Lance Discloses Plane Sale Profit

By LEONARD CURRY
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Concluding 20 hours of testimony that could make or break his public career, Bert Lance disclosed Saturday he sold a plane to his own bank for $40,000 profit in 1975 and then took 1,300 free rides on it.

Lance's long, defensive account of the aircraft issue — including disclosure that the free trips sometimes mixed politics and pleasure with business — completed his third and final appearance before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee.

The rare, 7-1/2 hour Saturday session was a grueling, tense affair in which Republicans repeatedly questioned the ethics and legality of Lance's private financial and banking affairs.

But Lance gave no ground and, when the session ended at 6:45 p.m. EDT, President Carter's burly, seemingly unflappable budget director thanked the panel for his chance to correct "the half-truths, distortions and unfounded charges" leveled against him. Then he strode up to shake hands with each committee member.

"This hearing has been a personal ordeal for me and my family," Lance said in his closing statement. "I am satisfied ... that the American people now know me much better."

"I shall return to my duties as director of the Office of Management and Budget with even a firmer sense of responsibility and dedication."

Carter has indicated his decision whether to retain his old friend and adviser in that post would depend on how well he acquitted himself in his showdown with the senators.

Committee chairman Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., told Lance he sympathized with the "grueling three days" he had undergone — about 20 hours in the witness chair — and commended his "complete patience and courtesy and good humor under most difficult circumstances."

For Lance, the roughest moments came last, when Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., raised the airplane issue, challenged the ethics and legality of both his sale of the plane and his free use of it, and summed up the moral charge at the heart of all the allegations in the tangled Lance case.

"His standards in the private sector," said Percy, "are not acceptable for a high government post."

Bulldogged by Percy, Lance said he had sold the 10-year old personal plane to the Atlanta bank he headed in 1975 and then used it free of charge to attend football games and the Mardi Gras, and to ferry former National Chairman Robert Strauss and Democratic bigwigs to Jimmy Carter's 1976 presidential campaign opener.

Lance, as Carter's budget director one of the powers in the administration, maintained there was nothing illegal, improper or unethical about the sale to the National Bank of Georgia or the use he made of the plane as that bank's president.

In another late development, Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., asked for a formal audit of Lance's current personal financial status as part of the probe into his fitness to remain in high federal office.

Lance protested, but the committee chairman indicated the audit request would be brought up for a vote when all panel members are present.

Flea-Market A Success

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor
The first venture by the Downtown Greenville Association, Inc. into a public use of the mall space for a festive day long flea-market type of venture on Saturday has been termed a "big success."

"It has been a big success, a good day, and already many people have asked that we repeat it soon," Linda O'Connor, coordinator for yesterday's premiere downtown flea-market said early Saturday afternoon.

"We'll be thinking in terms of the possibility of two such events a year," Dave Mosier, executive director of the association commented.

Mosier added that "we hope to encourage public use of the downtown mall facilities for public events such as this. It's good for the people and for the merchants too."

A total of 84 spaces were rented at $1 per rental space to individuals, and at $5 to groups. "Most rentals were by individuals," Mosier pointed out, "and we will have approximately $100 from rental collections to donate to the Salvation Army." Mosier said the charitable agency would use the funds to help pay for Christmas baskets for the needy.

"We've had a tremendous variety of things," O'Connor commented. "Arts and crafts, coins, stamps, plants, furniture, a really surprising variety."

A local music group, the O'Sville Rainbow Band headed by Mitch Bowen provided music periodically during the day.

The day long event got underway shortly after 9 a.m. and continued until nearly 7 p.m. Big crowds were the rule during nearly every hour of the day, with hundreds on hand at most any given hour.

Senior Wayne Dawson Studies By Ham Radio

By DEBBIE JACKSON
Reflector Staff Writer
Radios have been entertaining people since their creation and last week they proved to be a special source of enjoyment for a young man in Pitt Memorial Hospital.

David Wayne Dawson, Jr., a senior at South Lenoir High School in Kinston, became paralyzed during a diving accident in July. The good-natured 18-year old has made considerable progress but was not able to return to school in the fall.

However, through the wizardry of radio the class-room came to him last week.

According to Wayne, his teacher Andy Hill and Buck Sitterson, Administrator for Fiscal Affairs at the hospital, became "ham" radio operators. The two men are friends and decided that it would be a good idea to let Wayne talk to his classmates and other teachers in Kinston.

"Wayne was able to talk to most of his friends," said Craig Quick, Pitt Memorial Personnel Director.

"The radio unit is not down in the rehabilitation center where he can get to it all of the time, but it's available for him to use when he needs it," Quick continued.

Wayne said that he will be able to talk to his friends again in about two weeks.

Wayne said that he has been able to keep up with his studies with the aid of a home-bound teacher who comes each Friday.

"She comes to give me tests and pick up my work," he laughed and added that his English teacher was afraid she had been giving him too much to do.

Wayne said that his rehabilitation schedule keeps him busy. He goes to occupational therapy from 8:30-9:30 a.m. and to physical therapy from 9:30-11 a.m. Then there are two more sessions of each in the afternoon.

He added that he does not notice his improvement but that others do.

"People that see me about every other day can see my improvement."

Wayne hopes that he will be able to continue therapy at home fairly soon. "I know I'll be here a pretty good while before that happens," he said smiling.

"I'm still hoping that I will regain the use of my legs," he added. Wayne is now able to use his arms through the help of the rehabilitation center.

"The people here are just something else."

Wayne's friends have also been giving him support, not only through visiting him and setting up the radio operation, but also by sending him get-well cards. One wall of his hospital room is completely covered with various sentiments.

"I've received about 250 cards. We couldn't get them all on the wall so some of them are at home."

Wayne was seriously injured while diving off a pier at the Emerald Isle Sound this summer.

"I was starting to go skiing and jumped off the pier," he said. He said that he had dived off the same pier many times before.

"The wind must have been holding the tide out."

Wayne said that originally he had planned to go to Lenoir Community College and eventually be a farmer. He does not know what his plans will be now, but he does hope to graduate with his classmates in the spring.

Award

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Greenville's grand lady of the Democrat Party, Mrs. J. B. Spilman, was awarded the N.C. Democrat of the Year Award in a ceremony held at Sheraton-Park Hotel.

This marks the first time this award has been given, with Governor Jim Hunt presenting the award, Congressman Walter B. Jones, Pitt Demo Chairman Mrs. Betty Speir, and Precinct Chairman Dr. D. D. Gross accepted the award on behalf of Mrs. Spilman, who was not present.

Presentation of the award took place during the annual meeting and banquet of the N.C. Democratic Club held in Washington. Approximately 300 North Carolina Democrats were on hand for the event.

Miserable Conditions For Migrants Working In N.C.

By KEVIN P. McKENNA
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Conditions amounting to involuntary servitude exist in many of North Carolina's migrant labor camps, witnesses said at a hearing held here Saturday by the N.C. Advisory Committee to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights.

Most of the testimony concerned the plight of those in the "migrant stream" that moves north from Florida as the harvest begins in other Eastern states.

About 15,000 migrant workers, or 10 to 15 per cent of the state's seasonal farm work force, are employed in North Carolina at the height of the harvest each year, according to figures compiled by a private agency.

Staff members from a Florida legal-services agency and migrants who worked in North Carolina fields this summer were among those to testify that conditions in the state's labor camps often do not meet legal requirements.

Carl Webster, staff attorney for Florida Rural Legal Services, said that of the more than 100 camps in Johnston and Sampson counties that his agency visited this summer, none had housing for migrant workers that met federal standards.

"If the laws were enforced as they are written, the conditions of farm workers in this state would improve immeasurably," Webster said.

"In many cases, crew leaders use the threat of guns, beatings, dogs or other forcible means of return to preventing farmworkers from leaving the camps," he said. Although such practices amount to peonage, a form of involuntary servitude, crew leaders "know the law won't be enforced," he added.

Robert Ritchford, who has been a migrant farm laborer for five years and spent three months this summer in a Harnett County camp, said that when he left the camp, "I had $12 in wages, and other guys didn't even have that much."

Meals at the camp usually consisted of "four or five spoonfuls of beans and a couple pieces of bread," he said, and once the crew leader left the camp for a weekend and locked the kitchen, leaving the workers without food.

However, James Wells, chairman of the N.C. Advisory Committee on Services to Migrants (Continued on page A-10)

Entitled To Compensation

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — Four inmates and the families of three others are entitled to up to $30,000 a apiece for injuries from a 1976 fire at a state prison unit, a state industrial commission official has ruled.

Three state prison officials were found negligent in connection with the blaze that killed eight inmates and injured 23 others at the McDowell County prison unit in Marion.

Ten Students Hospitalized

YADKINVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Seven children were hospitalized Friday following a school bus accident in which the bus went out of control and ran off a highway. The children were last reported in satisfactory condition.

Twenty-two other persons, including the bus driver, were slightly injured.

In a separate accident in Raleigh, five junior high school students were injured by a school bus ran into another bus. Three students were hospitalized. Drivers of both Raleigh buses were teenagers.

No Indictments

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A federal grand jury wrapped up its investigation of the Charlotte Police Department Friday by deciding it would issue no indictments in the case.

Former U.S. Attorney Keith Snyder, who began the grand jury's probe into allegations that illegal telephone wiretaps were used in some narcotics cases, said the jury's decision ended the probe but he would not say how he felt about the decision.

Thanks To Shriners, Denise Newman Walks

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

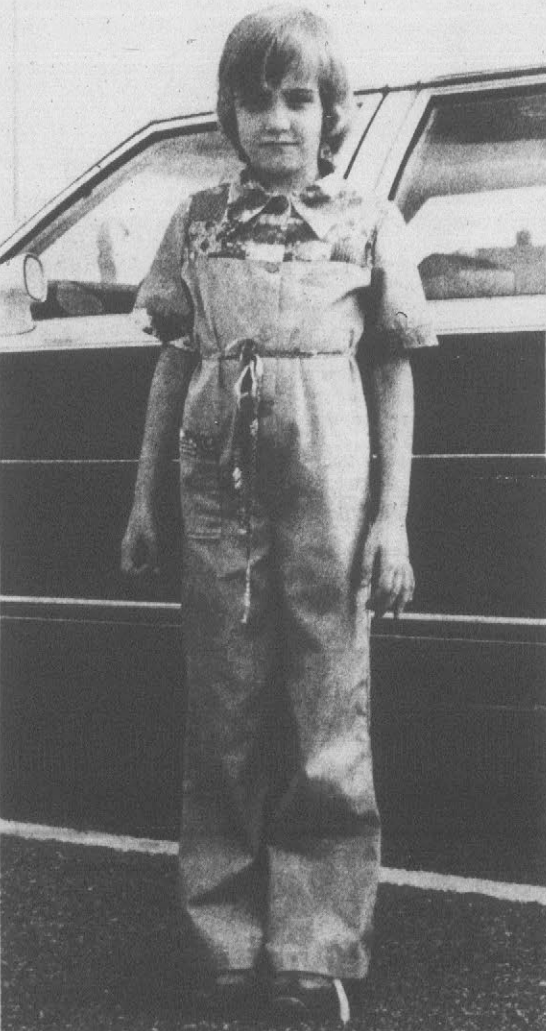

Denise Newsome walks past you now and she's no different from any other pretty third grader. Yet her parents, Rudy and Gladys Newsome, tell you she was born with a club foot so extreme it curled up and lay against the calf of her leg.

The Newsomes give the credit for the corrective work that eliminated Denise's club foot condition to the skill of the doctors at the Shriner's Crippled Children's Hospital in Greenville, S. C. and the generosity of Shriners here and all over the nation.

"Denise was treated here for two years," her father said. "She was put in a cast when she was one day old and from then on it was cast and braces. Yet nothing seemed to help very much. We kept asking about surgery and kept being told to wait till she was older. At Chapel Hill they said her condition would not worsen and put her on a long, long waiting list. In the meantime, we were worrying and spending money. We spent in the neighborhood of $7,500 on her foot during those two years and we're not rich people."

Mrs. Newsome was working at Maxwell Brothers Furniture Company at the time. "My boss, Bob Collier, knew how worried I was," she said, "and he asked me if Rudy and I would agree to let Denise go to the Shriners Crippled Children's Hospital in Greenville, S. C. if the doctors there thought they could help her. We talked it over and decided that maybe this was the answer we'd been seeking."

Bob Collier and Bruce Sloop, both local Shriners, made all the arrangements and soon Denise was entered in the hospital, where the doctors said they believed they could make her (Continued on page A-3)

Can Expect State Pay Raise

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt picked a popular topic Friday as he told state employees they can expect at least a cost-of-living raise next year.

"It is difficult to predict what the budget picture will be next year," Hunt told the 700 delegates and guests at the North Carolina State Employees Association convention.

"Right now, revenues look good. But we have yet to measure the impact of the drought and our farmers' losses on the economy," he cautioned.

State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham has estimated a $500 million loss due to agricultural setbacks.

Hunt cited the pay-and-benefit package for state employees passed by the General Assembly this year as an example of his administration's commitment to state employees. He said the $75-million package amounted to a 10 per cent increase in total compensation, including a 6.5 per cent pay hike.

The governor said he was planning a study of the merit raise system, which he said has lost any real meaning over the years.

"Like you, I want it to be a real merit system, not one where the raises are just passed around to whoever the boss likes," he said.

Elected

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Dan Jones of Raleigh, director of the state Division of Teacher Allotment, was elected president of the North Carolina State Employees Association Saturday.

Not Advisable

WASHINGTON (AP) — A panel of scientists, physicians and laymen has concluded that women under the age of 50 are better off not getting annual X-ray screenings to detect possible breast cancer.

The conclusions were announced Friday after three days of testimony from scientists and doctors. The group's findings will be recommended to the National Institutes of Health.

Although the panel said annual X-ray exams have been shown to reduce breast cancer mortality among women 50 years or older, such tests could do more harm than good among younger women.

"There is no basis to screen routinely under age 50 because there is currently no evidence of any benefits, but at least a suspicion that it could do harm," said Dr. Samuel Thier of Yale University, chairman of the panel.

The group also recommended that doctors be required to tell women how much radiation they are receiving through mammographies, and that a maximum X-ray dose be established.

Pregnant Workers Bill Faces House

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tens of millions of pregnant workers would be assured of maternity leave and getting their jobs back if the House goes along with the Senate.

The Senate passed on Friday a requirement that employers include pregnancy benefits in all workers' disability plans.

The Senate's 75-11 vote was on legislation similar to that awaiting action in the House.

The bills, which would amend the 1964 Civil Rights Act, are an attempt to nullify a Supreme Court ruling that failure to include pregnancy in disability plans is not discrimination based on sex.

Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., the chief sponsor of the legislation, said it would guarantee the 36 million women in the nation's labor force that they can have time off to give birth without losing their jobs.

Williams noted that two-thirds of the women who work do so because their families need the money.

'Doomsday Scenario' On Bank Loans

By JOHN F. BARTON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a "doomsday scenario," American officials expressed fears Saturday developing nations, impoverished by skyrocketing oil prices, could threaten the world economy if they started defaulting on American bank loans.

A Senate Foreign Relations Committee report said many American banks have made extensive — possibly excessive — loans to developing nations which need the money to pay oil import prices that have jumped 600 percent since 1973.

The American banks are worried those nations are so broke they "will find it more in their interest to simply default or repudiate their external debts rather than to have to continue borrowing just to repay old loans," the report said.

"And if this happens, a domino effect could take place in which other debtor countries follow suit, the banks panic and start calling in their international loans, the stock market drops precipitously, and the international capital market collapses," the report said.

"This doomsday scenario may be extreme in its pessimism, but it is being taken seriously enough by responsible officials that a concerted international effort is now underway to prevent that first domino from falling," the report said.

Not only developing nations are hard pressed by the oil price increase. Such American allies as Britain, France, Italy, Turkey, Greece, Mexico and Brazil also are under severe financial strain, the report said.

The United States "can hardly afford to stand by and watch the economies of these countries collapse, or to have their governments undermined politically by financial difficulties," it said.

The report also said there "appears to be a direct correlation between economic hardship and political repression in many countries."

"The Carter Administration may therefore have to choose between pressing its international human rights effort, and supporting creditor demands for drastic economic austerity programs that can only be achieved at the expense of civil liberties in the countries that undertake them," the report said.

It also warned that Arab states could wreck the American economy by suddenly withdrawing the $50 billion they have deposited in American banks, should another Middle East war erupt and the U.S. support Israel.

New Gas Price Campaign

By EDWARD K. DeLONG
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Natural gas producers are mounting a new campaign to end federal gas price controls, but their ranks are split on the eve of a Senate showdown with administration advocates of even more widespread regulations.

Major producers have set their sights on total elimination of the control over wellhead gas prices exercised since 1954 by the Federal Power Commission.

A newly formed splinter group of small independent producers, however, is pushing a less drastic compromise, fearing that total deregulation has no hope of winning congressional approval.

The producers' battle with the administration will be joined in the coming week.

Gas industry officials lost a similar fight in the House, which rejected deregulation in favor of Carter's plan to set a ceiling price of $1.75 per thousand cubic feet and to extend federal controls from interstate gas sales to the presently unregulated intrastate market.

The administration argued in the House that deregulation would be a consumer "ripoff" costing the public between $41 billion and $120 billion through 1985 and that $1.75 price for newly discovered gas is enough over the existing $1.46 ceiling to spur exploration and head off gas shortages.

Blackbeard the Cat lost an eye when he was struck by a car recently. But a good veterinarian fixed him up good as new — minus the eye, of course.

He needs a home and will be a very affectionate pet, Humane Society President Jeanette Fiore says. His veterinary bill is paid, so the adoptive owner will not be obligated to pay it, though donations toward it will be accepted of course. A reduced fee spaying certificate will be given with him.

Other pets for which the Humane Society is trying to find homes now include two spayed female cats, three kittens, and two puppies.

Eight pets were given away by the Society during the Ayden Collard Festival and some donations were received.

Anyone wishing to adopt a pet may call Humane Society President Jeanette Fiore at 758-0468 any day between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m.

Reduced fee spaying certificates will be given with any and all animals given away by the Humane Society and the Society is willing to help out with the spaying costs of any pet. This is such an effective way of cutting down on the number of unwanted animals without homes, Mrs. Fiore said.

Other cats and dogs also needing homes are available from the Greenville and Pitt County Animal Shelters. City Shelter hours are from 8 to 9 a. m., from noon to 1 p. m. and from 4 to 6 p. m. any weekday. County Shelter hours are from 3:30 to 5 p. m. weekdays.

CPRC Money

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. has recommended that the Coastal Plains Regional Commission put up $1.2 million for 13 North Carolina projects.

The money would be used to supplement other grants by federal and state agencies for projects worth $7.7 million.

The largest grant recommended by Hunt, $223,000, would go to Pamlico County for a $4.2 million county water project.

Two File In Winterville

WINTERVILLE — Two filed in Winterville Friday for the office of mayor in the forthcoming municipal elections.

He is married to the former Gail Stokes of Ayden and they have one young son. He is a member of Reedy Branch F.W.B. Church, a member of Pitt County Lodge 734, and a charter member of the Winterville Jaycees.

Dail, who has served several terms as mayor, is a retired engineer.

He is married to the former Dorothy McLawhorn, and they have two sons and two daughters. Dail is a member of the Winterville Baptist Church, a former member of the Winterville Fire Department, and a charter member of the Winterville Kiwanis Club.

Lance Discloses Sale Profit

the plane issue late in the day when Lance, under Percy's probing, said he sold his personal executive aircraft to the National Bank of Georgia for $120,000 in July, 1975, when he was NBG president.

Lance said he had purchased the plane, a 1966 Beechcraft Air Queen, only 18 months earlier for $80,000 but had made extensive improvements to it.

"The minimum profit would be $40,000," Percy said. "But the real profit would be more" because Lance had taken income tax deductions for depreciation.

After the sale, Percy said, Lance had used the aircraft 1,343 times for bank business, free of charge, over a two-year period — an average of about twice a day, seven days a week.

Reviewing a list of flights he considered questionable, Percy brought Lance around to the Sept. 5, 1976, political rally in Warm Springs, Ga., where Carter formally kicked off his campaign for president. Lance admitted the NBG plane was used to transport Strauss and several other party leaders from Atlanta to Warm Springs.

That spa was the vacation home of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, and one of the passengers was Roosevelt's son, Franklin, Jr.

"We extended the courtesy to fly the Roosevelts and Mr. Strauss ... to Warm Springs that night, because it was very difficult (for them to get there)," Lance said.

Defending such use of the aircraft — for which he admitted the bank was not reimbursed — Lance said: "I think that's good usage of an airplane in relationship to something that's very prominent taking place in a business development situation."

"You did it for the purpose of facilitating their attendance at cut problem is presented by use of the bank's aircraft and this is something that is being looked into," he said.

"... It's not possible to use bank aircraft to attend political conventions, rallies or political events and its not ordinarily acceptable — if ever acceptable — to use them for personal purposes."

Percy also asked Lance if he had declared the free trips as income and paid taxes on them. Lance said he had not.

He said all these trips were justified as business-related because he was trying to drum up business and build the "image" of his Atlanta-based bank among potential customers attending those social outings.

Percy said he had also attended Mardi Gras and did not consider it a proper place to conduct business. He made clear he disapproved Lance's conduct in all these cases.

"It seems to me a very clear-cut problem is presented by use of the bank's aircraft and this is something that is being looked into," he said.

"... It's not possible to use bank aircraft to attend political conventions, rallies or political events and its not ordinarily acceptable — if ever acceptable — to use them for personal purposes."

Percy also asked Lance if he had declared the free trips as income and paid taxes on them. Lance said he had not.

Quake

TRIESTE, Italy (AP) — A strong earthquake rocked parts of Italy, Austria and Yugoslavia Saturday. No casualties were reported.

The tremor collapsed homes and knocked out power and water supplies near its epicenter in northern Italy, a region devastated by an earthquake that killed about 1,000 people last year.

Trieste's observatory measured the tremor, which struck shortly after midnight and lasted several seconds at 5.1 on the open ended Richter scale. A reading of 5.8 was recorded in Vienna. A mild aftershock was felt about an hour later.

The tremors were centered in the Friuli area of northern Italy, an area devastated when a quake measuring 6.9 on the Richter scale struck on May 6, 1976.

No Unions For Military

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor unions would be barred from organizing the armed forces under a bill headed for the House with overwhelming Senate approval.

The bill would prohibit members of reserve units and the National Guard, as well as military personnel on active duty, from bargaining collectively.

One of the bill's principal sponsors, Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., said the bill is not anti-union but is based on the belief that "unions simply don't have any place in a military organization."

Delay Execution

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A federal judge has spared John A. Spenkelink's life temporarily by ordering a delay in what was to be the first electric chair execution in the United States in 10 years.

"God has answered our prayers," said Jenny Richard of Anaheim, Calif., Spenkelink's former wife, after the judge's ruling Friday.

Spenkelink, 28, of Buena Park, Calif., was scheduled to die at 8:30 a.m. Monday. He was convicted of murdering an Ohio parole violator in 1973.

Held Under $1 Million Bond

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A man suspected of posing as New York fashion photographer Richard Avedon to obtain financial and sexual favors from women was held under $1 million bond Saturday for rape while five states sought him on an array of other charges.

Superior Court Judge William S. Thompson set Oscar E. Kendall's bond at twice the amount suggested by Assistant U.S. Attorney Mark Tuohy III at a preliminary hearing Friday because of the nature of the charges.

Bhutto Again Under Arrest

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (UPI) — Deposed Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, free on $15,000 bail on a murder charge, was jailed again Saturday for martial law violations one day before the start of Pakistan's national election campaign.

Bhutto and 10 of his supporters were arrested early Saturday for "acting against the safety ... and efficient conduct of martial law," imposed by the military government of Gen. Zia Ul-haq, which seized power in a bloodless coup July 5.

Avoided Discussion

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Joan Little avoided discussion Friday of a decision by the state Parole Commission to take preliminary action toward paroling her.

The Chocowinity black woman was acquitted two years ago on charges of murdering a white jailer.

"She turned down several interviews today," said Dr. David Lane, a Raleigh dentist who employs Miss Little as a dental assistant on a work-release program.

Had To Watch Executions

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Weeping relatives of 15 Ugandans convicted of plotting against President Idi Amin were forced to watch a firing squad shoot the men one by one, an eyewitness said Saturday.

"The silence between executions was punctuated by the sobs of grief of the relatives although they had been warned not to cry during the executions," he recalled.

Ugandan soldiers rounded up the relatives before the Sept. 9 executions and took them to the execution site in the Ugandan capital of Kampala, said the witness, who asked not to be identified.

Policeman Shot

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — A 23-year-old Wilson Police Department patrolman was shot in the arm Saturday morning while chasing a vehicle through the downtown business district.

Robert Cook, who has been on the force six months, was treated for a gunshot wound in the right arm and later released from a local hospital.

"The ratio of nurses to children is about one to four or less and, in some ways, she got more attention than we could have given her at home. There was every kind of entertainment possible — nursery school, regular classrooms for the older ones, Sunday School — just everything."

"There was never any charge to us," Mrs. Newsome said. "They even offered to pay for our travel back and forth to see Denise and for accommodations while we were in South Carolina each time, but we told them no, that we'd take care of this ourselves."

"In some ways we felt strange accepting so much help for Denise, because her problem seemed so small compared to those of so many of the other children we saw there," Newsome said. "We saw so many pitiful ones, but saw so many miracles worked too — just like Denise's."

Compromise Late In Coming

When five environmental groups brought a suit which held up the Chicod Creek Watershed Project in 1971, it was recognized that the outcome would have national implications.

The environmentalist objected to the channelization of Chicod Creek which drains a considerable portion of south Pitt County.

It was also recognized at the time that the prospects were there for a long, drawn out court battle.

Neither outlook was incorrect, but fortunately the controversy seems to be settled.

An agreement has been reached and signed by U. S. District Court Judge John D. Larkins, Jr. Under the agreement some 58 miles of the project will be channelized. The remaining eight or so miles, which run through a swampy section, will be cleared and snagged to remove fallen logs and other debris.

Lyn Brown, deputy soil conservationist with the U. S. Soil Conservation Service, said the SCS is pleased that the settlement could be reached.

Frank M. Wooten, attorney for the Chicod Creek land owners, said, while neither side was totally happy with the settlement "it accomplished about what we wanted to accomplish when we started out."

Some channel work was given up, but the project was enlarged by extending the improvements.

The legal fight over Chicod Creek was a long and difficult one, but a compromise has been found which is at least acceptable to both sides.

Striking Contrast Between Societies

There has been much done to improve relations between the United States and China.

Yet, Chinese officials are still not ready to fully open their doors to the western press.

The Associated Press, worldwide news gathering organization, reports that China says the time is "not ripe" for opening an AP bureau in Peking.

The contrast between our open society and the closed society of communism is still most striking.

School Safety Emphasis

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Schools, like many businesses across the state, are facing increased attention to safety.

"With increased federal, state, and local emphasis being placed on safety, it is imperative that more emphasis be placed on the safety aspects of science instruction," notes the introduction to a recent State Department of Public Instruction booklet.

Put out by the science division and sent to all local schools, the publication says that "Unless safety precautions are taken to protect the student and others during the performance of certain science activities, science programs could, conceivably, eventually suffer from the banning of certain effective activities considered too dangerous to be performed in available settings in or around our schools."

Major Job

A forward from A. Craig Phillips, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, cautions: "Safety instruction should become an integral part of the science program (in all grades). With the mainstreaming of handicapped students into regular classes on the increase, and courts becoming more sensitive to the well-being of the individual, school personnel must accept the safety of each student as one of their major responsibilities."

The state department suggests that each local school set up a safety committee for regular review of hazards and procedures and to monitor safety techniques. Science teachers should learn first aid, and students should be drilled in safety first procedures and attitudes.

The National Safety Council says junior high school grades have the highest frequency of accidents, while elementary grades report the lowest.

The state department booklet provides a thorough outline of potential safety hazards in school laboratories, outdoor classrooms, and science programs; guidelines for operation of the school facilities, suggestions on educational programs, detailed information on safe conduct of various experiments, and first aid procedures.

Governor Objects

Gov. James B. Hunt says he has "conveyed my feelings to them" in an effort to reverse a rules change adopted by the recently organized Judicial Nominating Commission.

That group is to submit three to five names of people to the governor for his selection of judges to fill vacancies on the Superior Court bench.

At the first commission meeting, the members determined that in some cases there may not be enough fully qualified people in a given area to make up a slate of at least three.

Members also decided that they would submit the names to the governor in order of preference.

"That is not appropriate. I do not wish for them to rank the individual by order of preference, but to submit them to me in alphabetical order. I have asked them to help me locate and select qualified nominees... but the appointment is my Constitutional and legal responsibility," Gov. Hunt says.

The governor said he would prefer that the full list of nominees contain people equally well qualified so that whomever he selects would be an outstanding choice.

There are indications the governor will urge the commission to reverse its decision. Giving names to the governor in order of preference creates at least two potential political hazards:

—there would be jockeying within the nominating procedure for preferential listing;

—should the governor pass the first or second choice for another down the list, later repercussions could prove embarrassing.

Sunday Morning Notes

Tail gating has become a way of life for East Carolina University avid football fans.

The fans looked forward to two big opening games with N. C. State and Duke on successive Saturdays this year.

N. C. State was a sell out and the Duke game was virtually a sell out. That means huge traffic jams and necessity of getting to the stadium parking lots early—sometimes several hours before a game.

Large numbers of fans simply pack up fried chicken, potato salad and other picnic items and dine right in the parking lots.

The method ranges from spreading the food right in the truck of the car (hence tail gating), to sitting on the grass, to unfolding elaborate picnic tables complete with table cloths.

The N. C. State and Duke games were sort of like a giant family reunion for East Carolina fans... and like a family reunion there was plenty of food.

Gov. Jim Hunt was a guest in The Raleigh Times football forecasting panel which appeared in that newspaper Sept. 8.

He did right well, too. The governor had a 16-3 accuracy record and tied for the lead among the six man panel for that week. In fact it was the best record for a first-week guest since 1971. That year Earle Edwards, former N. C. State coach went 16-4.

Gov. Hunt could have done better, if he had known what thousands of rabid ECU fans knew prior to the ECU-Duke game.

That game was one of his misses. He picked Duke.

He was accurate in predicting it would be a close one, however.

Other Editors Say Test The Law

(Goldsboro News-Argus)

Censure of Judge Milton Nowell by the North Carolina Supreme Court may not end the issue.

If his agony is prolonged, it will be of Judge Nowell's own doing.

The next step, if the matter is to be pursued, would be to test the constitutionality of the 1971 law creating the Judicial Standards Commission and procedures for disciplining judges.

It should be noted that Dr. I Beverly Lake dissented when the censure order was voted by other members of the Supreme Court.

Dr. Lake's position had nothing to do with Judge Nowell, himself, but was a manifestation of his belief that the law is unconstitutional.

If the constitutionality of the law is to be tested, the public should regard those proceedings in their proper perspective.

At issue will not be whether Judge Nowell did what he was accused of doing and whether this brought disrepute on the judiciary. In effect, the procedures rather than the judge will be on trial.

Perhaps a full testing of the 1971 law is needed.

But no matter what the outcome of that test might be, the actions of Judge Nowell — and others in the 8th Judicial District — were horrible and were found to have been such by both the Judicial Standards Commission and the State Supreme Court.

The Protestations that Judge Nowell — and others — were merely victims of groundless accusations by the press ("half-truths and innuendoes," one prominent county official contended) have proven to be a flimsy defense.

Judge Nowell and the others were not victims. They were the perpetrators.

The victim was the judicial system and the public confidence in it.

Action by the Standards Commission and the Supreme Court should restore the public's respect for and confidence in the judicial system.

The system itself should be judged on the basis of the actions of those who would protect it rather than on a relative few who would pervert it.

This is what Judge Nowell did.

He is no hero.

And he is a martyr only in the minds of those who would place a higher priority on favoritism than on the integrity of the courts.

The ECU Pirates probably have one fan from Pennsylvania.

Among the cars at the Duke game was one with a Pennsylvania license tag.

The tag bore the letters ECU-1. What's more the colors were close enough to the Pirate purple and gold. It had a yellow background with a blue-purple border and numbers.

Interestingly the car also had a Duke sticker on its bumper.

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — A public campaign ordered by the highest authorities in Laos to idolize the Soviet Union has caught Indochina watchers by surprise.

The campaign, now under way, was ordered Aug. 24 by the tiny communist nation's all-powerful politburo and is to peak in November.

"The Soviet Union (is) the leader of the world proletarian revolution," said a Laotian politburo directive broadcast by Vientiane Radio.

Although it is no surprise Laos has taken a pro-Soviet stance, the vehemence of the campaign raises questions about Vietnamese influence in Laos, and indicates to some

The National Park service expected little difficulty in obtaining sufficient land along the Outer Banks to establish the south's first coastal park.

The nucleus of the proposed park existed in the U. S. Biological Survey, the Cape Hatteras State Park, and the national monument saluting the Wright Brothers at Kitty Hawk.

This land comprised 7,540 of the 10,000 acres needed before the governmental Park agency was expected to assume administration of the land for park purposes.

A ruling on this was sought from him by the Mecklenburg county attorney after a large delegation of women who were fully qualified for jury duty other than sex, appeared before the county board and demanded that the names of qualified women be added to the jury lists compiled by the commissioners.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Strategy Of Concessions

By ROWLAND EVANS

and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — A top Carter policymaker has devised an arms control strategy that offers escalating concessions to give the appearance of progress in SALT negotiations with the Soviet Union in order to avert congressional interference.

The secret "SALT strategy paper" drafted by Leslie H. Gelb, director of the State Department's politico-military affairs office, affords a rare peek into unguarded thinking at upper reaches of the Carter administration. Dr. Gelb's 15-page memorandum, dated July 26, boils down to these two imperatives: first, agreement with the Soviet Union in the strategic arms limitation talks (SALT) transcends mere military considerations; second, restrictions imposed by Congress must be avoided whatever the cost.

Specifically, the Gelb strategy would extend the present SALT I treaty, due to expire Oct. 3, "through informal means" rather than "formal extension, with the prospect of critical (congressional) hearings and restrictive amendments." Such an administration effort has long been known. But Gelb makes specific how to pull it off: show some progress on current SALT II negotiations. The Gelb strategy implies such progress is possibly only by severely limiting U.S. cruise missile deployment.

This proposal generated astonishment and distress within the Carter administration when Gelb's paper was circulated six weeks ago. Nevertheless, the strategy being hammered out at high-level meetings last week was a first cousin of Gelb's (though the Defense Department is demanding major changes). Moreover, friendly Congressmen are being privately consulted this week about "informal" extension of SALT I.

The "interim accord" curbing intercontinental missiles was signed at Moscow in 1972 as SALT I. If a new SALT II treaty placing overall limits on strategic weapons is not agreed on before Oct. 3, SALT I will expire. This has generated a mood of deep alarm as reflected by Gelb's strategy paper.

"No progress on SALT by October risks further straining overall East-West relations and, in turn, inhibiting cooperation on other bilateral issues," Gelb wrote. "Notwithstanding efforts to downplay its significance, no progress would magnify the negative international and domestic repercussions of a failure to meet the Oct. 3 deadline."

But Gelb, the former New York Times correspondent who is now a mastermind of President Carter's diplomacy, asserts that even with "some progress by October, it is doubtful that a SALT II agreement could be reached sooner than early 1978."

What's more, Gelb makes this unusual admission: "The U.S.S.R. has not accepted the major elements of the U.S. proposal and has not even responded to some."

Therefore, Gelb's solution, reflecting the administration's concern about second-guessing from Capitol Hill: "We should plan to extend the interim agreement (SALT I), preferably through parallel, non-binding declarations, avoiding formal extension that would legally require congressional approval."

But Gelb recognizes that extending SALT I would be dangerous if there were no significant progress in SALT II. "Informal extension would almost certainly be attacked for failure to obtain congressional approval, while formal extension would provide opponents a platform for criticism of the SALT process itself and the conduct of U.S.-Soviet relations. Most worrisome is the prospect that formal approval of an extension might be tied to congressional criteria for an

HEAVY END OF THE LOAD

A little boy was pulling a rope attached to the front of a wheelbarrow which was piled high with worn, shabby furniture. A poor family was moving out of one slum tenement and into another. The little boy's legs were tense as he strained forward in his efforts. "Isn't that load too heavy for you?" asked a bystander. The youngster smiled. "Oh no, sir," he replied, "my father is bearing the heavy end of the load at the other end of the wheelbarrow." And sure enough, the father, with the handles in his hands, was behind the pile of furniture, pushing the heavy load along.

The Christian believer is in much the same position in regard to his heavenly Father. He can strive mightily to conquer his sinful nature and do the will of God, working against odds which seem insuperable. But throughout he can be quietly confident that he will make progress in improving his moral and spiritual life because he knows that the Father in Heaven always takes the heavy end of the load.

Capital Spending Mood Is Up

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Out

there on the firing line, where the deals are real and theories and forecasts count for nothing, a significant change may be occurring in business' attitude toward capital spending.

The evidence is brand new and previously unreported, but it is hard — not an analysis or guesswork. It is this:

A spending mood seems to be developing. A wide spectrum of business is committing funds for expansion and improvement of plant and equipment. In effect, business is getting ready for better times.

The evidence seems to indicate that one of the most persistent economic laggards, capital spending, is about to feed new strength into an economy that has been losing strength. It suggests that wavering business confidence has begun to stabilize.

The most precise report comes from the big leasing-financing unit of Commercial Credit, a Control Data subsidiary.

"We're hearing more now in the marketplace about acquisition plans than we've heard since the boom years of 1973 and 1974," said a spokesman.

