MONACO (AP) — Princess Caroline of Monaco, Grace Kelly's raven-haired, 20-year-old daughter, is engaged to marry the French commoner who has been her steady escort for some months, 37-year-old Philippe Junot.

In a brief newspaper notice published today in neighboring Nice, the rulers of the 350-acre principality on the French Riviera announced: "...Prince Rainier III and Princess Grace are happy to announce the engagement of (Continued On Page 16)

Hagerty Seeks Seat On Council

Former City Manager Harry Hagerty on Wednesday joined the growing ranks of candidates seeking a seat on the City Council in the forthcoming elections.

A retired Army colonel who served more than 20 years on active duty, Hagerty is a native of North Manchester, Indiana, and is married to a Greenville woman, the former Mattie Moye Gaylord. They have three grown sons.

Hagerty entered the Army in 1940 and retired from military service in 1962. He served in both the Pacific and European Theater of Operations during World War II and also served in Korea. He holds a number of military medals and decorations.

Hagerty was educated at De Pauw University, Greencastle, Ind., where he received the BBS degree, and at Georgetown University, Washington, D. C., where he earned a master's degree. He also attended the Command and General Staff College, Ft. Leavenworth, Kans. and the Army War College, Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

Following his military retirement, Hagerty became City Manager of Greenville in 1962 and served in that position until 1972. He returned to that position for an interim period in 1974-75.

A deacon at the First Christian Church, he is also a member of the American Legion and is on the board of directors of the Kiwanis Club.

U.S. Foreign Trade Deficit Continuing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States had a deficit in its trade with other nations of more than $2.3 billion in July, an improvement over the June trade deficit but still the fourth worst trade month on record, the Commerce Department said today.

Contributing to the improvement in the nation's trade picture in July was a decline of $307 million in imports of foreign oil during the month. Total petroleum imports in July were valued at just under $3.6 billion.

The nation had an over-all record trade deficit of $2.8 billion in June. During the first seven months of this year, the total deficit in U.S. trade was more than $14.9 billion, far eclipsing the previous record annual deficit of $6.4 billion in 1972.

The small improvement in the July trade figures was unlikely to end concern that the continuing large U.S. trade deficit could contribute to a further decline in the value of the U.S. dollar in international money markets.

Since the United States has been buying more than it has been selling, the nations' trading partners are accumulating large surpluses in American dollars. The surplus dollars tend to decline in value as they continue to build.

The Commerce Department said over-all exports in July increased slightly to slightly more than $10.1 billion, a gain of four-tenths of one per cent over the June total.

The Commerce Department said exports rose slightly during July to a total of $10,149,000,000, an increase of fourtenths of 1 per cent over June. Imports declined to $12,476,000,000, down 3.5 per cent from the record June total of $12,932,000,000.

In addition to the drop in imports of petroleum products, there were also reduced imports of coffee, iron and steel, aircraft, and nonelectrical machinery.

Coffee imports were cut by more than one-third to $248 million, a drop of $119 million from the June total.

On the export side there were increases in foreign sales of electrical machinery, military aircraft, office machines, electrical equipment, chemicals, and rice and wheat.

While many economists have expressed concern over the recent trade deficits, it has seems clear that the United States is pursuing a policy of buying more from other nations than it is selling to help the economies of other nations and also to help them pay for their own oil import needs.

Oil importing nations, including the United States, are expected to have a total deficit of their trade with member nations of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) of about $40 billion this year as a result of the higher cost of OPEC oil.

Total U.S. imports of foreign oil during the first seven months of the year were valued at just over $25 billion, up substantially from the total during the first seven months of last year of nearly $17.7 billion.

Vance Concludes 4 Days Of Conferring In China

PEKING (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance wound up four days of talks with Chinese officials today without claiming progress toward normalization of relations.

But Vance told a news conference that the talks, which included a last-minute meeting with party Chairman Hua Kuo-feng, "enhanced our mutual understanding of a wide range of issues."

Hua presumably told Vance that if diplomatic relations are to be established between the United States and China, Washington has got to make the concessions by cutting its ties with the Nationalist Chinese government in Taiwan.

"I go away from here better informed, certainly there is no question about that," Vance said after his afternoon meeting with Hua, the 57-year-old successor to long-time Communist party Chairman Mao Tse-tung. Vance, as he had at the start of his visit, described the talks as "exploratory."

Speaking of the effect of the meetings on both sides, Vance said: "We are both more understanding and thus in a position where we have a better grasp of the problems of normalization."

Hua, who was meeting a high-ranking member of the Carter administration for the first time, said both President Carter and Vance had stated explicitly that they would be guided by the 1972 Shanghai Communiqué. That document recognized Taiwan as a part of China and promised progressively closer ties between Peking and Washington.

"We appreciate that," said Hua.

The Chinese leader said he understood Vance considered his visit "an exploratory one."

"We also think it's good for the new administration to send someone here to explore China and to get to know the leaders of China," Hua said.

Vance's meeting with Hua followed four negotiating sessions with Foreign Minister Huang Hua and a discussion and dinner Wednesday with Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, one of China's three top leaders.

The secretary of state, in a dinner toast to his Chinese host, said the United States "looks forward to the movement forward of the relations of our two nations."

He said his talks had been candid, "useful and helpful." And he assured the Chinese that the Carter Administration is committed to the 1972 Shanghai Communiqué signed by President Nixon and Premier Chou En-lai which pledged the two countries to move closer together. "We believe this visit to Peking is an important step toward progress along that road," said Vance.

Teng in his toast told the American visitor: "Our view is that we should move forward to full normalization of relations."

Planning-Zoning Body Is Divided In Thinking On US-264 Proposals

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Two schools of thought surfaced during Wednesday night's discussion of a draft of the proposed US 264-NC 11 Corridor Study by the Joint City-County Planning and Zoning Commission.

Planning board members, who took no action on the bypass study, were divided in their recommendations for development of portions of the 264 corridor.

Staff Planner Skip Browder, in discussing the draft with the board, pointed out that the study recommended that "in order to further enhance residential growth and maintain the traffic-carrying capacity of the bypass, there should be a minimum amount of commercial frontage on the bypass."

The study recommended deletion of the Highway Commercial zoning on the north side of the bypass and west of the city limits, he related. Browder said that the area is undeveloped and a change would not result in non-conforming uses.

The section of land bounded by the Country Club area and Forbes Mill Run on the north, according to the study, in addition to the existing CH zoning to the east, the highway to the south and the Laughinghouse Drive area to the west should be zoned for residential development.

The study also recommends that the remaining CH zoning on the north side of the bypass within the city limits be extended to a depth of 800 feet to allow for the "internalization of any future commercial development," according to the planner.

During discussion of the corridor plan, board member J. T. Manning said that he did not like R-6 (residential) zoning on the highway. He contended that "We should try to see that residential...is not on the bypass."

Mayor Percy Cox also expressed his dislike for R-6 zoning along the highway and suggested that a service road could possibly help.

Commissioner Mrs. Ruth Trevathan disagreed with the argument against R-6 residential frontage and said that homes would not have to face the bypass but could be developed off the highway in an "internalized residential fashion.

Clarence Tugwell, also a board member, contended that the "bypass" section from Memorial Drive down to Charles Street is "absolutely the worst planning we've ever done." He said that the board should not continue the mistakes made on that section in planning for the remaining segment.

According to Browder, meetings on the proposed development of the bypass area with residents and developers produced several concerns, including the feeling that strip commercial development as it has occurred along the section mentioned by Tugwell must be curtailed, that established residential neighborhoods in the area must be protected, that traffic movement must be provided for, that continued residential development in the western bypass area should be encouraged, and that municipal services must be extended to the area before development can occur. The need for adequate buffering between conflicting land uses was also voiced, he said.

Support and opposition for the suggested residential and commercial development along the highway was also divided among the other board members.

In a matter directly related to the corridor plan, the board discussed a request by H. H. Stocks for rezoning some 26 acres on the north side of the bypass from Highway Commercial and RA-20 to CH and R-15. The item was automatically tabled for 30 days, as in the case of all rezoning requests, after a motion to waive the tabling period failed to carry.

Attorney Fred Mattox, representing the developers, said that an extension of the present 400 feet of Highway Commercial zoning on the north side to 800 feet is proposed. Residential zoning (R-6 and R-15) was proposed in the rezoning request for the rear segment of the property.

City Planner John Schofield told the board that if they recommended the Stocks request to the Council for approval, the staff would suggest that any further action on the corridor study be forgotten and strip development be continued. The Stocks request involves land that is proposed on the cor-

Campus Tour By Board Members

Six new members of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors, accompanied by board chairman William Johnson and vice-chairman Mrs. Howard Holderness, toured the East Carolina University campus and the new medical complex here yesterday.

ECU vice-chancellor Robert Holt said the members of the board visited the local campus as part of a tour of the 16 campuses that make up the University of North Carolina system, "to get acquainted with each campus."

Holt said the group visited UNC-Wilmington Monday and Fayetteville and Pembroke State Universities on Tuesday. Their visit to ECU yesterday morning was followed by a visit to the Elizabeth City State University campus yesterday afternoon.

The new board members on the tour included: F. P. Bodenheimer of Raleigh, Laurence A. Cobb of Charlotte, Charles Flack Jr. of Forest City, James E. Holmes of Winston-Salem, Robert Jones of Raleigh (former chairman of the Board of Trustees at ECU), William D. Mills of Swansboro.

Holt said the group met with administrators at the university, then toured the campus and the new hospital and medical complex before leaving for Elizabeth City.

ECU chancellor Leo Jenkins welcomed the group briefly before the orientation program got underway.

NURSING HOME THEFT

Saturday Jack G. Edwards of Raleigh took a General Electric portable color television set to his mother who is a patient in Greenville Nursing Villa here, recovering from a broken hip. When he and his wife went back to visit her Sunday the set was gone. It has now been determined that the set disappeared between 6:30 and 7 p. m. Saturday.

The family and the patient would be grateful to the persons believed to have taken the tv if they would return it to the nursing home, Edwards said. There will be no questions asked, he promised.

Midwifery Being Taught, Practiced Here

ECU News Bureau
A unique training experience is awaiting East Carolina University medical students when Josephine Hookway, a nurse-midwife on the clinical staff of the ECU Department of Obstetrics-Gynecology begins teaching later this month.

Mrs. Hookway sees her teaching role as giving medical students practical training and instruction in support of expectant mothers.

"I see myself as one who's helping to improve the outcome of pregnancy," she said.

Mrs. Hookway's objective is timely and necessary, since the infant mortality rate for eastern North Carolina was 21.3 per 1,000 lives births in 1975, as compared with 18.5 for the state and 16.1 for the nation.

The N. C. Board of Medical Examiners, the agency which licenses all Tarheel doctors, granted Mrs. Hookway approval in April, allowing her to carry out her current responsibilities under supervision of an obstetrician-gynecologist.

She explained that she can handle all aspects of normal pregnancy from the "pregnancy test through delivery." This means she can give instruction to other nurses and perform physicals, she said.

Because her duties are similar to those of a medical doctor, Mrs. Hookway finds it necessary to carry malpractice insurance. In addition to her teaching duties, she is doing normal deliveries at Pitt Memorial and working in two prenatal clinics in the Pitt County Health Department.

During June she performed 14 deliveries.

Mrs. Hookway's experiences and credential are impressive. She received her registered nursing education in her native Great Britain at St. Mary's College in Cardiff. She worked as a nurse midwife and instructor of medical students in England for five years.

In 1959, she and her husband emigrated from England to the Kinston area, where her husband took a job as a physicist with DuPont. After taking the registered nursing licensure examination, Mrs. Hookway went to work at Lenoir Memorial Hospital in the Labor and Delivery Department.

In 1972, she left Lenoir Memorial to teach nursing at Lenoir Community College. After four years as an instructor, she went to Booth Maternity Center in Philadelphia for a four-month course in her specialty and was duly certified as a nurse-midwife by the American College of Nurse-Midwives last year.

Mrs. Hookway says she has good rapport and working relationships with Pitt County obstetricians, who asked her to come to Greenville to help with the patient load.

"She is doing an excellent job. We don't know what we would do without her," said one. "She serves as a liaison person between the Health Department and us, and she takes care of patients prenatally and postnatally."

"I think there is a need for more nurse specialists to relieve overworked doctors," says Mrs. Hookway. "In Europe all normal hospital deliveries are performed by nurse midwives."

Practicing midwives are also more common in the Northeast and Midwest regions of the country than in the South, she said.

"Many people ask me if I believe in home deliveries," she said, "I'm not in favor of them. I think women should have babies in the hospital, which is the safest place."

why.

I am a man nearly 65. I'm retired and on Social Security. I own an old car and work a few hours to keep it running.

For the past two years, I've been trying to find a lady to go steady with, but I've given up. I can't afford it.

I've met a lot of women about my age, and they are wonderful company. But the trouble is, they all expect a man to take them out a couple of nights a week, wine them and dine them, go to drive-in movies, and for drives and lunches.

One of them said, "My company should be worth that much." Well, how about MY company?

I wouldn't expect a woman to share car expenses, but if we both have about the same incomes and know how to stretch a dollar, we could have a wonderful time if we shared expenses. Neither one of us is a prize package anymore. Why act like it?

PRINCE'S COCKTAIL RINGS

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I don't know what a new bike did for the kid who stole it from my son.

But I know what it is doing to me and I don't like it.

I find myself looking with suspicion into the eyes of every child who rides a brown Schwinn 10-speed and thinking if I stare at him long enough he will "break."

I find myself rehearsing speeches in the bathroom mirror that Pat O'Brien as an Irish priest gave to the prison inmates 20 years ago.

I accost perfect strangers in the supermarket and on buses and without so much as an introduction say, "My son had his bicycle stolen," and launch into the entire sordid story of how he got up at 4 a.m. every morning to deliver papers and how he now gets a hernia from carrying them on his back, etc.

But worst of all, I find myself guarding the new replacement bike like the contents of the Louvre. My husband compares it to the new baby anxiety complex where you get up five times a night to see if it is still where you left it.

At least three times a day, I check the bike to see if anyone has been tampering with the tires, stolen the light, lifted the gears or swapped the book rack or the basket.

If there is no moon, I bring it into the house and park it by the dining room table.

If it sleeps out in the garage, it is secured by three chains and two locks.

The other night as I was oiling the bicycle locks and testing them, my husband said, "Look, we've all been pretty busy and under a strain lately. Why don't we grab a weekend and go camping?"

"And who is going to bike-sit?" I asked.

"Maybe the Walthers could keep an eye on things," he offered.

"Hah! They don't even bring their bicycles in when it rains. Not on your sweet tintype."

"You can't go through life mothering a bicycle," said my husband patiently. "These things happen. You are beginning to regard that bike as something human!"

"Don't be ridiculous," I said. "To me a bicycle is just a couple of tires held together by bolts and nuts, rust and chrome."

"That's better," he said. "Let's go in the house and plan our trip."

As I heard my son drive the bike into the garage, I ran to the door and yelled out hysterically, "DON'T FORGET TO LOCK School District Line Solved?

The Pitt County School Board apparently has resolved the problems between city and county school districts in the Lake Ellsworth area by allowing children in that area to attend city schools for one year.

The county and the city boards have also adopted guidelines for determining when a student would be allowed to cross school lines.

It includes such situations as court requested reassignments; school employees whose children would travel with them, students needing special programs for the handicapped, certain hardship cases as recommended by a city-county committee and other special situations.

Vice Chairman of the board Thomas H. Patterson recognized that the district lines between the city and county school districts are likely to remain as they are.

And, he said, "I feel it is incumbent upon the board of education in this area that we resolve those lines so everyone will know where they are."

The line between city and county school districts were drawn many years ago generally through rural areas. Now Greenville has expanded into the county school zone and the lines are frequently through the middle of residential areas.

Lake Ellsworth's situation seemed to be the worst, however, and it appears that the Pitt School Board's action will alleviate this problem for this year. That is helpful.

An Equitable Distribution Is Needed

North Carolina apparently has a real problem due to something over which it has no control — an inability to obtain adequate supplies of natural gas.

Thomas Broughton, director of the Economic Development Division of the State Department of Commerce, says many industries have located elsewhere because of a moratorium on new natural gas connections.

If they are locating elsewhere, it means they are finding the natural gas they need there.

We should not rest in this state until we force the federal government to develop a program for equitable distribution of natural gas.

A Hidden Teacher Study

By Bill Noblitt

RALEIGH — Circumstances are combining to focus public attention on a new "crisis" in public education in North Carolina: proper training and certification of teachers, and an oversupply of teachers which "gluts" the market in some areas.

Next month, the State Board of Education expects to receive from the state's university system a thorough analysis of the teacher-training and supply situation at this time. The presentation will, according to those close to the situation, draw considerable public attention to the problem.

But the situation is not at all new. Top experts in education—both at the university level, and in the State Department of Public Instruction—have been sitting on the data for as long as six years without taking positive action.

Not Distributed

A report was printed in October, 1971, by the North Carolina Board of Higher Education entitled "Manpower Forecast: Teacher Education in North Carolina, 1971-1980." Across the top of that document which runs 57 pages and is complete with charts, graphs, and projections, is the notation: "For Discussion Purposes Only: Not To Be Distributed."

That report—now nearly six years old—foretold the conditions which are now creating alarm in educational circles.

The study determined that public school enrollment in the 1970s would decline, that too many college students were majoring in elementary and secondary education, that too few were preparing to teach in "special" education fields, that teacher salaries would likely go up sharply and that would cause a lot of certified people to re-enter the teaching field—in sum, it predicted (accurately, it turns out) the present condition.

"The Tar Heel state is faced with decreasing public school enrollment, tightening purse strings by legislators, and increasing numbers of college and university graduates. These three facts delineate, rather clearly, the problem confronting North Carolina," the university study suggested.

