VEPCO Okays $6.72 Million Rate Increase

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — The Virginia Electric & Power Co. announced today it and 19 electric cooperatives it serves in Virginia and North Carolina have agreed to a $6.72 million rate increase.

Vepco had asked the Federal Power Commission in June to authorize a rate boost of $11.8 million. Months of negotiations resulted in agreement on the $6.72 million figure, the utility said.

Included in the settlement is an agreement by Vepco not to ask further rate increases from the co-ops — 13 in Virginia and six in North Carolina — before next June.

Vepco said the new rates are aimed at providing the utility with a rate of return of 9.6 per cent in its sales to the cooperatives, which in turn sell the power to their members.

The new rates will be effective Nov. 28. Vepco said revenues from the co-ops under the new rate schedule will be about $66 million for the current year.

Included in the agreement is a revision of Vepco's fuel adjustment charge that will base it on a three-month, average of fuel costs.

Joe D. Patterson, administrator of the North Carolina Rural Electrification Authority, said 45,022 North Carolina customers of the co-ops will be affected by Vepco's rate increase.

Vepco said this change "will reduce fluctuations in fuel adjustment charges."

The utility emphasized that the rate increases will not affect rates to its own retail, commercial and industrial customers in Virginia and North Carolina.

Vepco recently asked the FPC to approve a $9.21 million rate increase for its wholesale sales of power to municipalities.

Cooperatives affected by the new and higher rates are:

NORTH CAROLINA: Albemarle, Cape Hatteras, Edgecombe-Martin County, Halifax, Roanoke and Tideland.

VIRGINIA: B-A-R-C, Central Virginia, Community, Craig-Botetourt, Mecklenburg, Northern Neck, Northern Piedmont, Prince George, Prince William, Shenandoah Valley, Southside, Tri-County, and Virginia.

No Animals Lost In Fire

An early morning fire destroyed Greenville Livestock, Inc. on highway 30 north of Greenville today.

The first alarm was turned in at 1:15 a.m. with the Station-House Fire Department responding. Arriving on the scene, Chief Darrell Williams classed the blaze as a major fire and requested more units.

According to Pitt County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner, the fire was reported by a passing motorist.

Joyner said the owner was listed as W. B. Hargett, of Richlands.

Firemen battled the blaze for about two hours, bringing it under control in about 30 minutes.

Officials said there were no animals in the wood frame and tin structure at the time of the blaze.

There were no injuries reported, and investigation into the fire is continuing by State Bureau of Investigation along with the Pitt County Fire Marshal's office and the Pitt County Sheriff's department.

Damage to the large building was estimated at $150,000 by the Fire Marshal.

Departments responding to the fire were Station House, Belvoir, Stokes, Pactolus, Eastern Pines, and Bell Arthur.

Debt Ceiling Bill Filibuster Victim

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

The Senate deadlock over natural gas prices is threatening to block action on a crucial debt ceiling measure, leaving the government without the authority to borrow money and pay its bills.

Leaders of a filibuster aimed at stopping efforts to lift federal price controls on natural gas switched tactics Thursday and took aim at the debt ceiling bill in an effort to force a Senate vote on a gas-pricing compromise.

The new development came shortly before the Senate adjourned late Thursday night after efforts to reach agreement on the natural gas legislation fell through.

One of the leaders of the filibuster, Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., objected when Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd asked to temporarily set aside the energy bill for a vote on the debt ceiling legislation.

If the debt ceiling bill is not passed by Saturday morning, the beginning of the new fiscal year, the government will lose its authority to borrow money to pay its bills.

But terms under which the Senate is debating the gas bill prohibit interruptions for action on any other legislation without unanimous consent.

Abourezk acknowledged that in refusing to approve a temporary delay in debate his action had the effect of holding the debt ceiling bill hostage to the natural gas legislation.

"We won't let it come up. It's a form of leverage," Abourezk said.

And he said he plans to continue to block a vote on the debt ceiling unless the Senate dumps the proposal to free natural gas prices from federal control in favor of a compromise proposed by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash. The compromise has the support of the Democratic leadership.

Jackson's proposal would allow gas prices to rise more than President Carter wants but it would not remove price controls as Republicans and oilstate Democrats advocate.

Sen. Howard H. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, who had joined Abourezk in waging the filibuster against the gas deregulation effort, supported Abourezk's move to hold the debt ceiling bill hostage.

The House voted on Wednesday to set a debt ceiling of $773 billion through next September and the Senate Finance Committee approved the figure of $754 billion through next April 30.

Efforts to reach agreement on a natural gas compromise collapsed Thursday in a parliamentary tangle, leaving the Senate almost as deeply divided over this portion of the President's energy program as when debate began nearly two weeks ago.

Despite Carter's exhortation Thursday in a nationally televised news conference that inaction invites crisis, the Senate is stymied by the two competing proposals. Support appears to be almost evenly divided between the two plans and those on both sides were chasing after the votes of wavering senators.

Byrd spent the day shuttling between opposing camps in an unsuccessful quest for an agreement, then adjourned the Senate, saying he sees no chance of resolving the controversy before Saturday at the earliest.

End Of October Target Date In Pitt UF Drive

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County United Fund launched its 1977-78 solicitation campaign on Thursday with a luncheon at the Greenville Golf and Country Club.

A gathering of nearly 100 campaign volunteers and other UF personnel was on hand for the kick-off of the new fund drive.

Tom Taft, current president of the United Fund, said that the kick-off gathering represented the largest attendance figure for the organization's annual fall session.

He pointed out that the fund goal for the new drive is an ambitious $272,465, up substantially from last year's target figure of $248,418.

Taft introduced representatives of the Pitt industrial firms that play a key role in the fund drive and he also recognized the recipient agencies involved in the United Fund program.

The local attorney introduced the new chairman of the annual fund drive, Jerry Powell, city executive with North Carolina National Bank.

Powell, who recognized the personnel who will serve as chairmen of the various campaign divisions, urged the campaign staff to move as quickly as possible with the solicitation effort.

The chairman set "the end of October" as the target date for closing out the Pitt drive.

Dwyer Sump, executive director of North Carolina United Way, headquartered in Charlotte, was in town for Thursday's meeting.

JANE MANSEAU FUND

Jane Manseau, a former laboratory technician at Martin General Hospital in Williamston, is the wife of Thomas Manseau, a bricklayer, and the mother of three children. A few months ago, she had a kidney and bladder infection and her fever went so high that she was severely brain-damaged.

The 35-year-old woman, a resident of Rt. 1, Williamston, is now helpless. Her and her husband's relatives and friends help out with her care during the day so her husband can continue to work. She's often back in the hospital, either in Martin General or Duke, for further treatment. She breathes through a tube in her throat and must be fed and cared for in every way.

The children are a daughter, Jackie, 13, and two sons, Doug, nine, and Grant, six.

Friends and neighbors have started a Jane Manseau Fund at Wachovia Bank in Williamston. Hotline talked to Mrs. Mildred Barber, the fund chairman, who happened to be staying with Mrs. Manseau when we called. She said contributions from the immediate Williamston area have been generous, but that they have dropped off now and most of the money has been used. She said any help offered, monetary or otherwise, will be appreciated by Mr. Manseau, who is working hard to care for his wife and keep his family together. The Manseaus' address is Rt. 1, Box 93, Williamston. Contributions may be sent to them or to Mrs. Barber, Rt. 1, Box 107, Williamston, N.C. 27892.

Fears Underestimate Of N.C. Natural Gas Needs

By SUSAN STOLER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Underestimated needs of emergency natural gas this winter could lead to curtailments of high priority customers next summer, one North Carolina natural gas company spokesman said Thursday.

"While Public Service Co. might be able to meet winter needs, we might have to curtail next summer," said Kent Burns, attorney for Public Service.

Burns and other natural gas industry representatives Thursday dissected proposed emergency natural gas needs presented to the North Carolina Utilities Commission by the commission's public staff.

Since North Carolina will receive less than half the regular natural gas shipments needed to meet demands, more expensive emergency natural gas will be purchased to make up the difference. The commission will decide how much emergency gas is needed, and what gas customers will pay for the added costs. Eugene Curtis, operations engineer with the commission public staff, presented figures, based on a 10 per cent colder than normal winter, to show how much emergency gas would be needed by Public Service and two other gas companies.

Curtis' figures were under those submitted by the companies, each of which presented different major criticisms of the staff's estimates.

"If we're wrong in our figures," Burns said during a break in the hearing, "The only thing to do is just draw down less on the reserves. But if they're wrong," he said the company could be 4 billion cubic feet of gas short in the summer.

Public Service based its supply needs on a 24 per cent colder than normal winters, compared to the public staff's 10 per cent basis. North Carolina Natural Gas used a 20 per cent colder than normal winter factor in computing its needs, while Piedmont estimated a 15 per cent colder than normal season.

Donald McCoy, representing North Carolina Natural, said his firm is worried about lowered pressure in pipelines due to insufficient gas supplies.

"We lost the whole town of Washington (N.C.) and it took three days to get the lines restored," he said of one incident when the gas pressure dropped too low to sustain a constant flow.

Piedmont Natural Gas attorney Jerry Amos said his firm serves communities in both North and South Carolina, and must try to make utilities commissions in both states happy.

The public staff recommended that Piedmont allocate a higher percentage of its regular gas supply to North Carolina than the company has felt necessary.

"There's no way to tell Piedmont how much gas to buy until that problem is resolved," Amos said. The commission took under advisement Amos' request for discussion of the interstate allocation conflict.

Curtis and at least 10 other witnesses were scheduled to return today for further questioning before the commission hears closing arguments.

Claims Per-Pound Profits On Tobacco No Better Than In '38

By CHARLES WOLFE
Associated Press Writer
LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — "The profit per pound of tobacco is no better now than it was in 1938," said burley grower W. Henry Graddy III, one of a group of growers seeking to form their own marketing cooperative.

"In the last 20 years, the price of burley ($1.17 per pound) has barely doubled," Graddy said Thursday in an interview. "All of our expenses have gone up three, four and five times in that period."

Graddy, of Versailles, was one of about 35 burley growers from central and eastern Kentucky who met Wednesday night in Paris, Ky., to discuss formation of a cooperative.

Another meeting is scheduled Tuesday night in Lexington, he said.

Graddy said the cooperative would contract with warehouses to receive, weigh and display looseleaf tobacco.

The cooperative would establish a processing facility where the tobacco would be graded.

Farmers first would be paid an artificially low price for their tobacco. After grading, they would receive a second payment, based on the grade.

The low initial payment would preclude overpayment, Graddy said.

The proposal was in response to what the growers charged was an organized effort to kill the looseleaf tobacco program.

The meeting followed the Kentucky Farm Bureau's announcement that it was suspending the experimental looseleaf program for at least one year.

The program had been controversial since its inception three years ago, with opponents charging that sales of ungraded looseleaf tobacco would kill the federal price support program.

Advocates, however, cite advantages to the farmer — lower costs and less processing time, compared to traditional hand-tying—and charge warehousemen with conspiring to maximize profits.

Hand-tied bundles require less floor space than loose sheets or bales and, therefore, bring a higher total auction price.

"We would use the existing warehouse system, but not the existing auction system," Graddy said. "There's a difference."

He said the cooperative probably would be headquartered in Paris, but that nothing definite had been decided.

"Our major thrust is to develop export markets, exploiting our exclusive advantage of efficiency in preparation and marketing that the other trade would not have," he said.

"We have a significant savings (with looseleaf marketing) and these savings allow us to compete in the world with (foreign) production."

Graddy attacked the theory that looseleaf marketing endangers price supports.

"That's a bugaboo that is used over and over to create fear," he said.

Opponents of looseleaf, including U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland, "are people who have no experience with it," Graddy said.

Graddy said he did not know how much money and tobacco would be pledged to the new cooperative and added that much work remains to be done to get it out of the planning stage.

Rap Evaluation Of Pembroke U.

PEMBROKE, N.C. (AP) — Pembroke State University officials have taken issue with a report that more than two-thirds of the teacher-education programs offered at the campus as "below satisfactory."

Howard Dean, vice chancellor of academic affairs at Pembroke, described as a "complete misrepresentation" reports that a team of University of North Carolina officials and 24 out-of-state consultants had given low marks to 69 per cent of the school's teacher-training programs.

