

The project evolved out of the agency's concern for the unmet needs of the chronically ill, according to George Rothman, executive director of JCSLI.

"Medical treatment is not their problem, since the physical needs of these people are usually well taken care of," he explained. "But the homebound existence imposed on them by the seriousness of their disability does create deep spiritual and emotional isolation."

"Many of our clients have seen no one outside of their immediate families for years. In cases of prolonged illness, family relationships are frequently severely strained."

At present there are 45 men and women in the program. Some take part in the weekly socialization hour made possible by a telephone conference call hookup; others are members of a chess club that also meets weekly through the conference call arrangement.

Many are involved with painting and sculpture under the supervision of an art therapist assigned to the program. One woman is being taught conversational Spanish by a volunteer instructor who comes to her house regularly.

"Our goal is to engage clients in any number of special activities that will enrich their daily lives so they are no longer spectators but are brought back into the mainstream of living," Rothman pointed out.

Every person who applies to the program is interviewed by a JCSLI social worker to evaluate interests and capabilities. A customized program of activities is then developed and brought into the home at a time most convenient for each client.

Disabled men and women between the ages of 21 and 64 are eligible. Most of those now in the program are in their 40s and 50s, suffering from such diseases as multiple sclerosis, muscular dystrophy, amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (Lou Gehrig's disease), Burgher's disease, rheumatoid arthritis and strokes.

"These are relatively young men and women who face a future severely limited by chronic illness," Rothman said. "At a prime time of life they are dealing with an unexpected disability. The emotional backlash is enormous. The elderly more or less resign themselves to illness as a natural consequence of their age. Our clients are still struggling to adjust."

Volunteers contribute to the operation of the program by serving as visitors and shoppers for the homebound. One edits a newsletter that goes out to clients and to which they contribute.

One volunteer gives instruction in needlepoint and another teaches sewing. Several spend their time on the telephone trying to discover local resources that will answer special requests from clients.

A barber and a beautician are available to the homebound, many of whom express concern about their appearance.

"Maintaining self-esteem is essential to morale," Rothman noted, "and so we consider beauty care not only a legitimate request, but one that is quite important for general well-being."

Counseling is offered in selected instances. Among the new activities being investigated for the chronically ill are the setting up of aquariums, plant growing and a lecture series to go out to clients via a telephone conference call.

Parachuting Is Just Plane Fun To Champ

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

She plays the organ and piano and has a degree in psychology, but 24-year-old Debby Schmidt's thrills come from falling out of airplanes. A parachutist, she has made about 1,800 freefall jumps.

Last year she was Women's National Champion and this year she was acclaimed Women's National Accuracy Champion. She is preparing to compete with other members of the 10-women, 10-men, U.S. National Parachute Team at the world parachuting jumps in Rome.

"I have a good chance; one reason, I'm at the field 12 to 15 hours a day, jumping six to nine times," she explained, adding that "our team is a lot stronger than it has been in recent years."

The first woman to break a national record of 10 dead centers — the target area on the ground is four inches in diameter — Debby explains that "freefall is where you are totally away from the airplane flying by yourself and pulling your own ripcord as opposed to the automatic pullout used by the army." In the United States "you can't go higher than 15, 000 feet without oxygen though," she explained.

"Parachute jumping must be done where the weather is good," observed Debby, who jumps with the team at Raiford, N.C. "Florida or Arizona are ideal climates and I could probably jump 360 days a year in those states, but North Carolina is good except maybe for January, when it may be cloudy or a little cold."

She lives nearby in a trailer because of its convenience. Being near the field is all that matters, she says. She doesn't see much of the trailer, since she's away from it at least 12 hours a day.

She didn't get into parachute jumping as a "women's lib thing," she insists. She is "not much of a women's libber" because she doesn't have time. But she likes "to help women get ahead."

In addition to winning international medals, in 1972 she was the first woman to win a national collegiate medal, a gold one, and it is one of her two favorite awards, she says. The other is the dead center accuracy award which is based on style (gymnastics) and accuracy — the person closest to the center in a specified number of jumps wins. She has had 10 out of 10 dead centers.

Debby has a BA from Southern Illinois University and began parachuting at Joliet Junior College. Only four girls were involved that year, but it has become popular, and there are "quite a few into it now," she says.

"It really began opening up for women after World War II — and there are a number of women paratroopers at Fort Benning. Women who compete abroad are really goodwill emissaries in a sense. Just meeting and competing with such people is a great advantage in one's life. It builds your character and personality and widens your horizons. I know it has done that for me."

To support her exhilarating sport Debby works part time three months a year, sometimes in restaurants as a cocktail waitress or for her parents at their liquor store. The team exists mostly on donations made to it through the U.S. Parachute Association's team fund — "we're always trying to raise money," she says.

Members of the women's team, ranging in age from 21 to 44, have a wide variety of interests with degrees in art, education and science and with hobbies ranging from raising Siberian huskies, show horses and Siamese cats to scuba diving, gymnastics, gardening and football.

They include a physicist, a French instructor and a government analyst. One is in the Engagement Announced

MISS JOANNE RAY BULOW... is the daughter of Mrs. Nancy Bulow of Ayden, who announces her engagement to Robert Stephen Venters, son of Mrs. Dorothy Venters of Ayden. The wedding will take place in December.

New Members Enrolled

Greenville Chapter No. 1308, Women of the Moose, enrolled two new members at a meeting Thursday night at the Moose Temple.

Mrs. Darlene Peszko, chairman of the Publicity Committee, was in charge of the chapter night program. She outlined plans for the committee's fund-raising project, the sale of Honey Hats, explaining the origin and use of the all-weather hat.

The new members enrolled were Mrs. Pamela Cooke and Miss Martha Keth Karachun. Following the meeting, refreshments were served.

Cooking Is Fun

COME FOR DESSERT!
Fresh Fruit Compote
Lemon Sponge Cake
LEMON SPONGE CAKE
Inspired by an Italian recipe.

1 cup sifted cake flour
½ teaspoon salt
6 large eggs
2 teaspoons grated lemon rind
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 cup confectioners' sugar

Sift together the flour and salt; pour back into sifter; reserve. In the large bowl of an electric mixer, at high speed, beat together the eggs, lemon rind and lemon juice until soft peaks form — 15 to 18 minutes. Gradually beat in sugar. Gradually sift flour mixture over egg mixture, beating it in at low speed as you do so. Turn into a greased and floured 9 by 9 by 1¼-inch cake pan. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until cake springs back when lightly touched on top — 40 minutes. Let stand on wire rack until cold. Ease from pan. Split into 2 layers; sandwich these together with a lemon filling and sprinkle top with extra confectioners' sugar.

real estate business; another member of the team, Cheryl Stearns of Albuquerque, N.M., is a commercial pilot. Joan Williams of Minneapolis, who is a grandmother, is married to an army major, also a parachutist.

"My boyfriend is a parachutist and I'll probably marry a parachutist," Debby declared. "The sport limits your friendships — 99 per cent of my friends are parachutists. The chances of ever meeting someone else are pretty slim," she commented. But it doesn't seem to bother her at all.

Medical Professor Needs Help As A Problem Drinker

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I have been reading you for 20 years and have used your common-sense answers to some of life's knottiest problems in teaching my students. (I am a professor in a medical school.)
I have been very successful in the field of mental health, but I can do for others what I can't do for myself.

My problem is one of alcoholism and there is no relief in sight. Your article about the man whose sister got drunk and telephoned him at all hours of the night hit home with me because I've done that hundreds of times. I would hope that the sober man would show some compassion for his alcoholic sister because I know so well the hell she lives in.
Abby, have any of your readers had a successful escape from alcoholism?

LIVING, BUT DEAD

DEAR LIVING: Yes! And the highest rate of successes has been with those who have sought help through Alcoholics Anonymous. (And for the spouse or friend of the alcoholic, Al-Anon, and for the children, Alateen.) I know I am beginning to sound like a broken record, but I cannot say enough for this wonderful non-profit organization.

There are chapters in nearly every city, and they're listed in your telephone directory. If you've given them a try and failed, try again. It's no crime to fail—only to quit trying.

DEAR ABBY: When I travel, I like to take my dog with me, which presents a problem because not all hotels allow dogs.

I recently stopped at a hotel where I was made welcome with my pet, and I saw this framed "notice" hanging in the lobby. It tickled me and if it tickles you, maybe you'll run it in your column.

"Dogs are welcome in this hotel. We never had a dog that smoked in bed and set fire to the blankets. We never had a dog who stole our towels, played the TV too loud or had a noisy fight with his traveling companion. We never had a dog that got drunk and broke up the furniture. So if your dog can vouch for you, you're welcome, too."

A waterspout is a tornado that forms or passes over a body of water.

DOG LOVER

DEAR DOG LOVER: I've been tickled by a version of that notice, but in case some readers haven't, I'll run it. Thanks for a well-deserved tribute to man's best friend.

DEAR ABBY: I met a very attractive, eligible widower last winter, and we've been keeping steady company since. My only complaint is the way he keeps talking all the time about Mildred, his deceased wife. I never talk about my deceased husband. Outside of that, he is a decent man, and we get along just fine.

He has asked to marry me, but this is the way he proposed to me: "How would you like to take Mildred's place?"

UNDECIDED

DEAR UNDECIDED: If he has a sense of humor, tell him that since Mildred is in the cemetery, you don't want to take her place. But if he wants a new life and a new wife, you'll consider it—providing he quits talking about Mildred.

Coffee Hour Held By Club

An informational coffee sponsored by the Junior Woman's Club was held Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Joe Gray.

The purpose of the coffee was to acquaint women with the work of the club.

Mrs. Skip Collier, club president, gave a history of the club and discussed the different areas of work.

Guests attending were Mrs. Mary Votecky, Mrs. Trudy Bowen, Ms. Lee Masten, Mrs. Carl Maxon, Mrs. Donna Blase and Mrs. Mary Carroway.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Have you ever seen that insurance commercial where the husband and wife arrive home only to discover their house has been burgled? As the flashing red lights of the police cruiser silhouette them in the darkness, the man turns to his half-numb wife and says, "It's was everything we had."

We've just sent another child off to college and we look the same way. If he ever plugs in all the appliances he took at the same time, he will plunge Los Angeles into total darkness. We can understand ripping off the staples: clock, radio, hair dryer, records, luggage, night stands, tennis rackets, skis, backpacks, tape recorder, typewriter and television set. What we can't understand is his sudden fascination with things he never used at home.

Bicycle: A seven-letter obscene word meaning, "You mean I don't get the car?" This has been sitting in a corner of the garage gathering dust for three years. The bicycle was put to stud after our son revealed he was the only teenager in North America who had not developed an accelerator foot.

14 towels: We didn't think he knew what they were. Someone must tell him they're not disposable, but after being scooped up off the floor can be laundered and used time and time again.

Dictionary: We would never have guessed his quest to be understood. For the last four years, he has limited his vocabulary to one-word-fits-all: gross. This applies to food, surroundings, vacations, people, teachers, studies, car, allowances, records, and his basic philosophy.

Glasses: This is encouraging. The last time he dug them out was when he wanted to see something.

Shirt without a message on it:

COLLEGE BOUND

CORSICANA, Tex. (UPI) — College-bound high school graduates from Corsicana receive some extra community help in meeting their expenses. Since 1924, citizens from this northeast Texas town have given $130,000 worth of scholarships — ranging from $100 to $800 — to needy students.

This could mean one of two things: he is discarding the things of his childhood and entering an adult phase of dress... or he needs rags to stuff in around his stereo in packing.

A set of sheets: The thought is there, but we've got to get through to him that they do not reproduce themselves. "Isn't there some relief program to prevent this?" I asked my husband as we surveyed our bare domain.

"Yes," he pondered. "I think it's called 'birth control.'"

Many Factors Contribute To Pricing Of Homes

By JOHN C. HART,
President
National Association of Home Builders

Some of the underlying causes in the increases in the cost of housing need to be clarified. Many families are being priced out of the housing market, and there are no simple, quick means to relieve the situation. Involved are several factors — an uncertain economy, inflation, surging land costs, governmental regulation and red tape. Not the least of these is the governmental aspect.

The hard costs (labor and material costs) today account for less than half the sales price of a typical single family home, having dropped from 54% in 1970. The major reason for this change in ratio has been the sharp upturn in the price of raw land and land development costs, which together account for about 21% of the total cost of a new home today. In the 1970-74 period, land costs increased 61%.

High financing costs must be mentioned. Because the typical builder is a small businessman he must borrow construction money at rates much higher than the prime rate. During the 1974-75 money crunch builders were paying as high as 17% interest on their construction loans. In the 1970-74 period alone, construction financing costs for builders jumped an astronomical 168%. This goes into the price of the house.

A prime culprit in the scene is over-regulation by government, Federal, state and local. For example, communities impose restrictive zoning ordinances (large lot zoning and minimum floor requirements, bans against multifamily housing, etc.) in an attempt to slow or stop new development. The result is to curtail home construction and make it more expensive.

These restrictive zoning ordinances or bans against additional sewer hookups push suburban sprawl even further into outlying districts where new sewer systems, utilities, schools, roads and other municipal services must be built from scratch. Obviously, it is much less expensive to build a new home in a developed community where sewer and other municipal facilities already have been built and can accommodate additional growth.

Then there's governmental overlapping which adds red tape, causes delay, and adds to cost. Building codes are designed to protect the health and safety of consumers. NAHB agrees with that principle wholeheartedly. But today many homes must meet not just one building standard, but sometimes two or three. FHA-financed homes, for instance, must conform to the federal government's Minimum Property Standards as well as strong local or state building code.

A builder must wrestle with such matters as zoning ordinances with minimum floor area and lot size requirements, tree ordinances, site plan reviews, environmental impact statements; subdivision development standards such as road pavement and sidewalk widths, storm water management programs and water and sewer system requirements. Then there are the grading and sediment control regulations and arbitrarily imposed development and processing fees.

One unnecessary regulation may add only $50 to the price of a home. But 20 such regulations imposed over a period of years can easily add thousands of dollars to the price.

The average homebuilder is a small businessman who constructs less than 20 homes a year. He has little or no staff. But it requires experts, lawyers, and others to cope with the massive paper work and red tape resulting from ever-expanding governmental regulation. These costs must be passed on to the homebuyer.

Consumers have a right to be concerned, even as builders are concerned, over rising housing costs. Help may be on the way but it will be a long time before its effects will be felt. Legislation has been proposed to force congressional action on basic regulatory reform — a bill which would require Congress within four years to complete reform of Federal regulation in many areas, including construction. What with the elections this year, it is not likely that this legislation will get off the ground very soon. However, I believe that citizens should be alert to the critical problem of over-regulation. It affects their pocketbooks and their way of life and when they understand that, then they can tell the politicians how they feel about it.

Sensible Growth Is The Way To Achieve Housing Goals

Various studies have concluded that the nation requires between 2.3 and 2.9 million homes each year in order to provide decent housing for all Americans. The need is to replace existing substandard housing as well as the need to provide new housing units for the number of annual new household formations.

The National Association of Home Builders has asked the Administration to help realize a goal of 1.8 million units in this year—a goal which NAHB says is both realistic and noninflationary.

The conflict between those seeking to fulfill the nation's housing needs and those seeking to increase environmental controls is having a serious effect on the nation's economic growth and its housing supply. These conflicting views are actually reconcilable. Both objectives must be realized if we, as a nation, are to maintain and improve upon our current standard of living. All too often, however, the emphasis in a community is too heavily placed in favor of the environmental objectives. When this happens, families in need of housing are deprived. Housing becomes scarce, prices soar. The effect is felt not only now but in the future. Where will the children live when they grow up?

To meet this situation, the National Association of Home Builders is fighting for a concept called Sensible Growth. Sensible Growth calls for a balance among the environmental, economic, and social requirements of people. The Sensible Growth concept encourages communities to develop and implement growth patterns that would be beneficial to all residents. By so doing, each locality, each region, each state then contributes to a national balance and the meeting of our national objectives.

Sensible Growth is planning today for tomorrow's needs. Planning which places arbitrary limits on the supply of housing or excessive development costs on new construction and land development is counterproductive and not responsive to this nation's need for housing. Planning should account for all geographic areas (urban, suburban, and rural) of a community or region. It should provide for the development of low, moderate, middle, and upper income housing. And it should consider natural resources, parks and recreation, community facilities and transportation.

The process begins by developing a comprehensive community plan. This community plan should establish general policies and objectives to guide the physical development of the community and examine any specific areas of concern. While this process is going on it should not be used as an excuse to declare temporary moratoria.

The comprehensive community plan should include a strong housing element that assesses the present and future housing needs of the community and the region. It should review present and future needs for transportation; community services such as police, fire, education, health and welfare; water, sewer and storm drainage facilities; parks, recreation facilities and open space; and environmentally critical and/or impacted areas.

The community plan can work to the benefit of all residents if it is developed and implemented in a common sense way. Thus, each community will not only resolve its own problems, but also contribute to the achievement of our nation's objectives: "a decent home in a suitable living environment for all Americans."

HOW Provides Protection To New Home Buyers

Is consumerism dying as an issue? At least not with the consumer. Current crises—economy, energy, world politics—have pushed consumerism out of the headlines and the evening news reports on TV. But none of these things has made the consumer forget.

In recent years, he's learned that he does have a voice. He can and should expect a quality product for the money he spends. He exerts his presence when he's not satisfied. And he knows he has recourse through the media, and ultimately, the courts, for satisfaction. As a result, many industries have come to realize that good consumerism means good business.

