

ANNOUNCING THE ACCREDITATION ... of the East Carolina University School of Medicine this morning were Dean William Laupus, Chancellor Leo Jenkins and Vice-chancellor for Health Affairs Ed Monroe.

ECU Med School Is Given Accreditation

Dr. Leo Jenkins looked up from his desk, a smile on his face, as a news reporter entered his office this morning and said, "Well, we're accredited."

That was the first official word that the Liaison Committee on Medical Education at its meeting in Washington, D. C. Tuesday and Wednesday had granted accreditation to the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

At a news conference a short time later, Jenkins, chancellor of East Carolina, said the LCME advised school officials by telephone yesterday afternoon that the medical school has been granted accreditation.

"We will admit 28 students in August to the school's first four-year class," and "the admission process is underway at this time," Jenkins noted.

The LCME — the national accreditation agency for schools of medicine — met Tuesday and Wednesday in Washington, D. C., and approval of provisional accreditation for the ECU medical school had been expected.

"We expect a full written report later this month from the committee on its official action," Jenkins told newsmen.

Medical School Dean Dr. William Laupus indicated that receiving accreditation is not a pinacle.

"This is just another major step," in the development of the medical program at East Carolina, Laupus said. "The first real pinacle will be the admission of the first four-year class" in August.

The next pinacle in the development and growth of the School of Medicine, Laupus said, would be when the first four-year graduates.

Jenkins, Laupus and Dr. Ed Monroe, vice-chancellor for Health Affairs at the university all expressed their pleasure at the LCME action and their gratitude for the support of the many people who had a part in the creation of the School of Medicine at ECU.

"This has been a project involving many, many people," Jenkins emphasized. "So many people have been involved in this."

"It's been a question of education over the years.

"We've had to continually spell out our dreams," and "the typical man on the street was with us," Jenkins said.

"It's a great step forward for all of North Carolina," the university chancellor said, adding that the medical program at ECU "may well become a model for the entire United States."

"As the school grows, we should have a very sparkling and very exciting program at ECU."

Laupus, who said the school has been processing applications on a conditional basis, indicated that the admissions process will continue. "We're looking for students who will make fine physicians."

Announcing that Dr. Robert G. Brame, a professor at Duke University in Durham has been named as chairman of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at ECU, Laupus said there are now 100 persons on the medical school staff, including 45 basic science and clinical teachers.

Laupus noted that the beginning class of 28 students will be enlarged to 32 for the Fall of 1978. Increases of the first year class after that will have to meet the approval of the LCME, the dean indicated. The maximum class size as the school develops in the future, he said, would depend on authorization from the University of North Carolina Board of Governors and LCME approval.

"We have a commitment to make this a high quality program," of family medicine," Laupus emphasized. "We've accepted this as part of our task for as long as the school has been perceived."

MUDDY CITY — Jason Watkins, 9, of Williamson, W. Va. and his dog, Rex, stare at a mud-coated Williamson street that was left in the wake of record flooding earlier this week. Rise In Wholesale Prices Is Worse Than Expected

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said today that wholesale prices increased 1.1 per cent in March, the second big monthly increase in a row and much worse than expected.

The increase was sure to fuel demands that the Carter administration take steps to counter a growing threat of a new inflationary surge in the economy.

The March increase followed a wholesale price rise of nine-tenths of a per cent in February and was the largest monthly rise since October of 1975.

Although prices of farm products led the price surge with a 2.5 per cent increase, the most alarming danger signal in the price report was an eight-tenths of a per cent increase in prices of industrial commodities, up from a six-tenths of a per cent increase in February.

Economists look to prices of industrial goods as giving the best picture of underlying inflationary trends. There were sharply higher prices during the month for metals and metal products, textiles, apparel and transportation equipment.

The Labor Department said prices also turned up for lumber and wood products, rubber and plastic products following declines in February.

Price trends at the wholesale level are eventually passed along to the consumer at least in part, since they represent higher costs to businesses that produce the goods consumers buy.

If continued for a 12-month period, the March increase in wholesale prices would result in an over-all increase of 13 per cent for the year, well into the feared double-digit range for inflation. Wholesale prices had increased 6.8 per cent for the 12-month period ending in March.

The Labor Department's wholesale price index stood in March at 191.9 per cent, meaning that goods priced at $100 at wholesale in 1967 cost $191.90 last month.

There is no question the March price report comes as a blow to the Carter administration, which had been hoping for a downward trend in wholesale prices to reflect the improvement in the weather following the severe winter.

Wall Street analysts had predicted an increase in March similar to the February price rise of nine-tenths of a per cent, but several government economists said Wednesday they did not think it would be that bad. In fact, it was worse.

In addition to the substantial increases in prices of industrial commodities and farm products, prices of processed foods and feeds also rose substantially at 1.9 per cent.

Only Allsbrook Spoke Against Succession Bill

RALEIGH (AP) — The Senate Constitutional Amendments Committee approved today a bill that would allow North Carolina voters to say whether the governor, including Gov. Jim Hunt, will be allowed to run for reelection.

By a voice vote the committee adopted a motion by Sen. Luther Britt, D-Robeson, to give the succession bill a favorable report.

The issue is expected to come up on the Senate floor next week.

Britt noted that the bill he sponsored to permit governors and lieutenant governors to run for a second successive term has the signatures of 37 of the 50 State members. This is far more than the 30 votes needed to pass a constitutional amendment.

If the bill passes the Senate and House, it would be submitted to the people for their approval in the next statewide election.

Only Sen. Julian Allsbrook, D-Halifax, spoke out against the bill during its brief committee consideration today.

"Something that has served us so well for 200 years should not be thrown aside," Allsbrook said.

Two former North Carolina governors were among witness who testified Wednesday for two bills dealing with gubernatorial succession and which appear assured of legislative passage.

Opines Referendum On PTI Question Up To N.C. Education Board

By STUART SAVAGE
and SUSAN QUINN
Reflector Staff Writers

Pitt Technical Institute's Board of Trustees has asked the Pitt County Board of Commissioners to hold a referendum on the question of whether or not PTI should become a community college. But the North Carolina Attorney General's office has indicated that the Commissioners don't have the authority to submit such a question to the voters of the county.

At their meeting last week, the PTI Board adopted a resolution asking the Commissioners to submit the question, "FOR Pitt Technical Institute becoming a Community College," or "AGAINST Pitt Technical Institute becoming a Community College."

Commissioners asked the Attorney General for an opinion on whether the board has the authority to submit the question to the voters, and Andrew A. Vanore Jr., Senior Deputy Attorney General, in a letter addressed to Pitt County Attorney W. W. Speight dated April 4, said, "I don't think so."

Vanore said, "I am enclosing a copy of my letter of January 28 addressed to Mr. Vernon E. White, Chairman of the Pitt Technical Institute Board of Trustees. In that letter, the first question addressed involves the authority of the Board of County Commissioners to submit the very same question suggested in your letter. As I concluded there, absent special legislation, the State Board (of Education) may require a vote of the people within the administrative area concerned, but only for the reasons set forth," in the North Carolina General Statutes, "which involves funding rather than simply the conversion..."

The deputy attorney general continued, "It seems to me that the question of conversion should first be put to the State Board of Education since absent local legislation to the contrary, only the State Board can convert a technical institute into a community college. It seems that what is suggested in your letter of March 31 is putting the cart before the horse and the first thing that should be done is to secure approval from the State Board of Education to convert Pitt Tech into a community college."

The PTI board in November 1976 adopted a resolution asking the commissioners endorse the change of status of PTI from a technical institute to a community college. But commissioners in January, because of a tied vote, failed to endorse the change.

White's letter to the attorney general, referred to by Vanore, apparently followed the commissioners' action.

Vanore's letter to White in January, referring to the

The Day Christ Died No Dissenting Vote In Poll Of The Sanhedrin

Jesus before Pontius Pilate. When the Roman Procurator said, "I can find no guilt in this man," the temple priests protested vehemently.

By JIM BISHOP
Fifth in a series of eight)

5 a.m., April 7, A.D. 30
In the courtyard a few timid priests came close to Jesus and asked Him an old familiar question: "From where do you derive Your power?"

Jesus did not answer. Some of the priests studied Him closely now, and in all sincerity they could not see what there was in Him that attracted so many of the people.

But they were afraid that at any moment something magical would happen. When nothing happened, they were expressions of disgust and said "Vah!" and walked away.

The guards were angry because Jesus had not answered any of the questions asked by the priests. It showed lack of respect. So they asked a few questions on their own, and when no answers were forthcoming they slapped Him and repeated the questions.

Then someone in the group got a cloth and blindfolded Jesus. The guards danced around Him, cuffing His face and smirking: "Act the prophet, please. Who is it that struck You?" They called Him cruel names. And obscene names. He tired before they did. His knees began to buckle, so they held Him up until He was strong enough to stand alone. Then they beat Him again.

Their game continued until word came out that the high priest expected to take the prisoner to the temple shortly after dawn. So the guards got some water and used the blindfold to wipe the face of Jesus. If He was going to the temple, they did not want Him to excite the pity of the morning worshippers.

6 a.m., April 7, A.D. 30
A small knot of people stood outside the house of Caiaphas in the early dawn. Among them was Judas Iscariot.

Although he had been paid for his work, Judas could not leave the scene. Frightened and fascinated, he waited until they brought Jesus out. Judas looked and was sickened by what he saw. He was shocked and a wave of contrition engulfed Him. He did not believe that Jesus was the Messiah but he knew of his own experience that this was the gentlest Man in the world.

Judas, following the maimed Man he had betrayed, trailed alone behind the group to the Xystus, which bridged the upper city to the temple area, and then on to the Hulda Gates. He mingled with the worshippers and got inside without attracting attention. He was now in a panic. If only he could have grabbed Jesus by the arm, and fled...! If he could go back to Caiaphas and talk...

There was a stone room in the southwestern corner of the temple, adjoining the place where the largest court flared out toward the Pool of Siloe. Here the Great Sanhedrin met. Jesus was led inside and held, standing between the facing rows.

The temple trial was brief. After reading the prisoner's offense and the judgment already rendered by the Sanhedrin, Caiaphas remarked with some unctious that, while it would be fitting to deliberate for another day as prescribed in the law, one could not deliberate on the Sabbath, which would be upon them in a matter of hours. But, if the law says that he who lives by the sword shall die by the sword, what finer sense of justice than

How can I get information about sign language? I need a book so I can learn to work with two hands instead of just one. G. H.

Hotline talked to Mike Ernest, who teaches sign language courses at Pitt Technical Institute. He says the book he would recommend as the best on the subject is "A Basic Course in Manual Communication," available at the Pitt Tech Bookstore.

It is very difficult, he said, to learn sign language from a book. You may wish to sign up for a course at Pitt Tech in the fall, the next time a new course will begin.