The upturn has been especially strong in just the past 60 days, said Donald Mikesell, a top executive with the unit, Commercial Credit-McCullough Leasing, which has about $1 billion of financial outstanding. Mikesell states with little qualification that his concern's current experience foretells a rise two months from now in the official government figures for capital spending.

"We're on the street. We're dealing with real problems and real demands," he said. "We know what we see 60 days ahead of the Commerce Department figures."

Mikesell said his company's experience has been particularly strong since mid-summer when, ironically, some economists first began to express fears that an economic slowdown might deteriorate into a recession.

Reviewing reports from the field by contact men whose job it is to finance the purchase or lease of expensive capital equipment, Mikesell stated: "We see no hard evidence of a turnaround. We're seeing an upswing."

Asked to name some of the items being financed, he cited construction equipment, machine tools, punch presses, materials handling equipment and transportation machinery.

Particularly strong interest appears to be emerging from energy related firms, he said, as well as from manufacturers whose products relate to consumer sales, such as store fixtures and restaurant equipment.

"This indicates to us that businesses are perceiving the need to increase productive capacity," he said. "And it also means that the confidence of many smaller business owners is improving, which has to be positive in the long run."

To the editor:

Last Sunday the Reflector ran a story on the trauma parents face when their newborn child dies. It has been a little more than a week since my husband and I were in a Pitt Memorial delivery room, watching our son come into the world. He was stillborn, to the shock of everyone present. Since his birth, we have gone through all the experiences your story described—and more.

Your article suggested that reminders of children and motherhood should be removed from the parental environment, if possible. Also, painful decisions should be avoided or postponed. In conclusion, the story's author felt that "funds should be appropriated and a study made" of the entire situation.

I beg to disagree with the author. Our reaction in the situation could have been one of avoidance, or the other extreme, one of self-pity. However, we chose the middle ground and faced the reality from the beginning. What help we did need to get us through the ordeal came in the form of love and moral support from our relatives and friends. No "appropriated funds" could have purchased what they gave.

To put this social problem in perspective, one needs only to make a comparison. It would be far more difficult to cope with losing someone loved for years than someone loved for minutes. Ingrained memories are harder to leave behind than are plans and dreams of the future.

So please, keep your money and your study. All that is needed by parents like us is what has always been there—common sense, love and compassion.

Mrs. Y. S. Lamm

To the editor:

I don't travel often during the week, but when I do, it seems I'm always going or coming back during "school bus hours".

The ones I get behind always have a top speed of 25 miles per hour. I believe in safety...but this is ridiculous! Also, the children never leave their homes until the school bus has stopped in front and put out his little red sign that I must wait for. Then they slowly amble out, one...at...a...time...! Slowly, they get on the bus, and slowly the sign is taken down and the bus eases off back to its blazing speed of 25 mph.

Is it not reasonable to ask the bus to pull off the road and park with doors closed and sign down at some point between pickups, whenever there are five or more cars trapped behind it? Is it not reasonable to have bus drivers insist that children be available to get on expeditiously when the bus arrives and stops? When I was a kid, I rode a bus from my country home into the great city of Vanceboro. If I was not waiting for the bus, it left me! Is it unreasonable to consider resuming such a practice?

This surely is a nuisance! If it bothers no one but me, I'll continue to tolerate it. However, if there are others of you reading this letter who feel as I do, possibly you should contact your school authority or school board. Maybe this nuisance could be alleviated just a little.

To the editor:

My friend, Millard Fuller, became a self-made millionaire before he was 30. But he and his wife, Linda, both felt an emptiness that could not be filled by a gorgeous house, cars, speedboats, etc.

About 12 years ago the Fullers abruptly gave away all their assets and dedicated themselves to a new kind of life in the service of others.

For a time Millard worked as a fund-raiser for a college. Then they moved to Koinonia Farm near Americus, Ga. There, with Clarence Jordan, they initiated a low-cost, no interest housing program for poverty families which continues to grow today.

In 1973 they took this successful experiment in community development to Equatorial Africa. Moving their family of six to Zaire, they worked with local people and a handful of American volunteers to pioneer an exciting new kind of missionary effort.

They persuaded the regional government to donate land that had formed a segregation strip between blacks and whites during colonial days. The Zaireans called it "Bokotola," which means "man who does not care for others." On this ground a complete new community has been built through the principles of self-help and cooperation and the power of tremendous faith. It has already inspired similar ventures in other areas.

Millard Fuller's new book, Bokotola, can be ordered for $3.95 from Koinonia Partners Inc., Rt. 2, Americus, Ga. 31709. All profits go back into building projects.

I encourage anyone (young, middle-aged or senior citizen) considering using a portion of his or her life to help others to write to Millard at the above address. A new non-profit corporation called "Habitat for Humanity" has been formed with the support of people like myself to enlarge the effort by raising funds, recruiting and training volunteers and providing technical assistance for projects in the U. S. and overseas.

Because I am excited about this enterprise, I would like more people to know about it.

To the editor:

I must take exception to Mr. Raynor's article about aflatoxin in the Sept. 13 issue of your paper.

I can see where it is desirable for such an article to be low key because of the economic importance of the corn crop in this area. However, Mr. Raynor fails to mention that aflatoxin, a substance produced by the mold Aspergillus flavus, is a known carcinogen (cancer-causing substance) and that is why the level for human consumption has been set at zero.

I believe Mr. Yancey when he states that there is little danger to people from residual amounts of aflatoxin in animal tissue. But Mr. Yancey failed to mention that this cancer-causing agent is believed to pass directly from cows eating contaminated feed to their milk. This is one reason that the Food and Drug Administration has established an allowable level of 20 parts per billion of aflatoxin for animal feed.

My job is testing for aflatoxin in corn. I work with concentrations of aflatoxin much greater than the FDA limit and I must take considerable precaution to prevent exposure to this powerful toxin. I don't feel that the dangers of aflatoxin should be lessened. Such a policy might encourage neglect in the applications of farm products which possibly contain aflatoxin. This problem affects the welfare of the general public and can't be decided on economic considerations.

Indochina experts that China's slim influence in Laos is on the wane.

The Laotian campaign to favor the Soviet Union is ostensibly a Lao celebration of the 60th anniversary of the Russian Revolution this November.

The politburo has ordered "each and every office, military unit or regiment, production unit, school and so forth" to celebrate the Russian Revolution.

The main thrust of the politburo order appears designed to prove by propaganda that the poor state of Laos now can be improved, as the Russians once improved their own nation.

"At an early stage in its socialist construction, the USSR encountered numerous difficulties," the politburo order states. But "if the people are determined and have a correct guideline, they will be able to build socialism. And more favorable conditions in socialist transformation and construction."

Kaysone Phoumvihane, the Communist Party head and prime minister, has placed himself in charge of the pro-Soviet campaign, with President Prince Souphanouvong as chief assistant.

Virtually the entire Laotian Communist hierarchy is included on a 21-man committee under Kaysone.

A Conservative View

Climbing In Bed With Some Dreadful People

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Forgive me, mother, for what I am about to do: I am about to climb in bed with Teddy Kennedy, Birch Bayh, Howard Metzenbaum and 27 other dreadful people, and the prospect is dismaying. But in seeking to lay some restraints upon the great oil companies, the Senate liberals are right and my brother conservatives are wrong.

If that be heresy, make the most of it. The issue came to a head on September 8, when Kennedy offered an amendment to a pending energy bill. He proposed to make it unlawful for any major petroleum producer "to acquire any interest in or control over any coal asset or uranium asset after the date of enactment of this act." The amendment could not have required horizontal divestiture as such—that is, it would not have compelled the major companies to sell off the coal and uranium properties they now own—but it was a second cousin to such divestiture. I'm for it.

As it turned out, Kennedy's amendment was voted down, 62-30, on a motion to table. Every professing liberal was lined up behind the amendment, and every certified conservative was lined up against it. Tower of Texas had the purple conviction fits; he accused Kennedy of speaking "the language of expropriation, which should raise the hackles of every American who believes in the free enterprise system." Thurmond of South Carolina, a true-blue conservative called Kennedy's proposal "radical." Opponents argued that only the giant petroleum companies have the capital and the expertise to produce the coal and uranium the nation needs.

As George Mason urged 200 years ago, let us recur to fundamental principles. A fundamental principle of conservatism is to fear concentrations of great power, and to seek ways to restrain them. That is one of the things our Constitution is all about. I had been taught, and until this debate 10 days ago I had truly supposed, that conservatives distrusted too much bigness wherever it exists—Big Government, Big Labor, Big Media, Big Bureaucracy, whatever. The conservative principle holds that bigness is not necessarily badness, but at some point a rebuttable presumption arises.

That point, in my view, assuredly has been reached in the matter of the great oil companies and competing energy sources. In warning against the concentration of economic power in this vital area, Kennedy, Bayh and the others were expounding sound conservative doctrine. They were the ones crying for greater competition. They made sense to me.

What has happened in recent years is that the petroleum giants have moved horizontally into the acquisition of coal and uranium. Gulf Oil led off in 1963 with its acquisition of Pittsburgh Midway Coal Company. Continental Oil in 1966 took over Consolidation coal then the leading coal producer. Occidental Petroleum acquired Island Creek, which was number three. Standard Oil of Ohio acquired Old Ben, number 10. Meanwhile, Kerr-McGee moved heavily into uranium.

Fourteen of the top 20 owners of coal reserves today are oil companies. Nearly half of total coal reserves now are owned by the petroleum giants. The major companies dominate research and development in such areas as coal gasification and oil shale production.

Looking ahead, the prospect is not for giant oil companies, as such, but for energy conglomerates—for super-corporations effectively controlling every form of energy production, transportation and marketing. Colorado's Floyd Haskell made his point sarcastically. It is absurd, he said, to suppose that a company making nice profits off of oil and gas is going to promote competitive fuels in order to drive those profits down. "To believe otherwise," said Haskell, "is sort of equivalent to believing in the tooth fairy."

To the argument that only the giant oil companies can provide the capital to meet goals for coal and uranium, let me make this response: Those who believe in the marketplace have to trust the marketplace. Assuming a demand for competing fuels, the capital will appear to supply that demand. If we believe that competition is a good thing, let us put that conviction to work. If we are wary of excessive concentrations of power, let us halt this disturbing concentration before it grows still larger.

All this has nothing to do with vertical divestiture which involves breaking up the great oil companies internally. No convincing case has been made to support such total disruption of an efficient and highly competitive industry. But enough is enough. And horizontally speaking, the concentration is quite enough as it is.

WHERE THE PANAMA CANAL FLOWS TODAY!

By GAIL MICHAELS

The 19th Candidate Is Only Few Days Too Late

When I informed Phillip that I would formally announce my candidacy for city council this morning, his first reaction was, "Why in Heaven's name would you want to do THAT?"

"Well, I figure every other family in Greenville has a member running, so it's only fair that we should have a representative, too," I said. "Besides, just once I'd like to have my real picture in the Sunday paper instead of a caricature."

"What's wrong with your caricature?" Phillip asked. "It looks like a bowl of left-over grits," I said sort of lumpily.

"Well, that's not the best reason I ever heard for running for city council, Gail. You'll have to come up with something better if you're going to announce in the paper."

"How about 'Greenville's a rapidly growing city, and I want to be a part of that growth'?"

"I've heard it before," he sighed.

"My face fell. 'You have?'"

"Yeah—18 times, in one form or another."

"Then maybe I better launch right into my platform. I'm all for lower taxes."

"Isn't everyone?" he groaned. "No, I mean it," I insisted. "I'm going to lower taxes by increasing revenues from other sources. I'm going to pave downtown Greenville." "What?!" Phillip said weakly.

"Sure. It's the present council policy brought to its logical conclusion. Raze all the buildings and put up parking meters. It'll be great! And I'll plant a tree beside every parking meter to satisfy the conservationists. See, I've thought of everything."

"Except why, if there aren't any buildings, anyone would come downtown to park."

"A minor detail. Now the next plank on my platform is the blue law."

"You're going to throw it out, right?"

"Of course not. Do you think I'm a heathen? No, I'm going to extend it to Saturday as well. All this time we've been concerned with legislating the morality of the Sunday churchgoers, and we've completely ignored the poor Jews and Seventh Day Adventists."

Phillip groaned. "Gail, what ARE you talking about?"

"I'm taking about facial tissue—for one thing. It's not fair. A Presbyterian without any in the house has the opportunity to demonstrate the strength of his moral fiber by not blowing his nose all day Sunday. But does a Seventh Day Adventist have the same opportunity? No—and I'm going to rectify the situation. After all, they pay taxes, too."

"Is there anything else?" he asked.

"Just one more thing. I want to mark off a special section of town for the numerous Greenville drivers who don't have the common decency to say thank-you when someone lets them into traffic. Let 'em kill each other off—and good riddance."

"That's just wonderful," Phillip coughed. "But I don't think you stand much chance of getting elected."

I was crestfallen. "Why? Is my platform too weak?"

"No-o, not exactly. But the filing deadline was Sept. 9."

Oh, well, maybe next year.

Medicine Man Machen: Your Health Is Wealth

ON THE ROAD — If you can tell him what's ailing you he just might be able to fix you up.

Alton Machen is an Indian Medicine Man who travels a four state route, seven days a week, through all seasons, with a truckload of brightly colored herbal medicines.

Early in the morning, his fading green truck rolls into one of a series of sites dotted across North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and Tennessee. Relying on the traffic of buyers generated by organized flea markets and cattle sales, he sets up shop. He assembles his wares carefully, and amid the wheeling and dealing of dozens of other entrepreneurs, the Medicine Man extols his products in a fashion that makes conventional salesmanship seem like the obituary column of the air.

This is good bizzzz-nezzzz," says the Medicine Man, milking each word of its phonetic richness to sweeten the ear of the customer. "I have been selling medicines for 51 year starring with Rosebud Salvvve in '26."

He browses among his own inventory, arranging bottles of Prairie Chief Liniment, Iron Kola with Celery Compound, and tins of pastel salves and oils.

"But things have changed, OH YES," he offers suddenly, paralyzing a portion of the crowd, netting laughter, looks of disbelief and, always, a share of the people.

They pause nervously on the outskirts of this curious skit, listening for the phrase or claim that warrants a step closer.

"Your health is your wealth, INHALE, Pheeew! EXHALE, in Genesis, in Revelations," he says with eventual SALT II treaty." paper suggests still more concessions in hopes of giving the impression of progress.

"We would almost certainly have to back down on counting heavy-bomber variants"—the Soviet Bison and Bear bombers—as part of the overall strategic total. "To induce the Soviets to a lower MIRV (multiple independently targeted vehicles) we could agree not to count the 120 disputed silos at Derzhayna and Pervomaysk against the (MIRV) ceiling."

The more startling concessions come on the cruise missiles, the amazingly accurate drone aircraft that have become a replacement for the junked B-1 bomber. The Gelb strategy would stitch in to a new SALT II treaty (lasting eight full years) a 2,500-kilometer limit on air-launched cruise missiles. It would also restrict them to as few as 10 missiles per B-52 bomber and 30 per wide-bodied aircraft.

Beyond this, Gelb calls for "an added element of compromise." He suggests a 600-kilometer ceiling on cruise missiles launched from non-heavy bombers as part of the eight-year treaty—not simply as part of the three-year protocol previously offered. Another compromise might be the statistical inclusion of each wide-bodied plane carrying cruise missiles as one MIRV and each B-52 armed with cruise missiles as three MIRVs.

The Pentagon has protested that the cruise missile is vital now that the B-1 is dead, but there is pessimism about overriding the Gelb strategy. The ultimate decision is up to Jimmy Carter, who may soon clarify what he really thinks about these complicated questions of life or death.

Informed Opinion Split On No-Fault Program

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — Before proponents of "no-fault" automobile insurance can convince the public of the virtues of the plan, they will need to conduct a massive program of consumer education.

While three-fourths of the nation's adults indicate a familiarity with the no-fault label, only one in three can correctly describe how the program works. And among this small group opinion regarding the plan is closely divided.

Basically, no-fault means exactly what it says—anyone involved in an accident can collect benefits without having to prove the other person is "at fault." This means a driver can collect if the other driver is uninsured, if he or she is involved in a single-car accident, or even if he or she is the cause of the mishap.

Public awareness of the no-fault system has virtually doubled during the last six years. Currently 77 per cent of adults nationwide say they have heard or read about no-fault, nearly double the 41 per cent who so indicated in 1971.

While less than half this group, 31 per cent of all adults, can provide a correct description of no-fault, the current figure represents a significant increase since 1971 when only 19 per cent could do so.

Among the 31 per cent who correctly describe how no-fault works, opinion is closely divided, with 15 per cent approving, 12 per cent disapproving, and 4 per cent undecided.

In 1971, 15 per cent approved of no-fault and 4 per cent disapproved among those able to describe correctly how the plan works.

This question was asked first in the survey:

"Have you heard or read about the 'no-fault' plan dealing with auto insurance?"

Heard Or Read About No-Fault

	Yes
1977	77%
1971	42%

These who said they had heard or read about the plan were then asked: "What is your understanding of this plan?"

Per Cent Who Correctly Understand No-Fault

Approve	31%	19%
Disapprove	12%	4%
No opinion	4%	7%
Uninformed	69%	81%

The 31 per cent in the current survey who had a correct understanding of no-fault were then asked: "Do you approve or disapprove of the no-fault plan?"

Following are the results based on the total sample, and the trend:

Opinion On No-Fault Automobile Insurance

Approve	15%	15%
Disapprove	12%	4%
No opinion	4%	7%
Uninformed	69%	81%

Proposed Legislation

The proposed federal law, sponsored by Sen. Warren.

Magnuson (D-Wash.), would require each state to have a no-fault law, while limiting medical equal or surpass the federal guidelines. If they did not act within three years, the federal limits would apply until states did pass their own versions.

Currently, 16 states have adopted no-fault programs, most of which pay only personal injury benefits, not property loss.

The proposed federal law has the backing of President Carter, the first chief executive to support a nationwide no-fault system.

Arguments Pro And Con

No-fault proponents argue a nationwide standard would be beneficial for the following reasons:

- * Benefits would be more equitable,
- * Payments would be more prompt,
- * Costs would be cut and efficiency in administering the system would be improved, and
- * Court dockets would be unburdened because there would be no need for an adversary hearing—a finding of "fault."

Critics of no-fault claim the system is not beneficial because:

- * It increases premium costs and therefore
- * Makes it impossible for poorer people to afford auto insurance.

However, a recent Department of Transportation study in the 16 states that currently have no-fault systems questions this claim, saying the system does not necessarily entail higher premiums.

The results reported today are based on personal interviews with 1,500 adults, 18 and older, interviewed in more than 300 scientifically selected localities during the period Aug. 5-8.

Homage Paid To 'Diva' Maria

MAKE WAY FOR THE CO-ED—As any college student can tell you, time is of utmost importance when you've got a class to catch. Cyclist Stewart Hood, a freshman at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington, was hustling to make a class on time when she sent pedestrian Robert A. Hass, also a freshman, scurrying for the grass. (AP Laserphoto)

By DAVE ZIMMERMAN
Associated Press Writer
PARIS (AP) — Critics, performers and culture officials paid tribute today to Maria Callas, the American-born soprano whose dramatic portrayals made her queen of the opera in her time.

"She was 'the' diva. Goddesses never die," said Paris Opera administrator Rolf Liebermann after learning of Miss Callas' death of a heart attack in her Paris apartment Friday.

The 53-year-old performer collapsed in her bedroom and was dead when doctors arrived, her artistic director Michael Grotz said. Her death followed by three days that of another musical giant, conductor Leopold Stokowski.

"Callas enters by right into the legend of opera," said Carlo Maria Badini, superintendent of Milan's La Scala Opera House where the soprano made her breakthrough in 1951 with a masterful "Aida" and went on to lead a revival of the 19th century bel canto operas.

"A whole generation of singers followed her lead," wrote New York Times critic Harold Schonberg. "In a way ... Joan Sutherland, Beverly Sills, Teresa Berganza and Marilyn Horne are her children."

Italian soprano Giulietta Simonato, recalling the battles with managers, conductors and other performers that gained Miss Callas notoriety as "opera's bad girl," said: "She was a fragile woman despite her character that deserved her titles of The Tiger, The Lioness. The selfish, aggressive and fierce Maria."

Harold Rosenthal, editor of Opera magazine, said Miss Callas "was undoubtedly the greatest singing actress this century. She had the ability to sing a piece, however hackneyed, and make you feel you were hearing it for the very first time."

Miss Callas was born Anna Sofia Cecilia Kalogeropoulos in New York in 1923, and started singing lessons when she was 8. After her parents separated in 1936, she went with her mother to Greece and made her first opera appearance in Athens at age 15.

In 1948 she married Giovanni Battista Meneghini, a wealthy Milan industrialist who vowed to make the 230-pound soprano the "prima donna of the 20th century" and spent vast sums of money doing so. She slimmed down and emerged strikingly handsome, while sustaining the three-octave range of her voice.

The breakthrough at La Scala opened the world's great opera houses for her, and she made her American debut in 1954 at Chicago's Lyric Theater. She became renowned for her "Lucia," "Aida," and "Puritani" and an extensive repertoire of other roles before singing herself out after little more than a decade of fame.

She retired from the stage in 1965 and returned nine years later for one series of performances before a packed Philadelphia Academy of Music, but her voice was not what it had been. She continued to make records — 19 complete operas and 10 albums of operatic selections.

Miss Callas and Meneghini were separated in 1959 after she began a long affair with Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis, whom she later called the love of her life. They had apartments near each other in Paris and continued their friendship after his marriage to Jacqueline Kennedy.

"Rhubarb, Senna, Gensian, Licorice, Magnesium..." and on through most of the nature trails known to man.

But even that natural inventory doesn't guarantee respect. "A man came up to me this morning," says the Medicine Man candidly, "complaining of bumblebee sting. I treated him, and he thanked me and walked away. I then treated two other people for the same thing. They thanked me. They walked away."

His dark brow furrows. "I can't eat Thank You," he says.

A Retrospective Showing of Prints By ECU's Donald Sexauer

MASKS TO HIDE BEHIND. Sexauer's gift of evoking an air of haunting sadness is revealed in this portrait of a young man clutching an array of masks.

Note: The show reviewed here can be seen daily from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. Only a few days remain for the show to be up, so those wanting to see it are urged to do so without delay.

Images of Man, the retrospective exhibition of prints by Donald Sexauer covering the span of a dozen years, 1966-1977, currently on view at the Gray Gallery in the Jenkins Fine Arts Center, ECU, comes as something of a shock.

I feel that most viewers, no matter how closely they may have followed Sexauer's progress in recent years, will experience amazement in being confronted with the tremendous scope of his work in the time span of roughly a decade.

The dedication of a serious artist to his work is manifest in this prolific body of work. This is not to imply that quantity alone equates to quality. In Sexauer's case, however, the old axiom "practice makes perfect" is undeniably applicable.

Images of Man clearly reveals that in this period of time Sexauer has steadily progressed to a greater mastery of techniques while remaining consistently faithful to his larger vision of man. As he matures as a person and artist, he becomes more sensitively aware of and increasingly capable of showing us the entire range of the complicated, interrelated emotional experiences common to man.

Underlying Sexauer's visual expressions of mankind is a unifying philosophical viewpoint — man is fundamentally a creature subject to inescapable loneliness, a transient in flesh and blood and spirit who suffers apartness even in closeness. None of his people ever smile, and in their eyes are haunted pleas to be loved and understood.

Sexauer is a printmaking poet, an artist who visualizes and creates through line and form the essence of man's nobility and fallibility.

This he achieves whether he is depicting a series of stark, somber black and white portraits of memorable characters, as in the portfolio "Cervantes' Gift," expressing the tenderness of a young couple in a lyrical color print such as "Spring Pastoral," or skillfully showing the incredible amassing of war materiel supportive of death and destruction in the "Vietnamese Fragments" prints of 1971.

Since we tend to think of Sexauer's art primarily in terms of man, it is easy to overlook his superb artistry in rendering details of nature that are important adjuncts to the image of man in a number of his prints. His birds, trees, flowers, and leaves pay homage to the beauty of nature.

Some say that Sexauer's people are unbearably sad, that they brood in a world where after all there is some laughter and happiness, even permissible frivolity. Yet in their sadness I detect a note of hope, of the ever-present possibility of redemption through love. Sexauer's people are not irredeemably lost to misery, as are the despairing creatures in the art of Kathe Kollwitz.

Because Sexauer's images are of sensitive humans attentive to the promise of love — though it may be distant — we can respond to his art with far more than admiration in terms of beauty and technical excellence.

Images of Man shows that Donald Sexauer has the power to provoke viewers on many levels.

Steve Andrus Exhibits N.C. Coastal Scenes

DETAIL FROM AN ANDRUS PAINTING. The current show at the Greenville Art Center is an exhibit of about 40 paintings, mostly coastal scenes, by Manteo based artist Steve Andrus.

Like many artists who have chosen coastal North Carolina as the dominant provider of subject matter for their paintings, Steve Andrus comes off far better in watercolors than in oils. Could it be that the very nature of the elements — water in all its motions, clouds and sand — create a particular rapport that is more expressively responded to in watercolors' more fluid characteristics?

Whatever the reason in Andrus' case, it is fortunate that in his show now on view at the Greenville Art Center that of some 40 pieces, watercolors predominate.

In some of these paintings, density of color robs good designs of their potential. It is in the subtler, more thinly painted works that Andrus captures a buoyancy, a feel of coastal poetry that is essential for truly good seascapes and coastal paintings.

Pointing out more good things about the paintings of this relatively young artist, Andrus is to be lauded for breaking away from the monotony of peaceful summer skies to introduce the turbulence of threatening, massive clouds in several paintings. His treatment of buildings, especially in rusted tin roofs and buildings reflected in water, are admirably realized.

Although the level of pleasure afforded by this exhibit of Andrus' work is uneven, it is a show that will give pleasure to all who like realistic views of coastal scenery. Andrus also shows a few paintings of Piedmont and Western North Carolina.

Andrus, a native of Minnesota, holds degrees, including the MFA degree in painting, from the Instituto Allenda, San Miguel de Allenda, Mexico. He, his wife and his young son moved to the Outer Banks in 1973 where Andrus has a gallery in Manteo. Concurrent with this show, he has an exhibit at the Goldsboro Art Center.

The show here will remain on view until October 14. Art Center hours are 9-12 and 2-5 Monday through Friday.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By JULIE HICKS

Some new books at Sheppard Library this month which will be of interest to the fiction lover are HOW LONG THE HEART REMEMBERS, THE QUEEN AND THE GYPSY, THE LOOK OF INNOCENCE, and IN THE LOOKING GLASS.

Mary H. Hollingsworth, in HOW LONG THE HEART REMEMBERS, depicts the poignant story of the Abbot family. Through the perceptive eyes of the youngest daughter, Lowell, we travel with them along the road of sadness, turmoil, deception, and yes, even happiness. Hard times and the depression trigger a series of events which lead to a loss of status for the Abbots; Mr. Abbott, the clerk of court in a small Georgia town, becomes a mere sharecropper and his family poor white trash. Yet through it all we watch the adults adjust and the children grow up in a believable narrative of persistence and hope, of "keep on keeping on."

For those who like historical fiction, THE QUEEN AND THE GYPSY, by Constance Heaven, is an intriguing one. A tale of suspense is woven in a romanticized account of the affair between Princess (later Queen) Elizabeth and Robert Dudley, a childhood playmate. The single obstacle to a life together is Robert's wife, Amy. Her mysterious death raises some probing questions: was to suicide or murder?

Another new book THE LOOK OF INNOCENCE, by Anna Gilbert, is the winner of England's Romantic Novel of the Year Award. It is the touching story of a young girl's journey from childhood to womanhood. Orphaned at an early age, she is forced to deal with several mysteries: a childhood playmate, the circumstances surrounding her parents' death, and her love for Joel.

If you are in the mood for something shorter than a novel you may enjoy IN THE LOOKING GLASS, a collection of short stories by and about women. Edited by Nancy Dean, the work is divided into sections describing the various stages of womanhood. Such authors as Kathrine Mansfield, Sylvia Plath, Charlotte Perkins, Gilman, Eudora Welty, and others are represented, most of their contributions being reprints of other collections written out of the feminist consciousness. Read some or all of these stories to determine if reading LOOKING GLASS is as the editor says "reading about other women is so embarrassing-like looking into the mirror."

Aaron Karp Is Gallery Director

Aaron Karp has been named Gallery Director for the Wellington B. Gray Gallery in the Leo Jenkins Art Center, East Carolina University.

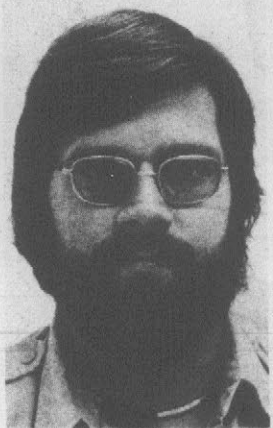

The first to hold this position, Karp comes to ECU from the University of New Mexico and the University of Albuquerque. For two years he was on the staff of the Fine Arts Museum at Indiana University, and more recently was Operations Supervisor at the Guggenheim Museum.

A native of Albany, N.Y., Karp is a graduate of the State University of New York and received the BFA degree at the University of Indiana, Bloomington.

As a director fulfilling tasks previously performed by a committee, Karp is responsible for organizing, coordinating and attracting exhibitions of interest and artistic merit to ECU and Greenville. Karp will also direct the hoped for fund raising campaign to support shows and artists lectures in eastern North Carolina.

Commenting on some of the things he hopes to achieve, Karp said "I'd like to attract shows of a broader scope than what we'd had before. I don't think there's anything wrong with one and two man shows, but I do hope to attract some theme shows that will give people a larger viewpoint of contemporary art."

Karp said another thing he hopes to bring about is adding Saturday and Sunday gallery hours to the current Monday-Friday 9 to 4 schedule. "At this time, our intent is to try to begin in October with Saturday and Sunday hours from 2 to 5 p.m. This remains to be worked out, but it's something we want to do for the benefit of people."

Public Eating Illegal

OCEAN BEACH, N.Y. (AP) — One defendant is charged with eating a chocolate-chip cookie, the other a crumb cake. The case may pose a sticky constitutional question.

Larry Wallick, 19, and Ruth Bushnell, 25, were to answer charges today of violating this posh resort community's ban on eating or drinking in public. They faced fines of $25 each.

They were ticketed Aug. 13 as they sat on a curb in front of a bakery, nibbling on their cookies and cake. They declined the village constable's invitation to eat their snack inside the bakery.

Rachel Doering, a first-grade teacher and owner of the bakery, received a summons for "negligently causing people to eat in the streets." She posted $10 bail each for the defendants and later in the summer had the case against her dismissed.

"I have had the police stand outside my door watching ... They actually chase down kids eating a cookie and tell them to go home and eat it, but they let the ice cream cones go," she said.

Why ice cream? "The ice cream cone is such an American institution that we had to turn the other way on that one," said village trustee Warner Danby.

"Once you allow a cookie, what's wrong with a beer? Where do you draw the line?" he asked.

The trustees say the ordinance is designed to prevent rowdiness as well as clutter. "People used to go in the streets with drinks in their hands and become unruly or carry food on the beach and leave greasy papers in the street," Danby said.

Police arrested a man recently for holding a glass of water in public. The owners of stray dogs and those who neglected to pick up after their pets with a plastic or metal scoop also were fined.

Migrants...

Wells said most camps where abuses occur house "free-wheelers," migrant laborers who come into the state without their work being solicited in advance by the ESC. The commission has no authority in such camps, Wells said.

Serving On Committees

ECU NEWS BUREAU Several graduate and undergraduate students in the East Carolina University Department of Library Science have been elected to serve on departmental committees.

Serving on the Department of Library Science Undergraduate Committee will be Sarah Lynn Earnhardt of Mooresville and Marianna Long of Salisbury. Elected to the Library Science Graduate Committee were Vickie Louis Baggett of Winston-Salem and John S. Barker, III of Tarboro.

Representing graduate students in the Department on the Dean of the Graduate School's Student Advisory Committee will be Roger David Crook of Cary.

The undergraduates are pursuing the Bachelor of Science degree in library science and the graduate students are working toward the Master of Library Science degree. Baggett, Barker, and Crook are also serving as teaching fellows in the department this academic year.

Farm, Rural Policies Being Discussed

By BRIAN B. KING
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department's top policymakers are spending the weekend at a Pennsylvania retreat with leaders of farm-economy interest groups to discuss the details of farm, food-aid and rural-development programs for the next four years.

Secretary Bob Bergland and his assistants had all left for Downingtown Friday by the time the House, with a 283-to-107 vote, completed congressional action on revised general policy for the programs, which expire Sept. 30 under current law.

Since the Senate approved the compromise version of the omnibus bill a week before, the measure now goes to President Carter, who is expected to sign it.

The Pennsylvania meeting, which wasn't announced in advance, is designed to "look at the bill and other developments, see where we are, where we want to be four years from now and how to get there," one aide said.

The wide-ranging measure will boost grain farmers' earnings off this year's crops at a time when the government forecasts the lowest total farm income in five years.

It will also revamp the 13-year-old food-stamp program, which now serves about 5.1 million families at an annual cost of $5.4 billion, totals that both are expected to increase slightly.

Congress and two administrations had spent almost a year working on the price-support sections of the legislation, while revision of the food-stamp program has been in the works since December 1974.

The bill will also sharply expand agricultural research programs, with the emphasis on human nutrition and solar energy, and extend through 1981 the $2-billion Food for Peace foreign-aid program of food donations and easy-credit crop sales.

The measure could mean government spending of up to $11 billion a year over the next four years. Actual spending will depend primarily on the weather in the United States and other major crop-exporting countries.

A continuation of favorable growing weather worldwide, bumper harvests and sluggish foreign demand for U.S. grains will mean higher government payments, to keep farm income closer to production costs than depressed market prices would provide.

The farm programs are expected to average no more than $4.4 billion a year through 1981.

The measure will trigger a record $1.2 billion in payments in this year's wheat crop, which came in with 1.1 billion bushels already in surplus. Corn prices will be slightly pushed up by higher supports, too.

More modest increases are slated in the price and income support rates for wheat, feed-grains, rice and cotton next season. Future hikes will depend on increases in production costs, excluding the value of the farmland.

Average food-stamp benefits are not expected to be changed substantially from the present 81 cents per person per day when the bill's provisions become fully effective next spring.

But about 340,000 families now receiving the program's benefits each month are expected to be cut from the rolls. Stringent new job-search requirements will be imposed on those remaining.

Marine Files Suit

CHERRY POINT, N.C. (AP) — A Marine who quit high school to enter the service has filed a $10,000 damage suit against the government after claiming he was deprived of a high school diploma.

Dwayne Norman McSwain of Cherryville named as defendants the government, Marine Corps, Gen. Richard E. Carey and recruiting officer Sgt. Ralph A. Paradine Jr.

The suit charges that Paradine told McSwain he could enter the Marines after his junior year at Cherryville High School and would be given a high school equivalency diploma by passing a test.

Monkeys Kill Children

KUWAIT (AP) — Seven crazed monkeys escaped from their cage in the Kuwait zoo and killed two children in a panicked holiday crowd, police reported Saturday.

A zookeeper was seriously bitten before police shot and killed one of the monkeys and captured the others in a long chase.

The tragedy Friday occurred as crowds of Kuwaitis filled the zoo, relaxing for the Moslem feast of Eid, a four-day holiday ending the annual 30-day Ramadan period of fasting.

After managing to escape from their cage, the excited monkeys began attacking bystanders, setting off a panic, police said. The children, whose ages were unavailable, were killed by bites and scratches, they said.

The species of monkey was not identified. Authorities in this oil-rich Persian Gulf sheikdom said they were investigating the incident.

Charged With Murder

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Authorities charged a Fayetteville man Friday night with murder in the death of a Cumberland County reserve deputy Wednesday, after the man apparently called law enforcement officers to turn himself in.

Cumberland County sheriff's officers said Lloyd Lane, 25, called authorities at 10:15 p.m. Friday from his grandmother's home, where he was living. He was arrested at the residence.

Lt. R.G. Smith, commander of the sheriff's auxiliary patrol, was shot to death on a stakeout of a convenience store five miles southwest of here. A gunman entered the store in a robbery attempt.

SET NEW GOAL

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The 78th international convention of Gideons, who last year distributed 16.5 million Bibles or New Testaments in hotels, motels, hospitals, prisons, airplanes and schools, set a goal of distributing 18.5 million copies of the Scriptures in the year ahead.

Doubt Isabella Pawned Jewels

NEW YORK (AP) — According to popular belief, Queen Isabella of Spain pawned her crown jewels to pay for the historic voyage of Christopher Columbus in 1492.

That may be more legend than fact, reports the Jewelry Industry Council, whose researchers have been doing some digging around in history to come up with the "inside story."

Facts relating to the circumstances under which the voyage was financed were brought to light through the help of the Hispanic Society of America here and history books that include "Jewels in Spain" by Priscilla Muller, curator of the Museum of the Hispanic Society.

It seems that Isabella couldn't pawn her crown jewels for Columbus — they were already in hock to help pay for Spain's war against the Moors.

All of the queen's greatest treasures were locked away in brokers' vaults at the time Columbus set sail, according to the council's account. They included a rich gem-studded gold collar, a magnificent pearl and ruby necklace given her by King Ferdinand as a wedding present, and a huge ruby, as well as the fabulous jeweled crown of Castile.

More than likely, the council reports, the beautiful auburn-haired queen helped Columbus by offering some of her lesser jewelry — mostly rich gold coins, a dazzling jeweled gold bracelet and a golden diamond and ruby encrusted salamander.

