

Death Penalty Upheld By Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court upheld the death penalty today, ruling that it is not a constitutionally forbidden "cruel and unusual punishment."

According to an Associated Press survey, 572 men and 10 women on death rows in 30 states were awaiting the court's decision.

The vote was 7 to 2, with Justices William J. Brennan Jr. and Thurgood Marshall dissenting.

It was the high court's first ruling on the death penalty since June 29, 1972, when the court ruled 5 to 4 that laws then on the books gave too much discretion to judges and juries. That decision invalidated death penalty laws of 36 states, the District of Columbia and the federal government.

In the aftermath of the 1972 decision, 35 states re-enacted the death penalty. But in one of them — Illinois — the law was struck down by the state supreme court.

New laws in 20 states made the death penalty mandatory for a limited number of crimes. Fourteen other states enacted laws employing various formulas calling for judges and juries to consider aggravating and mitigating circumstances.

Most of the new laws impose capital punishment for fewer offenses than before. In three states — California, Colorado and Washington — the new measures were enacted by popular vote.

Congress passed a law providing the death penalty for aggravated cases of air piracy resulting in death. The death penalty has not been imposed under this law.

Since 1930, when reliable count was first kept, 3,859 persons have been executed.

The cases before the Supreme Court involved six men charged with murders in Florida, Louisiana, Texas, Georgia and North Carolina between 1973 and 1974. The six were among 76 death row inmates who asked the Supreme Court to review their cases.

The court outlined its views in separate opinions by Justices Potter Stewart and Byron R. White and a brief statement by Justice Harry A. Blackmun, who said simply that he concurred in the judgment.

Stewart said the imposition of the death penalty for murder "has a long history of acceptance both in the United States and in England" and was obviously accepted by the framers of the Constitution.

The court said the re-enactment of capital punishment by state legislatures was a "marked indication of society's endorsement of the death penalty for murder."

Stewart, in an opinion joined by Justices Lewis F. Powell and John Paul Stevens, said that the death penalty is not under all circumstances a violation of the constitutional ban against cruel and unusual punishment, and that the Georgia law satisfied the requirements which the high court outlined in its 1972 decision.

"We hold that the death penalty is not a form of punishment that may never be imposed, regardless of the circumstances of the offense, regardless of the character of the offender, and regardless of the procedure followed in reaching the decision," they said.

The Georgia law cited in the ruling was signed in 1973 by then Gov. Jimmy Carter, now the almost certain Democratic nominee for president.

These are the inmates whose cases the court chose to hear: —Charles William Proffitt, 30, a roustabout for a Tampa, Fla., department store, convicted of stabbing to death a high school wrestling coach after entering the victim's apartment through an open patio door. The victim, Joel Medgebow, 23, was slain in his sleep July 9, 1973. Proffitt told a psychiatrist he had an unconscious mind.

Two-Tenths Of Per Cent Unemployment Advance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment jumped to 7.5 per cent of the work force in June, up two-tenths of a per cent and the biggest monthly climb since the depths of last year's recession, the government said today.

The increase could create election-year difficulties for President Ford. He has said the steady drop in the nation's jobless rate until now has shown that his economic policies are working.

The rise also could bring new pressure for additional government action to create jobs.

However, government economists have said that a rise in the jobless rate would not be a cause for concern. "I wouldn't interpret a rise as a sign of any sudden change in the economy," said Maynard Comiez, a top Commerce Department economist.

The Labor Department said the number of unemployed in June increased by 280,000 to a total of 7.1 million, while the number of employed declined by 200,000 to a total of 87.5 million.

There were increases in unemployment in nearly all categories in the labor force, the department said.

Its statistics showed: —Adult men, 6 per cent in June, up from 5.6 per cent in May.

—Adult women, 7.1 per cent, up from 6.8 per cent in May.

—Whites, 6.8 per cent, up from 6.6 per cent.

—Blacks, 13.3 per cent, up from 6.6 per cent.

Blacks, 13.3 per cent, up from 12.2 per cent.

Heads of households, 5.1 per cent, up from 4.8 per cent in May.

—Married men, 4.4 per cent, up from 4 per cent.

—Teen-age unemployment held virtually steady at 18.4 per cent, down from 18.5 per cent in May.

In addition, the Labor Department said the average duration of unemployment increased by two weeks in June to 16.9 weeks. That was equal to the high reached last December.

The increase in the overall jobless rate was the biggest monthly jump since May of last year, when unemployment rose three-tenths of a per cent to 8.9 per cent and 8.25 million Americans in the labor force were out of work.

That May was the worst unemployment month of the recent recession.

By May a year later, the jobless rate had dropped to 7.3 per cent, when 6.9 million Americans in the labor force were jobless.

Although Ford administration economists had said the jobless rate could rise in June because of a statistical quirk, Labor Department analysts said no quirk was involved.

They said agency statistics, including seasonal adjustment factors to compensate for teenage summer employment, been accurate so far and that the June rise in unemployment was precisely that: a rise in unemployment.

For the first time in several months, the nation's labor force stopped growing in June, remaining at the May level of about 94.6 million.

The Labor Department also said there was not much change in the number of so-called discouraged workers, who totaled about 900,000 during the second quarter of the year.

Discouraged workers are people who have given up looking for jobs and thereby removed themselves from the nation's labor force.

The department said employment in manufacturing fell slightly in June, as it had in May, to 18.9 million, down from just under 19 million in May.

Comiez and other economists said an increase in the overall unemployment rate was possible, if not probable, because part of the decline in the jobless rate earlier this year may have resulted from an exaggeration in seasonal adjustment factors.

Celebrations Are For All America

By The Associated Press
In Philadelphia, they're preparing for the President and protests.

In George, Wash., they're getting ready to eat a 60-square-foot cherry pie.

In American Samoa, they're planning copra-cutting and spear-chucking contests.

In all 50 states, in American territories, in big cities and small towns, America is preparing to celebrate its 200th birthday in thousands of different ways, all meant to make July 4, 1976, a day to remember.

If there is one thing that ties the celebrations together, it will be the pealing of bells. At 2 p.m. Sunday, members of the Pennsylvania Society, Sons of the Revolution, will lay their hands on the Liberty Bell, which tolled 200 years ago to proclaim independence.

The bell will not be rung due to its famous crack, but bells across the nation will toll to celebrate the moment when the Declaration of Independence was signed.

Philadelphia expects to host several hundred thousand people on the Fourth, with the major attractions a five-hour downtown parade and a Bicentennial speech by President Ford.

But two other parades are also planned for Philadelphia on Sunday, and city officials say these parades — protests by two groups, the July Fourth Coalition and Rich Off Our Backs — have kept a lot of people away from the city. The city's official parade has shrunk from 70,000 to 35,000 marchers as bands canceled out.

"A lot of them cited the threat of violence," said parade director Bill Mullen.

President Ford will stop at Valley Forge, Pa., Sunday before taking part in the ceremonies at Independence Hall. He'll then go by helicopter to the aircraft carrier Forrestal for Operation Sail, the international procession of sailing ships up New York Harbor.

More than 200 ships, led by 17 square-rigged sailing ships, will make their way up the harbor before an estimated 10 to 15 million people.

In Columbia, S.C., Boy Scouts will lead families and church and neighborhood groups into the parade at intersections along the route.

A similar parade of the citizenry is planned for Rexburg, Idaho, which was devastated (Continued on page 8)

State Said Paying Price Of Prisons Neglect

MARION, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina prison system has sought money from the legislature for years to replace inflammable foam mattresses like those which burned, killing five prisoners and injuring 24, an official says.

"We're paying the price for dereliction," added W.L. Kautzky, deputy state prisons director.

Kautzky said inmates in one of the two cell blocks at the McDowell County prison unit piled about 20 polystyrene mattresses on a table Wednesday night and set them afire.

Don Torppa, deputy secretary of the North Carolina Corrections Department, said Thursday that after a fire last fall at another prison in western North Carolina, corrections officials decided "to change to safer mattresses." About 30 days ago the department asked for bids for non-flammable cotton filling for mattresses, which are made by prisoners, and the bids will be opened next week, Torppa said.

No one died in the earlier fire, at Craggy Prison near Asheville.

The fire at the McDowell County unit near Marion, 40 miles east of Asheville, was started to protest "mild disciplinary action," Kautzky said. "Two radios on that side of the dorm were picked up because they were being played in violation of policy. As minuscule as it sounds, the inmates confirmed that's what did it," he said.

However, Frank Hammonds and Johnny Brooks, two of four injured prisoners who were transferred to Charlotte Memorial hospital, said the blaze was the result of mounting frustration by the prisoners over several weeks because their privileges had been cut back. Hammonds and Brooks, each 31, gave this account:

Because some inmates had been rowdy, prison officials eliminated several daily exercise periods each week. They also ordered the prisoners to bed by 10 o'clock each night.

Usually prisoners were allowed to watch television or talk quietly until late in the evening. Wednesday night, a guard demanded two radios in cell block B, the one that was burned, because he said the prisoners had been playing them after hours. A prisoner handed over one radio. But another "told the sergeant that before he turned it over he'd bust it all to pieces which he did." And that's when several prisoners set mattresses on a table and set them afire.

There were 67 prisoners in the two cellblocks. State prison officials have said North Carolina prisons are overcrowded, but they added that McDowell was not one of them.

Officials said the five staff remained inside the Beirut airport south of the city and did nothing to check the fighting. Several artillery shells fell near their positions early today.

A three-man mission from an emergency conference of Arab foreign ministers in Cairo was due in Beirut to try to negotiate a cease-fire and get the peacekeepers deployed. The mission spent the night in Damascus and met with Syrian President Hafez Assad.