Why, observers may wonder, did such information escape major attention until the present "crisis" developed? Some think the answer can be found on Page Three of the report itself:

"National studies . . . indicate that educational planners at the state level have not paid attention to specific demands in academic fields. In the past, manpower studies have been used (chiefly) as a justification for planned expansion, rather than for estimating the kinds of programs that will be required by society."

BILL NOBLITT

Actual

The conclusion of that 1971 study is that state education officials and the university community had best get together to plan what kinds of teachers need to be trained; what alternatives need to be developed, and "the public higher education sector should avoid approval of any new academic programs which would add to the oversupply situation."

In the face of those findings, however, the State Board of Education now finds that "The supply of trained teachers is expected to exceed demand significantly if entry patterns in the profession continue." Along with that, officials are now finding that some teacher-college graduates are not well prepared and do poorly on certification tests, and that the certification tests themselves which in some cases have not been used at all, and in others carry no weight toward certification, fall short of establishing demanding standards for entering teachers.

At a recent meeting of the policy committee of the State Board of Education, Chairman David H. Bruton was asked by Evelyn Tyler to establish a board committee to get involved in a study of the teacher supply situation as the "new" report from the university system is awaited.

Bruton suggested—and the committee agreed—that the state board not limit itself to the supply situation alone, but to be prepared to dig into the whole question of quality teacher training and certification.

Taking The Long View

When Russell Long of Louisiana came to the Senate in December of 1948, he was not quite two months past the minimum age for membership in that body. He has now served for nearly 29 years. From the harvest of such experience, with luck one distills wisdom. Long demonstrated this last week.

The senator delivered himself of a statement on the President's proposals for welfare reform. He made three points. One had to do with the nature of mankind, a second with the nature of bureaucracy, the third with the nature of our republic. All of them made sense.

Long was not being cynical, in his comments upon the greatest evil in our present welfare system. It is the system's tendency to perpetuate dependency. The dependency that concerns him is not dependency of money only; it is also a state of mind.

The senator provided a couple of examples. A few years ago, Congress created two new programs of aid to the disabled. The programs have cost far more than they were predicted to cost. "Apparently," said Long, "in attempting to meet the needs of the totally disabled, we have provided an incentive for people who are not totally disabled to convince themselves that they are in order to receive benefits." As a consequence, many persons who could have become productive, self-reliant citizens have become totally dependent instead.

Second example: Fifteen years ago, the welfare bureaucracy settled upon the "declaration method" of determining eligibility for welfare benefits. Under this approach, the applicant is taken at his word. Virtually no verification is attempted of the accuracy of his statement. "This assumption of people's fundamental honesty may have added greatly to the dignity of applying for welfare benefits," said Long, "but it also added greatly to the number of people drawing welfare benefits since it proved an open invitation to fraud and misrepresentation."

But it is part of the nature of bureaucracy, Long pessimistically observed, to cling doggedly to methods that demonstrably do not work. Ideas, once embraced, are seldom relinquished. Presidents and secretaries come and go, but tenured bureaucrats stay on forever. The overwhelming majority of the personnel who put Mr. Carter's new plan together, said Long, "were here before President Carter came on the scene and they will be there after he is gone."

"While the President has insisted on some changes for the better, much of the plan and much of the thinking that went into it represent the views of those who have been with the department for many years under Democratic and Republican administrations. They are perhaps better led and a few years older — but not necessarily much wiser than they were when they served under previous presidents."

The years have taught Russell Long to be instinctively distrustful of cost estimates emerging from the bureaucracy. Medicaid has cost 50 times what Congress was told it would cost. The social services program enacted in 1962 has grown by a like amount. When the senator is advised that Mr. Carter's scheme will cost $6 billion more, "we had better be prepared for an actual cost

White House Mess

By JURATE KAZICKAS

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — As restaurants go, the decor isn't much. But the service is fast, the food is inexpensive but good and the address is the best in town: 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue.

The White House mess may be the most exclusive luncheon spot in Washington, a city where membership in a small club counts a great deal.

The man at the salad bar may be Vice President Walter F. Mondale. Or he may be a Cabinet member or a top presidential assistant. On a rare day, President Carter stops by for a bite to eat.

Picture it: red carpeting, fresh carnations, nautical paintings and a ship's clock. Lunch is served on white china embossed with the presidential seal. It's available to a select 180 persons and an occasional lucky guest.

The bite-sized home fries are cooked just right, crisped to a golden brown. The salad, topped with bacon bits, bean sprouts, egg, crouton and peppers, is nearly a meal in itself. But the tender lobster tails, even though succulent, are a bit on the cool side.

Mom might have sold her soul to lay claim to the apple pie, topped with vanilla ice cream so rich it has a sheen like meringue.

A little chilled white wine with the meal would make it perfect, but Carter has ordered everything stronger than iced tea off the menu.

In other days, it was different. Richard Nixon permitted beer and Margaritas at least once a week, part of a Thursday Mexican special. LBJ went all the way with daily cocktails.

The White House notes with pride that it has increased the mess membership from 150 to include more aides. The list of honorary members has been trimmed to 30 or so.

These days, the list includes Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur Burns; Ken Curtis of the Democratic National Com-

THE INSIDE REPORT

An Israeli Raid Possible

By ROWLAND EVANS

and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The avoidance of collision with President Carter over Israel's latest affront on new West Bank settlements may encourage Prime Minister Menachem Begin to escalate his game of "chicken" with a daring raid into southern Lebanon.

Diplomatic experts give odds of just under 50-50 for a swift Israeli move across the border against PLO concentrations, intended to destroy as many guerrillas and installations as possible, also would serve some less obvious purposes for Begin. It would heighten PLO hatred of Israel and weaken the PLO's moderates, including Yasser Arafat, who are believed ready to go along with the bases.

The purpose of such a raid: undermining the U.S. effort to persuade the PLO to accept Israel as a permanent state under terms of United Nations Resolution 242. If Begin sabotaged U.S. policy so frontally, Jimmy Carter would face his toughest choice between swerving or accepting the political consequence of a painful head-on collision with Israel.

An Israeli assault across the border against PLO concentrations, intended to destroy as many guerrillas and installations as possible, also would serve some less obvious purposes for Begin. It would heighten PLO hatred of Israel and weaken the PLO's moderates, including Yasser Arafat, who are believed ready to go along with the U.S. plan.

An incursion of the type successfully employed on earlier occasions against the PLO in both Lebanon and Jordan would follow three successive Israeli affronts to the Carter peace plan:

First, Begin's "legalization" of three Jewish settlements on the Palestinian West Bank; second, a major tightening of Israel's occupation policies over 1 million arabs in the West Bank and Gaza; now under Israeli military control; third, the government's approval last week of three new Jewish settlements.

Besides hardening PLO resistance to Israel as a state, each of those steps was calculated to send Mr. Carter this warning: do not keep trying to bring the PLO into the center of peace efforts.

Diplomats here with access to Israeli thinking say nothing has so infuriated Begin as the "unfriendly" moves of Mr. Carter in trying to give international credibility and respectability to the PLO. Thus, each time the U.S. steps up its efforts to convert the PLO from outsider to insider — as a trusted party to Mideast negotiations — Begin counters with a new move against the Carter peace plan.

This game of chicken appears to be working to Israel's advantage. Every time he swerves to avoid the collision, Jimmy Carter looks weak and vacillating. On July 28, the President said he had told Begin "very strongly" of his "deep concern" that no new settlements be established. Yet, the administration's response to three new settlements was couched in flabby diplomatic language and was delivered not by the White House but by State Department spokesman Hodding Carter Jr.

Given the lack of U.S. countermeasures against Begin's bold rebuffs of Mr. Carter, Begin might well be tempted to cross the Lebanese border. The poorly organized PLO irregulars numbering between 3,000 and 5,000 and scattered over the 20 miles or so between the border and the Litani River, would have no chance against the overwhelming Israeli military force.

MAKE THE BEST OUT OF BLOTS

The English man of letters, John Ruskin, once inadvertently dropped some ink on a piece of fine linen cloth. Apparently the cloth was ruined, but Ruskin restored it by making the ink blot the center of an attractive and artistic design.

Here is a dramatic example of making the best out of a bad situation. At the time it happened, the crucifixion of Jesus seemed to be an unmitigated calamity. Yet this blot on the world's life was transformed into something of the most momentous spiritual consequences.

Every one of us has had some blot on his happiness, which it seemed could be nothing but a permanent source of grief, yet very often the blots have become the center of a design which in the end brought contentment, if not happiness. The resolute souls are those who will not accept blots as blots, but make the unhappy circumstances the basis of a new start in life.

Mostly Inflation Adjustment

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Automobiles today are a better buy than they were 15 years ago, said the General Motors executive a few weeks before his company announced it would raise 1978 prices an average of 5.7 per cent.

Robert Lund, vice president, and general manager of its Chevrolet division, explained that if you adjusted for inflation, and included the equipment and safety-emission items on today's cars, the 1962 Impala would cost $6,000.

But, he continued, you can obtain its 1977 equivalent for just 65 cents over $4,900, and that he said represents an improvement in a personal budgetary sense of nearly $1,100.

The results of a cost study, said GM, seem to dispel the myth that they don't build 'em the way they used to. But perhaps you should judge.

Do you think that "thin shell seat design for increased interior space" represents an improvement, measured in dollars and cents, over the "conventional frame construction" seat of the 1962 car?

Or that "1-piece floor carpet extends fully under front seat" is an improvement on "separate front & rear carpets — minimal coverage under front seat" on the 1962 model?

In their calculations, the GM people included these items in an estimated $546 worth of "added value-equipment" on the 1977, four-door Impala.

Taken separately, the items might seem trivial, but the GM people list more than a score of them, and they do add up. And some of the changes represent obvious basic improvements, rather than cosmetic or convenience changes.

The "halo roof construction," for example, refers to an improved method of designing and manufacturing that results in a sturdier product, so named because in assembly the reinforced rim gives a halo effect.

Other substantial improvements are included, such as automatic versus manual transmission, coolant recovery system versus none at all, more powerful ignition system, better tires, power steering, disc brakes and more.

Interspersed, however, are those other items, including an ash tray lamp, folding front seat center armrest, flow through ventilation and similar items that some people might take for granted.

The 1977 model is also described as having an "over-all roominess index" superior to the 1962 edition, but apparently not in one dimension where it counts a lot, the hips. That dimension — described as space to sit between doors — shrank on the 1977 model by 8.5 square inches in front, 8.1 in the rear.

Safety and emission standards have added $537 in additional hardware to the 1977 car, the GM spokesman said, and "economics and others," which represents part of the increased costs of labor, materials and the like, have added another $1,275.

To the total of three items — safety-emission $537, added value-equipment $546, economics and others $1,275 — you add the 1962 base price of $2,529, plus $1,100 GM says it has absorbed, to reach close to the $6,000 figure.

But that isn't the entire story. A peculiarity of automobile retailing is that you pay for the transportation costs, even though it is quite logical to assume the car dealer might not be able to sell you a car if it wasn't shipped to him.

These transportation costs are made even more peculiar by the use of a formula to ascertain how much you should pay. It doesn't matter

Bergland For Leaf Supports

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal tobacco farm price-support program should be improved and not abandoned, despite concerns over the health hazards of smoking, U.S. Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said Wednesday.

Tobacco "provides a major source of income for about 600,000 farm families in 16 states," many of whom depend on it as their only cash crop, Bergland said.

He said tobacco also was worth $1.4 billion as a U.S. export item in 1976 and provided about $6.1 billion in federal, state and local excise taxes.

Bergland has named P.R. "Bobby" Smith to head a task force aimed at recommending improvements in the price-support program.

Critics of the program contend it is inconsistent for the USDA to provide price support benefits to tobacco farmers while other federal agencies warn about the health hazards of smoking.

Bergland said the tobacco program "is designed to assist producers to receive adequate prices and does not encourage the use of tobacco products by the consuming public."

He added that "a modest, modernized program to maintain economic stability for tobacco producers and tobacco-growing areas and to continue earning U.S. dollars abroad from this source is in the best interest of the country."

$126.81 Day At Farmville

FARMVILLE — Demand by all buying companies for good usable grades of tobacco continues strong on the Farmville Tobacco Markets, Louis Williams, Sales Supervisor of the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade says.

Volume of quality grades decreased yesterday, with more less-desirable tobacco appearing on the floors than on any day this week. Primings accounted for only a small part of total sales. Tobacco from the middle and upper part of the stalk continues to increase in volume. Top practical price was $1.43 a pound. Stabilization receipts were 2.96 per cent of gross sales.

The market sold 430,166 pounds for $545,500, for an average of $126.81, more than $11 higher than the average of the same sales day last year. To date, the market has sold 9,538,741 for $10,439,457 for a season's average of $109.44, Williams said.

force as a magnet for Israeli intervention frightens both Lebanon and Syria. Those two countries, along with Egypt and Saudi Arabia, are seeking to transfer the PLO guerrillas northward, far out of southern Lebanon — thereby removing the magnet.

Despite repeated PLO pledges and months of work, the PLO irregulars have not yet been separated from the Christian villages that dominate southern Lebanon. One reason: aided by Israeli artillery and supplied with Israeli rifles and supplies, the Christians have been no more willing to break off the war than the PLO.

Nevertheless, the PLO force will finally be removed, perhaps within two months, making Israeli intervention across the border more difficult to justify politically. But today, conditions are ideal for Israel: a sudden sweep into PLO areas to protect the Christians, a quick return to Israel, a massive display to the world press of grateful Lebanese villagers giving flowers to Israeli soldiers.

Impossible? Far from it, in the opinion of this government's closest students of Begin and his bold, activist, masterful policies. To Menahem Begin, a genuine U.S.-PLO rapprochement holds deadly peril for Israel. The major question today is how far he will go in risking collision with Washington to guard against that peril.

if the car is shipped from Michigan, California or New York — the buyer pays the same freight.

That is, a Los Angeles purchaser of the 1977 Impala pays $401 in transportation charges no matter if the car is assembled in Michigan or in California, the GM people explained. A Chicagoan pays $101, a Baltimore resident $193.

These costs also have risen, of course, but by how much couldn't be determined immediately because the GM records were buried in the dusty file vault. Be assured, however, that the odds are very high that they increased.

And then, of course, there are those new increases coming up, although in fairness it should be noted that a 5.7 per cent increase is little more than an adjustment for inflation, to say nothing of what GM claims is better quality.

WCU Chancellor H. F. Robinson told the graduating class a university education should prepare students to meet the professional requirements in their chosen fields. "If you fail," he said, "then it is a reflection upon the institution."

Unlike the days when Alan Greenspan, President Ford's economic adviser, defied the rules to sneak television personality Barbara Walters in for lunch, reporters now can be invited to sample the presidential cuisine. Eavesdropping and picture-taking are frowned upon.

All this democratizing of the mess, which is operated by the U.S. Navy, has not impressed William Gulley, director of White House Military Affairs. Gulley, on the staff since 1966, thinks the changes are self-defeating.

"The purpose of the mess was to have a place where senior staff members could go so they didn't have to spend too much time away from their desks and could conduct business with each other," he said. He added that the mess was opened under President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who didn't want his men all over town for two-hour lunches.

"Now they're making a 'goodie' out of it. It's become a prestige thing to belong," said Gulley. "And opening it to the press has taken all its privacy away."

Parolee Is Sentenced For Assault Charges

District Court Judge Robert Wheeler yesterday found Anthony Waller of Winterville guilty on two counts of assault in connection with a July 27 incident involving a state Probation Officer and a Winterville policeman.

Wheeler gave Waller a 12-month sentence after finding him guilty of assaulting probation officer W. R. Bonar and G. W. Williams, a Winterville police officer.

Waller appealed the conviction to Superior Court.

The Pitt County Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People complained last week that Waller had been mistreated by Bonar, Williams and several Greenville police officers.

Officers testified yesterday that Bonar and Williams took Waller into custody for a probation violation and that Waller assaulted both officers while enroute to the Pitt County Jail in Greenville.

The officers testified that mace was used to subdue Waller and that he was handcuffed following the attack on the two officers.

A hearing is scheduled for September 6 in Pitt County Superior Court on the probation violation charge.

Waller was on probation following a conviction in Superior Court on June 8 on breaking and entering charges.

Arrested In Local Thefts

Greenville Police yesterday charged David Jackson Carter, 20 of Hillcrest Trailer Pk. on five counts of larceny in connection with a series of plant and lawn furniture thefts.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the Police Department has cleared 19 different cases and returned property taken in them as a result of the investigation.

According to the chief, Carter was charged with the July 22 theft of $31 worth of plants from 101 South Library St., the August 9 theft of $200 worth of plants from 802 River Dr. and $110 worth of plants and furniture from 304 South Summit St. The August 15 theft of $150 worth of chairs from 2704 Shawnee Pl., and the August 21 theft of a $15 plant stand from 1901 East Fourth St.

of up to $60 billion or even $120 billion."

Given the prospect of massive fraud, and given the prospect of enormous cost overruns, Long offers a thoughtful suggestion: He proposes that the Carter program "be tested on a pilot basis for a few years in order to see whether it should be implemented throughout the United States." Let the states experiment! This is the essence of our grand plan of federalism. The President's recommendations for tax relief could not be applied selectively, but nothing in the Constitution would inhibit experiments with job programs, work incentives, and the like.

"Before we move to a massive change in our welfare system," Long remarks, "we must be sure that what we are doing represents a true improvement." Not much can be done about the nature of bureaucrats, and even less can be done about the nature of mankind, but if we turn to the nature of federalism, perhaps we can avoid making bad matters worse. That's the Long view. Congress would do well to take it.

Indian Community Is Moving

EARLY TO RISE — Phyllis Diller ponders the wisdom of accepting the job as guest disc jockey on a Los Angeles radio station. After reporting to work at 5 a.m. for the 6-to-9 a.m. show, Phyllis is filling in with Vikke Carr, Mickey Rooney and Mayor Tom Bradley, while regular Dick Whittinghill is on vacation. (AP Laserphoto)

By MIKE HENDRICKS
Associated Press Writer

MOSSLAKE, N.Y. (AP) — A band of Indians that seized hundreds of acres of lush forest land in the Adirondacks is moving its community nail by nail after surviving three winters in handmade cabins and the hostility of its white neighbors.