We also talked to Mrs. John A. Moore, who said she would be happy to tutor you in sign language if you like. You may call her at 756-2510.

Men Feel At Home On Staff

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—A sticker on a glass door in Ohio State University's Campbell Hall reads, "A woman's place is everywhere."

Four male professors in the university's School of Home Economics believe that's true of men also.

Dr. Robert Joseph, assistant professor of human nutrition and food management, suggests that the changing social climate "has not only allowed women in fields such as agriculture and engineering, but also men in traditional non-male roles such as dietetics and child care."

Dr. George Etheridge, assistant professor of family relations and human development, admits he had to come to terms with some reservations before joining the school.

"I used to tell people I was the 'Galloping Gourmet,' but then I realized I was just malnourishing people in human nutrition," he said.

Now, he explains to new acquaintances that he's a "specialist in little kids and home economics has a good program for preparing people to work with little kids."

"Home economics does have a certain stereotype...and all stereotypes disappear slowly. If you don't play into people's biases, it will end," he said.

Dr. Kent Hamdorf, assistant professor of family relations and human development, believes that the only people who are shocked at his profession "are those who are uninformed on what home economics can do."

The male to female faculty ratio of the school is approximately 1 to 4. But as to the possibility that the minority might receive preferential treatment, only Dr. Fred Stultz, professor of family relations and human development, admitted to any advantage.

Stultz believes he was "looked favorably on" when hired because of his sex.

"Whether I stay here will not depend on my being a man. It will depend on whether I'm good," he added.

Although the men were reluctant to discuss the difficulties and disadvantages of being a minority, they did cite two.

On the lighter side, Stultz commented on the limited restroom facilities. Becoming more serious, all four mentioned the sexism they've encountered from some of their female coworkers.

"Some of them have not freed themselves of sexism," Etheridge said, "but that's found all over in male-female relationships in Western society."

Stultz agreed.

"I think women ought to take another look at themselves. You know, sexism is a two-edged sword," he said.

"It's not unique to find sexism alienating people into working separately instead of together. It's in academics everywhere."

Etheridge believes that a positive mental attitude can help break down the barrier.

"If you center on your sex while being around other faculty members, you find yourself very different and you begin to concentrate on the differences," he said. "If we concentrate on the fact that we're all here to work together — that we're all qualified and competent, interactions will be easier."

Spring Meeting Held By CPDA Division

WASHINGTON — In keeping with its theme of "Operation Awareness," the Coastal Plain Development Association (CPDA) Home Economics Division held its spring meeting at the Tideland Mental Health Center. Staff members discussed the different phases of help available through the center.

Dr. Phil Robbins, psychiatrist, stated "Anyone who wants help with a problem in daily living is welcomed. People who have such difficulties as an unhappy marriage, trouble with their children, nervousness, depression, excessive drinking, drug addition or dependency, adjustment problems and similar other problems are seen as well as those who have more serious emotional illnesses. No one is turned away."

The Home Economics Division adjourned to the Agricultural Extension Office where Mrs. Jean Sigmon, chairman, called the business meeting in sessions. David Weir of Washington gave the devotion.

The CPDA is a 10-county non-profit organization for the purpose of encouraging the counties to work together to achieve goals otherwise not possible. The purpose of the Home Economics Division is to develop an awareness among people of the importance of better family living.

The Pitt County members turned in 33 garments for Cherry Hospital patients. The garments were donated by Renston Nobles Extension Homemakers Club, 19 garments, Ayden Extension Homemakers Club, three dresses, and the Bethel United Methodist Women, seven garments.

The Pitt County Housing Committee reported having sponsored two lampshade workshops. Another workshop conducted by members for the total Home Economics Division Housing Committee was proposed.

Attending from Pitt County were: Mrs. Ann Davis of Greenville, immediate past chairman; Mrs. Reba Boyd of Grifton; Mrs. Rachel Bailey of Fountain; Mrs. Blackie Smith of Pactolus; and Mrs. Frances Burns of Greenville. Mrs. Evelyn L. Spangler, home economics extension agent, attended as advisor.

'Meals On Wheels' Address Given

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Have you ever heard of Meals on Wheels? It is a non-profit, privately operated service for the elderly and handicapped who live alone and cannot prepare meals for themselves, and consequently are reduced to a diet of tea and toast.

There are many such services scattered throughout the U.S. and Canada, but because they are independently operated we don't know where they are.

Abby, you would be doing a tremendous service if you publish our address so we can act as a clearing house for those who provide the service and those who need it. We will provide a national list of Meals on Wheels kitchens, and distribute it for the price of paper and postage.

Our address: Meals on Wheels
Capitol Hill United Methodist Church
421 Seward Square, S.E.
Washington, D.C. 20003
Gratefully,
NEIL SCOTT (FOUNDER)

DEAR MR. SCOTT: Indeed I have heard of Meals on Wheels and the wonderful service it performs. I consider it a privilege to help coordinate your efforts.

DEAR ABBY: Shame on you for your non-answer to that 10-year-old girl whose pet cat, Sinbad, kept running off to be with his girlfriend.

You missed a perfect opportunity to tell all cat-owners to have their pets spayed and altered. Just a few words from you might have prevented the birth of thousands of unwanted kittens who might end up in a decompression chamber.

If you print this, lots of purrs to you from Benny, Toby and Phoebe who live with the Richards in Ridgecrest, Calif. GAIL

DEAR GAIL: I'll take 10 lashes with a cat o' nine tails for my sin of omission. Thanks to you and thousands of other readers who wouldn't let me get away with it.

DEAR ABBY: Before long it will be graduation time again, and while I don't have time to keep up a correspondence with many friends, I would like to let them know that one of my children is graduating.

Please remind people, Abby, that an announcement is not a solicitation for a gift. I cringe at the thought of people feeling obligated (and many people do).

Should I state "No gifts please"? I do think it sounds dumb. Maybe if you just print this, people won't get the wrong idea when they receive an announcement.

FLORIDA MOTHER

DEAR FLORIDA: A graduation announcement is no more than that and can adequately be acknowledged by card or note of congratulations.

CONFIDENTIAL TO M.M.: I like the way Malcolm S. Forbes put it: "Anybody who thinks money is everything has never been sick. Or is."

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

One of the biggest problems confronting women who go outside of their homes to work is guilt.

There is no doubt in my mind that if I gathered my children around my knee and said, "Dear hearts, next Tuesday, your mother will be sworn in as the first woman President of the United States. This means I will serve as chief of state, make sure federal laws are enforced, be commander-in-chief of our armed forces, direct U.S. foreign policy, shape my party's stand on foreign issues, urge Congress to act on my legislative proposals and preside over the 132-room White House," they would react as follows:

Son: "Does that mean you're not going to the store today?"

Daughter: "Don't forget you got baton-twirling car pool on Wednesday."

Husband: "What would you want with a house that big? You can't take care of the one you got."

The guilt is compounded by the frustration of not being able to complain about any part of your extra-curricular activity. If you do, you get, "You asked for it. No one is asking you to work. You can always quit your job."

I have a friend who is just going through the transition period that everyone who works has been through. The other night she came home to an open front door, a stove burner that had been on all day, liquid butter on the breakfast table, unmade beds, the dog eating peanuts from an ashtray and 15 kids in the hall bath showing movies in the commode that threw them into hysterics every time they flushed.

She pounded on the bathroom door and said, "Doesn't anyone care that the dog is eating peanuts from an ashtray?"

A voice came out, "We told him he'd ruin his supper, but he wouldn't listen."

When she complained to her husband he retorted, "I don't know why you have to work anyway. You've got everything here you need — self-cleaning ovens, push-button stoves, ice makers, electric brooms, blenders, steam irons and wall-to-wall conveniences. It's a regular Disneyland."

"I've noticed," she said. "The kitchen is Adventureland; the plumbing, Frontierland; the garage, Tomorrowland; the bedroom, Fantasyland, and the bathroom, Main Street, U.S.A."

I don't think I'll ever forget the day I had written a column, lectured at a luncheon, come home, made beds, put in a load of clothes and started dinner when my son said, "Why don't you make some lemonade?"

"Why don't you make it?" I said.

"It's your job," he retaliated.

I thought about that one for a long time and decided what did it profit me to be an expert lemonade maker — when I failed to raise a child who respected me as a person.

I've never felt guilty since.

PTI Question...

According to the reply, "The State Board of Education has general authority concerning the establishment, or the conversion of any existing institution into a new type of institution..."

The letter continued, "As provided" by law, "The approval of any new institution, or the conversion of any existing institution into a new type of institution, or the expenditure of any State funds for any capital improvements at existing institution shall be subject to the prior approval of the Governor and the Advisory Budget Commission."

According to Vanore, the law, "requires, therefore, that before the State Board of Education can approve the conversion of an existing institution organized and operated pursuant to" the General Statutes, "the Board of Education must first secure the approval of the Governor and the Advisory Budget Commission."

"Furthermore," Vanore continued, "the Board of Education, prior to giving its consent to the conversion...may require as a prerequisite to such a conversion: "(1) The authorization by the voters of the administrative area of an annual levy of taxes within a specified maximum rate sufficient to provide the required local financial support for the converted institution in an election..."

"(2) The approval by the voters of the administrative area of the issuance of bonds for capital outlay necessary for the conversion..."

"Therefore," Vanore continued, "although the State Board may require a vote...it is not required. This is a decision left to the discretion of the State Board of Education, and the election may be called by the State Board only for the reasons set forth in," the General Statutes.

The deputy attorney general added, "we doubt that such (a referendum) would be legal absent legislation from the General Assembly" if held by the Board of Commissioners, and said too, "even if such a referendum were authorized, since it would be no more than an advisory step in Pitt Tech's attempt to become a community college, it would have no legal force or effect."

"Moreover," Vanore said, "there is no inherent power in any governmental body to hold an election for any purpose, and an election held without affirmative constitutional or statutory authority is a nullity, no matter how fairly and honestly it may be conducted."

Representative Horton Rountree said that the conversion of the institution should be decided by the people of the county.

"The people ought to be able to say what they think. The tax angle is the job of the County Commissioners because once the community college is constructed the capital improvements will be a responsibility on the county. The County Commissioners are responsible to the taxpayers and they want some support from their constituents," Representative Rountree said.

Asked whether he thinks that Pitt Tech's effort for supporting a referendum is legally correct, Rountree replied, "The procedures are spelled out and they can follow them with their adequate legal council. They have got to figure out the costs and their needs. I feel that Pitt Tech is relying on the Board of Education's determination some time ago."

Representative Sam Bundy was unavailable for comment about the conversion of Pitt Technical Institute to a community college.

According to Vanore's letter, the State Board of Education, the State Budget Commission and the Governor must endorse the conversion of a technical institute to a community college.

