

Carter Expected Decide His Running-Mate Today

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Jimmy Carter was expected to decide on a running mate today after the Democratic convention heard keynoter Barbara Jordan's rousing call for a new "national community" to fulfill America's purpose.

Carter intimates indicated he would make his choice today although it probably won't be announced until Thursday, following Carter's own presidential nomination Wednesday.

Speculation centered on Sens. Edmund S. Muskie, Walter Mondale and John Glenn as the leading prospects for the No. 2 spot. Also under consideration are Sens. Frank Church, Henry Jackson and Adlai Stevenson.

Meanwhile, the first real excitement of the convention was added by Miss Jordan, the black congresswoman from Texas, who brought yawning delegates to their feet with a speech that took some pages from the Carter stylebook.

"We must restore our belief in ourselves," Miss Jordan said. "We must address and master the future together."

"It can be done if we restore the belief that we share a common national endeavor, if we restore our sense of national community," she told the cheering conventioners.

"We are a people in search of a national community," she said. Such a search is an attempt "to fulfill our national purpose, to create and sustain a society in which all of us are equal."

Miss Jordan, who had been mentioned in early speculation over a Carter running mate but had not made the list of finalists, received a standing ovation before and after she spoke and upstaged Sen. John Glenn, the other opening night keynoter who is still on Carter's lists of prospects.

Glenn had first crack at the audience in a speech declaring that "this is the time to erase divisiveness and despair...to build a nation of justice, a nation of equality, a nation of opportunity in which we can be proud patriots."

But the delegates, who have lacked the stimulus of a nominating contest, milled about the convention floor and chatted among themselves throughout the Glenn speech.

It was a different matter, however, when Miss Jordan, the first black woman ever to keynote a major political convention, rose to speak. "There is something different and special about this opening night," she said. "I am a keynote speaker."

Since the first Democratic convention in 1832, she said, "it would have been most unusual for any national political party to have asked a Barbara Jordan to make a keynote address — most unusual."

"The past notwithstanding, a Barbara Jordan is before you tonight," she said. "This is one additional bit of evidence that the American dream need not forever be deferred."

Prices Point To Record S.C. Border Belt Opener

RALEIGH (AP) — An estimated record average of $90 to $94 was reported today for flue-cured tobacco sales during the first hour on several markets in South Carolina and the border area of North Carolina.

The Federal-State Market News Service said most tobacco sold for $90 to $103 per hundred pounds. However, several sheets of nondescript which carried no price support sold for $40 to $50.

The heavy volume for opening day consisted mainly of low to fair primings. It was estimated that 15 to 40 per cent of the early sales went to the Stabilization Corp. under the government loan program. On opening day last year the figure was about 52 per cent.

The markets began sales amid predictions that this will be the most lucrative year yet for tobacco farmers.

A North Carolina state Department of Agriculture expert says this year's crop is so good that it will soon be bringing well over $1.00 per pound.

The less desirable early leaves should bring prices in the 90-95 cents per pound range, said John Cyrus.

Markets opened in several South Carolina cities and on parts of the North Carolina Border Belt today. And the flue-cured tobacco advisory committee met Monday to set dates for the opening of other markets.

North Carolina's Eastern Belt and five markets on the lower end of the Middle Belt—Furquay-Varina, Sanford, Ellerbe, Carthage and Aberdeen—will open July 20.

The five markets in the upper part of North Carolina's Middle Belt will open the season Tuesday, July 27, the committee said.

The group also set Tuesday, Aug. 3, as the opening date for sales on the Old Belt markets in North Carolina and Virginia.

The upper Middle Belt markets which hold sales July 27 are Oxford, Warrenton, Durham, Henderson and Louisburg.

The 10 Old Belt markets in North Carolina which open Aug. 3 include Burlington, Greensboro, Madison, Mebane, Mt. Airy, Reidsville, Roxboro, Stoneville, Winston-Salem and Yadkinville.

Virginia markets scheduled to open the same day are Brookneal, Chase City, Clarksville, Danville, Kenbridge, Lawrenceville, Martinsville, Petersburg, South Boston and South Hill.

Cyrus, chief of the field crops section of the NCDA, said "everybody who attended the committee meeting had a very optimistic outlook for this season. The crop looks real good."

Cyrus said that based on estimates as of July 1, the outlook is for North Carolina to produce 867 million pounds of flue-cured tobacco this year, 5 per cent less than the 933.8 million pounds in 1975.

"The crop is still developing and a lot could happen," Cyrus pointed out.

He said the advisory committee decided that the number of sets of buyers in Georgia and Florida will be reduced from 18 to 10 Aug. 2. On the same date the number of sets of buyers on the South Carolina border North Carolina will be reduced from 21 to 12.

"That will free buyers for the opening of the Old Belt markets on Aug. 3," Cyrus said.

At the same time, it was announced that the number of sets of buyers in eastern North Carolina will be increased from 21 to 25 the week of Aug. 2.

Barbara's Night

RESPONDS TO OVATION—Rep. Barbara Jordan of Texas responds to plaudits of the Democratic National Convention. Behind her is Democratic National Chairman Robert Strauss. (AP Wirephoto)

NEW YORK (AP) — Barbara Jordan said she saw something "different and special" about this 37th convention of Democrats, and it was thunderously clear it felt the same about her.

The lady simply stole the show, wresting the hearts and hurrahs of opening night from the likes of the host mayor and governor, and even fellow keynoter John Glenn — whose performance, by contrast, hardly seemed calculated to enhance his previously touted chances for becoming Jimmy Carter's running mate.

Neither Glenn nor anyone else evoked the rapt attention or the raucous tribute that the convention bestowed upon this organ-voiced black congresswoman from Houston.

And it was a salute she returned with customary eloquence. Never before, she noted, had a black keynoted a national political convention. But "the past notwithstanding, a Barbara Jordan is before you tonight. This is one additional bit of evidence that the American Dream need not forever be deferred."

She was greeted with a standing ovation that eclipsed two minutes. Just as notably, the delegates ceased the milling and the drone which had faced other speakers. Now, the noise they made, cheers, applause and even some foot-stomping, was solely for Barbara Jordan.

When she finished, she was called back to the podium by an ovation that continued despite her exit. A security guard and others on the podium asked her for her autograph.

"We want Barbara, we want Barbara," the crowd chanted.

Even during her address, a hastily written sign had been hoisted in the South Carolina delegation: "Jordan VP." Some had suggested that possibility even earlier, but Miss Jordan had said she didn't think Carter ever seriously considered her.

Before she strode to the podium, the delegates were shown a film in which they heard her words on the night the House Judiciary Committee, of which she is a member, voted the first impeachment articles against Richard M. Nixon.

But on this night she eschewed any direct attacks on the Republican opposition.

Instead, she warned that the nation was in danger of becoming "a collection of interest groups, each seeking to fulfill private dreams."

"We are a people in a quandary about the present. We are a people in search of our future. We are a people in search of a national community."

"We must provide the people with a vision of the future that is attainable. We must strike a balance between the idea that the government can do everything and the belief that the government should do nothing," she said.

HOTLINE

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used. Transcribing is done once a day.

CHILDREN'S DAY

I'd like to know if there is anything being planned for Children's Day by the parks in Greenville, G.T.

We talked to the Greenville Parks and Recreation Department, and they said there were no plans a Children's Day celebration as such. It seems that in the parks, every day is children's day!

We suggest that you call your neighborhood churches and see if they have anything planned. Children's Day celebrations seem to be left up to the individual congregations, and you may be able to find some help there.

WANTS DILL PICKLE RECIPE

I read your items about people wondering where they could buy fresh dill. I've been searching in all my cookbooks and all my neighbors' and cannot find a good recipe for dill pickles. I wish The Daily Reflector might inquire about some good recipes and publish two or three in the paper some time soon. A.C.

Hotline doesn't feel it can publish recipes in this column. However, our Woman's Editor, Rosalie Trotman, placed a call to the Home Extension Office and asked if your idea might be worthy of a Homemaker's Haven column. The Homemakers Haven column will be printed in Wednesday's paper.

Money To Spare After Finishing Of Newtown Project For Greenville

The Redevelopment Commission has closed out the successful Newtown Project in almost unprecedented fashion—with money to spare, it was announced at Monday night's meeting.

Assistant Director J. C. Lamm informed commissioners that the close out of the Newtown effort within the federal grant allocation means that the commission has some $162,320 in cash that will be transferred directly to the city's Community Development account.

Joe Laney, executive director, explained that the Redevelopment Commission was given a specific grant reservation by the federal government for the Newton Project and because the Commission was able to complete the project "efficiently and expeditiously," for less funds than budgeted, the city will benefit.

Laney emphasized that the $162,320 in transferred funds to the city CD program represents real cash.

In addition to the cash transfer, certain non-cash improvements had been estimated for the city to provide in street improvements in the Newtown area. The city actually provided more improvements, cash wise, than were necessary to meet its 25 per cent required participation in the project, Laney continued. As a result, the city will have up to $94,000 in excess non-cash grants in aid which it will be able to apply towards city credit in the Central Business District project.

The excess credit, when added to the $420,000 approved earlier for university credits involving purchase and clearance of property involved in the student union-library complex, will amount to over a half million dollars to be applied to the city's share, at no cost to the city. The CBD project involves the city's biggest non-cash commitment.

The Redevelopment Commission, it was noted, has recommended to the city that the $162,320 be applied toward the purchase and construction of parking facilities in the downtown area. Parking continues to be a critical need of the downtown section.

Close out of Newtown, effective as of June 21, within the budget, represents a "major achievement" as far as the Department of Housing and Urban Development is concerned, Laney added. He credited the local staff with doing an "excellent job" in the Newtown undertaking.

Loan and grant contracts for the project were signed in December of 1969 and the project actually began early in 1970. The gross project cost amounted to $1,062,334, but with the $94,919 realized from the sale of property in Newtown, the net project cost totaled $967,415.

In other business last night, real estate officer Kirby Boyd reported that two acquisitions, including a severance, were handled in the CBD area since the last meeting. Boyd noted that four acquisitions took place in Southside while no demolitions were handled.

In the West Meadowbrook area, three acquisitions were made and no demolition work took place, he said.

Assistant CBD project manager Dan Sullivan, who noted that no relocations were handled in the project area since the June meeting, said that the CBD project advisory committee met on June 29 and heard a report by City Engineer Charlie Holiday on a tentative project scheduled by the city in the project area.

Holiday said that the schedule, which runs through Aug. 27, calls for resurfacing work on Greene Street from Dickinson to Second, on Cotanche from Reade to Third, on Fifth from Cotanche to Reade, on Fourth from Greene to Cotanche, and on Third from Greene to Cotanche. Work is also scheduled on Third Street (curb, gutter, sidewalk and new stone base), on Washington between Third and

Doesn't Want
Father To Win

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jack Ford, who has actively campaigned for his father, says campaigning is an "emotional drain" and he is looking forward to the end of the campaign.

The 24-year-old son of President Ford has said several times before that he believes the Ford family lifestyle was better before Ford became president.

In an interview with Rolling Stone magazine, young Ford was asked whether he really wants his father to be re-elected.

"Deep in my heart? I don't even have to go that deep. No. 'It's an incredible paradox, you know,'" Ford continued. "I get up in the morning and say to myself, 'God, does it really make sense to do this, even if I'm not convinced that I want him to be President?'"

New Executive To Serve Merchants

The president of Greenville Chamber of Commerce and Merchants Association, Don Collier, manager of Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co., announced today the appointment of Edward M. Walker as the new executive vice president of the Chamber.

Walker, comes to Greenville to manage the local Chamber from Dunn where he served as head of the Dunn Area Chamber of Commerce for four years.

A native of Rose Hill, Walker received his elementary and high school education in the public schools of Wilmington. He continued his education at Holmes Bible College and Theological Seminary in Greenville, S.C.

