First Carter Veto Stops Nuclear Research Funds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter cast his first veto Saturday to stop the funding of a nuclear research plant which would have produced plutonium, a key ingredient of nuclear bombs.

The veto killed a 1978 Energy Department authorization bill because it ordered funding for the Clinch River (Tenn.) breeder reactor demonstration plant.

Carter has consistently opposed the facility because it would produce plutonium as a byproduct at a time when the United States is attempting to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons and capabilities.

The president, a former nuclear engineer, said the funding would result in "a large and unnecessarily expensive project which, when completed, would be technically obsolete and economically unsound."

"I am committed to a vigorous energy research and development strategy to ensure maximum progress on shifting the energy base of the United States away from oil and natural gas," Carter said.

"However, I am also concerned about the risk of introducing the plutonium economy through an unnecessary commercial demonstration facility."

"Construction of the Clinch River facility in no way is necessary to ensure continued development of nuclear technologies, including liquid metal fast breeder technology," Carter said.

Domestic affairs adviser Stuart Eizenstat told reporters the federal funding for the project had grown from $250,000 when it was first authorized in 1970 to an estimated $2 billion now. The vetoed bill contained $80 million for the project.

"Yet current projections of the increase in the need for nuclear-generated electric power in the year 2000 are only one-third of estimates made in 1970," Carter said in a two-page veto message to Congress.

"The breeder reactor will, therefore, not be needed in the early 1990s, as had been projected when the Clinch River facility was first authorized."

Eizenstat said the fact that Carter's first veto came near the end of a busy legislative session demonstrated the "considerable cooperation" that has existed between the president and the congressional leadership.

Eizenstat said that during a similar period, President John F. Kennedy had vetoed five bills passed by a Democratic Congress.

Eizenstat said Carter was "very hopeful" that Congress will not override the veto. He also expressed the belief that Congress will re-enact the bill without the Clinch River authorization.

Carter also said he was vetoing the bill because it: —Seriously inhibits the president from pursuing effectively an international policy to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons and nuclear explosive capacity.

—Puts burdensome limitations on the president and Energy Department in exercising necessary judgment to provide an effective energy research program.

—Puts unwelcome limitations on the nation's ability to implement the new spent fuels policy to aid nonproliferation goals.

Eizenstat said the bill also was "a tremendous encroachment" upon presidential authority through three provisions that would have permitted one chamber of Congress to veto presidential actions.

Second Official Suspended

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The state Employment Security Commission has confirmed a television report that a second migrant program official has been suspended.

Ted Davis, information director of the commission, confirmed a story on WFMV-TV here that Jim Brock, the rural manpower representative in Yadkin, Alexander, Wilkes and Forsyth Counties, has been suspended.

Steve Wells, a rural manpower representative who works out of the commission's Burlington office, was the first worker to be suspended. Davis said both suspensions were effective Nov. 2.

No Replacement Available

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Brantly Park didn't think the Parkland Senior High School would have any trouble finding a replacement for him when he submitted his resignation last week.

With all the people looking for teaching jobs in North Carolina, it seemed his mathematics post wouldn't be hard to fill. But Park has been told there's nobody available to take his place, so he may have to teach algebra and geometry a few weeks longer.

To Provide Interpreter

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — A federal judge has upheld a lower court's recommendation that Western Carolina University provide an interpreter for a deaf graduate student in keeping with its equal opportunity pledge.

U.S. Middle District Court Judge Hiram H. Ward Friday affirmed the recommendation of U.S. magistrate Russell A. Eliason that the school provide either an interpreter or some other method of relaying classroom lectures to Jimmie R. Crawford, a deaf graduate student.

Eliason estimated it would cost the university from $5 to $10 an hour for the 10 hours a week the student will need the interpreter.

Eliason made his recommendation after Crawford filed a complaint against the school, its chancellor, the University of North Carolina and its president, and the chairman of the university's board of governors.

'Hard Working, God-Fearing Man'

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A Durham principal who held 32 persons at gunpoint for four hours Thursday was "a hardworking, principled and Godfearing man," according to one of his victims.

Durham County Superintendent J. Frank Yeager said, "I think if you met him before Thursday, he would be the last person you would ever expect to see with a gun. His way of dealing with a problem was to say he would pray for you."

Principal Clarence C. Blanton was transferred Friday from Duke University Medical Center here to a Raleigh mental hospital after he was charged with one count of kidnapping in connection with the siege at a Bethesda Elementary School faculty meeting.

Police Kissing Can Be Illegal

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The state has charged two men with assault and battery for allegedly kissing policewomen, but Tulsa's top policewoman says the city prosecutor's refusal to bring the charges himself has made women officers "the object of ridicule."

"A female officer is not a sex object. We have a tough enough job ... to have to put up with something like this is wrong ... so inherently wrong," Sgt. Monte Peterson said Friday.

Her criticism was aimed at City Prosecutor Jack Morgan, who refused on Wednesday to file charges after policewomen Perri Burnett and Rosie Nadeau reported that each was kissed by a man she stopped for questioning.

Morgan said there was no indication of intent to do "corporate harm."

"I don't think there is any law against kissing a police officer," he said. "Maybe they should ask the commissioners to get a law passed covering it."

Morgan's "sexist attitude has made (women) officers the object of ridicule," Ms. Peterson said. "The day this came out (in news stories), I went into a restaurant and the customers were laughing about it."

After Morgan refused to prosecute Jimmy M. Fortner, 24, and Marshall W. Norman, 28, officers Burnett and Nadeau persuaded the state district attorney's office to file assault and battery charges.

Ron Shaffer, the state's chief prosecutor in Tulsa County, said he filed the charges because force allegedly was involved in the incidents.

Bleak Picture On Energy

By MARTIN MERZER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The recession of the mid-1970s was caused primarily by the four-fold increase in Mideast oil prices. Now, a chief economic aide of President Carter says the nation's continued emergence from that recession can be blocked by another energy crisis.

"The potential exists for a bright economic future," Charles L. Schultze, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, told about 1,800 bankers during a speech this past week. "But there is one critical premise which underlies that conclusion: We must have in place an effective national energy policy."

It came as no surprise that a close Carter aide was seeking support for the President's energy plan as it was being discussed and altered in Congress. But the scenario presented by Schultze of a nation without a comprehensive plan to deal with oil and natural gas shortages was bleaker than most.

This is his view of what would happen economically by 1992 if we don't begin planning ahead for energy.

"Energy prices in the U.S. would skyrocket as a worldwide scramble for increasingly short oil supplies ensued."

"We would be pressed into hastily fashioned and draconian measures to force conversion to coal and other resources; to limit automobile use; to ration heating oil and gas; and to spend huge sums of taxpayers' money on crash programs."

"Industries that depend heavily on energy would begin losing money, laying off workers and scrapping their productive capacity."

"Mounting energy prices would mean accelerating inflation, even as the number of jobs available in the economy declined."

"U.S. products would become increasingly uncompetitive on world markets; the value of the dollar would ultimately fall; and the cost of products we import would rise rapidly."

"Finally, because business firms can predict that this would be the outcome in the absence of an energy policy, their investments in the intervening years would begin to dry up. We won't have to wait until the inevitable crisis occurs before its anticipation costs Americans jobs and incomes."

Schultze said he was concerned that if a comprehensive energy plan were not in effect, the administration's ambitious economic plans for the next three years would be blocked.

The administration believes it can reduce personal and business taxes, fund youth and minority employment programs, continue the economic upswing and balance the federal budget by 1981, he said.

"Without an energy framework for the future, however, the best laid plans will eventually come to naught," he added.

He pointed out that other industrial nations have increased oil and gas prices to the point where significant conservation is underway.

In a related development, a study released by the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation predicted that the nation would become increasingly reliant on oil imports even though the growth rate of energy consumption and the actual amount of gasoline used in the United States would decrease through the 1980s.

The President wants to reduce imports to 6 million barrels a day by 1985, but the foundation — which has a reputation for independence although it is partially supported by oil companies — estimated that imports in 1985 would be around 9.6 million barrels a day.

Carter Postpones Tour

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter notified foreign governments Saturday he is postponing his ambitious world tour scheduled to begin Nov. 22 in order to fight for passage of his energy proposals.

Although the White House stuck to its position that no decision would be announced until early next week, the governments of France and India announced Carter had sent regrets he will be unable to make the 12-day, nine-nation trip on schedule.

It was not disclosed when and how much of the trip, one of the most ambitious ever planned by an American president, will be rescheduled. It seemed likely Carter might take some version of the trip later this year or early in 1978.

P&G Boosts UF Drive To Over Half Way Mark

Procter & Gamble employees have pushed the Pitt County United Fund campaign over the half way mark with a generous contribution averaging $75 per person.

Joe Blasi, P&G's UF committee chairman, said that plant employees "really understand community needs and contributed accordingly."

Blasi said that Fair Share giving at the plant increased significantly and that the plant's dollar and Fair Share goals were exceeded. Particularly noteworthy, he added, were five work teams that had each person donate a Fair Share.

The chairman expressed gratitude to all persons who worked on the campaign throughout the plant.

The total United Fund contributions pledged, according to Blasi, was $40,300 including the corporate gift.

The overall Pitt fund total now stands at $156,618.69, according to Jerry Powell, campaign chairman, or over 57 per cent of the record goal of $272,465.27.

P&G plant manager Bob Griffin, who is serving this year as chairman of the large Industrial Division of the county drive, pointed out that the "enthusiastic giving" of the employees demonstrated their "unselfish and caring attitude."

He added that "Procter & Gamble is a relative newcomer to the community but we intend to grow as a responsible citizen." Griffin said that the recent announcement that Pampers will be made in Greenville by the company demonstrates its commitment to the community.

Powell thanked the P&G employees for their participation in the fund drive and added that the $75 per capita giving should be a pledge target for all industry and the community.

Experimenting With New Cancer Treatment

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Researchers at Duke University in Durham are experimenting with a cancer treatment they say has "successfully" destroyed cancerous tumors in some patients.

The treatment combines microwaves and X-ray therapy and was described in a paper prepared by Dr. William T. Joines of Duke for a meeting of the International Union of Radio Science in Virginia Friday.

Joines told the Fayetteville Times the therapy was used to destroy cancerous tumors in several patients.

Duke University officials said all of the tumors that were successfully treated were located on the skin or just below the surface of the skin.

They said although some of the patients were terminally ill and beyond help, some tumors in those patients shrank about 40 per cent while other tumors disappeared altogether.

Dr. Thomas K. Noell, assistant professor at Duke who helped conduct the experiment, said one patient was a 14-year-old girl with a recurrent tumor on her palm. He said the tumor did not respond to radiotherapy and had spread to the tissue near her elbow.

At first, amputation of the affected arm was recommended. But Noell said the amputation wasn't necessary after she was treated by the new method, "and she still looks good."

He described another terminally ill patient as a cancer victim "with an enormous bulk of tumor on her chest. 'It was four by five inches across, and two and a half inches deep,' he said.

He said the woman had failed to respond to chemotherapy and couldn't tolerate any more massive doses of radiation.

But after treatment with the combined microwave and X-ray technique, "the tumor dried up and fell off," Noell said.

Duke University officials hope the combined treatment, which they cautioned was still experimental, could give physicians a new way to attack cancerous tumors that resist treatment by other means.

William Erwin, public relations officer of Duke's Cancer research center, said the tumors that vanished with the combined treatment did so in no more than four and a half weeks.

He said the microwaves apparently work by heating the tumor, similar to the way a microwave oven works. Duke researchers theorize that the heat hinders the ability of cancer cells to repair themselves after X-ray damage.

Retired English Professor Dies

Dr. Frederick Sorensen, 69, professor emeritus in the English Department of East Carolina University, died Friday afternoon in Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Graveside services will be held at 11 a.m. Monday at Pinewood Memorial Park by Rev. Richard R. Gammon.

Dr. Sorensen, a native of Utah, received his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees at Stanford University in Palo Alto, Calif. He had taught at Michigan State and Auburn universities. He was formerly head of the English Department at Edinboro State University in Pennsylvania and had been at East Carolina University since 1962. He retired as professor emeritus in 1974. He was a member of the First Presbyterian Church and Phi Kappa Phi national scholastic fraternity.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Mary G. Sorensen; one daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Anderson of Tampa, Fla.; one son, F.W. Sorensen of Tampa, Fla.; and three grandchildren.

The body will be at Wilkerson Funeral Home until the funeral hour.

FATHER AND SON—Benjamin Valdez (right), Southern Baptist minister, returns home to the welcoming arms of his 23-year-old son Ben Valdez, who has spent the last 12 years in

Free After 12 Years Of Cuban Prison Life

By ROBERT FURLLOW
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — In halting English, the Baptist pastor said he knew the risks of aiding his fugitive brother and of helping fellow Cubans flee Castro's revolution. He's only sorry, he said, that his penalty of 12 years in Cuban prisons kept him far from his family.

"I fulfilled my duty," said the Rev. Benjamin Valdez. "I did it for myself."

Freed last spring, Valdez rejoined his family here this week and talked about prison life and church life in Cuba on a rainy Friday at the Atlanta-based Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention, the group that had employed him in Cuba until his arrest in 1965.

He described a Cuba where a Communist government tolerates Christian preachers as long as they keep strictly to the gospel and away from dangerous political subjects.

"If the church doesn't hurt his interest, Castro isn't going to hurt the church," he said. "But you're not able to make big propaganda."

"The church is able to work from house to house," he said, then added with a wry smile, "but in a careful way, you know."

Valdez, 48, flew into Atlanta — dazzled by "the millions of lights" — Thursday night from Madrid, where he has been since leaving Cuba in August. He embraced his wife and the children, now grown, who had moved from Cuba to Marietta, Ga., in 1968, three years after his imprisonment.

"He says he's very happy to be here with his family but sad to leave his homeland," translated his son Ben, 23, a political science student at Vanderbilt University.

Valdez doesn't need a translator most of the time, but he chooses his words carefully when talking about Cuba.

His conviction and 12-year sentence by a revolutionary court apparently were "meant as a lesson" to others in Cuba, he says, but he won't say much more about what he thinks about government actions in his native land.

"Perhaps it would damage the Cuban people, the Baptist people still there," he said.

In 1965, he said, he was slapped in prison along with more than 50 other pastors and church leaders, including two Americans who returned to the United States in 1969 after serving relatively short terms.

A proud man, Valdez says he chose to serve the full 12 years rather than attend a "re-education school" that might have meant earlier release.

He spent time in a number of Cuban prisons. When asked if he was mistreated, he shrugs and says, "I was not struck."

Sometimes there was a Bible to read, sometimes not. Sometimes he was nearly alone and sometimes in crowded prisons where "we won several of them to Christ's teaching."

He says he has had no contact with the U.S. government and doesn't know whether any "softening" of hard feelings between American and Cuban leaders had anything to do with his being allowed to leave.

His future is uncertain, too, he said, but he's sure about what he wants to do: "I think to preach — somewhere."

Home Destroyed

An early evening fire destroyed the Jimmy Mizell home located on rural paved road 1523 east of Greenville.

Fire officials on the scene said the mobile home was completely engulfed in flames when they arrived.

The investigators said Mizell and wife were not at home when the fire started and witnesses said the fire appeared to have started in the center of the mobile home.

Officials said neighbors were credited for cooling a liquid propane gas cylinder with a garden hose until firemen arrived.

Damage to the home and its contents was placed at approximately $10,000.

Members of the Pactolus and Staton House fire department responded to the 6:30 alarm.

There were no injuries reported.

CALL FOR HELP

A newly introduced device, MicroAlert, enables its users to get help during the first critical minutes of heart attacks, strokes, seizures, robberies or other emergencies in which the victim is unable to get to a telephone.

The key to the system is a tiny one-ounce transmitter worn under clothing like a medallion. One squeeze of the unit, even if outdoors 300 feet away, will activate a receiver located inside the home or business, which in turn sends out a series of telephone calls to the local fire or police departments, doctors, friends, neighbors and relatives. It can make almost unlimited preprogrammed, pre-taped calls describing the nature and location of the emergency.

During a test marketing program an incident occurred which dramatically demonstrated the ability of this new device to summon aid in medical emergencies in which it clearly meant the difference between life and death. Katherine Held of Duarte, Calif., who credits the device with saving her life, stated, "It has enabled me to live in my own home rather than a nursing home."

MicroAlert has been certified by the Federal Communication Commission for plug-in use on residential and business telephone lines anywhere in the U.S. without additional monthly phone charges. It has been approved and prescribed by police, fire and paramedic agencies and doctors. Although originally designed for use in medical emergencies, MicroAlert is finding increased use in homes, stores and businesses where robbery and burglary are growing problems.

The matchbook size and light weight of the transmitter permit 24-hour comfortable concealment under a shirt or blouse. It has been engineered so that it can even be worn in bed and rolled over onto without activating it accidentally.

For further information on this remarkable new product write MICROALERT SYSTEMS OF NORTH CAROLINA, 2540 Lockwood Drive, Winston-Salem, N.C. 27103, or call Greenville Area, 919-756-1532, Monday through Friday.

New Proposal On Park

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States offered to seek dismissal of the indictment against South Korean businessman Tongsun Park in exchange for his help in presenting evidence in the Justice Department probe of Korean influence peddling, President Carter said today.

Carter, in an official report to Congress on the cooperation of the Seoul government in the Justice Department investigation, also confirmed an earlier report that South Korea had sent the United States "an important new proposal" for the interrogation of Park.

Park has balked at talking to U.S. investigators and the Seoul government insists it cannot compel him to cooperate or testify at a U.S. trial.

The president's report did not disclose any details of the new Korean proposal.

The Koreans have said that the proposal has brought the two sides close to an agreement on Park's cooperation, but Assistant U.S. Atty. Gen. Benjamin Civiletti, whose attempts to question Park in Seoul failed, has said no such agreement was near.

Carter said in the report, required by Congress, that while Civiletti was in Seoul last month, the United States proposed that Park be interrogated in a third country "under conditions which would provide verification of the truthfulness of his testimony."

"If sufficient evidence were thereby gained of indictable offenses by United States officials, Mr. Park's later appearance would be required in the United States for trial testimony," the report said.

"The United States proposed that, if Mr. Park faithfully completed these steps, the Justice Department would seek dismissal of the indictment against him," Carter said in the message to the House and Senate.

"The basis of these U.S. proposals was the need to secure truthful and effective testimony for successful prosecutions of trials in the United States," he said.

Park was indicted Sept. 6 on 36 corruption charges in connection with alleged South Korean attempts to buy favors among members of Congress in exchange for their support for South Korea.

Carter told Congress that the Justice Department considers "verifiable and truthful testimony" from Park to be "essential to the full investigation and successful prosecution of illegal acts by U.S. officials in the United States."

Civiletti's proposal, made during 30 hours of talks with Korean Ministry of Justice officials, was at least the second time the U.S. government had offered to make an arrangement with Park.

The report said that in early July, Park was offered complete immunity from criminal prosecution if he returned to the United States and testified about illegal payments. That was before the indictment was announced.

Park was then in London and the Seoul government said that although it was trying to persuade him to return to the United States, it could not force him to do so.

The president said that U.S. and South Korean officials are currently "in the midst of active and delicate discussions, and proposals are being considered in an effort to reach a mutually satisfactory agreement."

Group Seeks Review Of Relationship Between University, Convention

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (UPI) — A group of alumni are getting signatures on a petition calling for a review of the relationship between Wake Forest University and the North Carolina Baptist Convention.

Three alumni drew up the petition and circulated it during a homecoming reception here Friday night. And faculty and staff members joined in alumni in signing the document.

The four-paragraph petition expresses the concern of the signers over recent developments between the school and the Baptists. It will be sent to the school's board of trustees.

"The relationship between Wake Forest and the North Carolina State Baptist Convention has long been a beneficial one," it read. "However, we feel that the future well-being of Wake Forest rests with a reconciliation of the desires of the Convention and Wake Forest's potential as an even greater educational institution."

While the petition does not mention it, those who drafted it said the decision to circulate it was prompted by the recent controversy over a recommendation by a convention committee that Wake Forest return $85,000 of a $300,000 biology grant from the National Science Foundation.

The controversy began when the convention learned last summer that Wake Forest had received the grant nearly a year earlier. The grant, one of the largest of the 59 awarded nationally and the only one given to a school in North Carolina, is being used to build a greenhouse, to buy equipment and to pay salaries.

According to the convention's constitution, no school supported by the convention may receive federal or state money without returning a service to the community. Those close to the controversy say it involves the question of separation of church and state and is a power struggle between the two factions.

"We want to make people aware of the situation and let the trustees know that alumni and interested people are concerned," said 1973 graduate Bill Briggs, one of the drafters. "I don't think that the petition will automatically make the trustees change whatever decision they will make on the grant."

Briggs said the petition is not meant to stir up any trouble but just to express concern. He said he believes the school and the convention should break their ties.

"I think the academic and social freedom at Wake Forest will ultimately be threatened if a proper solution isn't worked out," he said.

Will Fly To Panama

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Led by Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd, a group of Democrats largely uncommitted on the Panama Canal treaties will fly to Panama Wednesday for face-to-face talks with Panamanian leader Gen. Omar Torrijos.

Byrd announced the trip Saturday, and said the group of eight or nine senators will stay in Panama for three days. The votes of these senators could be crucial when the disputed treaties come up for ratification next year.

Included on a tentative list of those making the trip were Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y.; Walter Huddleston, D-Ky.; Wendell Ford, D-Ky.; Spark Matsunaga, D-Hawaii; Donald Riegle, D-Mich.; Paul Sarbanes, D-Md.; James Sasser, D-Tenn., and Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio.

Byrd said all but possibly one of the senators were uncommitted on ratification of the treaties that propose to turn over control of the canal to Panama by the end of the century.

Pursued Nuclear Reports

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House last year pursued reports that Israel built a nuclear arsenal with uranium "diverted" from a Pennsylvania processing plant, the weekly newsletter Science Trends said Saturday.

Citing newly declassified government documents, the publication said, "the (Ford) White House called upon intelligence agencies last year to help determine how many bombs could have been made from weapons-grade uranium missing from a Pennsylvania nuclear plant and reportedly smuggled to Israel."

The plant has been identified as the Nuclear Materials and Equipment Corp. (NMEC) at Apollo, Pa., where large amounts of uranium were reported "lost" in the 1960's.

Newly declassified documents on the subject were supplied from the files of the former Energy Research and Development Administration to Science Trends and some other organizations under Freedom of Information Act requests.

Wants Dental Care Restored

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The head of the state dental society has asked a legislative study commission to restore dental care to the list of services covered by Medicaid.

Robert B. Litton, president of the North Carolina Dental Society, said Friday that cutting dental services for adults from the Medicaid program is hurting the overall health of poor people.

Seeking Postponement

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — The newly retained attorney for former Northwestern Bank board chairman Edwin Duncan Jr. is seeking a postponement of Duncan's trial on charges of bugging FBI agents.

Defense attorney Robert Cahoon has filed a motion in U.S. Middle District Court asking Judge Hirman H. Ward seeking the delay in the trial set for Monday, saying he will not be adequately prepared.

The 50-year-old Duncan, who has already been convicted on charges of bugging Internal Revenue Service agents and misapplication of bank funds, retained Cahoon Tuesday after the attorneys who have been representing him voluntarily withdrew from the case because of a conflict of interest.

Hungary Says U.S. To Return Crown

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — The official Hungarian news agency MTI reported briefly today that the United States plans to return the Crown of St. Stephen and other crown jewels to Hungary.

There has been no comment yet from the Budapest government on the Carter administration's decision to return the 1,000-year-old crown, Hungary's national symbol.

The MTI report noted that talks are under way between the two governments about the date of the return and other details.

A State Department spokesman said in Washington Friday that the crown and other jewels would be restored to Hungary as a gesture acknowledging improved relations between the Communist government and the United States.

It is expected that Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance will deliver the crown here during a visit next month.

Anti-Soviet Hungarians passed the crown through Austrian hands to the United States at the end of World War II.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Josef Cardinal Mindszenty asked Mary Rose Oakar to do all in her power to make certain the Crown of St. Stephen is never returned to Hungary until human freedoms are restored there.

The cardinal made the plea to Miss Oakar two years ago, and now she has a chance to make good on her promise to fight any effort to return the 1,000-year-old crown to a communist regime in Hungary.

"Life is kind of funny, isn't it," said Miss Oakar, now a member of the House of Representatives. "Never in my wildest dreams did I envision I would have a chance to come through for him."

Miss Oakar, an Ohio Democrat, is resisting State Department plans to return the crown to Hungary. It symbolizes Hungary's religious, cultural and national heritage.

On Friday, the feisty congresswoman lost a fight to get the House to pass legislation to keep the crown in this nation. But the House International Relations Committee agreed to hold a hearing next Wednesday to listen to Hungarian federations — organizations representing Hungarian refugees.

Soldiers Die In Crash

FORT RILEY, Kan. (UPI) — A twin-engine military plane crashed in a wheat field Saturday in eastern Kansas, killing all five soldiers aboard.

Fort Riley officials said the U-8 plane crashed minutes after taking off from Marshall Army Air Field, located in a sparsely populated area about one mile southwest of the post and about five miles east of Junction City, Kan.

All the victims were stationed at Fort Riley. They were Lt. Col. Edward Halbert, 41; 1st Lt. Robert Anderson, 28; Chief Warrant Officer James W.

Smith, 39; Chief Warrant Officer Jack D. Carpenter, 36; and Master Sgt. Orin Steinolfson, 37.

Smith, the only victim who did not live on the base, was from Manhattan, Kan. He was piloting the plane when it crashed and Carpenter was the co-pilot, authorities said.

Lt. Col. George Delling said the plane crashed at 6:25 a.m. after taking off for Fort Sill, Okla. He said the men were on an official mission connected with reserve training.

Delling said there was no fire after the crash.

Voters Would Have A Say

Amendment 3 to the State Constitution will be one of the matters to be decided by the voters when they go to the polls on Nov. 8.

It is, of course, the succession amendment one which will allow a governor and lieutenant governor of North Carolina to serve two successive terms.

Under the constitution presently the governor can serve only one four year term and then he must leave office, although he might run again at a later time.

The amendment has stirred up some opposition, including the contention that it would allow a governor to become too powerful, given the fact that he could have eight years in office. It is also argued that we ought to simply leave well enough alone.

We have to question whether a governor would become too powerful because he had the opportunity to seek a second term. During his first term he would have to constantly keep his eye on public opinion if he intended to run again. That should keep the power question under control for the first four years, and if it didn't the governor could be voted out.

Leaving well enough alone is an interesting argument, but if we don't constantly examine our system and change with the times we are poor custodians of our heritage.

What is important is that governors simply don't have time to implement the programs they get underway during a four year term. The present and former governors of North Carolina agree on this, and we think so too.

If a governor has good programs underway when he seeks the second term the voters will in effect be approving of them. If the programs are unpopular, the voters will have their say.

We think the gubernatorial succession amendment should be approved in the Nov. 8 election.

Movement On Nuclear Test Ban Front

Soviet Communist Party Chief Leonid I. Brezhnev showed a little movement in nuclear test ban negotiations by dropping a stipulation that low yield blasts be excluded from the ban.

The changes seems important and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance called it a major step toward a comprehensive test ban.

The nuclear test ban will still require much further negotiation, but there has been some movement, and that is hopeful.

Editorial

THIS AFTERNOON:

Adult Schooling Changes

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The pieces are already in place across North Carolina for a highly successful program of job training and special education for mentally retarded and other handicapped adults, the chairman of a study commission of the General Assembly believes.

The key would be use of the 57 campuses of the state's Community College and Technical Institute system, thinks State Rep. Benjamin D. Schwartz, D-New Hanover.

As chairman of the Commission on Children With Special Needs, Schwartz has seen tremendous progress in providing educational opportunities for the mentally, emotionally, or physically handicapped public school students.

And in recent months, new state and federal laws have combined to provide a set of guidelines which can be considered a "civil rights" act guaranteeing free and appropriate educational opportunities.

For Adults
But the momentum is directed only at students. The laws apply to those from birth to age 21. After that age, programs are lodged in a hodgepodge of public and private agencies.

Vocational rehabilitation, job training, educational programs may or may not be provided from county to county across the state.

There are state and federal funds for programs, and in most cases either local governments or private agencies must apply for them and operate the programs. In many cases it is up to county commissioners whether such activities will be pursued, and not all counties do become involved to the fullest degree possible.

"And it is my understanding that the community colleges and technical institutes are doing very little. They should be providing programs to take these people and train them for productive jobs," Schwartz says.

"This is something we should take as a major project and really push it in the General Assembly."

Recreation
Pictures of Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr., playing a game of pickup basketball in the backyard of the Governor's Mansion prompted some to ask what he does regularly for recreation and entertainment.

"I don't really have a hobby... I enjoy fishing in the farm pond at home; I try to play a little golf once a month with my son, Baxter; and I'm trying to get the family interested in tennis," says the governor.

He also enjoys horseshoes, and has two sets of stakes on the lawn at the mansion—challenging guests to a match from time to time.

But his real reaction is being governor.

He has become North Carolina's busiest governor in memory, keeping a travel schedule which leaves aides drooping. While he dislikes flying very much, he is resigned to use an airplane to meet his hectic schedule. On a recent evening he flew to Hickory, then to Statesville for an economic development seminar, to Burlington for a fund-raising, and back to Raleigh about midnight.

All the while he was selling—his programs and his belief in the future of North Carolina. "I really enjoy this. It's easy to show enthusiasm for something you believe in. And that is what leadership is all about... to let people know what their own potentials are and to help them see the ways in which they can achieve..."

Someone approached your columnist recently and commented on columns which discussed Dog's Head, the Bama and other parts of old Greenville.

"You know where Buzzard's Roost is?" the man asked. We had to reply that that was unknown territory.

"Ask any real old heads," the man said.

Our curiosity up, we asked where Buzzard's Roost was. "Contance Street," our informer replied.

Apparently that area carried the name Buzzard's Roost back at the turn of the century when it was the saloon district. That was, of course, the first time it was the saloon district.

And a friend said his car was egged on Halloween night, but he got the license number of the auto from which the egg came.

He called the owner and told him he would expect a wash and wax job.

The young man said he would get the other boys who were in the car together and take care of it.

Just Halloween fun.

And Halloween brings more elaborate costumes each year in the area.

Hundreds of tiny ghosts, goblins, witches and ogres circulated in virtually every neighborhood on Monday night knocking on doors of homes. The message was the same at each stop: "Trick or treat."

And the answer was virtually always the same — a handful of candy, rather than an unknown trick.

Everyone didn't wait until Monday night, the traditional Halloween. There was a Jimmy Carter at the football game Saturday night. More than one costume could be seen in the downtown nightclub area Saturday night.

But Monday evening was the one reserved for the littlest goblins... and they made the most of it.

Tipping A Fact Of Life

By MURRAY J. BROWN
UPI Travel Editor

"Oh, those waving palms," said my neighbor when I asked about his impressions of his first trip to Europe.

"Waving palm trees — in Europe?" I said in surprise.

"Not palm trees — the waving palms of waiters, taxi drivers, doormen, porters, chambermaids, concierges, etc., etc., ad nauseum," he replied. "Even when service charges were included, we still were expected to tip, and I got some dirty looks and angry murmurs when I didn't."

It's sad but true — tipping, like death and taxes, is very much a fact of life for Americans traveling at home or abroad.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Reduced To A Mendicant

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
NEW YORK — Although his intentions are far more lofty, Rep. Edward Koch after his election as mayor of New York next Tuesday will be reduced to the same demeaning role as defeated Mayor Abraham Beame: a mendicant seeking federal largesse to keep alive the nation's greatest city.

That is the message of a speech drafted last week for later delivery by financier Felix Rohatyn, who has spent the last two years trying to settle the city's chaotic financial affairs. His conclusion: "The city cannot do much more, on its own, to stimulate its economy and improve the quality of its life." The help must come from Uncle Sam.

Koch and his advisers agree (though, of course, they do not use Rohatyn's blunt language). Thus, Koch must follow Beame's path in begging from a reluctant administration and hostile Congress. While Koch is vastly more credible in Washington than his predecessor, his chances for success are not much better.

That Koch becomes mendicant-elect as well as mayor-elect Nov. 8 is sadly ironic. No modern mayor of New York has taken office with fewer obligations to labor unions or political outbushes or with a better understanding of what is needed after decades of profligacy — a tight budget, lower taxes, less government.

On his uphill climb to the Democratic nomination virtually assuring him the election, Koch proved that organized labor's support is no more necessary here than the crestfallen Democratic organization's. Having campaigned in the primary by promising tough bargaining in city labor negotiations, Koch told a post-primary meeting of municipal union leaders: "I don't owe anything to anybody."

Nor has he changed his tune with the advent of victory. "Municipal employees cannot be expected to be paid wages in excess of the private sector," Koch told us, adding: "I do not believe anyone can be kept on a job who is not needed." That promises not only hard-nosed wage negotiations but some job layoffs.

Yet, Rohatyn's draft speech argues that the forthcoming struggle between city and unions resembles "convalescents fighting over the crumbs." Rohatyn, head of the Municipal Assistance Corp. (MAC) set up to keep the city from bankruptcy, paints a bleak picture: even with no municipal wage increases at all (which is not possible), the $400 million city budget deficit would remain. How, then, to reduce taxes to stop the business exodus?

President Carter has the solution, suggests Rohatyn. The financier's draft speech says the President must redeem "a solemn pledge" made during the 1976 campaign to assure the city's welfare costs (variously estimated at between $600 million and $1 billion a year).

Republicans to survive until the election of a Democratic President, who would then push through a federal welfare takeover. Mr. Carter's failure to do this has bred bitter disappointment, reflected in Rohatyn's draft speech: "Without a redemption of that (Mr. Carter's) pledge, the pain and the suffering would have been an empty charade, a theater of the absurd, for this city cannot survive under this burden."

"I think Felix is overly pessimistic," a top Carter administration official told us, suggesting that two years of fighting off bankruptcy have given the monitors from MAC battle fatigue. This official feels the city budget deficit can be closed with neither draconian cuts in services nor a federal welfare takeover.

The hard fact is that the Carter administration has no intention of picking up the city's welfare tab. The Carter welfare reform program ("It's a terrible bill," Koch told us) provides nothing until 1981. At this writing, Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York and the White House are near agreement on a compromise for immediate relief of less than $200 million.

But even that sum, inadequate by Rohatyn's standards, is far from enough.

Other Editors Say Wining, Dining

(Concord Tribune)

Lobbyists wined and dined North Carolina legislators last year to the tune of nearly half a million dollars to protect or advance the special interests they represent.

And guess who spent the most, according to expense reports? The insurance industry. Those good souls who insure your car, house, boats, mortgage, wife and life forked out a reported, and the word reported could be important, $40,865 to see legislation go their way.

In other words, with the gains the insurance industry made during the past legislative session, that was the best $40,000 ever spent anywhere in the history of lobbying.

Not only do the taxpayer and consumer have to contend with the aforementioned industry campaigners, but there is another group of lobbyists.

In addition to the expenses reported in lobbyist forms filed with the secretary of state's office, dozens of trade and professional associations maintain full-time lobbyists in the Capital not listed in the reports.

A number of firms and associations also retain law firms to do their lobbying, and that expense is not required to be reported.

So what we have is a considerable amount of lobbying being done on behalf of a limited number of groups or businesses, and where does the consumer and taxpayer stand?

The consumer is his own consumer advocate. The taxpayer his own lobbyists.

If we fail to promote our own interests such as quality education, reasonable taxation, a true government accounting and responsible fiscal policies, it's our own neck.

Just think, who's taking your local representative out to dinner...?

Find Business Got A Bad Deal

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Now that the convulsion about foreign political payments has subsided, three university professors have examined the subject and concluded business got a pretty bad deal.

Too busy defending itself, they say in effect, business reeled under the disclosures of bribes and extortion and other variations of political payments, and never did manage to give its side of the story.

Government, the media, moralists jumped on the Goliaths who transact international business, they say, and in the process everyone seemed to lose sight of the disturbing fact that business was not alone in paying for favors.

The government's reaction was "simplistic, ethnocentric, arrogant, and moralistic, in tone." The disclosures "were overdrawn and sensationalized by the media." Executive and corporate reputations were "unfairly blackened."

Neil Jacoby and Peter Nehemkis, both of the University of California, Los Angeles, and Richard Eells, Columbia University, are recognized as scholars, and their volume will be read not only in classrooms but in boardrooms, the State Department and the White House. They are well connected in Washington.

The book, which raises new issues as well as clarifies old ones, is described by them as objective, analytical, documented. It is probably the first coolheaded volume since the payoffs landed on front pages.

One vast distinction is made between bribery, which assumes the initiative of the person paying, and extortion, where the receiver begins the transaction. Corporate foreign payments were mainly of the latter, they say.

Still, that assumes a clarity of classification the writers say is not always possible to make. The variations, they observe, can be detected in much of human interaction.

A long list can be made in which threats and promises, usually with dollar signs attached, are involved. In, for example, employee-employer salary negotiations, dealing for congressional committee chairmanships, influence peddling in Washington, international relations, husband and wife relations.

The authors, and chief researcher Chauncey Olinger Jr., don't seek to justify bribery or extortion; their blatant practice is illegal everywhere, they point out, and such antics are severely damaging to free trade also.

Their point is that such antics are rooted in cultures and probably in human nature, and likely will continue, especially in socialist, state-dominated economies and where civil servants are underpaid. To criminalize such activities through domestic legislation is not the answer, they say.

A more likely approach, they suggest, is for American companies simply to stop making payments, enforce the rules in their companies, monitor behavior of agents, observe local laws to the letter, and in general provide reform leadership.

Without government backing, however, the United States could pay a costly penalty in lost business. "The reduction of corruption calls more urgently for actions by governments than for reforms in corporate behavior," they write.

They are, therefore, strongly on the side of international diplomacy, of agreements to enforce standards and reduce illegalities. The U.S. State Department, they believe, must protect the business interest.

But while writing what Eells in an interview called "the first analytic approach to the subject, the only book of its type ever printed," the authors raise another issue destined to make for intellectual and moral squirming.

That issue is this: Should different standards exist for sovereign states than exist for corporations?

To illustrate: Should U.S. foreign aid be offered as aid instead of being a subtle extortion for an air base? How could an intelligence activity of this or any nation exist without engaging in political payments?

No easy answers are available. As Olinger said in discussing the authors' recommendation for international agreements, "send in the diplomats."

They're needed.

THE NEED FOR CERTAINTY

To tell us just where we stand with reference to time and direction, we need precision instruments such as clocks, compasses, radar, and radio direction finders. We could scarcely carry out our daily responsibilities if our only method of telling time was guess from the position of the sun. The air lines would have to shut down completely if there were no radar installations to facilitate their operations.

All of which, when transferred into the realms of religious belief, means that a person must have a pretty definite philosophy of life and a deep certainty about spiritual things if the person is to get through life with any degree of satisfaction.

We live in an age which scoffs at dogma — that is, religious dogma. There is plenty of dogma in science, in business, in matters of social etiquette. Why not deep convictions in things religious?

GOP Hopes Still Glum

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — Although events during the next 12 months could change the picture, Republican chances of winning a majority of seats in the congressional elections a year from now appear bleak.

Recent Gallup surveys indicate that if voters were to cast their votes for Congressmen on Tuesday of this coming week — just one year in advance of the 1978 election — GOP gains in the House would be, at best, minimal. If anything, the survey results indicate some strengthening of the Democratic position since 1976.

The party in power typically loses 35 to 45 seats in off-year elections. Only once in the last four decades — in the congressional election of 1934 — did the party in power gain seats. Losses in off-year elections range from four in 1962 to 71 in 1938.

GOP In Control Only 4 Out Of 36 Years

Since 1932, the Republicans have held a majority of seats in the House of Representatives only four out of 36 years.

The extent to which the U.S. has become a one-party government is best illustrated by this comparison: if the U.S. were a parliamentary democracy such as Great Britain, a Republican would have occupied the White House only four of these 36 years.

In both the two previous off-year congressional elections — 1970 and 1974 — Republicans failed to improve their strength in the year preceding the election. In fact, Gallup Poll survey findings obtained one year in advance of the election proved to be an accurate indication of the eventual election returns themselves. This would indicate that if the Republicans hope to make substantial gains in 1978, an entirely different kind of political campaign may have to be waged during the coming months.

It is of course possible that 1978 could be different from 1970 or 1974, with the GOP able to make political hay out of the many tough problems facing the Carter administration — energy, the Panama Canal and unemployment, to name only a few.

In a Gallup Poll test of congressional party strength one year before the 1974 off-year elections — in an October 1973 survey — the following division of support was found for all adults interviewed:

Survey Findings In October 1973 (One year before 1974 elections)

Democrats	52%
Republicans	24
Other	1
Undecided	23

The Democrats, one year later, won 291 congressional seats to 144 for the GOP.

The present division in the House is 289 seats for the Democrats, 146 for the Republicans.

A survey undertaken at a comparable time this year — the middle of October — shows the following results:

Current Survey Findings (One year before 1978 elections)

Democrats	51%
Republicans	23
Other	6
Undecided	20

These figures, it should be pointed out, represent the views of all adults and are not limited to those who are registered and most likely to vote. In both cases the results are based on a sample of all adults of voting age.

Low Turnout Favors GOP

Low turnout in an election generally favors the Republicans because persons most likely to vote are older, those who have lived in the same community for many years, and those who are better educated. And these groups tend to be more Republican in their political preferences.

In the last off-year congressional elections of 1974, only 36.6 per cent of U.S. adults voted. This was one of the lowest participation levels in a national election in recent decades.

As of the present time, only 71 per cent of the people interviewed in the current survey say they registered to vote.

The results reported today are based on in-person interviews with 1,520 adults interviewed in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period Oct. 14-17.

Brown Col....

And tips can add up to a mighty tidy sum — travelers should budget at least 20 percent of their travel funds for crossing all those wavy palms with silver or whatever.

No one knows for sure how it started. The most popular version is that it began in 18th century London pubs when waiters set up bowls marked "To Insure Prompt Service," the first letters of which became the word tips.

Regardless of when, where or why it originated, the practice spread across the world. It became pourboire in French, trinkelt in German, propina in Spanish, bakeesh in Arabic and cumshaw in Chinese, among others.

But no matter what it is called, it often is no longer the original bonus for extra services. Tipping is expected whether the service is prompt or slow, good or bad.

There are no hard-and-fast rules, so Americans abroad frequently overtip or under tip, particularly when unfamiliar with local custom and currency. Compounding the problem is the almost daily fluctuations in the rate of exchange between the U.S. dollar and other currencies.

But a good rule-of-thumb when in doubt is for the American to tip as at home (15 to 20 percent), keeping in mind, however, local practices which often differ from country to country and sometimes within the same country.

National tourist offices can provide tips on tipping, as can travel agents and updated guide books. You can also buy packets of foreign currencies from banks and international money dealers which include information.

At any rate here are some general tips which might prove helpful:

In Europe, most hotels, restaurants, etc., usually add a service charge ranging from 10 to 20 percent of the bill (by law in Switzerland). But additional gratuities still are expected by service personnel. The concierge should be tipped for special services; in France he expects at least 10 francs (about $2) a week even if no extra services are performed.

Don't be afraid to ask whether service charges have been included before paying the bill. If not, tip between 15 and 20 percent.

Taxicab drivers generally are tipped from 10 to 15 percent of the meter — a little more if he helps with the luggage but not if there is an extra charge for the bags. If there are no set charges, tip porters at airports and railway stations the equivalent of 25 to 50 cents per bag, depending on the number and weight of the load.

Hotel bellhops and baggage porters should be tipped (in Portugal it is about 10 cents per bag; in West Germany about 45 cents per bag), as should chambermaids (about 30 cents per day in Austria and about $2.80 per week in Greece), doormen (about 20 cents in Britain and 40 cents in Switzerland) for calling a cab or other service.

Attendants in checkrooms and washrooms and theater ushers in most European cities are tipped — generally small change — if there is no fixed charge. Barbers and hairdressers expect from 10 to 15 percent of the bill (up to 20 percent in London and Paris).

Tipping is forbidden or officially frowned on in the Soviet Union and some East European countries. But travelers report small gratuities and "gifts" are accepted by waiters and others — and in some instances, expected from western visitors.

In the Far East, where the practice is still not as widespread as in the west, hotels and restaurants often include service charges. Otherwise, tip from 10 to 15 percent.

No extra tipping usually is expected if service charges are included. And cab drivers in some cities, including Tokyo, do not have to be tipped — it is optional and I have had tips refused. In Hong Kong, however, cabbies expect at least 10 percent of the fare.

In Latin America and the Caribbean, tipping is expected even when service charges are included.

A Conservative View

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Of making many books, said the Preacher, there is no end. He might have been thinking of the Washington press corps. This year has seen a torrent of books — fiction, non-fiction, history and biography — pouring forth from Washington fountains. During a recent four-day bout with a flu bug, I swallowed a bunch of them; they went down like so many vitamin pills.

A new genre plainly is developing in the world of the novel. Taking up wherever Allen Drury left off, whole platoons of talented newcomers are improving upon the Washington novel that Drury more or less invented. Three corking good stories have come along.

The liveliest of the lot is William Safire's "Full Disclosure," the tale of a future president who conceals a vital part of his medical history from the people. It's full of sex, suspense, and sis-boom bah, and if it suffers from too much mellerdrummer, who cares? In the same vein, with less sex but more plausibility, is "Against All Enemies," by Ervin S. Duggan and Ben J. Wattenberg. The novel is a can't-put-it-downer.

Just out from Simon & Schuster is "In the National Interest," a slam-bang yarn of Middle Eastern intrigue by Marvin Kalb and Ted Koppel. The novel represents a splendid merger of talent from CBS and ABC. Both correspondents have spent years in the far end of the Mediterranean, and they write with a sure feeling for the area and its people. Their sex is pretty good, too. How do reporters get so smart?

Three books deal with the presidential campaign of 1976, with particular emphasis upon the Jimmy Carter team. Jules Witcover's "Marathon," from Viking, is a solid, workmanlike survey of Carter's pursuit of the presidency from the time in 1972 when the Georgian made his clumsy bid for second place on the McGovern ticket. A less comprehensive account, though it is better documented in some ways, is Martin Schram's "Running for President 1976." Both of these books are the work of major leaguers.

The best in this division, not surprisingly, is Elizabeth Drew's "American Journal." It comes from Random House. Just as her "Washington Journal" provided the best comprehensive look at Watergate, so this big book splendidly covers the larger scene of 1976. Squarely in the midst of the Ford-Reagan fight for delegates, she inserts a cool sentence: "Today the United States landed on Mars."

Mrs. Drew's great gift as a reporter is to keep things in perspective. She is a pensive person, quiet, reserved, with an unusual knack of detaching herself from the events she covers. She works at her craft, incessantly interviewing the men and women who make news; she does her own leg work, notebook in hand; she thinks before she starts batting out copy.

For a single, penetrating look at what it was like, July 4, 1976, Mrs. Drew's 500-word account captures the essence. In the afternoon, when the bells began ringing at the National Cathedral, she could go out in her backyard and hear them. In the evening, she and some friends "drank beer and ate hamburgers and chocolate cake until it grew dark," and then watched the fireworks exploding.

These little explosions of personal observation make her "American Journal" something more than mere political analysis. She catches former Speaker Carl Albert in half a line: He was "wearing a greenish suit and a sad face." She looks intently at Rosalynn Carter, trying to read her face: "It is a pleasant face, but it does not convey warmth, it is not expressive. It is as if it were molded, perhaps of metal." She looks at John Connally of Texas. He is a "large man of large ambition," but he "seems to be always trying on different masks." This is Elizabeth Drew, reporter. She can't be beat.

Finally, three works of biography. The venerable Holmes Alexander, who at 71 is dean of the working newspaper columnists, has written a popular, unpretentious work on Alexander Hamilton, "To Covet Honor." Robert J. Donovan, who earlier wrote the definitive book on Dwight Eisenhower, has done a superlative work on Harry Truman, "Conflict and Crisis."

And John Bartlow Martin, who now teaches journalism at Northwestern, has given us a full-blown study of "Adlai Stevenson and the World." All these books, even the novels, bear the unmistakable hallmark of the good reporter. If you have the time and the inclination for one book only, buy Drew. Hers will last.

BEHIND THOSE DRY STATISTICS--

By GAIL MICHAELS

Complications In One Child-Training Stage

If there's anything about child-rearing a mother fears more than drugs and sex education, it's potty training. I have known women who discuss unemotionally every aspect of sex education from hunting sand crabs during shellfish mating season to finding an underlined copy of GOD'S LITTLE ACRE under their ten-year-old's mattress, turn green and leave the room at the first mention of potty training. How I used to pity them! As a former psychology major, I knew that when I trained my daughter, it would all be different — she and I would breeze unscarred emotionally and physically through potty training on the do-it-yourself behavior modification manual, POTTY TRAINING IN LESS THAN ONE DAY.

Before I attempted training, I read this book four times. I could recite it backwards while chopping onions with one hand and reading the TV GUIDE with the other, and I knew that if the monosyllabic kid the authors used as an example could be trained in three hours, my darling angel, who could sing her "A.B.C.s" and recite fifteen nursery rhymes in four breaths, could be trained easily within a two hour period. The only things I needed were a doll that wet to use as an example, a potty, training pants, the fourteen quarts of assorted liquids necessary to increase the "urge," M&Ms, raisins, and a free day.

When I had all these available at one time, I took the phone off the hook, ran my husband out of the house, and locked myself into the kitchen with Meg. The first thing Meg and I were going to do was to "teach" the doll to go to the potty. Unfortunately, the second water entered the mouth of the doll that I had selected, she wet her pants. I even tried carrying her over to the potty upside down, but she still wet her pants. So since she wasn't doing anything that Meg didn't know how to do already, I had to throw her out.