Terrence Tolefson, Associate Vice President of Planning and Policy of the Department of Community Colleges said in an interview Thursday morning that this procedure has been done.

"The State Board of Education endorsed the change in 1970. State law requires that the State Board of Education's approval of a new college transfer program must be considered and approved by the Advisory Budget Commission and the Governor, then submitted to the General Assembly for consideration of funding. This was approved by the Budget Commission and the Governor in 1970, but was turned down by the General Assembly. State law does not require that the Pitt Tech Board of Trustees request the endorsement of the State Board of Education, the State Advisory Budget Commission and the Governor again before requesting the General Assembly to consider the funding again, but they may," Tolefson said.

President Of Highway Ass'n Praises Action

Jerry Powell, newly elected president of the Highway 264 Association, praised Monday's decision by Gov. Jim Hunt and the State Board of Transportation to complete the four-laning of Highway 264 from Zebulon to Wilson.

Powell, who recently succeeded Tom Taft of Greenville as president of the association, said the action gave "added life to an awakening giant-mid-eastern North Carolina."

He noted that the segment of the highway from Zebulon to Wilson was already under construction and a four-lane roadbed was being built. However, only two lanes of the roadbed were to be paved prior to Monday's action.

He said the action by the governor and DOT board is the first step "toward full completion of a four lane highway from Raleigh to Washington."

The president said he hoped the completion of four laning of 264 from Greenville to

Washington will follow shortly and that "we will then get to the business of four laning between Greenville and Wilson."

Powell called for additional study to be given to the segment of the 264 between Saratoga and Farmville as it failed to receive a high priority in a recent highway study of Highways 264 and 64.

The portion of the Highway 64 from Rocky Mount to Tarboro ranked first in the two highway study while second priority was given to a section of Highway 264 between Greenville and Washington.

Powell said he is confident that a road bond issue will be supported strongly by the people living along 264. He said the bond issue is necessary "in order to get our roads and for people in other areas of the state to get their highway needs met."

Says Carter Earns Raves

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Juanita Kreps, U.S. commerce secretary, said Wednesday night that President Jimmy Carter would be getting rave reviews for his fiscal policy if he were a Republican.

"He has not imposed wage and price controls. The stimulus which he has proposed for the economy is about as small as we can allow in the Democratic Party and he has promised to try and balance the budget within four years," she told an audience at the University of North Carolina.

Dr. Kreps taught at Duke University before her appointment to the cabinet post.

The Carter Administration has handled money problems more like Republicans, she said.

"If I were an investor I would view the new policies with optimism," Dr. Kreps said. She said she was puzzled by the uncertainties the new administration has spawned among investors.

Earlier in her speech, she said it was becoming less and less possible for self interest and the general interest to differ widely.

"We can no longer afford to throw our garbage over the back fence and forget about it," she said. "Someone lives on the other side of the fence."

The service will be held in the church's outdoor sanctuary. Members of the Youth Fellowship will lead the various parts of the service. Special music will be offered by the Youth Choir under the direction of Rachel S. Sturz and Jennifer O'Neal, viola.

The meditation "New Life, New Love" will be given by Stephen W. Vaughn, director of education and music. The service will close with a celebration using Easter eggs.

Breakfast will be served at a nominal cost immediately following the service.

opinions, but there is nothing binding. If the referendum is held, and the local population endorsed the community college status for Pitt Tech, it will carry a lot of weight in the General Assembly. At this time a local legislator could drop a special bill in the General Assembly and if it is approved it would be legal. A referendum is not necessary, but it would carry weight in the General Assembly," Tolefson said

Weapon In The War Of Words

We don't believe it!

The Kremlin, masters of "code words" and phrases that identified the Soviet Union as the source of all freedoms and rights "of the workers", really fumbled the ball. They couldn't stomach the United States' insistence on "human rights". (Apparently workers' rights and human rights have divergent definitions in the Communist lexicon.)

Today, willy-nilly, they of the Kremlin are aligned with other dictatorships that cannot tolerate

"human rights". This unwanted position hurts.

The Soviet Union has been entrapped by a simple phrase that is all-important to people deprived of simple liberties all over the world.

In the unending propaganda conflict the United States today has a wedge that peels away the hypocrisy of Communist claims and their harsh policies are bared for all to see.

It's a turning point if the Free World can capitalize on this most beneficent blooper.

Testing The New U.S. Administration

We can be sure that the testing phase is in full swing between the United States' new Carter administration and the Soviet leadership.

President Carter has made blunt statements about human rights in the Soviet Union and the Soviets have turned down U. S. proposals on nuclear arms limits.

The war of words even included a televised news conference for Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko in which he said, "One cannot talk about stability when a new leadership arrives and crosses out all that has been achieved before."

We can expect this testing phase to continue until the leaders have sized each other up. Only then will we get down to serious negotiation.

'Sunset' Bill Sets Stage

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — State Senator Willis P. Whichard's "sunset" proposal for North Carolina State Government does not set the sun completely—nor nearly so far as many have wished.

But to move too far too fast would have been unwise, the Durham Democrat feels.

Still, the Whichard legislative proposal now under study in the General Assembly does set the stage for careful termination of some activities—and close scrutiny of others.

The proposal has some little noticed provisions for a look at state governmental activities generally, not only the "certain licensing and regulatory agencies" mentioned in the title.

End Some

Sunset legislation, being experimented with in several states and made popular by the recent election of President Jimmy Carter who had initiated approach while governor of Georgia, has a simple premise at its foundation: that governmental functions have a terminating date on which funding stops and activity ceases unless the program can be solidly justified in terms of performance and service.

There are those who would propose that sunset apply to all governmental activities. Whichard is not among them. "It would discredit the whole concept of sunset legislation if you just abolished government ever so often."

"Some envision that... that is totally unrealistic. You could have a law saying that the Department of Human Resources is abolished in 1581, but you know very well that could not be done."

"You could set up the termination of the Department of Public Education, but you know that could not be done."

"You could make the whole thing look foolish... create anarchy... and create such a large staff to handle the sunset operation by going into all phases of state government at once that you would have to build an entirely new, expensive and unwieldy bureaucracy," Whichard said.

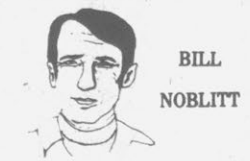

What he is doing is "trying out the concept on the licensing and regulatory agencies... to gain experience and ideas from the process then carefully extend it to other areas."

Whichard acknowledges that within the major departments where it would be unrealistic to talk about sunset, there are individual divisions and agencies which do need attention.

Hunt More

Whichard's legislative proposal covers that: "It establishes a fishing license. The commission may investigate any programs or functions even though not scheduled in the law, and may suggest other terminations. But the goal right now is to give sunset a limited focus that is achievable, and while into this activity, to find others which need attention. The commission would be empowered (investigative staff, subpoena power, hearings) to do that."

An independent commission is proposed with a fulltime staff to handle daily routine. The focus is on licensing and regulatory programs as the first step, with background already built in a report from the Attorney General's office suggesting a moratorium on new licensing activities, and an eye to ending some. That report classified many such agencies as self-serving and industry dominated, tending to function more to keep prices up and competition down then in protecting the public.

The proposal now under consideration simply terminates all such licensing boards (some 35 of them), and about 70 state laws governing business and trade activities. A staggered schedule is set for ending the programs, and a Governmental Evaluation Commission would recommend to the General Assembly whether to keep, change, or do away with the various activities.

Whichard said he introduced the measure to give sunset "a start. But it is major legislation, and will likely be amended heavily in further study. That's all right. I'm not wedded to this approach... I just feel this need to be considered and we need to get started in some way."

He thinks few could argue with the opening statement on his bill: "State government actions have produced a substantial increase in numbers of agencies, growth of programs, and proliferation of rules and regulations."

Absurd Ethics Gesture

The Senate got around to adopting an ethics code the other day. The vote was 86 to 9. So lopsided a margin might indicate that an overwhelming majority of the Senate regarded the code as both necessary and wise, but such was not the case.

Majority Leader Robert Byrd said the whole thing was "absurd," and Mr. Byrd was right.

Mr. Byrd, of course, was among the 86 who voted in favor of this foolishness. He felt that nothing less than this bristling codification of possible misconduct would restore public confidence in the integrity of the Senate.

Mr. Byrd, I believe, is mistaken. Those voters who look at the code are more likely to suspect that the Senate must be composed of crooks if it takes so formidable a document to restrain them.

The code runs on to 55 pages, with 25 printed lines to the page. It is accompanied by an explanatory committee report. This runs on to 91 pages, with 52 printed lines to the page. All these thousands of words — these innumerable rules, restrictions, exceptions and requirements — are intended to keep senators honest. In the end, a truism makes it all immaterial: Good senators won't need a code, and bad senators won't live up to it anyhow.

This is the kind of thing that evolves when political lawyers put their heads together. A typical provision of the code says that a senator shall not accept gifts having a value of more than $100 from any one person during a calendar year, but the rule is not to apply to gifts from a "relative."

It occurred to the lawyerly authors, as they considered their colleagues' devious talents, that the word "relative" had better be carefully defined. Otherwise, some slick senator would wiggle out of the ethical net. Thus the drafters of the code inserted in Rule XLII a subsection 7 (j), as follows: "The term 'relative' means... an individual who is related to the person as father, mother, son, daughter, brother, sister, uncle, aunt, great uncle, great aunt, first cousin, nephew, niece, husband, wife, grandfather, grandmother, father-in-law, mother-in-law, son-in-law, daughter-in-law, brother-in-law, sister-in-law, stepfather, stepmother, stepson, stepdaughter, stepbrother, stepsister, half brother, half sister, or who is the grandfather or grandmother of the spouse of the person reporting."

Humbly! The code is not entirely silly. For the first

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

Recently there have been letters, an editorial and a survey, all commenting on Pitt Technical Institute's becoming a community college.

On the exodus of Pitt students to adjoining counties: Had the writers done their homework, they would know that in summer, 1976 Lenoir Community College registered 23 in the college program and 60 in the technical program. Martin Community College in summer, 1976 registered one in the college program and five in the technical program. In fall, Lenoir registered 32 Pitt Counties in the college program and 84 in the technical program. Martin enrolled one in the college program and six in the technical program. There is no appreciable increase or decrease for winter quarter. So this great number of students leaving Pitt County and spending tuition money in other counties amount to 123 students, of which 90 are enrolled in technical programs.

Another letter commented on the FREE money to be granted to the community college. It is all TAXPAYERS' MONEY.

The editorial admonished the County Commissioners for not stepping out boldly and granting community college status. The three commissioners who voted against that proposal should have been congratulated for taking the position that the voters took in the last referendum.