Dean said the prime areas in which Pembroke produces 85 per cent of its teaching graduates — elementary education, English, art, health and physical education — were rated "high in quality and high in productivity" in the report.

Areas in which Pembroke produces few teachers — Spanish, French, economics, chemistry, sociology and political science — were included in the overall figure of 69 per cent even though those programs are being phased out, Dean said.

"We recommended to the University of North Carolina Board of Governors that these latter ones be discontinued," Dean said.

Dean also said reports that the consultants visited Pembroke were not true and that data for the report was accumulated by the school itself. He also cited several parts of the computer analysis of the data which he said were in error.

"The report seems to be taking the total number of teacher-education programs and equating them with all the rest," said Charles Jenkins, assistant to the vice chancellor and former director of student teaching at the school.

"Thus, they are equating French, in which we have produced few teachers, with elementary education, in which we produce many," Jenkins said.

More than half of the 410 persons in last May's graduating class at Pembroke received their degrees in teacher education.

Ingram Going Back To Court

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Insurance Commissioner John R. Ingram is about to be back in court again with the insurance industry.

The state Reinsurance Facility, which provides liability auto insurance to drivers considered too great a risk for one company to carry alone, decided Thursday to sue Ingram over his refusal this week to approve a portion of the facility's revised operating manual.

At issue is the part of the manual dealing with insurance agents which are cancelled by their companies.

Iceberg Chunks To Cool Drinks

By PEGGY ANDERSEN
Associated Press Writer
ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — As scientists ponder the use of icebergs at a conference in Iowa next week, they will be watching their subject melt in their cocktail glasses.

Wet-suited divers planned to slip into the icy waters of a lake at the foot of Alaska's Portage Glacier south of here today to commandeer a 2,500-pound ice slab from a floating glacial iceberg.

The ice will be used at the First International Conference on Iceberg Utilization at Iowa State University Sunday through Thursday. Representatives of 18 nations are expected to attend.

After the divers wrap a three-cubic-meter hunk of ice in nets, the chilly package will be slung from a helicopter and flown to Anchorage International Airport. From there, a commercial airliner will fly it to Minneapolis, and then it will be trucked the last leg of its journey to Ames, Iowa.

"They're using ice from up here because it's the most available freshwater ice," said Ed Cronick of Anchorage, coordinator of the operation. "It does make the best cocktail ice."

Glaciers winding up in salt water tend to be porous and the salt tang could be an unwelcome addition to some drinks, he said.

He said Portage Glacier is a relatively small, young glacier, with ice in the small lake at its foot about 200 years old. Ice from larger glaciers is thousands of years old, he said.

The $7,500 cost of the conference's centerpiece is being underwritten by Youssef Elakeel of Saudi Arabia, according to conference spokesman William Berkland of Iowa State.

Berkland noted for the record that Iowa is "about as far from a glacier as you can get."

Some 200 guests are expected from Saudi Arabia, the Arab Emirates, Australia, Canada, Chile, Egypt, England, France, Germany, Greece, Holland, Italy, Libya, Mexico, Monaco, Sweden, Switzerland and the United States.

Grimesland Grant OK'd

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Congressman Walter B. Jones today announced the approval by the Farmers Home Administration, of an industrial development grant of $25,500 to the Town of Grimesland.

This grant is to be used for water service to Grimesland Plant Foods Inc. The town's central water system consists of a 300 gallon per minute well about 374 feet deep, a 75,000 gallon elevated storage tank, and distribution system.

The proposed project will include the construction of a 200 gallon per minute deep well, well pump, house, and distribution mains to connect to the existing system.

The additional well is necessary to furnish water to the industry so that it may expand its operation.

The improvement will also benefit the new employees at the plant, Jones said.

An Essence For Deer Hunters

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A Texas firm has developed a new essence for deer hunters to mask their scent. It smells exactly like fresh skunk spray.

"It's just like the real juice," says John Adams, a representative of Skunk Skreen, the firm that is marketing the artificial scent developed by a chemist at Texas A&M.

The firm advises hunters not to put the skunk essence directly on their clothes, but on a stump or log. A stick is even better because it can be moved if the wind shifts.

The chemical comes in two bottles which can be mixed in the field to produce the scent. Separately, the solutions have no offensive smell.

Adams says the smell of skunk is "a natural woods odor and the other animals pay no attention to it."

Fashion Reigns On Rainy Days

PRACTICAL LUXURY—Rainy days call for a fashion strategy that stands up to soggy weather. Marriage Choking From Smoking Wife

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: When I first dated my wife she was 16. On our third date, when she asked me to buy her a pack of cigarettes, I told her I thought girls who smoked looked like tramps, and that was the last time I'd take her out. Three months later she called and told me she'd quit smoking, so I started dating her again. We dated for three years during which time she never smoked in my presence, so with a solemn promise that she'd never smoke again, we were married. She kept her promise for three years. Then I started to find evidence that she was smoking again. When I confronted her, she denied it. For the last 10 years, she's been smoking openly and I detest it. What can I do? I've told her it was useless for her to spend a fortune on expensive clothes because when she lights a cigarette, she looks like a $20 hooker. I have nothing against hookers. In fact, if I could find one who didn't smoke I could use her services because my wife's tobacco habit has certainly put a crimp in our love life.

DETESTS CIGARETTES

DEAR DETESTS: What can you do? Love her or leave her. But don't nag her, or she'll increase her smoking as an excuse to calm her frazzled nerves.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 48 and my fiancé is 55. I've been divorced 15 years, and his wife died five years ago. We've been going together for two years and plan to marry soon. He always compliments me on the way I look. I do dress nicely and am always perfectly groomed. Now for my problem: When I was in my teens, I was very ill and all my hair fell out. I have no eyelashes, eyebrows, and not a hair on my head. I am completely hairless. I wear false eyelashes and a wig, and I paint my eyebrows on. I'm a very honest person, and don't like to keep this from him, but I'm afraid of how he'll react. I've started to tell him several times, but couldn't get the words out. My mother says I should wait until after we're married to tell him. My father says I should tell him now. Do you think it would change his feelings for me? He says he loves me, and I know I love him. Please help me.

WIGGED OUT

DEAR WIGGED: Tell him. If it changes his feelings for you, you're better off knowing it now. If he really loves you, it won't matter. (Many women marry bald MEN.)

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I had dinner with my parents, my brother and sister-in-law, and their 14-month-old baby. For two and one-half hours, we talked either about or to the baby, who was allowed to toddle around the dinner table the entire time. We all had to watch our food and coffee every minute. There was absolutely no chance to visit. All the conversation was centered around the baby. At first I was just annoyed, but then I became bored stiff and, finally, angry. Am I intolerant? Abby, please say something about parents who monopolize the conversation with talk about their children and permit the child to be the center of attention for an entire evening.

BORED IN LONG BEACH

DEAR BORED: Your complaint is neither uncommon nor unjustified. Parents, please note. Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclosure stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Find Programs Highly Relevant

East Carolina University trustees were told that the university has been commended for two programs.

ECU was cited for developing programs to accommodate handicapped students and in remedial education.

The programs were cited as "models for the state university system" in a long-range report to the UNC Board of Governors. The board last week heard of the praise from Vice Chancellor for Planning and Administration Robert L. Holt and Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs John M. Howell.

Vice Chancellor for Health Affairs Edwin Monroe also reported that ECU had been commended for the quality of its allied health education programs.

Both the allied health and the programs for the handicapped are comparatively new on the local campus, in relation to the university's founding in 1907. Beginning with nothing in each case, the university planners have been able to develop programs which relate well to the modern world.

We can be happy that East Carolina University is proceeding well in these two important fields, and that progress has been noted at the UNC administrative level.

Gift To Art Museum Is Well-Directed

A drive has begun to raise $5 million for additional construction on the new State Museum of Art.

The private contributions will be in addition to the $10.75 million already appropriated by the State Legislature.

The Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation has pledged $1.5 million to start the campaign off.

Contributions to the fund will be money well directed. The State Museum of Art is something we can all take pride in, and it is a good thing that private contributions will help build it.

Medicaid Costs Spiraling

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—There is no end in sight for the spiraling cost of Medicaid in North Carolina.

Members of a joint committee of the General Assembly now launching a probe of medical cost containment measures with particular concern for the Medicaid program have been greeted with some startling information.

Just six months ago cost estimates for the present fiscal year were set at $279.2 million, and for 1978-79 at $306.8 million—a total outlay of $586 million for the biennium.

Legislators working on the budget in the 1977 General Assembly trimmed the spending this fiscal year to $294.6 million. Major cut was dental care, a controversial action still causing ripples.

Even so, the budget for 1978-79 shot up to $322.2 million; $15.5 million more than the preliminary estimate. The total two-year spending projection soared to $617 million.

Up Again

Now comes a report from the legislative Fiscal Research Division which says, "Although the approved biennial budget is $31 million over the original departmental request, it appears that actual expenditures may still exceed the budget by as much as $28 million based on the latest projections."

If so, total two-year spending will top $645 million.

This condition, in a nutshell why a legislative committee shared by State Senator Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, and co-chaired by State Rep. Ted Kaplan, D-Forsyth, has agreed to tackle the controversial topic of putting the brakes on medical costs.

John L. Allen, Jr., director of the General Assembly Fiscal Research Division, said there has been a steady demand from legislators for up-to-the-minute data on Medicaid.

And with good cause, Allen says. At this rate, the subject is without question the most significant one facing state government.

Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr. agrees, and has stated that given the present direction, the program will bankrupt the State Treasury.

In 1970-71, Medicaid cost $98.1 million, and costs have risen steadily even through the period of wage and price controls in 1973-74. Federal funds pay about 68 per cent of the total cost, with the state putting up most of the remainder, and county governments contributing a portion.

created by the law in North Carolina. Federal statutes require Medicaid only for the truly indigent who qualify for welfare, and it can be limited to hospital and physician services, lab and x-ray work, and skilled nursing facilities. The federal government will, however, put up the money if a state wishes to cover more things for more people.

North Carolina has done just that: also eligible are the medically needy who have some limited income and face major medical expenses. This state also adds on a host of services such as chiropractors, opticians, family planning, home health care, various clinics, and nursing homes not classified in the skilled care category.

The result, researchers now report: decreased cost of hospitals as a percentage of the total, while nursing home long-term care expands. Also, the welfare cases now make up a small case load, while the medically needy which is only some 17 per cent of the total recipient count costs 44 per cent of the total outlay.

WASHINGTON TODAY

Drawing A Lobbyist Line

By WALTER R. MEARS

AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — Around Congress, everybody talks about lobbyists, but nobody has yet decided what to do about them. So far, there isn't even a clear rule to determine who they are.

Making that determination is not as simple as it sounds.

There's little doubt in the case of a Washington lawyer or a former member of Congress, who earns his pay by trying to influence legislation in behalf of his clients.

But it's more difficult to draw a line in the case of a citizen or a group working on a shoestring budget to influence Congress in behalf of a cause. And that happens every day, on issues that range from abortion to taxes to a dozen other topics.

This is a big season for lobbying, and for angry complaints about the business of influencing Congress.

"It is time for the public interest to prevail over the special interest lobbyists," said President Carter, trying to defend his battered energy program against crippling Senate amendments.

He said the lobbying by oil and gas interests for an end to federal regulation of natural gas prices shows "the special interests are trying to block enactment of the entire energy program."

Then there is the gathering battle over the treaty to yield U.S. control of the Panama Canal at the end of this century.

Before that one is settled, conservative opposition lobbies may spend more than $750,000 trying to block ratification. They are relying heavily on campaign techniques, using mass mailings, advertising and speechmaking to try to persuade constituents to press their senators for votes against the treaty.

Carter is certainly not defenseless against such lobbying, at the Capitol or around the country. His words carry a lot more clout than those of any dozen spokesmen for special causes. His telephone calls go through immediately, while the lobbyist often cools his heels in an outer Senate office.

Furthermore, the White House has its own lobbyists, five deployed on Capitol Hill out of a congressional liaison staff that totals 20. The Cabinet departments have personnel to work for their legislation.

Still, it can be a difficult matchup for any administration, particularly when a corps of skilled and well-financed advocates goes to work on an issue like natural gas prices.