I gritted my teeth and proceeded, determined not to let such a minor thing interfere with training. Next, I took Meg through the paces several times and initiated a dialogue similar to the one in the book in which the mother says, "Do little boys get candy if they tee-tee in their pants?" "No," answers her charge emphatically. "Do little boys get candy if they tee-tee in the potty?" "Yes," screams her charge. "Where do little boys tee-tee?" "The potty!" he crows exultantly.

"Do little girls get raisins if they tee-tee in their pants?" I asked.

"Yes," Meg said.

"No, they don't. Where should little girls tee-tee to if they want raisins?"

"I want to watch Captain Kangaroo, Mommy."

"Captain Kangaroo doesn't like wet pants," I said, deftly redirecting the conversation. "What kind of pants does he like?"

"Green jeans," she grinned.

I decided to try a different tack. By this time I had managed to pour several glasses of liquid down her throat, and I told her to sit on the potty.

"Sit quietly," I said, remembering that the manual emphasized the necessity of quiet relaxation on the potty.

"Mommy, the floor is dirty," answered Meg. "I want to color. Can I have that spoon up there? Where is Daddy? What does that clock say?"

Somehow, I refrained from stuffing toilet tissue in her mouth. Instead I waited for those moments — indicated in the book — when she quieted down and when I could reinforce this by a pat on the shoulder. Unfortunately, this didn't work either. I never got a chance to get a pat in edgewise.

I wasn't too worried, however. She had drunk so much juice that she sloshed when she opened her mouth. Surely, she would let it go — relaxed or not. And she did — the minute I let her stand up, after fifteen minutes of sitting on the potty.

The last straw came while I was cleaning up the mess that she had made cleaning up the original mess. I looked up from my sponge, and there she was — standing in the potty, eating the raisins she had managed by virtue of her additional height to grab from the counter.

When Phillip got home, she was playing in the den floor while I lay rigidly on the sofa. "How did it go?" he asked. "I don't think she's ready," I said.

"I thought she was just the right age. When do you think she'll be ready?"

Rather Like A Talent To Tennessee Midwife

MORGAN COUNTY, Tenn. — "Well, about the first time I delivered, it was just wished on me or something, because I was put in a position where something had to be done. And, of course, if something has to be done, I'm trying to do it."

Wilma Basler, from near Wartburg, Tennessee, has been delivering babies for 28 years in her county in the foothills of the Cumberland Mountains, an area which off and on has been without a doctor's services. This mother of eight and grandmother of 23 never charges for her work, and has even birthed "four or five" of her own grandchildren.

"No, I haven't had any training, I think it may be like a talent or something. I couldn't tell you. Used to, they had midwives, back when my first ones were born, and it didn't get to where everyone went to the hospital until after the second world war."

"I always have the girls go to the health department. They don't give monthly checkups or anything like that, but they can get and get a urine specimen checked, and, if the health department thinks there is something agin' 'em having the baby at home, well, they recommend they go to the hospital. If not, they tell them to go ahead and let me do it. Sometimes I know from the very jump-go that I'm going to get one."

"The health department gives me the drops for their eyes, and they give me the birth certificates to fill out. They give me the pamphlets about how to care for a baby and what to do in an emergency. The health department's not prepared to deliver a baby, and I think they're wishing now for more midwives. I've love to train."

"You know, none of the babies have ever had any kind of infection and mothers hasn't either. What I use is those great big garbage bags, the lawn-leaf kind. They're just as good as anything and I take some along for the afterbirth and you put your pads on and they protect the bed and everything. Then all you have to do is just get rid of all of it."

"I use rubber gloves. I buy a new pair each time. And I always take my own Lysol and I always take my own pans because you can go into places and you'd be surprised how filthy just a little old washpan can be. Before I go, I wash up my pans and the scissors I'm going to cut the cord with. Before I touch them any way with anything, I go through that Lysol water first."

"I don't have any medication to give 'em even if they're hurting bad. If they've got a sour stomach, I say, 'If you want to take a Rolaid or Tums or something like that, go ahead and do it.' I just don't give 'em anything."

"Every one of the girls tells me that they just like it better at home even if they had the money to go to the hospital. But I tell you, the woman is saving $600 when she lays down and has it practically by herself."

Since an article about her work appeared in the Knoxville News Sentinel two years ago, Wilma Basler has been approached by a number of city couples. "They know what they want," she says. "They're able to pay, college educated. The husbands want to share a joyous experience with their wives, and they don't like the way they're being treated at the hospital. I've never met people like them before..."

"All women have doubts about how they're going to get along. I always have some pains for them. Honey, I had eight and with my last one I had lost ever' bit of the nerve I had. I was 31. I was 17 when I had my first one."

Eight in 14 years.

"The first time I asked a doctor about some form of birth control. I got a real cute, flip answer. Well, it was a long time before I got up enough nerve to ask another doctor, and I got a cute answer from him."

"I don't mind giving advice to the girls. That one that was so poor and had four babies in four years. I asked her to go out to the health department to get the pill. She told me, 'My mother don't believe in it and his mother don't either.' And I told her, 'Honey, what Mama don't know don't hurt her. You go ahead and get the pill.'"

"I guess birth control is the greatest thing for women every happened here. In a way, it's for men, too, if they can every get out of debt and not have a baby every year."

dards, faces a hazardous course in Congress. Despite what Koch calls "the collegial spirit" of his old friends in the House and far greater credibility than Beame, he may prove no more successful a mendicant. Congressional hostility against special treatment for New York is overwhelming.

These realities might well dampen Tuesday's Koch victory celebrations. Having risen from obscurity to defeat the power brokers, Koch now must confront the labor unions knowing that success here cannot save the city. Instead, Ed Koch must go to Washington begging for help.

Thanks to the mindless excesses of his predecessors, he cannot be optimistic about succeeding in this wretched task.

Trip To Washington For The Top Cub Scout

By KENDAL WEAVER
Associated Press Writer

MOBILE, Ala. (AP)—Manford Blacksher has won the symbolic rank as the top Cub Scout in America and a trip to the White House is in the offing. Would he like a visit to Amy's tree house?

"Oh, no," he says as he shakes his head furiously. The thought of getting paired off with Amy Carter does not amuse Manford.

At least at first. Then he thinks better of it. "Well," he says, "I've never been in a tree house."

It's one of the few things this 10-year-old Mobile boy hasn't done. He's a good news story from the world of Scouting.

His latest achievement came recently when he was selected from among 2 million youngsters as Cub Scout National Youth Representative. The selection carries with it a week's visit to Washington in February, along with the top Boy Scout and Explorer Scout, and a chance to meet President Carter.

Manford thinks it's about time he heard from the president.

"We wrote him a letter last summer," Manford explains. "We invited him to attend a Pack 52 meeting in June, but he never answered."

How did Manford win the top Cub award?

"It's probably because his middle name is Carter," says his mother, Mary Lucia Carter Blacksher, a native of Charleston, S.C.

Manford says the competition was mainly "seeing who was the most nervous."

When it came down to a crucial final taped interview, his father, attorney James Blacksher, "gave me the nerve to go out there and make my speech."

Also, he says, "I put together every big word I knew."

He knows a few. His hobby, he says, is paleontology, the study of prehistoric life. In his bedroom is a huge friendly stegosaurus skeleton, a tyrannosaurus known as "Rex." He says he got interested in paleontology "after I had secretly been studying the supernatural."

Why the supernatural? "I study it because I'm afraid of it. I want to know how to keep a ghost out of your house."

Manford is an all-A-type fifth-grader in the Mobile public school system. He tutors fourth graders, is a supervisor of the safety patrol, an altar boy at his church, an Arrow of Light Scout, a leader of litter-collecting forays and 75 pounds of enthusiasm in most everything else, which includes soccer, fishing and camping.

His Cub master, Ward New, says Manford "is the epitome of Scouting. When people think of Scouts, they think of kids helping older ladies across the street and that type of thing. Well, that's Manford."

Manford also says there are perils to winning national competitions. At one point he had thought of it so much "I made a 75 in spelling."

Also, after he won, he felt an inclination to puff out his chest a bit more than he should but his dad and the Cub master "straightened me out."

Now, he says, he's ready for Washington, partly because the trip is set for Feb. 5-10 and his birthday is Feb. 9 "and I understand all the toy shops are loaded down in Washington."

And on a more serious note, he really does have something to tell the president: "He should place more emphasis on Scouting," says Manford. "Many of our great Americans were Scouts... It teaches you to experience things and face the odds."

Light Voter Turnout Predicted

By DOLLIE L. SMITH
UPI Capital Reporter
RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Two of the state's veteran pollwatchers agree the voter turnout in next Tuesday's off-year election will be extremely low but predict all five proposed constitutional amendments and two bond issues will be approved.

However, State Elections Board Director Alex Brock and Secretary of State Thad Eure disagree on the effect of the low turnout on the only issue that has received a semblance of attention or interest among voters — gubernatorial succession.

Brock, who has been within three percentage points in calling elections for the past decade, believes a low voter showing will spell defeat for the proposed amendment to allow the governor and lieutenant governor to succeed themselves for a second, consecutive term. But Eure views it just the opposite.

Brock's turnout prediction is a dismal 28 percent, "lower than it's been in many, many years." Eure is a little more optimistic, seeing about one-third of the state's 2,293,737 voters going to the polls on Nov. 8.

There is no organized opposition and, therefore, little doubt by the two men about the passage of amendment proposals concerning Electricities, a balanced state budget, insurance and homesteads of surviving spouses, and the $300 million highway construction and $230 million clean water bond issues.

The key issue is succession, and both Brock and Eure agree its fate depends on the effectiveness of the organization of its chief backer, Gov. James B. Hunt Jr., in getting out the vote. But, despite a well-financed and organized campaign by proponents, there has been little interest shown in succession until the past two weeks.

Brock said the best election with which to compare this year's special election is the 1973 liquor-by-the-drink referendum when there was a 48 percent voter turnout to overwhelmingly defeat the proposal. "It was because it was significantly important to a large number of people to motivate them to go out and vote," Brock said. "That's an ingredient on Nov. 8 that doesn't exist. It's (succession) just not significantly important to a lot of people."

Both Eure, who has never missed voting in a single election for the past 40 years, and Brock agree that those going to the polls next Tuesday will be the traditional voter, who tends to vote conservatively, and party members who may be affected by the outcome of the succession amendment.

"The higher the vote the better it will reflect the Hunt people doing a better job," said Brock. "If it goes to 34 percent, it will be a result of their organizational work. The lower the vote it will reflect the more traditional 'antis' who go vote for anything and against most everything."

"But I believe the bigger the vote over 25 percent the larger the margin by which it will pass. If it falls around my prediction or lower, it will be closer but it will pass."

According to both Brock and Eure, the determining vote for passage or rejection of the succession amendment will be the large Piedmont counties such as Wake, Durham, Forsyth, Guilford and Mecklenburg counties.

"The Piedmont counties will either have a majority for or a majority against (succession) and that's the way the election is going to go," said Eure.

Eure said it would have been unheard of to submit the succession amendment to North Carolina voters 15 years ago, but since then "people's thinking has changed."

Both men feel that adoption of the succession amendment will eventually lead to a stronger two-party system in the state.

Boeing Air Transport, a predecessor of United Air Lines, assigned eight registered nurses to its flights in 1930, putting the first stewardesses on airplanes.

ENDORSES PACKAGE—First District Congressman Walter B. Jones is one of five N.C. Democratic congressmen on record as being "enthusiastic" about the "Good Government" package, including the gubernatorial succession amendment. State party chairlady Betty McCain identified the five as Jones, Charles Rose, Steve Neal, Richardson Preyer and William Hefner. (AP Laserphot)

Suggests Free Meals For School Children

SALISBURY, N. C. (AP) —

With more than half of North Carolina's children now receiving free or reduced price school lunches, state Rep. Neal Smith has asked the federal government to use the state as a national testing ground for free lunches for all school children, regardless of economic level.

The Rowan County legislator says lunch is as necessary today as the free books or free transportation already provided for pupils.

Smith, a teacher at North Rowan Primary School, made his suggestion at a public hearing on child nutrition. The hearing was sponsored by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The USDA panel members heard Smith's proposal at a recent southeastern regional hearing in Atlanta and indicated immediate interest.

They told Smith they would contact him as soon as they finish similar hearings scheduled throughout the country and will take a serious look at the suggestion with a view toward moving in the direction of a pilot program.

In 1976-77, a total of 51.52 percent of North Carolina's children were on free or reduced price lunches, Smith said.

Can't Drink While In The Saddle

YADKINVILLE, N.C. (UPI) — A Yadkinville man stands to lose his driver's license if he is convicted of charges he rode his horse while under the influence of alcohol.

Local police invoked a little known and seldom-used 38-year-old state statute on Halloween night in arresting Archie Ray Lunsford as he rode through the downtown area on his Appaloosa horse.

If the charge of operating a horse under the influence of liquor doesn't stand up in court, then authorities will seek to have Lunsford's driver's license revoked for six months for his refusal to take a breathalyzer test after his arrest.

Police charged the 43-year-old Lunsford with violating the 1939 statute when he was spotted riding his Appaloosa horse on a street near the courthouse shortly before midnight. One of the arresting officers, Robert J. Todd, said the horse was "going all over the street" and the man who was riding it was "slumped over in the saddle."

New Vet Benefits Considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — A measure boosting educational benefits for veterans and giving veteran status to a group of World War II women pilots needs only President Carter's signature to become law.

The Senate on Friday approved the bill by a voice vote. The House had given its approval on Thursday.

It would raise monthly educational benefits for veterans by 6.6 percent, effective Jan. 1, increase the amount a veteran may borrow, and in some cases extend eligibility for benefits beyond 10 years after discharge from service.

The women pilots — members of the Women Airforce Service Pilots — have never formally been recognized as having been in military service, although during World War II they ferried planes 70 million miles, tested new jet aircraft, towed live-fire targets and performed other duties under military discipline.

Overturms Abortion Law

COLUMBIA (AP) — A three-judge panel of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, ruling on a case involving a Columbia physician, has overturned South Carolina's abortion law, says Richland County Solicitor James C. Anders.

Anders, the defendant in the physician's suit, said the appeals court in Richmond, Va., had informed him of the decision late Friday afternoon.

A spokesman in the clerk of court's office said the panel's decision had not been posted late Friday, so the jurists' reasons were not immediately known.

Attorneys for Dr. Jesse Floyd, a Columbia gynecologist and obstetrician, had argued that the law violated the constitutional rights of Floyd and his patients.

Hazards In Nuclear Plants

WASHINGTON (AP) — A citizens group said today that the Nuclear Regulatory Commission has found electrical and fire hazards in a major safety system found at nuclear power plants.

The group, the Union of Concerned Scientists, said the government should shut down all affected plants until the problem is corrected.

The organization said it learned of the problem through a purported memorandum from one NRC official to another, in which the safety defects were described.

Delay On Saccharin Ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposed 18-month delay of a federal ban on saccharin is on President Carter's desk after receiving final congressional approval, even as a new study linked the artificial sweetener to cancer in animals.

The Senate approved the measure on a voice vote Friday after a House-Senate conference committee ironed out differences in two versions passed earlier this year.

The bill would require products containing saccharin to carry labels warning that the substance is a potential health hazard in humans and has been found to cause cancer in laboratory animals.

Doctors File For Recognition

WASHINGTON (AP) — Doctors working for a Washington-based prepaid health plan have become the first all-physician group to file for union recognition with the National Labor Relations Board.

The doctors sought the NLRB recognition Friday, citing an "anti-physician" attitude on the board of directors of the Group Health Association, according to Dr. Donald E. Mitchell, vice president of the union group.

Mitchell, who estimates that about 70 percent of the 100 physicians working for the health plan support the union drive, said the precedent-setting move was needed to give the doctors more influence.

Arrests Expected

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Attorney General Rufus L. Edmisten says he expects arrests soon in the June 1976 slaying of a Wilkesboro man and his brother.

The bodies of A.C. Greene Jr. of Wilkesboro and his brother, Edward Lee Greene of Boone, were found a day apart in parked automobiles in two different counties.

"We are getting very close to making some arrests in the case," Edmisten said in a telephone interview.

Faces Charges

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (UPI) — A state highway patrolman is facing charges of breaking and entering and larceny after he was spotted by two local police officers who were answering a silent alarm at an appliance store early Friday.

Authorities said Steve Wright Alderman, 30, was charged with stealing a portable television set and a $400 microwave oven from the Stratford T.V. sales and repair shop off N.C. 150. He was released on a $2,500 bond.

Dance Group To Perform

RALEIGH — The New York based Kathryn Posin Dance Company will be in Raleigh for a two-day combination of master classes, lecture-demonstration and a dance concert. The dates are Friday and Saturday, November 11 and 12.

Master classes and the lecture-demonstration will be held on Friday. The concert will be at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Stewart Theater on the North Carolina State University campus.

Ticket reservations are by calling 737-3105. Tickets are priced at $4 for the general public and $3 for children, students and persons over 65.

Recital Today

RALEIGH — John Prince Williams, bass-baritone, will give a recital at the N.C. Museum of Art at 4 p.m. today. The recital is without charge, and the public is invited.

Williams, a graduate of the N.C. School of the Arts, Winston-Salem, is now an officer of the Wachovia Bank in Winston-Salem.

He will be accompanied by Vaughan Thomas, faculty member at St. Andrews College.

Oldest Profession In Country Music Mecca

By DUREN CHEEK

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — What used to be the mecca of country music has become a magnet for practitioners of the world's oldest profession, but a new police tactic and its attendant publicity have hookers singing the blues.

The word is out: Anyone coming to Nashville for a little action should avoid Lower Broadway; otherwise, an arrest for soliciting can get the would-be customer's name on the front page of the papers.

For years, the Grand Ole Opry was housed in the rickety Ryman Auditorium just a tavern or two up from Broad. But about the time the Opry moved to its multi-million dollar digs east of the city, the sex merchants began moving in.

Despite protests from straight businesses along the street, the parade of hookers and the proliferation of porn shops has made Lower Broad the city's unofficial redlight district.

All previous efforts to clean up the area have failed, but the new tactic of using policewomen posing as prostitutes and then arresting the men who proposition them seems to be working.

Police made 14 such arrests last week with a fanfare of publicity. In each instance, the Nashville Banner published the names of all those arrested on its front page. Several of those arrested were out-of-towners who are prominent in their home communities.

Assistant Police Chief Paul Usleton says the use of the decoys will continue.

"We don't enjoy putting these men in an embarrassing position, because we realize it must be bad for them and their families, but we reason that it is not our fault they were down there in the first place," Usleton said. "We feel like it is as much a violation for the men to take part in prostitution as it is for the prostitutes to give their service."

Vice Squad Sgt. Carl Davids said the arrests and publicity have slowed prostitution activities in the area.

"I think most of the local boys have seen the news reports and are staying away," he said.

Two prostitutes who regularly work the Lower Broadway area acknowledged that the new developments are hurting business but believe the setback is only temporary.

"I don't really think it's going to do any good," said one. "The downtown girls are still there. The girls are going to be there because it's an old profession."

She added that the decoys police are using are "real old women," while many of the downtown hookers are young black women.

Another prostitute said she ordinarily made $1,500 to $1,600 a week, "and that's not even working on Sundays." Now, she said, her income is down to about $100 a day.

Mickey Mouse made his acting debut in the cartoon feature, "Steamboat Willie," by Walt Disney, in 1928.

Big Blue Crab Catch

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) —

A fisheries expert says the catch of blue crabs along the South Carolina coast set a record in dollar value this year and a cycle may be starting that will produce more crabs in the next several years.

Raymond J. Rhodes, head of the commercial fisheries section of the South Carolina Wildlife and Marine Resources Department, said blue crab landings seems to run in cycles of two to three years of poor catches, followed by six to seven years of good catches.

This year, commercial crabbers along the South Carolina coast caught at least 7.4 million pounds of crabs, said Rhodes. The value of the catch is estimated at a record for the state of $1.7 million.

"Blue crab landings in both 1975 and 1976 were well below previous years in the 1970s," said Rhodes. "This year's landings are closer to the average."

While crabbers received more for their catch, Rhodes said the cost of their operations also has gone up.

"In 1972, most crabbers spent less than $2,000 a year on bait," said Rhodes. "Now, many crabbers are spending more, than $4,000 a year for bait, and costs of fuel and crab pots also are increasing."

Rhodes says about 300 licensed crabbers work the coastal waters of South Carolina.

No TV Ads

NEW YORK (AP) — Three New York television stations no longer will accept advertising for South African Krugerrand gold coin, which many Americans have been purchasing as investments.

The decision by WABC, WNBC and WCBS — flagship stations of the ABC, NBC and CBS networks — was disclosed Friday, the day the United Nations clamped an arms embargo on South Africa in response to that nation's actions against black nationalists.

To: All the people of Greenville

Subject: Endorsement of Harry Hagerty for a seat on the Greenville City Council.

The persons listed below are all former city councilmen, elected by the people of Greenville and serving during periods and at times when Harry Hagerty was city manager.

We had first-hand knowledge of his abilities and great capacity for problem solving and innovative approaches to planning for and providing necessary services.

We found him to be a man of absolute integrity, a man we could always depend upon to have at his fingertips the law and the regulation on every relative subject, in order to provide the council with a sound basis from which to proceed.

We knew that he would make certain that the city received every cent of revenue it was entitled to and was expending not one penny more than was authorized by law and by our budget appropriations.

He always conducted himself with dignity and within the policies established by the council; with energy, enthusiasm and leadership, working tirelessly through difficult times to provide for Greenville's orderly growth and at a price the tax-payers could afford to pay.

We enthusiastically Endorse Harry Hagerty as a candidate for The Greenville City Council, to contribute his broad knowledge and extensive expertise, his mature judgment and sense of values to help the city council to meet the problems of the future.

We firmly believe that Harry Hagerty will vote for those actions that will ensure that all the vital functions of our city government are carried out to the fullest and in the manner desired by our fiscally responsible citizens.

Giving Up Child Said An Act Of Love

FORBING, La. (AP) — A man stopped at a children's home and asked that his daughter be watched while he fixed his car. He did not return. But the two-page handwritten letter pinned to the 7-year-old girl's sweater told the story: He suffered from a "hopeless" illness and had "no one else to turn to" with the mentally retarded child.

A spokesman for the Caddo Parish Sheriff's Department said Friday that authorities were trying to identify the child, left Thursday at the Holy Angels School for retarded youngsters and adults.

The man did not leave his name, nor that of the child, who does not appear able to hear or speak, the spokesman said.

"I feel hysteria over the act of separating with her, yet it is an act of love," the man wrote. "Years of anguish and fear have brought me to your door of mercy, to God, and my church."

"I have no family, no one else to turn to for moral or financial support. During each operation I have had, just thinking of her has aided me."

"But I am in the midst of depression and hopelessness today. There is so little time to find her security away from the indignities of public agencies. I am filled with strong feeling that you, as nuns, will understand my plight."

"hopeless" illness and his increasing inability to care for the child he loved.

The letter did not indicate the nature of the father's illness. "You never know what God wants to do," said Sister Zita, director of Holy Angels, which houses and educates 170 infants, children and adults. "He brought her to the right place. We will care for her."

Nuns who saw the man described him as about 5-feet-8, 140 pounds, with brown hair and a moustache.

"He was very neat," Sister Zita said. "The girl, too, was neat and clean."

The girl was given a physical examination Friday. Sister Zita said she may be slightly undernourished.

"It's not a case of child neglect at all," Teros said. "Looks like a situation where he left her here thinking it was the very best place in the world."

Few Candidates In Martin County Race

WILLIAMSTON—In the Tuesday municipal elections in Martin County's two largest towns, the incumbent mayor of Williamston is running without opposition, while in Robersonville three men are seeking the office.

Williamston Mayor Robert Cowan faces no opposition in his bid for reelection. In Robersonville incumbent Mayor L. Wilson Wynne is opposed by J. D. Knox and an incumbent town councilman, J. R. Crandell.

On the town council scene Taylor Slade and David Tripp have tossed their hats in Williamston race against five incumbents seeking office again—Thurman Perry, John M. Rogers, David Highes, John R. Hudson, and William H. Honeyblue.

The town councils in both Williamston and Robersonville have a membership of five councilmen.

In Robersonville, the council race will be a bit more competitive, with four new candidates and four incumbents on the ballot. Incumbents are William A. Cherry, R. B. Nelson, James D. (Jimmy) Rogers, and Claude R. Wilson. Newcomers are Guy Forbes, Gerald Lee Hardee, Mike Kilpatrick, and Gordon Knox.

Observers on the Martin County scene are predicting a light voter turnout on Tuesday, especially Williamston, due to the small number of candidates. However, the same trio of observers questioned all said that the constitutional amendments may lure a few voters who otherwise would not go to the polls.

Small Number Of Tar Heels To Decide Big Issues

By DAVID R. NELSEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A small number of North Carolinians will decide Tuesday whether they and the state's remaining 5.5 million citizens will go $530 million in debt and whether incumbent governors should be allowed to seek a second term.

There are two bond issues and five constitutional amendments up for citizen approval Tuesday. Voters in several cities will also elect mayors and councilmen.

Supporters and opponents of succession and the bond issues agree that the outcome will have a dramatic impact on the state's future.

Nevertheless, Elections Director Alex K. Brock has predicted that less than 700,000 persons — 28 percent of North Carolina's 2.2 million registered voters — will go to the polls.

Gubernatorial succession has attracted most of the attention in recent weeks, with the bond issues taking a back seat. The succession proposal would allow incumbent governors and lieutenant governors to seek a second term. It would take effect immediately, meaning Gov. Jim Hunt and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green could run for reelection in 1980 if it passes.

A $300-million road bond issue and a $230-million water-and-sewer bond issue have drawn little opposition. Backers say the bonds are essential for the state's economic development.

The longest proposed constitutional amendment is No. 4, which would allow cities that have their own electric distribution systems to own generating plants jointly with private utilities.

Two proposed amendments would give men the same benefits that women now have in inheriting property from a deceased spouse. The other proposed amendment is aimed at ensuring the state never embraces deficit spending.

Here is a summary of each of the seven items and arguments raised concerning them:

ROAD BONDS

Supporters say road bonds are crucial to North Carolina's growth because industries will not locate in an area without good roads.

The bonds will be sold at a rate of $60 million a year for five years, with most going to improve existing roads. When the matter was before the legislature, critics objected to the interest cost and advocated raising the gasoline tax by two cents a gallon instead. That proposal died for lack of support.

The bonds have drawn little opposition, with most of the critics charging that their areas would not get enough of the bond revenues.

If approved, $175 million will be used for primary roads, $75 million for secondary roads and $50 million for highways through urban areas. Ten percent from each category would be used for bridge replacement or repair.

Secondary-road funds will be divided according to how many miles of unpaved roads each county has. Wilkes County would get the most, $2.1 million, and New Hanover the least, $84,000.

Transportation officials say work is needed on 16,000 miles of roads and 5,000 bridges. Officials say it would cost $7 billion to improve all 75,000 miles of roads in the state.

Last spring, representatives of local government made it clear that the General Assembly should approve the water-bond issue if it did nothing else. The issue slid through with no opposition and none has surfaced since.

Some 146 communities have water or sewer systems that are below standard or are at capacity. Those communities cannot tolerate additional growth until their systems are upgraded.

The bonds will be used by local governments to finance 25 percent of the cost of water-and-sewer-system improvements. The federal government will foot the rest of the bill.

About half the money will be used to develop reservoirs. Several areas of the state have been hit by severe droughts the past two summers.

Distribution of the funds will be based on relative need.

AMENDMENT 1

This constitutional amendment would prevent creditors from taking a home inherited by a husband from his deceased wife. Wives now have such protection. There are exceptions to the policy, including stipulations that taxes owed must be paid even if it would require selling the home.

AMENDMENT 2

This amendment would protect life-insurance money left to a husband by a deceased wife from being taken by creditors. Again, this is an extension of a policy now in effect for wives. Like Amendment 1, it is aimed at eliminating certain constitutional distinctions between the sexes on the grounds that women sometimes are breadwinners.

AMENDMENT 3

The most talked about issue in the election is Amendment 3, the gubernatorial succession proposal. It would allow governors and lieutenant governors to seek a second consecutive term. If it passes, Gov. Jim Hunt and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green would be allowed to run again in 1980.

Some opposition and some support has come because the amendment would apply to Hunt. But leaders on both sides are asking voters to consider the merits of the issue rather than Hunt's popularity because the decision will still be in effect long after Hunt leaves office.

Succession has been promoted by every governor since Luther Hodges and two former governors — Terry Sanford and Jim Holshouser — are actively campaigning for the amendment.

Supporters have emphasized the theme that voters should have the right to retain a governor who they believe is doing a good job.

The amendment would give governors more power and provide a better balance among the three branches of state government, proponents say, noting that only North Carolina both forbids succession and denies the governor veto power.

It would also give the governor greater power over the bureaucracy, supporters argue. Critics have said many state workers slack off during the last year of a governor's term because he is losing power. Because a governor is now a lame duck the day he takes office, some say he has less influence with the General Assembly, particularly in the second legislative session of his term.

An eight-year governor would also have greater influence in regional and national affairs and be able to take leadership positions that cannot be attained now, proponents say.

Also, a governor would be more responsive to the people if he has a chance to run again, supporters say. Former governors say four years did not give them enough time to institute the programs they promised while campaigning.

Opponents, however, say they haven't been shown enough reason to change the constitution when North Carolina has a history of clean government. They also argue that the governor's numerous appointments give him considerable power as it is.

The governor now has great influence over the legislature, but succession would allow him to dominate it and the judicial branch, they say.

An incumbent governor could use his position to campaign for re-election and effectively shut out other viable candidates, particularly in his own party, by locking up sources of funds and supporters, opponents say. That would result in machine politics, they charge.

Now, they say, governors are statesmen and free to make tough decisions, while succession would make first-term governors fearful of making some unpopular decisions that might be in the best interest of the state.

AMENDMENT 4

Though it is long, this amendment essentially just allows municipalities with their own power distribution systems to own generating plants jointly with private utility companies.

The amendment was sought by Electricities of North Carolina, an organization representing the municipal power systems. An advantage they would enjoy is being able to afford a nuclear-fueled generating plant that might cost $1 billion. A private utility would benefit because the plant could be built with low-interest municipal bonds and save the utility's customers money.

AMENDMENT 5

This amendment simply does what a lot of people thought had been done a long time ago: It would put a ban on deficit spending in the constitution. Deficit spending is currently forbidden only by statute. Consequently, if a future legislature decided to go the deficit-spending route, it would only need to change the law — unless the amendment passes.

One Incumbent On Town Ballot

GRIMESLAND — Lee P. Perry is the only incumbent alderman listed on the ballot for Tuesday's election at which time Grimesland residents will elect five persons to serve on the town's governing board.

In all, 12 persons are listed on the ballot.

In addition to Perry, the other candidates include: Thurman L. Clark, Bobby R. Dixon, Thomas J. (Tom) Dixon, Leslie Elks, John Thomas Farr, Zelda C. Galloway, V. L. Harrison, George W. (Bill) Huntley, Kathleen P. Mobley, Lelon A. Moore, and Estelle L. Morrison.

The polls in Grimesland will open at 6:30 a.m. and close at 7:30 p.m. at the Town Hall.

MODEL MAKING

MYSTIC, Conn. (AP) — The art of ship model making is the subject of a new exhibit — "Model Making Today" — at Mystic Seaport.

The show includes 40 models that range from 3½-inch miniatures to fully-rigged, four-foot vessels. The models range from clipper ships to steamboats, schooners, skiffs and a Japanese whaling sampan.

Contacts Have 'Ultra-Thins'

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — A new series of ultra-thin contact lenses has been introduced for nearsighted persons. Researchers for Bausch and Lomb's SOFLENS Division describe the new lens as especially helpful for persons normally considered good soft contact lens candidates but who could not achieve the same comfort, wearing time and good vision that successful wearers do with the existing lens series. Ultra-Thin contact lenses are thinner; this helps permit further oxygen transmission. For persons with sensitive or tight eyelids, they help eliminate lens awareness. On certain types of eyes they aid in solving lens centering problems and stay in position on the cornea.

CORNER OF GREENVILLE AND ARLINGTON BOULEVARDS

Partners In Goodwill Mission

By WILLIAM GLOVER

AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Father Chuck Gallagher and Mitch Leigh have never met, but the feisty Jesuit and the Broadway composer are partners in a matrimonial goodwill mission that circles the globe.

The odd connection came about because the friar found, more or less by chance, just what he needed in the other's music. As far as theatrical record-keepers know, there's never before been such a link-up between spiritual uplift and show biz.

Gallagher, 50, heads Marriage Encounters, a Catholic project with interdenominational affiliates. Leigh wrote the score for "Man of La Mancha," one of the Main Stem's greatest hits, which was based on the classic "Don Quixote" and the life of its author, Miguel Cervantes.

"Those songs are great mind-joggers for all the couples," is how the stocky padre explains the use of secular tunes in the cause he directs.

"If they benefit, that's terrific," says Leigh. "I'm for anything that makes people feel better."

Although he didn't hear about the project until two years ago, Leigh says, "I wouldn't do anything about any possible infringement."

Gallagher says Marriage Encounters is designed to enhance both the private and religious aspects of the marital condition. Its guidance manuals are used in 34 countries from Ireland to Indonesia.

"We are matchmakers for couples who already have chosen one another," he says. "We aim to restore the excitement and increase their awareness."

Gallagher believes "a good heavy percentage of marriages" are positive "but there comes a point when the personal relationship takes second place. For the average man, job comes before wife, and her main ambition is for her children."

About one million people in this country and 200,000 abroad, he estimates, have taken part in the 44-hour weekend retreats used by Marriage Encounters as the basic treatment.

An encounter session, with an average attendance of 30 couples, involves 12 discussion periods separated by intervals of private meditation — "there are never any public revelations." At appropriate places in the program come the songs from the show about the perils and triumphs of idealism and devotion.

"When we want them to see beauty and merit in their partner," says Gallagher, "we first play 'Aldonza,' which expresses the despair and anger of someone who is unloved. Then comes 'Dulcinea' in which is shown what happens when a person is lovingly cherished."

The third selection is "To Each His Dulcinea," during which the presiding cleric, revises the lyric "though she only be flame and dream" to "you have your Dulcinea."

The melodic peak of the retreat comes at the final meeting when "The Impossible Dream" is played.

ECU Jazz Players, Trombonists To Perform At State Convention

Student members of two ECU music ensembles have been invited to perform at the N.C. Music Educators Association Convention in Winston-Salem today through Tuesday, November 6-8.

They are members of the ECU Jazz Ensemble and the ECU Trombone Choir, both directed by George Broussard of the School of Music faculty.

The Jazz Ensemble, comprised of 20 members, will perform with recording artist George Roberts.

Eight members of the Trombone Choir will join other performers in a combined Trombone Ensemble from six N.C.

campuses to be directed by Donald Knaub, professor of trombone at the University of Texas. The ECU trombonists and a four-member rhythm section will also perform with Kai Winding, a jazz artist.

Composer Dunbar To Perform

Gerald Shelby Dunbar, composer and a music theory faculty member of the School of Music, East Carolina University, will be featured in a recital of his compositions on Sunday, November 13, at 8:15. The recital will be held in the A. J. Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall.

The program is open to the public, and there is no admission charge. Seating for all recitals is on a first-come, first-seated basis.

Dunbar, a pianist, will be assisted in the performance by six musicians of the School of Music faculty.

These are: Paul Topper, violin; Andrew Farnham, tuba; Harold Jones, tympani; Antonia Dalapas, soprano; Nelms McKelvain, piano; and Barry Shank, who will conduct the ensemble.

Five students will also be performing in Dunbar's recital — Teresa Mangieri, clarinet; William Frazier and Scott Carter, trumpets; Robert Burford, horn; and Benny Ferguson, trombone.

Among compositions to be performed are Two Pieces for Clarinet and Piano; Sonata for Violin and Piano; Fantasy for Brass Quintet, Piano and Tympani; Variations, Aria and Finale for Two Pianos; and a song cycle, The Sights of Autumn.

Dunbar, a first year faculty member at ECU, holds the Bachelor of Music degree from Southwestern Louisiana University and the Master of Music degree from Florida State University. He is currently working on a doctoral degree at Florida State.

Concert Choir To Sing At Convention

The East Carolina University Concert Choir, conducted by Brett Watson, will perform at the N.C. Music Educators Association's annual convention in Winston-Salem on Monday, November 7.

The ECU choral group is one of several outstanding school and college choirs invited to appear at the convention, and is scheduled to perform at 2:15 p.m. on that date in the First Baptist Church of Winston-Salem.

Compositions the Concert Choir will perform in its program are a Palestrina motet, Dies sanctificatus; the Heinrich Schütz setting of the 100th Psalm; J. S. Bach's Der Geist hilft unsrer Schwachheit auf; four songs by Brahms; two Christmas carols and two spirituals.

The Schütz and Bach selections are arranged for two choirs, and will be performed by two divisions of the Concert Choir, from balconies opposite each other in the church.

Took Part In Festival

Dr. Otto Henry, composer-in-residence, East Carolina University, and faculty trombonist George Broussard have recently taken part in the Seventh Annual "Electronic Music Plus" festival held in Chapel Hill.

Dr. Henry presented one of his own compositions, Bring Back Yesterday, a piece written for the Synthi AKS Electronic Music Synthesizer with slides and color wheel.

Broussard was featured in the performance of Linguistics, a composition for trombone and tape by Dr. Marvin Lamb of Peabody College. The composition was commissioned by Phil Brink, now a member of the faculty at the University of Calgary, Canada.

William Duckworth, a graduate of the ECU School of Music, was among the contingent of composers and performers at the Chapel Hill annual festival.

Three Shows Opening At Gray Gallery

Three-shows-in-one will be opening at the Gray Gallery, Jenkins Fine Arts Center, on campus today with a public reception being held from 2 to 5 p.m.

Aaron Karp, director of the gallery, says "the gallery for these shows will be divided into three sections."

"The first section, and the main show of the three, will be the Down Home Art Show." This show, according to Karp is a fresh, colorful event that has been coordinated by Rock Kershaw. (Kershaw, an artist living and working in Pembroke, is a graduate of the School of Art, ECU).

In notes on the show, Kershaw describes Down Home Art as an "exhibition conceived on a whim, a fancy, on a chilly afternoon in September."

"...It is a naive, folk, primitive, unskilled, semi-skilled, super-skilled, Sunday afternoon art," he says and adds "It is done by young people, old people, and in-between people. It is primeval, joyous, sexual, religious, political, symbolic, mysterious and humorous."

He further notes that the show "is often bad, clumsy in execution ... in fact sometimes so bad, it is good."

All types of items, practical and impractical, are included in this show that is basically works of folk art.

The second section of the gallery is devoted to a show of student work, with representative students invited to show.

A two man show, with works by faculty artists from Illinois and Indiana make up the third section of this trio of exhibitions.

Kent Andrew Follette, potter and faculty member of Loyola University, Chicago; and Earl Snellenberger, Associate Professor of Art at Indiana Central University, are the two with a joint show in the third compartmented area of the large Gray Gallery.

Follette comments on the works on this show by saying (they are) "a study of form which I began six years ago ... These pots have been finished in a glaze of Portland cement and then fired in a reduction atmosphere to a maturing temperature of 2500 degrees Fahrenheit. A variety of engobes, oxides and wood ash were used in the decoration and enhancement of the forms."

Snellenberger works in several media — textiles, wall-hangings, and sculptural forms. Of his award winning art, Snellenberger remarks "These intricately patterned works, designed in cell-like modular units, are related to the structure of the natural world, reflecting nature although they do not reproduce it."

Among his numerous awards is that of Grand Prize-Best of Show winner in professional crafts, Indiana State Fair.

Karp reminds patrons that weekend viewing hours now make it possible to seeing shows at Gray Gallery each Saturday and Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m. Weekday hours (Monday through Friday) are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

There is no admission fee charged, and the gallery is open except for official holidays and at break time between semesters.

DOWN HOME ART — Shown here is one of many items featured in a fresh, colorful show of folk art mostly by Tar Heels. The show, coordinated by Rock Kershaw, an ECU graduate of the School of Art, features the art of primitive, unskilled (and naturally super-skilled) artists.

Murfreesboro Tour By Historical Society

A day long tour of historic Murfreesboro has been scheduled for Saturday, November 12. The tour is sponsored by the Pitt County Historical Society.

Joe Congleton, president of the society, has announced that interested persons who are not members of the society are to welcome to inquire about the tour, and in the event available spaces on the tour bus are not taken by members, others will be accepted on a first-come, first-served basis.

The tour group will be limited to a total of 40 persons, the capacity of the bus taking the group to Murfreesboro and return.

Tentative departure hour from Greenville is 7:30 a.m. Saturday, with arrival scheduled in Murfreesboro at 9:30 a.m. Exact details on departure hour and place of departure will be furnished by Miss Annie Turner, 752-4226, or Congleton at 757-6865.

Fees applicable to the day-long tour are: Bus fare, $6; fee for the guided tour, $6; and lunch, approximately $3. The Murfreesboro Historic League will be host for the tour. Among places to be visited are the Pipkin House, Hertford Academy, Winborne House, Walter Reed House, the Roberts-Vaughn House; Myrick, Thompson, and Wheeler Houses; the Rea Store Museum, and Cedar Chest.

The tour itinerary will begin at 10 a.m. and last until approximately 3 p.m. Sensible walking shoes are suggested.

Murfreesboro is noted for the large number of fine old buildings that have been or are in the process of being restored.

Local Artists Exhibit In Crafts Fair

A NECKLACE ... by Greenville's Roxanne Reep is one of several hundred items to be exhibited in the SECCA (Winston-Salem) annual Crafts Show which opens November 12. (Photograph Courtesy SECCA)

WINSTON-SALEM — The Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art (SECCA) will present its Annual Crafts Show in November and December.

The show goes on view Nov. 12 and will be up through Dec. 16. Gallery hours are 10 to 5 Tuesday through Saturday, and 2 to 5 on Sunday, with a closure on Thanksgiving Day.

This is an invitational show, with more than 60 artists from a dozen states invited to display up to six pieces of their works.

Two Greenville artists and a Wilson artist are among those invited. These are Debra Williams, ceramics, and Roxanne Reep, metal, both of Greenville; and Hiroshi Sueyoshi, ceramic, of Wilson.

Items in the exhibition are divided into five categories — clay, fiber, glass, metal, and wood.

Farmville Show Set

FARMVILLE — The 15th Annual Fall Art Show of work by local artists, will be held at the Farmville Art Society Gallery on four days, Saturday through Tuesday, Nov. 12-15.

The show, sponsored by the Farmville Art Society, will be judged in several categories — beginners, intermediates, advanced, as well as the most popular (by ballot). Also given will be the Instructor's Award and the Letty Garner Award. Juror is Chris Wilson, faculty member of the art department, Atlantic Christian College, Wilson. Mrs. Mildred Fitzgerald is chairman of the show.

There is no admission charge and the public is invited to attend. Hours are 2 to 5 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday, and from 7 to 9 p.m. on Monday and Tuesday.

Beaufort Festival Saturday

WASHINGTON — A Crafts Festival sponsored by the Beaufort County Arts Council will be held Saturday, November 12 at the Art Center (old train station) on Gladden Street.

The show opens at 10 a.m. and will be open until 6 p.m. A number of craftsmen will be on hand to demonstrate their craft, and items will be displayed, many of them for sale.

Shell Show On Saturday

An exhibit of shells, featuring international collections containing rarities in 14 categories of land and sea shells and related subjects, will be held at the North Carolina Marine Resource Center near Salter Path.

The exhibition will be on Saturday, November 12, from 10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. The Resource Center can be reached by taking the cut-off near the John Yancey Motel.

There is no admission charge and the public is invited.

At least one major collector from Greenville will be exhibiting shells.

Moose Show At Center

The new show at the Greenville Art Center is a one-man exhibition of paintings by Phillip Moose, well-known artist of western North Carolina.

A reception for members of the East Carolina Art Society was held Friday evening. Art Center hours are 9 to 5 daily, and the public is invited to view this show during the month of November.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Julie Hicks

Several mysteries have arrived at Sheppard Library and will be of interest to those who thrive on suspense and who are still savoring the eerie feeling of Halloween. A CREATURE WAS STIRRING is a thriller by Tobias Wells, and indeed a mystery is brewing in the town of Wellesley. New police chief, Knute Severson, finds himself in a predicament when he tries to solve the sudden disappearance of Hugo Hix, a selectman for the community. Some seemingly minor pranks and routine disturbances in a local neighborhood turn out to be much more than that. The plot moves swiftly and you won't be able to put it down until you are through.

James Fraser gives us HEART'S EASE IN DEATH in which a terrific storm plays havoc with the lives and possessions of the village of Bollaston in England. For during that storm, several strange things happen—including death—strange because they cannot be explained. Were they accidental owing to the fierceness of the storm or murder at the hands of some convincing killer? At any rate, five deaths are the result. To make matters worse, the strange occurrences do not end with that stormy night. They continue on into the days that follow. All are connected and it is the duty of Superintendent Bill Aveyard to get to the bottom of them.

John Creasey, a familiar name to the mystery enthusiast, has written still another thriller which is certain to keep you on the edge of your seat. ELOPE TO DEATH is the story of Gillian Kelvedon who hastily marries Clive Macklin whom she has known only a matter of days. Worried by an incident which took place recently, the young model's mother calls in Pat Dawlish who also senses a similarity. For Gillian has indeed eloped to danger and possibly death if her case is anything like that of Ivy Marshall who also hurriedly married and was murdered only a few days later. The capable detective, Dawlish, and his wife are begged by Mrs. Kelvedon not to call in Scotland yard and are off on a wild goose chase across Europe hoping to apprehend the newlyweds before it is too late. Although the reader knows what is happening at all times as they follow both the fleeing couple and Dawlish, still the question "Why?" lingers until the very last page.

Washington's Historic Griffin House For Sale

The Historic Preservation Fund of North Carolina, Inc. has obtained an option to purchase the historic Griffin House in Washington.

"As a revolving fund, our aim is to acquire the property and resell it to a sympathetic buyer who will agree to restore and preserve it under protective covenants," James A. Gray, Executive Director of the Fund, explained.

"It is important that the house be saved. It is one of the oldest existing structures in Washington, having survived the fire that burned most of the town in 1864. The time in which we must find a buyer is very short," Gray added.

"since our option expires on January 3, 1978. If we fail to meet that deadline, the Griffin House will be in grave danger of being demolished."

The two-story frame house is Federal in style, and features two double-shouldered, Flemish bond, brick end chimneys; box cornice with molded trim; original mantels; and many other original features. The first floor contains a center stair and entrance hall with one room on each side, with a similar arrangement upstairs. Smaller, later rooms have been added to the north and west sides of the house.

Although official records are scarce, architectural evidence indicates that it was built around 1800. Contemporary with the house and behind it is a large, distinctive outbuilding with a central chimney, one room on each side, and a full attic. It was built as a kitchen with living quarters overhead.

The Griffin House is located on a corner lot at 402 N. Market Street, near the center of town, and only six blocks from the Pamlico River marina. It is suitable for either residential or commercial use, or both.

The Fund is asking $26,000 for the property, based on its valuation of $16,500 for the 72 by 148 foot corner lot and $10,000 for the historic structures.

The Fund, brought into being by the Historic Preservation Society of North Carolina, is a non-profit corporation established to operate a statewide revolving fund for historic preservation. It recently acquired and resold the Bingham House in Orange County to a private individual who is now restoring it under protective covenants.

In trying to save the Griffin House the Fund is working in close cooperation with the Beaufort County Historic Properties Commission, the organization credited with the successful preservation of the historic courthouse in Washington. "We are delighted to have the Commission as our local partner in this instance," Gray stated.

RALEIGH — The progressive jazz-rhythm and blues group, Roy Ayers Ubiquity, will be in Raleigh for two performances on Wednesday, Nov. 9. The group will perform at 7 and again at 9 p.m. at Stewart Theater, NCSU. Reservations and additional information are available by calling the Box Office, 737-3105.

Those persons interested in buying the Griffin House and seeking permission to inspect the buildings should contact Mrs. Bettie Bonner Cooper, Chairman, Beaufort County Historic Properties Commission, Route 4, Box 154, Washington, N.C. 27889.

THE HISTORIC GRIFFIN HOUSE . . . In Washington, one of the oldest buildings in town, is in danger of being demolished unless a buyer can be found to purchase the structure and restore it under specified covenants. The price being asked for the house and lot, which also includes a large outbuilding, is $26,000

A Quiet Moravian Place

WINSTON-SALEM — There is a quiet place in this modern, expanding southern city.

It is an area where serenity and peace crowd out glass and steel, plastic and noise.

It is called Bethabara. More properly it is Historic Bethabara, the first Moravian settlement in North Carolina.

To be sure it has its old buildings and archaeological attractions.

But the true Bethabara reaches into the fields and up the climb to God's Acre.

These stir man's soul. They force the memory to reach back to those years long gone and the Moravians — the Children of Peace who came here to live a simple life and live their faith.

Here among the rustling trees and gentle fields one can sit and rediscover important things that have been forced out by an era that survives on urgency.

There is a spirit of peace that can cause one to miss the 12:00 luncheon or even the 2:30 flight.

Fifteen men came here from Pennsylvania to an abandoned trapper's cabin to start their town of Bethabara — "House of Passage."

In 1776, the Moravians turned to the task of building their central town, Salem, a few miles away. Today, Old Salem is one of the world's most renowned historical settlements.

In 1772, the essential buildings were completed, and most of the industries and residents of Bethabara moved to the new town — Salem — leaving Bethabara, a small, quiet community, as it remains today.

Who were the Moravians?

They were followers of John Hus, a pre-reformation priest of the Catholic Church who preached against the Church. He was burned at the stake 102 years before Martin Luther posted the Ninety-Five Theses on the door of Castel Church, Wittenberg, Saxony.

The followers of Hus became known as Moravians because they came basically from Moravia, a province now incorporated in northwestern Czechoslovakia.