Now the recent survey: This so-called survey was made by a group from Raleigh. They say they contacted 759 people in Pitt County and that 71 per cent were in favor of a community college. There are about 26,000 registered voters in Pitt County. So 759 is less than three per cent of the voters, assuming they are all voters.

The most appalling thing is that 50 per cent of our high school graduates cannot read on the seventh grade level. We need to spend our tax dollar to remedy this situation and to upgrade our technical institute to prepare our young people for jobs that will be available through our growth in industry, agriculture and special technical opportunities.

To the editor:

I would like to thank you for your editorial last week in support of a city ordinance to require new industrial and commercial developers to plant and maintain trees and/or vegetation in any parking areas connected with the construction.

I would also like to commend more businesses who have done this voluntarily. You only have to drive between Memorial Drive and Charles Street on the Bypass to be able to see the difference between those who have done some planting and those who have parking areas with no relief from large black-top expanses.

This ordinance is to be considered by the City Council in its meeting Apr. 7 and I would hope there will be strong citizen support in favor of it.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Wall St. Loathes Lance

By ROWLANDE EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

NEW YORK — Thomas Bertram Lance out of Calhoun, Ga., confronted the barricades of Wall Street here last Wednesday night and asked what more the Carter administration could possibly do to earn their confidence and support. The hostile answer — "nothing" — clearly rejected Washington's offer of love.

Lance, President Carter's budget director and envoy to the world of finance, fielded tough questions for two hours from 28 representatives of financial institutions aggregating $100 billion in investment power. The remarkable private exchange, conducted in an elegant brownstone on the Upper East Side, confirmed today's biggest unspoken economic worry: a "capital strike."

That is the alarming description of sluggish capital investment that holds back economic recovery.

Since this "strike" is bred essentially by fear of the new administration, much of it is unthinking. Lance is attempting to reassure the financial community. What happened here last Wednesday night not only shows how tough his job is, but also points up the serious adverse impact on the economy of the pervasive fear.

Wall Street is on "strike" because it believes profitability is restricted by the tax structure, government regulation and the new administration's attitude toward business. A symptom was last week's reported reduction of capital appropriations by the utility industry.

Mr. Carter's principal "strike-breaking" weapon has been Lance's conservative-tinctured reassurances. Pursuing this campaign, 28 officials of prestigious financial institutions (Morgan Guaranty Trust, Manufacturers Hanover Trust, Lazard Freres' Lehman Brothers, the Oppenheimer Fund, among others) were invited to a sit-down dinner at the Manhattan townhouse of Lance's friend, economic consultant Eliot Janeway.

Lance's rhetoric was as impeccably orthodox as William Simon's, if not Andrew Mellon's: the Carter administration sees the route to recovery led by investors, not consumers. It feels the worst problem is government — both generating inflation and harassing business. Hence, the goal is balancing budgets' eliminating paperwork and establishing predictability for business.

In response, the barricades grumbled.

Grumble No. 1: The $50 tax rebate pending in Congress has become an economic albatross around Mr. Carter's neck, an $11 billion indication to financiers that he really wants a consumer-led, not an investment-led, recovery.

Grumble No. 2: Although the financiers regard ex-banker Lance as a friend, they also regard him as a shield to hide leftist policymakers in Washington. This usually refers to middle-level appointments, but one investment banker Wednesday night pompously asked Lance how Wall Street could trust the President while

Vice President Walter Mondale emerges as his closest adviser.

Grumble No. 3: Despite constantly reiterated promises of no "incomes policy" (wage-price controls), the financiers will not accept the promise. One told Lance he had it on good authority that Charles Schultz, the President's chief economic adviser, had doubled his staff in preparation for administering controls.

At that, even the affable Lance bridled, wondering how a reasonable man could come to such an erroneous conclusion based on unverified gossip. In truth, the problem of dealing with Wall Street means cutting through gossip, naivete and prejudice.

One financier, in questioning Lance, naively compared the traditionally distorted budget estimates of the outgoing Ford administration with the present growing deficit to demonstrate Carter profligacy. When Lance suggested that "your crowd" (the Nixon-Ford administration) messed up the economy during eight years of deepening stagflation, a voice from the rear responded that things were turning around just when President Ford was defeated.

The session ended with a

HIDDEN SPRINGS

Have you ever wondered as you look across a broad and deep river where all the water comes from? In a season of drought only the little streams disappear. The great rivers and lakes may reach new lows, but they never dry up.

Why? Because over a vast area millions of springs are feeding them. Most of the springs are hidden. Their contribution to the great stream trickles unseen into a channel which finally reaches lake, then river, then ocean.

Hidden springs and unseen reservoirs are surprisingly important not only in the physical realm but also in the mental and spiritual realm. Many people who have been overwhelmed with sorrow and overrun with calamity have found that it was the hidden springs of a comforting faith which made the difference between despair and triumph.

Jesus had hidden springs in mind when he said, "The water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water, springing up unto everlasting life."

Baseball 'Financially Unsound'

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The scholars at the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton Applied Research Center, who usually concern themselves with studying the problems of business, are worried about baseball.

Professional baseball, they say, has become financially unsound business. What with free agents, expansion of the leagues and inflation in general, the future of the big league game is in doubt.

"Think of it, the Phillies need 2.2 million ticketbuyers just to break even," said Chris Ritz, a senior researcher who used to concern himself mainly with such statistics as Mike Schmidt's RBIs.

A few years ago a club needed only about 850,000 paid admissions to break even. By 1976 it is estimated that clubs needed an average of 1.5 million fans to meet payroll. But average home attendance was only 1.25 million.

Ritz and Jim Emshoff, director of the center and associate professor at the Wharton School, one of the nation's top sources of management talent, want to see the big league continue, so they agreed to work on some strategies.

And they ask your help by marking a ballot and mailing it to: James Emshoff, Wharton Applied Research Center, 418 Vance Hall, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa. 19104.

As they view the situation, the important new ingredients in the baseball picture are higher salaries and expansion of teams into cities that might not be able to support them.

As a share of team revenues in 1970, salaries were only 18 per cent, compared with football's 29, hockey's 40 and basketball's 50. But now salaries are rising swiftly and hugely in baseball. Can baseball afford them?

In most other sports the players come to the high professional ranks already trained, often by colleges. But baseball traditionally has trained its own in minor leagues, spending perhaps $750,000 to develop one major leaguer, the two researchers say.

Many owners are said to be thinking of cutting back on minor league expenditures but, say Emshoff and Ritz, "the very real problem this presents is a talent drought." Multitalented individuals might opt for other sports.

Compounding the problem will be the tendency of free agents to relocate to the rich,

Syria Taking Chance

By GEORGE A. KRIMSKY

Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The worst aspect of the war in southern Lebanon is not what it is but what it could turn into.

On the surface it is a series of firefights — with relatively light casualties — for control of farm villages and narrow roads in rocky hill country. But the skirmishing could lead to a confrontation between Israel and Syria.

At the heart of the conflict is the return of Palestinian guerrillas to the Lebanese-Israeli border region, which was teeming with them before most of them moved north to fight in the Lebanese civil war.

After the Arab League imposed a cease-fire last November, the Syrian peace-keeping forces let the guerrillas filter back into the south. Israel had already served notice it would not allow them to use southern Lebanon again as a base for raids across the border. The Christians also wanted the Palestinians neutralized and grabbed control of villages in the former Palestinian stronghold.

The war erupted again.

The Christian forces are getting material and artillery support from Israel, and the Palestinians say they are "the fingers in an Israeli glove" reaching into Lebanon.

The Syrians, who sent their army into Lebanon last June to help the Christians in the civil war, now are pulling the strings the other way. Al Baath, the newspaper of Syria's ruling Baath Socialist party, said Israel was trying to "undermine the guerrilla movement and create a security belt in south Lebanon" with the help of "certain local forces, ... but Syria will not allow this situation to continue."

The Syrians are still keeping their troops out of the border area because of Israeli threats of military action. But this week they allowed the Saiga Palestinians whom they control

40 Years Ago Today

April 7, 1937

Renewed Spanish insurgent bombing of British warships and charges by Italy of Franco-Soviet violations of the "hands off Spain" agreement threatened serious international reverberations today.

Opposing Spanish armies clashed in two of the bloodiest battles of the civil war.

Great Britain demanded a quick and satisfactory explanation from insurgents for two aerial attacks on her destroyer Gallant off the east coast of Spain.

She sent the destroyer Garland to Palma Mallorca, held by insurgents, to back up her warning she will not tolerate interference with her shipping. The Gallant was bombed twice yesterday, but was not hit.

Labor's brightest picture in many weeks was painted today as 85,000 workers directly and indirectly affected by the month-old Chrysler corporation strike stood ready to march back to their jobs.

An agreement between Chrysler and the U.A.W. was signed at Lansing, Mich., last night.

tense challenge when one money man demanded whether Mr. Carter would propose a corporate income tax cut. Lance snapped back by asking whether American free enterprise needs incentives to invest. Lance actually is inclined toward corporate tax relief, but wonders about investors reaching for government handouts in the style of welfare recipients.

Unsatisfactory though the encounter was, Lance has every intention of conducting many more of the same. Janeway believes that preaching the new Carter economic emphasis is essential. "The market's real problem, believe it or not, is that Lance is having trouble getting news of the administration's switch to a 'capital investment first' policy on the Dow Jones wire," Janeway wrote in his syndicated stock market capsule last Friday.

But based on Wednesday night's session' one untypically liberal Wall Streeter wonders whether such face-to-face sessions between Lance and the baracudas do any good. To him, the financial community is so intransigent that it will change its mind only if industry and the rest of business lead the way. But since Wall Street's attitude in itself is vitally important to the general economy, than would only postpone genuine economic recovery.

ticket money so as to support poorer teams. "Currently," they explain, "the visiting team gets about 10 per cent of gate receipts. This gives a big advantage to teams in large cities with high home attendances."

4. Reduce the number of teams. Observe Emshoff and Ritz: "With only 16 or 18 teams left, all could be stronger, both financially, in salary negotiations, and on the field."

time the Senate (as well as the House, in its own version) has adopted an outright prohibition on lame-duck junkets. These are the foreign vacations that are taken in December of even-numbered years by members who have just been defeated in November. The code also prohibits "unofficial office accounts," otherwise known as slush funds. There may be some dubious value in some of the infinite disclosure requirements.

Otherwise, it is hard to find anything good to say of this whole dreary exercise. The assumptions are demeaning. One assumption, at random, is that senators are likely to accept gifts that might "tend to" influence their vote; thus such gifts must be delineated, defined, appraised, recorded and publicly disclosed. In some circumstances, the limitation on value is $35, in others $100, in still others $250. No senator may accept an honorarium of more than $1,000 for a speech. And so on. Food, lodging and entertainment "received as part of the personal hospitality of any individual" need not be reported.