When entering the Chamber of Commerce profession, he studied for four years at the University of Georgia in Athens, Ga., in the Institute of Organizational Management. The Institute is sponsored by the United States Chamber of Commerce.

In 1971, Walker was recognized as the "Outstanding Chamber of Commerce Executive in North Carolina" by the North Carolina Association of Chamber of Commerce Executives. The award is the highest honor given by the organization to fellow chamber executives.

While in Dunn, according to Collier, Walker was responsible for reopening a Chamber of

New Electricity Policy Voted By Ayden Board

By SUSAN QUINN

AYDEN—The Ayden Town Board adopted a new electric policy on new service installation and a cemetery ordinance on the opening and closing of graves at its Monday meeting.

The new electric policy requires contractors to give the Ayden Electric Office 120 days notice for the installation of electrical service for 200 AMP service or more amperage. The 120 day notice will allow the Electric office to receive the correct transformers and equipment necessary for 200 plus amperage.

The board heard a report from the cemetery committee and adopted a cemetery ordinance concerning the opening and closing of graves.

The new Ayden cemetery rates are as follows:

In the Blount Street cemetery: Two grave plots were $140 and are now $160 for residents and were $250 and are now $320 for non-residents. Four grave plots

Demo Platform Seen Groundwork For Future Goals

AFTER THE SIGNING — President Ford hands a copy of a bill he just signed to Transportation Secretary William Coleman in the White House Rose Garden Monday. The president signed a four-year commercial aviation development bill

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A platform pledging "an orderly beginning" to federal programs of national health insurance and guaranteed minimum incomes is expected to receive quick approval tonight at the Democratic National Convention.

The platform also supports legislation to reduce adult unemployment to 3 per cent in four years.

"The goal of the new Democratic administration will be to turn unemployment checks into pay checks," the platform document says.

The delegates are likely to approve only one amendment to the draft approved by the party's platform committee in Washington in May. The amendment proposes easing restrictions of the Hatch Act, which bars political activity by federal workers.

The final platform is expected to propose that federal workers "will have the same political rights enjoyed by other Americans as a birthright, while still protecting the civil service from political abuse."

The party has allowed two hours for discussion and approval of the platform — an indication of how swiftly party leaders expect the document to be approved. The platform is considered a compromise document that balances the sometimes competing interests of different factions in the party.

Jimmy Carter has said his supporters made a "major input into the exact wording" of the platform, but other major elements of the party also seem generally pleased.

"We have been successful in almost every item in the platform," said Dan Dozier of the United Auto Workers, head of the platform committee of the Labor Coalition, which represents 418 labor delegates at the convention.

The platform also is pleasing to some for what it doesn't say. It does not mention gay rights or capital punishment and makes only a brief reference to abortion, saying the party would disapprove a constitutional amendment to ban abortions.

Under convention rules, the delegates will be allowed only to vote approval or rejection of the entire platform and will not have the opportunity to vote on individual sections.

Only the Hatch Act proposal, which was forwarded as a minority report from the platform meetings in May, can be considered separately.

The platform supports mandatory busing to achieve racial

Convention Honors For Greenville Moose Lodge

Greenville Moose listened to reports of the International Convention at Washington, D.C. over the July 4 weekend, with a measure of satisfaction.

Lodge Governor Thomas Jamieson noted the Greenville membership had won another second-place trophy in the Civic Affairs competition, garnered an honorable mention for its lodge publication (The Moose Messenger) and had been cited for attaining two membership quotas during the 1975-76 year.

Jamieson, who attended the convention's Civic Affairs program, said "it was very gratifying to see recognition given the work of community service by the Moose fraternity," by national service organizations.

E. M. Baldree, who attended the convention both as a representative of Greenville and as a member of the Board of Governors for Mooseheart, said some 2800 Moose were registered at the annual gathering, and 3200 women were registered as attending the Women of the Moose meeting held in conjunction with that of the fraternity's convention.

Special attention was given, he said, to the building of a new $1 million domicile for children at Mooseheart and renovation of a residence at Moosehaven which is expected to be completed in time for the 1977 convention at Jacksonville, Fla. Membership the fraternity was reported as at an all-time high, and the past year marked the largest gain in Moose history.

Gov. Jamieson reported the July 4 Little League Field Day a satisfying success and thanked members who shared in the work required in staging the annual program.

Two dates in August were brought to the membership's attention: a floor show, dance and dinner on August 7, and a Family Day program planned for August 17.

A quarterly meeting of the ENOCA Legion (the second degree of the order) was announced for the coming weekend, hosted by the Washington, N.C. lodge.

Trial Of DI Under Way

PARRIS ISLAND, S. C. (AP)—The government was to start calling witnesses today in the general court marshal of a Marine Corps drill instructor charged with more than 50 counts of abusing some recruits and using others to steal government property.

On trial is Sgt. Samuel Greene, 23.

The government did not go into details of the charges Monday when 10 officers and enlisted men who make up the prospective jury were questioned at length about their ability to render an objective verdict despite adverse publicity the Marine Corps has received about mistreatment of recruits.

At the request of Greene's defense attorney, Military Judge Robert J. Blum asked each juror under oath if they could be objective despite the "lime-light" stemming from congressional hearings in Washington.

All 10 said they would not allow the adverse publicity to sway their judgment, and six of them said they felt the publicity the Corps has received was unfair and distorted.

Family Ship Is Realized Dream

WRIGHTSVILLE BEACH, N.C. (AP) — Thomas E. Colvin, a retired ship designer, has realized a 40-year dream by building his own ship, on which he plans to spend the rest of his life.

He has spent the last 260 days sailing between Panama and the Bahamas with his wife and two of his youngest children on the 48-foot, triple-masted sailboat the "K'ung Fu-Tse."

"I never get bored. I love it," said Colvin, who stopped this week to visit a daughter who attends Cape Fear Technical Institute in Wilmington.

It took him three years to build the K'ung Fu-Tse. He finished the job last summer.

He reads on board, mans the huge wooden ship's wheel, and fishes, often using bow and arrow.

There is no electricity on board, and Colvin does miss ice cubes. "You can get used to warm beer, but you can't enjoy scotch or a good martini without ice cubes," he says.

He and his wife operate a daily school on board for their two youngest children.

The Colvins lived for years in Miles, Va., about 40 miles north of Norfolk, where he worked as a ship designer. He says: "I felt like I was on a treadmill. It seemed I would never be able to retire. And I figured I would have to live to be 250 after age 65 to collect all the Social Security due me. So I decided to do something else."

His wife Jean, an Elon College graduate, enjoys her new life but she is not as enthusiastic as her husband.

"I sometimes feel I have no purpose in life anymore," she said. "I used to be so active — in the League of Women Voters and in the women's rights movement."

Colvin said his only income is $250 a month for writing a column for a sailing magazine. The boat is registered in Panama, where the tax is only $2.50 a year, he said.

The Colvins drink rain water, fuel their galley stove with diesel oil, and read by kerosene lamps.

Trenton Mayor Resigns Office

TRENTON, N.C. (AP) — Trenton Mayor Curt Smith, a victim of vandalism, has resigned. He says the townspeople won't accept a stranger as mayor.

Smith said Monday that one contributing factor in his decision was a gathering of the town's board with the town attorney Friday, while he was out of town.

Smith, a Floridian who retired to Trenton, has caused some commotion by trying to enforce the liquor laws and other ordinances at a local pool room.

His car was spattered with paint and a rock was thrown through a window of his house in the past week.

Bundy Going To Raleigh Meeting

State Representative Sam D. Bundy will attend a meeting of the State Board of Awards Friday in Raleigh.

He will also attend the regular meeting of the Advisory Budget Commission in Raleigh next Friday.

Plans will be finalized at this meeting for the members to visit the educational, mental, correctional and other state institutions in September. Schedules will be set to begin public hearings of the agencies of state government during October, in preparation for the formulation of the 1977-79 state budget.

Expects Continued Smuggling

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A top drug enforcement officer doubts that authorities ever will be able to eradicate the smuggling of marijuana through North Carolina.

He cites the state's 3,000 miles of coastline, much of it jagged and isolated, and the enormous profits in smuggling. "The coastline is so conducive to smuggling that an awful lot of high-class drug traffickers are in North Carolina," says Donald L. Ashton, special agent in charge of the Wilmington office of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA).

An agent of the State Bureau of Investigation, C. D. Holbrook, called those men "the unluckiest bunch in the world...They had been planning it for months and obviously intended to do it several more times."

That successful enforcement operation stemmed from a Coast Guard tip that two North Carolina vessels were seen off the coast of Florida "making some suspicious movements," said DEA agent Edward Hinchman.

Enforcement agencies aren't always so lucky, said Ashton. "We have neither the money nor the manpower to initiate much on our own," he said. "About all we can do is receive information and react to it. Sometimes we're lucky. Most of the time we aren't."

William J. O'Shea, district director of the U.S. Customs Service office in Wilmington, said large-scale drug smuggling is relatively new to the state, partly due to tighter enforcement in Florida in recent years.

"We're having to step up our patrols by land, sea and air, and we examine cargoes very closely," he said. "The coastline has always been attractive for smuggling. A lot of liquor was brought in here during the prohibition, but up until a couple of years ago drugs weren't coming in such vast quantities."

Heart Attack Fatal To Hero

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — Van Buren Peeler, 64, a decorated Navy officer considered also a civilian hero by many, was buried Monday in Shelby.

A lieutenant commander, Peeler served in the Pacific Theater during World War II, after which he served two tours of duty with Adm. Richard E. Byrd in Antarctica. He retired from the Navy in 1955.

He died Friday of an apparent heart attack in Cleveland Memorial Hospital.

Friends who gathered at his funeral Monday said Peeler uncovered a black market oil operation while serving as a civilian petroleum supply inspector in Vietnam.

Former Army captain Keith Craig, who worked with Peeler in the Mekong Delta area, said Peeler discovered numerous cases of black marketing in which oil for the allied forces was diverted by Vietnamese and American military officials.

"Not much had been done about that until he got there," said Craig, adding that Peeler's probing revealed "an almost Mafia-like organization."

Craig said Peeler's life was threatened several times by the black marketeers.

Another friend said he would also remember Peeler for his efforts to help South Vietnam.

ese find new homes in the United States after the fall of the Saigon government in 1975.

"I liked Van because he has been a great brother," said Au Dai Truong, 40, a Vietnamese refugee who teaches French at Gardner-Webb College in Boiling Springs, N.C. "I learned from him a lesson in honesty and courage."

Truong said Peeler sponsored more than a dozen Vietnamese during the evacuation of South Vietnam and helped them get settled in their new country.

When Truong reached the United States, Peeler invited him to move to the Shelby area, then found him a job at Gardner-Webb.

Woman's Home Is 'Haven Of Hope' From Drugs, Dilemmas

By JAMES W. KOFSKI
Associated Press Writer
SIOUX FALLS, S.D. (AP) — Kelli Jo Travers, who felt her role ultimately was "to make people aware of people," today boasts of having hosted under her roof 170 "kids" from a five-month-old abandoned infant to a 57-year-old man.

"People just sort of came to us," she said in an interview. "I'm like a magnet."

Mrs. Travers, Sioux Falls, says she and her husband, Red, opened their home to people with problems and christened it "Haven of Hope."

"It's the first project of my social ministry," Mrs. Travers said. "Jesus Christ was actually the first social minister. It's just lay people serving lay people."

She said college students who were staying out too much and drinking too much would approach her — "Ma Kelli, as kids would call me" — and ask to stay for the summer.

"We'd tell them sure, and they'd stay and get squared away and go back to school, and they'd be okay again," she said.

"Then it grew to children who were having problems in court. The court would ask me to talk with the children and invite them to come."