As a matter of fact, chances are the queen, once having made the offer, did not have to pawn her jewels at all, for her confidence in and backing of Columbus enabled him to obtain backing from other sources.

In fact, a police organization known as the Santa Hermandad (Holy Brotherhood) advanced most of the monies. Its treasurer, Luis Santangel, was a high official at the royal court and a staunch supporter of Columbus.

Columbus himself, with a little help from his wealthy friends, paid one-eighth of the expenses. The total cost of the expedition came to two million maravedis — roughly $170,000 in modern U.S. currency.

Even if Queen Isabella didn't personally pay for the voyage, she helped Columbus in countless other ways, the council points out. Isabella believed in Columbus when most people (including King Ferdinand) still regarded him as a boastful dreamer. Even when a royal commission reported his project "impossible and vain and worthy of rejection," Isabella stood by.

Inventory Of Tar-Neuse River Basin Completed

Cultural Resources

Preservationists in the N.C. Department of Cultural Resources, aided by a grant from the U.S. Soil Conservation Service (SCS), have completed an inventory of old and interesting structures in 29 Eastern North Carolina counties.

The survey, packaged in six soft-cover volumes and entitled "Historic and Architectural Resources of the Tar-Neuse River Basin," is available from the Archaeological and Historic Preservation Section of Cultural Resources.

Project director Michael Southern said the survey will be useful to planners working for cities, counties, federal agencies, builders or other organizations that are concerned with land use, and should be of interest of eastern North Carolina historians.

The six volumes list 2,184 houses, barns, churches, store, mills, factories, courthouses, railroad stations, whole neighborhoods and commercial districts, and "at least one gas station." Southern said. Many of the sites were recorded over the past few years because of their architectural or historic interest by the Cultural Resources staff. Several hundred were added for his survey by two preservationists hired with an SCS grant.

According to John Garrett, SCS coordinator of for river basin and watershed planning, the SCS first became interested in a historic properties survey in 1972, when the agency asked residents of the Tar and Neuse river basins what concerns they felt about land use.

"One concern that surfaced was for historic resources," Garrett said. "So we came to this department."

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The wait for King Tut — which sponsors joke began in 1325 B.C. — ends for this city this morning.

Or maybe it's only just begun...depending on how long the lines are.

In Washington and Chicago, Tut's earlier two American stops, the lines began forming before dawn. But officials predict that won't happen here. "There should be no problem in anyone getting into the exhibit," says John Bullard, the director of the New Orleans Museum, where Tut's four-month run begins today. "Those seven-and eight-hour waits will not be the case in New Orleans."

A smaller population area, color-coded ticket system and bleached waiting area outside the museum are what Bullard hopes will cut down on the waiting time.

Although today is the opening of the treasures to the public, they have been shown to four days of preview audiences, including a black tie crowd on Thursday.

"We are ready," says Bullard. "There's not much more we can do."

Bullard estimates that close to 700,000 people will see Tut here — or about 110,000 more than the total population of the city of New Orleans. In Washington, 835,924 jammed the National Gallery while in Chicago 1,349,795 crowded the Field Museum.

Inside the museum, viewers will find the 55 pieces of gold, alabaster, wood and precious jewels displayed in eight gray-walled chambers.

Pirates Overcome Toledo By 22-9

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer
TOLEDO, Ohio — East Carolina University's Pirates, looking a bit lethargic on their third straight road appearance, defeated the University of Toledo last night, 22-9.

The Bucs, who scored 15 of their points in the second half, performed raggedly on offense but made up for it on defense, holding the Rockets to 157 total yards.

One bright spot for the Pirates was the play of senior running back Willie Hawkins. He became the seventh-leading rusher in the school's history with 61 yards, including a touchdown and a two-point conversion run. He now had 1,554 yards, passing Billy Wallace.

Quarterback Jimmy Southernland scored the Pirates' first touchdown before a crowd of 12,127 at UT's Glass Bowl. His 5-yard run in the first quarter gave the Pirates a 7-3 lead. The Bucs' other touchdown came in the final period on a 16-yard pass from Leander Green to Billy Ray Washington. Junior Creech kicked two extra points.

The Rockets opened the scoring in the first period on a 29-yard field goal by David Ridgeway and then added their only touchdown in the third when Scott Alexander bulled over from two yards out. The Toledo try for two following Alexander's TD failed.

East Carolina coach Pat Dye praised the play of Toledo following the game, saying, "Toledo wasn't even close to the outfit that played Ball State (losing 43-3 last week)."

Dye said he was proud of the team's victory, despite the fact that "they weren't the most excited football team I've ever seen."

Dye was especially proud of the Pirate defensive unit, which "stopped the big play when it had to." He singled out linebacker Harold Randolph, who led the Pirates with 13 tackles and two assists. Three of those touchdowns accounted for minus 23 yards.

Toledo drew first blood in the ball game on a 29-yard field goal by freshman kicker Ridgeway. The Rocket score was set up by an ECU fumble at the Pirate 10-yard line.

After holding the Rockets following the kickoff, the Bucs took over on their own 13 following a 56-yard punt by Roch Wurst. On the first play from scrimmage, Southernland fumbled the snap and it was recovered by Jerry Bodart on the Pirate 10.

The Buc defense held the Rockets to just two yards on three plays and, on fourth down, Ridgeway booted the 29-yarder to give Toledo a 3-0 lead with 11:26 left in the first quarter.

East Carolina came back, however, taking the kickoff and driving 66 yards for the Bucs' first touchdown.

Willie Hawkins took the kickoff two yards deep in the ECU end zone and returned it out to the 34. On first down, Sam Harrell went around left end for 11 yards.

Runs by Theodore Sutton and Hawkins moved the ball across midfield and Southernland picked up 11 more keeping around right end on the option.

With a first down at the Toledo 30, ECU was called for holding. On the next play, however, Southernland found Terry Gallaher with a 36-yard pass down to the ten.

Harrell picked up five yards before Southernland took it in on an option with 9:25 on the clock to give the Bucs the lead. Creech's kick made it 7-3.

The ECU offense fizzled for the remainder of the first half, however. The Bucs crossed midfield only once more in the half, getting down to the UT 47.

Toledo threatened in the second quarter when Southernland fumbled at the Pirate 24. The Rockets moved down to the 17, but on third down, Chuck Riser fumbled and the ball was recovered by Pirate linebacker Mike Brewington.

The East Carolina offense picked up in the second half, taking the opening kickoff and driving 43 yards for a touchdown.

Hawkins returned the kick 53 yards to the Toledo 37, and the Bucs moved down to the 30 with a 13-yard pass from Washington Southernland to Washington and a three-yard dive by Eddie Hicks.

Southernland hit Hicks with an 11-yard pass to put the ball on the Rocket 15. Runs by Southernland and Hawkins advanced the Bucs to the one, where Hawkins took it in. Creech added the PAT kick to make it 14-3 with 11:18 remaining in the third quarter.

Later in the period, the Rockets, who were not about to call it quits, took over at their own 48 following a Pirate punt. Golan Perry gained 12 yards on first down, moving the ball into ECU territory. An amazing run by Alexander, which saw him break numerous tackles on a pitch around the left end, gained 18 yards down to the 15.

Perry and Skip McCulley each took a turn rushing to give Toledo a first-and-goal at the four. From there, Alexander carried twice, getting the touchdown on a two-yarder off right tackle. The Rockets called time and decided to go for two, which would have cut the margin to two, but quarterback Frank Luketich was caught behind the line on the option by Pirate tackle Wayne Poole. That made it 14-9 with 3:20 remaining in the third.

The final Pirate scoring drive came early in the fourth period. Following a Toledo punt, the Bucs took over at their 30 with 12:52 left in the game. Hawkins and Sutton gave the Pirates a first down at their 41 and Southernland hit tight end Barry Johnson with an 11-yard pass to give the Bucs a first down at the Toledo 48.

ECU moved down to the 36, but Southernland was thrown for a loss back to the 38. After an incomplete pass, which saw pressure from the Toledo rush, Greer replacing Southernland, hit Johnson at the Rocket 18.

Green ran for one yard and then, again under pressure from the Rocket line, scrambled around and found Washington all alone in the back of the end zone for a 17-yard TD pass. On the conversion, the Bucs lined up in their typical offset formation. The ball was snapped to Hawkins, who carried around the left side for the two points, which made it 22-9.

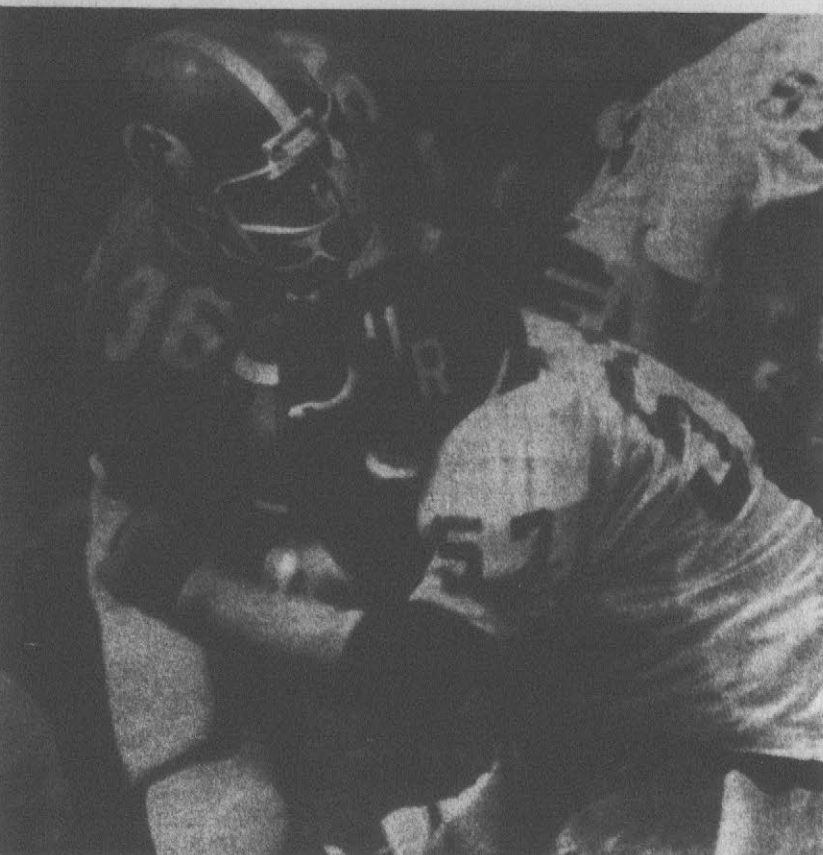

A final Pirate drive, set up by an outstanding defensive effort which stopped the Rockets for no gain on a fourth-and-31 at the UT 40, moved down to the Toledo seven before time ran out.

Toledo's defense held the Bucs to their lowest rushing total of the year, 208 yards. Southernland and Green combined to pass for 107. The Rockets picked up 98 yards on the ground and 47 through the air.

The victory, the first in three games against the Rockets, gives East Carolina a perfect 3-0 season record. Toledo falls to 0-2.

The Pirates open their home slate Saturday, hosting VMI in a 7 p.m. contest in Ficklen Stadium.

Brown Leads Wolfpack Past Syracuse, 38-0

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Ted Brown ran for three touchdowns, including a 95-yarder, Saturday to lead North Carolina State to a 38-0 college football victory over punchless Syracuse.

Brown's long run in the fourth quarter was the longest in North Carolina State's history.

The junior running back also scored on runs of five and 14 yards and finished with 142 yards rushing.

North Carolina State completely dominated the game, gaining 528 yards while holding the Orangemen to 169 in total yardage.

The visiting Wolfpack opened the scoring with a 28-yard field goal by Jay Sherrill in the first quarter. Terry Crite took a pass from quarterback Johnny Evans 28 yards to score North Carolina State's first touchdown in the second period.

Backup quarterback Scott Smith scored North Carolina's final touchdown on a five-yard run.

North Carolina State kept

Syracuse bottled up in its own territory. The Orangemen did not manage to penetrate the 50-yard line until the final quarter, and Syracuse never came within 40 yards of scoring.

Sophomore fullback Billy Ray Vickers carried the ball 16 times for 108 yards for the Wolfpack.

Evans engineered the Wolfpack to its second victory in three games this season by completing nine of 16 passes for 133 yards and one touchdown.

Syracuse fell to 0-2 on the season. The only bright spot for the Orangemen was the return runs of Warren Hurvey, who ran back five kickoffs for 112 yards.

Vanderbilt Boots Wake

By MONTE PLOTT

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Vanderbilt kicker Greg Martin booted a 28-yard field goal in the third period to break a scoreless contest and give the Commodores a 3-0 win over Wake Forest in a college football game here Saturday night.

The win boosted Vanderbilt's record to 1-1 and the loss gave the Deacons an identical record.

Martin was called into action with 5:19 left in the third quarter after both teams had slugged it out without success on the ground and found their passing games equally unproductive.

Wake Forest relied upon sophomore tailback James McDougald to carry the Deacon ground attack and McDougald put Wake Forest 20 yards from the goal in the fourth quarter when he broke away on a 55-yard run around the right end.

But Wake Forest was stymied by the Commodore defense and a 35-yard field goal attempt fell short.

Vanderbilt took over with 3:35 left, surrendered the ball a couple of minutes later, but got it back for keeps with an interception by defensive back Reggie Calvin with 1:17 remaining.

McDougald led the rushing game with 25 carries for a total of 136 yards. Vanderbilt tailback Preston Brown and quarterback Mike Wright carried their team's ground game. Wright kept the ball 20 times for 46 yards while Brown carried 15 times for 40 yards

Philadelphia Dumps Cards

By PAUL LEBAR
AP Sports Writer
ST. LOUIS (AP) — Garry Maddox and Bob Boone combined for five runs batted in and Greg Luzinski scored three times, leading the Philadelphia Phillies to an 8-4 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals Saturday.

Phil's right-hander Larry Christensen, 16-6, stopped the Cards on four hits and four unearned runs through six innings, before giving way to Ron Reed, who finished.

Philadelphia's victory, its ninth in 11 games and fifth in a row over St. Louis, reduced the Phils' magic number to five for clinching their second straight National League East title.

Two errors by Christensen and one by shortstop Terry Harmon helped St. Louis to its four runs.

Philadelphia erupted for four runs in the first on three singles, two walks, and Dave Johnson's sacrifice fly against St. Louis starter Tom Underwood, 8-11.

Two innings later, after the Cards closed to 4-3 on two hits and Christensen's two errors, grounders by Maddox and Boone followed two walks and a single by Johnson to chase home the Phils' winning runs.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Elliott Walker, obscured the past two seasons as backfield mate to Tony Dorsett, rushed for three touchdowns to lead the 16th ranked University of Pittsburgh to a 28-6 victory over William & Mary Saturday.

Walker, a 187-pound senior fullback, put Pitt ahead 7-0 in the first quarter when he took a pitch from freshman quarterback Rick Trocano and juked by several tacklers on a 30-yard touchdown run.

Clemson Upsets Georgia By 7-6

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Steve Fuller completed two passes for 31 yards in a 48-yard third quarter scoring drive that gave the Clemson Tigers a 7-6 upset victory over Georgia Saturday in college football.

Georgia scored on a seven-yard pass from Jeff Pyburn to Ulysses Norris with only six seconds remaining, but failed on a two-point conversion attempt following a delay of game penalty.

It had appeared the Bulldogs would be shut out for the first time in 52 games until the late touchdown was set up by Norris' 51-yard end around pass to Jesse Murray.

The Tigers, 1-1, got the drive started when Billy Woods fumbled a fair catch attempt and Rick Wyatt recovered on the Bulldog 48.

Running back Tracy Perry grappled for 10 yards on two carries before Fuller fired a 15-yard to Jerry Butler at the 23 and on the next play, Fuller connected with Dwight Clark for 16 yards at the seven.

Moments later, Lester Brown hammered the final three yards for the Tiger touchdown of the game with 6:24 remaining in the third quarter and Jimmy Russell kicked the extra point that eventually provided the victory.

A Clemson victory denied Georgia Coach Vince Dooley his 100th victory since taking over 14 years ago.

Longhorns Gore Cavaliers, 68-0

AUSTIN, Tex., (AP) — Swift Johnnie Johnson sped 52 yards with a punt to score and Earl Campbell bruised Virginia defenders for 156 yards and two touchdowns Saturday as Texas crushed the Cavaliers 68-0.

No. 18-ranked Texas gave Virginia a shocking introduction to Southwest Conference football, rolling to a 41-0 halftime lead before a half-full stadium of 41,000.

Texas quarterback Mark McBeth fumbled at the Virginia 5 on Texas' first possession, but two minutes later Johnson took Russ Henderson's 40-yard line drive punt on the run, bounced off a tackler near the right sideline and sprinted across the field to score.

Campbell, 220-pound senior who is closing in on Texas' all-time school rushing record, scored from the 3-yard line and had runs of 20, 19, 17, 13 and 15 in piling up 115 yards in the first quarter.

Campbell's brother, Steve, hampered by injuries for two years, scored his first touchdown on a 1-yard run and later tackled on a 2-yard score, both in the second quarter.

Virginia, playing a SWC team for the first time, did not get a first down for nearly 14 minutes and had only two first downs and 51 yards total offense at halftime.

Johnson, a 180-pound sophomore, had 106 yards in the first half on returns, including a pass interception and 8-yard return that set up Texas' fourth touchdown.

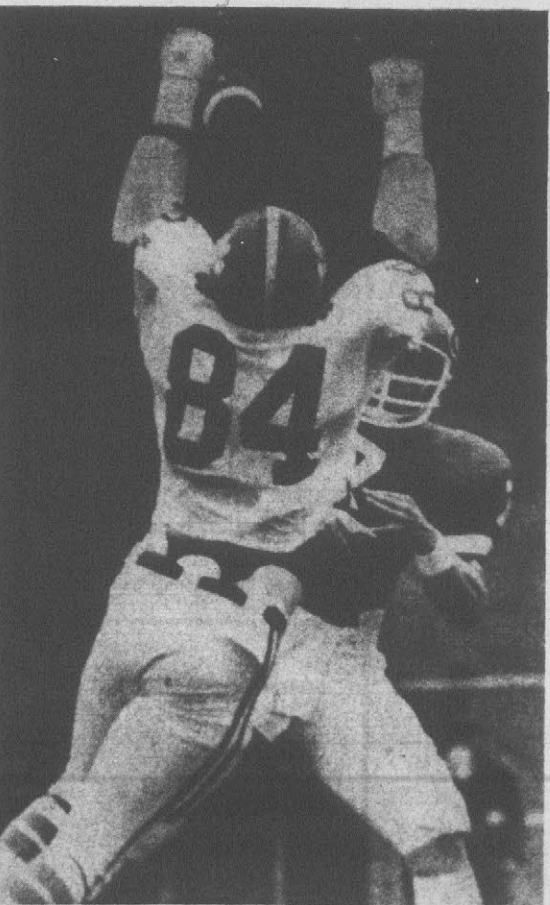

"I said after that game we weren't a good team and I haven't changed my assessment yet," he said, "but we have the potential to be a good team."

"The thing I'm most disappointed about is the fact that we didn't improve in the last week."

In the opposite dressing room, Duke coach Mike McGee wasn't as buoyed as one might expect after the tough time his Blue Devils gave Michigan.

"No, it's not a moral victory," he said. "It would be better if we would have won."

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Michigan may be ranked No. 1 in the country, but the Wolverines are not yet a good football team. Coach Bo Schembechler said Saturday after they stumbled to a 21-9 nonconference victory over Duke.

"Most people had the impression after the Illinois game that Michigan was a good football team," Schembechler said, referring to his club's 37-9 seasonopening victory a week earlier against the Illini.

"I said after that game we weren't a good team and I haven't changed my assessment yet," he said, "but we have the potential to be a good team."

"The thing I'm most disappointed about is the fact that we didn't improve in the last week."

In the opposite dressing room, Duke coach Mike McGee wasn't as buoyed as one might expect after the tough time his Blue Devils gave Michigan.

Duke, an underdog by as many as six touchdowns, played the Wolverines on nearly even terms until midway through the fourth quarter when Michigan drove 80 yards in four plays to score on a oneyard plunge by Leach. That broke open a 14-9 advantage to give the Wolverines their final edge.

Leach's other touchdown was on a seven-yard run in the second quarter to conclude an 89-yard, 22-play drive.

That was the first score of the game, then Michigan added a touchdown midway through the period on a four-yard run by fullback Russell Davis for a 14-0 halftime advantage.

The Blue Devils, under the quarterbacking of Mike Dunn, had possession most of the third quarter. They drove 77 yards in 16 plays for their first score, a three-yard keeper by Dunn just before the end of the period.

Dunn completed three of three passes in the march for 41 yards, including aerials of 22 and 10 yards to split end Tom Hall.

Michigan tailback Harlan Huckleby lost a fumble at his own 38 to cornerback George Gawdin and five plays later Scott Wolcott kicked a 43-yard field goal for Duke.

The Blue Devils earlier thwarted a Michigan scoring attempt when cornerback Earl Cook intercepted a Leach pass at the Duke 10 and returned it to the 43 in the closing minutes of the first half.

The interception was the 22nd thrown by junior Leach, passing the old Michigan record of 21 by Stan Nosk in the late 1950s.

The victory, before a sellout crowd of 104,072 — the 10th consecutive 100,000-plus home crowd — pushed the Michigan season record to 2-0 while Duke slipped to 0-2.

Michigan started off the game on the wrong foot when Huckleby took the opening kickoff, stepped forward to the one and then put the ball down just inside the goal. Officials ruled he had come out of the end zone and forced Michigan to take possession on the one.

They punted, Duke took over at the Michigan 33, and Wolcott wound up missing a 49-yard field goal try.

The Blue Devils nearly scored again late in the first quarter but defensive back Derek Howard intercepted a Dunn pass at the Michigan 11.

Davis' touchdown came just three plays and 25 yards after Howard recovered a fumble by Dunn, who was hit hard by linebacker John Anderson.

Anderson also intercepted a Dunn pass at the Duke 22 in the closing minutes of the game. But the Blue Devils regained possession and, relying on Dunn's passing arm, drove to the Michigan one as time ran out.

Mac-Truckin' Rampants Rip Kinston

Getting Off A Pass

Rose High School quarterback Joey Mattheis unleashes a pass, one of two he completed in three attempts, Friday against Kinston. Giving him plenty of protection are Curtis Little (76), Reggie Selby (44) and Franklin Clark (72). The Rampants won their second straight game, 21-7, as they defeated the Vikings. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

KINSTON — Rose High School, after spotting the Kinston Vikings a 7-0 lead, stormed back to take a 21-7 victory Friday night, winning its second game in three starts this fall.

The win, the second straight after a 20-9 loss in the opener to unbeaten Goldsboro, already doubles the victory production of the Rampants from a year ago. That team won only one game.

After the first Kinston series, which resulted in an early touchdown for the Vikings, Rose gained control of the game, and was in firm control until the end.

Rose used its "Mac truck" offense to even the score up, then charged into the lead for good. The "Mac," of course, refers to big fullback Mac Washington, who ran the ball 26 times in the game, picking up 198 yards. He twice scored, on runs of 84 and nine yards, and when the final gun sounded, he had just been pulled down at the Kinston one yard down, a scant three feet away from another score.

The first touchdown for the Rampants was a two-yard sneak by quarterback Joey Mattheis, who went all the way, except for the final series of the game. Yousef Barakat again added all the PAT kicks.

Kinston's lone touchdown was an 18-yard pass from Gary Freeman to Sylvester Powell. Danny Brown added the extra point.

For the second straight week, Rose's defense did the job on its opponent. Kinston got only 87 yards rushing, and 38 of that came on one play during the first series. Through the air, the Vikes accounted for just 18 yards, hitting one of eight passes.

Rose, with crisp blocking for the first time in its line, piled up 253 yards on the ground and added 48 through the air on two of three passes.

"They (Kinston) did some things that gave us good blocking techniques," Coach Dave Bumgarner said. "They left some things open for us. Mac broke it wide open when he got away on his run."

Bumgarner noted that Kinston was bigger and stronger than the Rampants, but were beaten through the quickness of the Rose players.

"When we picked up a first down on the fake punt play, we really put them back," Bumgarner said, referring to a second half play that kept a drive alive. "They were confused quite a bit in their defense."

"We really dominated the game. We played extremely well. They did cut off our outside game, but you could have driven a Mack truck through the holes our line opened up inside."

That Mack truck was Washington, and through those holes he drove.

Early on, however, it looked like Kinston might snap back from its loss to Wilson the week before. The Vikings took the opening kickoff and marched for a score. Moving from their own 33, the Vikes got a first down at the 45. Then, with third and four from the Rose 49, Willie Swinson took a quick pitch around the right side for 38 yards, down to the Rose 11.

A penalty pushed them back to the 16, and a two-yard loss dropped them back to the 18, from where Freeman hit Powell for the score with 8:11 left in the first quarter.

After being forced to punt, Rose got a break when it recovered a fumble on the 24. Five plays put the ball on the eight, and although Robert Morehead was stopped short of a first down at the five, a face-mask penalty did give Rose a first down at the three. Washington picked up a yard, and on the second play, Mattheis pushed up the middle for the first Rose touchdown, tying it at 7-7 with 1:38 left in the first quarter.

Early in the second period, Rose took over after a punt with the ball on the Rampant 16. On the first play, Washington burst through the line over the left guard, and sidestepped the linebacker there. From then on, it was a footrace to the end zone, with Washington easily outdistancing the Kinston defense on the 84-yard dash. That put Rose ahead, 14-7 with 9:52 left in the half.

Late in the half, Rose pushed the ball to a first down at the Kinston six, but failed to score when a fumble with no times out left cost a field goal opportunity. On that series, Washington picked up a key first down when he gained 13 yards on a fourth and nine situation.

On the first series in the first half, Rose drove to the Viking 19 before fumbling. In that series, Washington ran from punt formation, taking the short snap to gain a first down with a 15-yard gain on fourth and five.

Then, after holding Kinston, Rose got its other score. Taking over on its own 35, Rose scored in ten plays, six of them run by Washington. But the key was a 27-yard Mattheis pass to Billy Roberson on third and 14 from the Rose 31 to the Kinston 42.

Reggie Selby got another first down, with a 15 yard gain to the 12, and finally Washington crashed through the middle to score from the nine. With 1:10 left in the third period, Rose held a 21-7 lead.

Kinston got off one more big threat, as Swinson raced 66 yards with the kickoff. Morehead finally ran him down at the Rose 14. Two penalties on the series helped killed the Vikes, who turned the ball over, finally, on an interception in the end zone by Bill Collier.

Rose got the ball for the final series on the Kinston 39 after a fourth down desperation pass try. Keeping it on the ground for the final 2:39 of the game, Rose jammed it down to the 19, where on the final play of the game, Washington bulled his way to the one where he was finally stopped as the game ended.

Rose will now face Jacksonville, rated the number two team in the state, next week, as the Rampants return home for the first time since their opener.

St. Louis Manager Sees Phillies Topping Dodgers For NL Pennant

NL Roundup

Winning the National League West should be as easy as one-two-three for the Los Angeles Dodgers.

But winning the National League playoffs might be a tougher number for them, says Manager Vern Rapp of the St. Louis Cardinals.

"I think Philadelphia will beat Los Angeles in the playoffs," Rapp said Friday night, conceding the respective division titles to each team.

Rapp, whose Cardinals were eliminated by the Phillies in a 12-6 loss, went on to explain that "Their bullpen has been strong. They've got a lot of offense."

By winning Friday night, Philadelphia's runaway East leaders reduced to six their "magic number" for the division crown with Friday night's victory.

Philadelphia Manager Danny Ozark was thinking just as optimistically as Rapp after the Phillies' lead soared to nine games over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Dodgers, meanwhile, cut their clinching number to three by beating the Atlanta Braves, 3-2.

Elsewhere in the National League, the Cincinnati Reds kept their hopes alive in the West by beating the San Francisco Giants 5-3; the Montreal Expos whipped Pittsburgh 5-0; the Chicago Cubs stopped the New York Mets 5-2 and the San Diego Padres edged the Houston Astros 4-3 in 10 innings.

Greg Luzinski and Jay Johnstone paced an extra-hit barrage with two doubles apiece as the Phillies walloped the Cardinals. Philadelphia packed eight doubles into a 16-hit attack off John Denny and Pete Falcone.

Warren Brusstar, 6-2, the second of three Philadelphia pitchers, was credited with the victory. Denny, 7-7, who has not won in 14 starts since May 31, absorbed the defeat.

Dodgers 3, Braves 2
Dave Lopes' run-scoring single with one out in the ninth inning gave Los Angeles its victory over Atlanta.

The Dodgers loaded the bases in the ninth on a single by Dusty Baker, a walk to Rick Monday and a fielder's choice by Jerry Grote. After reliever Dave Campbell struck out pinch-hitter Lee Lacy, Lopes drilled his game-winning single to right-center to break a 2-2 tie.

Lance Rautzahn, 4-1, who followed starter Rick Rhoden and Charlie Hough, earned the victory. Eddie Solomon, 5-6, who pitched into the ninth, took the loss.

Reds 5, Giants 3
Dan Driessen belted a pair of doubles and a triple and drove in two runs to power Cincinnati past San Francisco. Driessen's double, Johnny Bench's single and run-scoring singles by Dave Concepcion and Pete Rose gave the Reds a 2-0 lead in the second inning off loser Greg Minton, 0-1.

Ken Griffey's single and Driessen's second double made it 3-0 in the third. The Reds added an unearned run in the fifth and made it 5-0 on George Foster's single and Driessen's triple in the eighth.

Doug Capilla, 7-7, pitched six scoreless innings for the Reds, but the Giants jumped on relievers Tom Hume and Angel Torres for three runs in the eighth.

Expos 5, Pirates 0
Rookie left-hander Dan Schatzeder and Don Stanhouse combined on a six-hitter as Montreal blanked Pittsburgh. Schatzeder, who allowed five hits in 61-3 innings, gained the victory in his first major league start.

Tony Perez hit a two-run homer in the first and Gary Carter a solo shot in the second to give the Expos all the runs they needed.

Bruce Kison, 8-9, gave up three runs and eight hits through the first four innings.

Cubs 5, Mets 2
A two-run single by Steve Swisher in the eighth inning led Chicago over New York in the completion of a suspended game halted on July 13 by the New York City blackout.

Swisher's two-out single scored Larry Bittner and Gene Clines to give the Cubs a 4-2 lead. They added a run in the ninth on Bobby Murcer's RBI single.

The regularly-scheduled second game was rained out and rescheduled as part of a doubleheader today.

Padres 4, Astros 3
Gene Richards' two-out, run-scoring single snapped a 3-3 tie in the 10th inning, sparking San Diego over Houston. Gene Tenace led off the 10th with a walk against reliever Joe Niekro, 12-7, and advanced to second when first basemen Enos Cabell threw wildly to second on Mike Champion's sacrifice bunt.

Tucker Ashford then sacrificed the runners into scoring position, setting the stage for Richards' big hit. Dave Tomlin, 4-4, the third Padre reliever, was the winner.

"I've been in situations on the tour where I was scared to death," Jane said. "My stomach had butterflies. My legs were rubbery. My mouth was dry. Many times the tension was so great my jawbone was quivering and I found myself gnashing my teeth audibly."

Vikes, Cowboys In Top Contest

NFL Roundup

Two of professional sports' most successful expansion franchises, the Minnesota Vikings and Dallas Cowboys, square off in one of the feature games of the first weekend of National Football League action Sunday.

The Cowboys, who were 0-11-1 in their first season in 1960, have not had a losing season since 1964 and have posted a 137-93-6 record in 17 years under Coach Tom Landry.

The Vikings won three games in their rookie year of 1961, a record for an expansion franchise. They have a team record of 127-89-8 and have not had a losing season since 1967, the first year under Coach Bud Grant.

Vikings' quarterback Fran Tarkenton is looking forward to the tough opener in Bloomington.

"I feel like a schoolboy. I really do. I never get over that surge. How many years? The 17th for me."

Whether the Vikings make it to their fifth Super Bowl—they've lost all four previous appearances in the championship game—might be indicated by their performance against Dallas. Each time Minnesota won its season's opener since 1970, the Vikings took the NFC Central Division title. In 1972, when they lost their opener to Washington, the Vikes finished behind Green Bay in the division.

Minnesota hasn't lost at home since the Cowboys defeated them in the 1975 playoffs.

Much-heralded rookie Tony Dorsett will not start for the Cowboys.

In Sunday's other openers, defending champion Oakland entertains San Diego, Philadelphia hosts Tampa Bay, Cleveland journeys to Cincinnati, Los Angeles visits Atlanta, Washington is at the Giants, Miami is in Buffalo, Kansas City plays at New England, Detroit is at Chicago, Green Bay visits New Orleans, the New York Jets are in Houston, St. Louis is at Denver and Seattle hosts Baltimore.

On Monday night, it's San Francisco at Pittsburgh.

First Goal Is Reached

DOVER, Del. (AP) — "When we come up for the Delaware 500 we're going to sit on the pole and then we're going to race that car of ours—either into victory lane or into the ground," said Neil Bonnett before he arrived here for Sunday's stock car race.

Bonnett of Hueytown, Ala., made half of his prediction come true Friday when he took the pole position for Sunday's 500-mile race at Dover Downs International Speedway.

Cale Yarborough of Timmonsville, S.C., was the second-fastest qualifier for the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing event.

Bonnett, in a Dodge, turned one lap of the one-mile oval in 26.821 seconds for a speed of 134.223 miles an hour.

Farmville Central Surprises Havelock With 25-16 Victory

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central flexed its muscles Friday night and gained a 25-16 victory over Havelock High School. The tough Jaguar defense allowed Havelock only one first down during the night, as it held the Ram rushing to just 39 yards, and didn't allow a pass completion.

Both of the Havelock scores, which staked the Rams to a 16-0 lead in the first half, came after the Jaguars had fumbled the ball away.

Percy Godette scored the first touchdown for Havelock on a one-yard run, and then added the two-point conversion.

In the second period, another Farmville fumble, coupled with a penalty, set up the other Havelock score. That was also made by Godette, who scored from 12 yards out and again made the two-pointer.

Farmville came back late in the half and got on the scoreboard as Donald Freeman got in from three yards out. He ran in the two-pointer to cut the Ram lead to 16-8 at halftime.

The Jaguars tied it up just after the midpoint of the third period, when Freeman hit Rufus Mayo with a 38-yard aerial. Mayo converted the extra point attempt to tie it at 16-16.

Then, with 35 seconds left in the third period, Jackie Norris burst through to block a Havelock punt, and the ball rolled out of the end zone for a safety before it could be recovered, making it 18-16 for the Jaguars.

Farmville put the icing on the cake in the final seconds of the game, scoring its last touchdown on a one-yard plunge by Donald Reid. He also kicked the PAT for the final 25-16 margin, with just 13 seconds left.

Farmville is now 2-1 and will entertain Greene Central next Friday in the opening Eastern Carolina Conference game for the two teams.

Greene Central Wins Third In Row, 30-8

SNOW HILL — Greene Central opened its home season Friday night, pasting South Lenoir, 26-0, as the Rams won their third straight victory.

The Rams pushed over two touchdowns in the first period and added two more in the third frame.

Dale Dixon led the way, scoring twice and leading the rushing with 81 yards in 13 carries. James Best, who missed last week's game with a sprained ankle, returned to action picking up 60 yards on nine carries.

The Rams also took advantage of nine South Lenoir turnovers, five fumbles and four interceptions. Dixon got the first touchdown in the first period on a six-yard run and Donald Shaw added the extra point for a 7-0 lead.

Then, later in the period, Russell Brann hit Jay Carraway with a seven-yard pass, and Shaw again kicked for a 14-0 edge.

It stayed that way until the third period, when Linwood Belcher scored from 21 yards out. That upped it to 20-0.

The final touchdown was again scored by Dixon, from the 13.

South Lenoir got off only one threat, moving to the 15 before losing the ball on a fumble. Greene Central twice had touchdowns called back by penalties.

Greene Central opens Eastern Carolina Conference play next Friday, traveling to Farmville Central.

All Starters Return To Volleyball Squad

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina University's women's volleyball season will get underway Tuesday, as the Lady Pirates play host to Louisville.

That match is scheduled for 7 p.m. Monday night in Minges Coliseum.

The Lady Pirates have a new coach this year in Alita Dillon, wife of assistant basketball coach Herb Dillon. And she is looking for a good year from her charges.

"Practice has gone well so far," she said. "We've been a little hampered by the absence of our only grant player who has been out with mono. But we hope that she will be coming back soon."

That girl is Linda McClelland, a sophomore. "I think that she'll work in quickly when she does return," Mrs. Dillon said. "And she'll help us since she's such a strong spiker."

Meanwhile the first seven or eight players for this year have looked good in practice. "If we have a weakness, it is that we have only one setter back," Mrs. Dillon said. That's Kim Clayton, a junior. "She's also our quarterback. She'll be calling out the plays so the spikers will know what's going on." The coach added that she is also trying to teach a freshman Susan Sampson, to be one of the top setters.

The other probable starters are Gale Kerbaugh, a junior; Debbie Freeman, a senior; Rosie Thompson, a junior; Gaye Hines, a senior and Joy Forbes, a sophomore.

"All have done well on their defensive assignments. You really have to be able to do about everything in volleyball. Kerbaugh is real good on defense, and Forbes is too."

On service, Kerbaugh rates as the best, with Freeman next in line.

"We have sufficient height and jumping ability to be able to spike the ball well."

