Torrijos Would Resign To Facilitate Ratification

By PYE CHAMBERLAYNE

PANAMA CITY (UPI) — Panamanian chief of state Omar Torrijos said Saturday he would resign if his leadership proves an obstacle to ratification of the Panaman Canal treaties by Congress.

"If the senators ask me, I will sacrifice my political future," Torrijos said in a news conference to conclude a four-day visit by seven U.S. senators on a fact-finding visit to Panama.

However, Torrijos later qualified this by indicating he might seek the presidency of Panama in an election.

"If 51 percent of the people support me, I stay," he said.

Torrijos spoke on the patio of his villa for a few minutes before a torrential tropical downpour drove the group onto a veranda.

Torrijos promised to use the $50 million a year in military aid the United States has pledged as a condition of the treaties for humanitarian purposes rather than for strengthening the military.

Torrijos said planes and helicopters provided as part of the aid would be used to haul food and supplies and medicine to remote sections of the nation.

Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., leader of the group, said of Torrijos' comments: "It was a positive step. I don't see but that it can help but improve the atmosphere for ratification."

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio and Donald Riegle, D-Mich., indicated they would vote for ratification if Torrijos made good his promises. Sen. Walter Huddleston, D-Ky., said Torrijos' commitments and the delegation's other experiences during their visit "have not in any way diminished my belief that the treaties ought to be ratified."

Sen. Spark Matsunaga, D-Hawaii, said he is returning to Washington to lobby his senate colleagues in favor of ratification.

Sens. Byrd and Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., said they were still uncommitted.

DYNAMITE BLASTED STREET — Twisted wreckage lines a street in Iri, South Korea, Saturday after an explosion Friday night of a parked freight train containing some 30 tons of dynamite. Rescue workers were digging Saturday through the rubble of 9,500 buildings in search of victims and possible survivors. Damage was estimated at $10 million and more than 50 persons were killed. Morehead Nominees

Two Pitt County seniors, both girls, one from Rose High and one from Farmville Central High School, were selected on Saturday as nominees for the 1978 competition for John Motley Morehead Scholarships.

The two selected are Cynthia Jane (Cindy) Browning of Rose High and Elvie Ann Willoughby of Farmville Central.

W.W. Speight is chairman of the Pitt County selection committee, and was assisted by William S. Bost, Jr., a committee chairman.

Browning is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Browning. Her primary interests are the fields of law and languages. In the summer of 1976 she was the Greenville Community Ambassador and traveled in several European countries in that capacity.

Willoughby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Willoughby, Jr. of Fountain, has plans to major in accounting, with an eventual goal to become a CPA. She is also interested in computer science. She was a semi-finalist in the National Achievement Scholarship Program for Outstanding Negro Students.

The two were chosen from a field of 16 nominees interviewed by the selection committee. Those recommended by their schools as nominees and interviewed are:

— Ayden-Grifton — Patience Bosley, Edna Denton, Karen Haseley; — D.H. Conley — Dale Bailey, Donald Ribeiro,

Browning and Willoughby will next face a regional selection committee who will consider nominees from several northeastern North Carolina counties. Those selected at that time will then be considered by a state nomination selection committee which will name finalists for the Morehead Scholarships.

News Briefs

Investigating Insurance Dept.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A State Bureau of Investigation probe has evolved from an examination of one insurance agent's activities into an investigation of the state Insurance Department itself.

The SBI initially was assigned to look into the case of Howard W. Bloom, a Roanoke Rapids restaurateur who allegedly offered to help out-of-state insurance companies get North Carolina licenses in exchange for fees and commissions.

That investigation led to Bloom's indictment this week on charges of extortion and soliciting money to be used to bribe Insurance Department officials.

Bloom, 44, is a friend of Insurance Commissioner John Ingram and allegedly mentioned that in his talks with the insurance companies.

At the time of the indictment, Wake County District Attorney Burley Mitchell said there was no evidence anyone had been bribed. But Mitchell said Friday that the SBI had turned its attention to allegations about Ingram's department.

Court Vacates Rate Plan

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An automobile insurance rate plan setting new rate categories for liability and collision coverage has been vacated by the state Supreme Court even though the rate plan has already been replaced.

The court said Friday it affirmed a state Court of Appeals decision vacating the rate plan because the case raised issues regarding the authority of state Insurance Commissioner John Ingram that affected other, unrelated disputes.

The case had since been superseded by legislation that created the North Carolina Rate Bureau and ordered it to file a new classification plan.

That plan, which abolishes rating classifications by age or sex, was approved Thursday by Ingram.

Will Appeal Ruling

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Carolina Power & Light Co. officials say they will appeal an Environmental Protection Agency ruling that a $42-million cooling system at a CP&L nuclear plant near Wilmington is environmentally harmful.

The EPA regional office in Atlanta said Friday the "oncethrough" cooling system at the Brunswick County steam electric plant is adversely affecting fish, shrimp and other sea life on the Cape Fear Estuary.

Urges More Help

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The federal disaster aid coordinator for 12 flood-stricken North Carolina counties urged state and federal agencies to get more help to the hundreds of people still stranded by damaged roads and bridges.

"I want all of the agency people out in the field surveying damage to let me know how we can help these people quickly and efficiently," said coordinator Joe D. Winkle.

Winkle said National Guard helicopters had carried six tons of food to isolated regions and another 10 tons had been hauled in with four-wheel-drive vehicles.

Improves Security

BOSTON (AP) — Armed Coast Guard boats are patrolling the waters off Logan International Airport to improve security following recent threats by German terrorists to blow up three Lufthansa airliners.

The action at Logan is part of increased security internationally for the West German airline.

Phantom Captured

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — A man who lived in an isolated hillside cave for more than a year, emerging occasionally to throw rocks at cars driving on the Riverside Freeway, has been tracked down and arrested.

James Horton Jr., 42, was identified Friday by highway patrol officers as the so-called Phantom of Santa Ana Canyon, who smashed more than 70 windshields in the last year, seriously injuring two drivers.

An unarmed sheriff's deputy who tried to capture the man last May was stabbed in the neck, but not seriously wounded.

Horton was arrested at the mouth of the manmade 4-by 6-foot cave by a tracking party which followed him for more than three miles, authorities said.

Horton said he had lived in the brush for more than a year because he "didn't want to be bothered by people."

He was booked into Orange County jail for investigation of assault with a deadly weapon, violations of the state vehicle code pertaining to throwing objects at moving cars and misdemeanor trespassing, since his cave was on private property.

Border Patrol Agent Jack Kearney said Horton called out "I quit, I quit," as his hideaway was surrounded.

"He was very, very scared," Kearney added.

Officers said Horton had been subsisting on oranges and lemons stolen from nearby groves, wild black walnuts and food salvaged from garbage cans at a nearby golf club.

For UNC System

HUD Goals Said Unrealistic

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The desegregation dispute between the University of North Carolina and federal officials appears to be headed back to court, says William C. Friday, president of the 16-campus UNC system.

Friday told a meeting of the UNC Board of Governors here Friday that the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare continues to insist that the state adopt desegregation goals that he finds unrealistic and unacceptable.

"Our position, therefore, has not changed," Friday said. "The issue is control over the educational future of all the institutions."

A 17-page document signed by David S. Tatel, director of HEW's office for civil rights, says the state's court-ordered desegregation plan does not go far enough toward increasing black enrollment at the historically white campuses within the UNC system, nor toward upgrading the five traditionally black campuses.

At state in the four-year-old controversy is as much as $100 million that the UNC and state community college systems receive in federal aid. As a sanction for noncompliance, HEW has threatened to seek a cutoff of those funds.

Friday said such a move would certainly be challenged in the courts.

"That's clearly a possibility," Friday said. "And unless we get some dramatic change here, I would say we will end up there."

HEW's latest letter takes issue primarily with the university's refusal to adopt as a goal a 150 percent increase in black freshman enrollment at the predominantly white campuses over the next five years.

The Board of Governors did not issue a response to HEW on Friday, but ordered a committee to draft one by its next meeting in mid-December.

Under Pratt's order, HEW must either accept or reject the UNC plan by early January, and university officials noted there would be little time left for negotiations unless the court grants an extension.

In other action Friday, the Board of Governors approved a revision in its five-year plan for development of the 16-campus system. The update, consisting of more than 500 pages to be added to the first long-range plan approved last year, would authorize 30 new degree programs.

The only criticism of the plan came from board member Katherine Crosby of Charlotte, who said it shortchanged predominantly black UNC institutions.

"I don't see in this plan a lot of help for predominantly black institutions," said Mrs. Crosby, who is black. "I don't see anything in that plan for a black institution to offer a doctorate degree."

It Worked

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Raleigh junior high school principal gathered all his eighth and ninth grade boys in the school gymnasium and told them to drop their weapons.

"I told them that we would not tolerate weapons or drugs at school, and I gave students the right to drop whatever they had on the floor behind the bleachers," said Carnage Junior High Principal George L. Foxwell.

When the kids cleared out, there were 11 knives, three with nine-inch blades, on the floor along with three plastic bags of marijuana and three marijuana cigarettes on the floor.

"I got several calls from parents last night saying 'you infringed on my child's constitutional rights by conducting an illegal search and seizure,'" Foxwell said. "But I'd rather be criticized for that than for having a child knifed here."

Of Natural Gas In Greenville

No Curtailment Foreseen

By LYNN CAVERLY
Reflector Staff Writer

There is no foreseeable curtailment in the availability of natural gas for Greenville residents during the approaching winter.

Both Charles Horne, director of the Greenville Utilities Commission, and Bill Weston, superintendent of the gas department at the Commission, feel the natural gas situation is generally in good shape.

A classification system used by the Commission ranks residential, commercial, and industrial users on a priority basis, with household consumers receiving top priority in the event of a natural gas shortage, said Weston.

Industrial users may face some shortages, however.

"Household consumers are followed in priority by small commercial users and "human needs" consumers which constitute hospitals and the like," said Weston. "The priopriorities range from A-R, with industrial users near the bottom."

According to Weston, about 16 per cent of Greenville's residents use natural gas.

"But we don't know in what capacities the natural gas is used," said Weston, "whether for heating, cooking, drying, or all of these."

This 16 per cent is concentrated in an area of 12 square miles, served by 90 miles of gas mains, said Weston. And all the gas reaches Greenville through one pipeline that serves all of North Carolina.

"Transco, a privately owned pipelinus presently transporting gas from Louisiana," said Weston, "Transco charges our wholesaler, North Carolina Natural Gas, and they in turn charge us.

"Greenville Utilities has two metering stations. One is located on the Route 264 Bypass near Wickes Lumber, and the other is on Memorial Drive near Keels Peanut Company.

"These meters register the usage of gas in a similar manner to that of an individual consumer. N. C. Natural Gas then bills us and we in turn bill the consumers."

If a shortage develops, N. C. Natural Gas will tell the local utilities to discontinue supplying a cern classification of users, industries for example, which must then resort to a back-up system of energy, said Weston.

"These back-ups are usually oil systems and the firms are ready to switch rather quickly," said Weston.

Many industries are on an "on-off" type arrangement, said Weston.

"This system allows us to supply natural gas, if Transco has some stored in natural caverns and transports it to us.

"If the extra is not available, alternate sources must be found," said Weston.

Union Carbide was one example of a company supplementing natural gas with other sources of energy.

"We had to supplement their natural gas with propane gas last year after we were informed to curtail the industrial classes," said Weston.

Terry Bostian, project engineer and energy conservation representative at Union Carbide, figures the company will have the same situation again this winter.

"Last year around Christmas we were instructed to curtail our usage of natural gas," said Bostian. "This resulted in no 'comfort heat' in the offices, but it did not interfere with our industrial processes. Comfort heat accounts for approximately 80 per cent of our usage of natural gas."

Because Transco isn't likely to be able to supply enough gas to last through another winter like last year, suppliers have had to purchase emergency supplies from pipelines that have an excess. And, according to Horne, this gas costs more.

"The surcharge for the emergency supplies is passed on to the consumer, but only on a "dollar-in, dollar-out, basis," Horne noted. "We only change the consumers as much as we are charged by our supplier."

But there is a month's delay before the consumer sees evidence of the surcharge, said Horne.

"Transco bills N.C. Natural Gas first and then they bill Greenville Utilities;" said Horne. "And we never know what the surcharge is going to be until we get our bill."

This billing process is, therefore, the cause of the delay, said Horne.

"This is a continuing thing until the price is leveled-off at the well-head," said Horne. "And determining pricing is more difficult than determining availability."

What if the emergency gas isn't used? This is not likely, according to Horne.

"If for some reason the emergency supplies are not used by top priority consumers, then lower priority consumers will be able to use it.

"But this is an unlikely situation. The suppliers don't want to get into a bind where they run the chance of taking a loss on the gas they have contracted for. If they can't sell, then they usually store it.'

"But overestimating like this is a rare occurrence, and one I don't foresee," said Horne.

Dr. Jenkins Advocates Convention Center Here

BY WILLIAM A. SHIRES
ECU News Bureau

A growing, thriving Greenville can and should have a convention center to serve its spreading interests, says Dr. Leo Jenkins, chancellor of East Carolina University.

Jenkins, the man who has fostered growth and development of ECU and its related programs for the past two decades, now places high priority on this new community and area project. He called it an "idea we have all discussed for several years — the pressing need for a convention center in Greenville."

"With the rapid progress we have made as a center for business, professional services, medical delivery, cultural activities and education, we are fast approaching the day when the absence of a convention center will be far out of character for the reputation held by Greenville," he said.

Jenkins issued his call for a convention center in a banquet address before the Greenville area Chamber of Commerce Friday night. The more than 100 members of the Greenville area CofC met in historic Williamsburg, Va.

The topic for Jenkins' banquet address was "As I See the Greenville Area."

He spoke of ECU's part in the present and future of Greenville and noted that "the fine relationship between the university and the city during the past 70 years has been a source of pride for me.

"We have marched forward together," he said.

Now, in terms of the university and the growth of this community, "I see continued expansion for many years to come," he said. "The future is bright."

"I agree with the people who are saying that Greenville and East Carolina University represent the center of progress in Eastern North Carolina.

"Prosperity on our campus is beneficial to Greenville and our service touches almost every segment of our society in this region. Likewise, progress in the business community strengthens the university," he said. Jenkins spoke of a "close bond of partnership" between ECU and the community.

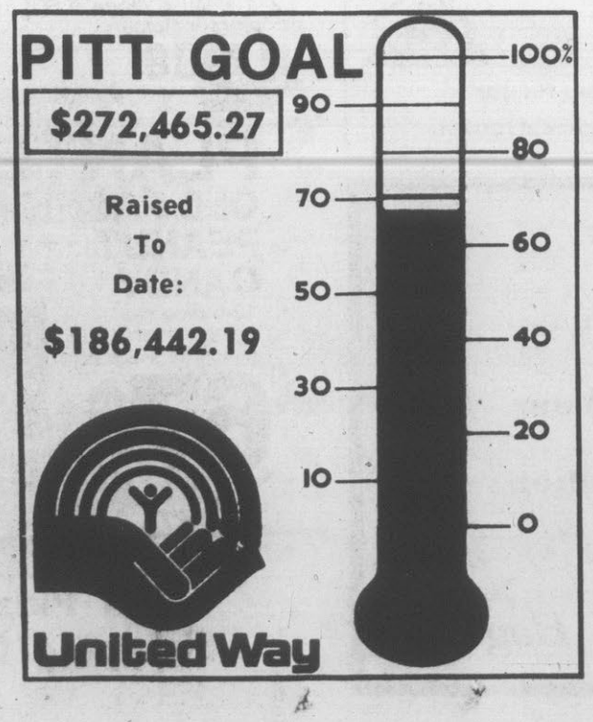

In the past, Jenkins has chosen various audiences before which to make initial proposals for such things as university status for East Carolina, an East Carolina Regional Development Institute, a four-year medical school, expansion of ECU's Ficklen Stadium and other projects which have been accomplished or are in process. Friday night he went before Greenville area community leaders about what he made clear he considers a pressing community need — a convention center.

"We need to pursue this objective in the same manner we have tackled other mutual goals — by pulling together with our resources and our

New Purge Against Christians

By RAYMOND WILKINSON

KAMPALA, Uganda (UPI) — President Idi Amin's security forces have launched a new purge against Christians, killing up to 20 persons and arresting up to 400 over the past three weeks, church and diplomatic sources said Saturday.

The sources said the purge, at least the third this year following two previous assassination attempts on Amin, was launched three weeks ago in southwest Uganda and is continuing, the sources said.

The sources said at least 15-20 christians have been killed in the purge.

They said between 100-400 Roman Catholic and Anglican businessmen and church officials have been arrested at Masaka, 80 miles southwest of Kampala since late last month.

In addition, one Canadian missionary of the Roman Catholic White Fathers was was arrested two weeks ago, imprisoned for two days without food and then deported. He had lived in the country for 10 years.

The sources said the latest purge was sparked by the killing in October of a prominent Moslem businessman, Musa Kaloddo, in Masaka, a major Christian stronghold in Uganda for the once dominant Baganda tribe.

Kaloddo reputedly was connected with Amin's dreaded State Research Bureau which has been responsible for many of the mass killings throughout Uganda.

Amin, himself a Moslem, paid public tribute to the slain man. It remained unclear who was responsible for his death.

The sources said the latest crackdown was first aimed at Catholic businessmen and then spread to church officials and farmers of both the Catholic and Anglican faiths.

Amin has initiated several major purges against Christians and members of the Acholi and Langi tribes this year following at least two unsuccessful assassination attempts against him.

Warns On Terrorism

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A government expert warned Saturday terrorists may soon be able to paralyze entire U.S. cities and urged that a federal crisis management team be set up to deal with such catastrophes.

Terrorism specialist Robert H. Kupperman said the team should use "war games" involving "Red Teams" of attackers and "Blue Teams" of crisis managers to develop realistic counter-terror plans.

Sketching out the scope of the potential threat in his report to President Carter's Cabinet Committee to Combat Terrorism, Kupperman speculated on what might have happened had New York City's recent power outage lasted five days.

"It is not difficult," he said, "to invent stark — possibly realistic—scenarios."

"Looters would run wild, fires starting at random, and jittery National Guardsmen shooting into crowds of panicked people; food and water would become scarce ... the sanitation system would collapse ... and the rats, which outnumber the people, would be close to achieving a permanent victory.

Sadat Proposal

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — President Anwar Sadat said Saturday he has proposed to President Carter that a U.S. professor of Palestinian origin represent Palestinians at a renewed Middle East peace conference in Geneva.

Sadat said he and Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat agreed on the proposal in an effort to break the deadlock over Palestinian representation at the conference. He said he had passed it along to Carter whose administration is leading current initiatives to reactivate the conference.

Sadat did not say whether the American professor would be a member of the PLO, but government officials said this indeed would be the case.

Wants To Reopen Church

MOSCOW (AP) — A dozen Russian Orthodox monks have appealed to President Leonid I. Brezhnev to let them resume religious duties at a historic Kiev monastery that was converted into a tourist attraction 16 years ago.

Copies of the petition were given to Western reporters Friday by a Moscow dissident group that deals with religious matters. One signer, 70-year-old monk Igumen Akhila, met with the correspondents.

The Kiev-Pechersky monastery is an 11th century collection of churches and living quarters on a wooded height above Kiev, capital of the Ukraine. The monastery is thought to be the oldest in the Soviet Union.

Blue Ribbon Men Paraded

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — The 167 men seemed to blend into the crowd for the Veterans Day parade. But what set them apart — and held them together — was the blue ribbon around each man's neck with the nation's highest award for courage in battle — the Medal of Honor.

The men, gathered in San Jose for a semi-annual meeting of the Medal of Honor Society, watched Friday's parade and also took part in it.

Thomas A. Pope of Woodland Hills, Calif., the first Army man to receive the medal in World War I, was delighted with the response of young people in the crowd.

'Nothing Unusual'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Tennyson Guyer, R-Ohio, acknowledged Saturday he made several unsuccessful tries during 1975 and 1976 to arrange a meeting between President Gerald Ford and Hancho Kim, a Korean-born businessman later charged with trying to buy influence in Congress.

Guyer said there was "nothing unusual" about his conduct on Kim's behalf and was just an example of constituent service. Kim lives in Maryland, but attended Findlay College in Ohio, as did Guyer.

A spokesman for Ford in California said the former president had no comment about the report which first appeared in Saturday's Washington Post.

Duncan Free On Bond

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Edwin Duncan Jr. will remain free on bond while his lawyers appeal two federal convictions that landed the former Northwestern Bank board chairman a three-year prison sentence and a $22,000 fine.

Duncan was sentenced here Friday to a total of six years for his conviction on charges of eavesdropping on Internal Revenue Service agents at the bank's headquarters between 1971 and 1973. He also was sentenced to a total of 12 years for his conviction on multiple counts of misapplying bank funds.

No Hope For Change

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — The chairman of the House Agriculture Committee says he has no hope for a change in federal farm price supports for producers before a planned nationwide strike, but he has promised to meet with farmers.

Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., told reporters Friday that 100 percent parity to meet farmers' costs of production could lead to government-controlled agricultural production.

Foley, in Spokane for a Democratic fund-raiser, was a target for farmers protesting low prices.

Impossible To Fix Blame

COLUMBIA, Tenn. (AP)—A grand jury says panic and the possibility of human error under stress made it impossible fix blame for the June 26 fire at the Maury County jail in which 42 persons died.

The Maury County grand jury Friday made 14 recommendations aimed at avoiding a recurrence of the fire. The jury also commended rescuers and a prisoner, Seymour Myers, who several inmates credited for saving their lives.

Nomination Withdrawn

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert Mendelsohn, a former San Francisco county supervisor accused of violating California election laws, is the sixth top Carter administration nominee not to obtain the post to which he was named.

Mendelsohn's nomination to become assistant interior secretary was withdrawn Friday after a California agency announced plans to sue him in connection with an alleged scheme to launder campaign funds.

Mendelsohn requested the withdrawal, but said he was doing so only to free him to seek exoneration in California.

Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus said he was confident Mendelsohn would be cleared and would ask for his renomination.

Death, Injury, Property Toll High In Korean Dynamite Blast

By M.H. AHN
Associated Press Writer

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Rescue workers dug through the rubble of 9,500 buildings in the city of Iri today looking for more victims of the huge dynamite explosion that killed at least 52 persons, injured 1,340 and caused an estimated $10 million damage.

President Park Chung-hee flew from Seoul 120 miles south to Iri, where 30 tons of dynamite in a parked freight train blew up Friday night in what officials called the worst peacetime blast in South Korean history. Park ordered an estimated $10 million allocated for relief and reconstruction.

Officials said the explosion left at least 14,000 of Iri's 120,000 residents homeless and 40 percent of the buildings in the city were destroyed or damaged.

Most structures within one-half mile of the railroad station, the scene of the blast, were flattened or suffered severe damage. The station was razed and about 30 freight cars torn apart.

Many of the injured were listed in critical condition and hospitals were faced with a serious shortage of blood. The Korean Red Cross appealed for donations.

Police said the man, who was assigned by the Korea Explosives Co. of Inchon to oversee its dynamite shipment, told them he saw flames in the ceiling of a freight car carrying the explosive and other chemicals.

The car had stopped at the Iri railroad station on its way to Kwangju, 60 miles south, where the dynamite was to be sold to mining and construction companies.

All hospitals and clinics in Iri were filled with victims and many casualties were sent to nearby towns for treatment, officials said. About 300 doctors and 1,000 soldiers were dispatched to the stricken city to assist in rescue operations. The army and Korean Red Cross set up medical relief statons in the city.

Gen. John Vessy, the top American Army commander in South Korea, offered assistance to the rescue operation.

The Education Ministry ordered all schools closed temporarily.

The blast, heard as far as 10 miles away, tore the roof from a nearby theater where 700 persons were listening to a Korean singer. Fifteen bodies were found there.

CIA Cutting Down Its Spy Population

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Central Intelligence Agency plans to lay off almost 900 spies and their assistants over the next two years, it was reported Saturday.

The Washington Post said the CIA notified 198 employees of the clandestine service Nov. 1 their jobs will be terminated March 31. Workers also were told 700 other clandestine operators will be lose their jobs at the end of 1979.

UPI reported a large staff reduction was being considered when the resignation of Henry Knoche, the No. 2 man in the CIA and a 24-year veteran, was announced last July 13. Knoche was said to have resigned over policy differences with CIA Director Stansfield Turner and the announcement prompted reports other veteran intelligenge officers would be eased out.

Turner said at the time there were "no plans for forced retirement or removals of any top CIA officials."

The CIA had no immediate comment on the Post report.

The clandestine service's principle function is collection of intelligcence information. It consists of 4,000 CIA officers and 4,000 support personnel.

The layoffs are expected to cut into the top ranks of the clandestine operations section, including station chiefs around the world. Many of the dismissed employees will be alumni of the CIA's predecessor, the old Office of Strategic Services, which was formed in World War II, the paper said.

300,000 At Festival

FIRST AID — An unidentified young man is given first aid by Miami Fire and Rescue units at the first annual Miami Music Festival of the Arts at Miami's Bicentennial Park Saturday. A predicted 300,000 persons through today are expected for the event. Fire and Rescue were treating the man for a possible drug overdose, according to the police. (AP Laserphoto)

Full Alert Status

By NED TEMKO

TYRE, Lebanon (UPI) — Palestinian guerrilla leaders Saturday ordered their forces on full alert in southern Lebanon along the Israeli border in reaction to two days of Israeli air attacks.

In Beirut, Lebanese political sources expressed fear of renewed violence, possibly on an even larger scale, unless the tension near the Israeli border subsided.

Palestinian guerrillas in the area of this ancient port city were put on full alert after a devastating Israeli air strike Wednesday killed an estimated 100 people, mostly civilians. A second raid followed Friday.

High-ranking guerrilla sources in Tyre said two Israeli Skyhawk fighter-bombers Friday dropped four bombs near a military target just south of Tyre and north of the Rashidiyeh Palestinian refugee camp. The sources said two of the bombs exploded in an orchard and the others failed to go off.

The same sources added there had been no casualties, although the independent newspaper An Nahar reported 12 guerrillas killed and other reports said 14 people were injured.

In Beirut, a military spokesman for the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine also said "there were no civilian or military casualties and no material damage."

He said this was because the Israeli planes "dropped their bombs from very high altitudes," apparently due to Palestinian anti-aircraft and missile cover.

"It was not an all-out raid, like the first one," the sources said. "It was just a psychological air raid."

They said Palestinian anti-aircraft and surface-to-air missile fire opened fire on the Israeli planes, but denied a report by one guerrilla organization that any of the planes had been shot down.

Advice Rejected

DALLAS, N.C. (AP) — The Dallas Board of Aldermen has rejected the advice of a federal agency to reinstate a policeman who resigned under pressure.

The report by the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA) said officials in the Gaston County community harrassed Gary Wayne Carpenter and forced him to resign, partly because he associated with blacks.

Carpenter is a white police officer. LEAA advised the town to rehire Carpenter and give him back pay. But the aldermen voted 3-0 late Thursday night to have their lawyer fight the LEAA recommendation.

People Want Work

JOB SEEKER CRUSH — Hundreds of job hunters press toward the employement entrance of Oklahoma City's Western Electric plant Saturday morning. A line began forming at about 11:30 a.m. Friday following the publication of newspaper ads asking for job applicants. The crowd swelled to nearly 2,000 persons by dawn Saturday. (AP Laserphoto)

New Highway Patrol Policy

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The more than 1,000 troopers in the North Carolina Highway Patrol are getting the first half of a new patrol policy outlining the first major policy reform in the agency's 48-year history.

The policies patrol officials began distributing during the week take effect Nov. 21.

Among the changes are some designed to eliminate political favoritism by setting rigid promotion standards and taking most of the power to promote away from local commanders, transferring it to Raleigh headquarters.

Other changes set out specific punishments for violations of patrol disciplinary codes, rather than leaving the punishment up to local commanders.

J. Phil Carlton, secretary of Crime Control and Public Safety, said he thinks the new policies will be a vast improvement.

Carlton, who has admitted political interference had occurred in the past, now thinks the new policies virtually eliminate that possibility in promotions.

"It's a very clear procedure," he said. "Of course, you have to have some subjective evaluation in it, but for the most part it's all strictly meeting the requirements.

A series of newspaper articles in 1975 outlined morale problems within the patrol. At first, patrol officials said there was nothing wrong and there was no political influence. A legislative committee later recommended major changes.

Duke Professor New Cancer Society Head

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — The newly-elected president of the American Cancer Society said Saturday the society will continue to stress education and research rather than try to end federal price supports for tobacco.

Dr. R. Wayne Rundles, a professor of medicine at the Duke University Medical Center, said the society is not trying to put tobacco farmers and cigarette manufacturers out of business.

"The society is fully aware of the economic importance of tobacco to farmers and manufacturers in North Carolina and some other states," said Rundles. "We cannot abolish smoking either by edict or legislation. Prohibition did not work.

"Everyone knows," he said, "that the best way to avoid lung cancer is not to smoke. But reducing tar and nicotine intake from tobacco is a step in the right direction."

He said that lobbying and influencing legislation were "not important activities for us."

Rundles, named society president Saturday by society directors in New York, is also on the faculty of Duke's Comprehensive Cancer Center and was the nation's first scientist to develop an effective treatment for a type of bone marrow cancer.

Mayor Shoots Town Worker

CONETOE, N.C. (AP) — The mayor of this eastern North Carolina town of about 250 residents has been charged with shooting one of his constituents during an argument over trash pickup service.

Sheriff's deputies said Henry M. Edmondson, 55, was angry about service he wasn't getting and struck mayor J.B. Bryant twice. Bryant, 62, reportedly said he would shoot Edmondson if he did that again. Edmondson did it anyway and the shooting followed.

Bryant has been charged with assault with a deadly weapon and carrying a concealed weapon. He is free on $3,000 bond.

Protests Made

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Protests and a counter-exhibit on behalf of Soviet minorities marked the opening in Los Angeles Saturday of the largest Soviet social, scientific and technological exhibition ever held in the United States.

The 17-day exhibit at the Convention Center is devoted in part to instances of Soviet-American cooperation and friendship, but demonstrators from Jewish and Ukrainian groups chose to stress another theme that has marked relations between the two countries — concern over human rights.

There were no confrontations with police or Soviet representatives.

Biggest Need: Expert Opinion

The city school board, under pressure from the county commissioners, apparently is willing to have a study done of merging the city and county school systems, but doesn't want any recommendations one way or the other.

