Indira Resigns; Son 'Quitting Politics'

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Repudiated by the Indian electorate, Indira Gandhi resigned today as prime minister, saying, "The collective judgment of the people must be respected." Her son, also defeated, said he was quitting politics.

With returns from the general election last weekend almost complete, Mrs. Gandhi's foes claimed they would have a majority of at least 126 seats in the lower house of Parliament.

In a statement conveying her best wishes to the new government and offering the "constructive cooperation" of her Congress party, Mrs. Gandhi said she and her colleagues "accept the verdict unreservedly and in a spirit of humility."

In a related development, Sanjay Gandhi, Mrs. Gandhi's 30-year-old son who was defeated in his first bid for Parliament, said he was quitting active politics.

"I have been thinking about what to do," the national news agency quoted him as saying. "There are other ways of serving the people than being in Parliament. 'I don't propose to be in active politics but propose to devote my energies to quiet, constructive work.'"

Meanwhile, two former leaders of the Congress party, Morarji Desai and Jagjivan Ram, jockeyed to succeed Mrs. Gandhi. In another development that symbolized the sudden political transformation here, imprisoned Socialist leader George Fernandes, accused of plotting to topple the Gandhi government, was released on bail.

A spokesman for Desai's Janata — People's — party said its members in the new Parliament and those of Ram's Congress for Democracy would meet Thursday to elect a leader who would become prime minister.

Fernandes, who was elected to Parliament on the Janata ticket, was released along with 22 other Indians accused with him of conspiring to use force to overthrow the government, India's national news agency reported.

Mrs. Gandhi submitted the resignations of herself and the other members of her cabinet to Acting President B. D. Jatti. He accepted the resignations but continued Mrs. Gandhi and her ministers in office as a caretaker government until a new one is formed.

City School Board Won't Accept Bid On Property

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The highest bid made to date for the Lyndale school property, one for $82,000 submitted by David Evans, was turned down by members of the Greenville City School board at its March meeting Monday night.

Meeting in executive session following the regular meeting, board members voted not to accept the bid. Also, no action was taken to immediately place the property up again for bids. A decision on when again to place the property on the market will be made at a later date.

In a meeting marked primarily by reports and discussions, T. R. Pierce, chairman of a committee to search for a new site for the relocation of the Extended School Program, revealed that the search for a suitable site continues. He noted that among places considered is the church school building of the former People's Baptist Church, outside the city limits and also outside the Greenville School District.

A permanent location for the Extended School Program is planned for Agnes Fullilove School, following the move of the seventh grade to the new middle school in January 1978. So the search for an interim location is for the first half of the 1977-78 school year.

According to Pierce, the church school has "4,600 square feet of space, ample lighting, enough electrical outlets, heating and air conditioning. Parking is ample, and the general condition of the building is excellent. The only need would be hook-ups for washers and dryers."

Problems noted because of the out-of-town location include having a city school facility in the county school district, and the difficulty of transportation for some of the 120 students enrolled in the course. Most of the students now walk to school. Tony Gray of the Extended Day

School faculty estimated the out-of-town location would possibly mean about 20 students would not be able to attend.

Other sites mentioned by Pierce included the old First Presbyterian Church at the intersection of W. Fifth and Pitt Streets, which he said is badly in need of extensive repairs; the old Fire Station at Chestnut Street, considered too small; the old Wahl-Coates school building on the East Carolina University campus, which is not available; and the Elks Building, which likely will not be available for rental. Another possibility to be looked into is the former quarters of the Wilkerson Funeral Home on Evans Street.

The rental figure of the church school building at People's Baptist Church is $11,500 yearly, with the renters to pay utilities.

Weather Delays Plans To Board Broken Oil Tanker

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) —

The Coast Guard said weather conditions held up plans Tuesday to board the stern section of a broken Panamanian oil tanker in search of 12 crewmen still unaccounted for.

The vessel broke into two sections Sunday following an explosion, discharging thousands of barrels of oil into the Atlantic Ocean. Nine survivors were en route Tuesday to Baltimore aboard the motor vessel Limon, one of three which figured in rescue operations at the scene. Other survivors were taken to the Naval Hospital at the Camp Lejeune Marine Base near the North Carolina coast.

At the Coast Guard Rescue Coordination Center at Portsmouth, Va., a spokesman said 25-knot winds were reported at the scene with five to six foot seas and visibility of three miles.

Photo Journalist C.C. Allen Faust said two cutters, the Dalls out of New York and the Conifer out of Morehead City, remained on the scene. He said a C-130 fixed wing aircraft from the Elizabeth City Coast Guard Air Station was standing by for better weather to join in search operations over the Atlantic.

At Camp Lejeune, Maj. Fred Tucker, public affairs officer, said one of the survivors brought there was moved Monday night to the Army Burn Center at Ft. Sam Houston, at San Antonio, Tex.

"The other victims who remain here are generally satisfactory," Tucker said. "Injuries generally are burns, fractures, cuts and abrasions and they're suffering from exposure."

He said the first group of five survivors, "all stretcher cases," arrived Monday about 10:45 a.m. "The second group, all ambulatory, arrived about noon," he said.

Several survivors said Monday the vessel, the Claude Conway, was split in two by an explosion sparked by welding equipment. They said the blast killed the captain, the radio operator and a number of other crewmen.

Four Appointed

Four members of the Joint City-County Planning and Zoning Commission have completed their eligibility and four new members have been appointed by the County Commissioners to succeed them.

Going off the planning board after serving at least two full terms are J. C. Parker, Jack Wall, Don Langston, and John Moye. The fifth member of the joint commission, J. T. Manning Jr., will remain since he has not completed the maximum tenure.

The commissioners named William A. Heymann, Elbert Mills, Willie Wallace Jr. and Ray H. Parker to memberships on the board, effective immediately.

The new appointments expire on June 30, 1980.

A HOTLINE APPEAL

HOME BURNED

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Harrison about five miles this side of Robersonville on Highway 903 burned Saturday morning.

According to a daughter-in-law, Wanda Harrison, who was spending Friday night with the family, those in the house awakened when the television set exploded and heat detectors in the house simultaneously went off.

The set was the instant-on type, she said.

Mrs. Harrison, who lives in Greenville, is appealing for clothing and household items for her parents-in-law and her mother-in-law's mother, Mrs. Callie Sheppard, who lives with the couple. Mrs. Sheppard, 73, broke her wrist during the escape from the house, she said. Most of the house was destroyed and what was not was smoke damaged. The owners' car parked in a garage adjoining the house was also destroyed, and Mrs. Wanda Harrison and her husband's car was damaged.

The two women wear size 14 and size 18-20 clothes and size 7 and a half and size 8 to 8 and a half shoes. Mr. Harrison wears pants 38 in the waist and size 10 shoes.

Mrs. Wanda Harrison asked that anyone who has anything to share with the family call her at 756-4966. Anything will be appreciated, she said, and anything not used will be passed on to the Salvation Army or someone who can make use of it.

White House Is Asking Change In Election Laws

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration asked Congress today to allow voters to register on election day and to pass a constitutional amendment to provide direct popular election of the president and vice president.

The proposal to junk the embattled Electoral College method of electing presidents and vice presidents was part of a comprehensive election law revision plan prepared by Vice President Walter F. Mondale, who disclosed it at a news conference today.

The administration proposal also seeks public financing for congressional campaigns, a revision of the present system of public financing for presidential campaigns and liberalization of the Hatch Act to allow increased participation in political campaigns by federal civil servants.

"The array of confusing and sometimes burdensome registration requirements now prevents many citizens from casting their ballots on election day," the vice president said in a statement prepared for his news conference.

He said states that have simplified registration requirements have seen dramatic results through increased voter turnout.

Under current procedures, voters must register in advance of going to the polls. Mondale said that in states where voters can register for state elections on election day, including his own state of Minnesota, "the results have typically been a significant increase in voter participation with no increase in voter fraud."

Hunt To Be Here Saturday

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Hunt will speak at the dedication of the new Pitt Memorial Hospital Saturday as scheduled, although there has been some talk about traveling to Atlanta to see teams from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and Charlotte play in the NCAA basketball finals that afternoon.

Carolyn Harmon, the governor's appointments secretary said this morning that Hunt will appear in Greenville as scheduled for the 11 a.m. dedication program. "He has not decided to go" to Atlanta, although he has "talked about it," she noted.

She theorized that due to the close schedule Saturday, Hunt may travel to Atlanta for Monday's games. Win or lose, both teams will play Monday, either in the championship or consolation contest.

Study Applications For Clean Water Bond Funds

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Commissioners met late yesterday afternoon with representatives from several municipalities to discuss municipal and county plans to apply for State Clean Water bond funds allocated to Pitt that will revert to the state for re-allocation if applications are not filed by March 31.

Commissioners announced plans last month to apply for between $300,000 and $400,000 in bond funds allocated to the county which had not been used when a plan was presented for a water system to serve areas of the county not now served.

After the board indicated an interest in applying for funds from the state-wide bond issue, several municipalities indicated that they had plans to apply for a portion of the money. That is what prompted yesterday's session.

In opening the meeting, Commission chairman Charles Gaskins told those present, "the county has made some plans toward a county-wide water system, but that's about as far as it's gone."

Saying the board felt the balance in clean water funds, "up in Raleigh would revert March 31 if not used...that was the prime purpose in asking that the funds be allocated to the county...to save them."

Winterville Mayor Walter Dail pointed out that the bond funds are "the only thing we can get," to help defray the costs of water line installations. "If the county commissioners ask for the money, the municipalities would not get it."

Representatives from Winterville, Ayden, Farmville and Greenville indicated at the meeting that those municipalities have plans to apply for some of the available money prior to the March 31 deadline.

Commissioners agreed to work with the municipal governments and apply for the funds remaining after the municipal applications have been submitted.

County officials noted it is estimated that between $6 million and $8 million in funds allocated to other counties will revert to the state for re-allocation after March 31 and indicated that there is a possibility Pitt will be considered for a share of these funds.

Some $727,000 was originally allocated to Pitt from the state bond issue.

So far, funds received by the various municipalities in the county include: Ayden, $4,800; Bethel, $53,000; Greenville, $81,000; Grifton, $68,000; Grimesland, $13,000; Winterville, $123,000; and Farmville, $55,000.

The state money is allocated on a 25 per cent matching basis for water line installation projects.

Gaskins pointed out that the proposed county water system is being considered in an effort "to get water to those parts of the county which non-profits (non-profit water systems) and municipalities are not serving."

The first phase of the county system is estimated to cost some $4.45 million, including the distribution system, seven deep wells and pumps, and three 200,000 gallon elevated storage tanks.

Putting Finishing Touches On Senate Tax-Cut Bill

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Technicians are putting the finishing touches on a bill approved by the Senate Finance Committee to cut taxes by $31.4 billion over the next 18 months, including a one-time $50 rebate for most Americans.

The one-week delay to give the staff time to put the bill on paper before Senate debate begins will give the Carter administration time to try to convince wavering Democrats that the President's tax proposal deserves a chance.

The bill, which would provide rebates for 200 million Americans and a permanent tax cut averaging $110 for 46 million couples or individuals, is opposed by the 38 Republican senators as wasteful and ineffective. The big question is whether Republicans can enlist enough Democrats to scuttle President Carter's chief economic initiative.

That question won't be answered before March 30, the earliest the Senate is likely to begin considering the bill.

The measure was approved by the finance committee on Monday, 10 to 8, with all Democrats voting yes and all seven Republicans and Harry F. Byrd, Ind.-Va., voting no. Four Democrats said earlier they were voting for the measure not because they felt strongly for it, but to give Carter the benefit of a doubt.

Republicans, who want a big permanent individual tax cut instead of the rebate, were in no such mood. Sen. William Roth, R-Del., called the bill a boondoggle and "one of the most expensive April Fool's jokes ever played on the American taxpayers."

The rebate approved by the finance committee is the same as voted by the full House and generally the same as proposed by Carter. Rebates would be mailed automatically beginning in mid-May, with a taxpayer getting $50 for himself and each dependent. The $50 would decrease as income rises between $25,000 and $30,000; those earning more than $30,000 would get nothing.

