For 12 Killed In Vietnam

The Last Journey Home

HEADING HOME — Members of the crew of a C141 Skylifter bear a casket containing the remains of one of 12 U.S. pilots killed in the Indochina War to the plane for the final trip home. The ceremony took place at Hanoi's Gia Lam Airport. The remains of the missing Americans were turned over to members of a special commission appointed by President Carter. (AP Wirephoto)

CLARK AIR BASE, The Philippines (UPI) — The remains of 12 Americans killed in the Vietnam war left Asia Saturday in flag-draped, black metal boxes on the last leg of the long journey home.

The Air Force jet that delivered the five members of the White House commission tracing Americans missing in the Indochina war to Vientiane, Laos Saturday then flew to Clark Air Base for refuelling before leaving for Honolulu.

The spokesman said the C141 Starlifter would fly to Hickam Air Force Base in Honolulu. There, the remains of the 12, boxed in small containers with last names attached, will undergo analysis at Honolulu's Central Identification Laboratory by morticians.

Spokesmen in Bangkok said that when positive identification of the 12 has been made, the remains then will be sent to the mainland United States for "further disposition," presumably burial.

The presidential commission was given the remains of the U.S. airmen at a brief but solemn ceremony at war-damaged Hanoi airport before flying to Vientiane, the second stop on its mission.

The American delegation accepted the remains from the Vietnamese, who placed the black boxes near the plane and stepped away.

The commission members — Woodcock, Rep. G.V. "Sonny" Montgomery, D-Miss., former U.N. Ambassador Charles Yost, former Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield and Marian Edelman, director of the Children's Defense Fund — placed folded American flags atop each box and stood at attention as uniformed crewmen carried the coffins aboard.

After delivering the delegation to Laos, the plane flew to Bangkok, Thailand and on to Clark Air Base for a two-hour refuelling stop before taking off for Hawaii.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said the Pentagon had canceled planeside honors at Clark Air Base. He said original plans called for the removal of the bodies from the jet on arrival at the base for an overnight stay.

The spokesman said the decision to cancel the ceremonies was made while the plane was en route to the Philippines from Bangkok. No reason was given for calling off the ceremonies or for the stop in Bangkok.

Go Slowly

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd said Saturday the United States should move forward slowly in normalizing relations with Vietnam.

"I don't feel any compulsion to normalize relations in the immediate future," the majority leader told reporters in reply to questions about a White House Commission's mission to Southeast Asia.

He said the United States should "proceed slowly" in re-establishing relations with unified Vietnam.

Thinks Appropriation Possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Rep. Ike Andrews, D-N.C., says he has every reason to believe Congress will appropriate $15 million for the Falls of the Neuse lake and dam project near Raleigh.

Andrews said Friday the Falls project, which has been in the works for years, is one of six water resource projects in North Carolina which have been exempted from further evaluation by President Carter's administration.

In addition to Falls lake the projects include Shallowbag Bay at Manteo, the Randleman dam and lake, Masonboro Inlet, Morehead City harbor and the Atlantic Intracoastal waterway—replacement of highway bridges.

Post-Conviction Hearing Held

RALEIGH (AP) — A postconviction hearing into the controversial Wilmington 10 case is scheduled the week of May 9 in Burgaw before Superior Court Judge George M. Fountain.

Fountain will determine whether the defendants in the case should be granted a new trial because of recent recantations by prosecution witnesses.

9,000 Sent Letters

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Some 9,000 North Carolina Republicans have been sent letters from Sen. Jesse Helms, RN.C., asking for help in eradicating David Flaherty's $50,000 campaign debt.

Flaherty, the GOP's gubernatorial candidate, was swamped in the 1976 election by Gov. Jim Hunt.

Each letter asks the recipient to donate $10 for the beleaguered Flaherty, who has been trying since November to keep his family afloat financially.

Draft Of Women Considered

ATLANTA (AP) — The U.S. Army Chief of Staff says that if the United States is forced to reinstitute a military draft or some other form of "involuntary" public service, "very serious consideration" should be given to making women as well as men subject to call.

March Winds

An average wind velocity of between 20 and 30 miles per hour was recorded at the Greenville Utilities Commission weather station, with gusts of up to 48 m.p.h.

Temperatures Friday were moderate, with a high of 76 degrees and a low of 48. The Tar River stood at 12.8 feet on the National Weather Service gauge. Rainfall was recorded at 0.03 inches.

Boys Keep Skirts

LAURINBURG, N.C. (AP) — Male members of the Scotland High School marching band got "absolutely violent" when they heard the Scotland County board of education might vote to take away their skirts, says band director Bert Owen.

Actually, the skirts are kilts — traditional Scottish attire for men — and seem to have grown on the band members, Owen said.

"A lot of the boys who come to try out for the band their first year here tell me, 'Man, there ain't no way I'm gonna wear no skirt,'" he said. "But they'll be here when band practice starts and, after they wear the uniform, they begin to understand the mystique of the kilt."

But, when new uniforms were to be ordered, even Owen said he was surprised when 70 per cent of the 230 band members voted to keep the kilts instead of a more convential outfit.

The school board couldn't argue with that large a majority, so it shelled out $26,500 for new kilts and other Scottish accessories.

How do the boys react to hecklers?

"All the guys have about 200 instant comebacks to anybody who makes fun of the kilts, but if somebody asks them what they're wearing under the kilt, they really get a surprise," Owen said. "I've seen them line up about a dozen guys and then everybody lifts their kilts together to flash their gym shorts."

Swallows Return

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO, Calif. (UPI) — As they always do in legend and song, the swallows returned to Capistrano Saturday to a greeting of bells and the cheers of spectators.

Paul Arbiso, who has been ringing the San Juan Capistrano Mission's bells for the swallows' annual appearance for 30 years, began the chimes at precisely 8:42.30 a.m. PST, signaling the end of the birds' 6,000-mile journey from their Argentina winter home.

And as they also do every year, thousands of tourists jammed this coastal community to watch the swallows wing in to their summer home in the 200-year-old adobe building that once, according to legend, gave them [illegible].

Saturday's arriving swallows were preceded Friday by 60 or 70 "scouts" who always precede the main flock.

Education Board Opposes Proposal

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The state Board of Education decided Saturday to oppose a proposal to reorganize the administration of the state's schools, saying it could destroy a system of checks and balances.

The move was in response to a legislative study commission report recommending a major revamping of the superstructure over the state's public schools and community colleges.

Among the proposals to be considered next month by the legislature, are the removal of the community college system from the board's jurisdiction and the appointment rather than statewide election of the state superintendent of public instruction.

Board members, while acknowledging the current system is tangled, argued it has worked well.

"We do not believe that the monolithic plan of organization proposed by the commission contains adequate checks and balances in either the administration of funds or the supervision of programs, although it may appear to be a more efficient arrangement," said W. Dallas Herring, board chairman.

The board has been asked by lawmakers to comment on the report.

The study commission was formed by legislators to propose a rewrite of public education laws and to study the state's complex system of public school administration. The report has been dubbed the "Renfrow Report" after the commission chairman, Sen. Ed Renfrow, D-Johnston.

The board, following Herring's lead, unanimously rejected the major reorganization features of the report during a special six-hour meeting.

Renfrow said he was not suprised at the action, and did not think it would hurt the report's chances of enactment by the legislature.

The reorganization effort was prompted, in part, by the battles in recent years over policies between Herring and state Superintendent of Public Instruction A. Craig Phillips.

Herring and the board are appointed by the governor under the current system. Phillips is elected in statewide balloting.

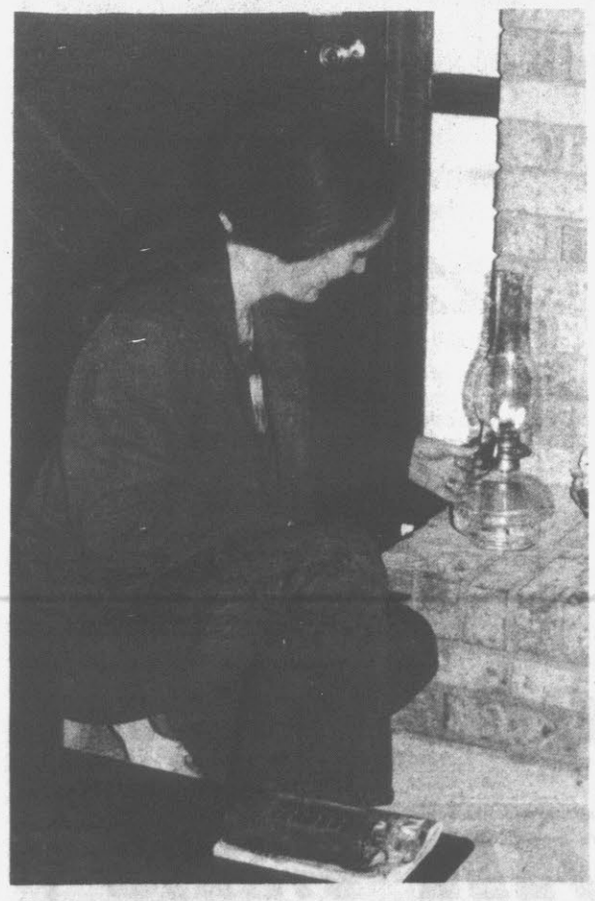

The commission proposes a constitutional amendment to allow the superintendent to be appointed by the board. The office of school comptroller, which now controls spending for the board, would be brought under Phillips' control.

State Treasurer Harlan Boyles criticized the proposl to shift the comptroller's office, saying the current system had "fiscal accountability" and should not be changed without an "overriding reason."

To compensate for the proposed change in the superintendent's office, the report recommended an expansion of the board and a reduction in the number of appointments the governor could make. Board members argued that proposal would politicize the board.

Herring argued that the community colleges should remain under the board's control because it was "extremely urgent that the same board govern both systems" to prevent waste.

Family Cuts Down On Electricity Usage, But Rising Fuel Factor Negates Savings

LIGHTS LANTERN — Linda Pierce lights a kerosene lantern in the den of her home. The Pierces are using the lanterns to light their Ayden home to help fight the high cost of utilities. (Reflector photo by Susan Quinn)

EDITOR'S NOTE : This is the first of a series of articles about utility rates, fossil fuel rates, and retail consumer's problems in facing increasing utility rates. The first article deals with the problem of the consumer and how the fuel factor and electric rates are determined.

By SUSAN QUINN
Reflector Staff Writer

When Linda and Mike Pierce of Ayden received an electric bill in excess of $250 for the month of January for their four member family they decided to make an extra effort to cut down on their energy consumption.

"We began by buying kerosene lamps, and placing night lights, in the kitchen, hallway, and bathrooms. This eliminated the need for using over-head lights each time we went down the hall, or just to use the bathroom. We quit using electric lights in the living area altogether, and used the kerosene lamps. There are no electric lights used during the daylight hours," Mrs. Pierce said.

"To cut down even more, I quit using my dishwasher altogether, and cut down doing the laundry from every day to twice a week. We then decided that there was no need in keeping the hot water heater going constantly, and after lowering the temperature on it, from 160 degrees to 130 degrees, we began cutting it off except for two to two and a half hours each day which allowed ample water for bathing, evening dishes, and left enough hot water in the morning for Mike to shave and for the morning dishes," she continued.

"We also began cutting the heating system completely off from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. and on warmer days, the heating system remained off until midnight. The fireplace is used during the day and early evening. I do as much cooking in a crockpot or electric frying pan, and try to stay away from the stove. As soon as the coffee is ready. I place it in a thermos bottle and this does away with our coffee maker having to run all day. With all these measures, we received a bill for the month of February for over $200. Our energy consumption has been cut by 77 per cent but our saving in dollars was only 38 per cent," she said.

The fuel factor in Ayden increased from $6.32 in January to $15.87 per 1,000 kwh in February and while the Pierce family used less kwh they had to pay more per 1,000 kwh for a fuel factor.

The Pierce family is dissatisfied with the increase in the fuel factor and disappointed that their efforts to conserve only saved them a little. They are questioning, like many Eastern North Carolina citizens, why the fuel factor rate is so much and why do the utility authorities allow the rate to be so high. Others are questioning what a fuel factor is and why it is so important, that it is able to fluctuate each month and drastically change the utility bills.

The Pierces are retail customers of Ayden. Ayden, like the town of Winterville is a wholesale customer of Greenville Utilities which is a wholesale customer of Virginia Electric Power Company (VEPCO). They are protesting the fuel factor regulation sytem.

"We were told that there is nothing that we can do about this. We are now in the process of trying to find out why VEPCO is higher than any other supplier in the area, and what we can do about seeing that some kind of limitations or control is put on this fuel factor. As it stands now, there is no limit as to how high these charges can go and we are at the mercy of the supplier," Mrs. Pierce said.

The fuel factor charge is an amount that electric companies, such as VEPCO, consider as the cost of fuel during the second preceding month. The amount is presented by the power companies like VEPCO, to Federal Power Commission and the N.C Utilities Commission which are authorized to approve the rate. The fuel factor also includes an adjusted figure for the amount of additional fuel used within a month in addition to the amount that the electric power company had projected. These projections are made quarterly by the power companies.

When the fuel factor charge is approved by the N.C. Utilities Commission, VEPCO charges utility departments of towns the approved wholesale rate per 1,000 kwh.

For example, during the month of February, the Greenville Utilities Department, a wholesale customer of VEPCO, paid $7.67 per 1,000 kwh plus $4.93 per 1,000 kwh as an adjustment on December's fuel bill. Greenville paid VEPCO a total of $12.60 per 1,000 kwh for a fuel factor during February. At the same time Greenville Utilities billed its retail customers only $4.78 per 1,000 kwh. Greenville Utilities billed its wholesale customers, Winterville and Ayden, a fuel factor of $9.33 per 1,000 kwh and an adjusted fuel factor charge of $5.23 per 1,000 kwh. Ayden and Winterville charged their retail customers a fuel factor charge of $15.87 per 1,000 kwh.

In Greenville, the customers' bills are higher but the utilities department has been paying much more for the fuel charge than it has charged its customers. In Winterville and Ayden during February the customers paid the same amount for the fuel charge that the towns paid for it.

Court Injunction To Have Little Impact

Frank M. Wooten, Jr., attorney for the commissioners of the Pitt County Drainage District No. 3, said yesterday a court injunction received by about 60 landowners who claimed they were illegally assessed for work done on a 10-mile stretch of Swift Creek last summer would have little real effect.

"The work was finished several months ago, sometime around November," Wooten said.

"There is no work underway, none is planned, and no assessments are planned to be levied now, so the restraining order will have little impact."

According to Wooten, the plaintiffs claim the commissioners should have assessed the residents of the entire 60,000-acre district for work, instead of just those who live in the immediate vicinity of the project.

The project involved removal of vegetation and debris from that portion of the creek between Atkinson Fish Hole and Davis Ford Bridge. The complainants charge the work will benefit the entire district but only one-twelfth of the property owners were assessed for the improvement.

Hijackers Surrender

By DAVID PEARCE

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Two teen-aged Turks with pistols hijacked a Turkish Airlines Boeing 727 jetliner with 182 persons aboard over Turkey Saturday and forced the pilot to fly to Beirut where they surrendered to police.

Co-pilot Turaki Otem was the only casualty in the air piracy. He was pistol-whipped in the face and shot in the leg.

Lebanese security officials said the two men had demanded $285,000 and safe conduct to a Palestinian refugee camp. But they turned over their guns to police and gave up even though their demands were not met.

The hijackers commandeered the plane on a domestic flight from Diyarbakir in eastern Turkey to Ankara at about 2:20 p.m.(7:20 a.m. EST). The plane was carrying 174 passengers and eight crewmembers.

All the passengers were released when the tri-jet plane landed at Beirut. But the gunmen held the eight crewmembers hostage for over three and one-half hours while negotiating with Lebanese officials.

The two were identified as Ismail Jamal Ashan and Mohammed Hassan Hanafi Guezel, both born in 1959.

Prime Minister Selim Al Hoss, who went to the airport to assist, denied the gunmen had made any "special demands" when they gave up.

Interior Minister Salah Salman told reporters, "We made it clear to them they wouldn't get away with it. We told them we meant business and they agreed to surrender."

Pitt County Area Labor Survey To Be Conducted

The Pitt County Development Commission and the Employment Security Commission will be conducting a labor survey March 23, 24, and 25 in the Pitt County area.

For over a year, representatives of the two organizations and other Pitt County officials have been working with a national firm on a possible Pitt County location.

Recent discussions between county officials and the corporation, it was pointed out, have resulted in the need for an in depth analysis of current available labor potential in the Pitt County area.

Jack Lewis, chairman of the Development Commission, stated, "Our yearlong dealings with this excellent company have resulted in our being able to present an outstanding picture of the capabilities within our communities, with the exception of exactly how adequate our available labor base actually is."

Lewis continued, "Discussions with existing industry reflect that there is a possible solid source of labor throughout Pitt County, but the reason for our doing this survey is to develop good concrete figures."

In particular, the labor survey will focus on employees in the assembler, packer, bench work, material handler, electrician, electronic, clerical and production oriented areas.

Persons interested in submitting an application to the Employment Security Commission may secure an application at one of the area banks, city halls in Ayden and Farmville, Pitt Technical Institute, student employment office at East Carolina University, the Development Commission office, or the office of the Employment Security Commission.

Applications should be returned no later than 5 p.m. on Friday, March 25 at the ESC office on Bismark Street, it was noted.

Lewis added, "We are in need of 6,000 to 10,000 square feet of temporary manufacturing space in the Greenville-Ayden- Farmville area. This space should be well lighted, air conditioned, with water and sewer, and available on a short term lease."

Mobutu Returns Home After Ngouabi's Death

KINSHASA, Zaire (UPI) — President Mobutu Sese Seko cut short a visit to the rich copper belt Shaba province Saturday and returned to the capital following the assassination of Congo Republic President Marien Ngouabi in next door Brazzaville.

Brazzaville radio announced Saturday that Ngouabi, the pro-Soviet President of the former French Congo, had been slain in an abortive coup attempt Friday afternoon in his headquarters in Brazzaville, just across the Congo River from Kinshasa.

Mobutu earlier had flown to the chief mining center of Kolwezi in the former province of Katanga to personally demonstrate the vital city was in government hands and had not fallen to an invading force from Angola.

The invaders, described as former Katanga rebels who fled to Angola ahead of U.N. troops after the collapse in 1963 of Moise Tshombe's separtist movement, have captured five towns.

There has been a near blackout of news reports from the province but a U.S. Embassy official said Saturday, "the situation seems to have remained unchanged."

"The area of operations seems to be 90 to 100 miles west of Kolwezi, but I must stress that our imformation is very fragmentary," he said.

Government sources have said privately that the invaders were being welcomed "as liberators" in some quarters.

Diplomatic sources in Washington said they had reports that the force is flying the old Katanga provincial flag and that the leader has identified himself in broadcasts as Gen. M'Bumba, a Tshombe lieutenant active in the Katangan rebellion.

Zaire has charged the militiamen were trained and led by the Cuban troops who gained victory for the Marxist Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola in the former Portuguese colony's civil war.

Zaire has appealed to Western countries for aid and has received two planeloads of French and Belgian arms plus a planeload of military equipment from the United States.

The United States also announced plans to send a second shipment of spare parts next week and France has promised to send two consignments of parts so Zaire's 17 French-built Mirage jet fighters can join the fight.

Conley Gets Life Sentence

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

OXFORD, N.C. (AP) — Superior Court Judge Lacy Thornburg sentenced Reuben Sonny Conley to a mandatory life prison sentence Friday night after Conley was convicted of first degree murder in the death of a Virginia state Trooper.

Conley's court-appointed lawyers said they would appeal the decision, and Thornburg gave them 50 days to file the appeal with the state Supreme Court.

Conley, 33, of Atlanta, was found guilty by a jury of six men and six women in Granville County Superior Court that deliberated a total of nearly four hours.

The jury first returned a finding Friday evening after deliberating about two hours that Conley killed Virginia state trooper Garland Fisher, 33, of Dinwiddie County, Va., at a roadblock shootout Nov. 15 on Interstate 85 near here and that he was sane at the time.

Thornburg cautioned that the initial verdict technically was not a conviction of murder and that the jury still had to decide whether the verdict would be guilty of first degree or second degree murder.

The first degree murder verdict was returned shortly after 10:30 p.m., after the jury took a dinner break and deliberated at least an hour and 40 minutes longer.

Fisher's wife Sandra, who sat silently through most of the five-day trial, said after the verdict was reached, "I don't see how it could have turned out any other way."

Conley's girl friend Beverly Haynes, 20, of Atlanta, who attended the trial, said she found it hard to understand why the jury found Conley sane. "Even though they sent him to jail, he's still going to need treatment," she said.

Assistant defense attorney John H. Pike said he was surprised by the verdict. "I thought it would be second (degree murder). I just didn't think they could overlook it all. But I guess they could," he said.

The prosecution rested its case Thursday after calling 20 witnesses in three days to show that Conley abducted Fisher in Dinwiddie County, Va., and forced him at gunpoint to drive toward Atlanta.

The journey ended when North Carolina highway patrolmen set up a roadblock and Fisher died in a hail of gunfire.

Although Fisher was shot 13 times, the prosecution successfully contended the fatal shot was fired by Conley. An autopsy showed Fisher also had been shot by state troopers.

The defense began its case Friday morning and testimony ended at 11 a.m. Three witnesses were called in 90 minutes in an attempt to show Conley was insane at the time of the shooting.

Dr. Billy W. Royall, a psychiatrist who examined Conley at Dorothea Dix Hospital in Raleigh after his capture, said the defendant "had a paranoid personality...and on occasion he might be psychotic."

Under cross examination, however, Royall said he "could not come to an opinion" about whether Conley knew right from wrong.

Dr. Robert Harper, who also gave Conley a psychiatric examination, said he felt that Conley, despite his "psychotic state of delusion...still knew the difference between right and wrong."

OXFORD, N.C. (AP) — Reuben Sonny Conley, convicted of first degree murder in the death last fall of a Virginia state trooper, still faces kidnaping and assault charges in Virginia.

Says FPC Transfers Not In Retaliation

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Power Commission Chairman Richard L. Dunham denies that FPC lawyers were transferred last year in retaliation for their outspoken criticism of big oil companies.

"That thought would never have entered my mind," he declared Friday. He said the lawyers were shifted to help alleviate case backlogs, not as a form of retribution.

Some 29 FPC attorneys, including some senior attorneys handling natural gas cases, received new assignments last October.

In previous testimony, Mamone told the subcommittee he believed his transfer resulted from his testimony at congressional hearings early last year on alleged natural gas withholding by several major oil companies and from his strong advocacy of the public interest.

The FPC's former top natural gas attorney, George Lewnes, also testified that he was made to feel unwelcome by commissioners after he presented similar statements to congressional panels.

Testimony from other FPC witnesses showed that commission offficials tried to fire Lewnes after his congressional appearances. Instead, Lewnes accepted a new assignment at the same salary as an FPC administrative law judge.

Measured, One Hot Dog

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — When John E. Hodge Jr. bought a hot dog advertised as a "Foot Long," he expected to get a wiener more or less 12 inches long.

Instead, he says, he got a hot dog 8½ inches long, and he was irritated.

Hodge, a Charlotte lawyer, tangled with a hot dog restaurant chain over the length of their "Foot Long," and he won.

Hodge says it started in January when he bought a sandwich named a "Foot Long" at a Wiener King restaurant in Charlotte. He measured the wiener after thinking it looked short.

In an answer to Hodge's complaint, Ronald W. Howard, president of the Charlotte-based Wiener King Corp., wrote a letter saying that the label "is a nomenclature and is not descriptive. We do not in any way describe this sandwich as 12 inches in length."

Hodge then threatened to take the matter to court under the state's laws on deceptive trade practices.

The corporation gave in, saying it would soon start selling 12-inch hot dogs "to avoid further controversy."

But Howard maintained the company had not violated any laws by using what he called a generic term.

Fuel Factor Negates Savings...

approves the fuel factor charge for the utility companies such as Greenville Utilities, to charge a retail rate that is determined by averaging the actual cost of fuel the preceding third, fourth, and fifth months. This means that the bills received at the end of March will have a fuel factor determined by the average of the actual cost of fuel during December, November and October.

By determining the retail fuel factor this way, during the time that most of the energy is consumed in winter, the fuel factor charge will be lower, such as in January when the fossil fuel factor will be determined based on the average of the actual cost of fuel during October, September and August. The fuel factor for May will be higher than the fuel factor in January since the customer will be paying for a fuel factor based on the average actual cost of fuel during February, January, and December.

The Pierce's, like many utility retail consumers, have questioned who regulates these rates and fuel factors. Greenville Utilities Director, Charles Horne explained that the rates and the fuel factors are regulated by state and federal agencies.

"The N.C. Utilities Commission and Federal Power Commission regulate the rates and the fuel factors. In our case, all cities served by VEPCO have the same wholesale fossil fuel rate," Horne said.

"Greenville adopted VEPCO's suggested retail rate. This means that we charge our customers the same rate that they would get if they were a direct customer of VEPCO. Last year the fossil fuel rate ranged from $1.62 per 1,000 kwh to a high of $5.22 per 1,000 kwh," Horne added.

According to Horne one of the most complex problems in explaining the fuel factor to customers is the fact that it fluctuates each month. The fluctuation is caused by the amount and kind of fuel used in producing the energy for the electric customers. The fuel factor will vary also according to the kind of fuel used, whether it be nuclear, oil, or coal.

An example of the fluctuation in the fuel factor charge can be illustrated with a Winterville customer's bill for the same amount of killowatts for February and March. During the month of February, the Winterville customers were charged $15.87 per 1,000 kwh, but during the month of March the customers will be charged $13.72 per 1,000 kwh. During the month of February a Winterville customer used 1,160 kwh, and the bill was $58.71, but in March, if the customer uses 1,160 kwh the bill will be $56.39.

An Ayden utility customer's bill would have been comparable to the Winterville customer's bill because the rates are basically the same and the fuel factor is the same. A Greenville customer's bill during February would have been less since the Greenville Utilities Department only charged their customers $4.78 per 1,000 kwh as a fuel factor. The Greenville Utilities Department absorbed the difference between the retail and wholesale fuel factor cost rather than charging customers for the full fuel factor charge like Winterville and Ayden.

During the month of March, Greenville, Ayden and Winterville will be charging about $13.72 per 1,000 kwh for a fuel factor. The cost of the fuel charge will be passed on to retail customers by the three towns.

According to Horne this will be necessary since the Greenville Utilities Department can not continue to absorb the cost of increasing utility bills.

"This year we must begin paying VEPCO and billing our customers as close to the same rate as possible to catch up with our payment and billing differences. It is best to charge our customers what we are charged rather than lead a lag between the difference," Horne said.

According to Horne utility customers can expect to continue receiving the high electric bills while the fuel factor charge is high.

County Govm't More Involved

We have devoted far more space to the affairs of county government in recent months than we did some years back. There is a reason for this, however. County government has become involved in many new fields recently. There was a time when the county collected taxes, ran a part of the court system and provided a minimum of law enforcement through a small sheriff's department. Welfare was in the county's area of responsibility and gradually county governments moved into the public health field in a small way.

Things have changed, however, and particularly in Pitt County, they have changed radically in recent years. Today, for instance, the county government is involved in land planning, industrial procurement, operations of a county landfill and providing for the mental health care of its citizens.

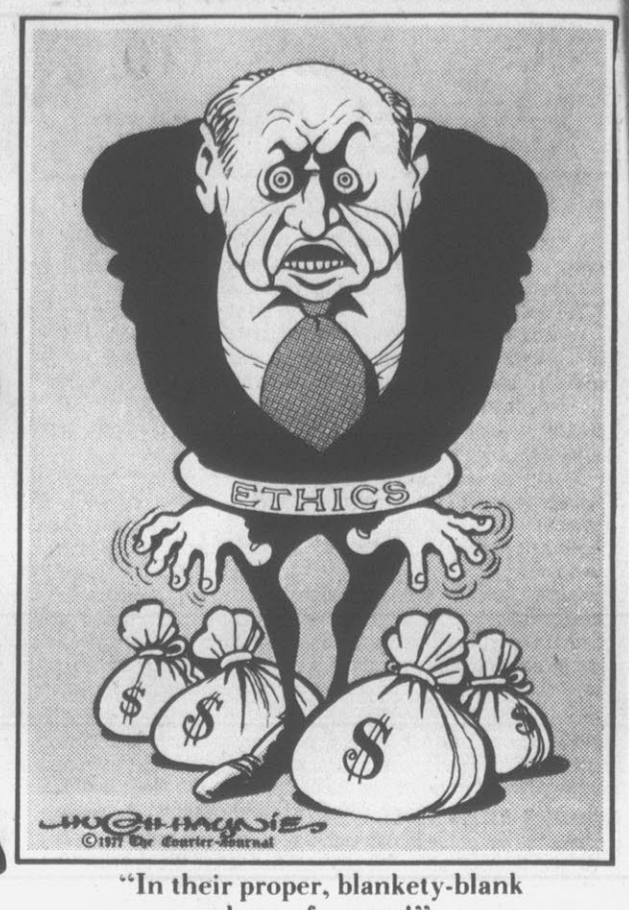

And now our county officials are becoming involved in developments that they would not have dreamed about a decade past. At present plans are being made for the development of a county-wide system of refuse collecting. There's a study being done concerning the possibility of the development of a county-wide water distribution system. This would have been unheard-of less than a generation ago. The county is now involved in development and maintenance of volunteer rural fire and rescue departments.

While the county has been involved in the hospital field for some time, only recently has it had the opportunity to do what few counties have ever been called upon to carry out. Pitt County is now developing a hospital which will be a primary clinical facility for the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

In short, Pitt County finds itself providing many services that were once in the exclusive domain of the municipalities. This in itself creates a new problem in that citizens of the municipalities pay extra taxes to receive these services and if such services are to be provided in rural areas, then ways have to be found for rural citizens to pay by special assessments. Pitt County is extending its services far beyond what was once thought of as a county's proper governmental function. And we are heartily in favor of this. We think generally the County Commissioners have recognized the necessity of moving into new areas of service.

"We, your public servants, stand foursquare in favor of halos!"

THIS AFTERNOON

Bargaining Right Push

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Action is moving on several fronts in the General Assembly to create law requiring governmental units to bargain with their employees.

State government, and local units — county, municipal, local school boards — all would be affected should legislators decide the time has come for this move.

One proposal has already been beaten down by a legislative committee: that to require governmental bodies to enter into contracts with public employees.

Another measure is still under debate: that to allow local governmental agencies to voluntarily enter into contracts with public employee unions.

Still another is yet to come: that from the North Carolina Association of Educators being drafted now to require local school boards to negotiate with the teacher organization.

Slim Chance

Most lawmakers rate chances of passage of any bargaining measure slim.

Proponents are pushing their measures along with the caution that unless the state moves, the federal government will.

It is not clear what path President Jimmy Carter will follow, but most signs point toward his pushing some measure to allow public employee recognition.

Courts have ruled that public employees in North Carolina cannot be denied the right to organize — but have not required local governments to recognize those unions. To the contrary, local units are not allowed to negotiate.

John Wilson, president of the 45,000-member Association of Classroom Teachers (principal unit of the N. C. Association of Educators) told a legislative committee recently that bringing teachers into full status as professionals is the proper way to solve existing public school ills.

"Realistically, today, individual school units are being dictated to by one personality, the individual superintendent," Wilson stated.

Allowing teachers to unionize and negotiate would, Wilson maintains, improve the schools: "We can say this will happen because it has happened in 48 states."

Teacher unions would get involved in cutting classroom size, establishing stricter discipline, teaching relevant courses, demanding more and better supplies, eliminating "superflous administration," setting homework policies and improving field trip procedures, and generally improving employment conditions "to allow humane treatment for the teachers of our children," Wilson said.

Compensate Victims?

There has been talk in recent years of paying the victims of crime something for the loss which they suffered.

Such an idea strikes a sympathetic chord among the general public and lawmakers alike. But the problems appear insurmountable.

At first glance, the prospects of either the criminal being made to pay for damages, or the state making an award, has appeal.

Making the criminal pay rises Constitutional questions: who would set the amount, some would be able to pay without strain while some have no resources, would punishment be stricter if the criminal couldn't pay.

Several nations now have award programs, including New Zealand, Great Britain, Australia, Canada, and Sweden. Eighteen states also provide relief, with the system generally providing money to people suffering personal injuries from crimes, and to dependents of those killed in a crime. Most are designed to pay for medical and hospital expenses, loss of earnings or support, funeral and burial expenses, and in some cases pain and suffering.

So complicated is the field, however, that a legislative committee which looked into the subject has reported back to the full General Assembly that, "In view of the complexity of the questions of public policy, of administration, and of the financing of crime victims, compensation programs, the committee declines to recommend the adoption or rejection..."

Sunday Morning Notes

They came to the computer room where a half million dollar "brain" controls various functions of the vast hospital complex.

Suddenly Sitterson pointed to a device on the floor of the room. "There's the best piece of equipment I've seen yet," he exclaimed. "It hasn't been improved on."

Tommy looked closely. Sitterson was pointing to an old fashioned mouse trap.

If there are any mice in the multi-million dollar plant workmen appear determined to get rid of them before the facilities are placed in use.

In a room near the computer area, Tommy says there was a large drawing of a mouse. A big "x" had been put over the mouse's head and several stars had been drawn above it apparently indicating "kills".

Just like the World War I flying ace.

The person calling posed his question, stopped in midsentence and exclaimed,

"Ouch!" There was a dead silence as our reporter wondered what in the world had happened.

Soon the caller came back on the line to explain that one of his children's gerbils had run up and bitten him on the toe.

"I hate those creatures," the caller said. "My children love 'em, but I hate 'em."

So would we.

And staff writer Susan Quinn observed that she could hardly get to work that morning because of all the detours of downtown streets. Later she mentioned she was to interview a lady representing The Tobacco Institute.

"Is she coming by the office—," someone asked.

"No," Susan exclaimed. "I could hardly get to work myself because of all the detours. I could never direct her downtown."

Invents Simple Device

By KENDAL WEAVER
Associated Press Writer

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — In a nation that loves gadgets and gimmicks — and pays royally for them even if they don't work — it seems someone would have beaten Joe Newman to his latest invention.

It's a rain-proof windshield without wipers.

That's right. Hook the device atop your car or truck and escape the blurring splatter of a thunderstorm or the irritating squish-squish-squish of wipers batting away at a summer shower.

At least Joe Newman, who once invented a knife with wings and plastic-coated barbells, says it works real fine.

"It is amazingly simple," said Newman, an athletic 40-year-old who has turned fiddling with gadgets into a livelihood. He unveiled his latest creation this week.

"Inventing is the easiest part. I think everybody comes up with a great idea in their life. But sticking with it to see that it's produced is the hardest part," he said.

Newman said his inspiration came one day 12 years ago when a young fellow, driving in a summer rainstorm, couldn't see where he was going and crashed into Newman's car.

"I told the police it was a shame he got a ticket. It wasn't his fault. It was the inefficiency of his windshield wipers," he said.

That set him to thinking. What could do a better job than windshield wipers? Over the next several years he junked a few wrong-headed ideas but would be inspired again "every time I was out driving and it started raining."

He finally hit on the right gadget, he said, and hooked the device above his windshield by attaching poles to the luggage rack atop his car. He adjusted it by pulling ropes.

Pulling ropes, of course, would be too troublesome for drivers also steering the car, so

Amelia Earhart's round-the-world plane skidded and crashed today while trying to take off for Howland island on her world flight, but she and her two companions escaped injury.

The plane skidded on the wet concrete runway and the left tire blew out, wrecking under carriage.

There was a burst of flames from the engine and ambulances rushed to the scene. They arrived to find Miss Earhart, white-faced, climbing from the wrecked craft.

"Something must have gone wrong," she exclaimed.

Insurgent forces in the University City sector of Madrid were reported today to have smashed through the capital defenses into northern Madrid.

Word of crumpled resistance and a sudden thrust into the long beseiged city was brought to the insurgent base by persons who said they witnessed the incursion.

The troopers of General Franco were said to have beaten their way into positions near a large thoroughfare bisecting the northern part of the city from north to south.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Losing Latin Americans

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Brazil, the Latin American giant that was promised very special attention by Henry Kissinger, is shifting its benign view of U.S. foregin policy closer to outright hostility, and may possibly bid for Soviet arms in the future.

This feared response by Brazil to President Carter's human rights crusade was a total surprise to the administration. Moreover, U.S. career officials are deeply worried by resentment toward the U.S. from such anti-Communist governments as Brazil's, while those governments simultaneously open doors to the Soviet Union locked for decades.

In Brazil, such a sudden transformation would have seemed impossible even during the Vietnam war when the authoritarian regime was hard put to contend with anti-Americanism by the press and public. No longer. The "human rights" bloc on Capitol Hill, backed by the new administration's full moral force, has alienated Brazil and other staunch U.S. allies south of the border to a degree not matched even by the 1961 invasion of the Bay of Pigs.

The hot anger in Rio when Brazil was labelled a violator of human rights under the new congressional stricture on aid for the less-than-pure has been followed by cool reappraisal of U.S.-Brazilian relations. Believing the new U.S. policy treats countries that have long supported Washington more cavalierly than the Cuba-led totalitarian left, the Brazilians could end up leading an anti-American right-of-center bloc in the Western hemisphere.

That development would sustain the privately voiced premonition of career officials here that Mr. Carter's human rights policy is an invitation to disaster. While fully aware that it will not democratize the Communist world, they fear it may further deplete the dwindling roster of U.S. allies.

Brazil's immediate reaction of renouncing all future U.S. aid could lead Rio's anti-Communist regime to the Kremlin for arms. Although it supplies most of its own arms hardware, Brazil has had to buy some relatively sophisticated equipment from the U.S., including about 40 F-5 aircraft, for which spare parts soon will be needed. Having renounced all U.S. military aid, Brazil may now opt for Soviet-made SU-20 aircraft — particularly given Moscow's eagerness for a deal, its easy terms and the increasingly frequent example of neighboring Peru's arms deals with the Soviets.