Fiddlesticks! The Senate's laborious attempt to codify these things will not produce a better Senate. A sense of propriety comes from within. It cannot be imposed by rules, sections and sub-sections. Code or no code, a senator knows when someone is out to bribe him. In practice, men and women in public life make their own rules. One senator, some "important decisions could be made by using the scoreboard to ask questions and count votes."

7. Home town teams. The commissioner's office could pass a rule requiring teams be composed primarily of players living in the community, they suggest.

8. Multidivision leagues. Successful teams would play each other in division one. Others would play in three lower divisions. Division champs would move up a division, and last place teams would fall a division each year.

High pressure over the eastern half of the nation dominated North Carolina's weather today, producing clear skies over most of the state, along with cool temperatures.

Another wave of cool air associated with a weak cold front will move rapidly across the state Friday but warmer temperatures are in prospect for the weekend.

Lord Macaulay once remarked that he knew of "no spectacle so ridiculous as the British public in one of its periodical fits of morality." For the past two years, the American public has been suffering the spasms and heaves—or at least Congress thinks so. Now that the House and Senate have decreed themselves moral, perhaps the convulsions will subside. Then statesmen can go back to being statesmen, and rogues, alas, to being rogues.

The seaway war in the backward countryside is primarily a fight for high ground and access routes. Often within half a mile of exploding artillery shells and sniping, one can see farmers plowing their fields, children playing in village streets and women bearing water on their heads.

Casualties have been low. The Christians this week reported 19 killed and several score wounded on their side since October. The Palestinians have given no casualty report.

Many Join 'Special Olympics'

SPECIAL OLYMPIC — contestants are shown at the finish line of the 50 yard dash. About 360 participants competed in seven separate events in the big annual spring event. (Reflector photo by Tommy Forrest).

Under the cool, but sunny skies of Wednesday, a large contingent of about 360 special athletes, children and adults, from Greenville and Pitt County, took part in the 1977 local Special Olympics.

The special athletes, ranging in age from six to 44, came in from 24 classes and centers.

In this annual spring event, participants competed in seven separate events — the 50-yard dash, the 220-yard run, the 440-yard run, the 440-yard relay, softball throw, broad jump, and long jump. The Special Olympics opened shortly after 9:30 a.m., with a parade of athletes. The Rose High School Band provided music, and the Special Olympics torch was lighted by Val Latham. Opening ceremonies were conducted by Mayor Percy Cox.

Approximately 175 volunteers from throughout the community and from East Carolina University assisted in the more than half day long event which was coordinated by Ms. Alice Keene of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department.

Martin Board Receives First Of 1977-78 Budget Requests

WILLIAMSTON — Martin County Commissioners at their April meeting received the first of the county's 1977-78 budget requests. Jane Biggs of the Department of Social Services presented that department's request for a budget totaling $2.6 million — an amount that includes federal, state and local monies. This request will be studied along with requests from other county departments and agencies.

A minor budget amendment was made to reflect the receipt of $2,555.58 in state money for 4-H Club assistance for the period April 11 through June 30. Ms. Betty Griffin, coordinator of the Senior Citizens program, requested county support to share in the operation of a van for that group. Commissioners approved a motion to enter into a dual support agreement with the town of Williamston. A request from Ms. Griffin for janitorial support, however, was tabled for study. Kenneth Daniels, Finance Officer for Martin County, presented his resignation to be effective June 15. Daniels plans to accept work with a bank at that time. In a non-official action, commissioners expressed concern over the possible departure from Martin County of Dr. Frank Sheldon, the only surgeon at Martin General Hospital. On this subject, commissioners heard a delegation headed by Sam Hocutt, Vernon Whitley, and Haul Reddick, who asked commissioners to give support to efforts to convince Dr. Sheldon to remain in the county.

Williamston To Review Alternates On By-Pass

WILLIAMSTON — A look at alternate plans for a by-pass segment of the Williamston Thoroughfare is to be considered by the Williamston Town Board. This decision follows opposition expressed at the April meeting of the board, where representatives of a church on Center Street voiced opposition to the by-pass from U.S. 64 to N.C. 125 that would affect the church property. Approval was given to a proposal to exchange a strip of property on Washington Street for a similar strip on Railroad Street. This action is to provide additional land for a proposed parking lot. Approval is contingent on the price difference not to exceed $3,500. An ordinance, requested by the State Department of Transportation, that parking be prohibited on U.S. 17 by-pass north, was adopted. The Transportation Department will take action to place no-parking signs along the area where illegal parking has been prevalent. Discussion of which direction to take in acquiring liability insurance for a senior citizens bus was tabled. Mention was made of the possibility of the group forming an independent corporation for insurance purposes, with the town of Williamston still providing assistance. In other actions, the town board granted the Jaycees permission to hold a carnival within the town limits sometime in October, and set Thursday, April 7 at 7 p.m. as a public meeting date to consider an annexation study prepared by Bob Clark. A resolution was passed by the board that would urge Dr. Frank Sheldon to remain in Williamston. This was done in light of reports that the doctor, a surgeon, had plans for relocating his practice.

Can Recycle Some Tissue

NEW YORK (UPI) — Home paper-making is a good rainy-day project for children — with adult supervision.

Directions are available in a free brochure recently re-issued by the trade association for the pulp, paper and paperboard industry.

The brochure contains six step-by-step photos and captions showing how to recycle facial tissue (not the wet-strength kind) into paper you can write or draw on.

The only utensils needed are a fine-meshed wire screen, two metal pans, a water container with at least 10-quart capacity, 30 sheets of tissue, two pan-size sheets of blotting paper, laundry starch, an eggbeater or blender, a rolling pin and an electric iron.

Single copies of "How You Can Make Paper" are free from the American Paper Institute, 260 Madison Ave., New York, N.Y. 10016. Ask for the brochure by title. In quantity, the price is $25 per 100.

No Dissent In Sanhedrin

to kill the blasphemer just before the setting sun ushered in a particularly holy Sabbath?

The clerks then began to call the roll, starting with the youngest members. Each in turn stood and said: "He is guilty! Death!" When the roll was completed without a dissenting vote, the clerk wrote the prisoner's name, the charge, the finding of guilt, and the sentence. This, along with the prisoner, would have to be taken to the Roman Procurator for confirmation of sentence.

Two seats in the Great Sanhedrin were empty: that of Nicodemus and that of Joseph of Arimathea, friends of the accused.

The next move was to take Jesus to the Roman Procurator, Pontius Pilate, and in all the long, hard road of the apprehension, trial and conviction of this criminal, there was nothing Caiphas feared more.

A man of restraint could bear with Pilate's ironies, his sarcasms, his spurious puzzlement regarding Hebrew law, his disclaimers, his faintly veiled scorn of all Jews. But if he denied that the crime was of sufficient gravity to warrant death, then all the pleas of logic and justice would avail Caiphas nothing. Jesus would be freed and He would be a greater voice among the people than ever before. One might as well close the temple.

The high priest felt that Pilate would make the case of Jesus a test of strength. Not that Pilate cared for the prisoner, who was just another inconsequential subject.

The worry of Caiphas was that, in spite of the fact that he had inveigled the Roman into participating in the arrest of Jesus, Pilate would do anything he could to embarrass Caiphas and his father-in-law, no matter what the legalities might be.

One of the elders suggested that it would help if they brought along a crowd to shout against Jesus in the presence of Pilate. The little knot of men marveled at the simplicity of this weapon.

Outside the room the priests on the Royal Porch issued orders. Guards and messengers listened to their words and then ran off through the throngs of worshipers, who wondered at this unseemly conduct in the house of the Lord.

Judas, standing on the edge of the portico, saw Caiphas' messengers running through the crowd. He was afraid to ask what the supreme council had decided. He was afraid not to. The messengers ran off, and in minutes they were back.

The betrayer grew older as he stood there. He would have to make the priests understand somehow that they were mistaken. Jesus had committed no crime. He had done no wrong. If he could make this known to Caiphas, Judas was sure that everything would be all right, because Caiphas was a just man, a lawgiver.

Judas almost collided with a messenger, and paused, breathlessly, to ask what the supreme council had decided. The messenger said he had no time for questions. Judas begged. He said he must know what had happened to the Prophet from Galilee.

"Oh, that one," said the messenger. "He will be lifted on a tree this morning."

7 a.m., April 7, A.D. 30

Judas clutched at the messenger's garments. He asked to see the high priest at once. The messenger slashed at him with his hand. The high priest, he shouted, was too busy to spend time with people of unsound mind.

Judas began to run once more through the crowds of people, toward the Court of the Priests.

When Judas reached the Court of the Priests, he turned into the inner room of the offerings. Several priests were in a group, holding a discussion. They knew Judas, because these were the men who had paid him.

Judas cleared his throat and said, with forced sweetness: "It was wrong for me to betray innocent blood."

The priests looked at each other and then back to the traitor. They could not be further out of sympathy with this man.

"What does that matter to us?" said the ranking one among them. "That is your worry."

Judas' mouth opened to emit sound, then it closed. He realized then what their words meant: The entire matter was out of their hands. They proposed to do nothing to save Jesus, and if Judas had, as he protested, betrayed innocent blood, then it was his crime, not theirs.

Judas stood indecisively a moment, wild-eyed, staring at the priests. Then he made a resolve. He would nullify the agreement by returning the money.

Nervously, Judas counted out thirty silver coins, and with an oath cast them to the floor. Then he turned and fled.

Outside the wall, he ran along the little path which hung over the Valley of Hinnom. Now he was slowed to a walk, because the path clung to the wall and hung over the edge of nothing.

Judas walked carefully until he came to a lonely fig tree. Then he looked at the money belt in his hand and crept up the small trunk until he found a strong branch. Judas leaned out and tried to rock the branch. It moved slightly.

He leaned out, straddling the branch, and tied the thick leather thong to it. Then he took the other string, on the far side of the apron, and tied it securely around his neck. He made several knots behind his ear and then slowly, carefully, he lowered himself from the branch.

The little man clung to the wood with both hands for a moment. Then he released one hand, and the other. He dropped a few feet and, in the morning sun, swung back and forth like a lazy pendulum. The branch creaked as he swung.

After a few seconds, he reached up to the leather thong and tried to grasp it and lift himself up. His mouth opened and contorted, but no sound came. The legs convulsed and drew themselves up, almost to his chest.

He made one more attempt to pull himself up, then his hands fell back and settled by his side and he swung back and forth in a wide arc. There was a loud snap of sound, and the big branch cracked. It snapped off at the trunk and followed Judas and his money apron, like a marionette on a stick, down, down into the Valley of Hinnom. There, the body of Judas landed on the rocks and moved no more.

He was the first of the Twelve to die, and he died before the Messiah he sold.

8 a.m., April 7, A.D. 30

Jesus was brought up to a point inside the arches of Fortress Antonia, slightly forward of the high priests. They looked up toward the balcony where Pontius Pilate, the Procurator, stood, flanked by his aides.