Since the largest purchase most Americans will ever make in a lifetime is a new home, leaders in the building industry realized that buyers need more assurance on this product than any other buy. In response to this need, the home building industry has developed an innovative, industry-wide, 10-year protection which is currently available in 39 states.

It's called the Home Owners Warranty program, HOW. Sponsored by the National Association of Home Builders, HOW is the result of extensive study and developmental work by industry leaders and consumer representatives.

HOW provides the home buyer with a solid written warranty from his builder, national insurance which backs the builder's warranty, and extended insurance coverage on major structural defects.

Specifically, that means that the builder warrants in writing against defects caused by faulty workmanship or materials for one year. The builder's written warranty continues for the second year to protect against defects in the wiring, piping and cut work in the home's electrical, plumbing, heating and cooling systems, and against major structural defects.

Home buyers will probably agree that's pretty good coverage right there. But there's more. Backing up the builders' written warranty is warranty insurance. That means that if for any reason the builder cannot or will not perform his HOW warranty obligation, HOW's national insurance plan assumes the responsibility.

And on top of that, the home is directly insured for the next eight years against major structural defects by HOW's national insurance.

And the HOW home buyer knows right from the outset exactly what is covered and what isn't. When he buys a HOW home, he receives several documents which detail the plan's coverage and itemize a signed copy of the warranty agreement between him and his builder, insurance papers which confirm that the home is enrolled in the HOW national insurance program, and a HOW Consumer Information Booklet which explains the program, including procedures for conciliation and arbitration of disagreements over defects.

Third-party solution of disagreements between the buyer and the builder is another safeguard the consumer has with HOW. The process is simple, and at the same time, very effective.

First of all, the buyer goes directly to his builder with complaints. If he's not satisfied with the builder with complaints. If he's not satisfied with the builder's response, he puts his complaint in writing to the HOW council and pays a $25 deposit which is refunded if the complaint is found to have merit. The purpose of the $25 fee is to prevent frivolous complaints. However, it is not necessary for the problem to be ultimately resolved in the consumer's favor in order for him to get his deposit back.

A conciliator will be appointed by the HOW council. His role will be to attempt to get the buyer and builder talking to each other so that they can resolve the problem themselves. He may talk to them individually. He will probably bring them together. He'll look at the items in the home involved in the complaint. He may ask everyone concerned to meet with him at the home. But his main function is to help the parties define the real issues in the dispute and to get them talking to each other.

In most cases, this step in HOW's complaint-handling procedure will resolve the problem to everyone's satisfaction. But if either party is still not happy with the outcome, he can request arbitration through the American Arbitration Association. The requesting party pays a $75 fee which is refundable either in whole or part at the discretion of the arbitrator. The arbitration fee is generally either shared by the parties or assessed on the party clearly at fault in the case.

With the development of this unique new Home Owners Warranty program, builders across the country have taken progressive action in the area of consumer protection. And consumers concerned about getting additional assurance on this largest purchase of their lives will look for the HOW protection before they buy.

Fleming and Associates was founded in 1973 under a general partnership comprised of Van C. Fleming, Jr., Van C. Fleming, III, and J. Russell Fleming.

We are presently involved in construction and resale of single family homes, rentals, commercial construction, and development of raw land into subdivisions. Since our origination of Fleming & Associates, we have developed Commerce Street in Brentwood Subdivision, spot built homes in Belvedere, Westhaven, College Court, Tucker Estates, Brookhaven, and many other subdivisions in the city and surrounding communities. Also, presently we are developing Deerfield S/D in Ayden. We are an approved builder under VA/FHA and Farmers Home Administration. Among our many accomplishments over the past three years, we feel becoming a licensed general contractor is a step in a progressive direction. We have a growing concern and plan to continue to provide quality built homes for our clients. We not only custom build but also build Kingsberry pre-cut homes, which can be as small as 1000 sq. ft. or a size to fit your needs.

Fleming & Associates presently consists of Van C. Fleming, Jr., Van C. Fleming, III, Walter House—Sales Manager, Margaret Capwell—Sales Representative, Jim Warren—Construction Supervisor, and Trisha West—Office Manager.

What 500 New Homes Means To The Local Economy

Housing is one of the nation's basic industries which has a vast ripple effect throughout the economy. New Housing starts translate into jobs — not only in construction but also in other related industries — as well as new tax revenues for local, state and federal governments.

How does new housing construction affect our community?

The production of, say, 500 new homes and apartment units in the metropolitan area of Greenville will add more than $18 million to the local economy.

The hard cost of building 500 units runs about $11 million in materials and labor. An estimated 3,000 component parts go into today's averaged sized home.

An estimated 750 jobs are created because each housing unit built generates about 1.5 man-years of employment in construction, supplying real estate, and other housing related industries.

Out of these 750 jobs, 250 of them would be filled by carpenters, bricklayers and other skilled and unskilled workers in the construction industry. The average union construction wage throughout the country is $7.50 an hour. At full employment, this adds up to more than $15,000 annually per worker. Thus, the construction of 500 units generates $3.75 million in construction wages.

What happens to this $3.75 million? Much of it goes right back into the local economy as these workers buy groceries, homes, cars, furniture and other goods and services. Another large slice, about $450,000 is deducted for federal taxes and about $220,000 is pumped into the Social Security system. State and local governments also collect their share of taxes.

These new jobs also help reduce unemployment in the construction industry, where the unemployment rate is more than double the national jobless rate. So the federal and state governments save thousands of dollars in unemployment compensation and food stamp payments.

In addition to the $3.75 million in labor costs and the $5.5 million in material costs, an estimated $2.5 million would be spent to buy the land for the 500 new homes. Another $600,000 would go for site improvements.

Then there's the more than $260,000 that the local municipality would collect annually in real estate taxes — money that is funnelled into the local treasury to pay for education and other city services.

The new home buyers would circulate an additional $1.4 million annually to the banking community in mortgage interest and $50,000 in property insurance. Furthermore, an estimated $750,000 is paid by builders and buyers to cover closing costs.

Housing production also stimulates sales at local retail stores. The 500 new home buyers would spend an estimated $1.75 million for new appliances, furniture, drapes, garden equipment and other items to furnish and decorate their new homes.

Altogether, there is about $18 million in new jobs, goods and services generated by the production of 500 new homes.

The Best Time To Buy A New Home? Now, Of Course

When is the best time to buy a new home?

- A. Today.
- B. Next year.
- C. Last year.
- D. Never.

The answer to this multiple choice question, according to most real estate expert, is "last year." Since you can't possibly do that, then the next best answer is "today."

The facts speak for themselves. If you had bought a new home in 1975, it would have cost about 9% less than it does today, more than offsetting last year's slightly higher mortgage interest rates. In addition, consider all the tax deductions you missed out on by not buying a home.

For example, mortgage interest payments on a 25-year, $30,000 mortgage, at 9% interest, totals about $2,500 during the first year after purchase. Add this $2,500 deduction to the deduction allowed for real estate taxes, and consumers — most of them for the first time — would be in a position to itemize their deductions on their state and federal tax returns, which can translate into even bigger tax savings.

This tax deduction for interest and real estate taxes continues for the life of the mortgage. Of course, the tax savings are the greatest during the first five years of the mortgage when about 90% of your monthly mortgage payment goes to pay off interest, and therefore, is tax deductible.

What about prices? Well, housing prices have gone up about 9% a year for the past decade. And there's no indication that this upward trend in prices will be reversed. That means that today's $35,000 home will probably cost about $38,150 next year.

There are a number of other reasons why 1976 is an extremely good year to buy a home. Savings and loan associations and mutual savings banks — which provide more than half the mortgage loans made in the U.S. each year — have a record supply of money on hand for mortgage lending. Interest rates also are down from their peak levels of 1974-75. It must be remembered that during the mortgage money crunch of 1974-75 is was almost impossible for moderate income families to qualify for mortgage loans without a substantial down payment.

Consumers must also realize that the only other alternative to buying a home or condominium is renting. And the rental picture is bleak. Apartment construction in most areas is at a near stand-still, down some 75% nationally from its production levels of 1973. But the demand for rental units continues to build as the children of the post World War II baby boom reached adulthood and start forming families of their own. Whenever there is high demand for a product but a low supply, the price of that product is naturally going to go up. And that's exactly what's happening in the rental market in most areas. So for renters the outlook for the next few years is higher rents and fewer units to choose from.

New RESPA Law Helps Buyers Understand Settlement Procedures

Homebuyers now have a new law intended to help them understand the home buying process, especially settlement procedures and charges.

Under the modified Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (RESPA) which went into effect July 1, lenders are required to distribute a booklet prepared by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) which explains in simple language the settlement procedures and costs involved in buying a new or used home.

The new RESPA law also requires:

Lenders provide "good faith estimates" of charges the borrower is likely to incur at settlement, other than escrows for taxes and insurance and advance hazard insurance premiums. The good faith estimates must be "clear and concise" and must be mailed to buyers within three days of written application. Where specific settlement attorneys or others are required, the lender must state it on the good faith estimate.

Settlement statement must be inspected by the buyer at least one business day before settlement, with the statement containing as much information as has been provided up until that time.

—Prohibition of kickbacks or unearned fees.

—Prohibition of required escrows for taxes, insurance and other charges in excess of the amount needed to make payments plus two months' deposits.

However, the amended RESPA law applies only to first mortgages. It does not apply to mortgages on property in excess of 25 acres or home improvement loans.

A New Home Is Still Best Of Investments

Where should smart consumers invest their money these days?

The stock market, mutual funds, tax exempt bonds, savings accounts, life insurance policies — the list is almost endless.

But before you get lured into one of these investments, take a look right in your own backyard. That's right. If you don't already own a home you better start thinking about buying one because that is by far the safest and most profitable investment a family could ever make.

In the past 10 years, housing prices have gone up about 9% annually. That's a 9% return on your investment a year. In some metropolitan areas housing prices have actually doubled in the past five years with families buying a $25,000 home in 1970 and selling it for $50,000 five years later. That's one way to beat inflation.

In addition, homeowners qualify for some real tax benefits. Homeowners are allowed to deduct both real estate taxes and mortgage interest payments from their state and federal income tax returns. In the first five years of a mortgage, interest accounts for about 90% of a family's monthly mortgage, interest accounts for about 90% of a family's monthly mortgage payment, all of which is deductible from state and federal taxes. For example, interest payments on a 25-year, $35,000 mortgage, at 9% interest, amount to about $3,100 in tax deduction in the first year alone.

Furthermore, if you sell your home, any profit you might make will not be taxed if you reinvest it in another home within 18 months.

Here's another way to compute the tax savings and investment benefits of buying your own home. Let's say you have a monthly mortgage payment of $235 on a $35,000 home (based on a 9% 25-year mortgage with a 20% down payment). Real estate taxes, insurance and maintenance costs bring the total monthly bill to $325. In the first year of ownership, the income tax savings on interest and real estate taxes and the equity gained in the home amount to $75, dropping the net monthly cost to $250. Where can you rent a $35,000 home for $250 a month?

Energy-Saving Tips For The Winter Months

With winter just around the corner, the Greenville Home Builders Association has prepared a list of energy-saving tips to help homeowners reduce their monthly utility bills and save energy during the heating season.

Heating System—About 60% of the energy consumed in homes is used for heating and cooling systems. Clean heat exchanger surface in the furnace regularly. Dust and products of combustion accumulate on surfaces and interfere with good heat transfer. Air adjustment should be checked periodically by a service professional. Without sufficient air, fuel will not burn completely. An expert should also clean and adjust the entire heating system once a year. Air filters should be cleaned or replaced on a regular basis.

Thermostat Setting — Set the thermostat back at night. Each 1 degree reduction saves about 1% in fuel. But do not lower the temperature so much that your system must work overly long to reheat your home in the morning. While away from home for an extended period, you should set your thermostat at 55 degrees. But don't turn off heat completely because the pipes might freeze. During the daytime close dampers in bedrooms and other rooms you don't use. Clean thermostats once a year to remove dust.

Registers—Obstacles such as furniture, drapes or pictures in front of heating units or registers block path of hot air and reduce efficiency of heating system.

Humidity Level — A properly humidified home is as comfortable at 68 degrees as a dry one at 72 degrees because our bodies retain heat in high humidity. Dry air, on the other hand, absorbs moisture from skin at a rapid rate and produces a chilling effect which can only be offset by increasing air temperature. Thus a humidifier is a wise investment because you can reduce the house temperature and save energy. A pan of water strategically located near a heating outlet will moisturize the air if a humidifier is not available. House plants also give off moisture.

Fireplaces — Fireplaces as a heating source are very deceptive. A large flow of air is generated through the hearth and up the chimney by a burning fire. Much of this air already has been heated by the furnace, which means that although the fireplace is heating the immediate air, it is also cooling the rest of the house by expelling warm air up the chimney. This energy loss can be reduced by lowering the thermostat and closing doors to the rest of the house while the fireplace is in use.

Fireplace Damper — Close the fireplace damper when not in use. If the damper is left open, a good deal of hot air escapes up the chimney and your heating system is forced to work overtime.

Hot Water Heater — The hot water heater is the second largest user of energy in the home. It should be sized to meet needs. Maintaining too much hot water wastes energy. Insulating hot water pipes from the source to the point of use will decrease energy loss. Set your hot water thermostat no higher than 140 degrees. When away from home for extended periods, the water heater should be turned down or off. If the gas pilot light is turned off, it should be done according to the manufacturer's instructions.

Window Shades — Closed drapes, blinds and shades over large glass areas can reduce heat loss through windows during winter. On sunny winter days, however, drapes, blinds and shades should be opened to let the sun warm the house. Draperies should be insulated or lined.

Caulking and Weather Stripping — Cracks can form around a window and door frames and where wood meets metal or masonry. Air leakage creates cold drafts. A standard exterior door which has a 1/8 inch crack around it loses heat through a total area of 30 square inches. This is equivalent to having a 5 1/2" by 5 1/2" hole in your wall. Keep weather stripping and caulking around windows and doors in good repair to reduce air leakage.

Storm Windows — Heat loss through doors and windows can be cut by more than 50% through installation of storm doors and windows.

Real Estate Facts

Rising building costs and inflation have made it difficult for some Americans to realize their dream of home ownership. A structurally sound but older home in need of rehabilitation may provide the housing answer for some.

The obvious advantage is a lower price. In addition, renovation can be accomplished as funds become available for the work. It's in your own best interests to seek the aid of a professional, a Realtor, to help you find a good buy in such a home.

Is rehabilitation a good move? If the house meets the family's needs and if, as a rule of thumb, the cost of the house plus the cost of rehabilitation does not exceed the fair market value of other homes in the neighborhood, it's more than likely a worthwhile investment.

Before running to the bank for a mortgage, inspect the house carefully to see if renovation is feasible. It might be wise to engage professional help to evaluate certain aspects of the house. Some real estate appraisers and contractors will provide this kind of assistance. A few of the areas that bear inspection, particularly in regards to a wood-frame house, are listed here.

* The foundation—Although a small amount of settling is expected, uneven settling may distort the entire frame of the house. A new foundation might be required, making the entire project unfeasible.

* Walls—Check for open cracks. They tend to get worse as time goes by.

* Damp basements—If dampness is caused by a high water table, it may be very difficult to overcome the problem. Otherwise, proper grading should help.

* Frame—Look for foundation failure evidenced by such things as a sagging roof line, eaveline distortion or even loose-fitting window frames. Check for wood decay caused by either dampness or termite damage. Check for sagging floor supports and rafters. If floor sag can be visually observed, it should be considered excessive.

* Exterior—Most problems in this area are caused by excessive moisture. Look for cracks and decay. Lack of proper roof overhang sometimes contributes to excessive moisture problems on the outside. The lack of a vapor barrier inside the walls leads to condensation within the walls. Houses built before the mid-1930's rarely have vapor barriers.

* Windows—If you have intentions of replacing any windows, measure them first to see if they are of standard size. If not standard, reframing or a new sash, which could prove costly, might be required.

* Roof—Look for deterioration or wear. Wear may extend through to the roof boards. Wood shingles should be replaced if many are warped, broken or upturned.

* Doors—Look for decay around the base. Doors should open and close without sticking.

Architect's Rendering of Windy Ridge Townhouses by Lanco Realty, Inc.

Problems caused by a foundation that has settled unevenly may necessitate reframing of doors.

* Plaster—Minor cracks are expected. However, if large holes or large cracks are visible, a new wall covering might be required.

* Floors—Wood floors, if in good shape, can be refinished. Make certain they are thick enough for sanding. Thin floors have wide cracks. Repair of tile floors usually means an entire recovering since old tile tends to discolor over time and cannot be matched with new tile.

* Plumbing—Check for adequate pressure, leaks and rust. Make certain that the water heater has adequate capacity for your needs.

* Heating—The heating system may be outdated. Central heating is preferred today. Professional help may be needed to evaluate the furnace.

This list represents only a brief glimpse at the areas that should be inspected. The arrangement of the rooms as well as the overall appearance of the house should also be considered before making a final decision.

It is a good idea to remember that a rehabilitation project takes time as well as money. If rehabilitation appeals to you, ask a Realtor to help you find the right house. A properly renovated house can pay off in big dividends if you decide to sell it later.

Builders Support Energy Conservation Programs

Three years have passed since the Arab oil producing nations gave America its first taste of what it's like when energy gets scarce and expensive. Yet despite this painful lesson in energy economics the United States today is importing a greater percentage of foreign oil than it was just prior to the oil embargo and consumption is up as a result of recent consumer trends, including the return to bigger, gas guzzling cars.

