

Community College Referendum Raised

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Commissioners at their regular meeting Monday will consider a resolution asking the trustees of Pitt Technical Institute to petition the Board of Commissioners to authorize a referendum on the funding of a community college.

Commissioners in January, because of a tied vote, failed to endorse a resolution that PTI be accorded community college status by the General Assembly.

The PTI Board of Trustees in November adopted a resolution endorsing the change in status of the school from a technical institute to a community college and requesting commissioners to "give their support and approval" and asking that such "support and approval be expressed in a resolution by the County Commissioners."

The commissioners' three for and three against vote effectively rejected the method of changing the status of PTI.

The resolution to be considered Monday by the Board of Commissioners says in part, "It has been the policy of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners to submit an issue of tax levies for funding educational institutions to the people by referendum and for the voters to express their choice whenever possible."

It continues, "Although a vote on the issue of levying taxes to support a community college is not required by law, the Pitt County Board of Commissioners does have the option by statute to submit the question to a vote of the people...as to whether or not taxes should be levied to fund and support a community college."

The resolution points out that Pitt voters in the past have been allowed by referendum to decide whether or not taxes should be levied to support a technical institute and also whether or not taxes should be used to support a community college.

Pitt voters in 1961 approved a bond issue totaling $395,000 for the establishment of an industrial education center in Pitt, which later became Pitt Technical Institute. Then in May 1970, voters voted against the establishment of a community college and the levy of taxes in support of such a program.

Pitt County W. W. Speight said this morning in explaining the law regarding changing a technical institute to a community college that the State Board of Education, the Governor and the Advisory Budget Commission have to approve of the conversion.

"There is nothing in the law that requires the commissioners to approve or disapprove," he noted.

But, Speight noted that the "Board of Commissioners have an option" as to the funding of a community college.

He said first, that commissioners could use non-tax revenues, or secondly, they could levy taxes themselves. A third way, according to Speight, is to "submit the issue of funding to a vote of the people."

Speight noted that either the Board of County Commissioners or the State Board of Education could call for a referendum or a vote of the people to decide how the conversion will be funded.

"In my opinion," Speight said, "the question of how to fund a community college should be decided prior to its conversion, or at the same time, since the conversion from a technical institute to community college will have to be funded."

At the time commissioners voted on the PTI resolution in January, commission chairman Charles Gaskins said he was not opposed to the change in status of PTI, but was in opposition to the method. He indicated, as did commissioner Bruce Strickland, that they favor a vote of the people on the question.

PTI officials have told commissioners that very little additional money would be required from the county to fund the school as a community college.

U.S. Tries To Enforce Its New 200-Mile Limit On Foreign Fishermen

By The Associated Press

In the Gulf of Alaska, off the coast of New England and in waters shared with Cuba, the government today tried to enforce the new U.S. 200-mile limit on foreign fishing vessels.

The Coast Guard beefed up its staff, aircraft and vessels for the chore, and in Washington, Adm. Owen Siler, Coast Guard commandant, said, "The Coast Guard is ready and accepts the challenge."

Until today, the limit was 12 miles. Under complaints from the U.S. fishing industry that foreign fishermen were ruining their livelihood, Congress adopted the 200-mile zone and the Ford Administration a year ago approved the legislation.

There were doubts about the immediate effectiveness of the limit. "Most fishermen are all the same. If they think they can beat you, they'll cross the line a little," said fisheries agent Ken Creamer.

Creamer is one of 11 National Marine Fisheries Services agents responsible, along with the Coast Guard, for enforcement along the Alaskan coastline — the nation's largest and richest fishery.

In Boston, Daniel Russ, a Commerce Department official in charge of enforcement from Canada to North Carolina, said he still was waiting for instructions about issuing permits to foreign vessels before they can fish inside the limit.

The government's first task is stopping for two months all foreign fishing off the Pacific Northwest, except for tuna. It also must limit foreign fishing in the North Atlantic to only hake and squid, for the time being, and halt all fishing in the Gulf of Mexico where no countries have applied for licenses.

Japan, South Korea, Spain and the Common Market nations already have signed agreements to allow their fishermen to get permits from the Commerce Department, but Congress must still approve them.

A State Department spokesman said those countries agreed to suspend fishing in U.S. waters until Congress did approve the agreements.

An agreement between the United States and the Soviet Union has been ratified and Soviet vessels with permits will be allowed to fish within the zone.

Amin Retracts His Detention Orders

By BRIAN JEFFRIES
Associated Press Writer

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — President Idi Amin retracted some more today from his confrontation with the United States. He lifted his order banning Americans from leaving Uganda after postponing for the second time the meeting to which he summoned all U.S. citizens living in his East African country.

Amin said Americans in Uganda "are now free to go anywhere they wish, such as going for holidays or going about their normal business, be it inside or outside Uganda." Radio Uganda reported.

Amin forbade the estimated 240 Americans in Uganda from leaving the country last Friday and ordered them to meet with him on Monday at the international conference center in Kampala, his capital.

During the weekend the meeting was moved to the Entebbe airport, 19 miles from Kampala, and postponed until Wednesday. And on Monday Radio Uganda announced the meeting had been put off indefinitely, with a new date to be announced later.

Ugandan sources in Kampala, reached by telephone, said Amin "is keen to improve good relations with the United States." They said the delay would give the two countries "a chance to resolve their current difficulties."

Several Arab and African governments, including those of Zaire and Saudi Arabia, were reported to have urged Amin to postpone the meeting. It was believed the U.S. government asked them to intercede.

The State Department canceled plans to send diplomatic troubleshooter Talcott Seelye to Uganda.

Amin's initial orders presumably were prompted by condemnations of his regime by President Carter and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance following reports that the Anglican archbishop of Uganda had been murdered after his arrest for allegedly plotting against him and that Amin was massacring members of two Christian tribes. Amin also charged that the United States, Britain and Israel were planning to drop paratroops into Uganda to support a plot to overthrow him.

After the detention order last Friday, U.S. officials expressed fears for the safety of the Americans, most of them missionaries, but Amin and his spokesmen gave assurances they would not be harmed.

Amin then began backing down, saying he only wanted to honor the Americans for the "good work" they were doing for his country. He spoke of giving some of them medals. But at the same time he warned the United States against trying to emulate the Israeli raid on the Entebbe airport last summer that freed more than 100 Jewish hostages held by pro-Palestinian air hijackers.

Over the weekend, as a fourship Navy task force cruised off East Africa, President Carter and other administration officials said there was no cause for alarm. The White House said Monday that the President sent a message to Amin thanking him for his assurances that the U.S. citizens in Uganda were not in danger.

Plan A Center Here

LANDOVER, MD. — Georgia-Pacific Corp. today announced plans to build a distribution center on Industrial Boulevard just north of Greenville.

H. L. Airlington, regional manager here for the company's Mid-Atlantic Region, said that construction will begin "momentarily" on the new facility that will serve as a wholesale distribution point for plywood, lumber and other building materials.

Airlington pointed out that Georgia-Pacific will distribute company-manufactured products from the Greenville center to retail building supply dealers in Eastern North Carolina. Centers in Wilmington and Raleigh also serve the state's eastern sector.

The official said that the 100,000 square foot building will be located on a 15-acre site in the industrial neighborhood behind National Boat Works.

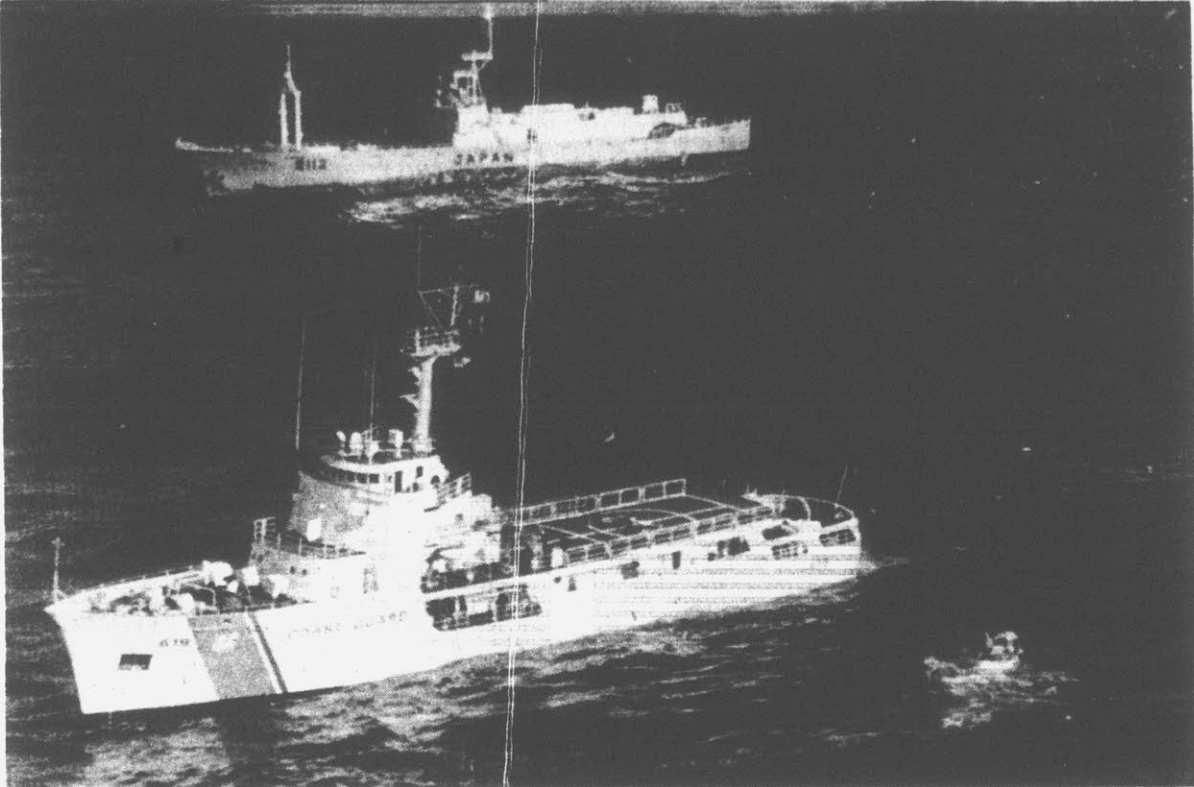

General contractor for the new center, which is scheduled to open in September, will be R. N. Rouse Inc. of Goldsboro. A building permit has been issued to Rouse for the $952,000 construction program.

Airlington explained that the Greenville operation will involve mostly warehouse distribution functions with limited office facilities. Approximately 20 employees will staff the center, he said.

Georgia-Pacific will name a manager for the center at a later date, Airlington added.

In addition to the eastern centers, Georgia-Pacific has distribution sites in Charlotte, Greensboro and Asheville.

The firm's corporate headquarters are located in Portland, Oregon.

VESSEL BOARDED — The U.S. Coast Guard cutter Confidence boarded the Japanese vessel Tomi Maru No. 88 on Monday, hours before the 200-mile limit took effect. The cutter was searching for fishing regulation violation under treaties already in effect. None was found aboard this vessel, but a search of a second vessel turned up a tiny amount of illegal king crab. (AP Wirephoto)

ERA Referendum Issue Moving To Senate Test

RALEIGH (AP) — Just hours before the North Carolina Senate was to vote on a proposal to put the issue of the Equal Rights Amendment to a vote of the people, it appeared the effort would fail.

Two senators regarded earlier as undecided said they would vote against holding a statewide referendum. They were Sen. Bobby Lee Combs, D-Catawba, and Sen. Wesley Webster, D-Rockingham.

Debate was expected on the ERA issue itself after the Senate convened at 1 p.m. but it first was to dispose of the proposal of a statewide referendum on the issue next November.

A poll by newsmen Monday night had shown 23 senators in favor of a referendum and 23 against with four undecided.

The four included Combs, Webster, Sen. Melvin R. Daniels, D-Pasquotank, and Sen. I. C. Crawford, D-Buncombe.

Crawford was expected to vote in favor of the referendum.

Meanwhile, the Senate gallery in the Legislative Building was filled by 9 a.m. and a little while later in the morning, a group of ERA opponents went to the Capitol to picket the governor's office.

Gov. Jim Hunt has spoken out in favor of the amendment.

Reports also circulated around the Legislative Building that certain senators had received calls from the White House and the governor's office asking for a favorable vote on today's referendum issue.

Webster said Monday he didn't want the current controversy to stretch through the summer. Daniels said pretty much the same thing.

If the referendum amendment fails, opponents will try to defeat ERA itself.

The latest headcount there shows 24 in favor of ratification, 21 opposed and five undecided, including Webster, Daniels and Combs.

Gov. Jim Hunt returned to Raleigh from Washington, D.C., Monday night to talk with some of the undecided senators.

And Rosalynn Carter, wife of President Carter, was also reportedly phoning some legislators, a long distance lobbying chore she also performed last month before the House voted in favor of ratification.

'No' Vote On ERA Is Possible, Says White

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

With debate set to begin today in the State Senate on the highly controversial Equal Rights Amendment, Sen. Vernon White of Winterville saw a "distinct possibility that the vote...will be against...the bill."