The Palestinians and their Lebanese Moslem allies declared once again that they would not agree to a cease-fire until the attack on Tal Zaatar halted and the thousands of Syrian troops that have invaded Lebanon since June 1 were withdrawn.

Christian leaders indicated they would not stop fighting until they captured Tal Zaatar.

Hand-To-Hand Fighting Rages In Palestinian Camp; Issue In Doubt

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Grenade-throwing Christians stormed into a burning Palestinian refugee camp in south-east Beirut today and fought defending guerrillas hand-to-hand in the fiercest battle of the Lebanese civil war.

Christian spokesmen said the attacking force of 6,000 militiamen supported by 130 tanks and armored cars penetrated the defenses of the Tal Zaatar camp from two sides and was making a house-to-house advance.

"The penetration is well under way. More than 300 Palestinian guerrillas already have surrendered," one Christian spokesman said.

The Palestinians denied the camp had fallen but admitted their situation was desperate.

"Half of it is burning as a result of a murderous barrage of incendiary bombs that set the stage for the right-wing assault," said a Palestinian spokesman. "But the camp is steadfastly fighting off the attackers."

The joint Palestinian-Lebanese leftist command said reinforcements were moving down a mountain road from the east. The relief column broke through Christian defenses at the summer resort town of Beit Meir and moved to within a mile and a half of Tal Zaatar, a commune claimed.

It did not report the size of the reinforcements but said they captured one Christian stronghold and destroyed four tanks.

The Palestinians also claimed they inched forward into two low-income Christian residential areas of Beirut in house-to-house combat. The push was designed to ease pressure on Tal Zaatar.

Hospitals and security officials reported about 180 persons killed and more than 280 wounded during the night in Beirut and elsewhere, but this did not include the Tal Zaatar fighting.

An Arab peacekeeping force of 2,300 Saudi Arabian, Sudanese, Libyan and Syrian troops remained inside the Beirut airport south of the city and did nothing to check the fighting. Several artillery shells fell near their positions early today.

BIKE CENTENNIAL '76

I'd like some information about Bike Centennial '76, some kind of organized bicycling trail from the East to the West Coast. Can you get me an address to which I may send an inquiry? J.B.

The national headquarters address for the Bike Centennial is Box 1034, Missoula, Mont. 59801. However, according to Mrs. Edith Webber who with her husband, Dr. Carroll Webber, has followed the route from Camp Chickahominy near Williamsburg, Va. to Ashland, Va. (about 80 miles), it's best to simply go to one of the stations along the trail (there's one about every 40 miles) and start from there. She and her husband had their bikes put in cartons and rode the bus from here to Suffolk, Va., riding their bikes from there.

The trail that's been established for the Bike Centennial runs from Williamsburg to Ashland, Ore. Places to spend the night are set up in places like church basements and community buildings along the way. Routes are chosen through scenic and historic areas along roads that are as little traveled by motorized vehicles as is possible, Mrs. Webber said.

Camp Chickahominy, the closest point of the Bike Centennial Trail to Greenville, is located on State Road 611 off Highway 614 near Williamsburg. The Camp Chickahominy phone number is 804-229-9142.

Carter Expected Pick Senator For VP

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jimmy Carter is almost certain to choose a senator to be his vice presidential running mate and may already have narrowed the field to three, a senator familiar with Carter's selection process says.

The leading candidates for the second spot on the Democratic presidential ticket are Idaho's Frank Church, Walter F. Mondale of Minnesota and John Glenn of Ohio, said the senator, who asked not to be identified. He said Carter more than likely will pick a middle-of-the-road runningmate.

Preliminary evaluations are being made by Atlanta attorney Charles Kirbo, a long-time Carter associate who is expected to report soon to the former Georgia governor.

At least three other senators also are being considered.

They are Henry M. Jackson of Washington, who competed with Carter for the Democratic nomination; Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, the 1968 Democratic vice presidential nominee; and Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois, whose father was the Democratic presidential candidate in 1952 and 1956.

"Most of these guys he doesn't know personally at all," said the senator, who himself has been consulted by Kirbo. "He's fortunate to have this extra time to appraise them and size them up."

Carter said in Washington earlier this week that he will narrow the runningmate list to two or three names this weekend, then speak with the finalists personally sometime next week.

In Chicago Thursday, he said he would name the finalists when he holds those meetings.

"I'm not going to try to hide from the press or mislead anyone. At the time I start meeting with people you will know about it. I think at that point it will be a proper time to let the names be known," he said.

Church, 51, a foreign relations expert who beat Carter in some primary elections in western states, gained national publicity over the last year for his handling of two key assignments.

He was chairman of the select committee that investigated the CIA, FBI and other intelligence agencies. He also headed the subcommittee that probed the activities of multinational corporations and forced the disclosure that many of them have paid millions of dollars in bribes to foreign officials.

Mondale, 47, a member of the Senate since 1964, is a former Minnesota attorney general. In November 1974, after several months of consideration, he announced he would not seek the Democratic presidential nomination in 1976 primarily because "I found I did not have an overwhelming desire to be president."

Glenn, 55, was the first U.S. astronaut to orbit the earth. He was elected to the Senate in 1974 after two unsuccessful attempts.

Arrested On Day Before

RALEIGH (AP) — The newest member of the North Carolina Utilities Commission was arrested on a drunken driving charge the day before he was sworn into office.

W. Scott Harvey, former state commerce secretary, was sworn into office as a utilities commissioner Thursday. About 2 a.m. Wednesday, Harvey's car was stopped by a state trooper on suspicion of drunken driving.

Courthouse records show Harvey registered a .09 on the Breathalyzer and was charged with drunken driving. A .10 is considered legally drunk. When a person registers below .10, the prosecutor commonly reduces the charge.

Harvey said he hadn't hired an attorney or decided how to plead.

Harvey's appointment to the commission is to fill the remaining year of former Chairman Marvin Wooten's. Harvey must be approved by the legislature when it meets next year. Wooten stepped down to become a federal bankruptcy judge in Charlotte.

U.S. Could Expand Crop Land If Extra Output Is Required

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States could expand its crop-growing land by as much as one-third if the extra output is needed, a new government study says.

Much of this land appears to be in the South and Midwest, the study said.

The U.S. Soil Conservation Service said an estimated 111 million additional acres could be used for crops. Last year, farmers planted about 333 million acres with crops ranging from wheat, corn and soybeans to cotton, tobacco and peanuts.

Previous estimates of potential "new" crop land have run as high as 266 million acres. The agency said those estimates now appear much too high.

Officials of the Agriculture Department agency said that the study was started in May of last year and involved surveys by SCS employees at 41,000 sites in 506 counties selected at random. The surveys included sites in all 50 states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands but did not include any federally owned land.

The report identified three kinds of acreages of potential crop land that could be switched from present use with "varying degrees of difficulty and expense."

About 24 million acres of "prime farm land" could be converted to crops simply by beginning tillage. Those soils "would require little or no protection from erosion and, with normal rainfall, should produce high yields," the agency said.

Another 54 million acres of high-potential land could be used for crops, but would require some soil and water conservation management.

Finally, about 33 million acres of medium-potential land could be converted. Those acres "pose more serious erosion hazards and water disposal problems" and would be more costly to put into production.

Allen R. Hildebaugh, an survey analyst, said Thursday that most of the 111 million acres of potential crop land now is in livestock pastures and ranges. Although the survey analysis has not been completed, it appeared that "high concentrations" of the land are in the South and Midwest. The agency said the 111 million acres represent land that could be brought into crop production without seriously affecting the environment through soil erosion and water problems. Officials said they have doubts whether more than 111 million acres "could be brought into crop land safely."

Hildebaugh said that converting pastures and ranges into crops would not necessarily jeopardize the livestock industry since there is much marginal land now in crops that could and should be switched to grass. Also, if need be, there are huge areas of marginal forest land that could be used for livestock.

Thunderstorm Aborted Balloonist's Attempt

NEW YORK (AP) — Karl Thomas steamed safely toward Holland aboard a Russian ship today after a severe thunderstorm aborted his attempt to become the first person to cross the Atlantic Ocean in a balloon.

After not being heard from for almost four days, Thomas radioed Thursday from the 423-foot Soviet freighter Dekabrist to say the ship had plucked him from a raft in the Atlantic.

Thomas reported that he had been forced to ditch his 90-foot, red, white and blue, star-studded balloon about 6 a.m. Sunday, some 33 hours after he had lifted off from Lakehurst, N.J., Naval Air Station on Friday.

He said he cracked three ribs and suffered some bleeding in his right lung when he jumped 200 feet from the open 14-foot gondola of his balloon and hit the water.

"I'm feeling a little bit on the sore side," the 27-year-old adventurer said in a ship-to-shore telephone conversation with radio station CJCH in Halifax, Nova Scotia.

He told the station that after ditching the balloon "I spent the next four days in the raft until I ran across (the Dekabrist)." Thomas said he had no food or water during the period in the raft and time "was kind of dragging on."

He said that one of the first questions he asked himself as his raft rose and fell on the Atlantic was, "Gee, I wonder what I'm doing here."

The Coast Guard put the site of the Wednesday night rescue at 550 miles southeast of New York and 300 miles northeast of Bermuda. Capt. Charles Juecker, deputy commander of the Coast Guard's Atlantic area, said Thomas was picked up "in the general area" where a Coast Guard airplane had flown a search mission for him on Wednesday.

After talking with the Halifax radio station, Thomas called the Manhattan radio-communications center that had monitored his flight.

He told Wallace Clayton, a member of his ground crew, "Tell my wife I'm in great shape. There are no problems. I hope I have not caused any of you to much concern about me. And I've got a lot to tell you."

Thomas' wife of eight weeks, Michele, said she was relieved and pleased to hear that her husband was safe. She said she would fly to Rotterdam, The Netherlands, to meet the Dekabrist, which is scheduled to dock Thursday, July 8.