The Procurator held his right hand aloft. From this time onward, the disposition of the case of Jesus versus temple law was in the hands of Rome.

"What charge," asked Pilate loudly, "do you bring against that Man?" He pointed to Jesus.

The priests exchanged uneasy glances. Pilate's pretended ignorance must mean that the cruel oppressor was planning to have Jesus tried before him - and, in that case, might dismiss the charges against Him for lack of evidence.

"If this Man," said the high priest, pointing at the back of Jesus, "were not a criminal, we should not have handed Him over to you." These words constituted a legal sarcasm. It did not answer the Governor's question, which concerned the nature of the charge.

"Then take Him in charge yourselves," shouted Pilate, standing and preparing to retire, "and try Him by your law!"

The coldly angry Procurator was determined to have the last word. To bring the high priest to his knees, all Pilate had to do was to pretend innocence of the entire matter and walk off the scene.

Several of the priests cupped their hands and shouted together: "We have no power to put anyone to death."

Pilate did not answer. He turned his back on the priests and started to walk up the steps. The crowd of temple employees was stunned! One of the ranking priests shouted: "We caught this Man inciting our nation to revolt. He opposes the paying of taxes to Caesar and passes Himself off as the Messiah - a king."

The Procurator paused and looked around. The charge against Jesus had been seriously altered.

Blasphemy was one thing. But when a responsible group of citizens used the words "revolt" and "taxes" and "Caesar," they were charging the prisoner with a high crime against Tiberius and the Empire.

Pilate studied the little knot of elegant priests and was forced to show a brief smile of admiration. They had rid themselves of Jesus as a local problem and had thrown Him to Pilate as a menace to the Empire.

Pontius Pilate had few of the marks of greatness. It is felt that his appointment to the position of Procurator was due to the ties of his wife, Claudia Procula, to the Roman throne. She is said to have been the granddaughter of Caesar Augustus.

Unlike her husband, who was an atheist, she was superstitious in matters religious; although she worshipped the many gods of the emperor, she feared to interfere with the practices of any other cult, including that of the Jews. This morning, hearing the noise from the courtyard below, she wrote to her husband a short note: "Have nothing to do with that just Man."

Pilate walked off the balcony into his suite of offices. After some moments of deliberation, Pilate dispatched a servant to go out into the courtyard and tell the centurion Abenadar to bring Jesus to him. At the same time, he sent an aide to his wife's quarters to tell her not to worry, that he did not intend to confirm the sentence of death.

Jesus was brought in and stood in the center of the room.

"Are You the king of the Jews?" Pilate asked.

All Pilate needed was a denial. He was giving Jesus a chance to save His life.

"My kingdom," Jesus said slowly, "is not a worldly one."

He offered sensible proof of this. "If Mine were a worldly kingdom, My subjects would exert themselves to prevent My being surrendered to the Jews. As it is, My kingdom is not of an earthly character."

Pilate was vexed. Why did this pious faker not take advantage of his generosity? "Then You are a king after all!" he said.

"You are right," Jesus said, further confounding the Governor. "I am a king. For this purpose I came into the world - to give testimony to the truth. Only he who is open to the truth gives ear to My voice."

The sophisticated Roman's eyes narrowed, and his lips curled with scorn. Then he motioned for the soldiers to take Jesus outside.

The people watched almost breathlessly as Jesus reappeared, followed by Pilate and his officers. He sat on a curule chair, which was customary when he passed judgment.

"I can detect no guilt in this Man," Pilate said. There was a moment or two of stunned silence, and then a riotous babble of voices arose.

Pilate sat and smiled. Caiphas and the others of the Sanhedrin knew that the Procurator was turning the Man loose not on the legalities but to confound them.

The priests approached Pilate and, bowing formally, said: "He stirs up the nation by His teaching throughout the whole Jewish country. He began in Galilee and ended here."

Pontius Pilate began to look pleased. He asked if the prisoner was a Galilean. Certainly, the priests said.

"Well, then," said Pilate, "this case should be under the jurisdiction of Herod, Tetrarch of Galilee. Take Him to Herod."

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed a slight loss in sluggish trading today following the government's report of another jump in whole-sale prices last month.

The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was down .67 at 914.06.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about a 5-4 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Big Board volume totalled 3.93 million shares over the first hour.

The market got some adverse inflation news, as expected, this morning when the Labor Department reported that the wholesale price index climbed a seasonally adjusted 1.1 per cent in March, equal to a 13.2 per cent annual rate.

Analysts noted that investors had been bracing for that kind of news as the Dow declined 12.63 points to a new 14-month low over the week's first three sessions.

The exchanges will be closed for Good Friday.

Bally Manufacturing, the most active NYSE issue, fell 1 1/2 to 22 1/2 after a loss of 4 1/2 in the past three days. Analysts say the stock has run into some concerted profit taking after a sharp runup from its 1976 low of 5 1/2 to a high of 29 1/2 last month.

The 11 a.m. NYSE composite index was down .06 at 53.20. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .14 at 110.67.

'Tough Enough' Claims Bruton

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt's designee for state education board chairman says he's tough enough not to let State Supt. Craig Phillips dominate things.

DAVID H. BRUTON

Dr. David H. Bruton, a 42-year-old Southern Pines pediatrician, was named Wednesday as Hunt's choice to succeed Dallas Herring in the post.

Herring and Phillips have quarreled in the past over educational philosophies, with Herring usually taking a "traditionalist stance" and Phillips more interested in new techniques.

Bruton Wednesday described Herring as an "enormous force for good in public education in North Carolina." The pediatrician said his philosophy would be similar to Herring's. He said he shared a desire to "rejuvenate public support for the public school system" with Herring.

"Schools in North Carolina have got to increase their emphasis on the basics," Bruton said. "We've got to teach students to read and write."

He said he would consider the direct election of the state education board which is now appointed. And Bruton said he would likewise study making the superintendent's post appointive rather than elected.

'Havoc' Is Threatened By An Over-Age Judge

By DAVID TOMLIN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An elderly judge's ignorance of the law threatens to create legal and social havoc in three counties, where people have believed for the past two and a half years that their marriages and divorces were as good as anyone's.

Many of them probably aren't, according to Franklin Freemans, assistant director of the administrative office of state courts here.

The problem is Judge Benjamin Beach of Lenoir — former Judge Beach, that is. Beach ran for district judge and won on Nov. 5, 1974, seven months after he had turned 70 and nearly two years after 70 became the mandatory retirement age for district judges.

Nobody seemed to notice, and Beach took his oath of office and went to work. But last week somebody called Freemans' boss, Bert Montague, and told him he ought to look into Beach's age. Montague won't say who his informant was.

Beach was called and promptly resigned, but questions remained about the validity of rulings he made while he sat on the 25th Judicial District Court bench with jurisdiction over Catawba, Caldwell and Burke counties.

"I think they are good, unless someone wants to test them," Montague said. But Freemans said he was sure there would be tests and that the rulings would not pass them.

"The chances are far better than even," he said, "that those judgments are void or voidable," he said.

North Carolina district judges handle cases involving things like drunk driving and misdemeanors, but they also have authority to grant divorces, which is where Freemans expects the problems.

"If I were holding a divorce under one of his judgments," Freemans observed, "I'd hasten (to the courthouse)."

And if anyone has remarried after having been divorced by Beach, he added, "that opens up a whole can of new worms. If there have been children, are they bastards? Are the parents living in bigamous cohabitation? It's a mess."

Beach was not available for comment.

Wilson Slips Past Rampants, 5-2

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
WILSON — Wilson Pike High School pushed over four unearned runs in the bottom of the first inning and gained a 5-2 victory over the Rose High School Rampants yesterday.

The Titans, who had picked up no-hitters in their last two outings, didn't get one this time, as the Rampants pushed through five hits, including a lead-off single by John Coffman.

But the Rampants couldn't get their hits in order, while Wilson used three of its five hits in the first to help with its scoring.

An error, followed by two walks and three singles gave the Titans all they would need. All the scoring came after two men had been retired.

Perry Worthington, who started the contest for Rose, was pulled after the four-run outburst, and Henry Baker went the rest of the way, allowing just two hits and a run.

Rose, which had scored one in the top of the first got the other in the seventh, but the rally was cut down by Danny Jernigan, coming in to save the win for starter Joel Bradbury.

Rose got the scoring started in the first with an unearned run. Coffman opened the game with a single through the middle. A passed ball moved him to second, and he was sacrificed to third.

Then, he scored on a freak play. Jeff Aldridge popped up on a suicide squeeze that Wilson second baseman Bert Ferrell caught on a dive. But in attempting to double off Coffman, who was all the way home, he threw the ball away, and Coffman was able to tag up. The ball went out of play, automatically giving Coffman home and a 1-0 lead to Rose.

Wilson came right back to score four in the bottom of the first for the lead. Jeff Harris reached on an error, and with one away, Keith Williams walked. Don Prince singled to load them up, but a popup made it two away.

Rose left men on first and third in the second, and on second in the third. They left the Jeff Jarvis followed with a single to drive in Harris, and Rick Knox walked. Williams scored on a wild pitch, and a hit by Mike Nichols brought in both Prince and Jarvis.

The other Wilson run came in the third. With two away, Baker walked both Nichols and Ferrell. Gary Starling followed with a single to left, scoring Nichols.

Wilson didn't get another runner as far as second the rest of the day.

Rose left men on first and third in the second, and on second in the third. They left the bases loaded in the fourth, but failed to score again until the seventh.

In that frame, Coffman again opened with a single, and Mike Shank doubled to deep right. A wild pitch brought in Coffman, but two strikeouts and an infield out ended the game.

The loss dropped the Rampants to 3-5 overall and 1-3 in Division I league play.

Wilson, in no worse than a tie for first, went to 6-2 overall and 2-1 in the conference.

The Rampants play host to Northeastern this afternoon.

Roanoke May Have Championship Team Again; Pitching Is Strong

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

ROBERSONVILLE — Nolan Respass, coach of the Roanoke High School baseball team is a man who doesn't like to lose. He hates to lose, and he suffered through a poor season last year.

But so far this year, things have gone well, and Respass is smiling again. "I don't know whether we have the stuff to win a state championship again," he said. "But I think that we can be right in the battle for our conference title."

Not counting yesterday's meeting with North Johnston, the Redskins had gotten away to a 5-1 record through the first weeks of the season. The lone defeat was an 11-7 conquest by North Pitt, avenging an earlier defeat by the same score. "We were flat after we beat Williamston on Thursday," Respass said in reference to the defeat.

"Things have gone a lot better so far this year. The boys have more interest and they've also shown a lot of improvement."