This U.S. humiliation of Brazil follows Brazil's support — with one exception — of U.S. positions in superpower confrontations. The exception was Brazil's early recognition last year of the Marxist government of Angola, justified by Brazil's traditional special interest in Africa (particularly Portuguese Africa).

So, even before the human rights intervention, the Brazilians felt...betrayed when the U.S. pressured West Germany to renege on its agreement to sell Brazil a nuclear reprocessing plant. No matter how valid Mr. Carter's campaign against nuclear proliferation, the strong-arm applied to the Germans is perceived in Rio as a hostile act, particularly since the Nixon-Ford administration accepted without reproach Brazil's negotiation with West Germany. Indeed, that negotiation started only after the U.S. informed Brazil that it could expect no more oil from here.

But Mr. Carter's campaign against nuclear proliferation at least has the merit of an understandable policy designed to keep the world from blowing itself up. The human rights campaign, to the contrary, is regarded by U.S. allies as lacking any merit.

Generally unreported in the U.S. press, for example, was Uruguay's outrage when Secretary of State Cyrus Vance mentioned its alleged violations of civil rights while interrogated at a Senate

"So near is grandeur to our dust, so near is God to man, When Duty whispers low, 'Thou must,' the youth replies, 'I can'."

Duty called upon 15 young striplings late in 1976 at North Pitt High School. They were commissioned to lift the orange and blue banner of PANTHER PRIDE high and mightily among waiting opposition that stood ready to do basketball battle. 101 days and 29 games later, these battle-scarred gutsy proud veterans stood knocking at the very gates of Basketball's most precious prize, the 3-A Championship of the entire state of North Carolina. That these young men had arrived at that coveted spot, not whether they had won or lost, is the important factor to be remembered in the history of North Pitt. They had arrived. They had lifted the banner well. And they had won RESPECT. This is all that truly matters. Strength For Today

CREEDS ARE SIGNPOSTS

We live in an age which pays scant attention to creeds. Many people pride themselves on the fact that they have no creed save a willingness to do the right thing day by day.

But creeds do have a place in life. They are meant to be signposts. We need them to tell us which way we should go on the God-directed pilgrimage through life. But they are not the pilgrimage itself. We need signposts when we take an automobile trip. But none of us, upon the return, would describe in glowing detail the signposts he had seen. The experiences of the trip are what is important.

So in religion. Life with God through Christ is the main thing—in fact the only thing worthy of consideration. But we need the signposts just the same. It is only when the signposts take precedence over the journey itself that religion ceases to be an experience and becomes merely a conformity to sterile standards of orthodoxy.

Better Bargain For Travelers

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Cost consciousness developed during the late and bitter recession has left perhaps a permanent impact on the hotel-motel industry, resulting in better bargains for travelers.

The real test probably will come this summer when travelers take to the road, but present indications suggest that very real changes have occurred in the hospitality industry.

Since 1973, Stan Simonson, working out of St. Paul, Minn., has built his Budget Motels and Hotels of America into a 1,300 member organization in almost every state by signing up facilities that offer the best value in their areas.

A person using his directory, he says, "needn't have to worry about arriving at a flophouse or a penthouse, but just a good independent best dollar value motel."

Noel Goldblatt, a motel owner, has evolved another concept, that of obtaining long-term leases on vacant apartments and renting them out at relatively low rates to travelers.

The concept germinated when Goldblatt was listening to a business executive at his motel lament that it would be much nicer if his extended stay could have been at an apartment instead.

The entrepreneur now has 850 apartment units in Chicago and 50 in Atlanta, and expects to continue growing, confident that executives and others prefer an apartment for $250 to $400 a month rather than a motel at much higher rates.

Both Simonson and Goldblatt benefited from the desire of travelers to cut costs without cutting security and comfort. Both claim it can be done.

Simonson began with little more than idea, a telephone and cramped quarters. Working mainly by phone, he began signing up facilities for his directory, and then expanded into insurance supplies, credit card discounts and the like.

He was inspired in part by the Curtis Hotel in the Minneapolis loop which, he determined, offered for $14 to $17 a single room compared with those in nearby hotels for $20 or more.

As he expanded, he developed the concept of letting his insurer, Allstate, choose which facilities would be considered for acceptance in the directory. He defends the practice by saying both he and Allstate seek the same thing: well-located, wellrun facilities with minimum hazards, conveniences and good clientele.

Most facilities listed in the directory offer swimming pools, televisions and phones in rooms, and restaurant facilities on the premises or nearby.

His directory is available for $1 from Budget Motels and Hotels of America, 568 Snelling Avenue North, St. Paul, Minnesota 55104.

Goldblatt's concept took shape at a time when many apartment house owners had big vacancies and were willing to cut their prices to sign longterm, big-volume leases with him.

Observations From Editorial Columns

Testing, Testing

A few years ago, who would have supposed that a controversy could be aroused by suggesting that graduating high school seniors be tested to see whether they could read and write? Well, it all goes to show just how far we have come with federal aid.

Around the country, school officials and parents increasingly are alarmed by growing illiteracy among recent graduates. Social promotions, grade inflation, and other evils have, in some places, made a mockery of high school diplomas — to say nothing of the grief and lifelong hardships inflicted on hapless graduates, cheated of an education.

But attempts to cope with the problem, usually by means of "minimum competency" tests, have met with fierce resistance, generally from precisely those mischievous schoolmarms who have been inflating grades and otherwise playing hob with learning.

It, therefore, is no small comfort to learn that an attempt is being made in the North Carolina legislature to require every high school student to demonstrate minimum familiarity with words and numbers before being certified and set adrift. This would be accomplished through standardized, statewide testing. Governor Hunt, who supports the idea, estimates the cost at about $271,000 for the next two years — a modest amount, surely, considering the benefits.

One thing more: the test results ought to be made public, school by school. The Department of Public Instruction likes to keep these little statistics all to itself, so as to avoid odious comparisons. But odious comparisons are sometimes just what the situation requires.

The idea is sound. The bill should pass. And let us have, not just a general measurement of how well our children are learning, but also particularized data on how well — or poorly — they are being taught. — The Greensboro Record

Appears Resonable

In retrospect, it has always seemed that the acquittal of Joan Little, a black woman, accused of killing a white jailer who allegedly made improper sexual advances to her in a jail cell, was a tribute to fair and impartial jurors who did their duty, in spite of the pickets outside the courtroom, not because of the pickets.

The right to protest peacefully is a basic right of American government, but a new bill proposed in the General Assembly that would outlaw noisy demonstrations, such as chanting or loud speakers, within 300 feet of a courthouse where a trial is in process seems reasonable.

This measure, introduced by Rep. H. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg, was recommended by a Superior Court Judge Hamilton Hobgood who presided over the Little case. He appeared before the legislative committees urging its passage, saying the judges do not have the power to control disruptive inpassage, saying the judges do not have the power to control disruptive influences outside the courtroom.

Not all jurors or judges may be as undisturbed as the Little case jurors or Judge Hamilton by their surroundings, and it might be wise to have a buffer zone outside courtrooms. — The Sanford Herald

Edmisten Makes Sense

As a rule we don't applaud when Attorney General Rufus L. Edmisten speaks to an issue. However, let us take this opportunity to second his suggestion that the 500 young persons in prison for the possession of marijuana be released to make room for the rapists, murderers and other dangerous criminals who should be in our overcrowded prisons but who are not there because of lack of space.

We are not certain that all 500 should be released, but if the marijuana inmate is not guilty of being a dealer or pusher we should let him out of prison and on to better things. Buildings and a better rehabilitation program will do much to improve our prison systems. Marijuana users, alcoholics and others charged with minor crimes — who are not in prison — should be considered in a different context from the hardened criminal. Right on, Rufus. — The Chapel Hill Newspaper

To the editor:

As a police science student at Pitt Technical Institute, I know firsthand that PTI is a fine institution which has helped thousands since its introduction in 1963. The time has come to improve an already great school by adding a college transfer program. Pitt Tech should become a community college.

When I graduated from North Pitt High School in 1975, I knew I wanted to enter law enforcement. I looked into East Carolina University, but learned that in four years at ECU I would have received 50 hours of police-related courses. In two years at PTI, I have already taken 90 hours of police-related courses, courses which are very practical and which are taught by former agents of the SBI and FBI and other departments. I now have a working knowledge of law enforcement while, if I had started at ECU, I would still be taking general college courses and would have gotten nowhere.

Now I am about to graduate from PTI and wish to enter ECU as a corrections major. If PTI were a community college, I would transfer as a full junior, but since only 60 per cent of my courses transfer, I must repeat several courses, courses on which I have done quite well at PTI. I should not be forced to waste valuable time and money retaking courses just because PTI is a technical institute and not a community college.

I believe the time for Pitt Community College, a twoyear college transfer program, has come. If you agree, please contact Sen. Vernon White, Rep. Horton Rountree and Rep. Sam Bundy and tell them so. Pitt Technical Institute cannot become Pitt Community College without your help and support.

Face Of Spring Seen In Rappahannock County

It is a well-known fact—at least it is well-known here in Rappahannock County—that spring lives in a small swampy area just east of the Shade Road, about a quarter mile south of the apple packing plant. On the evening of Friday, March 11, spring made her first appearance.

The event is especially worth marking this year, for many discouraged Rappahannockers had begun to think the lady had moved away. Under the heading of Mean and Dirty Winters, our winter certainly was small potatoes compared to the winter in Buffalo, Fargo and Brainerd, but it was a mean and dirty one all the same. The winter went on and on. It would not stop. Our whole county froze up like a tray of ice. Pipes burst and water pumps froze, and it was a back-breaking effort to get hay to the cattle. Nobody could remember anything like it.

But a few days into March, things began to thaw; and on this particular Friday evening, driving home from Washington, there was spring beside the Shade Road. How do I know? Because you could hear the peepers. They are the certain heralds of April on its way.

If you have never met a peeper, you should know that a peeper is a tree frog. He is no bigger than a minute — maybe three-quarters of an inch, greenish-brown, pop-eyed. His sole function is annually to announce the entrance of spring. This he does by puffing up his tiny throat, thrusting his head forward, and crying PEEP-er, PEEP-er, PEEP, PEEP, PEEP-er. The note is somewhere around B-nautral above middle C; and after a winter like ours, it is the most welcome note ever sounded.

Spring turned up the next day, Saturday, in the great willow tree down at Woodville. Twenty-four hours earlier, the branches were bare. Now they had become a green cascade, a fountain of leaves as tiny as tears. People came to the Woodville Rural Independent Post Office to get their mail, and they looked at the willow across the road, and they all said the same thing: Spring!

After that, the lady turned up everywhere. The crocuses popped up, lavender and orange, and in the rock garden all kinds of tiny things began to lift their heads: hepatica, aconite, dwarf daffodils. The heather that had been given up for dead came back to life. The wild iris shouldered its sturdy frame above the ground. By Thursday, St. Patrick's Day, the fields were unmistakably green.

We hadn't seen a groundhog since October. Now, driving down the Rudasill's Mill Road, we saw four of them lumbering along: four fat men out for a morning jog. They were sweating and complaining and saying, "Man, am I out of shape!" A dozen rabbits were on the lawn Wednesday evening, practicing sprints and hurdles. Chipmunks and squirrels appeared out of nowhere.

This past Tuesday, a pair of newly-wed bluebirds arrived, took one look at Apartment 4-D, our very best bluebird box, and promptly moved in. This is a truly elegant apartment, if you will forgive a little bragging, equipped with washer, drier, two ovens, air conditioning and wall-to-wall carpeting throughout. It rents promptly every spring.

A flock of 50 robins arrived. The killdee is back, foolish bird, building a nest in a perilous spot right next to the driveway. Most of the juncos have gone, and the grosbeaks also, but we have a new visitor not registered before: a fox sparrow, and a handsome fellow he is.

With spring looking on, everyone has started plowing and planting and getting gardens ready. On the 12th, we planted onion sets and lettuce, and we raked up the backyard around the great chestnut oak that rules our hill, Once again we marveled at the sheer fecundity of nature. In an area perhaps 15 x 30 feet, we must have raked up— or pulled up—5,000 acorns. Half of them were trying to take root and turn into oak trees.

Down on your hands and knees, digging out these seedlings, you wonder what the chestnut oak knew that we didn't. A year ago, that tree saw the bitter winter coming; it produced more acorns than we ever have seen before, each fruitful with the germ of life. The winds of November scattered them, and the snow and ice watered them, and now spring warms them, and the wonder and the mystery all begin anew. Peepers and willows and bluebirds and groundhogs! The shut-in spirit opens like a crocus, lifting fragile petals to a welcome sun.

Molasses Boiling And Mutton Tallow Recalled

WILDCAT, N.C. — Willard Watson meets no strangers. He is a lean man with strong features and black-grey hair; a genuine portrait of pioneer stock in appearance, action and speech. He plays old clawhammer style banjo, buck dances, and carves folk toys.

Willard will be seventy-two his birthday.

"Uncle Harrison Miller'd go through the community in the fall, with a cane mill and a little black yoke of steers, to make up the molasses. I's just little when he'd come to my grandpa's, but I'd have to get out in that cold and frost and lead the steers around that cane mill. I didn't have no shoes and my feet'd get so cold I'd have to run to the house and warm 'em, then go back.

"They used to make cane mills out a wood. Black gum and locust. Boiled molasses in pots too. Made 'em just as black as they could be. Blackstrap molasses! You know at was something to eat. Yes sir!"

Willard scratches his mustache and gets up from the straight-back chair, goes out on the porch, and returns with some logs for the fire.

"I remember the first pair a shoes I ever put on," he continues. "My grandpa brought 'em to me. Them days they made shoes with a little brass cap right round the tip to keep the young'un from kicking the toes out. The tops a them shoes was so stiff that it wore a black ring right round my ankle, and it got sore. So Grandpa took his knife and shaved the leather down thin and notched it all the way around. That's the only pair a shoes I got that winter, too.

"Grandma got her cards and I picked that wool out, and she spinned it and made me a pair a socks."

The flames lick at the logs in the fireplace, crackling, and blazing bluish-yellow.

"One year Uncle General was down with the rheumatism and couldn't walk, so I went to plowing the old house field for him. I was young and didn't have sense enough to know anything about breaking the plow. The ground was froze, and I pulled up sheets a earth as big as a door with that yoke a steers. Grandpa said, 'Ah! God a mighty! You'll break the plow all to pieces!' I never thought about that with them steer just a walking right on. Them steers'd chaw their cud all day and plow til you couldn't get your breath.

"Uncle General broke'em. Only young man ever I seed on top side of the earth could keep a sled in a ten-acre field. He could drive a sled through a auger hole.

"After the other work was done, Grandpa'd gather in wood for winter. He always piled it agin a forked sweetnin' apple tree. One evening late, the sheep was running around the house, and my mother, who was always in for some fun or other, said, 'Aunt Isabelle, let's put a sack over one of the sheep's heads to get to see how funny it would do.'

"That was the funniest thing you ever seed, but the laughing got turned. A sheep is awful bad to climb up on something, and that thing headed right up that woodpile, come to the fork a the tree, about seven or eight feet up, and fell and broke its neck.

"My mother come to me and said, 'Don't you tell Grandpa that sheep had a sack on its head. If you do he'll kill us all.' I didn't want nobody killed, you know.

"Aunt Isabelle went up to Uncle Erv's and Aunt Tamar's to tell Grandpa that a sheep got on the wood pile and broke its neck.

"Grandpa said, 'Aih God, Erv, we'll have some mutton!'

"They dressed the mutton out that night and I'll never forget how it looked. Just covered in tallow.

"I never told what happened though, not as long as Grandpa lived."

hearing. Uruguay formally charged the U.S. with using its foreign aid as a "vehicle to intervene" in its internal affairs.

The reaction throughout Latin America, so long the backwater of U.S. policy, closely resembles that in Brazil and Uruguay. Also alienated are Argentina and Chile, where officials say privately the only reason Mexico has avoided being targeted in the human rights campaign is that it is controlled by an authoritarian leftist regime rather than an authoritarian rightist regime.

The long-term effect of the human rights campaign extends worldwide to such rightist regimes as South Korea and the Philippines which, despite obvious human rights infractions, maintain a common interest with the U.S. What these nations, including Brazil, find incomprehensible is why Washington does not discriminate between friends and foes in its new role of world human rights arbiter. Brazil for one will not play, and other dropouts may soon follow.

As The Man Explained, It Is All In Your Mind

By far the worst period in my whole life was that stretch of time when I had to get up every night with the baby. I was never fully awake during this period. I fell asleep one evening when I was cooking supper and sauteed my hand in a skillet. I dozed off one Saturday afternoon while I was baking a cake, and when I awoke, there was nothing left but a few crumbs stuck in Phillip's stubble. I nodded off while I was hanging my asparagus fern, and it took three weeks to get the potting soil out of my scalp. It took me another three weeks to rid myself of the aphids.

Phillip was no help at all during this crisis. "It's all in your mind," he told me. "I saw a program on 'Nova' that proved beyond a shadow of a doubt that people don't really need sleep to function efficiently. Sleep is an evolutionary response designed to keep people out of trouble when it's dark. Now that we've got electricity, sleep can be eliminated."

This was from a man who spent nine months convincing me that nursing a baby was a woman's ultimate fulfillment, all so that he wouldn't have to get up for the 2 o'clock feeding.

We both thought that the problem would clear itself up in a few months. Little did we know that some babies can't be counted on to sleep through the night until they're 21.

The other night at about one a.m. the baby started crying. I nudged Phillip. "The baby's crying. Go see what's the matter.

"Gar-ronk!" he snorted.

"That's easy for you to say," I snapped. "You're the one who insisted on feeding her three hot dogs and a Dorito for supper. What can you expect?"

He snorted again.

I leaned over and shouted in his ear, "It's your turn!"

He was certainly obliging.

He turned all the way over to the other side of the bed and took the covers with him.

Realizing that I had little chance of getting through to him, I put on my robe, stumbled to the nursery, rocked the baby back to sleep, and stumbled back to bed. Unfortunately, I couldn't go back to sleep. My feet were freezing. And all the while my spouse lay, breathing regularly, at my side.

"Ee-oww!" he yelped.

"Oh, I'm sorry. Did I wake you up?" I said. "I was just trying to get my feet warm. They get so cold from walking the baby up and down the hall at night. Listen, she's crying again."

"Tomorrow, we buy you bedroom slippers," he said. In five seconds he was sound asleep again. The baby was still crying. I watched him breathe for five more minutes; then I reached over and pinned his nostrils shut with a paper clip.

His eyes popped open, and his hand flew up to his nose. "What in the name of . . ."

"Stop breathing!" I whispered. "If the baby hears you, she'll never go back to sleep."

He pulled off the paper clip and put his pillow over his head. I listened to the baby for a few more minutes; then I kicked him in the shin."

"What's the matter now?" he groaned.

"Sorry to bother you," I said, "But I just saw something gray and fuzzy run across the bed. It's on your side."

He took one leap and landed in the middle of the floor.

"Now that you're up, would you mind seeing after the baby?"

He glared down at me. "I just want you to know that I don't appreciate this. How am I supposed to work all day tomorrow when I don't get a good night's rest tonight?"

"Oh, don't worry," I said."- Just remember, it's all in your mind."

See $199 Per Week Needed By Family Of Four

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — Although Americans no longer suffer from a double-digit inflation economy, evidence of an "inflation mentality" is seen in the public's calculation of what it costs for a family of four to get along today.

In the latest Gallup Poll the public's median estimate of living costs for a four-person family is $199 per week — a 12 per cent increase over last year when the figure was $177.

Perceptions of rising living costs — often as important as actual inflation — are revealed in the public's assessments over the last 40 years. In 1937, when the Gallup Poll first asked the public to gauge living costs for a family of four, the median answer given was $30. A decade later it had reached $43, and by 1957 the amount had risen to $72.

The most dramatic increase, however, has occurred during the last 10 years. In 1967, weekly living cost estimates in a Gallup Poll reached a median of $101. Now, just 10 years later, there has been nearly a 100 per cent increase in consumer estimates of what it costs to get along today.

The dollar estimates arrived at are based on national samples of the adult, civilian, non-farm population. This is the question that has been asked for the last 40 years:

"What is the smallest amount of money a family of four (husband, wife, and two children) needs each week to get along in this community?"

REGIONAL, CITY SIZE DIFFERENCES

An interesting finding from the current survey is provided by the regional difference. Residents of the Midwest peg their cost of living for a four-person family at the same level ($200 per week) as do those living in the East ($201) and far West ($199). Only the South ($173) has apparently retained a less expensive standard of living.

Predictably, the median response of residents of the nation's largest cities (one million and over) cite a higher figure ($220) than do those living in smaller cities, towns, and rural areas.

The following table displays the highlights of the national trend since the first measurement in 1937:

MINIMUM AMOUNT NEEDED BY A FAMILY OF FOUR (Non-farm families)

1976	177
1975	161
1974	152
1973	149
1971	127
1970	126
1967	101
1957	72
1947	43

OWN FAMILY COSTS

While the public believes the four-person family needs about $200 per week to make ends meet today, when the average American is asked what it takes for his or her our family to make ends meet the figure is, not unexpectedly, lower — $156. The average family size in America is now 3.2 people, accounting in part for this lower figure.

Interestingly, when members of families with four persons are asked what it takes for their own family to get along per week, the estimate given, $198 per week, is virtually the same as the median amount the public thinks

For the latest survey, a total of 1,534 non-farm residents, 18 and older, were interviewed in more than 300 scientifically selected localities during the period Feb. 4-7. Farm families were excluded from the survey since many farmers raise their own food.

Open House At Seymour Johnson AFB

SEYMOUR JOHNSON AFB, GOLDSBORO — The flying Thunderbirds and the Golden Knights parachutists are to be the headliners to celebrate the 21st annual Open House at Seymour Johnson Air Force Base at Goldsboro on Sunday, April 10.

Activities for the event will begin at 1:30 p.m. and will continue until about 5 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

Assigned to the Tactical Air Command, the Thunderbirds are the official Air Demonstration Squadron of the U.S. Air Force. Their mission is to demonstrate the professionalism, versatility, and flexibility of Air Force personnel and equipment through precision aerial maneuvers. Take-off time for the Thunderbirds demonstration is 3:30 p.m.

The Golden Knights, world-champion U.S. Army Parachute Team, will exhibit their free-fall jumping skill at 2:15 over the Seymour Johnson flightline. While maneuvering in free-fall from altitudes of up to 13,000 feet, the Golden Knights will plunge earthward at speeds nearing 200 miles per hour before opening their parachutes to glide to a stand-up landing in the demonstration area.

Another highlight event will be the appearance of the "Blue Spectrum," an ensemble of the Tactical Air Command Band from Langley Air Force Base, Virginia.

Among aircraft to be displayed on the flightline for public inspection will be the F-4, B-52, and KC-135 as well as other planes and air equipment.

The itinerary of events for the Open House is:

— Special Forces Rapelling demonstrations by U.S. Army troops from Fort Bragg; hand to hand combat demonstrations. by U.S. Army troops; security police dog demonstrations; the Golden Knights parachute jump; autograph session by the Golden Knights members; Thunderbirds inspection briefing by narrator; Thunderbirds takeoff for aerial demonstration; autograph session for members of the Thunderbirds team; hand to hand combat demonstration; and a talent show to be performed by members of the Seymour Johnson base theatrical group.

Last year more than 20,000 spectators attended the Seymour Johnson open house, and officials expect an even larger turn-out this year.

FOUR MEMBERS OF THE 'GOLDEN KNIGHT' — Parachute Team are pictured as they fall from 13,000 feet, maneuvering their bodies into a tight diamond formation. Smoke marks their position in the sky to aid spectators on the ground to follow their course of fall.

Mrs. Kathleen Brooks of Canterbury, England, and Lady Rosalie Glynn Gryllis Mander of "Wightwick Manor", Wolverhampton, England, will speak at dinner meetings to be held at the Greenville Golf and Country Club March 31 and April 22.

Both speakers will address the Northeastern N.C. Branch of the ESU at Roanoke Rapids while in Eastern North Carolina. Mrs. Brooks will also speak at the Duke University Chapel in Durham April 4.

Mrs. Brooks is an experienced lecturer and an official guide at the world famous Canterbury Cathedral. She has lectured on the cathedral at Auburn University and elsewhere in the United States. HOME HEATING TERMS DEFINED

Heating your home is the major energy-using job you do all year. It is also the most productive area for your energy conservation activities. To do this properly you need to know the meaning of several heating terms, formerly used almost exclusively by technical people. Here's a brief explanation of these home heating terms:

BTU (British thermal unit): A measure of heat. A BTU is the amount of heat necessary to raise the temperature of 1 pound of water 1 degree Fahrenheit. This is roughly the amount of heat produced by burning a wooden kitchen match.

Convection heating: A form of heating in which heat is distributed by the natural movement of room air as warm air rises.

Degree days: This is a measure of the severity of winter weather. The number of degree days for each winter day is determined by subtracting the mean temperature for the day from 65 degrees Fahrenheit. If the mean is 50 degrees, for example, the degree days of that particular day would be 15. The number of degree days in a year determines the annual heating requirements of a home.

Heat loss: The amount of heat that a home loses to the outdoors through walls, ceilings, windows, etc., when the outdoor temperature is lower than the indoor temperature. This represents the amount of heat that must be added to a home by its heating system.

Hydronic heating: A type of heating in which heat is circulated through the house in the form of hot water or steam.

Kilowatthour (KWH): A measure of the use of electric energy equal to 1,000 watts of electricity used steadily for one hour. One KWH will power a 100-watt light bulb for ten hours.

R-Value: A measure of insulating quality. The higher the R-Value, the better the insulation and the less heat paid for and lost.

Radiant heating: A kind of heating that operates as the sun does by transferring heat directly to people and objects without using an intermediary, such as air or water, to carry it.

Dare Stones: Hoax Or Clue To The Lost Colony?

By CHARLES S. TAYLOR

GAINESVILLE, GA. (UPI) — A pile of stones with crude messages in Elizabethan English chiseled into them lie in a musty basement at Brenau College, slowly deteriorating beneath a pile of old lawn mower parts and other assorted junk.

The messages on the stones — telling a harrowing story of flight, illness and death at the hands of Indians — purportedly explain what happened to Sir Walter Raleigh's Lost Colony on Roanoke Island, N.C., 390 years ago.

Are the stones a clue to one of America's greatest historical mysteries? Or are they a gigantic hoax?

Despite examination by many scholars and historians, that question apparently has never been conclusively answered.

Except for one stone, Brenau College officials seemingly are not interested in preserving them. They lie scattered haphazardly in the basement of a dormitory, Oglesby Hall, also used to store maintenance equipment. Some have been broken, others chipped.

"I could not find one student on campus who had ever heard of them," said Jim Brewer, Brenau public information director. "Only three or four faculty members knew they were here."

The first stone found, which Brewer said many scholars believe may be genuine, is kept in a glass case in the college's locked archives room.

Dean of Students Eleanor Rigney said no recent efforts have been made to authenticate them. "We don't have the financial resources."

In 1937, L.E. Hammond of California was on vacation in North Carolina. He stopped his car near the Chowan River — about 50 miles from the original site of the Lost Colony — to stretch his legs and look for hickory nuts. According to news accounts, he stumbled across a rock carved with Elizabethan writing. He took the stone to Emory University in Atlanta where Dr. Haywood Pearce Jr. helped to decipher it.

On the smooth side of the quartz stone, under a crude cross, was written "Ananias Dare & Virginia went hence into heaven 1591."

Near the bottom of the stone was carved "Anye Englishman shew John White Govr Via."

The other side of the stone told of the colonists' hardships, the death of Virginia and her father, Ananias, at the hands of Indians.

The fate of the Lost Colony has long intrigued scholars. The colonists sailed from England in three ships on May 8, 1587. John White was appointed governor. They arrived off Hatteras on July 22. Eleanor Dare, the daughter of Gov. White, gave birth to the first English child born in America on Aug. 18, 1587. She was christened Virginia after the new colony.

On Aug. 27, White returned to England for supplies. But when he arrived in November, the English were at war with Spain. All ships were pressed into war service. White's return was delayed nearly three years.

When he returned in August, 1590, there was no trace of the colony. The only clue was the word "Croatoan", the name of a nearby island, carved on a tree. None of the settlers was ever seen by white men again.

Pearce, his sense of history stirred, believed there might be more such stones and offered a $500 reward for any found. The offer brought a definite response. In succeeding years 48 stones, supposedly found along the Saluda River in South Carolina and the Chattahoochee River in North Georgia, were brought to Pearce.

They told a story of 61 of the 117 colonists fleeing from Roanoke Island. Of these, according to the stones, all but seven were killed by Indians or died of illness in Carolina.

Eleanor Dare left a message begging her father to punish the Indians of the east who had attacked them but to show mercy to the Indians of the west.

Eleanor, the messages related, traveled south with six other survivors, in the company of four friendly Indians. They settled peaceably with a friendly tribe in Nacoochee Valley on the Chattahoochee River in North Georgia and Eleanor married an Indian chief. She lived with him in a cave and bore him a daughter, Agnes. Eleanor, according to the stones, died after a sudden illness in 1599.

Professor Pearce, apparently made wary by so many stones turning up with Elizabethan writing on them, sent out a call to historians to examine them. Some 30 to 40 responded.

On October 19, 1940, Dr. S.E. Morison, president of the American Antiquarian Society, issued a statement saying "the preponderance of evidence points to the authenticity of the Dare stones." Other historians and geologists agreed. They said the marks on the stones were not made by modern stone-cutting tools, slow-growing lichen was growing on some of the stones, and there were no glaring errors in the Elizabethan writing. But they recommended additional research.

Pearce, whose father was president of Brenau College, took the stones there. They were put on exhibit in the Brenau museum and at the American Schools Association in New York.

But there was skepticism. There were too many stones. They had turned up quite suddenly after 350 years. There was a lack of corroborative evidence in the discovery of the stones in the majority of cases. No one knew how the stones had been carved.

Newspapers and magazines conducted their own investigations and came to the conclusion the stones were fakes. They were taken off display at Brenau.

"Since 1941," said Brewer, "we have had only five inquiries about them."

"They obviously were a hoax," says James G. Lester, who was a geology professor at Emory University when the stones were found. Lester, now retired, said he examined the stones soon after they were found. "There's no question but they are fakes," he said. "The lettering on the first stone was sand-blasted," he said, noting this technique did not exist until modern times.

Brenau College officials have no plans for the stones other than to hang onto them, said Brewer, "for whatever scientific value they may have."

Decision To Help Others

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — As he lay suffering in a hospital bed from bladder cancer, Ben White decided "some kind of meaning could be made out of this whole business if I could help others avoid going through what I had gone through."

"My attitude toward life has changed quite a bit," said the assistant head of North Carolina State University's English department. "A lot of things that used to worry me seem rather trivial now."

Before leaving the hospital after the second operation, White made his decision to help other cancer victims.

He now is a volunteer for the American Cancer Society and is involved with the Raleigh chapter of the United Ostomy Association. Its members include people with conditions necessitating artificial openings for the kidneys or bowels.

"When I talk to people, I try to keep very calm and quiet and see if they have any questions," White said. "I explain I had an operation. They can see that I am healthy and have no unsightly bulges."

SNACK CROP

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Popcorn is expected to remain an inexpensive snack food this year, thanks to a record crop of 602 million pounds in 1976. That's seven per cent greater than the previous high set in 1970, says the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Hampshire College Settled On Sports Just For Fun

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — One wintry afternoon, 30 students from Hampshire College did something they always wanted to do once, but perhaps not twice.

They set out into the rural Connecticut Valley to the Sunderland Cave, not far from this college town in western Massachusetts.

They hiked up steep snowbanks, explored the cave's ice sculpture, then slid down the snow faces.

Only seven years old, Hampshire College — enrollment 1,225, faculty 124, tuition $4,350 — opted for sports for fun instead of competition. It attempts to relate outdoor recreation to academics. A blend of body and mind.

One such blend is a course called "Everything You Always Wanted to Do Once — but Perhaps Not Twice." The class meets Friday afternoons and does something different on each outing. Activities include rock climbing, cross-country skiing, winter camping and canoeing.

"The catch is to attract beginners who just want to try something once to see if they like it," says Carol Fisher, one of a half-dozen instructors in the program.

Miss Fisher is a 1975 graduate of the University of Montana, where she majored in environmental biology and botany. She also is the North American women's wildwater kayak champion.

For a January term course, she and a dozen students ran 350 miles of the Suwannee and Peace Rivers and the Everglades of Georgia and Florida in kayaks. They camped in the swamps. By using a school van and packing their food, the month-long trip cost each student $148.

Another course, "Women In The Wilderness," included a month-long trek into New Mexico mountains and canyons. It was led by instructor Joy Hardin, 29.

"It is a self-discovery of some of the images that are fearful to women," says Miss Hardin. "The wilderness is assumed to be a man's territory. It is a chance for them to have no men to depend on."

The outdoors program extends to non-students working at the college and to high school students from broken homes.

Deborah Cole, 24, came from Syracuse, N.Y., to work as a secretary at Hampshire. Now she is a part-time secretary and part-time instructor in rock climbing.

"It was a sport I was good at immediately," she recalls. "It didn't require being part of a team. It was something personal. I ended up wanting to see how excited I could get other beginners."

Dave Roberts, 33, professor of literature and a mountaineer, helped set up the outdoors program in 1970 with 250 students, a $10,000 budget and an aim to "join the academic side to recreational outdoors."

He teaches "The Literature of Great Expectations," in which students simulate experiences of expeditions recorded in literature, from Cortes in the 16th century to the present.

"This," says Roberts, "lends itself better to intellectual reflection than tackle football. Our ideas are away from the traditional physical education."

Three years ago, the college opened a $1.8 million indoor recreation center. It contains a glassed-in pool and, since there are no intercollegiate swim teams, the college offers more than 30 hours of recreational swimming per week.

The college also has eight all-weather surface tennis courts and four indoor courts. There are outdoor playing fields for volleyball, soccer, softball and Frisbee. Several miles of cross-country ski trails surround the 550 acres of college campus.

The annual budget for the sports and outdoors program is $123,000, about 1.5 per cent of the total college budget.

If Hampshire's recreational program is unusual, so is its academic program. Classes are not mandatory. There are no specific course requirements. No grades are given.

There is no such thing as a freshman or a senior. Students pass through Divisions I, II and III while working toward a Bachelor of Arts degree in one of four schools — humanities and arts, language and communication, social science and natural science.

Virginia T. Potsubay, associate director of admissions, says students are selected on the basis of maturity, independence and creativity. Aptitude tests don't count and about two out of three students who apply are accepted. Although it is loosely structured, she says, "This is a very academic place. Those who come here want to learn. The recreational program is part of their life."

To Study In Costa Rica

Seventeen students at East Carolina University are preparing for a semester of study at the Universidad Nacional in Heredia, Costa Rica. The semester will begin July 26 end Nov. 4.

During their four months in Costa Rica, the students will enroll in special courses in the geography of Mexico and Central America, tropical biology, Central American history, Costa Rican health and welfare, field studies in Central American, and conversational Spanish.

All courses will be taught in English, and those students already possessing some command of the Spanish language will enroll in regular courses at the Universidad Nacional.

According to Dr. Robert Cramer of the ECU Department of Geography, coordinator of the Costa Rican program, the students will take field trips during the semester to study the physical, cultural and economic conditions of Costa Rica, Panama and Guatemala. Most participants will live with Costa Rican families in order to introduce them to the customs and lifestyles of the region.

Foreign Policy Expert Will Be ECU Speaker

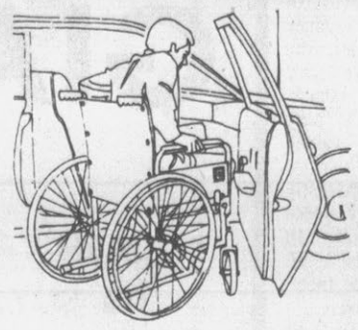

Harlan Cleveland, former advisor to Presidents Kennedy and Johnson and noted expert on U.S. foreign policy, will speak at East Carolina University Friday, March 25.

Cleveland will discuss recent foreign policy issues at 5:15 p.m. in the Mendenhall Student Center Theatre. The program is free and open to the public.

During the weekend, Cleveland will be a featured guest at the intercollegiate Model United Nations Security Council to be hosted by ECU. Student delegates from 20 campuses in the eastern U.S. are expected to attend.

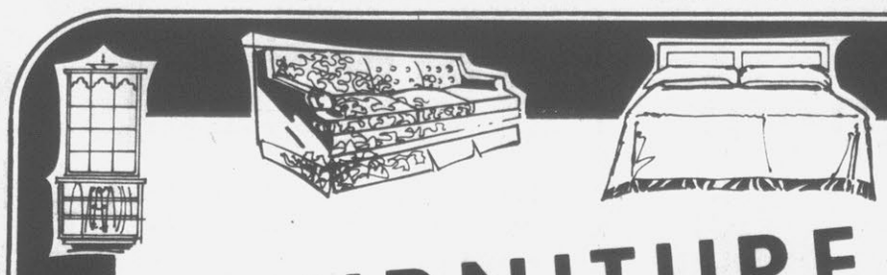

Since 1974 Cleveland has been director of Princeton University's Aspen Program in International Affairs, the latest in a series of careers which have included public executive, diplomat, educator and author.

Considerable Change In N.C. Black Panther Image

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Nelson Malloy is a Black Panther but he wears a pinstriped suit instead of the black beret and jacket that became the uniform of the Panthers in the late 1960s and early 1970s.

And instead of toting a rifle and espousing the Panther philosophy of self defense against police, Malloy runs a free ambulance service for the organization.

The image of the Black Panther chapter here has changed considerably in the past five years, moving from militancy to relatively quiet community involvement. Local Panthers assert that they have been emphasizing community work since the chapter was formed in 1969 but they acknowledge their early public image ignored much of that work.

"We've worked to create this particular image," said Malloy, a 30-year-old college dropout who has been in the local chapter since its beginning.

"We had to show people we were not murderers or hoodlums."

The Panthers caused quite a stir here in years past, including two armed confrontations with local police and allegations of surveillance by the FBI. The local chapter kept pace with the party's headquarters in Oakland, Calif., but in recent times has suffered from internal strife and a decrease in membership.

