

Wholesale Prices Rise As Farm Products Soar

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices jumped eightieths of one percent last month, the biggest increase since April, as farm prices rose for the first time in six months, the government reported today.

After declining a total of 12.5 percent since April, prices for farm products climbed 2.4 percent in October, signaling higher prices ahead at the supermarket.

Higher prices were reported for livestock, fresh and dried fruits and vegetables, grains, live poultry and oilseeds.

Also contributing to the sharp wholesale price increase last month were cars and trucks, reflecting the bigger price tags for the new 1978 models.

Wholesale prices are paid by retailers and manufacturers before they reach the consumer, but any price changes eventually show up at retail stores.

The October wholesale price increase was the largest since a 1.1 percent rise in April, at a time when inflation was rising at a 10 percent annual rate.

Food prices were largely responsible for the rapid price increases earlier this year, but as they began to decline last spring the rate of inflation began to slow.

Wholesale prices, which had risen one percent or more for three consecutive months between February and April, rose only four-tenths of a percent in May. They then dropped by seven-tenths of a percent in June and by one-tenth of a percent in July before rising one-tenth of a percent in August and one-half of a percent in September.

The Carter administration has predicted an inflation rate of about six percent for the entire year, which is regarded as still high but acceptable. In 1976, the inflation rate was 4.8 percent.

Underlining the news of the soaring wholesale prices was another Labor Department report that weekly paychecks of most American workers were $15 fatter last May than a year ago, but inflation destroyed any real gain.

The department said Wednesday that weekly earnings of full-time wage and salaried workers averaged $212 in May 1977 — up $15, or 6.9 percent from May 1976. However, consumer prices rose at about the same pace and eroded the pay raise, officials said.

Economists were expecting a reversal in wholesale farm prices last month after the Agriculture Department reported last week that prices farmers get for their products as they move into the wholesale price chain rose one percent between Sept. 15 and Oct. 15.

While declining food prices were beneficial to consumers, they were of concern to agricultural officials, who said farmers were considering cutbacks in production to help drive up prices and make up for their losses.

The wholesale price index in October stood at 196.3, meaning that goods that sold for $100 in 1967 now sell for $196.30. Wholesale prices have risen 5.9 percent over the past 12 months.

Finished consumer goods, which are products ready for sale to consumers rose eight-tenths of a percent in October following a rise of four-tenths of a percent in September and, before that, three months of little or no change.

Prices for industrial commodities rose six-tenths of a percent last month following a rise of eight-tenths of a percent in September. New cars and trucks rose two percent and higher prices also were reported for machinery and equipment, lumber and wood products and leather goods.

Not all farm products rose last month, the Labor Department said. Declines were reported for eggs, green coffee, cocoa beans, tea and milk.

Processed food prices jumped eight-tenths of a percent in October after four consecutive months of decline. Prices fell for sugar and roasted coffee, but these declines were offset by higher costs for fats and oils, meats and processed poultry.

Brock Sees Light Vote

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Elections Director Alex K. Brock, whose secret formula has been accurate within 3 per cent for the past decade, says only 28 per cent of the state's registered voters will go to the polls next Tuesday.

Brock blamed the low prediction on lack of voter excitement over the issues or understanding of them. He also blamed the frequency of elections.

"If you just do something over and over and over again, it becomes less significant," Brock said, citing a "proliferation of elections" in North Carolina. Thirty cities, he noted, will be voting again Dec. 17 on local issues.

Brock's predictions have been accurate for the past 10 years to within three percentage points.

"Anyone who registers shock (at the low turnout forecast) is not being realistic about the facts," Brock said, although he added, "I hope I'll have to get another formula."

At issue Nov. 8 are constitutional amendments that would allow governors and lieutenant governors to succeed themselves, give towns the right to be partners with other towns in power plant ownership, prohibit deficit state budgets and give equal inheritance rights to men and women.

Also on the ballot are $300 million worth of highway bonds and $230 million worth of clean water bonds.

Brock said the state's 2.2 million registered voters are 10 per cent fewer than at this time last year because those who have not voted since 1972 were dropped from the rolls.

"This is the first time the purge has been done consistently throughout the state," Brock said.

Registration of Democrats and Republicans fell 10 per cent each and unaffiliated registrations fell 13 per cent.

Pressure Is Ammunition

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The South African government's leading newspaper critic today objected to increased U.S. pressure for racial liberalization, saying America is providing the white-minority government with domestic political ammunition.

A pro-government newspaper told the United States to "go to hell."

The comments came after Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance announced that the United States was withdrawing a commercial attaché and naval attaché and that the arms embargo America has observed against South Africa since 1963 would be extended to cover such borderline equipment as spare aircraft parts and radar installations.

The United States also supports a mandatory, international arms embargo against South Africa that is to be voted Friday in the U.N. Security Council.

Johannesburg's liberal Rand Daily Mail endorsed the view of white opposition leader Colin Eglin that U.S. pressures are harming the "process of peaceful change."

"This is because they are being eagerly exploited by the Nationalists (the ruling party) to try to whip up emotions of the white electorate to an unprecedented pitch," the Mail said.

South Africa's 2.2 million white voters go to the polls Nov. 30 in an election called by Prime Minister John Vorster to gain a fresh mandate to withstand external pressure and for his proposed constitutional revision. It would give limited self-government to South Africans of mixed race and Indians but not to the more than 20 million blacks. All the non-white races are confined to segregated living areas.

The pro-government Citizen defied the United States.

"We cannot be bullied, bashed and browbeaten, threatened and subjected to mandatory arms sanctions without saying: we have taken enough from you; do your worst; we shall not surrender to your demands," an editorial said.

Foreign Minister R.F. Botha declared at a Wednesday night campaign meeting: "No embargoes will bring South Africa to its knees."

But opposition legislator Helen Suzman said at another rally: "I welcome America's interest in southern Africa and in the republic... It will be a sad day if America and the West decide to abandon this part of the world and to leave it to the exclusive attention of Russia."

DISCOVER THIRD LIFE FORM — Kenneth R. Luhrs and Linda J. Magrum, center, Univ. of Illinois geneticist, poses with assistants (AP Laserphoto)

Researchers Find A New Life Form

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — What could be one of the first life forms to evolve on earth is still alive in the form of a microorganism that has survived for more than three billion years.

University of Illinois scientists said Wednesday that the tiny organism previously thought to be an ordinary bacterium is really a separate form of life dating back to earth's early history.

The discovery challenges the traditional theory that divides living things into two basic classes, the "higher" forms of animals and plants, and the "lower" forms of bacteria and algae. The scientists say their organism fits neither group.

"The organisms are a distinct new class, no more related to typical bacteria than to higher forms," said Dr. Carl R. Woese, the research team leader. "They are a third form of life on this planet."

Woese and Drs. Ralph S. Wolfe and George Fox headed the effort that discovered the organism's uniqueness by analyzing its genetic makeup.

Woese said in a telephone interview that an important part of the discovery is freeing scientists of the idea that there are only two classes of life forms. If a third form exists, then there also could be several others waiting to be discovered, he said.

The discovery also could provide new clues to the unknown stages of evolution that preceded life as it is known today.

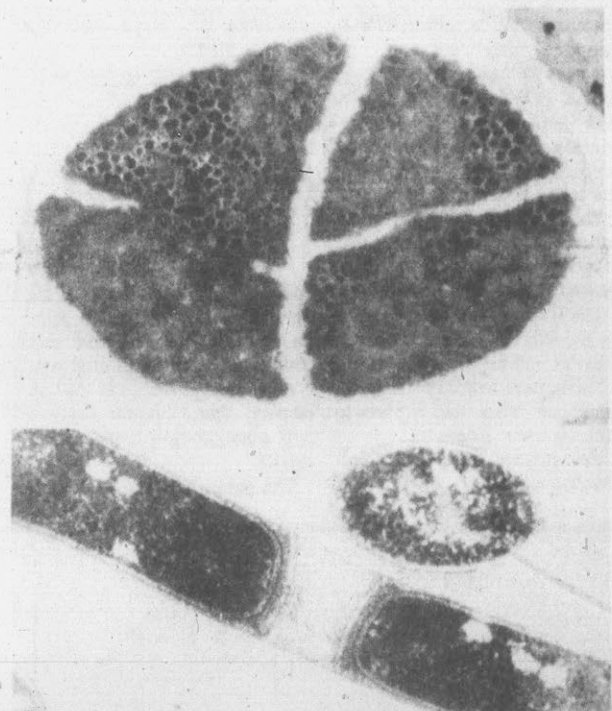

The third life form is a one-cell organism with the now outdated name of a bacterium, methanobacteria thermocautotrophica. The organism lives on hydrogen and carbon dioxide and produces flammable methane gas as its waste product.

The organism is widespread in nature even though it dies in the presence of oxygen. It exists in hot geothermal springs and in decaying plant material and the digestive systems of some animals where other organisms use up all the oxygen.

Woese said this type of life probably evolved during the first billion years of the roughly 4.6 billion years the earth has existed.

At that time, there was no oxygen in an atmosphere full of hydrogen and carbon dioxide and it was very warm. The methane-producing organisms are best suited for these conditions, he added.

The traditional theory of

NEW LIFE FORM — These photos, taken with an electron microscope, show two different species of the organism which a NASA-National Science foundation announced they have identified as a "new" form of life on earth. (AP Laserphoto)

two lines of evolution is based largely upon the hypothesis that all life came from a common ancestor, probably a simple primal cell. The methane-producing organism may be an early offspring of this common ancestor that precedes the evolutionary lines of bacteria and higher life forms, the scientists said.

Scientists have studied the organism for decades in hopes of finding out how it produces methane gas.

When the Illinois group used enzymes to rip apart the organism's ribosomal RNA, it found that these pieces of basic genetic material are distinctly different from the RNA of bacteria and "higher" cells. This was the key evidence that the methane-producing organisms represent a unique evolutionary line.

LEAD PAINTED GLASSES?

I would like to know the final decision on the glasses sold with large-sized soft drinks in them by the McDonalds restaurants around the country. I heard on the news that there might be lead in the paint on them. I have a cabinet full of these glasses and would like to know what we can do with them. Mrs. L. C.

Hotline called the Consumer Product Safety Commission, 1-800-638-2666. A spokesman for the Commission said the glasses were not banned, but were voluntarily discontinued as a promotional item by McDonalds after the lead content of the paint was discovered and publicized. Those who analyzed the paint did not feel that there was a high content of lead and were relieved that it is on the outside rather than the inside of the glass, she said. She did not give a clear cut or official answer as to whether you should feel safe continuing to use the glasses. It's a personal choice each person or family will have to make, she seemed to indicate.

HOTLINE FEEDBACK

GREAT RESPONSE

Response to the Hotline appeal for individuals and groups to dress dolls for the Salvation Army to give away at Christmas was "great," according to Barbara Kirkman of the Salvation Army.

"We have only three dolls left and these are promised," Ms. Kirkman said. "It all just worked out beautifully."

Families who will be needing assistance providing toys for their children at Christmas should register for these and for Christmas food baskets from 1 to 4 p. m. Monday, Nov. 28 through Friday, Dec. 2 and Monday, Dec. 5 through Friday, Dec. 9, she said. She said registration cannot be done anytime other than during these dates and hours, so they should be carefully noted by those who will need them.

Charge Kidnap, Attempted Rape

A 21-year-old Rt. 1, Greenville man is in Pitt County Jail without privilege of bond following his arrest early Wednesday morning on multiple charges, including kidnapping and attempted rape.

Thurman Gunter of Rt. 1, Box 87-D, Greenville was arrested near Rocky Mount by Edgecombe County authorities following an alleged incident in Pitt County off Highway 43, according to Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

Sheriff Tyson said that the kidnapping and attempted rape victim, a 28-year-old Rt. 1, Greenville woman, told officers that a man went to her house around 1 a.m. yesterday and asked her to take his sister to the hospital.

The victim, according to the sheriff, agreed to drive the man to his house where his sister awaited transportation. Sheriff Tyson said that the woman reported the man pulled a knife enroute to his house and made her drive toward the Fountain area.

According to the sheriff, the woman fled from the car after being forced to disrobe and ran to a neighbor's residence where she received assistance.

Pitt County authorities notified officers in Edgecombe County and Gunter was arrested allegedly driving the victim's car. He was returned to Pitt County on Wednesday, Sheriff Tyson said.

The sheriff added that the woman injured a foot when she fled from the vehicle.