White, contacted in Raleigh this morning, said that the ERA question is "so close that it's hard to call" but he said he would predict Senate defeat of the issue.

The Pitt County senator, who represents the Sixth Senatorial District along with Sen. Julian Allsbrook of Halifax, reported that he planned to vote against the ERA measure.

White noted that debate on the bill was scheduled to be the "first order of business" and he anticipated that a vote would be taken "before the day is out."

He said he preferred not to comment on an amendment proposed by Allsbrook to submit the question of ERA ratification to a vote of the people in a statewide referendum.

Allsbrook could not be reached this morning for a comment on the referendum amendment, which has already received House endorsement, would make North Carolina the 36th state to ratify the amendment to the U.S. Constitution. The approval of 38 states is needed in order for the amendment to become part of the constitution.

The Halifax Democrat has stated his opposition to the ERA bill which would forbid legal discrimination on the basis of sex.

If the referendum amendment fails, opponents are expected to aim for defeat of the ERA itself.

The state Attorney General's office said Monday that a binding statewide vote on ERA would not hold up in court and several court decisions supporting that stand were cited.

An affirmative vote on ERA, which has already received House endorsement, would make North Carolina the 36th state to ratify the amendment to the U.S. Constitution. The approval of 38 states is needed in order for the amendment to become part of the constitution.

Plane Crash In Hyde County

SWAN QUARTER, N. C. (AP) — A Navy plane crashed Tuesday in a remote area of eastern North Carolina's Hyde County where planes from the Naval Air Station at Oceana, Va., often stage gunnery practice, authorities said.

The Hyde County Sheriff's Department said the crash was reported by the North Carolina Forestry Service aircraft, which said a fire broke out after the crash.

The spokesman said the plane, identified as a Navy F-4 jet fighter, was reported down in the area between Lake Phelps and New Lake.

El Salvador Declared Under State Of Siege

By KERNAN TURNER
Associated Press Writer

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Central America's smallest nation was under a state of siege today after troops and police routed thousands of demonstrators demanding a new presidential election.

Authorities said at least five persons were killed and 78 wounded.

President Arturo Armando Molina's right-wing government said a special session of the national legislature approved the government's proclamation of the state of siege late Monday after a week of demonstrations in San Salvador, the capital.

Some individual rights were suspended, and persons accused of espionage, subversion and rebellion will be subject to military trial, the broadcast said.

Tens of thousands mustered by the government's center-left opponents occupied San Salvador's central plaza from last Tuesday until early Monday, charging large-scale vote fraud in the presidential election Feb. 20 deprived Col. Ernesto Claramount Roseville of the National Opposition Union of victory.

The government said its candidate, Gen. Carlos Humberto Romero of the National Conciliation party, won by 812,281 votes to 394,661 and denied the fraud charges.

Troops and police using machine guns, automatic rifles, tear gas and water jets cleared the plaza early Monday. One witness, an American who asked not to be identified, said soldiers fired 200 to 300 shots into a crowd of young people about four blocks from the plaza after it was cleared.

The government radio said Claramount fled to neighboring Costa Rica.

The 1972 presidential election which Molina won also ended in violence. The opposition charged vote fraud and about 100 persons were killed in an unsuccessful uprising led by the defeated Christian Democratic candidate.

The National Conciliation party has the backing of big business and landowners in this impoverished nation of 4.5 million, one of Latin America's most densely populated. The opposition coalition was supported by the labor unions and peasants.

Farm Scene

FARM SCENE
By EDWIN L. YANCEY,
County Extension Chairman

We've just completed the second series of pesticide certification workshops. So far, about 600 Pitt County farmers are certified. That's only half of the number who need to be. Federal and North Carolina laws require that private applicators (farmers and others) of restricted use pesticides must be certified by October of 1977.

The North Carolina plan for certification requires that private applicators shall attend an approved course of study. The Agricultural Extension Service was given the task of providing the course. For those who haven't had the course, more workshops will be held next fall.

Certification cards will be issued to those who have completed the training. The N.C. Department of Agriculture will issue the certification. It will probably be after June 1 before they're mailed. We've been assured, however, that they will arrive before October 1.

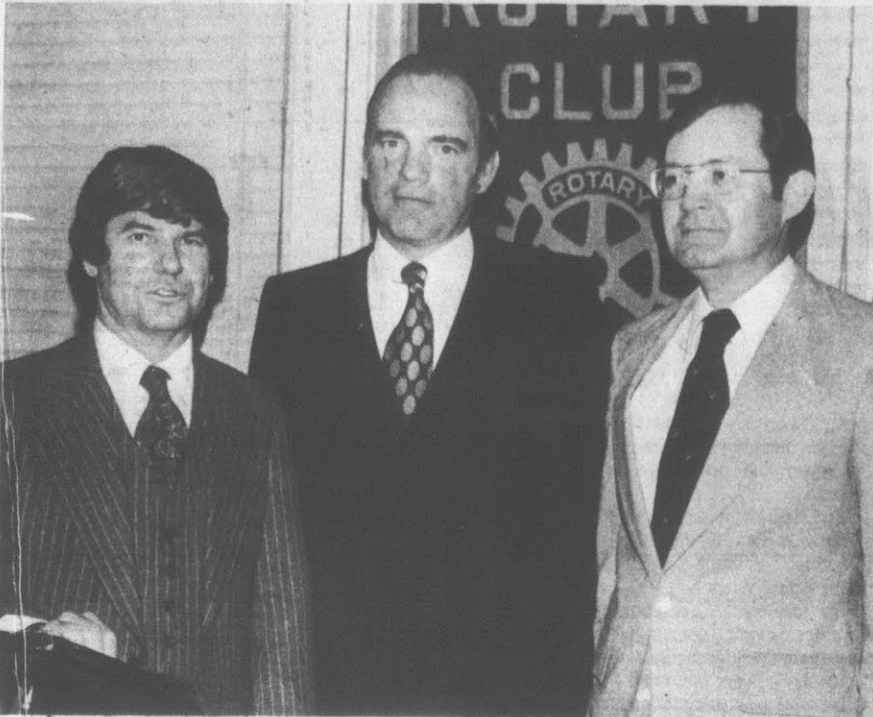

KOM

Mosaic is a tobacco disease that caused more losses than blackshank in 1976. It is a highly contagious virus that is carried from one season to the next in indecayed tobacco stalks and leaves. It is also found in all manufactured tobacco products. (Mosaic is not a virus that has any effect on humans.) Sanitation will control the disease. At present, there is a variety which is resistant to mosaic but there is no chemical that will cure it once the plant has been infected. Milk in any form—powdered, skim, fresh or buttermilk) will effectively kill the virus before it infects the plant. After the plant is infected, it is of no use.

Furney Todd, Extension Professor of Plant Pathology, encourages tobacco growers to KNOCK OUT MOSAIC disease by following 5 simple steps. According to Todd, each step is important. 1-Don't smoke, chew or dip manufactured tobacco products on the plant bed site or while handling tobacco plants. 2-Have a bucket of milk at the plant bed and require all workers to dip hands before handling plants, before they begin work and after all breaks. 3-Don't use tobacco sheets for covering or hauling tobacco transplants (the sheets have tiny particles of tobacco in them and almost always carry the disease). 4-Check the fields early and pull out any plants which show the tell-tale signs of yellow-green mottled leaves. Get them out of the field and destroy by burning. 5-Follow all steps of R-6-P.

Hodges Sees Economic Mix For East

The mixture of a number of economic developments relating to industrial growth and an agricultural revolution, are creating a mixed regional economy for Eastern North Carolina, according to Luther Hodges, Jr., Chairman of the Board of Directors of NCNB, who spoke to the Greenville Rotary Club Monday night.

"Eastern North Carolina is the most rapidly developing region in the state. Last year slightly under one half of all new industrial employees employed in North Carolina were employed in Eastern North Carolina. One third of North Carolina's industry last year developed in Eastern North Carolina. In the last six years, more and more people have moved to the eastern part of the state," Hodges said.

"We continue to face problems of locating industries in the East because of a lack of enough good roads. I believe that Governor Hunt will help solve the highway problems in Eastern North Carolina to help bring progress in our industrial economy," Hodges said.

Hodges told Rotary Club members that agriculture has had a tremendous effect on the economy of Eastern North Carolina.

"Agriculture is truly the backbone of Eastern North Carolina and the state. Agriculture's changes have had a profound effect on the people of this area. Agriculture has become a big business. North Carolina is tenth in the nation in farm products exports, tenth in value of all farm products and Eastern North Carolina is the most productive agricultural area on the east coast."

"While agriculture is the real lifeblood of the region, its revolution has altered the farm and farm life. Machines have replaced human hands. In the past 25 years the farm labor force has declined 70 per cent. Machines save money in the long run, but they are expensive to buy and have added to the farmer's debt. Because the machinery is so expensive, those who can afford to buy them expand, and those who can't, get out of farming. The number of farms has declined and the size of farms has expanded," Hodges said.

"Agriculture is a business enterprise of staggering dimensions. There are no rosy pictures for the farm families, because they will have to change. We are not threatened by the results of the agricultural revolution, but the real threat is the talk in Washington about our number one farm crop—tobacco," he continued.

"Perhaps some changes need to be made in the price support regulations, but in the absence of price support, tobacco would drop well below the current price and this would hurt the individual farmer. I'm glad that we have Walter Jones in Washington, because he is knowledgeable of the tobacco program and its problems."

"With the changes in the economy, adjustments must be made. We must face booming growth and dramatic changes without becoming a victim of the economy. We must institute planning which is rational, and sensible for expansion and growth. With well managed planning, as the economy grows, our pockets will swell with money. We need planning which is long on quality and not quantity. As more industries grow in the area we must supply a more skilled and able work force. If we can make these adjustments and blend city with county, then North Carolina will be more than an example of change—we can be a model of a mixed balanced economy," Hodges concluded.

Hodges, is son of former Governor Luther Hodges. He has served on the Board of Governors of the University of North Carolina, chairman of the N.C. Manpower Development Commission, chairman of the N.C. Citizens Foundation, and other offices. In introducing Hodges, Dr. James Bearden said that Hodges has been recognized as a potential candidate for the U.S. Senate.

Moose Official Here Resigning

Arthur V. Sisk, Secretary of the Greenville Moose Lodge, last night submitted a letter of resignation from the post he has held here for ten months.

The step, he said, was "prompted by personal circumstances," and added "I do appreciate the opportunity of serving as secretary for the past 10 months."

Governor Jim Fleming said he had been given the letter just prior to the meeting.

Other business before the lodge included a reminder by Entertainment chairman Paul Raspberry that the last opportunity to join dance classes now in progress would be at tonight's session. He also reminded the membership of the dinner-dance and floor show scheduled for March 4.

Civic Affairs chairman Billy Barnes reported plans for a free blood pressure clinic to be offered the public were completed. The pressure-checking clinics will be held on succeeding Wednesday nights (7:00 to 9:00) at the Moose lodge, beginning March 9. Checking of blood pressures will be performed by nurses who have volunteered for the program.

Fleming announced curtailment of club hours had been lifted, effective immediately. (A cutback in club hours was ordered as an energy-conserving measure during the winter fuel crisis.) Fleming also announced the lodge board of officers would meet tonight (Tuesday) at 7:30.

Eighteen new members were enrolled into the fraternity last night. They are:

By SAM D. BUNDY
N.C. House of Representatives

The ERA issue took over the center of attention again this week.

On Monday afternoon a public hearing by the Senate Constitutional Amendments was held for the proponents. I was not in Raleigh until late Monday; however, I was advised that the auditorium was filled with about 300 people. Several name people, such as Dr. Juanita Kreps, who is U. S. Secretary of Commerce, testified in favor of ERA. On Tuesday, the opponents had their day. It began with an anti-ERA rally at the Dorton Arena, lasting from 1 to 3 p. m., with former Senator Sam Ervin and Phyllis Schaffley leading the list of speakers. I did not attend the rally, but an estimated 2,000 people did. At 3:30 p. m., the public hearings were held in the Legislative Auditorium and 1,200 people crowded in the auditorium, the Senate and House Galleries and in the corridors. It was the largest attended public hearing in my six years in the General Assembly. The Senate Constitutional Amendments Committee has now voted to send the issue to the floor of the Senate and on Tuesday, Mar. 1, a battle royal will be staged.

It was my privilege to have Carroll Griffin and David Winborne as pages this week. See you next week.

Greetings From 'Tooth Fairy'

LONDON (AP) — "I bring regards from the colonies and from our President — the tooth fairy," Frank Sinatra told 6,000 British fans Monday as he opened a week of sold-out charity concerts in London.

The audience jamming the Royal Albert Hall gave the singer a standing ovation after his 80-minute performance.

Princess Margaret, longtime Sinatra fan, was at the theater for the 62-year-old singer's first British concert in two years.

The sister of Queen Elizabeth II met Sinatra and his fourth wife Barbara before he went on stage.

Organizers said the concert raised about $93,500 for the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

Sinatra will give seven more concerts in the coming week. All seven are fully booked, organizers said.