Oakland headquarters refuses to say how many Panther chapters are left across the country and whether membership has seriously declined, but Malloy said in an interview that the Winston-Salem chapter is the only one left in North Carolina and, as far as he knows, the only one left in the Southeast.

As for membership, Malloy follows the party line and declines to give specific numbers.

"There aren't a lot of us, that's the best way I can answer that," he said. "Our strength lies in getting people to volunteer their time."

Local headquarters is a rambling old two-story house planted on the fringe of the city's industrial district. Most days, the office is manned by a couple of young women who answer the phone and take calls for the Panther ambulance service.

The signs of militancy are few — a snarling panther on a sign out front and a poster or two inside. But there is also a picture of Martin Luther King Jr.

The ties to Oakland remain: chapter coordinator Charles Zollicoffer was at national headquarters recently for conferences. But the rhetoric is serene: the police are no longer called pigs.

"The police are not as overt in things they do now," Malloy said. "We haven't had a lot of hassles with them."

That was not the case a few years ago.

In May, 1970, local Panthers armed themselves and held police in a standoff to prevent a poor black woman from being evicted.

On Jan. 12, 1971, a stolen meat truck was found in front of Panther headquarters, police surrounded the place and shots were exchanged.

During the incident, Police Maj. Tom Surratt, who is now police chief, confronted Larry Little, who was then party coordinator.

Little was quoted in one account as saying to Surratt: "Get away from me. I don't want to talk to no pigs."

Little, who left the party last year, has lost one race for alderman by a handful of votes and plans to run again this year.

Local and federal officials are reluctant to comment on the chapter, even to assess the change in its image.

Both Surratt and Justus Tucker, who was police chief during the two confrontations, declined to comment.

An FBI spokesman also declined, citing pending lawsuits against the agency filed by the Panthers.

But one federal official offered the view that the Panthers, like other militant organizations, lost the targets of the protest through changes in the society.

"There aren't many of the things they protested, so what do they do?"

The Panthers initiated their free ambulance service in 1974 and it has been an on-and-off proposition since, relying upon grants to stay in operation. They say they have also set up blood pressure and health clinics and hope to establish legal aid programs.

The grants are from private organizations, the largest being from the National Episcopal Church.

Instead of aiming their efforts against the political establishment, the Panthers are going against problems that have festered in the black community.

"We need to work with unemployment and the drug problem," Malloy said.

Even with a dwindling membership, the chapter has been kept alive by support from the black community, he said. Support has come from strange places — a local Ku Klux Klan leader publicly supported the Panthers' ambulance service, saying it would handle people who otherwise would be charging ambulance trips to welfare.

As for the future of the local chapter, Panther officials tie it to the party's philosophy instead of a membership and money problems.

"We believe that everything is in a constant state of change," Malloy said.

"We are subject to change like everything else, so the possibility exists that our goals may be fulfilled and it may no longer be necessary to have a party."

77-78 Artists Series Announced

Six programs will be featured in the 1977-78 Artists Series at East Carolina University sponsored by the ECU Student Union Artists Series Committee. The programs cover the time span from September 1977 to April 1978. All performances listed will be eight o'clock evening performances.

The schedule of individuals, groups, and orchestras scheduled to appear in the Artists Series is:

— September 21 — Ruth Laredo, pianist. Ms. Laredo has been soloist with many major U.S. orchestras.

— October 24 — Shinichi Suzuki's Talent Education Tour — Young Japanese students will perform, showing the remarkable success Suzuki has had in teaching very young children to play the violin.

— February 16 — Jean-Pierre Rampal, flutist, and Robert Veyron-Lacroix, harpsichordist, in a program of music of the 18th century.

— February 28 — The Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra, under the direction of Michael Tilson Thomas. One of America's leading symphonic orchestras.

— March 22 — The Norman Luboff Choir, in a program ranging from a Bach chorale to a Beatle tune.

— The Canadian Brass — A group composed of two trumpets, one French horn, a trombone and a tuba, playing music for brass as well as Joplin rags and Bach fugues and fantasies.

Season tickets for the six performances are priced at $15, and are available from: ECU Central Ticket Office, Mendenhall Student Center, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C. 27834, or by phone, 757-6611, extension 266.

The number of season tickets is limited, and sales will be discontinued when that number is reached.

SHINICHI SUZUKI — and a circle of his young students are shown on the grounds of the Imperial Palace in Tokyo. The young performers who have learned to play the violin by the Suzuki method will be at ECU in concert on United Nations Day, October 24. Tickets for this and five other programs in the 1977-78 Artists Series are now on sale at $15 for the six events.

Community Chorus Concert On March 27

Mozart's Coronation Mass in C Major is the feature work to be performed in the annual spring concert of the Greenville Community Chorus. The event will take place at 3 p.m., Sunday, March 27 in Memorial Baptist Church.

Soloists for the Coronation Mass are Patricia Hiss, soprano; Dianne Pickett, contralto; Steve Wallence, tenor; and Dr. Clyde Hiss, bass.

Other works to be performed in the spring concert are Randell Thompson's Alleluia; and three compositions by Giovanni Palestrina — O Bone Jesu, Gloria Patri, and Dies Sanctificatus.

Joe Goodwin is organist, and the program will also have a 16 piece orchestra composed of volunteers from the faculty and student body of the East Carolina University School of Music.

The Greenville Community Chorus is now a non-profit, tax-exempt organization chartered by the State of North Carolina. Tax-exempt contributions — from the community in support of the chorus will be most welcome. The group will be eligible to apply through the N.C. Arts Council for a grant in April, and plans for application are now in process.

Following the March 27 spring concert, the chorus will begin working on a Sunday-in-the-Park Concert for a summer performance date.

Beverly Pepper To Lecture On March 29

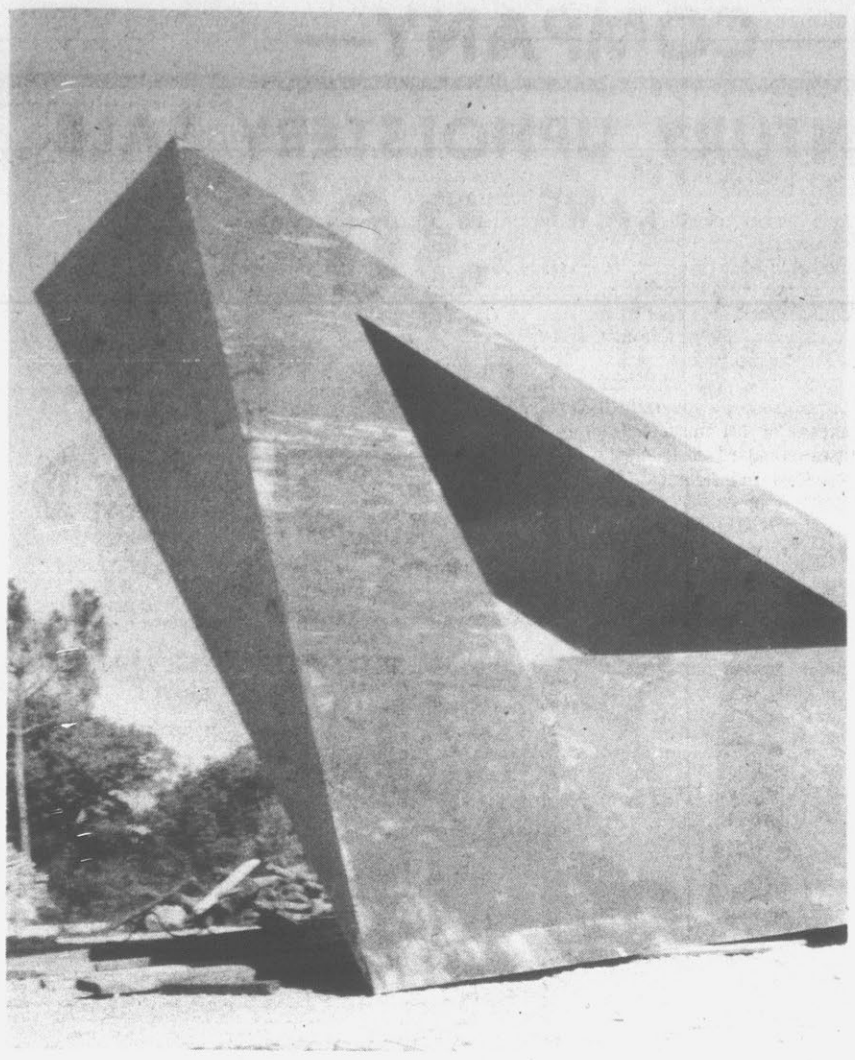

Sculptor Beverly Pepper, well-known for her sculpture characterized by its large triangular and pyramidal forms, will visit East Carolina University on Tuesday, March 29. She will give an illustrated lecture at 8 p.m. in the Mendenhall Student Center Theater.

Ms. Pepper will speak on contemporary issues in modern sculpture, and will show color slides of her work, most of which is designed for permanent outdoor display. Her appearance here follows similar presentations at Harvard University and the University of Georgia. Earlier this month, a show of her work opened at the Seattle Museum.

Among her most notable outdoor sculptures is a 300-foot "Land Canal and Hillside" in Dalas, designed to be viewed from passing automobiles. It is landscaped with sod and grass planting.

Her work is in the permanent collections of Florence (Italy), Stockholm, Sydney and Vienna, as well as in many U.S. cities.

The lecture of Ms. Pepper is sponsored by the ECU School of Art and the ECU Student Government Association.

Mall Art Show On Saturday

Plans are shaping up for a larger-than-expected turn out of artists and craftsmen for the Satur day, March 27 "Starving Artists" event to take place on both sections of the Downtown Mall.

Sponsored by the Downtown Greenville Association, the "Starving Artists" program is designed to serve a three-fold purpose — to attract more people to the downtown area; to stimulate a rapport between local artists and the public; and to provide people wishing to own an original work of art with an opportunity to do so at a nominal cost.

About 25 local artists have been accepted by the jury to show in this outdoor mini-festival which will begin at 10 a.m. and continue until late afternoon hours. Included are potters, painters, sculptors, leather craftsmen, fabric craftsmen, jewelers, and artists working in several other media. Each participant will have items for sale and will also give periodic demonstrations of the techniques of their particular form of art.

In addition, other activities will be part of the scene, including a poet reading his work with visual accompaniment.

All works in the "Starving Artists" show will be priced at $25 or less. There are no entry fees or commissions involved for the artists and craftsmen taking part.

The public is invited to attend and to meet the artists and craftsmen in this event, which is tentatively planned to be an annual offering by members of the Downtown Greenville Association. Rain date is Monday, March 28.

3 Seniors Art Show

"Transition," an exhibition of art by three seniors in the East Carolina University School of Art, will be on view in the Kate Lewis Gallery, Whichard Building at Wright Circle, from March 21 to April 1.

James Paul Jarvis of Durham, Cheryl Diehl of Rockville, Md., and Rick Sheppard of Monroe are the three whose work is being shown.

Among the works being exhibited are multi-media illustrations, ink drawings, acrylic paintings, silkscreen prints, photographs, and examples of commercial art.

The show is open each weekday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. There is no admission fee and the public is invited to see the show.

Reception Today

A reception is being held from 3 to 5 p.m. today at the Greenville Art Center marking the opening of the art exhibit by students in Greenville schools, grades kindergarten through six.

This is the second segment of city and county schools children's art show at the center, with others to follow.

The public is invited to attend the reception and to view the art work of the young students.

Vacancies In Class

Six vacancies are still open for the children's art classes to begin on Wednesday, March 23, at the Greenville Art Center. The classes, which will run for an eight week period, cost $25 per student. The hours are from 3 to 4 p.m. each Wednesday.

For further information, contact Mrs. Emmy Whitehead at 758-0612 any time afternoon. Ms. Whitehead is the instructor for the children's classes.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By MEREDITH FOLTZ

Since spring is a season for term papers, junior and senior high school students may be interested in three new young adult books at the Sheppard Library.

In THE STATESMANSHIP OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Olivia Coolidge completes a portrait begun in The Apprenticeship of Abraham Lincoln. The new book follows the sixteenth president from his first inauguration in 1861 to his death in 1865. Although Collidge uses "statesmanship" in the title of her book, she shows that the popular image of Lincoln as a revered statesman developed only after his assassination. His contemporaries considered him not a genius but a politician, chiefly interested in advancing his party's fortunes. During his years as a wartime president, Lincoln was criticized for his political maneuvering, his military strategy, and his wife's extravagance. In describing the problems of the Lincoln administration, Olivia Coolidge sets straight our image of Lincoln as a perfect president without discounting the strengths which made him a great president.

As Lincoln's name is associated with war, so Alfred Nobel's name is associated with peace, specifically the Nobel Peace Prize. Nobel, however, developed dynamite and thereby "probably did more than any other single human being to make possible the horrors of prenuclear warfare." CHAMPIONS OF PEACE, by Tony Gray, is about Nobel, a wealthy nineteenth-century Swedish expolsives manufacturer; the Peace Prize, one of five prizes established by Nobel's will; and the annual winners of the prize through 1974. The greater part of the book is taken up in brief biographies of the winners (Laureates), in chronological order. Students casting about for research topics may find some good ideas in the biographies of Nobel and the Laureates and in Gray's decade-by-decade summaries of major twentieth-century events.

Another history/biography, THE SHAH OF IRAN: THE MAN AND HIS LAND by I. G. Edmonds, may interest readers studying such current problems as world oil resources and United States-Middle East relations. The Shah, in power since 1941, sees himself as the divinely-inspired leader who can restore to modern Iran the prospertiy of ancient Persia.

April Poetry Festival Features Samuel Hazo

Samuel Hazo, well-known poet and writer, will highlight the Spring Poetry Festival to be held in Greenville on April 29 and 30. The festival will bring both professional and amateur poets together for seminars and for individual consultations in the writing of poetry.

Hazo, who has been nominated for the National Book Award, is the author of several volumes of poetry, and has sold the film rights of a novelette to Eli Wallach. Currently, Hazo is director of the International Poetry Forum at Pittsburgh.

His lecture will be held at 8 p.m., April 29, in the Allied Health Building auditorium.

Also scheduled to conduct seminars in various aspects of writing and publishing poetry will be Calvin Atwood of the University of North Carolina, currently president of the North Carolina Poetry Society; Sam Ragan, long an active participant in North Carolina arts and editor of The Pilot newspaper, Southern Pines; Ruby Shackleford, creative writing teacher at Atlantic Christian College, Wilson; Margaret Boothe, director of the Goldsboro Arts Council; Peter Makuck, creative writing teacher at East Carolina University and a poet with many published poems to his credit; Charlene Whisnant Swansea of Red Clay Books, currently in charge of the Mecklenberg Poetry in the Schools Program; Gerda Nischan, Greenville poet who has read at a number of colleges in the Southeast; and James B. Thompson, editor.

Seminars will be held between the hours of 1 to 4 p.m. on Friday, April 29 and from 9 a.m. to noon on Saturday, April 30. Hazo's lecture will be preceded by a banquet and cocktail hour at the Ramada Inn.

All of the participants will have designated times to meet on an individual basis with anyone wanting personal criticism or advice on his poetry.

Persons interested in attending this poetry festival are to write for registration forms to: Spring Poetry Festival, Department of English, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C., 27834, or telephone Vernon Ward, 757-6041.

Pulitzer Prize Poet Lecturing At Kinston

Author Gwendolyn Brooks is to visit Kinston on Tuesday, March 22 and is scheduled to give a public reading from her works at 8 p.m. at the Lenoir Community College auditorium.

There will be no admission charge for the event and the public is invited to attend.

Minister Says 36 MIA's Now Living In VN

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A North Carolina Methodist minister, whose son still is listed as missing in action, says Vietamese officials told him 36 Americans are voluntarily living in the Asian country.

The Rev. Charles Jerome Honeycutt of Morehead City told the News and Observer of Raleigh that he talked with Vietnamese officials last September in Paris as a delegate from the World Methodist Conference.

A top Vietnamese embassy official gave him a list of 12 American MIAs whose bodies were still in Vietnam, Honeycutt said, and the names were subsequently made public.

Honeycutt said they were the same bodies that were handed over Friday to President Carter's special MIA Commission, which will return the caskets to the U.S.

Honeycutt's son, Air Force Maj. Charles Jerome Honeycutt, Jr., was shot down over North Vietnam on Nov. 10, 1967, he said, adding he does not expect news soon on his son's fate.

Japanese Searching Islands For Unaccounted WWII Dead

By GARY W. CLARK
Associated Press Writer

SAIPAN, Mariana Islands (AP) — While the bodies of 12 U.S. pilots killed in Vietnam are being flown home, Japanese volunteers still scour this Pacific island for bodies of World War II dead.

Of the 40,000 to 50,000 Japanese soldiers and dependents believed to have died here over 30 years ago, perhaps only half have been found, said Dan E. Akimoto, director of general administration for the Northern Mariana Islands, part of the American Trust Territories.

"It is a great pain to them that a person is lying neglected in a jungle of Saipan," he said.

Because of that, Akimoto, a Hawaiian-Japanese who has been working for some 20 years in the Trust Territories, east of the Philippines in the island chain reaching toward Japan, knows there will be future missions from Japan.

The goals of the Japanese missions are not unlike those of the U.S. presidential commission that went to Hanoi this week. They want an accounting and they want their own returned to their homeland.

The U.S. battle to capture Saipan in July 1944 was one of the bloodiest battles of the American push to regain control of the Pacific.

Many of the remains have been found at the base of a rugged outcrop called Banzai Cliff. Akimoto said those were the soldiers who preferred death to surrender.

The remains of more than 1,000 bodies were recovered during the most recent mission, which ended last week. Many were found in the dense jungle and caves just as they had fallen.

Other reminders of the island's violent past include live shells, military equipment and rusted weapons still littering the jungle.

The bones were cremated in a special ceremony at the Japanese Peace Memorial, adjacent to an old Japanese command post. Last Sunday, a memorial service was held and small gifts of rice cake and sake were left behind.

Drama Set At St. Paul's

John Stuart Anderson of England will give a solo dramatic presentation Wednesday at St. Paul Episcopal Church.

"The Record of John," a passion play from the Fourth Gospel, will begin at 7:30 p.m. Anderson has devised the presentation different from the usual recital or reading. He has helped to revive the old art of the story-teller.

Performances have been given throughout Britain, Europe and he is currently fulfilling his 26th United States tour. Apart from 30 British cathedrals, Anderson has appeared twice at the National Cathedral, Washington, D. C., Shakespeare Festival Theatre, Stratford, Ontario, Royal Festival Hall, London, church, universities and colleges as well as on television on both sides of the Atlantic.

He will join Edwards in a duet from Donizetti's opera, L'Elixir d'Amore.

For his program, he will sing songs from Schumann's Dichterliebe, Debussy's Fete Galantes I, A Young Man's Exhortation by Finzi.

49ers, Tar Heels Move On To Atlanta

Charlotte Stuns Michigan, 75-68

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Cornbread Maxwell, 6-foot-8 and silky-smooth, scored 25 points, dominated the backboards and brought the basketball upcourt against the press to lead North Carolina-Charlotte past top-ranked Michigan 75-68 Saturday for the NCAA Mideast championship.

Maxwell and forward Lou Massey, the two top scorers in this school's 12-year basketball history, provided the spark that allowed UNC-Charlotte to break away from Michigan with five minutes remaining in the game.

Massey, who scored 19 points, hit two free throws with 5:01 remaining to put Charlotte ahead 65-61. Then guard Melvin Watkins hit a layup and with four minutes remaining and 6761 lead, Charlotte went into a stall.

Maxwell hit two free throws when Michigan guard Steve Grote committed his fifth foul to make it 69-61. Then freshman guard Chad Kisch hit a layup and two free throws and Charlotte led 73-61 with 2:34 remaining.

That sealed the fate of the heavily favored Wolverines, gave 17th-ranked UNC-Charlotte its second upset in two NCAA playoff games and sent the 49ers to the national semifinals next week in Atlanta.

Michigan ran off eight points in the final two minutes while Charlotte scored only two points, but the Wolverines had too much to make up.

The victory sends Charlotte, 28-3, against seventh-ranked Marquette in next Saturday's semifinals and places the 49ers within two games of completing one of the most amazing Cinderella stories in any college basketball season. Michigan, champions of the Big Ten, finished its season 26-4.

Charlotte dominated the first half and took a 40-27 lead into the final 20 minutes.

But for the next 10 minutes, Michigan's pressing defense, led by All-American guard Ricky Green, forced the 49ers into numerous turnovers.

Green, who led the Wolverines with 20 points, made three of his five steals in a three-minute stretch and center Phil Hubbard scored eight points in the same period, including the basket that gave Michigan a 49-48 lead with 12:08 left.

Following a 50-50 tie, Massey hit a 10-foot turnaround jump shot that gave Charlotte the lead for keeps.

Except for that first part of the second half, the 49ers remained poised and in control.

UNC Eases Past Kentucky, 79-72

By GORDON BEARD
AP Sports Writer

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — North Carolina was forced to play all but one minute of the second half without All-American guard Phil Ford, but senior John Kuester calmly directed the Tar Heels to a 79-72 victory over Kentucky Saturday in the championship basketball game of the NCAA East Regionals.

It was a familiar situation in recent weeks for the Tar Heels. They played the title game without center Tommy LaGarde, who has a knee injury which requires surgery, and Walter Davis played with a fractured finger.

But Kuester directed the four-corner offense over the final 15 minutes after Kentucky rallied from a 15-point deficit and closed to within 59-53.

"The important thing is we kept our poise," said Kuester. "Phil is the finest guard in the nation. It's too bad we had to go without him."

In addition to a painful hyperextended right elbow, suffered in Thursday's semifinal game, Ford was charged with his fourth personal foul in the opening minute of the second half. He went to the bench and never returned, telling coach Dean Smith he didn't think he could shoot free throws because of the injury.

It was his free throws with two seconds left which had given North Carolina its regional semifinal victory over Notre Dame.

The rest of the Tar Heels had no trouble from the foul line against Kentucky. They connected on 33 of 36 attempts, including 16 straight in the second half and their last 21 in a row.

Kuester missed only one of 14 free throws, dropping in four straight in the final 72 seconds after Kentucky pulled to within 71-70. The 6-foot-3 guard scored eight of his 19 points in the final 5½ minutes for the fifthranked Tar Heels, champions of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Smith said he would not have gone to the four-corner offense as early as he did had Ford been in the lineup. "This game wasn't strategy. It was those guys out there doing what they had to do."

Coach Joe Hall of Kentucky said the Tar Heels started the four corners about five minutes earlier than he expected. "We did about what we hoped we could against the four corners," he said.

Despite his limited action, Ford contributed five assists to the North Carolina attack. He held an ice bag to his elbow during the second half, but said he expected to be ready for next week's national semifinals.

The Tar Heels, who won the East Regional final for the fifth time in six tries, opened up a 48-33 lead in the first half and were on top 53-41 at intermission. Senior Walter Davis scored 15 of his 21 points in the opening half.

But the Wildcats, co-champions of the Southeastern Conference, came storming back in the second half behind Jack Givens, who sank eight of 11 shots in the final 20 minutes and finished with 26 points.

Kentucky, despite a distinct height advantage, outrebounded North Carolina only 27-26, and the Tar Heels got good games out of freshmen centers Rich Yonakor and Steve Krafcisin. Each scored eight points, with Krafcisin dropping in four pressure free throws in the final 36 seconds.

Rick Robey scored 15 points for Kentucky before fouling out with 12 seconds remaining after playing only 23 minutes. Mike Phillips, like Robey, a 6-foot-10 giant, contributed 12 points.

Las Vegas Wins West Regional

By VERN ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Down 52-51 at the half, Nevada-Las Vegas Coach Jerry Tarkanian scolded his players in the dressing room and said: "I told the kids I was going to Atlanta and it would be nice if they were to come with me."

They will all make the trip together, thanks to UNLV's explosion of 56 points in the second half Saturday afternoon, an effort that propelled the Rebels to a 107-90 victory over Idaho State and the NCAA West Regional basketball title.

"I gave them a good scolding at halftime," Tarkanian said after the game. "The first half we played like we were in a trance. We did not play with intensity."

Though Tarkanian was not pleased with UNLV's performance, Idaho State Coach Jim Killingsworth said he was satisfied with his Big Sky Conference champion team's play.

"Idaho State won 25 games this year. I'm satisfied. The people in Idaho are happy. And, after all, that's where my salary comes from," Killingsworth said.

Killingsworth said his team cannot play one-on-one against a team like UNLV. "We have to play team defense. We did that in the first half, but our failure to do so in the second cost us the game.

"We became somewhat impatient in the second half. When I wanted to take 10-or 15 foot jump shots, some of the kids were taking them from 30 feet," he said.

East Carolina Loses Two Games To N.C. State

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

East Carolina lost both ends of a doubleheader with N. C. State yesterday, dropping a 10-inning pitchers' battle 1-0 in the first game and getting bombed in the second, 9-2.

The Pirates' record fell to 5-4 with the two losses three of those being to the Wolfpack. Last Saturday the Bucs split a doubleheader against N. C. State in Raleigh.

Pirate pitcher Pete Conaty and his Wolfpack counterpart, John Skinner, put on quite a show in the first contest. Skinner gave up only one hit in nine innings while Conaty went nine and a third innings, scattering seven State hits and coming up with 14 strikeouts.

N. C. State came up with an unearned run in the top of the tenth inning to win it as second baseman Chuck Harmon, who got to first on an error by ECU shortstop Billy Best, stole second and came home on catcher Billy Port's single to left field.

For the Pirates, it was a case of not being able to come up with a hit at the right time, as they left seven men stranded on base.

Conaty fanned three straight in the top of the first and second baseman Pete Paradossi led off with a walk in ECU's half of the inning. He was out at second, however, on Eddie Gates' fielders choice. Gates moved to second as Sonny Wooten walked, but Bobby Supel struck out to retire the side.

State threatened in the second as Bill Smodic led off with a base hit. Dick Chappell followed with a walk, but John Isley hit into a double play and Dave Moody struck out, ending the threat.

The Wolfpack hit safely in the third innings, but didn't have a runner in scoring position until the fourth when Roy Dixon got a base hit to left, stole second and went to third on a wild pitch with one out.

Conaty came through for the Pirates, however, dealing strikeouts to Smodic and Chappell to pull the Bucs out of danger.

N. C. State again put a man on third in the seventh inning, but couldn't bring him home. Smodic hit a single up the middle and, after stealing, went to third on Chappell's sacrifice fly. Conaty again came up with a strikeout, fanning Isley to end the inning.

East Carolina had its best chance to score in the bottom of the seventh. Sonny Wooten led off for the Bucs and made it to first on an error by the State second baseman, Chuck Harmon.

Supel laid down a sacrifice to advance Harmon to second but, on Raymie Styon's single, Harmon was called out coming home. Styons went to second on the fielders choice, and Robert Brinkley walked, but Rick Koryda hit a fly ball to left field for the third out.

The Pirates had the winning run on again in the ninth as Wooten and Supel both walked with one out. But again they failed to come up with the needed hit as Styons flew out to center and Brinkley grounded to second.

In the tenth, Harmon got to first on Supel's error with two out. After stealing second, he came home as Port hit a single to left. Tom Crocker then singled for State to put runners on first and third and Tanner's walk loaded the bases. But Roy Dixon grounded to short to leave all three on base.

In the bottom of the tenth, East Carolina went down one-two-three to give the Wolfpack the win.

Skinner was the winning pitcher and Conaty the loser.

East Carolina grabbed the lead early in the afternoon's second game, but six runs in the fourth by State, four on a grand slam home run from Tanner, pretty much put things away for a 9-2 win.

Pitching was a problem for the Bucs as they went through four pitchers, giving up a total of 16 hits, with eight of the Wolfpack's nine runs being earned.

As in the first game, the Pirate hitting was less than excellent. ECU got only five hits, all of them in the first two innings of play.

The Pirates got two hits in the first, but were unable to capitalize, leaving both men stranded.

Paradossi led off with a single to left and Best then bunted safely, moving Paradossi to second. Gates struck out, however, and Wooten hit a line drive to the pitcher, who swung around and picked off Paradossi at second.

State went ahead 1-0 in the second as Harmon walked, went to third on Rick Reister's single and scored when Gerry Fieldcamp got a base hit to left.

East Carolina came back to take the lead in their half of the frame, however. Styons singled to center with one away and Robert Brinkley followed with a double, sending Styons to third.

Both runners scored when Stevens laced a single to center field. Stevens was caught stealing, however, and Scott Layden struck out.

It was all Wolfpack from then on, though, as they came through with two homers in the fourth, including Tanner's grand slam.

Chappell led off with a home run that tied the game at two. Moody then bunted safely and went to second on Harmon's single. A wild pitch advanced both runners and an error allowed Fieldcamp to get to first and load the bases.

Moody scored when Isley got an infield hit before Keith Kurdewan came on to replace Durham. He was indoctrinated early as Tanner came up to hit his homer.

State scored two more in the fifth as Moody and Harmon, who got on base by Kurdewan, scored after the pitcher was replaced by Larry Daughtridge.

Smodic singled for the Wolfpack in the sixth, advanced on Chappell's sacrifice fly and came home as Reister got a base hit for State's final run.

The Pirates threatened in the bottom of the inning when three walks loaded the bases with two away, but it was the same old story of no hitting as Brinkley struck out.

Durham was credited with the loss and Willette got the win for State.

East Carolina will be back in action Monday when the Pirates travel to North Carolina.

Marquette Defeats Wake Forest

By J. LEE CARRIER
Associated Press Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Reserve Bernard Toone keyed a second-half comeback that led Marquette University to an 82-68 victory over Wake Forest Saturday in the finals of the NCAA Midwest Regionals basketball tournament.

The Warriors now advance to the championship round in Atlanta against North Carolina-Charlotte, which shocked No. 1 Michigan 75-68 in the Mideast Regionals.

The victory also postponed the scheduled retirement of Marquette Coach Al McGuire, who had said before the game that the Warriors had to hold Wake Forest, which likes to run, to less than 70 points to win.

Toone came off the bench when center Jerome Whitehead picked up his fourth foul with 16 minutes left in the game. The 6-foot-9 forward had six straight points to put Marquette up by five, and the Warriors never trailed again.

Toone finished the game with 15 points. Marquette was led by Bo Ellis, who had 20 points, and Butch Lee with 19.

Wake Forest was led by forward Jerry Schellenberg with 19 points. Rod Griffin had 16 and guard Skip Brown had 10.

Wake Forest managed to run its fast-break offense in the first half and controlled the tempo of the game while taking a 35-31 halftime lead.

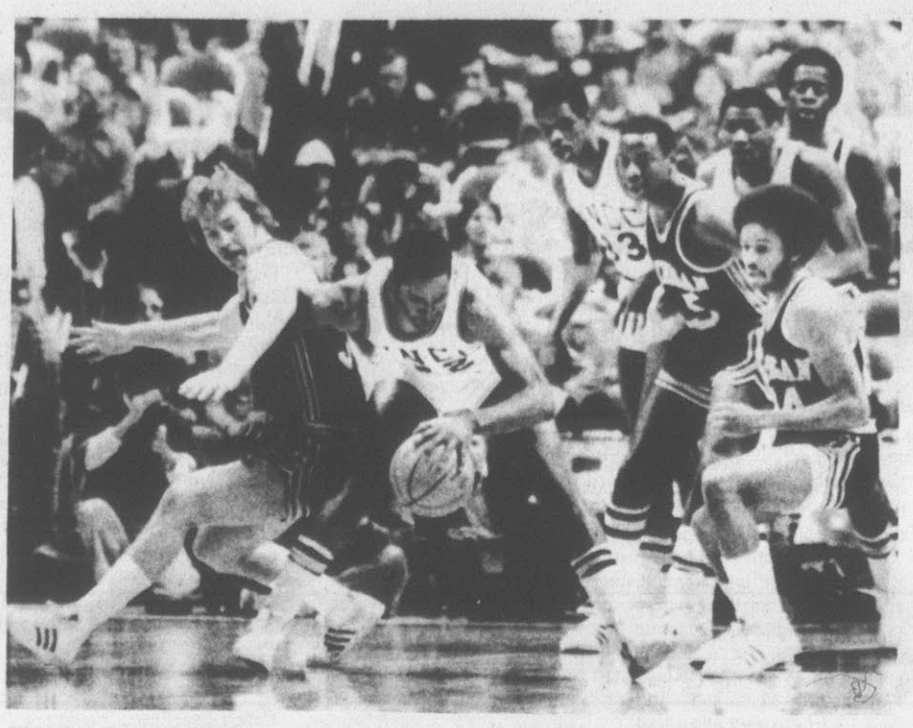

The Deacons repeatedly got inside for close shots, and when the Warriors did shut off the inside, Schellenberg would pop from about 20 feet out.

The 6-foot-6 forward was the dominant player for Wake Forest in the first half. Marquette had tied the game at 23-23 late in the half, but Schellenberg pumped in six straight points and eight of the last 10 to put the Deacons back on top.

But Marquette opened the second half in a full-court press and quickly tied the game. That's when Toone came off the bench and the closest the Deacons could get after that was five.

Toone had 14 of his points in the second half as he helped push the Warriors' shooting percentage to 63 for the half. Maquette finished the game with a percentage of 51.7 while Wake Forest shot 48 per cent in the game.

Greene Central Tops Saratoga

SARATOGA — Greene Central picked up its third win of the season, a 7-4 victory over Saratoga Central, in high school baseball yesterday.

Saratoga Central took the lead at the bottom of the first. Ralph Bailey singled, Cherry got on base on an error, and Bailey was able to score on a sacrifice.

The Greene Central Rams came back in the second, as Donald Holloman walked, Mike Chase doubled and Scott Davenport singled to bring two men home. After two outs in the bottom of the third, Shirley walked five straight to score Goff and Gardner for the Chargers, giving Saratoga a 3-2 lead.

A four-error fourth inning saw Chase, Davenport and Collyn Beamon score for the Rams. Davenport was scored by a Carraway RBI and Beamon came home on Jerry Speight's sacrifice fly. Bailey scored for the Chargers in the bottom of the fourth. Warren and Davenport scored in the sixth to give Greene a 7-5 final advantage.

The Rams are now 3-1 for the season. They will host Southern Wayne Tuesday.

Watson Tied In Players Tourney

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Tom Watson's wildly-erratic, two-over-par 74—including bogeys on two of his last three holes and an earlier double-bogey seven—was good enough to tie faltering Mike McCullough for the third-round lead Saturday in the $300,000 Tournament Players Golf Championship.

McCullough, the outsider in a field of the game's greatest players, had held a surprising lead through the first two rounds of this ambitious event. But he blew a two-stroke lead with a no-birdie, four-over-par 76 in winds much milder than the gales that raked the course Friday but still strong enough to test and torment the game's premier performers.

With McCullough and Watson having their troubles, the field bunched up and such big guns as Hale Irwin, Masters champ Ray Floyd, defending champion Jack Nicklaus and J.C. Snead wheeled into position for a shot at the title in this annual championship of the touring players.

Watson, already a two-time winner this year, and McCullough, who hasn't even challenged seriously in five years of tour activity, were tied for the top at 216, even par on the 7,174 yards of reclaimed swamp and marsh that make up double-tough Sawgrass.

Mark Hayes was only one shot back at 217 after a third round 71. Floyd, with a scrambly 74, and the dangerous Irwin were next at 218, two over par. Irwin, who has a happy habit of playing the tougher courses very, very well, had the best round of the hot, sunny, breezy day, a three-under-par 69.

Nicklaus followed at 219 after a par 72 that produced a series of scowls and unhappy shakes of the head from the man who has won two of the three previous TPC events.

"It was the kind of round where I couldn't sustain anything," Nicklaus said. "I'd make a putt and miss a putt."

He and Irwin both fell victim to a 24-hour virus, Nicklaus on Thursday and Irwin on Friday. Both came very close to withdrawing.

Pirate Netters Win Over UNC-Wilmington

The East Carolina Pirates regained their composure after losing three straight singles matches to UNC-Wilmington here yesterday to carve out a 6-3 victory in college tennis.

The Pirates got off to a slow start. UNC-W's Kenny House handed Tom Durfee a 6-2, 6-3 defeat in the first match. ECU's Jim Ratliff lost the next match to Paul Gemborys 6-1, 6-0, and Wilmington's David Shackleford continued the streak with a 2-6, 6-3, 6-4 win over Pirate Doug Getsinger.

The Pirates got back in step in the fourth match, however. Mitch Pergerson defeated Joe Goulding 6-3, 6-3. ECU's Henry Hostetler took Collin Sumrall 6-2, 6-3. And Mike Murad gave the Pirates their third singles victory in a win over Greg Carroll, 6-3, 6-4.

ECU took all the doubles matches. Durfee-Getsinger defeated House-Gemborys of Wilmington 6-4, 6-4. The Pirate team of Murad-Moton beat UNC-W's Goulding-Shackleford duo 6-2, 6-7, 6-3. And Love-Hostetler put the icing on the cake with a 7-5, 6-4 victory over Carroll-Currie.

The Pirates now boast a 3-3 record. UNC-Wilmington is 2-2 for the season.

'Cornbread' Maxwell Named Mideast MVP

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Cedric "Cornbread" Maxwell, the silky smooth North Carolina-Charlotte center who ousted top-ranked Michigan from the NCAA tournament Saturday, once was cut from his high school squad for being too slow and awkward.

Maxwell poured in 25 points, pulled down 13 rebounds and handled the ball like a guard against Michigan's pressing defense to lead the unheralded 49ers to a 75-68 decision over the favored Wolverines.

Maxwell said he only played his senior year in high school after the coach accused him of being slow and awkward when he cut him his junior season.

"I didn't agree with the coach," said Maxwell, who had only one full scholarship offer when he graduated — to UNC-Charlotte which now moves into next week's national semifinals in Atlanta against No. 7 Marquette.

"That was the only team I ever saw that let their center bring the ball up the floor," said Steve Grote, an intense Michigan performer who plays a key role in its pressing defense.

Maxwell said he learned to handle the ball in the streets of his home town, Kinston, N.C. "Street Ball teaches something that a coach can't teach."