Walk across the fields and one comes to a nature trail. Here a sign proclaims: "I am the old trail leading to God's Acre. I invite you to walk as folks have walked for generations and be friendly with my flowers and my wild creatures."

God's Acre is where the Moravians are buried. It is laid off in rather large squares. The Moravians followed the choir system. Married women and widows are buried chronologically, in one square; married men and widowers in another. Single men are on one side of a square, with little boys on the other; single women and little girls share another square.

Marker stones are flat giving to unity. There is a gate that says simple: "Till the Day Breaks."

Up and down the trail to God's Acre are benches so one can stop and enjoy the hush and tranquility.

Much can be learned about the Moravians by visiting the Bethabara Church and Gemeinhaus, or Congregation House. The simplicity of the church explains much about these remarkable people.

The Gemeinhaus is considered to be one of the finest examples of Moravian architecture.

Placed around the walls are butterfly sconces. The butterfly is the symbol of resurrection.

The minister lived in the back of the house where he had a bedroom, a kitchen, and a place of study.

The building also contained a one-room schoolhouse. The huge desk contained an interesting feature. As the child passed to another grade he received a larger drawer as the small ones were reserved for the younger children.

There are some 40 sites, ruins, archaeological recoveries, and other historical features on the 80-acre site operated by the City of Winston-Salem and Forsyth County.

Much of the development of Historic Bethabara has been done through the generosity of the late Charles H. Babcock and the Mary Reynolds Babcock Foundation.

The restored 1782 Potter's House, and the Museum, also offer exhibits that give a complete portrait of Historic Bethabara.

Pottery made at Bethabara was considered some of the finest of the time. Examples of pottery made by Gottfried Aust, master potter of early Bethabara and Salem and his apprentices, Rudolph Christ and Gottlob Krause, are exhibited.

Costumed guides provide fascinating word pictures about the life and costumes of the Moravians.

Historic Bethabara is open Easter through November. Admission is free and hours are 9:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. on weekdays, and 1:30 p.m.-4:30 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

Pirates Stomp ASU To End Boone Hex

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
BOONE — Pat Dye may have had nightmares for the past two years about playing at Appalachian State University, but on a rainy afternoon yesterday, it was nothing but sweet dreams for the Buc head coach.

The Pirates, after falling behind 7-0 early in the game, quickly turned the contest around and waltzed to a 45-14 victory over the befuddled Mountaineers.

It may have been the first East Carolina victory ever in Boone. Record books show the site of the games between the two only back to 1950, and only once in the previous years did the Bucs win, way back in 1952. If that was in Boone, it would mean at least a 25-year drought for the Pirates after they climbed up the Blue Ridge.

Saturday, however, any hope of the Mountaineers were quickly erased after their brief lead and the Pirate offense, coupled with a tough defense which intercepted five Mountie aerials, took charge after that.

Scott McConnell got that first ASU score, on a ten-yard pass from Robbie Price. But between then and Greg Kilday's one-yard plunge in the final quarter, the Pirates scored six touchdowns and a field goal.

Eddie Hicks scored twice, on a 69-yard run just seconds after the first ASU score. His other was a three-yard jaunt that put the Bucs ahead to stay.

Quarterbacks Leander Green and Jimmy Southerland each got scores, on runs of four and one yard, respectively. Backs Willie Hawkins and Sam Harrell scored on two-yard runs. Junior Creech added six extra points and a 35-yard field goal to close out the scoring — the highest total for the Pirates this year.

Of the six scoring drives in the first half, four were set up by turnovers, and the Pirate defense accounted for three of those.

Appalachian State got its lone score of the half after only a 13-yard drive after Mike Pritchett recovered a fumbled punt by Gerald Hall.

That staked the Mountaineers to a brief lead. It was to last only 15 seconds by the scoreboard clock.

From the 13 of the Pirates, ASU scored in just four plays. After two plays reached the seven, ASU was hit with a 15-yard penalty on a clip. But Price hit Michael Peterson at the ten to gain back most of the lost yardage. On the next play, he caught McConnell alone on the right side of the line, and the halfback had an easy score. Davis added the PAT kick for a 7-0 lead with 9:03 left in the period.

But it lasted only long enough for the Pirates to get the ball back. The kickoff put the ball at the 31 after a 21-yard return by Tony Collins.

On first down, Southerland took the ball around the left side to about the 40, where he tossed back to Hicks just prior to getting hit. For the speedy Hicks, it was a waltz the rest of the way as the only ASU defender left had no chance to get him. The 69-yard play, followed by Creech's kick, tied it at 7-7 with 8:48 showing.

Minutes later, Hall got some revenge for his earlier misplay, intercepting Price at the ASU 47.

Green went to Gallaher for 16 yards, then kept for 13 more. Theodore Sutton cracked through for 15 to the three. Hicks got his second score two plays later and the Pirates, after a 35-yard PAT kick by Creech following a holding penalty, led 14-7 with 4:44 left in the period.

Appalachian got off one drive after that, moving from its own 24 to the ECU 31 before a fake field goal pass attempt was dropped, turning the ball over.

East Carolina later got it back at the 34, and drove for another score. Sam Harrell gained 14 yards on the first play, to near midfield, and on third and three from the ASU 45, Sutton broke away for 22 yards to the 23. But a breakdown there led to Creech's 35-yard field goal with 9:52 left, making it 17-7.

Noah Clark recovered an ASU fumble at the 34 a few plays later setting up another Pirate score. Southerland guided the drive, picking up 15 yards on the first three plays. Finally, from the four, Green scored on a keeper around the right side with 5:55 left, as the score climbed to 24-7.

Two plays after the kickoff, Thomas McLaurin intercepted second string Mountie quarterback Chris Schwecker at the 42, setting up one more score in the half. Schwecker had come on after Price was injured on a sack by Harold Randolph.

Southerland again guided the score, running for 23 yards and hitting Terry Gallaher for 12. Despite two five-yard penalties, the Bucs finally scored with Hawkins taking it around the right side for two yards with 1:19 left. That made it 31-7 at the half.

ASU threatened early in the second half when it drove from its own 36 to the ECU 20 before Willie Holley intercepted and returned to the ECU 47.

Two fine catches by Gallaher of 23 and 11 yards and a good run by Southerland put the ball on the two, and Southerland went the final yard with 10:10 left to run it to 38-7.

Late in the half, the Pirates lost a chance when Steve Hale got the fourth interception of the day at the ASU 40. The drive petered out after reaching the 29. But just two plays after the punt, Matt Jones hit the ASU ball carrier, popping the ball loose, and D. T. Joyner recovered on the nine.

On third down, Harrell went around the right side once more from the two, and that moved the lead out to 45-7.

Late in the game, ASU got good field position after backing the Pirate second unit into a deep hole, forcing a punt from the ECU one. The return put the ball on the ECU 36, ASU finally pushed it to the one, and Greg Kilday went over from there. Davis added the PAT to trim it to 45-15 with 2:05 left in the game.

East Carolina finished the game with 363 yards total offense, but had 405 at the end of the third period. The youngsters took over after that, and had trouble moving the ball, as the yardage dropped off.

The win boosted the Pirate record to 8-2, while ASU dropped to 2-7. East Carolina travels to Norfolk, Va., next Saturday afternoon to play host to William and Mary in the Oyster Bowl.

Hicks, with only three carries, ended up with 73 yards, tops for the Pirates, who had 12 different ball carriers. Sutton had 54 yards, Southerland 48, and Vince Kolanko, 47. Southerland hit on seven of eight passes for 64 yards.

State's Ted Brown breaks from Mike Guman

Late Score Rallies Penn St.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Split end Scott Fitzkee grabbed an 11-yard touchdown pass from Chuck Fusina with 58 seconds left to give ninth-ranked Penn State a 21-17 football victory Saturday over North Carolina State.

Fusina's pass, which capped an 83-yard drive, climaxed a game in which he broke two Penn State passing records with 22 completions for 315 yards. His 36 attempted passes tied another school record.

N.C. State had an offensive star of its own in running back Ted Brown, who broke his own one-game school rushing record of 228 yards and scored one touchdown.

The Wolfpack had taken a 17-14 lead on its first possession of the fourth quarter when fullback Billy Ray Vickers took the ball from quarterback Johnny Evans on a draw play and plunged over from the one-yard line.

Penn State scored first, taking a 7-0 lead less than three minutes into the game on a 36-yard pass from Fusina to flanker Jimmy Cefalo. Cefalo scrambled free of State's defenders to gather in the pass at the five and dash in untouched.

N.C. State's first score, a 25-yard field goal by Jay Sherrill in the second quarter, came after the Wolfpack drove 67 yards for a first and goal at the Penn State seven. The drive was stalled when Penn State's Joe Dimminick tackled Brown for a six-yard loss that pushed the Wolfpack back to the 13.

N.C. State went ahead 10-7 in the third quarter on Brown's seven yard run on a handoff from Evans. The score was set up by a 66-yard run through the middle by Brown to the Penn State 14.

Brown's 66-yard run put the N.C. State junior past the 1,000-yard mark for the season and over 3,000 yards for his Wolfpack career. Brown finished the day with 251 yards in 37 rushing attempts.

Penn State took a 14-10 lead on the final play of the third quarter, a one-yard plunge by fullback Matt Suhey. Mickey Shuler's 21-yard pass reception got the Nittany Lions across mid-field on the drive, and a 24-yard run by halfback Steve Geise gave Penn State a first down on the Wolfpack three.

N.C. State's desperation drive in the closing seconds of the game came to an abrupt halt when Penn State tackle Matt Millen intercepted an Evans pass at the Wolfpack 33 and returned it seven yards. Fusina then killed the clock in one play by falling on the ball.

Scott Paces Terps

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP)—George Scott ran for a school record of 237 yards, and scored three touchdowns and Maryland overcame a string of second half turnovers to beat Villanova 19-13 in college football Saturday.

Scott, starting at tailback because of injuries to Steve Atkins and Alvin Maddox, carried 42 times to help the Terps boost their season record to 5-4.

His rushing yardage, which nearly doubled his season total, easily topped the previous Maryland mark of 215 yards by Atkins against Syracuse last year.

The 6-foot-2, 210 pound sophomore scored the winning TD on a five yard run with 5:01 left to play capping a 69-yard, 11 play drive. Scott carried on all but one of the plays.

He had earlier scored on a pair of one-yard runs as the Terps built a 13-3 lead before the Wildcats, now 3-6, charged back in the second half.

Villanova, getting 100-yard plus rushing performances from both quarterback Pat O'Brien and fullback Vince Thompson, converted third period fumbles into a 33-yard field goal by Gus Fernandez and a 2 yard TD run by Mike Chenet.

But the Wildcats could not capitalize on a third fumble recovery and an interception of a Larry Dick pass, and were kept deep in their own territory throughout the final period.

They also missed an opportunity to tie the score early in the game when Thompson was stopped inches short of the end zone on a fourth and-goal play by left guard Bruce Palmer.

From its own one, Maryland then drove downfield to take the lead on Scott's second touchdown.

The drive was highlighted by a 41-yard run by Scott, the longest run from scrimmage for Maryland this year.

O'Brien, a freshman, also had a 41-yard run and gained a total of 110 yards on the ground, mostly on option plays that kept Maryland's defense off balance. Thompson, the Wildcats' leading ground gainer, gained 103 yards on 26 carries.

Tar Heel Field Goal Gains Tie With Clemson

By TOM FOREMAN JR.
Reflector Sports Writer
CHAPEL HILL — A late Carolina march, which culminated in a 30-yard field goal by Tom Biddle with 58 seconds left in the game, may have decided the Atlantic Coast Conference champion for 1977. Biddle's kick salvaged a 13-13 tie with the Clemson Tigers, but possibly eliminated the tigers from their chance for the ACC crown.

A crowd of 50,500 the largest ever to watch a football game in Kenan Stadium, saw the Tar Heels recover a Clemson fumble deep in their own territory and move for the trying field goal after a third-down pass by reserve quarterback Clyde Christenson was batted away by a Clemson defender.

"I'm disappointed that we did not win the football game, and the players are disappointed. But we still have two rungs left on the ladder," UNC head coach Bill Dooley said. The final two runs are against Virginia next weekend and Duke on Nov. 19. Both games are on the road and a win over both teams would assure Carolina of the ACC crown.

Clemson's quest for the top of the ACC mountain ended at the Carolina 19 with about five minutes left in the game. Quarterback Steve Fuller handed off to tailback Lester Brown. Brown bobbled the handoff, and apparently kicked the ball into the interior of the line. Defensive end Stanley Lancaster fell on the ball, and set the Tar Heels up for the climactic finish.

On a third-and-six situation, Christenson hit tight end Brooks Williams for 15 yards to the Carolina 37. On a third-and-12, Christenson hit wingback Bill Mabry for 11 more to the Carolina 46. On fourth-and-one, tailback Amos Lawrence, who rushed for 150 yards on 17 carries, picked up 11 yards, pushing the ball into Clemson territory.

After Christenson gained a yard, fullback Bob Loomis went up the middle for 24 yards, putting UNC on the Tiger 18. Greenville's Doug Paschal gained a yard. Christenson scrambled for four, and then missed the sideline pass, setting up Biddle's kick.

It looked for a moment that Carolina would not even reach a tie when Clemson went for its lead touchdown. The Tigers took the ball near the end of the third quarter and moved 83 yards in 12 plays. Fuller used the airplay, completing key passes to flanker Dwight Clark and tailback Warren Ratchford. The Ratchford completion went for 21 yards to the Tar Heel two-yard line.

Brown tried twice to hurdle the rugged Tar Heel defense, with no success. On third down, he scored off right guard to make it 13-10 with 11:13 left in the game. Nigerian kicker Obed Ariri, who hadn't missed a PAT kick in 17 tries, pulled attempt number 18 to the left to keep the Tar Heels in the game.

Carolina's first score came as a result of a Clemson turnover deep in Tiger territory. Punter David Sims dropped the snap from center and, when he attempted to run, was tackled at the five by Lawrence Taylor. From the five, Paschal and Lawrence failed to gain yardage, and a Matt Kupec pass was incomplete. Biddle kicked his first field goal, a 22-yarder with 2:53 left in the first quarter, for a 3-0 lead.

Clemson took the lead in the second period with an 84-yard march. After being sacked, Fuller hit Brown for a 16-yard completion to the Tiger 27. After a penalty on a seven-yard gain, Fuller completed a pass to Clark to the Tiger 29. Two rushing plays picked up five yards, then Fuller passed again to favorite receiver Jerry Butler for 24 yards to the Carolina 24. On the tackle, UNC defender Ricky Barden was detected grabbing the facemask, and the ball was advanced to the 12.

From there, fullback Tracy Perry ran unmolested into the end zone, and Ariri's conversion made it 7-3 with 5:41 left in the second quarter.

Carolina countered in just four plays following the kickoff. Lawrence gained three to the 21. Starting quarterback Kupec, who suffered a slight shoulder separation later in the game, but is expected to play against Virginia, threw 11 yards to Mabry to the 32. Lawrence gained nine more to the 41, then took a pitchout to the right and coasted down the sideline for a 59-yard score. Biddle's conversion regained the lead for Carolina at 10-7 with 4:04 left before halftime.

"At halftime, we told them they would have to go back out in a work attitude, and I think they came back out in the second half and did that," Pell added that his team was already tired before the game actually began.

"I felt like we'd played the game so many times since Wednesday that we were Clemson attempted to tie the game late in the half with a 62-yard Ariri field goal try, but the attempt was 20 yards short. Clemson coach Charley Pell felt his team was too tight in the first half, but motivated them for another try in the second half.

"At halftime, we told them they would have to go back out in a work attitude, and I think they came back out in the second half and did that," Pell added that his team was already tired before the game actually began.

"I felt like we'd played the game so many times since Wednesday that we were already tired," Pell said.

There were two factors in the contest that would have settled the issue outright for either team. In the third quarter, Lawrence took a pitch and raced down inside the Clemson 10, but a holding penalty at the Carolina 48 nullified the run, and forced the Tar Heels eventually to punt. The Tigers, on the other hand, literally dropped a golden opportunity when a P. J. Gay pass was bobbled and lost by left linebacker Randy Scott. Had Scott held on, he had nothing but grass in his path to the end zone.

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Quarterback Mike Dunn passed for one touchdown and ran 26 yards for another Saturday as Duke slogged to rain-soaked 38-14 win over Wake Forest in an Atlantic Coast Conference football game.

Dunn marched the Blue Devils up and down a soggy field for four touchdowns as Duke improved its season record to 5-4 and evened its ACC mark at 2-2.

Wake Forest, which made it inside the Duke 20 yard line only three times, dropped to 1-8 overall and remained winless in the ACC with six conference losses.

Dunn broke a 7-7 tie in the second quarter, climaxing an 80-yard, 12-play drive with a touchdown pass to Glen Sandefur. With 7:59 left in the half, Dunn hit the big tight end on a 33-yard play as Sandefur was all alone inside the ten yard line.

Dunn added another touchdown on the next Duke possession, taking the ball to the Deacon 25 yard line and dodging up the middle for a score.

Wake Forest scored first, when quarterback Mike McGlammy found tight end Steve Young in the end zone on a four yard play. Duke answered on its next series when fullback Stanley Broadie went in on a three-yard run.

The Deacons' only serious threat in the first half came with 1:30 on the clock and the score at 21-7.

But on second and goal from Duke's three, tailback Jimmy Hargrove fumbled and Duke recovered.

Duke fumbled on its first possession in the third period, and the Deacons went 69 yards in eight plays for their second score. Star tailback James McDougald, who managed only 59 yards rushing in the game, dove in from the one.

Duke made it 28-14 with 4:59 left in the third quarter when tailback Greg Rhett ran in from the six.

Scott Wolcott booted a 42-yard field goal for Duke to close the third quarter.

The Blue Devils piled on another touchdown in the fourth period when fullback Ned Gonet ran in from the two yard line, two plays after Duke intercepted a Deacon pass.

Keydets Pound Virginia, 30-6

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Quarterback Robby Clark, scoring one touchdown and passing for two others, led Virginia Military Institute to a decisive 30-6 victory over the University of Virginia Saturday in a nonconference game that clinched the mythical Big Five championship for the Keydets.

VMI, now 3-0 in state play and 5-3 overall, quickly turned the game into a rout with 23 points in the first 17 minutes of play.

Clark figured in 16 of those points, beginning by sneaking in from the one to cap a 50-yard drive on the Keydets' first series of downs. Then he unloaded a 78-yard touchdown bomb to flanker Johnny Garnett and hit tight end Mike Freeman with a 50-yard pass that set up a 41-yard field goal by Steve Jones on the first play of the second quarter.

Two minutes later, after recovering a fumble at the Virginia 6, Steve Oddi scored VMI's third six-pointer, and added the fourth midway through the final period as he took a screen pass from Clark and raced 34 yards to paydirt.

Virginia, which saw its season record drop to 1-7-1, averted a shutout when quarterback Chip Mark scored on a threeyard run at the outset of the fourth quarter.

Except for Mark's score, which was Virginia's first TD in 13 quarters of play, the Cavaliers had little to shout about.

In the first half they netted just 38 yards and posted only one first down, that coming on a penalty. Not until free safety Jay Morris intercepted a pass and returned it 31 yards to the VMI six with five minutes left in the half did Virginia penetrate Keydet territory. But a penalty shoved the Cavaliers back to the 21. Two plays later VMI had the ball back, recovering a fumble following a pass completion at the six.

In the third quarter, the Cavaliers failed to capitalize on two good scoring opportunities. They first fumbled away the ball after driving to the Keydet nine, then moments later, when a VMI fumble gave them the ball, they were unable to score on four runs from the Keydet three.

Virginia's final frustration came in the waning minutes when a 36-yard pass from Mark to Tom Champion carried Virginia to the VMI five, but on the next three plays the Keydets pushed the Cavaliers back to the 26 and a fourth down pass failed to get to Virginia to the end zone.

VMI finished with a 308-212 advantage in total yardage as Clark hit on six of nine passes for 152 yards. Keydet tailback Andre Gibson, the nation's 10th leading rusher, had 67 yards on 19 carries.

It was VMI's first state title since 1962.

Gilbert, Jones Lead By Three

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Gibby Gilbert and Grier Jones blended their talents for a back-9 29 that propelled them to a 3-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $200,000 Walt Disney World National Team Golf Classic.

"The only really nice thing about a third-round lead," said Jones, "is that you know if you play good the next day you're going to win. If you're trailing, you can play good and not win."

Gilbert and Jones had a better-ball score of 61, a whopping 11 under par on the rainsoaked, 7,197-yard Magnolia Course at Walt Disney World and compiled a 54-hole total of 187, a dizzying 29 under par.

Tied for second at 190 were the teams of Tom Weiskopf and Hale Irwin and Chi Chi Rodriguez and Mexican Victor Regalado. Weiskopf and Irwin combined for a better ball 63 in the cloudy, threatening weather, while Regalado and Rodriguez clowned their way to a 65.

"We've still got a lot of golf to play," warned Gilbert. "And we've got some tough teams behind us—Irwin and Weiskopf aren't gonna be easy to handle. I just hope we can do it."

"Our strategy is to put two balls on every green and give us a par-option-birdie opportunity."

Steve Melnyk and Andy North were four strokes back at 191 after a 64.

Rodriguez and Regalado held a 1-stroke lead going into the third round and were obviously were disappointed with their performance.

"Overall," said Rodriguez, "we played lousy. We played just like a Puerto Rican and a Mexican."

Eddie Pearce and Terry Catlett had a 64 for 192 and were tied at that figure with Morris Hatafsky and Don Pooley, who had a 63.

Johnny Miller, playing with Japan's Tsuneyuki Nakajima, had a 64 and a 193 total. They were tied with veterans Charles Coody and Lou Graham, George Ourns and Ben Crenshaw, Lon Hinkle and Craig Stadler. Hinkle-Stadler had 66, Burns-Crenshaw 62, Coody-Graham 64.

Gomez Is First To Sign

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Minnesota infielder Luis Gomez became the first baseball free agent to agree to terms following Friday's re-entry draft but his contract with the Toronto Blue Jays isn't quite in the class another ex-Twin, Lyman Bostock, expects to get.

Agent Abdul Jalil, opening talks in Oakland for Bostock, anticipates a considerably fatter deal for his client than the Blue Jays had to give Gomez.

Jalil spent Saturday fielding phone calls from the California Angels, Chicago White Sox, New York Yankees and Toronto and making appointments to begin negotiations next week.

"I expect the White Sox, Angels and Milwaukee to be here on Monday and Toronto on Wednesday," said Jalil. "You have a basic idea about where you will start with each team you talk to. A player like Lyman might be more important to some teams like Texas, Milwaukee or the Yankees than he might be to some others, like maybe Oakland and San Francisco."

Jalil said Bostock, who earned barely more than the major league minimum of $19,000 while batting .336 for Minnesota in 1977, had established his value by his performance on the field.

"This guy is the second best hitter in baseball," said the agent. "The dollars and cents are going to be there. But there are other things to consider as well."

Bostock was the hottest property in the free agent draft, selected eight times on the first round alone and picked by the maximum 13 clubs.

"Some teams may be willing to give more money than others but what if that team plays in a city where Lyman doesn't want to go?" said Jalil. "A team has to meet Lyman's demands, no matter what they may be. First, you merely want to establish guidelines."

Jalil said Bostock's final decision would rest totally with the player.

"My job is to get all the benefits I can in the contract," he said. "Choosing the team is strictly up to Lyman."

Some of the teams that drafted Bostock had not yet contacted Jalil. One that he had not heard from was the New York Mets, who angered the agent by placing a collect phone call to him last week.

"Negotiations are based on concessions and many times the concession I make is to listen to a club," Jalil said.

Bostock was the first player picked in the draft by Toronto. The Blue Jays made Gomez their first selection on the second round, a rather high position for a player who hit .246 in just 32 games with Minnesota last season. Less than 12 hours after the draft had ended, the Blue Jays announced that the infielder had agreed to terms and would sign a contract next week. It will take Jalil and Bostock longer than that to complete their negotiations.

Richmond Edges Furman

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Buster Jackson turned in a career-high 101 yards rushing and led the University of Richmond to a 19-13 win over Furman's Paladins in a college football game Saturday.

The Spiders, 3-6, scored twice in the second quarter on short runs by Demetri Kornegay and Milt Ruffin to jump to a 14-0 lead.

In the third quarter, Furman, 4-3-2, turned two Spider fumbles into 10 points, with Jimmy Kiser scoring on a two-yard run and Bobby Behr kicking a 35-yard field goal.

Furman was held to 80 yards total offense by the Spider defense in the first half.

After Behr kicked his field goal in the fourth quarter, Richmond failed to move the ball, and Furman got the ball at the Spiders' 48. Ten plays later the Paladins had a chance to go ahead, but Behr missed a 25-yard field goal.

Jackson led the rushers with 101 yards in 20 carries. teammates Ruffin and Tim Thacker combined for another 119 yards on the ground, and the Spiders had a season-high 342 yards of total offense.

For the Paladins, quarterback David Henderson completed nine of 12 passes for 80 yards. Tommy Southard caught six of them, as well as throwing a 39-yard option pass to Greg Leatsch.

Behr kicked his second field goal with 10:35 left in the game, cutting the margin to 14-13.

But Richmond then cemented the win on a 43-yard field goal by Steve Adams, the longest of his career. The Spiders got a safety when punter Willie Freeman fumbled out of the end zone with 30 seconds left.

Pitt In Rout

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Matt Cavanaugh stormed three yards for a second-period touchdown after digging Pitt out of a first-and-39 hole and the 12th-ranked Panthers rolled to a hard-hitting 44-3 college football victory Saturday over bitter neighborhood rival West Virginia.

Pitt, 7-1-1 after dropping its opener to Notre Dame, spotted West Virginia a 3-0 lead on Bill McKenzie's 45-yard field goal with just 2:33 gone after record-setting quarterback Dan Kendra became the Mountaineers' career pass yardage and total offense leader by completing two passes for 45 yards.

However, the Panthers, who were stymied on their first possession when West Virginia nose guard Joe Jelich made three consecutive tackles, each for a one-yard loss, swung the momentum their way when career interception leader Bob Jury swiped his 17th pass and returned it 36 yards to the fiveyard line.

Fred Jacobs took a pitch-out around left end from the four for the touchdown and Pitt was off and running with a 7-3 lead.

Cavanaugh's second-period touchdown and Mark Schubert's 36-yard field goal gave the Panthers a 17-3 halftime lead and they stunned the Mountaineer Field crowd of 37,031, largest of the season, with a pair of third-period touchdowns just 13 seconds apart.

Indians Squeak Past Bulldogs

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — William and Mary quarterback Tom Rozantz connected on a 20-yard touchdown pass to Joe Manderfield with 4:43 left Saturday to give William and Mary a 14-13 college football victory over The Citadel.

The Citadel had an opportunity to pull the game out with 1:17 remaining, but placekicker Paul Tanguay fell short on a 49-yard field goal attempt.

William and Mary opened the scoring in the second period when reserve quarterback Kevin Odor found end Gary Oliver all alone in the end zone from nine yards.

The touchdown gave the Indians, formerly of the Southern Conference but now independent, a 7-0 halftime lead.

The Southern Conference Bulldogs got on the scoreboard on the final play of the third period when Tanguay booted a 43-yard field goal.

The victory gave William and Mary a 4-5 record. The Citadel fell to 3-6.

The Citadel's Mark Slawson set up the Bulldogs' next score on a 75-yard punt return to the Indian 2-yard line. Running back Lavonia Mitchell went the remaining two yards over right tackle to give the Bulldogs a 10-7 lead.

After an Alan Turner pass interception, the Bulldogs marched to the William and Mary 6-yard line and Tanguay kicked a 23-yard field goal for a 13-7 Citadel lead.

The Indians came right back as Rozantz directed a 64-yard drive on 13 plays, connecting with Manderfield for the touchdown.

Tide Gets Crown With Win

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer
BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Coach Bear Bryant of second-ranked Alabama captured another Southeastern Conference football championship Saturday, but he wasn't especially moved.

"We've got bigger things ahead," Bryant said after his Crimson Tide defeated No. 18 Louisiana State 24-3 despite losing four fumbles in a nationally televised game.

Tony Nathan provided the scoring punch with two touchdowns on one-yard plunges and a 20-yard scoring pass to Keith Pugh as Alabama captured its sixth SEC title in seven years and earned a berth in the Sugar Bowl.

But Bryant is more concerned about national championships and always has been during his 20 seasons at Alabama.

The Tide won't move up this week, because top-ranked Texas rolled to a 35-21 victory over Houston.

"I think the best team won, and I think we played better than we have all year," Bryant said. "I know we did in my book, and I think we got better as the game went on."

"They had a little too much manpower and it took its toll in the second half," said Coach Charles McClendon of LSU.

Alabama took control of the game late in the third quarter when LSU failed to cash in on a fumble recovery at the Crimson Tide 46.

With LSU trailing 10-3 and facing a fourth-and-seven, Wayne Hamilton slammed Steve Ensminger for a 16-yard loss at the Tiger 45 and Alabama moved from there to a game-breaking touchdown, helped by a 26-yard pass interference penalty.

Nathan scored that touchdown on a one-yard run in the final minute of the third quarter and came back early in the final period to throw his 20-yard halfback scoring pass to Keith Pugh.

Nathan's first touchdown came at the end of a 94-yard drive with only 25 seconds left in the half, with Nathan accounting for 53 yards on seven carries, including a 33-yard scamper.

While Nathan was taking care of the scoring, 227-pound fullback Johnny Davis punched out 126 yards for the Tide.

It was the seventh straight victory for Alabama since an early defeat by Nebraska and lifted the Tide's record to 8-1 overall and 6-0 in the SEC.

It was the 15th conference championship for Alabama, including 10 since Coach Bear Bryant returned to his alma mater 20 seasons ago.

LSU fell to 5-3 for year and 3-2 in the conference.

Alabama drove to the Tiger 14 early in the game, but Roger Chapman missed a 32-yard field goal try. He came back later in the quarter to kick a 44-yarder that gave the Tide a 3-0 lead.

John Adams, who turned in several big plays in the first half to stop Alabama, recovered a fumble at the Tide 33 to set up LSU's only score. That came on the first Tiger field goal of the season, a 31-yarder by Mike Conway that tied the game at 3-3 with just under 10 minutes left in the half.

Alabama put together its 94-yard scoring march in the final seven minutes of the first half, requiring 15 plays which ate up most of the clock.

LSU had two scoring chances in the third quarter, sending Charles Alexander 25 yards to the Tide 42 on the first possession but bogging down eventually and Conway missed a 35-yard field goal attempt.

Alabama marched to the Tiger nine where Adams recovered another fumble and Ozzie Newsome fumbled a punt later in the quarter which Sam McGeorge recovered at the LSU 46 moments before Hamilton's key fourth-down sack.

The Alabama defense clamped a lid on LSU's vaunted running game, although Alexander did manage to rush for more than 100 yards, most of it on runs of 25 and 30 yards in the third quarter — the latter when he stumbled over his blocker and the final defender at the Alabama 30. Alexander finished with 110 yards on 22 carries.

Buckeyes Explode

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Ohio State's fourth-ranked Buckeyes, held to one touchdown in the first half, erupted for three in the third quarter — two in a span of 13 seconds — and rolled to a 35-0 victory over Illinois Saturday to remain undefeated in the Big Ten.

Five different players scored for the Buckeyes who boosted their Big Ten record to 6-0 and are now 8-1 overall. Illinois dropped to 2-4 in the conference and 3-6 for the season.

Limited to only eight plays in the first quarter, Ohio State finally put together a 73-yard drive in the second quarter with Paul Campbell scoring from the one-yard line for a 7-0 halftime lead as a Homecoming crowd of 66,973 cheered the Illini when they left the field.

The next time the Buckeyes gained possession, they drove 65 yards for another score with flanker James Harrell carrying the final five yards. Early in the fourth quarter, with the reserves taking over, the Buckeyes went 88 yards in 15 plays for another touchdown with Ricky Johnson scoring from the 15-yard line.

Sommers On Pole

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — "Lame duck" Sam Sommers, who found out much to his surprise last week that he has been fired, stunned the favorites and put his Chevrolet on the pole position for Sunday's Dixie 500 Grand National stock car race.

Sommers, driving what may be his last race for Savannah businessman M.C. Anderson, roared around the 1.522-mile Atlanta International Raceway at an average speed of 160.229 miles per hour.

"I wasn't supposed to find out until after the last race of the season," said Sommers, who is being replaced by Buddy Baker. "I don't know what's going to happen next year. But I decided I was going to give it my best shot here and leave in style."

Sommers' firing came as quite a surprise to more than just himself. His team was formed last year by a group of people interested only in furthering the career of the popular 36-year-old sportsman racing veteran.

Sommers currently trails Ricky Rudd by just three points in the season's Rookie of the Year standings.

"The pole is a big bonus," said Sommers, who picked up $1,000. "But the big deal is to win the race Sunday. That has been our goal all year—to win a major race. Right now I'd have to think our chances are pretty good."

"At least we know we're competitive."

Richard Petty ran 160.084 mph in his Dodge to earn the other front row starting position in the 40-car field, which was filled Saturday.

Steady rains that had prevented any track activity since Thursday let up Saturday morning. Officials had been considering postponing Sunday's race one week if the rain hadn't stopped by Saturday afternoon.

Baker, last year's Dixie 500 pole winner, qualified seventh, while defending race winner Dave Marcis managed only 16th. The rain, which washed the bumpy track surface extraneous, was credited with holding speeds below Baker's 1976 speed of 161.652 and Petty's track record of 162.501.

Baker also added, "Because of the rain, we only had a short time to work on the car. I believe if we could have worked on the car and had a little more time on the raceway, we could have been right near the front."

Cale Yarborough, in ninth, noted, "We had planned to use our qualifying engine, but during the lull this morning we put the race engine in because we didn't know how much time we were gonna have after the qualifying or if we were going to be able to qualify at all. When those other guys get their race engines in, they will slow down some."

Sunday's race is scheduled for a 12:30 p.m. EST green flag.

Gators Rally By Dogs

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The Florida Gators shrugged off two fumbles and roared to a pair of second-half touchdowns by Wes Chandler for a 22-17 comeback victory over the Georgia Bulldogs in a nationally televised football thriller.

Georgia led 17-10 at halftime as Willie McClendon ran wild for 153 yards and two touchdowns, but Florida's wishbone offense, guided by fleet-footed quarterback Terry LeCount, dominated the second half.

The Gators drove deep into Georgia territory four times after intermission. Fumbles stopped them twice at the 25 and 35 and Berj Yepremian missed a 44-yard field goal attempt.

A Georgia fumble added 25 yards and set up the winning Florida drive, mostly on Chandler's run off the left side. He sprinted 18 yards for one touchdown and smashed 1-yard for the last one.

Yepremian and Georgia's Rex Robinson traded field goals in the first half.

Chandler also scored Florida's first-half touchdown on a 12-yard pass from LeCount after a Georgia fumble. The victory gave Florida a 4-2-1 season record and 3-2 in the Southeastern Conference. Georgia is 5-4 overall and 2-3 in the SEC.

Sooners In Slaughter

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma quarterback Thomas Lott engineered a 61-28 slaughter of Oklahoma State Saturday to keep the Sooners firmly in control of the Big Eight Conference lead.

Lott rushed for 103 yards on 17 carries, including an 80-yard touchdown jaunt, and passed for 85 more yards before leaving the game late in the third quarter with a slightly bruised shoulder. Lott's injury was not serious, but there was no need for him to return to action as Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer began emptying his bench.

Lott also hit Elvis Peacock with a 48-yard scoring pass and set up another touchdown with 37-yard pass to Steve Rhodes that carried to the Oklahoma State 2-yard line. David Overstreet then scored on a 1-yard plunge.

Oklahoma State opened the game as though the Cowboys were going to make a game of it. They took the opening kickoff and drove 75 yards in nine plays for the score, a 2-yard burst by Terry Miller. Then a few minutes later Miller tackled on a 71-yard scoring burst to give the Cowboys a 14-7 lead.

But the Oklahoma Sooner defense slapped the clamps on Miller and company and gave up nothing the rest of the game. The Cowboys got 14 more points to open the second half, but both were silver-plated "gimmies" by the Oklahoma offense, which fumbled twice on its own 5-yard line.

Oklahoma scored on field goals of 58, 22 and 19 yards by Uwe von Schamann, a safety, a 3-yard run by Freddie Nixon, a 57-yard run by Peacock, a 10-yard pass from Dean Blevins to Victor Hicks and a 55-yard pass-run-lateral play from Blevins to Steve Rhodes to Overstreet.

Montana's Arm Aids Irish Rout

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Notre Dame quarterback Joe Montana passed for 273 yards and three touchdowns, scored another on a one-yard sneak and ran for a two-point conversion, leading the fifth-ranked Irish to a 69-14 romp over Georgia Tech Saturday in a college football mismatch.

Vagas Ferguson and Jim Stone also scored two touchdowns apiece for the 7-1 Irish, who scored 48 points in the second half.

The Irish trailed 7-6 after Eddie Lee Ivory returned a kickoff 97 yards for a second period touchdown. But Montana, a 6-foot-2 junior, guided the Irish 63 yards on their next possession, passing 15 yards to Kris Haines at the Georgia Tech eight and hit Terry Eurick for the go-ahead touchdown on the next play.

Montana, whose touchdown run earlier gave Notre Dame a 6-0 lead, then ran around right end for two more points and the Irish were ahead to stay.

The Yellow Jackets were unable to dent the Irish defense except for Ivory's long run until a 18-yard pass from Gary Hardie to Drew Hill with two minutes left in the game.

Refs To Meet

The Greenville Official's Association will hold its first meeting of the season at the Elm Street Gym Wednesday, Nov. 9 at 7:30 p.m. Anyone interested in officiating junior high and recreation basketball is asked to attend.

Tar Heels Tie Clemson

Scouts and selection committee members from seven bowl games were in attendance at the game, the 50th anniversary of the first game ever played at Kenan Stadium. In pre-game ceremonies, the members of the 1927 football team were honored.

With this game, Clemson ends its ACC season at 4-1-1, with Notre Dame and South Carolina remaining. Overall, the tigers are 7-1-1. Carolina goes 6-2-1 overall, and 3-0-1 in the ACC.

Numerous Changes In Football

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Football is nothing like it was 50 years ago, and if the memories of the 1927 Tar Heel squad serve, today's players should be grateful.

The 1927 squad had leather uniforms and helmets weighted by layers of thick felt, so it took a lot of muscle just to move around. The load may have been lightened a little because the players wore less padding, but this also contributed to the number of cracked bones.

But real roughing it was playing without a faceguard. "That's how I broke my nose," said Sam Presson Jr., right end for the Tar Heels in '27. The fate of the late Nelson Howard may have been even worse. He lost five front teeth that way.

The members of the Carolina team that played the first game in Kenan Stadium 50 years ago were to be honored today in remembrance of the Thanksgiving Day game against the University of Virginia when Kenan Stadium was officially dedicated.

On Nov. 24, 1927, more than 27,000 fans packed the "university's vast grid temple" to watch what had become the biggest rivalry in the South. An overflow of fans crashed through fences blocking the end zones to watch the Tar Heels beat Virginia 14-13.

It was, unfortunately, one of the few games the team won that year. Earlier that season, they'd had a victory over a long-standing rival then and now, Maryland.

The Heels then went on a great losing streak. They were defeated by South Carolina, Georgia Tech and N.C. State. "At this year's UNC-State game," said Ed Hudgins, who now lives in Greensboro, "I was reminded of something I had forgotten, maybe because I wanted to forget."

"They had players from State's 1927 team there," said Hudgins, who was team manager in 1927, "and they were just bragging about how they'd beat Carolina that year, 19-6."

Following another loss to VMI, the new Kenan Stadium was completed and the team seemed to perk up a bit. That game was the "unofficial" opening of the new stadium.

"We were all kind of in awe of the new stadium," said John Thomas Gresham Jr., who lives in Jacksonville. He recalled standing in Emerson field, where previous games were played, sometimes in—ankle-deep mud, and looking beyond the Tin Can to the oval-shaped, brick-fringed stadium, softly tucked into a natural, green gorge.

"It was really beautiful, with a hill on each side," he said.

After the Davidson victory, the Heels beat Duke 18-0 and closed the season with the tense Virginia game.

The Tar Heels took the victory through an extra point that was disputed by the two officials on the field. They turned to line coach Robert Fetzter, the unofficial scorekeeper on the sidelines, to settle the dispute. He called the point good.

"Fetzter was such an ornery man," James Ward recalled, "nobody dared disagree."

So there was lots to be thankful for that Thanksgiving Day, and in the season that followed as well. The team improved continually once they convinced their coaches that the Notre Dame right-wing offense wouldn't work for them.

"The reason we didn't play so well that season is simple," Ward said. "We just didn't know the plays."

Bills, Chiefs Begin 'Second Season' Today

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

The "Second Season" begins Sunday for two of the National Football League's most beleaguered clubs, the Kansas City Chiefs and Buffalo Bills.

If it is anything like the "First Season," it is going to be a l-o-n-g one. In the first half of the regular season, each team won one game and lost six.

For the Chiefs, entertaining the Green Bay Packers, it is the head coaching debut of Tom Bettis, the former boss of Kansas City's defensive backfield. He was elevated to the top spot when Paul Wiggins was fired last Monday. "A brand new season," promised Bettis.

For the Bills, who counted so heavily on the sensational running of O.J. Simpson, the game against the Patriots in New England is the start of seven games without his services. O.J. slowed earlier this year by knee miseries, will undergo surgery and might not only miss the rest of the season but might decide to quit the game entirely.

In Sunday's other games, it will be Tampa Bay at Los Angeles, Dallas at the New York Giants, Chicago at Houston, Cincinnati at Cleveland, Green at Kansas City, Miami at the New York Jets, New Orleans at Philadelphia, Pittsburgh at Denver, St. Louis at Minnesota, San Diego at Detroit, San Francisco at Atlanta and Seattle at Oakland.

Players Dislike Ruling

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Quinn said it all for the players.

"We are somewhat shocked, dismayed and disappointed by the ruling," noted the counsel for the National Basketball Association Players Association.

And Irv Levin said it all for the owners. "I am happy with the ruling," exclaimed the chairman of the Boston Celtics.

Each reaction was predictably hard-line Friday in the wake of arbitrator Peter Seitz ruling that the NBA was within its right to reduce team rosters from 12 to 11 players.

The players saw it as a loss of 22 jobs, the owners as a gain in revenue.

"We think it is a serious mistake on the part of the NBA to reduce the rosters this way," said Quinn. "It means the loss of jobs and is harmful to the game of basketball."

Quinn added that the Players Association was "studying what options are open to us now. I can't say that we have any, but I'm not sure of it."

Quinn's feelings echoed similar sentiments from players, coaches and general managers around the league.

"I think it will sharpen up competition and strengthen the game," Levin said. "It will make players fight harder to make the team."

Jonathan Kovler, the Chicago Bulls' managing partner, also applauded the decision, but for more mundane reasons. "The biggest thing from our standpoint is that it's going to save at least $1 million to the owners of the NBA," he said.

Seitz' decision was announced by NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien. Seitz agreed in a 21-page opinion with a recommendation voted upon by the NBA owners at their summer meetings last June.

Hopes Are Crushed In San Francisco's Chinatown

By JOHN LEIGHTY
SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The nation's largest Chinatown is a crowded, 17-block, glittering ghetto.

Behind the glossy facade of restaurants and tourists shops are crowded tenements where rats can be seen going through the garbage during early morning hours, where whole families live in a single room and where many face only crushed hopes for a better way of life.

Many are newcomers who do not speak English. Some have to practically abandon their children to work 14-hour day shifts at low pay in restaurants, laundries and sweat shops.

It is these unresolved social factors, along with a plague of economic problems, which have spawned the so-called youth gangs. Police say one of these gangs was responsible for the recent Golden Dragon restaurant massacre in which five innocent bystanders were killed and a half dozen others wounded.

"The gang is like a family, a substitute for kids who really don't have a home life," said Dennis Flanders, who has been working to help street youths since gang warfare first erupted in Chinatown nine years ago.

Flanders, who works with Chinese Youth Alternative, said most of the gang members are youths who want company for social and recreational needs because they do not have the traditional family ties.

"They eat together, go to movies together, bowl together and go to dances together. Sooner or later, some of them get involved in illegal activities. Then they are called gangs."

These gangs are now believed responsible for a sharp increase in violence unmatched since the tong wars of the 1920s. It includes at least 45 murders in the last nine years.

The Golden Dragon shooting Sept. 4 was different from the other killings. Instead of rival gangs shooting each other, the masked gunmen fired indiscriminately. All the victims were innocent bystanders, several of them tourists.

In the wake of publicity, tourism plunged 50 per cent and the city offered an unprecedented $100,000 reward for the killers. Police said they narrowed the suspects down to several members of the "Joe Boys" gang. There have been no arrests.

The first and still most powerful Chinatown gang is the Wah Ching, whose leader and several others were eating in the restaurant when the early morning shootings took place.

The Wah Ching was formed to help immigrant youths overcome cultural and language problems. However, it splintered into factions in 1968. By 1972 there had been 10 gang-related murders. The youngest victim was 14.

"About 90 per cent of the gang kids are foreign-born, or children of immigrants," said Flanders. "Most are from Hong Kong, where underworld activity was part of their experience."

He said most of the youths are seeking power and prestige within gangs because there are no adequate programs to help them find it elsewhere. A job training program would help alleviate this frustration, he said.

"My job is to keep them from killing each other," Flanders said. He does this by trying to keep them in school and out of jail. "If they drop out, they don't have any alternatives."

After immigration laws were relaxed in 1965, tens of thousands of persons came to the United States from Taiwan and Hong Kong. A large percentage settled in San Francisco's Chinatown.

Gamma Delta Members Met

Members of ESA Gamma Delta Chapter met Thursday at the home of the president, Rubelle Goin.

At least four members will attend the Winter State Council meeting at Elon College Saturday, Dec. 3.

Two hours were spent by each member, cutting, stuffing and assembling Christmas ornaments to be sold at a mini-bazaar on the downtown Mall Saturday, Nov. 19. Proceeds will go to charity.

Plans were made for a Christmas covered dish supper to be held for members and friends at the home of Frances Cassick Saturday, Dec. 10. The Council advisor, Doreen Bailey of Winston Salem, is invited to this party and meeting.

The influx exacerbated Chinatown's existing problems of inadequate housing, poor health conditions, unemployment and underemployment, and cultural differences.

A high percentage of elderly live in the area and many speak only their native dialect of Chinese — causing communications gaps between the American-born youth and the older generation.

Police, too, find communications collapse when it comes to dealing with the 40,000 residents of the area. Dozens of gang-related shootings have taken place, many in broad daylight, but there are rarely any witnesses that come forward.

Gang members themselves often turn their rivals in and even go so far as to testify in court, but most of the cases are thrown out because of the jury's reluctance to believe the witnesses.

One recent case involved the shooting of three "Joe Boy" gang members, one of whom died. A Wah Ching member who was helping to protect a gambling establishment was arrested. A trial resulted but ended in a hung jury because all the testimony was by gang members.

Since the shootings, a gang task force of police has been assigned to handle the Chinatown crime problems.

Presently, there are only eight Chinese speaking policemen on the entire force, although a plan has been devised to hire five bilingual civilian employees to work out of the Chinatown station.

Following the Golden Dragon massacre publicity, the Chinese Chamber of Commerce threw a festival to show that it was not dangerous to walk the streets. It was a success but failed to increase the tourism.

One merchant said it might take another year before the full economic effects of the shootings will be known.

J.K. Choy, president of the Greater Chinatown Community Service Association, suggested that armed police auxiliaries be put on the streets as a visible deterrent to crime.

"All they'd have to know how to do is shoot and shoot straight to hit the target," the Hawaiian-born Choy said. "If you had 100 auxiliary police with guns — 50 in the morning and 50 in the evening — my God, there would be no gambling and even the rats would give up the streets."

The reluctance of Chinatown residents to report serious crimes goes beyond what has been termed a "code of silence." There are often language difficulties, particularly in dealing with legalities and the courts.

In one recent case, according to a Chinatown social worker, an elderly man was assaulted and robbed. He identified the youth, who was arrested. Friends of the jailed youth paid the man's hospital bills, gave him back what he lost and said, "We don't want our friend in jail. It's no good for him there." He dropped the charges the next day.

Another incident involved gang leader Kin Chuen Louie, 20, who had two attempts made on his life. He told a Chinatown youth worker, "I don't want no trouble." He was later slain by a barrage of bullets while driving along a street.

Traditionally, Chinatown, isolated from the American mainstream, solved its own problems. There were the family associations and tongs, whose decisions were obeyed.

With the crumbling of the artificial wall around Chinatown, the values crumbled.

Youths today mock the once powerful Chinese Six Companies, where elders admit they have little control over the current situation. They insist that it is for the police to deal with.

There are too few agencies to handle the social needs of the area, but there are concerned people helping the best they can.

Anna Wong, 26, was at age 12 an FOB — Fresh Off the Boat — and had to adjust to a new language and customs. For several years, she's helped others through the local YWCA facilities.

She said many of the youths who frequent the Y's facilities must be recruited from the streets. A lot of them are immigrants who failed to adjust to the language and other barriers and now work at menial jobs or none at all.

"At least they have a place to come and play," she said. "An important thing for a newcomer is peer support."

Chinatown's problems are not those of the Chinese-American community as a whole. About 70,000 Chinese-Americans live in homes outside of Chinatown — and about the same number live in it. Those outside have adequate jobs and respect. The level of education for Chinese-Americans in San Francisco is higher by percentage than that of the general population.

Within Chinatown, however, the average wage for men and women workers is $4,500 a year. High population density and overcrowded, substandard housing directly contribute to medical and mental health problems.

According to a report by the Asian-American Law Students Association of Berkeley, Calif., Chinatown has the highest suicide and tuberculosis rates in America.