This ever increasing appetite for fuel has caused a great deal of concern among home builders as well as energy experts from both private and public sectors, including Dr. Robert C. Seamans, Jr., administrator of the Energy Research and Development Administration.

One of the fundamental issues for this generation is that we must learn to conserve what energy resources we have left or "this entire planet will be out of energy before we have been able to develop alternative energy technologies," Seamans told builders at the 1976 Convention/Exposition of the National Association of Home

New Home in Tucker Estates by Aldridge & Southerland

Builders (NAHB).

Naturally builders are alarmed because if the conservation effort fails we may soon see the day when utility bills are higher than mortgage payments, if indeed there is any energy left to go around to heat, cool and light American homes.

Furthermore, builders believe that this energy conservation ethic must begin at home because 32% of all the energy consumed in the U.S. annually goes for heating, cooling, lighting and running appliances in homes and buildings.

Besides supporting various conservation efforts, the 78,000-member trade association of the housing industry, the NAHB, is investigating alternative forms of energy, such as solar energy, that some day might be used to heat and cool homes. NAHB's Research Foundation is also testing new energy saving building systems and materials. With this information being passed on to builders throughout the country, new homes on the market today are more energy efficient than those that were built just a few years ago.

NAHB is also supporting federal legislation that would give a tax credit to homeowners who add insulation to their homes. At the local and state level, NAHB is supporting efforts to modernize building codes that will allow builders to use the most efficient, energy saving materials and design approaches available.

There's no place like home for barbeque entertaining

Once recognized as the travelers of the world, Americans now tend to stay much closer to home. The current state of the economy, coupled with concerns about energy, have combined to change our lifestyles.

Home owners and apartment dwellers alike are creating and using home recreation centers for their leisure time, regardless of whether the activity is centered on a tiny apartment balcony or in a spacious backyard. The new focal point is the patio area, totally equipped for outdoor living and entertaining.

The patio scene

With increasing frequency, gas and electric barbeques are an important element in the patio scene. Outdoor gas and electric grills are both cleaner and more dependable than charcoal models: any backyard barbeque chef can cook with gas or electric-controlled heat without the problems associated with charcoal. Also, gas and electric grills are self-cleaning — another popular feature with consumers.

Automatic enjoyment

To make outdoor cooking even more enjoyable, Charmglow, the leading marketer of outdoor gas and electric barbeques, has introduced "Charmlite," the industry's first self-contained electronic ignition system.

Designed to eliminate lighting problems associated with matches and uncooperative weather conditions, the Charmlite can be adapted to upgrade virtually any existing full-size Charmglow gas barbeque.

"It permits you to light your grill without matches... without any trouble," says Nat Stoddard, Charmglow's vice president of marketing services. "Just turn the knob to 'High' or 'Medium,' push a button and your grill automatically ignites."

The electronic ignition unit is pilotless and should operate for up to a full year on one "D" cell alkaline battery.

Waiting for Housing Prices To Come Down?

HE WHO HESITATES pays more. If you have kidded yourself into thinking that prices of new homes are going to drop significantly in the foreseeable future, then it's time you faced...

The Plain Facts About Today's Market

In the last 10 years, the median price of single-family homes has soared from $18,000 to $43,500—an increase of 9 percent each year.

Costs of land, labor, materials, and financing—all are climbing and adding to the price pressure with each passing day.

The babies resulting from World War II marriages are now marrying and starting families of their own. Result: redoubled demand for housing on top of the unmet needs of normal population growth during the past several years.

WHY WAIT? BUY NOW...

and the increased valuation in both house and land will be your gain and not your loss.

At Today's Prices, Can A New Home Be A Bargain?

ALTHOUGH THE PRICES of new homes have been going up—just as prices of, say, color television sets or automobiles—a new home is still a...

Bargain...

Because, unlike the color television set or automobile, a new home does not depreciate. Real estate is generally regarded as the soundest investment you can make, because properly maintained property increases in value over the years.

Because, when you buy a car or color television set, the true annual interest rate on your loan will range between 12 and 24 percent. When you buy a new home, the true annual interest rate is precisely as stated on your contract. If it's a certain percent, that's the actual interest, which you pay for the life of the loan. It's a lower rate than you will pay to buy anything else.

Because living is better in a new home. On the average, new homes tend to be larger than previously existing homes. They contain more bedrooms, are more likely to be equipped with central air conditioning, and are generally sold with more equipment and appliances included in the sale price.

WHY WAIT? BUY NOW...

and the increased valuation in both house and land will be your gain and not your loss.

Stone, Susman Are Aviators

TOP PILOTS—Two of the hotshot pilots flying air charter assignments are Christopher Stone (Cass Garrett), left, and Todd Susman (Stan Lewis) premiering Friday, Sept. 17 in "Spencer's Pilots," (8-9 p.m.) new adventure series on CBS Channels 9. Also starring are Gene Evans as Spencer Aviation owner Spencer Parish, Margret Impeet as office manager and flyer Linda Dunn and Britt Leach as chief mechanic Mickey Wiggins.

Tune in to CBS-TV Friday, Sept. 17, at 8 p.m. and meet an exciting new twosome, "Spencer's Pilots." They're those modern-day adventurers of aviation, the charter pilots. Christopher Stone and Todd Susman star as Cass Garrett and Stan Lewis, who love the challenge of flying and the excitement of meeting new people. Their diverse assignments range from forest fire fighters, flight instructors and transporters of medical emergency cases, to criminal suspects and more routine charter passengers who bring them in contact with a broad spectrum of personalities.

Also starring in the new series is Gene Evans as Spencer Aviation owner Spencer Parish, a onetime Navy flight instructor whose gruff exterior masks a basically good nature and who probably still could out-fly his own pilots.

Susman and Stone had never met before being cast for "Spencer's Pilots." "Chris got his role first, then me," said Susman. "We hit it off right away, and we have yet to figure that out, because we are different."

Will they be the "Starsky & Hutch" of the air?

Stone laughed. "Who are they? Seriously, we'll have a different relationship than they portray. We will argue, and fight. Good friends do that now and then. We want to leave the police stations, and the hospitals, and the lawyers you see on TV now."

Both actors have familiarized themselves with the planes they will fly, and both hope to obtain their pilot's licenses. "We have to use special planes for the stunts, and Art Shool, who we think is the best in the world, is our stuntman," continued Stone.

"We will be shown getting in with him, but I don't even want to think about us being in the plane when he goes into those stalls and things. He's going to fly one right between two trees and blow the wings off."

Susman says that the show is for people who don't know anything about flying. "I honestly believe if we deliver it in such a way that the audience can believe it, we have a hit," he concluded.

Christopher Stone, 33, has had a thriving TV career with credits on numerous series, and made his film debut in the 1970 film, "The Grasshopper," with Jacqueline Bisset.

Twenty-nine-year-old Todd Susman has appeared in segments of "Room 22," Owen Marshall, Counselor-at-Law," "M*A*S*H," "Kojak" and a regular role on "The Bob Crane Show."

Dylan's Live Concert Airs

Doing a Rolling Thunder Revue concert for TV, according to Joan Baez, "was about the same as any other Rolling Thunder Concert, except for stepping over bodies holding cameras."

When Bob Dylan's touring entourage was taped for "Hard Rain" (Thursday, Sept. 14, 10 to 11 p.m. on NBC-TV), the idea was to capture a representative live concert in the Fort Collins, Colo. football stadium.

There were no extra rehearsals, no second takes, no special lights. The only difference was that, in order to provide as intimate a picture as possible, the principle cameramen were positioned on stage. And, as they used portable hand-held cameras rather than the usual bulky tripods, the cameramen were especially intrepid. In fact, they stood, squatted and sat fewer than five feet from Dylan and Baez — much closer than cameramen normally dare tread.

"Hard Rain" is a distinct change of pace for commercial television. The sponsor encouraged Dylan and his collaborators to present themselves as they saw fit, 'no holds barred.'

There are no hosts, no announcers. For the most part, there isn't even a stage on camera, or people's bodies — only faces. The faces, moreover, are frequently so close up that only details are visible — in particular, Bob Dylan's penetrating eyes, darting behind narrow slits, shooting open with startling intensity.

"I know Bob well enough to have realized that if I got too close he'd let me know, but even so it was edgy for awhile because I was sort of standing in the way," recalls Paul Goldsmith, the man whose body Joan Baez had to step over.

"Actually, I think that the way we shot made it much more relaxed for Bob. We weren't asking him to do anything for us. There were no special provisions, except for this guy — me — lurking around on stage."

Goldsmith and the three other cameramen didn't communicate with Dylan. They didn't have headphones to receive instructions from the director because there was no formal director sitting in a control booth monitoring the action.

"It's a risky thing doing a show like this," Michael Shamberg, one of the producers, reflected. "If something goes wrong, there are no second chances. Some of the shooting's inferior. But some of it's great. People will see Dylan the way he's never been seen before."

Unless, that is, like Paul Goldsmith you've spent four hours sticking a camera in Bob Dylan's face, and getting in the way of Joan Baez.

Musicals Presented

If you're a music lover, you'll not be spending much time away from your television set this week: there are three outstanding specials coming up that feature well-known stars of contemporary music. First up is "Hard Rain," which is Bob Dylan's first starring special for television airing Tuesday, Sept. 14 (10 to 11 p.m.) on NBC. Next is "Neil Sedaka Steppin' Out," slated for Friday, Sept. 17 (9 to 10 p.m.), again on NBC. Saturday, Sept. 18, beginning at 10 p.m., will be the "Rock Music Awards" on CBS.

"Hard Rain," produced under Dylan's total supervision, was taped in Colorado last spring during a four-and-a-half hour concert, part of a tour of the South and Southwest Dylan is making with his Rolling Thunder Review.

In addition to his solos, Dylan shares the stage with folk singers Joan Baez and Roger McGuinn. Dylan sings 11 songs, including four duets with Baez. There are no interruptions to the music — no announcer between songs, no talking by the performers.

Neil Sedaka, starring in his first American TV special, will be joined by David Brenner and Bette Midler. Also with Sedaka will be his 9-year-old son, Marc, who will 'host' the show, and 13-year-old daughter, Dara, who's to sing one of her father's songs.

Highlights of the show include two big production numbers involving dance interpretations of Sedaka's songs, which he plays and sings — "That's When the Music Takes Me," and a medley, "Solitaire," "Sad Eyes," and "The Hungry Years."

Alice Cooper, the flamboyant rock music star, will co-host the second annual "Rock Music Awards" with Diana Ross. The awards ceremony, honoring the foremost stars and creators from the world of rock music, will be presented live from the Hollywood Palladium.

Last year's event, at which 16 "Rocky" medallions were presented in as many categories, marked the first formal recognition of the progressive rock music industry in primetime television in a colorful ceremony that now becomes an annual event.

The "Rocky" is a classical winged and haloed figure cradling a whimsical guitar and poised against a psychedelic background, all on a circular medallion. The background depicts a rocket, representing the future; a moon and planetary shapes signifying energy; and clouds and a waterfall representing the natural environment.

The medallion has now joined that exclusive company of coveted symbols that represent excellence and recognition by one's peers in show business, like the Oscar, the Emmy and the Tony.

Is Host

Triple Emmy winner Lily Tomlin will pay a return visit to "NBC's Saturday Night" to headline the live comedy-variety series' first program on the 1976-77 season Sept. 18, 11:30 p.m. to 1 a.m. on Channel 7.

Miss Tomlin first hosted the show Nov. 22, 1975. Reviewing her performance, John J. O'Connor, writing in The New York Times, said: "Miss Tomlin was, of course, best, her sustained characterizations fitting the format brilliantly."

The Detroit-born Lily Tomlin, who came to national prominence as one of the stars of "Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In," won three Emmys as writer and star of her own television specials. Her first dramatic role in a motion picture — Robert Altman's "Nashville" in 1975 — earned her a Best Supporting Actress Oscar nomination. A major success as a recording artist as well, she won a 1971 Grammy Award for her album, "This Is a Recording."

Tomlin, who has appeared as a guest-host of "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson," was a guest-participant in another recent late-night program, "People," a special with a magazine format.

BOB DYLAN stars in his first special, "Hard Rain," which was taped live at a Colorado concert, on Tuesday, Sept. 14 (10-11 p.m.) on NBC Channels 6-7.

He Likes His Position

Most actors accept roles in daytime dramas - or any other production - for the sole purpose of furthering their theatrical career. But not Mart Hulsmit, who plays Dr. Ed Bauer on "The Guiding Light," seen weekdays on CBS.

"When I first accepted the role," he said candidly, "I did so with the intention of staying with it long enough to save up tuition for my daughters for college. Now I've done that, and for an actor to be able to have that security is rather comfortable."

Mart agrees that most actors and actresses in the soaps aspire for "higher heights," but he's content to stay where he is. "I think my acting ability has improved tremendously in the seven years I've been on 'Guiding Light.'"

Does he consider it just a steady job, or a learning process as well?

"It's obviously both," he replied, "and the volume of work that I've been required to turn out has made it very facile at making creative choices. Work becomes easier, perhaps even better because of it."

Mart feels that it takes a certain type of actor to be able to do soaps well. One reason is that it is difficult to sustain a character and to be able to do the work day in and day out without breaking down. "It's also difficult to have to give a performance with very little rehearsal."

He also says that working in front of a television camera is 'something else.' "The TV camera probably looks into a person's very being and offers it up to the viewer in an intimate manner that cannot be duplicated in any other way. Human behavior, every little mannerism, is captured, and it's a strange little machine. It sees dishonesty, it sees a bad performance and it takes a certain type of actor - a very good actor - and an honest one to be able to do a part and to read well on camera."

Now 36 years-old, Mart was born and raised in South America, and the first school he attended was in Hendersonville, N.C. "Because of the lack of schools in Ecuador, my mother enrolled my older brother in the Blue Ridge School in Hendersonville, and she and I stayed there for 3 months. During that time, I went to the first grade in a red brick school house."

Mart, his wife, Maria, and their two daughters, 12 and 14, live in Manhattan, and are in the process of building a stone house in New Hampshire with his brother and his family. "This has been an ambition of mine for years, and we're building it ourselves, stone by stone."

New Concept Seen

"Animals, Animals, Animals," a unique and exciting new concept in children's programming, will premiere Sunday, Sept. 12, 11:30 to 11:55 a.m., on ABC-TV.

This new series is created, written and directed by executive producer Lester Cooper and produced by Peter Weinberg, the same team that won a Peabody and an Emmy for the "Make a Wish" series.

In a new magazine format, "Animals, Animals, Animals" will explore the relationship of animal and man in art, history, literature, theatre, science, ecology and dance, among other subjects.

In the late 18th century, England monopolized the world's textile trade. On Sept. 1, 1789, a young Englishman named Samuel Slater set sail from England for the newly independent United States. Allowing him to sail — he did so illegally, according to English law — was the worst mistake England had made since she slapped a tax on Boston-bound tea.

The story of Slater's contribution to American history, fully as revolutionary as any military campaign, is presented in "The Second Revolution," the eleventh and final special in "The American Parade" series of historical programs celebrating the American Bicentennial, to be broadcast Sunday, Sept. 12, 10 to 11 p.m. on CBS Ch. 3N-11.

England's economy at that time depended on textiles, and the foundation of the textile industry was a classified Crown secret: the Arkwright spinning frame. Export of the water frame was forbidden, and no trained textile machinist was ever allowed to leave the country.

The 21-year-old Slater had worked in the English mills, rising from apprentice to manager and learning along the way sufficient knowledge to launch and operate a cotton mill.

The United States supplied the raw cotton to England, from which she had to buy the finished cloth, at a much higher price, of course. Economically, it was a bad trade-off for this country. And the cloth that was made here was so weak that even the poorest Indians preferred to buy the more expensive English goods. Slater had smuggled the secrets of Arkwright's spinning machine out of England, all right. Not on paper, but in his head. (If he'd been caught, it would literally have been his head.)

Arriving in Providence, R.I., he set to work for a textile manufacturer and reconstructed, from memory, every secret gear and confidential pulley of the Arkwright frame.

Before long, American cloth was the equal of the English, and that country's monopoly had been broken. Without intending to, Slater revolutionized the United States all over again. The first Revolution had yielded America's political independence. With the second — Industrial — Revolution, America gained her economic independence.

Arriving in Providence, R.I., he set to work for a textile manufacturer and reconstructed, from memory, every secret gear and confidential pulley of the Arkwright frame.

Strolling Perilous?

There are times when strolling can be a perilous exercise for Andy Griffith. Andy, who stars in "Street Killing," "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," Sept. 12, 9 to 11 p.m., is a sleepwalker.

"There's simply no cure for it," Andy says. "It manifests itself only when I have some kind of emotional problem. I've been known to have elaborate conversations with my family or raid the refrigerator for some elaborate meals, all unbeknownst to myself."

Andy and his family live in a large house in Toluca Lake, Calif., which has an intricate alarm system as well as a lock system on all doors leading to the outside. They have to be opened with keys.

We've Got Sales Spirit!

During a recent sales slump I overheard a member of our staff making a sales pitch: "This new carpet is just what you need," says he. "It's nice," came the reply, "but I'm not ready for it just now." "How come? You can't beat the value and..." "No, not just now. I'm not that happy with business," insisted the customer. "But you should still take advantage..." "I just said I'm not that happy with business," restated the customer. "Very frankly, I'm not that happy either," agreed our staffer. "So, go ahead and place the order. Why should we both be unhappy?" That's sales spirit! Right on...