Gunter, who has also been charged with auto larceny, is scheduled for a first appearance hearing on Friday in District Court here.

Opine Poor School Discipline One Reason

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I never go to a college reunion that I don't come away feeling sorry for all those paunchy, balding jocks trying to hang onto youth.

I feel sorry for the men too. Mayva and I always sit together. We seem to be the only two in the class who have fought the battle of middle age and won. "How do we do it?" I whispered, watching the class of '49 dance away in merciful darkness. "I feel like Marie Osmond at a Prune Festival."

"I know what you're saying," said Mayva. "Look at Ginger Horwich. Can you believe she's wearing glasses this thick? Blind as a bat."

"Where?" I asked, digging in my purse and holding my bifocals to my nose like a lorgnette.

"And what about Marci Miller? Who is she fooling with that cat?"

"Mayva, as I have always said, 'You show me a woman in a cat and I'll show you a lot of fat that doesn't fit.' Incidentally, isn't that cat a lot like yours?"

"No," said Mayva irritably, "mine has no waist. Oh my goodness, would you look at who just came in. Mary Moosebaum with hair as white as the driven snow. Who does she remind you of?"

"Thomas Edison."

"Exactly. Of course, we shouldn't laugh. Someday our hair will start to turn and we'll no longer be . . ."

"Henna No. 4. Hey, look at the next table. It's the class success, Barbara Judson, our newly-elected Senator. They're sure making a big fuss over her, but I respect her. If you have to work to make ends meet, you have to work. Besides, it might lead to something big. At least she's not like Paula Pringle."

"That vicious old broad," said Mayva. "Never has a kind word to say about anyone. I'm going over and tell her how much I've missed her."

As Mayva left the table, I couldn't help remarking to my husband, "MaYva looks old. Wonder how long it will take me to start showing my age?"

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Poor school discipline is one of the main reasons North Carolina college entrance examination scores are so low, state Board of Education members feel.

The sentiment emerged during informal discussions Wednesday of the state's relatively poor performance on the national tests.

Board members had a number of reasons for the decline in discipline, but state School Superintendent Craig Phillips insisted the situation was improving.

"There is probably more stability in the schools than there has been in a long time," Phillips said. "The biggest problem is that teachers have too many children to look after."

Board member Prezell R.

Robinson of Raleigh said "permissiveness" in the home was responsible for unruly behavior in the schools. Emphasis on student rights was cited by Larry M. Harding as partially to blame.

Ben H. Battle of Cullowhee said teachers were "woefully ignorant" of their legal rights and were afraid of being sued for any strong disciplinary action. "It scares them to death," Battle said.

Some board members also blamed low test scores on incompetent teachers.

"We could take care of the oversupply of teachers by getting rid of the incompetent teachers," observed Evelyn S. Tyler of Greensboro, a coordinator of teacher continuing education programs at Alamance Tech.

In its meeting later Wednesday, the board approved plans for a trial run of the statewide competency testing program.

Eventually all high school students will have to pass the test in order to get a diploma. The board agreed to buy six reading and mathematics tests from four different firms and administer them to 11th graders this spring before deciding which test is best.

Two will be picked and given to high school students starting next fall. The program is designed to assure that no one graduates without basic skills.

Cars driven by Jay Thomas Little of Route 5, Greenville and Macon Moore Quinerly of Grifton collided about 4:45 p. m. in the 500 block of Greenville Boulevard, causing an estimated $500 damage to the Little car and $400 damage to the Quinerly auto.

Officers reported an estimated $150 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 2:50 p. m.

mishap further west on Greenville Boulevard.

Drivers involved in that mishap were identified as Leland Littleton Galt of 402A East Second St., and Chinmay K. Datta of Clarksburg, W. Va.

His Debts Set Back Wedding Five Years

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Eddie (not his real name) and I have been going steady for four years. I'm 25 and Eddie's 26. We definitely planned on getting married, but here's the problem. Eddie says we can't get married until he pays his parents back for putting him through college. Otherwise he'd be getting married on his parents' money.

Abby, his parents are very well-off, and I'm sure they don't expect to be paid back.

The way Eddie has it figured, it will take him at least five years to pay off his parents. He says in the meantime we should just go steady.

I suggested we get engaged, but Eddie doesn't believe in long engagements. What do you make of this?

EDDIE'S GIRL

DEAR GIRL: I think Eddie should be commended for wanting to repay his parents, but it seems to me he's giving you a five-year stall. Stalls are for horses and other four-legged animals. I'd say "Nay."

DEAR ABBY: I work in a nursing home, and one of the residents here has asked me to write the following letter to you:

"Dear Abby: I am a sick old lady. My dentures no longer fit me, and since they are very uncomfortable, I don't wear them much anymore.

When my daughter visited last Sunday, she ordered me to wear my dentures at all times so that when I die I will look 'presentable.'

What do you advise?

TROUBLED IN L.A."

DEAR TROUBLED: Tell your daughter that you are more concerned with being comfortable NOW than being "presentable" then.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old girl with a story to tell. Last night about 9 p.m. I was walking home alone from the public library. (I live 8 blocks from there.) The wind was blowing hard, and it was very cold. Besides, I had a load of books under my arm.

A car pulled up alongside the curb, and a nice-looking man opened the door and asked, "Want a ride?" He looked okay and was about my father's age, and my feet were about to drop off with freezing, so I said yes and hopped in.

He asked me where I was going and I told him. He drove me there, but before he let me out, he said, "Young lady, I want you to promise me that you will NEVER again accept a ride with a stranger, no matter how 'nice' he appears to be. I happen to be a decent man, but you took an awful chance. You can't tell ANYTHING about a man by the way he looks. Two years ago I had a niece about your age who accepted a ride with a strange man, and three days later they found her lifeless body in a ditch four miles from your home. She'd been raped and strangled."

Abby, I promised that man I would never again get into a car with a stranger. And I never will.

LUCKY

DEAR LUCKY: Thanks for sharing your experience. It contains valuable advice.

DEAR ABBY: When someone asks, "What nationality are you?" and I say, "I was born and raised in the U.S.A., which makes me an American," why do they say, "Oh, I know that—I mean, are you Jewish, Catholic or Protestant?"

Abby, don't they know that they are asking about a person's RELIGION—not their NATIONALITY?

I have a friend whose parents came from Italy, and people are always calling him an Italian. He is NOT an Italian, he's an American!

If I sound angry, I am. Oh, boy, would you be doing a lot of people a big favor if you put this in your column.

Need Bonds Just To Catch Up

North Carolinians will be voting on a $300 million bond issue to speed up highway construction when they go to the polls on Nov. 8.

The funds which the road bond issue will produce are urgently needed if North Carolina has any hope of catching up on its highway needs.

With the rapidly increasing costs of highway construction the funds produced by gasoline taxes simply are not providing the roads that modern traffic requires.

The additional money which would come from the bond issue would be stretched out because it would attract matching federal funds in many cases.

North Carolina has done a pretty good job of paying from highway construction out of current revenues over the years. From time-to-time however it has been deemed necessary to provide a road bond issue to catch up on lagging projects.

We have reached a time when some catching up is needed and we can issue these proposed bonds without an increase in the gasoline tax.

It is well known that Eastern North Carolin has suffered from lack of adequate highways. We feel that our section of the state will benefit from the passage of the road bond issue, and this is going to be critical if our area is to continue to develop economically.

We recommend a vote for the $300 million highway bond issue on Nov. 8.

Probably Encouraging To Bootleggers

Reps Robert F. Drianan, D-Mass., and Edward W. Pattison, D-N.Y., have introduced a bill which would increase cigarette taxes by 31 cents per pack.

The two congressmen claim it is a way to prevent cigarette smuggling since states and cities would be rebated taxes which they drop on cigarettes.

We suspect the tax would only encourage the bootlegging of cigarettes so that all taxes would be circumvented.

Hopefully Congress will lay this cigarette tax plan to rest without any delay.

THIS AFTERNOON

Equal Rights Are Costly

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — It is costing a great deal of money and requiring considerable extra work by a lot of educators, but North Carolina is well along the way in providing equal educational opportunities for children with special needs.

Such a project is not to be taken lightly. Current information indicates a total of 140,000 public school children across the state fall in that category. State officials carefully use the term special needs rather than the handicapped, so it is clear that befeud up educational programs are also for the gifted and talented.

This year alone, local public schools are tapping a total of more than $10 million in state and federal funds to provide school services recently required by law.

Satisfy Law
Ted R. Drain, director of the division for exceptional children in the State Department of Public Instruction, feels action on a variety of fronts is moving to satisfy the requirements of new federal and state laws.

Each local school unit is drawing up a plan for meeting the particular needs of any child suffering a mental, emotional, or physical learning disability, and regular workshops are being held to make certain that all officials understand the requirements of the law.

At its simplest, the combined effect of recent law changes is that every child regardless of special problems must be provided an appropriate education free of charge.

Already identified in North Carolina are 140,000 making up some 20 per cent of the total school population of a million-plus. Drain thinks intensified efforts to identify all of those needing aid will bring the total to more than 200,000 following another "massive child-find this November."

Among numerous programs underway schools now provide a complete catalog of service available from whatever resource to help children, each child is given psychological and aptitude testing and counseling as part of the preparation of an individual plan for education, students are to the greatest degree possible kept in classrooms with their "normal" classmates and leave only for special therapy or classes (or, at least, associate with their classmates at lunch, etc.) and physical barriers to free movement in the buildings are supposed to be eliminated within a year.

State Action

At the state level, most attention has gone to setting up an office to keep children from "falling through the cracks" and to help parents make sure their children are getting appropriate education attention. A Raleigh hot-line is in place for incoming telephone calls; an inter-agency council is at work keeping the flow of information open between educators, Human Resources, and others concerned; and study is being given to training requirements for personnel to work in this area.

The state and federal money is being channeled to local school systems in lump sums allowing flexibility in meeting particular needs, and may be used for salaries, therapy, psychological services, supplies and equipment, or other purposes determined necessary locally.

NOBLITT

The new approach is not without its problems. Some schools, for example, complain it would cost too much to install an elevator to carry a crippled child to a third-floor class.

Such an approach overlooks an alternative which wouldn't cost anything, says Drain: move the class to the first floor. Removal of architectural barriers can be accomplished in some cases without physical building changes.

That Legislative Itch

WASHINGTON — Among the political ailments that afflict Washington, in season and out, through every administration, is the virus known as the legislative itch. Mr. Carter is down with it now. His new version of a consumer advocacy bill indicates that the condition is serious.

The syndrome is characterized by an irresistible urge to pass a law — any law! — just so long as one is passing a law. Caught in its throes, the victim tosses judgment to the wind. Parliamentary restraints are abandoned. Common sense takes to the hills. Nothing matters in these dreadful spasms but the passing of a bill.

Thus we now have H.R. 9718, the ill-begotten son of H.R. 6805, which was in turn the illegitimate offspring of the consumer bills of bygone years. In times past, we have seen proposals to create an Office of Consumer Advocacy, and Agency for Consumer Protection, an Office of Consumer Affairs, and so on. Some of these proposals had fearsome teeth; some of the bills would have given us an omnipotent administrator possessed of impressive clout.

In this latest version, nothing much remains. The president's bill would create an Office of Consumer Representation. The office would serve three purposes only: It would fulfill one of Mr. Carter's campaign promises; it would provide employment for an army of faithful bureaucrats and paper-shufflers; and temporarily it would relieve the legislative itch. Beyond these functions, the OCR would perform no useful service whatever.

It is embarrassing. Mr. Carter is the president who hates bureaucracy and promises to reduce its oppressions. His new bill provides for an administrator, a deputy administrator, five assistant administrators, a general counsel, and all the employees that could be hired with an initial appropriation of $15 million. The White House says defensively that this new army of bureaucrats would be offset by the closing of 20 separate consumer offices in existing departments, but this is nonsense. Every one of these 20 existing offices would have to be maintained and staffed, if only to forward mail to the new agency.

The effect of this centralizing the complaints and inquiries of consumers would be to delay effective action for five or six months while memoranda flew like paper airplanes among the agencies of government. Nothing would be gained in efficiency. The handling of correspondence would simply take more time.

