$50 Million Road Damages

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Department of Transportation faces a big problem of how to finance nearly $50 million in winter storm damage to the state's highway system.

D.W. Patrick, chief engineer of the Division of Highways, presented a preliminary report Friday to the state Transportation Board which placed the known damage at $42.1 million. The department has only $6.3 million with which to do the work.

Patrick said there is little doubt that the final statewide damage total would be $45 to $50 million.

To Plead Insanity

OXFORD, N.C. (AP) — Reuben Conley's attorneys say their client's defense will rely on evidence that he was insane at the time a Virginia state trooper was killed at North Carolina roadblock.

Conely who is from Atlanta, Ga., is charged with murder in the death of Trooper Garland W. Fisher who was shot at a roadblock on Interstate 85 on Nov. 14.

The lawyers filed notice Friday that they would call as witnesses Dr. Billy W. Royal of Dorothea Dix Hospital and Dr. Robert N. Harper to establish that Conley was insane during the incident.

Wants To Interview Policemen

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The FBI wants to interview at least 35 Charlotte policemen in connection with an investigation into alleged illegal wiretaps being used by the Charlotte Police Department.

Police Chief J. C. Goodman was given a list of prospective interviewees and has notified the officers involved, according to Major T.G. Ginn, administrative assistant to the chief.

Ginn said the officers will decide themselves whether to talk to the FBI.

Utilities Head To Step Down

RALEIGH (AP) — Tenney Deane says he will step down as chairman of the State Utilities Commission in "two or three months" and another commission member, Ward Purrington, has submitted his resignation.

Purrington said Friday he had resigned because "it was basically a convenient time for me and my workload with the commission." His term would have expired June 30. He said he was "looking at several opportunities," including returning to practicing law. He formerly served in the General Assembly and was appointed to the commission by former Gov. Jim Holshouser.

Southwestern N.C. Flood Watch Set

By United Press International

Heavy rainfall swelled many rivers and lakes in southwestern North Carolina mountains Saturday, prompting flood watch statements for the area.

Kay Collins, who keeps a tab on the French Broad River height for the National Weather Service, said rescue workers had warned residents to be ready to move if it continued to rain through the night.

Bankful usually is eight feet, but the river has been cleaned out recently and won't overflow at most points until it reaches nine feet, Collins explained. The river stood at 8.79 feet early Saturday evening, and some lowland areas reported some water already had overflowed its banks.

The residents will be asked to leave if rains continue through the night and today and the river reaches 11½ to 12 feet, Collins added.

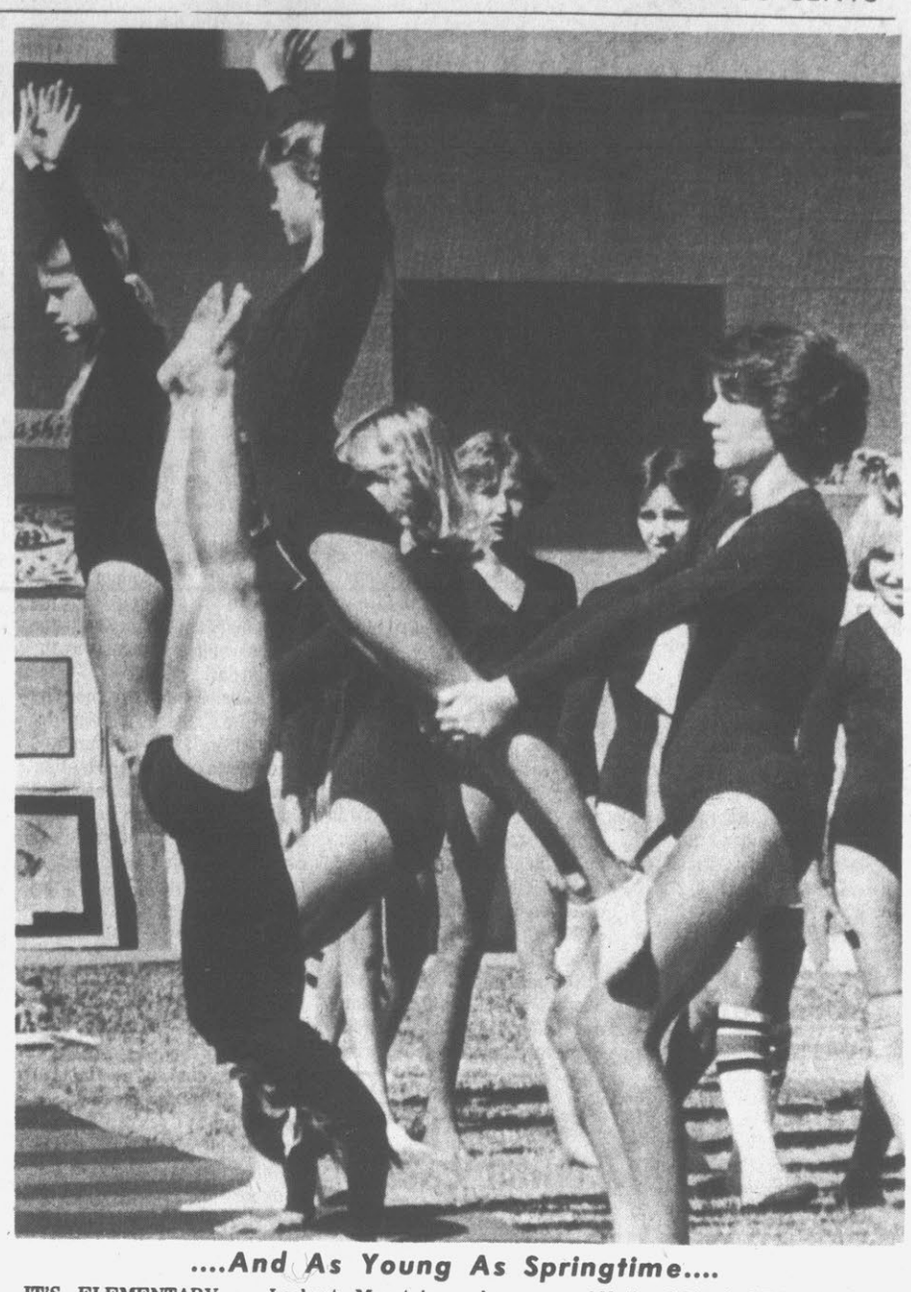

"When it gets up to that height, it comes up to the street. It goes down the main street," Collins said.

Only two inches of rain fell during a 12-hour period at Rosman, but heavier rains upriver swelled the French Broad, he said.

The Transylvania Sheriff's Department reported the Little River on the North Carolina South Carolina border was over its banks, but it had not threatened any homes so no orders for evacuation had been given.

The National Weather Service predicted rain would be ending across the western part of the state this morning but moving across the the eastern portions this afternoon. The skies were suppose to clear up by tonight

The showers and thundershowers occurred in warm, moist air ahead of a cloud front trailing southward from an intense low over the central United States.

Blizzard Hits Central Plains

By PATRICK J. KILLEN
United Press International

A blizzard howled across the Central Plains Saturday, burying towns, blocking passenger train service and stranding hundreds of travelers in five states.

Searchers found four bodies Saturday, three in Nebraska and one in Kansas, to raise the blizzard's toll of storm-related deaths to nine. In western Nebraska the bodies of two frozen men were found by a rancher in a stranded vehicle nine miles east of Gogdon and another dead man was located near Sidney.

An elderly man from Ohio was discovered dead in his car at the Interstate 70 interchange near Goodland, Kan. Five others were reported dead in Colorado Thursday and Friday.

As the blizzard swept eastward, hundreds had to make do without electricity in eastern Colorado, northwest Kansas and western Nebraska.

Eight National Guard helicopters and snowmobiles searched for more storm victims in Kansas where drifts were reported as high as houses.

Roads in portions of Nebraska, South Dakota and Wyoming also were blocked by snow. By midmorning, the National Weather Service said, the blizzard was slowly diminishing

Amtrak headquarters in Washington reported three passenger trains were stalled by snow drifts on tracks between western Nebraska and Denver.

A spokesman said the westbound San Francisco Zephyr which left Chicago Thursday was stranded in McCook, Neb., with 103 passengers marooned in train cars, another westbound Zephyr which left Chicago Friday was stopped in Lincoln, Neb., with 140 passengers put up in hotels and the eastbound Zephyr which left Oakland Thursday was stalled in Denver with 90 in hotels.

Efforts were expected to be made to turn two of the trains around, with passengers being taken to airports for onward transportation or given the option of returning to their departure points, the spokesman said.

He said winds of 60 to 70 mph had blown down "all our signal wires up to 100 miles eastward of Denver." This meant the train's computer safety service would not operate in affected areas, forcing engineers to receive "old fashioned signal orders handed them at each stop," and slowing service, he said

Winds gusting to more than 50 miles an hour piled up 10 foot drifts in hard hit western Nebraska. A 25-inch snowfall was reported in Mullen, Neb.

With visibility near zero and blowing snow, authorities closed Interstate 80, a major artery, west of Kearney, Neb. In Valentine, Neb., winds and more than a foot of snow left every street in town impassable. Only one cafe was reported open and the hotels were jammed with motorists

The National Guard sent seven helicopters to search for stranded motorists in a 60 by 120 miles stretch of northwest Kansas. "We've still got a lot of people stranded out on I-70 and the other highways," said Sherman County Sheriff Jack Armstrong. "We don't know how many."

Unscheduled Event

Carter Met With Byrd

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter, in an apparent bid to soothe growing tensions with Congress, Saturday had an unscheduled meeting with Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd who has been issuing warnings to the White House.

White House.

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell confirmed that the two men met "at the President's request.

When asked about the subject of the meeting, Powell broke into a wide grin and replied: "I just can't imagine."

Byrd, contacted by UPI shortly after the meeting, declined to discuss the session with Carter, saying "it was a personal visit."

A few hours before they met, Byrd publicly warned the administration against trying to lobby directly with senators for any strategic arms limitation areement it may reach with the Soviet Union.

"I would personally resist any effort to lobby me in connection with the treaty," he told reporters. "This is something I'm going to make up my own mind on."

Byrd also said Carter had "perhaps over-reacted" in suggesting that those opposed to the confirmation of Paul Warnke as chief U.S. arms negotiator were against any reduction in nuclear weapons.

Sources indicated the meeting between Carter and Byrd was an apparent attempt by the President to close a breach that has been developing between the White House and Congress.

The Senate Thursday defied president plans to kill 19 major water development projects and voted overwhelmingly to approve a bill that did not eliminate the projects.

At the time, Byrd said the 65-24 vote was a "clear signal" to the White House that Congress had to be consulted on subjects "which come within the responsibility of the legislative branch."

Byrd said the "signal" applied not only to the water projects but to the entire process of legislation.

Nine-Year-Old Diabetic Dislikes Saccharin Ban

THE SACCHARIN KID — Mike Schindler, 9, likes his sweets but, as a diabetic, must watch his sugar intake. Upon learning of the impending ban on saccharin, he and his mother, the executive secretary of the American Diabetes Association, went shopping and bought $85 worth of artificially sweetened foodstuffs. (AP Wirephoto)

KIRKLAND, Wash. (AP) — Nine-year-old Mike Schindler says he'd "like to punch the daylights" out of the Federal Drug Administration because of its proposal to ban saccharin, the last artificial sweetener on the market.

Like most children his age, Mike likes his sweets, but as a diabetic his intake of sugar must be restricted.

So, it was with no small measure of dismay that he and his mother, Eloise, learned Wednesday of the FDA proposal. The FDA said it would consider allowing diabetics and others who cannot eat sugar to buy saccharin as a prescription drug, but no final decision has been made.

"When I heard about it, I kind of said to myself, 'I'd like to punch the daylights out of them,'" Mike said Friday.

Ms. Schindler took her son shopping Wednesday night to stock up on sugar-less sweets.

They visited two supermarkets and two drugstores, spending $85 on diet soda, sugarless gum, sugarless jam, sugarless syrup, sugarless pudding, sugarless gelatin, sugarless cake mixes and saccharin powder.

The shopping spree was more than the family of four could afford, "but I'm going to go out and buy more," she said.

Mike says the proposed ban is going to take the fun out of his life.

"Like during the summer, I won't have saccharin to make Kool Aid or any soda pop," he said. "So I guess I'll have to drink water.

"I like water, but it ain't the same."

Mike said he and his mother are going to write Congress to complain.

"We've got to do something," he said. "I've gotten really used to it and there's nothing else I can get."

Ms. Schindler, executive secretary of the Washington state affiliate of the American Diabetes Association, said Thursday that her office was bombarded with calls indicating other diabetics felt the same way as Mike.

Dean Christopher Fordham

Approved By Carter For Federal Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Christopher Fordham, dean of the University of North Carolina medical school, been approved by President Carter to be assistant secretary of health, a White House aide said Friday.

The spokesman also said that former North Carolina Gov.Robert W. Scott is under consideration for one of two regional commissions.

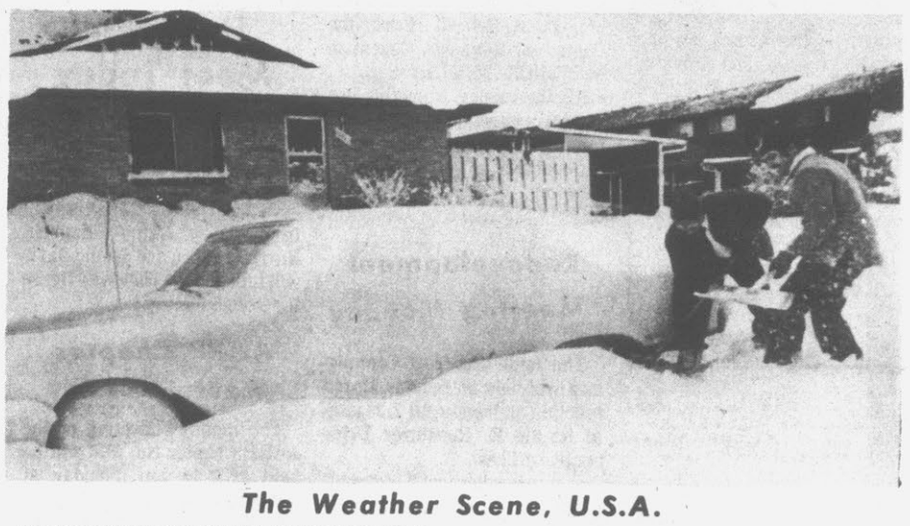

"There's no disagreement on Bob Scott anywhere," said the source.

Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., said this week that he was blocking Fordham's possible appointment as a form of protest to White House handling of appointments involving North Carolinians.

Morgan and others would like to see Scott appointed to the Appalachian Regional Commission. The administration source said it is "almost a certainty" that Scott will be named federal cochairman of either that commission or the Coastal Plains Regional Commission. Both posts carry $50,000 salaries.

"Dr. Fordham is one of the leading health administrators in our naton today," said Chancellor Ferebee Taylor. "As dean, he has presided over a substantial growth in the scope and stature of our school of medicine. He has also provided leadership in the development of our area health education center program, which has become a national model for extending health care and health education to all regions of our state."

The 50-year-old dean who is a native of Greensboro would be in effect the government's chief federal health affairs officer. His jurisdiction would include the National Institute of Health, the Public Health Service, the Center for Disease Control and the Food and Drug Administration.

Will Seek Indictments

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal prosecutors say they will seek felony murder indictments against the small band of Hanafi Moslems who held 134 hostages during a 38-hour siege that terrorized the nation's capital.

Four of the gunmen, including their leader, are free without bail. All 12 were charged with armed kidnapping Friday after they laid down their swords and rifles and released unharmed the hostages held at three locations since Wednesday.

Hamaas Abdul Khaalis, 55, the leader, returned to his heavily guarded home after a pre-dawn arraignment that was part of the deal he struck with authorities negotiating the surrender.

"It was only done to save human lives," said U.S. Atty. Earl Silbert.

The District of Columbia's liberal bail law won the release later of three more of the Moslems. The eight others were held in lieu of surety bonds of $50,000 to $75,000.

Recovers Bodies Of Dead Marines

COLUMBUS, N.C. (UPI) — Rescuers worked for eight hours in rain along muddy, slippery Sugar Loaf Mountain Saturday to retrieve the bodies of five marines killed when two helicopters crashed in southwestern North Carolina Friday.

Marine officials continued to withhold the names of the dead Marines pending notification of relatives. The body of one Marine was taken to St. Luke's Hospital in Columbus. The bodies of the other four were taken to Margaret Pardee Hospital in Hendersonville.

Three Marines injured in the crash were listed in satisfactory condition in St. Luke's Hospital. Two of the injured were reportedly 1st Lt. John Sitton and 1st Lt. Kenneth Smiley.

Robert Blankenship, head of the Rutheford County Rescue Squad, said a steady rain continued from the time rescuers started at 7:30 a.m. until the bodies were taken out at 3:30 P.M.

"It was rough up there," Blankenship said. "It rained the whole time."

A bulldozier cleared a half-mile road so workers could get to the body of one Marine. Rescuers, who came from surrounding rescue squads offices, volunteer fire departments and Marine bases, then walked down the road and took the body to an ambulance waiting three-quarters of a mile away, Blankenship said.

The other four bodies were were 300 feet down a sheer cliff off the top of the mountain, Blankenship said. Workers climbed down the mountain on ropes, put the bodies in baskets, tied ropes to the baskets and men at the top of the 2,300-foot mountain pulled the baskets up to awaiting ambulances.

The bodies of all five Marines were burned, Blankenship said.

The bodies of the four marines down the cliff were "fairly close together," he said.

Blankenship said he talked to one of the injured Marines Friday night.

"The pilot told me yesterday that they were just flying too low", Blankenship said. "I asked him if he could remember what happened and he said they were just flying too low and got into that fog and didn't pull up."

The injured were taken out Friday. Marines and rescue squad workers had attempted to bring the bodies of the dead out Friday night, but were hampered by the darkness, rain and treacherous terrain.

Blizzard ...

More than 150 motorists were holed up in the city auditorium in Kadoka, S.D., where an attendant at the Skelly truck stop reported three semis were overturned by fierce winds Friday night. A group of 72 skiers from Kansas City were stranded with another 150 travelers at a restaurantbowling alley in Burlington, Colo., near the Kansas line.

Central Colorado and Wyoming began to dig out from the blizzard which first struck Thursday with winds up to 90 m.p.h. Travelers waited for snow plows to open roads near Cheyene and Laramie where travelers and fans attending the state high school basketball tournament were forced to put up in dormitories at the University of Wyoming.

Colorado authorities said three members of a Greeley family were killed when their car went off an icy road and overturned in Weld County during Thursday's blizzard conditions. Two others were found dead on Colorado 24, east of Colorado Springs, Friday.

Guardian For Rita

SANTA ANA, Calif. (UPI) — Actress Rita Hayworth, allegedly "gravely disabled" by either a mental disorder or chronic alcoholism, has been given a temporary conservator to manage her estate pending a court decision on whether a permanent guardian should be named.

Superior Court Judge Claude Owens appointed the conservator Friday and set April 1 for a hearing on whether the estate and care of the 58-year-old former movie queen should be placed under permanent guardianship.

Miss Hayworth, a favorite pinup girl among World War II GIs, has been under treatment at Hoag Memorial Hospital in Newport Beach.

The petition asking for her guardianship was filed by the Orange County Counsel's office and was based on supporting statements by the hospital and a physician, Dr. James Miner.

Miner said Miss Hayworth is "gravely disabled as a result of disorder or impairment by chronic alcoholism" and is "now unable or willing to accept responsibility for her treatment."

The judge appointed James E. Heim of the county counsel's office as temporary conservator of the estate pending a final ruling in April, which will be made by Superior Court Judge Bruce Sumner.

She said in a interview she was not upset by growing older. "Everybody gets older...you don't have to be beautiful and gorgeous all the time. I feel better now than I ever have."

She was hospitalized several days later.

Miss Hayworth, a sultry movie queen who played the role of the willfull redhead in "Gilda," and starred in such films as "Lady from Shanghai" and "Miss Sadie Thompson," was married five times.

Her husbands included the wealthy Moslem prince Aly Khan and actor-director Orson Welles. She had a daughter by each of them, actress Rebecca Welles and New York Socialite Yasmin Khan.

Mrs. Smith's body was turned over to the state medical examiner's office for an autopsy.

Mrs. Smith's husband reported her missing Thursday. Two 13-year-old boys told authorities they had seen her talking to Perry Thursday afternoon. Perry was picked up by authorities but released.

Perry was picked up again and charged after the body of Mrs. Smith, a student at North Carolina Central University, was found.

BOSTON (AP) — E. Power Biggs, 71, internationally known organist who appeared with the Boston Symphony and Philadelphia orchestras and produced numerous recordings of classical pipe organ music, died Thursday, it was announced Friday.

More than 50 of his recordings are listed in the current Schwann catalogue, a standard reference of records and tapes.

He performed and recorded more than any other leading organist. Between 1942 and 1958 he had a popular weekly solo program, originating at the Busch Reisinger Museum in Cambridge, that was broadcast over the CBS radio network and by shortwave to Europe.

He gave concert tours around the world and gave recitals in many historic cathedrals in Europe, and many of his recordings featured the old cathedral instruments.

He is survived by his widow, Margaret.

The Hanafi Muslim Siege --- Vengence And Terror

STANDING READY — A Roman policeman gestures to riot police as they await direction in Rome's Piazza Venezia Saturday during demonstrations attended by thousands in Italy's capital city. Students in Italian cities from Milan to Palermo marched to protest the killing Friday of a leftist student leader in Bologna. (AP Wirephoto)

Editors's note: For 39 hours last week a dozen Hanafi Muslim gunmen held 134 hostages captive in three Washington buildings. This is the story of their siege, their demands, the wait, the negotiations and the emd of the terror.

By CLAY F. RICHARDS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The siege in the nation's capital began with violence, bloodshed and death at the lunch hour. It ended 39 hours later, peacefully, in the dark of night.

On Wednesday, at about 11 a.m., there was a warm, lazy touch of spring in the air when the U-Haul truck pulled up in an alley behind B'nai B'rith international headquarters in midtown.

Leader of the seven raiders was Hamaas Abdul Khaalis, 54. Later, it would be learned he heads Washington's Hanafi Muslim community, and lost four children and a wife in a 1973 mass murder carried out by rival Black Muslims in 1973.

Witnesses recall the gunmen moved swiftly from floor to floor, screaming anti-Semitic curses and collecting hostages from among the estimated 150 persons in the building. The lucky ones locked themselves in their offices and escaped later.

Five people were wounded in the opening moments of the raid: One by gunfire the others pistol whipped or cut by knife or machete.

As police and ambulances rushed toward that, three other gunmen entered the office of the Islamic Center 1 block away on the strip of Massachussetts Avenue known as "Embassy Row." It was 2:45 p.m.

The center includes the only Moslem mosque in North America. Abdel Rahman Osman, the assistant director, looked up into the face of one of his former students. The protege was holding a gun.

The takeover there was swift and bloodless. Twelve hostages were rounded up, including Osman and Mohammad Abdul Rauf, director of the mosque.

At 2:20 p.m. two more gunmen entered the large, stone District Building on Pennsylvania Avenue three blocks from the White House. It is Washington's city hall.

They went to the fifth floor, bound for the office of Mayor Walter Washington. But they turned the wrong way getting off the elevator and ended up in the office of City Council President Sterling Tucker, who was away at a funeral.

"Looks like we made the wrong turn," one of the gunmen said.

Then all hell broke loose.

No one is sure who fired first, or why, but gunfire flashed between guards and the raiders.

Maurice Williams, novice radio reporter for Howard University station WHUR had just returned from lunch and stepped out of the elevator. A shotgun blast flattened him.

"I've been hit," he said. He died there on the floor — the only fatality of the two-day siege.

Councilman Marion Barry heard two shots, including the one that hit Williams. "Then I heard a third, and I realized I'd been hit," he said later.

Barry was incredibly lucky. The bullet scored a bullseye over his heart, but it had ricocheted off something—or someone—and did not penetrate the ribs. He is in good condition.

Later, the gunmen learned they had shot Barry.

"Oh, good, we did, get who we wanted to get," a hostage quoted one as saying.

By 3 p.m. - about four hours after it all started—the most serious violence was over. There could be many angry and violent words; some hostages would be manhandled; but no serious violence would come to the nearly 150 people held at the outset by the Hanafis.

But the toll was still heavy: One dead, nine wounded, a security guard and a law student in critical condition.

Police moved in by the hundreds. Block after block of the nation's capital was sealed off. Traffic backed up on main commuter arteries. And no one yet knew why it had happened.

For no one then knew the raiders were Hanafis, with vengeance on their minds and rage in their hearts, under the command of Khaalis—a former jazz drummer and social worker born Ernest McGhee in Gary, Ind.

The Hanafis, part of the strict, orthodox Sunni Muslim sect, have their headquarters in a Northwest Washington mansion given them by basketball superstar Kareem AbdulJabbar, himself a Hanafi.

They broke away from the Black Muslims in a dispute over interpretation of their religion. There are said to be about 1,000 Hanafis. The word translates, roughly, as "puritan."

In 1973, Black Muslims from Philadelphia broke into the Hanafi Washington mansion while Khaalis was out grocery shopping. When he returned he found seven loved ones dead—including one of his wives and four of his children.

His 9-day old son had been drowned in a bathtub.

Seven men were arrested. Five were sentenced to 140 years each. One was murdered in jail. The seventh was acquitted of the murder charges but sentenced to a long term for other crimes.

The Hanafi mansion became a fortress. Neighbors along Washington's Gold Coast—as the wealthy black neighborhood is called—noticed Hanafis outside drilling with machetes.

Now Khaalis and 11 followers were holding 134 hostages—after releasing some of the intial group for various reasons —with those machetes and with guns.

—The killers of his family were to be "delivered for justice" to the B'nai B'rith building. "They killed my babies," he moaned. (Later he also demanded an appearance by heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali and Wallace Muhammad, spiritual leader of the Black Muslims. They were supposed to confess their sect is infidel.)

—The movie "Mohammad, Messenger of God," which had just opened in New York and elsewhere was to be "taken out of the country." Khaalis called it a blasphemous "fairy tale." (Theater operators cut the film off immediately and resumed it after the siege ended).

—A judge was to return the $750 he fined Khaalis for a contempt-of-court outburst during the Hanafi murder trial. (The money was delivered).

Bernard Simon, sitting in the B'ni B'rith building with his hands tied behind his back and his shirt stained with another man's blood, took the threat seriously.

"They came up and unbound our hands," Simon said, rubbing his rope-burned wrists later. "They picked eight of us and said we'd be the first to be beheaded because we were the 'old men.'

"We were alternately threatened with a scimitar and beheading."

It was more peaceful at the Islamic Center. The former student, his teacher and the others discussed religion heatedly. There were no threats.

At City Hall, the gunmen fired random shots throughout the first afternoon. Police did not return them.

Negotiations began by telephone. Mayor Washington and his police were in charge, but President Carter's representatives watched closely.

And, in a crucial move, the ambassadors of Islamic Egypt, Pakistan and Iran were included from the start.

Reporters flocked to the siege sites. Television lights burned through the night. Reporters called it a "stalemate" and a "standoff."

Police at the three occupation sites were given heavier handheld firearms. But there was no counterattack.

Meanwhile: At the Islamic Center, religious debate alternated with prayers. At City Hall, quiet fear prevaileb. At B'nai B'rith, Khaalis spat antiSemitic curses at the hostages.

Some said later they were beaten, though none seriously.

Sometimes it just got boring.

Mimi Feldman, 60, had some dinner steaks thawing at home. "Sometimes I caught myself worrying about whether they'd spoil if we were in here over the weekend,"

Thursday morning the Army prepared to fire a 19-gun salute to visiting British Prime Minister James Callaghan. But Carter thought the noise might startle the City Hall gunmen and and cancelled the salute.

Wallace Muhammad, the Black Muslim leader, came to town offering to do what he could to help spare the hostages. Local officials apparently ignored him.

About a dozen hostages were released for medical treatment. Police sent food and medicine into the occupied buildings for the rest.

Iran's Ambassador Ardeshir Zahedi suggested a face-to-face meeting with Khaalis. The other ambassadors and Police Chief Maurice Cullinane reportedly told him he was crazy. But telephone negotiations were getting nowhere.

Khaalis accepted.

They met about 8 p.m. Thursday on neutral ground— the lobby of the B'nai B'brith building. Khaalis was ranting, tense, hostile.

The negotiators persevered patiently and won a promise: The hostages would not be harmed so long as negotiations continued. A conference table would be set up in an inner room.

With Zahedi were Ambassadors Sahabzada Yaqub-Khan of Pakistan and Ashraf Ghorbal of Egypt, plus Cullinane and police Capt. Joseph O'Brien.

Khaalis asked immunity for the 12 terrorists. Cullinane said he rejected that.

Then Khaalis' demeanor changed.

"We found out he is not the person we have heard" Zahedi said. "He is a very warm human being. He has a great kind of love for the feeling toward the God Allah. He is worried the hostages are not comfortable."

The Ambassador read him poetry and passages from the holy book of Islam, the Koran: Calls to mercy and compassion.

The ambassador said the most important thing they achieved was to convince Khalie his demand for delivery of his enemies could not be fulfilled.

When the talks ended about 11 p.m., Khaalis embraced the departing envoys. But there had been no agreement to end Cullinane later phoned Khaalis. What was said is not known to the public, but this talk produced the conclusive agreement. The key element: Khaalis could go free without bail until he is indicted for trial on armed kidnaping—and, possibly, murder—charges.

At 1:45 a.m. Friday, an elated Mayor Washington announced the siege was over.

Italian Students Stage Protest

By ROBIN STAFFORD

ROME (UPI) — At least eight policemen were hit by gunfire Saturday night as they battled 35,000 rampaging students in Rome and more rioting broke out in Bologna after Friday's police slaying of a leftist student.

The gunfire broke out around a protest parade through the heart of the eternal city during which the students tried to attack the Chilean embassy to the Holy See and damaged the sales offices of Ford, Fiat and Gulf Oil.

Police fired cannister after cannister of tear gas into the crowds. The students responded with firebombs and rocks.

Police fought off attacks on the Chilean embassy and the Christian Democratic newspaper "Il Popolo," but the students set fire to several cars and a bar frequented by leftists, smashed shop windows and looted at least one gunshop.

Rioters shattered a police car windshield with two shotgun blasts and there was shooting by both sides when the students tried to burst into the Christian Democratic party headquarters and the Ministry of Justice building.

News Briefs

Notice Of Immunity Filed

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Allen Ray Hall, who has recanted his testimony against the "Wilmington 10," has been promised that his testimony before a federal grand jury will not be used against him in future prosecution.

U.S. District Judge John Larkins filed a notice of immunity from prosecution for Hall, who testified before a federal grand jury looking into the case of the 10 civil rights workers Tuesday.

Pakistani Demonstrations

LAHORE, Pakistan (AP) — The opposition Pakistan National Alliance said today it will begin staging nationwide demonstrations Monday unless the government heeds its call to resign and schedule new general elections.

Violence broke out during a general strike the PNA called Friday to protest what it says was Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto's rigging of last Monday's general election, in which his ruling Pakistan People's party won a two-thirds majority in parliament.

Sources said rival political groups fought a gun battle and a mob burned two freight cars in the city of Karachi. Authorities would not confirm the violence.

Sunshine Law In Effect

WASHINGTON (AP) — Starting today, most government regulatory agencies and scores of other federal boards and commissions are required to admit the public to meetings at which decisions are made.

But the chief congressional author of the so-called "government in the sunshine law" claims some agencies are already trying to circumvent the act.

"Some are clearly trying to find a way around the law," Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., said Friday in an interview.

The legislation that took effect today requires some 46 government agencies to open their business meetings to the public. Most have traditionally conducted business behind closed doors, Chiles said.

TVA May Raise Rates

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP)— Tennessee Valley Authority officials, faced with a possible loss of $28.9 million, have indicated the agency may have to raise basic electric rates for the first time in two years.

The unusually cold winter is resulting in $24 million in unexpected maintenance costs for TVA generating plants, Godwin Williams, TVA power manager, told the government utility's board of directors Friday.

Zaire Gives Warning

KINSHASA, Zaire (UPI) — Zaire warned Saturday it would use "extreme methods" to repel a four-day-old invasion by troops operating from Angola and scoffed at claims that the invasion was a popular uprising in the former province of Katanga.

U.S. Embassy officials in Kinshasa said plans were under way to evacuate 8 of the 25 U.S. citizens working in the copperrich province in the south of the former Belgian Congo where the violence is centered but gave no details.

Eight American missionaries remained under house arrest in one town overrun and occupied by the invading force but were being well treated, an embassy spokesman said.

Press Restriction Bill

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — A government bill to restrict press freedom in South Africa would give journalists fewer rights than "murders and rapists," the South African Society of Journalists said Saturday.

The group added its voice to growing criticism of the proposal to set up a press code and a press council to enforce it and providing for imprisonment, fines and closure of publications for violations of selfcensorship. The bill gained easy initial approval in parliament Friday.

Carter Talks To Mission

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A U.S. delegation will visit Laos as well as Vietnam to seek information about 2,550 Americans missing in Southeast Asia, it was announced Saturday, but President Carter warned against raising hopes too high.

The President met with the five-member commission for 45 minutes on the eve of its scheduled Sunday departure, and said he was hopeful the mission to Hanoi would "lead to a complete normalization of relations" between the United States and Vietnam.

Later, both he and auto union leader Leonard Woodcock, who is heading the delegation, cautioned against over-optimism about a complete accounting of MIAs.

Sadat Criticizes Carter Plan

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — President Anwar Sadat Saturday criticized President Carter's Middle East compromise as unacceptable at the opening of the first meeting in three years of the Palestinian "parliament-inexile." He also urged PLO leaders to be more flexible.

"It is not acceptable that some people should talk again of secure borders, which is part of a discredited Israeli theory," Sadat told the 291-member Palestine National Council.

Firebomb Kills 7

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (UPI) — Three men angry at a tenant firebombed an apartment building, turning the structure into a blazing funeral pyre for seven persons, five of them children, police said Saturday.

Thirteen persons were injured in the blaze and 63 were left homeless.

Police arrested Luis Berrios, 20, on murder and arson charges. Police said Berrios and two other men, who remained at large, tossed the firebombs into the building at about 10:30 p.m. Friday because of an argument with a tenant.

One of the dead children was identified as 10-year-old John Jackson, whose mother Beatrice, 33, was reported in guarded condition at the intensive care unit of a local hospital.

The body of an unidentified woman was recovered from the building Friday night and the bodies of four unidentified young children and an unidentified adult were found

N.C. Orchestra Debut Termed 'Quite An Event'

NEW YORK (AP) — The North Carolina Symphony played in Carnegie Hall Wednesdday night and one reviewer said it was "quite an event."

Raymond Erickson, writing in the New York Times, said in Saturday's editions that the symphony drew a virtually capacity audience.

"The orchestra was making a visit to celebrate its ascendance from a community ensemble in 1932 to a 'major' symphony with a budget of $1.6 million. It is under the direction of John Gosling, who has headed it since 1972, and he had chosen a more enterprising program than New Yorkers often get from outside groups . . ."

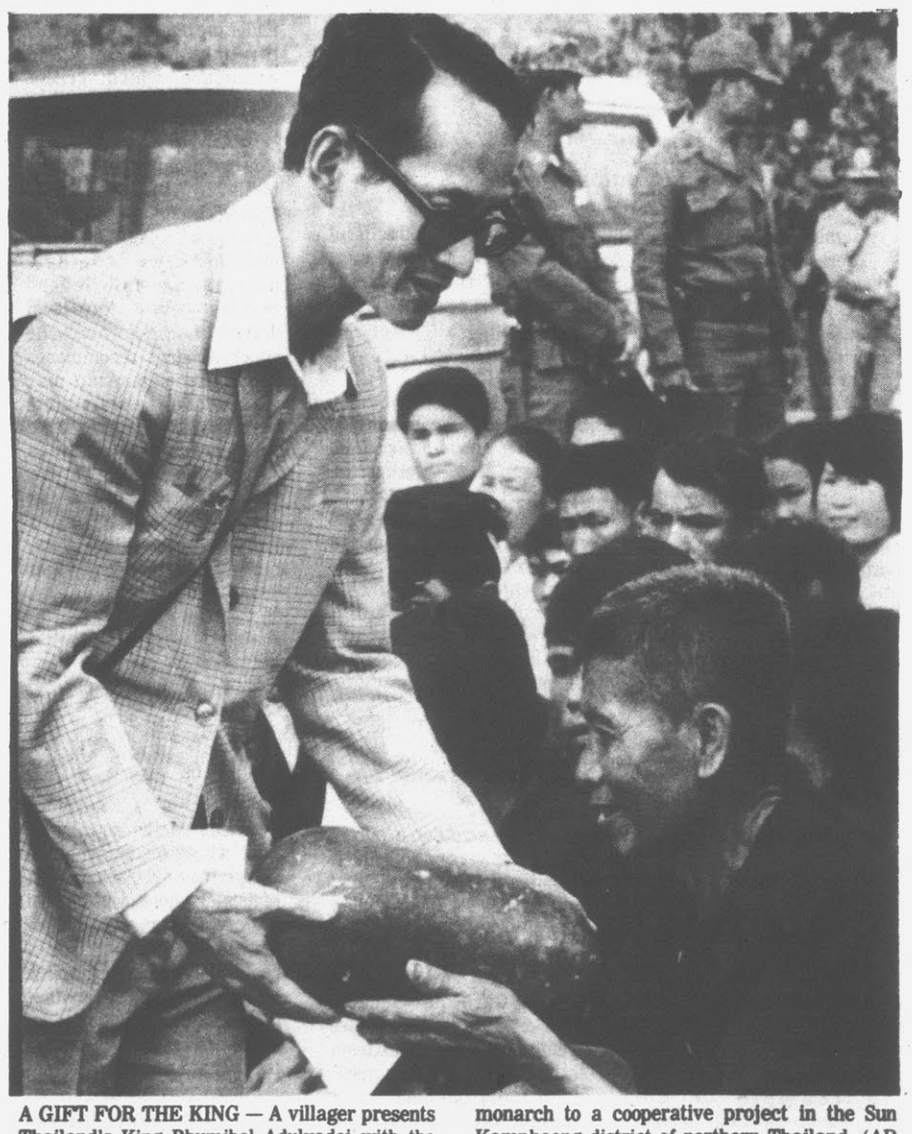

Erickson wrote that considering the symphony's "new status, it was not surprising that the orchestra was so smartly disciplined. The playing sounded as if every phrase had been honed to the finest degree."

The review continued: "There was a precise clarity to everything. This was particularly evident in 'Petrouchka,' which was played in the 1947 version. The highly colored instrumental detail could not have been more sharply etched."

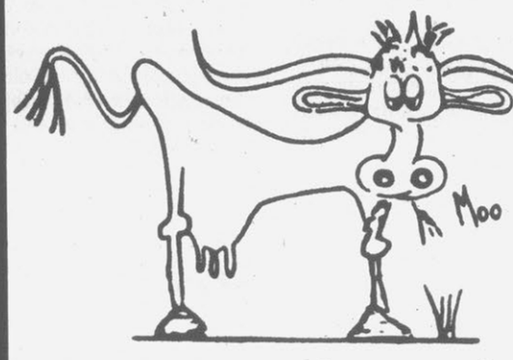

Erickson noted that at the start of the "Carnival Overture," the symphony was "squashed at the front of the stage" to make room for the "Stabat Mater" chorus, and as a result the brass dominated the strings "more than they should have."

This was remedied later, of course, Erickson wrote, and he added, ". . . the playing was in the predominantly American mold of bright precision, without the fullness and mellowness of tone that marks the top orchestra."

Of the conductor, Erickson wrote that Gosling "achieved some admirable soft effects from the first—rate chorus of approximately 200, as well as the orchestra."

If We Need It, Now's The Time

It has been ten years since planning for a new Pitt Memorial Hospital was begun.

County officials, realizing something would have to be done to keep the hospital accredited, had to decide between attempting to expand and improve the old hospital, and building a new one.

Costs analysis showed that renovating and expanding the old hospital would be almost as costly as constructing a new one. Besides the old hospital stood on around 17 acres of land which left little room for expansion.

Thus it was decided that a 100 acre tract would be purchased west of the old hospital site to be used for an entirely new hospital plant. That was certainly a fateful and far sighted decision by the county commissioners.

The tract of land seemed entirely adequate for what was planned and future growth. But after the hospital got under construction a decision was made which would change the institution's mission in a way undreamed of ten years ago.

The ECU Medical School was approved as a full four year medical school and it was decided that Pitt Memorial Hospital would be the primary clinical facility for the medical school. Almost instantly new construction was planned for the hospital and around 40 acres was sold to the state to accommodate the $25 million medical sciences building which will soon be constructed alongside the hospital.

That sets us wondering if the state and county have enough land to handle the foreseeable growth of what will likely be a great medical center before the end of the century.

Shouldn't the county and the state be looking to purchase additional acreage in the immediate area?

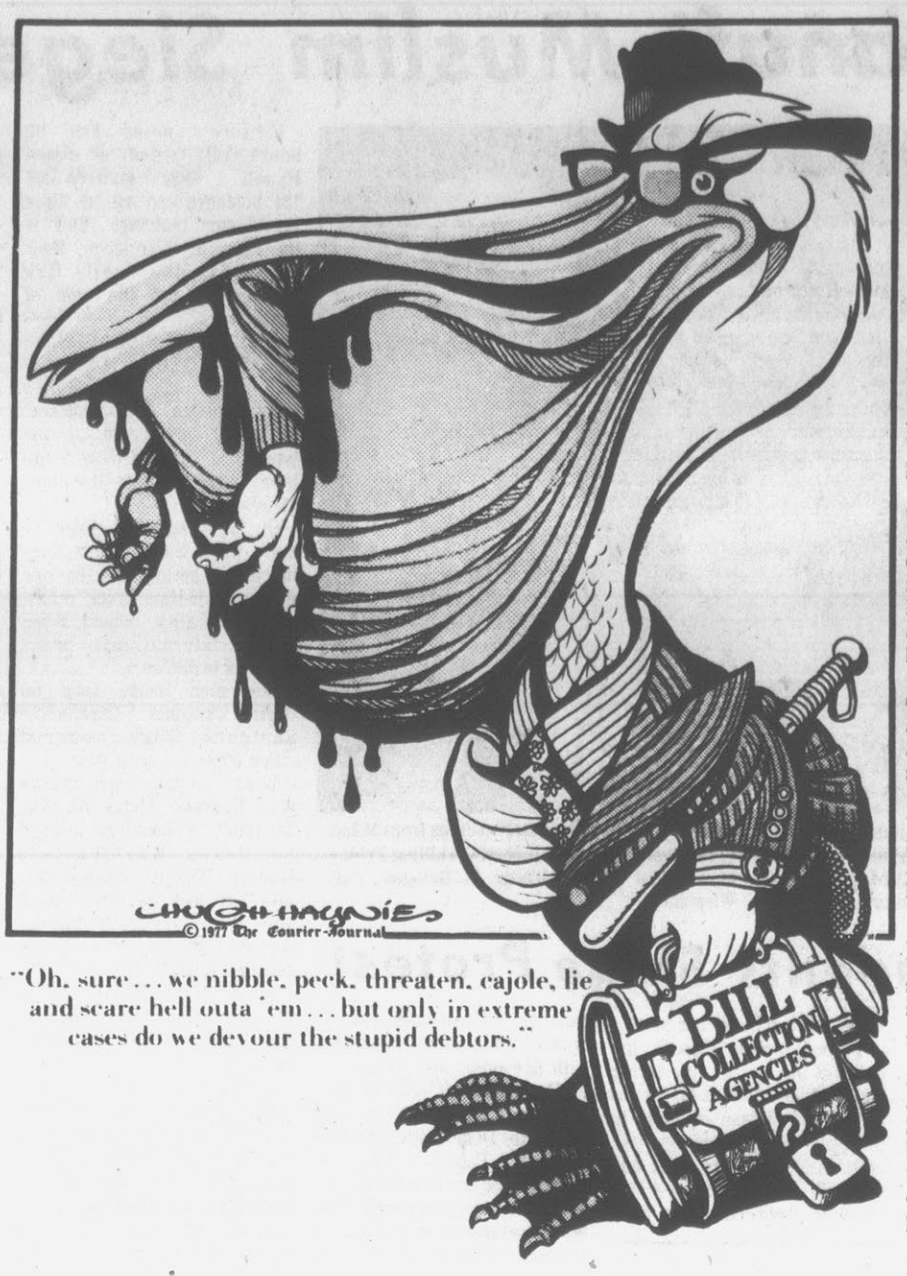

If we need it, now is the time to get it before the area around the medical complex develops and the hospital is once again boxed in.

If There's Evidence, It Needs Hearing

The House Assassination Committee has been told by Chief Counsel Richard A. Sprague he has evidence, though uncorroborated, that others may have had knowledge or participated in the Martin Luther King assassination.

There was also evidence of prior knowledge on the part of some individuals of the John F. Kennedy assassination, he said.

If Chief Counsel Sprague can produce such evidence there is no question that the committee should proceed with its investigation of these two national tragedies.

"Oh, sure . . . we nibble, peck, threaten, cajole, lie and scare hell outa 'em . . . but only in extreme cases do we devour the stupid debtors."

THIS AFTERNOON

Lunch Break For Teachers

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — A classroom teacher in North Carolina's public schools is never free from the responsibility of supervising children the entire work day—they need a mid-day break, says State Rep. A. Hartwell Campbell, D-Wilson.

Campbell proposed in a recent committee meeting at the General Assembly that state law provide for teachers to have a "duty free lunch period of 30 minutes each day."

The idea immediately ran into opposition—not so much objection to the proposal, but resistance to a statelaw requiring the 145 local school systems to comply.

There is a growing tendency of local school boards to resist state mandates, arguing for more local flexibility and control.

But how else besides state mandate can you provide teacher's with such things as 30-minute lunchbreaks, Campbell wonders.

He intends to bring the matter up for further discussion at a later time—after comparing notes with the statewide School Boards Association and the educators' professional organizations.

Campbell thinks such things as mid-day breaks and other recognitions of concern for teachers are needed to ward off growing militancy within the ranks of the North Carolina Association of Educators.

BILL NOBLITT

"We have got to do some of these things, unless we want to open the door for professional negotiations—bargaining—with teacher unions," Campbell said.

Teacher Tenure

The legislative committee rewriting public school laws has completed its work on the final part of that proposal to reorganize the state's school system. The final hangup was teacher tenure which at one point most of the committee favored abolishing, but ran into a buzz-saw of opposition from educators.

Tenure presently provides for regular evaluation of teachers by their supervisors, and protection as professional teachers after three years of successful employment. Disciplinary action or removal is possible under the tenure law, but only through a complicated procedure which critics contend gives undue protection to teachers.

A compromise solution put forth by the committee chaired by State Senator Ed Renfrow, D-Johnston, provides two alternate courses: a full-fledged hearing before the local school board when the superintendent recommends action; or either side may choose to go before a state hearing officer. The recommendation would be binding, but could be appealed to court. This would simplify the process somewhat, but still leave the system open to charges that principals and superintendents are hamstrung in dealing with classroom teachers.

No Contest

Was the State Senate vote rejecting the Equal Rights Amendment a measure of the strength of Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr., since he had tried to influence the outcome?

Some observers feel it was, but the governor says not so. It was mainly influenced by some senators who are with him on his program, but had already committed themselves to local supporters on ERA, Hunt says.

"Many have told me they felt badly that they could not go with me on this issue, but gave strong commitments to support me now that this is finished," Hunt commented.

He is nailing down that support even more firmly by enlisting key legislators to actually help write some of his measures and introduce them, thereby committing them to work hard for adoption.

A package of more than a dozen legislative proposals are expected in the coming week.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Ruffled By ERA Lobbying

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

RALEIGH, N.C. — The day before the majority leader of the North Carolina state senate switched positions and opposed the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA), he was surprised to receive a telephone call from Rosalynn Carter urging his support — an example of unprecedented, and unsuccessful, White House intervention.

The majority leader, state Sen. John Henley, was not at all upset by the First Lady's call ("She was a perfect lady, of course," he told us). But he and other anti-ERA Democrats are puzzled why President Carter risked his prestige by intervening in what they consider a purely state matter. "North Carolina is Carter country, but maybe less so today than it was before," said one annoyed Senator.

Despite ERA's defeat in the North Carolina Senate, however, Mr. Carter is not giving up on approval from three additional states needed to ratify the amendment banning sex discrimination. To do so would invite massive retaliation from organized women's groups. Indeed, two days after the North Carolina defeat, representatives of the National Organization of Women (NOW) descended on the White House to complain that President Carter had not tried hard enough.

ERA typifies conflicting demands on the new President within his broad-based constituency. Anti-ERA legislators here who backed Jimmy Carter as a fellow Southerner advocating a reduced bureaucracy and a balanced budget cannot understand his intense involvement with a question they regard as irrelevant.

Their perception of irrelevance helps explain ERA's defeat here. Since legislators could not see that passage or defeat made any real difference, they were open to lobbying pressure. The anti-ERA lobby clearly applied greater pressure.

So, perplexity reigns at the legislature that so shrewd a politician could choose ERA as the first constitutional amendment where the White House has ever intervened in state ratification. Apart from phone calls by Mr. and Mrs. Carter, a White House aide — Dr. Mark Siegel, former executive director of the Democratic National Committee — has been devoting nearly full time to ERA ratification.

The consensus here is that the White House neither won nor lost a vote. But several Senators called by either the President or the First Lady grumbled privately this was none of their business. Others had more specific grievances. State Sen. Marshall Rauch, who opposed the amendment, was called not only by Mr. Carter but by White House counsel Robert Lipshutz — causing Rauch to complain to a colleague that the White House was using a Jewish aide to lobby a Jewish Senator.

However, the White House intervention may have energized aggressive support for ERA by newly elected Gov. Jim Hunt. Although Hunt denies it, there is widespread feeling that he backed up his pro-ERA position with lobbying in the legislature mainly because of Mr. Carter's activism.

NAVIGATING THE CHANNEL

Ambrose Channel runs from the center of New York harbor out through the Narrows into the Atlantic Ocean. In the old days it was always hard for pilots to keep in the center of the channel, and often they veered to the right or left and went aground.

Then in recent times a cable was laid down the center of the channel which broadcast electronic impulses. The special receiving equipment aboard ships picked up these impulses and so enabled the pilots to keep the ships on the correct course.

The Bible performs much the same function in our lives as does this cable in the navigation of ships.

It is constantly sending signals to us indicating what we must do to keep going in the direction God wills for us. Our reason, informed by the Holy Spirit, is the receiving equipment with which we pick up these impulses. People often try to guide themselves through life by their own devices; but like the mariners of former days in New York Harbor, they often end up aground.

