As the ECU Marching Pirates played the interminable theme from "Star Wars," a 14-foot papier-mache model of Chancellor Dr. Leo Jenkins — boasting the caption "Now Do You Believe?" — strolled proudly down Fifth Street before an exhuberant crowd of Pirate supporters.

The giant of ECU rubbed shoulders with trees along the path as he received tribute for "Milestones of Success" to mark 30 years of accomplishments and his final homecoming as chancellor of East Carolina University.

Thirteen floats and nine marching bands from throughout the area escorted the purple and gold figure past the campus and fraternity houses on its trek towards the downtown area.

"I heard some people at the parade — who were not from Greenville — say it was one of the best they've seen," commented Stuart Aronson, the voice of the Marching Pirates. "They thought the bands were tremendous, and they really enjoyed the halftime show at the game.

"I thought the conduct of the fans during all the activities was a real tribute to Dr. Jenkins," he said. "It was a very sincere outpouring of affection' I was delighted with everybody.

"We had a good crowd at the parade, and it seemed to be a very nice afternoon all around, except for the little bit of rain we got."

Aronson said he saw Jenkins right after the game and the chancellor seemed "really moved and pleased" by the activities of the day.

During halftime, the largest crowd in Pirate history, some 25,000 strong, saw the crowning of the ECU Homecoming Pirate, Jandyl Masters, sponsored by the Inter-Fraternity Council (IFC), and the runnerup for homecoming queen, Velma Jackson, sponsored by Souls.

Awards went also to Phi Kappa Tau fraternity for the best float in the parade, the 14-foot statue of Dr. Jenkins, Kappa Sigma fraternity for house decorations, and Greene Dorm for dorm decorations.

Five Men Are Killed In Building's Collapse

SPARTANBURG, S.C. (AP) — The 63-year-old Andrews Building, scheduled to be demolished Sunday, collapsed Saturday, killing five men who were working inside, authorities said.

Two other men escaped without major injury.

The dead men were identified by city officials as J. F. "Rusty" Russell, a demolitions expert with Tompkins and Co. of Oklahoma City, Okla.; Jack Deutsch, 49, the supervisor of the project for Big Chief Construction Co. of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.; Dennis Collins of Big Chief Construction, Fred Parris of Joe Durham Construction Co. of Spartanburg and James Gillespie, contracts officer for the city of Spartanburg.

The two who escaped were identified as Joe Durham of Joe Durham Construction, and Allen Carlisle, believed to be a construction worker.

City employes and workers from the demolition company rushed bulldozers to the scene after the collapse to clear away some of the debris so they could search for the bodies.

Authorities initially thought that explosives being laid in the 10-story, steel and masonry structure had accidentally gone off, but they later said the building had weakened and collapsed.

City officials at the scene said workers had been strengthening the building's weakening beams when it fell.

They said there were five to seven men inside. Two were known to have escaped but authorities said they were uncertain about the fate of the others.

The men who escaped received minor injuries, according to the initial reports. They were quoted as saying they heard bricks and other material shifting in the old building just before it fell.

WFBC-TV of Greenville said one of the persons believed to be trapped in the building was a demolition company worker who was laying charges in the building.

The charges were to be set by explosive experts from Tompkins and Co. of Oklahoma City, Okla., in preparation for a planned demolition Sunday at 8 a.m.

The building, owned by the city, was to have been "imploded" to make way for an office complex to be named Spartan Square.

No Support Price Changes Wanted

North Carolina tobacco farmers called for better protection of tobacco products instead of price-support changes during a meeting here Friday of a federal task force appointed to study tobacco programs.

The growers recommended that tobacco companies be encouraged to purchase stocks from the Flue-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Corp.

P.R. Smith, chairman of the task force appointed by U.S. Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, said he expected to have recommendations prepared by December, but added he had reached no decision on whether to change the price support system.

At the meeting, the last of four in the Southeast, several Eastern North Carolina growers reaffirmed their opposition to legislative changes that would lower the government support level, while exporters said the present system will continue to hurt sales of American leaf overseas.

The growers made it clear they strongly supported the N.C. Farm Bureau Federation's stand that any changes could be made administratively.

"The legislative route would be dangerous and unnecessary," said Bruce Flye of Rocky Mount.

Flye and other speakers argued that support prices should be reduced for low- quality leaf grades and the price raised on better leaf, maintaining the same average.

Exporters contended that the present price-support formula, based on the cost of production, is forcing American tobacco to be priced out of the world market. But the growers said foreign sanctions on American tobacco are largely to blame for export declines and that reducing the farmers' income would not necessarily increase exports.

Instead of price-support changes, growers recommended that the government provide better protection for tobacco products and that foreign tobacco imported into the U.S. for blending with American tobacco be specifically labelled.

To help relieve the oversupply of downstalk tobacco, the growers recommended that there be new quota increases and that tobacco companies be encouraged to purchase stocks from the Flue-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Corp.

Flye called for changes in guidelines that will allow the co-op to sell tobacco to anyone after two years.

Spokesmen for the Leaf Tobacco Exporters Association, the Dibrell Co. and Universal Tobacco Co. told the panel that some foreign buyers have already reduced their purchases in response to unusually high prices paid for tobacco this year. They said the trend will continue unless a new program is developed.

Others attending the hearing included three congressmen from the state's primary tobacco producing region: Rep. Walter Jones of Farmville, D-N.C.; Rep. Charles O. Whitley of Mount Olive, D-N.C.; and Rep. L.H. Fountain of Tarboro, D-N.C.

They Tried

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A group of Charlotte junior high school students made a stab at writing the Pledge of Allegiance, and a few of them even got it right.

Teachers asked their students to put the pledge on paper after a similar experiment with 111 students in Honolulu. In that attempt, nobody got the pledge completely correct, and one student used the phrase "one nation under guard."

Social studies teachers at the Carmel Junior High School tested 80 students. Three of them got the pledge letter-perfect. Some left God lowercase and some capitalized the word, and a couple even added, "Amen."

No state law requires the pledge in Carolinas schools, and Charlotte-Mecklenburg has not opted for it.

Little use may be one problem in familiarity with the pledge. Another modern educational phenomenon — the inability to spell — may be another.

The mind-boggler comes right at the beginning. "Allegiance." The students who skipped past that with "alligince" and "allegence" were faced with the next big hurdle in "indivisible."

"Invisible" and "individual" seemed to fit for a lot of people. Misspellings abounded, some looking a great deal like "inadvisable."

"To the republic for which it stands," became "to the republican" to some, and "for which I stand" for others.

One student wrote, "to the republican for witch is stand."

Then there was the student who, in the tradition of the Ceasars, started off, "I pledge a legion."

Carter Role Said Spur To Church Attendance

By JO-ANE BYRNE

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Ten years ago Sunday school and church attendance was falling in the United States, but then a Sunday school teacher by the name of Jimmy Carter came along and things began to change, a local preacher says.

The Rev. David Yeats, pastor of Wooddale Baptist Church in Richfield, Minn., said publicity about President Carter's Sunday school teaching definitely had a good effect on church and Sunday school attendance levels.

Carter's religious role "says to people that Sunday school is not just for kids," Yeats said.

Arnold Carlson, executive director of the Minnesota Sunday School Association, said there has been a definite increase seen in Sunday school interest among the evangelical churches, which stress that their followers have a personal relationship with Jesus Christ.

"The '60s phenomena and its disenchantment with life resulted in a fallout that affected the churches," Carlson said. "The church didn't minister to young people's needs and they looked for a more informal — more unstructured manner of worship."

Now the pendulum is coming back, Carlson said, and there is a quickening of interest in Sunday schools among people of all ages.

Sunday school has a real substance these days, Yeats said, with more churches upgrading their adult education programs.

"Teachers just don't teach," he said. "They relate it to the bumps and bruises of everyday life."

The revival of interest in Christian education has been seen in increasing enrollments at numerous seminaries around the country. Yeats cited Trinity Fundamental Divinity Church in Chicago and Bethel Seminary in St. Paul as among those seminaries reporting rapidly growing attendance by both men and women.

Speeding Car Crash Kills 2

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Two Charlotte teenagers were killed and four others were injured, none seriously, when an out-of-control automobile rammed into a concrete pole at high speed early Saturday, police said.

Police said the driver of the car, Roy Goggins, 17, and Mary Ann Rory, 19, were killed in the accident.

Officers said the six persons had just left a fair when the car went out control as it went down an access ramp from Interstate 77 to the Brookshire Freeway.

Officers said the car's speedometer was frozen at 105 miles per hour. The force of the impact ripped the car in half.

More Flooding

TURIN, Italy (UPI) — New downpours hit flood-ravaged areas of northern Italy Saturday, turning Genoa streets into rivers, cutting off the Alpine city of Aosta and swelling tributaries of the mighty river Po.

Strike Idles 63 Vessels

NEW YORK (AP) — The week-old longshoremen's strike against containerized cargo at Atlantic and Gulf Coast docks has immobilized 63 ships in U.S. ports, according to the federal Maritime Administration.

The agency says the walkout by the 50,000-member International Longshoremen's Association has left 22 U.S. flag ships and 41 foreign flag vessels lying idle in port.

Thirty-eight ships were stranded in Gulf Coast ports, mostly in New Orleans, where some 4,-500 ILA members were to vote on whether they would go along with a leadership request to halt job actions against general cargo ships. Results of that vote were expected later in the day.

Efforts to settle the walkout, which began Sept. 30, have been at a standstill. Chief federal mediator Wayne Horvitz has been keeping in touch with both sides, but no further face-to-face meetings have been scheduled.

Representatives of shipping firms in Northern ports reportedly have agreed to a union demand for guarantees that its pension and welfare funds will be kept at minimum levels.

However, representatives of Southern firms have balked at the guarantees, leading to the current impasse.

The union funds have been drained by cutbacks due to containerization. In the New York-New Jersey port area along, the number of longshoremen's jobs has dropped from 40,000 in the mid-1950s to about 11,800 today.

Endorse Concept

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is endorsing the concept of a mixed force of conventional and missile-carrying aircraft to replace the B1 bomber canceled by the Carter administration.

It approved a $364.5 million supplemental military spending authorization bill Friday that provides research and development funds for a number of projects. Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., was the only dissenter on a 66-1 vote.

The main elements of the bill, which now goes to the House, include $20 million to develop the FB111 fighter-bomber as a long-range cruise missile carrier. It would have the range of the B1 and the load capacity of the B52, the aging bellwether of the Air Force's present strategic bomber fleet.

It also would provide $15 million to start development of a future cruise missile-carrying aircraft to replace the B52.

Local Bank Officer Dies

Mr. J. Curtis Hendrix, 43, executive Vice President of the First State Bank of Greenville, died in Pitt Memorial Hospital at 10:30 Friday night.

J[illegible]TIS HENDRIX

Funeral services will be conducted at three o'clock Sunday afternoon at the Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church by his pastor, the Rev. James H. Bailey Jr. Burial will be in Pinewood Memorial Park. The body will be taken from the home, 111 Cheshire Drive, in Brook Valley, to the Church at the funeral hour.

Mr. Hendrix, a native of Greenville, attended the Greenville City Schools and East Carolina University, receiving the BS and MA degrees. He resigned from North Carolina National Bank where he was City Executive, and since September, 1974, had served as Executive Vice President and member of the Board of Directors of the First State Bank in Greenville. He was a member of the Greenville Kiwanis Club, past Chairman of the Salvation Army Advisory Board, a

Senator Kennedy Claims 'Welfare' For Big Oil

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Some big oil companies get so many tax breaks that the government in effect provides them "huge welfare payments," Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., charged Saturday.

Kennedy released a report by the Library of Congress which examined the tax benefits and liabilities of oil and gas companies.

Chief benefits to some companies are allowances for writing off the expenses of unproductive drilling and certain other drilling costs, plus a tax break based on the fact that oil is a "depleting" resource.

When all the benefits are lumped together, "those producers receiving percentage depletion benefits may actually be subject to what, in effect, amounts to a negative income tax," the report said.

The report translated various tax breaks into an effective tax rate for the various producers.

In some cases, the library's figures showed, some producers get a 3 per cent "negative income tax," or Treasury subsidy, from the combination of benefits.

"These figures dramatically demonstrate the enormous and unjustified federal tax subsidies flowing to the oil and gas industry," Kennedy said. "Some of the wealthiest oil and gas producers in the country are actually receiving huge welfare payments from the Treasury every year."

Neither Kennedy nor the report identified any companies by name.

The report said the exact effect of tax provisions "is difficult to determine because there is no publicly available data on oil production alone which would provide appropriate information."

Financial information on the companies is hard to come by in a form that could be made appropriate to the study, the report said.

It said the use of the "percentage depletion allowance" has been ended for most producers. But even without that, it added, the effective tax rate on oil and gas drilling in the United States is 17.2 per cent.

Kennedy said that is half what other industries pay.

Those few producers wh[illegible] qualify for depletion get an effective tax rate of below zero, he said.

"It is the height of hypocrisy for these producers to be demanding even higher incentives for production, while reaping both the profit windfalls that high prices are already bringing and the tax windfalls that the Internal Revenue Code already bestows," Kennedy said.

Trial Publicity Claimed Unfair

MIAMI (AP) — Publicity surrounding the "TV intoxication" murder trial of Ronny Zamora will prevent Darrell Agrella, his alleged accomplice, from getting a fair trial anywhere in the United States, Agrella's attorney claims.

Milton Grusmark asked Circuit Court Judge Paul Baker on Friday to throw out all charges against the 14-year-old Agrella.

Grusmark had said earlier he intended to seek a change of venue for Agrella's trial, but he said he had changed his mind.

"I think it would be unfair to ask the state and a private law firm to bear the expense of moving the trial to another city. The defendant's family does not have the funds," he said.

Baker said he would rule on the motion Nov. 7, the same day he plans to sentence Zamora, 15, for the June 4 murder of his neighbor, Elinor Haggart, 83.

A jury of nine men and three women found Zamora guilty of first-degree murder and three lesser offenses late Thursday, rejecting defense attorney Ellis Rubin's contention that Zamora suffered "involuntary television intoxication."

The jury deliberations took less than two hours.

"I feel the boy is sick, he needs help," said jury member Irving Winer. "But the facts just did not prove he was intoxicated by television."

By law, Zamora must be sentenced to life in prison with no opportunity for parole for 25 years.

Rubin drew national attention to the case when he tried to prove that Zamora's constant viewing of crime shows on television rendered the teen-ager incapable of judging right from wrong.

The trial was covered by television and still cameras under a statewide one-year experiment.

Concorde Still Barred

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Concorde won't be landing at Kennedy Airport in New York until the Supreme Court reviews legal arguments over the supersonic plane.

The high court on Friday temporarily blocked an appeals court order that would have permitted immediate landings at Kennedy. The justices scheduled a review for their Oct. 14 private conference.

The one-paragraph Supreme Court order is a victory for the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which has been fighting to keep the plane out of New York.

The authority, operator of Kennedy, argued it has not yet determined the possible success of noise suits from the airport area's 500,000 residents.

The plane is twice as loud on takeoff as the loudest subsonic jets now in use, tests show. It's advantage is a 1,400-miles-per-hour cruising speed that could cut a London-to-New York trip to 3½ hours, half the time of a conventional jet.

The plane currently has one landing site in the United States, Dulles Airport near Washington.

Friday Accidents

Two collisions investigated Friday by Greenville Police resulted in an estimated 2,400 property damage officers reported.

Heaviest damage resulted from a 9:05 a.m. collision at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Charles Street and involved cars driven by Stanley Owen Setters Jr. of Jackson Trailer Pk., and Roselyn Owens Vandiford of 308 Clairmont Cir.

Officers, who charged Mrs. Vandiford with operating left of center, estimated damage at $800 to the Setters car and $1,000 to the Vandiford vehicle.

Cars driven by Glenwood Wooten of Route 1, Fountain and David Albert West of Grifton collided about 7:55 a.m. on Memorial Drive, 150 feet South of the Pine Street intersection.

Investigators estimated damage from the mishap at $600 to the Wooten car and $50 to the West auto.

Damage Was Heavy

An estimated $1,400 damage resulted from a 9:50 a.m. mishap near the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Memorial Drive Saturday.

Police identified the drivers of the cars involved as Donna Faye Foote of Conetoe, Irene Warren Whitehurst of Route 1, Stokes and Claude Odrow Williams of 404B Darden Dr.

Investigators, who charged Williams with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $800 to the Foote car, $200 to the Whitehurst auto and $400 to the Williams vehicle.

Saturday Collisions

Two pre-dawn collisions here Saturday resulted in an estimated $2,800 property damage according to Greenville Police Department investigators.

Officers reported heavest damage resulted from a 1:10 a.m. mishap on Tenth Street, 150 feet West of the Rocksprings Road intersection involving cars driven by Danny Vernell Nowell of Route 1, Gates, and James Carlos Wheeler of Route 3, Zebulon.

Investigators, who estimated damage at $1,000 to each of the cars, reported Nowell was injured in the collision.

Joseph P. Sidley of Route 5, Greenville was reported injured when the motorcycle he was riding collided with an auto driven by Douglas Wayne Newsome of Route 1, Fountain, about 2:15 a.m. on Cotanche Street, 120 feet South of the Fourth Street intersection.

Police, who estimated damage at $800 to the motorcycle and said no damage resulted to the Newsome car, charged Newsome with driving under the influence and hit and run driving.

Liason Officers

The Pitt County Board of Education has been awarded a school liason grant totaling $35,474, and is now seeking applicants to fill two positions as liason officers to work with potential problem cases in grades four through eight, Superintendent Ott Alford announced Saturday.

The grant, funded by the Dept. of Natural and Economic Resources, will be used to employ two officers who will dress in blazers — not customary police uniforms — and monitor the activities of children with attendance and disciplinary problems, Alford said.

Preferably, candidates should be college graduates with a degree in either sociology, psychology or corrections, he said.

"Those preferences can be set aside for someone with work in law enforcement," he added. "Hopefully, the positions will provide a better image of police enforcement and help modify the work that is being done in these problem areas."

The superintendent said candidates will be selected this week, and the program will hopefully be implemented by August 17.

Applicants should contact Katherine Lewis at the Pitt County Board of Education.

Speeding Passenger Train Jumps Tracks; 16 Injured

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer

SPENCER, N.C. (AP) — A speeding passenger train jumped its tracks and sideswiped a string of parked freight cars in a railroad yard here early Saturday, injuring 16 of the 135 persons aboard and scattering mangled cars for 200 yards.

Three passengers from the Southern Railway Co. train were hospitalized in nearby Salisbury but a medical spokesman said their injuries were not serious. Others were treated at the hospital for minor injuries and put on another train.

"It was like an earthquake," said Terence T. DeFilippo of Fort Smith, Ark., from his bed at Rowan Memorial Hospital, where he was being treated for numbness in his back and legs.

The train, the Southern Crescent, was heading for New Orleans from Washington when it apparently hit a malfunctioning switch near this small town about 50 miles north of Charlotte.

"We had a clear signal when we went under the bridge (about a quarter mile from the accident)," said engineer Sam Sharpe.

"I don't know what happended. We just ran into the side of another train."

Southern spokesman Charlie Morgret estimated that the four diesel engines were pulling 11 cars at about 50 m.p.h. when the engines and front cars jumped the track.

The engines plowed three feet deep into the black dirt for about 50 yards as they scraped alongside eight freight cars. The train's baggage car and four passenger cars jackknifed and tilted behind the engines, throwing passengers against the walls and seats.

But passengers in the rear cars said they hardly felt the impact and rescue workers said a few were still asleep when ambulances arrived.

Passengers in one of the front cars were trapped inside when doors were blocked by derailed cars in front and behind. They were freed through a broken window.

"It was rough for a few minutes. The car was on the ground and felt like it was going sideways," said conductor R.E. McCowan.

Morgret said the cause of the derailment was under investigation. But workers at the scene who were closely examining a switch near the spot where the engines left the track said they believed it was the cause.

DeFilippo, who was going from Washington to Atlanta, said he was in a washroom and was bounced against the walls by the impact.

"There was no warning. We were going fast and all I heard was the hiss of air brakes," he said.

A hospital spokesman identified the two other hospitalized passengers as Clarence T. Higgins and Mary O. Henderson, both of Washington. The extent of their injuries was not revealed.

The engines were heavily damaged as they grated against the freight cars. Windows in the engineers' cabins of the first two were shattered, metal was torn from the sides and a gaping 15-foot hole was ripped in the side of the third engine.

The impact knocked the freight cars off their tracks and turned over three of them including a tanker. The tanker was leaking liquid but authorities on the scene said it was not dangerous.

Six passenger cars stayed on the tracks and they were later hooked to a new engine to continue the train's schedule.

The train was scheduled to stop in Salisbury a few miles away and later in Charlotte.

Sharpe, a veteran of 40 years with the railroad, said he was running about 20 minutes behind schedule but "that's not unusual."

The derailment brought a fleet of ambulances and rescue vehicles from neighboring towns and cities. Ambulances that did not carry the injured were used along with taxis to take passengers from the wreckage to a motel, where they waited while the undamaged passenger cars were connected to an engine.

The new train pulled out about 7:50 a.m.

Repair crews flocked to the scene and began their work in the early morning darkness under the glare of floodlights. A crane was brought in to untangle the jumble of cars and track.

Morgret said he expected the wreckage to be cleared by late Saturday and he said the repair work would not interfere with railroad traffic that could be routed onto other tracks in the yard.

Lewis Landreth and his wife, Peggy, who live in a mobile home adjacent to the railroad yard, said they were awakening by a loud grinding when the trains hit.

Russians Face New Repression

By DOUGLAS STANGLIN

MOSCOW (UPI) — Adoption of a new Soviet constitution promising individual freedom actually signals the start of a "new repression," a prominent Soviet dissident said Saturday in the first unofficial comment on the document.

"The adoption of the constitution means the mobilization of public opinion to promote arbitrary action," Pyotr Grigorenko, a former major general in the Soviet army, said. "In this way the danger increases."

The new charter, approved by the rubber-stamp Supreme Soviet in a 13-minute vote Friday, further ties public rights to the interest of the state.

"One should be ready for new repression," said Grigorenko, a member of the Moscow group monitoring Soviet compliance with the Helsinki accords.

A key phrase in the constitution regarding individual rights says, "Citizens' exercise of their rights and freedom must not harm the interests of society or the state, or the rights of other citizens."

The new constituion guarantees freedom of speech, of the press, and of assembly, meetings, street procession and demonstrations. But it says they must be carried out "in accordance with the interests of the people and in order to strengthen and develop the socialist system."

Grigorenko said when individual rights fall under such a limitation "they are in fact canceled by it."

Grigorenko, 71, who once headed the computer department of the prestigious Soviet military academy at Frunze, said the new constitution fails to address important personal freedoms, while including "appeals and propaganda" and frivolous rights.

"The right to strike is not even mentioned," Grigorenko said. "Nor the freedom to live where you wish to live and the right to leave the country and come back in when you want."

Grigorenko, who has spent more than six years in mental institutions because of his outspoken views, said the new constitution replacing the 1936 document drawn up by Josef Stalin, is not likely to have any bearing on Soviet life.

"The old constitution wasn't enacted," Grigorenko said. "The authority did what they wanted. It's not necessary to apply the new constitution either."

VEPCO Rates Will Go Up

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Virginia Electric & Power Co. will raise its rates by 15 per cent, effective Nov. 1, in 21 municipalities in Virginia and North Carolina — provided the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission approves.

Vepco said Friday it has won agreement for a $5,586,000 rate hike to eight Virginia and 13 North Carolina municipalities subject to the federal agency's approval. The increase is a little more than half the $9.2 million Vepco sought in June from the FERC.

The hike, which Vepco said resulted from months of negotiations with the municipalities, is aimed at bringing the utility a 9.6 per cent rate of return on its investment.

Vepco, just as it did in an earlier rate increase affecting electric cooperatives in the two states which buy from it, agreed not to seek another rate hike before June 1, 1978.

Another part of the agreement is a revision of Vepco's fuel adjustment charge under which it will be based on a three-month average of fuel costs rather than a one-month average.

This will reduce fluctuations in the fuel adjustment charges, through which the company passes along to its customers the rising costs of fossil fuel used to generate power, the company said.

Vepco's retail residential, commercial and industrial customers in Virginia and North Carolina, whose rates are regulated by state agencies, will not be affected by the agreement.

The 15 per cent rate increase will bring its 1978 revenues from the 21 localities to an estimated $43 million, Vepco said.

Municipalities affected by the rate increase are:

Virginia — Blackstone, Culpeper, Elkton, Iron Gate, Manassas, Wakefield, Franklin and Harrisonburg.

North Carolina — Belhaven, Edenton, Elizabeth City, Enfield, Greenville, Hamilton, Hertford, Hobgood, Robersonville, Scotland Neck, Tarboro, Washington and Windsor.

Misleading

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Piedmont Airlines says a magazine ranking, which says the company has the nation's worst major airlines safety record, is misleading.

Fortune magazine ranked the nation's 19 major airlines according to the number of crashes compared to passenger miles flown and number of takeoffs. Piedmont was rated last on the passenger miles criteria and 17th on crashes per takeoffs.

"Attempts to rank airline accidents are misleading, because there is no way to accurately compare them in a realistic manner," the spokesman said. "Almost every accident has, at least as a contributing cause, something that is totally beyond the control of those involved," said a Piedmont spokesman.

"Our company was absolved of all blame in...the Asheville accident that accounts for over 70 per cent of the fatalities attributed to Piedmont in the Fortune ranking," the spokesman said of one of two accidents Piedmont's planes have had in the past 10 years.

The magazine agreed that its rankings are open to debate.

"There is no entirely satisfactory way to measure the safety of an airline," the magazine said. "The body counts and other statistics tell nothing about the causes of crashes.

"Yet the businessmen who must buckle up in the line of duty have an understandable desire to cut through such extenuations and learn what their chances are," Fortune said.

The magazine said Piedmont had two crashes involving 117 fatalities in the last 10 years. The airlines logged 8.5 billion passenger miles and 1.7 million takeoffs in that period.

A number of airlines had more accidents and more people killed during that time than Piedmont, but because they had more flights and flew more passenger miles, their rates were lower.

Wake Forest May Return $300,000

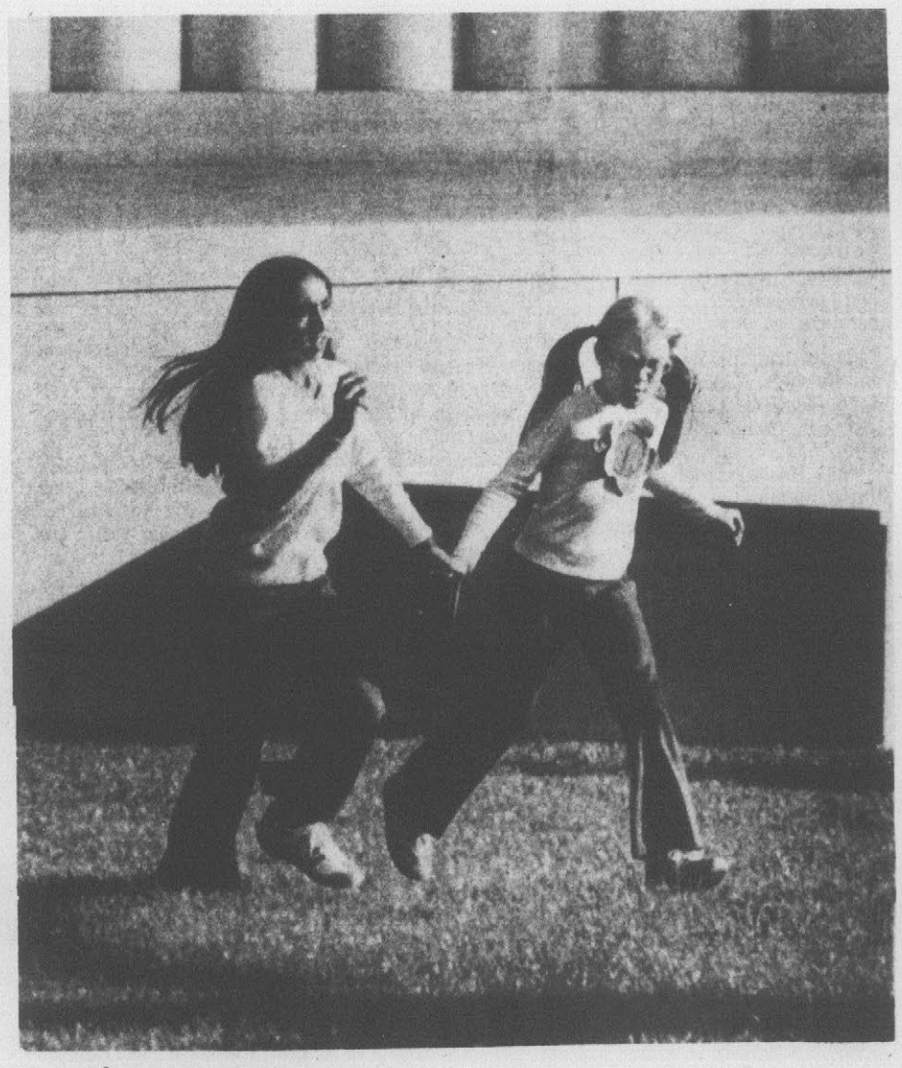

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The Wake Forest University biology department may have to return a $300,000 federal grant following objections raised by a Baptist State Convention committee.

About three-fourths of the money would fund a new biology building and equipment at the Baptist-supported school, with the remainder for salaries.

"The committee hasn't looked upon capital investments by schools with favor," said the Rev. Coy Privette, convention president. "We just don't think that Baptist schools should take money from the general taxpayers to operate. We don't think we should take money from Jews, atheists and other non-Christians."

Convention policy forbids the denomination's schools from accepting government funds unless directly related to services rendered by the school.

The medical school, also related to the Baptist convention, is not subject to review by the grant committee.

Hunt Joins ECU Faculty

ECU News Bureau

Larece Hunt, former Robeson County educator, has joined the East Carolina University General Assistance Center as a human relations specialist.

Hunt will provide technical assistance and staff development services to N.C. school districts who seek help from the ECU Center on matters related to school desegregation. The Center is part of the ECU School of Education.

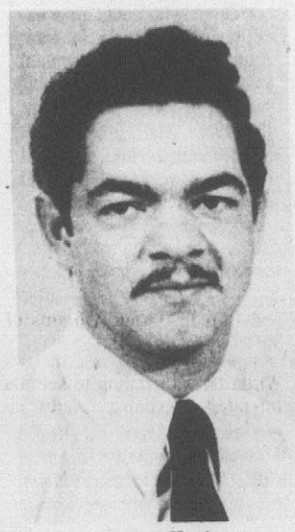

Hunt, a Lumbee Indian, has the BS degree in elementary education from Pembroke State University and a master's degree in guidance and counseling from Appalachian State University. His career includes junior high school teaching at Green Cove Elementary School and counseling at Fairgrove High School, both in Robeson County.

He has also been a professional education counselor in the Fort Bragg General Education Development Program

Hunt is a member of the American Personnel and Guidance Association and the N.C. Association of Educators, and is cited in "Outstanding Educators of America."

Dr. Clinton R. Downing director of the ECU General Assistance Center, said the employment of Hunt "adds a special advantage" to the operations of the Center.

"With the increasing number of Indian students in North Carolina public schools, there is a need for someone of the Indian minority to express and relate to the needs of the Indian child," he said.

Parade

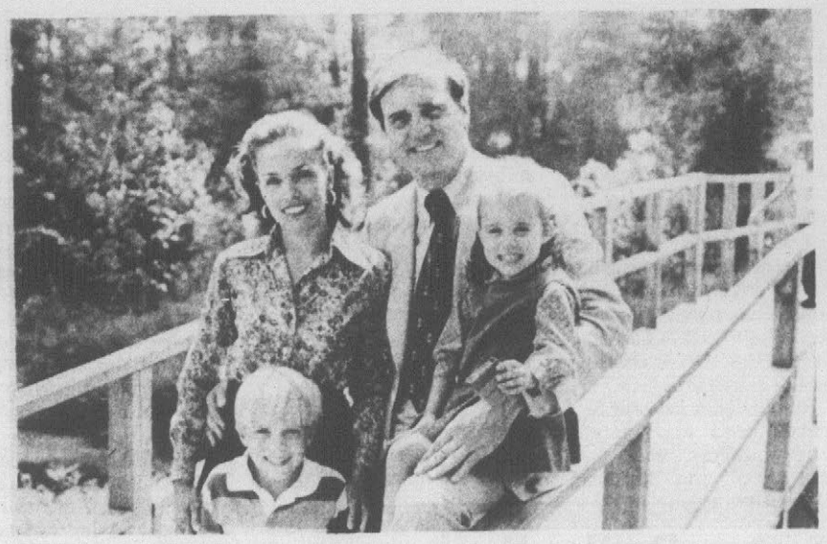

Plans are being made for the Greenville Jaycees' annual Christmas Parade, now scheduled for Dec. 10, according to Glenn Willingham, the chapter's external vice president.

Willingham said that John Dilday will serve as chairman for this year's parade project for the Jaycees.

He noted that anyone needing information concerning participation in the parade or other items regarding the holiday event should contact Dilday at 756-7289.

Progress On County's Project

The county seems to be progressing on developing a system of solid waste pickup throughout the county.

County Commissioners Board Chairman Charles Gaskins said Monday that plans were being formulated to organize solid waste collectors so that they would work on a district basis with no overlapping of districts. Each district would contain about the same number of people and equal driving distances.

The collectors would provide door-to-door pickup and residents would pay a fee for the service.

The collectors would be franchised by the county and fees would be set by the county. Thus the program would be regulated by the county government.

A program of setting up 40 cubic yard containers throughout the county would also be instituted for residents who preferred to take solid waste to a collection point rather than participate in a door-to-door program.

It looks as if the county commissioners might be on the way to solving a critical problem for rural residents. Rural solid waste collection must be provided, and this latest plan has promise.

Senators Adopted A Wrong Approach

The U. S. Senate voted last week to give cheaper electric rates to senior citizens.

No doubt the senators' hearts are in the right place in their decision on this matter, but we're afraid its a bad approach.

Electricity is a commodity, sold largely by private industry. Its cost must cover the generating agency's costs and if a reduction is given for one group, another segment of customers must bear it.

There are plenty of ways Congress can help senior citizens — tax credits or even federal energy supplements for them. Reduced electric rates is not the proper way.

'Don't involve me in your petty bickering!'

Has Eyes For Excellence

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — North Carolina's Community College system is now 20 years old, and as it moves into the third decade, should begin putting more emphasis on excellence, says the man who heads the program.

"The developmental emphasis now shifts from two decades of founding and building a system of two-year post-secondary community institutions to seeking in the third decade the goal of excellence in total education," says Ben E. Fountain, Jr., president of the department.

The system now has 57 colleges or technical institutes, each occupying its own campus. That goal has been reached nearly four years ahead of the timetable.

Speaking to the Community College Advisory Council just set up by the State Board of Education, Fountain said the insistence on excellence must be tailored to meet the basic rule that the schools are "open door" units taking all comers; and offering both job-training and educational programs. Thus, quality must be stressed at the point of exit—not point of entry.

"The quality of instruction and the standards of learning must ensure that persons completing programs are well prepared for further learning if they so choose, or are fitted to perform well in their occupations even though the door to education is open to all who can benefit," Fountain said.

"Those who doubt that excellence is possible in community colleges and technical institutes will be proven as wrong as those doubters of the 1950s who claimed that job training and general education could not succeed on one campus," he said.

More Milfoil

After completing three mowing cycles of milfoil plots in Coinjock Bay, Graham Davis has discouraging news: the total plant mass in plots mowed is greater than that in non-mowed plots.

The mowing, it was hoped, would cause the milfoil to diminish, ending complaints from boaters and fishermen that the weed is taking over the sounds in some Coastal areas.

But mowing only caused the milfoil to come back "in densities far greater than before," reports the Sea Grant program at N. C. State University.

No Relaxation

Don't expect State Troopers to let up on enforcement of the 55 MPH speed limit in North Carolina.

"Drivers can be assured that the Highway Patrol will protect them from speeding drivers and that enforcement will not be relaxed," says J. Phil Carlton, Secretary of crime control and public safety.

One reason: figures for the first 30 days of the crackdown show a 23.5 per cent drop in traffic deaths; 27 fewer people killed than during the same period in 1976.

Safety Belts

Of 307 children and teenagers killed in auto accidents in this State during 1974 and 1975, only five were wearing safety belts. Head injuries killed more than half of those, and wearing a belt could have kept the victim from flying into the windshield, steering wheel, or other part of the car.

Study by the Highway Safety Research Center at Chapel Hill also finds that more children die in North Carolina from wreck injuries than from diseases.

Sunday Morning Notes

Democratic Senatorial candidate McNeil Smith was in the area last week as he brought his campaign to the east.

While visiting The Daily Reflector office he noted photos of the 1970 eclipse on the wall. The time lapse photos were taken by Tommy Forrest, the newspaper photographer and they show the moon gradually covering the face of the sun during the rare total eclipse which was fully seen here in Greenville.

Smith noted that his daughter was a young girl at the time and he took her out to see the eclipse with instructions not to look at it.

When it was over she asked, "Daddy, when do you start going blind?"

"What do you mean?" he asked.

"Well," she confessed. "I sneaked a look at the sun, and I wasn't supposed to."

Not everyone goes blind from looking at an eclipse, but there is always the danger of eye damage from staring directly at the sun. And people in Piedmont North Carolina are going to have the opportunity to see, if not a total, a partial eclipse on Oct 12.

Dr. Steve Danford, assistant professor of physics at UNC-Greensboro says, "People in this area (Piedmont) should be able to get a look at a partial eclipse if they've got the equipment. We'll be in the penumbra, the outer shadow area where the sun is partially obscured."

As the experts did around here in 1970, Danford cautioned against looking directly at the eclipse. Even using filters or tinted glass is not advised. "It's just too dangerous." he said. The sun's heat can crack the glass and expose the eye to the sun's rays.

The simplist way to watch is with a pinhole camera.

Light Beers Basic

By MICHAEL J. CONLON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Are all "light" beers the same?

Basically, yes. The same process is involved, one that results in more complete fermentation during the brewing process. As a result, light beers contain less alcohol, fewer carbohydrates, fewer calories and more water.

Right now, most brewers of light beers tell you they contain one third fewer calories than the regular beer of that brand.

Both brewing industry spokesmen and officials at the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms say even lighter beers containing about half the calories of regular beer are in the works and will soon be marketed

Currentyly, most light beers contain about 96 calories per 12-ounce can or bottle.

One bureau official, asked if there were really any difference between brands, said "None, other than the usual differences in taste and so on."

The government does not have a formula by which beers must be made if they are going to be called light. But once brewers use that designation or refer to calories they must spell out the exact number of calories on the label and in advertising and compare the product only to their regular beer, not to another brand.

In addition, the bureau allows a brewer a leeway of five calories either way in listing the calorie count.

In any case, the light beer story is the fastest growing

THE INSIDE REPORT

An Ultimatum To Carter

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The need for a President to protect himself from his own political party was raised recently when Democratic National Chairman Kenneth Curtis, in his understated way, delivered a virtual ultimatum to the White House.

Curtis, the publicity-shy former governor of Maine, complained that presidential aide Mark Siegel had been turning up at meetings of the Democratic Executive Committee to direct traffic. So, Curtis put it to the President in approximately these words: if you want Mark Siegel or any other White House staffer to run the party, just tell me and I'll quit.

That attitude derives partly from the fact that Curtis must function amid rosy memories of his spectacular predecessor as national chairman, Robert Strauss (whose executive director was none other than Siegel). But beyond personalities, the White House worries that protection of President Carter's interests has a lower priority for Chairman Curtis.

His ultimatum has been ignored. Siegel was present Friday morning when top presidential aide Hamilton Jordan conferred at the White House with Curtis. And when the Democratic National Committee meets in Washington this week, Siegel will be present. . . But that alone does not remove concerns at the White House that the party under Curtis may revert to the self-indulgence which proved ruinous at Miami Beach in the summer of 1972. Specifically, worries center on the party's 1978 mid-term conference, whose delegates -possibly selected via the quota system — might embark on a wild spree of policy declarations.

A hint of possible chaos ahead came at an Aug. 12 meeting of the 25-member Democratic Executive Committee which adopted a resolution condemning British "occupation" of Northern Ireland. National committeeman Patrick J. Cunningham of New York, sponsor of the resolution, was asked whether Strauss as national chairman would have permitted such a mischievous proposal to pass. "Hell," Cunningham replied, "if Bob Strauss were around, we wouldn't even have introduced it."

Curtis made no effort to kill the Irish resolution. Nor at an earlier Executive Committee meeting did he support the White House desire to limit delegates at the mid-term conference. Curtis, who does not like to preside, surrendered the chair to an advocate of more, not fewer, delegates: Mayor Coleman Young of Detroit. The smaller delegate total was approved, partially thanks to intervention from Siegel — triggering Curtis's ultimatum.

But the President was less fortunate when on Aug. 12, without Siegel present, the Executive Committee issued a "preliminary call" for the mid-term conference that evoked unwelcome nostalgia about 1972. In effect, it set delegate quotas for blacks, Indians and youth.

Influential Democratic state chairman Morley Winograd of Michigan warned that his state would not send delegates to the conference if the "preliminary" call became permanent. Winograd, who conferred with Jordan at the White House last week, intends to junk the embryonic quota system at this week's National Committee meeting — with help from the White House.

Nobody expected or wanted Curtis to duplicate the high-stepping Strauss, who had a free hand at the National Committee with no Democrat in the White House to upstage him. But influential members of the committee, all ardent Strauss admirers, have become so frustrated with Curtis (one actually called him a "rockhead from Maine") that they have turned for help to Strauss's old deputy, Siegel. His knowledge of party issues and personalities is unparalleled.

Curtis has his own admirers on the National Committee -such as Ulric Scott, the new Minnesota state chairman. Scott resents "White House interference" in party affairs and wants the mid-term conference freely and openly to debate the issues — just as they do in Minnesota's Democratic-Farmer-Labor party. Scott on Curtis: "I think he's been terrific." That Curtis might share the Minnesota view that the President has no business running his party astounds Carter advisers. "John Bailey must be turning over in his grave," comments one such adviser, remembering that Bailey as national chairman sacrificed his own reputation to defend Lyndon Johnson against the anti-Vietnam assault.

There have been quiet signs that the White House has had about enough. Despite previous reluctance — in the interests of Curtis's sensibilities — to assign a subordinate to handle party matters, Jordan now has designated Siegel and presidential appointments secretary Rick Hutcheson to make sure that the mid-term conference does not become a fiasco for Jimmy Carter. The President has plenty of serious trouble on his hands without piling on more from his own party.

Other Editors Say Use Funds Wisely

(Chapel Hill Newspaper)

The Newspaper has no quarrel with the recent Supreme Court decision which declares it to be constitutional for North Carolina to funnel financial aid to private colleges in the state. Over the past year 22,000 students, enrolled in 38 North Carolina private colleges, received $11 million. However, the question of how much and on what basis still causes us some concern.

The announcement recently that all Wingate College students, rich or poor, will be allowed to study abroad at no extra cost for two mid-winter weeks makes us wonder just how desperately some of the money is really needed for the private sector. Other schools in the state offer optional foreign study programs, but they are on a limited competitive scholarship basis. The Wingate program is available to every sophomore. "This is our way of affirming the importance of international education for our students, who will experience an ever-shrinking world,," Wingate President Dr. Thomas Corts said when the announcement of foreign study was made. About 400 students will visit England for the first trip abroad.

Bill Arnold, director of North Carolina travel and tourism, feels that, "Wingate College has come up with a progressive and imaginative program that makes travel an essential part of the educational process. In addition to the obvious benefits to those who participate, I am delighted that the program will produce several hundred good-will ambassadors each year for North Carolina. I applaud that and commend Wingate for an innovative, intelligent trend in higher education."

Right on, Wingate. The program is worthwhile. However, it would be interesting to get the reaction from members of our state legislature if President Friday requested funds to send every sophomore in a state supported institution to Europe for a couple of weeks. He would be laughed not only out of education but out of the state. The private sector of education needs help for North Carolina students, but that help must be spent for basics and not for frills. The Wingate experiment might raise an eyebrow or two when the legislature meets again.

Strength For Today

AN INDIFFERENT GOD

The Roman historian, Pliny the Elder, who was a contemporary of St. Paul, once wrote, "It is ridiculous to suppose that the great head of things, whoever it would be, pays any regard to human affairs."

In every age there have men who thought as did Pliny, that God created the universe and then turned away from it and allowed it to run it by itself. Certain men have considered it to be mark of distinction to hold that the Almighty is too busy or too dignified to be interested in human affairs.

Against such ideas the whole gospel of Jesus Christ protests. Jesus even went as far as to say that every hair of our heads is numbered. In his parables, especially in his parable of the lost sheep, he clearly indicates that God's loving interest extends not only to individuals, but to the humblest and neediest of people.

In the cross of Christ we behold the extent to which the love of God is ready to go, that men's destiny may be fulfilled.

Varied Reasons For Analysts

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Is the stock market depressed because of fears of higher interest rates, the imbalance of trade, worry about upcoming income tax proposals, or concern that Congress will over-react to the slowdown?

Or perhaps because it is feared a recession is just over the horizon, that the Carter administration's programs are slow to develop, that government is anti-business, that the Fed is confused, that U.S. productivity is slowing?

Still searching? Try these: a belief that consumer confidence is slipping, that capital investment by industry isn't taking up the slack, that we are headed into the downside of the economic cycle.

All were offered this week by market analysts, who've found that "explanations" are as much a commodity for sale as are forecasts of things to come.

The grab-bag of explanations is now overstuffed with plausible theories, always available to those who claim to have some understanding of the market or who simply cannot afford to appear mute before puzzled clients.

Although he has offered some theories of his own in the past — mainly that the Fed's money policy is the cause — John Wright this week breaks with the ranks, avoids explanations and just tells where the market is.

Measured in inflation's adjusted dollars, he observes, the Dow Jones Industrial Average is now about the same as its average price 23 years ago, lower even than in the 1974 bear market.

Meanwhile, he continues, earnings are now 50 percent higher than in 1954, and dividends are about 8 percent greater and growing faster than earnings.

Refreshingly, no explanation of how the market got to where it is — just some compelling, clear evidence that it is there.

Other comparisons by Wright, whose Wright Investors Service of Bridgeport, Conn. is widely used by professional portfolio managers, add emphasis.

—The current dividend yield of about 5.3 percent is far above both 1929 and post-World War II averages of 4.2 percent (but apparently not sufficiently attractive to investors.)

—The 8.7 to 1 ratio of market price to earnings is about one-third below the post-1929 average of 14 to 1 and lower than the average for any years except 1948-1950 and 1974.

—The cost of a share in the 30 Dow Jones industrial blue chips now averages about $1.06 per dollar of shareholders' equity, about one third less than the post-1929 average of $1.54, and less than during any of the 47 intervening years except 1932-1933, 1942 and 1975.

Thus he comments that "it is inescapable that on any basis which takes into account historic value relationships during peace and war, prosperity and recession, stock prices are today severely undervalued."

Avoiding the weary practice of explaining why the market is low, Wright nevertheless succumbs to another vice of market analysts — he offers a forecast:

"WIS believes that equity investment values are currently so attractive in relation to both historic standards and prospective earnings and dividends that high-quality common stocks should be accumulated now in expectation of a sustained stock market recovery and advance beginning before 1977 year-end."

To the editor:

At the Forum sponsored by the League of Women Voters Tuesday evening, I asked a candidate for the Greenville City Council a question concerning his public record as a business person who, if elected, would be making decision concerning city employees. The moderator ruled that the question did not pertain to services which would be rendered by members of the City Council and was, therefore, out of order. The candidate was left in the untenable position of being unable to speak to the subject which had been raised. I then presented the subject in the form of another question, one concerning the industrial wage in Greenville, and his answer revealed a view which turned out to be quite progressive.

There was no intention on my part to embarrass the candidate. If there was any embarrassment, it was not because the question was asked but because he was not allowed to answer it. In my opinion, a preferable ruling would have been to give the candidate the option of not answering the question.

The Forum was a good example of citizen participation as one candidate for mayor and 18 candidates for the City Council spoke of their plans for serving the city and candidly answered the questions put to them by people in the audience.

When the voters of Greenville go to the polls next Tuesday, they will have a smorgasboard of candidates to choose from as they elect six Council members from the 18 candidates. The varied backgrounds of the candidates presenting themselves is evidence of the progressive growth of Greenville — no longer the "dirty little town on the Tar." Regrettably, there are no Black women among the candidates. Let us hope that the next election will see this segment of the population represented among those who are seeking to serve in city government.

To the editor:

I say let's put in a word for the old Red, White & Blue once in a while.

I and some business men this morning got to talking over a few cups of coffee about how bad the economy is, and bow the United States is going to "pot" in general. Needless to say, none of us really had many kind words to say about our own country. We complained about everything from the cost of living to corruption in government.

I left the restaurant with the thought of what was said on my mind and as the day wore on, I finally came to the conclusion that things were not really all that bad. After all, I thought, in what other country in the world could men gather as we did, condemn the corruption in our own government and on a full stomach, all at the same time?

I don't know if you consider this letter worthwhile enough to print in your paper, but at any rate, this is one man's thought.

To the editor:

There are really no short cuts to charm because it is a reflection of the entire personality. It humanizes and broadens every field of action. Getting the most out of our charm is to allow the breeze of self-confidence and freedom to sweep through the whole being; however; some things are so fundamental they will give us a good boost while we work on the overall job. Let's take a look:

Get Organized, for a lack of organization for the day can make more people liverish than anything I know.

Make Sure You're Well Groomed. You owe it to yourself to be scrubbed, polished and tidy before you go out or even if you're not going out.

Face The Day Without Fear. As long as we are doing the best we can, we have nothing to fear.

Forget Past Recriminations. Do one special thing for somebody as a surprise. In doing this, you'll be a lot happier.

Do One Thing A Day To Make Your Home More Pleasant, for your home is the most important part of your life. Unless it is charming and creative, it remains nothing more than a shelter.

Wipe Out One Prejudice A Day. They'll never do us any good, and they'll surely drag us down.

Read Something Worthwhile for at least 15 minutes each day. Books are the best companions we can have.

Have Faith In A Power Beyond Yourself. Change the things you can change and make the best of those you can't. To do this fully, you must be able to release yourself to a higher power, whatever you believe in.

segment of the beer market. "Astounding" is the word the U.S. Brewers Association uses to describe it. Light beers's share of the market is expected to increase again this year to total seven per cent of all beer sold in the United States.

Low calorie beers are not new. But the Miller Brewing Co. was the first to mass market a version that not only was low in calorie content, but also tasted enough like regular beer to appeal to weight-conscious drinkers. The rest of the industry followed.

The Postal Service says it is moving to close a loophole that has allowed a certain kind of mail fraud to continue.

Involved are statements sent in the mail which look like bills but which are actually solicitations for the consumer to buy something. The senders use the technique to make the unwary think they owe something for an item that they've already ordered. In reality the statement is just an attempt to get them to buy something.

The Postal Servicve says a requirement has existed for some time for a printed notice to appear on such solicitations stating that it is "not a bill" and "You are under no obligation to make any payments on account of this offer unless you accept this offer."

Through an oversight, the Postal Service failed to prescribe the size of type, the method of display or other printing requirements.

As a result, it said, mail order firms using such devices have hidden the disclaimer or otherwise placed it where consumers might not notice it. The service adds there have been "numerous complaints" from the public and members of Congress.

White paper is put in one end of a shoe box and a pencil point hole is punched in the other. The hole is pointed towards the sun and it throws an image on the white paper screen. This should be done without ever looking directly at the sun.

The partial eclipse will be interesting but there is nothing quite as awesome as a total eclipse such as was seen here March 7, 1970.

At the point of totality, winds suddenly rose, roosters crowed, street lights came on, as Nature put on one of its greatest displays.

America Goes Full Circle With Allan Bakke

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Members of the U.S. Supreme Court will hear argument on Wednesday in the already celebrated case of Allan Bakke. Many of the rest of us will hear echoes. Almost a quarter century after Brown v. Board of Education, we have come full circle.

But this time, everyone who is interested in either race or law has become familiar with the Bakke case. Bakke is the 37-year-old Californian who five years ago applied for admission to the University of California's medical school at Davis. He was rejected for one reason only: the color of his skin. If it is denied at all, it is only feebly denied that Bakke would have been admitted if he had been born black. Unfortunately, so to speak, he was born white.

The Southerner who follows the Bakke case is struck by ironies at every hand. I am a Southerner, born, bread and brought up in a segregated society. Forgive me a backward glance.

In December of 1938, I was a sophomore student at the University of Missouri in Columbia. I had just turned 18, and I was bursting with the accumulated prejudices of a Southern boy's upbringing. On December 12, Chief Justice Hughes handed down a 7-2 opinion for the Court in the case of Gaines v. Canada. The university that night was in shock.

It is hard to convey the sensation. Lloyd Gaines, you see, was a Negro. He had been graduated three years earlier from Lincoln University with a B.A. degree. Now he had the temerity — the audacity, the cheekiness, the sheer gall! — he had actually applied, this black man, for admission to the law school of the University of Missouri at Columbia. And the Supreme Court had ruled that he was entitled to be admitted!

That horrible prospect scarcely could be comprehended. I remember writing my mother a long and portentous letter in which I swore that I would leave the university before I would attend the same institution with a Negro. The campus, you see, was not large enough for both of us. When I went home to Oklahoma, for the Christmas holidays, my friends commiserated with me. They were attending the University of Oklahoma at Norman; it was still all white, and they were sure it would remain so forever. They could not see the case of G. W. McLaurin a decade down theroad.

It is worth taking a moment to recall a couple of things that Hughes said in the Gaines case. The University of Missouri had advanced all sorts of splendid reasons for keeping Gaines out: Not many Negroes really wanted to be lawyers; in any event, a separate but equal facility was being planned; meanwhile, Gaines could get a perfectly adequate law school education somewhere else.

Hughes dismissed these defensive arguments out of hand. "The essence of this constitutional right," he said, "is that it is a personal one." It is the individual, he said, who is entitled to equal protection of the laws.

Now the Bakke case is being heard, and the echoes come roaring in with the crash of heavy surf. The California regents who rejected Allan Bakke also had the very best of reasons. They were engaged in "affirmative action." Their purpose was "benign." They meant nothing personal in discriminating against a white applicant because he was white. They simply felt it wise to be race-conscious.