The payments also would go to recipients of Social Security, veterans' pensions and welfare who pay no income tax.

The only permanent tax cut in the bill is for the 69 per cent of taxpayers who do not itemize deductions. The current 16 per cent standard deduction with varying minimums and maximums would be changed to a flat $2,200 for single persons and $3,200 for married couples filing a joint return and heads of household.

This would average out to a $110 tax cut for 46 million couples or individuals. But 2.1 million persons who now claim a single standard deduction of between $2,001 and $2,400 would face a tax hike averaging $51 a year. In addition, 6.7 million taxpayers would find it worthwhile to switch from itemizing to the standard deduction.

Under the Senate bill, a single person earning $10,000 and taking the standard deduction would get a $110 tax cut; a family of four earning $10,000 would get a $205 cut; at $15,000 the same family would pay $139 less. Families earning $20,000 or more would get no tax cut.

Ban On Saccharin Stirs Uproar

Plan Increase In Milk Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's reported decision to boost government milk price supports by nearly nine per cent would force consumers to pay 6.2 cents more for each gallon of milk they buy, officials say.

Agriculture Secretary Bob S. Bergland was expected to announce the President's decision on supports for dairy farmers today, but sources reported Carter's intentions and their effects on retail prices on Monday.

The sources said Carter would recommend lifting government price supports to $9 per 100 pounds of milk, compared with the present level of $8.26.

The decision would set the price support at 83 per cent of parity, a formula devised to give farmers the same buying power they had in 1910-1914, when costs and income were said to be in balance.

The increase in the price support is likely to lead to a hike in consumer prices because farmers are unlikely to sell their product to manufacturers for less than the government will give them, officials said. Manufacturers' price increases end up being passed on to the retail level.

Bergland had announced earlier his own backing for a five per cent increase in price supports for milk.

USDA figures show the average retail price nationwide last October was about $1.67 a gallon, with the farmer receiving 57 per cent of the total. By January, the cost had dropped a penny a gallon, with the farmer receiving a reduced share of 54 per cent.

Under federal law a new support level must be set every April 1 and the dairy industry and the USDA both say an increase is necessary to cover inflated production costs.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer advocates are urging House members to take seriously tests showing saccharin causes cancer in animals. But diet-industry spokesmen and some lawmakers claim the tests are questionable and should not force a ban on saccharin from human diets.

A similar split exists over the Delaney clause, a law requiring a ban on any food additive that tests show causes cancer in animals or man.

Hearings are continuing before a House health subcommittee headed by Rep. Paul Rogers, D-Fla., who pledged Monday there will be no "precipitous" move in Congress to change the Delaney clause.

The diet industry and many members of Congress, under pressure from dieting or diabetic constituents, want the law changed. They want to give the Food and Drug Administration authority to weigh benefits with risks in deciding whether food additives should be banned.

They also are asking for a suspension of the proposed saccharin ban, likely to go into effect in July, pending new tests under FDA control.

But Dr. Sidney Wolfe, of Ralph Nader's Health Research Group, testified that recent Canadian tests on saccharin confirm other experiments. He cited a 1973 FDA study said to show that some laboratory rats fed saccharin developed malignant bladder tumors.

A common attack against the Canadian study disputes any relation between human cancer and rats fed saccharin equal to 800 bottles of diet soft drink a day.

But both Wolfe and some FDA officials said large doses of a test substance must be fed laboratory animals "to avoid a result which makes known cancer-causing chemicals appear harmless."

Wolfe claimed the result of the initial FDA proposal was that many people thought the government was behaving in a "frivolous" manner and was compelled to do so by the "arbitrary" nature of the law.

Sherwin Gardner, acting FDA commissioner, testified agency scientists have no reason to suspect the results of the Canadian tests. He said they demonstrated "beyond reasonable question" that saccharin causes malignant bladder tumors in test animals.

He and all other witnesses emphasized there is no known link to connect those test results with human cancer.

Betty Sanders Abernathy, a physics teacher at Fike High School in Wilson, is the 1977 recipient of the Austin D. Bond Award for distinguished service in science education.

The award was formally presented by East Carolina University Chancellor Leo W. Jenkins at the Eastern Regional Science Fair Friday on the ECU campus.

Established in 1974 in honor of Dr. Austin D. Bond, former chairman of science education at ECU, the award has been previously given to teacher Estelle McClees of Kinston and Dr. Frank W. Eller, retired professor of science education at ECU.

Ms. Abernathy is a native of Spring Hope, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Starlin Thomas Sanders of Bailey and the wife of Richard Parker Abernathy.

She received the BS and MA degrees at East Carolina and has done additional study at ECU, UNC-Chapel Hill and the University of Maryland. Her professional career has included teaching positions in Franklin and Nash Counties, an adjunct professorship at Atlantic Christian College, and an instructorship in adult education at Wilson Technical Institute.

She is also current president of Omicron chapter of Eta State Delta Kappa Gamma, international honor society for educators.

The Austin D. Bond Award is sponsored by the ECU Department of Science Education.

He served three and a half years and was released in 1975. Now he must resume serving that sentence.

A parole commission spokesman said he would be eligible for parole again after serving six months of the breaking and entering sentence. If he does not win parole, he could be released in 1981 with time off for good behavior.

Allen Hall's Parole Ends

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Paroles Commission Monday revoked the parole of Allen Hall, key state witness in the Wilmington 10 trial.

The commission cited several violations, including bad check charges and larceny.

Hall is already in Central Prison starting a two-year sentence for breaking and entering.

He was a key witness against nine black men and one white woman charged in 1971 with involvement in the firebombing of a grocery store during racial violence in Wilmington.

Hall later recanted his testimony. He has charged that officials threatened to revoke his parole from a 12-year sentence on 1971 rioting charges because of his recantation.

A SCENE... from "He Came Seeing," a play to be given at Grace FWB Church here Thursday evening.

The Evangel Players of the Free Will Baptist Bible College in Nashville, Tenn. will present two plays based on Jesus' life and teachings Thursday at 7:30 p. m. at Grace FWB Church, 400 Watauga Ave. here.

About 25 Free Will Baptist churches of the area are to come together to see these plays. Given by speech students of the college, the plays are "Ten Miles to Jericho" by Earl Reimer and "He Came Seeing" by Mary Hamlin. The first play portrays the events in Jesus' parable of The Good Samaritan, with the lesson applied to modern times. The second depicts the healing of a boy blind since birth and his rejection by family and friends.

The Evangel Players are touring Free Will Baptist churches in Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina and North Carolina. The public is urged to see the plays, according to Grace Church pastor, the Rev. Roger Tripp.

Literally, Figuratively, Iran's Women Libbers Are Lifting Veils

By CHARLES BERNARD
TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Forty years ago, Shah Reza tried to ban the chador, the head-to-toe veil worn by Iranian women, by having police forcibly tear them off in the streets.

All he succeeded in doing was to drive an entire generation of women off the streets into the seclusion of their homes.

They stayed there until 1963 when the late shah's son and successor, Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, launched a campaign for the emancipation of women.

At that time, women's rights were mainly limited to owning property and exercising a degree of authority over their households.

Now women's liberation is well advanced in Iran. Women serve in the cabinet and in parliament and are increasingly welcomed on an equal pay basis in government and business.

In the streets of Tehran's middle-class districts, girls and young women freely exhibit their charms in hip-hugging jeans and tight-fitting sweaters — alongside many thousands who cling to the chador.

Leader of the women's movement is Princess Ashraf Pahlavi, the shah's twin sister who heads the Women's Organization of Iran, started in 1958.

The secretary general of the organization is Ms. Mahnaz Afkhami, who is also Iran's first Minister of State for Women's Affairs. She has her office in the prime minister's department. Ms. Afkhami said Princess Ashraf is determined that Iranian women shall be fully liberated by the end of the first Decade for Women in 1985.

She said the goal of the women's organization is to put itself out of business by accomplishing all its objectives by that date.

"We are hoping this will happen, but I think it is a little optimistic, like all of Iran's goals — a little hurried and a little overly optimistic," she said. "But I think it is not a bad goal because one tries harder."

A lot of scene changing already has been accomplished since 1963, when women were given the vote.

Under a family law passed in 1967 and revised in 1975, a man can no longer gain freedom from an unwanted wife legally by simply incanting three times, "I divorce you."

Divorce proceedings now follow the traditional lines of the West, with women having equal rights in the legal process.

Since 1963, women also have been allowed to join the judiciary and police force and to serve in the Literacy Corps formed by the shah. They have begun participating in town council and county council proceedings.

Family protection laws have been revised to strengthen women's rights. A social service law assisting women has been passed. Family welfare centers have been opened. Two women have risen to cabinet rank and 22 recently won elective seats in the Majlis (parliament). The shah has appointed two of them senators among the 30 he chooses in the 60-member Senate.

Ms. Afkhami also cites these gains:

— In the past 20 years literacy among females has increased from 8 to 32 per cent. In the seven to nine age group, the increase has been from 13.5 to 57 per cent.

— The number of higher education graduates among women in the past six years has increased from 305 to 10,396. Girls comprise 28 per cent of all students and 32 per cent of all graduates.

— Five women serve as undersecretaries of ministries, 19 as directors general of ministerial departments, two as town governors and 12 as district governors.

— There are 31 women judges, 30 lawyers and 63 members of arbitration councils, five of them heads of the councils.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

One of the best ways we know to stretch a small can of salmon is to use it in a pie that makes a lovely main dish for lunch or supper. When we tried the following recipe with the deep red Sockeye variety of salmon, we found the delightful flavor of the fish permeated the filling.

We also found that, served at lunch, all the Salmon Pie needed to accompany it was a salad of greens tossed with olive oil, wine vinegar, salt and pepper. For supper service you might like to accompany it with a steamed green vegetable and crisp cole slaw.

One caution: be sure to follow our directions and let the pie "sit" before cutting so you can remove wedges neatly. After we took the pie out of the oven, we put it on a counter near the range; even after a half-hour wait, it was quite hot enough to be enjoyable — and we like our hot food served hot!

SALMON PIE

Margarine Pastry, see below
7½-ounce can salmon
Milk
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
¼ cup finely diced celery
¼ cup finely diced green pepper
1 small scallion, thinly sliced
3 tablespoons flour
¾ teaspoon salt
¾ teaspoon dried dill
2 tablespoons medium or dry sherry
½ cup grated cheddar cheese
4 hard-cooked eggs, cubed
Make up and roll out the Margarine Pastry according to the directions below. Drain salmon, reserving liquid; add enough milk to the liquid to make 1½ cups. Break salmon into chunks. In a 1½-quart saucepan melt the butter; add the celery, green pepper and scallion and cook gently until tender; stir in the flour, salt and dill. Gradually stir in the milk. Over moderately low heat, stirring constantly, cook until thickened. Off heat stir in the sherry and cheese, then the eggs and salmon. Pour into the pastry-lined 9-inch pie plate; trim dough ½-inch beyond the rim of the pie plate. Cover with the top pastry. Fold and roll top edge under lower edge, pressing on rim to seal; flute. Cover edge with a 2-to 3-inch strip of foil to prevent excessive browning. With a fork, prick pastry top in about a dozen places. Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven for 30 minutes. Remove the foil band. Let stand from 20 to 30 minutes in the warm kitchen so filling sets; otherwise it will be too runny when the pie is sliced. Makes 6 servings.

Ms. Afkhami said some government officials remain resistant to change and argue, "Oh, there is no use to change the laws because first society should be ready. Its level of education should be ready. Its level of consciousness should be ready. Then the laws will come naturally."

"We always say that's not so, that the law in itself will have to be a little ahead of the social outlook, not maybe tremendously ahead, but at least a bit, and it makes a great deal of difference in bringing about consciousness of women and their education," she said.

Bridge Winners Announced

Wednesday morning duplicate bridge winners at Planters Bank were:

Mrs. Edward Callahan and Mrs. John McConney, first; Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Smiley, second; Mrs. W. Z. Morton Jr. and Mrs. John Richards, third; Mrs. Jerry Powell and Mrs. Allan Storey, fourth.