The Indians — about 30 families of the Mohawk tribe — are trying to be self-sufficient and live off the land. They lived in the cabins reportedly without electricity or plumbing.

"What brings us here is that we don't see any healthy future for our children if they remain in the reservation and in the urban areas. There are great dangers out there," said the group's spokesman, Kakwirakeron, a former Brooklyn ironworker. "Our culture is on the verge of extinction and we must look seven generations ahead."

Now, after long negotiations with the state, the Mohawks have agreed to relocate in Clinton County, about 100 miles to the northeast. They will be settling on an estimated 2,400 acres of public land with fishing and hunting rights on additional land.

Under terms of the agreement with the state, the Indians will rent farming, fishing and camping rights by establishing a model Indian village for public viewing.

But a spokesman for the group said they still are not giving up their original claim to almost 12.5 million acres of land in northern New York and Vermont.

Mohawk Chief Joseph Brant sold the land to New York State in 1797 for $1,000. The Indians claim the purchase violated a 1794 treaty that prohibited sale of the land.

They are part of the growing movement among Indians to force the government to honor treaties with their forefathers.

In May 1974, the Mohawks took over an abandoned girls' camp owned by the state near here to push recognition for their claim.

Tensions ran high a few months after the Mohawks occupied the abandoned campground. Two whites were wounded by gunfire as they drove past the encampment. The Indians claimed they had been fired on first and refused to allow investigators onto their property.

Since then, they have been living here in virtual seclusion. No white man is allowed on the settlement.

The Mohawks have assumed traditional Indian names although their dress consists mainly of T-shirts and jeans. They grow their own food and fish and hunt. Many gave up good jobs and homes, according to Kakwirakeron.

PLANS MOVE — Man known only by the Indian name Kakwirakeron stands in front of a barn, one of some 30 buildings the Mohawks will dismantle to move their community. (AP Laserphoto)

Some Violence In Coal Fields

By The Associated Press

Violence was reported as dissident miners defied leaders of the United Mine Workers and refused to end their wildcat strike.

State police said shots were fired Wednesday night when two rival UMW groups gathered in the Cabin Creek area of Kanawha County in West Virginia. No injuries were reported and police said the groups dispersed shortly after the incident.

About 10 shots reportedly came from the direction of about 40 miners who said they would not return to work as directed in an order issued Monday by the union's International Executive Board.

UMW president Arnold Miller "has sent his thugs up here," said the miners. The dissidents, believed to be from the union's Charleston-based District 17, referred to the second group, which consisted of about 100 men.

Members of the larger group said they were there "to make sure the pickets don't stop the men from going back to work."

Earlier Wednesday, Miller had met with members of the union's organizing department and made plans to insure that pickets did not keep miners in the Cabin Creek area from their work.

The groups remained about 75 yards apart. State police arrived about 30 minutes after the shots were fired.

"It's brother against brother," said Talmadge Dean, of Ellsworth, Pa., a member of the larger group. "We were asked to come down here by our local union president. But we can see that District 17 isn't ready to get back to work."

Dean said about 20 of the miners in the group were from other states.

Meanwhile, roving pickets moved back into UMW District 30 in eastern Kentucky on Wednesday, closing mines that had opened the day before.

District President Robert Carter said the wildcat strike appeared to have slipped back into high gear after the brief interruption. "It's pretty widespread. I don't reckon there's anything working," Carter said.

Zeppo Says Uninvited

CATHEDRAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — Zeppo Marx says he learned of the death of his brother Groucho on television and was snubbed from the family's memorial service.

"I turned on the TV the next day and there it was, he was gone," said Zeppo, 76, the youngest and only survivor of the five brothers.

He said he was not invited to a gathering Sunday at the home of Groucho's son, Arthur, because he backed long-time Groucho companion, Erin Fleming, in a recent court battle.

Zeppo spoke at a news conference Tuesday. Groucho died Friday.

"The thing is I stood up for this girl Fleming," said Zeppo, who testified at a Los Angeles Superior Court hearing which ultimately removed Miss Fleming as the aging comedian's guardian.

Pesticide Scarcity Followed By Insect Plague

Tax Reforms Expected To Affect Investors

Interstate Securities Corp.
Tax reform proposals to be sent to Congress this fall are expected to include several items which will affect every investor and businessman. These include changes in tax treatment of capital gains and losses and elimination of double taxation of dividends. Given the fact that nothing is certain until it has passed Congress, it seems likely that what is left of the capital gains preference will be eliminated. Currently, the first $50,000 of net long term capital gains is taxed at 25%. The excess over $50,000 is one-half the ordinary tax rate with a ceiling of 35%. The administration apparently wants the capital gains preference eliminated entirely, preferring to treat capital gains as ordinary income and taxing at regular rates.

Also expected to be included in the plan is a change in tax treatment of capital losses. Presently, capital losses from stocks may offset up to $2,000 of ordinary income with the remaining loss carried forward. The $2,000 limit is expected to be increased.

The holding period for determining whether taxation is at capital gains rates or ordinary rates was changed by the tax reform act of 1976. Last year, stocks held for more than six months qualified for long term treatment. Beginning with taxable year 1977, the holding period became more than nine months and next year it will be more than one year. The year in which a stock is actually sold determines which holding period applies.

Changes in capital gains treatment, if passed by Congress, certainly would not encourage capital formation, and they would be especially negative for a group like the forest products industry. Since timber profits are now considered capital gains, they are taxed at rates below the statutory corporate rate. If the capital gains treatment were changed, a great deal of money which in the past was used in reforestation projects would in the future be paid as taxes. Another result of elimination of the capital gains preference would be the drying up of venture capital. The prospect of capital gains taxed as ordinary income combined with a relatively low limit on annual deductible losses would provide no incentive for investment.

Elimination of double taxation on dividends should be more encouraging to capital formation. As it now stands, dividends are paid out of after tax corporate income. Then the shareholder pays a tax on it as well. Rather than doing it the easy way—allowing companies to deduct dividends as a pre-tax expense—the administration appears to be favoring a complex formula. Simplifying as much as possible, it might work like this: You would get a credit on your taxes for tax paid by the corporation on the dividend you received. You would report the dividend and the credit as income, compute the tax, and then deduct the credit from the tax due.

The effect of this type of change in the law would depend on whether the credit was determined by the statutory corporate tax rate of 48% or the corporation's effective tax rate, which is sometimes lower. Capital intensive companies have low effective tax rates because of investment tax credits. If the final law were based on the effective corporate tax rate, which the administration apparently now favors, shareholder tax credits would be small where effective corporate rates are low. Assuming investors sought those dividends with the highest credits from those companies paying higher paying higher tax rates, capital would be flowing to the companies which need it the least rather than those capital intensive industries. Use of a uniform credit rate rather than a corporation's effective tax rate would ease these imbalances.

There are many details in the administration's tax proposals yet to be worked out and the entire package is not likely to go through Congress unscathed. In recent years, however, Congress has not put capital formation and savings ahead of equalization of incomes.

By The Associated Press
An infestation of insects, aggravated by a scarcity of pesticides, has caused what one South Carolina agricultural official says "may be the most serious crisis our agriculture has faced since the boll weevil hit King Cotton."

Luther P. Anderson, dean of Clemson University's College of Agricultural Sciences, made that assessment as he examined the damage Wednesday with a team of agricultural leaders.

Accompanying Anderson on the tour of farms in Richland, Sumter and Florence Counties was state Agriculture Commissioner G. Bryan Patrick Jr., South Carolina Farm Bureau President Harry Bell and Sam Fluker of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) regional office in Atlanta.

Calling the insect situation "very critical," Richland County agent Bill Riser said armyworms, sorghum webworms, corn earworms and other pests have caused an estimated $500,000 in damages in his county alone.

Sumter County cotton farmer W. R. McLeod said Wednesday although he has been spraying regularly, insect damage has reduced his harvest to 150 to 200 pounds per acre — far below the 600 pounds per acre he says he needs to break even.

McLeod said he may be able to gross $100 off each acre, after spending some $350 per acre on his crop.

Sumter County agent Dick Tillman said, "We have field after field...this shape."

Clemson officials said the problem is plaguing the entire Southeast, but added no definite cause for the heavy infestation has been established.

Among the theories they are considering are that:
—The dry weather kept down disease forms which normally help control pests.

—The severe winter killed beneficial insects, without killing many pests that spend the winter deep in the ground.

—The extreme drought delayed migration of moths that produce armyworms.

Clemson entomologists said considering the numbers and range of pests in the fields, the situation this year is the worst they can remember. Agricultural officials said the damage is being compounded by a scarcity of pesticides. Chemicals needed to control insects have either been exhausted through demand or taken off the market by the EPA, they said.

With the possibility looming that 1978 may see a repeat of this year's insect problems, agricultural officials are working with the EPA to try to get "some kind of clearances on more chemicals," a Clemson spokesman said.

Riser said many farmers, faced with paying about $6 per acre to apply the chemicals, are instead choosing to accept total losses.

Clemson officials recommended that farmers who can still salvage their crops keep a close check on their fields and spray during the first few days after eggs hatch.

Card of Thanks

Words cannot express my appreciation for the help and kindness of the hospital staff and my doctors during a recent illness. Suspicious Of 'Service'

DURHAM, N.C. (AP)—Public service advertising campaigns often contain subtle political messages slanted toward government and big business, a Duke University researcher says.

Dr. David L. Paletz has studied public service advertising (PSAs) for several years, and has published his findings in a book, "Politics in Public Service Advertising on Television."

He is especially critical of the Keep America Beautiful campaign, funded by soft drink bottlers, brewers and beverage container manufacturers.

"Keep America Beautiful has actively opposed legislation to require the use of returnable beer and soft drink containers," Paletz says. "Its PSAs equate fighting pollution with anti-litter and community cleanup projects, rather than with prohibitions on disposable bottles and cans."

He also cites a campaign that depicts the American economic system, which was funded in part by a $239,000 grant from the U.S. Commerce Department, and an additional $1.25 million from private industry.

The public service ads, which are aired free of charge on television stations, have three main effects when viewed by Americans, he concluded.

The spots give the impression that government and nonprofit agencies are efficient and deserve public support. He says the ads also discourage political activity and give an illusion of a harmonious and cooperative society.

The researcher says about 40 per cent of the PSAs originate with the Advertising Council, a business-funded operation that he says protects its own interests.

More Advisory Boards Ended By The Carter Administration

By MICHAEL AARON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Underwater Sound Advisory Board is going under.

So is the Board of Tea Experts, the Advisory Commission on Hog Cholera Eradication and the Lyndon B. Johnson National Grasslands Advisory Board.

The Carter Administration, saying it hasn't been getting "much of a bang for the buck it was spending," abolished these and 172 other government advisory boards Wednesday.

In some cases, administration spokesman Harrison Wellford said, the panels haven't been bothering to meet or issue reports.

The General Accounting Office said in April that 26 per cent of the government's advisory boards didn't meet in 1975, while 59 per cent issued no reports on what they did, if anything.

Wednesday's move, along with the elimination of 304 other boards in May, will save taxpayers $15 million, the administration says.

The advisory boards cost the public an average of $56,000 this year in salary, staff support and printing plus travel and daily allowances for committee members.

Federal law allows persons serving on an advisory board to draw up to $184 a day. While some agencies and departments generally do not pay members, one, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, pays an average of $100 for a day's service.

Officials said about 5,000 persons on the boards were notified Tuesday and Wednesday that the panels on which they serve are being eliminated.

President Carter, in a memo to agency and department heads Wednesday, alerted them to "continue to give your personal attention to assuring that committees are terminated when no longer necessary."

Of the 480 committees being abolished, 261 are being killed off outright while the rest will be consolidated into 78 new panels. At HEW alone, 100 committees are being scrapped. But another 252 still will be around.

The Agriculture Department is losing 78 panels, including the one concerned with eradicating hog cholera. The department is left with 32 advisory committees.

In all, another 709 boards will remain in business after the cuts are made. The number of advisory committees has been shrinking since 1975, when there were 1,500 such bodies.

Again Voted Bar Women

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — With a warning to President Carter to mind his own "damn business," the Veterans of Foreign Wars has refused to for the eighth consecutive year to admit military women as members.

The vote was overwhelming despite the approval of a by-laws amendment by VFW leaders and urging for women's admission from the federal government. In fact, the federal push may have influenced some votes against women.

"The threat has aroused all of us," said former VFW Commander-in-chief James VanZandt. "And we're saying to the President, 'You mind your own damn business and we'll conduct the affairs of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.'"

"I wouldn't mind letting them in, but we're not going to be forced into it," said Floyd Fowler of the Michigan delegation. "We don't want them forced down our throats."

The vote was taken at the organization's 78th national convention.

This was the first year the organization's national membership had rallied behind the issue.

PRESLEY'S DOCTOR — Elvis Presley's personal physician, Dr. George C. Nichopoulos, said Wednesday the singer abused drugs, but accidentally, not on purpose. The doctor treated Elvis for 11 years and became a close friend. He said in an interview that medicines were kept from Presley because he often accidentally took too many sleeping pills when he would wake up at night. (AP Laserphoto)

Red Skelton Today Shuns Friends, Associates

By PATRICK CONNOLLY
Associated Press Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — Red Skelton, who brought Freddie the Freeloader and Clem Kadiddlehopper into the homes of millions, travels alone these days, shunning associates he claims used him and trusting only "God, my wife and myself."

The rubber-faced funnyman says those old business associates have profited while he has lost $6 million in bad business deals over the years. Fans who spot him on the street win quick waves, giggling greetings and coy one-liners. But off-stage, Skelton speaks harshly of those associates, television, and his public.

"I trust God, my wife and myself," Skelton declared in an interview this week. "People take kindness for weakness, and generosity has the form of a sucker." Skelton, 64, left television after 20 years. And although he's seen less these days, he still plays to sell-out audiences. He said he has an engagement every three days through next year. "I don't have anybody around me. When someone makes a mistake now, it's either my wife, myself or my granddaughter, Sabrina. She's only 7," Skelton wisecracked, "so she can't hurt me too much."

He was divorced from his first wife, Georgia, known as "Little Red," in 1973. She has since died. His only son died 19 years ago of leukemia at the age of 9. His daughter, Valentina, 30, lives in California with her husband and Sabrina. Skelton writes daily love letters to his new wife, Lothian, 36. "When I write my autobiography, they'll see a love story like they never knew before."

Love doesn't come easy to comedians, he said. "If you tell a woman she is beautiful, she thinks it's part of the routine and waits for a joke," he said. "You sense it right away, so you don't follow through. I could never walk up to anyone and be rejected in any way, because if I was, then inside I die."

The late Groucho Marx was a respected friend. "He was the first man to tear down the dignity of man and then let it stand," Skelton said.

Skelton, at 6-feet-3 and 196 pounds, says he is in good health, but "the only exercise I get is acting as pallbearer for my friends who exercise a lot."

"I don't let it bother me. I don't know enough about life to worry about death."

Skelton criticized the medium that made him famous.

"Television gets worse every year — and it's 10 years ahead of its time," he said. "If they can create fear with violence, you'll stay home and watch the commercials and television will sell more products."

Chimney Sweeps Again Seen On Boston Streets

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer

WELLESLEY, Mass. (AP) — They might have stepped out of the novels of Charles Dickens — merry men in top hats and tails who prance atop suburban chimney pots.

These fellows are chimney sweeps. Their smudge-faced smiles and wire bristle-brooms are visions from a bygone century. The high price of oil is bringing them back.

Among the enterprisers moving into this old craft is Rick Osburn, 24, a student at Harvard Business School. He has combined the whimsy of Olde English garb with this necessary but filthy housekeeping chore to build a brisk business in the suburbs west of Boston.

In these well-off towns, the chimney sweeps pull up for work in a battered station wagon. Out they step in glorious black top hats, black vests, black jerseys and long black tails. And around their broad grins, their faces, too, are soot-smudged black.

"People see us in these outfits and they come running out with cameras," Osburn says.

One of the sweeps, Michael Lawrence, has cleaned about 300 chimneys since the company began work in February. Summer is a good time for chimney scrubbing.

"You have to be an electrician, mechanic, steeplejack, gymnast and Hercules," Lawrence said.

While the customers stare, he lays heavy cloths on the floor in front of their fireplace. Then he dons a facemask and goes at the chimney with a wire bristle broom.

Using flexible steel rods for a handle, he pushes the broom to the top of the chimney. Clouds of soot and creosote billow down and are sucked up by a vacuum cleaner. Then with his hands and a heavy brush, Lawrence scrubs everything he can reach.

Sometimes he hits an obstruction and has to climb onto the roof and scamper up the chimney. Perched there, he pushes brooms down through the opening.

Osburn and Lawrence lecture clients on the dangers of chimney fires. These occur when the built-up creosote ignites. Flames shoot 10 feet above the roof. Such fires can damage the chimney and even burn down the house.

The firm, called Master Chimney Sweepers, charges $40 to clean one fireplace and flue. It began as a way for Osburn to work his way through business school, but has grown so fast that he says he may keep it going after graduation.

So far, Osburn employs three sweeps and hopes to hire two more. His company cleans chimneys in 12 suburban towns.

Sex School Operation Charged To Handy Man

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Wayne Thomas Heacock is a neighborhood Pied Piper, adored by all the children, approved of by their parents. Today, the 34-year-old handyman is charged with criminal sexual conduct. Investigators believe that for 20 years he ran a "sex school" for children that "graduated" almost 200 youngsters and awarded prizes for performance.

Heacock is in the Oakland County jail under $125,000 bond. He pleaded innocent at his district court arraignment Wednesday on a five-count charge of first-degree criminal sexual conduct with a 9-year-old boy. Heacock requested a court-appointed attorney.