Lee Rose the Charlotte coach, calls Maxwell the best player in the country, "pound for pound" and says he does more things well than any other big man in the nation.

Concerning Maxwell facing the press, "We would be remiss if we did not incorporate his ball-handling ability into our attack against pressure."

The 6-foot-8 Maxwell said he got his nickname from the movie, "Cornbread, Earl and Me" because he resembled Jamaal Wilkes, a former UCLA star now with the Golden State Warriors of the National Basketball Association.

Phil Hubbard, Michigan's Olympic gold medalist, could not handle Maxwell inside. "He ranks right up there with the finest I saw all year," Hubbard said.

"He's a good ball player. You can't take it away from him," said Grote.

Michigan erased a 13-point halftime deficit and took the lead with 12 minutes remaining but then fell back again, for good.

"I thought we were going to win the game," said Grote. "The game was never out of reach. That was in my mind."

Maxwell was named the Most Valuable Player in the NCAA Mideast tournament and was joined on the All-Tournament team by teammate Lew Massey, Michigan's Hubbard, All American Rickey Green and Detroit's John Long.

North Pitt Should Be Improved

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

BETHEL — At North Pitt, there will be some improvement, but not enough to challenge for an Eastern Carolina Conference championship in baseball.

"It's the best since I've been here," Coach Pat Smith said. "But I don't know how it'll compare with the rest of the league. Most of the players are veterans, but they really don't have a real baseball background through the years up here."

Smith said that he would be "tickled" if the Panthers managed to finish .500 this year. "I do feel that we will be competitive within the league. I don't see team after team beating us to death all year long."

Top player on the team may be centerfielder Aubrey Wynne, starting for the third year. "He's our best all-around player among the veterans," Smith said. "Jay Bedsworth is also a third year starter, playing first base and pitching."

Another top player is shortstop Roy Briley, just coming off basketball.

"Our hitting will be better than it was. But we've missed some days last week when we let most of the people off to go to the state tournament with the basketball team. We have several good hitters, including Wynne, Briley, Eddie Hemingway and Lee Andrews. All of them should have a good year."

Smith feels his defense will be improved this year. "Our catcher, Carl Wilson, a junior, may be the hustlingest pitcher in the league this year. He really gives 100 per cent."

At first, Smith will start either Bedsworth or Andrews, with Tim Corey as an additional backup. Ken Perry will be at second, with Briley or Chris Holder, a sophomore, at short. Jeff Hines, a sophomore up from last year's "B" team, will be on third.

Hemingway will be in left, Wynne in center and Bentley Jones in right in the outfield.

Bedsworth and Wynne will probably handle most of the pitching duties, with Andrews doing some work too. "He pitched our first game for us, and was a surprise."

"Our baseball has improved a lot during the last three years," Smith said. "We have some young people who are very good.

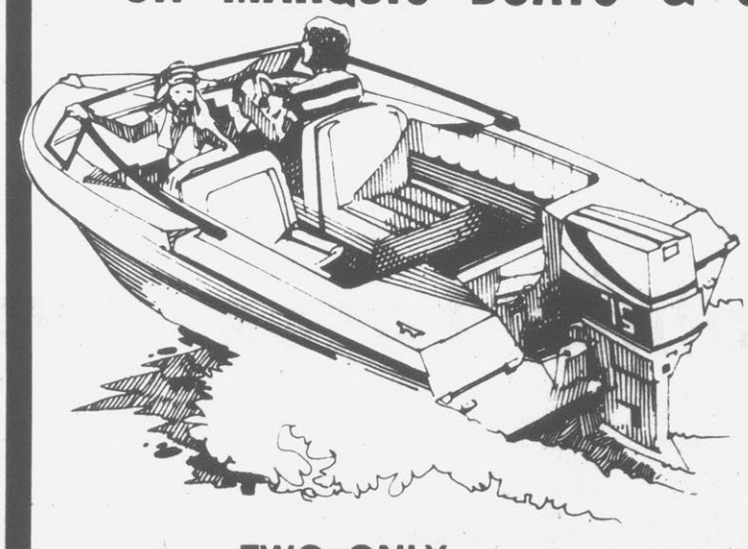

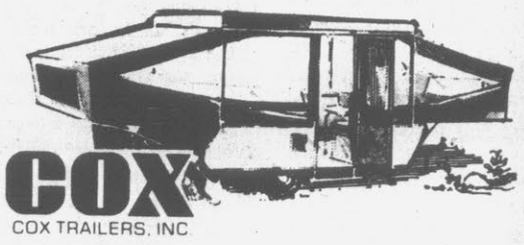

"We started the "B" team program last year, and this will help improve our team in the years ahead. Also we now have a Babe Ruth program during the summer in the area, and this will help us too.

"Baseball will come in this area, and be competitive, but who can say when that one player you need to win a title will come along," Smith said.

Rampants Win First Two Games Friday

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

KINSTON — Rose High School played eight innings of baseball Friday and won its first two games of the young season.

Playing at Kinston, the Rampants took one inning to finish last week's game with the Vikings, called after seven innings because of darkness. Lance Weatherington scored an unearned run in the bottom of the eighth to give the Rampants a 5-4 win. Then, Rose took a 9-1 win over Kinston in the scheduled contest.

The Rampants and Vikings battled to a 4-4 tie last Friday at Guy Smith Stadium and had to call it quits when darkness closed in the the lights weren't operable.

Kinston scored in the first inning last week on Craig Hill's homer, but Rose tied it in the bottom of the frame as John Coffman came home on Mike Shank's double.

The Vikings came back with an unearned run in the second by Kim Lamm, but Rose scored three in the sixth to go ahead. Shank singled and Hooks walked, with Joey Mattheis running for him. Aldridge was safe on a bunt, loading the bases, and Danny Hester did his running. Mark Conway's single brought in Shank and Mattheis and Hester scored on a double steal to give Rose a 4-2 lead.

Proctor Freeman walked in the seventh for Kinston and Joe Wiggs scored on Marshall Whitfield's single to tie the game in the seventh and send it into Friday's extra inning.

In the top of the eighth, Rose's third pitcher of the game, Perry Worthington, struck out the first batter, Bill Jones, but then gave up singles to Glenn Spence and Kirk Williams. Joe Wiggs' sacrifice fly moved Spence to third, but Earl Keith flew out to center field to end the threat.

Conway and Spain both hit grounders to the shortstop to lead off for the Rampants, but Weatherington hit safely to center and stole second. That brought up Coffman, who hit the ball to left and an error on the left fielder brought Weatherington home for the win.

In the second game, Rose sophomore pitcher Mike Williams was spectacular in his first start for the Rampants, striking out eight and scattering six Kinston hits; and the Rose hitters came through for a 9-1 win.

"I was really impressed with Williams," Rampant coach Ronald Vincent said. Williams, who went the distance, "threw the ball well, changed speeds well and stayed in the strike zone.'

"If he keeps improving," Vincent said, "he'll be a fantastic pitcher."

After a scoreless first inning, the Rampants grabbed the lead in the second frame. Greg Lee singled to center field and moved to second as Conway was hit by a pitch. Mattheis walked to load the bases and Lee came home on Williams' sacrifice fly to center. An error on Kinston pitcher Jones on the cutoff allowed Conway to score.

The Vikings were able to pull to 2-1 in the third as Hill singled, went to second on a wild pitch, and got home on Whitfield's base hit to left field.

Neither team scored again until the sixth, when the Rampants put it away with six runs. Eleven Rose batters came to the plate during the inning.

Catcher Wright Hooks led off with a walk and went to second on Jeff Aldridge's sacrifice bunt. Lee then lined out to short, bringing up Conway, who doubled to left to score Hooks.

Reggie Spain, who came in the inning to replace Mattheis, walked and Williams followed with a walk to load the bases. Perry Worthington did Williams' running.

After Conway came home on a wild pitch, Coffman again filled up the sacks with yet another walk. That set up Chapman, who tripled to score all three baserunners. Chapman came home when Shank followed with a single to center field.

Rose wrapped up the scoring in the seventh with one final run as Lee walked, went to second on a wild pitch and came in on Conway's base hit.

The wins upped the Rose record to 2-1 for the year. Vincent said, "If they keep playing like that, we're going to be all right."

Garner Fields Lousy, Hits Well

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

By no stretch of the imagination could Garner's debut with the Pirates be termed auspicious, although they beat the Detroit Tigers 10-6 in an exhibition baseball game.

A second baseman with Oakland until the nine-player trade between the A's and Pirates earlier this week, Garner has been handed the third base job by Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner, who also was his boss in Oakland.

In five innings, all Garner did was heave one ball over the first baseman's head and butcher two other grounders. There were, however, two balls he failed to mishandle.

The day wasn't a total loss, though. Garner delivered a double and triple in three at-bats—he's hitting .667, fielding .400—in the Bucs' 15-hit attack, which included homers by Bill Robinson and Al Oliver.

The A's didn't seem to miss Garner. Ed Crosby and Wayne Gross homered in the first inning and Oakland went on to trounce the Chicago Cubs 17-7.

Meanwhile, Reggie Jackson belted his first home run in a New York uniform and Chris Chambliss also homered and drove in four runs, leading the Yankees to a 10-6 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Fred Lynn drove in four runs with a homer and three doubles as the Boston Red Sox outlasted the Philadelphia Phillies 12-8 with a 19-hit attack. Pitching ace Luis Tiant also stormed into the Red Sox' camp after a three-week holdout.

Cecil Cooper, traded by Boston to Milwaukee, had three doubles, a single and three RBI in the Brewers' 11-7 triumph over the Cleveland Indians.

The California Angels also had an eight-run inning—the second—and went on to crush the Seattle Mariners 13-5. The big frame included a two-run single by Ron Jackson and a two-run double by Tony Solaita.

Butch Wynegar and Larry Hisle hit two-run homers and Roy Smalley drilled a solo shot, powering the Minnesota Twins over the Cincinnati Reds 6-4.

Steve Yeager slugged a two-run homer and Don Sutton allowed one run and three hits in five innings as the Los Angeles Dodgers turned back the Montreal Expos 5-3.

Johnnie LeMaster's bases-loaded double with two out in the bottom of the ninth lifted the San Francisco Giants past the San Diego Padres 10-9 and Cliff Johnson homered in the Houston Astros' 7-4 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Atlanta and Baltimore split a doubleheader. The Braves took the opener 10-4 with Rod Gilbreath socking a three-run homer, but the Orioles came back to win the nightcap 9-2 by scoring six runs in the seventh inning, two on a homer by Eddie Murray.

The Chicago White Sox turned seven Kansas City errors into eight unearned runs and swept a doubleheader from the Royals 6-3, 8-4.

Pepe Mangual doubled in the 10th inning and scored on Mike Phillips' triple to give the New York Mets a 2-1 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Roanoke Rolls Past Panthers

ROBERSONVILLE — Roanoke erupted for six runs in the third inning and coasted to an 11-7 victory over North Pitt Friday afternoon.

The six-run outburst broke open a 4-4 tie and sent the Redskins to their first win of the season.

The Panthers scored their first two runs in the first inning when Eddie Hemingway walked and stole second, went to third on Aubrey Wynne's sacrifice fly, and scored on Lee Andrews' double. Jay Bedsworth reached on an error and moved Andrews to third. Andrews came home on a passed ball.

The Redskins retaliated with four runs and a temporary lead. David Spruill singled and went to third on an error. Cliff Keel followed with a walk and a steal of second. Spruill came home on Keel's steal. Bob Jones' single sent Keel to third, and Keel scored on a base hit by Lee Smith. Jones moved to third on the hit and scored when Glenn Cargile reached on an error. Cargile got caught in a rundown, but Smith scored. The Panthers tied it with two in the top of the third before Roanoke put the game on ice.

North Pitt scored single runs in the fifth, sixth, and seventh innings, while Roanoke earned a run in the fifth.

Andrews led the Panther attack with three hits in as many at-bats, including a double and an inside-the-park home run, and Hemingway went 2-for-3. Keel went 2-for-3 with a homer.

E. Wayne Bombs Ayden-Grifton

LITTLEFIELD — Eastern Wayne had an easy time with Ayden-Grifton Friday, banging out 15 hits to take a 13-1 victory in high school baseball.

Eastern Wayne scored two in the first inning. Ayden-Grifton countered with a run in the bottom of the first, but the Chargers were never able to gain the lead.

In the first, R. Batts walked, stole second and third and was scored by a Milkowitz homer, putting Eastern Wayne ahead 2-0.

Ayden-Grifton's Al Butts walked in the bottom of the first, and advanced to second on a Sammy Whitehurst sacrifice. Jed Hardy sacrificed, sending Butts to third. He stole home to give the Chargers their only score of the ball game.

A fielding error in the third scored Eastern Wayne's Johnson. Three runs were scored in the fourth, as Matthews got on on an error and Batts and Phillips homered.

Coach Quits Following Vote

By DAVID CRARY
Associated Press Writer

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Kermit Davis, whose Mississippi State basketball team soared and then plummeted this season, has resigned as head coach after the school's student association voted 27-1 to request a replacement.

Athletic Director Bob Tyler accepted the resignation Friday evening and said Davis would serve as a consultant to the athletic department for the remainder of his contract. Tyler said a search for a successor would begin immediately.

Davis, who compiled a 91-91 record in seven years as State's head coach, said he wished the basketball program well.

"I've very much enjoyed my stay here," Davis said. "I wish the team much success, and I hope in the near future there's a championship for the students."

But the resignation came hours after an article appeared in the student newspaper sharply criticizing Davis's coaching performance.

Written by a member of the student senate, Erwin Ward, the article quoted team members as saying the squad had lost confidence in Davis' leadership. Ward said players told him they lacked respect for Davis and would have voted unanimously to replace him.

Ward also said that two players from New York were considering leaving the school and returning to the Northeast. The only New Yorkers on the roster are sophomore forward Gary Hooker and junior guard Al Perry, both starters.

After the article appeared, the student association voted to request "serious consideration" by Tyler of replacing Davis.

The Bulldogs raced to an 11-2 start in the 1976-77 season, including a victory over powerful Wake Forest. But dreams of tournament bids faded quickly when Southeastern Conference play began, and the team finished at 14-13 overall and 6-12 in the SEC.

Camp Lejeune Downs Chargers

CAMP LEJEUNE — Camp Lejeune showed strength in the distance events to take an 83— to 52— track win over Ayden-Grifton Friday afternoon.

Camp Lejeune swept the mile and two mile and went 1-2 in the 880 to dominate the distance races. That edge gave the home team their overall advantage.

The loss was the second of two meets for the Chargers, who will travel to C. B. Aycock next Wednesday.

Arizona Firm Connected With Organized Crime

Copyright 1977
Investigative Reporters and Editors Inc.
Distributed by United Press International

The Del E. Webb Corp. of Phoenix, respected national developer of shopping centers, office buildings and retirement communities, has been an active business partner with organized crime figures for three decades.

Because Webb himself was the co-owner of the New York Yankees for 20 years (1945-1965) his dealings with mobsters were hidden behind a complex screen of stock transfers, joint ventures, partnerships and secret ownerships.

Webb died 2½ years ago but his company continues as a conglomerate whose stock is traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

The IRE Investigation of the Webb empire said that:

—Webb and L. C. Jacobson, his longtime associate, were secret partners with racketeers Meyer Lansky, Benjamin (Bugsy) Siegel and Gus Greenbaum in ownership of the Flamingo Hotel in Las Vegas from the day it owned in 1946.

—Valley National Bank of Phoenix, whose directors included Senator Barry Goldwater's brother and later Webb himself, helped finance the Flamingo with loans of more than $2 million.

—Webb and another financier with close ties to the Chicago mob bought a 3,000-acre Arizona ranch in 1959 at a hugely inflated price from Detroit crime boss Joseph Zerilli, a member of the Cosa Nostra's national commission, and others.

—Jacobson, Webb's right-hand man obtained substantial shares as a hidden front for Webb in the Sahara Mint and Thunderbird casinos. His partners included men with racketeering backgrounds. With Jacobson as a front in the casinos, Webb could not be embarrassed in connection with his co-ownership of the Yankees.

—Webb bought the Thunderbird Hotel in Las Vegas in 1964 when the owners ran into trouble with gaming authorities because of suspected ties to Lansky. A few years later, Webb sold the hotel to Lansky's neighbor.

—Financing for several of Webb's Nevada gambling palaces was obtained through a Texas insurance company whose officers had formed an alliance with Morris Shenker, a teamster attorney who has frequently represented top organized crime figures.

—Mobster Moe B. Dalitz, a top Lansky aide, and convicted stock swindler Allard Roen, as well as two of their associates, obtained substantial blocks of Webb stock through a property transfer in 1969.

Webb executives refused to allow IRE to examine stockholder records, even after IRE purchased a share of stock in the public corporation. Robert H. Johnson, who replaced Webb as president, and Jacobson both declined to be invterviewed.

Del E. Webb was a personal friend of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Dwight D. Eisenhower and J. Edgar Hoover. To many, he epitomized the spirit of Arizona.

In the tradition of the southwest, he was viewed as the kind of selfmade man whose foresight and individualism reflected the proud, frontier - taming qualities of yesteryear. yesteryear.

Webb was a carpenter who migrated from California to Arizona in the 1920s and with his hands and his brains built an empire out of which came corporate success, personal wealth, civic leadership and philanthropy. After he died on the Fourth of July, 1974, he was eulogized as the "personification of the American success story. story.

Behind the public image, however, were deep, longtime associations and business dealings with men regarded as among the czars of organized crime in America. These associations went far beyond the well-publicized fact that Webb had built the Flamingo Hotel in Las Vegas for mobster "Bugsy" Siegel; and the fact that Webb constructed and owned other hotels and casinos in the gambling capital of America.

If Webb told only parts of the story of his dealings with Siegel —and said nothing of the presence of such other mob figures as Meyer Lansky and Moe B. Dalitz—it was understandable. As co-owner of the New York Yankees with Dan Topping, Webb of course could not consort with gangsters or be involved in gambling.

Webb once told columnist Bob Considine that his only interest in the Flamingo was as the builder and his only interest in Siegel was the problem of getting "Bugsy" to pay his bills.

"I'm a contractor," Webb said. "I don't care who I build for. I don't think it's a contractor's job to go into the personalities or careers of those who retain them."

Ford Frick, then the commissioner of baseball, adapted something of the same kind of attitude in 1961 when the Webb corporation took over two Nevada hotels. "This is strictly a real estate deal," Frick declared. Nobody looked deeper.

Throughout this era, Webb hobnobbed with some of the top figures in law enforcement, including FBI director Hoover, who often stayed free of charge at Webb's Las Vegas hotels. The pair also met frequently during vacation sojourns at Del Mar, Calif.

Hoover once denied reports that those hotels were immune, by his order, from FBI "bugs" during longterm FBI investigations of casino "skimming." But, according to former Webb officials, no such investigations were made at the Webb Nevada casinos.

Not only was Webb close to FDR and a golfing partner of Eisenhower at the Burning Tree Country Club in Maryland, he was friend, companion and business associate of some of the top political, show business and sports figures in the country.

Duke's Bad Habit Clinic

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — A new clinic at Duke University Medical Center is designed to help essentially normal people kick a host of bad habits, including insomnia, overeating, and smoking.

Known as the "Bad Habits Clinic," the facility is an outgrowth of Duke's Behavioral Change and Self Control Program. it uses a variety of newly developed behavior therapy techniques to help its "clients" break bad habits.

Dr. Patrick Boudewyns, the clinic director, said Saturday the list of habits being treated at the clinic include insomina, overeating, headache-causing tension and anxiety, chronic pain, sexual disfunction, smoking and excessive fears known as phobias.

"We see ourselves more as educators than therapists, and we are trying to get away from the notion that we're dealing with abnormality," Boudewyns said of the theory behind the clinic. "These are the kinds of problems that everyone has, so we call the people we see clients rather than patients.

"Insomina, for example, is a big problem in our culture," he said. "And people tend to compound it by lying awake in bed telling themselves, 'If I don't get to sleep pretty soon, I'm going to feel rotten in the morning.'"

Worry increases as the minutes crawl by, making it even harder to fall asleep and beginning a vicious cycle of pillow thumping, turning and tossing, Boudewyns said.

"The insomnia therapy offered by the clinic is a very straight-forward thing called stimulus control," the psychologist said. "Instead of lying in bed, individuals are encouraged to get up, leave the bedroom and begin an activity that refocuses their minds on more positive thoughts before they return to bed."

Reading and light housework are two such activities, he said.

Boudewyns said overeaters are taught to shed bad eating habits instead of being put on a diet. "If you go back a year later and look at those who have lost weight on a diet, 95 per cent of them will be back to the weight they were before," he said.

Tension and anxiety, Boudewyns said, are really commonly acquired bad habits and researchers across the country have developed treatments without the most commonly prescribed tranquilizers.

"These medications are so abused that they are contributing to what is really a major crisis," he said.

The treatment the clinic uses for phobias — those irrational fears of harmless snakes, flying, heights, or enclosed places — is known as "systematic desensitization" and "flooding."

In systematic desensitization, Boudewyns explained, a client first learns to relax and then in subsequent sessions slowly begins to face his fears. If he is afraid of snakes, he might be instructed to fantasize about toy snakes. Then he would fantasize about real serpents, and the progression would continue until he could hold a harmless live snake while remaining relaxed.

In flooding, which is a more rapid approach, the client is simply asked to do the thing he is afraid of, under supervision, until the anxiety "extinguishes."

He said the techniques have proven effective with a large number of business executives who are afraid of flying but who must fly because of their jobs.

Wants Benefits To Cover Charges Of Medicine Men

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Some Navajo coal miners want their union health benefits extended to cover the fees charged by Navajo medicine men.

With ailments other than obvious physical injuries, "most Navajos say their medicine men are better able than Anglo doctors to determine what is troubling them and how it can be cured," says an article in the United Mine Workers Journal.

"Navajos interviewed by the Journal said that confidence in their medicine men is an important ingredient in the healing process."

Charles Harris, a dragline worker, told the magazine's reporter, "When you go to see a white doctor, you wait in long lines, and then when he sees you, he usually rushes you through without spending much time with you.

"But a medicine man, he checks you real good. He talks to you. He finds out what's wrong with you and he helps you get rid of it."

Navajo miners at the Black Mesa, Ariz., operation of the Peabody Coal Co. have asked that their UMW union health fund be expanded to include medicine men's fees.

Trustees of the fund are considering a plan for a one-year trial of that idea.

The draft proposal says: "Without the medicine man as an approved healer (covered by the fund), the Navajo beneficiary is deprived of his ability to receive total care for his physical and mental well-being."

The article said the medicine men have learned the medicinal values of many plants, as well as the traditions and beliefs of the Navajo people.

They conduct healing ceremonies that sometimes last for days—administering herbs, reciting chants, singing songs and giving the patient advice.

LONE SURVIVOR...from a service station fire, this gas pump suffered blistered and peeled paint

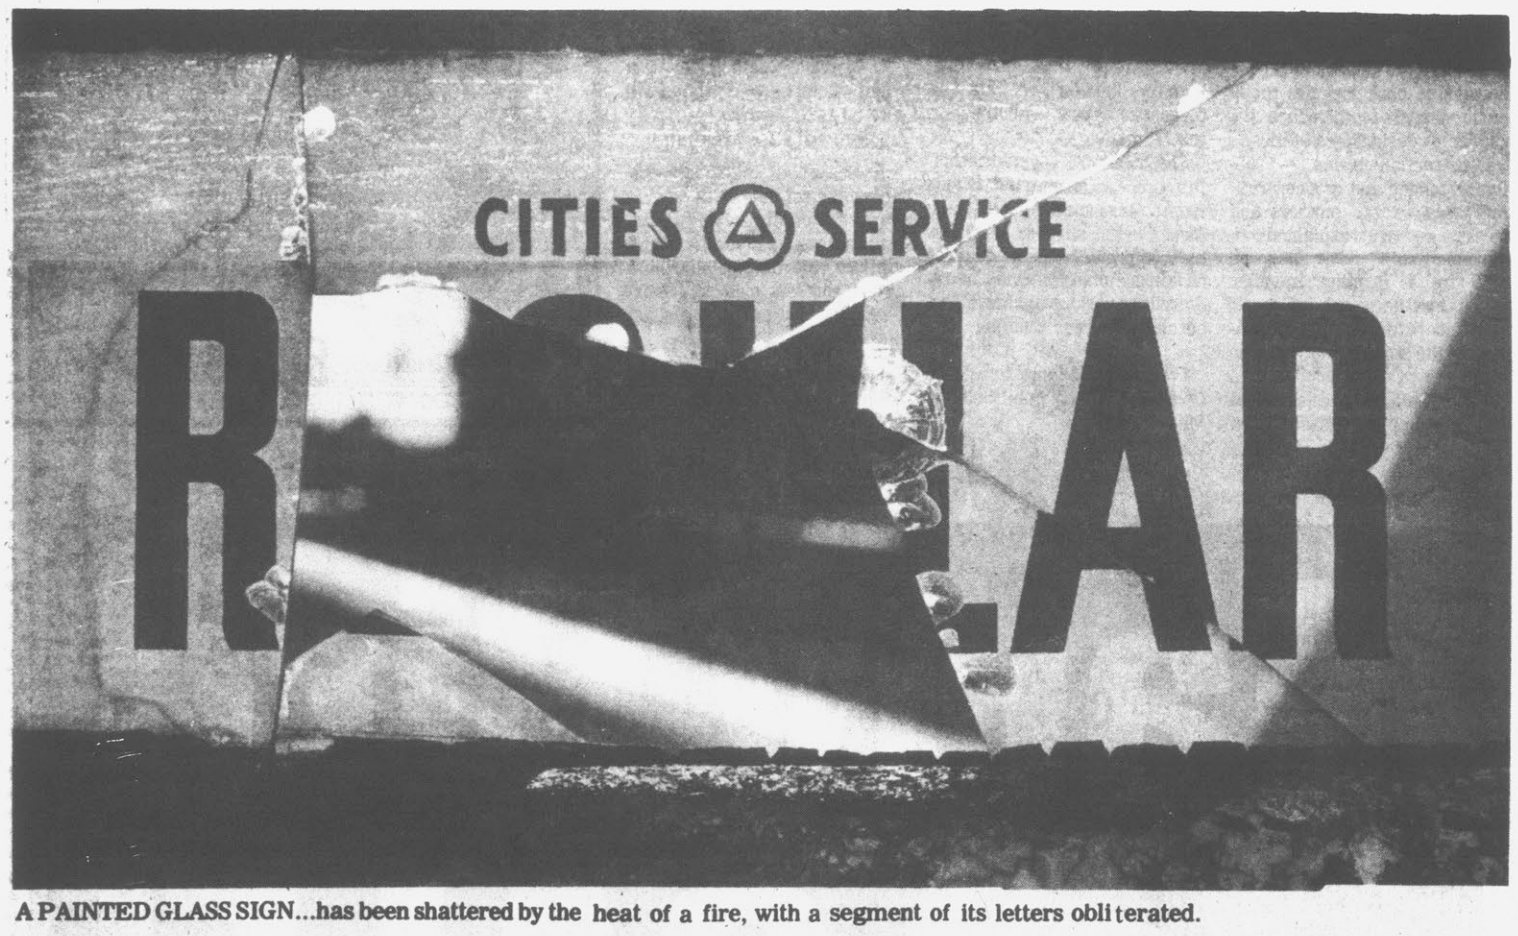

A POWERFUL ELEMENT...fire destroys much and alters the shape and texture of all that it does not totally consume.

Transformed By Fire

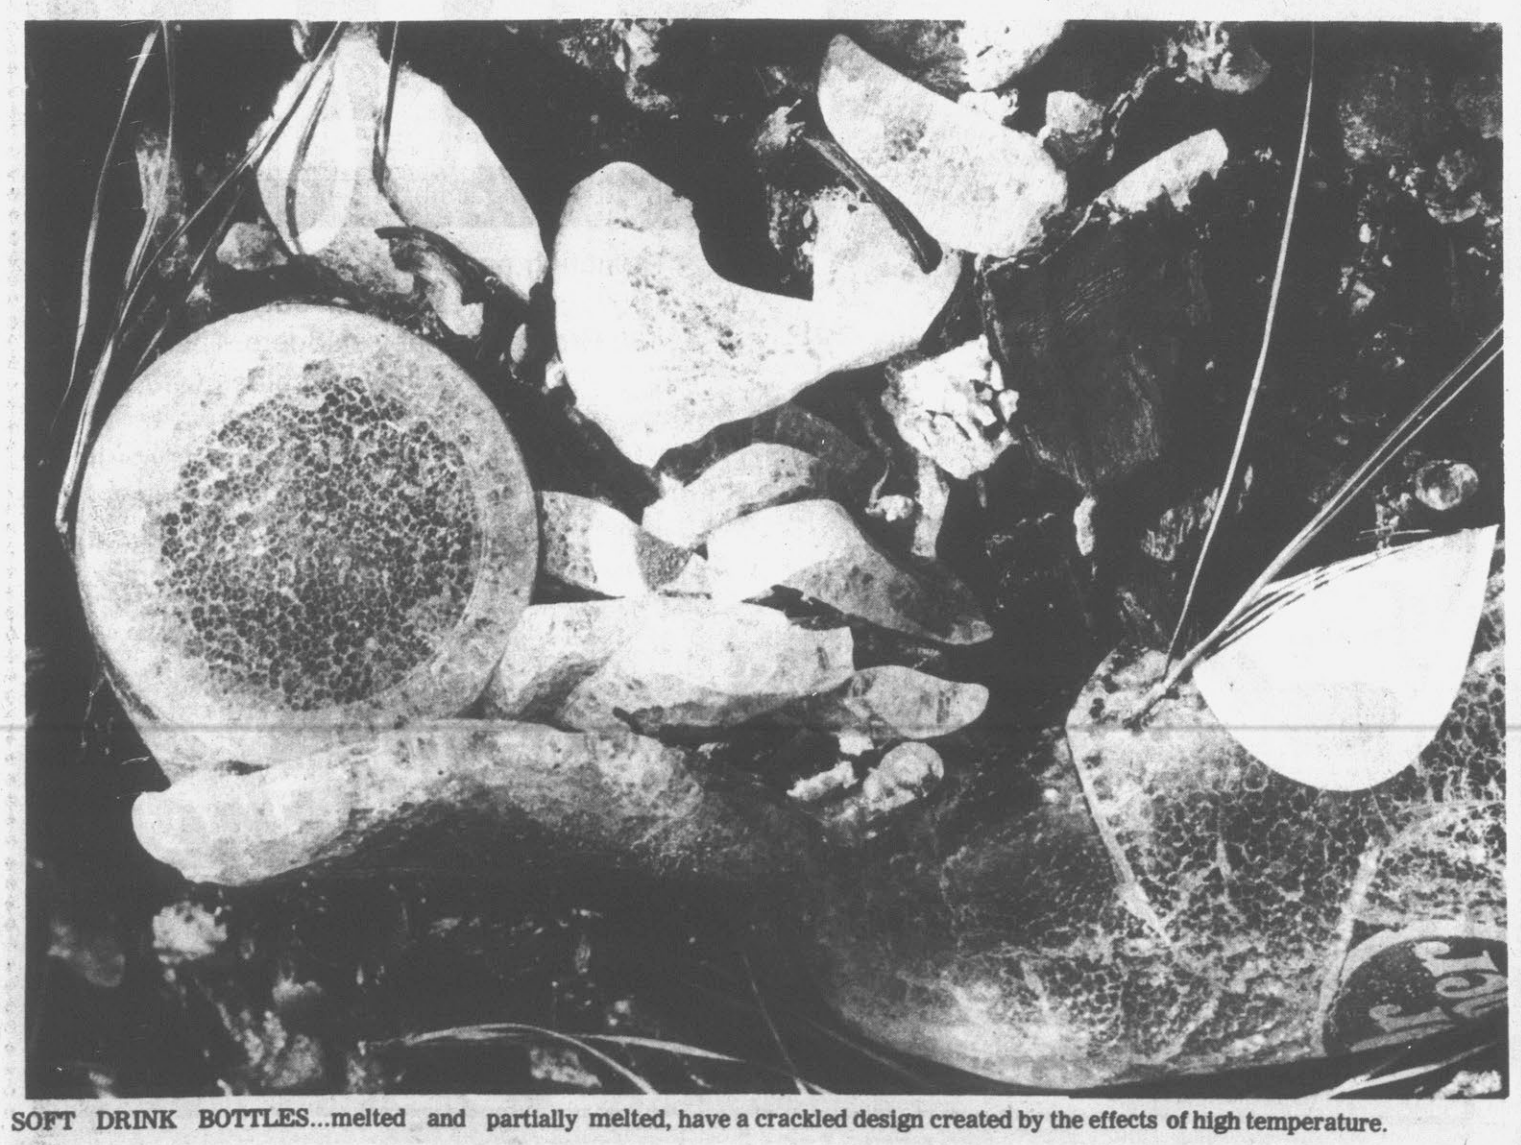

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

When fire ravages a building, it both destroys and transforms. Objects subjected to the intense heat of an uncontrolled fire take on entirely different appearances.

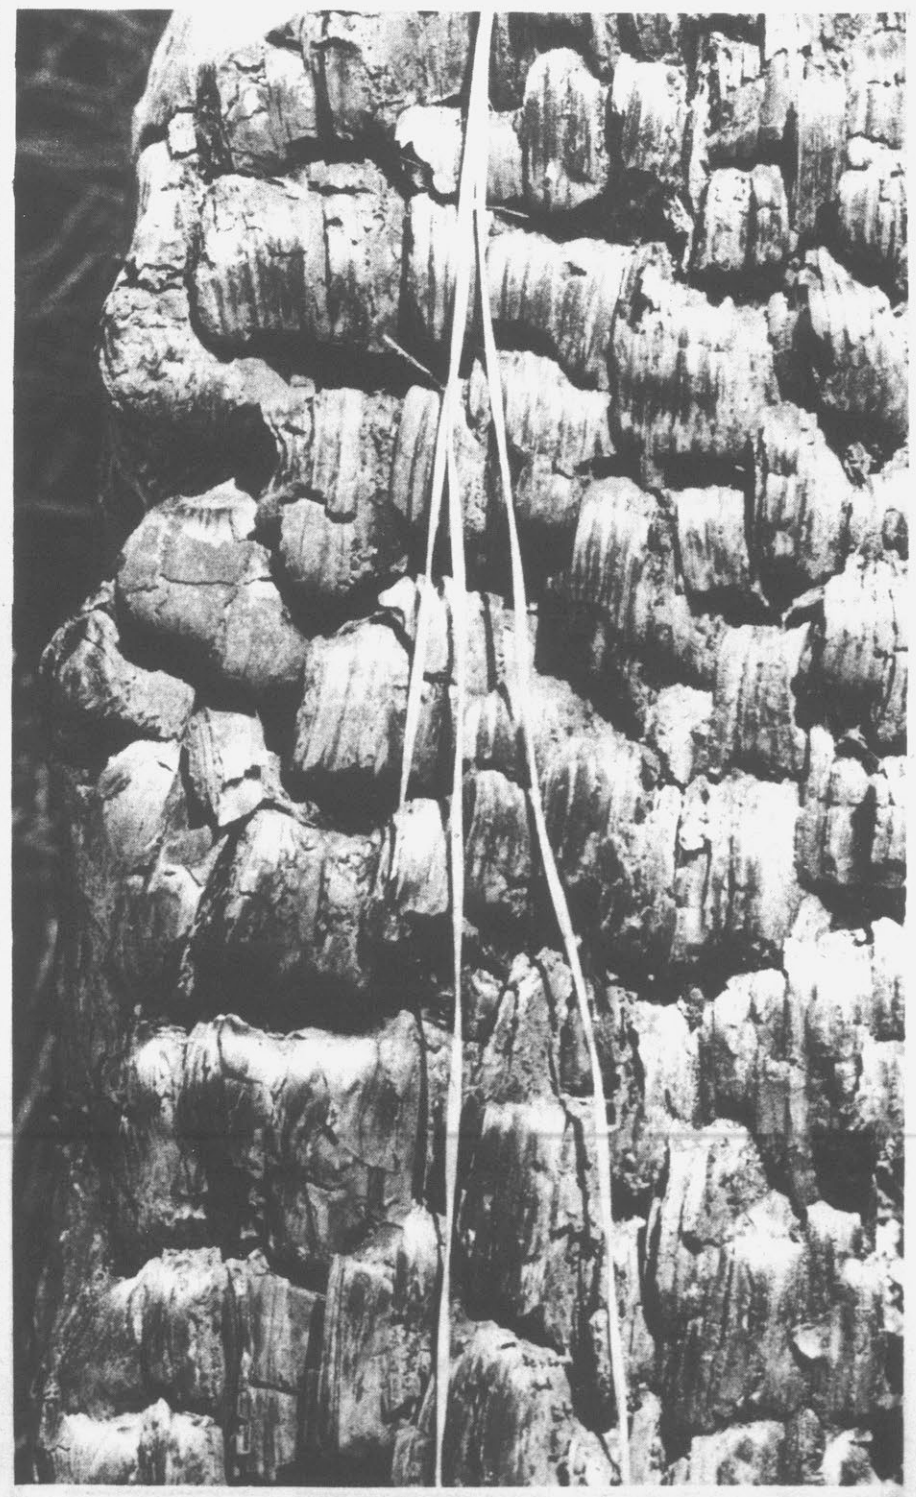

The photographs on this page reveal the power of fire to change ordinary objects into new shapes and textures that little resemble the original form.

A PAINTED GLASS SIGN...has been shattered by the heat of a fire, with a segment of its letters obliterated.

CHARRED WOOD...takes on a silvery black, multi-faceted texture.