Winners Wednesday afternoon included: Mrs. J. M. Horton and David Proctor, first; Mrs. L. B. Harris and Mrs. Clifton Toler, second; Mrs. W. R. Harris and Mrs. Effie Williams, third; Mrs. Eli Bloom and Mrs. M. H. Bynum, fourth; tied for fifth were Mrs. David Stevens and Mrs. William McConnell with Mr. and Mrs. George Martin.

Saturday afternoon winners at First Federal were:

North-South: Mrs. Carmi Winters and Mrs. L. D. Harris, first; Mrs. J. M. Horton and David Proctor, second; Mozelle Felton and Hazel Pittman, third.

East-West: Dr. and Mrs. Charles Duffy, first; Mrs. George Martin and Lewis Newsome, second; Francina Owens and Eloise Owens, third.

The Saturday, March 26, game will be cancelled due to the Sectional Tournament in Wilson.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I couldn't help overhearing a conversation in a department store the other day.

A woman was shuffling through a sale dress rack when she shouted, "If you're tired, just say so and we'll go home. It is no fun for me to shop when you stand back there and give me 'that look.' Why don't you go play in the drinking fountains or something?"

I looked down half expecting to see a pre-schooler, when a silver-haired man said mechanically, "I am not tired, Cora. Take your time."

May God forgive him for his lying mouth.

This will undoubtedly sound sexist, but man was never meant to shop. He doesn't have the physical stamina for it. After 15 or 20 hours on their feet, men tend to tire. Not women. I learned to shop at the feet of the Master—my mother. She could make the raid on Entebbe look like an impulse.

All you had to do was to put a card marked, "CLEARANCE, ALL SALES FINAL," or "10% OFF" under her nose to sniff. Then, hang on tight, because she was good for three days.

I have to admit, she brought a certain excitement to the exercise. She would stand outside of a department store waiting for the store to open. When she saw the manager approach the door she would take up the slack in her handbag strap, grab my hand and tuck it under her arm like a football (which explains why my right arm is three inches longer today than my left one), hold her body rigid in a blocking stance, and when the door opened, charge! (Literally. She was the only woman ever treated for credit card burns on 90 per cent of her hands.)

Men are too practical to shop. Whenever they spend a day in a department store, they feel they should buy something. They do not enjoy the challenge. To women every little item on every little counter and on every little shelf is screaming, "Choose me! Choose me!" and each one must be picked up and auditioned.

Men, on the other hand, tend to be overly cautious. They will pick up a shirt and really feel an impulse to buy it. Then suddenly they will ask themselves, "Do I really need this shirt?" What's that got to do with anything?

I felt sorry for Cora. I really did. Here was her big day to rummage through racks of merchandise and there was her husband hanging over her shoulder like a bad conscience.

Next time you go shopping with your wife, ask yourself, would you want to read Playboy while she turned the pages? Same thing.

How To Address Correspondence To 'Physicians'

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1977 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: How does one address mail to a married couple, both of whom are physicians? I know several such couples, and I never know how to address properly their invitations or Christmas cards.

Should it be: "Dr. and Mrs. John Doe" or "Dr. and Dr. John Doe"? Or is there some other form?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: They are addressed: "The Drs. Doe," "Dr. Jane Doe and Dr. John Doe," or "The Drs. John and Jane Doe."

DEAR ABBY: My husband drives a cab, and many times Mike has come home with names and phone numbers of women. He empties his pockets on the bureau every night and makes no effort to hide anything. When I ask him why he has these names and numbers, he says, "Oh, I meet a lot of tramps in my job who give me their names in case I run into guys who want a gal to show them the town."

I asked him how come he knows these girls are tramps unless he gets into personal conversations with them, and he says some people start pouring out their life history even before they tell him where they want to go.

Mike is good-looking and friendly, but he must give these tramps some encouragement, or they wouldn't tell him their life's history or give him their phone numbers, right?

CABBIE'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Not necessarily. If Mike had something to hide he wouldn't empty his pockets out on the bureau. Don't hassle him about the "tramps" he hauls, or how he comes to know their life histories. Some cabbies hear more confessions than a parish priest.

DEAR ABBY: I recently joined the auxiliary of a civic club to which my husband belongs, and I was named to head the annual dinner and bazaar.

When the newspaper wrote up the story, they referred to me first as "Jane Jones" and thereafter as "Jones." They also referred to my position as "chairperson."

When I complained to the editor, I was told that it is the policy of most newspapers these days not to distinguish between the sexes. Well, I objected firmly. I resent being called "Jones" when I am "Mrs. Jones." Anybody can be a "person," but a woman is someone special and always has been.

MRS. JOHN JONES

DEAR MRS.: I, too, dislike the policy of some newspapers in dropping the woman's first name, or "Miss" or "Mrs." on subsequent mention. But the newspapers are in a crunch between those with our preference and other women who demand that no distinction between the sexes be made—a move (in their eyes) toward true "equality." So don't shoot the editor—he's doing the best he can.

Radical Changes In Our Lives

Rapidly rising costs of energy give every indication that average Americans are going to radically change their life styles in the years ahead.

A recent study showed that new homes will cost an average of $78,000 in the 1980s and few American families will be able to afford them. In fact in 1976 only 27 percent of our families could afford the median new-home price of $44,200.

Comparatively, the study said, in 1970 around 47 percent of American families could afford the median new-home price of $23,400. The study was done by the MIT-Harvard Joint Center for Urban Studies.

New home prices increased by nearly 90 percent from 1970 to 1976, while median family income grew by 47 percent.

Much of the rapidly increasing cost of new homes — and the failure of median incomes to keep up — is due to the explosion in energy costs. This is also squeezing the family budget in other areas.

It will mean less living space for families in the future, just as it will mean smaller autos and alternative transportation.

India's Democracy Gains Lease On Life

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, who was caught up in a Watergate type scandal, declared a state of emergency which trampled individual rights some 20 months ago.

This weekend she paid the price with a defeat for re-election to Parliament.

It offers new hope for democracy in India.

Energy Inspectors Sought

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The fuel shortage of this winter will help push the North Carolina General Assembly into moving ahead with a mandatory statewide building inspection program.

The relationship is obvious between the need for inspectors to check on tightness of buildings and adequacy of insulation and the energy crunch.

Part of the package of solutions being put forth by an energy study group chaired by State Senator Harold W. Hardison, D-Lenoir County, deals with insulation requirements.

But even if law required such steps, there is at present no system for making certain that builders comply. Most experts are agreed, however, on the need for long-range conservation measures such as building insulation — particularly after this unusually bitter winter which underscored the continuing nature of fuel shortages.

More Inspection

Another legislative group is finding that the emphasis on building construction as a conservation step is lending impetus to its interest in beefing up the local building inspection program.

A legislative committee chaired by State Rep. Thomas W. Ellis, Jr., D-Vance County, and former State Senator Lynwood Smith, D-Guilford County, at first felt it was on shaky ground in calling for the sizable investment required in stretching state law to require building inspections in all areas of the state.

There are no formal training programs for inspectors, many communities require the inspector to meet no minimum qualifications and to do other work as well, inspectors are often not paid adequately to attract qualified people and local governmental officials resist imposition of state standards on local salaries, and in many areas there is simply not enough building to generate the fees needed to support an inspection program.

Of the 100 counties, only 46 have a building inspection program; 32 inspect plumbing; 20 inspect heating; and 85 inspect electrical. Of 289 municipalities surveyed, 269 inspect building, 106 inspect heating, 30 inspect plumbing, and 239 inspect electrical.

In small town and rural settings many homes and public use buildings such as churches and stores are put up with no inspections.

The state has a building code to be applied statewide, but a number of experts agree that enforcement is haphazard at best, and dependent on the interest of local communities to require inspection.

Higher Fees

Builders told the study

committee that they welcome inspection, and would not object to paying higher inspection fees to support a better program.

Recommendations being put forth in this session of the General Assembly by the Committee on Local Building Inspectors would set up a training course in the Community College system, establish minimum qualifications to be phased in over a period of time, and would require all local governmental units to provide enforcement machinery on a staggered basis.

The smallest units would not be required to have an inspection program until July, 1985.

In isolated sections where there is not enough building to support a fulltime program, provision would be made for joint regional systems.

Another committee recommendation would enlarge and regionalize the engineering division of the State Department of Insurance to provide trained personnel to ride herd on local enforcement programs and provide technical assistance to local units.

A major job, the committee agreed, is "educating" public officials on the need for inspections. "The job of building inspector is not highly regarded in many communities. Inadequate salaries are provided, technical training is not encouraged, and the inspector may be called upon to perform duties unrelated to building inspections," the committee reported.

Education of the public to demand adequate inspection, public officials to provide inspection, and inspectors to do the job are part of the approach outlined.

We Talk, Soviets Build

The great debate over the confirmation of Paul Warnke was like a long and drawn-out dream. It began on a Friday and ended the following Wednesday; it occupied most of the big guns of the Senate. The debate ran on for hours; it took up 161 pages of the Record; it was at once vigorous, leisurely, absorbing and tedious.

It was splendid sound and fury; and except for one tangential message, it signified nothing. The message was to President Carter: The Senate does not propose to bed walked upon. It is a message Mr. Carter will heed to his profit. Ostensibly, at least, this was not what the great debate was all about.

The purpose was to confirm Mr. Warnke as our country's chief disarmament negotiator. In the end, that purpose was achieved. Underlying the debate was the necessary premise that such negotiations matter, that an arms limitation agreement has meaning, that a distant treaty with the Soviet Union is serious business.

All these assumptions were put forward as in a dream — for Senators know, or Senators ought to know, that the assumptions are so much sand. They dissolve at the touch. The Soviet Union, on the record, is a nation utterly without honor in the keeping of agreements. It is therefore immaterial what figures Mr. Warnke and the administration may write into an agreement on strategic arms; one set of figures is as good, or as bad, as another set of figures. The figures will have no more meaning than the Kremlin wishes to place upon them, and this is no meaning at all.

Panel's Mood Tense

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP)

"Keep your dirty hands off my Republicans," snapped Sen. Strom Thurmond, looking down the Senate Judiciary Committee dais at Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

Thurmond's angry outburst was one of many tense moments during the long and often agonizing attempt by the Judiciary Committee to establish subcommittees and decide who will serve on each.

Ordinarily, committees organize themselves at a brief, routine meeting. That's the way it was for most Senate committees. But not Judiciary. New rules adopted this year by the Senate, coupled with key changes in the membership of the committee, plunged the panel into a power struggle that still isn't resolved.

At stake in the efforts of the 11 Democrats and six Republicans to determine the makeup of subcommittees is whether liberals or conservatives will be in a position to control action on measures such as a major antitrust bill aimed at the oil industry, as well as constitutional amendments dealing with school busing, abortion and the Electoral College.

For six weeks, the committee has struggled in open and closed sessions with plans for filling vacancies on the subcommittees. Transcripts of the open meetings and accounts of what went on in the closed sessions provide a textbook example of the maintenance and use of power in Congress.

The mood within the committee has fluctuated between conciliation and anger, between attempts to use charm to win a point and some not very veiled threats.

Thurmond's outburst occurred

40 Years Ago Today

March 22, 1937

A commerce department investigation into the crash of Amelia Earhart's $80,000 "flying laboratory" was underway today as the aviatrix and her colleagues sailed to Los Angeles to plan another globe-circling attempt.

Inspector Amil Williams said he was studying the take-off crash, which halted Miss Earhart's projected trip and for a brief moment endangered the lives of the famed aviatrix and her navigators.

Findings will be sent to Washington, where any announcements will be made.

Chief Justice Hughes, in a letter presented to the Senate Judiciary Committee today by Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.), said an increase in the number of Supreme Court justices "would not promote the efficiency of the Court."

The chief justice made it clear he was commenting on an increase from the standpoint of efficiency and apart from any question of policy, which he said "I do not discuss."