Brown Seeks Reality

By DOUG WILLIS
Associated Press Writer

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Shortly after midnight on a recent Sunday morning, California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. hopped out of a police patrol car and watched as officers performed a routine car check.

A weekend earlier, Brown — unescorted and unannounced in advance — spent the night in a decaying San Francisco tenement building called "The Pink Palace," talking with tenants and exploring the neighborhoods in his denims.

He spent six hours last Christmas Day visiting patients and talking with staff workers at a ward of one of California's state mental hospitals.

Brown spent a day a few weekends later, again unannounced, with the community advisory board at another state hospital.

These unconventional trips are all part of a process which the 38-year-old Democrat describes as gathering "uncensored" data on social problems and government programs.

Brown says he gets a more accurate view of how things are working, "or, very often, how they are not working," by bypassing the bureaucracy and the advocates of special interests and going directly to people.

"I intend to continue it, yes," Brown said of his weekend excursions after spending half of the graveyard shift in a Santa Ana police patrol car.

"I find it a very useful tool to separate the rhetoric from the reality," Brown said. "Too much of government is paper and collecting money. A lot more of it should be finding out

Sunday Morning Notes

She interviewed the younger Carter brother, who is gaining a sort of fame in his own right, and then moved aside to talk to some other people who travel with Billy.

One of them was Bud Duval, who is a life long friend of the Carters and has been travelling with Billy.

"Here," Duval said, pulling a can of beer from one of his coat pockets. "Take this over to Billy. He's probably getting thirsty by now."

Susan took the can and carried it to Billy who promptly popped it open and took a swallow. As she handed the beer to him she heard still cameras clicking and movie cameras whirring.

She came back, wrote her story and forgot the incident until a neighbor called about a week later.

"Did you know your picture

"No!" Susan exclaimed

"It's true," the neighbor said. "I just got my copy in the mail."

As she hung up Susan recalled with horror all the cameras clicking and whirring as she handed Billy Carter that beer. Could that be the picture that the national magazine had printed?

She rushed over to the neighbor's house and found to her relief that the beer passing photo wasn't the one used.

Rather there was a very good photo of Susan, Georgette Hedrick of WNCT-TV and an Ahoskie newsman interviewing Billy Carter. In fact, the beer, that Billy has become famous for, wasn't even in sight.

He had it when he left the area, however, and it was delivered to him by our own Susan Quinn.

A waitress told a customer he was a "good boy."

"Who you calling a 'boy'?" the customer asked jokingly.

"I would've said 'toy' but I didn't want to sound suggestive," the waitress came back.

State legislators who favor liquor-by-the-drink legislation are approaching the issue very gingerly this year. It's a good thing. The General Assembly has had two recent outings on mixed drinks. One of those proposals was declared unconstitutional. The other had the pants beaten off it in a statewide referendum.

This year the job of drawing up acceptable liquor legislation has been delegated to an informal committee consisting of representatives from 10 counties, including Guilford, where sentiment for such legislation exists. For the past month the committee has been polling other legislators to test the level of support for a liquor-by-the-drink proposal, and to determine which specific provisions have the best chance of passage.

So far the response has not exactly been overwhelming. An early sounding showed 70 House members and 25 senators who had an interest in such legislation. But a later poll indicated some of that support had evaporated. Only 55 House members and 16 senators even bothered to respond.

This week, in a final effort, the commitee has circulated a proposed draft of liquor legislation to all 170 House and Senate members. The legislation wisely reflects the lessons of past liquor-by-the-drink wars. Before sales could be approved in any county or city where ABC sales are permitted, a local referendum would be required. If approved by voters, mixed drink sales would be allowed only in grade A restaurants with more than 36 seats or in private clubs. Brown-bagging would still be permitted, but restaurants could not have both mixed drinks and brown-bagging.

A limited bill of this kind has much to offer. Liquor sales would be carefully restricted, and only the 44 counties and 78 municipalities which have ABC systems would be eligible.

Rep. Marcus Short of Guilford, a member of the committee which drafted the bill, says it won't be introduced unless substantial support for the measure emerges. That makes good sense. After the ERA battle, the General Assembly can hardly afford another knock-down fight over the virtues and vices of Demon Rum.

40 Years Ago Today

March 13, 1937

Industrial union enthusiasts counted one big gain in the automotive industry today and pressed campaigns in other fields.

Final agreement in the General Motors strike, affecting 135,000 employees, brought wage, hour and other concessions to an affiliate of the C.I.O. but did not achieve the national minimum hourly wage nor 30 hour per week goals. Ratification by union locals was withheld temporarily.

Meanwhile, the Chrysler Motor Corporation's dispute with union leaders, major sore spot in the nation's strike-pitted industrial world, approached a show-down today.

Sixty thousand idle workers were involved in the corporation's projected injunctive proceedings aimed at removal of 5,000 strikers who have held its eight Detroit plants for a week.

Dr. Elihu Thomson, 83, of the General Electric Company, inventor of electric arc welding and contemporary of the late Thomas Edison, died today at his home. He had been seriously ill since January.

The famous inventor received his first patent on electric welding in 1886. Last fall engineers gathered in Detroit and Lynn to celebrate the 50th anniversary of his discovery of electric arc welding.

Post-Winter Worries Persist

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — It would be charitable to pardon the economic and business analysts for getting a bit depressed during the long hard winter, but now that winter is ebbing, shouldn't the mood also?

The snow and ice have almost disappeared from much of the area that was frozen since last December. But what happens? Worries intesify about the big drought.

The drought is serious, to be sure, encompassing huge areas of the Plains and the West, threatening the profitability and even the existence of agricultural and other businesses in those areas.

But, the weather pattern that dried the West and deluged the East has broken down. Rain has fallen along the Pacific Coast. Snow has fallen in the Cascades and Rockies and Sierras. Ski resorts are back in business.

Of equal significance, the floods didn't come to the East, even though temperatures over much of the area have been above normal during the past two weeks by about the same number of degrees they were below normal for two months.

There were a lot of layoffs during the big freeze, but now we recognize that most of them were for brief duration and that industry actually continued to add to its payrolls.

Employment counts are always difficult to interpret. Is the water glass half full or half empty, is the sky partly clear or partly cloudy? Do we emphasize the number of people without jobs or the number with them? We might note that the government found in its January and early February survey that capital spending plans of business failed to grow. But, considering the weather, we can also note they failed to decline much.

There are some remarkable and partially unexplainable phenomena to be noted when one puts away the midwinter blinders and looks through the rosey glasses of spring. How do you explain the boom in single-family housing?

You've heard the warnings: the price of housing has risen too fast for young people to afford; interest rates are too high; values are poor because of scrimping by financially pressed builders.

Even though the price of a new single-family dwelling is expected to reach $50,000 by the end of the year, the industry expects to build 1.3 million of them, a record, or at least close to it.

In addition, the National Association of Realtors expects about 3.4 million existing houses to change hands, another record, exceeding the previous record of 3 million units sold in 1976.

Where is the money coming from? Working wives. Parents, equity in previously owned houses. Relatively easy lending terms — except for the interest rates. Savings.

Watch out for the rest of the year, we are warned. Interest rates and inflation are heating up again. Fair warning. These are the two demons that have caused us so much trouble in the immediate past.

Terrorists Surround Us

By BOB MONROE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Potential terrorists are all around us, the isolated groups or individuals who take violent action for the sake of a brief moment in the bright glare of public attention.

That is the picture that emerged Thursday from interviews with policemen who deal with terrorists, psychiatrists who study them and government experts who watch the terrorist trend in growing dismay.

"What really is going on in depth right now is a broad fringe group has learned that they can bring their social discontent to maximum public attention instantaneously," said Dallas psychiatrist Dr. David Hubbard.

"For a moment their name and face can be seen right along with the President's on the evening news. The chance for one man to lift himself up out of 220 million citizens is a powerful and explosive force," said Hubbard, who began his study of terrorism with skyjackers during the early 1970s.

Those interviewed agreed that media coverage plays a key role in terrorist acts such as the hostage drama in Washington, D.C. It provides a spotlight the participants would not otherwise have.

Authorities divide terrorist situations into three categories: Political or ideological terrorists; criminals who take hostages, such as in a bank robbery gone wrong; and psychotics, usually suffering from a severe lack of self esteem, who seek publicity.

Dr. Frederick Hacker, a Beverly Hills, Calif., psychiatrist, sums up the three categories as "Crusaders, Criminals, Crazies" in a recent book by that name on terror and terrorism.

"Those in Washington belong to the crusading category, which doesn't say that they're not crazy," he said in a telephone interview.

"The whole point is that this is not senseless violence. Unfortunately it's a focused violence that in the terms of the terrorist is meeting with very great success," he said. "How else can you get that type of interest and publicity?

"That's why I call terrorism a mushrooming growth industry with a lot of glamour stock and have predicted, along with many other people, that we are going into a period of escalated terrorism," said Hacker.

"The sad thing is that we are almost totally unprepared to meet the challenge," said Hacker, who urges creation of skilled negotiating teams with experts from various disciplines including psychiatry, anthropology and linguistics.

Hostage negotiating teams exist in many cities. Their primary members usually are police officers. Their aim is to establish contact and then try to wait until the terrorist is ready to give up.

Several experts said that one difficulty encountered in such a situation occurs when reporters try to contact the gunman or his hostages.

"One of the things on the authorities' side is the isolation and loneliness this person feels as the hours pass," explained Brooks McClure, international security adviser for the U.S. Information Agency.

"When you have the media calling up and getting interviews and playing them back on the radio and televison they are constantly reinforced by the attention they get," said McClure, himself a former reporter.

His concern was shared by Hubbard, who said that when the media gives coverage to one terrorist "then by example they guarantee it to every other man who will start a similar sort of thing." The result is to create a "disparate mob" of potential terrorists, he said.

"What happens one day in Indianapolis is imitated in Silver Spring, Md., and Cincinnati and so on," he said, referring to the recent series of highly publicized hostage incidents that began on Feb. 8 with the seizure of a mortgage company executive in Indiana.

McClure commented, "The reason this happens, especially with the psychotic type or disturbed person, is that you've got a number of these people always walking around and suddenly a dramatic event develops and they see their solution in some kind of highly romantic, dramatic act and they're pushed over the side by this."

Hacker said he believes the recent incidents have helped make hostage terrorism "an 'in' fashion" but added that he does not advocate censorship of such events, only guidelines to reporting them.

For example, he said, there might be prohibitions against allowing a terrorist to appear on television during a hostage situation or delays required in reporting such incidents to avoid the instant feedback the terrorist desires.

Federal Control A Threat To Private Colleges

The nation's private colleges and universities historically have traveled a rough road. They never have been in greater peril than they are today. Once their concern was with performing their independent task well; now their concern is with performing it at all.

The threat to their existence comes in part from rising costs that have pushed tuition fees to a point of diminishing returns, but this is not the great worry. The most ominous peril lies in the tightening grip of federal controls.

It is a melancholy story, but certainly not a new one; the colleges are victims of the ancient rule that says the road to hell is paved with good intentions. Twenty years ago, when institutions of higher education began accepting major federal grants, the motives were noble and the process seemed benign. When Congress began funding large programs of students loans, the benevolence was widely acclaimed. Federal requirements in the field of civil rights seemed altogether just.

The institutions had abundant warning of the course of events. Scores of college presidents sounded alarms: Federal aid inevitably would bring federal control. But the temptations were too strong, and the pressures on Congress too great to be resisted. The government's 1978 budget projects nearly $3.4 billion in various aids to higher education, an increase of 26 percent over the outlays in fiscal '76.

Controls come in different guises. A small Methodist college, hard-pressed for building funds, in desperation accepted a federal grant of $373,000. These were the conditions: The college agreed "to remove all religious symbols from the top of its chapel, to limit the number of Methodists on its board and teaching staff, to refrain from sponsoring or conducting any religious services, to remain totally neutral toward the spiritual development, in a religious sense, of its students, and to exclude prayers, hymns, and sermons from its graduation exercises."

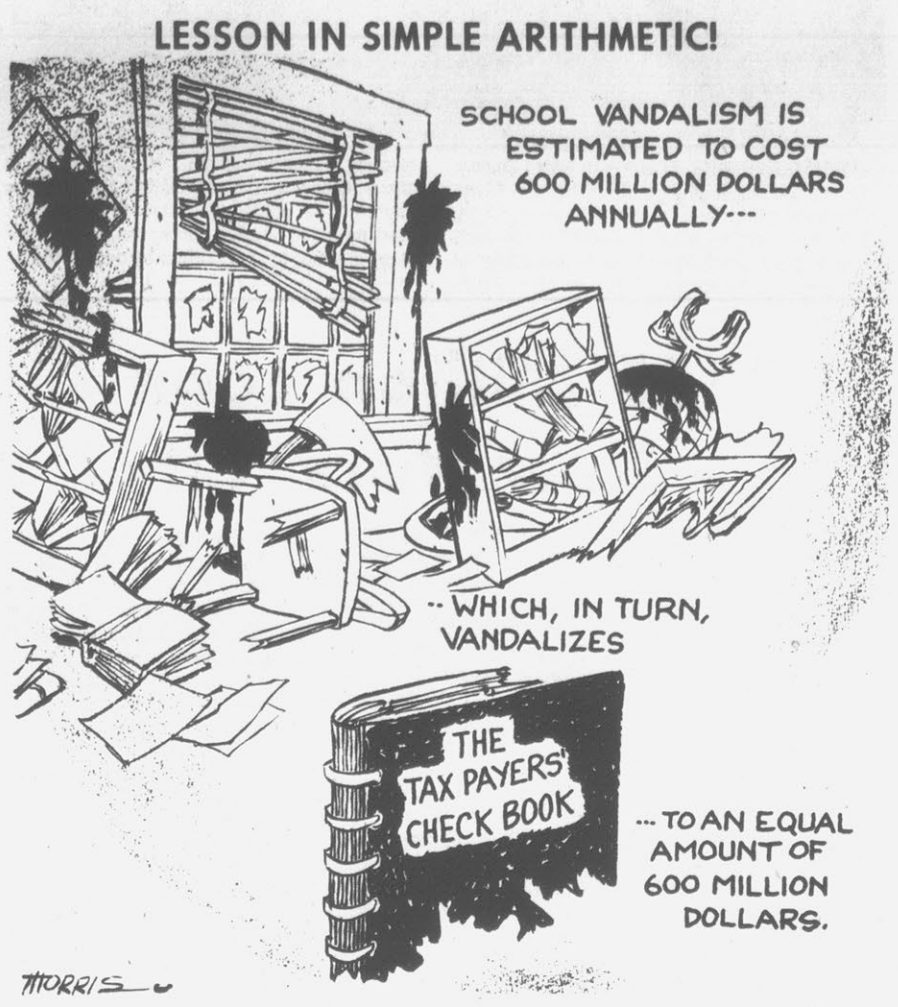

The government's demands for "affirmative action" in the hiring of faculty members continue to impose burdens that get to be unbearable. In a major speech last month, Dr. John A. Howard, president of Rockford College, spoke in somber tones of the problem:

"Whatever may have been the intent of the government, it is an indisputable fact that 'affirmative action' has operated in such a way as to prevent many colleges from consistently hiring and promoting the best qualified individuals to the vacancies on its faculty . . . To permit any extraneous consideration to take precedence over professional qualifications in the appointment of faculty members is to compromise the educational process at its very core. This is a large and fateful step which the nation has taken toward intellectual and cultural suicide."

Some of the controls are far removed from the educational process as such. Federal health and safety regulations lie like an asbestos blanket across the campuses. The American Council on Education has estimated the cost of compliance with federal requirements at almost $2 billion a year. As Newsweek magazine has noted, the sum is "roughly equal to the entire sum the institutions raise through voluntary donations." The burden of federal forms, records, inspections, and compliance reports grows ever greater.

Dr. Howard has urged his colleagues to band together this year in a concerted appeal to Congress and to the Carter administration: Get off our backs! He pleads eloquently for a moratorium on further manifestations of the benevolence that suffocates. He also pleads for a modest program of tax credits, as distinguished from tax deductions, for contributions made directly to institutions of higher learning.

The tax credit plan makes sense in principle; in practice, it could mean serious problems for the Treasury. For the time being, what is most needed is a clear statement of policy form President Carter and from HEW Secretary Califano. That policy must be predicated upon a steady reduction in federal rules, regulations, and direct grants in aid. Unless the trend of recent years can reversed, the private institutions ultimately will become mere appendages of the omnipotent state; they may survive, but they will be "private" only in name.

Self-Reliance Applied In Community Program

ANDERSON, S.C. — There is something unusual at work here, an exercise in self reliance that seems almost archaic in a dependent age. That this is so is the work of Lucille Mayo, a woman with the gently crinkled face of a middle-aged cherub. But hidden down behind that face is a spirit that would do a tiger proud. It is a spirit that, when told by the federal government it couldn't have money to buy food for the elderly and might be advised to pack up its plan, let the government know (politely) where it could go, set about getting local support, and ended up establishing a completely community supported meals-to-the-elderly program which supplies more food to more people for less money than the program suggested by the government.

"With the government it had been estimated it would cost $49,000 to supply 30 meals a day for one year," she says, then rifles through a sheaf of papers on her desk to pull out a list of figures. "But look what we've done. From June to December it's cost us $15,454 — and we served 115 meals today."

The meals, nutritionally balanced thanks to Mayo's training are prepared in a small institutional kitchen outfitted with one old stove and two ovens. Five days a week the kitchen is a shimmering haze of activity. Then, after the meals have been prepared, packaged, and handed out to volunteers who take them to the elderly, it gets quiet enough for Mayo to begin on the paperwork necessary to see how things are going.

She is proud of the program, proud of what it has done. But most of her pride is hooked into the fact that it was begun, financed, and run completely by people from Anderson County. It's gotten to the point, she says, where people think they can't do anything without the state or federal government coming in to give them a hand. But she feels her Meal On Wheels program shows things work a lot better when people decide it's up to them to help their neighbors.

"People who've tried this sort of thing before haven't reached far enough because of fear and because they don't think they have enough money," she says. "When you let money become the most important thing, you can't do anything."

The Anderson program got under way in late 1975 when a group of area people decided enough wasn't being done for the county's home-bound elderly. A survey showed there were some 12,000 seniors in Anderson County who weren't getting enough to eat because of poverty or illness. So the group contacted Lucille Mayo, asked if she'd direct a program to feed them, and told her to go after federal funds.

"You talk about doors being closed and it being hard to get in — it was," she says. "I started going after a grant in October 1975 and just kept working at it. We raised the matching money we needed, and there's no reason we shouldn't have gotten the grant. But one of the best things that ever happened to us is that we didn't."

In June 1976, after it became obvious federal funds weren't forthcoming, Mayo and the board of directors of Meals On Wheels decided to work with the local money they had until it ran out.

Only it didn't run out. Local organizations and people continued to come up with funds, and local merchants provided free food.

The cost of the program remained low, mainly because Mayo ended up working practically for free, instead of receiving the $20,000 a year prescribed by government guidelines.

"I couldn't tell someone we were doing it for the community, then take all the money for myself," she says. So she worked, cramped in an old desk shoved in one corner of the kitchen, for 12 and 14 hours a day, planning meals, helping in the cooking, and going out to visit the people she was feeding.

"This program started because there was a need, and we were the people able to do it," she says. "I worked in a federal thing like this, and we couldn't reach out like we wanted. There were all these restrictions. We don't stop. We don't say you don't meet our guidelines. If we get a call from somebody who needs our help, we go out to help them. If they say they need food for the weekend as well as during the week, we make up some extra meals and let them have it. Now we're not interested in submitting for another grant. We can help our people ourselves. And the more we do for our people, the better we feel inside."

Hunt's efforts were slightly more productive than the President's, but not much. He feels any pro-ERA votes he secured in the Senate were matched by ERA votes won over by the revered retired Sen. Sam Ervin, who has waged a long crusade against the amendment.

While expressing no regrets ("Every so often there comes along an issue you have to take a stand on," he told us), the governor believes ERA took away valuable time and effort from his ambitious program. He intends to seize control of and streamline the state bureaucracy and seeks new powers — the veto and consecutive terms — for this state's traditionally weak governorship.

Although Hunt believes his effort for ERA was unavoidable while key supporters in the legislature believe he should have avoided it at all cost, all agree ERA is finished for now in North Carolina and that the governor can get on to more serious questions with little loss in prestige. Not so, however, for the President.

ERA approval in Florida a month hence seems a good bet, but the two last states needed for ratification are difficult. Opposition is fierce in Oklahoma, South Carolina and Illinois — states where White House intervention may annoy Democratic legislators as much as it did in North Carolina.

In many such states, Carter supporters — including even pro-ERA Jim Hunt — will not judge the President on the continuing ratification fight but on his progress in controlling federal spending and the federal bureaucracy. That is why the unexpected White House intervention on a side issue led to some doubt here whether Mr. Carter has his priorities in order.

Brown Seeks...

what happens to it, and that's what I intend to do.

"I get firsthand knowledge uncensored by the normal channels," the bachelor governor said. "In my position, much of the information is filtered.

"People talk about crime, they talk about mental illness, they talk about housing needs. But it is awfully hard to relate the words of the advocates with the realities we are trying to deal with," he said.

Brown, who spends many of his other weekends visiting or hosting authors, philosophers, professors and advocates of various causes, said he views his visits with those people in a similar light as his visits to the police department.

"I divide government into two powers: the coercive power and the persuasive power.

"The coercive power is the power to tax and pass new laws and send you to jail. That's the power people think of when they ask: 'What are you doing?'

"There's another power, to persuade, to inspire, to provide leadership by encouraging cooperation and bringing people together. What I'm doing is putting a definite amount of time and effort into the second power that this office carries with it, because I think that's an untapped resource."

McAllister Was A Cat That Needed Attention

The ancient Egyptians believed that cats were gods. It's not hard to see why. What other species manages almost universally to get itself fed and housed without being expected to do anything in return except to make a few necessary excursions to the litter box? Even dogs are expected to do a few tricks in return for bread and board, but ask a cat to do a trick, and the only thing you're likely to get is a condescending flick of a tail, rear view of course.

Not that a cat is incapable of gratitude. When I first got our cat, McAllister, six years ago, she had been abandonned at my grandparents' farm, and she was the scrawniest, most pitiful little kitten I had ever seen. The only thing healthy about her was her voice. She gurgled and growled with delight as she tore into what must have been her first meal in days, but she managed several times to interrupt her ravenous pursuit of that tuna fish in order to walk up my arm, perch on my shoulders and kiss my cheek with her tongue, then, via my other arm, return to her feast.

I was engaged to Phillip at the time, and when I returned to Greenville with the new family member, I was scared that Phillip, having always been a dog person, would throw a tantrum. He had already laid down the law, "No Cats!" I was so eager to explain why I just HAD to rescue this poor little kitten that I even forgot to kiss him "hello." But he was understanding. The minute he saw our indignant gray child peering out from the chicken wire in my makeshift animal carrier and screaming Burmese imprecations at the airport baggage people, he saw my point. It was love at first sight.

Soon after Phillip and I were married, "Mac" began to show us what a truly exceptional animal she was. One night we went out, and when we came back, a sweet potato was missing from the dining table. I suspected the thief, but I could not figure out how she had managed to eat a whole sweet potato, skin and all, by herself. She hadn't. She had eaten half; she had buried the other half in her litter box.

Not long after that she again impressed us with her feats of intellectual prowess. We were at the beach, and she evidently got bored. Since we were ignorant of her plight, having been so callous as to have gone to bed three hours before, she sought to enlighten us by sailing across our bed at two o'clock in the morning and hitting the light switch.

Leaving her at home when we traveled did not seem to curb her need for entertainment. After one trip we opened the front door to the sound of the toilet being flushed over and over again. We thought we had interrupted a burglar with diarrhea. It took 30 minutes before Phillip got up the courage to open the bathroom door. He opened it just as our burglar pushed down the handle once more and settled back placidly to watch the water swirl down the bowl. Phillip told everybody at the office that Monday that he had singlehandedly caught a cat burglar.

She never oeased to endear herself to us. She would stand outside the door and cry whenever Phillip and I argued, and whenever we took a walk, she would stroll beside us. When the baby arrived, Mac made sure that no one forgot Mac. She insisted on sitting in the same lap that held the baby and on retaining her third of the bed — right between Phillip and me, her head resting comfortably on a pillow. She was always bringing extra guests to my dinner parties. One night it was a dead frog. Another night it was a live mouse.

Last week Mac died after a long illness. We miss her terribly, but the memory of her will always delight us.

To the editor:

Although Mr. Lindburg Joyner meant his ridiculously high utilities bill to be published as a joke, I find Mr. Curtis Howell's defense of the Greenville Utilities Commission Mar. 9 in The Daily Reflector quite a revelation.

As one who pays both city and county property taxes, I am appalled to learn that a Charlotte firm computes GUCO's billings. Pitt County citizens have paid a huge sum of their taxes for a computer with capabilities not only to handle all of the county's business, but also to do GUCO's billings as well. Privately owned computer services are extremely expensive.

Why does GUCO choose not to negotiate use of the county-owned computer? This would obviously be less expensive. It is amazing that GUCO would announce Mar. 9 a new surcharge on page one of The Daily Reflector and on page four inadvertently disclose that their billings are handled by a private firm.

Micronesian Decision: To Federate Or Divide

By MARIANNA OHE

SAIPAN, Mariana Islands (UPI) — Beneath the surface calm of the lush, peaceful islands of Micronesia lies a growing impatience among some of the people to be free from U.S. control.

The 2,100 tiny islands, flung like green jewels across the western Pacific, have been ruled by the United States since the end of World War II under a United Nations trusteeship which provides for their eventual self-government.

Negotiations have been held over the past seven years with the ultimate aim of establishing a loose federation between the United States and Micronesia.

Micronesian leaders are guardedly hopeful the Carter Administration will be more responsive than previous U.S. governments in helping them move toward an independent future.

"I think Carter will be responsive to Micronesia," says Hans Wiliander, a member of the Micronesian congress representing Truk district. "I think he will come out with a policy for uniting Micronesia."

Up to now the U.S. role in the area has been mainly passive. It has been based on the desire to deny the strategically located islands to potential enemies rather than to help them develop political and economic independence.

Though spread across three million square miles, the islands have a combined land area less than half the size of Rhode Island. Their 114,000 inhabitants speak nine different languages.

Micronesians first came under colonial rule when the Spaniards arrived in the mid17th century. They were followed by the Germans, the Japanese and the Americans.

The United States was charged, in its U.N. mandate, with leading the trust territory toward political and economic independence. But it wasn't until 1965, under some pressure from the U.N. Trusteeship Committee, that it created the Congress of Micronesia.

Negotiations over the islands' future began in 1969. Their slow pace has been due partly to lack of a clearcut, consistent policy towards Micronesia on the part of the United States, and partly to separatist movements in some of the island groups.

"They (the Americans) have not told us what they want. They have never been really open about what they want," says Andon L. Amaraich, chairman of Micronesia's Commission on Future Political Status and Transition. The commission is authorized by the Micronesian congress to negotiate for the trust territory in talks with the United States.

A U.S. proposal in 1970 that Micronesia become part of the U.S. Commonwealth was rejected by all the island groups except the Marianas.

As a result the United States abandoned its united Micronesia policy and concluded a separate agreement with the 14 Mariana islands giving them commonwealth status. The pact went into effect last year. It gave the U.S. Defense Department the right to lease 18,000 acres on Tinian island.

"I think the U.S. got the biggest thing it wanted from the Trust Territory — the Marianas as a military fallback position from Asia. The U.S. has ulterior motives in this area," says a Micronesian official close to the future status negotiations.

But agreement still has not been reached on some items in the compact, preventing final signing.

A major point of contention is Micronesia's insistence on controlling its own marine resources within a 200-mile economic zone and signing a future Law of the Sea treaty as a separate entity. The U.S. feels this falls within its responsibility as manager of Micronesia's foreign affairs.

The current Micronesian congress has passed a bill establishing a 200-mile economic zone. U.S. High Commissioner Peter Coleman has been instructed by Washington to veto it, says a State Department official based in Saipan.

Allergic To His Environment

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — The things most people feel they cannot live without make Walter E. Brown dizzy, tired and sleepy, impair his concentration and give him headaches.

Doctors say he has an allergy, "an environmental thing" that makes him react to a multitude of commonplace things, and that may or may not go away in time.

"I don't regard this as a permanent condition," says Brown, 31, whose allergies to a wide variety of food, pollen and chemicals date back to 1972. "My body is just not in balance."

But in the meantime, the Navy veteran cannot work and subsists on disability payments from Social Security.

Brown cannot be around furniture or clothing made of synthetic fibers and must wear all-cotton, untreated clothing. Many kinds of smells — perfumes, automobile exhaust and other pollutants, detergents, starches — make him ill. And the foods he can eat are strictly limited.

When his environment gets too much for him, he drives to the seashore for relief from headaches, drowsiness, fatigue, and mental sluggishness.

Married and the father of two young children, Brown holds a degree in psychology from West Virginia University.

He was one semester away from his master's degree at Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond when his developing illness forced him to drop out of school in 1975.

Since then, he and his wife, Denyse, a nurse, have moved from gas-heated homes to electric-heated homes to get away from fumes and soot, to Vermont for mountain air, and finally to his sister's home here in an effort to find relief in the sea air.

Nothing has worked.

Mrs. Brown said doctors have told her there are about 10,000 people in the United States with problems similar to those of her husband.

Brown says he was first tested for allergies to foods in 1975 by a Chicago specialist. Additional tests done later in New England confirmed his condition was environmental.

Dr. Marshall Mandell of the New England Foundation for Allergic and Environmental Diseases in Norwalk, Conn., says illnesses of Brown's type may seem bizarre "but it is not something in the imagination."

Mandell, an allergist turned clinical ecologist — one who studies the effects on a person of his environment, wouldn't discuss specifics of Brown's case because of doctor-patient confidentiality.

Brown said he eats only one meal a day, always fish.

"With the fish I eat one organic peach one day, raspberries one day and broccoli one day," he said. "By just eating once a day, it gives my body time to get ready for the next meal."

He also drinks two quarts of distilled water daily "to try to flush the chemicals out of my body."

Exploding Candy

By STEVE GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — There's a new kind of candy going around the Northwest that explodes in your mouth — sometimes in your hand. But the federal government says not to worry — "Pop Rocks" aren't harmful to your health.

Pop Rocks are tiny pebble-like morsels, like bits of rock candy, which come in three flavors — and pop with a crackling noise when the moisture inside the mouth releases carbon dioxide gas in the candy.

They've become the latest rage among students, from grade school to college.

Eleven-year-old Kris Fletcher, also of Port Angeles, said: "They're crunchy, crackly ... and feel like they're popping up and down inside your head."

At Washington State University in Pullman, the editor of the student newspaper said Pop Rocks are the only new fad on campus.

So far, they've been sold only in Washington, Wyoming, Idaho, Montana, Oregon and Canada. And they're not cheap — at 15 cents a package, they cost about $14 a pound.

Shortly after the product was first test-marketed in the Northwest last week by General Foods, the Food and Drug Administration office here was flooded by reports that the popping product had resulted in injuries.

$255 Million Loan To New York City

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government is coming to New York City's rescue again with a $255 million loan, but Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal warns, "It's not going to be a free lunch."

City officials must reciprocate with sound financial practices, Blumenthal said Friday as he announced the loan.

The loan assures New York City that it can pay its bills through the end of June, including more than $125 million due early next week.

He also disclosed that the Carter administration will propose some form of federal banking mechanism to help cities meet special needs, but with "some strings attached" to assure that cities don't overspend.

With the latest emergency loan, New York City owes the federal government $2.1 billion by June 30. The first installment is $500 million due April 15, Treasury Department officials said.

"We'll get our money back by June," said Blumenthal. The city is counting on a heavy flow of tax receipts in June to repay the debt. Blumental said he was confident because of the plan the city adopted Wednesday to repay $983 million due to its note holders.

New York Mayor Abraham D. Beame said the loan "lifts a major financial burden from the shoulders of the city." He promised continued austerity without sacrificing essential services.

President Carter had assured Beame earlier that the administration would not permit bankruptcy. But the government withheld approval of a new loan until the city resolved the $983 million debt.

The latest loan was made under a plan worked out in 1975 by the Ford administration to permit New York to borrow up to $2.3 billion a year in federal money. Treasury officials said they do not expect New York to borrow more money unless there are new threats of insolvency.

Blumenthal said he expects that negotiations between the city, labor unions and banks might lead to some form of outside control over New York's purse strings.

New York City's plan for repaying its $983 million in debts was worked out without the banks. They had insisted on an outside agency monitoring city spending on grounds it was necessary to restore investor confidence in the city's bonds.

Phi Beta Kappa Key's Meaning Is Not Forgotten

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Barely six months after the founding of this Republic, dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal, there was born a smaller society dedicated to the proposition that some are not.

If the United States of America is the log cabin of egalitarianism, then Phi Beta Kappa is the castle of the educationally elite.

Today, some 200 years later, both are stronger than ever. Both have grown up with their conflicting philosophies in a kind of symbiosis, not always peaceful but at least abiding.

Yet the Phi Beta Kappa key is woven into American history, worn by 13 presidents, the first chief justice of the Supreme Court, and brigades of poets, politicians, writers, philosophers, educators and inventors — from Ralph Waldo Emerson to Eli Whitney, from Mark Twain to Mark Hopkins, from Oliver Wendell Holmes to Nelson Rockefeller.

Today, six of the nine Supreme Court justices are Phi Betes, 10 U.S. Senators, some 28 representatives, Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns, Librarian of Congress Daniel Boorstin, and such luminaries as Henry Kissinger and George Bush.

Today, too, the national honor society seems to have weathered the activist storm of the 1960s when students seemed to run the colleges, an era of inflated grades, pass-fail marking, watered-down courses, weakened degree requirements, a rising distrust of intelligence and the tests that purport to measure it.

The society was born in secret at the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va., on Dec. 5, 1776, dedicated to discussion and debate, fraternity and the "encouragement of any new invention of Arts and Sciences." The society spread to Harvard and Yale and other institutions in the budding nation, probably saving its life since the College of William and Mary closed for a time in 1780 in the face of an approaching British force.

Phi Beta Kappa's primary concerns today are more subtle threats to the Republic, notably what it sees as the enemies of academic excellence.

"I see grade inflation as a symptom of weakening standards," notes Dr. Kenneth Green, executive secretary of the society.

"During the '60s, when student activism was at its height and faculties were inclined to be sympathetic generally to demands for relevant or so-called relevant studies, they were also sympathetic to young men who would be eligible for the draft and Vietnam if they didn't stay in college."

This led, he says, to wholesaling A's and B's and dropping difficult studies such as foreign languages and mathematics as prerequisites for degrees.

"I'm happy to see," says Dr. Green, "that the professors and administrators are asserting themselves once again, and saying in effect that we do know more about what should constitute an education than the students do."

Almost 379,000 people have been elected to membership, and since the society started small and grew to its present stature in this century, about 325,000 are still alive. There are only 214 Phi Bete chapters among the nation's 1,914 four-year colleges and universities.

Phi Beta Kappa remains dedicated to its Greek initials standing for "Philosophia Biou Kubernetes"—"Love of wisdom — the helmsman of life."

It abandoned secrecy long ago, and in 1875 admitted women to membership. Its last president, John Hope Franklin, was the first black to serve in that capacity. He is a distinguished professor of history from the University of Chicago.

Each chapter decides how far down the grade rankings it will reach for candidates. But grades are not the only criteria. Members will review the courses a student earned those grades in, measure the breadth of study, the degree of interest. Often a candidate is known to a faculty member who is a Phi Bete.

By upholding these standards, the society hopes to influence the general level of a liberal education.

"We've run into trouble making distinctions occasionally," Dr. Green admits. "Is a major in dance considered as qualified as someone engaged in a liberal subject? We don't have all the say since we are a loose confederation. But we specify that those studies which are professional or technical in nature are excluded."

In any case, there is a great deal of agonizing over who should be elected.

Who, then, is the ideal Phi Bete?

Dr. Green takes pause in the gracious old townhouse that serves as Phi Bete's headquarters in Washington.

"Someone who took the best kind of education as training for life, not necessarily for the love of study itself, but because of a need for increased perception. The honest and earnest study of English or history or chemistry or biology or physics as a way of enlarging the mind or judgment. Someone who would ideally make the kind of citizen who could contribute to the kind of world we all hope for."

But surely there is a flaw in this noble breed? Surely some Phi Bete once ran amok?

"I'm sure there are some," he said, pondering. "I just honestly don't know. ... I'm sure that not all members of Phi Beta Kappa realize the potential that one would hope for them. But I can't give you the name of Al Capone or anyone like that."

Work Force Cut More Than Two Per Cent

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. has cut the state government work force by more than two per cent since taking office 60 days ago and rates that as one of the major accomplishments of his adminstration.

Hunt, in an interview last week, said during the first eight weeks of his administration he had been able to exceed his goal of cutting back the state work force by two per cent. He said he would announce this week that between 900 and 1,000 state jobs had been eliminated throughout the various departments. He said the departments of human resources and transportation, the largest state agencies, were "slightly more affected."

Describing his first two months in office as "very challenging," Hunt said he considered as other top accomplishments the selection of "a very capable cabinet," a legislative program "that will improve the lives of our people without raising taxes and dealing with the energy crisis in a way such that we minimized unemployment and avoided excessive red tape and bureaucratic controls."

His toughest decision, he said, was who to pick to head the cabinet departments. However, a "close second to that" would be the selection of which mandatory and volunteer measures to use in coping with the energy crisis

In an effort to "get a handle on the bureaucracy," Hunt has requested his department secretaries to clear all hiring with his office as well as all testimony and appearances before the General Assembly they make concerning his program. There have been reports that some cabinet members are not too happy with these requirements.

But Hunt said he did not think the restrictions would cause "discontent."

"First of all, it's temporary," he said. "Secondly, we have had for a long time an increasing development in which elected leadership finds it almost impossible to get the government to respond to it."

Hunt, who has been preoccupied with the energy crisis, says he plans to have all of his proposals to the General Assembly in the hopper by April 1.

Opposes Pullout

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — The major opposition New Democratic party demonstrated in front of the U.S. Embassy Saturday demanding that the United States abandoned plans to withdraw its 42,000 troops from South Korea.

About 40 party members, led by Rep. Lee Ki-taek, party secretary general, carried placards reading: "The U.S. retract withdrawal plans right away,"Our peace-loving people, let's oppose the U.S. pullout."

The demonstrators then returned to party headquarters near the embassy, which was closed for the weekend.

It was the first demonstration against U.S. troop withdrawal following President Carter's meeting in Washington with Korean Foreign Minister Park Tong-jin Thursday. Carter said at the meeting that U.S. forces would be withdrawn within five years.

The governing Democratic Republican party remained quiet.

The United States has maintained its forces along the Demilitarized Zone along the 38th Parallel since the July, 1953, Korean armistice.

Alive After 8 Days

BUCHAREST, Romania (UPI) — Rescuers searching Saturday for bodies in the rubble of Romania's devastating earthquake pulled a 58-year-old woman alive from the debris of an apartment building where she had been trapped for nearly eight days.

She had survived without food or water since the quake of March 4, but she was able to walk to a nearby military hospital.

Elena Enache, a teacher, was found at No. 58, Alexandra Sahia Street after she drew the attention of rescuers by poking a stick through a hole in the debris of the building where she lived. The building contained 10 apartments.

The building's inhabitants had been all but given up for dead, the previous one having been found Thursday.

Court Asked To Reconsider Ruling In Utilities Case

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Supreme Court has been asked to reconsider an earlier ruling which ordered three major utility companies to repay approximately $35 million in fuel surcharges to customers.

The three companies involved claimed in asking for the rehearing that "a grievous error has occurred in this case and...generally accepted principles of law and fundamental concepts of fairness require that it be corrected."

In January 1974, the companies began collecting additional fuel charges to recover costs of fuel to produce electricity. Because of a two-month lag in gathering cost data, a fuel charge on one month's bill reflected the company's fuel cost from two months earlier.

However, the General Assembly voted in 1975 to ban automatic fuel adjustments and said the state Utilities Commission must consider such charges on a monthly basis.

The companies complained that because of the time lag, they lost $35 million in revenue to which they were entitled. The Utilities Commission approved the surcharge collection, but the Supreme Court voided that ruling and ordered a refund.

Full Ban In Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — Chile's military regime Saturday banned all political activity in the country — the first such ban on all political activity since the republic was founded in 1811.

A decree signed by the four members of the ruling military junta said "all political parties, entities, groups, factions or movements with a political character are declared dissolved."

The decree also cancelled the legal status of the parties, prohibited the news media from publishing political propaganda, and banned all private and public political activities.

It also declared that property that belongs to the parties could be subject to confiscation by the state and established fines for violation of the decree.

Polanski Charged With Rape

By LAURINDA KEYS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Movie director Roman Polanski, famed for such macabre classics as "Rosemary's Baby" and "Repulsion," has been arrested and booked on a charge of forcibly raping a 13-year-old girl, police say.

Polanski, 43, was arrested at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel on Friday night, one day after the rape allegedly occurred at the West Los Angeles home of Academy Award-winning film actor Jack Nicholson, Los Angeles police said. Polanski was released on $2,500 bail.

When police went to search for evidence at Nicholson's home on Mulholland Drive, they arrested there 26-year-old Angelica Huston, the daughter of movie director John Huston, on a charge of possessing cocaine, a spokesman said.

Miss Huston, who has long been romantically linked with Nicholson, was booked and released on $1,500 bail.

Nicholson's whereabouts were not immediately known.

Police refused to release other details in the case.

Polanski has throughout his career been associated with violence and the macabre in film-making. In 1966 he produced his first feature-length color film, a take-off on old-time horror movies called "The Fearless Vampire Killers, or Pardon Me, But Your Teeth Are in My Neck."

That film starred his wife, Sharon Tate, who with four other persons was later murdered in Polanski's Hollywood home by Charles Manson and his followers in 1969. Polanski was in London at the time.

Before leaving Poland in 1962, Polanski had acted in several Polish films and directed two of his own — "Two Men and a Wardrobe" and "Knife in the Water" — which won international awards.

In 1965, Polanski made the film "Repulsion," and in 1966, "Cul-de-Sac," two deliberately shocking studies of violence and sexual pathology.

Metrics - Signs Of The Times All Over America

By PATRICIA MC CORMACK
UPI Education Editor

Motorists approaching Cincinnati these days see a sign spelling out the distance two ways — regular, 62 miles; metric, 100 kilometers.

All over Ohio it's getting to be that way as road signs approved by the U.S. Department of Transportation go up, readying motorists for the slow switch to metric measurement.

Such signs are going up in Kansas, Alabama, Arizona, California, Florida, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Vermont and Washington. Eventually they will be the signs 56$icg6 times all over America. The metric times.

The nation has started its shift to the international system of measurement, metrics, in an attempt to put it in step with the rest of the world, measurement and weightwise.

The switch began officially with enactment of Public Law 94-168, the Metric Conversion Act of 1975.

When the metrics get into the fabric of American life, c5okbooks will instruct 10 ml. in place of two tsp. of salt; girlwatchers will whistle over beauty contestants with bust, 92 cm.; waist, 61 cm.; hips, 90 cm.; and even some maxims may be expressed in metrics.

Industry and the schools for years were anticipating the nation's eventual commitment to metric conversion. So no one's in a panic. The conversion doesn't need to be accomplished next year. Within 10 years is the hope.

Weather reports these days are a good example of the way metrics are being phased in. You read and-or hear the weather in Farenheit temperatures followed by the degrees Celsius.

The U.S. Bureau of Standards, the U.S. Office of Education, the National Education Association, the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics and the American National Metric Council these days head the metric movement.

The Office of Education this academic year awarded the first $2.1 million in grants and contracts of metric instruction projects throughout the United States.

The awards authorized by Public Law 93-380 are for innovative programs designed to teach school-age children and adults to use the International System of Units.

At the Office of Education in Washington, D.C., Dr. Xloyd Davis, head of the metric education programs, in an interview talked about metrics.

"The changeover has got to "Children shouldn't be required to shift from system to system when they change schools.

"And they shouldn't encounter different units in geography and in arithmetic."

For the present and for perhaps at least 10 more years Davis sees textbooks expressing quantities both ways — the distance from Paris to Rome given in kilometers and, parenthetically, in miles; arithmetic problems alternating between metric units and customary units.

As Dr. Davis put it:

"We don't want to introduce international units in the schools and then find out it may be years before a student has a chance to use them.

"What the schools do will depend on how fast other sectors of society move. Teachers who switch to international units may find they are beating their heads against a stone wall if their students have to deal in pounds, feet and quarts everywhere but in school."

Davis needn't worry. The metric movement in business, industry and even sports already has a good measure of support.

This was shown by makers of all kinds of things, from autos to household appliances, taking part in a conference sponsored by the American National Metric Council and the American Society of Mechanical Engineers recently.

Going metric, they reported, was easier and cheaper than anyone had expected. The Chevette, a little General Motors car designed first in Germany, was put into production in the United States in record time entirely to metric measure.

Thousands of cars on American roads have parts made to metric measurement, including Ford and Chrysler products.

Most big United States manufacturers have been dealing in metrics for years through export business and foreign-based operations. They use both systems, actually.

Some other signs of the metric shift:

— The Distilled Spirits Council of the United States has requested the Treasury Department to approve the adoption of six metric-sized wine bottles. The use of the new sizes will be mandatory by Jan. 1, 1979. For other bottled "spirits," by 1980.

— The Bureau of Reclamation of the Department of the Interior has designed several recent dam projects in metric measure.

— The Defense Department is procuring certain weapons systems for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's use on the basis of metric specifications.

— The International Amateur Athletic Federation has ruled it will no longer accept "converted" times to qualify an athlete for the Olympics. Amateur and college sports associations say this makes metrics in sports very near.

—More than half the states have had some type of formal action on metrics by their legislatures and - or school boards. "Go Metric" resolutions are on the books in Alabama, Connecticut, Delaware, Idaho, Illinois, Maine, Maryland, Michigan, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Vermont and Wyoming.

— The Pennsylvania State Bureau of Standard Weights and Measures cooperated with the Sun Oil Company in a pilot test to determine customer reaction to buying gasoline by the litre. A similar test was done in Tallahassee, Fla. Both times reaction was favorable.

— The Maritime Administration has developed a program of metric conversion to provide for the orderly transition to all facets of merchant shipping by 1980.

— The U.S. Forest Service and National Park Service are adding metric to all signs and brochures bearing weights and measures designations.

— The Agriculture Department is starting to issue its data on crop yields in metric terms.

— The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has been using metric units extensively for several years.

— The Department of Defense says it will use the international metric system in all of its activities consistent with operational, economical, technical and safety considerations.

Metrics, meanwhile, will be no problem for the pharmaceutical industry, medical profession, photography or tobacco industry.

These have been into metrics for years.

Embarrassment Gone; 4-Letter Words 'Hers'

NANCY DOWD, author of the screen play "Slap Shot", is the person responsible for the earthy talk in the movie that many males in the audience will probably not have heard since they left the armed forces. (AP Wirephoto)

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "When I was at Smith, my roommate was a girl who used four-letter words. It embarrassed me."

That was a decade ago, and Nancy Dowd — and the nation's tolerance for obscene language — have changed. As evidence, see the current Paul Newman film, "Slap Shot." Males in the audience will probably not have heard such earthy talk since they left the armed forces. Said one wag of the ice hockey film: "It's outpucking-rageous."

The writer of the screenplay is the sweetfaced, well-spoken graduate of Smith College and the UCLA film school, Nancy Dowd.

"I know I am going to get bad reviews from critics who will consider me a woman who has broken some kind of taboo," she says. "They'll claim I used obscene talk for sensational reasons. I didn't.

"I had to be true to the milieu (of minor league hockey players). That's the way they talk."

Nancy Dowd should know. Her brother Ned was a player for the Johnstown (Pa.) Jets. She spent a month in Johnstown researching her script. And although the players may have toned down their language around a woman, Ned took a tape recorder into the dressing room and elicited the down-to-earth talk of the athletes.

Already Ms. Dowd has been getting flak for her script. In New York recently a female interviewer excoriated her and demanded, "How would you like your father to see such a picture?" Nancy replied calmly that her father, 77, had viewed "Slap Shot" the week before and loved it.

"Verbal obscenity has little to do with one's character," Nancy remarked bravely.

The foofaraw over the movie's cussing should not be allowed to obscure the merits of "Slap Shot" (definition: the most powerful shot in ice hockey). It is uproarious as well as irreverent, insightful as well as brutal; like "Rocky" it is a celebration of the victorious underdog.

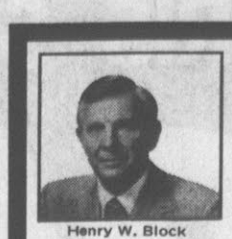

Newman plays the amoral player-coach who will do anything to win a match, and he acquits himself admirably on the ice, thanks to coaching from Ned Dowd. Michael Ontkean, late of "The Rookies," is the team's star, and he played hockey at the University of New Hampshire. Many others of the "Charlestown Chiefs" are professional hockey players.

"Slap Shot" is the happy culmination for Nancy Dowd of eight years of aspiring for a film career. Daughter of a nonshow-biz family of Framingham, Mass., she thought little about the movie world until her junior year of college, which she spent at the Sorbonne.

"I disliked the Sorbonne," she recalled, "and I spent much of my time at the Cinematheque, which was around the corner from where I lived. Until then, I didn't even know what a director was. I saw all the classic American films, and I was hooked."

PATRON SAINT

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — St. Patrick's Cathedral in Dublin, unlike its counterpart in New York, is not a Catholic edifice. It is the national church of the Protestant Church of Ireland. The church, one of many buildings and places named for the patron saint of Ireland, was built in 1190, says Hallmark researcher Sally Hopkins.

Progress Reported On New Hendrix—Dail Plant

Construction is progressing on the new Hendrix and Dail Inc. plant located north of the city limits on Industrial Boulevard.

The 12,000 square foot facility will include the corporation's home offices, warehouse, chemical formulating area, maintenance and fabrication shop, and equipment storage and rail siding, according to Eugene M. Brown, president.

Brown said that the company plans to open the new plant, which is being built on a site near Procter and Gamble, around the middle of April.

J. H. Hudson Inc. of Greenville is handling the construction.

Hendrix and Dail Inc., founded in 1964, are distributors of agricultural chemicals and applicators of soil fumigants. In addition to the Greenville home offices, the firm operates branches in Oxford, Greenwood, Knd., and Tifton, Ga.