Ah, my brothers, lawyers and educators have come a long way along a rough and wretched road, only to find themselves at the point of beginning. The Southern States used to bus little children past their nearest neighborhood schools because the children were black, or because they were white, and the Supreme Court condemned the practice absolutely. Now the Court approves the identical practice absolutely. Our institutions are as racist as they were before. We witness what is called "racism in reverse," and the phrase does nicely: We go backward, not forward.

Well, I too have come a long way from a boarding house in Missouri, and a long way from the Brown case in 1954. I long ago came to understand that for the states to discriminate by reason of race is wrong, dead wrong. I am sorry I ever defended the abominable practice. For a state to deny its facilities to a human being because of the color of his skin is barbarian. And that is exactly what the State of California did to Allan Bakke.

If the Court meets this issue squarely, and does not duck or flinch, Bakke will win in 1978 as Gaines won in 1938. And then we will start again, perhaps, on the tortuous road we have traveled before — the road to a color-blind Constitution.

Sauce For The Goose Is Sauce For The Gander

As a boy I lived in a farming area in Missouri. Segregation was the law at this time, but if the people of our community knew about it, they mostly never observed it. We worked together, played together and when a family suffered a serious set-back, everyone else in the community pitched in to help without regard to race or color. I guess we were not "enlightened" because we didn't know that blacks and whites were supposed to dislike and distrust one another.

It was during this period of my life that I knew one of the most unforgettable persons I have ever met. Mr. Sam Jones was a black man who ran a small country store in our community. The philosophy I learned from this man has helped shape my life. This story about him is one example of his Solomon like wisdom and his talent for handling people.

His store was small but well arranged. Groceries were sold in front and the back section served as a storage room, part of which was used for a creamery substation.

There was no electricity in our area in those days. Jones' only means of refrigeration was a single icebox where he kept meats and cheese. He also bought fresh eggs and poultry and frequently accepted fresh butter as barter.

One Saturday, Mr. Jones was looking forward to a busy day, as it was traditionally a buying time for the farmers. However, his enthusiasm lessened when he noticed Lila Sutton entering the store. Mrs. Sutton was a devious person and was considered to be most dangerous when she was smiling.

"Why hello, Sam," she simpered as she walked in. "The store always looks so nice and clean."

"Why good morning, Lila," he said cheerfully. But he was suspicious of her friendliness in view of the fact that a short while ago she had sworn never to return, because he had slapped her pet hound on the rump for sticking his nose in a can of lard. He leaned the broom he was using in the corner and moved his tall, angular frame behind the counter.

"What can I do for you, Lila?" he asked.

"Well, let's see," she answered. "My man, Jake, asked me to get him a bottle of Black Draught laxative and I would like to have a bottle of that lovely lavender water, like I got the last time."

She purchased several items. Mr. Jones wrapped them, then asked if there would be anything else. Lila fumbled momentarily in her purse and then produced a waxed paper package. "Sam, there is something I would like you to do for me." she said placing it on the counter.

"Oh no," he thought with a sinking heart. "Here it comes." Lila's face assumed a pained expression.

"Sam, I was churning yesterday and a mouse jumped on the table and fell right in my churn. Now you know the butter is alright. But Jake won't eat it, so he told me to trade it to you for some store-boughten butter. You know the old sayin', what people don't know won't hurt them.'"

Without answering, Mr. Jones took the butter and returned with a freshly wrapped package of butter.

About a month later, Lila came back to the store. She made her purchases, but did not mention the butter until she was ready to leave. "Sam, did you get rid of that butter I traded you?"

"I sure did, Lila," he replied.

"Did you get any complaints about it?" She could hardly retrain her curiosity now.

"Not a one, Lila," he assured her.

"You see, it's just like I told you, Sam" she said wagging her finger. "What you don't know won't hurt you."

Lila was picking up her purchases and starting to leave when she asked one last question. "Please tell me, Sam. who'd you let have that butter? I promise I won't tell a soul."

"Well Lila" he hesitated. "I guess since you promise. I can tell you. I gave you back your own butter. I'm glad you helped prove your own point. What you don't know won't hurt you."

Long Fingernails Are Not For Just Anybody

When I was in high school, my most cherished dream was to have long purple fingernails. Now, soft nails may not seem like much of a handicap to us more mature folk, but they're a disaster when you're sixteen and you sit next to a girl in typing class who can type 60 words per minute — sitting four feet from the typewriter. That girl could peel a potato with her bare hands. I did everything I could to emulate her. I filed my fingers to a point twice a week. I ate so much Knox gelatin that I whinnied when I laughed. I even poured Fabu-Nail on top of my cereal and ate it every morning for breakfast, But nothing helped my nails, and as I grew older and I realized how superficial and silly my dream really was, I gave it up.

That's why, when Phillip and I were "parked" in front of the late late show — a blockbuster entitled "The Buzzard that Stalked Cleveland" — one Saturday night, and I suddenly noticed that my nails had somehow grown about an eighth of an inch, I was only mildly enthusiastic.

"YIPPEE!" I screeched.

Phillip, previously asleep, jumped three feet in the air and landed straddling the back of the sofa, wearing the popcorn bowl for a helmet.

"I'll save you!" he gasped.

"Oh, I'm already saved, darling," I gushed. "My lifelong dream has come true! I have fingernails!"

"That's not funny, Gail. If you wanted to wake me up that badly, you could have poured cold water in my ear. I'm going to bed."

"Turn off the TV before you go," I said. "I don't want to take a chance on breaking a nail."

The next day I went out and bought $20 worth of nail supplies and a three year supply of HandSaver Gloves. Still, I found that I couldn't load the dishwasher that evening.

"Please do the dishes for me, dear," I said, reaching for one of the emery boards I had placed every two feet around the house. "All that activity is creating a rough spot on my left thumbnail."

Phillip did the dishes without much protest, but he did balk at sewing a button on my dress the next night, and he was positively irritated over having to change sides of the bed so that HE could turn off the alarm clock.

It was about that time that I noticed that my nail polish supply was being sabotaged. I was missing my favorite color — Festive Fuchsia. I couldn't prove anything, but I did detect a slight fuchsia ring around the toilet bowl.

About a week later, I came home from the grocery store in tears.

"I broke my nail!" I sobbed.

"I'm sorry," Phillip said, not convincingly. "Where are the groceries?"

I clapped my good hand over my mouth. "I forgot them."

"You rode all the way down there and you forgot to buy them?" he asked in amazement.

"No — I forgot to pick them up. I broke my nail just as I got into the car, and I got so upset that I came straight home. I guess the bag boy is still standing at the curb waiting for me to drive by."

That night I awoke to find Phillip poised over me, nail clippers in his hand, whimpering, "A whole week's worth of groceries."

"What are you doing?" I squealed.

He grabbed one hand and snipped. "This is for the thawed orange juice."

"ARRGH! STOP! Please! I grew them for you!" I pleaded.

He was merciless. "This is for the melted ice cream."

"If you don't stop it," I shrieked' "I'll never speak to you again!"

It was the first time I'd seen him smile in a week.

More And More Americans Turn To Exercise

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J, — One of the dramatic changes in American lifestyles to take place during the last two decades is the increase in the numbers of Americans who regularly exercise.

Today, 47 per cent of American say they participate in some form of physical exercise daily — twice the percentage recorded in 1961 when the figure was 24 per cent.

Perhaps of equal interest is the demographic portrait of those who exercise daily.

Many behavioral and attitudinal trends in America follow the "trickle down" process — that is, they are taken up by the affluent and higher educated groups and are later picked up by others — and the case of exercise appears to be no different.

Those most likely to say they exercise daily are basically the "upscale" socio-economic groups, that is, the college-educated, those in the upper and upper-middle income brackets, and professionals, business people, and others in white-collar positions.

In addition, young people (under 30 years old) are more likely to say they exercise than are their elders, men more likely than women, and people living in the Northeast and Far West more likely than Midwesterners and Southerners.

Here is the question asked to determine the extent to which Americans have taken up exercising:

"Aside from any work you do, here at home or at a job, do you do anything regularly — that is, on a daily basis — that helps you keep physically fit?"

Here is the trend followed by the latest results:

Down The Road

The form of exercise that has undoubtedly received the most attention during this period of the "exercise boom" is jogging.

To get some idea of how many Americans are pounding the trails and paths of America, the Gallup Poll also asked all those who say they exercise regularly if they jog.

The results indicate 11 per cent of adults (24 per cent of those who exercise regularly) jog. And most joggers, 74 per cent, are traveling at least one mile during their routine. Three per cent can't say how far their routine takes them.

Not surprisingly, the demographic picture of the jogger tends to conform to that of the person who regularly exercises — that is, joggers tend to be young, college-educated, live in the Northeast and Far West, single, and in the upper-middle income brackets.

Here is the question asked to find out who jogs:

"Do you happen to jog, or not?"

And those who said yes were asked:

"On the average, how far do you usually jog in terms of miles or fractions of miles?"

Operation Santa Claus Is Launched In County

Operation Santa Claus, an annual project sponsored by the Mental Health Association in Pitt County, was launched this week.

Carl Blackwood, president, announced the following area chairmen; Mrs. Donald W. Carman, Ayden; Mrs. A. G. Wright, Bethel; Mrs. R. T. Monk, Jr. and Mrs. Randy Walters, Farmville; Mrs. James E. Pollard, Belvoir; Ms. Zula Rouse, Chicod, Winterville, Black Jack; Ms. Hattie Thompson, Simpson; Ms. Lucille Sledge, Greenville; Mrs. Douglas Moore, Fountain.

Pitt County citizens are asked to contribute a gift to patients at Cherry Hospital, Goldsboro, and Caswell Center, Kinston. Gifts shoud be new, unwrapped, and taken to collection points throughout the county or to the association office located in the Coffman Building on Evans Mall.

Mr. Blackwood said that 65 percent of the population in these institutions is male, 35 percent is female. Tax-deductible contributions will be accepted as there are many suitable gifts for patients that are not collected. The association and the hospital will shop for these needs. Many citizens and groups are accustomed to responding in this way.

Adopt-a-patients is another phase of the project. From a donation of $12.00, a patient with no income or interested family is given $1.00 a month to spend. Recipients of such contributions experience the joy of Christmas all year long.

Nominated To Band

Tracy Bruce Coggins, son of Mr. and Mrs. L.E. Coggins Jr. of Greenville, has been nominated to McDonald's All American Marching Band which marches in Macy's Parade on Thanksgiving Day and the Rose Bowl Parade on New Year's Day.

Tracy, a senior at North Pitt High School, is a member of North Pitt High School Band, the Panther Club, National Honor Society and FFA.

He has been honored as a marshall in 1977, and is president of the North Pitt High School Band. He is also a scout in the Boy Scouts of America.

George Naff, director of the Marching Pirates of East Carolina University, presented Tracy with his certificate of nomination after a tour of the ECU School of Music Thursday morning.

Other nominees from Pitt County were Randy Leggett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leggett of Tarboro, and Hacknew Yelverton, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Yelverton of Farmville.

Mandatory Hours Said Unjustified

Bill Ipock of Greenville, president of the North Carolina Association of Convenience Stores, termed the establishment by the state's Energy Policy Council of mandatory hours upon the convenience store industry as "unwarranted and unjustified."

Ipock, who deplored the Energy Crisis Plan adopted during the week by the Council, commented, "We think the Council's arbitrary act of singling out the convenience store industry by imposing mandatory operating hours on our industry after we stated our case for dispensation...is totally revealing of the Council's unwillingness to grant us the same special consideration awarded to restauranteurs and service station operators."

He contended that the restauranteurs and station operators "would be allowed to choose their 60 hours of operation on an individual basis while we were denied our request for this same privilege."

Saying that the convenience stores "technically qualify as restaurants and as service stations" since they offer gasoline and fast foods, the president noted that, "Obviously the Council certainly disregarded our association's input into the matter and they also, obviously, have no understanding of what our industry really does."

He said that with many convenience stores operating on a 24 hours a day basis, the Council is eliminating 108 hours a week for those stores.

Ipock added, "That means that most likely more than three employees per store would have to be laid off to comply with this plan."

Ipock is president of The Happy Stores here.

Sponsor New Dale Carnegie Course Here

The Dale Carnegie Course is now being formed in Greenville under the sponsorship of WNCT Radio.

Chalres Kavanaugh, area manager for the courses in Eastern North Carolina, announced that the formation of the class will be under the direction of Billy Luckadoo of New Bern, area representative.

The Dale Carnegie Course, now in its fifth year of operation, is offered in all fifty states and 43 foreign countries. The 14-week course, which meets one night per week, is designed to help the class members develop the art of communicating their thoughts, feelings and ideas accurately and effectively to otheres, whether it is in private conversation or speaking before a group; the art of dealing even more graciously with people, bringing about more enthusiatic cooperation from others and to enjoy more friends.

The class will begin in late October. Further information about the course can be obtained by calling WNCT Radio at 758-1070.

Most WASPS Disappointed When Mustered Out

By THOMAS C. COTHRAN
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Betty Brown remembers the day she and a thousand or so other women pilots were mustered out of World War II at Avenger Field in Sweetwater, Texas.

"Most of us were disappointed that we couldn't continue in some fashion with what we had been doing," she says. "We were still very much involved with what we were contributing to."

She and the others were among the few women who took on what was then considered a man's job at a time when qualified men were in critically short supply.

They were part of the Women's Airforce Service Pilots, a group who wore uniforms and flew military aircraft, mostly on ferrying missions in the United States and Canada.

They also pulled targets 300 feet behind their planes while male air cadets practiced with live ammunition. Some of them died in crashes; others were maimed and received some federal medical benefits.

But the women were never formally militarized by Congress or the Defense Department, then the War Department. And today they do not get benefits that men and other women who did less physical jobs during the war receive.

The former WASPs are lobbying cautiously in Congress for approval of bills to militarize them. The bills are being studied by the Defense Department, and there is a strong lobby against them.

The government, which recruited the already licensed and qualified women pilots beginning in 1941, decided in 1944 that it had enough men to do the job and disbanded the WASPs.

"We had hoped to be sent overseas to fly missions to rescue wounded people," says Mrs. Brown. "We still felt very much a part of the military and wanted to do as much as we could because the war wasn't over then.

"We had offered to do everything," says Mrs. Brown, now 55 and a public relations official with the Richland County school system. "Many of our brothers, sweethearts, fiances and husbands were still overseas. We still felt we had something to offer."

The bills are being held up in Congress by veterans organizations. They say the legislation will lead to other groups of civilians who gave various types of service during the war seeking to be militarized. They cite the Civil Air Patrol as an example.

Lucille Wise, a member of the WASPs congressional hearings committee, says the group does not "feel that is valid because we were organized more like the WACs (Women's Army Corps) and WAVES (the Navy's Women's Auxiliary Emergency Service) and the other women's branches of the service."

But Ms. Wise, reached by telephone at the group's Washington office, says she believes the tide may be turning in favor of the former women pilots.

"We've had endorsements from three state organizations in the American Legion this year," she said. "We're just waiting right now" until the Defense Department completes its study of the WASP organization.

The department's recommendation will be sent to the White House, which will then decide what its position is. A White House spokesman, Jim Purks, said the Veterans Administration is opposed the bills because it does not think all of those who served in the WASPs can be considered part of the military.

Ms. Wise says the 900 former WASPs who are still alive and scattered across the nation would actually receive few benefits even if the bill passed.

The educational part of the GI bill has expired, so women like Mrs. Brown, who is working on her masters degree at the University of South Carolina, will not be helped there.

But Ms. Wise says they could receive hospitalization, pensions, housing loans and veterans preference privileges in government employment.

There have been other bills in Congress to give the WASPs medical benefits, but they failed to pass. And Congress approved a law giving veterans benefits to natives of Poland and Czechoslovakia who fought on the Allied side and have since lived in America for at least 10 years.

"But they turned us down because of prejudice against women pilots," Ms. Wise said.

The WASP cause has received a boost from Antonia Chayes, assistant secretary of the Air Force. She has testified before congressional committees in favor of giving the women benefits, and, according to Ms. Wise, "may be turning the Defense Department around" in its thinking about the issue.

Mrs. Brown says the long-forgotten WASPs have been rejuvenated by the training of women pilots at the Air Force Academy in Colorado. Last year the WASPs held their first reunion at Hot Springs, Ark.

They dispute the Air Force's statement, however, that it is training its first women to fly jet aircraft. Former WASP Ann Baumgardner Carl of Huntington, N.Y., flew one of the first jets in 1944, says Ms. Wise.

Mandel Assigned To Prison In Florida For Sentence

BALTIMORE (AP) — Gov. Marvin Mandel, sentenced to four years in prison on his conviction for political corruption, says "I started with nothing and have gotten back to having nothing."

Leaving the federal courthouse after his sentencing Friday, Mandel had little to say about his future, now that his days of political power apparently are over.

"I haven't made any plans," the Democrat said. "As for immediate plans, I'm going to the (Baltimore) Colts (football) game Sunday."

Calmly but sadly, he added, "No one could enjoy ending in this fashion."

Mandel, who was governor for nearly nine years, told a crowd outside the courthouse, "I didn't do anything to harm the people of Maryland."

He is the first sitting governor to be convicted of a federal crime since Indiana Gov. Warren MacCray was convicted of mail fraud in 1924.

Acting Gov. Blair Lee, who took on that job when Mandel became ill earlier this year, will remain in the post.

Lee said recently that Mandel did not have "two nickels to rub together."

Mandel told U.S. District Court Judge Robert L. Taylor before sentencing: "I am insolvent from the point of view of visible assets. But I'm not insolvent because I have my family."

On Thursday, Mandel moved his family out of the governor's mansion into a home north of Annapolis, which had a listed rent of $675 a month. Mandel has not said how he is paying the rent.

"I have great sympathy for you," Taylor told Mandel. "You have many, many good qualities, some of which were revealed throughout the trial. But, I think you made some serious mistakes."

Mandel and five other defendants were convicted on 17 mail fraud counts Aug. 23 at the end of a 2½-month trial. Mandel also was convicted on a single racketeering charge.

The jurors found that Mandel received an estimated $350,000 worth of business interests, Florida vacations, clothing and other gifts in return for his influence on legislation benefiting his friends' secret interests in a racetrack.

Defendants Irvin Kovens, W. Dale Hess and Harry W. Rodgers III each received four-year prison terms and maximum $40,000 fines. William Rodgers, Harry Rodgers' brother, received a 20-month prison term and $40,000 fine, while Ernest N. Cory Jr. was sentenced to 18 months.

Hess and the Rodgers brothers also were convicted of two racketeering counts.

The defendants are free without bond pending their appeals.

Mandel, who succeeded Spiro T. Agnew when the Republican became vice president in January 1969, was officially suspended from his $25,000-a-year post upon sentencing. He could get his post back only if his conviction is overturned before his term ends in January 1979.

Sue Real Estate Trust For Fraud

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Seven stockholders in a real estate trust headed by Edwin Duncan Jr. are suing the trust and its officers for $10 million, alleging fraud.

The suit was filed in Mecklenburg County Superior Court and alleges that the officers and trustees of Northwestern Financial Investors that a number of "extremely speculative and risky" investments in real estate loans.

It claims that one portfolio totaled more than $17 million.

The Charlotte-based trust, which was organized under South Carolina law, ended up with the portfolio in January of 1972. The stockholders contend it had been transferred from the Northwestern Bank "for the purpose of relieving the Northwestern Bank of its obligations on the risky and speculative loans."

The suit also alleges that the Northwestern Bank encouraged investors to buy shares of the trust by lending them the entire purchase price of the stock.

The bank secured repayments of the loans through deeds of trust, collateral agreements and other security agreements, the suit says. It alleges that many of these loans are in default, and the Northwestern Bank has foreclosed on its security or will foreclose in the near future.

The suit asks the court to stop the bank from foreclosing by issuing an injunction.

The complaint, filed by Pern L. Edwards, Harold Choate, Thomas Edwards, Tommy Andrews, Clive E. Brooks and Dwayne Smith of Alleghany County, along with W.C. Stanley of Surry County, says the risk involved in the loan portfolio was concealed from the investors, and so was the true picture of the company's financial condition.

The suit names Northwestern Financial Corp., the Northwestern Bank, Edwin Duncan Jr., who is president of the trust, and other bank officers as defendants.

The seven men who filed the suit say they have more than $250,000 invested in the trust.

Their suit alleges "risky and speculative ventures" in the Cayman Islands, British West Indies.

They are seeking $10 million dollars in punitive damages, actual damages and costs. It also asks the court to fire the trustees and appoint substitutes.

ECU Center Planning Expansion Of Services

ECU News Bureau

Considerable expansion of services to North Carolina public schools is planned by the N.C. General Assistance Center for its fourth year of operation.

Located at East Carolina University, the Center is funded by the U.S. Office of Education to assist school districts in solving problems of school desegregation on the basis of race and sex.

It offers aid in the areas of instruction, curriculum, administration and community relations.

According to Dr. Clinton R. Downing, director of the Center, plans for the 1977-78 school year include assistance to school districts in achieving quality bilingual education programs for non-English speaking children and improving education for Indian children in the public schools.

"During the past fiscal year, the Center provided comprehensive services to 79 school districts through workshops, conferences, seminars, and consultations," Downing said.

"The Center also furnished assistance through cooperative arrangements with the N.C. Dept. of Public Instruction, the Head Start Programs and other organizations serving public school children."

GAC staff members have published five curriculum booklets which reflect improved techniques for teaching children in schools two models for improving human relations in schools and a guide to the elimination of sex bias in the classroom.

Dr. Downing is assisted by nine professional staff members and three support personnel. The General Assistance Center's services are provided without cost upon the request of local school districts.

First Sentenced To Die

LEXINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Two Aiken County men, convicted of slaying a service station operator during an armed robbery, have become the first persons to be sentenced to die under South Carolina's new capital punishment law.

Circuit Judge Rodney A. Peeples scheduled an electrocution date of Dec. 12 for J.D. Gleaton, 32, and Dec. 16 for his half-brother Larry Gilbert, 23.

They were found guilty on Thursday of the July 12 slaying of Ralph Stoudemire of South Congaree, S.C.

They were the first to be tried under the new law, which provides for a two-stage trial in which the jury decides guilt or innocence in one deliberation and then makes a recommendation on whether life in prison or execution should be the punishment after additional arguments and deliberations.

The final decision on the sentence is made by the judge.

The second phase of the trial occurred Friday, and the jury spent about an hour deliberating before giving its recommendation to Circuit Judge Rodney A. Peeples.

Peeples said in summarizing the case that he felt the sentence was warranted.

Each man also was sentenced to 25 years in prison on convictions of armed robbery. Peeples said that sentence would not interfere with the death sentence.

The new law says all death sentences will be automatically review by the South Carolina Supreme Court.

The last executions in South Carolina occurred on April 20, 1962, when Douglas Lee Thorne, convicted of rape, and Ray Landy Young, convicted of murder, were electrocuted.

South Carolina's old capital punishment law was struck down by the state Supreme Court in July 1976. The court decided that the law did not meet with standards set forth a few weeks earlier by the U.S. Supreme Court, which ruled that several state laws similar to South Carolina's were unconstitutional.

City Council Endorses '77 Bond Issue

The City Council passed a resolution Thursday night endorsing the state's 1977 Highway Bond Issue.

The $300,000,000 bond issue, which will be considered by North Carolina voters next month, provides for the issuance of highway bonds to finance needed maintenance and improvements on the state's highway system.

Mayor Percy Cox said that in passing the resolution the Council was "recognizing the pressing need for construction, improvements and relocation of roads, bridges and other highway facilities across North Carolina."

He said the board also approved the state position that opposes increased taxes as an answer to highway problems at this time.

The resolution urged local citizens to vote favorably on the issuance of the bonds in the Nov. 8 referendum.

A letter from Thomas W. Bradshaw Jr., secretary of the North Carolina Department of Transportation, pointed out to the Council that "funds to support highway construction and improvements are being reduced, while construction costs are increasing."

Bradshaw wrote, "The transportation problems facing the people of North Carolina are obvious. The proposed $300,000,000 bond issue is one immediate answer to the problem."

He added, "By using bond money, we can avoid inflationary costs and address our immediate problems."

Three File For Grifton Posts

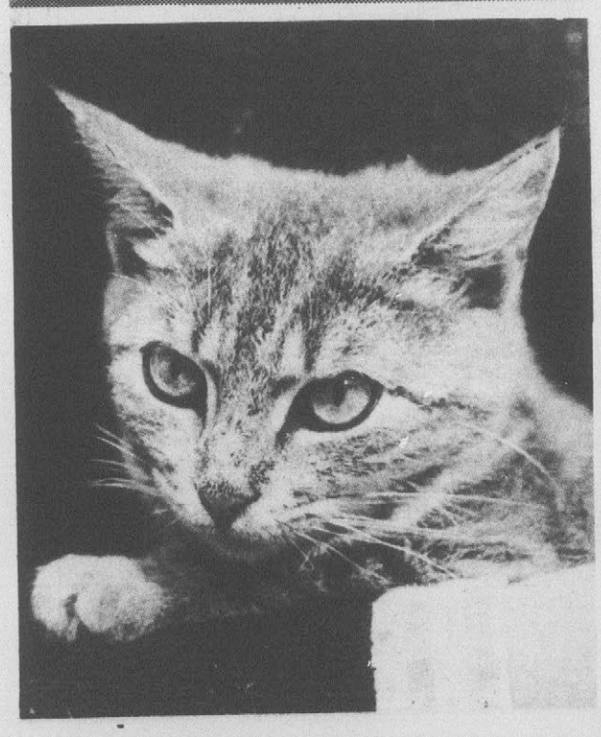

GRIFTON — Three men have filed for the two commissioner positions open in Grifton.

The deadline for filing was noon Friday.

William (Bill) Bollinger, Fred Don Lister, and Johnny Len Craft are candidates in the upcoming election.

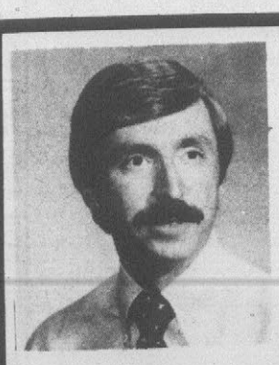

Grifton Mayor David E. Bosley has also filed for the mayoral opening.

Tomato-Picking Migrants There For The Money

By ROSEMARY ARMAO

ELMORE, Ohio (UPI) — Fingers cramp and knees ache. That's good picking. Bend wrong or throw out a hip when hoisting 33 pounds of tomatoes on a truck and the inexperienced back is set afire. But each hamper is worth 30 cents.

Migrant workers in the tomato fields of northwestern Ohio, the Midwest's largest employer of migrants, are there for the money.

As long as the tomatoes last, they are there 12 hours a day, six days a week.

Elizabeth Lopez, 17, babysits a year-old nephew while her sister and brother-in-law pick in John J. Luckey's 40-acre tomato field. She says she is still asleep when the alarm goes off at 6 or earlier.

"The hotter it is, the earlier they get started," said Luckey who has never had to set time limits on his migrants.

They don't return until 5, except for some of the women, like Elizabeth's sister Connie, who cook and carry back lunch.

Connie, Joe and Luckey's 16 other workers, all Lopez relatives from around Brownsville, Tex., drive in camper trucks to fields a half mile away.

They wear jeans and t-shirts under long-sleeved shirts. Sneakers and straw hats tied with bandannas or baseball caps. One picker lashes tough rubber pads to his kneecaps. They all wear yellow rubber gloves.

It doesn't keep the dirt from caking in the creases of Adam Lopez' neck or wearing away Minda Lopez' nails. The trucks kick up itchy swirls of dust, but, said Minda, "the sun, that's definitely the worst."

It makes picking sweaty, hot work in fields that smell like baking sauce.

But each hamper is worth 30 cents, so the migrants bend or kneel, scrapping red globs off vines, slapping branches against hampers to unload a bunch at once.

There is only occasional talk or humming from a truck radio. For a break, they straighten and light a cigarette. For a bathroom, they use a nearby cornfield. For 10 years, migrants have listed field outhouses as a top desire.

"I've watched these guys go down a row for an hour and a half," said an Ohio Bureau of Employment Services worker, "and they don't straighten up. If I tried that they'd have to send someone in with a jack to straighten me out."

Minda fills a hamper every five minutes. That's 12 baskets or about $3.60 an hour, $43.20 a 12-hour day.

Farmers in the area are fond of telling about the money to be made picking. They each can tell you about some guy who picked 335 or even 505 baskets in a day.

"Some migrants make $400 a week," said Ezequiel Gonzalez, OBES rural manpower representative. But such weeks come only late in the season when the crop is abundant. They may not come at all in case of rain, cutworms, labor surplus or market slumps.

Federal statistics say the average migrant makes $3,000 and has four kids.

After five, and on Sundays, migrant life centers on the camps. Luckey's is a low-slung, corrugated metal barracks. The floors are cement, a hazard to the handful of toddlers that race through the units giggling, hauling their shepherd puppy, Star, by a rope.

An old box television takes up one corner, a sink and huge tin of shortening another. The panelled kitchen and two bedrooms furnished with a couch and bunks are separated by curtains. A wringer-washer and showers are in a room between two units.

The Lopezes mostly sit and talk at night, Elizabeth says. But they go out too, to the Spanish movie in nearby Woodville or to other camps to see friends and relatives. Monday nights a Spanish radio program is broadcast.

Priests like Father Ramunda Lalonna of St. Peter and Paul's Church in Toledo, travel to the camps weekday evenings for mass, baptisms, first communions and weddings.

"For an altar we use whatever the people have, an old table, or yesterday I used a garbage can. Towels and sheets, not linen.

"I'll look out," said Luckey on the patio of his farmhouse, "and see four or five guys standing around the trash barrel drinking beer. I can't blame them. They'd probably go crazy if they didn't..."

Others are not so tolerant.

Robert Heft, Napoleon, Ohio's part-time mayor, says the migrants flood Wood County every year at the same time crime, especially shoplifting, increases.

The mayor says he resents that, "We find its cheaper to let them violate the law.

"Take them to court for a traffic case," he said, "and they don't have any insurance and they need court-appointed lawyers. It costs us $200 to $300 to prosecute."

Bill Browning, Napoleon police dispatcher, says, that aside from a few extra arrests for public drunkeness, migrants don't mean much of a change for the department.

"Drinking. That's all they have to do up here in a strange country," he said, "They hang out in certain bars — two in particular, we get called to all the time. One, you've got to give them credit. There's no racism. If a guy wants to come in and relax, have a drink, that's fine with them."

Design From Old Painting

GLASGOW, Scotland (UPI) — Want to buy jewelry worn by Queen Elizabeth I?

No, not original piecés, but wonderful copies, produced with infinite attention to detail.

The jewelry is the work of Eric Smith, who copies the designs from masterpiece paintings.

The best seller to date is a solid silver ring set with square smoky quartz, based on a piece in El Greco's portrait, "Lady in a Fur Wrap." Another ring, based on the same portrait, is set with an oval tiger's stone.

A brooch of cultured pearls and smoky quartz is worn by Queen Elizabeth I in a picture by the Italian artist Dederico Zuccaro, painted around 1590.

The jewelry collection is completed by a trio of earrings, pendant and bracelet which can be ordered individually or in a set. The design for these was developed from the earring worn by the young girl in the 18th century painting "Girl with a Dove," by the German artist Anton Raphael Mengs.

Smith's work is for sale at Pollok House, three and a half miles from the center of Glasgow.

Overwhelming Burden of Paper Work

This is a letter from another doctor.

"Do your readers have any understanding of the overwhelming amount of paper work we doctors have to contend with every day? Almost daily, my nurse, my secretary and I are confronted with impatient requests, such as: 'I've waited for six days and my insurance form hasn't been filled out yet.'

"It's amazing how angry and unreasonable patients can get in their demands for speedy action on these forms." — Dr. M.H., Tenn.

Dear Dr. H.:

The burden of forms has been progressing rapidly in the practice of medicine.

The consensus drawn from almost a thousand doctors gives evidence that their time allotted to the practice of medicine and to hospital clinics has been seriously handicapped.

This survey made by Medical World News shows how frustrated physicians are in their efforts to keep up with the avalanche of paper work. Insurance forms, Medicare forms, Medicaid forms, Blue Cross forms, Blue Shield forms, employers' forms, all seem to bombard doctors with so much time-consuming detail that the joys of medical practice are actually affected.

And, to make matters worse, new forms seem to be created constantly. Instead of a universally identical form, each company has its own variations to further test the sanity of the doctor and the insured patient.

Many insurance companies insist that forms be made out in duplicate (no carbon copies). And many patients have "double insurance" policies. The additional work for the doctor is obvious.

In addition to these forms, there are hospital charts and records and letters to referring doctors that must be urgently kept up to date.

In reply to the Medical World News questionnaire, these comments from doctors are significant:

"It is the worst part of my practice."

"Fast becoming impossible."

"More bedside and less deskside time would benefit the patient markedly."

"We soon will be buried under paper."

One doctor facetiously said, "It's becoming too much — almost time to quit and open a nice quiet bar!"

The most succinct cry in the wilderness came from one doctor. He wrote, "HELP!"

All of us in the practice of medicine are aware of the wonderful benefits that accrue to patients who have personal insurance, state insurance and Federal insurance. Without it, many would be deprived of hospital and health benefits.

Yet it is essential that patients and companies understand the immensity of the nonmedical tasks that are being imposed on the medical profession.

Surely, the same fine minds that have created this morass of minutiae can come up with a simplification of the present system of forms.

Two Basic Parking Regulations Can Mean Towing

By Debbie Jackson
Reflector Staff Writer

The wrecker drives up to an illegally parked vehicle, hooks it up, and drives away. Several minutes later the owner comes upon an empty parking space.

A car being towed is certainly not an unusual sight in Greenville, both in the city and on campus. But it is never a pleasant experience for the owner.

According to Chief Glenn Cannon of the Greenville Police Department, there are basically two violations which constitute towing. One is to park in a "No Parking" zone and the other is to park on a yellow curb.

"The only other place we'll tow is if someone is blocking a driveway," said Cannon.

He added that the police will not call a wrecker service to tow a car off private property. However, if a resident finds a car parked on his property, he may call the police to call the wrecker for him.

The police department does not tow vehicles itself but makes arrangements with different service stations and wrecker services on a rotation basis, said Cannon. He added that the Greenville police have no jurisdiction outside of the city limits, but they sometimes make calls to wreckers for the Highway Patrol.

Also, individual businesses in town that display signs indicating parking violators will be towed do not have to notify the police before calling a tow truck.

"Nine times out of ten they will call us first," Cannon added. This is done to prevent any trouble between the business management and the car owner.

The police department utilizes only five local service stations and several wrecker services. The organizations must have a fence for the cars that are kept overnight, according to Cannon.

"The wrecker driver is responsible for any damage done to the car after it's been towed." Therefore, it is necessary for the drivers to be insured.

Cannon said that more vehicles are towed at the beginning of the academic year than at any other time.

"Newcomers coming into town don't stop to look where they're parking.

"We're also having some trouble with people parking illegally during football games."

He added that the area where most towing occurs is the uptown business section, close to East Carolina University. Cannon attributed this to shoppers who are in a hurry.

According to Cannon, the cost for the individual trying to get his car back varies, but it is usually $15 during the day and $20 at night.

"I'm negotiating with them to try to get them all to charge the same amount."

According to Joseph H. Calder, director of the ECU Security and Traffic Office, towing is not a major problem on campus. The officers do not necessarily tow on a first violation, either.

"We don't like to tow vehicles on campus, but sometimes it's necessary," he added.

Calder said that cars may be towed if "they are obnoxiously parked."

"Between midnight and 7 a.m., we tow all unregistered vehicles parked around the dorms." He added that this policy is only in effect Sunday through Thursday.

"This policy was instigated about four years ago by request of a delegation of students."

Students with unregistered cars were parking in the dorm parking lots, leaving no space for the registered cars.

"We took about 30 days to publicize it."

According to Calder, there are notices posted in the dorms and around campus telling people of the policy.

He added that there are several factors which determine whether a car is towed or not — the availability of wreckers, security officers, and also the situation under which the violation occurs.

"If we see the situation is under control, we may ticket for a while, and then it gets out of hand we'll start towing."

Calder added that the university Security Office uses four wrecker services, all of which must supply three days free storage, be within one mile of ECU, and accept responsibility for any damages done to the vehicle during storage.

Towing charges through the campus police are the same as the city rates.

Calder added that an officer does not have to be present when the wrecker arrives, but that one usually is.

One might think that the wrecker services have the worst position in the whole process of towing. That is, when you stop to think that they are normally the only ones to face the public.

Bill Dunn, manager of Dunn's Body Shop said that "the general reaction is ugly."

"Everybody thinks it's wrong."

He added that he has never seen anyone become extremely violent, but this may be due to a sign in his shop which states that the police will be notified in case of any trouble.

Dunn said that he tows approximately one car per day. He also added that he charges half of the regular rate if the individual walks up while he is preparing to tow the car.

Bruce Williams, manager of University Exxon, also said that he has never had any violent customers.

"I had one guy that had a lot to say about it, but he was really trying to blame it on the city. He was at fault, though, he added.

Williams said that University Exxon tows about 10 to 20 vehicles per month.

"I doubt if it'd average one a day."

One local man recently had an interesting experience when his car was towed from the front of his parents' house.

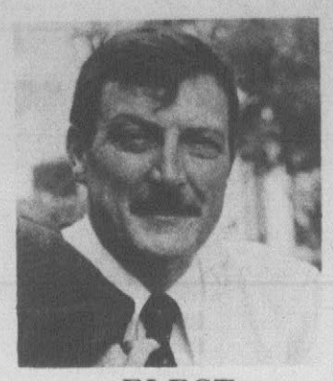

Leavy Brock Jr. of Greenville said that "No Parking" signs were placed on the street because of some concern over students parking there.

"I know that I parked my car there for six to eight months before that, and then they towed, it that one time.

"I woke up at 3 a.m. and found my car being towed. I didn't like it.

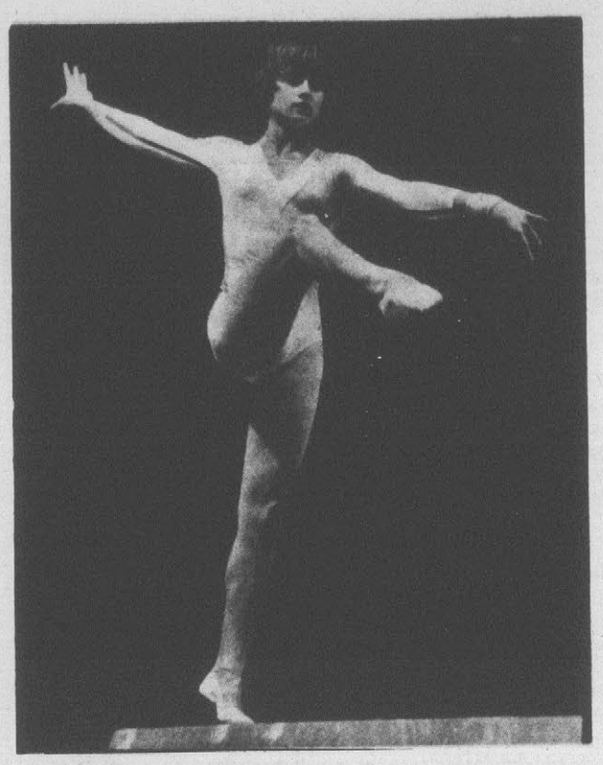

"It seems like before they'd tow your car away, they'd run a license check. It'd only take a couple of minutes, said Brock.

Brock, however, did admit that he was parked in there illegally. But no one likes to have their car towed.

Nurses Ass'n Will Celebrate

The North Carolina Nurses Association is planning a birthday celebration at its biennial convention in Raleigh, October 17-19. All registered nurses in the state are invited to attend the Diamond Jubilee Banquet on October 18 at 7:30 p.m. at the Royal Villa Convention Center.

The Association is observing its 75th anniversary this year. The theme is "Heritage-Happenings-Horizons" and the banquet will be the climax of a year-long calendar of special events honoring nursing history as well as projecting nursing roles and responsibilities into the 21st century.

Past presidents of NCNA will be honored at the banquet. The program will feature special awards, a giant birthday cake, a toast to the next 75 years, and modeling of nurse uniforms beginning with the Revolutionary War era. Special music will be provided by Bloomsbury, a Raleigh musical group.

Any registered nurse may attend the banquet. Tickets at $12.50 are available from the North Carolina Nurses Association, P. O. Box 12025, Raleigh, N.C. 27605, until Friday, October 14.

Pressure Against Treaty

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — With pressure continuing to mount against the Panama Canal treaty, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee is inviting 34 witnesses including military officers, two former secretaries of state and Canal Zone residents to register their views on the pact.

Henry A. Kissinger and Dean Rusk, during whose term as secretary of state the treaty negotiations began 13 years ago, will appear toward the close of the week-long hearings on Friday. Both support the treaty.

But more than half the witnesses listed by Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala., committee chairman, are expected to oppose ratification. They include Adm. Thomas Moorer, retired chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and spokesmen for veterans and conservative groups.

President Carter acknowledged on Friday that the canal treaty is in serious trouble in the Senate. He called on Democratic party leaders to help him build support for the ratification vote expected next year.

Meanwhile, Gen. Omar Torrijos, Panama's head of state, said during a visit to Sweden that Senate rejection of the treaty could lead to the closing of the canal.

He did not explain how this could occur but, in an apparent attempt to increase world pressure, said the treaty does not concern the United States and Panama alone. "Innocent countries will be suffering if the canal is closed," Torrijos said.

Senate resistance to the treaty centers on apparent differences in the way U.S. and Panamanian officials interpret provisions concerning the canal's security after it is turned over to Panama in the year 2000.

One previously announced treaty supporter, Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo., said Friday he was reconsidering his position. He told Carter in a letter he had been led to believe the treaty provided for permanent U.S. rights to use and defend the canal.

The State Department says the treaty would allow the United States to intervene militarily if the canal were threatened and also would give U.S. ships priority passage in wartime. But Panamanian officials say the treaty does not provide such guarantees.

Carter told the party leaders the United States will have a right after the year 2000 "to ensure that the canal will be open to all commerce and neutrality guaranteed." But he stopped short of saying this means this country would be able to intervene with military force if it saw a threat to the canal.

He said the treaty does permit the United States to continue military defense of the canal to the end of this century, but that is not in dispute. The Senate controversy concerns only U.S. rights after control of the waterway is turned over to Panama.

The treaty does not use the word "intervention" and administration officials also have tried to avoid using it. But their assertion that the pact would impose no limit on U.S. freedom to act in the canal's defense makes it clear they are talking about armed intervention.

Former Greenville Jaycee

"Greenville as a city is tops in N.C. in my opinion, but lacks many things."

Problems in City Government

1. Administration: Need positive leadership open for new and better ideas in serving the people.
2. Environment: Waste and pollution control is lacking in many areas for example: City landfill. Most of the cardboard, paper, metals, wood, leaves, waste food, cloth, and rubber could be recycled at a profit to the city which would save tax dollars.
Many very toxic and dangerous chemicals, fumes, exhausts, etc. are all around us.
2. Energy: Positive steps should be taken to seek other sources rather than an outside supplier of electricity controlled by another state. Solar heating and generating should be developed. New Russian techniques for developing electrical power from peat generators are being tested about 100 miles east of the city. Insulation of the new building should be improved.
3. Resources at ECU should be used to the maximum.
4. Planning and Zoning dynamic leadership.
5. Many city employees' morale is low and in a state of apathy. Job protection, higher salaries, in-service training and better retirement benefits are needed. The statement "You get what you pay for" rings a bell. Civic pride and appreciation for a job well-done should be given to deserving city employees.
6. All laws, codes, and zoning requirements should be enforced fair and equally among all citizens without regard of wealth, power, influence, sex, race, or creed. In other words, the end of special privileges must be enacted immediately once and for all time in the City of Greenville.
7. Growth: Merger of the school system appears to be the only permanent solution with Greenville's exploding growth. There will be a continual problem between the county and city school boards. It takes about 10 years to build a school building: Planning, bond issues, obtaining a site, and building. This requires stability of some type in order to do a good job. I am highly critical of the quality of construction at E.B. Aycock and Rose High. The city landfill has about 7-8 years of life left. It is now time to plan and implement a central city-county landfill. The County planning and zoning board has been forced to recommend spending ¾ million dollars of tax money on a system of garbage collection that is inadequate and non-reliable because of no other choices.
Greenville should be a model city with a regional convention and civic center, more motels, museums, expanded art center, preservation of our landmarks and historical building, public golf course, etc., and most of all citizens that have civic pride and care about their city.
I feel with time and help these goals can be accomplished.

So on October 11, 1977, go to the polls and elect the leaders of your choice.

NORWALK, Conn. (AP) — Don't scorn the commuter who travels by train to and from work each day. That may be the way of the future in an energy conscious America — and the commuter today may be enjoying comforts the automobile driver would never think of.

Federal officials have been trying to devise ways to divorce the automobile from the American vision of independence, extolling the virtues of car-pooling, group transportation in vans, and the like.

But for years thousands of Americans have been traveling to and from work by railroad in cities like Boston, Chicago, San Francisco, Washington and New York.

Those who drive to and from work or live in a city where it's a bus ride, subway trip or walk to work may think they have all the advantages over the commuter.

It's not so.

Commuting trips run from under an hour to up to 2 hours, plenty of time for drinking a cup of coffee and reading a newspaper or a paperback on the way. On New York commuter trains on the way home, the bar cars are open or the rider can pick up a couple of beers before the trip.

While the driver is pushing his car through rush hour traffic and the city dweller is hanging from the straps of a bus or subway car, the rail commuter is lounging in an airconditioned train.

Then it's a short drive to green grass, trees and home. And on fair days the commuter often can walk or ride a bicycle to the station and home.

There are discomforts the veteran commuter soon learns to endure, the tales of which often can be used to entertain or bore friends.

They range from the 8-hour breakdown to falling asleep and ending up at the end of the line 50 miles from home. One breakdown ended with this commuter arriving for work about 20 minutes before he was scheduled to head for home.

Commuters rapidly become creatures of ritual oriented totally to the train.

"He's been commuting for six years. You'd think he would know where the train doors are," commented a woman as a stray commuter was caught standing on the platform between the doors of the car when the train arrived. Standard practice is to group in clumps precisely where the doors of the train will open.

Likewise, many commuters sit in the same section of the same car every day. And a commuter normally ignores fellow riders unless he or she is a card player — they always sit in the facing seats at the front and back of the cars.

A commuter has a set of basic signals to show he or she is not to be disturbed. They range from feigning sleep to total immersion in a newspaper, even if it means reading every line and classified ad.

Community Greenhouse Yields Energy, Food

By JOE WHEELAN
Associated Press Writer

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — If you ask Gary Garber what the sun, coal, wood, cow manure and water in 55-gallon drums have in common, he'll tell you: They will help heat the nation's first community greenhouse, where vegetables will be raised for the poor and elderly.

Garber, 29, is the boss of a unique project whose goal is twofold. He aims to show people they can draw upon cheap and renewable resources to heat their homes, and he hopes to feed scores of Cheyenne's elderly and poor with home-grown vegetables.

"We're trying to bring technology down to earth," Garber says. "Big no longer is good."

Garber works for Community Action of Laramie County, a service organization whose purpose is to assist low-income families. The greenhouse complex is the most ambitious undertaking tackled so far by Community Action, which is regarded as one of the most innovative organizations in the nation.

When completed later this year, the three units forming the solar greenhouse will be a showcase of inexpensive, alternative energy sources and an important food source for low-income persons. A federal stipend of $15,000 has defrayed some of the $35,000 cost of building the complex, Garber said.

Seventy of Cheyenne's elderly will be bused to the greenhouse daily to tend the vegetables grown there. They will take much of what they grow home with them. What's left will either wind up on the tables of some of the city's poor, or be sold to the public.

And the grassroots-level technology employed to heat the greenhouse is so elementary that it could easily be put to work heating homes, Garber says.

Flanked by two smaller greenhouses, the principal greenhouse unit will stay warm because of hinged fiberglass panels fitted into the south roof that open to let sunshine in and close to keep out the cold at night.

During the day, the sun's heat is trapped in a row of black, 55-gallon drums filled with water. When the panels are lowered back into place at night, the drums exude the heat they have absorbed during the day, sustaining the warm, moist conditions needed to grow tomatoes, lettuce, green chili and carrots.

Garber says a series of cloudy days presents no problems, because the greenhouse has a backup heating source — methane gas from cow manure.

If the greenhouse is the heart of the project, the methane digestor is its stomach. It works like one.

Cow manure is shoveled into the digestor, a torpedo-shaped container. Water heated by a pump-driven solar collector continually sluices over the chamber, maintaining a constant 95 degrees, the optimum temperature for making methane gas.

As the gas forms, it drifts through a pipe and into a holding tank suspended from the ceiling. When the sun is obscured for days, the gas can be used to fire a backup furnace in the principal greenhouse unit.

Garber says the digestor will consume about 150 pounds of manure daily.

The sludge left after the methane gas forms won't be wasted. It will be used to fertilize vegetables grown in the greenhouse.

EAST CAROLINA PLAYHOUSE
77 SEASON 78

an outstanding lineup of rollicking, poignant, festive and outrageous comedies

BYE BYE BIRDIE!

October 19-22, 8:15 p.m., McGinnis Auditorium
One of the most captivating musical shows of our time, BIRDIE! traces the rise and disillusionment of a sideburn-wearing, guitar-toting rock and roll singer through swooning fans, T.V. appearances, and even induction into the army. The play pokes gentle fun at teenagers and their parents alike, and leaves us whistling such hit numbers as "A Lot of Livin' to Do" and "Put on a Happy Face."

THE SKIN OF OUR TEETH

December 1-3, 5-6, 8:15 p.m., McGinnis Auditorium
Thornton Wilder's Pulitzer Prize winning fantasy takes a wacky trip through the ages with the Antrobus family — all the way from the last ice age to the end of the war — and finds them coming through "by the skin of our teeth." A multi-media approach to the staging of this modern classic as well as some breathtaking stage effects make it a production not to be missed!

THE NATIONAL HEALTH or NURSE NORTON'S AFFAIR

February 20-25, February 27-March 1, 8:15 p.m., Studio Theatre
As a welcoming tribute to ECU's new medical school, the PLAYHOUSE is proud to present this dark comic portrait of life in a men's ward in a state operated hospital. The action juxtaposes poignancy with outrageous satire as the patients come and go, some facing illness with fortitude and others with boredom, while the hospital staff are the familiar, highly romanticized characters of the TV soap operas. You'll laugh and cry at this bittersweet comment on life's joys and pains.

a midsummer night's dream

April 18-22, 8:15 p.m., McGinnis Auditorium
One of the most masterful of Shakespeare's festive comedies, the DREAM is a fantasy of two young couples who elope on a midsummer evening and are tricked by the fairies into falling in love with the wrong fiancees. The broad comic situations and some of Shakespeare's most unforgettable characters — from Nick Bottom, the weaver by trade and actor by avocation, to Puck, the impish sprite who makes all the mischief — have made this play a favorite with audiences for nearly 400 years.

Presley's Lead Backup Singer Enjoys A Legacy

IN DEMAND — J.D. Sumner, Elvis Presley's lead backup singer, and his gospel quartet are in greater demand now than ever before. (AP Laserphoto)

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — J.D. Sumner, Elvis Presley's lead backup singer and probably his closest friend, is in greater demand now than ever before.

Sumner and his gospel quartet are living testament to the Presley legacy.

"He left us a portion of his popularity," said Sumner, whose association with Presley lasted about 20 years. "It's been hectic; you can't believe how busy I've been since his death; some people say, 'What are you going to do now?' Actually, we haven't been able to accept all the dates. The demand is 100 to 1 what it used to be.

"Elvis was one-half of our income. Really, I'm making more now than when he was living."

Sumner, 52, said Presley would approve.

"I know what Elvis would want me to do," he said. "He would say, 'You stupid so-and-so, get the money.'"

Sumner is writing a book about Presley and will appear on an "American Bandstand" tribute to Presley Oct. 22. He also has recorded a single, "Elvis Has Left The Building," with the title taken from the standard public address announcement at the close of Presley's concerts.

But he still can't believe Presley is dead.

"I don't think it's hit me yet," he said in an interview a month after Presley's death Aug. 16 in Memphis. "I'll be sitting around and wondering when we go on the next tour, and in a few seconds I'll realize he's dead."

He gets upset at portrayals of Presley as lonely and a hard-drug user.

"Some people have said things they didn't know what they were talking about. People who say he was lonely didn't have a conception of the last years of his life. He was not 'in prison.' He did what he wanted, and when he wanted, more than you and I. He could afford to. For instance, he rode his motorcycle and ate in restaurants.

"I don't see how he could have used drugs — been a mainliner — without me knowing it. I have stayed with him 12 to 15 hours at a time and he didn't take drugs. And I've seen his arms and legs (and there were no marks).

"Anything he did was on a doctor's prescription. If he abused anything, it was sleeping pills. But he wasn't foolish enough to be a mainliner."

Sumner learned of Presley's death on the radio while in Nashville. He thought it was a publicity stunt dreamed up by Col. Tom Parker, Presley's long-time manager.

"I remember saying that the colonel has gone too far," Sumner said. "I hired someone to drive me to Memphis. I didn't fully realize he was dead until I saw him in the coffin.

"I broke down when I got there and saw him in the casket. It was just too much. I was basically put in charge of the funeral service and was busy with arrangements and didn't break down again until I saw him in the crypt."

Like Westerns, Police Shows Risk Extinction

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Like the Western before it, the police show is in danger of extinction, victim of its own popularity and a continuing assault on television violence.

Four years ago there were 17 police series on TV. This season the networks pared them to 10, and no new ones are planned for midseason or next year.

"I can see the cop shows disappearing altogether," says David Gerber, executive producer of "Police Woman" and "Police Story."

Although Gerber places the major blame on pressure groups which he says "would turn television into a benign, passive, stultifying medium."

John McMahon, NBC's West Coast programming chief, says, "The violence issue and the saturation of the market with cop shows coincided."

Last year five new police shows bowed, but only one made it. That was "Charlie's Angels," a fairy tale with sex and humor. This year, there's only one new police show, "CHiPs," which has been described as bubblegum for kid viewers.

Frank Price, president of Universal Television, which supplies 11 series' each week to the three networks, says he doesn't like the meddling by pressure groups but likes the end result — "the better variety of shows."

McMahon and others agree that if the police show disappears, it won't be for long. Television is cyclical. Medical shows and lawyers have periodically vanished and reappeared.