Wheeler, opening testimony in opposition to the Roosevelt court bill, began by reading the Hughes letter which the chief justice said was approved by Justices Van Devanter and Brandeis.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Politics Of Arab Boycott

By ROWLANDE EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Following a visit to the White House by Jewish leaders appealing for help, a senior presidential aide removed from Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps's testimony on anti-boycott legislation language that businessmen feel is necessary to avert destruction of U.S.-Arab trade.

Three Jewish leaders met with Stuart Eizenstat, President Carter's domestic policy chief, at the White House on Saturday, March 12. That meeting buttressed his own view, Eizenstat told us, that Mrs. Kreps's testimony to Congress March 14 and 15 supporting anti-boycott legislation should be general rather than specific. Over the weekend, specific discussion of exceptions to the anti-boycott ban disappeared from the draft of her testimony.

That disappearance is viewed with utmost gravity by businessmen who thought they had worked out a compromise with Jewish leaders. They view Eizenstat's intervention ("suddenly a new actor on the stage," one businessman told us) as wiping out four weeks of arduous negotiation. What's more, the businessmen feel the omissions from the Kreps testimony void face-to-face assurances made by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance to Arab leaders during his recent Mideast swing.

Personal intervention by the President could yet produce moderate regulations enforcing the new anti-boycott legislation in away that preserves U.S.-Arab trade and the essential help of Saudi Arabia in a Mideast settlement. But the Kreps testimony is viewed by sober businessmen as proposing a "counter-boycott" — a U.S. trade boycott of the Arab world in response to its boycott of Israel, with dismal side-effects on the Middle East.

Actually, Mr. Carter has had little involvement with the boycott question since his campaign support for a law prohibiting American businessmen from participating in the boycott of Israel. Four days after his inauguration, businessmen and Jewish leaders began negotiating a compromise approach, first reported by us early this year.

These talks, under the auspices of the Anti-Defamation League (ADL) and the Business Roundtable, produced a joint statement of principles. But that left unanswered specific questions, including what has become known as the classic truck-tire problem.

If Company "X" exports a truck to an Arab country, can it replace tires made by Company "Y" on the boycott list with tires made by non-boycotted Company "Z" without being subject to U.S. criminal prosecution under the new anti-boycott law? If the answer is no, relations with the Arab world would become dubious.

Businessmen assumed that the ADL-Roundtable sessions tacitly agreed on moderate enforcement, with the Carter administration's backing.

But a tough interpretation of the ADL-Roundtable agreement by Alfred Moses of the American Jewish Committee in congressional testimony March 8 set off a chain reaction. Irving S. Shapiro of the DuPont Co., chairman of the Roundtable, wrote the President March 10 taking issue with the Moses interpretation and citing the truck-tire case.

Indeed, the draft of testimony by Secretary Kreps before the House Banking Committee Monday, March 14, echoed Shapiro's position. It even urged the truck-tire exception.

Her draft testimony discussed in detail the need for exceptions, asserting: "We believe that U.S. businesses should be permitted to make necessary accommodation to import and entry restrictions in particular transactions with the Arab world." It advocated exceptions from the legislation providing "a degree of clarity for the business community, which is essential for the orderly conduct of trade. This type of exception recognizes that the United States cannot change the laws of other countries, even those which we view as undesirable."

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

I am sorry to bring what has been a campus problem to your attention, but I feel obligated to respond to the letter written by an ECU student on the Tenth Street Overpass.

I say the overpass is not a problem because we seem to be getting closer to a solution. For several years now, the city, the campus and the state have seen the need for a pedestrian crosswalk along that busy intersection. The latest action taken to gain funds for this project was an act SGA initiated in the January ECU Board of Trustees meeting to petition D. O. T. for the $210,000 required. Roddy Jones, Eddie Greene and I make up the committee which will soon go to Raleigh to try to get that money.

The student who wrote the letter stated that SGA and the city had been working on the project "for several years," but that miraculously both Gov. Hunt and Lt. Gov. Green were convinced of the need for the overpass because the student "personally went... and pleaded with (them) for their help and support."

The state, including D. O. T., has been in favor of an overpass for years. That is not the problem. The problem is who shall pay for the overpass. And that problem is not going to be solved by a lone student. How to fund the project has been of prime concern to Greg Pingleton, SGA vice-president, as well as city officials. It will be that work, plus whatever the Trustees' committee can do which will make or break the funding of the overpass. D. O. T. has turned us down as recently as this past fall, so we've got a lot of work to do.

Tim Sullivan
Student Body President, ECU

To the editor:

Ironically Ms. Clark's letter (Mar. 15—Daily Reflector) concerning the magazines in full view for children and the words of Mr. Ipock's decision appeared in the same paper. Ms. Clark was right, for when I visit this book store with my children (The store has children's books, also.) I have to concoct a game that the children can play only in the front of the store. . . This is difficult, for they keep asking why can't they go in the middle and back of the store. I haven't figured what to tell them yet.

I'm sure Mr. Ipock's decision not to sell any more of these magazines will not solve any world problems, stop any wars, or solve any grievances. . . but it sure has got him a new customer.

Hurrah for Ipock and Clark—let's unite!!

Strength For Today

ATHEISM MEANS DESERTION

There are many people who give no attention whatsoever to God or religion. Decade after decade passes, life goes smoothly, and about the only time they ever think of God is when they use His name in profanity.

Sometimes when trouble strikes them, they take the Bible down from the top shelf, blow the dust off it, and read a few passages hoping that something better will happen to them. Sometimes it does, but more often, perhaps, it does not.

These people have not renounced God; they have just transferred their allegiance to another deity — themselves. Unfortunately, the self-confidence which accompanies such worship is a most tragic illusion.

If we lose a sense of the reality of that God who made the world and sustains both it and the creatures therein, we are not so wicked as we are foolish. Atheists are not only those who deny God and denounce Him, but above all the great multitude who have deserted Him.

ReaLemon Case Gets Involved

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The ReaLemon case gets more fascinating. Now the U.S. Commerce Department argues that an opinion by a Federal Trade Commission judge could result in "palming off" goods on an unsuspecting public.

Not only that, it suggested, but the opinion by the FTC's chief administrative law judge, if left standing, might change common law, weaken trademarks and conceivably even promote a monopoly.

All this about that little green bottle of reconstituted lemon juice that almost every shopper has seen on grocery store shelves. It's in almost every one of them; it is overwhelmingly successful, dominating some markets.

That's part of the problem. Last September, Judge

Daniel H. Hanscom of the FTC ruled that Borden Inc., whose product it is, unlawfully maintained a monopoly in the reconstituted lemon juice market.

He said Borden should license its competitors.

In his opinion this could be accomplished by having Borden accept a royalty of one-half of one per cent. For that price, competitors too could make and sell ReaLemon, and even use the name Borden to prove it.

Borden officials were aghast. They denied they used discriminatory pricing and unfair promotional tricks to damage the market for others. In effect, they said the product won its dominance on quality alone.

At any rate, they added, it was unfair of Hanscom to limit the market as he had. ReaLemon, said Borden, competed not just with other reconstituted lemon juices, but with fresh lemons, lemon extract and the like.

The Commerce Department looked at the decision for a few months and on March 7 intervened in the case, which still must be decided by the full commission. It seemed concerned mainly that trademarks could be damaged.

"The administrative law judge's initial decision," it noted, "orders the compulsory licensing of the ReaLemon trademark based on a precedent of compulsory patent licensing." But, it said, a patent isn't a trademark.

Unlike trademarks, "patents are government grants, provided for by the Constitution, which give inventors the right to exclude others from making, using, or selling their inventions for 17 years," said the department, which regulates both.

"Conversely, trademarks are acquired by using the mark in commerce and represent the goodwill accorded to the owner of the mark by consumers," it said.

A patent is a government grant. A trademark is established by the owner of the mark and receives government protection to prevent the public from becoming confused or deceived. But licensing a trademark would do just that, it said.

The basic function of the trademark is to indicate the origin of a product, the Commerce Department brief continued, and to do this the trademark proprietor must have exclusive right to the mark.

How's The Weather?

FORECAST

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain changing to showers inland is forecast today for the Northwest segment of the nation. Rain is also due for most of New England. The National Weather Service says snow can be expected for much of New York State. Temperatures are predicted to be mild along the Pacific coast and cool in the upper Midwest. (AP Wirephoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Gale force winds blew along the North Carolina coast Tuesday while a freeze warning was posted for the Piedmont and eastern slopes and foothills tonight in advance of a frontal system that bore down on the state.

Heavy rain also moved ahead of the front and winds and cold temperatures followed it.

The front was expected to pass over North Carolina during the morning and winds picked up with its passage, approaching gale force along the coast.

The forecast called for generally clear skies tonight and temperatures will begin to drop. By morning, temperatures in the western sections of the state were expected to range in the 20s, which could be damaging to fruit trees and flowers if they are not protected.

The lows were expected to range to the 40s on the Outer Banks.

Rainfall around the state this morning generally ranged between half an inch and an inch, but Charlotte, Jacksonville and Wilmington all measured more than an inch.

Temperatures under Monday's rainy skies ranged generally in the 50s and this morning's lows were mostly in the 40s.

mittees and the chairmanship of one.
Kennedy will be chairman of the antitrust subcommittee, which has jurisdiction over the oil divestiture bill, a measure that would prohibit oil companies from controlling all phases of the petroleum industry from the well to the neighborhood gasoline station.

Another liberal, Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., chairs the constitutional subcommittee which has jurisdiction over proposed constitutional amendments.

Originally, the judiciary committee was to have 10 subcommittees with three Democrats and two Republicans on each.
But when Allen bid for seats on both the antitrust and constitutional panels, Kennedy and Bayh faced the possibility of being outvoted in their own subcommittees if Thurmond named conservative Republicans to the minority seats. That was the reason Kennedy was so anxious to get the South Carolinian to name his choices.

"It is the non-nuclear balance of military power which presents the more pressing problem for American policy." No matter how naval strength is measured, in total tonnage or in number of ships, the trend toward Soviet naval expansion is immensely disturbing. In relative land forces, of course the Soviet superiority cannot be challenged.

In a symposium sponsored by the American Conservative Union, ten respected authorities on military power contribute their urgent warnings. Admiral Thomas H. Moorer finds the strategic balance "definitely shifting in favor of the Soviet Union." Lieutenant General Daniel Graham confirms a Library of Congress report that our power relative to the Soviet Union "has declined drastically over the past ten years." Dr. Stefan Possony provides a grim enumeration of recent mistakes in foreign policy that, in his view, have weakened our military strength, undermined the national will, and made war "ever more probable."

At the outset of the Warnke debate, Senator George McGovern dismissed such warnings as manifestations of "near hysteria." In his own touching, trusting, naive way, the Senator from South Dakota would put his own reliance in new arms limitations agreements. The tangible evidence of Soviet military buildup leaves him unimpressed.

Well, the evidence impresses me. It is all very well for Senators to talk and talk and talk, but the talk will alter nothing. While we fiddle-faddle with quorum calls, the Soviets are launching submarines. We ought to shake off the dream and face the reality: The Soviets will not negotiate their advantages away.

On Saturday, March 12, Eisenhower was visited by Moses Hyman Bookbinder of the American Jewish Committee and Paul Burger of the American Jewish Congress. They took issue with Shapiro's letter and urged that the administration not go on record favoring such exceptions.

Eisenstat told us this supported his own opinion, expressed earlier that week to Commerce Department officials, that the exceptions might vitiate the anti-boycott legislation. He advised making the Kreps testimony general, not specific, and over the weekend the Secretary of Commerce's draft statement began losing paragraphs. Mention of the truck-tire question was red-pencilled, as was the entire discussion of exemptions quoted above.

So, expecting detailed support of exceptions to anti-boycott legislation, businessmen instead received from the administration only an affirmation of the anti-boycott principle in highly ambiguous language. Whether this results in damaging loss of trade with the Arab world depends on whether Mr. Carter interprets that language with regulations that please the Jewish leaders, as they fully expect, or regulations saying what Juanita Kreps intended to say before the White House intervention.