Congress has been trying, so far without success, to shape legislation that would regulate lobbyists, primarily by requiring full public disclosure of their activities. Such a bill almost passed the last session, but adjournment came before agreement.

However, campaign finance limits and disclosure laws have eliminated, or at least controlled, what had been a major route to influence in Congress for the well-heeled lobbyist or interest. They can't donate enough money to warrant special treatment.

The law that is on the books now is composed largely of a loophole. Enacted in 1946, it requires the registration of individuals and groups seeking to influence legislation. But it applies only to persons employed for the "principal purpose" of lobbying, and it says no more than that about what a lobbyist is.

Furthermore, the Supreme Court has held that the law covers only lobbying that involves direct contact with members of Congress.

That is not usually the most effective way to influence Congress. Pressure from home, where the votes are, can be a lot more effective.

While the current law requires lobbyists to register with Congress and report their expenditures, it doesn't ask how they spent the money, who they lobbied, or why.

Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., said last year that while 10,000 people may be paid to lobby, fewer than 2,000 of them are registered. Common Cause, which is

Strength For Today

BELIEVE FIRST

When success eludes us we often have a haunting sense of failure and say to ourselves in great earnestness, "Try harder!"

But the Christian gospel does not say, "Try harder." It says, "Believe harder." The power of one's Christian life arises from faith, and faith is based on belief. This does not mean that a person who has Christian faith can lie back and declare that he is going to let things take their course, confident that everything will turn out all right. Things certainly will not turn out all right under these circumstances. There is a place for effort in the program of the Christian life, but belief comes first.

Everything in life is part of a sequence. We must get the factors of life in their right order if we are going to make them contribute to happiness and success. And in everything which relates to the Christian's activities in the world, belief takes primacy.

Only On A CIA Payroll

WASHINGTON — Carl Bernstein's revelation that 400 members of the press were also working, in some way, for the CIA overseas in the 1950s and 1960s has made every newspaperman who was stationed abroad suspect.

I worked in Paris for 14 years for the International

Edition of the Herald Tribune and, ever since the story broke, even I have been asked if I was involved in any overt or covert operations concerning our most famous secret service.

The answer is, "Not to my knowledge." I'm fairly sure of it because the salary the Paris Herald Tribune gave me was way below the prevailing CIA rates for reporters, and I have to believe the chintzy Herald Tribune management was paying me out of its own pocket.

I should have had some suspicions, even in those days, that several of my colleagues were working for somebody beside the papers they pretended to be accredited to.

One American friend was living in an 18-room villa in Vienna, with three servants and a chauffeur. I never could understand it, because the only paper he was working for, at the time, was a weekly magazine published in Terre Haute, Ind.

I once asked him about his elegant lifestyle, and he replied, "The Terre Haute publisher believes its overseas bureau chiefs should live well."

I should have smelled something fishy when he once asked me to take an article he had written back to Paris and hide it in a tree near the American Embassy.

"Is that how you file your stories?" I asked.

"Yes," he replied. "It's much faster than sending them over the teletype."

"But the article is on microfilm," I said.

He got angry. "Look, you file your stories the way you want to, but don't tell me how to file mine."

Possibly one of the reasons the CIA never sought to recruit me is that they may have thought I would not make a very good agent.

I recall going to Carlsbad in Czechoslovakia for a film festival in the 1950s. When I returned, I had a visit in my office from two very well-dressed men who said they

Big Impact In SEC Decision

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Within the next three months a decision is due that will have manifold consequences for investors, publicly owned companies, the Securities and Exchange Commission and the nation's stock exchanges.

The decision, to be made by the SEC, will involve the largest substantive issue that agency ever faced, according to William Batten, chairman of the New York Stock Exchange.

It might even be bigger for the exchange; it could mean its survival or death.

The exchange, however, is relatively helpless. It must sit and listen to the tick of the clock. Accused of crying wolf too often, its credibility on the issue involved has been diminished. It must rely on friends for help.

Those friends — corporations and investors especially — have sometimes failed to realize, said Batten in an interview, that their interests are entwined with the fate of NYSE Rule 390, which the SEC has proposed repealing by Jan. 1.

Rule 390 requires exchange brokers to bring their buy and sell orders to the exchange floor. That is, it prevents them from setting their own private price deals; it compels them to expose their orders to the full flow of bids and offers on its auction market.

Rule 390 is the linchpin of the auction market. Pull it, and the machinery could disassemble like the one-horse shay.

The SEC has already indicated the rule might be anticompetitive. Mandated by Congress to develop a competitive national securities market, the SEC and others tend to view Rule 390 as self-serving.

Batten said he concedes the anticompetitive feature of the rule but he points out, without contradiction, that it can also be defended as being competitive in that each order is exposed to every order, resulting in pricing efficiency.

"The most important competition is the competition among orders," he observed, adding that no market now offers more pricing interaction from more varied sources than does the exchange.

Should the rule be repealed before the national market system, a linkage of the existing exchanges and dealers, is in place — a system, more than incidentally, that the exchange has been accused of delaying — the securities industry might be fragmented.

Orders would be "taken upstairs" to brokers' offices, said Batten. That is, brokers would become dealers for their own accounts, buying blocks of stocks and selling them in their own markets at their own prices.

As Batten sees it, transactions might become more costly because these dealers, selling from their own inventories, must be paid for their added risks. Surveillance and liquidity would be impaired. Small dealers would be squeezed out. Relatively inactive stocks would have even less of a market. And public confidence, and therefore the ability of corporations to raise funds, would be damaged.

"It doesn't make much sense if you wish to unify the system," he said. Whereas the SEC is mandated to create a national market, he

N-Bomb Awaits Signing

By JEFFREY MILLS

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is giving President Carter approval to produce the neutron bomb, a new atomic weapon that opponents fear will greatly increase the risk of all-out nuclear war.

The House of Representatives on Thursday approved an authorization bill to enable the President to spend money for the neutron bomb if he chooses to do so. The Senate previously approved a similar bill.

The neutron bomb is a small warhead that would be placed on Lance missiles and artillery shells. It produces twice the deadly radiation of a conventional nuclear bomb but less than a tenth as much explosive power, heat and fallout. This means the bomb can kill people while causing little damage to buildings.

The warhead is designed to replace the approximately 7,000 nuclear warheads now deployed in Europe.

Carter has not announced whether he intends to approve production of the controversial weapon, but he did ask for the authorization that both houses have now granted.

The key House vote came on an amendment by Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y. The amendment would have blocked Energy Research and Development Administration money from being used for the neutron bomb. But the amendment was defeated 297 to 109.

Weiss and his supporters said the neutron bomb would "lower the threshold" to nuclear war. They said military leaders might feel less inhibited about using the neutron bomb since it has less destructive power than large-scale nuclear weapons. That could make it easier to introduce nuclear weapons into an altercation that could touch off a nuclear holocaust, opponents said.

"I am frightened to death of this weapon," said Rep. Ron Dellums, D-Calif. "Once you start down the road to a nuclear war, there is no turning back. Once we make nuclear war thinkable, we make it possible, and once we make it possible we make it inevitable."

But supporters of the weapon said the neutron bomb is preferable to conventional nuclear weapons since it is less destructive to property.

House Weighing Abortion Compromise

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of the House are studying a Senate compromise that would expand the use of tax money for abortions while dropping a controversial "medical necessity" provision.

A House-Senate conference committee trying to settle the question of when the federal government should pay for abortions set another meeting next Monday after failing to reach agreement in a three-hour session Thursday.

The committee members were freed, however, from any concern that their delays would halt checks for welfare recipients and — at least for the time being — for hundreds of thousands of federal workers.

House members of the panel asked for time to consider the compromise proposed by Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, the chief Senate negotiator.

Under his plan, the government would pay for abortions when a woman's life was in danger, in cases of rape or incest or if the woman or the fetus would suffer serious, permanent health damage.

This language would replace the Senate's insistence on paying for abortions when "medically necessary," a provision House critics say is too liberal.

The House has backed the present law providing federal money only when a woman's life would be threatened by a full-term pregnancy.

The dispute is holding up $60.2 billion to run the departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare for the fiscal year that begins Saturday.

The impasse — now in its third month — means the agencies must curtail grants, contracts, travel and administrative expenses, says Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, head of the Senate conferees.

But officials say unemployment benefits plus Medicare, Medicaid and Supplemental Security Income payments won't end because final approval of the appropriation is anticipated.

Nor will the 240,000 employees of the two departments be immediately affected.

Paychecks that begin going to those workers Tuesday will be for two weeks' work in mid-September.

But the next round of checks, due Oct. 18, for the last week of September and the first week of October, would be for only one week if a compromise on the abortion measure isn't reached by then.

Social Security payments, which come from a separate trust fund, are not affected by the impasse.

The Magnuson proposal received a mixed reception. Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., sponsor of the language adopted by the full Senate, said he had reservations about the plan and wanted time to study it.

Rep. Edward Roybal, D-Calif., predicted that it would not be adopted by the House even if the conferees accepted it.

Rep. Daniel Flood, the head of the House conferees, said it was "opening up the door again." The Pennsylvania Democrat found fault with each of the Senate conferees' proposals, saying they were too lenient.

Medicaid paid for about 300,000 abortions last year — most for poor women — at cost of $500 million.

were from the Dulles Broadcasting Company in Waco, Texas. They told me they were unable to attend the film festival and asked if I would brief them on it.

I said, "Certainly, what do you want to know?"

"How many anti-aircraft guns did you see around the festival hall?"

"None that I can remember," I said. "There were searchlights at the film festival, but there always are."

"Were there any land mines near your hotel?" the other one asked.

"Beats me," I said. "I didn't see anyone step on one."

"How many Soviet divisions did you see?"

"You mean in the films?"
"No, you dummy. Real Soviet divisions with armor."

"Hey, what's that got to do with a film festival?" I asked.

"It's hopeless, Joe," one of them said as he got up.

The other one got up, too. "I told the Company we'd be wasting our time." And they stomped out.

Had it occurred to me I was being tested, I certainly would have been more cooperative. But in those days I really believed there was a Dulles Broadcasting Company in Waco, Texas. Heaven knows I could have used the extra CIA money.

I don't know which of my fellow correspondents worked for the CIA and which didn't. But in the late '40s and '50s I played a lot of poker with them. And I now suspect several of them were more than they said they were. How do I know? Well, some of them used to stay in the hand to the very end, with a pair of twos. It dawned on me just the other day that only a guy on a CIA payroll could afford to do that.

lobbying for a new lobby disclosure law, says "millions of dollars spent to influence legislation go unreported."

But there is another side to the issue, and it is spelled out in a study by Hope Eastman, a Washington lawyer who used to work for the American Civil Liberties Union. She warns against sweeping legislation that could, in the name of lobby reform, infringe on citizen rights to petition the government for redress of grievances.

"The Congress appears to have been unduly influenced by the lobbyists' ugly image," she writes in an assessment published by the American Enterprise Institute.

After a dozen tries, Congress may settle next year on a lobby reform law. The administration favors a bill requiring registration and detailed disclosure of lobbying by organizations that spend more than $1,250 a quarter at it, or invest $5,000 in efforts to generate constituent pressure on Congress. There would be less exacting disclosure rules for smaller, less expensive lobbying efforts.

The Indians could send a rallying call many, many miles by drums. Each drummer, stationed on a lonely ridge, would listen for the sound of distant drums, and relay the message to others waiting across the valley. Overnight a dozen tribes could be rallied to a common cause.

We don't need such crude methods of communication today. Men with a common purpose can join forces around the world at a pre-arranged time.

BELLS AROUND THE WORLD

World Wide Communion Sunday is such an expression of unity. In every Christian land the church bells will summon men and women to the Lord's Supper on this Sunday.

And the universality of this great religious event will not depend on bells relaying the message from town to town. It will depend on folks like yourself coming to their Church to receive this Holy Sacrament.

Three Hundred Pages Of New Farm And Food Aid Policies

By BRIAN B. KING
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Now that President Carter has signed into law 300 pages of new farm and food aid policies, the Agriculture Department's lawyers, economists, county agents and clerks are writing the regulations that bring policy to the people.

In a Rose Garden signing ceremony Thursday, President Carter called the huge farm bill "a great boon, not only for American farmer families but for anyone who consumes our products."