Until this year the police show remained a television staple despite antiviolence campaigns that date back 10 years. But the networks now are feeling real pressure, particularly from the American Medical Association, the Parent-Teacher Association and the National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting.

Although the networks still are in the market for movies with police themes, such as a two-hour "Police Story" film, the end of this season will see the ranks of TV policemen further depleted. Robert Blake has said this is his final year with "Baretta." "Hawaii Five-0," now in its 10th year, could be nearing the end of the line. "Barnaby Jones" also is showing signs of strain and "Switch" was renewed only by the skin of its teeth.

Gerber believes that now that police shows are declining, the next target will be sex on TV.

"People will start finding sex on television where it's never been before because the pressure groups will start calling attention to it."

Gerber, who says he has been working with other producers to answer the critics, says, "We're taking off the so-called violent shows. That makes television better? Baloney! What's violence? Who decides?

"It comes down to who is going to decide what the American public sees."

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Joe R. Stines

Sheppard Memorial Library has recently acquired a number of new and very useful professional books for the teacher, librarian or parent who is attempting to promote and encourage reading. Caroline Bauer's HANDBOOK FOR STORYTELLERS (1977) describes how to use effectively a variety of media—including film, music, crafts, puppetry, and even magic—to bring stories alive for audiences ranging from preschoolers to senior citizens. No other book contains such a wealth of information and guidance for both the amateur and professional storyteller.

START EARLY FOR AN EARLY START by Ferne Johnson (1976) describes in detail library and library related services to preschoolers. Ferne includes information concerning infants, toys that teach, dial-a-story, parenting collections, and access.

Barbara Baskin has edited THE SPECIAL CHILD IN THE LIBRARY (1976). This book of readings is a powerhouse of current information not only about the mentally and physically handicapped but the gifted child as well. Baskin discussed physical environments, programming, reader guidance, selection, and bibliotherapy. Bibliographies are plentiful. Most articles are carefully footnoted and an organized index makes the book all the more useful.

Barbara Bader's AMERICAN PICTUREBOOKS FROM NOAH'S ART TO THE BEAST WITHIN (1976) provides the first historical study of American children's picturebooks. It includes information about numerous artists and writers, key editors, and photographic books. Bader discusses the influence of social trends, changes in printing techniques and market conditions, and the impact of motion pictures, cartoons and comic strips. It is a most detailed book but it could use some critical reorganization and editing.

The fifth edition of CHILDREN AND BOOKS by May Hill Arbuthnot was published this year by Scott, Foresman and Company. Zena Sutherland revised the earlier work adding more information helpful in programming. The book is designed for all adults working to bring children and books together. It discusses criteria and types of literature, artists, authors, understanding children and their needs. This source contains many useful bibliographies and ideas for promoting reading.

CONCERT — Jac McCracken, of Oak City and a graduate of the ECU School of Music, will perform in concert Oct. 11 at the Martin County Auditorium, Williamston High School.

Hyatt To 'Lost Colony'

MANTEO — Robert P. Hyatt, staff and faculty member of the North Carolina School of the Arts in Winston-Salem, has been named general manager of "The Lost Colony", Paul Green's outdoor drama here.

Hyatt, 44, will assume his new duties in Manteo on November 1, according to Thomas J. Pearsall, chairman of the board of the Roanoke Island Historical Association, the organization responsible since 1937 for the production of "The Lost Colony".

Hyatt has been director of the N.C. School of the Arts summer programs since 1971, including the school's international music program in Italy, its summer extension program at the Mint Museum in Charlotte, and the N.C. School of the Arts summer extension program at Warren Wilson College in Asheville. He has also been dean of students at NCSA since 2968.

Born in the North Carolina mountains, Hyatt grew up on the Cherokee Indian Reservation where his father was principal of the school administered by the Bureau of Indian Affairs. He was assistant stage manager of, and an actor in, the outdoor drama "Unto These Hills" from 1950 to 1955.

A 1955 graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, he holds graduate and professional degrees from Yale University and Duke University. He was employed at Duke as a campus minister from 1958 to 1968, where he was also an assistant international student advisor.

ECU Violinist Schmidt Will Appear In Kinston

ECU News Bureau

Violinist Rodney Schmidt of the East Carolina University School of Music faculty will perform works by Mozar. Beethoven, Schubert, Debussy and Saint-Saens in a Kinston concert appearance Thursday, Oct. 13, at 8 p.m.

Dr. Schmidt's performance is part of the Lenoir Community College Artist Series and is open to the public at no charge. Appearing with him is pianist Rosemary Fischer, also a faculty member of the ECU School of Music.

Schmidt is a graduate of the Oberlin Conservatory of Music, with a doctorate in performace from the University of Colorado. He teaches violin, viola and chamber music at ECU, and directs ECU's String Project, Youth Orchestra and String Camp.

Rosemary Fischer, also a graduate of Oberlin, has a graduate degree from the University of Michigan. She has been a member of the faculty at Converse College, Spartanburg, S.C.

In recent year Dr. Schmidt has served on the staff of the noted Meadowmount School of Music in Elizabethtown, N.Y., where 500 violin students from several nations gather each summer for intensive study.

In addition, Schmidt has performed with the N.C. Symphony for two seasons, and teaches violin in the Kinston area under the sponsorship of the Kinston Community Council for the Arts.

Ballet Company At Raleigh

Jac McCracken In Concert On Tuesday

ECU News Bureau

WILLIAMSTON — Pianist Jac McCracken will appear in concert Tuesday, Oct. 11, at 8 p.m. in the Martin County Auditorium

The performance is sponsored by the Martin County Arts Council.

Tickets for the performance are on sale at $3 each at several local business operations, and all proceeds will go toward the purchase of a concert piano for the Martin County Auditorium.

A native of Oak City, McCracken is a graduate of the East Carolina University School of Music and has studied in Europe.

He has received numerous awards, including the Fulbright-Hayes Award and a full fellowship for advanced study from the International Bach Society.

His past performances include solo recitals throughout North Carolina and solo and chamber recitals in Milan, Rome, York, and Cincinnati.

At present, McCracken is a member of the music faculty at Loyola University in New Orleans.

Offering Program Of Chamber Music

ECU News Bureau

An ensemble of East Carolina University musicians will perform chamber music Wednesday, Oct. 12, at 8:15 p.m. in the A. J. Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall here.

The ensemble includes David Hawkins, oboe; George Knight, clarinet; Fred McLean, basson; James Parnell, horn; and Ellen Nagode, piano..

Works to be perfromed by the group are Mozart's "Cassazione for Oboe, Clarinet, Basson and Horn" and the Beethoven's Quintet, Opus 16, for Winds and Piano.

According to Parnell, this is the first performance of the Mozart at ECU in about 20 years. The "Cassazione" is one of the composer's rarely heard works, while the Beethoven quintet is one of the best-known of its type.

All ensemble performers are members of the ECU School of Music faculty except bassoonist McLean, a sernior music student from Hudson, N.C.

The chamber music program is free and open to the public.

Paintings By Paula Narron On Display

ECU News Bureau

Paintings by Paula Narron of Four Oaks, senior student in the East Carolina University School of Art, will be on display Oct. 10-21 in ECU's Kate Lewis Gallery.

Entitled "A Touch of Nature," the show consists of oil, watercolor and acrylic paintings and one sculpture and is united by a theme of the beauty of the world as expressed through the medium of art.

Narron, a candidate for the BS degree in art, plans to teach upon graduation and continue painting.

The show will open at 7 p.m. Oct. 10 with a public reception in the Kate Lewis Gallery, which is located in Whichard Building.

Narron is a member of several campus organizations, a residence hall advisor in Cotten Hall dormitory and a volunteer arts and crafts teacher with the local Boys Club.

Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Ray Narron of Route 1, Four Oaks.

Chagall Show At Center

Selections from "The Bible," a series of 105 etchings by Marc Chagall which are based on the Old Testament, form a new traveling show from the North Carolina Museum of Art.

The show will be on display from Oct. 9 to Oct. 28 at Mendenhall Student Center. The hours are 8:30 a.m. to 11 p.m. on weekdays and 8:30 a.m. to midnight on weekends.

The etchings by the modern French master are a gift to the museum from Col. Kenneth B. Bland, Arlinton, Va. The 18 prints selected for the traveling show were chosen for their stylistic unity and variety of expression.

The time period in which this series was done is the same as the time of Chagall's rise in popularity in the United States Chagall was immediately popular in Europe, but it took several years for his work to be widely noticed in the States.

Chagall is now considered one of the great modern artists. The viewing public is beguiled by his Bible and fantasy theme as unified by the constantly recurring theme of men.

ILLUMINA, the Student Union Art Exhibition Committee, and sponsor of the show urges everyone to see the Mendenhall exhibit.

1970s Prints In Special Show

BOSTON (AP) — A special exhibit called "Prints Of The 1970s" is being held at the Museum of Fine Arts through Dec. 4.

The museum says the show "will offer new insights into the recent graphic art of 35 contemporary printmakers, whose styles range from realism to abstraction."

Among the artists included in the exhibition are Jim Dine, Jasper Johns, Helen Frankenthaler, Claes Oldenburg and Robert Rauschenberg.

Show And Sale: Original Prints

ECU News Bureau

A show and sale of original prints by modern and old masters will be hold at East Carolina University Thursday, Oct. 13.

Approximately 1,000 prints will be on display in the Gray Gallery in ECU's Leo W. Jenkins Fine Arts Center. The show is cosponsored by the Ferdinand Roten Galleries and the ECU School of Art.

Works spanning six centuries will be featured in the show, including prints by Rouault, Hogarth, Goya, Miro and Picasso as well as works by contemporary artists. In addition, the display will include Western and Oriental manuscript pages, some dating back to the 13th century.

Prices will range from $10 to the thousands, but most items will be sold for under $100.

A Roten Galleries representative will be available to answer questions about the artists and their printmaking techniques.

Next Host For Art Conference

TORONTO (AP) — The International Sculpture Conference will be held outside the United States for the first time when the 10th meeting of this group of sculptors and people from related fields convenes here in June 1978.

Held every two years, the conference was initiated in 1958 by the National Sculpture Center of the University of Kansas in Lawrence. Between 1,200 and 1,500 delegates are expected to attend.

Inadequate Consultation

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A high-level official is acknowledging the Carter administration inadequately consulted Israel's congressional backers before joining with the Soviet Union in a declaration supporting "legitimate rights" of Palestinians.

The communique, issued last weekend, aroused concern in Israel and among American Jewish groups and members of Congress.

The official, who asked that his name be withheld, said, "The lesson that one learns from it is that to the maximum extent that you possibly can, you should discuss this in advance with as many people as possible."

The declaration appeared to expand the Soviet role in seeking a settlement between Israel and the Arabs. It was also the first time the United States publicly endorsed "legitimate rights of Palestinians."

The official said that Israeli and Arab leaders have now agreed generally to try to reconvene the Geneva peace conference by December.

While he said that target is supported by both the United States and the Soviet Union, co-chairmen of the talks, he added there is no guarantee it will be met.

The official said also the Soviet Union is trying to persuade the Palestine Liberation Organization to accept resolutions in the U.N. Security Council recognizing Israel's right to exist.

One of the most prominent critics of the U.S.-Soviet declaration was Rep. John J. Rhodes, the House Republican leader, who called the declaration an example of President Carter's "ineptitude."

Carter, meanwhile, assured a congressional delegation of his commitment to Israel. "I'd rather commit political suicide than hurt Israel," he said.

The administration official, tracing the negotiations between Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, said Friday night it is difficult to consult Congress in detail while policy statements are still being negotiated.

But, he said, "in hindsight," even with differences still unresolved, the administration should have discussed the communique in advance with more members of Congress.

Once it was explained, he said, they would have found "it isn't the dreadful document that some of them thought."

In the declaration, the Soviet Union agreed to support peaceful relations between Israel and the United States. Also, the Russians lost in their effort to have Palestinian statehood endorsed directly.

The official said the statement "is still on the table," but neither Israel nor the Arabs have to accept the terms as a precondition for the pending Geneva talks.

Kick Returns Spark Pirate Victory, 33-0

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina University's kick return game turned a lackluster game into a happy Homecoming Saturday afternoon, as the Pirates pounded Southern Illinois University, 33-0.

Gerald Hall, named as the game's "King of the Gridiron" by the media, raced 51 yards with a punt late in the first period to help the Bucs set up their first touchdown. Then, a fake punt run of 25 yards by Steve Hale set up the second.

Willie Hawkins ran the second half kickoff back 61 yards, and that set the tone of the second half, as the Pirates broke the 13-0 intermission game into a runaway during the second half.

Five different Pirates got on the scoreboard with touchdowns. Quarterback Leander Green got the first score on a 25-yard scamper around end, and Vince Kolanko added the second on a nine-yard run. Hawkins scored from four yards out on a pitchout, and Southerland faked a handoff to go five yards. Freshman Tony Collins finished up the scoring with a one-yard plunge in the final period, while Jimmy Creech kicked three extra points.

Even the rain which fell late in the game failed to dampen the spirts of the second straight home record crowd, set at 25,251.

Hall, who had four punt returns for 102 yards extended his career yardage to 409, snapping the old career record of Robert Ellis of 382, set from 1964 to 1966.

As "King of the Gridiron" winner, a $1,000 scholarship will be given in Hall's name to the ECU athletic fund.

During most of the first half, the Pirates had difficulty in moving the football, not getting a first down until Green made his touchdown run in the final two minutes of the first period. Southern Illinois had moved the ball well in the meantime, but the Pirates got fired up in the second half, and took control of the game. In the fourth period, for example, the Pirates rushed the ball 25 times for 153 yards.

Southern was able to get only 16 yards on the ground during the entire second half.

The Salukis got the first threat off when Southerland fumbled the ball at midfield and Ron Geels recovered. Southern failed to get a first down and punted, but the Pirates were offsides, and that allowed a first down at the ECU 37. A 49-yard field goal attempt four plays later was short .

Late in the half, the Salukis dropped back to punt, and Hall gathered the ball in on his own 22, cut to the sidelines and was finally pulled down by punter Steve Mick on the Saluki 27.

Kolanko got two yards on the first play, and Green raced around the right side for the remaining 25 on the second play, putting the Pirates ahead, 7-0, after Creech's first kick. Only 1:39 was left in the period.

Southern got another chance after a short punt gave them the ball on the ECU 36, but after moving to the 13, another field goal attempt, this one of 30 yards, was off-target.

The Pirates then drove for the only time in the half, going 80 yards for a touchdown. Southerland ripped off 22 yards on second down, moving to the 38. On third and seven, Southerland hit Barry Johnson for 20 yards to the SIU 39.

The Pirates then found themselves in a fourth-and-19 situation on the SIU 48, and Hale got the snap on the fake punt and easily raced down to the 23 before he was finally stopped, as the entire SIU defensive unit was caught napping on the play.

The Pirates forced it down to the nine, and Kolanko went over left tackle from there for the score. Creech missed his first PAT kick of the year after that, and with 1:30 left in the half, the Pirates held a 13-0 lead.

Hawkins raced the opening kickoff of the second half back to the Southern 31, but the Bucs were held at the nine, and Southerland's pass to Johnson on a fake field goal attempt was intercepted by Geels.

Hall again set up a score with another punt return, this one of 42 yards down to the SIU 11. The Pirates went to the same well twice, as Hawkins took pitchouts from Southerland, first for seven yards, then for the final four. A two-point try was stopped, and the Pirates led, 19-0 with 10:08 left.

SIU appeared to get on track, moving from the 29 to the ECU 32 before Harold Fort intercepted a pass.

Pass interference got another SIU drive going from the 23 to the Pirate 45 before successive sacks by Herman Montford and Woodrow Stevenson moved them back to the SIU 38.

The Pirates took over the ball at their own 30 with just seconds left in the half, and drove 70 yards for their next score. The key play was a 25-yard scamper by Southerland, from the SIU 33 to the eight.

Southerland finally faked a handoff to the fullback, then scampered around right end for the final five yards. Creech kicked to make it 26-0 with 11:03 left in the game.

A drive that featured a 32-yard run by Green and a 13-yarder by Sam Harrell was finally halted on downs at the SIU 17.

But the Bucs got it back at the 16 on a Thomas McLaurin interception return of 20 yards late in the game. It took just five plays before Collins got his first collegiate score on the one-yard plunge. Creech's kick upped the score to the final 33-0 margin.

The win upped the Pirate record to 5-1 on the year. They return home on Saturday to entertain former Southern Conference rival Richmond.

Defense Paces UNC Rally

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

CHAPEL HILL — North Carolina, its offense shut down by turnovers, looked to its defense yesterday to help put 17 third-quarter points on the board and went on to take a 24-3 victory over Wake Forest yesterday,

Trailing 3-0 at the half, the Tar Heels broke open about the same time as the skies above Kenan Stadium, scoring two touchdowns and a field goal within five minutes to take command in the contest.

The defense provided the first touchdown when Alan Caldwell recovered a Ronchie Johnson fumble in midair and returned it 72 yards for a score. Prior to that, Wake had held a 3-0 edge on a 30-yard first-quarter field goal by Bob Hely.

Carolina added a 39-yard field goal by Tom Biddle a few minutes later and, late in the third period, Billy Johnson scored on an 18-yard run. Former Rose High standout Doug Paschal added the Tar Heels' final touchdown on a four-yard run.

Four first-half turnovers halted North Carolina on all but one of its possessions. Despite the running of freshman tailback "Famous Amos" Lawrence, who rushed for 86 yards before intermission, the Tar Heels were unable to put any points on the scoreboard. After being forced to punt on their first possession, they lost the ball twice on fumbles and twice on interceptions when they appeared to be driving.

The Demon Deacons got help from the Tar Heels in their first possession of the game.

A short Johnny Elam punt gave the Deacs the ball at the Carolina 45, but they seemed to be halted with a fourth-and-two at the 37. Barry Sikes booted a punt into the end zone, but the Tar Heels were called for holding on the play, giving Wake Forest a first down at the UNC 22.

James McDougald gained seven yards in two carries and Stan Rolark picked up two more, producing a fourth-and-one at the 13. Hely came in and booted the ball through the middle for a 3-0 Wake lead with 10:37 left in the first quarter.

Then, the turnovers began. Behind the running of Lawrence, the Tar Heels drove down to the Wake Forest 18, but a Phil Farris fumble was recovered by Mark Mattiko at the 11.

The Deacons got the ball down to the Carolina 38, helped by McDougald's brusing run for a first down on third-and-four, but were forced to punt.

The punt was downed in the end zone and, from the 20, Lawrence turned the corner on the left side for a 21-yard gain to the 41. Fullback Bob Loomis broke into the secondary for nine more yards and the Heels got down the the WFU 41 before Lawrence was unable to find the handle on a handoff from quarterback Matt Kupec and tackle Steve Check recovered for the Deacons at the Wake 48.

Wake Forrest got down to the UNC 15, helped by two key passes from quarterback Mike McGlamry to tight end Steve Young, but Hely missed on a 32-yard field goal attempt.

The Tar Heels managed to move the ball from the 20 to the 35 before a Kupec pass was intercepted by Dan Smading at the Deacon 42. On a third-and-eight, the Tar Heels got the ball back when McGlamry was intercepted by Bernie Menapace.

Battling the clock, the Carolina got help from a 15-yard holding penalty to get the ball to the Wake 18, where another Kupec's pass was picked off, this time by Don Cervi.

Early in the third quarter, the Tar Heels stopped the Deacons on fourth-and-inches at the Carolina four yard line. They were unable to move the ball, however, and were forced to punt away from the poor field position.

The Deacons took over at the UNC 42 and got a first down at the 32 on two carries by McDougald. On first down, however, tailback Ronchie Johnson took the ball around left end for four yards, was hit by Menapace and the ball popped up in the air. Caldwell grabbed it at the UNC 28 and returned it behind good blocking for a touchdown. Biddle's kick made it 7-3 just before the rain began to pour.

Just over four minutes later, Elam dropped back to punt and booted the ball to Deacon John Zeglinski, who fumbled when hit by Lawrence Taylor. Ken Mabry recovered for Carolina at the Deacon 22 to set up a 39-yard Biddle field goal four plays later.

Biddle kicked off to George Ervin at Ron Dowdy recovered for Carolina.

On first down, Johnson blasted through the right side into the secondary and carried about five Deacon tacklers into the end zone. Biddle's kick gave UNC a 17-3 lead.

The final touchdown came on the only real Tar Heel scoring drive of the day, midway through the final frame.

Quarterback Clyde Christensen directed the drive, which started at the Carolina 38. He threw a 19-yard pass to Farris for one first down and carried five yards for another.

Lawrence took the ball 14 yards up the middle to give the Heels and first-and-goal at the four and Doug Paschal burst through the line on the next down for the TD Biddle's kick added the final point in the 24-3 victory.

Tar Heel head coach Bill Dooley had praise for his team's defensive effort and cited the difference in the game: "When they turned it over, we were able to get some points on the board; when we turned it over, they didn't get anything."

Carolina is now 3-2 overall and 1-0 in the Atlantic Coast Conference, while Wake Forest is 1-4 and 0-2 in the ACC. The Tar Heels visit N. C. State next week, and Wake Forest will host Maryland in two ACC battles.

Brown Leads Pack To 17-15 Win Over Auburn

By REX THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Running back Ted Brown, who has gone over 100 yards 14 times as a backfield star at North Carolina State, set a new school career rushing record Saturday as the Wolfpack ground out a 17-15 football victory over Auburn.

Brown, who went into the game with 2,509 yards since he started playing regularly as a freshman, ran the total to 2,576. But with his 67 yards against Auburn he fell short of the nearly 102 yards per game he had averaged this year.

Brown, a 5-10, 188-pound junior from High Point, N.C., needed 34 yards Saturday to break the Wolfpack career record set three years ago by Stan Fritz.

The big ground gainer for North Carolina State was Billy Ray Vickers, who rushed for 106 yards in 17 plays. Joe Cribbs got 100 yards for Auburn.

The Tigers fought back in the final period with George Portella's 22-yard field goal and a 55-yard scoring pass from John Crane to Byron Franklin.

But Portella had missed an extra point earlier in the game and Auburn, behind 17-15 after Crane's touchdown pass, went for a 2 point conversion, hoping at least for a tie. But Crane's pass fell untouched into the end zone.

North Carolina State's defense set up the Wolfpack's first touchdown. Quarterback Johnny Evans went in from the 3 after Kyle Wescov recovered a fumble on the Auburn 4.

Then defensive end Jeff Easter blocked Skip Johnston's punt and James Butler picked up the ball for N.C. State's second score.

The Wolfpack had a chance to put the game out of reach after Crane's long scoring pass with five minutes left in the final period. But the Auburn defense held and Evans, facing a big loss, threw the ball out of bounds and was tagged with a 15-yard penalty for grounding the ball.

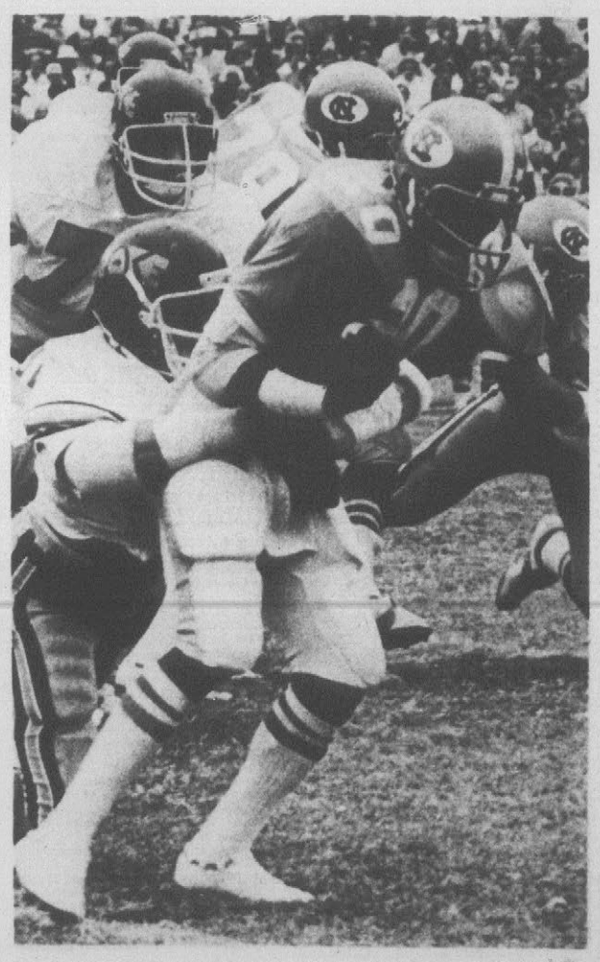

That gave the Tigers another chance but it was too far to go and too little time.

Dye Got Chance For Players To Have Fun

East Carolina Coach Pat Dye said he wanted his Pirates to get to the point where they could play a lot of people and have some fun.

Saturday afternoon, they provided a lot of fun for themselves as the Bucs romped to a 33-0 win over Southern Illinois.

While it didn't appear to be that type of game in the first half, with ECU leading only 13-0 at intermission, it soon turned out that way.

And Dye took advantage of it, playing just about everyone but his two young sons—not yet eligible.

A total of 12 running backs got their hands on the ball for the Pirates, who rolled up 300 yards even on the ground—again, just what Dye asked for.

"I'm real happy to win," he said. "I felt we would have difficulty in moving the ball on Southern Illinois and that was true until the later stages. They are much improved on defense."

Dye keyed the kicking game as the real reason for the Pirate success of the day. "We put pressure on their kicking, got good returns and kicked well ourselves. Gerald Hall got super blocking and did a good job on the runbacks." Hall, on four returns, got 102 yards and set up two touchdowns.

"Willie Hawkins had a big kickoff return, and Steve Hale made a big play on the fake field goal." Hale's run of 25 yards, got a first down and set up a score.

"Our specialty teams had a lot to do with the margin of the win," Dye added.

"I was real proud of our defense for the shutout," he said.

Turning to the offense, Dye felt the Pirates would have had more success in running the ball straight at Southern earlier in the game. "We've got to figure a way to get the football to our quick people outside, too.

"I don't feel we have solved our offensive problems. We may have solved some, in that

Gibson, Clark Lead Keydets By Spiders

LEXINGTON, Va. (AP) — Virginia Military, sparked by tailback Andre Gibson and quarterback Robby Clark, exploded for 19 second quarter points and went on to a 25-0 football rout of Richmond's Spiders Saturday.

In squaring their record at 2-2, the Keydets broke a 10-game losing streak against Richmond and shut out the Spiders for the first time 1962.

Gibson highlighted the sec period outburst with an el trifiying 69-yard touchdo run. He added a second tou down on a 27-yard screen pa from Clark early in the fou quarter.

VMI got a third touchdo from fullback Steve Oddi and pair of field goals from Cra Jones.

Richmond, now 1-4, lost fo of six fumbles, with two setti up VMI touchdowns.

VMI also lost four of six fu bles on the rain-soaked natur turf, but the Keydet defen bent but never broke.

Richmond had a golden sc ing opporuntiy when VMI lo the ball at its 24 on the openi kickoff but gave it back on fumble three plays later.

Another VMI turnover mi way through the third perio led to the Spiders' best scorin chance, but after driving to th Keydets' 2, defensive bac Tony Hamilton dropped Busto Jackson for a 2-yard loss on fourth down play and VMI too over.

Then late in the fourth qua ter Richmond had a pass fro the VMI 13 intercepted in th end by Tim Cox.

Linebacker Glen Jones fumble recovery at the Richmond 35 led to VMI's first touchdown on the opening play of the second quarter as Oddi crashed over from the one on a fourth down play.

Jones missed the extra point but atoned later by sandwiching 27-and 33-yard field goals around Gibson's long run, which came after he broke free from a would-be tackler in his own backfield.

Gibson's finished with 127 yards on 23 carries. Clark accounted for 127 yards through the air, completing seven of 14 passes.

Third-Stringer Sparks Texas

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

DALLAS (AP) — Texas' third-string quarterback Randy McEachern, a redshirt junior who never has lettered, came off the bench to pass second-ranked Oklahoma dizzy Saturday and Earl Campbell supplied the running muscle as the fifth-ranked Longhorns prevailed 13-6 in a bruising battle of the unbeaten.

A tremendous goal line stand in the final four minutes sealed Texas' first victory since 1970.

Tackle Brad Shearer and defensive back Johnnie Johnson tackled Oklahoma quarterback Thomas Lott for no gain on fourth-and-one at the Texas five.

Russell Erxleben kicked field goals of 64 and 58 yards with his siege gun place-kicking leg.

Texas was stunned in the first period when both first-string quarterback Mark McBath and second-string signal caller Jon Aune suffered injuries.

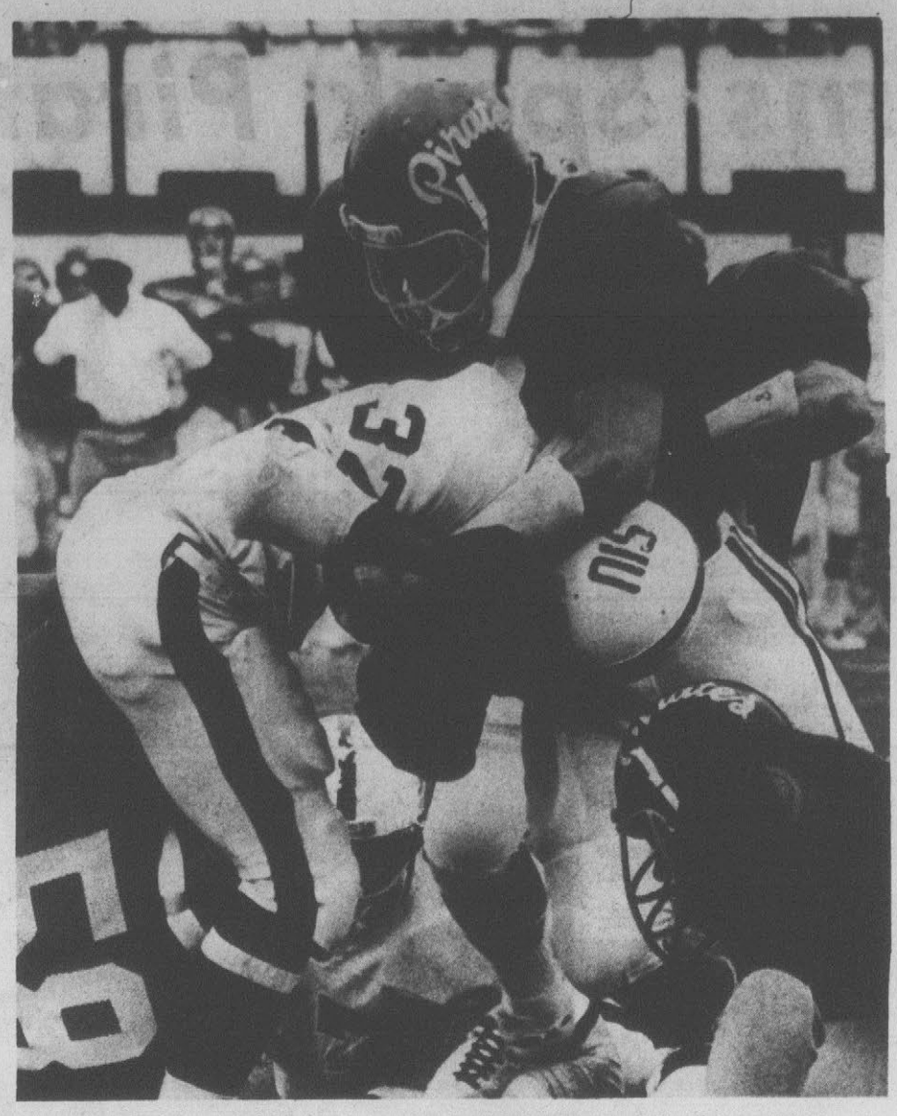

The underdog Longhorns, trailing 3-0 after Oklahoma's Uwe von Schamann kicked a 47-yard field goal, appeared doomed with the unheralded McEachern taking the field before the sellout crowd of 72,000 in the Cotton Bowl.

McEachern who had played in only one game, drove Texas into position for Erxleben's 64-yard field goal to tie the game 3-3.

Then he whipped the Longhorns on an 80-yard drive sprinkled with bullseye passes and Campbell's thundering runs.

Campbell scored from 24 yards out behind Steve Hall's crushing block as Texas led 10-3 at halftime.

Von Schamann kicked a 33-yard field goal to make it 10-6 in the third period, but Erxleben matched it with a 58-yarder in the fourth quarter.

Aussie Takes Match Play

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

VIRGINIA WATER, England (AP) — Australian globetrotter Graham Marsh scored the most important victory of his international golf career today, a 5 and 3 decision over heavily-guarded American Ray Floyd in the two-round final of the $225,000 World Match Play Championships.

Floyd, trailed by a cordon of a half-dozen suspecious-eyed, uniformed police after an anonymous telephone caller made a threat against him, never led in the gloomy, rainy weather that hung over the 6,969-yard, par 73 "Burma Road" course at Wentworth Golf Club in sugurban London.

Marsh, who won the Heritage Classic this season in his first year on the American tour, collected $52,500 from Europe's richest purse for the 24th international victory of his career.

The disappointed Floyd, a premier performer on the Amercan tour but a non-winner outside the United States, got $31,500 for second.

Spain's 20-year-old Severiano Ballesteros one-putted 13 times on his way to a 3 and 2 victory over Hale Irwin in the 36-hole match for third place. Ballesteros won $21,000, Irwin won $15,750.

"He absolutely holed it every time he drew the putter back," Irwin said.

Marsh, a slump-shouldered, sharp-nosed veteran, gave up a "sure thing" on the international circuit — which he had dominated for years — to try his fortunes on the American tour this year.

He said he figured he had to win $90,000 to make up for the international contracts he abandoned at the age of 33. He responded by winning more than $100,000 in the United States, added two lucrative Japanese titles in his spare time and pushed his complete earnings to more than $200,000 with his important victory.

He took the lead against Floyd with a 20-foot eagle putt on the fourth hole and never trailed.

ECU Is Third

COLUMBIA, S.C. — East Carolina University's volleyball team claimed a third-place finish in the South Carolina Invitational Tournament this weekend.

A total of seven other teams filled out the field.

The Pirates downed Francis Marion, 15-8, and 15-10 in the first match of the tournament, then beat Georgia, 15-8, 9-15, and 15-12.

Charleston, however, stopped the Pirates, 15-5, 8-15, 15-12, but the Lady Bucs still made the double elimination field.

They topped Georgia once more, 15-5, and 15-9, then fell to South Carolina, 15-10, 14-16, 15-3 to drop into the losers's bracket.

The Bucs then took wins over Clemson, 15-7, 15-7, and Western Carolina, 15-9, 12-15, 15-2. South Carolina then ended the Pirate hopes with two straight wins, but it still gave ECU a third-place finish.

Clemson Rips Virginia, 31-0

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Clemson quarterback Steve Fuller passed for touchdowns of 35 and 18 yards and ran for a nine-yard TD while a stiff Clemson defense held off a helpless and fumble-ridden Virginia offense for a 31-0 homecoming victory Saturday in an Atlantic Coast Conference football game.

The Tigers went on TD marches of 35, 80, 42 and 4 yards as they completely dominated the Cavaliers. The victory extended Clemson's winning streak to four games against one loss and gave the Tigers a 1-1 conference record.

Virginia is now 0-5 and 0-3 in the conference. It was the fourth time Virginia has been shutout in five games this year.

Virginia has yet to beat the Tigers in the series. Clemson has won 17 times and there have been no ties.

After being stymied by the Cavalier defense on their first two possessions, the Tigers took advantage of Mark Heniford's recovery of a Virginia fumble on the Cavalier 19.

Fuller promptly hit Rick Weddington for an apparent TD, but the Tigers were penalized for holding and set back to the Cavalier 35. After two incompletions, Fuller found Weddington once again for the first Clemson touchdown.

Obed Ariri added the extra point.

Virginia's Mickey Spady returned the ensuing kickoff to the Cavalier 25 and the Cavaliers began a 19-play drive which ended with Dan Hottowe's 36-yard field goal attempt fading wide to the left of the crossbar.

Maryland Wins, 24-10

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Substitute quarterback Larry Dick directed Maryland to 17 points during a seven-minute span as the Terps throttled Syracuse on defense and whipped the Orangemen 24-10 Saturday, ending a three-game losing streak.

Dean Richards scored on a five-yard run near the end of the third quarter, giving Maryland a 14-3 lead, after the Terps had gained 25 yards on an exchange of punts to set up a 39-yard drive.

Syracuse, which advanced beyond the Maryland 49 once in each half, then yielded a 28-yard field goal by Ed Loncar and a four-yard TD run by Steve Atkins in the first 4½ minutes of the fourth period.

Dick, who replaced Mark Manges after the Maryland starter suffered a fracture of the right hand in the second quarter, completed four of five passes for 75 yards on Maryland's three second-half scoring thrusts.

The Maryland defense also set up a one-yard TD run by Mickey Dudish in the second quarter, the drive covering 41 yards after linebacker Brad Carr recovered a fumble.

Syracuse, like Maryland now 2-3, scored on a 20-yard field goal by Dave Jacobs 37 second before halftime and on a three-yard run by Bob Avery with 4:52 left in the game. The field goal came after three runs inside the Maryland five yard line.

Interception Allows Duke To Nip 'Cocks

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Duke cornerback Earl Cook returned an intercepted pass 30 yards for the winning touchdown with 4:45 to play in a furious second-half rally, which gave Duke a 25-21 victory over South Carolina Saturday.

With South Carolina clinging to a 21-19 lead, Gamecock quarterback Ron Bass attempted a third down sideline pass, which Cook picked off and rambled in untouched.

The victory was the third straight after two opening losses for Duke, an Atlantic Coast Conference member. Independent South Carolina's season record dropped to 4-2.

Although Cook's interception provided the margin of victory, it was the play of quarterback Mike Dunn that put the Blue Devils back on the right track.

Dunn, a 6-foot-4 junior from Hampton, Va., who ran the option to perfection, led Duke on two long scoring drives that produced two touchdowns and two two-point conversions in the second half.

Down 21-3 after two quarters, the Blue Devils took the second-half kickoff and put together an impressive 81-yard march. Dunn's 45-yard pass to split end Tom Hall was the big gainer in the drive which ended when fullback Ned Gonet raced over from the 3-yard line.

Midway through the final quarter, Dunn got the Devils flying again — this time on a 68-yard touchdown drive. Gonet got the touchdown when he bulled over from the three. Then Dunn squirmed across for the conversion to pull Duke within two.

The first half was all South Carolina and the Gamecocks appeared on the way to an easy triumph.

After recovering a fumble at the Duke 32, South Carolina got its first scoring drive of the afternoon under way. Bass got the touchdown when he plunged over from the one with 6:24 remaining in the first quarter.

On their next possession, the Gamecocks scored again by moving 71 yards in 15 plays with fullback Spencer Clark bolting across from the one early in the second period.

Dunn finally got the Duke offense going and marched his team to the South Carolina nine where the Gamecock defense stiffened. Placekicker Scott Wolcott came in and booted a 26-yard field goal.

With time running out in the first half, the Gamecocks took off on a 68-yard touchdown trip. Clark contributed a 13-yard run and Bass chipped in a 12-yard aerial to split end Phil Logan. The score came when freshman George Rogers roared in standing up on a 5-yard run. Britt Parrish's third straight extra poiont gave South Carolina a 21-3 advantage at intermission.

perhaps some of our young people are playing better than our older players. We probably just are not patient enough with our inside game. We got good yards when we took it up in there. I think it's a matter of our not coming off the ball well. I just think we're more capable offensively."

Dye noted that the Pirates still have five games to play, and called them, especially next week's with Richmond, very important.

The coach also noted that the victories by N.C. State (over Auburn) and Duke (over South Carolina) didn't hurt the Pirate image any.

Lyle Leads Yankees To Even Series

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Rubber-armed Sparky Lyle, the last dependable pitcher in New York's bullpen, bailed the Yankees out with 5 1-3 innings of shutout relief and saved Saturday's 6-4 victory over Kansas City that tied the seesaw American League pennant playoff at two games each.

The fifth and deciding game will be played Sunday night, with the winner advancing to the 1977 World Series against the National League champion beginning Tuesday night.

Lyle permitted just two hits and shut off a Royal comeback that nearly wiped out an early 4-0 Yankee lead. It was a great clutch performance by Lyle, who led the American League by pitching in 72 games and had a piece of 39 of New York's 100 regular-season victories with 13 wins and 26 saves.

Using his slider and some tight New York defense, the left-handed reliever kept the Yankees' championship hopes alive in this do-or-die game. He came on with runners at first and third in the fourth inning and retired George Brett on a rally-ending line drive that left Kansas City's comeback one run short.

Then he kept the Royals away for the rest of this windy, chilly afternoon.

The margin of victory in this tense, tight game was an unearned run the Yankees scored in the fourth when Kansas City committed two errors.

Willie Randolph, whose second-inning single touched off a two-out, two-run Yankee rally, led off with a grounder to shortstop. Freddie Patek, who nearly drove the Yankees to distraction with a single, double and triple, threw wide to first and Randolph was safe.

Bucky Dent sacrificed and then Mickey Rivers popped to first, but John Mayberry dropped the ball for an error. Given another swing, Rivers advanced Randolph with a grounder to short and Graig Nettles singled the runner home.

That unearned run was all that was left of the Yankee lead when Lyle arrived, with the Yanks ahead 5-4.

He protected the lead tenaciously, weaving his way through a lineup that was trying to nail down Kansas City's first pennant ever.

The Yankees, seeking to avoid elimination, came out fast against Royals starter Larry Gura. Rivers, who had four hits, opened the game with a first-pitch double to right-center field. He moved to third on an infield hit by Nettles and scored on Thurman Munson's forceout grounder.

New York added two more runs in the second on Randolph's single, an RBI double by Dent and Rivers' single through the middle.

When Gura surrendered a leadoff double to Munson in the fourth and then walked Reggie Jackson, Marty Pattin relieved for the Royals. Lou Piniella laced a perfect hit-and-run single to right field, making it 4-0, and it looked like the Yankees were on their way to a laugher.

It did not, however, turn out that way.

Patek opened the Kansas City third against Yankee starter Ed Figueroa with a triple over Jackson's head in right. Frank White's sacrifice fly brought him home. With two out, Hal McRae singled on Brett's triple and scored on Brett's triple down the right-field line. Al Cowens walked, but Mayberry ended the rally by striking out.

After the Yankees added their unearned run in the fourth, the Royals knocked out Figueroa with two more runs.

Amos Otis drew a one-out walk and scored from first on Patek's double—his sixth hit of the series and the fourth that went for extra bases. That made it 5-3 and finished Figueroa.

Dick Tidrow relieved for the Yankees, but White greeted him with a ringing double that brought Patek home and left the Yankees only one run in front. Tidrow got Tom Poquette on a grounder that moved Patek to third, but walked McRae on a 3-2 pitch.

Now, with the lefty-swinging Brett coming up, Yankee Manager Billy Martin went for Lyle, the southpaw reliever. The strategy paid off, with Brett drilling a line drive to Piniella in left field, ending the inning.

Now the game rolled into the middle innings with Lyle hanging onto that narrow one-run lead. He came into the game with the knowledge that he was Martin's last healthy arm available in the bullpen, and that the game was his to win or lose.

The only other relievers Martin had were rookie Ken Clay, rarely used in important situations this season, and Ken Holtzman and Catfish Hunter, both of whom have pitched only once in the last six weeks. So it was Lyle's show.

He dominated it, permitting only singles by Patek in the sixth and Brett in the seventh. Before Brett's hit, McRae backed Piniella to the left field wall on a ball that seemed to stay in the park only because of a gusty, 19-mile-per-hour wind that was blowing from left to right all day long.

Following Brett's single, Cowens cracked a shot at third baseman Nettles, who started a snappy double play that ended the inning. It was the last piece of help Lyle needed.

He mowed the Royals down in order in the eighth and ninth innings and had the luxury of an extra run in the ninth, courtesy of Rivers' fourth hit of the game.

Until the ninth, except for the unearned run, Kansas City relief pitcher Marty Pattin had matched zeroes with Lyle. The veteran left-hander left the game after Rivers' hit, having worked six air-tight innings that kept the Royals close.

Rivers opened the Yankee ninth with a single, reached second on a wild pitch, advanced to third on Nettles' long fly and trotted home on Munson's sacrifice fly.

That made it 6-4 and kept the series going for one more day.

It also continued the trend these two teams established in the playoffs last year. They have alternated victories in the nine playoff games they've played so far, and the Royals hope it will be their turn again Sunday night when they will send Paul Splittorff, who won the opening game of the series, against New York's Ron Guidry, the second-game winner.

Alabama Stops Trojans, 21-20

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Alabama halfback Tony Nathan ran for two fourth quarter touchdowns and the Crimson Tide withstood a furious Southern California rally in the final seven minutes to upset the top-ranked Trojans 21-20 in an intersectional college football contest Saturday afternoon.

Seventh-ranked Alabama had taken a 21-6 lead over the Southern Cal early in the final period of the nationally-televised game, but USC quarterback Rob Hertel passed his team back in the waning moments.

Hertel hit Calvin Sweeney with a 10-yard touchdown pass with 6:46 remaining, then passed to Mosi Tatupu for the two-point conversion that made it 21-14.

Then, starting at his own 21-yard line, Hertel marched the Trojans to the Alabama one-yard line, where fullback Lynn Cain swept end for the score with 39 seconds left to play. But this time, the USC two-point conversion failed as Barry Krauss intercepted Hertel's desperation pass to preserve the victory.

Alabama boosted its record to 4-1 with the victory, while USC, which had won its last 15 games, suffered its first setback in five games this fall.

The Trojans attempted an onside kick following their missed conversion, but Alabama's Rick Neal fell on the ball, then the Crimson Tide ran out the clock.

Fullback Johnny Davis had given Alabama a 7-3 lead in the third quarter when he slipped through the right side of the line for a one-yard touchdown on a fourth down play.

The Trojans closed the gap to a point just before the third period ended, however, when Frank Jordan kicked his second field goal of the afternoon, a 23-yarder. The Crimson Tide defense had held USC, which had a first-and-goal but was unable to punch the ball over.

Nathan then built Alabama's lead to 21-6, scoring on a one-yard run early in the final quarter, then tallying again on a 13-yard scamper moments later.

Michigan Downs State In Big Ten Battle

By LARRY PALADINO
AP Sports Writer

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Quarterback Rick Leach passed for one touchdown and ran for another Saturday as third-ranked Michigan took a 24-14 Big Ten football victory over mistake-prone Michigan State.

Leach hit Rick White with a 12-yard touchdown pass in the second quarter to pull the Wolverines into a 7-7 tie. His touchdown came on a 3-yard run in the third quarter, when Michigan pulled away from its intrastate rival with a pair of touchdowns.

Turnovers ruined the Spartans' bid for an upset.

Michigan State trailed 10-7 at the half and opened the third quarter with a 52-yard kickoff return by Bruce Reeves. Quarterback Ed Smith hit fullback Jim Earley with a 20-yard pass to the Michigan 21, but Earley fumbled and Michigan's Dom Tedesco recovered his second fumble of the game. The Wolverines then drove 74 yards in nine plays with fullback Russell Davis bursting up the middle the last three yards for a touchdown.

Leach's touchdown, a three-yard run three minutes later, came two plays after Dwight Hicks intercepted a Smith pass and returned it 22 yards to the Spartan six.

Michigan's other points came on a wind-aided 50-yard Gregg Willner field goal late in the second quarter.

Michigan State opened the scoring on the first play of the second period, driving 68 yards in nine plays with Smith connecting on a 19-yard TD pass to flanker Kirk Gibson. The other Michigan State touchdown was on an 11-yard run by Earley 5½ minutes into the final period.

The victory was Michigan's fifth without a loss, while the Spartans fell to 2-3. The Wolverines are 2-0 in the conference, while Michigan State is 1-1.

Delaware Rips Citadel, 23-7

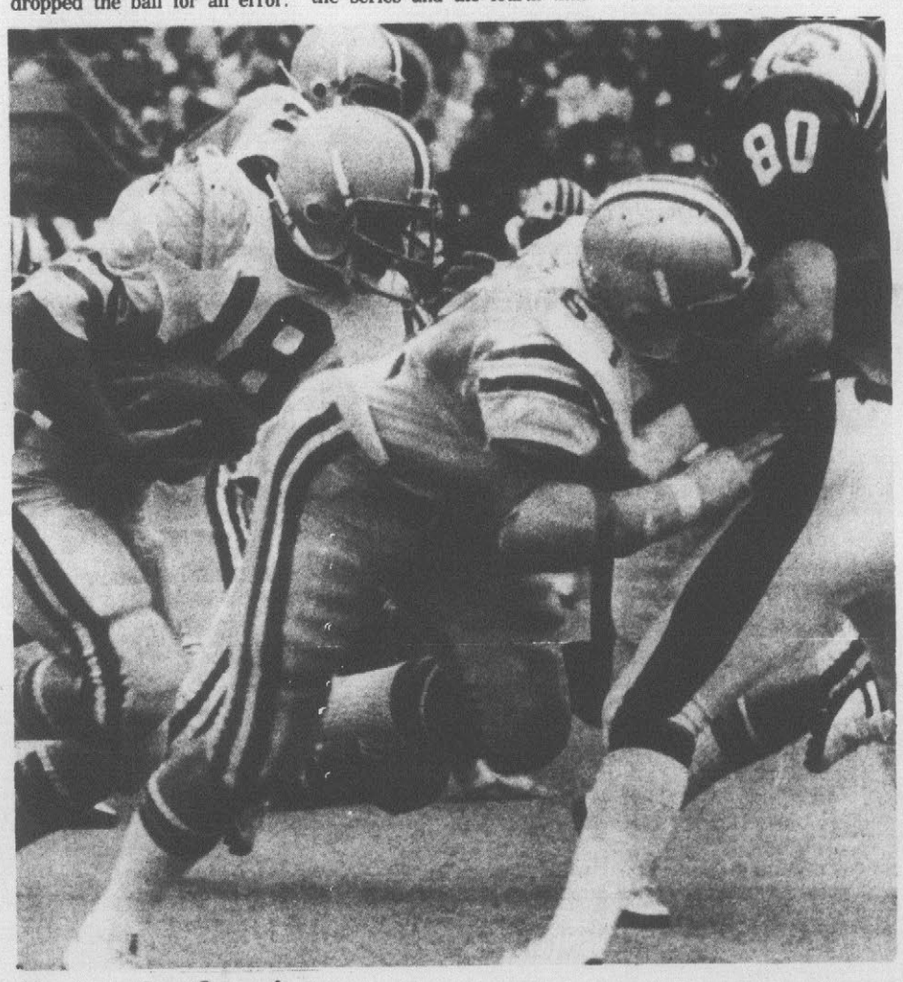

NEWARK, Del. (AP) — Peter Bisrian snared a 23-yard fourth quarter touchdown pass to seal Delaware's college football win over The Citadel Saturday at 23-7 in a game in which the visitors were forced to play catch-up throughout.

Delaware scored on their first possession, marching 57 yards in six plays to put the ball over on a 6-yard Jeff Komlo-to-Brian Adam pass.

A 22-yard Brant Kennedy field goal capped a Delaware drive mounted after Citadel fumbled at the host's 27 in the second quarter.

Citadel's lone score came in the opening minute of the third quarter in a series which included the team's only two first downs of the day. Marty Crosby hit flanker Tom Slawson for a 24-yard gain, and tailback Lonnie Ford sprinted 33 yards for the the score.

Citadel fell to 3-2 while Delaware boosted its record to 2-2-1.

Gobblers Top W&M

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Virginia Tech's Gobblers, led on offense by David Lamie's two touchdowns and on defense by Jerry Sheehan, snapped a six-game football losing streak Saturday with a 17-8 victory over William & Mary's turnover-plagued Indians.

Lamie, voted the outstanding player in the 29th annual Tobacco Festival game, sealed Tech's first triumph in four starts this season with a 77-yard run on the third play of the final quarter.

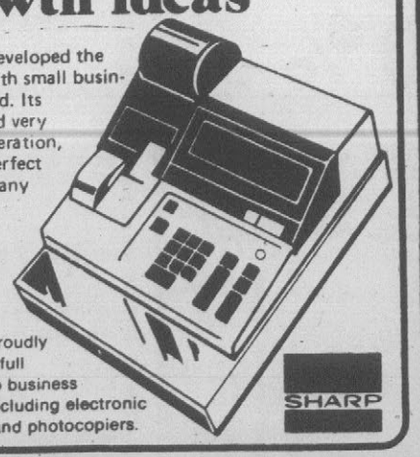

The 178-pound junior, who ran eight times for 120 yards and completed three of 10 passes for 51 more, had a score from a yard out midway the third quarter after Tech gained momentum by recovering an onside kickoff to start the second half.

The Indians, 3-3, whose offense was bogged down all day by four lost fumbles and four pass interceptions, got their only touchdown with 5:52 left on a one-yard run by Keith Fimian, set up by a 59-yard scamper by quarterback Tom Rozantz.

Sheehan, a 212-pound junior linebacker, was credited with 18 tackles, 12 assists, two fumble recoveries and a deflected pass.

Farmville Central Rolls Past Conley

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central's Jaguars defeated D. H. Conley 22-0 Friday night in a hard, but not always cleanly-fought, football game.

Personal fouls and unsportsmanlike conduct seemed to be the order of the evening as each team had more than 100 yards in penalties. Discipline was the biggest problem for both teams.

The Farmville offense was not overly-effective, but the team's defense almost completely shut down the Vikings, holding them to just 31 yards in total offense and minus 23 on the ground.

Conley moved into Jaguar territory only four times all night, with the deepest penetration being down to the 38. The Vikes were hurt by turnovers as two of those ventures across midfield were halted by a fumble and an interception and Farmville first touchdown was set up by a fumble.

The Viking defense was equally effective in two of four quarters, holding the Jags to just five yards rushing in the first period and minus two in the fourth. In between, however, Farmville came up with two touchdowns and a field goal and added a fourth-quarter TD pass.

Donald Freeman teamed up with Jeff Tyson for the Jags' first score on a 15-yard toss in the second quarter. Donald Reid added the PAT kick. Reid made it 10-0 early in the third period with a 26-yard field goal.

Later in the third, Reid scored from one yard away and Rufus Mayo grabbed a 55-yard pass from Freeman in the final quarter to round out the scoring.

A defensive battle for much of the first half, the Jaguars got a break midway through the second period and were able to capitalize.