Claim Insufficient Gardner Evidence

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Defense attorneys have alleged that state's evidence in the James C. Gardner Jr. and Peter MacQueen securities violation trial was insufficient to send the case to the jury.

And after the state rested its case against the pair in superior court in Wilmington Thursday, Judge Perry Martin took under advisement defense motions to dismiss the charges.

He listened to state and defense attorneys debate the motion for 2 1/2 hours. Martin earlier had denied defense motions that the indictments be dropped because of pretrial publicity.

Defense attorneys argued Thursday that the participants in the motel deal were involved in a "joint venture," rather than a security.

But prosecutors argued that a limited partnership is a security.

The two defendants are charged with four counts of failing to register securities and four counts of offering for sale or selling securities without being registered with the secretary of state as a dealer.

Four Wilmington men testified for the state that they bought shares in a limited partnership in a motel business which was promoted by Gardner and MacQueen.

They said the shares cost $10,000 each.

The final state witness was William W. Coppage, head of the securities division of the N.C. Secretary of State's office. He testified that Family Inns of Rowland, the Gardner motel business, was not registered as a security with the state. Nor were Gardner or MacQueen registered as dealers.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Do you know what the odds are against polishing off every opened box of breakfast cereal in your cupboard? Well, we've done it. The hard way. With kids.

For the last 15 years, we have had no less than a dozen or so half-eaten boxes of Fortified Binkies, Cackly Crunchies, Captain Sugar, Dry Ryes, Toasted Wiggles, Heap of Honey and Cavity Krispies. Regardless of what you have been told, these cereals didn't snap, crackle, or pop. They just laid there on the shelves year after and turned stale.

About a month ago, I made an announcement at breakfast. "There will be no more cereal purchased in this house until we eat up every single box that is opened."

They were shocked momentarily. Then, "Why?"

"Because I can no longer afford to support 12 boxes of unopened cereal. Take this box of Binkies (I wish someone would). Originally, I bought it for 39 cents. As you will remember, it contained a full-size nuclear submarine, complete with a crew of 120, and secret plans for occupying Connecticut. As you may also remember, I inadvertently ate the sub causing a chipped tooth that cost me $85.

"When the cereal didn't move at our breakfast table, I ran out into the snow one morning in my bedroom slippers to hustle it to some starving birds who pecked once at it then migrated forever. The antibiotics for my cold cost me $13.

"This cereal has also been with us through three moves which, counting the packing, shipping, and crating, cost around $15.42. It also attracted ants in the new house which put me back $2.72 for traps. All told, this crummy box of cereal has cost us $116.53. Eat up!"

This morning, we went to the grocery store. At the cereal shelves, they scattered. "Hold it!" I said, "we are all going to agree on one box of cereal." What ensued may set retailing back 30 years.

"I hate Bran Brittles. They're for old people with irregularities."

"And I hate Chock Full of Soggies that turn your teeth purple."

"Let's get Jungle Jollies. They don't have any nutrition whatsoever."

Miraculously, they appeared with a single box. "We've all decided on Mangled Wheat Bits."

"That's great," I said, "Any particular reason?"

"Yeah, there's a magic kit inside guaranteed to make anything disappear."

Avoid Invitations To Couple's House

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were recently invited to dinner at the home of another couple. The invitation was for 8 p.m.

We arrived promptly and were fed cocktails and chips and dips for what seemed to be an eternity. Finally dinner was announced at 10:30.

"Dinner" consisted of raw meatballs, sausages and shrimp that we had to cook in a fondue. Nothing would cook properly. Everything was charred on the outside and raw on the inside.

After "dinner" everyone retired to the living room. My husband and I left exactly 11 minutes after eating.

We were both sick that night. Should we let our hostess know that we were sick? Must I send a "thank-you" note for such a poor excuse for a dinner? Has anyone ever sent a "NO thank you" note?

SICK IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR SICK: Write a "thank-you" note anyway and don't mention your illness. And if this couple has nothing more than food for the stomach to offer, avoid future invitations to their place.

DEAR ABBY: I have a very best friend whom I love dearly. She and her husband have been best friends with my husband and me for many, many years, and they are in our home often. She is the sweetest lady I've ever known and would do anything in the world for me.

The problem is that she is a chain smoker. She talks with her hands and waves her cigarette around. She burns herself, my furniture, my carpets and my curtains. She lets the ashes fall all over the food when she's eating. Once she even set her dinner napkin on fire!

When she leaves, even though I air out the house, the smell of the smoke lingers in my draperies, the clothes I was wearing and even in my hair!

She knows how much cigarette smoke bothers me (and her husband hates them, too), but she absolutely cannot quit!

I can't tell my best friend not to smoke in my house. My husband says, "Nobody's perfect—you have to take the bad with the good."

Please be realistic, Abby. Is there a solution?

SMOKED OUT IN GADSDEN, ALA.

DEAR SMOKED: When she arrives, hand her a LARGE ashtray and ask her to please be careful with her cigarettes. If she gets careless, remind her. Also, place two or three dishes of vinegar wherever she is. The vinegar will help to absorb the cigarette odor. And lastly, pray for her.

DEAR ABBY: For five years, four of us couples have met once a month to play cards. Well, last month one of the men brought a movie projector and all the gear, plus some dirty movies he had rented, and proceeded to show a filthy movie! Two of the men were all for seeing these movies, but their wives were not.

I stopped the idiot as soon as I realized what kind of "entertainment" he had brought to the card club.

Abby, I think the people who make such filth should be burned at the stake, and the nuts who buy them should be locked in institutions.

Awaiting your reply. Sign me...

SICK OF FILTH

DEAR SICK: Filth doesn't bother me unless it intrudes upon my right to avoid it. However, I am opposed to burning and incarcerating those whose taste in entertainment differs from mine.

Hand-Painting Can Brighten Summer

By VIVIAN BROWN

AP Newsfeatures

Hand-painted designs on umbrellas, tablecloths and placemats can enliven backyard living this summer. A small investment in paint and books of designs can help the most inept artist get with the new fashion trend.

An idea that started as a clothes trend — Adolfo and other designers have introduced everything from hand painted smocks to skirts and evening dresses — can easily be applied to home fashions such as curtains, draperies, slipcovers and many other things.

One motif might be selected and used on glassware, dishes, placemats and napkins, suggests artist Nancy Edwards, who has devised many lovely decorative designs and supervised the creative efforts of a staff as art director of Vogart Craft.

In fact, when the new look became a reality she was ready for it. The firm she has been with for several years was a longtime maker of special craft products such as ball-point paint tubes that had been used for "liquid embroidery," stamped goods, transfer pencils, craft books and art needlework products.

Now it has all become a consumer item.

Artistic types need only the ball-point paint tubes to accomplish their designs. Inexperienced enthusiasts can be assisted with many props.

"To copy a design one can put a design on transfer paper, and then repeat the design with a transfer pencil on the reverse side of the transfer paper," Miss Edwards explained.

An eight-inch paint hoop is used. Similar to a needlework hoop, it has a flat metal pie pan-like base so that the ball-point paint pen can be pressed down firmly.

"It works beautifully on polyester and on thin fabrics like organdy and chiffon. The paints are waterproof and will not fade when machine washed or dry cleaned.

"Some synthetic fabrics are treated with a substance that might prevent absorption of the paint. A small area of the fabric can be tested with a stroke or two of the paint."

No Scrambling For Deadlines

The decision has been made by East Carolina University officials to aim at a September, 1977 opening date for the university's developing medical school.

Dean William E. Laupus said Thursday that was his recommendation to Chancellor Leo Jenkins and UNC President William Friday.

He said the Liaison Committee on Medical Education would be asked to make an official accreditation site-survey visit in the fall and the LCME would review the findings at its February, 1977 meeting.

The schedule would enable the school to enroll its first class in September, 1977.

Laupus said he had reported to the committee the completion of faculty recruitment for the basic teaching program in the first two years of the curriculum. He also reported on the progress of residency programs and the approval by the UNC Board of Governors of Ph. D programs in basic medical sciences.

We see no reason for disappointment in the progress of the ECU Medical School's development. There had been hopes of opening the school in September, 1976. When it became obvious that date could not be met there was some consideration of opening in January, 1977 and running the first year program through the summer of 1977. That would have necessitated some unusual measures, however, and we feel there wasn't great enthusiasm for it.

Faculty recruitment is proceeding for the medical school. Ragsdale Hall has been renovated and changes are currently underway at Pitt Memorial Hospital to accommodate the medical school. So things are moving along well.

If ECU had rushed into an opening in January there would have had to be a scramble to find qualified students, new faculty would have had to begin teaching almost as soon as they arrived and there would have been the added problem of working in a new hospital as the process of moving in was underway.

Aiming for the September, 1977 opening of the ECU Medical School is the sound approach. It will give the planners needed time to launch a very complicated new educational program.

Direct Restraints On Press Ruled Out

The Supreme Court has ruled unanimously that an order by a Nebraska judge restricting news coverage in a murder case is unconstitutional.

While the ruling was not sweeping, it does put a strong burden on trial judges to refrain from restricting news media from their job of reporting sensational cases.

Judges can, of course, still restrict law enforcement officers and court officials from giving out details of a sensational case, but direct restraints on the press have been ruled out, at least in this case.

We hail this judgment. It upholds the principles of free press and right to public trial which are so important to our freedoms.

THIS AFTERNOON

Responsibility To Drivers

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—Does the threat of getting caught speeding and having to face the majesty of the courts make North Carolinians better drivers?

The answer appears to be No, and the groundwork is now underway to shift the bulk of traffic cases out of the courts and into an administrative system.