Brown pointed out that the firm works in and is licensed to operate in 30 states. Company functions include sterilization of soil, preplant for tobacco beds, turf, ornamental nurseries, vegetables, and golf courses. In addition to selling soil related chemicals and materials used in the application of chemicals, the firm manufactures equipment for soil fumigation.

Hendrix and Dail does work for major tree growing companies as well as the National Forestry Service and worked on the White House lawn for the park service. The firm sterilized the practice putting green at Jack Nicklaus' home in West Palm Beach, Fla., Brown said.

The company has had work contracts in Panama, Honduras and Puerto Rico.

Founded by Floyd F. Hendrix Sr. and Macon M. Dail, both of whom are deceased, the business has been located on Highway 903 North (Stokes Highway) since incorporation in 1964.

Current officers, in addition to Brown, include W. Carroll McLawhorn, executive vice president; Clarence A. Lemons, vice president of development; Bobbie H. Worthington, secretary-treasurer; and James W. Hendrix, director of technical services.

Thomas M. Whichard serves as Greenville branch manager.

Scrap Battle Metal Is Lebanon's Top Export

By GEORGE A. KRIMSKY
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — War refuse has become the biggest export from Beirut as the city begins to rebuild its battle-shattered and looted port, once the busiest in the Arab world.

Officials say the reconstruction of Beirut's cargo-handling capacity will take at least two years and cost at least $67 million. And that doesn't include an estimated $666 million in cargo burned, blown up or stolen from the port during Lebanon's 19-month civil war.

The United States Agency for International Development has pledged $5 millon in handling equipment and storage facilities. Lebanon is hoping for low-interest loans from the World Bank and the Arab development bank of Kuwait, but no decision has been reported.

The biggest problem facing port workers is what to do with the unloaded cargo. There is no place to store the goods and trucks must take consignments directly from ships to customers.

The port's storage area is a dump of rusted scrap, the burned and bulldozed remains of warehouses picked clean of salvageable scrap.

A cement grain storage bin 300 feet high escaped major damage, but loading facilities were destroyed and unsacked grain hasn't been delivered to dockside in two years.

During the fighting the port, which lay in the Christian-controlled eastern part of Beirut, was a major target of leftist Moslems and their Palestinian allies. The leftists wanted to control the port or at least keep their right-wing enemies from using it and the supplies stored there.

The harbor and loading area right on the water's edge survived relatively unscathed, but some 50 warehouses were destroyed. Hundreds of loading cranes and trucks were wrecked or commandeered for battle.

The harbor was able to receive ships within two weeks of last November's cease-fire. A recent walking tour of the port found each of the 35 berths occupied by foreign cargo ships, most of them small vessels unloading badly needed cargos of wood, clothing, flour and tires. There was little for them to take back except scrap metal from the fighting.

"We're getting $165 per ton," said a pipe-smoking shipping agent overseeing the loading of rusted engines onto an Italian ship.

Film Removed

NEW YORK (AP) — Officials at the New York Film Festival have been ordered to remove a Japanese film from its program and surrender it to the U.S. Customs Service which ruled it obscene after a private screening.

The film, "In The Realm of the Senses" directed by Nagisa Oshima, was scheduled to be shown on the festival's Saturday night program at Lincoln Center.

Ordered To Show Cause

COLUMBIA (AP)—Fifteenth Circuit Solicitor J.M. Long Jr. has been ordered to show cause why he should not be prevented from prosecuting a distributor of sexually oriented magazines in Horry County.

The South Carolina Supreme Court has scheduled a hearing on the matter Monday at 9:30 a.m.

The hearing was ordered in response to a request by a Florence magazine distributor for an injunction prohibiting the solicitor to prosecute it.

An Horry County grand jury this week decided to have indictments prepared against the Pee Dee News Co. because of its distribution of magazines the grand jury considered obscene. Police officers confiscated the magazines in raids on Myrtle Beach bookstores last month. Among the magazines confiscated were Hustler, Playgirl, Gallery, Oui, Penthouse and Playboy.

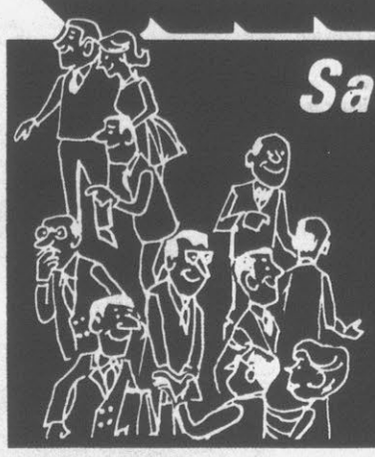

In its request for an injuction, attorneys for the magazine distributor charged that Long had acted in bad faith in seeking the indictment against the firm because "he had attempted to try his case in the newspaper." The attorneys charged that Long's statements to the press would prejudice any jury in Horry County or the state.

Also, the petition states that Long told Horry County booksellers at a meeting he called in August 1973 that he would inform them what books were obscene. But, the petition claims he never did this until he ordered magazines seized last month.

NEW CHIEF JUSTICE — Rose Elizabeth Bird, 40, smiles at a question during a press conference Friday following her confirmation as the first female chief justice of California. Approval of the nomination was assured even before the formal vote of the Commission of Judicial Appointments when Attorney Gen. Evelle Younger announced he intended to vote in favor of Ms. Bird. The Commissions vote was 2-1. (AP Wirephoto)

Noted Dancer Encouraged By Growing Public Acceptance

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

Rod Rodgers first started dancing with his parents when he was five years old. Now, 35 years later, the noted choreographer, dancer, and artistic director of his own dance company has good reason to feel encouraged by the rapidly growing acceptance of dance as part of the American entertainment scene.

"Interest in the dance is definitely here," Rodgers commented during a rehearsal break Thursday afternoon at McGinnis Auditorium on the East Carolina University campus. "It's great to be on the crest of things at a time when popular awareness of dance is breaking open everywhere in America.

"There's so many exciting potentials today in dance, such as the whole concept of touring as we're doing now. And by the way, this year we doubled our touring itinerary over the previous year."

Rodgers is also intrigued by the idea that technology "is on the verge of videosets," a process where people can purchase visual tapes of performances complete with sound to play on a TV type screen.

Although his parents, now both deceased, were professional dancers, he says in those days their dances "were interpretative dances. Though I grew up in dancing, I had no idea, no thought of concert dancing until I saw Katherine Dunham. That changed everything for me, and as a teen-ager I began serious training as a dancer."

The first dance company Rodgers established, he said, "was in my home town, Detroit. Then, 15 years ago I came to New York and danced with several concert groups, such as that of Eric Hawkins."

About ten years ago, Rodgers made a decision to form his own New York based company. From the beginning, he said, "we have developed our own repertoire of works. Many of our dances are set to original music. Sometimes we adapt music to our dances. Most of what people will hear here is original music choreographed by myself or by one of the members of the group."

The Greenville appearance, Rodgers pointed out, "is a typical tour combination of performing, lecturing and demonstrating. This is a fine arrangement, as it gives us a chance to talk to young people interested in dance. Seeing us rehearse, watching us perform raises questions in their minds, and they ask about these things. Also, it's much more personal this way. You meet people rather than just see a sea of faces as you would if you only performed."

This year the Rod Rodgers Dance Company is spending 15 weeks touring the South. "Eight or nine weeks of this time will be spent in Virginia and West Virginia," he said. "We've also just finished a tour in the Virgin Islands." Altogether, the company tours all across the nation for 25 to 30 weeks, with the remainder of their time given to performances in New York City and New York state.

Their time here, as is true in many of their appearances, is made possible by state and federal grants. For the ECU residency and performances, the National Endowment for the Arts and the N.C. Council of the Arts assisted in funding.

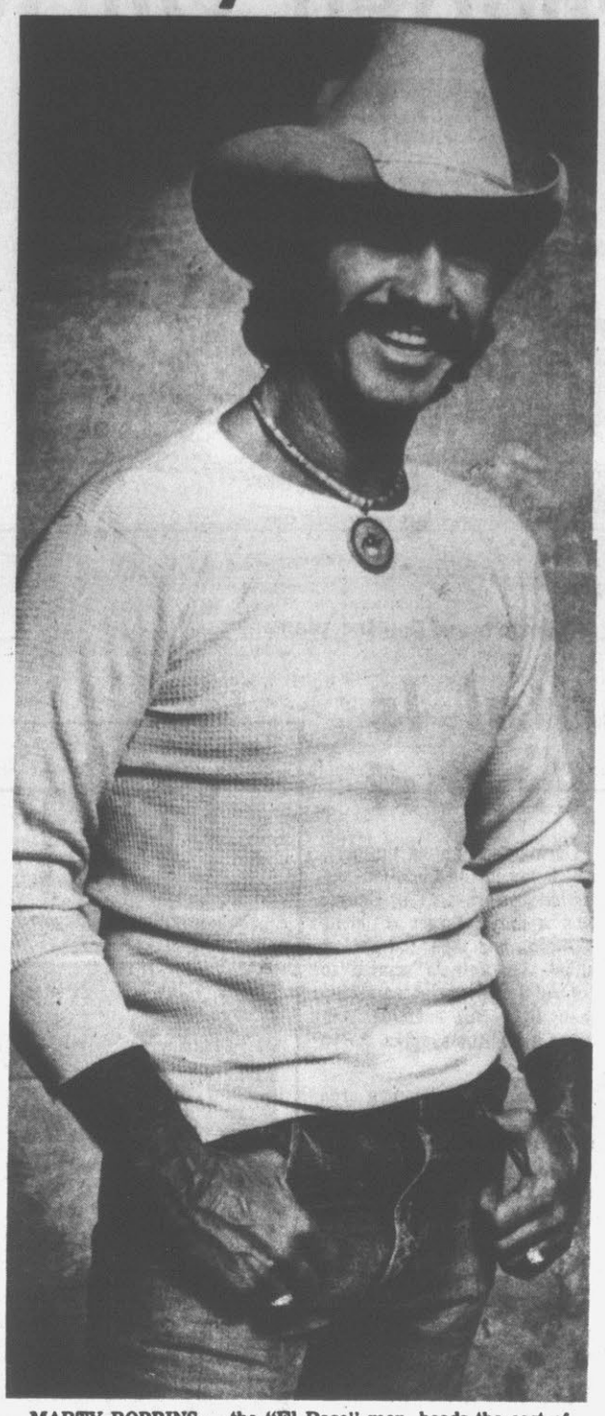

"Grants are something that we must have'" Rodgers commented. "Basically, we provide a service for a community, one that is wanted and needed.

"In our case, about half our income is earned during these tours. This is a high ratio, as it is generally considered that if a dance company earns one-third its income, that is a healthy situation.

"Generally," he added, "the upkeep of a dance company is provided by its earning one-third of its income, grants providing one-third, and one-third coming from private sources."

Rodgers concluded by noting with pride that only two of America's black dancing groups toured more than the Rodgers Company — the Alvin Ailey Company and Arthur Mitchell's Dance Theater of Harlem.

Marty Robbins Headlines Show

MARTY ROBBINS — the "El Paso" man, heads the cast of country-western singers to appear in Country Spotlight No. 21, at Ayden-Grifton High School on Saturday, March 26. Tickets are priced at $5, $6 and $7.

El Paso man Marty Robbins and his band are to be the featured attraction in Country Spotlight No. 21, coming to the Ayden-Grifton High School Gym for two shows on Saturday, March 26. The country music event, sponsored by the Ayden-Grifton Charger Club, will be heard first at 6 p.m., followed by a second show at 10 p.m. Reserved seats are $5, $6, and $7.

Robbins — singer, composer, musician, actor, race car driver, etc., first hit the big time with El Paso, now considered a classic of its genre. Other hits of his over the years include White Sport Coat, Big Iron, You Gave Me A Mountain, and Devil Woman. Considered a man of many singing talents, he is equally at home in Polynesian, Mexican, Western, Country, or Pop music.

Don Williams, the real cowboy who happens also to be a singer, had a hit before the 70s in Time, followed in quick succession by I Can Make It With You, and Look What you've Done. An unassuming singer in the "natural" style, he is a favorite of the Navaho Indians as well as cowboys and music lovers in general.

The lady singer on Country Spotlight No. 21, Jeanne Pruett, has been tagged by her father as "the best front porch tenor in these parts." Among her hits are Satin Sheets, One More Time, and Welcome to the Sunshine. Jeanne has appeared on innumerable television shows, and is the 1973 Billboard Award winner for the Best Female Album and the Country Album.

The black country singer with the happy smile and a rich voice, who has established himself as an audience favorite, O.B. McClinton has been tabbed by other performers as "Mr. Personality."

A frequent performer in the Ayden-Grifton Spotlight Series, McClinton has been entertaining and singing since he completed a four year tour in the U.S. Air Force..

McClinton's string of hits include such songs as Country Music, That's My Thang, Six Pack of Trouble, and Don't Let The Green Grass Fool You.

The players will perform at 4 p.m. in the Flemish galleries or the museum, in a program of two works — Dvorak's Seranade and Beethoven's Septet.

Over the years, deposits of limy mud become limestone. Under heat and pressure, limestone is transformed into marble.

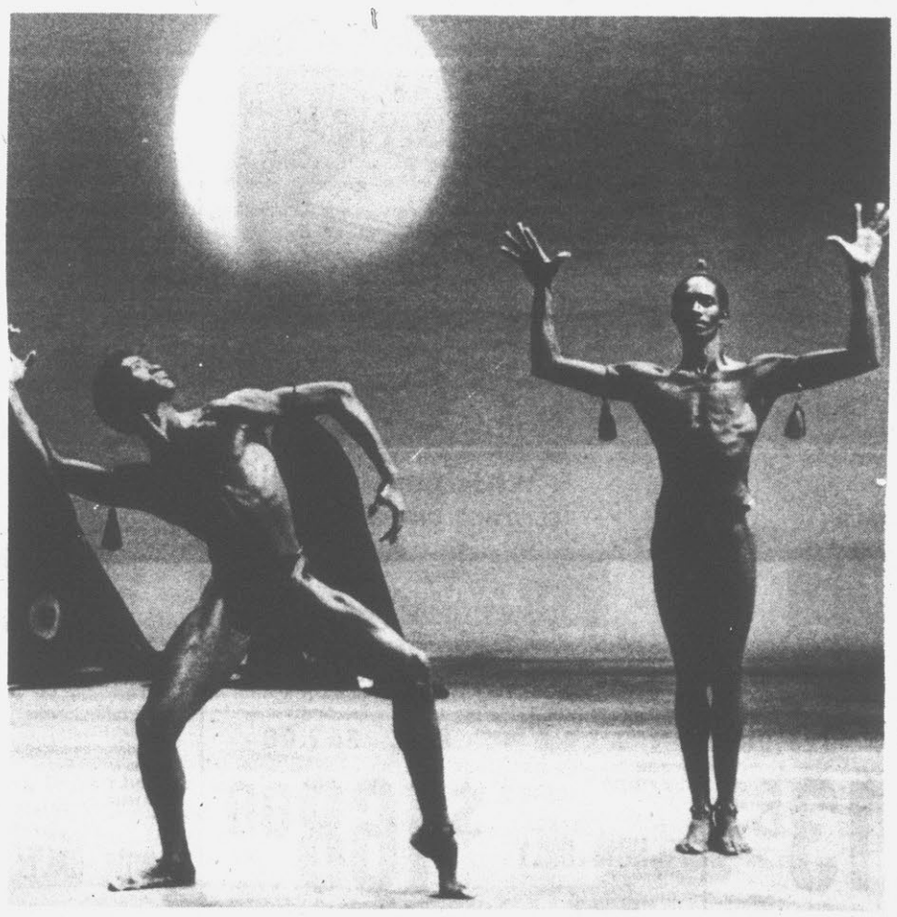

St. Patrick's Dance Set For March 17

Bill Deal and the Rhondels, and The Tams are the two orchestras slated to provide music for a St. Patrick's Day Dance at Wright Auditorium on the East Carolina University campus on Thursday, March 17.

From Virginia Beach, Va., Bill Deal and The Rhondels create a mood of waves, sand and romance with their popular beach music. They have to their credit May I which hit the million-seller mark.

Hey Girl is the best known hit of The Tams, an Atlanta-based group who are well known as a touring band in clubs and colleges.

Tickets to the dance are $3 and are available at the ECU Central Ticket Office, Mendenhall Student Center. For more information, call 757-6611, extension 266.

THE DANCE THEATER OF HARLEM — called by critic Robert Jacobson "an irresistible group brimming with vitality," will be featured in an hour-long PBS Special, "Dance In America," being aired at 9 p.m. Wednesday, March 23 over Channel 25 Greenville and Channel 2, Columbia. The performance is made possible by combined grants from the National Endowment for the Arts, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting and Exxon Corporation. The program of works range from classical to a dance evoking a Japanese household, with "Dougla," a celebration of Hindu and African ritual being the featured work on the program.

'Secret Places' Next Travel Film

America's Secret Places, a James Metcalf film, is the next in the season's ECU Student Union Travel Committee events events. The film will be shown at 8 p.m., Monday, March 21 in Mendenhall Student Center, with public tickets priced at $1. Tickets are available at the Central Ticket Office (tel. 757-6611) or at the door prior to performance.

Hidden and sometimes isolated places of America are the subjects of America's Secret Places — places like the Okefenokee National Wildlife Refuge, Ft. Jefferson National Monument and a World War I air museum.

These are scenic attractions many tourists never get to visit. Metcalf has previously produced a series of lecture films on various countries of the Western Hemisphere. His work also includes production of educational films for Walt Disney Educational Films, the General Electric Company and Pan American Airways.

Student Show Heralds Spring 1977

BEARS AND A VIKING — are the subjects of this fine pencil drawing by 11th grade student Jerry Vines of the Ayden-Grifton School. His realist-fantasy work is typical of many good things by students of Pitt County School now on view at the Greenville Art Center.

As regular as daffodils and the return of robins, local school children herald the coming of spring with their bright and lovely work of art created in the grayer winter months.

1977's opener of a series of children's art at the Greenville Art Center is a fine exhibition by school children from Pitt County schools — both elementary and secondary students.

In the center's two south galleries and in the hallway, the fresh, natural talent of children is evident. There's people and fantasies, houses and landscapes, playmates, parents, things remembered from TV, winter snows and spring flowers.

The smaller size of the current Pitt County School shows is accounted for by the fact that this is the first of a two-part showing by these students. And it is not surprising that the caliber of their 1977 show is higher than in several years — the county school system now has a complement of 12 art teachers.

All the media that children work in so well are here—papiermache, pastels, crayon and pencil drawings, tempera paints, wire and composition sculpture, weaving and linoleum cuts.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By LOUISE WILKERSON PERRY

Sheppard Library has received several new non-fiction titles, one of which is the long-awaited RIGHT AND THE POWER by Leon Jaworski. In this book, the special Prosecutor for the first time explains and documents the details of the maneuvers that created new legal precedents, the behind-the-scenes struggles for the White House Tapes. The book contains moments of great drama which have not been told until now. Jaworski tells the story from the time he first realizes he has evidence which could impeach the president, to the point at which he decides he does indeed have the right and power to take the president to court.

With so many families now enjoying the pleasures of their own boats, June Roth's THE GALLERY COOKBOOK has arrived when it is most needed. The book offers practical concepts for cooking on board small craft, even if equipment is limited to one makeshift burner and an ice chest. Besides the convenient recipes, THE GALLERY COOKBOOK provides information on buying and storing food for the small gallery and guides for cleaning, cutting up and cooking the fish catch.

In 1975 "Mo Mo" Giancana, a Don of the Chicago Mafia was gunned down in true gangland style, a crime which still remains officially unsolved. Giancana was friend of such show business personages as Frank Sinatra, Phyllis McGuire, and Kelly Smith. He also became involved in a CIA plot to assassinate Fidel Castro and was a figure in major crime operations from Chicago to Hollywood, Miami, and Las Vegas. In THE DON author William Brashler, a onetime police reporter traces the story of Giancana's rise to power, his dealings with people in high places, and his brutal murder.

For craft enthusiasts, two new books have been added to the collection. Loretta Holz' HOW TO SELL YOUR ART AND CRAFTS describes the many ways in which artisans can market their wares, whether through mail order, consignment, shows, boutiques etc. It is a wealth of information on the legal and tax aspects of business as well as listing art and craft show directors, state arts councils, and art and craft periodicals. CREATIVE SAND ART by R. Thom House includes beautiful color photographs and detailed information on this profitable craft which makes use of clear glass containers to show off the sand painting inside.

Hundreds Of Russian Defectors Unheard From

By FREDERICK M. WINSHIP

GREENWICH, Conn. (UPI) — If a Russian defector is a ballet dancer, athlete, author or scientist of some note, his story is likely to be front-paged and he will be offered opportunities to reestablish his career in the West.

But there are hundreds of Russians who have come to the United States in the past 10 years without fanfare, often before they could establish themselves professionally. What of them?

"We must start from the beginning here — from zero," said Edward (Eddik) Gavrilov, a 34-year-old artist who fled Russia in a small rubber boat in 1967. "But what I had in Russia was nothing, too. So I am happy just to be here. I love America."

It has taken Gavrilov, a smallish man of unquenchable good nature, 10 years to establish a modest reputation as a portrait painter. He also paints surrealist scenes, sculpts in wood, clay, plastic and marble, and creates bas reliefs in fiberglass. It has meant hard work and slender financial rewards.

"Right now business is not so good," he said in English he wishes were better. "People, they don't spend money."

Gavrilov has had a one-man show of 70 paintings which sold well last November at the Bruce Museum in Greenwich, a wealthy community near New York. A show in Edinburg, Tex., organized by an admirer, was less successful.

He has painted such Newport, R. I., social leaders as John Nicholas Brown and the James Van Alens, Mrs. J. Stillman Rockefeller of the Greenwich branch of the oil clan, and Helen Hays and Hurd Hatfield of Broadway. One of his portraits hung in the White House during the Ford administration.

"I painted President Ford from photos and he liked his portrait so much he sent me photographs of Mrs. Ford," Gavrilov said. "But they were not so good so I didn't do her portrait. I would like to do President Carter, but would prefer to have sittings.

"I really need two or three sittings, and six or seven are even better if you want a very finished portrait like an Old Master. I don't need to know the sitter well to get a good likeness. It doesn't matter for me. They usually don't ask me to flatter them, but they like it when it happens. No objections."

Gavrilov's portraits exhibit a freedom of brushwork and an elegance that reflects his admiration for the Impressionist school, John Singer Sargent, and the late Russian emigre artist Nicolai Faschin. But it was his surrealist paintings based on folk tales and Gogol stories, full of demons and damsels, and his Rousseau-like scenes of nude charmers on Victorian couches being admired by fantastic animals that damned him in the eyes of the official Russian art establishment.

"I would show the officials my paintings in hope of getting an exhibition and they would say, 'It's very good, but you won't have an exhibition for the next 15 years'," he recalled with a trace of bitterness. "They didn't like me at all. They don't like surrealism. They saw exactly that I could never be in the official artists' group."

Born near Vladivostok, Gavrilov showed an early aptitude for painting and studied six years at the Academy of Fine Arts in Leningrad, graduating in 1968. He was offered no official job but was able to find work as a scenic designer for a Leningrad theater and as a television artist. Soon after he made his first attempt to leave Russia through border territory contiguous to Turkey.

"Soldiers with machine guns caught me but they thought I had wandered too far and gotten lost, so I was only held 17 days for questioning," he said. "Then I tried to escape through country bordering on Finland but was caught again. Luckily they did not connect the two cases and I was held for only four days. It was much more difficult to leave Russia then than now."

In August 1967, he and an artist friend made reservations for a vacation cruise on a tourist ship on the Black Sea.

They carried in their knapsacks a small rubber boat, seven cans of meat and four litres of water. They jumped ship about 25 miles from the Russian coast after dark.

For eight days and nine nights, the two defectors paddled toward the Turkish coast with only the sun and the north star to guide them. They saw a few ships, mostly Russian, but they were not spotted. The weather was cloudless but the sea tempestuous, and they were sick from nausea and drinking sea water.

After landing in Turkey, they were taken into custody by the military as suspected Russian spies. They were kept in isolation for almost four months in an Istanbul prison, then transferred to the relative freedom of an open detention camp. They requested permission to go to the United States and this was finally worked out with U.S. embassy officials.

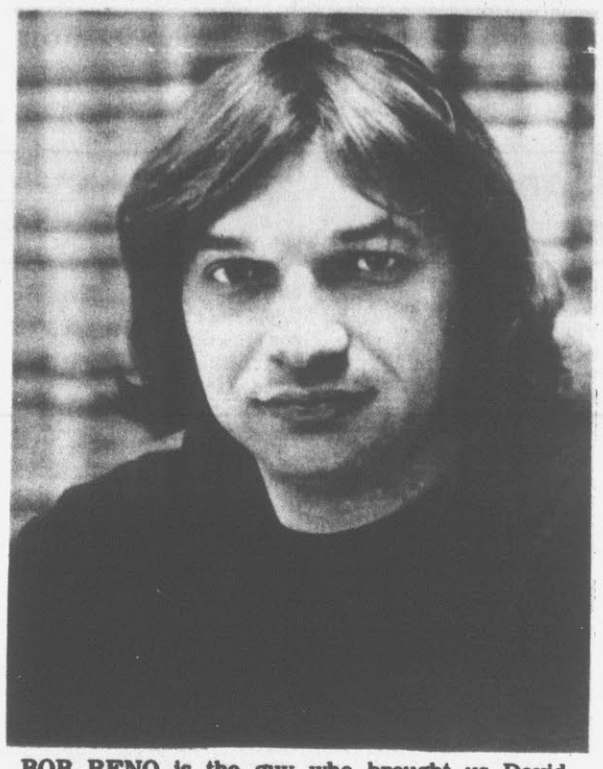

The immigration of Gavrilov and his companion was sponsored by a Grand Forks, N.D., businessman who found them jobs as door-to-door distributors of household products. "Free sample" were the first English words they learned. After saving their earnings for several months, Gavrilov and his friend came east to pursue art careers.

Gavrilov was taken under the wing of the Tolstoy Foundation, which has aided thousands of Russian emigres, and lived at the foundation's farm near Nyack, N.Y. There he was "discovered" by the late Countess Vera Buxhoeveden, a doyenne of the White Russian colony in New York, and through her obtained his first portrait commissions.

After the countess' death, he was invited by one of her friends — the Russian-born widow of financier-industrialist J. Russell Maguire — to make his home in an apartment on her Greenwich estate. He said he has never ceased to be amazed by the many kindnesses he has received from American friends.

"Sometimes I dream I am back in Russia and it is terrible," he said, his usual bright smile disappearing for just a moment. "Then I wake up and I say, 'You are in America!' and it feels so good."

Songman Joins Artists, Music To Creat Hits

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Bob Reno, the guy who brought us David Bowie, Melanie, Silver Convention, Carol Douglas and, yes, John Travolta, went home from work the other day with a splitting headache.

Could it be Bob Reno, businessman, would rather be Bob Reno, songman?

"A lot of my time is taken away from the music," says the founder and president of Midland International Records, "like dealing with tax attorneys and accountants and so on.

"They used to talk about New York, you know, there were a million stories in the Naked City. Well, there are 17 stories at Midland every day, and I hear them all."

In just over two years, Midland has compiled something of a track record. The independent outfit searches for talent, provides new artists with material, produces the music, and promotes the finished product. Someone else — RCA Records in Midland's case — makes and markets the records.

And Midland makes money — maybe $10 million in sales last year.

Bob Reno built a reputation for picking people and matching them with the right material long before he took a chance on Midland. He was working for someone else when he found Bowie in a little-known nightspot in England. Ditto the day Melanie walked into his office with a guitar under her arm.

Reno was 22 when he went to work as a mailboy for Cadence Records. About a year later, in 1962, he set up his own management office, and when that went bust he began a string of different jobs in the record business — working for others.

It was during this period he developed what he calls his "old philosophy." "The artist is one thing," says Reno, "the music and the songs are another thing."

Translated, the "old philosophy" means even the big stars can fall flat with bad material. "I've seen two dozen bands that had everything but material," he says.

Things are a little different nowadays, more and more stars are writing their own material and producing their own records. But the master songman, says Reno, is still important to a record's — and Midland's — success.

"A lot of it's my taste and the taste of people with me," says Reno, who considers himself a master songman. "I listen to them, they're really in tune with young people who are probably buying 90 per cent of the records."

Then there are the other elements — like reputation, foresight and a whole lot of promotion.

"Having built a reputation in the business," Reno says of himself and his small staff, "we have the benefit of a flow of established professionals, like the agents, attorneys and so on who know who we are.

"And then there's more talent than opportunity. The best new people come to us through these professionals. By the time the artists get to us to sign, they've been through all the steps."

Panthers Bow In 3-A Finals, 48-42

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

DURHAM — Wake Forest-Rolesville's sticky full-court zone pressure in the second half ended North Pitt's hopes of a state 3-A basketball championship as the Courgars rallied to take a 48-42 win over the Panthers in the title game at Durham High School last night.

North Pitt jumped out to a 13-point first half lead only to see Wake Forest-Rolesville come back and finally go ahead in the fourth quarter. The Panthers, completely thrown out of their offensive pattern by the Cougar defense, scored only 14 points in the second half and standout Donnie Perkins was held to but two points after intermission.

"We gave it to them," North Pitt Coach Cobby Deans said following the game. "Their press wasn't that effective, I didn't think, we just played against ourselves."

Deans said the Panther guards got out of the regular offense and "we had kids out there doing things we don't even have in our offense.'

"Our guards started running around, rather than handling the press," Deans said. "We didn't play our basketball game."

Wake Forest-Rolesville scored first in the contest, but Perkins hit three straight jumpers and Kenneth Roberson added a 17-footer to put the Panthers ahead, 10-4.

They built on that lead in the second quarter as the Cougars, forced to shoot from long range by North Pitt's sagging 2-3 zone, were unable to connect on many shots. The Panthers went ahead by 11, 18-7, on Roberson's layup with 6:19 left in the half and stretched it to 13, 22-9, two minutes later when Perkins hit two from the line.

But Wake Forest-Rolesville's press began to take effect, forcing four straight North Pitt turnovers while the Cougar shooting warmed up. Charles Byrne scored on three straight shots and Donald Moss added a jumper from the corner to pull Wake Forest-Rolesville to within seven, 24-17. Larry Spencer's shot from the foul line at the buzzer made it 28-19 at the half.

The Courgars continued to cut into the North Pitt margin in a low-scoring third period, forcing seven turnovers and allowing only six Panther shots. Roberson scored all six North Pitt points in the quarter while Wake Forest-Rolesville got eight from Moss and two from Byrne to make it 34-29, North Pitt, going into the final period.

Six straight points by Kenny Harris, four from the foul line, allowed the Cougars to take the lead for the first time since the first quarter, 35-34.

A minute and a half later, Perkins' turnaround jumper from the baseline tied the game at 40, the last time it would be that close.

Bryant Wiggins connected for the Cougars, and, after yet another North Pitt turnover, Harris hit two free throws. Moss's foul shot ten seconds later made it 45-40 with 27 seconds left.

Moss missed on his second attempt and Perkins grabbed the rebound, feeding to Roberson, whose layup with 18 seconds on the clock cut it to three.

The Panthers were forced to foul, however, and Wake Forest-Rolesville hit three of four shots from the line in the final 11 seconds to keep the Cougars in front.

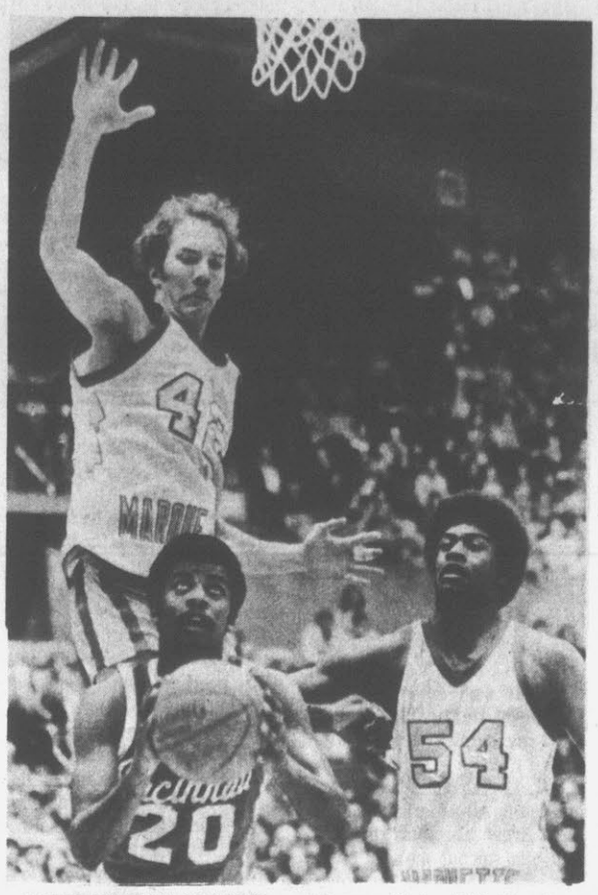

Roberson led all scorers with 20 points while the usually high-scoring Perkins was held to 12. Moss had 17 for Wake Forest-Rolesville, and Bryne added 15.

The Panthers outshot and outrebounded the smaller Cougars, connecting on 19 of 35 shots for 54.3 per cent compared with 17 of 44, 38.6 per cent and taking a 27-19 edge on the boards. The key, however, was in turnovers, where North Pitt committed 27 to eight for Wake Forest-Rolesville.

The loss was a bitter one for Deans, who said he could "see it coming in the third quarter." Yesterday was his birthday.

First Workouts Please Coach

"The spirit is just amazing," Dye said following nearly two hours of scrimmaging Saturday afternoon. "You just can't believe the chatter and enthusiasm among the players out there."

The Bucs opened work on Wednesday, and got to work four days this week. "We're already a fifth of the way through with our allowable 20 days," Dye said. "I'm glad we got these days. The weather has cooperated with us well, and we've gotten in a lot of contact."

Dye said that some of the players were not in as good a shape as he would like, but he wasn't worried about it. "We've had a layoff from conditioning because of exams and the spring break," he said. "We have a long way to go in conditioning, and we want to keep healthy."

Dye said the Pirates had accomplished what he had hoped during these first four days of work. "We knew who some of the players who were ready to play were, but we were looking for others. We've found some of them now.

"The fullback position should be okay with Vince Kolanko, Perry Allred and Theodore Sutton, a walkon."

Another problem area is the secondary, where three of the four starters were lost to graduation. Dye singled out Steve Hale and Charlie Carter for their play, and also walkon Thomas McLauren and Willie Holley.

In the defensive line, Dye liked the play of Noah Clark, Oliver Felton, along with veteran Gerald Hall in the secondary.

On offense, Dye said the quarterback situation was too fresh to talk about yet, but noted that senior Jimmy Souterland looked good the first two days before injuring his hand.

"Sam Harrell looked good running the ball, and Barry Johnson (tight end) and Matt Mulholland looked good in the line. Kolanko looked good at fullback, and a walkon, Vern Davenport from Ayden, looked good catching the ball."

Dye plans to work the Pirates on Monday and Tuesday, skip Wednesday, and come back with the final three days of the week. "We'll play a game on Saturday, and that should give us nine days, nearly half of our allotted time, with three weeks to go."

The Bucs plan to play a scrimmage a week later in Wilson, then hold the Alumni-Varsity game, and a Purple-Gold game on the following Saturdays.

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) —Jer-Schellenberg's play and a tenacious full court press keyed a second half comeback that gave Wake Forest an 86-80 college basketball victory over Arkansas in the NCAA Midwest Regional Saturday night.

Schellenberg had only five points in the first half, but responded with 1 in the second half to help bring the Deacons back from a 13-point halftime deficit.

Wake Forest finally got on top at 74-73 with less than two minutes to play when Schellen berg hit a jump shot and then fed guard Skip Brown for another basket.

Arkansas had jumped to a quick six-point lead and easily rode to a 46-33 halftime advantage.

The Deacons had tried to run with Arkansas but couldn't keep up with the quicker Razorbacks. However, after intermission, Wake Forest want to the full court press and rattled Arkansas, the Southwest Conference champion.

Arkansas was led by guard Ron Brewer, who had 20.

Ailing Heels Down Purdue

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Tom Zaliagiris hit a 15-foot jump shot with 1:17 remaining to put North Carolina ahead by one as the Tar Heels used its famed four-corners offense to defeat Purdue 69-66 in the first round of the NCAA basketball tournament here Saturday night.

The win put fourth-ranked North Carolina in the semi-finals of the Eastern regionals next Thursday at College Park, Md., against the winner of the Hofstra-Notre Dame game. In the first game Saturday night, VMI downed Duquesne 73-66.

All-America guard Phil Ford was the game's high scorer with 27 points and was assisted by freshman Mike O'Koren with 11. Purdue was led by Walter Jordan's 16 points and Eugene Parker's 12 points.

North Carolina went into its four-corners offense with 6:15 remaining and the score tied 62-62. A technical foul was called on Purdue with 4:36 remaining for failing to come after the UNC stall, and Ford hit the free throw to put the Tar Heels ahead for the first time in the half 63-62.

Purdue came back to take a one-point lead, but Zaliagiris hit his go-ahead jumper to make the score 67-66. UNC got the ball back on a jump ball and used its stall to try to run out the clock.

But the Bolilermakers got the ball back on a missed free throw and had a chance to go back out in front, but a travel call against Purdue's Bruce Parkinson gave the Tar Heels possession. Ford then sealed the victory as he cooly hit two free throws wih 10 seconds left.

The Tar Heels played without the injured Tommy LaGarde and Walter Davis, both of whom were regular starters and members of the U.S. Olympic team along with Ford.

East Carolina, State Divide Doubleheader

RALEIGH — East Carolina University's baseball winning streak came to an end Saturday afternoon, when an error allowed the N.C. State Wolfpack to score an unearned run for a 1-0 victory in the second game of a doubleheader.

The Pirates kept up their good hitting, but it didn't help them in the second game. In the first, they banged out nine hits and took full advantage of eight errors by the Wolfpack. In the second, they outhit the "Pack, 6-4, but couldn't push over a run.

Mickey Britt, making his first start, tossed the victory in the first game, allowing seven hits, but none of the three runs against him were earned.

Larry Daughtridge had his record evened at 1-1 with the loss in the second game, as the unearned run cost him a chance at victory. Keith Kurdewan came on in relief for Daughtridge, going the final inning.

East Carolina grabbed the lead in the first game in the opening inning, scoring a run. Pete Paradossi reached on an error, and Billy Best singled. Both advanced on an out, and Paradossi scored on a sacrifice fly by Sonny Wooten.

Another Pirate run crossed in the second. Robert Brinkley reached on an error and Rick Koryda singled him to third. Koryda stole second, and the throw from the catcher went into center, allowing Brinkley to score.

State came up with three runs in the bottom of the second to take the lead, 3-2. John Isley singled and Dick Chappell reached on an error. He went down at second on a fielder's choice on Dave Moody's grounder. Rick Reister singled in Isley and Gerry Feldkamp tripled to drive in both Moody and Reister.

But the Bucs quickly rallied for two in the third, moving back ahead, 4-3. Paradossi singled and moved up on an out. Eddie Gates was hit by a pitch and Wooten's single brought in Paradossi. Bobby Supel then singled in Gates.

In the fourth, the Bucs added another. Koryda reached on an error, as did Paradossi. Best singled and when Gates was safe on a third error, Koryda scored.

The final Pirate run came in the fifth. Supel singled and Brinkley got a hit. Koryda singled in Supel, but was out when Charlie Stevens hit into a fielder's choice. Stevens stole second and when the ball was again thrown away, Brinkley scored.

In the second inning, they got Supel as far as third, and twice more they put men on second, but the Bucs could not push over a run.

State's lone run, and the winning one, came in the third. Pat Sheehy singled and moved to second when Billy Port's sacrifice bunt was errored, allowing Port to reach safety. Tom Crocker's fly to center was then dropped, allowing Sheehy to score.

The victory moved State to a 5-4 record.

The Pirates travel to Burlington today to face Elon College in a single game. They are back at home Monday, playing Eastern Connecticut State at 3 p.m. at Harrington Field.

Pirate Runners Defeat Baptist

East Carolina University's track team pulled off one of the big upsets in the opening outdoor meet of the season yesterday, downing Baptist College of Charleston, 78-63.

The defeat was the first dual meet loss for Baptist in four years, and was the first loss ever to East Carolina.

The win was made even sweeter since two of the top Pirate stars, Marvin Rankins and Larry Austin, are away competing in the NCAA Indoor Nationals, and another Otis Melvin is sidelined with an injury.

The Pirates won seven individual events and the mile relay, while Baptist took first in a like number of individual events and also won a relay. The difference came in the better depth of the Pirates.

One new Bunting Track record was established, as Rogers Ideozu of Baptist hurled the javelin 224 feet, 7 inches, breaking the mark of 223-8 set by Ed Long of East Stroudsburg State in 1972.

There was only one double winner in the event, as East Carolina's Robert Bailey won both the shot put and the discus.

Bruins Slip By Louisville

POCATELLO, Idaho (AP) — Brad Holland scored 16 points in the second half to rally lethargic UCLA to an 87-79 first-round NCAA basketball tournament victory over Louisville Saturday.

Second-ranked UCLA was trailing 14th-ranked Louisville 55-51 with 14 minutes remaining when Holland, a guard, entered the game and began connecting from long range.

He poured in 11 points in five minutes, sparking UCLA to a 66-65 lead before cooling off with three misses. Louisville regained the lead briefly on the shooting of Darrell Griffith and Phillip bond, but then Jim Spillane put UCLA back in front 72-71 when goal tending was called on a fast break.

Holland stretched UCPA's lead to six points on a three-point play with 3:21 remaining and Louisville never got closer than four again us UCLA stalled.

UCLA, seeking to regain the national collegiate basketball supremacy it held for nearly a decade until 1975 played as if riveted to the floor early in the second half and watched a 39-36 halftime lead turn into a deficit. Wesley Cox, who led all scorers with 23, ignited the Louisville surge that produced a lead of as much as six points before Holland took charge.

Louisville, which lost a playoff heartbreaker to UCLA in overtime two years ago, lacked the speed to counteract UCLA's keep away tactics near the nd.

All-American Marques Johnson scored 13 points and grabbed 10 rebounds in the first half but was not a factor in the second half as UCLA went flat for the first seven minutes. He wound up with 17 points.

Larry Williams and Griffith had 14 for Louisville.

UCLA, which led by nine points 37-28 late in the first half, improved its record to 24-. Louisville finished at 21-7. It was Louisville's third loss to UCLA in recent playoffs.

A controversy was raised before the game because Louisville had practiced in the Idaho State University minidome on Wednesday, instead of in a local gymnasium.

Milton holt, ISU athletic director, said it was permitted because the other gym was being used for a high school tournament.

. "The rule says they can work out once the day before the game and once the day of the game, but doesn't say anything else," Holt said. He said he had talked with UCLA Athletic Director J.D. Morgan and was assured before the game that no protest would be filed.

New Buc Cage Coach Has High Hopes

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Gillman was introduced Friday by East Carolina Chancellor Leo W. Jenkins as the new Pirate coach, replacing Dave Patton, who resigned late in the season.

Gillman, who comes to East Carolina following two years as an assistant coach at San Francisco, feels that he can make a winner out of East Carolina. And not just a winner on the present level. He wants to go to war with the biggies.

"This is ACC country right now, but we're going to try and change that. San Francisco faced the same problem trying to compete with UCLA, but it was successful. The kids gravitate to UCLA and to the ACC schools, but I think we can change that.

"I want to rise and I want to rise quickly. Some people in North Carolina are going to laugh at that, I know," he said.

A 28-year-old native of Mt. Vernon, New York, Gillman was a high school player at Tuckahoe High School, and played a year and a half of college basketball before an ankle injury ended his career.

Then, while still an undergraduate, he turned to coaching, working as an assistant coach at Mt. Vernon.

There, the team won two straight New York state titles back to back. "No one had ever done that before," he said, "and no one has done it since then."

Among players he worked with on that level are some currently in the pros and in college. They include Gus Williams of Golden State and Earl Tatum of the Los Angeles Lakers, Ray Williams of Minnesota and Sam Williams of San Francisco, along with Rudy Hackett of Syracuse. "There is another Williams brother around, in junior college. Maybe we can get him here," he said.

From Mt. Vernon, he moved on to Westchester Community College in New York, where he was again an assistant. The team there had a 35-3 record.

After serving as a graduate assistant at the University of Houston, he moved on to San Francisco where he was an assistant for one yea before moving to Minnesota with the first staf hired after the recruiting scandals which placec the Gophers on probation. But after a year there, he returned to the Dons, working with them for the past season.

Gillman was asked how he happened to hear of the East Carolina job. "In this business, you keep up with things across the country. You follow all the teams. A few years ago, I know East Carolina had a good record. I feel that any state institution in an area like this has the potential to go a long ways. With the backing and support of the administration and the community East Carolina can have a very good future."

Gillman was asked how he planned to bring in this support from the community, where basketball tended to be thought only in ACC terms.

"If I didn't think I could do the job, I wouldn't be here. A winning team will bring the people in, and that's what I plan to have: a winning, colorful team."

Gillman said he planned to work with Athletic Director Bill Cain to build a representative schedule. "I haven't had a chance to meet with the players, but I'm going to tell them right away that our first objective is to beat Indiana." Indiana is the opening game of the year next season.

"The reason I say beating Indiana, and not someone in the ACC, is that Indiana is the first game. And that's the way I like to play them, one at a time."

Asked about his plans for a staff, Gillman said he had no comment, although it has been learned that Billy Lee, a graduate assistant on the current staff, is likely to be given a full time position.

"I will have two full-time assistants and a graduate assistant," he added.

For the time being, recruiting will probably fall on the shoulders of Lee, since Gillman flew back to Tucson, Ariz., to join the Dons as they opened their quest for the NCAA title Saturday afternoon. "I'll stay with San Francisco until they lose or win the title," Gillman said, "then, I'll be here."

As far as the current crop of players is concerned, Gillman said he planned an open door policy. "I want them to feel free to talk to me about any problem they may have, whether it's about basketball or whatever."

As to recruiting, Gillman said he wasn't worried about having to get a late start. "I know we've already signed one player, (George Devone of Hobbton), and we will do our best to make sure that he stays within the fold. I still think we can have a successful recruiting year, and I'm looking forward to recruiting here."

The Pirates under Gillman will play a very aggressive defense and offense. "We want to make the other team make as many mistakes as we can. The more they turn the ball over, the better chance we'll have for scoring."

Gillman was also asked if the East Carolina job is being viewed as a stepping stone for him. "I really can't answer that question," he said. "I don't know what the future holds. I don't know what life will be like here. We'll just have to wait and see."

Playing as an independent will not be that bad, Gillman feels. "It could help in recruiting, since we can play anyone. But we could also get like UNC-Charlotte, and after beating some people, we may find it hard to get games. But it's great to be able to play people like Indiana, Maryland, N.C. State and the like, and I want a good, strong schedule. We're going to try and stay several years ahead in scheduling, too."

Nevertheless, Gillman faces a tough job. He must get the student body and the community involved in his program. He must fight the Atlantic Coast Conference in recruiting. And to do both, he must win.

Kentucky In 72-58 Victory

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Led by Rick Robey's 20 points, Kentucy hit on 11 of its first 12 second-half shots and defeated Princeton 72-58 in an NCAA Eastern regional quarter-final doubleheader Saturday night.

The Wildcats, with Robey and Mike Phillips both ut 6-foot-10, controlled the backboards over the much smaller Ivy League champs, whose tallest starter was 6-foot-8 Roma.

Kentucky jumped to a 10-4 lead as Robey scored from underneath. The Wildcats widened the margin to 18-8 on two free throws by freshman Jay Shidler with 11:.2 left before halftime. Truman Claytor's jumper with 3:06 left gave Kentucky a 27-14 lead.

Princeton bounced back, however, outscoring Kentucky 8-2 and Frank Sowinski's two foul conversions with 18 seconds left brought the Tigers to within 29-22 at halftime.

In the second half, the Tigers' Doug Snyder scored to cut the Wildcat lead to 41-34. But Jack Givens, James Lee and Robey each scored and Kentucky was never again in any danger.

The sixth-ranked wildcats got 1. points from Claytor, who hit on six of eight shots, and 10 from Shidler. Sowinski led Princeton with 16, followed by Bill Omeltchenko and Tom Young with 10 each.

Kentucky Coach Joe Hall was pleased with his team's effort. "We felt our problem could be tempo," he said. "But I thought we were able to maintain what we wanted to do. Claytor and Robey gave us a big lift."

Princeton Coach Pete Carril thought the Wildcats have a chance to go all the way in the NCAA tournament. "They're a very fine team," he said. "They're strong, tall and shoot the ball very, very well."

Kentucky 25-3 advances to the Eastern regional emifinals next Thursday night against VMI Princeton finished at 1 5.

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Nevada Las Vegas' high-speed offense became a blur once Reggie Theus entered the game, and the fifth-ranked Rebels ran to a record-tying 121-95 victory Saturday over third-ranked San Francisco in the first round of the NCAA basketball tournament.

Las Vegas, who matched the tournament single-game scoring record while embarassing the Dons, advanced to next Thursday's Western Regional at Provo, Utah, where it will meet the University of Utah.

The 19th-ranked Utes, led by sophomore Greg Deane's 25 points and Earl Williams' clutch free throws in the final minutes, edged St. John's 72-68 in the first game of the tournament's opening-round doubleheader here.

Theus entered the game in the fourth minute after USF had taken a 10-6 lead. The 6-foot-7 sophomore guard scored 18 points in the half and finished the game with 27.

Eddie Owens added 22 points and Glen Gondrezick scored 21 for the Rebels, who led college basketball with their 108-point per game scoring average in a 25-2 regular season.

Las Vegas exploded into a 63-44 lead by halftime, outscoring the West Coast Athletic Conference champion Dons 12-0 late in the half to make the score 61-42.

Zinford Boynes, USF's sophomore guard, was virtually the only bright spot for the Dons. He scored a game-high 30 points including 20 in the first half.

San Francisco, which had been unbeaten and top-ranked until a season-ending loss to Notre Dame, went home with a 29-2 overall record.

Nevada-Las Vegas went ahead to stay on a jump shot by Robert smith which broke a 20-20 tie midway in the first half.

Bill Curtwright, USF's second-team All-American center, then drew his third personûl foul and sat out the rest of the first hùlf — before Las Vegas broke away. He had not been a major factor in the first-paced game.

Cartwright finished with 15 points and eight rebounds.

Theus made 11 of 18 shots from the floor and the Rebels' team shooting average for the game was a blistering 55 per cent as they made 49 of 89 shots.

In the first half, USF committed 20 turnovers and got off only 29 shots to the Rebels' 44.