'Over Easy' Tells How

Growing older can be done "Over Easy," as seen in two half-hour specials for older Americans, on Monday, Sept. 13, and Tuesday, Sept. 14, at 8 p.m. on PBS.

Hosted by Hugh Downs and starring Phyllis Diller and Rudy Vallee, the two shows are the introduction to a daily television series created for, about, and with, older Americans. The series is projected to air in the fall of '77 on PBS and is directed to the diverse interests and concerns of the 42 million men and women of 55 years and older.

"Our objective is two-fold," said producer Jules Power. "We want to combine useable information with first-rate entertainment that competes with the best of the network talk-variety shows. The title reflects the show's philosophy as well as its informal conversational style."

The series is designed around a succession of "mini-series" — or individual segments: "In Person" — interviews with well-known personalities; "Cooking with Kathy" — Kathy Dinaburg, in an irreverent but practical approach to nutrition and preparing meals for one or two; "Keeping Posted" — mini-features on useful people and ideas; "Life Style" — portraits of some remarkable older people doing interesting things; "The Question Is" — viewers' questions dealing with everyday emotional and psychological problems answered in a humane and common sense fashion by Dr. Carl Eisendorfer, chairman of the Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences, University of Washington.

Animated public service "commercials" will deliver consumer advice, and the Over Easy Players, the show's resident repertory company, offer segments dealing with the ironies of being old in today's society.

A seven-piece combo, under the musical direction of Arturo Juarez, provides live music.

Two Hercules Films Air

Steve Reeves stars as the most popular of all legendary Greek heroes in "Hercules" and "Hercules Unchained," two action adventures to be colorcast on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" Sept. 13 (9 to 11 p.m.) and "NBC Sunday Night at the Movies" Sept. 19 (8 to 10 p.m.) on Channel 6-7.

Reeves, who began his professional film career after winning the titles of Mr. Pacific, Mr. America, Mr. World and Mr. Universe, portrays the mythical Greek figure known for his extraordinary strength and courage. Sylvia Koscina co-stars in the 1959 and 1960 Warner Brothers releases from Lux-Galatea and Lux De France productions.

Filmed on location in Europe, the features are based on the epic story of Hercules who encounters a series of dangers in the course of his travels. In "Hercules," the hero renounces his immortality to walk the earth as a mortal man. He is required to perform several proscribed labors to satisfy the wicked minister, Eurystheus. He saves the life of Iole (Koscina), the princess of Jolco, and the two fall in love.

On a later journey, Hercules encounters Jason (Fabrizio Mioni) and the two search for — and find — the Golden Fleece after a lengthy, dangerous voyage. In their travels, they encounter and destroy a Cretan bull, savage apemen and a dragon. The pair also face other perils including the Amazon women. Hercules ultimately overcomes all and is reunited with Iole.

LEGENDARY HERO — Steve Reeves stars in the title role as the mythical Greek hero and Sylvia Koscina portrays the beautiful princess he saves in "Hercules," an adventure drama to be colorcast on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies," Sept. 13 (8-10 p.m.) on Channels 6-7.

In the sequel, "Hercules Unchained," the hero, accompanied by his bride, Iole and the young Ulysses (Gabriel Antonini), meets and subdues a giant. Later, he is taken prisoner by Queen Omphale (Sylvia Lopez). To win his freedom, he slays three tigers, then rescues Iole from a raging war being fought between two kingdoms. "Hercules Unchained" is one of several films about the Greek hero who, according to mythology, was ordered by a powerful ruler to perform 12 arduous tasks in order to achieve purification.

Popular Trio Is Back

The popular broadcast trio of play-by-play announcer Frank Gifford and expert commentators Howard Cosell and Alex Karras returns to report all the exciting and the color on ABC Sports' Emmy Award-winning "NFL Monday Night Football," when the series begins its seventh season, Sept. 13, at 9 p.m., with the Miami Dolphins meeting the Buffalo Bills in Buffalo.

Back behind the scenes will be Executive Producer Boone Arledge, producer Don Ohlmeyer and director Chet Forte, all of whom have played major roles in the success of "NFL Monday Night Football."

This will be Gifford's sixth season handling the play-by-play on the series which has become one of the most talked about programs in the history of television. Last year, the former New York Giants' star was voted the nation's No. 1 television sports reporter in a poll taken among readers of The Football News, this country's oldest football publication.

Gifford reports nightly on his own program on ABC Radio and is a regular contributor to "ABC's Wide World of Sports" and the televised golf specials. He was a member of the team of commentators at the XXI

Olympic Games in Montreal.

Cosell, named Broadcaster of the Year in 1974 by the International Radio and Television Society, has been a broadcaster on "NFL Monday Night Football" since its inception. His career in broadcasting is multifaceted, including such roles as radio and television talk show host in addition to reporting on "Wide World of Sports" and numerous sports specials.

Cosell was also part of the broadcast team covering the Olympics.

A former All-Pro defensive tackle for the Detroit Lions, Karras enters his third season in the booth with Gifford and Cosell. He brings to "NFL Monday Night Football" a strong ability to analyze game situations and a quick wit that has made him one of the most sought-after public speakers in the movie, "Blazing Saddles," and the made-for-television movie, "Babe," in the role of George Zaharias.

Forte, a former All-America basketball player for Columbia University, is the only individual who has been directly involved in the production of NFL, AFL and NCAA football for the network. Chet won two Emmy Awards this year.

Ohlmeyer, like Forte, has proven himself to be among the most versatile and innovative personalities in his field, and was honored with five Emmys in May.

Sings In Episode

He admits he's not giving Frank Sinatra a 'run for his money,' but Claude Akins does feel "pretty good" about the way he sounded in "Sing It Again, Sonny," an episode of "Movin' On" to be rebroadcast Tuesday, Sept. 14, 8 to 9 p.m., on NBC-TV.

Akins makes his singing debut in the segment and proves that he is one man who can literally carry a tune in a 10-ton truck.

TOGETHER AGAIN

Leonard Nimoy and William Shatner were reunited for the first time on TV since their highly successful "Star Trek" series, as celebrity players on a recent airing of the popular game show, "The $20,000 Pyramid."

at a Nashville's truckers' convention. Overwhelmed by the apparent eagerness of a free-wheeling talent agent (played by guest star Vera Miles) and his fellow truckers, who happen to have a financial interest in his musical "future," Sonny dreams — at least for a while — of becoming another Elvis Presley.

"Sonny never really believed he was all that good, and he doesn't get a fat head about it," Akins explained. "But when he saw everybody else hopping on the bandwagon, he hopped on too."

The song he sings, "Rollin' On," originally was considered as a possible theme for the series, according to Akins. It was rejected in favor of the current "Movin' On" theme, which was written and subsequently recorded by Merle Haggard.

"It's a trucking song with a country-western sound," Akins said. "I'm a baritone, and we kept it down low enough for me, and I really enjoyed doing it."

This isn't a 'first' for Akins, as far as singing on television is concerned. "I made my vocal debut about 10 years ago, as a guest star in a western series singing 'Tom Dooley.'" Three years later that forgotten classic was discovered by other artists and it zoomed to the top of the charts.

A special effects man can be called upon to part the Red Sea, burn down a 120-story office building, make it rain on cue, turn day to night, and create the end of the world.

He is often called on to perform more mundane tasks that, although not as startling, can be nonetheless important to the plot and action of a film.

Recently, during location filming in Georgia for "Just An Old Sweet Song," airing Tuesday, Sept. 14, 8:30 to 10 p.m., on CBS-TV, the special effects people were called upon to act as pig wranglers, dog trainers, and chicken and rooster hustlers, to help populate a farm for the drama.

It wasn't difficult to round up piglets, but the cast and crew had their hands full trying to get them to do what was expected of them, much less on cue.

The prop men constructed a pig pen, and a dozen piglets, squealing — well, like stuck pigs — were lowered by their hind feet into the pen. Two of them got out and made a mad dash between a klieg light and an extremely expensive motion picture camera.

The race was on. Regulations being what they are, the men closest to the streaking animals were not special effects men, and therefore made no move to head them off. A makeup man moved aside, and just before the pigs ran under the porch they were nabbed.

The dogs really were no problem. When the film unit arrived on location there were three hounds, lazy and amiable.

"And I sang 'Street of Laredo' on another western series several years later," Akins said, "but I can't honestly say that anyone's been begging for an encore until now."

Akins sang in a church choir as a child, and studied voice at Northwestern University before seeking an acting career.

He concluded with: "No, I may not be much of a threat of Frank Sinatra as far as singing is concerned — but I'll bet you one thing — I can drive a truck better than Frank can."

already living under the porch of the house.

The chickens and roosters were another story. They had to be kept in separate coops, and when Eric Hooks, who plays the youngest son of the family, goes in to feed the chickens, he is attacked by an enraged rooster. To get birds to flutter and cackle on cue is impossible.

Once the rooster was put into the main chicken coop, it was expected that there would be some action. It was either a very tired rooster or they were truly disinterested chickens, however.

By spreading corn on the ground, it was possible to work up some activity, and with clever editing the attack is effective.

Locations Lend Color

The Official Childcatcher is on the lookout for friendly children to lock away, tempting them out of hiding with his luscious lollipops, and then cakewalks across the screen on nimble feet. He's dancing on ancient and charming territory, one of the most picturesque spots in Europe.

Historic, picture-book locations in Bavaria and the south of France provided much of the background for "Chitty Chitty Bang Bang," the musical-fantasy family-film special which will be rebroadcast Monday, Sept. 13, 7:30 to 10 p.m., on CBS.

"Chitty Chitty Bang Bang" is the name of a magical car which transports its owner, inventor Caractacus Potts, played by Dick Van Dyke, his two children, Jeremy (Adrian Hall) and Jennifer (Heather Ripley), and a friend, Truly Scrumptious (Sally Ann Howes), to adventures on the Continent.

Many of the fairy-tale sequences of the film take place in the medieval walled town of Rothenburg on the River Tauber, which represents a village in the mythical state of Vulgaria ruled by the evil Baron and Baroness Bomburst (Gert Frobe and Anna Quayle), who hate all children.

Rotherburg, a town that permits no modern buildings, is set on a plateau 200 feet above the Tauber. The 13th-century village with its cobbled streets provided the backdrop for a lively scene in the film in which the cavalry - horses obtained from a famous stud farm near Munich - and the wicked Childcatcher (Robert Helpmann) search through the village for the hidden tots. The cobblestone streets of Rothenburg supplied a reverberation system for the cadence of the horses' hooves and the rumble of Chitty, the two-ton monster.

One of Bavaria's most famous castles, Neuchwanstein, or Mad King Ludwig's Castle, as it is commonly called, was used for several sequences. The castle, with its high turrets and towers piled one on another, stands at the foot of the Alps close to the Austrian border.

Principal photography for the film took more than 28 weeks. After the crew completed shooting in Bavaria, they moved on to St. Tropez in the south of France to film beach sequences for "Chitty Chitty Bang Bang."

'Slither' Rebroadcast

A slither is, er... kind of a slide with body English. Or, how about a long slip with curves?

Either way, it sounds like a maneuver adroitly performed in "greasy kid stuff" and represents the hit theme of the "CBS Friday Night Movie," Sept. 17, 9 to 11 p.m., on Channel 3N-9-11. The film stars James Caan, Sally Kellerman and Peter Boyle.

James Caan is cast as the thick-witted hero looking for the fortune promised him by an embezzler. Unfortunately, however, his quest for the hidden fortune leads him straight into double-trouble, and he soon realizes that he was much better off behind bars.

Now, just how does some sneakily, snakey footwork relate to the movie?

Producer Jack Sher illuminated the elusive topic:

"The idea of 'Slither' is best described in this little poem by the screen writer W. D. Richter. 'Dick knew Harry. Someone killed Harry. Harry and Barry were friends. So Dick met Barry. Then someone got Barry too. And now he's after Dick. Slither. We all have to sooner or later.'"

'Love Boat' Premieres

Author Jeraldine Saunders had another occupation and it's one that might stump the "What's My Line" panel.

Jeraldine wrote a highly successful novel called "The Love Boats," which is the basis for "The Love Boat," a world premiere movie airing on "The ABC Friday Night Movie" Sept. 17, 9 to 11 p.m., on Channel 3W-5-12.

The movie concerns the comedic adventures and misadventures of a group of people aboard a cruise ship traveling from California to Mexico and was filmed in part aboard the Sun Princess on the same route. Regular passengers mingled with guest stars Don Adams, Tom Bosley, Florence Henderson, Gabe Kaplan, Harvey Korman, Cloris Leachman, Hal Linden and Karen Valentine.

Jeraldine Saunders was also the first - and only to her knowledge - woman cruise director on the seas. Watching and listening to passengers for a number of years inspired her novel and she says she's got enough material for many, many more.

"You become sort of a mother confessor for 700 people," Jeraldine says.

"There's a sort of camaraderie on the sea. People open up and say and do things they wouldn't anywhere else. Compared to a flight, you're on a hip for a long time and have time to get involved."

Some of the hazards of the trade include long hours. Jeraldine says that four hours sleep a night is a luxury. Also, it's difficult being a walking complaint department and captive audience for that number of people.

"It's a seductive life," she states. "Too much food, for one thing. Fortunately, I don't drink or smoke. Booze, at sea, has done in many a cruise director."

Jeraldine is free to say that the characters in her book are 99 percent fact rather than fiction, but of course she has changed names and situations enough to protect the innocent, or guilty, as the case may be.

"In a sense, my book is an expose of cruise lines, but the odd thing is that its publication didn't hurt my career as a cruise director one iota," she states.

"In fact, I've gotten all kinds of offers from other steamship lines, but I'm too busy writing books."

'Charlie's Angels' Encores

Three attractive female detectives use their wits and feminine charms to con the slayer of a wealthy man into revealing the whereabouts of his victim's body in "Charlie's Angels," an encore movie presentation Tuesday, Sept. 14, 8:30 to 10 p.m., on ABC Channel 3W-5-12.

Kate Jackson, Farrah Fawcett-Majors, Jaclyn Smith, David Doyle and David Ogden Stiers star in the 90-minute film. Diana Muldaur and John Lehne are the guest stars. Bo Hopkins is the special guest star.

(Kate, Farrah, Jaclyn, David and the mysterious voice of Charlie himself will return to ABC soon when "Charlie's Angels" becomes a weekly series on Wednesday nights, 10 to 11 p.m.)

In "Charlie's Angels," Sabrina (Miss-Jackson), Jill (Miss Fawcett-Majors) and Kelly (Miss Smith) are three beautiful young women who work for a private investigator named Charlie, a man they have never seen or met.

Journalists Are Heroes

The cowboys were probably the first genuine American folk heroes and they were followed by private detectives and doctors and a whole list of not-quite-as-heroic types. But where will the next heroes come from? From the ranks of journalists says David Victor, executive producer of "Kingston," which will be colorcast on "NBC Wednesday Night at the Movies" Sept. 15, 9 to 11 p.m., on Ch. 6-7.

"Certainly Watergate brought the journalist's craft to the attention of the American public, and the glorification of the team of Woodward and Bernstein (Woodstein) is a clue that the reporter is an up-and-coming American hero." Now, along comes "Kingston," starring Raymond Burr as R.B. Kingston, an investigative journalist, and James Canning as Kingston's sidekick, Tony Kolsky.

Like the Woodward and Bernstein team, Kingston and Kolsky, through careful journalistic digging, expose a plot to intimidate nations by threatening to destroy their nuclear power plants.

But, if a journalist is just supposed to report what happens, then how does that make for exciting television?

"Surprisingly, reporters and cops have a lot in common.

HELPING HAND—Raymond Burr, starring as investigative journalist R.B. Kingston, attempts to comfort Helen Martinson (Dina Merrill) after she has learned that her editor-husband has had a fatal heart attack, in "Kingston," an NBC World Premiere drama to be colorcast on "NBC Wednesday Night at the Movies," Sept. 15 (9-11 p.m.) on Channels 6-7.

Individuals in each group are exposed to occasional danger, and that's where the drama comes in," according to Victor.

"Don Bolles (a Phoenix reporter whose car exploded during his investigation of land fraud schemes in Arizona) is a good example of how dangerous it can be to be an investigative journalist," Victory says. "Every reporter is not exposed to that kind of threat every day, but some reporters - including Kingston - are at sometime during their career. It makes exciting television." David Victor should know. He was a reporter before he gave it up to go into television production.

'How The West Was Won' Is A Continuing Series This Fall

"How the West Was Won," to be presented on ABC-TV later in the season as a continuing story in three two-hour motion pictures, has begun production at various locations in and around Kanab, Utah.

James Arness stars as mountain man Zeb Macahan, the role he created in the special 2½ hour presentation, "The Macahans," which was presented as an "ABC Monday Night Movie" in January.

Also starring and reprising their roles are Eva Marie Saint as Kate Macahan and Bruce Boxleitner as Luke Macahan.

A stellar supporting cast has been assembled for the western adventure film based on the heralded motion picture of the same name. They are: Jack Elam as Cully, David Hudson as Judson, John Dehner as Benjamin, Brit Lind as Erika, Todd Lookinland as Josh, Royal Dano as Elam and Anthony Zerbe as Captain Martin Grey. Additional cast members will be announced at a later date.

