The Edgar Allan Poe Literary Society met on Jan. 11th, 1913 - The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The Sidney Lanier Society proposed a debate with us, so we discussed it and accepted the proposal. The Sec'ty wrote them to send the question for debate as soon as possible. They sent, Resolved: That the time has come when the women of North Carolina should be granted suffrage on the same condition as men. The following girls were chosen to debate - Lois Stubbs, Julia Jordan Blanche Lancaster, Ida Sprinkle, Nettie Harris and Corinne W. Bright. There was a call meeting of the Society on Jan. 29th, for the purpose of choosing our side of the debate We chose the affirmative. Also at the last regular meeting of the Society it was suggested that we buy a complete set of the Mikado pictures. It was voted upon and carried.

It was suggested that we elect Mr. Jacques Busbee, the artist who painted our portraits, to honorary membership. It was also moved and carried that the Society buy the material for their posters.

As there was no further business to come before the Society the meeting was turned over to Mr. Ragsdale, who gave us a political review of the year of 1912 in the United States which was much enjoyed by all present.

After this talk the meeting adjourned.