Marquette Avenges Earlier Loss, 66-51

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Jerome Whitehead and Bo Ellis combined for 16 second-half points Saturday and rallied 16th-rated Marquette to a 66-51 victory over Cincinnati in a first-round game of the NCAA basketball tournament.

The victory in the regionally televised game was the 400th for retiring Coach Al McGuire of Marquette and kept alive his quest for his first national championship.

Marquette, 21-7, ran off 13 straight points in a seven-minute stretch of the second half to fashion a 53-41 lead with 3:46 to play. No. 11 Cincinnati, 25-5, never recovered.

Cincinnati, behind 15 points by by junior center Bob Miller, controlled the first half and led 31-28 at intermission. Marquette managed to tie the score in the first three minutes of the second period and the contest remained close until Whitehead and Ellis scored 11 of the 13 points in the seven-minute run to break it open.

Ellis finished with 17 points, Whitehead 15 and Butch Lee 13 as Marquette and McGuire defeated Cincinnati for the first time in four years.

Marquette advances to the Midwest Regional Semifinals next Thursday in Oklahoma City.

Miller finished with 20 points, the only Bearcat in double figures, to lead his team that managed only three field goals in the final 10½ minutes of the game—and two of those came in the last two minutes.

Cincinnati, making its third straight NCAA tournament appearance, jumped to 10-2 lead in the first 2½ minutes but Ellis and Whitehead rallied the Warriors to a 10-10 deadlock with 13:41 left in the half.

Thereafter, neither team led by more than three points until Cincinnati's cold spell.

A three-point play by Whitehead gave Marquette the lead for good with 8:47 to play and Ellis sanj two baskets for a 47-41 Marquette advantage with 6:59 remaining.

Marquette, a 63-62 loser to Cincinnati during the regular season, shot 46.2 per cent from the field compared to 45.8 for Cincinnati. With a strong second half showing, Marquette won the rebounding battle 35-25.

Bean Lead Is Three Strokes

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Front-running Andy Bean, seeking the first title of his two-year pro career, slipped to a one-under-par 71 but managed to stretch his lead to three strokes Saturday in the third round of the $200,000 Doral Open Golf Tournament.

The hulking, 6-foot-4 Bean, the leader all the way in this chase for a $40,000 first prize—more than he's won in the rest of his career—put together a 54-hole total of 205, 11 under par for three trips over the tough, 7,065-yard Blue Monster course at the Doral Country Club.

Although he's one of the tour's longest hitters, Bean continued to let the par five holes escape. He hasn't birdied one of the long holes since the 12th in Thursday's opening round and played them one over par—taking a bogey six on the 12th—on this warm, humid, partly-cloudy day.

Leonard Thompson, who's been playing better since he abandoned a diet and regained the 30 pounds he once lost, and Chi Chi Rodriguez moved into a tie for second place.

Thompson had a wildly erratic round that included eight birdies, four bogeys, a double bogey and only six pars. He birdied seven of eight holes in the middle of the round on his way to a 70 and a 208 total, only three strokes back going into the final round Sunday, Bean's 24th birthday.

Larry Ziegler, who owned second place alone going into the third round, was tied with Lanny Wadkins, rookie Mike Sullivan and dangerous Aussie David Graham, one of the world's premier performers last season, another stroke back at 209 and very much in the chase.

Wadkins, a runnerup in Los Angeles last month and on the rebound from a two-year slump, holed a seven iron shot for an eagle two, reeled off one string of five consecutive birdies and matched Rodriguez' 66. Sullivan closed up with a 68, Graham had a 69 and Ziegler slipped to a 73.

Jack Nicklass failed to make a major move and, with a 70, was seven shots back at 212. He was tied with PGA champion Dave Stockton, also with a 70.

Bruce Lietzke, a two-time winner this year, had a 68 and was at 214. Defending champion Hubert Green was 72-215.

Marcis Shines In Practice

By JERRY GARRETT
AP Motorsports Writer

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — Dave Marcis turned in the top practice speed Saturday as the 36-car field made a final tuneup for Sunday's Carolina 500 Grand National stock car race which was rescheduled after a rainout last week.

Marcis seemed to be the only driver to significantly improve his speeds from the previous week. He circled the 1.017-mile North Carolina Motor Speedway oval in 27.05 seconds, nearly equal to Donnie Allison's pole position winning speed. Marcis, however, starts ninth.

Marcis had complained last week that his Chevolet's chasis felt like it was flexing in the turns, rather than remaining rigid. Since then it has been almost entirely rebuilt.

Allison, in a Chevrolet, and Dodge driver Richard Petty, who comprise the front row in the $140,000 event, were consistently running laps Saturday in the 27.3-second range. The practice session was run without incident on the slippery track, only recently coated with an asphalt sealant which has made racing flat-out extremely tough. Several cars were damaged in practice and qualifying last week.

Rain had threatened Saturday's session, but a track official said, "There was no kind of rain but it did get close enough to see it a few times. We're hoping that is the kind of luck we'll have Sunday.

"We had a 70-80 per cent chance the last two days and it hasn't rained yet. It's supposed to be a 50 per cent chance tomorrow morning, then clearing about noon. We'll stay here till the sun goes down if we have to, trying to get this thing in tomorrow."

The official said the extra week "to cure" has helped increase the stability of the race cars on the track.

"It's unanimous among the drivers. They said the track is in much better shape than a week ago," said the official, "but it's still going to be slick."

Petty said, "The groove is getting wider and wider. It's already wider than it was last week and as the race goes on tomorrow, I'm sure that it will be plenty wide enough for good racing."

Greene Central Tops Saratoga

SNOW HILL — Greene Central captured its second victory of the year, downing Saratoga, 4-3, yesterday afternoon.

The Rams scored a pair of runs in the second inning to take the lead, but fell behind in the fifth on three by Saratoga. But Greene Central then rallied in its half of the fifth to push back ahead for good.

In the second, Don Holloman walked and Curtis Shirley reached on a single. Both runners advanced on an error on the play. Collyn Beaman grounded out, but scored Holloman. Jeffrey Warren then singled in Shirley.

In the fifth, Saratoga rallied for a 3-2 lead. Chris Gardner walked and Ricky Langley reached on a single. Mark Worley was safe on an error, scoring Gardner. Steve Taylor walked, and with two away, walks to David Goff and Terry Ellis forced in Langley and Worley to give Saratoga the lead.

But in the bottom of the inning, the Rams picked up two more to win it. Beaman reached on an error and Lee Jones walked with Warren loading them up with a hit. Jerry Speight then singled in two runs to give it to the Rams.

Panthers Top South Stokes, 47-39

DURHAM — North Pitt used quickness and a tight zone defense to offset South Stokes' tall front line and take a 47-39 victory over the Sauras in the semifinals of the State 3-A Basketball Tournament at Durham Senior High School Friday.

The Panthers, whose tallest player is 6-3, hustled and blocked out well to actually outrebound South Stokes, 36-28, the big factor in the game. The Sauras had two big front court men, 6-7 Kenny Dennard and 6-8 David Horner. Dennard, earlier this year signed a grant-inaid with Duke University.

But the Sauras were hurt by the fact that the tall forward was in foul trouble most of the night. Assigned to guard North Pitt star forward Donny Perkins in the second quarter, Dennard picked up his third foul just before halftime. He was called for his fourth personal in the third quarter and fouled out of the game with less than a minute left. Dennard, who led South Stokes' scoring with 18 points, was very effective inside during second period action until getting his third foul. He scored eight straight points in that quarter, all from underneath.

North Pitt, as usual, was led by Perkins, but he got plenty of help in the second half from guard Kenneth Roberson. The Panther forward scored 16 of his game high 20 points in the first half, while Roberson hit ten of the Panthers' 16 second half points.

North Pitt, red-hot early in the initial period, jumped out to a quick lead and managed to stay ahead the rest of the game despite several threats by the Sauras, who never gave up.

Panther Coach Cobby Deans expressed surprise after the game that North Pitt's 2-3 zone defense worked as well as it did.

"I didn't think it would work that well," Deans said. "But they matched up with our defense.'

"We were trying to shut off the big guy (Dennard) and they didn't move as well as I thought they might. That's not the defense we talked about using in practice, but it's what we've gone with all year. I guess you have to go with the bread-and-butter."

Offensively, Deans said North Pitt wanted to carry the ball to Dennard more after he got in foul trouble, but he was sagging back too much.

South Stokes controlled the opening tap of the game, but turned the ball over and the Panthers scored when Roberson followed Virgil Pilgreen's missed shot.

Dennard worked inside for a dunk on the next trip down the floor, but North Pitt had three straight baskets—two by Perkins—to take an 8-2 lead with 6:39 left in the quarter.

Doubleteamming the ball by the Panthers forced three Saura turnovers during the early going that allowed North Pitt to grab the lead.

The teams played pretty evenly for the remainder of the quarter, however, and a jumper from the key by Perkins gave North Pitt a 19-12 margin going into the second period.

Perkins added two more jump shots from the outside to start the second quarter and give the Panthers their biggest lead of the night, 23-12.

But the Sauras began to penetrate the North Pitt zone and Dennard went to work inside hitting three straight shots from underneath to cut the margin to five.

Pilgreen then scored on a follow-shot, but Dennard hit a turnaround in the lane, and Galen Shelton connected on a pair of baseline jumpers to pull Stokes within one, 25-24, with 2:15 left in the half.

The Panther defense tightened, however, shutting out the Sauras for the rest of the quarter while Roberson, Pilgreen and Perkins each made a field goal to give North Pitt a 31-24 halftime lead.

The Panthers shot poorly in the third period, hitting only three of 12, but South Stokes was nearly as cold and North Pitt managed to hold onto the lead in the low-scoring quarter, 37-33.

Perkins scored from underneath early in the final perid, before Dennard hit a turnaround from the lane to make it 39-35 at the 5:28 mark. The Panther defense then created three straight turnovers, however, and the offense once again began to click. Roberson drove down the lane for a layup over Horner, then hit a jump shot from the lane. A Saura pass was intercepted by North Pitt and fed to Perkins whose two-handed dunk all but sewed things up, giving the Panthers a 45-35 lead with 2:34 left.

North Pitt went into a stall, however, forcing the Sauras to foul and their hopes went down the drain when Dennard committed his fifth with 35 seconds remaining. The Panthers missed on two opportunities from the line, but Roberson hit a layup with nine seconds on the clock to make the final 47-39.

Dennard was the only South Stokes player in double figures, while Roberson added 17 to Perkins' 20.

North Pitt outshot the Sauras from the field, connecting on 23 of 51 for 45 per cent, compared with 19 of 51 for Stokes, 36 per cent.

The win sent the Panthers into last night's cnampionship championship game against Wake Forest-Rollesville, 53-51 winner over T.C. Roberson in Friday night's second game.

Watson also served as assistant at Wake Forest and Xavier of Cincinnati. He coached the Ferrum Junior College team to a 34-4 record in 1971.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Veteran guard Jim Barnett has been placed on National Basketball Association waivers, the Philadelphia 76ers announced Friday.

Barnett, 32, scored 66 points in 16 games with the 76ers this season after being picked up as a free agent.

Swimmers Do Well In State

CHAPEL HILL — Rose High School's swimmers swam their way to their best finish in recent years, as the boys took sixth place in the state championship meet Friday.

Among the placers for Rose's boys were the 200 medley relay team of Lance Timmons, John Bennett, John Richards and Bill Hamblen, who finished fourth overall.

Bennett was sixth in the 200-yard freestyle, while finishing fourth in the 500-yard freestyle. Richards was 10th in the 200-yard individual medley, and Hamblen was 10th in the 50-yard freestyle.

Timmons was fourth in the 100-yard freestyle and also was fourth in the 100-yard backstroke.

The girls' 200-yard medley relay team of Susan Tucker, Jennifer Wooles, Janet Gantt and Mary Ann Bennett was fifth, while the 400-yard freestyle relay team of Pat Moore, Selene Wheless, Chris Dunn and Kathy Conway finished ninth.

Gantt finished in a tie for 10th in the 50-yard freestyle and was 10th in the 100-yard butterfly. Tucker was 9th in the 100-yard freestyle and fifth in the 100-yard backstroke. Bennett finished 12th in the 500-yard freestyle.

"Of the 13 swimmers we took, 12 of them scored," Coach Tim Barnes said. "Considering all the meets that we had cancelled and the difficulty all the swimmers had in making times to compete in the state meet, this was a very successful event in placing as many swimmers as we did."

Rampants, Vikings Game Is Stalled, 4-4

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School and Kinston spent a couple of hours deciding nothing Friday afternoon, and were foiled in winding things up by being unable to shed a little light on the subject.

The Rampants, opening their baseball season, played to a 4-4 tie with Kinston at Guy Smith Stadium. Darkness closed in on the field, but officials were unable to get the lights at the stadium on, forcing the suspension of the game.

It will be concluded next Friday, when the two teams meet in Kinston. The conclusion of the first game will get underway at 3 p.m., with the other game following as soon as possible.

Rose used three pitchers during the contest, as did Kinston. Henry Baker started on the mound for the Rampants, but was relieved after four frames, trailing 2-1. Jeff Aldridge came on, and the Rampants staked him to a 4-2 lead in the bottom of the sixth, but he lost his control at the start of the seventh, and gave way to Perry Worthington, who held on for the tie. Rose lost a chance to score in the bottom of the seventh, leaving the game knotted.

Kinston drew first blood in the game, scoring a run in the first inning. With two away, Craig Hill got hold of a Baker fast ball and rode it out of the park in left center for a home run.

Rose came right back and tied it up on a cheap double, however. John Coffman led off the bottom of the first with a walk, and with one down, Mike Shank hit a pop-up to short right, and it just fell in before the diving fielder as Shank pulled up at second, and Coffman reached third. Wright Hooks hit a sacrifice fly to score Coffman and make it 1-1.

Kinston got an unearned run in the second to regain the lead. Kim Lamm led off with a single and was sacrificed to second. With two outs, Glenn Spence hit a grounder to first, which Mark Conway fielded and tossed to Baker, covering, but it was dropped, and Lamm, racing all the way home, slide in under the relay.

Rose halted a threat in the fourth when Bill Jones doubled just like Shank had earlier, with the ball just falling in on the right fielder. Two walks loaded the bases, but a strikeout ended it.

Rose threatened in the third when Ronnie Chapman reached on an error and stole second. He then stole third, but slid past the base and was tagged out. Another fourth inning threat left a runner at first and second.

Finally, in the sixth, the Rampants pushed over the go-ahead runs. Shank led off with a single to center, just the second hit of the day for Rose. Hooks walked and Joey Mattheis ran for him. Aldridge beat out a bunt, loading the bases and Danny Hester ran for him. Mark Conway singled in both Shank and Mattheis, and a double steal scored Hester for a 4-2 lead.

But after putting Kinston in the trap, the Rampants let them escape. In the top of the seventh, Proctor Williams and Joe Wiggs both walked, and another walk, to Earl Keith loaded them up and finished Aldridge. Worthington walked Craig Hill on a full count, forcing in Freeman.

Then, after getting two away, Marshall Whitfield singled to right, scoring Wiggs, with Keith, trying to score from second getting cut down at the plate, leaving it tied at 4-4.

Chapman led off with a single to the infield and he was sacrificed up. Hooks walked, and after Chapman stole third, courtsey runner Mattheis also moved up. But a popup and a strikeout ended the threat.

Relief pitcher Rawly Eastwick of the Cincinnati Reds turned in a 2.09 earned run average in 1976. He had an 11-5 record for 107 innings.

Conley Looks For Good Year

D. H. Conley first year softball coach Norma Respess believes her club will be strong this season, despite being very young.

"We're young, but very talented, I beleive," Miss Respess said. "We're more skilled in softball in comparison with other girls' sports here at Conley."

The Valkyries will be sporting a young infield and veteran outfield when they take to the field for their opening game with North Lenoir later this month. Of the 16 players on the team, only two are seniors and six are freshmen, Miss Respess said.

The freshmen on the team played together in a summer league last year and this has helped the Conley squad, according to Miss Respess.

The Valkyries have been practicing about three weeks and the infield positions are not settled yet, although four of the girls are probably assured of starting spots.

All-conference returnee Gail Cates should be starting at first base for Conley. She is joined in the infield by two "very bright prospects," according to Miss Respess, freshmen Joanne Franke and Lori Garrish.

Another returnee, Sheila Washington, will also be in the infield, but, aside from first base, it is unsure who will play where.

Other players, who are "question marks" right now, according to Miss Respess are Teresa Mills and Linda Payton, called one of the best hustlers on the team, along with Nancy Berg, Pam Manning and Nancy Hardison. Berg is a first-baseman while Manning can play either infield or outfield, according to Miss Respess. The positions of the others have not been set yet.

The Valkyries are "real enthusiastic and looking forward to the first game," Miss Respess said. They will play a light schedule with only conference games.

"We're not very strong in hitting thus far, but we're working on that. Skill-wise we should be one of the top teams in the conference."

Miss Respess said North Lenoir is the defending conference champion and the first game "will give us a good idea of what to expect."

Blue Jays, Mariners Get Wins

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Baseball's newest franchises will always have occasion to look kindly upon Friday, March 11, 1977. It was the day the Blue Jays and Mariners tasted victory for the first time.

Granted they were only the exhibition variety, but any victory tastes sweet when you're expected to lose a bundle during the season.

The Blue Jays, who were rained out of Thursday's scheduled opener, held the New York Mets to three hits and made off with a 3-1 triumph.

"It was," said Manager Roy Hartsfield, "a wonder day for all of us."

Meanwhile, the Mariners proved fast learners. They surrendered 16 runs while losing Thursday's opener to Oakland 16-10 but turned right around and polished off the A's by a 16-7 count Friday.

"How can a club 2½ hours old beat an established club 16 years old?" chortled Peter Bavasi, general manager of the Blue Jays.

Elsewhere, three of last year's division champs made their spring debuts—the world champion Cincinnati Reds get under way today—and only Kansas City came away a winner.

The American League West kings nipped the National League East champion Philadelphia Phillies 2-1 when rookie U.L. Washington singled with two out in the 10th inning, stole second and scored on a single by Dave Nelson.

Meanwhile, Toby Harrah slammed two home runs, including a tie-breaking shot in the seventh, to lead the Texas Rangers over the AL East champion New York Yankees 4-3.

In other games:

—Reggie Smith's two-out, two-run blast, one of four Los Angeles homers, capped a three-run ninth-inning rally that lifted the Dodgers over the Boston Red Sox 7-5.

—Two-run homers by Willie Horton and Tom Veryzer powered the Detroit Tigers past the Minnesota Twins 10-1. Minnesota's only tally was a home run by Dan Ford that cleared the wall at the 329-foot mark, brushed some palm trees and landed 100 feet behind them.

—The California Angels tagged San Diego's Butch Metzger, last year's rookie sensation, for eight runs in the second inning and whipped the Padres, 8-2.

—Cliff Johnson smacked a three-run homer and the Houston Astros stole eight bases in an 8-5 decision over the Montreal Expos.

—Von Joshua collected four RBI with a three-run homer and a sacrifice fly and Sal Bando homered to lead the Milwaukee Brewers over the Chicago Cubs, 6-3.

—Bob Coluccio scored on a passed ball in the 10th inning to give the Chicago White Sox a 7-6 triumph over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

—Rick Manning singled home the tie-breaking run in the 10th inning as the Cleveland Indians shaded the San Francisco Giants, 10-8.

—Rookie second baseman Bump Wills, son of former major league star Maury Wills, singled three times and drove in two runs as the Texas Rangers' 'B' squad beat the Atlanta Braves, 6-3.

Sports Briefs

HAZEL PARK, Mich. (AP) — Agreement has been reached between the Hazel Park Race Track and striking Local 79 of the Service Employees Union on a new tentative contract.

No details of the pact were released. The union includes cashiers and other workers at the track.

Local President Herb Tyner said Friday that a ratification vote would be taken Wednesday. If the pact is approved, the track will open its season March 18 with a special 10-race program that day.

The track had been scheduled to open its 122-day meet on Feb. 25.

The meet still will run to July 17, but 18 days will be lost. A track spokesman said that represents a loss of about $2.5 million to the state, horsemen and the track.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Cardinals middle linebacker Greg Hartle, who played out the option year of his contract last fall, is likely to sign a contract with the National Football League's Washington Redskins, the Globe-Democrat reported in today's editions.

The newspaper said the player had met several times in recent weeks with Redskins Coach George Allen.

Hartle, who was not available for comment, missed all but one 1976 game because of knee surgery. The third-year player is the only NFL player ever drafted out of Newberry College.

Eastern Wayne Trims Chargers

NEW HOPE — Eastern Wayne High School romped to a 9-0 victory over Ayden-Grifton Friday afternoon, handing the Chargers their second straight defeat.

Eastern scored all it needed in the first inning, getting one run. Batts walked, stole both second and third and scored on an error on the final steal.

Three more crossed for the Warriors in the second inning. Henderson was hit by a pitch and Grant singled. Dobbins walked to load the bases. Garrett singled in one run, and Batts brought in another with a sacrifice fly. Johnson then singled in Dobbins with the third run of the frame.

It stayed 4-0 until the sixth, when Eastern powered over five more runs. Batts walked and stole second, moving to third on a single by Sutton, who also stole up. Milkovitz then cracked out a three-run homer. Grant got things going again with a single, but Matthews finished it off with another homer, making it 9-0.

Ayden-Grifton goes to Kinston on Tuesday.

Philadelphia's Free Shackles Super Sonics

By The Associated Press

Lloyd Free is honest about his shot-making potential.

"Guys have got to respect me from long range and they know if they get close to me or give me room, I can always go over them and score," says the Philadelphia 76ers guard.

The Seattle SuperSonics saw all of Free's moves—and then some—as he scored 26 points to pace Philadelphia's 126-122 National Basketball Association victory Friday night.

In the other NBA games, the Atlanta Hawks bested the Denver Nuggets 100-95; the New York Nets tripped the Phoenix Suns 82-73; the Buffalo Braves stopped the Chicago Bulls 95-90; the Houston Rockets ripped the Indiana Pacers 124-109; the Kansas City Kings edged the Portland Trail Blazers 114-112 and the Los Angeles Lakers beat the Washington Bullets 94-91.

Philadelphia twice led by 25 points, the last time at 73-48 with one second left in the first half. But it took Free's consistent last-quarter shooting to cool a Seattle comeback.

The Sonics gradually narrowed the gap and trailed 98-85 after three periods behind Slick Watts, Dennis Johnson and Mike Green. A pair of baskets by Johnson in the final quarter put Seattle within 112-107, but Free hit a long jumper to increase Philadelphia's lead to seven. Julius Erving matched Free's point total for the 76ers.

Hawks 100, Nuggets 95

Armond Hill made two free throws with four seconds remaining to help Atlanta beat Denver. Hill scored 26 points and John Drew 25 to lead the Hawks. High scorers for the Nuggets were David Thompson with 26 points and Bobby Jones with 17.

Nets 82, Suns 73

Mike Bantom scored six points and pulled down 10 rebounds in the third quarter to spark the New York Nets over Phoenix. The loss snapped a three-game losing streak and a five-game home losing streak for the Nets. The Suns have lost 11 in a row.

Braves 95, Bulls 90

Randy Smith scored 35 points as Buffalo beat Chicago and snapped the Bulls' seven-game winning streak. Smith hit 14 of 23 shots, including the key basket of the game with 41 seconds to play, which extended the Braves' lead to 91-86.

Rockets 124, Pacers 109

Rudy Tomjanovich scored 13 points in the last six minutes of play to lead Houston over Indiana. Tomjanovich finished the game with 27 points to lead all scorers.

Kings 114, Blazers 112

Brian Taylor scored four points in the final 40 seconds to give Kansas City a close victory over Portland. The Trail Blazers, who lost three players by fouls in the fourth quarter, again played without injured center Bill Walton.

Lakers 94, Bullets 91

Kareem Abdul Jabbar's 31 points and 20 rebounds led Los Angeles over Washington. The Lakers trailed 75-69 going into the fourth period before Jabbar's 10-foot hook shot put them ahead for the last time, 91-89, with two minutes to play.

Southern Wayne Nips Greene C.

DUDLEY — Southern Wayne scored early and held on for a 3-1 victory over Greene Central Friday afternoon.

The Saints pushed over a pair of runs in the second inning. Steve Bryant walked and was sacrificed up. Dove reached on an error and Rose singled in Bryant. When the ball got past the outfielder on the play, Dove also came around to score.

Southern Wayne added another run in the fourth. Cyrus reached on a two-base error and scored on a hit by Bryant.

Greene Central's only run came in the seventh inning. Jay Carraway singled and Russell Brann walked. Donald Holloman singled in Carraway, but the Saints managed to snuff out the rally at that point.

The Rams, now 1-1, were to play Saratoga on Saturday, then are idle until next Saturday when they pay a return visit to Saratoga.

New Heart Diagnostic Tools Are Being Used Here

Text And Photographs By Carol Tyer

It's amazing, it's fascinating, it's reassuring. . . to know that with no pain and relatively little inconvenience, heart specialists can now learn so much about how your—not the, but your—heart works.

Two pieces of equipment in the office of Greenville Cardiac Graphics Laboratory are fine examples—the echocardiograph and the Holter monitor.

Mrs. Trudy Blessing, a physician's assistant, administered me an echocardiogram. I lay on an examining table and watched along with her the interior valves of my heart at work. There was no pain, not even any "funny" sensations, and no concern about x-ray effects, because it's an ultrasound process. Almost as much information is obtainable with this test as major surgery used to give, Mrs. Blessing said.

First, I met with Dr. Donald Tucker and Mrs. Blessing together and was told about the test itself. It is a rare occurrence for someone in good health, like me, with no prior symptoms to be given the test at all, they told me. Echocardiograms usually are done only following referral from one's family physician or internist when some valve or other related problem is suspected. Blue Cross pays 80 per cent on most of these procedures, but only, of course, when the procedure is medically indicated. Often a murmur or a click, heard by a physician, is what prompts the test, though, often, it's some symptom like excessive seemingly unwarranted fatigue, palpitations, or pain.

Thickening of the aortic or the mitral valves, caused by calcification of these valves, is a condition often diagnosed by the echo cardiogram. It's correctible, if caught in time, by surgery.

Mitral insufficiency and aortic insufficiency, failure of these valves to close properly and subsequent alteration of blood flow, are two other conditions often seen via this test.

Another is mitral valve prolapse, a condition seen in many young women. Nine times out of 10, persons who have this condition are women and it seems to run in families. Since its disclosure is becoming so much easier, thanks to echocardiography, it's beginning to be believed that it may not be an abnormality at all, but simply something many women have, Mrs. Blessing said. Nonetheless, some women who have the condition do have symptoms of tiredness and racing of the heart after exertion. Since it seems to predispose one to heart infection, persons having it are advised to take antibiotics before dental work or other surgery is done—as a precaution.

Hypertension can also be detected by the echocardiogram, since there is a thickening of the back wall of the heart. Also detectible by echocardiography is fluid around the heart, and it's possible to tell, not only whether it's there, but how much there is. Fluid detection is probably the only emergency procedure done with the echocardiograph at this time, Mrs. Blessing said.

Mrs. Blessing, who has a B. S. in chemistry and zoology from N. C. State University, and who is a graduate of Duke University's Physician's Associate Program, had to undergo additional specialized training at Duke in order to learn to administer echocardiography. She said she was unsure of how she'd like it when she began, but soon realized what a dynamic organ the heart is and how fascinating its study was and would continue to be, for her. She said echocardiography is one of the duties of her job she enjoys most now.

The machine, which is the only one in Eastern North Carolina, cost about $15,000.

Holter Monitor

While visiting the Cardiac Graphics Lab, I met Tom Smith, a local man who was being "wired" to wear a Holter monitor for 24 hours. He said he has had some heart rhythm problems and his physicians wanted to see just when these problems were occurring.

"Wearing a Holter is literally having an electrocardiogram taken for 24 hours, not just for a few seconds as is usually done in a doctor's office," Dr. Tucker said. "We ask the wearer to engage in as many of his normal activities as possible—work, whatever exercise he normally takes, sexual activity, getting angry with the boss or the kids or whoever, eating, toilet activities—everything. We ask him, any time he feels anything unusual, any palpitations or whatever, to press a button on the recorder. An L. E. D. clock tells him the exact time and he is asked to record on a schedule what he was doing at the time.

When the recording is read, the times he has noted will be checked especially closely to determine exactly what was going on with his heart at that time.

The record of 24 hours can be read in 24 minutes by special equipment and specially trained personnel at the Bowman Gray School of Medicine.

"The use of the Holter is invaluable in helping us find rhythm problems we might have missed before," Dr. Tucker said. "Often, we've been able to recommend pacemakers or medication for persons who might never have received the benefit of these methods of treatment before."

AN ECHOCARDIOGRAPHIC SESSION. . .is conducted by Mrs. Blessing on a subject who wishes to be unidentified.

Gilmore T-Shirts Called Absurd

By JACQUELINE HUARD

AMHERST, Mass. (UPI) — James Bozony says the only thing more absurd than the Gary Gilmore T-shirts he is selling is the person who wears it.

Bozony is selling Gilmore T-shirts for $5.95 each bearing the convicted murderer's name and the date he faced a firing squad.

"It's a nice concise piece of satire, the shirt itself," said Bozony, 23, a fiction writer and graduate student at the University of Massachusetts.

"The only thing more absurd than Gary Gilmore's death itself, is the T-shirt, and then the person wearing it," he said.

The shirts made under his newly-formed company, "In Poor Taste," sold immediately. Bozony made 100 more and said he is already talking to distributors nationally and in Japan and Canada.

The black T-shirt has Gilmore's name in two inch letters across the front. To the left, over the heart, is a four inch white square with a black bull's eye or target in the center.

Below Gilmore's name is written "Point of the Mountain, Utah, January 17, 1977," the place and date of the first execution in the United States in more than one decade. Emblazoned on the back are the words, reportedly Gilmore's last, "Let's do it."

"I got the idea when I was in New York from looking at the headlines about Gilmore. Once I read he had a target on his shirt, that gave me the idea for the T-shirt," Bozony said.

Bozony said he himself believes in capital punishment and felt Gilmore "had a right to die and deserved to die."

The decision to begin marketing the T-shirts came when he realized "it had to happen. Someone had to do it and it's me," Bozony said.

He said making the T-shirts doesn't bother him, but "the obscene phone calls have just started. Some say I need a psychiatrist, or 'you're sick.'"

"I write black humor. The T-shirt's a much more convenient medium to make my point, sell my short stories. I look at the shirt as a kind of piece of historical journalism," Bozony said.

"I think one of the absurdities and one of the things I'm satirizing is this sense of ethics that allowed us to save a man's life twice and then to execute him," he said "Where's our sense of values if we're willing to save a man's life twice only to publicly execute him?"

A Flowering Tree, A Magnificant Fern

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

AN ALMOND IN FLOWER AND A HUGE FERN — are objects of pride and enjoyment for their owners-growers. In the photograph above, an almond tree at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bissette on West Longmeadow is now in full flower, bearing pinkish-white blossoms. "It's the real thing, a nut producing tree," Bissette said. "My son-in-law, who has a 40 acre almond ranch at Modesto, California, sent me two trees in 1970. Unless a freeze comes, we expect the tree to bear nuts this year, since it's now more than five years old." The second tree, Bissette noted, is planted in a shady spot and is not doing as well as the one pictured here. So far as is known, this is the only flowering nut-producing almond in Greenville.

In the photograph below, an unusually fine specimen of a hanging fern is shown. Belonging to Ms. Swanee Roberson Spain, the Anna Foster fern is the showpiece of the fern and potted-plant portion of Roberson's Nursery a few miles south of Greenville on N.C. 43. "I started it three years ago from a cutting brought to me from Florida," Ms. Spain commented. Now approximately eight feet high and measuring about 22 feet in circumference, the rich green plant presses against the top of the plastic covering the greenhouse and the bottom fronds are taking root in the soil. A hybrid, Ms. Spain noted "it has both the lacy and the Boston type leaves." Ms. Spain has turned down some attractive offers for this showpiece.

Resort Opens In Dominican Republic

By FREDERICK M. WINSHIP
United Press International

The first component of a $42 million beachfront resort has opened in the Dominican Republic near the town of La Romana. It consists of 60 private coral stone, palm thatched villas, indoor and outdoor restaurants, tennis courts and other athletic areas, picnic grounds, an amphitheater, marina and six meditation pads.

American entrepreneur Wayne Fuller has called his resort Dominicus Americanus but more often than not refers to it in conversation as "the new Tahiti."

"There's nothing quite like it in the world," says the youthful, handsome Hoosier who made it big in life insurance, apartment development, investment banking, entertainer management and newspaper publishing before he was 40. "We have 2,000 acres of untouched tropics and three miles of the most beautiful talcum beach in the world. And its closer to Miami and New York than Puerto Rico."

Dominicus Americanus is not for everyone," he is frank in saying. "It's not for people who like posh worldwide hotel chains. It's for people who are willing to pay $60 a day to get away from it all for leisurely living and meditation.

Dominicus Americanus is fortunately located 15 minutes by road from the La Romana International Airport and contiguous to the vast Gulf and Western Industries Inc. resort complex which already is a tourist magnet. Land, construction materials and labor are at cost levels of about 20 years ago, another attraction to Americans interested in a second home in the winter warm Caribbean.

INNOCENT INSANITY — Editor Sean Kelly displays a copy of fantasy magazine, "Heavy Metal," recently as he stands in his New York City office. "I think there are certain innocent dreams and fantasies people have and it might do them a world of good to see them written and drawn," says Kelly of the slick new magazine. (AP Wirephoto).

Andy Capp Drawn As A Stereotype

CARTOONIST — Reg Smythe, a modest, bankerish, man with a North English accent, works on panel of the Andy Capp character he created. Smythe refuses to apologize for Andy being less than a model citizen. (AP Wirephoto)

By RICHRD BLYSTONE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Twenty years of dogged goldbricking have made Andy Capp male chauvinism's answer to Blondie, a comic strip antihero whose 60-watt nose and ever-present cloth cap are known to 250 million readers in 43 countries.

And 20 years of hard toil have left Reg Smythe as obscure as the postal clerk he used to be, a modest, bankerish man with a North Country accent who shuns the big city and still does his own work.

Smythe refuses to apologize for Andy being less than a model citizen, and confesses chronic aversion to the dishpan himself. A big reason for Andy's success, Smythe says, is, "It was the first time there's been a cartoon where the man wasn't henpecked."

Andy's idea of caring for his wife, Flo, is to keep her in shape waiting on him at the gallop. To Women's Lib, Smythe would simply point out that the long-suffering Flo "comes over as the nicest character in the thing, so the artist is obviously pro-woman."

With his flat hat and dismal mill town habitat, Andy is the stereotype of the British working class man. At the same time his indolent image is one that Britain, floundering in debt and crippled by low production, is desperately trying to shake.

"That's never bothered me," says Smythe. "If there's a system where you can get as much on the dole as you can by working you're going to be a bloody fool to go to work, aren't you?

"I don't go along with all this 'dignity of work.' You should get down in the pits and see the blokes working there. No dignity there on your knees."

"I don't make Andy Capp endearing," Smythe insists. "That's the trouble, I don't. There's nothing particularly endearing about the way that he does things. He's selfish. He has no sense of humor.

"But people have made things of him that I never intended. They've tried to make him broader. I didn't know there was any social significance in Andy till the eggheads told me."

Unlike Andy, whose eyes and scalp have never been glimpsed by the most faithful of his readers, Smythe has spectacles, gray temples, well-tailored clothes and a seven-day work week in which "sometimes I stay up all night just trying to find the right word."

But both are left-handed, 5-foot-6, childless and pushing 60, Smythe says. And both like tall women and the warm feeling you get in the cheap standing room area at soccer matches.

Smythe finds wealth and celebrity uncomfortable.

He was dismayed when acquaintances quit using swear words in his presence, and he still uses the same old straight drawing pen as in 1957 when he dumped the first clumsily drawn Andy on a London Daily Mirror editor's desk and fled.

"It's my whole life, really. I don't have any hobbies. I haven't traveled because it would take me away from the cartoon. Also because it seems to me a waste of time. Life's so short. You might as well stay with the people you know and love."

Brazil's Entry Test For College Is Crucial

By SERGIO LEITAO

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — If you are a Brazilian and you speak English well enough to know that "nonsense" implies "foolishness," then you have a solid chance of going to university.

Meanings of words and phrases in foreign languages are among the thousands of answers students are being asked to give in this year's "vestibular," a massive, week-long battery of tests for admission to Brazilian universities.

In Portuguese-speaking Brazil, passing the vestibular is the basic requirement for entering a university. Unlike in the United States, high school grades, teacher recommendations and college interviews count for little or nothing as credit for college-bound Brazilians.

Recently, more than 1 million Brazilian secondary school graduates sat down for the gruelling, make-it-or-break-it exams. About two thirds were expected to fail the complex, multiple-choice-question tests administered in high school gyms, public libraries and even sports arenas.

For those who pass the exams and enter universities, admission is free at the government-owned universities. But the course could be highly expensive for those who pass the test in privately-owned universities.

In the Gama Filho University in Rio de Janeiro, for instance, the medical and engineering courses could cost as much as U.S. $120 a month.

Ministry of education statistics presented by a member of congress last year revealed that the military-dominated government decreased the percentage of funds for education from 11.07 per cent of the budget to 4.95 per cent in 1974. The budget has drawn criticism from some faculty members and opposition congressmen who claim the regime is stressing technical training at the expense of broader education.

Other critics say exams like the vestibular, with narrow selection criteria, deny students the broader chance afforded by essays, interviews and recommendations as entrance procedures.

Defenders of the tests say they are fair because they are based on hard data and not on variable factors dependent on regions, special favors or human error.

COMPUTER FINDS KISS STIRRING

WASHINGTON (AP) — A kiss is one of the latest methods developed for turning on a computer. A Japanese company has produced a computer that only registers lip prints, reports National Geographic. The computer won't work until the operator presses his lips against it and only if the kiss stirs something in its memory bank.

Most computers are more easily turned on, and the electronic marvels have aided and abetted fraud, theft, embezzlement and military and industrial espionage, Geographic notes.

save money... save energy

First, check your insulation. A house must be insulated and insulated well. Proper insulation is probably the most important single factor in conserving heat . . .

Second, be sure windows and doors fit tightly. Storm windows or sheets of clear plastic can be used . . .

Third, when the sun is shining, open the blinds and draperies; close them on cloudy days and at night . . . and,

By RICHARD H. GROWALD
UPI National Reporter

FISHERS ISLAND, N. Y. (UPI) — The ferry Olinda is roller coasting the mile from New London, Conn., and the crew is grinning over seasick jokes.

Purser Arnold Toivonen, selling $1.75 tickets to ungrinning passengers, suggests there is a connection between Fishers Island — its maple and locust trees fringing the blue horizon — and the notice on the wall above his head.

The notice informs passengers in Connecticut Yankee understatement: "Rule No. 5: Never abandon a vessel — particularly a wooden boat — unless actually forced to do so." Toivonen says Fishers Island is a boat being abandoned by its crew.

"I don't think there were two kids born on the island the past year," Toivonen says. "There hasn't exactly been a population explosion." Half of the eight-mile-long island in Long Island Sound blames the other half.

The eastern half is speckled with mansions, swimming pools and golf clubs of the summertime rich. The western half houses those who serve — the grocer, the plumber, the ferry chief, the justice of the peace and the fellow who runs the hotel built to house the chauffeurs of the rich.

The westerners' woe is that the rich, beset with taxes but not with the itch to have the butlers that served grandpapa, are not spending as much as they once did. Some 50 of the mansions are for sale.

The chauffeurs' hotel is now willing to take mainlanders, who come in the summer driving Pintos and Chevettes.

Plumber Jim Wall, who can remember when the native year-round population topped 500, reflects a westerner mood about the eastern summer establishment.

"Sometimes you get the feeling they think we're just domestic servants. They will telephone at 10:30 p.m. and tell you to come fix a leaky faucet right now," he says.

Another native says, "I do get sick of them thinking my role in life should be standing at the ferry dock and pulling my forelock when they get on and off."

The ferry itself is the subject of westerner complaint.

"Our life style is governed by the ferry boat," Wall says. During the winter the ferry service does not run in time to get islanders to the mainland for jobs that might take up the slack of lessened island income. "We can't swim like the deer," says grocer Henry Walsh.

Deer regularly swim not from Connecticut a mile away but from 12 miles away, from Gardiners Island at the far end of Long Island. They come to breed. They are seasonal visitors, like the summer residents.

"The summer visitors have it better than the deer. The Coast Guard reported finding a man out in a row boat trying to club a swimming deer to death," Walsh says. "Things aren't all that good on the island. But I'm sure the fellow clubbing the deer was no Fishers Island man."

Walsh is not given to bad-mouthing the isle.

"We like to talk about this being a paradise island," he says. Now 71, Walsh came first in 1918 as a golf caddy for the rich. He prospered as a builder and grocer and operates the summertime seafood restaurant.

"I know most of the summertime residents," he says, gesturing to the sentry box that guards the eastern half. "And I know my place. When the wife and I had our golden wedding anniversary, why they all came around, most of them with presents. But, of course, I'm not invited to their houses.

"We're not the same kind of people. How could we be? We didn't go to the same school," he says. Unlike other natives, Walsh fights other battles.

He won his war with the Post Office. When Zip Codes came in, Fishers Island was given a code, 11943, correctly designating it as being in New York State. "It was awful," says Walsh.

The Post Office, noting the code, zipped all Fishers Island mail to Long Island. Once at the tip of Long Island, the mail had to be rerouted 300 miles, through New York City, to reach New London to catch the ferry. Walsh and other islanders made noises.

Now Fishers Island has a Connecticut zip code, 06320. "And now mail takes a week less to reach us," the grocer says. "Of course, there once was talk about the island breaking away from New York and joining Connecticut.

"In those days, Connecticut didn't have a sales tax. But our four lobstermen protested; they said if the island joined Connecticut they would have to share their New York lobster grounds with Connecticut fishermen. We stayed in the Empire State," Walsh says.

The native residents muster at the volunteer fire hall or at John Gata's building supply shop or down by the ferry dock and probe their future. They talk quietly about the chances the rich may weary of their enclave and open their $20,000-an-acre land for development, something to attract more residents and more income.

"There's no question the rich are having a new life style," Walsh says. "Why until after World War II, the cooks, the butlers and maids would come into my grocery for the shopping.

"Then the madames themselves began coming in, with the chauffeurs. The chauffeur would push the cart and the madame would point with her glases on a stick at something and tell the chauffeur to put two cans in the cart basket.

"Nowadays, its just the madame coming in, sometimes with her husband to push the cart. The butlers and chauffeurs are about all gone," he says. Skipper Mark B. Teaster of the ferry Olinda agrees.

"A few years ago we had lots of limousines coming over on the ferry. Now there's just one Rolls-Royce left," he says. He smiles. "We do take special care of that Rolls."

The ferry boatmen, none of whom live on the island, chuckle about the islanders. They chuckle a lot about the summertime residents, who pay 75 per cent of the local taxes, having built a million dollar school for Fishers Island children.

The school has 65 pupils and 10 teachers. "I figure it costs the taxpayers of New York about $9,000-a-year per pupil," Walsh says.

"Mustn't knock the school," says another westerner. "It's about the only thing going for us to attract more residents."

Carmel Dislikes Problem Of Tourists

By WILLIAM SCHIFFMANN
Associated Press Writer

CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA, Calif. (AP) — Find a fun place to live, and tourists will be right behind to enjoy for a few hours or a few days what you have all year round.

The 5,070 residents of this Monterey Peninsula town, founded at the turn of the century as a writers' and artists' colony, want the sightseers because they help keep their taxes low. But they don't want tour buses belching fumes and funneling folks in and out by the hour. Nor do they want the fast-food chains and cheap souvenir stands that follow.

As far back as 1924, when Perry Newberry was mayor, Carmel wrestled with the problem. Newberry's answer, promptly ignored, was to fence in the town to keep the tourists out.

Today, one suggestion is for a "human sanctuary" fenced in by total local control of the area.

"The town is aimed at people who come for overnight or a week or longer," said David Hughes, vice mayor and owner of David's, an art, jewelry and shoe store catering to visitors. "We're not geared for an influx of tourists."

City officials are careful to point out that there are two kinds of tourists — the "two-hour wonders" and the guests. The difference between them is the key to the survival of Carmel and other communities which rely on the tourist trade.

Carmel presses to its sandy bosom the "guests," those who spend one or more nights in the city's hotels and motels, eat in her restaurants, buy local arts and crafts and attend cultural events. That's because 87 per cent of the community's revenue comes from lodging and sales taxes.

The tour buses still come, but a city ordinance has halted their travel on the town's narrow streets. They no longer clog traffic near the curving beach. They must enter on one designated road and park along one designated street.

Richard Tevis, catalyst of a group called SCAAT, or Sensible Citizens Are Anti-Tourist, one of several groups formed from the fertile soil of anti-tourism, says Carmel always has had trouble with tourists. He also says that the town, where the problem has multiplied in the past 10 years, has become a pioneer in controlling the invasion.

"The real issue," he says, "is the question of the community's right to self-determination. I feel very strongly that any place like this, a lovely and fragile spot where the great majority are non-business residents, has a right to restrict the intrusion of outsiders."

To preserve its charm, Carmel has no traffic lights, no home mail delivery, few street signs and no sidewalks in residential areas. To prevent any erosion of that charm, it forbids neon signs, discount stores, chain and drive-in restaurants and buildings of more than two stories.

It also has a short-term moratorium on new commercial construction over 16,000 square feet, although a new shopping mall is nearing completion at the north end of the downtown business area.

Several years ago, Gunnar Norberg, now the mayor, wanted to go even further to preserve the town. He proposed a Heritage City, a plan rejected several times by the state legislature. As Norberg describes it, the concept would provide a "human sanctuary" by placing development inside the city under the control of the city council.

Under the plan, city officials would have the right to approve any new freeway construction inside the Heritage area. Stricter pollution controls could be established. All land zoning could be frozen, and even return to lower levels — commercial to residential — and the size and type of business could be restricted by the council.

Norberg still has hope that the plan will be approved, thus saving Carmel and setting an example for other California communities with similar problems — Mendocino, high on the north coast, and Bolinas, a tiny town on lush Duxbury Point in Marin County north of San Francisco.

Mendocino, settled in 1852, always has been attractive to tourists, and the town is worried about its future. When a former restaurant chain owner, Bob Peterson, bought several Main Street properties, residents became upset. Bumper stickers reading "Don't Carmelize Mendocino" appeared when he renovated the stately old Mendocino Hotel and announced plans to demolish another structure nearby and erect an artists' sanctuary.

Bolinas set up signs banning visitors last summer when water was scarce. Many residents called for a permanent ban, and there still is a problem with scruffy wanderers who drift in with the warm weather.

But Carmel, the old mission town about 125 miles south of San Francisco and just off U.S. 1, the highway that winds along the rugged Pacific Coast almost the entire length of the state, is the most famous. And its controls seem to be working.

The tourists still come, but as Norberg says, "People who come here say 'How is it that you have kept so much when it seems to disappear everywhere else?'

"I am only sorry I could not save more."

Host Seminar

The School of Medicine at East Carolina University will host 59 pathologists and clinical chemists from 21 states and Brazil for a 5½ day seminar in Greenville, beginning March 21.

Dr. Seymour Bakerman, professor and chairman of the Department of Pathology at the medical school will conduct the session which will include a complete review of laboratory medicine.

Bakerman said the seminar will provide 40 hours of instruction accredited by the American Medical Association and 40 accent credits from the American Association for Clinical Chemistry.

Those attending the workshop include 46 MD pathologists, 10 PhDs and three technologists, and range from Arizona, New York, Illinois, Indiana and other states, as well as from Brazil.

Bakerman said two seminars will be held each year in Greenville, one in the Spring and another in the Fall. He noted that he will conduct similar programs in the Rocky Mountains area and at Hanover, N.H. at other times during the year.

The sessions will be held at the Ramada Inn, beginning Monday and running through Noon, Saturday.

TRI-LEVEL PLAN LIVABLE YEAR ROUND

RECREATION ROOM, 3 BATHS FURNISH PLAN

By Jerry Bishop

Set to savor scenery from four sides and three levels, the Laurel, a three bedroom design, functions equally well as a vacation retreat or year round home.

Decks and patio dominate the exterior, which uses natural materials and plenty of glass to absorb and blend with its surroundings. Inside, the design offers a luxurious home that takes in three bedrooms, three baths, hobby and recreation rooms, and eat-in kitchen.

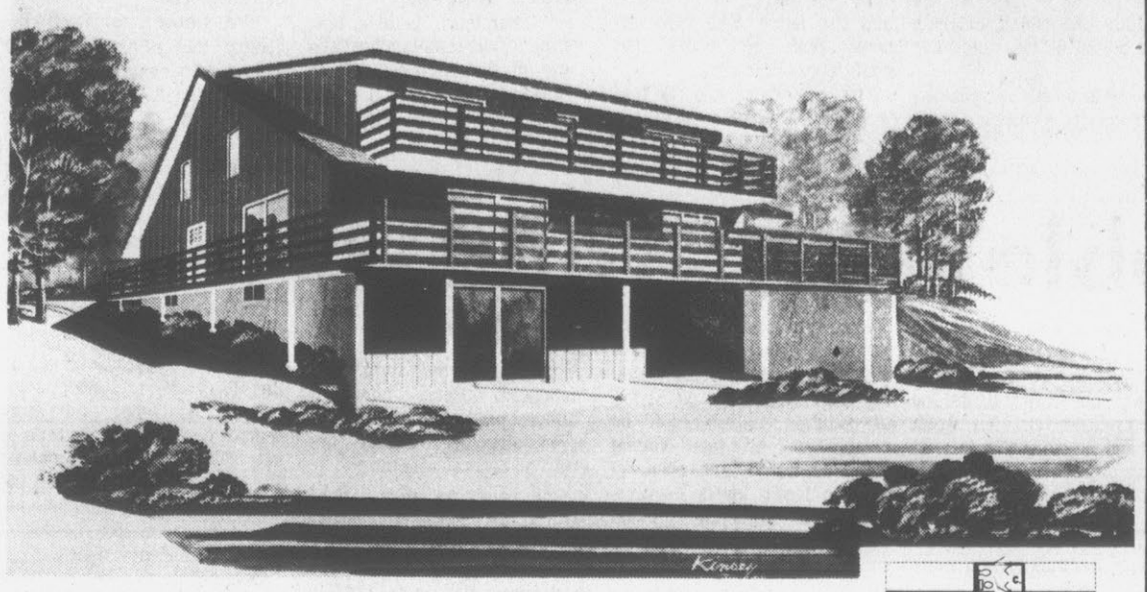

For indoor/outdoor livability, a patio extends the basement level, and decks edge and encircle the first and second floors.