With the return of McClelland, all of the starters from last year's team will be back, and Mrs. Dillon feels this will help the team. "We're further along that I expected us to be right now, but we still have a lot of work to do in coverage and teamwork."

There are five other teams in Division I in North Carolina, and East Carolina will play all but North Carolina twice. The others are Appalachian State, N. C. State, Duke and UNC-Greensboro. "Duke is supposed to be the strongest, and they are the defending state champion. I think I'm not sure how strong the others will be."

As for the Pirates, Mrs. Dillon says, "I feel we'll be competitive. I'm really looking for a winning season, but we'll be finding out shortly."

Washington's Late Score Eases Pam Pack Past Ayden-Grifton

LITTLEFIELD — Washington High School scored with 50 seconds left in the game to spoil the home opener of the Ayden-Grifton Chargers Friday night, 14-7.

Ayden-Grifton, down 6-0 at halftime, rallied to take a 7-6 lead in the fourth period, but couldn't hold off the Pam Pack, which claimed its second straight win over an Eastern Carolina Conference team.

Washington took the lead in the game in the second period, when Chuck Parker got in on a one-yard dive. The PAT kick was missed however, leaving Washington in a 6-0 lead.

But that seemed to be enough, at least until late in the game, when Terry Morris finally tied it up on a 19-yard run for the Chargers. Paul Setliff then provided the Chargers with the lead on his PAT kick, making it 7-6.

Washington refused to give in, however, and drove back. Hale Stephenson got the winning touchdown on a 16-yard pass from Lentz Stowe, and the two worked together again on a conversion pass, sealing the win with just 50 seconds left in the game.

The loss was the second in three starts for Ayden-Grifton. The Chargers open ECC play next week, hosting winless Southern Nash.

Belhaven Runs Past Jamesville

BELHAVEN — Belhaven scored twice in the second quarter and went on to record a 30-8 Tobacco Belt Conference win over Jamesville's Bullets Friday night.

It was the fourth straight loss for the Bullets, who have yet to claim a victory. The defeat left them with an 0-3 league record.

For Belhaven, it advanced their record to 3-1, including a 2-0 league mark.

Frederick Wilkinson hit Earl McCuller with a 30-yard pass in the second period to break the ice for Belhaven. Johnny Collins ran over the PAT for an 8-0 lead. Later in the period, Collins scored on a two-yard plunge, upping the lead to 14-0.

Belhaven scored twice more in the third period. Connie Hooker scored on a 30-yard run, with Wilkinson passing to Tony Ebron for the conversion. Wilkinson ran over the other touchdown, a one-yard dive, and again passed to Ebron for the conversion.

Jamesville's only score came in the third period also, as Glenn Ellis scored on a 26-yard scamper. Trent Ange got the two-pointer to close out the scoring.

Jamesville, still seeking its first win, goes up against unbeaten Bath next Friday in a home game.

PRESIDENT JIMMY CARTER, in a recent official White House release, praised the nation's hunters and fishermen and recognized next Saturday, Sept. 24, as National Hunting and Fishing Day in a tribute to the nation's sportsmen-conservationists.

In issuing his statement, President Carter said, "The conservation movement, which now has widespread support throughout American society, was launched about 80 years ago, largely by the nation's hunters and fishermen. The efforts of these dedicated sportsmen have been crucial in promoting the American system of conservation and wildlife management — a system now considered among the best in the world."

An occasional quail hunter himself, the President used the occasion of National Hunting and Fishing Day to commend sportsmen. "Sportsmen currently provide most of the funding for those state agencies charged with the protection of fish and wildlife. Through the payment of license fees and special taxes, hunters and fishermen supply millions of dollars annually for the acquisition and improvement of fish and wildlife habitat."

In the last 50 years, sportsmen have contributed over $5 billion to the conservation effort through special taxes, and currently pay around $250 million a year. These contributions have made possible the purchase and improvement of millions of acres of wildlife habitat and have funded research that has helped to increase the populations of many wildlife species to near-record levels.

THE WHITE-TAILED DEER population, for example, has grown to nearly 12 million today from a low of one-half million at the turn of the century. Also benefitting from sportsmen-supported conservation efforts are numerous species of non-game wildlife, such as songbirds and chipmunks.

President Carter also recognized the biological importance of hunting and fishing in keeping animal populations in a healthy balance. "Regulated hunting and fishing also play an important part in scientific wildlife management," he said. "Good management benefits all of us who are interested in the quality of our environment whether or not we hunt or fish."

In issuing his statement, the President recognized the validity of many of the arguments used for years by hunters and fishermen in support of their sport. Coming from the White House, maybe these statements will have a little more impact on the anti-hunting and fishing forces in America.

The Henderson Jaycees will sponsor a striped bass fishing tournament next weekend, Sept. 24-25. The tournament headquarters will be at the Tar Heel Marina at Satterwhite Point. There will be an entry fee of $10 and a valid North Carolina or Virginia fishing license is required.

Cash prizes will be awarded for total poundage and biggest fish. Proceeds go to charitable

Defense Keys Yankee Victory

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

Defense has been the trademark of Paul Blair's major league career. But it was Blair's offense that keyed the latest New York Yankee victory.

Normally used as a late-inning defensive replacement,

Blair played the whole game Friday night because of an injury to regular center fielder Mickey Rivers. He surprised even himself with a two-run home run in the eighth inning to help the Yankees edge the Detroit Tigers, 5-4.

The victory held the Yankees' American League East Division lead at 2½ games over the Baltimore Orioles. And it was the 70th career victory for Yankee Manager Billy Martin.

In his eighth year as a major league manager, Martin has directed four teams to a record of 700-557.

In other AL games Friday, Baltimore defeated Boston 6-1.

California stopped Chicago 4-1, Oakland routed Milwaukee 8-1, Seattle downed Kansas City 4-1 and Minnesota outlasted Texas, 9-7. The Toronto at Cleveland game was rained out.

The Yankees, who have won 15 of their last 20 games, had to come from behind as Detroit jumped out to a 3-1 lead on Rusty Stabb's two-run homer, his 20th of the season, and a run-scoring single by John Wockenfuss.

Lou Piniella doubled home Reggie Jackson and Graig Nettles and Blair followed with his fourth homer of the season to give Don Gullett his 12th victory against four defeats.

AL Roundup

Orioles 6, Red Sox 1
Home runs by Eddie Murray and Lee May backed Jim Palmer's eight-hit pitching as Baltimore downed Boston to take over second place in the torrid AL East race. Despite Thursday night's forfeit to Toronto, Friday's victory was Baltimore's 11th in its last 13 games.

Palmer, 17-11, bidding for his seventh 20-victory season in the last eight, won his fourth in a row. He survived Carl Yastrzemski's 24th homer and pitched out of trouble in the sixth, seventh and eighth innings.

Twins 9, Rangers 7
A two-run double by designated hitter Jerry Terrell keyed a six-run, seventh-inning outburst to give Minnesota its victory over Texas. The Twins sent 11 batters to the plate in the game-breaking inning as Texas used four pitchers.

Minnesota reliever Tom Johnson, 16-7, earned the victory while Rangers starter Roger Moret, 3-3, took the loss.

Angels 4, White Sox 1
Paul Hartzell hurled a six-hit, ten-run performance while Ken Landreaux had two hits apiece to boost California over Chicago.

Bosley drove in two runs and scored another. Landreaux scored twice and drove in one run as Hartzell raised his record to 8-10.

Mariners 4, Royals 1
Right-hander Doc Medich hurled a seven-hitter and pinch-hitter Craig Reynolds singled home a run to snap a 1-1 tie as Seattle ended Kansas City's 16-game winning streak.

Medich, 11-6, was making his first start for Seattle. The Mariners obtained him on waivers from the Oakland A's earlier in the week.

A's 8, Brewers 1
A first-inning, three-run homer by Mike Jorgensen sparked Oakland's 14-hit attack as the A's crushed Milwaukee. Joe Coleman, 3-4, got the victory while Moose Haas, 10-11, took the loss.

Von Joshua doubled home Milwaukee's run.

SUMPTUOUS MASTER SUITE SHARES TERRACE

SITTING ROOM, DOUBLE CLOSETS FAVOR BEDROOMS

By Jerry Bishop

Dominant in this Spanish-inspired masterpiece is the elegant master suite, offering a sitting room, full bath, separate dressing room, and a glass link to the rear terrace.

The Shawano, a superior four bedroom plan, also defines formal living areas, relaxed family activity areas, and functional work areas for a design that is both gracious and livable on a day-to-day basis.

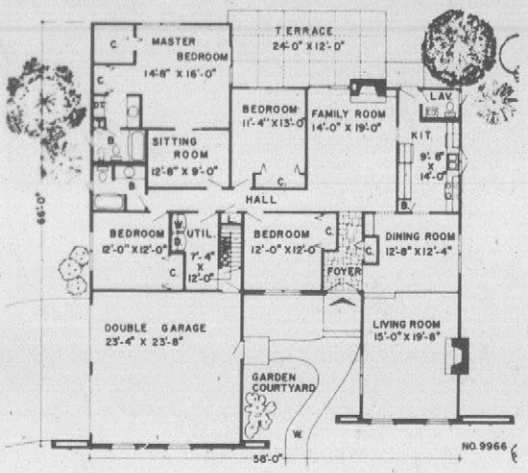

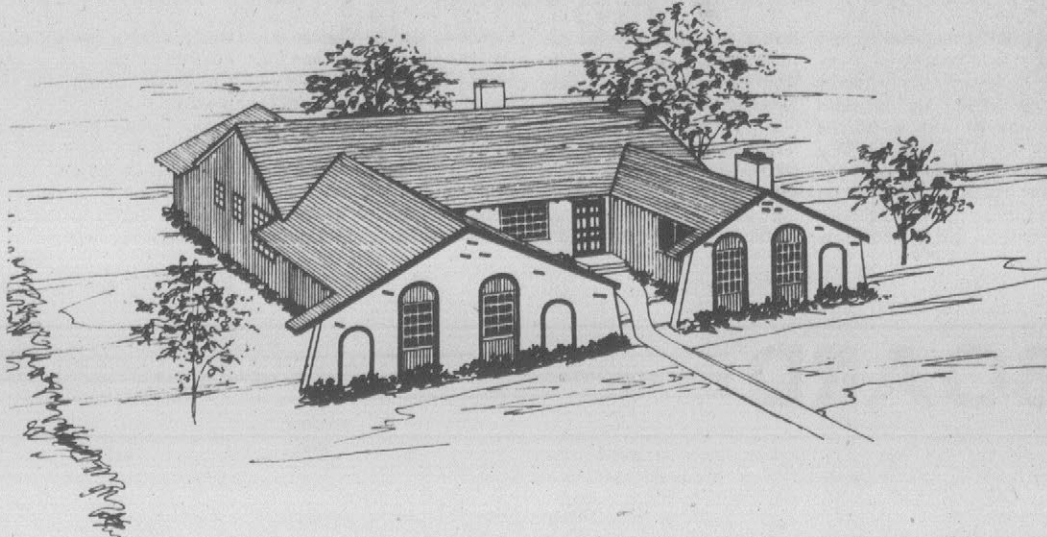

To emphasize its Spanish extraction, the exterior blends arches, exposed rafters ends, and stucco and greets guests with inviting double doors.

Inside the foyer, a closet is ready to receive coats. Living and dining rooms, formal and well-windowed, are directly accessible at right. For warmth, a fireplace is centered on the living room wall, and, for convenience, the dining room meets the corridor kitchen at rear.

Stretching 14 feet to serve family room and dining room, the kitchen displays two walls of counter space and cabinets and includes a broom closet. A half bath, cornered behind the kitchen, is close to the rear entrance.

Another fireplace furnishes the family room, also favored with sliding glass doors to the 24-ft. terrace.

The area to the left of the foyer is taken up with sleeping space. Four bedrooms and two baths are provided, and a utility/laundry room is located in perhaps the most ideal spot—next to bedrooms and linen closet.

Also adjoining the terrace is the master suite, a delightful refuge for parents. The sitting room alone measures over 12' by 9' and the bath and dressing area design is efficient.

A large double garage is supplied with an entry to the utility room, and a full basement is specified.

When a floor squeaks, it is caused by a loose board or a loose nail or both. The floor emits a cry of protest when one board rubs against another board. It also makes a sound when a loose nail moves up and down inside a board.

The solution in either case is self-evident. Stop the movement and you stop the squeak. While it is true that a bit of bath powder or graphite powder placed on the floor in the area of the noise sometimes will silence the sound as the powder works its way down between the boards, don't be misled. It is not halting the offending movement, but merely acting as a kind of lubricant, which means the noise will return as soon as the powder is worn off, often a matter of a few days.

Should the trouble be on the first floor where the underside of it can be reached, driving a few wedges between the flooring and the joists often is sufficient to end the squeaking. Another solution is to drive some screws upward from the bottom of the subflooring into the finish floor, but you must be careful to choose screws that are long enough to go well into the finish floor and yet not come through on the top side. Pilot holes should be drilled for the screws to make the job easier, especially if the top boards are made of hardwood.

Whether using wedges or screws, the way to locate the squeaks while you are underneath the floor (such as in a basement) is to have someone upstairs walk back and forth, covering all sections. Each time a squeak is located mark it with chalk or a heavy pencil so you will know where to make the repair.

When the squeak is on a floor which cannot be reached from the underside, you will have to drive nails into the floor from the top. Use ring or spiral nails for better holding power. At each trouble spot, drive two nails into the floor, each at an angle so that, if you could see the points of the nails, they would almost meet inside or under the wood. Here again, drill pilot holes for the nails. Preferably, the nails should be hammered into the floor at a point where the boards rest on the joists or beams, although often the squeaks will disappear when the nails go into only the two layers of flooring.

Each nail hole should be countersunk slightly below the surface with a nailset. The small hole then can be filled with wood putty and smoothed with a putty knife.

When attacking a floor from the top, you sometimes will find that half a dozen nails might not cure the ailment. Keep trying with a few more nails, spaced in pairs about 6 inches apart. Eventually, the squeaks will disappear.

Q.—We have wood siding on our house. It hasn't been painted for several years and is in need of it. When I examined the siding a few days ago to see whether any repairs had to be made before painting, I noticed that the needs of many of the nails were rusted. I assume that if I paint right over them, the rust will show through again in a short time, but I can't see pulling every one of those nails and putting in new ones. Is there any other solution?

A.—Yes. It won't be easy, but it will be a lot easier than trying to replace the nails. You will have to use a nail set to drive each nail a little below the surface. With a tiny brush, touch up each nail head with a rust-inhibiting paint. When the paint has dried, fill each indentation with wood putty. When the house is repainted, the repaired spots won't show. The bad news in this explanation is that you must do this with all the nails, not just those which are rusted, otherwise you will have the same problem again within a year or two, perhaps less.

Q.—Can you tell me what is meant by "wet storage" of paint brushes? I saw the expression in a magazine, but nobody I asked seemed to know what it meant.

A.—"Wet storage" is merely the common practice of leaving a paint brush immersed in the proper solvent if you intend to use it again in a day or two. Those solvents if you intend to use it again in a day or two. Those solvents are turpentine for paints and varnishes, denatured alcohol for shellac, and lacquer thinner for lacquer. The exception is when the label on the container specifies some other solvent or thinner for a particular finishing material. In every case, the brush must be suspended in the solvent, not rested on its bristles.

Q.—Some weeks ago I purchased a cover for my paint roller. It worked all right with the latex paint I did my living room with, but when I cleaned it with water and left it to dry, it became all tangled. Can you tell me what caused this?

A.—It is possible the roller cover is made of lamb's wool. When used with water, it doesn't exactly get tangled, as you say, but it does get matted. That type of cover should not be used with water-based paints or washed in water.

Q.—I recently bought some plywood, which I now notice has the letters DFPA stamped on the back of each sheet. What do they stand for?

A.—Department for Product Approval. It is placed on plywood that meets the specifications of the American Plywood Assn.

Q.—I sometimes use a hacksaw to cut pieces of pipe, but I can never seem to master the knack of making a clean cut. Is there some secret to it?

A.—No. That's why plumbers use pipe cutters these days.

Some career women are paying large rents when they might well be building equity in their own homes. It's worth consideration.

For example, one group of four women pays $900 a month for an apartment. If one owned it and rented to the others, at least one of their number would be paying off a mortgage. As one points out though, "incomes for women are so high now they just accept the high cost of living."

Banks are cooperating with young people seeking mortgages, but often there aren't enough reminders that they are entitled to borrow for such investments. And some think it is more complicated than it is.

Yet "many women are realizing they are entitled to credit and they are coming into banks for it," says Raymond E. Cummings, president of the eight-branch Burrill Mutual Savings Bank of New Britain, Conn.

In particular, he says, more single women are taking advantage of mortgages that are available to them. And about 50 per cent of those mortgages are written for the under-40 group. Some years ago his bank encouraged such investments by introducing Ms and Bachelor Pad mortgages. Actually these were labels designed to attract young people to investigate mortgage possibilities which they might ignore. The idea has been extremely successful and they are writing 150-plus Ms mortgages every year.

"Condominiums, especially the attached two-and four-unit buildings, are popular with young people. They can find condominiums in the $30,000 to $40,000 bracket, although at that price it usually is a modest home. It all depends where you want to buy," Cummings says.

But it is a starter home and the equity in it can give young people a lot of assurance when they want to settle down.

Older persons still want a piece of land and a feeling that the home and land "is all my own." Young people embrace the freedom of condominium life with its built-in security, swimming pools, tennis, and the maintenance-free advantages that do not restrict their activities.

Some young people want a feeling of more permanence and a new kind of condominium has become popular with them, Cummings says. It is a row-house type of modern building that entitles one to her own plot of land and her own entrance. It is the usual fee simple title—the most complete ownership in real estate, "with a hunk of land that satisfies the human need," Cummings explains.

Young people usually gravitate to the "adults only" condominium communities and when they marry and start a family, they move out. "If they don't, their neighbors soon get the message across to them," Cummings observed.

Even though banks are providing credit for women, they want the future income to look pretty secure before they part with those dollars.

"The average woman applying for a mortgage needs to have reasonable earnings in order to acquire a mortgage. But each case must be considered on an individual basis. You can't really pinpoint the earnings that might be required in any particular case," explained Cummings.

Some Furniture Made Without A Workshop

By VIVIAN BROWN

AP Newsfeatures Writer

Soaring furniture costs are driving do-it-yourselfers to the work bench. But some interesting furniture can be made without a workshop.

Two books on the subject, Clement Meadmore's "How to Make Furniture Without Tools," and Mario Dal Fabbro's "How to Build Modern Furniture," can fill the needs of aspiring home furniture builders. The projects in Meadmore's book require no more than wood, white glue—new water-based glues make it possible, he says—and the cutting services supplied by a lumber yard, so that even an unskilled workman can build them.

For example, his low table can be converted to a bed with a 5-inch thick foam rubber mattress. The top measures 39 inches by 75 inches, the center brace, 12 inches from each end, is 8 and 7-8ths inches by 51 inches, and two leg panels measure 8 and 7-8ths inches by 39 inches.

Order forms supplied in the books are intended to be taken to lumber dealers where plywood is cut to the pattern. The lumber is cut into small pieces and you take home those parts, not the eight-foot piece of lumber that has always been a transportation problem for do-it-yourselfers. Most designs by Meadmore, a sculptor, are limited to rectangles for that reason.

Glue is put along the edges to be joined (it should spread to cover the entire edge when the parts are joined) and the pieces are held in place with masking tape, which should be stretched slightly when it is applied. Surplus glue is wiped off with a damp sponge. Glue sets overnight and the tape is removed.

so the piece can be sanded, finished and painted.

This book gives directions for pieces such as chairs, dining tables and record shelves. A high-back arm chair with slant back and slant seat is a design very much like the old-fashioned, comfortable, outdoor Adirondack chair that has more or less disappeared.

Dal Fabbro's excellent book, a new edition, should charm the proficient do-it-yourselfer. It has challenging illustrations that include the minute details of craftsmanship necessary for building 55 different pieces of furniture. It also shows how to join rails to legs, legs to upholstered furniture and so on.

There are directions for making and assembling cabinets, chairs, tables, upholstered seats, a five-drawer high chest, lounge chairs and even an upholstered sofa and service carts. Special features include detailed illustrations of seats—raffia, rush, cane—and how to upholster seats and chairs.

Dal Fabbro, a long-time furniture designer for outstanding Italian and American manufacturers, has done many pieces that are recognizable as some of the best in good design. His styles range from timeless classic to up-to-the-minute modern.

In building your own furniture, it is essential to choose pieces that will fit into your present decorating scheme. A do-it-yourselfer may suddenly decide to build a piece that is a challenge and then be annoyed when his mate does not want to use it with certain other pieces of furniture.

Studying the furniture offerings is a necessary requirement in selection. Simple contemporary styles will go with many traditional styles, but some thought and discussion must go into the idea before execution of the piece. You may be saving money in building it yourself, but lumber is not inexpensive, and you might as well make something that will flatter your present home and please other members of the family.

Life Insurance Policies Grow

NEW YORK (AP)—The average size of an ordinary life insurance policy bought by an American has increased by more than four times since 1920, climbing from $1,990 to $8,750 in 1976, according to the American Council of Life Insurance.

The sharpest increase, the council's figures indicate, was between 1950 and 1976 when the price rose from $2,320 to the current levels.

American families usually hold more than one policy, the insurance group says, and the average amount currently is an estimated $29,800.

Columbus No Italian Hero

CHICAGO (AP) — It is perhaps one of life's small ironies that Christopher Columbus is heralded in this hemisphere to a much greater degree than on the continent of his origin.

Neither in Italy, the famous seaman's birthplace, nor in Spain, the country that financed — and profited from — his voyages, is there a major city or town that bears his name, says the World Book Encyclopedia.

But on this side of the world, the Republic of Colombia carries his name, and so do numerous towns, rivers, streets and public buildings. For many Latin American people October 12th is a day of celebrations to honor their Spanish heritage, while in America it is celebrated on the second Monday in October.

Americans have been celebrating Columbus' arrival on these shores since 1792, when New York City honored the 300th anniversary of the event. In 1920, Columbus Day was declared a permanent federal holiday. And Americans have been celebrating annually since then with parades and banquets.

South Leads In Spotted Fever

By RICHARD LOWE
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — So many Rocky Mountain spotted fever cases are being reported in the South, a spokesman for the national Center for Disease Control says the tick-borne infection is named for the wrong section of the country.

As the tick season crawls to a close, the nation is headed for a record annual number of spotted fever cases and, so far, more than half the cases have been reported in the South. Rocky Mountain states have accounted for less than 2 percent, an official of CDC in Atlanta says.

"Rocky Mountain spotted fever is really a misnomer now," Bob Alden said in an interview. "It appears to be a disease of southern and South Atlantic states. It's very rare to have a fatality with treatment, but without treatment, the death rate is around 20 percent."

A doctor at the center says 911 cases, 26 fewer than last year, were reported by Sept. 9 and that Southeastern states and Virginia accounted for 536 cases of this year's total.

"Clearly, we're going over last year," Dr. Lawrence D'Angelo said. "Traditionally, North Carolina is the highest. There were 192 reported cases there last year and there are already 185 there this year."

Virginia has reported 142 cases this year compared with 100 in 1976 and Tennessee, with 88, is one case behind last year's record number.

"The illness was first described in Rocky Mountain states," the doctor said, "but of the 911 cases so far this year, only 12 have been recorded there. It's difficult to explain. We're studying it but right now we just don't know why."

Louisiana, which had no spotted fever cases in 1976, has reported 4 this year, while Florida, with 4 last year, has recorded 1 in 1977. Georgia, with 52 cases, is 4 cases behind 1976.

"Ticks just don't live in Louisiana and Florida because of the location of those states," D'Angelo said. "We've been studying the situation in Georgia and we've found that as you move further down the state and get past a certain line, the ticks aren't around. Climatologically, the ticks can't adjust well."

Fever-carrying ticks, about a quarter inch in size, can be carried by animals, including pets.

"The dog tick is implicated in spreading the illness in the Southeast," D'Angelo said, "but they don't always die, so the role of the dog is not altogether clear."

The spotted fever season, which peaks in June and July and tapers off at the end of September, killed 33 people in 1976 and 19 this year, five of them in Virginia.

Alden said ticks carrying the fever can infect humans if they remain attached two hours or more. Fever, chills, headaches and muscle aches occur within 10 days. Fever victims are usually identified when they become so sick they realize they need a doctor.

"You can pull the tick off with your hand or tweezers," Alden said. "The point is to go ahead and pull it out. There is the theoretical risk that you can get infected in handling it, but you've got to get rid of the tick."

The number of cases rises during summer as people spend more time outdoors.

"But it's not just a phenomenon of the parks," Alden said. "There could be ticks right in your neighborhood. Outdoor activities have increased in popularity so more people are going to go where ticks are found, but as you expand the suburban areas, new houses are built in tick infested areas."

Statistics for 1977 show there were 45 cases in South Carolina, 5 fewer than 1976; 3 in Mississippi, down 27; 16 in Alabama, down 1; 66 in Oklahoma, down 26, and 65 in Maryland, up 38.

Unemployment A Moral Challenge

WASHINGTON (AP) — The general secretary of the U.S. Catholic Conference, Bishop Thomas C. Kelly, says "the inability of our economy to provide sufficient jobs for our people is a serious national failing" and constitutes a major moral challenge to the country's leaders.

He told a meeting of the Full Employment Action Council that if the current high unemployment rates "were the result of forces beyond our control, it would be tragic enough," but "they result from inaction, apathy or attempts to control inflation through high joblessness" and are "morally intolerable."

Preserve Heritage Of The Hills

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Ark. (UPI) — A visit to the Ozark Folk Center in this north central Arkansas village is an eyeopener for city people in our fashion-conscious, affluent society.

"A hill (country) woman was lucky to have one black dress, two work dresses, two aprons and one pair of shoes," said Denise Valtz, who was minding the pioneer dress shop at the center the day I dropped in.

Mrs. Valtz proudly showed off garments on display in one of a series of small cabins.

The folk center, now four years old, is an outgrowth of the annual Arkansas Folk Festival that began in 1962.

It is dedicated to preserving the cabin crafts, music and lore of the Ozarks and providing permanent work for local people such as Mrs. Valtz, dollmakers Jan Misenheimer and Oma Cooper, illustrator Jim Blackfeather Rose, wood-carver Euphie Stewart and Retha Brewer, who makes lye hominy from corn. About 20 regular educational demonstrations take place daily during the height of the summer season.

Evenings, there is music and dancing in which the audience is encouraged to participate.

Since the winter of 1976, private and group musical instruction have been offered with the help of a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts.

The day I visited the center, Mrs. Valtz was making an old-fashioned apron on an old-fashioned treadle machine.

"No pattern," she said, in answer to my question. "We just measure. We have a book to make clothes for the girls who work here. I cut the pattern off an eyelet blouse."

The books she refers to most often is "The Cut of Women's Clothes, 1600-1930" by Norah Waugh, published by Theatre Arts Books in New York City in 1968.

A hill woman's traditional wedding dress was black sateen.

"It had to be very practical," said Mrs. Valtz, showing one with 16 tiny black buttons on the bodice. "She spent all her money on buttons and had to line the sleeves with flour sacks."

Women also used flour sacking to make tablecloths trimmed with Battenberg lace handmade from feed sack string. They also used feed sack string for lace doilies. Nothing was wasted. Mrs. Valtz said they unraveled work socks and respun the thread to use for crocheted doilies. They used sugar sacks to make small articles.

Everyday dresses were colorless because people didn't have money for extra fabric to make something purely decorative. But courting and partying gowns often had capelets that helped keep the wearer warm as well as fashionable.

In another cabin, Mrs. Misenheimer was making applehead dolls and Mrs. Cooper was making cornhusk dolls, flowers and mushrooms. They are sold in the center's gift shop along with other examples of hill people's skills: wooden toys, musical instruments, cooking utensils, baskets, quilts, homemade, canned hominy and homemade soap, among other things.

Applehead dolls have jute hair and wizened, weathered faces, "tanned" by oxidation and shrinkage under the heat and light of ordinary light bulbs.

"Golden delicious is best," Mrs. Misenheimer said. "It dries better." She preserves the heads as her mother taught her, by filling the hollow where the core had been with a mixture of sulphur, lemon juice and salt. She carves the heads from fresh apples and uses powdered makeup on the faces after they have turned from pale yellow to light tan.

Mrs. Cooper said she earns a good part of her income from cornhusk articles and quilts that she makes evenings at home in nearby Melbourne. Her mother taught her to make the dolls and flowers. She improvised the mushrooms from a picture she saw in a paper. The caps are made by covering egg carton cups with dampened shucks, and the stems are pieces of dried corn cobs.

Mrs. Cooper's nimble fingers flew as she talked. She used wire as the core for dolls' arms to make them flexible. She dipped natural and dyed cornhusks into water to soften them for making puffed sleeves or full, flowing ones. She used curved toenail scissors to trim the husks at the neckline to make a ruff. Finally, she dipped russet-colored dried corn silk in water to shape a wig.

"This is the messiest part," she said. "When it dries, I'll spray it with hair spray to make it shine."

That's one thing mother didn't teach her.

Italian Style Kidnaps Now Rarely Headlined

By ROBIN STAFFORD
ROME (UPI) — Some newspapers did not bother to report the event at all. Others buried it on inside pages.

Wealthy Calabrian pharmacist Armando Ilario Lanzetta, 52, locked up his pharmacy in Locri for the night and drove toward home in his small Fiat car. He never made it.

Police found the car, its headlights on and the front left fender dented. A few miles away was an abandoned stolen car with two face masks thrown on the back seat.

The next step should be a phone call with an outrageous ransom demand.

Though kidnapping has become so common it no longer warrants big treatment by the Italian press, Lanzetta's abduction was unusual: it was the 49th kidnap for ransom in Italy this year — one more than last year with four months still to go.

At the present rate, 1977 will top the previous record of 63 abductions in 1975.

The last kidnapping was July 28, an indication that even kidnappers abide by the Italian ritual of taking a vacation in August. The kidnap "industry" really took off in 1973, when the late oil magnate's grandson, J. Paul Getty III, became the most famous of that year's 17 victims.

From 1960 to 1972 only 91 people were held for ransom, all but four of them in the traditional abduction strongholds of Sardinia, Sicily and the Calabrian towns of Italy.

Besides people, kidnappers have also seized for ransom a racehorse, a talking mynah bird, a pair of dead bodies, master negatives of films by Federico Fellini and Pier Paolo Pasolini, an Afghan hound and a private television station's equipment.

Dognappers released the Afghan in Brescia in 1975 with a note saying they had kept a "ransom" of two pups bred during her captivity.

The racehorse was recovered without ransom. The mynah bird was never seen again after its owner refused a $300 demand. The negatives and television equipment are still missing. Both bodies were recovered by relatives, one for a ransom and one without.

Police estimate the average ransom for a human at $450,000.

A police computer in Rome lists the serial numbers of $65 million paid out since 1975. Some of the money is getting back into circulation and being paid out twice.

Police discovered that some notes in the $1.2 million paid last May for leading Socialist politician Francesco De Martino's son Guido had been used in an earlier pay-off.

Magistrates now routinely seize all the assets of a kidnap victim's family in an effort to prevent a ransom being paid, technically a crime in itself as it constitutes becoming an accessory after the fact.

The families protest that this endangers the victim's life.

But payment is no guarantee, either.

After the father of Cristina Mazzotti paid a fortune for her release in 1975 her body was found in a garbage dump near Milan.

Police fear a dozen kidnap victims may now be dead as there has been no contact from their abductors.

Wealthy Italians get around the asset seizures by lending each other ransoms as they know their turn could come next.

When Tivoli shopowner Giovanni Conversi told telephoning kidnappers the most he could raise for his wife was $333,000, one sneered: "That won't even pay our expenses — these things cost $11,000 a day."

Police later freed Mrs. Lucilla Conversi, 38, after 86 days in captivity and arrested the kidnappers.

Victims can be treated brutally or benignly. Getty's ear was hacked off before his grandfather was persuaded to hand over $2.9 million.

Insurance executive Clemente Vigna, at 72 one of the oldest victims to be seized, was released after payment of a $160,000 ransom last April. Said Vigna, "They cared for me like a baby, offering me caviar and champagne."

Cruel or kind, Kidnappers, Inc., is a booming business in Italy.

Squeamish As To Squid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Most Americans don't want to look at a squid, let alone eat one.

A researcher at the University of California thinks that's a mistake. Dr. Paul Singh views squid as a plentiful source of protein and a delicacy some places in the world. He says squid provides calcium and iron, and are low in fat.

The bulbous-eyed, ten-tentacled sea creatures look like miniature octopuses. Italians, Greeks, Spaniards, Portuguese, Chinese, Japanese, and South Americans have feasted on squid for centuries, the National Geographic Society says.

Japanese like squid sliced raw, on vinegared rice. The Chinese stir-fry chopped squid with scallions, ginger, and soy sauce. Greeks cook it with onions, rice, and currants. Italians love it cooked with wine, peppers, and tomatoes. In Latin America, squid is consumed either raw and spiced, or cooked and seasoned.

The parts of the squid usually eaten are fins, body mantle and tentacles. A few hardy souls also cook the head, after removing the sharp beak. In some nations, very small species of squid are cooked and eaten whole.

Singh regards squid as a valuable source of protein for an increasingly hungry world. He cites studies that estimate the potential global catch for squid at 100-to-300-million tons a year, without depleting squid stocks. In 1976, the international catch totaled just 500-thousand tons.

ANT ATTACK

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of enraged fire ants can sting a victim several thousand times in just a few seconds, says the National Geographic Society.

When disturbed by an intruder, fire ants of both the red and black species respond by sending forth an army of defenders from their two-foot-high hills. Each ant grabs the victim with its mandibles, arches its back and jabs with its stinger more than a dozen times in rapid succession.

Buys Town Settled By Chinese Labor

LOCKE, Calif. (AP) — The residents of this Sacramento River Delta town — many of them descendants of 19th-century Chinese laborers — will have a Chinese landlord to oversee their homes, vegetable gardens and narrow streets.

A Hong Kong investor, Tora-tai Ng, recently purchased the town's 14 acres of spindly houses, sagging wooden sidewalks, old walls covered with peeling paint and the surrounding 480 acres of fields.

Locke, which was founded in 1912, was built on land owned by George Locke, a gold miner whose heirs are reported to have sold the town and the land for about $650,000.

"The Chinese people all around are pleased that the Chinese have a chance to buy the property," said Bob Jang, a town spokesman and consultant to Ng. "The Chinese worked very hard around here, on the railroads and farms."

It was Chinese laborers who, beginning in 1852, built the first of many levees that have turned the Delta swamplands into 500,000 acres of rich farmland.

Jang says that Ng has no plans to develop the land "as of now" and says Ng doesn't want to tear down the hamlet upstream from the San Francisco Bay.

The town's ramshackle buildings were once the center of the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta's 4,000-member Chinese community. About 1,000 Chinese lived in Locke in 1920, Jang said, and about 75 Chinese and 50 Caucasians live in the town now.

Although the residents own their houses, the land was never theirs. Monthly land rent runs as little as $7.50 per house and $15 for a store on Locke's main street.

On the main street there is an old bar and steakhouse that attracts a stream of tourists. But the life of the town continues, largely ignoring camera-clicking sightseers.

"I know the new owner wants the present Chinese to stay as long as they want and keep Locke intact," says Jang.

Nursing Program Provides New Concept

"The Career Option Nursing Program at Pitt Technical Institute is designed to give a balance between classroom and clinical learning experiences," said Ms. Judith W. Kuykendall, director of the program.

Pitt Tech offers a unique nursing program, distinct from the other 27 community college-technical institute nursing education programs in North Carolina.

The career option idea is a new concept. Students, based on their personal career goals, choose to pursue an education that leads to an LPN and/or RN designation. It's different in that students elect or choose to complete one or two years of education, whereas in most institutions, students may select either a one-year practical nurse program or a two-year associate of applied science nursing degree program but not a combination of the two.

Under this concept, a one-year nursing diploma is awarded to students successfully completing the first year requirements at Pitt Tech. Upon the successful writing of the State Licensed Practical Nurse Exams, students become LPNs.

Students who qualify and choose to continue their formal education by enrolling in the second year of nursing and complete those requirements are awarded as A.A.S. degree in nursing. After successfully writing the Registered Nurse Exams, students become RNSs.

"Completion of the first-year of nursing does not automatically entitle the student to continue in the second year. A quality point average of 2.5 is necessary to progress into the second level (year) of the program. Each quarter's requirements must be met prior to entry into the next quarter. LPNs who graduated from other institutions must meet the same requirements as those at PTI to enter the second level," said Ms. Kuykendall.

The career option program covers eight quarters or two full years of education experiences. Students who choose to become an LPN only, exit at the end of the fourth quarter or first year (12 months).

Even though only 45-50 students can be accepted for admission to the fall quarter of the first level, more than 300 applications are received. Only 32 students are admitted each fall to the second level, even though more than 75 LPNs make application.

First-year students, in addition to being a high school graduate or equivalent, must provide personal references, have good health and dental reports, pass entrance tests required by the nursing faculty and be recommended for admission by the nursing faculty and dean of students.

"Students enrolled in nursing come from varied socio-cultural backgrounds and their ages range from 18 to 50 plus years of age. Some are single, some are married, some are mothers and fathers, both females and males are enrolled in the program.

"Except for the first quarter, when students devote all their time to fundamentals of nursing, basic life sciences, sociology, basic nutrition and math, in the classroom and labs, they spend approximately the same number of hours in clinical facilities and in the classroom setting, comprising a total of 31-34 hours per week," said the director.