EYE-CATCHING EXTERIOR, LEISURE LIVABILITY

OUTDOOR LIVING AREAS, ENTRY LOUNGE FEATURED

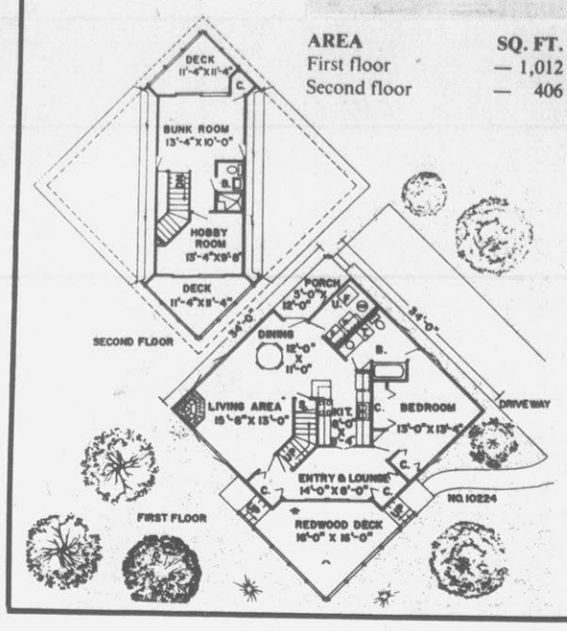

By Jerry Bishop

Fronted by double redwood decks placed at an interesting angle, an exceptional exterior fuses with a practical floor plan in the Gilcrest, a refreshing leisure home.

Severe redwood decks balance glass walls on the facade, and the angular front manages to withdraw into its surroundings. Inside, rooms have unique shapes and defined functions, and indoor living areas are naturally extended by the liberal use of decks and porches.

The entry and lounge, connected to the deck by double sliding glass doors adds a creative touch to the leisure plan and has the practical advantage of protecting living areas from rain, snow, and drafts. Two closets, for coats and storage, equip the area, which funnels traffic to kitchen, bedroom or living area.

AREA	SQ. FT.
First floor	— 1,012
Second floor	— 406

Directly ahead, a closed-off corridor kitchen reaches to join the dining area for easy family meals. To the left of the entry and open to the dining area, the angular living room focuses on a corner fireplace and extends to the covered porch at rear. Bordering utility/laundry room is a bonus.

Completing the first level is a spacious bedroom edged with double closets. It merits access to the full bath, which also opens to living areas.

The upper level is dominated by a full bath and bunk room. Ideal for children or occasional houseguests, the bunk room is furnished with closet space and opens to a private deck via sliding glass doors. The front deck is linked to the smaller hobby room, a versatile area that can be called upon for additional sleeping space as needed.

The combined living areas of the front and second levels total 1418 sq. ft., making the Gilcrest a moderate-sized but highly functional vacation plan.

ON THE HOUSE

The best time to repair screens is neither the spring nor the fall, nor any other specific period of the year. The best time is as soon as the damage is noticed.

A tiny tear in the mesh can be fixed easily with a ready-made patch sold in hardware stores. When the tear becomes larger, as it inevitably will, replacement of the entire screening material is necessary, which is more expensive and requires more time and labor. What's more, even the smallest opening in the mesh will permit the entry of insects, thus defeating the purpose of the protective material.

When replacement of the mesh cannot be avoided, it can be handled even by a novice do-it-yourselfer. Wooden screens have a narrow moulding along the inside of the frame. Pry it up with a putty knife or other flat tool, being especially careful if the moulding is in good enough condition to use again. When the moulding is off, remove the mesh, which is held in place with tiny nails or staples. As you take off the screening, withdraw the nails or staples or they will interfere with the replacement of the new mesh.

Measure the opening and allow about an inch extra on each side. When you buy the new screening, use these measurements, which will cut down on waste and at the same time allow enough additional mesh to attach the new materials.

There are several ways to attach the mesh. One of the oldest and best is to lay the frame on a sturdy flat surface. Place a board about one-inch thick under each end of the frame. Fasten clamps on the frame at the center so as to bend the long ends downward. If you have done this properly, both ends of the frame will be higher than the center. Now attach the screening, using either nails or staples, preferably the latter. Just do this normally, making no effort to stretch the mesh so that it is taut. When the attachment is complete, remove the clamps. As you do this, the frame will spring back into place, automatically tightening the screening. Trim the ragged edges of the mesh and replace the moulding.

The procedure for attaching mesh to a metal frame is a bit different, since the screening is held in place with a spline, usually of plastic. The mesh is laid over the frame. When the splines are pushed into the screening and into the grooves, the mesh becomes taut. There is a small wheel made for the purpose of pushing the splines into place. While it is easier to do it with the wheel, it can also be done with the eraser end of a pencil or something similar.

Before tackling the replacement of screening on wooden frames, check to be sure the joints are all tight. If they aren't, they can be repaired with small screws or, if the damage is severe, with mending plates, miter joint fasteners or dowels.

Drawing Plans For New Home

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Put your new house on paper before you build it. That advice comes from many sources to those planning new homes. Even if an architect is to be given the task of designing your home, he'll appreciate having something on paper that will cut down on the time required in the planning stage. It may even cost you less.

But how do you go about it? Many potential homeowners shy away from such a task, feeling they aren't up to its artistic demands. Others don't really know what is expected of such a project.

Now the idea has been made easier in "Drawing Plans for Your Own Home" by Jane Curran, a member of the American Institute of Building Designers, who has come up with a unique book. For women, it is the answer to the house planner's prayer. As Mrs. Curran points out, "many people want to better their living conditions but just do not know how to begin."

In addition to all the good advice in the book, it comes with some tools that people delay acquiring when they are going to take on such a chore — a good wad of graph paper, a packet of templates (plastic cutouts punched to scale) and a slide ruler. When you are ready to do the house plan itself, you will need an 18 by 24-inch pad of translucent paper for a small home, a larger pad for a bigger one.

The book provides know-how in drawing plans for a new home, a remodeled home and an addition to a home. There are plans for arranging furnishings, with room sketches showing good and bad arrangements.

You can learn how to think in scale using the scale ruler and squared drawing paper from the kit, as you learn to measure and draw lines in one-quarter-inch scale which will equal one foot. Drawing a room from a floor plan will provide a good understanding of measuring, drawing and thinking in scale.

A valuable section shows how to recognize symbols. After drawing them and using the guides you will learn what those marks mean on blueprints. For example, the symbol for a water heater is a circle with a "wh," a furnace is a square with an 'x" and a telephone is a triangle. There are also door, window and kitchen symbols.

Learning to draw a lot for your house is really more important than it sounds. It will show the space available for construction and all the things that exist on the property to help the potential builder choose a house site.

Lot shapes vary greatly, the author points out. Some are simple rectangles, others may be irregular. Then, too, the contour of a lot may range from flat to steep hillsides.

As for the exterior of the house, the book includes many basic shapes to introduce the reader to design possibilities.

Construction terms — subfloors, tongue and groove, trimmer studs, vapor barriers and so on — are explained. A "crippled stud" turns out to be a 2 by 4 framing member which has been cut off to fit above or below a framed opening in the exterior or interior wall.

Six fireplaces are sketched and the template may be used to mark them on the drawing after the style is selected.

Mrs. Curran has included many suggestions that otherwise might be forgotten. Cutouts of children and adults in various positions sitting, walking, opening drawers, making beds, show the amount of space required for those purposes.

There are cutouts of patio furniture — chaises longues, and chairs in various sizes. The laundry, kitchen and bath fixtures also appear as cutouts on the template.

She describes whiteprinting, the process of making copies from transulcent originals. Mrs. Curran suggests that this method provides the best copies of a house plan that may be required by various agencies concerned with your building.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — The doors on our garage are mounted on hinges. When closed, they meet in the center. One of the doors has begun to sag and is difficult to open and close without lifting the door as it is moved. How can this be fixed?

A. — If you are lucky, you will be able to fix it without too much trouble. Take a screwdriver and test the hinges. If there is any movement of any of the screws, even the tiniest bit, tighten it — or them. Should the door now swing freely, you have uncovered the trouble. Remove the offending screws, fill the holes with wood putty or plastic wood and, when it is hard, reset the screws. In some cases, you might have to use longer screws or reposition the hinges slightly. If, during the original inspection, you find that all the screws are tightly in place, you will have to install a metal turnbuckle. Fasten one end at the sagging corner, the other diagonally opposite. Tighten the turnbuckle until the sagging corner is lifted. Sometimes this can be done easily as described; sometimes it will be necessary to place wooden wedges under the door to hold it in place while the turnbuckle is being installed and tightened. Occasionally, you will see a repair of this sort made with an ordinary wooden brace. While this is effective, it cannot be adjusted at a future time without removing the brace and placing it in a new position. When you use a turnbuckle, any later adjustment can be made simply by tightening it a little more.

Q. — We have a blacktop driveway which has developed several holes in it during the past few months. I have some gravel on hand in the garage. Can this gravel be used to fill the holes?

A. — Yes, but the repair will be very conspicuous. For a neater job, fill each hole with gravel and pack it down until it is about one inch from the top. Fill the remainder of each hole with a blacktop patching material and tamp it down. Use the driveway for a week or two, then inspect the patches to determine whether more material is required to bring them level with the surrounding surfaces.

Q. — I am in the process of refinishing our basement. Now we have decided that we would like to install a toilet. I intend to hire a regular plumber, but the toilet will be below the level of our sewer pipes. Does this mean the concrete basement floor will have to be dug up in order to install the pipes?

A. — No. There is a toilet system that permits such an installation without breaking up the floor. Be sure your plumber knows about the system and how to install it.

Q. — I have a partial can of regular gloss enamel and a partial can of flat enamel. Both enamels were made by the same manufacturer. I have a job coming up which will require more enamel than there is in one of the cans. Can I mix the two enamels?

A. — Frankly, I have never made such a mixture, but since the two enamels are of the same brand, I see no reason why it will not work.

Q. My English boxwoods are turning brown and dying. Any suggestions? (G. H., Fayetteville)

A. English boxwood is not well adapted to your area of the state. Nematode damage is the most common disease problem. You can control nematodes by treating with DBCP, which is sold as Nemagon. Treat when the temperature is above 50 degrees and follow label directions. (Ron Jones, extension plant pathologist)

Q. My class would like to plant some flower seed that will germinate quickly. Any suggestions? (L. C., Durham)

A. Seeds that will send shoots above the soil line in five or six days include ageratum, amaranthus, candytuft, cardinal climber vine, cosmos, marigold, zinnia and four o'clock. (Henry J. Smith, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. Would it help my tomatoes to put a hive of bees in the garden? (A. S., Wilson)

A. No. Tomatoes are pollinated and do not need bees for pollination. Other self pollinated garden vegetables are peppers, eggplant, snap beans, lima beans, and peas. Some of the vegetables that do require bees for pollination are the cucurbits—cucumbers, squash, pumpkins, watermelon and cantaloupe. (A. A. Banadyga, extension horticulturist)

Armchair Generals Meet To Refight Old Battles

By JERRY HARKAVY
Associated Press Writer

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — Once a month, a small group of armchair generals gathers in a college classroom to refight some old battles — like Waterloo, Gettysburg and Stalingrad.

For hours, they pore over cardboard battlegrounds, deploying infantry battalions and artillery batteries into positions to destroy enemy units or seize a strategic hill or town.

The meetings are conducted by the Maine Wargamers Association, one of hundreds of similar groups around the country devoted to the fast-growing hobby.

The gameboards are scaled-down versions of historic battle sites, and the military units — represented by tiny cardboard chips — are the same ones that met in the actual encounters.

At one table, two players began the opening scenario of a complex game called "Wellington's Victory." Bob Kane of Portland was moving Napoleon's army into position to capture a village south of Waterloo. Larry Willwerth of Scarborough, heading an Anglo-Dutch force, was trying to block him.

The scenario is based on a preset number of moves by each player, and takes 10 to 12 hours to complete. "It would take 50 or 60 hours to play the whole game," said Kane.

Lengthy games are nothing new for dedicated wargamers. Willwerth, a 33-year-old engineer who has been involved in the hobby since 1958, attends national conventions that attract crowds of 2,500.

"We go to these tournaments once or twice a year, and we play for three straight days," he said.

Many wargamers say they got hooked on the hobby after tiring of chess. "Chess was designed as a war game, but it's not as realistic," said James Allard of Westbrook. Although dice are rolled in most games, players insist that skill and intelligence, not luck, determine the outcome.

In general, wargamers tend to be college-educated, with an interest in history, and many are former military officers. "People give us incredulous looks. They think we're a bunch of warmongers, but we're not," said Allard.

The wargaming boom got its start in the late 1950s, with the introduction of a game called Tactics II. Today, there are several hundred games to choose from, and the number of hobbyists nationwide probably ranges from 100,000 to 150,000. There are several national publications devoted to wargaming.

The games are based on battles dating back to the times of the Roman legions and earlier, and go up to Vietnam. Although most games are for two players, five association members were involved in a recreation of medieval England's Wars of the Roses.

There are a handful of games based on theoretical scenarios, including wars between NATO and Warsaw Pact powers, and on space age conflicts with a gameboard that spans the galaxies.

Years With MTM Best, Says Gavin

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "On the last day, Lou says, 'Cool it, be happy, let's not have any tears.' The writers used words that expressed our own feelings. They gave us a gift."

Gavin MacLeod was talking about the last episode of "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," which airs at 8 p.m. EST Saturday night on CBS.

After seven years, 168 episodes and 26 Emmy awards, this classy — and classic — comedy series comes to an end. And it ends with a bang.

By now it should not be a surprise to anyone that a new owner buys WJM-TV in Minneapolis and decides that his only real asset in the newsroom is anchorman Ted Baxter, played by Ted Knight. Headed for the unemployment line are Mary Richards (Moore), Lou Grant (Edward Asner), Murray Slaughter (MacLeod) and Sue Ann Nivens (Betty White), and on the last day at work they need some morale boosting.

As a matter of fact, so did the cast. "That was a sad week. We were very close," said MacLeod. "It was the happiest time of my life."

The show was not edited in time for a preview, but if the script is any indication, it should be a very funny show and a fitting climax for the series. Valerie Harper ("Rhoda") and Cloris Leachman ("Phyllis") return for this final episode.

"It's wonderful that a show can close of its own volition, that the original writers can write the closing," said MacLeod a few days after the final show was filmed before an audience of invited guests.

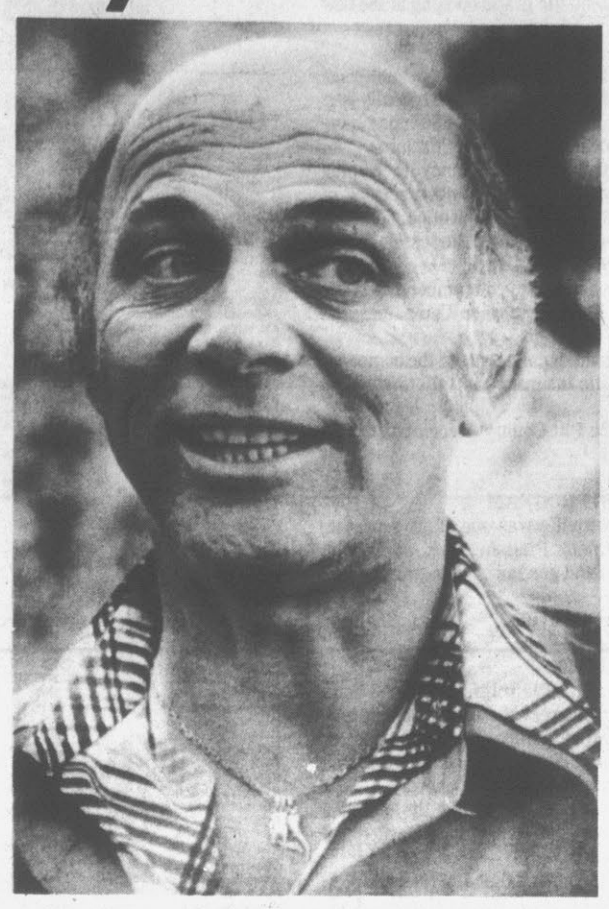

"I don't think you'll ever see this kind of show again. It was right for its time."

Executive producers James L. Brooks and Allan Burns, who creatzd the series, wrote the final script, along with producers Ed Weinberger and Stan Daniels, David Lloyd and Bob Ellison. Jay Sandrich, who directed the pilot and most of the shows over the seven years, directed.

MacLeod was most noted for his vicious villains when he was asked to read for a part in the MTM pilot. He was just back from making "Kelly's Heroes" in Yugoslavia and had twice played murderous Big Chicken on "Hawaii Five-0."

He was asked to read for for the part of Lou Grant, but MacLeod said he liked the part of Murray better. "I had always played extreme, larger-than-life characters," he said. "It was a challenge for me to play someone so untheatrical."

MacLeod said he has been offered several pilots, but he wants to spend the next year re-establishing himself as a character actor.

GAVIN MacLEOD tells an interviewer about the final episode of television's "Mary Tyler Moore Show". He calls the long-lasting show "the happiest time of my life". (AP Wirephoto)

Cross Breeding May Tame Bees

By ALFONSO CHARDY
Associated Press Writer

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Killer bees, a nuisance to man and beast in South America, may someday turn gentle through mutation, according to Argentina's top bee expert, Moises Katzenelson.

The change could be brought about in 30 to 40 years because of cross-breeding techniques now being conducted between killer and calm strains, Katzenelson, a member of the government-run National Agricultural Technology Institute's entomology division said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Ironically, it was through a sort of mutation that the killer bee threat arose two decades ago when an American geneticist, Dr. Robert Kerr, introduced an African variety of bees into Brazil to cross-breed them with local strains, apparently to obtain more honey.

By accident, 26 African queen bees escaped and intermingled freely with local strains, thereby creating the killer. Since then, these bees have spread through Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay, Peru and as far north as Venezuela, leading to fears among American scientists that some day they may reach the United States.

Katzenelson says his only answer to the bee problem in this country is to transform the killers into peaceful bees by introducing the calm strain characteristics into the aggressives.

Also, he admitted, there are limited funds and manpower in the fight against the bees, apparently because the government considers the bee question less vital than the struggle against leftist guerrillas and the improvement of the crisis-riddled economy.

Nevertheless, the problem has gained notoriety in Argentina in recent weeks after a spate of attacks in northern tropical regions where the bees thrive. Havoc has also been inflicted on the bee industry because the killers infiltrate and take over gentle beehives.

"We do not believe we will ever be able to eradicate the killer bees but at least we may be able to control them," Katzenelson said. "If we can't control them, then one day in a few years we are going to have bee raids right in the heart of Buenos Aires."

CHARGE PROGRAM

The Bank of North Carolina N.A. announced that it is now offering a charge card program designed for persons with an above average income who do substantial business and personal traveling and entertaining.

The American Express Gold Bank Card, BNC said, provides the full range of international charge privileges of the American Express Card, plus the security of a cash reserve of at least $2,000 issued by the bank.

SALES IMPROVED

Du Pont announced in its annual report that on a consolidated basis, corporate sales totaled $8,361 million, an increase of 16 per cent over the previous year.

Net income of $459 million, equivalent to $9.30 per share, was 69 per cent above the "very depressed level" of the previous year, the report indicated.

The improvement, it was pointed out, is attributable to a ten per cent increase in physical volume of shipments.

In Hurry To Tap Natural Gas Fields

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus says he is in a hurry to get untapped natural gas fields into production to avoid a repetition of this winter's critical shortage.

"We're going to establish a timetable for these people," he declared in an interview Friday.

The secretary said he will make almost immediate use of results of an investigation getting underway shortly into whether oil companies have withheld natural gas reserves in the Gulf of Mexico.

As a five-to seven-member team completes work on each offshore natural gas field, Andrus said, he will demand a "rolling report" on which he can take immediate action, including ordering gas into production if necessary.

"We will start implementing those solutions while they (the investigators) go on to the next field," Andrus said, "instead of sitting and waiting for 90 days and getting a bound volume which no one will read."

While Andrus was interviewed in his spacious offices, a fire burned quietly in the fireplace. Although the outside temperature was in the 60s, he said the fire was needed to help heat the Interior building, a drafty structure built during the presidency of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Andrus said if he orders a natural gas field into production over the objections of producers, "they always have recourse to the courts."

Cuban Resort Planned

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cyrus Eaton Jr. has confirmed that he is negotiating to build and operate a $200 million tourist resort on Cuba's northeast coast.

Eaton, son of industrialist Cyrus Eaton Sr., returned recently from a visit to Cuba. He said Friday that a decision on whether to proceed with the 3,000-room resort probably will be made this summer.

He noted American travel restrictions to Cuba were lifted Friday, and he said the island has a shortage of hotel space.

Eaton said the resort would be owned and operated jointly by his firm, Tower International Inc., and the Cuban government.

Tower is a division of Clayton International Industries Ltd. of Toronto, Canada, which Eaton owns. He said all business dealings with Cuba were being handled through Canada.

The U.S. government still prohibits trade with Cuba.

James-Barnes Vows Said On Saturday Afternoon

Hooker Memorial Christian Church was the setting for the marriage of Susan Terry Barnes and Jackie Earl James Saturday at 4:00 p.m.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hobert Wilton Barnes of Greenville. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Earl James of Greenville.

The Rev. Ralph Messick officiated at the double ring ceremony. A program of wedding music was presented by Mr. David Winstead, organist, of Enfield. Special selections were rendered by Tim Hoffman of Washington, D. C., accompaning on the oboe.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white knit. The empire bodice featured a portrait neckline encircled with Venise lace and bridal pearls. The empire waist was accented with appliques of matching lace. The full bishop sleeves of chiffon were cuffed at the wrist with lace. The A-line skirt, which continued into a chapel length train, was bordered by daisies and Venise lace.

To complete her attire, the bride wore a three-quarter length scalloped mantilla edged in rows of bridal pearls. Her bouquet was a colonial cluster of pink roses, pink carnations, white daisies, gysophilia and ivy.

The bride's honor attendant was Phyllis Swindell of Swan Quarter. Her formal A-line gown of pink knit featured a cape illusion. A matching picture hat with pink flowing ribbons down the back completed her ensemble. She carried a colonial cluster of featured pink carnations, white daisies and gypsohilia.

The bridegroom's father served as best man. Ushers were Jeffery William James, brother of the bridegroom, Steven F. Hedrick of Rocky Mount, cousin of the bridegroom, Larry D. Parker of Tarboro, uncle of the bridegroom. The spiral tapers were lighted by Steven David Barnes, brother of the bride.

The mother of the bride chose a formal A-line gown of ocean blue knit. A flowing chiffon capelet and a crystal pin accented the empire bodice. She wore a corsage of white carnations.

The mother of the bridegroom wore a formal gown of strawberry knit and chiffon with an empire bodice and V-neckline. She wore a corsage of white carnations.

Grandmothers of the bridegroom were remembered with corsages.

The wedding was directed by Mr. and Mrs. Ed Glenn.

The bride is a graduate of Rose High School and was graduated from the Dental Assistant School of Wayne Community College, Goldsboro. She is associated with Dr. Jasper L. Lewis Jr., D.D.S. The bridegroom is a graduate of Rose High School and plans to graduate as a mechanical engineer in May from Pitt Technical Institute. He is also employed in his father's business.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church given by the bride's parents. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. A. Edward Harrell of Rich Square, and Mr. and Mrs. Bobby E. Davis of Roanoke Rapids, aunts and uncles of the bride.

After the bridal couple cut the traditional first slice of wedding cake, guests were served by Mrs. James Terrell of Greenville. Mrs. Gene Weber of Annapolis, Md., aunt of the bride, poured punch.

Good-byes were said to Mr. and Mrs. C. Franklin Davis of Greenville, aunt and uncle of the bride.

An after-rehearsal dinner for the wedding party and out-of-town guests was given Friday night at the Holiday Inn by the bridegroom's parents. Approximately 30 guests were in attendance.

How To Locate Missing Relatives

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: A recent article in the Birmingham (Ala.) News credits you with helping to unite two sisters who hadn't seen each other for 23 years.

The older girl came to the U.S.A. as a war bride. Six years later, both parents died and the younger sister, then 13, was placed with a German family. That's when her American sister lost track of her. Even the German courts were unable to locate the younger sister to inform her that she had been left a small inheritance.

Three years ago, the American sister wrote to you asking for your help in locating her sister in Germany, and you suggested that she write to the Salvation Army. She did. It took them three years, but they found her. (She had married, and her name had been changed.)

Now I would like to locate a brother I haven't heard from in 12 years. I don't even know if he's alive. How do I go about getting the Salvation Army to help me? How much do they charge? Thank you.

LOOKING FOR LEO

DEAR LOOKING: The Salvation Army's Missing Persons Bureau has branches in every state in the nation and has located more than 8,500 lost or strayed persons in the last year.

When no crime has been committed, the police, Red Cross and welfare agencies refer callers to the Salvation Army. They have reunited adopted children with their "real" parents, returned to their families men who got tired of "freedom" but were too embarrassed to go home. Brothers and sisters who had been separated in childhood have also been brought together.

The Salvation Army has no special method. They check forwarding addresses and military records, telephone old friends and ex-employers.

Some people do not want to be found because they have found a better life than the one they abandoned. In that case, the Salvation Army reports that they have located the missing person but cannot reveal his whereabouts.

Whether a search requires two days or 10 years, the cost is the same—one dollar. And believe it or not, some folks don't pay.

If you want help in locating a lost relative, write to me and I'll forward your letter to the Missing Persons Department of the Salvation Army.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a father who takes showers and baths with his 8-year-old daughter?

He and the girl's mother are divorced, and he has custody of the girl. (The mother wanted her, but the court decided in favor of the father.)

The girl is large for her age, has reached the stage of curiosity about her own body and has very little modesty. She adores her father and likes to cuddle up with him and kiss him while watching television.

He has two bedrooms in his apartment, but I know this child crawls into his bed at night.

Am I concerned for no good reason? And at what age do children outgrow such behavior? There is no communication between the parents.

JUST WONDERING

DEAR JUST: The child is much too old for the intimacies you describe. Cuddling is fine, but showering and bathing together, and sharing one bed are out! If the mother can prove that the above allegations are indeed true, she could go to court and possibly gain custody of the child.

New York Hairdresser Calls Cutting An Art

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Richard Stein of New York is a very unusual hairdresser. He doesn't brush hair or color it. He doesn't curl it or tease it or spray it. He just washes it and cuts it.

"I strive for an anti-coiffeur look — a really natural hairdo — cut perfectly for easy care at home between haircuts, a haircut that is unique for the individual."

Most beauty parlor ministrations "are addictive," in his opinion. If you begin using a hair conditioner, you must continue using it; color or bleach must be maintained or hair roots will darken. Or it might be a permanent wave that will need to be kept up, he said.

"Hair care has become too big a deal for women. And too expensive. Why put a lot of energy into devices — curlers, pin curls, sprays and so on — when you can, instead, give all that time to improving the hair itself," he says.

"I am trying to introduce a European approach to haircutting, treating it as a craft, an art, a very serious business," explained Stein, who was born in London and apprenticed there at 15, coming to the United States 10 years ago. "We want to show customers how to care for their hair between haircuts, a period of about two months."

It takes 30 to 45 minutes to get one of the super haircuts at his salon, where his staff has been trained in the technique. It is all done with scissors and comb.

At the end of the cut, the hair is almost dry, anyway, he points out. If a little help in drying is needed, a blow dryer is used for a few moments, otherwise no heat is used. He doesn't use hair brushes, which "can break the hair."

"It is really an uphill struggle, though, to sell the idea," the 29-year-old father of two explained. "But once a woman has such a haircut, she usually is thrilled."

As if to confirm his statement, one of his young customers who had just had a haircut by a member of his staff eagerly volunteered her pleasure. Her own slight wave was stimulated into body and movement that provided a kind of controlled bounce.

"If you understand what hair will do, you can find haircutting a great challenge, providing possibilities for changing styles with one cut. It need not be covered with rollers, teased or sprayed," Stein maintains.

For spring he anticipates longer layered hair. To get it in shape he suggests washing it once a day with seven parts water to one part shampoo because "most shampoos are too concentrated and leave a film on the hair." If the shampoo is diluted, the hair can be washed each day.

And if you want to condition it, try mayonnaise — use a few tablespoons of it, combing it through the hair, cover it with a shower cap and leave the cap on for two hours before shampooing the hair several times. It is a good treatment for dry, coarse hair, he said.

Liquid vitamin E and baby oil are other good hair conditioners, Stein says. Apply the oil to dry areas with a cotton pad, wearing rubber gloves. Soak a towel in very hot water, wringing it and wrapping it around the head. Leave it on until the heat dissipates. Reheat the towel and repeat process from seven to ten times. Shampoo the hair three or four times to get rid of excess oil.

To give hair a sheen, rinse it with a mixture of equal parts of nettles, rosemary and dill (two teaspoons of each) that has been steeped in a pint of hot water for about one half-hour. Use the strained cool liquid as a final rinse, he suggests.

Women Join Men Underground

By JOHN KUGLIN
Associated Press Writer

KELLOGG, Idaho (AP) — It takes Mary Miner an hour to get down to work.

She commutes on an underground railroad which she boards at the portal of the Bunker Hill Mine, one of the world's largest lead mines.

Once inside, she transfers to a "skip," a sled on steeply inclined rails, to reach her job more than half a mile under the surface.

"I'm just one of the boys," said Mrs. Miner, 35, the mother of eight children and one of six women who began toiling 16 months ago side by side with 200 men in the mine.

Because of tradition, superstition and perhaps a little male chauvinism, women haven't until now been allowed to work underground in North Idaho's Coeur d'Alene Mining District.

Despite superstition, there have been no cave-ins. The Bunker Hill Mine is still intact.

"A few of the men don't like to work with women," said mine Supt. Harry Cougher. "But this isn't superstition. They probably wouldn't like to work with women on the surface, either. If there are any complaints, it is from the wives of some of the miners, and most of this is barroom talk."

Six women began their mining careers after they were transferred from jobs in the smelter near the mine, where they were exposed to high lead levels.

Reports in medical journals said women exposed to such levels could give birth to children with defects or suffer stillbirths and miscarriages, the company said.

Mrs. Miner is the engineer on what salty miners call a "mozzer." It's a five-ton, battery-powered locomotive which hauls a string of 3 1-2-ton ore cars. The other women operate motors and hoists used to transport ore, miners and equipment.

"There aren't that many women excited about working down there," said Cougher. "Sometimes the motor operators have to lift heavy timbers. A great deal of physical strength is required." Humidity in the big lead, silver and zinc mine is nearly 100 per cent.

Ann Scott, 36, a grandmother and mother of six children, was operating an underground hoist before she took a leave of absence.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Most people have a communications problem with their dentist or hygienist.

This is probably because one of the parties is trying to communicate under a slight handicap. That is: (a) his entire mouth has been put to sleep; (b) there is a hanger over his lip sucking out all the saliva; (c) a pair of hands are busy picking at his gums until he bleeds; (d) there is a smoking drill in the mouth which if it touches his tongue will cause great pain.

For some unexplained reason, a dentist or hygienist who speaks a conservative six words a year will suddenly realize he has a captive audience and break into twenty questions.

It has always bothered me that the victimee is at a decided disadvantage and has no recourse but to sit there and listen.

That is why I would like to see the following set of responses standardized and available to persons in the dentist or hygienist's chair.

A bite on the dentist's forefinger translates to: "You are standing on my tongue."

Eyes closed, accompanied by a low snore: "Hearing about the septic tank you put in at your cabin is boring."

Entire body coming off the contour chair and remaining airborne for a full 15 seconds: "Yes, that tooth is a little sensitive when you tap it with a mallet."

Spit once in the sink: "I have one child."

Spit twice in the sink: "Two or more children."

A low moan: "No, I have never thought about braces at my age."

A high moan: I'm not THAT old!"

Tears coming out of eyes and running down cheeks: "What do I have to do to convince you I'll floss after every meal?"

Hand and arm raised in a fully extended position above the head: Permission to leave.

Burying head in nose tissue for five minutes: A sign of hostility which when translated means, "I don't like you anymore. You're getting on my nerves . . . literally."

Clenched lips, rising to feet and heading toward the door: "It's been nice talking with you."

Credibility Pays Off For LA Police Dept.

By JACK V. FOX

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A few years ago the Los Angeles city council appropriated $200,000 to the police department for helicopters.

As the session ended, Tom Bradley, then a councilman and now mayor, turned to police chief Edward Davis and said:

"I suppose you could use another $200,000 for submarines?"

"Yes, then we would have a land, air and sea force," Davis replied, chuckling.

Somehow the chuckle got lost in the shuffle and the news media reported that Chief Davis wanted $200,000 for a fleet of mini-subs.

By the next day the police department's press office was deluged with calls from across the nation asking for particulars about its U-boat program.

Exasperated by the ludicrous misunderstanding of a jesting exchange, Lt. Dan Cooke of the LAPD press section decided to play it straight. As he recalls it, one call was from a reporter from an East Coast newspaper.

"Yes," he said, "it is true. We are asking for submarines."

"Isn't that unprecedented?" asked the reporter.

"It is," Cooke replied. "I know of no city in the world that has its own submarine force."

Warming to his topic, Cooke said that the department, encouraged by the success of the TV cop series, Adam 12, was backing a pilot film to be known as U-Boat 12.

The reporter asked where the underseas craft would operate.

"There's the rub," said Cooke.

"The Coast Guard has advised us they have jurisdiction over coastal waters. The Navy handles the high seas.

"Then where will you operate?" asked the reporter.

"We intend to put our craft in MacArthur Lake (a pond in a park in the center of the city not far from the Ambassador Hotel), up periscope and keep under surveillance drunks and sex fiends on the shores," Cooke replied.

Dan Cooke has been fielding inquiries like that since he moved into his job 13 years ago as shirt-sleeves intermediary with the press under department head Cmdr. Pete Hagen.

Only in Southern California could it happen.

Cooke has gone through the Robert Kennedy assassination, the Charles Manson murders, the 1971 earthquake, the Skid Row slasher, the West Side rapist, the "Alphabet Bomber," a psychotic holding a hostage on a skycraper to protest cigarette smoking, an airline hijacker asking for live time on TV, the Symbionese Liberation Army shootout, the Watts race riot, forest fires, mudslides, celebrity suicides.

Somehow Cooke retains his equanimity. But even he wonders how.

One reason may be that he has earned credibility with the news media by insisting, with the approval of the three police chiefs he has served under, that photographers and reporters have a right to be on the scene of major crime events, ask tough questions and get straight answers.

His baptism of journalistic fire came with the RFK assassination in 1968 at the Ambassador Hotel. There were 200 news media representatives already in Los Angeles covering Kennedy and hundreds more poured in from around the world.

The department set up a press credentialling system in the Parker Center auditorium. The police questioned approximately 5,000 persons, including everyone who was in the Ambassador ballroom, in its determination to find whether Sirhan Sirhan acted alone.

The Sharon Tate-LaBianca murders followed close behind.

"I have to give the news media the highest marks on that one," Cooke recalls. "Two television stations knew at least a week ahead that Manson was our prime suspect but they held off because three key figures — Linda Kasabian, Tex Watson and Patricia Krenwinkel — were still at large."

One of the concerns was whether the tremor had weakened the dam holding back the waters of the Van Norman Reservoir in the San Fernando Valley.

"I went down into the dam and was shocked at how badly it had been damaged and how easily it could give way," he said. "I decided the press should be permitted to see it for themselves and the chief agreed. The Department of Water and Power said the reporters and photographers could get killed and I told them, "that's their job — they have a right to get killed."

Cooke said that on-the-level reporting helped immensely in persuading 80,000 persons living immediately below the dam to agree to evacuation.

The news media, however, must take full responsibility for its coverage, particularly in these days of electronic journalism with mini-cameras reporting live from the scene, Cooke says.

He deplored a recent incident in which a demented man held a hostage on the ledge of the 56-story United Bank of California building and television went on live with cameras trained from helicopters.

On the other hand, Cooke defends permitting live television coverage of the 1974 SLA shootout in south central Los Angeles in which six of Patricia Hearst's kidnapers perished in a flaming wooden home.

Cooke says the TV coverage established once and for all that the desperate band was firing at police who had called on them by loudspeaker to surrender.

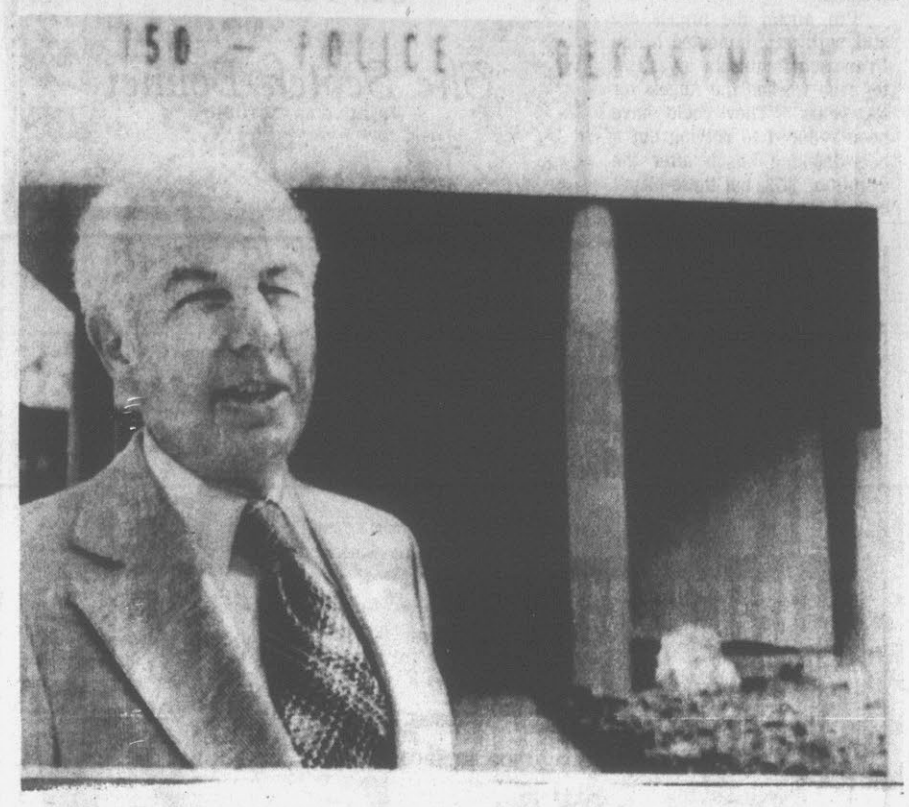

"You can imagine what the uproar might have been if we had attempted to keep photographers and reporters away," he says.