Carter had threatened vetoes five times as the legislation moved through Congress. It came out at about $11 billion in federal costs, some $2 billion above his original proposals for renewing and revising all the major USDA statutes.

But he praised the congressional Democrats and Republicans, consumer advocates, farm-group leaders and nutritionists who fashioned the bill during almost three years' work with two administrations.

He said the final figures were only about $300 million above the spending level he had in mind.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, and Rep. Robert Giammo, D-Conn., the budget committee chairmen, issued statements before the signing that urged Carter to ensure that spending is kept to the minimum.

Jack Carlson, vice president and chief economist of the Chamber of Commerce, warned USDA not to set market price supports for grain and cotton so high they endanger sales to foreign consumers.

"American farmers must not be priced out of world markets because of the new farm bill.

Under the bill, the administration should not set (those) rates above market prices and thus allow foreign competitors to take sales and income from American farmers," Carlson said.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, however, expressed the same fears throughout the drafting of the law and is expected to closely follow that approach.

But Tony Dechant, National Farmers Union president, said after the ceremony, "Protests will erupt and likely accelerate until something positive is done either administratively or by Congress to bolster farm prices and income."

Overall farm income this year is expected to drop below $20 billion for the first time since 1972. But record federal payments under the bill to wheat farmers, suffering from the price-depressing effects of three consecutive bumper crops, should help.

Next spring, the 5.1 million households receiving aid from the $5.4-billion food stamp program will face major changes in the way their incomes and benefits are calculated and new rules that require them to seek work. Average benefits are not expected to change.

The working poor and urbanites with high shelter costs will receive more aid. But some 340,000 families with incomes above the official poverty lines will be stricken from the rolls. Most of them live in northeastern cities.

Carter said the revisions will make the program simple, fair, easy to administer and free from "the pervasive threat of fraud."

PAIN, BUT ALL SAVED — Mrs. Beverley French was comforted by her husband, Peter, as she was taken to an ambulance Wednesday in Bothell, Wash., after a fire destroyed their $45,000 home. She was burned while hunting for her two-year-old son, who hid in the house when it caught fire. The fire started when a chair was ignited by a fireplace. Mrs. French managed to find Elliott and flee through a back door with him and another son, Eric. Boys escaped injury. (AP Laserphoto)

Thirsty Rats And Ants Invading Many Homes

By SUSAN AGER
Associated Press Writer
ORINDA, Calif. (AP) — Thirsty rats and ants are slipping into many San Francisco Bay area homes looking for water made scarce during California's two-year drought.

"We've had more calls about rats, and they've been looking for water, definitely," said Peter Davidson, service manager for Corky's Pest Control here.

Homes in the bay area have been under orders to ration water for about a year.

Exterminators say calls to rid homes of rats and ants have gone up by as much as 40 percent in the past three or four months.

Davidson said the pests have prompted calls from homeowners who never had problems before. Many of them have creeks near their homes that have dried up, he said.

"And they've stopped watering their lawns, so there was no water out there the rats could get and no puddles, either," Davidson said.

"They're looking for dripping faucets, anything like that," he said. "And the calls aren't from slum areas, but from nice neighborhoods like Walnut Creek, Concord and Moraga," all suburbs east of Oakland.

There has been no indication from health officials as to whether the pests pose a health hazard.

Bill Wallace, chief deputy agricultural commissioner of Contra Costa County, said reports of the pest invasion are "not horror stories, exactly, but it's really something of a nuisance this year."

He also said his agency has received "far more calls than usual about ants" this year.

Carl Koehler, an entomologist with the University of California in Berkeley, said the school's extension service has received about twice as many complaint calls about ants than it did last year.

The major culprit, he said, are Argentine ants. Those pests, Koehler said, are about a 16th of an inch long, and may travel in packs of thousands. The drought has forced them into backyards to sip water intended for the lawn or shrubs.

Once in the yards, they quickly move into the homes in search of sweets, their favorite food, Koehler added.

Massive walls of Zimbabwe's Great Enclosure: like all Rhodesian landmark's buildings they're constructed without mortar, of granite blocks cut without the use of metal tools.

Narrow passages lead between high, curving walls of buildings inside Great Enclosure. Buildings were both temples and dwellings.

ZIMBABWE

Zimbabwe means "venerated houses"—and now the name of these magnificent ruins of an almost vanished civilization is the African name black Rhodesians give their country. Zimbabwe is in southeast Rhodesia. It comprises the extensive granite remains of a city-community about which much is conjectured but very little known for sure. It may have been built about 800 years ago, or over a thousand years ago. No inscriptions or writings have been found to make its history clear. But theories abound, some of them linking the ruins with the Queen of Sheba, or King Solomon, the Phoenicians or the ancient Egyptians.

Visitors walk through western enclosure of Acropolis—a hilltop complex on dominant ridge overlooking valley. Twelve excavated layers show several hundred years of occupation.

BULL MOOSE ON THE LOOSE — State Game Warden Vincent F. Caracciolo creeps up on a tranquilized 900-lb. bull moose in Worcester, Mass., Thursday, and then, with rope in hand, lassoes the beast. The animal, described as obviously "confused and perhaps sick", was apprehended for romping through a residential area of town after a chase of several blocks. (AP Laserphoto)

Hunting Only If Handicapped

SORUM, S.D. (AP) — Most hunters won't be allowed on the Jerde ranch when antelope and deer seasons open soon. It has been reserved for the handicapped, many of them in wheelchairs.

"This is the first year we've reserved the entire place just for the handicapped," said Douglas Jerde, 32, who with his father, Bennett, runs the 3,000-acre cattle ranch near this northwestern South Dakota town.

"We've had regular hunters every year ... but they will have to find a new place now," Jerde said.

"On occasion we've had handicapped hunters here, and they enjoyed it," he added. "We got to thinking there are others around who also would enjoy it if they had a place to go."

Jerde said only eight handicapped hunters, each with one assistant, would be allowed on the ranch for Saturday's open-

$111.47 Day For Market

The Greenville Tobacco Market averaged $111.47 per hundred pounds Thursday as 696,706 pounds sold for $776,622.

J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor of the Tobacco Board of Trade, said that the increased volume of non-descript tobacco resulted in 27.45 per cent of total sales going to the government loan program.

Top practical price paid was $1.65 per pound, he reported, with the buying companies purchasing several piles of top quality leaf for as high as $1.70 per pound.

In addition to the non-descript tobacco on the warehouse floor, offerings included leaf, cutters, primings and lugs, Bryan pointed out.

For the season, the market has sold 33,219,540 pounds for $39,284,972, an average of $118.26 per hundred pounds.

The sales supervisor said that beginning Monday, sales will start at 9:30 a.m. and continue at that hour for the rest of the season.

GOSPELSING

GRIMESLAND — There will be a gospel sing at the Grimesland Free Will Baptist Church Saturday night at 7:30.

The program will feature the Cavaliers of Washington.

ASU Drops 2 Programs

BOONE — Appalachian State University will drop two degree programs this year and take steps to upgrade several other programs in teacher education.

This action is being taken under the recommendation of a special year-long study of teacher preparation through the University of North Carolina system.

The study, which is scheduled to be finalized Thursday by the Committee on Planning of the UNC Board of Governors, tentatively calls for 46 degree programs to be discontinued over the next two years by 15 UNC schools.

According to the Committee, cutbacks are slated because the programs are not needed and produce few graduates.

"This is a good thing. The University ought to weed out programs that are non-productive," said Appalachian Chancellor Herbert Wey.

"This is something that we ought to do ourselves and which we are now working to do."

"Appalachian supports plans to look at all our programs. We plan a continuous look at and weeding out of non-productive programs," Wey added.

Homecoming At Church Sunday

Homecoming will be observed at the Mt. Pleasant Christian Church Sunday.

The day will be highlighted by music by Larry Jones, church organist, Mike Berry, choir director, and the Mt. Pleasant Adult Choir.

Following morning services, dinner will be served on the church grounds.

At 3:30 p.m. Sunday, the Adult Choir will leave Greenville enroute to Roanoke Rapids to sing in a combined choir concert with the First Methodist Church, Roanoke Rapids.

John Simpson, minister at Mt. Pleasant, invites the public to attend.

$116.80 Day On Farmville Mart

FARMVILLE — There was an increase in more usable tobacco on the Farmville market yesterday which was responsible for a substantial increase in the average as compared with Wednesday's sale.

More lugs and cutter grades were on the floor yesterday than in some time.

Several sheets of cutter grades brought $1.65 to $1.74 per pound and all were company purchases.

Yesterday the market sold 388,337 pounds for $453,581. This was an average sale of $116.80 per hundred pounds.

To date, it has sold 20,372,609 pounds for $24,010,680 and a season average of $117.86.

Low Unemployment Trend In Pitt Said Seasonable; Up By Winter

By DEBBIE JACKSON
Reflector Staff Writer

It seems like the only people that waited in the unemployment office in September were the people who worked there.

The state unemployment rate for the month was 1.9 percent a week ago with Pitt County following close behind, at approximately 2 percent, according to James E. Hannan, manager of the Employment Security Commission.

Hannan said that the low trend in unemployment is seasonal, and although good news, will definitely pick back up again in the winter.

"The employment rate follows the thermometer. When the temperature goes down, employment goes down," he added.

Hannan attributed the unusual low rate to several factors. One was the tobacco market.

"Construction and wholesale/retail trade are doing real well, also."

Hannan added that when the tobacco processing plants close, approximately 1,400 people will be out of work. Unfortunately, many of these workers will not be able to file for unemployment insurance.

"To be eligible to qualify the person must have worked four out of six calendar quarters."

"Last year most of the people didn't work sufficient quotas. The processing didn't last as long as usual."

Unemployment in September, 1976, was 2.4 percent.

According to Hannan, unemployment could reach between 5.5 and 6 percent in the winter months. But that is still below the national average.

"This has been a good year all along."

"Things have been going up steadily since the crunch of 1974."

Hannan said that almost 300 job positions were filled last month and, at present, there are 200 positions available.

He added that the Commission is having difficulty filling skilled jobs.

"If a person has construction or clerical skills, we shouldn't have any trouble placing them."

"I think we can do a better job next year."

CHARLESTON (AP) — It's nearly certain the 1978 Miss USA pageant will be held in Charleston, says an official of the Miss Universe beauty pageant, which runs the Miss USA pageant as a preliminary.

The pageant and Charleston supporters have been negotiating for months on details, mostly financial, of scheduling the event in the port city a second straight year. A last-minute hitch was the availability of Gaillard Auditorium, when the facility was booked by the Spoleto USA Festival during the early May period Miss USA wanted its activities.

Miss Universe vice president Robert E. Parkinson said from New York Thursday that an April 29 finals date is acceptable.

Noting that pageant sponsor Proctor and Gamble wants to return the contest to Charleston, Parkinson added, "I think we're coming back."

He said a difference of "only a few thousand dollars" between what the pageant wanted from Charleston and what local agencies offered was still being negotiated. "We're all working to get a number with which we both can live," Parkinson said.

The pageant received $225,000 to cover expenses. The county Department of Parks, Recreation and Tourism and the city have offered $175,000 for a 1978 event.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State and local school officials are planning for unique opportunities for improved programs and facilities that will present themselves over the next decade because of the declining birth rate.

Next year, for the first time in decades, North Carolina's high school enrollment is expected to drop.

The decline won't be much at first — from 355,314 in the current school year to 354,880 in the 1978-79 school year. But the pace of the drop will quicken until by the year 1986-87 enrollment in grades nine through 12 is projected at 315,502.

North Carolina is only slightly behind the national trend. Figures from the National Center for Education Statistics show that secondary school enrollment across the country is lower in the current school year for the first time in 25 years.

Enrollment is already dropping now in the grade schools, the effects of a birth rate which began dropping about 12 years ago. In 1970 there were 98,455 births in North Carolina. Last year there were 80,549.

The decreasing number of students is creating both problems and opportunities for North Carolina schools, according to Darrell Spencer, assistant director of the state Division of School Planning.

"A great deal of planning is going on across the state as to where the declines will be and what should be done about it," Spencer said.

Fewer students will mean more space in facilities that are overcrowded now, Spencer said. It will also mean more money for new programs and it will mean that obsolete buildings can be abandoned.