Witnesses Stand By In Trial For Child-Abuse

By ERIC NEWHOUSE
Associated Press Writer

ATHENS, Tenn. (AP) — Prosecutors said they had a dozen witnesses ready to testify at the trial of Ronald and Wanda Gibson Maddux, who are charged with torturing 4-year-old Melisha Gibson to death.

District Attorney Richard Fisher said the witnesses would include Melisha's older sisters, Caroline, 13, and Rhonda, 12. The Madduxes, who had been convicted and jailed three years ago for abusing Melisha, Mrs. Maddux's daughter, were charged with first-degree murder after the girl's bruised body was found last Oct. 13, naked on a bare mattress in the family's unheated living room.

But charges were reduced to second-degree murder, which carries a penalty of 10 years to life in prison, after the state death penalty was ruled unconstitutional.

The couple pleaded innocent Monday, and nine men and three women were selected as jurors, then quickly sequestered.

Six prospective jurors were rejected by the judge after they said they didn't think they could be objective about the trial. Defense attorneys rejected 14 other prospective jurors, including a number who had small children or grandchildren of their own.

Attorneys for Maddux asked Judge James Witt to step down and let another judge hear the case, and to move the trial out of McMinn County.

Witt rejected both motions, saying he had moved the trial here from Cleveland because of community outrage. "But there is no undue excitement here," he added. "I have not seen it here today and I don't think it exists."

Feelings ran so high in Cleveland that the couple had to be transferred to undisclosed jails for their own safety.

The Tennessee Human Services Department reprimanded three social workers responsible for returning the little girl to her home six months before her death.

The agency also hired another 117 social workers at a cost of $1 million to reduce the caseload on welfare workers and prevent what it called other "errors in judgment."

Weary Of Efforts To Prove She's Anastasia

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Anna Anderson Manahan says she's weary of her 50-year quest to prove she's the Grand Duchess Anastasia of Russia and isn't interested in new support for her claim.

Moritz Furtmayr, a leading West German forensic expert, reported last week that an anatomical comparison of Mrs. Manahan's right ear with the right ear of the long-lost Anastasia showed 17 identical points, five more than is usually needed for positive identification.

"Of course. How could it be anything else?" the frail, 75-year-old Mrs. Manahan said Monday when told of the findings of Furtmayr.

But Mrs. Manahan, wife of a retired University of Virginia history professor, John Manahan, said she didn't care what Furtmayr might have found.

"I am ill of this dirt," she said in an interview at the Charlottesville home where she has lived since 1968. "I will not read this dirt ... Is my ear so important?"

"... I am ill of the constant, constant questions. Even little children ask me, 'Anastasia, when will you get your jewelry back?'"

"I will never get it back. I have no desire for wealth. I would never wear it."

The Grand Duchess Anastasia is believed to have been slain with her father, Czar Nicholas II, and the rest of the Russian royal family in 1918 at the Romanov estate in Yekaterinburg.

Mrs. Anderson contends she escaped the slaughter and has

Alger Hiss Will Seek New Trial

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Alger Hiss, a central figure in the Red scare of the early 1950s, says he will seek a trial next fall to clear his name.

Hiss, in a news conference Monday at the University of Kansas, said he was the victim of government tampering in his 1950 conviction for lying about releasing military secrets for use by the Soviet Union.

"I have proof that the FBI and other government agencies used illegal tactics to gather information in the case," Hiss said. "The case was tainted with perjury."

The former State Department official spent nearly four years in prison after being found guilty on two counts of perjury. The chief investigator in the case was then-U.S. Rep. Richard M. Nixon, a member of the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Hiss was at the university for a speaking engagement.

sought repeatedly through the German courts to obtain recognition of her identity as Anastasia.

The court battle appeared to have ended in 1970, when the German Supreme Court rejected her claim.

Now, Manahan says his wife has no desire to resume her battle for identity, which would bring her title to a fortune the czar reportedly deposited for his children in the Bank of England.

Man Jailed On Arson Charges

Jessie James Cherry, 48 of 1006 Pennsylvania Ave. was jailed yesterday on arson charges following investigation of a Sunday fire here.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Cherry was charged with arson and placed under a $5,000 bond for his alleged attempt to burn the Pennsylvania Avenue home in which he lived about 5:50 p.m. Sunday.

Cannon said gasoline was poured on the rear of the dwelling and set afire.

Church Marks Note-Burning

Two historic events were celebrated during ceremonies Sunday morning at Immanuel Baptist Church, located at 1101 S. Elm Street.

Ceremonies at the 11 a.m. worship hour marked the dedication of the building and burning of the church's mortgage note.

Tyson Bilbro, who served as chairman of the building committee when the present plant was planned and built, gave a brief review of the history of the church and the planning and construction of the facilities.

Bilbro pointed out that Immanuel Baptist was organized April 22, 1915 with 35 charter members. Within three years a site on W. Eighth Street was purchased and a building was constructed. On Sunday, March 7, 1965, according to Bilbro, the congregation voted approval of plans for a new building on Evans Street with the cost of construction, architects fees, and furnishings amounting to some $500,000.

The new church was completed and occupied for the first Sunday on May 7, 1967.

During the mortgage note-burning activities, church treasurer Cecil Mizelle reported on the highlights of the financial program during the years of planning and construction and the liquidation of the church debt.

Mizelle noted that the "debt retirement" line was included annually in the church budget as a means of paying loan agencies the $160,000 that had been borrowed. The last payment on the note was made during the first week in February, it was reported.

The treasurer said that through the same years the church increased its giving for all mission causes and for staff personnel. The current year's budget of the church is $117,500.

The Rev. Irby B. Jackson serves as pastor of Immanuel.

Diet Group Says Grab The Phone, Not Cupcake

MERIDEN, Conn. (AP) — "Don't take a friend to dinner tonight" might well be the motto of Overeaters Anonymous.

Most compulsive eaters can't hope to win the fight against fat without outside help, the group preaches.

"Any time during the day, if you feel like eating a cupcake, call any of us," the leader of the local chapter tells new members. "Just say, 'Talk to me awhile, I'm having trouble. I want to eat.' By the time you're done talking, you don't feel hungry any more."

If the message sounds like advice from an Alcoholics Anonymous meeting, it's no coincidence. The nationwide eaters group uses the same 12 steps that AA has found so successful in repulsing demon rum.

Each member gets a sponsor, a veteran of the weight war who discusses the newcomer's daily menu and is available around the clock for moral support.

Abstinence, religious faith and anonymity play important roles in the program, says Miss A., a nurse who doesn't want her name publicized.

The crucial trial for each novice is going 21 days without between-meal snacks except diet soda, tea or coffee.

"The first 21 days are the worst," said Miss A. "But once you abstain for 21 days, you're not hungry in between meals any more."

The group also suggests alternative dieting plans, low and no carbohydrate menus. A physician's plan may be substituted.

It worked for Miss A. Two years ago she weighed 300 pounds. She lost a total of 75 pounds during three separate stints with another reducing group, but kept putting on pounds when she quit.

Since July with Overeaters Anonymous, she has discarded 40 more pounds and now weighs 185, she says. "I went from a size 48 dress to a size 18. I think it's fantastic."

The Los Angeles-based group has chapters in two dozen Connecticut communities including Hartford, Waterbury, New Haven, Stamford, Danbury, New Britain and New London.

The problems underlying overeating were obvious from the comments of some of the 20 persons at a recent afternoon meeting.

"When I was depressed, I used to go cook a whole meal for myself, then sit down and eat it."

"I don't sleep well and get up three or four times a night. I'm at the refrigerator before I'm even awake."

"I know now there are some foods I can't eat, like ketchup, sugar and bread. If I start eating them, I can't stop."

Freedom from fatness is the main goal of any reducing program, but the most gratifying reward sometimes is a surprise.

"The best thing I've gotten from OA," says one member, "is tons of friends."

Abby Permits Readers To Express Views

DEAR ABBY: This letter is in response to HARD LESSON, the woman who bluntly turned away a lonely but unwelcome neighbor who rang her bell. LESSON later learned that the woman committed suicide after being turned away.

We agree that the situation was handled rather coldly, but we feel it is vital that this woman, as well as the rest of your readers, not feel responsible for the actions of others.

HARD LESSON had the right of privacy, and we respect her for making her wishes known. It is unfortunate that the outcome was so tragic, but the implication that the suicide was the result of her assertiveness is offensive to us. We assume that because you ran that letter without comment, you agree with the implication.

We are not endorsing lack of consideration, aggressiveness or lack of concern for people. But we are stressing the importance of honesty, personal responsibility and a right to meet one's own needs.

THE ASSERTIVENESS TRAINING GROUP
TOPEKA STATE HOSPITAL

DEAR GROUP: You make a valid point that deserves to be shared with my readers. However, your assumption that I agreed with the implication because I ran the letter without comment is incorrect. I frequently permit readers to express their views, even though they differ from mine.

DEAR ABBY: I go to the barber shop once a week. I am bald on top, and all I ever need is a little trim around the ears and a bit of clipping on the back of my neck, so it takes my barber exactly six minutes to give me a haircut. I pay the standard price, or course.

Now, the man who has a full head of hair and has saved up a month's growth takes about five times as much of the barber's time as I do, yet we both pay the same price for a haircut. Why?

I think barbers should charge according to the amount of time they spend with each customer. I would appreciate your opinion, and the opinion of others.

BALD, BOTHERED AND BEWILDERED

DEAR BALD: Considering how much a haircut (even a little trim around the ears) does for a man's morale, it's a bargain at any price. Don't split hairs.

DEAR ABBY: I am 15 and have a question. Do you think pupils should have to work all day in school and then take home a load of homework to do at night?

CHEATED BY HOMEWORK

DEAR CHEATED: That's a loaded question. How much is a "load"? The learning process can't be squeezed into a five-day, 35-hour week.

Workshop Held On Wednesday

A one-day workshop on Nutritional Assessment was conducted Wednesday in the Willis Building with Dr. Alice Scott presiding.

Camilie B. Clarke welcomed the group of registered dietitians, nurses and other participants to Greenville for the workshop. An overview of the Nutritional Care Process was presented by Mrs. Marjorie K. Chused.

Dr. J. Audrey Wight and Dr. Boyd R. Switzer from the School of Public Health of the University of North Carolina spoke on anthropometry, biochemical analysis, clinical assessment and dietary assessment.

Co-sponsoring the workshop were the Eastern Area Health Education Center, Eastern Regional Office, Department of Foods and Nutrition, East Carolina University, Eastern

North Carolina District Dietetic Association and the School of Public Health in Chapel Hill.

Approximately 40 people registered for the workshop. The participants learned the proper tools to use in gathering anthropometric measurements and worked toward preparing a dietary assessment form.

By Erma Bombeck

I read somewhere that one of the problems of marriage is that husbands and wives are unable to respond to their differences.

It's called the old "I don't care; it's up to you" or "I will if you want to" blues. Your partner never really knows how you stand on something.

As I recall, it was suggested that a husband or wife spell it out using a scale of one to ten. For example, if your husband says, "Would you like to go to a movie?" instead of shrugging your shoulders and saying, "Makes no difference," you respond by saying "I'm five on attending a movie. Actually, I'm eight on seeing the picture, but I'm two on spending the money now."

What could be simpler? I explained the rating system to my husband and followed it up with, "What would you like for dinner?"

"Farrah Fawcett-Majors."

"Not who, clown... what?"

"How will I know how I feel about dinner until I know what we're having?"

"That's the point. Offer some suggestions."

"Okay, liver is a big 10 with me."

"I hate liver. To me, liver is a minus 2 and you know it. How about meat loaf?"

"Meat loaf with meat is a 6, without meat and a lot of bread, a 2. However, if you feel 9ish about it, I'll send one of the kids to the Golden Arches which is emerging as a big 10."

"Would it hurt you once to be a 9 about meat loaf?"

"You should talk. In 27 years, you haven't gotten off your two once when I have discussed having liver."

"Lower your voice! We don't have to air our twos and threes to the neighbors. How about an omelet?"

"That sounds like a firm 8 to me."

"Good. We agree. We're out of eggs, so you'll have to go to the store."

"The car is a 0. I'm having battery trouble. That averages omelets out to a 4."

"Okay, we're down to peanut butter. It's a definite 3, minus 1 for being cold. However, it's a plus 2 for nutrition, plus 4 for not being a leftover and a minus 3 for being fattening. That comes out to a 5. Whatya think?"

"I don't care," said my husband.

"I was hoping you'd say that."

ERA Referendum A Bad Idea

The Equal Rights Amendment to the U. S. Constitution, which would ban all discrimination based on sex, is rapidly reaching the point where action must be taken in the North Carolina Senate.

The amendment has already passed the House and now an emotional battle of words is underway in the Senate. Reports out of Raleigh seem to be that a vote will be close, with possibly one or two votes deciding the amendment's fate.

The ERA has been under consideration nationally for many years and in North Carolina another session of the State Legislature has been called upon to help decide its destiny. Ratification by only a few more state Legislatures would mean that the amendment would become a part of the Constitution.