"Then I started working with parents who were having trouble with their children," she added. "Sometimes parents would send their children before they got into trouble with the courts."

Mrs. Travers said she set up a referral board of professionals, including doctors, lawyers and realtors.

"I started out with just a few people who believed in what I was doing," she said. "Now the referral board has grown, and people have volunteered their services on a 24-hour basis."

Mrs. Travers describes herself as "an ex-druggee, and I'm still using drugs. I'm addicted to both coffee and cigarettes."

"I never took drugs to run away," she added.

"I was putting myself through nursing and working besides. I took speed for nine or 10 days at a time, like diet pills, for 3½ years. When I had days off, I would take sleeping pills for two or three days to counteract the speed. But I never became addicted."

The Traverses live in a 1½-story, three-bedroom house.

"The most we've had at the Haven at one time — we accommodate whomever the Lord sends — was 19," she said. Their four children live with the couple.

One of the problems of many guests at Haven of Hope is drugs.

"The drug problem in South Dakota is very bad," she said. "How bad it is in comparison with other states I couldn't say. "I never use statistics because I don't think in the drug field you can get statistics," she added. "I'm more concerned about the people using the drug."

Common substances used in South Dakota include marijuana and speed, she said, "and in some areas animal tranquilizers. Although you don't hear a lot about it, they are here."

"The thing that disturbs me is the drugs are not pure when the kids take them," she said. "They're cut. The kids don't know what they're taking."

Drug addiction turns some people to crime, "and you have a lot of kids running away," Mrs. Travers said. "It results in car thefts — you go a little berserk, you're like a different person, you go and do something exciting."

Mrs. Travers, who travels within the state several times a week to discuss drugs, said, "I don't give any suggestions on beating the habit. You can't. I'm not going to try to talk anyone out of taking alcohol, drugs or anything. It's their life, whether they're children or adults. Most of my children are known druggees," she added. "We're very open around here."

"Once in a while they come home and their eyes are glassy, or they are clumsy. I ask them what they're on."

"But lots of parents don't ask them, or don't find out. If the kids told their parents they're on it, they'd come unglued."

"I just tell parents to be open with their children. I tell them that if their children are on drugs, there's a reason. Let's find out what it is."

Of her 170 "Kids," Mrs. Travers said, "I have only 17 that have not kicked the habit. And only seven or eight have gone to the training school at Plankinton."

Guidelines Offered To Parents On Raising Children

NEW YORK (AP) — A three-year program here, co-sponsored by New York Medical College and the New York Junior League, is designed to help teach parents how to raise well-adjusted children.

The program has been exploring ways to prevent emotional, social and learning disabilities in children by helping parents provide positive experiences and environments for their children during the first three critical years of life.

The program is being conducted by a child psychiatrist, two psychologists, a sociologist and other professionals and paraprofessionals from the medical college, along with trained Junior League volunteers.

Weekly daytime sessions with small groups of parents and their babies from the age of four weeks have been held at the Early Childhood Development Center, with more than 60 pairs of parents and their children participating. Findings from the program are already adding to current knowledge of early childhood development, according to Dr. Richard E. Brotman, executive director of the Department of Community Mental Health of New York Medical College. Dr. Brotman suggests these guidelines for sensible parenting:

—Try to be responsive to a child's needs. Crying, for example, is an infant's only language — the only way to tell you that it's hungry or needs to have its diapers changed. Perhaps all it is saying is that it wants some warmth or affection.

When the child is responded to, he learns that there are people around him who are going to take care of him. He develops trust in his environment. If a parent does not respond to a child's cry, he fails to learn that trust. He will make lesser attachments to the people around him. This can affect his emotional health in later life.

—Parents should demonstrate their approval and pleasure. It is important for parents to understand a child's capabilities at different ages, so that they can expect appropriate reactions and can then stimulate a child appropriately, at different stages of its development, with their approval. As an example, if it's a great accomplishment for a young child merely to pick up a block in one hand and pass it to the other hand, recognize this and applaud it. Don't expect him to build a large tower.

If the expectation of a parent is for a child to perform beyond its ability, a parent can often — even silently — convey disapproval and disappointment. Obviously this can be harmful to a child's self-confidence, can reduce his self-image and make him feel that he's seldom able to please.

—Consider discipline as teaching. It is not more important to disapprove negative behavior than it is to approve good behavior. Many people look upon discipline as punishment, instead of as a form of teaching, which it ought to be.

If a child gets attention for his "bad" behavior this type of behavior can, thereby, be encouraged as an attention-getting device. It's better to acknowledge good behavior and, sometimes, to decide not to reprimand minor examples of bad behavior.

—Do set limits and goals. Tell a child clearly what he can and should do — and what he cannot do — and help him understand the limits. Encouraging and helping a child do things for parental approval, and setting goals, helps not only to build a sense of morals, but is also tremendously important for his later achievement in school, in work and in life. It is important to develop and strengthen the drive to do things for approval.

—Be consistent. The role of both parents in raising a child is vital. It is essential that mother and father carefully examine their child-rearing roles, attitudes and actions in order to be consistent with one another as often as possible.

—Children are not "employees." That is to say, parents can't manage their children the way one runs an office. Although adults might expect to be able to tell business subordinates what to do — and have it done quickly, and well — young children often cannot follow a series of demands or orders. They need time to be able to develop and perfect their own ways of doing things, in their own time. According to the experts, the frustration which comes from always being told what to do, and when and how to do it, is a major cause of tantrums.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Next to the oarsman on a slave ship whose captain wanted to water ski, the most maligned person on the face of this earth is the teenager who has just landed his first full-time job.

No one suffers more and is appreciated less.

Many of these "slaves" have heard stories of men who got up each morning, were fully clothed by 7:00 and on the job by 8:30, but they discarded these as venomous rumors — the kind circulated in Berlin in the 1940s.

My son considers himself a "human sacrifice" on the altar of the Church of the Establishment. He was 15 before we could use the word "employment" in front of him. The word broke his face out and he preferred we spell it. The way he explained it to us on the eve of his marriage to a paycheck, "This is an exercise in group persecution, isn't it? All of you have run the course and now before I come of age, I have to prove that I can hack the 9-5 number, is that it? Okay, you win. If I have to prove that I'm mature, I'll get the dumb full-time J-O-B . . . jiji . . . jjoos . . . jjoob!"

Maybe a lot of you know my son — or at least have heard of him.

He's the only employed person who has to work all day and then come home and feed himself.

He's the only dedicated teenager in North America to work when the "gang" went tubing down the river one Wednesday afternoon.

He's the first person to ever have half of his paycheck withheld for some service which he has never requested (federal income tax, hospitalization, Social Security, etc.). As he stated, "Someone is going to hear about this!"

He stands alone as the only worker who is dominated by a senile boss (age 35) who engages in office brutality by insisting he arrive on time in the mornings, and after lunch.

He's the only full-time worker in the country who has not gained the respect of family and friends for his contribution to labor.

Last Saturday, I tapped him on the shoulder. "Hey, George Meany, out of the sack. It's the crack of noon."

My son rolled over. "I do not believe this is happening to a working person," he said. "All week long, I work five days a week, eight hours a day, and what do I get for it?"

"You get all your meals served like a sultan, your bedroom cleaned, your clothes washed and ironed and a full-time old family retainer — me!"

Something tells me I'll have the first kid to retire three years before he has anything to retire from.

Tell Boyfriend, Hope For His Understanding

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I was meeting my boyfriend at his apartment, and I got there a little early. (I have a key.) I started to straighten up the place a little, when I came across a box shoved way back in his closet. I got curious and discovered a lot of letters and pictures from his old girlfriend.

I know I shouldn't have done it, but I started to read some of the letters. I became so jealous and angry to think that he had kept all this stuff that I took the whole box out to the trash and burned it up.

I realize it was wrong, but what's done is done. Now I have such a guilty conscience and can't sleep. I keep thinking, "What if he discovers that box is missing and figures out what happened?"

I'm afraid to tell him because we've already set our wedding date, and he might be so furious with me he'll call off the wedding. Please help me, Abby. I really love him and don't want to lose him.

SORRY NOW

DEAR SORRY: Confess and get it over with. Prepare for some fireworks, but if he calls off the wedding, it's better than breaking up a marriage. It won't be easy, but tell him now and take your lumps.

DEAR ABBY: I am 9 years old and read your column every day. I have a dog named Missy. Our postman hates dogs.

One day our postman came by and Missy started to bark and run after the postman's heels, so he hit her with his mail bag. Missy gave out with a yelp, and for a while it looked like she was hurt bad, but she got back on her legs and made it back to the house.

I hear that some postmen bring treats to dogs so they will be friends, but not our postman. He is mean. What shall we do about him?

WORRIED ABOUT MISSY

DEAR WORRIED: I don't know the law in your community, but in some places it's against the law to allow dogs to run loose. Postmen are not obligated to deliver mail to homes where dogs are at liberty to attack them. I suggest you keep Missy tied up.

DEAR ABBY: May I comment on the letter from the two 21-year-old girls interested in meeting mature, responsible policemen in Chicago?

Think about it, girls. Are you aware that the divorce rate is higher among policemen than among any other profession? The pay is low and their families must learn to get along without Daddy on many holidays.

I know what I'm talking about because I've been married to a police officer for five years.

If it were up to me, would I choose a different career for him and a different lifestyle for me?

Definitely.

PASSAIC POLICE WIFE

DEAR WIFE: It's a good thing all women don't share your sentiments.

CONFIDENTIAL TO S.O.S.: Confess to your clergyman or repent with prayers and ask for forgiveness, but the word from here is, tell him nothing.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — A recent consumer survey by the College of Administrative Science at Ohio State University rated frozen foods higher than either fresh or canned in specific characteristics such as nutrition, taste and quality.

Occasionally, frozen foods are partially or completely thawed before you discover that the freezer is not operating. Partial thawing and refreezing does reduce the quality of foods, particularly fruits, vegetables, and prepared foods. Red meats are affected less than many other foods.

The study was made with 1,432 families to determine how the market sees frozen foods in relation to competitive products. Among the factors in which frozen were rated higher were nutrition, quality, fresh tasting and good tasting.

Frozen foods were found to be used most often in fruit drinks, whipped toppings, pizza, shrimp and fish.

Inspired By Former Governor

Something that is exciting to us is the prospect of organizing an Eastern North Carolina chapter of the N.C. World Trade Association.

A meeting will be held on the ECU campus July 30.

Industrialists, businessmen, governmental and civic leaders have been invited to attend.

The idea grew out of a suggestion by then governor Bob Scott that the center should have its headquarters in Greenville.

"We are convinced that the need is great and that there is sufficient interest to move forward with our plans," Col. C. R. Blake assistant to the chancellor, said.

"There is a great opportunity for many companies to add a new dimension to their business through foreign marketing. The most significant carriers to international trade are often psychological, relating to communication, language and procedure."

He said the proposed chapter could remove the obstacles and open new markets.

We can't think of anything more important to Eastern North Carolina than world trade. Agriculture, our largest industry, already has a large stake in the international market, and in the future we will look more and more to the foreign markets to purchase our agricultural commodities.

Phosphates are going to the world markets and many of our industries have international markets.

We also have two fine seaports in Eastern North Carolina that need to be promoted through international trade.

World trade is highly important to Eastern North Carolina at present and it can become more important in future years. We need to promote international trade and this can be done through an organization such as is contemplated.

Certainly that is no more logical place to place the organization than at East Carolina University where it can draw of the assets the university has to offer.

Carter Changed Convention Prospects

The Democratic National Convention opens this week in New York, and if all goes as expected, Jimmy Carter of Georgia will be the presidential nominee by Wednesday night.

That prospect is far different from what was anticipated several months ago. At that time there was the prospect of a deadlock which might bring forth a candidate who had not even campaigned in the primaries.