In a letter to County Board Chairman Mark Owen city board chairman Henry Dunn said the board agrees that the Division of School Planning of the State Department of Public Instruction should be invited to compile a comprehensive survey of Pitt and Greenville city schools.

"The members of the Greenville board, however, would emphasize that while they want the survey to cover every facet of school operation and to be as complete as possible, they do not want any survey team to make any recommendations concerning whether a merger should take place or not."

What kind of attitude is that ?

It doesn't make any sense to request a survey by the Division of School Planning and then request that no recommendations be made.

The recommendation is, after all, just that and the final decision on whether the two school systems will be merged will have to be made here in Pitt County.

We should be looking for the most complete expert opinions we can get in order to make such an important decision.

The city school board should want all the guidance it can get from the Division of School Planning on this question.

Keep Eyes On The 73-Year-Old Mayor

In one of those monumental upsets that occasionally characterize American politics a 73-year-old retired woman librarian has upset the mayor of Raleigh.

Isabella W. Cannon defeated Jyles J. Coggins, a well off contractor and present Raleigh mayor. She wasn't given much chance when the race began and she is considered a political novice.

Mrs. Cannon must have ability, though, or she couldn't have pulled off the victory. It will be interesting to watch Raleigh's course during her term.

"Y'know, when I applied f'this job, it was my understanding that I'd have an OVAL office."

Patterns In Registration

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—Only one county in North Carolina has more non-whites than whites registered to vote, and Indian voters are not located where you might expect to find them.

According to the most recent rundown of registration patterns compiled by the North Carolina State Board of Elections, Robeson County has the most significant voter split of any: 12,443 Indians, 10,109 blacks, and 18,213 whites.

And Cherokee County where one might expect a lot of Indian voters has only 10 registered. Actually the Cherokee Reservation is in nearly Swain and Jackson counties where Indian registration totals 762 and 690 respectively.

Total white registration now stands 1,930,486; total non-white (mostly black) totals 346,662; and Indian totals 16,589.

Five counties have more Republicans than Democrats: Avery, Mitchell, Wilkes, Yadkin, and Davie. The first are mountain counties, while the latter is between Statesville and Winston-Salem. The county in the geographical center of the state—Randolph is close: 19,832 Democrats to 17,409 GOP.

Moutainous Watauga and Ashe counties are close to split, as are Alexander, Clay, and Graham. The county with fewest Republicans registered is Gates, followed by Tyrrell, with 89 and 99 respectively.

Lowest non-white registration is at Mitchell (8), and Avery (19). Total registration is 2,293,737. Democrats total 1,659,998; and Republicans total 539,487. Unaffiliated are 94,252.

Free To Teach

Mrs. Ruth Perry Watkins, the 1978 Teacher of the Year, says the thing her profession most needs is to be free to teach.

The 31-year veteran now teaching French and history at Rockingham's Richmond High School says the two biggest problems are overcrowded classrooms and outside demands on teacher time.

"They could hire somebody to keep the records and collect the lunch money and let the teacher spend time teaching"says Mrs. Watkins.

As for student discipline, she says the situation today is not much different than when hse first started teaching—only some different kinds of problems. The big change is in parental attitudes—they don't control the children as they once did.

Still, she adds, it is up to the teacher to make the rules and enforce them; those who do this fare better than those who don't attempt to enforce discipline.

Mrs. Watkins now goes on to national competition, hoping to join the ranks of two ther North Carolinians who have won the top Teacher of the Year honors in recent years.

County Sticker

Many cities and towns in North Carolina require a registration fee for motor vehicles belonging to residents. Usually any registration consists of just numbers—not real registration—since the purpose is only to raise more money. Most have even switched to little window stickers instead of metal plates because the decals are cheaper.

Now a county is using this money-raising technique. Beginning in 1978, Caswell County will issue a window decal costing one dollar. Authority to do so comes from a special law passed by the General Assembly affecting that county just north oif Burlington alone.

Sunday Morning Notes

Down in Belhaven the big issue is who will pay for the maintenance of the municipal cemetery. The matter has reached the point where the city has revived the Belhaven Community Cemetery Commission to seek a solution.

At any rate it all caused Geoffrey Chapman editor of The Beaufort-Hyde News to comment in the issue nearest Halloween.

"How can one help but yield to the urge to make bad puns about an issue that's excavated over the Halloween. Granted it's a grave situation, and getting the snafu over maintenance billing may be a big undertaking for the town council. The aldermen may have to do considerable soul-searching before the solution is unearthed. But in the final crypt-analysis, it's pretty obvious that the answer will be more than a simple matter of billing the occupants."

Well, you can bill 'em . . . but then would dare go and collect it?

The Ayden-Grifton Middle School issue has generated as many letters to the editor as anything recently. It was all capped off with a letter which rhymed one day last week.

Our editorial staff had to decide whether or not such a thing was a true letter to the editor.

We still don't know, but who can resist a writing on such an emotional issue which rhymes?

So the poem ran.

Most of last week was beautiful after the deluge which hit the area the previous weekend.

The clouds, which seemed to be moving out at times, had a way of regathering and sending new rain onto the soaked ground.

A real cloud burst came last Sunday morning filling gutters and eventually overloading storm sewers and streams leading to the river.

Finally the weather cleared and during the week there were clear and warm days reminiscent of summer.

It even prompted some young ladies to return to sunning on their lawns.

40 Years Ago Today

November 13, 1937

A Japanese gun boat successfully crossed the partly broken boom obstructing the upper Whangpoo river after armed Japanese naval launches had swept the stream of mines, exploding several harmlessly.

The exploratory voyage up the Whangpoo and the trips of two other armed launches up the Soochow creek indicated Japanese preparations to use streams to transport military supplies to its armies advancing westward to Nanking.

Anthracite operators and mine union leaders reached an agreement on their labor contracts, which expired in April. They had been conferring for two days.

John Lewis, CIO chairman and president of the United Mine Workers of America, a conferee, said interpretations of existing contracts up on which both sides had been at variance were now "clarified".

He added, "We are now in complete agreement."

Trees Build Soil

By CHARLES S. TAYLOR

CONYERS, Ga. (UPI) — To 80-year-old Ed Holmes, the prettiest word in the English language is "loblolly."

That is the name of a pine tree variety which flourishes in the red soil of the South. Holmes has planted thousands of them in East Georgia and played a big role in reforesting millions of acres of idle land across the nation.

He is known as "the tree man," a top conservationist and the leading force behind this country's biggest tree-planting effort.

In the twilight of his active life, Holmes still runs his seed and fertilizer business from a rambling 100-year-old weather-beaten building in Conyers.

He apparently has not given much thought to retiring. He has had a lifelong interest in dairying and right now is working on a new mechanical device to improve the technique of milking cows employed by large dairies.

Twenty-three years ago, in 1954, the efficiency of the American farmer resulted in huge agricultural surpluses of cotton, corn, wheat and other crops. Congress passed laws taking more land out of production to combat the surplus.

To Holmes, a graduate of the University of Georgia School of Agriculture, the millions of acres of non-producing land were a waste.

"I was riding down the road one day," Holmes said, "passing all those empty fields.

"It won't look good to non-farmers, to see fields growing up in weeds," he recalled.

Holmes decided on the spot to contact then Georgia Gov. Herman Talmadge and Agriculture Secretary Ezra Benson about a plan to plant pine seedlings on the idle land.

"I figured the nation needed lumber and that trees were one thing that wouldn't add to the surpluses."

Sometime later, Holmes got a letter from Benson saying that his pine seedling program would be presented to Congress for legislation. He also got

GROVES OF ACADEME

Shaken By Examinations

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

BOSTON (AP) — Once again the groves of Academe are shaken root, branch and bud by a howling storm over examinations; whether to do away with them altogether or make them tougher.

The controversy has been recurring on campus every seven or so years, like a plague of locusts, ever since Socrates began asking irksome questions instead of just lecturing like the other tenure double domes at Acropolis U.

Educators in favor of scrapping entrance exams and final tests now argue that, among other things, quizzes are unfair to disadvantaged minority students, who may lack the background in competing under pressure, and that a student's overall work and effort is a better indicator of his progress than his ability to jot down some quick, meaningful answers while sitting in alternate seats in alternate rows under a ticking clock and the suspicious gaze of a proctor.

The get-tough faction in the faculty smoking room tends to cite the number of functional illiterates occupying the desks previously reserved for the football team and argues that tomorrow's brain surgeons at least ought to be able to read and write, even if no one can read their writing on a prescription for laudanum or aspirin or whatever. Why award a diploma to some spavined weakling who never blitzed a quarterback or executed a blind-side tackle for the glory of alma matter?

But, on the other hand, why flunk out, just for sake of a few pesty questions, some amiable 37-year-old youth who has found a real home on campus, a lifestyle to his liking, now that it no longer is necessary to bug out to Canada or Sweden?

What with open dorms, food stamps, unemployment checks and government loans that rarely come to maturity when the student does, college life would be serene and carefree were it not for the specter of failure and expulsion raised by the hard-nosed padagogues in the tougher exam camp.

In the opinion of this scholastic observer, who has sat on both sides of the examination bench, the whole bruhaha is based on two questionable premises: 1. That students actually get into a cold sweat, have nervous breakdowns and jump out of lecture room windows. At Harvard exams always seemed to be held in basement rooms) during a tough quiz. 2. That professors actually read the pile of test papers they stuff under their arms as they march menacingly from the lecture hall.

When Vladimir Nabokov, the late, great author of "Lolita," was teaching literature at Cornell, he rarely read the students' answers to the questions he so laboriously contrived for their final doom or reward. His wife, Vera, marked the papers. That was the good news. The bad news was that she was an exceedingly tough marker. But it all came out even, or better, because on final grades, the master rarely could bring himself to flunk anyone and had a special fondness for the toothless oafs who overflowed their lecture benches in sweat shirts marked "property of the Athletic Department."

Statistics will show that more teachers than students have been hauled off raving to the laughing academy at exam time, especially those reckless enough to read the answers submitted to their questions.

This typewriter tyro entered the working world, a few decades back, as a substitute teacher in the Boston Public School system. When a history teacher fell ill (pushed down the staircase during fire drill, it transpired) at the William E. Russell Junior High School in the tough Roxbury section, found himself conducting a quiz in the origins of our nationhood.

"When did the Mayflower reach Plymouth Rock?"

"I don't know, teach, I was absent that day," responded a lightly mustachioed adolescent who later was awarded a sixyear government scholarship for taking a tire iron to a gas station attendant.

My brother Andrew, now a school superintendent in a suburb of Buffalo, N.Y., once had the ungraciousness to pull a surprise quiz in an ancient history class at a Brooklyn High School the day before Christmas Eve, a gaucherie equivalent to Scrooge turning away the carolers at his door.

"Who were the Visigoths?" he asked. "Where did they come from and when did they attack Rome?"

One among the sullen, resentful examiness essayed a seasonal response: "I don't know who the Visgoths are or where and when they came, but whoever they are and wherever they are, I wish them all a Merry Christmas."

Other Editors Say Tight Enough?

(The Durham Sun)

Prison overcrowding is a major problem in North Carolina. Distribution of the prisoners, however, could cause even more trouble.

The Guess Road Prison Unit in Durham is a maximum-security facility, which means there are no armed guards. When the facility was given its minimum-security status, prison officials said they hoped to house inmates who were serving short terms for non-violent offenses. Many of these people could be on work-release programs.

Since the overcrowding in has increased, the state Department of Corrections has housed felons in the facility. A man serving 19 years for armed robbery escaped from a road crew on Oct. 7. He has been charged with rape and kidnapping in the abduction of a 19-year-old Durham woman when he escaped.

A man serving a life sentence also escaped last month from the minimum-security facility.

W. K. Jones, the prison superintendent, said there have been 31 escapes this year from the facility which houses 114 men.

Some residents of the areas near the prison said they are concerned for the safety of their families. They are circulating petitions to urge Gov. Jim Hunt to change the policy of housing felons in minmum-security prisons.

Hunt and prison officials have said they hope to have new facilities constructed by 1981 to handle many more of the prisoners in the overcrowded units.

If the prison population is so large that felons have to be placed in units like the one on Guess Road, then armed guards should be used to patrol the prison grounds. Persons in North Carolina should know that security is tight enough to make escape difficult for the most dangerous criminal.

Strength For Today

A LITTLE UNDERSTAND BOOK

The Book of Revelation is confusing to many Christians. This is because people often fail to read it in the light of the historical situation amid which it arose.

It was written by the Apostle John about the year 90 A.D. and was addressed to churches in Asis Minor which were suffering extreme persecution. Its message to humanity is that the unseen powers at the disposal of men are inestimably more potent than the materialistic powers in which the world at large puts its trust.

Too often the book has been used as a kind of mysterious and symbolic incantation of prophecy. Its chief aim, however, is not to foretell the future but to encourage and sustain believers amid the challenge of present trails.

In these days when nuclear catastrophe seems to be always waiting in the wings, this book should read and re-read thoroughly. It calls upon all Christians to maintain their conviction that ultimately the hand of God decides all issues, and that our final triumph will blot out all the sufferings we may have to undergo.

Advocate Of 'Private Sector'

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Reports that he and President Carter are in conflict over their interpretation of the economy are "products of the journalistic imagination," said Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

That imagination, it seems, has been quite active. While they could have been hallucinating, the journalists claim to have heard or read words that semanticists tell us suggest disagreement.

Such as the president's office issuing a statement three weeks ago that in effect warned the Federal Reserve to refrain from raising interest rates and thereby, in the administration's view, damaging the recovery.

And Burns' speech Oct. 26 in which he suggested the economy was facing a malaise unless the administration got hold of itself and acted decisively on taxes, energy, environment, inflation and governmental regulation.

If it hadn't been for the Fed, he said, "I have little doubt that fears of inflation would be running stronger" and interest rates would be higher. He places a lot of blame on the steps of the White House.

In that same speech, at Spokane, Wash., the chairman let it be known that his board intended to exercise its responsibility with regard to monetary affairs, no matter how many presidential bulls are posted on the bulletin board.

Making his quarterly appearance before Congress to explain Federal Reserve policy, Burns on Nov. 9 clearly expressed his disbelief in the Carter goals of substantially lowering inflation and unemployment.

Prices will rise about 6 per cent to 6.5 per cent over the next year, he said. And unemployment will remain stuck at a relatively high level, falling only to 6.5 per cent from the existing 7 per cent.

The chairman indicated he also opposed what is widely believed to be an important piece in the tax jigsaw puzzle that Carter is preparing. The elimination of the capital gains tax advantage would be "most unfortunate," he said.

Instead, he indicated, we should be trying to encourage investment rather than removing its attractions, because capital gains are the incentive needed to promote capital investment and get our economy on solid footing.

Afterward, it was reported, Burns told news people that the administration might be trying to do too much too soon, and that its many legislative moves were creating anxiety and confusion in the business world.

There is plenty of room for criticism, and neither Carter nor Burns has been reluctant to fill that room. Neither is likely to have the answer to the economic puzzle, but each has his approach.

Carter, despite his disavowals, appears to believe that few tasks are hard or impossible to the federal government—inflation, unemployment, reorganization, higher ethical standards, peace, prosperity.

Burns, perhaps the most outspoken defender of the free enterprise approach, believes we have to nourish the private sector if we are to make a dent in the economic barriers we see before us.

The two men clearly have differences and the differences show through the diplomatic veils they attempt to drape over them. Neither has lost his cool, but their thrusts have been barbed and well aimed.

Aside from their public statements and actions, the two have expressed themselves in private conversations also, and it is presumed that the subject matter has been much the same as that revealed in public.

But if that is journalistic imagination, the rest isn't. The two men don't quite see eye to eye, and as Lyndon Johnson used to say, if you can't meet eyeball to eyeball how can you possibly agree.

Events Fail Alter Views

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — Developments of recent weeks have done little to change basic public attitudes toward the Middle East controversy. Nearly half (46 per cent) of those who have heard or read about the controversy say their sympathies are with Israel, 11 per cent with the Arab nations, 21 per cent say they are sympathetic to neither side, while 22 per cent are undecided.

In a previous survey; conducted in June, 44 per cent said their sympathies were with Israel, 8 per cent with the Arabs, 28 per cent said neither, and 20 per cent said they were undecided.

While American sympathies continue to be strongly on the side of Israel, some decline has been registered since the first measurement was taken, immediately after the 1967 war. At that time, 55 per cent of those questioned said their sympathies were with Israel, 4 per cent with the Arabs, and a total of 41 per cent sided with neither or had no opinion.

DISPOSITION OF ARAB TERRITORY

On the question of the disposition of Arab territory occupied by Israel after the 1967 war, almost no change in American attitudes was found in the present survey.

About one person in eight (13 per cent) says Israel should withdraw from all the land taken from the Arab nations during the 1967 war as opposed to 26 per cent who say that Israel should keep all the land. A plurality — 36 per cent — believe Israel should return part of the land; 25 per cent are undecided.

These findings not only closely parallel those recorded in June 1977 but are similar to those recorded 10 years ago. In a survey conducted shortly after the Six-Day war in 1967, 15 per cent of those who had followed the Middle East conflict said Israel should return all the land and 24 per cent felt the Israelis should retain it all; 44 per cent said Israel should keep some of the land, while the remainder had no opinion.

SEPARATE NATION FOR PALESTINIANS?

On the question of whether a separate, independent Palestinian nation should be established, more favor than oppose (36 per cent to 29 per cent) this idea but a substantial number — 35 per cent — say they have no opinion or do not make a choice.

Here is the question asked to determine familiarity with the Middle East situation:

"Have you heard or read about the situation in the Middle East?"

Nearly eight in 10 people, 79 per cent, say they have heard or read about the situation.

Those who said they were familiar with the problem in the Middle East were asked the following question:

"In the Middle East situation, are your sympathies more with Israel or more with the Arab nations?"

Here are the results:

More with Israel	46%
More with Arab nations	11
Neither	21
No opinion	22

"As a result of the 1967 war, Israel now controls land that was formerly controlled by Arab nations. What do you think Israel should do — give back PART of this land, give back ALL of this land, or KEEP ALL of this land?"

Give back part of land	36%
Give back all of land	13
Keep all of land	26
No opinion	25

"As you may know, one of the major questions in the Middle East situation concerns the Palestinian people. Do you think a separate, independent Palestinian nation should be established or do you think the Palestinians should continue to live as they go now in Israel and the neighboring Arab nations?"

Here are the findings:

Establish separate nation	36%
Continue as they do now	29
Other responses	3
No opinion	32

The findings reported today are based on personal interviews with 1,520 adults in a survey conducted in more than 300 scientifically elected localities during the period Oct.

A Conservative View

An 'Innovative Idea' Whose Time Has Passed

BY JAMES J. KILPATRICK

In his press conference of October 27, President Carter said he couldn't think of any major innovative proposals he would offer in 1978 or 1979. Shortly thereafter, responding to some raised eyebrows, the press office said that wasn't exactly so. Mr. Carter had not abandoned his promise of national health insurance. Such a program would yet be presented.

Maybe so. Mr. Carter's commitment was absolute. Time after time on the campaign trail, he pledged his efforts to enact a "comprehensive, mandatory program of national health insurance." This is the kind of sweeping, first-dollar, all-embracing program that Senator Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.) continues to push. The 100-member Committee for National Health Insurance still is beating the drums for this scheme. The American Public Health Association, which met in Washington last week, raised whoops and hollers for "socialized medicine" as such.

But unless I am wholly mistaken, most of the steam has leaked out of the movement toward national health insurance. Victor Hugo once said that no army can resist the strength of an idea whose time has come. By the same token, no army can impose an idea whose hour has passed. This idea is over the hill.

Several reasons support that cheerful prediction.

So radical a departure from existing patterns of medical care would have to command overwhelming popular support. Are the people clamoring for national health insurance? Unless my ears deceive me, the people are as quiet as so many clams. Last year, NBC took a poll: "Do you favor or oppose a program of health insurance paid by the government through increased taxation?" Only 36 percent of the respondents said yes. Almost half opposed; 16 percent were not sure. It is not what you would call a ground swell.

The NBC figures reflect the growing disillusionment with federal programs generally. What is proposed, under Kennedy's grandiose plan, is to turn medical care over to the same wonderful folks who have given us Amtrak and the Postal Service. If ever a majority of the people believed government could perform a function better than the private sector, that belief no longer commands much support. A people disenchanted with public education have no perceptible enthusiasm for comprehensive public health.

The opposition to the Carter-Kennedy program rests on more than intuitive antipathy. The people are perfectly capable of foreseeing fantastic costs, and they don't like what they see. The senator's idea is to scrap all existing programs of private insurance; he would also abandon Medicare, and he would retain only parts of the health care now provided under Medicaid, the Veterans Administration, and other agencies.

In their place he would erect an enormous new bureaucratic structure headed by a Health Security Board. This board would effectively fix hospital budgets, fix doctors' fees, fix prescription prices, collect billions of dollars in new taxes, and disburse millions of checks annually to providers of health services. The total cost? No one has even a foggy notion of the cost. Two hundred billion, three hundred billion? It is all the same to Messrs. Kennedy and Carter. Present costs are vaguely estimated at $145 billion. Once all restraints were abandoned, the figure easily could double or treble.

Who would pay for all this? Who do you think would pay for all this? The Kennedy-Carter plan envisions new taxes on employer and employee (on top of the stunning Social Security increases now in prospect), plus matching billions from the general fund. There is no way under moon or sun that Mr. Carter could fold any such program into his budget for 1979 or 1980, and still hope to see the budget balanced.

An estimated 92 percent of our people now are covered by some sort of health or hospital insurance. Relatively speaking, only a small minority of families have no coverage of any sort. The poor are fully covered by Medicaid, the aged by Medicare, the veterans and their families by military benefits. In our largest industries, such as automobile manufacturing, collective bargaining has resulted in health benefits equaling what Kennedy proposes.

If any federal program at all can be justified — and can be afforded — it is a program to insure the risk of catastrophic illness. If Mr. Carter will settle for that, few persons will belabor him for breaking a promise. And you can depend on that.

Lil Just Doesn't Want Escape To The Suburbs

By GAIL MICHAELS

ATLANTA, Ga. — Lil Friedlander's interest in Peachtree Walk is special. Now 29, she remembers shopping here 20 years ago with her grandmother. "There was the wonderful King Kole bakery for gingerbread men, and marvelous dime stores. You could even buy a lunch at the nursery where you purchased plants.

"As a teenager, I would hang around here, intrigued by the beatniks." Now she is helping to salvage the section once known as the 10th Street area, on the fringe of downtown Atlanta. Margaret Mitchell shopped there in the '30s and '40s. The next decade brought the beatniks with their coffeehouses and galleries, and the area took on an "arty" reputation. In the '60s, the flower children arrived and "The Strip" became a major tourist attraction, especially on weekends. And then, along came the adult bookstores, movie houses, lounges and massage parlors, creating a seedy, neon eyesore along famed Peachtree Street.

The 1970s have brought more change. Most of the adult businesses are gone, and efforts to restore the district are well underway. The renovation project, dubbed Peachtree Walk, received $170,000 from the city in order to create an organization which would act as a catalyst in getting merchants to make their own improvements.

Now 98 businesses in the 17-block area have formed a business association. A new grocery store and a cafeteria just opened; a Vietnamese restaurant and flower shop are under construction where abandoned storefronts once stood.

Lil had left Atlanta and the South to go to a northern women's college in the mid-1960s. She quit school and married at 19. By 22, she had two children, had lived in Europe for a year, and when her marriage ended, she and her offspring returned to Atlanta.

"The kids and I settled in Sandy Springs (a suberb of 70,000 people 15 miles from downtown). It was probably the most miserable time of my life. For two years, I shopped at the local grocery store and never saw the same person twice. Everything was just so lily-white . . . Down here I see blacks, old people, foreigners, handicapped people. I love it. I don't want to escape to the suburbs."

While she was still living in Sandy Springs, Lil went to a block party in Midtown, a neighborhood adjacent to the Peachtree Walk area, with some 10,000 people of different ages and backgrounds.

"At that block party, I felt a closeness, a sense of belonging that I had never felt in Sandy Springs," Soon she and her children were residents of Midtown.

Sitting cross-legged in her office in what used to be the Roman Bath House, Lil looks out the plate glass window and expresses delight at seeing even more people on the street than were there the week before. She watches an Oriental property owner putting up a new store front and says, "I watch and listen and learn . . . People get paranoid and flee to the suburbs because they don't watch what's going on around them. If we were dogs, we'd stop and sniff, smell things out. Instead we retreat to the suburbs where most people don't know their neighbors and become terrified of anything different from them.

"It's different here. Like that drug store." She points across the street. "Three generations of the owner's family live there and have for years. From her second-floor window, the grandmother watches everything that goes on. She's never been afraid to live here."

Initially, Lil got involved in the Peachtree Walk project as a volunteer. She designed an entire flow-chart of what the project should be for a year's time. When the project started full force, she was hired as its assistant director.

"Because I'd given up college when I married, I wasn't a professional and I doubted myself and my abilities. We're so geared to thinking you must have a degree to be good at anything. Listen, anybody who can balance a baby on one hip, cook dinner, talk on the phone, and keep the laundry going, all at the same time, has organizational skills just like those needed in business and industry.

"In Europe I'd walk down the streets in cities and go in shops and look around. I'd think, why can't Atlanta have this? I'd plan and dream how it could be in Atlanta, but I never dreamed I'd be involved in making it happen one day. This project has given my life such a boost. Every day there's something new to do. I work hard, but love it."

In The End They Learn, And So Do The Parents

If you read my column last week, you'll know that I wanted to give up potty training after the first try, but Phillip was adamant — Meg must be trained!

"You can use that book, TOILET TRAINING IN LESS THAN ONE DAY, again. Patience, but firmness," he said. "That's what you need for a job like this."

"I don't have either one," I said. "But you're just chock full of both. Why don't YOU train her?"

He ignored me. "Now as I understand it, the major problem is that you don't have a doll that wets properly, and you have to have one to use as an example. Right?"

"I have one that wets while it's standing on its head, but then Meg can do that. What I need is one that can make it across the room to a potty."

He put his jacket on, walked toward the door, and called back over his shoulder, "I'll find one."

And he did. When he came back three hours later, he handed me a large box and said, "I had to go to every store in town, but I finally found a doll that holds it until you press a button in its back. There's one thing about it though . . ."

"It sounds fancy. How much did it cost?" I interrupted.

"Twenty dollars!"

"Twenty dollars!" I screeched. "What does it have besides a button?"

"That's what I've been trying to tell you. It's a boy doll."

"You mean, it's got short hair and overalls?" I asked nervously.

"I mean it's fully equipped."

I ripped the box open, and there was no mistake. Tomasino was a little boy.

"How could you do this to me?!" I cried.

"Why are you making such a big deal over it? I thought you were a liberated woman."

"Don't give me that. Don't you realize that dolls are usually neuter. The most explicit doll Meg has ever seen has dimples in its bottom. Do you really think that when she's introduced to this new phenomenon, she's going to give a darn about whether or not old Tomasino here can go to the potty?"

"Well, after she gets over the initial shock —"

"You mean after I get over the shock. Look, I'm not equipped to deal with sex education and potty training in the same day."

"You'll get along all right."

"Well, at least you'll be here to help," I said doubtfully.

"No I won't. I've got some work I've got to do at the office. Besides, like the book says, I'd just be a distraction—"

"I'll get you for this, Phillip Michaels," were the last words I spoke to him.

Fortunately, Tosino's boyish charms didn't excite Meg's interest. Unfortunately, neither did his ability to use the potty. So our twenty dollar investment got thrown into the same corner that Wetsey Boo occupied. But then the wonder of wonders occurred — Meg not only used the potty, but she threw in a bonus.

"Look at that!" I cooed, clapping my hands enthusiastically. "Look what my big girl did in the potty!"

"Yuck, what a mess," Meg commented.

"No, no!" I cried. "It's good when you do it in the potty!"

Her face gradually lightened. "It's good?"

"Yes, sweetie!' Daddy will be so proud. Now you can help me flush."

"No," she said. "Keep it."

"No, now we're supposed to flush."

Her jaw set. "Keep it for Daddy."

When Phillip came home late that afternoon, he was holding another large box. "I've got a surprise for you," he said in a conciliatory voice.

"Oh, yeah?" I said, mopping my brow with a rubber glove. "Well, we've got one for you, too."

letters from Talmadge thanking him for his plan.

Under the legislation as adopted, farmers were paid $10 per acre per year for a maximum of 10 years to put their idle land in pine trees. They were given three years to get the trees planted.

"It was a voluntary program," said Holmes. "Farmers got their seedlings from state forestry commissions. They didn't cost much, about $3 per thousand. It doesn't take but a year to grow them."

Trees on the unused land guaranteed that it could not again be row-cropped for a long period of time; the trees gave the farmer an income, and the land would be used but still allowed to rest and recover from over-planting.

"Trees build the soil," said Holmes. "Pine needles form a blanket all over the soil. They sort of intertwine with one another."

Standing in a grove of 20-year-old pine trees while talking, Holmes reached down and scooped up a handful of black loam, soil that had built up under a bed of pine needles.

Before the program ended, 30 million acres of idle land were planted in pine trees in the various states. The project cost $300 million per year but Holmes estimates it produced about $3 for every $1 of cost through timber sales.

Then there was the progressive, highly demanding Yale lecturer on England's Industrial Revolution and Rising Class Struggle (3 credits) who asked only one question on the final exam: "Why?"

While others scribbled furiously, battled with the clock and their total recall of lecture notes, one self assured undergrad wrote but two words in his blue book: "Why not?"

But my favorite exam answer is the Vermont farmer who delt a blow against bureaucracy when at the end of a long and exasperating government questionnaire on pesticide controls he came to the line: "Do Not Write In This Space."

"Ill write where I damn please," he wrote and went back to his mules.

To the editor:

In 1954 a North Carolina group of Optimists decided too much attention was being given to the negative acts of youth and too little to the vast majority of youth accepting fulfilling roles as responsible citizens. To bring about recognition of the positive actions and contributions of young people, Youth Appreciation Week was inaugurated. Mayor Percy Cox has proclaimed Nov. 14-21 as Youth Appreciation Week in Greenville.

Since its inception, this observance has grown. It is now sponsored by Optimist Clubs throughout North America. It has been its objective to publicize the fact that today's youth are not the selfish, lazy degenerates that too many adults fantasize. The vast majority of youth is well informed, concerned, willing and interested in becoming involved in efforts to improve our society. While the vitality and spirit of youth need the wisdom and experience of adults as support in efforts toward the successful achievement of their goals, it follows each adult has a responsibility to assist youth through the transitional stage toward adulthood. It is indeed important that we give the needed recognition to deserving youth, but we must not become complacent and overlook the necessity for continued personal dedication and involvement with community improvement.