There is, however, a migration from the gilded ghetto.

"People are leaving," said law student Ed Chin, adding that a "new Chinatown" has risen in the city's Richmond District, west of Chinatown and near the ocean.

And in the Richmond District, police say, a second major youth gang has arisen — the Chung Ching Yee. There have already been some gang-related killings in the area.

"The youth gangs' criminal activities run from entering theaters without paying, extortion of meals from restaurants, and goods from merchants, street and business robberies, to assault and murder," said police spokesman Michael O'Toole.

He added that the gangs are loosely affiliated and that a fugitive from San Francisco might end up being protected in the Chinatowns of Los Angeles, New York, Portland, Seattle, Chicago, Boston, Vancouver, or even Hong Kong.

Despite the poor conditions of Chinatown, its banking business is booming. Deposits have risen about 45 per cent in the past few years. Millions of dollars, it is speculated, is coming from rich capitalists in Taiwan and Hong Kong, for investment in property.

"I deal exclusively with Chinese clients now," said one real estate dealer. "A man came in the other day, opened a suitcase and showed me $60,000 cash. I don't ask where it comes from."

"Chinatown is a big neon-lit ghetto," said one social worker. "You can't find a ghetto anywhere, though, with as many banks. The money on deposit there could wipe out the ghetto."

SAN FRANCISCO'S CHINATOWN is the largest in the nation; a crowded 17-block, glittering ghetto. Behind the

Adopt-A-Pet

This mostly German Shepherd dog and her five puppies (three males, two females) need homes.

She "took up" with a Pitt County family recently and promptly had the puppies. The family has all the dogs they need already and has asked the Pitt County Humane Society to help them find homes for them. The puppies are six weeks old.

This is a gentle and affectionate dog and she would make a good pet for children. The Humane Society will provide a reduced-fee spaying certificate with her and with any of the animals they give away.

Also available through the Humane Society this week are three eight-week-old Siamese-Burmese kittens (one male, two female), a 10-week-old orange female kitten facing euthanasia, a seven-month-old and a two-month-old kitten, a collie-mix half grown dog (with all her shots) and 16 German shepherd collie mix puppies.

Inquiries may be directed to Mrs. Jeanette Fiore, Humane Society President, 758-0468.

Code Of Silence Protects Chinatown's Shadows

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
UPI Senior Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — The diminutive proprietor sat in the dim shadows of his Cantonese restaurant and spoke in nervous whispers.

"They learned the old tricks on the streets of Hong Kong," he said. "They learned the new tricks on American television."

Six hours later, two blocks away on Canal Street, a spray of bullets ripped into an automobile carrying six Chinese youths. Ke Chung Ng, 19, who lived on nearby Eldridge Street, was dead on arrival at Beekman Downtown Hospital.

As usual in frightened Chinatown, there were no witnesses willing to talk. Police could only speculate that the Canal Street incident in October was the work of Chinese youth gangs shaking down businesses for "protection" in the shadow of the New York city hall.

Street toughs who speak Cantonese and dress East Side punk, rove in gangs, calling themselves The Ghost Shadows or The Flying Dragons and fighting each other for control of the lucrative extortion rackets.

Police say they have been responsible for at least six murders this year. All the victims have been Chinese.

"They don't fool around with white people," said Policeman Vincent Rossi, who works the Mott Street beat in the heart of Chinatown. "They are shaking down their own people."

A bartender at the only Italian restaurant in the neighborhood said he has not been bothered by the gangs. Besides, he sniffed, the Chinese gangs are a "bunch of amateurs anyway."

"They can't even shoot straight," he said. "They're all a bunch of young punk kids."

Nonetheless, Chinatown, long a popular tourist stop on Manhattan's Lower East Side, has become a ghost town at night. Outsiders are staying away.

"This place is dead after nine o'clock," Rossi said. "It used to go all night long."

Local businessmen are paying up and keeping quiet. The Ghost Shadows and their rivals can be savage.

Ignace Cheng, 60, as president of the East Block Association, was negotiating with the John C. Mandel Security Bureau which provides patrol and alarm services for a number of Chinatown stores. On Sept. 9, three youths burst into his second floor travel agency and beat him unconscious. They said nothing and took nothing.

In the hospital with a fractured skull, Cheng at first told police the attack "might have something to do with the gangs." Later said he was beaten by the boyfriends of two young women in a dispute over a travel fee.

Following an investigation, Detective Thomas Armet said, "The girls are clean — nobody's boyfriend did it."

Peter Lee, a former interpreter at the United Nations and a leader of the Chinese community, tried to explain the Chinatown code of silence.

"They just don't want to fight any more," he said. "They are getting old."

"I know the Chinese people. It is a weakness that they do not want to get involved. They are not going to make a big deal over paying $70 a month for protection. If you protest, then you become a target."

Police could find no witnesses willing to talk following a battle at a packed Chinatown movie theatre Oct. 2.

Yam Kit Yuen, 17, was killed and two other men were injured as rival gangs fought with guns and knives at the Golden Theater. Police said Yuen was a member of The Flying Dragons.

Janet Wu, the principal of a Chinatown school where a student was killed recently, refused to discuss the gangs with a reporter. So did Benjamin Eng, the owner of the Silver Palace, a popular Canal Street restaurant, and former head of the local restaurant association.

They are not well educated. They don't speak much English, just Cantonese. They are not homogenized with the Americans.

"They have no entertainment. Their entertainment is the Mah Jong table, the gambling houses."

Rossi and Lee said Chinatown gang fighting started about two years ago.

"They are all newcomers," Rossi said.

Lee, a former president of the Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Association, an umbrella organization of fraternal, political and business groups that unofficially governs Chinatown, said the problem "is beyond the control of the old establishment."

"We need a younger generation of leaders, more young spirit," he said. "We not only need a way to stop them, but to help them."

CHINATOWN IN NEW YORK, long a popular tourist stop on Manhattan's Lower East Side, has become a ghost town at night. Outsiders are staying away as the

Now Machines Fish By Pole For The Market In Albacore

By RON HUTCHERSON
SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The commercial fishing boat Lakeside launched recently had something different aboard helping account for its $350,000 price tag.

Bolted to its deck were 12 mechanical fishing machines capable of casting a line out, hooking a fish, hauling it aboard and dropping it a hold, all without benefit of a human helping hand.

Each Hydra-Pole Automatic Fishing Machine resembles a slot machine-style box with a thick fishing pole for a lever. Compressed air and a hydraulic system enable the machine to cast a line fitted with a barbless hook.

The jolt caused by the strike of a fish activates the hydraulic mechanism to cause the pole to whip backwards and flip the fish onto the deck, explains Gerald F. LaKarnafeaux, president of Fisheries Management Inc.

Once the tension goes out of the line, the fish spits out the hook and the machine returns it to the water.

The process begins with 600 "scoops" of live anchovies carried as bait by the Lakeside, technically a "baitboat." When the Lakeside reaches albacore tuna waters, some of the bait is thrown overboard.

The tuna, in the 15- to 35-pound range, are attracted to the anchovies and, in the frenzy to get them, strike at anything, including a lured hook. The Hydra-Pole hook is rigged with an artificial squid, and in the water it is jogged up and down by the control box.

"Just that movement will tend to attract fish," said LaKarnafeaux.

Once hauled aboard, the fish tumble along on the deck, which is sloped funnelwise to a hatch, fall through and ride a conveyor belt to a refrigerated "well." The boat can hold 50 tons of fish.

The Hydra-Pole, invented by Bob Graham, general manager of the company's fishing operation, is not the first such machine on the market. There are other designs of American origin in use, and the Japanese fishing industry has used a similar device for some time.

However, Graham said Fisheries Management had an advantage.

"I came up with a machine that has three moving parts, as opposed to the Japanese machine which has 172 moving parts," he said. "The Japanese machine goes for about $10,000 — ours for about half that."

The 1977 price for albacore, which cannot be seined economically, was set at $1,165 a ton in negotiations in the fishing and canning industry. In comparison, skipjack tuna bring $740 and yellowfin $820 a ton.

On a conventional baitboat, the crew and owner split evenly the proceeds for fish sold, but on the Lakeside the split will be 60 per cent for the company.

One reason is that the boat is manned by only four persons — a skipper, an engineer and two deckhands.

Graham's device was tested on a jig boat that the company used for half of 1976.

"Our experience with it was pretty encouraging," said LaKarnafeaux. The Lakeside was built, and the company plans to start construction on two more boats of identical design soon.

LaKarnafeaux, also a financial analyst and a director of San Diego Securities, an investment banking firm with an interest in Fisheries Management, said the target income from the Lakeside was $100,000 a year.

"Our primary objective is to own and operate a small fleet of boats exactly like this one," he said.

He said the company's owners also hoped to sell Hydra-Poles to other boats but did not anticipate an active selling campaign.

"If we're lucky, the market will come to us," he said.

LaKarnafeaux said the company did not start building mechanical fish catchers in the belief they would be better than fisherman.

"It's just that with the machines we believe the boat can be operated in such a way as to make a better profit."

Auto Insurer Back From The Brink Of Insolvency

By ELIZABETH H. POPE
WASHINGTON (UPI) — A year ago Government Employees Insurance Co., the nation's fifth largest auto insurer, teetered on the edge of insolvency.
Today GEICO bills itself as "one of the most financially strong automobile insurance companies in America" with a surplus of $140 million.

GEICO's tale of economic turnaround involves a stock offering, fresh management, a severe pruning of policy holders — and the unprecedented cooperation by 27 competitors to bail out the company.

The rescue plan was devised and directed by Maximilian Wallach, the District of Columbia's Insurance Superintendent in the summer of 1976. All parties agree Wallach's task approached the herculean.

GEICO had losses of $126.5 million in 1975. Escalating costs for settling hospital and auto repair claims battered the company, which had 95 per cent of its business in auto insurance.

But, with the aid of Wallach's plan, the net loss for 1976 was cut to $26.3 million — and, based on figures so far this year, GEICO is projecting a healthy profit, perhaps the largest in its history.

"GEICO was writing more business than it could afford when the cost of claims exceeded the expectations incorporated in the rate filing," Wallach said.

"Also GEICO overestimating its own strength, lowered underwriting requirements and the automobile industry as a whole took a licking on a countrywide basis. With GEICO, it was compounded."

Wallach said the ratio of premiums written to surplus funds for policy holders — a standard of economic health used by insurance companies — was "way off (1-27 or more) and something had to give ... either petition the court for receivership under various provisions of D.C. insurance laws or infuse new money."

Wallach convinced 27 insurance firms to temporarily underwrite 25 per cent of GEICO's business worth $110 million in return for a sliding commission of 15 per cent or $16.5 million. He also recommended a stock offering, which the New York investment firm of Saloman Brothers guaranteed.

"The whole situation was unorthodox," said Robert Jackson, GEICO's public relations director. "This was the best solution to a bad problem. It would have been a black mark on the insurance industry if they let GEICO go under. People's confidence in insurance would have been shaken and there was no reason for it."

Step two of the plan involved sale of 10 million shares of stock for $75 million. Jackson said Saloman Brothers handled the sale of 80 per cent of the stock to GEICO stockholders and the rest was picked up at $9.40 a share by the reinsurers. The stock now sells for about $13 a share.

The company, according to its June 30, 1977 second quarter report, has $146,443,000 in surplus for protection of policy holders. Of that figure, $75 million comes from the Nov. 12, 1976, stock sale.

Step three of the plan followed after John S. Byrne, former senior vice president for Travelers Insurance Co., was appointed president of GEICO.

Byrne directed "Operation Bootstrap," designed to improve financial results through cost controls on business expenses and raising premium rates.

A regional office in San Francisco was closed and processing was incorporated into the Washington headquarters with other branches in Woodbury, N.Y. and Macon, Ga.

The company pulled out of New Jersey because "the regulatory climate prohibited doing business," according to Jackson. GEICO, which was the second or third largest auto insurer in the state, had appealed three times to the state insurance commissioner for a rate hike and was turned down.

The move cost the company 250,000 policy holders, a major factor in the 40 per cent decline of policies in force since the end of 1975.

GEICO also stopped offering auto insurance in Massachusetts, but continues to do a small amount of homeowner and other business there.

Jackson said the company decided to "trim its book of business" by dropping high risk drivers. But he said the decline in policies in force was slowing.

According to the second quarter shareholders' report, GEICO policies in force declined 7.3 per cent to 1,652,000 as against a decline of 9.4 per cent in the first quarter. There were 2,497,000 active policies at the end of the first half of 1976.

The company has launched an advertising campaign to draw good drivers because "some people don't realize we're as healthy as we are," Jackson said. "For the first time we're making money on underwriting alone, not including returns from investment."

Company officials say it's difficult to make any accurate estimates of the company's profits, but earlier this year Byrne told stockholders, "If you take the net income of the fourth quarter in 1976, multiply that by four, you get about $32 million, which by coincidence happens to be GEICO's largest net income in history.

RESCUED INSURANCE CO. — A year ago Government Employees Ins. Co., the nation's fifth largest auto insurer, teetered on the edge of insolvency.

The rescue plan was devised and directed by Maximilian Wallach (above), the District of Columbia's Insurance Superintendent (above)

C-Of-C Favors 2 Bond Issues

Lawton Nisbet, president of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce, announced that the State and Local Affairs Committee has offered to the board of directors a resolution favoring the upcoming $300 million state highway improvement bond and $230 million clean water bond issues.

The resolution pointed out that "transportation services and facilities are vital to the social, environmental and economic well being of all people and their institutions."

It noted that "highways are an essential element of the transportation network which serves the needs of all people."

The resolution stated, "We recognize the critical need for clean water and that the state has a responsibility to assist local governments to meet this need for continued economic growth."

The Chamber, "in realizing that additional taxes are not the answer to our highway and clean water problems at this time," urged "citizens of the Greenville area to vote for the issuance of $300 million...highway bonds and the issuance of $230 million...clean water bonds."

The board of directors, meeting recently, approved the action of the committee, headed by Howard Dawkins, and encouraged the Chamber membership to "get out and vote on Nov. 8."

Nisbet reported that Dawkins and his committee have recently mailed brochures to each of the 583 Chamber members encouraging them to display the "Get Out and Vote" brochure as well as remind their employees to vote next Tuesday.

Pitt Epilepsy Ass'n Offers Information

The Pitt County Epilepsy Association has been active since it was formed several months ago in providing fellowship for those having the condition, and education for the public about it.

The group usually meets the fourth Thursday of each month, though this month, because of Thanksgiving, it will meet Nov. 17 in Room 303 of the Flanagan Building at East Carolina University.

Epilepsy, according to its Executive Board Chairman Joyce Eastwood, is a brain disorder which causes periodic seizures. Usually now it can be controlled by medication and can be prevented from interfering with a completely normal life. It can have varied causes, including a blow to the head, infection, impaired circulation, etc. she said.

The local Epilepsy Association provides speakers for other organizations, information and support for epileptics and their families, particularly those of young children with the condition. As of the October meeting, it is affiliated with the Epilepsy Association of North Carolina and support the same goals and research as the state organization.

The mailing address of the local Association is Box 7121, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Officers are Vicki Rowan, president; Judy Rideout, vice president; Sylvia Lane, secretary; and Shirley Price, treasurer.

The Executive Board is composed of Ms. Eastwood, the chairman, and the officers.

Advisors are Dr. Earl Trevathan, local pediatric neurologist, and Dr. Floyd Matthews, ECU Science Education professor.

Dr. Greg Hardy, a local neurosurgeon, will be the guest speaker at the November meeting.

Offer Program On Childbirth

The Greenville Chapter of Childbirth Education will present a showing of films at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 10 in the Conference Room of Pitt Memorial Hospital (new building).

Films to be shown include "The Story of Eric," "The Amazing Newborn," and "Birth Without Violence," a Le Boyer film.

The public is invited and there is no admission charge.

Weekly childbirth classes are planned for an early date. Persons interested in information are to call 756-6304.

No Parking On The Dirt Area

Announcement has been made that late arrivals for the Firefall Concert at Minges Coliseum tonight will be routed for parking to the parking lots at the Allied Health Building.

Ken Hammond, spokesman for the Student Union Center, said that once the paved parking areas at Minges had been filled, all other vehicles will be directed to the Allied Health area. This is being done, he explained, because of the soft conditions of the dirt parking areas.

Offer Classes In Jazz, Ballet

Two classes — one in jazz and one in ballet — have been scheduled by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department.

The new session in beginning jazz will begin on Wednesday, Nov. 9 with classes to be held for an eight-week period from 5:15 to 6:45 each Wednesday. Debbie Phipps is instructor. Fee for the session is $18.00.

Ballet classes, one for beginners, another for continuing students, will begin Monday, Nov. 14. The continuing class will meet from 5:30 to 7 p.m. for eight weeks; and the beginning class will meet from 7 to 8:30 p.m. for eight weeks. Elizabeth Pope is the instructor.

The fee for either of the classes is $18.00.

INDOOR GARDENING FOR YOUNGSTERS

FAIR LAWN, N.J. (AP) — When youngsters want to get into mother's act growing plants under lights indoors, here's a project for them, advises Woody D. Bickford of the Duro-Lite Home Lighting Institute.

Buy a fluffy sponge, sow mustard or watercress seeds in its open pores and soak in a dish of water. Then hang the sponge on the side of mother's light garden and watch it sprout with edible foliage. When the sponge dries out, give the plants a drink by holding a shallow dish of water under it till it absorbs the water.

Business Notes

EARNINGS ROSE

Wachovia Corp. reported earnings of $8.015 million from continuing operations before securities transactions in the third quarter, an increase of 5.8 per cent from the $7.575 million earned a year earlier.

Through the first nine months, earnings totaled $23.486 million or $1.50 per share on 15.667 million average shares compared with $23.936 million or $1.58 per share in 1976 on 15.173 million shares.

Wachovia Bank and Trust Company's third quarter earnings totaled $7.640 million before securities transactions, an increase of 2.8 per cent over the $7.433 million earned in the 1976 quarter.

THIRD QUARTER TOTALS

Colonial Stores Inc. announced an 11.3 per cent increase in sales and a modest increase in earnings for the third quarter, ended Oct. 8.

Sales for the 16-week period were $331,157,944, up from $297,445,865 for the same period in 1976. Net earnings were $3,307,455 or 87 cents per share, compared to $3,256,278 or 86 cents per share, a year ago.

Colonial reported that the quarter's results brought sales for the first three quarters to $811,491,297, up from $746,127,844 for the first three quarters last year, an increase of 8.8 per cent. Net earnings were $7,653,148 or $2.01 per share, compared to $8,596,889 or $2.26 per share for last year's 40-week period.

The company operates supermarkets in seven Southeastern states, primarily under the names of Colonial, Big Star and Richway Foods.

CONDUCTED SEMINAR

Dr. Lewis C. Forrest Jr., partner in Hospitality Consulting Associates, Greenville, conducted a one-day seminar entitled "Train the Trainer" in Rochester, N.Y. on Oct. 17 and in New Orleans, La. on Oct. 26.

The seminar was attended by executives and managers from the food service industry and was co-sponsored by the respective state restaurant associations and the National Restaurant Association.

CREDIT DROPPED

According to weekly figures released by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, bank credit at 27 large commercial banks dropped $83,859,000 in the week ended Oct. 26, lowering bank credit outstanding to a level of $22,804,928,000.

Net loans, adjusted—total loans exclusive of loans to other banks and loan valuation reserves—declined $93,101,000, while total investments rose $9,242,000.

Included in the Fifth Federal Reserve District are North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, Maryland, the District of Columbia, and most of West Virginia.

DIVIDEND DECLARED

The board of directors of Jack Eckerd Corp. declared a cash dividend of 16 cents per common share, payable Dec. 1 to shareholders of record at the close of business on Nov. 11.

The dividend, it was announced, is an increase of 33.3 per cent over the regular quarterly dividend of 12 cents which was paid to shareholders Sept. 1. It will be the 65th consecutive quarterly dividend paid by the company, whose principal business is the 16-state, 818-store Eckerd Drug chain.

The corporation recently reported record sales and earnings for the 1977 fiscal year. Sales were $980.1 million, an increase of 12.5 per cent over 1976 sales; net earnings were $46 million, an increase of 15.6 per cent; and earnings per share were $1.98.

PURCHASE ANNOUNCED

Bill Sneed, president of Dunhill Personnel of Greenville, announced that the parent company of the nationwide network of franchise personnel agencies has been purchased by Canteen Corp., a subsidiary of Trans World Airlines Inc.

Sneed said that the merger of Dunhill with Canteen will increase the service capabilities and resources of the Dunhill organization, which now operates in over 200 cities throughout North America.

Dunhill provides American industry and businesses with a national pool of engineers, accountants, salesmen, and computer professionals, he said, as well as attending to their office permanent and temporary needs.

SELECTED TO TEACH

John H. Cox, partner in Hospitality Consulting Associates, Greenville, was selected to teach a one-day seminar entitled "Foodservice Purchasing and Cost Controls" in locations through the nation during the coming year, to be sponsored by the National Restaurant Association and various state associations.

Seminars were set for Nov. 1 in Rutland, Vt., Nov. 3 in Salt Lake City, Utah, and Nov. 9 in Miami, Fla.

Cox, a former faculty member at East Carolina University, is vice president of Hospitality Enterprises Inc. of Greenville.

Steel Firms Plan Merger

PITTSBURGH (AP) — With the U.S. steel industry facing a year of depressed prices and declining profits, two of nation's top producers have announced plans to merge.

One industry analyst said the proposed merger of Jones & Laughlin Steel and Youngstown Sheet and Tube may be a sign of confidence in an industry that has closed plants, laid off workers and absorbed record losses to deal with its problems.

Dallas-based LTV Corp., owner of J&L, the No. 7 steel producer, and the Lykes Corp. of New Orleans, parent company of Youngstown, the next largest steel manufacturer, announced Friday that they had agreed in principle to the merger.

A merger would require approval of shareholders in both companies and the U.S. Justice Department, which said Friday it would conduct a routine investigation of the proposal.

If approved, the merger would create a company about the size of the nation's third-largest producer, National Steel Corp. U.S. Steel and Bethlehem Steel are the biggest producers.

If the merger proposal was a sign of hope for steel's future, it came at a stark moment in the industry's history. Imports, capturing a record share of the domestic market, have been depressing prices and profits. J&L reported earlier that it lost $4.7 million in the year's third quarter. Profits in the first nine months amounted to a meager $889,000 — off 97 per cent from 1976.

Lykes said Friday it lost $117.2 million, or $12.97 a share, in the third quarter. For the nine-month period, the company said, losses totaled $175.4 million.

Most of Lykes' third quarter loss was attributed to a shut down of operations at Youngstown's Campbell Works in Youngstown, Ohio.

Ailing And Aging Giant: The U.S. Steel Industry

By STEVEN PROKESCH
PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The steel industry, backbone of America's mighty industrial machine, is an aging and ailing giant.

One major steel company, Bethlehem, recorded in the third quarter of 1977 the worst loss ever sustained by American business — nearly half a billion dollars.

Steelworkers have been laid off by the thousand and steel furnaces across the nation are cooling in disuse.

The industry blames low-cost steel imports. Others cite the aging condition of America's plants and high wages paid to steelworkers.

For thousands of steelworkers across the country, however, the industry has reached a crisis that brings the grim prospect of spending the holiday season on the unemployment lines.

"I have kids in school and a house and car to make payments on," said Joseph P. Serrano, 41. "I'm out on the streets and may have to dump some of it."

Serrano worked 19 years as a motor attendant for Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co. He lost his job in September, along with 5,000 others, when the firm decided to shut down facilities in the Youngstown, Ohio, area.

"Thanksgiving and Christmas are not going to be very happy times for my family this year," Serrano said.

U.S. steelmakers have announced 20,000 layoffs since early August. More layoffs will come in the fourth quarter.

Major steelmakers predict there will be spot shutdowns when the market is weak for a particular product. They do not expect them to be lengthy because they believe the market will not change dramatically in the fourth quarter.

National Steel, for example, already has announced it may shut down its Weirton Division in West Virginia for about three weeks before the end of the year. It employs 13,000.

The industry, the United Steelworkers of America and steel area politicians blame the crisis on a record flow of foreign steel imports and what they say are over-strict anti-pollution laws.

Among the 10 big steel firms, third quarter earnings were disastrous.

Bethlehem lost $477 million — the worst return in the industry's history. Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp. lost $4.56 million. U.S. Steel's quarterly earnings declined 75 percent from those of last year;

National Steel's, 54 percent, Republic's, 47.

Other factors have played a part, the steelmakers say: the wildcat coal strike, the continuing iron ore mine strike and prices kept too low by government fiat.

First with massive layoffs was Bethlehem. In August, it furloughed 7,300 workers at Lackawanna, N.Y., and Johnstown, Pa.

It was not until the Youngstown layoffs were announced Sept. 19, however, that President Carter even acknowledged there was a steel crisis.

In August, Carter had lashed out at the industry for its latest price increase and ordered the White House Council on Wage and Price Stability to make a study of the industry.

Sen. H. John Heinz III, R-Pa., met with Carter after the Youngstown Sheet and Tube layoffs.

"That was the first time the president realized the seriousness of the problem," Heinz said. "Apparently the Bethlehem Steel layoffs hadn't affected him. He said he had never been approached by the industry. Apparently, it was a failure to communicate on the part of both sides."

The union, the industry, hard hit steelmaking areas, and eventually Congress tried to force the president to formulate a national steel policy, which they said was lacking. All agreed that the administration should act to slow the influx of foreign steel.

The administration — mainly through Robert Strauss, the president's special trade representative — has remained adamant in opposing quotas on imports. It argues the industry's problems are more complex and far-reaching than imports.

The Oct. 7 report of the White House Council on Wage and Price Stability would seem to substantiate this.

Among other reasons, the council attributed the industry's poor competitive position in the world market to high production costs — including high wages — and a failure to modernize facilities.

President Carter called a "steel summit" meeting Oct. 13 at the White House and a special task force was formed.

The task force is headed by Undersecretary of the Treasury Anthony Solomon and consists of top administration officials, congressmen, industry and labor leaders, economists and environmentalists. It has promised to come up with recommendations for a government steel policy within weeks.

Carter promised the industry "actions and decisions," including a crackdown on foreign producers illegally selling — or dumping — steel below cost in the United States, tax relief and an even-handed approach to polluters.

"It seemed to me we can expect some sort of action to take place in the future," said Edgar Speer, chairman U.S. Steel.

Speer's views were echoed by Bethlehem Steel Chairman Lewis Foy, who attributed "the improved outlook for the American steel industry and its 500,000 employees as a result of the meeting ... to the efforts of the constituent members of Congress who make up the steel caucus."

"These legislators," said Foy, "brought into focus the need for action by the administration to prevent a continued deterioration of individual companies, the jobs of their employees and the well-being of employees' families."

Laid-off steelworkers, whose plight led to the formation of the steel caucus and such pro-steel groups as the Steel Communities Coalitions (comprising local government officials from steelmaking areas), are pessimistic.

"I have no expectations of the task force," said Vince Bruner, 50, who was laid off after working for Youngstown Sheet and Tube in the Youngstown area for almost 30 years.

"I think the Washington meeting was a big joke," said fellow USW local member Serrano. "And as for Carter... I voted for him last November. But I don't care who runs against him, I'll never vote for him again. There's a lot of bitterness around here, but there's going to be a lot more when the cold weather gets here."

Even those steelworkers who still have jobs are worried. "I'm scared about my job," said George Schrader, 57, Allentown, Pa., who works for Bethlehem Steel.

"I have seen my local go down from 6,700 employees to 2,000 employees," said Schrader, who is president of USW Local 2599. "Everyone's talking about job security every day. We're just desperately hoping that something constructive will come out of the task force."

The steel industry and the administration seem to agree that strict enforcement of the anti-dumping provisions of the 1974 Trade Act is the best way to fight artificially-priced foreign imports and protect jobs.

But industry and labor leaders have accused the administration of dragging its feet in enforcing those laws.

"The wheels of justice grind too slowly," complained Lloyd McBride, president of the United Steelworkers of America.

At the Oct. 13 meeting, Carter acknowledged the government had not aggressively enforced the anti-dumping provisions but said his administration would take remedial action.

Carter's decision was supported in a ruling Oct. 3 by the U.S. Treasury Department, which tentatively determined that five Japanese steelmakers have been illegally dumping carbon plate steel in the United States. The department ordered the five to post bonds to cover dumping duties amounting to 32 percent of the imports.

Economists say the administration's plans to crack down on dumping may stem the flow of imports fairly quickly.

Wall Street steel analyst Al Rudd said while the enforcement of anti-dumping provisions of the Trade Act of 1974 "can be a lengthy procedure... the reactions of foreign companies to the prospect of that strict enforcement might impede or slow down the present flood of imports within three to four weeks."

That prediction seems supported by the declaration of European and Japanese governments that they would be willing to negotiate voluntary restraints on exports, if U.S. firms drop dumping complaints.

Removing cheap foreign steel from the U.S. market should not mean noticeably higher prices for consumers.

"It could mean somewhat higher prices if foreign steel producers are dumping or selling steel below cost, if the cheap steel is removed from the market," said David Healy, another Wall Street steel analyst.

Rudd said domestic steelmakers already are discounting their prices, so "I would not expect to see much, if any, effect on consumer prices for articles like cars, refrigerators and household appliances."

Most steel analysts also feel a crackdown on dumping will have an almost negligible inflationary effect on the economy but will result in a firmer price structure for domestic steel in 1978.

U.S. Steel and other producers have other dumping complaints pending before the Treasury.

Besides the speedy processing of dumping complaints, the industry would like to see the Treasury take the initiative in enforcing the Trade Act, complaining that the burden of dumping proof now rests with domestic producers.

Big steel has largely opposed voluntary restraint agreements or import quotas, solutions the Carter administration seems to support.

Voluntary restraint agreements offer too many loopholes, spokesmen for many steelmakers say.

"We believe the president's announced intention to vigorously enforce existing legislation dealing with unfair trade practices will provide the surest, fastest and most effective remedy to the problems created by unfair steel import competition," said Bethlehem Steel's Foy.

"Although the idea of steel import quotas has certain appeal," Foy said, "we know from practical experience it would take months of complicated negotiations by our government to reach international agreements. It would even take longer to put them into effect and there is a very real question as to the effectiveness of a quota arrangement."

The American Iron and Steel Institute, the industry trade association, has said that the enforcement of section 301 of the Trade Act of 1974 could result in quantitative restrictions on steel imports.

Quotas now are in effect only for five categories of specialty steel. The three-year quotas were implemented in June 1976 by President Ford under a section of the Trade Act empowering the president to take action if U.S. industries and workers are suffering because of imports.

On Oct. 11, the International Trade Commission voted to advise Carter that removing the quotas "would have a serious adverse economic effect on the domestic industry."

The United Steelworkers Union, which earlier waged a campaign for negotiated orderly marketing arrangements between steel-producing countries, has softened its stand.

USW President McBride said the union now believes import restraints of some sort are necessary in the short run, but the strict enforcement of existing anti-dumping regulations will suffice in the long run.

Followers Of TM Cautious Over Defying Gravity

EDITOR'S NOTE — The transcendental meditation movement has spent 20 years establishing credibility. Now some followers believe it is being threatened by a new claim. A claim which devotees are willing to discuss but not document. That they defy gravity.

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer
SOUTH FALLSBURG, N.Y.
(AP) — They talk about smooth liftoffs and bumpy landings as pilot trainees, stewardesses and hang-glider addicts might.

But this is at the Capital of the Age of Enlightenment, a handsome campus of the transcendental meditation movement, and "they" are advanced disciples who claim they can fly — levitate — with mind power as the sole propellant.

"We are in the beginning stages of flying," says John Konhaus, acting director of the TM movement in the United States. "It comes in stages. At first it looks like they're hopping like frogs. Then they become lighter and lighter as growth of consciousness develops."

Some devoted followers think the movement's credibility will be badly strained by the levitation claims. There's skepticism within TM.

Joseph and Devanie Wagner are meditators. She says, "I have no doubt that I will leave the ground." Her husband, a systems analyst for a research firm, says the whole business is a hoax.

Mrs. Wagner hasn't seen the flying but has heard it. "I saw a lot of them take pillows and foam rubber, and I stuck around by the door. I heard a lot of knocking and thudding."

The TM levitators assert they can rise one or two feet from the full lotus, a position with the left ankle on top of the right thigh and vice versa, and then move forward three, six, maybe 10 feet.

Could a skilled gymnast perform the feat? "No way," says Dick Mulvihill, director of the National Academy of Gymnasts in Eugene, Ore. "With the full lotus, there's no way to gain thrust."

In addition to the beginning, or hopping stages, TMers talk of reports about initiates actually hovering with greater mastery over gravity.

"At this stage, we have most control in taking off," says flier Gale Merman, secretary to magician Doug Henning. "Landings tend to be rough."

Says Allen Solof, a daily flier and one of 450 TM executive governors in the United States: "There is a great deal of group consciousness. If one person begins to fly, it starts the other people up. It's like popcorn. Once it goes, they all start going."

Konhaus runs the Capital of the Age of Enlightenment near this Catskills community. The guests usually are serious professional men and women. The men wear three-piece suits, the women afternoon apparel or party dresses. The atmosphere is serene, the meals vegetarian and those who smoke must do so outside.

Visitors are welcome to see the flying rooms — one for men and one for women. The floors are covered with foam rubber, and there's more foam rubber stacked in the hallways.

Konhaus says he believes the Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, the guru of the movement who lives in Switzerland, eventually will allow a demonstration that will persuade the skeptic.

"We don't want to create a circus atmosphere," says Konhaus.

If you want to learn to levitate, as some early TM ads beckoned, bring money.

First, you enroll in preparatory classes from four to eight weeks, depending upon one's stage of meditation. That's Phase I and costs $245 a week, including room and board. Phase II is four two-week courses at $375 a week.

You don't get your money back if you don't fly.

Miss Chun spent $2,000 this summer at South Fallsburg and thought it was worth every penny.

At least one complaint regarding TM advertising has been filed. A student at the Maharishi International University in Fairfield, Iowa, says he was told his course would take four weeks. Then he was told it would take eight.

"They promised levitation, and then halfway through they said come up with another $1,500," says Steve Rozman, an associate professor and chairman of the social science division at Tougaloo College near Jackson, Miss.

He complained to the Iowa attorney general's office and was blacklisted, he says. "They wanted me to operate on a show-my-faith basis. They told me I didn't have the proper attitude."

Julian Garrett, assistant attorney general in charge of consumer protection, says his office is investigating the TM claims but progress is slow. "We're inclined to think this is a very questionable claim, but it's a little difficult to get students to talk about it."

Konhaus says the advertising since has been toned down. "We're like any business. We use our advertising to attract the public." Though flying is a by-product, it does make people take notice ... maybe even sign up.

Patricia Carrington, psychologist, meditator and author of "Freedom in Meditation," wishes the movement would give a proper demonstration or quit talking about levitation.

"If you're serious about something, you must permit a controlled observation for the scientific community," says Dr. Carrington. "The TM movement has been a very conservative one up to this point. They did a world of good in spreading the word about the benefits of meditation. This is an about-switch."

"Even Uri Geller allows himself to be studied. I am just bewildered by these claims."

Actually, the levitators did "show" once — last May at Iowa's MIU, which used to be Parsons College before the college went out of business.

Twenty-two persons — two of them non-meditators — were invited to the demonstration conducted by four young men. It got mixed reviews. Some of the meditators thought they saw levitation. Others thought they saw some hopping around that they figured a good athlete might be able to duplicate. Dr. Herbert Spiegel, a Manhattan psychiatrist who teaches at Columbia University and is an expert on hypnosis, feels self-hypnosis might be the answer. The people who describe their flights believe they are flying. Konhaus contends that physical laws have been disproven or suspended before, but Spiegel argues that "the law of gravity applies to everyone, regardless of creed, race, color and TM."

Book Recalls How Many Stars Of Filmdom Died

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The silver screen presents everything in one dimension. There they are, flitting images of light and shadow, flickering in color or black and white — a multitude of make-believe characters dancing for our delight.

But they were real people, too. And like the rest of us, they die with a greater finality than the curtain closing in the theater.

Evelyn Mack Truitt, an executive secretary to the president of a multi-billion-dollar firm, has made their lives her hobby and has compiled a book, "Who Was Who On Screen," a compendium of everyone and anyone on film who died between 1905 and 1975. For her, it's a labor of love.

It has to be because so far she hasn't made a dime from her venture. But the Second Edition with 9,000 entries, half again more than the first, is on the press, and she is proud of it. It is a useful reference, with complete screen credits for each entry.

Where else would you discover that Nani, the whale, drowned? Or that Pety, the faithful little dog with the ring around his eye who starred in "Our Gang" comedies, and as Tige in the Buster Brown films, was poisoned by arsenic at the age of seven? He was the son of a bull terrier named Pal who also appeared in screen comedies.

Leafing through some 9,000 personalities, animal and human, is a trip to the stars of yesteryear, a visit to the sad land of mortality. There is a certain symmetry to some lives when they appear in print.

For instance, Reginald Denny ("Lost Patrol"), the Bulldog Drummond and Sherlock Holmes films, "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty," "Mr. Blandings Builds His Dream House" was born in Surrey, England, in 1891 and died in Surrey, England in 1967, of a stroke.

Barry Fitzgerald, the lovable old Irishman from "How Green Was My Valley," "Belts of St. Mary's," "Going My Way," "The Quiet Man," was born in Dublin, Ireland, in 1888 and died there in 1961. His real name was William Joseph Shields, and he was the brother of Arthur Shields, "Drums Along The Mohawk," "Gentleman Jim," "Lassie Come Home," "National Velvet."

Lassie, incidentally, lived 18 years but only made three movies. Everything after 1946 featured other collies called Lassie.

"Who Was Who" recalls the forgotten obituaries and quietly reminds the reader of the fragility of life. Some 32 screen actors and actresses died in falls — notably Jeffrey Hunter who fell down the stairs at home, and Cass Daley who fell against a coffee table and a splinter pierced her neck.

Some 32 more died of burns or smoke inhalation, including Linda Darnell who was sleeping on a sofa of a friend's house in Chicago when a cigarette started a fire, Russian-born Maria Ouspenskaya, victim of a similar mishap in her home, and cowboy actor Buck Jones who died rescuing people from the Coconut Grove fire in Boston in 1942.

Among those who died in auto accidents are Jayne Mansfield, Tom Mix, Ernie Kovacs, James Dean, Percy Kilbride, Belinda Lee and Herb Shriner.

Nearly 50 died of drug overdoses, including Nick Adams, Pier Angeli, Lenny Bruce, Dorothy Dandridge, Judy Garland, Chester Morris, George Sanders, Gia Scala, Everett Sloane, Inger Stevens and Dinah Washington. Sanders left a note saying he was bored. Sloane feared he was losing his sight.

"I didn't speculate anywhere," Evelyn Truitt says. "Some of those like Marilyn Monroe, you don't know if she committed suicide or not. Unless I could find it somewhere in print or in a death certificate, I made no mention of possible suicide."

There are more than 100 suicides listed. There are at least 24 who died in wars, including Glenn Miller.

Four actresses died in childbirth. Some 60 actors and actresses died in plane crashes, including Wiley Post, a stunt flyer in Hollywood, Carole Lombard, Audie Murphy, Dick Powell, Earl Carroll and Will Rogers, who perished with Post in Alaska.

More than 30 listed in the book were murdered, including Karyn Kupcinet, Sharon Tate, Carl Switzer who played Alfalfa in "Our Gang" comedies, and Leon Trotsky, the old Bolshevik who appeared in a 1914 film called, "My Official Wife."

Sorting out the cause of death was a real problem in many instances. Some cases still are under police investigation. Evelyn Truitt took the safest and sometimes the most charitable route.

For instance, Albert Dekker, the character actor, Broadway star and one-time California assemblyman, was found, according to news stories, hanging by a rope from a shower rod, bound and handcuffed, with two hypodermic needles in his body. The bathroom door was locked from the inside. The coroner ruled the death was accidental, nevertheless.

Evelyn Truitt duly lists it as that, as she does the long procession of cancer deaths and heart ailments.

She began the work when a sister-in-law died and left her voluminous scrap books of old newspaper and magazine clippings on Hollywood stars. But since then thousands of hours of research have expanded the work manifold.

In her book she has recorded the fleeting screen appearances of even bit players, from Ty Cobb to Sen. Everett Dirksen. But here in graven little paragraphs, punctuated with semicolons and commas are the lives that still seem real when old movies parade by on the television screen.

It is one thing to realize that Errol Flynn, dashing to the attack in "Charge of the Light Brigade," swinging from a tree as Robin Hood, piloting a fragile craft in "Dawn Patrol," is dead. But it is quite another to learn that he was born on the remote Pacific Island of Tasmania and still found his way to Hollywood stardom, playing among other roles Essex to Betty Davis' Queen Elizabeth. He died, of course, in 1959 of a heart attack.

"Perhaps it is just as well," Evelyn Truitt says with resignation. "If he had lived he would be 68 now. We remember him as he was."

Inmates Run A Computer

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. (UPI) — Con'puter Systems Programming, a company which provides data processing services for other businesses, is run from behind bars — by inmates of the state's minimum security prison here.

Con'puter pays bills, makes out payrolls and provides other computerized data processing services for its Boston area customers.

The company is an outgrowth of an intensive computer programming and maintenance course taught in the prison by Honeywell volunteers.

"Some of these guys admit they have never worked an honest job in their lives," said prison superintendent Jack Bates. "And now they have formed a legal partnership, they reimburse the state for costs of keeping them in prison, they send money home to families left on the outside and they have developed the motivation, working habits and skills which will be invaluable in making their return to the community successful."

"When they are paroled they leave prison with on-the-job white-collar experience which is impressive to employers," adds Richard N. Henderson, Honeywell's community services manager and director of its Massachusetts prison program. "Of the 350 computer course graduates who have been paroled during the 10 years we have been running the program, 85 percent were hired immediately by computer companies and the remaining 15 percent found positions in other fields."

Insurance Plan For Godzilla

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Godzilla, the movie monster known as the scourge of cities and human life, is protected by insurance.

"When we were approached to issue the insurance," said Edward Yerger, resident vice president of Fireman's Fund Insurance Companies branch here, "no one had the nerve to turn Godzilla down."

"But we're not complete pushovers. We'd heard Godzilla has breath that would fry a chicken, so we wrote the policy to exclude any loss caused by extreme temperatures, as well as wear and tear, dishonesty, flood and mysterious disappearance," Yerger added.

The request for coverage, made by Cinema Shares International, was actually for a monster costume used to promote a Godzilla film at theaters around the country. The insurance firm wrote a scheduled articles floater with a $5,000 limit.

Missouri Keys Needs To Coal

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Coal is the key to the State of Missouri's hope to avoid an energy crisis during the winter of 1978.

James L. Sullivan, director of the state's Department of Consumer Affairs, Regulation and Licensing, said the state has reserves of nearly 50 billion tons — enough to last 10,000 years at the current rate of consumption, according to recent estimates.

About 85 percent of Missouri's electricity generation — double the national average — comes from coal, Sullivan said.

Brazil, Argentina Arguing Over Giant Power Dam

By MARC LIFSHER
FOZ DO IGUAÇU, Brazil (UPI) — Nine miles above this border boom town, the Parana river rushes around and over the nondescript rocky island of "Itaipu" — known to the Guarani Indians as "the singing stone."

In a few years the ancient rock will disappear forever, entombed in two million tons of cement to become the world's largest hydroelectric dam.

The Itaipu dam is being constructed by a Brazilian-Paraguayan binational company at a cost of $7.5 billion.
Although the dam has become an involved in the continuing dispute between Brazil and Argentina, the work goes on.

So far, engineers have gouged 13 million cubic meters of rock from alongside the river's natural channel. After another nine million cubic meters come out, the river will be tamed and rerouted as the dam goes up.

When Itaipu's 18 generators are on stream in 1988, the dam will have a 12.6 million kilowatt capacity. It will provide about a quarter of the energy needs of Brazil's heavily industrialized south-southeastern region — a supply the government considers essential to the nation's development plans.

"If Itaipu was not constructed or if it could not operate, this entire region would be seriously disturbed," said Jose Costa Cavalcanti, director-general of Itaipu binational. "Because of this, it has the highest priority for government resources in 1978, 1979 and 1980.

Brazil is not Paraguay's only partner in the hydroelectric field. That poor country of less than three million people has negotiated another binational project with Argentina to build a dam approximately 125 miles downriver at Yacireta-Apipe.

Yacireta-Apipe and another proposed Parana dam, Corpus, however, remain on the drawing boards while Itaipu is half finished.

The Argentines are afraid their northern neighbor's finished dam will leave little water for their own hydroelectric development.

Brazil and Argentina have been dickering over modifications of Itaipu's height to possibly lower the spillway while Brazil says Argentina's plans to make Corpus 120 yards high will back up the water at Itaipu, lowering its generating capacity and even flooding Brazilian territory.

"We would not like to see this project modified but the governments are discussing technical problems," Costa Cavalcanti said. "A 10 meter loss in the height of Itaipu will mean a loss of one million kilowatts in installed capacity.

Another international complication and potentially expensive modification of Itaipu centers on the incompatibility of Brazil's and Paraguay's electrical systems.

Brazil uses 60 cycles, Paraguay 50. If Paraguayan President Alfredo Stroessner does not decide to switch his country to the Brazilian system, Itaipu will have to spend an additional $140 million to install bipolar generators capable of being switched from one type of electricity to the other.

Costa Cavalcanti said Stroessner's decision will have to be made in the very near future before orders go out for turbines. He estimated the cost of converting the entire Paraguayan system, whose energy needs in 1983 will be provided by the output of only one of Itaipu's 18, 700 kw generators, at $30 million.

The Paraguayan decision will be based on more than simple economics, however, as a move to 60 cycles will complicate future cooperation with Argentina whose electrical grid also runs at 50 cycles.

Paraguay will own 50 per cent of all energy generated by Itaipu but because its annual consumption in 1988, when the dam will be producing 12.6 million kw, will be less than 300,000 kw, Brazil plans to buy the excess.

"In the first years Brazil will acquire 80 per cent of Paraguay's energy," Costa Cavalcanti said, "but the purchases will decline over the years until Paraguay is using all of its share sometime in the next century maybe by the year 2003."

In the meantime, Brazil needs Itaipu's cheap energy to supply the south-southeastern region's annual energy needs projected at 32 million kw in 1983 and 65 million kw in 1992.

Because Brazil is now spending approximately $4 billion per year for imported petroleum, hydroelectric and atomic energy are seen as the only economic way to keep a rapidly developing industrial base expanding.

GREENVILLE UTILITIES COMMISSION

India Medical Project Uses Ancient Remedies

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — In an unusual project joining Western and traditional medicine, doctors in south India are searching for a treatment for rheumatoid arthritis using herbal medicines, oils and pastes prescribed by ancient Hindi scriptures.

The World Health Organization (WHO), which is conducting the four-year project, says the initial results are encouraging.

"Since the project began, we've had about 20 cases of rheumatoid under study. Two have been cured and most of the others are showing good improvement," Dr. Purshottam Diesh, the WHO project director, said in an interview.

The project, being conducted jointly with the Indian Council of Medical Research, is being run in Coimbatore, a city in southern India, at a clinic specializing in a branch of traditional Indian medicine called ayurveda.

Ayurveda, a Hindi word meaning science of life, is based on the holy Hindu scriptures called Vedas and has been practiced on the Asian subcontinent for more than 3,000 years.

According to Diesh, ayurvedic medicine does not isolate and treat a particular ailment the way Western medicine does. Rather it seeks to treat the ailing body as a system somehow out of balance.

In the case of rheumatoid arthritis, the painful stiffening and inflammation of joints, muscles and tissues is seen by ayurvedic medicine as being caused by an imbalance in the body's metabolism.

The system imbalance in the arthritis sufferer may have been brought on by anything from grief or shock to over-exertion or poor eating habits.

Diesh said Western doctors have been aware for years that certain ayurvedic cures practiced for centuries in Asia do relieve arthritis symptoms, sometimes permanently. But never before has modern science sought to scientifically analyze ayurvedic remedies for arthritis sufferers.

At the Ayurvedic Trust Hospital in Coimbatore, which uses herbs gathered by peasants from a nearby mountain range, a patient is first examined by both modern and ayurvedic doctors before treatment begins, Diesh said.

If the diagnosis is rheumatoid arthritis, an ayurvedic treatment begins consisting of cleansing baths, herbs taken internally, massages with herbal potions and oils, and other physiotherapy, all designed to restore the entire body to its proper balance.

The project is being confined to a limited number of cases, taken on both an in-patient basis and out-patient basis. Cases of severe deformities brought on by later stages of the disease are not being considered because of their low possibility of cure.

There are no accurate estimates of how many Indians suffer rheumatoid arthritis nor how many people throughout the world are slowed, crippled or killed by its treachery, Diesh said. But guesses run into the tens of millions, he said.

For WHO, which is spending $20,000 on the project in its first two years, the arthritis study represents one of the few times it has funded a study of traditional medicine.

"The money might not be that much," said one WHO official. "But for us this project is a big step. In the past we have not paid enough attention to traditional medicine."

Ayurvedic and other branches of traditional medicine have had their ups and downs in India, either being praised for their simplicity and inexpensive remedies or being condemned as so much quackery.

Today, though, ayurvedic medicine enjoys the support of Prime Minister Morarji Desai, an 81-year-old food faddist who refuses vaccinations and most modern medicines.

Networks Flay Writing Quality

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The question isn't whether episodic television is suffering because of bad writing. The question is why, and the battle lines are clearly drawn, with the networks on one side and the writers on the other.

Fred Silverman, president of ABC Entertainment, accused the writers of "letting us down" and said most series proposals submitted to ABC are "simply awful."

Silverman's cannonade came during a debate at the Writers Guild of America on "What's Wrong With Network Television?" Writer Richard Powell fired back later, "Deep in my heart of hearts, I know that if I brought 'Hamlet' to Fred Silverman, he would put a dog in it."