"Some systems may want to consolidate schools or move the ninth grade up to a high school," Spencer said. Another may be able to move out of old buildings or use its space more effectively because of the reduced enrollment.

Spencer said he didn't know when school enrollment would reach its lowest point, but he said the birth rate had reduced its rate of decline and appeared to be leveling off. It will take 15 to 18 years for that leveling off to make itself felt in the schools, he noted.

To some extent, Spencer pointed out, the drop in school enrollment caused by the declining birth rate would be offset by a general population trend which shows families migrating from northern states to the southeast.

But Spencer said that the impact of that trend on the schools would not be nearly enough to cancel the dramatic drop in births.

Abandoned At Age 91

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — Martha Elizabeth Adams, age 91, is an abandoned adult.

She was brought to Watauga Memorial Hospital last month to get some medicine, she said, but the friend who brought her disappeared while she was being examined and never returned.

Mrs. Adams apparently had nothing wrong with her, but she was admitted to the hospital because she had nowhere else to go. Now her hospital bill totals $1,000 and she is still abandoned.

Mrs. Adams says the woman who brought her to the hospital was a Mrs. Addie Horne of Mountain City, Tenn.

"I came here for some medicine," Mrs. Adams said. "She brought me here, and didn't come back for me."

Mrs. Horne, reached by telephone, said she knew nothing about the matter and hung up.

Mrs. Adams had no money and no extra clothing when she arrived at the hospital and was admitted for evaluation.

Students at Appalachian State University have contributed more than $1,200 toward her hospital bills and Mrs. Adams has made a hit with student visitors and other patients on her hall. Social service agencies are supposed to be looking for a suitable place for her to live.

"I just don't know what's going to happen now," she said.

Hearing On N.C. Medicaid Cut

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A hearing was set today on a state request for an injunction to prevent the federal government from cutting back Medicaid funds for nursing homes in North Carolina by $2.7 million.

The hearing will be in federal court before U.S. District Judge Franklin T. Dupree. Gov. Jim Hunt ordered the state action Thursday.

Federal officials said North Carolina failed to inspect four of the 239 nursing homes for compliance with Medicaid standards last year. The state said the four were inspected within about a month after the deadline.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced moderately today, drawing support from some favorable news on the money supply.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 1.73 at 841.82, after a 5.37-point rise Thursday.

Gainers outpaced losers by about a 2-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

At Thursday's close the Federal Reserve reported a $1.1 billion drop in the basic measure of the money supply.

Analysts said traders took the news as a sign of some possible progress in the Fed's effort to curb inflation by restraining monetary growth.

Another plus in the news background was the Commerce Department report Thursday that the index of leading economic indicators rose 0.8 per cent in August. The data helped to ease fears of an economic slump in the coming months.

The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks was up .17 at 52.61. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index climbed .46 to 118.30.

Volume on the Big Board reached 9.90 million shares by noon.

Pirates, Gamecocks Clash In TV Game

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The toughest test of the year awaits East Carolina University's unbeaten Pirates in Columbia, S.C., Saturday. The Pirates will be meeting the University of South Carolina in a regionally televised battle of independents.

Kickoff in Williams-Brice Stadium is set for 1:50 p.m. and it will be Homecoming for the Gamecocks.

"This is a real big game for us," Coach Pat Dye of ECU said. "It's on television, and it should be a real exciting one. I'm looking forward to it, and I'm sure that all our players are, too."

East Carolina goes into the game with a 4-0 record, having beaten N. C. State, Duke, Toledo and VMI. All four of the games have gone down to the wire, although the Toledo game had the most breathing room. The win over VMI last Saturday night saw the Pirates rally from 13-0 down to take a 14-13 victory in a game accented by ECU losing six of ten fumbles.

South Carolina lost for the first time last Saturday, as Georgia came away with a late 15-13 win. Earlier the Gamecocks had beaten Appalachian State, 32-17, Georgia Tech, 17-0, and Miami of Ohio, 42-19.

A crowd in excess of 50,000 is expected, the largest ever to see an East Carolina game.

"South Carolina has a lot of skill people and they are very quick on defense," Dye said. "But we have a lot of good people in the skill positions, too, and our defense is very quick. So I think we match up pretty well. They may be stronger in some phases of the game, but then, too, we may be stronger in others."

The Gamecocks run a very versatile offense, using the triple option veer. "They'll also line up with two tight ends, in the pro set, and with three wide-outs. They have a great quarterback in Ron Bass, and four outstanding running backs. They have two great receivers, and their line comes off the ball as well as anyone we play."

"We've got to play extremely well on defense because they can score from anywhere on the field," Dye said.

Bass, who keys the offense, has hit on 44 of 81 passes for 570 yards, with three interceptions. His chief targets have been Zion McKinney, the flanker, with 13 catches for 172 yards and one touchdown, and Phillip Logan, the split end, with 12 catches for 240 yards and a score.

Leading the rushers is sophomore Spencer Clark with 163 yards and a 5.6 average, while George Rogers is next with 152 yards and a 4.2 average. Steve Dorsey has 145 yards, while Casper Carter has 105 and McKinney has rushed for 104 yards. Bass has 99 yards rushing.

Last week, Georgia held the Gamecock rushers to just 98 yards, but Bass hit on 17 of 32 passes for 177 yards. Like the Pirates, South Carolina was bothered by fumbles, losing three of five. For the season, South Carolina is averaging 226 yards rushing and 164.5 passing per game.

On defense, the Gamecocks give a lot of looks, Dye noted. "They are aggressive, quick and speedy. They will intimidate you if you let them. We hope we won't let them."

"They like to run, but they mix it up well to keep you honest. They are a well-coached, versatile team," Dye said.

Defensively, SC has allowed 234.3 yards a game on the ground and 88.8 through the air.

In comparison, East Carolina has rushed for 265.3 yards per game, while allowing 108.8. The Bucs have passed for 96.8 per game, and allowed 176.0.

That passing defense worries Dye somewhat, but not the short pass. "That doesn't win ball games. The rushing game does. If you can stop them from getting the bomb on you, those little passes won't bother you that much. Oh, they'll move the ball, but they are going to drop one they should have caught, or you'll intercept one, and that will be the difference."

Jimmy Southerland will again get the call at starting quarterback. He's hit on 17 of 25 passes for 320 yards, while co-quarterback Leander Green has hit just five of 18 for 67 yards. Green leads in rushing between the two with 215 yards, while Southerland has 101.

Theodore Sutton is the top rusher with 322 yards, while Willie Hawkins has 173. Eddie Hicks has 99.

Terry Gallaher has been the top target for the Pirate throwers, catching eight passes for 154 yards. Barry Johnson is next with five for 89 yards.

The game is the first meeting of the two teams. It also marks the third television appearance for a Pat Dye-coached team in his four years.

The Pirates under Dye are 1-1 on television, losing to N. C. State, 24-20, in 1974, and beating Appalachian State, 35-7, last year.

Stadium Bids Month Away

Bids are expected to be taken in about one month on the expansion of Ficklen Stadium, according to East Carolina University Vice-Chancellor of Business Cliff Moore.

"The plans and specifications have been completed, and we hope to receive bids in late October or early November," Moore said.

Earlier, it had been hoped that bids could be received in September, so that construction could get underway in early November, as soon as this year's games in the stadium had been completed.

But Moore now says that pending approval of the bids when they are received, construction would now start in late November.

"We feel this will still give us time to get the work completed before our first game next year, which doesn't come until late September," Moore said.

A total of $2,500,000 has been set aside for the construction, which is to include seats to expand the stadium to 35,000 permanent seats, along with the construction of a new press box for the stadium.

Duke Tops Lady Bucs

East Carolina's women's field hockey team suffered its first defeat of the season Thursday, dropping a 2-0 decision to Duke.

The Blue Devils' Muffy Rouhiac was the star of the show, as she pushed across single goals in both halves of the contest. Her last, which sealed the contest for Duke, came with just minutes remaining in the contest.

ECU Coach Laurie Arrants was not pleased with the team's performance, although she felt that a few individuals deserved recognition.

"This game was sorta like the football game the other night," said Arrants. "They fumbled the ball ten times, but still were lucky enough to win. We fumbled the ball around too much ourselves, but we weren't as lucky."

Arrants singled out Linda Christian, Sue Jones and Anne Holmes as having a good game for the Lady Pirates, who dropped to 1-1. Duke remains unbeaten at 2-0.

The Lady Pirates will face UNC-Greensboro Saturday in the first road contest of the year.

Southerland Almost Quit When He Was Walk-On Frosh At ECU

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Four years ago, a young quarterback from Wilmington walked onto the practice field at East Carolina University. During the weeks that passed, he got discouraged, but he hung on.

Now, he's one of two men who are listed as "first team quarterback" for the Pirates.

The young man is Jimmy Southerland, who has earned not only the right to start, but a scholarship to make it a little more worthwhile.

"I got very discouraged during my freshman year," he said. "I guess I really thought about quitting every week that year. But somehow, I stuck it out. I don't know why I stayed on, but I just did. Maybe God had something to do with it. Looking back I just don't know how I did it."

Today, as a senior, Southerland and sophomore Leander Green share the duties as quarterback, and Southerland has no regrets about that sharing.

"Being a senior, and having had some experience, I think it's important to split the time. Leander has a great future at East Carolina. When I'm in there, I want to do the best I can, and I want to be consistent. Then, he gets a chance to get experience and learn and so do I."

There has been some conjecture that the differences in the two backs create problems for the opposing defensive units. Southerland doesn't have the same quickness and speed that Green does, and after Jimmy runs a few series, the sudden change of speed catches the defense somewhat by surprise. "I guess it's like a pitcher throwing a change-up," Southerland said. "Maybe he's quicker down the line and in cutting up field. It could throw the defense off."

Between the two, Southerland probably rates as a greater passing threat. He connected on six of seven passes for 90 yards against VMI, and the percentage of 85.7 tied the existing school record, set by former Pirate great Carl Summerell against The Citadel several years ago.

Southerland did admit, however, that probably he should have dumped one pass that never left his hands. That one cost him a long sack against the Keydets. "The play was a misdirection. When I got ready to throw, I didn't feel safe throwing, so I tried to get into a better position. I just never got a chance to get it to anyone, and by the time I got the chance to throw it away, it was too late."

Southerland is looking forward to Saturday's regional television game with South Carolina. "They are a major independent. Now that we're out of the Southern Conference, we're getting outside our own little area of the past, and this is a big game for us. They have a great background, and with it on TV, it will mean a lot more recognition for us. It will make us a lot more emotional and excited about it."

While Southerland is unsure about his future right now, he is considering joining his father in an insurance adjustment business, or traveling in Europe following his graduation, but he feels that is still over a year away.

"I haven't been carrying a full load because of football, so I'll probably go another year. Actually, I am kind of looking forward to it. It's going to give me a chance just to be a student. Then I'll find out what it's like to sit in the stands and cheer for the team."

Right now, Pirate fans are just as happy that Jimmy is down on the field, and not up in the stands where a good many discouraged walk-ons have ended up, just watching.

There was quite a bit of shaking up in the picks panel last week, with another rookie, Steve Hemric, moving into the lead for the first time.

That makes the full circle for the three rookies, as all have led at least one time during the season.

Seems like it might be time for the old-timers to come through with some good picks and move into the lead. There is a chance this week, as there is some division among the panel. No two cards are alike.

As stated, Hemric is the current leader with a 31-11 record. Close behind him come last week's leader Vickie Spivey and this writer, both 30-12. Joe Jenkins, finally making his move, and Jim Kyle are tied for fourth with 29-13 marks, while Tom Baines, who says this week he'll make his move, is now 28-14.

Last week's high school picks saw us return to a more comfortable record with a 5-2 week. Perhaps we can do as well this time out.

Saratoga visits Roanoke. The Cougars are strong this year, and Roanoke is hoping to be just as strong now that it is back in the conference. This one is tough, but we'll go with Saratoga.

Ayden-Grifton visits North Pitt. The Panthers are improving, but Ayden-Grifton is coming off a

Maryland, State Clash In Top ACC Contest; Heels Meet Rangers

By The Associated Press
North Carolina State brings its explosive conference-leading offense into the arena against defending Atlantic Coast Conference champion Maryland Saturday in a key shootout for position in the ACC standings.