"To achieve the highly developed skills, values and knowledge required in this curriculum, students must study many hours beyond the required hours in the classroom and clinical facilities. The content and skills to be acquired have a high degree of difficulty and complexity.

"The clinical experience which is acquired at Pitt Memorial Hospital is very important. It is in the clinical environment that the skills, values and knowledge learned in the classroom become an integral part of the students' total learning experiences, enabling them to see both the theoretical and practical aspects of their nursing duties and responsibilities," she continued.

The clinical experiences are also a necessary experience for the student to be able to successfully complete the LPN or RN exams. During the clinical aspects of nursing education, nursing instructors must be as well prepared for instructing in the clinical setting as they are in the classroom.

The high degree of interest in nursing, exemplified by the large number of applicants for the career option program, can be attributed in large measure, to the good job market for nurses in eastern North Carolina, according to Ms. Kuykendall. "However, the major motivation of students entering nursing, according to student interviews, is the idea of helping and working with people," added Ms. Kuykendall.

"The wide exposure to the idea of helping people, through television and other media, has helped to portray nursing as 'glamorous'," she said, "and this, although erroneous, has helped to create further interest in the nursing field."

In July, 1976, the first class of 21 students from the second year of the nursing program graduated and received the A.A.S. degree. The second class of 22 second year students graduated in August of this year.

Approximately 75 per cent of these graduates are now employed at Pitt Memorial Hospital. Other graduates have been employed by their hometown hospitals, private medical offices and nursing homes.

"Receiving my PTI Associate Nursing Pin at graduation was meaningful because our class, as the first class, designed the pin," said Mrs. Joyce Sawyer of Greenville.

"I was very elated when I was notified by mail that I had passed my state boards," Mrs. Sawyer continued.

Mrs. Sawyer received her LPN diploma at Pitt Tech and then worked for two and a half years at Greenville Pediatric Services, prior to returning to PTI, where she received her A.A.S. degree.

She decided to return to PTI to "further my education and for personal and family security

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. Her sister, Diane Simmons, of Oklahoma City, was honor attendant. Bridesmaids included Sara Rae Bellows of Salem, Ind., Arlene Carnes of Houston, Tex., and Susan Broadwell of Ocala, Fla.

The best man was Mike Hummer of Sandia Park, N. M., brother of the bridegroom. Groomsmen were Ned Carnes of Houston, Tex., Jim Butcher of Oklahoma City, and Pat Downs of Tulsa, Okla. Ushers were John Deen of Tulsa, Okla. and Kurt Jackson of Stillwater, Okla.

A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Garrel Dunn, organist, and Jim Hemline, vocalist.

The bride wore a gown of ivory knit chiffon styled with a lifted waistline, wedding band neck, angel sleeves, circular skirt and attached chapel train. Belgian type pearl beaded lace combined with Venise lace circled the neck, edges of the sleeves, bands the hemline and train edging the yoke continued down the front of the gown to the hem.

Her shallow Venise lace Camelot cap held an ivory illusion fingertip veil. She carried a bouquet of gardenias, stephanotis and baby's breath.

The attendants wore gowns of aquamint giana fashioned with a natural waistline, cap sleeves, asymmetrical neckline and sashed at the waistline with a self-tie belt. Their flowers included aquamint daisies, pink rosebuds, white miniature carnations and baby's breath.

Following a wedding trip to Europe, the couple will reside in Oklahoma City.

The bride is a graduate of Hills Business University and is secretary for Fleming Foods Co. The bridegroom is a graduate of OSU with a master's degree in business administration. He is a mechanical engineer for Western Electric.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church Parish Hall.

The mother of the bridegroom entertained at a rehearsal dinner Friday at Vol Gene's Peacock Alley.

With four weeks to go, plans for homecoming which is to be held Oct. 14, are already under way.

Suggestions for this year's theme were offered during the first SGA meeting. Included in the list are: The West, Song Titles, The Roaring 20's, Antebellum Days, and Star Wars. These along with others will be voted on by the Student Body at a later date.

To earn money for homecoming and other various school projects, a fund raising project was planned. Rose High students will be selling candy bars this year instead of magazine subscriptions as they have done in the past.

Activities of the Anchor Club increased as new members were voted on Monday night. Two days later they were installed by president Lois Philips during a special ceremony.

It was easy to single out the new Anchors as they walked down the halls wearing funny headresses and "Anchor" written on them by lipstick. All of this was part of their initiation.

The new members include senior, Rae James; juniors, Bonnie Correll; Karen Gordon; Hannah Taft; and sophomores, Sarah Cooley; Patsy Woronoff; Sandra Simpson; Sandy Evans; Eden Hooks; Virginia Baker; and Beth Bailey.

The organizational meeting of the Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA) was held Tuesday night. While the main project of the club is to run the act as their advisor.

The Spanish Club recently elected new officers. June Wease is president this year aided by Janet Vultee, vice president, and secretary-treasurer, Kathy Conway. While other projects will be decided on later, the main project for the present is a float for homecoming.

The Science Ecology Club held a meeting Wednesday. During this time tentative plans were made for a camping trip to be held later in the year. The club also made plans for future programs which include speakers and films.

Congratulations to David Daniel, Curtis Ebbs, John Farley, Laurie Lucas, Suzanne McGee, Chris Tacker, Janet Vultee, and Lisa White, the eight Rose High Merit Semifinalists!

Williams-Smith Vows Solemnized On Friday

PINK HILL — The marriage of Cynthia Mills Smith of Greenville and James Fred Williams Jr. of Pink Hill was solemnized in the Pink Hill Methodist Church Friday at 7 p.m.

The double ring candlelight ceremony was performed by the Rev. Douglas Stanfield. A program of wedding music was presented by Edgar Wells, organist, and Catherine Sauls of Farmville, soloist.

Ms. Sauls sang "More," "The Lord's Prayer" and "The Wedding Prayer."

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Mills of Kinston. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Sallie Williams of Pink Hill, and the late Mr. James Fred Williams.

The bride wore a formal gown of ivory organza and Venise lace. The fitted bodice featured a square neckline accented with Venise lace. Lace details were repeated on the cape sleeves and the full tiered skirt was encircled with double rows of Venise lace.

Her fingertip veil of silk illusion, bordered in lace, was attached to a Camelot of lace and pearls. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of spice and gold mums and pom poms.

The honor attendant was Sharon Crumpton of Kinston. She wore a formal length gown of mint voile flocked with yellow rosebuds featuring a scooped neckline. The empire bodice was banded with lace and matching ribbon. She carried a single yellow mum with greenery and ribbons.

Bridesmaids were Margaret Williams of Pink Hill, sister of the bridegroom, and Debbie Thornton of Fayetteville. Their gowns and flowers were identical to that of the matron of honor.

The ring bearer was Shane Crumpton of Kinston. Gary Young of Raleigh was best man and ushers included W. A. Mills of Kinston, brother of the bride, and Craig Bachelor of Beaufort.

The bride graduated from South Lenoir High School and received her B.S. degree from ECU. She is employed by the Pitt County Schools. The bridegroom is a graduate of East Duplin and is employed by DuPont, Kinston.

Following a wedding trip to the coast, the couple will reside in Greenville.

A reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church following the ceremony.

The bridal table was centered with an arrangement of yellow and spice mums and pom poms flanked by burning tapers. After the bridal couple cut the traditional slice of cake, it was served by Mrs. Dorothy Stancill of Greenville. Punch, from a fountain, was served by Mrs. Johnny Wagner and Mrs. Melvin Bostic, aunts of the bridegroom.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's mother at a Kinston restaurant following the rehearsal.

MRS. JAMES FRED WILLIAMS JR.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

People in my age bracket (commonly listed as over) on surveys and job applications grew up with the following timetable:

College: 18-22.
Marriage: 22-infinity.
Babies: 23-33.
Retirement from scouting, car pools, plastic seat covers, live-in plumber: 39.
Retirement from PTA, ironing, high school reunions, and taking a number to use the bathroom: 51.

Over the past 10 years, the timetable has undergone some alterations and frankly, I wonder how all of it is going to work out.

Surveys now show the norm to be:

College: 22-34.
Marriage: 26 to later that evening.
Babies: Later... much later.
None of it necessarily in that order.

There's nothing wrong with this timetable except the concern that bodily changes are not necessarily keeping pace.

The way it stands now, a woman says goodbye to her teenager drivers one day and hello to hot flashes the next. ... The other way around — even one day — could be disastrous.

Another point that needs clarification. Does Social Security cover the unborn child a woman is carrying? Can a girl with varicose veins be named captain of the pom-pom line? Does Medicare cover bleach? Are we leaving enough time for senility?

Personally, I'd be worried sick to run out of iron on my wedding day. My other concern is that if college, marriage and family don't begin until the late twenties, that doesn't leave much time at the end for retirement. I was wondering where that would fit in until I talked with my son. "We've pushed retirement up to right after high school," he said. "Makes a lot of sense. You're young enough to enjoy it. You still have your parents' support. You're surrounded by friends and you're in good enough health to travel."

"Look, Bunkie," I said stripping the bed with him in it, "you're 22 and you're too old to retire!"

I wish I understood what I just said.

Dear Abby

Report Barking Dog And Get Some Rest

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Our neighbors across the street are lovely people, but they have one fault. They tie their dog outside in summer, and he barks continually, night and day, for no reason at all. I love dogs, so I can't bring myself to do anything that might hurt him, such as poison him, shoot him or turn him loose at night, although I confess I have thought of it during a sleepless night while the barking was its peak.

I hate to make enemies of these lovely people by reporting them to the police or humane society. And ear plugs are out because if an emergency phone call or knock on the door came, I could not hear it. I have spoken to these neighbors several times about it, but they do nothing. Any suggestions?

DOG-TIRED

DEAR DOG-TIRED: Tell these "lovely people" that since your previous requests have been ignored, you must now protest to the authorities. Your rest is more important than their friendship.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have taken a teenage cousin into our home because she is in trouble. We have children of our own and are financially able to care for this girl and pay all her expenses. She has one year of high school left, which she will finish after her baby is born.

Now the problem: She wants to keep her baby. We have had our doctor and lawyer talk to her, and no one can get through to her. She thinks it is a "sin" to give away her own flesh and blood.

Abby, this child is 17 and the boy will not marry her (for which she is lucky, as he is only a kid himself and not much good). My husband and I would adopt the child as a compromise, but we want her to put her past behind her, go on to college and start life over where no one knows of her mistake. We need your help in convincing her that this would be best for her and the baby. Please help me.

ANONYMOUS

DEAR ANONYMOUS: It would appear that the girl, under the guise of selflessness and sacrifice, feels guilty and is determined to punish herself for her mistake. Actually, she would be punishing the child more.

For you to adopt the baby would be as grave a mistake as for her to keep it. I know of no one more qualified to deal with "sin" than a clergyman. Ask yours to talk to the girl.

CONFIDENTIAL TO E. L. R. IN JAMESTOWN: Yes, I have a booklet titled "HOW TO HAVE A LOVELY WEDDING," but the best advice I can offer a bride is, "See your doctor (and preferably a gynecologist) for a physical checkup and authoritative answers to all your questions before marriage."

If birth control is desired, it should be planned BEFORE the wedding. This includes Catholic girls, too, as the rhythm method should be clearly understood to be successfully practiced. (Too many young wives, who had planned on working for a few years, discover to their horror that they got pregnant on their honeymoon.)

Many couples experience shock and grief on learning that they are unable to consummate the marriage due to some slight physical abnormality which could have been easily corrected by minor surgery.

Motherly advice from Aunt Liz or "tips" from one of the girls is fine, but before a bride keeps her date with the preacher, she should keep one with her doctor.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, for Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (24¢) envelope.

Women Seek Overturn Priesthood Ban

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
UPI Religion Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The national headquarters of the movement to revolutionize the Roman Catholic Church by forcing the church to ordain women priests does not look like a threat to the power and splendor of the Vatican.

Housed in one rear room in a former Spanish restaurant on a Washington street known more for drug traffic than for theological debate, the Women's Ordination Conference has already sent some shudders down the backs of Catholic officials and bureaucrats.

"We're going to win," said Ruth Fitzpatrick, the one paid employee of the national office. "There is no doubt about that."

"It is a movement that is gaining momentum," she said. "Right before a watershed breakthrough there is a lot of pressure, a lot of regrouping of forces."

"That means they are taking us seriously."

Indications of that attitude are no longer hard to find.

In recent weeks, Catholic feminists and representatives of the Women's Ordination Conference met with Archbishop Jean Jadot, the apostolic delegate to the United States.

"He just took notes while we told him our reaction to the Vatican document (issued in January forbidding women to be ordained to the priesthood)."

"He said to be prepared for new things, and that says to me, be prepared for the next Pope, first of all," Ms. Fitzpatrick said.

She said everyone in the movement seemed agreed that there would be little official movement on the question while ailing Pope Paul VI is pontiff but "it is well known that the next pope is going to have to be responsive to two issues — women and married priests."

In addition to the meeting with Jadot, the movement has met with Bishop Michael F. McLaughlin, chairman of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops' committee on women in society and the church, to seek their own representatives on the committee.

"We expect to have an answer from him by November when the bishops meet," she said.

The Vatican proclamation forbidding women priests, issued last January by the Sacred Congregation for the Doctrine of Faith, was widely assumed to have ended the debate over women priests just as it was beginning to get started, after receiving a great deal of impetus from the September, 1976, decision by the Episcopal Church to ordain women to the priesthood.

But Ms. Fitzpatrick said its effect had been just the opposite.

"It really started things moving," she said. "It started the theologians looking at the issue. It started canonists looking at it."

She noted that the Catholic situation is different from the Episcopal because Roman Catholic church law specifically forbids women to become priests.

"But there is also a canon that says a priest who loses his right thumb can't say mass unless you have a gold thumb made to replace the missing one," she said. "Just the right thumb; it's okay to lose your left one."

It is with something of that spirit that the 1,300-member Women's Ordination Conference approaches the Vatican declaration which rules out women priests in part because the priest is a "sign" of Christ when celebrating the Eucharist and therefore must be male as Christ was.

"Preposterous," is Ms. Fitzpatrick's word for the Vatican's analogy. "I think any theologian worth his or her salt now feels that women should be ordained."

The Women's Ordination Conference grew out of a national meeting of Catholic women in Detroit in 1975.

Ms. Fitzpatrick said that the Conference, organized into regional sections and local chapters, works on a variety of levels.

"We're spending a lot of time working with the bishops," she said. "Some of them are very sympathetic. In fact, there are some bishops that are very encouraging, especially the ones that are being ordained now."

In addition, the Conference is seeking to identify women who are interested in being ordained.

"A lot of women are writing about funding for seminaries," she said. "The job now is building relationships. We've had very, very low visibility in the past."

Among the Conference's most successful projects has been its "funny money" program in which it has distributed "equal justice" play money for feminists and their supporters to put in collection plates in place of contributions at parishes where the priest or others discriminate against women.

"The response has been great," she said.

"In fact, I got one letter from a priest who wrote 'Dear Shrs.'" she laughed. "I sent him a membership form, the information packet and a membership form for Priests for Equality."

"I think we're in for another surge of activity on the issue," she said. "I think there is a real mood among the people."

She admitted that there was a great deal of deep seated opposition in a wide segment of the church to women priests. "But I also find a lot more support from people who think it's just a waste of time, a waste of energy, who say it's a stupid question, of course there should be women priests."

"I think the resistance increases the closer you get to the Sistine Chapel," she said.

"The question I get most of all, however, is 'who wants priests in the priesthood that we have now ... we don't like the priesthood, the clericalism, the triumphalism and that legalism that exists now.'"

"And I have to answer that we're not working for that, that we're working for a concept of renewed ministry, renewed priesthood."

"When we say renewed we think of going back to the priesthood that existed in the Patristic (early church) times. In Patristic times the community raised up their own priests, called them forth from their ministry. They were frequently married and there were married women who brought their families along. They were part of the community, they were not an elite caste and they especially identified with the poor and oppressed."

Her Mountaintop A Bastion Against Stripmining

By JILL LAWRENCE
KERMIT, W.Va. (UPI) — Edwina Pepper's influence extends far beyond a crude but comfortable stone and wood home atop Big Laurel Mountain — five miles, one hour and innumerable potholes from the nearest highway.

Assisted by her twin grandnephews, John and Michael Fanning, the 83-year-old woman has mobilized her mountain community against strip mining, while developing a unique community of homesteaders and artisans on her family's 300-acre land trust.

Mrs. Pepper has been instrumental in forming two groups: the 25-family Big Laurel Citizens Association and the eight-household community located on her 300-acre land trust.

"This group of people here has finally decided we can do something together. We're fighting in our own little corner," said Mrs. Pepper, who tends to philosophize while leaving specifics to the Fanning brothers.

"We're in the middle of massive coal development," explained Michael, a photographer. "Roughly 45,000 acres have been taken for coal development, primarily for deep mining, but we're not certain how much stripping."

"We're just a little island in the middle of a giant corporate land mass that's going to be exploited to the fullest," added his brother, John.

The two plan to present their case to the West Virginia Natural Resources Department, complete with photographs and text.

The Fannings' argument notes stripping would endanger many homes and threaten the Marrowbone Creek watershed on Big Laurel.

In addition, the Fannings argue, stripping would destroy the aesthetic appeal of the area, which adjoins Laurel Lake, a public hunting ground. Mrs. Pepper contends that, minus several hundred potholes, the road up Marrowbone Creek could be "the Skyline Drive of West Virginia."

"We would rather have tourists than have our mountains destroyed," Michael summed up.

Ralph Nader, writing in Ladies Home Journal, has called Mrs. Pepper "an unsung heroine." The family's activities have also been publicized in National Geographic, Atlantic Monthly and the Washington Post.

But the camera-shy woman will barely accept any credit for the vision that has spawned a nationally recognized anti-strip mining campaign, a monthly journal called the Mountain Call, a free mountaintop school for Appalachian children and their parents, and — perhaps most important — a resurgence of pride among the West Virginians who dwell on the remote slopes of Big Laurel.

The daughter of a Logan, W.Va., lawyer and politician, Mrs. Pepper has lived in Cincinnati, Oklahoma, New York, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Chicago and California as well as several cities in West Virginia. Her husband died during the 1930s, and she moved back to her native state during World War II.

"I really wanted to write my father's life," she said. "It was something to distract me. I had one son in the Pacific and one son in the Atlantic and they were both going through hell."

She never wrote the book, but she did find The Knob — the patchwork, ever-expanding home that has grown to include a library, newsroom, darkroom and airy, half-finished kitchen.

"You know Thomas Wolfe's quotation, 'No one loves a home like a wanderer?'" she asked. "That's why I learned to love this home."

"Ed," as she is called by friends and relatives, receives yearly visits from her son Curtis, an author and former Newsweek correspondent who lives in Rome. Her other son, Jack, publisher of the California-based Desert Magazine, died two years ago.

publish the Mountain Call, subtitled "For the Mountains, the People, the Culture."

Brought together by the strip mining fight, the Big Laurel Citizens Association went on to build the Big Laurel School of Learning, located on Mrs. Pepper's land trust and funded with contributions from businesses, churches and the Public Welfare Foundation.

Sister Gretchen Shaffer, one of two teachers living above the school, said it has been valuable for children living on top of the mountain, who used to fall far behind from missing school in Kermit during the winter.

"I have met several times with the parents to talk about the philosophy of the school," she said. "They want the school to be very person-oriented and they want their children to be cognizant of the social issues around them."

Sister Gretchen cited strip mining as one of those issues, adding, "Unless people can understand what's happening to them, they have no control over it."

The school, which is open to adults as well as its 15 students, offers academic subjects and crafts taught by local artisans, she said, with John scheduled to teach yoga and Michael, photography.

Mrs. Pepper, who originated the idea for the school, now envisions a mountaintop village complete with a store, a woodshop, a print shop and other crafts outlets.

She is also fostering a community — within-a-community — on her own land, which she advertises freely in the Mountain Call. Several households have taken up her offer for one or two acres and a 199-year lease.

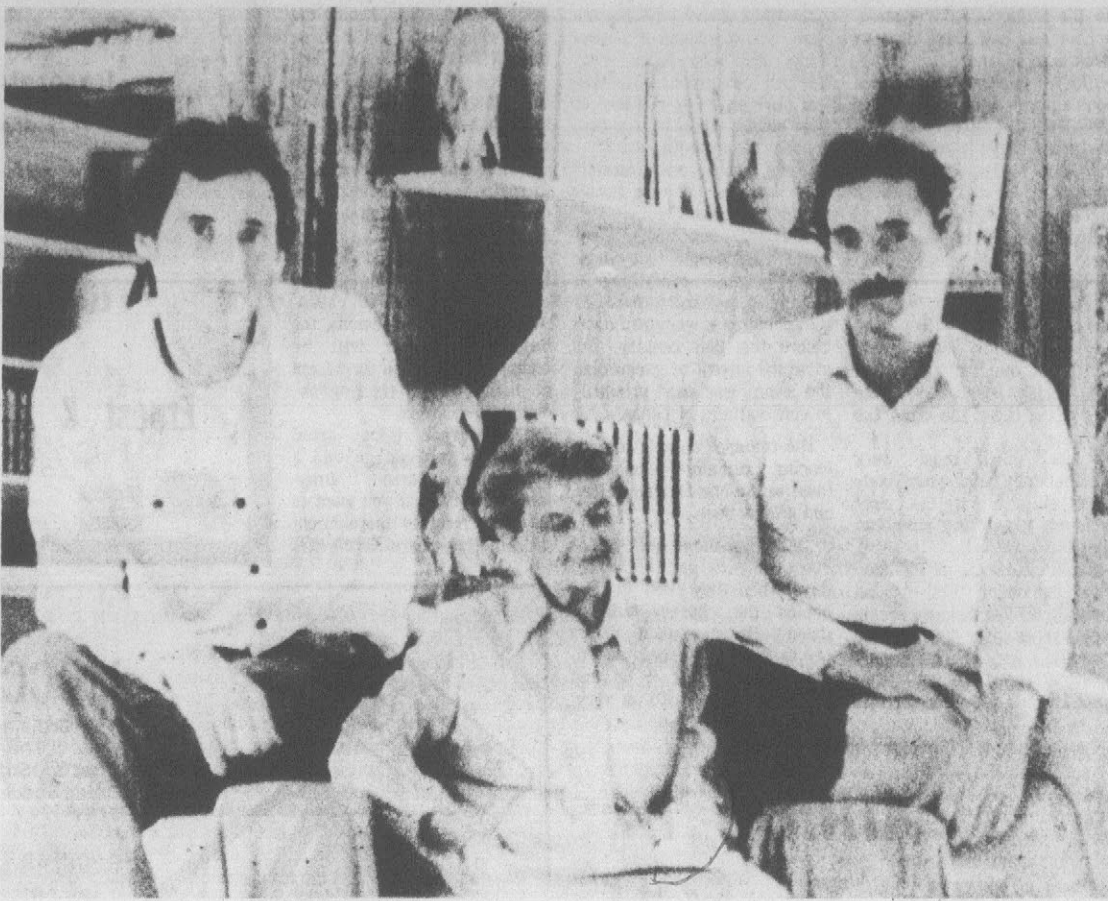

Scorning any suggestion the enterprise resembles a collective, Mrs. Pepper said her community "is not to be confused with communism in any way, shape or form."

Michael called the effort "cooperative," while John noted the eight households on his great-aunt's land are autonomous.

"Everyone helps each other," was Mrs. Pepper's way of explaining it. "It gets to be a euphoria, almost — everyone's so happy that things are moving forward."

developing a community of homesteaders and artisans on her family's 300-acre land trust. (UPI Photo)

If You Feel Aggressive, Take Sword To Gym

NEW YORK (UPI) — "If you're slightly aggressive, instead of going home and smashing your lovely wife, pick up a sword, go down to a gym and get all those terrible feelings out by having a go at an opponent."

That's the advice of Peter Brayham, British professional fencing instructor, whose pupils include Richard Chamberlain, actress Joan Collins and rock-guitarist Roger Daltrey.

"At the end of a fencing session, you'll feel good, you'll feel keen, and you can go home and give her a big kiss instead of hitting her over the head," Brayham said.

Brayham, a robust "cockney kid" from Wimbledon, has been fencing since he was 15, and he's in love with the sport.

"Everybody should try it," he said. "You'll never see ladies with fat bottoms in fencing."

Over 100,000 Americans enjoy fencing, a sport which originated 3000 years ago.

A 45-year-old Wall Street stockbroker, a retired kindergarten teacher, even 14-year old in a wheel chair compete in salles des armes (fencing rooms) at YMCA's, private fencing clubs or Olympic arenas across the country.

The beginning fencer spends about $58 for basic equipment — foil, jacket, mask and glove. With foil in hand, he or she may stand before a full length mirror at home and practice the basic "advance, retire or lunge."

Jeannette Reid, manager of "Santelli's," a fencing club in New York city, says most people fence for muscle tone. Fencing tones the thigh, calf and abdominal muscles and provides a thorough workout for the cardio-vascular system. A hour and half three times a week is all it takes.

"In fencing you use muscles you've hardly used before," Ms Reid said. "It's not like basketball where you're running but you do get a great deal of movement which firms and tones."

Brayham believes fencers have the strongest legs of any athlete.

"After a half hour warmup alone, you will feel the difference. It's a reflex sport. The legs move, the toes move, the heels, the calves, the thighs, the chest, the arms, the eyes."

"Your mind must work automatically and your body must click in at the right moment. It's a very strenuous sport."

Camille Lownds, of Philadelphia, author of "Foil Around and Stay Fit," began fencing eight years ago because she "wanted a very unusual sport."

"It's a sport of wit," said Miss Lownds, 32. "You have to have your wits about you because it's not a test of brute strength. It's a test of mind versus body."

Both Brayham and Miss Lownds agree that fencing is a good problem solver.

"When you're jogging what's going on through your mind?" Brayham asks. "How much the telephone bill is, have you paid the rent, does your kiddie need a new pair of shoes?"

"When you're fencing you can't think about anything but what you're doing. So your mind has been taken away from all your problems because you have only one problem on your hands — how to stop your opponent from hitting you."

In a "hectic, tense world," Miss Lownds believes people need a sport with "roots."

"Fencing has roots," she said. "And people today need roots because everything is moving so fast and furiously."

Fencing as a war form dates before the 15th century. But after the advent of gunpowder, the sword was used primarily to settle affairs of honor.

The romance associated with fencing remains. Opponents must salute one another before and after a bout.

"It's about the nearest you're ever going to get to the old days when they used to duel behind the church yard at dawn," Brayham said. "Most people when they see a sword, automatically pick it up and swish it around. It's a very, very cultured sport. But I'm a cockney kid and to bust into it, I must have upset a lot of people."

Brayham compares the skill and strategy of the sport to "a game of chess without check-mate."

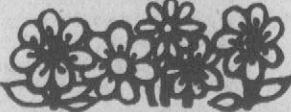

"You have to learn so many moves that you're prepared," Brayham said. "When you make an attack to win a point, you have to have maybe five, six, seven, eight, nine moves to get your point over, hoping the other guy doesn't get it first. It's like Russian roulette."

"When you watch two fencers that fence, it's probably one of the most beautiful things you can ever see. In three seconds, you may see 21, 22 moves. But to really see what's happening you'd have to put it on a 4 to 1 high speed camera."

Reid suggests that anyone interested in fencing should contact a local club or YMCA. After taking a few lessons, the beginning fencer will be equipped to work on their form at home before entering the competitive arena.

"The great thing about fencing is you can go into a gymnasium yourself," Brayham said, "and if you want to do some freestyle there might be somebody there 55-60 years old or somebody 15 and if they play your sport. It's that want to fence with you, you can simple."

Bear Island, Site Of Hammond's Beach State Park

An Island That Is Truly A Tar Heel Variety Vacationland

Idyllic is the best word to summarize the appeal of Hammond's Beach State Park near Swansboro. An unspoiled garden of seashore North Carolina, the park occupies Bear Island, a three and one-half mile long island that the natives refer to as "one of the barriers."

Bear Island, which is synonymous with Hammond's Beach State Park, contains 890 acres and averages one-half mile in width.

Only a two hour plus distance from Greenville via the shortest route, Hammond's Beach State Park offers a visitor all the attractions to be found on Bogue Island or the Outer Banks without the distraction of traffic or commercial establishments.

In fact, the only motorized vehicles permitted on the island are a couple of Park Ranger's jeeps used by these men in the performance of their duties. So far as buildings are concerned, there's a mere handful — the open-to-the-air roofed rest point at the ferry landing site; a modernistic bathhouse building; and a couple of Park Ranger buildings.

Access to Bear Island is by private boat or by a 36-passenger pontoon ferry with wooden benches and a protective canopy. The 20 minute zig-zag ferry ride is an adventure in itself. The craft travels through creeks and narrow passages of water between natural man-made dredged islands and extensive beds of emerald-gold marsh grasses.

On most runs, ferry passengers will see a number of fishing or pleasure boats cruising the water or anchored for fishing. Regal white herons, and occasionally a less common blue heron, populate the area. They seem nonchalant about the noise of passing boats as they stand like feathered sentinels in shallow waters of marshes or along island shores.

One of the most interesting aspects of Bear Island is that in a relatively small area it encompasses all the features most characteristic of North Carolina's shifting, fragile coastline.

High, sweeping, wind-rippled sand dunes are sensuously shaped and re-shaped by the breezes. One visitor noted "it amazes me that everything here seems to occur in a circular pattern." This is true.

Small, saucer shaped inland valleys, moist with barely concealed water, nourish dense growths of myrtle with their rounded crowns covering multi-branched fan-shaped trunks. Willow grasses, swayed by the wind, lean over to make distinctive circles in the sand. Numerous species of sand plants grow in circular forms radiating from a main stem. Insects and small birds leave trails of footprints like ribbons of colorless embroidery.

In several scattered areas, vast quantities of sand and wind polished clam shells and especially scallop shells — in whites, creams, corals, yellows, and a few in blacks — have accumulated far from the water's edge. At the eastern end of the island, a sizeable stand of pines and live oaks struggle against

Brief History

Dr. William Sharp, a brain surgeon who lived in New York, was at one time owner of Bear Island. He was a man noted for his love of the coastal wilderness of North Carolina. Dr. Sharp gave the island to the N.C. Teacher's Association, who in turn initiated action to give the land to the state. The island was established as a state park in 1961.

the encroachment of shifting sand. Here, wild grapes, morning glories, and briar vines cling to the protection and anchorage afforded by the trees.

In other places trees have lost the battle of survival against the forces of sand and have toppled and died. In time, the major root system and the heart of the dead trunks have been transformed to magnificent silvered specimens of driftwood.

From vantage points atop the tall dunes, superb vistas unfold. Landward, a network of blue water passages interlace the numerous circlelets of vivid marsh grasses. Islands in the distance are dark with trees. Farther away, individual structures and settlements appear as miniatures dotted along the mainland shore. And far to the east, a graceful curve of concrete bridge arches over water to Bogue Island.

Seaward, the view is a typical one of Atlantic waves ceaselessly rolling in, cresting in foam lace before washing the wide ribbon of golden beach sand.

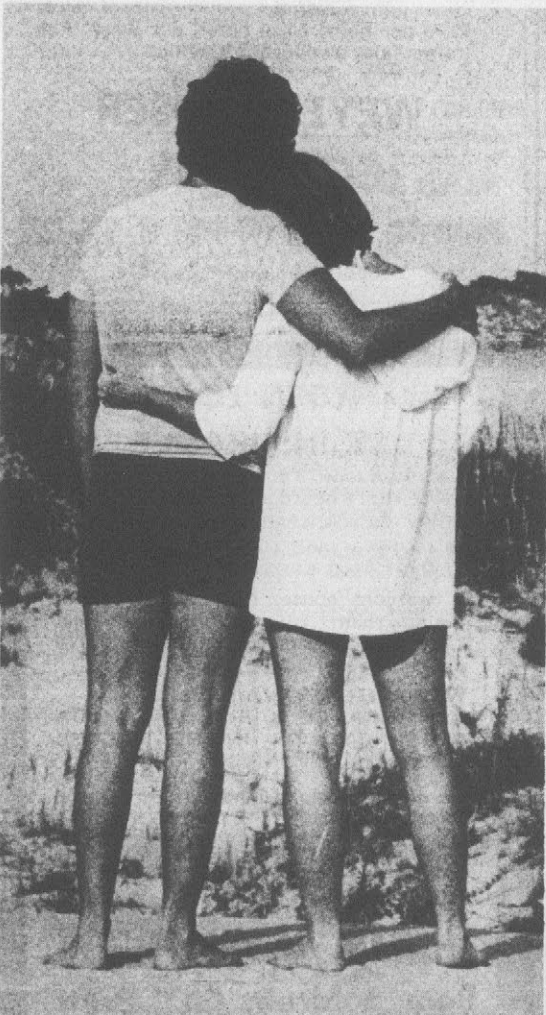

The beach at Hammond's Beach State Park is never overcrowded, even on peak summer days. Strolling, sunbathing, swimming, and surf-fishing are all popular with visitors.

Hammond's Beach State Park will not be everybody's ideal place to spend a few hours or a couple of days. But for those oriented to being on their own in an uncrowded, unspoiled setting of sand, sea and solitude, the park will fulfill their every expectation.

...How To Get There...

From Greenville, take N.C. 43 to beyond Vanceboro to the juncture with U.S. 17 south. Continue on 17 through New Bern to Maysville and one mile past Maysville to Belgrade.

At Belgrade, turn left on the rural paved road. A road sign at this point reads "Swansboro 16" miles. This road joins N.C. 24 three miles west of Swansboro.

At N.C. 24, turn left, travel east toward Swansboro for about one and one-half miles. A roadside sign indicates the turn-off road to Hammond's Beach State Park. Turn right and proceed to the ferry parking area, a distance of two miles. The total distance of this route is 87 miles.

An alternate route is the same as that above, except at Maysville turn left at the traffic light on N.C. 58. Continue to the traffic light at the point where N.C. 24 intersects N.C. 58, just before the bridge to Bogue Island.

Claude Crews, Superintendent of Hammond's Beach State Park, has provided details on facilities and park regulations.

The ferry operates on Saturdays and Sundays only in September (and on into October depending on the weather). It departs on the half-hour beginning at 9:30 a.m., and returns on the hour, with the last run at 6 p.m.

Camping is by permit only. Fee is $1 for a 24 hour period for the first four persons and 25 cents for each additional person. The park's mainland boat ramp and vehicle parking space is available to campers, but not to fishermen and pleasure boats.

Visitors are permitted to gather shells, but cannot take plants or driftwood from the island. Lifeguards for the swimming area are not provided past Labor Day. Pets are not permitted.

Visitors planning to take the ferry during October weekends are advised to first call (Phone 326-4881) to assure the ferry will be in operation.

Water for visitors and campers is available until freezing weather — after that time, visitors must take their own water supply.

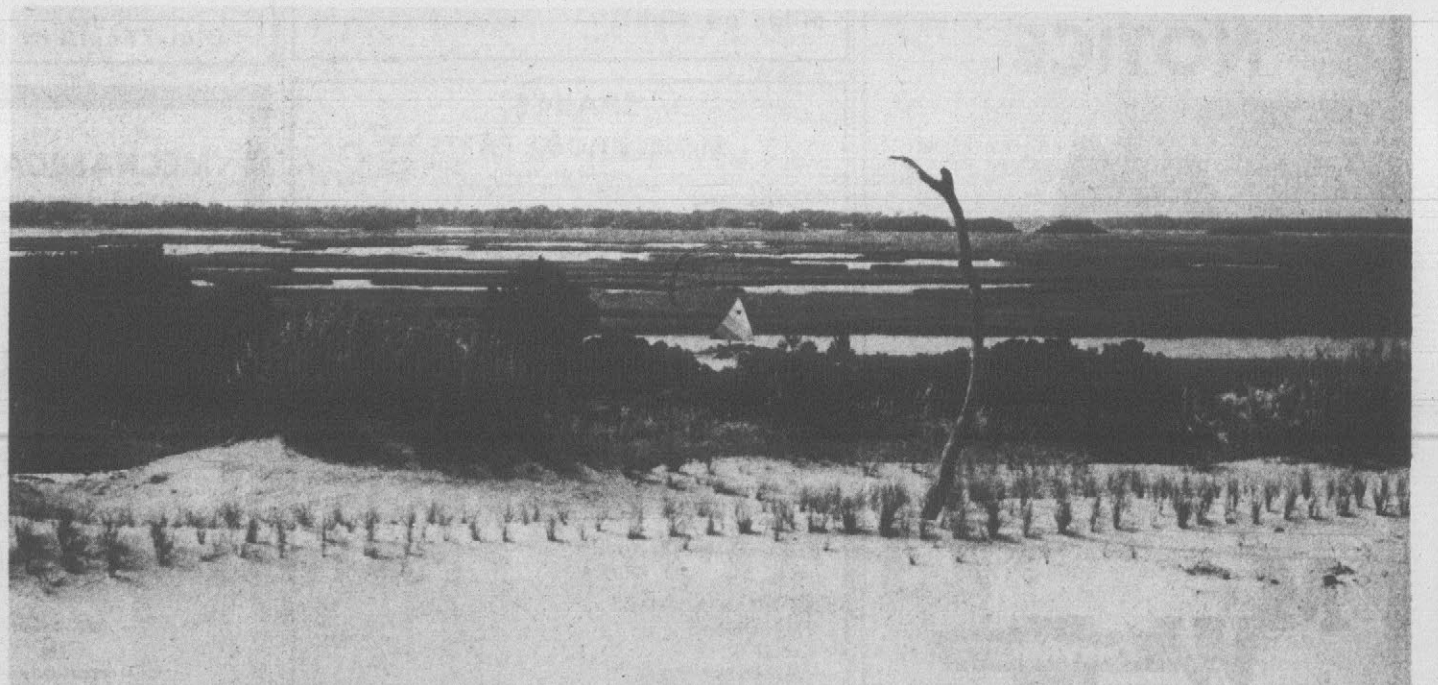

Although every consideration is given to the privacy of visitors and campers, park rangers on duty are authorized to correct any violations noted.