As we have said, the debate over the amendment has become emotional in our state. Proponents have long felt that passage of the amendment would eliminate some of the inequities in our society. Opponents feel that passage would affect some of the privileges that women currently enjoy in an adverse way.

As the pressure grows, the idea of a state-wide referendum has gained strength in the N. C. Senate. Of all the solutions proposed in this matter, the possibility of shunting off the Equal Rights Amendment to a referendum is the worst. Our legislators are elected to decide things and on this issue they should go on and make up their minds and vote. A referendum on the issue would have no legal standing, regardless.

How should the senate vote? After careful study of the issue we feel that the senators should vote in favor of the Equal Rights Amendment. We don't see how anyone could be opposed to the principles of equal rights and non-discrimination regardless of sex. Some argue, with fairly good grounds, that all constitutional rights are already protected by the Constitution in its present form. If that is so, then none of us should have any fear of the ERA since it could do no more than re-confirm equal rights for all citizens.

The Equal Rights Amendment obviously has deep meaning to a large group of American citizens who feel that they have been discriminated against in various areas of our democratic society. The amendment should insure that there is no such discrimination in the future. It does no more than that, and we think that we should and can depend on our judicial system to see that this is the case.

Let's pass the Equal Rights Amendment— and get on to other things.

THIS AFTERNOON Study Tougher Sentences

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — In the old days in most societies, and even now in some less developed areas, retaliation for crime was swift and certain: hanging and quartering without trial; a swift sword severed an offending hand.

Yet rogues and pickpockets and thieves thought they would escape "justice."

Even so the modern criminal figures he will be the one who gets away; or else figures the rewards are worth the risks.

Poverty is often equated with crime, and in our nation today, blackness is often equated to poverty.

So the very premise upon which North Carolina's "new beginning" in combatting spiraling crime rates is based comes under attack from those who believe society creates conditions which breed criminality, and until the difficult task of reforming society is undertaken, crime will continue.

Debate Begins

Proposals recently put forth by Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr., and the Commission on Correctional Programs center around swift, certain punishment. Those approaches, say opponents, fail to consider the social injustices that breed crime.

The recommendations, complains former State Rep. Arthur H. Jones, formerly of Charlotte and now a Chapel Hill resident, "do not delve into the causes of crime, especially violent crime."

The commission, chaired by former State Senator Eddie H. Knox, a Charlotte attorney, is presenting the General Assembly a report which calls for revision of the criminal justice system with emphasis on punishment as a deterrent. Knox, a close friend of Gov. Hunt, has worked with the governor on his crime message which also drives hard on the point of catching, convicting, and sentencing the offender with certainty.

David L. Bazelon, chief judge in U. S. Court of Appeals, Washington, recently spoke to this very point in a "New York Times" article (Feb. 15) in which he pointed to 34 per cent unemployment among poor blacks, with the figure shooting up to 57 per cent in city ghettos.

Judge Bazelon scolded those who think that taking the criminals off the streets will solve the problem: "We can safely assume that the kind of overcrowding that helped spark Attica will get worse long before it gets better."

What Risk

The judge also believes that while the white-collar offender weighs his odds of getting caught, punishment is little deterrent to the street offender. "With no job, no opportunity, no close family ties, he may well believe he has more to gain than he has to lose."

As to locking up more and more offenders, Judge Bazelon wonders "for how long and at what cost to them and ourselves? Is the plan to keep them, and the many others that our slums will continue to produce, behind bars for life? Even if it succeeds, will this approach make our society more just, or more repressive?"

Tougher sentencing is "mere nibbling" and street crime can only be resolved through expensive and profound social reforms and there is "no excuse for simplistic rhetoric," writes the judge.

"It is always easy to concede the inevitability of social injustice and find the serenity to accept it. The far harder task is to feel its intolerance and seek the strength to change it," Judge Bazelon writes.

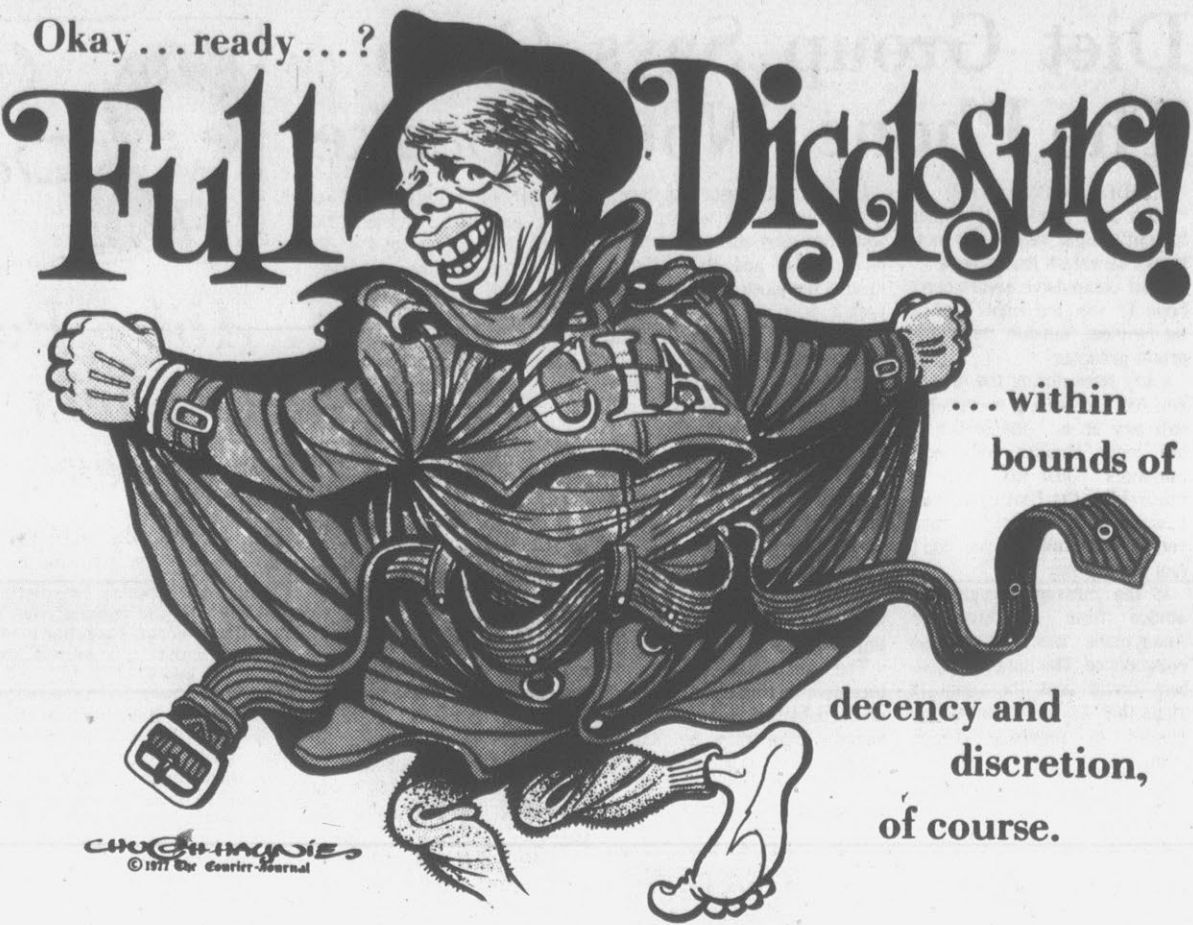

Art Jones goes a step further. He believes poverty and poor nutrition are the culprits. "I've had a growing conviction that abnormal behavior is linked to physical and mental deficiencies that to a great degree can be corrected by proper nutrition. It would add 'Preventive' to that of negative 'deterrent' especially in the area of murder and other crimes."

"Consider that most inmates on the North Carolina Death Row are either poor or black. The diet of the poor provides poor nutrition... which means low intake of proper vitamins, especially niacinamide (resulting in a high potential for violence, including murder," Jones believes.

Jones points to several studies which have shown the absence of niacinamide causing severe personality and psychological change, turning normally behaved persons into schizophrenics, then back to normal behavior when this vitamin was restored.

By MARY McGRORY Only Cursory Attempts

WASHINGTON — Admiral Stansfield Turner, President Carter's second choice for CIA director, was wearing mufti for his confirmation hearings. The Senate "Oversight" Committee saluted him anyway.

Whatever doubts they may have harbored about putting a military man in charge of an agency that has in the past demonstrated a dangerous tendency to run its own little wars were overcome by the comforting thought that an admiral would make a tight ship of the stained and tattered agency.

Turner is an impressive figure. His rugged profile, his silver sideburns make him worthy of a Navy poster. His manner is both suave and commanding. If he seemed less than the magnificent sailor-scholar of Annapolis classmate Jimmy Carter's heraldry, he was also not a prickly intellectual like Theodore C. Sorensen, he of the exotic ideas about military service or outlandish notions about the public's right to know.

The members made some cursory attempts to find the civilian in the admiral. They sought assurances that he would protect the public from the CIA's notorious indifference to civil liberties. He was on the whole non-committal. He promised only to "study" those questions if confirmed.

Nobody pressed. It is understood that he is not yet on board, and the absence of strong opinions seemed a point in his favor.

To a question from Sen. William Hathaway, D-Maine, about discontinuing paramilitary operations, he gave an answer worthy of Richard Helms or William Colby:

"I don't think we should deprive the country of that possibility."

Several of the overseers seemed anxious to hear him say that he would resign on principle if given an immoral or illegal order and would confide in the committee if such an order were given by the commander in chief.

The admiral tried to give satisfaction on what was to him a terribly far-fetched proposition, but it was minimal. He would tell the committee about his irreconcilable differences with the President after he had resigned, not before. If government officials were to go running to the press or Congress every time they disagreed with the commander in chief, he noted disapprovingly, "we would have anarchy."

"Would you say no to the President?" Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., asked him.

The admiral cruised away. "I am not a policy-maker. I am a provider of intelligence."

Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md., wanted to know if the committee would be advised of covert operations in advance.

The admiral told him soothingly that he might delete details of intelligence operations that the committee will "not want to hear."

"May not want to hear?" Mathias echoed, unbelievably. "That's a sore phrase around here. We had a senior senator who said, 'I don't want to hear it.' There are a lot of things in life we don't want to hear or know about. I don't think that it should be a criterion for withholding information."

The admiral, realizing his blunder, hastily apologized, then glided into the familiar litany about "the responsibility for the individuals engaged in covert actions whose lives may depend on their being kept secret."

He would "anticipate no difficulty" in complying with the sense of the resolution, which, inconveniently, requires CIA directors to inform the Congress when it is about to overthrow a government.

On the basic question of covert operations themselves, there were no questions at all. Apparently, that argument is over. One year after the most scandalous revelations about poison, assassination plots, drug experiments, mail openings and Mafia-recruiting, the senators felt no need to examine the director-designate's sentiments on such "old, unhappy, far-off things."

Members hinted that these thorny subjects had been discussed in cozy office visits with the admiral. On a mortifying recent develop-

Carter Talks Trips

The Supreme Court ruled today that the 1933 resolution prohibiting payment of obligations in gold applied to contracts in bullion, as well as in coin.

The five-to-four opinion, one of 15 read, represented a victory for the government's contention such contracts could be paid off at their face value in present-day devalued currency.

Justice Cordozo delivered the majority opinion. Dissenters were Justices Van DeVanter, McReynolds, Sutherland and Butler.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Saudis Restrain Oil Price

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Despite scant encouragement from the U.S. and deepening tensions with Iran, the royal rulers of Saudi Arabia are still trying to hold down world oil prices — an effort of critical economic importance for the West.

Inaccurate reports spreading through western capitals that the Saudis have agreed with the rest of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) on a 7.5 per cent price increase for crude oil. The Saudis regard that as "disinformation" spread by Iran and Kuwait, chief high-price agitators within OPEC. So, the two-price system resulting from last December's OPEC meeting still holds: a 5 per cent boost by Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates, a 15 per cent increase by the rest of OPEC.

But Saudi restraint will endure no longer than hopes for Arab-Israeli settlement in Geneva. If and when the Saudis conclude that President Carter is less than even-handed at Geneva, they will reunite OPEC. In that case, a 7.5 per cent increase will seem very modest indeed.

Saudi resistance to Iran's push for ever-higher oil prices is essentially a political decision by the royal palace (especially Crown Prince Fahd) rather than an economic decision by the technocrats. The political reasons are twofold: first, as an unsolicited gesture to the West intended to prompt U.S. pressure on Israel for concessions; second, to slow down neighboring Iran's rapid economic and military development, based on high oil revenues.

The Saudis were quietly disappointed by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's visit there last week. Although he characterizedly listened much more than he talked, Vance denied linkage between the Israeli question and the price of oil — the official Carter administration position which the Saudis consider a hallucination.

Meanwhile, tension with Iran is on the rise. Relations between the two oil giants are so tense that secret bilateral contacts on diplomatic, military and royal levels have multiplied. For instance, the Iranian foreign minister recently paid an unannounced visit to Jiddah to confer with his Saudi counterpart.

CURBING KIRBO

Injurious remarks about congressional relations by Carter insider Charles Kirbo led not only to President Carter's dismissing his views in Wednesday's news conference as "just a private citizen's opinion" but also to stronger comments in the privacy of the White House.