The changed picture is a tribute to the campaigning abilities of Jimmy Carter.

THIS AFTERNOON

Stirred By Property Taxes

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—Many a Tar Heel taxpayer is mumbling "It just ain't fair" this year as he watches local governments adopt new budgets and set local property tax rates for the bills coming in the fall.

And the troublesome truths is, it probably isn't fair.

The cornerstone of the property tax system is supposed to be fair and equal treatment of all taxpayers. That was the purpose of state law requiring regular revaluation of real estate.

That was the purpose of the General Assembly in requiring local boards of county commissioners to adopt a schedule of values upon which local appraisals would be made and the tax value of property set.

Not Fair

But if equal treatment was the goal, the result has been contrary. "It has operated in the reverse of equal treatment... and leads exactly in the opposite direction to fairness," says Doug R. Holbrook, director of the ad valorem tax division of the N. C. Department of Revenue.

Holbrook is upset over the public mood which he thinks could jeopardize the entire property tax system—a system which he defends as a good, solid source of revenue in company with the other two: sales taxes and income taxes.

"We have a good mix... but people just don't believe the property tax is good because they don't know how it works, and can't determine that they have been treated fairly."

"They wouldn't be so mad if they felt the system was fair."

The Culpit, says Holbrook, is the schedule of values. "People don't really know what that is, or how to challenge it." In most

The Curbing Of Power

Congress has only eight weeks of constructive time remaining — something in the neighborhood of 40 legislative days — before it adjourns in October. Most of the pending bills could be killed without regret. We have plenty of laws as it is. But one measure ought not to be abandoned.

This is a law to repeal the emergency laws.

Many Americans may be unaware of the situation, but the United States legally has been in a "state of national emergency" for more than 43 years. In point of fact, as a special Senate committee discovered, we are in not one state of emergency, but four.

We are still in the state of national emergency declared by Franklin Delano Roosevelt when he closed the banks on March 9, 1933. We are in another emergency declared by Harry Truman in December, 1950. We are also in two emergencies declared by Richard Nixon, one at the time of a postal strike in March, 1970, and the other declared during a supposed foreign trade and monetary crisis in August, 1971.

Plainly, the conditions that prompted these formal declarations ended long ago. The banks are flourishing, the Korean War is over, the mail is delivered, after a fashion, and the dollar is doing well. But as a matter of law the emergencies continue. More to the point, the powers that come into existence with a proclamation of national emergency also continue.

The Senate committee outlined some of these powers in a final report a few weeks ago. During the time of a "declared national emergency," a president may dispatch our armed forces "to assist in military matters" in any foreign country. A president may summon the militia to suppress what he regards as "conspiracy." Indeed, under Title 18, Section 1383, a president in time of emergency may declare any part or all of the United States a military zone; persons in such zones who resist any "executive order of the President" may be jailed for up to one year. It is not clear whether such prisoners would be entitled to judicial review.

More still. Given a national emergency, a president may virtually take over all radio, television and telegraphic communications. If a president finds the country "threatened by attack," he could find it impracticable to publish his proclamations and thus could rule by secret decree. At least 470 special powers are known to exist. Several functioning federal agencies, never having been created by act of Congress, owe their existence to the states of national emergency.

We ought not to be paranoid. No president is likely to plunge the Republic into dictatorship overnight. But we ought to be prudent. If I have written it once, I must

Assure Farmer Profit

By DON KENDALL

AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Healthy harvests should provide farmers with "reasonably good" profits in coming months and consumers with stabilizing food prices well into 1977, the Department of Agriculture's chief economist says.

Don Paarlberg predicted a record corn crop if enough rain falls and said the prospects point to "an abundance of food at reasonably stable prices" through 1977.

He said Monday that food price politics probably will aid incumbent politicians.

With strong export demand, including larger sales to drought-stricken western Europe and more animals to feed on U.S. farms, it appears farm prices will be "reasonably good" in the months ahead, he said, indicating farmers should get an adequate rate of return for their labors.

"I don't see anything here that's going to upset consumers as they were upset a few years ago," Paarlberg said. "I don't see economic distress calls coming out of the rural areas or coming out of the consuming areas, and I think that's got to be good for the incumbents."

His comments followed a Department of Agriculture report that showed 1976 corn production this fall could be a record of more than 6.55-billion bushels, up 14 per cent from 1975's record 5.8-billion bushels.

As livestock feed, corn is the

THE INSIDE REPORT

An Aegean Confrontation

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — A Turkish government vessel equipped with new seismic devices for underwater oil exploration is about to leave its berth near Istanbul for "research" in northern Aegean waters claimed by Greece — a disaster-prone voyage that dramatizes the tragic decline of the Western alliance.

Passage of this ship, recently rechristened Sismic, will add another bitter chapter in the hostility between Athens and Ankara, once the unified center of NATO's eastern flank. Far worse, precautionary measures being taken by both sides against possible Greek interference with the ship point to a real threat of shooting inside the disputed waters.

Thus, the Sismic's scheduled sailing — delayed several weeks partly because of Washington's ardent persuasion — is now to coincide with Aegean Sea naval exercises planned by both Greece and Turkey. The Aegean Sea, with massed Greek islands stretching close alongside the Turkish coast, will then be a lethal cockpit.

This dangerous confrontation poses further risks to the diminished integrity of Western defenses against the Soviet Union, the new power in the Eastern Mediterranean. Nevertheless, the U.S. is virtually powerless to do anything but counsel delay in the ship's sailing. The remote possibility that the Sismic could indeed trigger a shooting war between Greece and Turkey finds Washington fully as impotent as it has been for 15 months of Lebanon's tragic civil war.

Furthermore, as we have reported, U.S. powerlessness to influence events anywhere in the Eastern Mediterranean basin raises other difficult questions, such as homeporting facilities for the U.S. 6th Fleet and even shore leave stations for American sailors.

The pending Turk-Greece confrontation would come in Aegean Sea waters claimed by both countries in one of the world's most bitter disputes over territorial waters today.

Greece, claiming that its close-to-Turkey islands have their own continental shelf, has threatened to blow up Turkish ships seeking underwater oil there.

Turkey, which perceives the fabled Greek isles as "floating" islands with no continental shelf of their own, claims the disputed waters lie over the Turkish continental shelf, to which Turkey has sovereign rights.

Behind Ankara's decision to challenge Greek claims in the Aegean Sea lies an ever-worsening dispute with the U.S. It began with the 1974 Turkish invasion of Cyprus in reaction to the attempted takeover there by the then Greek military dictatorship. Ever since, the Ford administration has been pleading with the Democratic Congress — most receptive to the Greek lobby — to lift the arms embargo and thus end one-sided punishment of Turkey.

That effort now turns on the fate in Congress of the four-year, $1 billion U.S.-Turkish aid agreement signed March 26. The agreement would restore U.S. rights to intelligence bases, aimed at the Soviet Union, that Turkey closed last July.

The Turkish government has been informed by the administration that Congress will approve the agreement this year. In fact, as of today

Other Editors Say Irvin Cobb's Advice

(Greensboro Daily News)

Back in the days before Madison Avenue, Irvin S. Cobb, the American humorist, was reputed to have said: "All North Carolina needs is a good press agent."

In the years between — at least since the demise of the late Bill Sharpe — North Carolina has been searching, it seems in vain, for that commodity. Now Governor Holshouser, with painful experience as a reminder, is making a new stab at it. He has awarded the state's $1.22 million, two-year advertising contract to a Raleigh firm with the specific understanding that no politics be involved.

That was the trouble with advertising contracts from the time of Kerr Scott to Jim Holshouser. They were viewed as political plums. Democrats had been doing them out for years, quietly and without too much backlash. When Governor Holshouser followed the tradition, he stepped into a buzzsaw. The contract pay-off went to Capital Communications of N.C., a new firm organized by Jerome H. Louchheim III, the man who handled Holshouser's campaign advertising. Since 1973, it turns out, Louchheim has collected excessive commissions on his contract and recently was indicted on charges of overbilling the state — some $145,000 worth.

Governor Holshouser then did what the chief executive should have done years ago: He proclaimed ineligible any firm engaged in political advertising. That excluded quite a few, but 60 agencies applied anyway, and the contract went to McKinney, Silver and Rockett of Raleigh, a firm which also holds the South Carolina advertising contract.

The hope is that the new arrangement will eliminate political hanky-panky in the future. But don't count on it. Governors and their supporters have the best of intentions when it comes to political patronage; but somehow they can't avoid the conviction that getting a politician elected makes loyal lieutenants deserving of a place at the political trough.

Another aspect of state advertising demands as much consideration as political patronage. A good bit of the money, it strikes us, is being wasted on poorly conceived advertising pitches. The Louchheim firm, for example, produced several outrageously phony ads which only went to prove that the people in charge knew little or nothing about the product they were trying to sell.

Irvin Cobb said North Carolina needs a good press agent. He still hasn't shown up.

Organized labor's chiefs gathered for momentous conferences today on the eve of a vote to decide whether to push John L. Lewis and his industrial organization from the American Federation of Labor.

A high tide of activity was reached. Hurried informal conferences were held as preparations were made for a ballot tomorrow in the Federation executive committee which will determine whether or not the great labor schism is to occur.

The Greenies are no longer leading the Coastal Plain League. A 5-1 loss to the Goldsboro Gold Bugs Saturday and a 11-3 defeat at the hands of the Bugs on Sunday sent the locals down a peg in the standings.

Strength For Today

THE CONTEST NEVER ENDS

In ancient times Greek athletes gathered in ancient Olympia on the banks of the river Alpheus to compete in jumping, running, hurling spear, and other sports. Overlooking the valley where this contest took place was the hill of Kronos, upon the crest of which the Greeks believed that the gods gathered to watch the games. Every competitor, therefore, threw himself into the contest with the conviction that his efforts was exerted under the watchful and eager eyes of the gods.

In the Epistle to the Hebrews we find an admonition possibly suggested by the scenes we have just described. "Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God."

Waiting For A Housing Boom

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Waiting for the housing boom is like waiting in the rain for a much publicized Bicentennial fireworks display that was postponed without notification.

Much heralded, the housing boom is also much absent. Lower interest rates, rising incomes, structural innovations, more plentiful money and sheer need for shelter were supposed to fuse the boom. It didn't happen. High prices, bigger down payments, stricter financing terms, widespread insecurity and lowered buying power all helped wet the fuse. The market sputtered, but it never erupted. There were no fireworks.

Don't give up. Promises have been issued so frequently that even the optimists are jaded, but here comes another, from Citibank, which maintains that we are right now "counting down for a new housing take off."

Citibank offers at least three reasons to back its forecast, with the final one seeming to be the decisive one.

1. Though official figures are not available, it is likely that there are now about five million more families than there were in 1970, so that potential demand has been greatly increased in the past five years.

2. It has increased because of another factor also: Single individuals are becoming homebuyers.

3. The multifamily category of the market seems to be strengthening.

The longer it takes for multifamily production to return to strength, says Citibank, which surprisingly doesn't fear to use superlatives after so many of them failed before, "the stronger will be the boom when it comes."

It foresees multifamily production moving back toward levels reached earlier in the 1970s, "though it may not top the 917,000 starts of 1972 for many years."

But, it continues, "a doubling or more of current production may now come sooner than beleaguered analysts expect," and "when it does, the housing sector will boom — and the pessimists can switch to worrying about how long it can last."

The Rights of A Greenville Police Officer:

1. You have the right to be told what you can and cannot do off-duty as well as on duty.

3. You have the right to work instead of spend Christmas, birthdays, and other holidays with your family.
4. You have the right to spend your entire day off in court to hear the judge throw the case out of court.