Contact hours for the superintendent's office are 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Persons interested in campsites on islands adjacent to the park are to contact the office of the Corps of Engineers, Wilmington for rates and details.

If You Now Rent . . .

Do you feel out of place in that rented house or apartment? Nice enough place to live but just doesn't feel like "home" — right?

Well, you may be closer to home ownership than you think. Home Savings is out to put a lot of people in their place. We've got the mortgage money right here at Home to finance your new place in life. Why wait?

Don't get unnecessarily caught up in the "delaying game." Right now may be the best time for you to buy.

Housing and land costs will continue to rise. So waiting until you can "afford" to buy can be false reasoning for putting off your goal of home ownership.

It never hurts to ask . . .

If you're a little apprehensive — try this: Pick a home on today's market that is the house you want or one that is comparable in size and style. Come by Home Savings and ask any one of our loan counselors to do a preliminary "work-up" on the costs involved, estimate monthly payments and educate you as to the various requirements.

We'll be happy to take the time and work with you. Knowledge of the process can eliminate any apprehension you may have. You'll probably find that you're ready to be in your place. Home Savings is certainly ready to put you there.

Italian Sculptors Shunt Marble Heritage To Side

By NORRIS WILLATT
UPI-Financial Times
PIETRASANTA, Italy (UPI) — Here in the foothills of the Apuan Alps, where Michelangelo came seeking marble for such masterpieces as "David" and "Pietà," his modern counterparts are in short supply.

Master sculptors of the future, if there are any, seem more likely to emerge from the Third World.

Pietrasanta ("holy stone") is one of a number of communities in the shadow of the marble quarries of Tuscany where the art of sculpture still survives. But of some 50 master craftsmen in the community, most are in their fifties and sixties.

Few young Italians are coming forward to serve an apprenticeship of up to 15 years in a craft which they associate more with dirtying their hands than with creating works of art. Their place is partially being taken by aspirants from Britain, the United States, Germany, France, Asia, Africa and Latin America.

The sad spectacle of the Italians turning their backs on an incomparable heritage has been graphically conveyed by a report from the country's only school for would-be sculptors in marble, at nearby Carrara, the center of quarrying.

Carrara today is more associated with supplying marble in bulk for facades of buildings, flooring, stairways and other architectural uses. The sculpturing of statuary survives more in smaller adjacent communities. But, as the capital of the industry, Carrara is the site of its only technical institute.

Today most students attending this State Professional Institute for the Marble Industry — up to 95 per cent of them at times — are from abroad. If foreigners did not continue to enroll the state would have closed down the school long ago.

Some 40 students from abroad are this year studying the theory and practice of carving in marble, and 24 of them are from developing countries, aided by grants from the Italian Foreign Ministry. They come, for example, from Argentina, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, India, Afghanistan, Jordan, Zambia, and Malagasy. Instruction is given regularly in English, French, Spanish and German.

The number of Italian students has been declining for years. Few young Italians are willing to serve the long apprenticeship necessary to become a master sculptor, admits Angelo Millani, secretary of the Consortium of Artisans of Pietrasanta.

He says that in addition to the 50 master sculptors, the community of Pietrasanta also provides employment for some 1,800 artisans, many working on the sculpting of onyx (equally plentiful in the region), wood carving, casting in bronze or designing with mosaics. But the most important activity is still the production of statuary for churches, cemeteries, museums, public buildings and private collections.

To the visitor it is somewhat disillusioning to discover that the master sculptors and their assistants make a living producing copies of the great masterpieces of the past, on something of an assembly line basis.

In the showroom of the Consortium of Artisans you see on display reproductions of the Michelangelo creations in various sizes, alongside copies of other famous works, such as the Venuses di Medici, Di Milo, of Giambologna and Canova. There are many replicas of holy families, the three graces, the madonna and child, and such like.

From a price list that resembles any from a supermarket, you can purchase a David two feet high for about $650. One three times as tall sells for about $3,350. You can get one as big as the original, such as the copy at Forest Lawn Cemetery in Los Angeles, for $35,000.

These are wholesale prices, which apply only if you come to Pietrasanta to close a deal for, say, a couple of dozen half-size Davids. The trade attracts dealers from all over the world, in particular from the United States. More recently, they have been joined by merchants from the Middle East and Japan.

If you seek to save dollars by buying in person, you will have to add freight and insurance. These are costly, given the bulk and weight of marble, but you should come out ahead, for retail prices represent a markup of 100 to 200 per cent.

But however you come by your personal David or Moses, don't imagine it is the work of a single craftsman, laboring lovingly on the form and surfaces for many months. At Pietrasanta, these imitation masterpieces are mainly fabricated in sections, and different artisans tackle the garments, floral decoration, and so on. The master sculptor usually adds the finishing touches before handing over the statue to the polisher, another specialist.

NINE-MONTH-OLD COOLS HIS HEELS — Nine-month-old Scott Philips was quite content to cool his heels at a pool in Montreal, Canada last month when the temperature hit 104 degrees. Scott's grandmother, Jean Ethier, who was baby-sitting, found that the boy was happy as long as he had a bottle and a granny within easy reach. (AP Laserphoto)

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

When my 4-year-old child gets sick it's impossible to get any medicine down her. We try bribing her, we even pretend to taste it first ourselves. When our patience is exhausted we become angry. This doesn't help either. Do you have any magic formula? — Mrs. L.R., Wis.

Dear Mrs. R.: As long as parents continue elaborate techniques of persuasion, children will know that they're in command of this situation. Games, promises, pleas, threats, cajoling and tricks may work for one illness, but it only serves to give command to the child.

In my experience, parents who have been most successful are those who have begun to set the rules of medicine-taking long before their children are 4. First, the child must understand that medicine is not punishment. It's designed to make her feel better. Then, in a gentle but firm way, the child is given NO CHOICE. The medicine must be taken. It's amazing how early in life children can get this message from parents and how readily they learn that resistance is futile so they might just as well take the medicine and get it over with.

Once this pattern of understanding is established, there is no need for creating ingenious methods of persuasion. Both children and parents are beneficiaries of this approach.

It may not be too late for you to try it!

I had my appendix removed. All went well, except that I had a sudden collapse of the lung. Does this mean I will always be prone to lung conditions? — Miss D.J., Calif.

Dear Miss J.: The collapse of an entire lung, or part of a lung, is known as "atelectasis." It is a comparatively rare complication of surgery. It occurs far less frequently now than formerly because of the highly refined techniques used in anesthesia. Usually it is caused by a plug of mucus that "plugs up" the bronchial tube and interferes with the free flow of oxygen into the lungs.

The condition is easily recognized and, by a number of means, the bronchus is cleared and normal breathing is restored.

There is no reason for you to believe that this experience should leave your lungs in a weakened state and predispose you to permanent lung trouble.

Championship Finals To Give Russians Severe Chess Pains

By GERALD NADLER
NEW YORK (UPI) — This autumn Viktor Korchnoi will sit across a chess board from Boris Spassky to determine who will play Anatoly Karpov for the world championship, but all those Russian names carry little cheer for the Kremlin.

Korchnoi is a defector living in the Netherlands. Spassky is on a year's leave of absence from the Soviet Union living in Paris with his French wife.

Karpov, though living in Russia, has been derided by some as a champion by default. Bobby Fischer, who won the title from Spassky in 1972, refused to defend it on anybody's terms but his own and Karpov was automatically named champion.

In the Soviet parlance that portrays every competition with the rest of the world — from space shots to potato digging — as a battle, things look bleak on the chess front.

And with chess a national pastime in the Soviet Union, the candidates' final between such black sheep as Korchnoi and Spassky cannot be fobbed off when they meet in October or November. A date is still to be set.

"They can get away with ignoring the performances of (ballet defector Rudolf) Nureyev but they have to publish the results of the candidates' matches," said a member of the Manhattan Chess Club.

Probably the worst scenario for the Kremlin would be for defector Korchnoi, scorned by the Soviet newspapers as a "petulant" excuse-maker, to crush Spassky and then destroy Karpov.

Only slightly more palatable would be non-resident Spassky's toppling the defector Korchnoi and then smashing the Kremlin's "shining white knight" Karpov.

Spassky, whose loss to Fischer ended a 26-year Russian stranglehold on the title, was allowed to skulk off to Paris on condition he not enter the candidates series.

But when Fischer skulked in Pasadena, Calif., Spassky took his place and entered the contest, "breaking" his word with his Kremlin masters.

After two years of competition and hundreds of matches, Spassky and Korchnoi are left to play in an ironic pas de deux — with every move studied by chess-crazed Russians.

Soviet chessmen live in a goldfish bowl.

At the Manhattan Chess club recently, Korchnoi lifted the veil on the world of the privileged Soviet chess player and the pressures and prejudices from the top.

"I ran away because I could not continue my chess career," said Korchnoi who defected after a match in the Netherlands in July, 1976. "I was not a dissident. I was a very privileged person."

Korchnoi blamed his loss to Karpov for what turned out to be the championship in 1974, when Fischer wouldn't defend his title, on the Soviet preference for the younger Karpov, who is "100 per cent Russian," a "member of the working class" and "gives good interviews."

Soviet chess champions have "unfortunately" not been "pure" Russian, Korchnoi jibed.

"Spassky is part gypsy, and I am a percentage Jewish and from Leningrad. Karpov was born in the Urals," Korchnoi said. Spassky, too, is from Leningrad, thought of as too cosmopolitan by some Soviets.

Korchnoi charged that Karpov had the best trainers and they were sent to spy on him.

Korchnoi said he even received an anonymous letter saying it might be best for him not to win (against Karpov) and that they would "deal with me."

Everything in the press was about Karpov, so "I couldn't listen to the radio or read the papers," Korchnoi said.

After his defeat, Korchnoi gave an interview to the Yugoslav press saying Karpov was not as strong as Fischer.

Korchnoi, who is trying to arrange a match with Fischer as a tune-up for playing Spassky, is even more adamant in his opinion today. "Karpov is not a bad player," he said. "But Fischer is a genius."

The results of a match between the two? "Karpov would be crushed after 15 games."

Exercise Is For Firemen

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A planned program of diversified exercises geared to improve strength, endurance, and flexibility has been made available to the nation's firefighters.

It was started after the international Association of Fire Chiefs, alarmed over the casualty rate among the nation's 186,000 firefighters, which it attributed in part to poor conditioning, asked the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports for help.

Working with the Travelers Insurance Companies, the Council came up with a conditioning program aimed at the particular fitness needs of firefighters.

Since the program's inception, materials, including a free-loan motivational film, and discussion, leader's guide and take-home exercise literature have been provided to more than 1,300 fire departments. Many of the departments have indicated plans to institute some kind of physical fitness program, according to Andrew L. Letendre, second vice president of The Travelers.

"One of the best services we can provide as a major life and health insurer is to focus national attention on maintaining good health through physical exercise," says Letendre, "rather than limiting our role to paying insurance claims for the results of poor physical condition."

Find Snakebite Is Rarely Fatal

SILVER SPRINGS, Fla. (UPI) — Although bites of poisonous snakes are common in the United States, very few prove fatal. Andy Koukoulis, Curator of the Reptile Institute at Florida's Silver Springs, estimates that each year nearly five thousand people are bitten by venomous snakes in this country, yet only about 25 persons a year die from snakebite, thanks to prompt first aid and medical treatment. The only states that are free from poisonous snakes are Hawaii, Alaska and Maine.

Joe Kennedy Faces Inner-Conflict In ABC-TV's Sunday Night Movie

Peter Strauss (c), who starred in ABC's "Rich Man, Poor Man — Books I and II," will star as Joseph Kennedy, Jr. in "Young Joe, The Forgotten Kennedy," "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," Sept. 18 (9-11 p.m.) on ABC-TV. Strauss is joined by a stellar cast including Barbara Parkins (l), and Stephen Elliott as Joe Kennedy, Sr., (r).

Few families in American history have generated as much news as the Kennedys of Hyanisport, Mass. Although they have faced innumerable tragedies, the family has produced a President of the United States and two United States Senators from the nine children of Joseph and Rose Kennedy. One Kennedy, however, has remained nearly forgotten. Yet, it was he who was to have begun the family political dynasty. He was Joseph Kennedy, Jr.

The life of the eldest Kennedy brother is explored in "Young Joe, The Forgotten Kennedy," a drama airing as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie" Sept. 18, 9 to 11 p.m. on ABC-TV. Peter Strauss, who won acclaim for his role as Rudy Jordache in "Rich Man, Poor Man, Books I and II," stars in the title role. He found, though, that he knew very little about the man he was to portray.

"Like most people, all I knew about Joe Kennedy, Jr. was that he had died during World II," Strauss said. "Yet, as the oldest son it was he, not Jack, who the family groomed to be President. It put a lot of pressure on him (Joe) to come back from the war with a brilliant military record. It became almost an obsession with him."

Military achievement, though, eluded Joseph Kennedy, Jr. He was assigned routine patrols of the English Channel and, despite being an excellent flyer, never saw combat. He also was faced with the fact that his brother, John F. Kennedy, had become a war hero.

"Joe had a hard time living with the stories about Jack's heroism in the PT-109 incident," Strauss indicated. "It made him more determined than ever to do something heroic before the war ended. But, about that time, he faced a major crisis in his life. He fell in love with a Englishwoman who violated three of the family rules — she was older, married and, worst of all, a Protestant.

"As the war was drawing to a close, Joe had a chance to volunteer for a dangerous mission which, if it worked, would make him a hero. Suddenly, he was forced to choose between the woman he loved and that one chance at immortality. The family pressures were too great, and he chose the mission. The rest is history."

Strauss gained his insight into the character by researching what little material has been written about Joe. The most help came from a private family journal about him written by John F. Kennedy.

"I think, this is the first time that a movie will really humanize a Kennedy. Joe had all that family charm and charisma, but he was complex and often lonely."

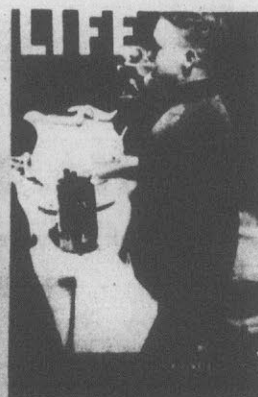

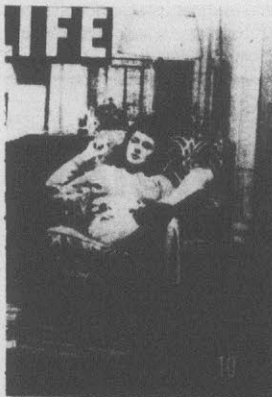

Johnny Carson Hosts World War II Special

During World War II, a young Navy ensign had no plans beyond entering the University of Nebraska after his discharge. He didn't know it at the time, but he was destined to become one of the nation's biggest stars, and also the host of a program about the war. The star, is Johnny Carson, and the program is "Life Goes to War," to be colorcast on NBC-TV's "The Big Event" Sunday, Sept. 18, 9 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV.

The special is a revealing look at Hollywood and the rest of the American home front during World War II, and actual film footage taken when Carson was in the Navy will be shown. The late-night TV star, who has not hosted a special since the 1974 Emmy Awards telecast, is now in his 15th year as host of "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson."

The special will recall the days of rationing, Rosie the Riveter, pictures of salutes for Gen. Douglas MacArthur, blackouts, Clark Gable in uniform, swoons for Frank Sinatra, and Bob Hope everywhere.

LIFE ON THE HOMEFRONT IN WORLD WAR II — What were people doing on the homefront during WW II? These covers of Life magazine tell part of the story — (clockwise from upper left) a lonely wife, a West Point cadet, a Red Cross girl and an auto worker — and are included in "Life Goes to War," to be colorcast on "The Big Event," Sunday, Sept. 18 (9-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Ed Asner Returns As 'Lou Grant'

Emmy Award-winner Edward Asner stars as Lou Grant, the gruff but warm-hearted ex-television news director who returns to newspaper work, in "Lou Grant," a new dramatic series with comedic overtones, premiering Tuesday, Sept. 20, 10 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV.

After being fired as news director of a Minneapolis television station, Grant heads for Los Angeles to find a new job. He looks up an old friend, Charlie Hume (Mason Adams), managing editor of the Los Angeles Tribune, who suggests Grant take over the city desk on the newspaper. Grant accepts the challenge but is shocked to learn the final decision rests with the publisher, Margaret Pyncheon (Nancy Marchand).

Mrs. Pyncheon, a widow, is tough and stubborn like Grant, and they clash at their first meeting. Nonetheless, she hired him. Grant wastes no time tackling his job in hopes of making the faltering Tribune the number-one paper in Los Angeles.

Joe Rossi (Robert Walden), a young reporter has discovered a secret police probe investigating alleged sexual misconduct between police officers and a group of high school girls. Suspecting that George Driscoll (Peter Hobbs), a middle-aged police-beat reporter, has been withholding information to protect friends, Rossi asks Grant for the assignment.

Edward Asner won three Emmys for his portrayal of Lou Grant on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," for the most outstanding performance by an actor in a supporting role in comedy. He also won an Emmy for his role in the television drama, "Rich Man, Poor Man." He was the only individual double-award winner at "The Television Critics Circle Awards," receiving one for his supporting performance in

"Roots," and another for achievement in comedy, for his work on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show."

Adams is a former radio actor who starred for nearly 20 years in the serial, "Pepper Young's Family." He is best known to TV audiences for his continuing role of Dr. Frank Prescott on "Another World."

London's Novel Airs

Jack London's classic story of two men driven by gold fever to battle the elements in the frozen Klondike is dramatized in "The Call of the Wild," to air as the "CBS Late Movie" Thursday, Sept. 22, at 11:30 p.m., on CBS-TV.

John Thornton and Francois team up and pool their money to buy a magnificent, powerfully built dog, Buck, to lead the team pulling their sleds hundreds of grueling miles across harsh, snow-covered country.

Along the way, Thornton and Francois clash and Buck fights a deadly battle with a rival dog.

The screenplay, by James Dickey and based on the book by London, was directed by Jerry Jameson and stars John Beck as Thornton and Bernard Freeson as Francois. It was filmed on location in the California High Sierra, Southern California and Wyoming.

'Today' Changes Format

Since the first of September, there's a new look, tempo and format for NBC News' "Today" program.

The new set, which frees host Tom Brokaw and featured panelists Jane Pauley and Gene Shalit from an anchor desk, has been in evidence for the past two weeks, and other substantive changes will start Monday, Sept. 19. Correspondents Eric Burns, based in Chicago, and Jack Perkins, from Los Angeles, will have regular assignments on "Today." Their reports — plus live originations from other locations — will be telecast as events dictate — will broaden the scope of "Today."

Two regular five-times-a-week features, "What's Hot" and "Living," will also be added. "What's Hot" concerns little things that make up contemporary culture in America, and "Living" is a life-style feature concerned with the question of how people cope. Subjects to be dealt with include personal money management, physical fitness, psychological problems, raising children, home decorating, cooking and divorce.

A new regular feature on Mondays is "Washington on the Spot," in which government officials will be questioned by people-on-the-street.

Gene Shalit will also have an enlarged role in the new format. Every Tuesday and Thursday he is contributing one of his "Critic's Corner" pieces on films, books, plays or music.

Another new five-times-a-week segment features short pieces by program regulars: Brokaw on Monday, Pauley on Thursday, Shalit on Tuesday and Wednesday. NBC News correspondent Edwin Newman will contribute a piece on Friday.

TV Favorite Re-Runs

"Oh, Mr. Grant"

Esquire Magazine called her show, "the finest, funniest show on television." Time Magazine called the writing, acting and directing, "The best ever displayed in TV comedy." And millions of TV viewers in America made "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" their favorite.

Monday, September 19, "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" brings its honest, cheerful hilarity to TV viewers when it premieres at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 6 WECT.

Mary Tyler Moore stars as Mary Richards, a beautiful, independent woman in her mid-thirties who has just moved to Minneapolis to make a new start after a broken engagement. Mary lands a job in the newsroom of WJM-TV as an associate producer, where she meets Lou Grant, her boss, Murray Slaughter, the news writer, Ted Baxter, the anchorman, and the "Happy Homemaker," Sue Anne Nivens. In her attempt to make it in a man's world, Mary is also befriended by ex-New Yorker Rhoda Morgenstern, a window decorator, and Phyllis Lindstrom, the busybody owner of the building Mary lives in.

Miss Moore received Emmy Awards in 1973 and 1974 for Best Actress in Comedy as well as the Emmy for Actress of the Year in 1974. The People's Choice Award for Female TV Performer and Female Entertainer was given to the comedienne in 1974. She was also named Woman of the Year for 1975 by the Los Angeles Times and received the Silver Satellite Award from the National Chapter of American Women in Radio and TV.

The series, which ran on network television for seven years, quickly made Miss Moore and her supporting cast household names. That cast includes Edward Asner, Ted Knight, Valerie Harper, Cloris Leachman, and Gavin McLeod.

David Hartman Named UNICEF Day Chairman

David Hartman, host of ABC-TV's "Good Morning America," has been named 1977 Chairman of UNICEF Day. United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim officially bestowed the honor on Hartman during a brief ceremony at the UN recently.

UNICEF Day is observed by presidential proclamation on Oct. 31, when thousands of American children "trick or treat" on Halloween for monetary contributions for the United Nations Children's Fund. In past years, UNICEF Day has raised more than three million dollars annually, providing clean water, food, medical care, hospital and school supplies to underprivileged children in more than 100 foreign countries.

All-Star Cast Appears In TV Comedy Premiere

Paul Newman stars as the legendary Judge Roy Bean, in the comedic western directed by John Huston, "The Life and Times of Judge Roy Bean," which will have its world television premiere Sunday, Sept. 18, 9 to 11:25 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Ava Gardner, Anthony Perkins, Jacqueline Bisset, Ned Beatty, Stacy Keach, Tab Hunter and Roddy McDowall also appear in the film.

The Judge, "the law west of the Pecos," assumed his title after taking over the sleepy Texas town of Vinegaroon, hanging all of its outlaws (making him the only non-Mexican in the town) and confiscating their property for "court costs." His confidence as a lawmaker was based upon his intimate knowledge of the law, "having spent my life in its flagrant disregard."

But upholding the law was not the Judge's only activity — upholding the honor of the lovely actress Miss Lily Langtry (Miss Gardner) was the other. The Judge had never met Miss Langtry, and his blind adulation of her led him to install her picture over the newly renovated bar in the courthouse, and even to rename the town after her.

A giant, friendly grizzly bear is given to the Judge by an old mountain man (John Huston) and the grizzly becomes the Judge's third love — Miss Langtry, and his mistress. Marie Elena (Victoria Principal.) The bear, as affable as long as there's beer in his belly, becomes the town's official watch bear.

And so the Judge's wealth grows, as does his power. But there's a snake in the grass — Lawyer Gass (McDowall), who claims to have a deed entitling him to the Judge's domain. A slight skirmish with the watch bear convinces him that he made a mistake, but unfortunately, Gass is not convinced for good.

Twenty years pass. Oil has been found in Langtry, and Judge Bean left the town in disgrace two decades ago. Gass, now prosperous, is attempting to evict Rose Bean (Miss Bissett) from her father's property. But Rose is defending herself. On the evening of the showdown, an old man rides into town — it's the Judge coming to aid his daughter in a climatic gun battle.

Years later, when Miss Langtry visits the town named after her and is taken to the Judge Roy Bean Museum, she looks at the memorabilia — pictures of herself — and remarks, "He must have been some man."

Paul Newman stars as Judge Roy Bean, "the law west of the Pecos," in the comedic western, "The Life and Times of Judge Roy Bean," to be broadcast Sunday, Sept. 18, (9-11:25 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Fonda Hosts

"The Best of All in the Family," memorable highlights from the multi Emmy Award-winning comedy series now entering its eighth season on CBS-TV, will be rebroadcast as a special presentation hosted by Henry Fonda, Sunday, Sept. 18, 8 to 9 p.m., on CBS-TV.

The special program, which was originally presented on Dec. 21, 1974, in celebration of the series' 100th broadcast, will recapitulate many hilarious and representative moments that have occurred in the lives of Archie Bunker, his family and their friends during the history of the series, which is considered to be network television's most innovative comedy.

"Cut," yelled McEveety, spotting something that was not kosher in the condiments. But Gus kept hearing toward the camera. "Cut," repeated the director who suddenly realized that Gus had plans for a scene of his own.

long hours of shooting. As a four-footed place-kicker, he was always ready to put his backfield in motion at the snap of a football, if not the snap of a finger.

"Mules are smart animals," says head trainer Bobby Davenport. "They're only stubborn when they're abused. When they've had enough, they just quit."

Like a pro, Gus never quit. But once he did have enough.

During filming of a super-market scene when Gus is chased by mulenappers Tim Conway and Tom Bosley, his role called for the animal-actor to step on several plastic mustard and ketchup containers and squirt Bosley in the face.

Director Vincent McEveety wanted everything perfect and kept reshooting the scene. Gus co-operated through several short takes, but McEveety asked for more.

Disney Comes Up With Another First

While many people say that some of Hollywood's finest directors are jack-asses no studio ever employed the real thing until Walt Disney Productions inadvertently did so.

That's no bull. It's a mule, and he makes his directorial debut and plays the title role in "Gus," a football frolic about a Yugoslavian mule who kicks 100-yard field goals.

"Gus" kicks off the new season for "The Wonderful World of Disney," television's longest running prime time series. The 1976 feature film makes its TV premiere in a special two-hour presentation Sunday, Sept. 18, at 7 p.m., on NBC-TV. Joining Gus are human stars Edward Asner, Don Knotts, Gary Grimes, Tim Conway and Tom Bosley.

Despite tales that mules and directors are supposedly stubborn, temperamental creatures, Gus seldom complained during

The publisher of a magazine called "The Man Who Has Everything," is given a startling and unusual gift for his 40th birthday — a beautiful girl who turns his entire lifestyle upside down — in "The Girl Who Came Gift Wrapped," airing as the "CBS Late Movie" Monday, Sept. 19, at 11:30 p.m., on CBS-TV.

'The San Pedro Beach Bums' Encounter 'Charlie's Angels'

"The San Pedro Beach Bums," ABC-TV's new hour-long comedy featuring five colorful, likeable guys who find themselves involved in a variety of adventurous scrapes, will premiere on Monday, Sept. 19, 8 to 9 p.m. on ABC-TV.

Kate Jackson, Jaclyn Smith, and Cheryl Ladd, star of the popular series "Charlie's Angels," guest star and play themselves in the premiere episode, "Angels and the Bums." The beach bums enlist the help of the three beautiful television stars to save the annual Miss Harbor Beauty Contest, which is facing cancellation due to a lack of interest.

Also guest starring is Herb Edelman as the devious Mr. Schwann, who tried to fix the contest by bribing one of the judges, beach bum Buddy.

The 'bums' are five happy-go-lucky buddies who've gone to school together, buy "Challenger," a leaky tuna boat, which they're rehabilitating as both a place to live and a source of future income.

These carefree shipmates suffer from a group Don Quixote complex, and nothing is too difficult for them to attempt for a friend or what they consider a "worthy cause." Yet, regardless of the odds against their success, it's always "damn the torpedoes, full speed ahead" for this jolly crew of optimists as they embark on a series of buoyant comedy adventures.

Starring as the five beach bums are: Christopher Murney as the always-sure Buddy, self-proclaimed leader of the group;

John Mark Robinson as the shy and slightly nervous Dancer (so named because he can't sit still); Stuart Pankin as Stu, a compulsive eater who believes being heavy is beautiful; Darryl McCullough as the muscular, but very gentle Moose; and Chris De Rose as Boychick, the beach bums' answer to Clark Gable.

Also starring in "The San Pedro Beach Bums" are Louise Hoven as Louise, Susan Mullen as Suzi, Lisa Reeves as Marge, Nancy Morgan as Julie, and Christoff St. John as Ralphie.

'Little House'

In the town that created the Farrah Fawcett-Majors hairdo, creative hairdos that are quickly arranged are in constant demand. But sometimes things can get a bit hairy, even for an old pro like Allan (Whitey) Snyder, who was Marilyn Monroe's personal make-up man.

This happened when "Little House on the Prairie" decided to stray from the prairie and film a big ballroom scene for the "Times of Change" episode for Monday, Sept. 19, 8 to 9 p.m., on NBC-TV.

'M-A-S-H' Begins Sixth Season With Special One-Hour Premiere

The highly acclaimed
"M*A*S*H" series, which has earned a Peabody Award and numerous Emmys, begins its sixth season with a special one-hour premiere episode introducing the new character of Maj.
Charles Emerson Winchester, an aristocratic Bostonian, played by David Ogden Stiers, to be broadcast Tuesday, Sept. 20, 9 to 10 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Winchester becomes a reluctant member of the "M*A*S*H" company when his predecessor,

Maj. Frank Burns, still suffering from the trauma of his blighted romance with "Hot Lips," goes AWOL and receives a permanent transfer.

Alan Alda, again starring as the doggedly iconoclastic, humorous and medically dedicated surgeon, Hawkeye, and Mike Farrell, also starring as B.J. Hunnicutt, his partner in off-duty pranks and surgical skill, discover they've inherited a formidable verbal jousting rival in Winchester, whose conservative views soon clash with their own more liberal philosophies.

Also returning in their contin-ing roles are Harry Morgan as
Col. Sherman Potter, the 4077th commander with the wry wit, and Loretta Swit as nurse
Margaret (Hot Lips) Houlihan
Penobscott, who last season exchanged marriage vows with Regular Army Lt. Col. Donald

Penobscott.

Gary Burghoff continues as Colonel Potter's ostensibly innocent but all-knowing company clerk, Radar O'Reilly, as do Jamie Farr as the ever-persistent Corporal Klinger, still wearing feminine attire in pursuit of a psycho discharge, and William Christopher as Father
Mulcahy, the down-the-earth priest who lends a touch of sanity to the otherwise bizarre proceedings.

Andy Griffith Stars In Mystery

When a husband and wife are discovered dead, a small-town police chief begins an intensive investigation, including an attempt to verify sightings of the couple's reputedly deceased daughter, in "The Girl in the Empty Grave," a World Premiere mystery drama starring Andy Griffith, on "NBC Movie of the Week" Tuesday,
Sept. 20, 9 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV.

Griffith, who portrayed a rural sheriff in the TV comedy series,
"The Andy Griffith Show," stars as Abel Marsh, who heads the police department in the small community of Jasper Lake, Calif. Just 24 hours after both he and a deputy see a young woman believed to have died several months earlier, Marsh visits the parents' home and finds them dead.

Although his department is underpaid and under-equipped,
Abel launches an investigation to learn the cause of the parents' mysterious deaths. The case is particularly puzzling as the chief attempts to determine whether there is a connection between the deaths of the heavy-drinking parents and the fact that their daughter, whose loss they have been mourning, may not be dead at all.

When Abel learns that a wife has been executed by the couple in which their daughter is the sole heir, a conspiracy seems more and more apparent.

"The Girl in the Empty Grave" was filmed on location in Big Bear, Calif.

Interracial Love Affair Draws Hostility In Detective Movie

Elizabeth Montgomery (l) and O.J. Simpson star as detectives who establish a close professional and personal relationship, much to the dismay of his wife (Rosalind Cash, r) in "A Killing Affair," a made-for-television film, on "The Wednesday Night Movie," Sept. 21 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Elizabeth Montgomery and O.J. Simpson star as two detectives caught up in an interracial love affair while working on a series of vicious crimes, in "A Killing Affair," which will have its world television premiere on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movies," Sept. 21, 9 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Miss Montgomery plays Viki Eaton, a competent homicide detective who is known as a cop-hater because she refuses to date her fellow officers. But when Woodrow York, played by O.J. Simpson, a maverick policeman with several shooting incidents on his record, is temporarily assigned as her partner, that all changes as they strike immediate sparks.

The couple's relationship draws the hostility of other detectives and strains York's shaky marriage to the breaking point. They feel even more pressure when they hunt for a killer and York rebels against Viki and the restrictions of police procedure.

Guest stars in "A Killing Affair" include Rosalind Cash as Beverly York, who is unhappy with her husband's job; John Mahon as Detective Shoup; Priscilla Pointer as Judge Cudahy; and Allan Rich as Capt. Bullis. Dean Stockwell makes a special appearance as Switzer, a shrewd villain, and Dolph Sweet plays veteran detective Lt. Scotty Neilson.

Miss Montgomery has starred in a succession of highly successful television movies, including "A Case of Rape," "The Legend of Lizzie Borden," and "Dark Victory." She was the star of the television series "Bewitched" for eight years.

Fonda Turns Criminal

A dedicated probation officer, forced into premature retirement, recruits three of his parolees to heist and fence several million dollars in gold ingots from a heavily armed convoy, in "The Alpha Capet," an original motion picture airing as the "CBS Late Movie" Tuesday, Sept. 20, at 12:30 a.m., on CBS-TV.

The suspense-adventure drama stars Henry Fonda, Leonard Nimoy, James McEachin, Elena Verdugo, and John Marley, Larry Hagman, special guest star, portrays Tudor.

Mark Forbes (Fonda) learns from a dying parolee, trapped in a police warehouse while stealing guns, that he and three others were planning to heist a $30 million shipment of gold bullion, scheduled to be moved 12 blocks away to a new depository.

Feeling rejected by the establishment due to his early retirement, Forbes joins forces with Tudor, the best powderman in the business; Mitch (Nimoy) an electronic genius, and Scat (McEachin), who can open or steal anything.

With retirement close at hand, Forbes is still privy to inside information from Lee Saunders (Marley), the federal agent in charge of the transfer. He learns that four possible convoy routes are under consideration and that the final choice will be made ten minutes before the convoy moves out.

Hilda (Miss Verdugo), his boss's, secretary, is touched when Forbes asks the parolees to his retirement party, not realizing that it is for a final heist discussion.

Co-starring are Noah Beery, Tom Troupe, Woodrow Parfrey and Vic Tayback.

Wilona And Family Make New Discovery

A mysterious little girl with even more mysterious scars touches the lives of Wilona and the Evans family when they inadvertently discover her well-kept secret and then tell it to the police. But their efforts to save the child may be leading to her destruction, on Parts I and II of a four-part story that premieres the fifth season of "Good Times," Wednesday, Sept. 21, 8 to 9 p.m., on CBS-TV.

The premiere episode stars Janet DuBois, Ralph Carter, BernNadette Stanis, and Jimmy Walker as J.J. Janet Jackson, youngest member of the famed musical family, makes her series acting debut as Penny Gordon, the little girl who makes up fanciful stories to relieve the deep hurts of her life.

Janet Jackson's family, headed by her parents Joe and Katherine, were making family music long before their music was making money.

Katherine had played clarinet in high school, but she wasn't the primary musical influence in the family: Joe who as a youth had sung and played guitar with a local group called The Falcons, set the basic musical example for the nine Jackson children. On weekends, in the 1960's, the entire family, with daughter Maureen (Rebie) on piano, would gather and sing, with Joe playing the chords on guitar.

It was Tito who came up with the idea they should be a formal group, when his brother Michael was only six.

The Jackson group was formed officially in 1970, and, from the very beginning, they proved to be a million-record-seller success. The original five Jackson members were Michael, Marlon, Jermaine, Tito and Jackie. Randy joined his brothers on the concert circuit in 1973, and sister Latoya, Rebie and Janet — then 7 — came along in 1974.

Wait Was Devastating For Actor Rod Taylor

Veteran actor Rod Taylor said he was "amazed by the late pick-up" of "The Oregon Trail," a new series premiering on NBC-TV Wednesday, Sept. 21, 8 to 10 p.m.

"After all, we did the movie (and pilot) a year-and-a-half ago," he explained recently. "Frankly, I was devastated that people didn't want it sooner."

Taylor, a native of Sydney, Australia, said that one of the changes that has been made since the pilot has him no longer married. "Evan Thorpe is now a widower with three children." But he still can't read or write. "The schoolmarm (to be played by Darleen Carr) will do that for me," he explained.

Plans call for Thorpe to write a letter, through the schoolmarm, each week to a cousin' telling him what is happening, and "that's how the stories will be told."

"Refreshing" is the word Taylor uses to describe the series. "This is a period just before the Civil War, so there were wagon trains, rough western towns and saloons for drinking, and it was a violent time."

"But, violence that comes from history is the only kind that will be shown," he added. "I don't want it thrown in because it makes for action."

Taylor says that the cliches seen and heard in all westerns could 'kill' the show. "We're doing it strictly by history and dramatizing it to succeed. The same old stuff won't work today." To drive home his point, Taylor asked the question, "How many westerns do you see on TV today?"

Will they make it to Oregon in the first season?"

"Are you kidding? Listen, I did some research on this, and the wagon train of those days averaged three miles per day. Some made 10, but that was unusual."

"The Oregon Trail" will be up against "Charlie's Angels" and the CBS movie, but Taylor doesn't intend to give up without a fight...literally.

"So I'm in the ring with Ken Norton (referring to the beautiful girls and the movie). But, I'll tell you one thing — I'm no Duane Bobick."