The Jags took over early in the second quarter when William Maye recovered a Conley fumble at the Farmville 41. They moved the ball across midfield, but fumbled at the Viking 29 and Sammy Tucker fell on it.

On the next play, Bernard Hawkins took the ball off right tackle, but lost the handle and Ronald Reid recovered for the Jaguars at the Viking 26.

A pass from Freeman to Tyson moved the ball down to the 11, but a penalty and rushing loss pushed it back to the 15. On fourth and 14, Freeman fired the ball over the outstretched hands of Hawkins into the waiting arms of Tyson, who was standing in the end zone. Donald Reid's kick made it 7-0.

But that was it, as far as offensive excitement went, in the first half.

Early in the third quarter, Farmville forced a Conley punt and took over at midfield. Donald Reid went off right tackle for three yards and two unsportsmanlike conduct calls against the Vikings gave the Jaguars a first-and-10 on the Conley 17.

The Viking defense stiffened, holding the Jaguars at the 11, but Donald Reid booted a 26-yard field goal for a 10-0 Farmville lead with 7:14 left in the third quarter.

Holding Conley after the kickoff, the Jag mounted the only sustained scoring drive of the ballgame. Tim McLanahan's punt gave Farmville the ball at its own 46 and a nine-yard keeper by Freeman helped move it across midfield to the Conley 41.

Runs by Donald Reid and Mayo netted another first down at the 30 and an eight-yard pass from Freeman to Mayo helped move the ball to the 20, where Donald Reid broke several tackles in rushing to the nine for a first-and-goal.

Donald Reid and Mayo teamed up to carry the ball to to the one, where Reid took it over right tackle on a dive play with 56 seconds in the third. Donald Reid's kick failed.

The Vikings were able to move down the the Farmville 40 on their next series with the help of a short kickoff and a 13-yard run by Jonathan Waller. But the Jaguars took over at that spot on downs.

A clipping penalty pushed them back to their own 28, but Freeman teamed up with Tyson and Mayo went off right tackle to get the ball back to the 45. On third and five, Freeman hit Mayo coming out of the backfield on the left side and he headed for the right flag, cutting in front of the Viking defensive backs for a 55-yard touchdown. Billy McLawhorn's run on the fake kick failed and the score remained 22-0 with 8:40 left in the game.

Conley then went to its desperation offense and the Jaguars were content to sit on their lead. Both defenses gave up little and that was the way it ended.

The win leaves Farmville in a two-way tie with Ayden-Grifton for the Eastern Carolina Con[illegible]. Both teams have 3-0 records in the league following the Chargers' 21-6 victory over North Lenoir Friday. The Jaguars are 5-1 overall.

D. H. Conley drops to 2-3 overall and 1-2 in the ECC. The Vikings will host Southern Nash this week, while Farmville Central will travel to C. B. Aycock.

Greene Central Whips Falcons

SNOW HILL — James Best scored three touchdowns to lead Greene Central to a 31-19 rout of C. B. Aycock High School Friday night.

The victory kept the Rams hot on the heels of the Eastern Carolina Conference leaders with a 2-1 record. Aycock fell off to a 1-2 mark in the league.

Best scored the first two touchdowns for Greene Central to start the Homecoming game off to a good start. He crashed over from the four for an early 6-0 Ram lead, then padded that to 12-0 by going over from the one.

Later in the first period, Linwood Belcher scored from seven yards out to up the Ram lead to 18-0.

Aycock finally got on the scoreboard in the second period as Shelton Robinson scored on a 24-yard romp. That left the Rams ahead, 18-7 at halftime.

In the third frame, Aycock closed the gap to 18-13, as Robinson again scored, this time on a 29-yard gallop.

Best put the game out of reach, however, scoring in the final period, this time from 16 yards away. That made it 24-13. The Rams closed out their scoring with Johnny Ray Speight pulling down a 15-yard pass from Russell Brann. Donald Shaw added the PAT for a 31-13 lead.

Aycock got its final touchdown late in the game, as Rex Pennington hit Don Jones on a 28-yard aerial.

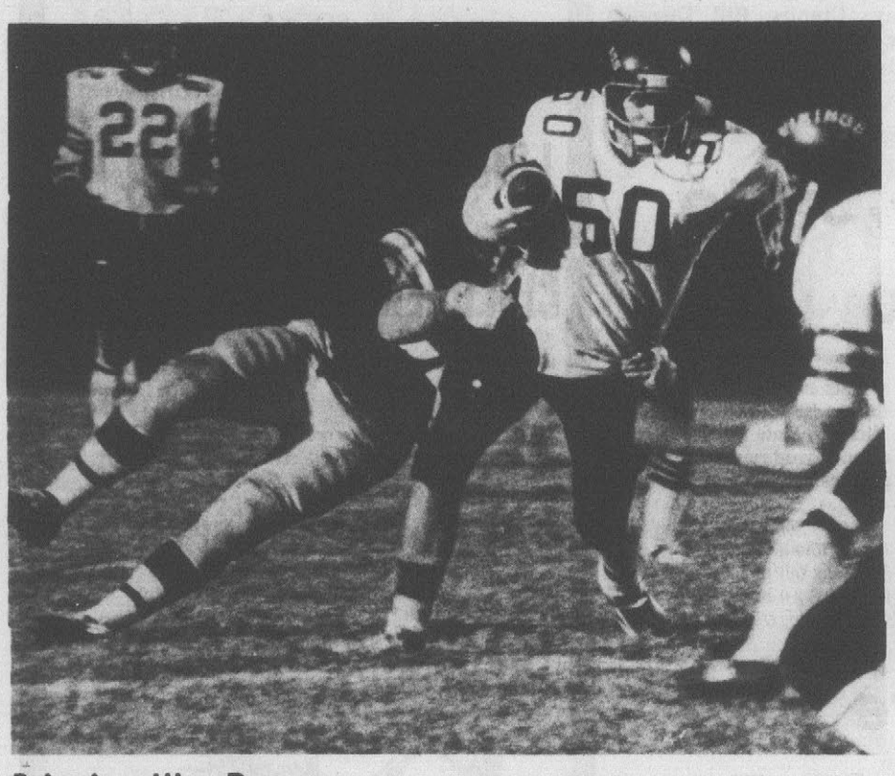

Best led the Ram rushing with 174 yards in 25 carries, while Robinson paced Aycock with 103 yards on 18 lugs.

Greene Central plays host to Ayden-Grifton Friday, while Aycock hosts Farmville Central.

North Pitt Captures 21-6 Win Over Hapless Southern Nash

SPRING HOPE — North Pitt captured its first Eastern Carolina Conference win of the year with a 21-6 romp past Southern Nash Friday night.

Calvin Carmack scored two of the Panther touchdowns to lead the way.

After a scoreless first period, North Pitt pushed over a touchdown in the second period. That came on a one-yard plunge by Carmack. William Knight added the PAT kick for a 7-0 lead.

The Panthers came back with another score before halftime. Terry Moore got that one on a 30-yard scramble. Carl Knight ran over the conversion, upping the lead to 15-0 at intermission.

Southern Nash's only score came in the final quarter. Melvin Williams pulled in a 41-yard pass from Greg Pope for the talley.

North Pitt came back with one more score after that. Carmack scored on a nine-yard burst, running the final total to 21-6.

The Panthers were helped along by four interceptions, and three fumble recoveries. The Panthers had only one turnover.

The win left the Panthers with a 2-4 overall mark, and a 1-2 league record. Southern Nash 0-3 in the conference and 0-6 overall.

Mattamuskeet Outlasts Jamesville By 32-20

JAMESVILLE — Winless Jamesville was outfought again by Mattamuskeet Friday night, falling to its sixth straight defeat, 32-20.

Mattamuskeet pushed out into a 12-0 lead, but the Bullets came roaring back to take a 14-12 lead at halftime.

But they couldn't hold on, and Mattamuseet took a 26-14 lead during the third period and both teams scored once in the final quarter.

Odell Spencer put the Lakers into the lead in the first period on a four-yard run. Roy Woods came back with another four-yarder later in the quarter to run the score to 12-0.

The Jamesville eleven got rolling in the second quarter as Trent Ange connected on two touchdown passes. He went to Will Griffin on a 55-yarder for the first score and Alan Frazier caught a nine-yarder for the second. Randy Simmons ran over a two-point conversion after the first score, giving the Bullets the lead at the half, 14-12.

But the lead was short-lived. Mattamuskeet came back to score on a 10-yard pass from Mike Cahoon to Joe Toppings, and Cahoon passed to Spencer for the PAT. That returned the Lakers to the lead, 20-14.

The second score of the quarter came on a 12-yard run by Jerry Bryant, upping the lead to 26-14.

Jamesville cut it back to within striking distance with a Glenn Ellis four-yard run in the final quarter. That closed it to 26-20, but Mattamuskeet closed the door with a two-yard run by Bryant after that.

Jamesville is now 0-5 in the Tobacco Belt Conference, and 0-6 overall. Mattamuskeet is 3-2 in the league and 4-2 overall. Jamesville will travel to Manteo next Friday, while Mattamuskeet is at Creswell.

A NEW DRYSDALE

BOSTON (AP) — Talk about praise from Caesar: the tall, young righthander of the Boston Red Sox, Bob Stanley, drew rave notices from baseball announcer Don Drysdale, who not too many years ago also was a tall, young righthander.

After seeing Stanley pitch, Drysdale said: "Basically, Stanley is one of the best young pitcher I've ever seen. He doesn't throw curveballs but I didn't have one, either. Toward the end of my career, I threw a 'slurve,' a cross between a curve and a slider."

Ayden-Grifton Pins North Lenoir

By TOM FOREMAN JR.
Reflector Staff Writer

LITTLEFIELD — There is a rumbling noise in the southern part of Pitt County. The noise is that of a title contender. The Chargers of Ayden-Grifton have battled their way to a tie with Farmville Central for the top spot in the Eastern Carolina Conference. Until the two teams meet to finally decide which is the better of the two, they will have to weed their way through the rest of the schedule until Oct. 21, when the both of them finally tangle.

Meanwhile, the Chargers displayed enough offense and adequate defense to win a 21-6 victory over North Lenoir, thus doing serious damage to the Hawks' bid for the number one spot. To be sure, the Hawks did very little to help themselves.

North Lenoir spent most of the night in their own territory. Occasionally, like a swimmer sticking his toe in cold water, the Hawks dared enter the Charger side of the field, only to commit a mistake and take themselves out of contention, or strangle on the tight Ayden-Grifton defense. Only twice did North Lenoir get into Charger grounds, and the last entry netted a touchdown.

Charger coach Dixon Sauls was pleased with his team's first half performance. He said his defense played good football in the first half as well. Sauls added, however, that his team may have become too complacent in the second half after reaching the 14-0 halftime advantage.

North Lenoir received the opening kickoff and started from their own 23. On the running of Anthony Kitrell, Dexter Waters, and Johnny Wiggins, the Hawks marched to the 50. Ronnie Chapman punted the ball to Ayden-Grifton on their 20, and Willie Perkins returned the ball 23 yards to his own 43. With the aid of a personal foul call against North Lenoir back upfield, the Chargers started their initial drive on the Hawks' 43.

The Chargers were pushed back by an illegal procedure call, but Terry Morris picked up four to the 44. Johnny Cannon picked up ten to make it third and one at the 34. Cannon added five to the 29, and the North Lenoir defense gave them five more to the 24. Morris and Cannon combined for another first down to the six. After Cannon lost three, quarterback David Smith moved down to the four. On fourth and goal from the one, Cannon went up the middle for the touchdown with 2:41 left in the first quarter. Paul Setliff's kick made it 7-0.

North Lenoir took the kickoff, but was stymied deep in its own territory. Ronnie Chapman punted, and his kick landed in the lap of Mark Cannon, who fell down while trying to field the kick. The Hawks recovered, but fumbled on the next play, and saved the Chargers any further embarassment in the quarter.

The fumble recovery set up the Chargers second scoring drive. From the Hawk 48, Morris picked up six. Cannon was stopped on second down, but picked up six more yards on third down.

A Smith pass fell incomplete, and the Chargers were caught holding. From the 47, Ricky Harris gained 10 yards, and North Lenoir was penalized for roughing the passer, moving the ball up to the 23. With Cannon and Morris grinding out the yardage, and Smith getting one yard on a key fourth down play, the Chargers got their score at 6:01 when Morris went one yard. Setliff's conversion made it 14-0.

Late in the first half, the Hawks stopped a Charger drive when Gary Sullivan intercepted a Smith pass and went 50 yards down to the Charger 40. The first two plays lost yardage, and when Chapman tried to go deep, his pass was filched by Mark Cannon at the end of the half.

In the fourth quarter, following an Ayden-Grifton punt, new quarterback Ben Holloman was intercepted by Morris. His eight-yard return to the Hawk 28 set up their last score. Johnny Cannon carried for three yards, and an unsportsmanlike conduct penalty moved the ball to the 11. Billy Holland carried to the eight, Morris moved it to the six, and Smith rolled to his right to complete a five-yard TD pass to Harris in the corner of the endzone. Setliff's kick made it 21-0 with 3:22 left.

The Hawks showed some life late in the game, and marched for their lone score. Jeff Simmons picked up 19 to the Charger 48, and the Charger defense committed a mistake for five more yards. Terry Newborn set up a third and one situation with a four-yard spurt, and a pass interference call on Ayden-Grifton put the ball on the 15.

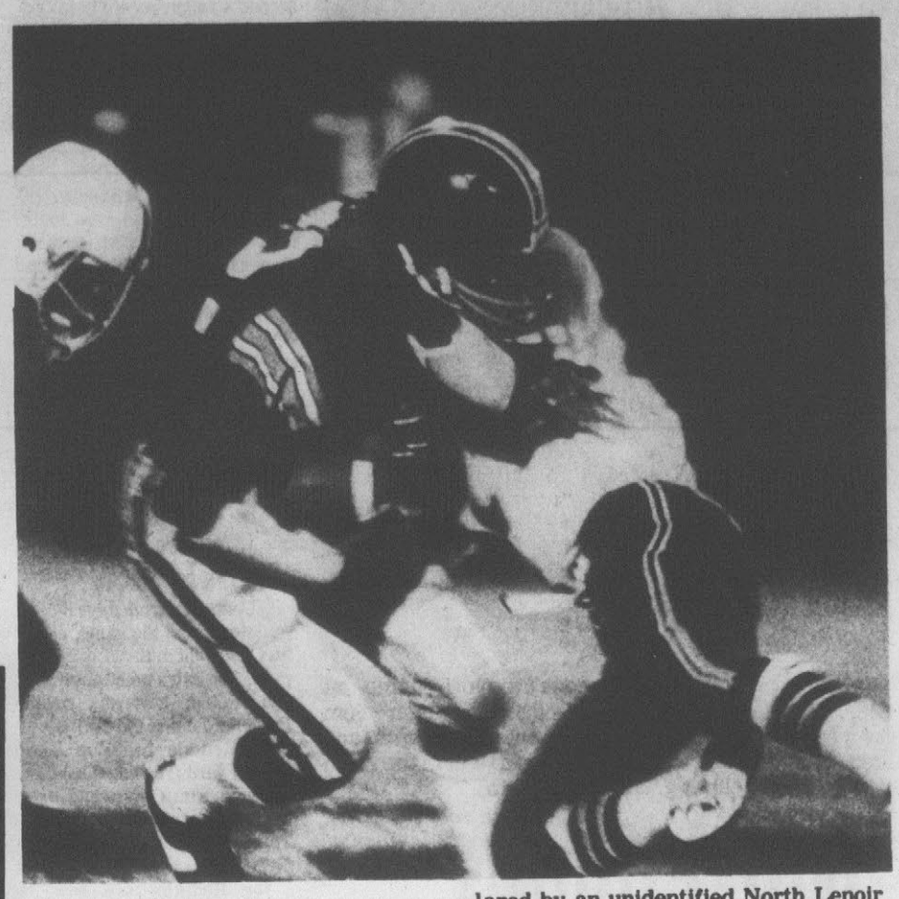

After an incomplete pass, Chapman hit Cleveland Lovick with a pass he caught on his back. From the nine, Simmons picked up a first and goal at the four, and scored the touchdown himself on the next play. The pass for the two-point conversion failed at the :55 mark in the final quarter.

Ayden-Grifton, now 3-0 in the conference and 4-2 overall, meets Greene Central next weekend, while North Lenoir, also 4-2 overall but 1-2 in the conference, faces North Pitt.

NL — Simmons, 4 run (Pass failed)

Coming Down

Charger runner Johnny Cannon is collared by an unidentified North Lenoir tackler during the Ayden-Grifton-North Lenoir contest Friday night.

On The Move

Ayden-Grifton running back Terry Morris finds a slight opening in the North Lenoir defensive line during action Friday night.

Pinkney Is Re-Signed

DETROIT — Former East Carolina University defensive back Reggie Pinkney has been re-signed by the Detroit Lions of the National Football League.

Pinkney, a seventh-round draft choice of the Lions, was a late cut by the Lions during preseason. He was re-signed yesterday by the club.

Pinkney holds the records for single game, single play, season and career pass interception yardage for East Carolina.

Tarboro Nips Williamston

WILLIAMSTON — Tarboro spotted Williamston a 12-0 lead in the first period, then came back in the final three quarters to grab off a 20-12 Northeastern Conference football victory Friday night.

The Tigers, plagued with turnovers, saw their lead and chances for a victory go down the drain after they had established a lead.

Oddly enough, all but one of the scores in the game were set up by turnovers. Williamston lost the ball four times, twice on fumbles and twice on interceptions, while Tarboro lost it once each way.

The Tigers took the lead after recovering a fumble on the Tarboro 30 late in the first period. Tyrone Bennett scored from the one for a 6-0 lead.

A couple of plays later, Kevin Mason intercepted a pass, and that set up a two-yard run by Hank Edwards that upped the Williamston lead to 12-0 before the period ran out.

But in the second quarter, Tarboro got back in the game after recovering a fumble at the Williamston 45. Calvin Bryant, after racing 22 yards on one play, went over from 14 yards out and Elmer Walston kicked the PAT. That closed the Vikes to within 12-7 at intermission.

Tarboro took the lead early in the second half, as James Vick gave the Vikings good field position with a 43 yard kickoff return. Bryant finished off the drive with a three-yard run. Walston again kicked for a 14-12 lead.

The other touchdown came on the next possession of the Vikes, set up by another Williamston fumble, this at the 36. George Franks pulled in a 31-yard pass from Tim Crisp to run the lead out to 20-12.

Williamston was twice denied touchdowns by the Tarboro defense, which stopped the Tigers at the two and at the 18 on downs. But the Tigers also had to stop Tarboro, once at the 15 and another time at the two.

Bryant led the way for the Vikings, rushing for 179 yards in the game.

Williamston is now 1-2 in the conference and 2-4 overall. Tarboro climbs to 2-1 in the league and is 4-2 overall. The Vikings host Plymouth next week, while Williamston entertains unbeaten Ahoskie.

Redskins Defeat Elm City

ELM CITY — Roanoke High School struggled to an 8-6 victory over Elm City Friday night in an Eastern Plains Conference football game.

The Redskins scored their touchdown in the second period, and held the lead at 8-0 until late in the game when Elm City scored its touchdown. The Redskins then had to stop the two-point conversion play to pull out the victory.

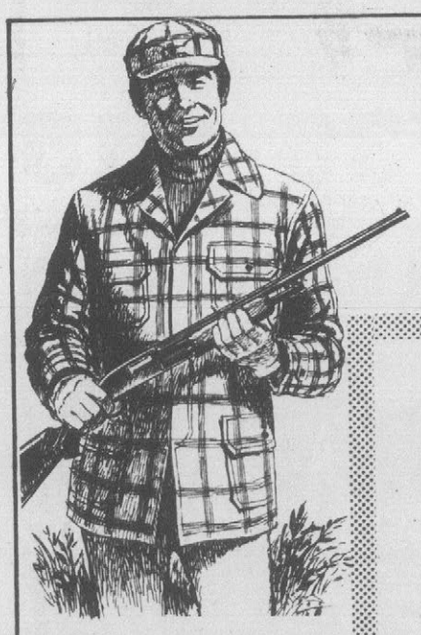

The contest was a defensive struggle, with neither team being able to mount many offensive threats.

Roanoke's touchdown, in the second quarter, came when Larry Williams scored from three yards out. He then ran over the extra points that eventually meant the difference in the game.

Glenn Barnes scored the Elm City talley with about three EXPERIMENTAL "TROPHY" BASS regulations for four lakes in Piedmont North Carolina will be proposed by the N. C. Wildlife Resources Commission as part of the changes in the state's inland fishing regulation for 1978.

Under the proposal, a minimum size limit of 18 inches will be imposed on bass caught in Tuckertown Lake, Lake Thom-A-Lex, Cane Creek Lake and Lake Higgins. If adopted, all bass caught shorter than 18 inches would have to be released immediately.

"This is an experiment to see if such a restriction might improve the bass fishing on selected lakes where fishing is heavy," according to Don Baker, chief of the Division of Inland Fisheries. "We've studied these lakes and we beleive that this proposed trophy limit will increase both the average size and catch rate of largemouth bass in these lakes. It could also increase the reproduction of bass." Currently, the size limit for bass is 12 inches in all areas.

If the proposal gains support from bass fishermen across the state and is adopted, it would be tried for a minimum of four years to evaluate its effect.

A NUMBER OF OTHER CHANGES have also been proposed for the new fishing regulations. These include:

☐ Including Gaston Dam and Roanoke Rapids Dam to the list of dams at which snagging of fish is prohibited withing 100 yards of the dam. This proposal is aimed at eliminating the snagging of striped bass.

☐ Adopting "native trout" regulations for Hoskins Fork in Ashe County and for Boone Fork in Watauga County.

☐ Prohititing the use of trotlines or set hooks in any of the impounded waters within the Sandhills Game Lands.

☐ Preventing fishing in reclaimed ponds within the New Hope Game Lands until restocked fish reach harvestable size. Affected ponds would be identified by signs.

☐ Allowing the sale of commercially-reared live mountain trout to customers, provided that the sale occurs at a fixed geographic location that has been duly licensed by the N. C. Wildlife Resources Commission.

Coast Guard Boating Classes

The Greenville Flotilla of the U. S. Coast Guard offers free safe boating classes to civic clubs, hunting and fishing organizations, scout groups and boating clubs.

Several courses are available for groups of all ages from 15-minute presentations to classes of one hour or more. Qualified instructors are available for illustrated lectures.

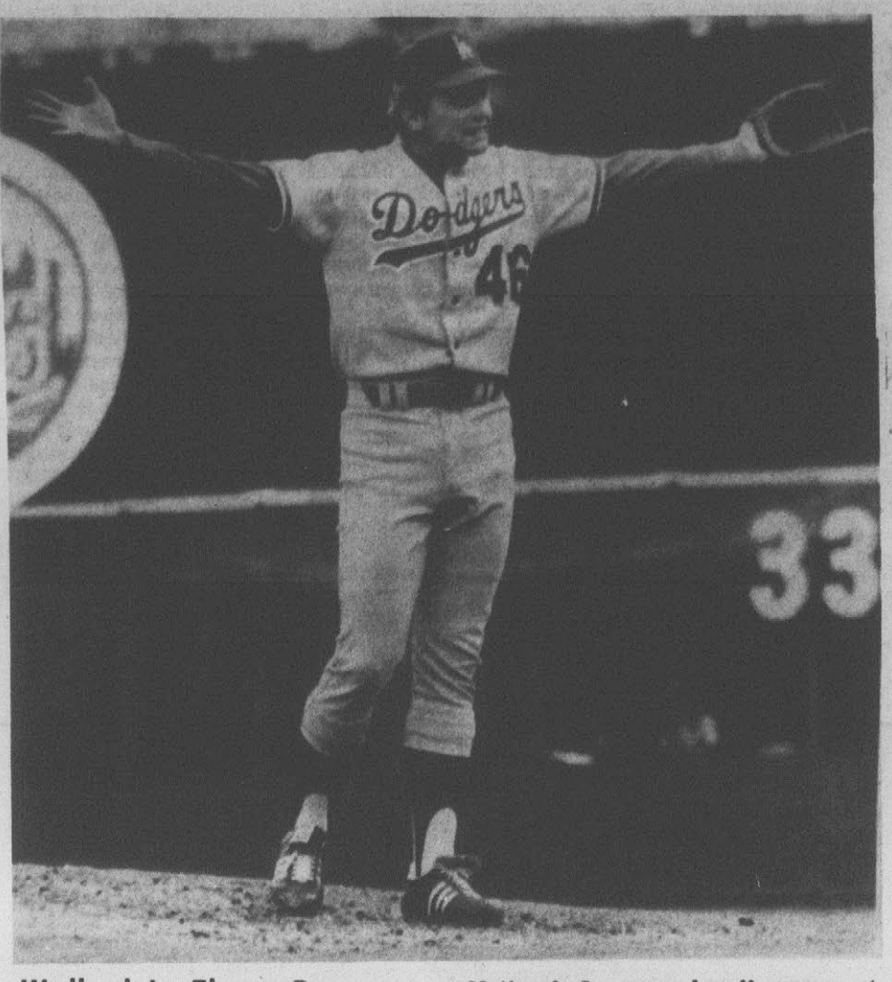

For more information, contact Flotilla Commander James A. Hecker at 756-0500 or Division 16 Vice-Captain Richard A. Stephenson.

Coastal Fishing Report

Bluefish are showing up in increasing sizes and numbers along the North Carolina coast and Spanish and king mackerel are also abundunt.

Spanish mackerel and blues kept fishermen along the Outer Banks happy last weekend. Big spots are beginning to show up at piers and trout, croaker and flounder are being taken in the sounds.

Blues of two to three pounds are plentiful in the Cape Lookout area, with Spanish being taken in large numbers in the jetty area. Bottom fishermen at the jetty have been doing well on grey trout.

Walked In Three Runs
Los Angeles Dodgers' pitcher, Burt Hooten, throws up his hands as if to say "Now What?" after he walked in the third Philadelphia run Friday in the National League playoff game at Philadelphia. Dodgers Nip Phillies In Wild Final Frames

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — An almost unbelievable ninth-inning comeback, triggered by Manny Mota and Vic Davalillo, a pair of baseball's old men, has the Los Angeles Dodgers within one victory of the 1977 World Series today.

Mota, Davilillo and a controversial call by umpire Bruce Froemming keyed a two-out, none-on, three-run Dodgers' ninth that beat the Philadelphia Phillies 6-5 Friday in the third game of the National League championship series.

The Dodgers lead the best-of-five series 2-1, and go tonight with Tommy John, their 20-game winner.

John will be opposed by Phillies' ace Steve Carlton, also a top candidate for the Cy Young Award with a 23-10 regular-season record. Carlton was knocked out in the seventh inning of the first game in the series won by the Phillies 7-5.

The Dodgers appeared dead with two out in the ninth and none on, the Phillies leading 5-3. But as Manager Tom Lasorda said later, "Sometimes that third out is tougher to get than those first two."

It certainly was for the Phillies, confident they would win two of the three games scheduled on their artificial surface field before a highly partisan crowd.

The 39-year-old Davalillo batted for catcher Steve Yeager and dragged a bunt toward second base. He beat the throw from second baseman Ted Sizemore for a single.

Then up came Mota, another 39-year-old but one of the league's premier pinch hitters. Mota, who hit .395 in the regular season, slammed a drive toward the left field wall.

Phillies' left fielder Greg Luzinski kept backing up. He leaped at the wall and had the ball in his glove but it popped out.

Davalillo puffed into third as Luzinski's throw went to second, where Sizemore failed to handle it cleanly. Davalillo, who had stopped at third, raced home on the error, and Mota reached third.

The score was 5-4, with Davey Lopes the batter. Lopes hit a sharp grounder toward third base that glanced off the knee of Mike Schmidt to shortstop Larry Bowa.

Bowa gunned the ball to first baseman Richie Hebner. Froemming spread his hands with the safe sign, and the Phillies screamed.

Phillies Manager Danny Ozark argued, but Froemming wouldn't budge.

Mota scored the tying run on the disputed single.

Reliever Gene Garber, who beat the Dodgers twice in the regular season and had an 0.82 earned run average against them, then tried to pick Lopes off first. His throw got past first baseman Richie Hebner and the pitcher was charged with an error.

Bill Russell, whose two errors in game one had led to four unearned runs in a 7-5 Phillies' victory, atoned with a game-winning RBI single.

Kansas City Moves Toward Playoff Title

By Doug Tucker
AP Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A second straight record-breaking crowd was expected to pour in from all corners of this baseball-happy community Saturday to watch the Kansas City Royals attempt to become the first expansion team ever to win an American League pennant.

"We'll need a shoehorn, but we'll probably have even more than tonight," a club spokesman said Friday after power-pitching Dennis Leonard silenced the New York Yankee bats on four hits en route to a 6-2 victory that gave the Royals a 2-1 advantage in the best-of-five American League Championship Series.

The Royals, who split the first two games in New York Wednesday and Thursday, scheduled left-hander Larry Gura, a former Yankee who harbors plenty of resentment toward New York Manager Billy Martin, to face right-hander Ed Figueroa, Martin's choice in what will be a do-or-die proposition for the Yankees.

Leonard, whose 20-12 record this season made him only the third 20-game winner in the Royals' eight-year history, was masterful throughout the cool evening.

Roy White lashed a double into left field with one out in the first inning but was thrown out trying to stretch it to a triple. Leonard then retired the next 12 Yankees in order before Graig Nettles legged out an infield single in the fifth.

The Royals broke through against Yankee starter Mike Torrez in the second inning after Joe Lahoud drew a one-out walk and went to second on the first of Darrell Porter's three hits.

Fred Patek, who has hit safely in the last eight AL playoff games, singled sharply to left field and Lahoud crossed the plate as White had trouble picking up the ball.

Hal McRae, whose 54 doubles this season were the most by any AL player in 27 years, led off the third with a two-base hit and went to third when George Brett, breaking a 1-for-10 playoff slump, beat out a chopper to deep second.

Faced with runners at the corners and none out, Torrez escaped by Al Cowens and John Mayberry on ground balls and Lahoud on a sharp line drive to Chris Chambliss at first.

New York scored in the fifth with Nettles beating out an infield hit and Lou Piniella lashing a double off the left field wall to pull the Yankees to 2-1.

McRae, who had doubled to right in the third, led off the Kansas City fifth with a two-base hit down the left field line and came around to restore Leonard's two-run lead on ground balls by Brett and Cowens.

Torrez, the biggest winner on the high-priced, injury-plagued Yankee pitching staff this year with a 17-13 mark, was knocked out in the sixth.

After Lahoud drew a leadoff walk, Porter hit a high chopper in front of the mound which Torrez tried to catch barehanded but dropped.

Patek moved the runners over with a sacrifice bunt and, one out later with left-hander Tom Poquette up next, Martin called for his bullpen ace, Sparky Lyle.

Royals Manager Whitey Herzog countered by sending the right-handed Amos Otis, who was miffed at not starting the game, to face the left-handed Lyle.

The Redskins held Elm City to only 38 yards rushing during the evening. Elm City has 93 passing, hitting nine of 26 passes. Three Elm City passes were picked off, two by Glenn Cargile.

The Redskins are now 3-0 against conference competition, and 3-4 overall. Elm City falls to 1-2 in the league and 4-2 overall.

Underdogs

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Gamblers contend that on a given day any NFL team can beat any other. And a look at the betting line on Sunday's Falcons-49ers game prove-oddmakers can also be unpredictable.

Despite an impressive 2-1 start that includes a 17-6 opening game win over the Rams, Atlanta is listed as a four-point underdog to hapless San Francisco, 1-8 including exhibition games.

Part of the reason is that Atlanta's first-string quarterback, Steve Bartkowski, is expected to remain sidelined with a knee injury. But rookie Falcon Coach Leeman Bennett thinks the 49ers deserve more respect than their record would indicate.

"Those 49ers are a much better team than they've been playing," he insisted at a recent practice.

"The 49ers have two good running backs and it looks like Jim Plunkett is starting to throw the ball well. It is a well-balanced team and has as good a front-four on defense as we will see this year," he said.

But the Falcons own defense is a source of pride for him.

Last year Atlanta was second from the bottom to Tampa Bay in yardage allowed, giving up an average of more than 327 total yards a game.

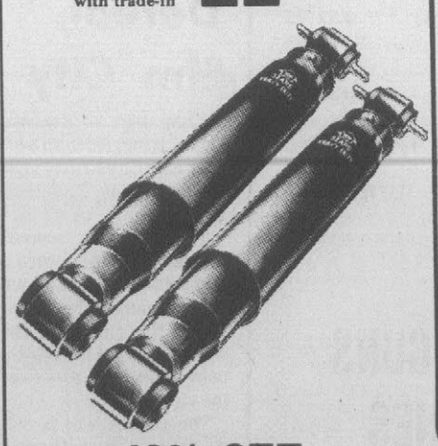

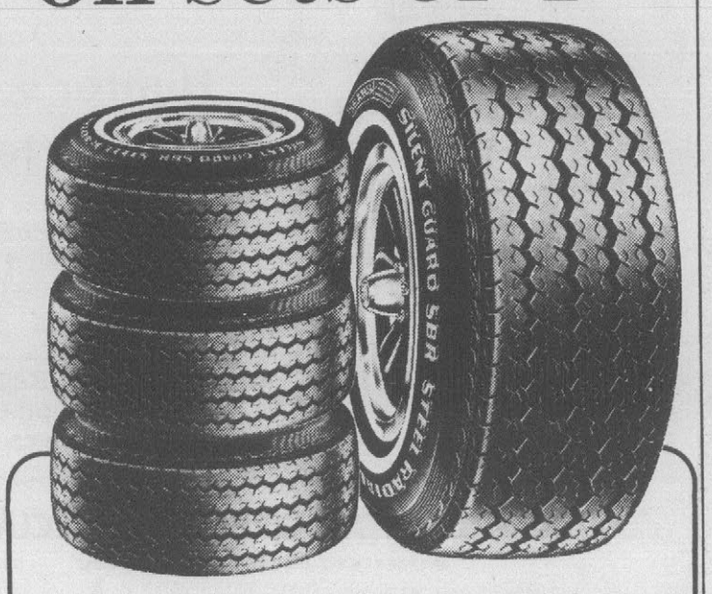

This year the Falcon defense ranks first in the league, having allowed only 19 points in three games, 89.7 yards a game rushing and 198.7 a game total offense.

They have also forced 10 turnovers, as opposed to two for the 49ers. The defensive line, anchored by end Claude Humphrey, has sacked opposing quarterbacks 15 times, seven sacks more than the 49ers have.

He Didn't Make It

Driver Dean Dalton of Asheville is a picture of dejection Friday after he failed to qualify for Sunday's NAPA National 500 race to be run at the Charlotte Motor Speedway. A total of 41 drivers, led by pole winner David Pearson, will be trying for the $25,400 that goes to the winner. (AP Wirephoto)

Parsons Aims For One Million

By JERRY GARRETT
AP Motorsports Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A mere $6,927 in prize money from Sunday's National 500 stock car race will give Benny Parsons that million dollar feeling.

Parsons won't exactly find himself with $1 million in cash in his hand. But the former Detroit taxi driver is short that amount of having won $1 million in prize money in Grand National racing.

A top 10 finish would be good enough to boost the 36-year-old Parsons into the exclusive club with Richard Petty, David Pearson, Bobby Allison, Cale Yarborough and Buddy Baker.

Just finishing in the top 10 wouldn't really satisfy Parsons, however.

"If we're gonna do it, let's do it with a win," Parsons suggested.

Only Petty has done that, winning the Dixie 500 in 1971 for his first million. Since then, Petty has added a second million, and is well on his way toward a third.

If Parsons, who starts eighth in a Chevrolet, does it in this race, it will mean he needed only 260 events, fewer than it took any of the others, to win the first million. Petty needed only 121 starts to reach his second million, though.

Parsons also will have fewer victories, eight, than any other club member. Baker is closest with 13 victories. Petty has 185.

Parsons, who lives in Ellerbe, N.C., became a Grand National regular in 1970; he ran one race in 1964, two in 1968 and two in 1969. He was national champion in 1973, and winner of the 1975 Daytona 500. His biggest money winning year was 1976 with $242,970, but with four races left in 1977 and $225,371 in winnings so far, it appears he will exceed that total.

Whether Parsons actually is a millionaire depends how much he has earned on the side in appearance money, sponsorship, endorsements etc. Drivers usually get about 40 per cent of their winnings. The car owner and team members get the rest.

Parsons has made some money outside Grand National racing, in Automobile Racing Club of America competition (he won the championship in 1968 and 1969), and other places.

When the green flag drops Sunday for the $250,000 race, David Pearson will lead the 41-car field.

Sports Briefs

MOSPORT, N.J. (AP) — British auto racing driver Ian Ashley was reported in stable condition in a Toronto hospital following the crash of his Hesketh 308E during qualifying runs for Sunday's Canadian Grand Prix auto race.

A hospital official said Ashley was conscious and suffered two broken ankles and two broken wrists in the accident.

Observers said Ashley's car appeared to flip over backwards after hitting a bump coming off a straightaway on Mosport's 2.4-mile circuit. The car then crashed over the a guard rail and into a television tower.

CLEVELAND (AP) — All-pro cornerback Ken Ellis has been signed by the Cleveland Browns while another player has been cut after just two days with the National Football League team.

Defensive tackle Art Moore was acquired from the New England Patriots just three days ago. A Browns spokesman said Moore was released because the coaches felt he couldn't help the club.

After trying out Thursday, Ellis was signed as a free agent. A one-time iron-man for the Green Bay Packers, Ellis had 84 consectutive starts for the Packers from 1970 to 1975.

He was all-pro in 1972 and 1973. He was dealt to Houston last year and then to the Miami Dolphins.

Bob Shaw of the Milwaukee Braves balked five times in one game in 1963.

ELEGANT HOME MAXIMIZES SPACE

DESIGN FUNCTIONS FOR FORMAL, INFORMAL LIVING

By Jerry Bishop

With a gracious entry that helps define living areas, the Woodraven, a three bedroom, one level plan, combines an appealing facade and a highly desirable floor plan.

Basically the plan sets sleeping areas to the right of the foyer, formal living space to the left, and informal activity areas to the rear, where a terrace extends the relaxed living outdoors. For guests, the foyer includes a coat closet and opens directly into the sizable living room, skirted by an impressive square bow window at front. After cocktails, guests are ushered into the bordering dining room, a 12 x 12 ft. area that highlights an unusual corner bow window.

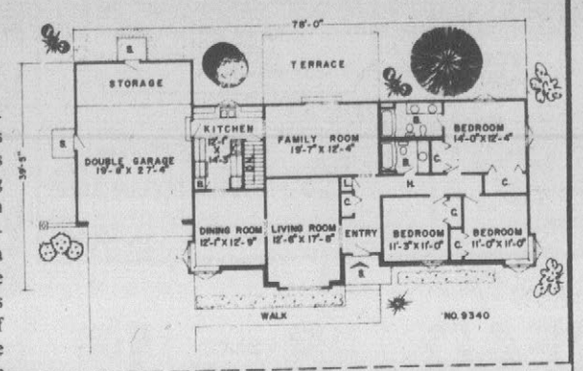

The corridor kitchen serves both dining room and family room, taking a no-nonsense approach to meal preparation, and is close to the terrace for outdoor dining. Access to the terrace is through the large family room, an area that is totally reserved for family activity. Sliding glass doors link indoors and out and serve to visually enlarge the room.

Bedrooms are set to the right of the living areas and are given equally space-conscious treatment. The master bedroom, for example, measures over 14 x 12 ft. and merits two closets and a large private bath with double sinks. Front bedrooms, too, are larger than average, and the corner bedroom is favored with a corner bow window that balances the one in the dining room. Another full bath serves front bedrooms and guest areas.

Noteworthy in this design is the double garage, which offers four separate exits including access to the kitchen for ease in unloading groceries. In addition, a step-saving storage area is tucked in the rear of the garage with a back yard access for efficient transportation of lawn furniture, toys, and the like. For additional storage, the full basement shows an unfinished area that matches the square footage of the home.

In all, the brick-sheathed Woodhaven contains 1682 sq. ft. of living space, with another 570 sq. ft. of space in the double garage.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Whether a workshop is used to facilitate the repair and maintenance of things around the house or as a place to indulge a hobby, it is certain to include a portable electric drill.

It's the machine that gives the novice do-it-yourselfer his first experience with a power tool. Because it is light, easy to handle and highly effective, the drill has retained its popularity throughout the years, becoming a special favorite in the 1940s and never relinquishing its role as the best-selling electric tool.

The drill is basically what its name indicates — a tool for drilling holes in wood, metal and other materials. But each year the list of accessories that can be attached to a portable drill grows larger, until today there are very few tasks that cannot be made easier with these additions. In fact, unless you have been to a well-stocked store that sells such accessories within the past few months, you are not likely to be up-to-date on the wide variety that is available. In many cases, heavy-duty woodworking and metal-cutting operations are best done with the special tools made for those purposes, but the drill, with the proper attachment, will often perform satisfactorily.

An important use of this portable machine is for drilling holes in wood, especially hardwood, to receive screws. The pilot holes should be slightly smaller than the diameters of the screws. The same procedure should be followed with nails to prevent splitting in hardwood. Before each hole is drilled, a small indentation should be made with an awl. When the bit is placed into this hole and the motor turned on, it will not wander and mar the surface of the wood. Pressure on the drill should be firm but not heavy. To prevent splintering as the bit comes out the other side, back up the material with a piece of scrap wood.

Quarter-inch drills will handle most household projects, but if you do a lot of work with the heavy drill accessories, a larger size may be required. In choosing a drill, tell the dealer what the drill will be used for most of the time. He will advise you which size is preferable and whether you will need a speed reducer for the more difficult jobs. Incidentally, in buying an electric drill, be sure it has the proper "feel" or you may find it awkward later when using it for a period of time.

When a drill is designated as a quarter-inch size, it does not refer to the diameter of the hole that can be drilled with it, but to the maximum size of the shank that can be inserted in the chuck. The same thing holds true for larger-sized drills. This means, for example, you can drill a half-inch hole or even larger with a quarter-inch drill provided the bit shank is a quarter-inch or less. Some drill chucks are tightened by hand, some with a socket or Allen wrench and some with a geared key. When the chuck is tightened with a tool, attach that tool to the power cord of the drill so that it will always be handy when you need it.

Accessories and attachments permit a drill to be used for sanding, driving screws, countersinking, filing, polishing, mixing paint, sawing, sharpening, planing, routing and dozens of other operations.

Made Art Of Recycling

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (UPI) — Recycling, relatively new to most Americans, has long been an art in Haiti.

Old tires are made into door mats and sandals, which are practically indestructible and are considered quaint by tourists.

Tin cans are flattened inside out and turned into artistic candlestick holders and one-of-a-kind chandeliers highly coveted by visitors to the Iron Market here.

Empty beer cans are particularly prized. Flattened, with brand name exposed, they are melded into bright trays and even suitcases. Beer can carrying cases are lightweight, durable and are finished with polished scraps of local woods.

Hardly anything in Haiti is discarded after being used only once.

There's a popular story about an ill-fated car which crashed and fell into a ravine. Nearby residents stripped the car, finding a use for every bit. A week later, nothing remained to mar the tranquil countryside.

BLOCKED FOOTPATHS

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's walkers say they are getting fed up with developers who build houses and gardens across the public footpaths that crisscross most of the British Isles.

New Burner Is An Energy-Saver

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Updating heating equipment can be a big factor in fuel economy. A new burner might save 15 to 20 percent on your oil bill, a fact that might be difficult for some people to comprehend.

So says Lillian Siegel of Fairfield, Conn., who has been in the oil business for 48 years. She was explaining a notice — "a new burner can save you money" — that was appended to her oil bills.

"If an oil bill is $600 a year, a nominal amount, a new burner might save as much as $120 dollars. In addition, the equipment is modern. New burners have electronic controls and retention heads which are economical to operate." A burner is part of the boiler equipment.

It is a question of how old is old, she says. Some 40-year-old burners have motors and transformers in excellent condition, whereas newer ones might be exhausted. Much depends on the care they have been given and the quality of the equipment.

"Today's motors give you 3450 RPMs that go like mad, a little noisier, but they deliver more rapidly giving more energy at lower cost." Like other companies, she provides budget plans for the purchase of new equipment.

An oil service company should be trusted to give good advice and should be asked for an equipment check-up if bills become high.

What bothers Miss Siegel is that some customers don't trust her judgment even though "there are legions that do" who seek the advice of Lil, as she is known in the trade. In fact, when they call to ask questions she never asks whether they are customers. Some use other service companies because of business affiliations or because they owe the company money or whatever, but she has a long-time reputation for knowledgeability in the business so she willingly provides information.

Occasionally she "loses her cool," she says, when people ignore their equipment "because it isn't visible."

"If they had a pale pink boiler in the middle of the living room floor, they would keep it immaculate, but because it is out of sight they simply don't keep it clean.

"The worst form of insulation is soot. A burner should be adjusted every year and the boiler should be cleaned whenever it is sooty. A boiler must work twice as hard to deliver when the parts are dirty," she explained. It's energy dollars up the flue as far as she is concerned.

In her own oil business for 27 years — she is president of Superior Oil Co. — she has seen a lot of changes. In the beginning she "could not drive a truck" so she had to hire a man. He stayed until the first cold day.

She started the business from scratch — new customers and new trucks. One cold day she got some calls — one for 500 gallons of oil — "it had seemed stupendous at the time." Now she is into sales of millions of gallons of oil every year.

"Winter time is rough, full of emergencies," she says. "You might occasionally get a call and find that a person forgot to turn on a switch, but people are more sensible now."

When she started her business the price of oil delivery was less than half of what the oil costs wholesale today, and "it will soon go up again," she said. That is one reason she tries to interest people in asking for a check of their equipment.

Some homeowners are buying wood-burning furnaces, spending $800 or more for them, she said, something she cannot understand because "wood is so expensive."

Q. I would like to rebuild the arbor on my 20-year-old grapevine. Can the vine be cut back to the main stem without damaging the plant? (E. E. , Chapel Hill)

A. Yes, you can cut the vine back during the dormant season. Save a half-dozen of the youngest runners that originate near the trunk to place back on your new trellis. (Joe Brooks, extension horticulturist)

Q. Can I plant the berries of the liriope and produce plants? (J. S. Cary)

A. Yes. Harvest the seed after they have matured (turned black). Store over winter and plant in a nursery row next spring. Let seedlings grow in the nursery row for one season and then transplant to a container or to a permanent location. A quicker way to get larger, more uniform liriope plants is by dividing existing clumps of plants. (A. A. Banadyga, extension horticulturist)

Q. Please describe the life cycle of the fall army worm. I know they can be fatal to a lawn. (H. S., Hickory)

A. Fall armyworms are not able to overwinter in areas where the ground freezes hard. Most fall armyworms in North Carolina migrate from southern Florida, the Gulf Coast and even South and Central America and the Caribbean. Moths from the spring generation of armyworms fly northward, sometimes traveling several hundred miles before stopping. They usually reach North Carolina about mid-July and may persist until frost. Each female moth lays about 1,000 eggs in masses of 100 to 150. They will lay eggs on green plants or even on clothes hanging on the line. The eggs hatch in two to three days and the resulting larvae take about three weeks to development. The larvae can do severe damage to a lawn. They feed near the ground in the heart of lawn grasses and are difficult to see. This is why an insecticide should be applied as soon as a heavy population occurs. (R. L. Robertson, extension entomologist)

Q. A thick vine is growing around the trunks of my trees. I have cut it off but it keeps growing back. What can I use to kill the roots of this vine? (Mrs. W. H., Raleigh)

A. I suspect you are battling a wisteria vine. Paint the trunk of the vine with 2, 4-D or 2,4,5-T and repaint it everytime new growth comes out. You may need from two to four years to kill the roots. (Carl Blake, extension agronomist)

Panama Builds Modern Center

PANAMA CITY, Panama (UPI) — Atlapa, an ultra-modern convention and trade center to be completed here in 1979 will cover 18 acres, with a hotel, mall, reflecting pond and parking lot.

Atlapa's facilities will be capable of handling nearly 7,000 conventioneers at a time. When it isn't being used for conventions, its 3,000-seat theater will be available for special performances of operas, plays, concerts, and movies.

Want A Free Computer Analysis Of Your Home?

Then get a copy of the Project Conserve Questionnaire from Greenville Utilities and fill it out. Mait it to the North Carolina Energy Office in Raleigh and in several weeks you'll receive a complete Homeowner's Report.

The report will answer such questions as:

- Is my home energy efficient?
- What can I do to make my home more energy efficient?
- How much will it cost me to do these things?
- How much can I save on my utility bill if I follow the recommendations made in my Homeowner's Report?

The Questionnaires and the computer analysis are Free.

Copies of the PROJECT CONSERVE Questionnaire are available at the Greenville Utilities Main Office or at any Greenville Bank. or call 752-7166 and ask for one.

Your copy will be in the mail to you the very same day.

First-Time Felons Get A Break In Ohio's System

YOU GOTTA BE KIDDING — A sign in a window of a Denver service station warns intruders away as "Was", a chihuahua, peers out from inside the station at passersby. But the sign wasn't meant to warn people away from the tiny dog. It was posted to warn them away from "Dave", a part husky, part wolf that normally gazes from the window. (AP Laserphoto)

By TOM DIEMER
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Many states try to grapple with crime through tougher sentences and longer prison terms. In Ohio, they work on the theory that a short dose of prison life often is a better deterent than a long stay behind bars.

That's the rationale behind the state's "shock parole" and "shock probation," aimed at jolting felony prisoners into socially acceptable behavior.

"By early release, the prisoner avoids the typical contamination by seasoned criminals and gets out before he becomes part of the inmate subculture," says John W. Shoemaker, chief of the Ohio Adult Parole Authority. "Prolonged imprisonment, we are informed by criminologists, does not reform."

Shock probation allows a felony prisoner to apply to the courts for release within 130 days, and since it became law in 1965, about 7,000 convicts have been freed under it. Shoemaker says about 15 percent are returned to prison for new crimes or parole violations.

Shock parole, enacted in 1974, allows release of "non-dangerous" first-time felons after six months' confinement. About 1,600 inmates have been freed on shock parole and 180 returned to prison. Inmates who have not served time for a previous felony are eligible.

Ohio State Rep. Alan E. Norris, a critic, believes there's a place for shock parole but contends it's been used too freely in the past, as a routine rather than extraordinary measure.

Social policy apart, the shock treatment has saved the state a bundle, both in keeping a lid on prison populations and in prisons that didn't have to be built.

Shoemaker says it costs at least $30,000 a cell to build a prison and $5,000 a year to keep a person confined.

"If his family is on welfare, add another $2,500 per year," he says. "So, locking up the 8,600 felons released under shock treatment for an additional year would have cost taxpayers an astronomical $299 million.

The first criterion for shock treatment is the length of a sentence. Ohio law fixes degrees of felony offenses with minimum and maximum sentences for each degree.

Except for those doing time for a first degree felony, such as murder or rape, which carries a minimum sentence of four years, any inmate is eligible.

Norris says shock parole was enacted on the grounds that state oversight was needed because some judges were denying early release to deserving offenders.

Carlos Aleman Jr. was among the early beneficiaries of shock parole. He was released on Oct. 15, 1974, shortly after the board geared up to handle the new program and after a court decision that it was retroactive.

Aleman was sentenced to a 50-to 100-year term for attempting to sell more than $250,000 worth of heroin in Cleveland. His release on shock parole after 18 months provoked an outcry over the "shock concept."

The uproar faded after the parole authority acted in 1975 to tighten shock eligibility. In its infancy, the program excluded only those convicted of murder, but that was broadened to include other felonies and serious drug offenses.

Aleman was arrested again last May in Chicago, accused of pushing heroin. His two-year parole expired in October 1976, but Ohio officials lost track of him when his jurisdiction was transferred to Puerto Rico. He never was officially "released" from parole.

"The way we handled that was a mistake," says a spokesman for the Department of Rehabilitation and Correction. "We blew it and we should just have admitted it."

See Future In Vidio Recorder

NEW YORK (UPI) — Video cassette recorders that permit televiewers to tape and store programs for future watching are expected to have considerably more impact on home entertainment than did color television.

From practically a standing start, VCR's are expected to be a billion dollar industry within two years, reports RCA, whose new playback systems will record up to four hours of programming. It took color TV, which RCA pioneered, 10 years to achieve that level.

Smooth Ride In Detroit Busing

By GENE SCHROEDER
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit's court-ordered school desegregation program is well into its second year, and the debate over the pupil busing issue has diminished from a shout to a whisper.

To the surprise of many, the Motor City ended a year of limited busing last January without a single major incident.

In the first days of the program, parents kept youngsters at home apparently out of fear, but the desegregation plan was launched without the kind of violence that marred similar programs in Boston and Louisville.

"This city met the challenge with peace and dignity," proclaims Detroit School Supt. Arthur Jefferson. "It set an example for the nation it can be proud of."

In a 124-page decree handed down in August 1975, U.S. District Court Judge Robert DeMascio rejected proposals for massive busing in Detroit and ordered adoption of a limited busing plan.

But a year later, the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that the busing plan was inadequate, and DeMascio was ordered to expand the program to include some inner city black schools that had been left out. This could mean the busing of more blacks to some predominantly white schools.

There have been fewer and fewer of these at the beginning of each new school term, however.

Black students make up an increasing percentage of each year's enrollment, not only because of white flight to the suburbs but because the black birthrate is about double that of the white population.

Last fall, total enrollment was nearly 79 per cent black. This fall, it is expected to be more than 80 per cent.

A major portion of DeMascio's order was aimed at upgrading the quality of education in Detroit schools, and the judge appointed a citizens' commission to monitor the program.

The commission announced last month that it would conduct a random sample of 400 Detroit families to see how well they think the desegregation plan is working. Forty of the families will not have children in the public schools.

"We're looking for some immediate feedback on how the plan is affecting the kids," said the commission chairman, William W. Wattenberg.

He said 10 per cent of the families sampled will be without children in the Detroit school system because they often have a close interest and involvement in the schools.

"People without kids often support the schools if for no other reason than to help maintain their property values," he explained.

Prestige License Plate Auction A Fund-Raiser

By RUTH YOUNGBLOOD

HONG KONG (UPI) — "Going once ... going twice ... sold to the gentleman for $72,000."

That converts to $14,400 in U.S. cash, but Sydney Siu was all smiles as he wrote out the check and left the auction with his purchase — a license plate for his car.