Delivering New City Directory

The Mullin-Kille Company of the Carolinas is now delivering the new Greenville Directory, and expects to have all orders in purchasers' hands by the end of this week, according to Ed Edmundson who is in charge of the deliveries.
Edmundson said that the Greenville Directory is the largest and most comprehensive yet. There are five sections included in the four inch thick book.

The preface contains historical and civic information including photographs of general interest. The Buyers Guide and Classified Business Directory contains display and listings of services and products by the business firms in the area. Churches, schools, organizations and professional services are properly classified. Names of national brand products will also be found in this section.

The Numerical Telephone Directory includes four exchanges, 746, 752, 756, and 758 in numerical order for easy references.

The Street Guide will list in alphabetical order, most of the streets in the Greenville and Winterville area and for the first time the Ayden area streets are listed. Phone numbers and home ownership will be shown by the numerical street listings.

The resident and business section will show names in alphabetical order with spouses name, places of occupation, type of job, the number of children under 18 years old, home ownership and complete addresses with phone numbers. Businesses will show management or officers with location and phone numbers.

Many of the chambers of commerce throughout North and South Carolina will be receiving a new Greenville Directory for their libraries. Manufacturers and distributors that are interested in locating in the Pitt County area will be furnished directories upon request.

Eighteen Items Facing Planning-Zoning Board

The Joint City-County and Greenville Planning and Zoning Commissions will face a total of 18 scheduled agenda items when they meet Wednesday evening at city hall.

"Old Business" items on the joint agenda include: consideration of an amendment to the Zoning Ordinance to require tree and vegetation islands in parking lots; addition to the ordinance concerning notification of adjoining property owners;

Rezoning request of H. G. Stocks for approximately 32.6 acres on the south side of US 264 Bypass from Highway Commercial and RA-20 to Highway Commercial and Office and Institutional; and discussion of draft of the Planned Unit Development ordinance.

"New Business" scheduled includes: request of Agri Supply for rezoning approximately 13.6 acres on the north side of Greenville Boulevard, northeast, from RA-20 to Highway Commercial; Annexation petition by Courtney Square located southeast of the intersection of Arlington Boulevard and Red Banks Road; amendments to the Zoning Ordinance defining dine and dance establishments;

Revision of the City Code relating to airport zoning; final plat of North Park Industrial Center located south of State Road 1579; and Preliminary and final plat of Vainright Subdivision, Section I, located north of Greenfield Terrace and west of NC 11.

The Greenville board will consider: request of Wilson Rhodes Electrical Contractors Inc. for rezoning approximately one acre on the east side of Hooker Road adjacent to Cambridge

Subdivision from RA-20 to Highway Commercial;

Request of Dr. Ledyard E. Ross for rezoning approximately .94 acres on the south side of E. Tenth Street from Office and Institutional to Downtown Commercial Fringe;

Preliminary plat of Singletree Subdivision, Sections I and II, revised; preliminary plat of Twin Oaks Subdivision located at the northwest intersection of 14th Street and US 264 Bypass;

Publication Is Prepared

A new publication entitled Land and Water: North Carolina's Vital Resources has been prepared by the USDA Soil Conservation Service and is now available according to State Conservationist Jesse L. Hicks.

The publication, which has a summary of conservation activities in the Tar Heel State for 1976, is available free from SCS offices in the state.

Up to date maps show the status of particular activities including the following: modern soil surveys, completed or underway; Public Law 566 watershed projects; and resource conservation and development areas.

Illustrated by 30 photographs and maps, the booklet tells of varied services available from the Soil Conservation Service or through local soil and water conservation districts.

Other sections of the publication include information about watershed tours for the public; minimum tillage; and control of erosion both in urban areas on rural land.

Appointed Page In N.C. Senate

Steve Tyburski of Greenville has been chosen by Sen. Vernon White to be a page in the N. C. Senate for the week of Mar. 28 through Apr. 1.

A sophomore at Greenville Christian Academy, Tyburski is an honor student and president of the Student Council. He is president of the Athletic Club and a regular on the school's basketball team. A member of People's Baptist Temple, he is active in the church bus ministry.

His parents are Mr. and Mrs. John C. Tyburski.

RJR Is Under Investigation

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — R.J. Reynolds Industries has disclosed it is under federal grand jury investigation for possible tax and other violations stemming from use of corporate funds for political contributions.

Company spokesman Frank Slover said the probe was also looking into possible offenses involving rebates and other payments.

Reynolds disclosed last year that corporate funds totaling up to $190,000 were used for political contributions over a five-year period ending in 1973. The disclosure triggered resignations of three company executives as officers and directors, although they remain with the firm in different jobs.

Walk-A-Thon

The United Methodist Youth Fellowship of Saint James Church will sponsor a Walk-a-thon for world hunger Saturday, March 26 from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

The youth are asking sponsors to pledge a stated amount per mile up to 15 miles. The walk must be completed by 2:30 p.m. All the money from the Walk-a-thon will go to the United Methodist Committee on Relief which will use it specifically to combat the World Hunger problem, possibly in India, Bangladesh, Guatemala, Africa, or any of several other countries.

Last year the group raised over $1,000. Motorists are being made aware that the walkers will be out on the roads. The walkers will begin at the church walk down Highway 43 to Bell's Fork, then behind Brook Valley to Highway 33 and then return to the church.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market continued its downtrend of the past three sessions with a broad decline today.

The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was off 5.24 at 948.30 after a 14.46-point drop in the three previous trading days.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than a 2-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Big Board volume was a moderate 4.87 million shares over the first hour.

Brokers said the market was weighed down by persistent inflation and interest-rate worries.

On top of a surge in food prices prompted by bad weather early in the year, analysts noted recent price increases in such basic industrial commodities as copper and aluminum.

Published forecasts of a rise in interest rates in the months ahead were another depressant. Sony Corp. was the most active NYSE issue, down 3/4 at 10 1/4. A 250,000-share block traded at that price.

The Tokyo-based company said its consolidated earnings climbed 52.3 per cent in the quarter ended Jan. 31, but also cited uncertainties in the outlook for the next period because of possible restrictions on Japanese exports and sluggish demand within Japan.

The NYSE's composite index fell .22 to 54.87.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .12 at 112.24.

Ruling Erases Agency Rules

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Administrative rules and procedures for more than 100 state agencies may have been set aside by a North Carolina Court of Appeals ruling last week.

The rules cover such matters as dates for state board meetings, rate making and state licensing.

The court in an insurance case rejected the Department of Insurance's rule procedures, which are substantially the same as those in other agencies.

School Bd...

Several board members expressed a hope that the City Council may find a way of letting the Extended Day Program remain at its present location — a portion of the second and third floors of the annex building to the old Memorial Baptist Church on Green Street. The program was temporarily moved there near the end of the 1975-76 school year when Third Street School was condemned. At that time, the City Council made it clear the site would be available only for the 1976-77 school year which ends in June this year.

Prefacing his remarks with the precaution that at this stage it is only a possibility under consideration, Supt. Glenn Cox reported that a proposal is being studied for the relocation of the Greenville City School office from its West Fifth Street location to quarters in the nurse's building at the present Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Cox noted the plan calls for the use of both floors with the exception of three offices that would be allocated to the American Red Cross. The proposed space would more than double that now available for city school administration personnel. "This would make it possible for us to bring in all our people to one place, those that are now scattered here and there," Cox remarked.

Reiterating that "the plan is not a reality at this point," Cox said that at any rate, "it will be 12 to 18 months before definite action is taken."

In a series of reports on the status of work at various city schools, Cox reported:

— The new middle school — (As of Feb. 25): All contractors are on the job and work is coming along satisfactorily. Member Miles Frost asked, and the board approved, correction of minutes of the February meeting which he said might give the impression that the completion date might be extended beyond the original schedule due to the bad weather. The board approved amendment of the minutes to indicate clearly that the original completion date of Dec. 19, 1977 is expected to be met.

— Roofing repairs at Aycock Junior High School are nearly completed. The architect's report states that "damage to the interior of the building and its furnishings caused by work of the contractor will be determined and settled before final payment is made."

A supplemental report on the roof prepared by R. E. Stewart of the city school staff notes the damages cited extend to about 107 ceiling tiles; to paint in the library, halls, gym and three classrooms; and the carpet in the library.

— Third Street School. Renovation at Third Street School, Cox reported, "is still running pretty much on schedule with all work due to be completed by the end of June, concluding with a final city inspection of the repaired and renovated premises."

In other actions, the board: — Approved four half day schedules for Rose High: March 24, 31 and April 7 and 14; and four half day schedules for Aycock: March 23, 30 and April 6 and 13. Dismissal at Rose on the four days will be at 1:30 p.m. and at Aycock at 1 p.m. This is to give staff time to work on accreditation programs for the schools.

— Approved the resignation of three teachers — Debra Lowery, Jean Brantley, and Thomas J. Bennett; one maternity leave; one leave of absence for medical reasons; and approved the election of six teachers, five of them on an interim basis.

— Approved field trips for eighth and ninth grade students. The eighth grade will visit the Outer Banks for an overnight trip on April 21-22; and the ninth grade students will take a trip to Charleston, S.C. April 21-23.

Approved a second-low bid by Larry's Carpetland for carpet for Third Street School

In an amount of $15,643. Approval of this bid followed an explanation by William Friend that the low bidder, Ellis Jones of Kinston at $15,264 did not properly meet the specification, as the specification bids called for a multi-level loop and the bid by Jones was for level-loop carpet, which is not acceptable.

Items discussed and to be taken up at future meetings include work on the 1977-78 budget, the new system of budgeting now mandatory for all school systems under the new North Carolina Budget, Fiscal and Control Act; the school calendar for 1977-78; a curriculum for the middle school; and a pupil attendance policy.

On the matter of a bond issue proposal, Cox briefly noted that he and school board chairman Henry Dunn had met with Pitt County Schools Supt. Arthur Alford and Pitt County School Board Chairman Mark Owens. At the informal meeting, the two county men agreed to meet with the full county board on this issue and then report back to Cox and Dunn on the possibility of further meetings or actions.

Find Body Of Kinston Man

WILSON, N. C. (AP) — The body of a Kinston man who reportedly carried large sums of money was found in his car on a lonely rural road in the southeastern part of Wilson County Monday, according to sheriff's department investigators.

Detectives Wayne Gay and J. G. Tant Jr. identified the man as Paul Wesley Sutton, 45, and said they were told he was carrying more than $10,000 when last seen.

The detectives said the parked car first was noticed Monday morning by a school bus driver en route to a nearby school. The driver, heading homeward after school, saw the car and a man slumped on the passenger side with the window open and rain beating in.

Sutton had been beaten about the head and had only $1 in his wallet when found, according to the detectives. They said a blackjack was found in the car but there was no sign of a struggle.

They said Sutton apparently returned a car he had borrowed from a Wilson man and picked up his own car. He had left his girl friend in Kinston, they said.

The detectives said they were told by Kinston police that Sutton had just recently returned to Kinston after spending about six months in Philadelphia.

Agents of the FBI and SBI and drug enforcement agents have been called in to assist in the investigation, the detectives said.

Buc Golfers Are Twelfth

DURHAM — N.C. State came back yesterday to catch and pass North Carolina to take the Iron Duke Collegiate Invitational Golf Tournament at the Hillandale Golf Club in Durham.

Marshall University, a member of the Southern Conference, took third with a 1095 score, nine behind State and seven back of Carolina. Wake Forest was fourth at 1097, while Maryland fifth at 1115. East Carolina finished 12th in the 15-team tournament with 1151 strokes.

Wake Forest's Gary Hallburg and the Wolfpack's Bill Hamilton tied for medalist honors with five-under 211.

Freshman David Brown led the Pirates with a score of 219, three strokes over par. That score was good enough for 10th place among the 90 golfers.

Another freshman, Donnie Owens, was next for the Pirates with a 227 score. Keith Hiller followed with 230, Mike Buckmaster with 237, Frank Acker with 238 and Phil Bell with 243.