In some curious ways, this watered-down bill is worse than its predecessors. The new OCR could not touch any federal action having to do with organized labor or the farmer; every federal activity that involved the national security would be exempt. Even so, the administrator would be given formidable powers to throw his weight around among the regulatory agencies. All federal agencies, under this bill, are "directed" to serve the OCR promptly "to the

THE INSIDE REPORT

Cruise Missile Not 'Hot'

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Secret computer studies show that the existing U.S. cruise missile would not have a chance to penetrate the Soviet Union's sophisticated defense system, a revelation acutely embarrassing to President Carter and threatening to the prospective SALT II agreement.

The studies, conducted jointly over the summer by a private contractor and the Pentagon, found that a scheduled "live" test would result in the Tomahawk cruise missile being shot down by U.S. defenses. Consequently, the Defense Department some two weeks ago cancelled the "live" test and substituted a "dead" or simulated test. That was intended to sidestep severe embarrassment for the weapon which became strategically crucial when Mr. Carter shelved the B-1 bomber.

But word has filtered out of the Pentagon, giving ammunition to Capitol Hill critics of the Carter defense policy. The new strategic arms limitation agreement (SALT II) being negotiated in Geneva becomes more vulnerable than ever to criticism that it gives the Soviet Union a dangerous advantage.

A Defense Department spokesman told us there was no computer study made and that there will be "live" tests of the Tomahawk. But our sources at the Pentagon reaffirmed in detail the story of the cruise missile crisis.

The President's unexpected decision against B-1 production transformed the cruise missile from a theater to a global weapon. The Tomahawk, the only existing cruise missile, was developed as a sea-launched weapon but eventually will be launched from heavy bombers. As such, it is now a critically important U. S. strategic weapon.

The Tomahawk was to be tested beginning Dec. 6 at Nellis Air Base in Nevada against the U.S. Hawk air defense system on a "live" basis — the surface-to-air missile actually sent against the cruise missile (which would be launched from a slow-flying aircraft). But the computer studies showed that the Hawk radar would locate the Tomahawk and a surface-to-air Hawk missile would shoot it down.

The implications are unnerving. The Hawk is similar to the Soviet SA-3 system, which the Russians consider obsolete and peddle to their client countries. If the Tomahawk cannot get past the SA-3, what chance would it have against the far more advanced Soviet SA-10 now guarding the Russian homeland?

The decision was made to scrub the "live" test, firing the Tomahawk but not actually dispatching the Hawk surface-to-air missile — thereby saving the glamor weapon the indignity of being shot down. Instead, the test will be simulated via computer in a "dead" test.

Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, an important Republican voice on defense, plans to take the House floor to accuse the Defense Department of "rigging" a test. At the least, experts believe a simulated test always poses the temptation of self-deception.

Actually, there have been precursors of the Tomahawk's vulnerability. The radar of the F-15 fighter has picked up a Tomahawk in flight. Testing the Tomahawk against radar aircraft scheduled through next April at the China Lake and Point Mugu naval test sites in California now becomes the source of apprehension at the Pentagon.

Although the cruise missile team has boasted that their weapon presents radar a cross-section the size of a seagull, that may be too big. Further reducing the cross-section or increasing the missile's speed would require major changes. Nor is there room on the cruise missile for anti-radar countermeasures; the miniaturized motor and warhead take up all the limited space.

"I'm very much afraid," one technical expert told us, "that the cruise missile is about one weapon generation away from being able to penetrate Soviet defenses." Other experts believe a swarm of Tomahawks could overrun Soviet air defenses; but that would require thousands of cruise missiles, a number neither planned for production nor permitted under the proposed SALT II treaty.

Yet, without a B-1 bomber, Soviet superiority in heavy missiles would provide all the more lopsided a strategic advantage if the Cruise missile cannot penetrate Soviet defenses. Therefore, even though it lost the fight for the

PHILOSOPHIES OF LIFE

Christianity has always contained a more natural, meaningful, and rewarding philosophy of life than other world religions.

The Stoic philosophy of the ancient Greeks urged men to live a passive life, neither loving good nor abhorring evil. The Stoic philosopher Seneca declared that pity was moral illness. Epictetus admonished his followers never to show the least affection for anyone, even for children. To the Stoic the ideal man was the person who could detach himself completely from life, remaining above and beyond any emotional reaction.

Likewise the Buddhist believes that the person who purges his life of both evil passions and noble aspirations, has attained perfection.

By contrast Christianity gathers up all the passions of a person's life and directs them into channels which will glorify God, ennoble the person who entertains these desires, and make the world a better place to live in.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Discipline is a serious problem in North Carolina public schools and getting worse each year, principals, teachers and students agree.

But the three groups differ sharply on the causes of the problem and what to do about it, although they do agree that racial integration is not a major source of trouble.

Those were among conclusions of a poll of more than 1,600 individuals in high schools all over the state.

Results of the poll, conducted more than a year ago, are published for the first time in a booklet on discipline printed last week by the state Department of Public Instruction.

The booklet also contains suggestions for dealing with discipline problems. Prominent among these is that paddling, suspension and expulsion don't work, and teachers should try instead to communicate with difficult students.

Here are some highlights from results of the poll:

—Most principals, teachers and students believe discipline is a serious problem in high schools. Principals tend to believe it is either remaining the same or declining, but teachers and students agree it is on the rise.

—Teachers and principals tend to blame discipline problems to poor home life and changes in society and its values. Students, on the other hand, blame conditions at school. They cite poor communication with faculty members and boredom with school among their reasons.

—Most students and teachers believe that the typical disruptive student cannot be identified by race or sex. Principals are more likely to believe that boys are more troublesome than girls.

—Teachers tend to believe that discipline problems can best be handled with suspension from involvement in sports and stricter enforcement of rules. Students favored improvements in the curriculum and stu-

A concerted appeal for direct negotiations between China and Japan to end their sanguinary conflict marked the opening session of the Brussels conference, with Italy asserting there can be no question of sanctions.

Delegates of the United States, Great Britain and France joined in an appeal for the Chinese and Japanese to settle their conflict "by peaceful processes."

Negotiations were underway to move Shanghai warfare away from the fringes of the French Concession, where many Americans make their homes.

A Japanese spokesman told of the conversations to neutralize the Nantao area, just south of the Concession. He declared representatives of a neutral power had approached Japanese with a plan designed to avoid further endangering of foreign and Chinese noncombatants.

A 22-year-old Fountain man was killed instantly when the wall of a sand pit in which he was working gave way and buried him beneath two tons of dirt.

The victim and two other men of the same section were hauling sand from the pit originally dug by the Highway and Public Works Commission to secure sand for road construction.

Catching Up With Inflation

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — In 1938 the minimum hourly wage was 25 cents. In 1978, because of legislation signed this week by President Carter, it will be $2.65, or 10 times the dollar amount of 40 years ago.

Now divide by four.

The answer, in terms of purchasing power, is about where the minimum wage stands in relation to that 25 cents of 1938. Using a standard measurement, the 1977-1978 dollar, buying power was about $2 in 1938, less than 50 cents in 1977.

"The impact on our economy will be very beneficial," said Carter during a White House ceremony. "All that ever came" of earlier increases, he said, "is a little better way of life."

Carter said the newest increases, to $3.35 an hour by Jan. 1, 1981, will put $9 billion into the pockets of America's low-wage workers. He didn't mention inflation.

Neither, apparently, was much mention made of the critics who believe the minimum wage itself feeds inflation and thus in part defeats its goals. The poor, who must spend all their money on necessities, are most hurt by inflation.

The minimum wage, aimed at redistributing more of the nation's income into the lowest income brackets, remains controversial, no matter how democratic its goal.

Among the criticisms: it actually closes off job opportunities to the unskilled, it undermines apprenticeship programs, it adds to teen-age unemployment, it contributes to the price spiral by forcing up all other wages.

This, in turn, it is argued, forces millions of Americans into higher tax brackets. Although their higher incomes might be due largely to an illusion, they are forced to pay more taxes nevertheless.

Among the defenses: it is required to help provide the unskilled with the necessities of life, it furthers the cause of more equitable income distribution, it strengthens democracy, it primes the economic pump.

While the goals are noble, one commonly misunderstood aspect of the situation is how the money is taken from workers by dollar erosion almost as fast as they get it.

Business expenses, that is, are simply passed on through as price increases. Some of the expenses might be absorbed if productivity rises, but history shows productivity doesn't rise by making unskilled labor more costly.

Instead, the greater the number of unskilled the less likely are productivity gains to be realized, an economic phenomenon demonstrated during every recent business cycle.

Advices Ties With Environmentalists

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Power company officials should quit "beating environmentalists over the head" and instead treat them like soul brothers, a director of the nation's largest public power company said Wednesday.

"We've got to clean up our act," S. David Freeman, a recently appointed director of the Tennessee Valley Authority, said Wednesday in a speech to the annual convention of the American Public Power Association.

He told the power company executives that they should quit sounding like "apologists for the power companies and the oil monopoly."

"It's time to stop beating the environmentalists over the head. ... It's time that we begin thinking of these people as soul brothers," he said.

"It's time that we stop calling people, who really are our children and our grandchildren, 'they'. We continue to talk that way at our peril," he said.

Freeman said power companies should link up with the national environmental movement in a drive to clean up the air and water and conserve energy.

He said the TVA should replace its transportation system with a new fleet of electric cars.

The TVA should also find a way to extend its no-interest loan program for private home insulation to help industry with conservation efforts, he said.

"I am embarrassed to say that the Tennessee Valley Authority is the No. 1 polluter of air in the Tennessee Valley," Freeman said. "We've got to clean up our act. We'll find the environmental movement will begin to join us in our other goals."

His remarks came at the convention's conservation workshop.

dent involvement in rule-making. Both groups felt "public recognition of positive behavior" would help.

—Principals, teachers and students do not feel that racial integration is a major contributor to discipline problems.

The 173-page book is being distributed to every school in the state as a resource for teachers who need new ideas for dealing with disruptive students.

"The most common punishments," the book says in its introduction, "have been spankings and suspensions, with the most serious offenders being expelled from school or committed to state training schools. Research and experience tell us that this method of handling school discipline problems is not working."

Instead, the booklet offers an assortment of techniques for dealing with discipline problems. Some of them, briefly summarized, follow:

—Identify whether the child's behavior is caused by desire for attention, for power or for revenge against those he feels have rejected him or by feelings of inadequacy. Then follow suggested strategies for dealing with the problem accordingly. For example, if the student is trying for power, put yourself out of the power struggle and try to enlist the student's cooperation in something.

—Discuss the student's behavior with him, reach agreement with him on why it needs to be changed and how that might be done and then sign a written contract with the student, with a clause providing for review later on.

—Reinforce positive behavior with praise, smiles, pats, winks or other rewards. Try to ignore negative behavior or respond by isolating the child. The book warns that this technique is too powerful to use without professional guidance.

—Establish a democratic atmosphere in the class in which students help shape class goals and rules and in which the teacher is leader instead of boss.

—Help the student see his behavior as unhelpful and then help him work out a plan for improving it.

The emphasis in all these alternatives is on identifying and dealing with the source of bad conduct in school rather than with the conduct itself.

Kilpatrick...

greatest practicable extent within their capability."

The bill says at one point that the administrator is not authorized to establish a consumer testing laboratory.

At a dozen other points the administrator, in effect, is ordered to do precisely that. The administrator also is directed to "develop" complaints. What are the meanings and implications of that verb? He is to develop complaints "concerning actions or practices which may be detrimental to the interests of consumers." Does Mr. Carter wonder, now and then, why he makes businessmen nervous?

The "interests of consumers" are to be determined, apparently, by the unrestrained judgment of the administrator. The term is defined back on page 30 of the bill, but in terms as broad as the prairies of Kansas. The administrator's named edict will suffice. The OCR would have no authority to regulate, but it could litigate to the end of time — litigate, and promulgate, and publicize, and summarize; it would appoint dozens of advisory committees, conduct conferences, secure data, support studies, submit recommendations, disseminate statistics, and all the rest.

All this is to be foisted upon the people without committee hearings or prudent examination. The new bill already has won an open rule providing one hour for floor debate. The idea is to rewrite the bill on the floor. A worse way of enacting law could not be devised, but that is what comes of the legislative itch. Will Congress never go home?

Cunniff Col. ...

Productivity increases are a product of human skills and the wise use of capital and technology that lower production costs, allow goods to be sold for lower prices and still leave excesses to be distributed to workers and shareholders.

To raise productivity — call it efficiency — requires capital.

The capital expenditure to create one job varies from industry to industry. In chemicals it might be hundreds of thousands of dollars, in others only a small fraction of that. Some authorities say the average is $50,000-$75,000.