It's all part of a unique Hong Kong government system for raising money for charity. The prestige of owning special license plate numbers has generated so much enthusiasm that hundreds of Chinese pack each auction, held every three months. And you don't have to even own a car to buy a plate.

Siu said he considers the cash he paid for plate No. 65 for his Mercedes Benz "inexpensive for such a lucky combination." Since the bidding started at Hong Kong $40,000 (U.S. $8,000), Siu said he expected the price to go much higher.

The key to the success of the special plate auctions is the Chinese belief that numbers — the right numbers — are lucky, prestigious and, on a license plate, tell all who notice that the owner is a charitable man. Siu's lucky combination happens to be 65.

The 34 auctions organized by the Department of Transportation since May, 1973, have earned $1.2 million U.S. for the Government Lotteries Fund for Social Welfare.

Under the statute authorizing the auctions, special license numbers are reserved when a new series is issued. Plates that qualify as being special are: those without a mixed-letter prefix, a single figure, identical numbers, ones that were used by high government officials or the way the number sounds when spoken aloud in Cantonese.

Tom Hanh, a Transportation Department official, explained that the number 8, translated into Cantonese, sounds like the word for prosperity. The more 8s on a plate the better, and when 8888 was auctioned off in 1975, bids started at $2,000 U.S. and climbed until a businessman purchased the combination for $30,800 U.S.

Plates at each auction are restricted to 25 or less to avoid flooding the market and thereby losing the public interest. Those who are disappointed because the limits have been reached know they have another chance in December, and four times every year, so chances are they will eventually get one of the special plates.

"For many, it's a mark of individualism," Hanh said.

The lucky number lure has not spread to foreign residents, many of whom express shock at laying out so much cash for a license plate. But that doesn't stop many Westerners from watching the free show. Because the auctions are for charity, and the purpose is to raise as much money as possible, rigid rules of decorum are set aside and the auctions are entertaining.

The auctioneer, who translates into English, throws in frequent pleas for higher bids and cracks an occasional joke to keep interest up.

He slowly lifts the hammer and with considerable pauses in between says: "Going once ... going twice ..." and breaks into a relieved smile when another bid stops the hammer from going down. The tension is broken by laughter from the audience.

When the bidding was still in the $4,000 U.S. range at the latest auction for number AA 11, the head of a firm stood up and said, "That number is worth much more. I bid $50,000 (U.S. $10,000)." The spectators applauded as the hammer went down.

Special numbers rarely sink below $1,000 U.S., and the record price for a plate is Hong Kong $200,000 (U.S. $40,000). While Transportation Department officials do not reveal the names of past purchasers, Hanh said the plate was sold this year to a man who considered it lucky because it had been owned by a prominent government official.

The rules governing the auctions are simple. Immediately after the hammer falls, the buyer pays the full price in cash or by check. He does not have to own a car, but within 12 months he must apply to the Commissioner of Transport for the plate to be assigned to a vehicle registered in his name. If no application is received, the license plate can be revoked without notice to the buyer.

Re-sale is not allowed. Should the owner no longer want the plate, the number goes back to the government. The same procedure is followed in case of the owner's death.

David Chow, an executive officer with the Transportation Department, enjoys the auctions because "they bring so much happiness."

"The money goes to charity and the highest bidder never complains that he's paid too much. Usually, no matter what the price, all feel they have a bargain.

"The system is unique in the world and shows no signs of losing popularity," Chow said. "An ordinary non-special car license number costs only $10 (U.S.$2), but the ones who can afford to buy at the auctions feel lucky and know they've done something that will help others."

Hotel Retains Its 19th Century Charm, Quality

COLOMBO, Sri Lankaa (UPI) — The halls are gloomy and you might have problems getting the key in the door to your room.

But within a day of moving in, every employee is calling you by name and never are you rushed.

Now 111 years old, the Galle Face hotel shrieks its colonial beginning. Gin and tonic may not be your drink, but it's what supported the bars in the Galle Face for a century.

It's not as historic as the Raffles in Singapore, as modern as the Oriental in Bangkok, or as luxurious as the Peninsula in Hong Kong.

But the Galle Face is older than all of them, less uptight than any of them and more homely — in all senses of the word — than just about any hotel its size in the area.

In 1864, the Galle Face was "a small club for colonists," said hotel publicist Brig. Gen. Maurice Jayaweera, assistant to the chairman.

Five years before the turn of the century, it became a hotel. Naturally, the "natives" of Ceylon were barred.

There have been sme changes since then, but not so many that the Galle Face would be unrecognizable to a colonist. The natives now sit on the verandah with the whites. But most of the rest is the same.

A recent visitor to the hotel described the overall effect as "elegantly seedy," a turn of phrase which definitely fits.

In the newer chain hotels in Colombo, no guest would put up with rattan mats, for example. But in the Galle Face, they fit — carpets in the hallways would be out of place.

The chain hotels have restaurants up high, with more or less magnificient views of the blue Indian Ocean. In the Galle Face, such views are seen from the rooms. Seeing water from the Coconut Grove restaurant usually means staring at your water glass.

But it still is the best foreign food in town.

There are 145 rooms in the Galle Face. Only 110 are air-conditioned and a traveler from the West seeking a taste of the way things used to be in Asia can stay here for less than $25 at the busiest time of the year.

The only suite with a name is the Yuri Gagarin Suite, where the Russian cosmonaut first into space stayed during a world tour.

There also is a G. D. William Room, a function room named after a hotel employee killed during labor agitation.

And there are two employees per guest room even after institution of a plan to reduce the staff by attrition.

For it is a sad fact that the Galle Face has been losing large amounts of money in recent years and now has called in a Hong Kong hotel chain to manage and advise.

On the other hand, the chairman of the hotel, Cyril Gardiner, is not worried enough about making money to change the Galle Face all that much.

"The chairman has a policy of no retrenchments," said Jayaweera.

"Our specialty is personalized service, and that's the main thing."

The "room boys" are middle-aged men for the most part. "We have an old, experienced staff," he said.

The Galle Face doesn't gleam. It doesn't bustle. It's just reliable, unpretentious, relaxing and always there.

Japan Tackles New Technology

NEW YORK (UPI) — Japan seeks a major position by 1980 as a worldwide supplier of digital electronics, says Electronics Magazine.

Japan's move into digital technology involves two thrusts, says the McGraw-Hill magazine: the first, an immediate attack by Japan's electronics manufacturers on the digital components market now dominated by U.S. semiconductor manufacturers.

The second, "the designing of a line of Very Large Scale Integration (VLSI) computers 100 times more powerful than the technology represented by the IBM 370."

Japan presently supplies four percent of the world's computer and digital integrated circuits.

Wild Orchid Abounds In Minnesota

ST. PAUL, Minn. (UPI) — Orchids growing in Minnesota? Somehow it doesn't fit the picture many folks have of a cold, snowy state.

Although crocus and iris bulbs sometimes don't survive Minnesota's wintry blasts, orchids grow abundance the year round.

The orchid is a deceptively delicate plant. It grows everywhere except the Arctic and the Antarctic.

Minnesota has 46 native varieties, including the state flower, the showy lady slipper.

Currently, the U.S. Forest Service protects an 80-acre Minnesota orchid bog in Chippewa National Forest. Thirteen of the state's orchid species grow wild on a soft forest floor in the cedar and black spruce bog.

Dr. Bill Rathbun of the Minnesota Orchid Society heard of the orchid bog by chance a few years ago. In a survey he made, he found up to 300,000 showy lady slippers growing there.

The bog now is a botanical study area. Its exact physical location is a secret.

Rathbun said secrecy is necessary because "most people like to visit with a shovel, and they have to be protected from themselves."

The society's two-day show at the state fair in Septembber attracted thousands of persons. The society also holds a show during St. Paul's Winter Carnival each January.

The society's 300 members include greenhouse growers, persons who grow plants under fluorescent lights at home and many who just have a few plants on window sills.

Some have created artificial peat bogs in their yards to grow the plants.

Joe Linn, the society's public relations director, said an orchid hobbyist can begin with a $5 to $10 plant that doesn't require much care.

Most persons are so captivated that they continue to buy. Some build in-house greenhouses of prefabricated glass and aluminum.

Most orchid plants need 50 per cent humidity indoors, Linn said, although some are more adaptable. The plants are susceptible to viruses and fungi, but an orchid "will always tell you when it's sick," he said.

Orchids have had to be rugged and adaptable to survive the elements, long droughts and the exposure of their roots to the air. Around the world they grow in trees, mangrove swamps, shady woods, grassy areas, sand dunes and even underground.

Minnesota society members swap and sell their plants periodically. They also buy from commercial nurseries.

Most grow mature plants because an orchid takes five to seven years to reach blooming size. The showy lady slipper that blooms in June needs 14 years from seed to blossom size.

Rathbun said he hopes the orchid area in the Chippewa Forest will some day become a national orchid bog. Right now, there's not enough money for such a project.

Book And Bake Sale Oct. 15 By Pitt LWV

A used book and bake sale will be held at Pitt Plaza on Saturday, October 15, from 10 a.m. to 4 a.m., sponsored by the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters.

Proceeds of the sale will aid in League projects, such as the Voters Service Candidates Forum, which are designed to promote political responsibility through informed and active participation of citizens in government.

Co-chairmen of the sale are Mary Alvan and Anne Attmore. Donations of used books would be appreciated and can be made by calling 756-4295 or 756-4769.

In the event of rain, the sale will be held at the same location on October 22.

Set Demolition Derby Friday

The Staton House Fire Department will sponsor a Demolition Derby Friday at 7:30 p.m. at Nelson's Stables off Highway 13.

Admission will be $2 per person and children under 12 will be admitted free.

Rain date is Oct. 15.

For additional information, call Staton House Fire Department at 752-4879.

Money Supply Still Not Good

By CHET CURRIER .... AP Business Writer ....

NEW YORK (AP) — From Wall Street's point of view, the latest news on the money supply has been better, but still not good enough.

The Federal Reserve's report on Thursday of a $1.2 billion drop in the basic measure of the money supply marked the second straight weekly decline in that closely watched statistic.

But the longer-term monetary growth rate remained above where the Fed wants it to be. And a skeptical stock market showed little positive response to the latest data.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 6.76 to 840.35 in the past week, wiping out most of the previous week's 7.97-point gain.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index dropped .56 to 95.97, and the New York Stock Exchange composite index lost .22 to 52.59.

Big Board volume averaged 18.67 million shares a day, against 19.52 million the week before.

The growth rate of the money supply, as many investors are keenly aware, has been running ahead of the Fed's stated targets for the past several months.

In its efforts to hold monetary growth back to a pace that will allow for a gradual reduction of inflationary pressures, the central bank has recently been tightening credit by encouraging short-term interest rates to rise.

Not everyone agrees with the Fed's approach, of course. Some congressmen have repeatedly contended that it puts too much emphasis on fighting inflation at the expense of allowing money growth sufficient to reduce unemployment.

And lately, critics from a different direction have accused the Fed of going too easy and thereby "losing the handle" on the money supply.

As the central bank tries to find the elusive happy medium between these two extremes, it clearly has the undivided attention of many investors. The eventual outcome of the struggle is seen on Wall Street as a primary determinant of what will happen to interest rates in the near future and inflation later on.

Late last month, for example, New York's Chemical Bank raised its projections of short-term interest rates, citing "recent rapid growth in the monetary aggregates coupled with prospects for the money supply to continue growing at rates above the Federal Reserve's upper tolerance limits for the next six to eight weeks."

On the subject of inflation, meanwhile, Ben E. Laden, chief economist at T. Rowe Price Associates, the Baltimore-based investment management and research firm, observed recently:

"Over a horizon of three years or longer, the rate of inflation correlates closely with the rate of money growth. The reduction in monetary expansion after 1972 was instrumental in the decline of the rate of inflation from the peak in 1974.

"From 1973 through 1976, the rate of growth of the narrowly defined money supply (the total of cash and checking account deposits in public hands, known as M1) averaged about 5 per cent, while the rate of growth of M2 (which also includes time deposits) averaged 9-10 per cent."

In other business developments this past week:

—The nation's unemployment situation improved slightly in September, with the largest gain among black workers. The Labor Department reported unemployment at 6.9 per cent in September, down from the 7.1 per cent in August. Among blacks, the jobless level fell to 13.1 per cent from 14.5 per cent the previous month.

The unemployment rate has remained around 7 per cent since April. Although the administration had hoped to cut that to 6.5 per cent with jobs programs by the end of the year, some economists said large layoffs in the steel industry and other sectors could offset that.

—The energy program that President Carter described as the "moral equivalent of war" when he introduced it to the country last spring, lost a few more battles in Congress. The administration proposal to continue regulating the natural-gas industry while allowing some price increases was defeated after a filibuster in the Senate. The compromise measure that finally did pass contained more liberal price provisions and now must be dealt with in a House-Senate conference committee.

Meanwhile, the Senate Finance Committee rejected each of four energy taxes Carter had said were at the heart of his plan to reduce oil imports and make the country more dependent on its own resources. Opponents of Carter's plans instead want spending and conservation incentives for industry but without new taxes to pay for them.

—Major banks across the country raised their prime interest rate another ¼ percentage point to 7½ per cent. The prime rate, which is that banks charge to their best corporate customers, is not directly tied to interest rates for other types of loans. But it sometimes encourages such changes in a more indirect fashion.

—The nation's major retail chain stores reported sharply improved sales in September, and a generally optimistic outlook for the balance of the year. In many cases, sales were up 10 per cent or more from levels a year before.

Among the largest gains were 19 per cent for Sears; 18 per cent at K-Mart and 13 per cent at Penney.

—Wholesale prices increased at a somewhat faster rate in September than they have for the past several months, the government reported.

The figures reflected a rise in prices for industrial commodities and a slowing in rate at which food prices had declined. But inflation watchers said the one-month figures didn't suggest a serious worsening of inflation, only a return to rates expected after the summer lull.

The latest report indicated prices rose at a seasonally adjusted rate of a half per cent, or at an annual rate of six per cent. That was the steepest one month rise since April's 1.1 per cent climb, to a 13.2 per cent annual rate.

Weekly Stocks Percent Leaders

NEW YORK (AP) — The following list shows the New York Stock Exchange stocks and warrants that have gone up the most and down the most in the past week based on percent of change regardless of volume.

No securities trading below $2 are included. Net and percentage changes are the difference between last week's closing price and this week's closing price.

Moscow 'Hunkers Down' For Hard, Cold Winter

By DOUGLAS STANGLIN

MOSCOW (UPI) — Like the worn and battered trees of Red Square, Moscow has given up without a fight and hunkered down for the long, dark winter.

Birch and poplars, once lush and green in the countryside, have turned pale in the sweep of autumn, shrugging off their leaves in sheets of red and yellow.

Leaves borne by the bitter north winds sweep along Moscow's broad boulevards and skitter across the steel-gray stones beside the Kremlin wall.

September in Moscow is no time for poking hot dogs in a backyard fire or fishing beer from an ice-packed cooler. It is the start of a frantic, headlong rush into winter.

Sun is a precious commodity here. Strollers along the Moscow River soaked up the last rays well into the month, but serious swimming ended weeks ago with the last of the bearable water.

The next band of swimmers won't appear until the dead of winter, when the Moscow Seals break through the skatable ice for regular frigid dips.

For the more inhibited, sheepskin coats and winter boots appeared in mid-September. Eyes peer from under hooded sweaters as Muscovites crowd beneath small green shelters along the main bus routes.

The first edge of winter rolled in on low-slung clouds, dropping temperatures to 5 to 8 degrees centigrade (41-46 Fahrenheit) some 5 or 6 degrees (10 or 12 F) below normal.

One Russian crossing the Moscow River along Kutuzovsky Prospekt — the city's Fifth Avenue — reported snowflakes mixed with chilling rain at mid-month.

Shoppers, Russian and foreign alike, combed department stores, snapping up the fuzzy fur "shapkas" — those funny hats that take one's ears safely through the Russian winter.

And foreigners who have slogged through past snows are maneuvering to outwit the next. One group cranked up a betting pool for the first measurable snowfall, registered last year on Oct. 12. Travelers to Helsinki haul back bags of ice scrapers, window heaters, deicing sprays and inch-deep floor mats to scoop out the snow in their cars before it rots the carpet.

Those with Soviet-made cars are tossing out the standard Polish sparkplugs for West German brands and planning a final run to Leningrad before the wind, ice and snow turn the primitive highways into deathtraps.

For many, it will be the last time they will drive until spring. Many Russian cars go up on blocks for the winter, covered with canvas to protect against snow and falling icicles.

In the home, Russians pull out homemade recipes for fighting the cold winds that have a frustrating way of worming around unprotected windows. Paper and rags, secured with a milk paste, seal the windows and trap the steam heat indoors.

One American, en route to Africa, hawked his electric heater like snake oil — promising the tiny, metal-coil contraption would spread a thin layer of warmth across a frigid bedroom floor.

The onslaught of winter is particularly hard on Moscow nightlife, which is virtually indiscernible even in the best of times.

Downtown activity after 10 p.m. is generally confined to tourists strolling the half-block between the red-brick National Hotel and Red Square.

But winter with its icy winds and 4 p.m. darkness drives most Muscovites indoors.

There is little reason for roaming anyway. There is not much chance of stumbling on an undiscovered bar, as one might along a snowy Second Avenue in New York — that tiny, corner coffeehouse, with windows coated in a layer of frost, where the rumble of voices and pile of coats promise an endlese evening warming hands over a cup of Irish coffee.

Moscow is a worker's town — if not a worker's paradise — and the streets are abandoned long before midnight.

Most entertaining is done in the home, around a bottle of vodka or over a bowl of borsch.

Even the hard currency bars in the city's four main hotels — the Intourist, National, Metropole and Rossiya — are dull. No flashing lights, rock bands or high-energy dance floor. They concentrate on the basics — a drink and a table.

Even the most imaginative foreigner would be hard-pressed to stumble on a seductive KGB agent. One is more likely to find a West German businessman wrestling with a bottle of beer or a tableful of Canadian tourists.

But the Bolshoi is back — a sure sign that winter is in the offing.

A ticket is hard to come by without a hotel connection or a contact in the theater but its promise of a night out lifts the spirits.

After tours of Greece and Paris, the Bolshoi troupes returned to the capital with a packed schedule, including a ballet based on Chekov's "The Seagull."

The early performances include a ballet titled "Love for Love," based on a Shakespeare play, which was dedicated to the opening of the 25th Party Congress last year. The title was hastily chosen after it became obvious the original Shakespeare title would not do.

The play: "Much Ado About Nothing."

Politics is probably the only activity that defies the Russian deep freeze. After a summer of vacationing on the Black Sea, Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev is back in Moscow.

His arrival flips over the political hourglass for the start of a steady stream of decrees and meetings and conferences until spring. In the Kremlin, there are no young Turks out flexing their muscles when Brezhnev is absent. Moscow waits.

Politics was in the air with the first day of school, when the new words to the Soviet national anthem were unveiled to eliminate references to nonperson Josef Stalin.

The newspapers were also brimming with stories on how the entire country is busily debating the new draft constitution, which will rubber stamp its way into law this fall.

And the big show comes Nov. 7 for the celebration of the 60th anniversary of the October Revolution. Blaring banners and reams of newsprint have pointed to the wintry affair as the event of the decade.

But out in the provinces the day-to-day battle is bringing in the harvest.

By mid-September, a bumper crop grain harvest was 86 per cent complete, with each day's paper exhorting first Siberia, then the Ukraine to fulfill the plan ahead of the snows.

The Russian word for bread is "hleb" — and it is used interchangably to mean wheat, indicating the vital link between the harvest and the country's well-being. Russians, pointing to a field of wheat, say "the bread is growing in the field."

Food is a major concern on the cusp of winter. Vegetables, plentiful all summer in the shops and free enterprise markets, disappear rapidly.

In another month or two, fresh tomatoes will be going for $6 a pound — and those quintessential blackmarketeers, the Georgians, will be suitcasing wilted carnations to Moscow to sell for $5 a small bunch.

Lettuce, only a frequent visitor in the best of times, has been gone for weeks. Melons appear periodically, grapes and plums are fading fast. But Cabbage is still here and will be all winter.

Cabbage and potatoes. Potatoes and cabbage.

But the Soviet people adjust. In a country where spring and summer can last only four months, they have little choice.

Most, in fact, seem eager for the kind of winter that would drive most Americans to Florida at twice the temperature.

In Lenin Hills, would-be cross-country skiers struggled through September on jerry-rigged skateboards, practicing their strokes for the real thing.

The more adventurous — if not suicidal — downhill skiers worked out all summer on the ski jumps, soaring down the hills on a grassy, doormat-like surface and landing in the dirt at the base of the hill.

To them, winter was a long time coming.

CHARMING PETS — Jules Sylvester was the perfect perch for a little rest and relaxation for these charming pets. Sylvester had his hands full with this spellbinding boa and python combination. The reptiles were eight feet long, and part of an attraction under the Big Top at Sherman Anderson Field, Mount Vernon, Wash. (AP Laserphoto)

Craft Classes Resume Tuesday

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will resume the Seasonal Craft classes at Elm Street Center Tuesday, Oct. 11 at 7:30 p.m.

Cornshuck scarecrows will be the first class taught. Interested persons need to bring a lightweight coathanger and masking tape to the first class. Other materials needed will be available at the center for a small fee.

Classes are also held on Tuesdays from 9-12 a.m. and 1-5 p.m.

For further information and registration call Lucille Sumrell at 752-4137, ext. 251.

Showing Films On Childbirth

The Greenville Childbirth Educators will sponsor a film showing Thursday, Oct. 13, at 7:30 p.m. in the conference room at Pitt Memorial Hospital.

The three films are as follows: "Story of Eric," a Lamaze experience; "Birth Without Violence," a LeBoyer experience; and "The Amazing Newborn."

Prepared childbirth classes are held twice per month. For further information call 756-6304.

The public is invited to attend the film showing at no charge.

Duplin Wine Cellars Are Off To A Start

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

ROSE HILL — There are now only two commercial wineries in North Carolina, a state known since before it was a state for its exceptional grapes. And because of the present price paid for grapes and the domination of the industry by a few large winemaking companies, even these two struggle to exist.

David and Dan Fussell Jr., the principal owners and operators of Duplin Wine Cellars in Rose Hill, about 60 miles from here, are candid, but not complaining about their uphill battle not to lose their shirts on the vineyards they planted five years ago when grape prices doubled what they are today. In 1972 a ton of grapes sold for $320. Today a farmer feels lucky to get $170 a ton. And, of course, labor and supply costs continue to increase for these, as for all farmers.

David was a teacher and former high school principal and Dan Jr. was in the construction business when they decided to devote their full efforts to trying to save the money they had invested in several acres of muscadine grapes on their family farm. "$3,000 an acre is a conservative estimate of how much it costs to bring an acre of grapes to the point where they can be harvested," David said. "And that's not counting the value of the land on which they're planted. That's buying the stock, pruning, and picking. It's not counting your own labor, either. We just couldn't stand to lose all this when the bottom dropped out of the grape market and we knew that a lot of our fellow grape growers couldn't either. So we started the winery. It's a cooperative in that about 10 farmers in this area have invested in it. Dan Jr. and I are the operators and the Waccamaw State Bank owns most of it. We owe a lot of money.

"We don't even want any of the other farmers' or our own grapes to be brought to the winery until all that can be sold on the fresh market have been sold. We want them for wine riper than they can be sold fresh, so the two markets complement each other.

"Fresh Scuppernongs and Carloses (two varieties later used in their wine) don't sell very well fresh, though, anywhere except in the Southeast United States. People from other areas, unless they're transplanted Southerners, don't know how to eat them. They eat them hulls and all, and then say they don't taste good," David said.

Duplin Wine Cellars, which is located on Highway 117 just inside the town limits as you enter the town from Kinston, makes three kinds of wine at present: Scuppernong, a relatively sweet white wine; Noble, a relatively sweet red wine, and Carlos, a medium dry white wine. All three are made from native grapes — the Scuppernong and Carlos from white thick-skinned grapes that the untrained eye can hardly tell apart and the Noble from a black grape. A new wine, Carolina Preeminence, will be produced in the near future, the Fussells say.

They say they expect to make about 35,000 gallons this year. Late in the fall they plan to start distribution efforts themselves. Previously they have relied on established distributors and have not sold outside the Wilmington, Fayetteville, Raleigh, Durham and Chapel Hill areas. They are optimistic that next year they will need to make up to 300,000 gallons.

With the grapes now being grown in North Carolina, millions of gallons could be made, they say.

The Duplin Wine Cellars wine is now selling for between $2.29 and $3 a bottle. They recommend a price of about $2.50 a bottle. Though none is sold in the Greenville area at present, dealers in this area will be approached by the first of the year, Dan Fussell said, and special orders could be filled now if any merchants wish.

Duplin Wine Cellars wine is table wine and the table wine market is difficult to break into. It's dominated by a few big companies and distributors often feel obliged to place the big companies' products on the eye level shelves in the supermarkets where most table wines are sold, and the newcomers' products on the lower, less prominent shelves. This is why the Fussells feel, to make a go of it, they must try their hands at marketing as well as growing and fermenting the grape.

Duplin Wine Cellars is a family operation. David and his wife, Anne, are Duplin County natives and East Carolina University graduates. David taught in Bethel in the early 1960's. They have three sons. Dan and his wife, Zayne, a High Point native, met while he was attending High Point College. They have a son and a daughter.

David calls Dan Jr. the thinker of the operation and Dan calls David the mouthpiece. Zayne is the bookkeeper, and, like her sister-in-law, Anne, also does everything from corking and labeling and sealing bottles to making deliveries at times.

The brothers' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Fussell Sr., also of Rose Hill, help out at times, too, as they did during a recent tour of the winery and vineyard held for state newspaper reporters.

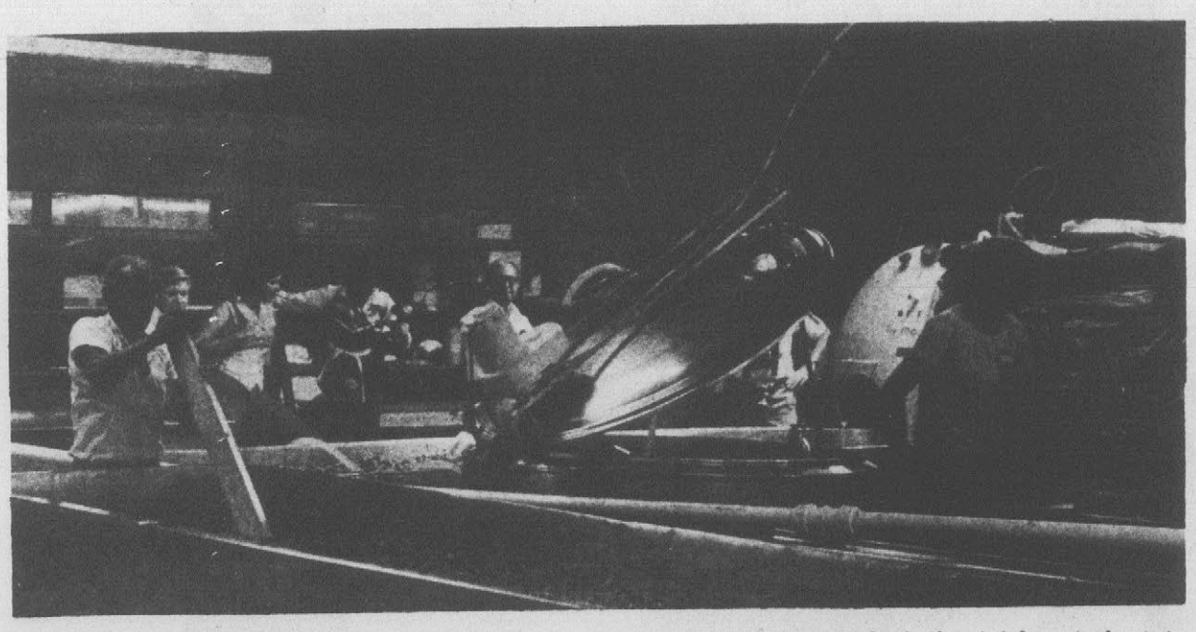

THREE VARIETAL WINES—Carlos Noble and Scuppernong — are being produced by Duplin Wine Cellars now. with a fourth, to be called Carolina Preeminence, to be introduced soon.

GOLDEN IN THE SUN. . .Carlos grapes are cousins of the more familiar Scuppernong and make a delightful dry white table wine.

CRUSHED GRAPES,. . .juice, pulp and hulls, are piped into a holding vat where fermentation begins. Hulls are removed a few hours later.

A HEADY FRAGRANCE. . .pervades the winery. Aging is done in the large white tanks in the background, while fermentation begins in the stainless steel vats in the foreground.

HAND PICKING . . .of grapes is expensive for the owners, but provides fall employment in the grape-growing area around Rose Hill.

CORKING OF A BOTTLE. . .is performed by Zayne (Mrs. Dan Jr.) Fussell, one of the members of the Fussell family-operated winery.

Engagements Announced

MISS PHYLLIS RAE CHESHIRE. . .is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Winfred G. Cheshire of Fayetteville, who announce her engagement to Kyle Jeffrey Toothman, son of Mr. Frank J. Toothman of Huttonsville, W. Va., and Mrs. Elizabeth Forbes Toothman of Greenville. The wedding will take place Dec. 18.

MISS MINYA SUSAN CREECH. . .is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Levey Preston Creech of Pine Level, who announce her engagement to Thomas Ray Cannon, son of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Cannon of Greenville. The wedding will take place Nov. 25.

Working Women

NEW YORK (UPI) — Advancement opportunities for working women seem to be greater in larger cities than in smaller ones, according to "Taking Stock," a just-published woman's guide to success in business by Sharie Crain. The book, published by Regnery, also reports that the most promising cities for would-be women executives are now New York, Washington, Atlanta and Los Angeles.

Sorority Chapters Observing Alpha Delta Kappa Week

Alpha Delta Kappa, an international sorority for women educators, is observing Alpha Delta Kappa Week, Oct. 9-15.

The sorority was started in North Carolina in 1954 with the chartering of the first chapter in Charlotte. It has grown to 79 chapers in 20 years.

There are two chapters in Pitt county, the Greenville Alpha Iota chapter, and the Pitt county Alpha Nu chapter.

The sorority has four purposes, 1. To give recognition to outstanding women educators who are actively engaged in teaching, administration or some specialized field of teaching, 2. To build a fraternal fellowship among women in the teaching profession which will add to their effectiveness in the promotion of excellence in education, 3. To promote educational and charitable projects and activities; sponsor scholarship; to further and to maintain worthy standards in the field of education; and to cooperate with worthy community programs related to education and charities.

The sorority sponsors several scholarships to promote their objectives. Internationally they include a regional scholarship of $500 awarded annually to one of its activend participating members from each of two regions. The seven regions are eligible every fourth year on a rotation basis. Also a $1,000 scholarship awarded annually to a member to be used for her personal enrichment or progressional growth through travel away from her home environment, and three $8,000 to finance research in the United States in the arts and humanities. The grant is open to women only and is presented at the International Convention.

The organization also gives a $600 scholarship each spring to one of its members selected on a rotating basis from the six state districts. It was established in 1970.

Another scholarship fund has been established to honor Eunice Riggins, state honorary member who passed away in 1971. It will be awarded when sufficient funds are available.

For several years, the North Carolina chapter has contributed financially to the Boys Home at Lake Waccamaw, and last year decided to help the Girls Haven at Asheboro.

Many chapters throughout the state provide scholarships for prospective undergraduate teachers.

The Alpha Nu chapter awards a scholarship annually to a student accepted into the teacher aide training program at Pitt Technical Institute. The scholarship is used for books and tuition and the recipient must maintain a "C" average to receive the funds for an entire year. The winner is selected from one of the four county high schools.

The scholarship is made possible through special projects undertaken by the chapter and memorial contributions.

The Alpha Iota chapter awards two scholarships to stimulate students to major in education at the university of their choice. The scholarship is awarded for four consecutive years. The chapter has favored students of Alpha Delta Kappa members. These scholarships are also funded by chapter projects and contributions.

Chapters benefit their communities through a variety of educational and humanitarian projects.

The Alpha Nu chapter sponsors a patient at Cherry Hospital and has several members who do volunteer work at rest homes, present gifts to patients at nursing homes, and who make donations to local day care centers.

The Alpha Iota chapter has several members who volunteer their services to the tutoring of special education students. The chapter contributes to the Sunshine Center for Young Girls, makes favors for hospital trays, contributes to Cherry Hospital and the Greenville Ambassador program, and presents programs at local nursing homes.

They also sponsor educational trips for special education classes and sponsor mini workshops for its members on various topics of interest.

Marriage Announced

Vickie Gray and Terry Harrington were married last Sunday in South Carolina. The couple are residing in Greenville.

Clearly A Case Of Child Abuse

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR FRANTIC: This is clearly a case of child abuse. Had you disclosed your name and address, I would have reported it promptly. I urge you to phone PARENTS ANONYMOUS at this toll-free number: 1-800-421-0353, and tell them Abby told you to call. And write again to let me know what is done. I care.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 15 and I'm going with a dude who just turned 18. He says he loves me and wants to marry me some day, but we fight almost every time we're together because he keeps trying to talk me into going all the way with him.

I told him I was saving myself for marriage and I wasn't going to change my mind, but he keeps trying to break down my resistance.

Abby, I really love this guy, but if he keeps hassling me to go all the way, I don't know what I'll do. How can I hold him off without losing him for good?

HANGING IN THERE

DEAR HANGING: Let's get one thing straight. A fellow who loves a girl doesn't hassle her to do something that's against her principles. If you lose him because you can't hold him off, you'll be lucky. Hold out for orange blossoms. He's offering you poison ivy.

DEAR ABBY: Most men think nothing of wearing a suit for four or five years—or even longer. So will you please tell me why a woman won't wear last year's dress?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Some don't want to. And others can't.

DEAR ABBY: I have a darling 5-year-old granddaughter I'll call Lisa. My son is Lisa's father, but he and Lisa's mother were never married and do not live together. Lisa's mother has lived with one man after another. Right now, the one she's living with belongs to a motorcycle gang.

You wouldn't believe the terrible filth this child lives in. She's dirty and hungry much of the time, and sleeps on a filthy mattress (which she wets) amid roaches and mice. She also has a chronic kidney condition. We live 85 miles away, and Lisa's mother sends her to visit us occasionally. When it's time to take her home, she cries and begs to stay with us.

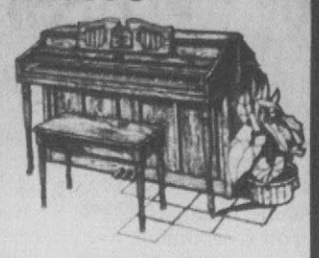

Our doctor has prescribed medicine for the child's kidney ailment, but her mother "forgets' to give it to her.

We appealed to the Child's Protective Service in the community where Lisa lives, but were told that since our son was never married to the child's mother we are not the child's grandparents, so it is none of our business! What can we do?

On The Young Side

By Sharon Connolly

This week's focus at Rose High School was divided between two topics. Plans for Homecoming were being finalized as well as the ending of this year's fundraising project.

For two weeks, the entire school body was involved in the selling of candy bars. Good participation enabled us in earning an estimated $6,700. The school will receive approximately 41 percent of this.

The money will be divided and allotted to each class to aid in future projects such as the senior class gift and the Junior-Senior prom.

One of the special highlights of Homecoming is the selection of sponsors. Each senior football player, trainer or manager asks a girl, attending Rose, to represent him during the parade and special halftime show.

This year's sponsors are as follows: Mary Blount, Miss Fullback, sponsoring Mac Washington; Jeri Bullock, Miss Tight End, sponsoring Scott Brady; Kathy Carter, Miss Defensive Back, sponsoring Mike Shank; Tori Clement, Miss Split End, sponsoring Sandy Abbott; Bernadette Cox, Miss Halfback, sponsoring Mike Joyner; Jennifer Davis, Miss Defensive Back, sponsoring Bill Collier;

Robin Dixon, Miss Guard, sponsoring Burney Fleming; Sandra Jackson, Miss End, sponsoring Bobby Woronoff; Karen Jeffreys, Miss Split End, sponsoring Kenny Jenkins; Paige Levey, Miss Kicker, sponsoring Stuart Goodson; Donna McLaurin, Miss Tackle, sponsoring Franklin Clark; Anne Middleton, Miss End, sponsoring David Daniels; Joan Olsen, Miss Fullback, sponsoring David Northrup; Sheila Peterson, Miss Split End, sponsoring Billy Roberson; Catherine Smith, Miss Trainer, sponsoring Howard Tucker; Sandy Stott, Miss Tackle, sponsoring Steve Jepson; Pam Talbert, Miss Guard, sponsoring Dusty Darden; Belinda Teel, Miss Defensive End, sponsoring Raymond Wooten; Donna Tripp, Miss Linebacker, sponsoring Bryant Morton; Susan Tucker, Miss Tackle sponsoring David Murray; and Gina Whichard, Miss Defensive, sponsoring Jeff Aldridge.

On Monday afternoon, the varsity cheerleaders held tryouts for all J.V. cheerleaders wishing to cheer during the Homecoming game. Each year, varsity positions for the game are open because the regular cheerleaders are involved in other aspects of that week.

Judged on appearance, voice, pep, jumps, coordination, skills and stunts, four girls were chosen to fill the positions: Jane Edgerly; Keri Loque; Karla Tadlock; and Cecilia Worthington.

Other squad members are Lisa Murad, Karen Mills, Cathy Waller, Barbara Wheeler, Sharon Connolly and JoLindy Daniels, acting as head.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

"I don't consider myself artistic. I just feel I have a knack for being able to put what I see on canvas. To me, being artistic is a person who can sketch or draw freehand. I have to use a pattern.

"I use Pricilla Hauser's technique in teaching both tole and mini painting," said Mrs. Marlene Alton of Rt. 2, Chocowinity.

"My mother, Mrs. Maude Paine, of Tennessee does china painting and she aroused my interest in china painting about seven years ago. After getting into china painting and learning how to paint flowers and fruit, I wanted to be able to paint the same things in oil, which led to the mini and tole painting," added Mrs. Alton.

Mrs. Alton is teaching a class in mini painting at Elm Street Recreation Center through the Greenville Parks and Recreation Department. She has also taught china painting here.

She teaches classes at Beaufort Technical Institute, Washington, and in the Aurora and Swan Quarter areas through Beaufort Tech.

Teaching for about three and a half years, Mrs. Alton began holding classes in mini and tole painting while living in Durham.

"China painting, to me, is the most challenging and rewarding, but mini and tole are more fun and easier to do. With the china technique, you have to have more patience because you are involved in many steps of firing it in a kiln.

"I think all three are great and I hate to see so few people do china painting. Of the areas we have lived in, you find few people that do china painting and even fewer craft shops that stock any china painting supplies," she said.

Mrs. Alton is the mother of five children, Jim, 19, Steve, 17, Dave, 11, Ruth Ann, nine, and Bill, seven. Her husband, Gene, is employed by Burroughs Wellcome.

The Alton family lifestyle revolves mainly "around water activities."

"My husband has really inspired me a lot in my hobbies — by encouraging me to take the time for the classes. He has helped out with the children so I could continue learning in the different areas of art. He felt that I should pursue my interests even though I had a lot of "at home" responsibilities," Mrs. Alton concluded.

"DOWN THE PATH". . .mini painting is one of Mrs. Marlene Alton's selection for her classes.

Secretarial Work Has Long History

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Maybe it isn't the world's oldest profession, but secretarial work must rank as one of the most established. Babylonian scribes took dictation on clay tablets more than 5,000 years ago.

Ancient Egyptians, according to the historical evidence unearthed by Manpower, Inc., which claims to be the world's largest agency for temporary secretarial help, invented paper by hammering strips of papyrus as early as 300 B.C. They also developed a form of secretarial shortland that helped record early history.

SUNDAY SUPPER

Corn Casserole Bacon
Salad Bowl
Brownies Beverage

CORN CASSEROLE

A couple of foods from the pantryshelf go into this.

- 3 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
- ½ cup shredded dried beef
- 3 large eggs
- ¼ cup milk
- 2 tablespoons flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup grated cheddar cheese
- 12-ounce can whole-kernel corn, drained

Cook the onion and beef in the butter until onion wilts. Beat the eggs until they begin to thicken and are lemon color; add milk, flour and salt; beat to combine; stir in cheese, corn and onion-beef mixture. Turn into a buttered 9-inch glass pie plate. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven about 25 minutes. Let stand 5 to 10 minutes before serving. Makes 4 servings.

COMPANY LUNCH

BROCCOLI EGG ASPIC

- 1 envelope unflavored gelatin
- 10½ ounce can consomme, undiluted
- 6 cooked broccoli flowerets
- ¾ cup mayonnaise
- 2 hard-cooked eggs, sieved
- 2 cups cooked diced broccoli

Soften gelatin in ¼ cup of the cold consomme. Heat the remaining consomme until very hot and add to the gelatin mixture; stir until gelatin dissolves. Arrange the broccoli flowerets in a 5-cup mold; carefully pour in ½ cup of the gelatin mixture. Chill until almost firm. Chill the remaining gelatin mixture until the consistency of unbeaten egg whites; fold in the mayonnaise, sieved eggs and diced broccoli. Carefully spoon into the mold.Chill until firm. Unmold at serving time and garnish as desired. Makes 6 servings.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I was going to clean the house a few years back, but I thought, "What the heck. Might as well wait until the children are grown."

The other day my husband said to me, "When are you going to get rid of the potty seat with the ducks on it in the hall bathroom?"

"When the baby no longer needs it."

"The 'baby' is a sophomore at USC."

"He comes home on holidays, doesn't he?"

"Look," he said, "you're being unrealistic to hang onto all this junk. When I get home tonight, I want to see how strong you really are. Just close your eyes and start tossing."

I wanted to throw away my report cards from the first eight grades — I really did — but I rationalized if they ever fell into the wrong hands, I'd be ruined.

I toyed with the idea of discarding three maternity skirts with the cut-out fronts and the drawstrings, but the way my body was going, I figured it was only a matter of months before I could turn them around and wear them backwards.

I wavered over whether or not to toss out a signature of Imogene Coca on a cocktail napkin, a kitchen linen calendar from 1969, and a French fry basket that needed a handle.

On some things, there was no decision to be made . . . the melted candles, the rain-soaked Halloween masks, a single boot, and 35 used adhesive bows from Christmas packages . . . all would be saved.

Other things I wasn't so decisive about . . . the pre-hips bikini suit that would make wonderful coasters. The 15 naval bands (still in pre-soak) that would come in handy if one of the kids suffered from an umbilical hernia.

But I was ruthless. At the end of the day I was proud as I stood beside four neatly stacked boxes of junk!

My husband's eyes glistened when he saw it. "I told you you could do it," he said. "It's just a matter of being realistic and saying, 'I'm never going to use this again.' Wait a minute! Are those my golf scorecards from pre-Pearl Harbor? And the composition books from the first class I ever taught? Good Lord, woman, what are you doing with my loafers with the pennies in them? And my porkpie hat? And the picture of Gale Storm that came with my billfold and . . ."

Miss Buchanan, Mr. Ward Exchange Vows Friday

Miss Elizabeth Ann Buchanan and Samuel Chadwick Ward were united in holy matrimony Friday evening at eight o'clock in The Way Biblical Research Center, Greenville. The Rev. Randy Anderson officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Lee Buchanan of Ft. Walton Beach, Fla. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Decatur Ward of New Bern.

Mrs. Karla Anderson, organist and soloist, provided a program of nuptial music.

The bride wore a formal length gown of white qiana over white peau de soie designed with a high neckline circled with scrolled Venise lace that extended down the front of the fitted empire bodice. Appliques of matching scrolled lace were featured on the long fitted sleeves. A inset band enhanced the waistline from which fell the full circular skirt with attached chapel length train. A tiered illusion veil held in place by a bandeau cap overlaid with qiana complemented the gown. The bride carried a bouquet of white roses.

Miss Marsha Green of Lexington was maid of honor. She wore a formal length gown of jade green knit designed with a portrait neckline featuring a ruffled Bertha collar. The gathered empire bodice with elasticized waistline was accentuated by a rope tie belt, complemented by a jade green rose at the side. The full skirt was enhanced by a deep ruffled flounce at the hemline. She carried a bouquet of white roses.

Bridesmaids were Miss Martha Ward of New Bern, sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Susan Buchanan of Greenville, sister-in-law of the bride. They wore formal length gowns of spice knit designed with a scoop neckline and short panelled sleeves. The empire bodice was overlayed with a cowl drape. The waistline of the gathered skirt was accentuated with miniature rope ties at both sides of the gown. Each carried a single long-stemmed white rose.

MRS. SAMUEL CHADWICK WARD

The bridegroom's father was best man. Ushers were Alfred Decatur Ward Jr. of New Bern, brother of the bridegroom, David Buchanan, brother of the bride, and David Hahn, both of Greenville.

After the ceremony a reception was held in the The Way Home.

After a wedding trip to Okracoke Island and the Outer Banks, the couple will be at home Oct. 12.

A graduate of East Carolina University, the bridegroom is the branch leader for The Way Ministry in Greenville. He is owner and operator of Samuel Ward Furniture in Grimesland. The bride is employed as the science instructor for nursing students at Pitt Technical Institute. She is currently working on her masters degree in chemistry at East Carolina University.

Couple Weds In Candlelight Ceremony

VANCEBORO — Miss Debra Ann Worthington and Harold Gene Tyndall were married in a formal candlelight ceremony Saturday evening at eight o'clock in the Epworth United Methodist Church here. The Rev. Steven Hickle officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Allen Baker Bland of Vanceboro, and Mr. Alton Worthington of Hollywood, Fla. She was given in marriage by her stepfather. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Dallas Tyndall of Kinston.

The church was arranged with spiral candelabras on either side of the altar with arch candelabra in the center. Grecian urns on white columns held arrangements of mixed flowers. Family pews were marked with ribbons and bouquets of mixed flowers. Hurricane lamps with greenery were placed in the sanctuary windows.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Mary W. Sugg, organist, and Miss Judy Bland, pianist. Mrs. Diane Smith sang "Time In A Bottle," "Evergreen" "Speak Softly Love" and "You're My World."

The bride wore a formal length gown of candlelight organza over peau de soie designed with a high neckline encircled with imported beaded French chantilly lace. The empire bodice was overlaid with matching beaded lace. The long fitted sleeves repeated the beaded lace at the cuffs with covered button closures. A lace edged capelet collar extended over the fitted sleeves with covered buttons down the back of the gown. The waistline was encircled with ivory satin ribbon overlaid with the imported French chantilly lace. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel length train were edged in scalloped French chantilly lace. Appliques of the beaded lace were repeated on the front and back of the skirt.

She wore a three tiered imported illusion lace edged veil held in place by a Camelot cap of beaded lace outlined in pearls. The bride carried a fan of imported French chantilly lace with white sweetheart and tube roses.

Miss Susan Jarret of Raleigh was the maid of honor. Bridesmaids included Miss Sarah Wilson of Emporia, Va., Mrs. Letha Jones and Mrs. Deborah Bostic, both of Greenville. The junior bridesmaids were Miss Amada Tyndall and Miss Pamela Tyndall, both of Kinston, daughters of the bridegroom. Miss Deanna Haddock of Vanceboro was flower girl.

The attendants wore matching formal length gowns of cranberry qiana fashioned in a one-shoulder halter with matching chiffon capes. They carried hurricane lamps of crystal and brass with a cascade of white pom pons.

Norfleet Jones of Raleigh served as best man and ushers were Tommy Hussey of Raleigh, Kenneth Allen and M. R. Williams of Kinston.

The mother of the bride wore a formal chiffon gown of pale pink. A band of pearls, crystals and sequins accented the bodice with a matching chiffon cape.

The bridegroom's mother wore a light blue formal gown of chiffon with a matching long sleeved stole. Both mothers wore orchid wrist corsages.

Following the ceremony, Mrs. Keitt Sawyer and Mrs. Jack Taylor, aunts of the bride entertained at a reception in the church fellowship hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Mattews greeted guests and Mrs. Gentry McLawhorn presided at the register, where the bride's portrait was displayed. A silver tray filled with ivory tulle rice bags was centered on the table for the guests.

The brides's table was covered with a white hand-embroidered lace cloth over cranberry. A three-tiered wedding cake stood over a lighted fountain at one end of the table and the bride's fan was placed on an easel at the other end.

Mrs. Curtis Witherington and Mrs. Herbert Taylor cut and served the cake after the traditional first slice was cut by the bridal couple. Mrs. Myrtle Bryan and Ms. Sandra Tripp poured punch.

Good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Pate.

The bride's parents entertained at a pig picking following the rehearsal Friday evening at the Vanceboro Masonic Lodge. Guests included members of the wedding party, relatives and out-of-town guests.

The bridal party was entertained at a luncheon at the home of Mrs. Calvin Joyner Saturday afternoon. Mrs. G. S. Bland was assisting hostess.

An informal party was held at the home of Mrs. Judson Jones Jr. Friday afternoon for members of the bridal party, relatives and friends.

Nurses To Mark 75 Years Service

The North Carolina Nurses Association this year marks 75 years of service as the official organization for registered nurses.

NCNA was organized in 1902 under the supervision of Mary Lewis Wyche. Membership has grown from the original 15 members to 26,000 registered nurses, who will celebrate the 75th anniversary year of the organization this month.

NCNA is geared, through concepts of education, practice, standards and service, to the pursuit of excellence in modern nursing.

Gain New Knowledge Of Hurricanes

EDITOR'S NOTE — The hurricane is a safety valve of nature, though that's small consolation for people regularly caught up in its path. But midway through this year's hurricane season, scientists have gathered important new information about the anatomy of the storms which should lead to better forecasting.

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — It can start as innocuously as a fluctuation in the easterly flow of winds over Africa. But under the right conditions, the clash of the air between the tropic and temperate zones can turn it into one of the most powerful forces in Nature.

The hurricane.

Known as the typhoon in the Pacific Ocean and the cyclone in the Indian Ocean, these largest of atmospheric disturbances can affect an area of 200,000 square miles and create more energy than is generated in the United States during several decades.

A hurricane can move 3,600 million tons of air up to 200 miles an hour, churn up 25-foot waves in the ocean and dump torrential rains that bring flooding and death.

Yet for all of the hurricane's havoc, scientists say it is a natural safety valve that balances tremendous atmospheric forces.

"We don't have some evil force manifesting itself out there as a hurricane," says Dr. Neil Frank, director of the National Hurricane Center in Miami. "It releases the heat built up in the tropics."

Named for the Mayan storm god Hunraken, the Atlantic member of the cyclone family is a fact of life along the Eastern and Gulf coasts of North America from June through November.

"We recognize what conditions are necessary to form hurricanes," says Dr. Robert Sheets, chief of Hurricane Group for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. "But sometimes no storm will form under the same conditions that have created a big storm."

Sheets and his group have started taking a more detailed look at the big storms this year with the help of special computer-equipped Navy Orion and Air Force C-130 aircraft.

Armed with $30 million of the latest developments in radar and computers, the NOAA group, called Project Stormfury, flew three missions into Hurricane Anita last month, collecting data on the interaction of temperature, winds and clouds as the storm grew.

Sheets says Stormfury's flights through Anita's 172 mph winds provided as much information as was collected in five years using old methods.

With separate radar units in the nose, belly and tail of the aircraft, scientists took three-dimensional photos of the storm. Particle counters on the wings used lasers to analyze and count minute water droplets and ice crystals in the clouds. All the information was monitored by a new computer able to assimilate and analyze more data than previous equipment.

"Our immediate objective is to understand the interactions better to help us with our forecasting," he says. "We now have an accepted 100-mile error in predicting where a storm will hit. If we can narrow that, we can save money and lives.

"The same applies to intensity. If we are better able to predict the strength of the storm, some of the expensive precautions for big storms can be avoided."

"We seem to go in phases," says Sheets. "In the 1940s and 50s, hurricanes occurred mainly in the Florida area. In the late 50s and 60s they shifted to the East Coast. Now they seem to be in the Gulf."

Wherever they are, Dr. Frank is tracking them.

"About 36.5 million people live along coastal areas from Texas to Maine, and 28 million of them have no idea of the awesome power of a hurricane," he says.

Frank, a 46-year-old native of Kansas, tornado country, learned meterology in the Air Force then got a doctorate at Florida State University. He joined the Hurricane Center in 1959 and became director in 1974.

Frank supervises a staff of 75, which forecasts Florida's weather year round, watches hurricanes for the United States, Caribbean and South America and conducts research.

During the hurricane season, the center's six hurricane forecasters work day and night shifts collecting data on tropical disturbances and informing the public.

The center's hurricane room looks like a war room. A map of the Caribbean and Atlantic, marked with latitude and longitude hatch marks, covers one wall. Red tags tracing the hurricane are moved around the map like warships in battle.

The other walls are covered with maps detailing wind speed, temperature and pressure culled from the ground stations and balloon soundings from 120 points in the United States and the Caribbean.

Two monitors above the room show the progress of storms in the South Atlantic and Caribbean via photos beamed from three satellites orbiting 22,000 miles above Brazil. The photos are received by a Virginia tracking station and relayed to the center every six hours.

Meanwhile, a floor below, Project Stormfury scientists are working on ways to reduce storm damage. Using the data from their flights, Sheets and his colleagues hope to renew experiments in hurricane modification.

"Cloud-seeding" experiments, using aircraft to spray clouds with silver iodide crystals have been performed since 1961, in an attempt to break up the storms.

Experiments conducted on Hurricane Debbie in 1969 have convinced some scientists that seeding clouds near the eye can create mini-storms that enlarge the center of the hurricane, breaking up the vicious vortex responsible for the high winds.

Sheets says data indicates the winds can be reduced from 15 to 30 percent.

"I've been studying these storms for 12 years," says Sheets. "They're interesting and intriguing. But now we're getting up to the point where the research in the next few years is going to be very exciting."

Amtrak Cooks Also Artists

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Grandma wouldn't be baffled in the kitchen of a gleaming red, silver and blue Amtrak train speeding across the country. She was an artist at turning out wholesome meals on wood-burning, cast-iron stoves — and so are many Amtrak cooks.

The stoves are standard on most of Amtrak's older dining cars — the ones inherited in 1971 when the National Railroad Corp. took over most of the country's passenger service from private railroads.

Barbara Halliday, an Amtrak spokeswoman in Washington, D.C., said some of the dining cars are more than 30 years old, and many of the cooks were inherited with the cars.

An Amtrak chef, using a stove filled with flaming pressed-wood logs, must have a quick eye and a sharp nose because the stoves have no temperature controls.