CROSS-COUNTRY ADVENTURE — Rod Taylor stars as Evan Thorpe, the head of a family that joins a wagon train traveling from Missouri to Oregon on "The Oregon Trail," airing Wednesdays (8-10 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

ALWAYS THE BRIDESMAID

Jaime Lee Curtis, who co-stars in "Operation Petticoat," has an unusual viewpoint for an actress. "I don't like playing leads," she says. "I'd rather have the audience wondering if I'm coming back then wondering why I never leave."

Atlantis Began With Discovery

One day a young man washed ashore on a beach. Found by a scientist from the Foundation for Oceanic Research Dr. Elizabeth Merrill, he was discovered to be a water-breathing sea mammal equipped with gills instead of lungs. Merrill named him 'Mark Harris.' A computer can only guess at his origin. Could he possibly be...the "last citizen of Atlantis?"

This highly unusual discovery is the basis of a series, "The Man From Atlantis," which first aired as a mini-series last season. This year it is in the regular line-up of shows on NBC-TV and premieres Thursday, Sept. 22 (9 to 10 p.m.), on NBC-TV.

Patrick Duffy stars as Mark Harris, Belinda J. Montgomery is Dr. Merrill, and Alan Fudge co-stars as C.W. Crawford, director of the Foundation.

Harris, after a series of adventures on land, decides to stay among humans and work for the Foundation. Able to breathe air for only 12 hours at a time, he must return to the sea periodically in order to stay alive.

As Harris, Merrill and a team of scientists and engineers criss-cross the world's oceans in a top-secret submersible vehicle in an attempt to learn more about life under the sea, they become involved in numerous adventures.

Mark Harris is the first TV series starring role for 28-year-old Patrick Duffy. The part calls for a great deal of underwater work, and Patrick can thank his sister for the diving lessons she once gave him. He considers the role a "natural" for him because he's always been extremely athletic.

He has appeared in two TV movies, "The Stranger Who Looks Like Me" and "Hurricane," and has had guest roles in "Switch."

MAN FROM ATLANTIS — Patrick Duffy stars in the title role in the science fiction adventure series, "Man From Atlantis," that premieres Thursday, Sept. 22 (9-10 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

'Rosetti And Ryan' Premieres

Two superb lawyers from diverse backgrounds become involved in difficult and sometimes bizarre cases in the new comedy-mystery series, "Rosetti and Ryan," premiering Thursday, Sept. 22, at 10 p.m. on NBC-TV.

Tony Roberts and Squire Fridell star in the title roles.

Joseph Rosetti (Roberts), bright, brilliant and suave, is from an upper-middle class family and dresses in keeping with his background. An egotist, he considers himself God's gift to women.

Frank Ryan (Fridell) is a former cop who studied law in night school. He is shy and fumbles for words but is clever enough to turn those qualities into an asset. Women tend to "mother" him and he plays it for what it's worth.

Though they often have female clients, neither will exploit a woman's vulnerability to promote a romance.

Rosetti's brilliance and Ryan's dogged persistence are a winning combination, and their clients are usually set free.

Appearing in recurring roles are Jane Elliot as Assistant District Attorney Jessica Hornesby, Dick O'Neill as Judge (hang'em-high) Hardcastle and William Marshall as Judge Black, a no-nonsense arraignment jurist.

Roberts has 11 Broadway plays to his credit and made his movie debut in Disney's "Million Dollar Duck," followed by "Star Spangled Girl" and the film version of "Play It Again, Sam."

Pike's Peeks

HOLLYWOOD — Lee Majors may have signed a $6 million dollar contract for two more seasons of his ABC series and half of that amount for his own independent motion picture productions, but there's some fring benefits not included in the pact. The biggest one is a custom-built mobile dressing room, one of those self-contained RV's that comes pretty well equipped in the first place. But the additions and deletions being made for Lee will cost an extra $50,000, and not only does it come with a large screened TV and sophisticated equipment to assure good reception, but it also comes with the driver who doubles as a maintenance man.

Speaking of building, even though this is supposed to be Robert Blake's last season on "Baretta," Universal Studios is building an on-the-lot home for the actor at a cost estimated at $150,000.

Cheryl Ladd may be the newest Angel of Charlie but she might prove to be on the show no longer than Farrah Fawcett-Majors. Cheryl signed a contract for six episodes at the outset of the new season, but recently turned down a multi-year pact. In fact, her signature is on a contract that commits her only through the balance of the current season. She'll be free to move on after the production ends later this year.

Understand that Jack Klugman and ex-wife Bret Sommers are dating, and hinting to friends that they are thinking about re-marrying. Jack, for one, would be very pleased if such a possibility materializes.

Michael Douglas and his wife of less than a year, Dian-dra, have had their first serious falling out, but have patched things up and are doing what they can to avoid a re-run. It is coincidental that Mike's former long-time girlfriend Brenda Vaccaro broke up her short-lived marriage at about the same time Mike and Dian-dra had a difference of opinion?

Eighteen months ago Pamela Sue Martin was less than enthusiastic about her career. In fact, she hints she even contemplated giving it up, until she met a man named Arthur Gregory, a personal manager, who has successfully guided Pam's career in much the same manner as he has Wayne Rogers and Larry Linville, just to name a couple. What Arthur has done is shown Pamela how one can have a good career without being a part of Hollywood social scene, something she does not favor.

'Midnight Special' Contract Renewed

NBC-TV's "The Midnight Special," the innovative 90-minute musical show which pioneered late-night — early-morning programming when it premiered in 1973, has been renewed for another year, it was announced recently by Dick Ebersol, Vice President, Variety Programs, NBC-TV.

Burt Sugarman, executive producer for the series since its inception, said: "We were somewhat on the spot when we began 'Midnight Special.' Network series starting at 1 a.m. were very rare.

"We have built a very large and loyal audience, and perhaps even helped NBC launch its other late-night shows — 'Tomorrow,' 'Weekend' and 'Saturday Night Live.' We'll continue to present what we feel is the best in contemporary music."

That Bumbling Inspector

Peter Sellers, the bumbling but eager Inspector Clouseau, demonstrates his ingenuity in the slapstick comedy, "The Return of the Pink Panther," making its television premiere on "The ABC Friday Night Movie," Sept. 23 (9-11:24 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Peter Sellers triumphs again in his classic role as the bumbling French sleuth Inspector Clouseau in the hilarious comedy "The Return of the Pink Panther." "The ABC Friday Night Movie," Sept. 23 at 9 p.m. on ABC-TV.

Once again, Inspector Clouseau, the accident-prone detective who can't walk down a street without turning the pavement into a banana peel, is off in hot pursuit of The Pink Panther, the priceless gem whose disappearance sends Clouseau on a madcap chase through France, Switzerland, and Morocco.

Action and slapstick comedy abound as Sellers is trapped in revolving doors, steers trucks into swimming pools, wrestles with runaway vacuum cleaners, grapples with monkeys and parrots, glues himself to chairs, topples statues in museums, and generally drives his superior, Chief Inspector Dreyfus (Herbert Lom), to insanity.

In tribute to Clouseau's prowess for wreaking havoc wherever he goes, Inspector Dreyfus declares that the ski resort of Gstaad, Switzerland, soon to be visited by Clouseau, is "a paradise in the Alps soon to be a wasteland."

The cartoon-like imagery of this crime comedy has been highlighted by the Henry Mancini score, Geoffrey Unsworth's brilliant photography, and the outstanding performances of a fine supporting cast topped by Lom, Christopher Plummer, and Catherine Schell.

The 1975 United Artist release reunited Sellers with producer-director Blake Edwards, the team responsible for the initial two Clouseau triumphs, "The Pink Panther" and "A Shot in the Dark."

Tennis Player Murdered

Six-Hour Epic Airs

Elizabeth Montgomery and Hal Holbrook will star in "The Awakening Land," an epic, six-hour motion picture for NBC-TV about a courageous woman's love for her family, the man she marries and the land on which she lives. It has been adapted from Conrad Richter's Pulitzer Prize-winning book about the pioneer days when America was being transformed into a great nation. The book is made up of three stories originally published separately as "The Trees," "The Fields" and "The Town," and these will be the subtitles for the three telecasts.

"The Awakening Land" is currently being filmed entirely on location in and around Springfield, Ill.

NBC-TV's Deanne Barkley said: "NBC is proud to present this Pulitzer Prize-winning story by Conrad Richter. It is an inspiring saga of the growth of a young woman during a period of growth for a young America."

Montgomery plays Sayward Luckett Wheeler, a strong-willed woman who remains steadfast in crisis. Holbrook portrays Portius Wheeler, a Massachusetts lawyer who is Sayward's reluctant suitor. The drama takes place in what is now a part of Ohio and covers a 27-year span in Sayward's life — from her early 20's to her late 40's — an exciting period for her and the young nation of which she is a part.

The tale begins in 1790 as the unmarried Sayward Luckett, her parent and members of her family leave Pennsylvania for the wilds of the Ohio country. It follows Sayward's life as she takes responsibility for her sisters after her mother dies and her father leaves. It continues with her marriage to Portius; raising her children; facing a marital crisis; watching her husband become an important person in the state; overcoming problems with her children; contributing to the growth of the land; and, finally, her family's realization that she is a great woman.

Pete and Mac follow the pro tennis circuit to track down a murderer on the third-season premiere episode of "Switch," Friday, Sept. 23, 10 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV. Robert Wagner and Eddie Albert continue their starring roles as Peter Ryan and Frank MacBride, respectively, in the hour-long series, aided and abetted by Charlie Callas and Sharon Gless in co-starring roles as Malcolm and Maggie.

Professionally speaking, Wagner and Albert play private investigators, but their modus operandi is as unique as their partnership of MacBride and Ryan. Each of the principals, an ex-con man and a retired bunco cop, is as much of an original as their chief accomplices, Malcolm and Maggie.

New this year are the offices of MacBride and Ryan and Pete's plush bachelor apartment, now located directly above Malcolm's bouzouki bar. The bar has a new Chinese cook, Wang, played by James Hong, with Mindi Miller continuing in her role of Revel, Malcolm's chief assistant. Wang is certain that his unique oriental cuisine is wasted on Pete and Mac's local occidental palates, while Revel's charms are wasted on no one.

HUMMING AND SAWING
David Copperfield, the brilliant young magician, has a most unusual hobby. He's a television fanatic who can hum the theme to every TV series that's been on the air in the last 10 years.

Penn State: Winning Season Predicted For Nittany Lions

Penn State's football followers are used to success. After all, the Nittany Lions hold the NCAA record for consecutive seasons without a losing record. The streak now stands at 38 years since a 3-4-1 record in 1938.

In Joe Paterno's eleven years as head coach, the Lions have compiled a brilliant 101-23-1 record and have gone to a bowl game on nine occasions. Pre-season polls ranked Penn State among the nation's elite and do not anticipate any drastic deviations in their winning tradition in 1977.

Coach Paterno is not jumping to enthusiastic conclusions but is being rather cagey in considering his team overrated.

"We haven't beaten a really good football team in a long time," says Paterno. "We have to stop talking about potential and wait until we beat somebody before we say how good we are."

After facing Rutgers, the team with the longest major college winning streak, in their opener, then meeting Houston, the Cotton Bowl winner, Penn State must battle a powerful Maryland team on ABC-TV Saturday, Sept. 24, at 1:30 p.m.

State's success will greatly depend on how well and fast the offensive line can be rebuilt. Junior Keith Dorney is the only returning starter from last year's interior line, and he is playing a new position, moving from center to tackle.

The backfield is all seasoned. The passing combination from Chuck Fusina to flanker Jimmy Cefalo should cause some secondary men great consternation.

Defensively, the Nittany Lions, long renowned for their exceptional line-backing, should be back to normal this year. In addition, nine of eleven defensive starters return including all three members of the backfield.

After five losses last season, Paterno, although a dedicated 4-4 man, will be running a new 5-3 formation. Paterno has also added a little of Ole' Rip Engle's 5-2. It was a retired Engle that brought Paterno to Penn State more than 25 years ago.

Defense has always been a key to the Nittany Lions' success in the past and with Maryland's Mark Mangas at the helm of the Terrapin offense, defense is a must for Penn State.

Word From The Champ

Muhammad Ali is the heavyweight champion of the world, probably the highest paid boxer in the history of the sport and, just possibly, the most famous man in the world. He is also the voice of his own animated likeness in "I Am the Greatest: The Adventures of Muhammad Ali" which airs Saturdays, 10:30 to 11 a.m., on NBC-TV. After each episode in the series he makes an appearance as himself with some show-closing words for his young viewers. Here are some of them:

"You know me, I'm Muhammad Ali, the heavyweight champion of the world. But if I'm violent and do my fighting, I do it inside the boxing ring, not in the streets, not at home. I'm rated now as the greatest fighter of all times. As good as I am when I have problems, I don't solve them by fighting...and you shouldn't either. Don't use your fists — or you take a risk. Use your head, instead, like Ali said."

"When I get into the boxing ring, I need more than the 'Ali shuffle' to win. I have to get confidence. So do you in all your lives. You have to have faith in whatever you do, believe in yourself, stand for your conviction."

tions, do what you think is right. I did. It worked for me. I know it can work for you. So, take it from Ali, and believe that you are the greatest and you will be the greatest."

"There can only be one heavyweight champion of the world, and at this time in history that one is me, Muhammad Ali. You see me on television, you see me in the movies, it looks like I'm the man. But that's not so. I have a team. I have a trainer, I have managers, I have cooks, bodyguards, message men, boxers. I have a team and you need a team, also. We can't do it alone. They depend on me and I depend on them. Your team is the people you depend on, and they depend on you. When you all stick together there's nothing you cannot do."

Don Meredith Missed Pizazz

Roone Arledge calls it, amusingly, "a great leap backwards." Frank Gifford says that after three years off to think about it, "he might finally be able to describe pass interference." Howard Cosell, his tongue firmly planted in cheek, says it's about time "the English language once again will be spoken properly on 'ABC's Monday Night Football.'"

They are referring, of course, to the return to "ABC's Monday Night Football" of "Dandy Don" Meredith, the Mt. Vernon, Texas down-home philosopher-commentator.

Meredith will take his rightful position beside "Humble Howard" and "Faultless Frank" for the premiere game of the series Monday, Sept. 19 (9 p.m.) between the San Francisco 49ers and Pittsburgh Steelers in Steel City's Three Rivers Stadium.

Though the President of ABC News and Sports and the three commentators make light of it, one gets the distinct impression that the reunion will be touching.

"There's something very special about the broadcasting booth on a Monday night," the ex-Cowboy said from his home in Los Angeles. "There's a little more excitement. A little more tension. A little more equipment we use. And a little more pizazz. I guess I just missed the pizazz, that's all."

Meredith is one of those rare individuals who worked both sides of the street — four years on "Monday Night Football" and three on Sunday afternoons — and wound up with the opportunity to decide for himself which road to take in the future.

"Sure there's a negative side to working the Monday night game," the former quarterback said. "There's an extra day you have to spend away from home. There's a carnival-like atmosphere about Monday nights that's sometimes wearing."

Steelers Are Formidable Foe; Kick Off Season Against 49ers

The Pittsburgh Steelers and the San Francisco 49ers will kick-off their 1977 regular season campaigns on Monday, Sept. 19 at 9 p.m. on ABC-TV.

A year ago the Steelers lost three of their first four games. Under the leadership of coach Chuck Noll, the Steelers rallied to within one game of their third straight Super Bowl appearance. The manner in which Noll brought his team back was a classic example of his quiet leadership ability and another good reason why he is rated at the top of the coaching profession.

Last season the Steeler defense held their opponents to 104 yards rushing per game and on six occasions limited them to under 100 yards on the ground. They gave up only five touchdowns rushing and just 3.2 yards per rushing attempt.

Even though the ultimate — the Super Bowl — was not achieved as it was in the previous seasons last year, it was another in an impressive string of Noll accomplishments. It was the fifth straight season the Steelers made the playoffs and the fifth year in a row they won ten or more games. It was the fourth time in this period the Steelers advanced to the AFC championship game. Their 8-3 record under Noll gives him the best post-season mark of any active coach in the NFL.

For those who think the Steeler dynasty is over — take a close look at the team roster. The Steel Curtain, the quarterbacking of Terry Bradshaw and Mike Kruczek, and the unbeatable combination of Rocky Bleier and Franco Harris on the ground make the Steelers as formidable as ever on paper.

Unfortunately, the unusually high number of injuries have contributed to the Steelers being an in-and-out football team as their preseason record might indicate. At times they have played brilliantly, both offensively and defensively. On other occasions they have been sluggish, particularly when they have had the football.

Unlike the defense, the offense is healthy with the exception of Joh Kolb, as far as the starters go. Bradshaw and his regular receiver and running back, Harris and Bleier, have all played well at times during the preseason, and now they must put it together as a unit.

The future remains a question mark. The only certainty is that under the steady guidance of Chuck Noll the Steelers are always a formidable opponent.

"ABC's Monday Night Football," begins its 8th season on Monday, Sept. 19 when Terry Bradshaw (12) and the formidable Pittsburgh Steeler offensive line battle the San Francisco 49ers in Pittsburgh's Three River Stadium. Action starts at 9 p.m. on ABC-TV.

Cliff Harris Is One Of The Best

Cliff Harris of the Dallas Cowboys is receiving the recognition that is deserving of one of pro football's great free safeties, maybe the game's best. Proof of his ability will be evident when the Cowboys play the Minnesota Vikings Sunday, Sept. 18. The game will be televised by CBS-TV, beginning at 4 p.m.

Named All-Pro in 1975 and '76 the hard-hitting Harris has come a long way since graduating from little Ouachita (pronounced WATCH-e-taw) Baptist University in Arkadelphia, Ark.

Passed over in the 1970 draft, Harris signed with the Cowboys as a free agent that summer and not only made the club but immediately captured the starting free safety job during preseason.

He has held that position ever since, except for a tour of military duty that cost him half of his rookie season. Going into the 1977 season, Harris averaged more than 100 tackles and assists annually and has 18 career interceptions — eighth all-time among Cowboys.

Harris and strong safety Charlie Waters — both Pro Bowlers on the field — are inseparable buddies off and have since they were rookies together in 1970. Concerning the lateral, Harris said, "We'd planned it, we'd done it before. He's run behind me on a few interceptions, and I've sent out the mental vibrations."

"I know I want to win more than anything," Harris has said. "It's something that really gets to me, makes me aggressive."

Aggressiveness. Now there's the subject that most applies to Harris.

"I'm not mean. I'm aggressive, that's all," Harris says. "He's plenty mean and tough," said Cowboys secondary Coach Gene Stallings during training camp 1977. "And Cliff is always ready to play; the bigger the game, the better he is."

As far as playing the "big games," Harris says, "I really enjoy playing against the good teams. My favorite game every year is when we play at Washington. The intensity in-involved in that game is at a peak. The feeling of the game is Washington is special. An old-time feeling. A good feeling of old-time football. You play in the dirt, the fans hate you, they boo you, it's cold. It is totally football. It's the weather, the season, the crowd, the other team. I look forward to it."

In Dallas' Doomsday 11 defense, Harris plays free safety like an extra linebacker, making tackle upon tackle, and totaled 118 tackles last year.

Judge Makes Debut

Emmy Award-winner Tony Randall brings his deft comedic talent to the role of Judge Walter Franklin on the premiere of "The Tony Randall Show," Saturday, Sept. 24, 9:30 to 10 p.m. on CBS-TV.

Judge Franklin dispenses justice in the city of Philadelphia. A man of integrity, Franklin takes his job quite seriously, but is often frustrated by the situations that arise in his personal life and on the bench.

In the premiere episode, Franklin's daughter Bobby (Penny Peyser), who has been away at school, decides to come back to Philadelphia to go to college. Franklin is elated she is coming home, especially since he didn't want her to go away, but is stunned to learn the real reason she is returning.

Tony Randall, a distinguished actor, both on and off Broadway and in many feature films, starred for five years with Jack Klugman in "The Odd Couple" on television, winning an Emmy in 1975 as outstanding lead actor in a comedy series.

Jack Terwilliger, Judge Franklins' court reporter and close friend, is played by Barney Martin, a veteran stage actor. Rachel Roberts plays the Franklin's housekeeper, Mrs. McClellan. Ms. Roberts was critically acclaimed for her performance in the CBS-TV special "A Circle of Children," and is a distinguished stage and film actress.

Allyn Ann McLerie plays Judge Franklin's sharp-tongued secretary, Miss Reubner. Ms. McLerie has appeared in numerous feature films, including "The Way We Were" and "All the President's Men." Penny Payser, portraying Roberta "Bobby" Franklin, has played Off-Broadway and has made numerous television appearances, including roles in "Rich Man, Poor Man," "Switch" and "The Hardy Boys." The youngest member of the cast is Judge Franklin's son, Oliver, played by Brad Savage. Savage has appeared in commercials and in many feature films.

The series, an MTM Production, is filmed before a studio audience in Hollywood.

Third Season Premieres

A new season of comedy in the inimitable style that has won for "NBC's Saturday Night Live" nationwide critical acclaim, four 1975-76 Emmy Awards and eight Emmy nominations for 1976-77, will be ushered in Sept. 24, 11:45 p.m. to 1:15 a.m., when comedian Steve Martin hosts the program's third season premiere.

Martin, an Emmy-winning writer and performer who has been both a guest host and guest on "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson," will be making his third appearance as host of this late-night series. He will join series regulars the Not Ready for Prime Time Players — Dan Aykroyd, John Belushi, Jane but fast-talking sharpie whose fighter just lost a lot of money, and asks for a chance to earn a couple of bucks for room and board. The two form a partnership and take on the best fighter New Orleans can muster — and win.

Streetfighter Bronson Stars In 'Hard Times'

Depression-era New Orleans is the setting for "Hard Times," starring Charles Bronson, and the combination is a gritty and surprisingly effective combination of mood and action.

"Hard Times" airs on "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" Sept. 24, 9 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV.

As Chaney, a ruggedly individualistic streetfighter who won't let his invincible fists richen or corrupt him, Bronson turns in an extremely convincing performance. Along with this strong character and excellent support from co-star James Coburn, "Hard Times" is liberally laden with action and relies more on atmosphere and tip-top pacing than on outright violence.

The mechanics of the story are almost classically simple, going back to the thirties in more than just the film's actual setting.

Arriving in New Orleans on a late-night freight car — seemingly out of nowhere — Chaney comes across a bare-fisted streetfight, a bygone illegal spectator sport in which the fighters and promoters made their cash on the heavy spectator betting. Chaney also comes across Speed (Coburn), a weak

Limited Battery Warranty
Western Auto Supply Company will replace a battery with one of the same type, if while in normal passenger car service it fails to accept and hold a charge due to a defect in materials or workmanship. (1) Free within 90 days of original purchase. (2) During the remaining warranty period the purchaser will be charged a pro rata amount for the length of ownership based on the full regular exchange price (not reduced sale price) in effect at the time of adjustment.

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR FRAN VOORDE, White House director of scheduling
How many invitations does the President receive each week? What percentage does he decline, and what induces him to accept? — C.H., Little Rock, Ark.

● President Carter receives an average of 1,000 written invitations per week. Because of the large number, most must be declined. Although the tremendous volume of national and international issues crossing his desk precludes his being away from Washington very often, he does like to participate in events that give him an opportunity to have personal dialogue with the American people whenever possible.

FOR SEN. LOWELL WEICKER (R.-Conn.)
How much weight does your title of Senator carry when you travel? — B.R., Dubuque, Iowa

● My travels abroad have been personal in nature and, as such, were made at personal expense without formality. Though I don't try to capitalize on my position as a Senator, some people recognizing me go out of their way to be kind. Other people go out of their way to be rude. Vive la Liberté.

FOR ROBERT GOULET, singer
I've heard that you collect frogs. True or false? — S.O., Redondo Beach, Calif.

● True. But they are not living frogs. They're my good-luck charms and security blanket. I'm never without them. My collection of over 1,000 is always with me. My frogs are made of gold, silver, crystal, teak, metal and jade. I've even had them embroidered on my shirts. My favorite is a four-piece frog band, exquisitely carved out of jade. It's hard to assess my collection's worth — its sentimental value is priceless. By the way, I also collect antique sword canes.

FOR LYNN REDGRAVE, cohost of NBC-TV's Not For Women Only
How old were you when you started dating? — C.J., New London, N.H.

● As I went to an all-girls school in London — where it was impossible to meet the opposite sex — I started late, in my advanced teens. The only contact I had with boys was with brothers of my friends, and one rarely likes the brothers of one's friends. They treated me the way my own brother did — shabbily. Also, at 15 or 16, I hated boys my own age. I preferred grown men who, naturally, thought of me as a babe.

FOR PHYLLIS DILLER, comedienne
Comics are supposed to be outspoken, but was there ever a time when your words stuck in your throat? — G.J., Daytona Beach, Fla.

● I remember it well. Once, the magician who sometimes opens my act was getting a potbelly. I wanted to tell him about it but just couldn't get up the courage. Also, since I have so many weaknesses myself, it could have been a question of who casts the first stone. So I took the coward's way out. I gave him a book called Did You Ever See a Fat Squirrel? It completely changed his way of life as well as his eating habits.

FOR THOMAS J. FITZGERALD, president, New York Racing Association
Is it possible to name a horse after a living person? — L.B., Albany, N.Y.

● Only if the owner has an affidavit from the namesake giving permission. Naming a horse is not a simple matter. The Jockey Club (which approves names of thoroughbreds) limits the name to 18 letters. Trade names and commercial slogans are barred. One can't name a horse after another until 15 years after the death of the original. Profane or suggestive names are prohibited. In short, good and inventive taste is the criterion.

FOR JACQUES BELLINI, designer
Give me a rundown on our worst-dressed stars. — W.P., Kenosha, Wis.

● Liz Taylor should unload all those Mideast caftans, then go on a strict diet. Sylvester Stallone ought to invest in a couple of ties. Streisand ruins her gorgeous shape with awful clothes (wish she'd throw them all in the incinerator). Why doesn't Bianca Jagger stop listening to others and look in the mirror? She'd then see trend-setting is not always a good idea. Faye Dunaway should try to emulate her onscreen image offscreen.

FOR STELLA PARTON, country singer and songwriter
Are you related to Dolly Parton? — J.L., Flint, Mich.

● I'm her younger sister — the sixth of 12 children. (Five of us are in the singing and songwriting business, our mom composes and a grandfather is a preacher and music teacher.) Dolly was my inspiration, but she never helped me with my career. Neither of us wanted it that way; I was determined to get where I could on my own. Right now, I'm touring with my own band, The Playboys, which is Freddy Fender's old backup group.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR
Can you find out how long-married actresses hold their men? — H.M., Asbury, N.J.

● Jean Stapleton, Mrs. William Putch since 1957, says: "We didn't give up our individuality when we got married. I have great love and respect for Bill, but I don't own him." Nancy Walker's secret to her 25 years with David Craig (right): "Your husband is another human being. Marriage is not moonlighting. It's a full-time job." Florence Henderson, Mrs. Ira Bernstein for 20 years, says: "Keep growing. Keep up with your husband and the times. Communicate. Don't try to be what you're not."

FOR IRVING WALLACE, author of The R Document
As a writer of sexy books, weren't you concerned with any possible effect they might have on your children? — S.M., Medford, Ore.

● In 1959, when times were hard and I had just finished the first draft of The Chapman Report, my first book, I showed the manuscript to my wife Sylvia and asked for her opinion. After reading one spicy chapter, she said, "But think of the children." I told her, "But I am thinking of them. If that episode helps the book sell a million copies, the children will be able to eat and live well." Does that answer your question?

PRO AND CON

Should Air Bags Be Required in Cars?

PRO Brock Adams, Secretary of Transportation

First, let me clear up a common misconception: the air-bag system is not the only automobile safety-restraint system available. There also is an automatic safety-belt system that wraps around the occupant when the doors are closed. The facts make an overwhelming case for automatic restraints. Every year more than 47,000 persons die as a result of automobile accidents. A restraint system on all cars could save an estimated 9,000 lives annually. The need is obvious, and the cost is small when compared to the benefits. That's why on June 30 I ordered that either automatic restraint system be phased into new-car production, beginning with full-size cars in model year 1981 and for all cars in and after model year 1984.

CON Sen. Robert P. Griffin (R.-Mich.)

While Secretary Adams leads us to believe we will have a choice of passive restraints, as a practical matter it appears that only air bags will meet mandated standards. Not only are they expensive — some $300 initially and up to $600 to replace an air bag deployed even in a parking-lot bump — but they often malfunction. Since air bags are useless unless a crash is head-on, belts will still be needed. Lap and shoulder belts, already in all U.S. cars, are the best safety system we have. Adams's own figures show 13,300 lives could be saved yearly if only 70 percent of us buckled up — 19,000 if we all wore belts. Thus the air-bag order is a classic example of Big Brother cramming another costly pill down consumers' throats.

ED ASNER: DEDICATED FAMILY MAN, COMPLEX AND TROUBLED ACTOR

Television's Lou Grant is a real-life nit-picker who seeks perfection in his work and complete involvement in domestic chores at home.

By Peer J. Oppenheimer

Ed Asner is one of the most instantly recognized people on television. The lovable, irascible Lou Grant of the late Mary Tyler Moore Show now is beginning his own series, and one cannot help wonder, with such fame and fortune, why this thoughtful and complex man is intensely troubled by his career and his personal life.

Co-workers, critics and audiences alike always have been impressed by his ability as an actor, yet Asner has been unable to overcome a stigma associated with most television performers: Even after winning four Emmys — three for The Mary Tyler Moore Show and one for his portrayal of the harsh German immigrant in Rich Man, Poor Man — film producers still refuse to use him for major roles.

Despite a widely varied background in acting, from Shakespeare to contemporary, from the highly dramatic to slapstick, he feels denied. Not many months ago, Asner complained, "I'm a lion on TV, but I have to sweat to get into features. George Roy Hill rejected me for two of his films, The Sting and Slap Shot, and I don't even know how many other parts I've lost because I am considered a TV man. The producers feel that when I come on the screen, the audience will say, 'Ah, there's Lou Grant.'"

Has this attitude made him bitter? "Until a year ago, yes, I was bitter," he says. "Now I realize that I've had a chance to do plenty of good work on TV — not just on The MTM Show, but in the free-lance area as well. Some of the characters I've played on TV in recent months, particularly in Movies of the Week and mini-series like Rich Man, Poor Man, I never would have been able to do in movies. I just don't want to do second-rate movies anymore." Asner was probably thinking of several whose value he sums up by saying, "They weren't released — they escaped."

To prepare himself for his new series, Lou Grant, he has shed 35 pounds. "I lost the weight by going on a liquid protein diet. I felt I would go better with the new part. The battle now is to keep it off."

Asner has always been a workaholic. He puts in at least 12-hour days taping the new series. When he manages to get away, he stays home in posh Bel-Air with his wife of 18 years, the former Nancy Sykes, their three children, 14-year-old twins, Liza and Matthew, and Kate, 10, as well as an assortment of parakeets, fish, dogs, cats and mice.

"Even when I did The MTM Show, I didn't devote enough time to my family," Asner laments. "I berated myself then. I felt terrible. But I didn't change then, and my time at home is even more restricted today. Yet while there really isn't much I can do about it, I don't feel as bad as I used to. When I am at home today I can give of myself more freely. It all depends on what's in your heart, and my heart is in a good state with my family now. I realize how much I love my family, what they mean to me. I did a pretty big flip-flop.

"I can't even say that my problems were caused by my work or lack of time," he continues. "They were based on my inability to communicate and be as free as I am now. I was afraid to let go. I always kept close watch on my thoughts, which were as restrictive as the boundaries in old medieval maps beyond which monsters were supposed to lurk. I feared that if I went too far into my own self, I would discover monsters. Fortunately, I realized that I was losing out on loving and caring."

Just what did he mean by monsters within himself? "Before, I wouldn't let myself go. I could as an actor but not as a person because I didn't know what lay underneath. Finally, I reached a crisis where I either had to learn to give or my family life would be torn apart. When I did work it out, my marriage became stronger and so did my relationship with my children — although that's still not what I would like it to be." All along, Nancy did her best to keep the household functioning normally.

According to Nancy, "Ed is busier than ever, but he is making a more valuable contribution with his time with us than before, when he tended to separate his career and home life so completely that he wouldn't even talk about his work."

"I, in turn, did the same thing as a result. I wouldn't burden him with problems of taking care of the children and running the home. It came down to a lack of communication on both of our parts. Ed and I both — and separately — discussed the problem with a therapist, who was very helpful. I would recommend it to anyone. We have all learned to exchange ideas and views, including the children, and it's terrific. Now Ed draws us into his life away from the house. And the children love it."

"We feel part of what he is doing, and on weekends we try to do something alone with the kids, even if it is only a dinner out and a movie."

Asner is the youngest of five children. He was born in Kansas City, Kan., November 15, 1929, into an Orthodox Jewish family. His father was in the scrap-iron business. Asner grew up in a section called The Bottoms, close to a packing house. From his room he could see the workers, covered with blood, eating their lunches. "They had tours of the packing house so visitors could watch the Sharing the little time he has off the set with daughter Kate and son Matthew.

slaughter," he remembers, "and often the neighborhood kids were allowed to hit the cows over the head with a hammer."

When he was in the second grade, his family moved to a better part of town so he "could enjoy the benefits of waspsville." Instead of making life easier, the move made him neurotic. When he started dating Nancy, who isn't Jewish, she complained that he talked about nothing but his Jewishness. "Mine was a closely centered family, very aware of our religion as well as of prejudices," Asner recalls. "Yet there was also a certain amount of arrogance — we shilly-shallied with words and called it pride."

"My parents were immigrants, but my father made good in business. He was proud of that, and I was proud of him. I thought I had the strongest brothers and the prettiest, smartest sisters."

Asner is now mildly religious. When he married Nancy, she agreed to have their children raised in the Jewish faith. "They are aware that they have two bloods, that they are 'halfures,'" Asner says.

A problem the Asners didn't anticipate was having twins. "We tried so hard to make them perform as individuals that we may have lost more than we gained," Asner observes. "We worked against twinning. One being a boy, the other a girl, made it simpler, of course, like having them wear different clothes. Later we sent them to different schools. I think we lost a lot of fun we should have had."

"I also went overboard trying to be fair. This one gets six cents, the other one gets six cents. Always too much attention to little things. That has been a problem with me all my life — picking up sticks rather than driving them into the ground to create trees."

Asner's nit-picking dates back to his upbringing. "I wasn't taught it; I just came around to it. I can remember my dad's scrap-iron yard, and how it annoyed me.

The ground was littered with bits of glass, iron, nails, all kinds of junk. It was up to me to clean it up, put everything in its proper place. That's what I still do at my own home. I'm nearly neurotic about it."

It's not surprising that Asner has difficulty relaxing even when he has time. "The last vacation I took? Let's see — I think two years ago we spent Christmas in Hawaii."

When he has free time, he likes sleeping late, chauffeuring his kids around, jogging and occasionally brushing his two dogs. He's an altogether domestic man.

In 1953, after a two-year hitch in the Army (he was trained as a radio repairman, but was mostly involved in coaching a basketball team in France), he returned to Chicago. There he joined the Playwright's Theater Club and found himself in the heady company of Elaine May, Alan Arkin, Shelley Berman and Mike Nichols.

To help support himself, Asner took a variety of jobs around the Chicago area, including cab driver, auto-plant spot polisher, shoe salesman, TV advertising salesman, encyclopedia salesman, packing-machine operator and hooker-helper. "That's not what it sounds like," Asner says with a grin. "I worked in a steel mill in Gary, Ind., and helped the man who hooked the pots to the overhead cranes."

Then followed Off-Broadway, Broadway and Shakespeare festivals. Finally, in 1961, as a well-seasoned veteran, Asner and Nancy left for Hollywood, where he soon became one of TV's most-in-demand actors but appeared in a dozen unsatisfying films, too.

Now, after 16 years in California and with a TV series of his own, Asner feels he is closer to achieving both the professional and personal satisfaction he has craved.

But the nit-picking will probably continue. It is a part of Ed Asner to probe the meaning of his life and career. The search and discoveries have often troubled him, but they have uplifted him as well.

FOOTBALL'S MOST COURAGEOUS COMEBACK

Bleier, his wife and their two children make their home in Pittsburgh, where he sells bonds during the off-season.

After having been wounded in both legs in Vietnam combat, doctors repeatedly told Rocky Bleier that he would never play again. Last year the Pittsburgh Steeler rushed for 1,000 yards.

By Barry Abramson

One doctor told him, "You're going to be a cripple. You're going to spend the rest of your life with a limp." A second doctor thought he had a chance to walk again some day without limping, but he was just as negative about his chances of playing football again. "It's impossible," he told him flatly.

But even the best specialists sometimes under-rate what can be accomplished by courage and fierce determination. Robert "Rocky" Bleier of the Pittsburgh Steelers, a running back who nearly lost both his life and his leg in Vietnam and was discharged with a 40-percent disability rating, not only returned to professional football but is a much improved player as well. He played a key role in Pittsburgh's two successive Super Bowl championships and last season attained the National Football League's symbol of excellence by rushing for more than 1,000 yards for the first time in his career. He also had his best year as a receiver, catching 24 passes.

The 31-year-old Steeler is a native of Appleton, Wis., the son of devoted, thrifty parents who worked 16 hours a day, seven days a week, running Bob Bleier's Bar. Bleier learned early how to cope with adversity. He was a schoolboy star in football and basketball when he came down with a bone disease. He was told he'd have to stay out of sports for several years, but, within a year, he made his way back to the school team. He played on championship teams at Xavier High and Notre Dame, and captained the Irish in his senior year. Despite his achievements, he was not highly regarded by pro scouts. He lacked the speed of other backs and at 5'9" was considered small for a pro. He was drafted in the 16th round and even then there were whispers that Art Rooney, owner of the Steelers, took him because he was partial to Irish lads from Notre Dame.