Maryland is coming off two straight losses, bowing last week to Penn State, 27-9. And in case anyone has forgotten, N.C. State was the last league member to beat Maryland, 24-22, in 1973 before the Terrapins launched a 21-game conference winning streak.

"We're more wary than ever of Maryland after their two losses," said Wolfpack coach Bo Rein. "They'll be mentally and emotionally ready, not only to get back in the win column, but because this is a conference game."

The N.C. State-Maryland duel is the only conference game this week. North Carolina entertains 13th ranked Texas Tech in a top intersectional battle. Duke is host to Navy, and Virginia takes on neighboring West Virginia in home games. Clemson travels to Virginia Tech and Wake Forest is at Purdue.

Here's a capsule of weekend action:

Maryland at N.C. State
1:30 p.m. Carter Stadium
Raleigh

Both teams will put unbeaten conference records on the line. The Wolfpack is 2-0, while Maryland is 1-0. N.C. State's quarterback Johnny Evans directs the ACC's top offensive team, which ran up 493 yards in last week's 41-14 stomping of Wake Forest. Evans leads the ACC in total, rushing and scoring offense. Maryland sports the league's top receivers in split end Vince Kinney, who has grabbed 16 for 267 yards, and flanker Dan Richards, who has pulled in 13 for 212 yards.

Conley In Victory

HOLLYWOOD — D. H. Conley downed Greene Central, 2-0, in volleyball yesterday and moved into a tie for first place in the Eastern Carolina Conference.

Conley took the first game by a 15-7 score, with Annie Wooten leading the scoring by serving up four in a row for the Valkyries.

In the second game, Conley squeezed out a 17-15 win. Linda Green served up seven points in a row, while Annette Crandall had four in a row. Hamm had seven straight for Greene Central.

Conley is now 4-2 in the league, while Greene Central is 3-3. Conley is at Farmville Central and Greene Central hosts Ayden-Grifton on Tuesday.

State has held opponents to only 294 yards passing and 25 completions in four games, but defensive tackle Bubba Green will be out following knee surgery on Thursday.

Texas Tech at UNC
1:30 p.m. Kenan Stadium
Chapel Hill

The quarterback department poses problems for both teams. The Red Raiders will be minus quarterback Rodney Allison, their Heisman Trophy candidate, who broke an ankle last week in Tech's 33-17 loss to fifth-ranked Texas A&M. Carolina quarterback Matt Kupec sprained a knee in last week's 41-7 triumph over Northwestern, and may not start. Junior quarterback Tres Adams is expected to direct Texas Tech's offense against the top ACC defense. The Tar Heels have allowed only 17 points in their three contests to rank third in the nation in scoring defense. Tech's offensive line features All-American candidate Dan Irons, while fullback Billy Taylor and split end Sammy Williams provide spark in the Red Raiders' scoring attack. Carolina freshman tailback Amos Lawrence will be trying for a followup performance to his 101-yard effort last week in 10 rushes.

Navy at Duke
1:30 p.m.
Wallace Wade Stadium
Durham

Duke quarterback Mike Dunn, the league's leading passer with 31 completions for 352 yards, goes up against the nation's 10th best defense. Both clubs have played third-ranked Michigan in close games, Duke losing 21-9 two weeks ago and the Midshipmen absorbing a 14-7 loss last week. Navy's defense has allowed only 23 points this season, and is headed by John Sturges and Mike Galpin in the secondary. Quarterback Bob Leszczynski and tailback Joe Gattuso lead the Navy offense. Leszczynski has completed 34 passes for 478 yards, and one of his favorite targets is split end Phil McConky, who has caught seven for 99 yards. The Blue Devils captured their first win last week over Virginia, 31-7, in a contest that saw the Cavaliers held to 168 yards.

West Virginia started the season with a 36-0 shutout of Richmond and a 24-16 upset of Maryland before dropping a 28-13 decision to Kentucky. Virginia continues to yield massive ground yardage, and make crucial offense mistakes, leading Coach Dick Bestwick to say, "I'm disappointed with everything so far." The Cavaliers got their first season touchdown last week, in a 31-7 loss to Duke. Virginia freshman quarterback Bryan Shumock is listed as a starter, but another freshman Ted Manly has seen action all season. The Mountaineers' offense is lead by quarterback Dan Kendra who passed for both scores against Kentucky. His targets include Dave Riley, Rich Duggan and Cedric Thomas.

Clemson at Virginia Tech
1:30 p.m. Lane Stadium
Blacksburg, Va.

Clemson will be riding two, back-to-back wins over Georgia and Georgia Tech coming into the match with the Gobblers. Lester Brown rushed for 134 yards against the Yellow Jackets, and Jerry Butler caught five passes for 163 yards. The Tigers' new boss, Charley Pell, and his offensive coordinator Danny Ford, were both former assistants at Virginia Tech, setting the stage for a little revenge. Virginia Tech has lost to Texas A&M and Memphis

Southern Surprises

SPRING HOPE — Southern Nash's volleyball team won its first match of the season yesterday afternoon with a 2-1 victory over Ayden-Grifton.

The Lady Firebirds downed the Chargerettes 15-13 in the first game, but Ayden-Grifton came back in the second for a 15-6 win behind Vivian Ellis.

Southern Nash built up an 8-0 lead in the third encounter, but Ellis' serves cut it to 8-6. Ayden-Grifton went ahead at one point 9-8, but the Lady Firebirds went on to win the see-saw battle and the match.

The Chargerettes are now 4-2 on the year and in a tie for first place in the Eastern Carolina Conference. They travel to Greene Central on Tuesday.

Fight Was All Over For TV Fans After 12th; Rest In Suspense

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The way it looked on national television, it was all over after the 12th round. As many as 50 million people in the TV audience knew Earnie Shavers would lose. Muhammad Ali said he knew it.

Then, why didn't Shavers know it?

"I thought I was ahead. My corner told me I was ahead," Shavers said after losing his only shot at the world heavyweight title in a 15-round decision to Ali Thursday night at Madison Square Garden.

"I threw a couple of pretty good shots, but I didn't hit him real hard. I was trying to save myself," said Shavers. "I didn't go after him because I thought he might have been faking it."

The simple fact of the matter was that after the 12th, the TV audience had been informed by NBC — which was revealing the referee's and judges' decision round-by-round — that Ali had eight check-marks on his side of the card. Shavers' only chance was a knockout.

Over on Ali's side of the ring, they were keeping track. Trainer Angelo Dundee had arranged with Eddie Hrica, a Baltimore-area fight promoter, to shuttle between the dressing room TV set and ringside to keep tabs on how things were going.

No such arrangements had been made on Shavers' side of the ring, and no one in the Garden audience of 14,613 was aware of the cards. After some discussion, John F.X. Condon, head of Garden publicity, said it was decided not to transmit the NBC information to the live audience or to reporters. The New York State Athletic Commission had recommended against it as being possibly disruptive, Condon said.

"But we didn't tell Ali," Dundee said. "We didn't want him to know. He might have let up, and you can't do that against a guy like Shavers."

Ali, however, said he had been told at one point during the fight that he was ahead, and that he would have thought so anyway. He looked like a fighter trying to hang onto his lead in the 13th and 14th rounds, which went to Shavers and the referee, Johnny Lo-Bianco.

"I took some punches that would have knocked any man out," said Ali, his face swollen from the beating he had taken from Shavers, considered one of boxing's all-time hardest hitters.

"Hurt me? Yeah, he hurt me a couple of times," Ali said. "I was almost knocked out two or three times. I was out on my feet. But the experts told you right. I can take a punch ... I knew I had it won ... I am the greatest fighter of all time."

After the 12th round, the two judges' cards had Ali ahead 8-4, and LoBianco had it 8-3 with one even. That's when Shavers, who had never gone past 10 rounds in his career, came on strong.

Shavers won the 13th on four solid rights to Ali's head, while the champion danced, covered up and hardly threw a punch. The 14th went to Shavers in a more spectacular fashion.

Shavers came out swinging those lumberjack fists that have scored 19 first-round knockouts in 54 victories (52 knockouts in all). He caught Ali in the corner and a mighty right landed.

Ali's feet went out from under him, and the count on the auditorium loudspeaker went to "two" before LoBianco waved off the count, saying it was a slip. But Ali was in trouble.

Shavers continued to press, and he caught the champion with another right as Ali lay against the ropes.

"My corner told me I was three rounds ahead on points," said Shavers. "I knew Ali was hurt, but I couldn't tell whether he was faking it. He's good at that. He always fakes it when you hit him."

The 15th round — by which time Shavers was expected to have been showered, dressed and on his way back home to the farm in Warren, Ohio — was a slugfest. Not since Ali-Joe Frazier in Manila was there such a round in heavyweight boxing.

Ali had Shavers in the corner, pounding combinations, hooking off the jab, and Shavers was wobbling. Both fighters were exhausted. Shavers found one more punch, and it saved him from a knockout.

He threw a looping left that connected squarely with Ali's forehead. The punch still had enough to rock the champion — "It almost knocked me out," said Ali — and it bought Shavers time.

At the bell signaling the end, Shavers was nearly out.

"Another 30 seconds, and I would have knocked him out," said Ali.

"I haven't been this tired since the fight in Manila," he said. "I knew I had it won, but that closing show in the 15th really made it look good. You've got to realize I've got a lot of heart. I'm a real champion. My hands hurt, my knees hurt, my back hurts. I'm 35 years old, and with the wear and tear I've been through, it's a miracle I did that for 15 rounds."

Both judges — Tony Castellano and Mrs. Eva Shain, the first woman ever to judge a heavyweight title fight — scored it 9-6. LoBianco had it 9-5 with the ninth round even. The Associated Press scored it 10-5.

"Now it's time for me to scrutinize things. I've got to get out while I'm still on top," said Ali, renewing his old theme of possible retirement. "It's time to say good-bye to this thing."

It has been rumored that Ali will fight South African Gerri Coetzee in November, but Ali said nothing was definite. Coetzee made an appearance at the news conference, told Ali that he wanted to fight him and was quickly told to leave the stage. "Let's not turn this into a vaudeville act," Condon said.

Bob Arum of Top Rank Inc. had said he would meet today with Ali to discuss a fight, but Ali denied that also.

"They've got to talk to me before they do anything," Ali said. "But I'm gonna think about this. I've got 12 months before I have to fight again."

The victory for Ali, who weighed 225, was his 19th defense since he recaptured his title from George Foreman in 1974.

Star Ripped In Warmups

NL Roundup

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

It wasn't the best of ways for Steve Carlton and Tommy John to prepare for the National League playoffs, but nobody is about to panic.

The two pitching stars may have gotten clobbered Thursday night, but don't expect it to happen when they oppose each other in the opening game of the National League playoffs next Tuesday.

Carlton, the 23-game winner of the Philadelphia Phillies, was racked for four runs in the first inning as the Montreal Expos beat the Phils 7-2. And John, the Los Angeles Dodgers' 20-game winner, was reached for 10 hits and four runs in six innings as the Houston Astros defeated the Dodgers 4-2.

"Don't worry about him," said Carlton's designated catcher on the Phils, Tim McCarver. "He had good stuff. It's just like we wouldn't get overly excited if he pitched a three-hitter. He threw as well as ever."

John, meanwhile, said, "I was out there trying to win. But at the same time, I wanted to work on a few pitches. I was trying to throw a lot of breaking pitches because against the Phils you have to use everything in your arsenal."

"I have to think we are as evenly matched as two teams can be," John added. "It could be a series of breaks, taking advantage of a passed ball, a hit-and-run, an error."

In the only other National League game played Thursday night, the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the New York Mets 5-2.

Expos 7, Phils 4

Carlton's troubles started when a group of Marines had trouble hoisting the flag in pregame ceremonies at Philadelphia's Veterans Stadium.

Manager Danny Ozark finally had to help out.

"Steve waited for 10 minutes and through two national anthems (the Canadian and American)," Ozark said. "Sitting around like that could bother anybody. If a pitcher has that kind of delay, someone might score 10 runs."

The Expos only got four, two of them on a single by Larry Parrish, but that was enough to beat Carlton, 23-10. The left-hander settled down and held Montreal scoreless until leaving the game in the eighth, but the damage had been done.