"Once you get it hot, you just know when to add one more log at a time to maintain the temperature," said Ulysses Harper, one of Amtrak's chefs, as he sweated over a stove on a run between San Francisco and Denver.

Amtrak started operations with 286 diesel and 40 electric locomotives and 1,275 cars, all bought or leased from existing railroad lines. During the past six years, Amtrak has spent or committed $582.7 million to buy new equipment.

The newer Amfleet kitchens operate on electric power provided by the locomotive. Individual meals are prepared by a caterer and frozen on the train. The food later is heated in a modern oven.

Later this year, Amtrak will begin to use the first of its new bi-level Superliner cars, the first long-distance passenger cars to be built in the United States in decades, Ms. Halliday, who prefers that title, said.

Each Superliner will have an electric kitchen with microwave and standard oven, an electric grill, toaster, coffeemaker and warming table. Superliner kitchens will be on the lower level of the dining car, while dining passengers will sit on the upper level.

Turbocafes on the French-designed Turboliners also have modern cooking equipment.

Rabbis, Engineers Harmonize Edicts And Science

EDITOR'S NOTE — In a secluded single-story workshop, rabbis work side by side with engineers to help Jews live modern lives without disobeying God's commandments. The scientific approach to centuries-old Biblical edicts allows man alone, but not machines, to rest on the Sabbath.

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Dov Zioni works in a dingy shop at a machine made mostly of pipes and wires. His job is to manufacture kosher steam.

Zioni is an engineer, but many of his colleagues are rabbis. Immersed in volumes of Talmud and textbooks on science, they are trying to reconcile the demands of the modern world and its technology with the laws set down thousands of years ago in the Bible.

"We are trying to keep Judaism abreast of technology without changing Judaism or impeding science," says Rabbi Levy-Yitzhak Halperin, who heads the project. "Many answers to modern-day dilemmas of science and religion are in the Torah and Halacha."

About 20 per cent of Israel's residents are Orthodox Jews. They follow rules enumerated in the Torah — the five books of Moses — and the Halacha, a large body of commentary by Jewish sages in the 5th century, which is designed to explain and buttress the Torah.

But if the state were to follow the Bible to the letter, it would have to close all businesses, stop all traffic and end all financial transactions each Saturday, the Jewish Sabbath. And that would anger the 80 per cent secular population, many already dismayed by what they think is the disproportionate role played in government by the religious political parties.

Enter Rabbi Halperin's Institute for Science and Halacha, where Dov Zioni works to try to reconcile the difference. One example is kosher steam.

Under Orthodox law, milk and meat cannot be mixed. So at hotels, restaurants and hospitals, wherever steamtables are used to keep food warm, kosher laws are violated if steam from meat dishes touches something with milk in it.

Halacha rules led Zioni to the solution. One rule says kosher food cannot be contaminated by something which is not food. Another maxim says it isn't food if dogs won't eat it.

So Zioni rigged his machine to put pine oil into the water which will become steam. The pine oil steam doesn't affect the taste of the food, but Zioni found that when he condensed the steam, dogs wouldn't touch it.

Presto, kosher steam.

Many of the institute's functions are less esoteric. Its basic role is to avoid violation of two cardinal rules in the Book of Exodus:

—"You shall kindle no fire in all your habitations on the Sabbath day."

—"Whoever does any work on it shall be put to death."

The ban on fire, in its modern interpretation, includes electric lights. Thus a devout Orthodox Jew won't turn on the light on the Sabbath, use a telephone which might kindle a switchboard light, ride an elevator with a mechanism might produce a spark, or drive a vehicle that runs on combustion.

Nor may he ask others to do such things for him, since indirect violations are considered equally sinful.

So institute researchers have come up with a doctor's otoscope — a lamp-like device for examining ears — that works by turning off electricity instead of turning it on. They have devised a clock that checks-in Sabbath workers without using electricity. And they have made a lamp encased in metal slats, which can be turned on before the Sabbath begins at dusk Friday and regulated for the next 24 hours by opening or closing the slats.

The institute has assumed even greater prestige since the May 17 election, because the religious parties are a key part of the government coalition forged by new Prime Minister Menahem Begin.

One of its early acts was to appoint a committee to re-examine the permits handed out liberally by the previous leadership to allow factories to operate on the Sabbath. The committee is expected to demand that some industries shut down on Saturday or use automated equipment that would require no workers.

Nonetheless, many regulations are enforced by municipalities and do not come under the purview of the national government. In the Socialist stronghold of Haifa, for example, buses run on the Sabbath; in religious Jerusalem, they don't. In Tel Aviv, moviehouses have been open on Saturdays ever since a non-religious mayor took over and did not include rabbis in his coalition.

And many Israeli restaurants now serve pork, expressly forbidden by kosher law, listing it on the menu as "white meat." Nor is the once-coveted kosher certificate from the rabbinate a prerequisite for operation.

At present the institute is busy on its biggest job ever — outfitting Jerusalem's Shaarei Zedek hospital, run by religious Jews, so that everything from the bedside buzzers to the electrocardiogram machines will operate without violating the Sabbath.

IONE, Calif. (AP) — Up in the Sierra foothills sits a 120-room castle with 20 fireplaces. Nobody knows what to do with it, and efforts by local townspeople to restore it have hit a dead end.

A few years ago a newspaper article excited some interest in the site, and a couple from Southern California wrote that they would like to be the castle's baron and baroness.

But nobody — the tiny city of Ione, the rural county of Amador 90 miles east of San Francisco or the State of California — has come up with an idea and any money to take care of the castle, built in the 1890s as a state reform school.

"We're at a dead end. It will just fall down eventually, go to pieces. It's all just leading to decay," says Audrey Miller, the mayor of Ione.

The castle's roof is falling in. Many of its windows are broken. Birds, owls, pigeons and even a fox, are the castle's residents.

Years ago the structure's furnishings were removed by the state and some of the material was used in restoration projects elsewhere.

Back in 1958 the state decided to quit using the old structure and knock it down, but local residents signed a petition and fought the move until the state abandoned the idea.

"It has really become something people expect to see there. It would be understandable if it fell down in the middle of the night," said C.A. Terhune, superintendent of the state-run Preston School of Industry which surrounds the castle.

"But to come in with bulldozers and drop it would cause some heavy concerns," said Terhune, who heads the Youth Authority facility for 400 offenders from 17 to 24.

People get excited about possible uses for the castle when they see it, Terhune says, but the cost of revamping the castle always acts as a "major stumbling block."

This stumbling block has finally become too much for Mrs. Miller. She says she will write the local merchants' association to say the save-the-castle committee should be disbanded.

"The place is infested with pigeons and rodents. It's a bad state of affairs," she said.

To vary the flavor of beef pot-roasted with onion, celery and carrot, try adding dill or caraway seed.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Be enthused about whatever it is you have to do today and get good results. Study how to have more concord with fellow workers.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Take time out for amusements that relieve tensions. Do some creative work that involve good friends.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) There are many little tasks to be done at home first before you make more concrete plans for the future. Build a more secure structure for the future in your daily living, pursuits.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Get out to inspiring places and meet interesting persons who can be of help to you intellectually. Handle regular duties in a most efficient way.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study monetary position and try to find ways to improve it. Avoid being overgenerous today. Contact good advisers for assistance.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Analyze yourself accurately and know where to make improvements. Accept the best of social invitations, since you should be very popular now, if living according to planets.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Meditation can help you to live a more inspiring and successful life. Be wary of one who is jealous of you and wants to make trouble.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Getting together with influential persons is wise today. New interests of a personal nature can bring you greater happiness also.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get involved in tasks that will stamp you as an A-1 citizen. Situations develop that show how to get on the good side of higher-ups.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get into studies with clever persons that can give you a new lease on life. Make arrangements for a trip you want to take shortly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Think of new methods for operating in the future. Do whatever brings more security for you and loved ones.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Long talks with closest ties bring fine results and more harmony. Avoid that tendency to fly off the handle with others.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be a precisionist and will go into every little detail meticulously. Plan finest education and add psychology and philosophy to the curricula for best results throughout the lifetime.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, OCT. 10, 1977

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Opportunities are on the rise for you today and you are able to utilize your energy by getting together with associates who have similar vitality and much can be accomplished.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Be sure to handle routine duties in a most efficient way, whether in business or elsewhere. Take time to improve your health.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You are highly magnetic today and can easily gain the goodwill of others. But take no chances with one who is jealous of you.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You can easily please others at this time by being more gracious. Do some entertaining that can prove most pleasureable.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Handling correspondence well is most important at this time, as well as handling other communications. Be careful in motion.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study your monetary situation carefully and know how to invest wisely. Make improvements to your surroundings.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be gracious in your dealings with others and you find you are more successful. Accepting invitations extended to you is wise now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Show increased devotion to family members and get excellent results. Be careful of one who has an eye on your assets.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get in touch with good friends and state your ambitions and gain their cooperation. Think constructively.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A good time to engage in some civic work that can be helpful to you. A higher-up can now give you the backing you need.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Take time and plan the future more intelligently than you have in the past. You can easily make a good impression on others now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Forget all that idealism now and get down to practical matters and much can be accomplished. Keep a close watch on your money.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Be sure to listen to the views of others before you reach any important decisions. Coordinate your efforts well with others.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have to be taught early in life to smile more and to be more interested in the welfare of others, and then there can be true rapport with others. Be sure to give ethical and religious training early in life.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Coast Redwoods Among Oldest

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Widely known as the tallest living things on earth, the Coast Redwoods are also among the oldest.

The species dates back at least 30 million years, and once covered much of North America, reports Rand McNally's "Traveler's Almanac". Today these giants are found only on the moist, temperate coast of central California to southern Oregon.

Cleanliness Is Most Important

NEW YORK (AP) — What's the most important factor for shoppers at a supermarket? Progressive Farmer says that "cleanliness" is in a tie with "all the prices clearly labeled." The latter ranked second in 1975 and 1973. Cleanliness was top-ranked then, too.

Low prices ranked third in 1975 and fifth in 1977.

Judy W. Greene

As your Representative on the Greenville City Council, Judy Greene will work for:

A. Promotion of proper growth patterns for development while keeping in mind the environmental impact on our city.

B. The enhancement of historic preservation of worthy structures remaining in our city. (Example: The old U.S. Post Office building at Third & Evans Streets.)

C. An open-minded approach to transportation needs and the continued support of recreational programs.

D. A city government more responsive to the needs of all citizens without regard to social and/or economic status.

FIREMAN AT WORK . . .A lone fireman sprays water on the burning skeleton of a local business recently. Firemen are ready for action 24 hours a day.

Volunteers Always Ready

Training is the unglamerous side of being a fireman.

But it's required, even of volunteers.

"Firefighting is dangerous. It alway has been, but it's more hazardous than ever now, because of the many and varied building materials and chemicals that one can come into contact with," said Pitt County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner.

"This is National Fire Prevention Week and area people should know of the many hours these unpaid volunteers spend learning how to fight every conceivable kind of fire," Joyner said. He computed the hours spent on training by Pitt County firemen between July 1, 1976 and June 30, 1977 at 20,210 and said he expects this fiscal year's total to be considerably higher.

Pitt County has 682 volunteer firemen. Each of them have to put in at least 36 hours of training a year in order to qualify for firemen's death benefits, insurance and the like. Most firemen actually put in many more hours than this during monthly departmental training sessions, county-wide meets, and area meets, often held at Wilson County Technical Institute for firemen in North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia.

Greenville has the only paid fire department in the county. In it are 55 combat firemen and other prevention and related personnel.

—Carol Tyer

Members of the fire department rebuilt and converted a government surplus truck on loan to the department into a working fire unit, complete with pump and self contained water supply.

PROPER APPROACH . . . Pitt County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner shows a fireman the proper approach to a LP gas fire. The school was held and sponsored by Pitt Technical Institute, who sponsors many of the schools for firemen in Pitt County.

FIRE TRAINING GROUND . . . Practice makes perfect, and for firemen training is a way of life. Here firemen attend a school sponsored by Wilson County Technical Institute, learning the procedures in fighting aircraft fires, left, tanker fires right, and car fires.

We'll put you in your place.

If You Now Rent . . .

Do you feel out of place in that rented house or apartment? Nice enough place to live but just doesn't feel like "home" — right?

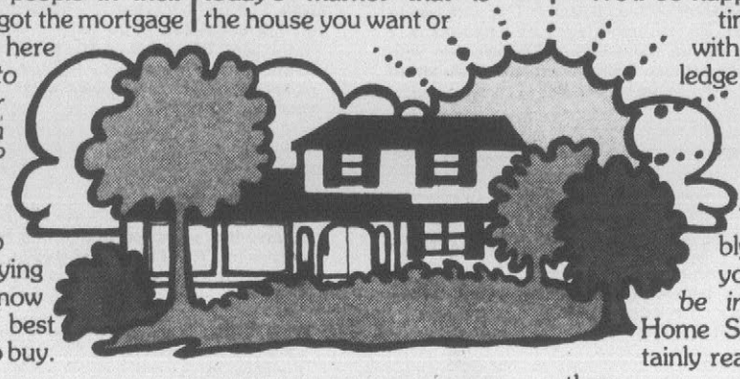

Well, you may be closer to home ownership than you think. Home Savings is out to put a lot of people in their place. We've got the mortgage money right here at Home to finance your new place in life. Why wait?

Don't get unnecessarily caught up in the "delaying game". Right now may be the best time for you to buy.

Housing and land costs will continue to rise. So waiting until you can "afford" to buy can be false reasoning for putting off your goal of home ownership.

It never hurts to ask . . .

If you're a little apprehensive — try this: Pick a home on today's market that is the house you want or one that is comparable in size and style. Come by Home Savings and ask any one of our loan counselors to do a preliminary "work-up" on the costs involved, estimate monthly payments and educate you as to the various requirements.

We'll be happy to take the time and work with you. Knowledge of the process can eliminate any apprehension you may have. You'll probably find that you're ready to be in your place. Home Savings is certainly ready to put you there.

Come to see us.

ABC Presents The World Series; Baseball Fever Begins To Spread

The National League Champion Los Angeles Dodgers-Philadelphia Phillies will meet the American League Champion New York Yankees-Kansas City Royals in the 1977 World Series. The ABC Television Network will televise game 1 on Tuesday, Oct. 11 at 8 p.m.

Each year about this time, half of the nation's reading, listening and viewing population is infected with an acute attack of baseball fever; a malady that has been steadily 'incubating' through the regular 162-game season, and the exciting playoffs between each league's two divisional winners.

Baseball fever runs rampant through the afflicted when pennant winners from the American League and the National League are finally pitted against each other in the best-of-seven series which is baseball's greatest show — the World Series.

Granted, other championship events are older— take the U.S. Open or the Kentucky Derby, for instance. Then, there's the Indianapolis 500, which may draw more fans on a single day. But — the World Series with its best-of-seven format, as established in 1903 — has drawn more people and more money than any other sports playoff in the world.

If it goes the full seven games, the 1977 World Series will be watched by an estimated 115,000,000 television viewers. ABC-TV will present live coverage of the series this year.

In addition to the 'fever,' blood pressure readings vary greatly through the series, which has always been unpredictable at best. Great players have bombed and unknowns have become heroes. Back in 1929, Connie Mack pulled pitched Howard Ehmke out of obscurity and made him a world-beater for a day. Then what happened? Nobody ever heard of him again. Walter Johnson, one of the greatest pitchers of all time, never had a good series, while the legendary Babe Ruth was almost always at his best.

There have been upsets and fizzles and Cinderella teams. The 1950 Phillies, the 'Whiz Kids' of baseball, lost four straight in the Series. The 1962 Yankees, outscored, outhit and outpitched, beat the San Francisco Giants in seven games, and in 1967 the Boston Red Sox almost pulled the impossible dream out of the hat. Ninth place in '66, the Boston Red Sox fought back brilliantly to win the penant the following year and battled the following year the Cardinals through seven games before losing out.

Who will star on the stage that's shaped like a diamond; and what miracle will be performed? The players are waiting in the wings. The 1977 World Series is about to begin.

And don't worry...nobody's succumbed to baseball fever yet.

Dean Martin Stars In Western Comedy

There have been Traditional Western movies and anti-Westerns: "Something Big," airing on "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" Oct. 15, 9 to 11:10 p.m., on NBC-TV, could best be termed as a 'Sort-Of...Kinda' Comical' Western. Dean Martin stars as a sardonic and roguish bandit who encounters a series of unexpected complications when he attempts a daring robbery that he feels will make him rich for life. Brian Keith and Honor Blackman also star.

Martin portrays Joe Baker, who, in 1870, leads a band of renegades in a plan to plunder the hideout of another bandit, Emilio Estevez, rumored to hold the richest cache of stolen treasures on the continent.

Baker hopes to establish himself as a wealthy man and return East where his fiancee has long waited their planned marriage. But in staging an attack on the well-fortified stronghold of Estevez, Baker realizes he will need a high-powered gatling gun — that's where his problems begin.

When he kidnaps the wife of a cavalry colonel, hoping to trade her for the gun, he becomes the object of an intense Army manhunt.

NOSTALGIC EVENT — Appropriately costumed in her bobby sox, Annette Funicello will be a host of the two-hour "Big Event" presentation, "Dick Clark's Good Ol' Days: From Bobby Sox to Bikinis," a nostalgic look at the late 50s and early 60s, on Tuesday, Oct. 11 (8-10 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Stars Take Nostalgic Look Back

Thirty-four stars and celebrities will take a nostalgic then-and-now look at themselves and their world of the late 1950s and early '60s in "The Big Event" presentation, "Dick Clark's Good Ol' Days: From Bobby Sox to Bikinis," Tuesday, Oct. 11, 8 to 10 p.m., on NBC-TV.

Frankie Avalon and Annette Funicello will host the special, which stars Edd "Kookie" Byrnes, Freddie Cannon, Joey Dee, Bo Diddley, Dion, Fabian, Connie Francis, Lesley Gore, The Kingston Trio, Robert Klien, Anne Meara, Martha Reeves and The Vandellas, Mort Sahl, The Shirelles and Jerry Stiller.

There will be special appearances by Dr. Joyce Brothers, The Captain and Tennille, Angela Cartwright, Noreen Corcoran, Johnny Crawford, Elinor Donahue, Evel Knievel, Snooky Lanson, Mickey Mantle, Jerry Mathers, Larry Mathews, Cubby O'Brien, Ken Osmond, O.J. Simpson, Connie Stevens, Brian Wilson and the Beach Boys. Clark, whose "American Bandstand" teenage dance series goes back to the late '50s, also will appear.

Highlights of the special include an opening beach party production number reminiscent of the period; a fads and fashions montage; and a nostalgia quiz, involving a look at TV kid stars as they were then and as they are now.

Avalon and Funicello also perform, singing a "Fifties Romance" medley, and then there's a flashback with Annette singing "Tall Paul," which she reprises, while Avalon sings "Venus."

Others heard in song medleys include Gore ("It's My Party, "You Don't Own Me"); Fabian ("Turn Me Loose," "Tiger"); The Shirelles ("Will You Still Love Me Tomorrow," "Dedicated To the One I Love"); Dion ("Wanderer," "Runaround Sue," "Ruby"); Reeves ("Heat Wave," "Dancing in the Street"); and Cannon (''Tallahassie Lassie,'' "Palisades Park").

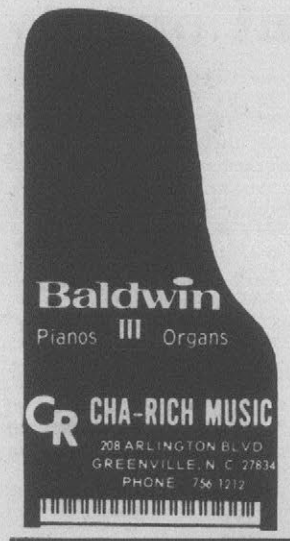

PEARL'S WISDOM

Pearl Bailey has been signed to guest star as the mother of cast regular Ted Lange in an upcoming episode of "The Love Boat." Set to guest star in the same episode is Tracey Reed.

"The Love Boat" stars Gavin MacLeod, Lauren Tewes, Bernie Kopell, Fred Grandy and Ted Lange as captain and key crew members of a luxury cruise ship.

Schaap Joins NBC

A sportscast by veteran sports journalist Dick Schaap is now a regular feature of the weekend editions of "NBC Nightly News."

A rundown of the day's sports events, and sports features when time permits, will be carried in a three-to-four-minute segment of the program on Saturdays and Sundays. Schaap will update the material, when necessary, for the West Coast area.

Joe Bartelme, Vice President, News Programs, NBC News, said: "Schaap is eminently qualified to give our viewers the latest word on sports and the explanation of why things happened as they did. In a journalism career of 28 years, he has spent about 20 of these covering sports. His intention is to make his sportscast interesting not only to sports buffs, but to those who are not."

Schaap has been sports reporter for "News Center 4" on WNBC-TV, the Network's station in New York, since June 9, 1971. Before that, he was an editor, columnist and author of national repute.

He was Sports Editor of Newsweek in 1961-62 and Senior Editor in 1963. In 1964 he was City Editor of The New York Herald Tribune and in 1965-66, a syndicated columnist for that newspaper.

Schaap is the author of 20 books. His "Instant Replay," about Jerry Kramer and the Green Bay Packers, became a best seller. Other books dealing with sports personalities include "I Can't Wait Until Tomorrow" (Joe Namath), "The Perfect Game" (Tom Seaver) and "The Open Man" (Dave Debusschere). He has also written books on subjects outside the sports field.

Student Spurs Strike In NBC Presentation

A student reporter broadcasts an inaccurate story on a school's closed circuit TV program and spurs a student strike, in "A Piece of Cake," a "Special Treat" presentation Tuesday, Oct. 11, 4 to 5 p.m., on NBC-TV.

Following a series of problems at the school, the principal, Mr. Elgin, institutes the closed circuit TV service. During one of the newscasts, reporter Star Shimal passes along unsupported gossip that student Ronnie Bennett, who has been missing for several days, ran away because his English teacher, Mr. Johnson, flunked him and thus made him ineligible to play on the school basketball team.

The gossip is fanned into a confrontation, with Ronnie's father and the students demanding Mr. Johnson's removal. To back up their demands the students go on strike, bringing the professional TV press to the scene.

TV reporter Jerry Hudson questions Star and shows her that her reporting was not backed up by facts. Star digs further into the matter and learns that she has done Mr. Johnson a great injury.

Ossie Davis, who plays Mr. Elgin, has appeared on Broadway in such plays as "Anna Lucasta," "Green Pastures," "A Raisin in the Sun," and "Purlie Victorious" which he also wrote. Some of his films are "The Scalphunters," "The Slaves," "The Hill," "The Cardinal" and "Purlie Victorious." His TV credits include appearances on "Teacher, Teacher," "The Defenders," "Bonanza," "Name of the Game," "Hawaii Five-0," and in the TV movie "King," which will be presented later this season.

Al Freeman, who plays Hudson, has had a regular role for five years on "One Life to Live," a daytime serial.

Probes Jobless Picture

A look at the problems of jobless blacks in Little Rock, Ark., a city which reflects the national unemployment picture, will be presented in "I'm Gonna Make It" on "Lamp Unto My Feet," Sunday, Oct. 9, 10, to 10:30 a.m., on CBS-TV.

Producer Chalmers Dale notes that 7 percent of the total work force, 14.5 percent of blacks and 40 percent of minority youth have no jobs, adding that "those who have jobs often stereotype the unemployed as lazy, willing to live on charity and welfare. Those stereotypes don't hold when we look more closely at unemployed people."

Albert Finney (c), who received an Oscar nomination as Best Actor for his role as the eccentric but indomitable sleuth Hercule Poirot, is assisted by Martin Balsam (l), as an Italian train executive, and George Coulouris (r), playing a Greek doctor, in the questioning of a suspect in "Murder on the Orient Express," the smash hit motion picture that received six Oscar nominations. The film airs as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," Oct. 9 (9-11:45 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Whitman Stars In Disney Film

A proud cougar's peaceful existence is threatened by a professional hunter, in "Run, Cougar, Run," on "The Wonderful World of Disney" Sunday, Oct. 9, 7 to 9 p.m., on NBC-TV. (In the event that NBC telecasts baseball play-off coverage, "Run, Cougar, Run" will be replaced by "The Hound Who Thought He Was a Raccoon." If a National League play-off game is played, 'Disney' will be presented from 8 to 9 p.m.)

Stuart Whitman stars as Etio, a gentle-mannered shepherd in "Run, Cougar, Run," who tries to save Seeta, a female mountain lion, from a hunting party arranged by Hugh McRae, a professoinal lion hunter.

Operating from the ranch of Etio's employer, Joe Bickley, McRae hopes to trap a lion and have it waiting for his clients when they arrive. He and Bickley's hired hand, Barney, run down Seeta's mate and shot him with a tranquilizer, causing him to miscalculate a jump and fall to his death.

Etio pleads with McRae not to kill the female cougar, but the huntsman refuses. Using a baited trap, McRae snares Seeta, and puts her in a cage.

This starring role marked the 45th motion picture in a 25-year career for Whitman, who admits that he "just kinda drifted into acting."

A physical, outdoorsy guy who is always tanned, Whitman never dreamt of becoming an actor. Initially he set out to make his mark in the sports world, but an injury ended his football days while he was in college, and he was advised to try acting.

He studied drama very seriously for two years, gained experience in stage plays and finally landed a contract at Universal where he played "hundreds of unimportant bit parts." His first important break came with the title role in "Johnny Trouble," which led to many substantial motion pictures. He was also nominated for an Oscar as Best Actor because of his acting in the 1961 film "The Mark."

In 1968, Whitman decided he needed a change and moved to Europe where he made three films.

Cinderella Story Involves 'Kojak'

Tara Buckman is doing her part to keep the Cinderella story alive.

A year ago, she was waiting tables in a Norfolk, Va., hotel, and today she has a long-term contract with Universal Studios, and she will be seen on "Kojak," Sunday, Oct. 9 (10 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV), as a daughter of a policeman's widow who operates a restaurant that is a popular hangout for New York's finest.

Miss Buckman remembers vividly the day that changed her life one short year ago. "I was waiting tables and got into a discussion with a customer," she recalls. "He asked me what I wanted to do with my life. I told him I wanted to be an actress but didn't know how to do it. He then told me he was a motion picture director. I bursted into tears. It was the first time I had the opportunity to ask somebody for advice on how to become an actress."

The customer was director James Goldstone, who was in Norfolk scouting for the film "Rollercoaster." When he returned to shoot the movie, Miss Buckman called and asked if she would visit the set, "just to watch."

"I was really surprised when he said I'd learn more if I was acting, and he gave me a part," says Miss Buckman.

Due to Goldstone's and the studio's reaction to her initial work, Miss Buckman got a featured role in the film, and a contract with Universal followed.

Kenny Rogers Is Up For Award As 'Entertainer Of The Year'

Kenny Rogers sure has known his ups and downs. And ups and downs. And ups.

"I've been around a long time," he says. "I thought I knew all about ups and downs, but 'Lucille' is the sweetest up I've ever known."

Up, up, up, up. On the 11th annual Country Music Association Awards this year, Rogers is up for Entertainer of the Year, up for Single of the Year ("Lucille"), up for Album of the Year ("Kenny Rogers"), and up for Male Vocalist of the year. ("Lucille," itself, written by Roger Bowling and Hal Bynum, is up for Song of the Year.)

The Country Music Association Awards ceremonies will air Monday, Oct. 10, at 9:30 p.m., on CBS-TV.

One of eight children reared in Houston, Texas, Rogers discovered his love of music in the church choir. By the time he was in high school, he knew he wanted music to be his life, so he formed a group of school pals into The Scholars.

"In those days," he recalls, "groups got all the girls. So we bought wine-colored dinner jackets, started singing 'doo-wah' songs and immediately started getting the girls."

His first up, in 1957, was "Crazy Feeling."

"There I was, 19 years old, with a million-selling single. The only thing was, I didn't have a clue what to do as a follow-up. I had a standing ovation without an encore."

Several years of relative obscurity followed until '67, when Rogers had his second up, with the First Edition's hit, "Ruby (Don't Take Your Love to Town)." They also had seven other gold records, appeared on more than 70 TV shows, and had their own TV series, "Rollin'." Eventually, though, their success declined.

Last year, Rogers embarked on a career as a solo performer, and he's in the foreground once again. This year, 20 years after "Crazy Feeling" and 10 years after "Ruby," Rogers skyrocketed to the top with "Lucille." The song hit the top 10 on both the pop and country charts.

There's another Lucille in Rogers' life, his mother, Lucille Rogers, who will have the final word:

"I'm truly proud of all my sons. Kenny may sing, but my other boys have jobs Kenny couldn't do — probably because he never worked a day in his life. He always just kept on singing."

ON FATEFUL CRUISE — Jane Seymour plays the social director and Frank Converse is one of the passengers on a cruise ship on which some members of the crew succumb to a mysterious disease in "Killer on Board" on "NBC Monday Night Movie," Oct. 10 (9-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Bea Arthur Guest Stars On 'Laugh In'

As special guest star, Emmy winner Bea Arthur (Outstanding Lead Actress in a Comedy Series for "Maude") hears confessions as Mother Ann, the first woman priest, and cameo guests Henry Fonda, Roger ("James Bond") hears constars Seals and Crofts, tennis champ Ilie Nastase and Rodney Allen Rippy trade quips with the cast, in the second of the new "Laugh-In" specials Monday, Oct. 10, 8 to 9 p.m., on NBC-TV.

Cast regular Bill Rafferty slips into church, sits in a pew behind the priest, who is garbed in clerical hat and robe, and begins to confess his transgressions to Father Timothy, not knowing he has been replaced by Mother Ann.

In another segment, Arthur stars on both halves of a split screen. On one side, gorgeously gowned and coiffed, she sings "I Am Woman"; on the other, in rumpled bathrobe and shower cap, she does the kitchen chores, in the best tradition of a housewife in TV commercials.

Arthur also swings and sways at the cocktail party and does "The News" in tandem with Fonda. The latter makes straight men out of most of the show's cast and pops in an out of the joke wall. Jim Seals and Dash Crofts perform as standup comics for the first time on TV. Moore and Nastase are mobbed by the gals of the company in a sequence of situations. But it's little Rodney who gets treatment fit for a king — king of hamburger commercials.

Stage, television and motion picture actress Bea Arthur has rarely appeared as a guest in TV comedy since taking on the role of "Maude." Her other TV credits include appearances with George Gobel, Steve Allen, Sid Caesar, Jack Parr, Art Carney, and with Wayne and Shuster on "The Ed Sullivan Show."

She co-starred with Lucille Ball in the movie version of "Mame," re-creating her Broadway role. Additional movie credits include "Lovers and Other Strangers" and "That Kind of Woman."

ANOTHER USTINOV HEARD FROM

Pavla Ustinov, daughter of famed character actor Peter Ustinov, has been signed to a guest starring role on "The San Pedro Beach Bums."

Deadly Virus Strikes

Fear and panic sweep a cruise ship when a mysterious, deadly virus is discovered in "Killer on Board," an NBC World Premiere movie starring Oscar winner Beatrice Straight (Best Supporting Actress for "Network") on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies," Oct. 10, 9 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV.

The drama also stars Claude Akins, George Hamilton, Frank Converse, Jane Seymour, Susan Howard and Patty Duke Astin.

Dr. Paul Jeffries, a passenger, becomes alarmed when crew members and passengers begin dying from what is diagnosed by the ship's doctor as a "bug."

Avellini's Burden

The 1976 Chicago Bears surprised, perhaps startled, NFL watchers by staying in playoff contention until December, before posting a 7-7 record against a devastating schedule.

The Bears face the multi-talented Los Angeles Rams Monday, Oct. 10, at 9 p.m. on ABC's "Monday Night Football." It will be a tough challenge for Chicago's quarterback Bob Avellini as the Rams were rated the No. 1 team in rushing defense and pass interceptions (33) last season.

Avellini came to the Bears as a sixth-round draft pick from the University of Maryland. While at College Park he led the Terrapins to an 8-3 record and their first undisputed Atlantic Coast Conference Championship as a senior. The Bears were so impressed with his performance in the Senior Bowl, they drafted him. Although four quarterbacks were taken ahead of him in the 1975 draft, he commented: "I intend to play like a first-string player."

At the start of the '77 season, Avellini had thrown for over 200 yards four times and had won nine of his 18 consecutive starts. Head Coach Jack Pardee has praised his courage, leadership abilities and strong right arm.

However, last season was a disappointment for Avellini. He suffered injuries to his left knee and right shoulder, elbow and wrist. Completing just 43 percent of his passes, he tossed a total of 15 interceptions.

If the Bears are to improve their fortunes this season, the burden lies primarily with Avellini and the quarterbacking.

During the off-season, they acquired Mike Phipps from the Cleveland Browns and signed former Heisman Trophy winner Pat Sullivan to bolster the quarterback position.

"BLACK BEAUTY" ON NBC-TV

The family classic "Black Beauty," by Ann Sewell, has been adapted for television and will air as a five-part miniseries on NBC-TV during the 1978-79 season.

Pryor's Special Rebroadcasts With Top Guest Personalities

The Washington Post called him "one of the hottest and most sought after talents in movies, television and records."

Newsday said, "He excels as a performer, someone with the ability to create a character in just a few minutes."

Bob Thomas of Associated Press wrote, "...1977 is shaping up as the year of Richard Pryor."

The award-winning writer and performer in the motion picture, nightclub and recording areas, now has his own television series, and his first TV show, "The Richard Pryor Special" — which aired last May — will be rebroadcast Tuesday, Oct. 11, 10 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV.

Pryor's joined by special guest star John Belushi, one of the Not Ready for Prime Time Players on "NBC's Saturday Night," and other guests stars including LaWanda Page of "Sanford and Son," Shirley Hemphill of the "What's Happening?" series, writer-poet Maya Angelous, actor Glynn Thurman, comedian Tim Thomerson and the singing group, the Pips.

Highlights of the hour include a "Religious Telethon" sketch in which Pryor portrays the divine James L. White, a money-hungry spiritualist.

In another sketch, he appears as Idid Amin, making a rebuttal to an NBC editorial.

In musical highlights, Pryor and Belushi, as Sonny Jackson and Mississippi Henry, sing the blues; and the Pips do "Midnight Train to Georgia," "I've Got to Use My Imagination" and "I Heard It Through the Grapevine."

Richard Pryor headlines his own comedy-variety special "The Richard Pryor Special," to be rebroadcast Tuesday, Oct. 11 (10-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Pryor's motion picture achievements began with the role of Piano Man opposite Diana Ross in "Lady Sings the Blues" and include comic and dramatic roles in such films as "Hit," "Car Wash," "Silver Streak" and "Greased Lightning."

Comedy albums include "Was It Something I Said?", "That Nigger's Crazy," "The Bicentennial Nigger" and "Richard Pryor's Greatest Hits" (soon to be released).

For television, Pryor wrote scripts for "Sanford and Son" and "The Flip Wilson Show" and helped write two TV specials for Lily Tomlin as well as his own May special.

Following the special, he entered into an exclusive five-year personal services contract with NBC-TV. In addition to his series, he will star in two specials each year.

Clavell's 'Shogun' Filmed

"Shogun," James Clavell's best-selling novel of passion and intrigue set in the period of conflict when East met West in 17th century Japan, will be presented on NBC-TV as one of the biggest mini-series — a minimum of 15 hours — in the history of television.

"Shogun," to be prepared over two years, will begin production at international locations next spring. The cast will include 40 characters.

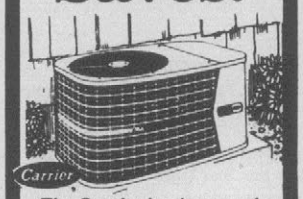

"Shogun" depicts a nation seething with turmoil and excitement as it moves from the medieval world into the modern. Set in the 1600s, it is a saga of the Orient, the dramatic story of how a westerner comes to be changed by his exposure to an alien, exotic culture.

According to Deanne Barkley, Vice President, Motion Pictures for TV and Miniseries, "Shogun's" epic scope is ideally suited to television.

"This is one of the most challenging projects ever undertaken," she said. "The scope of Clavell's 1100-page novel can only be done properly on television — it's too great to be done as a feature film."

Clavell wrote two previous best sellers, "King Rat" and "Taipan." He also wrote, produced and directed "To Sir With Love," "Five Gates to Hell," "Walk Like a Dragon" and "The Sweet and the Bitter." He wrote the screenplay for "The Great Escape."

Agatha's Classic Debuts

Agatha Christie's classic murder mystery, "Murder on the Orient Express" (1974), the smash hit motion picture that received six Academy Award nominations and won an Oscar for Ingrid Bergman as Best Supporting Actress, makes its televison debut as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," Sunday, Oct. 9, 9 p.m., on ABC-TV.

The star-studded cast of this dazzling detective thriller includes Albert Finney as the indomitable, if eccentric sleuth, Hercule Poirot; Lauren Bacall as a tough American divorcee; Ingrid Bergman as a repressed missionary; Wendy Hiller as a wizened Russian countess traveling with her dour German maid, Rachel Roberts; Sean Connery and Vanessa Redgrave as a bristly British officer and his companion; Michael York and Jacqueline Bisset as handsome Hungarian aristocrats, and Richard Widmark as a crusty American businessman attended by valet John Gielgud and secretary Anthony Perkins.

'Unwed Father' Airs As Movie

Joseph Bottoms was asked: "What would you do if you were confronted with the situation you are faced with in 'Unwed Father'—being asked by your girlfriend to give up for adoption the illegitimate baby you have fathered?"

The 19-year-old father gave the question his full attention, turning it over in his mind, examining all aspects of it, and probing it in depth before he replied.

"I don't know," he said slowly. "It's something I can't answer with any degree of positiveness because there are too many things to consider, too many variables. All I can say is that I'm grateful not having to decide such a vital question in my own life."

The decision motivates the plot of "Unwed Father," the "CBS Late Movie," on Monday, Oct. 10, 11:30 p.m. on CBS-TV, with Bottoms and Kay Lenz starring as high school students (Peter and Vicky) who differ on how to solve their mutual problem.

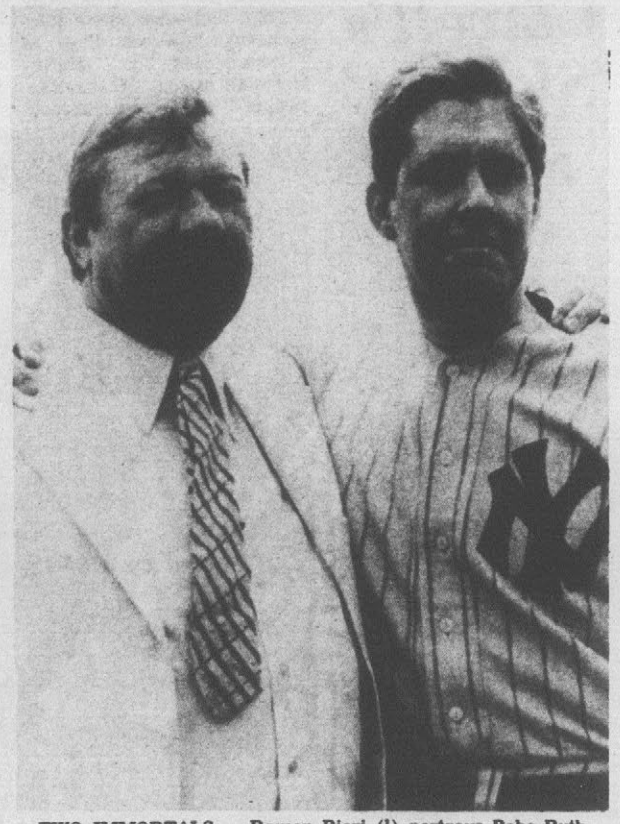

In the story Peter fights Vicky and her family in order to adopt the baby. Vicky, who refuses to marry the young father of her child, thinks it's only fair to the baby to have it adopted by a prosperous young couple who can give it the comforts and advantages that go with affluence. Peter believes that a father's love — his — is more important to the child than material advantages.

Kay Lenz didn't hesitate when asked what she would do if faced with a problem of such urgency.

"I'd keep the baby," she said firmly. "I can't understand how any mother could do otherwise. No matter what the circumstances, I couldn't — I wouldn't — give my baby away to strangers."

In "Unwed Father," both principals are given full opportunity to explain why they think their decision is best for the child. From the individual points of view, each thinks he or she is making a sacrifice in behalf of the child — one by keeping it, the other by giving it away.

The question is eventually decided in the courts, but the Judge's opinion is a climax of the story, not the ending. The surprising conclusion of the movie leaves it to the viewer to determine which of the two young people is morally right. It is a decision that would try the judgement of Solomon.

TWO IMMORTALS — Ramon Bieri (l) portrays Babe Ruth and Edward Hermann stars as Lou Gehrig, two of the New York Yankees' greatest stars in "A Love Affair: The Eleanor and Lou Gehrig Story," a World Premiere drama to be colorcast on "The Big Event," Sunday, Oct. 9 (9-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Indian Ties Bind

Ronny Cox is one actor blessed by having the "Indian sign" placed on him from his earliest beginnings.

Born in Cloudcroft, New Mexico, just 15 miles from the Mescalero Apache Reservation, the tall, sandy-haired freckled-faced actor's looks belie his own unmistakable Indian ancestry that stems from his great-grandmother, a full-blooded Cherokee.

Cox is perhaps best remembered for his leading role as the father with all the right answers in "Apple's Way" on the Network. However, he's hard-pressed for any answers in his current starring role as a young doctor caught up in a tense drama as he fights to preserve the life of a disturbed teen-ager Indian girl, in the two-hour film, "The Girl Called Hatter Fox," airing Wednesday, Oct. 12, at 9 p.m. on CBS-TV. Interestingly enough, the film's story takes place, and was filmed in part, in Santa Fe and Albuquerque, New Mexico, not too far from where Cox was raised among the Indians.

Cox was graduated from Eastern New Mexico University in 1963 with a degree in drama and speech correction and then made his way to Washington, D.C., where he performed with the Arena Stage for six years. His Broadway acting debut came, in 1969, in the powerful play, "Indians."

Gehrigs Featured In Moving Story

One of the most moving stories in the annals of sports, the love affair of baseball immortal Lou Gehrig and his wife — from the days of glory with Babe Ruth to his losing battle with an incurable disease — will be dramatized in "A Love Affair: The Eleanor and Lou Gehrig Story."

An NBC World Premiere movie starring Blythe Danner and Edward Hermann in the title roles with a cast including Patricia Neal and Jane Wyatt, the fact-based drama will be presented as "The Big Event" Sunday, Oct. 9, 9 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV.

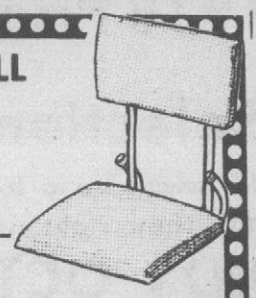

Already an established star with the New York Yankees, the shy Gehrig is introduced to the outgoing Eleanor at a party. Though Lou travels with the team, their romance blossoms as they write to each other constantly.

However, Gehrig's possessive mother (Patricia Neal) proves to be a formidable obstacle, first to their marriage and later to their happiness. Nevertheless, they succeed in having a happy marriage. Then, on his 36th birthday, Lou learns that he has amyotrophic lateral sclerosis.

The screenplay by Blanche Hanalis was based on the book "My Luck and I" by Eleanor Gehrig and Joseph Durso. The movie was filmed aboard the Queen Mary in Long Beach, Calif. and at Los Angeles area locations.

A REDD LINE

Redd Foxx is a firm believer in proper nutrition and regular exercise. To emphasize his point, Redd noted: "If you don't believe me, ask John Amos. After he starred as Kunta Kinte in 'Roots' he started exercising and he grew back his foot."

ABC Special Is A Touching Story

"Hewitt's Just Different," a sensitive story in which children cope with the problem of mental retardation, airs as the season premiere of the award-winning "ABC Afterschool Specials" series, Wednesday, Oct. 12, 4:30 to 5:30 p.m.

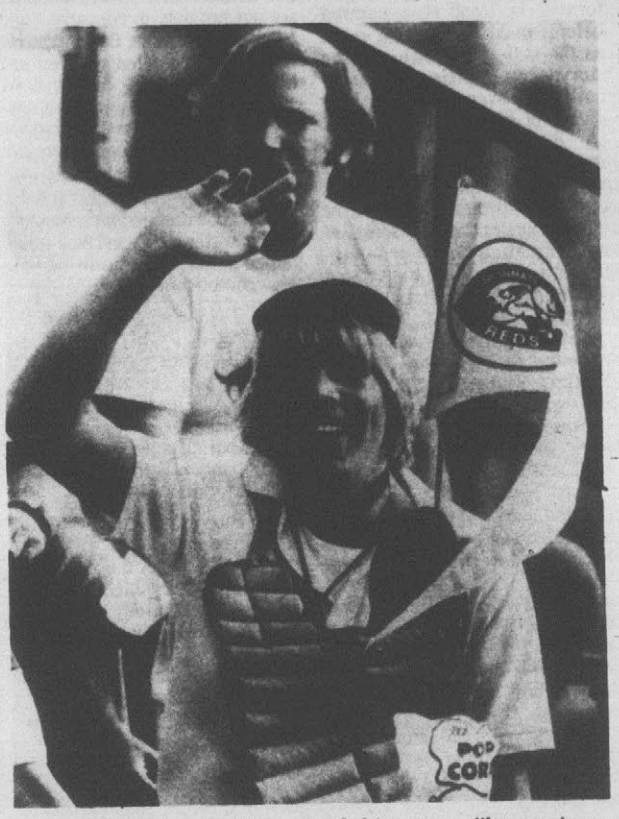

In the production, Hewitt Calder, a retarded teenager with a passion for baseball, helps his 12-year-old next door neighbor win a spot on the baseball team through his coaching and tips on how to throw a knuckleball. Perry Lang stars as 16-year-old Hewitt, and Moosie Drier portrays his younger friend, Willie Arthur.

Resulting from two years of development, "Hewitt's Just Different" provides parents and youngsters alike with a sensitive insight into the problem of retardation.

After an unsuccessful attempt to make the team's pitching squad, Willie Arthur discovers that his new neighbor Hewitt Calder, though retarded, has a fine understanding of the skills of the sport. Hewitt agrees to be Willie's coach and helps him develop the pitching prowess he needs. During their practice sessions, Willie grows to respect Hewitt's abilities and to understand his different limitations and behavior.

Once on the team, however, Willie is taunted by his teammates for befriending a "reetard" and, tired of constantly defending Hewitt, he chooses to ignore him to appease the other boys. Then, when a sudden mishap befalls Willie, Hewitt's loyalty and compassion teach all the youngsters a valuable lesson in friendship.

Also appearing in "Hewitt's Just Different" are Russell Johnson and Peggy McCay as Hewitt's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Calder; Peter Brandon and Gloria Stroock as Willie's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur; Doney Oatman as Willie's sister, Tally, and Mike Luther as Tally's boyfriend, Frank; Stack Pierce as Andrus, the baseball team's coach; and Christopher Maleki, Jarrod Johnson, and Tom Gulager as Palumbo, Goose and Nubby, respectively, members of the team.

Perry Lang plays Hewitt, a retarded teenager with a passion for baseball, who gets understanding and friendship from his peers when he rescues one of them from a construction site excavation on the "ABC Afterschool Special," "Hewitt's Just Different" airing Wednesday, Oct. 12 (4:30-5:30 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Premiering with "Hewitt's Just Different," the "ABC Afterschool Specials" series returns for its sixth season with six new presentations as well as encore showings of last season's highly acclaimed programs. The hour-long specials for children deal with themes that encourage youngsters to understand more about themselves, their relations with family members and others, and contemporary problems that touch their lives.

"POLICE STORY" SIGNS STARS

Chad Everett, Warren Oates and Sandy Dennis have been signed to star in "The Mouth Marines," a two-hour "Police Story" special.

LUCY'S THE RINGMASTER

Lucille Ball will be the ringmaster for "The Second Annual Circus of the Stars," a two-hour celebrity circus special to air on CBS-TV.

Spirited Battle

"The Girl Called Hatter Fox," a two-hour world premiere motion picture, starring Ronny Cox, Joanelle Romero and Conchata Ferrell, dramatizes the mystical union that binds a young doctor to a terrified teen-age Indian girl who is locked in a spiritual death struggle between her Indian heritage and the hard realities of the white man's world, on Wednesday, Oct. 12, 9 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV.

The film stars Ronny Cox as Dr. Teague Summer and introduces teen-age newcomer Joanelle Romero in the title role of Hatter Fox.

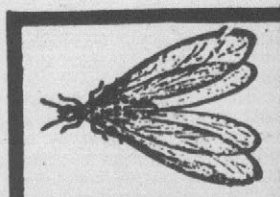

Dr. Summer first sees the 17-year-old firebrand in a local New Mexico jail where she had been placed for distrubing the peace. He has been called in to administer to another young Indian prisoner, when suddenly he's attacked and stabbed in the back by an agitated and fearful Hatter Fox for no apparent reason.

The young incorrigible is then sent to the state reformatory for girls for her attack on Summer. There, she is placed in solitary confinement and in a strait-jacket to control her wild behavior.

In desperation, the reformatory administrator, Mr. Winton, calls in Dr. Summer in the hope he might establish some link with the disturbed girl. He and a staff psychiatrist reason her attack on Summer might have induced some special relationship in her mind and that perhaps he might establish a psychological rapport.

Dr. Summer is reluctant but finally agrees to leave his post with the Bureau of Indian Affairs and take up residence in the reformatory. What follows is a titanic emotional struggle as the young doctor and the frightened, stubborn Indian girl clash in a desperate battle of wits heightened by supernatural over-tones.

Conchata Ferrell plays Nurse Rhineheart who aids Dr. Summer in his fight to free Hatter Fox from her "devils," and John Durren portrays a simpleton guard in solitary confinement.

Debbie Phillips Stars In Debut

Seventeen-year-old Debbie Phillips, who has never performed in front of a camera before, makes her acting debut as the star of her own real-life story — an inspiring account of how she overcame the handicaps of a serious birth defect to become a champion equestrienne and an all-around sports participant — in "I Can," the premiere episode of "The Winners," a new series of monthly half-hour dramatic specials aimed at the young viewer, Thursday, Oct. 13, 4 to 4:30 p.m., on CBS-TV.

This special marks another accomplishment for Debbie Phillips — her acting debut. She was selected to play the demanding role herself after some 25 young actresses were auditioned for her part.

Born with one leg less than half the length of the other, and an under-sized foot where the knee would normally be, Debbie spent several of her first years in traction and underwent two painful operations before she was seven years old. She walks with a heavy metal leg brace which is strapped around her waist.

Blessed with a supportive family, dedicated doctors and a natural enthusiasm for athletics, Debbie made a very early decision that she would not let her handicap keep her out of athletics. Encouraged by her sports-oriented parents and her brother and sister, Debbie set out not only to compete, but to excel, in those fields which are difficult challenges even to her normal peers.

At 17, besides her triumph as a horsewoman, a medal-winning skier and a competitive tennis player. Debbie swims like the proverbial fish, drives both a snowmobile and a motorcycle, water skis, and has now added acting to her growing list of accomplishments.

But Debbie's special love is for horses. "I Can" focuses on one of Debbie's experiences in equestrian competition, wherein she learns to cope not only with her physical handicap, but also with the emotional trials of growing up and facing the adult world.

Bob Purvey, a young veteran of television, motion pictures and the theater in the U.S. and Britain, plays Debbie's brother, Flip, who trains and encourages her. Connie Hunter and Dick Gjonola play her parents, and Jim Kester is featured as her friend, Jeff. Also appearing in "I Can" is George Cooper as Dr. Lindman, Gwen Van Dam as Mrs. Lacey, a horse show judge who puts Debbie through some difficult emotional paces, and Mary Matthews as a handicapped skier.

Debbie Phillips, a 17-year-old with a birth defect, plays herself in the story of her determination to overcome her "difference" and become an equestrian champion, in "I Can" the premiere episode of "The Winners," a monthly series of dramatic specials aimed at the young viewer, to be broadcast Thursday, Oct. 13 (4-4:30 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Pike's Peeks

By Charlie Pike
TV Showtime Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD — Roy Clark returned to his hometown, Meherrin, Va., Oct. 7 and 8, to tape a half-hour pilot appropriately titled, "Going Home." His family and close friends will be featured in the show which is expected to be syndicated later this year with Ed McMahon as host. "I've been discovering my own personal roots," Roy said with that famous smile.

The younger set may remember Tony De Franco, who is 18 now. He had a major hit record four years ago but was then ordered to quit singing by medics because of a throat infection. Well, he returned to a standing-room-only crowd at the L.A. recreational park called Magic Mountain, and in the aftermath has been signed to host an upcoming ABC one-hour variety show.

Speaking of appearing on TV, it may seem hard to believe but Anson Williams of "Happy Days" will appear in 27 shows, all of which will be taped within a two-week period — and he'll do all of them in Hollywood. A bulk of them are game show guest appearances, which are usually taped in one five or six-hour taping session during an evening.

Perhaps it was predictable, but Brenda Vaccaro is now being seen socially with actor Don Stroud, who is the guy she started dating shortly after her break-up with Michael Douglas and just before her short-lived marriage.

It may not be commonly known, but like Farrah Fawcett-Majors and Jaclyn Smith, Cheryl Ladd is also a native of Texas — Kountze to be exact, population 1,700. Well, 1,010 have become members of her first fan club. No one's sure what happened to the other 690.

After completing 11 shows scheduled for production, Donny and Marie Osmond have gone on a six-week hiatus. Both frankly admit being "a little homesick" for Utah, and they will enjoy a vacation at home with their family and friends; record a new album, and perform at concerts.

. John Pleshette, who played the title role in "The Trial of Lee Harvey Oswald," says, "I don't mind being asked personal questions — but this is the only answer I've had to give so far: yes, I am related to Suzanne Pleshette, we are second cousins, our grandfathers were brothers."

'Little Dynamo'

At eight-years-old he owns a record company and a million-dollar smile that has been mass-produced onto T-shirts, sweatshirts, talking dolls, coloring books, crayons and jig-saw puzzles.

He's been a superstar for half his life — ever since he tackled the jumbo jack on the tube and increased Jack-in-the-Box sales more than $140 million.

The credits don't stop there. His movie debut was in "Blazing Saddles." Rodney Music has produced a hit single — "Take Life a Little Easier," and Rodney has been a hit on almost every talk show, upstaging personalities ranging from movie star James Garner to Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley.