Describing the case as "probably the largest child molesting incident in the history of this office," Oakland County Prosecutor L. Brooks Patterson said handwritten diaries found in Heacock's home detailed sexual encounters with youngsters, mainly boys. The diaries dated back to 1957.

The prosecutor said no evidence has linked Heacock to the recent sex murders of several children in Oakland County, but the special task force investigating the murders would examine material seized at Heacock's home.

Patterson said investigators confiscated tape recordings, movies and photographs. Heacock also surrendered at least two boxes of documents in addition to the diaries, Patterson said.

He said the diaries and other documents mentioned the operation of a secret group called "The IC Club," in which youngsters were invited to participate in sexual acts.

It was run like a school, Patterson said, with prospective students answering a 40-question entrance exam and promising to be Heacock's best friend and never to tell anyone about the club's activities.

Patterson said there were apparent progressions up the ladder similar to grades in school, with pupils advancing from one sexual act to another.

When a youngster accumulated a certain number of points, he was given a prize, which in one case was a 10-speed bicycle, the prosecutor said.

The investigation was launched after a girlfriend of a boarder in Heacock's home stumbled onto one of the diaries.

People in Heacock's working-class neighborhood said they don't believe the charges.

"I've known him for almost four years," said Floyd Young, a neighbor. "I just don't believe it. I know Tom. I know what he stands for. This is bound to be false."

INDUSTRIALIST DIES

WOOSTER, Ohio (AP) — James R. Caldwell, who invented the first rubber dustpan during the depression and then went on to build a national rubber housewares business, died Wednesday in Boca Raton, Fla. He was 80.

Reconsider Rate Boost

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A rate hike granted in June to Carolina Power & Light Co. is being reconsidered by a new majority on the state Utilities Commission.

The 11 per cent rate increase was granted following a company request for a 15 per cent hike to cover what it called costs of a nuclear unit at Southport. The approved raise amounts to $44 million a year.

The commission held hearings in July on reopening the case at the request of the public staff.

Commission chairman Robert K. Koger said Wednesday the panel should reach a decision on whether to revoke the rate hike within 10 days. Koger is one of five members of the seven-member panel who have been appointed by Gov. Jim Hunt since the CP&L case was heard.

The two holdovers are Tenney Deane and Ben E. Roney Jr.

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C.—Thursday, August 25, 1977

Koger said the reconsideration of the CP&L case could be the commission's first step to playing what he said would be a "tougher" and "more analytical" role in regulating the state's power, natural gas and telephone companies. "We're going to want to closely scrutinize all the actions of the utilities, think we're going to restore the credibility commission," he said.

Boston Tries Another Tack on Rape Cases

By KATE MCMAHON
Written for UPI

BOSTON (UPI) — "Every woman is a potential rape victim."

This is the primary theme of the Boston Police "Stop Rape" program which reflects the department's growing concern over the increase of reported rapes.

According to FBI figures, rape is the fastest growing violent crime in America, with one occurring every 10.3 minutes. Reports of rape have more than doubled over the last decade.

There were more than 56,000 reported rapes in 1975. However, the FBI estimates that only one of every 10 rapes are reported to police.

Rape has the lowest conviction rate. Of 453 rapes reported in Boston in 1975, 171 persons were charged. Only seven of them are found guilty.

In Boston's effort to deal with the problem, the police have established a Rape Investigation Unit and Boston's Suffolk County District Attorney's office is assigning female prosecutors to rape cases involving children and younger girls, exemplifying a heightened sensitivity to the victim's plight.

"We find that the females have better rapport and communication with them, which makes it easier," said a spokesman for the district attorney's office.

Indifferent and unsympathetic treatment by police officers and the district attorney is a major complaint of rape victims and serves as a deterrent in their follow-up with complaint and prosecution.

Rape most often occurs in the streets and in the home. Rapes are more frequent in low crime areas, during the summer months and between 2 a.m. and 4 a.m., police say. The special Rape Investigation Unit was formed in 1974 after a legislative mandate required them to improve their services.

Sgt. Charles Dreary, the unit's coordinator, said they have 150 trained officers, including all 26 women on the force, acquainted with crisis theory and possible reactions of rape victims.

"Our number one concern is for the safety and the welfare of the victim, but if a crime has been committed it is our responsibility to begin investigating immediately," Dreary said.

A national survey of police officers said rape was the most difficult person-to-person crime to investigate because of the nature of the required evidence and the traumatic effect on the victim.

"A rapist is a violent person with no conception of right or wrong. To him, sex isn't as important as dominance and power," Dreary said.

The Rape Investigation Unit is working with the rape crisis centers and psychologists to better deal and cope with this problem.

They are pushing their "Stop Rape" program with the goal to "increase a woman's awareness of herself and her environment so that she can lessen her chances of becoming a victim and explain what to do if she does become a victim."

Assistant District Attorney Daniel Mullane said: "Though the women's consciousness movement is beginning to make convictions easier, rape cases are still the toughest and most closely scrutinized of them all."

While cooperation between police and the district attorney was excellent, Dreary said, they still found it frustrating that the conviction rate was so low and the acquittals so high.

Pediatrician Questions Milk In The Human Diet

By BRIAN SULLIVAN
AP Science Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Milk, the perfect food, the stuff that millions of mothers urge their kids to drink because it will make them strong, tall, and healthy — could there possibly be anything wrong with it?

Frank A. Oski, a pediatrician and department head at New York State University, but definitely. And he's set out to prove his case in a book starkly entitled, "Don't Drink Your Milk."

"Isn't it time," he asks, "for the weaning of America?"

Milk — cow's milk, that is — is not natural, Dr. Oski contends, except for calves. For humans, especially infants and children, cow's milk is linked with iron-deficiency anemia; is a cause of cramps, vomiting, and diarrhea; can cause allergic reactions like nasal congestion, asthma, skin rash, chest infections including bronchitis, and may play a role in the origin of arteriosclerosis and heart attacks, Dr. Oski says.

His book, published by Wyden Books in August, was written with reporter John D. Bell. It includes a discussion of the politics of the milk industry, but its main focus is the medical aspect.

"I think this is a subject, the bad parts about milk, that should be brought to the attention of the public," Dr. Oski said in an interview. "The public is bombarded with the good things about milk continuously, so that it's part of the collective unconscious. When I see children all the time who are affected badly by milk, well, somebody has to stand up and say, 'Hey, wait a minute.'"

Taking allergic reactions to milk as an example, Dr. Oski says that 25 per cent of children who are fed cow milk before the age of six months will develop one or more allergies. For those given cow milk before 1 year of age, he says, 8 to 10 per cent develop allergies.

A spokesman for the National Dairy Council, Robert Kowalski, said, "Yes, milk causes allergies, there's no question about it." But he added that the majority of pediatricians place the estimate at 1 to 2 per cent, and that the allergy is outgrown at age 2.

"It's unfortunate that Dr. Oski has chosen to denounce milk drinking at a time when a number of nutrition surveys have demonstrated that many American diets are low on riboflavin, vitamin A, and calcium — nutrients abundant in milk and other dairy foods," Kowalski said. "Most health authorities still recommend eating balanced diets with foods from four basic food groups: milk, meat, fruits and vegetables, and grains."

Another anti-milk point made by Dr. Oski in his book is that the majority of the people in the world are "lactose intolerant." Lactose is the sugar in milk.

When the lactose in milk is consumed, it must be broken down by the enzyme lactase before it can be absorbed from the intestinal tract into the blood stream. But if the amount of lactose exceeds the capacity of the enzyme to break it down, the result in the intestine is a sense of bloating, gas, cramps and perhaps a watery diarrhea.

Dr. Oski said a study at Johns Hopkins School of Medicine showed that 15 per cent of all whites and 70 per cent of all blacks tested were unable to digest lactose. "Surveys of the world populations were begun and we now know that far more people are unable to digest lactose than are able to digest it," Dr. Oski writes.

The Dairy Council's Kowalski counters that no other researchers have come up with the same results as those in the Hopkins study. And he contends that checks with health department officials and others involved in providing milk for blacks and others held to be lactose intolerant failed to produce such evidence.

However, Dr. Oski recommends against giving any infant any cow milk.

"Ideally," he writes, "the infant should be exclusively fed human milk for the first year of life. If this is not possible or desirable, then the infant should be fed a commercial formula for the first year. "The infant should never receive cow milk in an unmodified form. After the first year of life, the child requires no milk of any type. The child, like us adults, can thrive with out cow milk ever crossing his lips."

Dr. Oski also says it is possible for the infant and child to get enough calcium for the teeth and bones from other foods, such as spinach, sardines and other fish. "One helping of spinach contains as much calcium as one glass of milk," he writes.

Trees Taken By Rustlers

MONTESANO, Wash. (AP) — Stealthy loggers equipped with muzzled chainsaws and pickup trucks are the Pacific Northwest's counterpart to the cattle rustlers of the prairies. They're stealing majestic red cedars worth millions of dollars.

Estimates of the loss to public and private landowners in western Washington range from $6 million to $17 million annually and, until recently, little could be done to halt it.

However, Curt Janhunen, Grays Harbor County prosecutor, says a new state law, effective Sept. 21, will encourage some "very aggressive law enforcement."

Stealing the towering Western Red Cedars is hard work. But a "midnight logger" can fill the back of a pickup truck in a matter of hours and peddle the wood by daybreak to a mill operator for as much as $300.

A few tree raiders have rented helicopters that can swoop down in a forest and quickly whisk away hundreds of dollars of cedar.

Because many thefts are from national forest lands, the FBI has joined other agencies investigating cedar rustling.

The new law requires sheriff's offices around the state to investigate all applications for permits to harvest the trees. The sheriff will be required to contact the owner of the land on which the cutting is to be done to make sure it has been authorized.

Stock And Market Reports

By RHONDA SEEGL
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices, pushed down by reports of another large U.S. trade deficit and the possibility of a recession, dropped today.

The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was down 4.59 to 858.28, adding to its two-day loss of 4.42 points.

Losers took a 7-3 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Big Board volume came to 4.72 million shares over the first hour.

Analysts said investors, already bothered by inflation and a possible slowdown in the economy, were further discouraged by U.S. trade deficit figures. The Commerce Department announced the trade deficit for July reached $2.33 billion. It was smaller than June's record $2.82 billion deficit, however.

Babcock & Wilcox Co., the object of a buyout battle between J. Ray McDermott and United Technologies Corp., was delayed in opening. McDermott is offering $62.50 a share for outstanding Babcock stock, while United's bid is $58.50.

International Mineral Chemical topped the active list, down 1 1/2 to 37 1/2, followed by Occidental Petroleum, up 1/2 to 23 1/2. After weakness in the previous session, some glamor issues tallied gains. Digital Equipment Corp. added 1/2 to 48 1/2, and Texas Instruments rose 1/2 to 86 1/2. However, Motorola, down 1 1/2 to 45 in the previous session, dropped another 1 1/2 to 43 1/2, and NCR Corp. slid 1/2 to 44 1/2.

The 11 a.m. NYSE's composite index was off .28 to 52.94. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index slipped .25 to 118.33.

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — N.C. Eggs: Wednesday, Market unchanged. Weighted average prices for small lot sales of consumer Grade A white carton eggs delivered to nearby retail stores 64.70 cents per dozen for large; 52.86 medium; and 37.83 small.

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — The trend on the North Carolina hog market was mostly .50 to 1.00 lower today. Rocky Mount, 43.50-44.00; Kinston, 43.25-44.25; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Chadbourne, Ayden, Pine Level, Laurinburg and Benson, 45.00; Tarboro and Bethel, 42.50-43.00; Salisbury 43.00; Spivey's Corner, 43.05-44.05.

Poultry
RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — The trend on the North Carolina f.o.b. dock broiler market was unsettled for next week. Supplies moderate, demand moderate, weights desirable and trending heavier. The dock weighted average price for this week is 41.71 cents per pound for small purchases of sized, plant-grade broilers picked up at processing plant. Estimated slaughter today 1,393,000.

$127.88 Day In Greenville

The Greenville Tobacco Market recorded another high for the season on Wednesday as an overall average of $127.88 per hundred pounds was posted.

The best sales day for the 1977 auction period was reached on the basis of 764,005 pounds of tobacco selling for $976,988, according to J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor of the local Tobacco Board of Trade.

Stabilization receipts yesterday were down to 1.99 per cent of total sales, he said.

Top practical price paid here was $1.43 per pound as offerings consisted of leaf, cutters, lugs, primings and non descript.

Bryan said that season totals now stand at 15,829,932 pounds of tobacco sold for $17,113,440, an average of $108.11 per hundred pounds.

Labor Day Is A Postal Holiday

The U.S. Postal Service will operate on a holiday schedule on Labor Day, September 5.

No residential, business or rural delivery will be made Monday, officials said, although mail will be distributed to post office boxes.

Special delivery service, including delivery of perishables, and holiday collection service will be provided as usual.

Engaged...

their eldest daughter, Princess Caroline, to Mr. Philippe Junot. Princess Caroline and Mr. Junot met in Paris through mutual friends in the month of December 1975.

No wedding date was announced. The couple were to pose for photographers at the palace later today.

Red and white flags were flown today in the tiny principality to celebrate the engagement. Shopkeepers displayed portraits of the comely princess in their windows.

Tall, slender and graceful, Caroline is eight years younger than her mother was when the former movie actress from Philadelphia married Monaco's ruling prince in a fairy-tale romance.

Caroline's looks, like her mother's, have made her a favorite of news photographers, and the active social life she has led for several years in Europe and America gave the gossip columnists much material for romantic speculation. Her name was linked to a number of eligible young men including Britain's Prince Charles, but Junot has been her constant companion for some time.

Nicknamed Sissi in childhood, Caroline was educated in France by Roman Catholic nuns, les Dames de St. Maur, and then at St. Mary's in Ascot, England. She has been studying philosophy at the Sorbonne in Paris.

She is the oldest of the reigning Monacan couple's three children. Her brother, Prince Albert, is 19 and the heir apparent to the throne, and they have a 12-year-old sister, Princess Stephanie.

Planning-Zoning...

ridor study for residential bypass development.

Graham Flanagan submitted a petition containing 32 names of residents of Country Club Drive, Laughinghouse Drive, and Forbes Mill Creek. Flanagan said that the property owners expressed their "strenuous opposition" to the Stock request and noted that they would prefer at least a 700 foot buffer strip of R-15 zoning between their property and the proposed CH zone extension.

Mattox said that if the matter of extending the R-15 zone down to the Highway Commercial level was the bone of contention, the developers would agree to do that.

He said that the developers would be asking for the R-15 zoning rather than a combination of R-6 and R-15, in addition to the commercial zone extension.

Other business on the joint agenda included:

— Approval of a request by Thomas F. Taft and others for rezoning approximately 85 acres in the southeast quadrant of the intersection of Stantonsburg Road and Allen Road and approximately 4,000 feet west of the hospital from R-6 to Office and Institutional, Medical Arts and Highway Commercial (the present portions of R-6 will remain);

— Automatic tabling of a request by White Concrete Co. and H. L. Roberts for rezoning approximately 21 acres on the south side of Mumford Road east of Meadowbrook from R-6 to Industrial in order to have a mining operation for the extraction of sand; and — Adoption of the board's semi-annual report.

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission discussed a request by the Louis Clark Agency Inc. for rezoning approximately 22 acres located at the southwest corner of Red Banks Road and 14th Street from R-20 and RA-20 to R-6 and then automatically tabling the request for 30 days.

Clark, saying that he feels there is a need for a new concept of living in Greenville, discussed a project that he noted would involve home ownership but would "not exactly be condominiums and not exactly single family."

The developer showed a series of slides of a development in Raleigh that he said would be copied here with a type of cluster home development. The proposed 132 units would include two, three and four-bedroom plans with no more than two units attached to each other.

Pool, tennis and club house facilities would be provided for the homeowners in the development, Clark said, which would carry units in the $45,000 to $65,000 price range.

Melvin Buck, who resides at 1411 Red Banks Road, said that the development would result in "irreparable damage" to his home, family and surroundings. He said that it was unfortunate that he was located in the way of the proposed development.

Buck, who offered a petition of 121 names of residents in the area who oppose the development, asked that the board give careful consideration to the matter.

Other questions were raised concerning the traffic projections for the area, especially Red Banks Road.

Other business conducted by the Greenville board included:

— Recommendation to the City Council of a request by the Pitt County Fair for rezoning 14 acres at the intersection of US 13-NC 11 and Airport Road from R-6/Mobile Home to Highway Commercial (Mrs. Trevathan voted against the recommendation); — Recommendation to the Council for approval of a request by Greenville First Pentecostal Holiness Church for approximately 4.2 acres located north of Plaza Drive east of Evans Street, Extension (30-day tabling period waived); — Approval of preliminary and final plats of Brennon Village located in the southwest intersection of the Southern Railroad and US 264 Bypass (11 lots of 13,500 square feet or more will be developed on the land zoned for R-9 usage);

— Tabling of action on the preliminary and final plats on Merle Bowser and J. B. Surles III lot division in the northeast intersection of Forest Hill Circle and Sixth Street (several property owners objected to the division of the lot for use as duplex development or other multi-family use);

— Approval of the final plat of Twin Oaks Subdivision, Section I, located north of 14th Street and west of the bypass; and — Adoption of the Greenville board's semi-annual report.

Responded To 94 Fire Calls

Rural fire departments in Pitt County answered 94 calls during the month of July, according to Pitt County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner, who said 70 fires were involved in the calls.

The fires included 8 houses, 4 house trailers, 17 buildings, 7 autos, 11 grass or woods fires, and 5 false alarms.

Joyner said there was an estimated $669,275 lost to fires. Ayden, Eastern Pines and Farmville departments responded to 10 fires each.

China Insists Taiwan Must Be Out Before Reds Join Olympics

By GEOFFREY MILLER

AP Sports Writer
SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — The people of northern China are born skaters, said Chang Lien-hua, a member of the executive committee of Peking's powerful All-China Sports Federation.

"All around the countryside in the north you can see boys and girls nailing simple pieces of steel on their shoes and teaching themselves to skate on the frozen lakes," Chang said. "They have a natural talent for it."