East Carolina Coach Mac McLendon said he was pleased with the freshman play, but not with the play of the veterans. "The upper classmen are very inconsistent thus far. We need consistency from them to finish well in the conference."

The Pirates travel to Greenville, S.C., for the Furman invitational starting Thursday.

Namath Deal Said Close

NEW YORK (AP) — Broadway Joe is on his way to Hollywood. Well, almost.

The New York Jets' controversial 33-year-old quarterback and the Los Angeles Rams of the National Football League have agreed tentatively on a renegotiated contract, the New York News reported today.

However, there remain two minor obstacles to be ironed out by the teams. First, a Namath deal must be approved by Rams' owner Carroll Rosenbaum, Second, and more important for the Jets, there is the compensation issue for Namath's services.

The Jets would prefer a player to a draft choice for Namath. But General Manager Al Ward has said the Jets "will not be difficult" in any deal for the flamboyant signal-caller.

Don Klosterman, general manager of the Rams, confirmed Monday that discussions were "productive."

"We got the information we wanted and there is interest on both sides," he said.

The breakthrough in the long-rumored deal came when Namath and his agent Jimmy Walsh agreed to sign a contract calling for about $200,000 per season, some $250,000 less than Namath made with the Jets last season. It is believed Namath would be able to make up the difference through movie and television work.

Namath is in the option year of a two-year contract. If the Jets and Rams cannot conclude this deal, then the Jets would have the choice of picking up Namath's option year.

Tryouts Scheduled

Registration of candidates for the Greenville Little League tryouts will be conducted Thursday and Friday of this week from 4 to 6 p.m. at the Greenville Recreation Department.

To be eligible for the league, candidates must reside within the city school district and have been born between August 1, 1966 and July 31, 1965.

Candidates should bring legal proof of age and be accompanied by at least one parent.

Farrow, Moye Gain

Scoring Championships

Farmville Central's duo of Julia Moye and Kenno Farrow finished atop the Pitt-Martin-Greene scoring races for girls and boys, respectively, this season.

Farrow held off North Pitt's Donnie Perkins, to finish sevenths of a point ahead of the star of the State 3-A runner-up.

Farrow finished with year with a 20.3 average, while Perkins, who had fought a close battle with him all year, completed the year with a 19.6 average.

Rose High's Greg Guthrie finished third with a 16.3 average, followed by teammate Anthony Bryant and Greene Central's Ernest Thompson, tied for fourth at 15.8.

Farmville Central also finished in first place among the boys' offense leaders with 64.8 points a game, just nipping North Pitt, which was second at 64.7.

Williamston led the defense, allowing 51.0 points a contest, while Jamesville was second at 51.6. North Pitt was third at 52.5.

The Panthers, by far, held the best winning margin among the boys' team, outscoring their opponents by 12.2 points per contest. Williamston was a distant second at 4.5 points a game.

The Panthers also had the best record with a 26-3 finish. Williamston was next at 14-8, followed by Ayden-Grifton, 15-10; Farmville Central, 12-9, and Conley, 12-11, rounding out the winning teams.

Miss Moye finished the year with a 17.5 scoring average to lead the Farmville scoring. Paula Bennett of the state-tournament entrant Williamston Tigerettes, was second at 15.7, tying with Bear Grass' Peggy Taylor, who missed the latter part of the year with an injury.

Vertha Dixon of Ayden-Grifton was fourth at 13.3, while Karen Haseley, also of A-G was fifth at 12.7. A total of 11 girls finished in double figures.

Williamston led in all of the team categories for the girls. They had the top offense, 47.8 points a game, the best defense, 35.8 points, the largest winning margin, 12.0, and the best record, 21-4.

Conley was second in offense at 45.2, with North Pitt second in defense at 37.4. Jamesville had the second best winning margin at 2.7, while Farmville Central had the second best record, 19-4.

Roanoke, 17-6, Jamesville, 13-10, and North Pitt, 10-9, were the other teams with winning records.

CHAPEL HILL — East Carolina combined two things that had been missing in recent games, timely hitting and strong defense, to defeat the University of North Carolina, 5-3, in a game played in a steady drizzle yesterday.

Mickey Britt went the distance for the Pirates, gaining his second complete game in as many starts. He was touched for three runs in the fourth inning, but pitched his way out of several other jams to raise his record to 2-0.

ECU began the scoring with a run in the top of the second inning. Robert Brinkley led off with a bunt single. Rick Koryda followed with a hit to right field, moving Brinkley to third with nobody out. Charlie Stevens bounced into a double play, with Brinkley coming home on the play.

In the bottom of the second, the Tar Heels were mounting a rally, but it was snuffed out quickly. Jim Rouse opened the frame with a single and stole second. Bernie Menapace drew a walk to put runners on first and second with no outs. Kevin Haeblerle was sent to the plate with instructions to move the runners up a base on a sacrifice, but on the first pitch, with the infield charging, he let the pitch go by.

Then, East Carolina pulled a dandy play of its own. Sonny Wooten and Bobby Supel charged from the corners and Rick Koryda covered third base. Pete Paradossi snuck in behind Rouse at second base, and Britt whirled to pick him off with a perfect throw to Paradossi.

The Pirates struck then for three runs in the top of the fourth. With one out, Koryda singled and got all the way to third when the center fielder let the ball get past him to roll to the fence. Paradossi, Billy Best and Eddie Gates all drew two out walks, with the last base on balls bringing in Koryda. Wooten followed with a double down the right field line, bringing in Paradossi and Best, but Gates was thrown out trying to score from first on a close play at the plate.

North Carolina battled back for three runs of its own in the bottom of the fourth. Rouse, Menapace, and Haeblerle had consecutive hits off Britt, with Haeblerle's double scoring the first Tar Heel run. Menapace scored on Dwight Lowry's sacrifice fly to cut the margin to 4-2, and P.J. Gay's hit scored Haeblerle to cut the lead to just one. Gay was caught stealing to retire the side.

East Carolina pushed across the final run of the game in the sixth inning. Stevens led off with a walk and was sacrificed to second by Paradossi. Best dropped a perfect bunt down the third base line, putting runners on first and third. On the first pitch to Gates, Best took off for second. When the throw from Lowry went towards second, Stevens took off for the plate and scored on the back end of the double steal. An opportunity to break the game wide open was missed when the Pirates ended the inning with the bases loaded. East Carolina stranded 14 runners for the game.

Britt had to fight off a late charge by the Tar Heels to hold on for the win. In the ninth, Menapace drew a walk, but was forced at second as Haeblerle reached on a fielder's choice. Gay and Jim Atkinson both received two out walks to load the bases, but Randy Warrick popped up to end the game.

The Pirate victory snapped a three-game losing streak, and Coach Monte Little was pleased with what he saw.

"This is the type of club I knew we had," he said. "They battled and hustled and showed lots of enthusiasm. Britt did a very good job for us, and I thought our defense was real good. This is one of the few errorless games we've had this year."

"Everybody was giving 100 per cent out there, and if we can get this kind of effort the rest of the year, we'll have an outstanding record."

The win raised the Pirate record to 6-4, while the Tar Heels fell to 7-8.

East Carolina is scheduled to play the University of Maryland today at 3 p.m. at Harrington Field. A second meeting with the Terps is slated for Wednesday.

Rams May Challenge For Title

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

With the return of his entire pitching staff from last year, Greene Central baseball coach Jim Fulghum is expecting a good ballclub this season that could challenge for the conference crown.

The Rams return all but three players from last year's team which went 7-7 in the conference — two outfielders and the first baseman. "We're expecting to have a very good ballclub," according to Fulghum. "We'll be strong in pitching and defensive experience."

Greene Central is currently 3-1 on the year, despite the fact that the pitching staff has suffered health-wise. One of the hurlers, Donald Wooten, is currently out with a hurt arm.

Two others, Curtis Shirley and Donald Holloman, have pitched with the Rams for two years. They are joined by Joe Harper, a sophomore expected to be a good pitcher, and reliever Jeb Jones.

At catcher, the Rams will start Jay Kelly, a regular from last year.

Scott Davenport will be the replacement at first base. He was on the team last year, Fulghum said, and has looked good so far this year. Dal Blizard and Callyn Beamon are fighting it out for the starting spot at second. Blizzard has missed a couple of games with a pulled muscle.

Two other infielders, shortstop Mike Chase and third baseman Jerry Speight, were both starters last year. In addition, Robert Hooker will be the team's utility infielder.

The outfield will be led by Jeffrey Warren, a third-year man in center field. Russell Brann, a starter at times last year, will be playing in left and Shirley or Holloman, depending on which one is pitching, will play in right field.

Fulghum said he feels like the Eastern Carolina Conference race is "up for grabs."

"C. B. Aycock is going to be strong; so is Farnville Central," according to Fulghum. In addition, Ayden-Grifton should improve during the season and could challenge for the title.

"We will be much better than we were last year. If our pitching gets healthy, we should be a good ballclub."

How the Rams finish in the conference is "going to depend on how bad we want to win." It will take some good games for them to win the conference and "critical games depend on how mentally tough you are," Fulghum said.

Smith Would Like To See Rose Again

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — "I always said I hoped we would meet," Dean Smith said to Lee Rose Monday night. "Because that would mean we'll be in the national finals."

It wasn't the NCAA finals, but the scene could recur there in a few days. Smith, basketball coach at North Carolina, and Rose, his counterpart at North Carolina-Charlotte, were together for a rare session Monday night at the Charlotte Athletic Club's annual Athlete of the Year banquet.

North Carolina's star guard Phil Ford won the athlete of the year award, but Ford was back in Chapel Hill studying for an exam. Kathy MacMillan of Raeford, N.C., beat out four other finalists for the high school athlete of the year award.

Smith and Rose represent two of the four teams that will head to Atlanta later this week to fight for the NCAA championship.

The two schools have never met on court and Smith, the featured speaker at the banquet, declined to predict the outcome of such a contest.

"I'm sure Lee and I agree on one thing — we'd better be worried about Nevada-Las Vegas and Marquette first," North Carolina plays Nevada-Las Vegas and UNCC takes on Marquette in semifinals Saturday.

But Smith was taking nothing away from basketball fans who revealed in the success of two North Carolina teams.

"You could say North Carolina is the basketball capital of the world for the moment," he said.

Rose, who was a guest at the banquet, said his team had been successful because, "The chemistry is right. They're a good bunch of kids. I don't play. I enjoy watching them play."

Rose said his 49ers were beginning to gear up psychologically for Marquette.

"The big thing they'll have is the incentive factor with (coach Al) McGuire retiring."

Although Ford won the athlete of the year award, one of the other nominees for that honor drew a standing ovation.

Cedric "Cornbread" Maxwell, UNCC star center, was pursued by autograph hunters throughout the evening and became the honored guest in his own right. He agreed with Rose's assessment of the Marquette game.

"They'll have a lot of emotion running in the game because Mr. McGuire has announced he's retiring," Maxwell said in an interview. "But we should, too. It's our first trip to the NCAA finals."

In addition to Ford and Maxwell, finalists for the award were stock car drivers David Pearson and Cale Yarborough, neither of whom attended; and North Carolina football star Mike Voight.

Joining Miss MacMillan in competition for the high school award were Steve Lee, linebacker from Dillon, S.C.; Jonathan Moore, basketball star at West Charleston, S.C.; last year; tennis star Tim Wilkison from Shelby and North Mecklenburg football standout Newton Williams.

Ford Receives Award; Arm OK

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Phil Ford was named athlete of the year by the Charlotte Athletic Club Monday night, but the All-America guard missed the awards banquet, staying in Chapel Hill to study for a test.

Ford also received treatment from team doctors Monday and said his injured elbow felt "a lot better." Coach Dean Smith attended the Charlotte awards dinner, while giving his team a break from practice until Wednesday.

Doctors said Monday that Ford hyperextended his elbow and bruised surrounding tissue, but did not break any bones.

Ford hurt the arm in the final minutes of the fifth-ranked Tar Heels' win over Notre Dame in the semifinals of the Eastern Regionals. The elbow on his shooting arm bothered Ford against Kentucky, as he scored only two points and saw limited action in the Eastern Regional win.