Respass said the real success of the team will revolve around the success of Charlie Smith and Cliff Keel on the mound. "We really have five people we can pitch," Respass said. "Besides those two, we have Dennis House, who has four of the five wins, Clay Roberson and Wayne Council. All five of them have done a good job so far."

With that pitching depth, Respass feels that pitching can be the strong point of the team. "It's been good so far, but I think it can be even better."

On defense, Respass expressed some worries about the catching position. "We have a senior, Doug Lane, catching, but he doesn't have a whole lot of experience."

Another spot he's uncertain about is the shortstop position, where Charlie Smith is playing when not on the mound. "I don't like to have to use a pitcher at that position," Respass said.

The rest of the infield has Glenn Cargile at third, Eddie James at first and Ken Gurganus at second. Respass has confidence in all of them.

The outfield is 100 per cent better than last year, the coach says. Lee Smith is in left, Council in center, and Keel in right. David Spruill also moves into right when Keel is pitching. "We can also use Spruill at third, or as a designated hitter," Respass said.

Keel, who is a transfer from Bertie, has provided a lot of leadership so far. "He's a great prospect," Respass said.

The hitting of the Redskins has been "real good," according to the coach. "We've worked three times harder this spring. The boys wanted to practice and to play this year."

While there is not a great deal of speed on the team, Respass feels that the hitting of the team can make up for that.

In the Eastern Plains Conference race, Respass looks to Saratoga to provide the toughest challenge to the Redskins. "They're unbeaten so far, too, in league play. But North Johnston was the choice of the coaches to win, so they'll be trouble too."

"If our pitching holds up, we should be right in there. And if we win the conference title, and our pitching keeps on improving, who knows?"

Jaguars Nip Southern Nash

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central High School pushed over single runs in the first two innings and held on for a 2-1 victory over Southern Nash yesterday.

The victory was the first in three Eastern Carolina Conference starts for the Jaguars, who are now 4-4 overall.

Southern Nash took a brief lead in the first. Wells led off with a double and took third on an out. He scored when Fasnachts reached on an error.

Farmville Central came right back to tie it up in its half of the inning. Mike Jenkins reached on an error, stole second and moved to third on a passed ball. He scored on a hit by David Winborn.

The winning run came in the second. Neal Gordon singled, was sacrificed up and took third on an out. He scored on a passed ball for the 2-1 lead that held the rest of the way.

Winborn had two hits to lead the Jaguar hitting.

Winning hurler Carroll Griffin allowed but four hits as he struck out three and walked two.

Farmville Central returns to action on Friday, traveling to Conley.

No-Hit Win For 'Skins

MICRO — Roanoke High School won its fourth straight Eastern Plains game behind the no-hit pitching of Cliff Keel, downing North Johnston, 3-0 yesterday.

Keel struck out eight and walked five in going the distance for the Redskins.

All of the scoring came in the first inning, as the Redskins got all they needed with three runs.

Ken Gurganus singled and stole second, scoring on a hit by Keel. Clay Roberson then ran for Keel, scoring on a single by Charlie Smith. Glenn Cargile singled and moved Smith to third. He scored when Wayne Council grounded out.

After that, neither team put up much of a struggle, as the Redskins stretched their record to 6-1 overall and 4-0 in the league.

Gurganus led the 'Skin hitting with two.

Montefusco Would Like A No-Hitter

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The first hit off John Montefusco today will not only be a blow to his ego, but to his pride as well.

The San Francisco pitcher who believes he can do anything will try to do something only one person has ever done in baseball — pitch two consecutive no-hitters.

"I'd really like to pitch another no-hitter because I may never get the chance again to throw two in a row," Montefusco said as he prepared to pitch the Giants' opening game against the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Montefusco, a swaggering right-hander who pitches as good a game as he talks, hurled a no-hitter against the Atlanta Braves in his final appearance of 1976 — losing a perfect game by walking a batter in the fourth inning.

If Montefusco manages to hold the Dodgers hitless in today's game at Los Angeles, it will match Johnny Vander Meer's golden accomplishment of 1938, when he pitched consecutive no-hitters against the old Boston Braves and Brooklyn Dodgers.

Montefusco, a 16-game winner last season, is matched against Don Sutton, the Dodgers' 21-game winner of 1976. A year ago in their opener at San Francisco, the Giants beat the Dodgers with the same pitchers starting.

The game is one of eight baseball openers on the second day of the major league season.

Elsewhere, it's St. Louis at Pittsburgh and New York at Chicago in National League inaugurals. In the American League, Chicago will be at Toronto, Kansas City at Detroit, Texas at Baltimore, Milwaukee at New York and Cleveland at Boston.

In Wednesday's traditional opener at Cincinnati, the Reds defeated the San Diego Padres 5-3. In the American League season opener Wednesday night, the California Angels spoiled the debut of the expansion Seattle Mariners with a 7-0 victory.

Cesar Geronimo smashed a two-run homer and Ken Griffey drilled three hits as Cincinnati roughed up 1976 Cy Young winner Randy Jones. The chilly season opener attracted 51,937 at Riverfront Stadium despite a three-inch snowfall prior to the game and temperatures which dropped to 14 degrees with the wind-chill factor.

Veteran left-hander Woodie Fryman, the National League's oldest starter at 36, survived a shaky start to win his first outing with the Reds. Fryman walked six in 5 1-3 innings, while giving up three runs and seven hits.

Southpaw Frank Tanana scattered nine hits and Joe

Rudi drove in four runs with a home run and a double, leading California over Seattle. The record Kingdom crowd of 57,762, which welcomed big league baseball back to Seattle, included Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn and American League President Lee MacPhail.

The 23-year-old Tanana, a 19-game winner in 1976, was in trouble only in the eighth inning. Rudi, one of three high-priced free agents acquired by California during the off-season, collected three hits for the Angels.

Rookie managers will be starting on both sides in the Los Angeles-San Francisco game. Tom Lasorda has replaced Walter Alston as the Dodgers' field boss and Joe Altobelli is the new Giant manager, taking over Bill Rigney's job.

Two new pilots and some new styles are featured in the St. Louis-Pittsburgh contest.

Vern Rapp has taken over for Red Schoendienst at St. Louis and has brought a new face to the colorful Cardinals with his orders to remove all beards and mustaches. Chuck Tanner, replacing the late Danny Murtaugh at Pittsburgh, is managing in the National League for the first time and his Pirates are billed as "Lumber and Lightning" — a tribute to their hitting and speed.

Rapp has nominated John Denny, the NL's earned run average king last year, to pitch against Pittsburgh's Jerry Reuss.

Tom Seaver makes his 10th straight opening-day start for the Mets. The New York ace has never lost in that role, with five victories and four no-decisions. Herman Franks, making his debut as the Chicago manager, nominated Ray Burris to face Seaver in the Wrigley Field opener.

Major league baseball makes its debut in Toronto with the Blue Jays hosting the White Sox before an expected crowd of 45,000, among them Kuhn and MacPhail, who flew overnight from Seattle for the open-

North Pitt basketball star Donnie Perkins has apparently decided to attend N. C. State University.

The Panther forward, who was recently visited by Wolfpack coach Norman Sloan, reportedly signed a grant-in-aid with State, although he has not yet been academically accepted at the school.

The grant is not binding until Perkins is accepted, according to North Pitt coach Cobby Deans, and is only binding within the Atlantic Coast Conference until next Wednesday, the day when national letters of intent can be signed.

The 6-3 standout seems to have all intentions of actually attending NCSU, however, and, with a rash of present team members leaving the squad, he could be in good shape to step right in his freshman year.

Ayden-Grifton center fielder Al Butts came up with an unusual double in the Chargers' game with North Lenoir Tuesday night.

In the second inning, Butts hit a hard ball toward Hawk third baseman Timmy Moye. Before Moye could react, the ball hit his knee, bounced high in the air back across the infield and began to roll slowly out toward right field.

By the time the North Lenoir infielders could recover the ball, Moye had made it to second base and Brady Quinn, who had been on second, had scored.

The run pulled the Chargers to within one, 3-2, at that point in the contest, but didn't make much difference in the outcome of the game as Ayden-Grifton took an 11-8 win over the Hawks.

East Carolina's baseball Pirates continue their running ways under first-year head coach Monte Little.

In the Bucs' last outing, Tuesday at UNC-Wilmington, they stole a total of six bases to shatter the season record for steals. The old record was 57 while the Pirates now have 60 this season with nearly half the schedule remaining.

Eddie Gates, whose two steals during the game tied and broke the old record, leads the team in thefts with 17 for the year. He earlier broke the old individual record for steals in one season, 14.

The Bucs broke another record during the UNC-Wilmington game.

Their 6-4 win over the Seahawks gives them 10 consecutive wins, snapping the old mark of nine straight set in 1967 and tied last year.

East Carolina is now 17-6 for the season and tied for the lead in the Southern Conference with a 4-0 league mark. They will be defending their unbeaten conference record Saturday when they play a doubleheader at Davidson.

Re-Elected As Board Chairman Program Given Young Farmers

WILLIAMSTON — At the April meeting of the Martin County Board of Education, George McRory was reelected chairman of the board and Macon Holliday was reelected vice-chairman for a two year period.

The board also reelected Eugene Rogers as Superintendent of Martin County Schools and Comer Griffin as Assistant Superintendent.

Another approval action was that of adopting a communicable disease resource book to be used by senior high students throughout the county. The resource book was prepared by staffs and students of the Martin County Schools.

An agreement was made to lease the grounds of the old elementary school site in Everetts to a lessee for a $300 yearly fee.

An easement was given to the town of Jamesville for sewer lines to go across school property there.

The 1977-78 school calendar, adopted by the board, will provide a pupil orientation date of August 26 as the first school day, with June 7 as the final pupil school day. Graduation exercises will be held June 9.

Two groups of concerned citizens were on hand to present requests for future board consideration. One is for a county-wide athletic program for seventh and eighth grade students; the second is for band support on a county rather than a district basis.

A special program concerning R-6-P (Reduce Six Pests) was presented at the Pitt County Young Farmers meeting Tuesday night.

Gaylon Ambrose, Assistant Agriculture Agent in Pitt County explained the importance of cutting tobacco stalks to reduce the six tobacco pests which are, three diseases, brown spot, nematodes, and budworm; and three insects, hornworm, mosaic, and flea beetle.

According to Ambrose, R-6-P is the last field operation in growing tobacco.

"It is a production fundamental in disease control of tobacco. R-6-P can cause a $200 per acre potential savings. To Pitt County farmers this could mean about $4½ million potential savings," Ambrose said.

Ambrose urged members to make decisions with landlords within the next few weeks about who will be responsible to cut stalks.