6. You have the right to work for the Greenville Police Department and know each day you go to work that you can be fired for any reason whatsoever.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are indicated today from the Southwest across the central Plains to the upper Great Lakes. Rain and showers are forecast in New England. Cooler weather is expected in the Northeast but most of the country will be seasonably warm. (AP Wirephoto Map)

By The Associated Press
North Carolina weather is likely to be a little quieter today in the wake of a cold front that triggered some severe weather in portions of the state late Monday.
Strong thunderstorms occurred in the northern and central mountain sections, and a severe storm watch was issued for much of central and eastern North Carolina.

Hail, strong winds and water spouts were reported off the Outer Banks. Heavy rains in the northern and central mountains also caused some localized flooding.

Afternoon temperatures Monday helped set the stage for thunderstorm activity. Highs were in the 90s over most sections of the state, ranging up to 97 at Cherry Point and Jacksonville.

Early morning temperatures today were mostly in the upper 60s over northern sections behind the front, but still in the 70s over southern sections of the state.

Cooler, drier air reached into the state today as a ridge of high pressure rolled in from Canada. Afternoon temperatures today and Wednesday were expected to be a little cooler than Monday, with highs mostly in the 80s.

Mostly clear skies were forecast for the remainder of today and Wednesday.

there is no chance of that.

Democrats want to wait for a new Democratic administration; Republicans perceive political misery in voting for Turkey just before the election.

That the $1 billion agreement now seems dead for this year is extremely hard for the Turkish government to swallow. Contradicting the honeyed talk in Washington when the agreement was signed, this means Turkey's eligibility to buy U.S. arms is limited to only $125 million in each of the next two years.

The resulting sense of betrayal now becoming manifest is likely to make Turkey even more adventurous in confronting Greece over the Aegean Sea. Unable to see progress in its bitter struggle with Washington, Ankara is not held back by U.S. admonitions.

When the Greek government privately urged the U.S. NATO to dissuade Turkey from using the Sismic in disputed waters, it stated flatly the ship "will be sunk" if it shows up. U.S. persuasion delayed the Sismic's departure for two weeks, but it is now expected to sail in mid-July.

Some diplomats here believe the sailing will trigger not torpedoes but only a dangerous game of chicken. Realists disagree.

"The hotheads on both sides are spoiling for a fight," one diplomat told us. "And if it starts in the Aegean it could speak overnight to the border in Thrace." There, the two NATO allies face each other with imposing military power, and there the U.S. could no more halt hostilities than it can end civil war in Lebanon.

Paarlberg said that including the wheat harvest, estimated at 2.04-billion bushels, second only to last year's 2.1 billion, this year's total grain output is expected to be a record.

But he cautioned that some areas, including South Dakota and other parts of the upper Midwest, have been hurt by dry weather and that the corn crop will depend to a large extent on July and August weather.

He said the department is sticking with its prediction that retail food prices are "most likely" to rise only 3 to 4 per cent this year against an 8.5 per cent gain in 1975 and jumps of 14.5 per cent in each of the two previous years.

"Any price increase that might come about the rest of this year and at least the first half of 1977 would be from costs added after the products left the farmer's gate," Paarlberg told a news conference.

Death Waited At Every Corner

Carter Might Be Good To The Stock Investor

By SYLVIA PORTER

If Democratic nominee Jimmy Carter were to become U.S. President Carter, what would it mean to you, one of America's tens of millions of investors in stocks?

A. If you accept as a guideline the history of stock market performances going back to 1900 — more than three-quarters of a century ago — you must conclude you would make out far better under Democratic than under a Republican administration.

On top of that shocker, nominee Carter is unequivocally on the line against double taxation of corporation income: first, a tax on corporation profits and then, second, a tax on dividends paid out of the remaining corporate profits. Carter would eliminate this inequity either by wiping out all taxes on dividend income or by not taxing the amount of corporate profits paid out to stockholders in the form of dividends. This tax reform has long been a favorite of Wall Street — but without result.

In brief, although Wall Street is supposed to be shuddering at the prospect of a Democrat succeeding Republican administrations, the stock market in the past has shouted a message "relax!" — and it seems to be shouting it again.

Here are figures prepared by Yale Hirsch, to be published in September in Hirsch's "The 1977 Stock Trader's Almanac" (Old Tappan, N.J. 07675, $9.95). They show the stock market under the GOP and Democrats, based on the Dow Jones industrial stock average on election day.

Republican eras: In the 12-year period between 1901 and 1912 the average went up 48.3 per cent; in the 12-year period between 1920 and 1932 the average went down 24.5 per cent; in the 8-year period between 1933 and 1940 the average went up 121.2 per cent; and in the 7½-year period between 1949 and 1976 it went up 4.6 per cent.

Democratic eras: In the 8-year period between 1913 and 1920 the average went up 29.2 per cent; in the 20-year period between 1933 and 1952 the average went up 318.4 per cent; and in the 8-year period between 1961 and 1968 the average went up 58.3 per cent.

In the 39½ years of Republican Presidents, the stock market rose 149.6 per cent, an average annual change of 3.8 per cent. In the 36 years of Democrats, the stock market rose 405.9 per cent, an average annual change of 11.3 per cent.

To make it even more dramatic, a $10,000 investment compounded during the Democratic eras would have grown to $85,573 in 36 years. The same investment during the 39½ GOP years would have appreciated to only $25,906. Deducting the original stake leaves a net appreciation for the Democrats more than five times that of the Republicans.

When adjusted for loss in purchasing power, the Democrats' $85,573 is reduced to $18,056 and the Republicans' $25,906 to $18,186. "A draw!" says Hirsch, but he adds that the Republicans' 46.7 per cent gain in purchasing power — mostly during the depression of the early 1930s — "was not too meaningful to those of the 25 per cent who were unemployed."

What about recessions and bear markets?

There have been 12 recessions and 10 bear markets under the Republicans and 6 recessions and 8 bear markets under the Democrats. While the Democrats can boast of their stock market gains, the Republicans can counter that all four wars of the 20th century began while the Democrats were in power.

In the shorter 56-year span since 1920, each party has been in office 28 years. A $10,000 investment during the 28 Democratic years would have grown to $66,233 (excluding dividends) while the 100 cent dollar was dwindling to 43.7 cents. During the almost 28 years of Republicans in power, $10,000 would have grown to $17,469 and the 100 cent dollar would have declined less, to 81.5 cents. When adjustments are made for inflation, the Democrats still come out ahead: their $66,233 is reduced to $28,944 and the GOP's $17,469 is lowered to $14,237 — a gain of 189.4 against 42.2 per cent.

And now back to Carter. The U.S. economy is into a strong, broad, healthy advance, with virtually every key signal pointing upward. Nominee Carter is a political pragmatist and, except in consumer issues, hardly an economic radical, as this week's columns will document.

As one shrewd Republican in Wall Street summarized it: "Look at the way he's raised money down here. That says it."

Tomorrow: Carter and inflation.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Emily Harris has told jurors a story of life on the run with Patricia Hearst — of a time when each day was lived "as if on the edge of a precipice" and death was waiting at every corner.

Miss Hearst herself escaped by hours — and by sheer luck — an appointment with death, Mrs. Harris revealed.

The 29-year-old Mrs. Harris' opening statement, delivered in the role of cocounsel, set the stage for prosecution testimony to begin today against her and her husband, William, charged with Miss Hearst with kidnapping, assault and robbery.

The 22-year-old newspaper heiress will be tried separately after sentencing on her San Francisco bank robbery conviction.

Miss Hearst's name arose frequently in Mrs. Harris' first account of their fugitive days.

Recalling the events of May 16, 1974, Mrs. Harris said, "A freak chance happening" saved Miss Hearst's life. But for a twist of fate, the newspaper heiress also would have been killed in the fiery shootout on May 17, 1974, in which six Symbionese Liberation Army members were slain.

"Bill and I were going shopping," she said. Patricia "Mizmoon" Soltysik, an SLA soldier, planned to accompany them.

"But at the last minute, she stayed home and Patricia Hearst stated a desire to come with us. That chance decision cost Mizmoon her life and saved Patricia Hearst from death."

Miss Soltysik died on her 26th birthday in a battle with police which left only charred remains of her body and those of five other SLA soldiers at the hideout Miss Hearst had left the day before.

Mrs. Harris, defending her husband and herself, said while on the shopping trip, Miss Hearst fired two machine guns without orders from them.

"These events at Mel's were totally unexpected," she said, "and Patricia Hearst's resulting actions in firing of the automatic weapon were spontaneous..."

The charges against the Harris and Miss Hearst stem from incidents after the sporting goods store shooting.

Miss Hearst has said she fired the guns as "a reflex action" drilled into her by the Harris. Miss Hearst, kidnapped by the SLA on Feb. 4, 1974, portrayed the Harris as captors, not comrades. But Mrs. Harris depicted the heiress as a convert to the SLA.

ECU Physicist At Conference

Dr. Thomas Sayetta of the East Carolina University physics faculty attended the recent International Conference on Teaching Physics for Related Professions at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Physics-related professions covered by conference sessions were engineering, technical fields, education, life sciences, medicine and other physical sciences.

Dr. Sayetta was among 100 educators from 25 nations selected to attend the conference, which was arranged by Dr. A.P. French of the M.I.T. faculty.

Dr. French has been a guest speaker at seminars sponsored by the ECU Department of Physics and the campus Sigma Xi chapter.

"Patricia Hearst was simply a young woman going through a process of change, learning about herself, and she had made the decision to go through this process in the company of people who considered themselves revolutionaries," she said.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rolled ahead in active trading today, continuing the rally of the past two sessions.

The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up 4.34 at 1,015.55 after a net advance of 19.23 points last Friday and Monday.

Gainers outpaced losers by more than a 2-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Brokers said the Dow's breakthrough to a 3½-year closing high on Monday had attracted additional buying by chart-watching investors.

They also noted continuing encouragement over the recent downtrend in short term interest rates and the smaller-than-expected increase reported by the government last week in its wholesale price index for June.

After a broad early rise, however, the market leveled off amid profit taking.

Pan American World Airways was the most active NYSE issue, up ¼ at 6½. An 80,800 share block traded at 6½.

O'Sullivan Corp., an American Stock Exchange issue, jumped 1¼ to 12½. The company reported sharply higher second quarter earnings.

The NYSE's composite index picked up .23 to 56.77 in the first hour, and the American Stock Exchange market value index was up .27 at 107.32.

Carter...

After Glenn had delivered his speech, Gov. Patrick J. Lucey of Wisconsin observed that it could be crucial in Glenn's chances for the vice presidential role.

"I think that making a keynote speech is a very high risk proposition," Lucey said.

There also were echoes of Carter's campaign in Glenn's speech as he spoke of compassion, of public confidence and of government grown so big and complex it leaves its citizens cowed and powerless.

The cure, Glenn said, "lies in renewed partnership between citizens and their government." But he said it would take new leaders with vision, "a Democratic president and the next Democratic administration."

Carter finished a series of personal interviews with the potential running mates Monday and said he would sort all the information and impressions he had gathered and make his choice.

"I don't know how to describe the procedure," he said, "except as a thought process. 'It's undoubtedly the most important decision that I will make this year,' Carter said, 'perhaps one of the most important in my whole life.'"

Carter said he had discussed with each of the seven finalists "the fact that they might very well be my successor because of something happening to me during my term, or if I should finish out my term, that they might very well be the natural next candidate for president."

"So, I feel a very heavy responsibility on my shoulders in that I might very well be helping to choose the next president of our country if I should be successful and be elected," Carter said.

Rosalynn Carter disclosed Monday night that she has sat in on all of the interviews and that she also looked over the wives of each prospective ticket mates.

One of those on the list took himself out of consideration Monday. Rep. Peter Rodino of New Jersey, who headed the House Judiciary Committee impeachment hearings on Richard Nixon, said he withdrew because of a recurring glaucoma from which he suffers. That left six, all members of the Senate.