Dr. Timothy Taft, an orthopedic surgeon who examined Ford, said he believed the injury from Rocky Mount, N.C., would be able to play Saturday against Nevada-Las Vegas in Atlanta, in the semifinals of the NCAA basketball tournament.

UNC will play in the second game at 4:15 p.m. The Midwest Champion, North Carolina-Charlotte, will play the Midwest representative Marquette in the first game at 2:15 p.m.

North Carolina senior center Tom LaGarde, out since February with an injured left knee, was scheduled to undergo surgery to repair loose cartilage Tuesday, but may still be able to travel with the team to Atlanta.

Moneybag Image Said To Be A False One

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — George Steinbrenner III resents being pictured as a Mr. Moneybags on an ego trip — out to buy a World Series baseball championship for his New York Yankees.

"It's a false image," the jet-propelled owner of the American League titleholders said over the weekend during one of his quick stopovers here to attend to his ship-building business.

"No one can be sure of buying a pennant. I am willing to compare our expenditures the last four years with those of any club. I don't think many people are aware of what we are now doing in the college and minor league areas."

Steinbrenner, head of the syndicate which bought the Yankees from CBS in September, 1974, insists that he has adopted a long-range rather than a short-range view in blueprinting the club's future.

"We have more than doubled our budget for player procurement," he explained. "We now have a 20-man scouting staff. We have added 14 new scouts, paying top dollar."

"That isn't all. We now have two coaches with every one of our minor league teams. The purpose is to give the managers more time to manage and to see that all of our new players are exposed to top-flight instruction."

"Normally, the minor league manager drives the bus, picks up bats and sweeps the locker room floor. We don't want that. We want him to manage. We have got some of the top pitching coaches, guys such as Hoyt Wilhelm and Sammy Ellis."

"Our outlay is about $50,000 more per year for each of our minor league teams."

The Yankees who won the American League pennant last year were not a collection of high-priced and high-salaried super stars, an exception being pitcher Catfish Hunter signed New Year's Eve, 1974, for a reported $3.75 million.

They were instead pieces of an intricate jigsaw put together by Steinbrenner and his top command, Gabe Paul. They jelled magically into a winning unit.

"We took a club that the year before had finished in sixth place, 16 games out of the top in its division," the Yankee owner said. "It was a team that drew only 700,000 fans. We picked up Hunter because we felt he would give the team a new competitive drive."

"In four years, instead of 700,000 fans we were drawing 2 million. So what do we do? We could take the money and run or we could put the money back in the ball club. Personally, I felt we should put the money back into the club — an obligation to the fans."

In the free agency draft at the end of last season, the Yankees picked up pitcher Don Gullett for $2 million and outfielder Reggie Jackson for $2.9 million.

Critics said the Yankees were greedy and just flaunting their wealth.

"I am dead set against free agency," Steinbrenner said. "It can ruin baseball."

"But here it was. We had two choices. We could be like ostriches and stick our heads in the ground. Or we could face the situation realistically. If we didn't buy, somebody else would. So we bought, as did others."

Long Line For UNCC Tickets

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Hundreds of University of North Carolina at Charlotte students waited all Sunday and Monday nights for a chance to buy a ticket today to the NCAA national basketball championship finals this weekend.

It was the first overnight waiting line to buy tickets since the school opened 12 years ago.

The 49ers won a spot in the Atlanta finals with a stunning upset Saturday of first ranked Michigan. They arrived home Sunday to a rousing welcome from an estimated 5,000 fans at Douglas Municipal Airport.

The line began forming outside the gymnasium Sunday night, 36 hours before the school's allotment of 500 tickets would be ready for sale.

"There was some talk about the tickets not going on sale until Wednesday or Thursday and we all agreed we'd just wait here," said George Parker, who showed up about 9 p.m. Sunday and got third place in line.

The line grew steadily and was up to 200 by Monday afternoon, a surprising development since the school is closed for spring break and many students had come in from out of town just to stand in line.

"I came back all the way from Mt. Airy, 180 miles just to get a ticket," said freshman Wayne Boyles.

A drizzling rain fell during much of Monday, and students sought what shelter they could under blankets and a few tents.

"We talked about what would happen if we got sick out here," Parker said. "We agreed we couldn't be too sick to go to Atlanta."

HEART EXPERT DIES
CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Dr. Herrman Blumgart, an expert in heart ailments and professor emeritus at Harvard Medical School and editor-in-chief of the American Heart Association's publication "Circulation", died Monday at the school's Stillman Infirmary. He was 81.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, MARCH 23, 1977

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today brings some difficulties with details that require more than usual care on your part. Practical interests move smoothly and you are able to get much accomplished.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Make plans that will bring you more abundance in the future. Don't forget to pay an important bill, either. Others can be of real assistance to you where it counts the most.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Plan how to improve your personal affairs. Get some business matter well handled. Enjoy good friends in the evening.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You find it difficult to decide what to do about a problem that has been bothering you. Later you get a clear picture and are able to solve it.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Some friends could disappoint you, but others could easily be very helpful and enjoyable. Avoid a troublemaker.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Don't neglect important civic duties now; later you reap the benefits. Show more affection for family and be happy.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Contact new acquaintances who have the information you need at this time, but be diplomatic in extracting it from them. Come to right decisions where expansion is concerned.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Use up-to-date methods to handle responsibilities you have been putting off for too long. Show more consideration for a loved one.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Keep your part of any agreements you have made and plan how you can expand. Take time to see loved ones you have been neglecting.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Plan to work more on projects that have not proved too successful and they work out to your advantage. Try to cooperate more with co-workers and you get better results with them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Make plans for future festive occasions with those whose company you enjoy. Put your finest skills to work and accomplish much.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Get the okay of kin for new changes you want to make at home that will make it more functional. Avoid strangers today as you are in an argumentative mood.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't delay in going after aims that mean the most to you and you get right results. Take time to enjoy the company of good friends.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those charming persons who has only to smile in order to gain favors from others. But he is apt to be shy and hesitate where it counts the most. Teach early to have more wisdom and to be more independent. Otherwise your child could be a loser instead of a winner in life. Any profession connected with big business is fine.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Last year, tournament bridge players donated more than $300,000 to deserving causes through the American Contract Bridge League Charity Foundation, with the Arthritis Foundation being the principal beneficiary. You can join in this worthy effort to help your fellow man. The next ACBL Continental Charity Game will be held on Thursday, March 24. Check with your local bridge club for the game nearest you. When this hand was played in a match reported by Torrance Reese, the defenders at one table were the recipients of a donation by declarer. However, they did not savor it, for the declarer proved that charity begins at home.

The contract at both tables was four hearts, and in each case West led the queen of diamonds. At the first table, declarer covered with the king. East won the ace and shifted to a spade. The defenders collected two spade tricks and, though declarer got a club discard on the jack of diamonds, he still had to concede a club trick for down one.

At the other table declarer had no difficulty in making his contract, even though he received the same opening lead and the defense did not err. Declarer simply made his contribution for the day—he allowed West to win the queen of diamonds! By playing a low diamond from dummy at trick one, declarer virtually guaranteed the contract.

East allowed the diamond queen to win, and declarer later took a ruffing finesse in diamonds to set up a diamond in dummy for a spade discard. But it would not have helped East to overtake the queen of diamonds with the ace and shift to spades. True the defenders would have scored two spade tricks and a diamond, but they would not have gotten a club trick. Dummy's king-jack of diamonds would have taken care of two of declarer's low clubs.

Old Reliable In New TV Role

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC, in an effort to save its low-rated Wednesday night schedule this season, has thrown in everything but the sink. This Wednesday, the sink arrives.

In it is "Kingston: Confidential," starring TV's Old Reliable, Raymond Burr, who for eight seasons lawyered as Perry Mason, then logged another eight in a police wheelchair as NBC's "Ironside."

Having left the wheelchair but not San Francisco, Burr now plays R.B. Kingston, editor-in-chief and investigative reporter for powerful Frazier News Group of newspapers and TV stations.

As in Ironside, he has two young aides-de-inquiry, handsome Tony Marino (Art Hindle) and pretty Beth Kelly (Pamela Hensley). They do the footwork, he does the brainwork and gets, I guess, the by-line.

Wednesday's premiere has a vaguely familiar plot. A fresh-out-of-prison union boss has lunch with a sinister mob boss, then collapses and disappears. Ah, those TV dinners. The mob will do anything for power.

The union boss was driven to lunch by a worried lady friend, played by Mariette Hartley, who last Friday was seen in peril, floating down the CBS river in a TV version of "The African Queen."

In "Kingston," she faces equal peril because the mob knows she (a) saw the union boss dining with the mob boss, and (b) the union boss gave her hot information to give the authorities should he be made dead.

Kingston enters the case when a crooked union lawyer, disguised as an anonymous caller, tells him about the Big Lunch, says if a reporter and photographer are sent there immediately "you got tonight's headline."

The missing-boss headline set in type, Kingston goes to work and tracks down the lady with the hot poop at her place of work, a school for emotionally disturbed children.

The plot then lumpy turns in the manner of an overloaded laundromat machine on Saturday morning. There also is rampant suspicion of Kingston by Miss Hartley, who tells him: "You're still the same dirt-digger who sent him (the union boss) to prison."

In time, he convinces her he's trying to save the man's life and gets her to testify before a federal grand jury, she now under Justice Department protection. Enter the mob's hit man.

He climbs atop a tall building and fires six shots at her. All miss. He looks disgusted, as if to say, "Oh, darn."

Virus Hits In Mars Hill

MARS HILL, N.C. (AP) — One man has died and more than 200 Mars Hill College students and other residents have been stricken by an as yet unidentified disease with flu-like symptoms that has plagued this town for a week.

Christopher Ronald Thomas, 28, of Hopewell, Va., died about midnight Sunday after he appeared to have been recovering from the sickness.

An autopsy at Memorial Mission Hospital in Asheville Monday morning revealed Thomas had died of heart and lung failure, but doctors didn't know what had caused the failure. "We will not know that for several days, maybe several weeks, until we get reports from the federal Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, the N.C. Health Department in Raleigh and the state Medical Examiner's office in Chapel Hill," said Dr. W. Otis Duck, one of the college physicians.

College officials said the outbreak began last Tuesday afternoon when 33 people went to the college infirmary complaining of nausea, headache, vomiting in some cases and diarrhea in most.

Another 92 showed up the next day and the disease reached a peak of 103 reported cases on Thursday. About two dozen more trickled in through the weekend and Monday, some of them returning after earlier attacks.

Thomas was the only one who required hospital care, Duck said, adding the disease appeared to be a viral infection similar to an outbreak at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro in early winter.

Ford 'Keeping The Door Open'

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Former President Ford is "keeping the door open" to running for President in 1980, says Ron Nessen, who served as Ford's press secretary.

"I'm sure he'll have more concrete ideas on the subject in a year or two," Nessen told newsmen before a speaking engagement Monday.

"After working with Ford for some time, I have learned how he goes about making decisions," Nessen said. "He waits until as late as possible before committing himself in order to weigh all factors possible."

"However, I've been in contact with him frequently since he left office, and he has informed me he definitely is keeping the door open for running for president in 1980."

TV News People Said Rating Game 'Victims'

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Television news people are pawns in the ratings game, hired and fired in some instances on the basis of skin tests given to viewers to measure their reaction, says TV Guide magazine.

Psychological research firms have administered the tests, similar to lie-detector tests, for TV stations in Los Angeles, Seattle, Minneapolis, Denver and St. Louis, the magazine said today.

As a result of tests by San Francisco's ERA Research last spring, Los Angeles station KNXT, a CBS affiliate, fired anchorman Pat Emory and co-anchorman Sandy Hill, TV Guide said.

"The next few weeks about two dozen on-air reporters and supporting players suddenly found themselves out of work," the article said.

"I'm sure if they showed Adolf Hitler up there on that screen the needle would jump right out of the glass," said George Putnam, a veteran Los Angeles anchorman. "But that's no reason to hire Adolf to anchor the 5 o'clock news."