Youth Appreciation Week is a vehicle through which all adults and youth may work together for the good of all.

Congress 'Cuts Back', But Still Gold-Plated

By BROOKS JACKSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressmen are cutting back on their gifts of free Congressional Record subscriptions.

Senators are giving up their free shaving mugs.

This is what passes for economy this year in the United States Congress, which just spent more than $1 billion in the last 12 months on itself and its related agencies.

They're charging for haircuts now. Prices are up in the Senate and House dining rooms. Some elevator operators in automatic elevators are being eased out.

Nickel by nickel and dime by dime, Congress is making a show of saving money on several of its most frequently criticized expenditures.

Despite these small economies, Congress keeps voting to spend more and more money on its own operations and benefits. And it keeps voting down other proposals to economize.

The total bill is going up faster for Congress than for the rest of the federal government. Faster than the rate of inflation.

It's going up so fast that Congress itself has a hard time keeping track. In January the estimate of this year's spending was $1.01 billion. Now, with the fiscal year just ended and the bills still being counted, the estimate is $1.08 billion, roughly $70 million above the original projection.

Congress doesn't like it much, that $1-billion price tag. It has a ring to it that journalists find hard to resist. That's one reason there were a spate of news stories earlier this year about "The Billion Dollar Congress."

Inaccurate, congressmen cried. Misleading. Unfair.

Because many of the costs of running the Senate and House are hidden in various parts of the executive branch budget, nobody really knows what they are.

The cost of hauling congressmen around on military aircraft has traditionally been buried in the Pentagon's budget. Most of the cost of congressional pensions, said to be the best pension deal this side of the armed forces, is squirreled away in the Civil Service Commission budget. And every agency employs at least one office full of expensive bureaucrats to cater to requests from Capitol Hill.

Whatever the total, many Congress watchers are certain that Congress spends gobs of money on itself to do things that could either be done more cheaply or that needn't be done at all.

A case in point: the Capitol police force.

As any visitor to the Capitol knows, policemen are everywhere. Shushing noisy visitors outside committee room doors. Shooing motorists from parking spaces reserved for senators, poking into visitors' belongings in search of contraband.

The size of the force has doubled in the last 10 years. It costs $18 million a year. At last count there were 1,140 Capitol policemen supplemented by 42 Washington metropolitan policemen. That's more policemen than in Indianapolis, Memphis or Columbus, Ohio.

Not surprisingly, there were only eight robberies and assaults reported on the Capitol grounds last year, mostly on the fringes of neighboring highcrime areas of the city. Indianapolis reported 4,145 such crimes.

The idea of such a big police force bothers some members of Congress. "If you put a policeman on every corner in America you would have very little crime," observes Illinois Democrat George Shipley, who heads the House subommittee in charge of congressional spending. "But the fact is that we are no different than anybody else. Why should we have more protection than somebody six blocks off the Hill, simply because they do not have the money?"

Despite Shipley's reservations, he didn't cut a nickel from the police budget this year. Fact is, the force is likely to get bigger.

Carpets By George Opening On Monday

VETERANS DAY PARADE — Retired Lt. Gen. James H. Doolittle, who led a B-25 raid on Tokyo in World War II, waves to the crowd as he rides with Mayor Janet Grey Hayes of San Jose during Friday's Veterans Day Parade in San Jose, Calif. The grand opening activities of Carpets by George at 3203 S. Memorial Drive will begin Monday morning, Nov. 14, according to George Powell, owner.

Powell reported that the formal opening of the business, housed in a new 7,500 square foot building, will be marked by ribbon cutting ceremonies at 9 a.m.

The new facility will feature a 1,500 square foot showroom for display of the firm's products as well as a 6,000 square foot warehouse for storage of carpeting and vinyl flooring stock.

The business, formerly operated as International Carpet Outlet Inc. on Dickinson Avenue, has added several new departments in moving to Memorial Drive, including draperies, wallpapers, blinds and woven woods.

Carpets by George, it was pointed out, will have some 500 rolls of carpet and vinyl flooring in stock with convenient loading facilities located at the rear of the warehouse.

The firm has employed the services of Durene Short as interior decorating consultant, according to the owner, offering free decorating assistance. The consultant is a graduate of East Carolina University with a degree in interior design.

A new feature of the business will a toy corner for children to use while their parents shop.

Ample parking is available at the facility.

Construction of the new brick and metal building began in July and the facility was occupied on Nov. 2.

According to Powell, the manager of the firm will be Wayne Dunn, a native of the area who also managed the Dickinson Avenue store.

Store hours will be from 9-6 Monday through Friday and 10-2 on Saturday.

Powell, a native of Fuquay, opened International Carpet Outlet in February of 1976. He began his association with the floor covering business at his father's carpet facility in Fuquay and worked with his father in Fuquay and Raleigh before starting his own business.

The owner's wife, Lynn, is a native of Greenville and daughter of longtime Greenville resident Bern Bullard. Powell and his wife are the parents of two daughters.

Kmart CORNER OF GREENVILLE AND ARLINGTON BOULEVARDS

'Grease' Wednesday

TWO FROM "GREASE". . .Patricia Douglas as Marty and Stephen Gross as Vince Fontaine are two of the stars in the road company production of "Grease" to be at Wright Auditorium at 8 p.m. Wednesday, November 16. Tickets are on sale at $5 at the Mendenhall Central Ticket Office.

Grease, the rock and roll musical depicting the happy days of the 1950s is the next fare of the East Carolina University Student Union Theater Arts Committee, coming to Greenville on Wednesday, November 16, for a one-time only performance.

The musical will be at Wright Auditorium at 8 p.m. on that date. Tickets are priced at $5 ($3 each for groups of 20 or more), and are available at the ticket office in Mendenhall. Phone reservations can be made by calling 757-6611.

In February Grease begins its eighth continuous year on Broadway. The company coming to Greenville is directly associated with the Broadway company, and has a complement of bright young stars under the sponsorship of the same producers who are responsible for the New York based hit — Kenneth Waissman and Maxine Fox.

A frankly nostalgic look at the 50s, Grease has all the well-remembered trappings of those years — ducktails and motorcycle jackets, long felt skirts and spongy white bobby socks, and greasy hair.

Earlier show members of Grease have gone from the show to television soap operas and other TV shows — people like John Travolta and Adrienne Barbeau.

ECU Concert Today

Two well-known symphonies will be performed by the East Carolina University Symphony Orchestra at its fall concert at 3:15 p.m. today in Wright Auditorium.

Robert Hause will conduct the orchestra in the Mozart Symphony No. 39 in E Flat and Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4 in F Minor.

The concert is free and the public is invited to attend.

The only resident orchestra in eastern North Carolina, the East Carolina Symphony is composed of student and faculty musicians drawn from the ECU School of Music and from residents of the local community.

This year, the orchestra membership is 73 musicians, one of the largest contingents in its history.

The ECU Symphony has appeared in numerous concerts, radio and TV broadcasts, and at music educators conferences.

Among student members of the orchestra are several young people from Greenville — Serena Matney and Patricia Bath, violin; Jennifer O'Neal, viola; Lynne Price, Claudia Shoaf and Jim Kittrell, cello; and Mark Laing, percussion.

ROBERT HAUSE . . . ECU Symphony Orchestra Conductor Robert Hause leads the orchestra in a performance of two major symphonies at 3:15 today. The concert is free, and the public is invited.

Bat McGrath To Perform At Roxy

Poet, singer, song-writer Bat McGrath will be spotlighted in a one-man show at The Roxy Community Theater, 629 Albemarle Street, on Friday and Saturday, November 18 and 19.

McGrath's 1976 Amherst Records Album, "Pat McGrath From The Blue Eagle." features hits like Spaced Out; Maruda; Cool Breeze; and Blue Eagle.

The young Glens Falls, N. Y. native insists he's a happy performer, and has been laughing a lot since the day when he was a child and his older brother Jim held him up by the heels and pounded his head on a hardwood floor.

McGrath began his show business with a quartet, recording the album Friends and Love, followed by Together.

Later, McGrath and Don Potter formed a duo — when the two split, McGrath turned to the tour stage with appearances in Toronto, Atlanta, Nashville, etc., and continual shows in Rochester.

Currently, he is touring as a solo act, and has been favorably compared with performers like Jimmy Buffett and Tom T. Hall.

Tickets for the McGrath show at Roxy are priced at $3 for the public, and $2 for members. Show time is 8:30 p.m. on each of the two evenings.

BAT McGRATH . . . Singer, song-writer and poet Bat McGrath will be at Roxy Community Theater for two performances, at 8:30 p.m. on Friday and on Saturday, Nov. 18 and 19. Tickets will be available at the door at $3 to the public and $2 for members.

The recital is open to the public and there is no admission charge.

Paintings By Phillip Moose At Art Center

The current exhibition of paintings by Phillip Moose at the Greenville Art Center is a fascinating travelogue of some of the world's more attractive places.

In this show of 28 paintings, Moose has captured on canvas and paper scenes he has responded to as an artist traveling extensively in all seasons.

Other mountain scenes show rugged, snow-weighted Alps in Bavaria — muscular giants towering over villages huddled at their base.

Blacks, ochers and whites predominate in several studies of rural Russia — a wooden church in the country; a lonely house enclosed by virgin snow. There's one color-studded painting of the roof of a Moscow church that brings to mind remembered visions of the gingerbread house in "Hansel and Gretel."

In contrast to the starkness of Russian winters are a few paintings executed in the ripe colors of tropical places — tourist ports of call such as Bangkok and Fez. These, incidentally, are the only paintings in this show in which there are people. Moose most often paints quiet, remote places away from the pressure of people.

It would have been good to have had a few examples of Moose's abstractions — works like his "crumpled" series of which "Captive Bird" is an outstanding example.

Though basically limited to landscapes, this exhibit of Moose's paintings reaffirms his position as a gifted artist with the rare capacity to rate approval of critics, other artists, and the public.

The Moose show will be at the Art Center through November 28. Hours are 9 to 5 daily, Monday through Friday.

The Playhouse Presents 'An Evening Of Dance'

An Evening of Dance, one of several work-in-progress productions scheduled for the current season by the East Carolina Playhouse, will open Thursday, November 17 for three performances.

Curtain time on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, November 17, 18 and 19 is 8:15 p.m. Performances will be in the Studio Theater.

Sara Berman coordinates the production. The opening work of the dance program is Mark Rose's 16- minute telescoping of events from the celebrated Russian novel, Dostoevsky's The Brothers Karamazov.

A second dance, Black Sunday, expresses the feelings of loss and estrangment felt on being separated from friends. Rose is the dancer in this solo blues piece.

Ms. Berman is the choreographer of another dance, Prime Movers, an exploration into African rhythms using primitive dance forms.

The fifth work on the program is Patricia Pertalion's Debussy Suite. ECU dance faculty choreographer Pertalion describes this dance as "a movement visualization in the manner of Isadora Duncan."

The final two works are by Ms. Berman. These are Evocations and Blue Danube, the latter with the familiar music of the celebrated Strauss waltz.

Greenville residents who are members of the Playhouse dancers are Brent Harrell, Beth Hignite, and Anne H. L. Tsung.

Tickets are priced at $1.50 and are available in advance from the East Carolina Playhouse Box Office, telephone 757-6390 between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. Tickets, if seating is available, will also be sold at the door prior to performance.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Louise Wilkerson Perry

As the weather turns colder readers will find the new non-fiction at Sheppard Library to be both entertaining and informative. Perhaps the most popular of the biographies this season is MONTY. A biography of Montgomery Clift, it is written by Robert LaGuardia who has interviewed hundreds of Clift's family, friends, lovers, and associates. Here are pictures from the shooting of his famous films From Here To Eternity, The Misfits, A Place In The Sun, and the details of his private life-his battles with alcohol and drugs, his sexual encounters with men and women, and his sometimes bizarre behavior. Classically handsome, gifted, Clift was acclaimed by critics and the public alike yet he died at the age of forty-five a haunted, broken man.

Robert Metz's THE TODAY SHOW is the story of the glamour, the intrigue, and the rioutous fun of a long shot news show begun in 1952, and now savored with morning coffee by millions of viewers. Here are detailed the changes the show went through, from Dave Garroway and his chimp J. Fred Muggs to serious news and more conventional entertainment. The show, like any other, has its behind the scenes battles, and squabbles and these and the interesting personalities of Barbara Walters, Jane Pauley, Gene Shalit and many others make the book a must for avid talk show watchers.

CHILDREN WITH EMERALD EYES by Mira Rothberg is an intensely moving account of the author's work with schizophrenic and autistic children. It is a story of children in trouble, some cured, some not, who would, in previous centuries have been burned as witches or locked in attics, so strange is their behavior. Today Rothberg argues they are children who must be taken for what they are-sick but human, who must not be shunned but treated with sympathetic understanding.

Jay Anson's THE AMITYVILLE HORROR is the true story of a young family of five who moved into a idea new home, except that it was the scene of a massmurder, one year before, and fled twenty eight days later leaving clothes and furniture behind. The unbelievable events which occurred in that one month have been verified by priests and psychologists. This is an unforgettable book with all the shock and suspense of THE EXORCIST.

Three Shows On View In Kinston

The Bowl Chase Ends In Norfolk

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

NORFOLK, Va. — William & Mary quarterback Tom Rozantz put on a superb show of passing and running to spark the underdog Tribe to a 21-17 upset of East Carolina University Saturday afternoon.

The two met in the annual Oyster Bowl, a site that has pleased the Indians over the years. In five appearances since 1948, the Tribe has come away with four victories.

The afternoon was one of frustration for the Pirates, who saw any hope for a bowl game disappear with the defeat, which dropped them to 8-3 on the year.

Rozantz hit two passes for touchdowns, hitting Gray Oliver on a 17-yarder in the first period, and Joe Manderfield for 19 yards in the second. The tricky back took the final and decisive score in himself in the third period, from the 12.

That last score came despite the efforts of an unidentified fan who appeared to make a last ditch try to stop Rozantz at the goal line.

"I couldn't believe it was happening," Rozantz said. "I knew I was going in, and he just lunged at me with a body block across the thighs. I was speechless."

The fan was the only "Pirate" anywhere close to the Indian chief as he did his war dance.

East Carolina got two touchdowns, a 95-yard romp by Eddie Hicks, and a two-yard sprint out by Jimmy Southerland. Junior Creech added two PAT kicks and a 36-yard field goal.

Hicks' run, one of the few bright spots of the day, broke the school record for the longest run from scrimmage. The old mark was a 93-yarder by Dave Alexander against Howard back in 1964.

The Indians dominated the statistics, running off 26 first downs, while picking up 384 yards in total offense, 247 on the ground and 137 through the air.

East Carolina had 344 yards, 278 on the ground and 66 through the air.

The Indians were helped in the first period, when they forced the Pirates to kick into a strong wind, giving them the ball on the ECU 25. Then, on their final touchdown drive, after the Pirates took a 17-14 lead, two key penalties moved them along.

The first, a roughing the passer call, got the Indians out of a fourth down situation, and moved the ball to midfield. The next, on the following play for a personal foul, saw Gerald Hall ejected from the game, and the ball pushed to the 38.

The official who called the foul on Hall, umpire Jesse Birchfield, said he kicked a William & Mary player. "Hall said he didn't," coach Pat Dye said in the dressing room after the game. "The same official called holding on our nose guard, and I don't know how you can do that. The same one that called those two called seven 15-yarders against us against Southern Illinois last year."

Dye blamed the loss on the Pirates being undisciplined in the game. "That's my fault, and we'll do something about that next year," he said.

The Pirates scored on their first possession, getting Creech's field goal. The drive started from the ECU 25, and took only ten plays. Willie Hawkins took a 16-yard pitch out, and Southerland raced for 22 yards on another play to key the drive. But a motion penalty helped slow down the drive after it reached the 18, and Creech kicked the 36-yarder for a 3-0 lead with 11:13 left.

The Indians came back quickly to drive in just six plays down to the 10, but a fumble at the three cost them the ball.

But the Bucs were bottled up there, and punted, with the ball being downed after only 15 yards, at the 25, as the gusty wind caught the ball.

The Indians scored in just two plays. Rozantz picked up eight yards on first down, then hit Oliver on the sidelines for the final 17. Libassi's kick gave the Indians a 7-3 lead with 6:27 left in the period.

Another wind-held kick gave W & M the ball at the Buc 31, but Tommy Summer intercepted at the 34, and the Bucs got off a drive that finally ended in a foul at the Indian 17.

The Bucs forced another fumble, however, and took over at the Indian 44. From the 40, Leander Green tossed to Terry Gallaher, who lateraled back to Hicks, with the play carrying to the 19. The Pirates moved 16 more yards on carries by Theodore Sutton and Hawkins, but from the three, took four plays to score, with Southerland getting over on the option from the two. Creech made it 10-7 with 8:34 left in the half.

Rozantz guided the Indians right back down the field, keyed by another flag against the Pirates. That came on fourth and three, when a Pirate didn't quite make it off the field during the exchange of substitutes before the snap. Rozantz hit Manderfield for 27 yards during the series, and finally hit him all alone in the end zone from 19 yards out. Libassi made it 14-10 with 3:04 left to play.

Midway through the third period, the Pirates appeared to be backed up on their own five after an Indian punt.

But on first down, Hicks followed Sutton into the line, broke free, and sprinted the full 95 yards to put the Pirates back into the lead, 17-14 with 7:04 left in the quarter.

But the Pirates couldn't hold. The Indians got it on their own 23, and a Rozantz pass to Manderfield got a first down at the 36.

State Preserves Win On Defense

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

DURHAM — On fourth-and-two from the N. C. State eight-yard line, with the final seconds ticking off the scoreboard clock, Duke quarterback Mike Dunn took the snap from center, stepped back and then plunged off right tackle. He came up a foot short of the first down, enabling the Wolfpack to take over and run out the clock to preserve a 37-32 win over the Blue Devils yesterday afternoon.

The game was what most expected, a barn-burning offensive show that included a third-quarter scoring flurry, the likes of which has probably never been seen in the Blue Devil's ancient horseshoe, Wallace Wade Stadium. In a span of less than five minutes in the third, four touchdowns and a field goal were scored. Both teams got over 400 yards offensively in the contest, Duke just short of 500.

Though Duke's unofficial motto to this season is "Run With Dunn," it was the accurate and timely passing of the junior signal-caller which kept the Blue Devils in the game the entire afternoon and very nearly pulled it out for them in the closing seconds. The lithe, lanky QB completed 15 of 25 passes in the game for 239 yards and two TD's, as well as adding 105 on the ground, including a touchdown run of 33 yards.

The N. C. State offensive spark came from junior running back Ted Brown and senior quarterback Johnny Evans. Brown carried the ball 27 times for 137 yards, eclipsing, along the way, Don McCauley's three-year Atlantic Coast Conference rushing record. Brown now has 3,248 career yards. Evans connected on 11 of 16 aerial attempts for 217 yards.

State Scores In Spurts

The Wolfpack scoring came in spurts as it got 10 points early in the first quarter before Duke could get on the scoreboard and then struck for 14 third-quarter points in less than two minutes' time. The key score, however, came in the final period of play when Brown capped an 80-yard drive with a one-yard touchdown to give the Wolfpack the lead for good in the see-saw battle.

That was Brown's second touchdown of the day as he scored the Pack's first TD on a three-yard run in the first period. Tight end Lin Dawson and split end Elijah Marshall took passes from Evans for two other State touchdowns and Jon Hall returned a blocked punt for another Wolfpack score. Placekicker Jay Sherrill kicked a 24-yard field goal and four PAT's.

Beside's Dunn's scoring run, Duke got two touchdown passes from the quarterback, one to fullback Stan Broadie and the other to tight end Glenn Sandefur. Broadie also scored on a one-yard run a kicker Scott Wolcott booted a 42-yard field goal, as well as three conversion kicks.

State took the opening kickoff and drove 72 yards to the Duke seven. The big play in the drive was a 39-yard pass from Evans to split end Randy Hall. A five-yard offsides penalty stalled the drive, however, and the Wolfpack settled for a 24-yard Sherrill field goal.

Seven plays later, Dunn dropped back to pass, but was chased out of the pocket by a strong State rush. After eluding a pair of would-be tacklers, he set to throw, but the ball slipped out of his hand as he cocked and linebacker Bill Cowher recovered at the 12 for the Wolfpack.

Two plays later, State had a 10-0 lead as Brown went for nine yard on first down and then slipped off left tackle for the score with 7:33 left. Sherrill's PAT boot was true.

The Blue Devils lost another fumble on their next drive, but held the Pack at its own 48 and forced a punt. State claimed the kick hit Duke linebacker Carl McGee's foot and that one of the Wolfpack recovered, but Duke was awarded the ball at its 28.

Duke Gets On Scoreboard

Dunn then led the Blue Devils to their first touchdown of the day, running for 14 yards, hitting split end Tom Hall for 13 more and then running the final 33 yards down the sidelines after keeping the ball on an option play to the left.

Duke got the ball back just minutes later when State running back Billy Ray Vickers fumbled at the Blue Devil seven to foil the Pack's chances for another touchdown. Tackle Bill Marino recovered for Duke.

That set up a 93-yard touchdown drive with Dunn, Broadie and running back Mike Addesa doing most of the work. Broadie dove over the middle of the line for the touchdown with 2:30 left in the half to give Duke the lead for the first time, 14-10.

It was short-lived, however, as the Wolfpack battled the clock for another touchdown just before the half ended. State started at its own 20 after Wolcott's kickoff went out of the end zone and got some key passes from Evans to complete the drive, including a toss to Dawson for the final 13 yards.

Dawson's reception on the play, with just 14 seconds left in the half, gave the fans something to talk about at intermission as he was forced to come back from deep in the end zone and go over two Duke defenders to make the catch two yards inside the goal line.

Wild Third Quarter

The Blue Devils retaliated after halftime, taking the kickoff and driving 84 yards in 13 plays. A Dunn to Sandefur pass on third-and-ten from the Duke 27 gained 29 yards down to the State 44 and a sloppy, but effective, screen pass to address three plays later put the ball at the 31.

Dunn kept for no gain on first down and threw incomplete after a good Wolfpack rush on second down. With a third-and-ten, the Duke field general got heavy pressure from blitzing defensive back Ralph Stringer, but managed to lob the ball downfield to Broadie, who was waiting wide open at the seven. The tight end waltzed in with 10:00 on the clock to make it 21-17 Duke.

The Pack then held Duke following the kickoff to force a punt at the Blue Devil 14. End Marion Gale broke through to block the kick for State and Jon Hall picked the ball up at the 11 and ran into the end zone with 7:40 left in the third to give State a ten-point lead, 31-21.

Four plays later, Duke was back in the end zone and the ball was moving back and forth so fast the crowd must have felt like it was at a tennis match. Dunn got things rolling with a good run on a fake pitch play. He broke several tackles to get the ball to the Wolfpack 36. Then he hit Sandefur, who seemed to be open all afternoon, for the score.

The Blue Devils went for two, with Dunn and Broadie carrying the ball across. The quarterback never pulled the ball back on the option play and both players were holding onto it when they fell across the goal line. Dunn was credited with the two points.

Old Arenas Leave Unfavorable Memories in ACC

Editor's note: The lights are bright enough for color TV, the floors don't creak and the visiting team isn't in physical danger from the fans in the new arenas in the Atlantic Coast Conference. By comparison, they are sanitized and neutralized. It wasn't always that way, according to yesteryear's heros.

By JOHN LUMPKIN
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Billy Cunningham didn't know it, but the trouble he was having with his shoe laces that winter day was by design.

With his line-drive jumpers from the corner, he was demolishing lowly Virginia's hopes of an upset over North Carolina in Memorial Gymnasium, a WPA hall of horrors which would be out of place in today's heady Atlantic Coast Conference atmosphere.

But "Mem Gym" was like Virginia's sixth player, supplementing the five unfortunates on the court, especially if a student who arrived late and sat Indian-style at courtside could untie Billy's shoes when he had to stand between the student's folded legs to inbound the ball.

It wasn't always so.

Down Memory Lane are contraptions like Gore Gym on the old Wake Forest campus, the Tin Can at Chapel Hill, Fike Field House at Clemson — the last of the snakepits to be abandoned — and Thompson Gym at North Carolina State.

The "last" game at Thompson Gym in Raleigh was never played.

Recalls one State official, "People were all over the place. It was the Carolina game. They were coming in the windows. The crowd literally broke down the doors and they called off the game."

North Carolina State went downtown for the remainder of the season and the next season to Memorial Auditorium until William Neal Reynolds Coliseum — "The House that Case Built" — was ready.

Vic Bubas.

Now commissioner of the fledgling Sun Belt Conference, Bubas played for Everett Case at State and his mind was made up when he walked on the court Dec. 2, 1949.

"I was going to score the first basket in that place," said Bubas to a sports club last year. "I had watched films of Washington and Lee on opening taps and knew exactly how they moved so when the ball went up in the air, I was ready.

"I made up my mind if I got the opening tap, I was not going to pass off. I wanted that shot."

He got it but he missed.

He got the rebound and put it up. No go.

"I knocked down a teammate to get it after I missed my second shot, but I got it," and it went in, leaving Bubas one for three from the floor in the opening seconds.

Reynolds, the home of the Dixie Classic and 18 Southern Conference and ACC tournaments, "was clearly superior to the old facility. It was revolutionary for basketball in this area," says Willis Casey, North Carolina State athletic director.

Thompson Gym seated 4,200. Reynolds has places for 12,400. North Carolina State, shortly after moving to Reynolds, led the nation in on-campus attendance for seven consecutive years.

After Reynolds came Cole Field House in Maryland in 1955 with a present capacity of 14,500. Wake Forest moved its campus to Winston-Salem and, in 1955, the city opened War Memorial Coliseum, which seats 8,200 in steeply banked stands. North Carolina moved a few feet from Woollen Gym to Carmichael Auditorium — built too small as an "improvement" to Woollen and adjacent to it in 1965 for 8,800 people.

Virginia transferred the same year across the railroad tracks from Memorial Gym to University Hall where 8,500 can watch. Finally, in 1968, Clemson abandoned Fike Field House, full of folklore, for Littlejohn Coliseum, capacity 10,000-plus. Duke has played in Cameron Indoor Stadium, big for its day with 8,800 seats, since 1940.

The lore of the old places? Listen to those who played there.

WAKE FOREST

"The biggest regret that I had with Wake Forest was that we had to move to Winston-Salem with 8,500 seating capacity with old Gore Gym right on the old campus in Wake Forest," says former player and coach Bones McKinney, who can't resist speaking in superlatives. "It would hold about 2,100 but we put about 2,500 in there and that cut the court down for visiting teams because they were afraid to go down the sidelines because we had football players sitting in the first row...

"Talk about a homecourt advantage, you had it."

It was true, says Bones, that the fans were so close to the players that they pulled the hair on the visiting teams' legs. "That wasn't any problem, nor was it to step on his shoes, either way."

Ron Shavlik, now president of Carolina Maintenance Co. in Raleigh, recalls being a vistor to Gore when he played for North Carolina State from 1953 to 1956. "They had people situated to give us a pretty hard time on the bench. They had a popcorn machine in the corner and the smell of it was pretty strong... The football players were behind the bench and they heckled you all the time. We thought we'd never make it off the court."

Says Joe Quigg, now a 6-foot-9 dentist in Fayetteville, N.C., then an anchor on the 1957 national champion North Carolina team: "The worst thing was not playing there, it was getting in and out of the gym. The Wake Forest students would be waiting at the bus."

Even at Memorial Coliseum now, Wake Forest can't sell any new season tickets. City voters have turned down referedums to build a 16,000-seat coliseum and Wake is playing more games 30 miles down Interstate 40 in the Greensboro Coliseum with 15,000-plus seats. Like most other schools, Wake's "new" facility needs breathing room.

CLEMSON

The university named it Fike Field House and began playing basketball there in 1941. In other circles, it was called a 3,000 snakepit. When Clemson switched to Littlejohn Coliseum, former Athletic Director Frank Howard uses this description: "It's just like riding in a Cadillac when you're used to a Model T." Not only was Fike a gym, it was a rooming house. The third floor contained living quarters used by opposing coaches, teams and other visitors.

"Back then, we didn't have a hotel," says Howard.

"It wasn't so much the gym floor, although it was small," says former Duke guard Bucky Allen, 1955-58, now a Winston-Salem mortgage company vice president. "They used to play the pep band right behind your bench and they would play during a timeout — four of five of those big Sousaphones — and we had to go into the court to hold a timeout. I remember the coach drawing some plays and showing them and we never heard a word he said."

The Sousaphones were playing "Tiger Rag."

In his day, Bones McKinney says, "Clemson was the toughest other than ours. The football players, all of them, sat directly behind the bench. They threw blocks of ice at you. I caught one of them and turned around and said, 'Who did it?' A big tackle stood up and said, 'I did' whereupon I said, 'Are you enjoying the game, fellow?'"

According to North Carolina standout Lee Shaffer, "At one end, when you went in for a layup, you had to have one hand on the ball and one hand out in front of you to keep from hitting the stage."

Even though Littlejohn is preferable, Howard says, "You used to be able to just about touch the players. Now you are up in the rafters."

NORTH CAROLINA

Remember Bynum Gymnasium? If you do, your memory goes back a few years. That is where the Tar Heels played before the Tin Can. It's now Bynum Hall and houses the university cashier. The Tin Can is no longer, the victim of a bulldozer.

The basketball team moved to the Tin Can in 1923 and, as its successors, Woolen Gymnasium and Carmichael Auditorium, it was home for some great ones.

The 1924 national champions played there after the university built it for $54,482.25. There was virtually no way to heat the all-steel warehouse-like building and until its demise, it had only one toilet.