The question wasn't really resolved during the debate and merited further inquiry.

"No network is going to force a writer into writing badly, nor would any writer of integrity respond to that kind of pressure," says William Self, CBS vice president for motion pictures and mini series and former president of 20th Century Fox Television.

"The real problem is that good writers are overtaxed."

Robert Dellinger, who is forsaking episodic TV for movies and novels, says, "I've seen it from both sides of the fence. I understand what Silverman means when he says the quality of writing is poor. I know that as a story editor I have been disappointed with some of the stories turned in by 'name' writers. They looked like they were just written off the wall.

"On the other hand, I feel the networks, by the nature of the collective decision making process, impose restrictions upon writers, and they are frequently more interested in subjects that are safe and non-controversial than they are in the originality and execution of an idea."

Dellinger says a difficulty in writing for television is the number of people between the typewriter and the screen who can make changes. "So many times what starts out as a brilliant idea ends up as a pedestrian story."

Record High In Bar Admissions

CHICAGO (AP) — The National Council of Bar Examiners says bar admissions in 1976 reached a record high for the seventh consecutive year.

The NCBE, an affiliate of the American Bar Association, says the total number of people admitted to practice in 49 states, the District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands was 35,741. Exact admissions figures for Florida were not available, the NCBE says.

People Still Hunting Old Festival Site

WOODSTOCK, N.Y. (UPI) — Woodstock Nation was a cultural phenomenon born in the mud in 1969. It was supposed to mean peace, happiness, freedom and no more war in Vietnam.

Woodstock Nation never existed except in peoples' minds, and the concept was embodied in the first major open-air rock festival that drew 500,000 persons to a field in Sullivan County, 75 miles away from the town of Woodstock, not far from Kingston in Ulster County on the Hudson River.

The field where Woodstock happened — shocking and thrilling those who read about it and saw it on television and giving those who were there a thrill of being part of history — is still just a rural field in the town of Bethel.

Max Yasgur, who owned the farm where the concert was held and who was made famous in Joni Mitchell's song celebrating it, died in February 1973. His family tried to give the field for a town park and was turned down. Bethel and numerous other small communities in the state passed ordinances to make it nearly impossible to hold Woodstock-type festivals again.

But in the village of Woodstock itself, where folk-sung legend Bob Dylan once sat recuperating from a motorcycle accident, people still come searching for whatever the mystery was that made the magic concert a byword of much of young America's culture in the early 70s.

"They're looking for the field," one local resident says. "They don't understand and you can't convince them."

Woodstock has long been an artists' community. It was in the 1920s. But since the music hash that took its name from the place where it was supposed to have been held, jewelry, leatherworking, painting and metalsmithing have become big businesses in the village. Shops line the short main street and a couple of side ones that shortly trail off into roads into the surrounding Catskill Mountains.

The normal population of the community is about 5,000. During the summer months that figure triples at least, and year-round residents head for cover. They give up on the idea of parking in the village itself and shopping is best done during the week because all stores are crowded on week-ends.

Valerie Cadden is Woodstock town supervisor, and she says things lately aren't quite as bad as they once were, although there are still those who come and hang about the tiny village green.

"We did have a lot of people coming down until last year," Ms. Cadden said, "but we don't have as many anymore."

She said "word finally got out that the festival wasn't here," so some of the wanderers have stayed away.

Nevertheless, one woman whose daughter worked in a local cafe — and the village has several — said she heard numerous stories of people from as far away as Europe asking as they paid their checks where "the field" was.

The community encountered one very real problem brought on by those seeking the illusory Woodstock Nation — welfare. A number of young people seeking something special came to the community, which has almost no jobs to offer, and promptly went onto the welfare rolls, which in Ulster County are partly supported by the towns.

"Everybody wanted to come down here and find themselves," Ms. Cadden said, "but they have realized we're not going to support them."

Officials estimated that at one point the town's normal welfare roll of one or two cases had swelled to about 90 a year. "That may not sound like much, but it's a lot for us," one observer of the local scene said.

The businessmen in the village say they're happy with the boom. Regardless of whether it's declined in recent months, people still come to Woodstock for its crafts and its playhouse.

The local people aren't so sure — "There's not the peace and quiet there was," one said — but they've accepted the new role and adjusted to it.

'Bent Coppers' Tarnished Image Of Scotland Yard

EDITOR'S NOTE — Scotland Yard, home of the indefatigable trench-coated detective, is in trouble, its own detectives under suspicion. A number have been convicted of taking bribes and more have resigned or have been fired. Now there's a new commander, and he may have to concentrate as much on his own force as on the criminal element outside.

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard has a tarnished image. It is now better known as the home of the bent copper — London slang for the corrupt cop.

One investigation into police corruption was headed by a man who turned out to be the mastermind of a corruption ring.

For the past eight years, since corruption at the Yard was first uncovered, the London public has been exposed to a series of trials. A number of top commanders have been convicted, mostly for taking bribes from criminals, and 400 lower-ranking officers have been fired or have resigned.

The London Metropolitan Police, official name for the Yard, remains the only force in Britain immune to outside inspection. Scotland Yard is virtually a law unto itself, guarding its operational independence even in its time of adversity.

That independence is now in the hands of David McNee, a 51-year-old nicknamed "The Hammer" for his strikes against the underworld. But McNee, who takes over from Sir Robert Mark, must follow Mark's path of coming down hardest on the Yard's own men.

Mark, who initiated a series of sweeping reforms, warned before he retired: "Many other police officers, very senior ones, knew what was going on, may have been part of what was going on ... and are still serving today."

Since the Times of London first exposed three detectives taking bribes from known criminals in November 1969, a score of London detectives, some of them top men at the Yard, have been convicted.

Among the senior officers jailed for up to 12 years are Kenneth Drury, a onetime police commander who headed the Yard's crack gangbusting Flying Squad, for taking bribes from pornography racketeer Jim Humphreys; Commander Wally Virgo, former chief of the Yard's 3,500 detectives, holder of the Queen's Police Medal, highest award an officer can win, and 25 commendations, for taking money from pornographers; Chief Superintendent Bill Moody, former head of the Yard's obscene publications squad, known as "the Dirty Squad," and one of the masterminds of the corruption network. Moody once headed an investigation into police graft. It failed to turn up any evidence.

An internal investigation bureau has been set up to root out crooked cops, and a police complaints bureau that for the first time included civilians.

The Times says public suspicion still lingers and asks: "How was it that the scale of corruption revealed in ... the corruption trials went unnoticed for so many years by those Yard men who ranked higher than Bill Moody, Wally Virgo and Ken Drury?"

It adds: "The biggest scandal of all still needs to be investigated."

There are signs that "bent coppers" who evaded earlier purges are still active.

Three members of the Yard's Drug Squad, which figured in one of the corruption trials a few years ago, are suspended from duty after investigators disclosed a half-ton of marijuana seized in police raids had been resold by detectives.

One of the suspended officers, Chief Inspector Tony Rich, has won a fistful of commendations and is one of the top three Drug Squad men.

Rich, 34, was a crack undercover agent who broke up three major dope rings and won the British Empire Medal in 1968 for disarming a drug-crazed gunman.

Yard men are reluctant to talk about the corruption that has stained their reputation, but one officer who retired earlier this year, articulated the doubts that the trials planted in many officers' minds about their colleagues.

"I knew two of the senior officers jailed for corruption," he said.

"Now I look at other men I've known, some of them in senior posts, and I find myself wondering whether they're straight or not.

"When one of them rolls up in a new car, you find yourself wondering ..."

Contribute To Baby Boomlet

NEW YORK (AP) — Some products of the post World War II baby boom may be contributing to a baby boomlet.

They are women in their early 30s who are deciding to start families. Their child-bearing years are dwindling, their professions are secure, their marriages seem stable and their financial future appears adequate if not rosy.

Postponement helped to contribute to the so-called baby bust — the dramatic drop in the U.S. birth rate in recent years. But there are statistical signs that the birth rate may be on a slight increase.

Early this year, the birth rate was up six percent over the same period last year. And the National Center for Health Statistics has reported that the rate of first births to women 30-34 was up to 8.1 per thousand in 1975, from 7.3 per thousand in 1970.

The subject is explored in a new book, "You're Not Too Old to Have a Baby," (Farrar Straus Giroux), by Jane Price, a research associate in the East Asian Institute at Columbia University who waited until she was nearly 32 to have her first child. Much of the book is devoted to the medical aspects of late pregnancy.

"Medically, the risks of waiting to have children past the biological prime have been exaggerated," she writes. "With recent advances in genetics and obstetrics, most mothers over 30, 35, and 40 have an excellent chance of bearing a healthy child."

It is still true that older parents have a statistically greater chance of having a child with birth defects, especially a child with mongolism, known medically as Down's syndrome.

Ms. Price notes that the chances of having a mongoloid baby are one in 2,500 for a mother under 20, about one in 1,500 for a mother in her 20s, and for mothers 30 to 34 about one in 850. But for mothers 35 to 39 the chances climb to one in 280 and for the woman between 40 and 44 one in 100 and after 44 to one in 40.

The author, however, says that a medical procedure called amniocentesis can detect such defects shortly after conception so the woman can have an abortion.

Remembrances A Vivid Part Of Life

GRADUATION PORTRAIT. . . of Deanie Boone Haskett was taken in front of her parents' home on her graduation from Greenville High School in the early 1920's.

When Deanie Boone Haskett left Greenville Tuesday for Wesley Pines Methodist Retirement Home, Lumberton, she was accompanied by six "friendly advisors."

The friends made the trip to help Miss Haskett arrange her belongings in her new home.

When telling childhood remembrances of Greenville, Miss Haskett said, "When leaving the city limits in a horse and buggy, someone had to open and close the gates. Children would be around to make a few pennies by doing this."

"My mother ran a florist and I was her assistant and delivery girl, walking all over town. In the winter time, the flowers were kept in a cold room and were sent to Greenville by express. I wired many galax leaves while mama wired the pretty flowers."

Miss Haskett attended the city schools including Evans Street School (where Sheppard Library is now located), the Model School on Cotanche Street, which was built on a bed of quick sand and had to be moved and Greenville High School.

She graduated from East Carolina Teachers College in 1926 and taught school in Johnston, Franklin and Greene Counties prior to returning to Greenville High School.

She taught for seven years before receiving a Master's degree from East Carolina, where she was the first person to earn this degree. She was also the first editor of the college newspaper.

"I remember that the late James Butler was the first young man to attend East Carolina Teachers Training School. Of course, he was very popular — he played several musical instruments and was very folksy.

"The names of the institution have changed from a teachers' training school, to a college, to a university. The athletic program has grown from a girls' basketball game on Thanksgiving Day to 'bigtime' football games and from one classroom building to many. Our classes in the 1920's were held in Austin Building," said Miss Haskett.

"When I entered East Carolina as a day student, I paid $5.00 per quarter and rented my books," she added.

Miss Haskett taught French and English for 42 years before retiring in 1968. While teaching, she attended all home games and numerous out-of-town sporting events of the high school and some of the college's.

"I am a verbal supporter of the EC Pirates and I am all for them," Miss Haskett continued. The National Honor Society Chapter at Rose High School was named in honor of Miss Haskett.

"Following my retirement, I thought that I might enjoy some type of library work, but you don't always go down the path you think you might want to," she stated.

A charter member of St. James United Methodist Church, Miss Haskett helped establish the visitation program due to a request of the Rev. Bill Quick, a former minister. She continued visiting for about 14 years on a regular basis. "All of my visitation has been very rewarding." Any projects for the church, I enjoyed participating in. She holds a life membership in the United Methodist Women.

Miss Haskett became interested in china decorating in 1939 through Lou Galphin, who was an elementary school teacher here.

Text And Photos By Rosalie Trotman

"The kiln at that time was in the infirmary at East Carolina Teachers College. Later Mr. Rose let us move it to one of the NYA housing units on Elm Street. These were oil burning kilns. We later went to an electric kiln. When the Rose High School was about to be built, the kiln was moved to my house with Ona Shindler, Alice Strawn and me as owners.

"Many people over the past 15 years have come to put decals, gold, silver, color and lustre on china and fire it here. This spring, we had a teacher from Chocowinity to teach china painting for a period of 12 weeks. The kiln is now owned by Mrs. Dorothy Hendrix and Mrs. Betty Turner — the work will continue. A kiln will be provided at Wesley Pines and the decorating will go on there also," said Miss Haskett.

"The more china you do, the more you want to do. One person has done whole sets of china for herself and her children and has done much for friends. She has been decorating for about 12 years," she added.

Miss Haskett likes to cook, especially desserts — banana nut cake and chocolate fudge cake are her favorites. She attended classes at Pitt Technical Institute in egg and cake decorating.

She enjoys soft piano and organ music. She has collected foreign coins, dolls and certain types of china — Bavarian and Frankona plates and various types of handcrafts or handwork, usually just one of a type. "A real love of mine since I was a small girl has been cats, real and otherwise. One of the problems of moving was finding a new home for my cats, Kiki and Snowball, now living in Bethel. My favorite colors are red and pink, which are reflected in my furniture, clothing and room decorations," she continued.

When asked what advice she might give to a young person today, Miss Haskett replied, "Get the best education you can and do a good day's work for anybody."

Winter Home Insulation Expert's Helpful Hints

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Housing specialist Alex Rachun, busy this fall telling people how to winterize their homes, advises home owners to tackle the easier work first — walls last.

Rachun, a member of Cornell University's Department of Design and Environmental Analysis, is less concerned than most people over widely reported shortages of wall insulation material.

He gives priority instead to installing storm windows and doors or weatherstripping them, and insulating attics, basements and crawl spaces.

"If you don't first eliminate wind penetration of the house, insulation in the walls is worthless," he said while here to conduct adult education workshops on the subject.

He recommends first blocking up the "hidden places" such as the header space around the top of the foundation wall."

That's more effective than insulating the basement floor and ceiling, said Rachun, who spends six months a year preaching insulation in cooperation with county extension offices. It stops cold penetration at the source. It also keeps cold air from moving upstairs, keeps the basement warm without too much energy-using heat, and eliminates the expense of heat-taping pipes.

"Besides, it's virtually impossible to insulate floors in many basements," Rachun said. "They're going to be damp."

He said storm windows range in price from about 25 cents for the plastic interior type with cardboard frames to about $25 each for triple-track aluminum-frame windows, with many models in between.

For outside installation, he prefers wood-framed to aluminum-framed storm windows because aluminum is such a good heat conductor it will remove heat from the house.

For weather stripping, he suggests anything from inexpensive felt tacked or stapled to window and door frames to vinyl tubing or self-stick foam.

For metal-frame casement windows, he suggests either self-stick foam on the frames or vinyl or plastic storm windows hung outside — provided the room has a hopper window that can be opened inward for fresh air.

For extra protection at night, Rachun recommends sheet styrofoam cut to fit snugly inside windows. It can be decorated or covered with fabric if you don't like the looks of the styrofoam.

Even window air-conditioners need insulating jackets, he said. Controversy is continuing over the safety of insulation material for wall stud areas, Rachun said. He suggests consumers who plan to do this job themselves to stick with fiberglass.

"You can rent a machine that blows in cellulose or other loose-fill type insulation such as rock wool, but they are really for professionals. The machine needs at least two persons to operate."

"It can be very dangerous. The times on the machine can whip around. You need a good respirator, goggles and heavy clothes."

If you cannot insulate the walls yourself, Rachun said "it might be better to wait a year or two longer until a very effective form of insulation is devised," instead of hiring a contractor, which is very expensive.

For professional installation, he recommends loose-filled, fire-resistant treated cellulose fiber or rock wool.

He said urea formaldehyde can be "very effective when properly applied or very ineffective when improperly applied."

Cold weather can cause shrinkage and prevent proper jelling of this material, he said. If it doesn't jell, noxious fumes remain that are a strong eye irritant.

He also said urea formaldehyde insulation is dated. If its shelf life is exceeded, it won't jell properly and could shrink.

Consumers who choose urea formaldehyde should be sure to get a binding guarantee from the contractor, Rachun said, to protect against shrinkage and fumes. "It should require the contractor to come back and scan the walls with a heat detector for hot and cold spots. Where cold spots register, he should put in more foam to fill the voids."

Rachun said urethane insulation can be even more dangerous.

"It should never be sprayed in a home without a fire-retarding ingredient or other fire-retarding material." Urethane is highly flammable material. It also emits a hydrogen cyanide gas that is quickly lethal when breathed."

Even a mobile home, a recreational vehicle and an apartment can be winterized. How to do it all is described in a new booklet prepared by Cornell University's Energy Task Force and the university's Cooperative Extension service.

Residents of New York State can order "Save Energy, Save Dollars" from Mailing Room, 7 Research Park, Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y. 14853, with a check for $1.50 payable to New York State Cooperative Extension.

Residents of other states can ask their local Cooperative Extension office to order it for them.

Cooking Is Fun

DEAR CECILY: Please give more recipes for Trifles. They're good company desserts because they have to be made ahead. Right now I'd like a recipe that's quick to put together. — BE PREPARED.

DEAR BE PREPARED: This Raspberry Trifle can be made speedily because it calls for the frozen fruit and instant vanilla pudding. Some other time, as is my wont, I'll give a from-scratch version. — C.B.

RASPBERRY TRIFLE
(Quick Version)
10-ounce package frozen raspberries, thawed
2 teaspoons cornstarch
3-ounce package (12 double) ladyfingers, separated
¼ cup (about) sherry, any kind
¾-ounce package vanilla-flavor instant pudding mix
2 cups milk

1 cup heavy cream
½ cup packaged sliced unblanched almonds
In a 1-quart saucepan stir a little of the raspberry syrup into the cornstarch, keeping smooth; stir in the remaining syrup and the berries, reserving a few for garnishing. Cook over moderate heat, stirring constantly, until clear and slightly thickened; cool. Sprinkle the ladyfingers with the sherry; arrange half of them around the bottom of a 6-cup glass bowl (7 by 3 inches). Prepare pudding mix as package directs. Whip the cream and reserve ½ cup for garnishing; fold the rest into the pudding. Layer half the berries, pudding and nuts over the ladyfingers in the bowl. Arrange remaining ladyfingers around the sides of the bowl; repeat layers of berries, pudding and nuts. Garnish with the reserved cream and berries. Chill thoroughly. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

spent an enjoyable night Oct. 24 when they joined members of the Pilot Club for an covered-dish supper. The Pilot Club, the Anchor Club's mother club, held the dinner in honor of their founder's day.

Another recent activity of the Anchor's was a hayride held on Halloween night. The spirit of the occasion was not lost as several members wore a variety of masks.

The Arts Club recently set a date for their annual arts and crafts sale during its meeting Wednesday night. This event will occur Dec. 10 but the location has not been decided as of yet.

The club also voted on another project at this time. Members will soon be silk screening T-shirts with club emblem.

As a club spirit project, Fresh Club members are now in the process of ordering T-shirts. The message on the shirts reads "Je m'en fiche" which translated means "I don't care." Participants of Future Business Leaders of America formed many committees at a recent meeting. The purpose of this action was to be able to work in many areas at one time.

Committees formed include a constitution committee, social committee, a special committee, a grounds committee, and a fund raising committee.

For the third year, the Rose High Wrestling Team will be and also trading stamps for the bridge benefit in January. Proceeds from the benefit will go toward the club's project.

The six girls chosen for the job are Selina Arnold, Becky Dixon, Ramona Brewington, Camille Smith, Connie Wallace, and Grace Wilkins. Their duties will include helping in the general management of the matches by keeping individual and team scores for each match, announcing the participants and running the clock during the match.

Nine students were honored last week as Morehead Scholarship nominees and new National Honor Society members were announced.

Those nominated for the Morehead Scholarship are Cindy Browning, Tori Clement, Curtis Ebbs, Miki Ito, Tom Johnson, Suzanne McGee, Anne Middleton, Janet Vultee and Elizabeth White. These students will now advance to further competition.

Twenty-two seniors were tapped into the National Honor Society Wednesday. The students were chosen on the basis of their grade point average and their extra curricular activities.

New members include: Ray Alexander; Sandra Atkins; Shannon Avera; Kathy Conway; Curtis Ebbs; John Farley; Melonie Fornes; Jane Goforth; Anita Harper.

Michael Hinsley; Yun Hong; Miki Ito; Kenny Jenkins; Sydney Mallenbaum; Dave Northrup; Amy Jo Pierce; Gary Pollard; Laura Smith; Deena Stocks; Howard Tucker; Bob Woronoff; and Lisa Zickerman. Congratulations to all!

Officers of the club include Suzanne McGee, president, Tom Johnson, vice president, Kim Mills, secretary, and Grace Wilkins, treasurer. Mrs. Ella Harris acts as advisor for this group.

He'll Have No Part Of Metric System

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am boiling mad and need to let off some steam, so you're elected.

When I start thinking about the metric system they (whoever "they" are) want to put over on us Americans, I get so mad I can hardly contain myself.

It will cost millions of dollars to change the textbooks and other publications, not to mention highway signs.

Our system was good enough for our forefathers and it's good enough for me. If our neighboring countries don't like us to be different from them, let THEM change their system!

It's too hard for us older people to change. I am 82, and proud of it.

MAD IN ALABAMA

DEAR MAD: Sorry oldtimer, but the United States is the ONLY major nation in the world still clinging to pounds, inches, gallons and acres. The whole world is adopting the metric system of weights and measures. And the benefits to this country of promoting an "international language of measurements" are too numerous to detail here.

DEAR ABBY: How do you tell a 60-year-old sister that stretch pants are not for her?

My sister is 5 feet 2 and she weighs about 150 pounds. She carries most of her weight in her behind, and she also has a protruding stomach.

She always wears stretch pants, and people laugh at her behind her back. But nobody will tell her how unbecoming those pants are.

DEAR SIS: Manufacturers will make anything they think will sell. Tell your sister she's stretching things too far, and maybe she'll snap back into something more appropriate for the shape she's in.

DEAR ABBY: Recently my husband and I attended a wedding. We sent the newlyweds a sterling silver candle snuffer for a gift. I just received a note from the bride, thanking us for the "darling little gravy dipper!" I was stunned when I read it. Should I call the bride and tell her? I'm sure she'd be very much embarrassed if she had guests for dinner and used the candle snuffer to ladle gravy.

SHOCKED

DEAR SHOCKED: If you really fear that she will use the candle snuffer as a gravy ladle, call her and tip her off.

DEAR ABBY: Apropos complaints from wives and other relatives who are obliged to listen to stories told by some of us oldsters, may I come to the defense of some of my fellow storytellers with the following:

I once heard a very entertaining gentleman who was up in years say, "Don't stop me if you've heard this one. There is no reason why a good story should not be enjoyed more than once. Imagine how little good music there would be in the world if, for example, a conductor refused to play Beethoven, Tchaikovsky or Mozart because his audience had probably heard it before."

GRAMPS

DEAR GRAMPS: Beautiful! Play it again.

Woman Pays Tribute To Her Seeing-Eye Dog

By GREGORY JENSEN
LONDON (UPI) — Sheila Hocken was 20 when a chocolate brown Labrador named Emma became her eyes, and much more.

Mrs. Hocken was blind virtually from birth. Then at 29, a "miracle" operation gave her full sight. Her reaction to being able to see was unexpected as her attitude toward being blind.

Now at 31 she has written a moving and often funny account of both periods of her life, largely as a tribute to Emma.

"Emma and I," published recently by Victor Gollancz, places most of the credit for the normal life she lived while blind onto her remarkable seeing-eye dog.

"We were parts of a joint personality," Mrs. Hocken says. Sometimes it was hard to tell which part was in charge.

One day Sheila and Emma set off for their daily bus to Sheila's switchboard operator's job. Emma did everything wrong.

She turned left instead of right. She ignored Sheila's protests and disobeyed orders, dragged her bodily across unfamiliar ground and finally stopped — at the right bus stop.

Next day she did the same thing, only differently. Sheila finally figured it out.

"Emma, having learned a route, became bored with having to follow it every day," she writes. "So she invented variations." From then on Sheila got up 10 minutes early in case Emma made a mistake.

"But, of course, she never did."

For more than nine years the blind girl and her dog made an enterprising pair. With Emma's help, Sheila lived in an apartment on her own, held a full-time job and sold cosmetics door to door in her spare time, met and married a sighted chiropodist.

But all the while Emma was full of surprises.

One day, as ordered, she took Sheila to a nearby outdoor telephone box. Vandals had damaged the phone.

"I felt terribly frustrated and, worse, had no idea what to do," Mrs. Hocken recalls. Emma took off, again dragging a protesting Sheila who was sure she was being taken home. The dog stopped at another telephone box.

Mrs. Hocken swears Emma could read her mind. She also knew every shop by name and "every department and every counter. I would have only to say, 'Find the food hall, Emma,' and I would be taken there with never a mistake and no hesitation."

Their partnership was so uncanny that Sheila and Emma became local celebrities. Sheila gave lectures on guide dogs — Emma loved the applause — and took part in public stunts to buy dogs for other blind people.

Once she and Emma raced a reporter across the center of Nottingham. Traffic stopped for the blind girl and her dog but not for the frustrated reporter, and he lost the race.

Mrs. Hocken does not conceal the appalling problems of being blind, but she writes without bitterness or self-pity. Her rapture at being able to see the beauty of grass, the astonishing variety of trees, the flight of birds is enough to make anyone think again about the gift of sight.

But as Mrs. Hocken explains — both in her book and in radio talks which have made her nationally known — her sudden ability to see was frightening.

On her first walk she was dizzied and terrified by the sight of "everything rushing by." She had to close her eyes and let Emma take over.

Everyday things she did efficiently while blind — cooking, eating, making her bed — were now blinding chores. She even had to relearn how to operate her switchboard.

"I had imagined that once I got my sight back, I would be able to see and that would be that," she writes. "But it was not the case. It was like suddenly being given an extra limb and having to work hard at getting used to it."

People's noses, including her own, appalled her and legs she found funny. The beauty of most things seen for the first time filled Sheila with wonder — and that included the face of her husband.

Emma had a problem, too. She discovered Sheila could see when Mrs. Hocken caught her at her favorite trick, stealing food from the cats' dishes, and shouted at her.

"It was as if someone had fired a shotgun," Mrs. Hocken writes. "She spun around and looked at me with amazement, shock, even a hint that she had encountered the supernatural."

From that time on Emma began behaving like any other dog, doing "things that the correct, dignified, working Emma would never have dreamed of doing."

For the past year Emma, now 13 and graying a bit, has been getting used to sharing the spotlight with the Hockens' new baby. The daughter's middle name, "chosen for a very good chocolate brown reason," is Emma.

A reunion luncheon was held this week for members of the Aries and Seira Book Clubs at the home of Mrs. Leo Jenkins.

Mrs. John Lang and Mrs. Jack Derrick, of the Seira Club, served as assisting hostesses.

Originally one club, an afternoon group and an evening group were formed. Mrs. Wendell Smiley sponsored the Aries Club, which was started in March, 1948, and derived its name from the zodiac sign for the month of March.

Mrs. Jenkins, a charter member of the Aries group, was responsible for the naming of the Seira Club, whose name came from rearrangement of the letters of the first club, Aries, and symbolizes the unity of the two groups.

Mrs. William Heymann, of the Seira Club, presided at the joint meeting and welcomed those present. She said the chief characteristic of both groups is friendship.

Mrs. Marshall Starkey read excerpts from the minutes of the early Aries meetings. She stated that the first meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Jenkins with nine members present. The first dues paid were 25 cents per members and the

More Energy

NEW YORK (UPI) — An automatic-defrost refrigerator-freezer takes about 60 percent more energy to operate than a model of similar size you must defrost manually. That figure is from a recent Cornell University Cooperative Extension bulletin. It adds that frost allowed to build up more than one-fourth inch in thickness acts as an insulator, reducing the efficiency of the appliance and increasing operating costs.

When it comes to homework, educators have heard every excuse in the book.

"My mother wrapped the garbage in it."

"I put it in the family Bible to hold my place and forgot to take it out."

"My little brother pee-ed on it."

The excuses often showed more imagination than the assignments turned in and invariably involved a third party who was totally responsible for their deficiency.

This fall, 850,000 women over 35 are returning to the classrooms as students. They're not entering the academic world empty-handed. Thanks to their children, they have a couple of years' supply of excuses. Only a few words have to be changed to get them off the hook.

"I was going to do my homework last night, but my husband put me to bed early."

"My paper was typed neatly and ready to turn in when my brother spilled his martini all over it at the breakfast table."

"I had every intention of going to the library, but I couldn't find my car keys."

"My children were hanging on the phone all night and I couldn't call my best friend and get the assignment."

"I didn't feel well. I went into false labor 10 months early."

"I picked the same topic every other person in the class picked. The Evolution of Storm Doors in the Ming Dynasty... and all the books were out."

"Our dog is being paper trained. You may have noticed."

"I was absent yesterday because I was waiting for the washer repairman and didn't know you had made an assignment."

"Do you think just because this assignment is done in yellow crayon, my kids did it for me?"

"My husband wrapped his gum in it."

As the child of one of my best friends told his Mother at breakfast one morning, "You just tell your teacher we got

Tripp-Faulkner Vows Solemnized On Friday

AYDEN — The marriage of Kathryn Gail Faulkner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Faulkner of Rt. 2, Ayden, and Patrick Mayo Tripp was solemnized Friday evening at seven o'clock.

The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Fred Tripp of Rt. 1, Winterville.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Bobby Bazen at the home of the bride's parents.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of white organza over white taffeta designed with an open sabrina neckline outlined in white re-embroidered lace. The empire bodice was overlaid in panels of the matching lace. The full bishop sleeves were finished in an organza cuff with calla points with a lace motif. The modified A-line skirt and wattleau attached train were edged at the hemline with the re-embroidered lace. Appliqued motifs were scattered over the front of the gown.

She wore a walking length tiered illusion veil edged in re-embroidered lace held in place by a Camelot cap overlaid in pleated qiana. She carried a bridal bouquet of white daisies.

The maid of honor, Lisa Faulkner, of Rt. 2, Ayden, sister of the bride, wore a light blue semiformal dress and carried a long-stemmed white carnation.

The father of the bridegroom was best man.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside at Rt. 1, Ayden.

The bride is a graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School and works at Nichols Discount City. The bridegroom is employed by

MRS. PATRICK MAYO TRIPP

Winterville Machine Works. Following the ceremony, a cake cutting was held. The house was decorated with an arrangement of flowers in fall colors and two seven branch candelabra.

Continues Husband's Work

By MARIAN FOX
Associated Press Writer
MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Long before the emergence of the women's movement, Elena Franzolin made her way from her Brooklyn family to the Mechanical School of Optics, which in time qualified her to measure Clark Gable's pupils. As the first woman ophthalmic dispenser for a Fifth Avenue firm in New York City, she recalls those minutes with Gable:

"I used to look into his big, blue eyes and measure the pupils and around the ears and make sure everything fit just so, and he'd say 'I'll leave it all up to you whatever glasses' frames you think I should have,' and I'd melt into stutters..."

Despite her promising future, she left the optics firm in 1949 to sell the sculpture of Edward Marshall Boehm, an unknown artist who was also her husband.

Without training in marketing, advertising or public relations, Helen Boehm persisted in extolling her husband's birds and animals until the name Boehm porcelain earned national recognition.

"It came naturally because I was selling my husband whom I loved and believed in," she said during an interview here while attending the convention of the American Iris Society, during which she presented the group with a specially designed iris.

But it took more than love to transform the Boehm enterprise from a Trenton, N.J., basement studio business in 1950 into a $10-million-a-year concern that in 1970 became the first American porcelain studio to export to England.

Mrs. Boehm, a tall blonde with graceful, jeweled hands, used her imagination. While she was still measuring pupils, one day she lured Vincent Andrus, an associate curator at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, to a nearby tailor's shop to see a Boehm display.

He told her, "This is beautiful, equal to any of the European imports," and insisted on paying $60 for each piece, but more important, it was the Boehms' first big break.

After bringing the purchase to the attention of a newspaper, Mrs. Boehm then took to the bus to sell the porcelain in Boston, Baltimore and Philadelphia.

The buyers told her, "Boehm, we never heard of it. Helen, it will take you 100 years."

Her promotional efforts couldn't support the studio and in 1954, when the Boehm endeavor ventured near the brink, she wrote to Mamie Eisenhower:

The letter that came back read, "Dear Mrs. Boehm: Thank you for your letter. I'd love for you to lunch with me..."

At the luncheon, Mrs. Eisenhower accepted a Hereford bull for the White House collection. In 1954 the Eisenhowers traveled to Canada, taking with them the Canadian geese by Boehm.

Then in 1957, when Mrs. Boehm learned of an upcoming visit to the United States by Queen Elizabeth, she arranged for her husband to design a plaque of Prince Philip on a polo pony to be presented to the visiting royalty by the president. Once again, it resulted in a powerful boost for the Boehm venture.

After that, presidents wrote to Boehm seeking appropriate gifts of porcelain. The studio has presented porcelain to six presidents, perhaps the most famous the "Mute Swans — Birds of Peace" presented by Richard Nixon to the people of China.

After Boehm's death in 1969, his widow had to convince the Colors Will Bring Out 'Light'

By RANDI ROSENBLUM
For The Associated Press
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sixteen people are gathered around a table, looking at samples of 9,000 colors, hoping to choose the ones that will lead them to a new life.

Each will pay $150 for those colors in the form of a personal palette.

"The key to color harmony is the inner light that you have, a quality of color that is unique to you," says Suzanne Caygill, who claims to be a pioneer in the blossoming color consulting business. "I know by a person's colors if he should be a soft person."

On this day, Suzanne's 16 clients include two medical students, a psychologist from Chicago and a family of five from Los Angeles.

Suzanne, a plump, flamboyant woman of about 60, dresses by the Autumn colors of her own palette done 35 years ago. She had red hair then — and still does — because she believes that redheads should never turn gray. Today, she's wearing a champagne silk shirt, a metallic copper net jacket and aqua satin skirt.

Crafts To Be Displayed At Luncheon Meet

The Welcome Wagon luncheon will be held Wednesday at the Greenville Golf and Country Club at 11:30 a.m.

Members are reminded to bring their crafts to show by 11:15 and also trading stamps for the bridge benefit in January. Proceeds from the benefit will go toward the club's project.

The club project is helping elderly people in Pitt County. Members are asked to bring two cans of food to each luncheon to be used for this purpose.

For luncheon reservations call Gail Jennings, 756-1753. Nursery reservations are accepted until noon on Monday for the luncheon. Call Carol Moe for reservations, 756-6882.

BUYER BEWARE
NEW YORK (UPI) — A recent market research study shows one consumer in 10 thinks children's products may be health or safety hazards. Fourteen percent of the younger consumers covered in the survey agreed that some children's products may be hazardous. Clothing was the most frequently named hazard, followed by toys. The study was made by Consumer Research Corp.

She is assisted by two women, dressed, of course, according to their palettes. Lois Marlow — known as Suzanne Jr. — is a study in peach, a Spring person. Helene Sutherland, a Winter, is dressed in fuchsia and black.

Suzanne's color theory recognizes that each person has his or her own particular coloring, classified basically by seasons. It is subdivided into such exotica as Butterfly Spring, Princess Summer, Pagan Autumn and Ballerina Winter. One hint about the stars: Zsa Zsa Gabor is a Flower Blossom Spring and Sophia Loren a mellow Autumn.

As she talks, members of her audience begin examining themselves. "I think I'm a misfit," says the father from Los Angeles. "I think you're a Winter," says his wife. "Winter?" he asks in disbelief.

Suzanne takes her ideas and color samples to scores of cities across the country, catering to hundreds of men, women and children. Recently she opened her own studio in the San Francisco penthouse that had been the Elizabeth Arden salon. "I'd waited years for the right place," she says.

Today the first person to have her palette made is the psychologist from Chicago, a strong woman with iron grey hair and given to bold geometric designs in her clothing. Suzanne mixes her acrylics, using a spotlight and a magnifying glass to help identify the skin tone. Then she begins calling for the small pieces of fabric that will make up the palette. She chooses shades of pink and dusty rose.

"I've always hated those colors," the psychologist says. But the others around the table nod agreement with the choice.

The process takes about 20 minutes. Finished, the psychologist sits with her samples, contemplating her palette. "I've been threatening to clean out the closet," she says. "Now I know why."

distributors that the studio in Trenton could continue without him.

"I guess many of them didn't know the role I played. I took care of all the administration, the finances, the sales, the publicity. After he passed away, I had to be more aggressive with the designing, to make sure the quality was kept up."

The number of major distributors has increased from 35 to 70. Two studios have opened in England and Mrs. Boehm has announced a fourth studio to work on monument-sized porcelain murals.

'Keep Babies' Teeth Clean, Dentist Urges

NEW HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) — When a baby falls asleep with a nursing bottle in its mouth containing milk, fruit juice or any liquid with sugar, extensive tooth decay is likely to occur, according to a children's dentist here.

Dr. Saul Kamen, in charge of pediatric dentistry at Long Island Jewish-Hillside Medical Center, explains that the liquid in the bottle bathes the infant's mouth during sleep and can have a destructive effect on the teeth.

Infants as young as 18 months have displayed "serious decay of recently erupted teeth which could only be traced to the habit of falling asleep with the bottle in the mouth," Kamen explains.

The dentist advises that the parent remove the bottle as soon as the baby falls asleep. After each bottle feeding, he recommends that parents wipe the teeth clean with a terry cloth or a cotton swab. Kamen also encourages weaning at an early age.

Mothers who breast-feed should exercise the same precaution, Kamen adds, although he says that this method of feeding gives the baby's mouth the best opportunity for normal growth and development.

Seth Rye
IN CONCERT
Monday, Nov. 7th
1977 At 7:00 P.M.

At Music Arts
Pitt Plaza

We have an exciting happening at Music Arts that we're sure that you won't want to miss. We have engaged Seth Rye, the fantastic nationally known Lowrey artist for a performance at our Pitt Plaza store in Greenville, N.C. on Monday, November 7, 1977 at 7:00 p.m.

Though young in years, Seth Rye who hails from Georgetown, Texas is a veteran of numerous concert, TV and radio appearances. A memorable highlight of his career was his very own television show.

Playing on several models of the Lowrey organ, Seth will show musicians, as well as beginners, how to get the most out of the organ that they own or hope to own in the near future.

We're excited about this unusual opportunity and hope you and your friends will join us for what will prove to be a most entertaining evening.

We'll be looking forward to seeing you November 7th.

 NEW YORK (AP) — After several years of steady climb in the proportion of women students, the Columbia University Graduate School of Journalism this fall enrolled more women than men, for the first time in its 65-year history.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Some confusing conditions exist today, so make a careful study of the situation and the causes. This is no time to shirk duties.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Work out personal matters. A wiser way of taking care of health is necessary. Don't keep putting up with ailments you may have.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) The situation with your mate or loved one can be confusing, but if you keep quiet, all clears up soon. Spend time updating wardrobe.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Use good practical sense at home and get good results. Straighten out a troublesome situation. Pay bills on time and avoid penalties.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) See what can be done to please allies and get more cooperation, better results in business dealings.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Gain the favor of those who have power over your affairs and get good results in the future. Make small repairs to property that will add to its value and comfort.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get into the personal interests you like the most early in the day, but do not give in to any temptations later. Plan future activities so that you gain the most from them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Meet with a good adviser confidentially and discuss your problems with this person. Wait for a better time for handling one matter in particular.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Look to a good friend to give you advice that will help you to gain some important aim. Avoid an untrustworthy person or you could lose a good deal. Be more circumspect yourself, also.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Find the best way to gain the favor of bigwigs who can help you, especially where public matters are concerned.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get out of that dull routine and look into new opportunities that are all around you. Get your credit affairs handled properly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Take care of annoying chores before you go out for entertainment. Steer clear of one who is envious of you.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Show that you know what partners expect of you and be sure to cooperate with them more. A situation arises that you do not comprehend very well, but deep thought shows you how to handle it.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have to have good training and education early so that life here can prove very successful upon reaching maturity. The field of research is good here, as well as dietetics, big business and the like. Give cultural advantages also.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, NOV. 7, 1977

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Make sure early in the day to catch up with important duties you have left undone. Confer with associates on a plan whereby you can have greater productivity in the days ahead.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Don't neglect duties awaiting your attention. Later talk with co-workers and come to right decisions for the future.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get right down to business at hand early in the day and do it well. Make sure you keep promises made to higher-ups.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Taking care of home affairs before going out to business or other activities is wise today. Show others you have wisdom.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Take care of an important business matter early in the day. Take time to entertain family members later in the day.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study your financial status in the morning and later talk over a plan you have with an experienced business expert. Think constructively.

Viewing Grand Canyon From A Mule Earns Award

Ayden, Grifton, Snow Hill, Winterville Vote

Municipal elections will be held in Ayden, Grifton, Winterville, and Snow Hill on Tuesday, Nov. 8.

Citizens of these towns will select their town officials and also vote on several state issues.

According to Ayden Town Clerk Ralph Ford, Ayden residents will decide on mayor and five commissioner positions.

In the race for mayor, Incumbent Mayor Ross Persinger will be opposed by Glenn Bowen Jr. The five commissioners are running unopposed. They are — Carl Speight in Ward One, Robert Harris in Ward Two, J.Elliott Dixon in Ward Three, J.J. Brown in Ward Four, and Harry Mumford in Ward Five.

Citizens of Winterville will vote on mayor and one alderman this year.

Incumbent Mayor Walter A. Dail is being opposed by Leland Tucker, Patrick Decuzzi, and Donald Avery.

Incumbent Alderman Bobby Crawford will be opposed by Hoyt Hammond.

In Grifton, Ardath Spikes is running against Incumbent Mayor Dr. David E. Bosley. Residents will also vote on two commissioner positions. Incumbent Alton B. Clements will be opposed by Johnny Len Craft, William Bollinger, George P. Davis, William Smith, Fred Don Lister, and Don Watson.

Snow Hill has three commissioner positions open this year along with the mayoral position. Incumbent Mayor Melvin Oliver is unopposed.

John L. Taylor, incumbent commissioner, will run against A.J. Howard and William J. Hughes.

Residents of the four towns will also vote on the $230 million water bond issue, the $300 million highway bond issue, and the Constitutional Amendment which would allow the governor and lieutenant governor to succeed themselves in office.

By CLARENCE ZAITZ
GRAND CANYON, Ariz. (UPI) — I hung onto Leslie for dear life for about half the day I spent on her sway back, riding the Grand Canyon trail.

I wanted very much to believe what our guide had said: "You couldn't push these mules over the edge with a bulldozer."

Leslie was my transportation. It seemed at times she was headed off the edge of the narrow trail during the 2,100-foot descent of the perpendicular canyon walls. But the 18-year-old beast carried me through unscathed.

My wife on Robbin, and my daughter on Jeanne — I'm ashamed to admit — adapted to the awesome experience far quicker than I.

Not all the three million annual visitors to Grand Canyon have the desire, or the nerve, to take the mule trip. General Manager Tony Gressak said last year 7,454 took the one-day trip while 3,648 took the two-day trip down Bright Angel Trail.

The trail — on which the color of the dust varies as you pass through the various strata of rock — is from three to six feet wide. It is those sharp switchbacks which alarm the novice.

As the mule reaches the switch, and starts to turn, its head and neck hang out into space, a startling experience that takes some getting used to. It was only later I noticed that Leslie's feet never got near the edge.

Leslie is one of 92 mules that make the daily trips year-around. A mule, I learned, is good for Grand Canyon service for about 20 years. Surprisingly, not all the mules are adept at the job. Our guide, Jay Colbert, said some of the animals are actually afraid of heights, and are immediately weeded out.

Colbert has been guiding people on animals for 30 years, 10 of them in the Grand Canyon. My daughter thought he looked like a Burt Reynolds without mustache. Indeed, all the guides looked as though they were picked as much for the rugged cowboy appearance as their riding ability.

Each guide takes a group of six mule riders. Not all the mules travel at the same pace. Colbert kept telling our group to keep the mules moving. "Don't let 'em eat," he said.

Then at one point he halted the string, started breaking small branches off brush and handing them to each rider. "Use this to keep your mule movin'," he advised, "I want to see the fur fly. Put dents in them mules. You can't hurt 'em."

The group leaves about 8:30 a.m. and gets back between 2 and 3 p.m. "depending on how good riders we have," Colbert said.

We noticed that the canyon walls change color during the day. In the morning, they were green. On the return trip, they seemed purple.

One of the happiest moments on the trip is about noon, when a lunch stop is made at the Indian Gardens oasis. The appeal of the standard box lunch is far less than the coolness, and the respite from the mule's back. After a half day on the trail it seems like paradise.

For most riders, the best time of all is arrival back at the rim, and the corral. That's where you finally get to dismount.

Before I and the others got away the guide presented us with a diploma attesting that we are members of the "renowned Order of Master Muleskinners of the Grand Canyon Trails."

The award is by virtue of having "endured the vicissitudes of his magnificent journey and borne the whims and caprices of his gentle, faithful, educated, individualistic, long-eared mount, part horse, park jackass and all mule."

Her diamond pendant, set in 14K gold, is available in a choice of sizes starting as low as $140.

Runoff Vote In Farmville

Tuesday is election day in Farmville, Fountain and Falkland. It's a runoff situation in Farmville, an incumbent non-race in Fountain, and a mayor's race only in Falkland.

The runoff in Farmville is for two town commissioners' seats, with three candidates running — Durwood T. Little, LeRoy Redden, and David Stowe. In the Oct. 11 election, Stowe was the high man, with Redden, a former commissioner, running second. Little, an incumbent, is the challenger.

Fountain has only incumbents running. These are Carter G. Smith, for Mayor; and Edward Bruce Beasley Jr., Norman A. Gardner, Hilton Owens, Scott Peele and William W. Walker, for commissioners.

In Falkland, there are three commissioners' seats open and three persons running: Charles E. Mayo, John L. Tyer and Woodrow W. Wooten. The race there is among two registered candidates, Charles Lawrence and Oscar Lee Norville, and a write-in campaigner, Mrs. Marguerite Grant.

CUDDLY DOLL — Kelly Services, Inc. is distributing about 35,000 "Kelly Girl" dolls to business people around the country in a promotion effort that is not exactly thrilling some secretaries and women's groups. A letter, that accompanies the doll in the promotion, which was delivered prior to the doll is the major job of concern to feminists that contend the message was filled with sexual overtones and double meanings. Dr. Gualtieri To Speak To Autistics Soc.

Dr. Thomas Gualtieri of Chapel Hill will speak to the Greenville Unit of the N. C. Society for Autistic Children Sunday at 3 p. m. at the Stratford Arms Apartments Party House.

Dr. Gualtieri's topic will be "Psychotropic Drugs and Handicapped Children." He is a part-time consultant with Project TEACCH of the Department of Psychiatry, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and is completing a residency in child psychiatry.

Society members are reminded to attend and an invitation is extended to special education teachers, physicians, mental health personnel, social workers, and other interested persons. Babysitters are provided.

Only One On Simpson Ballot

SIMPSON — John T. McDonald Jr. is the only member of the town council seeking re-election in Tuesday's balloting.

McDonald, Oscar Lee (Jim) Telfaire and Galloway Thompson, are the candidates listed on the ballot. Three councilmen are to be elected.

Leonard Hardee and Junior Lee Dail, currently serving on the village's council chose not to seek re-election to their posts.

Polls open at 6:30 a.m. and close at 7:30 p.m. at the Community Building here.

Farm Strike Talk Rises Amid Losses

By PETER M. KELLY
SPRINGFIELD, Colo. (UPI) — It is sundown on the winter-brown Great Plains. The cold wind whips across cubes of alfalfa, scattered like dice in a field beyond the barbed wire. A loose board claps idly on a whirling windmill.

A Santa Fe freight, toylake on the huge prairie, races for the Oklahoma border, the rocking boxcars snapping past corridors of red tasseled milo, shattered stalks of harvested corn, fields leafy with young wheat. Its whistle rolls for miles across the flat farmland.

A mile or so beyond, John Stolp's winter wheat is up. The thin, green leaves, bittersweet to taste, are guarded against the wind by inch-high furrows that curl up a hill to his barn. Come spring, the wheat will be belt high and golden.

Stolp, 28, intends to harvest the wheat but he may not sell it unless the price he gets pays the costs of planting the crop. He and thousands of farmers like him throughout America say they're going on strike.

"We want to do just as General Motors when General Motors makes too many automobiles," says Stolp, standing in the furrows, hands jammed in the front pockets of his dusty blue jeans. "They shut the plants."

"We're not going to shoot the pigs or butcher the cows," he said. "We're just not going to produce any more."

Down the road in what was a crop duster's office and now is strike headquarters, Darrell Schroeder drinks a cup of coffee. Schroeder is short and when he laughs his face turns bright red. He's so heavy, the tan suspenders cannot make it over his stomach and slide off across his pockets before clipping to the edge of his trousers. His son, Gene, lost $50,000 this year.

"The only way he went to the fields this year is I signed the notes," said Schroeder, 50, his thick fingers squeezing the styrofoam coffee cup. "Inflation is taking everything with it as it goes. We're going to sell at a profit or we won't sell."

The farmers, who speak in soft drawls of the prairie, call it a strike but it will not really be one. They will just keep the food they grow rather than sell it. They hope to cut supplies, in time, and force up prices. Then they'll sell.

The farmers are after 100 percent parity, a shifting figure whose definition varies with the grower. Basically, full parity would guarantee farmers, at the very least, market prices that pay the costs of growing a crop. They're now producing at a guaranteed loss.

The strike is set to start Dec. 14 by a group called American Agriculture, an organization of farmers claiming support from the fields of Washington, through the cowboy states of the West, across the Mississippi, north to the Great Lakes and east to Maryland and Delaware.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland doesn't think the strike will work because of reluctance of some growers and the surplus — 30 million tons of both wheat and feed grains — on hand in the thousands of grain elevators that rise high above the Great Plains. The nation can tap the surplus if supplies from farms dry up, he says.