Atlanta lawyer Kirbo, who though not on the federal payroll remains one of the President's most influential advisers, did not help Mr. Carter on Capitol Hill when he told the Washington Post's David Broder that the President would not hesitate to appeal over the heads of Congress. That echoed what Mr. Carter told Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill just after the election — a statement the President was strongly advised not to repeat.

The normally astute Kirbo seemed unaware of that advice. "Charley says something offhand down in Atlanta and he doesn't understand that it could end up on page one of the Washington Post," one Carter aide told us.

Frank Moore, chief congressional lobbyist for the White House, quietly got word to Mr. Carter that such talk invited retribution in Congress, particularly among Democrats still wary of the President.

The President agreed with

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 200 words.

To the editor:

I've read quite a bit about ERA in your paper and elsewhere. Something I didn't want to read about it came in the mail yesterday. It was a letter postmarked in Virginia. The letter and enclosed brochures came from some gentlemen and 'second class citizens,' notably Ms. Phyllis Schlafly.

We all get junk mail. But we all don't get the same junk. For the sake of your kind readers who haven't heard from an 'outside interest' who wants to help us decide which way our state will turn, I'll share with you as best I can decipher it, some of the illogical and limited perspective the material propagandizes.

Although the Virginians didn't bother to provide for my examination the copy of the proposed amendment, they did indicate what the ERA will more or less accomplish. The gist was: The ERA will make men and women the same sex; create instantaneous socialism; bring an end to religious freedom; lead our nation to degeneracy; and somehow "fool mother nature."

Equality is a most important step in the road of progressive democracy. Let's take it now. The state is an organism for, by and of the people that must either grow or decay. Time doesn't stand still (except in Virginia?). ERA gives us all a chance to step forward. The only shame is that some members of our society are so shortsighted or unfair that we must legislate an ideal such as equality; which we all should accept with our citizenship as an inalienable part of our definition of democracy.

Weather Confused Forecasts

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Independent economists, many of whom operate from here and Washington and Boston, were as confused as anyone when this winter's weather turned contrary, as it does from time to time.

Remarkably, weather as an economic variable has been almost ignored by some of them in making their forecasts, and yet weather is as much a factor in economics as it is in running a farm or a ski slope.

Weather is meteorology; it is physics, not economics, and so it hasn't been rated as an important input factor in those econometric models that are made up of steel production, housing starts, manhours worked and the like.

But after the winter of 1976-1977, which put on a devilish circus of drought and dust and snow and ice and rain and thaw, leaving a multibillion dollar impact on the economy, nobody henceforth can ever forget the weather factor.

"Conclusion: the obvious one which most people now realize is that this economy may now dance to the tune of the weather more than anyone had realized. It has been inflation-prone, now it is also weather-prone."

That's the verdict of Pierre Rinfret of Rinfret Associates, who somewhat belatedly but still ahead of most economists, has formally embraced weather forecasting as a natural ally of economic forecasting.

In his confidential letter to clients, Rinfret has instituted what is ominously and acronically called WARN, for weather analysis regarding numbers. Along with regular economic indicators, it incorporates temperature and precipitation.

"The first-quarter, 1977 economic results will be largely the results of weather conditions," said Rinfret. Projecting the impact, he advises that "inflation in the balance of 1977 could be largely the result of spring and summer weather conditions."

Rinfret's analyses now will include statistics on heating degree days and precipitation. His first report generally shows pluses for the former, minuses for the latter.

In Atlanta, for example, the number of degree days from January 2 to February 20 totaled 1,740, or 513 above normal. In Chicago the excess was 586, in Columbus, Ohio 771, and in New York, 399.

A degree day is the number of degrees by which the average of the daily highs and lows falls below 65 degrees, and indicates, among other things, the amount of fuel likely to be needed to maintain comfortable indoor temperatures.

Precipitation for the same cities was below normal, especially in Atlanta and New York. But reflecting the abnormal conditions a substantial shortfall also was noted in San Francisco, and a lesser one in December.

Rinfret doesn't say if he will work this information into a mathematical equation, but he is at least committed to using it in subjective determinations.

Strength For Today

A BELIEVER WITHOUT FEAR

Few men in England have made a deeper impression by their sheer goodness than did the wealthy, generous, and gifted author, John Ruskin. He gave away practically all of his fortune to further good causes.

"I am a Christian," he wrote on one occasion, "and have been so since I was a small child. Heaven keep me from being less as I grow older."

Regarding the Bible, he wrote, "I have read this book with a great deal of care, and am thankful that, on those who trust it, I can press its pleadings. My endeavor has been uniformly to make men trust it more deeply than they do; trust it not only in their own favorite verses, but in the sum of it all; trust it, not as a fetish or a talisman, which they are to be saved by daily repetition of, but as a Captain's orders to be heard and obeyed at their peril."

He died saying, "I grow daily more sure that the grace of God rests on dutiful and kindly hearts."

Several Indian Officials Arrested For Espionage

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Several Indian officials suspected of passing nuclear and industrial secrets to foreigners are under arrest in their own country, and one source says Americans may be involved.

U.S. embassy officers in New Delhi and State Department officials here declined all comment, citing President Carter's statement last week that the administration will not discuss live security issues.

Foreigners involved in the case were not identified, but one Indian source said, "Probably they are Americans."

The Indian officials were arrested in early February and have been undergoing weeks of intensive interrogation, sources say. There was no official announcement from the New Delhi government about the arrests.

First sketchy accounts about the discovery of an espionage network were confirmed Monday when India's national news agency, Samachar, reported the arrests of some senior civil servants. The news agency indicated the officials were being held for passing economic intelligence to foreigners.

One newspaper, the Indian Express, reported that two foreigners — presumably diplomatic spies — had been expelled from India as a result of what the paper said was "one of the biggest ever espionage cases" to hit the country.

The Indian government did not identify the two who were expelled and U.S. officials refused comment when asked if they were Americans.

Those arrested by the Indian Intelligence Bureau were said to include a senior assistant to Foreign Minister Y. B. Chavan, who had access to top-secret documents; one senior and two lower-ranking members of the State Planning Commission, and other personnel familiar with Indian industrial, economic and state planning programs.

The Indian sources said they knew some of the subjects by name but declined to identify them because, as far as the sources knew, no charges have yet been lodged against them.

There is no clear-cut evidence from information available here that the espionage system under investigation concerns only nuclear matters. And Indian newspapers are suggesting that the spying operation had to do mainly with the country's iron and steel industry.

But knowledgeable experts here cast doubt on that, noting that no major foreign power needs to know much about India's potential in the iron and steel industry, while its nuclear technology is the subject of a great deal of interest.

First State Bank's Meeting 'Best Year Yet' Reported At

WINTERVILLE — The year 1976 was the best ever, C. D. Langston, president of First State Bank, told those attending the annual stockholder's meeting held Friday at the Community Building in Winterville.

At the 71st annual stockholder's meeting, 93.7 per cent of stockholders were represented either by proxy or in person.

In his report, Langston informed stockholders that total resources of the First State Bank as of December 31, 1976 amounted to $24,937,266, an increase of $5,996,325 over the previous year-end resources of $18,940,941.

"The bank's growth can be attributed to the acceptance of the First State Bank by individuals and businesses in Pitt County," Langston commented.

Among developments during 1976 noted by Langston was the opening of a new office in the renovated Cherry Building (the old Proctor Hotel) on the Downtown Mall on Evans Street. The president also reported on the progress of this new facility.

In other reports, it was revealed that for 1976 total earnings increased to $1,509,006 from the 1975 earnings of $1,219,829. Net earnings for 1976 were $2.15 per share after taxes, compared to $2.10 per share after taxes for 1975.

Dividends for First State Bank stock was 45 cents per share during 1976 as compared to 40 cents per share in 1975.

"These are significant contributions to the community," Langston said, "in interest paid to depositors, in salaries and employee benefits, and in other expenditures and contributions made within the community." Directors of the bank elected for 1977 are: C. D. Langston, Senator Vernon White, W. A. Weathington, Sr., John Milton May, W. M. Scales, Jr., J. Curtis Hendrix, Clinton R. Prewett, Syd W. Dunn, John F. Minges, Kenneth K. Dews, and William C. Glidewell, Jr.

Officers of the bank are: Langston, president and chairman of the board; Hendrix, executive vice-president; Glidewell, executive vice-president; White, vice-president; Pam Kachmer, assistant vice-president; Tommy Langston, cashier; Richard Pike, operations officer; and Marie Mills, assistant cashier.

ment — the revelation that the CIA kept King Hussein on a million-dollar dole for 20 years — not a word was spoken. The committee does not seek to advertise its ineffectuality, and presumably that little awkwardness was also canvassed in chambers out of the vulgar gaze.

It was smooth sailing all the way for Jimmy Carter's Annapolis classmate — except, notably, when it came to the subject of his retirement from the Navy. Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., raised it diffidently. He told the admiral the press might wonder.

The admiral seemed offended, and spoke for the first and only time with real conviction. He had been 30 years in the Navy. Retirement would not alter his attitude and background. Besides, they have always had a military official in high office at the CIA.

Yes, that is right. They always have.

That's why some people thought it needed civilization. But Jimmy Carter reasoned rightly that the CIA would be more comfortable with a little gold braid. And that the Senate "Oversight" Committee would be, too. The new watchdogs, like the old, don't want to be beastly to the CIA.

Carter Meeting Soviet Dissident

WASHINGTON (AP) — After turning the issue of human rights into a central theme of his first weeks in office, President Carter is meeting with Soviet dissident Vladimir Bukovsky, who spent 12 years in Russian prisons.

Carter planned to meet briefly in the White House today with the Russian biologist, who also had a longer meeting of about 20 minutes planned with Vice President Walter F. Mondale in the Roosevelt Room, just across a hallway from the Oval Office.

A spokesman for the vice president explained that Bukovsky wanted to talk to top administration officials and "the President only has so much time."

Bukovsky's civil rights activities in the Soviet Union led him to spend 12 of his 34 years in prisons. He was released from a Soviet jail last December as part of a prisoner exchange in which the State Department and the Soviet embassy here played central roles.

His release was tied to Chile's release of Luis Corvalan, a Chilean communist who then went to Moscow and met Leonid Brezhnev on the Soviet leader's 70th birthday.

During last year's campaign, Mondale repeatedly criticized then-President Gerald R. Ford for his failure to meet with exiled Soviet author and dissident Alexander Solzhenitsyn.

Carter also promised during the campaign that the United States would "take the lead in establishing and promoting basic global standards of human rights."

Ford's failure to meet with Solzhenitsyn in July 1975 created a controversy that was an issue in his primary fight with Ronald Reagan. Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger strongly advised Ford against meeting with Solzhenitsyn in order not to interfere with U.S.-Soviet detente.

Carter's role in the meeting was being played down Monday, with the distinction being made between "a lengthy meeting with the vice president" and a session with Carter that would be worked into the President's schedule during the day.

the unanimous view of White House aides that Kirbo's crack was harmful and that it greatly overstated the case. It would not be repeated, he told aides. The President then smoothed over Kirbo's comments at the Wednesday news conference.

The White House lobbying staff has been criticized ever since the new administration took over, with Moore getting most of the heat. One reason, beyond Moore's control, is just such cracks as Kirbo's.

'MR. PRESIDENT'
Having shucked perquisites for White House staffers and pomp and ceremony for himself, President Carter has instructed aides that it's fine with him if they call him "Mr. President" instead of "Mr. Carter" or "Governor."

Those three titles were suggested as options in a note that White House speechwriter James Fallows gave the President. Doing away with the traditional "Mr. President," Fallows told Mr. Carter, would be one more step in "de-pomping" the office. But did Jimmy really want to be called plain old Mr. Carter or Governor?

Apparently not. Mr. Carter circulated the Fallows note among some senior staffers but then let it be known that de-pomping had gone far enough. Thus, whenever any outsider is around he will be called "Mr. President" — a title adopted in 1789 as more democratic than "Your Highness," the salutation proposed by John Adams. In private, one senior aide told us, he still occasionally says "Jimmy," and gets away with it.

planned presidential trip," the source said. "It's part of his effort to keep from being isolated from the people."

Aides have spoken in the past about a number of such trips and have said Carter might stay overnight at private residences, as he did during the early part of his campaign. But there is no indication how many such journeys Carter might make.

Asked about planning for the first trip, White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said: "We haven't made a final decision on it."

In addition to taking Carter out of Washington, the trip would give Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill of Massachusetts and Majority Leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia an opportunity to appear with the President among their constituents.

Both have criticized the administration during its first weeks in office, saying Carter consulted too little with Congress and sometimes too late. The President countered at a new conference last week that reports about his troubles with Congress are exaggerated.

Frank Moore, the President's chief liaison with Congress, confirmed part of the trip. "We are going to West Virginia," he said. But Moore added: "We're not ready to announce anything yet." He said he could not give a specific date for the trip.

An O'Neill aide said Carter's staff had requested suggestions from the speaker's staff for a stop in Massachusetts. "We gave them some general ideas," the aide said. "Then it's up to them. It was staff-to-staff. Carter hasn't talked to Tip about it."