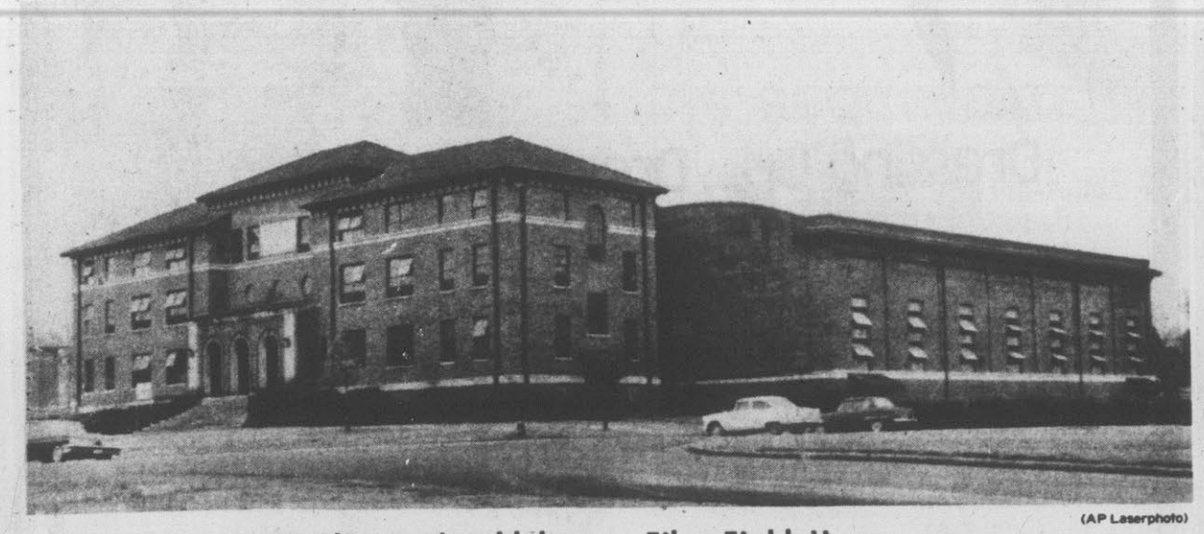

Woollen Gym was completed in 1938 and 5,632 persons could squeeze onto the portable bleachers.

Says Bucky Allen, "When you played there in the afternoon, when you were shooting a free throw and you were playing a certain spot on the floor, there was a series of windows behind the basket which the sun came in and you couldn't see the basket. But over there at that time, they had such good teams that I imagine a lot of people had trouble seeing the basket."

Yes, that was Woollen Gym, according to Joe Quigg, who wore Carolina Blue. "I think we usually took the basket not in the sun in the first half and by the second half, the sun was down."

Although Carmichael has more seats, there are those who say

The ACC

Famous Amos Leads Carolina

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Freshman speedster Amos Lawrence set Atlantic Coast Conference and NCAA rushing records Saturday as he piled up 286 yards to lead 19th ranked North Carolina to a 3514 victory over Virginia's Cavaliers.

The 5-foot-9, 170-pound tailback from Virginia Beach, Va., eclipsed the ACC single-game rushing record of 279 yards set by North Carolina's Don McCauley against Duke in 1970. His total was the highest ever recorded by a freshman in NCAA competition, topping the previous mark of 265 yards set by Pittsburgh's Tony Dorsett against Northwestern in 1973.

Lawrence had touchdown runs of 6 and 21 yards as North Carolina clinched at least a tie for the ACC football championship. The Tar Heels are 4-0-1 in conference play and need only to defeat or tie Duke in their season's finale next week to wrap up their first title since 1972. Their overall record is 7-21.

Virginia is 1-3 in the ACC and 1-8-1 overall.

Terps Nip Richmond

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Maryland's Terrapins built a 17-point second-quarter lead behind the running of sophomore George Scott and held on for a 27-24 football victory over Richmond's Spiders Saturday.

Scott, who ran for 170 yards on 35 carries, scored on runs of 1 and 5 yards as Maryland improved its record to 6-4.

The Terps also got field goals of 33 and 41 yards from Mike Sochko and a 6-yard touchdown pass from Dean Richards to Chuck White.

Richmond, 3-7, scored on Dave Taylor's touchdown passes to Jessie Williams and Ken Tweedy, Larry Braun's 33-yard run with a blocked punt and Steve Adam's 27-yard field goal.

The Spiders had an opportunity to pull the game out with 11 minutes remaining, but tight end Chris Reich dropped Taylor's 7-yard pass in the end zone.

Richmond blocked its second punt of the day on the Maryland 36 with 3:30 remaining, but the Maryland defense stiffened and the Terps took over on downs and ran out the clock.

But the Spiders tied it 2½ minutes later on Taylor's 33yard post pass to Williams following Ricky Jenkins' recovery of a fumbled punt by Maryland's Lloyd Burruss.

Quarterback Larry Dick's 50yard screen pass to Mickey Dudish set up Sochko's 33-yard field goal with 2:40 left in the opening period to put Maryland up to 10-7.

USC Rolls Past Deacs

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — South Carolina rolled up 343 yards rushing, including a 58-yard touchdown run by tailback Spencer Clark, as the Gamecocks downed Wake Forest 24-14 Saturday in college football.

The Deacons threatened in the fourth quarter as they came back from a 17-7 deficit with a touchdown by flanker John Zeglinski on a 13-yard pass play.

The Gamecocks' final score came three plays after defensive back Nat Veal scooped up a Zeglinski fumble on the Deacon 12-yard line. Tailback Johnnie Wright carried the ball in from the two-yard line.

Earlier, South Carolina capitalized on another Deacon fumble.Tailback James McDougald lost the ball on the South Carolina 31. Then Gamecock quarterback Ron Bass pushed his team 71 yards in 14 plays with kicker Britt Parrish booting a 31-yard field goal, making the score 17-7.

Buc Season Ends

The Pirates were then hit with their two 15-yarders, and that moved the ball all the way to the ECU 28.

The Indians got a first down at the 17, and Craig Cook got five yards. Rozantz then rolled around the right side, and found himself open for a dash to the end zone.

That run was almost stopped by the ECU fan, but not quite.

The Indians led 21-17, with [illegible] left in the third period, but it was to be the last of the scoring.

East Carolina drove from its own 20 late in the game, but the drive finally petered out at the 20, and the Bucs turned it over on downs with 4:12 to go. From there on out, the Indians controlled the ball, getting a first down at midfield with less than a minute left to run out the clock.

Rozantz, selected as the game's most valuable player, ended up with 101 yards rushing on 16 carries, and hit 10 of 15 passes for 137 yards.

East Carolina is now finished for this season, while the Indians, 5-5, face Richmond in Williamsburg next week.

Lipford Leads WCU

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Western Carolina tailback Darrell Lipford ran for 243 yards and scored three touchdowns Saturday as the Catamounts whipped Marshall 41-26 in a Southern Conference football game.

Lipford's 243 yards, which came on 35 carries, was a school record. The Lenore, N.C., senior also finished the game with a career total of more than 4,000 yards and thus became the all-time leading rusher in North Carolina collegiate football — surpassing the 3,971 yards set by Mike Voight of the University of North Carolina.

Irish Rally Overcomes Strong Clemson Tigers

By ED ROWLAND
Associated Press Writer

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP)—Fifthranked Notre Dame may have expected to beat 15th-ranked Clemson when the teams met for the first time ever Saturday, but the Irish couldn't have known Clemson would beat itself.

Clemson built a 17-7 lead, then collapsed and lost 21-17 as Notre Dame kept up the pressure and recovered fumbles at key moments late in the game.

The victory was a victory, however, to Irish Coach Dan Devine. Nevertheless, he spent part of his time in a post-game news conference criticizing the officiating.

A mixed crew of officials from the Big 10 and the Atlantic Coast Conference worked the intersectional game and Devine called it the worst job of officiating he has seen.

Devine was socked with a 15-yard penalty for unsportsmanlike conduct after coming onto the field twice in the third period as Notre Dame was driving for a score.

Devine said never before in 25 years of being a head coach, including four years in the National Football League with the Green Bay Packers, had he ever been so penalized.

He went onto the field the first time after Notre Dame was called for illegal motion and penalized five yards. Two plays later, halfback Vagas Ferguson twisted his way for 12 yards to the Clemson 37, but a flag thrown for clipping nullified the gain and put the ball back 15 additional yards.

Then the penalty against Devine left the Irish with second down and 42 yards to go for a first down at their own 44-yardline.

However, quarterback Joe Montana threw 27 and 16 yards to tight end Ken MacAfee and directed short running plays that put the ball on the Clemson two at the end of the third period.

Montana sneaked over the goal line on the next play, the first of two touchdowns he scored, and Notre Dame had it locked up.

Clemson's Steve Fuller was a magician with the ball in the middle two quarters of the game as the Tigers built a lead that looked insurmountable. Then came the key mistakes.

Jerome Heavens gave Notre Dame an early lead with a 5-yard run late in the first period. The Tigers surged back on an 80-yard march, following a missed Irish field goal, but had to settle for a 30-yard field goal by Obed Ariri.

Fuller sprinted 10 yards around the left side late in the second period to make the halftime score 10-7.

The Tigers' Lester Brown made it 17-7 with a 1-yard run into the corner of the end zone early in the third quarter, but from then on it was all Notre Dame.

Notre Dame marched from its 16, following a Tiger fumble, to the Clemson two to set the stage for Montana's first score. He dived over again midway the fourth period to cap a 50-yard march after another Clemson fumble.

The Irish record went to 8-1, while Clemson dropped to 7-2-1.

A record crowd of 54,189 plus representatives from eight bowl games watched the inspired Tigers go ahead on a drive that began on the Notre Dame 34.

Fuller mixed pitchouts with keeper plays and a pass to set up his own score. Fuller three a 35-yard pass to Warren Ratchford early in the third period, which was the key play in a 48-yard drive that ended with Brown's run. But then the roof caved in.

Notre Dame ate up the clock on an 84-yard drive, leading to Montana's first score on the first play of the fourth period, but needed only seven plays to go 50 yards for the final touchdown.

Fumble Helps Duke

the Wolfpack 27 and that gave the Blue Devils the opportunity to take the lead once again. Stringer took Wolcott's kick at the five, but was met by Kevin Reilly at the 25. The ball popped loose and Mike Mann recovered for Duke.

The Wolfpack defense rose to the occasion and, with the help of a five-yard penalty, held to Blue Devils to just two yards in three plays. But on fourth down, Wolcott kicked a 42-yard field goal to make it 32-31 Duke with 5:02 left in the exhausting third period.

State's Final Drive

The game-winning N. C. State drive came in the fourth quarter after a 52-yard attempt by Wolcott was way short.

The Wolfpack took over on its 20 and Marshall made some good moves after catching Evans pass for a first down at the 32. The State quarterback then found Vickers over the middle, despite heavy pressure, for 17 more yards to the Duke 49.

Randy Hall made a good catch at the Blue Devil 37 and, two plays later, Brown got to the outside and turned on the speed for 11 yards to the 19. Brown, Vickers and Evans then took turns running the ball, moving it to the one, where Brown spun off left tackle into the end zone to give the Wolfpack the lead, 37-32 with 7:17 left.Evans was stopped short on a two-point conversion attempt.

The Blue Devils' final drive began at the Duke 30 after an Evans punt and they battled the clock with no time-outs left to get to the eight, where Dunn was stopped short on fourth down.

The victory ends the N. C. State regular season with a 7-4 record, but the Wolfpack holds hope of a bowl opportunity. A Peach Bowl official viewed yesterday's game.

Purdue Tops Soviet Team

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind (AP — Forward Walter Jordan scored 24 points Saturday night, leading Purdue's fast-breaking Boilermakers to an easy 85-75 exhibition basketball victory over the touring Soviet National team.

Purdue trailed only twice, 2-0 and 3-2, before a three-point play by Wayne Walls put them ahead to stay.

Purdue led 16-12, then scored six straight points on a stuff shot by Joe Barry Carroll, a fast-break lay-up by Jerry Sichting and a steal and dunk by Jordan.

A string of seven points by Carroll, Purdue's 7-foot center, helped the Boilermakers open a 17-point lead before Vladimir Zhigiliy cut the lead to 50-35 at the half.

Purdue took a 25-point lead, 68-43, in the second half.

Zhigiliy and Sergei Iovasha, who combined for the Soviets' last five points of the first half and first 26 points in the second period, led their team with 28 and 20 points, respectively.

Southeastern Conference

Cats Claw Gators

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Quarterback Derrick Ramsey took personal charge of the Kentucky offense Saturday, running for a touchdown and a two-point conversion as the seventh-ranked Wildcats rallied to beat Florida 14-7 in a Southeastern Conference game.

The victory gave Kentucky a 9-1 record and 5-0 in the SEC but no chance at a title or bowl game because of probation.

Florida's record dropped to 4-3-1 and 3-3 in the SEC.

Trailing 7-6, Kentucky stormed back in the third quarter to drive 77 yards on Ramsey's passes for 17 yards to Greg Nord, 14 to Scott Petersen and 13 to Randy Brooks. Ramsey plunged the final yard for the go-ahead touchdown and then raced around left end for a two-point conversion.

The Wildcats scored first in the opening period after Mike Siganos returned a punt 28 yards and fumbled forward to the Florida 27 where Dallas Owens recovered. On the fourth play after that Freddie Williams ran one yard to score.

Eagles Stop Tigers

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — William Andrews scored two touchdowns and hammered out almost 150 yards as Auburn, capitalizing on fumble recoveries, downed Georgia 33-14 in a Southeastern Conference football game Saturday.

Andrews scored with runs of 32 and 1 yards, as the Tigers squared their record at 5-5 for the year and clinched a runner-up finish in the SEC, with a 4-1 record.

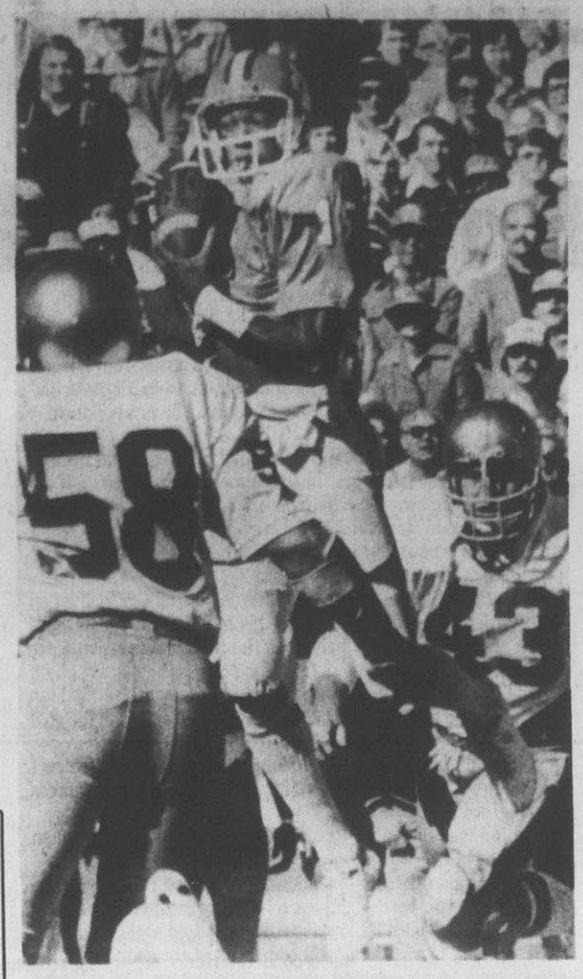

The Bulldogs, falling to 5-5 overall and 2-4 in the SEC, lost six fumbles during the game played in brisk 50-degree weather.

Rebels Whip Vols

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Fullback James Storey scored three times Saturday as Mississippi humiliated Tennessee 43-14 in a Southeastern Conference football game.

The Rebels took advantage of almost every Volunteers' mistake, turning four Tennessee fumbles into three touchdowns and a field goal. The victory gave Mississippi a 5-5 record, while Tennessee fell to 3-6.

Ole Miss took a 17-0 first-quarter lead after Tennessee took the kickoff and was forced to punt without recording even a first down.

Clemson's Jerry Butler hauls in pass

Crimson Tide Breezes, 36-0

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Jeff Rutledge's passes and Ozzie Newsome's record-setting catches paced second-ranked Alabama to a 36-0 football victory over the Miami Hurricanes Saturday for the Crimson Tide's 42nd straight decision at home.

Rutledge threw two scoring passes to Rick Neal for five and seven yards and hit Newsome on four passes for 106 yards. That gave Newsome 1,947 yards in his Alabama career, shadowing the previous Tide record of 1,857 set by David Bailey in 1969-71.

The Alabama defense shut down Miami completely, helped by interceptions by Barry Krauss and Scott Price.

After a scoreless first period, Rutledge hit Neal on the first play of the second quarter. On Alabama's next possession, the Tide moved 49 yards, including runs of 15 by Rutledge and 16 by Tony Nathan, who then dove over the top for the final yard.

Roger Chapman kicked a 27-yard field goal to complete the first half scoring, but he missed four other attempts and an extra point kick in the half.

Ottis Anderson and Chris Hobbs ran the ball to the Alabama 34 early in the game but Chris Dennis was short on a 52-yard field goal try.

Showdown Is Set

Michigan Rolls

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Michigan turned an offside penalty and a fumbled punt recovery into second quarter touchdowns by Mark Schmerge and Roosevelt Smith Saturday, then blew out Purdue in the third period for a 40-7 victory that avenged the Wolverines' only loss of last year.

The triumph by sixth-ranked Michigan, 9-1, set up next week's showdown with Ohio State for the Big Ten football championship and an automatic berth in the Rose Bowl.

The Boilermakers, trying to duplicate last year's 16-14 upset of Michigan, scored on their opening drive behind the strong-arm passing of freshman quarterback Mark Herrmann.

A 28-yard field goal by Gregg Willner after Dwight Hicks' pass interception cut Purdue's lead to 7-3 after one quarter. Then Michigan went ahead to stay in the second period, scoring twice while holding the Boilermakers to 24 yards total offense.

Michigan added three more touchdowns in the third quarter, including another pass reception by Schmerge from quarterback Rick Leach, and Tom Seabron tackled Herrmann in the end zone for a safety midway in the final period.

The Wolverines, held to one first down in the opening period, ground out 60 yards on their first series of the second quarter. Purdue seemingly had them stopped at the Boilermaker 29-yard line, but an offside penalty gave the Wolves new life at the 24.

Bucks Seek Roses

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Quarterback Rod Gerald ignited a 21-point third-quarter explosion Saturday and fourthranked Ohio State went on to crush Indiana 35-7 for a record six straight Big Ten Conference football title or co-title.

The Buckeyes, 7-0 in the conference and 9-1 overall, can wrap up the sole championship by winning at second place Michigan next week.

The Wolverines, if they beat Ohio State, would share the crown.

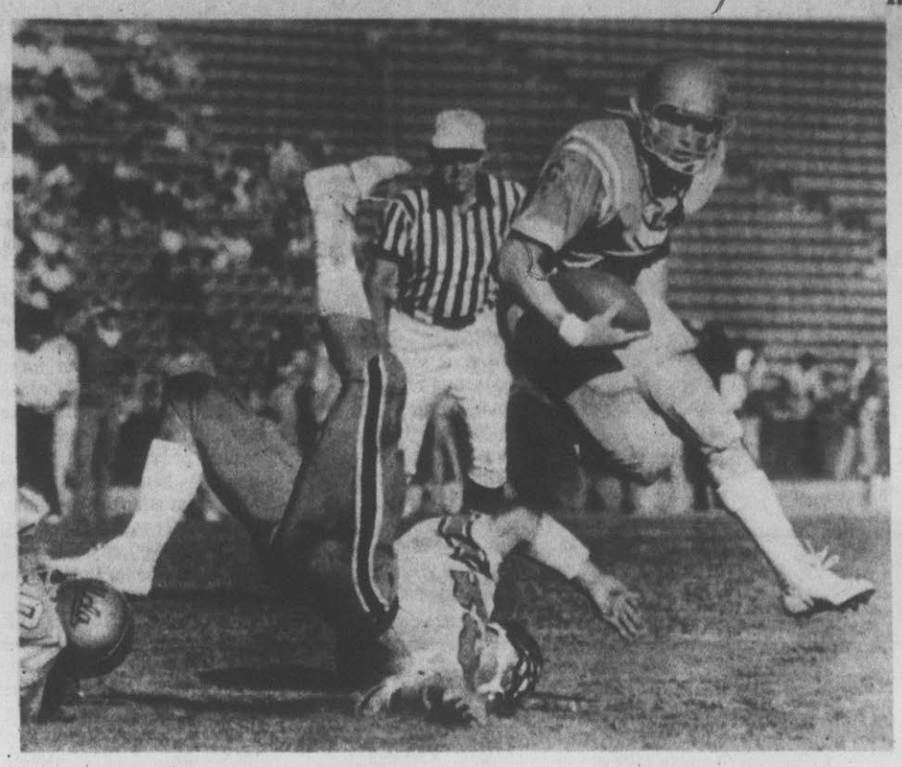

Gerald ran eight yards for one touchdown and passed 29 yards to Jim Harrell for another score after the surprising Hoosiers, 3-3-1 and 4-4-1, had played heavily favored Ohio State to a 7-7 half time tie.

Tailback Ron Springs, who became the sixth player in Ohio State history to achieve 1,000 yards rushing in a single season, also scored from the one. The three touchdowns sent the Buckeyes into a 28-7 lead after three quarters.

Ohio State's 56th straight home sellout of more than 87,000 sat stunned as Indiana surged 80 yards with the opening kickoff. Quarterback Scott Arnett, a hometown boy, passed two yards to Keith Calvin for the touchdown.

Moments later, fullback Joel Payton scored on a three-yard run, the freshman's 13th touchdown this season.

Another Ohio State fullback, Paul Campbell, ran across from one yard midway in the fourth quarter to wrap up the title-clinching victory. Ohio State has won or shared the last five Big Ten championships.

Marquette Beats Cubans

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Guard Butch Lee scored 12 of his game-high 20 points in the second half Saturday as defending NCAA champion Marquette defeated the Cuban national basketball team 71-58.

It was the first stop in a nine-game tour of the United States for the Cubans. The next game is Sunday at Brookings, S.D., against South Dakota State.

Lee scored three straight baskets for Marquette as the Warriors took a 44-34 lead with 13:15 left to play, then added another field goal after Ruperto Herrara hit a long jumper for the Cubans.

The closest the Cubans came after that was 50-42 on a Felix Morales jumper with nine minutes left. It was the first game for the Warriors under new Coach Hank Raymonds, a long-time assistant who succeeded Al McGuire after the Warriors won the National Collegiate Athletic Association title last season.

Jerome Whitehead added 14 points for Marquette. Morales had 16 points for the Cubans, eight in the closing minutes.

Marquette overcame a 6-0 deficit and took its first lead at 9-8 on a Lee jump shot, then expanded the margin to 19-13 with 9:17 left in the first half as freshman forward Oliver Lee hit two straight jumpers.

But the Cubans rallied, scoring four of the next five baskets—two each by Alejandro Urgelles and Generoso Marquez—tying the score 21-21. Urgelles led the Cubans with 17 points, 13 in the first half.

Whitehead hit a baseline jumper and Butch Lee a jumper from the free throw line, putting Marquette ahead 25-21 with 4:38 left in the half.

But baskets by Tomas Herrera and Luiz Calderon tied the score again 27-27 with 2:06 remaining.

Penn State Waits For Bowl

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Quarterback Chuck Fusina threw three touchdown passes, two to flanker Jimmy Cefalo who also scored on a 9-yard run, as ninth-ranked Penn State beat Temple 44-7 Saturday and then sat back to await an almost certain major bowl bid.

Penn State built a 30-7 halftime lead in boosting its record to 9-1, with Pitt left on the schedule Nov. 26, a week after bowl invitations are issued.

Representatives of both the Orange and the Sugar bowls watching the snow-swept game in 30-degree temperatures said they would make their announcements Nov. 19, and would not wait for the Penn State-Pitt shootout in Pittsburgh on national television.

The Nittany Lions reportedly have the inside track to a Jan. 2 Orange Bowl confrontation with the Big Eight champion, either Oklahoma or Nebraska.

Matt Bahr's 27-yard field goal and a 16-yard touchdown pass from Fusina to Ed Guthrie gave State a 10-0 first-period lead over its intrastate rival from Philadelphia.

Temple battled back momentarily, scoring on a 1-yard, second-quarter smash by Anthony Anderson at the end of a 75-yard drive.

But the Owls, who lost to highly favored Penn State teams by just a point in each of the last two years, didn't have the firepower to stay with the 1977 Lions' powerhouse.

Before the half ended, linebacker Rick Donaldson returned a blocked punt 22 yards for a touchdown, Matt Suhey capped a 43-yard drive with a 2-yard score, and Fusina threw 12 yards to Cefalo for another TD.

In the second half, State rolled to a pair of third-quarter touchdowns on Cefalo's 9-yard run and Fusina's 26-yarder to Cefalo after the flanker returned a punt 45 yards.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Penn State has agreed to play the Big Eight Conference champion in the Orange Bowl, according to the New Orleans States-Item.

The paper said Friday that although official bowl invitations can't be issued before Nov. 19, Penn State had taken itself out of the running for the Sugar Bowl here.

Hipp Helps Huskers

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP)—Ibacks I.M. Hipp and Rick Berns powered 12th ranked Nebraska's best-ever offensive effort, as Hipp rushed 200 yards and Berns scored three touchdowns, while the Huskers demolished Kansas 52-7 Saturday to set up the perennial Big Eight football showdown the day after Thanksgiving.

The Huskers, now 8-2, will play Oklahoma Nov. 25 trying for a share of the conference title and an Orange Bowl bid.

Hipp, who had 161 yards in the first half, shared prime running duties with Berns, who scampered 107 yards on his way to the three TDS.

Wingback Curtis Craig scored a pair of Nebraska's touchdowns and third-string quarterback Ed Burns, a fifth-year senior who had seen little action, scored on a 3-yard keeper in the fourth quarter.

Nebraska's offense exceeded the 523 rushing yards record set against Hawaii in 1954 with 556 total rushing yards.

Sooners Ramble Over Colorado

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma fullback Kenny King slammed through the middle of Colorado's defense for 121 yards as the third-ranked Sooners posted an easy 52-14 victory over the Buffalos Saturday in Big Eight football action.

King gained 95 of his yards in the first half as the Sooners broke the nationally televised game open early and took a commanding 35-7 halftime lead. King carried only four times in the third quarter before he retired to the bench with the rest of the starters.

Oklahoma appeared capable of doing just about anything it wanted to do against the Buffs. Meanwhile, the Sooner's defense shut down the Colorado offense completely except for a lone 48-yard scoring drive late in the first half, and a scoring drive against the Oklahoma reserves with time running out in the game.

The Sooner defense again proved itself to be one of the finest in the nation by picking off four interceptions, two by Zac Henderson, and recovering two fumbles. Both fumbles and one interception led to touchdowns.

The defense also held Colorado to 148 yards rushing, with 80 of that total coming on the last scoring drive against the Sooner reserves. The Buffaloes hit on 10 of 24 passes for 99 yards, but never threatened through the air except for the first-half scoring drive when a 14-yard pass from Jeff Knapple to Bob Niziolec carried to the Oklahoma 3.

Jeff Mayberry scored from there, but that was the last threat Colorado mounted until the final drive, which was capped by a 1-yard run by Bob Humble.

Oklahoma, meanwhile, rolled up 430 yards rushing and hit three of six passes for 57 yards and one touchdown. The aerial score came on a 28-yard pass from quarterback Thomas Lott to Steve Rhodes after a fumble recovery at the Colorado 28.

The Sooners also scored on runs of 1, 2 and 16 yards by Billy Sims; 3 yards by Elvis Peacock; 6 yards by Lott and 15 yards by Jeff Williams. Uwe von Schamann also hit on a 36-yard field goal.

Panthers March Over Army

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Matt Cavanaugh threw his second and third touchdown passes of the game as 10th-ranked Pitt exploded for 31 points in the second period despite a mere 4:05 in possession time and crushed Army 52-26 Saturday.

Cavanaugh, who capped a 93-yard drive by hurling a 38-yard scoring pass to Willie Taylor in the opening period, connected on tosses of 21 yards to Randy Reutershan and 19 to Taylor in the second quarter.

Those drives covered 47 and 76 yards, respectively, but took only 32 and 57 seconds. Earlier in the period, Elliott Walker ran 14 yards for a touchdown and Larry Sims dashed 7 for another tally on scoring strikes that lasted just 5 and 9 seconds.

Mark Schubert added a 24-yard field goal, sub quarterback Rick Trocano flipped a 1-yard touchdown pass to fellow freshman Benjy Pryor and Gordon Jones returned a kickoff 93 yards as the Panthers boosted their record to 8-1-1 following an opening-game loss to Notre Dame in which Cavanaugh suffered a disabling first-period injury.

Despite the lopsided defeat, Army is 6-4 and assured of its first winning season since 1972. Both teams have one game remaining, on Nov. 26 — Pitt against Penn State and Army against Navy.

Army shocked the disappointing turnout of 35,387 in 76,000-seat Giants Stadium by driving to the Pitt 3 yardline on its initial possession after Steve Miller recovered a fumble by the Panthers' Fred Jacobs at the Cadets' 37.

Carter Watches Middies Win

ANNAPOLIS (AP)—Quarterback Bob Leszczynski and tailback Joe Gattuso led Navy to a 20-16 victory Saturday over Georgia Tech in a college football game watched by President Carter, Navy's best-known alumnus.

Carter, attending his first football game as chief executive, saw Leszczynski run for a touchdown and set up a second. Gattuso gained 142 yards on 38 carries, a performance which gave him Navy season records for most yards, most carries and most all-purpose plays.

Carter, who attended Georgia Tech before becoming a member of Navy's class of 1947, spend one half of the game on Georgia Tech's side and the other half on Navy's on a chilly day with snow flurries.

Georgia Tech was threatening in the final seconds of the game under the direction of backup quarterback Gary Hardie but saw its chances die when defensive halfback Glenn Flanagan intercepted a pass on the Navy three.

After a first half dominated by offense, the teams could only managed a field goal apiece in the second half, Navy's coming in the third period when it controlled the ball for all but 1:34.

In the first half, Navy got its 17 points following long drives. Georgia Tech scored twice in lightning fashion.

Arkansas Takes Crucial Contest

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Arkansas quarterback Ron Calcagni threw a 58-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Robert Farrell with only 1:41 to play Saturday and the eighth-ranked Razorbacks outlasted 11th-ranked Texas A&M 26-20 in a critical Southwest Conference game.

Tony Franklin, Texas A&M's barefoot place-kicker, had booted a 25-yard field goal to tie the game to 20 early in the fourth period.

The Aggies, playing before the second largest crowd in Kyle Field history, appeared to have taken the wind out of the Razorbacks with a tremendous goal line stand as Garry Milligan stopped Razorback halfback Ben Cowins cold on fourth-and-one at the A&M 17.

Defense Keys Jaguars For 10-0 Win Over Plymouth

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central's hard-nosed defense, which is largely responsible for the Jaguars being in the state 3-A playoffs, played a major role in helping the Jags' to a 10-0 first-round victory over Plymouth Friday night.