Tell that to Gene Hammond who farms 4,000 acres outside Boise City, Okla., or Greg Schuller, who grows on 7,000 acres near Springfield. Hammond has piled 25,000 bushels of wheat beside his corrugated metal storage bins rather than sell. Schuller has 14,000 bushels locked in a quonset hut by the Santa Fe tracks. Hammond says each bushel of wheat represents 67 loaves of bread.

Here is what they say: The per-bushel price for wheat Sept. 15 was $2.17, 43 percent of a full parity price of $5.02.

Farmers say that means they lost $2.85 for each 60-pound bushel. They lost $1.86 on each bushel of corn that month, and $2.26 on every 100-pound sack of potatoes.

Will a strike work? Well, it could. Farmtown bankers say they might lend growers money to live on during the strike if the farmers have any collateral left in machinery, land or crops. But many do not. They've already borrowed to the limit and may have to produce to meet bank notes or sell out.

There's the pinch. Many farmers, farm leaders and businessmen in Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska aren't betting on the strike. They say growers, like it or not, will have to plant, harvest and sell to meet their notes at the bank.

The women are cutting cake and making coffee in the whitewashed crop duster's office used as American Agriculture's headquarters, down the street from the Boca County courthouse. Darrell Schroeder talks about the broomcorn crops of the 1940s. A farmwife in the back corner uses one finger to type a news release.

Schroeder's son, Gene, says a John Deere implement dealer in Walsh, Colo., the the Kansas border, fired five workers because sales are down. Stolp claims a deep-green 44-30 John Deere tractor that cost $16,000 five years ago now costs at least $28,000.

The farmers' companionship to the land is in their speech. The price of a combine with two cutting tools, for instance, isn't $50,000. It is 25,000 bushels of wheat sold for $2 per bushel. The folks in Boise City, they say, will get busy with the strike once the milo is in but harvest comes first.

All six telephones in the strike headquarters are being used. Gene Schroeder talks to a farmer from Oklahoma. Strike, he says. It's the only weapon left. Schuller is lining up a farmers' rally at Amarillo, Tex.

The arithmetic of the rural-urban house breakdown could mean, on many issues, that city members can pass "social" bills without the support of farm bloc congressmen.

Then why should urban lawmakers be interested in coalitions requiring them to back farm programs?

"Because we have something to offer to consumers," Johnson said.

Many urban members traditionally have been skeptical about farm subsidies, but the NFU official said he finds a "strong belief" among city congressmen that if the nation's family farm system is destroyed by economic pressure, consumers will be worse off.

Urban lawmakers don't like the prospect that family farmers might be succeeded by giant farming corporations which could charge whatever they pleased, Johnson said.

The increasing interest in building farm-city bridges has made itself felt on a number of fronts.

Some farm and agribusiness groups several years ago formed the Agriculture Council of America which steers clear of lobbying but publicizes "better understanding" between farmers and consumers.

An older group, the Consumer Federation of America, has emphasized its desire to work with farmers on food-related issues. It lobbied prominently in favor of port portions of this year's farm bill.

Schuller, 29, is a graduate physicist of the University of Illinois who came back to the land outside this town of 4,000 persons in southeast Colorado where his father farmed. He wears pointy-toe cowboy boots now, a baseball cap and has a habit of pushing his slipping glasses back up his nose with his left hand.

Schuller's wheat is piled like a hill in the quonset hut west of the Gano grain elevator in Springfield and there is a sound of disillusionment in his voice when he describes how America has grown away from the land. The nation was rural first and urban later. Strikes, he implies, are city weapons.

"The land was a source of life," said Schuller, sitting with his feet buried in the wheat. "It came to fruition. The grandfathers are growing up in the cities now."

Why does he still farm, despite the losses? "It's a basic identification with life and the life process."

Forty miles north, in Lamar, wheat farmer Paul Pierson, who is not a physicist, was blunter.

"It's clean, you know what I mean? Hell, I don't mind getting a little dirty. I like to feel the ground in my hands. The first six inches — that's where life begins. But we can't keep losing money, you know?"

Urban Support Needed By The Farm Lobby To Keep Necessary Clout

FARM LOBBYIST — Veteran farm lobbyist Reuben Johnson, an official of the National Farmers Union, says farmers have not lost political power in Congress. (UPI Photo)

By BERNARD BRENNER
UPI FARM EDITOR

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The steady decline among American farmers has led some congressional observers to predict the farm support bill which President Carter signed recently may be the last.

Farm families made up one-quarter of the population 40 years ago. They account for less than 4 percent now. The proportion is expected to drop even lower.

Where will farmers get the political clout to maintain government programs which support their prices, finance agricultural research, promote export sales, and subsidize conservation projects?

The next real test will not come until 1981 when Congress must extend the farm support programs it adopted this year. But there undoubtedly will be skirmishes in the intervening years.

Farm spokesmen concede they face a stiff challenge. But they believe the tradition of government support which began in the depression of the 1930's will survive.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., whose service in the Senate goes back to 1949, said it is "much more difficult to get farm programs through the Congress now than when I first came to the Senate."

"The situation for the future does not look much better," the ailing Humphrey added in a written response to questions submitted by UPI.

This year's farm bill was passed as part of a farm-food stamp package including $5.6 billion for food stamps strongly backed by urban congressmen.

But Humphrey said the Carter administration has proposed eliminating the food stamp program and folding its benefits into an overall welfare-reform package. If Congress approves this plan, the next farm bill will not have a food stamp section.

"Then we will face the prospect of losing urban support," Humphrey said but added, "whatever happens in this (welfare) area, I think there will be future farm bills."

"I say this because of a basic recognition of the importance of American agriculture," he said. "None of us wants a repeat of what happened during the (1930's) depression when farm prices fell to a mere fraction of the cost of production."

A veteran farm lobbyist flatly disagreed that farmers have lost political power in Congress despite the fact that the number of rural members in the House has dwindled sharply.

"I don't believe we've lost political power," said Reuben Johnson, an official of the National Farmers Union. "What farmers may have lost is the ability to look beyond our own interests to form coalitions with others."

Johnson pointed to the 1977 farm bill, citing a key House vote on which Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill., was seeking to send the bill back to committee.

Findley was defeated overwhelmingly "and we got over half of the big city Democrats," Johnson said.

How?

The answer lies partly in the link between farm supports and food stamps.

But, Johnson said, his group had supported a controversial bill to set up a Consumer Protection Agency and had backed a minimum wage bill, "and the city members didn't turn their backs on us."

Forty years ago, a bi-partisan corn-cotton-wheat coalition of House members and senators from the old South, the midwestern corn belt and the wheat-growing plains could write its own ticket on measures to support farm income and control surplus production.

Today, Chairman Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., of the Senate Agriculture Committee usually can count on majorities for his legislation because most senators still have farm interests in their states. But in the House, Agriculture Chairman Thomas Foley of Washington needs urban allies to pass legislation.

Rep. Carroll Hubbard, Jr., D-Ky., a second-term congressman who represents a tobacco, corn and soybean belt in western Kentucky, said the drop in farm population was being caused by consolidation of farms and the fact young people were not continuing in the occupations of their parents.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Only One Way to Lose Weight

How do you feel about these modern farm drinks for weight reduction? — Mrs. H.R.N., Minn.

Dear Mrs. N.: Despite the fact that many people are enthusiastic about this high-protein drink for losing weight, it can be hazardous to health.

Dozens of companies have sprung up and are touting their protein drink as the ideal one. The advertisements are tempting, as are all new dieting fads. Their greatest appeal, of course, is to the many who want a rapid, painless, "miraculous" answer to their weight problem.

There is no such thing as a miraculous solution. The reason that there is a loss of weight with these protein drinks is simply that the dieters consume fewer calories than before. Which takes us back to the prime law of weight reduction. If the number of calories you eat or drink is greater than the number of calories that your body needs for its daily fuel then you must gain weight. Conversely, if the number of calories that you consume is less than the number of calories you expend in daily activities you must lose weight.

Perhaps the only time these laws can vary is in the presence of thyroid disease, metabolic disease or endocrine disorder. And these are comparatively rare.

It may be that the reason for the successful results with the protein drinks lies in the fact that it demands a strict regime of disciplined intake. With these drinks one doesn't have to plan meals or count calories. The packages are specifically prescribed for regular intervals. It's a program that's easier to follow and one finds it harder to cheat.

Unfortunately, there are dangers associated with this or any other high-protein diet that is embarked on without medical supervision.

Ketosis is a condition in which there is an accumulation of ketone bodies in the blood stream. With a high-protein diet an abnormal amount of ketones can accumulate. Normally, these ketone bodies are eliminated in the urine. People with kidney disease, diabetes, liver disease, also women during pregnancy should, under no circumstances, begin such a potentially treacherous regime.

Those who do undertake it should have regular blood and urine tests, in order to be certain that ketosis has not developed.

I was hurt playing ball and broke two ribs. Air collected around my lungs. Does this mean that I won't be able to play football when I get to college? I'm 16. — Matthew S., Wis.

Dear Matthew: The condition you describe is known as "pneumothorax." All this means is that there is an accumulation of air around the lung. This pocketing of air is temporary.

An injury to the chest wall, with or without a fracture of the ribs, can be responsible. There are a number of other causes for pneumothorax, but these do not concern your situation. Once you have completely recovered, there is no reason why any physical activity or sport should be curtailed.

Just remember, protective gear is the best way to reduce football injuries.

None Seeking Council Seats

BURGOON, Ohio (AP) — There are no candidates for Burgoon Village Council this year.

"It's nothing new," said Glenn Weyant, mayor of the community of 240 residents.

"They just don't want to bother filing petitions so we'll wait until after election (Nov. 8) and appoint the same ones back on the council."

There are five vacancies to be filled on the council.

"The councilmen get $4 a meeting and we only meet every few months," said Weyant, who's been on the job — at $60 a year — for 22 years. "There just isn't that much to do."

78 Houses For Sale

AYDEN. If you want full value for your dollar and want to get all you pay for, look at this duplex. With no obligation on your part, we will be glad to give details in person. Only $16,900. On call this weekend, Louise H. Moseley, 746-3472; Office, 746-2135. Moseley-Marcus Realty.

HOOKERTON COMMUNITY. 2 full color oaks lend summer shade and fall color to this duplex. With no obligation on your part, we will be glad to give details in person. Only $16,900. On call this weekend, Louise H. Moseley, 746-3472; Office, 746-2135. Moseley-Marcus Realty.

AYDEN. Are blues, Williamsburg Blues, golds and yellows your favorite colors? This older 3 bedroom bungalow has been refurbished by its present owners in the above colors and is wallpapered in lovely designs. This home has a large family room, 2 baths, a large eat-in kitchen, living room, and a handy utility room. Outside storage building in a well-kept yard with a large lawn. Call this weekend, Louise H. Moseley, 746-3472; Office, 746-2135. Moseley-Marcus Realty.

AYDEN. Looking for a 4 bedroom home with no city taxes. Extra nice neighborhood? Adjacent to the 14th hole of the golf club, this lovely colonial home offers a formal approach to easy living. Foyer, living and dining rooms, eat-in kitchen packed with beautiful cabinetry, family room with fireplace and small porch, lovely green carpeting, 2 full baths, and ample closets to tack away all your treasures. The enclosed single garage is paneled and has a washer and dryer that will stay with the house. At $49,000, this might be the new home for you. On call this weekend, Louise H. Moseley, 746-3472; Office, 746-2135. Moseley-Marcus Realty.

REMEMBER WHEN you could get a lot of house for the money? Well, this is no fairy tale. Only $39,500 will buy 1450 square feet of pure pleasure. Cinderella would be pleased to call this her castle for there's plenty of room in the walk-in closets for glass slippers. Snow White could bunk the 7 dwarfs in the 3 large bedrooms, while the 3 Little Pigs could boil the wolf in the large fireplace in the family room. Jack in the Beanstalk wouldn't have had to tug at the hair who laid golden eggs to afford heating and air conditioning since this home is heavily insulated, has storm doors and windows and a heat pump. So come on, hop into your coach before it turns into a pumpkin and let us show you this Dream Come True now in Ayden. On call this weekend, Louise H. Moseley, 746-3472; Office, 746-2135. Moseley-Marcus Realty.

POOR TOM

He could have gotten the fireplace he wanted at CAMBRIDGE

Poor Tom:
Somehow marshmallows don't taste the same when they're cooked over an electric burner.
Tom knew that, but he thought fireplaces weren't available in moderately priced houses.
Then he found out about Cambridge where he would have gotten a fireplace and air conditioning and luxurious carpeting throughout.
Not to mention the choice of 3 or 4 bedrooms and a fully modern kitchen with dishwasher and disposal.
And at Cambridge, he'd have been close enough to dash out for those marshmallows on a moment's notice.
No wonder Tom is really burned.
Don't make the same mistake Tom did. Look into Cambridge before you buy your new home.

'The Godfather:' New Sequences Seen In Nine-Hour TV Production

FAMILY TRADITION — Marlon Brando, center, stars as Don Vito Corleone, the aging head of a crime family whose sons and grandchildren are an important part of his life and his business, in "Mario Puzo's 'The Godfather': The Complete Novel for Television," beginning Saturday, Nov. 12 (9-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

In an unusual creative collaboration that spanned nearly 11,000 miles and some eight months, Francis Ford Coppola and film editor Barry Malkin dismantled two outstanding theatrical movies and assembled "Mario Puzo's 'The Godfather': The Complete Novel for Television," the nine-hour drama, starring Marlon Brando, Al Pacino, James Caan, Tali Shire, Diane Keaton and Robert DeNiro, will be colorcast as an NBC Event Presentation Nov.

It all began the summer of 1976, one year after NBC-TV announced plans to present the entire "Godfather" story as a single drama, reflecting the chronological style of Puzo's best-selling novel and forsaking the flashback technique used so effectively for the motion pictures, "The Godfather" and "The Godfather, Part II."

"This is very much a character story," Malkin said, "and what I feel that we have accomplished in this version is to make the roles played by Brando, Pacino and DeNiro much stronger than they were in the movies."

As he recalled the experience recently, Malkin explained how the mammoth project began with a meeting between the director and New York-based editor.

"From that point, I was involved in research for a period of time. Much of the unused film was stored away in vaults and I had to find everything that we felt we needed."

In the television version, there is approximately one hour of new material, says Malkin. "There are a number of entirely new segments not seen in the movie versions and selected scenes were restored to their original length with shots added here and there."

"My first step was to assemble all of the film in its original scripted form, and it ran eight hours and 45 minutes. Then I shipped it to Coppola."

Some six months later Coppola and Malkin met in California and after discussion, continued refining the film.

Garrett Stars As Pony Rider

Leif Garrett, current teen-age singing sensation, stars as a 15-year-old Pony Express rider who must outrun Indians and battle fatigue, rough trails and the elements to carry the mail from the Nebraska Territory to the West Coast, in "Peter Lundy and the Medicine Hat Stallion," a special telecast Sunday, Nov. 6, 7 to 9 p.m. on NBC-TV.

An NBC program development project, the action-adventure movie was filmed on location at sites in New Mexico, including the San Ildefonso Indian reservation.

Fifteen-year-old Peter (Garrett) lives on a trading post operated by his family in the Nebraska Territory in 1861. His father, Jethro (Mitchell Ryan), is a stern, embittered by honest man who feels Peter's mother (Bibi Besch) is overprotective of him.

After an unsavory character named Lefty Slade (Charles Tyner) leaves a foal at the trading post in payment for a horseshoeing job, Peter raises the animal and eventually breaks him for riding.

Peter learns that the Pony Express is seeking accomplished young riders for a difficult and hazardous new route to California and he wins a job after demonstrating his horsemanship.

Although he is only 15, Leif Garrett has amassed major credits in the ten years he has worked at his chosen profession.

A WINNING TEAM — Current teen-age singing sensation Leif Garrett portrays a 15-year-old pony express rider who must endure many hardships to carry mail from Nebraska to the West Coast in "Peter Lundy and the Medicine Hat Stallion," a special to be colorcast Sunday, Nov. 6 (7-9 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Wedding Bells Ring For Couple

Tom and Abbey decide to marry — more than a year after the death of his first wife, Joan — despite complications caused by his eight children, in "Children of the Groom," a special two-hour episode of "Eight Is Enough," airing Wednesday, Nov. 9, 8 to 10 p.m., on ABC-TV.

When all the kids except Elizabeth take charge of arranging the wedding, the simple family affair threatens to become a circus until Abbey gets cold feet and calls it all off.

Surprisingly, Elizabeth is happy at the development, voicing fear that Abbey would try to take Joan's place in the family. But when Abbey assures her that no one could take Joan's place, Elizabeth agrees to be maid of honor and the wedding is on again as a simple, joyous family ceremony.

Sylvia Sidney guest stars as Abbey's Great Aunt Fealty, whose "Pasadena Posh" and sherry sipping add to the prenuptial chaos, and Dick Van Patten and Betty Buckley star as Tom Bradford and Abbey.

"Eight Is Enough" premiered last spring and quickly garnered viewers of all ages. The modern-day comedy-drama is about a family beset with the joys and difficulties centered around eight children who range in age from eight to 23.

The Bradford clan live in Sacramento, Calif. in a comfortable old house on an upper middle class street. Tom, "Old Dad," as he refers to himself, is a successful syndicated columnist, and the kids are, well, just kids. They may bicker, but they love each other, and together the Bradford family has put behind them the sorrow they faced at the loss of their mother, Joan, Tom's wife and companion of 25 years.

FAYE RETURNS TO SCREEN

Alice Faye will return to the screen in a singing role for the first time since 1962 to play in "Lassie, My Lassie."

Faye last sang in "State Fair" and last appeared in a starring role in "Fallen Angel" in 1945.

Girls Reach Out

A true-to-life gesture of goodwill on the part of three young girls who rescued "seconds" of fruits and vegetable crops, destined to be plowed back into the earth, so that they could sell them inexpensively to migrant workers in the community, is the basis for "Mobile Maidens," the second episode of "The Winners," a monthly series of half-hour dramatic specials aimed at the young viewer, to be broadcast on Thursday, Nov. 10, 4 to 4:30 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Each monthly episode of "The Winners" featured a different story highlighting the experiences and accomplishments of young men and women who reach their special goals despite personal and physical obstacles. "Mobile Maidens" is based on an actual event which took place in California's Ventura County just a few years ago when an innovative girls club, made up of youngsters from lower-income families, decided to save some of the leftovers of local harvests that were going to be plowed back into the earth. The girls planned to salvage these 'seconds' and sell them cheaply to the migrant workers who could not otherwise afford to buy the products of their own labor.

But these empathetic and enterprising young women of the Ventura Girls Club were met with heavy opposition from both the local farmers and the union. "Mobile Maidens" is the story of how the girls faced these conflicts and overcame the difficulties surrounding the project before they succeeded.

The efforts of the young women have come to be called the Maidens Market Program, comprising about 225 girls ranging in age from 8 to 16. The proceeds from these sales are saved up and then eventually spent on some worthy cause.

Oldest Network Program Celebrates 30th Season

Sunday, Nov. 6, will mark a singular achievement in television history — the 30th anniversary of "Meet the Press," the oldest network television program.

Over the years, "Meet the Press" has continued its long tradition of interviewing many of the nation's and the world's opinion leaders and other prominent people in the news. By the anniversary date, 954 different guests will have appeared on 1,486 editions of the program.

Among those interviewed during the past year were Menahem Begin, Prime Minister of Israel; Great Britain's new Ambassador to the United States, Peter Jay; then-Presidential candidate Jimmy Carter; former Governor of California

Ronald Reagan; consumer advocate Ralph Nader; Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Joseph Califano; Pierre Trudeau, Prime Minister of Canada; and environmentalist Denis Hayes.

Bill Monroe, a veteran of 16 years with NBC News, is executive producer of the program as well as moderator-panelist.

Working in tandem with Monroe in selecting the guests and panel members is producer Betty Dukert, who has been with the program since 1956.

"Meet the Press" was created by Lawrence E. Spivak in 1945 as a radio promotion for American Mercury magazine. Two years later it began its unsurpassed television career. Spivak's last program as producer and regular panelist in Nov., 1975, was marked by the appearance of President Gerald R. Ford as the guest. It was the first time an American President appeared on a television news interview program.

Monroe said: "The program usually is broadcast live from Washington, but several times a year we take it to different locales."

Over the past years, the program has not limited its travels to the U.S. Editions have originated from South Vietnam, London, Paris, Berlin, Chile, India, the Philippines and Beirut to interview important newsmakers.

"There have been a few changes in the program," Monroe said, "such as adding a brief 'Letters' section to let viewers comment. But it is still built on the original formula, involving major news figures, top-notch reporters, the spontaneity of unrehearsed questions and answers, and the often, unexpected, unfolding of issues and personalities that can come out on a live, nationwide news conference."

Tight Schedule Around 'Telethon' Was Gamble

Las Vegas is called the city that never sleeps. That's great for the gamblers and tourists, but for a movie producer doing a film there, it can be both a tremendous joy and a monumental headache.

"Telethon," airing as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie" Nov. 6, 9 to 11 p.m., on ABC-TV, was filmed entirely in Las Vegas. Producer Robert Lovenheim found the experience to be both harrowing and unique.

"Las Vegas is unlike any other location in the world," he said. "There are no two days that are ever alike and the people are totally unpredictable. We quickly learned that there was no sense trying to put together a shooting schedule. The city would dictate where we would film."

"Telethon" deals with romance and danger surrounding the telecast of an annual telethon. Lovenheim found that his major problem was finding a showroom or auditorium where they could build the telethon set, including the tote board and the tables where volunteers take phone calls.

"It was a large set and not something that could be put up and taken down quickly," Lovenheim explained. "We finally got permission to use the showroom at the Dunes Hotel. Like the rest of the city, though, the Casino de Paris that plays there keeps pretty strange hours. The girls were hardly off stage after the last show when our crew was in taking down their set and putting up ours. At night, we had to get ours down before their first show."

Another problem facing the producer was how to deal with the throngs of people present during scenes filmed in the casino and restaurants at the Dunes Hotel. Like people everywhere they were fans, and probably would want autographs.

"We found to our delight that people got caught up in the spirit of it all. We had some high-powered names like Polly Bergen, Lloyd Bridges, Red Buttons and Janet Leigh all working, but instead of acting like fans, the bystanders acted like...well, like actors.

"The best group was in the casino. We did one scene where the actor David Selby was supposed to try to win big at the craps table. We used real players around David and one of them started to win big himself. We couldn't have hired real actors who would have reacted as well."

Despite the problems, the picture came in on time and under budget.

"A lot of what we did was hard, but when the people at a location get excited about what you're doing, it can be a big boost. We weren't sure what would happen in Las Vegas. What did happen was that everyone was terrific."

Theatre Features Claudious

The political and personal intrigue, corruption and lust that topped the glory of vainglorious Rome will unfold on Masterpiece Theatre when "I, Claudius" begins nationally the first of 13 episodes Sunday, Nov. 6, at 9 p.m. on PBS.

Based on Robert Graves' best-selling novels about dirty work in ancient Rome, the series lavishly depicts the orgiastic society of the all-powerful Claudians, the family whose business was ruling the world. In their egomaniacal pursuit of power at any price, they underestimate Claudius—a dribbling lame spastic whose mind, they assumed, was as deficient as his disease-riddled body.

It was more pleasant to ridicule his infirmities when they couldn't escape his distasteful company. So Claudius survived to become emperor, and to set down the inside story of his conniving, murdering royal relatives and the Rome they destroyed before his uniquely observant eyes.

Jill Sings For Joy

If you are assigned to portray a country western singer and you've never sung a note in public, what do you do?

If you are as resourceful as Jill Voigt, the young actress who portrays the would-be star, Rebecca Lee Hunt, on "One Life to Live," you'll find a band, rehearse some Hank Williams tunes, and give it your best shot.

In the continuing daytime drama, Rebecca Lee leaves home in North Carolina to crack the country music scene, and her first effort is to audition at the Blue Ridge Club, where her best offer is a job as a waitress.

Rebecca Lee feels that she needs a gimmick, and she dons a Dolly Parton outfit, changes her act and this time gets signed for appearances one night a week.

Red Buttons stars as a frightened comedian whose career is on the skids, but his joy is real when he sees the first steps of Dawn Rowan, the Poster Girl of the charity he has adopted, in "Telethon," a multi-layered drama set in Las Vegas, airing on "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," Nov. 6 (9-11 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Shatner And Matheson Set For Series

William Shatner and Tim Matheson will guest-star in segments of "How the West Was Won," the epic western saga set to air in January on ABC-TV with James Arness, Bruce Boxleitner and Fionnula Flanagan starring.

Shatner portrays a blind military officer who has survived a bloody massacre. Matheson, who starred in "The Quest" series last year, portrays a young quick-tempered gunslinger.

Jeraldine Saunders: A Prolific Writer Has Boatload Of Stories

Author Jeraldine Saunders had another occupation, and it's one that might stump the "What's My Line" panel.

Jeraldine wrote a highly successful novel called "The Love Boat," which is the basis for "The Love Boat," airing as "The CBS Late Movie" Monday, Nov. 7, at 11:30 p.m. on CBS-TV. (This movie also spawned a series which debuted on television this fall.)

The film concerns the comedic adventures and misadventures of a group of people aboard a cruise ship traveling from California to Mexico and was filmed in part aboard the Sun Princess on the same route.

Regular passengers mingled with guest stars Don Adams, Tom Bosley, Florence Henderson, Gabe Kaplan, Harvey Korman, Cloris Leachman, Hal Linden and Karen Valentine.

Jeraldine Saunders was also the first — and only to her knowledge — woman cruise director on the seas. Watching and listening to passengers for a number of years inspired her novel and she says she's got enough material for many, many more.

"You become sort of a mother confessor for 700 people," Jeraldine says.

"There's a sort of camaraderie on the sea. People open up and say and do things they wouldn't anywhere else. Compared to a flight, you're on a ship for a long time and have time to get involved."

Some of the hazards of the trade include long hours. Jeraldine says that four hours sleep a night is a luxury. Also, it's difficult being a walking complaint department and captive audience for that number of people.

"It's a seductive life," she states. "Too much food, for one thing. Fortunately, I don't drink or smoke. Booze, at sea, has done in many a cruise directors."

Jeraldine is free to say that the characters in her book are 99 percent fact rather than fiction, but of course she has changed names and situations enough to protect the innocent, or guilty, as the case may be.

"In a sense, my book is an expose of cruise lines, but the odd thing is that its publication didn't hurt my career as a cruise director one iota," she says.

"In fact, I've gotten all kinds of offers from other steamship lines, but I'm too busy writing books."

Brestoff Surprises His Mom

Richard Brestoff, co-starring as Yeoman Hunkle in "Operation Petticoat," recalls that his first appearance before TV cameras at age nine was a showstopper, but not in the traditional sense. His mother, singer Dee Parker, was host of a live variety series in Los Angeles, and asked Richard if he would like to appear on the show and "just talk." Richard was game. When he came on stage, his mother said brightly, "And who do we have here?"

Richard stopped in his tracks. "What kind of talk is that?" he asked. "You know darn well who I am." After one of television's longest pauses, his mother faced the camera. "I was going to tell you this is my son," she said. "Now, I'm having second thoughts."

Turbulent 60's Is Dramatized

"Loose Change," the dramatization of Sara Davidson's best-selling book about the impact of the turbulent 1960s on three young women, has gone into production as a six-hour NBC Novel For Television.

Cristina Raines, Laurie Heineman and Season Hubley star as three young 1960s women whose evolution into the 1970s reflects the turmoil of their formative years during America's era of protests and mirrors the change in women's roles, professionally and personally.

The mini-series comprises three two-hour segments, and is now being filmed at the University of Southern California and Los Angeles locations.

The television adaptation of Davidson's book follows the three women in college at Berkeley where the era of protest began (Part I); as they succeed in their chosen careers (Part II); and as they resolve conflicts in their personal lives and discover their direction in the 1970s (Part III).

Raines, who stars as college-reporter-turned-journalist Kate Evans, had the starring role in "Sunshine" a television movie portrait of a young dying woman, and recently starred in the motion picture, "The Sentinel."

Heineman, who plays radical activist Jenny Reston, was featured in the movie "Save the Tiger" and portrayed Sharlene Matthews in the daytime series "Another World."

BARBEAU TO STAR IN CBS PILOT

Adrienne Barbeau of "Maude" will star in "The Fighting Nightingales," a half-hour comedy pilot to air on CBS-TV.

Fantasies Revealed

Television star Lindsay Wagner steps outside the Bionic Woman to reveal her favorite comedy fantasies in a special hour of music and variety acts with special help from Paul Anka; her real-life husband, Michael Brandon; Theodore Wilson, Vincent Price, Avery Schreiber and Vito Scotti in "Lindsay Wagner — Another Side of Me," airing Monday, Nov. 7, 8 to 9 p.m., on ABC-TV.

Fantasticizing about things she has "always wanted to do," Ms. Wagner is seen as a drum majorette marching the Locke High School Band of Los Angeles down a freeway ramp to world-famous Hollywood Boulevard and Vine Street. She also performs in a spectacular water ballet, pretending she is Esther Williams, with the Meraquas Synchronized Swim Team of Tustin, Calif.

Among other program highlights are a "Camelot" fantasy sequence in which Lindsay sings and dances with Michael Brandon, and a "What Would They Say" production in which the couple frolics in the snow while planning their first home. In another segment, Ms. Wagner portrays a comic heroine of the Old West who continually must save her fiancé (portrayed by Vito Scotti) from a trio of 'heavies' (played by Vincent Price, Avery Schreiber and Theodore Wilson). Paul Anka and Ms. Wagner share a musical segment in which they sing some of his songs.

Recording Star Is Series' Guest

"Happy Days" viewers saw Fonzie lose his heart to the finger-snapping Pinky last season, who eventually rode off into the sunset on her hot-pink motorcycle.

Now her little sister, Leather, arrives in Milwaukee in search of a job for her singing group, Leather and the Suedes. Richie, Potsie and Ralph Malph eagerly accept the girls, but what about "The Fonz" (Henry Winkler)? Recording star Suzi Quatro plays Leather Tuscadaro, who hits a wrong note the first time she's with Fonzie in "Fonzie's Girl Rock Group Part I," airing Tuesday, Nov. 8, 8 to 8:30 p.m., on ABC-TV.

Suzi Quatro makes her home in London, but she was born and raised in Detroit, the city that is frequently referred to as the world capital of rock and roll. In 1965, when she was just 15-years-old, Suzi formed her first professional group — Suzi Soul and The Pleasure Seekers — that eventually evolved into Cradle. As they developed, the Detroit rock and roll scene grew to worldwide prominence, bringing talent scouts by the score into the Motor City.

England's legendary hit-maker, Mickie Most, saw Suzi in 1971 and immediately took her back to England to make her a star.

Her music combines the brutal, hardnosed rock and roll that Detroit has always been known for with the right, rhythmic, almost sophisticated rock and roll that has been coming out of London in recent years.

PBS Presents Bluegrass

PBS will present "An Evening of Bluegrass," from Wolf Trap Farm Park for the Performing Arts, Tuesday, Nov. 8, at 8 p.m.

The 60-minute color special was taped this past summer at the Bluegrass Festival at Wolf Trap.

The festival, which drew some of the top entertainers in the bluegrass and country music field, points up the diversity of programs Wolf Trap offers each year.

Wolf Trap, the country's only national park for the performing arts, presents a wide range of entertainment — from bluegrass to ballet, from jazz to opera.

The 117-acre Park, located near Washington D.C., was established by an Act of Congress in 1966 on Virginia farmland donated by Catherine Filene Shouse.

Leather Tuscadaro (Suzi Quatro) hits a wrong note when she first meets Fonzie (Henry Winkler) in "Fonzie's Girl Rock Group Part I" an episode of "Happy Days," airing Tuesday, Nov. 8 (8-8:30 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Strolling Can Be Perilous

There are times when strolling can be a perilous exercise for Andy Griffith. Andy, who stars in "Street Killing," the "Tuesday Movie of the Week" Nov. 8, at 11:30 p.m. on ABC-TV, is sleepwalker.

"There's simply no cure for it," Andy says. "It manifests itself only when I have some kind of emotional problem. I've been known to have elaborate conversations with my family or raid the refrigerator for some elaborate meals, all unbeknownst to myself."

Andy and his family live in a large house in Toluca Lake, Calif., which has an intricate alarm system as well as a lock system on all doors leading to the outside. They have to be opened with keys.

"People think I'm trying to keep burglars out," Andy says. "Not so. It's to keep me in. I'm not as likely to prowl around and find a key to let myself out."

However, before I had the lock system installed, I've been known to go out in my sleep."

In addition to being an actor, Andy is also a stand-up comedian who often plays Las Vegas and other cities. He lives in mortal fear of stalking around a hotel in his sleep.

Kirk Douglas, Alexis Smith In Susann's 'Once Is Not Enough'

Kirk Douglas and Alexis Smith star in the lavish tale of love and money among the powerful, glamorous jet set, "Jacqueline Susann's Once Is Not Enough," based on the runaway best seller, to be broadcast on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movies," Nov. 9, 9 to 11:15 p.m., on CBS-TV.

The movie co-stars David Janssen, George Hamilton, Melina Mercouri, Gary Conway, Brenda Vaccaro and Deborah Raffin.

Douglas portrays a washed-up movie producer who marries the fifth wealthiest woman in the world (Smith) so that he can continue to keep his daughter in the opulent style to which she is accustomed. The heiress tries to promote a romance between her new stepdaughter (Miss Raffin) and a rich man-about-town (Hamilton), but the young woman prefers a hard-drinking Pulitzer prize-winning novelist (Janssen).

Melina Mercouri portrays a reclusive former movie star who is an intimate friend of the heiress. Brenda Vaccaro is the daughter's former schoolmate and good friend, now the man-hungry editor of a glamour magazine. Gary Conway is a dropout astronaut whose beach house becomes the scene of an amorous rendezvous.

"Jacqueline Susann's Once Is

Not Enough" is the best film to be made from one of her novels, and the cast is high-powered and brings an impressive degree of credibility to what is essentially a poshly-appointed soap opera.

Throughout the film the performances are exceptionally good. Douglas, Janssen and Smith bring strong conviction, and Raffin's unaffected, charming screen presence should win viewer favor.

The bond-fide scene stealer is Vaccaro who adds so much vitality to the comic role of a foul-mouthed magazine editor.

The plot, of course, is typical of the late authoress' prior novels with chic settings at New York's Plaza Hotel, East Hampdens and Spain. It's overt enough to encourage a guessing game (Is it Garbo? Mike Todd? Norman Mailer?) and covert enough to have discouraged libel suits.

Martin Salutes Queen

Dean Martin, now in his 13th consecutive season with NBC-TV as host-performer on his celebrity roasts and specials, joins host Bob Hope and an international galaxy of stars on "America Salutes the Queen," the three-hour entertainment event celebrating Queen Elizabeth's Silver Jubilee, to be presented on NBC-TV Nov. 29.

Martin is the latest American personality to join Hope for the star-studded event. Celebrities from the United States include Julie Andrews, Paul Anka, Harry Belafonte, Carol Burnett, Bing Crosby, Alan King, Shirley MacLaine and the Muppets.

Deborah Raffin plays the adoring daughter of a washed-up film producer (Kirk Douglas), in "Jacqueline Susann's Once Is Not Enough," to be broadcast on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movie," Nov. 9 (9-11:15 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Explosive Emotions Threaten Marriage

Dennis Weaver and Sally Struthers star in "Intimate Strangers," a riveting contemporary drama about a couple who find their love for each other cannot overcome explosive emotions which threaten to destroy their marriage, airing as "The ABC Friday Night Movie" Nov. 11, 9 to 11 p.m., on ABC-TV.

Larry Hagman and Tyne Daly co-star with special guest stars Melvyn Douglas.

In "Intimate Strangers," Donald and Janis Halston (Weaver and Miss Struthers) have, by all appearances, the typical American marriage. But their life together is threatened by Donald's inability to control his emotions under pressure. Often angry and frustrated, he takes out his aggressions on Janis' leaving her hurt and confused about her future with the man she loves.

The nuance Weaver brings to dramatic roles has left an indelible impression on TV audiences. His characterization of "Chester," the companion to Marshal Matt Dillon on the "Gunsmoke" series, is one of the best-remembered portraits in television history. Not content to let viewers remember him only as Chester, Weaver left "Gunsmoke" after nine seasons to establish distinct images in "Kentucky Jones," "Gentle Ben" and "McCloud."

Weaver's versatility was further proven in recent years with the TV movies "The Rolling Man," "Female Artillery," "The Forgotten Man" and "Terror on the Beach." His excellent portrayal of the troubled Donald Halston in "Intimate Strangers" is even stronger proof of his dramatic capabilities.

He is also a man who senses an obligation to his fellow actors. When Weaver felt changes should be made in the Screen Actors Guild, he ran for the presidency of the guild as an independent candidate — and won handily. After serving for two years he declined to run for a second term.

Flexibility is another of Weaver's hallmarks. He was considered a blue chip athletic prospect in football and basketball in his native Joplin, Mo. and juggled his time between athletics and drama at Oklahoma University.

He placed sixth out of 36 entrants in the decathlon at the 1948 Olympic Games Trials.

Enjoys Analyzing Politics

Actor Barry Gordon plays psychologist Charlie Harrison on "Fish," but he admits that the study of psychology has never been one of his principal preoccupations. On the other hand, he is intensely interested in political science, the subject in which he majored at UCLA. In addition to following current events, Gordon is an avid reader of weighty political tomes and is quite conversant about the greatest political theoreticians of history. Asked whether he might consider running for office, Gordon said, "Not in the immediate future. Perhaps in ten years or so. For the moment, I'd like to get the most of what I can from the acting experience."

Darleen Gets Insight On 'The Oregon Trail'

Darleen Carr, Rod Taylor's pretty co-star on "The Oregon Trail" (Wednesdays 9 to 10 p.m., on NBC-TV), has spent an entire summer reliving an era of history that has convinced her the 1970s are more to her liking. "Just being out here alone and doing a show totally outdoors is enough to give you an indication of what the pioneers on the Oregon Trail went through," commented the actress, who plays wagon train traveler Margaret Devlin in the weekly series. "Then you magnify that and you put yourself in that time, and you know what they really went through."

The physical elements, such as drought, snow, rain, heat, and diseases such as cholera and dysentery, were fought all along the trail, Darleen has learned from research for the series. "A grave was dug every 80 yards along the trail. People got snowed in and eventually, rescue parties tried to get in, but they weren't always successful," she explained. "The pioneers had to be tough, spiritually, mentally and physically." Since doing the series, Darleen has found she's had to be tough. "When you've ridden in a wagon all day, you can begin to understand what it means to be really uncomfortable," she said. Now that Darleen has gotten a taste of life on the trail, she's convinced that she prefers living right now. "I would never have liked living in that period," she said emphatically. "I'm glad I'm living right now, just from the intellectual and scientific advances and the amazing age we're living in. There's just no comparison." "However, there's something to be said for the simplicity with which the pioneers lived their lives. There were fewer emotion problems because they worked so hard. They worked at the business of living. I think we have a lot of neuroses now because of the age we're living in — our life style is so different. But I'll take the neuroses anytime," she said with a smile.

'The Royal Family' To Appear On PBS

"The Royal Family," George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber's affectionate look at the foibles of an American theatrical clan, will be shown on "Great Performances" Wednesday, Nov. 9, at 9 p.m., on PBS. Eva LeGallienne, Rosemary Harris, Sam Levene and Ellis Rabb are featured in an all-star cast in this production that was adapted from its 1975 Broadway revival. "The Royal Family" is part of a drama mini-series exploring the offstage lives of people in the theater.

Originally written and staged in 1927, "The Royal Family" is a satirical, yet touching comedy based on overpowering theatrical families. The portrayal of three generations of Cavendishes has been most often compared to America's dominant show business empire, The Barrymores. Writing in "The New York Post," Martin Gootfried described the play as "a model of activity. There is so much going on you are involved in an action rather than simply listening to one line of snappy dialogue after another..."

"The Cavendish family seem hardly like today's star actors, who try so hard to be ordinary people. The Cavendishes spend their offstage lives playing star roles: Fanny, the grand old lady of the theater; Tony, the flamboyant matinee idol; Herbert, the aging leading man. Julie is the only one who seems contemporary in the script. Yet their egotism, their fear of age, the obsession with their work are as true of actors today as then."

Eva LeGallienne is truly one of the greatest ladies of the theater, with more than 63 years on stage. She has long been devoted to repertory theater, and in 1926 she founded the Civic Repertory Company in which she acted, produced, directed and managed for eight years.

Rosemary Harris' career has comprised a boundless variety of roles from Desdemona to George Sand in the popular series "Notorious Woman," the Blanche DuBois in "Streetcar Named Desire" at Lincoln Center.

BUMPY TRAIL — Darleen Carr, who co-stars on "The Oregon Trail" Wednesdays (9-10 p.m.) on NBC-TV, has learned how grueling it was for the pioneers who traveled in wagons cross-country along untried, bumpy roads. "I would never have liked living in that period, I'm glad I'm living right now," she says.

Tank Versus Damaged Plane

Two American pilots in a damaged plane that cannot fly but can taxi along the ground are pursued by a German tank and its crew across desert wastes in North Africa in "Death Race," the "CBS Late Movie," Wednesday, Nov. 9, at 12:45 a.m., on CBS-TV. The action in the film takes place after the World War II Battle of El Alemein with German Marshal Rommel's troops in retreat.

Lloyd Bridges stars as a German General commanding the tank, with Doug McClure and Roy Thinnes starring as the two Americans who become his prey. Also starring is Eric Breaden as the tank sergeant.

Labelled Hilarious

Many of the cards, letters and telephone calls pouring in to ABC's West Coast office seem to have the same theme. They ask: "Who is that guy, and why is he doing that?"

That guy is Bill Saluga, formerly of the ACE Trucking Company comedy group and now a regular on ABC-TV's hit comedy-variety series, "Redd Foxx" (Thursdays, 10 to 11 p.m., on ABC-TV). What he's doing is a comedy run called the "Johnson routine" which he invented and made famous.

Janssen Stars In Late Movie

David Janssen stars as a psychologist who tries to civilize a young boy found running with a pack of wild dogs in "Stalk the Wild Child," the "CBS Late Show" Thursday, Nov. 10, at 11:30 p.m. on CBS-TV.

Benjamin Bottoms portrays Cal, the wild boy, as a youth and his brother, Joseph, plays him as he grows into manhood. Also in the film is Trish Van Devere.

The screenplay by Peter Packer is based on true stories throughout history of children found living wild.

After hunters discover the feral (wild) child, he is taken to a university medical center where Dr. James Hazard, a behavioral psychologist, is excited by the prospects of being able to study the boy first-hand. Assisting him is Maggie Fletcher (Ms. Van Devere), a speech therapist who attempts to break through Cal's resistance and teach him to speak.

The drama was filmed on location in Carmel and at other Southern California locations.

Janssen's childhood was considerably different from that of Cal, the young boy the film is centered around. At age nine, David made his acting debut as Johnny Weismuller's kid brother in "Swamp Fire." Another early role was with ice skating star Sonja Henie in "It's a Pleasure."

Stardom came his way years later when he won the title role in the TV series, "Richard Diamond, Detective." This was followed by numerous stage appearances, the hit series "The Fugitive," and "Harry-O."

Trish Van Devere, married to noted actor George C. Scott, made her screen debut opposite Carl Reiner in the comedy, "Where's Poppa?" She has since co-starred in several movies, frequently sharing top-billing with her husband.

FORMIDABLE TASK — Ben Bottoms stars as a boy who is discovered after years of living in the wilderness with wolves and David Janssen portrays a psychologist who tries to help the boy to live in the civilized world in "Stalk the Wild Child, airing as the "CBS Late Movie," Thursday, Nov. 10 at 11:30 p.m. on CBS-TV.

Country Awards To Rebroadcast

Pat Boone and Patti Page will star as co-hosts, and LeVar Burton, who starred as Kunta Kinte in "Roots," will be among the presenters for the 12th annual presentation of the "Academy of Country Music Awards," which will be rebroadcast as the "Thursday Night Special" Nov. 10, at 11:30 p.m. on ABC-TV.

Country music began as poor-man's music. It was born with the plaintive ballads of the Appalachian mountaineers, folks who for centuries kept their music as isolated as their lives. Then, when the early magical days of gramophones and vintage radios dawned, 'hillbilly' music was born, spilling over an unknown population.

Today, country music is all grown up. From its back-porch strumming milieu into a structured urban culture, the music has gained stature.

Although its demise was forecast when electric guitars, violins and brass intruded, country music quietly boomed, instead, and—in the 1960s—country records started outselling classical and jazz.

Appearing as presenters of the awards show are David Soul, star of "Starsky and Hutch," and Donny Most of "Happy Days," along with country music favorites Mickey Gilley, Freddie Hart, Marty Robbins, Loretta Lynn, T.G. Shepherd and Crystal Gayle, Donna Fargo, Don Williams, Ronnie Milsap, rodeo star Larry Mahan, actors Claude Akins and Joe Campanella, and actress Lynn Marta.

The all-star cast of performers for the program includes Freddy Fender, Milsap, Williams, Mel Tillis and Ms. Fargo.

Awards were presented in nine categories: Entertainer of the Year, Female Vocalist of the Year, Male Vocalist of the Year, Song of the Year, and Most Promising Male and Female Vocalist of the Year.

THREE CO-STARs

Claude Akins, Steve Lawrence and George DiCenzo co-star in "Cop Con," a "Police Story" special now in production for NBC-TV.

Also cast are Dennis Dugan, Val DeVargas, James Whitmore, Jr., Cheryl Miller, Robert Emhardt, Debra Ryan and Warren Stevens.

Pike's Peeks

HOLLYWOOD — You'd never hear it from Ole' Blue Eyes himself, but...200 music students have gone to college on Frank Sinatra Scholarship funds.

"Wonder Woman" co-star Lyle Waggoner is huddling with CBS about the possibility of a series based on the comic book character Terry, of "Terry and the Pirates."

NBC's coming up with yet another sudsy 'soaper.' This one is "For Richer For Poorer," and it's supposed to begin in December.

"Good Morning America" host David Hartman and his wife Maureen are a happy twosome these days...Their son, Brian, arrived last month.

Sally Struthers fractured her nose during a Kung Fu lesson, but she held true to the old adage, "The show must go on." Incidentally, when asked if she'll stay with the series for another season, she said she's "negotiating" with CBS for "my own thing."

A 45-year-old New York schoolteacher who's a novice at TV writing has won the first "ABC Theatre" Award for the teleplay, "The Last Tenant." The lucky guy, George Rubino, was given a check for $10,000 by ABC's president, Fred Silverman.

Lawrence Welk is in for a big surprise when he catches daughter-in-law Tanya's night club act in a Los Angeles watering hole, Tanya's chirping in a far different kind of bandstand environment than Welk's.

There's nothing cheap about NBC's "CHiPs" — the producers have acquired five handsome Rolls Royces for the filming of the "Name Your Price" episode.

A segment of the upcoming "Lucan" series required star Kevin Brophy to spend several days working with four full-grown timber wolves. "I must admit I was a bit freaked-out at the thought of working with four wolves," quipped Kevin, "but who knows, they might have been a little nervous about working with me."

Carroll O'Connor's mother was visiting him in California when he was filming the TV special, "The Last Hurrah," and he put her to work. As a result, she has a small part in the show.

Changes Are Noted In Daytime Viewing

"Guiding Light," which began as a 15-minute serial more than 40 years ago and has remained one of the most popular daytime dramas after 25 years on television, will expand from a half-hour to a full one-hour presentation beginning Monday, Nov. 7, 2:30 to 3:30 p.m., on CBS-TV.

In expanding to an hour-long format, "Guiding Light" follows "As the World Turns" (1:30 to 2:30 p.m.), the Network's only other one-hour serial, which went to its longer version in December 1975.

With the expansion of "Guiding Light," the following additional changes in the daytime schedule also become effective on Nov. 7:

"All in the Family," rebroadcasts of the popular nighttime series, will move to 3:30-4 p.m.

"Match Game '77," with host Gene Rayburn, will move to mornings at 11-11:30 a.m.

"The Price Is Right," the Network's only one-hour game show, with host Bob Barker, moves to 10-11 a.m.

"Here's Lucy," seen in daytime rebroadcasts since May 1977, had its final program Nov. 4.

Hackman Stars In 'Night Moves'

Gene Hackman stars as private eye Harry Moseby, and Susan Clark is his unfaithful wife, Ellen, in "Night Moves," to air as a special movie presentation on Friday, Nov. 11 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Film director Arthur Penn's aptitude for bringing contemporary meaning to time-honored movie genres was memorably demonstrated by his treatment of gangster melodrama in "Bonnie and Clyde," and epic Western heroics in "Little Big Man." Now Penn has successfully tackled another venerable format — the detective story — with "Night Moves," which will be broadcast as a special movie presentation Friday Nov. 11, 9 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Academy Award-winner Gene Hackman stars as Harry Moseby, and other cast members include Melanie Griffith, Edward Binns, Susan Clark and Jennifer Warren.

As a private investigator, Harry Moseby is hired by a former movie actress to find her runaway daughter. He takes the job, if for no other reason than to escape his failing marriage to his wife, Ellen (Clark). But little does he realize that the seemingly routine case will involve him in a bizarre story of smuggling and murder.

'Roots' Impact Is Viewed

"Roots — One Year Later," a one-hour special examining the far-reaching influence of Alex Haley's Pulitzer Prize-winning best-seller along with the epic 12-hour television production, will air in January to mark the first anniversary of the milestone television event.

Louis Gossett, Jr., who recently won an Emmy for his portrayal of Fiddler in "Roots," will co-host the special with another star from the TV production.