This would help relieve an overburdened court system, and also help fix responsibility for safe and careful driving where it belongs—on the driver who enjoys the privilege of operating a vehicle on the public highways.

Members of the legislative study commission on correctional programs are taking a look at the handling of traffic offenses, as it reviews the state's various criminal laws and sanctions.

A package of legislative proposals are being readied for introduction in the 1977 General Assembly, among them some approach to relieving the case crunch in criminal courts caused by traffic cases.

Half The Load

Traffic offenses make up better than half the case load in District Courts across the state.

Ranging from a total of 593,132 motor vehicle cases in 1971 up to 717,208 such cases in 1975, the traffic volume has consistently run between 63 and 64 per cent of total District Court activity.

And even though more than 43 per cent of those cases (479,173 in 1975) are usually disposed of by waiver, the paperwork, courtroom time, court trips by arresting officers and witnesses, and work on the case by clerical personnel are still meddlesome.

At a recent meeting of the commission which is chaired by former State Senator Eddie H. Knox of Charlotte, a staff aide presented an overview of the traffic offense situation in this and other states.

In his comments on the anticipated impact of a change from the courts to an administrative procedure, Gerry Bello raised the question of whether fear of criminal prosecution makes a better driver.

The GALLUP POLL

Most Will 'Sit Out' Fourth

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — Despite predictions to the contrary, most Americans will "sit out" the nation's 200th anniversary on July 4.

In fact, only 11 per cent, or a projected 16 million Americans, say they are planning to make a special trip either within or outside their state because of the Bicentennial. Of this proportion, 7 per cent say they are planning to travel outside their own state and 4 per cent within their state.

The plans of Americans for Bicentennial trips are thus far more modest than anticipated, with 85 per cent in the survey saying they do not intend to take a Bicentennial trip and another 4 per cent undecided. One reason may be widespread reports about crowded cities and clogged highways.

Easterners, it appears, will do a large share of the traveling, presumably because most of the nation's early history is centered in this region of the nation. In the East, 17 per cent say they plan to take a Bicentennial trip, with 9 per cent staying inside their own state.

Here is the question asked:

"Do you or your family plan to make a special trip anywhere — within or outside the state — because of the Bicentennial?"

The following table shows the national and regional findings:

Plan Bicentennial Trip?

	Yes, inside state	Yes, outside state	No	Undecided
Nationwide	4%	7%	85%	4%
Easterners	9	8	77	6
Midwesterners	3	7	86	4
Southerners	2	8	85	5
Westerners	2	5	91	2

Audit Of U.S. Activities On 4th

The results of another survey question indicate that nearly half of the people surveyed are living in communities which will celebrate the 200th anniversary with little fanfare.

Four in 10 say their communities or home towns are not doing anything special in connection with the Bicentennial celebration, while another 16 per cent say they do not know what, if anything, is planned.

However, among those communities planning some form of celebration, a wide range of activities is planned.

One in seven says his or her community will have a Bicentennial parade. Other forms of celebration or activity include firework displays, house tours, beauty contests, beautification programs, planting trees, flatboat races, making Bicentennial quilts.

A significant percentage say their communities or home towns have painted fireplugs red, white and blue.

What's Good, Bad About America

Whether at home or at some historical site or ceremony, Americans this coming weekend may have occasion to reflect on America—her good points and bad points—at this juncture in her history.

Frequently mentioned among the bad features are problems related to the economy.

Crime and violence are named of ten, with many critical of the judicial system. Specifically they criticize the courts for working too slowly in bringing the accused to trial, for lax sentencing and for releasing criminals too early from prison.

Political corruption and racial animosity are also prominently mentioned as unattractive features of the country.

The positive feature cited far most often is freedom in general or specific freedoms, such as freedom of speech or religion.

Some in the survey point out the achievements of our society, such as the fantastic strides in science and medicine, the rise in the standard of living, the reduction in infant mortality, the declining level of poverty, the widespread availability of a college education.

Confidence In Future?

Despite concern over certain aspects of American society, the overwhelming majority of citizens express a high degree of confidence in the nation's future.

They do so for three basic reasons:

- 1) The nation has had the resources and strength to survive difficult periods in the past.
- 2) Americans have the capacity for self-criticism and change.
- 3) The American people realize there is much they can do as individuals to bring about a better society. Indeed, there is evidence of an explosion of volunteerism in America today at all levels of society.

The results reported today are based on in-person interviews with a total of 1,543 persons, 18 or older, in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period May 21-24.

Strength For Today

WINGS OF THE EAGLE OR THE DOVE?

The Bible has a great deal to say about wings, the wings of angels, seraphim, eagles, doves, and even chickens.

In Psalm 55 there is the statement, "Oh that I had wings like a dove, for then I would fly away and be at rest." In the fortieth chapter of Isaiah we find the declaration that those who wait upon the Lord shall mount up with the wings of eagles.

Here we see two divergent attitudes toward life and its problems. The psalmist wishes that he might have the wings of a dove in order to fly away from his troubles. Isaiah pictures the man of faith as one who rises above his troubles as if he were born upward on the wings of eagles.

They that wait upon the Lord do not seek the escape route. They rise up with wings as eagles, they run and are not weary, they walk and do not faint.

A Fourth Of July Sale

WASHINGTON — Many people have been given credit for the founding of our country, including Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, John Hancock, Thomas Paine, Benjamin Franklin and, of course, George Washington. But for some reason the history books have ignored one of the most important personalities of the time, a man who made the United States the great capitalist country it is today.

His name is Ezra Beetle, and he was the founder of the "Fourth of July Bargain Sale" that has become the biggest event in the celebration of Independence Day.

Without the spectacular Fourth of July sales in department stores, used-car lots, grocery stores and discount houses, it is doubtful that this country would have survived as a nation.

While everyone was concerned with the philosophy of the new government, Ezra devoted his efforts toward developing American commerce, because he realized that no matter what constitution the country would finally agree upon, it would not be able to exist unless merchants could move their goods.

In 1776 Ezra owned a small general store outside of Boston. When word reached him on July 2 that the Colonies had agreed on a Declaration of Independence, he recognized a golden opportunity at hand. He could get rid of all the junk that had been accumulating in his store for the previous three years.

Ezra immediately took out an advertisement in the Boston paper with a blazing headline: "beetle had gone crazy—he is selling $5 horsewhips for $2.95."

"Yes, folks, in honor of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, Beetle is holding the first Fourth of July Rock Bottom Discount Sale in American history. British flags at half price, East Indian Tea 60 percent off. Bronze replicas of the Westminster Abbey at a dollar apiece. Everyone thinks Beetle is mad, and maybe he is, but Ezra says, 'I love to lose my shirt if it makes people happy.'"

"For the first 50 people who show up, Crazy Ezra will give them free a shaving mug with George III's picture on it. The next 100 customers will get ashtrays with 'GOD SAVE THE KING' inscribed in red around the rim. Has Beetle really gone crazy? Come in and see for yourself. Free parking. No mail orders or credit cards. EVERYTHING GOES FOR CASH."

Boston was flabbergasted when they saw the advertisement, and at 3 o'clock the next morning hundreds of patriots' wives lined up in front of Beetle's general store. It gave other merchants in the Boston area pause, and they immediately followed suit, advertising their own Fourth of July sales.

Cubans To The Congo?

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. intelligence sources say they have received reports that Cuban leaders may be preparing to send several thousand troops from Angola to the Congo Republic.

Raul Castro, brother of Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro, traveled to Brazzaville, the Congo Republic's capital last month, to discuss redeployment of some of Cuba's 15,000 troops from nearby Angola, sources said.

He agreed to the transfer of about 3,000 Cuban soldiers to train Congolese troops, according to reports reaching U.S. intelligence. The reports gave no indication if there are other reasons the Congo government wants Cuban troops in the country.

The Congo Republic served for a time as a staging point for Cuban and Soviet military aid to pro-Marxist forces in Angola which later defeated U.S. backed elements.

With troops in the Congo, Cuba conceivably could bring political pressure against Zaire, which is friendly to the United States and provided support to anti-Marxist forces in the Angolan civil war. A narrow strip of Zaire territory leading to the Atlantic is sandwiched between Angola and the Congo Republic.

Raul Castro also visited Luanda, the Angolan capital, in early June to explain Fidel Castro's decision to reduce the Cuban military presence in Angola, U.S. intelligence sources said.

This visit reportedly came within about 10 days after disclosure that Fidel Castro had written Swedish Prime Minister Olaf Palme saying that Cuba would withdraw about 200 soldiers a week from Angola. The Cuban prime minister was quoted as saying his troop strength in October would be cut in half by the end of this year.

It was assumed then that the Cuban troops would go home.

Since then, there have been a

A devastating flood rolling seaward from southwest Texas today left at least 21 persons dead, 14 missing and property damages estimated at $1 million.

A circular area between San Antonio and Austin, 80 miles apart, was suddenly engulfed by torrential rains for two days, but fears of further flooding have diminished.

Farming communities bore the brunt of the desolation as small, ordinarily placid rivulets became sprawling currents. Broad acres of cotton and corn near maturity were laid to waste and hundreds of cattle drowned.

The German dirigible Hindenburg grounded at 4:30 a.m. (EST) today, completing its fourth commercial flight from Germany in record time.

The big ship made the run in 52 hours and 51 minutes, cutting eight hours and 34 minutes from its previous record.

Everybody Hits Job Statistics

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Of the many statistical measures of the economy, perhaps the most criticized are the employment figures, against which millions of Americans often measure their own degree of job security.

Some critics claim the unemployment rate is reported higher than it really is, while others say it is understated. Elements of both extremes join to insist that the techniques used are imperfect.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics, which each month reports the usually fractional changes in the jobless rate, concedes it had serious problems with the figures in 1975, particularly with the seasonal adjustment factor.