For the tests, several hundred viewers are paid to watch videotapes of newscasters during a special screening session. The viewers' hands are smeared with surgical jelly and attached to electrical sensors.

"When people are calm, their palms stay dry. But when they get emotionally turned on — frightened, angry, guilty or just sexually aroused — their sweat glands open up..." the article said.

Test viewers then fill out questionnaires to describe the newscaster. Friendly, cold, warm or distant? Shifty or believable? Attractive, plain, familiar, dull?

A CBS spokeswoman in New York said the network doesn't use such testing, but she described local affiliates as "fairly autonomous."

KNXT general manager Christopher Desmond was unavailable for immediate comment on the article.

Ms. Hill, now a field reporter for KABC-TV in Los Angeles, said, "It's ludicrous that they resort to skin tests, personality inventories and stuff like that as a judgment for who should be in television news. But as long as news is ruled by rating points, it is inevitable."

Emory, now an anchor for KSD-TV, the St. Louis NBC affiliate, said ERA Research "finished their final report and delivered it to KNXT at noon on June 8. By noon of June 9, I was fired."

"They said I wasn't right for the market because I hadn't set that ERA needle off. That tells you they're looking for box office, not news," he said.

Castro's Sister Flays Policies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Juanita Castro, sister of the Cuban president, has branded President Carter's interest in re-establishing diplomatic relations with the country "immoral and foul play."

"If the American people actually knew what was going on inside the country under force of arms, I'm sure they would support the liberation of Cuba," Juanita Castro said in an interview with the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner Monday.

Miss Castro, 44, fled Cuba in 1964 and has since carried on a lecture and broadcast campaign against the policies of her brother and other Communist leaders in the Western Hemisphere.

A HANDSOME COUPLE—Awaiting the judges' verdict at the Canadian National Sportsman's show in Toronto are a pair of English bulldogs, Buford and Beautiful Lady, owned by Jim and Sandra Dennis of Bowmansville, N.Y. The dog show continues all this week at the Canadian National Exhibition grounds. (CP Wirephoto)

HERE'S A PICTURE OF MY TWIN BROTHER AND ME WHEN WE WERE BABIES...

CAN YOU TELL WHICH IS WHICH?

OH, SURE! YOU'RE THE ONE ON THE LEFT!

RIGHT! HOW DID YOU GUESS?

Asks Millions For Program

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt has asked federal energy chief James R. Schlesinger for more than $2 million to help North Carolina develop an energy conservation program.

The News and Observer of Raleigh reported Hunt spent an hour with Schlesinger describing his plans for North Carolina to assume a leadership role in conservation.

Among his proposals is an energy "extension" program, something like the present agricultural extension service, which would provide consultant services to people who wanted to learn how to save energy.

NOTICE OF SERVICE OF PROCESS BY PUBLICATION

FILE NO. —

IN THE GENERAL COURT OF JUSTICE, SUPERIOR COURT DIVISION

County of North Carolina

RANDY HIGNITE, KEITH HOUSTON AND JIM HEIDENREICH, d/b/a BAND OF OZ

VS.

B.N.B., INC. AND NICK PALERMO TO: NICK PALERMO, THE ABOVE-NAMED DEFENDANT.

Take notice that a pleading seeking relief against you has been filed in the above-entitled action. The nature of the relief being sought is as follows: An action seeking relief from Randy Hignite, Keith Houston and Jim Heidenreich, d/b/a the Band of Oz, a musical band, against you as general manager of the Casino for B.N.B., Inc., for breach of contract, lost business opportunities and punitive damages.

You are required to make defense to such pleading not later than the 25th day of April, 1977, said date being forty (40) days from the first publication of this Notice, or from the date Complaint is required to be filed, whichever is later; and upon your failure to do so, the party seeking service against you will apply to the Court for the relief sought.

This 11th day of March, 1977, JAMES HITE, CAVENDISH & JAMES HITE, CAVENDISH & E. CORDELLA, ATTORNEYS FOR PLAINTIFFS, P.O. Drawer 1, Greenville, N.C. 27834. Telephone: (919) 758-5797. March 15, 22, 29, 1977.

Some Exemptions In Proposed New Trapping Law

RALEIGH (AP) — The Senate has approved a bill designed to make trapping more humane, but opponents won exemption from the proposed law for 25 counties.

In other actions, the Senate Monday tentatively approved a House amendment to allow food for handicapped and elderly citizens to be prepared in school cafeterias.

The Senate also accepted a House amendment and enacted into law a measure that would permit motorcyclists to use headlamps with pulsating headlamp beams. The altered headlights are supposed to be safer since they attract attention of motorists to motorcycle riders.

Sen. James Speed, D-Franklin, told the Senate the trapping measure "provides means of doing it in a more humane manner." He said that the provisions of the bill would protect dogs and cats accidentally caught in traps from serious injury.

The bill would prohibit "steel-jaw" or "leghold" traps unless they had been modified (1) to have a jaw spread of not more than seven and one-half inches,

(2) to be horizontally offset with closed jaw spread of at least three-sixteenths of an inch for a trap with a jaw spread of more than five and one-half inches, (3) to be smooth edged without teeth or spikes, and (4) if set on dry land with solid anchor, not to have attached trap chain exceeding eight inches from trap without having a shock absorbing device.

The bill would ban the use of traps that suspend the animals or birds they catch and would ban use of hooks to trap animals or birds.

During Senate debate Monday night, the bill was amended to exempt Madison, McDowell, Yancey, Edgecombe, Halifax, Martin and

Pitt counties. Exempted previously were Craven, Carteret, Onslow and Pamlico, Beaufort, Bertie, Craven, Chowan, Currituck, Dare, Gates, Hertford, Hyde, Northampton, Pasquotank, Perquimans, Tyrrell and Washington.

REFINANCING

The House tentatively approved a bill that would permit local governments or authorities set up by local governments to refinance bond issues they sold when interest rates were substantially higher than they are now.

Rep. Joe Johnson, D-Wake, sponsor of the bill, said that the measure would enable the Wake County Medical Center to refinance its bonds at a saving of about $2 million. He said the act would mean the saving of millions of dollars statewide.

DEATH PENALTY

New legislation included another bill dealing with the death penalty. Rep. James Morgan, D-Guilford, sponsored the bill which would make the usual punishment for first degree murder or first degree rape life imprisonment without possibility of release for 25 years.

The bill would call for a death sentence or life imprisonment in cases where the defendant had (1) previously been convicted of a felony and sentenced to life imprisonment, or (2) at the time of the offense also committed first degree murder or first degree rape, or (3) committed the murder for pay or the promise of pay or hired another person to do it. In these cases when any one of five "aggravating circumstances" existed, a second hearing would be held before the jury that convicted the defendant to determine whether the punishment would be death or life imprisonment.

Hostages Freed, Gives Up After Seizing Bank

TORONTO (AP) — A Canadian with a sawed-off shotgun who seized a downtown bank and demanded to be flown to Uganda surrendered peacefully late Monday night and released the last four of 16 hostages.

The man, Robert Hugh McLagan, 37, told reporters by telephone he was "a fan" of President Idi Amin and wanted to join his army. But a radio reporter who got into the bank said the man told him he wanted to kill Amin.

McLagan was charged early today with bank robbery, and police explained that he demanded money after entering the bank. A police spokesman said the man would appear in court today, and other charges would be filed then.

McLagan told reporters he was from Vancouver. The police spokesman said he was a native of Montreal and his parents live in the Toronto area.

McLagan fired three warning shots during the 12-hour siege that ended early Monday morning, but no one was injured. He gave up after hours of talking on the telephone with police negotiators and with his brother and sister.

"I want to see my pal Idi Amin," said McLagan in a telephone interview. "I'm a fan of his. I've never met the man, but I'm a fan of his....

"I want a C-130 Hercules aircraft. I don't want to own it. I just want to borrow it and take a little drive down to Africa.... I was a mercenary in the Congo in '65, and I just want to get back down in that area. I just want to get back to soldiering. I want to soldier for Amin. I've always admired him."

If Amin would not have him, McLagan said, he wanted to go to Zaire, the new name for the former Belgian Congo, where the central government is now fighting a rebel force in the southern province of Shaba, formerly Katanga. White mercenaries led Katangan secessionist troops in the early 1960s.

But Charles Doering of Toronto station CFRB, who entered the bank and helped negotiate with the gunman, said McLagan told him he wanted to kill Amin and wanted two fragmentation grenades to do the job with.

Doering said McLagan's claim to having been a mercenary was a fabrication.

McLagan told reporters he had recently been a sailor, jumped ship in Panama, and was deported three months ago to Canada, wound up in Toronto and couldn't find a job.

Police Chief Harold Adamson said McLagan's surrender was unconditional and his demands were not met.

"He talked on the telephone at great length and we knew the time was coming very soon," Adamson said. "He was talking more quietly all the time."

SURROUNDED — A man identified as Bob McLagan, 38, of Vancouver, is surrounded by police and newsmen Monday night as he is taken into custody at a downtown Toronto Bank where he had held hostages for almost 12 hours. No hostages were reported injured in the incident. (AP Wirephoto)

Conservationist Protest Fading

ST. ANTHONY, Canada (AP) — Lack of money, bad weather and hazardous ice conditions have virtually ended the annual protest by conservationists against the week-old seal hunt on northern Newfoundland's ice pack.

The 11 Canadian and Norwegian hunting ships prepared today to turn to a new prey, hooded seals, which inhabit the outer edge of the ice area known as the Front. The pure white fur of hooded pups is used to trim boots and hats.

The 28 members of British Columbia's Greenpeace Foundation who traveled to this Newfoundland community to protest the seal slaughter left Monday for Montreal and Ottawa, where their representatives hoped to meet today with Canadian Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc to press their demands that the hunt be outlawed.

Brian Davies, executive director of the New Brunswick-based International Fund for Animal Welfare and leader of a smaller protest group, was grounded Monday when his helicopter would not start. It was not clear how much longer his group's campaign would continue.

The conservationists say the yearly slaughter of tens of thousands of seals threatens the survival of the herds.

Your biggest investment: How to improve on it.

Adding a new room to your home costs several thousand dollars, but it could be well worth it, since it can increase the value of your home. Helping you with home improvements is just part of 'Cash-Flow' Banking, and it all begins with a booklet fitting your situation, which is yours for the asking. Stop in at any NCNB office, or call 800-822-8855 and we'll send you a copy.

If you're like most people, your home is your biggest investment. All told, you've got thousands upon thousands of dollars involved. And, since you've got so much in it, it makes sense to improve on your investment. (It can also be much more economical than moving.) Maybe your house needs repairs. Maybe you need another room. Considering the winter we had, maybe you should improve your insulation and add storm windows to hold down utility bills. Here's an idea of some costs.

FIXING UP YOUR HOME: WHAT IT COSTS
Remodel Bathroom	$1,000-$3,000
Remodel Kitchen	$3,000-$6,000
Adding a 12 x 15 Room	$6,000-$8,000
12 x 18 Patio	$1,500-$2,000
Attached Garage, 12 x 24	$2,500-$5,000
Replace Plumbing Pipes	$700-$1,500
Replace Furnace	$250-$500
Attic Insulation	$20-$40 each
Storm Windows	$1,000-$1,500
New Roof	$1,800-$3,000
Enclose Side Porch, 8 x 15

The range of prices depends on the extent of the job you want done. Estimates are for finished job, including labor. These are average figures; the location, size and age of your house might mean higher or lower estimates.

Any of these improvements can pay off in your home's increased value, and, at NCNB, we'll be happy to help with the money you need. Because, as a homeowner, you've proven that you know how to handle credit. So come see us. Let's talk over what you want to do, and the best way of doing it. It could be a Personal Loan, or it may be an NCNB Homeowner Loan, with lower monthly payments, over a longer period. Either way, the people who make loans at NCNB will work with you to help improve the investment you have in your home. After all, that's the basic idea of 'Cash-Flow' Banking: information, services and people to help you in making the most of the money you make. And the money you borrow.