California crimes have a deserved reputation for the bizarre, he acknowledges. Not only in Los Angeles but in the northern part of the state with the Patty Hearst case, the mass murders by Juan Corona in Yuba City and the recent kidnaping and burial of a busload of schoolchildren from Chowchilla.

"I don't have an explanation," Cooke says. "Only that this area has long attracted all sorts of queer people, religious fanatics, people with sex aberrations..."

Crimes and violence involving celebrities in show business are sure to make international headlines, he notes.

A case in point was the recent suicide of comedian Freddie Prinze.

LT. DAN COOKE of the Los Angeles Police Dept. press section, has earned credibility with the news media by insisting that reporters and photographers have the right to be on the scene of major crime events. (UPI Photo)

Hell's Angels Went Underground

EDITOR'S NOTE — Sonny Barger, 38, is a model inmate at Folsom Prison, taking college-level courses, playing guitar and lifting weights. His wife, a former beauty queen, visits him. So, say authorities, do Hell's Angels. In fact, they say, he runs the renegade bikers gone underground from his cell.

By TIM REITERMAN
Associated Press Writer

"They've been saying they could destroy the club for 20 years. The attorney general once said that if you got certain guys, the club would just fall apart. Well, they got us, but we're getting bigger and better." — Ralph "Sonny" Barger Jr.

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — When Hell's Angels chieftain Sonny Barger and some top lieutenants went to prison four years ago, many law enforcement officials predicted that the notorious motorcycle club soon would run out of gas.

The Angels, for the most part, stowed their "colors" — vests flying their winged skull patch — in closets and relegated their chopped Harleys to garages.

But largely out of the public eye, they have matured as an organized crime family with worldwide bases. Their membership has climbed, new chapters have been incorporated and legitimate businesses have become more commonplace.

That is the assessment of investigators who say the Angels have continued their prime activities — peddling drugs, guns, explosives and stolen motorcycle parts. And although the Angels reportedly have started killing their own with increasing frequency, the average age has crept into the 30s.

"The problem has simply gone underground," says a Santa Clara County undercover agent. "They used to be up front and riding down the street raising hell. Because of the heat on the leaders, their activity has gone underground. There's little difference between them and traditional organized crime."

In the 27 years since the Angels formed their band in the gritty steel town of Fontana, Calif., they have remained the most powerful and widespread renegade motorcycle club. If anything, trials and arrests of recent years have enhanced their reputation among bikers.

Investigators from a half dozen jurisdictions say that Barger, Angels president from 1957 until 1973, remains in total control although he currently is serving a 10-year-to-life narcotics sentence at Folsom Prison. They contend he communicates with the club through visitors, who include club members and his wife, Sharon, a former beauty queen.

Barger, 38, works as a janitor in the honor cellblock. He is taking college-level courses, plays guitar and lifts weights. Prison officials say he is a model prisoner. Under the current sentencing law, the soonest he could get out is 1980, but he is waging court battles for another date.

"A lot of people listen to what I say. I've been around a long time," Barger said in an interview. "The club's bigger, got a lot more members and a lot more charters, especially in Europe. We have them in Switzerland, West Germany, Austria, Autralia, New Zealand and at least eight in California and at least a dozen across the country."

In 1973, Barger and several Oakland brethren were acquitted of murdering a Texas drug dealer, but Barger later was convicted of narcotics possession for sale. In the same year, lieutenants Sergy "Sir Gay" Walton and Gary Popkin were sentenced for drug possession, and secretary-treasurer Bert Stefanson was sentenced for transportation and possession of cocaine and explosives.

At least a half dozen members from the dominant Oakland chapter — and other chapters — already were in prison for crimes ranging from drugs and assault to murder. But what prompted authorities to predict the beginning of the end was the emergence of two informants — William "Whispering Bill" Pifer and George "Baby Huey" Wethern.

Pifer, who later died of throat cancer, had witnessed the torture slayings of two Georgia bikers. Wethern, a former Oakland vice president, provided graves at his Ukiah, Calif., ranch. He has been given a new name and location by investigators.

Their testimony helped convict several Angels from the East Bay area of Richmond, and they reportedly told investigators of the internal workings of a club never known to be infiltrated.

"If people didn't talk to police, they couldn't catch a cold. In every major case, they got an informant trying to save his own neck." — Barger.

The highly mobile Angels responded by shifting activities to other areas and trying to change their public image.

The San Jose and Los Angeles chapters rented billboards and waged a "No Hope with Dope" campaign, with leaders like San Jose president Phil Cross appearing before news media and college audiences.

"We had a wiretap and the Angels would be discussing a dope deal, then Cross would say, 'Hey, I've gotta split to be at the TV studio to do my number,'" according to Michael Sterrett, a special attorney with the federal Organized Crime Strike Force.

Within six months, Cross was indicted on drug charges. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced Dec. 9, 1975, to four years.

Sources say the switch began in the mid-1960's when the Angels found money dealing marijuana, LSD and other drugs in the emerging hippie scenes. They later emphasized heroin, cocaine and amphetamines.

Investigators also say there is a trend toward investment in legitimate business — catering services, motorcycle shops, bars and massage parlors. San Francisco Angels president "Flash Gordon" Grow recently was indicted on pimping and pandering charges related to his interests in a massage parlor.

"The guys have motorcycle shops and stuff and are struggling to make an honest living. When the cops put (these accusations) on them, they might as well be making an illegal living, robbing or whatever. Members are not going to get any peace one way or the other." — Barger.

When Barger started the Oakland chapter in 1957 at the age of 18, most members were neighborhood buddies in their late teens. But when some Angels started making a living at it in the late 1960's, retirements dwindled and "prospects" increased. Membership now is estimated to exceed 500 in California alone.

"It used to be that you could get out by taking a beating," said a Santa Clara County district attorney's investigator. "Now if you try to get out, they kill you. Everybody knows too many dangerous things."

Investigators list several unsolved murders and disappearances of Angels in the past several years. A former Oakland vice president and a former Vallejo president are among the missing.

"(The club's attitude toward informants) isn't too friendly . .. The club is more of a lifestyle than a hobby. The people who come in as a hobby don't stay around long. All they have to do to get out is say they quit." — Barger.

Law officers say recent activity has been concentrated in Solano County, between strongholds in the San Francisco Bay area and Sacramento, where the Angels once were harassed into disbanding.

The Solano County district attorney's office reports that four Angels fugitives, including one wanted for murder, were captured there in the last few months.

"I'm afraid the Angels are still with us," lamented a San Francisco Peninsula investigator who worked the Angels for six years. "They could have been reduced to nothing but a beer-drinking bunch after the events of 1973, but there hasn't been a proper followup."

More Strict On Hand Baggage

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — Australia's main domestic airlines Ansett and TAA are taking a stricter line on the amount of hand baggage passengers carry aboard flights.

In a joint announcement, the airlines said passengers will be asked to observe the 8.8 pounds limit on hand baggage. Extra baggage must travel in the hold.

Regulations said the only baggage allowed in an aircraft's cabin are those which can be stowed in enclosed overhead racks, under the seat or behind passengers' legs.

All-Volunteer Fire Corps Guards Santiago, Chile

By WILLIAM R. LONG
Associated Press Writer

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Chief Jorge Salas offers this recommendation to big-city citizens who want the best fire protection with the smallest tax bite: do it yourself.

Salas is a 56-year-old advertising executive. He is also a 35-year veteran of Santiago's volunteer firefighting corps, and its current commander.

The chief is proud to say that Santiago is the only major city in the world that meets the universal need for fire protection with an all-volunteer force.

"A volunteer fire corps functions better than a paid corps," he said. "It's the spirit that you can't buy for money. The volunteer is not a man who is doing a job because he has to — he is doing it because he likes to."

That cost-free spirit obviously is easy on the taxpayer. The Santiago fire department covers an area with a population of more than 1 million on an annual budget of just over $500,000 — roughly 50 cents a head.

A government study several years ago indicated that the cost would multiply if paid firemen were doing the same job.

Chile has 250 fire departments with a total of 30,000 volunteers. There isn't a paid fireman anywhere in the nation of 10 million.

In metropolitan Santiago, with a total population of 3 million, there are 12 different departments.

The central Santiago department has 1,800 volunteers and 60 paid employes. Those who draw salaries have such jobs as driving the trucks, operating the modern communications center, compiling statistics and typing the chief's letters.

The department was born in the ashes of one of the worst fires in history. The disaster struck a big Santiago church on the Day of the Immaculate Conception in 1863, killing an estimated 2,000 persons who were attending mass.

Santiago's first fire company, which still exists, was founded by volunteers 12 days after the church fire.

Through the years, 21,000 volunteers have served in the corps, including two national presidents and many other prominent Chileans.

Fireman Patricio Castro, 20, is a student who joined the 1st Company a year and a half ago, acting out a childhood daydream.

"I have always liked firetrucks, firemen, fires ever since I was little," Castro says. After he joined the company, he found out that his great-grandfather was one of its founders.

The 1st Company still has the first steam fire pump used in South America. The brass and copper contraption made in 1860 by the Portland Co. of Portland, Maine, sits next to a modern firetruck in the company headquarters on downtown Moneda street.

The Santiago department has a full range of sophisticated firefighting equipment, including 350 shortwave radio receivers and three trucks with telescopic ladders that reach 14 stories.

Ivan Guerrero, head of the fire section of the Re-insurance Bank of Chile, confirms that the firefighters have "very efficient equipment."

And Guerrero said Chile's ratio of fire damage costs to insurance premiums paid was among the lowest in the world.

Part of the reason for that is the fire-resistant construction of Chilean buildings. Most structures over three stories high are made of thick concrete with steel reinforcement, as a precaution against the constant threat of earthquakes.

Guerrero said another reason for low fire damage in Chile is inflation, with its percentage rates in the hundreds for the past five years.

"They say the greater part of fires in the world are intentional," Guerrero told a reporter. "With the inflation, it isn't to anyone's advantage to have a fire." The cash payoff from an insurance company isn't usually enough to replace the lost property at inflated prices.

But Guerrero said volunteer fire departments deserve the main credit for Chile's high fire safety marks.

Missionary Will Speak At Meet

MRS. WILLIAM O. HERN

JAMESVILLE — Mrs. William O. Hern, a Southern Baptist missionary on furlough from Beirut, Lebanon, will speak at the South Roanoke Baptist Associational Woman's Missionary Union session to be held Tuesday at 10 a.m. at the Cedar Branch Baptist Church here.

Appointed for missionary service in 1954, the Herns served in the Baptist Hospital, Ajloun, Jordan, until 1971, when they were transferred to Berirut, where they are involved in evangelism and church development.

Mrs. Hern graduated from Mars Hill College and from the Duke University School of Nursing. She also attended Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary.

Also appearing on the program will be the Rev. Coy Privette, president of the N. C. Baptist State Convention. He will explain the Bold Mission program, a joint endeavor of the Baptist State Convention and the Southern Baptist Convention and its agencies.

Presiding during the day will be WMU Director, Mrs. Jennings Teal, Tarboro. Host pastor Paul Weaver will lead the devotional period and Mrs. Nancy Crisp, local WMU director, will give the welcome.

Associational officers, directors and committees will report during the business session. Churches receiving awards will be recognized. The meeting will be concluded with lunch provided by the Cedar Branch WMU.

On The Young Side

By JANET GANTT

Spring has brought a new spurt of activities for clubs from J. H. Rose High School. Many students represented various school organizations at conventions.

Seniors had to take achievement tests for the last time during their high school careers Wednesday. Adding to the excitement of the week was the announcement of honors awarded to two students.

Band members traveled to local schools to display their talents and provide entertainment for other student bodies. Participating in the musical programs were Willie Morris, Lance Cain, Grady Roberson, Charles Morgan, Kevin Connolly, Brent Stocks, Chris Knight, Henry Wooten, Chris Moye, Walt Gurganus, Kenny Agee, H. L. Austin, Wanda Stokes, Linda Lambeth, Steve Alexander, Drew Smith, Bob Gray, Scott Carson, Ann Banks, Jimmy Lamb, Lindy Pollard, Dennis Hearne, Hardy Whitehurst and Jimmy Riggs.

Another important activity was the Future Homemakers' Convention. Accompanied by Mrs. Erma Carr, faculty advisor for the group, members participated in the F.H.A.-H.E.R.O. Rally held in Greensboro. Bernadette Cox, Laura Logsdon, Iris Moye and Terri Reese spent Friday and Saturday at the affair. Lillian Clemons, Beverly Hawkins, Kathy Menton, Joyce Dupree and Joyce Joyner were also in attendance.

The school Industrial Arts Department sponsored several people in a bricklaying contest including, Larry Brooks, Willie Jones, James Hawkins, Willie Roach, Rickey Warren, Casper Evans, Reginald Peterson, James Harper and Joseph Williams.

Competing in the contest Monday were Ronnie Reddick, James Williams, David Johnson, Carmen Williams, Dennis Adams, Milton Barrett, Stanley Nichols and Calvin Daniels.

Ray Alexander, a junior, was awarded second place in a V.I.C.A. speech contest. The competition was held at the V.I.C.A. District 1 convention and participants were required to deliver a prepared speech. He was joined by V.I.C.A. students from other eastern North Carolina schools.

Congratulations to Joni Buck on receiving an academic scholarship. She was recently notified that she is the recipient of a four-year scholarship to St. Andrews College, Laurinburg.

An outstanding senior, Joni has been a member of the Keywanettes, Quill and Scroll and National Honor Society. She also served as a marshal during graduation ceremonies her junior year.

Final selections were made after interviews at St. Andrews last week.

RELIABLE USED CARS

12 MONTHS OR 12,000 MILES USED CAR WARRANTY

This guarantee applies to cars selling for $1000.00 and up. On a 50-50 basis. All work must be done in our shop. This warranty does not apply to any sport cars, high performance or air cooled engines or 4 speed transmissions (except economy cars). Most good used cars (even if they look like new) are only guaranteed for a month. Or for a thousand miles. No more. And some are not guaranteed at all. But at Tarheel when we say a used car is in excellent condition, we're willing to stand behind it. We're willing to do something a little extra for it. So we guarantee its motor, its rear end and its transmission for twelve months or twelve thousand miles. If you're in the market for a better used car, come out to Tarheel and look at ours. We'll show you some as good as new. Guaranteed. Asterisk denotes warranted car.

Bing Crosby Celebrates His 50th Year In Show Business Sunday

Bing Crosby, celebrating his 50th year in show business, is joined by a stellar guest roster of old friends and new ones, on "Bing," a 90-minute special of music, memories and laughter to be presented Sunday, March 20 (9-10 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Bing Crosby, a man whose first or last name alone identifies him around the world with a special brand of artistry, is celebrating his 50th year in show business. In honor of this exciting anniversary he is joined by Bob Hope and a stellar guest roster of friends — new and old — on "Bing," 90 minutes of music, laughter and nostalgia, Sunday, March 20, 9 to 10:30 p.m. on CBS-TV.

Success in show business is an elusive goal, according to Bing, who believes that "it's even tougher now" for young musical performers to scale the heights.

"When I started out 50 years ago, there wasn't such heavy competition," Crosby notes. "I'm not saying that the talent wasn't there, but there were only a few centers for developing artists and only a handful of record companies. Nowadays a kid can make a 'demo' record in his own attic — and many of them do. So, it's easy for a really fine talent to get lost in the crowd."

During his now legendary career, Crosby has introduced more than 800 songs, sold more than 300 million records, starred in more top money-making films than any other performer, and won an Academy Award for one of them. For a musical performer, selection of the right music plays a large part in success, he says.

"In the old days the choice was limited — today it's endless," Crosby declared. "Good music is around, just as it always has been. It's knowing it when you hear it that separates the gold records from the tin whistles."

Crosby, who won his Academy Award for "Going My Way" and received an Oscar nomination for "The Country Girl," doubts that he'll even make another movie. "Television is much more satisfying for a performer like me. It reaches more people at one time than will probably see a film during its entire run. And I like the 'toughterness' with an audience that television offers."

Joining Hope and Crosby in the gala celebration are Jack Albertson, Paul Anka, Pearl Bailey, Frank Capra, Kathryn Crosby, Harry Crosby, Mary Frances Crosby, Nathaniel Crosby, jazz pianist Joe Bushkin, Rosemary Clooney, Sandy Duncan, Alice Faye, Phil Harris, Donald O'Connor, Martha Raye, Bette Midler and The Mills Brothers.

Burr Begins Another Series

Raymond Burr, whose two long-running television series, "Perry Mason" and "Ironside," made him one of the nation's most popular stars, returns to weekly television in "Kingston: Confidential," starring Wednesday, March 23 10 to 11 p.m. on NBC-TV.

Burr stars as R.B. Kingston, chief investigative reporter for the Frazier Group, a powerful chain of newspapers and television stations.

In the premiere episode, Kingston and his two assistants, Tony Marino and Beth Kelly (series regulars Art Hindle and Pamela Hensley) move quickly when they learn that former labor czar Sam Lucas (Joseph Misak), who demanded his old job back after his release from prison, has disappeared.

Their investigation of the kidnapping leads them to Kathleen Morgan (guest star Mariette Harley) a shy young teacher who refuses to reveal her knowledge of Lucas's disappearance — until she learns that the mob has ordered her execution.

Since the Watergate investigations became the nation's prime interest, today's heroes are coming from the ranks of journalists. Certainly the Washington investigations brought the journalist's craft to the attention of the American public, and the glorification of the team of Woodward and Bernstein is a clue that the reporter is an up-and-coming hero. Now, along comes Kingston.

Like the Woodward and Bernstein team, Kingston and his assistants, through careful journalistic digging, will expose all diverse manners of corruption and crime.

American Film Institute Salutes Bette Davis

"I had the courage to take charge of my career and argue when I thought I was being given something that was wrong," states Bette Davis, who, after having appeared in 85 motion pictures, will be the first woman to received the prestigious American Film Institute Life Achievement Award on "The American Film Institute Salute to Bette Davis" special, to be broadcast Monday, March 21, 9:30 to 11 p.m. on CBS-TV.

"Joan Blondell told me that she wished she had fought as hard as I did for good parts in all those years under contract," Miss Davis continued. "Maybe 'fight' is too bad a word, because it wasn't actualy physical spitting and fighting. It was simple determination — I wanted to work with good directors, be given good scripts, work with talented actors, and not rely on false advertising."

Perhaps more ahead of her time then than other actresses who worked in films in the 30's and 40's, Miss Davis claims to have fought for truth in film advertising.

"They would have a display poster suggesting that a half-naked lady was a middle-aged school teacher. The audiences would pay their money, go in and take their seats and on the screen in walks Bette Davis, playing a middle-aged school teacher.

"I think the public was often infuriated by this. As a matter of fact I got many poster changed. I always believed in being as honest with audiences as you could be.

Bette Davis, a woman whose name, face and voice are synonymous the world over with the traditional Hollywood of the "big movies," will receive the American Film Institute Life Achievement Award, honoring her for her many contributions to the film art, on "The . American Film Institute Salute to Bette Davis" special, Monday, March 21 (9:30-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Winkler Plays Romeo

The mere thought of playing Shakespeare once gave him the shivers. The last time he tackled the Bard was as a drama major at Yale, playing Siwald, a soldier, in "Macbeth." But he's come quite a way since his days in New Haven. Now, here he is playing Romeo at the prestigious Stratford (Conn.) Shakespeare Theatre with nary a speck of "flop sweat" on his brow.

He's Henry Winkler (of "Happy Days"), and for those who may have been orbiting Venus for the last couple of years, Henry's to the 70's what Ringo, Paul, John and George were to the 60's. You'll get to see some reason for all the fuss when the 31-year-old actor stars in "Henry Winkler Meets William Shakespeare," to be broadcast on "The CBS Festival of Lively Arts for Young People" series, Sunday, March 20, 5 to 6 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Commenting on his sea-to-shining-sea debut as Romeo, Winkler says, "We have here the means to make this a very informative and entertaining hour — to use television to remove the onus from Shakespeare. That's important."

In conversation, he allows a few insecurities to drop out: "During my third year at Yale, there were nights I'd cry myself to sleep worrying about making it after college"; and, "When I auditioned for 'Happy Days' my armpits were so wet you could have swum in them."

Winkler calls what he has a sort of "stoicism." He partially credits his parents. Jewish refugees from Hitler's Germany. Arriving here with nothing, his father worked 14-hour days building up a profitable lumber business. His parents were "Teutonic" in their determination that Henry take an interest in the family business and give up the notion of becoming an actor. Winkler was equally hard-headed. It was a stalemate.

Today, The Winklers are glad Henry bucked them.

"Most people never get to do what they want in life. I feel very lucky to say I'm not most people.

Is it relatively safe to assume that being Henry Winkler means never having to say you're sad? He confirms it: "My life right now is one long birthday party."

'Duffy Moon' To Be Rebroadcast

The littlest boy in the sixth grade discovers unexpected personal powers — with surprising results — in the comedy adventure, "The Amazing Cosmic Awareness of Duffy Moon," an "ABC Afterschool Specials" encore presentation, Wednesday March 23, 4:30 to 5:30 p.m.

Starring Lance Kerwin as Peter Finley and Ike Eisenmann as Duffy Moon with special guest stars Jim Backus as Dr. Flamel and Jerry Van Dyke as Mr. Finley, this funny and poignant children's special centers on the plight of an under-sized but multi-talented boy who realizes his potential through a hilarious set of circumstances.

When his schoolmates kid him about his size, Duffy Moon finds inspiration in a self-improvement course sent to him by a mail-order charlatan.

With the grudging cooperation of his friend and frequent protector, Peter, he forms an odd-jobs company that does everything from bathing a huge Great Dane to baby-sitting for the most impossible children in town to solving the mystery of the eerie sounds in the local "haunted house." Along the way, Duffy Moon, Inc., incurs the enmity of a rival group, "Help Is Here," headed by the alledgedly tyrannical Boots McAfee.

Only when Duffy's new power seems to fail him does he seek out his mail-order mentor, Dr. Flamel, which leads him to a confrontation with the feared Boots, who has vowed to put Moon out of business. In an ususual turn of events, Duffy finds the inner strength to meet the challenge and turn adversity of advanatage.

The special was written by Thomas Baum from the novel, "The Strange But Wonderful Cosmic Awareness of Duffy Moon," by Jean Robinson.

Breaks House Calls Records

As "Today's" 'family doctor,' Dr. Art Ulene makes more 'house calls' than any other physician in the country.

According to NBC Research estimates based on national Nielsen data, he goes into the homes of about 5,000,000 people during his three weekly appearances on the "Today" program.

"It's really been exciting; probably the most creative thing I've ever done," says the Beverly Hills-based obstetrician-gynecologist, who has been a "Today" regular since last September.

"It's really staggering when you think of the number of people you can reach with just one appearance on the program."

Ulene, who also is on the clincial faculty of the University of Southern California School of Medicine, gives tips on everything from reducing to preventing heart attacks.

Topics he has discussed include vitamins, marijuana, plastic surgery, arthritis, epilepsy, and hypertension. He also has demonstrated a maximum stress test, which determines whether a person's heart is strong enough for vigorous exercise.

Ulene, a trim, forthyish father of three, usually works 12-hour days five days a week, and he's trying to cut down — something he finds difficult due to his continent-hopping schedule.

Five Placed In Jeopardy

There is joy for some, tension for others and potential destruction for all in store as Monica Gayle, Cynthia Avila, Karen Valentine and Janet Leigh (l to r) join an all-star cast, including some of the players, coaches and fans of the Houston Astros — in "Murder at the World Series," a world premiere suspense movie filmed on location at the Houston Astrodome and airing as the ABC Sunday Night Movie, March 20 (9-11 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Bruce Boxleitner, who recently starred as Luke Macahan in "How the West Was Won," stars as a troubled young man who plots a bizarre kidnapping during the final two games of the World Series in Houston and places the lives of five innocent women in jeopardy in "Murder at the World Series," a multi-character suspense thriller airing as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie" March 20, 9 to 11 p.m. on ABC-TV.

Lynda Day George, Karen Valentine, Gerald S. O'Loughlin, Michael Parks, Murray Hamilton, Nancy Kelly, Tamara Dobson, Joseph Wiseman a;'d Larry Mahan also star in the drama. Hugh O'Brian is the special guest star and Janet Leigh makes a special guest appearance. The film also features players and coaches of the Houston Astros.

In "Murder at the World Series," the city of Houston is at a fever pitch while the Houston Astros are playing the final two games of the World Series. Tensions are high on the field, where careers are at stake, but the real danger is in the stands, where the players' wives and the team's special guests are unaware that one of them is marked for kidnapping — and possibly murder — by a young man bent on avenging the team's rejection of him.

MALDEN SIGNED FOR FILM

Karl Malden has been set to star in "Captain Courageous," a special two-hour motion picture based on Rudyard Kipling's classic novel, which will be telecast during the 1977-78 season on ABC-TV.

Malden will portray Disko in the TV adaptation of the Kipling novel, which will be filmed this spring off the coast of Maine. Malden currently stars in the series, "The Streets of San Francisco."

Norman Rosemont, who produced the award-winning drama, "The Man Without a Country," which starred Cliff Robertson and the late Robert Ryan, will produce the special. Rosemont has also produced the television adaptations of such classics as "The Count of Monte Cristo" and "The Man in the Iron Mask."

A POSSIBLE "ROOTS" SEQUEL

Discussions are now underway between ABC-TV and producer David Wolper regarding a sequel to "Roots," although the precise form of such an undertaking has not yet been determined.

'The Horse With The Gray Flannel Suit' Part I Airs

Part I of "The Horse in the Gray Flannel Suit" airs on "The Wonderful World of Disney" Sunday, March 20, 7 to 8 p.m. on NBC-TV.

When ad man Fred Bolton (Dean Jones) is put on the host seat to come up with a new campaign for the president of Allied Drug, the tyrannical Mr. Dugan (Fred Clark), the widowed executive proposes that Dugan purchase a champion jumping horse and name it after his product Aspercel, a remedy for stomach ailments.

Guaranteeing to capture the jet set and high society market for Dugna's product, Bolton secretly buys the horse an gives it to his 15-year-old daughter, Helen (Ellen Janov). Unaware of her father's plan to subliminally promote Aspercel through victories at horse show, Helen begins by losing her first competition.

Riding instructress Suzie Clemens (Diane Baker) is immediately hired by Bolton to insure that Helen wins in future shows. The teenager does improve and manages to win a number of competitions, but the ad man's scheme of winning extensive publicity never materializes.

In attendance at one of the show, Mr. Dugan witnesses one of Helen's defeats. Overhearing a conversation between her dad and Dugan, Helen becomes aware of her father's predicament and the pressures increase with each ride. She soon falters in one of the most important events and lets on that she knows how imperative each victory is.

Returning home from a business trip to comfort his daughter, Bolton finds that no one is home and Aspercel is out to his stable. In trying to apologize to the horse for his behavior, Bolton ends up chasing the animal through the neightboring countryside.

Not knowing her father is back early, Helen arrives at "the scene of the crime" and fears Aspercel has been kidnapped. A madcap case by the police ends in Bolton's apprehension and arrest.

Popularity Caused By Identification

Praised for his memorable performance as the Scarecrow in "The Wizard of Oz," actor Ray Bolger believes the classic film continues in popularity because viewers can easily "identify" with the characters.

"The Wizard of Oz," the 1939 MGM motion picture that was destined to become a classic and that launched a relatively unknown youngster named Judy Garland on "The Yellow Brick Road" to stardom, also helped to bolster Bolger's acting career.

The musical fantasy, starring Bolger as the Scarecrow in search of a brain, with Miss Garland as Dorothy, Jack Haley as the Tin Woodsman, and Bert Lahr as the Cowardly Lion, his compatriots in the mythical land of Oz, will be rebroadcast Sunday, March 20, 7 to 9 p.m. on CBS-TV.

Bolger, now 73, still considers "The Wizard of Oz" a singular high point in his long and illustrious career.

"The film is a self-renewing hit," he notes. "It has been seen over and over again through the years, and with each showing it picks up a new audience. Kids whose parents were small children when the movie was first released, and whose grandparents and great-grandparents were enthralled with the story when it was published in book form, are discovering the wonderful world of Oz for the first time."

The actor gives full credit for the longevity of "Oz" author L. Frank Baum, whose original story was printed in 1900. He feels the basic philosophies behind Baum's "Wizard of Oz" reflect human values that never will change.

"The Tin Woodsman who yearns for a heart, the Scarecrow who quests for a brain, the Lion who seeks courage, they are all of us who long to exchange our weaknesses for strengths," says Bolger.

"And the little girl who discovers, after all her fabulous adventure in a far-off world, that there is really no place like home, has learned a timeless lesson."

Landons Appear On 'Little House On The Prairie'

Viewers will see an exciting 'first' when "Little House on the Prairie" airs Monday, March 21 (8 to 9 p.m. on NBC-TV). Making guest appearances in the episode, "The Election" are two of Michael Landon's children, Leslie, 14, and Michael Jr., 12, and this is their television debut.

Landon himself is one of the busiest men in Hollywood. Not only does he star in "Little House," but he also serves as the show's executive producer as well as writing and directing a number of the episodes. As busy as he is, however, there' always time at the end of the day to spend with his wife and their seven children, four of whom are still living at home.

At dinner Landon says he especially likes to discuss how the day went. "I like to know how their day was, and they like to know how mine was, which is good. I don't think kids should be brought up thinking everything centers around them. I think it is easier if kids understand why you are in a different mood one day than another."

But even the worst day smooths out when Michael comes home at night and finds himself in the midst of his family's happy confusion; Leslie practicing her cheerleading, Shawna Leigh, 4, in a tutu singing a lullaby to her stuffed bear, Michael putting on a skit, and the baby, Christopher, who's now 2 years-old, toddling around.

"I never thought success would change things, and it really hasn't," says Landon. "The house is a little bigger, the rooms a little larger, but the feeling is the same. There's love everywhere," he continued, "and that's what counts.

"No question about it...everything that happens to you... when there are more people to love you, things build. Once you are happy personally, you begin to enjoy the other things you do because there is a reason to do them — someone who will like what you do, that makes you feel good. Believe me, I've been lucky all the way."

Lucky? Yes, and he's also worked hard. Come to think about it, there are not too many people around Hollywood more deserving of all this happiness than Michael Landon — actor, producer, writer, director. But, most important — husband and father.

LANDONS ON 'LITTLE HOUSE' — Leslie Landon, 14, and Michael Landon Jr., 12 appear in small parts in "The Election," on "Little House on the Prairie," of which their father, Michael Landon, is star and executive producer. This is their first appearance in the series. "The Election" will air Monday, March 21 (8-9 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Bracken Plays Con Man Role

"I've been a has-been nine times in my life," said actor Eddie Bracken, who looked very much on top of the world while reminiscing about his motion picture career and discussing the reason for one of his infrequent trips to Hollywood.

He was there to play a familiar Bracken role a-smooth-talking con man, who lures Lenny Markowitz (series star Adam Arkin) into his phony announcer's school in the episode of "Busting Loose" to be broadcast Monday, March 21, 8:30 to 9 p.m. on CBS-TV.

Touring on the stage and engaging in various outside interests have kept the former motion picture star constantly active since quitting Hollywood permanently, after finishing his last feature film, "A Slight Case of Larceny," in 1953.

"I'm a workaholic," he claims, as his schedule of the past few years would attest. On the stage, which has dominated his time since leaving Southern California, he toured most recently in "The Odd Couple" and "The Sunshine Boys."

Currently, Bracken operates his own ad agency-public relations firm in Houston, Texas, and for a time he owned a chain of eight community newspapers. His past even includes a stint as disc jockey on radio station WBIC' Bay Shore, N.Y. — appropriate training for his 'Busting Loose' guest-starring role.

His entertainment career has had its share of ups and downs. "I've been broke twice'" he admits, "but the 'ups' predominate."

At the moment, he is preparing a comedy, "A Hot Line to Heaven," for Broadway, with writer Karry Maraviglia, in which his wife, Connie, and daughter, Carolyn, play his wife and daughter.

Why did Bracken give up Hollywood at a career high point to concentrate on the theatre? His reasons are several. Primarily, he regards the stage as his first love.

Asner Stars As Long

Edward Asner stars as Huey P. Long, the populist-oriented Louisiana governor and U.S. senator whose controversial career was cut short by assassination, in "The Life and Assassination of the Kingfish," a fact-based World Premiere drama to be colorcast on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" March 21, 9 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV. Nicholas Pryor, Gary Allen and Diane Kagan also star.

The feature focuses on the shooting of Long in the state capitol in 1935 and through flashbacks, unveils his controversial career and the mystery surrounding the motivation of his assassin, who died at the hands of Long's bodyguards.

The drama centers on the final three years of the senator's life, following him through campaign tours and into fierce politioal infighting that created enemies for him in both Louisiana and Washington.

The feature was filmed entirely on location in Baton Rouge, La., and its environs, including the actual site where Long was shot.

MOVIE BASED ON FACT

Production has started on "Sergeant Matlovich Versus the U.S. Air Force," a two-hour fact-based NBC World Premiere movie about a homosexual Air Force sergeant's fight to remain in the service.

Brad Dourif, who was nominated for an Academy Award as Best Supporting Actor for "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," stars in the title role. Also featured are Mitchell !!yan, Frank Converse and David Spielberg.

Savalas Plays Realistic Role

DEMONSTHENES, a series regular, portrays the plant-loving right-hand-man to series star Telly Savalas, as the police lieutenant, in "Kojak"' now seen Tuesdays (10-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Demosthenes Savalas, who plays the plant-loving Detective Stavros on CBS-TV's "Kojak" series (Tuesdays, 10 to 11 p.m.), is in real life as warm and lovable as he is on the small screen. He relishes his memories of childhood, and his favorite topic of conversation are his wife and children. Tears stream when he recalls the "immense, beautiful joy" he experienced at the birth of his young daughter, Militza. (He also has five sons and, following Greek tradition, Demosthenes has given each of them the middle name of 'George.')

A man of great sensitivity, Demosthenes relates closely to his role on "Kojak." "With society as it is today, with all those unfortunate, demented, depraved people who choose to be lawless and anti-establishment — where they'll spit on the so-called 'pigs' — we show on 'Kojak'' the other side of the coin. We try to tell the other side of the story with as much semblence, as much authenticity as we can. It's time people know.

"Although Stavros is usually a comedian, when the chips are down he's tops. After all, you don't get to be a police lieutenent in the NYPD by being a dunce. But he's also a human being, and I love it when children come up to me and say, 'Oh It's Stavros'"

George admits to being a "rather emotional person." And he hastens to add that a trip back to Greece "the land of my ancestors," is the very essence of an emotional display where he is concerned. He and his wife embarked on such a trip not long ago, and accounts of the pilgrimage are filled with ruffles and flourishes that are both endearing and touching.

What's George's description of Stavros?

"He's just a cop. He's an emotional person, sensitive. So much so that he can talk to a plant and to a human being the same way that he would regard both..with an eye for those things that really touch a person."

There you have both Stavros and the 'other' Savalas. Can you tell the difference? Not hardly.

Teenage Actor Is Happy With Career

Teenage actor Ike Eisenmann likes what he's doing.

"Acting is fun for me now because I'm only 14 years old," he says. "I only work four hours a day and go to school the rest of the time. It's harder for adult actors. They have to work longer hours. I'm really lucky to be working and having fun at the same time."

That's an honest appraisal of acting from young Ike who stars as a lad trapped in a mysterious time-space warp in "The Fantastic Journey" series. This week he will be guest-starring in "Deadline: Death," this week's episode of "Police Woman" Tuesday, March 22, from 9 to 11 p.m. on NBC-TV.

Ike Eisenmann was born in Houston, Texas, on July 21, 1962, where his father, Al Abel, starred in his own TV program, "The Cadet Don Show." The family moved to California in 1968 when Ike's father decided to try for an acting career in Hollywood. He successfully made the transition and in addition to his own acting career, coaches Ike in his thespian work.

Ike began his career when his father suggested acting as a means of financing his college education. Several commercials were followed by his first acting role in a "Gunsmoke" episode. He did a total of four "Gunsmoke" shows and also performed in "Kung Fu," "Emergency" and other TV series.

Ike has starred in two Afterschool Specials, My Dad Lives in a Downtown Hotel" and "The Amazing Cosmic Awareness of Duffy Moon."

He also starred in the Walt Disney movie, "Escape to Witch Mountain," and in three "Wonderful World of Disney" TV features, "The Sky's the Limit," "The Secret of the Road" and "Kit Carson, Fremont and the Mountain Man."

Ike plays racket ball, tennis, baseball and basketball. His hobbies are collecting rocks, stamps and coins. Another favorite pasttime is building model airplanes, and he prefers balsa and paper models to the ready-made kits.

He is also an artist and one day hopes to work as an animator. "That's what I do best," he says.

SHARIF TO NARRATE SERIES

Omar Sharif has been signed to host and narrate "Mysteries of the Great Pyramid," a one-hour special which will be telecast on CBS April 20.

The documentary was filmed on location in Egypt, England and the U.S. and explores the controversy that surrounds the mystical monument.

Detectives Are A Couple

"Conspiracy of Terror," a 90-minute police drama starring Michael Constantine and Barbara Rhoades, will be rebroadcast as the "Tuesday Movie of the Week" March 22, at 11:30 p.m. on ABC-TV.

The husband-and-wife detectives Jake and Helen Horowitz (Constantine and Rhoades) follow the sketchy leads of his assignment — to investigate the death of a salesman. Jake theorizes the man was scared to death a;.d an anguished phone call from a woman (Mariclare Costello) who was seen that morning fleeing her home in her nightgown confirms his theory.

EXPERT HANDLING—The nimble fingers of sleight-of-hand artist Dale Salwak are subsituted in close-ups for those of actress Stefanie Powers (as seen in bottom photos) on "Affair of the Heart," an episode of "McMillan" on "NBC Double Feature Sunday Mystery Movie," Sunday, March 20 (8-9:30 p.m.) NBC-TV.