The defensive unit had a hand in both the Farmville scores and shut down the Vikings' offense to just nine total yards.

The Jaguars, though much better than Plymouth offensively, could put but 10 points on the scoreboard, missing on three "golden opportunities," which could have made the final score much more one-sided.

"We played real good defense," head coach Gene Brewer said after the ballgame, "but our offense is still very inconsistent. We missed some golden opportunities to score in both halves."

One of the main troubles with the offense is a lack of good blocking, Brewer said, adding, "They threw a few wrinkles at us, but that shouldn't have made a whole lot of difference this late in the season.

"You ought to be satisfied when you win your first playoff game," Brewer concluded. "We played with a lot of heart."

The Jaguars scored in the first quarter and for much of the game it looked like the final might read 3-0. David Dunn, younger brother to the Jaguars' standout Ted Dunn of last season, kicked a 26-yard field goal on his first varsity attempt with 1:39 left in the first period to provide the initial Farmville points.

That margin held up until the last play of the third quarter when James Tyson fielded a punt at midfield and returned it for a TD and Dunn added the PAT kick for the final 10-0 score.

Jaguar linebacker Donald Reid kicked off in the first quarter as Plymouth won the toss and elected to receive. James Brown received the kick and was met head-on by Reid at the 32. That bruising tackle, which sent Brown to the sideline for a few plays, set the stage for a hard-hitting defensive battle.

The Jaguars held the Vikings to a single first down on their initial possession, forcing a punt. They fumbled at their 16 on third down, however, and the ball was recovered by Plymouth's David Norfleet. On the next play, Plymouth quarterback Guy Waters made a bad pitch and Woody Edwards recovered to return the ball to Farmville on the Jaguar 26.

Farmville then got its offense going, for a spell, mixing passess and runs to drive down to the Plymouth 10. Walter Blow and Donald Reid did most of the work on the ground, while quarterback Donald Freeman hit passes of five and 24 yards to Rufus Mayo and Tyson, respectively.

The Viking defense stiffened deep in its own territory, forcing a fourth-and-four from the 10' Brewer sent in Dunn, who booted the ball through the uprights from the 16-yard line to give the home team a 3-0 lead.

The Jaguars missed one of those golden opportunities on their next possession when a short Viking punt, fielded on the run by Scott Evans, gave them a first down at the Farmville 49.

Reid carried twice down to the 39 and Freeman took the ball around right end for 17 more yards to the 22. The starting quarterback was hurt on the play and Evans came in, carrying around left end for six yards to the 10 on second down.

Reid and Blow got it down to just inches away from the goal line and Evans tried to sneak it in on fourth down, but was stopped for no gain.

The Jaguars failed to capitalize on another excellent scoring opportunity on their first possession of the second half. They drove the ball to the Plymouth 45 after the kickoff, but were forced to punt. Evans' kick hit receiver Thomas Maloney and Warren Carlton recovered for Farmville at the Viking 16.

The Jags got to the 11 but a holding penalty on third down pushed them back out to the 29 where Freeman failed to connect on a pair of passes.

The goal line stand seemed to fire up the Vikings, who came out and ran three consecutive quarterback sneaks to pick up a first down at the Plymouth 38. Then, however, the Farmville defense came to life, holding the Vikes for no gain on two plays and then throwing Brown for a four-yard loss to bring up a punt.

Farmville also forced the Vikes to punt on their next possession, when two straight losses resulted in a fourth-and-19 at the Viking eight. Punter Scott Grimes was hit by a Jaguar on the attempt and a 15-yard penalty moved the ball up to the 23. Grimes went out on the play and was replaced by Shelton McNair, who kicked the ball to Tyson at the 50. He returned to the left, picked up an excellent block from Blow as he rounded the corner, and raced down the sideline for the touchdown as time ran out in the third quarter.

The Jags might have scored on their final possession late in the final period driving to the Viking 15, but Brewer was satisfied to keep the ball on the ground and run out the clock.

The victory sets up a rematch of last year's eastern 3-A finals as Farmville will travel to Clinton next week to face the Dark Horses, who defeated Havelock 15-8 Friday night. Due to a reallignment, these two teams meet in the semifinals of the eastern playoffs this year rather than the finals.

The win gives Farmville Central a 10-1 record going into the Clinton game, including nine straight victories.

Texas Rolls

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Olympic sprinter Johnny "Lam" Jones scored twice on passes and Earl Campbell bolted for two more touchdowns to become the fifth-leading rusher in NCAA history Saturday as No. 1 Texas walloped Texas Christian 44-14.

Freshman Sam Ansley, starting because of injuries to Texas' top three quarterbacks, opened the scoring in the Southwest Conference game with a 56-yard pass to Jones, a 9.1 second sprinter.

A 10-yard toss to Jones on fourth down gave Texas a 35-7 halftime lead, and Coach Fred Akers inserted subs early in the third quarter.

Campbell ran 19 and 28 yards for touchdowns, finishing with 21 carries for 153 yards in playing just over a half.

That pushed his career total to 4,040 yards.

Campbell moved ahead of former Oklahoma star Joe Washington, who had 3,995 yards. Only Tony Dorsett, Archie Griffin, Ed Marinaro and Terry Miller, who still is playing for Oklahoma State, have rushed for more yards.

Iowa St. Wants Bowl

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Bowl-hungry Iowa State took advantage of two Kansas State mistakes, opened up an early lead and went on to hand the Wildcats and their departing coach, Ellis Rainsberger, their 20th consecutive Big Eight Conference football loss Saturday, 22-15.

The Cyclones, still miffed at being overlooked by bowl selectors last season, ran their 1977 record to 7-3, including four victories in six conference games.

Stanford Holds

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Freshman Darrin Nelson rushed for 211 yards and broke two Stanford records Saturday, but the error-plagued Cardinals needed a last-minute interception by linebacker Ray Cardinalli to nail down a 31-26 victory over San Jose State.

Nelson carried 20 times as he boosted his season total yardage to 975, breaking the record of 936 set by Ray Handley in 1964.

Bruins Win

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Quarterback Steve Bukich ran for one touchdown and passed for another Saturday in directing UCLA to a 48-18 Pacific-8 conference football victory over Oregon State.

The triumph was the fifth in a row for the Bruins, who are tied with Washington for first place in the Pac-8 Conference.

UCLA, 5-1 in conference and 7-3 over-all, would earn a berth in the Rose Bowl by beating Southern California in the final game for both teams Nov. 25, because the Bruins defeated Washington earlier this season.

Bukich, replacing injured Rick Bashore and making his first start this year, scored on a 1-yard run and teamed with Homer Butler on a 47-yard pass play 47 seconds before halftime. Bukich, a junior, finished with 10 completions in 15 pass attempts for 140 yards.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Rams have signed a pair of veterans to fill the holes resulting from injuries to guard Dennis Harrah and linebacker Kevin McLain against Tampa Bay last Sunday.

Idaho Loses

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Quarterback Jack Thompson passed for four touchdowns and defensive tackle Terry Anderson recovered two fumbles to set up scores as Washington State drubbed Idaho 45-17 in nonconference college football Saturday.

Huskies Close

SEATTLE (AP) — Quarterback Warren Moon scored on runs of 2 and 71 yards and passed 19 yards to Spider Gaines for another score to lead Washington to a 28-10 victory over mistake-prone Southern Cal Saturday that moved the Huskies a step closer to the Rose Bowl.

The victory enabled Washington to keep pace with UCLA in the Pacific-8 Conference with a 5-1 record. The loss dropped the 14th-ranked Trojans to 4-2 in the league and all but ended their chance of returning to Pasadena in January.

The Huskies, 6-4, forced USC into mistake after mistake on the cold, blustery, wet day before 59,501 Huskies Stadium fans. The Trojans lost three fumbles, had two punts blocked and were intercepted three times. A roughing-the-kicker penalty also led to a Washington touchdown.

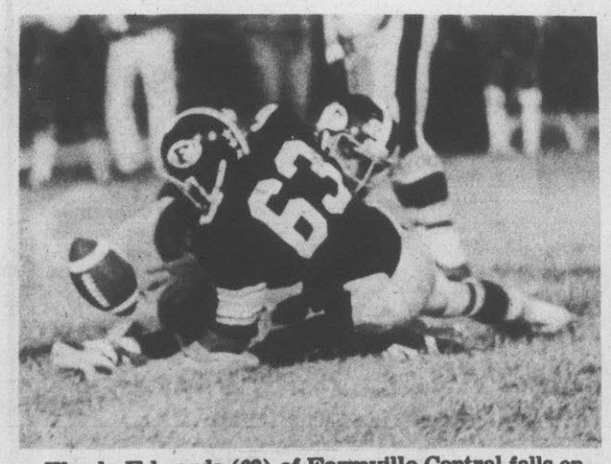

Bears Whip Ducks

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Gary Grauman completed 12 of 19 passes for 182 yards in leading California to a 31-3 halftime lead Saturday, and the Golden Bears went on to a 48-16 Pacific-8 Conference football victory over Oregon.

Jim Breech's 30-yard field goal early in the second period put Cal ahead 17-0 a few minutes before Don Alaman recovered a fumble by Oregon quarterback Tim Durando on the Oregon 20-yard line.

California drove to the one-yard line, then John Williams leaped over the goal line on fourth down to put the Bears ahead 24-0. It was their fourth score after just four times in possession of the ball.

Tenacious Camp Lejeune Runs Past Roanoke In Opener, 29-16

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

ROBERSONVILLE — If you were trying to characterize the Camp Lejeune High School mascot, the Devil Pup, in human qualities, you would probably be likely to come up with terms like diminutive, aggressive, tenacious.

And if you were to describe Devil Pup running back Ken Scott, you would probably use the same terms. The 5-7, 130-pound senior ripped his way through the Roanoke lines Friday night for three touchdowns and 293 yards as the Lejeune eleven gained a 29-16 victory over the Redskins.

Scott logged touchdown runs of 13, 9 and 6 yards as he carried the ball 38 times for the Devil Pups. He paced the way as the Pups ground out 237 yards on the ground and picked up an additional 50 in passing for a net of 343.

Roanoke picked up 192 in rushing, and got 75 in passing, all of the latter in the final period.

Roanoke got a 55-yard touchdown run from Tony Whitfield and a 21-yard scoring pass from Glenn Cargile to Shelton Daniels.

The game started off as if both teams meant to break the scoreboard, so the scoreboard broke early. It refused to record anything but the time; so latecomers probably thought it was 0-0 in the final quarter.

It took only three plays for Roanoke to get the first touchdown. Taking over on their own 30 after the kickoff, the Redskins got 15 yards from Larry Williams on three carries. Then, on the third play, Whitfield took a pitchout around the right side of the line and dashed 55-yards for the first score of the night. Cargile ran over the conversion, going around the left end, to give the Redskins a quick 8-0 lead. Only a minute and a half had elasped.

But Camp Lejune struck back quickly, scoring in slightly over two minutes. From the 40, after the kickoff went out of bounds, the Devils got eight yards from Scott. Paul Yadlowsky hit Matt McTierman for 15 yards to the Roanoke 37. Scott, on third down, got ten yards to the 20, and then added seven more. He went right up the middle on second down, going 13 yards for the score. Yadlowski also ran over the conversion, tieing it at 8-8 with 8:36 still left to go.

From there, it looked like a horse race. Roanoke got a 49-yard kickoff return from Barton Roberson, to the Devil Pup 30, but after the 'Skins reached the sixth, a fourth down pass fell incomplete.

Camp Lejeune turned that turnover into a 94-yard touchdown drive. Scott ripped off 29 yards on two carries, and a personal foul penalty added 15 more to the 50. Scott added six more before giving way to Bobby Tyson, who got 20 in two lugs.

The two split 12 more yards to the 16, and Scott carried it to the nine on three plays. On fourth down, he cracked over left tackle to move Lejeune, for good. Scott added the two-pointer and with five seconds left in the quarter, the Devil Pups held a 16-8 lead.

Roanoke again came back with a drive, but a fumble turned it over at the Lejeune 17. Late in the half, Camp Lejeune had a chance, when a short punt gave them the ball at the Roanoke 40. They advanced to the 16 before an interception ended their hopes.

Midway through the third period, Lejeune got what proved to be the winning score. They took over on their own 32, and with Scott leading the way, they drove down field. Scott, in five carries, picked up 40 yards. The touchdown came when Yadlowsky hit McTierman from the 19-yard line, raising the score to 22-8 with 1:44 left.

Early in the final period, Lejeune got to the Roanoke 33 but was forced to punt, and it seemed that the tide almost turned there.

Larry Daniels raced in to block the punt, and by the time it was controlled, Roanoke had the ball at the Lejeune 35. After Whitfield picked up 14 yards, Cargile hit Daniels from the 21-yard line, and the lead was cut to 22-16 with 8:32 left in the game. Cargile hit Sutton Edmondson on the PAT with a pass.

Things seemed to swing further in Roanoke's favor. Camp Lejeune was called for pass interference on the conversion, and the 15-yards were marked off on the kickoff. Fifteen more were tacked onto that for unsportsmanlike conduct, and Roanoke was kicking off from the Camp Lejeune 30.

The attempt for the on-side kick, however, saw the ball sideswiped, and it spun backwards, finally being downed at the Pup 37.

That abruptly turned the tide back to the Devil Pups.

Again behind Scott, Camp Lejeune drove back down the field, as he picked up 45 yards in helping the Pups to the Roanoke 10. A field goal attempt from there was good, but a 15-yard penalty negated it, and Roanoke got one last chance, deep in its own territory with 2:57 left.

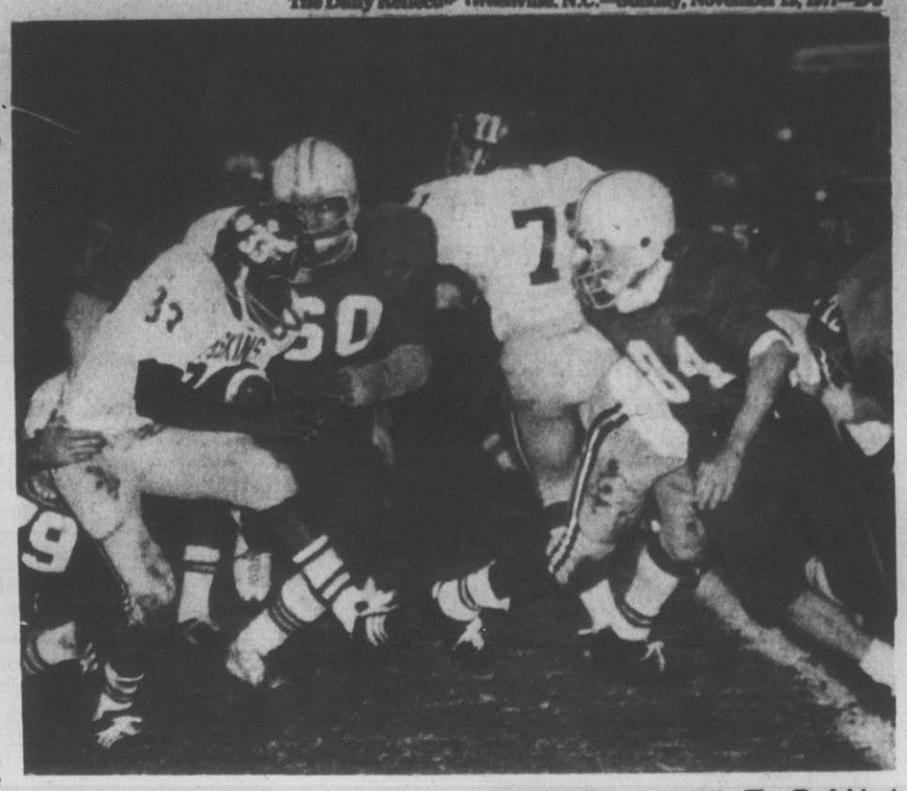

The Redskins couldn't get it moving, however, and gave up the ball on fourth down at its own nine. On third down, Scott flashed over right tackle for the icing on the cake with 1:13 left. That made it 29-16, the final score.

Camp Lejeune is now 8-3 on the year, while the Redskins finish at 6-5.

Abdul-Jabbar Sounds Warning

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar says he regrets his slugging incident with Kent Benson in the first game of the 1977-78 National Basketball Association season, but maintains that officials follow a double standard in calling fouls.

Benson, the Milwaukee Bucks' prize rookie center, kept elbowing Abdul-Jabbar in the first two minutes of play and the veteran Los Angeles Lakers' pivotman responded with a smash to the jaw. Benson wound up with a concussion and Abdul-Jabbar with a broken hand.

Officials didn't see the elbowing foul and this continues to rankle Abdul-Jabbar.

"A violent incident of the type that occurred between myself and Kent Benson can only have a negative effect on a very great game," said Abdul-Jabbar in a printed statement prior to a news conference Friday.

"I truly regret my part in it. I have paid my fine ($5,000). But I have serious and continuing concerns about this incident. My concern relates to the failure of the referees to call a foul on Benson, when he elbowed me, causing me much pain and the loss of my breath."

The NBA office in New York said the officials had not seen the Benson foul, but films showed it clearly.

Abdul-Jabbar added, "I remember what happened in the South during the Civil Rights reaction of people to the double standard. It's what is happening in the league as far as the officials are concerned—different standards for different people."

Voted the most valuable player in the NBA five of the last seven years including the past two seasons, Abdul-Jabbar said the failure of Commissioner Larry O'Brien to penalize Benson could encourage others to provoke attacks.

Woollen Gym Was Hot Place

it is just as warm as Woollen. In fact, so the story goes, some coaches believe someone turns the heat up at gametime because of Dean Smith's coaching philosophy to play a lot of players while visiting teams rely on the top five or six. When it's hot, those five or six may be more fatigued.

"It's not true," says an athletic department spokesman, although he didn't deny it was warm.

Last year, the theater seats were replaced with bleachers and now 10,000 can watch in Carmichael but Athletic Director Bill Cobey says, "We would hope to have a building about twice the capacity of Carmichael Auditorium in the next five years but we would need to raise approximately $19 million to construct such a facility."

That kind of money, most others agree, is not forthcoming.

VIRGINIA

About Memorial Gym, Lee Shaffer remembers his North Carolina team "going in there as the No. 1 team in America with an 18-1 record and losing. But as a team, we were 20 to 25 points better so I have a 'down' memory of that."

"I remember since I was a corner man, I was worried about the fact of shooting the ball from the corner because the track was hanging over the corner. My most effective weapon, the baseline jumper, was out for the night," says Shaffer.

Asked why Cunningham's jumper was so effective several years later, Shaffer said, "He shot it on a stringer. My was high and soft."

There's one tale that the lights in the entrance hallway were turned on when the visiting team shot at that end of the court. They were in the line of sight to the basket. When Virginia shot at that end, the lights were doused.

That is "folklore as opposed to actual fact, I think," says Virginia's sports information director.

DUKE

"One thing I thought when I went down there as a freshman, it was an awfully big place," says former Duke forward Howard Hurt of Cameron Indoor Stadium, the oldest of the present ACC home arenas. "Outside of Reynolds and I guess Maryland, it was the nicest place we played in. I thought it was a fancy place at the time," says Hurt, now a Lexington, N.C., high school principal.

Though venerable, Cameron will have a new look this year, including a maple floor of 30,000 separate pieces laid by hand since last spring.

It is the fourth home of Duke basketball. The Angier Duke Gym, the first home, hosted the first basketball game ever played in North Carolina on March 2, 1906 when Wake Forest defeated Duke, then called Trinity, 24-10.

Duke defeated Princeton, 3627, on Jan. 6, 1940, in Cameron's first game. Bigger than Fike or Woolen or Thompson, the Cameron home court record since then — nearly 80 per cent victories — shows you don't have to have a band box to win. Fans, which one sports writer called the "Duke Blue Bedlamites," help.

Bucky Allen says, "I remember obviously that the students were very close to the playing floor. The floor was very good, well-lighted, probably the best floor we played."

MARYLAND

After Reynolds was built in Raleigh, Maryland moved into Cole Field House, where it still plays. Ticket prices have changed: for the first game on Dec. 2, 1955 they were $2.

Cole Field House had its hazards. Duke's Howard Hurt says it was strange "because there was no background, because the crowd was so far from you. We never had a good shooting night there. Playing in those band boxes and at Maryland was really different."

Lee Shaffer, who became more accustomed to big houses when he went to the pros, says, "Cole Field House was like playing in the middle of a football stadium. That was a tough gym to shoot in because of depth perception."

Cole Field House is as wide as a football field, in fact, and one third again as long. Now, seats extend almost to courtside. Since the advent of Coach Lefty Driesell, and better teams, there may be a home court advantage. The court didn't help when the teams weren't as good, says one sports writer.

Cole replaced Ritchie Coliseum on heavily-traveled U.S.1. Ron Shavlik remembers Ritchie as "down in a little hole...the court had an iron rail around it and you were kind of stuck down in the bottom of the thing close and tight with people right on your back. I fouled out in the first two or three minutes of the ball game. I think it shocked me."

Strickland Leaves

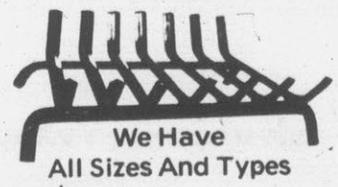

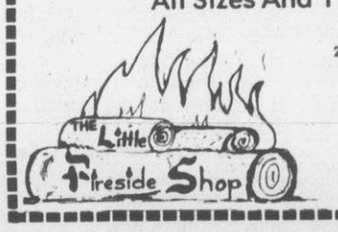

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Furman University basketball player Jim Strickland officially withdrew from the school Friday, according to Furman athletic officials.

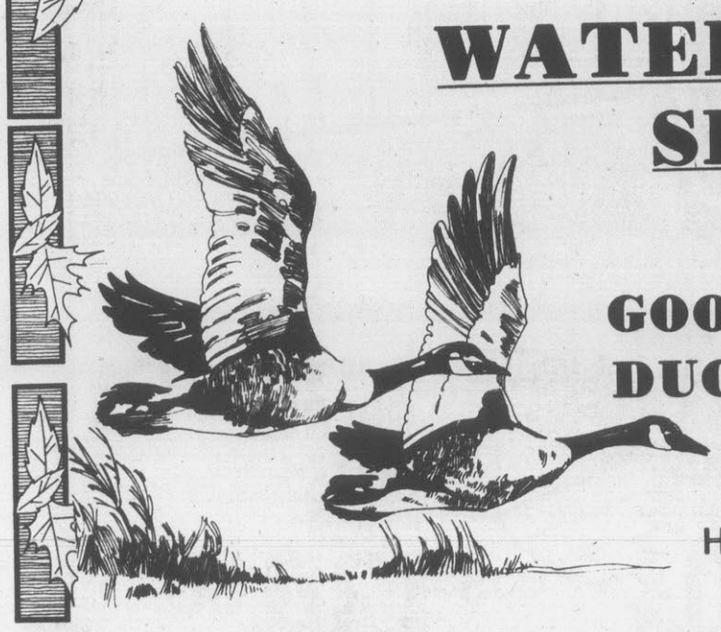

Strickland, a junior, had been absent from the school for the past two weeks and apparently withdrew for personal reasons.

Strickland of Columbia averaged 14 points and 10.7 rebounds last year for Furman.

Furman still has three returning starters from the Paladin's 18-10 team last season.

MIGRATING CANADIAN GEESE, which used to spend the winter in North and South Carolina, are now saving themselves a trip and wintering the winter in Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia.

About one million geese use the Atlantic Flyway on their annual migration from Canada and the cold northern states to reach their winter feeding grounds. Most of these waterfowl used to winter in the Carolinas, but now, the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service estimates, that 800,000 of them concentrate in Maryland, Delaware and Virginia and another 150,000 stay in the Pennsylvania area.

The geese have altered their migration patterns because of changes in agricultural methods and a series of mild winters, according to Bill Drasher, waterfowl management agent for the Pennsylvania Game Commission. One-time dairy farms in the more northerly states are now producing barley, wheat and corn, which provides an ample diet in areas the geese used to pass over. In addition, overshooting and shrinking sanctuaries in southern states are also blamed, in part, for pushing the geese north.

Though many were thrilled when they first appeared at first," Dasher said, the fowl are beginning to wear out their welcome in Pennsylvania. "Alot of people who encouraged the geese by feeding them are tearing their hair out, never realizing the geese could become a problem." Pennsylvania now receives about 150 complaints a year from farmers over crop damage by the geese.

FOR EXAMPLE, A Chester County, Pa. farmer who planted a five-acre stand of corn failed to harvest a single ear because geese mowed down the sprouting stalks.

Others are also having problems with the migrating birds. A 74-acre lake at a Pennsylvania state park has been closed to swimmers for three years because of goose droppings in the water and on the beach. Now that the geese have the lake, the state is building a pool for people. In addition, golf course owners have seen their lakes and ponds become havens for geese. Goose droppings on fairways and greens are now worse hazards than sand traps.

"Everybody liked the geese when they first started to come around. But when you have to step in this stuff...the novelty wears off pretty quick," according to Drasher.

A number of methods to get the geese back on their regular migration routes have been tried, but none have been too successful.

At French Creek State Park, where the geese took over the swimming lake, wildlife officials erected loudspeakers in an attempt to discourage the geese. Spooked at first, the geese grew to like the noise. Farmers have been trying to scare the birds away by stringing helium-filled balloons in their fields or scattering empty oil drums around. They claim these scarescrow tactics don't work either.

At French Creek, about 100 geese were trapped and picked up by game officials from South Carolina in hopes of reestablishing the old migrating pattern. "A week later, there were 100 more geese there," Drasher said.

More On Geese

Have you ever wondered why migratory geese fly in a "V" formation? There's a good reason for it, according to the current issue of a National Wildlife Federation magazine.

When a goose flies, its wings churn up the air, leaving behind an air current. In the flying wedge formation, each bird is in the right position to get a lift from the current left by the bird ahead of him.

This makes less work for all the geese in the flock, except the leader and that is why several geese may take turns leading the formation during a Migration. Ducks, swans, gulls and several other species of waterfowl also fly in the energy-saving V's.

White's 'Retirement' Boosts Celtics To Win

By BOB GREENE

Now, if the Boston Celtics could only get JoJo White to retire every night.

White, the Celtics' leading scorer, quit the team Wednesday night after General Manager Red Auerbach bawled out the team following its eighth loss in nine games. Thursday, White skipped practice and said he was retiring from the National Basketball Association.

NBA Roundup

Friday night, White returned and scored 23 points to lead the Celtics to a 109-103 victory over the Buffalo Braves.

"I have no regrets in quitting," White said. "Tempers flare. Things are said. I felt I had to make a decision.

"Perhaps what happened will help turn us around. I'm used to being a winner. When we were losing — and sometimes not even staying close — I got frustrated."

It was the Braves who were frustrated Friday as White received help from rookie Cedric "Cornbread" Maxwell, who replaced John Havlicek in the starting lineup. Maxwell finished with 21 points.

The Celtics rushed out to a 17-point lead midway through the second period, then staved off a Braves' rally in the fourth quarter, offsetting a 34-point performance by Buffalo's Randy Smith with late baskets by White and Havlicek.

Cavaliers 88, Bucks 82

Cleveland scored the first 12 points of the third period, bloating a 49-47 lead into a 61-47 margin, then hung on to beat Milwaukee.

Walt Frazier paced Cleveland's balanced attack with 16 points. The Bucks were led by Junior Bridgeman's 20 points and Kent Benson's 19.

Trail Blazers 132, Hawks 92

Bill Walton scored 27 points, Maurice Lucas 21 and Bob Gross 18 as Portland crushed Atlanta, handing the Hawks only their second loss against eight victories.

76ers 127, Knicks 119

A fourth-quarter surge, led by Joe Bryant and Doug Collins, gave Philadelphia its fourth straight victory. Collins paced the 76ers with 30 points while George McGinnis added 23 and Bryant had 19.

Nets 91, Bulls 89

Darnell Hillman scored 28 points and rookie Bernard King added 27 as New Jersey snapped a four-game losing streak by edging Chicago. Artis Gilmore had 27 points and 26 rebounds for the Bulls.

Spurs 107, Pistons 104

Mark Olberding's field goal and two free throws each by Larry Kenon and George Gervin in the final minute gave San Antonio its victory over Detroit. The Spurs scored the game's final six points, coming from a 104-101 deficit.

Kings 106, Warriors 105

Rookie Otis Birdsong scored four points in the final 90 seconds to lift Kansas City over Golden State. The Kings' victory snapped a nine-game home winning streak for the Warriors, who were led by Rick Barry's 27 points.

SuperSonics 117, Pacers 111

Gus Williams and Fred Brown scored 20 points each as Seattle overcame a 32-point performance by Indiana's Adrian Dantley to defeat the Pacers.. Marvin Webster added 19 points for the Sonics while Ricky Sobers had 25 for the losers.

Lakers 123, Jazz 107

Veteran Lou Hudson tallied 24 points to lead Los Angeles over New Orleans. It was the Jazz' fourth consecutive defeat.

Truck Robinson set a Jazz single-game record by grabbing 27 rebounds. He also had 21 points.

No Mystery In Miami-NE Match

By HAL BOCK

There is very little mystery involved in Sunday's National Football League showdown between the Miami Dolphins and New England Patriots.

Just ask Dolphins guard Bob Kuechenberg.

"If they lose, they can just about forget it," said Kuechenberg. "If we lose, it really puts us in a bind."

The Dolphins trail Baltimore by one game in the American Football Conference East and the Patriots are in third place, two games behind. The first-place Colts play Buffalo Sunday, adding to the importance of the Miami-New England showdown.

Kuechenberg knows what to expect against the Patriots.

"It's going to be a slugfest—a knockdown, dragout brawl," he said. "The Patriots are a very physical team and we are also."

The Jets can testify to that. The physical Dolphins posted six quarterback sacks, kayoing starter Richard Todd in last week's game. Three of those sacks belonged to rookie end A.J. Duhe, while linebacker Bob Matheson had a piece of 17 tackles against New York.

The New England game starts Miami's toughest stretch of the season. After Sunday, the Dolphins go on the road against Cincinnati and St. Louis, return home to play Baltimore, then face the Patriots at New England.

And while Miami and New England tangle, Cleveland will try and hang on to its slender lead in the tight AFC Central race. The Browns are one game in front with a 5-3 record. Pittsburgh, Houston and Cincinnati all are 4-4 and tied for second place.

The Steelers, who have lost two straight games, can tie for the lead by beating the Browns at Three Rivers Stadium where Pittsburgh never has lost to Cleveland. Cincinnati and Houston both face first-place teams.