"How the West Was Won" is a family saga focusing on the lives of three characters in the Old West: Zeb, an independent mountain man accustomed to the harsh realities of life on the frontier; his sister-in-law, Kate, alone since the death of her husband and struggling to maintain a home for her daughters and a young son; and Luke, Kate's oldest son, pursued by the law for desertion from the Union Army.

Their stories are played out against a realistic recreation of the emerging American West, a lusty, hard-hitting period in which laws were made to be broken and progress was charted by individual suffering and survival.

Williams Is Avalon's Guest

Guest star Anson Williams, a less-than-serious singer in his role in "Happy Days," shows off his true vocal qualities with Frankie Avalon in a highlight of "Easy Does It—Starring Frankie Avalon," comedy-variety show, Wednesday, Sept. 15, 8:30 to 9 p.m., on CBS Channel 3N-9-11.

He and Avalon blend voices in a three-song medley, "Wake Up Little Susie," "Bye Bye Love" and "All I've Got to Do is Dream."

Williams joins the zany humor of the summer mini-series, spoofing a game show in a blackout presenting an unexpected participant - a hijacker. Avalon and his former beach-movie playmate, Annette Funicello, who has been a special guest star on the series, do their version of "Donny and Marie," flashing glittering smiles and roller skating across the stage.

Another musical highlight finds Avalon performing an updated version of "Mack the Knife."

Continuing the humorous vein is a sketch in which Avalon and Ray Baker play roommates who are dressing up for their dates with Cuddles (Miss Funicello) and Bubbles (Marsha Meyers).

'Television Theatre' Premieres

North Carolina's own Andy Griffith starring in his first modern dramatic classic will be a highlight of the 1976 season of "Hollywood Television Theatre" which premieres Thursday, Sept. 16, at 9 p.m. on PBS. Griffith stars as the Father in a powerful interpretation of Luigi Pirandello's twentieth century classic, "Six Characters in Search of An Author," on Thursday, Sept. 23, at 9 p.m. John Houseman co-stars as the Director. For this innovative production exploring the nature of illusion and reality, producer Norman Lloyd transposed the setting from a theater to a television studio. There, a group of characters comes to life as six actors start to rehearse a play. Stacy Keach directed this controversial drama, which also stars Julia Adams, Beverly Todd and James Keach.

For the season premiere Thursday, Sept. 16, Julie Harris re-creates her Tony Award winning portrayal of Mary Todd Lincoln in the TV premiere of James Priceaux's "The Last of Mrs. Lincoln." The play chronicles the life of President Lincoln's widow after his assassination. George Schaefer produced and directed the two-hour program, and Norman Lloyd was executive producer. Also starring are Michael Cristofer as Robert Lincoln and Robbie Benson as Tad Lincoln.

The third "Hollywood Television Theatre" program, "The Fatal Weakness," provides Eva Marie Saint with a stylish, elegant high comedy role which she plays to perfection under Norman Lloyd's direction. George Kelly's 1946 play is a witty drawing room comedy about a woman who is too romantic. Starring with Eva Marie Saint, Thursday, Sept. 30, are Gretchen Corbett, John McMartin and Charlotte Moore.

An incident that took place in the Roman city of Antioch in the year 287 is the basis for "Philemon," a musical story which airs Thursday, Oct. 7. An unemployed actor-clown persuaded by the city's Roman commander to impersonate the great Christian leader Philemon finds himself becoming the man he portrays. The play was written and composed by Tom Jones and Harvey Schmidt, authors of "The Hemingway Play." This imaginative dramatization, on Thursday, Oct. 14, brings together four characters, each representing a different age and different aspect of the great writer.

Now A Fleet

Director Michael O'Herlihy emigrated to the United States by crossing the Atlantic from Ireland in a 28-foot sailboat. He probably never envisioned the brisk, bright blue day last June when he, figuratively at least, would be at the helm of a portion of the Pacific fleet, filming "Murder — Eyes Only," the special two-hour presentation of "Hawaii Five-O," to be rebroadcast Thursday, Sept. 16, 9 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV.

UNEMPLOYMENT LINE PAYS OFF

Being in the right place at the right time paid off for Pat Morita, star of "Mr. T and Tina," and the right place was the unemployment line. A show biz friend standing next to him suggested that the try for the role of Arnold on "Happy Days" and eventually that job led to his present series which premieres later this month.

Pike's Peeks

HOLLYWOOD — Farrah-Fawcett Majors had to spend several days confined to bed after she suffered a leg injury during the filming of a scene for "Charlie's Angels." The accident occurred when Farrah ran toward a car which swerved sooner than it was supposed to and struck the actress. She was taken to a nearby hospital where X-rays proved negative, but her personal physician ordered her to stay off the leg for almost a week.

Della Reese, who'll be a regular on "Chico & The Man" this Fall, has lost 30 pounds in the past six months. She credits that to a strict diet and the fact she quit smoking after 30 years. The reason she stopped the habit was because her 17-year-old daughter, Della Jr., started smoking!

James Caan's newly-born son, Scott, has a full head of blonde hair and is a carbon copy of his famous dad.

William Asher, ex-husband of Elizabeth Montgomery, recently married Joyce Boulivant, ex-wife of Ed Mallory of daytime TV's "Days of Our Lives" and James MacArthur of "Hawaii Five-O."

Total disbelief is the only way to explain David Brenner's reaction to NBC's decision to shelve his new series, "Snip."

Gerald Gordon is the new Doctor Dante on "General Hospital," replacing Michael DeLano who spent a week in the role after replacing James York. Seems Gerald was the network's first choice, and they gave him one of daytime TV's most lucrative contracts to get him.

Robert Redford and Angie Dickinson have been named the top entertainment stars by Photoplay Magazine's readers in its 55th Annual Gold Medal Awards balloting. Henry Winkler was named favorite comedy star; Elvis Presley favorite variety star, and Gabe Kaplan and Pamela Hensley as favorite newcomers. "Jaws" was named as the favorite film; "Starsky & Hutch" the top nighttime program, and "The Young and The Restless" the favorite daytime show.

Camels Uncooperative?

A Hollywood cameraman can tell you that camels — at least one in particular — are downright uncooperative.

The script for the film "Quest," to be colorcast on "NBC Thursday Night at the Movies," Sept. 16 (9 to 11 p.m., on Channel 6-7), called for a scene with one of the humped quadrupeds.

The animal was to dash through the swinging doors of a saloon, tear things up inside, and then leap head-first through a big glass window to make its escape. (The "window" was made of sugar-water so the camel would not be injured during the scene.)

The director managed to get the animal inside the saloon and it was happy to kick over some tables and chairs. Then came time for the big scene, when it was supposed to leap through the window.

The camera was set up in the street, pointed at the window.

And then the camel decided it didn't want to play anymore.

For three hours the crew begged and pleaded with the animal to jump through the window, but it just "smiled" at them.

It was perfectly willing to make a run at the window, but for five straight "Takes" it came to a dead stop just inches away from it. The camera was rolling during each take and the film was getting low.

'Steppin' Out' Airs Friday

There's a time to write and a time to perform. Right now Neil Sedaka is performing.

"I don't write during this time," said the songwriter-singer. "I just listen to as much music as I can during the year when I'm on tour and I store away things in my subconscious. I will do my writing and recording this coming December, January, February and March."

Sedaka was discussing his songs while taping his special, "Neil Sedaka Steppin' Out," airing Friday, Sept. 17, 9 to 10 p.m., on NBC-TV.

"My best time for writing is from noon to five," he said. "When I write, I write daily. It's a discipline. You have to make it a job. But the most important thing when I write is to please myself."

Sedaka indicated that he would not finish a song, however, that he didn't feel close to.

"Songs are like children — they live and breathe when you perform them," he said. "Some haunt you through the years. Some make you happy. I've never lost the excitement of hearing my songs on radio, whether performed by me or someone else."

One of Neil's guest on the special is popular singer/performer Bette Midler, who sometimes thinks of herself as the first female singer-comic since Mae West.

"I got a lot of inspiration from Mae West," she said. "When I first started working, a friend brought one of her records over. Through it all, Mae West was a source of pleasure. I loved her. She was quite marvelous. She was also quite independent, which I liked. So the first time I worked on television I did one of her songs. I've also been compared to Barbra Streisand. That's flattering, although I don't see the comparison myself."

Ms. Midler's parents, obviously, were not thinking of Mae West when Bette was born; she was named for Bette Davis (but she pronounces her first name as if it didn't have an "e" on the end).

"My mother was very showbiz," said Bette. "Not my father. His idea of showbiz is Lawrence Welk. He adores Lawrence Welk. My mother loved television. She used to send us to the movies and she was very particular about the kinds of movies she'd send us to. No dramas. No horror movies. As a result, I never saw a horror movie until I was 22 years old. My folks, you see, liked hula dancing, but not the darker things in life."

STRUTTING AND SINGING—Guest Bette Midler and star Neil Sedaka do some impromptu dancing as they sing a humorous rendition of his son, "Love Will Keep Us Together," during his special, "Neil Sedaka Steppin' Out," to be colorcast on Friday, Sept. 17 (9-10 p.m.) on NBC Channels 6-7.

Success Is Wonderful

"Broadway may be Mecca for some performers, but television's where it's at today," says Hal Linden, starring in the two-hour comedy special, "The Love Boat," airing Friday, Sept. 17, ABC-TV.

And Linden knows what he's talking about. A veteran of over 18 Broadway productions — "Most of them closed the Saturday after they opened," he explains — he hit the jackpot in the musical, "The Rothschilds," which also netted him the coveted Tony Award.

Despite the Broadway acclaim, he wasn't exactly a household name. That phenomenon occurred with his television series, "Barney Miller."

With no signs of braggadocio at all, Linden admits "This success has been a long time in coming and it's wonderful. I'm able to do all the things I've always wanted to do."

One of the things was accepting a role in the comedy about love and romance on a pleasure cruise to Acapulco. In "The Love Boat," Hal plays a personable business executive, an "all work, no play" fellow who takes the cruise to recuperate from a leg injury and friends romance in the person of beautiful Karen Valentine.

"The Love Boat" is actually four interrelated comedic stories of the cruise ship's passengers.

In "Mona Lisa Speaks," Stan and Willard (Gabe Kaplan and Harvey Korman) are attending an insurance convention aboard the ship. Willard is a gung-ho insurance man but Stan's span of attention to business is very short when he meets a beautiful young photographer's model named Binaca (Jette Seear) whose vocabulary consists of only two words.

In "Ms and Mrs. Havlicek Aboard," Iris and George Havlicek (Cloris Leachman and Tom Bosley) are nouveau riche and while busy flaunting it are also endeavoring to land a rich husband for their daughter, Juanita (Laurette Spang).

In "Til Death Do Us Part," Monica and Donald Richardson (Florence Henderson and Don Adams) are married, but he's got a girlfriend back home and figures the cruise ship is a good place to do away with his wife. The best laid plans backfire on him.

Linden and Ms. Valentine portray Ellen and Andrew in "Are There Any Real Love Stories?"

Tony, Chico Face It

Freddie Prinze and Tony Orlando will be "looking good" together.

Orlando (of TV's "Tony Orlando and Dawn" series), considered by many to be Prinze's look-alike, guest-stars as just that in "The Big Brush-off" on "Chico and the Man" Friday, Sept. 17, 8:30 to 9 p.m., on NBC Channel 7.

As the storyline unfolds, Chico (Prinze) falls in love with Ed's (Jack Albertson) accountant, Maria Estaban (Irene De Bari), but is unable to win her heart because he looks, walks and talks like her former fiancé, Orlando says, "What people really see is the mustache and dark hair. Many times, when I'm going through an airport, people say, 'Hey Chico,' and I say 'Looking good.'"

The same thing happens to Prinze. People say, "Tony, I love your show. How are the girls (Dawn)?"

"Quite often," says Tony, "I don't tell them I'm not Freddie because I don't want to ruin it for them. They may not like Tony Orlando. They may love Freddie Prinze — so I try to be as gentlemanly and as cordial as I can."

Comedy To Air Sunday

Winning, fortune-hunting and gossiping are required courses in "The School for Scandal," Richard Sheridan's rollicking comment on 18th century London society, which "convenes" on "Great Performances" Sunday, Sept. 12, at 10 p.m. on E-TV.

Performed by the famed Guthrie Theater of Minneapolis, when "School for Scandal" first aired last year on public television, John J. O'Connor of the "New York Times" said, "The Guthrie Theater production is extremely pleasant, frequently quite splendid. . . The general level of quality maintained by the cast is yet another reminder of the remarkable strength of regional theater."

Sparkling with style and wit, "The School for Scandal" is a deft social satire whose complicated and hilarious plots and counterplots, along with a host of brilliantly drawn characters with trail revealing names, have delighted theater-goers since it first appeared in London in 1777.

The play interweaves two major storylines. Charles and Joseph Surface (Kenneth Welsh and Nicholas Kepros) are two brothers who each pursue Maria (Sheriden Thomas), the lovely ward of Sir Peter Teazle (Bernard Behrens). Charles is amiable and openhearted, but an extravagant gambler; Joseph is a fashionable hypocrite. When rich uncle Sir Oliver Surface (Larry Gates) unexpectedly arrives, the plot grows even thicker.

Concurrently, Sir Peter Teazle, until recently a confirmed bachelor, is experiencing marital difficulties. His bride (Blair Brown), a young country girl, is quickly succumbing to the pleasure of fashionable life in town. She thrives on flirtation, gossip and gowns, presents her husband with the bills, and teases the man unmercifully.

Much of the mischief is spawned in the elegant home of Lady Sneerwell, hostess to the foolish coterie of brilliantly costumed and coiffed gossips who give the play its name.

Sets and costumes for the sumptuously appointed production were designed by Jack Barkla and Sam Kirkpatrick, respectively, and the musical score was composed by Stanley Silverman.

Investigator's Life To Be Dramitized

Harris L. Kattelman, President of MGM Television, is currently negotiating with Arthur Loew, Jr. to produce a motion picture special for television based on the life of investigative reporter Don Bolles, who was murdered last June while investigating organized crime for the Arizona Republic. Loew recently obtained an option on Bolles' life from his widow, Rosalie.

The noted writer-producer decided to pursue the project after returning from his son's graduation at Deerfield Prep School in Massachusetts.

"I listened to the headmaster address these young boys and tell them, 'Our great American heroes are dead. Today we have no heroes.' And I knew he was wrong. Don Bolles was a first-rate hero who laid his life on the line to get after the truth. There are certain stories that should be told and his is definitely one of them. That's why I got so enthused when Harris asked me to explore this project."

No stranger to MGM, Loew worked as a producer-writer at the studio for 11 years. His credits include "The Rack," "Penelope," "Arena," "The Marauders" and "The Affairs of Dobie Gillis." For the last seven years he resided in Arizona where he served on the Board of Directors for the Arizona Civic Theatre.

Bulldogs Challenge Alabama

FOOTBALL—The Univ. of Georgia will meet the Clemson Tigers on ABC's college football game of the week. The game will be televised from Tiger Stadium in Clemson, S.C., on Saturday, Sept. 18 at 3:00 p.m.

This fall, Plains Ga. will not be the only city in the state that will be the source of national news. Athens, the sight of the University of Ga. and their Bulldogs football team, expects to make a few headlines also.

In 1976, the Georgia Bulldogs are a clear-cut favorite to challenge perennial champion Alabama for the Southeastern Conference crown. They face an ACC opponent, The Clemson Tigers, on ABC's College Football Game of the Week Saturday, Sept. 18. The game, to be played in Clemson's Tiger Stadium, will begin at 3 p.m.

The Bulldogs are talent-laden in this Bicentennial year. Their defense, nicknamed the "Junkyard Dogs" because of their scrappy style, will terrorize opponents. Although they are basically a small group, they rely on timing and quickness. Last season, they held a vaunted Florida offense to seven points, earning a major victory on their way to the Cotton Bowl.

"We've sort of got a defense like an offense," explains linebacker Ben Zambiasi. "It's all in timing and being where you're supposed to be. It's the same defense we used last year."

It got us to the Cotton Bowl. We spent all spring touching it up. It's mostly a matter of knowing where the other guys are."

The offense features wingback Gene Washington, a brilliant, all-purpose player who is always a deep threat, whether it is via the bomb, flea-flinker or a punt. His penchant for the big play was a key to Georgia's success in 1975.

For example, Gene scored on an 80-yard scoring pass against Florida that led to the 10-7 upset. A 9-3 sprinter, he was instrumental in setting up Georgia's field goal late in the game, gaining 22 yards on a pass, and a first down on a reverse.

He is in the record book four times for the longest TD plays by a Bulldog, including a 96-yard kickoff return against Clemson in 1973. The Tigers know what they will face in the Georgia Bulldogs - how to stop them is another matter.

Matthau Stars In Movie

Academy Award winner Walter Matthau (Best Supporting Actor, "The Fortune Cookie," 1966) stars as an ambitious ex-stunt pilot turned crop duster who sets his sights on a full-time career robbing small banks in "Charley Varrick," an action drama to be colorcast on "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" Sept. 18, 9 to 11 p.m., on Ch. 6-7. Joe Don Baker co-stars in the 1973 Universal release.

Charley Varrick (Matthau) robs banks—small ones—because they're easier to rip off, and the average take of $10,000 to $20,000 isn't enough to keep the law interested in pursuit for more than a few weeks.

This time, however, Charley picks the wrong one, the Western Fidelity Bank of Tres Cruces, New Mexico.

The bank is actually a conduit for 'Dirty' syndicate money being shipped out of the country, and in the space of a few minutes, the robbery nets $750,000.