'Posse' Airs Wednesday

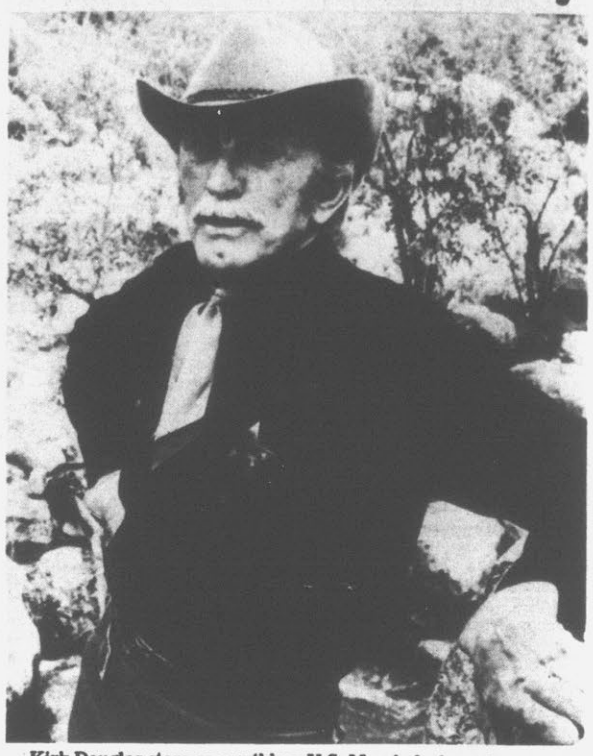

Kirk Douglas stars as a ruthless U.S. Marshal who cuts a swath of muder, lies and betrayal across the Southwest in his maniacal pursuit of power, in "Posse," to be presented for the first time on television on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movie" March 23, 9 to 11 p.m. on CBS-TV. Bruce Dern also stars in this unique western as an ethical outlaw intent on thwarting the marshal's ambition.

The contemporary zeal for debunking mythical heroes and a more particular post-Watergate deligth in watching political types turned against by their once-adoring public make themselves felt almost equally in "Posse," which could be called a message Western.

Law-and-order rabble rousing, well-oiled public relations machinery and an underlying core of political opportunism all penetrate the format of the film, along with several sharp jabs at the turncoat character of the American public. Ultimately, the contest between corrupt justice and forthright villainy bils down to a battle of two strong personalities out to win a popularity contest, and the outcome is virtually guaranteed from the movie's opening moments.

As the glib, imperturbable Marshall Howard Nightingale, Douglas is strong, silver-haired and supremely cocky, keeping a superior twinkle in each steely eye while figuring that the only way to clinch the election for Senator would be to bring a vicious gang of train-robbers — and their wily leader, Jack Strawhorn (Dern) — to justice.

There is a lot of good action running along with the dialogue, including a spirited battle on a burning locomotive, two graphic ambushes and the climatic fisticuffs between Marshall Nightingale and Strawhorn.

Kirk Douglas stars as a ruthless U.S. Marshal who cuts a swath of murder and betrayal across the Southwest in his pursuit of political power, in "Posse," a unique western to be presented for the first time on television as the CBS Wednesday Night Movie, Wednesday, March 23, (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Talks About Role

"I'm very torn and driven by his ideals and I'm also aware of his tactics. He's by no means a black and white character."

Sitting in a trailer in a small Louisiana town just north of Baton Rouge, prior to a day of filming on "The Life and Assassination of the Kingfish," and NBC World Premiere movie to be colorcast on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" March 21, 9 to 11 p.m., Edward Asner attempted to describe the experiences of portraying the late Louisiana governor and U.S. senator, Huey P. Long.

The veteran actor and three-time Emmy Award winner was enjoying the infrequent opportunity to play a historical figure.

Having once starred as Kubla Khan and on another occasion, Ulysses Grant, Asner considered the role of the Depression-era populist a most challenging one.

"I've run into a continued barrage of comment from the people here," Asner said of the experience of filming on actual locations, "and the encounters have included both Long idolaters and defamers. But it's difficult for me to go overboard in either direction."

Reflecting on the career of the controversial politician who was assassinated in the state capital house in 1935, Asner continued, "I haven't talked to people who actually hated Long. He did in fact, have good works here, It was outside the state that the had real trouble.

Dream Is Eerie

A man is haunted by a recurring nightmare in which he's marked for death in "The Deadly Dream," a terrifying tale of suspense on "The CBS Late Movie" Thursday, March 24, at 12:30 a.m.

Lloyd Bridges stars as Jim Hanley, a brilliant research scientist driven almost to the breaking point by the dreams. Co-starring are Janet Leigh, Leif Erickson, Carl Betz, Don Stroud and Richard Jaeckel..

One the verge of a landmark genetic breakthrough — a way to assure every newborn child the same intelligence factor — Jim is deeply troubled when Dr. Harold Malcolm (Erickson), administrator of the research institute, urges him to abandon his study to avoid certain controversy. Even Jim's wife, Laurel (Miss Leight), suggests he take a short vacation.

Hanley's nightmares persist, and come true with tragic results: his best friend, Dr. Howard Geary (Betz), is killed in precisely the same way Jim dreams it.

Dey, Gilman Star In New Series

Ken Gilman stars as Dick, an earnest, but klutzy, newspaper reporter, and Susan Day stars as Jane, a schoolteacher who is the reluctant object of Dick's affections, in the romantic comedy series, "Loves Me, Loves Me Not," premiering Wednesday, March. 23 (8:30-9 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Love's pathway is pocked with pitfalls when a determined but awkward young man tries to win the affections of a pretty young lady who has only one desire — to get him out of her life. Their names — Dick and Jane — are simple, but the situations they find themselves in are complicated, in "Loves, Me, Loves Me Not," a new series now airing Wednesday, 8:30 to 9 p.m. on CBS-TV.

The romantic comedy stars Susan Dey and Ken Gilman, Udana Power and Art Metrano.

Dick's intentions are as good as gold, but his leaden clumsiness turns Jane off. Hoping to impress Jane with his ruggedness, Dick borrows a friend's yacht for an afternoon cruise, but neglects to tell Jane that this is his first attempt at the helm.

Jane, however, is quick to perceive his lack of seamanship when they take a surprise dunk in the harbor, and begins to wonder how a guy she once thought was "Mr. Right" could possibly be so "Mr. Wrong."

Susan Dey, who plays Jane, a schoolteacher, came to Hollywood at the age of 17 to star as Laurie in the highly successful television series, "The Partridge Family." In 1975, Miss Dey starred in "Cage Without a Key," a TV Movie as a high school girl wrongly accused of being an accessory to murder and imprisoned in a juvenile detention home. She has also appeared in a number of major television series.

Ken Gilman, who plays Dick a newspaper reporter, has appeared in the "Rhoda" TV series and in the Los Angeles prodution of "Purlie."

Film Is Mixed Comedy, Action

Tony Curtis and Charles Bronson star as two American soldiers of fortune, so remarkably skilled, that they manage to ruin an ambush they arranged themselves, mess up a mutiny, miss the Turkish revolution that's supposed to make them rich, lose the jewels, get robbed of the gold and don't get the girl, in "You Can't Win 'Em All" — a tale of action and high adventure — airing as "The CBS Late Movie" Wednesday, March 23 at 11:30 p.m. on CBS-TV.

French star Michele Mercier is also starred as a beautiful Turkish delight who helps to make sure that the bold adventurers don't win any of them.

In the story, Josh Corey (Charles Bronson) and Adam Dyer (Tony Curtis) are two former soldiers at the end of the World War I, who decide that their fighting skills can earn them a fortune in war-torn Turkey, where the Ottoman Empire is collapsing.

They begin by accompanying an armored train from the interior to the port city of Smyrna — a train that interests them because it is carrying a load of gold bullion. Unfortunately their luck being such as it is, the 'bullion' turns out to be gold-plated lead.

After that, things don't go too well. A casket of precious jewels disappears, they both fall — painfully — for the beautiful Aila (Michele Mercier), they fight off guerrillas.

Stars In Mystery

George Maharis, in the role of an American actor in a British soap opera beset by a crazed killer, stars in "Death to Sister Mary'" the "ABC Wednesday Mystery Movie" March 23, at 12:30 a.m. .

Jennie Linden and Robert Powell also star in the 90-minute chiller written by Brian Clemens and produced in England.

Maharis plays Mark Fields, the lone American in the cast of a daytime special, "Saints and Sinners," and the first to be victimized by a series of unfortunate incidents that befall the performers shortly after they are joined by Penny Stacey, who plays a young nun, Sister Mary. .

The mysterious assasults and accidents multiply and begin to decimate the cast of the series, and while they all appear to be coincidental, Mark Fields begins to realize that they have a curious pattern.

After Penny agrees to attend the opening of her fan club headquarters, arranged by a strange and persistent admirer, a Mr. Rook, who insists on calling her Sister Mary, Mark suddenly discovers the sinister motive for the person-to-person destruction of the cast.

Ms. Linden plays Penny, and Powell portrays Mr. Rook.

Pike's Peeks

By Charlie Pike,
TV Showtime Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD — Claude Akins is optimistic that his new CBS series, "Nashville 99" which premieres the first of April, will become a fixture in the network's September line- up, primarily because in each show a country-western star is featured performing and appearing in a brief scene with Claude. It's the first series to attempt to combine drama with real-life performing.

Don't be surprised if it's Ron Howard who announces that next year's season of "Happy Days" is his last. Ron wants to devote all his time to film writing and directing, and that's what he'll do after one more year of 'Days.'

Farrah Fawcett-Majors stands to become the highest paid actress on television if her salary demands are met to assure her return for another season of "Charlie's Angels." For the curious, the highest-paid actress currently is Lindsay Wagner.

For those who are constantly watching their diet, it might help to know that Suzanne Pleshette has to do the same thing. In fact, she was recently spotted at the office of a Beverly Hills physician who specializes in helping people rid excess weight via an injection and a strict diet.

Just when Paul Michael Glaser is trying to get out of his "Starsky and Hutch" contract, the series is one of the most popular in Europe. However, to date, no European correspondents have been able to provide their magazines and newspapers with feature stories on the stars because neither are granting interviews until Paul's future is decided.

ABC's decision to renew "Family" for next season came as quite a surprise considering the show's ratings, but the renewal is an obvious indication that the series will have a new time slot next Fall in hopes it'll continue to build a following.

Jared Breaks Mold

"I've killed more people than I can remember," actor Jared Martin said one day to a startled interviewer, What he was referring to was his numerous roles as a television villain.

Finally, in an attempt to break the Hollywood stereotyping system, Martin plays a change-of-pace role as a man from Earth in the year 2230 who has crash-landed on a mysterious land filled with people from past and future time periods in "The Fantastic Journey" (Thursday, 8 to 9 p.m. on NBC-TV.)

In this week's episode, "An Act of Love," his life is threatened when he marries a woman from an alien time sphere whose marriage customs pose a serious threat to his survival.

"I've really been boxed in," says Jared by playing bad guy roles in series like 'The Bold Ones,' 'Switch' and 'The Rookies.' The only good thing about those roles is that everytime I kill someone, I get arrested. I guess justice prevails.

"When I'm not playing a 'heavy,' I'm playing a reformed junkie like on 'Columbo' "

Then, after struggling to earn enough money to live, Jared quit acting to become a book critic for the New York Times. But he slowly drifted back into acting through summer stock and eventually went to work for Papp again.

Series Features Doctors' Roles

"Westside Medical," an exciting new dramatic series premiering Thursday, March 24, at 10 p.m. on ABC-TV, revolves around three extraordinarily talented doctors who, distrubed by the narrowing effects of medical specialization on themselves and on the overall welfare of patients, take positive action. Portraying the three doctos are James Sloyan, Linda Carlson and Ernest Thompson.

With the goal of treating the total patient for this entire lifetime, Doctor Sam Lanagan and two friends and associates of the staff of a large metropolitan hospital, rent space across the street and set up their own clinic. Their basic tenet is the all three physicians shall be equally familiar with the histories of all the patients. Thus they can always take over for each other in an emergency, as well as better serve as consultants. This way, each doctor will not lose touch with the practice of general medicine while continuing his own specialty.

The three doctors are extremely close friends and enjoy each other's society in the eclectically furnished back room of the clinic where they go to relax and have coffee — and play poker with other doctors, applying their winnings to operating expenses. Dr. Lanagan, prime mover of the trio, is head of Emergentology at the hospital, Dr. Janet Cottrell is in charge of Family Services, and Dr. Phil Parker is a leading surgeon.

Pioneer Migration Portrayed

Robert Mitchum portrays a tough, embittered scout who leads a wagon train from Missouri to Oregon in the frontier days, in "The Way West," to air as a movie special, Friday, March 25 (8-10:30 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

"The Way West," an action-filled epic drama of pioneers making a grueling wagon-train passage from Missouri to Oregon, starring Kirk Douglas, Robert Mitchum and Richard Widmark, will be presented as a CBS movie special, Friday, March 25, 8 to 10:30 p.m. on CBS-TV.

What begins as a friendly enough passage soon becomes a gritty hell. The emigrants face hostile Indians, a chronic water shortage, and the perils of river fordings, prairie fires and buffalo stampedes. But the greed, lust and treachery of the worst among them cause dissension, the common front dissolves, and the entire passage is threatened.

He's A Writer, Not Actor

Don't ever refer to Mickey Spillane as an author.

"I'm a writer," says Mickey, the famous mystery writer and creator of such private eye heroes as Mike Hammer. "An author doesn't make money, but writers do. It's (writing) a business with writers. They're the builders of the trade."

Spillane appears in "Publish or Perish," a "Columbo" segment airing on "The CBS Late Show" Tuesday, March 22, at 11:30 p.m. on CBS-TV.

His last acting role, in 1963, was in "The Girl Hunters." He portrayed his character Mike Hammer in the feature film, for which he wrote the screenplay.

"No, I'm not an actor, either," Spillane says gruffly. "I like being on the originating end instead of performing."

In the "Columbo" drama he plays writer Allen Mallory, who is slain by a man hired by his ruthless publisher (Jack Cassidy). Spillane at the time said: "I took it for the great publicity. The timing was good. I happened to be in town. But I don't go looking for movie roles."

Spillane does think that "acting's fun" but that's because "most writers are extroverts and need that now and then." He laughingly notes that this was the first time he'd played "the corpse."

Writing, of course, is his first love. Waiting around on set and having to protect his clothes from make-up are not for him.

"I could have written a book in the two days of shooting involved in this role," he said.

Women Combat Murderous Gang

A rugged outlaw and a wagon train of bawdy frontier woman become unlikely combatants when they are forced to make a stand together against a murderous gang at an abandoned cavalry fort in "Female Artillery," a western adventure airing on "The CBS Late Movie" Friday, March 25, at 11:30 p.m. on CBS-TV.

Dennis Weaver, Ida Lupino, Sally Ann Howes, Linda Harcourt Montgomery, Albert Salmi, Anna Navarro and Nina Foch star in the 90-minute motion picture.

In "Female Artillery," outlaw Deke Chambers (Weaver) steals a fortune from his ruthless gang boss Frank Taggart (Salmi) and sets off across New Mexico with his booty with Taggart and his men in pursuit. While hiding from the other bandits, Deke discovers a wagon train of women and children which has been stalled due to the severe illness of one of the children.

The women, Martha Linstrom (Miss Lupino), Amelia Craig (Miss Foch) Sybil Townsend (Miss Howes), Charlotte Paxton (Miss Evans) and an Indian girl, Sarah De La O (Miss Navarro) have mixed feelings about Deke but they all see him as a means of getting to a cavalry fort where they can get help for the boy.

Deke uses an old Indian remedy to help the boy and despite amorous advances from Charlotte, sets off again only to discover that the sly women have stolen his money.

He returns to the wagon train and finds that the women refuse to return his money until he leads them to the fort. When they arrive, they find it abandoned but Deke realizes that they will all have to make a stand as Taggart has caught up with them.

Bradys Play Host

The Brady family plays host to the spitfire from Spain, Charo; the singing group, The Hudson Brothers; Ann B. Davis and Rip Taylor on "The Brady Bunch Hour," Monday March 21, 8 to 9 p.m. on ABC-TV. Also joining the Bradys are the Water Follies and the Krofftette Dancers.

The Bradys, who will now be seen regularly on Monday evenings, open lively hour with "Toot Toot Toosie Disco," accompanied by the Water Follies.

Charo is spotlighted in a contemporary spoof of "Cinderella." As "Cindy Ella," Charo, living with her stepsister, Victoria Baclay (Rip Taylor), hears about a howdown in town. Her Fairy Godmother (Ann B. Davis) fixes things up so Cindy can attend the event where she meets Black Bart (Barry Willimas) and the Rhinestone Cowboy (Christopher Knight).

Much to the chagrin of the Brady family, Mr. Brady decides to sing. He meets Charo, who gives him some pointers and he, in turn, invites her to dinner, which doesn't exactly please Mrs. Brady.

Other highlights of the show are: The Brady family singing and dancing to the production number, "76 Trombones" and "Strike Up the Band"; Charo's guitar solo of the beautiful Spanish composition, "Malaguena"; The Hudson Brother, accompanied by the Water Follies, singing the hit song, "Disco Queen"; Carol Brady singing "Sorry Seems to Be the Hardest Word," and Mike Brady's version of "I've Grown Accustomed to Her Face."

Kove Totally Immersed

As an actor, Martin Kove has finally gotten a role in which he can totally immerse himself, literally.

Kove stars as George Baker, Chief of Beaches, on the action-adventure series "Code R," broadcast Fridays, 8 to 9 p.m. on CBS-TV.

Kove's character spends a lot of time in the water, as the island's chief lifeguard. Although the water off the California coast, where many of the sequences are filmed, is often a chilly 50 degrees, he feels right at home.

He not only feels comfortable, portraying a lifeguard, he's trained for it. While attending the University of Miami, Kove took a course in "Lifeguarding." He is also a trained scuba diver.

"I find athletics reduce anxieties," Kove says. "I also enjoy the danger present in putting your body to the test."

His attitude toward danger and excitement is the result of being raised as a "Brooklyn cowboy," Kove says. "I enjoy fantasies." Indeed, he continues his cowboy notions by being an expert rider, and plans to have his own ranch someday.

Although "Code R" is his first series role, Kove has appeared in a dozen motion pictures, always as the 'heavy,' including "Where's Poppa?," "Capone," "Death Race 2000," "White Line Fever," the forth-coming "The White Buffalo" and (co-starring with Valerie Perrine) "Windfall."

So Kove is especially happy with his role in "Code R." It's the first time he gets to play a "nice guy." He was especially thrilled when he recently played his first love scene.

"I'm really a romantic," Kove said. "I would have been right at home playing those swashbuckling roles in the Errol Flynn movies. Maybe I'll get to do a role like that yet."

Salutes Vaudeville

Lucille Ball, the Captain and Tennille, Bernadette Peters and Ben Vereen will be Bob Hope's guests for an all-star salute to vauderville in a 90-minute special Friday, March 25, at 8:30 p.m. on NBC-TV.

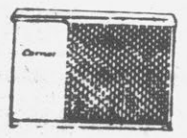

Highlights of the show will be musical tributes to Sophi Tucker and Bert Williams by Ball and Vereen, respectively. Other famous vaudevillians, including Al Jolson, Ted Lewis and Eddie Cantor, will be saluted.

TOP MODEL IN FILM

Barbara Bach, one of the top fashion models in the United States, has been signed to star with Paul Shenar in "The Mask of Alexander," a one-hour adventure drama on CBS.

Miss Bach recently reaped worldwide attention when she starred as the Russian spy Anya in the new James Bond epic, "The Spy Who Loved Me."

DON'T BLAME FARRAH

You really can't blame Farrah Fawcett-Majors for wanting to quit the "Charlie's Angels" TV series to head in the sex symbol direction. Her pin-up exposure has resulted in a bombardment of offers from many producers who feel that they have finally found a successor to Marilyn Monroe.

Something Different For Gavin

Monsters Are Possibly Real

King Kong may have enjoyed human company, but "possibly real" monsters like Scotland's Nessie and America's Bigfoot are terribly shy around Homo sapiens, as CBS News Correspondent Christopher Glenn reports on "What Are the Loch Ness and Other Monsters All About?," to be rebroadcast Saturday, March 26, 1:30 to 2 p.m., on CBS-TV.

For this broadcast for younsters, Glenn is joined by two other correspondents, Carol Martin and Joel Siegel, and they will be reporting on movie monsters, mythical monsters and 'maybe' monsters. Reporters Martin and Siegel will offer an alphabetized catalogue of monsters, from the Abominable Snowman to Zombies.

By definition, "a monster is something that is not real." If Nessie, Bigfoot or the 'Snowman' (also known as mita kangli shuptah or "the Foul-smelling man of the snows") prove to be real, will they still be monsters? Or just "monstrous," similar to such real-life horrors as the great white shark or the mountain gorilla (thought to be a monster until it was "discovered" in 1902)?

Also presented will be the search for Bigfoot, an 800-pound, foul-smelling, hairy creature that reportedly treks around the U.S.'s Pacific Northwest, leaving bare footprints, a foot-and-a-half long and at least a half-foot wide. An eyewitness report and film of footprint casts of the big feet of "Bigfoot" will be included.

The mystery surrounding Nessie, the creature or creatures reportedly existing for some 1,400 years in Scotland's Loch Ness will be covered, and the latest picture of what may be the monster 45 feet under water will be shown

David Birney will star in "Testimony of Two Men," a six-part miniseries based upon Taylor Caldwell's novel.

Murray Matheson portrays Clifford the Ghost in "The Haunted Trailer," a presentation of "ABC Short Story Specials," airing Saturday, March 26 (12 noon-12:30 p.m.) on ABC-TV. Clifford an unconventional Ghost, takes up residence in the trailer belonging to a young college student who is bent on finding a new home for him.

The Trailer Is Haunted

A 19-year-old student finds that her plans to live in a trailer while attending college are jeopardized when she discovers that the trailer is already inhabited by a pack of pesky poltergeists in "The Haunted Trailer," a presentation of "ABC Short Story Specials," airing Saturday, March 26, 12 noon to 12:30 p.m.

Murray Matheson stars as Clifford, the leader of a group of ghostly chamber musicians who have taken up residence in the house trailer, and Lauren Tewes stars as Sharon, the student who purchases the spook-ridden trailer from a Mr. Simpson. Eddie Bracken stars as Simpson.

Simpson warns her about the condition of the home-on-wheels, but Sharon is not yet a true believer. However, as Sharon and her younger sister, Mickey, played by Monie Ellis, drive toward the college, the warnings take on an air of reality as Clifford and his group make their presence known by playing chamber music concerts and engaging in a variety of annoying pranks to make the girls relinguish their claim to the trailer.

A spirited battle of wits ensues as Sharon and her sister plot successfully to rid the trailer of the unwanted guests in the television adaptation of Robert Arthur's suspenseful and humorous short story.

Atlanta 500 To Be Televised

The 18th annual Atlanta "500" Stock Car Race will be televised live on "ABC's Championship Auto Racing" series, Sunday, March 20, 4 to 5 p.m.

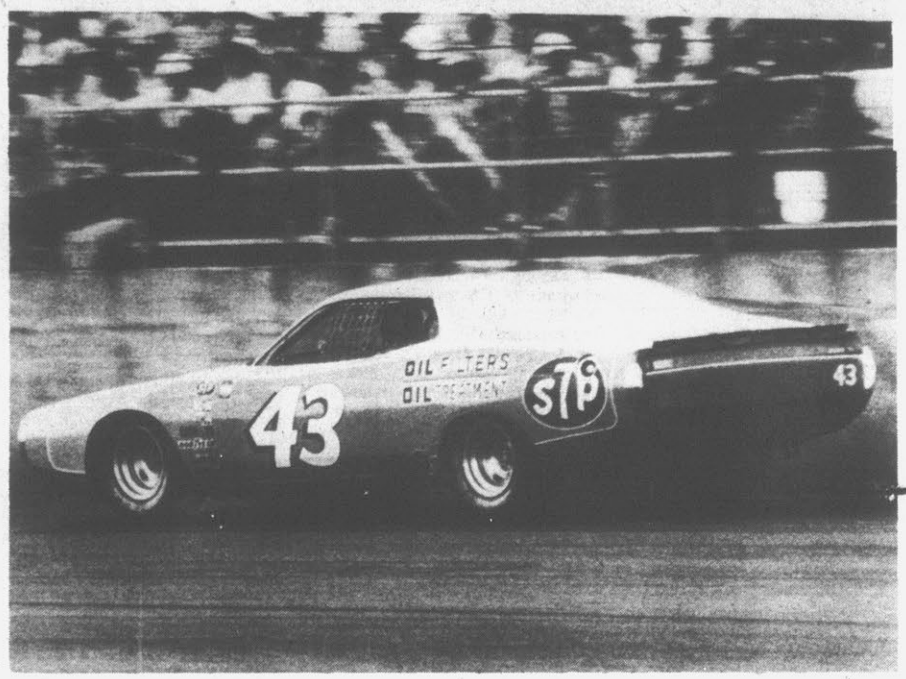

The prestigious race from the Atlanta International Raceway in Hampton, Ga., has a posted purse of $167,000 this year, up more than $11,000 over last year's prize money.

An invitation to attend the race has been extended to President Jimmy Carter by Speedway officials who remember Mr. Carter as a longtime friend of stock car racing and a familiar figure at the Atlanta "500" in his years as Governor of Georgia. Last year, Mr. Carter attended the race.

By race time, the Atlanta "500" field will have been narrowed down to 40 qualifiers, among them the defending champion, 42-year-old David Pearson of Spartanburg, S.C. Pearson captured last year's Atlanta honors in a Wood Brothers Mercury, averaging 128.904 miles per hour over the 1.5-mile, high-banked oval track.

Cale Yarborough of Timmonsville, S.C., coming off a winning performance in the Daytona "500" last month, is also expected to be in the field, and gunning for a fifth victory in the Atlanta "500." He scored in consecutive years, 1967,1968 and 1969, as well as in 1974. Nobody else now active has won it more than twice.

A bumper crop of the world's greatest drivers is expected to be filing applications for this year's Atlanta "500," including six-time Grand National Stock Car Champion Richard Petty in his red-and-blue No. 43 Dodge. Others likely to compete are Donnie Allison, Buddy Baker and A.J. (Super Tex) Foyt.

Richard Petty had to leave last year's Atlanta 500 with engine trouble in the 194th lap of the 328 lap event. Petty won the race in 1975. ABC will televise this year's 500 on Sunday, March 20 at 4 p.m.

Another possible starter is Janet Guthrie, first woman to compete in the Daytona "500." She finished 12th in her Kelly Green Chevrolet in the Daytona "500."

Raceway officials at Atlanta have offered a $5,000 bonus to the driver who leads after five consecutive laps under a green flag. The offer is meant to create added interest in the start of the race and extra incentive in qualifying high in the field.

ABC's Jim McKay will report the Atlanta "500," with expert commentators Chris Economaki and Jackie Stewart.

Sixteen Teams In Tournament

Final-round action of the National Invitational Tournament will be televised live from Madison Square Garden on Sunday, March 20, at 1 p.m. Sixteen teams begin the tournament in the first-round on March 9.

This is the first year the first-round games of the NIT were played outside of New York, home of the NIT. Eight games were played on the home courts of participants, with the victors advancing to the quarter-finals at New York's Madison Square Garden.

A glance at the sixteen teams competing in the tournament show that all have plenty of talent: Memphis State has a bunch of giants, and among their 14 varsity player, eight are 6-8 or taller. Two of their best are 6-9 junior center John Gunn and 6-11 senior center John Washington; Alabama boasts T.R. Dunn and Anthony Murray, the best pair of guards in the Southeastern Conference, while Georgetown has All-American candidate Derrick Jackson and Al Dutch (one of Washington D.C.'s best high school players); Virginia Tech, a two-time NIT participant and winner of the 1973 tournament, has experience in 6-10 center Ernest Wansley and 6-5 Duke Thorpe; Illinois State lists 7-0 Jeff Wilkins, whose nickname 'The Big Dipper' applies to his superb dunking ability; Creighton's coach Tom Apke has a younger brother Rick, a 6-8, 203-pound All-District forward who plays for him; Indiana State wasn't expected to do much this year, but with DeCarsta (Byrd) Webster, a 6-11 junior (77 blocked shots and 11.1 PPG last season), they're in the tournament; Houston has high scoring guard and consensus All-Leaguer Otis Birdsong; Villanova's led by 6-7 John Olive and the brothers Jerron — 6-6 Keith and 6-8 Larry; Old Dominion, making it's first appearance in the NIT, has 6-5 senior Steve Fuhrmann who led the team in scoring as a sophomore and junior and will wind up No. 4 on ODU's all-time scoring list.

Michigan Plans A Different Return

Last year Michigan suffered a bitter defeat at the hands of Indiana and the Hoosiers went on the win the NCAA Championship and the right to call themselves Number I.

This season, with Indiana no longer a factor, Michigan was ranked Number I prior to the tournament, and Ricky Green by-passed the pros to be on the scene.

The Wolverines are hoping to stay in the running as the NCAA Tournament advances to the semi-final round action Saturday, March 26. NBC-TV will televise a doubleheader, beginning at 2:10 p.m.

Coach John Orr's "skinny little boys," as he likes to call them, are led by 6-1, deft and quick Ricky Green. Ricky may not be the best shooter, defender or playmaker among the NCAA guards, but no one is faster or quicker.

The team's leader in scoring, assists and steals, Ricky generates excitement on and off the court, and he's rated as one of the best guard prospects going into the year's draft.

Prior to the play-offs Green admitted: "We can still get better as it gets closer to the tournament. This is my last year here and I got to smoke."

Michigan is an explosive team, and when they're playing their best game they are the most exciting team in the country. The college version of the razzle-dazzle of the Harlem Globetrotters, they try to block any shot that doesn't hit the rafters.

If often seems chaotic on the court. Don't be fooled — it's all a dupe. Every movement of their attack is meticulously planned.

In the last three years Michigan has gone to the NCAA tournament. This year they're back again, and they don't plan to return to Ann Arbor empty-handed.

Johnson Is A Winner

Don Johnson, who will be bowling in the Professional Bowlers Tour $100,000 BPAA Open from Greensboro, N.C., has never had a bad year, winning more than $25,000 every year since 1967. Viewers will be able to see him continue his streak of good luck when the 'Open' is televised Saturday, March 26, at 3:30 p.m. on ABC.

Don's best year was 1971, when he won six tournaments and added more than $80,000 to his bank account. He was the undisputed king of bowling in 1971 and 1972 when he was named "The Sporting News" Bowler of the Year.

Johnson always had what could be described as an 'uncomplicated' life, and from his early years in Kokomo, Ind., to high-scoring, high-earning times in Akron on to a more peaceful period as a teaching pro in Las Vegas, he had everything going for him.

Crowd Cheers For Cosell

A capacity crowd of 1,300 inmates and several hundred guests and fans cheered loudly for the boxers in the Marion (Ohio) Correctional Institute gymnasium recently as ABC Sports was televised the "United States Boxing Championships."

But some of the strongest applause came during a break in the coverage as promoter Don King stepped into the ring and introduced some of the celebrities in attendance.

There were resounding cheers for former heavyweight champion Joe Lousi; also for some of the non-active boxers at ringside, for syndicated sports columnist Red Smith, and for ABC Sports President Roone Arledge, who was on the scene as Executive Producer working from a mobile unit on location.

Finally, King introduced the "mouth of boxing, the man who tells it like it is," Howard Cosell. And that introduction brought a roar of admiration for the sportscaster.

Cosell, doing the broadcast alone, was unable to climb into the ring, which prompted a chant from the inmates, "We Want Howard, We Want Howard, We Want Howard," which lasted for over a minute.

At ringside, Cosell was visibly warmed by the loud reception. Finally, he turned to Pat Tuite, assistant to producer Chet Forte, and aiming a dart at some of his detractors said wryly, "They (the inmates) hate me don't they" Does that sound as if they hate me?"

Normally, Cosell would have been teamed at ringside with expert commentator George Foreman, but the No. 1 heavyweight challenger was in San Juan for his bout with Jimmy Young.

A Woman Is Director

"I am not a woman director," Lina Wertmuller says, "I am a director." Critically, and at the box office, she is one of the most exciting directors working today, and she's finally making her first film in English.

Wertmuller, at 47, the first woman to get an Oscar nomination for Best Director; Betty Carnes, scourge of the tobacco industry; and Ana Maria Vera, a child prodigy, will be featured on "March Magazine," Thursday, March 24, 10 to 11 a.m. on CBS-TV.

Wertmuller is a socialist and a feminist, and while she has been attacked for her portrayals of enormously fast women, Wertmuller feels they are not only "The most enlightening characters in my films," but are more attractive than thin women.

"March Magazine" cameras follow Wertmuller to Italy as she makes the film tentatively titled "A Night Full of Rain."

Arizonan Betty ("My middle name should be 'Persistent'") Carnes wants to protect the rights of the country's nonsmokers, and her efforts to accomplish this are producing results.

Asner Takes Step Up

Lou Grant, the sardomic TV news director played by Ed Asner in "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," lost his job in the concluding episode of the long-running series. Now this could definitely be considered a tragic occurrence for Lou, who is at the stage in life when he should be looking forward to his pension-covered years. But — where Ed is concerned — it's great.

Actually, this 'firing' of Lou sets the stage for Asner's return to television next season as the star of his own series. So, even tho it's a step down for poor Lou, it's a step up for talented Ed.

Ed Asner will get top-billing in the as-yet-untitled hour-long newspaper show which has male-chauvinist Lou Grant as the assistant city editor on a paper run by — you guessed it — a strong-willing woman publisher.

Actually, this role takes Ed back to his original roots: as a high school student he was his school paper's feature page editor who did the gossip column and conducted interviews.

Did the Emmy-winning actor even seriously consider going into the journalism field while still in high school?

"I did," he responded. The idea of writing for a living, being involved in politics and current events always possessed me, but my English teacher said I wouldn't be able to make a living doing this."

Ed, who is one of Hollywood's most respected citizens off-camera, first pursued a acting career while attending the University of Chiacago, and has been active in movies and television since 1961. He received Emmy Awards in 1970-71, 1971-72 and 1974-75 for "outstanding performance by an actor in a supporting role in comedy" for his role of Lou Grant in "The Mary Tyler Moore Show."

Movie Is A Mystery

Charles Bronson stars as tough police officer Torrey in "The Stone Killer," a hard-hitting mystery adventure drama to be colorcast on "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" March 26, 9 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV. Martin Balsam also stars.

Underworld kingpin Vescari (Balsam), still smarting from the 1931 gangland slayings in many American cities that wiped out so many of his number and changed the structure of organized crime in the United States, has waited with infinite patience for his revenge.

Some 40-odd years later, Vescari masterminds a plot to train malcontented Vietnam veterans returning to the United States to eliminate every one responsible for the killings.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR EDWIN E. ("BUZZ") ALDRIN, former astronaut

I've heard reports we made money on the space programs because of technological gains. True? If so, in what areas? —S.G., Scottsbluff, Neb.

● Yes. I've heard many doctors say the medical benefits alone are worth more than all the money spent on Mercury, Gemini and Apollo. I think the space program was by far the best bargain we've ever had. When have we ever completed anything of comparable significance on time, reasonably close to original cost estimates and far surpassing expected results?

FOR JANET GUTHRIE, race-car driver

● No. I never think about the risks involved. All I think about is how much pleasure I'm getting from what I'm doing. It all boils down to whether or not you decide what you're doing is worth the risk. There's danger in driving, whether you're going from here to Uncle Henry's for Easter Day dinner—or racing on the track. I'm lucky. I think my job is worth the risk.

FOR RAQUEL WELCH, actress

I'm dying to know—do you do your own hair, or do you go to a beauty parlor?—Muriel Cassidy, Washington, D.C.

● Both, but most of the time I do it myself. The cut is so good that I can get away without going to the hairdresser. As long as it's shaped, I can set it myself (less time than going out to have it done). But I also enjoy the luxury of going to a salon and getting the full works—manicure, pedicure. During the fall, I have my hair streaked; I like the idea of highlights.

FOR LAWRENCE WELK, orchestra leader

Does music have anything to do with your youthful appearance?—Alan Edmondson, Boaz, Ala.

● Miracles can be performed by wonderful TV makeup and wardrobe departments. If my "youthful" image prevails off-camera, it might be due to a very happy life. I also had the good fortune and excellent judgment to marry a nurse. Jean has lovingly watched over my diet for 46 years, so I've had balanced and proper foods. And there's exercise. I take a daily swim, and I'm a golf nut, playing as often as I can.

FOR HALSTON, designer

What did you think of Rosalynn Carter's inauguration dress?—J.B., Kingsport, Tenn.

● The only thing I objected to about the gown was that it was six years old. By wearing it, she was not supportive of the fashion industry or the economy. It was bad for both because what she was actually doing was telling everyone to wear their old clothes instead of getting new ones.

FOR DODY GOODMAN,
costar of Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman

How does your audience differ from afternoon "soap" viewers?—S.A., Bluefield, W. Va.

● We have a large male audience, most of whom have never watched the afternoon shows. And I guess in a way we get a better-rounded audience; daytime programs are watched only by women—older ones who aren't at work and younger ones in the middle of housework or watching children. We reach another segment of the population.

FOR ABIGAIL VAN BUREN, advice columnist

Do you feel your advice is accepted, or do people ask for it just for the sake of asking?—Mrs. E. B. Lape, Mansfield, Ohio

● There are those who do heed the advice they ask for. Others just "collect" advice from everyone they know, then do exactly as they please. Generalizations are dangerous because it really depends on the individual and there are no hard-and-fast rules.

FOR DR. BENJAMIN S. FRANK, author of The No Aging Diet

In your book you mention a man in his seventies discarding his glasses and reading without them after being on your diet. Why, then, do you wear glasses?—M. Conley, Ft. Myers, Fla.

● That patient wore glasses because of stiffness of the lens in his eyes, due to aging. As we get older, not only the lens but many other parts of our body stiffen. The "no aging diet" helps reverse many of these symptoms. I wear glasses because of a different problem—nearsightedness.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

How do the Dutch people feel about Prince Bernhard and his indiscretions?—M.B., Anchorage, Alaska

● Since the Lockheed bribes scandal surfaced a year ago and Bernhard (right) was stripped of his post as Inspector General of the military, he's been keeping a low profile. When he makes rare public appearances, the atmosphere is hostile. He recently annoyed his subjects even more by spending his 40th wedding anniversary with Queen Juliana (he was a minor German princeling before their marriage) on Austrian soil, instead of on home ground.