Therefore, says business, to create jobs we must have lower taxes. We must encourage savings. We must reduce inflation. And we must invest the ensuing benefits in a larger production plant.

Almost everyone concedes that the problem with selling the story lies in the suspicions of rank-and-file Americans that fat cat industrialists are serving their own interests rather than those of the nation.

But the alternative, say supporters of this argument, is to give some people more of the pie without cutting into the piece that's supposed to go to their neighbor.

It can't be done, of course. It's an illusion, like inflated dollars. And those on the minimum wage know it better than anyone else.

B-1, the Air Force is desperate for a penetrating bomber and is pushing for a remodeled FB-111 (the old TFX) as a substitute.

In the absence of a penetrating bomber, the Tomahawk's ability to get by even obsolete U.S. defenses is of the most intense interest. If it cannot pass a "live" test, the credibility of the entire U.S. strategic arms policy is in doubt.

Dissatisfied By Response

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Black leaders met with Gov. Jim Hunt Wednesday, but many came away dissatisfied with Hunt's responses to their concerns.

Black unemployment and the Wilmington 10 were the topics that took most of the session in the House chamber of the old Capitol building.

"We've endorsed the good government package and are going to vote for succession, but what are you going to do about the Wilmington 10?" asked one member of the group.

Hunt replied he had listened to everyone with anything to say about the jailed activists, but he insisted he would not be rushed into a decision on a pardon. He added that a vote for succession ought not to be linked to the Wilmington 10 or any other issue.

"I don't want you to vote for anything next Tuesday unless you think it's right for North Carolina," Hunt said.

On black unemployment, Hunt said he was doing all he could for economic development. Some members of the group said blacks were hired last and laid off first in North Carolina.

"That's wrong," Hunt said. "That's morally wrong in addition to being legally wrong." The governor said he would tell the Human Relations Commission to look into the accusations.

After the meeting, the Rev. Jeremiah Webb, a Baptist minister from Weldon, called it "a total flop." Others said it was too short or that the governor was evasive in his answers to their questions.

Offered Job In Finance Dept.

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Jean Lyons heard "some things that sounded outrageous" at a recent Larimer County Commissioners hearing on requests for federal revenue sharing funds.

She addressed the commissioners and impressed Commissioner David Weitzel so much he asked her if "she wanted a job in the finance department." Some of her questions:

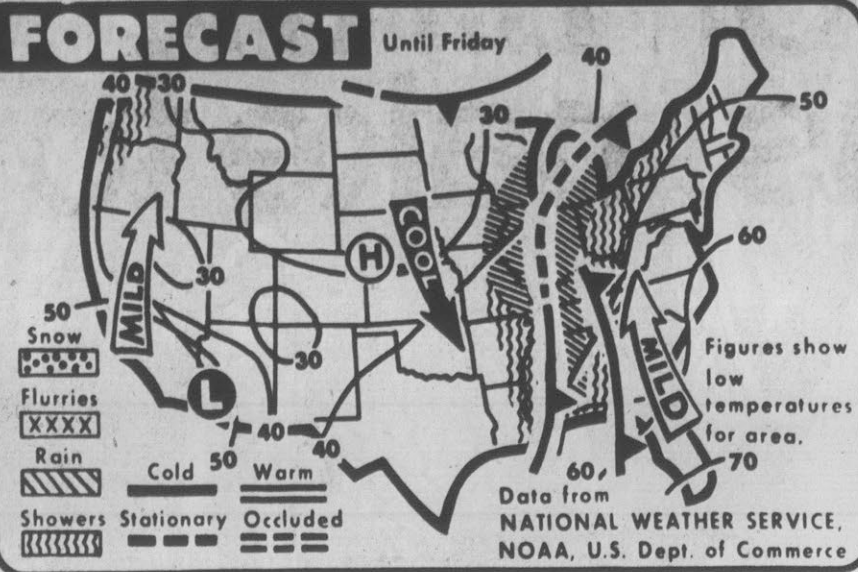

—"Why do they need leather bags" for carrying ballots to elections when canvas bags would be cheaper?

—"I can get a typewriter for $30 at a garage sale," she said, pointing to requests for two $700 typewriters.

—She also objected to air conditioning in sheriff's patrol cars and a $555 swivel chair for the Veterans Service.

As for the county job offer, Jean took a rain check — she's only 12 years old.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain and showers are forecast today from the Gulf to the Great Lakes and western areas of the northeast states.

Mild weather is due for the East and Southwest and the rest of the country is going to be cool. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Cloudy skies and periods of rain or drizzle lingered over much of North Carolina today as high pressure remained stationary off New England, producing moist northeast winds over most of the Atlantic Seaboard.

The unsettled weather situation over the Tar Heel state also was getting help from a slow moving frontal zone from the Great Lakes to Louisiana. The unsettled conditions are likely to continue into Saturday.

Meanwhile, the persistent northeast winds along the North Carolina coast are taking their toll in beach erosion. The National Weather Service said coastal counties chiefly affected by the erosion were New Hanover, Pender and Onslow.

Small craft advisories continued in effect for sounds and coastal waters.

Temperatures ranged in the 60s inland and up in the 70s in coastal areas Wednesday and readings were expected to be about the same today. High readings Wednesday reached 77 at Goldsboro and 74 at Elizabeth City and Jacksonville. In the mountains, Asheville got no warmer than 61.

Guy Lombardo Said 'Critical'

HOUSTON (AP) — Band leader Guy Lombardo was in critical condition today at Methodist Hospital here, six weeks after undergoing surgery on a major heart artery.

He is under the care of famous heart surgeon Dr. Michael DeBakey, who performed the aneurysm operation on Lombardo's aorta Sept. 23. Lombardo was discharged Oct. 18 but re-entered the hospital a week ago.

Lombardo and his Royal Canadians always signal the New Year for thousands of Americans who watch the band and hear them play "Auld Lang Syne" from New York's Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

Pitt County Teacher Of Year Recognized

By DEBBIE JACKSON
Reflector Staff Writer
Mrs. Helen Johnson, sixth grade language arts teacher at Farmville Middle School, was named "Teacher of the Year" at Tuesday's Pitt County Board of Education meeting.

Mark Owens, chairman of the Board, presented Mrs. Johnson with a plaque in recognition of her outstanding work. The plaque which bears the names of previous recipients will hang in the Farmville school for the remainder of the year.

In other business, Associate Superintendent Tom Craft announced the opening of bids at 3 p.m. Nov. 10, for the four-classroom addition at Bethel Elementary School. Bids will also be opened for a media renovation at Bethel, an addition at Pictolus Elementary School, and the cafeteria addition at W.H. Robinson School.

Superintendent of Pitt County Schools Ott Alford recommended Douglas Tripp and Bonnie Evans as School Liaison Officers to work in conjunction with the Pitt County Sheriff's Department. The Board approved the recommendation.

LuAnn Neese was also approved as a teacher at Bethel Elementary School.

In other action, the Board approved a recommendation by Tom Patterson that Joe Lewis replace Raymond Webb on the Farmville Advisory Council, representing Bell Arthur.

The following persons were approved as substitute teachers: Mrs. Ellen W. Braswell of Greenville, Herbert E. Hart Jr. of Farmville, Miss Lillie D. Morgan of Greenville, Miss Rudy N. Morris of Greenville, Mrs. Koma O. Walker of Fountain, and Miss Ina T. Venters of Grimesland.

Gail Stanfield, physical education teacher at North Pitt, was approved to supervise the student teachers.

The following requests made by School Finance Officer Dan

Thomas were also approved: — Request for the approval of a Teachable Mentally Retarded (TMR) budget of $150,900

— Request for an appropriation of new monies accrued to the Pitt County Board of Education during October and since adoption of the 1977-78 Budget. A Liason Project totalling $37,313 was included in the appropriation. Five percent of the project amounting to $1866 of local money has already been transferred from Elementary Teacher Salary.

Alford presented a statement from Henry Dunn, chairman of the Greenville City Board of Education, concerning the proposed merger of the city and county school systems.

The County Board agreed with Dunn's feelings that the survey team from the Division of School Planning of the State Department of Public Instruction should not make any recommendations concerning the merger until the two boards "have had the opportunity to study and interpret the findings of the survey committee."

In other business, the Board approved a request by Alford for the acceptance of a grant in the amount of $119,300 for the "purpose of bringing 36 school drop-outs back to school." An evening program will be set up at Wellcome Middle School for this purpose.

Alford also officially acknowledged to the Board the awarding of a grant in the amount of $37,313 under which the two school liaison officers, Douglas Tripp and Bonnie Evans, will be employed.

Alford also reported that the Community Schools Project application will be given of an inter-agency review committee with awards to be made in early December.

'Fact Sheet' Is Blocked

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Two Iredell County men have successfully blocked further distribution of a fact sheet on the upcoming highway bond election which they claimed was improperly printed with state funds.

The sheet was printed by the state Transportation, which contended it was not designed to persuade voters to approve the $300 million in bonds but merely to inform them on the matter.

But Wake Superior Court Judge A. Pilston Godwin Jr. ordered Wednesday that Gov. Jim Hunt, Transportation Secretary Tom Bradshaw and "their officers, agents and employees" stop further printing and distribution of the sheet at state expense.

Eugene A. Smith, an assistant state attorney general, told Godwin the sheet cost $1,300 to produce.

Bradshaw said later his office had checked with Attorney General Rufus Edmisten's office and had been told there would be no problem with the sheet before it was printed.

The suit was filed by Jonathan C. Knight and David A. Braatz. Their attorney, Hugh Joseph Beard of Charlotte, said he was with the North Carolina Fund for Individual Rights.

Fraternity Served As Boy's Foster Parents

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer
AMES, Iowa (AP) — The boy had some run-ins with the law, stealing and trying forgery. But instead of being placed with foster parents, he was given 55 "foster brothers" at an Iowa State University fraternity house.

George Belitsos, a youth worker, says fraternities and sororities can be better places for troubled teen-agers than foster homes.

"You know, you've just got to be inventive," said Belitsos. "This idea is part of our overall effort to find new resources in the community that nobody's ever considered."

Belitsos is director of Shelter House and Youth Services Care, a program that seeks alternatives to institutions for troubled youths.

He said the Greek groups can help some older teens who lack "extended families" of grandparents or other relatives to care for them when problems arise at home.

"Often a kid needs a separation from home. But we need structured alternatives to foster homes or institutions," he said.

The 17-year-old delinquent who lived in a fraternity last year was a test case. Belitsos said Wednesday he hopes to place at least five more boys and girls at Iowa State this winter. Several fraternities and sororities are interested in the program, he said. Each has been checked with Ames police to ensure a good reputation.

"With 55 men backing him all the way, the boy last year was able to pull himself up and free himself from criminal behavior," Belitsos said. The youth now is doing well in the Army.

The boy lived in the fraternity house with college students. "He ate with them and everything. When they went to college classes, he went to high school," Belitsos said.

"The only difference was at social functions. He was not allowed to drink. And believe me, with 55 guys watching — he didn't break probation. He complained about that."

Belitsos said that living in a fraternity house also helped boost the youth's self-esteem. "He became much more popular at school because he had all these college buddies. That's what he needed: friends."

Belitsos said the fraternity-sorority project costs less than $200 a month per child.

The youths being considered this year are "status offenders" who are not criminals but in trouble for truancy and running away from home, Belitsos said. All are potential college material.

"But most of these kids have probably never known a college student. No one in the family has ever gone to college," he said. "If they can live with college students, see them and the college environment, they will become less frightened of the whole thing."

Rampants Close With Northeastern

Punter Jeff Aldridge

Rose High School's Rampants, with little left to play for except pride, take to the field Friday night against Northeastern, which has everything to lose and everything to gain by winning the season-closing contest.

Rose is out of the running for one of the two Division I playoff berths, following its 24-14 loss to Wilson Fike last week.

Rocky Mount, which hosts Wilson this week, has already locked up one of the berths, and the other remains up for grabs between Wilson and Northeastern. Each has lost one conference game, and it would take a Wilson win coupled with a Northeastern loss for the Titans to gain the berth. Should the two tie for second place, Northeastern would get the berth.

For Rose, the most disappointing thing is that the Rampants could easily have been one of the two playoff representatives, Coach Dave Bumgarner feels.

Against Wilson last week, Rose held a 14-3 lead as the fourth period opened, and had Wilson deep in a hole, second and 36 to go. But the Rampants allowed Wilson to escape from the hole, eventually scoring a touchdown. Later a blocked punt cost the Rampants the lead, and nothing went right during the entire quarter for the Rose eleven.