The Bengals will be at Minnesota against the Vikings, who lead the NFC Central by one game over Detroit. The Oilers meet the Raiders, who share the AFC West lead with Denver. The Broncos are in San Diego.

Los Angeles also has a one-game edge in the NFC West, with Atlanta, which has lost two straight, trying to keep pace. The Rams face Green Bay in Milwaukee while the Falcons are at home against Detroit, which is one game back of the Vikings.

policeman outside every elevator entrance. They dropped the idea only after the police chief objected. Now it appears police protection will be extended to an office building, off the Capitol grounds, which Congress has begun using for some of its expanding committee staffs.

Another case in point: printing costs. The bill for congressional printing and binding topped $100 million last year. Much of it could have been saved.

But money spent on such things is nothing compared with the money wasted by failure to update the old-fashioned typesetting methods Congress still uses. By official estimate of the Government Printing Office, Congress could save 15 to 20 percent if it computerized its typesetting, something most newspapers have already done. The House is just beginning to do this, and the Senate is farther behind. Nobody seems in a hurry.

And there is the franking privilege. Since the first days of the republic Congress has granted itself the privilege, originally reserved for royalty, of sending its official mail with a member's signature, or frank, in lieu of a postage stamp.

In the 12 months before last year's elections, records were set: $53 million for postage alone. Taxpayers also paid for most of the printing, writing, folding and handling costs. Just printing the envelopes cost $1 million.

Only a trickle of this mail is accounted for by a congressman writing the Environmental Protection Agency about pollution in his district, or a senator answering a constituent's request for appointment to a military academy.

By far the greatest bulk of franked mail comes in unsolicited mass mailings, newsletters addressed to every "postal patron" in a congressional district, or computer-addressed letters sent by the thousands to "dear doctor" or "dear banker" or members of some other special group of voters. Some congressmen even make a habit of sending franked letters of congratulations to every new voter in his district.

The claim is that all of this is official because it informs the public, but it is hard to ignore the idea that letters could mean votes. Or that it amounts to public campaign financing for incumbents.

Another big-ticket item is pensions.

The number of staff workers in Congress has exploded in the last 10 or 20 years, and now that more and more of them are reaching retirement age the cost of paying them generous pensions is also rocketing.

Congressional pensions — including $37,000 a year for retired House doorkeeper William "Fishbait" Miller — cost $40.5 million last year.

Congress voted in recent months to boost the expense even more. One measure approved by the House — by an unrecorded voice vote and without public hearings — would fatten the pensions of congressmen who plan to retire this year.

Another measure, passed in different forms by both houses, would reward some former political fundraisers with pensions potentially worth thousands of dollars a year. The chief beneficiary would be Edmund L. Henshaw, now the House clerk. He would get credit for more than 20 years of raising money for Democratic house members, increasing his pension at retirement by at least $26,000 a year.

This follows a long tradition in Congress of rewarding faithful retainers with pensions paid for, mostly, by the taxpayers. Barbers, Capitol guides, publicity photographers, all have been put on the congressional pension system.

If Congress spends freely on itself while flailing the rest of the government for mismanagement and waste of tax dollars, members of Congress feel they're getting a bad rap.

That side was summed up not long ago by Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., who complained about a rash of news stories depicting members of Congress living a life of luxury at public expense.

"I don't mind serious stories about congressional waste," he said. "What I do mind is the misplaced sanctimony of some of the reporters."

The topper, Obey felt, was a cover story in New Times magazine, titled "The Imperial Congress," illustrated by a depiction of a congressman wearing royal ermine.

The Senate approved an appropriations bill recently that would eliminate free shaving mugs, combs and brushes to which they have been entitled since the days when most senators wore muttonchops.

Congress cut the legislative branch budget somewhat by billing executive branch agencies for printing the Federal Register, a non-congressional document whose $16-million cost somehow had been charged to Congress. It shifted the $8 million a year in spending for the Tax Court from the legislative branch budget to the Treasury Department's budget where it probably belonged all along.

For example, a House subcommittee is holding up approval of money to build a new, more efficient printing plant for the Government Printing Office, now trapped in a 73-year-old building full of costly production bottlenecks and outmoded machinery. This will further delay the needed economies in the congressional printing budget.

The House did decide to trim its list of give away Congressional Record subscriptions, a savings of a few thousand dollars a year. But it won't give up the free publicity photos which cost the public $341,000 in salaries yearly, and which until a few years ago were paid for with political donations.

Even though there are two new subway stops within easy walking distance of the Senate and House office buildings, the Senate voted down a proposal to charge the equivalent of commercial parking rates for spaces now free to senators, congressmen, staff and reporters at the Capitol. In the House, nobody even offered such a suggestion for a vote.

Adopt-A-Pet

Persons interested in adopting these or other pets through the Pitt County Humane Society may call the Society President, Mrs. Jeanette Fiore, 758-0468.

Reduced fee paying certificates will be provided with these and all pets provided through the Humane Society.

Need Volunteers

Nancy Harrington, Coordinator of Volunteer Greenville, a city agency which recruits volunteers for various purposes throughout the city, has announced the following current needs for volunteer services:

Big Brothers for the East Carolina University Developmental Evaluation Clinic;

Persons to tape textbook material for blind students at Pitt Technical Institute. (A tape recorder and casettes are provided.);

Persons to visit the elderly and disabled in their homes on a regular basis;

Drivers to provide occasional transportation for persons unable to drive.

Persons interested in providing these or other services and-or wishing more information may call Mrs. Harrington at 752-4137, Ext. 285.

Hearing On Disposal

Pitt County Commissioners will hold a public hearing at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the District Court Room at the Pitt County Court House on a proposed Solid Waste Disposal Ordinance and on the proposed franchise system of solid waste collection.

Commissioners have given tentative approval to the ordinance and to the franchise agreements which, if given final approval, will establish 10 districts in the county—each to be served by a private contractor who will serve any residence in the district for a fee to be set by the Board of Commissioners.

The solid waste ordinance outlines acceptible means for disposing of solid wastes, and provides for an enforcement officer to enforce the regulations.

Persons interested in solid waste disposal in the county are urged to attend the hearing.

Disagrees On Ordinance

The Lake Glenwood Property Owners Association has passed a resolution "disagreeing in principle with the proposed ordinance involving the franchising of private waste haulers in Pitt County".

The resolution says that the Pitt County Board of Commissioners would suppress the free enterprise system of solid waste collection by private haulers and the freedom of choice of the citizens of Pitt County with regard to the choice of haulers.

If a measure now being considered by the Commissioners were to pass, competition among haulers would be eliminated and incentive for good service suppressed, the resolution goes on.

The resolution was enacted by the general membership of the Lake Glenwood group Nov. 1.

Jenkins To Speak

Dr. Leo Jenkins, chancellor of East Carolina University, will speak at Ayden-Grifton High School Tuesday, Nov. 15 at 9 p.m.

This is part of a program honoring American Education Week.

Arrives In City For Missionary Work

Elder Rick Tucker of San Rafael, Calif., arrived this week in Greenville to do missionary work for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

He will work with Elder Brett Moyes of Ogden, Utah. The pair resides at 1803 East Sixth St.

According to Elder Tucker, he works under the directions of the North Carolina Mission in Greensboro. The Mormon Church has over 27,000 young missionaries serving in similar capacities throughout the world.

"We want to share a religious message with the people and tell them about the church that we represent," said Elder Tucker.

He added that in order to tell people this message, the Church calls about 9,000 young men and women each year to leave their schooling or work for a period of two years and devote their full time to the job. They are not reimbursed by the Church services.

political strength," he said.

The ECU chancellor said Greenville should strive for a center adequate to accommodate meetings involving as many as 2,000 people.

"We do not necessarily need to include self-contained sleeping accommodations or restaurant facilities. Our friends in the business community could easily plan for these needs," he said.

In the matter of funding, he proposed "seeking every avenue of funding support available including state and federal sources as well as gifts from major foundations and corporations."

"My friends, there is no doubt in my mind that a convention center can become a reality for Greenville."

Also at the banquet, Lawton Nisbet, current area CofC president, addressed the group on "Where We Have Been." The program included presentations of "Our Needs" by Charles Gaskins of the Pitt County commissioners, Greenville Mayor Percy Cox and Charles Burnett. Community project workshops and reports were to continue through the weekend at the Williamsburg meeting.

A quarter century ago, a major foundation underwrote the costs of restoring much of Williamsburg, also a college town as the home of the College of William and Mary. The Williamsburg restoration was conducted by foundation-supported Colonial Williamsburg Inc.

Sharp Gain Noted For Stock Market

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market, suddenly infused with optimism, burst out of a 10-month slump this past week and ran up its sharpest gain in more than a year and a half.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials leaped 35.95 points, posting its strongest weekly showing since it gained 52.42 points Jan. 5-9 of last year.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index was up 4.40 at 95.98, and the NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks tacked on 2.43 to 52.70.

Big Board volume averaged 25.81 million shares a day, peaking on Friday at 35.26 million—the seventh largest total in exchange history.

The story was the same at the American Stock Exchange, where the market value index surged 5.45 points to 118.33.

It remained to be seen, of course, whether stock prices had reached a final turning point after the long dismal spell that set in at the start of 1977.

But analysts said a number of factors appeared to be working in the market's favor.

The most dramatic of these came at President Carter's press conference Thursday morning, when he dismissed as "completely erroneous" the impression many observers had gotten that he was at odds with Chairman Arthur Burns of the Federal Reserve Board over the Fed's credit policy.

Less than a month ago, the market had slumped after the White House issued a statement implicitly criticizing the central bank for exerting upward pressure on interest rates in its effort to curb inflation by reining in the growth of the money supply.

But on Thursday the President said he had never had any disagreement with Burns, whose conservative economic views are shared by many Wall Streeters, on economic policy matters.

Analysts still voiced considerable doubt over whether Carter would reappoint Burns to the top spot at the Fed when his term expires Jan. 31. But the market responded enthusiastically to what it evidently took as a conciliatory gesture from the President.

To add a touch of irony, the market also got a boost from a spreading belief that there wasn't likely to be much more credit-tightening by the Fed in the immediate future.

Those hopes were buttressed by the latest Fed statistics, which showed a substantial drop in the money supply.

"The monetary policy cloud over the market is much less foreboding than it was four weeks ago," concluded William Gibson at Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co. in his weekly review of the outlook for interest rates and fixed-income securities.

"While the Fed has gone out of its way to stress its independence and tough stand on inflation, we estimate that it will welcome the chance to stabilize or reduce slightly the level of short term interest rates."

At the same time, the recession worries that beset the market for much of the summer and early fall evidently were fading—and on that subject, too, Burns played a role.

In the course of a defense of the Fed's recent policies before the Senate Banking Committee on Wednesday, he said:

"The dominant view within the Federal Reserve is that economic expansion will persist well into 1978, probably at a pace sufficiently strong to result in some further reduction in the unemployment rate."

That view was echoed by Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, the nation's largest brokerage firm, which declared: "Next year's economic outlook may be better than generally believed.

"Merrill Lynch Economics is encouraged by recent inflation statistics and does not see 1978 as a recession year."

Home Buying Legislation

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Sen. Robert B. Morgan, D-N.C., has introduced legislation in Congress designed to help young, middle-income couples in home-buying.

Morgan said the bill, the Home Ownership Act of 1977, would make funds available to savings and loan institutions to finance low-interest loans to couples who earn $10,000 to $16,000 annually and have never owned a home.

UNDERCOVER ASSIGNMENT — Francesca Poston, right, and Tom Coppola keep warm under the cover of a quilt as they display their product in a New York quilt shop window. The couple took off most, but not all, their clothes to advertise quilts to passersby in an attention-getting manner. Store owner Monte Dow does not think the stunt has improved business but hopes "people will remember us for the fun of it." (AP Laserphoto)

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

New Emphasis On At-Home Tourism

RALEIGH — Tar Heel officials are wooing native Tar Heels to think first in terms of seeing their own beaches, mountains, colorful acenery and recreational sites when considering vacation and travel time.

"We're spending a million dollars a year to promote out-of-state visitation," state travel director Willia Arnold said recently, "and it's bringing in more than a billion dollars annually. But we felt perhaps we've been neglecting t at-home market. A lot of North Carolinians vacation in other states."

One of the moves made to promote the "at-home " campaign was bringing Chuck Blore from Los Angeles to work on the project. Blore created the "Big Mac Attack" commercials for McDonald's Restaurants.

The idea to make an attempt to lure natives to see their own treasures was prompted by Chapel Hill's Jim Heavner. President of the N.C. Association of Broadcasters, Heavner approached the state's Division of Travel and Tourism with a proposal — If the state would produce a series of public service spots the association would contribute $300,000 in free air time in a broad public service campaign throughout the state.

Arnold said he and his staff talked to Blore for eight hours "and packed him back on the plane with about two pounds of North Carolina literature and materials. The nine different versions of the spot he produced three months later show a decided, if subtle, at-home tourism message ."

Arnold added that the spots cost $17,900, and that none of it came from the state's $1 million travel advertising budget.

"If the spots work," Arnold said, "they will make North Carolinians more curious about and aware of their own mountains and beaches and scenery and recreational opportunities".

The record shows that North Carolinians in 1976 spent $425 million in travel and tourism related activities in the state.

Urges Turn To Biblical Roots

NEW YORK (AP) — The president of an Orthodox Jewish body, the Rabbinical Alliance, has appealed to Americans to return to their "Biblical roots" and oppose homosexuality.

Rabbi Abraham B. Hect of Brooklyn said homosexuality is rising in the country, that it threatens the family basis of civilization and that homosexuals need "spiritual and psychiatric help."

Society should not indirectly condone such practice, he said, by guaranteeing their rights to teach.

His Credo: Continue, Appreciate Each Day

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Jason Garris says about the only thing he cannot do now that he could do before he had an arm removed is wash dishes.

He doesn't miss this chore at all.

He can play ball with his friends. He can continue to excel academically He can water ski. He can continue working toward becoming an Eagle Scout.

"And he can vacuum the floor or mow the lawn while I do the dishes'" his sister, Amy, 12, said.

Jason, a 16-year-old North Pitt High School Junior, had his left arm amputated just above the elbow about a year and a half ago. The surgery was done less than a month after he and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin A. Garris of Rt. 4, Greenville, noticed a bump on his forearm that didn't go down. He went first to his doctor here, then to local specialists and finally to Duke Medical Center, where the surgery was done Apr. 29, 1976.

His condition was diagnosed as Chondrosarcoma, malignancy of the cartilage. He had no chemotherapy at the time, but has begun receiving it since he had to have a baseball-sized portion of his left lung removed last May.

The chemotherapy requires that he and his mother go to Duke and stay about five days every two months. "It's not much fun," he said. "I sleep the first couple of days afterwards and I throw up a lot, but they say after next April I probably won't have to have any more."

Mrs. Garris says employer, Hayes Austin, for whom she is a bookkeeper at Auto Specialty Company here, has been wonderful about giving her whatever time off she needs.

The treatments are usually planned around weekends so Jason may be absent from school as little as possible.

"Jason was first in his class of 250 students year before last," North Pitt Guidance Counselor Betty Speir said. "Last year he was absent 32 days, yet he maintained an A average in every one of his college preparatory subjects. He is now third in his class of 206 students. He's a remarkable young man, both in his outlook and in his accomplishments."

According to his school records, he belongs to the Spanish Club, the Pep Club, the Library Science Club, and the National Honor Society. He was an officer of his homeroom for two years and was on the Freshman Council, Mrs. Speir said. He played baseball before his illness became apparent and says he plans to go out for track this year.

He goes with his family to Trinity Free Will Baptist Church in Greenville and is a Life Scout, having been a Scout for the past eight years and being only four badges away from becoming an Eagle Scott.

"Jason is exemplary of what Scouting is all about," says his Scoutmaster, Heber Adams. "He keeps up with all the other boys and does everything they do. He really outdid himself at the Spring Camporee. If he keeps going like he has, he'll be an Eagle by the spring, I feel sure."

Jason has developed at least one new enthusiasm in recent months. This past summer at his uncle's camp on Lake Gaston he learned to water ski and then to slalom (ski on one ski). "I am so proud of him," his father said. "We think it's great that he started and mastered skiing after he lost his arm."

Jason says he'll be trying for a scholarship and, if he is successful, will attend the college or university for which one is made available, His illness has placed his family in financial straits.

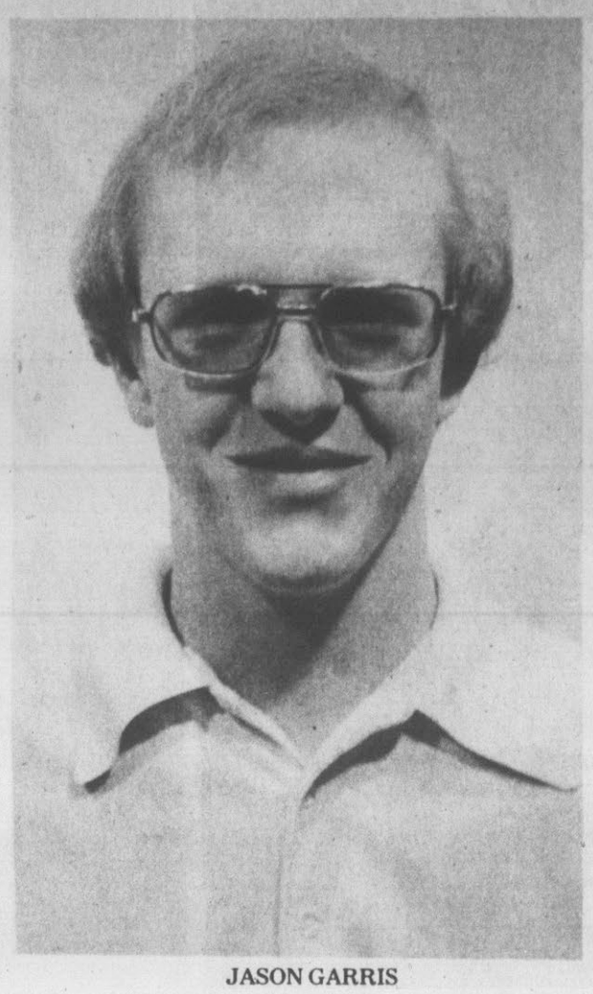

Jason and his family are candid, but hopeful concerning his illness. "I was shocked when I first found out I had cancer," he said. "Nobody thinks it can happen to him.

"All the kids at school were shocked, too. At first they acted like they didn't know what to say, but then they found out I was the same me and everything's been fine since then. The funniest thing is that everyone at school knows who I am because of it. And I just can't get to know all 900-some of them."

"Having cancer hasn't changed me much at all, I'd say Oh, well, maybe I may be a little more able to understand the feelings of handicapped and sick people now than I once did. I'd always been so healthy before that I couldn't appreciate how they felt."

Wilma Garris says her son also seems more appreciative of his home and family. "We all appreciate one another more," she said. "That's one of the many good things that have come out of this experience for us.

""All things work together for good for those who love the Lord" (Romans 8:28) are the words I live by," she went on. "Since this experience began, we've learned to take one day at a time. We don't spend our thoughts planning what we're going to do tomorrow. We're much more aware of today and the joys it brings. Jason and Amy and Frank and I all four have grown since Jason lost his arm — this I know."

Lady Is A Dentist

CHAPEL HILL — The oldest practicing dentist in North Carolina is a woman who works side-by-side with the state's second oldest practicing dentist—her husband.

Dr. Daisy Z. McGuire, 97, and her husband Dr. Wayne P. McGuire, 94, share office space with their two daughters, both of whom are dentists.

Their practice in Sylva is probably one of the few in the state in which patients aren't surprised to find that the lady is the dentist.

Since the days when the barber was the dentist traveling from place to place extracting teeth, dentistry in this country has been almost exclusively a profession for men.

But the face of dentistry is changing.

This year 14 women—the most ever—were admitted as first-year students in the School of Dentistry at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The rise of enrollment here—from one female student in 1950 to 48 this year—is reflected nationally. Last year the total number of women in dental school more than tripled the number of practicing women dentists in the United States. The most recent American Dental Association statistics show less than 1,700 of the 111,000 dentists in the U.S. are women. Only 20 of these women are in North Carolina.

But with the larger number of women now in dental school these figures will change.

Why the sudden increase of women in dentistry?

Dr. Ted Roberson, director of student affairs and admissions at the UNC-CH School of Dentistry, believes it has something to do with dentistry's changing image and an awakening on the part of women that dentistry is a field in which they can undoubtedly do well.

"For decades," he says, "dentistry was perceived as a technical profession. The dentist was a tooth mechanic.

"In the past 15 years we've taken a new approach. It's not just drill and fill. Today our emphasis is on total health care. Our graduates are very competent technically, but they also have a broad background in medicine."

One reason women didn't enter the field in the past, says Dr. Beryl Slome, one of three women dentists on the faculty, was the mistaken idea that dentistry takes brute strength.

"They thought you needed to be a man to extract a tooth," she says. "It's more a case of leverage, skill and manipulation. You don't pull a tooth. You elevate it. To remove it generally takes between seven and eight pounds of pressure."

Discrimination also played a part in keeping women out of dentistry.

"Dentistry was seen as a waste of time and money for a woman," Slome says. "It was felt that women would get married and drop out and all that training would go down the drain."

Dr. Diane Dilley, who is on the pedodontic faculty, agrees there was some discrimination. "Some faculty members at Indiana University Dental School thought I was taking the place of a man who could have a full-time job in dentistry and support a family.

"But I felt I was qualified and therefore it should not make a difference.

"Attitudes have changed since then," she says. "Faculty and students recognize it's not a sin to drop out. Even men drop out for a while."

There has been only minimal discrimination at UNC-CH if that, say women dental students. "Now and then you may feel you have to prove yourself twice," says Cathy Moody, a second-year dental student. "Sometimes you aren't sure that criticism, whether beneficial or not, is the result of being a woman."

Roberson feels there probably was some discrimination in the past, although because so few women applied to dental school it is difficult to measure. But now, he says, women intent on entering dental school here face the same kind of competition as men.

"The standards for admittance are exactly the same," he says. "At no time in the last few years has the admissions committee said, 'Wait a minute. We have too few or too many women.'"

Since the dental school opened in 1950, 16 women have been graduated. Currently there are 48 women in the 320-member student body. Also 3 of the 43 postgraduate students are women.

One reason women are entering dental school is because they feel it is a field that offers them personal alternatives.

"Dentistry seemed right for me if I wanted a family and all the good things that go with that and a health career," says 29-year-old Hazel Brown, a fourth-year dental student from Greenville.

The Bennett College graduate plans to enter private practice or work in a public health setting when she graduates this spring. She says she will probably work part-time, perhaps four days a week, in order to have more time for her 4-year-old son.

Slome, who has four children and has worked part-time for a number of years, agrees. "I feel very positive about veing in the field. I think marriage and bringing up a family are quite compatible with a carrer in dentistry."

Women also see dentistry as a profession that offers them flexibility both in terms of where they will practice and who will be their patients.

Contrary to expectations women are not choosing to become just pediatric dentists. While some elect to go into private or group practice, others are opting to teach, to work in public health clinics or federally sponsored programs. By not having to invest in expensive dental equipment, they point out, it is easier to move around especially if they are single or have the husband's job market to consider.

Many women enrolled in the dental school here are older than their male counterparts because they have worked a few years before starting graduate school. Nearly 40 percent are married. About 11 percent have children.

"I'm amazed at what so many of them who are married are able to accomplish," says first-year student Steve Busby. "I don't know how they do it. I can't imagine taking care of a dog at this point, much less a child."

Married women dental students say that without the support of their partners dental school would not have been possible. For many it has meant adjustments, understanding, and it hasn't always been easy.

"I can't begin to tell you how rough it has been sometimes," says Brown who turned the full responsibility for rearing their son over to her husband Earl, a computer analyst in Durham. "He's been so encouraging. I don't think I can ever repay him."

Because dentistry is an extremely demanding profession, both emotionally and physicially, the dental school's admissions committee looks for motivation in prospective students.

"It's meaningful to us," Roberson says, "if someone has spent time in a dental office, done something to check out what dentistry is all about."

One of those students who knew what she was getting into is Wake County's Bettie McKaig, a fourth-year dental student and a 1971 graduate of UNC-CH. McKaig, who is 28, worked as a dental hygienist for 18 months before considering dental school.

"I would watch the dentists at work," she says, "and think I can do that.

"I'd like to see school counselors realize that women don't always have to be auxiliaries. To this day I don't know why I got into hygiene. But everyone told me, 'You should be a hygienist.'

'I've had no surprises," she says, "but other people are surprised to find I'm in dental school."

McKaig, whose husband is a Durham businessman, says, "We have friends who say to us, 'How should we address your Christmas card? To Dr. and Mr. KcKaig?' That gets old."

But then there are the rewards.

"One of my first patients was a girl I'd known before," McKaig said. "She had a removable partial denture that you could see when she smiled.

"We spent hours together while I made her an upper bridge and I can't tell you how great I felt when her face lit up when she saw the difference it made in her appearance."

Because so few women have gone into dentistry in the past, their numbers are small, their visibility minimal.

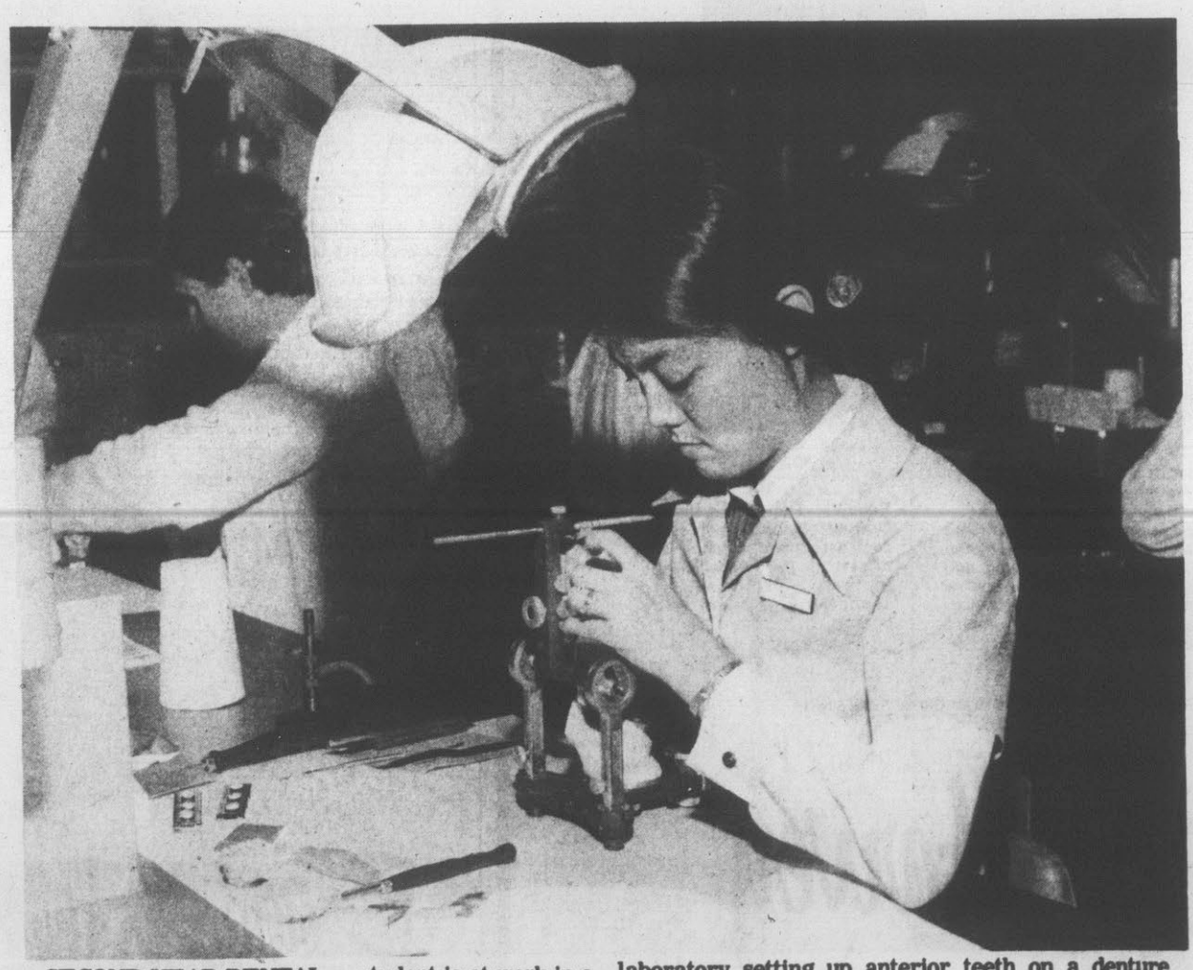

"Last summer," Moody said, "I had a lady who told me, 'I had special teeth. I'm supposed to see a man.' She thought I was a hygienist, not the dentist."

First-year dental student Denice Long from Lincolnton has been to parties at which people refuse to believe she's a dental student. "They think I'm

Dear Abby

Church Offers All Comforts Of Home

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y.News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Our church sent the following newsletter to all its members:

NO-COP-OUT SUNDAY

To make it possible for everybody to attend church next Sunday:

Cots will be placed in the back for those who say Sunday is the only day they can sleep.

Blankets will be provided for those who say the church is too cold.

Fans will be provided for those who say the church is too hot.

We will have hearing aids for those who say the minister talks too soft—and cotton for those who say he talks too loud—and alarm clocks for those who say he talks too long!

Calculators will be available for those who enjoy counting the hypocrites present.

Finally, the sanctuary will be decorated with both Christmas poinsettias and Easter lilies for those who have never seen a church without them.

YOUR MIAMI FAN

DEAR FAN: Thanks for a dandy day-brightener.

DEAR ABBY: You have helped so many minority groups by educating the public, will you please help another?

We are the blind who use white canes to travel, and by travel, I mean go to the mailbox, grocery store, pharmacy and to work.

Please tell the driving public that some states have a white cane law, which states: "When a person with a white can steps off the curb, traffic in ALL DIRECTIONS must stop until that person regains a curb. Motorists who violate this law are guilty of a misdemeanor."

Even if it were not a law, compassion and courtesy should prevail.

Albany, N.Y., is a training center for the blind. They are trying to develop confidence in the sightless to go about alone, but some of the motorists here either don't know the law or choose to ignore it. Please use my letter, Abby, as I am afraid to go out alone.

SIGHTLESS IN ALBANY

DEAR SIGHTLESS: And speaking of consideration for the blind, orchids to Robert Meyer of the Yankee Silversmith Inn in Wallingford, Conn., for providing duplicate menus in BRAILLE!