Some day, one of China's teeming 800 millions may win a gold medal in speed skating at the Olympic Games — if political problems are solved and the Chinese achieve their ambition to compete.

"China is very willing to work with other countries to promote international friendship through the development of sport," Chang said in an interview with the Associated Press. "But there are clear principles which must be observed first."

Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, goes to Peking next month to assess the chances of bringing China into the games.

Meanwhile, Chang's federation has laid its cards clearly on the IOC's table. It insists that China is one country, that Taiwan is part of it and that the IOC must withdraw its recognition of the national Olympic committee of Taiwan before China will play.

Such a proposition would split the IOC from top to bottom and probably would not be passed.

Chang, in Sofia as head of the Chinese delegation at the World University Games, suddenly emerged from the silence and aloofness which the Chinese have preserved since they applied for IOC recognition two years ago.

Charming and affable, he talked about sport in his country and its possible participation in the Olympic Games of the future.

"Basketball and table tennis are the most popular sports in China," he said.

"Of course the standard of basketball is not so high. We have lacked the experience of international competition. But table tennis enjoys a very high standard in our country."

"These sports enjoy great popularity on a mass basis, in schools, in units of the People's Liberation Army and in the countryside."

University Games, and lost only by four points, so I think we did pretty good."

While off the court, the Americans didn't get too much chance to see the sights of Russia. "We did get to see the Kremlin and Lenin's Tomb, although we didn't go inside it."

He also noted that he was surprised by the Russian subway system. "It was really spotless. I was surprised by that. They even had statues all around the stations and water fountains. I just couldn't believe it after New York subways."

Otherwise, Moseley and his group didn't get to see much. "We had a guide everywhere we went. "And I was really amazed by the change in things on account of the change in government. Over there, you have to do what they tell you. The streets are deserted at night. Everyone has to be in by ten o'clock. When we went out people looked at us funny."

Moseley said he did run into some blacks in Russia, all African students. "None of them played basketball, however. They'd just come over there to study for five years, then go home."

The country also surprised Moseley in its fashions. "Everything looks like it's about 20 years behind us. The cars look like ours did 20 years ago, and so do the clothes. I found that hard to adjust to." He added that he had seen some of the construction underway for the Olympics, and said that it looked more modern.

Perhaps most of all, Moseley feels that the international experience will be a help to him in the future. He played with some of the top high school players in the country, and did well. "This will give me a leg up on playing in things like the Pan-American Games, and the Olympics, if I want to," he said.

Coach Larry Gillman also noted that Moseley's play helped put East Carolina into the spotlight. "It's going to help us in recruiting with the rising senior players he went with, not to mention others that will hear about it. It just all goes to show where our program is going."

Moseley, naturally, hopes that the (program) is going up, and that he's going to be one of the reasons why.

But he also hopes that he won't be making any more visits to Russia any time soon. Well, maybe just one trip—about 1980.

Roanoke Again Expects To Fight For Eastern Plains Grid Crown

By WOODY PEELE

Reflector Sports Editor

ROBERSONVILLE — Roanoke's Redskins finished in second place in the Eastern Plains Conference race last year, and Coach Nolan Respass didn't like it one bit.

"I like to be on top," he said. "It's the only place to be." Respass, of course, has had his teams at Robersonville up there in the past.

This year, however, he feels he has a chance to return to the top, if things go well early for the Redskins. "The conference is well-balanced this year. Of course, West Edgecombe is favored, but I think anyone of the teams, with the exception of North Edgecombe, has a chance to win it. And I think it could easily boil down to us and West Edgecombe."

Roanoke has a tough opening schedule. The 2-A team opens against 4-A Bertie Friday, then plays 3-A Ayden-Grifton, and 1-A Belhaven before meeting traditional rival Williamston, another 3-A team. After that, it's into the conference slate, with three games before an open date. The final three games are against North Johnston, and West and North Edgecombe, and Respass is hopeful that the open date will serve a good purpose this season, coming right in the midst of the league slate.

"We've got to get through those early games in good shape," he said. "We don't have a lot of experience back, but we're further along right now than we were last year at this time."

Offensively, the Redskins will continue to run the wishbone. "We do just what East Carolina does. It helps us to have a team close by like East Carolina that we can pick up on. We don't copy them as such, but we get a lot from them."

On defense, Roanoke is switching to a five-man front, instead of the six-man front it had last year. "There are a lot of reasons for this. One of the main ones is that our best athletes are in the secondary, and this gives us an extra one back there."

At least seven Redskins will be going both ways, according to the coach. "We'll be switching a lot of people around too. We've tried to get three people ready to play two positions everywhere."

Respass said that his offensive line looked exceptionally good in the scrimmage against North Pitt last week. "We're also strong at quarterback and fullback, but our running backs are young."

Charlie Smith returns at the quarterback slot, while Larry Williams is back at fullback, giving key experience here there. Smith will also be in the secondary on defense, as will Williams.

Only one other starter returns in the offensive lineup, tackle Larry Daniels, who also will be in the tackle slot on defense. Gary Landry, who played center last year, will switch to another offensive position, but he's still hobbled by an injury.

Meanwhile, Shelton Daniels will move into the split end slot. "He blocks well, but he hasn't caught the ball as well as he should," Glenn Cargile, a sophomore, and junior Jerry Johnson will alternate at tight end. Johnson will see action at the defensive end and the linebacker slots, while Cargile is the backup quarterback and plays in the secondary on defense.

Des Andrews and Daniels will handle the tackles, while Cliff

Keel, who backs up the line on defense, and Allison Lynch, who's also a defensive nose guard, will be at the guards. Street Lee is the center.

Charles Hines and Tony Whitfield will handle the running back positions. "They've been a surprise so far, but they've still got a ways to go," Respass said. "We could also use Clay Roberson (also in the defensive secondary) as a running back, and we could switch Smith to a running back and let Cargile call signals."

Kent Butler and Sutton Edmondson likely will start at defensive ends, with Will Harris joining Keel at a linebacker slot.

Respass said that David Wallace, a tackle both ways; Joey Haislip, defensive tackle-offensive guard; Chuck Matthewson, a guard both ways; Martin Robertson, a fullback; will all play a lot. "We are counting on them to play a lot for us to be successful," the coach said.

"We don't have the quickness we've had in the line and linebackers on defense, and this is going to hurt us some, but I hope the changes we've made will off-set this before we get into the league."

Respass feels that his kicking game is "adequate," with Smith handling the punts. Robert Clark, who is now sidelined with an injury, is a good extra-point man, but the kickoff situation is still up in the air.

"Our non-conference schedule is the toughest it's ever been. If we can get through it with a 2-2 record, I think we'll have done a super job. But it's going to be awfully tough to win even one of them."

History has shown that Roanoke is usually not a team to take second place easily. The "Skins would rather be in first."

Whether they make it or not will be seen during the next 11 weeks.

Rampants Scrimmage

Rose High School's Rampants will entertain Williamston High School's 3-A Tigers Friday night in a pre-season scrimmage football game at Ficklen Stadium.

The contest, under approved rules of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association, will get under way at 7 p.m.

The game is open to the public with a $1 admission fee being charged.

One More Trip Might Not Be Bad: Moseley

By WOODY PEELE

Reflector Sports Editor

The Soviet Union might be a nice place to visit, but for East Carolina University freshman basketball player Moseley, he'd prefer to make only one more trip.

"I wouldn't mind at all being in the Olympic Games (in 1980), but that's about the only way I'd like to go back there."

Moseley, a New York City native who completed his high school ball in Milwaukee, was picked as a member of the AAU Junior team that spent two weeks in Russia, playing teams from that country during the early part of this month.

"We played just six games during the two weeks," Moseley said. "Three of them were in Odessa and three in Moscow. We were supposed to play in Kiev and Leningrad, but for some reason those games were cancelled."

It may have been the record; the Americans won four of the six games they played, compiling the best junior record of any American basketball team to have toured Russia.

The team, which brought graduating and rising seniors from across the country together, practiced only one week before flying to London and then to Moscow.

Moseley started all six games as the point guard of the team, scoring nine points a game and averaging eight assists while committing between one and two turnovers a game.

"I think I played as well as I could," Moseley said. "It was my job to direct the team and get the ball to the others for them to do the inside scoring."

The team lost in its first effort against the Soviets, and Moseley didn't like it. "We tried to go one-on-one against them—everyone for himself, and it just didn't work. They (the Russian team) stays together for a long time, and they all knew each other. So I called a meeting after the first game, and told the team that we had to play together or we might not win a game."

Moseley's talk worked as the team went on to win four of its next five games. All were played against teams older than the Americans, too.

"We played the Russian team for the World

Dye Still Unhappy

After another day of practice yesterday on the East Carolina University drill grounds, Coach Pat Dye was still not at all pleased.

"We had a flat-out bad practice," he said afterwards. "I just hope that it's the stage of the game and not how we'll be playing this fall. I've seen nothing this week to encourage me."

Dye added that there had been no relief from the injury situation, as most of those hurt during the earlier practice sessions still have not returned to action.

The Pirates have a little more than a week left to prepare for next Saturday's opening game with N.C. State.

Baseball Fun For Bearded Hrabosky

By BOB GREENE

AP Sports Writer

St. Louis reliever Al Hrabosky believes his strength lies in his facial decoration.

"I feel comfortable and happy with myself," Hrabosky said Wednesday. And that can only mean bad news for opposing batters.

With his beard, Hrabosky was one of the National League's top relievers, the feared "Mad Hungarian." Then he was instructed to shave.

"Before (he was allowed to grow his beard back), I was a miserable person," Hrabosky said. "Baseball was a job. There was no fun."

"Now I'm getting happier and happier."

NL Roundup

Hrabosky came on in the eighth inning for starter John Urrea and got the final four outs as the Cardinals edged the San Francisco Giants 3-2.

In other NL games Wednesday, Los Angeles nipped Pittsburgh 2-1 in 10 innings, Atlanta edged Chicago 4-3, Cincinnati bombed New York 11-4 and Houston defeated Philadelphia 3-1.

Urrea, a rookie, gave up just four hits before Hrabosky came on in the eighth. But the St. Louis hitters didn't get that many hits off Giants' starter Ed Halicki.

Halicki was touched for three hits in the first inning, including consecutive triples by Jerry Mumphrey and Garry Templeton. But the Cardinals scored the eventual winning run in the fourth without getting a hit as Mike Anderson walked, stole second, moved to third on an infield out and scored on a wild pitch.

Astros 3, Phillies 1

Joe Niekro's five-hitter was backed by Enos Cabell, who drove in a pair of runs with a double and a single to lead Houston over Philadelphia. The victory snapped Houston's six-game losing streak and ended the Phillies six-game winning string.

Reds 11, Mets 4
Home runs by Joe Morgan and George Foster powered Cincinnati over New York. Dave Concepcion chipped in with four of the Reds' 15 hits. Doug Capilla, 6-5, recorded his third career victory over the Mets without a loss.

Cincinnati bombed Jon Matlack, 6-15, for four runs in the first inning and shelled him from the mound in the fifth with a six-run outburst.

Braves 4, Cubs 3
Jeff Burroughs scampered home from third base on a force play to give Atlanta its victory over Chicago. Burroughs led off the eighth inning with a single, was balked to second, moved to third on a single and tallied when the Cubs failed to pull off a double play on Junior Moore's ground-er to short.

Reliever Don Collins, 3-9, got the victory.

Dodgers 2, Pirates 1
Lee Lacy scored on Reggie Smith's single with two outs in the 10th inning to lead Los Angeles over Pittsburgh. Smith also scored the Dodgers' first run with a solo homer in the third inning.

Lacy was walked by reliever Bruce Gossage, stole second and went to third on an infield single before Smith ended the game.

NCAA Rejoins Olympic Group; Hope Seen For AAU Reconciliation

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Association's move to rejoin the The National Collegiate Athletic U.S. Olympic Committee has prompted a call for reconciliation with the Amateur Athletic Union.

The NCAA's 18-member governing council voted Wednesday to ask its more than 840 member institutions for permission to rejoin the Olympic committee if steps toward reorganizing it are continued.

Approval is expected at the NCAA's convention in January. Both the AAU, which has been engaged in an often-bitter fight with the NCAA over Olympic affairs, and the USOC said the reaffiliation would help the United States field a stronger team in 1980.

Hall Lucky Find For Bucs

East Carolina strong safety Gerald Hall was a "lucky find" for the Pirates and the way Buc head coach Pat Dye came upon the Edenton speedster is an interesting story.

The 5-10, 185-pound junior was recruited off of the basketball court and was really not even being scouted. Dye was in Edenton to try to sign Zack Valentine, now a defensive end for the Pirates.

"It was during basketball season and I was watching Zack's team play," Dye says. "Hall caught my eye with his quickness, speed and moves and when the game was over, I asked Gerald if he would like to play football at East Carolina University. Gerald said yes and we later signed him to a football grant-in-aid."

Dye has never regretted the signing. Hall is billed this season as an all-America possibility and is the only veteran in the Pirate secondary. He was named all-Southern Conference last season, was honorable mention all-state and was a second team all-American sophomore in a list picked by Football Weekly.

Hall set an ECU record last season for the most punt return yardage in one year, returning 26 punts for a total of 302 yards, ranking him 12th in the nation with an 11.6-yard average.

In addition, he returned a punt 70 yards for a touchdown in the Bucs' opener against Southern Mississippi last season and tied Reggie Pinkney for the most pass interceptions with six. In three games he had two thefts each and he returned those for a total of 153 yards.

His discovery has proven to be golden for the Pirates.

Ollan Cassell, the AAU's executive director, said in a statement that he hopes the NCAA follows the action by accepting his group's invitation to becoming a "special class" AAU member.

"We are certain the NCAA's action in rejoining the U.S. Olympic Committee and its subsequent hoped-for action in becoming active in AAU affairs will better U.S. chances at overcoming the medal-earning prowess of the Soviet Union and East Germany," Cassell said.

When it withdrew from the committee, following the 1972 Olympics at Munich, the NCAA contended it could no longer work within a structure unresponsive to college coaches and athletes. The NCAA assailed the AAU over what the collegiate organization termed the AAU's control of the U.S. Olympic program.

NCAA officials said the decision Wednesday still depends on congressional action to restructure the Olympic committee along lines recommended by the President's Commission on Olympic Sports. They said the restructuring would effectively end the AAU's hold on franchises for various sports, giving challengers more voice in arbitration on who makes up each sport's governing body.

"We feel there is a significant change in the USOC, and the council is enthusiastic about the potential of moving into active participation with the committee," said NCAA President J. Neils Thompson.

Rangers Sweep Pair From Boston

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Texas and Boston spent more than eight hours at Fenway Park Wednesday night. The Rangers got a rain-delayed doubleheader sweep out of the evening; all the Red Sox got was wet.

"Just a wasted evening," said Boston Manager Don Zimmer after his Red Sox dropped their eighth consecutive game and fell into a tie with Baltimore for second place in the American League East. The Rangers defeated Boston 3-0 and 6-3 in the two-nighter, which was delayed two hours and 22 minutes in the opener.

Gaylord Perry and Adrian Devine combined to stifle the Red Sox in the opener, surrendering just three hits. Jim Sundberg's bloop double provided the only run Texas needed.

In the nightcap, Jim Mason slammed his first homer since the 1976 World Series, when he was with the Yankees, for the winning run. It was only the 12th home run of Mason's career.

Claudell Washington also homered in the contest as Texas moved into second place in the AL West, two games behind pacesetter Kansas City and .001 ahead of third-place Minnesota.

Elsewhere in the American League, Baltimore outscored Chicago 10-5, New York demolished Minnesota 11-1 and Kansas City outlasted Milwaukee 4-3 in 15 innings. Cleveland and California split a two-nighter, the Indians winning the opener 5-3 and California winning the nightcap, 5-2; Toronto swept a pair from Seattle, 7-0 and 9-3, and Oakland took two from Detroit, 3-1 and 6-5 in 10 innings.

AL Roundup

Orioles 10, White Sox 5
Doug Decinces and Lee May each had three hits as Baltimore topped Chicago. The Orioles pounded White Sox' pitching for 19 hits, 14 off starter Steve Stone, 13-9.

"It looked like a rookie league game to me," said Baltimore shortstop Mark Belanger, whose third-inning error led to a Chicago run.

Yankees 11, Twins 1
A 62-minute rain delay in the first inning may have been Minnesota's undoing. After scoring a run in the top of the inning, the Twins saw Mickey Rivers double and Reggie Jackson walk for the Yankees before the rain halted play. When the game resumed, Pete Redfern immediately surrendered Chris Chambliss' 15th homer and the rout was on.

Roy White, Bucky Dent and Mickey Rivers also slammed home runs for New York, which stretched its first-place Eastern Division lead to two games. Catfish Hunter, 9-7, hurled a four-hitter for his third straight victory.

Royals 4, Brewers 3, 15 innings
John Wathan doubled home John Mayberry with the tie-breaking run, then scored what proved to be the winner on Amos Otis' single as Kansas City took its eighth straight game, lengthening its AL West lead to two games.

Doug Bird, 10-4, hurled 5 2-3 innings of one-hit relief, striking out seven, to earn the victory.

Indians 5-2, Angels 3-5
Cleveland beat Nolan Ryan in the opener, spoiling his attempt to become the AL's first 18-game winner. Jerry Remy's fifth-inning error on Rico Carty's grounder allowed the winning run to score. Ryan, 17-12, fanned 10, the 102nd time in his career he has struck out at least 10 men in a game.

In the nightcap, Remy knocked in three runs to provide much of the Angels' offense.

Blue Jays 7-9, Mariners 0-3
Rookie Jerry Garvin hurled a six-hitter in the opener for his first major league shutout and his ninth complete game. Hector Torres' three-run homer and solo blasts by Ron Fairly and Doug Rader provided the offense.

Torres' knocked in three more runs in the nightcap and Jesse Jefferson hurled a six-hit complete game.