Bleier was a little-used substitute in his rookie season of 1968. He then was drafted and a year later was serving with the infantry in Vietnam. His platoon was attacked by a large force of North Vietnamese, and he was hit in the left thigh by small-arms fire. Shortly afterward, a grenade exploded right at his feet, and shrapnel was blown into both his legs and shattered several bones in his right foot.

A GI from another platoon volunteered to carry him to an evacuation helicopter two miles away. In his book, Fighting Back, Bleier pays tribute to this soldier: "I never knew his name, and I don't think he ever knew mine. . . I was white, this guy was black. We had each traveled thousands of miles to meet in a jungle. After that night, I would never see him again. . . Yet here he was, offering to pick me up and help save my life. That's a special kind of love."

The GI got Bleier half-way to the helicopter when he fell and Bleier collapsed in pain. Stretcher-bearers finally got him into the crowded chopper.

At an aid station, fear was expressed that Bleier might have to lose his right foot to prevent gangrene. The fear proved unfounded, but after surgery Army doctors told him that his football career was finished.

The months following brought another operation, days and nights filled with agonizing pain and a difficult period of learning to walk on crutches. When he was discharged from the Army and went to the Steelers' training camp in 1970, his limp was so obvious that his teammates were shocked he even contemplated trying to return to a sport in which violent body contact is constant. Physical therapy to give his toes mobility had failed, and the Steelers' orthopedic surgeon confirmed the opinion of the Army doctors: "You've got to find another profession."

Mickey Palmer / F.O.S.

He describes his awesome struggle in his book, Fighting Back, which will be made into a film next year.

But Bleier refused to quit, even though an injury sustained in a practice session emphasized that his wartime ordeal made him more susceptible to typical football injuries than other players. "I wasn't just being foolishly stubborn," he says. "I had this dream of succeeding in pro football, and I tried hard to make it so that 10 years later I wouldn't ask myself, 'What if I'd been able to rehabilitate myself: what if I'd gotten into super condition? Could I have made the team?'"

Through the generosity of owner Rooney, who felt that a man who wins a Bronze Star and Purple Heart deserves extra consideration, Bleier was kept on the Steeler roster. He was placed on the injured reserve list at full pay, and the club paid for another operation. Then he put himself through a long period of what he calls "sustained masochism" — a physical-conditioning program in which he gave what one trainer calls "150 percent of himself." At 5:30 each morning he ran himself to the edge of exhaustion. He spent afternoons lifting weights and did sprints at night. With the help of Pittsburgh's trainers and outside physiologists, he developed exercises that gave him new muscle and increased his speed.

During his comeback years, Bleier first played on special teams and then operated primarily as a blocking back for the Steelers' great running back, Franco Harris. He has finally become Harris's costar as a ground gainer. "Rocky might not have the greatest ability, but he has the greatest desire, and it sure shows," says Harris.

Deeply religious, Bleier feels God played an important role in his comeback. He has said that his experience in Vietnam was God's way of giving him some adversity after providing him with such good fortune. He believes this adversity has made him a stronger and more determined person.

Fighting Back will be dramatized in a film next year. Producer Maury Gable, who will make the movie, points out that the public is tired of the antihero theme. "People are anxious for a story about a real hero, a truly inspired person. That's Rocky Bleier."

There are four good reasons to see your good neighbor agent.

When Don and Vicki Cooper of Roseburg, Oregon, bought insurance for their home from State Farm agent Ken Clark, one thing led to another.

"I liked the coverages and felt good about being with State Farm," says Don. "But most of all, I liked the way he treated Vicki and me. We could tell he had our interests at heart."

Later, the Coopers decided to make Ken their life insurance agent. And then, their auto agent, too.

"It's a great convenience to have one agent handling the family insurance," says Vicki.

"If anything should happen, it's nice to know that all I have to remember is one name."

"And when you call him, you get a fast response," adds Don. "You know he's there, and you know he's working for you."

Ken says, "Knowing that families like the Coopers are well taken care of is very satisfying.

It's the most rewarding part of my job." There's a State Farm agent like Ken Clark in your neighborhood.

HOW TO BE A SMART HOME FURNISHINGS SHOPPER

Here are the important basics that will help you get the decorating results you want.

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

You've heard the one about the couple who bought a terrific sofa on sale — then discovered that it didn't mesh with their furnishings and wouldn't fit through the doorway. Obviously, planning ahead for your furniture purchases is extremely important. Here's how to begin.

Master Check List

Take an inventory of your rooms, listing major pieces as well as accessories. Leave space for measurements. If you're planning to replace a piece in approximately the same size, simply measure it. If you desire to increase the size, measure the floor area in which it will stand, and remember to measure the doorways through which it will be delivered.

Budget Plan

Settle on your priorities. Is it more important to get an upholstered piece or to buy new mattresses? Can you afford both? If you decide to buy on credit, consider your monthly obligations — if mortgage payments, cost of utilities and other monthly obligations are more than 60 percent of your salary, it's best to hold off on any new debts. You might emulate some families who put money away in a special savings account. Or, instead of exchanging gifts on special occasions, your family can contribute to a "furniture fund."

Money-Saving Ideas

Wait and watch for sales. Furniture stores have sales during slack seasons — usually January, February and August. Individual stores and outlets, however, may hold special sales throughout the year. And, if you have a charge account at a department store, it's customary for you to be notified about sales before the general public. You may save from 10 to 40 percent on clearance and inventory sales.

Check out floor samples, discontinued items and seconds. There are specialty stores that deal exclusively in seconds. Consult your Yellow Pages. Used or slightly used furniture of good quality also can be a good buy. This furniture is available at thrift shops and at sales from model homes or condominiums. It also is listed in newspaper want-ads. Inspect carefully before purchasing.

Consider unfinished furniture. If you have the skill to paint or varnish, it can provide savings in furnishing a den or children's rooms. Warehouse stores are a fairly new concept in which customers can select top-brand furniture at substantial savings but are responsible for delivery.

Buying Tips

When selecting upholstery, a tightly woven fabric in a medium shade will wear the best and show soil the least. Examine a swatch under daylight and lamp light. At home, if you cup hands over eyes, binocular-style, you'll get an idea of how the swatch will look over a large area. Check for sturdiness and comfort of upholstered pieces.

When buying carpeting, always get a sample of your purchase. On delivery, bend back both sample and carpet to be sure that density and depth of pile are the same and that you are getting the carpet you selected.

When available, use the services of an in-store decorator, who will help you coordinate your room settings.

Read labels. A label should indicate the fabric content of upholstered goods, the type of wood construction of furniture pieces and how to maintain your purchase. You also should get a warranty, which should be read and understood before you buy.

by Advance Reservation Only

Come, let your spirits soar! Watch the wind billow in the sails. Breathe the briny air... taste the anticipation of adventure. Voyage back with us to an era of discovery, excitement, and incomparable majesty — the era of the Great American Sailing Ships — the beginning of America's love affair with the sea.

Now, for the first time, twelve of the great American sailing ships are portrayed in a magnificent collection of fine china plates. The Danbury Mint is proud to announce the Great American Sailing Ships Collection.

A Major First Edition Fine China by the Rosenthal Group

The Danbury Mint has privately commissioned Rosenthal China to produce each plate in the collection to their exacting and uncompromising standard of excellence. The Great American Sailing Ships Collection proceeds in the proud Rosenthal tradition of establishing china as a distinctive and beautiful art form. Time-honored craftsmanship is combined with the work of a major artist to create a unique collection of enduring beauty. The plates in this collection are the only plates of their kind in the entire world!

Original Works of Art

Robert Devereaux, a distinguished American artist, has been commissioned to paint the original watercolors for this series. A lover of sailing history, he spent months creating art which is both authentic and strikingly original. His brushstrokes capture every subtle detail of each ship. The illustrations reproduced here can only hint at what has been achieved. When transformed onto fine china, these Devereaux originals are breathtaking!

A Limited Edition at a Guaranteed Price

This is the first series of fine china plates crafted by the Rosenthal Group for the Danbury Mint. For this reason alone, the plates will have exceptional collecting importance.

Moreover, the Great American Sailing Ships Collection is being issued in a strictly limited edition. It is available only by advance subscription and only directly from the Danbury Mint. None of the plates will be available individually. The original issue price of $35.00 per plate is guaranteed to each subscriber for the entire collection.

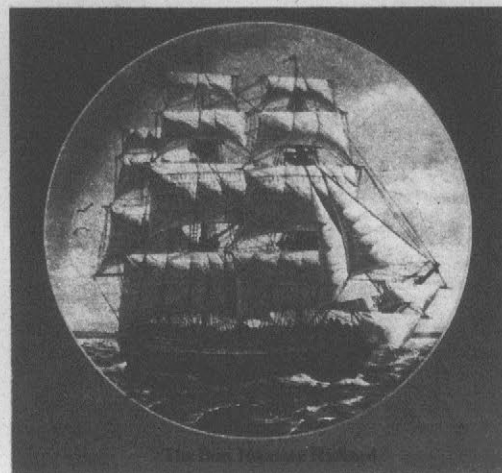

Each plate will be individually hand-crafted and will bear the famous "Crossed Roses and Crown" Coat of Arms of the Rosenthal Group. A band of 24kt. gold will be hand-applied to each plate, adding to the richness of the entire collection.

Guaranteed Satisfaction

Before each plate is approved for shipment to a subscriber, it must pass the exacting standards of both Rosenthal and the Danbury Mint. Should any plate fail to satisfy you, in any regard, you may return it for replacement or refund. Naturally, you may cancel your subscription at any time.

Convenient Acquisition Plan

Although no payment is required at this time, subscriptions to the Great American Sailing Ships Plate Collection can be accepted only until October 31, 1977. THE DOCTOR AND YOU

Two Common Health Problems

ACHING BACK

No one has a "backbone." What we have is a chain of 24 small bones down the middle of the back. They resemble little square doughnuts piled one atop the other in a slight S-curve. In the tube formed by the doughnut holes lies the spinal cord, and nerves for pain and motion branch off from it. Each bone in the chain, called the vertebra, has muscles attached to it that hold the bones in place and permit movement of the spine. When the muscles work correctly, the spine can bend a bit in any direction. But if anything disturbs the muscle balance, the result is an aching back.

Muscle spasm is a common cause of backache. Spasm causes pain, which, in turn, causes spasm. So a vicious cycle is set up. Sometimes the spinal nerves in the neck are affected; other times the pain may be in the hips or legs.

Sudden unaccustomed movements are a common trigger. So is the improper use of the back in lifting. Bend the knees and use them; don't just straighten the back. Nervousness, anger and weak stomach muscles can also set off a backache.

Treatment often attempts to reduce muscle spasm. Hot packs are helpful as is aspirin, which reduces inflammation. Muscle relaxants are frequently prescribed, and sometimes doctors have to arrange for traction. Weights are attached to the head and feet of the hospitalized patient, so the body can be gently but steadily stretched a bit while lying down. Stretching takes the pressure off the nerves and bones and loosens up tight, cramped back muscles. In most cases, this treatment is enough, but a few backs end up in surgery.

Regardless of the cause, backache tends to recur if preventive measures aren't taken. Exercise is needed between episodes. Sit-ups are good, and toe touches are better. A little exercise every day may be needed for years, but that's a small price to pay for a nonaching back.

DANDRUFF

Those white flakes on your shoulders may put red spots on your skin. Dandruff flakes are tiny bits of dead skin shed by normal body wear-and-tear. The flakes are largely dried skin cells, but they contain skin oils and dead bacteria, too. These flakes are irritating to normal skin and can cause annoying rashes.

Dandruff rashes plague some body areas more than others. The primary target is the scalp, where dandruff can cause itching and festers. In infants, large areas of this sore, crusted scalp are called "cradle cap." Since infants lie flat the first six months, rashes develop over the back of the head, neck and shoulders where the flakes fall. When babies sit, the rashes attack the forehead and face as well. That's also where adults get dandruff rash.

Thickened crusted eyelids, scaly brows and lashes and red, teary eyes often come with the dandruff rash doctors call seborrheic dermatitis. Irritated by fallen flakes, the rash also appears in places that sweat a lot: armpits, groin, under the neck and breasts. In fact, the rash sometimes appears to cover the entire body, and it worsens in hot weather. Many people prickle after haircuts, when scalp scales are freed to fall over sensitive skin. These people should head for the showers.

Treatment of dandruff begins with the mechanical removal of scalp scales. A stiff brushing or fine combing to loosen dandruff should be followed by a simple detergent shampoo. Sometimes doctors suggest special medicated shampoos to break up scalp scales. Then a brush and detergent shampoo routine should follow.

The brush-and-shampoo routine should be used daily for at least a week. Since the treatment stirs up dandruff, the rash and red eyes sometimes worsen before getting better. But when the snowy ring around the collar disappears, so will the rashes on the skin.

THE SACRED SHROUD OF TURIN

By Robert Wilcox

This weekend, a group of experts meeting in London ponder the mysteries of a winding sheet that some scientists contend enfolded the body of Christ.

The most mysterious relic in Christendom is the ancient Shroud of Turin, Italy, a 14-foot piece of linen cloth with the front and back impressions of a crucified, whipped, "stabbed-in-the-side" and "crowned-with-thorns" man. According to tradition, it is the burial cloth of Christ.

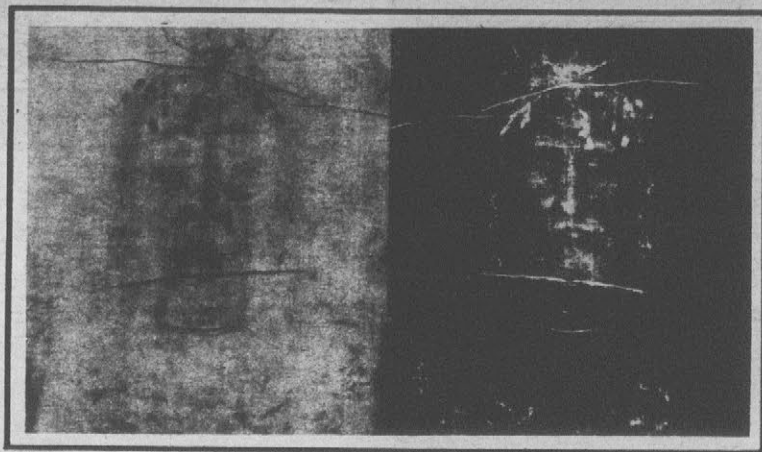

The shroud is owned by the exiled monarchy of Italy, the House of Savoy, and has a documented history trailing back to 1354, when it surfaced in Europe as the prized possession of a former Crusader knight. Beyond that, a strong circumstantial case can be made that it existed as far back as first-century A.D. But, alas, an unbroken chain of documents is lacking.

This weekend, experts are meeting in London to prepare for a special exposition of the guarded relic which Church authorities have announced will occur next May in Turin. These experts hope to formulate recommendations for testing the relic. All of them are already convinced the shroud is authentic.

Scientific interest in the shroud began in 1898 when the first photographs were made. It was discovered that the images on the cloth's surface are exactly like photographic negatives. (The light and dark areas of the body are reversed.) But looking in his negative film plate (where the negative images would be reversed), the first photographer saw positive images. They showed the lifelike pictures of a dead body.

The discovery caused consternation. Cries of "miracle" came out of Turin. How could anyone, asked those who saw the negatives, put a photographic likeness of a dead man on a cloth prior to 1354. Photography — and the very concept of a negative — wouldn't be invented for another 500 years.

After the first photographs, the shroud was withdrawn from display, not to be seen for another 30 years. But in that time scientists studied the photographs with startling results.

The images were not painted. Examining blowups of the first photos, scientists couldn't find even a hint of brush strokes or paint. Art experts testified that the images follow no known style, and renowned artists trying to paint negatives that, when photographed, turned into recognizable positives failed miserably.

The images are definitely those of a corpse in rigor mortis. So precise is their anatomical realism, that separation of serum and cellular mass — a true characteristic of dried blood — is evident in almost every blood stain. Pathologists saw swelling around cuts and bruises. The first stages of decomposition are evident.

The scientist who spent the longest time studying the photos, Ives Delage, a member of the prestigious French Academy, reluctantly came to the following conclusions: The shroud had not wrapped a random crucifixion victim. The man in the shroud is severely lacerated about the head, suggesting the crown of thorns. He exhibits a gaping wound in the chest, such as a Roman lance might make. A swollen face and lash marks all over the body show that he was beaten and flogged as the New Testament says Jesus was. In addition, there is a large lacerated area on one side of the shoulders, indicating he had carried a heavy, rough beam.

Could the shroud be simply a clever fake, Delage asked himself, the product of a body mutilated to look like Jesus? No, he concluded. His reasoning: It's logical to assume that any forger would have stringently followed Christian depiction of Christ in making such a fake. Otherwise, Christians would have rejected it. But the shroud images deviate from Christian tradition:

- The nail holes are in the wrists, not the palms.
- The lacerations on the man's head show he wore a full "cap" of thorns rather than the traditional "Wreathlet."
- The man in the shroud is nude. Nowhere in traditional Christian art is Jesus naked as an adult.

In the late 1930's, following the first exhibitions of the shroud in this century, a Parisian anatomist, Pierre Barbet, published a book, Doctor at Calvary, detailing further findings: The nail holes in the wrists are in precisely the places a crucifier would have used during the era of Christ. Crucifying a corpse to which he had access, Barbet found that when the nails were placed in the palms — as is always shown in traditional Christian art — the weight of the hanging body caused the nails to rip through the hands.

Recently, a new theory has emerged. In essence, it suggests that some sort of burst of heat or light "scorched" or "photo-graphed" the negative images onto the fibers. The theory's biggest supporters are those who have actually seen the cloth (of which I am one) and feel the images look most like marks that might be produced by briefly touching a hot iron to a sheet.

This interpretation lends itself to the supernatural, and working from it, many experts employ the following reasoning to demonstrate that the shroud provides evidence of the Resurrection. First, there is apparently no other case of a shroud with such body images. All that appears on other shrouds is a blood-stained mass of splotches and swirls due to bodily decomposition. Thus, the picture on the Shroud of Turin does not seem to have resulted from any normal chemical interaction.

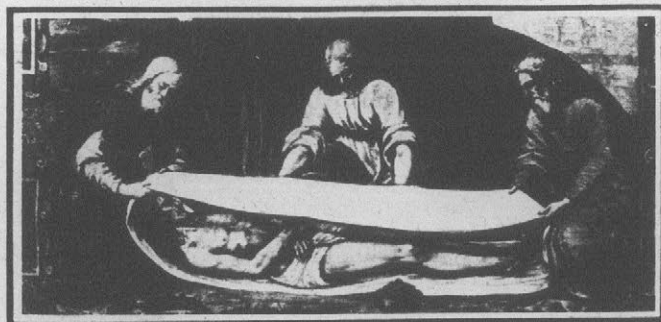

The absence of such splotches means, then, that somehow the body got out of the shroud before decomposition, which, interestingly enough, is exactly what the New Testament says happened to Jesus' body. And evidence on the relic suggests that the body exited in some mysterious manner. The only natural way would be if someone unwrapped the shroud and took out the body. But certain facts preclude this. There are hundreds of blood stains all over the body. If they were wet, the body's removal would have left smudges on the shroud. Yet scientists who have studied the images of the clots say the borders on many are so perfect that they look more like "pictures" of blood clots than absorbed stains. And if the blood stains had already dried, enmeshing themselves into the cloth's fibers, removal of the body would have ripped the cloth as well as the clots.

To all the conjecture and mystery surrounding the ancient Shroud of Turin must be added the fascinating finding of Dr. Max Frei, an internationally acclaimed criminologist. When granted special permission in 1973 to examine the shroud, he found traces of 2,000-year-old pollen on the cloth — from Palestine.

A SKEPTIC'S VIEW

Dr. Paul Kurtz is chairman of the Committee for the Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal, a group of scholars who call themselves watchdogs for the real world and debunkers of fantasies. When questioned about the shroud, he commented: "I am doubtful about the claims of a supernatural event. The evidence is in no way conclusive. I do believe, however, that a miracle is involved — and that is, if I may paraphrase the Scottish philosopher David Hume, it is a continuing miracle to me that people in this age of modern science and education will continue to believe in miracles without sufficient evidence or proof."

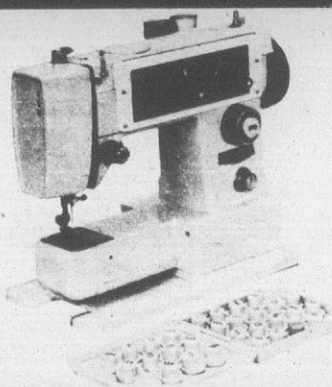

Dr. Kurtz, a professor of philosophy at the State University of New York at Buffalo, is the editor of the magazine The Humanist.

THIRTY-FIVE WAYS TO ECONOMIZE

By Burch and Betsy Day

FOOD

1. Investing in a side of beef will probably save you money, but about 30 percent of what you get isn't usable. So, at 89¢ per pound, you're really paying $1.27 per pound for edible meat.

2. If there's a 7¢ or more price spread between medium and large eggs, buy the mediums. Less than 7¢, stick to the large.

3. Grade B is simply a question of appearance, not taste or nutrition. Use grade B eggs for cooking and baking; grade B vegetables in casseroles and stews.

4. Comparison shop. It's a way to save up to $500 a year (for a family of four).

SUNDRIES

5. Buy no-spoil items (cleaning supplies, paper products, etc.) on sale, and stock up.

6. If you average a roll or more of paper towels per week, you're probably using them unnecessarily.

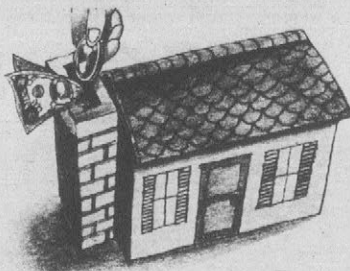

7. Take soap cakes out of their wrappers and let them dry several weeks before using. They'll last much longer.

8. You can get 15 or more shaves out of a single blade by keeping your razor in a covered jar filled with enough mineral oil to cover the head.

CARS

9. The best time to trade in a car (unless it's a lemon) is early in the fourth year of ownership, while maintenance costs are still reasonable and trade-in value is relatively high.

Regardless of income, you can save hundreds of dollars on everyday living costs by following these simple tips.

10. Optional equipment is mandatory for good resale value. Most options vary from area to area, so check with dealers.

11. In terms of fuel, a 5,000 pound car is twice as expensive as a 2,500 pound car.

12. Check your tire pressure regularly. Tires underinflated just 25 percent lose 1/5 of their useful life and will cost an extra $30 a year in gas.

13. Idling more than half a minute is wasteful. Shut off the engine and start it again when you're ready to go.

PERSONAL FINANCE

14. One-stop banking is often more expensive. Compare banks to get the best deal for services you use.

15. Borrowing against money in your savings account is the least-expensive loan you can get.

16. Considering major home improvements? The best deal you can get is an FHA Title 1 loan (available up to $10,000 through many banks).

17. Make a list of your credit-card numbers and the phone numbers. There's usually no liability if you report loss or theft of the card within 24 hours.

UTILITIES

18. Take showers instead of baths — seven gallons of water as opposed to 12.

19. Buying a "high efficiency" model refrigerator can save $600 in electric bills over the life of the appliance.

20. When boiling a big pot of water, start with hot tap water instead of cold.

21. You'll use 1/3 more electricity cooking a roast you haven't defrosted.

22. One-fifth of the heat is lost every time you open the oven door.

23. A 40-watt fluorescent bulb costs less to use than a standard 100-watt bulb and provides 75 percent more light.

24. In five years, storm windows pay for themselves in lower utility bills.

INSURANCE

25. Always shop around. Identical plans can vary up to 100 percent in price.

26. If your son has a "B" average or better in school, he qualifies for a good-student auto-insurance discount. That can be a yearly saving of $100.

27. Stay away from policies that make you wait for benefits for such diseases as cancer and heart disease. In the interim, you can pay a fortune in medical bills.

HEALTH CARE

28. Comparison shop for drugs — prices may vary 300 percent or more.

29. Take advantage of your state department of health. Such services as free shots are often available to everyone.

30. If you live near a dental school, you often can get work done for free or at a nominal cost. Students do the work, but always under a professor's supervision.

VACATIONS

31. Never take a plane, train or bus trip of 200 miles or more without a travel agent's help. It doesn't cost you a cent but can save a lot in fares, hotels, etc.

32. Taking a long bus trip? If you leave on Tuesday, you can ride for as little as half fare during certain months of the year.

33. Stock up on film when it's on sale. It lasts almost indefinitely when stored in a cool spot. The best place to keep it is in the refrigerator — like the pros.

HOMES AND MOVING

34. A two-story house pays in climates where heating bills run high. You'll lose 50 percent less heat through the roof.

35. You can cut 50 percent off moving costs if you rent a truck or trailer and move yourself. You'll save on professional movers if you avoid the spring through Labor Day moving season.

Energy rip-off. "Were we directed from Washington when to sow and when to reap, we should soon want for bread," wrote Thomas Jefferson in 1821—an insight that applies in spades to today's energy problems. Washington would sock everybody with big new taxes and regulations that could force people to change their life-styles so they'll use less energy. But when it comes to increasing U.S. energy supplies, the politicos keep putting new roadblocks in the way. Washington's mixed-up "solution" is to delay U.S. offshore drilling for oil and gas, go slow on nuclear power, put new restrictions on mining and using coal, and stress "conservation" to the extent that it could threaten the growth of the economy. Where are you, Mr. Jefferson, when we need you most?

Bureaucratic build-up. The concentration of power in Washington which drew Jefferson's barb couldn't hold a candle to today's. Currently, there are 18,000 staff members in Congress alone—more than twice as many as in 1960. The compensation of these aides? In the House, it's up sixfold since 1960.

"The poor thing was trying to keep up with the bureaucratic buildup."

Committee craze. Last time we looked, it was costing taxpayers $52 million to support 1,500 federal advisory committees. But 397 of them never met, and another 891 didn't produce a single report. The "President's Committee on the Environmental Merit Awards Program," established in 1972, neither met nor issued a report during its first four years of existence. Yet its term was extended in 1975. Maybe what's needed is a "Committee on Disbanding Committees"—with a one-year, non-renewable charter.

Spreading the wealth. That's exactly what's been happening in America over the last 50 years. In 1925, business owned 56 percent of the tangible assets in America; individuals and families, 30 percent; and government, 14 percent. But today, writes Dr. John Kendrick in a new study called The National Wealth of the United States, private citizens and families own 41 percent; business, 38 percent; and government, 21 percent.

PEOPLE QUIZ/By John E. Gibson

Can gloom distort our image of our body?
Are unsuccessful people most susceptible to depression?

WHO GETS THE BLUES AND WHY

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Many people are subject to the "birthday blues," and it's not just because they're one year older.
2. We see a different face in the mirror when we get the blues.
3. Depression causes people to view things unrealistically.
4. People who don't make much money and never climb very high on the ladder of success are most subject to depression.
5. When you try to change the mood of someone who's depressed, instead of making him feel better, he's likely to make you feel worse.
6. How subject you are to the blues is likely to depend on whether you are a right or left "eye-looker."

ANSWERS

1. True. Studies at the MRC-Clinical Psychiatry Unit in Chichester, England, have shown that a number of people experience depressive, downbeat feelings on their birthday, with morale often hitting the lowest ebb of the year. The studies also found the birthday blues syndrome to be associated with irrational and self-destructive impulses. It has been suggested that the birthday blues may be related to subconscious memories of a painful birth. Whatever the cause, it's noted, nevertheless, that for many people their birthday is one of the happiest days of the year.
2. True. In a Vanderbilt University study, research is cited showing that depression is likely to result in a distortion of body image, causing the person to see himself as unattractive—regardless of how good-looking he may be. This distortion was found to be true in 66 percent of the depressed persons studied.
3. True. University of Pennsylvania studies have shown that when a person is depressed he doesn't see things and situations as they actually are. He has an unrealistic attitude toward the future (it looks black), is confident that he will not solve his problems or achieve his goals and thinks he has little to look forward to except feeling miserable. Fortunately, most cases of depression disappear after a brief period of time.
4. False. Sociological studies at Britain's University of Surrey, which evaluated leading research on the subject, show that men and women in high-income brackets are most subject to depression. This finding was particularly true for manic-depressives (those who suffer a serious psychotic disorder involving peaks of elation and critical depression). The studies suggest that "the personality of some individuals that predisposes them toward successful striving may also predispose them toward depressive periods and that top-flight occupational status, and the upward social mobility that tends to accompany it, may be associated with the kinds of stress disposing people toward depression."

5. True. Studies at Indiana University demonstrate how easily depression is transferred from one person to another. Investigators found that you don't have to be around a depressed person long to start feeling the way he does. After subjects talked briefly with depressed persons, tests showed them to be significantly affected.

6. True. In studies at the University of Toledo, findings are cited showing that most people can be classified as either predominantly right or left eye-lookers. Right eye-lookers habitually look to the right when thinking; with left eye-lookers the reverse is true. It's been established that "looking to the right while thinking indicates a dominance of the left hemisphere of the brain, whereas looking left reflects a right-hemisphere dominance." Studies conducted by British scientists from the University of Oxford, University of Wales and University College have demonstrated that "the two hemispheres of the brain possess an essentially different emotional vision of the world," with left-hemisphere dominance contributing to a pleasant and optimistic view of life and right-hemisphere dominance increasing sensitivity to the less agreeable and more disappointing aspects of life, thus rendering the person prone to depression.

HOLDS DENTURES FIRM WITHOUT DAILY "FIXINGS"

comfortably tight for weeks

No more "fixings" every morning with messy powders or creams. Even if dentures need "fixing" after every meal, here's important news. Snug cushions restore dentures' holding power so dentures stay comfortably tight for weeks. Snug, the soft, effective temporary aid, forms a "comfort bond" between dentures and gums. Sticks to dentures, not to gums. Rinse, scrub or soak Snug fresh and clean. Easy to remove, but won't wash off or flake away. Sp. end daily "fixings!" ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

DON'T BRING IT UP

On bringing up children opinions are numerous. Some of them serious, some of them humorous. We're told in one book we should placate and reason:

We tried this advice for one horrible season. In another book firmness quite highly was rated: We gave this a try and were thoroughly hated.

We're doing our darndest to cope with our children.

Although we have found it completely bewildering.

However we've noticed, this closes my jingle: The experts, the ones who are surest, are single.

A Running Start

When psychiatrist Thaddeus Kostrubala's patients come to see him, instead of lying down on the couch they — and the doctor — are likely to go for an hour's jog in nearby Balboa Park. Kostrubala, chief of psychiatry at San Diego's Mercy Medical Center, has successfully used running as part of his therapy for dozens of patients. "It works best with moderately depressed patients but can be used with most patients, except for those with certain physical conditions," says Kostrubala. To illustrate what the running therapy does for the patient, Kostrubala outlines the stages most runners experience during an hour's run: "During the first 20 minutes you feel rotten, then at half an hour you get a feeling of elation, and after 40 to 60 minutes you may experience an altered state of perception." The most immediate effect on the patient, says Kostrubala, is elation and an amelioration of depression. Not all patients run with Kostrubala; some do it on their own or with one of the "running therapists" he is training. What do you have to do to become a running therapist? Well, for starters, you have to have completed 2 marathons.

For a while it looked as though fine handwriting had gone the way of the medieval scribes. Now calligraphy appears to be enjoying a comeback. Sales of lettering pens are up 20% over the last 5 years, and the people buying them aren't those you'd expect. "For the most part they are the average guys in the street," says Arthur Astorino, manager of Educational Sales and Development for a company that produces two of the most popular lettering pens. Astorino thinks the rise of interest in calligraphy is "related to people's desire for personal identity, and lettering is something you can learn even if you don't have artistic talent." Another attraction is that calligraphy is easy on the pocketbook as well as the eye; you can buy everything you need to start for under $6. WHAT IN THE WORLD...

Sight Stealer

They call glaucoma the "sneak thief of sight" for a good reason. The most common variety of this second-leading cause of blindness works so slowly that the person isn't aware that his vision is getting worse — until it's too late. Dr. Steven M. Podos, ophthalmologist-in-chief at New York's Mt. Sinai Hospital, says, "Half the people with glaucoma don't even realize they have it. And because it's a silent blinder, glaucoma emphasizes the need for routine checkups." It's especially important to detect glaucoma as early as possible because, although medical treatment can halt the disease's progress, sight destroyed by glaucoma cannot be restored. Glau-coma generally strikes people over 35 (it can occur earlier) and often runs in families. If your doctor diagnoses glaucoma, it can be treated by drug therapy in the majority of cases, with surgery indicated in the remainder. So, now that your eyes have been opened, what better time to get a checkup — it's National Sight-saving Month. You even may be able to get a free screening in your area as part of the Glaucoma Alert launched by the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness. For more information, write: Glaucoma — Dept. FW, National Society for the Prevention of Blindness Inc., 79 Madison Ave., New York, N.Y. 10016.

Blackout Insurance

No part of the country is immune to power failures — whether they're caused by a hurricane in Florida or an ice storm in Michigan — but there's no reason for you to stay in the dark. Many families already have most of the equipment they need in an emergency — somewhere in the house. So your best insurance against inconveniences during power outages is to keep this equipment in one place and in working condition. The essential items to have on hand, says Katie McMullen of the Coleman Company, which has assisted in many disaster-relief efforts, are a flashlight, spare batteries, candles (with matches stored nearby) and a transistor radio. If your family enjoys camping or backpacking, such gear as a portable stove or a camp lantern should be stored with your emergency supplies rather than in the basement. Check your supplies every 2 months or so to make sure batteries and any other equipment are still working.

Zeroing In On Your Personality

Going around in circles doesn't have to be a waste of time — at least not when the circles are the ones you draw in a simple test that can give insight into your personality. All you have to do is draw 3 circles on a sheet of paper, which represent past, present and future. The circles can be of any size and in any arrangement. Finished? Now let Dr. Frederick Koenig, a sociology prof. at Tulane Univ., who has administered the circle test to over 500 people, tell you how to interpret your drawing: "The first thing the test will tell you is, by the size of the circles, which is dominant to you — the past, present or future. Secondly, you'll find out how much relation you see between time periods by how much overlap there is between circles." Koenig says that the person who draws overlapping or touching circles believes that what he does today influences what happens tomorrow.

Quick Takes

There may be a lot more than toys in the attic. The Federal Reserve Bank of Boston estimates that Americans may be hoarding over $50 billion in cash, at least 40% of that in $100 bills. A bank spokesman says that while most hoards are under $1,000, caches of $5,000 or $10,000 are by no means rare. Patients admitted to hospitals on Fridays and Saturdays are likely to have longer — and therefore costlier — stays than patients admitted during the week, concludes a study by Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Michigan. The study reports that those admitted for surgery on weekends stayed an average of 4.1 days longer than other surgical cases and waited 5.1 days before undergoing their operations, compared to the delay of only 2.6 days for those admitted during the week.

Straight Answers About Drug Abuse

Drugs are one subject most parents would rather not talk about to their children — but if you don't, someone else probably will. Are you prepared to answer your teenager's questions about marijuana, alcohol and narcotics and to spot warning signals of drug abuse? Do you know which drugs cause physical dependence? Which have the highest immediate risk? There's a lot to learn about drugs, and to help meet the need the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare has prepared a comprehensive booklet explaining many aspects of drug use and abuse. For a free copy of the booklet, Questions & Answers About Drug Abuse, send a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 666E, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Somewhere mustangs still run free. Zane Grey will lead you there.

He's more mountain lion than mustang. With hellfire eyes. A mane like black flame. And a back that's never known a rope or rider.

The Indians call him Panquitch. And the old chiefs say that when you see him, the blood dances in your veins.

Zane Grey will lead you to Panquitch in Wild Horse Mesa, the story of two desperate men who fought to the death for the right to possess the King of Wild Horses.

If this is the kind of rousing adventure you enjoy, let us send you—for just $1—Wild Horse Mesa plus three other action-packed Zane Grey novels.

Riders of the Purple Sage is probably the most popular of all Westerns. Against a background of fiery action, a mysterious rider and the girl he loves gamble their lives in the winning of the West.

The Thundering Herd, in which a cowboy riding to the rescue of a kidnapped girl gets trapped between rampaging Comanches and miles of stampeding buffaloes.

The Hash Knife Outfit. The softest among them lived only to kill. What hope for their pretty hostage—or the riders trying to save her?

These are handsome hard-cover books, smartly bound in sunset red, desert tan and cavalry blue, with tinted page tops and golden stamping. They're the first of what could be a library of Western classics you'll be proud to own.

And to introduce you to The Zane Grey Library, we'll send you all four books (regularly $19.56) for only $1. We think you'll be impressed. And that you'll want to own others in the series as they become available.

They'll include: Wildfire, Arizona Ames, The Vanishing American, Fighting Caravans, Maverick Queen, Thunder Mountain, and more. Each written with the kind of hell-for-leather realism that makes Zane Grey the greatest Western writer of them all.

Accepting our four books for $1 puts you under no obligations. As a subscriber to the Zane Grey Library, you take only the books you want. You can reject any volume before or after you receive it. And you can cancel your subscription at any time.

A value you can't beat

Because we print in large quantities and sell directly to the public, we can offer our subscribers these beautiful, matching volumes for only $4.89 each—at a time when almost any other hardcover book costs at least $6 and many are $10-$15 or even more.

Send no money now. Just mail the coupon to get Wild Horse Mesa, Riders of the Purple Sage, The Thundering Herd and The Hash Knife Outfit—the whole shooting match—at the special introductory price of $1, plus postage and handling. The Zane Grey Library, Roslyn, N.Y. 11576.