Jack Bregger, chief of the Division of Employment and Unemployment Analysis, said very significant adjustments of the factor have been made this year, in effect making this year's jobless reports different from last year's.

If the same adjustment factor had been used in 1975, he stated by telephone, it would have reduced the rate in some months, such as in May, and raised it in others, such as June, but only slightly.

While the changes are mainly small, it is this imprecision that troubles some critics who observe that in times of economic indecision, even tiny fluctuations month to month are interpreted, correctly or incorrectly, as signals.

But questions arise also about the raw data. In the same March-June period of 1975 in which the BLS had problems with seasonal adjusting, it had difficulties also with the raw data that remain unresolved.

In that period, one-half million people, more or less, were "lost" in the sense that they appeared in one survey but not in another, conducted at the same time. While variances are common, differences of this magnitude are not.

"The gap exists," said Bregger a year later. "We don't know what caused it; there's no explanation. What would have to happen to correct the gap is a gap in the opposite direction."

Considered even critical by some statisticians is that what they believe to be the more reliable of the two surveys showed employment not improving until June, whereas the more optimistic one, used in the official rate, showed it improving much earlier in the year.

Curiously, a nongovernmental survey of employment never saw the early improvement. It said its figures agreed with the less optimistic survey throughout the year, as they had for years before and have since then.

Julius Shiskin, highly regarded commissioner of the bureau, maintains he has long sought to have a panel of experts review and improve procedures.

"I tried to set it up in June (1973) at my confirmation, and I've been working on it since," he said in a telephone interview some months ago. Shiskin said he believes his recommendation was passed on by superiors to President Ford. The panel has not been named.

Discrepancies, meanwhile, reportedly occurred in the two surveys again this year, prompting New York's Citibank to comment that the January jobless rate didn't fall as deeply as reported.

believes the true jobless rate early in 1975 rose to double-digit levels, although the highest rate reported was 9.1 per cent, revised this year to 8.9 per cent.

Significantly, Killingsworth notes that in November 1975, when so many economic indicators were improving, the number of workers without a job six months or more was 1.7 million, highest in the post World War II period.

The professor, who is also chairman of the National Manpower Policy Task Force, maintains that if today's unemployment rates were arrived at by methods used prior to 1965, a full point automatically would be added.

The AFL-CIO continues to record unemployment in the double digits. In May it reported a rate of 10.1 per cent, based on what it said were 9.6 million out of work or working part time. The official reading was 6,860,000.

But not everyone agreed the figures are understated. While St. Louis challenges the jobless figures as too low, thus denying it certain revenue-sharing funds, Massachusetts claims the figures are inflated, costing it money also.

The latter says the "inflated" rates have driven up its borrowing costs; in support, a study by the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston suggests the jobless rate for New England has been overstated for four years.

Another criticism comes from Albert Cox, former member of the Council of Economic Advisers under President Richard M. Nixon and now chief economist of Lionel D. Edie & Co., consultants.

In the 1930s and even after that, he observes, "unemployment and individual hardship generally went hand in hand. Today, some households have another breadwinner and greatly improved jobless benefits."

Whatever else the various criticisms might add up to, they have in common the merit of pointing up the dangers in the popular usage of one set of statistics that is watched as closely as a patient's fever thermometer, and often considered to be just as accurate.

way safety will be promoted through the deterrent effect of punishment," Bello wrote. "Indications are that the majesty of the criminal court does not instill greater respect for the law from traffic violators," Bello said, also noting that removal from the criminal category would perhaps foster "a shift toward retraining and rehabilitation rather than guilt or innocence."

The study paper pointed out that traffic violations should be classified into serious and non-serious groups, with the courts retaining jurisdiction over offenses such as driving drunk, eluding police homicide by vehicle, driving while license suspended or revoked, and speeding in excess of 15 miles-per-hour over the limit.

Other offenses might then be moved to a "non-lawyer traffic adjudicator (system)" under the supervision of the Department of Motor Vehicles (which) would leave the judiciary to the more important criminal cases.

Several states are moving in that direction. Rhode Island and New York have systems in which hearing officers receive mail-in waivers and may revoke driving privileges. Appeals boards are established for review, and appeals from that process go into the superior courts.

In Connecticut, Traffic Violations Bureaus take written or personal pleas, waivers, and payment. In New Mexico, the arresting officer can let the driver sign a form and mail payment to satisfy the violation.

California has traffic referees to hear cases, with most penalties being fines only (no jail) thereby eliminating jury trials.

In 1975, North Carolina had 572 people in prison on traffic offense convictions: 343 driving drunk, 213 on misdemeanor traffic offense, and 16 on felony counts.

'Impasse' Over Flu Prevention

By JANET STAIHAR

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's plan to immunize every American against swine flu may be doomed by the drug manufacturers' refusal to sell the vaccine to the government without protection against patent lawsuits.

A House Health subcommittee on Thursday refused to consider an administration bill that would have freed manufacturers of most liability in the massive inoculation program and would have put the responsibility on the government.

Merrell-National Laboratories, one major manufacturer of the vaccine, told Dr. Theodore Cooper, assistant secretary for health, it has no choice but to stop production immediately in view of the congressional decision.

Cooper said the government has no way to obtain the vaccine except from the drug manufacturers. If a contractual agreement with the manufacturers can't be reached, then "we can't deliver the vaccine" to the public, he said.

Cooper said efforts will be made to negotiate a contract but said the situation now is at an impasse.

Drug manufacturers have testified they want more than a contract with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. They said a contract must be supported by legislation assuring federal reimbursement for any lawsuits filed because of adverse side effects from the vaccine.

The drug firms they need an indemnification bill early this month to be confident of legal protection and so they can go ahead with the vaccine production.

"If we wait until next month," said Cooper in testimony to a House health subcommittee, "this vaccination program may have to be dismantled." After today, Congress will not be in session for another two weeks because of the July 4 holiday and Democratic National Convention.

Health subcommittee Chairman Paul G. Rogers, D-Fla., with support from his colleagues, refused to call a vote on the administration bill.

"This is a one-shot program which ought to be handled by agreement rather than by law," said Rogers after three days of heated debate among HEW, the drug firms and subcommittee members in hearings.

"This subcommittee is not in a position to write a law at this time," concluded Rogers. He instructed HEW, drug company lawyers and the Justice Department to try to work out a contract for the purchase of the vaccine, without congressional legislation.

The drug manufacturers say they must be fully protected against liability for injuries or adverse reactions because of recent court decisions which held manufacturers of some drugs and vaccines strictly liable unless the manufacturers assured that warnings of any hazards are communicated to the users.

Government researchers have said that several recently tested vaccines appear safe and effective in immunizing adults against swine flu, but added that they are having trouble finding an acceptable vaccine for young children.

To print the story of a day or the thoughts of a mind... To gather in assembly to express common concerns... To talk to the man across the street or the millions across the land... To worship God according to the dictates of one's own conscience

The first three have sometimes been marred by abuse. The fourth is nullified by neglect.

Carry that thought with you—especially on Independence Day during the celebration of our nation's Bicentennial. And then, next Sunday, join all the rest of the millions of our people who are making sound and sacred use of their religious freedom.

These four freedoms stand like sentinels of Liberty.

June Suprmarket Bills Boosted, But Within Range Of Prediction

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Higher prices for a wide range of food items helped boost supermarket bills during June, an Associated Press marketbasket survey shows. The rate of increase during the first six months of the year, however, was well within government predictions for 1976.

The AP drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and nonfood items, checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973, and has rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month.

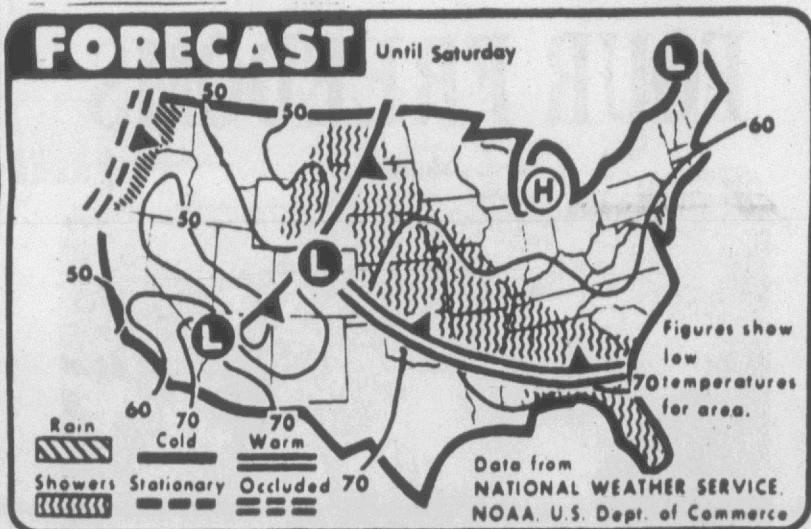

Among the results of the latest survey:

—The marketbasket total rose at the checklist store in nine of the cities surveyed, up an average of just over 2 per cent. The bill declined at the checklist store in four cities, down a little more than half a per cent. On an over-all basis, the marketbasket bill rose 1.3 per cent during June.

—The situation was an improvement over May, when the marketbasket bill was up at the checklist store in all 13 cities, rising an average of 4.2 per cent.

—Decreases earlier in the year helped offset May and June boosts. A comparison of prices at the start of July with those at the beginning of 1976 showed that the marketbasket bill at the checklist store was up in nine cities and down in four for an over-all increase of about 1 per cent. The U.S. Department of Agriculture has predicted that food prices alone will rise between 2 and 5 per cent this year.

A warm front which is coming in from the Midwest could cause problems. By late Saturday it will have moved just southwest of North Carolina, setting off showers or thundershowers in the mountains.