Democratic gubernatorial candidate George Wood, guest speaker at this morning's meeting of the Pitt County Agribusiness Association, said Winston Churchill's noted comment regarding the Battle of Britain during World War II, never before have so many owed so much to go few, could well be said about the American farmer.

Wood said prosperity in America has been based on this country's progress in agriculture.

"Without our agricultural exports in the past 25 years," Wood said, "this country would be flat broke." He noted that "one out of seven mouth-fuls of food produced... in this world is produced by the American farmer." This, he emphasized, "is a story we must go out and tell."

The speaker said since 1900 the number of agricultural workers in the U.S. has dropped from 50 per cent of the population to five per cent.

"The people in agriculture don't have many votes..." he said, but emphasized, "it's an important part of our economy." Wood said too, that national leaders should not play politics with agriculture.

"Our good life in these United States did not come from an act of Congress..." Wood said, rather, he suggested, it came from people in agriculture.

"Food since the beginning of time has been a symbol of power. I think it's said in our... society... political people making economic decisions about agriculture."

"I am of the opinion that we can no longer use American agriculture..." in the struggle for power, Wood emphasized.

According to Wood representatives of oil producing nations have said they want the price of oil to be equal to the cost of food.

He said a ton of crude oil now costs $92.08. "The present price of wheat is $125 a ton," Wood pointed out that wheat is a recurring crop while crude oil is not a recurring resource.

Wood said that farmers may not be receiving all they should at the market place. Illustrating, he said a standard loaf of bread contains 20 slices. "The farmer gets 2½ slices for growing the wheat," while others receive the profits from the remainder of the loaf.

"I don't know what the answer is," he said.

It was announced at this morning meeting at the Pitt

Agribusiness group will sponsor a Bicentennial Salute to Agriculture July 25 at the Greenville-Pitt County Airport, from 2 p.m. until 5 o'clock.

The program will include exhibits of farm equipment and exhibitions of aerial crop spraying.

It was also announced that a Tobacco Farmer Show will be held at the Farmers Warehouse here November 16, 17 and 18, sponsored by the Flue Cured Tobacco Farmer magazine and Specialized Agricultural Publications Inc.

Jim Swindell, manager of the Raleigh publishing firm said that tobacco trade show will be "the largest show in Eastern North Carolina there has ever been."

The show will include both educational and commercial exhibits.

Swindell said the show is being staged at Farmers Warehouse—the world's largest flue cured sales warehouse—because in 1975 there were 42,172 tobacco growers in 52 counties within 100 miles of Greenville that designated 845 million pounds of tobacco, the crop from 422,500 acres.

Agribusiness association president Larry Land presided at today's meeting.

Three Fire Bombings In Scotland Neck Reported

SCOTLAND NECK, N.C. (AP)—Officers reported today there were three fire bombing incidents Monday night at Scotland Neck where a black man was killed by a white woman last March. Firemen put out two of the blazes before serious damage was done and the bomb did not ignite in the third attempt.

One of the bombs ignited a blaze in the cab of a fuel oil truck at the Harrison Oil Co. Witnesses said that the intense heat melted the plastic steering wheel and the glass in the windshield but did not ignite the gasoline in the truck's fuel tank. The truck was parked near other trucks and tanks filled with gasoline and fuel oil.

Another bomb ignited trash in a container at the Paul Bruce Manufacturing Co. where about 200 people are employed. Firemen put out that blaze, too, before it spread.

The third bombing attempt was at the Edward Fork Commissary where a Mason jar apparently containing liquid and a wick was thrown through a window.

Officers said there was also a smoke scare reported at the home of Gatsby Dickens, mother of Harry Lee Dickens who was killed by Mrs. Sandra Dupree, wife of a Free Will Baptist minister. Mrs. Dupree was acquitted after a trial in Henderson last week in which she claimed she shot Dickens after he attacked her and her son, Mark, while he was delivering papers.

Commerce that had been closed. The Dunn Chamber had a total of 117 members and a budget of $17,000 when he assumed his duties and within three years, the Chamber membership in the city of 10,000 had grown to a total of 346 members, and a budget that exceeded $65,000 annually.

The Chamber was instrumental in Dunn being named a Governor's Award City in North Carolina he said. In addition, while Walker was Chamber executive, the Dunn organization became one of the over 200 Chambers to be accredited by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Walker was ordained as a Baptist minister in 1955 and has served churches in Holden's Beach, Goldsboro and Dunn.

He is a former member of the Goldsboro Optimist Club and a former member of the Dunn Rotary Club. He was active in the Boy Scouts of America while in Harnett County and was activities chairman for the Cape Fear District for three years. He was district chairman for 1971.

Commenting on Walker's appointment, Collier observed, "We are delighted to have Mr. Walker as our new executive vice president and already we are working together towards building a greater Chamber for Greenville."

Collier added, "The committee chairmen are meeting this week to begin implementation of the program of work and we are asking that every member be ready and willing to work together as a team in making Greenville a better place to live and do business."

The president also expressed his appreciation to the selection committee headed by Lawton Nisbet. Other members included Janice Buck, Art Galya, Reese Hart, Mickey Herrin, Don McGlohon, and Jerry Powell.

Collier invited Chamber members to visit the office at 1209 W. 14th Street and meet the new executive.

Americans Hope To Smooth Out Problems Of Canada, Taiwanese

By GEOFFREY MILLER
AP Sports Writer

MONTREAL (AP) — Peace hopes in the great Olympics dispute rested today on the shoulders of Philip O. Krumm, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee and a man with a reputation for patching up other people's quarrels.

Krumm and his committee took over the role of mediators and became the central figures in the drama of the Taiwanese athletes who are shut out of Canada for political reasons.

The Americans were talking with the Canadian External Affairs Ministry in Ottawa and the Taiwanese officials in the Olympic Village in Montreal.

Olympic sources gave them a slim chance of success. But it was a last gasp effort to get the Taiwanese into the Games, opening Saturday, and to restore the battered image of the Olympic charter.

"We are working like the dickens to get both sides in this dispute to concede a little," Krumm said.

"The future of the Games depends on our success. Instead of friendly athletic competition between athletes, the Olympics have become a political contest between countries."

The International Olympic Committee (IOC) recognizes the national Olympic committee of Taiwan under the name of the Republic of China — a name which offends the Communist Chinese in Peking.

Canada, clearly concerned about its big wheat export trade with Peking, refused to allow Taiwan to participate unless it was willing to drop the "Republic of China" label and abandon their national flag.

The IOC executive board failed to make any impression on the Canadians. It tried asking the Taiwanese to march in the opening parade under the Olympic flag and the IOC insignia, but the Taiwanese said no. Unless one side or another gives way, the Taiwanese will be the first athletes ever shut out of an Olympic host country because of politics.

Krumm, admitting no great progress was made in his peace moves Monday, said: "We shall be going back to both sides today, and we will aim to get some measure of agreement in time for the full session of the IOC."

The 75-strong IOC started a four-day session today. It will be called upon to approve recommendations of the executive board, which it usually does as a formality.

Play Continues In SPLL Event

GRIFTON—Grifton's Piggy Wiggly and Roger's Furniture took wins last night to advance in the Southern Pitt Little League tournament.

Piggy Wiggly beat Bethel, 4-1, on a two-hitter by Bernard Ricciarelli.

Piggy Wiggly scored all it needed getting a pair in the first. Gary Edwards doubled and Ricciarelli walked. Kevin Battle doubled both across.

Bethel got its only run in the bottom of the inning.

Piggy Wiggly added two more in the fifth on a two-run homer by Battle.

Maurice Thorbs' double in the bottom of the fourth drove in two runs and gave Rogers a 7-5 win over the Giants.

Rogers had taken a 2-0 lead in the first when Thorbs homered with one on. An error in the second led to a third Rogers tally.

The Giants bounced back in the top of the third to tie the game, 3-3. Joey Joyner singled and Otis Payton reached on an error. Kenneth Kredle reached on an outfield error scoring both runners and Kredle scored on Lori Kondrotis's double.

But Rogers battled back in front with two in the third and put the lid on it with the two tallies in the fourth. Winterville scored its last two in the fifth.

Carner Captures Women's Open

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "The first might have been luck. But when you win a second, you feel like a pro."

Such was JoAnne Carner's reaction after beating tiny but tough Sandra Palmer by two strokes Monday in their 18-hole playoff for the U.S. Women's Open Golf Championship.

It was Mrs. Carner's second Open title. She won in 1971, at Kahkwa Club in Erie, Pa. She became the fourth player in the history of the Open to win two or more times.

Mrs. Carner's victory wasn't exactly artistic. She blew a four-stroke lead with five holes to play, and came back to win with the help of an eight-foot birdie putt and a bogey by Miss Palmer on the 17th hole.

Her five-over-par 76 wasn't exactly the kind of score you expect from one of the game's great hitters in a clutch match. Fortunately for Mrs. Carner, however, Miss Palmer shot 78.

But artistic or not, it was good enough to win $8,000 for the 37-year-old Mrs. Carner, and more important the prestige of being Open champion. The Open is the women's most prestigious bauble.

The 35-year-old Miss Palmer, who tied Mrs. Carner in the regulation 72-hole tournament when she rolled in a five-foot putt on the 18th green in Sunday's final round, took her defeat in stride.

"I had my chance and I turned around and gave it back to her," said the 5-foot-1 Miss Palmer, smallest player on the pro tour. "JoAnne is tough. That's why we call her 'Big Mama.'"

The two veteran women golfers each totaled eight-over-par 292s in the four-day tournament, which started with 150 in the field and was cut to 50 for the final two rounds.

CLAIMED LAME HORSE

BELMONT, N. Y. (AP) — Trainer Howie Jacobson, on behalf of Jerome Castle, got a lame horse costing $12,500 when he claimed Banderlog from Sigmond Sommer in a race at Belmont Park this May.

Banderlog was a 3 to 5 favorite seeking his fifth straight win when he broke down halfway through the race. Usually, the person claiming a horse has insurance against the horse being injured.

about everything. There were close plays, hair-raising plays, bootings, fisticuffs, wild rallies, and a storybook ending.

That ending, fortunately for the Pirate fans, saw the Bucs come up with a run in the bottom of the 10th inning to pull out a 10-9 victory over the Monarchs, who played the final five innings without their coach and their number one catcher — both of whom drew the thumb of the umpire in the sixth innings.

The victory kept the Bucs ahead of Methodist in the Summer League standings with a 13-10 mark. Methodist is now 13-12.

For a while, it looked like it was going to be an easy Pirate win, as the Bucs built up a 5-0 lead in the first three innings. But a freak error helped Methodist get a rally started, and it wasn't until six runs had crossed the plate that the Bucs got the fire out. Even then, the Monarchs built up a 9-6 lead before three Pirate runs in the eighth tied it up.

A miracle play saved the Monarchs in the ninth, but they finally caved in during the 10th.

East Carolina opened the scoring in the first with three big runs. Rick Koryda opened up with an infield hit and he stole both second and third. On the second steal, the ball was thrown away, and he came on home.

With two away, Sonny Wooten singled and Bobby Supel followed with a hit. Charlie Stevens walked to load them up.

and Pete Paradossi's hit brought in both Wooten and Supel.

The Pirates added another in the second. Robert Brinkley reached on a fielder's choice and Macon Moye was safe on an error. A wild pitch scored Brinkley.

A fifth East Carolina run crossed in the third. Stevens walked to open the frame and Paradossi singled. Griff Garner reached on a fielder's choice, and Howard McCullough hit a sacrifice fly, scoring Stevens.

In the top of the fourth, however, Methodist finally got to starter Larry Daughtridge, who had sailed through the first three innings with no trouble at all.