"Roots" was totally unique," Brandon Stoddard, Vice President, Dramatic Programs and Motion Pictures for Television, ABC-TV, stated. "It had an emotional impact on our cultural consciousness, transcending best-seller lists, television ratings, awards, citations and other traditional indications of success. From the distance of a year we can more accurately examine its influence in such major areas as genealogical research, black history studies and general racial understanding in this country. And, in response to widespread interest, we can find out 'what's happened since' to Alex Haley, the people involved in bringing his book to life on the screen and the many people around the world whose lives it touched."

Among the wealth of new material to be seen for the first time on "Roots — One Year Later" will be the following filmed highlights:

— Alex Haley's return to the Gambian village of Juffure in Africa, following the worldwide reaction to "Roots."

— Mr. Haley's revisiting the waterfront of Annapolis, Maryland, where the slave ship bearing his ancestor, Kunta Kinte, arrived in this country.

— A meeting between Mr. Haley, the seventh-generation descendant of Kunta Kinte, and

Dr. Waller Wiler, the seventh-generation descendant of Kunta's first owner, on the original plantation.

— Actor Lou Gossett (Fiddler) taking viewers into the still-standing cookhouse where Bell, wife of Kunta, prepared meals for the Waller family.

— Gossett and LeVar Burton, who portrayed the young Kunta in the film, making a pilgrimage to the plot of unmarked slave graves where both Kunta and Fiddler are buried.

— A reunion of the Murray family, the last owners of Kunta's descendants before emancipation, filling a small Southern church with the descendants of both master and slave — including Haley.

PUPPET'S CREATION TRACED

On Nov. 23, Nov. 24 and Nov. 25, "Good Morning America" will trace the creation of a life-size puppet at the famed Henson studios, including the inception of the idea, the development of the figure and the actual use of the puppet on stage with Bob Hope as part of "The Muppet Show."

Marquette Accepts Challenge

Marquette University returns five of its six key players that led them to the NCAA Championship last year. Marquette will take on the National Team of Cuba in an international contest on Saturday, Nov. 12 at 4 p.m. on NBC-TV.

Marquette University's 1977 NCAA basketball champions have accepted a challenge from the Cuban National Team for an exhibition game Saturday, Nov. 12, at 4 p.m. (Televised by NBC-TV).

"I'm told that the Cubans saw the Marquette-North Carolina game for the NCAA championship on TV and wanted to play the national champs," said Hank Raymonds, Athletic Director and Head Coach of the Warriors. "This is a fine challenge for our players."

Marquette originally had a game scheduled for that date with Athletes in Action, a group sponsored by the Fellowship of Christian Athletes. Raymonds said Athletes in Action "graciously relinquished the date."

"This game will come at a good time for us," said Raymonds. "After about four weeks of practice, we will be looking for a game against outside competition. Plus, it does not count in our overall record."

Raymonds said the Cubans have agreed to play by NCAA rules for this game.

"This was one of the stipulations," he said. "When we played in Brazil last summer, we played by international rules."

Several of the Marquette players have been exposed to the rougher international style of play, as Marquette faced the Russian team in 1975 at the Milwaukee Arena and made a six-game tour of Brazil in 1976.

Butch Lee, MVP of last year's NCAA tournament, also played on the Puerto Rican Olympic team in 1976.

The game also kicks off International Basketball Week (Nov. 12-21) in the U.S.

Provides Better View

A young boy and his grandmother, fearing an attack by renegades, escape by riding a makeshift raft down a dangerous river to safety in "Trouble River," a two-part "ABC Children's Novel for Television" presentation on the "ABC Weekend Specials" series, Saturday, Nov. 12 and Saturday, Nov. 19, from 12-noon to 12:30 p.m.

"Trouble River," an adventure story with comedic overtones set in the early days of the Pacific Northwest, is based on a story by the Newberry Award-winning author Betsy Byars.

"This is another exciting example of how quality drama can be successfully produced for our young Saturday audience," said Squire D. Rushnell, Vice President, Children's Programs, ABC Entertainment.

TO F.M., STAUNTON, VA.: Toy versions of "Star Wars" guns, robots and swords — as well as uniforms and jump suits — are currently being developed by toy makers and will hit the stores sometime after Christmas. The movie's impact was much greater than anyone expected and the toy industry was caught off-guard.

TO E.D.B., FLORENCE, S.C.: Alberta Grant played the part of Liz Hillyer on "The Edge of Night" a few years ago.

TO J. PRICHARD, PILOT MOUNTAIN, N.C.: Jack Klugman and Tony Randall co-starred as Oscar and Felix in "The Odd Couple," that hysterical TV series that ran from 1970 to '75.

TO R. GRAHAM, LAKE CITY, S.C.: Greg Harrison and Heather Menzies play Logan and Jessica on "Logan's Run." Both have made guest appearances on TV, but this is their first series. Incidentally, Heather played Louisa Trapp in "The Sound of Music" and is married to actor Bob Urich. Write to them c-o CBS-TV, 7800 Beverly Blvd., Hollywood, Calif. 90036.

TO L. RUSSELL, HOPEWELL, VA.: Actor Tony Curtis had a non-smoker's commercial on TV for awhile. He'd walk out before the cameras and say, "I quit." John Wayne is another performer who's also extolled the virtues of breaking the smoking habit.

TO J. GILLESPIE, EFFINGHAM, S.C.: Singer Connie Francis is very much alive and singing her heart out on the nightclub-concert circuit these days.

Highly Praised

A recent segment of "All in the Family" in which co-star Jean Stapleton was a near-rape victim had an "overwhelming reaction," according to Stapleton. The calls and letters she received immediately following the show were "like the opening show of the whole series." The segment had originally been scheduled for a half-hour, but was expanded because of its importance and content.

Stapleton has another highly dramatic segment coming up that concerns Edith Bunker's loss of faith.

Giants Must Reckon With Henderson

Dallas Cowboys' Thomas 'Hollywood' Henderson makes movies, judges beauty pageants, dates recording stars — and plays football with the flair of Gunther Gebel-Williams, the lion tamer and current king of circus entertainment.

Thomas Henderson beats you like he beat the Tampa Bay Buccaneers earlier this season — with two tackles, two assists, two interceptions, one forced trap and one touchdown. And, oh yes, with one slam dunk over the crossbar. "I introduced that one to the NFL my rookie year two years ago against St. Louis," he proudly proclaimed in the locker room after the game.

Now it's time for 'Hollywood' to do his thing against the New York Giants when they meet the Cowboys Sunday, Nov. 6. CBS-

TV will televise the action, beginning at 1 p.m.

It's taken the 6-2, 220-pound player three years with the Cowboys to become a starter, although in fairness to 'Hollywood,' there have been some pretty fair veteran outside linebackers ahead of him like D.D. Lewis and now-retired Dave Edwards.

Playing Eighth Season

Jake Scott is now playing in his eighth season in the NFL and in his second year with the Washington Redskins. He has demonstrated throughout his career that he has the ability to play with injuries. In fact, coming into this season, he has missed only two games, and both were last season — against Chicago and Kansas City.

In pro football's longest game, the 1971 AFC playoff between Miami and Kansas City, Scott played 80 minutes with a broken hand. He intercepted a Kansas City pass on the last play of the first overtime which emphasizes the fact that Scott was not just on the field but was effective in the contest.

When the battered Redskins limp into action against the Baltimore Colts on Monday, Nov. 7 (9 p.m. on ABC-TV), fans can pretty well expect to see Jake Scott in action. Yet, that does not mean he is not injured.

'Mr. Excitement,' Cardinals Tangle With Minnesota Sunday

Known as "Mr. Excitement," Terry Metcalf of the St. Louis Cardinals does not kick the football. Proof of his versatility will be evident when the Cardinals tangle with the Minnesota Vikings Sunday, Nov. 6. CBS will televise the game beginning at 4 p.m.

Just last season Metcalf rushed for 537 yards in 134 attempts, caught 33 passes for 388 more yards, returned 16 kickoffs for 325 yards, and 17 punts for 188 yards. That adds up to 1,438 yards advancing the football. For the record he also had one passing attempt that fell incomplete.

Despite the impressiveness of last year's stats, the 5-foot-10, 175-pounder did not have an exceptional year by his standards. In 1974, he piled up a total of 2,085 net yards with 718 of them rushing. The next season, 1975, he gained 816 yards on the ground, seventh best in the NFC, 378 yards receiving (43 catches) and 23 yards on a fumble recovery. He also collected 960 yards returning kickoffs and ran back 23 punts for 285 more yards. His 2,462 combines net yards set a NFL record.

That wasn't all that happened with Terry in 1975. He also threw a 51-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Mel Gray. In the doing he joined the very select company of those who have accounted for touchdowns in five different ways in a single season. Metcalf scored 13 TDs in 1975, nine on the ground, two receiving, one on a punt return, and one via kickoff return. In the NFL's 57-year history, only three other backs have ever accounted for TDs five different ways in one year, and they are three of the greatest backs the game has ever seen — George McAfee, Chicago Bears; Bill Dudley, Detroit Lions; and Gale Sayers, Chicago Bears.

St. Louis' exciting, game-breaking runner, Terry Metcalf will be running, catching and scoring against the Minnesota Vikings if all goes according to the Cardinal game-plan. The Vikings will host the Cardinals on Sunday, Nov. 6 at 4 p.m. on CBS-TV.

Boxing To Be Featured

National amateur boxing teams from the United States and Cuba, recognized as two of the top boxing powers in the world, will face each other in a dual competition in the Astroarena at the Houston Astrodome which will be televised live and exclusively on "ABC's Wide World of Sports," Saturday, Nov. 12, 5 to 6:30 p.m. On the same telecast, ABC Sports will also present a profile of the Cuban Olympic heavyweight champion, Teofilo Stevenson, who was burned during a fire in his home several months ago and who has resumed training in Havana. Stevenson is not scheduled to participate in the competition, although he is expected to accompany the team to Houston.

The exact makeup of the U.S. squad will not be known until shortly before the meet. During the training for the matchup with the Cuban team, the U.S. boxers have been holding several "box-offs" or eliminations to determine the American participant in specific weight classes.

'Butch Cassidy' To Air

"Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid," the smash box-office hit which first starred Paul Newman and Robert Redford together, will be telecast as the "ABC Saturday Night Movie" Nov. 12, 8:30 to 11 p.m., on ABC-TV.

The movie, which was nominated for an Academy Award in 1969, was immediately applauded by critics and audiences alike for what Cue magazine called the "magnetism of its star performers."

Charles Champlin of the Los Angeles Times wrote, "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" looks to be one of the larger successes of the year, and this is as it should be...the movie belongs almost wholly to Newman and Redford and to the bantering, low-key relationship which William Goldman's script has established for them."

The movie also features music composed and conducted by Burt Bacharach, including the theme song, "Raindrops Keep Fallin' on My Head," which he wrote in collaboration with lyricist Hal David. The song was also nominated for an Oscar.

Of novelist William Goldman, who wrote the screenplay, Judith Crist of New York magazine said, "...he makes the stuff of legendary human." She predicted viewers would find in retrospect that the movie was "more than the first rate 'entertainment' it is in the watching."

Goldman reportedly spent six years researching the two real-life bandits of the early 20th century on whom his characters are patterned. Newman, as the affable Butch Cassidy, is the leader of the Hole-in-the-Wall Gang and an outlaw who is always dreaming of new continents to explore. Redford, as his sidekick, is the quick-draw brains of the outfit. They are accompanied through a series of sometimes zany robberies and other escapades by Sundance's girl, Etta, played by Katharine Ross. Their travels take them from the Old West to New York City and from there to South America and an oddly appropriate denouement.

Cloris Leachman is featured in the role of Agnes, and Jeff Corey appears as the amiable Sheriff Bledsoe.

Nancy Malone Assumes Role As TV Producer

Actress-producer Nancy Malone has been named a producer of "The Bionic Woman" (Saturdays, 8 to 9 p.m., on NBC-TV), and thus becomes one of the few women producing a weekly prime-time television series.

Malone's producing credits include two NBC World Premiere movies — "Winner Take All" (starring Shirley Jones) and "Sherlock Holmes in New York" (starring Roger Moore).

Before going behind the camera, Malone was an actress. She starred in the "Naked City" series as Paul Burke's girlfriend, and has had guest roles in series ranging from "Twilight Zone" to "Switch."

Frustrated with the type of roles available to women, Malone joined Tomorrow Entertainment seven years ago to learn about the "other side" of the camera. After producing "Winner Take All," she joined 20th Century Fox Television and became Vice President, Comedy Development.

She is producing "A Matter of Love and Death," an episode of "The Bionic Woman" currently before the cameras. Mitch Laurence guest-stars as a young Russian who falls in love with Jaime Sommers (Emmy Award winner Lindsay Wagner).

Hosts Late Show

Singer-musician Ray Charles, one of the most influential rhythm-and-blues performers over the past two decades, will be the host of "NBC's Saturday Night Live" Nov. 12, 11:30 p.m. to 1 a.m., on NBC-TV.

Also scheduled to appear on the program is comedian Franklyn Ajaye (a recurring regular on "Chico and the Man"). The Not Ready for Prime Time Players — Dan Aykroyd, John Belushi, Jane Curtin, Garrett Morris, Bill Murray, Laraine Newman and Gilda Radner — are series regulars.

"Saturday Night" producer Lorne Michaels said the members of the original Ray Charles orchestra from the 50s and the Raylettes, the quintet of female singers that also performed with Charles, will be reunited on the telecast.

Grammy Award winner Charles and his group emerged as a potent force in rhythm-and-blues music through such hits as "Georgia," "You Don't Know Me," "I Can't Stop Loving You," "Margie," "I Gotta Woman," "It's Alright" and "Born To Lose."

Franklyn Ajaye entered show business after dropping out of law school "because of boredom," he says.

Born in Brooklyn, Ajaye moved with his family to Los Angeles at age three. He was graduated from high school in 1967 and attended the University of California and majored in history.

He spent a short time at Columbia Law School, but quit to become a stand-up comedian, appearing in small New York Clubs.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR PETE ROZELLE, commissioner, NFL

What will happen to the football field when we go over to the metric system? — June Smith, Bridgeton, N.J.

● We contend, and those who are coordinating the change to the metric system agree, that football should be exempt and the game should remain measured in yards. Football, more than other team sports, is based heavily on measurement — first and 10, third and three, etc. And to convert each football field from 100 yards to the longer 100 meters would be impossible because of space limitations in many stadiums.

FOR SHIRLEY JONES, actress and mother of Shaun Cassidy

How do you feel about your son being in show business? — M.C., Cumberland, Mo.

● I wish he'd chosen something else. I was more discouraging than approving. Our business is unstable and insecure, especially the acting part. I'd rather he'd become interested in the nonperforming areas, such as writing or producing. However, I could see his heart was set on it, and once I know my kids are serious, I'm with them all the way.

FOR MICHELLE PHILLIPS, star of Valentino

Which of today's movie stars will be remembered by the next generation, the way Valentino is today? — O.L., Twin Falls, Idaho

● I don't think anyone will be. I don't want to slight Robert Redford, Al Pacino, Dustin Hoffman or any other outstanding actor of this period, but it seems unlikely to me that 50 years hence, a major motion picture will be made on the life of any star of today. They're just not made of the same enduring stuff that Valentino, Gable, Bogart, et al were made of.

FOR ALAN ALDA, actor

Can you remember when you first felt you were making it in show business? — M.H., Mankato, Minn.

● The obvious answer is when my press interviews started picking up. I figured if people wanted to read about me, then I was starting to make a name for myself. But on a more domestic level, I felt secure when I realized I'd reached the point where I could decently provide for my family.

FOR JOHNNY MATHIS, singer

Why do you think you're still around after all these years? — E.L., Lake Charles, La.

● Because no one else sounds like me. I'm not being big-headed, but my style is unique. I'm in good physical shape — that's as important as being in good vocal shape — and I haven't capitalized on my fans. I respect them and don't want to get rich from them by putting out novelties like T-shirts with my name on them — a fast way of my getting richer and their getting poorer.

FOR PHYLLIS GEORGE, sportscaster

What got you hooked on sports? — H.A., Rome, Ga.

● If a Texas girl doesn't like sports, she can't live in the state. We had the Texas Longhorns and the Dallas Cowboys, and I grew up worshipping both of them. I was a cheerleader for six years in school and later in college. I'm an athlete, dated athletes and did everything from table tennis to water-skiing. I was introduced to games by my dad, who refereed football whenever he got the chance.

FOR JUNE POSEN, cosmetician and beautician

Some of my friends believe in long, hot baths and others don't. What's your opinion? — Cathy Lane, Canton, Ohio

● I never take them because prolonged exposure in a hot tub causes excessive perspiration. The loss of moisture brings on flaking, itching and wrinkling, which leads to premature skin aging. If you want to protect your skin as winter approaches, keep away from steaming baths — if you don't, you'll have dry skin and add a few years to your face and body.

FOR JOSEPH A. CALIFANO, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare

Would you like to see HEW split into three separate divisions? — A. Pally, Albany, N.Y.

● No. I do believe, however, that we have to integrate our services better, as states are doing increasingly with their departments of human services. By setting up separate agencies, you make it more difficult for them to work together. From the President's perspective, he needs fewer, not more, people reporting to him. By the way, there is no truth to the often-repeated allegation that HEW is "unmanageable."

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

Princess Anne and Capt. Mark Phillips seem such a dull couple. Have they ever said or done anything to make them seem less stodgy? — I.B., Lowell, Mass.

● Gossip lovers had a field day recently. While in Germany, Anne curtly ordered her husband to dance with her, in spite of the fact he'd hurt himself that day horseback riding. She also snapped at him during dinner when she asked for wine and he suggested she stick to orange juice. Seems Anne's nose was out of joint because Mark had struck up a conversation with a German girl at the stables.

FOR MR. BLACKWELL, designer

What is the biggest miracle that the fashion industry has performed? — G.A., Bangor, Maine

● The advent of the mini-skirt. The greatest miracle to come will be the fashion industry saving itself from its own self-inflicted wounds. As with all other businesses, we make mistakes, and we don't always know we are making them.

PRO AND CON

Should Federal Judges Continue To Receive Lifetime Appointments?

PRO Sen. Birch Bayh (D.-Ind.)

When the framers of the Constitution declared that Federal judges were to hold office indefinitely, during good behavior, they did so with the conviction that lifetime tenure was essential to preserve the delicate balance of power. Congress was to reflect the will of the people. The Judiciary was to insure individual justice through standards of law tested over time, without regard to popular will, and to act as a check on Congressional or Executive actions. The President and Congress were given checks on the Judiciary through appointment, confirmation and impeachment. Only by insulating judges from the political pressures exerted on elected legislators could the framers hope to maintain this system of checks and balances.

CON Sen. James B. Allen (D.-Ala.)

Rather than having a Government of three coequal branches we face the danger of the Federal judiciary being the most powerful branch of Government. There must be meaningful and lasting reform to restore balance in our Government without compromising the fundamental independence necessary for judges to interpret the Constitution and to apply the statutory law fairly. I have proposed a constitutional amendment requiring the reconfirmation of Federal judges at designated intervals, but there would be no limit to the number of terms that may be served. I simply do not believe it is in the best interest of the American people to have any public official appointed for life and to be accountable to no one.

WHAT IF YOUR CHILD JOINS A CULT?

By Jo Anne Parke and Carroll Stoner

At one point, former Eagle Scout Michael Fischer seemed destined to spend his life chanting on street corners and in airports with the yellow-robed, shaven-headed Hare Krishnas.

When Michael's mother found him working in the basement of the Krishna's Brooklyn temple, she says she was shocked at his poor health. She took her son home to Chicago, where he was hospitalized and fed intravenously to counter the acute malnutrition he suffered while a member of the Krishna sect. Eventually Mrs. Fischer persuaded her son to leave the Krishnas.

Dr. Eli Shapiro, a Boston physician, and his wife were not so successful when they tried to get their son Edward to leave the offbeat Eastern sect. The Shapiros had their son kidnapped. He fled back to the Krishnas.

Still worried about Edward's health — he is a diabetic — Dr. Shapiro recently asked a Massachusetts court to appoint a legal guardian for him. In spite of Dr. Shapiro's pleas that his son may even die without guidance, the court said Edward — who is 23 and married — is an adult with a right to live his life as he chooses.

Since the late 1960's, scores of new religions have appeared on the American scene. And, instead of fading away, many of these new cults have become well established. At a national conference on the new religions, Dr. Jacob Needleman, a professor at San Francisco State University, observed, "The new religious movement can no longer be taken as a transitory cultural aberration but rather as a central force in the profound change through which American civilization is passing."

The cults provide a way of life that, he says, fills a void for many young people. For one thing, the groups offer what appears to be a purposeful existence to youths who can't find jobs or who are at a low point in life. Whatever the organization, the recruiting techniques have much in common, as we discovered on our year-long investigation of the cults. As we toured the country, posing as potential converts, we found that recruiters first get prospects away from familiar surroundings, often inviting them to country retreats or communes. Yale psychiatrist Robert Jay Lifton calls this essential element in psychological coercion "milieu control."

In the camps and communes everything the recruit sees, hears and does is controlled by already fervent believers. Yet the process is not nearly so dramatic as the term brainwashing suggests. The change is gradual and begins when a recruit starts to conform, long before he starts to believe Jo Anne Parke and Carroll Stoner spent a year on the road investigating cults. They are the authors of All God's Children: The Cult Experience — Salvation or Slavery? (Chilton).

For better or worse they're apparently here to stay, and right now a lot of parents are frightened and upset.

the teachings of the cult leaders.

Just who are some of the self-proclaimed prophets and messiahs who command the attention of so many sons and daughters of the American middle class?

• Sun Myung Moon, who heads the Unification Church, is a multimarried Korean industrialist and recent American religious leader who was born in 1920 in what is now North Korea. This man, whose followers believe him to be divine, lives in superb luxury on a Westchester County, N.Y., estate.

The young Moonies, as they are called, live communally in Unification Church centers in every state or travel with mobile fund-raising teams. They work long hours each day selling candy, flowers, peanuts or candles to raise money for the Moon cause.

• The spiritual leader of the Hare Krishnas, A.C. Bhaktivedanta Swami Prabhupada, is a retired Indian pharmaceutical executive. After the swami arrived in New York in the 1960's, he caught the imagination of the media with his colorful parades and ceremonies.

• Guru Maharaj Ji, the corpulent young man who is the "Perfect Master" to thousands of Divine Light Mission "premies" (as the devotees of this movement are called), was brought to the United States from his native India by a band of Boulder, Colo., benefactors when he was a pudgy little boy. They set him up in a tepee on the side of a mountain so he could teach them and their buddies how to "bliss out" without drugs.

Today the multimillion-dollar-a-year Mission is administered from an office building in downtown Denver. The boy-guru lives on a quarter-of-a-million-dollar oceanside estate in Southern California with his wife, a former airline stewardess who became a Mission devotee, and their two infant children.

The mission premies often live communally, in houses the group calls ashrams, and spend their time either working full time for the Mission or working outside and turning over all their money to the movement in exchange for the privilege of living in one of its communities.

Many parents who become estranged from their children eventually turn to "deprogramming." Most of these middle-class parents know they are breaking the law when they kidnap and forcefully deprogram their adult children. They are usually law-abiding citizens who have never had so much as a speeding ticket. Yet they feel justified because they believe their sons and daughters are prisoners who have been brainwashed or hypnotized.

Just what is deprogramming? It is, simply put, any method used to undo cult influences and may involve anything from persuasion to threats. Many parents first learned about it when they read news accounts of the work of a former California civil servant named Ted Patrick, who described deprogramming techniques in his book, Let Our Children Go. His particular technique is one of force and intimidation.

Deprogramming often fails, thus widening the gulf between parents and child. Sometimes the rift becomes almost irreparable, as it has in the cases of young people who have taken their parents to court.

Another deprogrammer, Joe Alexander, has been remarkably successful in getting courts to grant parents temporary conservatorships — guardianships — over their often "adult" children so that the young people may be deprogrammed legally. Alexander and his wife Esther run the Freedom of Thought Foundation, a center for former cult members near Tucson.

Father Kent Burner, Roman Catholic chaplain at the University of Oregon, and Rabbi Maurice Davis of the Westchester Jewish Community Center in White Plains, N.Y., use none of Patrick's fright tools, and yet they have convinced many young people to abandon religious cults.

Deprogrammings can be expensive. While clergymen who do it usually don't charge, a deprogramming by a well-known "professional," coupled with the legal costs of a conservatorship, can run thousands of dollars. Parents have taken second mortgages on their homes and spent savings intended for college education to get their kids back.

Former cult members have described life in a cult to be a severe regime in which leaders make all decisions. "We were told when to sleep, when to get up, and when to eat. We were told what to do every hour we were awake." In the Hare Krishna cult couples don't engage in sexual relations in marriage unless the temple president thinks it's time to bring another Krishna baby into the world. Even so, scores of Krishna babies have been born in the United States in the last 10 years. They are the first batch of "pure" American Krishnas, untainted by the worldly temptations their parents had to overcome to find bliss in the cult. Krishna life is not strange to them. They don't go to public schools. They've never seen television or a movie. They've never tasted hamburgers, pizza or an ice-cream cone.

Ultimately, it may turn out that the cult question isn't one of religious freedom at all. It may be a question of who first violates the civil rights of these kids: the cults that entice them or their parents who want them back.

HOW DO YOU LIKE YOUR NAME?

Rate your own for beauty and euphony alongside Gaston J. Feeblebunny or Gisella Werberserch-Piffel.

Mac Aroni was a real person. So were Cigar Stubbs, Hyacinthe Ringrose and Toilet Jacobs, not to mention Goody P. Creep, an undertaker, A. Moron, who was commissioner of education in the Virgin Islands, and Dr. Zoltan Ovary, now a noted New York gynecologist. All these names and many others — some of which can hardly be believed, much less repeated in polite company — are included in the new book, Remarkable Names of Real People.

In the book's preface, humorist S.J. Perelman writes, "...many of the names included have a distinct poetic or lyrical rhythm, and I can well imagine chanting oneself to sleep by repeating Sugarporn Poopatanna and Madonna McClung. I note with regret that the chronicler has seen fit to omit a heroine of my youth, Ming Toy Epstein, whose name had the sweet, tinkling purity of temple bells."

The book publishers plan another edition, and nominations from readers are encouraged, especially if official proof of the unusual name is available. Some interesting names submitted to the publishers but yet unverified as real are Heidi Yum-Yum Gluck, Sexious Boonjug and Zita Apathy. What follows is a partial list of notable names from persons living, and dead:

If you still haven't quite found a name to suit your fancy, think about Buncha Love, Cardinal Sin, Rev. Christian Church, Sir Cloudsley Shovel. (But we guess you wouldn't want this last one. Seems he ran the British fleet on the rocks in the Scilly Islands in 1717, drowning 2,000 men.)

If you want your child to be a doctor, here's a shoo-in: by recent count there were 13 doctors Doctors, Doctor or Dokter in the U.S.; five doctors Bonebreak; one Bonecutter and 18 Butchers. Dr. Fillerup, obstetrician, lives in California, and Dr. Screech lives in British Columbia.

And if it's a lawyer you'll be wanting, try Cumming or Gooing from Louisiana. That'll getcha — either way.

"Vantage is changing a lot of my feelings about smoking."

"I like to smoke, and what I like is a cigarette that isn't timid on taste. But I'm not living in some ivory tower. I hear the things being said against high-tar smoking as well as the next guy.

"And so I started looking. For a low-tar smoke that had some honest-to-goodness cigarette taste.

"It wasn't easy. The low-tar cigarettes I tried tasted like chalk. And high-tar cigarettes were starting to taste rougher as I went along.

"Then I tried a pack of Vantage. It was smooth yet it had taste. And a lot less tar than what I'd been smoking.

"As far as I'm concerned, when I switched to Vantage, I changed to a cigarette I could enjoy."

Rays of hope. They come from the sun, the versatile star that warms the earth, grows our food, tans our skins, and supplies almost all the energy used by man. Oil, gas, coal—they all represent solar energy that was trapped millions of years ago. You can warm your feet by the fireplace on a cold winter night because the blazing log releases energy it stored from sunlight. And when you consider how much solar energy falls on the U.S.—enough to supply the nation's energy needs 500 times over every year—you realize why scientists want to harness more of it.

How practical is solar energy? There's a lot of wishful thinking on that score. Solar energy is here now—for supplementing your home heating. But it's expensive. The Federal Energy Administration estimates that a unit costing $4,875 would supply 40 percent of the average family's heating needs in Boston's climate. (The average heating bill in Boston is about $675 a year.) In some cases, like new houses tailored to use of solar heaters, this can make sense as a long-term energy saver. In other situations, buttressing the insulation for an oil or gas-heated home may make more economic sense.

"Well, what do you know? It works."

Needed: an engineering breakthrough. When scientists talk of the great potential of solar energy they're looking beyond home heating—to use of the sun to generate electricity at reasonable cost. That's where the technology is still only partially developed. What's needed are more economic ways to convert the sun's energy to electricity and store it so it's useful 24 hours a day, rain or shine. Mobil alone is spending $30 million on developing solar electricity through a joint venture (Mobil Tyco Solar Energy Corporation). But we've got a way to go, for costs thus far are 30 times those of conventional electricity.

Light in the tunnel. We think that solar cells using silicon ribbons to convert the sun's energy to electricity offer the most hope. If the manufacture of such cells can be improved through large-scale research, mass-production could be possible by 1990. According to the Energy Research and Development Administration, solar cells could represent 20 percent of all the electricity generating capacity added annually by the year 1990. Promising as solar energy is, it offers no immediate easy solutions to the nation's energy problems. And if politicians put too much hope in it helping soon, we could all be burned.

IS THE STOCK MARKET FOR EVERYONE?

The trick is in learning to buy when the "specialists" buy — and to sell when they sell.

By Richard Ney

Most investors are totally unprepared for the market's predictable turmoil. So, unsurprisingly, they ultimately discover they would have done far better had they kept their money in the bank.

My view is that a stock exchange is nothing more than a giant supermarket whose stock prices are controlled by merchants (called specialists) who, in most respects, are no different from department stores whose basic aim is to buy inventory (stock in the specialist's case) at wholesale and sell at retail. What the investor must do if he wishes to be successful is learn to buy when these merchants buy and to sell when they sell.

Probably the worst reason for buying a stock is on the basis of "sound fundamentals." Specialists know investors buy stock on good earnings announcements. This buying enables specialists to sell at high prices the stock they bought at lower prices. The fact is, once specialists have completed their selling, you'll find more stocks dropping on good earnings than bad earnings. It has been a simple matter to condition the public to buy on the basis of good earnings since this approach seems entirely logical. However, the only factor affecting a stock's price is the specialist's inventory position or objective.

Unless you're willing to approach the market from this premise, I believe you should answer the question, "Is the stock market for me?" with a resounding "No!"

Specialists are not too tricky to compete with. Indeed, it is because the market is controlled by them in predictable ways that the average investor can invest his money safely and profitably.

In analyzing the market, the investor should keep in mind that specialists are merely merchants who wish to buy stock from investors at wholesale and then, employing the most resolute and ingenious salesmanship, sell it back to them at retail. They differ from the department stores in one major respect: when the stores conduct a sale, they lower prices; when stock-exchange merchants conduct a sale, they raise prices — sharply, and it is the excitement and optimism generated by sharply rising prices that cause the public to charge into the market. Similarly, when the specialist wants to accumulate inventory, he drops prices sharply because he knows that sharply falling stock prices will frighten the public into selling.

Investors who adhere to the following simple rules and guidelines will be able, I believe, to develop the ability to compete successfully with the specialist:

1. Only buy high-quality stocks. They provide a degree of protection that will produce more consistent gains over the long term.

A former actor, Richard Ney is a Beverly Hills investment adviser and the author of three best sellers on the stock market: The Wall Street Jungle, The Wall Street Gang and Making It in the Market.

Floor of the New York Stock Exchange.

2. Study the volume figures (amount of shares traded daily) listed in your daily newspaper for at least a six-month period or until you become familiar with what is low, average or high volume for a stock. Increased volume and big blocks (transactions for 10,000 shares or more) are the signals that specialists are either accumulating or distributing stock.

3. After a period of advance (or decline), if there is a sharp jump (or drop) of a point or more for one to three days and an increase in volume of 50 percent or more, you should anticipate a short or intermediate term reversal.

4. If the previous advance (or decline) has been extensive and a sharp jump (or drop) in price occurs followed by an increase in volume of 100 percent or more for three or more days, a reversal of major proportions may be in the offing.

Many investing difficulties vanish once the specialist is understood. If you learn to time your purchases and sales to conform to his, you will conclude that the stock market is indeed for you.

RICHARD NEY'S DEFINITION OF A SPECIALIST

Specialists are the financial elite. On the New York Stock Exchange, for example, there are approximately 350 specialists divided into about 100 specialist units. Each unit is registered in 10 to 40 or more stocks. Most specialists inherited their job from their fathers, who in turn inherited the job from their fathers. Specialists are allowed by their own regulations to trade in competition with their customers. In theory they are supposed to "maintain a fair and orderly market" by matching public buy-and-sell orders. If, however, you want to buy or sell, say, 100 shares of stock, the specialist can execute your order higher or lower than the last sale price depending on the direction in which he wants prices to move. When he dramatically raises his stock price, he receives more buy than sell orders. The specialist will sell from his inventory of stock or sell short (borrow stock to buy back at a lower price) to supply the excess demand. Conversely, when he drops his stock's price dramatically, he receives more sell than buy orders. Again it is the specialist who buys the excess.

Your child will learn how to read these and more than 300 other words after working with the very first record of The Sound Way to Easy Reading.

Try out this Phonics Course FREE FOR TWO WEEKS with your child in your own home — without risking a penny. Mail the coupon below.

If your child is a poor reader, if he has not been able to keep up with his class in school—here is a way that you can help him. Many parents have seen their poor readers gain up to a full year's grade in reading skill in just six weeks with the Sound Way to Easy Reading.

As soon as your child starts playing the records and using the charts of The Sound Way to Easy Reading you will know why it works so well. It takes the mystery out of learning to read because it teaches your child by the phonics method (the method by which most parents learned to read years ago).

Teaches with records

With this course your child discovers that letters have sounds. When he starts sounding out the letters he hears himself saying the word. He's reading!

The records drill him in the sounds of the 26 letters of the alphabet and their blends. By the time he completes the first record (about two weeks for the average child) he can read 300 words. After finishing all four records he has been taught 123 basic phonics sounds.

Once he knows these sounds he can read up to 85% of the words in the English language. It works for children of all ages—in the earliest grades and even in high school. Its records tell your child exactly what to do, so he can teach himself without any help from you.

Help Your Child Now

So don't wait for your poor reader to reach high school before coming to his aid. By starting your child on The Sound Way to Easy Reading now, you can change his entire attitude toward school—turn his sense of failure into the joy of success. Try it free for two weeks. You send no money—just mail coupon.

USED BY 200,000 PARENTS who send many letters like these:

Advanced two years—"Your course has made my son want to read. No more frustration with words he doesn't know, he just concentrates and sounds them out. In 7 months, Steve's reading level advanced two years."

Mrs. R. Collins, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

Better report cards—"If I had known about your course before, Gregory would not have had to repeat 3rd grade. In only 7 weeks, he reads and spells much better, and is bringing home better report cards."

Mrs. R. Quinn, Cheektowaga, N.Y.

From D to A in 6 weeks—"Terry has made great progress in reading and spelling with your course. In 6 weeks his grade came up from D to A."

Mrs. Ed Marsh, Ladson, S.C.

IN 26,000 SCHOOLS

teachers are highly enthusiastic

Second grade—"Your course is the best teaching aid a teacher could have. I have been using it for the past 2 years for my basic second grade reading course. My class looks forward to the record quizzes. Their improvement in reading and spelling has been outstanding."

Mrs. Diane Williamson, Chickasaw, Ala.

Remarkable improvement—"I have seen my remedial groups advance 1½ to 2½ levels in reading in 6 months and show 85% to 90% improvement in spelling. A low achievement 6th grade group showed remarkable improvement. I have convinced many teachers in our school to use your course."

Mrs. Angus Bates, Los Angeles, Calif.

Tested and Proved

In a pilot study by university psychologists, children gained up to a full year's grade in oral reading skill after only 30 lessons with The Sound Way to Easy Reading.

A semester-long study involving 214 pupils in four Chicago schools proved that the classes given The Sound Way to Easy Reading showed marked improvement in reading and spelling over the control groups.

Don't think it's all your child's fault if he hasn't learned to read. Many of our brightest children are not able to grasp some of the current methods taught in most schools today. Many educators insist that at least 40% of our children must have formal training in phonics—that they will never master reading without it!

These are the records and self-quizzing cards that can help your child gain as much as a full year's grade in reading in just a few weeks.

HOW MEN RATE WOMEN'S ATTRACTIVENESS

What's the most important part of a lady's face? Do introverted men prefer extroverted women?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Certain features in a woman's face largely determine how attractive she looks to men.
2. There is much more to a woman's attractiveness than a pretty face and a shapely figure.
3. How attractive a woman appears to a man depends on how attractive he is.
4. How attractive a woman is to a man depends to a large extent on whether they are similar or opposite personality types.
5. A woman who knows how to manipulate a man has the inside track with most men.
6. A man is most likely to remember the face of a woman that has some type of special quality.

ANSWERS

1. True. Studies at Hanover College confirm findings of other investigations showing the mouth region to be the most influential component, followed by the eyes. Hair and nose were judged next in importance. Overall attractiveness also was influenced by facial structure and complexion.
2. True. As sociologist Andrew M. Greeley concludes from his studies on interpersonal relationships, "Authentic human beauty results from a combination of the physical and the psychic, with one influencing the other. Glamor photographers have observed that after a certain age (they say 25 for most women), attractiveness is based more and more on personality."
3. True. In studies at Georgia State University, students rated others for attractiveness on a seven-point scale ranging from "very unattractive" to "very attractive." Results indicated that with male judges their own attractiveness influenced their attractiveness rating of women — and of men, too. It was found that "the less attractive male judges assigned lower attractiveness ratings to people than did the more attractive male judges...and that the reference scales of male judges were indeed dependent on their own level of attractiveness."
4. True. Studies at Kent State University showed that extroverts preferred someone similar to themselves in personality. Introverts, however, prefer dissimilarity to similarity. So whether a woman will be considered attractive by a man who is like her in temperament is likely to depend on whether he happens to be an introvert or an extrovert.

5. False. A University of Delaware study has shown that, though women who are successful as manipulators — who are ruled to a far greater extent by their heads than by their hearts — are likely to "win" in competitive situations in which they are vying with others for material goals, they do not have an advantage where romantic attraction is concerned. On the contrary, men were found to be more attracted to women who are frank, open, natural and spontaneous and who don't go in for "playing games" or pursuing Machiavellian tactics to gain their ends.

6. True. Pennsylvania State University investigators cite findings indicating that women's faces with distinctive features are best remembered — regardless of whether she is attractive or plain. Most forgettable face: the one that looks like everybody else.

Quaker and Aunt Jemima create a new Southern Table Favorite—Sweet Georgia Bread.

For generations, fine cooks have depended on Quaker Quick Grits and Aunt Jemima Corn Meal Mix to make many of the favorite dishes of the South.

Tonight, for instance, sweeten your menu with "Sweet Georgia Bread" — a deliciously unique Southern dessert bread made with Quaker Quick Grits, Aunt Jemima Corn Meal Mix, and other good ingredients. It's best when served warm with whipped cream.

"Sweet Georgia Bread." Just one of a new collection of "Southern Table Favorites" recipes you'll be seeing here in months to come. We know they'll all be favorites at your table.

Sweet Georgia Bread

- | | |
|--|---|
| 1 cup hot cooked Quaker or Aunt Jemima Enriched White Hominy Quick Grits | ¾ cup brown sugar |
| 2 tablespoons butter or margarine | ¾ cup Aunt Jemima Self-Rising White Corn Meal Mix |
| 1 cup milk | ½ cup chopped pecans |
| 3 eggs, beaten | 1 teaspoon cinnamon |
| | ¼ teaspoon nutmeg |
| | Sweetened whipped cream |

Blend hot grits with butter, until butter is melted. Add remaining ingredients except whipped cream; mix well. Bake in greased 1½-qt. casserole in preheated oven (350°F.) about 55 minutes or until knife inserted in center comes out clean. Serve warm with sweetened whipped cream. Makes 6 servings.

BIG BILL WALTON: NOT YOUR TYPICAL AMERICAN SPORTS HERO

By Barry Abramson

He was known as a radical and a non-conformist. He made statements calling the FBI "the enemy" and urged rejection of the United States Government. His long, red beard and ponytail, along with his lumberjack clothing, offended some people. He was reported to dislike the weather and atmosphere of the Pacific Northwest and to be feigning injuries to get out of his contract with the Portland Trail Blazers so he could return to sunny Southern California. He was usually inaccessible, except when he wanted to sound off about a social issue. Letters complaining about him poured into the offices of the team and local newspapers.

Today Bill Walton, the 6'11" captain and center of the Trail Blazers, is the hero of heroes in Portland and such a box-office draw that the team expects to sell out all its home games this season. It has even arranged for overflow crowds to see the games via closed-circuit TV in a theater near its Memorial Coliseum. Those who criticized Walton before now say he's a changed person. And what everybody talks about regarding him is his stunning achievement in leading the Trail Blazers to their first National Basketball Association title last season.

The new Walton cut off his ponytail, trimmed his beard and made sure his public comments were confined to basketball. His friend and former teammate, Steve Jones, has commented, "Bill's war with the people is over. At some point, he realized he's a basketball player first, a political activist or whatever next."

The somber, introverted attitude that once characterized the big center was nowhere in evidence last June when the people of Portland staged a parade to honor their championship team. Walton led the parade on his 10-speed bicycle, cheerfully doused the mayor with beer while that official was at the mike, and then joined his teammates in tossing basketballs into the crowd. He signs as many autographs as he can and praises Trail Blazer fans as "great people who help us play better because of their support."

Walton plays down the idea that there has been a great change in his personality or attitudes. "I still say what I believe and do what I believe," he says. "When you're winning games, folks don't seem to care what you say."

As he sees it, the major difference between the Walton of today and the one who spent two unhappy years with his team is that he has been free of injuries. Far from feigning them during those two years, he suffered grievously, and they affected his attitude and feelings. He had nine broken bones, tendonitis and underwent two operations.

Dick Darcey/Camera 5

F.O.S.

He has proved that an athlete's life and attitudes don't have to reflect our stereotyped image of the jock.

Basketball — and indeed all competition — was always fun for Walton as a youngster in La Mesa, Calif. His dad, a welfare department official, and his mother both encouraged competition in the household. They organized foot races up the hill to their house for their three sons and one daughter and held a contest to see which one could hold open a spring clothespin for the longest time. Mrs. Walton recalls one instance in which the children were asked to jump and try to touch the ceiling. "The contest ended when Bill began touching the ceiling with his elbows," she says.

At Helix High School, Bill was no great shakes as a basketball player until his junior year, when he shot up six inches to 6'7". He started to dominate games and led Helix to a string of more than 30 consecutive victories. His brother Bruce, a year older and the strongest in the family, acted as Bill's "bodyguard" when he played with him. In one game, a rival center kept banging Bill under the boards, so Bruce flattened him with an elbow to the throat. When Bruce went to UCLA, Bill followed him there, although Bruce gave up basketball to concentrate on football.

Under its incomparable coach, John Wooden, UCLA had already built a championship tradition. Walton enhanced it by leading Wooden teams to near-perfect season records and two NCAA championships. It was at college that he first became known as an individualist and a social activist. He was a vegetarian who didn't believe in killing animals for food. He was active in rallies denouncing America's role in Vietnam, practiced transcendental meditation and took up acupuncture to relieve pain in his knees. In his spare time, he rode his bike along the beaches and went backpacking in the mountains. He would psych himself for games by listening to hard rock music.

One thing that made it hard for Walton to adjust to Portland during his first two difficult seasons was that he had been accustomed to playing on winning teams. The team's great turnaround in his third season changed everything. Although his improved physical condition was the prime factor, it wasn't the only one. The arrival of a new coach, Jack Ramsay, proved to be significant. He had heard the controversial things about Walton, but he wanted to get to know his players for himself and arranged to talk to each individually. He spent over an hour with the center and then said, "I found him a sociable, likable person who didn't want to lose. I couldn't ask for anything more."

Walton was impressed with Ramsay's determination to stress team play rather than a star system. "No matter how much an individualist Bill Walton is off the court, he's dedicated to the idea of team play on the court," a friend of his from college points out. "At UCLA he preferred passing the ball to making scores himself. And he would give advice, direction and encouragement to the others and openly knock himself if he flubbed a play. He was always close to his teammates."

To build the team he wanted, Ramsay sold or traded players who had been concerned more with individual statistics than with team success. He brought in seven new players who would blend with Walton's special skills.

The new Trail Blazers ran their opposition into the ground in the early weeks of last season. Walton was a quick-leaping giant who blocked shots, intimidated rival centers, grabbed rebounds, started the team's fast breaks and set plays with his passes and scored himself when the situation called for it. On defense, he always seemed to know where every rival player was on the floor. "That way I have an idea of where my opponent's thrust to the basket is most apt to start," he explains. "Sometimes if your first couple of steps are in the right direction, you can break up a play that might otherwise have been successful."

When old devil injury caught up with Walton again, he had to sit out several games. This time the injury was not severe. Walton came on strong, and the Trail Blazers finished second to the Los Angeles Lakers in the Pacific Division. In the playoffs, however, Portland destroyed the Lakers in four straight games.

In the championship round, the Trail Blazers faced the Philadelphia '76 ers, which had a treasure chest of individual stars including Julius "Dr. J" Erving and George McGinnis. But individual heroics came up short when matched against Portland's team play built around Walton.

Simple living has been Walton's credo, and he sticks to it, despite his hero status in Portland. He remains a vegetarian and spends as much time as possible enjoying the natural beauty of the outdoors. He lives in an old house not far from downtown Portland with his girlfriend Susan, her 2-year-old son and some of his buddies. He now loves Oregon and has centered his life there. He keeps his political opinions within his private circle these days but remains an active supporter of the American Indian Movement.

All Trail Blazer players are asked to be involved in some community activity, and Walton does his part by staging clinics for the Warm Springs Indian Reservation. He's also an avid supporter of a local soccer team and spends most of his summers practicing with them.

Bruce Walton, who has remained close to his brother, says of him, "He's friends with everybody on his block. He goes to the park and plays soccer with the kids. He's just a helluva nice guy who also happens to play basketball."

WHAT IS HUNTING ALL ABOUT?

According to an avid outdoorsman, the experience is diverse and involves much more than killing.

By Fred Nofziger

A phenomenal 20 million people in the United States can be considered hunters, and for good or ill, another hunting season is now underway. Yet, nonhunters often cannot understand how civilized adults receive pleasure from shooting and killing. What follows is the attempt of an enthusiastic outdoor writer to justify the sport and admonish some of his fellow hunters. Some readers are sure to agree with Mr. Nofziger wholeheartedly, while others may feel he could not be more mistaken.

There is a nip in the air, a touch of color in the hardwoods, and waterfowl are winging their way in from the north. It is the time of the hunter.

Today most hunters are not just trigger pullers. Instead, they are students of the environment and its relationship to birds and animals. Hunters must recognize habitat, for example, and understand what makes it suitable for a particular species.

Fred Nofziger, a free-lance writer specializing in outdoor articles, has hunted all his life.

This, of course, is not a technical education in forestry, plant ecology or game management, but it is a start toward realizing the importance of proper management of woods and waters.

Killing is not a sport, and, thus, hunting involves far more than the act of killing a wild animal. Hunting is a diverse experience that includes planning the hunt, purchasing supplies and equipment, traveling with companions to the hunting site, establishing a camp, comradeship in the camp, beginning the actual hunt and pursuing and possibly killing an animal.

Many hunters are satisfied and feel rewarded even if the last phase of the hunt is not accomplished. They also believe that their sport offers challenge, suspense and excitement, plus mental, physical and spiritual reward.

All true hunters learn early that sportsmanship and field etiquette are essential. They learn to respect the wild animals they pursue. They discover the pleasure of the things they see, hear and smell as they walk through field and forest or paddle through duck marsh. Many develop a reverence for nature and everywhere see the handiwork of God in the outdoors.

And, as phrased by the philosopher Ortega y Gasset, in the sport of hunting, modern man can again become a symbol of courage, endurance and skill.

While a few careless, selfish persons with guns have done a great deal to give hunting a bad name, the true hunters' good examples have done much to convince the public that hunting is not bad. As a group, hunters do not have lily-white hands, however, and there is a lot of room for improvement. So if hunters are to preserve the sport for the future, they must educate themselves as well as the public.

Lack of sportsmanship is the main problem with hunting today. A good sportsman enjoys himself even if he doesn't make a kill. He derives pleasure from just being in the wilds with companions. This sportsman can go home empty-handed and still consider the trip a success.

The fair-weather sportsman is one who feels deep shame for having failed to score. He is often the one responsible for legitimate complaints. And then there is the slob hunter. He shows little sportsmanship or consideration for the laws that govern and manage game.

The pressure to succeed, to make a kill, is the most frequent cause of bad sportsmanship. The pressure is produced by the hunter's lingering fear of being branded a failure, of being laughed at and being joked about if he doesn't come home with a large bounty of game.

Sport hunters are not responsible for the demise of the passenger pigeon or the destruction of the great herds of bison or the terrible reduction of many wild animal populations. These killers were professional market hunters. The principles of sportsmanship, courtesy and respect for the law and other hunters are the same regardless of game or weapon.

Nature's creatures die by the talon and fang, from disease and parasites and all kinds of accidents. Dying by the hunter's gun is quicker and more merciful than starving and probably less cruel than being torn apart by a hawk or a fox. The hunter learns, therefore, that to harvest the surplus of game in a given area is neither detrimental nor sinful.

In short, hunting is a heritage and a source of countless hours of wholesome pleasure in the outdoors.