It could cause widely scattered thundershowers across the state Sunday and Monday.

A cold front moved through North Carolina Thursday night and early today. It left a weak high pressure system which brought fair weather today.

A small-craft advisory for coastal waters was discontinued at 6 o'clock this morning. Winds were light and fluctuating. The sea was fairly placid, with waves of from one to three feet.

Temperatures will not fluctuate much across the state for the next five days. Highs will be mostly in the 80s, with some 70s in the mountains. Overnight lows will be in the 60s, with some 50s in the mountains.

It was partly cloudy Thursday. Scattered showers and thundershowers fell over eastern sections during the afternoon and evening. In the 24 hours ended at 2 a.m. today, Cherry Point had one and one-quarter inches and Goldsboro more than an inch of rain.

Temperatures in most sections reached into the 80s. Wilmington was the warmest with 86.

Wilkins Charges Ouster Effort By NAACP Board

By JERRY GRAY
Associated Press Writer

MEMPHIS (AP) — An unexpected dispute over the retirement of Roy Wilkins has thrown the 67th annual convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People into turmoil.

Wilkins, 75, rocked the convention Thursday when he charged that some board members were attempting to force him from the executive director's post he has held 22 years. The aging civil rights leader said he didn't want to retire Jan. 1 as NAACP officials have announced.

Until Wilkins made his dramatic appearance on the platform, the convention had been slowly moving toward routine approval of a handful of resolutions dealing with housing, economic development and education.

"Many of you have asked me to postpone my retirement..." Wilkins said. "...If God is willing I shall be at the St. Louis convention (in 1977) as an active directing member of the NAACP family."

"If the board elects to fire me before that time, then I shall have to call upon you to let me represent your interests directly," he said.

Wilkins said some members of the association's board had been conducting a campaign to discredit his administration. He said he considered filing suits against certain board members for defamation of character, but decided it would be harmful to the organization.

Wilkins' allegations brought an angry reaction from Emmitt Douglas of New Road, La., state president of the Louisiana NAACP.

"I certainly resent the allegations about the board members unless named...I as one of the board members hold the greatest respect for the executive director," said Douglas.

But Douglas said Wilkins had agreed to retire Jan. 1.

"I'm going to vote my conviction and that is to hold him to his commitment to resign," Douglas told reporters afterward as most of the delegates sat stunned in their chairs.

Wilkins, accompanied by his wife, Minnie, and four security men, later submitted to an hour-long news conference. He agreed with Douglas that the board members should be identified, but he said it was the business of the board and should be done in closed session.

However, in response to Douglas' pledge to have him removed he said, "I think that if he wants a fight on that point, then he will get it."

After a hastily called meeting, the 64-member board issued a reply to Wilkins' charges.

"The allegations...are without foundation," said Mrs. Margaret Bush Wilson, St. Louis, the board chairman.

"At the board meeting on Jan. 12, 1976, a report was made recognizing the retirement as of June 30, 1977. The report was modified, after the consent of Mr. Wilkins to Jan. 1, 1977 or as soon thereafter as practical, to make the successor assume office Jan. 1, 1977," Mrs. Wilson said.

After a four-hour session later Thursday, board members and Wilkins emerged from the meeting room and refused to comment further on the dispute.

Greenville residents and business persons are reminded that there will be no garbage, trash, or container service Monday.

These services will run one day late Tuesday and Wednesday. "By Thursday and Friday we hope to be back on our regular schedule after the holiday," Superintendent of Sanitation Leavy Brock said. "We will appreciate the cooperation of the people of Greenville."

Inquiries may be directed either to Brock or to Public Works Director Mayo E. Allen at 752-4137, Ext. 244 or 241.

Keeps A Snake Fuel Oil To Be Costlier On Refrigerator

NEWPORT, Tenn. (AP)—Nellie Pack is a preacher's wife who has six children and keeps a copperhead snake in a dirt-filled wooden box on top of her refrigerator.

"I'm scared to death of them. Just the thought of them," she said. "I can't even pick up one of those red worms when we go fishing."

But the poisonous snake lives with the Pack family because it is an integral part of their religion.

Her husband, the Rev. Liston Pack, is pastor of the Holiness Church of God in Jesus Name, which believes the Bible directs true believers to "take up serpents."

The Rev. Pack handles the snakes at the church's weekly religious services along with members of the congregation, including his wife.

"I guess I'm the only woman that does now," she said. "I just talked to the Lord about it."

Mrs. Pack said after praying, she felt the power of the Lord, and she was able to put her hands into the box full of writhing snakes.

"I'd rather handle a rattlesnake, even though a rattlesnake will come closer to killing than a copperhead," she said. "Copperheads, they'll just all ball up together. They'll twist themselves around your hands."

At first, Mrs. Pack said, she handled only one snake at a time, but later felt moved at another service to pick up eight serpents at one time.

"When the anointing of the Lord is there, it's amazing," she said.

The Rev. Pack, who works during the week as a truck driver for a food canning company, says the snakes are part of the church services.

"Them fellows there keep you walking straight with God," said the minister, pointing to the box of snakes at the front of the church.

Coke County authorities do not bother the small congregation in the hollow, even though snake handling is against the law in Tennessee.

"We're not out looking for them. Just so they don't bring the snakes to town," said Dist. Atty. Alfred Schmutzer Jr.

The Rev. Pack has served a jail sentence for his beliefs and the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear his appeal challenging the law against snake handling.

But the high court's decision has not changed anything among the congregation.

"The Bible doesn't say if they take up serpents, it says they shall," he said.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market drifted around Thursday's closing level in an inconclusive pre-holiday session today.

Trading was fairly quiet. The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up a token 49 at 995.33. Gainers held a 7-6 edge on losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Brokers noted some favorable response to the Federal Reserve's report late Thursday of a large decline in the nation's money supply.

The drop theoretically encourages the Fed not to tighten credit any further, and if the trend continues, might prompt the central bank to relax its policy.

But the market also had to contend with this morning's report that the unemployment rate turned upward in June, recording its first increase in nine months.

Atlantic Richfield fell 2 1/2 to 10 1/2 following announcement of merger plans between the company and Anaconda.

Anaconda shares had not yet opened by late morning. Utah International rose 2 to 59 and General Electric gained 1/4 to 57 1/2. The companies said they were continuing their planning toward a proposed merger.

The NYSE's composite index gained .05 to 55.36 in the first hour.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .18 at 104.96.

Detailed Briefing On Teamster Probe

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN

AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Labor Committee is getting a secret, detailed briefing on the government investigation of the scandal-ridden Teamsters union.

Touched off by the disappearance last July of former Teamsters president James R. Hoffa, the joint Labor-Justice departments probe is focused on the union's $1.4-billion Central States Pension Fund and allegations that organized crime figures have benefited from its loans.

The committee meets in executive session today, with the public excluded, to hear from investigators who are probing evidence of possible criminal and civil violations in the administration of the fund, which is heavily invested in real estate and Las Vegas gambling operations.

James D. Hutchinson, a top Labor Department official charged with enforcing the 1974 Pension Reform Act, disclosed in open testimony before the committee Thursday that investigators "have come across transactions that involve contributing employers." He also confirmed press reports that his agency has referred several questionable transactions to the Justice Department for possible criminal prosecution.

Hutchinson provided no details. The pension law, under which the Labor Department phase of the investigation is being carried out, prohibits employers who contribute to the fund from obtaining loans.

Promising a "no-holds-barred" investigation, Hutchinson asserted that the probe had not been affected by Labor Secretary W. J. Usery's remarks at the Teamsters national convention in Las Vegas last month.

Usery heatedly rejected implication that his praise of Teamster officials had compromised the investigation. "I may have been a little more enthusiastic than I should have been. ... I felt then, and I feel now, that my appearance there was proper," Usery said.

Sen. John Durkin, D-N.H., accused Usery of acting "as cheerleader and advance man" for the current Teamsters president, Frank E. Fitzsimmons, who is under a Labor Department subpoena in the investigation. Usery replied, his voice rising, "I'm not in his pocket, your pocket or anyone else."

Detailing the funds' investments, Hutchinson said they involve more than $780 million in real estate loans and mortgages, $100 million deposited in banks and savings and loan associations, stocks, bonds, and debentures listed at over $180 million, and some $200 million in owned real estate.

Sal Bando's Homers Pace Oakland In Win Of Crucial Series Opener

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Sports Writer

Slugging third baseman Sal Bando of the Oakland A's hammered two solo shots Thursday night as Oakland downed front-running Kansas City 5-2 in the opener of Oakland's critical four-game series. The defending American League West Division champions, shooting for a sixth consecutive title, are in third place, 8½ games behind the Royals.

In other American League action, the Cleveland Indians edged the New York Yankees 3-2, the Detroit Tigers blanked the Baltimore Orioles 2-0, the Milwaukee Brewers nipped the Boston Red Sox 6-5 in 10 innings and the California Angels nosed out the Chicago White Sox 2-1. Texas and Minnesota were not scheduled.

In the only National League games, the San Diego Padres beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 5-3 and the New York Mets clobbered the St. Louis Cardinals 13-0. Philadelphia and Montreal were rained out while the other clubs had the day off.

Bando hit his first home run in the second inning off Kansas City's Doug Bird and connected again in the ninth off reliever Marty Pattin, snapping a tie.

Rookie Jeff Newman drove in two insurance runs with his first major league hit.

Indians 3, Yankees 2
Rick Manning tripled home the eventual winning run in the seventh inning as the Indians handed the Yankees their third straight loss. Ex-Yankee Pat Dobson, with relief help from Dave LaRoche and Jim Kern, became the AL's first 10-game winner as the Indians moved within six games of the Yankees in the East Division.