DEAR ABBY: Recently you had a letter in your column from HEARTSICK GRANNY whose daughter wants to give one of a pair of twin infants away because she was born with a club foot and a cleft palate, which they couldn't afford to correct.

I hope it's not too late to get this information to that family.

K.O., BURLINGAME, CAL.

DEAR K.O.: Thank you and the hundreds of others who recommended the Shrine Hospitals. And don't forget the National Foundation-March of Dimes. Their thing is diagnosing, treating and preventing birth defects, as well as family planning and genetic counseling.

DEAR ABBY: I am one of those people who eat like a horse and never put on a pound. Most of my friends tell me I'm too thin, and someone is always giving me a remedy that will fatten me up. I have tried everything, but I can't seem to gain.

I've had people I hardly know walk up to me, stretch their fingers around my waist, and say, "Gee, you're skinny!" They'd never walk up to a fat person and say, "Gee, you're fat!"

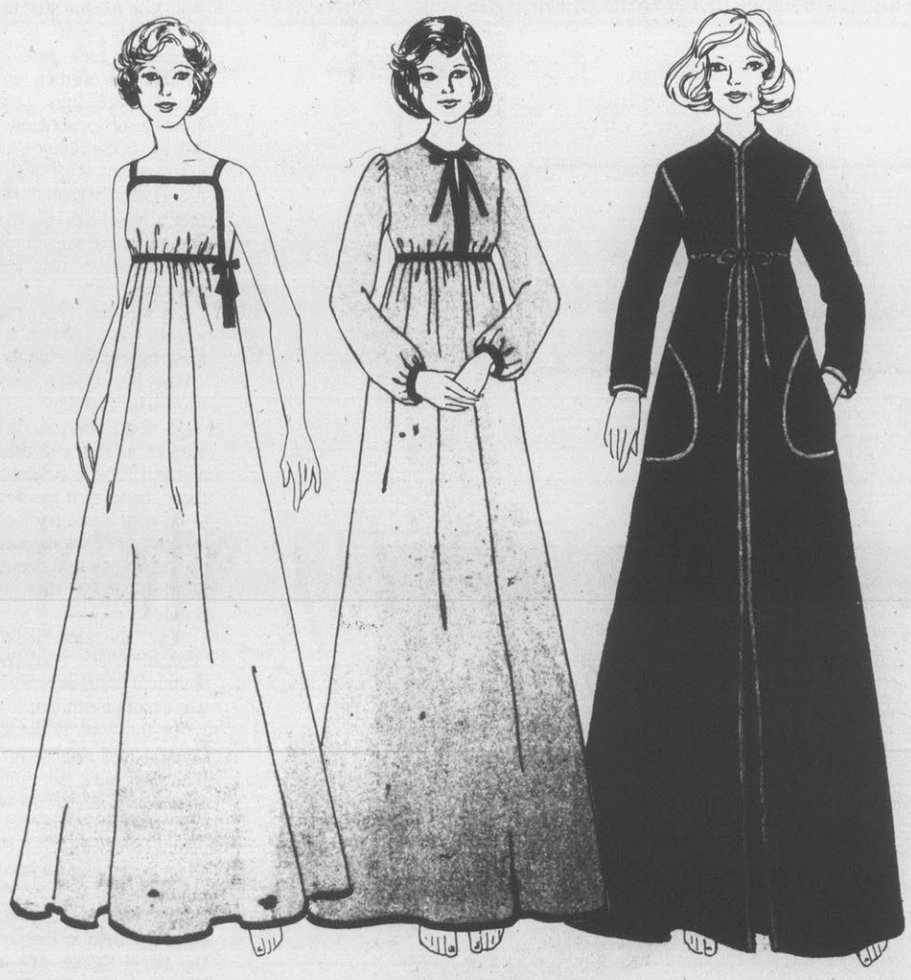

I have been hurt so many times by these rude remarks. Will you please give me a good snappy comeback that will put them in their places?

TOO THIN

DEAR TOO THIN: Silence is often the most effective response to a rude remark. But do see a doctor, dear. He may enjoy "fattening someone up"—for a change.

If you feel left out and lonely, or wish you knew how to get people to like you, my new booklet, "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old," is for you. Send $1 along with a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Mrs. Ronald D. Sparks of Greensboro was matron of honor and Ms. Patricia F. Kimball of Greensboro was the bridesmaid. Their dresses of copper rust were full length and sleeveless with over jackets. The neckline was fashioned in a criss-cross of fabric forming a cowl neckline effect. They carried bouquets of copper chrysanthemums surrounded by baby's breath.

The mother of the bride selected a formal length apricot gown of polyester knit featuring an A-line skirt and a chiffon over jacket, belted at the waist. The mother of the bridegroom selected a formal length gown of jade green polyester knit with an empire waistline accented by a chiffon cape.

The bridegroom's father was best man and ushers included James S. Long of Jonesboro, Tenn., and Michael D. Phillips of Myrtle Beach, S. C.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Gregg Gibhardt of High Point.

Miss Kimberly Dale and Miss Kirsten Dale of Ayden, sisters of the bridegroom, presided at the guest register and greeted guests.

After a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va., the couple will live in Greensboro.

The bride graduated from Moses H. Cone Memorial Hospital School of Radiologic Technology, Greensboro. She is a radiographer with I.T.T., Grinnell Industrial Piping Inc., Kernersville. The bridegroom graduated from ECU, Greenville, and is associated with Thomasville Furniture Industries Inc., Thomasville.

Make Your Own Baking Chocolate

A manufacturer of both chocolate and cocoa products suggests this economical homemade substitute:

Combine 1 (8-ounce) can of cocoa powder (not a drink mix) in a bowl with 1 cup of vegetable shortening, butter, margarine or mild-flavored cooking oil. Mash to a paste. Store it in a tightly covered container in the refrigerator or freezer. Two tablespoons of this mixture equals a 1-ounce square of unsweetened chocolate, melted.

The manufacturer says the substitute can be used just like melted baking chocolate, and at the same step in a recipe.

kidding, that I must be a dental assistant or hygienist."

"It can be frustrating," Brown says. "Women are almost always seen as the helper in dentistry, rarely as the dentist."

Her interest and questions took him by surprise.

Finally he said, "Hey you don't want to listen to all this. You'd better go find a dentist and bring him over here!"

Since the first woman received a doctor of dental surgery degree more than a century ago, the percentage of women in dentistry has never been very large or very stable. But the makeup of the dental profession is changing.

Don't be surprised the next time you walk into a dental office to find that the lady is the dentist.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

You might see Helen Thomas at the White House or tramping through the mud as she covers the President's family in Georgia.

Miss Thomas is United Press International White House Bureau Chief. She was speaking in Charlotte last weekend at a meeting of the North Carolina Press Women.

"President Carter has had to change his mind since going into office. Most reporters think President Carter is an enigma wrapped in a riddle and are still trying to get a fix on him. He is more accessible than any President has been in many years.

"He has done away with the B-1 Bomber, but keeps the neutron bomb alive. He has shown good balance and sometimes he seems like Lyndon Baines Johnson — only smaller. He kisses babies and tells the crowds that "I love you,"" said Miss Thomas.

"Most of President Carter's top aides come from below the Mason Dixon line and not many woman or blacks have important roles. There is no way to separate President Carter from his beliefs and the Bible, which is ever present on his desk.

"The Panama Treaty is a test for President Carter and the country. I think the treaty should be and will be ratified. It's a great feather in our cap and we should rise to this occasion," she continued.

"It behooves us, in this push button era, to know as much as possible about President Carter. I feel priviledged to cover the White House and see instant history.

"Rosalynn Carter is making her mark, especially in mental health. She is very articulate and defends her husband."

In relating humorous incidents about President Carter's family, Miss Thomas, said "Billy Carter, in spending a night at the White House, slept in Lincoln's bed and said he didn't sleep well because the bed was too damn big. One of Miss Lillian's admirers wanted to shake her hand, but due to arthritis, she backed off. The man then asked if he could kiss her and she told him, "Hell no!"

"The toughest part of my job is when people aren't truthful, jumping off helicopters, carrying all my luggage and typewriter and always run, run run! A typical day for me is started by reading the "New York Times" and "Washington Post," grabbing a cup and then calling the office.

"We attend informational meetings and try to see the congressmen and senators who meet with the President. The congressmen and senators are told not to quote the President. Each day is different— President Carter has many appointments. When the President goes, AP and UPI reporters go—we travel in the motorcade," she continued.

Miss Thomas gave personal sketches on Jackie Kennedy Oassis, Lady Bird Johnson, Pat Nixon and Betty Ford.

Miss Thomas has been covering the White House since 1961. During the years, she covered President Kennedy, she was the first woman to close a Presidential news conference with the traditional "Thank you, Mr. President." She was the newspaperwoman who traveled with President Nixon to China during his break through trip in February, 1972. Since then she has been to China with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and President Ford.

In September, 1971, Pat Nixon scooped Helen Thomas by announcing her engagement to AP's retiring White House Correspondent Douglas B. Cornell at a White House party hosted by President Nixon in honor of Cornell.

Miss Thomas was named "Newspaper Woman of Washington" in 1968 by the American Newspaper Woman's Club and she was president in 1975-76 of the White House Correspondents Association. In 1976, she was named "Woman of the Year" in Communications by the "Ladies Home Journal." She also received the Matrix Award from Women in Communications.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore ? mother's wedding dress of ' ory satin appliqued with al.ncon lace and seed pearls on the sheer yoke and down the front of the Basque shaped corded waist. The portrait neckline and edge of the long traditional sleeves were edged with val lace. The chapel train began below a natural waistline and was made full with two rows of rushing. Her headpiece was a satin lace appliqued open cloche, matching the dress with a fingertip veil edged with lace from her mother's veil. Dirty Clothes Less Warm Than Clean

No kidding.

Mary Schluckebier, an extension clothing specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln says dirt and grease clog natural air spaces, reducing the fabric's insulating value.

She also said tight-fitting leotards, socks and underwear cut down on body warmth. They inhibit blood circulation. That slows down the body's heating system and does not allow a layer of trapped air for insulation.

A Mideast dish that's become popular for snack time: pita stuffed with a savory chick-pea mixture. The chick peas may be pureed and mixed with minced scallion or chives, olive oil and lots of freshly ground pepper.

Engagement Announced

MISS CONNIE HESS. . .is the daughter of C. W. M. Hess Jr. of Cedarville, N. J., who announces her engagement to Charles Griffin, son of Mrs. Hope Roberts of Allandala, Fla. The wedding will take place in June, 1979.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I call 'em women' in white socks living in a pantyhose world.

Your know thems housewives. There's a lot of them around considering the fact they have no union, no leadership, no lobbyist, and no PR.

A few weeks ago in New York, Ladies Home Journal and Kentucky Fried Chicken co- sponsored a seminar to consider this woman who is almost an enigma.

To be a housewife these days you have several options: defend it . . . apologize for it . . . deny it, say you are only temporarily at home until something opens up.

Why?

If you're a closet housewife, it's time to come out and be counted. There's certainly nothing wrong with women opting to develop a career, return to school or admit that carrying everyone else's nose tissue in your purse doesn't do it for you: Just knowing that the options are there is enough for some of us.

But when did a woman selling orange slices in the dime store become more impressive than a woman who did a darned good job raising three kids for 20 years?

Maybe the time is now to say, "I don't make meat loaf for my husband for dinner when I hate meat loaf because he demands / expects / needs it. I do it because I want to."

Maybe it's the time to say, "I like the freedom of staying home and having control of my day and creating my own challenges. At least for now."

Maybe it's time for some us to join forces with Susan Revit, Bayville, N.Y., who wrote:

"I always wanted a white shag rug, I thought it would look nice,

Then I had my first child. That made me think twice.

I always wanted some Lenox pieces to put on the table and admire, And then we had our first child and I opted for a dryer.

I always wanted glass table tops and crystal like a bell,

And then I had our first child and thought plastic would do as well.

I always wanted so many things I always wished for,

But when I saw my first child, I wanted children so much more."

Cooked, diced carrots and sniveled snap beans dressed with butter make an excellent combination. To snivel the beans cut them crosswise in about ½-inch wide pieces before cooking.

Kids Need Dad's Example at Table

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — More spinach or squash, Dad?

If he says, "no," he may be teaching his children bad eating habits.

A nutrition specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln says studies show fathers are more influential than mothers in teaching their children good eating habits by example.

"Even if the mother does most of the cooking, it's still dad who influences the family diet most strongly," said Teresa Shaffer.

Now, A Farewell To Dogpatch

EDITOR'S NOTE — A whole town is disappearing today. It was built by imagination, populated by the mind and was full of social commentary. But in recent years, what it had to say drew more anger than laughter. So Al Capp, cartoonist, is turning cartographer. Scratching Dogpatch from some of the most widely-read maps, comic pages around the world.

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Still wide-eyed and wildly ignorant after 43 years of preposterous catastrophe, Li'l Abner is being retired by the outrageous wit who created him.

This handsome hick dimwit says goodbye to the funny papers today, Nov. 13. He takes with him, among others, the gentle Shmoos, boldly bosomy Daisy Mae and pipe smoking Mammy Yokum.

They're citizens of the comic strip hamlet of Dogpatch. And they peopled the imagination of Al Capp, a man who tickled and infuriated millions with the social comment he wove into the adventures of hillbilly hayseeds.

But now Capp is crippled by emphysema, and at age 68, he cannot go on. "I could see my stuff didn't have the joy it used to have," he said.

At the end of a long sentence, Capp's bullfrog voice fades into a rusty whisper, and the face that used to look like Li'l Abner's crumples with painful coughs.

"I wasn't having fun with it any more. It was becoming a chore."

At its peak in the 1950s, Li'l Abner was a roaring, foot-stomping success.

Readers of 900 newspapers around the world followed the daily mishaps of Li'l Abner as he wandered innocently among the forces of greed and evil, duped and abused by politicians and tycoons.

Capp sought out smugness and hypocrisy. He satirized lawyers, psychiatrists, policemen, gangsters, salesmen and doctors. He made fun of marriage, fads, politics, love and even comic strips.

In the 1940s and '50s, liberals considered Capp to be one of their own.

Politicians and greedy businessmen regularly buffooned their way across the page. There was, for instance, Sen. Jack S. Phogbound, the pompous, baby-kissing right-winger who embodied the Cappian view of Southern politics.

"In his prime, he was one of the two or three greatest cartoonists this country ever produced," says David Manning White, a Virginia Commonwealth University professor who is one of the few scholars of the funnies. "What made him unique was his ability to develop characters that were modern fairy tales.

As the times changed, so did Capp. With the growth of welfare and the antiwar movement, Capp shifted to new targets. To the horror of liberals, he was suddenly attacking them.

Instead of characters like Henry Cabbage Cod, who might have borne a resemblance to Henry Cabot Lodge, Capp's tales became populated by such zanies as Joanie Phoanie, a Joan Baez-like folk singer who ate caviar and crooned about poverty and protest.

Capp seems to revel in the uproar.

"A humorist has one duty — to be funny," he says. "Some are funny about kids, some about dogs, some about mothers. I chose fraud. Whatever was fraudulent, I attacked.

"For myself, I never did anything as well as I hoped," Capp says. "Maybe no artist does. John Steinbeck once wrote that the Nobel Prize should go to Li'l Abner. He was, I am sure, shocked and disappointed when they gave it to him instead."

There was one eye-popping exception to Capp's repulsive characters. The women. He made some of them staggeringly curvacious, sinfully seductive.

Capp's most popular creatures perhaps were the Shmoos, "luv'bl lil' critters" that joyfully rolled over and died when anyone wanted to eat them.

Capp wrote all his life about mythical hill folk, but he did it from the perspective of a city boy. He was born, Dogpatch poor, with the name Afred Gerald Caplin in New Haven, Conn., in 1909.

When he was nine, he fell from an ice truck and was run over by a streetcar. His left leg had to be amputated.

Outfitted with a wooden leg, he attended a rapid succession of art schools in Boston. After he was thrown out of each for nonpayment of tuition, he went to New York, where he landed his first fulltime art job with The Associated Press.

There, he drew a one-panel cartoon called "Colonel Gilfeather." But the work did not go well, and he lasted in the job only six months.

Then he became an assistant to Ham Fisher, creator of "Joe Palooka." Soon he got ideas for his own strip, and in 1934, Li'l Abner appeared.

By the 1940s, Capp was into the big money, and at the height of his career he earned more than $500,000 a year. He opened Capp Enterprises in New York to keep up with such strip spinoffs as Shmoo clocks and Daisy Mae blouses.

By this fall, with his clients dwindling and deadline pressures more onerous, Capp decided to quit. Now he rarely leaves his colonial-style home near Harvard where he's working on his autobiography.

Ruled Out In N.J. Schools

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A federal court judge has ruled that the "science of creative intelligence" — a booster name for Transcendental Meditation — is religious in nature and that government-sponsored classes at several New Jersey schools are unconstitutional.

Judge Curtis H. Meanor of the U.S. District Court declared the program, which used a $40,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, "violates the establishment of religion clause of the U.S. Constitution's First Amendment."

Plaintiffs had charged that TM contains substantial elements of Hinduism and should not be taught in public schools. It has been incorporated in school programs in several states.

Wild West Anew: Govm't Evicting Gold Miners

By CARRICK LEAVITT

DENNY, Calif. (UPI) — Gold miner Bill Meadows, 82, says he will "just move into a hollow log" if the Forest Service kicks him out of his tiny cabin in the Northern California wilderness.

Meadows, who says he has been finding gold along the New River since 1932, has been served an eviction notice. So have 96 other prospectors.

Forest Service officials refuse to refer to people like Meadows as miners. They say they are "claimants" who illegally use a 105-year-old law to live free on prime national forest land.

The miners say a way of life ignited by the Gold Rush of 1849 is being destroyed by overzealous representatives of the United States departments of Agriculture and Interior.

But the government believes a new generation of "hippie types" are twisting the federal mining law of 1872 to live on choice public lands.

A few miles down river from Meadows lives Zeke Isaacs, 37. He sat in his log cabin drinking red wine, studying a copy of the 1872 federal mining act he believes entitles him to live on 20 acres of forest.

Zeke and his woman, Katie, 32, moved up from Marin County and took over the cabin in 1969 after paying an undisclosed sum for the Margaret E claim. They live there with their two sons, Chris, 7, and Zack, 5.

There is no electricty. Plumbing consists of an outhouse. Their only link with civilization is a homemade tram strung 300 feet across the river gorge.

Chris and Zack ride the tram 115 feet above the river, then walk a mile to a one-room school funded by the county. The 13 pupils trail down from places like Bake Oven Ridge and Bear Tooth and Pony Buttes.

The claim has always produced gold and "I've been working on the rim for five years," isaacs said. But during the summer the family camped "up river" and took part in a joint $3,500 dredging venture with another miner.

Are they finding any gold?

Yes, said Katie, rolling a cigarette. She displayed a 5½ pennyweight gold nugget worth about $220. It hung around her neck on a golden string.

"The stuff is hard to find, but by God, it's there," Isaacs said.

Trouble with the government erupted into hostilities in 1971 when mining engineer Emmett Ball was hit in the neck by a bullet fragment while performing a validity test on another Isaacs mining claim. Ball recovered but the tension remained.

Now "they're trying to pick people off," Isaacs said. "They've gone into the back country and torn down all the old claims."

The claims had to be valid because "those men worked their butts off," said Katie. "They either made beans or left."

"But they (the Forest Service) just can't stand to leave us alone. Isn't it better to let people who can't function in the rat race down in the cities to live up here and be left alone?"

"They would really like to control the mineral wealth of this country," said Isaacs.

Resolution of drawn battles lines, both literal and judicial, is likely to shape for many years every American's right to access on public lands.

"Anybody can prospect — but what they've done is just build a cabin," says Forest Service Mining Engineer Gerald Gould, fingering stacks of documents in his cluttered San Francisco office.

All levels of the judicial system are involved in the battle. In the middle of the legal entanglements simmers a jurisdictional dispute between the Forest Service and Trinity County officials.

Some county commissioners believe that Denny is a test case. If successful in proving those mining claims invalid, the Forest Service will use the same method to close out 1,400 similar claims in Trinity County alone and then go after other small resident miners throughout the nation.

Under the law, a miner must have "discovery before location." A claim does not exist unless there is a proven valuable deposit of minerals and then it cannot be used prior to patent (proven ownership) for any purpose other than prospecting and mining.

Some "claimants" use the mining laws to gain permanent access to land — in the Denny case, a forested Eden on the edge of the Salmon-Trinity Primitive Area, said Lou Price, Forest Service lands officer.

"One of the claimants admits that for three years he hasn't done a bit of mining," Price said. "They get their money other ways. There were food stamps, welfare, marijuana fields ... they just aren't there for mining."

"They hunt all year long. Fish and game laws are being broken. They cut timber and trespass."

Art Purchases Among Biggest

WINSTON-SALEM — The fever-pitch of excitement for North Carolina artists and for the jury facing the challenge of selecting works of art purchased by R. J. Reynolds Industries, Inc. is now over.

The statewide competition for North Carolina artists was sponsored by Reynolds to secure a representative collection of Tar Heel art for the new RJR World Headquarters Building, which opened in mid-September.

Stephanie C. Bolick, public relations specialist with R. J. Reynolds, has announced that a grand total of 138 works have been selected from over 4,000 entries submitted by artists. The jury of four — Moussa Domit, Lida Lowrey, Ted Potter, and William K. Stars, visited eight collection centers to select the works. These were Greenville, Wilmington, Beaufort, Asheville, Boone, Durham, Charlotte, and Winston-Salem.

The last three collection centers were Charlotte, Durham and Winston-Salem. In Charlotte, 27 works were chosen from 521 entries. At Durham, the jury selected 24 works from 925 entries; and in Winston-Salem, 27 works from some 1,000 entries.

Earlier, in Greenville, on October 16, the jury chose 26 works from 434 enties. A total of 34 works of art were selected from entries at Wilmington, Boone, Beaufort, and Asheville.

Domit, director of the N.C. Museum of Art in Raleigh and a member of the permanent panel of jurors for the competition, said "it was the largest juried state show in the history of North Carolina and possibly the largest juried show ever held in the entire region.",

Charles B. Wade, chairman of the building committee for the World Headquarters Building commented, "We are very pleased with the response across the state to the entire competition."

Reynolds is considering the possibility of using some of the works for a traveling exhibit in the future, for the purpose, Wade pointed out, "to show the fine examples of art and the full range of talent in the state."

With the purchases from entries completed, the next event of interest will be a grand judging of the 138 works to determine which will receive first, second and third place awards.

According to Ms. Bolick, this will take place early next year. At that time, the jury wiII announce the winners who will receive $1,500, $1,000 and $500 respectively. These prizes are in addition to the purchase prices paid to the artist at the time of acquisition.

Mine Disaster Unit Is Ready

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — There hasn't been a major mine disaster in Ohio in 33 years but should it strike a group of well-trained men are ready.

Some 78 men on 13 teams are students in a continuing training program for rescue work in deep shaft mines in the event of a disaster. They are six-man teams, coal miners by trade, who spend one day or more each month sharpening their disaster skills.

All are on call at all times to go anywhere in the state should fire or explosion occur in any of Ohio's 206 deep mines.

All are certified first-aid men, are mostly under 40 years of age, and have gone through a preliminary 20-hour training course in addition to monthly training sessions.

Men on eight of the teams are backed up with equipment on four Ohio Division of Mines rescue trucks loaded with safety and rescue devices. The other five teams are sponsored by coal mining companies.

Fred Gaskins of Athens oversees the state's mine rescue operations. He was on the first rescue team organized by Ohio in 1942. That was just two years before a fire in a mine at Powhatan Point, Ohio, killed 66 miners. That was the state's last major mine disaster.

The state pays each man $20 a month for attending the half-day regular training programs. The coal companies sponsor four to eight hours of additional training each month for each team.

"Every second is precious to everyone trapped below," said Gaskins, a Division of Mines veteran. "The important thing is to train these men to properly use their machines (breathing apparatus) and communication system. Once they get underground, they'll know what to do because they are coal miners."

Rules call for a backup team to be ready outside any mine where a team goes in under ground in case they need help.

Should they be called to a mine disaster, the men go on state wages of $7 an hour plus expenses as long as they must remain at a disaster scene.

"Seven dollars an hour isn't worth risking your life for, but these are dedicated men," Gaskins said.

Some Say You Can Do Better Than Social Security

By LeROY POPE
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — If a young person took the money he pays Social Security and invested it reasonably and conscientiously, he would amass more savings for retirement than the government program provides.

This is the contention of Arthur Milton, an insurance expert and investment advisor. Many young people suspect he is right. That is just one of the reasons they are deeply concerned about the future of the Social Security system.

"I wouldn't venture a guess at just how much better a person could do without Social Security," Milton said. "It's too complex an actuarial problem and too dependent on one's intelligence and self-discipline.

"We have to recognize that, while Social Security is good for many persons, the system today is a far cry from what was envisioned when it was adopted in the 1930s.

"It was intended as a minimal base security plan and it has evolved into a tax burden that sops up the bulk of anything most persons possibly can save during their lives," he said.

Milton, author of "Will Inflation Destroy America?", denounced the higher social security tax schedule just passed by the House of Representatives as being severely inflationary. He said the higher taxes are sure to wreck many small businesses.

"Social Security also has become inflationary because of the many frauds perpetrated against it," he said.

"The Social Security system is burdened with the huge cost of these frauds and illegitimate claims and that throws the system out of acturial kilter.

"People think nothing of filing illegitimate claims for Social Security benefits because the taxpayers have to pay," he said. "But if I am funding my own savings and insurance plan, I will be much more concerned about people filing illegitimate claims because that will run my premium rates up and could wreck the whole plan."

John R. van Wagoner, production manager for the life, health and financial services division of the Travelers' Insurance Group, agreed that a young person could do better than Social Security by investing the same amount that he pays in taxes in life insurance, annuities and similar investments.

"Our company's experience is that investors in our insurance savings plans get a six percent return on their money fairly consistently," van Wagoner said.

But like Milton, he declined to predict exactly how much better one can do privately than Social Security does.

Americans are deeply concerned about the possibility of the Social Security System going broke but most of them are vigorously opposed to paying higher payroll taxes to bail the system out.

That is why the House of Representatives voted on Oct. 27 to raise social security taxes sharply only on the wages of those who make more than $20,000 a year.

The House also voted gradually to eliminate the $3,000 limit on earnings of Social Security recipients under 72. The House killed a proposal to put civil servants in the Social Security System.

The Gallagher Presidents' Report said recently that 72 per cent of the corporate presidents expected the present system to go broke.

Four-fifths of the presidents asked said they favored overhauling Social Security to permit workers to credit their own and the employers' contributions to their own personal accounts for retirement purposes, an idea that wasn't exactly blueprinted.

The degree of opposition to higher payroll taxes is only exceeded by the general malaise of many Americans about social security, says Prof. Carl W. Eldred of the University of South Carolina in a detailed study of public attitudes on social security published in the Journal of Risk Insurance.

Professor Eldred proceeds from the viewpoint that social security must have widespread public support if it is to keep on working satisfactorily. He is disturbed that many Americans under 30 are disillusioned with the economics of the system and feel they are not likely ever to get out of it as much money as they will pay into it.

He found that 36 per cent of the people he surveyed would approve abolishing social security on the theory that private insurance plans can do better. A majority said they did not believe the system as presently set up is financially sound in the long run.

But when Eldred asked if the social security tax rate should be raised to finance a stronger system or if the wage base for the tax should be lifted to provide more money for benefits, the response was overwhelmingly negative.

Not surprisingly, the response was also negative when he asked if payroll taxes and benefits should be reduced to ease the working of the system.

Eldred's survey went into other aspects of public attitudes towards social security, such as whether benefits should continue to be tied to earnings or should be based on the need of the beneficiaries. The respondents were overwhelmingly in favor of continuing to base benefits on the worker's past earnings.

This, however, could be the $64 question for Congress concerning the future of Social Security as the American population ages and the needs of the elderly expand.

President Carter proposed phasing out the present $16,500-a-year limit on the social security tax wage base and requiring employers to collect taxes on total wages by 1981. He also proposed gradually stepping up the tax rates. But the president's plan upset business, particularly small business.

Wilson F. Johnson, president of the National Federation of Independent Business, which has its headquarters in San Mateo, Calif., said 15 to 20 per cent of the small business in the country could be seriously hurt by the Carter proposals.

"A $100 or even a $1,000 fixed cost increase will not in itself kill a small business or forbid entry of new firms but if the increase is repeated ad infinitum, as it could be in payroll taxes, then that is the sort of thing that is driving small businesses to the wall in America," Wilson said.

The National Federation of Independent Business proposed its own solution to the problem of bailing out Social Security.

William J. Dennis, Jr., the NFIB research director, proposed that Social Security be divided into two programs. He said that not only could bail the system out financially but could deal with the question of to what degree benefits should continue to be tied to earnings.

As with medicare, Dennis would divide Social Security into Part A and Part B.

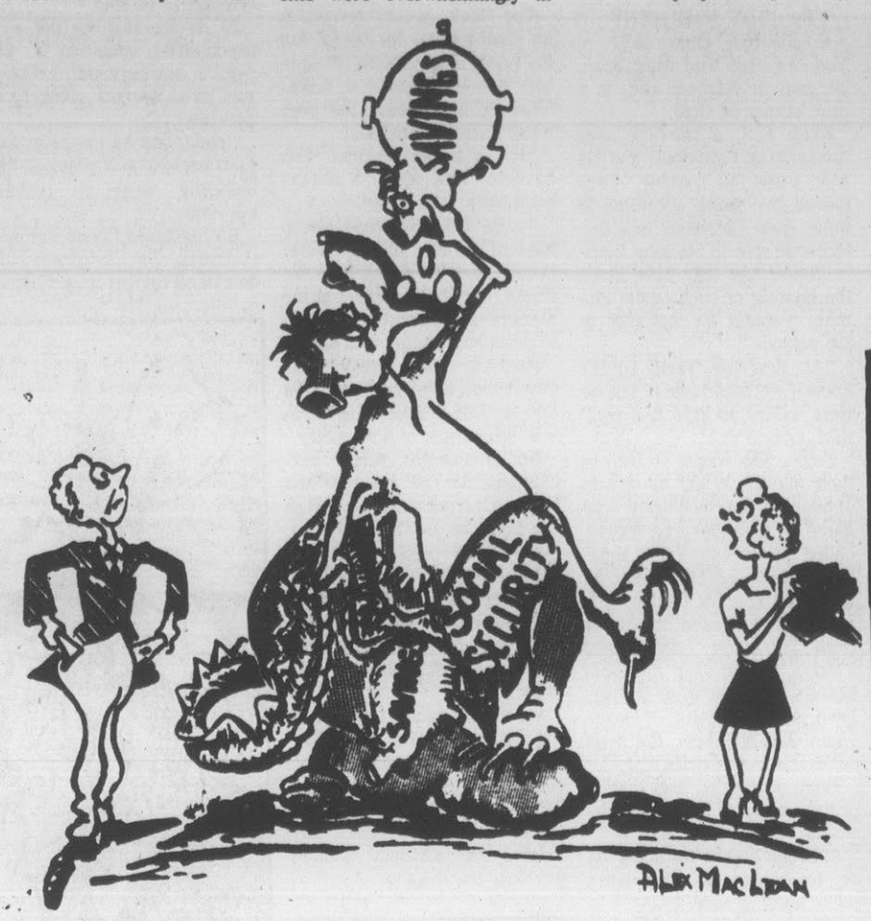

Part A would continue to be financed out of payroll taxes and would be an insurance program like the present program but with some modifications to make it actuarially more sound.