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened higher today before what was described as a minor electrical fire halted trading for more than an hour.

The New York Stock Exchange trading floor had to be evacuated because of smoke, but there were no reports of injuries.

Trading, suspended at 10:24 a.m., was scheduled to resume at 11:45 a.m.

Before the fire interrupted trading, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up 2.41 at 938.83.

Advances were ahead of losers 5-3 among NYSE-listed issues.

Analysts thought the early rise, continuing an upward trend from Monday afternoon, reflected technical forces within the market.

"Of course, everyone is scared to death of more inflation," said John J. Smith of Farnestock & Co., "but the inflation story is beginning to wear a little thin."

However, he noted many traders were still afraid of the $69.8 billion federal budget deficit "that Washington is talking about."

Before the halt, British Petroleum headed the active list, up 1/4 to 15 1/2. A 130,000 share block was traded at that price.

On the American Stock Exchange, Houston Oil, traded heavily Monday, was the most active in early trading today, up 1/4 to 45 1/2.

The 11 a.m. NYSE's composite index was up .10 to 54.33.

The market value index on the Amex gained .19 to 10.44.

Find Heroes On Television

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — American children are getting their heroes from television, an unreliable source for anything so important, according to a National Humanities Center official.

Dr. William J. Bennett, the center's executive officer, referred to a recent newspaper survey of 368 eighth graders which showed seven of their top 10 heroes were TV actors: Henry "The Fonz" Winkler, Farrah Fawcett, Lee Majors, John Travolta, Paul Michael Glaser, David Soul and Lynda Carter.

"What we have is a set of packaged TV personalities in contrived roles and situations," Bennett said. "The circumstances are not real and the kids see through the transparency, but they don't know what to do with it."

"I don't think we, as teachers and parents, create enough competition in presenting to children real life heroes, models of real human excellence."

Bennett said another survey by the National Association of Secondary School Principals showed many students had no heroes at all and many others admired former President Richard Nixon.

Bennett said they apparently confused sympathy with admiration, because they said of Nixon, "All politicians are dishonest. He just got caught."

He added that children "need models of human excellence so that we can have a sense of direction to channel our energies. Heroes can provide these models."

Charge Driver In Collision

Joel Craig Williams of 1900 South Charles St. was charged with following too close after investigation of a 5 p.m. mishap yesterday on Cotanche Street, 40 feet North of the Tenth Street intersection.

Police reported the Williams car collided with a vehicle driven by Daniel Ray Willis of Route 1, Greenville, resulting in an estimated $600 damage to the Willis car and $25 damage to the Williams auto.

Offers Energy Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter today sent Congress his proposal to create a Department of Energy, combining all or part of at least nine existing agencies with manpower totaling nearly 20,000.

The proposed new department would have a budget of more than $10.6 billion in fiscal 1978.

Carter's bill would abolish as independent agencies the Federal Energy Administration — FEA — the Energy Research and Development Administration — ERDA — and the Federal Power Commission — FPC.

And in an unusual arrangement, it would divide responsibility for the leasing and management of offshore oil and natural gas areas between the new department and the Department of Interior which now has that responsibility.

The proposal would also place in the new energy department Interior's regional electric power marketing programs and the Bureau of Mines fuels data program; control over the rate of exploration of the Naval Petroleum Reserve in Alaska, an area to be managed by Interior; and jurisdiction over petroleum reserves in California and Wyoming and oil shale reserves in Colorado and Utah, now under the authority of the Defense Department.

The proposed energy department would pick up other programs from the Commerce Department, the Department of Housing and Urban Development, the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Interstate Commerce Commission.

In his letter transmitting the bill to Congress, Carter said, "Even with a new Department of Energy problems of inter-departmental coordination will remain, since virtually all government activity affects energy to some extent."

"Establishing this department, however, will give us one government body with sufficient scope and authority to do the massive job that remains to be done," he added.

Dies After Auto Mishap

WAKE FOREST — Lois Mizelle Lewis, formerly of Bethel, died Tuesday morning as a result of an automobile accident which occurred Sunday.

Mrs. Lewis, a sixth grade teacher at Wake Forest Rolesville Junior High, was hurt when a bus carrying no passengers skidded on rain-slick U.S. 1 two miles north of Raleigh and collided head-on with her car.

Mrs. Lewis was pinned in the car for 45 minutes while members of the county emergency ambulance service, Raleigh Rescue Squad, and Wake-New Hope Fire Department cut back the top of the vehicle she was driving.

There were no passengers in the Lewis vehicle. David F. Addison of Macon, Ga., driver of the bus, which is owned by Blue Bird Co. of Fort Valley, Ga., wasn't injured. No charges were filed Sunday.

SOME MAY LEAVE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said today he would expect that some of the 240 Americans in Uganda would leave the country now that President Idi Amin has lifted his restrictions on their movements.

OVER A MILLION — The drive for funds for expansion of East Carolina University's Ficklen Stadium went over the $1 million mark this morning as pledges from three Greenville firms — totaling some $60,000 — were received. Dr. Ray Minges, Pitt chairman for the fund raising drive said the pledges from Eaton Corporation, Burroughs Wellcome Co. and North Carolina National Bank today brought the total pledges for the $2.5 million expansion program to $1,025 million. Shown at the presentation this morning are Richard Licko, Eaton Corp. plant manager; Henry Leslie, plant manager for Burroughs Wellcome; ECU Chancellor Leo Jenkins, Dr. Minges and NCNB Board chairman Luther Hodges Jr. who is also state chairman of the stadium expansion campaign. Minges noted that $925,000 has been raised so far in Pitt County, and said that the "state drive is just kicking off." Minges emphasized that in addition to expanding the stadium itself, additional parking facilities will be needed. "If we can't provide adequate parking space, we shouldn't build the stadium," he said.

Charger Defense Shocks Washington

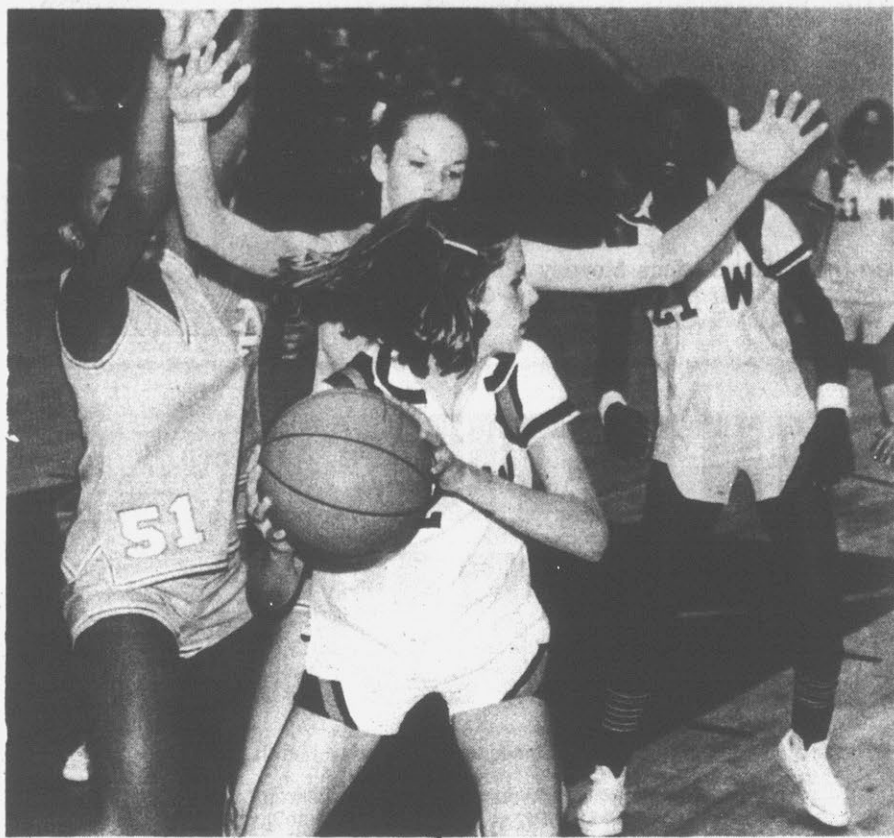

By JIM KYLE

Reflector Sports Writer

WILLIAMSTON — Ayden-Grifton threw up a tenacious zone defense which bottled up Washington's highly-touted offensive attack and was perfect from the line in the final quarter to take a 42-36 win over the Northeastern Conference champion Pam Pack.

The Charger win sets up an all-Eastern Carolina Conference boys' district championship game tonight as they will take on North Pitt at 7:30. In last night's first game, the Williamston girls, Northeastern champs, defeated C. B. Aycock 50-40 to gain a spot in tonight's final game against Farmville Central.

Ayden-Grifton ran a 2-3 zone defense against the Pam Pack, the defending district champions. The Chargers almost completely shut off the Washington inside game, forcing the Pack guards to shoot from the outside. The tough defense allowed only a 27.6 shooting percentage by the Pam Pack.

LOOKING FOR HELP — Williamston's Jo Anne Lilley gets stuck underneath her basket with no place to go and looks around for some help. Gayle Batts (51) and Jayne Pate

The pace of the game was slow, but neither team intentionally stalled the ball until the Chargers went into a four-corners offense holding a 32-30 lead with 2:11 left.

"I think the pace bothered them more than it bothered us," Charger coach Bob Murphrey said after the win. "The slow pace bothered us in the first half, but I think we got used to it. I tried to convince them (the Chargers) that it was bothering (Washington)."

Ayden-Grifton guard Willie Forbes took over the tempo of the game when the Chargers went to a ball-control offense in the last two minutes. He quickly hit both ends of a one-and-one after being fouled and then grabbed a Pam Pack rebound and took it the length of the court for a layup.

In the last 34 seconds of the contest, James Leggett, Terry Maye and Ogden Braxton each hit two foul shots to keep the Chargers in front.

"I'm just happy to win," Murphrey said. "I thought it was our defense; we kept it real tight on defense and took their inside game away. I thought the whole ballclub did a real good job on defense." Murphrey also said he was glad when the Washington big men, Alvin Rogers and Dominique Wilkins, moved outside instead of challenging Ayden-Grifton underneath.

The game started off on a slow scoring pace. Neither team shot well during the first half. Both teams ran zone defenses which accounted for many missed shots.

The Chargers held a 6-5 margin at the end of the first period but Roy Thompson connected on a 17-footer to put Washington ahead 11-8 with 3:16 left in the half. Braxton followed up on Leggett's miss at the 1:04 mark, however, to pull Ayden-Grifton to within one, 11-10 at intermission.

The Chargers were five for 24 in the first half and Washington was an even worse five of 31. "We were tight in the first half," according to Murphrey. "We got some good shots, but they didn't go. I think their big boys intimidated us in the first half."

Ayden-Grifton did better in the second half, connecting on 11 of 16 shots from the field.

Washington stayed ahead for the entire third quarter, taking a five-point lead at one point, 19-14. The Chargers quickly cut the margin on one, 19-18, and trailed by two at the end of the quarter as Maye hit the first of a two-shot foul to make it 23-21 going into the final period.

Forbes hit a layup to open the period which tied the game for the Chargers, then made good on a three-point play to give them a 26-23 lead with 6:16 left.

The Pam Pack got a three-point play of their own from Rogers to tie the game at 30, however, with 2:45 remaining.

On their next trip down the floor, the Chargers regained the lead when Braxton followed his own missed shot. Then Forbes hit two from the line and followed with a layup to put Ayden-Grifton out in front 36-30 with 1:09 left.

Wilkins cut into the lead by hitting two foul shots just five seconds later, but Leggett countered with two free throws for the Chargers.

Maye all but wrapped things up when he connected on a one-and-one opportunity to give Ayden-Grifton a 40-32 lead with 21 seconds left.

Tony Boston hit a follow shot with 16 seconds left for the Pam Pack, but Braxton then hit two from the line. Washington's final score came on a follow shot by Everson Simmons with five seconds on the clock.

Forbes led the Ayden-Grifton scoring with 11 points and Braxton had 10. Wilkins was the only Washington player in double figures with 14.

The Pam Pack, who made it all the way the the 3-A finals before bowing by Graham with two points last year, are eliminated from post-season play.

The Chargers must now get ready for North

Pitt, a team they split with during the regular season; but Murphrey said last night, "I want to enjoy this win tonight and tomorrow we'll get our minds on North Pitt. We feel like we have a real good shot at them."

In the first game of the evening, Williamston broke away from a stubborn Aycock team late in the third quarter and forced a series of turnovers in the final period which thwarted the Falconettes' comeback hopes.

Paula Bennett scored six of the Tigerettes' first 10 points in the initial period as they jumped out to a 10-2 lead, but Aycock got 10 first-quarter points from Helen Jones and was able to tie the game at 14 by the end of the quarter.

Jan Rogerson and Lisa Robertson each hit baskets at the start of the second period to give Williamston an 18-14 lead. Aycock, came back, however, with two buckets by Dalphine Sauls to tie it up again.