Entry is across the first floor deck and into the living room, a spacious area for entertaining. A corner fireplace is suggested as a relaxing accompaniment to the gathering of friends.

A second entry from the deck leads into the ktichen. Completely furnished and edged by a snack bar, the kitchen promises to be a popular spot for informal conversation and quick meals.

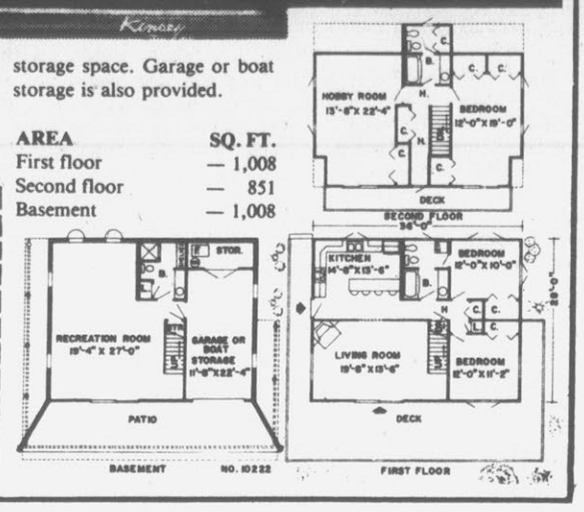

Bordering the kitchen is a large full bath, compartmented and open to hallway and rear bedroom for efficiency. Another bedroom and two hall closets complete the entry level.

The second floor spotlights a 19-ft. bedroom, equipped with three closets and fringed by a compartmented bath. The bedroom is favored with sliding glass doors that connect the room to the upper deck. Also favored with access to the deck, the hobby room supplies an abundance of space for use as sewing room, playroom, office, or additional sleeping space.

On the basement level, plans call for a third bath with built-in shelves and linen closet, a recreation room, and storage space. Garage or boat storage is also provided.

ON THE HOUSE

Garden tools need more attention than those used only in the home workshop. They often are wielded carelessly, sometimes for purposes for which they were not intended. And they are left outside in all kinds of weather, resulting in a variety of ailments, including rust, splits and dry rot.

The easiest way to keep such tools in good condition is to clean them immediately after they have been used and to take them inside and keep them in a special place. All of us know that, of course, but what so often happens is that we are so tired after working in the garden that all we can think of is to sit down and take it easy. No matter how well we take care of the tools, though, the natural rough usage that they get takes its toll in various ways. When this occurs, lots of extra wear can be obtained from most tools if they are repaired before being used again. Repeated use of something that is damaged can make it irreparable as well as unsafe.

One of the most common problems is a split wooden handle. It can usually be put back in working order again by applying some waterproof glue to the split portions and then taping it well. In doing this, it is important to avoid splitting the handle even further when applying the glue. After the tape has been wound around the repaired part, the tool should not be used for 24 hours to allow time for the glue to dry properly. This type of repair will do for most breaks of this kind, but if there is a necessity for an even stronger remedy, follow the gluing and taping with the drilling of two holes in the handle and the inserting of carriage bolts into them. Get the round-headed kind and place nuts on the other ends.

Should a handle break so badly that it cannot be repaired, buy a new handle if the rest of the tool is in good shape. Since handles are attached in different ways, take the tool to the store with you to be sure you get the proper type. Such handles are sold by hardware stores, building supply dealers, do-it-yourself centers, lumber yards and garden supply establishments.

A rivet that comes loose can be removed by splitting one end and then pulling it out. It can be replaced with a new rivet or a simple bolt and nut. Rust and caked dirt will yield to a wire brush and steel wool. Shovels, spades and hoes that are out of shape can be hammered back to usefulness by placing them on a hard surface. To resharpen the edges, use a rough metal file followed by a fine-toothed file. In any kind of sharpening, always follow the lines of the original edges. Tools with moving parts, such as pruning shears, should be lubricated occasionally. Be certain to wipe off any excess oil.

If you have to splice a garden hose, remember two things: get a splicer that is the right size for your hose and tell the dealer whether the hose is rubber or plastic. If it is plastic, dip the ends of the hose into hot water for a few minutes before splicing.

(Sweating windows and walls, squeaky floors and stairs, and patching plaster and concrete, are among the 35 subjects discussed in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

Here's the Answer

Q. — We would like to install slate tiles in our foyer. The present floor is wood. Can the slate be placed right over the wood?

A. — Yes. Be sure the present floor is solid before beginning. Nail down any loose boards. Remove any grease, wax or loose paint. If there are obstructions or odd spaces in the foyer that will require cutting some of the tiles, rent a tile cutter from the place where you purchase the slate. Do not take home the cutter until you are ready to do the job, otherwise you will find yourself paying for rental time while the cutter lies idle.

Q. — In laying a foundation for a small building which we intend to construct, how deep should the footings be? We have run into differences of opinion about this.

A. — Nobody can answer that question except your local building code authorities. That's because the depth of footings depends on conditions in your area. Since you live in a section where the winters are fairly severe, the footings probably must be about 4 feet deep, but you still must check to determine the legal requirements.

Q. — I understand there is an x-ray process whereby it can be determined whether there is sufficient insulation in a house. Can you tell me anything about it?

A. — The process is called thermography and utilizes infrared scanning to see where heat is being lost through insufficient insulation. It's not X-raying that does this, but a special camera that detects heat radiated from a surface and converts it into an electrical signal. The signal is shown on a kind of miniature TV receiver and requires analyzation to determine where and at what rate heat is being lost.

Q. — A few years ago I read about a homemade finishing mixture of half turpentine, half boiled linseed oil. I put aside the clipping, but had no occasion to do anything about it until recently when I had to refinish a cabinet that was getting seedy looking. I removed all the wax from the cabinet, which turned the varnish from very dirty to fairly dirty. I then applied the turpentine-linseed oil mixture according to the instructions in the article and rubbed it well for an hour one day and two hours the next day. No matter what I do, however, the surface of the wood remains sticky and oily. Can you help me?

A. — Sure. Either you misread the story or the writer forgot to include the most important part — that such a mixture should be applied only to raw wood or wood from which the original finish has been removed.

(How to choose insulation and do the installing yourself are explained in Andy Lang's helpful booklet, "Saving Money by Insulating," available by sending 35 cents and a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions cannot be answered individually.)

Smoke Alarm Can Be Lifesaver

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

A small fire in the home can emphasize the enormous job of protecting the family from fire's big killer, smoke inhalation.

That was one woman's experience when she froze at the sight of three-foot-high flames leaping from a frying pan and licking her cupboards.

"It all happened so fast. I had forgotten about the oil in the pan and had left the room for only a few seconds. What if I had taken a nap — I shiver when I think of the heavy smoke and oily webs that were left on the ceiling within that few minutes before I smothered the fire."

Now she wants a fire alarm and asks how you choose one. Which type is best? How long do they last?

These questions were put to Jim Miller, president of Intermatic, makers of many kinds of home security devices and several kinds of smoke alarms that are "not different from others that also have the UL (Underwriters Laboratories) seal of approval," he says.

"If you are using one smoke alarm — and one would do for a house of about 1,000 square feet — it is best to put it in the stairwell near the bedrooms. You must be able to hear it."

A second alarm could be installed in a family room if extra protection is needed, he advises. And some people like to put extra ones outside sleeping areas that are spread out. If there are several stories in the house, the alarms could be installed at the top of each stairway leading to a bedroom.

Although Miller makes both the photoelectric alarm that plugs into an outlet and the ionization alarm that can be put up on the ceiling with two screws, he uses the ion model in his own home at Spring Grove, Ill., "because it works a bit faster and time is important in a fire." Smoke alarms give early warning at a time when the invisible products of combustion are being released and even before the smoke or smoldering stage.

The alarm is an irritating, beeping whine which should disturb even a heavy sleeper. And if there is a dog, there will be a double alert — most dogs howl when the alarm sounds.

"Until a few years ago there were only expensive thermal sensors that would cost in the thousands to install. When a fire starts it is not very hot, usually, except directly above the fire, so a number of these sensors would be needed to adequately protect a home.

"The ion dual chamber smoke alarm was a technological breakthrough because it senses the change in the air. You don't need little sensors. One smoke alarm can do a good job," he explains.

Fire experts have estimated that more than half of all deaths from fire are due to smoke inhalation, rather than to heat and flames, Miller points out. In Chicago where many big fires have occurred, the city council is considering legislation that would require smoke detectors in apartment houses of more than six units. There are also alarms that can be wired into house voltage.

"It is important to test an alarm before it is put on the ceiling," Miller cautions. "When batteries are low a chirping sound will emanate from the alarm." Batteries should last a year or more.

Will cigar and pipe smoke trigger the alarm? Probably not, Miller says, but if you have a smoke-filled room of people, you could be in for a little excitement.

We are coming into an era that may open up other low-cost protective devices in the home, he adds. Miller recently became involved in energy control devices because he believes "the house of the future will not have every room heated all the time. We will heat rooms when we want to use them," no different perhaps from our colonial ancestors who used fireplaces. Miller is touting a lightweight portable heater — invented by an Israeli — that can be carried to rooms for supplementary heating or used to heat quickly small rooms such as bathrooms. His son has been experimenting with one in his cool college dorm, he said.

Experiment In Savings

JOHNSTOWN, Pa. (UPI) — Two neighboring houses here are proving that heat storage can hold down electric bills.

They are part of a test by General Public Utilities Corp., using one home with a standard electrical heating system and the other, fully insulated and experimentally equipped to heat water electrically at night to heat the house by day. The experimental house has a special meter that registers the amount of electricity used by day and by night.

Corporation chairman William G. Kuhns says the experimental home used 250 more kilowatt-hours during the exceptionally cold months of November - December, 1976, than the other home, but its electricity bill was 18 per cent lower, $207 compared with $253.

Kuhns said the savings occurred because almost 88 per cent of the electricity used in the experimental home qualified for the night rate of one per cent per kilowatt-hour. The daytime rate is 3.5 cents. The house that used 52 per cent of its electricity by day paid standard non-differential rates based on the amount of total energy used, regardless of time of day.

Simplicity In Furnishings

LANCASTER, Pa. (UPI) — The informal life-style President Jimmy Carter projects from the White House actually began in American homes at the start of the 1970s, says a home furnishings manufacturer here.

The manufacturer says sociologists explain the preference for simple furnishings with a hand-crafted look to a cooling-off period after the incendiary 1960s.

Their yearning for stability and tranquility is reflected in the popularity of country and western music and interior furnishings with a rustic, natural look: large hanging plants, barn siding and artificial bricks, butcher block furniture, wicker and bamboo chairs, rough-hewn wall paneling and fabrics such as denim, calico and gingham.

It adds up to a cozy, countrified atmosphere, said a spokesman for the Armstrong Cork Co.

Find Learning Disabilities

NEW YORK (AP) — Of the 18 million children in secondary school, over one million have learning disabilities, says the New York Institute for Child Development.

Although children do not outgrow such basic difficulties as hyperactivity and learning disabilities, it is never too late to help them, the Institute says.

"There is an entire subpopulation of this generation that was born too soon to take advantage of what has come to be known about the causes and cures of learning disabilities," explains Darral G. Chapman, the Institute's chief of therapy.

But once their problems are properly diagnosed and treated, high school students can make up for lost time, he says. Forty-four per cent of the patients at the Institute are over the age of 12.

Gardening Questions

Q. When is the best time of year to treat my lawn for chickweed and other winter weeds? (R. E., Clayton)

A. Usually from Feb. 15 to March 15. However, because of the extreme cold this winter you should be able to treat your lawn anytime during March. A mixture of silvex and 2, 4-D should take care of winter annual broadleaf weeds. (W. M. Lewis, extension agronomist)

Q. Tell me how I might test the germination of left-over garden seed. (D.U., Mount Olive)

A. Roll a few of the seed in a moistened paper towel. Then fold the towel and place it in a glass or plastic container. Add a very smll amount of water to the bottom of the container, but be sure not to cover seed. Cover and place in a warm place (70 to 80 degrees). You can determine the per cent germination by counting the number of seed that germinate and the per cent that do not. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Q. Our club would like to sponsor a conservation project in this community. We would like to begin with a tree planting program and kick it off on Arbor Day. When is Arbor Day this year in North Carolina? (.P., Lexington)

A. Most communities will observe Arbor Day this year on Friday, March 18. Until 1967, Arbor Day in North Carolina was observed by proclamation of the Governor, as no legally established time had been designated. The 1967 General Assembly designated the week which contained March 15 as Arbor Week and any day during that week could be designated March 15 as Arbor Day. (William M. Stanton, extension forest resources specialist)

Q. How much fertilizer should be applied to shrubs in the spring to help them overcome winter damage and begin active growth? (Mrs. B.C., Charlotte)

A. Three to four pounds per 100 square feet will stimulate new growth. Use a complete fertilizer, such as an 8-8-8 or 10-10-10. An easy way to determine the right amount is to weigh out a pound and apply it to an area measuring five feet by five feet. (Henry J. Smith, extension landscape horticulturist)

Uncle Sam Is Biggest Land Baron Of Them All

By MARY MARZANO
Associated Press Writer

The man who owns the biggest chunk of land in this country isn't paying property taxes.

He owns millions of acres from timber rich mountains to grazing lands. He puts high-rise office buildings in our biggest cities and never flinches over soaring tax rates.

His name is Uncle Sam.

The federal government owns 762 million of the nation's 2.3 billion acres, or about one third of the gross area.

None of Uncle Sam's caretakers, like the folks at the Bureau of Land Management, the National Park Service and the Forest Service, is willing to guess what all that land is worth. Nor will they guess how much is lost to local government in property taxes each year.

But a few disgruntled officials on the state and county level have done some figuring, and some congressional moves may force Uncle Sam to ante up — at least on a broader scale than he has in the past.

Last fall Calvin Black, commissioner of San Juan County, Utah, assessed the federal government $2.92 million in property taxes, threatening to put the 3.4 million acres of federally owned land — some 85 per cent of the total acreage of his county — on the auction block if the taxes weren't paid.

Black, who lost a bid for the Republican congressional nomination, admitted his tax bill was just a dramatization, but he argued that large tracts of federal land in the Western states make them "little more than exploited colonies of the federal government."

The bulk of federally owned land is in the Western states. Although many acres were homesteaded by pioneers, the U.S. government, which once owned four-fifths of the nation's land, retained much of the land won or bought from European powers and taken from the Indians.

Westerners chafe over having to pay for law enforcement, fire fighting, road maintenance, rescue, emergency and other services on untaxed federal land within their counties while, they say, Easterners remain unaware of the problem.

U.S. ownership of the dozen Western states in descending order is: Alaska, 96.4 per cent; Nevada, 86.6; Utah, 66.1; Idaho, 63.7; Oregon, 52.6; Wyoming, 47.8; California, 45.2; Arizona, 42.8; Colorado, 36.1; New Mexico, 33.6; Montana, 29.7; Washington, 29.5.

Except for Utah, Idaho, and New Mexico, the per capita tax rate for all these states ranks them in the top half of the nation.

In Colorado, where Uncle Sam owns 24.1 million acres, the legislature put a special committee to work on the problem. It concluded that if federal ownership of large amounts of land is in the national interest, then the economic burden should not be borne by local government and taxpayers alone, but by all the people.

Ernest Newton of the Nevada Taxpayers Association suggests that the federal land be turned over to private interests. Then, he says, the land could be assessed for tax purposes on the basis of its productive capacity or actual production, resulting in a minimum of $2.6 million annually in new revenue.

Not everyone is so eager to wrench land from the government. Washington State officials say public ownership has meant preservation of wilderness areas, conservation of vast forest acreages and virtually unlimited recreational possibilities.

But Washington voters are increasingly negative about special tax levies on their property to pay for schools, and two counties had to sell bonds in 1975 to pay for routine maintenance and operation.

In one of them, Ferry County with 3,600 persons, the Colville National Forest and Colville Indian Reservation kept all but 14 per cent of the land off the tax rolls.

"We have the unholy distinction of having the highest percentage tax per capita in the state," moaned the county commissioner.

Both the reservation and forest spill over into neighboring Okanogan County, 73 per cent untaxed. That county devised the so-called "Okanogan Bill," a plan for federal payments in lieu of taxes.

The proposal, presented to the U.S. Senate last year, failed to overcome resistance from Midwestern and Eastern states that wouldn't benefit.

Another formula, engineered by Rep. Frank Evans, D-Colo., carried lower benefits but was broadened to aid 39 states.

Although the White House opposed it on the basis of its estimated $100 million annual cost, pre-election pressure from western Republicans moved President Ford to sign the measure into law.

Another in a series of laws the Congress has adopted to send "home" portions of fees collected for timber cutting, mineral development and grazing was the Bureau of Land Management Organic Act, signed into law Oct. 21, 1976.

Among other things, it increases to 50 per cent the 37½ per cent paid to state governments for mineral leasing income. It also emphasizes that the bulk of those payments should go to local governments suffering because of federal ownership.

In 1975, the federal government collected $750 million from its land operations and sent $250 million back to state and local governments. This year, total pay-out could be $375 million officials say.

There still are possible stumbling blocks in administering the in-lieu-of-taxes money — first of all, Congress has to appropriate the money, and secondly, the Interior Department has quite a bit of leeway in how the local allotments are determined.

For example, Washington's Okanogan County can get 75 cents an acre, minus what it's collecting in other payments such as forest service receipts, and not to exceed a sliding per capita limit. Or, the county can get a flat 10 cents an acre.

One official said it could vary from $320,000 to about $167,000 "in lieu" money, depending on forest income. Under the Okanogan Bill, the county would have received in excess of $600,000.

Not all categories of federal lands would be counted, but the law includes national parks and wilderness areas, federal reservoirs, national forests and BLM lands. This adds up to 374 million acres, half the federal acreage of 760 million, according to the public land-review subcommittee.

The law does not apply to Alaska, which already is receiving millions of dollars in shared revenue for mineral production and lease rentals on federal land.

Even local officials not surrounded by millions of federally owned acres are beginning to wake up to Uncle Sam's free ride.

A spokesman for all of Rhode Island Department of Community Affairs acknowledged that if Uncle Sam would pay taxes on his some 7,000 acres there, "The tax would drop by at least a few dollars all around the state."

Once-Flourishing Cochin Jews Are Today A Dying Community

By JOHN NEEDHAM

COCHIN, India (UPI) — The once-flourishing Jews of Cochin are a dying community, victims in part of the magnetism of Israel which has lured the young from their centuries-old ancestral home.

The Jews in the southwestern state of Kerala numbered about 2,400 in 1947, nearly all of them in Cochin. A decade ago this city, made up of a handful of islands on India's southwestern coast, contained 300 to 400 Jews. Now t'swpnbol5about 60.

Of the three synagogues that once existed in Cochin, about 1,350 miles south of New Delhi, only one is left. Jews gather there nightly for services but they occasionally have trouble finding the 10 men above age 13 necessary to hold a service.

"We have kosher food, but we have no meat except chicken," S.S. Koder, leader of the Jewish community, said in an interview. He said there was "no one who can slaughter" the animals in accordance with the ritual prescribed by the Jewish religion.

Koder, 67, runs a general store and lives above it in spacious, high-ceilinged rooms crammed with antiques and ebony furniture dating from the Dutch period in Cochin during the 18th and 19th centuries. Scattered through the rooms are pieces of china his wife's ancestors brought back in the 19th century from Canton, a major trading partner of Cochin.

Koder is a prominent official of Rotary International, honorary consul for the Netherlands, and leader for the past 30 years of the Jewish community here. Before him his father led the community.

He speaks not with nostalgia or bitterness and with only occasional touches of sadness about the future of his community. He sees the disappearance of the Cochin Jews as inevitable.

"This is a very historical community and a very picturesque community," Koder says proudly. "We have upheld the traditions."

"Though the other communities in Calcutta and Bombay are wealthier than the Jews of Cochin, we are more important historically."

Although their early history is uncertain, Cochin Jews believe their ancestors settled along India's southwest coast in 7 B.C. Ten thousand are thought to have fled to Cranganore, about 10 miles north of Cochin, after the destruction of the temple of Jerusalem in 70 A.D.

Hindus treated the Jews well, with one ruler giving them land and the right to govern their own state "so long as the world and moon exist."

Moslem persecution in the 16th century led the Jews of Cranganore to flee to Cochin, joining their brethern there and establishing the Pardesi Synagogue in 1568. The Portuguese ruled Cochin from around 1500 to 1661 and continued persecuting the Jews. They sacked the Jewish quarter, damaged the synagogue and, in a 1513 letter to the king of Portugal, asked permission "to exterminate them one by one."

The Dutch ended the harassment and the British allowed them free practice of their religion. India became independent in 1947 and since then, according to Koder "there is absolutely no problem in our observing the Jewish religion in India."

The problem has been in emigration. Most of the Jews who left Cochin in the past 30 years went to Israel. A few went to North America or Western Europe.

"It's usually the children who decide they want to go to Israel and the parents follow them," Koder said. Only about a dozen of Cochin's Jews are under 25.

Koder does not blame the young for leaving, conceding that the poor especially have no future here.

"To live as Jews, we have many problems," Koder said. "Now we have a minyan (the 10 men over age 13), but soon we may not have 10 people if they go."

Koder himself has suffered two heart attacks and except on holy days or special occasions, he attends services in the temple 2-½ miles from his home only if he is needed as the 10th man.

A U.S. rabbi wanted to send some Jews to Cochin to beef up the population, but Koder discouraged the idea by detailing the tons of red tape and paper-shuffling involved in winning Indian government permission for such a move.

Koder's family came from Baghdad 200 years ago. He visited Israel in 1951 and feels he's too old to go and "work hard in Israel. I've got all the comforts here."

India two years ago became the first non-Arab, non-Communist nation to grant full diplomatic recognition to the Palestine Liberation Organization, a move Koder and other Indian Jews — who now total about 13,000 — feel was caused by economics.

"For oil, they have to do something," he said. "In their heart of hearts, I don't think the government of India is anti-Israel."

The Pardesi Synagogue still stands in the section of Cochin known as "Jew Town" and Prime Minister Indira Gandhi attended the 400th anniversary celebration in 1968.

But the number of Jews still in Cochin has dwindled since then and Koder believes the community will last another "10 or 15 years" at most. His reaction: "Of course I am sad."

Field Work For Student

George H. Whitaker, 26, a senior Corrections Services major at East Carolina University, has begun his field placement work with the N. C. Inmate Grievance Commission.

Whitaker, who is concentrating in Community Corrections, is a 1975 honor graduate of Sandhills Community College. He entered the ECU Department of Social Work and Corrections Services in September, 1975 and will graduate in May. As a requirement for graduation, all Corrections majors must complete one quarter's work in an agency related to their area of study.

"We greatly appreciate the good service that ECU is provide the people of North Carolina in this field," said Fred G. Morris Jr., executive director of the Inmate Grievance Commission, who made the announcement about Whitaker.

Winnery's Cellarmaster Is Big Corkscrew Collector

By MARY GANZ
Associated Press Writer

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — "You've come to see the collection?" he asks, his 6-foot-2, black-garbed frame bending toward his visitors and a smile curving his lips.

"The collection is downstairs," he says, inclining his head toward the basement stairway of the sprawling winery complex.

He leads the way down the carpeted stairs and stops before a door, selecting a key from a jangling ring he carries in the pocket of his clerical coat. He fits it into the door, reaches for the light switch.

There, proudly displayed on red velvet and white linen, lies the collection. Hundreds upon hundreds of corkscrews.

He has corkscrews so small you could poke them through the eye of a needle and corkscrews so large you could drive them into the ground and chain your dog to them.

He has a corkscrew that unscrews to become a wine glass, a corkscrew that flips open to reveal a nutmeg grater, and one with a cute little instrument for removing stones from your horse's hoof.

Brother Timothy became a corkscrew fanatic after the Brothers of the Christian Schools assigned him in 1935 to be wine chemist at the order's winery near here.

Now cellarmaster and vice president of the winery, Brother Timothy, 66, has collected 1,375 corkscrews in his search for the most efficient way to get into a bottle of wine.

"My motivation at the time was to find out what were the good ones and what were the bad ones," he recalls of the collection he began in 1949. "After I had collected a hundred or two I branched out into other things, into the beautiful, valuable things, like this little silver sword."

He holds up an elaborately engraved pocket-sized sterling silver sword, with an end that pops off to reveal a corkscrew.

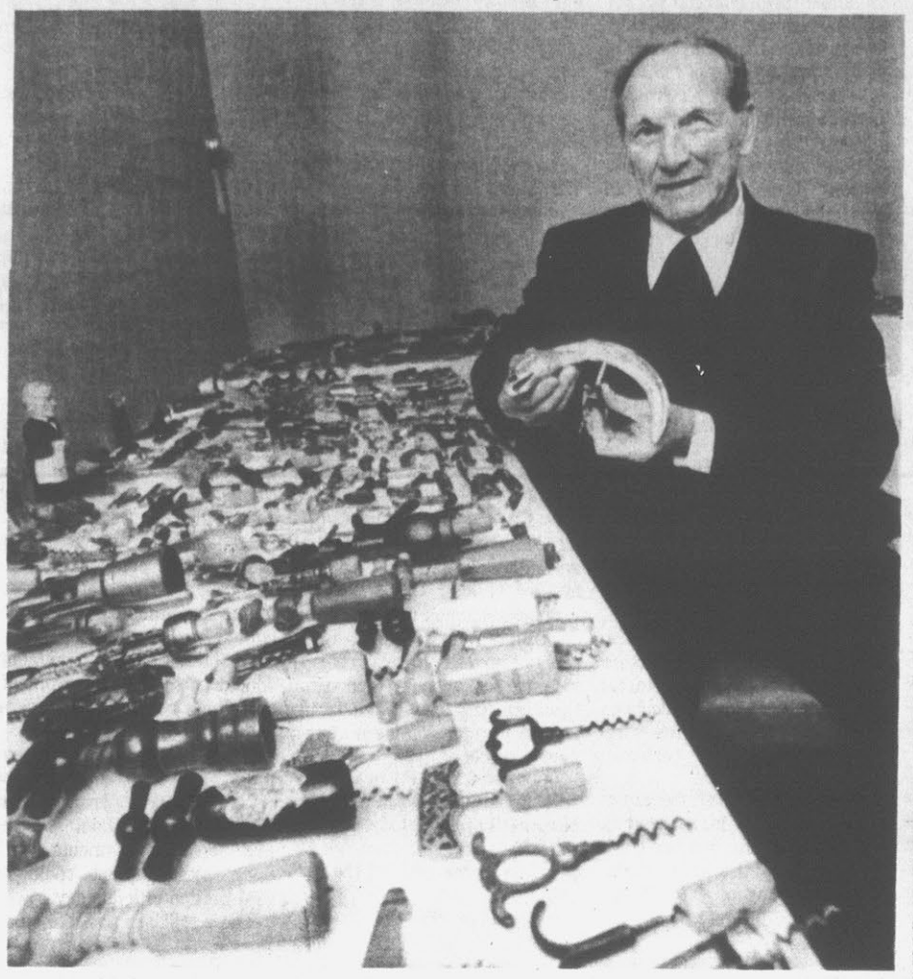

His most valuable corkscrew is the one, dating from 1805 or 1806, that opens into a nutmeg grater "so you can put a little nutmeg in your hot mulled wine," Brother Timothy explains.

Made before the term "sterling silver" came into use. the corkscrew is dated by the hallmark stamped on it by the London silversmith, William Pitts. Brother Timothy figures its value now is around $300.

Both the tiniest and the largest corkscrews in his collection were made for him by friends, not for popping corks off bottles but "so I could tell inquisitive reporters that this is the smallest in my collection and this is the largest."

In November, Brother Timothy's Napa winery was host to the International Correspondence of Corkscrew Addicts.

Formed in 1974 in London, the organization numbers 36 members, most from the United States and England, where Brother Timothy says most of the fine, antique corkscrews are to be found.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — The Duchess, a Kerry Blue terrier belonging to Ed McKay, a physical therapist, is an accomplished pianist-singer. She even has her own baby grand piano, bought especially for her by her master.

Sitting on the bench, she ripples the keys in an original arpeggio and lifting her head, fills the room with song — one of her very own Celtic compositions.

Check Out Charters To Save On That Air Fare

By MURRAY J. BROWN
UPI Travel Editor

Knowing your ABC's could mean big savings on air fares when planning to vacation in the United States or abroad.

ABC stands for Advanced Booking Charter and you don't have to belong to anything to qualify for the reduced fares offered under the plan approved by the Civil Aeronautics Board.

Basically, ABCs provide round-trip air transportation between two points. However, low-cost optional hotel and tour packages may be offered by operators of the charter.

ABCs must be booked and paid for 30 days in advance of the departure date to any destination in the United States or abroad, except for nine European countries. Great Britain, France, Italy, Ireland, Germany, Switzerland, Finland, Belgium and the Netherlands require 45-50 days advance bookings.

The same nine countries also require ABC passengers stay a minimum of seven days. There are no such restrictions elrewhere.

ABCs are sold only by travel agents and tour operators. All proposals must be filed and approved by the CAB before being offered to the public.

Savings can amount to up to 50 per cent — and more — compared with regular economy fares. For instance, you can fly New York-London round trip for as low as about $260 — regular economy fare is more than $600 — or from the West Coast to Hong Kong for less than $600 compared with about $1,200.

Similar savings are available on flights to other overseas destinations, including Mexico and the Caribbean. At home, ABCs offer reduced fares for transcontinental flights (as low as $239) and to Miami, Las Vegas and Hawaii, among other popular vacation spots.

The air-only ABCs must be sold at prices which can differ between operators so check around before signing up. You can make your own ground arrangements although some operators offer land options.

ABCs use regularly scheduled airlines as well as the supplementary carriers. So you can often select not only your favorite airlines but also the type of plane you prefer — Boeing 747, DC10, L1011, etc.

There are big savings available, too, if you decide on an OTC — or One-Stop Charter, which are packaged by tour wholesalers and also sold through travel agents.

OTCs must include round-trip air transportation, hotel accommodations, ground transfers, baggage handling, tips and taxes. The selling price can not be less than the per seat cost of the total charter rate plus $15 per night.

However, many operators offer free extras, such sightseeing, meals or better accommodations, etc., at the same price as competitors. So read the brochures before deciding.

OTCs must be purchased 15 days in advance for destinations within North America and 3 days for all other destinations. Domestic trips must last a minimum of four days while seven days is the minimum overseas.

OTC prices vary according to the number of days, type of accommodations and other features included in the package. But Hawaiian Holidays offers eight days-seven nights OTCs in Honolulu from $399 from New York, $379 from Chicago and $275 from San Francisco per person double occupancy. Carefree Travel has seven days-six night packages to Rome from New York from $429 per person double occupancy.

All ABC and OTC operators must post surety bonds or other security to protect purchasers in the event the charter is canceled.

Incidentally, some ABC and OTC flights depart from airports in mid-America cities and fly directly to their destinations here and abroad, eliminating the time and money involved in traveling to such "gateway" cities as New York, Chicago, Miami, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

There are other charters open to the general public. There are the three-stop Inclusive Air Charter ITC which consists of an air and land package and the air-only Travel Ground Charter TGC which must be booked and paid for at least 60 days prior to departure.

So shop and compare — you may find unexpected travel bargains.

But don't book any charter unless you are sure you can go. Canceling out could cost you your deposit and, perhaps, the entire fare. You can protect yourself by purchasing cancellation insurance, however.

PENSION PROGRAMS

Prof. Hartman Is Authority On Women Who Kill

PROF. MARY HARTMAN has become an expert on women who shoot, stab, beat and poison their husbands, lovers, rivals and even children. (AP Wirephoto)

By JAMES SIMON
Associated Press Writer

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — Prof. Mary Hartman is an expert on women who shoot, stab, beat and poison their husbands, lovers, rivals and children.

For the past four years, Dr. Hartman has studied murderesses of the 19th Century as part of her work as a social historian at Rutgers University's Douglass College branch. Her study has resulted in a book, "Victorian Murderesses."

"I began with the less exciting goal of trying to find out how the middle class women of the 19th Century lived," Dr. Hartman said in an interview.

"One good source was to look at the women who were caught doing something they shouldn't have been — and I found that trial proceedings offered a complete social document of what went on in a household back then."

She searched English and French records, selected 11 women and a mother-and-daughter team accused of murder, and tried to determine what social or psychological stresses may have driven them to kill.

"They were women who were especially vulnerable to the same pressures experienced by a majority if their peers," she said.

"In writing about them, I was describing many circumstances common to the lives of large numbers of middle-class women in areas which have largely been unexplored," she said.

One of the big causes of their killing early in the century was that parents still had almost total control over who a girl was to marry, she said. "They disliked this, and wound up murdering after mama and papa made the wrong choice," she said.

"In the 19th Century, if marriages were not made in heaven, they, nonetheless, were made to last," she said.

Women murdering to escape such desperate circumstances gave way later in the century to women killing for a happier life.

"They later wanted a husband who was more attentive, a better lover in bed, one who wouldn't be so brutal in bed," she said.

One Hartman subject, a married French woman, killed a man after claiming he tried to rape her. She really shot him because he found she was having an affair with a local priest, Dr. Hartman said.

And there were other murders resulting from affairs that had to be ended — quickly, she said.

Of the 13 women she studied, six were convicted but none were sentenced to death. The maximum sentenced served by any of the women was 20 years, she said.

At Rutgers, Dr. Hartman also serves as director of the Women's Studies Institute, which coordinates the university's women's studies program and encourages research in the field.

Stone Age Find Reported

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — An early Stone Age settlement believed to be about 5,000 years old, was discovered in Brezi near Mikulov, on the Czech-Austrian border.

Ice-Climbing Is A Tougher Sport

By ARTHUR FREDERICK

CAMDEN, Maine (UPI) — Ice climbing began because a small group of bicycle riders and rock climbers wanted to keep in shape during the winter.

"It's getting so now that the climbing is so much fun that the winter is no problem at all," said David Getchell, 48, a local magazine editor who has been climbing sheer ice walls in the Camden area for about a year.

Ice climbing differs from summer rock-climbing in that, as might be expected, it's slicker and trickier. But Maine's version is generally done on ice that develops from running water as compared with "Alpine ice climbing" on ice that forms from freezing snow.

"This is steeper and has a lot more variation in quality of the ice, running from soft to very, very brittle," Getchell said.

Getchell said rock climbers adapt easily to ice climbing and "real good climbers can climb vertical ice, on ice faces you wouldn't believe."

The most important thing, Getchell said, is good equipment. It costs $200 to $500. Even with the best equipment, he concedes it can be dangerous.

"The biggest problem is the cold, and you generally are quite a distance from help, so a sprained ankle can cause a lot more trouble in the winter than in the summer."

In all, there are less than a dozen active ice climbers in this area. They have resisted organizing climbing club.

"This way," Getchell said, "we call up and say let's go climbing and away we go."

"While the climbing is steep, almost vertical at times," Getchell said climbers can be just as fearful of heights as anyone.

"I have a thing about roofs, for example. I built my own house, and I had to put the roof on it.

"I didn't like that at all."

EDUCATION PROGRAM FOR JEWISH PARENTS

NEW YORK (AP) — A program designed for the parents of Jewish adolescents, the first of its kind in the United States, has been launched by the Commission on Jewish Education of the United Synagogue of America.

The program, "Parent Education for Parents of Jewish adolescents," aims to help parents of adolescent children cope with their special concerns within a framework of Judaic religious values.

Saccharin Ban Shocks Business Community

By RHONDA SEEGAL
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The proposed government ban of saccharin, the sugar substitute used by dieters and diabetics for years, has sent a shock wave through the business and scientific communities.

Both groups reacted this past week by asking the same question: How valid are tests using massive doses of a substance to produce cancer in laboratory rats?

In announcing the proposed ban, the Food and Drug Administration cited Canadian tests that showed large amounts of saccharin fed to rats produced cancer in some animals.

"The practice has been to admininster the highest possible dose to the animal without killing it," said food scientist Dr. Bernard L. Oser, the researcher whose laboratory test results led to the government's ban of cyclamates in 1969.

"It is a rather absurd situation — atypical and unrepresentative of conditions you'd have with humans," Oser said. "It's almost like banning driving in the city streets because if you drive at 150 miles per hour on the highway you have a higher accident rate."

Industry spokesmen echoed his complaint. To match the amounts of saccharin used in the Canadian tests a person would have to:

—Consume 4,000 packets of Sweet 'n Low a day, said officials at Cumberland Packing Corp., which makes the popular low-calorie sweetener.

The so-called "Delaney clause" of the food additive amendments to the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act, says the FDA must ban any food additive found to cause cancer in either humans or animals.

The clause is named after Rep. James J. Delaney, D-N.Y, and an aide said, "I know the congressman feels the same way now about it as he did in 1958."

In other business news developments this week:

—Gulf & Western, the largest stockholder in Madison Square Garden Corp., offered to buy the New York City sports complex for $29 million.

On Tuesday, the Madison Square Garden board approved the offer of $10 per share for the remaining 2.9 million shares. The action negated a waiting period required under similar state laws in New York and Michigan, where the Garden was incorporated, and Gulf & Western said the tender offer would soon be mailed to shareholders.

—International Business Machines Corp., after extending its offer to buy back at least 4 million of its own shares at $280 each, said it received 2.546 million shares.

The offer, the largest of its kind ever made, originally ended at 5 p.m. EST Monday but was extended until Wednesday.

—Retail sales rebounded 1.8 per cent in February from weather-depressed levels the month before to a seasonally adjusted $57.57 billion. But the cold also helped boost February's wholesale prices at an adjusted 10.8 per cent annual pace.

For Northern Ireland, There Are 2 St. Patricks

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

ARMAGH, Northern Ireland (AP) — Two lofty cathedrals, one Catholic, the other Protestant, and both named for St. Patrick, face each other on opposite hills in this decimated Ulster market town that has been Ireland's ecclesiastical capital since the fifth century.

St. Patrick's headquarters were here, in territory now ruled by the British, which has been hallowed ground and battleground for both major Christian sects over the centuries.

From their separate vantage points, the Catholic cardinal and the Anglican archbishop, each with the title "Primate of All Ireland," can look down on the site of a Victorian pork market called "The Shambles," as well as on the shambles left by frequent explosions and fire bombs in the past eight years of sectarian strife.

Church of Ireland Archbishop George O. Simms is a soft-spoken, scholarly man whose restored cathedral, with its stubby battlemented tower, occupies the traditional site of the crude stone church built by St. Patrick in 443 A.D.

From the window of his book-lined study he points out more modern ruins: Her Majesty's post office, blown up a few weeks ago. The police barracks, attacked many times and burned just before Christmas. The boarded-up bank and supermarket.

William John Conway, the Roman Catholic cardinal, keeps on his desk a large well-worn journal listing names, dates and details of all sectarian assassinations in Northern Ireland since "The Troubles" resumed in 1969.

In pondering the Irish question, in trying to figure why Catholics are killing Protestants and vice versa, and whether the British should get out of Ireland or the Catholics give in to the 2-1 Protestant majority in the North, it generally is forgotten that Armagh, in the North, is the spiritual home of both sects and that the two current primates, claiming St. Patrick's ancient see, not only were born in the North but are close personal friends.

Dr. Simms, born in Strabane, a Protestant enclave in County Tyrone, and Cardinal Conway, born in Belfast's Falls Road, a notorious Catholic ghetto, are on a first name basis. They often dine together, meet at peace rallies, attend separate funerals for revenge killings in the same town and share a car to the BBC studios for interviews in which they condemn the gunmen and bombers on both sides.

On the subject of violence, the two Primates of All Ireland are in agreement:

"The person who could shoot a man dead in his own sitting room in front of his wife and children is a monster," thundered the Cardinal from the pulpit of his St. Patrick's after a vicious spate of sectarian killings. "The person who could plant a bomb among innocent people is a foul murderer ... Nothing can cloud our cold, clear condemnation of these deeds."

From the opposite hill, Dr. Simms has condemned "unreservedly all acts of terrorism whether perpetrated by or on Roman Catholics or Protestants ... be it an illegal organization or not. I want only to see peace in our land."

A few weeks ago the two historic rivals to the bishopric of Patrick made history of another kind when they stood side by side on the banks of the Boyne, at the very spot where Protestant King Billy splashed across in 1689 to defeat the Catholic cause of James II, and showed their support for the modern peace movement founded by Betty Williams and Mairead Corrigan.

One of the ironies of the seemingly insoluable Irish question is that the sectarian strife, which in recent years has claimed more than 1,700 lives, has brought the Christian sects closer together than at any time since the Reformation.

Those who think some kind of religious war is going on in Ireland would never have believed the traffic jam of clerical collars and purple waistcoats that passed through the gates of the Ballymascanlon Hotel in Dundalk, just across the border in the Republic, on the morning of Sept. 26, 1973, and on two occasions since then.

From all over Ireland, North and South, 80 leading clergymen, including Presbyterians, Methodists, Anglicans, Quakers, the two Primates and all 27 Catholic bishops, gathered to understand each other better and make a common front against violence.

Since then, a Joint Group on Social Questions, established by the Catholic Hierarchy and the Protestant Council of Churches, has come forth with reports on drug abuse, teen-age drinking, housing in Northern Ireland, underdevelopment in rural Ireland and a searching probe into violence that scorched extremists on both sides.

Sparing neither faction's historic fears or cherished prejudices, the report dealt with the question of how this legendary island of saints and scholars, this heaviest concentration of Christians anywhere on earth, could tolerate murder and savagery, even if only a small part of the population was actively involved.

The report, prepared by a committee of clergymen and laymen, had some tough things to say to the Provos, the Loyalists, the British Army and the politicians in both Whitehall and Dublin.

Clergymen of all denominations were urged not to allow military honors at funerals for men of violence and to avoid identifying their churches with processions and demonstrations by paramilitary groups. The Catholic Bishop of Derry, Edward Daly, not only has banished IRA pall-bearers in berets and smoked glasses from the aisles of his churches but also banned a bugle-blowing salute at a funeral mass for a slain police officer.

On moral grounds, the churches were asked to "face more honestly" the problem of what the ordinary man should do when faced with demands for money from terrorists, pressured to hide contraband or conceal information from the police.

Here are tough moral issues for the Irish Christian to ponder when answering a knock on the door at a lonely farmhouse. But raising them in these terrible times can hardly bring consolation to the gunman who thinks he is engaged in a just war.

"We are also taking a close look at the teaching of history in both the Catholic and state-run schools," said Dr. Simms, "with less attention to battles and heroes and more emphasis on our cultural heritage and social conditions ..."

Historically in Ireland the men of violence have been honored and romanticized on both sides.

Cahal Daly, the outspoken Catholic bishop in Longford who was joint chairman of the interfaith group, has denounced pseudo patriotism and spurious Irish romanticism in sermons and lectures calling for "solutions not slogans."

Irish-Americans marching St. Patrick's Day on Fifth Avenue would be fighting mad at his deriding the "myth of the fighting Irish."

"It was always the old-style British colonialist or imperialist who liked to say the Irish were good at killing," he told an astonished and uneasy audience of Irish Catholic school teachers, "and so they invented the myth of the Fighting Irish."

Winter Surfers In East Look On Californians As 'Pantywaists'

By TERRY ANZUR

NARRAGANSET R.I. (UPI) — No wonder Peter Pan thinks California surfers are a bunch of "pantywaist pansies." He loves blizzards and can't wait for hurricanes.

That's when surf's up along the New England coast. The season starts with the hurricanes in the fall and runs until the snowstorms are over. Stormy weather brings waves up to 13 feet high, the kind the surfers crave.

"The real men are out surfing when it's snowing and the wind chill is 10 below. Only the pantywaist pansies go to Puerto Rico and California," says Peter "Pan" Panangiotis, 27, a fast-talking surf hustler who operates a local surfing and skateboard shop.

He lives in Connecticut, works as an artist, and runs the 250-member New England District of the Eastern Surfing Association, the largest chapter north of Florida, he says.

The only two things New England surfers have in common with their sun-soaked counterparts from the West Coast are the thrill they get from catching a wave and the "baggies" they wear under a half-inch thick coating of rubber.

Baggies, loose-fitting swim trunks often made of splashy Hawaiian-print cloth, go under three neoprene rubber wetsuits. Kathy McGregor of the Point Break Surf Shop says full winter surfing gear with rubber boots, gloves and a "pimple-head" hood, costs about $250 — not including the board.

Even the boards are different. "The main difference is the pin tail," said Mrs. McGregor, 25, who says a board with a pointed rear end is best for Atlantic Ocean waves.

Her 25-year-old husband, Dean, claims he surfed before, after and during parts of Hurricane Belle last summer, taking a half-day intermission while the worst of the storm blew through.

"He opened the surf shop here because the Rhode Island coastline reminded him of Santa Cruz, his favorite place to surf in California," she said.

Most of the 30 New Englanders, who came from as far away as Maine for the Eastern Surfing Association championships last month, would rather be here than out West.

"People are nicer to surf with here because there's no fighting over the waves," said Michael Lafreniere, 24, an anthropology student at Rhode Island College. "In California, it's like everybody fighting over the best place to park at a drive-in."

Some New England surfers, who have tried both, prefer the unpredictable "point break" waves along the inlets and coves to the even 'beach break" waves on expansive West Coast beaches.

"You have to go where the waves are," said Ronnie Pfeiffer, 30, a self-employed fisherman who quit his 9-to-5 job in nearby Wakefield to follow New England surf.

"Anybody who goes out there has to be demented or serious, and most are serious," he said. "You get stoked on the feel of the waves ... there has to be something in it for you to go out there when it's eight below."

"There's no way to cover up your face," said Mrs. McGregor. "When the guys come out they have icicles all over their beards and mustaches. They watch the weather like hawks and they just love storms and hurricanes. It's a religion."

When the weather's too nice they go skateboarding.

Miss Lou Tina Forrest Speaks Vows Saturday

Miss Lou Tina Forrest became the bride of Samuel Ira Cannon in a formal candlelight ceremony at the Black Jack Pentecostal Free Will Baptist Church Saturday at 7:30 p.m.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Ernestine Forrest of Greenville, and the late Mr. Benjamin D. Forrest Jr. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Callie Cannon of Ayden, and the late Mr. Robert Andrew Cannon.

The Rev. R. M. Stewart of Rocky Mount officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The chancel of the church was centered with a fifteen branched candelabra interspersed with greenery. Two nine branched tree candelabra filled with yellow and white daisies were used on either side and backed with stands of palms and emerald jade greenery. At the altar was a prie-dieu where the bridal couple knelt for the benediction. Family pews were marked with clusters of daisies centered with hurricane lights.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. R. M. Stewart, pianist and soloist. She sang "The Sweetest Story Ever Told," "Whither Thou Goest," "O Perfect Love" and "Wedding Prayer" as the benediction.

Given in marriage by her brother, Benjamin D. Forrest III, the bride wore a formal gown of white silkened organza over peau de soie. The bodice featured appliques of Venise lace, a sheer scooped yoke with bordered lace and full bishop sleeves accented with matching lace. A full A-line skirt fell from an empire waist into a chapel length.

Her matching veil of imported silk illusion was attached to a Camelot cap of lace appliques. She carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses and daisies interspersed with baby's breath and tied with matching satin streamers.

Mrs. Deborah Vick, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a formal gown of yellow polyester doeskin fashioned with a fitted bodice and length sleeves cuffed in lace. The V-neckline was edged in ecru lace. The flared skirt fell from a high fitted lace midriff. She wore a picture hat in corresponding color and carried a white wicker fireside basket with mixed rainbow blooms.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Linda Clark of Greenville, niece of the bridegroom, Mrs. Ruth Mills of Chocowinity, and Mrs. Donna Joyce Hammond of Turkey. They were attired identical to the honor attendant and carried similar baskets.

Miss Angie Cannon, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl. She was dressed like the honor attendants and carried a basket of rainbow petals. Allan Toliver, nephew of the bridegroom, served as ring bearer.

Bobby Cannon of Ayden served his brother as best man. Ushers were Dalton Cannon of Farmville, James and Donald Cannon, both of Ayden, all brothers of the bridegroom.

Mrs. Ann Harris presided at the guest register assisted by Miss Pam Beaver of Raleigh, who presented wedding programs to guests.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Forrest selected a princess styled formal gown of nile green poly-satin with a jacket of floral organza. She used coordinated accessories and a white orchid corsage.

The bridegroom's mother chose a formal gown of deep rose polyester knit. The empire waist featured a round neckline encircled in Venise lace with full bishop sleeves cuffed in lace. She used matching accessories and a white orchid corsage.

After a wedding trip, the couple will reside at Rt. 1, Ayden. The bride is an English-journalism teacher at West Craven High School and the bridegroom is engaged in farming.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church fellowship hall. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Linwood Clark and directed to the refreshment table. The bridal table was covered with a white linen cloth and centered with a silver epergne of snapdragons, yellow daisies and baby's breath and flanked by burning tapers. Mrs. Edna Mills cut the cake and Mrs. Martha Warren poured punch. Mrs. Edna Elks, Mrs. Betty Fornes, Mrs. Stephanie Elks and Mrs. Beverly Stokes assisted with the serving.

An after-rehearsal party was given Friday in the church fellowship hall by the parents of the bridegroom. An arrangement of mixed spring flowers centered the refreshment table, which was covered with a white linen cloth. The mother of the bridegroom served the cake and the bride's mother poured punch.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

We all marry for better or for worse.

But you don't know how bad it can get until you find out you're stuck with an "I don't dance."

During courtship, the "I don't dance-ers" mislead you (I don't believe I said that). They're the first ones on the floor, pushing your arm up and down like they're priming a pump, and maneuvering around between couples dipping and swaying.

It wasn't until our wedding reception when the orchestra played the anniversary waltz that I knew I had been conned. The crowd made a circle around my new husband and me to lead the dancing when he turned to me and said, "Please, not tonight. I have a headache."

If his excuses for not dancing were laid end to end, they would encircle Ann Miller's teased hair 30 times. These are some of his better ones:

"It's too crowded. Wait till it thins out."

"'Stardust' is too fast. Let's wait until the tempo slows down a bit."

"My varicose veins have been acting up."

"Why didn't you mention you wanted to dance before I unbuttoned my jacket?"

Through the years I have resigned myself to sitting around listening to the music and watching my feet swell under the table. I tell myself he's a good provider, loves children, and is kind to my mother-in-law.

But I couldn't resist mentioning his handicap the other night as we watched a period movie. The hero moved across the floor and chose his dancing partner — a beautiful woman of mystery. Together, they joined a line of about 50 other people and went through a routine of counting steps, swaying, dipping, turning, bowing and skipping that would have baffled the Ohio State marching band.