"We could have done something to get a penalty on that long pass play that pulled them out of the hole. Even then, it wouldn't have been a first down, so we would have still been in pretty good shape," Bumgarner said.

Bumgarner called the turnaround due to about three plays during that final period. One was the pickup that led to the first down in the period's opening series. The second was the blocked punt when Rose had only ten men on the field. The third was near midfield as time was running out when Rose failed on a third and three to pick up a first down on that or the following play.

"Any one of these going in our favor would have been the difference in the ball game," Bumgarner said. "We were getting excellent blocking from our offensive line throughout the first three periods. Wilson cut off our outside game fairly well, but we made good yardage up with middle with Mac (Washington).

"Our continual banging at the inside brought their linebackers and defensive backs up close, and Billy Byrd spotted this and called the touchdown pass play to Billy Roberson.

"I thought we did a great job of defending Wilson. We stopped their strong running game, holding Frankie Hinnant to under 100 yards," the coach said.

Franklin Clark

Bumgarner doesn't feel that the Rampants will suffer a letdown in the final game, set for Ficklen Stadium at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

"It's the last game for a lot of seniors, and I think they will be ready to play. We'll be trying to knock Northeastern out of the playoffs, too. Our kids have pride, and most of them want to win it."

"To win, we're going to have to be able to contain their quarterback," Bumgarner said. "They have excellent receivers, too."

Eric McDaniels is the Eagles' quarterback, hitting 59 of 116 pass attempts for 992 yards. His top target has been split end James Tyler, who has 45 catches for 877 yards and nine touchdowns. Michael Bowser, the wingback, is next in line with just seven catches for 79 yards, with one score.

Tailback Danny Jones leads the rushing with 916 yards, a 5.1 average per carry. Fullback Searcy Howard, with just 39 carries, has 294 yards, a big 7.5 yard per lug mark.

Jones is the leading scorer with ten touchdowns, and 62 points. Tyler is next with nine scores for 54 points.

The Eagles bring in a 7-2 overall record and a 3-1 Division I mark. Rose will be attempting to finish on a winning note, moving from its 5-4 record overall and a 2-2 league mark.

Asked if a victory would make the year a satisfying one, Bumgarner said it really wouldn't. "When you really look at it, we should be in the playoffs. That's the only sour note, so you can never be satisfied."

Seventeen seniors will play their final game, including six offensive and eight defensive starters.

Aerial Attack Against 'Pack

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State will be facing their toughest passing attack ever when the Nittany Lions of Penn State come to town Saturday.

"They are so much more diversified than ever," observed Wolfpack Coach Bo Rein. "That is the big thing. They'll throw anywhere on the field any time. They go on the attack and make you play great defense."

Chuck Fusina is the big threat. He has attempted 161 passes and completed 95 so far this season for more than 1,500 yards.

Miami, supposedly with one of the nation's best pass defenses, fell to Fusina's arm, 49-7.

"He keeps his cool as well as anyone I've seen," said Rein. "Also they've got good receivers and run every pattern imaginable."

"But they can also run the ball," Rein added. "They've had over 300 yards rushing in two games too."

But don't forget the defense, he warned.

"Their defense creates turnovers for their offense," he said. "Eight of their starting defensive players are ex-linebackers. They've got good athletic ability. They move and are big and strong."

Rein said, though, that the Wolfpack still has a good shot at the game. After all, the Pack beat the Lions in 1974 and 1975.

"We have the talent and emotion to play with them," Rein insisted. "There are two big things in helping us get ready for them."

"No. 1, we're coming off a win over South Carolina. And No. 2, they have a high national ranking. We have nothing to lose. We can lay everything on the line and have fun."

Joyner Running Hard For A&T

By Joseph Faust
N.C. A&T University
Special To The Daily Reflector
GREENSBORO — Shortly after his graduation from J. H. Rose High School in Greenville, William Joyner was still undecided on which sport he would play in college.

He was one of the most sought after track runners in the state as he captured the divisional, sectional and regional championships in the 220-yard dash. In football, he was named to the All-County team as a running back at the conclusion of his senior season.

Through the urging of his counselor, a North Carolina A&T alumnus, Joyner decided to stay with football and accept an A&T scholarship.

After a fine freshman season, Joyner now finds himself starting for the Aggies, and against the University of Maryland, Eastern Shore, had his finest collegiate day as he rushed for over 100 yards on eight carries and scored two touchdowns.

"It really feels good to be starting and making a contribution to the success of the team," said Joyner, a sophomore psychology major. "I had some injury problems my freshman year, the first couple of games this season, and I really didn't feel I was helping the team.

"I am at full capacity now and it just feels great to be playing regularly."

Part of Joyner's early indecision about playing football was his early failure in the sport. It wasn't until his junior year in high school that he began to develop confidence in his ability.

"I had an older brother who played high school football and I wanted to follow in his footsteps," said the 5-11, 190-pound Joyner, who run the hundred in 9.5 seconds. "I was cut from the team my freshman year and didn't play much the next year."

"My junior season I earned a starting position and my overall sense of the game started to improve."

So far this year, Joyner has rushed for 412 yards on 59 carries, a 6.9 yard per carry average, best on the Aggie team. He has scored four touchdowns. He is an explosive type runner and gives the Aggies that open field threat that has been missing from the offensive attack the last few years.

"My speed and my ability to get to the outside are my biggest assets," Joyner said. Joyner believes that the Aggies can win their remaining games and finish the season with a good record. This week, they play Eastern Michigan, A&T's first Division I NCAA opponent ever.

"We are working hard to improve our skills and perfect our system," Joyner said. "As a team we are getting to know our coaches and what we're supposed to do on the playing field."

Dye Feels Bucs Still Have Bowl Shot

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Staff Writer

"It's natural to replay the game 40 or 50 times and think about all the areas where we might have made a mistake to keep from having it happen again," Coach Pat Dye said yesterday at his news conference. He was referring to last Saturday night's, 9-7 loss at the hands of Southwestern Louisiana.

"We didn't have a good practice last Wednesday, but I thought we were ready to play on Saturday," Dye added.

He felt that the loss was brought about by a combination of things: the mistakes that the Pirates have made all season, but have been able to overcome. "There were several of them, the penalty when we had fourth and one in close; the holding penalty that kept us from getting a first down at the one. These were significant. That could have been 14 points, and I don't think there is any question we would have won then. The fumbles also hurt us by putting the defense in poor field position."

Dye added that the mistakes were compounded by the Pirates playing a good football team.

Dye was asked about his use of Eddie Hicks on the kickoff returns. The coach said that with Willie Hawkins hurt (and his status is still uncertain for Appalachian State), they felt Hicks was the natural man to use. "But the ball knuckled both times and the wind also made it difficult to catch. Willie Holley had the same problem on the punt he fumbled."

Dye was also asked about the possibility of his leaving East Carolina after the end of the season. He has been mentioned as a possible replacement for Ken Cooper at the University of Mississippi among other jobs.

"I've talked to some one every year. I've been here. If I don't talk to someone, it means we're not winning," he said.

"And I don't go for negative recruiting," he added. "I don't tell a kid that a coach at another school isn't going to be there next year. I go for the positive side. I try to sell him on East Carolina. If you have to low-rate someone to sell someone else, you lose in the long run."

"Besides, if my being in a kid's house isn't proof enough of my plans, I don't know what would be. I don't promise I will be here, to anyone. But I can promise that I haven't accepted a job somewhere else, and that I plan to be here."

Dye also took exception to a headline in the Daily Reflector following Saturday's game, which stated: "ECU Upset, Bowl Fades."

"Who says the bowl is gone," he asked. "I still think we have a lot to offer. Maybe our bowl chances are gone, but I don't think so."

"If we don't get picked for a game, it will be (the bowl's) loss. We have a football team that is as exciting to watch as any in this area. We would be an interesting team to watch, and I know we would take a crowd with us."

While no bowls have contacted East Carolina, Dye said the most likely chances would be in the Independence Bowl in Shreveport, La., providing Southwestern Louisiana does not gain a berth in it, or the Hall of Fame Bowl game in Birmingham, Ala.

Returning to the game, Dye said he felt the defensive unit may have played its best game of the year. "It was a big challenge, and we met it."

"I like our team. You talk about every team having its own personality. I like this one. It's as fine a group of players as any. We have more ability and they are fun to coach. And they've won some big, big football games."

"But I still feel we haven't put it all together. If we can take these last two games, we can be devastating. I think we're showing that in our touchdowns. We've scored 28 of them this year, and the average distance for them is over 28 yards. That is a lot of excitement. It shows the great ability of our people."

He also noted that the two Pirate quarterbacks compliment each other well. "You hear about Dunn at Duke and Evans at State. But Jimmy (Southernland) and Leander (Green) have combined for 1,850 yards. That isn't bad."

HAVING CLINCHED BERTHS in the state playoffs, Farmville Central and Roanoke are probably already thinking ahead to the first-round opponents they will face next Friday night.

That's thinking ahead, not looking ahead, as the Jaguars and Redskins both need wins in their final games of the regular season this Friday night to win their respective conference races outright, although they are already assured of at least ties and of making the playoffs.

The Jaguars, who will represent the Eastern Carolina 3-A, travel to North Lenoir this week. The Jags were unimpressive in a 20-6 victory over North Pitt Monday night and, with fewer practice days this week, could have a tough time with the Hawks.

North Lenoir has shown signs good play this season, but has rarely been able to put it all together. The Hawks are 6-3 overall this season and 3-3 in the league with wins over C. B. Aycock, North Pitt and Southern Nash.

The Redskins, who have a five-game winning streak going after losing their first four, should have an easier time Friday night as they face North Edgecombe, a team with only one victory.

The 2-A Redskins lost all of their non-conference games this season, three to teams of a higher class, but have won every Eastern Plains encounter, including a 26-14 victory over West Edgecombe last week which clinched a playoff spot for them.

Wins by both the Redskins and Jaguars this week would leave them both undefeated in league play as Farmville Central is 8-1 overall and 6-0 in the ECC.

BOTH THESE TEAMS will be hosting their first-round playoff games next week. Farmville Central will be entertaining the representative of the Northeastern Conference, while the Coastal Plains champion will visit Roanoke.

There is currently a three-way tie for first place in the Northeastern race between Ahoskie, Edenton and Plymouth. All three are 4-1 in the league.

Ahoskie has the best overall record of the three with an 8-1 mark, but the team was defeated by Tarboro last week, 26-6. Edenton is 6-3 overall and the Aces' conference loss came at the hands of Plymouth, 34-15. Plymouth, in turn, was defeated by Ahoskie in a squeaker, 7-6.

This week, Edenton travels to Ahoskie for the league's finale and a win by Ahoskie would give that school a playoff berth, while a victory by Edenton would make Plymouth the league's representative, provided the Vikes defeat Washington this week.

Camp Lejeune clinched a playoff spot from the Coastal Plains Conference last week by defeating Pamlico, 25-14. The win gave the Devil Pups a 7-2 overall mark and 4-1 league record, along with the right to represent the conference in the 2-A playoffs.

IF THEY SHOULD both win in the first round, the Jags and 'Skins would then go on the road for their second-round encounters. Farmville Central would travel to play the winner of the East Central and Coastal Conference champions' game. Roanoke would face the winner of the game between the champs of the East Waccamaw and West Waccamaw leagues.

After that, the Jaguars would return home for their remaining two games, while the Redskins would go on the road another time before hosting the championship contest.

Stadium Bids Are Opened

Expansion at Ficklen Stadium may be in danger of being postponed for at least one year, officials found yesterday when they met to open bids for the construction work yesterday.

Bids were received and opened on the general contract and the plumbing. However, only one bid was received for the electrical work and none were handed in for the mechanical work.

Officials announced that these two bids would be readvertised and new bids would be opened on Thursday, November 10. Only one bid per contract is needed in the second opening, however.

Should no one again bid on the mechanical work, the setback in further delays would about end any hopes of getting the stadium addition ready for the coming season.

A total of $2.6 million has been set aside for the project, and even that may not be enough. Additional money would have to be raised, and approved by the state, if necessary, and that would probably bring on further delays.

Parke Construction Co., of Charlotte, issued the low bid for the general contracting with a bid of $2,317,800. Six alternates were included on the bid-sheet.

The first, for "double tee" supports, was not bid upon by any of the contractors.