Varrick at once realizes his dilemma and must elude the FBI and the syndicate, in the person of Molly (Baker), all the while trying to flee the country.

"Charley Varrick" was produced and directed by Don Siegel. Howard Rodman and Dean Riesner wrote the screenplay from the novel "The Looters," by John Reese.

Super Season Ahead

"Our main goal is to be better in 1976 than we were in 1975."

The words come from John Madden, one of the most successful coaches in NFL history. Yet, there's one coveted prize that has completely eluded the fiery leader of the Oakland Raiders—the Super Bowl.

The Raiders open their season against the very team that has prevented them from taking the trip to the championship game—the powerful Pittsburgh Steelers. The contest will originate from Oakland on Sunday, Sept. 12, beginning at 4 p.m. on NBC-TV.

One good point in Oakland's favor this season is a relatively easy schedule that includes only two '75 playoff teams. Another is the collection of big-play athletes that give the Raiders a clear edge. Clarence Davis is one of those superb players who seems to always be in the right place at the right time.

Fans can remember Davis clutching the ball in the end zone, sealing victory for the Raiders in the 1974 comeback playoff against the Miami Dolphins. The Southern Cal graduate has been the mainstay for a solid running attack that opens up a superb passing game for Ken Stabler and his aerial cohorts.

Coach George Allen's football philosophy has been and still is: "the future is now." It is this belief that traditionally finds the Redskins trading future draft picks away for seasoned veterans. In so doing, he has virtually stripped the Redskins of all high-round draft selections through 1980.

Although Allen's philosophy has been successful, with four playoff berths during his five-year tenure, the team does not have many selections available in the annual college draft. Obviously when their turn comes up, they have to make their choices count.

In 1975, the Redskins did not get to take a pick until the 5th round, a time when all the big names in college ball have been long gone. Allen selected Mike Thomas, a running back from Nevada-Las Vegas where he scored 40 touchdowns and rushed for 3,149 yards in two seasons.

Despite Allen's policy to play veterans over rookies Mike Thomas cracked the starting lineup in the fifth game, and instantly, the 5-9, 190-pound back began contributing to the team's effort.

Thomas finished the season with 919 yards rushing and 483 yards on 40 pass receptions. He also topped all Washington ball-carriers in scoring, with 42 points.

For his performance, Thomas was named the NFL's offensive Rookie of the Year by the Associated Press and NFC Rookie of the Year by United Press International.

Thomas began his collegiate career at Oklahoma under Chuck Fairbanks, now the head man with the New England Patriots. The first time he carried the ball for the 'Sooners' he dashed 90 yards into the end zone. Many things happened after that TD, including a shoulder injury. Once you get injured at Oklahoma, there are so many players that move ahead it is most difficult to win your position back. As a result, he transferred to Nevada-Las Vegas.

Having established himself as a quality player in his first season, Thomas has set his sights on a 1,000 yard season and a playoff appearance.

McCauley Is Mr. Touchdown

Don McCauley is well remembered as a super running back in the Carolinas. Just five football seasons ago, he was carrying the ball for the University of North Carolina and breaking every Atlantic Coast Conference record in sight. Don owns 26 ACC and North Carolina records in addition to 4 NCAA marks.

In 1970, he set the NCAA all-time season record for total yards with 1,720. O.J. Simpson of the Buffalo Bills had 1,709 yards in his best season at Southern California.

McCauley and his teammates, the Baltimore Colts, face divisional opponent New England Sunday, Sept. 12, in Foxboro, Mass. The game will be televised on NBC-TV, beginning at 1 p.m.

Ranking ninth on the all-time list of NCAA ground-gainers, McCauley is best remembered for his unbelievable stamina. There were occasions when Don would carry the ball several times in a row, especially near the goal where the going gets tough. Opposing defenses could not stop him, despite their knowledge that McCauley would carry. He rushed 603 times as a carrier and scored 35 Tar Heel touchdowns.

Don McCauley was a hero at North Carolina because he got the job done with consistency. His achievements escaped all the national fanfare and fancy contract talks that have surrounded athletes with fewer accomplishments.

Today, McCauley is in his sixth professional season for the Baltimore Colts, and his value in the clubs' playoff drive last year was invaluable. He scored ten big touchdowns in 1975 on only sixty carries. Don is already the eighth leading rusher in Colt history, grabbing 1,721 yards.

The number one Baltimore draft choice in 1971, McCauley has averaged 3.7 yards a carry during his pro career.

McCAULEY—Former UNC super star Don McCauley will be contributing his talents to the Baltimore Colts again this season as they make their bid for a trip to the Super Bowl. Baltimore will meet divisional opponents New England on Sunday, Sept. 12 at 1 p.m. on NBC-TV.

Racing...

"Davy Crockett's Keelboat Race" airs Sunday, Sept. 12, on "The Wonderful World of Disney" from 7 to 8 p.m. on NBC Channel 6-7.

In the legendary backwoods of Ohio in 1810, Davy Crockett (Fess Parker) and his sidekick, George Russel (Buddy Ebsen), search for a riverboat to take them to New Orleans where they hope to sell their game pets.

Light-headed by drinks fed to him by the boastful Mike Fink (Jeff York), Russel challenges the King of the River to a keelboat race to New Orleans. At stake are the furs that he and Crockett have captured.

Fink's keelboat, The Gullywhumper, quickly outdistances the Bertha Mae, Crockett's entry commanded by ardent Captain Cobb (Clem Bevans) and manned by a crew of incompetents.

On the journey down river, Fink sabotages the Bertha Mae's rudder, misdirects the craft down treacherous rapids and battles her crew on the approach to New Orleans when all else fails to stop the determined Crockett.

Crockett wins not only the race, but also the respect of the powerful Fink. He holds the loser to his bargain, and the King of the River eats his feathered hat.

But playing Billie Holiday in "Lady" remains a milestone in her career.

"I started reading about her 16 months before we started work on the picture," Miss Ross says.
"All I knew was she was a female performer who died on drugs. I listened to the first record and said to myself,
'What's so great about Billie Holiday?' Then I lived with her — watched things happening in her life through her songs, her lyrics and phrasing. I talked to people who knew her and everyone knew something different. The purpose of her life was music."

So is Miss Ross's. She grew up in the ghetto area of Detroit, and met The Supremes when all were residents of a housing development. They started harmonizing early on and turned semi-pro in 1960.

"I have a lot to learn. I'm a singer. I don't consider myself an actress. If I can do a couple of other things and prove that I can do it more than once, then I'll say I'm an actress."

So spoke Diana Ross back in 1972, just after the release of her movie "Lady Sings the Blues."
It marked Miss Ross's first plunge into acting, and if she once had doubts about her talents as an actress they can now be safely tucked away.

"Lady" not only won her an Oscar nomination, but the critics and crowds crowned the bell-voiced black beauty a superstar.

Not that her singing has since taken a back seat to acting.

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR BARBARA BAIN, star of TV's "Space: 1999"

As an actress who's been married a long time, why do you think so many show-business marriages fail?—J.R., Chattanooga, Tenn.

● Before I answer that, why does no one mention all the marriages that have endured? Of our own circle of friends, Norman and Frances Lear have been together for 20 years, Carl and Estelle Reiner over 30, Robert and Sondra Blake about 14. Those who split don't know why they got married in the first place. Some couples put enormous demands on each other and have expectations which are impossible to fulfill. For instance, when faced with a crisis—which happens in all families—one of the parties says, "I never signed up for that. It wasn't part of the contract." People go to pieces because they can't accept a give-and-take relationship. But check the statistics—I think you'll find more marriages fail out of show business than in it.

FOR HOWARD K. SMITH

I heard recently that in one of your newscasts you told about the late Lyndon B. Johnson linking Fidel Castro to the assassination of President Kennedy. What did LBJ say?—T. F. Elliott, Sacramento, Calif.

● He told me, "Kennedy was trying to get to Castro, but Castro got to him first." He refused to give details, saying that it would all come out one day.

FOR ELIZABETH L. POST, etiquette expert

What's your opinion of people who take leftovers home from a restaurant?—C.B., Fort Smith, Ark.

● Had you asked me that question years ago, I'd have said it was an outrageous thing to do. Now, however, what with the price of food being what it is, it's outrageous to leave it on the plate. So, in certain places, doggy bags are in order—except in an elegant restaurant, where I wouldn't have the nerve to ask for one.

FOR TONY KUBEK, sportscaster

If you were teaching a Little Leaguer to pitch, what would you have him throw?—James Brahan, Appleton, Wis.

● I would strongly advise a Little League pitcher to throw nothing but fast balls. Curve balls put too much stress on the arm. I would also tell him to concentrate on perfecting his control.

FOR MONTY HALL, host of "Let's Make a Deal"

Have you ever had any allergy problems as a result of the various kinds of makeup worn by women who kiss you?—Mrs. M. J. Kersh, Denton, Texas

● No—not from the ladies. But I once got a miserable facial rash from the beard of a guy who kissed me on the show.

FOR MELISSA GILBERT of "Little House on the Prairie"

I read in FAMILY WEEKLY that you have had a few problems with friends who are jealous of your part on "Little House." Do you still have such problems?—Rose Meyer, Saginaw, Mich.

● Not any more. My real friends at school never teased me. During the first year a few of the kids made fun of me, but when they found out I was the same after the show as I was before it, they stopped that silly stuff.

FOR MELANIE

What got you interested in singing?—S.A., Hamilton, Ohio

● Not what, who! My mother. She was a jazz singer, and always sang around the house. When I first started writing my own little songs, they were imitations of what Mom was singing. In those days, I did it for fun. But when I was in high school and I was singing in Greenwich Village coffeehouses and people were putting money in the hat I passed around, I realized singing paid off. Later, when I was paid $20 for one night at a New Jersey shore bar, I knew I'd picked the right career.

FOR SIR ALEC GUINNESS

Why did you choose to play in the new movie "Murder by Death" after being away from movies for so long?—M.H., Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

● Because it's a comedy, and there aren't too many of them around these days. I like to laugh, and to make others laugh. Also, I believe in movies. They can be a positive influence—as long as they're not just about sex and violence.

FOR EDITH HEAD, costume designer

Who's the one person in the whole world you would most like to meet?—R.B., Greensburg, Pa.

● Rod Laver. I think he's the greatest tennis player who ever lived and has the best manners of any tennis player I know. I can't wait to meet him—one of these days.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

I've heard Louise Lasser and Greg Mullavey have terrible fights on the set of "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," and that he almost hit her once. True?—R. Kelly, Casper, Wyo.

● Not according to Dody Goodman—she plays the mother-in-law on the show and is with them all the time. She said: "That sounds strange because Greg is so gentle and incapable of hitting anyone! I'll admit there are times when we try to get difficult scenes right, and it's such hard going that one talks loud and the other snaps back. I remember playing a scene with my 'husband,' and he tried to direct me. 'Let me alone. I'll work out my part by myself,' I shot back, annoyed. But that was a professional disagreement and doesn't make us bitter enemies. In fact, we're good friends. I think what R. Kelly is referring to is some inaccuracy in a newspaper or magazine. Whatever happens on the set is not due to animosity. Put it down to professional differences or artistic temperament!"

Athletes

With "It" We Went Searching for the Most Colorful, Charismatic, Sexiest Athletes in the world. Look Who We Found!

Charisma, star quality, sex appeal, magnetism—whatever you call it, some athletes have it, others don't. That's the way it is today, and that's the way it's always been.

FAMILY WEEKLY was reminiscing recently with Bill Veeck, colorful president of the Chicago White Sox, and he put it this way: "If you brought some people down from Mars and sat them in the ballpark when Babe Ruth was playing, they'd be able to feel the sparks he could generate. They'd know right away that this man was something special."

"The same thing would be true if they could see Satchel Paige ambling in from the bullpen. And the amazing thing about it is, that those people with the most charisma usually don't think there's anything different about themselves. Dizzy Dean was about as colorful as they come, but he had no idea he was unusual. Where he came from, everyone acted and spoke the way he did."

If Veeck is uncertain as to what constitutes charisma or star quality, he is certain that today's athletes aren't as colorful as those of the past. "Education and the media have made people conform to accepted standards, and that reduces the number of colorful guys like Dizzy Dean and Satchel." But Veeck did admit to feeling a certain electricity watching a Pete Rose in baseball, a Joe Namath in football, a Bobby Hull or Gordie Howe in hockey or a Julius Boros or Arnold Palmer in golf. "I can sense it, I can feel it," says Veeck. "These guys can communicate something without words, and what they communicate excites people."

After our chat with Veeck, FAMILY WEEKLY went to a number of other sports experts and asked them who, in their opinion, were the most "charismatic" athletes in the world today. The experts we talked to were Pamela Van Wagenen, editor of "womenSports" magazine, Alex Karras, former football star turned TV personality, Jeanne Parr, author of "The Superwives: Life with the Giant Jocks," Don Meredith, another football star who's found a home on TV, and Dick Schaap, a TV commentator and editor of "Sport" magazine. Here's their list (right).

Most Charismatic Athletes

(Listed Alphabetically)

Men

Muhammad Ali
Jimmy Connors
A. J. Foyt
Walt Frazier
John Havlicek
Gordie Howe
(ice hockey)
Joe Namath
Arnold Palmer
Pete Rose
Lee Trevino

Women

JoAnne Carner
(golf) Chris Evert
Evonne Goolagong
Billie Jean King
Olga Korbut
Francie Larrieu Lutz
(track)
Mary Jo Peppler
(volleyball)
Judy Rankin
Kathy Switzer
(marathon)
Virginia Wade

Men are attracted to bowler Paula Sperber. Guess why.

ABOUT JOE NAMATH

Don Meredith: "He makes this sport tick, is what he does. I know that neither he nor the Jets have done a whole heck of a lot lately, but Joe is still the one football player everybody knows and that includes your little old ladies who wouldn't know a football from an unidentified flying object."

Dick Schaap: "He still has it all—the looks, the style, the swagger. As long as he stays in football, he'll be one of the sports world's most exciting figures."

ABOUT BILLIE JEAN KING

Pamela Van Wagenen: "Billie Jean revolutionized tennis and women's sports in general because of the strength of her personality. Who else could have done it? She put her career and reputation on the line to fight for the overall improvement of women's conditions in sports. She had so much opposition, but she succeeded anyway. People should never forget that."

Alex Karras: "I have to admit I don't give a rap about tennis, but Billie Jean, who's a nice girl, really took on the big boys and won. I think that women's sports still have a long way to go, but without King, they'd probably still be in the Dark Ages. This girl has charisma, all right."

ABOUT MUHAMMAD ALI

Bill Veeck: "Ali has a title. Heavyweight Boxing Champion, that has built-in charisma. But he has taken that and run with it. Nobody can duplicate him. He's the best-known athlete—probably the best-known person—in the world."

Dick Schaap: "I covered him for the first time when he boxed at the Rome Olympics in 1960, and even way back then, when he was only 18, he had a style, an appeal that was just totally unique. He couldn't have created it. No 18-year-old can go out and create a personality for himself that doesn't already exist inside of him."

ABOUT JOHN HAVLICEK

Jeanne Parr: "There's one guy who has so much charisma that the superstars from other sports think he's bigger than they are—and that's John Havlicek. A couple of years ago, when Robert Redford invited Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein to his home to discuss the making of "All the President's Men," he also invited John and his wife Beth. While Woodward and Bernstein sat around wondering when Redford would begin discussing the film with them, Redford sat talking basketball with Havlicek. That's the kind of presence this man has."

ABOUT WALT FRAZIER

Pamela Van Wagenen: "He has beautiful muscle development and a way of moving that lets you know he's always in control of his body. Besides that, he has tremendous presence on the basketball court—a kind of dignified, businesslike approach that catches your attention."

Now A Word About Sex Appeal

Charisma's one thing. What about old-fashioned sex appeal? Here FAMILY WEEKLY went to a different group of people—and came up with a different list. The people we talked with were Laura Baugh, golfer, Billie Jean King, tennis champion, Bob Seagren, pole vault champion, Donna de Varona, swimmer, Phyllis George, former Miss America, Lenore Hershey, editor of "Ladies' Home Journal," Dick Schaap, editor of "Sport" magazine, Sheryl Flatow, managing editor of "Sport," Pamela Van Wagenen, editor of "womenSports," Kathy Switzer, a marathon runner, and Paula Sperber, a professional

Here were some of the comments:

Wide World

ABOUT EVONNE GOOLAGONG

Bjorn Borg: "Evonne Goolagong is very sexy the way she moves on and off the court. She's very sleek with long graceful legs. I also think Virginia Wade and Billie Jean King are sexy, but in different ways. Virginia always plays so beautifully, with great strokes and long strides covering the court. She resembles a tigress with her long dark hair. Billie Jean's been on top for so long, and she is a very sexy lady once you get to know her."

Pamela Van Wagenen: "I've found that most tennis players think Evonne Goolagong is a warm, vivacious person with great sex appeal. She has marvelous body control as a player and she has a friendly outgoing personality, too. And she's nice not just to people she knows. She's the same with everyone."

In today's atmosphere of reducing drugs and diet pills, isn't it nice to know there's a safe natural way to lose weight.

If you've spent a good part of your life looking at slim people and wishing you could look as attractive as they do, answer this. How many ways have you tried to lose that weight? By taking reducing drugs? Diet pills? By crash dieting? Living on liquids?

And what for? So you could make yourself jittery and jumpy and drive everybody else up the wall? So you could sit and sip your meals while the rest of the family dug into good solid food? So you could keep hoping that those diet pills would work "overnight" like you thought they would?