At the same time, mind you, the hero carried on a conversation that was provocative, suggestive, witty, and political — without missing a beat.

"Would you look at that!" I exclaimed to my husband. "Face it, Bunkie, you would never have hacked the Virginia Reel."

My husband took note of the dancer respendent in cutaway coat, powdered wig, lace over the hands' satin vest and buckled shoes and observed, "Without his Supphose, he'd be sitting it out like the rest of us."

Older Brides Select Ivory, Pastel Gowns

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Etiquette authority Elizabeth Post doesn't recommend pure white for mature brides or those who have been married before.

But not for reasons of etiquette.

It's chiefly because most older women look better in off-white, ivory or pastels than they do in stark white, Mrs. Post said in a telephone interview from her home in Waterbury Center, Vt.

She suggests older brides avoid face veils like those worn by ingenue brides and designs that are too bouffant or frilly.

"But I think it's mostly a matter of choosing what's most becoming. A divorcee might wear off-white or white with color in the trim or white lace over a pastel underskirt.

"Length depends on the type of wedding. If it is a church wedding and formal, a long gown is called for. Certainly, a young second-time bride will want to wear a long dress again."

Mrs. Post said street length afternoon dresses are appropriate for less formal weddings. "The setting rather than age determines the dress length."

Her views coincide with current styles we saw in the New York City showroom of a major manufacturer of bridal wear.

General manager Marvin Cashman said ivory and pastels are the favorite colors for second weddings and older brides.

Styles may change rapidly in ready-to-wear and sportswear, but brides of all ages remain steadfast in their desire for feminine, becoming wedding gowns, he said.

Only the most expensive designs tend to change somewhat with succeeding seasons, Cashman said.

So-called fashion colors that also change seasonally rarely show up, even in bridesmaids' apparel.

Ivory has become a big favorite in the past five years, for first weddings as well as successive ones, he said. Traditional pastels such as ice blue and blush pink are as popular for bridal gowns as they ever were.

Many gowns at Albert Angelo, Inc., feature empire waistlines, including a $110 design that Cashman said was "as big a reorder as we have ever had." It was a sheer nylon organza-type fabric with chantilly lace and iridescents (like small sequins) and lantern sleeves.

"It sells as heavily in 14 and 16 as it does in smaller sizes," Cashman said.

Another popular model is a chapel train gown in organza with its own headpiece like a small tiara with a cathedral length mantilla. It is trimmed with re-embroidered lace, seed and oat pearls, and lace applied vertically on the skirt.

The company's most expensive line includes one wedding gown that looks like a caftan and another that consists of a backless halter of venise lace with a permanently pleated chiffon skirt and matching cape. The caftan look is achieved with split sleeves dropping from a venise lace bodice.

Not for your usual conservative bride, Cashman said, but if she is being married in anything other than a Catholic church, she can be a little more exposed: wear lower necklines, shorter sleeves.

Carpeting Can Save On Fuel

By NICK GREGORY
United Press International

Households can save up to 13 per cent in annual heating bills by carpeting their homes, according to a new study made by a technical institute for six trade groups in the floor-covering industry.

Manufacturer Mike Masland, president of the Carpet and Rug Institute, Dalton, Ga., says carpeting saves significant amounts of heating fuel because it helps keep rooms warmer. It also cuts noise pollution and reduces the risk of skidding accidents.

The study by the Georgia Institute of Technology in Atlanta showed the greatest savings potential exists for single-story homes with concrete slab floors or uninsulated wooden floors over a crawl space.

Combinations of carpet and padding were found to cut heat loss through the floor by as much as 72 per cent on the uninsulated concete slabs and as much as 54 per cent on the wooden floors.

The amount of money actually saved depends on the location, shape and size of the home, local fuel rates and seasonal degree days, as well as the type of carpeting and padding used.

The study used houses in 15 cities, including Miami, Chicago, Spokane, Wash. and Caribou, Maine. It tested 18 carpet samples and five different fibers and styles: level loop, tip-sheared high-low loop, shag and saxony. Five different types of rug pads were also tested.

Manmade fibers, such as nylon, polyester, acrylic and olefin make up about 98 per cent of today's carpet market, Masland said.

Fiber type is the primary price factor in floor coverings, Masland said, because manufacturing costs are about constant.

He added that the whole world can switch to a lamb chop diet, but it won't make wool carpeting more abundant and cheaper.

Sheep that produce carpet wool are found in the craggy hills of such countries as Scotland, New Zealand and Pakistan.

"Put those sheep in America and their hair character will mutate. In two years they'll be growing fine hair used for clothing, not carpeting."

He said manmade fibers not only last much longer, but they also clean easier and cost much less than wool, $1.20 per pound for a good quality fiber, compared with $3 for wool.

The study showed thickness and pile density rather than fiber type are important determinants of insulation value. Air spaces or pockets between fibers keep warm air from escaping. Padding also insulates according to its thickness and the amount of air space or pockets it has.

In one St. Louis house, the study showed annual savings of $16. In Chicago and Duluth, the same size house with the same kind of carpet and electrical heating saved $31.

Masland characterized nylon as strong, long-wearing, resilient and easy to maintain, polyester as soft and durable with good color and luster and acrylic as excellent for plush pile floor coverings because it has a wool-like fiber and is virtually care free.

"Olefin, used originally for outdoor purposes because of its stain-resistant fiber, has become popular in kitchens, he said. "Wool has outstanding crush-resistance and is also easy to maintain."

What's the best combination for energy-conscious shoppers?

Barry Torrence, director of technical services for The Carpet and Rug Institute, says: "The thicker the total of the two (carpeting and padding), the better."

Toys Undercut Outdoor Activities

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Tremendous domestication in the toy industry is weaning American children away from outdoor activities, says a child development authority.

"Apparently, we are planning a world where we live indoors," said Dr. Brian Sutton-Smith, speaking of new toys displayed at the annual trade fair in New York City. Sutton-Smith is research consultant to the Toy Manufacturers of America and head of the graduate program in developmental psychology at Columbia University's Teachers College.

He told a news conference that toys tend to reflect society as a whole.

"The increasing complexity and incredible acceleration of automated, electronic toys is an on-going trend," he said.

In response to a question, Sutton-Smith acknowledged that toys intended for indoor play contribute to the problems of overweight and under-activity suffered by many children today.

He also said commercial toys based on television show characters, fast-food chains and food products put pressure on children to buy certain products. He added that children whose parents discuss the commercialism with them are less likely to be affected in the long run. "Only the very young are affected, and they are so young their parents still control what they buy."

He said adventure playgrounds and scouting attempt to correct the indoor play situation, but added that more schools should have better physical education programs.

By contrast, he said, many 19th century games were terribly dangerous. He described one called Duckstones, in which one player threw stones at a target while another tried to prevent the stone from hitting it.

Sutton-Smith added that decision-making games are steadily increasing.

"That probably implies that we are finding children need to make many more choices in preparation for adult life."

He said research into sex role stereotyping in choice of toys indicates children and parents remain the major force. Sutton-Smith quoted studies of the average number of toys for 6-year-olds in upper income homes in both North Carolina and New York City. They showed boys had a much greater variety of toys than girls the same age.

Asked what they played with most often, girls tended to name domestic toys, dolls and the like, while boys tended to reflect what Sutton-Smith calls "TV imagery" and playthings designed for use outside the home, as they have traditionally.

One-to-three-year-olds represent the missing area in toy research, he said.

"It's very difficult for a an 18-month-old child to be very imaginative" if he has mostly stacking toys or the kind that fit together, he said.

"They should have very realistic toys, copying what they see regularly in their homes."

Kitchen pots and pans are the best, he said.

In another speech, association board chairman David A. Miller said oil shortages had greater impact on the industry in 1974 than they do currently.

"There's no real shortage of raw materials now. The problems have more to do with the availability of manufacturing facilities outside the United States."

Miller sees no major toy price increases in store for consumers this year, but expects creeping inflation in areas such as labor contract wage settlements to boost retail prices by about five percent.

Special WOTM Meet Called

A special meeting of Chapter No. 1308 has been called by Kay Cancie, grand chancellor of the Women of the Moose, to be held at the Moose Lodge Monday at 8 p.m.

Women Warned On Mistakes In Investing

NEW YORK (AP) — Women investing in the stock market tend to make the same mistakes over and over again, says Myrna Liebowitz, president of the Women Stockbrokers Association.

"It's easy to make mistakes in the stock market and an intelligent investor will profit by the experiences of others," she adds. Miss Liebowitz, who is with Wall Street's Herzfeld and Stern, lists these common mistakes made by investors:

—Taking stock tips given to them by friends and acquaintances too seriously and buying their recommendations without thorough investigation.

—Buying stocks and putting them away without re-evaluating them every year because of changes in personal situation, in the company or in the economy.

—Trying to buy a stock to get rich overnight.

—Putting too much money in the stock market, without an adequate cash reserve in the bank for emergencies.

—Not having a good rapport with the stockbroker on the investment plan or philosophy of the investor.

—Buying and selling, like a professional trader, too often. It's virtually impossible for an amateur who buys and sells every week or month to make anything but losses, says Miss Liebowitz.

—Allowing emotions to control selling. Many investors refuse to admit that they made a mistake buying a stock and hold on to it despite tremendous losses and no future to the stock.

—Not being informed about the tax bracket they are in. Often the nine-month capital gain wait will see profits disappear. Many investors believe they will save so much if they wait when, in reality, they sometimes might be better off if they sold before the nine months, took the profits and paid the taxes.

—Buying stocks and then becoming physically ill if they go down. If investment has such an effect on a person, she shouldn't be in the market.

—Blaming the broker for everything. In the final analysis it is the investors who have the final decision. They can take advice from brokers and then do what they wish, Miss Liebowitz points out. The broker will comply.

10 Commandments For Husbands

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR READERS: Last week I published my Ten Commandments for Wives. And now...

TEN COMMANDMENTS FOR HUSBANDS

1. Thou shalt put thy wife before thy mother, thy father, thy daughter, and thy son, for she is thy lifelong companion.
2. Abuse not thy body either with excessive food, tobacco or drink, that thy days may be many and healthful in the presence of thy loved ones.
3. Permit neither thy business, nor thy hobby, to make of thee a stranger to thy children, for the precious gift a man giveth his family is his time.
4. Forget not the virtue of cleanliness.
5. Make not thy wife a beggar, but share willingly with her thy worldly goods.
6. Forget not to say, "I love you." For even though thy love be constant, thy wife doth yearn to hear the words.
7. Remember that the approval of thy wife is worth more than the admiring glances of a hundred strangers. Cleave unto her and forsake all others.
8. Keep thy home in good repair, for out of it cometh the joy of thy old age.
9. Forgive with grace, for who among us does not need to be forgiven?
10. Honor the Lord thy God all the days of thy life, and thy children will rise up and call thee blessed.

DEAR ABBY: I see where a lot of people have protested the advertising of various "unmentionable" products on TV, but as far as I'm concerned, there are worse things on television to complain about.

I refer to the content of some of the daytime programs. Some of the game shows I used to enjoy have gotten so dirty I have stopped watching them.

Also, whatever happened to that commandment about taking the name of the Lord in vain? I've heard "God," "Lord" and even "Jesus Christ" used that way, and I find it very offensive. (The "hells" and "damns" I've gotten accustomed to long ago, although I still feel it sets a bad example for our young people.)

Now, to whom shall we direct our complaints on the above?

OFFENDED IN CONN.

DEAR OFFENDED: Write your local TV station, and ask them to forward your complaint to the head of the network.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, for Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (24¢) envelope.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for nine years, and I still feel like a servant in my own home.

I am not allowed to invite more than two people over at a time because "crowds" make my husband nervous.

Every time I use the sink or the tub, he asks me if I dried the chrome.

When I use the sweeper he keeps telling me to be careful not to bump the walls.

He won't let me have anyone with a small child over because he's afraid something might get broken or dirty.

I love children, but he tells me I'm too old to start a family of my own. Am I?

THIRTY AND NO FUTURE

DEAR THIRTY: You are not too "old" to start a family, but I would have reservations about starting a family with a husband who offers me no future. And may I remind you, the longer you tolerate his tyranny, the more difficult it will be to demand your rights as an equal partner in marriage.

Thriving Dominicans Want No More Trujillo Rule

By WEBER F. TROUT

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (UPI) — This long-turbulent Caribbean nation apparently has put its stormy past behind it.

Progress toward a future of political and economic stability was evident in a 14-day tour of the Dominican Republic by this reporter.

"No more Trujillos — no more dictatorships!" was an exclamation heard in all sections of the Dominican portion of the island of Hispaniola where Christopher Columbus first saw land in the New World in 1492.

Scores of waiters, taxi and bus drivers, bellmen, bartenders and other Dominicans questioned were virtually unanimous in their approval of life today and in their hopes for a brighter tomorrow in the sunny island nation.

"We have freedom now — real democracy — and we want to keep it," a taxi driver in the north coast city of Puerto Plata said. "We don't want any more strong men. No, no, no!"

Vice-president Carlos Goico Morales told UPI the improved status of the Dominican Republic, which marked its 131st year of independence from Spain last weekend, has been brought about by 69-year-old President Joaquin Balaguer, now serving his third four-year term.

"The people are happy now because we have peace and a better life," he said through an interpreter, "and we do not plan to lose it."

Opposition leaders claim that 10 years of Balaguer is enough but U.S. officials here say there is no strong challenger for the presidency and that Balaguer is heavily favored to win re-election in May, 1978.

The opposition Revolutionary and Liberation parties have charged high level corruption in the Balaguer government but no specific charges have been made against the president himself.

The communist party is officially banned but some of its activities are tolerated, such as publication of a leftist newspaper. Four communist groups are represented but U.S. officials say their operations are almost totally ineffective and are ignored by the government.

Goico Morales admitted opposition charges that some political prisoners are in jail but said that in each case other criminal convictions were involved. Colonel Elias Wessin y Wessin, exiled in 1971 for plotting a coup against Balaguer, is living in Panama.

"The Dominican people are enjoying their post-Trujillo freedoms and tranquility," U.S. Ambassador Robert Hurwitch said, "and they do not want to go back to any kind of strongman government."

Hurwitch, who has been stationed in Santo Domingo for three and one-half years, said a primary reason for the revitalization of the country "is the release of the long-repressed free spirit of the people."

U.S. Marines landed as recently as 1965, during the civil war which followed the assassination of Trujillo. At the time, the United States spent hundreds of millions in the country which occupies two thirds of the 29,418 square mile island it shares with Haiti. U.S. aid has tapered off since to $10 million a year in economic assistance.

Signs of economic upward movement are almost everywhere.

Tourism is booming along at record levels. Foreign investment is up. Production of sugar, gold, rice, coffee, cocoa, tobacco and other export items has increased significantly. Exploration for more oil is underway by one Venezuelan and four U.S. companies.

New commercial and residential buildings are springing up all over the 475-year-old capital city of Santo Domingo, one of the oldest in the Western Hemisphere and called Ciudad Trujillo during the repressive 31-year rule of strongman Rafael Trujillo.

Historic monuments like the Alcazar tomb of Columbus in old Santo Domingo are being restored and preserved. Santo Domingo's National Theatre, largest performing arts center in the Caribbean, will be the site of the 1977 Miss Universe pageant on July 16.

Modern tourist resorts and hotels have opened and others are being built along George Washington Avenue, a boulevard which runs along Santo Domingo's rocky Caribbean seacoast, and on the country's north and east coasts.

The new facilities are needed to accommodate the growing flood of North American and European tourists looking for a more hospitable atmosphere in the Caribbean sun country.

There is little crime and the streets are no longer full of machinegun-toting soldiers, although some government buildings like the presidential palace are constantly under armed guard.

Dominicans have welcomed the growing flood of North American tourists — more than 400,000 last year — because tourism means more jobs to help cut the 28 per cent unemployment rate.

Visitors are finding the Dominican people more open and friendly than many on some of the other Caribbean islands where surliness and even hostility has become standard behavior for waiters, bellmen and other vacation-resort personnnel.

An example was the young Santo Domingo businessman who stopped his small motorcycle to help this reporter, who had run out of gasoline. Briefcase tucked under his arm, he rode three miles to fetch the gasoline and then refused to accept money for what he had done.

Acupuncture Treats Pets

By KENNETH L. WHITING

SINGAPORE (AP) — If the ancient Chinese medical art of acupuncture is good enough for modern man, it's good enough for man's best friend.

So says veterinarian James Tan, who has used acupuncture needles to treat ailing pets.

"Veterinary acupuncture is similar to acupuncture on human beings. The disadvantage is that animals cannot communicate and tell you where it's hurting," said Tan.

Tan says he has experimented on nine four-legged patients.

"I've only tried it out on cats and dogs, but would love to try it on horses if I get a chance... I have seen it succeed where Western medicine had failed."

He recalled the case of a dog afflicted with arthritis, rheumatism and spondylitis (inflammation of the spinal cord). When it did not respond to conventional remedies acupuncture was tried and the animal recovered after the fourth treatment, Tan said.

Veterinary acupuncture has a promising future, said Tan. A spokesman for the Singapore Veterinary Association said 13 of its members planned to visit China in May to study veterinary medicine with emphasis on acupuncture.

Lee Tat Mong, veterinarian at the Singapore Zoological Gardens, said he experimented with acupuncture on the zoo's orangutans.

"It is only suitable for tame animals. In the case of wild animals there will be difficulty getting at the acupuncture points," Lee said.

In a recent demonstration, Tan treated a dog suffering from arthritis and rheumatism. No anaesthetic was used but the dog's owner held it down. It did not struggle when four needles were inserted at various points in one hind leg.

Entebbe Raid Commander Had No Fear Of Death

By WILLIAM SILBERG

ITHACA, N.Y. (UPI) — They named the Entebbe raid in his honor, but he was somewhat of an Israeli legend even before "Operation Jonathan," the rescue mission which took his life.

Dr. Benzion Netanyahu speaks of his son, Jonathan, with a pride tempered only by the sadness of the young commando's loss to a Ugandan sniper.

For it was Lt. Col. Jonathan Netanyahu, who led the lightning Entebbe raid July 4, 1976. "Yoni," as his friends and family call him, was the only Israeli commando killed in the raid.

Israeli schools, suburbs, parks, forests and scholarship funds now bear his name as does the astonishing Israeli military operation in which more than 100 hostages were rescued from terrorists at Uganda's Entebbe airport.

Distinguished in the 1967 and 1973 wars and other mlitary engagements, Lt. Col. Netanyahu was regarded by many as a future candidate for Israel's Chief of Staff. He also was considered an expert soldier and strategist, endeared to his comrades by what some described simply as his "humanity."

The elder Netanyahu has returned to this small upstate New York community after several months in Israel to resume his duties as a professor at Cornell University — duties shattered last July by the sniper's bullet.

Yoni's presence, in clippings, letters, memorial documents and medals, is strong in the Netanyahu home. The material, as his father notes, "is endless."

"We got many hundreds of letters from all over the world," he said. "The first outpouring of grief was from the army - from the top generals to the common soldiers." There is no bitterness in the voice of the renowned Jewish scholar and Zionist as he speaks of his son. He is extremely doubtful that what happened at Entebbe could have been avoided.

"It was the compulsion of necessity and the force of logic that combined to produce both the achievement and the tragedy," he said.

"All considered," he added, "the government of Israel could not embark on any other course. The chiefs of the army could not entrust the rescue but to their choice commando units. And Yoni, given his duties and convictions, could not have acted other than he did."

The consequence of his committment was something Yoni understood. "Death does not frighten me," he wrote at the age of 17. "If it is necessary for me to lay down my life in the attainment of an important goal, I will do so willingly."

The whole of Israel mourned the young commando's death, as did a majority of Jews across the world. But the letters of condolence came to the Netanyahu home from Jew and non-Jew the world over, from people to whom Yoni and his Entebbe rescue party symbolized free men defying the rule of terror.

There are letters also from those who knew the American-born soldier as a student and friend, either in high school in Philadelphia or in college at Harvard. His father says some of these are among the most touching.

In tribute to Yoni, Israel's Hebrew University has established a memorial scholarship fund and an award. A similar scholarship fund has been set up at Cornell University.

An Israeli-based research organization called the Jonathan Institute also has been created. The public committee which backs the institute is a collection of Israeli notables, chaired by former Prime Minister Golda Meir.

An outstanding student and a sparkling writer whom many considered poetic, Yoni loved the academic life. But his love for his studies was not nearly as intense as his devotion to Israel.

"He was dreaming of resuming his studies and planned to do so time and again," his father says. "Yet he always conditioned his return to Harvard on the relaxation of the military tensions."

In fact, the young soldier had planned to return to Harvard this summer. He indicated his desire in his last letter with the words "if there will be no unforseen surprises."

Born in New York City in 1946, Yoni went with his parents to Israel two years later and was raised there. He returned to the United States in 1963 when his father was invited to become a professor at Dropsie College in Philadelphia.

Yoni finished high school in Philadelphia and then returned to Israel to join the army. After being wounded in the 1967 Six-Day War, he came back to the states to study at Harvard.

Yoni decided to leave Harvard after a year and return to Israel to rejoin the army. "At this time," he wrote in a letter, "I should be defending my country. Harvard is a luxury I cannot afford."

He finally returned to Harvard, but only for the summer of 1973. Again his love for the academic life gave way to what he considered his primary duties.

Yoni returned to the army, fought in the October war, in the ferocious battles for the Golan Heights, and finished out his life as a soldier, leading the elite anti-terrorist commando unit.

"What made him go back to the army was simply the feeling of duty," his father said. "He didn't like commanding people. He didn't like to make war. But he thought his contribution as an expert soldier to the defense of his people could be of some value, and he felt committed to give it."

Yoni did not speak of his military accomplishments either with his family or his friends. The Entebbe raid would not have made him a celebrity had he lived to see its completion.

Even the release of his name and the details of the operation were breaks with the ordinarily tight-lipped Israeli military practice.

The resulting publicity has not been easy for his family. The spotlight can be glaring and harsh at times and the genuinely-felt tributes, while welcome, can hardly ease the grief.

Neither of Yoni's parents has seen the television-movie accounts of the Entebbe raid. They also have not read many of the books and articles — either by choice or because there just hasn't been time.

"Some of the stories I have read seem to contain a considerable amount of fiction," his father says. "I take much of what I read with a grain of salt. In any case, it is clear that the story of Yoni's life has yet to be told."

Did Yoni think terrorism could be checked?

"Yes," his father said, "if it met with a sustained expression of outrage on the part of Western public opinion, and with determined, concerted action on the part of all governments of the free world."

What would be Yoni's view of the stance some democratic states now take against terrorists?

"He would, I think, express great dismay and concern at the weakness and indecision displayed by some democracies toward this phenomenon," his father said. "He felt that there are principles that must be upheld if civilization itself is to survive."

"Furthermore he believed that the current terrorism strikes at the foundations of the free world. Some countries are trying to avoid confronting it as if they can escape involvement. But the whole world is already involved."

Perhaps they are the words Yoni would have used. They may serve as yet another tribute to his memory, like the powerful eulogy delivered by Israeli Defense Minister Shimon Compiewi nmw5g Jonathan of Entebbe to Jonathan the son of Saul, Peres said at the young soldier's grave:

"The same heroism in the man. The same lamentation in the heart of the people."

What To Do In Auto Accidents

NEW YORK (AP) — One out of every five licensed drivers in the United States was involved in an auto accident in 1976, according to the Insurance Information Institute.

With the chance of involvement in an accident running so high, the Institute urges every driver to be aware of certain steps that should be taken following an accident. These include:

—Stop, identify yourself and summon aid for the injured, as required by the law.

—Write down the other driver's name, address and driver's license number.

—Obtain the names and addresses of all passengers involved in the accident and anyone who witnessed the mishap.

—Tell the basic facts to the police officer who investigates the accident, but do not admit to fault under any circumstances. Make a note of the officer's name, badge number and jurisdiction.

—Refuse to sign any liability waivers or assurances that you are uninjured since accident injuries are not always immediately evident. Even if you only suspect you are injured, you should consider seeing a doctor.

—Take notes on the circumstances surrounding the accident, including time, place, weather and road conditions, any evidence of a law violation, approximate speed of both cars and other relevant details.

—Make as accurate a diagram as possible of the scene of the accident, including the precise placement of cars and people.

—Report the accident to your insurance representative promptly, since most policies require such notification within a specified period. In order to speed the claims settlement, include your policy number and all the details of the accident in your report.

Change For Food Habits

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — A turnaround in some of America's food habits is predicted by a food and nutrition expert here, based on the shrinking size of households and the aging process.

Teresa Shaffer, an extension specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln says what people eat has a lot to do with age and family size.

She anticipates significant changes in eating habits as families continue to get smaller and the birth rate drops.

She expects vegetable and fruit consumption to rise because small households and people living alone tend to eat more of these foods than larger households.

Potato eating probably will drop, she said, because there will be more women, traditionally low consumers of spuds.

Ms. Shaffer thinks milk consumption will decline as a result of fewer teen-agers and a stable or declining birth rate.

Continued increases in consumption of red meat and poultry are expected, although at a slower rate because of the drop in our young male population.

Unless today's teen-agers carry their appetite for soft drinks and other sweets into adult life, sugar consumption is also expected to decline as the population has fewer teens.

Governor Stops An Energy Leak

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — As part of an extensive residential conservation program in her state, Governor Ella Grasso of Connecticut conducted an energy check of her official residence and found inadequate attic insulation, dirty furnace filters and insufficient caulking and weatherstripping.

These energy leaks are common in most American homes and contribute to higher than necessary fuel bills, according to home insulation experts. Gov. Grasso's energy bill last year was $3,900.

As a result of the inspection, Gov. Grasso has completed installing necessary insulation.

Artist, Nearly Blind, Still Painting At 80

By CHARLES C. HILL
Associated Press Writer

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (AP) — D.H. Belden, blind in one eye and with 10 per cent vision in the other, is an artist. With hands swollen by arthritis and shaking from age, he paints New England scenes, real and imagined.

"The shaking helps with the landscapes," said the legally blind 80-year-old painter, feigning brush strokes in the air as he laughed. "I never did pass that eye test to drive but I can sit down and turn out stuff like this."

Belden, whose tools include not only paint and brushes but also a magnifying glass, prefers watercolors to oil paint because he delights in detail. "I go for detail in a big way. I don't think a picture is any good without it," he says.

He paints just as often as the mood comes. "You've got to feel it," he explained. "When something comes up that appeals to me, I go to work on it.

"I get a thrill taking paint and a flat piece of paper and turning it into something with dimensions," he said in an interview.

Belden's vision hasn't changed much since he was two weeks old, when disease apparently attacked his then-healthy eyes. But he has been able to see well enough to get around and to support himself through the years as a small businessman, grocer, house painter and wallpaper hanger.

Belden smiles broadly as he tells of being asked to mix paint for full-sighted coworkers. The smile grows as he tells that the paint matched so well his supervisor couldn't tell where it was used to touch up years-old paint on a wall.

His father taught him to paint when he was a child. Since then he's been putting colors on canvas, the backs of posters, birch bark, glass or whatever else was available.

Most are landscapes he has lived with in Connecticut, Massachusetts and New Hampshire, or ones he has conjured up in his mind. Mountains are one of his favorite subjects.

He sells some paintings. But most of his works, including Christmas cards and bookmarks, are in his home or those of his friends.

12 MONTHS OR 12,000 MILES USED CAR WARRANTY

This guarantee applies to cars selling for $1000.00 and up. On a 50-50 basis. All work must be done in our shop. This warranty does not apply to any sport cars, high performance or air cooled engines or 4 speed transmissions (except economy cars). Most good used cars (even if they look like new) are only guaranteed for a month. Or for a thousand miles. No more. And some are not guaranteed at all. But at Tarheel when we say a used car is in excellent condition, we're willing to stand behind it. We're willing to do something a little extra for it. So we guarantee its motor, its rear end and its transmission for twelve months or twelve thousand miles. If you're in the market for a better used car, come out to Tarheel and look at ours. We'll show you some as good as new. Guaranteed. Asterisk denotes warranted car.

BUYERS BEWARE

DON'T READ THIS AD UNLESS YOU WANT TO BECOME INFORMED

When buying a home, ask your broker to get from the seller a ONE YEAR WRITTEN WARRANTY on the heating and central air condition systems, all sheet metal ductwork, total electrical and plumbing systems, all built-in appliances, hot water heater and plumbing fixtures.

When the seller says he can't, what then?

Can you afford $1500 to $2000 to replace the furnace? If the home were guaranteed by ERA's (BBP) Buyers Protection Plan, it would provide the solution to unexpected breakdowns in home equipment covered. ERA's BPP says to you Mr. Buyer, don't worry! We've got you covered! One toll free telephone call will start a local repair specialist on his way to repair or replace the breakdown. The most you ever pay is a modest deductable charge. And that is Buyer RELIEF.

Gene Kelly Hosts Ringling Brothers Barnum And Bailey Circus Tuesday

HOST IN SUPPORTING ROLE — Host Gene Kelly becomes a member of the supporting team in The Silagis' teeterboard act on NBC-TV's all-new "Highlights of Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Circus" Tuesday, March 15 (8-9 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

"This is the best circus I've ever seen," Gene Kelly said during the taping of the all-new "Highlight of Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Circus" special he hosts (Tuesday' March 15, 8 to 9 p.m. on NBC-TV.

"This is particularly reflected in the work of the clowns," he continued. "Twenty years ago clowns performed strictly in pantomime. Now American clowns use some chatter."

Kelly, known throughout the world for his athletic dancing style, and as an actor, choreographer and director, admitted to more than a spectator's interest in the world of the circus performer. He has followed the circus both in Europe and in America.

Performing in three rings, he says, is a distinctly American innovation; even the most famous European circuses still use only one.

The circus influence is also apparent in some of Kelly's film roles. He played a trapeze artist in the 1944 release "Thousands Cheer," and introduced the song "Be A Clown" in the 1949 musical motion picture, "The Pirate."

The trapeze artist role was a "natural"; in his youth Gene was an avid gymnast. And this reflected in his body development; he has the shoulders, chest and quickness of a pro football linebacker.

Athletics have played a significant part in his dancing. "I'm a big sports fan. I've been one all my life. I've based my personal style in dancing on athletics."

Dancing and sports have been important to him throught his professional life. Although he confessed that he does not dance much anymore, he is still an avid sports fan. He plays lots of tennis because he prefers running sports; he is not a golfer.

He also is a dedicated pro football fan. A native of Pittsburgh, Pa., and now a resident of Beverly Hills Calif., he roots for two teams, the Pittsburgh Steelers and the Los Angeles Rams.

"If the Steelers and the Rams had gotten into the Super Bowl, I would have left the country," he quipped.

Semi-Finals, Finals On NBC

NBC Sports will offer its most extensive coverage of the NCAA Basketball Tournament — 11 games — beginning with back-to-back opening round doubleheaders Saturday, March 12 (2 to 6 p.m.), and Sunday, March 13 (2 to 6 p.m.), and culminating in the prime-time colorcast of the Championship Final Monday, March 28 (8 to 10 p.m.).

In addition to the new doubleheader format for the opening weekend, NBC, for the first time, will cover the Regional Semi-Finals, which will be presented in prime time Thursday, March 17, 8 to 10 p.m. The format will consist of a line-up of four games to colorcast on four regional networks in the same time period.

NBC Sports will resume tournament coverage Saturday, March 19, 12 to 6 p.m., with a Regional Championship tripleheader. The following weekend, the final four contenders will move into the Omni in Atlanta, Ga., from which the National Semi-Finals will be aired Saturday, March 26, 2 to 6 p.m., to be followed Monday evening by the Championship Final.

"The NCAA Basketball Tournament is the premier basketball attraction on network television," Carl Lindemann Jr., Vice President, NBC-TV Sports, said. "Each year the tournament attracts larger TV audiences and this year, with the interest generated by 10 weekends of regular-season coverage we expect new television basketball audience records again."

Prime-time coverage of the 1975 NCAA Championship between UCLA and Kentucky attracted the largest TV audience, college or professional, in basketball history with a 21.3 rating and a total audience of over 42,000,000 people.

Presented A Challenge

On a cold, rainy Sunday afternoon in Washington, D.C., Edward Herrmann, who stars as Franklin Delano Roosevelt in "Eleanor and Franklin: The White House Years," sat in the camper that served as his dressing room and spoke of the demands of playing the role.

"I've spent a lot of time trying to figure him out," said Herrmann, who also portrayed the late President in the last season's Emmy Award-winning "Eleanor and Franklin," "but he was such a private man — even more private than Eleanor. The role is really quite difficult."

Outside, across the street from the White House, production personnel clothed in heavy sweaters and plastic raincoats hurried to set up the next scene in the "ABC Theatre" presentation, which airs Sunday, March 13, 8 to 11 p.m.

Herrmann, in the makeup that gives him an uncanny resemblance to the 32nd President leaned back in his seat and continued with his thoughts on portraying President Roosevelt as a man much older than himself. "It is first of all difficult to play a 50-year-old man, but FDR was so alive, so vital. He was rich and full, but yet there was a great maturity. He can't be played as an old man, but the maturity and the dignity must be there," the actor said.

Lowering the volume on the camper's radio, on which he had been listening to a program of classical music, Herrmann said research was critical in the development of his interpretations. "You read as much as you can, and you ask questions: Where was he raised? Where did he go to school? What were his parents like? Who were his friends?

"I asked all of these questions, as would any other actor," he said, "but he was so complex. I have not tried to imitate him, but I can suggest him."

Then, chuckling with the memory of an anecdote uncovered in his research into the character, Herrmann said, "The greatest challenge was playing the part of such a fine actor. It seems," said Herrmann, telling the story, "That shortly after Orson Welles' broadcast of 'The War of The Worlds,' he came to the White House and met with Roosevelt.

INAUGURAL BALL — Jane Alexander and Edward Herrmann portray Eleanor and Franklin Roosevelt at one of his inaugurations dramatized in the ABC Special "Eleanor and Franklin: The White House Years," airing Sunday, March 13, (8-11 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Drama Intrigues Viewers

"Another World" premiered in May, 1964, and it is a daytime drama that intrigues people with it's story lines. Although it took two years for the show to really pick up in popularity, it has consistently been one of the top-rated serials even since.

Two of the newer members of the cast are Susan Harney and Gary Carpenter. Susan became Alice Frame who Jacquie Courtney left the show in 1975, and Gary recently replaced Ted Shackelford as Raymond Gordon, Alice's romantic interest.

One of the most difficult tasks actors can undertake is to continue a character that was established by somebody else, but Susan and Raymond are doing an admirable job.

The problems of such an endeavor, says Susan, are most for the audience than from the actress' point of view. "There is a history involved, but I'm a totally different actress and I bring what I bring to it, which anybody does who is totally different. But from an audience point of view...I'm sure it's been quite a change."

Susan says that she wasn't at all opposed to taking over the role of Alice. "I think appearing on 'Another World' is a marvelous training ground for me." Her only other experience prior to this series consisted of brief appearances on "The Secret Storm," "How to Survive a Marriage" and "Edge of Night."

A native of Murfreesboro, Tenn., Susan attended Middle Tennessee State University where she majored in drama. "When I knew I wanted to be a professional actress, I knew I had to come to New York."

This is Gary Carpenter's second role in "Another World." He originally portrayed Mike Bauer — yes, the same Mike Bauer who is a character on "Guiding Light" — a few years ago. Ted Shackelford created the role of Raymond Gordon, but vacated it when he decided to go to California and pursue a career in night time TV.

Gary has stepped into Ted's shoes with relative ease, and viewers seem to be quite happy with his interpretation of the role.

Dolphins Studied

Hal Linden, star of ABC News' young people's magazine series, "Animals, Animals, Animals," explores the world of the dolphin on the edition of the program airing Sunday, March 13, from 11:30 to 11:55 a.m.

The dolphin has long been considered an entertainer because of its' grace, power, beauty and intelligence. It no only fascinates trainers and dolphinarium audiences everywhere, but it is also a source of intrigue among civilian and military scientists all over the world.

It is a well known fact that man and dolphin share a common ancestry and that both are mammals who started the evolutionary climb together. But unlike man, who decided to stay and fight for his future on land, the dolphin's ancestors chose to return to the sea.

In Europe the top center for dolphin research is at Hardewijk in Holland where a commercial dolphinarium is combined with modern research pens, and the dolphin is being studied by scientists all over the world. One interesting experiment is to try to ascertain the range and refinement of a super-sense a sonar, or echo-locating ability.

One dolphin trainer claims that dolphins have telepathic powers. She says, "They know what I'm going to do before I'm doing it." Her statement is non-scientific, based only on her own experiences, and other scientists, although they find her claim intriguing, are not yet ready to go along with her belief.

Perhaps the most unusual study of all is being conducted at Morecambe in England, where there is an on-going project stemming from a long-time suspicion by two trainers that their dolphins might be trying to take control over them.

Morrow Stars In Disney Film

Consistently high performance in a variety of roles is the mark of a good actor. And an examination of recent parts played by rugged Vic Morrow shows that the solid and multi-talented performer excels at his craft.

In Walt Disney Productions' first movie ever made especially for television, "The Ghost of Cypress Swamp," Morrow portrays a half-crazed swamp hermit who has been hiding for 16 years. Jeff East, Jacqueline Scott and Noah Beery also stars in this exciting adventure which airs on "The Wonderful World of Disney," Sunday March 13, 7 p.m. on NBC-TV.

The show is Morrow's second starring role with Disney. Last summer the Bronx-born actor played a ruthless rogue described as "the devil himself" in t1;e studio's post-Civil War adventure film, "Treasure of Matecumbe."

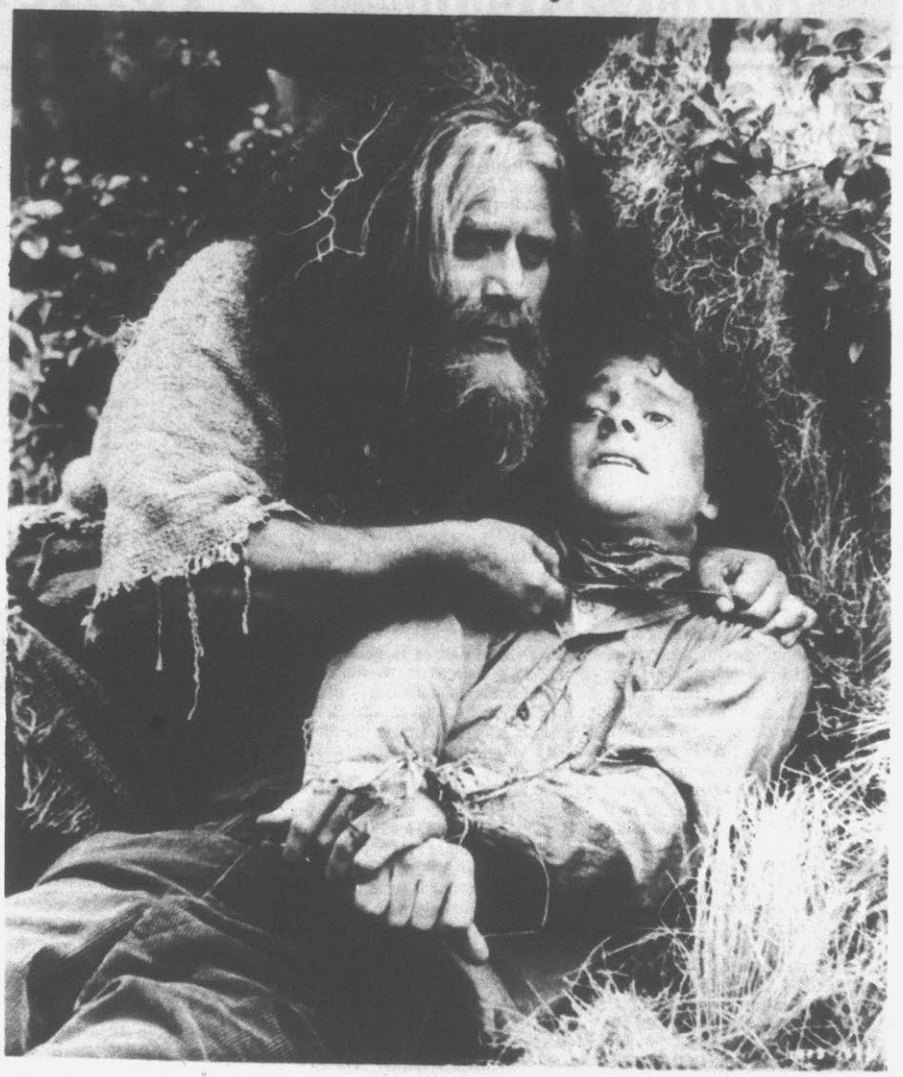

"What a heavy" Morrow enthused. "I enjoyed the part very much. It was a chance to go all out, over the top."

Playing underhanded, shady characters is something Morrow delights in. "I've played a kidnapper in the film, 'The Baby Sitter,' a manipulative politician in 'Captains and the Kings' an overseer with a whip in 'Roots,' and a half-crazed swamp hermit in 'Ghost of Cypress Swamp.' I try to repeat myself," Morrow said.

Tough as Morrow can be for his art, off screen he is pure pussycat. He rambles on about his recent marriage (inspiring), the new house he is remodeling in Soutl: California (vexing) and his hobby, astral photography (fascinating).

He also shows a sincere concern for families and films. "I never thought before about the kind of films you could take your kids to see. But I realized that in many pictures the human-ness has gone out the window. 'Matecumbe' was " fine Mark Twain-like adventure story that kids could see. That made the picture work for me.

"And 'Ghost of Cypress Swamp' is like that," continues Morrow. "It's the adventure of a young boy who, while stalking a killer black panther, comes face to face with a half-crazed swamp hermit. But there's more to it than that. There's a lot of warmth to the realtionship that develops between the man and the boy. It's something the whole family will enjoy.

CAPTIVE...15-year-old Lonny Bascombe (Jeff East) is held prisoner by a half-crazed swamp hermit (Vic Morrow) in this thrilling scene from "The Ghost of Cypress Swamp," airing on "The World of Disney," Sunday, March 13 (7-9 p.m.) on NBC- TV.

Actress Gets Rare Opportunity

The extremely rare opportunity for a performer to portray her particular heroine has been given to Barbara Conrad. Ms. Conrad, a New York City Opera contralto making her televison debut, plays the role of Marian Anderson in "Eleanor and Franklin: The White House Years," on "ABC Theatre" presentation which airs Sunday, March 13, 8 to 11 p.m. on ABC-TV.

During her years as a student at the University of Texas, where she studied voice, Barbara, on one occasion, like Miss Anderson, had her right to perform abridged.

Recalling the incident, Barbara said, "I was terribly in love with music. I would sing for anyone, and when it was announced that the school would stage 'Dido and Aenaes,' I auditioned. I didn't have the sense to be afraid."

As a student in the mid-1960s, Barbara had performed in a number of school and community productions, and she said it did not occur to her that this one — in which she would sing opposite a white male lead — would be any different.

She won the role, but when "various outside forces and threats" were exerted, she did not perform. The incident was much publicized and one of the people who read about it was Harry Belafonte.

Moved by the situation, he called to offer his moral support, and after her graduation, he brought Barbara to New York and helped her to launch her career.

Barbara has since performed throughout the U.S. and will make her European debut with the Frankfurt Opera in 1978. But in those years in New York she sang for anyone who would listen and who could help her with her career.

One of them was Marian Anderson. During her appointment in the great contralto's Fifth Avenue apartment, Barbara was impressed with the "quiet elegance" of the singer and the decor of her home.

Barbara recalls that Miss Anderson listened to her performance without comment, and when it was over, she said softly: "You will be a great star."

Barbara said she remembered that moment later in Washington, D.C., when she portrayed Miss Anderson during the 1941 concert she had performed at the Lincoln Memorial, after being banned from performing in Constitution Hall because of her color.

Anxious, because it was her first TV performance, Barbara moved forward as the cameras began to film the scene, and she began to sing. "Suddenly I found a rhythm," she said, "where I thought Miss Anderson would have been."

"Directions" Expands

"Directions" — ABC News' cultural-religious series which was recently named the winner of the Freedoms Foundation's George Washington Honor Medal in ceremonies at Valley Forge, Pa. — has been expanded to a full complement of 52 weeks.

Problem Rooted In The Soil

The sweetness in Peppermint Patty is hard to find as the little Peanut outfielder pitches some bitter remarks at a battered Charlie Brown, in "It's Arbor Day, Charlie Brown," animated Peanuts special to be rebroadcast Monday, March 14 (8-8:30 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Charlie Brown's mini troubles take root and grow when a Peanuts conservation project turns his baseball field into a garden plot, in "It's Arbor Day, Charlie Brown," animated Peanuts special to be rebroadcast Monday, March 14, 8 to 8:30 p.m. on CBS-TV.

Charlie Brown's little sister Sally's lack of knowlege about the significance of Arbor Day inspires other members of the Peanuts gang (Linus, Lucy, Frieda, Pigpen, Snoopy and Woodstock) to set things right by joining in the neighborhood planting spree.

Meanwhile, the unsuspecting Charlie Brown is busy with the strategy for the opening game of the season against Peppermint Patty's highly favored team. To mollify Charlie, for causing him tree trauma, the Peanuts dub his baseball field-turned-jungle Charlie Brown Field. Charlie is thrilled and considers it a gem of an idea until he arrives for the game and discovers that his is indeed a diamond in the rough.

Joining the Peanuts gang in "It's Arbor Day, Charlie Brown" is Re-Run, little brother of Lucy and Linus.

If the truth were know, Re-Run probably has a more harrowing lifestyle than any of his mis-adventurous playmates in Peanutland. Mom's bike becomes a jaunty juggernaut as she peddles her way from the supermarket to the hairdresser to the library to a variety of committee meetings with Re-Run joggling along behind her.

"Considering I don't do anything," says Re-Run character out of a curiosity that occurred to him while observing the number of small children who travel strapped, buckled and hugged to various conveyances while their parents pursue a routine of errands.

Re-Run first appeard in the daily newspaper strip several seasons ago, but it took producers Lee Mendelson and Bill Melendez some six years to add him to the cast of the animated Peanuts specials.

Graham's Crusade Airs

The world is in its latter days, Evangelist Billy Graham emphasizes in the last of five telecasts to be seen on WWAY Channel 3W, Monday, March 14, at 7 p.m.

The message is drawn from Graham's Southeastern Michigan Crusade, held just before last November's election in Pontiac Metropolitan Stadium. More than 360,000 persons attended the ten meetings.

Noting that many issues had sharply divided the country in recent years — including women's rights, capital punishment, bribes by corporations of foreign officials, the country's defense posture and others — Graham warned that political positions do not provide a haven for the country. The haven the country needs is a return to God.

The locale of the crusade, a stadium described as the world's largest air-supported covered stadium capable of seating over 80,000 persons, was unique. And unique techniques were used to promote sight and sound experiences for the huge audiences.

The techniques included bringing in a special sound system to beam 1600 watts of audio power from the field level up into the stands.

For the sight experience, a large screen was installed high above the platform so that those sitting far away across the huge stadium could see an enlarged picture of the evangelist, with every gesture and facial expression.

There were unique responses to the crusade. A family of five drove 120 miles to make a public commitment to Christ. It included two girls, their parents and grandmother. A 92-year-old woman who needed assistance to make her way from the stands to the platform to be converted, told workers she had wanted the born-again experience all of her life but didn't know how to go about it.

The music of the crusade includes a 3,000 voice choir directed by Cliff Barrows and other singers and musicians consisting of Johnny and June Cash, Norma Zimmer, Evie Tornquist, Andrae Crouch, Myrtle Hall, George Beverly Shea and the Murk Family.

A Medical 'Dropout'

Dr. Renee Richards, the surgeon and transsexual tennis player, was a recent guest on the "Tomorrow" show and told host Tom Snyder that she was temporarily quitting the medical profession to wage a full-time battle to enter women's tennis tournaments. A top-ranked amateur as Dick Raskin before her "sex reassignment surgery," she candidly admitted that Raskin played better tennis than Renee Richards.

Three New Series

A new adult comedy series, "Three's Company," a new dramatic series, "Westside Medical," and a new comedy-drama series, "Eight Is Enough," begin runs of varying lengths in ABC-TV's prime time program schedule during March.

Also in March, as part of the network's commitment to a living schedule of diversified family entertainment, the popular comedy-variety program, "The Brady Bunch Hour," begins a six-week run as a weekly series, and the first of five individually-scheduled "Future Cop" episode will air, in addition to "Dog and Cat" and "The Feather and Father Gang," two series which have recently premiered.

Commenting on the new series, Fred Silverman, President of ABC Entertainment, stated, "The addition of seven series to our prime time schedule in March continues our search for as much program freshness and diversity as possible. As we discovered with our limited run of 'Family' last spring' the on going introduction of new series extends the network's program development process beyond the all-or-nothing realm of the single pilot film. As a result, the audience not only is more involved in the selection process but is the immediate beneficiary of more originial programming than any network has offered for years."

On Tuesday, March 15, three of the series will debut in a once-only evening of previews: Follwing "Happy Days" at 8:30 p.m., will be the one-hour pilot film of "Eight Is Enough. "Three's Company" will follow, 9:30 to 10 p.m., and "Westside Medical," 10 to 11 p.m.

Beginning Monday, March 21, 8 to 9 p.m, "The Brady Buch Hour" will begin its six-week run a" a weekly series in this period, dropping out of its monthly rotation with "The Nancy Drew-Hardy Boys Mysteries" on Sunday evenings.

On Tuesday, March 22, 9 to 10 p.m., "Eight Is Enough" begins its six-week run in this time period, preempting "Rich Man, Poor Man - Book II."

On Thursday, March 24, 9:30 to 10 p.m., "Three's Company" beings a five-week run, preempting "The Tony Randall Show," which will be on hiatus until April 28. The four-week run of "Westside Medical" follows at 10, preempting "The Streets of San Francisco," also on hiatur.

Hot Lips Gets Married

Col. Potter (Harry Morgan) gives away the bride, Maj. Margaret ("Hot Lips") Houlihan (Loretta Swit) at her long awaited and quickly executed, wedding, on "M*A*S*H " Tuesday, March 15 (9-9:30 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Maj. Margaret "Hot Lips" Houlihan's (Loretta Swit) reluctant fiance, Lt. Col. Donald Penobscott (Beeson Carroll), who has kept her in doubt during an eight-month engagement, arrives at the 4077th hospital on leave from Tokyo, and shocks her by deciding to be married right away, on "M*A*S*H," Tuesday, March 15, 9 to 9:30 p.m. on CBS-TV.

When Colonel Potter (Harry Morgan) hears the good news, he starts a flurry of activity: Father Mulcahy (William Christopher) agrees to perform the ceremony, arrangements are made for a suitable wedding cake, and Potter insists on giving the bride away.