IS YOUR CHILD IN GOOD PHYSICAL CONDITION?

Joan Kramer & Associates

As a parent giving your children a head start to fitness, you can add immeasurably to their enjoyment of life, keep in shape yourself and bring the family closer together, doctors and psychologists say.

"The emphasis in the early years should be on participation. Every child should feel good just for having taken part," stresses Dr. Thomas P. Johnson, a San Diego psychiatrist with a special interest in sports. "Children should be offered many experiences and the chance to specialize as they show an interest.

"If we pressure young children into narrowing their focus to highly specialized skills, we invite psychological difficulties," Dr. Johnson continues. So before

One in three can't pass a test measuring the minimum skills and strengths needed to master and enjoy ordinary games.

By Alan Haas

The President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports reported not long ago that youngsters who had the benefit of early sports activity were, as adults, twice as active as those who had limited exposure. They are four times more likely than others to take the kind of exercise that promotes continued health and vigor.

Also, the American Medical Association has stated that exercise increases the ease and efficiency of performing daily tasks; aids in weight control; improves posture and appearance; increases poise by improving grace and economy of movement; reduces tension, thus acting as a natural tranquilizer; and sharpens perceptual abilities.

The need for children to participate in regular sports activities has been amply demonstrated. Studies show that children spend on the average from 15 to 30 hours a week watching television, compared with only about two hours in planned physical activity. One American child in five fails to pass a simple test measuring the minimum strengths and skills necessary to master and enjoy ordinary games.

So if you want something better than that for your child, set a good example yourself by participating in family sports activities. It will mean better health in the future for both of you.

"As soon as a child learns to walk, he can swim, run, throw or catch a ball and do light exercises," says Dr. Thomas E. Shaffer, consultant physician, Adolescents' Health Services, Children's Hospital, Columbus, Ohio. By the time a child is 3, according to pediatricians, he is ready to jog, play horse-shoes and volleyball and go climbing, hiking or canoeing with his parents.

your youngsters start comparing themselves with their peers, before they encounter the perils of winning and losing, before they feel the need to test themselves and compete in Little League baseball or Pop Warner football, show them that physical activity can be fun. "Boys are not little men. They can't take adult pressures, mentally or physically, nor should they be expected to," says Dr. Allen Kline, a Houston pediatrician.

"In unorganized play," says Dr. Kline, "youngsters are not likely to force themselves beyond their abilities, and, if they are injured, medical attention is not complicated by pressure from coaches."

"A child can skip rope, play catch or just run up and down in the backyard — along with his parents," says Dr. William Gualtiere, exercise physiologist and director of a testing and programming facility in New York City.

"It doesn't matter what form the exercise takes," explains Dr. Gualtiere. "As long as both adult and child use a large percentage of their muscle mass, wind, stamina and endurance, muscle development is maintained, and flexibility, agility, coordination are enhanced."

"Even more important, both generations will be engaged in a vital, life-saving regimen, designed to prevent cardiovascular and circulation problems later on,

When it comes to family insurance, Steve Johnson is one of a kind.

Jeanne and Bob Beals of Chesapeake, Virginia, are extremely happy with their life insurance agent.

They're very pleased with their health insurance agent.

They're completely satisfied with their homeowners agent.

"And we know our car insurance man is the best around," Bob says. "We feel fortunate to have him so close by."

Of course, whatever the Beals think about one agent, they're bound to think about the others.

Because all of them are State Farm agent, Steve Johnson. As a family insurance specialist, Steve can provide knowledgeable advice and person-to-person service on all the policies they're ever likely to need.

"If we have any question about our coverages, or a claim, we don't have to wonder who to call," says Jeanne. "We just call Steve. It's a real advantage having one agent nearby who can help us with everything."

Having a State Farm family insurance man can be a real advantage for you.

He's the one agent who's backed by America's largest homeowners and auto insurer, and one of the largest life insurance companies, too.

as well as slowing down aging and lifting the spirits," Dr. Gualtiere points out.

"Children of preschool age should take part in family games and exercise part of every day," says this physiologist. "It should become part of their regimen, like eating and sleeping. Then, when they go on to competitive sports, there is a good chance they will focus more on improving their own performance than on defeating others. Sports will be more pleasurable, less combative."

"I have also found," Dr. Gualtiere continues, "that children who regularly participate in a family playtime are less likely to be off riding skateboards, walking fences or climbing trees, activities that can be dangerous to toddlers who haven't yet learned to be cautious. I have a boy, 3, who can already run a mile, and a little girl, 2½, who runs an eighth of a mile. The important thing is that they look forward to jogging with their father, to being praised for their accomplishments and to burning off energy, which children require."

"The psychological attitude of the child toward physical conditioning is very important," says professor Joseph B. Oxendine, dean of Temple University's College of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance. "We are trying to develop children's confidence about doing things with their bodies to enhance their self-image — a feeling of respect for the mind and body and confidence in their ability to function well."

Dr. Richard A. Gardner, associate clinical professor of child psychiatry at Columbia University's College of Physicians and Surgeons, agrees: "There is nothing more ego-building to a youngster than to tell him, 'You really hit the ball far,' or to tell her, 'You rode your tricycle very well.' That is what children want to hear."

"Furthermore," the psychiatrist emphasizes, "physical activity is a potent tranquilizer. Children experience so many no-no's, they build up a lot of hostility and resentment. Sports are a socially acceptable means to work off these feelings."

"A key thing," Dr. Gardner adds, "is for parents to choose activities that are mutually enjoyable, so Mom and Dad don't build any resentments of their own. Youngsters don't have much tolerance; they may want to go on long after their parents have become bored. Care needs to be taken that neither parent nor child becomes frustrated by too much or too little activity."

Though family sports are generally beneficial, there are one or two things to watch. Children who have a chronic physical problem — cystic fibrosis or a congenital heart defect, for example — should not be encouraged to participate. If parents have any doubts, a visit to a pediatrician is mandatory. If parents themselves have not been physically active, they should submit to a stress test, usually a motor-driven treadmill. The physician will monitor blood pressure and pulse, test for any cardiac problems and then advise a suitable exercise program.

There's supposed to be a generation gap between today's young people and their parents, but no such gap exists between Bert Jones, the peerless quarterback for the Baltimore Colts, and his father, W. A. "Dub" Jones. Bert feels his father set an example that enabled him to develop into one of the most popular and best-liked players in the National Football League. His friends say of Bert: "He always hero-worshipped his dad more so than other kids hero-worshipped John Wayne or other celebrities. Even today he wouldn't do anything that he didn't feel would meet with his dad's approval."

Dub Jones starred as a halfback for the Cleveland Browns, and son Bert served as the team's water boy. (Dub's six touchdowns against the Bears in 1951 is still an NFL record for most touchdowns in a game. The record has since been tied by Ernie Nevers and Gale Sayers.) When Dub joined the Browns' coaching staff, Bert spent five summers at the team's training camp. He carried ice, retrieved footballs, and did odd jobs around the clubhouse. He also picked up invaluable pointers in throwing the football from the Browns' quarterbacks.

Although Bert showed great pitching skill in high school, he never doubted that he would follow his dad into football. "He never pushed me," says Bert. "but once I had established what I wanted to do, he made sure that I did it to the best of my ability."

Bert was an All-America quarterback at Louisiana State University and set 20 school passing records. He expected to follow his dad to the Browns in 1973, but Baltimore won the rights to him. In his second pro season he set a record of 17 straight pass completions in one game, which made him and Dub the only father and son listed in the pro football record book for individual achievements.

1973 and '74 were rebuilding years for the Colts, but they came into their own in '75 and '76 when Bert led them to successive division titles. Bert threw 24 touchdown passes last season and led the NFL with 3,104 yards gained passing. The Associated Press named him the league's Most Valuable Player, but Bert says he won't be satisfied until he leads his team to a Super Bowl triumph.

At 6'3" and 215 pounds, Bert has the size and strength pro quarterbacks need to withstand hits from linemen. He also has exceptional speed, which makes him a threat as a runner. He is most known, however, for the power and accuracy of his throwing arm. "If someone told me Bert could throw a football across Chesapeake Bay, I'd have to believe him," says Colt wide receiver Roger Carr.

Unlike some other highly paid pro quarterbacks, Bert scorns the trappings of the prima donnas and is quick to credit his teammates for their part in his success. And despite an easygoing demeanor, he is clearly the team's leader and will speak out forcefully on issues that concern them. At the beginning of the '76 season, head coach Ted Marchibroda complained about front-office interference with his coaching. A bitter dispute followed, and Marchibroda resigned. Jones acted as spokesman for his teammates in praising Marchibroda's ability and character and demanded his reinstatement. As a result, the coach resumed his duties.

Bert and his wife Danni live near his parents in Ruston, La., and Bert is associated with his dad's construction company there. Bert has his own plane, which he uses for business purposes as well as to maintain a busy schedule of off-season speaking engagements. "I love the people in my home town, and I love the outdoors, which is why I wouldn't want to make my permanent home in the big city," he says.

How to use Liquid Protein to lose 8-80* lbs. fast while naturally commanding your Hypothalamus Gland to stop sending hunger signals

O 1977

"New Jersey Doctor uses Liquid Protein to help patients change their body chemistry to achieve quick and lasting weight loss"

By Richard Swan

It's all in your head! When you're hungry, this old saying is certainly true. Most people think hunger is controlled by their stomachs. It isn't. Your 'Hunger Control Center' is located in your head. It's called your Hypothalamus Gland.

By using Liquid Protein on Dr. Litten's "Weight Loss System of Body Chemistry Control," you can naturally command your Hypothalamus Gland to stop sending hunger signals. This allows you to lose weight very quickly without the usual torturous hunger pangs. In step two, you permanently change your 'heavy body chemistry' to a 'slim body chemistry.' Like a slim person, you'll crave food less, so you'll keep the weight off.

How is it possible to safely lose weight that fast without hunger? As a copywriter, that's what I wanted to know. So I flew to Cherry Hill, New Jersey and set up an interview with Dr. Litten. Here's what I found out.

Swan: How does your system work?

Dr. Litten: My system works in two steps. First, you temporarily change your body chemistry to stop hunger signals. This allows you to lose weight very quickly without the usual torturous hunger pangs. In step two, you permanently change your 'heavy body chemistry' to a 'slim body chemistry.' Like a slim person, you'll crave food less, so you'll keep the weight off.

Swan: Why do you call your method the "Weight Loss System of Body Chemistry Control?"

Dr. Litten: Because medical research has finally revealed what overweight people have known all along — they have a different body chemistry than slim people. The key to losing weight and keeping it off is to attack the 'heavy body chemistry' problem.

Swan: What is a 'heavy body chemistry'?

Dr. Litten: Heavy people have larger fat cells than slim people. This gives them a 'heavy body chemistry.' A 'heavy body chemistry' has three drawbacks. First, it causes heavy people to crave food more than slim people. Second, it speeds up the conversion of food into new fat. And finally, it prevents fat, which is already there, from being burned up.

Swan: It sounds like a stacked deck. But can't a heavy person still lose weight and keep it off if they have will power?

Dr. Litten: Not really. And again the problem is body chemistry. When you starve yourself, your body begins to burn up fat for its energy. It also burns muscles and vital organs. You literally become a cannibal. Since some of the weight you lose is muscle and vital organs, you still have too much fat. Which means that you still have a 'heavy body chemistry.' As soon as you quit your starvation diet, your mind gives eat, eat, eat signals to repair and replace your burned up muscle and vital organs, you then gain all your weight back and sometimes more.

Swan: Can this vicious circle ever be broken?

Dr. Litten: Yes. But, you'll never break it with pills, fad diets, or by using will power to starve yourself; because none of these methods attack the real problem — a 'heavy body chemistry.' But my "Weight Loss System of Body Chemistry Control" does.

Swan: How can you change your body chemistry?

Dr. Litten: The key to my system is a special liquid protein. You drink it 4 times a day. Approximately 24-48 hrs. after you begin my system, your body chemistry will change. Your body starts to generate natural appetite suppressors. These suppressors travel to your Hypothalamus Gland and quiet your 'Hunger Control Center.' Because of this, my patients who have followed my system experienced no hunger when they skipped eating.

Swan: What about step two of your system?

Dr. Litten: Again the key to step two is liquid protein. As you quickly lose weight, your protein requirements are taken care of by the liquid protein — not by burning muscle and vital organs. You lose what you want to lose, namely fat and excess water. As your fat quickly melts away, so does your 'heavy body chemistry.' And since you haven't burned up muscles and vital organs, there are no eat, eat, eat signals to replace these tissues.

Swan: What happens when you reach your ideal weight?

Dr. Litten: The obvious benefit is that you'll have a slimmer, sexier figure. But there's an extra bonus. Along with your attractive outside appearance, you'll now have a 'slim body chemistry.'

Swan: Exactly what do you mean by a 'slim body chemistry'?

Dr. Litten: We all know the slim person who eats what he wants. He enjoys food more than you because he is not guilty about eating. But he never puts on any weight. You'll have his or her body chemistry. You'll actually crave food less. You'll be able to eat delicious well-balanced meals and totally satisfy your hunger. But since you'll be eating less, you won't gain your weight back.

Swan: Is your system safe?

Dr. Litten: It's completely safe for anyone in normal health. In fact I'm so proud of my system, I invite you to show it to your family doctor, and recommend that you follow it under his supervision.

Swan: It sounds great. But I'm from Missouri. Do you have case histories of successful users?

Dr. Litten: Yes. I can give you their stories and even supply before and after photos.

Dr. Litten supplied hundreds of case histories and before and after photos. Since space is limited, I've just shown two before and after photos, along with three stories. But before you read them, let me mention this. I did my own research and found that leading universities have conducted studies which verify the effectiveness of liquid protein for achieving rapid weight loss.

BEFORE: 163 lbs. 34" waist
AFTER: 120 lbs. 28" waist
"I was going into a size 18 dress when I started Dr. Litten's system. I lost enough weight, 43 lbs., to fit into my 23 year old daughter's size 5 dungarees. It is an easy and fast way to lose weight. It's not boring. I lost 10 lbs. the first week and I didn't feel the usual hunger pangs."

Betty Mahoney
Cherry Hill, New Jersey

AFTER: 178 lbs. 37" waist
"When I started Dr. Litten's system, I was a diabetic and had hypertension. I lost 13 lbs. in seven days. While taking the protein, I was never hungry and I worked in a restaurant, where I would pick constantly before. I was weighed every 3 days and every time I was weighed, I constantly lost 1 to 3 lbs. Now that I am off the program — and 82 lbs. lighter — I'm just not as interested in food as I was."

John Valentino
Gloucester, New Jersey

*8-80 lbs. is the weight loss range of Dr. Litten's patients.

Dr. Neil Litten explains how his "Weight Loss System of Body Chemistry Control" stops hunger. Contrary to popular belief, your hunger is not controlled by your stomach. It's controlled by your Hypothalamus Gland. Approximately 24 — 48 hours after you begin taking Liquid Protein on Dr. Litten's system, your body chemistry will change. Your body will begin to generate Natural Appetite Suppressors. These suppressors will travel to your Hypothalamus Gland and quiet your 'Hunger Control Center.' The article below will explain how you can safely lose all the weight you want — faster than you ever have before — without hunger.

BEFORE: 167 lbs. 35" waist
AFTER: 114 lbs. 26" waist
"I experienced no hunger from the beginning. I lost 53 lbs. — 8 lbs. in the first week. During my 'fat days' I slept more than 12 hrs. a day. Soon after I began the system I became an early morning riser — my energy was abundant."

Shirley Watson
Delran, New Jersey

Dr. Litten's system worked for Betty, John and Shirley and can work for you too.

WHAT CAN THE SYSTEM DO FOR YOU?

After you follow his system, the following benefits can be yours:

- You can 'safely' lose weight faster than you ever have before.
- Lose inches off your waist, hips, thighs and banish ugly cellulite bumps.
- You won't be hungry, so little will power is needed.
- Once you start, you must lose weight. If you follow his system properly, it is impossible to fail.
- You can lose as much as you want. Just stick to the system to reach your ideal weight.
- After you lose your weight, you can keep it off with your new 'slim body chemistry.' You'll actually crave food less.

Dr. Litten's system is not available anywhere, except in the New Jersey area. But you can order his system right now, direct by mail.

HOW CAN YOU ORDER THE SYSTEM?

If you wish to order Dr. Litten's "Weight Loss System of Body Chemistry Control," which includes a supply of special liquid protein and an easy-to-understand instruction booklet, simply do this: Write "Weight Loss System" and your name and address on a piece of paper and send it along with $9.95 plus $1 postage and handling in cash, check or money order. (Make checks payable to Weight Loss Research Group.) If you have Master Charge or VISA, you may charge your purchase by sending the following information: A. name of card B. credit card number C. card exp. date.

Mail your orders to WEIGHT LOSS RESEARCH GROUP, 536 Cleveland Ave. N.W., Dept. C-73, Canton, Ohio 44702.

Dr. Litten's system is backed with a 100% money back guarantee. After following his system, you must safely lose weight faster than you ever have before and keep it off. If this does not happen, or if you are dissatisfied in any way, just send it back. You'll receive every penny of your money back — no questions asked.

Supplies of liquid protein are becoming limited. To make sure you get Dr. Litten's system, why not order right now, while you're thinking about it. If you have any questions, feel free to call me, Richard Swan, at (216) 455-1474.

BEFORE: Weight: 157 lbs. Waist: 34"
AFTER: Weight: 129 lbs. Waist: 28"
"On Dr. Litten's system, I had no side effects and mostly lots of energy — more energy than I ever had in my life. Getting on the scale every morning is a joy. I've lost 28 lbs. and I'm still losing. It's a pleasure now to buy clothes in small 7-9 sizes, instead of 15-16 or larger. It's the only diet I have ever been on that I have never felt hungry, irritable or tired. My whole life and outlook has changed — a new job, new clothes. I take much, much better care of myself than ever before."

Janice Mount
Mt. Holly, New Jersey

BEFORE: Weight: 208 lbs. Waist: 40"
AFTER: Weight: 164 lbs. Waist: 32"
"Dr. Litten's system has given me the best results I have ever had out of all the diets: grapefruit, diet pills and Stillman diets. On Dr. Litten's system, I lost 8 lbs. the first week and then went on to lose 44 lbs. As a fireman, I was concerned about the loss of strength, which I had experienced on other diets. But I was able to work without any loss of strength. Since going off the system, I haven't gained one pound back."

I'M NOT MAKING THIS UP

At making up beds,
I'm happy to state,
My wife is quite good
In fact she's first rate.
She smooths out the sheets,
Then she does it once more,
She picks up the blankets
That slid to the floor,
She straightens the quilt
Till it no longer billows,
With one final touch
She then fluffs up the pillows.
Wives come, I suppose,
In many a kind:
Mine can make up a bed
But can't make up her mind.

Our love for them is boundless,
And when they're tucked in bed

We love them — safe and

A cowboy with nothing to do ambled into the local blacksmith shop and picked up a horseshoe without realizing that it had just come from the forge. Instantly, he dropped the hot shoe, shoved his seared hand into his pocket and "tried to appear nonchalant."

"Kinda hot, wasn't it?" said the blacksmith.

"Nope," replied the cowpoke, "Just don't take me long to look at a horse-shoe."

THE DOCTOR AND YOU

Biofeedback: The Science Of Self-Control

Now medicine is borrowing from the gurus. For years, the West has heard about people in India who could walk on coals without being burned, sleep on a bed of nails and control their bodies in other unusual ways. Most people dismissed all this as bunk, but lately doctors have begun to take a second look. That magic may have some useful truth in it after all.

In 1970 a report from the Menninger Clinic in Kansas told of work with an Indian swami who seemed able to speed up and slow down his heart rate at will. He could even change the pattern his brain produced on a brain-wave machine. The swami thus showed he had control over his autonomic nervous system (which governs involuntary action), a part of the body that textbooks then claimed was free of mind control.

This technique is called biofeedback. Feedback is a term from mathematics and physical science. It is a method of controlling a system by feeding back into it information about what is going on. (The home thermostat is a feedback device. It reports the temperature in the house to the heating system, which in turn sends up more heat for low temperature and turns on the air-conditioning if the thermostat says the home is too warm.)

People can learn to use biofeedback information to control their own actions. In fact, much of our learning is done through biofeedback. We learn to push a button to ring a doorbell and to stop when someone answers. We learn to drink when we feel thirsty and to stop when we feel full. Now biofeedback is coming into use for treatment of disease.

Tension can be controlled by biofeedback. A sensor, like a thermostat, is fastened over a muscle. The sensor notes when the muscle is tight and reports that tenseness to the patient by a light or a buzzer. When the light goes on or the buzzer sounds, the muscle is tight. The objective is for the patient to find a state of repose so that his muscles relax and the biofeedback sensor does not report tightness in the muscle. With training, many people can learn to relax by this method. Backache, headache and other conditions related to muscle spasms can be controlled.

The same system can be used to lower blood pressure. This time the sensor reports skin temperature. When the skin temperature goes up, the blood pressure goes down because blood pressure is inversely related to the circulation to the skin. So, by fastening a thermometer to the skin and using a red light to report rise in skin temperature and a green light to report its fall, the biofeedback system can train a patient to lower his blood pressure by increasing the circulation to the skin.

There is no magic cue for controlling the body's responses. Everyone has to learn to do it his own way. The gadgets merely point the way, indicating when the goal of relaxation or rise in skin temperature has been met. It is up to each person to identify and reproduce that state of mind and body that gives the useful result. Biofeedback is not a miracle cure, but it is certainly a powerful tool.

'Enriched Flavor'TM Menthol!

Menthol taste satisfaction no longer dependent on high tar.

For years, smokers were forced to accept high tar if they wanted real menthol flavor.

Today there's MERIT Menthol. The cigarette that shattered all previous notions about what's possible—and what isn't—with tar and taste in menthol smoking.

By cracking cigarette smoke down into separate elements, researchers were able to isolate certain natural flavor-rich ingredients that delivered taste way out of proportion to tar.

KINGS and 100's

These flavor essentials were then packed into the tobacco used to make MERIT Menthol. The result was a low tar menthol cigarette packed with extra flavor.

Only one menthol has 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco. And you can taste it.

HOW DID SHELLEY DUVALL BECOME A STAR?

It wasn't glamor or beauty that Robert Altman noticed about her when she was a naive girl who had never been outside Texas.

advertisement

Ledru/Sigma

By Clarke Taylor

At 27, Shelley Duvall has appeared in a number of films and has been a host on Saturday Night Live. Her star is on the rise. Yet she is barely recognizable to most movie-goers, which she thinks is an advantage.

"Well, I do not want to be recognized as Shelley Duvall. I want people to be aware of each of the different characters I play."

Shelley was a "groupie" in Nashville, a spaced-out cartoon character on platform shoes who can't find time to visit her dying aunt; a sympathetic Mrs. Grover Cleveland, vulnerable in the midst of the Wild West, in Buffalo Bill and the Indians; a disappointed mail-order bride in McCabe and Mrs. Miller; and in Thieves Like Us, a pale, stringy-haired, country girl, who sips cola and has an affair with Keith Carradine.

A 5'7" stick figure of a girl, with bangs, a blank-page expression and an overbite, Shelley could easily play the plain sister of any girl next door. One critic has even suggested that she satisfies "the current American appetite for grotesquerie." Director Robert Altman sees her as being able "to swing all sides of the pendulum: charming, silly, sophisticated, pathetic — even beautiful."

On screen, Shelley has appeared pathetically suspended in motion, yet her characters are hopeful. She is the girl ill-equipped to deal with adversity who somehow manages in a pinch. Here lies the special presence she lends to films. Your feelings rush toward her because she is a recognizable blend of human nature.

IF YOU HAVE IRON POOR BLOOD ALL THE VITAMINS IN THE WORLD WON'T HELP

Iron poor blood is the most widespread nutritional ailment in America today. And taking vitamins can't help, because vitamins don't contain iron.

What you need is Geritol, every day. Geritol is so rich in iron, just one tablet contains more iron than even a pound of calf's liver. Plus vitamins important to your health.

Geritol's iron can actually build your blood day by day. That's what makes it different from vitamin pills—and so important to you.

Shelley says she likes giving her audience something with which to identify, the silly things in life as well as the more sobering. "We take ourselves very seriously, but there is always a little frailty. We all make mistakes, have little accidents."

Shelley has changed her face, her accent and her posture to accommodate her varied roles. She has donned wigs and dyed her brown hair red. And in some roles her task has been to make herself appear downright unappealing.

Off screen, Shelley is graceful and self-confident, a more mature version of the screen waif. She also is more cosmopolitan, and she seems to be enjoying her success and the privilege it affords. She even appears in gossip columns along with her current love Paul Simon.

When Robert Altman discovered her, however, she was an awkward young woman who never had been outside Texas and who was apparently unaware of the director's maneuverings to size her up. They met by accident at a party in Houston, where Altman was shooting Brewster McCloud. When he offered Shelley a role in the film, she refused because she was a student. A call came urging her to take a screen test. "I got tired of arguing, and thought maybe I am an actress," recalls Shelley. "They told me to come, and I simply got on a plane [her first] and did it. I was swept away." When she landed, the 20-year-old was in Hollywood with a five-year, three-picture contract.

Shelley with current love Paul Simon.

After the second film for Altman, Shelley settled down to marry a painter. She claims she put notions of a career aside, happy being a housewife, reading novels, caring for animals (still a favorite pastime) and pitching her husband's art. The marriage "just dissipated." They divorced, and Shelley returned to her career.

Shelley was born in Fort Worth, Texas, and raised in Houston. She characterizes herself as something of a loner. She says she passed through adolescence without ever having taken drugs or taken part in other trends of the 60's. In fact, she can't recall a traumatic period of her life.

She attended South Texas Junior College, where she developed an interest in nutrition and studied to be a research scientist.

One character Shelley would like to portray is a woman who has something to overcome and comes to know herself well in the process. Considering the way she has transformed her simple, Texas life, Shelley knows something of this theme firsthand.

"I've never thought about being free because I've never really felt trapped," she says. "The women's movement has never done much for me because I've always thought of myself as free. Sure, my parents were strict, and perhaps I resent a part of my childhood as a result, but in the end, we all make our own decisions. There comes a time when you realize that nobody is going to take care of Number One, like Number One."

Shelley is beginning to apply this philosophy to her career as well as to her personal life. "I'd like to make more money. I don't want all that much, but I like to surround myself with colors I love, with an atmosphere that makes me feel calm, and it takes money to do these things. Of course, I want to be happy, to have something to care about in life — a family, a love, a career, a sense of accomplishment," she continues. "And I think you can be happy just about any place. It's like it says in one of Paul's songs, 'Fifty Ways to Leave a Lover': 'Hop on the bus, Gus.'"

OUR NEWEST COMPUTER TEACHERS

They not only give personalized instructions in all types of schools but also free teachers to help students more.

By John Boesch
and Sandra B. Currie

A 21-year-old University of Illinois physics major carefully inserts a control rod into the core of a nuclear reactor. A minor miscalculation causes the reactor to blow up. The casualties at the Illinois campus: zero. The experiment was a simulation — it happened on a TV screen.

At the California School for the Deaf (CSD) in Berkeley, a 16-year-old junior sits down in front of a teletype. She types out the letters that spell her name: C - A - N - D - Y. Immediately the teletype responds with "What lesson do you want today, Candy?" The deaf girl taps in the words "Driver Education," and the machine prints out the day's lesson.

These students are among more than 2,000,000 nationwide who have access to Computer Assisted Instruction (CAI).

"Many of our deaf students are 3 or 4 years behind in reading and writing skills," says Geoff Zowalkow, director of CSD's computer program. "With CAI, learners press a typewriterlike key to give an answer. That eliminates most of the writing hang-ups. Still, no matter what subject is being studied on the computer, the kids' reading and writing skills are reinforced by the clear block letters of the teletype.

"Educationally handicapped students need to go at their own pace," Zowalkow continues, "and the computer responds as slow or as fast as the students demand. They also need lots of drill-and-practice, and the computer is a perfect medium for this type of instruction. It's infinitely patient and completely nonjudgmental. After a brief introduction to the computer, these characteristics tend to make kids very much at ease in front of the terminals."

Typewriter keyboards and TV screens are the standard hardware featured on most educational terminals. Additional features make CAI units much more "warm" and "personal" (traits that brought fame to Star Wars two robots, R2D2 and C3PO) than their sterile, bulky counterparts of the 50's and 60's.

At Stanford University, Dr. Patrick Suppes, one of the nation's leading experts on computer design for educational purposes, has designed a CAI system that talks back to students. "Presenting spoken messages to students is desirable at all educational levels," Suppes says. "These messages are particularly important for younger children who learn as much by ear as they do by eye."

In the Ravenswood school district, several miles from the Stanford campus, a first grader sits down at the computer terminal and puts on a headset. With the teacher's help, the student types a simple message that activates the computer. The machine responds in normal speech and intonation with instructions on how to use the keyboard. The 6-year-old hits the wrong key. The computer, in reassuring tones, corrects the youngster's error and asks for another try. The correct key is struck and the computer immediately praises the child.

The simple techniques that allow children to tap the computer's powers and the new hardware have made it possible to simulate experiences difficult or impossible to duplicate under real conditions. A dramatic example is the Huntington Computer Simulation materials designed to complement high-school curricula. In biology, students trace the inheritance of eye color through 75 generations of fruit flies, and in physics they learn to safely operate a nuclear reactor.

Teacher and student enthusiasm is at the root of CAI's ever-growing acceptance. At Stevens School in Washington, D.C., for example, the CAI program has caught the fancy of the President's wife and daughter. "Mrs. Carter and Amy were very interested in our computer program," recounts Mrs. H. Wilson, principal of Stevens School. "Amy was particularly excited about using the computer."

At first, some teachers were apprehensive about the computers. Some even feared they might be replaced by the machines. But that didn't last too long. It only takes a few days for them to see that the computer is a servant, not a master. Teachers just don't have the time to bring all students lacking skills up to par. The computer does have the time.

One student summed up computer help this way: "Computers are really fun... but our classroom wouldn't be a classroom without our teachers."

John Boesch and Sandra B. Currie are freelancers who often write about children and educational matters.

My Feet Were Killing Me...Until I Discovered the Miracle of Hamburg!

It was the European trip I had always dreamed about. I had the time and money to go where I wanted—see what I wanted. But I soon learned that money and time don't mean much when your feet hurt too much to walk. After a few days of sightseeing my feet were killing me.

Oh, I tried to keep going. In Paris I limped through Notre Dame and along the Champs-Élysées. And I went up in the Eiffel Tower although I can't honestly say I remember the view. My feet were so tired and sore my whole body ached. While everybody else was having a great time, I was in my hotel room. I didn't even feel like sitting in a sidewalk cafe.

The whole trip was like that until I got to Hamburg, Germany. There, by accident, I happened to hear about an exciting breakthrough for anyone who suffers from sore, aching feet and legs.

This wonderful invention was a custom-made foot support called Flexible Featherspring. When I got a pair and slipped them into my shoes my pain disappeared almost instantly. The flexible shock absorbing support they gave my feet was like cradling them on a cushion of air. I could walk, stand, even run. The relief was truly a miracle.

And just one pair was all I needed. I learned that women also can wear them—even with sandals and open backed shoes. They're completely invisible.

Imagine how dumbfounded I was to discover that these miraculous devices were sold only in Europe. Right then I determined that I would share the miracle I discovered in Hamburg with my own countrymen.

Today thousands of Americans including those who have retired—many with foot problems far more severe than mine—have experienced this blessed relief for themselves.

Here's why Feathersprings work for them and why they can work for you. These supports are like nothing you've ever seen before. They are custom fitted and made for your feet alone! Unlike conventional devices, they actually imitate the youthful elastic support that Nature originally intended your feet to have.

Whatever your problem—corns, calluses, burning nerve ends, pain in the balls of your feet, painful ankles, old injuries, backaches or just generally sore, aching feet. Flexible Feathersprings will bring you guaranteed relief with every step you take.

Don't suffer pain and discomfort needlessly. If your feet hurt, the miracle of Hamburg can help you. Write for more detailed information. There is no obligation whatsoever. Just fill out the coupon below and mail it today.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY ABOUT THE MIRACLE:

"Your Featherspring Foot Supports are wonderful . . . Since I walk or am on my feet all day as a nurse, my feet were painful, callused, and in general poor shape. Now, my foot supports have made walking and standing a pleasure."

D.H./Wayne, New Jersey

"My husband felt a great relief and no more pain. They are truly an answer to our prayers. Only wish that he had heard of them twenty years ago."

Mrs. F.J.S./Metairie, Louisiana

"Since I've been wearing Feathersprings I have been able to wear shoes I wasn't able to wear before. Mainly because of my corns and calluses. Thanks a hundred times over."

A.H./East Orange, New Jersey

"It's great to be 70 years young again and not 70 years old. What a wonderful feeling to wake in the morning and really want to get in my shoes and start the day."

A.J.E./Baltimore, Maryland

UNCOMMON AND DELICIOUS BREADS

You needn't be an expert to make these unusual breads that should become family favorites.

By Marilyn Hansen

JIM BEARD'S CUBAN BREAD

- 1½ pkgs. active dry yeast
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 2 cups warm water (100° to 115°F.)
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 5 to 6 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
- 3 tablespoons yellow cornmeal
- 1 tablespoon egg white, mixed with 1 tablespoon cold water

1. Combine yeast with sugar and warm water in a large bowl; stir to dissolve.
2. Mix salt with the flour and add to the yeast mixture, a cup at a time, until dough is stiff.
3. Remove to a lightly floured board and knead about 10 minutes, adding flour as necessary.
4. Place dough in greased bowl and turn to grease all sides. Cover; let rise in a warm place until doubled in bulk, 1½ to 2 hours.
5. Punch down; shape into two long loaves.
6. Place on cornmeal-sprinkled baking sheet.
7. Slash the tops of loaves on the diagonal with a razor and brush with egg-white wash.
8. Place in cold oven, set temperature at 400°F. and bake 35 minutes or until well browned.

Makes 2 loaves

CHEESE CASSEROLE BREAD

- 4 to 5 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
- 3 tablespoons sugar
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 2 pkgs. dry yeast
- 2 cups hot water (120° to 130°F.)
- ½ cup instant nonfat dry milk
- 2 tablespoons shortening, room temperature
- 1½ cups grated sharp cheddar cheese
- 1 egg, room temperature and beaten

1. In a large bowl, combine 2 cups flour, sugar, salt and yeast.
2. In a saucepan, combine water, instant dry skim milk and shortening. Gradually add to dry ingredients and beat mixture hard for 4 minutes.
3. Stir in additional flour, about 2 cups, to make a stiff but manageable batter.
4. Cover and put in a warm place (80° to 85°F.) until batter doubles in bulk.
5. Meanwhile, preheat oven to 375°F. Grease 2 (1-qt.) casseroles or similar-sized baking pans.
6. Stir down batter and beat vigorously about 30 seconds. Divide between prepared casseroles.
7. Bake until brown and crusty. Turn out of pans onto rack to cool.

Makes 2 loaves

ARMENIAN THIN BREAD

- 1 cup warm water (105° to 115°F.)
- 1 pkg. active dry yeast
- ¼ cup (½ stick) butter or margarine, melted and cooled
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 3¼ to 3½ cups unsifted all-purpose flour
- Coarsely ground black pepper or poppy seeds or sesame seeds or sharp grated Cheddar cheese

1. Measure warm water into large, warm bowl. Sprinkle in yeast; stir until dissolved.
2. Add butter, salt, sugar and 2 cups flour. Beat until smooth. Add enough additional flour to make a stiff dough.
3. Turn dough out onto lightly floured board; knead until smooth and elastic.

4. Place dough in greased bowl. Cover; let rise in a warm place until doubled.
5. Punch down dough; divide into 4 equal pieces. Roll and stretch each piece right on ungreased cookie sheet to a 10- x 14-inch rectangle. Sprinkle with coarsely ground black pepper, poppy seeds or grated cheese, if desired.
6. Bake at 350°F. for 15 to 20 minutes or until golden brown. Remove from baking sheet and cool on wire racks. Break into pieces; serve in basket with butter.

WHEN MARRIED LOVE CRIES FOR HELP

Partners fail at love-making for a number of reasons, and counseling can usually solve the problem.

By Rebecca Liswood, M.D.
with Adele Whitely Fletcher

If you and your spouse are having sexual problems why not, instead of worrying or, perhaps, quarreling, sit down together and try to pinpoint what has gone wrong. I've known many couples who've talked their way out of trouble. Do not, however, expect a miracle; time and patience are needed. And should one or both of you be too inhibited to talk honestly or too feisty to communicate sympathetically, all is not lost. You still can do what thousands of people do every day — get help from someone trained by education and experience to recognize problems and offer guidance.

There is nothing new-fangled about marriage- or sex-counseling. Over the years, ministers, priests and rabbis have sought to help troubled marriages. And many clergymen have taken courses in marriage- and sex-counseling.

Many Neighborhood Health Centers offer counseling at funds commensurate with income. There are also books by eminent physicians, counselors, educators and therapists. Today anyone who has a positive attitude about sex can be rid of almost any problem. Once a physician has ruled out any physical cause for a sexual problem, sex therapy can help you understand your feelings and behavior.

Sometimes unpleasant childhood or adolescent experiences continue to haunt us as adults, even though we may not be aware of them. This was the case with a man I'll call Bill Hall. He and his wife Susan came for help when, beset by sexual disappointments, they were about to separate. Susan told me her husband downgraded her endlessly. When I asked about sex she said sadly: "Nowadays Bill hurries to make love when he can. Often he can't. We no longer have our old loving closeness, love-play and lying afterwards in each other's arms."

As I talked with the Halls it became evident that Bill felt rotten most of the time because he was constantly being criticized by his business partner. Some people could have withstood the constant belittling, but Bill had suffered from a lack of self-confidence as a youngster, and now his partner was bringing out these old feelings of inferiority again.

When Bill realized there was in fact nothing wrong with him, he had the courage to leave his partner and start a business of his own. With the tension gone, Bill and Susan found fulfillment in each other once again.

It is common for worry, fear, business stress, shock, grief or feelings of unworthiness to diminish desire and capacity. As I tell those I counsel, we are complicated creatures, indeed.

Counseling can help solve specific problems. It can also leave marriage partners more knowledgeable and aware of one another's needs and desires, which are often subtle. Here is some basic advice I have for those I counsel:

•Men are stimulated by what they see. Women can contribute much mutual pleasure by the way they dress and move.

•While women also may be stimulated visually, most still tell me of their need for soft words and gentle touches.

•Any love-play that is mutually pleasing is normal.

•Avoid using the marriage bed punitively or as a bargaining table. To do so endangers friendship and trust.

There is no reason, barring the prejudices of a past generation, we should not have the same positive approach toward our emotional and sexual well-being that we have toward our physical well-being. But some still demand defensively: "How can a stranger help my husband and me when we can't help ourselves?" The answer is that the aim of counseling is to help people help themselves.

The American Association of Marriage Counselors will supply names of counselors in any area. The American Association of Sex Educators, Counselors and Therapists at 5010 Wisconsin Ave. N.W., Washington, D.C., 20016 will recommend the educators and therapists in any area. Also physicians and clergymen, if not trained to counsel, will have recommendations.

An initial counseling session often is a pleasant surprise. Counselors tend to be warm, friendly people. Their questions are sympathetic. Above all, they want to help. Consequently a couple, their frustration lessened because they're finally doing something about their problem, are increasingly reassured as they bring their troubles into the open and regard them objectively.

Dr. Liswood, a practicing physician, is a certified marriage counselor and sex therapist.

Adele Fletcher is a well-known contributor to numerous publications, including McCall's, Reader's Digest and Ladies Home Journal.

Booklets For You and Your Family

Winter: watching your breath mist in front of your face, sloshing in your waterlogged boots, hearing your car sputter and die in the morning. To help you weather the punishment winter can dish out, take a look at these inexpensive Government booklets. Request the booklet by title and number from: Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009 and allow 4 to 6 weeks for delivery. The Common Cold: Relief But No Cure (642E. Free): Effectiveness of various cough, cold, allergy and asthma remedies; includes labeling information. Flu (129E. 35c): Causes, prevention, symptoms and treatment. Winter Driving Tips (509E. Free): Enough said. Home Heating (058E. 45c): Installation, operation, maintenance and costs of the most commonly used heating systems.

Energy Crisis

Do you start dragging around 3:00 P.M., when it seems that dinnertime will never come? A few simple changes in your schedule may provide the pick-me-up you need. "A lot of people feel worn-out late in the afternoon because they feel there is nothing to look forward to," says Dr. Herbert Hoffman, director of the Hillside Psychological Guidance Center in Queens Village, N.Y. "They think that they'll just go home, watch a little TV and then go to bed and be back at work in the morning." Dr. Hoffman says that most people put off "having fun" until the weekend, which "makes Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday pretty hard to get through." Planning something enjoyable to do after work, such as a movie, window-shopping or a pleasant walk, will help you get out of your rut. Another way of avoiding an afternoon letdown is to pace yourself better during the working day (whether it's office work or housework), doing those tasks that require the most concentration or effort early in the day and saving the more routine tasks for later. Dieters have special energy problems; they may skip breakfast and make up for it by eating a heavy lunch, which makes them lethargic. It's better to relax by eating a leisurely, but light sit-down lunch and turning to snacks such as fruit for an afternoon pick-up.

WHAT IN THE WORLD...

Tool Tips

Buying tools doesn't make you a handyman (or woman) — unless you know how to use them. If you're a new do-it-yourselfer, here are some tips on tool maintenance that will help you work more effectively and avoid injuries. All tools should be regularly checked for hazardous conditions created by wear. The striking face of the tool should be smooth and free of cracks, dents and mushrooming. If the tool shows these signs of damage, it's time to get a replacement. However, if only the handle has been damaged, it can be replaced. Tools are less likely to become damaged if stored properly, and hanging tools on the wall is preferable to box storage, where they will knock against one another. When using a hammer, strike only with the face and not the flat side, which hasn't been hardened to resist blows. Sand away any rough spots or splinters on the handle and coat it with shellac. Saws should be kept sharp and rust-free. A triangular saw file will let you touch up the teeth when they show signs of dullness and space out time between professional sharpenings. Keep the blade clean with steel wool and some kerosene or a commercial rust remover. And always protect your eyes with goggles.

Makeup Tips For Contact-Lens Wearers

If you're a new contact-lens wearer, you're probably eager to show off your eyes. But before you reach for the mascara, there are a few tips to help keep your lenses in top condition. Hard-lens wearers may prefer putting in lenses after makeup is set as the lens can pop out if the eyelid is pulled smooth to apply eye shadow or liner. Even the light pressure of the applicator can cause lid discomfort. The manufacturer that first introduced soft contacts says they should be put in before makeup because the oily substances in creams and lotions absorb into fingers and could smudge lenses. Pencil eyeliner can be used above the upper and below the lower lashes, but avoid using eyeliner on the inner margins of eyelids. Work in a clean, well-lighted area that is safe enough for a dropped lens. For example, if you make up over the bathroom sink, close or cover the drain. Hair and perfume sprays should be used before the lenses are put in — if used afterwards, close eyes and move away from the area until the spray settles. Something else to consider is the tendency of eyeglass wearers to wear heavier eye makeup. So, less might be better for your new look.

In The Swim

For almost 9 hours, Bellflower, Calif., high-school senior Mary Beth Colpo battled chilly, shark-frequented waters as she tried to set a speed record for the 21-mile swim from Santa Catalina Island to the Calif. mainland. Her time of 8 hours, 43 minutes and 16 seconds broke the women's record for the swim by more than 2 hours and bettered the fastest men's time by 6 minutes. Seventeen-year-old Mary Beth had set her mind to the swim several months earlier, when she began an 8-18 mile-a-day training program. Senior-class president with a 3.85 average, Mary Beth hopes to attend UCLA to become a physical therapist — and to keep swimming, which she describes as a "natural high."

Quick Takes

If your feet are cold, maybe you should put on a hat. At least that's the advice of specialists at Cornell Univ.'s Cooperative Extension division. They say that up to 3/4 of the heat generated by the body is lost through the head area, so when the head is covered, heat saved can be redirected to other parts of the body, like cold feet or hands. Now that's using your head. . . . While we're on the subject of heads, a survey of musicians' scholastic achievement by a national rock magazine reports that jazz musicians are the educational elite, averaging 2 more years of schooling than singers and songwriters. The magazine also says that scholastic achievement is reflected in musical styles; instrumentation tends to be more complex among performers who either scored well on their SAT tests or completed college. They also tune their instruments faster. . . . Boston may be a great place to visit, but you wouldn't want to drive there. The Automobile Legal Assoc. says that insurance rates have made Boston the most expensive city in the country in which to drive a full-sized car. Bostonians pay an average of 23.63 cents a mile to operate a full-sized 1977 car, compared with the national average of 17.08 cents a mile. . . . The Federal Government is investigating a missing-food problem — what happened to the nutrition in school lunches. A General Accounting Office survey of meals served to public-school students across the country reports that the lunches fell up to 50% short of Federal nutrition standards. The lunches are flunking the taste test, too — students tossed out 46.6% of their vegetables and 25.4% of their fruit. . . . What do kids like to chew? Bubble gum! Putting their money where their mouths are, gum-snappers spent almost $56 million on their habit last year.

16 mg. "tar", 1.0 mg. nicotine av.
per cigarette, FTC Report Aug. 77

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

Viceroy

Rich, full flavor is the promise that Viceroy makes.

And it's a promise that Viceroy keeps.

The method for delivering flavor is as simple as it is smart.

Instead of using stronger tobacco,
Viceroy uses more tobacco, and a lower 'tar' blend than Winston or Marlboro.

The result is a mild, fully packed cigarette with an extra satisfying taste. And, yes, lower 'tar' than Marlboro or Winston.

More Tobacco, Less 'Tar'
than Winston or Marlboro.

Prince Valiant
by Hal Foster

Our Story: IT WAS EASY TO FOLLOW THE TRAIL OF THE KIDNAPPERS, EVEN ON THE WELL-USED ROAD, FOR THEIR GALLOPING HORSES LEFT DEEPER PRINTS.

ARRIVING AT THEIR CAMP, THE SERVANTS ARE TOLD TO PACK UP AND HIT THE HOMEWARD TRAIL. THEN THEY SPEED OFF INTO THE GROWING NIGHT.

AT DAWN VAL SIGHTS THE ARABS. THEY HAD STOPPED FOR A FEW HOURS REST, WHILE VAL HAS RIDDEN ALL NIGHT AND THEIR MOUNTS ARE TIRED.

VALETA AND KAREN HELPED ALL THEY COULD TO CAUSE DELAY, SUCH AS LOOSENING SADDLE GIRTHS, CROSSING REINS UNDER THE HORSES' NECKS OR DRIBBLING PEBBLES DOWN THE CANTLE OF THEIR CAPTORS' SADDLES.

ASSUR FACES A CERTAIN DEATH. IN A HOLIDAY MOOD, HE AND HIS FRIENDS HAD ENTERED BEIRUT AND RUN OFF WITH TWO MAIDENS, ONLY TO LEARN THAT THEY ARE THE DAUGHTERS OF A QUEEN.

AT DAWN HIS FEARS ARE REALIZED, FOR THERE STANDS PRINCE VALIANT AND HIS SET FACE SHOWS NO SIGN OF MERCY.

LEIGHTON OLSON AND PIPELINE POLLY ARE PRISONERS OF A GROUP WHICH MEANS HARM TO THE ALASKA PIPELINE

OLSON, YOU AND I ARE RED HERRING TO COVER UP SOMETHING BIG!

POLLY, I DON'T CARE ABOUT RED-OR BLUE HERRING...

I AM WILD ABOUT YOU!

YOU ARE THE ARAB SHIP CREWMAN WHO CAN BE BLAMED

AND IT COULD LOOK AS IF I, A HEAVY STOCKHOLDER IN CALIFORNIA CRUDE, WISHED TO HARM THE PIPE-LINE!

WE CAN RULE OUT THE RUSSKYS BECAUSE THEY COULD BOMB IT WHEN THEY'RE READY!

IT'S SOMETHING ELSE! IT'S SURE IS! I LOVE YOU!

ONE OTHER THING! WHY NOT HOLD THE PIPELINE FOR RANSOM?

ALL I WANT IS TO HOLD YOU!

THEY COULD MINE THE FULL LENGTH OF THE LINE DURING THIS FIRST WINTER

— THEN THREATEN TO BLOW IT, PIECE-MEAL!

BY REMOTE ELECTRONICS OF SOME SORT—

— IF A WHOPPING RANSOM ISN'T PAID!

YOU'RE ELECTRONIC — AND YOU'RE NOT REMOTE!

WE MUST ESCAPE FROM HERE AND FIND THE CENTRAL CONTROL FOR A DESTRUCT SYSTEM

I DON'T WANTA ESCAPE! I WANTA STAY HERE — WITH YOU!

I'VE BEEN IN LOVE BEFORE, BUT I NEVER KNEW A GIRL SUCH AS YOU! IF YOU DON'T ACCEPT ME, I'LL DIE!

WERE YOU SAYING SOMETHING, LEIGHTON?

PONYTAIL BY LEE HOLLEY

WELL, LOOK WHO'S HERE!

WANT TO GO OUT TONIGHT?

HEY! YES!

DADDY, MAY I GO OUT WITH STICKSHIFT?

IS YOUR CAR IN GOOD CONDITION?

I JUST REBUILT THE ENGINE AND PUT IN A NEW TRANSMISSION!

BYE, DADDY. SO LONG. HAVE FUN.

AND ONE MORE THING...

WHAT IS IT?

NOTICE THE NEW PAINT JOB?!

FAR OUT!

GOLLY, IT RUNS NICE! WHERE ARE WE GOING?

WELL... THAT'S A PROBLEM...

I SPENT SO MUCH MONEY FIXING UP MY CAR...

I DON'T HAVE ANY MONEY TO SPEND ON YOU!

HÄGAR The Horrible