The R-6-P program involves four steps. They are as follows:

(1) Immediately after harvesting tips, cut or shred stalks; (2) Turn stubble immediately so the root system can be killed by drying action of the sun and the wind; (3) Disk field thoroughly about two weeks after roots are plowed out. Disk a second time if necessary to get all stubbles, stalks, and trash completely buried beneath the soil; and (4) Seed a winter cover crop such as wheat, oats, and barley.

The Pitt County Young Farmers members decided to sponsor the R-6-P campaign in Pitt County. Beginning in June, the young farmers will begin distributing bumper stickers which read "R-6-P Disc Stalks Under" to all Pitt County farmers as a reminder of the importance of the program.

Hoover Thomas, a representative of Tuco, a division of the Upjohn Company also spoke to the farmers about Enide 50W and the Disc for Dollars Contest that Tuco sponsors in North Carolina. The company awards prize money to the counties which have the highest participation in the R-6-P program.

The members decided to meet again May 17 at Charles McLawhorn and Son, Farm to discuss future plans of the club and to discuss plans for a corn contest.

TEANECK, N.J. (UPI) — American motorists neglect about 40 per cent of the maintenance manufacturers prescribe for their cars, the Motor Equipment Manufacturers Association reports. A national study of cars averaging four years old, shows that as a rule six of 14 typical specified maintenance jobs were not performed. Also, only 43 per cent of the maintenance is done by paid mechanics. The rest of the tasks are performed by the motorists themselves.

Another 'Awards Show' For The TV Audience

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Recognizing the urgent need for another awards show, CBS will air one next Monday, the first "Television Critics' Circle Awards." It has 19 honors categories, at last report.

It evolved in the wake of bitter fighting by TV's New York and Hollywood troops over voting procedures for the Emmy awards show NBC will air May 15, despite threats of massive star boycotts.

In January, when the fighting got hot, talk show host David Susskind, whose firm is producing Monday's show, invited a blue ribbon panel of TV gurus to New York to discuss a TV critics' circle.

Mention was made of, ah, setting up an awards show. A few critics reconsidered, tipped their derbies and withdrew. Those who stayed set up various categories and nominated various shows.

Then Susskind's emporium sent out ballots to TV grumblers in 100 cities, asking them to vote on the nominated shows.

As with the Emmys, there've been harsh words about this awards show, not by entertainment folks, but by 10 TV critics in major cities who detect sinister implications in the thing.

Last month, they took out an ad in Variety, the show-biz bible, denouncing the show as "an effort to destroy the adversary relationship between the press and the TV industry."

They claimed the critics didn't set up a critics' group, that only Susskind did, and for only one reason — establishment of an awards show "that will boost the fortunes of Mr. Susskind."

Mr. Susskind's office claims this is not his intent and says neither he nor CBS own rights to a second TV critics' circle show. It says the show's future will rest with the critics.

I, pardon the personal reference, have stayed out of this whole hoo-hah, pleading temporary apathy. But it's time to speak out.

This is a very important matter. It could affect the environment, future SALT talks, the hereafter, even beer prices. I do not think there should be another awards show. True, it keeps those who give or get awards off the streets, keeps them from alarming the horses. But enough already. They're causing critical shortages.

Excluding beauty pageants, the networks, by June, will have aired at least 10 awards since January. This is wasteful depletion of two valuable resources — winners' envelopes and statuettes.

They also waste another key resource — lips. Indeed, my pal

Mishkin the Trumpeter played so many award fanfares this year he suffered a blowout last week and had to get his lip vulcanized.

But conservation aside, there is a basic reason for my grave doubts about the critics' circle awards show Mr. Susskind is producing. And it's not because I suspect his motives. Not at all.

It's just that I don't think there should even be a television critics circle. Someone always forgets to bring the dice.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, APRIL 8, 1977

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Not a good time for you to be overly direct with anyone in stating views of a critical nature. Not a good time to go ahead with plans you have in mind. Wait for another day.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Before you look into a new venture be sure you complete whatever work you have already started. Steer clear of one whose background is different from your own.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Although you do not enjoy doing it, you still have to take care of pressing responsibilities. Study new and more improved systems for the days ahead.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Handle problems with associates wisely and have an improved relationship with them. Outsiders can be most helpful now. Be of real assistance where some public matter is concerned.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A co-worker makes it possible for you to be more sure of yourself. Be wiser to the ways of others.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Put some talent you have to work and make big inroads into greater success for the future. Find out what mate expects of you and try to please more. Avoid one who is jealous of you.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A family tie is not feeling up to par so be more thoughtful and kind with this person. Don't criticize. Get busy at routines early and forget a new venture.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Handle problems early and get down to routine matters. Be careful of one who is a hypocrite.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Do whatever will make your financial status more enviable and feel safer, happier. Try to cut down on expenses and be sure to pay whatever bills are essential.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You are going through a trying time right now, but later all works to your benefit and you feel happier, more optimistic.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Listen to what a good adviser has to suggest. A good time to handle matters of a confidential nature, also.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) After lunch is best time to get into whatever will increase personal happiness. Take no chances where reputation is concerned.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Make sure you are poised in handling any career or business affairs and gain backing from bigwigs. A credit matter needs your immediate attention.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those delightful young persons who early in life needs much attention and kind discipline in order to keep out of trouble. There is curiosity in this nature which needs training. Then life can become successful.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Mixed Team Hunting Sunken Monitor

By MARY MACDONALD
Associated Press Writer
HATTERAS, N. C. (AP) — The ironclad vessel Monitor, covered now with barnacles and green with algae at the bottom of the ocean, is attracting the energies of a dentist, a truck salesman and a physician as well as scientists and historians.

They all envision the Civil War ship preserved and available for study, in a museum or a water-filled enclosure that would allow people to view it.

"This is one naval vessel that everyone can identify with. Ask anyone and they can tell you what the Monitor was. This is something people will really want to see," said William Still, an East Carolina University history professor who is a trustee of the Monitor Research and Recovery Foundation.

Still and the scientists and engineers on the foundation's board of trustees have a professional interest in the preservation of the Monitor. The volunteers who help them raise money and organize research expeditions are buffs — of the Civil War, naval vessels or diving.

"We're what's commonly known as a motley crew," said Dennis Boyce, who sells forklift trucks in Southport, N. C., and contributes his time to the Monitor effort.

Boyce skipped one of two small yachts on hand here today to help shuttle people and equipment to the Cape Henlopen, a University of Delaware research vessel that arrived at the Monitor site Wednesday.

The Cape Henlopen was taking core samples of the ocean floor and studying bottom currents to help determine whether and how the Monitor might be raised 220 feet from the ocean bottom.

A special horizontal-aimed camera was also on board to be used for viewing the top of the ship, which is tipped over and resting on its gun turret, 18 miles offshore.

John Newton, formerly director of the marine laboratory at Duke University and now head of the foundation, said it will be years before the Monitor is available in a museum or a marine park for public viewing.

"We made up a timetable once and it was so discouraging we gave it up. It took us through 2010," he said.

"We have to be deliberate and careful," he said. "But we're actually working against time."

Newton said the Monitor is only several hundred feet from the edge of the Continental Shelf and could be washed over the edge in an earthquake.

The foundation, which is a nonprofit group funded by donations, is considering three alternatives for raising the Monitor.

One involves lifting the vessel in three pieces and reassembling it, another calls for bringing up the entire site in huge metal claws and a third involves freezing the Monitor in a column of water with liquid nitrogen and lifting the block of ice.

"It's so big a project it would take government money," said Newton. For example, the liquid nitrogen project might cost $2 million to $4 million.

The foundation research is conducted by permit from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, which has controlled the site since it was declared a federal marine sanctuary in January 1975. The Monitor was located in 1973 by Newton and a group of other scientists.

The Monitor, a prototype of modern naval vessels, was characterized by an extremely low deck and a revolving gun turret, the first of its kind.

The battle between the Monitor and the confederate ship Virginia, formerly the USS Merrimack, in Hampton Roads on March 9, 1862, was the first battle between ironclads. It ended in a draw.

Nine months later, on New Year's eve, the Monitor went down in a storm off Cape Hatteras in the Graveyard of the Atlantic while heading south to complete a federal blockade.

Sixteen men were killed when the Monitor sank. Newton said 14 of them probably were washed overboard but two were below decks, and their remains probably would still be aboard.

He said the interior is sure to be saturated with water, but he added, "Animal products survive unusually well."

"That fur rug in the officers' quarters should be intact, except for algae and the growth of barnacles."

Volunteers Lose Status

GRAHAM, N.C. (AP) — The Boone Station Volunteer Fire

Department is out of business despite a station house with $40,000 worth of equipment.

The volunteer firemen were to meet tonight with their attorney to discuss how to get back on the job following action this week by the Alamance County Commissioners.

The department was branded an "outlaw" outfit Monday with passage of an ordinance which says the station is not officially recognized by the commissioners.

Only recognized departments may fight fires in the county's 10 fire districts.

Members of the department have not seen eye-to-eye with other county officials since they broke away from the Elon College Volunteer Fire Department in May, 1975. In November, members of one unit blocked another truck from answering a fire call.

A district judge dropped charges in the incident after a confused hearing with conflicting testimony.

Bill Durham, the Boone unit's attorney, said he is weighing whether to bring the matter back to court. The county says it received an opinion from the attorney general's office backing up their "disenfranchisement" ordinance. The ordinance was passed on a 3 to 2 vote.

Betty Gurganus, D. H. Conley Junior, was elected secretary of the North Carolina Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA) at the Twenty-Third Annual Leadership Conference which met at the Sheraton Center in Charlotte March 31-April 3.

The theme, "Supporting Our Heritage of Free Enterprise by

The first general session held Friday night featured a fellowship dinner, a program of music by the Life Style Singers of Charlotte, and an address from Mayor John Blek. John Taylor, Baptist minister serving Jamesville, Roper and Vanceboro; the Rev. Gordon Conklin, pastor of Oakmont Baptist Church; the Rev. Clarence Gray, pastor of Triumph Missionary Baptist Church; the Rev. Ralph Messick, pastor of Hooker Memorial Christian Church; the Rev. U.S. Wineries Outlook 'Good'

NEW YORK (UPI) — The U.S. wine market grew a "disappointing" 2.8 per cent last year, but better times are ahead for the industry, according to IMPACT, a research newsletter for the industry.

IMPACT notes that the table wine category in 1976 jumped eight per cent to a record 231 million gallons. It adds:

"With 'refreshment' wines, dessert wines and vermouth becoming less important in ... the total wine shipment picture, and with traditional table wine becoming ... the dominant category of consumption, the (U.S.) wine market ... will be better positioned to enjoy handsome levels of consumption growth."

GARBAGE RECYCLING

NEW YORK (UPI) — Garbage recycling and burning in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut could generate enough electricity to supply 8 million homes by 1980, Ronald Kinney, president of Resource Technology Corp. of San Jose, Calif., said in a seminar sponsored by the American Iron and Steel Institute.