Astros 4, Dodgers 2

Bob Watson belted a two-run homer in the fifth inning for the big blow off John, 20-7. It was Watson's 21st home run of the season and gave him 108 runs batted in, a Houston club record.

Floyd Bannister and Gene Pentz combined on a five-hitter for the Astros, but Pentz gave up a home run to the Dodgers' Steve Garvey. It was Garvey's 33rd home run of the year, the most by a player since the club moved to Los Angeles after the 1958 season.

Pirates 5, Mets 2

Phil Garner had two singles and a triple, drove in two runs and scored one as the Pirates beat ex-teammate Doc Medich, making his first start for the Mets.

Terry Forster, 6-4, recently moved from the bullpen to the starting rotation, got the victory with ninth-inning relief help from Kent Tekulve.

In 1932 the Chicago Bears won the pro football title by defeating the Portsmouth Spartans, 9-0, in a game played indoors at the Chicago Stadium.

In For A Double

throw from Gary Woods in center. Hobson was safe for a double in the sixth inning Thursday as the Red Sox beat the Blue Jays, 7-3. (AP Laser-photo)

Yarborough, Petty Are The Favorites

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C.

(AP) — Cale Yarborough and Richard Petty are co-favorites for Sunday's Wilkes 400 stock car race, but Neil Bonnett and Darrell Waltrip share the role for Friday's opening round of qualifying trials.

Waltrip, from Franklin, Tenn., won the pole position for last year's staging of the same event. Bonnett, of Hueytown, Ala., started in the No. 1 position for a similar 400-lap race last March on North Wilkesboro Speedway's banked five eighths of a mile asphalt track.

Yarborough will be shooting for his fourth straight victory here, and the fifth of his career. The farmer-politician from Timmonsville, S.C., is the reigning champion in the Winston Cup series of the NASCAR Grand National division, and this year's biggest winner with nine victories.

Petty is the most successful driver in the history of major league stock car racing and this track. Of his 185 Grand National victories, 13 have been at North Wilkesboro — about 80 miles from his Randleman, N.C., home.

Yarborough, Waltrip and Benny Parsons head a favored Chevrolet contingent that also includes the 1976 "rookie of the year," Skip Manning of Bogalusa, La., and this year's leading rookie contenders — Ricky Rudd of Chesapeake, Va., and Sam Sommers of Savannah, Ga.

Petty and Bonnett will be in Dodge. Other highly regarded entries include Bobby Allison, also of Hueytown, Ala., in a Matador, and Ford drivers Buddy Baker of Charlotte and Dick Brooks of Spartanburg, S.C.

In a system unique to major league stock car racing, the first eight starting positions will be decided by averages of two days of qualifying — with sessions starting at 1:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Yankees Bow; Fail To Wrap Up American East

AL Roundup

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The New York Yankees are in a holding position ... and Earl Weaver is in a hoping position.

"People can still say Billy Martin hasn't won two championships in a row," says the manager of the Baltimore Orioles.

Weaver's reference is an obvious needle aimed at the New York Yankees manager, who has laid claim to the American League East title, when in truth it is not officially his yet.

The Yankees lost a chance to lock it up Thursday night, dropping a 4-1 decision to the Cleveland Indians while Weaver's Orioles and the Boston Red Sox stayed mathematically alive by winning their games. The Red Sox defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 7-3 while the Orioles stopped the Detroit Tigers 6-3.

"That was a funny quote," said Weaver, referring to a statement by Martin that is getting more notoriety by the day. After the Yankees clinched a tie for the East title with a victory over Cleveland Wednesday night, the New York manager said that he could now be credited with two consecutive division titles in the same city. The Yankees won the AL East last year and Martin had won two others, with Minnesota and Detroit.

The Orioles open a three-game series with the Red Sox tonight. Each team must hope for a sweep, and for the Yankees to lose their three-game set with Detroit, otherwise Martin's premature announcement will be a reality before the weekend is over.

In other AL games Thursday night, the Kansas City Royals defeated the California Angels 6-3 and the Seattle Mariners nipped the Texas Rangers 2-1.

Wayne Garland's six-hitter led Cleveland's victory over New York. Garland, one of last winter's free agents who signed a 10-year contract with Cleveland, posted his 13th triumph in 32 decisions and took some solace after a disastrous campaign by averting a 20th setback.

Orioles 6, Tigers 3

Rookie Eddie Murray drove in four runs, Ken Singleton had a two-run homer and Rudy May won his 18th game in Baltimore's victory over Detroit. It was the 19th triumph in the last 25 games for the Orioles, who took the season series from Detroit by a 12-3 margin.

Red Sox 7, Blue Jays 3

American League slugging leader Jim Rice drove in four runs with his 39th homer and a sacrifice fly to power Boston over Toronto. Rice's three-run blast in the fourth inning rallied Boston from a 2-0 deficit and not only boosted his home run lead, but gave him 376 total bases for the year, the most by an American League slugger since Mickey Mantle had the same number in 1956.

Royals 6, Angels 3

Larry Gura and Doug Bird combined on a seven-hitter as Kansas City defeated California. Gura, 8-5, gave up six hits, struck out four and walked none before needing ninth-inning relief help from Bird.

The Royals, with every starter in the lineup getting a hit, became the first team in the majors to win 100 games and tied the New York Mets' record for victories by an expansion team.

Mariners 2, Rangers 1

Julio Cruz' run-scoring single in the ninth propelled Seattle over Texas, spilling Doyle Alexander's bid for his 18th victory.

Roberts Takes Life

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — The master of the Masters tournament for 43 years, Cliff Roberts, was found dead of an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound Thursday at the Augusta National Golf Club.

Roberts, 84, was wearing trousers and a trench coat over his pajamas when he was discovered by a club employee in a creek bed near his club apartment. Richmond County, Ga., investigators said he had been shot with a .38-caliber pistol.

A statement from the club said, "Death was caused by a self-inflicted wound. Mr. Roberts had been in ill health for several months."

Funeral arrangements had not yet been made, but club officials said private services would be held in Augusta.

In 1931, Roberts joined the late Bobby Jones, winner of the famous Grand Slam of four major tournaments in 1930, to raise money to build the Augusta National course.

Roberts was chairman of the Masters, an invitation-only event considered the most prestigious tournament in the country, until the end of the 1976 tournament.

Farmville Defeated

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central's junior varsity football team dropped its third straight game of the season yesterday by a 12-0 score to Southern Nash.

The Baby Firebirds scored a touchdown in each of the first two quarters and then coasted in for the win.

In the first period, Larry Edmond intercepted a Baby Jaguar pass and returned it 45 yards for a TD. The PAT run failed.

Wilford Walker broke loose on a 29-yard run in the second quarter for Southern Nash's second touchdown.

The Baby Jaguars play again at Roanoke next Thursday.

'Yes' Members Flop On Solos

By JAMES SIMON
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — With the return of prodigal pianist Rick Wakeman, the new 'Yes' album "Going For The One" is zooming up the charts and crowds are jamming stadiums and concert halls to see the British rock quintet play. But the band has learned the hard way that recording success as a group does not rub off on solo albums.

1975-76. All were commercial failures.

"I don't think the solo albums were a mistake. If the music is decided upon by how many albums are sold, then we're in a sorry state," lead singer Jon Anderson said after three sold-out shows at New York's 20,000-seat Madison Square Garden.

The new album and tour has put the group back on the top of the rock world. To Anderson, the band's sophisticated sound "is a little bit of magic here and there, a little bit of science and music, and a little bit of heavy rock as well."

The band's lyrics, sung by Anderson in a light, airy voice, usually are nonsensical since the words are selected for how they'll sound in the context of the song, rather than for their meaning.

The emphasis is on the fantasy-laden music, a clever hybrid of English folk tunes and space rock that has an orchestral feel similar to Emerson, Lake and Palmer.

"At the moment we're just in a good, entertaining kind of musical direction," Anderson said. "Over the last few years we've been lucky enough to learn a lot more about the directions that are available, such as a symphonic kind of approach, a more instrumental kind of approach. At this time, we seem to be kind of relaxing and using some good songs, good production on songs."

Yes, formed by Anderson and bassist Chris Squire in 1968, went through several personnel changes before achieving mass popularity with the release of the single "Roundabout" several years ago. The success of the single was a complete surprise to Anderson, who admits the band's galactic approach in the past may have confused some listeners.

"We felt that on the 'Going For The One' album, it was important that we try to put down a few different ideas, try to make it as listenable as possible, and that's the way we headed. I feel the next couple of albums should be more so."

The British band's music stands out in sharp contrast to the sounds that seem to be sweeping their homeland — punk rock. The growth of the primitive punk sound doesn't bother Anderson.

TV Old Enough For Return To Past

By JERRY BUCK
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Television has reached an age where it wants to go back and relieve its past.

NBC looked at its first 50 years. Charles Kuralt toured the nostalgic early days for CBS. Lucille Ball and Bob Hope revived old skits. Dobie Gillis tried to update his show, to in-different results.

"Father Knows Best" had better luck and a second sequel is in the works. "Laugh-In" is back and "Star Trek" is heading into production. The Brady Bunch came back and the Adams Family is coming back. Now comes a revisit to "Pey-

Hangar 122 Is For Birds, Too

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — Hangar 122 at Oceana Naval Air Station is home for a flight of A6 Intruder jets and about 75 persistent pigeons.

Officials are trying to evict the pigeons, whose droppings are threatening the airplane's skin with corrosion.

"That many pigeons can leave quite a deposit," said Lt. Cmdr. Mike Schuster, a safety officer at Oceana.

Schuster said rotating beacons were installed in the hangar to generate a pattern of shifting shadows to scare the birds.

Several other devices were considered and rejected, including rubber snakes and effigies of owls and hawks.

ton Place," and, as you might guess, things are still not going smoothly in that hotbed of passion. It's called "Murder in Peyton Place" and will be seen at 9 p.m. EDT Monday on NBC.

Five of the original major cast members are back for the reunion. Two others who went from "Peyton Place" to movie stardom are also back, in a manner of speaking.

Ryan O'Neal, who was Rodney Harrington, and Mia Farrow, who was Allison McKenzie, are there in body if not in spirit. It is the murders of Rodney and Allison that is the occasion for the movie.

Christopher Connelly is back as Norman Harrington, Rodney's brother; Dorothy Malone as Constance McKenzie, Allison's mother; Ed Nelson as Dr. Michael Rossi; Tim O'Connor as Elliot; and Joyce Jilson as Jill.

The producers felt it would be a waste of time to ask O'Neal or Miss Farrow to the reunion. Lee Grant and James Douglas had other commitments and Barbara Parkins declined.

Connelly admits he wasn't happy about returning to Peyton Place, but, as often happens to an actor, he was otherwise unoccupied.

"It was like going back while everyone else was moving on," he said. "Like Ryan and Mia and Lee. It was like going back and doing your first job over again."

"But I wasn't busy. It can only really do me good, which it has."

Connelly said that while making the movie he made contacts that landed him the role of Mark Twain in another NBC movie. It's "The Incredible Race," and in it he and Forrest Tucker are pitted against each other in a race from St. Joseph, Mo., to the Pacific Ocean.

Nor was he overjoyed about reviving the character of Norman, who began "Peyton Place" as a "misguided youth" and ended it "happily married at the age of 19."

"Peyton Place" ran for 514 half-hour episodes on ABC between September 1964 and June 1969. For a time it was on twice a week and then later three times a week in prime time.

The series was adapted from the 1956 novel by Grace Metalious and two movies. At the time it was on the air it was regarded as "controversial."

Read that sexy. By today's standards it would be considered tame, if ABC's new series "Soap," is any comparison.

spades, found an elegant way to deprive the defenders of an entry to the vital hand, which was the key to bringing home his contract.

There is no "right bid" on the South hand. After his partner opened one club, South did not know whose hand it was or in which suit the hand should be played. So he followed the advice of an expert of yesteryear, who once announced: "I've never put down a dummy with a seven-card or longer spade suit", and bid game in West's lead of a low club rather than the suit his partner had bid shouted to the world that it was a singleton. Therefore, declarer spurned the finesse and rose with the ace. He then set about considering how to deprive West of a ruff. The obvious line was to hope that West held no more than two spades, or that East held a singleton king. In either of those cases, declarer would make his contract by cashing the ace of spades, crossing to his hand with a diamond ruff and then continuing trumps. However, declarer knew that the odds favored a 3-1 trump division, and that East was more likely to hold a low singleton spade than the king. If he played as above, on the actual layout West would win the king of spades, get to his partner with a heart and score a club ruff for the setting trick.