Whichever way you chose to reduce, chances are it was so drastic you wound up a nervous wreck. And it's quite understandable. Because those are all unnatural ways to lose weight. Is there then a natural way to eat less, so you shed those excessive pounds without nervous side effects?

If it means doing it with willpower alone, that can be tough. Fact is, in a series of clinical tests, it was learned that most overweight people find it difficult to cut back on their caloric intake without help. And that's where Ayds comes in. Ayds® Reducing Plan Candy. It contains vitamins and minerals but no drugs.

Over the years, hundreds of thousands of people have followed the Ayds plan with success. So this is not a fad. And remember, there are no drugs involved. Here's how it works. Fifteen minutes before meals, you take one or two Ayds with a hot drink. This begins to satisfy your appetite, so when you sit down to eat, you eat less. As a result, you take in fewer calories and lose weight gradually and naturally.

By reducing this way, you're not likely to look drawn and haggard from losing too much too soon. As a matter of fact, people who lose weight on the Ayds plan often look years younger, because it's such a sensible, natural way to reduce.

Incidentally, one of the most appetizing aspects of the Ayds plan is the variety in it. There are no monotonous menus to follow. You can eat regular meals, only Ayds helps you eat less. And you have four Ayds flavors to choose from: chocolate, chocolate mint and butterscotch fudge, or chewy vanilla caramel.

So if you're yearning to be slim and attractive, to be admired by your family and friends, get started on the Ayds plan. It's the best way to prove that this is a safe, natural way to take in fewer calories and lose weight.

ABOUT JOE NAMATH

with Joe Namath for sex appeal. He's saturated with it."

Kathy Switzer: "He's not really the type of guy I'd want to go out with, but he has unmistakable sex appeal. He has an electricity that few men in any field can match."

Donna de Varona: "Joe Namath is one of the sexiest men in sports today. And he knows that one of the reasons he's successful and makes a lot of money is that he's remained single and cultivated his image as a swinger. The illusion of having a lot of sex appeal is almost as important as having a lot of it. Joe's no illusion, but he does work hard at maintaining his image."

Lenore Hershey: "Joe Namath? To me, he's just a macho joke."

ABOUT LAURA BAUGH

Larry Bortstein: "Laura Baugh has a way of looking you in the eye that is totally disarming, at least to a man. Whether she intends to have this effect or not is subject to question, but no other woman in sports can melt me with just a stare."

Bob Seagren: "She's a great-looking girl with a very pretty face. I always went for pretty faces. My wife Kam has a very pretty face. So does Laura—one of the prettiest in sports or anywhere else."

Melchior DiGiacomo

ABOUT BJORN BORG

Billie Jean King: "With his charm and personality, he's going to attract many new fans to men's tennis. You know, women's tennis has been spectacularly successful around the world in recent years, and the men's game has needed someone like Bjorn to be its sex symbol. I see only one problem with Bjorn—he may take too many fans away from us!"

Wide World

ABOUT O. J. SIMPSON

Donna de Varona: "O. J. and I have worked together a few times on television, and I always found him very outgoing and charming. He has a wonderful personality, and definitely has sex appeal."

Lenore Hershey: "I find him attractive as a human being and graceful as an athlete."

ABOUT JOHN NEWCOMBE

Sheryl Flatow: "To me, the sexiest man in sports is John Newcombe, the great tennis player. I like his form, and you can draw your own conclusions as to what I mean by that."

Great Ideas For the Kitchen:

Family Weekly

A DOUBLE BONUS
COOKBOOK

Great kitchens, like this one, are brightly appointed, have enough counter and storage space—allow the whole family to gather for a cook-in.

Exciting things are happening in the kitchen—because we are thinking differently, living differently, cooking differently than we did a decade ago.

The kitchen is breaking out of its rectangle into the round and odd-angular. It is spilling into the living room because hosts want to be with their guests; into the family room because food preparation and serving are becoming more of a family affair. Microwave ovens, indoor barbecues, compactors, self-defrosting and self-cleaning devices, all either unavailable or costly a number of years ago, no longer seem to be luxuries.

Builders, who recently have tried to cut housing costs by reducing the size of the kitchen and eliminating some of its contemporary conveniences, have been told by prospective home buyers, "No, we want kitchens that are larger, not smaller." So builders are rethinking, considering today's lifestyles.

If your kitchen could use a little "breaking out," to give it a more spacious, brighter feeling, here are some of the latest remodeling trends.

In cabinetry, "the European look"—clean, uncluttered, long on color and short on detail—is the newest. Hardware is generally concealed, resulting in straight, unbroken lines.

European-inspired cabinets have had a tremendous impact on the American market. In the past two years, they've encouraged many of us to "forget Mediterranean" and "think modern."

Not that you can't have a Mediterranean-style kitchen if that's what you want. One great thing about today's cabinetry is its versatility. With a different door style, another finish, a change of hardware or different wall and floor coverings, a kitchen becomes a transformed environment, without changing its size or layout at all.

Appliances by General Electric

By Rosalyn Abrevaya/Marilyn Hansen

Continued

What about the major color trend in appliances? The No. 1 best seller is not a color at all! It's white, followed closely by harvest gold.

A trend that is changing the look of appliances is the expanding use of black glass—replacing clear glass in ovens and ranges; it's a perfect companion to the naturals and earth tones currently favored in countertops, wall coverings, floor coverings and cookware.

With cabinets becoming simpler and appliances so often wearing "basic white," it's logical that more pattern should show up on the floor and the wall. Wall coverings are moving away from cute stereo-type "kitchen" patterns—though they are still abundantly available (but being better designed)—and the direction in floor coverings is toward easy-care vinyls in dramatic patterns featuring medallions, florals, abstract forms that blend attractively with today's interiors. (Keep in mind that it's more practical to use pattern where you can replace it, at comparatively little cost, than in cabinets and appliances you'll have to live with for years.)

Another factor in kitchen remodeling is one that has affected, if not swept, the entire economy: do-it-yourself. Escalating labor costs and more leisure time have convinced people who might previously have employed professionals to take up their own tools. Among home owners contemplating improvement, the kitchen has become the do-it-yourselfer's chief project.

How much can you do yourself? Short of plumbing and electrical work, quite a lot, if you're willing and able.

Many kitchen dealers are conducting do-it-yourself clinics, generally free, but with advance registration required. With explanations and demonstrations of the proper tools and how to use them, these specialists supplement the instructions that manufacturers of do-it-yourself cabinetry provide with their product.

To find a specialist who will work with you—or, if you prefer, to contract the whole kitchen remodeling job—look for the emblem of the AIKD (American Institute of Kitchen Dealers) or the letters CKD (Certified Kitchen Dealers) after a kitchen specialist's name. (In terms of cost for major remodeling, including floor covering, the expert's rule of thumb is: three times the cost of new appliances—your sink, refrigerator, cooking units.) For a free national directory of certified kitchen designers, write to the American Institute of Kitchen Dealers, Department FW, 114 Main Street, Hackettstown, N.J. 07840.

With a little help from kitchen professionals, you can make exciting things happen in your kitchen, to suit your family's lifestyle.

Great Things to Make in Your Well-Equipped Kitchen

Today's well-equipped kitchen will contain a number of small appliances. Why? Because as lifestyles change and the traditional six-o'clock dinner gives way to "catch-as-catch-can," small appliances fulfill a real need for flexibility and individuality. These recipes are designed for the new miracle appliances now on the market.

QUICK CHICKEN AND SPINACH ELEGANT (Toaster-Oven)

- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1/2 cup sliced onion
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 jar (2 1/2 ozs.) sliced mushrooms, drained
- 2 (1 lb.) boned, flattened chicken breasts
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon ground black pepper
- 1 pkg. (10 ozs.) creamed spinach
- 2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
- 4 Holland rusks or toast slices

The dual-purpose toaster-oven heats left-overs, toasts bread and can make an entire entree for two. By G.E.

1. Line baking pan of toaster-oven with double thickness of foil, making a 1-inch high rim.
2. Melt butter in foil pan at 300°F. Add onion, garlic and mushrooms. Cook for 2 minutes at 350°F.
3. Add chicken breasts, turning in butter-onion mixture to coat. Sprinkle with salt and pepper.
4. Spoon creamed spinach around chicken. Cook for 7 minutes at 350°F. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese and brown top for 2 minutes at 450°F.
5. Serve over rusks or toast. Makes 2 servings

CINNAMON-WALNUT COFFEE CAKE (Food Processor)

Topping:

- 1/2 cup walnuts or pecans
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon ground cinnamon

Batter:

- 1/2 cup (1 stick) butter, cut in 4 or more pieces
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup sour cream
- 1 1/2 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
- 1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/2 teaspoon salt

1. Make topping: With metal blade in place, add walnuts, 1/2 cup sugar and cinnamon to bowl of food processor.
2. Process, turning on and off, until mixture is combined and nuts are coarsely chopped. Turn mixture onto sheet of waxed paper.
3. Make batter: Again using metal blade, add butter, 1 cup sugar and vanilla to bowl and process until combined, about 30 seconds.
4. Add eggs and sour cream. Process until thoroughly mixed.
5. Combine flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt. Stir to mix, then add to butter mixture. Turn on and off 3 or 4 times until flour disappears.
6. Grease and flour a 7- to 9-cup tube pan (an 8-inch spring form pan will work, too).
7. Place half of batter in pan and top with half of cinnamon mixture. Add remaining batter and sprinkle top evenly with remaining cinnamon mixture.
8. Bake in a preheated, 350°F. oven for 45-50 minutes. Cool for 10 minutes in pan; turn out on rack, turning again so topping side is up, to cool completely. Makes one 2-lb. cake

A Smart Way to Rate Your Kitchen

You can calculate your kitchen's "convenience quotient" by evaluating five areas—storage space, work space, appliances, ventilation and lighting—grading each from one (inefficient) to six (excellent).

A three in any category indicates room for improvement. A total score of 15 or less hints at more than minor remodeling!

A—STORAGE SPACE: Is there enough easily accessible storage space for those items you use daily? Are there "out-of-the-way" cabinets for storing infrequently used materials? Good storage where you want it is of prime importance for step-saving work flow.

1 2 3 4 5 6

B—WORKSPACE: Is there enough counterspace (for food preparation, etc.) and landing space (for grocery bags)? You need 24 inches on each side of the sink bowl, a minimum of 15-18 inches of landing space adjacent to the door handle of the refrigerator, and 18 inches of safety area next to the stove top.

1 2 3 4 5 6

C—UP-TO-DATE APPLIANCES: Innovations in appliances will save you time and eliminate many unpleasant chores. These include dishwashers that wash without pre-rinsing—even pots and pans—frost-free refrigerators, self-cleaning ovens, cooktops without exposed burners, waist-high wall ovens, food-waste disposers.

1 2 3 4 5 6

D—VENTILATION: It will keep your kitchen cooler and looking brighter longer; prevent grease deposits on cabinets, walls and windows; remove heat and moisture; make upkeep a breeze for you.

1 2 3 4 5 6

M'sieur Crepe will make inexpensive main dishes or desserts turn into a fun feast. By Sunbeam.

QUICK CREPES (Electric Crepe-Maker)

- 2 eggs
- 2/3 cup milk
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 2/3 cup buttermilk pancake and waffle mix

1. Place eggs, milk, oil and pancake mix in electric blender; cover and blend until smooth or put mixture in bowl and beat until smooth.
2. Heat electric crepe-maker according to manufacturer's directions.
3. Pour batter into 9-inch pie pan. Dip heated crepe-maker into batter. Place on heating unit

E—LIGHTING: Most kitchens have only one-sixth of the amount of lighting recommended by illumination engineers. Do you have adequate light where you work at the sink and at the stove? How is the general lighting of the room? Good lighting makes your work less tiresome. Light can be decorative and lend your kitchen a more cheerful look.

Help your children! Help their school get the playground equipment it needs. FREE! With Post Cereal box tops.

These days schools are having trouble replacing old and purchasing new sports and playground equipment. And that's unfortunate, because physical fitness is important for every child. But with taxpayers' money being stretched to its limits, school budgets are suffering.

Now you can help.

Post Cereals has developed the "Box Tops for Fun 'N' Fitness" program to help schools (kindergarten through eighth grade) like yours obtain badly needed equipment... from baseballs and tennis rackets to trampolines and parallel bars and much, much more...

Post Cereals is providing this equipment FREE in exchange for Post Cereal box tops. And here's what you can do.

First, be sure that your child's school knows about and participates in the program. Then, start collecting the box tops from everybody's favorite Post Cereals and take them to your school or PTA. From now until March 31, 1977 get your friends and everyone in your community to do the same. Because the more people participate, the more your school can benefit.

As an example, say a school of 500 students wants equipment for a softball team. If each student brings in just 2 box tops a week, they'd have more than enough for new bats, balls, gloves, helmets and bases... and still have enough left for a schoolyard swing set! FREE!

The Post Cereals "Box Tops for Fun 'N' Fitness" program. It's a great way to help all children, including yours.

For details, see the back of specially marked Post Cereal boxes at your supermarket.

2 "Favorite" Kitchens By Professional Designers

The most important room in the house is basic to a family's needs.

These "favorite kitchens," dreamt up by two designers for their lifestyles, attractively utilize a U-shape arrangement. Each allows for efficient work patterns and ample counter and storage space.

This Kitchen Doubles As an Office!

Here's a great kitchen, luxurious and practical, executed by Jack Forst, that features a cooking-center island and adjacent laundry area, designed contiguously in an area 14½ x 17 feet.

The plan is carefully worked out to enable nonkitchen traffic to pass by without interrupting the cooking process.

The refrigerator center, located next to the sink, has 4½ feet of counter space providing a good landing area for groceries, as well as serving as a mixing center.

The cooking island, with a 36-inch exhaust hood above, is angled to let you view activities in the family room. It is topped with heat-resistant tile, contains ample drawer storage for cooking utensils. A planning desk doubles as an office/hobby area.

Cabinet storage (a need voiced most often by American homemakers) is supplemented by a shallow pantry close to both family room and kitchen. The nearby laundry room includes a place to hang wash-and-wear items.

"An all-purpose kitchen such as this one can easily be anyone's favorite," says Forst.

Super-Flexible Cabinets on Wheels

This dual-purpose kitchen (8½ x 9½ feet), by Lorraine Allen, acquires functionalism from its open design, with the kitchen and dining areas flowing into each other. The studio-kitchen (which also doubles as a hobby center) contains one wall of organized storage and three 27-inch-wide portable base cabinets—which mark the room's real flexibility. The cabinets are a genius touch for a small kitchen. They increase the number of surface areas for food preparation, can be rolled around to become a buffet server between the kitchen and dining areas or go out onto the patio as a buffet-bar set-up. When the room is being used for art activities, these cabinets can be pushed back to give more creative space in the middle of the kitchen.

"This 'super-flexible' kitchen is my favorite," says Lorraine, "because of the openness created by the large glass area, plants and lovely view. It satisfies my need for space."

Q. Will the family be eating in the kitchen?

A. Provide a table and chairs and/or a snack bar.

Q. Do you entertain a lot? For the popsicle crowd, teenagers, adults?

A. You'll need ample storage for equipment, supplies and extra serving space.

Q. Will you do meal-planning there?

A. You'll need a desk and shelf for cookbooks.

Q. Do you plan to coordinate the family's activities there?

A. Add a bulletin board, telephone and a file for household records.

Q. How many people might be there at any given time?

A. Too many cooks spoil the broth unless they have room to move around without running into each other.

Q. Is there room for a laundry?

A. We don't want to deal with dirty clothes in the kitchen, but a laundry area nearby is a real convenience.

Q. Do you sew a lot?

A. Consider a sewing room/laundry combination. A large table or drop shelf can double as a folding space for clean clothes and a surface for cutting a pattern—while the iron and ironing board are handy for both operations.

THE WORK TRIANGLE SAVES STEPS

An imaginary triangle, measured between the refrigerator, sink and range, not to exceed 22 feet, is a good rule of thumb for the most efficient arrangement of equipment utilized daily. This flow-of-work pattern will save time and energy. The light arrows point out how the flow of work progresses from the back door (receiving) to refrigerator, to sink, to range, to serving. The dark arrows show how through-the-kitchen traffic properly bypasses the work triangle.

2 Dining Accents— With the Emphasis on “Traditional”

A well-appointed “traditional” accessory or furniture accent piece can’t help but radiate beauty and timelessness. We culled the market for two such jewels that will add to your dining pleasure—but won’t cost a king’s ransom!

Country English Server

Sporting the look of a 17th-century antique, this mobile server, richly carved on a gleaming fruitwood finish, is in scale with today’s rooms. It features a flip top, a silver tray drawer and moves on casters. Open: 59 x 19 inches. Closed: 47 x 19 inches. About $400. By Thomasville.

Colonial Mix

To soften the formality of Colonial Williamsburg styling, dark oak furniture is balanced against a striped pine accent piece from Syroco’s Americana Retrospective collection. The handsome five-arm sconce of glass-enclosed hurricane lamps, with a pewter finish, is mounted on a graceful plaque centered with a traditional scroll motif. About $95.

The non-stick coated waffle baker bakes waffles in about five minutes. It also becomes an open or closed grill in seconds.
By G.E.