Tigers 2, Orioles 0
Dave Roberts stopped Baltimore on four singles while Alex Johnson homered for Detroit.

The third-place Tigers have won nine of 11 and trail the Yankees by eight games. They scored their first run off Rudy May in the fourth inning on Rusty Staub's single, an error by shortstop Mark Belanger, an infield out and a wild pitch.

Brewers 6, Red Sox 5
Bernie Carbo came back to haunt his former teammates, singling home Jack Heidemann with the winning run as the Brewers ended a six-game losing streak. With two out in the 10th, Heidemann and Scott singled off Reggie Cleveland. Carbo greeted Tom House with a bouncer behind second base which shortstop Rick Burleson fielded but his throw was too late to get Carbo as Heidemann raced home.

Angels 2, White Sox 1
Bill Melton turned on his former teammates by scoring one run and driving in another to lead the Angels to a sweep of their three-game series with the White Sox, who have dropped nine games in a row at home. Melton doubled in the second inning and scored on a double by Ron Jackson and then singled home the winning run in the third.

Padres 5, Dodgers 3
Johnny Grubb and Tito Fuentes combined for six hits and four runs batted in and Fred Kendall hit his first homer since Sept. 12, 1974, while Brent Strom scattered nine Los Angeles hits.

morning round. Their scores held up as the first round's best until Still went six under on his 12th hole. He finished his eight-birdie, 10-par round by birdying two of his last three holes.

Still, who came within a stroke of two-time GMO champion Dave Stockton's competitive course record set in the second round of the 1973 tournament, hit every green in regulation except the fifth and 17th, both of which he missed by a foot. His birdie putts included 15 and 18 footers.

Gay Brewer, the 1967 Masters champion, was bracketed at 67 with Steve Melnyk, Rex Caldwell, Johnny Jacobs, George Johnson, Cesar Sanudo, Mac McLendon, and Homero Blancas.

An even 50 players shattered par under ideal weather conditions as the torrid shooting belied absence of most of the tour's top names, who have skipped this tournament and its comparatively small purse to prepare for next week's British Open.

"The course is just in fantastic shape," said Zoeller, a second-year pro who entered the GMO ranked 100th among the tour's 1976 money winners.

"Any time you have good fairways and good greens, you're going to have low scores," Zoeller said. "The best players in the world are on the tour. When you have those conditions, you'll have those kind of scores, no matter where the tournament is played."

But he wouldn't predict such low scoring necessarily would continue.

"A lot depends on the weather," he said.

Still added that the contrast between Tuckaway and Butler, site of last week's Western Open at Oak Brook, Ill., also was a major factor in the low scoring.

"Butler is the highest rated scoring course in the U.S.," he said. "This is no easy course, but coming away from a course like Butler makes scoring tend to come easier. You just feel like charging."

Melnik, Brewer, Johnson, Sanudo, McLendon and Blancas compiled their 67s during the WILMINGTON—East Carolina University spotted UNC-Wilmington a run in the third inning, then came back to take a 4-1 win over the Seahawks last night.

The win moved the Pirates back above the 500 mark, as their record climbed to 9-8. Wilmington is now 9-11.

Billy Davis hurled the victory, his first of the season. He scattered seven hits, while fanning seven and walking as many. Wilmington kept the pressure up on him, leaving 14 men in nine innings, but the Bucs and Davis were able to come away with the win.

The Pirates got only five hits, but they made them pay off, as they collected three of them in their big inning, and another in the one-run frame.

Wilmington threatened in the opening inning on a walk and a stolen base, but it was the third before they broke the ice.

Larry Dove opened the third with a single and Ray Toler sacrificed him up. Mac McLean followed with a single, driving in the run. McLean moved up on a sacrifice, but died at second.

Wilmington again threatened in the fifth on a fielder's choice and two walks, but left the sacks loaded. In the sixth, Dove walked and stole up, but died at second. The eighth saw another threat on a hit and walk, and the ninth ended with the bases loaded. Wilmington had gotten three straight hits after two were out in the final frame, but an infield grounded ended their hopes.

The Pirates didn't get a man as far as second until the fourth when Rick Koryda was cut down at the plate. He had walked and moved up on an infield out, but then died when he attempted to score on Sonny Wooten's single to center.

The Bucs didn't get another chance until the seventh, but this one paid off.

Wooten singled with one out and Pete Paradossi followed with another hit. Both moved up on a wild pitch, and Charlie Stevens drew a walk. Bobby Supel then slashed a double, driving in Wooten and Paradossi. Griff Garner grounded out, but Stevens scored on the play for a 3-1 lead.

The other run came in the eighth. Koryda singled and stole second. He took third on an infield out, and scored on Macon Moye's sacrifice fly.

East Carolina returns home tonight for a 7:30 p.m. game at Harrington Field. The Bucs will entertain Methodist College in the game.

Canada Bans Taiwan Team

By The Associated Press
U.S. Olympic officials are "shocked" over Canada's ban of the Taiwan team in the Montreal Games.

"Politics should be kept out of the Olympic Games," said Don Miller, executive director of the U.S. Olympic Committee. "Taiwan is a member in good standing with the International Olympic Committee and has done nothing to merit this action by the Canadian government."

Miller's reaction came Thursday after learning of the Canadian decision to shut out the Taiwan team from the 1976 Olympics. The action, taken under prodding from Peking, was seen as a political move, since Canada apparently does not want to sacrifice its official ties with Communist China.

Glen Shortliffe, an external affairs spokesman for the Canadian government, said Taiwan's athletes would not be allowed into the country unless Canada receives guarantees that they will not claim to be representatives of China.

During the Games they may not use the flag, designation, symbol or name of the "so-called Republic of China," he said.

The Peking regime has been recognized by Canada since 1971 and is recognized by most major sports organizations in the world. Shortliffe, speaking in Ottawa, said Canada would not be swayed from its position of allowing the Taiwanese to enter Canada as individuals, but not as representatives of their government.

In Montreal, a spokesman for the Olympic Organizing Committee said his group would "do whatever the IOC tells us to do" concerning the admission of a Taiwan team competing under the name of the Republic of China.

However, a committee spokesman said the matter involved the Canadian external affairs department and not the Games committee. No other Olympic officials in Montreal would comment on the situation.

The 6-foot-1, 250-pound middle linebacker said he'll report for today's team practice and he expects to see action next week.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Linda Lillis' eight goals powered the United States over Tunisia 22-13 Thursday night as a three-nation tournament to determine which country will get the final berth in women's team handball at the Montreal Olympics continued.

The Americans now have a 2-1 mark to 2-0 for Japan and 0-3 for Tunisia. Two more games are scheduled in the round robin meet.

Buck's Is In The Lead

Buck's Gulf moved into first place all by itself in the Junior Putters League last night, thanks to a little help from Jerry's Sweet Shoppe.

Jerry's downed Coca-Cola, 23-17, knocking Coke out of first for the first time this year. Eddie Robinson led Jerry's with six, while Laura Vincent had 5½ points. Rob Ericson paced Coke with five, while Robert Sturtevant had four.

Bucks took Smith-Waldrop, 21½ to 14½. Ryner Bullock led Buck's with six, while Carl White had five. Smith-Waldrop was paced by Mark Grossnickle with six and Eric Lee with 5½.

In the other match, J.H. Hudson nipped Jefferson Standard, 16½ to 15½. Robert Stancil had 5½ and Jon Langley, four, to lead Hudson. David Johnson led Jefferson with 4½, while Mitchell Wingate had four.

Buck's is now 6-2-1, while Jerry's is second with a 6-3 mark. Coke is third at 5-3-1, while Hudson, Jefferson and Smith-Waldrop are tied for fourth with 3-4 records.

IOC May Cancel

MONTREAL (AP) — The Montreal Gazette said in its editions today that the International Olympic Committee has threatened to withdraw its sponsorship of the 1976 Games in a showdown with the Canadian government over the IOC's sovereignty over the event.

The IOC issued a protest Thursday in Lausanne, Switzerland, to the Canadian government against its decision not to let athletes from Taiwan compete in the Olympic games under the flag or name of the Republic of China.

The Gazette quoted an IOC spokesman as saying:

"We are in a position, one step removed, from cancelling the Olympic Games.

"We would remove the name Olympic from the Games and cancel all ceremonies and medal presentations. They would just become a Montreal sporting event."

The newspaper said that the athletes would have their competition — the one thing the IOC is pledged to provide — but the official record books would simply say "cancelled" when it came to future mention of what happens here later this month.

Dolphins, Bowl Fuss

MIAMI (AP) — The Miami Dolphins have been given until July 21 to sign a new contract for the Orange Bowl or face the possibility of playing at least the first 1976 exhibition game somewhere else.

The city commission set the ultimatum Thursday in the latest round in a dispute with Dolphins owner Joe Robbie. The team plays its first National Football League exhibition game July 31.

The Dolphins have been paying a flat fee for use of the stadium, but that contract has expired. The city wants a new 10-year pact calling for the team to pay 10 per cent of gross gate receipts as rent.

But Robbie has refused to sign a long-term agreement until the city agrees to Orange Bowl renovations, including new parking facilities, satisfactory to him.

The city has drawn up plans for $18.5 million in improvements but has refused to start them without first having the contract in hand.

Those Minutes Are Being Kept

By LEE MARGULIES
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Not even the Bicentennial escapes television's "equal time" provisions.

The first name that came to mind when the producers of CBS' nightly "Bicentennial Minutes" series were casting their commemorative July 4 installment was Gerald R. Ford.

But since he is campaigning to keep his job, other presidential candidates also would have to be given 60 seconds of air time if he did a "Bicentennial Minute."