Wake Forest Deacons Feel There Has Been A Change Of Attitude

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
WINSTON-SALEM, N.C.

(AP) — There's a world of difference in the Wake Forest football team Mike McGlamry played on as a freshman and the one he'll quarterback as a senior this fall.

For starters, the Demon Deacons are coming off a season where they won more than one game — they went 5-6 last year, including a near defeat of Atlantic Coast Conference champion Maryland. But more than that, there's been a change in attitude.

"I don't think there's anybody here that's cocky," the blond quarterback from Columbus, Ga., said in assessing the team Wednesday.

"But we feel better about ourselves. We know we can play anybody we meet. In the past, we've had games where we just tried to hang on."

That sentiment runs deep among Wake's seniors who are back this year, like tight end Steve Young and on defense, linebacker Don Cervi. They were among Coach Chuck Mills' first recruits, suffering through the 1-10 season of 1974, with successive losses to Oklahoma, Penn State and Maryland by 63-0, 55-0, and 47-0 scores.

"We've been through a lot, and it helps us pull together. We have more cohesion and confidence as a group. It's the experience factor," McGlamry said.

McGlamry wasn't the number one Wake Forest quarterback last year, but has started about half his games over the past three seasons. As a freshman he led the team to slaughter against Oklahoma, and endured the criticism of other students at the small Baptist school where golf was the only sport in which a national championship was possible.

"The attitude here toward the football team then was pretty harsh," McGlamry said. "But now that we're seniors we've begun to see the light, and the attitude of the other students and the guys coming in has changed 200 per cent."

Mills considers his quarterback a good passer but only an average runner. But his poise, confidence and intelligence — he has a 4.0 scholastic average — have put McGlamry in the starting role.

"Mike's great talent is that he knows his limitations," Mills said. "He knows how to transfer his intelligence to the football field. I don't think he can win the game himself, but he can steer the team."

San Francisco University led the major schools in winning percentage in basketball in the 1976-77 campaign with a 29-2 record for .935.

Top Drivers To Get More

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The National 500's $250,000 purse will be divided differently this year, Charlotte Motor Speedway officials say.

Top drivers in the Oct. 9 race will receive more money, as recommended by a committee of stock car racing participants.

"We learned from our July 19 meeting with the competitors that they were particularly interested in seeing more money go to the drivers who race the hardest and the longest," said speedway general manager H.A. "Humpty" Wheeler.

The pole winner will get $10,000, and the runnerup will be $3,000, compared with $500 last year.

The $18,000 in lap bonuses this year will be paid in 12 segments of 25 laps, with $1,000 going to the leader of the most laps in each segment and $500 going to the runnerup.

The winner's share will jump from $20,400 last year to $25,400.

"We've beefed up the money in the top 20 finishing positions. Moreover, we have adopted some 75 per cent of the committee's recommendations, and I think this high percentage will come as a surprise to them," Wheeler said.

Autumn Leaf Spectacle Unlikely This Year

By BOB CAVIN
UNC-G News Bureau
GREENSBORO — As far as years go, 1977 will long be remembered for many things: the record-breaking heat wave, the summer drought and perhaps the New York blackout.

However, 1977 isn't likely to be remembered for its spectacular autumn leaf coloration, according to Dr. Hollis J. Rogers, an associate professor of biology at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

"The color this year will be spotty," he predicted. "It will not be a vintage year because of the heat and the drought." He explained the process of leaf coloration requires plenty of water, the shortening of days, warm, sunny weather and cool nights. The summer-long drought and the blistering heat have not been conducive to the process this year, noted Dr. Rogers. "Actually, all the factors which produce the most spectacular colorations in the fall occur only about once in 10 years," he said. "But the heat and drought this year have been unusually bad for the color."

The physiological process of leaf coloration begins in midsummer on June 21, the longest day of the year. From that day on, the length of daylight shortens by about four minutes each day, triggering the growth of an abscission layer between the leaf stem and tree branch.

"This abscission blocks the food produced in the leaf from flowing into the tree branches," Rogers explained. "Since the abscission grows from the outside of the stem inward, and water is carried up to the leaf in the center of the stem, the food is blocked from leaving the leaf before the water going to the leaf is cut off."

"The leaves simply store the sugar made in the process of photosynthesis until they are full," he said. "Then the sugar is converted into either anthocyanin or carotin."

The anthocyanin and carotin determine the color of the leaf at the end of the process, explained Rogers. Carotin leaves will be yellow-orange while anthocyanin leaves will be red if the soil is acid and bluish if the soil is alkaline.

However, for this conversion process from sugar to anthocyanin or carotin to take place fully, the leaves need plenty of water.

"The drought this summer has been so severe that the watershed level in the ground has fallen so low that even the trees with very deep roots are not getting enough water to send to the leaves for this conversion process," Rogers explained. "In addition, the leaves need warm days and cool nights to carry out this process," he said.

"If it's too hot during the day and night while the leaves are storing sugar, the leaves will simply burn up," Rogers added. "We can already see evidence of this in the leaves that have turned yellow or brown and fallen off the trees."

He said the ideal temperatures for the conversion process to fully turn the leaf to its most brilliant color is somewhere in the upper 70s during the day and below 50 degrees at night.

"Many people think it's the first frost that brings out the colors," Rogers chuckled. "But the frost just kills the leaves and they drop off. It's too late for the leaves to do anything after the frost."

Rogers, who will begin his 31st year of teaching biology at UNC-G this fall, said that there is still hope for some trees in the Piedmont and especially in the mountains.

"Trees that are situated near a river, creek or lake may be getting enough water to convert the sugar into anthocyanin or carotin," he explained. "Especially if they are shaded by other trees so the temperature drops quicker and lower in the evenings."

"Likewise, trees down in the valleys of our mountains that are shaded in the evenings and where water is more plentiful will have better coloration than the trees on top of the mountains where the water runs off rather than sinks into the soil," he said.

"But overall, with the heat and drought the way it has been all summer, this will not be a vintage year for color," he concluded.

As for the trees that do produce color this fall, nature lovers can look for red leaves on oaks, maples, black gum and sourwoods because they almost always produce anthocyanin.

"This is especially true of the mountain areas where the soil is mostly acid," Rogers said. "Sourwoods are generally the first to turn and serve as an indicator of how brilliant all the rest of the trees will be later on."

Hickory, poplar and beech trees generally produce bright yellow leaves because their conversion process usually turns sugar into carotin.

"Sweet gum trees, particularly those grown in alkaline soil, will have a bluish tint," he added.

Honor Graduate's Lack Of Sight Is No Barrier

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL
NEW YORK (AP) —

"Society is not yet enlightened enough to allow you to be average. I really think the only way for a handicapped person to make it is to be way above average," says John McCann, who has been blind since birth.

McCann certainly is "way above average" himself. His Phi Beta Kappa key, his graduation as valedictorian from the State University of New York (SUNY) at Binghamton, his overall college average that was just one-tenth of a point shy of perfect and his upcoming matriculation to the Harvard Law School all testify to that.

McCann has accomplished these things in the face of his blindness and an automobile accident that damaged the nerves in his fingertips, making it almost impossible for him to read braille.

But although the 22-year-old said in an interview that he'd "rather play it safe and be twice as good as everyone else," he still insists he's "looking forward to the day when what I'm doing won't turn heads."

Meanwhile, though, the soft-spoken young man in jeans and sneakers is turning quite a few heads indeed. McCann has been hired temporarily by SUNY at Syracuse to head that school's summer program for blind college freshmen.

With remarkable independence McCann moves freely with a cane through Ozone Park, a quiet, out-of-the-way, residential neighborhood in the New York borough of Queens. He rides subways and buses routinely and walks in his own home with confidence and agility.

While still in college, McCann managed to find time to be a founding member of the Association for Disabled Individuals and to maintain his own physical fitness regimen.

McCann says he loves to ski and ice-skate, in the company of a sighted guide. And he also enjoyed running on his college's outdoor track.

"I found that if I dragged my cane along the inside of the track, I was all right," he said.

McCann attended the Lavelle School for the Blind in New York for the first nine years of his education. It was there that he learned to type, a skill he says is the single most important one any visually handicapped person can learn.

The Lavelle experience was a vital one, McCann admits, but he fears that such places can lead to "ghettoization" of the handicapped. He transferred to Christ the King High School in Middle Village, near his family's home.

"I felt strongly at that point that it was time to develop my social skills," said McCann, an aspiring politician. "It was time to meet and get along with seeing people."

"It's really a trade-off. There is no easy way to decide when to make the change."

McCann said he uses primarily recorded texts and notes for schoolwork, especially since the accident a couple of years ago. He jumped up and walked briskly across two rooms to dig out his "steno-mask."

A steno-mask is a large plastic cylinder that fits over the user's mouth and plugs into a tape recorder. With the device, a blind person can dictate notes in a normal voice without disturbing his classmates.

Braille writers occasionally are used, but McCann said they really are too noisy to be practical.

McCann said he gets most of his books from Recordings for the Blind (RFB), a free service for all visually and perceptually disabled persons. RFB can produce a recorded version of any book if a client supplies two copies and gives them two months to complete the task.

Texas Has National Park Unclaimed By The Hordes

By R. MICHAEL PATTERSON
GUADALUPE MOUNTAIN—S. Tex. (UPI) — Let's keep it a secret.
If word gets out there's a national park that has escaped the hordes of visitors that have converged on the highways this summer, we're liable to get caught in a crowd.
Guadalupe Mountains National Park is still untamed and unclaimed for the most part by the vacation travelers who pack other scenic landmarks across the nation.
Guadalupe, 110 miles east of El Paso, Tex., on U.S. 62-180, is far removed from any interstate highway and could safely be called in the middle of nowhere.
But you'd better hurry if you want a taste of solitude. Over the next year and a half the park service will build paved roads and visitor centers that will surely attract thousands to this rugged West Texas wilderness.

Currently, Guadalupe park is not the best spot to bring the wife and kids if they're not used to roughing it.
The campground consists of a gravel parking lot, not much larger than a couple of basketball courts, complete with outdoor privies.
Until a visitor center is completed, headquarters is located in a wooden shack the size of a one-room schoolhouse.
Right now the best way to see the park is the way I saw it — by foot, a mode of transportation frowned upon by many folks.

As I waited at dawn for an appointment at the headquarters, a couple drove up in a shiny van.
"Do you know anything about the park," the man asked. I showed him my brochure.
"There's an old stagecoach stop right off the road. And there's plenty of hiking," I said.
He glanced at the dirt road and wouldn't believe me when I told him the short distance to the ruins wouldn't tear the transmission out of his automobile.
"My wife has a bad back," he said, climbed into the truck to speed off toward the more accessible, and crowded, Carlsbad Caverns, 40 miles to the northwest.
Depending on your viewpoint, the advantage or disadvantage of the 77,500-acre park is that it was established in 1972. That and the budget are reasons the park is relatively unimproved and wild.

My guide for the day was Ranger Cordell Roy, who strapped on the white canvas pouch holding a quart canteen as we started hiking along the trail through McKittrick Canyon.
"One of the worst problems we have with hikers is their not believing us when we tell them to carry water," he said.
Roy, 31, was recently transferred to Guadalupe from Petrified Forest National Park in Arizona. He lives in a modern trailer house inside the park with his wife and 16-month-old son who has a Cheshire cat grin and his father's skyblue eyes.
McKittrick Canyon would certainly have to rank as a key attraction at the park. Once ranching country, the tree-shrouded canyon is now reserved for day hikers sturdy enough to survive a seven-mile ride in a bouncing van to reach the mouth.
The park service ferries hikers from the headquarters to the canyon throughout the day and picks them up in the late afternoon.
We were trying to reach Gary King, a seasonal ranger who lives during the summers in an old stone ranchhouse two miles up the canyon. We found him on the trail exchanging addresses with a happy German family he had escorted through the valley, promising to visit them if he ever got overseas.
We didn't turn down the jeep ride he offered us to our park service truck at the trailhead. As I was trying desperately to hold on to notebooks and cameras without falling out of the jolting jeep, he suddenly ground to a halt.

King, a student at Texas Tech University in Lubbock, walked over to a rock wall on the edge of the gentle stream meandering through the canyon. As he rubbed the white rock, a black figure slowly emerged of an antelope drawn by Indians who once inhabited the valley. We examined the wall more closely and could see another figure, tarnished by decades of stream silt. King again rubbed the surface, uncovering what appeared to be an Indian mounted on a horse.
"You're probably one of the few men ever to see that figure," Roy said.
The park features 55 miles of trails and numerous back country campsites. One trail even leads to the top of Guadalupe Peak, at 8,751 feet the highest point in Texas.
The atmosphere of solitude at McKittrick will no doubt change once the road is finished to the trailhead and more visitors start flowing into the park.
But Roy said the backpacking trails through the mountains will always remain a wilderness for those who put out a special effort.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are forecast today for the Northwest from Minnesota to the Midwest and in the Southeast. Mild weather is expected in the Northeast, but most of the country is expected to be warm. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Cooler and drier air has moved into North Carolina behind a weak cold front that has moved on south of the state, leaving some cloudiness in its wake across southern counties and clear skies to the north.

Afternoon temperatures today were expected to range from the mid 70s to the mid 80s, slightly cooler on the average than Wednesday readings.

A chance of afternoon showers will prevail across the western mountains Friday and temperatures will range from the upper 70s to the mid 80s.

The extended weather outlook calls for a chance of thunderstorms across the state during the weekend with afternoon temperatures ranging generally in the 80s while lows at night will be mostly in the 60s.

Flight Fare Plan Okayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — For $299 apiece, two or more persons will be able to fly anywhere on Eastern Airlines routes under a fare plan that has been sanctioned by the Civil Aeronautics Board.

Delta and National Airlines have filed similar plans with the CAB, and action is pending on those.

The Eastern plan, approved Wednesday, also allows one adult to travel anywhere on a $299 ticket accompanied by two or more children whose tickets will cost $199 each.

Starting Saturday, travelers will be able to buy tickets good after Sept. 11 that will enable them to make as many stops as they choose on Eastern's 105-city route system in the United States, Mexico, Canada, Bermuda and the Caribbean.

The trips must last seven to 21 days and include at least three stops. Tickets must be bought at least 14 days in advance.

The discount fare plan does not apply on certain days during holiday periods.

LAST SURVIVOR DIES
MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Doris W. Willis, 91, the last survivor of a company of black soldiers thrown out of the Army in the Brownsville Incident of 1906, died Wednesday.

Cites Flaws In Farm Labor Act

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Current federal laws governing farm labor contractors have forced many growers to hire out-of-state workers, a state employment official testified Wednesday.

Edson Bates of the state Employment Security Commission was among the labor and business representatives who spoke at a U.S. House subcommittee hearing here on proposed amendments to the Farm Labor Contractor Registration Act.

The act sets standards for persons who recruit and transport of farmworkers.

Bates said required insurance coverage for interstate crew leaders has driven many out of business, and forced farmers to hire out-of-state laborers.

"The local crew leaders only work parttime. They don't make enough money to make it feasible to carry several thousand dollars of liability insurance on the laborers they transport," he said.

The current law does not apply to recruitment of workers within a 25-mile radius of the fields. Bates urged that the exemption be extended to 50 miles.

Persons representing the farmworkers said Wednesday that they sympathized with contractors' concerns about high insurance, but added safety of the workers must come first.

The Rev. W.W. Finlator of Raleigh's Pullen Memorial Baptist Church said the law protects "a people so palpably unequipped to fend for themselves" and should be amended to increase that protection.

William H. Shipes, executive director of the Migrant and Seasonal Farmworkers Association, agreed.

He recommended government subsidies, rather than exemptions to the current law, to help farm-labor contractors who are unable to meet the cost of required liability insurance.

Revival Being Held This Week

FOUNTAIN — Revival services are being held this week at Dilda's Chapel F.W.B. Church near here by the Rev. J. H. Williams of Newark, N.J.

The services, which will run through Friday, begin at 7:30 each evening. The pastor, the Rev. Robert Gorham, invites the public.

Black Students Caution HEW

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — An organization of black college students has told federal officials that recently issued desegregation guidelines for six Southern states will threaten continued operation of many traditionally black colleges.

The National Organization of Black University and College Students has sent a letter to Joseph Califano, secretary of the U.S. Health, Education and Welfare Department, outlining objections to guidelines issued for North Carolina, Georgia, Virginia, Florida, Arkansas and Oklahoma.

The group has received no reply to its letter, which was sent following a meeting here Aug. 6.

Represented at the meeting were North Carolina A&T University, Fayetteville State University and North Carolina Central University, all in North Carolina; Morgan State College, Baltimore, Md.; Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn.; and Howard University in Washington, D.C.

The group's letter opposes quotas proposed by HEW for increasing white enrollment at predominantly black schools.

"In the absence of parity among institutions, the imposition of numerical goals for whites entering black institutions would simply create a situation where whites would fill seats which would have normally been filled by black students; thereby depriving the black student of precious available opportunity," the letter said.

Guidelines issued by HEW for the North Carolina higher education system were rejected Monday as unrealistic by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors. The board adopted an alternate plan that proposes a 32 per cent increase in black enrollment at traditionally white schools, compared to HEW's proposal of a 150 per cent increase.

Additional guidelines dealt with removing program duplication within university systems by favoring development of new programs at black schools.

The black students' group said that issue would best be handled by states, than by HEW.

"As students, we recognize that academic programs of similar nature operational at various institutions oftentimes are healthy for both academic growth and diversity in terms of approach, method and opinion," the letter said.

William Stanback, president of the Fayetteville State student body, said 20 students signed the letter. He was unable to furnish figures on the group's total membership.

Oil-Rich State Has New Hotel

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (UPI) — The first international standard hotel in the pocket-sized oil-rich state of Sabah was opened recently.

The $12.5 million 350-room Kinabalu International Hotel is located on the waterfront and is the largest Malay-owned hotel in the country.