With one away, Sam Tolar walked. Bobby Cobb hit back to second, where Paradossi made the stop on the ball, but slipped as he tried to start a double play. The resulting overthrow allowed Tolar to race all the way from first to home, putting the Monarchs on the board. Cobb scored on a double by Buddy Gooch and another double, by Steve Hodges brought in Gooch. Adwin Pellom reached on an error and Robert Reed walked, loading them up. A walk to Mike Hayes brought in Hodges, and Butch Stegall singled in Pellom. A wild pitch scored Reed with the go-ahead run.

East Carolina tied it in its half of the frame. Supel reached on a fielder's choice and a double by Stevens brought him home.

Methodist went right back to work in the fifth, scoring two more. Gooch walked and Hodges singled. Pellom also walked and Mike Maxton singled to score Gooch. Hodges scored when Redd grounded out for an 8-6 lead.

Another run came in the sixth, but not before the Methodist coach and Gooch got the thumb. The bench started riding the plate umpire before a pitch had been thrown in the frame. The official warned the bench, then after getting more abuse, booted Gooch. That brought on further argument from the Monarch mentor, who followed his catcher to an early shower just seconds later.

Hayes then singled and Stegall got a hit. Hayes took third on a fielder's choice and scored on Cobb's infield out. A brief squabble erupted on the play at second, but tempers were quickly cooled after a brief flurry.

Methodist threatened in both the ninth and the tenth, but a double play erased them in the ninth, and a double steal was cut down at the plate in the 10th to end their threats.

East Carolina tied it up in the eighth with three runs. Brinkley and Moye both singled and Wooten was hit by a pitch, loading them up. Supel hit a sacrifice fly to score Brinkley, and Stevens doubled in Wooten after Moye scored on a wild pitch.

In the ninth, a break kept the Bucs from ending it. Howard McCullough had singled and moved to third on a passed ball and a stolen base with two away. Wooten hit a liner off the glove of the Methodist first baseman, who just managed to chase down the ball and flip to the pitcher covering the bag to get Wooten as McCullough crossed the plate.

In the tenth, however, the Bucs got the fateful run. Supel singled and Stevens got a hit to open the frame. Paradossi was intentionally walked to set up a force and Jerry Carraway grounded to the infield with Supel cut down at home.

McCullough then laid down a perfect bunt, scoring Stevens on the squeeze, and ending the game.

The Pirates return to action on Wednesday night, playing host to Campbell in a 7:30 p.m. game at Harrington Field.

HELLO, DERE!—Mark Fidrych (left) of the Detroit Tigers, and Randy Jones of the San Diego Padres, greet each other with a tip of the hat during a workout session at Philadelphia yesterday. The two will be the starting pitchers for their respective leagues in the annual All-Star game tonight. (AP Wirephoto)

Fidrych, Jones Square Off With Rest Of All-Stars In Philadelphia

By TOM SEPPY
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mark "The Bird" Fidrych of the Detroit Tigers and Randy Jones of the San Diego Padres, two youngsters in a hurry, are the starting pitchers tonight in the 47th All-Star Game.

President Ford will join 61,000 fans at Veterans Stadium, which will be viewed by a national television audience.

Fidrych, the 'Gee Whiz Kid,' says he can't imagine pitching in the majors, let alone starting an All-Star Game.

"There really are no words to describe it," the 21-year-old Fidrych said as the two teams held brief workouts Monday. "My body is feeling it but it's hard to get the words across. I thought that maybe I would get in an inning, but starting...Wow!"

Texas, shortstop; Rusty Staub, Detroit, right field, and Bobby Grich, Baltimore, second base.

In addition to Jones, National League Manager Sparky Anderson said he would have his own Pete Rose, Cincinnati, at third base and leading off, followed by Steve Garvey, Los Angeles, first base; Joe Morgan, Cincinnati, second base; George Foster, Cincinnati, center field; Gregg Luzinski, Philadelphia, left field; Johnny Bench, Cincinnati, catcher; Dave Kingman, New York, right field, and Dave Concepcion, Cincinnati, shortstop.

With Fidrych and the 26-year-old Jones, the All-Star Game has two young pitchers who dash madly from dugout to mound, and mound to dugout. They not only run fast, they pitch well.

Jones, a sinker-ball specialist, has won 16 games at the All-Star break, a National League record. His fast ball takes a long time to get to the plate, but he pitches fast games because he runs to and from the mound and seldom issues a walk. Jones won 20 last year and pitched 1 2-3 innings to gain a save in last year's All-Star game.

"I'm not at all embarrassed when people comment about how slow I throw," he said Monday as he posed with Fidrych for traditional pictures. "If I do my job well, it will frustrate a hitter. On Astroturf, I have to be more careful. My success is all a matter of where I place the pitches."

Fidrych is more colorful and the media favorite. He not only races to his position and back, he talks to the ball, smooths the dirt on the mound from his knees, shakes hands with infielders who make good plays and, because of his nervous energy, is a cheerleader type.

He lost 1-0 Friday night. His only other loss in a 9-2 season was 2-0. He has completed every game but one.

Asked if his friends consider him kooky, he told newsmen: "No, they're like me, too."

Public TV Has Own Dilemma

By DONALD SANDERS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Public broadcasting, buoyed by the promise of a bigger budget and long-term financing, remains deeply troubled over how its federal dollars should be spent.

The issue, which has been simmering since the early years of the Nixon administration, is called in the industry the centralists vs. the localists.

What this means is that the public television and radio stations think they should be given more money to improve their equipment and their local programs; the federal establishment prefers to put most of its money into national programming.

The localities maintain that the latter approach seems to be aimed at development of another network, which is at variance with many public pronouncements about what the public broadcasting role should be.

Both the House and the Senate have approved the concept of long-term financing, which public broadcasting has long advocated on the grounds that it is needed to plan programs a year or so in advance.

The Senate voted $103 million for the present fiscal year; the House voted $96.75 million, with the difference still to be resolved.

The money voted by Congress is funneled through the Corporation for Public Broadcasting to more than 250 public television and some 170 public radio stations, and to the Public Broadcasting Service, which handles the distribution and technical processes.

One strong new personality entered the picture early this year: Lawrence K. Grossman, former vice president for advertising of NBC and for 10 years head of his own marketing and advertising firm in New York.

He was regarded with some skepticism in the community, one federal source says, because of his background in commercial television and his connection with the Eastern establishment.

"He has exhibited a sophisticated concept of programming," this man says. "He has not forced his ideas down anyone's throat. He could be the first strong man in public broadcasting."

Frederick Brightenfeld, executive director of the Maryland Center for Public Broadcasting, agrees that the new president of PBS is intelligent, responsive, brilliant and interested in providing good service.

But he has some reservations about the thrust. "Is the main question the local stations' strength, or is it in providing a broad national service," Brightenfeld said in a telephone interview.

"Larry believes the latter; many of us believe in the former. We see this as moving in the direction of a confrontation in programming."

"Another president might have said our first priority is strengthening the local stations. If we are in the business of building large audiences, we get into things like 'The Dating Game.'"

Applicability Of Mine Safety Laws Uncertain

By The Associated Press

In the wake of an emerald tourist mine accident that killed two men, federal and state mine inspectors admit they don't know whether mine safety laws apply to tourist-type mines.

James Richard Draedyn, 51, of Plantation, Fla., and Delmas Joseph Harrison, 26, of Belmont, N.C., were killed Sunday by a cave-in at the Emerald Valley Mine at Hiddenite.

A third man, Robert Lebowitz of North Miami Beach, Fla., was partially buried and had to be dug out by rescuers.

They were among an estimated 10,000-15,000 amateur prospectors who dig for minerals each year in open pits for $4 a day, according to Lois Rist, the mine's owner.

It is unclear whether mine safety laws cover the circumstances of their deaths, federal and state officials said Monday.

"These tourist-type operations make it sort of difficult. This is kind of a gray area," said Bill Booher, director of the state Department of Labor's office of communications.

"The law does not provide for penalties unless there was willful and flagrant criminal negligence," he said.

He said mine owners are encouraged by state inspectors to post signs warning amateurs of possible dangers, but there is no legal provision for enforcing such measures.

The Department of Labor's Mine and Quarry Inspection Division is responsible for state mine inspections and division inspectors were at the cave-in site Sunday afternoon and Monday.

Two federal investigators from the U.S. Department of the Interior's Mining Enforcement and Safety Administration (MESA) at Salisbury also were on hand.

Investigators from both offices said the laws they enforce deal primarily with employee safety in commercial mining operations.

To complicate the investigation, Booher said, Lebowitz, the only apparent witness to the cave-in, left the state and was in Virginia Monday.

Booher said he had word that Lebowitz would return to North Carolina Wednesday to answer questions.

James Brandon, head of the state's mine and quarry inspections, said inspecting amateur operations like the Emerald Valley Mine are largely exercises in futility.

"With this kind of operation," he said, "you could inspect one day and with a backhoe you could dig a hole by the next day that would be dangerous. Every inspection of a mine we make, we find some deficiencies."

"The question boils down to what they're doing up there — mining or hobbling?" he continued. "God knows, we can't keep up with every rockhound in the country. They're everywhere."

"It can also consist of a thorough, even microscopic examination of absolutely everything a person brings into the country. Or it can be something in between."

He said it is the responsibility of each inspector to decide on the intensity of the examination, adding:

"Since the level of inspection is not recorded, we do not know

Farm Scene

By EDWIN L. YANCEY
County Extension Chairman

Soft rot or "barn rot" of tobacco cost Pitt County farmers several thousands dollars in 1975. According to Rupert Watkins, Extension Agricultural Engineering Specialist, its the major curing problem in machine primed tobacco.

The rot is caused by a soil borne bacteria so it is especially troublesome on lower primings. It enters the leaf through broken or badly bruised places. It then multiplies rapidly and spreads to other parts of the leaf. Where there are a lot of broken stems and torn leaves, it can spread to other leaves. That explains why machine primed tobacco seems more susceptible.

Soft rot is often called a "wet weather" disease. The bacteria seems to thrive in a wet, warm, dark environment. It grows especially fast at 80° to 100° F temperatures. The yellowing phase of curing, therefore, is where the most problem occurs.

To prevent soft rot, Watkins suggests:

1. Temperatures should be set at 95° to 105°.

2. Dampers should be open enough to wilt the leaf by the time yellowing is complete but not enough to set green color.

Dampers may safely be opened considerably more at 95 degrees than at 105 degrees to wilt tobacco without setting color. Also, more damper opening is required to wilt sappy or high moisture tobacco.

Droughty or low moisture tobacco needs very little damper opening for wilting.

The remainder of the curing process should proceed normally.

Extension specialists are trying to learn more about the soft rot problem. If it develops on your farm, please contact the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office at 758-1196, or come by 203 West Third Street in Greenville.

Must Clear U.S. Customs

By MURRAY J. BROWN
UPI Travel Editor

Wherever foreign travelers may take the American, he must clear U.S. Customs on his return home. And that goes for our astronauts as well as you and me.

A news release from the U.S. Customs Service listing historical events of past April noted that the Apollo 16 astronauts commanded by John W. Young, in 1972 were required by law to obtain clearance on whatever they brought back from their three-day stay on the moon.

The astronauts? They must be kidding. So I wrote to Customs headquarters in Washington to confirm the report.

"The astronauts were cleared by Customs because the law, Section 1582 of title 19, requires it — the astronauts made a customs declaration like other travelers," replied William Steo, Public Information Specialist with the agency in the Department of the Treasury.

"The commander of the capsule also had to fill out a manifest ('moon rocks') and entry form, per Section 1581 of title 19, which refers to vessels."

Stee emphasized there are no exceptions under the law.

"The federal statutes which the Customs Service is obliged to enforce (over 400 for about 61 agencies) do not exempt astronauts, heads of state or anyone else from making a 'Customs declaration,'" he said.