The second would be for two additional seating sections; the third for ramps to replace existing stairways; the fourth for ramps on the new construction; the fifth for a third level to the press box, unfinished; and the sixth for a finished three level press box.

Parke's alternate bids, second through sixth were: $208,700; $116,900; $160,300; $60,200; and $96,900.

Other general construction bids were as follows, giving contractor, base bid, and alternates, two through six:

Barnhill Contracting Co., Inc., Tarboro: $2,345,700; $185,000; $128,600; $253,700; $54,900; $99,800.

Davidson & Jones, Inc., Raleigh: $2,365,000; $203,000; $180,000; $218,000; $40,000; $66,000.

Hickory Construction Co., Hickory: $2,578,350; $243,650; $191,300; $233,000; $76,800; $31,500.

James D. Little Construction, Wilson: $2,498,000; $236,000; $156,000; $195,000; $61,000; $70,000.

Rouse & Co., Inc., Goldsboro: $2,483,000; $228,000; $185,000; $218,000; $63,000; $104,000.

Low bidder on the plumbing contract was Thompson Plumbing Co., Wilson, with a base bid of $166,964. An additional $8,036 was bid for completion of the press box on alternate six.

Other plumbing bids were as follows, listing base bid and alternate six bid:

J. J. Barnes, Inc., Fayetteville: $179,953; $6,900.

Mimsco, Inc., Raleigh: $189,500; $7,400.

W.M. Wiggins & Co., Inc., Wilson: $238,000; $9,000.

The total of the two low base bids is $2,484,764.

Pell Credits Old Players With Turnaround In Tiger Fortunes

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — The Clemson Tigers, who were starved for victory during the 1976 and 1975 seasons, are getting their fill, and their coach says there is a good reason for that.

"They got tired of always having to explain why on Sundays," Coach Charley Pell said in an interview Wednesday. Last year Clemson was 3-6-2 and in 1975 they were 2-9. This year they are 7-1.

Pell, in his first season with the 13th-ranked Tigers, takes little credit for the changes in the team. He took over when former Coach Red Parker was fired, and had no chance to recruit new players.

There was no need to, he said. Most of the credit for the Tigers' record this season must go to "players who have been here for a period of time and never had the opportunity to contribute. Given the opportunity, they've responded in a great way."

Pell rattled off the names of several of his special team players, linebackers Jeff Soowal and Matt Smith, defensive backs Gary Webb and J.D. Haglan and running backs, Steve Godfrey and Rick Basich.

"Their names haven't been on the typewriters and on the radio, but they're the ones who really made the difference," he said. "Everybody knew (quarterback) Steve Fuller and (split end) Jerry Butler were good players."

"The thing we've always contended is that we have good players," he said. "They may not be as big and strong as some others, but they're good players and we believe in them."

The coach said he was asked before the season began how long it would take him to recruit good enough players to have a winning team.

of the Year print auctioned at the Greenville area DU meeting last night. Flanagan purchased the print, titled "Autumn Snows and Blues" by John P. Cowan. (Reflector photo)

A record sum of over $27,000 was raised in the name of waterfowl conservation last night as the Greenville area chapter of Ducks Unlimited held its annual membership dinner and auction.

A capacity crowd of 250 members attended the event, which was presided over by Eddie Smith, the area DU chairman, with help from John Farley, former national trustee and state chairman.

The amount raised, which came through auction sales of donated items, memberships and other means, was over $4,000 more than what was raised last year.

The auction included the traditional Artist of the Year print, this year "Autumn Snows and Blues" by John P. Cowan and the Ducks Unlimited commemorative shotgun. The gun, an Ithaca 12 ga. pump, honors the 40 years of conservation activities by DU.

Other items in the auction included hunting and fishing trips, a hand-made knife and decoy and other items donated by local sportsmen and businesses. Jimmy Hudson, of Chocowinity made his traditional appearance as the meetings auctioneer. Some 33 items were auctioned with over $6,000 being brought in from the sales.

The meeting, held at the Greenville Golf and Country Club, attracted a number of interested persons from surrounding areas, as well as the DU regional director for North Carolina, Don Manley, Jack Bailey, DU vice-president for the Atlantic Flyway and Dick Fleming, eastern N. C. deputy

Dr. Ray Minges, chairman of the coastal area DU sponsors program, told of the success of the local sponsors program and signed up 14 additional sponsors, increasing the number from the local chapter to 81. For seven straight years, the local chapter led the state in sponsors, through 1976 and could regain the lead this year.

An outing for the local Green Wing contingency, for youngsters 16 and under, was announced last night. They will take a trip to Lake Matamuskeet to view the waterfowl

Elgin Baylor, coach of the New Orleans Jazz, was well aware of the National Basketball Association's policy against verbally assaulting referees.

But Baylor did not flinch taking his best shots at what he considered some poor officiating Wednesday night in the Jazz' last-second 104-102 loss to the Kansas City Kings.

"That was atrocious," Baylor said angrily about the work of referees Jack Madden and Tommy Nunez. "I think if something was said more often, they would be more cautious with their jobs."

Baylor was particularly incensed about an offensive foul called against Truck Robinson with six seconds remaining and the score 102-102. He felt the foul should have been against Kansas City.

After the controversial call Kansas City's Lucius Allen hit a 10-foot jump shot with one second left, giving the Kings the victory and ending New Orleans' five-game winning streak.

Richard Washington led Kansas City with 22 points. New Orleans' Pete Maravich scored 33.

In other NBA games, the Atlanta Hawks winning the Detroit Pistons 102-89, the Chicago Bulls edged the Philadelphia 76ers 103-102, the Buffalo Braves downed the Denver Nuggets 104-100, the Cleveland Cavaliers defeated the Boston Celtics 104-101, the Los Angeles Lakers topped the New Jersey Nets 107-102, and the Seattle SuperSonics outlasted the Indiana Pacers 106-104 in overtime.

Hawks 102, Pistons 89

The victory gave the surprising Hawks a 5-1 record, their best start since the franchise shifted from St. Louis to Atlanta in 1969, and moved them into first place in the Central Division, a half-game ahead of New Orleans.

right eye and said he was seeing double. He was to be examined by an eye specialist today.

Bulls 103, 76ers 102

Artis Gilmore scored 30 points including the go-ahead basket late in the fourth quarter, as the Bulls handed the stumbling 76ers their third straight loss and fourth setback in six games.

George McGinnis' 21 points paced Philadelphia, the losing finalist in last season's playoffs.

Braves 104, Nuggets 100

Randy Smith scored 32 points. Billy Knight had 23 points and 12 rebounds, and Swen Nater collected 14 points, including two clutch baskets in the final two minutes, and 14 rebounds, helping Buffalo end a four-game losing streak.

Ron Behagen, who suffered a broken nose in a collision with teammate John Drew while rebounding during the fourth period, led Atlanta with 22 points. Drew had 20 and Detroit's Bob Lanier scored 29. Lanier also suffered muscle spasms in his

New Criminal Code Is Sent To Floor Of Senate

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time in a decade, Congress is making headway in the arduous task of rewriting some 3,000 federal criminal laws dating back to 1789.

Center Offering Program Nov. 7

A program entitled "What Preschool Teachers Teach" will be presented at the Moyewood Family and Child Development Center Monday, Nov. 7, at 7 p.m. The program is being given by Katherine Yopp and Celeste Carter of the Child Development and Family Relations at ECU. For more information, call 752-0599.

The Senate Judiciary Committee approved the criminal code package 12-2 Wednesday, sending it to the Senate floor.

Passage of the legislation is unlikely before next year, however. It has yet to be considered by the House Judiciary Committee.

Commission's Meet Cancelled

The regular November meeting of the Greenville Parks and Recreation Commission, originally scheduled for Wednesday, Nov. 9, has been cancelled.

Cancellation is due to the fact that Boyd Lee, the department's director, will be attending the annual North Carolina Parks and Recreation Society meeting in Wilmington.

mittee, and a full Senate vote is not anticipated this year.

"I am very hopeful that the full Senate will act favorably on a new code as one of the first orders of business next year," Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., said after the committee voted to recommend passage.

The proposed criminal code contains new protections for rape victims, marijuana smokers and reporters, and tougher sentences for some lawbreakers.

It would curb the power of federal judges to jail newsmen for violating gag orders restricting news coverage, providing the gag order is found unconstitutional on appeal.

The legislation also would reduce penalties and expunge criminal records for possession of small amounts of marijuana, and would shield rape victims from courtroom questioning about their past sexual conduct.

It would provide mandatory minimum sentences, with no parole, for trafficking in hard drugs and for using a firearm in the commission of a crime.

The code would set up a commission to establish guidelines for sentencing, in an effort to eliminate wide disparities in the length of prison terms for the same offense.

Speaking At Revival

A revival will be held nightly at the Proctor Memorial Christian Church, Grimesland the week of November 6-11 at 7:30 p.m.

Speaker and evangelist will be Dr. Harold W. Deitch, who was pastor of the First Christian Church in Salem, Ohio. He led the church in two building programs and during the 22 years of service he baptized over 1800. He has conducted revivals in 30 states and in Australia and Jamaica. Dr. Deitch is a Mason Shriner and a Kiwanian who is currently serving the Red Oak Christian Church in Greenville. During the past 16 months 70 new members have been added.

Voting against the bill were Sen. James Allen, D-Ala., who has criticized some of its provisions as dangerous relaxations of the law, and Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., who has said parts of it are too severe.

Shortly before the final vote, the committee adopted an amendment making it a federal crime for a parent who does not have custody to take his or her own child from the parent who was awarded custody. Parents generally are exempt from federal kidnapping prosecution now.

Not An Assault

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Trying to kiss a policewoman may not be proper but that doesn't mean it's assault, says City Prosecutor Jack Morgan.

On Wednesday Morgan dismissed complaints filed by two policewomen who said men they stopped for traffic violations tried to kiss them.

"You would get laughed out of the courtroom if you filed an assault on a kiss," said Morgan.

Patty Hearst Says All Due Abduction

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst, disappointed by a reaffirmed bank robbery conviction, says the courts still fail to recognize that her involvement in the crime was the result of her abduction by the SLA.

"Everything that occurred in 1974 was the result of my being kidnapped," she said Wednesday in a telephone call to a newspaper reporter. "Justice demands recognition of that fact."

A three-judge panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Wednesday that the 23-year-old Miss Hearst received a fair trial and upheld her conviction for the 1974 robbery of a Hibernia Bank branch in San Francisco.

Chief defense attorney F. Lee Bailey was unavailable for comment, but associate Wayne Smith said the case definitely will be appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

"I am extremely disappointed that the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals was incapable of rendering a purely just decision," Miss Hearst said in a statement read to a San Mateo Times reporter.

"The lesson to be learned from my experiences so far is, 'don't get kidnapped,'" she added.

Despite Wednesday's unanimous decision, there is little likelihood that Miss Hearst, free on $1 million bail, will soon start serving her seven-year prison sentence.

U.S. Attorney James Brown, who prosecuted the case, told a news conference his office "will not seek any order for her confinement" pending completion of the appeals process.

"We had hoped the appeal would be in her favor," said Miss Hearst's father, newspaper executive Randolph A. Hearst. "We thought there were very good grounds for the appeal."

Miss Hearst was convicted in March 1976 for her role as a rifle-toting bandit in the April 15, 1974

Hibernia Bank holdup.

The appeals court said trial Judge Oliver Carter acted properly in ordering Miss Hearst to answer government questions about her months as a fugitive with her Symbionese Liberation Army kidnappers.

"We conclude on the basis of well-established principles that no reversible error occurred and that the judgment must be affirmed," the court said in its 40-page decision.

In oral arguments before the appeals court, Bailey had said her constitutional rights against self-incrimination were violated when she was asked questions not legally permissible.

Miss Hearst used the 5th Amendment 42 times during her eight-week trial in refusing to answer the questions Bailey contended should not have been asked.

But the appeals court agreed with a government argument that Miss Hearst's activities while with the SLA after the bank robbery were crucial to her defense of duress.

The court ruled that Carter properly balanced "the need for the evidence in the search for the truth against the possibility that the jury would be prejudiced."

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Vitamins Can Be Dangerous

Some of my friends at college are pill-poppers. They're health nuts. The pills are not meant to give them highs and lows. They all contain vitamins of one kind or another. Is it true that these vitamins can increase energy? — Miss C. V., Calif.