Will Complain Over Lost Job

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The self-styled Nazi candidate for the Raleigh City Council says he will file a civil rights complaint after he was fired from his job as a supply room clerk at a local nursing home.

Harold A. Covington, 23, said, "I wasn't molesting anyone and my immediate boss had just told me what a good job I was doing."

Diary Sheds Light On Civil War's Final Days

By Dr. H. G. JONES, Curator North Carolina Collection
CHAPLAIN, N. C. (AP) — "The country is rather low, heavily timbered, thinly settled and poorly cultivated. The masses of the people are rather ignorant."

That is how Robeson County impressed Sgt. Allen Morgan Geer as he marched with Sherman's army into North Carolina on March 8, 1865.

The recent publication of the diary of the first sergeant of the 20th Regiment, Illinois Volunteers, reveals additional information on the final weeks of the Civil War in North Carolina.

From Floral College ("a fine institution surrounded by a few houses in a beautiful locality"), the regiment crossed Crafts Swamp to Rockfish Factories where a state militia company was routed.

From there the regiment marched into Fayetteville on March 11 to discover that the "bummers" of the Army of the Tennessee had already arrived. Despite a Confederate attack, the town fell to the Federals.

A couple of days later Geer visited the town, including the arsenal. He wrote, "It is naturally a beautiful place and has been the business metropolis for a large section of country. But now no enterprise or energy is displayed. Her women are not noted for beauty or sentiment."

For several days the troops camped near Black River and Little Coharie Creek, occasionally fraternizing with local residents. At Big Coharie, for instance, Geer had "a gay time at Mrs. Andrews." He went "swamp ranging" and collected many horses from the swamps. He also noted that "our men are in the habit of going to houses and if welcomed remain there night and day till driven by the enemy."

At the battle of Bentonville,

Geer wrote, "Many women and children are seen wandering about having been driven from their homes by the flying bullets."

The troops looked forward to their arrival at Goldsboro on March 24 for, Geer wrote, "Many thousands of our army are barefooted and more wearing citizens clothing."

As the regiment marched from Goldsboro to Raleigh on April 10, it camped at Pine Level and there received the news of General Lee's surrender at Appomattox. The men, of course, were "wild with delight."

Jauntily the 20th Regiment marched past General Sherman in Raleigh on the 14th. Of the city, Geer wrote: "The streets are broad, well-shaded, and run at right angles. The public buildings are well built and the grounds arranged according to the most approved taste."

At camp outside Raleigh, hats were thrown into the air and old soldiers rushed into each other's arms upon arrival of news that Confederate General Joseph Johnston had notified Sherman that he wished to discuss armistice terms.

Simultaneously, orders were issued against the "destruction of cotton and other property and against foraging so as to impoverish the poor. All citizens of the South are to be treated in a friendly manner, etc."

This enthusiasm and good will suddenly disappeared on April 17 with the "blasting, blighting news" of the assassination of President Lincoln. "The city of Raleigh has to be strongly guarded to prevent its burning by the soldiers," Geer confided to his journal.

The soldiers waited impatiently for the outcome of the Johnston-Sherman negotiations. One day Geer went into the city, found business fast improving, and attended an "interesting exhibition at the Deaf & Dumb Asylum."

To help pass the time in camp, the sergeant wrote, "I examine many heads phrenologically thus affording amusement and instruction." He complained of constipation due to a steady diet of "Salt junk, Hard Tack, & Strong Coffee."

When Union authorities in Washington rejected the initial armistice terms, the 20th Regiment moved to Jones Station (probably Morrisville) while Sherman and Johnston at the Bennett Place hammered out a more satisfactory agreement virtually ending the war on April 26.

As the happy Sergeant Geer marched northward, he recorded passing through Forreston (Forestville) and SaCroix. He wrote, "Situate on a beautiful ridge well shaded by rows of majestic trees at the latter place was Wickfair College."

Obviously he was referring to Wake Forest College, but how he concluded that the name of the village was "SaCroix" remains a mystery.

Many Causes of Radiated Pain

Every few months I have an attack of pain in my abdomen. No one has been able to find the cause. The odd thing is that the pain seems to shoot in different directions at different times. Can you explain this? — Mrs. E. C., Nev.

Dear Mrs. C.: Radiation of pain is a very common problem. Diseases of the gall bladder, which lies high on the right side of the abdomen, and under the liver, frequently direct shooting pain to the back and right shoulder. Stones in the kidney, or in the ureter that leads from it, send sharp, shooting, stabbing and intense pain down into the groin.

Problems with the pancreas cause dull, persistent aches in the lower back. A penetrating pain high in the abdomen may be caused by stomach or duodenal ulcers.

In the case of women, infections and inflammation of the Fallopian tubes and the ovaries may cause radiating pains down to the inner side of the thighs.

All of this should give you some idea of how difficult it is to interpret the cause of abdominal pain. And this does not include all the intestinal problems, attacks of chronic appendicitis and diverticulitis that can be responsible.

It also indicates how astute the doctor must be in differentiating pain, its character, its location and then in tracking down its source.

It's difficult to believe that no one has been able to find the cause of your abdominal pain. "No one" seems to suggest that although a number of doctors have been consulted, perhaps you did not give any single one of them sufficient time to adequately study your problem.

How do you feel about boxing as a sport for young high school students? When I objected to it, I was accused of making a sissy out of my 17-year-old son. The "sissy" just had his nose broken in a school boxing match. — Mrs. C.C., Tex.

Dear Mrs. C.: A body contact sport like boxing is an excellent form of exercise. It is artistic and can be a source of fun.

What I don't understand is this: Hockey players are made to wear protective gear. The baseball player wears a protective helmet while at bat. Football players and lacrosse players are well padded and protected against severe injuries.

Many states make it illegal for motorcyclists not to wear protective headgear. Why, then, are there no laws requiring protective headgear for both amateur and professional fighters? Is bludgeoning a man into unconsciousness a real index of a manly sport?

DR. COLEMAN welcomes letters from readers. Please write to him in care of this newspaper.

Canal Discussion On Southern Governors' Agenda

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Control of the Panama Canal will be one of the subjects up for discussion at the Southern Governors' Conference meeting Aug. 27-31 in San Antonio.

Other resolutions at the 43rd annual meeting concern mostly the energy and economic needs of the 19 Southern states and territories.

Seven policy statements and resolutions to be considered by the governors have been pre-filed with the Southern Governors' Conference.

Conference action on the resolutions will come when the resolutions committee reports Tuesday, Aug. 30.

The proposed resolution on the Panama Canal was offered by Louisiana Gov. Edwin W. Edwards, said the proximity of the canal to the Southern states "makes its continued control and operation under the terms of the existing treaty imperative."

It calls on U.S. senators representing the Southern states

"to oppose vigorously any treaty which would alter, remove or reduce the existing control over and operation of the Panama Canal and the Panama Canal Zone as presently and historically exercised by the United States of America."

The conference also will be offered a lengthy policy statement on energy that was pre-filed by Oklahoma Gov. David L. Boren, chairman of the conference energy committee.

A similar stand on deregulation of natural gas was adopted recently at a meeting of Midwestern governors. Texas Gov. Dolph Briscoe, Southern Governors' Conference chairman, said at the time that he hoped the Southern governors would follow with a stand on "phased" deregulation.

The policy statement sent to Southern governors for pre-conference study includes the specific recommendation that "federal legislation should be enacted which would remove wellhead price controls on new natural gas. The legislation should also contain provisions designed to limit or eliminate windfall profits. The deregulation should be phased into effect to mitigate its impact on consumers."

The policy statement on energy also calls for "maximum efforts" to develop all outer Continental Shelf areas including the Atlantic seaboard; for a maximum but reasonable time to replace natural gas with coal as a boiler fuel; for a study to see if the federal government should "oversee" renovation of railroad beds for long-haul coal transportation, at no cost to the taxpayer, and for federal support of both nuclear fission and fusion for future energy.

Other policy statements and resolutions to be considered by the Southern governors include:

—A statement submitted by North Carolina Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. urging the states and federal government to recognize the needs of the nation's smaller cities along with metropolitan areas for a "national balanced growth policy."

—A statement proposed by Georgia Gov. George Busbee urging Congress to reserve for American businessmen all the advantages, "morally and economically equitable," in multinational markets competition.

—A resolution by South Carolina Gov. James B. Edwards in support of the Southern States Water Council.

—A resolution asking the federal government to put Puerto Rico under the jurisdiction of Federal Region IV with headquarters in Atlanta.

—A resolution supporting a pending congressional act (HR7200) that would extend the Supplemental Security Income Program to the Virgin Islands and other offshore areas.

Draft Lives On

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Try telling John Wayne Rinehart, 19, the draft is over.

He'll show you his induction papers received this week — from the French army.

Rinehart was born in France to a French mother and American father. Although his parents brought him to the United States 18 months later, his birthplace automatically gives him dual American-French citizenship.

Along with French citizenship comes a compulsory two-year hitch in the army.

"There's no way I'm going to join the French army," he declared. "I don't think they're going to come after me."

His father, who served in the U.S. Army in Europe when his son was born, says the situation will be resolved.

"We will get in touch with the French Consulate General in Chicago," said James Rinehart, the youth's father, "just to make sure this thing gets straightened out."

There's no time to waste. The French want young Rinehart to report for duty in less than two months.

Accused Bandit Held In Denver

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — A man charged with robbing a Wachovia branch bank Durham, N.C., is scheduled for appearance before a federal magistrate today, following his arrest here Tuesday.

William M. Carden, 32, reportedly escaped from jail in Durham June 11. He had been traced as far as High Point, Durham FBI agent Vic Holden said. From High Point, Carden evidently flew to Denver, Holden said, where he was arrested in a downtown apartment building.

AP Newsmen Will Be China Visitors

NEW YORK (AP) — A delegation of Associated Press executives and directors will make a two-week visit to China beginning Aug. 30.

Keith Fuller, AP president and general manager, said the visit was being made in support of the continuing effort by The AP to establish a bureau in Peking. The host organization for the trip is Hsinhua, the Chinese news agency, with which The AP established an agreement in 1972 for the exchange of news and photos. The participants will pay their own way.

The participants are: Fuller, Jack Tarver, publisher of the Atlanta Constitution & Journal and AP board chairman; David R. Bradley, publisher and president, St. Joseph (Mo.) News-Press & Gazette; Frank Batten, chairman of the board, Landmark Communications, Norfolk, Va.; Stanton R. Cook, chairman and publisher, Chicago Tribune; Katharine Graham, chairman of the board, The Washington Post Co.; William H. Cowles, 3rd, publisher and president, The Spokesman-Review, Spokane, Wash.; Robert L. Taylor, chairman, The Evening & Sunday Bulletin, Philadelphia; J.M. McClelland, Jr., president and publisher, The Daily News, Longview, Wash.; Daniel H. Ridder, editor and publisher, Long Beach (Calif.) Independent, Press Telegram; Arthur Ochs Sulzberger, chairman, president and publisher, The New York Times; Robert M. White II, editor and publisher, Mexico (Mo.) Ledger; and Louis D. Boccardi, AP vice president and executive editor.

Opportunities A Challenge To Young Inmates

Inmates of the Polk Youth Center in Raleigh were challenged to make their time serve them well by completing GED high school equivalency requirements, furthering their education by study release, considering the correctional program of East Carolina University and by seeking employment with the State Department of Correction upon release and graduation.

The challenge was made by Fred G. Morrison Jr., Executive Director of the N. C. Inmate Grievance Commission, at a banquet of the Blue Ridge Jaycees of Polk Center recently.

Morrison also announced the hiring of George H. Whitaker, 26, of Sanford to serve as administrative assistant on the IGC staff. Whitaker is a 1977 Correctional Services graduate of ECU, who did placement work with the IGC in the spring and who has been employed as an intern this summer.

Hundreds Help Mark Birthday

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Hundreds of friends dropped by to help blind Argentine author Jorge Luis Borges celebrate his 78th birthday at his small Buenos Aires apartment.

Borges, who has been proposed several times for the Nobel prize, had hardly sat down Wednesday for his breakfast of corn flakes and coffee began when it was interrupted by a friend bearing a book of Scandinavian poetry and a bar of chocolate. Later, other friends from the literary, intellectual and political worlds dropped by.

Time May Be Running Out On Deadbeats In U.S. Agencies

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — Time may be running out for the deadbeats among federal agencies — the ones that have a habit of paying their bills weeks or even months late.

The administration has told agencies that contract with private businesses to turn in reports by Sept. 1 on how many are paid when due, and how many are tardy.

If past performance is any guide, a good many of them will have to confess to paying bills belatedly.

Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., who raised the issue in the first place, said he may propose legislation to require that government agencies pay interest on any bills that are not paid within 30 days.

That's the way it is for the consumer who doesn't come up with the cash to pay his bills on time. But some of the government's 29 contracting agencies apparently have been making their own rules, and there hasn't been much that a businessman could do about it.

Packwood raised the possibility of a bill collecting bill after the General Accounting Office reported that late payments are a serious problem for businesses that take government contracts.

According to the GAO survey, the General Services Administration was late in paying 73 per cent of its bills, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare was tardy with 68 per cent of its payments and the Department of Transportation with 64 per cent.

The National Education Association is launching a letter-writing and lobbying campaign for fulfillment of what apparently was one of President Carter's low priority campaign commitments: the creation of a new Department of Education.

Carter has had the Department of Energy added to the Cabinet roster, but there is no indication that the administration is considering another for education.

The education association is distributing a series of statements in which candidate Carter said that he favored a separate, Cabinet-level Department of Education.

There is a bill, cosponsored by half the members of the Senate, to set up such a department, but it is not likely to get anywhere unless the administration advocates the move.

Carter remains pledged to balance the federal budget by the end of his term as president, although congressional analysts question whether he can do it without sacrificing his other announced economic goals.

While he grapples with the problems of budget, inflation and unemployment, conservatives are pushing for a constitutional amendment to outlaw federal deficits.

According to the conservative newsletter Fact 19, state legislatures have adopted resolutions seeking a constitutional convention to adopt an amendment that would require a balanced federal budget.

It would take action by 34 states to call a convention, and there's no real prospect of that. So the move is really a gesture, but it does give conservatives a way to dramatize the issue.

Corn Crop Down By 40 Per Cent

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Drought, followed by mold, has reduced the state's corn crop by at least 40 per cent for a loss of $161 million, a North Carolina State University grain marketing economist says.

Mold has primarily affected feed corn, not that headed for dinner tables, says Dr. T. Everett Nichols Jr.

He said the corn's resistance to mold may have been weakened by the dry weather. It is not known how much corn has been contaminated by the mold which produces a poison, aflatoxin.

"We think it's caused by insects, but we don't have all the solutions," Nichols said. "We used to think it was caused by wet weather, but then we find that, in a year like this year with dry weather, the incidence is even greater."

Grain dealers are stepping up checks for the mold, and farmers are advised to avoid mold-infected areas during harvesting.

Estimated value of this year's corn crop is $198 million, compared to last year's $359 million.

"Prices have slipped since last year, and we planted about 10 per cent fewer acres this year, but a good portion of the value reduction of the current crop is directly attributable to

New-Old Musical Show Recordings Scheduled

By DONALD SANDERS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Three new-old musical show records soon to be released feature such people as George Gershwin, Fred and Adele Astaire, Irving Berlin, Cole Porter, Ethel Merman, Eddie Cantor and the legendary Bert Williams.

It's an extension of the jazz reissue series produced by the Smithsonian Institution and shepherded by its director of jazz programs and popular culture, Martin Williams.

Williams combed the archives of recording companies and private collectors to reconstruct three shows from individual records made by the people who starred in them.

The shows are the "Ziegfeld Follies in 1919," Gershwin's 1924 "Lady Be Good," and Porter's 1934, "Anything Goes."

There were no original cast recordings from the beginning of the art in about 1895 until the 1940s, when Decca recorded "Oklahoma" on 78 rpm discs.

"It sold like crazy," Williams said in an interview. "It surprised everybody except maybe the guy who thought it up — and maybe even him. It is still in print and selling well."

Recording by individual artists goes back before 1900, Williams said, citing Victor Herbert. "He was a freak on records. He recorded overtures, excerpts, songs — sometimes more than once. This material is scattered over many record labels." What Williams has done — he calls it archival reconstruction — is to hunt out original examples, and he said that in some instances he has found too much. He has outlined plans for 30 such records.

The first three will be issued in October if no hitches develop. The Smithsonian is able to draw on the archives of most record companies under an agreement that requires the records to be sold only by the Smithsonian, either in Washington or by mail. None are sold in retail outlets.

"We thought it would be quite useful if we could reconstruct shows, drawing on all possible source material, for purposes of scholarship, intellectual reasons, and entertainment," he said.

Entertainment should be the major attraction for the single LP records.

Williams began the Smithsonian reissue series in 1973 with a six-record album of classic jazz, from Scott Joplin to John Coltrane. It is still the top seller at $24.50.

Successful Technique Applied Again In New TV Mini-Series

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Several years ago, public TV offered two fine shows, "The White House Transcripts" and "The Watergate Cover-Up Trial," re-enacted accounts of the end of Richard M. Nixon's era.

The guy who made those shows — with actors, stage sets and verbatim dialogue from the Watergate tapes and trial — is using the same technique again for four more it-really-happened programs.

He's Thomas McCann, who with KERA-TV in Dallas and $625,000 from the Corporation for Public Broadcasting — CPB — has come up with "Eyewitness," a public affairs miniseries for public TV.

The first one-hour show, about a jetliner crash, the Karen Ann Quinlan case and the trial of a Massachusetts masseur on a prostitution charge, is being fed stations tonight by the Public Broadcasting Service.

(Check local listings, as it may air on different nights in various areas. KCET here, for example, won't show it until Sept. 7.)

As with his first two shows, McCann says the miniseries re-enacts major news stories "directly from public documents, verbatim, and we try to come as close as we possibly can to the real situation..."

But there are exceptions. In the jetliner segment, about the 1974 crash of an Eastern Airlines DC9 in South Carolina that killed 71 persons, he didn't use the names of the pilot or copilot.