The Rodney Allen Rippy operation, sweeping the nation faster than his accountant can handle, has their namesake guest-starring in "50 cents First Half Hour, $1.75 All Day," the episode airing on "Police Story" Thursday Oct. 13 at 11:30 p.m.

Six 'Just For Laughs'

"Just for Laughs," six one-hour comedy specials produced by two of television's most successful merchants of outrageous humor — "Laugh-In's" George Schlatter and veteran producer, Hal Kanter — will be presented on NBC-TV during the 1977-78 season.

The first special will star Mitlon Berle; Lloyd Nolan; Martha Raye; Jimmie Walker, star of the television series, "Good Times"; LaWanda Page of "Sandford Arms"; Red Buttons; Rose Marie; Pat Butram; and Henry Youngman conducting the U.C.L.A. Marching Band.

Also, newcomers Skip Stevenson, Vance Colbig, Elizabeth and Katharine Kearney.

Sharon Gless, Not Glass, Prays People Will Get Name Right

Actress Sharon Gless says she's "just praying for the day when people call me Gless, not Glass."

And that day's not going to be a 'long time a-coming,' either, because the talented, strikingly attractive blonde with a keen wit and intelligence that's definately above-average is on her way up the ladder of success.

It's difficult to realize that this same girl plays the nondescript, bumbling secretary who has more short-comings than you can shake a stick at in "Switch," seen Fridays, 10 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV.

But the contrast is intended, says Sharon. "There has to be a contrast between Maggie and all those incredible looking women who walk in to see Pete. It's really vital to the show."

Sharon says its an easy role for her to play. "There's a lot of me in Maggie." She also hastened to add, "however, I'm not as confused as Maggie is."

The 'confused' aspect of Maggie will be changing this year, incidentally. "She's growing up now " Sharon explained. "She's been in the business for three years and she's getting a little more sophistication."

In the pilot, Sharon says that the description of Maggie was 'the Shirley MacLaine Type.' "You Know, a girl who gushes and bubbles and loves the guys. But she's getting a little smarter now."

Could this possibly be due to the general resentment in all quarters to men walking over their secretaries?

"Exactly," she said. "People don't like this, and now Maggie's clothes are getting better, and the situations she'll be put in this year are things that she couldn't have handled two years ago."

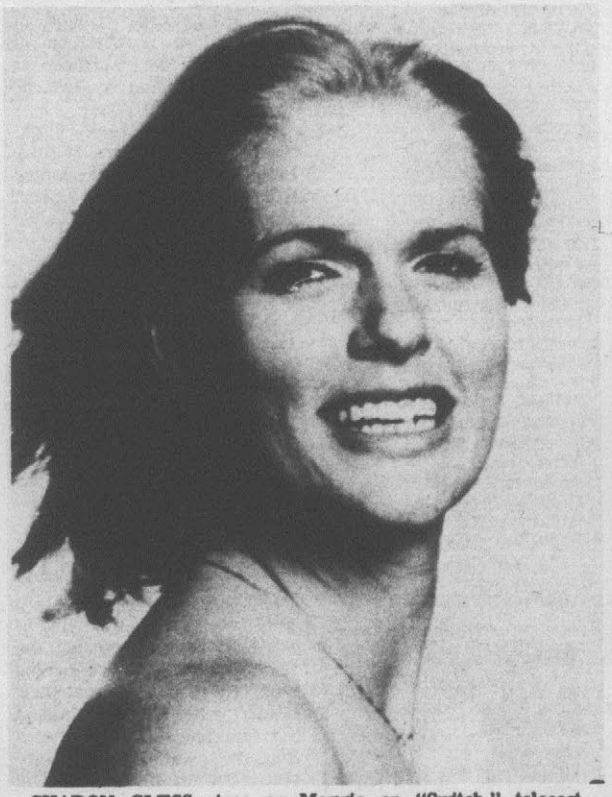

Sharon's a fifth-generation Californian who decided — just a few years ago — to try her hand at acting while she was a production assistant on an independent motion picture. Within a short time, she was co-starring with Dan Dailey in "Faraday and Company," and has since appeared in several series.

She hopes that someday soon 'Gless,' not 'Glass,' will be a household name.

"But right now, everybody — even people on the street who recognize me — call me 'Maggie.'"

What does she do?

"I answer them," she says with a grin and an infectuous laugh.

SHARON GLESS stars as Maggie on "Switch," telecast Fridays (10-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV. Maggie's ability to create chaos, always under the best of intentions, is balanced by her innate sense of humor and great loyalty to her employers, played by Robert Wagner and Eddie Albert.

ABC Plans Four-Hour Special

A four-hour gala special preempting an entire evening of primetime programming and featuring ABC's family of stars past and present, "ABC's Silver Anniversary Celebration — 25 and Still the One," will air on Sunday, Feb. 12, 1978. Celebrating the first 25 years of the Network's current corporate structure, the special will combine the resources of ABC Entertainment, ABC News and ABC Sports, it was announced by Frederick S. Pierce, President of ABC Television.

"The keynote for this special anniversary program will be to offer a sense of fun and nostalgia for the audience," Mr. Pierce said in his announcement. "We're a young company and most of our viewers have grown up with us through the years. This celebration special will salute the hits, the milestones, and remember the misses from our past, and celebrate the present.

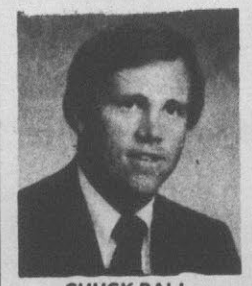

a memorable program for our viewers as well as for all of us at ABC."

'Thunder' Is An 'E And E' Show

"Thunder," the new action-adventure children's series airing Saturdays, 11 to 11:30 a.m. on NBC-TV, is an 'E and E' show — which means that it's filled with entertainment mixed with a healthy portion of education.

"Thunder" centers around a black stallion of mysterious origin who rescues those in danger and foils criminals.

The heroic horse is befriended by a rancher's 8-year-old daughter, Cindy Prescott (Melora Hardin), her young neighbor, Willie Wilson (Justin Randi) and his stubborn mule, Cupcake.

The series, filmed on location in Northern California, revolves around the day-to-day adventures shared by the horse, the children and Cindy's parents, Bill and Ann Prescott (Klint Ritchie and Melissa Converse).

Among the lessons introduced in separate shows are cardiac pulmonary resuscitations; care for the elderly; wild life conservation; inequities of sex discrimination; the evils of theft; gun safety, and racial tolerance.

"Working with a horse is my dream come true," says young Melora Hardin, referring to her role in "Thunder."

Melora first appeared in front of a camera at age seven in a television commercial for toothpaste, after pressuring her parents to get her an agent. She has made several commercials and has also appeared in such television series as "The Cliffwood Avenue Kids," "Police Story" and "Switch."

Melora lives in North Hollywood with her parents, her 15-year-old brother, Shawn, and their pets — a dog, a cat, a hamster and six fish. She's currently in the fourth grade, and her interests include ballet, cooking and writing.

Cupcakes seem to be a lucky charm for nine-year-old Justin Randi, who plays Willie, the owner of the mule, Cupcake.

He first appeared in front of a camera two years ago in a television commercial for cupcakes, and now he's coupled with Cupcake in "Thunder."

Justin's also in the fourth grade, plays bass in the school orchestra and his favorite subjects are art and mathematics. His leisure hours are devoted to boating, fishing and skate boarding.

Thunder and Cupcake are owned and trained by Bobby J. Davenport, an animal trainer with long experience in motion pictures and television.

'ABC Short Story Special' Presents Humorous Story

David Doyle, who stars as Bosley in "Charlie's Angels," will star with Jesse White and Michael LeClaire in "Homer and the Wacky Doughnut Machine," a presentation of "ABC Short Story Special," to be broadcast Saturday, Oct. 15, 12:00-noon to 12:30 p.m.

Written by Mark Fink, "Homer and the Wacky Doughnut Machine" is adapted from the short story by Robert McCloskey.

Doyle stars as Uncle Ulysses, the owner of a small coffee shop whose penchant for purchasing labor saving devices has left the business in debt. Jesse White stars as Mr. Gabby, an itinerant "sandwich board" advertising man, and Michael LeClaire stars as Homer, a mechanically inclined young boy who inadvertently finds a way to save his uncle's business by turning doughnuts into dollars.

While Homer is attempting to repair Uncle Ulysses' automatic doughnut machine, a frivolous woman comes into the shop and insists upon preparing a batch of doughnut batter. However, when the machine is set in motion, it can't be stopped, and the shop is overrun with doughnuts. There are hundreds of doughnuts — more than could ever be sold in a week — and one of them contains a bracelet the wealthy woman has lost while preparing the batter.

How will they get rid of the doughnuts, and how will they find the bracelet? It's a double-barreled problem, and Homer comes to the rescue with a plan that makes use of Mr. Gabby's profession as a sandwich board man.

Other members of the cast in this delightful and humorous story are Natalie Schafer, Cliff Norton, Bob Hastings, Dodo Denney, Roy Stuart and Tara Talboy.

Yankees Are Back

The New York Yankees went eleven years without playing in a World Series, and for the Yankees, that's a very long time. The Yanks enjoyed their return to the winning class of the American League so much that they wanted to be sure they returned to the series in 1977.

Owner George Steinbrenner wasted no time in adding free agents Reggi Jackson and Don Gullet to the already formidable Yankees. It was quite obvious from the season's start that the New York Yankees had every intention of being in the 1977 World Series which will begin Tuesday, Oct. 11. ABC-TV will present live-action coverage beginning at 8 p.m.

To J. Young, Wilmington, N.C.: Handsome, blue-eyed actor Jeffrey Hunter died at the age of 44 in 1969. He starred in many films and is perhaps best remembered for his portrayal of Jesus in "King of Kings."

To Ms. Marie S. Kerp, Lake View, S.C.: Send your letter to the "Today Show" in-care-of NBC-TV, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10020.

To L. Logan, Salisbury, N.C.: Michael Douglas, son of actor Kirk Douglas, is 32-year-old. Movies he appeared in before he co-starred in "Streets of San Francisco" include "Hail Hero," "Summertree" and "Napoleon and Samantha."

To B.B., Johnsonville, S.C.: Singer Tom Jones delivered the eulogy at Elvis Presley's funeral. Other show business in attendance were Burt Reynolds, John Wayne, George Hamilton and Ann-Margret.

To J. Campbell, Greenville, N.C.: The Keane brothers have been playing and singing all their life, and they both practice at least an hour a day. Unfortunately, their show ranked 38th in the ratings of summer shows, so it's doubtful that they will have their own series during this season. Look for them to make guest appearances, because they are two talented young guys.

To T. Wass, Lynchburg, VA.: Ted Wass (Danny Dallas in "Soap") is from Lakewood, Ohio, the son of Ted Wass, a retired pharmaceutical salesman, who now lives in Glyn Ellyn, a suburb of Chicago. Maybe you're cousins. Write to Ted c-o the show, ABC-TV, 4151 Prospect Ave., Hollywood, Calif. 90028.

To D. Craig, Stuart, VA.: Robert Conrad refuses to discuss his marriage, but he and his wife are not living together at this time. They were married when they were teenagers in Chicago.

KC Royals

A year ago, the surprising young Kansas City Royals had reached the ninth inning of the deciding game in the AL Championship Series before a Chris Chambliss home run sent New York into the World Series.

This year, the Royals wrapped up their divisional title early. While they generally expressed no preference for their American League title foe, the general feeling is that they want another shot at the New York Yankees.

"We're as good as any team in the American League," declares first baseman John Mayberry. "It makes no difference who we have in the playoffs, just so we go to the World Series."

Billy Bergey Ranks With Best As Greatest Middle Linebacker

Bill Bergey ranks with Hall of Famer Chuck Bednavik as the greatest middle linebacker in the Philadelphia Eagles' history. At the start of the 1977 season he had intercepted 19 passes in his NFL career and was selected All-NFC last year by AP, NEA, UPI, and the Professional Football Writers Association.

When the Eagles challenge the New York Giants Sunday, Oct. 9, at 1 p.m. on CBS-TV, the Giant offense will face the most outstanding linebacker in the NFC, as voted by the NFL Players Association.

Bergey, Little All-American at Arkansas State, was selected the most outstanding football player in the school's history. As a senior he was an All-American and played in the College All-Star, North-South and Senior Bowl games.

A second-round draft choice by the Cincinnati Bengals in 1969, Bill was procured by Philadelphia on July 10, 1974. It was a costly move for the Eagles. They relinquished their number one draft choice in 1977 and numbers one and two in 1978. But the move has paid off handsomely for the team.

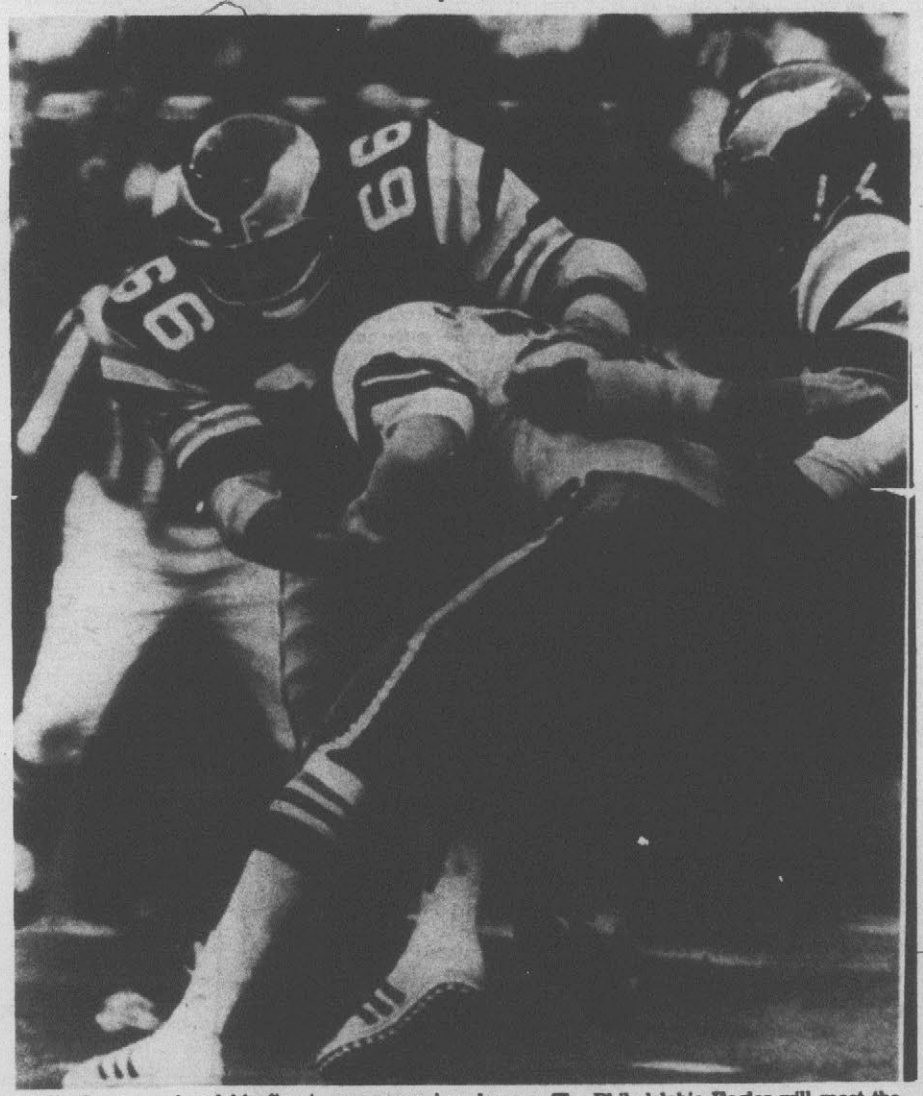

In his first season with Philadelphia, he was picked as the most valuable player on the team by his fellow players. He was a consensus All-Pro selection and played in the Pro Bowl following the 1974 season, In '75, he was chosen to several of the major All-Pro teams, while in 1976 he enjoyed his greatest pro-season winning unanimou All-NFC honors while setting club record for tackles with 234.

Bill has vividly described ho he mentally prepares to mee an opponent throughout th week before a game.

"About Thursday," Berge says, "something starts hap pening to me. I can just star sensing the feeling tha something is coming. And tha 'something that's coming' is th Sunday ballgame.

From Thursday on, I'm miserable person. I've got t have everything just right, o the way to doing my best. Com Sunday at one o'clock, I want t be ready to explode."

If you should hear an explo sion on your screen Sunda afternoon, it is no mechanica failure — it's just Bill Berge ready to obliterate the Ne York Giants.

Billy Bergey enjoyed his finest pro season in 1976 as linebacker for the Philadelphia Eagles. His performance won him unanimous All-NFL honors. The Philadelphia Eagles will meet the New York Giants on Sunday, Oct. 9 at 1 p.m. on CBS-TV.

Neely Gets Better As Time Passes

Maybe for the past dozen football seasons the Dallas Cowboys have had one regular who has been an overlooked leader.

After all, Bob Lilly said when offensive tackle Ralph Neely first joined the Cowboys that "Ralph is the only player I ever saw who was never a rookie."

To which Neely responds, "Aw, that's because I played right away and never said much. I never acted overconfident, just went out and played."

Neely and the Cowboys will take on the St. Louis Cardinals Sunday, Oct. 9, at 4 p.m. on CBS-TV.

Some have suggested this year that Neely will be assuming a new role as leader of the offensive line, an area on the 1977 Cowboys' team that has been rebuilt following retirement of right guard Blaine Nye and a knee injury (and subsequent surgery) to right tackle Rayfield Wright.

"Look, I said three years ago that Pat Donovan (Wright's replacement) had more talent than any offensive lineman that has come into the Cowboys camp since I've been here (since 1965)," Neely commented recently.

"Two years ago when we went back to the Super Bowl, Herbie (Scott) and Burton (Lawless) were alternating with the plays at left guard and now they're our starting guards (Lawless moved over to replace Nye).

"So that leaves Fitz (center John Fitzgerald) and I as the older guys starting along the line and now everyone is looking to us to provide more leadership.

"We've been doing that all along and I can assure you this current line will be a good one."

Bill Russell Signed

Bill Russell, one of the greatest basketball players in history and one of the most popular television personalities, has signed an exclusive multi-year contract with ABC-TV as a sports commentator, it was announced recently by Roone Arledge, President of ABC News and Sports.

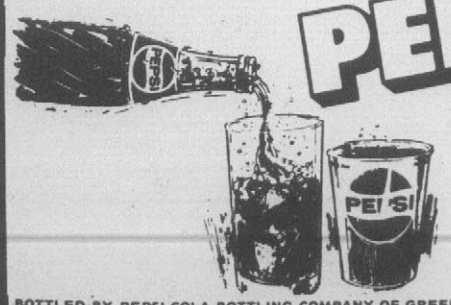

"Russell's future role with ABC will not be limited to basketball," Mr. Arledge said. "He will be an all-purpose sports commentator and, because of his intelligence, quick wit and interest in current affairs, we expect him to add a special dimension to many of our .. programs. His first assignment will be "The Superstars" where he will work as co-host. We also expect to feature him in a magazine format as well as 'ABC's Wide World of Sports' and other programs."

Statz Pays Off

STATZ, the computerized robot who serves as the ace handicapper and forecaster on NBC Sports "NFL '77" show each Sunday during the NFL season (12:30 to 1 p.m.), correctly predicted the results of nine of 13 games during the second week of 1977 NFL play. (STATZ didn't offer a predication on the Minnesota Tampa Bay game which was played recently.)

STATZ, who is stocked with vast amounts of statistical data — the same information that is used by 10 NFL teams — not only came close on the outcomes of several of the games but successfully singled out players who would make the big difference in those results.

In calling a 23-20 victory for the St. Louis Cardinals over the Chicago Bears, STATZ said that yards-per-pass attempt would be the most important statistic in the game and that St. Louis QB Jim Hart would make the difference. The Cards did indeed record a 3-point victory (16-13) and Hart had a fine day giving the Cards nearly double the Bears' yardage-per-pass attempt.

Predicting a Dallas Cowboy victory over the New York Giants, STATZ anticipated a big day for Dallas QB Roger Staubach in exploiting a New York weakness against the pass. Staubach ended the day with 18 completions in 29 attempts good for 235 yards as the Cowboys rolled over the Giants.

In the Houston-Green Bay game, STATZ was just off in his prediction of a 14-10 Houston victory as the Oilers won out, 16-10. In the Los Angeles Rams-Philadelphia Eagles game, STATZ foresaw a 20-10 victory for the Rams; the final was 20-0.

After two weeks of the NFL regular season STATZ has a record of 16-11.

Birthday Star Is Born

Lindsay Wagner tried out for the role of the Bionic Woman because her teen-age sister's favorite show was the "Six Million Dollar Man" and the audition took place on her birthday. "I decided I couldn't give her a better present than becoming 'The Bionic Woman.'"

Despite her 'death' as Jaime Sommers, she was brought back to star in the series because of the favorable reaction to the character. This year "The Bionic Woman" airs Saturdays, 8 to 9 p.m., on NBC-TV.

What kind of person did the character's creator, Kenneth Johnson, have in mind when he was auditioning for the part?

"She had to be intelligent and capable. That is, she was the sort of woman who used her talent, not repressed or stifled it. Colorful, but not too obviously sexy, because children were going to idolize and imitate her. On the other hand," Johnson continued, "since she is so strong, she needed a contrasting side to her nature. You know, the kind of woman whom a man would help down off a high step. In short, she had to be, or appear to be, vulnerable."

Lindsay was the one who had these qualities and, in the beginning, all it meant was playing in two episodes of the "Six Million Dollar Man." But something unexpected happened — those two episodes zoomed to the top of the ratings, and the comic strip fairytale came true: Lindsay Wagner was offered her own series.

But the fairytale didn't end there: Lindsay went on to win an Emmy as Best Actress in a Continuing Dramatic Series.

Born in Los Angeles, Lindsay studied dance when she was 13 years old, but her teacher, believing her talents were 'elsewhere,' guided her into an acting career. Soon after this, she was spotted by a talent scout while appearing in a play, and was offered a role in a television series. Her drama teacher, who felt that she wasn't ready for this, persuaded her to turn the offer down, which she did.

Then, after a successful stint as a fashion model, she made a brief appearance in an episode of "Marcus Welby, M.D." and has been acting ever since.

Hits Spotlighted

Guest star Nancy Dussault joins Carol Burnett in a medley-duet of songs made famous by Mary Martin and Ethel Merman, on "The Carol Burnett Show," co-starring Dick Van Dyke with Vicki Lawrence and also starring Tim Conway, Saturday, Oct. 15, 10 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Comedy highlights include another visit with "The Family" as Eunice (Miss Burnett) faces life without her husband, Ed, who has run off with a "floozie."

PORCELAIN FROM CHINA

中吉景德填 MADE IN CHINA

Pretty and petite 12-piece Demitasse Sets, only $9.95

When Marco Polo returned from China, he was laden with all sorts of treasure. But nothing amazed his fellow Europeans more than the snowy white, translucent pottery he brought with him.

This was the western world's first glimpse of Chinese porcelain, the fabulous material from which China's greatest artists and craftsmen made Ming vases and countless other priceless works of art.

The secret of true porcelain is in the clay. Nothing will do but kaolin clay, which is extremely fine in texture and absolutely white. Such clay is very rare.

The same clay used for Ming vases

Two of the world's most valuable deposits of kaolin lie in China; one in Li-ling in the Hunan Province, the other in Ching-te-chen in the Kiangsi Province. It seems certain that many of the original Ming vases that now grace the world's museums were made in these areas. Now you can own superb cups, saucers and other tableware made from the same rare and historic clay.

Weston World proudly presents authentic, imported Chinese dinnerware, made, hand-finished, and decorated in Li-ling and Ching-te-chen.

To appreciate their beauty, you must see them and use them — which is why we make this extraordinary, no risk offer:

Amazing low prices and free catalog!

Order any of the exquisite porcelain from China shown here for a 30-day trial — completely without risk to you! With your order you'll receive a color catalog of all the chinese porcelain Weston World offers — many stunning patterns and beautiful 12-piece, 20-piece and 45-piece sets. Now you can serve your family and guests on genuine Chinese porcelain — yet pay no more than you would for stoneware or plastic! Act now! Money back if not delighted.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR KATE JACKSON, star of Charlie's Angels

How do you feel about dialogue with bad language and blasphemy? — C.J., Meridian, Miss.

● I've never used obscenities on TV, and I hope I never have to. Even if it's in the script, I won't say "Oh, God" on TV. I don't believe in saying "God" lightly. If I were doing a wonderful film and something awful happened to someone I loved and there was a poignant moment that called for me to say, "Oh, God," that would be all right. But, so far, that moment, or that kind of script, has not come.

FOR CECIL D. ANDRUS, Secretary of the Interior

Now that fall is here and cold weather not far away, do you think this winter will be as bad as the last, and are you prepared for it? — B.C., Niagara Falls, N.Y.

● We have to go under the assumption that the next winter might be just as bad as this past one. That is why the President has ordered my Department and other Government agencies to do everything possible to see that natural gas production is increased. Just because the problem went away with the warm months, we can't afford to forget about the icy ones.

FOR STEVIE WONDER, singer

Seems to me that every time I've seen you get an award on TV, you give it away to someone. Why? — L.L. Krause, Joliet, Ill.

● What I'm actually doing is sharing it with those who've been most instrumental in helping me win that award. I work hard, but the people who work with me don't have it easy, either. By handing away my trophy, I'm symbolically including them in my honor.

FOR TRACY AUSTIN, tennis player

Which is more important in tennis — brains or brawn? — S.S.N., Seattle, Wash.

● That's a tough question and, frankly, can't be answered. I've seen players without great skill win by sheer power — big serves, heavy ground strokes. But I've also seen smart players win over superior strength. As an aside, though, there are more "better" players around today than a generation ago.

FOR GAIL PARENT, author of David Meyer Is a Mother

Do you get a thrill out of writing? — H.M., York, Pa.

● I equate it with homework: isolation and a lot of work. Most of the time I write, I get sick to my stomach. The thrill is not in writing but in seeing the pages grow. With the last word, the excitement makes you want to start all over again. I'm fortunate in that I'm not regimented. I can write at odd times — not set ones, as most writers do. I usually toss off a few pages between housework and fixing dinner.

FOR HENRY FORD II, chairman of the board, Ford Motor Company

What would surprise your grandfather the most if he could come back long enough to look your company over? — Joe Lowe, Logan, W. Va.

● I really can't think of anything that would surprise him. Cars, trucks and tractors are still the company's business. Even our work in space has roots in things my grandfather was doing when he was alive.

FOR JACK LA LANNE, physical-fitness authority

How did you get into such an unusual business? — T.H., Alexandria, Va.

● I was a sickly boy, with poor grades and known as a "sugarholic." At 15, my mother took me to hear food naturalist Paul Bragg lecture. He saved my life. After the lecture, he talked to me for hours about natural foods and nutrition. From that day on, my life changed. Physically, I admired K.V. Iyer of India. I wanted to have his measurements. As I worked on building my body, I would match my measurements to his, and on my 19th birthday reached my goal.

FOR CHRISTINA ELLEN MOLLER, America's Junior Miss for 1977

If you were First Lady, what's the first thing you'd try to do? — I.B., Crestline, Ohio

● I'd make the requirements for graduating students stiffer. High-school diplomas don't mean much anymore because they're too simple to come by. I'm not setting myself apart — I have it too easy, too. I'd rather be taught than have to work at learning. We're forgetting how to learn and think. I don't know why kids complain about getting too much work. I don't get enough.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

Way back in the 50's I used to adore Teresa Brewer. Whatever happened to her? — L.F., New London, N.H.

● She's busy working — mostly in Vegas and Lake Tahoe — with some guest appearances on talk shows thrown in. She's still making records and does a lot of overseas touring. This year she did a benefit in Rumania to aid the earthquake victims. She's prouder of her weight than she is of her long career. Teresa claims she's been 100 pounds since adolescence. She lives in upstate New York with her producer-husband, Bob Thiele, and three of her four daughters.

FOR BENJAMIN F. BAILAR, Postmaster General

Is it costly to print so many special stamps? — Mrs. R.T.K., Key West, Fla.

● Millions of mail users in the U.S., including many stamp collectors, have indicated they like a variety of colorful stamps. It does cost more to print multicolored stamps than regular ones. However, the added cost is more than offset by the revenue received from the sales of philatelic items. In 1975 this revenue amounted to approximately $52 million, which was applied against the operational deficit of the Postal Service.

PRO AND CON

Should TV Cameras Be Allowed In The Courtroom?

PRO Chief Justice Edward E. Pringle, Colorado Supreme Court

The time has come to end the treatment of judicial proceedings as the holy of holies into which none may enter. It's important that people see exactly what is happening in our courtrooms instead of getting information from fictional characterizations. Any technique which facilitates an actual representation of court proceedings ought to be encouraged rather than discouraged. TV cameras are allowed in Colorado courtrooms, and I've never found it to cause any problem with the operation of the system. I've never seen witnesses show off or jurors become upset. If the judge is going to showboat, he is going to showboat anyway. Maybe the people ought to see it. But I've never seen it happen.

CON Prof. Geoffrey C. Hazard Jr., Yale U. Law School

There are three reasons which argue against TV in the courtroom. First, camera noise and a two-or three-person TV crew usually will be distracting. Second, broadcasting pictures of the trial participants presents them before a larger audience. This can change their behavior in the courtroom. Third, the possibility of being televised may intimidate some jurors, witnesses or litigants. Some may be afraid of retaliation if it is known they were involved in a particular legal case. The result can be that a televised trial may turn out different from one not televised. That is injustice in some sense. The difficult question is whether this risk is outweighed by the value of publicizing trials.

Merit Challenges Entire Low Tar Field To Match Taste.

'Enriched Flavor'™ tobacco makes MERIT unique among low tar cigarettes.

For years, smokers have been promised good taste at low tar.

Yet despite the promises, the products just didn't measure up. Regardless of special filters and baffles, low tar cigarettes just couldn't deliver.

Until MERIT. Until work began on the tobacco end of smoking.

By cracking cigarette smoke down into separate elements, researchers were able to isolate certain flavor-rich ingredients that deliver taste way out of proportion to tar.

The result was 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco. Tobacco that delivers the kind of taste smokers can switch to. And stick with.

LOW TAR-'ENRICHED FLAVOR'

If you smoke, you'll be interested.

Tests Prove Taste

MERIT and MERIT 100's were both tested against a number of higher tar cigarettes. The results proved conclusively that 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco does boost taste without the usual increase in tar.

Overall, smokers reported they liked the taste of both MERIT and MERIT 100's as much as the taste of the higher tar cigarettes tested.

Cigarettes having up to 60% more tar!

Only one cigarette has 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco.

And you can taste it.

You can't be turned down for this Insurance if you're 50 to 80!

Here is a life insurance policy that can be yours for the asking if you inquire before October 31st. Not only is no physical examination required, but the policy is actually issued to you without a single health question!

PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS® is an individual life insurance policy that guarantees to accept every man and woman between 50 and 80 who applies during the guaranteed acceptance period—regardless of any other insurance carried.

PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS is underwritten by Colonial Penn Life Insurance Company of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, specialists in serving the specific needs of America's older population. This protection is recommended to their members by two of America's highly respected national nonprofit organizations of the mature: the National Retired Teachers Association (NRTA) and the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP).

An Important Opportunity for Every Older Person!

PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS is a distinctive concept of life insurance, achieved as a result of the years of effort Colonial Penn has devoted to meeting the insurance needs of mature people.

Our goal was a life insurance policy we can make available to all mature people—a policy whose cost would be reasonable and whose benefits would be worthwhile. With PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS, the Colonial Penn Life Insurance Company has succeeded.

Here's How PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS Can Do This For You:

During the first two years that your policy is in effect, your coverage is reduced. If you should die during the first policy year, the benefit paid to your beneficiary is $100. If death occurs during the second policy year, your beneficiary receives $250. Once two years have passed, you are covered for the full face amount of the policy.

PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS enables the older person to obtain worthwhile benefits for his insurance dollar—and, at the same time, guarantees acceptance for all applicants.

PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS also provides increasing cash values which begin in the first or second year.

The cost? JUST $6.95 A MONTH.

No matter what your age, your sex, or the condition of your health, you pay just $6.95 a month. The amount of coverage you receive is based on your sex and age. However, once you are insured the amount of your insurance will never go down, and your payments will never go up!

Act Now—You Have Nothing to Lose!

To obtain full information on PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS in time to take advantage of this opportunity to become insured, please mail the coupon before October 31st.

With PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS insurance . . .

- Everyone between 50 and 80 can get this life insurance—no one will be refused!
- You receive a policy created for the needs of mature persons!
- There are no health questions!
- There is no physical examination!
- This policy provides increasing cash values which begin in the first or second year!
- Your insurance cannot be cancelled for any reason as long as you maintain your premium payments.
- You get a policy which has been recommended to their members by both the National Retired Teachers Association and the American Association of Retired Persons!

REMEMBER—To take advantage of this guaranteed opportunity to obtain PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS without answering any questions about your health, please mail the coupon before Monday, October 31, 1977. Full information and your guaranteed issue application will be on their way to you at once by mail.

No broker or agent will visit you and you will be under no obligation to purchase the policy.

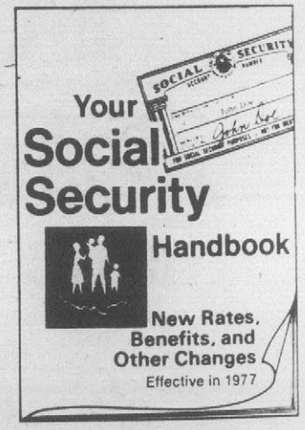

Even if you are not old enough for this insurance, you may want the information for another member of your family or for a friend.

WHAT SETS LIV ULLMANN APART?

A special kind of beauty, masterful performances that have made her known as one of the world's great actresses and a best-selling autobiography...these are just a few of the qualities that make her a unique woman.

Roger Prigent/Sygma

Daughter Linn, 11, spends part of each year with her father, Ingmar Bergman.

By William Wolf

At 38 Liv Ullmann is the career woman who has everything — almost.

Some critics have acclaimed the Norwegian star as the world's greatest film actress working today. Her first attempt as an author resulted in an unusual autobiography, Changing, which became a best seller and a Book of the Month Club selection. She was lauded for her Broadway performance last season in the revival of Eugene O'Neill's Anna Christie. Celebrated Swedish director Ingmar Bergman writes film after film with outstanding parts for her, and she is besieged with other screen offers. She adores her 11-year-old daughter Linn, and her current status as an independent, single woman gives her freedom of choice with men.

What's missing?

Ullmann is still not a Hollywood superstar. The New York Critics Circle gave her its award for her shattering performance of a woman having a mental breakdown in Bergman's Face to Face, but at the Academy Awards last spring, she sat in the audience only to see the best-actress Oscar go to Faye Dunaway for Network. She says with resignation, "Foreigners don't usually get Oscars," but regards her performance in Face to Face as "an exam in everything I know as a film actress." She is clearly disappointed.

Mindful of her extraordinarily photogenic face as well as her talent, people talk about her as the new Garbo. Ingrid Bergman is another Scandinavian actress who succeeded in American movies. But the odds are against a star from abroad making a spectacular transition to films in English. Ullmann's efforts away from Bergman's genius have been uneven, and in the case of the ill-conceived musical remake of Lost Horizon, downright embarrassing. She was used so awkwardly that one would never have guessed she is a seasoned actress, let alone a great one.

"Normally, such disasters would have locked the doors, but I'm lucky and get second chances," she says. "Now I'm being more careful with what I choose."

One thing she doesn't have to worry about is attitudes of the sort that drove Ingrid Bergman from Hollywood when she and director Roberto Rossellini had a child out of wedlock. Ullmann was welcomed with open arms when she first went to Hollywood, even though Ingmar Bergman had fathered her daughter while she was married to psychiatrist Dr. Jappe Stang, from whom she is now divorced. (Her liaison with Bergman lasted six years.) Times have changed. Socially, Liv is adored in Hollywood; everyone vies to have her at parties and men consider her a prize date. In Changing Ullmann writes amusingly and perceptively of how Henry Kissinger had someone scout her as a possible "blind date" and then finally phoned himself prior to escorting her to an official ball.

Before leaving for a stage engagement in Norway, Liv reminisced about her book and her latest stay in the United States. "I'm getting tremendous feedback — letters from people who say they realize for the first time that there is someone else who feels as they do about life and also has contradictory reactions. My writing of the mixed feelings I have about so many aspects of life strikes a note of recognition in people who think similarly but have been reluctant to express themselves. For some reason I have received much mail from nuns and monks."

Ullmann deliberately refrained from writing the typically indulgent star-tells-all type of autobiography. Instead, she gives a free-form series of impressions, almost like a Bergman script, and subtly reveals much about herself and her questioning attitudes toward what is expected of her as a woman and mother in relation to what she wants for herself.

"Someone criticized me for supposedly not telling enough about my work as an actress," she continues. "That's ridiculous. Lee Strasberg wrote me and said he was making my book required reading for his students at the Strasberg Institute and the Actors Studio.

"That gives me great satisfaction. I suppose the letter most important to me is the one from Bette Davis. She wrote that she felt the book to be an honest, intelligent and true picture of what it is to be a woman performer, or any woman who works. This is especially meaningful, for seeing her pictures gave me the inspiration for wanting to be an actress."

Liv is elated about the warmth she encountered here. "Americans tend to be more friendly to visitors than we are in Norway, and I feel at home. It is so easy to be friendly in return. In Norway we are less open to foreigners than Americans are.

"My stay here was also good because Linn got to like New York this time. Before, she hated it and didn't want us to return. This time, she is urging me to come back. I'll tell you a funny story about Linn. At the opening-night dinner party for Anna Christie, a girlfriend of mine whom I had invited was there with a very handsome man. He and Linn got into a long conversation. Suddenly I realized that she wasn't there. Neither was he. They were gone a long time, and I began to worry. Finally, when they returned, I learned that Linn had told him that she didn't like the fish being served and suggested that they go out to a coffee shop to get a hamburger. She had made off with an attractive man. That's pretty good — even I would need nerve to do that."

Leonard De Raemy/Sygma

Hollywood still hasn't crowned her.

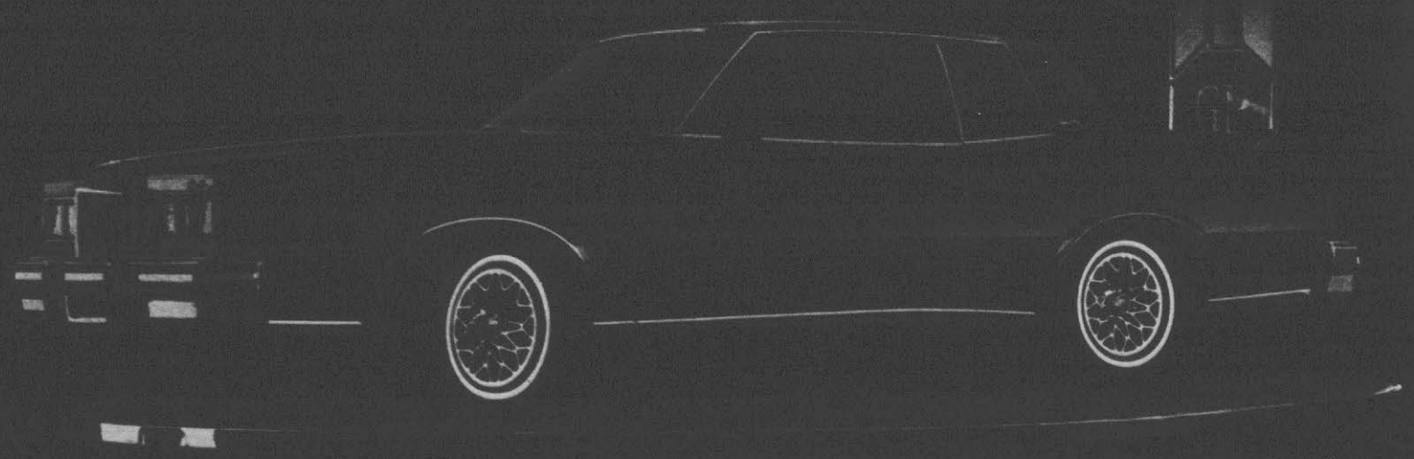

Linn is beautiful and graceful as well as self-assured. She takes ballet lessons, and the great George Balanchine obligingly choreographed a little dance for her. The youngster spends some of the year with her father, with whom Ullmann maintains both a close friendship and a professional relationship. The Passion of Anna, Persona, Cries and Whispers and Scenes from a Marriage are some of the Bergman films that have enhanced her reputation. (Their latest film together, The Serpent's Egg, is his first picture in English.)

Liv hints that Bergman might come to New York next season to direct her in a production of Ibsen's Rosmersholm on Broadway. It would be a theatrical event of importance — the first time Bergman would direct in New York. She also may do a Broadway musical. "I'd like to continue writing, too, but I have to decide what to write next. It is very hard work, and I'd like to take more time for the next thing I do. I wrote Changing while working in the theater, devoting time to it each day."

She is more amused than offended at being asked about the rumor mill concerning her love life. "Either people talk about me as someone who is lonely all the time or as someone running around having affairs with everybody," she says. "There was one report that I was secretly married. I don't like to deny that one because if people thought I were married, I could live quietly for years with someone and be left alone. No, I'm not secretly married. I really don't like to talk about my private life. But I can say unequivocally that I did not have an affair with Henry Kissinger, Ryan O'Neal or Warren Beatty."

With or without Hollywood, Ullmann is already assured a major place in film history by virtue of her triumphs in Bergman's masterpieces. She would be less than human if she did not want to prove she can be a Hollywood superstar, too. However, as anyone who has read her book knows, she has her own values as a person and as an artist and is not one to hunger for mere glamor or tinsel.

Introducing Pontiac's best year yet!

Grand new looks. Grand new luxury. Grand new Prix!

You can almost feel the excitement. The 1978 Pontiacs are here with some of the most dramatic changes in Pontiac history.

You'll find stunningly redesigned cars. Like the new Grand Prix. Trimmer outside. Yet with even more head and leg room than last year. And the spectacularly resized LeMans. With room for six. New quiet that will astound you. And extensive new corrosion-resisting treatments.

You'll discover luxurious new cars. Like the elegant full-size Bonneville Brougham. With soft velour notchback seats in a new loose-pillow look. And Phoenix. In its first full year, it's already causing a stir among luxury compacts.

You'll turn on to Pontiac's new fun-loving cars. Like the nimble-footed Sunbird Sport Coupe. And Trans Am, now one of the hottest selling road cars built in America.

Any year is a great year to buy or lease a Pontiac. But this may be your best year yet!

Redesigned. Resized. Remarkable LeMans!

Phoenix! Our newest luxury compact!

Our little Sunbird takes the fun of driving seriously!

"My wife got me to switch to Vantage."

"I smoke. My wife doesn't. And she would remind me of the stories being told about high-tar cigarettes.

"Well, I began looking into those new low-tar cigarettes. I tried just about every one that came out. They didn't satisfy my taste.

"Then I read about Vantage. I didn't expect much but I tried a pack anyway.

"They were quite a pleasant surprise. They tasted really good and they actually had less than half the tar of my old brand.

"So now I smoke Vantage. "I get the taste I want, and the low tar that she wants."

FAMILY WEEKLY COOKBOOK

EASY RECIPES USING ALL-AMERICAN HAMBURGER

It's the country's favorite meat, and when cooks don't know what to make for dinner, they can always pick up a package of freshly ground beef. Here are some delicious new dishes for your family to try.

By Marilyn Hansen

America's Favorite Meat

Yes, ground beef is the all-around, round-the-calendar meat favorite of American shoppers. While its use for hamburgers dominates, versatile ground beef is also used to make meat loaf, meatballs, casseroles and soups.

Usually you will find various kinds of ground beef at your meat counter. The difference is in fat content. There is no standard terminology for these ground-beef products; some of the names are: "premium," "regular," "extra lean," "ground round," "ground chuck" and "ground sirloin." The names normally do not indicate fat content. That information is needed, however, to make price comparisons among the different kinds, and stores will usually provide it if you ask.

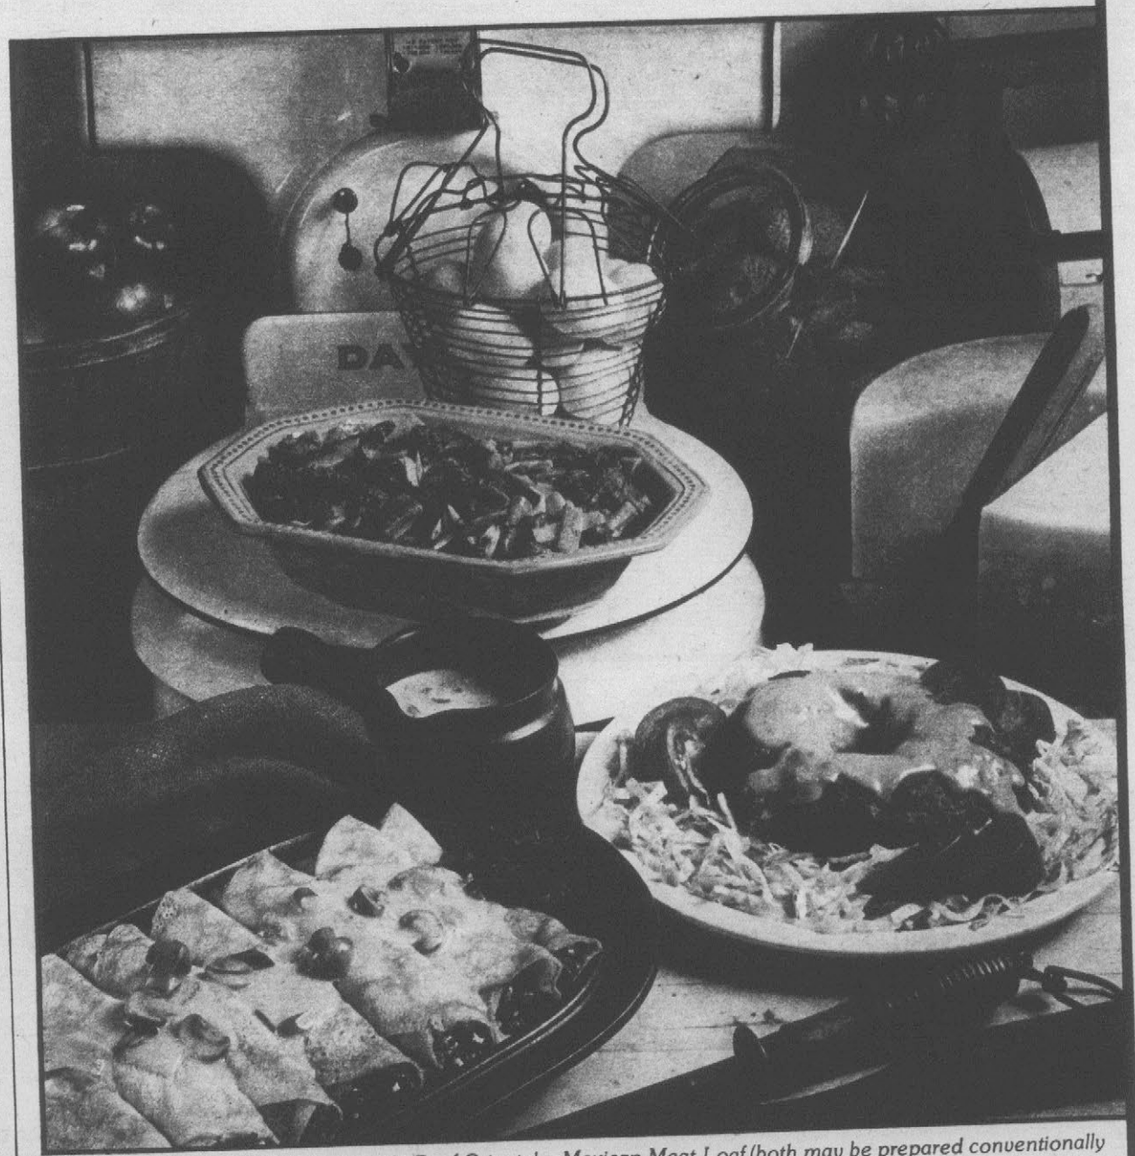

●

Base your selection of ground beef on the type of meat you are serving and on price. For example, if you want to grill or pan broil patties, use a ground beef that has a fat content of about 25 percent. Ground beef this lean contains enough fat for self-basting to keep patties moist and juicy but not enough to cause excessive fire flare-ups on the grill or excessive shrinking.

If you are planning a ground-beef casserole in which the fat is not drained off during cooking, then it may be wise to choose the extra-lean ground beef. But if the meat is to be browned and the fat drained off before other ingredients are added, you may get a better buy with regular ground beef. Leaner ground beef is more expensive than the fattier varieties, but many consumers find little difference between ground beef of differing fat content. So, before you spend extra money for the leaner product, consider whether ground beef with a higher fat content will suit your purpose.

Nutritionally, beef is beef, and it makes no difference whether it is in ground form or a standing rib roast. All beef contains the same high-quality protein, which the body must have to grow, repair tissues, regenerate blood and help build resistance to infection. Beef also contains B-complex vitamins and some essential minerals.

New ways with an old favorite include Beef Orientale, Mexican Meat Loaf (both may be prepared conventionally or in a microwave oven) and Company Crepes with Mushroom Sauce.

COMPANY CREPES

12 crepes (use basic recipe)
1 lb. ground chuck
1 can (10¾ ozs.) condensed cream of celery soup
1 cup small curd creamed cottage cheese
1 pkg. (10 ozs.) frozen chopped spinach, cooked and well drained
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup sliced fresh mushrooms
¼ cup diagonally sliced green onions
⅛ teaspoon ground nutmeg
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
¼ cup water
½ teaspoon lemon juice

1. Make crepes and set aside. Prepare filling: in saucepan, brown beef (use shortening if necessary); stir to separate meat. Pour off fat.

2. Stir in 2 tablespoons soup, cottage cheese, spinach, Parmesan cheese and salt. Spoon about ¼ cup filling on each crepe; roll up.

3. Arrange crepes, seam-side down on oven-to-table serving dish; keep warm, covered, in low (300°F.) oven.

4. Make sauce. In saucepan, brown mushrooms and cook onions with nutmeg in butter until tender. Add remaining soup, water and lemon juice. Heat just to boiling, stirring occasionally.

5. Pour hot sauce over crepes. Garnish with parsley if desired.

Makes 6 servings

BEEF ORIENTALE

1 lb. ground beef
1 cup carrots, thinly sliced diagonally
1 medium clove garlic, minced

Lots of good things go into Macaroni Meatball Mixup.

1 can (10¾ ozs.) condensed golden mushroom soup
⅓ cup water
1 pkg. (10 ozs.) frozen broccoli spears, partially thawed and cut up
½ cup bamboo shoots
½ cup diagonally sliced green onions
½ cup sliced water chestnuts
1 tablespoon soy sauce
Cooked rice

1. In large skillet, cook beef, carrots and garlic, stirring until meat loses its red color, about 5 minutes.

2. Stir in soup, water, broccoli, bamboo shoots, green onions, water chestnuts and soy sauce. Heat to boiling, reduce heat and simmer 10 minutes. Stir once or twice.

3. Let stand 5 minutes, covered; stir lightly. Serve over rice.

Microwave Method

1. In shallow, 2-qt. glass baking dish (12″ x 8″ x 2″), combine beef, carrots and garlic. Cook in microwave oven 8 minutes, stirring twice to separate meat.

2. Add remaining ingredients except rice. Cook 15 minutes or until done, stirring three times.

3. Let stand, covered, 5 minutes; stir. Serve over rice.

MEXICAN MEAT LOAF

1 can (11 ozs.) condensed cheddar cheese soup
1½ lbs. lean ground beef
½ cup fine, dry bread crumbs
1 egg, slightly beaten
⅓ cup finely chopped onion
½ teaspoon salt
⅓ cup water
¼ cup chili sauce
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
Dash cayenne pepper
Shredded lettuce
Tomato wedges

1. Preheat oven to 350°F. Thoroughly mix ¼ cup soup, beef, bread crumbs, egg, onion and salt.

2. In 9-inch pie plate, shape firmly into ring (2 inches high with 3-inch opening). Bake for about 1 hour or until done

3. In saucepan, blend remaining soup, water, chili sauce, mustard, cayenne pepper and 2 to 3 tablespoons drippings from meat. Heat; stir occasionally.

4. Pour some of sauce over loaf; pass remaining in sauce boat. Garnish with lettuce and tomato.

Microwave Method

1. Mix thoroughly ¼ cup soup, beef, bread crumbs, egg, onion and salt.

2. In 9-inch glass pan, shape firmly into ring (2 inches high with 3-inch opening). Cover with waxed paper; cook in microwave oven 10 minutes, turning pan 3 times. Remove meat loaf to serving platter.

3. Pour off drippings, saving 2 or 3 tablespoonsful. Stir remaining soup, water, chili sauce, mustard and cayenne pepper into drippings. Cook, uncovered, 3 minutes or until hot; stir. Garnish with lettuce and tomatoes.

Makes 6 servings

MACARONI MEATBALL MIXUP

2 cups tomato juice
1 lb. ground beef
¼ cup fine, dry bread crumbs
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 teaspoon basil leaves, crushed
1 teaspoon oregano leaves, crushed
¾ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon shortening
½ cup chopped onion
1 medium clove garlic, minced
1 can (16 ozs.) pork and beans
½ cup uncooked elbow macaroni

1. Thoroughly mix ¼ cup tomato juice, beef, bread crumbs, egg and ½ teaspoon each of basil, oregano and salt. Shape firmly into 16 meatballs.

2. In skillet, brown meatballs in shortening; remove. Pour off all but 2 tablespoons drippings. Cook onion with remaining basil, oregano and garlic in drippings until tender.

3. Add meatballs, remaining tomato juice and salt, beans and macaroni. Bring to boiling; reduce heat. Cover; simmer 25 minutes or until done. Stir often.

HAMBURGER SOUP

3 tablespoons butter or margarine
1½ lbs. ground chuck
1 can (1 lb. 12 ozs.) tomatoes, drained
2 (10½-oz. size) condensed beef consomme, undiluted
1 can (10½ ozs.) condensed onion soup, undiluted
4 carrots, pared, sliced ¼-inch thick
1 can (8 ozs.) corn, drained
¼ cup chopped celery tops
½ cup chopped parsley
1 bay leaf
½ teaspoon dried oregano leaves
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
½ cup uncooked tiny bow-tie macaroni or shells
Grated Parmesan cheese

1. Melt butter in large kettle. Add beef; cook, stirring over medium heat, 5 minutes or until browned.
2. Add remaining ingredients, except pasta and Parmesan cheese. Heat to boiling; reduce heat and simmer 30 minutes.
3. Return soup to a full boil; add pasta, stirring. Boil for 15 to 20 minutes, uncovered, until pasta is tender.
4. Ladle into soup bowls; sprinkle with Parmesan cheese.