Jayne Pate's basket from underneath with 1:11 left gave the Falconettes a 23-21 lead before Jo Anne Lilley cut the margin to one with a foul shot with two seconds in the half.

The game stayed close in a low-scoring third quarter until the Tigerettes scored eight straight in the last four and a half minutes to give them a 35-30 lead going into the final period.

In that quarter, Aycock trailed by only three, 41-38 with 3:23 left before three straight turnovers allowed Williamston to take a 45-38 lead.

The Falconettes only got one more field goal in the contest and Lilley hit five foul shots down the stretch to give the Tigerettes a 50-40 victory.

"I thought we played a good ballgame," Williamston coach Susan Cox said. She said the Williamston press, which the Tigerettes used on and off during the game, "helped us get them out of the things they were used to doing. It kept them off-balance."

Lilley led the Williamston scoring with 19 points while Bennett scored 13. Jones hit 18 for Aycock and Sauls had 10.

Williamston now meets Farmville Central, tonight for the district championship. "Farmville has a super ballclub — they're quick, big and well-balanced," Mrs. Cox said. "We're going to have to play an exceptional ballgame against them."

Kingman, N.Y. Mets 'Far Apart' In Talks

By The Associated Press
Dave Kingman is shooting for the moon.

"This season, I won't be satisfied with less than 50 home runs," says the New York Mets' slugger.

The Mets might think he is asking for the moon as well. General Manager Joe McDonald points out that he is "very far apart" in his contract negotiations with the unsigned player.

While not disclosing figures, McDonald said Monday that what the Mets have offered the rangy outfielder would put Kingman in the "category of the top three or four salaried players on the team."

McDonald also said that it would be "very difficult" for any Mets player to make more than pitcher Tom Seaver, who is in the category of $225,000 per year.

Kingman, who checked into the Mets' spring training camp at St. Petersburg, Fla., Sunday and started hitting baseballs over the fence Monday, noted that there was a big disparity in his contract talks with McDonald.

"But I don't want to leave New York," Kingman reflected. "My goal is to be signed by the start of the season."

Tommy John of the Los Angeles Dodgers was another dissatisfied player. The left-handed pitcher reported to the Dodgers' camp at Vero Beach, Fla., in a huff over contract terms.

John, who came back after an arm injury that was expected to end his career, said he would sign a one-year contract and become a free agent at the end of the season.

Elsewhere, the Montreal Expos signed catcher-first baseman Earl Williams to a 1977 contract. At Cocoa, Fla., pitcher Floyd Bannister, the Houston Astros' No. 1 free-agent draft choice last spring, came to terms with the club. The former Arizona State southpaw signed a minor league contract with Charleston, W.Va., the Astros' International League affiliate.

Semi-Finals See Pirates Play VMI

By MARSHALL JOHNSON,

Associated Press Writer

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — Before the season opened, young Bobby Cremins said he felt the Southern Conference basketball championship was a realistic goal for his Appalachian State Mountaineers — and he hasn't changed his mind.

Cremins isn't predicting the Mountaineers, who finished third in the regular season and posted a 16-11 over-all record, will beat Furman's second-seeded Paladins, 18-9 with a seven-game winning streak, in tonight's opening game of the conference tournament semi-finals.

"But I certainly think we've got a chance," says Cremins, whose team split even with the Paladins in two regular season games.

Tonight's second semifinal sends Virginia Military's defending champion Keydets, 23-3, against East Carolina's unranked Pirates, 10-17, who shocked fourth-ranked William and Mary in the opening round last Saturday night on the Indians' home court.

The winners meet at 8 p.m. Wednesday for the conference title and a berth in the NCAA tournament.

East Carolina's upset victory convinced Cremins the tournament is wide open, though he admits that "Furman and VMI have to be the favorites with Appalachian and East Carolina the Cinderella teams."

His feeling of an unpredictable tournament was borne out by the two other opening round encounters. "We had a tough game with Davidson," says Cremins, whose Mountaineers won 71-66. And Furman wasn't exactly overpowering in a 76-69 regionally televised conquest of The Citadel.

Both Appalachian-Furman games during the season were close, the Mountaineers winning at home 80-78 in overtime and the Paladins winning at home by 90-83.

"And I think it'll be a helluva game tonight," says Cremins.

The big question mark is VMI, which ran off 21 straight victories before dropping its last two league starts to William and Mary and Appalachian, both on the road.

After the Keydets wrapped up an opening round bye, Coach Charlie Schmaus said "the layoff after the season won't hurt us. Sometimes you get more out of playing against yourselves."

By The Associated Press

The North Carolina Tar Heels are going places these days — and their latest move is in The Associated Press' college basketball poll.

After winning the Atlantic Coast Conference regular season title with an 84-71 victory over Duke Saturday, the Tar Heels completed a wildly successful weekend with a 96-89 victory over 10th-ranked Louisville on Sunday.

Their two-day performance obviously caught the voters' eyes, for they generated enough support Monday to push North Carolina three spots up to No. 6. It was one of the biggest leaps among Top 10 teams.

The top three teams all remained the same in the voting by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

San Francisco, 29-0, remained No. 1 with 1,120 points after beating Seattle 112-77 and Portland 95-92. The Dons collected 50 of a possible 57 first-place votes while No. 2 Kentucky received the remaining seven. The Wildcats, 22-2, beat Mississippi 81-69 and Alabama 85-70 and collected 996 points in the voting.

Michigan, 21-3, remained No. 3 after beating Michigan State 69-65.

UCLA, 22-4, routed Stanford 114-93 and California 91-69 and displaced Nevada-Las Vegas as the No. 4 team. The Rebels, 23-2, beat Denver 99-82 in their only game of the week and slipped to No. 5.

Arkansas, 25-1, edged Texas A&M 63-62 but fell a notch from sixth to No. 7. Providence, 23-3, beat Villanova 84-71 and St. John's, N.Y. 69-66 to vault from 12th to No. 8. Minnesota, 22-3, edged Purdue 84-78 in overtime and beat Illinois 72-70 to advance from 13th to ninth.

Louisville, 21-5, rounded out the Top 10, retaining the spot it held last week. The Cardinals beat Northeast Louisiana 95-65 and Georgia Tech 91-80 before falling 96-89 to North Carolina.

Tennessee, 20-5, defeated Mississippi State 76-68 but fell to Georgia 83-76 and fell from No. 7 to 11th. Alabama, 20-4, beat Georgia 78-68 but lost to Kentucky 85-70 to drop from No. 8 to 12th.

Syracuse, 23-3, rose from 15th to 13th, and Cincinnati, 22-4, held on to its No. 14 ranking. Detroit, 24-2, climbed from 16th to 15th.

Rounding out this week's Top 20 were Wake Forest, 20-6; Arizona, 21-5; Clemson, 21-5; Marquette, 18-6 and Utah, 20-6.

Oregon, 20th a week ago, dropped out of the Top 20 this week.

Tulane Held To Nine In First Half

What do you say to a basketball team that died?
"I told them that they set basketball back 25 years," said Tulane's Roy Danforth after watching his players score only nine points in the first half against Marquette Monday night.

Marquette's Al McGuire also had something to say to his players after they scored only 25.

"I think both teams were thinking about something else," McGuire said.

The tempo picked up considerably after intermission, but still McGuire did not find anything artistic in his team's 63-44 triumph over Tulane.

"I think we were looking ahead to the last two games, against Creighton and Michigan, and they were looking ahead to the Metro-7 tournament," said McGuire.

McGuire's 19th-ranked Warriors are hopeful of a bid to the NCAA playoffs, and can establish their credentials with victories over their final two opponents. One more triumph would provide McGuire with a 20-victory season, something he has made a habit of at Marquette.

Danforth's players will have to do better than they did Monday night if they want to make the NCAA party. The Green Wave only hit three of 24 shots in the first half.

Two other ranked teams were in action Monday night. Second-ranked Kentucky defeated Mississippi State 77-64 and No. 12

Alabama nipped Vanderbilt 78-77.

Bo Ellis scored 26 points in Marquette's victory. Ellis got 14 points in the first half, outscoring Tulane all by himself by intermission. In the second half, Tulane could not get any closer than 10 points, 29-19. At this point, the Warriors ran off 10 straight, clinching the victory.

Rick Robey scored 19 points and James Lee 14, leading Kentucky past Mississippi State in a Southeastern Conference game. The Wildcats were aided considerably when Mississippi State's Ricky Brown and Kay White fouled out with more than seven minutes to play.

T.R. Dunn scored 18 points, pacing Alabama over Vanderbilt in another SEC game.

Alabama led most of the way, but had to hold off a furious rally by the Commodores at the end.

Meanwhile, Old Dominion won its 21st straight game and 24th in 26 starts with a 79-72 decision over Stetson behind Ronnie Valentine's 27 points; Bruce King scored 28 points and collected 15 rebounds as Iowa defeated Indiana 80-73, and Larry Bird equaled his school record with 47 points, leading Indiana State to an 80-65 decision over Butler.

Also, Steve Grant scored 26 points as Manhattan upset Seton Hall 92-81 and earned a berth in the ECAC's Metro Area playoffs; Ken Horoho had eight free throws in the final two minutes, helping St. Francis, Pa. beat Georgetown 94-87; Mike Mitchell's 26 points powered Auburn past Mississippi 97-84 and Michigan State edged Ohio State 80-79 as Bob Chapman poured in a career-high 29 points.

In first-round games of the Missouri Valley Conference playoffs, West Texas State defeated Tulsa 96-81 behind Melvin Jones' 29 points and Drake beat Bradley 80-73 as Terry Benka converted nine free throws in the final three minutes.

UNC-C Tops Creighton

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Cedric Maxwell scored 20 points and Chad Kinch followed with 19 to pace the University of North Carolina at Charlotte to an 85-67 basketball victory over Creighton Monday night.

Maxwell also pulled down 10 rebounds.

Creighton was led by Robert Scrutens, who led all scoring with 22 points while getting 13-point help from Rick Apke and 12 from Dave Wesley.

The UNCC 49ers pushed their record to 21-3, while Creighton, experiencing its second straight loss, dropped to 21-5.

All-ACC: Can't Rest On Laurels

By CHARLES WOLFE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Being named to the All-Atlantic Coast Conference basketball team is nice, but the players have no time to rest on their laurels and they keep the honor in perspective.

"I think it's a great honor, but as far as individual honors go, I'd rather for the team to win," said North Carolina's Phil Ford in a telephone interview Monday night from Chapel Hill.

Ford also disdained the notion of his being a "star."
"Once you get on the court, everybody's really good," he said. "In order to play in the ACC, you have to be really talented. There are no prima donnas on this team and that's the way I like it."

The ACC Tournament was his immediate concern, Ford said, adding he would gladly sacrifice the All-ACC honor to help the ninth-ranked Tar Heels win the tournament crown.

North Carolina received a first-round bye in the tournament, which begins March 3 in Greensboro, by winning the regular season title.

Ford was named to the AllACC first team along with teammate Walter Davis, Kenny Carr of North Carolina State and Rod Griffin and Skip Brown of Wake Forest.

"I was glad to make the team and I think my performance was one of the best in the league," said Carr, the ACC's leading scorer at 21.9 points per game, in a telephone interview.

The honor, however, does not lessen the pain of a disappointing 16-10 season, he added.

"Making the All-ACC team doesn't make me feel better at all," he said. "We had a lot of bad luck. We lost a lot of games at the buzzer."

"The most disappointing thing about it is that I think we have the best talent in the league and we weren't able to put it together," Carr said.

N.C. State was paired with Maryland in the first tournament round, with North Carolina to play the winner Friday.

Ford said the Tar Heels had no preference about an opponent and that past games would be meaningless.

"Any time there's a game in the ACC, you might beat them by 20 points," he said. "Then they can beat you by 20 points."

However, Carr said he wanted to play Maryland, Clemson and North Carolina because of certain games during the season.

The Wolfpack lost 87-80 at Maryland, then led by as many as 17 points before losing 75-73 in Raleigh on Steve Sheppard's last second shot. Following a 78-66 defeat by North Carolina in the Big Four Tournament, the Wolfpack bested the Tar Heels 75-73 in Raleigh, but were blown out 90-73 in Chapel Hill. Clemson took a 60-59 decision in Raleigh and won 68-66 in Clemson, S.C., when a Carr basket was nullified because time had expired.

But beating Maryland would hold special significance for Carr.

"I'd rather beat Maryland than any other team, including Carolina," he said, "They've won all six games I've played against them."

The bidding:
South West North East
1NT Pass 2NT Pass
3NT Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Six of ♣.

One of the most frustrating aspects of bridge is trying to unseat a blocked suit. On occasion, however, you can enlist the aid of the enemy to resolve that blockage.

The bidding was slightly off target. North should have probed for a major suit game rather than simply raise no trump. The way to do so was to employ the Stayman Convention. North was too strong to sign off in two spades, but not good enough to force to game with a jump to three spades, so two clubs. Stayman, followed by a spade bid, would have expressed his values exactly. When South dutifully shows his spade suit, North can then invite game by raising to three spades, and South would have carried on to game in the suit—a contract which would not have tested declarer unduly.