Dear Miss V.: Vitamins are an excellent contribution in a well-balanced diet. Any normal diet usually contains sufficient vitamins and minerals to satisfy the body's needs.

Only in those specific instances when there is a known vitamin deficiency is there an essential need for supplemental vitamins.

For example, some health food regimes so limit the nutritional intake that vitamin and mineral supplements are mandatory. It is a misconception to believe that large doses of vitamins can increase pep and energy.

Fortunately, the body has a remarkable control system which eliminates unneeded and unused vitamins. Our sewer system is filled with the excretion of these expensive vitamins.

That same protective device does not apply to all vitamins. Unusually large doses of vitamin A and vitamin D are actually dangerous to health.

Dr. Jean Mayer, one of America's foremost authorities on nutrition, states in his excellent and sensible book, "A Diet for Living": "Vitamin B12 is among the nutrients which have too often been given in massive doses, needlessly and without scientific reason. The only indication for injections of B12 is for a specific condition, pernicious anemia, where persons cannot properly use the B12 they consume."

You'll probably have a great deal of difficulty convincing the vitamin faddists that they're wasting their money. What you can do is to stay on a good nutritious diet and you will find that it will contain all the vitamins and minerals you need for health and pep.

To health faddists of all kinds I would like to recall the Scotsman's plea: "Please God, make me right; I'm always so positive."

My arms get black and blue at the slightest injury. The marks don't really hurt, but they embarrass me. I'm 19 and in perfect health. My doctor has never been able to explain this. Can you? — Miss R.E.O., Tex.

Dear Miss R.: I'm certain that all doctors can explain as well as I can that these black-and-blue marks are caused by a break in a tiny blood vessel. They're known as "ecchymoses."

The small blood vessel beneath the skin is easily injured; then blood seeps out and stagnates in a small pool.

The black-and-blue marks occur particularly in fair-haired people who have thin, translucent skin. The fact that you are in normal health indicates that your doctor has performed the routine blood studies concentrating on the clotting mechanism.

Older people who are taking blood-thinning drugs will sometimes develop ecchymoses, too.

Carter Seeks Rally Jewish Community

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is trying to rally support for his Mideast peace policies in the American Jewish community while warning that "intemperance and partisanship" are a threat to a permanent solution.

But cries by demonstrators Wednesday that the president is "stabbing Israel in the back" and the worries of established leaders over his overtures to Palestinian Arabs indicate he has not succeeded in quelling fear and suspicion.

In what his partisans called "a balanced speech that pulled no punches," Carter told the International Jewish Congress that his commitment to Israel remains unshakable. He said he understands that the Palestine Liberation Organization fans Israel's worst fears by refusing to recognize Israel's right to survive while using terror and violence. On the other hand he referred to what he called the "legitimate rights" of Palestinian Arabs while saying that he prefers that an independent Palestinian state not be set up on the West Bank of the Jordan River.

"We are proud to be Israel's firm friend and closest partner — and we shall stand by Israel always," Carter told the audience, which 11 times interrupted his speech with applause. His reference to partisanship and intemperance was an apparent retort to Senate Republican leader Howard H. Baker, who told the same audience Tuesday that Carter policies are not only jeopardizing Israel's security but are playing "Russian roulette" with world peace.

The emotional high point of the evening came when Carter accepted an elaborate Torah from a 14th century Jewish community in Czechoslovakia. As he held it in his arms, he said it will be placed on display "where I'll observe it daily as a constant reminder of the spirit of human rights, decency and love."

Bookbinder said that while he did not agree with every detail, the overall thrust of the address was "one of the most eloquent and encouraging speeches ever made before a Jewish audience about Israel. ..."

Twice-Retired, Is Back On Job

By EARL BOHN
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) — A twice-retired, 76-year-old inventor has postponed his date with a rocking chair for a role in research to make the nation's steel industry more efficient.

He is G.R. Fitterer, former dean of engineering at the University of Pittsburgh, who left education at 70 to work in industry.

Fitterer is self-employed, pursuing an idea he claims might save steelmakers 200 million pounds of aluminum a year — about $100 million worth. Aluminum is needed to absorb impurities in molten steel, and the key to Fitterer's idea is finding how to measure molten steel's temperature and oxygen content. That information would make it possible to calculate precisely the amount of aluminum needed.

"We've already run some tests and they are proving our point," the white-haired metallurgist said.

At an age when many old people are settling into their retirements, Fitterer's seems to be working for him.

U.S. Steel Corp., the nation's largest producer, is financing its own research to find ways to reduce consumption of aluminum.

But Fitterer has been awarded a $99,600 grant from the federal Energy Research and Development Administration to carry on his work, becoming only the second senior citizen to participate in ERDA's Energy-Related Invention Program.

"Mandatory retirement is one of the worst aspects of society," he said. "You spend your life gathering background and know-how, and then at age 65 the company sends you out the door. It's a waste."

Fitterer said current methods of gauging aluminum needs are inaccurate, forcing steelmakers to use about twice as much aluminum as required.

"Considering everything that's involved — aluminum, scrap steel, and the large amounts of electricity needed to make aluminum — enough energy would be saved as would be generated by two nuclear power plants operating for a year," he said.

Fitterer's concept is being tested by McClouth Steel Co. in Trenton, Mich., and the industry is awaiting the results.

"The domestic steel industry naturally would welcome any development that would reduce either raw materials or melting costs," said an American Iron and Steel Institute spokesman. "The fact that ERDA has funded Fitterer's work would seem to indicate that it has some merit."

Fitterer has also proposed substituting an iron-aluminum alloy for the pure aluminum now used in steelmaking. He would also like to begin looking for an even cheaper metal for purifying steel.

"If somebody told me to relax and take it easy, I'd laugh at them," he said.

Oregon Dispersing The 'Shaniko Gang' Survivors

By LINDA KRAMER
Associated Press Writer
SHANIKO, Ore. (AP) — Howard Lane slowly draws his gun and looks down the streets of Shaniko where once 13 saloons overflowed with cowboys and dancing girls.

Lane, 66, is the city's self-appointed sheriff. He has a shiny badge to prove it and the gun, which is plastic.

He lives here with other members of the "Shaniko gang," a group of elderly, mentally retarded folks who have had the run of this virtual ghost town in the central Oregon desert.

The gang was brought together by Sue Morelli Widmark, a registered nurse who 20 years ago decided to buy the city's 95-year-old hotel and turn it into a foster care home.

Last month, Mrs. Widmark decided to pull out and auction off the hotel and its relics of Shaniko's heyday. She says she was sad about the decision, but could no longer bear up under state pressure to bring the building up to sanitation and fire code requirements.

She sank $10,000 of her own into improvements, but said she can't raise the money to re-vamp the city's whole water system. The present system can't generate the pressure needed for a fire sprinkler system required in the hotel by the state.

"We had a real happy home and everything was going fine, and all of a sudden according to the state's standards we weren't a good home any more," said Mrs. Widmark.

"I just feel compassion and the rights of my people were not considered," she added. "It just didn't seem right being here so long and because of some rules someone comes up with, they had to be moved out."

At one time there were 30 members of the Shaniko gang. Most had spent the majority of their lives in institutions. All the survivors are now in nursing or foster homes, except for four the state has agreed to let Mrs. Widmark take with her.

"The state paid me $167 a month," she said. "The same people go in a nursing home — and I don't think they'll get better care — and the state pays $400-$600 a month. It doesn't make sense to me. Why not give me the extra money so I could comply with the state codes?"

In the early 1900s Shaniko was the terminus of the Columbia Southern Railroad and residents called it the largest inland wool shipping center in the world.

The sign planted where Highway 97 runs through Shaniko now says "Pop. 70." According to Mayor Julie Robinson, that's an exaggeration.

Squid Valuable Protein Source

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although the squid isn't the favorite dish of many Americans, it is considered a delicacy in many parts of the world.

Dr. Paul Singh of the University of California says Italians, Greeks, Spaniards, Portuguese, Chinese, Japanese, and South Americans have feasted on the squid, which is a good source of protein, for centuries.

Singh regards the squid as a valuable source of protein. He cites studies that estimate the potential global catch for squid may be from 100 million to 300 million tons a year.

Mrs. Widmark, despite her regrets over the hotel's demise, said she is looking forward to a new life on a farm with her husband. And she'll still be caring for some of the old Shaniko gang, including Lane because "I can't be without my sheriff."

The others going with her are Richard Reynolds, 69, Bill Daniels, 69, and his wife, Fayette, 62. They were married a year ago in the hotel lobby amid old west memorabilia and walls crowded with moose heads, deer heads and stuffed bobcats.

There was nothing unusual about the gang's last day in the historic brick hotel. The lobby's black and white television was tuned to "The Flintstones" and the old folks watched quietly, at times chuckling.

Sheriff Lane stoked the wood burning stove. John Martin, 78, puffed on his pipe. Charlie Parker, 77, stood on the wood sidewalk in front of the hotel and tossed bread crumbs to the birds.

A woman from a Methodist church in Madras, at 40 miles away one of the nearest towns, arrived with going away gifts for the gang — shirts for the men and scent for the women.

The next day Sue Cowherds, an adult services worker for the state, came to take the residents to a Hood River nursing home and a foster home in The Dalles.

"We have something better for those people now," said Mrs. Cowherds, who has visited the Shaniko gang regularly for six years. "They need to have the benefit of all the state can do for them with activity centers and shelter workshops. Shaniko was too remote."

"I think they got along okay and they had a lot of freedom out in the country," she added. "It was the only place of its kind I knew of. But nothing lasts forever. It's the end of an era."

Russian Spoken At College Hall

SOUTH HADLEY, Mass. (AP) — The first Russian-speaking dormitory for American college students opened at Mount Holyoke College in South Hadley, Mass., in 1961. Eighteen students chose to speak Russian as part of their daily routines.

The residence hall, along with several other residences for language students, has since been replaced by the five-story Roswell Gray Ham Hall, a dormitory housing about 120 students who elect to live in areas where French, German, Spanish, Russian, Italian or Chinese are spoken exclusively.

The bidding:
South West North East
1♠ Pass 1♠ Pass
2NT Pass 3♦ Pass
3NT Pass Pass
Opening lead: Seven of ♣.

During the play of the hand every card tells a story. West's choice of opening lead was directly responsible for his partner's defense on this hand.

The bidding meets with our approval. North correctly showed his five-card major in response to his partner's opening bid, then indicated his distaste for no trump by supporting opener's suit. However, South's wealth of stoppers in the red suits swayed him to attempt to take nine tricks at no trump.

A diamond lead would have been effective, but West decided to lead the unbid major. Had he routinely led his fourth-best, declarer would have coasted home. East would surely win the ace and return the suit, and by finessing the jack, declarer would score two hearts, two diamonds and five club tricks.

West decided that it might be important to convey to partner that he held nothing in hearts, so he selected his second-best heart. To East, it immediately became apparent that declarer held king-jack in the suit, and that a heart continuation would only give declarer a trick he couldn't score otherwise.

Therefore, East decided to win the ace of hearts and look for more fertile fields. Spades and clubs were unattractive as a source of tricks, so East shifted to a diamond. Now the defense was firmly in control. Since declarer couldn't come to nine tricks without developing a trick in spades, all West had to do was win the ace of diamonds and continue diamonds whenever he gained the lead. Eventually he would establish the setting trick before declarer could set up his ninth, and the defenders were sure to collect two spades, a heart and two diamonds.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Viewers' Special: 'I, Claudius' Being Presented On Public TV

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — If you saw the Roman movie epics of the 1950s, you learned there's only one Caesar and he is Victor Mature. But watch "I, Claudius" on public TV for 13 weeks. You'll change your mind.

This acclaimed BBC series, based on Robert Graves' 1934 novel about ancient, corrupt Rome, starts Sunday on the "Masterpiece Theater" show hosted by the always-urbane Alistair Cooke.

It's a richly textured, well-acted dramatization of the period 24 B.C. to 54 A.D., when emperors Augustus, Tiberius, Caligula (he was a bit bent, you'll recall) ruled Rome in their varied ways.

(A warning: Those poorly versed in Latin history might consult the history first or see each show with an expert, as it's a mite hard to tell who is doing what to whom and why without a scorecard.)

The series deals with the high-level power struggles, interfamily murder, intrigue and general decadence that led to the eventual fall of the Roman Empire and the ruinous first wave of German tourists there.

It's done in the form of a history secretly written by Claudius when he's old and rightfully convinced that certain parties wish to hasten his bon voyage from this mortal earth.