Makes 6 to 8 servings

SLOPPY JOES

2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 green pepper, finely chopped
½ cup chopped onion
1 lb. ground beef
1 can (1 lb.) tomatoes, finely chopped
2 tablespoons tomato paste
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 tablespoon water
4 to 6 hero buns

1. In large skillet, heat oil. Add green pepper and onion; saute 5 minutes.
2. Add beef and cook until brown, stirring constantly.
3. Add tomatoes, tomato paste, Worcestershire, salt and sugar.
4. Cook, uncovered, 15 minutes, stirring often. Mix cornstarch with water; blend into meat mixture. Cook until thickened. Serve on split hero buns.

Makes 4 to 6 servings

THE PERFECT HAMBURGER

⅓ lb. ground beef
1 teaspoon cold water
¼ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
Few twists freshly ground black pepper
Salt

1. In small bowl, lightly mix beef, water, Worcestershire and pepper with a fork.
2. Shape into pattie with hands, using a light touch.
3. Heat small, heavy skillet; sprinkle with salt. When a drop of water sizzles in pan, add hamburger. (If meat is very lean, you may have to add 1 teaspoon oil to pan.)
4. Cook 1 minute over high heat to sear; reduce heat and cook 1 minute more. Turn patty, return heat to high and cook 1½ minutes more or until as done as you like.

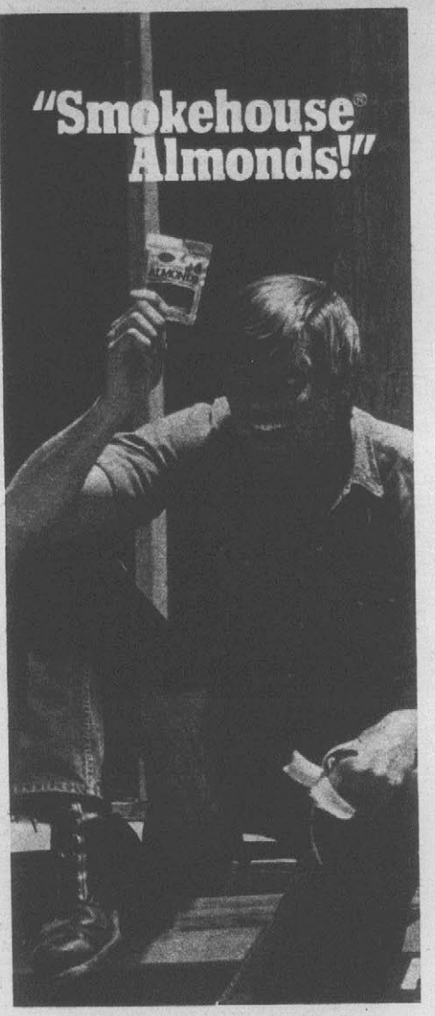

Makes 1 serving

Editor's note: Add 2 tablespoons wine to pan; heat and stir to loosen brown bits. Pour over hamburger. If you like more flavor, toss meat with 2 teaspoons capers and 1 teaspoon minced onion. Still more flavor: leave out capers and add 1 teaspoon prepared mustard to meat.

CHILI DOGS FOR A GANG

1 cup finely chopped onion
½ cup chopped green pepper
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 garlic clove, crushed
2 lbs. ground beef (chuck)
3 cans (8-oz. size) tomato sauce
2½ teaspoons chili powder
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper

TEX-MEX ENCHILADAS

1 lb. ground beef
4 tablespoons vegetable oil, plus oil for frying
1 clove garlic, minced
1 teaspoon crushed cumin seed
Salt
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
½ cup chopped onion
½ large green pepper, chopped
¾ cup chopped celery
1 can (1 lb. 12 ozs.) tomatoes, crushed, undrained
1 can (8 ozs.) tomato sauce
1 cup sliced pitted black olives
1 jar (3½ ozs.) chopped pimientos, drained
Dash Tabasco
24 tortillas

1. Brown meat in 2 tablespoons oil with garlic; add cumin seed, 1 teaspoon salt and pepper, stirring to break up meat with spoon during cooking. Drain off excess fat.
2. Make sauce: in 2 tablespoons oil, cook onion, green pepper and celery until onion is tender, about 5 minutes.
3. Stir in tomatoes, tomato sauce, olives and pimientos. Add Tabasco and salt to taste. Heat to boiling; reduce heat and simmer, uncovered, 15 minutes.
4. Stir about 1 cup sauce into meat mixture.
5. Soft-fry tortillas: in skillet pour about ½-inch oil; heat. Dip tortillas quickly in and out of oil, keeping them soft. Drain.
6. Dip tortillas into sauce. Divide meat mixture into centers of tortillas. Roll up and place tortillas, seam-side down, in a shallow, greased baking dish.
7. Spoon the remaining sauce over the enchiladas and bake in a preheated 350°F. oven for 25 to 30 minutes or until bubbly. Just before serving, sprinkle with cheese.

Makes 12 servings.

Tips 'N' Topics

GROUND BEEF CARE

Ground beef needs special care. Grinding it multiplies the surfaces on which bacteria can grow, and mishandling gives them the chance to do so.

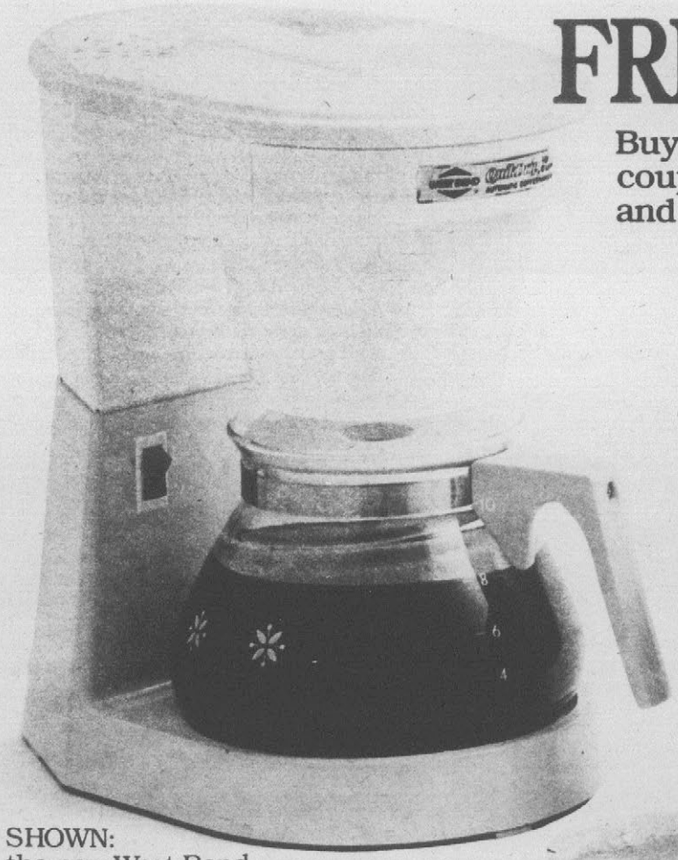

Taking good care of ground beef starts when you buy it. Choose packages that are well sealed, not torn. The meat should feel cold, and temperatures in the refrigerator case should be no higher than 40°F.

Warm temperatures encourage bacterial growth, so make ground beef one of your last purchases in the store. Refrigerate the meat soon after you get it home. If you plan to use ground beef within a day or two, place it in the coldest, nonfreezing part of your refrigerator. Freeze for longer storage. Ground beef will maintain its quality for four to six months at freezer temperatures of zero-degrees Fahrenheit or lower.

BEEF: AMERICA'S FAVORITE MEAT

Continued

PORCUPINE MEATBALLS IN CHILI SAUCE

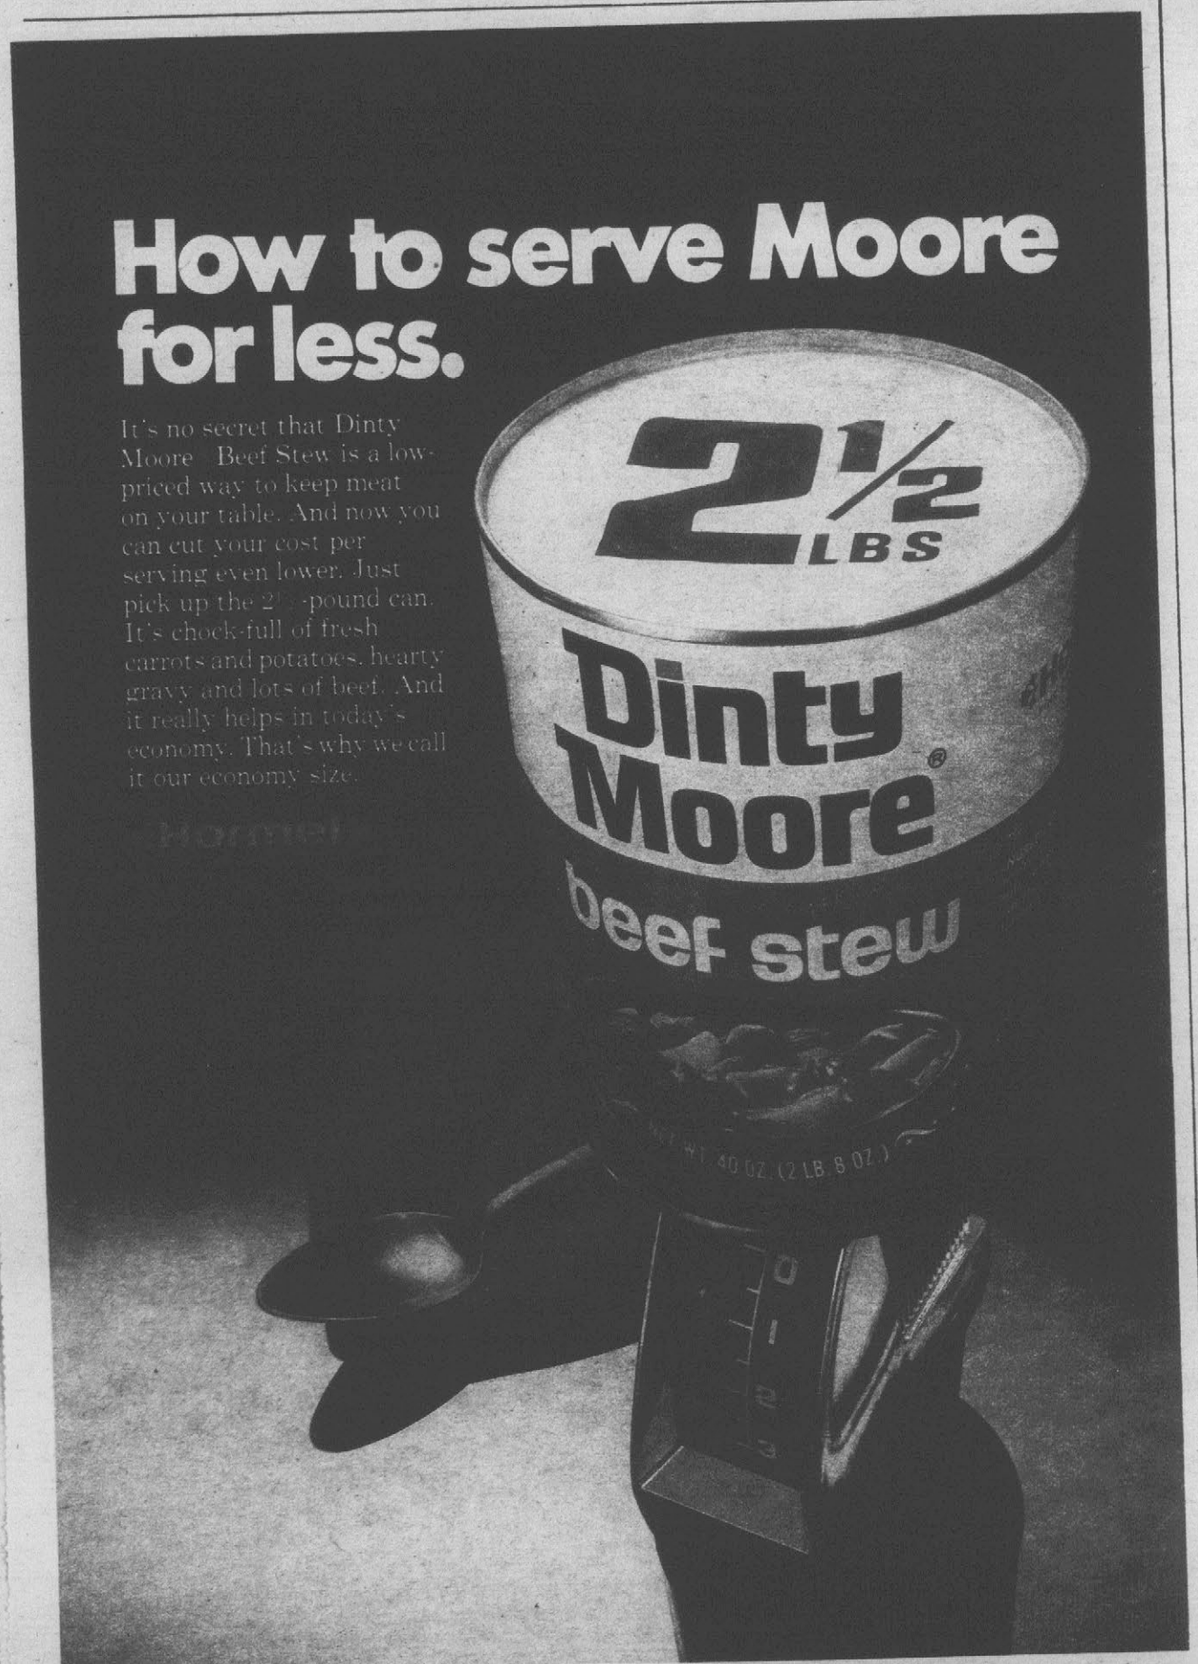

- 2½ teaspoons chili powder
- 1½ teaspoons garlic salt
- 2 teaspoons molasses or corn syrup
- ½ teaspoon ground cumin seed
- ½ teaspoon oregano leaves
- 5 cups tomato juice
- 1 lb. lean ground beef
- 1 cup quick cooking rice
- ½ cup finely chopped onion
- ½ cup finely chopped green pepper
- ½ cup finely chopped celery
- 1 egg
- 2 teaspoons prepared mustard
- 2 teaspoons salt
- ¼ teaspoon ground black pepper

1. To make sauce, combine chili powder, garlic salt, molasses, cumin, oregano and tomato juice in electric skillet.

2. In large bowl, combine ground beef, rice, onion, green pepper, celery, egg, mustard, salt and pepper. Blend well. Shape into 18 meatballs, about 2 inches in diameter.

3. Place meatballs in sauce. Bring liquid to boil, reduce heat, cover and simmer 20 minutes or until meatballs are cooked through. Turn meatballs in sauce once during cooking.

Makes 4 servings

MEAT LOAF WELLINGTON

- 1½ lbs. ground chuck
- ¾ cup fine dry bread crumbs plus 2 tablespoons
- ⅓ cup chopped onion
- 2 tablespoons ketchup
- 1 egg, slightly beaten
- 2 tablespoons milk
- 1 teaspoon rosemary leaves, crumbled
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1¼ teaspoons salt
- ¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
- 1 can (4¾ ozs.) liverwurst spread
- 1 can (3 ozs.) chopped mushrooms, undrained
- 1 pkg. (10 ozs.) pie-crust mix
- 1 egg yolk
- 1 tablespoon cold water

1. Preheat oven to 350°F. In large mixing bowl, combine ground chuck, ¾ cup bread crumbs, onion, ketchup, egg, milk, rosemary, Worcestershire, salt and pepper; blend well.

2. On sheet of waxed paper, shape meat into a 7- x 4-inch rectangle. Place meat loaf on a baking sheet; bake for 40 minutes. Cool for 25 minutes, until just warm.

3. Meanwhile, in a small bowl, combine liverwurst spread with drained chopped mushrooms (save liquid for sauce) and 2 tablespoons fine bread crumbs; set aside.

4. Prepare pie-crust mix according to package directions and divide into two parts, one slightly larger.

5. Roll smaller piece of dough into a rectangle 2 inches wider and longer than cooled meat loaf. Place on foil-lined baking sheet.

6. Place meat loaf on bottom crust. Spread surface of meat loaf with liverwurst mixture. Set oven at 400°F.

7. Roll out remaining dough into a rectangle large enough to cover top and sides of meat loaf. Cover meat loaf with top crust. Seal edges together smoothly with cold water. Trim edges of crust as necessary. Prick surface and decorate as desired with pastry flowers.

8. Combine egg yolk with cold water and brush entire crust with glaze.

9. Bake for about 20 to 25 minutes, or until crust is golden brown.

Makes 8 servings

SAUCE FOR MEAT LOAF WELLINGTON

- 2 envelopes (¾-oz. size) brown gravy mix
- Liquid from mushrooms
- 1¼ cups water
- ¾ cup dry red wine
- ¼ teaspoon rosemary leaves, crushed

1. Make up brown gravy mix as package label directs except use mushroom liquid, water, wine and rosemary in quantities given above.

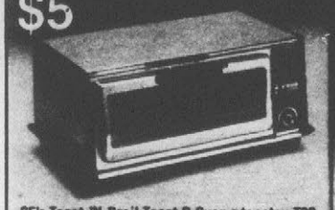

2. Bring to boiling, stirring. Add additional wine or water if too thick. Season to taste.

Makes about 2 cups

A SALUTE TO NEWS CARRIERS

By Megan Oliver

Bettman Archive

Newsboy painting by G. Brown, 1897.

What do John Wayne, Willie Mays and Sen. Abraham Ribicoff have in common? All of these famous Americans got their start as newspaper carriers and, like dozens of other prominent people, give part of the credit for their success to the sense of responsibility and perseverance they developed delivering newspapers. In the words of another well-known former newspaperboy, the late Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, "A newspaper route is as good a teacher of lessons as any institution we have in America."

Why are we telling you all of this? Well, Saturday, October 15, is International Newspaper Carrier Day, the day set aside each year during National Newspaper Week to honor the boys — and since 1974 the girls — whose job it is to "get the paper out." Most of us who read the paper never think about the carrier until it's time to pay him or her, or unless it's one of those occasions, like a snowstorm, when the paper's not there.

Newspaper carriers have not always been unsung heroes, as newspaperman Barrie J. Hughes of the Watertown (N.Y.) Daily Times discovered while researching his booklet, The World Honors the News Carrier. He reports that there are six known statues of newspaper carriers in places as far-flung as Lisbon and Los Angeles. The oldest known statue was dedicated on October 10, 1895, in Great Barrington, Mass. It was presented to the town by Col. William Lee Brown, a New York newspaper publisher. Col. Brown wanted to honor the newsboys whose energy had helped circulation of his second paper, the New York Daily News, climb from a few thousand to more than half a million.

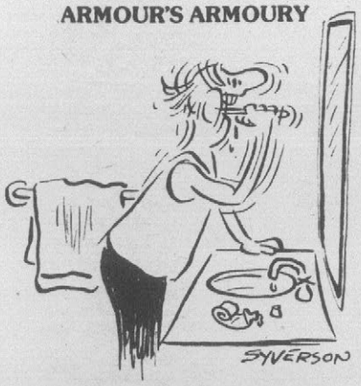

The newsboy statue in Great Barrington is the most famous, and copies of it have been given to honor various people, including former President Ford.

Another famous statue of a newsboy is the bronze figure dedicated in 1933 in Rio de Janiero. Tradition has it that each time the Brazilian press is muzzled with stronger censorship, rags are stuffed into the open bronze mouth of the newsboy as a symbol.

So your local newspaper carrier is part of a long tradition. Who knows, maybe in a few years you'll be able to say you knew him or her back when.

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

TO TELL THE TOOTH

My toothbrush is a wondrous thing,
Its usefulness I hail and sing.
It keeps my teeth all white and clean
And free of caries dark and mean.
By doing such devoted duty
It makes my smile a thing of beauty.
It keeps me free of dentists' drills
As well as still more frightful bills.

It doesn't do this by itself.
I have to take it from the shelf
And ply it often, wield it lustily,
So if the things above aren't done,
Don't blame the toothbrush. I'm the one.
— Richard Armour

Dad was being bedeviled by an endless stream of unanswerable questions from Jimmy. "What do you do at the office?" the youngster finally asked.

"Nothing!" shouted his exasperated father.

The boy became quiet for awhile, but not for long. A quizzical look came to his face. "But Dad, if you don't do anything, how do you know when you're through?"

— Frank Flanders

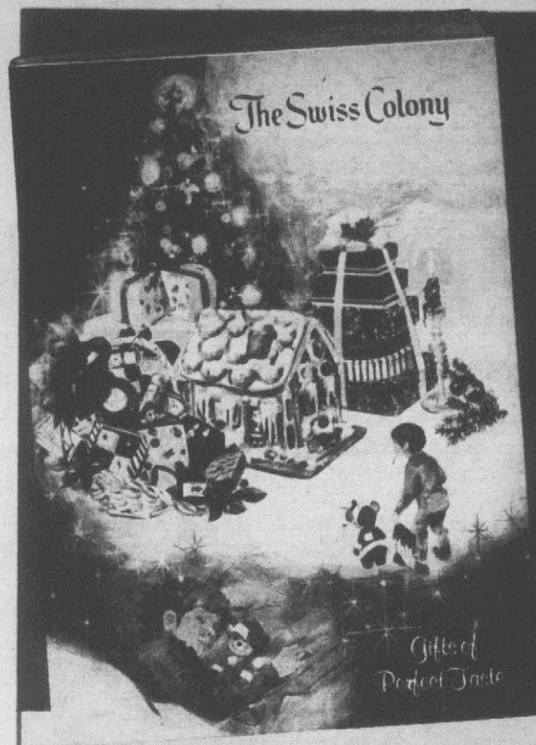

The mouth is the grocer's friend, the dentist's fortune, the orator's pride and the fool's trap. — Thomas LaMance

Overweight is often just desserts.

— Audrey Earle

Overhead at a Kaffeeklatsch: Mary was on the telephone trying to call home. Each time she called she spoke with the same man. Finally, in an angry voice, the man asked, "Lady, what number are you dialing?" "Well, I guess I must be dialing yours," Mary cheerfully replied as she hung up. — Gene Yasenak.

The honeymoon is over
As nearly as I can judge it.
He's taken her off a pedestal
And put her on a budget.

Observations™

Harvest secret. What makes the U.S. the world's most efficient food exporter? The Soviets employ many more farm workers than we do, yet they harvest only 80 percent as much grain and get but 65 percent as big a grain yield per acre. They use 15 pounds of grain to produce 1 pound of livestock—we do it for half that. A farm worker in the Soviet Union feeds seven people; each American farmer, 55.

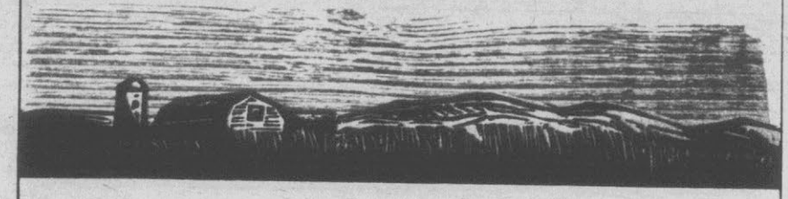

Here's the answer. America's secret is partly weather and climate but largely the widespread use of fertilizer and suitable machinery in our superbly efficient agricultural system. Soviet farms also suffer from being too large, adds agronomist Ronald Nairn of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars: they're generally run by planners too far away to make quick, critical decisions. Russian farmers produce prodigiously on their own private garden plots but not on the "collectives," demonstrating once more that free enterprise is a powerful economic spur to producing bounty for all.

The key: energy. Nowhere is the dependency of economic growth on energy growth more evident than in feeding America. Growing and processing food now account for 16.5 percent of the energy the U.S. consumes. Part of this goes to fuel ever-more-complex machines, and for crop-drying, irrigation, and transportation. Much goes, too, for pesticides, herbicides, fungicides, and fertilizers made from petroleum feedstocks.

"It's our new five-year plan. Sow a little, reap a little, and buy grain in America."

Food for thought. The lesson is clear. If American agriculture is to continue to prosper, farmers must have secure energy supply: one reason the American Farm Bureau Federation wants an end to petroleum price controls so there'll be incentive to find more energy in this country. For U.S. farmers recognize what Russian farmers are trying to tell their own government: nothing brings out supply quite like a marketplace freed from excessive government regulation. What works for grain works also for oil, gas, and coal.

PEOPLE QUIZ/ By John E. Gibson

Are accident-prone people simply the victims of bad luck? Is there a certain personality type that gets lost easily?

WHY WE BEHAVE THE WAY WE DO

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. There's a specific reason why some people are hostile, unfriendly and antisocial and show little consideration for the feelings of others.

2. People of a certain personality type tend to get lost easily in unfamiliar surroundings and to become repeatedly confused because of their fixed concept of where north or south may be.

3. Many people pretend to get sick to achieve various desirable ends.

4. Most people who take drug overdoses do so because they're tired of living.

5. The reason more accidents happen to some people than to others is largely a matter of luck.

6. When faced with vexing problems or under severe mental stress, many men will stop in a bar for a "quick one" — even if they don't particularly want a drink; and many women under similar emotional stress will visit their hairdresser or beautician — even when they have no actual need for their services.

ANSWERS

1. True. At Britain's Bradford University 200 students were given a battery of personality tests "to assess their attitudes toward themselves and specific persons and groups." Results: it was generally found that a person's attitude toward himself was duplicated in his attitude toward other people. The investigators concluded that self-rejection not only is a major factor in individual hostility but also appears to play an important role "in industrial friction, intergroup relations — even international clashes."

2. True. Studies at the University of Miami show that dogmatic (stubborn, opinionated, overbearing, close-minded) people often get it firmly in their minds that north is to the left or right of them and continue to think so when they are in different locations. Psychologists term this phenomenon directional disorientation, and it's one of the easiest ways to get lost in a strange neighborhood.

3. True. Studies at the United States International University demonstrate that the use of sickness as an adaptive strategy is far more widespread than many may think, particularly among children, who often view sickness as paying off in more desirable and advantageous ways than activity. These children expect that others will often sympathize with sickness and rarely be antagonistic toward the sick person. The study further showed that in only one situation — the gaining of attention from peers — was activity viewed to be a strategy superior to sickness.

4. False. A study of 128 subjects, who were interviewed by Britain's Department of Health and Social Security immediately after their recoveries from overdoses, indicated that just 44 percent said that they wanted to die. The most frequent reasons for the overdoses were seeking help, escaping from a situation and, in one case out of five, trying to influence someone. The latter response was likely to come from someone under 21 and is related to an attempt to win back a friend after a threatened breakup of a relationship.

5. False. Research at the University of California shows that "in general, the accident-haver is emotionally less mature, less responsible, more antisocial and not as well adjusted as the relatively accident-free person. Accident-prone people tend to have a more disturbed life history, such as an unhappy childhood, family disruption and an uneven work record." The anguish resulting from emotional conflicts tends to find physical expression in the trauma caused by the bruises and broken bones sustained in accidents.

6. True. A National Association for Mental Health study points out that everyone copes daily with a variety of stresses, and now and then problems threaten to assume such proportions that people find it difficult to take them in their stride without talking about them with someone they feel comfortable with and trust — doctors, clergymen, professional counselors or friends. When such help is unavailable, a person may turn to the traditional listeners: the bartender and the beautician. Although not trained to help, they are nonetheless important because they offer the beleaguered person an opportunity to verbalize problems and, perhaps, as a result, to resolve them.

MONEY

Getting More For Your Air-Travel Dollar

With so many different ticket plans and fare structures available to air travelers these days, most people have learned to ask airline reservation clerks to calculate the least-expensive schedule. But many travelers still do not know about other bonuses or economies that may be available to them — and airlines usually won't tell you about them unless you inquire.

For example, some airlines offer as much as a 40-percent reduction in fares for night flights — but such flights may take off after midnight or as early as 10:00 P.M. Airlines have special "triangle fares" — for a few extra dollars you can fly, say, from Los Angeles to Miami via Mexico or Montreal. A Los Angeles-to-Hawaii traveler can, by making advance arrangements, fly to several of the Hawaiian Islands for only a few extra dollars. On international flights extra stopovers (and extra mileage) are often available at little or no extra charge. The secret is to ask about the fringe benefits.

Here are two other potential money-saving reminders for air travelers:

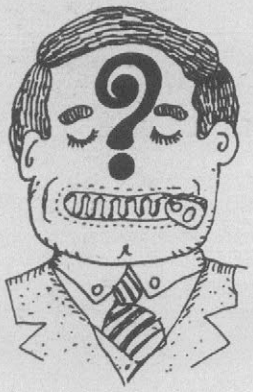

If you are bumped from an overbooked flight and the airline cannot get you to your destination within two hours of your originally scheduled arrival time, you are entitled to the price of the ticket up to $200, plus transportation to your destination. And the penalty fee will be paid on the spot if you demand it.

A ruling of the Civil Aeronautics Board (April, 1977) boosted airline liability for lost or damaged luggage from $500 to $750. It also requires, for the first time, that an airline pay you for expenses caused by the delayed arrival of your bags. If you need to buy clothes, for example, for a business meeting or a social affair, you'll get back your necessary costs up to that $750 figure.

JOBMANSHIP

Boss's Mistake: Should You Speak Up?

Jim Metzger was surprised when he heard his boss's decision. "It won't work," Jim told his friend. "He doesn't understand the important facts. Think I ought to mention it to him?" Because bosses are human, they make their share of mistakes. And eventually every jobholder faces Jim Metzger's "Should I speak up?" dilemma.

The answer comes down to the practical — speak up when it will help you and don't when it will make trouble for you. Remember that bosses demand loyalty and obedience because that's the only way they can keep their domains running. Also, like everyone else, top people are annoyed and embarrassed when proved wrong. So unless your supervisor's decision will make your daily work life hard or make your production record look poor, it's probably wise to go along. This is not a display of weakness on your part. First, it may be you, not the boss, who is wrong. Have you checked with others? Do they see it your way? Second, your superior may have facts about the situation of which you are unaware. Based on these facts, the decision may make sense.

When you must act, be diplomatic. When alone with your boss, try to guide him or her into recognizing the error. A bit of quiet confusion and a plea for help highlighting the point in question often work. "I'm not clear on how this can be produced during the same time we have the XYZ job due," or "Could you go over the daily operating details of these two sections with me?" or "How do you think we should handle customer complaints when this new policy goes into effect?" Above all, resist the natural urge to declare, "I'll show you exactly how and why you're wrong."

—S.R. Redford

Read this and cry.

Froilan lives in the highlands of Guatemala in a one-room hut with dirt floors and no sanitary facilities. Labor there is so cheap that, for men like Froilan's father, hard work and long hours still mean a life of poverty. But now life is changing for Froilan.

Her name? We don't know. We found her wandering the streets of a large city in South America. Her mother is a beggar. What will become of this little girl? No one knows. In her country, she's just one of thousands doomed to poverty.

The world is full of children like these who desperately need someone to care, like the family who sponsors Froilan.

It costs them $15 a month, and it gives Froilan so very much. Now he eats regularly. He gets medical care. He goes to school. Froilan writes to his sponsors and they write to him. They share something very special.

Since 1938 the Christian Children's Fund has helped hundreds of thousands of children. But so many more need your help. Become a sponsor. You needn't send any money now—you can "meet" the child assigned to your care first. Just fill out and mail the coupon. You'll receive the child's photograph, background information, and detailed instructions on how to write to the child. If you wish to sponsor the child, simply send in your first monthly check or money order for $15 within 10 days. If not, return the photo and other materials so we may ask someone else to help.

Take this opportunity to "meet" a child who needs your help. Somewhere in the world, there's a suffering child who will share something very special with you. Love.

For the love of a hungry child.

A TREASURE TROVE OF BASEBALL NOSTALGIA

Each year, more than 200,000 people visit this sport's shrine to see everything from Mickey Mantle's locker to Joe DiMaggio's uniform.

Babe Ruth by Robert Riger

By Geoffrey Bocca

On the banks of Lake Otsego, by the Susquehanna River in Cooperstown, N.Y., the world's greatest shrine to a single sport is about to expand. The Baseball Museum and Hall of Fame has begun its second extension since World War II. It enjoys no subsidy. All the money comes from the more than 200,000 visitors who pass through the turnstile into the shrine of Gen. Abner Doubleday, the man who did not invent baseball.

Cooperstown, pop. 2,500, is so placid out of season that a recent visitor stood in the middle of Main Street at noon looking for someone to give him directions. It is so quaint that shops still sell Bicentennial souvenirs.

But the Cooperstown baseball complex is one of the sporting wonders of the world. Churchill Downs, Ky., and Aintree, England, are venerated by horse players. Lords Cricket Ground in London is called "the temple of cricket" from Canberra to Calcutta. At all these shrines the sports themselves are enjoyed, but in Cooperstown's pocket-sized ballpark only one game of importance is played each year — a ceremonial contest between two major-league teams to honor the heroes elected to the Hall of Fame that year.

So why Cooperstown? The township was settled in Indian territory by the Cooper family, and here James Fenimore Cooper wrote The Last of the Mohicans in 1826. After that, "nothing" happened in Cooperstown for 113 years. Then, in June, 1939, in a brilliant ceremony, the town was inaugurated as the birthplace of our national game.

It happened to be the birthplace of Gen. Doubleday, who fired the first shot at Fort Sumter, sparking the Civil War. Doubleday also distinguished himself at Gettysburg. In 1839 he had doodled with a game approximating baseball to be played by West Point cadets, and for simplicity's sake he is credited as the inventor of the modern game. Much of the "evidence" emerged more than 50 years later in the faulty memory of Doubleday's friend, Abner Graves, then in his 70's. Doubleday never claimed to be the inventor. When he died in 1893, his obituary in the New York Times made no reference to baseball. But he was a gallant officer, a gentleman and a sportsman. What better man could fill the role? And what more ideal home could be found than his birthplace, the lovely, unspoiled little village on the lake, miles from anywhere? In fact, the rules of the game, scarcely changed to this day, were drawn up by the Knickerbocker Club in New York in 1845.

Geoffrey Bocca is a British-born novelist who often writes about American sports.

The Three Umpires by Norman Rockwell. (Art courtesy of the National Baseball Hall of Fame Museum Inc.)

The first players elected to the Hall of Fame in 1939 were Ty Cobb, leading with 222 of the 228 ballots, Babe Ruth and Honus Wagner with 206 apiece, Christy Matthewson with 204 and Walter Johnson with 188.

The Museum consists of a wondrous collection of baseball memorabilia, including the original lockers of great players, with their uniforms, shoes, caps and bats. This close-up view of athletic royalty is sometimes disconcerting. When we recall Joe DiMaggio's balletic spanning of the bases, we don't think of his wearing shirts with inside tags that contain such mortal information as "Dry-clean only."

Many visitors find themselves drawn more and more to the lockers and memories of the tremendous heroes who filled the uniforms. One Museum executive said that visitors often stand next to the locker of Ruth, DiMaggio or Mantle for hours, just looking, filling the uniforms with dreams. "Like the famous painting of the Duke of Wellington contemplating the tomb of Napoleon," the executive added.

There are baseball shoes, old and new, and catcher's masks dating back more than 100 years. There is a section on the Negro leagues, the youth leagues and the minor leagues. There are statues, paintings and great Norman Rockwell covers from the Saturday Evening Post and American Weekly. An entire room is devoted to the memorabilia and accomplishments of Babe Ruth.

On speakerphones one can hear the firsthand, on-the-spot account of Bobby Thomson's 1951 home run, the Babe's whiskeyish admonitions to the youth of America, DiMaggio's description of the tightrope he trod when he hit safely in 56 consecutive games.

The quasi-religious feeling inside the red-brick Georgian building is overwhelming. The Hall of Fame gallery is 89 feet long, 43 feet wide and 25 feet high. With its marble grandeur and its walls lined with plaques commemorating the 163 members, it looks like a cross between an imperial museum and a rococo Moscow subway station. One feels the only things missing are an eternal flame in an urn and the piped-in voice of Lucy Monroe singing "The Star-Spangled Banner" as she used to do — flat — at every World Series.

Sometime in the past, the Museum directorate, consciously or unconsciously, had to decide whether they presided over a museum or a shrine. Although called a museum, it actually is a shrine. It sees no evil, ennobles no villains. There is no acknowledgment of the blackest episode in baseball history, the 1919 World Series, when players on the Chicago Black Sox confessed to taking bribes. Yet surely one of the most immortal lines in baseball history is the heartbroken cry of a little boy to his fallen idol, Shoeless Joe Jackson: "Say it ain't so, Joe." The directorate justifies the omission by pointing out that one can read about the scandal in the library. The library, however, is restricted to researchers. A photograph of the triumphant Cincinnati team is the only reminder of the scandal.

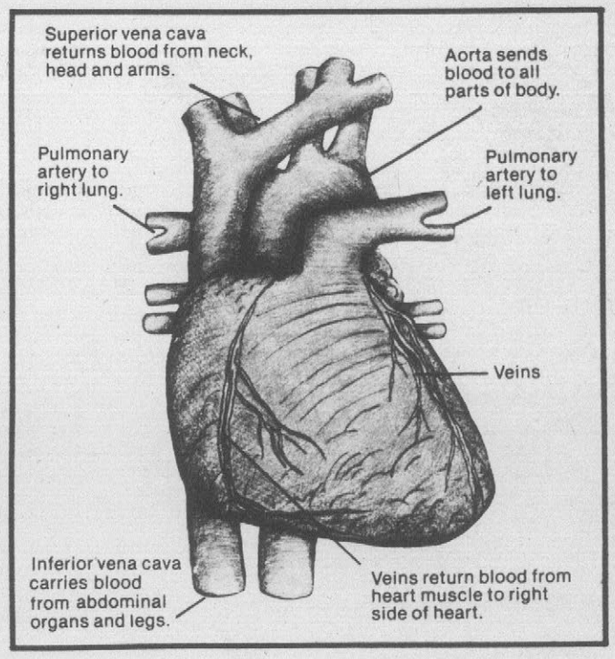

Still, there is one word one can use for the Baseball Museum without embarrassment or exaggeration — "inspiring." Fans who have never been there feel its impact in their everyday lives. One of the most serious problems in British sport is the hooliganism of youthful fans in the bleachers. Unlike American kids, they have no tradition, no real soccer museum, no sporting hall of fame. For the most part, American teenagers have a real respect and understanding of their country's sports history. In Britain, a player, once retired, is immediately forgotten unless he moves on to management. I doubt if a single knife-toting British ruffian could identify Alex James (Britain's Babe Ruth) or Ted Drake (Britain's Lou Gehrig). If British youth had something like Cooperstown to visit and revere, the atmosphere in British ballparks might not be so poisonous.

A visitor to Cooperstown does face one problem: dragging himself away. A day there is insufficient. So is a week. A lifetime is necessary for the real aficionado.

HEART MURMURS IN CHILDREN

Some important good news: Murmurs are usually nothing to worry about, and a child who has one need not have his activity restricted in any way.

By Alvin N. Eden, M.D.

As a practicing pediatrician, I examine a large number of infants and children each day. It is unusual for me to get through one day without hearing at least one heart murmur through my stethoscope. The great majority of the murmurs that I hear are absolutely harmless. Nevertheless, the words "heart murmur" strike terror in the hearts of parents, and it is difficult to convince the mothers and fathers of children with functional murmurs that they have no need to worry.

Let's start by defining what we mean by a heart murmur. It is an unusual sound that is heard while listening to the heartbeat through a stethoscope. These murmurs vary in loudness, pitch and location. There are two separate and distinct types: functional (a better word would be "innocent") and organic.

The functional or innocent murmur is a normal finding and does not mean a thing. If your child's physician tells you that your child has a functional murmur, you can relax and forget about it. On the other hand, an organic heart murmur represents some type of heart disease. Therefore, it's all-important for your pediatrician to determine which type of murmur your child has. He usually can do this without too much difficulty with his stethoscope. Sometimes various laboratory tests, including an electrocardiogram, are needed. If he concludes that your child has an innocent murmur, that should be the end of it. If the murmur turns out to be organic, some specialized tests may need to be performed to decide what method of treatment is required. An organic murmur means either that the child has some type of heart defect that he was born with (congenital heart disease) or that he has some type of acquired heart disease (such as that following some cases of acute rheumatic fever).

The statistics of heart murmurs in children are very interesting. About one child in three has an innocent or functional heart murmur at one time or another. In some studies the incidence of functional murmurs is said to be as high as 50 percent. Functional murmurs are heard less often in infants than in older children. They are heard most frequently in youngsters between 3 and 6 years of age. Organic heart murmurs occur in only about six out of every 1,000 children.

What is disturbing is the large number of children with innocent murmurs who are forced to lead unnecessarily restricted lives. About 25 percent of the children I examine with innocent murmurs fall into this category. This can be due to an innocent murmur being mistakingly diagnosed as an organic murmur. More often, however, trouble rests with the parents. Even though their doctor has reassured them that there is nothing to worry about, they simply cannot accept that any murmur can be normal. These parents take it upon themselves to restrict their child's activities and thus unnecessarily create tremendous psychological and emotional problems.

Of course, this misunderstanding on the part of the family can be due in part to inconclusive and incomplete advice that they have been given by their physician. A doctor not only must explain to the parents that the murmur is functional and innocent but also must be certain that they understand that this type of murmur does not mean anything is wrong with the child's heart. These parents must be convinced that since the innocent murmur is not related to heart disease, restricting the child's activities is ridiculous.

In many cases a functional murmur disappears as the child gets older, but it makes no difference whether this happens. We still do not know what causes an innocent murmur. There are many theories, but the exact mechanism is not clear. We do know, however, that the child with a functional murmur has a completely normal heart. No special supervision is necessary, and the murmur should not pose any restrictions on the amount or type of activity the child undertakes.

A practicing pediatrician, Dr. Eden is director of pediatrics at Wyckoff Hospital in New York City and associate professor of pediatrics at the NYU School of Medicine. He also is the author of the forthcoming Handbook For New Parents (Berkley).

NEW FREEDOM FROM DAILY DENTURE "FIXINGS"
Snug Cushions hold dentures comfortably tight for weeks
No more "fixings" every morning with messy powders or creams. Even if dentures need "fixing" after every meal, here's important news. Snug cushions restore dentures' holding power so dentures stay comfortably tight for weeks. Snug, the soft, effective temporary aid, forms a "comfort bond" between dentures and gums. Sticks to dentures, not to gums. Rinse, scrub or soak Snug fresh and clean. Easy to remove, but won't wash off or flake away. So, end daily "fixings"! Use Snug to hold dentures comfortably tight for weeks.

WHAT IN THE WORLD...

Childsafe

Parents who let infants or young children ride in cars without proper restraints are asking for trouble. Auto accidents are the leading cause of death among children, who can become flying missiles in a crash or a sudden stop. And adult seat belts aren't suitable for children under 4 or who weigh less than 40 pounds because their pelvic structures are fragile and the children are top-heavy. A wide variety of restraints are designed especially for children, but whatever kind you select, Susan Kummerow of the Wisconsin Hospital Assoc. says the restraint should distribute the pressure of the child's body over the largest possible area and provide good support for the head and neck to protect against whiplash. It also should be made of strong, energy-absorbing materials and be free of potential injury-producing features, such as a collapsible seat or a flimsy safety bar. The seat should be secured by using the standard lap belt or, says Kummerow, "your protection is flying out the window." Most restraints manufactured after July 1975 provide effective protection, but if you'd like a list of crash-tested models, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Susan Kummerow, Wisconsin Hospital Assoc., P.O. Box 4387, Madison, Wis. 53711.

Suited To A "T"

Many people's T-shirts fit them better than they think, says Dr. Max Fogel, as assoc. prof. of psychiatry at the Univ. of Pennsylvania. Although there are exceptions, "you can tell something about the person because the choice of messages is so deliberate." He continues, "Just the fact that the people are wearing the shirts says that they want some communication to take place between themselves and strangers — after all, some people won't wear these shirts at all." Dr. Fogel says that people who wear idol T-shirts, such as those that say "Rocky" or "Farrah," find something to admire about the star and would like you to associate them with that person. By contrast, he believes that people who wear T-shirts with place names on them don't have a strongly developed sense of identity at this point and tend to bury themselves in their environment. As for people who wear T-shirts with a sexually ambiguous message, such as "Foxy Lady," Dr. Fogel says they want the passerby to notice them and to make his own interpretation.

Making Crime Not Pay

Parents in Deerfield, Ill., have an added incentive to keep their teenagers from committing acts of vandalism — they can be fined up to $500. Alarmed by the rising vandalism rate, a few years ago the city fathers in Deerfield passed an ordinance providing that police can cite parents after the second act of vandalism by the same child in 12 months. And if the court finds the parent did not properly supervise the child, the parent can be fined from $25 to $500. During the first year after the law was passed, vandalism dropped 40% — and there haven't been any second offenses. Police Chief Richard Brandt gives the ordinance credit for reducing vandalism but points out that Deerfield also took other steps, including a "Youth Jury" program in which teenagers accused of minor offenses are tried by a jury of their peers.

Household Hazards For Pets

Many people worry about their pet being hit by a car, but chances are your dog or cat is in more immediate danger right inside your house. Dr. Walter E. Weirich, head of the Small Animal Clinic at Purdue Univ.'s School of Veterinary Medicine, says that at least ¾ of the pet injuries the clinic sees could have been prevented by owners. One major pet ailment is "garbage-can-itis," an illness caused by the pet's eating spoiled food from garbage cans. It often can cause severe vomiting and diarrhea for several days and can even be fatal. And despite the stereotype that dogs and bones go together like rabbits and carrots, never feed your pet bones — splintered bones can cause perforations in the digestive tract or constipation problems severe enough to require surgery. Another problem Dr. Weirich sees is that of dogs who drink from toilet bowls. If the bowl is in the process of being cleaned, the considerable lye in the toilet-bowl cleaner can cause severe damage. Pesticides and insecticides can be fatal to pets, so beware.

Keeping The Life Of The Party Alive

What do you do when the party's over and an intoxicated guest who shouldn't drive insists that he will? Since the odds of becoming involved in an automobile accident are increased 7 times if your guest has had even a few drinks, the last thing you should do is let him or her drive. And according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), the old remedy of pumping your guest full of coffee "will only make him a wide-awake drunk." The best way of handling the situation, says the NHTSA, is to have someone drive the guest home or talk him into staying over. Calling a cab and offering to pay the fare is another good solution — few people will turn down a free ride. If all else fails, risk losing a friend and take away his car keys — it's a lot better than risking his life. Some NHTSA tips for helping guests avoid having one too many:

- Have jiggers at the bar so guests can measure their drinks.
- Serve party snacks that slow down the rate at which the body absorbs alcohol. Foods with protein, such as cheese, eggs and meats, are especially good.
- Don't rush to refill your guest's glass the second it's empty — people often accept another drink only to avoid being rude.
- If you're serving an alcoholic punch, mix it with a tea or fruit juice base; carbonated mixers cause the body to absorb alcohol faster.

Quick Takes

There's nothing like a doctor to help a patient feel better — even if it's just the sound of the doctor's voice. Patients at a Calif. hospital who listened to the taped voice of a comforting doctor the night before an operation required less medication and recovered more quickly....These days the head of the house might be the only person in it. The Census Bureau says the number of persons living alone in the U.S. more than doubled from 1960-1976; currently 1/5 of all households in the country consist of one person.... More and more young women are deciding that a law degree is a girl's best friend. Female enrollment in the 164 American Bar Assoc.-approved law schools increased more than 1000% from 1966-76. One of every 4 law students is now a woman....Follow the birds and head south is good advice for people planning to retire, according to a report by the U.S. Labor Dept. The report, which compares retirement budgets for couples in 40 metropolitan areas, shows that retirement is likely to cost less in the South. Baton Rouge, La., has the lowest budget of all 40 cities surveyed, followed by Atlanta, Dallas and Austin. Aside from superexpensive Honolulu and Anchorage, the highest budgets are reported in the Northeastern cities....Cities may not be as hazardous to one's mental health as many believe. A Columbia Univ. prof. of psychiatry reports that rates of emotional disturbance among Manhattanites were lower than those reported for residents of small towns and rural areas....Despite well-publicized efforts to get women out of the house, ⅓ of American teenagers still believe that a woman's place is in the home. In addition, 1/5 of the 17-year-olds surveyed by the Education Commission of the States think women should be allowed to work only under certain conditions.

11 RECORDS OR TAPES—$1.00

plus shipping/handling

If you join now and agree to buy 8 more selections (at regular Club prices) in the coming 3 years

†Available on records and 8-track tapes only

Here, indeed, is an exciting array of America's favorite recording stars from every field of music—classical, rock, jazz, country, popular, folk—music to satisfy your every mood. There are 318 selections to choose from in this booklet, and you may have any 11—at once—on this introductory offer!

To join the Club simply mail the application, together with your check or money order for $1.86 as payment (that's $1.00 for your first 11 records or tapes, plus 86¢ for shipping and handling).

How the Club operates: every four weeks (13 times a year) you'll receive the Club's music magazine, which describes the Selection of the Month for each musical interest...plus hundreds of alternates from every field of music. In addition, up to six times a year you may receive offers of Special Selections, usually at a discount off regular Club prices.

If you wish to receive the Selection of the Month or the Special Selection, you need do nothing—it will be shipped automatically. If you prefer an alternate selection, or none at all, simply fill in the response card always provided and mail it by the date specified.

You will always have at least 10 days in which to make your decision. If you ever receive any Selection without having had at least 10 days to decide, you may return it at our expense, for full credit.

Your own charge account will be opened...the records and tapes you order will be mailed and billed at regular Club prices, which currently are $6.98 or $7.98—plus shipping and handling. (Multiple unit sets and Double Selections may be somewhat higher.)

After completing your enrollment agreement (by buying 8 selections within 3 years), you may cancel membership at any time. If you decide to continue, you'll be eligible for our generous money-saving bonus plan. Here, indeed, is the most convenient way possible to acquire the record and tape library you want—at the greatest savings possible! So act now—fill in and mail the application today!

Our Story: KAREN ARRIVES EARLY AT THE GYMNASIUM TO KEEP HER PLEDGE FOR A RACE TO A FINISH WITH THE YOUNG ATHLETE SHE HAD BEATEN AT SWIMMING. SHE KNEW THE TERMS OF THIS CONTEST WERE UNFAIR, BUT HER PRIDE WOULD NOT LET HER RENEGE.

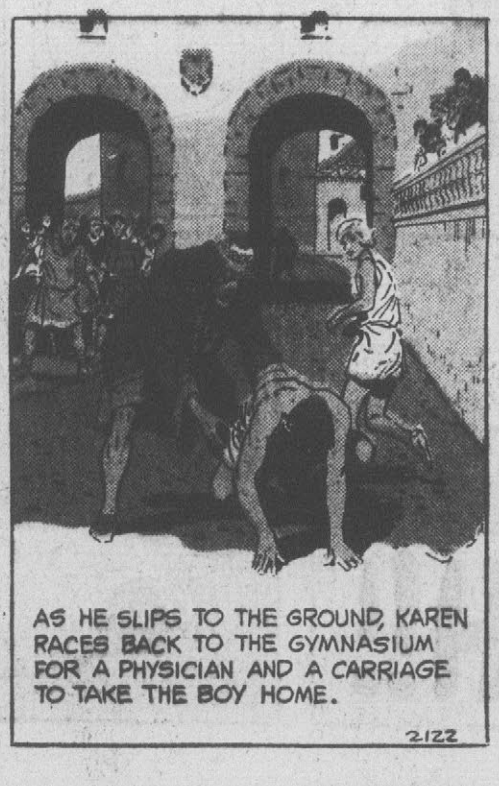

THE RACE BEGINS AND THEY RUN STEP FOR STEP FOR A FEW LAPS, THEN THE YOUTH, SEEING THAT KAREN IS TIRING, INCREASES HIS SPEED AND DRAWS AHEAD. TWICE HE PASSES HER ON THE OVAL TRACK.

"WHY SHOULD I RUN SO HARD?" REASONS THE YOUTH, "ALL I HAVE TO DO IS MAKE HER QUIT THE RACE." BUT ONE OF THE GYMNASIUM OFFICIALS TAKES A GOOD LOOK AT HIS FACE AND ORDERS THE RACE STOPPED.

HE IS GASPING FOR BREATH. PALE, EVEN HIS LIPS ARE GRAY. HE HAS STRAINED A WEAK HEART TOO FAR.

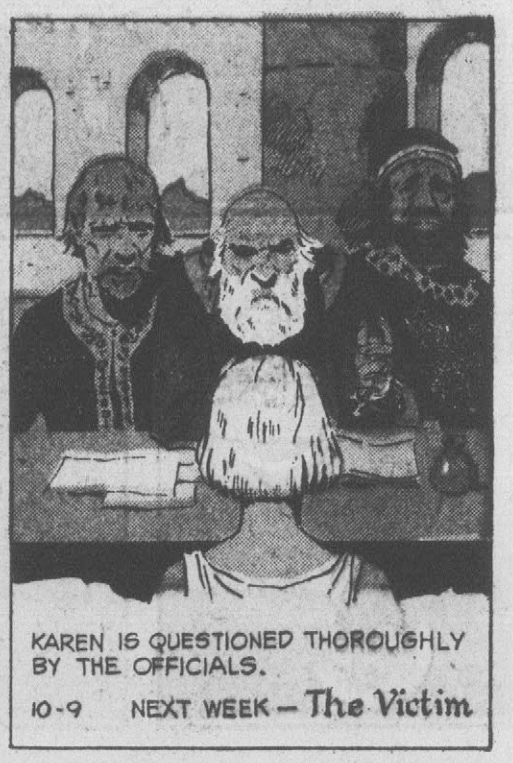

AS HE SLIPS TO THE GROUND, KAREN RACES BACK TO THE GYMNASIUM FOR A PHYSICIAN AND A CARRIAGE TO TAKE THE BOY HOME.

KAREN IS QUESTIONED THOROUGHLY BY THE OFFICIALS.