A member of the series' cast since it first aired, Loretta Swit has consistently displayed her outstanding talent as an actress.

She says she "knew she wanted to be an actress" from the time she learned to read, and began to pursue the objective at an early age.

Loretta appeared on the New York stage in several produetions, and her big break came with her casting as Agnes Gooch in "Mame." Arriving in Hollywood in 1969, she soon compiled and impressive array of television credits. Following appearances on "Gunsmoke," she did guest roles on "Mannix," "Hawaii Five-0," "Mission: Impossible," "The Doctors" and "Cade's County."

An avid reader whose tastes, she says, are eclectic, she is a fan of Herman Wouk and is a student of history, World War II, in particular. Her hobbies include painting, needlepoint, playing tennis and romping with her two Pekinese and two Peke-a-poos.

Oil Spill Discussed

"It's primarily an adventure story," says Tom Tomizawa, speaking as producer and writer of "The Last Voyage of the Argo Merchant."

The program, to be presented as an "NBC Reports" special Tuesday, March 15, 10 to 11 p.m. on NBC-TV. recounts the disastrous final voyage of the tanker that produced the greatest oil spill, ever, in United States waters. It was on its way from Venezuela to Salem, Mass., when it went aground off Nantucket Dec. 15, and broke up in heavy seas a week later. dumping 7,500,000 gallons of oil into the Atlantic.

"Many aspects of that voyage," Tomizawa says, "might have stimulated the imagination of a Melville or a Conrad." He notes the following:

"The Argo Merchant had a record of oil leaks and of violating pollution regulations. It had a history of more than 30 accidents as recorded by Lloyd's Casulty Report in London.

"Even on its maiden voyage 23 years before, the ship had broken down.

"The capabilites of some of the crew members were in doubt. The earliest hint of trouble came during the first night (Dec. 5) when Second Officer Nisiotis argued against having two men Trinidad assigned to be helsmen — sailors who steer the ship — under him. He terms one of the men a deck boy with complete ignorance of steering; he says the other man is completely unqualified for a seaman's rating. So, the two sailors from Trinidad were then assigned to another shift. And because of that, those two men — whom he judged to be incompetant to steer the ship — would be steering the Argo Merchant on the morning the ship ran aground.

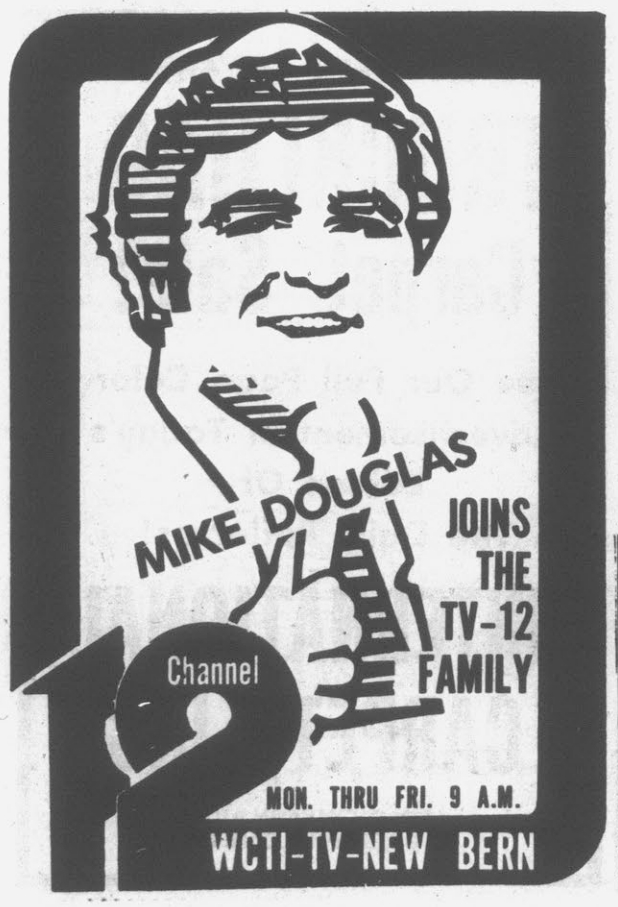

"The Republic of Liberia, which registered the Argo Merchant, is supposed to inspect its ships every year. The Argo Merchant went through the entire year in 1976 without a Liberian inspection."

Cages Are Thrilling

The nation's viewers will for the first time see Gunther Gebel-Williams putting his tigers through their paces from inside the cage when Circus Buff Gene Kelly, screen and stage star, hosts "Highlights of Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Cricus" Tuesday, March 15, 8 to 9 p.m., on NBC-TV.

Producer John Moffitt evolved the idea of placing a cameraman in the cage with Gebel-Williams, who was equally enthusiastic over the possibility and arrangsd for his protege, Henry Schoroer, an avid photographer, to attempt the difficult feat. "I wouldn't allow anyone in the ring with me unless he was an experienced animal trainer," Gebel-Williams said. "Henry has worked with me for 12 years and I'd trust him with my life; in fact, I have more than once."

Schroer quickly learned to handle the mini-cam video unit and experiemented by entering the cage with Gebel-Williams and his tigers several times to accustom the animals to his presence before he actually shot the sequence. Schroer was so elated by his success that all he asked was: "Please, may I have a photo of myself with the mini-cam?"

Location Is Shocking

Blackberries right off the bush, salmon, steaks fresh from the Columbia River, razor-back clams still salty and sandy from Coos Bay, ice-cold Dungeness crab in the shell, and apples tasting like apples used to taste....

Those were some of the wonderful things which greeted Alan Alda and other members of the cast and crew of "Isn't It Shocking?" When they arrived to film the suspense-filled murder mystery entirely on location in small towns and the countryside around Salem Oregon. "Isn't It Shocking?" will be rebroadcast as the "Tuesday Movie of the Week" March 15, at 11:30 p.m. on ABC-TV.

"Add to the food the fresh air and the wonderful friendliness of the people up here, and the good feeling of being in a small town and you have a lot of reasons for getting out of Hollywood," Alan commented.

A light rain was falling and the actor was standing on the porch of an old farmhouse half-way between the tiny communities of Mount Angel and Silverton. The rain drizzled down on the lush green lawn, bushes and trees separating the clapboard, story-and-a-half house from the two-lane macadam road a few hundred feet away. The road was empty.

"Here, try some of these," Alan said, passing around a paper cup filled with blackberries. "Lynn (the hair-stylist) just picked them behind the house. You don't get fresh-picked blackberries on every set."

"Or apples. Have you bought any in the stores?" Lynn interjected. "They taste just the way apples used to taste when I was a kid."

"The people here have been wonderful," Alan said. "They've practically given the place to us. It's not often you can go into a town, upset everyone's routine and have them turn around and give you an award for it." (The day before, the Mount Angel Chamber of Commerce had presented a plaque to Dennis Judd, ABC's production executive on the film.)

"The Columbia River is only a hundred miles away. That's why the salmon tastes so good," Alan said. "Coos Bay is just over the coastal range. That's where the razorbacks come from. And the apples....well, if you know how to climb a tree, there're some wonderful ones out back there.

"The coffee's from Hollywood though," he said laughing. "We brought our own catering company up with us. We're not living off the land completely."

Movie Is Thrilling

James Garner, Yves Montand and Eva Marie Saint star in "Grand Prix," a drama about automobile racing, to be colorcast on "The CBS Late Movie" Wednesday, March 16, at 11:30 p.m. on CBS-TV.

Racing driver Pete Aron (Garner) finds himself in stiff competition with three other leading drivers for the Grand Prix world championship on a grueling circuit ranging from Monte Carlo to Mexico City.

At night, the social life of the contestants is filled with after-race frenetic gaiety and Pete soon becomes involved with the wife (Jessica Walters) of the leading British driver (Brian Bedford).

The third driver, Jean-Pierre Sarti (Montand) offsets his unhappy marriage by falling in love with reporter Louise Frederickson (Miss Saint). Antonio Sabato portrays the fourth and youngest competitor.

Roman Makes Movie Debut

Rona, featured daily on "Good Morning America," will be making her movie debut in "Sextet," a new film starring Mae West. Rona will play herself.

"Although I've been in several television programs, I've never been in a movie before," said Rona. Former Beatle Ringo Starr is also in the cast.

Trio Are Hustlers

A bored California state driving test operator offers a ride to two female hitch-hikers and is startled when they announce they are hi-jacking his car for a cross-country trip to New Orleans, in "Rafferty and the Highway Husters," an adventure comdey to be colorcast on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" March 14, 9 to 11 p.m.

Alan Arkin stars as Gunny Rafferty, a passive 20-year veteran of the Marine Corps who meets Mackinley "Big Mac" Beachwood (Sally Kellerman) and her teenage companion, Frisbee Sykes (Mackenzie Phillips).

While in Gunny's battered car en route to Hollywood, the women produce a gun and order Gunny to get on the nearest freeway and head east. Later, while his passengers are preoccupied at a deserted gas station, Gunny flees. But after a series of unexpected events, the three are reunited and the adventure continues.

Theatrically released as "Rafferty and the Gold Dust Twins," the film was directed by Dick Richards, who sends his protagonists through all the trappings of lowlife Americana with charm, credibility and energy, giving the movie moments of hilarious humor.

'Rafferty' is also a reunion of sorts between Arkin and Kellerman, who were together in "Last of the Red Hot Lovers," and Phillips and Charlie Martin Smith — who plays a young soldier, Alan Boone — who played in "American Graffiti."

'Rafferty' was filmed in Los Angeles, Las Vegas and throughout Arizona.

UNUSUAL TRIO — Alan Arkin stars as a state employee whose car is hijacked by a kookie woman (Sally Kellerman) and her teen-age companion (Mackenzie Phillips), who order him to drive them east to Las Vegas and then New Orleans, in "Rafferty and the Highway Hustlers," a comedy adventure on the NBC Monday Night Movie, March 14 (9-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Camera Tricks You

Imagine a slam-bang professional hockey game in which a television cameraman suddenly appears on the ice to film the action with a skater towing him on a make-shift sled. It would never be allowed.

But thanks to such innovative camera techniques, viewers of "The Deadliest Season" (Wednesday, March 16, 9 to 11 p.m. on CBS-TV) will get closer to the action than any fan who watches a game on TV.

The crew filming the special had no problem bringing their cameras directly into the action because the program isn't concerned with which team won the game but only with the action that carries forward the story line. The story deals with a player goaded into playing dirty by his coach, the team's owner and the screaming fans. He attacks another player with his stick. The other player dies.

Ned Dowd was the technical advisor — skating 'stunt man' and the person in charge of bringing the cameras as close as possible to the action. A member of the St. Louis Blues organization for three years following his college hockey career, Dowd hurt his back a year ago and was forced into temporary retirement. He hopes to return as a player next year but, during his recuperation, served as advisor for both 'Deadlist Season' and the Paul Newman hockey movie, "Slapshot."

Violence In Sports Portrayed

Michael Moriarty stars as a professional hockey player whose single-minded pursuit of success brutalizes his personality and principles and leads to tragedy on the ice, in "The Deadliest Season," dramatic film special airing as the CBS Wednesday Night Movie, March 16 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

When an individual alters his behavior to conform to what's expected of him, who's responsible when that behavior boomerangs? Those who set the pattern, or the one who follows it?

The question is raised in a dramatically different milieu in "The Deadliest Season," a two hour special airing Wednesday, March 16, on CBS-TV.

Set against the action-filled backdrop of professional hockey, the TV drama co-stars Michael Moriarty as a player pressured into becoming a goon — an enforcer who provokes violence on the ice, and Kevin Conway as a lawyer who defends him when the violence becomes an alleged crime.

In addition to capturing at uniquely close range the action of what's been called the fastest game on earth, "The Deadliest Season" focuses at equally close range on the legal, ethical and moral dilemmas inherent in a bruising contact sport whose fans not only accept bloodshed on the ice, but scream for more.

"'The Deadliest Season' is not an anti-hockey show," explains co-producer Robert Buzz Berger. "Quite the opposite. It's pro-hockey. It shows that hockey can be a marvelous entertainment without extraordinary violence.

"At the same time, there is a tremendous appetite for violence these days — in movies, in TV, in sports, and the people who satisfy that appetite should take a look at what they are breeding."

Where does the contest end and crime begin? Berger mused. Whose responsibility is it to draw the line? What would happen if a fictional run-of-the-mill hockey player, demoted to the minor leagues because he refused to play dirty, became a big star when he capitulated and did what they told him he was being paid to do? What if the capitulation resulted in the killing of another player?

Where would the responsibility for his death lie? With the player who struck him? With the game itself? With the big business that hockey has become? With the fans without whom that big business couldn't exist?

What has emerged from these questions and untold hours of research in a script which, says Berger, "is the brutalization of man — by society in the largest sense, by hockey only in the narrowest."

The question seems to be — if everyone's doing it, does that make it right? The answer, as "The Deadliest Season" shows, is not an easy one.

Special Features
Science Of Birth

"The Miracle Months," a unique and dramatic informational special program dealing with the science of human conception, gestation and birth, and focusing on three mothers whose "problem pregnancies" were saved by nearly miraculous medical technology, will be presented Wednesday, March 16, 8 to 9 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Recent developments in photographic technology have made possible the presentation of pictures never seen before on television. "The Miracle Months" presents dramatic close-up film, for example, of a 40-day-old embryo, just the size of a thumbnail, living deep in its mother's womb, and follows photographically fetal development through the term of the pregnancy. Such film constitutes a startling vision of the human body's "inner space" that only a limited number of medical specialists have seen before.

The special presents not only the details of revolutionary medical technology, but the dramatic life-and-death crises of actual persons as well. The program focuses on the medical solutions of the "problem pregnancies" of three mothers — one with an abnormally positioned placenta, another whose RH factor is incompatible with her unborn baby's and a third whose three previous pregnancies had miscarried because of a weak cervix.

A veritable arsenal of 21st-century medical technology gives doctors the powerful tools they need to protect life still in the womb. In some cases, such as those presented in "The Miraole Months," these tools mean the difference between life and death.

The radically new photographic techiniques enabling doctors to see the living unborn inside the womb include cinemicrography (film of living tissues taken through a microscope), festoscopy (photography of the fetus in the womb), elecrton scanning microscopy (motion pictures taken through an electron microscope), thermography (photographic translation of body-tissue heat), fibroscopy (motion picture "voyages" inside the body, filmed by means of sinuous tubes with lighted lenses) and time-lapse photography.

Accident Endangers Men

Six construction men, engaged in a formidable assignment on a desolate island, find their mission — and their lives — in jeopardy when a series of inexplicable accidents occur in "Killdozer," on the "CBS Late Movie" Thursday, March 17, at 12:30 a.m., on CBS-TV.

Clint Walker, Carl Betz and Neville Brand star, with James Wainwright as a special guest star. James A. Watson, Jr. and Robert Urich co-stars.

Construction boss Lloyd Kelly (Walker) is attempting to direct a giant bulldozer when its operator, Mack MacCarthy tells Kelly that he saw a blue light shining from the dozer's 12-ton blade.

These final words are heard by a member of the crew, heightening the fear and tension among the men, who are at a loss to explain the strange events.

Hysteria mounts when the mechanic finds no malfunction in the earth-moving monster, but hears a keening noise in the giant blade. Then, Baltran (Watson) becomes the second victim of the rampaging mammoth machine and the survivors become convinced that the bulldozer is bent on destroying all of them.

The spectacular battle between the giant unmanned bulldozer and a power shovel was staged by stunt coordinator Carey Loftin working with director Jerry London. A veteran of 38 years in film stunt work, Loftin previously did the widley-discussed truck-car pursuit in "Duel," starring Dennis Weaver.

Loftin, who secreted a 'blind' driver in a compartment of the bulldozer to operate it by radio instruction, termed the "Killdozer" assignment a difficult one. "It is much harder to maneuver such slow, heavy equipment," noted Loftin, who is seen driving a jeep and a pickup truck in the film.

There were also several hair-raising moments during the filming of the movie. One in particular was when Watson found himself lying on his back two feet from a choping, 12-ton bulldozer blade. "I had to crawl into a length of construction pipe close at the far end and watch that machine coming until it stopped about two inches from me. This was probably my scariest bit as an actor," Watson noted. "I began to look at the dozer as if it was some kind of prehistoric animal. It was a strange experience for all of us sharing billing with that monster."

'Rhinemann Exchange' Airs

In the second installment of "NBC's Best Seller: The Rhinemann Exchange," Thursday, March 17 (10 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV), the plans for effecting the exchange of high-altitude gyroscope plans, needed by the Allies, and industrial diamonds wanted by the Nazis, are worked out by German war profiteer Rhinemann (Jose Ferrer) and U.S. Intelligence agent David Spaulding (Stephen Collins).

An eccentric American scientist, Dr. Lyons (Rene Auberjonois), is to be flown to Buenos Aires under guard. The German portion of the exchange is to take place in "The Hawk's Nest," a hacienda in a remote area outside the city. Following Spaulding's first visit to Rhinemann's "Nest," a new attempt is made on his life by men he is convinced are hired by the Gestapo.

When the mysterious Leslie Jenner Hawkewood (Lauren Hutton) makes a phone call to an unnamed source, reporting that Spaulding is a dupe in the exchange, he accuses her of being a Nazi agent and threatens her life. Disguised rescuers arrive however, and remove Leslie from danger. Their plans for Spaulding are thwarted by the appearance of an Indian girl (Victoria Racimo), whose presence at several moments during the crucial espionage project is unexplained.

'African Queen' Premieres

Mariette Hartley, as spirited Rosie Sayer, sister of a murdered English missionary, and Tyrone Jackson, as a young friend, appear in "The African Queen," adventure-drama based on the classic 1951 motion-picture version of the C.S. Forester story, Friday, March 18 (8-9 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Warren Oates, as Charlie Allnot, and Mariette Hartley, as Rosie Sayer, star in "The African Queen," and adventure-drama based on a classic 1951 motion picture version of the C.S. Forseter story, Friday, March 18, 8 to 9 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Charlie Allnot, sole owner and captain of the African Queen, a decrepit but serviceable boat which traverses the Ulanga River between Limbasi and Mbora during W.W. I, is advised by the German commanding officer of Fort Wilhelm that the African Queen has been pressed into service to deliver a cannon to the fort.

With his native assistant, Jogana, and with the aid of the spirited, strong-willed Rosie Sayer, sister of a murdered English missionary, Allnot plots to abort the delivery of the cannon, courting disaster under the watchful eye of Lt. Biedemeyer, the German officer assigned to accompany the boat.

Feature film credits for Warren Oates include performances in "The Wild Bunch," "The Thief Who Came to Dinner," "Badlands," "Dillinger," "Bring Me the Head of Alfredo Garcia," "Race Wih the Devil," "92 in the Shade" and "Drum." He also played Muff Potter in the musical film version of "Tom Sawyer."

Mariette Hartley won a seven-year contract with MGM before she was 21 and has appeared in such feature films as "Ride the High Country," "Marooned," "Skyjacked," and Alfred Hitchock's "Marine." Her television appearances include "Peyton Place," in which she portrayed Claire Morton, and more recently she has been seen in "Delvecchio" and "Barnaby Jones," "Police Woman" and "Streets of San Francisco."

"The African Queen" was filmed on location in the Florida Everglades.

Actress Plays A Strong TV Role

Even by Hollywood standards it was a bizarre sight. There on a busy Los Angeles street was an Oscar-winning actress, dressed in a nightgown, calmly walking a large turtle on a leash. It didn't take much guessing to know that it was Cloris Leachman.

Miss Leachman has gained the reputation of being somewhat eccentric, so her turtle walk between scenes was not a surprise to the makers of her latest film. What was a surprise, however, was the fact that she had taken only a small part in "The Woman Who Cried Murder," a suspense drama airing as "The ABC Friday Night Movie," March 18, 9 to 11 p.m., on ABC-TV.

"I don't consider it a cameo," she said. "It's not a large part but it offered as good a role for an actress as I've seen in quite a while. Besides, it gave me a chance to work with Ed Asner. We play a husband and wife which is totally against everything we ever did together on 'The Mary Tyler Moore Show.'"

In "The Woman Who Cried Murder," Miss Leachman is cast as one of a group of people who witness the murder of a young woman but do nothing to help and refuse to cooperate with the police.

"I hope that this film shocks people," Miss Leachman commented. "There are too many people who are blase about almost everything. Maybe it will take a strong film like this to shake them up. I know a lot of the actors took small roles just so they could be part of the statement it makes and I think there will be a lot of guilt after it airs."

Has Rackets, Will Travel

Cheer up, all you tennis ugly ducklings, and quit trying to cure those floppy-wristed forehands and backhands. You just may be another James Franciscus in the making.

Franciscus stars in the title role of "Hunter," hour-long counter-espionage series broadcast Fridays, 10 to 11 p.m. on CBS-TV.

He also stars on the tennis court, playing a driving game good enough to qualify him for competition against the pros. He is for example, one of a small group of top Hollywood players (including Charlton Heston, Chad Everett and Desi Arnaz Jr.) who have won places on a special tour of celebrities and net professionals who engage in charity benefit tournaments around the country.

Withal, Franciscus has never taken a single tennis lesson in his life. So, how has he rid himself of those hard-to-correct flaws inform neophytes develop?

His answer: "I never got rid of them. All I want the ball to do is get where I want it to go. I don't worry about how I get it there."

Franciscus admits that his style sometimes outrages purists with whom he plays, especially when he beats them. "They can't understand how I can be happy playing the way I do. But the point is that I'm happy with the results."

Searches For New Talent

George Schlatter, creator-producer of "Laugh-In," the runaway TV hit of the late 1960's and early 1970's, is currently hunting for people to write for and perform in a new edition of the rapid-fire comedy variety show.

Seeking talent for a series of six specials starting on NBC-TV next fall, Schlatter, is working both sides of the Atlantic. The first stop in a string of one-week visists was London, followed by New York, and he is now in Chicago.

"And if we don't find anyone funny enough in those places," said Schlatter, "We'll just have to go to Washington like we did before."

Plans call for each of the new "Laugh-In" specials to be hosted by a different star or stars, to feature guest stars and celebrities from all fields, plus new talent.

The special also will bring back some of the original "Laugh-In" features such as the news segment and the cocktail party.

"Laugh-In," which ran more than five years starting in January, 1968, won 27 Emmys and helped the careers of Goldie Hawn, Lily Tomlin, Henry Gibson, Arte Johnson, Ruth Buzzi, Gary Owens, Jo Anne Worley and others.

'Minute' Is Not Easy

ABC News "ABC Minute Magazine," which airs Sunday (7:58 to 7:59 p.m.), is the briefest program in prime time on ABC-TV. Therefore, it would appear that it should be the easiest presentation to produce. Don't you believe it, says 'Minute Magazine' producer Thomas H. Wolf.

In the first four weeks of preproduction the following gremlins turned up:

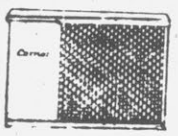

A camera lens became unseated and ruined a long zoom shot of Science Editor Jules Bergman standing in the cargo bay of the world's first space shuttle the day before it left the factory. Take the shot again, you say? Sure, but then the shuttle was no longer in the factory.

A breakdown in the sound head made Herbert Kaplow's narration unintelligible in a piece about President Jimmy Carter's orthcoming State of the Union Address. Re-do it, you say? Except that Kaplow had left right after filming to go around the world with Vice President Mondale. Well, it might be possible to do it when Kaplow got home. But by that time President Carter had decided not to give a State of the Union Address this year, preferring a series of "fireside chats" instead.

A laboratory breakdown ruined Frank Reynolds' explanation of oil spills, shot outside the Capitol, inside which Congress was wrestling with the problem. Re-shot it, you say? Sure, but the next day it was snowing.

Snow also made it impossible to shot an exterior needed for a Roger Caras piece on the danger and foolishness of using attack dogs to prevent crime, the thing surveys say is the number one concern of young people (who comprise an important part of the mini-program at its early Sunday evening time period). Re-shoot it, you say? But they next day Caras was in Illinois filming a story about a dog caugh on the ice in the Illinois River.

Monsters Never Die

Old movie monsters never die — they just mellow and turn up in supporting roles in new moviee. Although his name appears in the title of the film Godzilla doesn't really get into the swing of things for quite a while on "Godzilla vs. Megalon," airing Tuesday, March 15, 9 to 10 p.m. on NBC-TV. The English dubbed Japanese monster bash is about mankind's battle with yet another subterranean civilization that has been riled by nuclear testing.

Godzilla, the gigantic, fire-breathing reptile, is called upon to defend civilization when an underwater continent dispatches a huge insect with metal hands to destroy the world.

Angry over surface nuclear testing, the society of Seatopia seeks revenge by sending their protector, Megalon, to destroy mankind. Godzilla, a veteran of several battles with other monsters, is called to meet the challenge and several days of fierce battle follow as the two creatures thrash it out.

Unquestionably, the monsters are the stars in the film, and thanks to fine special effects they carry the whole thing off with their fanciful antics. In addition to the spectacle of seeing these giant creatures slug it out, using everything from boxing and wrestling to martial arts, the monsters react with surprising audible relish whenever one lands a particularly effective blow. Throughout the climactic bout, the battling behemoths cheer each other on and delightfully razz their opponents. Because of this, "Godzilla vs. Megalon," lightweight as it is, becomes one of the most playful and enjoyable monster movies in some time.

Foreman, Young Bout On ABC

ABC Sports will present a prime time boxing doubleheader in a live, exclusive telecast featuring powerful George Foreman, leading challenger for the world heavyweight title that once was his, against No. 3 ranked Jimmy Young in a classic battle of contrasting boxing styles, from Capital Centre, Landover, Maryland, Thursday, March 17, 8:30 to 11 p.m.

In the accompanying event, world lightweight champion Roberto Duran of Panama puts his WBA title, as well as a sensational winning streak, on the line against Josue Marquez of Puerto Rico. It's a 15-rounder, but in all of Duran's ten previous title defenses, he has knocked out his opponents.

Foreman, 29, has scored knockouts in five rounds or less over Ron Lyle, Joe Frazier, Scott LeDoux, Dino Dennis and Pedro Agusto since he was stripped of his world title by Muhammad Ali. His professional ring record is 46 and 1.

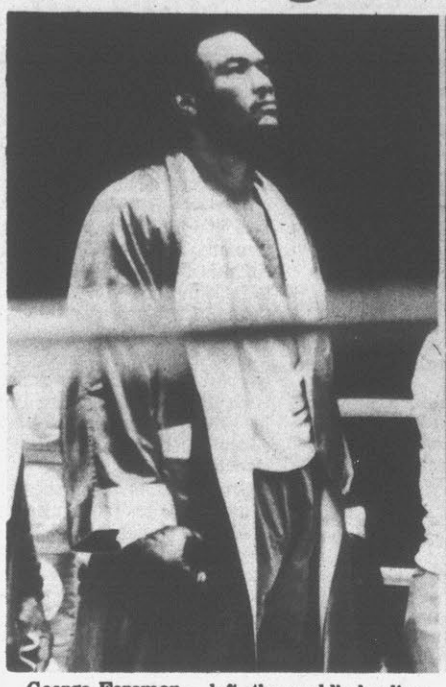

Young, like Foreman, has been defeated by Ali, but ringsiders came away from Young's controversial loss against the champion with a fuller appreciation of his boxing skills. That loss by decision in 15 rounds in April, 1976, catapulted Young into the top ranks of heavyweight contenders.

Ironically, Foreman was at ringside as expert commentator for ABC when Young reaffirmed his credentials with an impressive win over hard-hitting Ron Lyle in San Francisco last November.

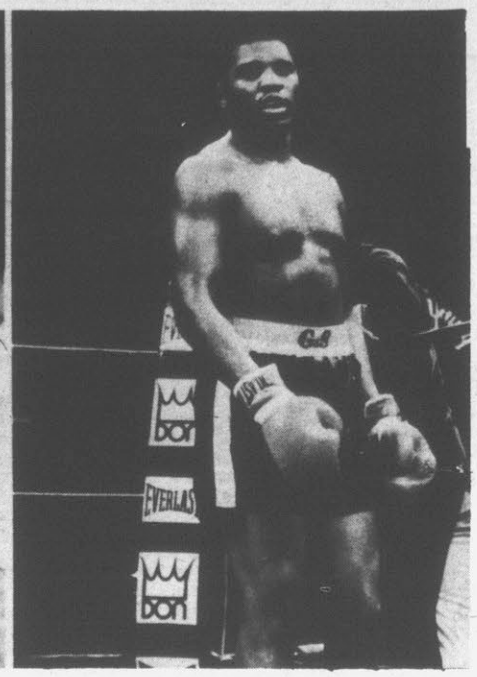

After that victory by Young, his second in less than two years over Lyle, Howard Cosell asked Foreman: "Do you think Jimmy has earned the right to meet you in the ring?" Foreman's answer was a tentative yes, "if it can be worked out."

That it has — a 12-rounder between the former champion from Marshall, Texas, the heaviest hitter in the division, and Young, an old-fashioned Philadelphia boxer who has made an art of slipping punches and counter-attacking. Young 28, has an overall record in the pros of 16-4-2.

The lightweight attraction showcases a champion, Duran who goes by the nickname of "Mano de Piedra" (Hand of Iron). At 25, Duran owns a record of 56-1 as a professional, 46 of his victories by knockouts. His one loss came by decision against Esteban DeJesus of the Dominican Republic in a non-title fight.

George Foreman, left, the world's leading challenger for the heavyweight title, believes the man across the ring, third-rated contender Jimmy Young, is his last hurdle en route to a rematch with champion Muhammad Ali.

Foreman and Young meet in a live, exclusive telecast from San Juan, Puerto Rico, on Thursday, March 17 (8:30-11 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Sawgrass Is In Good Shape

The Sawgrass golf course, venue of the Tournament Players Championship at Jacksonville, Fla., Saturday, March 19 (2 p.m. on ABC-TV), has escaped major damage from the unusually cold winter, according to Alan MacCurrach, PGA Tour Agronomist.

"Sawgrass came through the recent cold snap in good shape," said MacCurrach, following an inspection of the 7,174-yard layout. "All the playing surfaces, the fairways and greens, are fine. The ball will sit up well on the fairways and the players will be able to get spin on it and that's vital to good scoring.

"Fortunately, we over-seeded the entire area last November with a hardy ryegrass and that growth helped to protect the Bermuda turf. We over-seeded again with the same ryegrass earlier this month."

MacCurrach said that several nights of below freezing temperatures in January killed off some of the "aesthetics of the course." He explained: "We have tall growths of cat'o'-nine tails in several ponds which not only added to the natural beauty of the course but also helped frame the water harzards. But those cold nights killed these plant. Some of the sawgrass, which also grows along the water edge, was hit hard and it turned brown but did not die. We will plant pampas grass in some areas to help define the ponds for the championship."

MacCurrach is personally concerned that the cold weather will prevent a good growth of rough from coming in for the TPC.

"We have fertilized the entire area," he said, "and I am hopeful that we'll get a little break in the weather and then that seed will pop out and we'll have some rough."

MacCurrach acknowledged, however, that many of the players who have already tested the par 36-36-72 course are in unanimous agreement that Sawgrass is of the championship quality with little or no rough.

Winning Means A Lot

What does winning the Tournament Players Championship mean? Ask Al Geiberger, who won the TPC at Colonial Country Club, Fort Worth, Texas, in 1975.

(This year, the TPC will be broadcast from Sawgrass Country Club and ABC-TV will provide coverage of the action Saturday, March 19, at 2 p.m.)

"It means a great deal to me even today," answered the slender, 39-year-old California native. "And, I have a hunch it will mean a lot more to me as the tournament gets older. It means so much because I won it on a tough course and against the day's best golfers. Now that the TPC is settled at Sawgrass, the championship will increase in prestige and my victory will be in the record books forever."

Geiberger has never played Sawgrass but he has "the book" on the Jacksonville course, assembled from conversations with players who have visited the seaside layout.

"Sawgrass is different from any other type of course we play on the PGA Tour. It is long and demanding and strategically a championship course in every respect.

"I know the Atlantic Ocean will play a big role in the TPC as it does in no other tournament. That will make the TPC much like the British Open where the wind and other elements mean so much to the play of the game. Sawgrass will never play the same from one day to the next and it will change every year, too. It all adds up to a great challenge for the field. It's going to be fun."

Chosen For '500'

"The Funtastic World of Hanna-Babera" will be the theme of the 21st annual Indianapolis "500" Festival Memorial Parade, which precedes the celebrated "500-Mile Race" at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway on Memorial Day weekend.

William Hanna and Joseph Barbera will be grand marshals of the Indianapolis "500" Festival Memorial Parade, which will feature 25 floats, consisting of themes selected from the many Hanna-Barbera cartoon television series, such as "The Flintstones," "Scoody-Doo," "Yogi Bear," among others.

The event, syndicated to more than 200 television markets, including the outlets of ABC-TV, CBS-TV and NBC-TV, honors Hanna-Barbera on its 20th year of incorporation. The parade is seen each year, according to A.C. Neilsen ratings by more than 200 million viewers, with an additional half million persons watching who line the parade route.

Reynolds Stars In Movie

Burt Reynolds and Sarah Miles star in "The Man Who Loved Cat Dancing," a drama of a brooding, tortured ex-cavalry officer who is redeemed by the love of a spirited, independent woman, on "NBC Saturday Night at the Movie" March 19, 9 to 11:20 p.m, on NBC-TV. Lee J. Cobb, Jack Warden and George Hamilton also star.

Ex-cavalry officer Jay Grobart (Reynolds) is released from prison after serving time for slaying the man who attacked and killed his Indian wife, Cat Dancing.

Grobart is in the process of staging a train robbery in the desert for funds he thinks he needs to get his children back, when Catherine Crocker (Miles), who is running away from her weak-willed husband (Hamilton), runs smack into the middle of the crime.

Circumstances force him to take her prisoner, and as they flee from their respective pursuers, her hatred of him and his disdain for her gradually turn to respect, and then to love.

Final Segment Of Mary's Show Presented

In the final episode filmed in the popular multi-award-winning series "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," to be broadcast Saturday, March 19, 8 to 8:30 p.m., on CBS-TV, WJM-TV is sold, and the new owner, anxious to bring the fourth-rated news broadcast to a number-one position, begins by reevaluating the news operations.

On learning of the new emphasis on news, the news team fears Ted will be the first casualty. Much to their dismay, Ted is the only one the new owner approves of, and Mary, Lou, Murray and Sue Ann are fired.

Executive producers James L. Brooks and Allen Burns and Producers Ed Weinberger and Stan Daniels wrote the script with the show's executive story consultant Bob Ellison and creative story consultant Davis Lloyd.

Crushed to see years of dedicated hard work end in unemployment, Mary faces a difficult task of keeping self control. Hoping to ease the shock, Lou Grant attempts to cheer up the disheartened ex-producer by sending for her best friends, Phyllis Lindstrom (Cloris Leachman) and Rhoda Gerard (Valerie Harper).

As Mary Tyler Moore completed taping this final segment, flowers and telegrams from fans and coworkers overflowed her dressing room — as did the tears. "This is one of the most emotional experiences I've ever gone through in my life," sighed Mary. "It's also very touching to realize that I've been a part of something of the social importance."

A few days later however, Mary was far from being a lady of leisure — busy with singing and dancing lessons, in preparation of two variety specials — plus starring in a dramatic presentation, "First You Cry." include Betty White as an actress in a police woman series — joined by Georgia Engel — and Ed Anser starring as a Los Angeles newsman.

Turn Of The Casting-Tables

In the new daytime serial, "Lovers and Friends," Richard Backus plays Jason Saxton, a young man who is seriously disapproved of by his family's wealthy neighbor, Edith Cushing, played by veteran actress Nancy Marchand. In a turn of the casting tables, Nancy plays Richard's mother in the PBS dramatization of the Ernest Hemingway story, "Soldier's Home," to be televised later this year.

Brown Joins Drama

Miss Brown is a veteran daytime television performer who has had continuing roles on "The Young and The Restless"' "Return to Peyton Place," "The Young Marrieds," "Brighter Day," "Bright Promise" and "From These Roots." Her other television credits include guest appearances on "Barney Miller"' "Marcus Welby, M.D." and "The Rookies," "Kojak," "Studio One" and several presentations of "ABC Wide World of Entertainment."

The accomplished actress attended the University of Southern California as a drama major, leaving after her third year to tour Europe. After returning to the United States, she remained in New York to complete her theatre training at the American Theatre Wing. She made her dramatic acting debut in the summer stock production of "Dark of the Moon" in Litchfield, Conn., and went on to make her Broadway debut in "Cut of the Axe." She later toured for a year with Melvyn Douglas in "Inherit the Wind." Some of her other stage credits include roles in Mr. Roberts," "The Tender Trap," Meeting by the River" and "Savages" at the Mark Taper Forum in Los Angeles.

How To Keep Your Child Thin And Healthy

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR DR. MARGARET MEAD, anthropologist

● I think interest in anthropology will increase. It is the study of every aspect of humankind. In the 20th century, anthropologists have devoted much time to studying isolated peoples; as the whole planet is explored and we know that we are all one species, these studies will be replaced by studies of change and the way in which our understanding of the past, our language and our biological capacities are being enhanced or diminished.

FOR SEN. WILLIAM PROXMIRE (D-Wis.)

Do you feel everyone in Government should disclose his finances in order to avoid conflict of interest and to let the public know more about his possible allegiances?—S.S., Casper, Wyo.

● Yes. I believe that all of those in responsible policy-making positions should make annual disclosures of their incomes to avoid conflicts of interest. Disclosure, plus laws against bribes and conflicts, is a vital means of keeping officials honest.

FOR JOHN WAYNE, all-time film great

What's the nicest compliment you've ever had?—M.C., Hot Springs, Ark.

● It came while we were making a short for the Merv Griffin Show at my ranch. My son Ethan, then about six, was asked by Merv to name his favorite hero. Ethan looked at me and said, "Well, Dad, I guess it's you."

FOR NANCY WALKER,
star of Mrs. Blansky's Beauties

Are you impulsive by nature?—S.W., Canton, Ohio

● Only when it comes to my husband. The minute David admires something or mentions this or that he needs, I can't wait to get it for him. He's the same with me. (We don't need reasons for doing nice things for each other.) I got back from New York once, and I found a Cadillac Seville in the driveway—from David. He remembered my saying it was the one model I liked. Attached was a note: "Just because you're you."

FOR TRISH VAN DEVERE,
actress and wife of George C. Scott

I heard you say on a talk show that you're a pessimist. Were you joking?—M.P., Nyack, N.Y.

● No. I'm the type that wakes up each morning wondering what awful things the day will bring. I'm convinced it's bad news every time the phone rings. For example, the morning after our new Broadway show (Sly Fox) opened, my agent phoned for my Social Security number. Can you believe that I thought that was another way of telling me I'd soon be on the unemployment line?

FOR ARNOLD PALMER, professional golfer

Do you think that golf is the slow game many say it is?—J. Brookley, Austin, Texas

● It shouldn't be. Golf becomes unbearably slow only when players dillydally around and are not prepared to play their shots when their turn comes. The U.S. Golf Association and the Professional Golf Association both have launched vigorous campaigns to educate golfers in ways to keep the pace of the game moving along.

FOR JAMES H. SAMMONS,
M.D., Executive V.P., American Medical Association

Do you approve of the do-it-yourself blood-pressure kits now on the market, and are they reliable?—S.P., Hamilton, Ohio

● The A.M.A. does not officially approve or disapprove medical equipment sold commercially. More important than the equipment is the training of the individual who takes the blood pressure. With proper instruction, most people can be taught to take their own blood pressure accurately and as reliably as the professional.

FOR ANN RUDD, wife of CBS newscaster Hughes Rudd

I get the impression that your husband has a grand sense of humor. Is he that way off the air?—James Lee, Atlantic, Maine

● If you can imagine Hughes talking to you without television's limitations on time, language and subject matter, then you will have an idea of our zany household. He has kept me laughing for twenty-plus years—and I have a face full of laugh wrinkles to prove it.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

Did those two fellows who wrote "Jesus Christ Superstar" retire? I haven't heard anything about them for ages.—B.S., Fort Myers, Fla.

● No. In 1974 the authors, Englishmen Tim Rice (right) and Andrew Lloyd Webber, started work on Evita, an opera based on the life of the late Eva Peron of Argentina. The records have just been released. In between, Webber did the film scores for Gumshoe, The Odessa File and Jeeves. Rice, a well-known British broadcaster, also is involved with book projects.

FOR MARGUERITE PIAZZA, opera star

Is it true you recovered from cancer?—E.A., Petersburg, Va.

● Yes, the skin kind. In 1964 I was told I had a tendency toward it. By 1968, treatment was a must. The operation —and aftermath—were very hard. So was the corrective plastic surgery I had to have. But only five months after that first operation, I was back singing.

PRO AND CON

Should School Discipline Include Physical Punishment?

PRO John Ryor, President, National Education Association

Yes. Crime has increasingly become a matter involving youths. As a result, school discipline has deteriorated in some areas to rank as a major cause of teacher discontent and as an alarming deterrent to educational accomplishment. Much of the blame can be attributed to the deterioration of the American family. In the absence of other solutions, the NEA supports legislation that will provide for disciplinary procedures that will give teachers the authority to maintain classroom management while protecting the student's rights to a fair hearing.

CON Dr. Joyce Brothers, psychologist

No. The Supreme Court recently ruled in favor of corporal punishment in the classroom. This has caused a flurry of protests from parents, children and even from some teachers. Is spanking in the classroom effective? No. All it teaches us is that if you are big enough and have enough power, you can wreak violence on others. Physical violence gives a child a feeling of failure and can breed a cycle of failure. If the punishment is physical, the child gets the idea that violence is a proper method of dealing with other people.

EVERYBODY IS GETTING INVOLVED IN THE ARTS

James H. Pickerell

Susanne Faulkner Stevens

Citizens in almost every community in the country are promoting, participating in or watching the arts. In fact, in many areas arts events now draw more people than do sports.

By Luisa Kreisberg

Throughout America the arts are exploding into community life, and everyone is getting involved. For example:

- In Grand Rapids, Mich., 200,000 people participate each year in a summer arts festival.
- In Yuma, Ariz., the citizens have saved the old railroad station from the wrecker's ball in order to convert it into a new arts center.
- In Westchester County, N.Y., some 265 arts groups have put down roots in what was once a "bedroom" community for New York City and last year reached one million people.

The arts, in fact, have outmuscled sports in popular appeal. A Louis Harris survey entitled Americans and the Arts concludes that serious participation in the arts now exceeds Americans' participation in sports. In New York State alone, attendance last year at nonprofit professional arts events exceeded 75 million. By comparison, attendance for all professional sports was 22 million. Furthermore, Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts in New York City reached audiences of about 4,650,000. Shea Stadium, in the year before, when the Yankees, Jets and Mets played there, had an attendance of 3.4 million.

The arts, moreover, are now a year-round activity. Outdoor summer festivals are popping up all over the land, with national attendance estimated to have doubled in the last 10 years. In Grand Rapids, for three days in June, virtually every art form can be found rampant in Calder Plaza, which is named for sculptor Alexander Calder, whose 55-foot-long, 43-foot-high red-painted stabile stands at the hub of a once-blighted downtown area. The festival, touted as a "super summer block party," orbits around the sculpture. Free events run the gamut from orchestral, band, jazz and folk concerts to films, theater, writers' competitions and poetry readings.

Budgeted at $30,000, it is described as "a bargain basement miracle" by Tom Heywood, director of the Arts Council of Greater Grand Rapids, which sponsors the festival. "The important thing is that it is a total community effort with hundreds of volunteers working year-round," he says.

Much of the civic spirit that permeates the festival also has found its way into the ongoing enterprise that is Grand Rapids. There is more art in public places in this city than perhaps in any city its size in the country. What other city picks up the garbage in trucks emblazoned with a design by Calder?

The Yuma Art Center tells another kind of story. When first opened in the early 1960's, the center had no permanent home, but recently it took over the former Southern Pacific Railroad depot, built in 1925, and renovated it for exhibits and classrooms.

The Center is completely volunteer-run. Its main service is to organize exhibits of Arizona artists and collections and to show them throughout the state. The demand for the portable shows has grown along with the Center's volunteer corps, which now includes a 150-member Women's League. "The Center brought art to the people rather than bringing people to art," says Mrs. Louise Tester, executive director of the Arizona State Commission on the Arts and founder of the Yuma Art Center.

On the civic level, the Center is of increasing importance to Yuma's economic future. Although the arts in the area go back to the Indians, a young person had to leave the city if he hoped to survive as a professional artist. Today there is increasing talk of staying and trying to "make it in Yuma."

The grass-roots movement in the arts is also spreading throughout the urban East. One of the most all-embracing community arts councils in the U.S. is the Council for the Arts in Westchester, serving an area with 265 cultural organizations and a population of 850,000.

Originally, the Council for the Arts was formed by a group of citizens interested in building a local variation of Lincoln Center, but the high cost of construction was a major obstacle. Led by Polly Siwek, a professional artist who had long been involved in community-action groups, and other trustees, the Council redefined its purpose. It decided that the county's wealth lay not in facilities but in the great variety of talent possessed by its people.

Exactly 10 years ago, at a mass meeting of local residents interested or involved in the arts, the Affiliates Assembly was formed. Grouped by discipline—dance, theater, music, visual arts and museums—the Assembly attached itself to the Council.

"Many of our artists were working in isolation," says Mrs. Siwek, who later would become the Council's president and executive director. "They needed all kinds of help . . . money, publicity, bookings, space, contact with schools, groups, organizations and a mix of other services."

Since then, the Council has expanded greatly. Joined by local government, a large segment of the corporate community, the New York State Council on the Arts, the National Endowment for the Arts and others, it provides a broad base of support for the arts.

In 1970 the Concerned Citizens for the Arts was formed in New York State as an outgrowth of local support for the arts in communities like Westchester. This network af citizens, representing more than 1,000 organizations in every community of the state, is an unusual grass-roots lobby. For the past six years, it has rallied support for full funding requested for the arts in the Governor's budget, helping raise public subsidies for nonprofit arts from $2 million to $34.1 million.

In a hearing before the New York State Legislature, Amyas Ames, chairman of Concerned Citizens, summed up an attitude that is increasingly shared by concerned citizens across the country: "The arts are for all people and are fundamental to the vitality of our communities."

Luisa Kreisberg, a journalist specializing in the arts, has for the past 10 years observed the explosion of arts activity in the United States.

HOW TO "FAT-PROOF" YOUR CHILD

Keeping your child thin is essential to protect his health now, and later when he is an adult.

For cold & flu relief nothing's changed:

In the fast-moving world of science, do you know anything else that couldn't be improved upon in 60 years? Bayer Aspirin, quite simply, was a miracle drug ahead of its time.

Rest, fluids, aspirin. Your doctor recommends it to relieve the aches and fever of colds and flu. So did your parents' doctor. And your grandparents' doctor. Bayer was the first brand of aspirin. And today, three generations later, it's still number 1.

Many authorities consider obesity the country's number-one public-health problem. There are no definitive figures, but the best estimates are that 25 to 45 percent of the total population is overweight. More alarming, 30 percent of all children are fat.

Most parents don't know how dangerous fat is. They cannot anticipate the heart attacks, hypertension and diabetes that may result from childhood fat. Fat children also run many more health risks than do their thin peers—more respiratory infections, including pneumonias, more orthopedic problems, more accidents and severe burns because excess weight makes them clumsy.

Research on fat cells is still in progress, but the evidence grows that as children become fat, they manufacture more and more fat cells. Unfortunately, once a fat cell has been manufactured, it never goes away. The greater the number of fat cells in the body, the more difficult to reduce weight. Physicians refer to this as "Early Onset Obesity," and it is harder to control than fat acquired as an adult.

What I call "fat-proofing" is the only answer, and the first year of life is not too early to begin. The job belongs to the parents in conjunction with the pediatrician or family practitioner. Here are some general, safe steps to take at any age.

1. Cut down on television. The child is bombarded with commercials for foods designed for between-meal eating.

2. Take advantage of a child's natural activity. Encourage lots of outdoor physical activity and have him help with chores. This will use up energy.

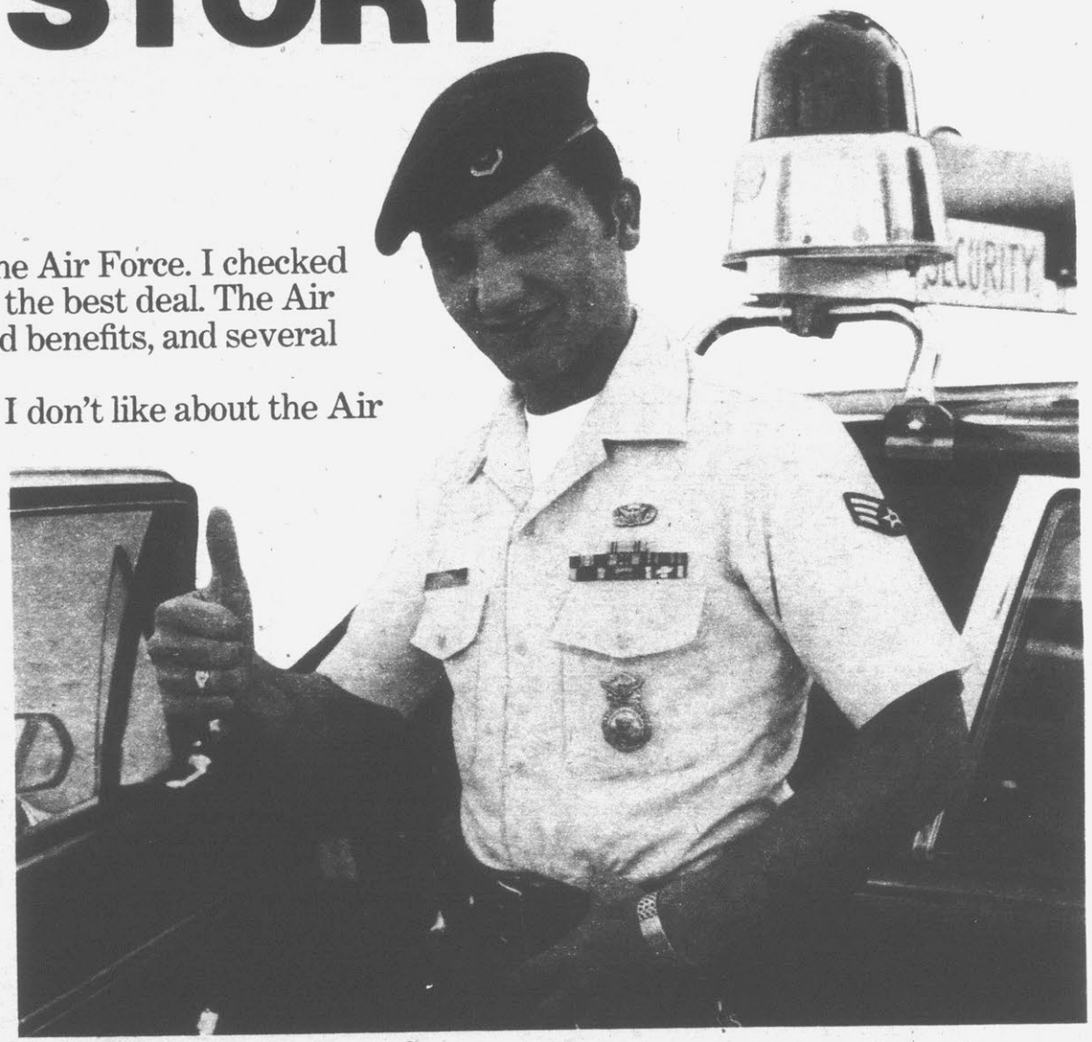

3. Learn to say "no" when it comes to fattening snacks. Keep on hand lots of fruits, vegetables and cheese.

4. Make each family meal a pleasant occasion. At about age two, children begin naturally to require less food. This often causes stress. Let your child eat when hunger strikes, and just see to it that three nutritionally balanced meals are available at regular times. Don't force your child to eat when he's not hungry or punish him if he doesn't eat everything on his plate.

