Dec. 9, 1911.

There was a meeting of the Edgar Allan Poe Society Dec. 9. The meeting was a celebration of North Carolina Day, each county being represented by the girls from that county.

The members entered the Society Hall singing "Ho! for Carolina", each one carrying the banner of her county.

A motion was made that all business be postponed until a call meeting to be held later.

The girls represented their counties by cunning "stunts."

During the program "I'm a Tarheel Born", and "Carolina" were sung.

In conclusion everybody stood and repeated the North Carolina Toast in concert.