FOR REP. PAUL SIMON (D.-Ill.)

Are you ever confused with your namesake singer?—Scott Thomas, Kohler, Wis.

● Yes. In my first Congressional year, I received a letter from Case Western Reserve Univ. asking me to lecture on "music, how I compose, etc. Maybe we'll be so fortunate to hear samples of your well-known talents." Tongue-in-cheek I replied: "As for my music, I like the Boston Pops, and I compose on a Smith-Corona upright manual, never having liked electric typewriters."

PRO AND CON

Should Every Child Have A College Education?

PRO Kingman Brewster Jr., President, Yale University

Yes. Perhaps the most fundamental value of a liberal education is that it makes life more interesting.... It allows you to see things which the undereducated do not see. It allows you to understand things which the untutored find incomprehensible. It allows you to think things which do not occur to the less learned. In short, it makes it less likely that you will be bored with life and less likely that you will be a bore to those around you.

CON Caroline Bird, author of The Case Against College

No. College is not the place to decide what to do with your life or the place to be because you think a degree will get you a better job or more money. Who should go to college? Only people who like school, who actually enjoy studying. But most people would rather be doing something other than just sitting and hearing about how it's done. Finding a career is like finding love — you have to use a trial-and-error method. Out there, somewhere, is a job.

TAKE YOUR FAMILY AND STEP BACK INTO AMERICA'S PAST

Coast to coast, dozens of restored communities, complete even to costumes, celebrate everything from the planter's life in Colonial Virginia to nineteenth-century pioneer life to the whaling villages of New England to the frontier forts of the Old West.

"Courtesy of The Henry Ford Museum, Dearborn, Michigan"

By Patricia Brooks

In the arsenal of the Virginia colony a young man in knee breeches checks the supply of powder. In the near-distance can be heard the shots of gunfire as the militia, in colonial uniform, drill and fire their muskets.

Outside, the clack of horses' hooves clatters on the uneven cobble of the old roadway as the carriage rolls by, the coachman tipping his tricornered hat to passersby along the way. At the end of Palace Green, the twinkling crystal chandeliers in the Governor's Palace seem to beckon visitors to a ball as the wigged and liveried "servants" wait in anticipation.

Meanwhile, on the main thoroughfare, the Duke of Gloucester Street, all the tiny shops are ahum with activity: the pewterer is polishing Revere-style bowls to a beautiful gloss . . . a weaver in colonial homespun busily spins her yarn, preparing it for the loom . . . a bookbinder labors lovingly over his leather covers.

The year is 1770 and you are there. Or easily can be. The scene described is a re-creation of times past. The place is Colonial Williamsburg, Va., but it could, with some modifications, be any number of historic museum villages around the country, where the past is being brought vividly to life to the delight of visitors.

"It's the best kind of family weekend outing," one New Jersey mother of five glowed, after a trip to Sturbridge Village in Massachusetts. "The kids loved the blacksmith demonstrations and copper bed warmers and kept asking, 'Is this what life was like when you were a girl, Mom?'"

There's probably not a state without one or more restored villages or old towns. Some are mere gimcrack commercial enterprises (more "story" than "history"). Others are authentic restorations where you can savor handcrafted artifacts and antiques and the memory of past events. Many are in idyllic rural settings where families can stroll and picnic.

So come along, step into the past, and have a look at a sampler of some of the finest of such villages.

Mystic Seaport, near New London, Conn. Nestled in an inlet off Long Island Sound, Mystic was a ship-building center in the 1700's. Its heyday, though, was as a mid-19th-century whaling port. (Opening scenes of Moby Dick were filmed here.)

Mystic's wide cobbled main street facing the harbor looks like an old seaside engraving with the cooper shop, sail loft, ropewalk, ship chandlery (full of ship supplies you may not have known existed) and countinghouse. At the Mystic Press, a printer cranks out a facsimile of a hundred-year-old newspaper on an ancient hand press. Children love to board the 1841 whaler, Charles W. Morgan, and to climb the decks of the square-rigged Joseph Conrad.

Greenfield Village, Dearborn, Mich. This is not a re-creation of a village but rather a large slice of history in a bucolic setting that telescopes three centuries of Americana. It began in 1929, when Henry Ford scooped up — just ahead of the bulldozer in some cases — 100 historical houses and other buildings and carried them to Dearborn.

Here you can explore Thomas Edison's actual lab and the Menlo Park scientific research complex, the provincial Illinois courthouse where Abe Lincoln first practiced law, the tiny cabin in which George Washington Carver was born, the Dayton, Ohio, bicycle shop and home of the Wright brothers, among many other dwellings of the famous. Nearby is the Henry Ford Museum, a dazzling collection of mechanical and decorative arts, ranging from 175 antique autos to examples of Paul Revere's silver-smithing. Special events and demonstrations change frequently at the village. No matter when you visit, something special is bound to be going on.

Old Economy, Ambridge, Pa. It's a surprise to find this remote-in-time village just 20 miles from industrial Pittsburgh. The Harmonist Society came to America from Germany in 1805 and founded three villages. Old Economy, the most successful, survived almost 100 years. Its importance in our early history has earned it National Landmark status.

A self-sustaining religious community whose motto was "Piety, Harmony, Brotherhood and Peace," Old Economy had its own textile plant, furniture factory, winery (a local product, Old Economy whiskey, actually outlived the settlement) and community store. Especially impressive is the Feast Hall with its 12 massive kettles and large ovens that served the 1,000 members. The large and well-planned gardens and tidiness of the Great House suggest the beauty in this simple life. You may wish yourself back in the time when problems could be solved with a sip or two of the Society's herb cordial, which promised to "cure all disorders of stomach, liver, kidneys, fevers, rheumatism, coughs and colds."

New Salem, Ill. This prairie town's glory days came in the 1830's when young Abe Lincoln clerked in the local store, studied law at night, courted Ann Rutledge and slept in the Rutledge Tavern loft.

New Salem prospered briefly, then declined. Its restoration vividly recalls the hard, plain life of our pioneers. The doctor's one-room cabin was both office and home. Houses were log cabins sparsely furnished with the few family treasures that survived the rutted wagon trails. Demonstrations of rail-splitting, shingle-splitting, spinning, candle-dipping and soap-making give a sense of the ruggedness of prairie life. Children love the oxen-pulled Conestoga wagon ride through the dusty village roads.

Shakertown At Pleasant Hill, Ky. This old Shaker village, 70 miles southeast of Louisville, has been impeccably restored to its 19th-century state. The Shakers, Quaker offshoots, arrived in Kentucky from New England and settled among the rolling blue grass hills in 1805. A thriving self-contained community, Shakertown quickly became the most prosperous branch of the Shaker tree, with 2,250 acres of woods and lush farmland.

This is one restoration in which you may actually spend the night in one of the restored buildings. After a dinner featuring Shaker specialties in the handsome Trustees House, you can stroll the gaslit lanes, listen to crickets and experience the same solitude the Shakers enjoyed. Then you'll climb the graceful winding double staircase to your "retiring room." Since the Shakers were celibate, every house had separate stairways, one for men, one for women. (One suspicious elder dusted all shoes with flour at night, then checked the upstairs floor next day for floury footmarks to discourage any nocturnal hanky-panky.) All six guesthouses are furnished with beautifully crafted Shaker reproductions. Only 20th-century mattresses, plumbing and electricity have been added. (Note: if you plan to stay overnight, reserve well ahead. Space is limited.)

Colonial Williamsburg, Va. Most famous and elegant of all historic villages, Williamsburg was Virginia's capital from 1699 to 1779. Today the clock has been turned back permanently to the Revolutionary period, the town's liveliest and most historic time. Many fascinating events were played against the backdrop of the bustling town's cobblestone streets and red brick buildings. Patrick Henry demanded redress from the British in the House of Burgesses, now faithfully restored. At the weathered Raleigh Tavern you can sample George Washington's favorite ale.

When you visit, take time at first for the short film that sets the stage for your tour. Then wander along the once-fashionable Duke of Gloucester Street, enjoy the colonial muster on the green, nibble ginger cookies fresh and hot from colonial ovens and let weavers, potters and other craftsmen show you their 200-year old skills. The flavor of the colonial period is so rich you half-expect to bump into Tom Jefferson rounding the next corner.

There isn't room to list all the many excellent historic villages now located around the U.S. The following are just a few more that are extra-special.

Columbia, Calif. An authentic Gold Rush town, vividly restored, now part of the Calif. State Historic Park system.

For information regarding restored towns in your state (or others), contact the office of tourism in the state capital.

Bishop's Hill, Ill. A 19th-century Swedish religious community, this was once a way station for all Scandinavian emigrés passing through the Midwest.

Nauvoo, Ill. An authentic Mormon village, built by the sect before the great march to Utah. Recently restored and refurbished, Brigham Young's house is especially notable.

Acadian Village, Lafayette, La. A reconstructed early French community of the 1800's, with the original houses moved to a new site.

Deerfield Village, Mass. Scene of two bloody Indian massacres, this prosperous 17th- and 18th-century town is a treasure trove of elegant antiques and early architecture.

Stuhr Museum, Grand Island, Neb. An outdoor museum village consisting of actual Nebraska prairie buildings of 1870-1890 vintage.

Strawberry Banke, Portsmouth, N.H. The original colonial seaport that grew into Portsmouth; with authentic 17th-century houses painstakingly restored and furnished with first-rate period pieces.

Log Cabin Village, Fort Worth, Texas. Actual pioneer homes of the 1850's, showing Texas life and furnishings.

Fort Davis, Texas. A National Historic Site, this 1854 fort was established by order of Jefferson Davis, then Secretary of War. Renovated and restored by the National Park Service, it is the most extensive example of a Southwestern frontier fort.

Old Bethpage Village, Bethpage Long Island, N.Y. The preindustrial age comes to life in this village of shops, houses and costumed "inhabitants" spread over 200 rural acres.

Waterloo Village, Stanhope, N.J. A restored waterside village along the route of the once-trafficked (1820-30) Morris Canal, where youngsters can now take buggy rides in a setting of lazy loveliness.

Shelburne Museum, Shelburne, Vt. Considered by many the finest collection of Americana in the U.S., the "museum" consists of 35 transplanted buildings spanning three centuries, as well as a train station, jail, covered bridge and the old Lake Champlain side-wheeler steamer Ticonderoga.

AIR FORCE–A GREAT WAY OF LIFE

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

is the way you answer a question revealing? Does self-mockery make a good impression?

MANNERISMS THAT GIVE PEOPLE AWAY

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. The way a person answers a simple question tells you a lot about his personality.

2. Even if we do our best to control give-away mannerisms, the face leaks information regarding the personality in any face-to-face conversation or interview.

3. When a person looks at you, and puts his hands on his hips while doing so, what he's thinking about you probably can be best expressed as %#!*&!!

4. Lack of twisting, squirming or head-and-body, leg-and-arm movements is indicative of calmness.

5. Just as bragging about your accomplishments puts people off, poking fun at yourself for minor weaknesses and embarrassing moments can't help but make a favorable impression.

ANSWERS

1. True. Psychological studies at Virginia Commonwealth University show that it definitely does and cite the following example: You ask a person a leading question, such as "How would you feel if you were caught telling a lie to an important person?" If he uses the pronoun "I," as in "I would feel terrible, bad and guilty," it's explained that the person recognizes the possibility of being in such a situation and acknowledges his personal responsibility for his behavior. On the other hand, if he answers "You'd feel bad, terrible and guilty," or "It would feel terrible and bad," or simply "Feel terrible and bad," the person does not speak for himself; he literally disclaims responsibility for his emotions or projects them on some unidentified person. Tests have shown that persons who answer in such a fashion tend to be anxiety-ridden.

2. True. Research conducted by psychologists at Ohio State University and the University of Windsor, Ontario points out: "During face-to-face conversation people not only talk to each other, they look at each other." And the eyes, it was found, communicate a variety of information about a person's attitude, intentions and aspects of his personality and outlook. Subjects who scored high in abasement (low self-esteem, a tendency to feel guilty and to accept blame, to feel better when giving in to avoid a fight than when having their own way) looked away markedly more often to the left during the interview than persons low in this characteristic.

3. True. University of California studies show that "the arms-akimbo position tends to be used by communicators who wish to indicate a negative feeling to their addressees."

4. False. University of Montana investigators, for example, made a careful study of the body movements and gestures of courtroom witnesses. They found that subjects decreased conspicuous body movements during the stress of cross-examination, as compared to direct (friendly) questioning. It's concluded that in many cases nervous tension and general feeling of stress can inhibit gestures and bodily movement.

5. False. Investigators at Indiana University point out that people seem to enjoy seeing others ridiculed or kidded. Sometimes, however, people also seem to enjoy ridiculing themselves. They voluntarily display, mostly in exaggerated form, their weaknesses and vices, together with embarrassments, humiliations and setbacks they have suffered. The Indiana study, using men and women university students as subjects, however, showed that "self-disparagement affected person perception adversely — and that compared to the person who disparages others, the self-disparager was perceived as less 'intelligent, less confident, less witty."

HIS STAR IS ON THE RISE

Kristofferson: success has brought confidence.

By Patricia Baum

Eight years ago, Kris Kristofferson, one-time Rhodes Scholar and Army captain, was pushing a broom around a Nashville bar, emptying ashtrays at a recording studio and digging ditches. A dropout, he had moved to the Country and Western music capital to become a songwriter. But, seemingly destined to remain a would-be, he had resignedly concluded that "by the time my songs ever become hits, I'll be dead."

Today, still in his prime at 40, Kris has been hailed by Johnny Cash and other music stars as the most gifted lyric writer in the country-music industry. His songs have risen to the top of the charts and have been performed by scores of stars. And because he began singing to promote his own songs, he fast became a popular performer. Moreover, Kris has made it in Hollywood as well, with eight films to his credit. The latest, A Star Is Born, has solidly established him as one of the screen's most exciting male stars.

He was launched in mid-1969 by singer Roger Miller, who recorded Kris's "Me and Bobby McGee." Kris parlayed his hard times in Nashville and a whole troubled past—his frustration with Army life as a young man, an unsuccessful first marriage — into moving autobiographical ballads. Nashville's most literate songwriter, he used poetry and a dash of wit to craft songs that poignantly conveyed loneliness, love and heartbreak.

Kris has taken a long time, though, to feel confident about his performing talent. One of the first times Kris sang for his supper, at a Nashville steakhouse some seven years ago, he remembers, "I looked at the people eating and knew I was spoiling it. I was so embarrassed I split without taking the money."

This attitude followed him into his film work. Working with such experienced actresses as Ellen Burstyn in Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore, he was perpetually nervous about his ability to "keep up with the company." He was especially apprehensive pitted against Barbra Streisand in A Star Is Born. Making that film, according to Kris, was "the hardest thing I'd been through since Ranger school."

Now that the ordeal is over, he believes his portrayal of the self-destructive rock singer is his best performance yet. Star has given him a sorely needed measure of confidence as he embarks on his next film venture, Semi-Tough, and has prompted him to cautiously predict, "I think I have a future in acting."

He certainly seems to—if he can retain that appealing honesty and not turn into another Hollywood untouchable. So far, Kris indicates he can adeptly handle the fame that has confused, if not corrupted, many a star. He's still slightly awed by it all: "Fame has let me off easy. Because I'm a movie star, people automatically assume that I'm a nice guy. I'll just have to keep reminding myself to work very hard to really be one."

A fence can bring neighbors closer together.

Sometimes it's the small things that cause the biggest problems between neighbors.

In my case the bone of contention was the one Mrs. Parker found buried in her prize begonias. So I built this fence from plans I got at the Help Center. And you know something, good fences make good neighbors.

It works the other way 'round too. I got all the free help I needed from Jim Clark, my Georgia-Pacific Registered Dealer. His Help Center is loaded with remodeling ideas, building projects, and helpful hints for do-it-yourselfers.

Take the free Projects Booklet. It's got simple, step-by-step plans for 20 interesting and useful home projects. And all of them as easy to build as my fence. There's a whole section of the Help Center that's filled with exciting new ideas on remodeling with wall paneling. And another with helpful free booklets that show you how to choose and use building materials like a pro.

The Help Center at your neighborhood Georgia-Pacific Registered Dealer has all the help you need. And it's free. But isn't that what good neighbors are for?

Georgia-Pacific Corporation, Portland, Oregon 97204

The new Projects Booklet and HELP for do-it-yourselfers are available only at Georgia-Pacific Registered Dealers.

IF YOU HAVE IRON POOR BLOOD ALL THE VITAMINS IN THE WORLD WON'T HELP

Iron poor blood is the most widespread nutritional ailment in America today. And taking vitamins can't help, because vitamins don't contain iron.

What you need is Geritol, every day. Geritol is so rich in iron, just one tablet contains more iron than even a pound of calf's liver. Plus vitamins important to your health.

Geritol's iron can actually build your blood day by day. That's what makes it different from vitamin pills—and so important to you.

SWISS FONDUE STRATA

- 1 loaf (6 ozs.) Italian bread, ends trimmed and sliced
- 8 ozs. Swiss cheese, sliced

3. In small skillet, sauté garlic in 1 tablespoon butter until golden. Set aside.
4. Beat together, garlic, milk, wine, eggs, salt, pepper and nutmeg.
5. Pour milk mixture slowly over bread and cheese; top with Parmesan cheese.
6. Cover and refrigerate at least one hour or overnight.

MONEY

Timing Those Term Accounts

When Jim received a sizable year-end bonus, he wanted to do two sensible things with it: put it into a savings account that would pay him the highest possible interest rate and leave it there until it was time to pay the next installment on his daughter's college tuition.

But when Jim investigated, he found it was impossible to accomplish both goals. According to the bank's published rules for "term savings" accounts, he would have to keep his savings on deposit for 14 months in order to get 6½ percent interest—a healthy 1¼ percent higher than the interest on a regular account from which money can be withdrawn at any time. Yet the tuition payment had to be made within 11 months.

When Jim mentioned this ruefully to a bank officer one day, he discovered that there is enough flexibility to term accounts so that the bank could accommodate his situation. Jim deposited his bonus for the 11-month period at 6¼ percent interest—one-quarter percent less than the 14-month period paid, but still a full percentage point more than he would have gotten otherwise.

Moral: if you have money you can put away for a specific length of time—but not the period which matches exactly the formal time-deposit periods listed by the bank—discuss the problem with a bank executive. Most banks and savings-and-loan associations will work out a term account with a maturity date that suits your purposes, and the account will still pay a higher rate of interest than the ordinary passbook rate.

PEOPLE AND YOU

Easing The Pain Of Jealousy

The best cure for jealousy, of course, is discovering that you were mistaken and that there's no cause for anxiety. But when that happy situation eludes you, you may be able to help yourself through the difficult days by borrowing actions from the opposite sex.

Seems researchers have discovered that women have certain ways of trying to calm themselves and men have another set of actions. Keeping your own sex's instinctive behavior and adding the other sex's may double the balm and even eliminate the cause of your jealousy. For example, while jealous women often feel completely devastated emotionally, in a daze, insecure, less able to cope with other aspects of life, fearful and inadequate, men often respond actively rather than passively.

Men are likely to confront the other person and ask for an explanation of the situation. Sometimes this direct action produces a discussion which eliminates the cause and problem. When the situation is hopeless and jealousy is well founded, women's reactions may be more constructive. Although men often turn their worry inward and feel guilty and angry with themselves for being jealous, women accept their feelings and allow themselves to express them. Women's tendencies to talk to close friends about their feelings give them support and an emotional outlet. But the common reaction of men to blow off steam by getting drunk leaves their problem intact when they're sober again.

Why Buy A Genuine Diamond

IT'S TRUE– – FEW PEOPLE CAN TELL THE DIFFERENCE. – This is why movie stars and millionaires often wear simulations when they make public appearances. They know that only real experts or jewelers with powerful magnifiers can tell (for sure) if they are wearing a ring worth thousands or a Gemfire Simulation costing less than $25!

GEMFIRES ARE CATCHING ON LIKE WILDFIRE! – Your friends and neighbors sporting big beautiful sparklers may be wearing Gemfires now and using the difference to make a payment on their dream house or buy a car! And once you see a Gemfire you'll be proud to wear one yourself, or give it to someone you love.

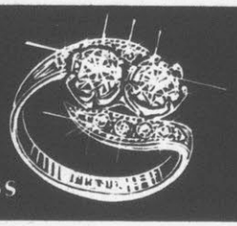

PICTURES DON'T DO JUSTICE TO GEMFIRE BEAUTY. – You can't really tell how lovely they are from pictures. That's why Crown Galleries offer every Gemfire Simulated Diamond with a FULL ONE YEAR GUARANTEE. You can't lose!

GEMFIRES ARE SELECTED FOR BRILLIANCE AND FIERY BEAUTY. – No cracks! No bubbles! No imperfections to dull their radiance. They are carefully cut and polished by master-craftsmen and just as genuine diamonds Gemfires have 58 facets. NEW HOPE IN THE DISCOVERY AND TREATMENT OF INHERITED DISEASES

Potential for some diseases, including diabetes and many birth defects, can be passed on through the genes, tiny elements that determine our makeup. Now researchers are starting to understand how to detect the "bad" ones.

By Paula Dranov

Some of the most exciting medical advances in recent years have come in the field of genetics, the biological study of heredity and its variations. We now know that genes not only control the color of our eyes and hair and whether we have the right number of fingers and toes but that they also can determine whether or not we'll be susceptible to such illnesses as heart disease, diabetes and other life-threatening diseases. Here are some of the facts and some of the good news about genetic advances.

WHAT ARE GENETIC DEFECTS?

Simply stated, genetic defects are disorders and diseases with which some people are born. Many, such as Down's syndrome—the medical name for mongolism—are obvious at birth. Others don't become evident until weeks, months or even years later.

The array of genetic diseases is staggering, but of the 1,500 that have been identified, most are extremely rare. Not so rare, however, are diseases like diabetes, heart disease and some other illnesses.

WHAT CAUSES GENETIC DISEASES?

Inherited diseases and disorders usually are caused by flawed genes. Geneticists know that of the thousands of genes we each carry on our 23 pairs of chromosomes, between eight and 10 are likely to be defective. Rarely do these bad genes make their presence known. But under some circumstances they can—and do—cause trouble.

HOW ARE THE CARRIERS OF GENETIC DISORDERS IDENTIFIED?

It usually takes only a simple blood test. These tests have become particularly important to families who have reason to fear these three so-called "ethnic diseases":

- Sickle Cell Anemia. This blood disease occurs most frequently among blacks and can now be identified in the carriers.
- Tay-Sachs' Disease. Jews of Eastern European descent are most prone to this always fatal disease. Doctors now urge all Jewish couples of child-bearing age and from this background to come in for testing when they marry.
- Thalassemia. Italians, Greeks and Near Easterners run the greatest risk of thalassemia, a blood disease that is fatal in its most severe form. Although carriers now can be identified through blood tests, the tests can't show whether or not the fatal form is present.

Needless to say, the overwhelming majority of couples tested for these diseases will be reassured that they run no risk of passing them on. For the others, help is available in genetic counseling.

WHO SHOULD HAVE GENETIC COUNSELING?

The greatest need is among couples who already have had an abnormal child, who have seen a certain type of genetic disease in their families and who have been identified as carriers of a specific disorder.

In addition, women over 35 who wish to have a baby have been seeking counseling in ever-greater numbers because of publicity

H. Armstrong Roberts

Five percent of all babies are born with genetic defects, but new knowledge could significantly reduce the risks of these disorders.

about the increased risk of giving birth to a mongoloid child as the age of the mother advances.

WHAT IS GENETIC COUNSELING?

For couples who have something to fear from genetic disorders, counseling is a means of learning what their risks are and what medical means are available to reduce those risks. Basically, counseling can tell them what the genetic disease they face means in medical, emotional and even financial terms. Just as important, the counseling can correct the misinformation people have about genetic diseases and reassure parents that it's not their fault that a child is affected.

HOW CAN GENETIC DISEASES BE DIAGNOSED DURING PREGNANCY?

There are two methods of prenatal diagnosis. The best known is amniocentesis. In this procedure, a long needle is inserted into the mother's abdomen to draw fluid from the amniotic sac where the fetus is developing. An analysis of that fluid will tell doctors whether or not the genetic problem they're looking for is present.

The other new procedure is ultrasound, a method of scanning the mother's abdomen with high-frequency sound waves to ascertain the position of the fetus, to measure the infant's head size and to monitor the rate of fetal growth and development.

WHAT ABOUT HEART DISEASE AND DIABETES?

These are the diseases doctors say have a genetic component. They tend to run in certain families. High-risk individuals frequently can be identified through blood tests and regular checkups. A susceptibility to heart disease, for instance, may be indicated by an inherited condition called hyperlipemia—an abnormally high level of fatty substances in the bloodstream. This condition can be counteracted to a significant extent by diet. Diabetes can be controlled through medication and proper diet. Preventive measures—regular checkups, weight control—can reduce the risk in susceptible families.

WHERE ARE COUNSELING AND TREATMENT AVAILABLE?

The National Genetics Foundation has established a Genetic Counseling and Treatment Network to provide diagnosis, treatment and counseling to people concerned about genetic disorders of all varieties. Genetic counseling also is available through medical centers, teaching hospitals and clinics. The March of Dimes maintains a directory of genetic-counseling units throughout the United States. fw

Grass Seed Is For The Birds! Zoysia Saves Time, Work, Money

By Mike Sandin
Agronomist

Every year I see people pour more and more money into their lawns. They dig, fertilize and lime. They rake it all in. They scatter their seed and roll and water it.

Birds love it! Seeds which aren't washed away by rain give them a feast. But some seed grows, and soon it's time to weed, water and mow, mow . . . until summer comes to burn the lawn into hay, or crabgrass and diseases infest it.

That's what happens to ordinary grass, but not to Amazoy Zoysia.

"MOWED IT 2 TIMES," WRITES WOMAN

For example, Mrs. M. R. Mitter writes me how her lawn ". . . is the envy of all who see it. When everybody's lawns around here are brown from drought ours just stays as green as ever. I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in . . . Last summer we had it mowed (2) times. Another thing, we never have to pull any weeds — it's just wonderful!"

And from Iowa came word that the state's largest Men's Garden Club picked a Zoysia lawn as the "top lawn — nearly perfect" in its area. Yet this lawn had been watered only once all summer up to August!

Cuts Your Work, Saves You Money

Your deep-rooted, established Amazoy lawn saves you time and money in many ways. It never needs replacement . . . ends re-seeding forever. Fertilizing and watering (water costs money, too) are rarely if ever needed. It ends the need for crabgrass killers permanently. It cuts pushing a noisy mower in the blistering sun by 2/3.

CHOKES OUT CRABGRASS

Thick rich, luxurious Amazoy grows into a carpet of grass that chokes out crabgrass and weeds all summer long. It will NOT winter kill. Goes off its green color after killing frost, regains fresh new beauty every Spring — a true perennial!

For Slopes, Play Areas, Bare Spots

Your Own Supply of Plug Transplants

Established Amazoy gives you Zoysia plugs to plant in other areas as desired!

NO SEED, NO SOD!

There's no seed that produces winter-hardy Meyer Zoysia. Sod of ordinary grass brings with it the problems of seed, like weeds, diseases, burning out, other ills.

DROUGHT AND WEAR RESISTANT

Amazoy lawns take cookouts and parties children playing on it won't hurt it, or themselves! Stays green right thru scorching heat and drought!

NO NEED TO RIP OUT PRESENT GRASS PLUG AMAZOY INTO OLD LAWN, NEW GROUND OR NURSERY AREA

Just set Amazoy plugs into holes in ground like a cork in a bottle. Plant 1 foot apart, checkerboard style. Every plug 3 sq. inches.

When planted in existing lawn areas plugs will spread to drive out old, unwanted growth, including weeds. Easy planting instructions with order.

PATENTED STEP-ON PLUGGER IS . . . . . FREE WITH ORDERS OF 600 PLUGS OR MORE

Amazoy exclusive! No one else can offer you this patented 2-way plugger. Saves bending, time, work. Light, rugged, invaluable for transplanting. Cuts away competing growth as it digs plug holes

Every Plug Guaranteed to Grow In Your Area • In Your Soil

- AMAZOY WON'T WINTER KILL—has survived temperatures 30° below zero!
- AMAZOY WON'T HEAT KILL—when other grasses burn out, Amazoy remains green and lovely!

Plug Amazoy into an entire lawn or problem areas. Plug it into poor soil, "builder's soil," clay or even salty, sandy beach areas. I guarantee every plug to grow . . . from part shade to full sun! Any plug failing to grow in 45 days replaced FREE. Since we're hardly in business for the fun of it, you know we're 100% sure of our product.

If it isn't Amazoy, you're not getting the plugs that made Zoysia famous.
Accept No Substitutes

Consumer protective agencies constantly warn consumers, "Be sure you're getting the brand you're paying for; watch out for bait and switch people." So look for the name Amazoy if you want the real thing — the world's best known zoysia. Our pre-cut plugs (full 3 sq. in.) look different, ARE different. Why take chances with an untried grass? There really is no substitute.

Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass Was Perfected by U.S. Govt.; Released In Cooperation With U.S. Golf Assoc. as a superior grass.

Order guaranteed Amazoy now, get your bonus plugs FREE. Your order will be delivered at earliest correct time for planting in your area.

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

TAKE A LOOK

Some see the sea from where they live,
Some see the open fields.
To some, atop a ridge or hill,
A gorgeous landscape yields.

Some view the mountains rising high,
Some watch a river flow,
But from our house these other things
We see and some you know:

One way a street, one way a house,
A house that is immense.
That leaves two other views we have,
And both the same: a fence.

Observations™

Time to listen. More than a million workers were laid off this winter as factories were shut down because natural gas was unavailable. Home heating by gas was threatened in many areas despite turned-down thermostats. For over 20 years, government regulation has operated to keep natural gas prices artificially low. In our view, this attempt to "protect" the consumer has led to misuse and waste of natural gas, and contributed directly to today's problems. Now there is a growing recognition by others that the removal of price regulation on new natural gas is a vital ingredient to any long-term solution. Below, some significant examples of that view:

The Washington Post

Enforcing conservation or increasing production "requires getting rid of the absurd and obsolete structure of gas price controls that encourages Americans to use too much of it for the wrong things. The country is going to have to pay more for the stuff, unless it wants to institutionalize the winter gas shortage as an annual event." Jan. 27, 1977

THE MILWAUKEE JOURNAL

"The pricing mechanism is the best way to allocate a scarce premium resource. Gradual deregulation of natural gas is the best way of bringing that about. When will Congress see the light?" Feb. 14, 1976

The New York Times

"Mr. Carter evidently wants 90 days to devise an overall energy policy, including his campaign pledge to deregulate prices for 'new' gas . . . . Restricting wasteful and non-essential consumption is even more important than increasing the supply. Natural gas is a premium fuel, fully combustible, nonpolluting and easy to transport. Neither increases in gas production nor effective conservation can be achieved while it is sold (in terms of comparative heat content) at half the price of coal and a fifth the price of oil. It should not be wasted on non-essential uses." Jan. 25, 1977

THE EVENING SUN (Baltimore)

"The plain fact is that artificially low prices on interstate gas have done two things. They have diverted much of this energy into the uncontrolled intrastate markets . . . . And this in turn has meant that the diminishing overall supply of gas has been unfairly allocated, with industry and residential owners in non-gas-producing states facing severe shortages." July 30, 1976

The Phoenix Gazette

"A free market would do a much better job of fairly distributing the natural gas supply than a government-regulated market ever could." Feb. 7, 1976

THE PLAIN DEALER (Cleveland)

"The only sensible solution is to allow free market forces to determine the wellhead price of . . . gas. To do otherwise is to hamper expansion of the economy and creation of new jobs through industrial expansion and commercial and residential construction. The choice is simple: Pay more for natural gas or promote unemployment." Oct. 16, 1976

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

"The best thing would be for Congress to do away with gas price regulations entirely. . . ." July 30, 1976

Quick Diagnoses That Save Sick Plants

Plant problems? Here's how to diagnose the most common ones. Steve Smith, a Florida county extension ornamentalist, says if you discover a plant with burned leaf tips or brown margins, you need to reduce the amount of fertilizer you are feeding the plant. This also could mean you are being too stingy with the water. Yellowing and dropping leaves are a signal of gas fumes, overwatering, poor drainage or not enough air. Small leaves indicate too little water or that the plant is existing in tight or heavy soil. Weak growth or light green or yellow spots on healthy green foliage is a sign of too little fertilizer, root rot or that the light is too intense. A house plant that is yellowing, wilting or has "soft growth" is exposed to excessive heat or has a root injury. Plants with small leaves and long internodes indicate too little light or too high temperature. Most foliage plants do best at temperatures between 60° and 70° F. If the leaves are heavy with grime, use soapy water, a soft cloth and a gentle touch. While watering your plants, keep these points in mind: don't use cold water, as it shocks the plant. Only a dash of water can make the plant miserable. Often the soil in the bottom of the container becomes dry, causing the plant to wilt or die. Plants are like people in that they like their food served at regular intervals. Reduce fertilization during the winter months. The best suggestion on feeding plants is simply to follow the directions on the food container. If you do not want to buy a special house-plant fertilizer, mix one teaspoon of a complete garden fertilizer in one quart of water. Apply this solution every four to six weeks.

The Best Way To Bake A Potato

Baked potatoes are tastiest if they're wrapped in pierced foil, baked between 400°-425° F. for 50 to 60 minutes and served immediately from the oven, say researchers at the University of Idaho's agricultural program. They reported that most restaurant baked potatoes are served at an "on the plate" temperature of less than 160° F. The ideal temperature is 200° F., reached when a potato is taken from the oven and split just long enough to add salt, butter or sour cream.

Quick Takes

An apple can clean your teeth better than a toothbrush can, says Dr. Loren Tukey of Pennsylvania State University. An apple's efficiency rate as a tooth and gum cleaner is 95.5 percent, which is more than 30-percent better than a toothbrush's. . . . The most encouraging salary increase in the last 10 years occurred among women, according to the Federal Job Information Bureau. Starting salaries for women college graduates are 81-percent higher today than they were 10 years ago. . . . If you think 53 million stale crackers aren't worth their salt, you're not in the hauling and storing business. The city of Denver is paying $20,000 to have the crackers, leftover from old fallout shelters, taken off municipal hands. The U.S. Office of Emergency Preparedness has decided they now are inedible. . . . The average American family has cash assets of $2,100, according to a new study by the Detroit Bank and Trust Co. The study estimates that the average family has $50 cash on hand, $250 in checking accounts, $1,500 in savings accounts and $300 in U.S. Government savings bonds. . . . While coffee prices have been grabbing the headlines recently, another commodity desired by American consumers is selling at record-high levels. World cocoa prices have more than tripled in the last 13 months, meaning that shoppers will be paying higher prices than ever for chocolate products. Many of the big chocolate manufacturers have raised the price of candy bars from 15 to 20 cents, and analysts don't discount the possibility of the quarter candy bar unless cocoa prices stabilize.

A Do-It-Yourself SAT Cram Course

As the race for college acceptance tightens, study programs designed to prepare the student for the College Board Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) are flourishing. If you or your child plan to take the SAT soon, here are some of the coaches' tips:

1. If you don't know the answer, don't guess. Go on to the next question. A wrong answer counts against you; the trick is to get as few wrong and as many right as possible.
2. Do the easy questions first. Sometimes the first sections of tests are loaded with the hardest questions.
3. On the reading comprehension questions, quickly scan the passage and then the questions so you know what to look for when you go back to read the question carefully.
4. If you have taken the test and done poorly, take it again. It is offered six times during the year, generally November through June. Frequently, those who take the SAT a second time develop a test-taking strategy and improve their scores significantly.

Will Kids Start Getting Better Instead Of Bigger?

American children may soon stop growing taller than their parents in each generation. A set of 14 computer-drawn growth charts based on 20,000 children measured in the past 15 years shows a leveling off of growth during the past decade. Before 1965, according to the National Center for Health Statistics, six-to-11-year-olds were about a half-inch taller each decade. "Perhaps we have reached the limits of our genetic potential regarding growth," speculates Dr. Peter V. Hamill, chairman of the center's task force. Or, suggests Dr. Francis Johnson, study-group member, "the general leveling off could mean that factors such as good nutrition, pure water and freedom from childhood diseases are making their maximum contribution." Physical height is greater now than when the country was founded: an average 18-year-old boy 200 years ago measured 5′7.1″; today's average 18-year-old stands 5′9.6″. The average 18-year-old girl is now 5′4″.

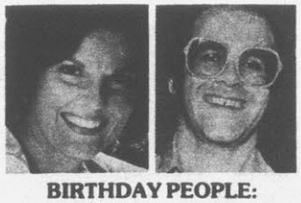

If The Shoe Wears, Get It Fitted

You can tell what's wrong with your shoes by the particular way they wear, says the Shoe Service Industry Council. For example, if your shoe curls at the toe, the shoe is too long. If the sole wears unevenly or if the heel pushes under, the shoe is too short. And if your shoes go out of shape, you may be wearing the wrong size. To get the right size, buy shoes in the afternoon — your feet are biggest then. Try on both shoes before buying. To keep shoes in shape, avoid wearing the same pair two days in a row; when possible, wear one pair every third day. Never dry out wet shoes on a radiator.

Is The Ideal Man A Perfect Man?

A man who's a bit of a rogue is more attractive to women than a great guy who always does the right thing, says San Diego psychiatrist Dr. Harold Greenwald. He offered this definition of a "rogue": "He'll fail to be on time for appointments; bet at the track or play poker with the guys half the night; sometimes refuse to shave on weekends; possibly use salty language." If a man acts in such ways all the time, or even frequently, women won't find him appealing at all — but if he lapses into such behavior now and then, most women will like him better, Greenwald insists. It's the guy who acts like a saint most days and a sinner once in a while who really captivates women."