Declarer found a beautiful way out. At trick two, he led the queen of diamonds from dummy. East covered with the ace and declarer ruffed. He crossed back to dummy with the ace of trumps and led the jack of diamonds. When East followed with a low diamond, declarer stuffed his heart loser. West won this trick with the king, but he had no way to reach his partner for a club ruff. In the fullness of time declarer forced out the king of trumps and drew the remaining trump. He lost only one diamond trick, the king of spades and the king of clubs!

Dave Conway Owes It All To His Wife

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Nashville is jammed with persons using various methods to get into the country music business.

They trudge door-to-door along Music Row, seeking someone to listen to a song. They station themselves outside recording studios, waiting for a star who might help them out.

They also send letters and demonstration records and tapes. Hundreds arrive daily.

For Dave Conway of Royston, Ga., the mail-in maneuver worked. He signed a recording contract and made the national charts through what his producer, Howard Knight, calls "a one in a million" chance.

He owes it all to his wife, Mary Ann.

She saw an ad in a trade magazine from Knight's record company. Posing as a fan of Conway's, she sent the company a copy of a record her husband had cut on a custom label several years ago.

"Dave has that atmosphere about him that makes you know he is pro material," she wrote the company.

Conway soon got a call from Knight and a few days later the two met in Royston. They had a midnight snack and before dawn Conway had a personal management and recording contract.

Within a week, he was flown to Nashville and recorded "If You're Gonna Love (You Gotta Hurt)," which made the 60s of the top 100 on the national charts.

"The business is so competitive, he's one in a million," Knight said.

The irony is that Conway himself had been sending letters and tapes to Nashville without success. And he had never seen the letter his wife sent.

Parking Fines Not Acceptable

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.'s presidential campaign committee ran up one $306 tab during a 1976 Oregon primary rally that the feds just couldn't accept. It was for parking tickets.

The Federal Election Commission revealed Wednesday that it had rejected the Brown for President Committee to repay $306 in federal matching funds because the 60 tickets didn't qualify as a campaign expense.

Mariana Pfaelzer, a lawyer who is the Brown committee's treasurer, said she didn't agree but repaid the money to end the argument.

Small Towns Contend With Problems Of Big City

EDITORS' NOTE: Overnight change has become commonplace in America's small towns and cities. Population and economic fortunes can change with the seasons. Here, in the last of a two-part series, is a look at how a new breed of small-town city administrators is contending with these problems.

By LEE MITGANG
AP Urban Affairs Writer
As the problems facing small towns and cities become more severe, many of them are turning to professional administrators who know how to deal with potholes in the streets and complex federal forms.

For Plainfield, N.J., the awakening came 10 years ago when the city was torn by racial violence in the 1960s.

"After the riots, the community decided to look at itself. They decided there was no way a part-time city government could cope with the problems," says Larry Bashe, Plainfield's full-time city administrator.

It's a solution that more and more communities are coming to. EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N.C.

A chance of showers Sunday. Fair and a little cooler Monday and Tuesday. Highs in the 70s except 60s in the mountains, and overnight lows in the 50s.

to these days as rapid population changes, new social ills and economic problems strike once placid communities.

Now such communities are increasingly willing to pay for the services of men and women who can draw up five-year land-use plans, repair aging streets and sewers, and keep the city's books straight.

Perhaps most of all, small cities are hiring administrators who know the fine art of federal grantsmanship with all its intricate forms, rules and red-tape. It is hard for the non-expert to tell, to say the least, which of the 1,046 separate federal grant programs administered by 55 different agencies are worth the time and money for a small town to apply for.

Groups of very small or poorer cities, according to Mike Murphy of International City Management Association, often share the services of high-priced administrators or consulting firms to help fathom the federal forms and red-tape.

"It's way the hell more difficult to run a town of 30,000 than it was 20 years ago," Murphy says.

Increasingly, federal involvement in the life and finances of small communities not only means more complex management problems, but can also be the salvation or ruin of its inhabitants. A small town manager must now know how to bring the feds in when it helps, and how to keep them out when it doesn't.

In Plainfield, a combination of a modern management team and federal aid has helped lift spirits after the devastation of rioting. Bashe, 34, and a crew of young managers and planners succeeded in the past few years in drawing millions in Model Cities and Community Development money from Washington. Hundreds of homes have been rehabilitated, a health facility was built, parks were refurbished.

But in towns like Dunkirk, Ohio, Greenville, Maine, Walton, N. Y., and Ambia, Ind., federal intrusion in local affairs has led to despair. In each case, the federal Environmental Protection Agency ordered construction of wastewater treatment or new sewage facilities that the town couldn't afford. Under the EPA's $20 billion Municipal Facilities Construction Grant Program, the federal government picks up 75 per cent of the construction tab, and the rest is paid with local funds — but even that portion is often too much for a small town to bear.

An EPA survey last December of 258 waste water projects showed the cost per household in towns under 50,000 is more than $100 a year in 40 per cent of the communities, more than $200 in 10 per cent of those surveyed, and in a few cases, more than $300.

Then-EPA chief Russell Train ordered regional administrators to be more sensitive to the economic problems of smaller cities and look for cheaper alternatives to local waste treatment plants — such as septic tanks. But towns like Ambia as recently as this summer complained the EPA persists in bulldozing them with costly waste treatment projects.

An observer of Massachusetts city affairs who asked not to be named commented recently about the link between good local management and help from the federal government:

"The whole trouble with grantsmanship is that the rich get richer. Those with good management, like Cambridge, Mass., run rings around the others in obtaining grant money. And technical assistance at the state level is abominable," he said.

"The federal agencies need to be more sensitive to rural leaders who do not have the time, often, to do all they should in obtaining grant monies," says

Bruce Hendrickson, 30-year old mayor of Ashland, Wis., a small city of under 10,000.

"It's very hard to get the feds to come to the locality. But it's an easy way out to say Big Brother is too far away," he says, pointing out that his eager, under-30 staff has helped garner the town more than $1 million in federal Community Development funds since 1975 to make improvements on Ashland's crumbling, 100-year old wood-framed housing.

But Ashland also demonstrates that townspeople often mistrust new management techniques and the growing influence of Washington.

"Most of our staff are outsiders here was some apprehension over us and over the federal programs, but, now I think we've establish some trust."

Rock Hill, S.C., is another city that found that professional managers were often the key to tapping federal spending programs.

"When I arrived in 1965, Rock Hill had not participated in federal programs," says Max Holland, the city manager. Armed with experience in dealing with the federal government, Holland hired "some young fellows" and became one of the few cities under 50,000 to qualify for Model Cities aid. The town established 31 Model Cities programs and 28 were deemed successes, almost unheard of for a city of any size.

Much of that money went toward enforcing and tightening housing code regulations. Two hundred units of public housing have been built, along with dental clinics, neighborhood centers, and street lights. An innovative youth program helped lower juvenile crime more than 50 per cent in three years.

Partly because of Rock Hill's administrative successes, this town of 34,000 has been granted $9.3 million in federal Community Development aid since 1975.

And they've learned to stretch their federal dollars by a process known as "leveraging." Many federal aid programs require that a portion of the money come from the local government. Thus Rock Hill, instead of spending, say, all of its Model Cities or revenue sharing money, uses a portion of it as matching funds for additional federal aid.

In total, says Holland, Rock Hill has received about $50 million in federal funds since he became manager in 1965, when the town had gotten virtually none.

The International City Management Association has recognized the growing management complexities of smaller cities, not only with regard to getting federal dollars, but with planning, communication, housing, the environment and human services. A common phenomenon, says ICMA's Murphy, is that small cities have no way of knowing what innovations other cities have come up with in dealing with problems, so they needlessly repeat costly management mistakes.

Worse, individual departments in a small city government often isolate themselves into little fiefdoms that don't communicate well with each other.

Thus about 200 cities have participated in ICMA's small cities training program, which is supposed to help mold a city's department heads into a single management team capable of dealing effectively with the complexities of city government.

SCS Readies Impact Report

The Soil Conservation Service has prepared a draft Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) on the Swift Creek Watershed Project, it was announced today by State Conservationist Jesse L. Hicks.

The EIS concerns a plan for watershed protection, flood prevention and drainage. Planned works of improvement on the Public Law 566 watershed project, which serves 113,000 acres in Pitt, Beaufort and Craven Counties, will include conservation land treatment supplemented by channel work.

All channel work will be on previously modified channels. Of the 185 miles of work proposed, 150 miles will be lateral channel improvement and 35 miles of clearing, snagging and channel restoration on the main channels.

Copies of the Environmental Impact Statement may be seen at Soil Conservation Service offices at Greenville, Washington, and New Bern, and at the state office in Raleigh, Hicks said.

Comments from federal, state and local government agencies, as well as individuals with special expertise on environmental matters, are invited.

Copies of the statement may be obtained by writing Jesse L. Hicks, Post Office Box 27307, Raleigh, N.C. 27611.

Public Law 566 projects, like all programs and services of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, are available to everyone without regard to race, creed, color, sex or national origin.

AWARD PRESENTED — Dr. Ray Minges was honored last Saturday night during the East Carolina-VMI football game with a plaque for his service in raising approximately $800,000 for the stadium expansion. Minges served as Pitt County chairman and, with subchairmen, raised the largest portion of the $12 million

Two Given Scholarships

Jo L. Williams of Greenville and Edward Crotts of Ayden were awarded scholarships from the N. C. Public Health Association at the Association's annual meeting in Chapel Hill last night.

Mrs. Williams is a public health nurse supervisor in the Martin-Tyrrell-Washington District Health Department. She is a first-year student in the Greenville branch of the UNC-CH off-campus Masters Degree Program in Health Administration, offered through the School of Public Health Department of Health Administration. She earned her B. S. in nursing from UNC-CH in 1969.

Crotts, a sanitarian at the Edgecombe County Health Department, is pursuing a Master's degree in Environmental Health at East Carolina University.

The scholarships were awarded on the basis of potential contribution of public health service to the people of North Carolina.

Attention: Farmers who depend on fungicides to produce disease-free crops

EPA should hear from you!

The EPA is investigating alleged health hazards of DITHANE® fungicide, manufactured by Rohm and Haas Company, along with the whole spectrum of EBDC fungicides such as Zineb, Maneb, Mancozeb and others.

Scientists in America and throughout the world believe there is no health hazard created by the use of these EBDC fungicides on your crops. The EPA, however, may accept data from laboratory tests on mice and rats as indicating a hazard.

EPA will balance benefit evidence against hazard evidence. Evidence of benefit can keep these products in use. That's why EPA should hear from you within the next few weeks.

Specifically—EPA welcomes certain information about your use of fungicides and your thoughts about the consequences of these fungicides being taken off the market.

Here's a summary of what EPA wants to know:

- Major uses you make of EBDC fungicides and the estimated quantities used on each of your crops.
- Are there any available substitutes for EBDC fungicides and, if there are any, what would their use do to your costs.
- An estimate on the change in your productivity (yield per acre and/or total output) if EBDC fungicides were no longer available.
- Your guess as to the impact on production of major agricultural commodities and retail food prices of these commodities should EBDC fungicides be removed from the market.

Your letter should contain EPA's code notation: OPP30000/18

Registrants or other interested persons who desire to submit benefit information should consider submitting information on the following subjects, along with any other relevant information they desire to submit:

1. Identification of the major uses of the pesticide, including estimated quantities used by crop or other application.
2. Identification of the minor uses of the pesticide, including estimated quantities used by category such as lawn and garden uses and household uses.
3. Identification of registered alternative products for the uses set forth in (1) and (2) above, including an estimate of their availability.
4. Determination of the change in costs to the user of providing equivalent pesticide treatment with any available substitute products.
5. Assessment of regulation impact upon user productivity (e.g., yield per acre and/or total output) from using available substitute pesticides or from using no other pesticides.
6. If the impacts upon either user costs or productivity are significant, a qualitative assessment of the regulation's impact on production of major agricultural commodities and retail food prices of such commodities.