Sunday's opener starts the history with the reign of Augustus and the machinations of his second wife, Livia, who to promote relative power poisons his son-in-law, Marcellus, making him an ex-hair apparent.

This is bad form now, but was the common thing in the good old days, ditto fratricide, incest and the orgy. As such are touched on in "I, Claudius," steps have been taken to alert viewers and stations this is not a Romanized version of "Father Knows Best."

Cooke, in his opening remarks on history, Graves' book and the show, warns that "some people are going to be more shocked by this series than most of the dramas we've shown on 'Masterpiece Theater.'"

But he emphasizes that none of the show's few potentially shocking scenes are gratuitous or intended as titillation. This is history as it was, he says, noting that Graves' based his book on the works of Suetonius, a famed Roman historian of 75-150 A.D. vintage.

He repeats this theme in later shows, particularly one about Caligula, the mad emperor who declared himself a god, married his sister, rendered her pregnant, then killed her and her unborn child.

Cooke insists there's "no delicate or comfortable way" to dramatize the life of this worthy, and wryly suggests: "Maybe tender-minded people might prefer to switch to something more pasteurized."

Still, at WGBH, which bought the series, producer Joan Sullivan says she deleted some parts — but not entire scenes — of five episodes on grounds of taste.

People Still Dance At Roseland

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Still they come to Roseland. They come to remember and to forget. They come for flirtation and light conversation, for an afternoon's courtship or a companionship of years. Above all, they come to dance.

And under the compassionate lights and gentle batons of the Roseland ballroom, all things are possible and the clichés are true:

The music works like vanishing cream and the red paper roses look fresh in crimped white hair. Wall flowers bloom, or at least forget, and withered widows can pretend to be Cinderellas.

After 58 years, Roseland survives on 52nd Street west of Broadway, a time capsule of ladies and gentlemen dancing cheek to cheek in a vast art deco music box.

Every week, 6,000 to 10,000 persons pay $3.50 each to dance on the 10,000 square foot floor of polished maple. About 2,000 people can dance in the nation's largest ballroom.

"I see Roseland as a happy place where people come to truly dance and have a good time. We want to do away with the lonely hearts image," said Nancy Brecker Leeds, daughter of Lou Brecker who opened the original Roseland on New Year's Eve in 1919.

At that time, it was located at 51st Street and Broadway, under Philadelphia Jack O'Brien's pool hall. In 1956 it moved to its present location, the old Gay Blades ice skating rink, and it is still family owned.

Roseland remains an island of gentility, a flourishing anachronism in a garish district of theaters, discos, bars, peep shows, assorted joints and souvenir shops. It retains an air of innocence and pleasant unsophistication.

Roseland is to the blue collar, white collar and polyester set what Regines, the popular East Side discotheque, is to the jet set. A meeting place, especially for older singles.

"It's a social club, a hobby, a home away from home, a religion," said Ade Kahn, Roseland's public relations man for many years.

Roselanders come from all over. They fly in from Detroit for the weekend, take the train from Philadelphia, drive in from New Jersey, catch the subway from Queens or a cab from Brooklyn. A man once came in snow shoes and a blind man felt his way with a cane.

They are secretaries, housewives, teachers, businessmen, doctors, lawyers, truck drivers, steam fitters. Dance teachers take their students and psychiatrists have been known to take their patients for a dose of dance therapy.

Roseland doesn't swing, it sways. It is cavernous, but cozy. The scent of safe adventure wafts over this museum of glad rags and plastic roses, golden slippers, chiffon scarves, false eyelashes and beauty spots. It is a King Solomon's mine of rhinestone baubles and a church social of Sunday best.

In a jazzier time, it used to be Roseland Dance City, but they dropped the "Dance City," because it sounds classier.

And there's no dime-a-dance stuff, either. That went out in the 1920s, along with marathon dancing.

And, please — Roseland officials lower their voices — do not call it a dance hall. That sounds sleazy. It is a ballroom.

Almost 60 million people have danced there, including Ray Bolger, Ruby Keeler, Chita Rivera, Fred and Adele Astaire. And there was Rudolf Valentino, Joan Crawford, James Cagney, George Gershwin.

In the lobby under glass, the magic shoes of the greatest dancers are preserved, glazed artifacts of sequins and beads, or beat out loafers with worn-down heels.

Also under glass are the names of more than 500 married couples who met at Roseland. But death and divorce have left gaps in the columns.

Alternating Latin and American bands play nonstop under the American flag that ripples in electric lights over the satin-draped bandstand. Over the years, Roseland has thrived to the music of Benny Goodman, the Dorsey brothers, Harry James, Gene Krupa, Guy Lombardo.

The couples still dance cheek to cheek to waltzes, tangos and fox trots, the old-time classics that require skill. This is a place of steps not gyrations, of decorum not abandon.

You can't get by with a wiggle here, and rock 'n' roll is out. The only modern dance permitted is the hustle.

About 60 per cent of the patrons come in couples, said comanager Jim O'Connor. The rest come alone, and for them Roseland is a social club and respectable singles hang out.

On Thursdays, Saturdays and Sundays the matinees attract the middle-aged and elderly. About 200 regulars come several times a week.

A younger crowd comes at night, and aspiring dancers come to the contests, in hopes of becoming another Fred Astaire or Ginger Rogers.

Knowing that the old folks eventually will fox trot off into glory, Roseland officials are trying to attract new blood and shake the lonely hearts image.

But the veterans are still the mainstay of Roseland.

A tiny lady, a wizened walnut in brown lace and gold lame, snapped her fingers and tapped her gold-shod toe to the matinee tempo, like a coed at a hop.

"I love the jitterbug," she giggled. "Waltzes put me to sleep."

Her son drives her in from Belleville, N.J., and picks her up later.

"This is my second home," she said. "For more than 10 years I've been coming three times a week for the matinees," said the lady who would not tell her name or age.

"This is a wonderful place," she said. "Very clean and strict. I dance with everyone, but some guys just want to hug and hold you, so I never dance with them again."

Inventor Sought Right Answers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ever since man learned to count by using his fingers and toes, he has been seeking better and faster ways to add and subtract. Early devices included the abacus, counting rods and later the slide rule.

The first simple adding machine using geared wheels was devised in 1642, but it was 245 years later that Dorr Eugene Felt, of Chicago, Ill., invented an adding machine that was "absolutely accurate all the time." The patent for his first key-driven machine, which developed into the comptometer, was issued on Oct. 11, 1887, according to Intellectual Property Owners, a non-profit organization dedicated to the preservation of the U.S. patent system.

Felt entered into partnership with Robert Tarrant shortly afterward and for the next 15 years theirs was the only multiple key-driven calculator on the market, says IPO.

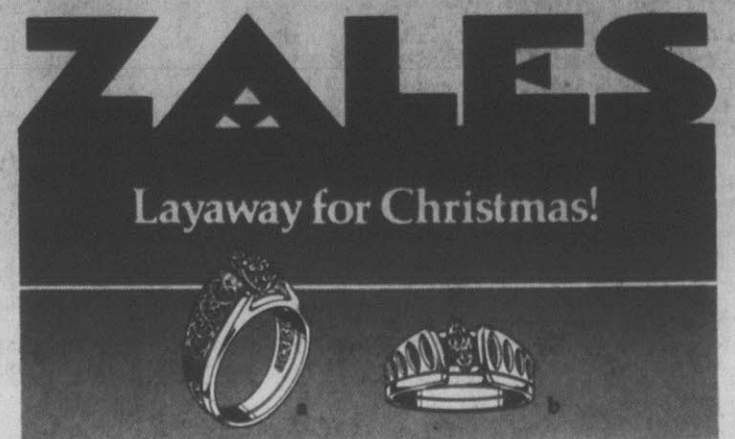

Paper-Cutting A Chinese Art

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Those preschool tots laboring to create cutout masterpieces for proud parents are following a craft almost as old as paper itself.

The ancient art of paper cutting originated in North China after the invention of paper there about 100 A.D.

Traditionally called "window flowers" and fashioned from red paper, some of the first cutouts were used to decorate thin paper windows coated with tung oil to make them partially transparent.

The cheerful designs were pasted on the windows year round to give otherwise bleak rooms a touch of brightness and color, the National Geographic Society says.

N.C. Claims Largest Of Each Species

By Dr. H. G. JONES, Curator
North Carolina Collection
CHAPEL HILL, N. C. (AP)
— What do quercus Xbeadlei, torreya taxifolia, and pinus taeda have in common?

They are species of trees, and North Carolina can claim the largest of each species.
Furthermore, they are only three of the 12 types whose champion stands on North Carolina soil.

These are not local claims based upon limited comparisons; they are world records as listed in the Social Register of Big Trees.

In all, there are about 1,180 different species of trees which grow naturally in the United States, and champions of nearly a thousand of them have been listed. Of course, there are changes from time to time when a newly discovered tree displaces an old champion.

To claim a record, a nominator must furnish to the American Forestry Association, 1318 Eighteenth Street, Washington, NW, Washington, D. C., 20036, a photograph, name of the species, location of the tree, date measured and by whom,
name and address of the owner, condition of the tree, and these measurements: circumference four and a half feet above the ground, total height, and one-quarter of the crown spread.

Nominations are welcome,
for a supplement to the list is published every couple of years. Normally federal and state forestry officials personally inspect trees that are thought to be of record-breaking dimensions.

Champion trees are often located in virtually inaccessible areas. For instance, to get to the great Red Spruce in the Smoky Mountains National Park, James Hubbard of the North Carolina Forestry Service and Jim Hollandsworth, who found the tree, had to go on a three-day expedition.

Hubbard wrote, "I have been on a lot of rough hikes, hunts and timber cruises, but there was truly more hard going on this one than on any single hike
I remember."

North Carolina's champions
are not restricted to one area, though more are found in the mountains.

The 12 species for which North Carolina claims the biggest are (species, location, circumference in feet and inches, height in feet, and crown in feet listed in that order):

Fraser Fir, Cashiers, 8-2, 83,
48; Carolina Hemlock, Linville
Gorge, 11-7, 88, 54; Beadlei Oak,
Ahoskie, 17-2, 102, 135; Bernard
Oak, Umstead State Park, 9-10,
78, 64; Cherry Bark Oak, Woodville, 29, 120, 126; Loblolly Pine,

Hertford County, 14-5, 162, 73;
Shortleaf Pine, Hamptonville, 9-10, 130, 52; Virginia Pine, Rutherford County, 7-7, 85, 53; Alleghany Serviceberry, Silers
Bald, 6-2, 60, —; Sourwood,
Robbinsville, 6-5, 118, 25; Red Spruce, Smoky Mountains National Park, 13-9, 110, 50; Florida Torreya, Norlina, 9-1, 45, 40.
North Carolina's champions

are peewees compared with the largest trees in the country.
For instance, a Coast Redwood growing in Humboldt County, Calif., is 368 feet tall — longer than a football field including both end zones.

In terms of circumference, however, even that Redwood is a sapling, for in Sequoia National Park in California stands a Giant Sequoia measuring 84 feet around. Its diameter is longer than two automobiles

one in front of the other.

The smallest tree for which there is a world record is the Gallberry. The champion, only five inches in circumference, stands in Hardin County, Tex.

Also in Texas is the shortest tree for which there is a champion — the Evergreen Sumac,
only 11 feet tall.

Predict Better Weather Data

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — Farmers and ranchers in Texas and throughout the nation will have access to additional improved weather information once a national agricultural network is established.

The National Weather Service is working with the Extension Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture on a system for more effectively gathering and disseminating weather information to benefit producers, according to the associate director for meteorology and oceanography of the NWS.

Dr. Karl Johannsen said the service plans to provide a staff member for each state who will work closely with the NWS to make best possible use of agricultural weather information. He said the NWS plans to establish about 330 weather radio stations, broadcasting continual weather information, and will add 28 new staff members nationally to provide additional agricultural weather information.

Europeans Big Fruit Eaters

NEW YORK (UPI) — North Americans and western Europeans eat about the same amount of fresh vegetables per capita, or about 150 pounds per year. Eastern Europeans top that figure by 200 pounds.

But in fresh fruit consumption, western Europeans are way ahead. Per capita consumption is 265 pounds per capita in West Germany, over 200 pounds per capita in Italy, Spain and Switzerland and 167 pounds in France, compared with only 75 pounds in the United States.

These figures were cited by D.J. Kirchhoff in a speech to food reporters and editors here. The meeting was sponsored by the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association.