TASTY BRAN WAFFLES

(Waffle Baker)

- 1 cup unsifted all-purpose flour
- ¼ cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- ½ teaspoon baking soda
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 cup buttermilk or sour milk
- 2 egg yolks, beaten
- 1 cup All-Bran cereal
- 6 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
- 2 egg whites
- Fresh strawberries
- Warm pancake syrup
- Sour cream

1. Preheat waffle baker to medium-high according to manufacturer's directions.
2. Sift together into mixing bowl: flour, sugar, baking powder, baking soda, salt and cinnamon.
3. Stir in buttermilk and beaten egg yolks; mix well.
4. Fold in bran cereal and butter. In small bowl, beat egg whites until stiff. Fold into bran mixture.
5. Bake according to manufacturer's directions. Serve hot with strawberries, pancake syrup and sour cream.

Makes 4-5 large waffles

FROZEN STRAWBERRY YOGURT PIE

(Electric Yogurt Maker)

- 1 (9-inch) graham cracker crumb crust
- ½ cup sugar, superfine preferred
- 1 envelope unflavored gelatin
- ½ cup water
- 2 egg yolks, beaten
- 2 (8 oz.) cups plain yogurt
- ½ cup strawberry jam
- 2 egg whites
- ¼ teaspoon almond extract
- Few drops red food coloring
- Whipped topping

1. Place crumb crust in freezer.
2. Blend ½ cup sugar and 1 envelope gelatin in small saucepan. Stir water into mixture.
3. Heat to a quick boil, stirring constantly. Blend into beaten yolks quickly and cover with plastic film.
4. Cool mixture, stirring occasionally. Blend yogurt and strawberry jam into mixture and transfer to mixing bowl.

5. Beat egg whites at highest speed of electric mixer until they stand in peaks. Very gradually, beat remaining ¼ cup sugar into egg whites.

6. With a whisk, fold meringue into yogurt mixture, gently stir in almond extract and food coloring. If necessary, place in

By Dina Merrill

In conversation with Helen Dorsey

I like informality. Just recently, we had a birthday party for our daughter Heather. A bunch of kids and one other couple came over, and we sat on the floor, ate shrimp curry with brown rice... and, of course, birthday cake.

Cliff [Dina's husband, Cliff Robertson] cooks, too. He's particularly inventive if you let him loose with a bunch of leftovers. Several years ago, when we were in New Mexico, we forgot to do the marketing. When I came home, Cliff said, "Tonight we're having tacos, but with a very peculiar filling." He had mixed together everything he could find in the refrigerator—bits of pineapple, leftover shredded chicken, tomato and lettuce—and stuck it in the tacos. It was yummy!

I cook quite simply—I don't go in for heavy seasonings or too many rich sauces. But I love herbs, like tarragon and dill, and I use them in flavoring some of my recipe specialties—Mussels Marinère, Veal Scallops With Mushrooms and Virtuous Cabbage. I don't know where the name for Virtuous Cabbage came from, but it's easy and delicious!

Two movies Dina will be starring in this fall are "Running Wild," with Lloyd Bridges, and "Throw Out the Anchor," with Richard Egan. She'll also be appearing in TV's "Hawaii Five-O."

Dina Merrill:

Have You Ever Tried My "Virtuous Cabbage"?

Yukky. Yummy.

Without Fruit-Fresh.

With Fruit-Fresh.

Peaches preserved in ordinary canning syrup for 12 hours.

Fruit-Fresh. You need it for canning, freezing, and fresh fruit.

If you want all the fruit you serve to look and taste its freshest, what you really need is Fruit-Fresh. Because Fruit-Fresh contains a special ingredient that locks in the natural, "just-picked" color and flavor. Which means no more brown, mushy-looking peaches.

Fruit-Fresh is economical, too. A 5-oz. can will preserve up to 75 lbs. of peaches. Here's how: For Canning: simply add Fruit-Fresh to the regular syrup. For Freezing: add Fruit-Fresh to the syrup or dry sugar. For Fresh Fruit: sprinkle Fruit-Fresh on your just-sliced fruit before refrigerating. Sound good? It tastes delicious.

Keeps fruit looking and tasting fresher.

Free Offer: For free Fruit-Fresh dessert recipe booklet, send self-addressed stamped envelope to: Fruit-Fresh Recipe Offer, Dept. FF475, Box 1467, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15230.

VIRTUOUS CABBAGE

- 1 medium-sized head of cabbage, washed
- Salted, boiling water
- 2-3 tablespoons butter
- ½ cup pignola nuts
- 4 strips lean bacon, cooked drained and crumbled
- Freshly ground black pepper

1. Break cabbage leaves into small pieces and place in saucepan with enough boiling, salted water to barely cover cabbage.
2. Cover and boil for 3 to 4 minutes or until cabbage is barely tender and retains its color. Drain.

3. Heat butter in small skillet and brown pignola nuts.
4. Top cabbage with nuts and bacon. Season to taste with black pepper. Makes 4 servings

MUSSELS MARINERE

- 4 pts. mussels
- 1 cup dry white wine
- 1 tablespoon chopped scallion
- 1 sprig parsley
- ½ clove garlic, pressed
- Small piece of bay leaf
- Pinch of thyme
- Freshly ground black pepper
- 3 tablespoons butter
- Salt to taste
- 1 tablespoon chopped parsley or dill

1. Scrub mussel shells with a stiff brush and rinse thoroughly to remove sand.
2. Place shells in a kettle with wine, scallion, parsley sprig, garlic, bay leaf, thyme and pepper.
3. Cover kettle and cook over high heat until shells open, about 5 minutes.
4. Remove mussels from the kettle. Discard any mussels that are not open! Remove top shell and place mussels in a heated deep dish or tureen.
5. Strain stock and cook over high heat until liquid is reduced in volume by one-third of its original volume. Add butter and salt.
6. Pour stock over mussels in tureen. Add chopped parsley or dill to garnish. (Serve in deep soup bowls or casseroles and eat mussels directly from the shell. Delicious served with thick slices of crusty French bread.) Makes 6 to 8 servings

VEAL SCALLOPS WITH MUSHROOMS

- 8 small veal scallops (about 1½ lbs.)
- 2-3 tablespoons butter
- 6 large fresh mushrooms, thinly sliced
- 1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
- ¼ cup dry vermouth
- Salt
- Freshly ground black pepper to taste

1. Flatten scallops slightly by pounding.
2. Heat 2 tablespoons butter in large skillet, add veal and brown quickly on both sides. Remove scallops and keep warm on heated platter.
3. Add remaining butter to pan drippings. Sauté mushrooms until golden brown and remove to heated platter.
4. Add mustard to pan drippings. Stir in vermouth and cook quickly over high heat to deglaze pan. Season with salt and pepper.
5. Pour sauce over scallops and mushrooms on platter. (Excellent with hot cooked brown rice!) Makes 4 servings

People Quiz

By John E. Gibson

Brainpower:

It's Nice to Have, But How Much Do You Know About It?

True or False? There are interesting differences between men's and women's mental functions. (See No. 5)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Thinking gives some people a headache.
2. Fat people think differently than other people.
3. People who are lacking in intelligence tend to make up for it with curiosity.
4. Some people never use all their brainpower, while others use more than they have.
5. There are interesting differences between men's and women's mental functions.
6. The more intelligent you are, the less likely you are to become neurotic in your old age.

ANSWERS

1. True. You've often heard the complaint "Just thinking about that gives me a headache," and with some people any situation which necessitates their putting their mental marbles through their paces causes them to be nervous and distraught. And psychological studies show that this can culminate in a headache. In fact, the headache is a defense mechanism for not having to think any more.
2. True—as evidenced by studies at the University of Texas, which showed that overweight people tend to be more conservative in their thinking, more bound by tradition and precedent and less inclined to entertain new or novel concepts and ideas. They might be described as practical, no-nonsense thinkers, less likely to be carried away by fanciful or illogical flights of imagination.
3. False. A team of investigators from the University of Delaware and Bryn Mawr College made an interesting study in which subjects' ability to think and reason was compared with their self-ratings on curiosity. Results showed a positive relationship between curiosity and intelligence. It has been observed that "curiosity is one of the certain characteristics of a vigorous intellect."

4. True. Just as some people don't use the brains that they have, there are others who use more than they have—they pick other people's brains, ask their advice and opinions, and after evaluating them, tackle and solve problems they otherwise wouldn't be able to handle. This is an effective formula for stepping up your mental horsepower when pressure situations demand all you've got and more. The trick, however, is in astutely assessing other people's ideas and concepts and separating the wheat from the chaff.
5. True. Take the memory processes, for example. In psychological studies at a leading university, men and women students were asked to record their earliest memories. Marked differences were noted: "Males reported significantly more memories relating to 'games and parties' and 'accidents to self,' while females reported more memories relating to 'family interaction' (pleasant or unpleasant), 'frightening experiences' and 'sensual experiences.'" More men recalled pleasurable experiences, and women reported the most neutral experiences—neither pleasant nor unpleasant.
6. True. A psychiatric study of people 65 and over has shown that those who manifested neurotic or depressive symptoms averaged significantly lower I.Q.s than emotionally healthy subjects of similar age. It is concluded that intelligence is a key factor in facilitating a good adjustment to aging.

Deep Heating Rub

PHILADELPHIA—"My grip strength improved," said Sara Kait. A spritely 75 year old nursing home resident, Miss Kait had taken part in tests conducted by Mentholatum Deep Heating Rub and Extra Strength Lotion. First an instrument was used to measure grip strength. Then Mentholatum Deep Heating Rub was applied for temporary relief of minor pain and to improve mobility. Later, when tested again, the grip strength of most of those tested had significantly improved. "It certainly works," said Miss Kait.

The Doctor Lets You In

HOW TO GET THROUGH SNEEZIN' SEASON

We all know that hay fever is caused by pollen from the ragweed plant, but did you know that ragweed thrives in dry soil (mostly east of the Mississippi) where other plants have difficulty surviving, and that, in wetter weather, ragweed growth may be limited by the growth of other plants around it? So a wet summer may be your greatest ally when hay fever season comes around. What to do? Well, first, try to avoid pollen.

Pollen is heaviest in early evening and until dew washes the air in the early-morning hours. Stay indoors after dusk, using air-conditioning. Keep windows closed and keep flowers out of the house. (Chrysanthemums and marigolds are lovely, but they are insidious relatives of the ragweed.)

Over-the-counter antihistamines are often good for minimizing hay fever symptoms, but if your case is severe, stronger stuff may be needed—like a cortisone-type medication your doctor may wish to prescribe for brief periods. He may go one step further to a series of desensitization shots, but they can't be begun until after the hay fever season is ended. (Though such shots are usually effective, they remain somewhat controversial.) Tip from the doctor: If hay fever's got you so worked up you're thinking of moving to someplace blessedly pollen-free, don't go to Japan. Most of Europe is free from ragweed, but Americans spoiled Japan in the late 1800's when missionaries brought the yellow-flowered plant ambrosia there for cultivation as a garden flower.

Tips On Handling Money Quarrels

Rising living costs strain not only family finances but family relationships as well. As marital therapist Marcia Lasswell points out: "Money conflicts in marriage are nothing new. Until recently, however, most of them stemmed from the different emotional meanings money has for each spouse. But today it is external pressures that cause the frictions." Here are some tips from family experts on how to approach the subject of money in these troubled times: 1) Be realistic. Realize that inflated prices are a fact of life that will be with us quite a while. 2) Don't try to compare today's costs with what you remember from your childhood. It's not possible to be as economical as we remember our parents were. 3) Because finances seem to be beyond your control, don't let yourself "overcontrol" other areas of family life. 4) Be tolerant and understanding about each other's small pleasures. 5) Don't blame each other. —By Norman Lobsenz

THE RICE DIET

You can lose as much weight as you want without hunger through an important weight loss discovery that mobilizes fat to water. Order now and read what medical science says about it. We've published a new, easy to understand guidebook, The Rice Diet, that is short enough to read in one hour. It summarizes all the research in just a few thousand words.

It Must Work Or You Don't Have to Pay Our $1.99 Price

You must begin losing weight within a few days after you mail your order, without hunger, feel healthier and lose as much as you want — permanently — or you get a full refund, anytime. We invite you to ask your own doctor what he thinks about our guidebook. We guarantee that you'll like our delicious menus and recipes like Veal Marengo, Rice Pudding, Fresh Fruit Cup, Canteloupe, Fried Rice, Fresh Mixed Salad.

Famous People Have Endorsed The Results of Rice Dieting

"I truly would have died if I hadn't gone" on a program of rice dieting, says the wife of a former state governor. "I was seriously ill and weighed 230 pounds." She dropped 80 pounds in 19 weeks, and her blood sugar plummeted as well. (Since the diet is largely carbohydrate, this is one of the mysteries of it.)

A famous singer and movie actor, on the other hand, got hooked on the taste of the diet and lost 80 pounds, too. He still follows the diet every day. Before the Rice Diet, he had been on a high-protein diet for ten years or so: "I used to have to put down a pound of steak before recording," he says. "Now, I can eat a little rice and sing like a bird."

The Diet Reverses Much Damage Done by Heart Disorders

Twenty-five years ago our medical establishment was extremely skeptical of the startling discovery that the Rice Diet reverses much of the damage done by blood vessel, eye, heart, and kidney disorders. Without any medication other than a prolonged diet largely composed of unsalted rice, some enlarged hearts grew smaller, blood pressures and blood sugar dropped.

Claims For the Rice Diet Verified by Teams of Doctors

Teams of doctors from leading institutions around the world investigated the diet. They thought that they would scoff at the claims, but they applauded instead. "The question now," concluded one report in one eminent medical journal, "is not 'Does the diet work?' The question is 'How does it work?'"

Please check one box, enclose payment, and mail to us: Order Now.

ISOBEL de ROSNAY
Good looks are "very tiring"

Our own candidate for the poor-little-rich-girl legend is Isobel de Rosnay, the daughter of recently knighted financier Sir James Goldsmith and the wife of Baron Arnaud. The beautiful 22-year-old, reportedly worth over $80 million, is said to find tending her looks "very tiring" and will not venture out of the house when she is tired, claiming she is then so unattractive her friends could never recognize her. Recently, Isobel tried her hand at modeling. It terri-

THE DOUBLE LIFE OF WILLIAM ANTHONY PRAZSKY
From blue collar on Monday to vestments on Sunday

On Sunday he's a bishop, on Monday he's a mechanic—and he gave up his wife to live this "double life." The Most Reverend Bishop William Anthony Prazsky, 61, was just plain "Bill" to his weekday colleagues at a New York automotive shop. But, in 1968, he decided to enter religious service. Joe Puccio, one of the men at the shop, says: "When I found out Bill was a bishop—well, I thought it was pretty unusual. The men are really open with him, though they tend to try to hold the language down. Bill is very skilled at his job. And he's sort of like a father figure for us; he's a fellow you can lean on, tell your problems to." Becoming a bishop required some sacrifices—one of which was giving up his wife, Petronella (a must, according to church law). She now lives apart from her husband in a nearby "convent" and sews vestments for the church. And the congregation gets every bit of Bill's salary, with his blessings. Bishop Prazsky built his church himself, in the traditional Eastern European style, "to remind the people of their churches back home in the old country." It's even heated by a coal stove!

fied her. "I'm so scared, I'm trembling," she said before her turn came to parade an outfit before Princess Anne and 800 others on the grounds of the Tower of London for the Save the Children Fund. "I must remember to take 90 steps," she whispered to herself beneath a dazzling smile that did a lot to hide the inner uneasiness. Makes you wonder how she gets up in the morning. . .

A funny "inside" story about a great movie classic: "Walt Disney can thank God his Seven Dwarfs weren't real!" groaned one member of MGM publicity after months of trying to cope with the swarm of midgets who portrayed the Munchkins and sundry diminutives in 'The Wizard of Oz.' The little people were probably the production's biggest headache. Three hundred and fifty midgets were needed for the picture, and the polyglot group of little people assembled came from a wide range of professions. Many of the Munchkins were midgets who, in fact, were forced to make their living by panhandling and prostitution. Assistants were ordered to watch the crew of midgets, who brandished knives and often conceived passions for other larger Metro personnel. The small men pinched Judy Garland's derriere, some even propositioned her. One, more prosaic, asked her for a date. 'What could I say?' Judy once shrugged, 'I don't want to go out with you because you're short?' So I said, 'No, I don't think my mother would let me.' So he said, 'Aw, bring your mom along, too!'" From "Down the Yellow Brick Road: The Making of The Wizard of Oz," by Doug McClelland (Pyramid Books, $4.95).

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY
By Richard Armour

POOR FOURTH

A broom and a mop and a rag
(This fact I believe should be stressed)

Mean more than many a thing
To a housewife with housework obsessed.

Not more than clothing or cash
Or jewelry, food, or drink,
But certainly more than a husband,
Some hobbies (I'm one of them) think.

"Oh, honey, put down that broom,
That mop and that rag," I dare mention.
"I'm home, and I hope, how I hope,
I'll get; when there's time, some attention."

Trying to meet people half way is apt to make you wonder if they understand fractions.

—Franklin P. Jones

"How do love birds know when love is at an end?"
"The trill is gone."

—Frank Tyger

Seven-year-old Maria, who recently moved into our neighborhood from Colombia, was progressing admirably with her English. But when her girlfriend asked what her father did, Maria, whose father had retired early, hesitated a moment, then replied brightly, "He's out-of-order!"

—Kathleen Hawkins,
San Francisco, Calif.

"Quite frankly, I'm in this business to make a quick buck and get out!"

A black and white illustration of a cowboy on a horse, holding a lasso. The cowboy is wearing a hat and a vest. The horse is galloping. The background is a misty, mountainous landscape.