5. Establish early-on in your household a diet that's low in saturated fats and cholesterol. For any child, skinny or fat, I recommend no more than four eggs a week. Concentrate on veal, poultry and fish for proteins. I do not approve of excessive amounts of butter, and I tell mothers not to oversalt because of the danger of high blood pressure. Drink skim milk, and don't serve pasta or other starchy entrées as an entire meal. Avoid sugar and save on dental bills.

Is it too late if your preschooler is already overweight? No! Start today, but don't expect a great deal of weight to be lost immediately. The aim is to slow down to a point of no gain until natural growth catches up. Do not put your child on a crash diet. It can interfere with normal growth.

ANOTHER AIR FORCE SUCCESS STORY

"My brothers suggested I join the Air Force. I checked around and found it really offered me the best deal. The Air Force has great technical schools, good benefits, and several educational opportunities.

"There's really not many things I don't like about the Air Force. I've been promoted three times during the last five years, I make a decent salary, and I like my job as a Security Policeman.

"Funny thing. I got to shake hands with two presidents while I was at Andrews Air Force Base. That went with my job there. I was assigned to a special unit responsible for the security of visiting dignitaries and heads of state.

"I guess the biggest plus of all has been the Air Force's schools. I've been to four during the last 14 months. All were connected with my job. I learned a lot. And the Community College of the Air Force is recording my training."

AIR FORCE—A GREAT WAY OF LIFE

Observations™

Exaggerated notions. That's what most Americans have about corporate profits, especially the oil industry's. In 1975, folks woefully overestimated the oil companies' after-tax profit per dollar of sales at an incredible 61 cents. Now, an Opinion Research Corporation survey shows the public "guesstimating," somewhat less fancifully, that oil companies make 43 cents. Mobil's actual profit last year was less than four cents.

We're not alone. Other industries are also seen as being far more profitable than they really are. Most people, according to the poll, think the average auto company makes 37 cents on the dollar, while the Federal Trade Commission put the 1976 figure at 5.1 cents. For the "average manufacturer," the "guesstimate" was 29 cents, while the average profit was actually 5.4 cents. Which means that most people think industry makes more than five times actual earnings. And this economic misconception is widely held by all kinds of people—men, women, whites, and blacks, from every region of America.

"MY PROFIT MARGIN IS 20% BETTER THAN THE CORPORATE AVERAGE"

What's a fair profit? Even though most Americans think industry earns far more than it really does, poll respondents believe that a quarter on a dollar would be fair—or about five times the nickel the average manufacturer really makes. Clearly, the public's heart is bigger than economic reality. Few companies of any kind come close to that quarter, yet half the public still believes that businesses in general—and oil companies in particular—make excessive profits.

These misconceptions, so wide of the mark, concern us because they are too readily echoed or exploited by a few journalists and politicians (whose job it is to know better). They're busy promoting taxation and government regulation to further reduce business' profit-making ability. What really disturbs us is that the public is often swayed by their arguments, even though that same public believes a fair profit to be five times as much as industry actually makes. Overlooked is the fact that adequate profits are essential to stimulating the investment needed to create new jobs.

We're puzzled about all this, since we know how strenuously business has battled economic ignorance in recent years. And we wonder what it takes to undo years of myths about "obscene" or "exorbitant" profits. Can you help us? We'd be glad to run provocative, informative items on economic matters. Write to us at the address below with doubts, queries, quibbles, and, most of all, with your constructive suggestions. We'll try to address ourselves to what interests our readers—and can further economic understanding. All of us can profit.

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

Can you discover whether a person has a dominant personality from the way he pushes an elevator button?

HOW TO JUDGE PEOPLE

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. The best judges of human nature have certain personality characteristics in common.
2. You can judge a lot about a person's character by his behavior while he's waiting for an elevator.
3. Most people have a pretty good idea what their personalities are like, but it's a lot harder for them to reach outside themselves to make accurate judgments of others.
4. Your willingness to reveal personal things about yourself to another plays a big part in the way people judge you.
5. When you enter someone's office and are asked to "pull up a chair," where you position the chair is revealing about your personality.
6. Your ability to judge another person's character accurately depends largely on his feelings toward you and your attitude toward him.

ANSWERS

1. True. In a study conducted at Villanova University 72 undergraduates were asked to participate in an experiment in which they gave their first impressions of persons to whom they had just been introduced. They were designated as good or poor judges of character depending on how well their judgments compared with those obtained through a battery of personality tests. Results indicated that good judges are relatively free from complaints, worries and self-doubts.
2. True. A team of psychologists at Tulane University made a study "analyzing personality determinants of elevator button-pressing following a press by another person." Tests showed that people who were given to pressing an elevator button even though someone else had already done so tended to possess dominant personalities. A dominant person was described as one who supervises and directs the actions of others, tells others how to do their jobs and makes group decisions. Those who were not inclined toward redundant elevator button-pressing tended to have more submissive personalities—people who conform to custom, avoid the unconventional and let others make the decisions.
3. False. Studies at the University of Maryland show that most people have no idea what they're really like and have the greatest difficulty in discriminating between true and false statements concerning their own character and personality.
4. True. Psychological studies at Old Dominion University show that the degree to which you reveal yourself to another has a direct bearing on how well adjusted people judge you to be. However, men were rated as being better adjusted when they were not given to revealing a great deal about their personal thoughts and feelings, while the reverse was found true with women, who were seen as better adjusted when they did disclose personal problems and experiences with others.
5. True. Behavior specialists from De Paul University and Illinois Institute of Technology conducted this novel experiment with undergraduates: each subject entering a room "was greeted by an interviewer seated at the end of the room, who asked him to pull up a chair. A measurement was then taken of the distance at which the subject positioned his chair from the interviewer." All then were given a personality test. Findings: people who scored high on "Impulsivity" (those who tend to act on the spur of the moment and who readily give vent to feelings and wishes) and on "Exhibition" (those who enjoy being the center of attention, are expressive and demonstrative) tended to position themselves close to the interviewer. Subjects who sat at greater distances tended to be introverted, thoughtful, conscientious to the point of being perfectionists and socially cautious.
6. True. University of Denver studies have demonstrated that your chance of making an accurate judgment of another person's character are increased significantly if you can succeed in putting him at ease and can make him feel comfortable and relaxed in your presence. If your demeanor makes him feel relatively free from any threat to his ego, the investigation showed, your ability to perceive him accurately is materially enhanced.

Stop! Don't ignore those odd-shaped containers in your refrigerator. Instead, use these great recipes to change forgotten leftovers into appetizing dishes.

EASY SOUFFLES

Simplify soufflé-making by starting out with a can of condensed cream soup for the base. For example, cream of chicken, Cheddar cheese, cream of celery, cream of onion, cream of mushroom and even cream of asparagus are excellent.

For a 6-serving soufflé, use one undiluted can (10½ ozs. to 10¾ ozs.) of soup, 6 eggs, 1 cup shredded cheese and 1 cup finely chopped, minced or puréed vegetable, meat, fish or poultry.

EASY TURKEY SOUFFLE

2 teaspoons butter or margarine
Grated Parmesan cheese
1 can (10¾ ozs.) condensed cream of chicken soup, undiluted
1 cup (4 ozs.) shredded natural Swiss cheese
1 cup finely chopped leftover cooked turkey or chicken
2 teaspoons chopped chives or onion
6 eggs, separated
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
Swiss Cheese Sauce (recipe follows)

1. Preheat oven to 350° F. Butter a 2-qt. soufflé dish or casserole. Dust with Parmesan cheese.
2. In medium saucepan, combine soup, Swiss cheese, turkey and chives. Cook over medium heat, stirring occasionally until cheese is melted.
3. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon-colored, about 5 minutes.
4. Stir a small amount of hot soup mixture into egg yolks; return yolk mixture to saucepan and blend.
5. With clean beaters, beat egg whites and cream of tartar until stiff but not dry, just until whites no longer slip when bowl is tilted.
6. Gently fold yolk mixture into whites. Pour into prepared dish.
7. Bake 40 to 45 minutes or until puffy, lightly browned, and soufflé shakes only slightly when oven rack is gently moved back and forth.
8. Serve immediately with Swiss cheese sauce. Makes 6 servings

HAVE IT YOUR WAY OMELETS

Omelets can hold almost any leftover food. For each serving, use 2 eggs, 2 tablespoons water and choose a filling of one, two or even three compatible foods from the chart (right). Season the omelet and filling with your favorite herbs and spices and get going.

HAVE IT YOUR WAY OMELET
(Mushroom-Green Bean)

3 tablespoons butter or margarine
½ cup sliced fresh or leftover cooked mushrooms
¼ cup drained cooked green beans
2 eggs
2 tablespoons water
½ teaspoon instant minced onion
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon cayenne pepper or hot pepper sauce
2 tablespoons shredded sharp Cheddar cheese

1. In 8-inch omelet pan or skillet cook mushrooms in 1 tablespoon melted butter until just tender and lightly browned. Add green beans; sauté 1 minute. Remove from pan and set aside.
2. With wire whisk or fork beat eggs, water, onion, salt and pepper until well blended.
3. Heat remaining butter until just hot enough to sizzle a drop of water.
4. Pour in egg mixture all at once. Mixture should set at edge at once.
5. With pancake turner, carefully draw cooked portion at edges toward center so uncooked portions flow to bottom. Tilt pan as necessary so uncooked eggs can flow.
6. Slide pan rapidly back and forth over heat to keep mixture in motion and sliding freely.
7. When eggs are set and surface is moist, increase heat to brown bottom slightly. Quickly turn reserved mushrooms and green beans onto half of omelet.
8. Using pancake turner to loosen omelet if necessary, lift omelet pan allowing omelet to fall onto plate, flipping pan so omelet rolls or folds in half at the same time. Sprinkle with cheese.

Makes 1 serving

Here's how to make the Have It Your Way Omelets: Beat 2 eggs with 2 tablespoons water, ¼ teaspoon salt and dash hot pepper sauce. Heat omelet pan with 2 tablespoons butter, until hot enough to sizzle a drop of water. Pour in egg mixture all at once. Shake pan, stirring eggs to cook until set. Add filling, any added ingredients and seasonings. Loosen omelet edge of pan, slide and fold onto plate.

ONLY $2.00 each (2 for $3.75) (3 for $5.25)

How about that — now a tree that goes through contortions! Even the little leaves do the twist! Yes, everything about Corkscrew Willows (Salix matsudana tortuosa) is different: they grow fast like the willows; they are so strong you could raise them in Alaska; they develop to 18-20' which is the ideal ornamental size; their silhouettes make them as attractive in the winter as the summer; and they can even be trained to grow in a vase! But these curious trees, which originated in the Hupeh Province of East Central China, have a charming beauty all their own. In summer the dainty filigree of the graceful small branches and the half-twisted leaves give an oriental quality that is very distinctive — certain to cause rave conversations. Tips 'N' Topics

WISE BUYING

Food sales go on all the time. In fact, most food stores have some items on sale at special prices each week. Sometimes it's an oversupply of a particular cut of meat or a produce item in season. At other times retailers need to move canned or frozen stocks to make room for new supplies.

THOSE COUPONS

If you're like many food shoppers, you take advantage of the coupon offers in magazines and other sources to take a nickel or a dime off the products you buy. But you may have noticed something different about the coupons you find in the boxes of foods you buy these days. The Federal Trade Commission has stated that coupons enclosed in consumer products may contain no expiration date, or if one is considered necessary, it must be such as to allow purchasers of the product at least six months to redeem the coupon.

This ruling is a result of homemakers' complaints that too often the coupons had expired even before the product was bought. Another requirement is that manufacturers who state on the outside of a package or in their ads that a coupon is enclosed must clearly define the limits of the coupon, state what it's for, how much it is worth and what limitations, if any, are placed on its redemption.

ON LEFTOVERS

Refrigerate leftovers promptly in clean containers and label them. Store leftovers in a special place in the refrigerator and include them in meal plans. Make a list of what leftovers are in the refrigerator, and stick it up on the refrigerator door. Many might be just the thing for a quick lunch or snack for the children after school. Quick cold salad idea: Stir a little mayonnaise and curry powder into leftover, drained cooked vegetables.

BANISH SMOKE AND SPATTER

Do you have problems with excessive spattering and smoking when broiling meats? If so, try increasing the distance between the heat and the meat surface or broiling at a lower temperature. A certain amount of spatter, however, is to be expected when broiling. If aluminum foil is used to cover the broiler rack, it should be split or punctured to allow the fat to drain away into the broiler pan so unnecessary smoking will not occur.

Grass Seed Is For The Birds! Zoysia Saves Time, Work, Money

By Mike Sandin
Agronomist

Every year I see people pour more and more money into their lawns. They dig, fertilize and lime. They rake it all in. They scatter their seed and roll and water it.

Birds love it! Seeds which aren't washed away by rain give them a feast. But some seed grows, and soon it's time to weed, water and mow, mow . . . until summer comes to burn the lawn into hay, or crabgrass and diseases infest it.

That's what happens to ordinary grass, but not to Amazoy Zoysia.

"MOWED IT 2 TIMES," WRITES WOMAN

For example, Mrs. M. R. Mitter writes me how her lawn ". . . is the envy of all who see it. When everybody's lawns around here are brown from drought ours just stays as green as ever. I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in . . . Last summer we had it mowed (2) times. Another thing, we never have to pull any weeds — it's just wonderful!"

And from Iowa came word that the state's largest Men's Garden Club picked a Zoysia lawn as the "top lawn — nearly perfect" in its area. Yet this lawn had been watered only once all summer up to August!

Cuts Your Work, Saves You Money

Your deep-rooted, established Amazoy lawn saves you time and money in many ways. It never needs replacement . . . ends re-seeding forever. Fertilizing and watering (water costs money, too) are rarely if ever needed. It ends the need for crabgrass killers permanently. It cuts pushing a noisy mower in the blistering sun by 2/3.

CHOKES OUT CRABGRASS

Thick rich, luxurious Amazoy grows into a carpet of grass that chokes out crabgrass and weeds all summer long. It will NOT winter kill. Goes off its green color after killing frost, regains fresh new beauty every Spring — a true perennial!

For Slopes, Play Areas, Bare Spots

Your Own Supply of Plug Transplants

NO SEED, NO SOD!

There's no seed that produces winter-hardy Meyer Zoysia. Sod of ordinary grass brings with it the problems of seed, like weeds, diseases, burning out, other ills.

Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass Was Perfected by U.S. Govt.; Released In Cooperation With U.S. Golf Assoc. as a superior grass.

Order guaranteed Amazoy now, get your bonus plugs FREE. Your order will be delivered at earliest correct time for planting in your area.

We ship all orders the same day grass is taken from the soil, shipping charge collect via most economical means.

DROUGHT AND WEAR RESISTANT

Amazoy lawns take cookouts and parties — children playing on it won't hurt it, or themselves! Stays green right thru scorching heat and drought!

NO NEED TO RIP OUT PRESENT GRASS PLUG AMAZOY INTO OLD LAWN, NEW GROUND OR NURSERY AREA

Just set Amazoy plugs into holes in ground like a cork in a bottle. Plant 1 foot apart, checkerboard style. Every plug 3 sq. inches.

When planted in existing lawn areas plugs will spread to drive out old, unwanted growth, including weeds. Easy planting instructions with order.

PATENTED STEP-ON PLUGGER IS ..... FREE WITH ORDERS OF 600 PLUGS OR MORE

Amazoy exclusive! No one else can offer you this patented 2-way plugger. Saves bending, time, work. Light, rugged, invaluable for transplanting. Cuts away competing growth as it digs plug holes

Every Plug Guaranteed to Grow In Your Area • In Your Soil

- AMAZOY WON'T WINTER KILL—has survived temperatures 30° below zero!
- AMAZOY WON'T HEAT KILL—when other grasses burn out, Amazoy remains green and lovely!

Plug Amazoy into an entire lawn or problem areas. Plug it into poor soil, "builder's soil," clay or even salty, sandy beach areas. I guarantee every plug to grow . . . from part shade to full sun! Any plug failing to grow in 45 days replaced FREE. Since we're hardly in business for the fun of it, you know we're 100% sure of our product.

If it isn't Amazoy, you're not getting the plugs that made Zoysia famous.

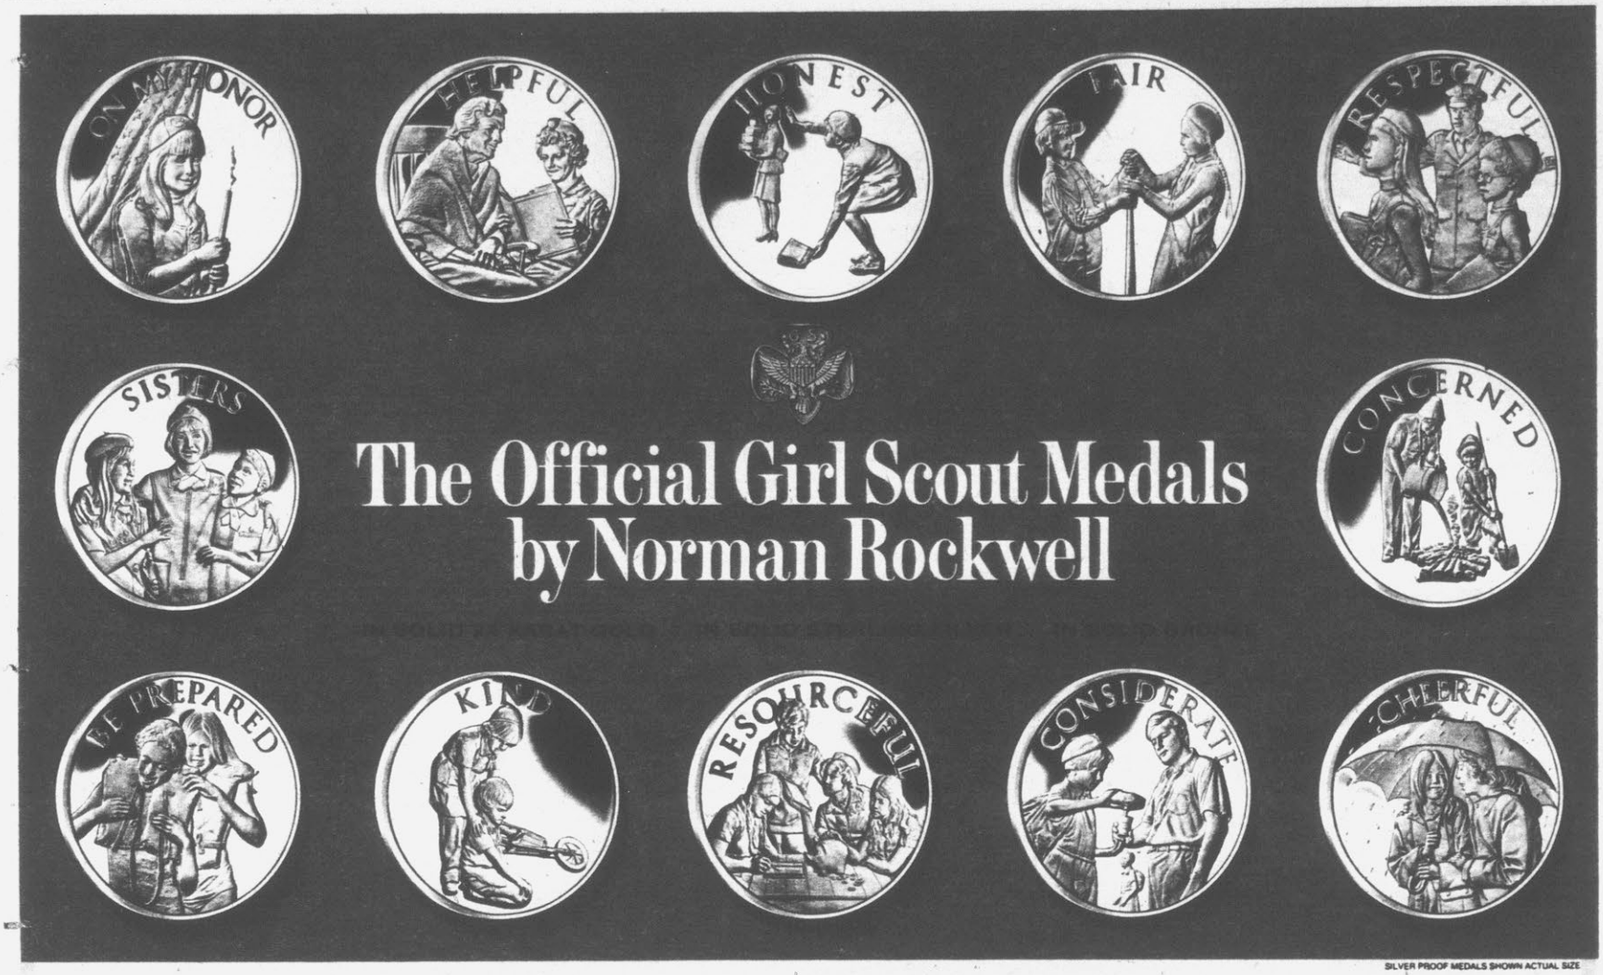

It's easy to see why those who don't grow Zoysia to sell, or have never planted it themselves, would try to put it down. But Zoysia, a tough, winter-hardy grass from Siberia, just won't be put down—not even by self-styled "experts." That's why people are switching to it border to border, coast to coast.

A collection of 12 finely crafted art medals, designed exclusively for this strictly limited edition by America's best-loved artist and lifelong friend of Girl Scouting – Norman Rockwell.

Limit: One collection per subscriber.

Girl Scouts of the United States of America is proud to announce the issuance of a magnificent collection of fine art medals designed by Norman Rockwell.

This is the first collection of medals ever officially authorized by the Girl Scouts. And it is the first major work ever created by Norman Rockwell on the theme of Girl Scouting in the United States of America.

Each medal a new and original design

In creating the designs for this unique series of twelve medals, Norman Rockwell has focused on the ideals of today's Girl Scout movement, as expressed in the Girl Scout Promise, the Law and the Motto.

"Designing this series of medals has given me very special pleasure," says Rockwell, "because it rounds out my artistic involvement with the young people of this country. I enjoy knowing that these medals—like the principles of American Girl Scouting—will endure for the generations to come."

Issued in strictly limited edition

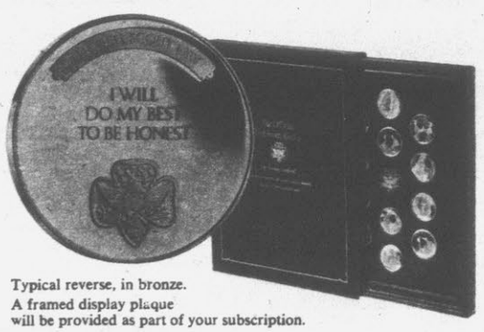

There will be just one edition of these medals. A strictly limited edition minted exclusively for advance subscribers, in the subscriber's choice of solid 24 karat gold, solid sterling silver or solid bronze. Each medal will measure 39mm (1½ inches) in diameter, and each will be struck with a flawless gem Proof finish, then individually hallmarked. When the edition is complete, the dies will be destroyed. And the original designs created by Norman Rockwell for this collection will never again be issued in any form.

A truly American heirloom collection

The Official Girl Scout Medals by Norman Rockwell is a collection you will be proud to own and display. Not just because of the value of the medals as limited edition works of art—but, even more important, because they so beautifully portray ideals that we want our own children, and their children, to know and live by.

As a subscriber, you will receive one medal each month, beginning in April 1977. Payment will be on a convenient monthly basis, and no payment is required at this time.

The collection will be minted by The Franklin Mint, and all orders will be processed and fulfilled by them. The edition closes March 25, 1977, and your subscription application must be postmarked by that date to be eligible for acceptance.

Typical reverse, in bronze.
A framed display plaque will be provided as part of your subscription.

2. Add remaining vegetable juice and chill. Combine chopped onion, cucumber, celery, green pepper and shredded lettuce. If you do not have leftover salad, use 2 or 3 cups iceberg lettuce chunks (packed), ½ cup diced pared cucumber and ¼ cup chopped onion with ¼ cup Italian or French dressing. Makes about 5 cups (5 to 6 servings)

Don't let high prices make a vegetarian out of you.

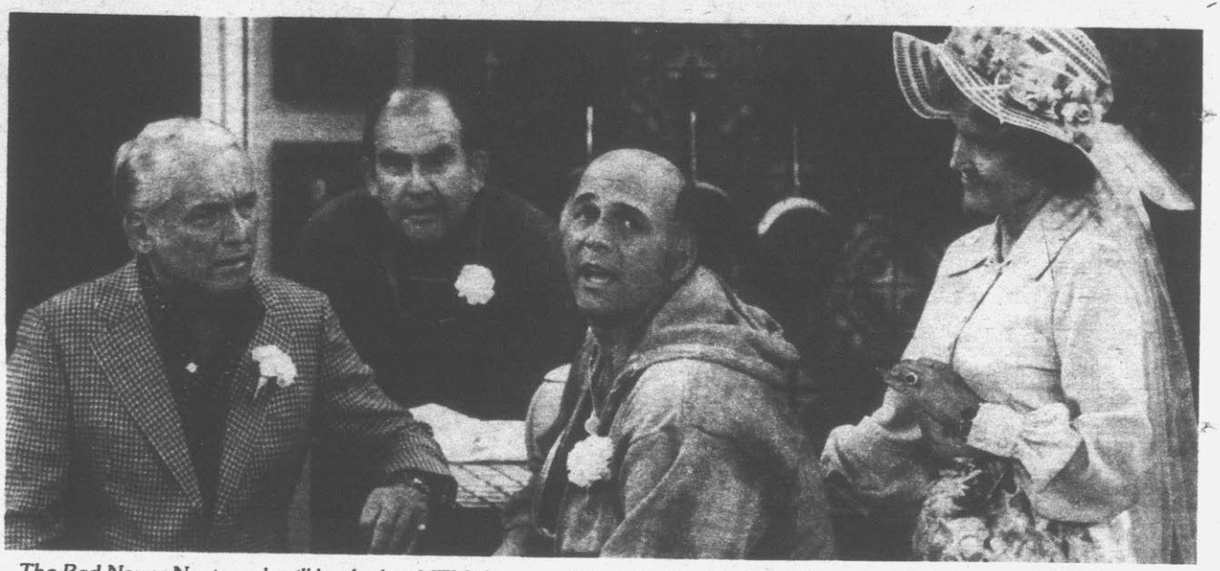

Dinty Moore Beef Stew has meat. It even has little pieces of meat all through the gravy that give it an undeniably rich, meaty taste. If you love meat, but haven't been having much of it lately, buy a case of Dinty Moore. Then you can have your share of meat, plus a good amount of fresh potatoes and carrots, at a price you can swallow.

A LAST GOOD-BYE FROM THE MARY TYLER MOORE SHOW

The Bad News: Next week will be the last MTM show. (Left to right) Ted Knight, Ed Asner, Gavin MacLeod, Betty White.

Ed Asner reminisces about what the show was like to do and tells about the plans of everyone in the cast.

By Edward Asner

They've turned out the light on our newsroom. The set has been struck. There's no longer any door for Georgette Baxter to shyly knock on or for Sue Ann Nivens to breeze through. Lou Grant's office, Mary Richards' and Murray Slaughter's desks and Ted Baxter's broadcasting room are carted off for storage, along with all the other stuff from The Mary Tyler Moore Show.

We characters have been through a lot together, some of us since the show's inception seven years ago. A couple of months ago Mary said, "I miss losing sleep over struggling with a new project. It's nice to be successful, but nice isn't the essence of living. Struggle is." When she said we should quit while we were winners and before all the zing went out of what we were doing, we all felt a little bit like the bottom had dropped out of our stomachs. It has been fun. And we've grown close. Gavin, Ted and I have become good friends off and on the set, and working together has been a pleasure.

We've talked a lot about why we — not as the characters we portrayed, but as Mary Tyler Moore, Betty White, Georgia Engel, Ted Knight, Gavin MacLeod and Edward Asner — got along so well together. The consensus boils down to a genuine respect and admiration for one another. Betty was right on the button with, "It's a community effort. No star. No carrying someone else." Mary looks clear back to the beginning when we were first cast. She points out that we were selected partly because of our temperaments and affability. Now, that was a unique idea in a business where there's usually a lot of intrigue on the set.

Of course, we weren't perfect darlings, and sometimes we indulged in the sulks, but we tried to heal our differences.

As we began psyching ourselves up for the day when the old sound stage would be deserted, Betty said, "It's murder. It's terrible to fall in love with each other." Mary says it's the toughest good-bye she ever had to say in her life: "I've never been with so many people, so close, for so much time. It's been great to be in a familylike atmosphere where I wasn't afraid to make a fool of myself trying things out on the set. I've had the support only long friendships can give."

Now I look around, and I see an extraordinary thing happening. We're sad, yes. But this show has given us a standard of excellence we'll never lose. The odds are against achieving such perfection again, but it's given all of us a yardstick for future endeavors. And like Ted said, "I feel younger and more vital now than when I started. It's made me a celebrity and widened my horizons." We've been excited and titillated. We've been given not only the impetus but the entre into just about anything we want. And it looks to me like the grass won't grow under anyone's feet.

For instance, Georgia — who was with us five years and says they were the fastest five years of her life — is going right into the pilot for another series with none other than Betty White. It will be a show-within-a-show concept, with Betty taking on a new character. Georgia's character isn't firmed up yet, but "It'll be a comedy part," she says, "because I don't think anyone would think of me in drama." I wonder if she's right.

Ted walked around with a feeling of impending doom as the last day rolled around. He's played Las Vegas, and he'll expand on that with an act I've got to see — he's on stage with a portrait of himself, and as he talks, it begins to age. The two end up talking to each other, with him doing both voices. Did you know he was a ventriloquist? Ted also has his own production company and is working on a mid-season pilot for himself. He won't play an anchor man again, but he'll use Ted Baxter characteristics he's developed.

Gavin and his wife are billed as "Gavin MacLeod and Patty," and will soon be performing before live audiences. As Gavin says, "When you end something, something begins, and that's exciting. I'm happy and successful, and I look forward to sharing that with the world. Patty and I have seven kids between us, and we want our act to be geared to families who see it together. We want to share love of each other and good times."

I'll start filming my own new series in May or June. All I know, so far, is that it will be an hour show for CBS, tentatively titled The Lou Grant Show, and will be on the air this fall. It will not be a comedy. I'll basically be the same character I created on MTM, but while that show was 70-percent comedy and 30-percent drama, we hope to reverse that ratio in my show — but we'll not forsake comedy altogether.

None of us, with the possible exception of Mary, has a vacation in sight. We all pretty much agree that this has been our vacation. As I said, Mary may be the exception, or she thinks she will be because she says she's going to "fool around for three or four weeks first." Her husband, Grant Tinker, who's head of MTM Enterprises Inc. can't get away, so they'll just take off to their beach house where they go privately on weekends, anyway. In the fall of 1978, though, she'll be back on CBS in her own series, one that's musically oriented she thinks.

Well, that about sums it up. There was a last-day party on the set, with a lot of remembering and tears mixed with laughter and looking ahead. There were some gag gifts that kept us from bawling like a bunch of babies, and Mary and Grant gave all 120 of us who were closely connected with the show silver-framed and engraved "Family" pictures. We walked out the door each hugging his to his chest like a security blanket, and we didn't look back when the last light blipped out.

A part of us will always haunt the empty darkness of our sound stage at Studio City, and we'll feel a twinge whenever we see a rerun of our show, but I think we're walking away better actors and, I hope — no, I know — better human beings for having been part of The Mary Tyler Moore Show.

Ed Asner Describes The Last Show: Lots Of Tears

Friday, February 4, was the final day of taping. Frankly, none of us knew how we'd get through it. The Wednesday before, as usual, we rehearsed. We didn't finish that day because everyone ended up in tears. Thursday, again, everyone ended up in tears. And now it was Friday.

The first part went well. We all got the giggles at various times, and the audience reacted beautifully. But near the end of the show, the tears started again. Luckily, the audience could adapt to them because of the surprise twist of the story itself. When the taping was over, I went back to my dressing room in a state of shock. Finally, I pulled myself together and went out to the party. Mary and her husband, Grant, spoke briefly. They didn't make any jokes and just told us of their love for us. Mary said, "It's easy to express love and thanks to the people who mean so much to me."

WHAT IT TAKES TO BE THE WORLD'S MOST PERFECTLY DEVELOPED MAN

Schwarzenegger in a bodybuilder's pose.

By Mary Long

He stands before a painter's canvas, one arm flexed at shoulder height. His chest (57") resembles an ordinary man's the way a Waterford punch bowl resembles a fruit jar. He has softball-sized biceps, massive arms and a waist cinched to the size of a comma.

His name is Arnold Schwarzenegger, 29, the best bodybuilder alive and possibly the most perfectly developed man in history. He's been featured in magazines and on TV talk shows. He's also star of the new hit film Pumping Iron, a documentary movie about men like himself, dedicated to building gargantuan physiques. Even if you think you'd rather be hit over the head by a barbell than watch a movie about musclemen, Pumping Iron may surprise you. It turns out to be a touching film about winning and losing, dedication and the fragility of the human spirit. And just playing himself, Arnold is funny and engaging because he is able to view his sport with a certain sense of detachment.

Arnold is certainly the best thing that's ever happened to bodybuilding. He's determined to change the somewhat sleazy and even ridiculous image the sport has earned in the past. And after just a few minutes with him, you know he's the right man for the job. Handsome, extroverted, extraordinarily confident, Arnold will no doubt make certain that bodybuilding will never again look silly.

Unlike weight lifting, which has always enjoyed a secure status in the athletic world, bodybuilding has remained a strange, exotic sport. It's easy to confuse the two, but they are completely different. A weight-lifter's goal is to be as strong as possible — he doesn't care what he looks like (in fact, a paunch helps with his hoisting). A bodybuilder's goal is really an artistic one — he is trying to form the most perfect body possible to be judged in competition. Judges look at three things: 1) overall proportion — each part must be in balance, and skinny legs or a back formed less than perfectly can do you in, 2) how well the muscles are defined and cut on the body and 3) how manfully and dramatically the body is posed in the builder's individual 90-second posing routine.

Musclemen pay a tremendous price for their unbelievable bodies. Arnold begins his day with a routine that would land most men in a hospital. He runs several miles, takes a swim in the Pacific, works out with weights for two hours and then "rides a horse or something. You know, to wake up the body and prepare for the day properly."

Normally, Arnold is easygoing. But when he is training for a competition, he could shut out an air war with his coolness and concentration. He takes in around 6,000 calories a day. (His menu once consisted of nine pounds of meat, four hundred grams of protein supplement and thirty-two glasses of water daily.) He usually begins his twice-a-day weight workouts with "benchpresses" for his chest (lying on his back pushing more than 300 pounds away from himself over 100 times). Then, there are 60 of these same presses done on an inclined bench, 60 "dumbell flyers" (two weights are held over the chest and brought slowly down and out away from the body until the elbows are below the plane of the bench and the muscles of the chest are pulled back as far as they will go) and 60 "cable flyers" (you stand and pull the handles of two weighted, pulley cables from above your head and beyond your shoulders, down across your body). Next, he works on his back.

Until two years ago, Arnold's calves were his weak point. He decided they had to be bigger, better-shaped and lower on his shins. He began lifting weights (and sometimes people) with his legs over fifteen hundred times a week. And, he says, he mentally forced his calves into shape: "The flesh is a reluctant thing, but you can force it, if you believe 100 percent in yourself, to do what you want it to do."

Arnold has wanted to be the best at something since he was 10 years old. He grew up in the village of Graz, Austria, a natural athlete. "I started swimming, and I won championships, but I knew that I couldn't be the very best. I played soccer and other team sports, but I didn't get as much satisfaction from those because I knew that no matter how good I was, I would never get the credit alone. I tried weight lifting, but I found out I was too tall. So I switched to bodybuilding. After a couple of years, I knew it — this was what I could be the best at."

Arnold retired, undefeated, from bodybuilding competition this year to concentrate on his movie career. He sincerely hopes to become known for his excellence in acting: "I will not just take roles where I show off my build or something. I would like a part where I can show some sensitivity, some sense of romance and strong character on the screen."

This leads to an irresistible question: What kind of love life does Arnold have? Are girls scared off by such a colossus?

Arnold laughs an easy laugh, showing an expanse of huge white teeth. "Some girls are attracted to my body, and some don't like it at all. Basically, I use it as a kind of conversation starter. Like, if you were to walk a cheetah down the street, you would have a natural conversation piece. But, when girls get to talking to me, they see I am not mean but gentle to them; that's all they want to know."

Does Arnold miss competitive bodybuilding? "Yes. I loved winning. During the final few minutes on stage in my last contest, it ran through my mind that I am obviously the king. Then, I thought, looking at the audience, just keep screaming now because you're going to see these poses for just a few minutes more here, so eat your hearts out."

Bodybuilding is growing by leaps and bounds in popularity. Already it is estimated to be the ninth most practiced sport in the country.

After winning local, state and area competitions (Mr. East Coast and Mr. West Coast) a bodybuilder can go after contests — Mr. America, Mr. World, Mr. Universe and Mr. Olympia.

Arnold was one of the few musclemen able to make a living at bodybuilding; mostly through endorsements for vitamins, exercise equipment and health spas, along with personal appearances and a mail-order business.

And just what does "pumping iron" mean, anyway? According to Charles Gaines, the film's director, if a bodybuilder watches his muscle after working on it, he can see the fresh, oxygen-filled blood flooding the tissue, spreading and flushing the skin, creating the condition known as a "pump." It produces a feeling, bodybuilders say, that is wonderfully refreshing and exciting — as though all the blood were new.

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

Man might take a lesson from a snowflake. No two are alike; yet how beautifully they work together on major accomplishments—like tying up traffic. —Dorothea Kent

The harried husband told his wife and children, "I just worked out a budget and came to a decision." "What's that?" asked his doubtful wife. "One of us will have to go!"

BALANCING ACT

My wife is very good at math,
Along with other talents.
Month after month she manages
To make our bank book balance.

I help, of course, do all I can.
We work together nicely.
And thus it is deposits and Withdrawals match precisely.

Our bank book balances so well
Because of this, no doubt:
Precisely what I earn, put in,
She carefully takes out.

LITTLE EMILY

"A little birdie told me."

PEOPLE AND YOU

Are You A Child In Adult Clothing?

A couple is arguing. "If it weren't for you, I'd be something today," the husband shouts. His wife shouts back, "Me? You're the one who's ruined my life!" To Dr. Phil Lorio, psychiatrist at Georgetown University's Family Center, blaming others for your bad habits or for unpleasant things that happen to you represents a key sign of immaturity. Although no one is 100-percent grown-up, he says many of us could be much happier. We need to examine our behavior for common symptoms of immaturity and then try to change ourselves instead of insisting that our happiness depends on others doing the changing. Immature people refuse to discipline themselves, he explains. Like children, they run their lives by their feelings of the moment rather than by thought. You can become more adult, Dr. Lorio suggests, by looking at the family you came from—not to blame them but to see how you got put together emotionally. Did your parents react immaturely by leaning on others' opinions? This should give you insight into yourself. Unless you combat it, immaturity can filter down over generations.

Grandmother bicycles cross-country with Mentholatum Deep Heating Rub

CHICAGO—Sore muscles weren't going to stop Mrs. Al King from completing a 300 mile bike hike. She packed Mentholatum Deep Heating Rub to ease her way. Each day after cycling an average of 60 miles, Mrs. King applied it for temporary relief from pains. Its greaseless, stainless formula warmed deep. Each morning she used it to warm away stiffness. Upon arrival here, a tired but happy Mrs. King said, "I'd like to thank those who helped me make it. The Grace of God, aspirin and Mentholatum Deep Heating Rub." Also available in an Extra Strength Lotion! Use as directed.

Mentholatum Company... We make it our business to comfort you!

Doctors know heartburn is not caused by stomach acid alone, but by the eruption of this acid into your esophagus (the tube between your mouth and stomach).

"I have taken several leading antacids and relief was slight," writes Miss Rose Donabed, Cambridge, Mass. "Then I was introduced to Gaviscon and relief was almost immediate."

This shields the exposed lining of your esophagus from further burning discomfort. Get different, unique relief from heartburn (acid indigestion) that only Gaviscon Tablets can give you.

Set Guides For A Safe Diet

Confused about just what constitutes a safe diet? The Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs says they'd like to see Americans follow these guidelines:

- Increase consumption of fruits, vegetables and grain products.
- Eat less meat and more poultry and fish.
- Substitute nonfat milk for whole milk.
- Consume less butterfat, eggs and other high-cholesterol foods.
- Eat fewer foods high in sugar and salt content.

It sounds simple, but they promise that such a diet can reduce the risk of heart disease and diabetes, lower the incidence of bowel cancer by providing more fiber and supply more vitamins and micro-nutrients at less cost.

Alternative Delivery: Home Birth In A Hospital

For many new parents, childbirth can be traumatic—the experience of being separated from each other as soon as they arrive at the hospital, the new mother possibly having her child delivered by a doctor she has never seen, and so forth. Now there is an alternative to that kind of delivery: you can have your baby in an "alternative birth center," which combines a homelike setting with the safety of a sophisticated hospital. The first one was set up at the Mount Zion Hospital and Medical Center in San Francisco, but they are springing up all over the country. The center in Mount Zion features a quilted double bed, potted plants, a bean-bag chair, shag rugs, colorful posters and soft music. Patients say that they almost forget they are in a hospital.

How To Understand The Metric System

"It takes about 10 minutes to learn the metric system," says Mark Henschel of the U.S. Metric Association, "and I think it will make everyone's life a lot simpler." You may agree or disagree, but to help you fight your way through the confusion, get a free copy of "Metric Units for Everyday Use," an informational fact sheet, by sending your name, address and request to U.S. Metric Association Inc., Sugarloaf Star Route, Boulder, Colo. 80302.

Elephant Dies Of Broken Heart

Sandra, a lovesick elephant who had refused food and water after her trainer left to get married, recently was found dead in her circus stall in Pisa, Italy. The elephant had been refusing food since her German trainer, Helmut Chome, 23, married a girl from nearby La Spezia and went back to Germany. Sandra and Chome had known each other since he was five and she six months. Sandra was the leader in an elephant show in which she played a piano and other instruments. The circus owner tried to trace Chome to get him to come back, but the effort failed.

A CB License Is Free

If you recently have received a citizens band (CB) radio, you probably found application forms for a temporary and permanent license in the carton. The license form instructs you to mail it in with $4. Don't send the money. The Federal Communications Commission (FCC) has suspended the collection of all license fees. The FCC now must justify all of its fees before charging for licenses in the future. (The FCC also is exploring proposals to refund a portion of the $55 million the agency has collected from CB licenses since 1970. However, if refunds are made, they will most likely be distributed to broadcasters—who pay thousands for a big city TV station—but not to CB operators.)

Is High School Tougher On Girls?

A recent study of Detroit students suggests that high school may be tougher on girls than on boys. Although boys reported more aggression and failures in the study conducted by the University of Michigan, girls reported more internal distress. This distress—tension, depressions and psychosomatic symptoms — indicates maladjustments that school administrators tend to ignore. The study said that the girls considered success in work to be just as important to them as success in marriage, and less than 10 percent wanted to be wives and mothers exclusively. "Yet the schools operate as if they believe 90 percent want to be career housewives," the researchers commented.

The Eyebrows Have It

Lassie has more "intelligent" eyebrows than Vice President Walter Mondale, Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan (D-NY) or Elizabeth Taylor. So says beauty expert Mark Traynor in his list of the "10 most memorable eyebrows." Lassie's brows are "the most expressive and easily the most intelligent," Mondale's the "most honest and most romantic," Moynihan's the "most mischievous, least senatorial" and Taylor's the "most photographed and enduring."

Smelling Success

Soon to be on the market: a deodorant processed right into your clothing. A trio of scientists reports it has successfully treated cotton fabrics to produce a "time-released" reaction that continuously kills odor-causing germs. According to the report, cotton fibers dipped into a combination of chemicals, including hydrogen peroxide, were treated in as many as 50 washings and remained free of bacteria.

Quick Takes

Zsa Zsa Gabor and Hollywood columnist Joyce Haber have collaborated on a list of America's "Most Eligible Bachelors." They include Richard Carpenter, 30, of The Carpenters music ensemble; Jamie Auchincloss, 29, stepbrother of Jacqueline Onassis; Robert Evans, 46, producer of Love Story and Marathon Man; and Edmund Brown, 38, Governor of California. . . . Plants really cheer up patients and speed their recovery, report officials at hospitals across the country. They add that the "horticultural therapy" program is gaining acceptance everywhere in treating physically handicapped persons, the aged, drug addicts and prison inmates. . . . The Polish-American Congress recently took Archie Bunker to court, protesting his ethnic insults to his Polish-American son-in-law. The Supreme Court ruled that the insults are protected by the First Amendment. . . . Chewing gum, that old symbol of Western decadence, has at long last gone into production in the Soviet Union. This year's production will be just two tons, but a Moscow newspaper says technicians are hard at work building more gum machines. . . . The poorest and most haphazard eaters in America are working-women, according to nutrition professors at Syracuse University. . . . Delaware leads all other states in highest average amount of life insurance per family with $42,000, according to the American Council of Life Insurance. Families in Arkansas average the lowest amount of protection with only $18,000.

Our Story: ONE THING A BULLY CANNOT STAND IS RIDICULE, AND THE LAUGHTER OF THE CITIZENS IS LOUDER THAN THE APPLAUSE OF HIS HENCHMEN.

THE NEXT CONTESTANT IS ANNOUNCED, BUT LAZARE REMAINS ON THE STAGE AND SIGNALS HIS RUFFIANS TO CONTINUE THE NOISE.

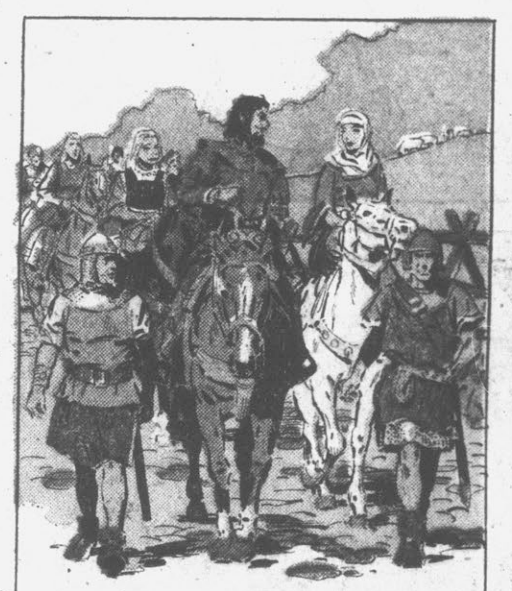

THEN, ABOVE THE NOISE, RISES A GLORIOUS VOICE, RICH AND PURE. "BERTRAM!" EXCLAIMS A LISTENER, "OUR RIGHTFUL KING OF MINSTRELS HAS RETURNED!"

AN AGED CITIZEN BECOMES ANNOYED AT THE HECKLING: "SHUT UP, YOU LOUT!" AND EMPHASIZES HIS DISPLEASURE WITH HIS STAFF. HE SETS AN EXAMPLE TO HIS FELLOW LISTENERS AND SOON THE NOISE CEASES..

SO IT IS NOT AS LLANDULF, THE HUNTER, THAT HE WINS THE LAUREL, BUT AS BERTRAM, THE MINSTREL. ONCE AGAIN HE IS 'KING OF MINSTRELS.' LAZARE'S POISONED CUP HAD FAILED TO DESTROY HIS VOICE.

FOLLOWING THE CELEBRATIONS, THE PARTY RETURNS TO THE CHATEAU FOR A WELCOME REST AFTER ALL THE EXCITEMENT.

SIR RAYMOND IS BUSY WITH THE BUSINESS OF THE FIEF. BERTRAM SPENDS HOURS TRYING TO DISCOVER THE EXACT COLOR OF ELEANOR'S EYES AND GASTON AND JOAN ARE WITH THE ANIMALS AS USUAL.

by MILTON CANIFF

HOSPITAL

LITTLE MUSCLE, I THINK I KNOW WHAT SHOULD BE DONE WITH PEOPLE WHO ARE CONVICTED OF VIOLENT, UNPROVOKED CRIMES

IN MY OPINION, THE SENTENCE SHOULD BE THE EXACT VIOLENT ACT EXPERIENCED BY THE VICTIM...

IS IT SINFUL FOR ME TO SAY SUCH THINGS?

WELL—I WROTE DOWN WHAT I THOUGHT OF THE GUILTY PERSON... BUT THE PAPER WAS BURNED!

WHY DID YOU SET FIRE TO IT?

I DIDN'T! IT SELF-DESTRUCTED FROM THE WORDS I USED!

MEANWHILE... SO OFTEN THE OLD SONG RUNS THROUGH STEVE CANYON'S HEAD: "NIGHTS ARE LONG SINCE YOU WENT AWAY..."

SO THEY ARE MAKING A SEQUEL TO "GONE WITH THE WIND?"..

WHERE'S MY FRUIT JUICE?

MY THROAT IS KILLING ME!

WHERE'S DR. ZOOK?

I CAN'T REACH MY JUICE

NOBODY CARES IF I LIVE OR DIE!

OH, THERE'S THE DOCTOR NOW

MY HEART IS POUNDING AND MY WHOLE LIFE IS FLASHING BEFORE MY EYES!