Against three no trump, West made his normal lead of the fourth-best of his longest and strongest. Declarer tried dummy's jack, then correctly ducked the first round, and won the continuation. It seems that nine tricks are routine, but declarer realized that the spade suit might block—he might be forced to win the fourth spade in his hand, and then he would have no entry to dummy to enjoy the long spade.

Declarer tested spades by cashing the queen and ace. Had the suit divided evenly, he would have been able to win the third spade in hand, then cross to dummy with a spade to the king to cash the fifth spade. When West showed out on the second spade, declarer realized that if he used the king of spades to draw East's jack, the suit would block.

The solution was neat and simple. Declarer abandoned spades and led the jack of hearts! A spade was discarded from his hand, thereby getting rid of the blocking card. The defenders could cash two more heart tricks to complete the book, but that was all they could get. Declarer would win any continuation and lead a spade to dummy's king. The table's two long spades could now be cashed. Five spades, one heart, one diamond and two club tricks brought declarer's total to nine.

"ROCHESTER" and "BOSS" — Eddie (Rochester) Anderson, who died in Los Angeles at 71, appears in 1974 with his longtime showbusiness boss, the late Jack Benny. (AP Wirephoto)

Eddie Anderson Is Dead At 71

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, the man who portrayed the brash valet, chauffeur and raspy voiced man-about-the-house to the late Jack Benny, is dead at 71.

A spokesman for the Motion Picture Country House and Hospital said Anderson died Monday of congestive heart failure. He had been a patient at the hospital since Dec. 17.

Anderson, famous for the line, "What's that, boss?" was first hired to play a porter on a 1937 Benny radio show about a train trip.

"Eddie was a riot on that show," Benny recalled in an interview. "We got so much mail I decided to make him a regular, which I did after the summer."

Anderson said Benny came up with the name Rochester, but Benny couldn't recall how the name originated. He said he just knew it was the right one.

"When I'd get mad and shout 'Rochester!' it had a really good ring to it," Benny said.

Anderson was born Sept. 18, 1905, in Oakland, Calif. His father, Big Ed Anderson, was a minstrel performer. His mother, Ella Mae, was a circus tightrope walker until a fall ended her career.

Anderson is survived by his former wife, Eva; daughters Stephanie and Evangela, and a son, Edmond.

Flynt Cites 'Freedom'

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Hustler publisher Larry Flynt said here Monday night that magazines like his explicit monthly are what freedom of speech is all about.

Flynt was at Wake Forest University accepting a not entirely serious man of the Year award from the Men's Residence Council and talking about censorship.

He is out under bond pending an appeal of his obscenity conviction last month in Cincinnati.

Flynt told the students his magazine was certainly pornographic but that it deserved to be defended all the more on that account.

"Freedom is only meaningful when it offends someone," Flynt argued. "Being free means tolerating things we don't like."

He said his magazine and others like it had the additional virtue of breaking social barriers that also confine more worthwhile literature.

"Could there have been a 'Fear of Flying' without a 'Fanny Hill'?" Flynt asked.

Flynt also conceded Hustler was in poor taste, but he denied it was obscene. "Violence is obscene. Liquor is obscene. Cigarettes are obscene. I don't drink and I don't smoke," he boasted.

Some students in the audience were wearing "Free Larry Flynt" t-shirts, and Flynt promised them a free year's subscription to Hustler.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Snow flurries and snow are forecast today from the Southwest into the northern and central Plains. Snow flurries are also expected in the lower Great Lakes and

St. Lawrence Valley. Warm weather is due in the west, but mostly cool weather is due for the country. (AP Wirephoto Map)

By The Associated Press
An upper atmospheric disturbance scurried across North Carolina into Virginia today and the National Weather Service said its effect was to produce cloudiness over the western part of the state in the morning and over the eastern part in the afternoon.

The only precipitation expected with this system was some scattered snow flurries in the northwest mountains, ending by noon.

The weather service said it would continue rather cool today with highs in the 40s in the mountains, ranging to mostly the low to mid 50s elsewhere.

Fair skies will prevail over the state tonight and Wednesday. Temperatures will dip into the 20s by Wednesday morning except on the coast where the lows will be generally in the low 30s.

Warming will begin Wednesday with highs generally in the 50s, ranging to some low 60s in the southeast.

Beautiful skies but cool temperatures prevailed Monday. High temperatures were mainly in the 50s. This morning's lows dropped into the 20s and low 30s.

Testifies With Guitar, Song

WASHINGTON (AP) — Singer John Denver testified at a House subcommittee hearing on wilderness legislation in the best way he knew: he whipped out a guitar and burst into song.

"My heart turns to Alaska and freedom on the run," he sang Monday into the microphone at the witness table. "I can hear her spirit calling me. To the mountains. To the river. To the forest. To the wild country — where I belong."

The impromptu performance brought a loud round of applause from committee members and those in the audience.

Denver said the song was a new one which he had sung before but never recorded. He told the public lands subcommittee of the House Interior Committee that the song summed up the way he feels about wilderness areas.

Fluorocarbon Sprays Are Banned By Oregon

By BOB BAUM
Associated Press Writer
PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Oregon today became the first state to ban the sale of sprays that use fluorocarbons as propellants, but it still hasn't decided how to enforce the ban.

Two years ago, lawmakers cited evidence that fluorocarbons damage the earth's protective ozone layer. The law they adopted went into effect today.

Anyone convicted of selling the contraband cans faces a maximum penalty of one year in jail and a $1,000 fine.

The law doesn't prohibit use of the sprays, it only bans their sale. So anyone who wants to stick with a favorite aerosol oven-cleaner or underarm deodorant can cross the state line to buy it.

Major retail chains began preparing for the deadline some time ago. Fred Meyer, Inc., which operates 30 large stores in Oregon, posted signs identifying products known to contain fluorocarbons. All were to be off the shelves today, said Dale Warmon, Fred Meyer vice president for marketing.

Small stores were having more trouble.

"We're crying a lot," said Bob Rosenthal, manager of the Nob Hill Pharmacy in Portland. "Mainly, the pain in the neck is I don't have any idea what cans have fluorocarbons in them."

That's one of the problems with the law. Because there is no national labeling requirement for sprays, retailers have trouble finding out which ones contain fluorocarbons.

The law also does not specify who shall enforce the ban or who shall be exempt.

Tom Caton, executive secretary of the State Board of Pharmacy, said, "nobody is" designated as enforcer.

However, Deputy Atty. Gen. Jim Durham said local district attorneys will be responsible for prosecuting offenders. "Probably if somebody saw somebody selling the stuff," he said, "they'd scream and the D.A.'s office would prosecute."

The pharmacy board has the primary task of granting exemptions; so far, Gov. Bob Straub has signed a bill exempting aerosol sprays used for medical purposes, such as those used by asthma sufferers.

Wednesday Will Be LWV Finance Day

Wednesday has been designated as "LWV Finance Day" by the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters, according to League Pres. Rhea Resnik.

Letters have been sent out for about two weeks requesting contributions to the League. Wednesday LWV members will be calling on those who have not replied to the letter.

Ms. Resnik said that dues paid by local LWV members go chiefly to the state and national Leagues, which are responsible for such events as the 1976 presidential debates and for providing candidate information for voters prior to national and state elections. "For local projects," she said, "we depend chiefly upon contributions from the community—and this community has always responded generously to our finance drive."

The LWV is non-partisan in respect to political parties and candidates, and the organization's goal is to encourage informed and active citizen participation in government and the political process. Membership is open to all citizens 18 years of age and older. Contributions or inquiries may be sent to the LWV, Box 1551, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Drug Count For Rock Guitarist

TORONTO (AP) — Rolling Stones guitarist Keith Richards has been charged with possessing heroin for the purpose of trafficking, police say.

The 33-year-old rock musician was convicted in England last January of possessing cocaine and was fined $1,275.

A spokesman for the Royal Canadian Mounted Police said Monday that its officers seized an ounce of heroin with an estimated street value of $4,000 in a downtown hotel.

The rock group is here to record an album.

Father Appeals For Help To Let Young Son Die

Young Layman Award Presented By Jaycees

The Greenville Jaycees presented its Outstanding Young Layman Award for 1976 recently to Samuel J. Manning, a partner in the law firm of Underwood and Manning.

The chapter's OYL Award is given annually to recognize outstanding service to the church and the community. Manning is the seventh recipient of the award.

Nominations for the award were accepted from Greenville churches and citizens. Eligibility requirements stipulated that nominees be between 21 and 35 years of age and either be a Greenville resident or attend a local church. Jaycee membership was not required.

Manning, a native of Williamston, began his law practice in Greenville in 1973 following graduation from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1972 and a one-year clerkship with the Honorable Naomi Morris, Judge of the North Carolina Court of Appeals.

A member of First Christian Church here, Manning has served as president of the Christian Men's Fellowship, as Sunday School teacher, as a member of the church cabinet and board, and as a member of the finance committee.

The recipient also serves the church as a deacon.

In the community, he has been active in the Progressive City Kiwanis Club as a member of the board, as secretary-treasurer, and as coach of the Kiwanis Little League team.

He also serves as treasurer of both the Pitt County Bar Association and the Pitt Young Democrats Club.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP) — A grief-stricken father is pleading for help to allow his 3-year-old son, Jeddie, critically injured when hit by a car, to die before the child's body deteriorates.

"He's dead. His whole body is freezing cold. His whole body is white," said Robert Rhodes in a telephone interview Monday night.

NAMED DIRECTOR

NEW YORK (UPI) — Cyrus Chaichian, an airlines industry veteran, has been named director of Iran Air's operations in the United States. Iran Air which inaugurated New York to Tehran flights in May 1975, now offers seven flights weekly, including two exclusive non-stops by new long-range 747 SPs.

"His eyes are dark and his face has been ice cold for almost 24 hours now."

Rhodes, crying and his voice cracking, said the respirator that keeps Jeddie's heart pumping is slowly eating the child away and erasing any chance for a proper funeral.

"I want to have an open casket just to see him one more time," Rhodes said. "I don't want a closed casket. Why do they have to do this to him?"

A surgeon rejected Rhodes' request Monday to remove the boy from the respirator. A spokesman for Mercy Hospital here called the decision "clearly a professional judgment."

Dr. Samuel Mackall and Dr. Victor Ambruso, both of whom have treated the boy, were not available for comment Monday night. Their answering service said neither could be reached.

Jeddie has been unconscious and in critical condition with neck, spine and internal injuries since he was admitted last Thursday, a nursing supervisor said.

Rhodes, a 27-year-old mechanic, and his wife, Denise, 20, have been at the hospital since then. Rhodes said the doctors told him to go home, get some sleep and wait by the phone. He says he can't sleep.

"Since the day he was admitted, the doctor said there was no chance," Rhodes said. "I know his brain is dead. His whole head is dead ..."

"No man could go home and go to sleep knowing they're trying to keep alive something that's dead. I don't see how they have the heart to do it."

Luzerne County President Judge Bernard Brominsky said Rhodes called him Sunday, but Brominsky said he thought the father wanted an order allowing the child to be a heart donor.

Informed Monday night that the father wants the machine turned off, Brominsky said he could hold an immediate hearing if the father asked for it but can't simply order the child to be allowed to die.

"Obviously, I just can't order something off the top of my head," Brominsky said. He said he did not know what laws, if any, might cover such a situation.

Brominsky suggested Rhodes have a public defender petition the court for a hearing. Rhodes thinks the court process will be too slow to help but said he would try to find a lawyer today.

S.J. MANNING

N.C. Wants $6.9 Million

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state attorney general's office has threatened a California data processing firm with a lawsuit if it does not return $6.9 million the state claims the firm owes it.

The company, Health Applications Systems (HAS) backed out of a contract last year to handle claims for the state's Medicaid program.

The firm said the costs of the program far exceeded state estimates. The state is asking for $3 million for checks withheld from health care providers, $1.5 million for HAS's alleged failure to develop a promised computer system for claims handling and $1.6 million recovered from insurance companies.

Electronic Data Systems-Federal of Texas has been handling North Carolina's Medicaid paperwork since January.

The contract with that firm is substantially different from the $405 million arrangement with HAS, under which the company was to be paid a fixed monthly fee.

The General Assembly must still decide whether to enact legislation which permits private companies to manage public Medicaid programs.

Electric Bills To Be Higher In Winterville

Citizens of Winterville will be receiving higher electric bills this month, according to Elwood Nobles, Town Clerk.

Nobles explained that the fossil fuel rate has been raised from $6.54 in February to $15.87 in March. Nobles said that this $9.33 per 1,000 kilowatt increase is being passed on to the customers this month, but the previous two months the town had absorbed the fossil fuel charge. According to Nobles, although the electrical usage was less during February, the fossil fuel rate increase will make most bills higher.

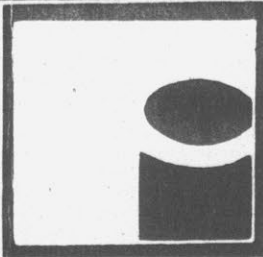

Nobles also said that the town office is still requesting citizens to complete applications for a rental housing survey. Applications are available in the Winterville Town Office.