This, he says, is both out of consideration to the fliers' families and because the copilot survived "and is trying to make a living again flying airplanes. There was no need to use his name."

He said the 10-minute segment, shown entirely in the plane's cockpit, uses the fliers' words as taped on a cockpit voice recorder, later made part of National Transportation Safety Board documents.

At the end, he said, newsman Andrew Macmillan recounts the board's findings on the probable cause of the accident.

McCann says "Eyewitness" is an outgrowth of a 90-minute pilot show CPB funded for $125,000 a year ago.

He said it was tested last fall in five cities — New York; Boston; Des Moines, Iowa; Birmingham, Ala., and Seattle, Washington.

"It got astonishingly high marks, so they decided to fund these four programs," he said, adding that each costs about $125,000.

He said all the series' re-enactments are based only on official transcripts. Invented dialogue or dramatist's surmise is taboo.

"I think there's less chance for distortion this way than in, say, 'Missiles of October'" — an ABC docu-drama on the Cuban missile crisis — "which is largely the product of a writer's mind," he said.

"There's more chance for objectivity and balance," McCann said he may seek CPB funding for six more "Eyewitness" shows in 1978. However, he added, he wants to see how the first four do.

'Fish'

Vigoda Becomes Citizen

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Detective Fish is retiring from the police force in September, but he's going to stick around as Citizen Phil Fish.

Abe Vigoda has been alternating between "Barney Miller" and his own ABC series, "Fish." But when the fall season opens he will retire from Barney's detective squad in a two-part show. Vigoda is only 55, but he plays Fish as an older man.

Last June, Vigoda staged a walkout of his own in a dispute with producer Danny Arnold over Arnold's refusal to release him to take a role in the NBC mini series, "79 Park Avenue."

Vigoda threatened to boycott the two ABC shows because he lost the role, but he reported to work on schedule. During time out from the series he did take roles in "The Cheap Detective" and the TV movie "The Comedy Company." He'll also be seen on the "Donny and Marie Show" in the fall.

"Fish" has now returned to Saturday night on ABC — where it will stay during the fall season — after a brief tenure on Thursdays.

"I'm optimistic everything will be resolved and productivity will be before us," said Vigoda. "We hope this will never happen again."

Vigoda taped the retirement show for "Barney Miller" his first week back on the job. He then went to work on "Fish," although he may return for as many as three guest appearances on "Barney Miller."

He said, "I have my regrets about leaving 'Barney Miller.' You always miss the old gang. The show had certain elements I liked. But having my own show is great, to see it develop and grow."

Fish is a man who sees a dark cloud in every silver lining. The comedy comes from his reactions to the people and situations around him. He does the best look of long suffering since Jack Benny.

On "Fish" the foster children he and Bernice (Florence Stanley) have taken in give him plenty of occasion to react. "I like working with the kids. They're wonderful actors," he said.

"I think one of the reasons the character caught on seems to be that there's a slice of everybody in Fish," he said. "He doesn't have the patience any more to deal with people, but he hasn't given up. His attitude is, 'I've seen all this before and I won't get excited about it.' I think a lot of people relate to that."

Crocodiles Involved In Sanctions, Eco

By JANET DAMEN
VICTORIA FALLS, Rhodesia (UPI) — Writhing furiously in the grip of Robert Gee's powerful right hand was a baby that one day will bring him a lot of money.

At his feet, crawling in and out of the murky water in the concrete shallow pond were another 50 babies, each about a foot long.

They were only six months old, but already their backs were as tough as old boots and their teeth sharp as razors.

Gee, 38, is a New Zealander who has been given official sanction to tamper with western Rhodesia's ecology, and his babies are crocodiles.

He came from Auckland 14 years ago, motivated by a keen interest in wildlife, and later joined the national parks game department.

In 1971, he took a gamble and, with two partners, founded a crocodile ranch. It is one of three in Rhodesia that raises the Nile species — the type blamed for the loss of four human lives a day in Africa. "It's a viable business, and we're starting to prove it," he said.

Despite the international trade sanctions against Rhodesia, Gee exports his skins directly to Europe, each coated with salt as a preservative.

"The Europeans like to do their own tanning," he said. Without specifically naming the recipients — for that would divulge information on Rhodesia's sanction-busting stratagems — Gee says France has the greatest interest in crocodile skins with West Germany coming in a close second. There is no market in the United States because the U.S. government bans the import of skins of endangered species, including the crocodile.

The Rhodesian government's interest in having Gee breed crocodiles involves more than a healthy balance-of-trade position. A prime concern is ecological.

Left to themselves, only about two per cent of newly born crocodiles manage to survive predators, including fellow crocodiles.

This quirk of nature coupled with what had been unrestricted crocodile hunting threatened to bring on an ecological upset of major proportions.

Before the authorities caught on to what was happening, the crocodile population of the Zambezi River, which divides Rhodesia and Zambia, was being depleted.

As the crocodiles vanished, their major food, the catfish, multiplied, and soon the other fish began to disappear, prey to the catfish.

"The crocodile helps to control this catfish population," said Gee.

So Gee's crocodile-breeding license stipulates that he will return to the Zambezi the yield of fully five per cent of the crocodile eggs he collects yearly.

The crocodiles picked for return are two years old and about 30 inches long, considerably heavier than they would be at that age if left to their own devices, says Gee.

"What we are trying to do is increase the crocodile population. The five per cent that we return is double the normal surviving rate."

His permit allows him to collect a maximum of 2,500 eggs a year.

Every October, Gee and crew trek along the river's Rhodesian bank looking for a mother crocodile's tracks, and retrieve the 45 or so eggs she has buried about a foot and a half deep in the sand.

The eggs are then gently nestled in sand-packed crates, which are stored in high-humidity incubating rooms at the ranch for the 90-day gestation period.

Once the period is over, the egg-dwellers need a little help to come out.

"They will start to call. It's quite an audible sound, much like a frog," Gee said.

"Once we get this full chorus coming from the individual clutch, we just take the box out, tip it up, the eggs are exposed and the little ones start hatching."

The newborns are taken immediately to ponds — each pond earmarked for one particular age bracket — and weaned onto a meat diet.

Ordinarily, the little creatures would make do with insects but, lacking the time for insect-collecting, Gee taps the local pork industry and safari operators for their excess meat.

The crocodiles are bred until they're four, by which time they will boast first class skins — small scales free from deep scratches or holes.

One reason relatively few women around the world will have crocodile-skin handbags this year is that crocodile skin is expensive.

One reason it's expensive is its durability. Another is that only about two-thirds of the reptile's skin is usable.

When the time comes, the crocodiles are killed with one bullet between the eyes fired from a pistol equipped with a silencer.

The reptile is then skinned. The valued skin is that part covering the animal's flank and belly.

At the moment, the skins fetch about $1.90 for every running 3/4-inch across its width.

As for the teeth and claws, they are snapped up by curio operators who turn them into ornamental pendants, or by black Rhodesian witch doctors who use them in their rituals.

And the meat? That's recycled into the crocodiles at the ranch.

Set Inventory Of Nixon Gifts

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time since Richard M. Nixon resigned the presidency rather than face impeachment three years ago, the government has broad authority to scrutinize his files.

Over Nixon's protests, U.S. District Court Judge Aubrey E. Robinson ruled Wednesday that federal officials may search hundreds of boxes of the former president's materials for clues to the whereabouts of some expensive foreign gifts which may be missing.

Up to now officials have been barred from rummaging through the Nixon records except in cases where searches were authorized for items connected to national security or legal proceedings.

Nixon had lost his battle for custody of the materials in June, when the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that seizure of the items by the Congress was constitutional. The materials were turned over to the General Services Administration.

Unless there is an appeal from Robinson's ruling, investigators will begin opening hundreds of file boxes next week under the supervision of a Nixon representative.

"I have no desire to further impugn the integrity of Richard Nixon and his family, but there are sufficient allegations that give me concern to proceed," Evan S. Dobelle, chief of protocol, said after a two-hour hearing on the question of foreign gifts to the former president.

"We understand that within Box 118-C there exist photos of various jewelry items that were not officially recorded in the gift unit. The inclusion of those in our records will make the only complete list we've ever had," he said. Archivists will look through a box that the judge said may contain "photographs of bracelets, photographs of trinkets and descriptive lists."

U.S. law requires officials, including presidents, to turn over to the State Department's gift unit any foreign gifts worth more than $50.

The Washington Post said on Monday that while some gifts to Nixon may be unaccounted for because of sloppy records, "in some cases, State Department and GSA officials say the gifts are believed to be in the custody of the Nixons, which is a violation of the law regulating the gifts."

S. C. Man Named To N.C. Post

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt reached across the border Wednesday to name the state's head of alcohol and drug abuse programs.

Earl W. Griffith, 47, will fill the post of assistant secretary of the Department of Human Resources for Alcohol and Drug Abuse. He leaves a job in South Carolina as director of prevention and education for that state's Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse.

"We must emphasize prevention and early treatment," Hunt said at a news conference to announce the appointment. "There will never be enough money to repair the lives that are already broken."

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, AUGUST 26, 1977

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Avoid making drastic changes or doing dramatic things which are in your mind. Go along with other persons as well as you can, giving them the benefit of any doubts. Do whatever you have to do in proven ways.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Be careful in dealing with friends today, who are apt to be out of sorts as arguments could follow. Don't be forceful where some personal aim is concerned.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Taking no risks with your worldly status is wise. Do not jeopardize credit in any way. Be more diplomatic in business. Take time for some charitable work.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You want to make radical changes, but it is best not to do so. Your intuition is not accurate during day but rely on it implicitly by night.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Be conventional in the handling of obligations. You get good ideas how to advance more quickly. Don't irk a loved one.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Try to cooperate with partners more and don't criticize and all works out better for all of you. Do whatever will stamp you as an excellent citizen.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be more efficient at your work and don't waste so much time talking to others. Discuss with co-workers how to speed up production.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Iron out some wrinkle from a project you are working on. You want to enjoy yourself at amusements, but wait for a better time. Have better rapport with loved one.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Home affairs are difficult so get out into the business world and get much accomplished. Be careful not to start any arguments at home.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't criticize partners but encourage them instead and you can then make real progress. Handle problems early and then work on a hobby you like.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Show that you are sensible in the handling of money. Make new plans to advance. Improve budget, also. Watch reputation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) If you are discontented, don't show it to others. Be with good friends later and your outlook is better.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) If you feel imposed upon, do something about it and clear the air. Handle annoying tasks so they are behind you. Control temper at home.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be full of doubts and questions early in life and will need encouragement and good guidance. Then life can be successful and happy. There is much concern for fellow man. Education should be slanted along lines of public work, personnel work, humanitarianism, charities, etc.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Dear voter in the 1st Congressional District:

If you drive a car...if you heat your home...
if you cook food...if your job is important to you...
this message is for you.

We're writing to you while your Senators and Representatives are home on recess, because right now may be your last chance to contact them before they make the final decision on the proposed national energy program. Before they do, we believe it's vital for you to consider what the program really means, not only for you but for your children and their children.

The effect of the proposed energy program appears to us to be twofold: first, to raise revenues by increasing your taxes; and second, to make energy so expensive that its cost will force you to use less. It is a policy which jeopardizes economic growth and sows the seeds for long-term energy shortages. Its backers say that reduced energy use and higher taxes are the only way to go. They pay little attention to the alternative of developing more domestic energy supplies.

We say there is no shortage of energy resources and that America does not have to live with a long-term energy supply crisis. The resources are there: enough coal to last for hundreds of years, sizable amounts of oil and gas still to be discovered, and ample uranium for nuclear power. Beyond that, there's an infinite amount of sunlight for solar energy, and other sources like the tides and the winds waiting to be harnessed.

What the country actually faces is a shortage of deliverable energy—energy you can use every day to run your car, keep your house warm, and operate the machinery where you work. This deliverability crisis is largely the creation of those in Washington and elsewhere who throw up roadblocks whenever the energy industry tries to move ahead on bringing you greater supplies.

The Administration's approach will hit you where it hurts most—in reduced standard of living for your family. If the program goes through as proposed, a U.S. Chamber of Commerce study says it will cost the average family more than $3,000 in new taxes between 1978 and 1985.

The proposed energy program has four major faults:

1. It would mean much higher energy costs to you, the consumer, without producing any new energy for your money.
2. Worse than that, it would actually erect new roadblocks to the production of additional U.S. energy supplies, making the deliverability shortage worse and boosting reliance on foreign oil.
3. It would weaken the economy by being inflationary without the offset of increasing energy supply.
4. It could hamper exports by American industry, because higher energy costs can make U.S. products non-competitive abroad. If your company sells its products overseas, your job could be in danger.

Let's take a closer look at these four drawbacks:

Higher costs through higher taxes, without benefits

If you're thinking of the burden on you as simply the taxes on gas-guzzling cars or an increase in federal gasoline taxes (which Congress may or may not pass), look at the fine print. Much more threatening are hidden costs to you like the "crude equalization tax" and the huge expense to industry of converting to coal on a hurry-up basis. If you think your electric bills are high now, think of them including your share of the taxes and conversion cost of the electric utility industry, estimated by the Edison Electric Institute to be $63 billion. And that's only a piece of the burden. You'll feel a pinch in your pocketbook in everything from the cost of heating oil to the price of a shave and shampoo.

Here's the bill you'd pay as a result of the Administration's proposed program between 1978 and 1985 in direct and indirect taxes alone, according to a study by Dr. Jack Carlson, chief economist of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce:

Crude oil taxes	$ 86 billion
Industrial taxes	33 billion
Utility taxes	6 billion
Auto efficiency taxes	10 billion
Additional income taxes due to inflation	47 billion
	$182 billion

These add up to more than $3,000 per family. If you add in industry conversion costs and inflation, and a proposed 4¢-a-gallon gasoline tax, the burden could get substantially worse. Some of this, under the program, might come back to you as rebates. But do you really think a great deal wouldn't stick to Washington's sides? Dr. James Schlesinger, the new Energy Department head, has suggested that a portion of this money might funnel into non-energy general expenses of the government.

In short, you're being asked to pay additional tax increases that the U.S. Chamber calculates to be "the largest in the peacetime history of the United States"—not to find more energy in the United States (which would give some purpose to the sacrifice) but simply to increase your energy costs.

According to a study by Milton Russell for the Washington-based Brookings Institution, the Administration's control program will cost the economy more than the de-control of oil and natural gas prices. Moreover, continued controls would lead to less oil and gas being discovered over the long term.

More roadblocks to energy development

New taxes might be bearable if they helped with the basic problem—increasing production of energy in the U.S. But instead, new roadblocks in recent legislation will actually retard any increase in U.S. supply, and thereby make America even more dependent on oil from abroad. Here are the roadblocks we mean:

- A Senate-passed bill would alter the time-tested system of auctioning offshore oil and gas exploration leases, build in new delays, and even open the door to federal exploration for oil and gas. Imagine the bureaucracy and inefficiencies this kind of activity would generate.
- Price controls on natural gas, in part responsible for last winter's crisis in which more than a million workers were laid off, would be retained and expanded, leaving the country with the basic cause of its past supply problem unchanged.
- New restrictions have recently been placed on both coal and nuclear power development. Even before that, paperwork had already extended construction time for a nuclear power plant to 10 years (compared to five in Japan); and, in our experience, it takes two years of untangling red tape just to begin construction of a new coal mine.

Fewer jobs and a weaker economy

Historically, the economy has grown as energy use expanded. Because little in the proposed energy program encourages U.S. energy production, there appear to be two possible outcomes—either a higher level of oil imports or a slowdown in economic growth. Since the President has come out strongly against more imports, we assume it would be the economy that would suffer, in several ways:

- The tax measures would raise prices—they'd be inflationary, without any offset in the form of more domestic energy to increase productivity.
- The program would further weaken the dollar, because every barrel of oil that's not produced domestically would have to be imported, and every ton of coal that remains in the ground would have to be made up through more oil from abroad. (In spite of the President's expressed wishes, we believe the level of imports will rise.) America is already experiencing the biggest foreign-trade deficit in its history—some $25 billion on an annualized basis—and all of it the result of importing oil at the current level. Again, America would be put into a Catch-22 situation: either import more oil, contrary to stated U.S. policy, or do with less energy and let the economy suffer.
- Unless the economy can sustain a pattern of solid growth, there won't be enough new jobs available to accommodate a growing labor force. This would strike hardest at precisely those groups needing jobs the most—the poor and disadvantaged, who are trying to get a foothold on the ladder of prosperity.

A blow to foreign trade

The program would export American jobs, because—with the new taxes—U.S. manufacturers would have higher energy costs than their foreign competition. This would put them at a disadvantage on the sale of goods abroad, and hurt their workers here at home. And here's another Catch-22 twist: If America is unable to sell its products abroad, it would lose a major way of recovering those dollars now leaving the country to pay for oil imports.

These are the major faults of the energy program now before the Congress. They're the reason we strongly urge you, in your own self-interest, to write your Congressman and Senators now, while there's still time. It isn't too late to protect you and your children from higher taxes and long-term energy shortages.

Write on your own stationery, or on the coupons below. If you're not sure which Congressional district you're in, call your local library to find out. But write right now, to prevent a terrible mistake in national policy.

The Honorable
United States Senate
Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Senator:

I am in favor of the following:

- ☐ Avoid taxes that would make American industry non-competitive in world markets, at a cost of American jobs and American dollars.
- ☐ Reduce the amount of government regulation over the way Americans exercise their traditional freedoms of choice.
- ☐ Encourage greater development of America's immense energy resources.
- ☐ Cut out energy waste where possible, without retarding economic growth.
- ☐ Accelerate construction of nuclear power plants, within clear and uniform safety guidelines.
- ☐ Decrease the red tape necessary to open coal mines.
- ☐ Reach environmental compromises to allow wider use of coal.
- ☐ Allow higher energy costs to act as an incentive for increased energy production, rather than accrue to the government as taxes.