That wouldn't be so bad if the other guys also did a "Minute," but the "equal time" rule says they would be free to use the time any way they wished. So the producers chose Mrs. Gerald Ford.

"I really feel Mrs. Ford is perfect," says Paul Wagner, producer of "Minutes." "She is one of the most important people in our country. We're all just delighted with it."

The episode was taped in the First Lady's garden at the White House and is scheduled to air Sunday at approximately 8:57 p.m. on the East and West coasts, an hour earlier in the Central Time Zone. In it Mrs. Ford talks about the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

Sunday will mark the second birthday of the "Bicentennial Minutes." The historical tidbits began on July 4, 1974 and originally were to have concluded on this July Fourth. But it has proven to be so popular — and justifiably so — that CBS is keeping it on the air at least through the end of the year.

Wagner welcomes the extension.

"The most exciting part of the revolution came later anyway," he explains. "We want to show how signing that Declaration affected everybody — the important people and the general public, too. The revolution did go on for eight years. We've got a lot to cover."

The producer believes "Bicentennial Minutes" has been a success because the creative staff approaches the project as they would any other TV program. Each episode may last only a minute but it nevertheless contains a story, a star, titles, graphics, music, sound effects—even a commercial.

More than 15 persons work full time on the series, and Wagner says 4½ to five hours of production time go into each installment—not counting research and writing time.

"Sure, you could lift a paragraph out of a history book and put it in television," he concedes when questioned about the necessity of so much labor. "But how long is that going to last?"

"History was my worst subject in school," Wagner said. "It was terribly boring. But this is living history. Now I love it." No wonder he's happy the "Minutes" are continuing after Sunday. TV viewers should be glad, too. Come to think of it, probably even President Ford is pleased, since it means he will now be able to do one when he's finished campaigning.

And if he's unhappy about the wait, he should have done what his Republican challenger did. Ronald Reagan taped his "Minute" before announcing his candidacy.

Before you commit yourself to taking a finesse, check to see if there isn't perhaps an alternative. After all, anything you can do to increase your chances above 50 per cent might mean the difference between a loss and a large gain.

North-South bid well to reach their best spot despite the fact that they had only 29 points in high cards. When South jumped to three diamonds at his first turn, North's hand improved dramatically. He held all four aces and a superb fit for his partner's suit. In an effort to show his power, he first cued bid his ace of hearts, then the ace of spades, inferentially setting diamonds as the trump suit. Faced with such encouragement South felt that his wealth of second-round controls merited a jump to slam.

West led his fourth-best club, declarer won with dummy's ace and ruffed a club. Trumps were drawn in three rounds and declarer was 1 ft with the major suits to contend with. He decided to take the heart finesse. If that failed, he could still rely on a 3-3 heart division to set up a long heart for a spade discard. Unfortunately, the heart finesse lost and when the suit split 4-2, as it rated to do, the contract was doomed.

Declarer overlooked a point. If the heart finesse was going to succeed, declarer didn't need to take it! Correct technique was to cash the king and ace of hearts and, if the queen did not drop, to continue with a heart toward the jack. If East started with the queen of hearts, he was welcome to the trick because now the jack would be established to provide a spade discard from dummy. If West held the queen, declarer would still be safe if the suit divided 3-3. And if West had started with four hearts to the queen, no line would be successful.

Proper management of the heart suit, however, would save a trick in one case—where West held a doubleton queen. It was only just that this was one of those times when good play would have been rewarded.

Trim Ranks, Raise Pay

YANCEYVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Caswell County sheriff's deputies have won their demand for higher pay after quitting briefly.

All 12 had resigned effective at 12:01 a.m. Thursday, but at least seven were rehired later in the day after gaining salary increases.

County commissioners met for four hours in closed session and announced they had changed the pay plan for the deputies and had cut one position from the 12-man force.

Apparently, the salary increases are to come from the elimination of the one position.

On June 19, all 12 deputies signed an ultimatum saying they would quit their jobs after June 30 if they were not paid $700 a month, an increase of about $100.

Commissioners had refused to go along, maintaining that the deputies would be given the same 5 per cent salary increase as all county employees.

A 'Mule' Smuggles In Cocaine

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — In a Bogota, Colombia, hotel room, a Cincinnati woman dismantled her portable hairdryer and replaced its electric motor with three pounds of carefully packed cocaine.

Then she caught a plane for Miami.

The woman, arrested by U.S. Customs Service inspectors at busy Miami International Airport, was what authorities call a mule — the amateur or professional who carries drugs into this country via commercial transportation to help supply a $3 billion-a-year U.S. market for illegal drugs.

Miami is the nation's cocaine import capital, where the most seizures and arrests of mules are made. Of the 735 pounds of cocaine seized in the United States last year, 196 pounds or 27 per cent of it was taken at Miami's airport.

It's anybody's guess how much cocaine slips through undetected here and elsewhere.

Just last month, 170 pounds of cocaine were confiscated by Customs agents in Tampa who were watching a banana boat which had arrived from Colombia. Agents said the cache was worth $39 million, one of the largest seizures on record.

"Drug imports, mostly cocaine, are on the increase," said Howard Ford, director of Customs' airport operations in Miami. "We have no estimate on how much is getting by, but we could make more seizures if we had more personnel."

In the first five months of this year, Customs inspectors at Miami International confiscated 166 pounds of cocaine, a powerful stimulant which drug experts say is not physically addictive. Cocaine, made from the leaves of the coca bush, is often called the "Champagne of Drugs," because of its high market price and popularity among some rock musicians and jet-setters.

"Every conceivable way to smuggle drugs has been tried," said Bill Norsworthy, an airport supervisor for the federal Drug Enforcement Administration, whose agents take over investigations after the initial arrest.

Mules have carried drugs inside fishing rods, aerosol cans, book covers, tennis racquets, false-bottomed suitcases, diving tanks and children's toys. They have carried liquified cocaine in seemingly unopened liquor bottles.

More dangerously, mules have tried to avoid detection by swallowing packets of cocaine or inserting them into body cavities.

In the last two months, four mules have died when their body acids destroyed the packets and released the drug into their system, Customs spokesman Jim Dingfelder said.

But the lure of great profit attracts many willing to take the risks.

Most of the cocaine smuggled into the United States comes from Colombia and Peru. Persons agreeing to serve as mules can earn $5,000 aside from an expenses-paid trip for several days to South America.

Those who hire the mules are playing for bigger stakes. A $10,000 investment for 97 per cent pure cocaine can be multiplied 32 times — returning $320,000 — after it has been transported and its purity reduced to about 12 per cent for street sales, a drug official said.

Cocaine users who sniff or "snort" are known as "vacuum cleaners." Others cook a small portion of the drug in a small spoon and inject it into their bloodstreams.

Customs inspectors and DEA agents say there is no stereotype for a mule. Drugs have been found on the young and old, affluent and poor, businessman and diplomat.

Officials say that arrested mules most often show little remorse or fear of prison sentences.

"Once they are caught, they accept it," said Customs inspector John Ryan. "And they seem to be well informed about what will happen to them. One man I caught wasn't a bit alarmed and said he was confident of his chances under the judicial system."

Detection is not an easy chore. At Miami International, 1½ million passengers pass through Customs checks each year — it takes an alert inspector to spot a mule and convince a superior to allow a detailed search. Inspector Dale O'Connor noticed that a passenger carrying two air tanks used by divers was carrying no other diving equipment and didn't have a tan.

"He was very friendly and even helped me open the tanks. They were filled with drugs," O'Connor said.

Another inspector, Chuck Winwood, recalls a stranger case. "One of our men noticed that the padding on the wheelchair used by a deformed midget was thicker than other wheelchairs. When we inspected the chair's padding, it was filled with cocaine."

Inspectors and DEA agents listed these recent cases:

—Scott Wirkus, 17, of Racine, Wis., died in an airport hotel shortly after he passed Customs without incident. He had swallowed 53 coke-filled prophylactics. Some of them burst.

—A coat worn by Carmen Rosa Benvenuto, 32, of Lima, Peru, appeared to sag. Plastic bags of cocaine were found sewn in the lining. On the same flight from Lima were five other mules. Roberto Gueudet, 57, and his 42-year-old wife, Doris, has cocaine in their luggage. So did Maria Jose Santos, 27, Rosa Mouchard, 55, and Ida Olascoaga, 51. They were all caught carrying a total of 47 pounds of illegal drugs.

—A 63-year-old retired Bogota nurse, Maria del Carmen de Garzon, was arrested when she arrived from Colombia. In a false-bottom suitcase inspectors found 2½ pounds of cocaine.

—Sonia Moya, a 32-year-old Cuban refugee living in Miami, returned from South America on her birthday. Inspectors wished her a "Happy Birthday" but held her for DEA because of four pounds of coke she had in her packed clothing.

"The mule is the beginning for DEA," said Irv Weinstein, the agency's assistant regional director. "Customs makes the seizures. From there, we make our investigation . . . to bring in the conspirators."

PLANE ENGINE USED TO SMUGGLE COCAINE—Bill Norsworthy, an airport and seaport supervisor for the federal Drug Enforcement Administration, shows where cocaine was placed in an airplane engine that was seized after arriving at Miami, Fla., for repairs. "Every conceivable way to smuggle drugs has been tried," said Norsworthy. (AP Wirephoto)

Call your own time-out.

Some of the best moments in any sport take place right where you're sitting. Because where you're sitting can be a great place to cool the action.

Just grab a hold of a sizzling hot dog, spread the mustard thick, and drown your thirst with an ice-cold Pepsi. Nothing makes food taste better and good times last longer than Pepsi-Cola. And Pepsi is just as close to where you're sitting as the refreshment stand.

Go ahead. Right now is a great time to call your own time-out — and call for plenty of great-tasting Pepsi-Cola.