"Customs officers have no alternative but to ask for declarations from everyone and to inspect every person, load of cargo, piece of luggage and handbag, every ship, aircraft, train, truck, bus, car or bicycle."

It is not an easy job. An estimated 250 million persons cleared through Customs in 1975, making oral or written declarations. Oral declarations may be made by travelers whose total purchases abroad do not exceed the basic $100 duty-free exemption — $200 if returning from or via the U.S. Virgin Islands, Guam or American Samoa.

Stee said a customs inspection "can consist of a few questions and a cursory glance, which is why some travelers think they have not been inspected."

"It can also consist of a thorough, even microscopic examination of absolutely everything a person brings into the country. Or it can be something in between."

He said it is the responsibility of each inspector to decide on the intensity of the examination, adding:

"Since the level of inspection is not recorded, we do not know

The brilliant moments of world championship play are described in papers and magazines all over the world. The more amusing incidents are often overlooked. Consider this hand from the Italy-Australia match in the qualifying rounds of the Bermuda Bowl, held in Monte Carlo in May.

To judge from the auction, you might not think that some of the world's great players were involved. However, sitting North and South were two reigning world champions, Arturo Franco and Benito Garozzo of Italy. The auction started normally enough. Things began to happen when Garozzo, who occupied the South seat, decided to show his strength in hearts, and West, who held more trumps than North-South combined, felt obliged to double. This was passed round to Garozzo who, rather than take unilateral action, passed the buck to his partner with a redouble. Franco's faith in his famous partner was touching—with only three-card support in the face of an announced trump stack, he decided to stick it out.

Recruiter Asserts American Mercenary Had Fighting Role

By JOE BIGHAM
Associated Press Writer
FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Daniel Gearhart, the American mercenary executed in Angola, penetrated enemy territory, engaged in several firefights and was commended by his British commander, says the man who recruited him.

Gearhart, 34, of Kensington, Md., and three British mercenaries were executed by a firing squad last Saturday. During his trial, Gearhart testified he was in Angola only a few days when captured and that he never fired his weapon.

"It wasn't three or four days. Gearhart went over with me and we were there for several weeks before he was taken prisoner," said David Bufkin, 39, who advertised nationally for mercenaries to fight in Angola before, he said, he decided to go over himself.

Bufkin said in an interview Monday he didn't discuss Gearhart's participation before "because his defense was he hadn't fired a shot," and Bufkin said he didn't want to compromise that position.

Bufkin, who works as a crop-duster, said he accompanied Gearhart to Angola, along with a number of other mercenaries he recruited, including Gary Acker, 21, of Sacramento, Calif., and Gus Grillo, 27, of Jersey City, N.J.

Grillo and Acker were captured, tried as mercenaries and are serving jail terms in Angola. Acker identified Bufkin during his trial as the man who recruited him to fight in Angola.

Bufkin said his role as a mercenary was that of a pilot, flying a light observer plane reporting the positions and movement of Cuban troops fighting in the African country.

Bufkin said, "We all went over together.... When we arrived in Sao Salvador, Danny's first assignment was a deep-penetration patrol into enemy-held territory to gather intelligence. The patrol completed its penetration, and Danny returned with the information he was sent to get."

Later, Bufkin said, Gearhart was assigned to a British reconnaissance patrol with a mission to approach enemy positions in the Tomboco area, make contact and return with information on the enemy's strength and positions.

"Danny's patrol did make contact, engaged in a firefight, and returned to report the positions," Bufkin said.

In between those patrols, according to Bufkin, Gearhart was assigned to set up portions of the defense perimeter around Sao Salvador and was training black troops to help defend the town against assaults.

Sao Salvador was the headquarters of the National Front, the FNLA, a pro-Western guerrilla organization supported by the mercenaries.

"Danny did a very good job and was commended by Cmdr. Peter MacAleese," Bufkin said. "It was a verbal commendation and was accompanied by a cash bonus. Mercenaries don't get medals. They get cash and a pat on the back."

Parishoners Paying For Gearhart's Homecoming

By DAVE RILEY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The remains of Daniel Gearhart will be returned from Angola for burial, with parishoners from the mercenary's Maryland hometown church paying $5,000 to have the body shipped home.

Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md., said Monday the "basic arrangements have been made" for the Angolans to send Gearhart's body home. But, he said, "it looks as though the body will not come up from Angola to Lisbon until later this week."

Parishoners of the Gearhart's church in suburban Kensington have guaranteed payment of the $5,000 demanded by Angola for the release of the body.

Gearhart's widow, Sheila, had said she could not raise the money, and that she and her four children are now on welfare. But she said she was determined to have her husband's body returned for burial.

Gearhart was killed by an Angolan firing squad last Saturday, his 11th wedding anniversary. He and three British mercenaries were executed for participating in the Angolan civil war.

Gearhart claimed he never had a chance to fight before being captured by Cuban troops, but the man who recruited him said Gearhart penetrated enemy territory, engaged in firefights and was commended by his British commander. He said Gearhart won a cash bonus, too.

Gearhart said before his death that he received three weeks' pay — $1,000 — on arrival in Angola last February. He said he asked that the money be sent to his family, but his wife says the money never arrived.

Mathias flew to Lisbon last week in an effort to communicate with Angolan officials and halt the execution of Gearhart. "It was a long chance and it didn't work out. I'm sorry," he said, shortly after returning home Monday night.

Mathias worked to get the Angolans to return the 34-year-old Vietnam veteran's body to the United States for burial. He said Mrs. Gearhart appeared determined to have her husband's body returned, despite the cost. "She still wants to go through with it," he said.

Mrs. Gearhart had expressed shock at the demand for the $5,000. State Department officials said they were told the money was for shipping the body and for paying an Angolan mortician.

A State Department spokesman said Angolan officials gave the families of Gearhart and the British mercenaries eight days to pay the money, indicating payment could be made as late as Saturday.

ATLANTA (AP) — If Jimmy Carter, a former governor from the Deep South, wins the presidency, it will be a footnote of history that some of his strongest early support came from a charismatic black minister and congressman.

Andrew J. Young, 44, a top strategist for the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., was a prominent Carter supporter at a time when that very prominence gave Carter a certain credibility among blacks and liberals.

"In the six years I've known Jimmy Carter, he's never let me down," Young told New Jersey voters recently, urging their support for his fellow Georgian. "We're sending you, we think, our best."

Carter chose Young, an articulate, ordained minister of the United Church of Christ (Congregationist) to make one of his nominating speeches at the Democratic National Convention.

"I would much rather hear Congressman Andrew Young talk about me than talk about myself," said Carter.

Young resigned as executive director of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference which King founded to run as a Democrat in the then-pre-dominantly white 5th District in Atlanta.

He defeated conservative Republican Fletcher Thompson in 1972 by campaigning on the theme, "There is a new politics in the South beyond racism."

A quiet, persuasive man with considerable political savvy, Young has managed to please both races in his state by appealing exclusively to neither.

He was the first member of the Congressional Black Caucus to vote to confirm Gerald Ford as vice president, creating the biggest stir of his rookie year in the House.

In a poignant floor speech, Young announced he would overlook Ford's "dismal civil rights record" and vote for confirmation because he had found Ford to be "trustworthy, a man of honesty and integrity."

A native of New Orleans, Young is a handsome, poised man of impeccable grooming and considerable cool. He always managed to remain unruffled and unwrinkled in the midst of howling mobs during civil rights demonstrations.

A modest man of strong convictions, Young worked principally as a strategist in such protests as King's Alabama campaign, St. Augustine, Fla., Chicago and the Poor People's campaign.

Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., once said that Young grasped quickly the rules of what congressmen refer to as "the game."

"Andy Young has enough star quality to play the outside game if he wants to," said Udall. "He could make public statements and play to public opinion and get attention but he doesn't. He plays the inside game, works within Congress and does it very effectively."

Young credits whatever success he has had in playing the congressional game to what he calls "the Atlanta style" — the preference of black and white Atlantans for working out their conflicts at the conference table.

In campaigning for Carter, Young told voters that while Carter was governor many potential racial controversies never received news coverage because Carter worked behind the scenes to reconcile differences. "He brought a kind of healing spirit," Young said, "that made whites and blacks understand that their problems were not white or black, rather people problems."

Young recalled a time when, he said, whites and blacks in Hancock County had armed themselves with submachine guns in a time of racial stress.

He said Carter flew to Hancock County and talked them out of their guns and flew the weapons to Atlanta in custody of the state patrol.

Asked if he felt he was primarily instrumental in getting Carter the black vote in the nation's primaries, Young replied:

"I really don't. I think that I certainly did work hard but I think Carter had very good support from a number of blacks. Ben Brown (a state representative) not only mobilized blacks in Georgia but was involved in his campaign all over the country.

"The same thing is true of Jesse Hill, Herman Russell and Daddy King," Young added.

Hill and Russell are prominent Atlanta businessmen and millionaires. Dr. Martin Luther King Sr. — "Daddy King" — clasped hands in a power handshake with Carter at a recent downtown Atlanta rally.

The widely displayed photograph of that handshake is credited by political observers with dispelling many of the doubts that arose about Carter after his statement about preserving the "ethnic purity" of neighborhoods.

Young is a graduate of Howard University and Hartford, Conn., Theological Seminary. He is married and the father of three daughters and one son.

"There comes a time in a democratic society," he once said in an interview, "when you have to do more than preach. You have to try and make the Kingdom of God become incarnate in the life of society and that means politics."

Young's ministry took him to Congress.

Avers Carter Is 'Fantastic'

NEW YORK (AP) — Jane Patterson was a Jimmy Carter backer before she met with him on the issue of women's representation Monday in New York. Afterwards, she was more convinced.

"He was fantastic," said Mrs. Patterson, a Greensboro realtor and chairman of the Guilford County Democratic party.

Mrs. Patterson was part of a small delegation of women who reached a compromise with Carter over the issue of guaranteed representation for women in the 1980 convention and in a possible Carter administration.

The compromise falls short of the mandatory quotas of 1972. But it does require the party to "promote" equal representation of women. Mrs. Patterson said the Democratic Women's Caucus would be foolish to turn the compromise down.

More important to Mrs. Patterson and U.S. Rep. Bella Abzug were Carter's pledges regarding the role of women in his campaign and his administration.

He promised to appoint women to cabinet, ambassadorial and judicial posts. He said he would have a women's strategy committee work with him on the campaign.

Meanwhile, 25 of North Carolina's 61 delegates were meeting with Alabama Gov. George Wallace. Wallace won the delegates in the March primary, when he finished second to Carter.

He reiterated Monday his wish that his delegates vote for Carter. But many of those in the room objected and said they were going to vote for Wallace anyway.

Wallace state chairman C.J. Hyatt of Winston-Salem said he thought perhaps three of the Tar Heel delegates would wind up casting their votes for the Alabamian.

School Days

NASHVILLE (AP) — A first grader was proud of the three-inch egg plant he grew in class. "My mother won't ever have to buy any more eggs," he said.

Lane, who had watered flowers in his first grade classroom, applied his experience when asked to water the class rabbit — he doused it with a watering can.

Another first grader, told by his teacher to hurry home because a blizzard was coming, told his parents, "Miss Laura said to hurry home because she thought a big lizard was coming."

The anecdotes were collected by Mildred Campbell for "I Remember When?" a booklet by the Tennessee Retired Teacher Association.

One educator told of a student who complained to his mother that teacher would not make up her mind.

"Yesterday she said 2 and 2 is 4. Today she said 3 and 1 is 4," he said.

Another educator remembered a teacher who brought fruit and a can of diet drink for lunch.

"Poor Miss Blank," said one of her second graders, "all she has for lunch is an apple and a can of beer."