Part B would be financed from federal general funds and would be based entirely on need, taking over the activity and operation of the existing federal Supplemental Security Income program. Thus, people eligible for Part B benefits would get two monthly checks, one from Part A based on entitlements from their past earnings, and one from Part B based solely on current need.

Part B would be a form of dole and it would have to be paid for out of income and other taxes, Dennis said. But separating it from the rest of the Social Security System would relieve business of a large burden and avert bankruptcy of the basic system.

Professor Eldred's study concluded that some of the public distrust of Social Security is based on ignorance and he said many of the attacks on it from insurance people and others have been bombastic and grossly inaccurate.

For example, he found that an astonishing 51 per cent of those queried did not know that Social Security pays disability benefits, although it has been doing so for two generations. And 37 per cent did not realize that their social security benefits were automatically increased periodically as the cost of living goes up.

SOCIAL SECURITY has evolved into a tax burden that sops up the bulk of anything most persons can save during their lives, according to insurance expert and investment advisor Arthur Milton. (UPI Photo)

Gift Cards From CARE

NEW YORK (AP) — Holiday gift cards from CARE provide a way to send greetings, while at the same time helping poor families around the world to survive and to work toward becoming self-supporting, suggests Frank L. Goffio, executive director of the agency.

"Attractive cards will notify each person that you have given to CARE in his or her honor to help those suffering from hunger, poverty and disease," Goffio said.

Names and addresses on your holiday gift list, with a contribution for each card, should be sent to CARE, Dept. HOL, Box 570, New York, N.Y. 10016, or to any regional CARE office. The cards will be sent to you by return mail or, if you prefer, directly to the recipients, Goffio said.

Giving examples of what a holiday gift can do, Goffio noted: $5 serves 400 children a glass of fortified milk; $10 provides nearly a week's CARE-MEDICO training for a local student nurse; $15 plants a half-dozen trees to combat soil erosion and grow more food; $25 gives up to 1,500 children a daily cup of protein-enriched beverage for an entire school week.

Lay Hypnotist Offers His 'Solutions'

By KAREN SOUTHWICK

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Lay hypnotists across the nation offer simplistic mind-over-matter solutions to pain, nerves and obesity all too attractive to the desperate and uninformed.

Ralph Grossi, a nationally known Pittsburgh hypnotist whose methods have stirred controversy, promises to help people lose weight, stop smoking and eliminate bad habits in four short visits. He also says he helps some regress to a previous life.

"I've hypnotized 100,000" Grossi boasts. "Ninety percent lose over 10 pounds the first week."

Hypnosis, he explains, reinforces a conscious desire with the subconscious. His subjects testify the method works. Professional psychologists say the bad habit may be eliminated, but the attitudes that led to it remain.

Grossi learned hypnosis from a World War II army buddy, and has since added a "doctor of psychology" degree through a correspondence course from Neotarian College of Kansas City, Mo., a non-accredited institution.

Despite a lack of medical training, Grossi has built a lucrative practice in hynosis clinics in Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia. He charges $59 for four visits — non-refundable and payable at the first visit. The charge to be "age-regressed" to a previous life is $75.

The national and local societies of clinical hypnotists — health professionals with an M.D., DDS, or Ph.D. in psychology — assail Grossi for his non-medical background and his grandiose promises.

"He's a con man out for a buck," said Dr. Russell Scott, president of the Western Pennsylvania Society of Clinical Hypnosis. "The man is a charlatan preying upon people who can least afford to be victimized.

"I would never make a referral to Grossi. The position of the American Medical Association and the American Psychiatric Association is that under no circumstances should any professional make a referral to a lay hypnotist."

Dr. Kay Thompson, who is the immediate past president of the American Society of Clinical Hypnosis, noted the United States is one of only three nations that does not restrict hypnosis to the health fields.

She estimated there are 4,000 lay hypnotists nationwide — about half in California and 400 in Pennsylvania.

The society "would like to see hypnosis limited to those people trained professionally in the healing arts. Stage hypnosis — and the kind of stuff Grossi does — would be ruled out," Scott said.

Lay hypnotists "are. not qualified to do the vast majority of things Grossi says he does," Scott said, but they're organized into a union affiliated with the AFL-CIO so "it's very difficult to deal with."

"Hypnosis is the only tool Grossi has," Thompson said. "He's not qualified to recognize or treat any related symptoms of obesity."

"Anybody can be a hypnotist," she said. "If you have a good subject you are a good hypnotist."

Grossi admits he only motivates people "to do what they already want to do."

But he dismissed the charges of Thompson and Scott as jealousy "because I am so successful."

"I am a hypnotherapist rather than just a psychologist," he said.

"I do therapy but not as a psychiatrist would do it. You say, 'I am nervous.' I say to you, 'You are not going to be nervous.'"

Grossi said he has regressed 6,000 persons to a previous life, including some on national television.

He regressed Donna Panzo, a Charleroi, Pa., housewife who described herself as a Bulgarian in the 19th century and spoke her language.

However, Nick Jordanoff, who spoke Bulgarian as his first language, said of what she was saying, "It's not any language I've ever heard. I think it's just nonsense words that maybe to her sound foreign."

Exotic Game In Ohio Preserve

By JUDY McELHENY

ILESBORO, Ohio (AP) — You can hunt wild boar, Spanish goat or Barbado ram in a little corner of Ohio.

Keith Fox, a one-time soap salesman in Columbus, and his wife make it possible. They moved five years ago some 55 miles from Columbus to a picturesque spot in Hocking County. Since then they have made the hunting of such exotic animals possible for upwards of 200 persons.

"At first we really didn't know if we would like it, but we were willing to give it a try," said Joyce Fox.

Today, the couple — both in their mid-30s — sell the dream of bagging your own exotic wild game on their 500-acre spread, called the Hocking Valley Hunting Preserve, off Ohio Route 93, ten miles south of Logan.

"We transplanted the boars from Tennessee, Georgia and Florida," Fox said. He said hunters traveled even farther, from Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, and Michigan. But most come from Ohio cities.

From wherever, they pay a pretty penny if they are successful.

Although he has 420 acres under fence, Fox said that didn't make hunting easy.

"The boars hide in the hollows, and they're real smart," he said. "Sometimes you'll see two in half an hour, and sometimes you won't see one for two days."

The thick, brushy terrain is an ideal habitat for boars. But the brush is a problem for summer hunters because it makes tracking and seeing the prey more difficult, Fox said.

"It's a tough business. You have to work and it's always hard work," he added.

Fox said the real challenge to hunters was getting close enough to a 200-pound boar for a shot. Nearly 95 percent of the hunters are persistent enough to bring home some wild bacon.

Hunters must supply their own rifles, hand guns or bows and arrows. Fox said high-powered equipment is a necessity.

He emphasizes safety precautions for all hunters and stresses target practice before the hunt for novices. To date, there hasn't been an accident with a weapon.

"There's a real challenge to it," Fox said of the hunt. "The boar has the advantage. It's tough, unpredictable and fantastic."

Poet Found Peace In Secluded Garden

By CAROLYN PORTIER
News Bureau, UNC-CH

CHAPEL HILL — On full moon nights poet Anne Spencer could be seen digging in her small secluded garden behind her Pierce Street home in Lynchburg, Va.

There she found solitude — from the racial antagonism of the close Southern town, from her duties as wife and mother to three children, from her position as librarian in the black library created when she challenged the town's "whites only" library. In her garden Spencer was free to compose the poetry that in the late 1960s attracted J. Lee Greene, assistant professor in English in the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

In the four years preceeding her death in 1975 at age 93, Spencer and Greene spent many hours discussing her life and poetry. The outcome of those conversations is Greene's book. "Time's Unfading Garden: Anne Spencer's Life and Poetry," the first biography on the black poet. The book, to be released late this month (October) by the Louisiana - State University Press, contains the only collection date of her writings.

Although Greene said he probably knows more about Spencer than anyone else, he readily admits that he still doesn't understand everything about her. Especially, he said, how a black woman living apart from other black writers of the early 1900s and in a very racist town, was able to produce poetry that attracted the attention of major American anthologies.

What also intrigues Greene is the disparity between Spencer, the public, very outspoken black community leader; and Spencer, the very private, almost shy poet whose main themes do not reflect her battle against discrimination.

"Her poetry is not protest poetry," Greene said. "She is not reacting to solitude or injustice — although she was an ardent spokesman for black rights and a true feminist.

"Instead her life as an unreformed social heretic in a town she brands as racist and reactionary is quite in contrast to the apparent themes of her poetry . . . personal freedom, love, beauty and death are frequent themes often combining in several poems to express a quest for immortality."

Spencer felt closest to immortality in her garden world, Greene added, where ideas for poems would come to her from images in nature — the intricate, fine web of a spider, a favorite steadfast oak tree, her perennial roses, or even the sturdy bricks walls and wooden frames of the garden cottage. It was in that cottage, named EddanKraal, where she actually wrote most of the completed poems, he said.

The poet, considered "strange" even by her children, often was preoccupied with thoughts of her writings, Greene said, and she had a habit of jotting down ideas as they came to her. Unfortunately this habit left Greene with many fragments of poems and prose. The biographical part of the book, he said, comes from the actual conversations with Spencer and some background research. But parts of the unique collection of her writings found in "Time's Unfading Garden" were pieced together by Greene from snatches of poetry and prose found in the poet's home on old newspapers, in book margins, phone books and on old envelopes. Greene said Spencer's references to some of these poems in the course of their conversations also aided him in this task.

Completed poems, he added, and many incomplete poems were found in her "manuscripts," numerous old writing tablets.

Greene said he regrets that he was unable to collect all of Spencer's works. Some of her writings were thrown out at one point by well-meaning neighbors, he said.

Even facts about events in her life, however, remain unexplained. Greene said he continued to make discoveries like correspondence with writers in South Africa, Scotland, and England, or locating a picture of her in a German literary magazine. "I don't know how she met those people or how that picture got there," Greene said. "She wouldn't explain everything I asked about . . . I guess I'll never really know everything about her although I feel I know more of Anne Spencer's life and private feelings than anyone else."

Spencer first began writing poetry in the late 1890s while studying at Virginia Theological Seminary and College. She was always very shy of publishing, Greene said, and it wasm't until 1920, at the age of 38, that she consented to submit her first poem for consideration.

The force behind convincing Spencer to publish was James Weldon Johnson, black poet and field secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP). Johnson sought out Spencer in 1919, Greene said, to urge her to found a local chapter of the NAACP, which she did. During that time, Johnson discovered Spencer wrote, and, upon reading some of her poems, he made arrangements to have one published.

After that, several of Spencer's poems appeared in magazines and she became acquainted with writers like Langston Hughes, Leslie Pickney Hill and H.L. Mencken. She also continued her civil rights work and was befriend by such leaders as Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., Thurgood Marshall and the Rev. Adam Clayton Powell.

In the years before her death, Spencer became something of a recluse, Greene said, although she continued to write, her last poem being written in 1974. She talked to few people, he said, but her personal writings were never discussed.

"I'm still not sure why she chose to finally tell her story to me," Greene said. "I had been trying to talk to her for 18 months because I intended to write my Ph.D. dissertation on her, but she resisted. One day she just called me and said 'If you want to come up here, come up!'

"Later she told me she had hesitated because she was afraid she would die before I could finish the dissertation." Greene added that Spencer was interested in talking to black students if doing so would be beneficial to their studies.

It took Greene four years to get enough information to write the book. After one taped interview, she didn't allow him to tape anymore — she felt that was too impersonal — so he often had to stop along the road outside Lynchburgh to write notes on their conversations.

He said Spencer was also very concerned about how he would describe her in the paper that later became "Time's Unfading Garden," and so she wasn't as open at the start of their relationship as she became later.

"She didn't want to be presented as a nice little old lady poet," Greene explained. "She was a feminist and one of the most antagonistic forces in Lynchburg and she was afraid that at 89 she would seem the Grandma Moses type, sitting in a shawl and writing poetry." Greene said the poet did read parts of his first version of the dissertation and "very much liked what she read."

Greene believes Spencer was for years overlooked as an important black writer because she was "before her time."

"She was a woman whose mind was not in harmony with her physical environment," he said. "The only way she could deal with that was through her writings, which she kept to herself."

The UNC-CH English professor added that Spencer is actually one of a number of early black writers who have been neglected. "Black literature for a long time was thought of as sociology — the social history of a race and a form of literature." literature."

In Lynchburg Anne Spencer's world is not being neglected any longer. Her home, garden and cottage have been declared a Virginia Historic Landmark, and a Friends of Anne Spencer Memorial Foundation has been established. Part of the purpose of the foundation is to assist and encourage young poets and writers.

Abandoned Child Problem Grows

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Child abandonment continues to be a growing social problem in the cities of Latin America, according to a recent issue of CCF World News, published here by the Christian Children's Fund.

The publication says that there are an estimated 700,000 homeless children living in the streets of Mexico's largest cities, plus another 60,000 in Chile, and 200,000 in Venezuela. Most, it reports, are between the ages of 3 and 12, and tend to run in packs; they support themselves by stealing or begging unless taken into child care programs.

LAUGHING AT WINTER — Bessie Morris, of rural Claysville, Pa. can laugh at Pennsylvania winter weather with her supply of wood already in hand. Mrs. Morris and her husband Beryl, spent about two weeks cutting the wood, which they use to heat their Washington County home. Wood overflows the porch and piles are scattered around the yard. Prostate Surgery is Safe

Can you explain the simplified "needle" operation for a prostate condition? I've been told that I need surgery. I would like to find out where this can be done. — Mr. J.H.A., Ohio.

Dear Mr. A.:

I have never heard of any type of surgery of the prostate referred to as a "needle" operation. I can, however, speculate that the operation you refer to is one done by electrocoagulation. It is known as the "trans-urethral resection."

There are a number of surgical techniques for the removal of the prostate. The choice, made by the surgeon, depends on the age of the patient, his general physical condition and the particular type of enlargement of the prostate.

Each case is individually studied before the choice of surgery is made. The patient himself, of course, does not play a role in making this decision.

Surgery of the prostate is remarkably safe, and the benefits that accrue can be very gratifying. Rarely is this operation done as an emergency. Far too often, because it is an elective procedure, some patients delay too long following the advice of their doctors. Then, a relatively simple procedure can be converted into a complicated one.

Dear Miss E.:

Many unorthodox methods — meditation, yoga, and even biofeedback — have been tried and acclaimed as being valuable for the reduction of high blood pressure.

Any method that reduces emotional tension and induces relaxation and tranquility is a contribution to patients who are also receiving standard medical treatment for the condition.

The meditation techniques are not meant to supplant the use of the many excellent drugs that are now available for the control of high blood pressure.

A VACANT STORE. . .in Ayden has a sagging door and empty windows.

Downtown Ayden, A Place Of Faded Charms

THE OLD AND NEW . . . Three sturdy brick structures and a new building are part of the Ayden downtown scene. From left to right are: The F&M National Bank of Ayden, the Planters Bank, the old Christian Church, and the new Christian Church.

Like a Tennessee Williams heroine, downtown Ayden possesses considerable Southern charm. Though tattered and showing visible signs of neglect, the area still bears the undeniable stamp of former beauty that has been allowed to fade with age.

Several old, well-preserved brick structures in or near downtown have interest as representative examples of late 19th and early 20th century American commercial architecture.

These are buildings which were constructed in the days when the costs of a building did not preclude extensive use of imaginative, diverse architectural ornamentation.

Currently, no definite plans exist for restoration or redevelopment of the downtown Ayden area.

It is understood, however, that one group has made initial overtures to obtain a long-term lease to renovate the richly detailed Old Town Hall Building — with the idea of transforming the landmark building into a Wild West Saloon and Museum showplace.

In so many towns in the local area, buildings typical of small town business architecture of the last 100 years have just about disappeared from the scene.

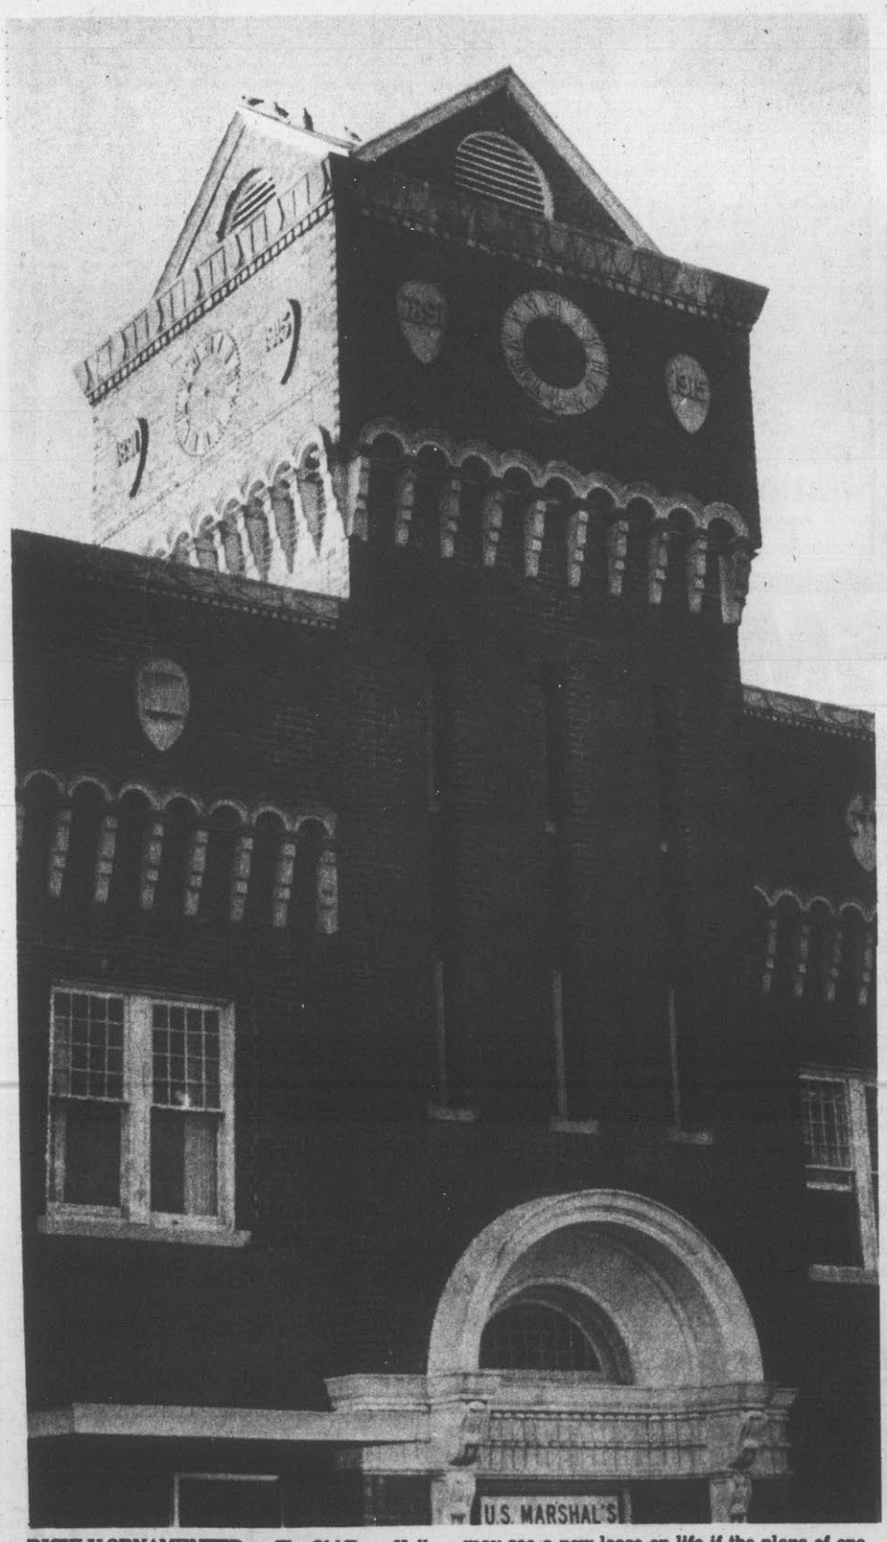

At this time, Ayden is one of the few towns in the immediate area that has a fairly good sampling of fine brick structures of that period still extant. So the opportunity is still open for the town government and the townspeople to take steps to save the best of these buildings, and to restore them to their former usefulness.

Whatever fate may be in store for downtown Ayden, for the moment it is a good place for anyone interested in seeing first hand late 19th and early 20th century town architecture to visit.

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

RICHLY ORNAMENTED . . . The Old Town Hall Building, rich in architectural ornamentation, may see a new lease on life if the plans of one group eventually becomes a reality.

TWO DOORWAYS . . . A couple of interesting entrances are those of the F&M National Bank of Ayden, and the Old Town Hall.

Circus Life Turns Into Romance Of Performance

By DAN CHISZAR

DENVER (UPI) — It is very quiet between shows, and Dolly — beautiful dark-haired Dolly — swings on the Roman rings up beyond the lights and rigging into the blackness of the Denver Coliseum ceiling.

There is no music — no organ, no brass trumpets or slide trombones to hide the squeak of the rigging. The only distraction is a high wire man dancing on the steel cable.

Dolly does not come down for nearly two hours. She rolls, she flips, she archs her form in an aerial ballet. There is no one to watch but a few roustabouts and idlers.

Then, with each leg slipped through a ring, sitting on her buttocks 21 feet above the sawdust, she crosses her ankles and is nearly motionless for a time.

It's all such a commonplace scene in Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey's Greatest Show on Earth. But to an outsider, especially a child, or to an adult with a romantic turn of mind, it holds a special charm.

"What is this giant of thrill and laughter?" asked showman John Herriott in one of his poems of the circus and circus life.

"It's the spectacle, the tradition," said ringmaster Kit Haskett.

"Iss da tigers and da odder animals," said the German animal trainer everyone calls Peter.

"It's my dad," said Dolly Jacobs, down from the rings. "My dad is the circus."

He may be, at that. Lou Jacobs, 74, he of the bulbous red nose and the high-domed head, a clown 53 years, now the elder statesman of his profession.

In the wings, the master clown worried and watched his 20-year-old daughter spin into a blur on the rings during the first show in Denver on a warm October night.

"I wanted to tell her about the high altitude here," he said. "I remember in '53 I was playing here and some of the performers passed out."

She was a showgirl at 13, began training on the rings five years later, now performs an aerial ballet not seen in the circus for years.

"Have you ever been on a swing?" asked Dolly. "It's almost like flying.

"This is what I've always wanted to do, display myself physically and show what I've learned," she said. "It's my life. The circus is our own world."

Dolly's mother was an aerialist who crashed 50 feet to the floor of Madison Square Garden in 1948, broke her back and was in a cast three years. Jean Jacobs, 54, now tends a circus concession stand. She does not watch her daughter perform.

"The applause, the fleeting moment in the ring is not why show people stay with the circus," said program coordinator John Herriott, dapper in mustache and black tuxedo. "It's the life and the time spent practicing, the pleasure, and the challenge."

Herriott, son of a circus man, has been a showman all his 46 years. He is, by trade, an equestrian, as was his father.

"If I had to pick one scene that captures the essential element of circusness it would be a girl on a circus horse," said Herriott. "To me, that's the circus."

Maybe so, but in one of his circus poems where Herriott queries in verse:

"What is this giant of thrill and laughter?"

His first love, the circus horses, comes after

Comes this line saying: "It's elephants and clowns..."

Across 46th Avenue from the Coliseum, under the viaduct, smoke clouded over the clack of billiard balls on the pool table of the Stadium Bar and Grill.

He was shooting with a right wrist wrapped tightly.

"Was elephant," said Peier, holding up his arm. "She slip while sitting up and catch me little bit here. Only sprain."

He lost the game to a young roustabout and sat down next to an animal trainer named Peter, another German, whom everyone calls Pee'-tah.

Like a quizzical bear, Peter placed his hairy bulk of an arm on the table and leaned over the beer bottles.

"You know someting," he said. "I feel safer in da cages wit da animals than wit dese people. I raise dah animals. I know dem. I don't know what people do."

Laughter sounded through the bar.

Jimm Briscoe, a midget clown, was sprawled across the pool table stretching for a shot in the far corner. It was wide of the pocket.

Briscoe, Tim Doody, Jim Tinsman, all sitting at the same table drinking beer, all young men, all making their living as greasepaint gypsies in baggy pants and fright wigs.

Their painted smiles, putty noses and garments of harlequin lie in battered trunks backstage in Clown Alley. The entrance is cloaked-off from outsiders, off-limits to the curious, and guarded most often during showtime by boss clown Frosty Little.

"The circus has always had clowns and always will," said Frosty, in classic whiteface, before the last performance in Denver. "You can't have a circus without clowns.

"A newspaperman once asked me what I'd do when I leave here," he said. "'Leave here', I told him. 'Are you out of your mind. I'm never going to leave here. I'll always be a clown.'"

Out front, on the bandstand, the first trombonist chatted with the second trombonist while they awaited the third trombonist. The band's brass, the pulse of the circus, has each performer's ear. It cues their entrance, paces their act and accents the finale.

"It's a nice gig because it pays well, but it's an endurance feat," said the third trombonist. "By the time we're through with this our lips are like cardboard."

The band leader waves his baton, the brass breaks into "Robinson's Grand Entree March," and the discipline of practice becomes the romance of performance.

The circus unfurls in a fantasy of color and sound as it moves slowly around the arena before the crowd, its sheer spectacle disarming even nonbelievers.

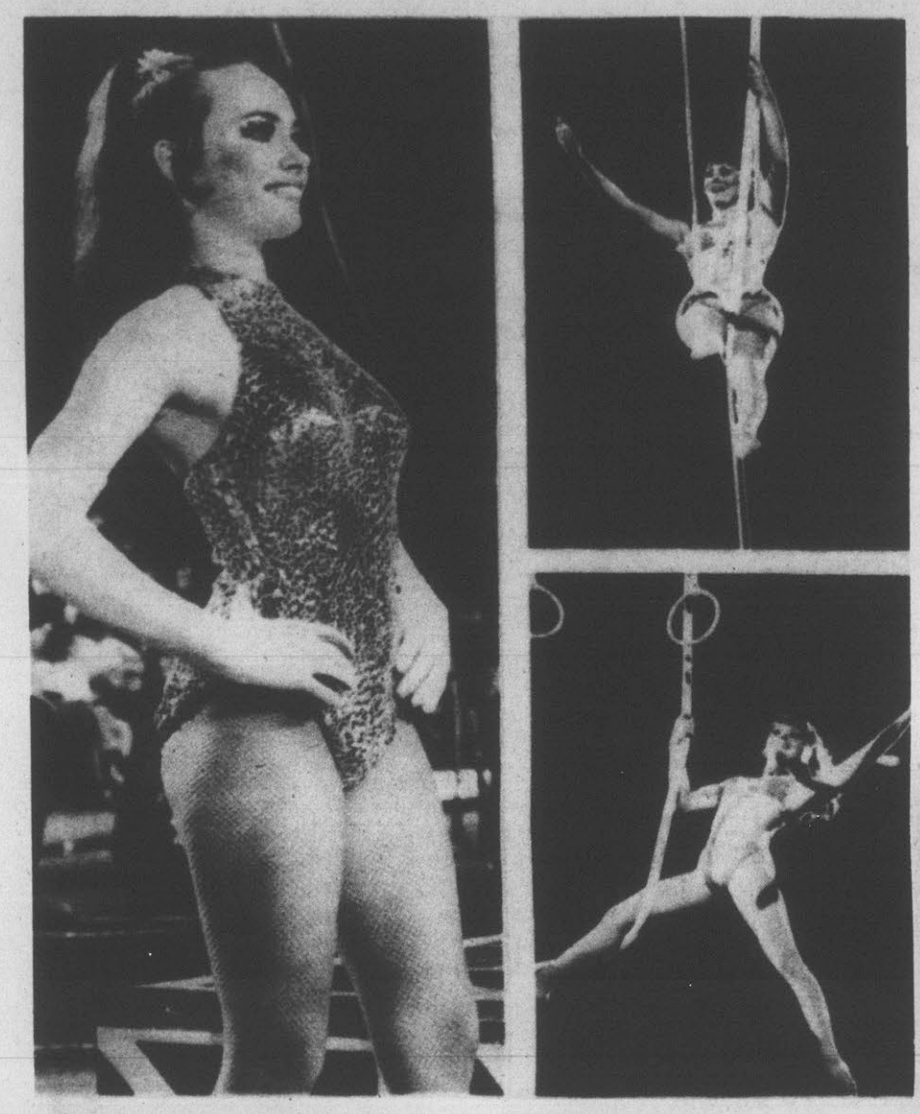

Soon after the first act, when the yellow-haired tiger trainer leaves center stage with his snarling cats, the spotlight finds Dolly Jacobs in Stage No. 3 and follows her up a rope to the roman rings.

She does a handstand and the crowd is hers. She swings around slowly, the spotlight playing off the rhinestones on her white costume.

The trumpeter hits a high note, and the brass follows Dolly up into the lights and back. In the end, the spotlights transform her into a flashing pinwheel of red and blue until the cymbals crash and Dolly returns to earth.

She bows once, the spotlights shift, and Dolly walks slowly off, her head down, her expression grave. The crowd is drawn quickly to the jugglers and clowns.

In two hours, the show was over and the crowd filed out. Dolly was on her way to her railroad car. The roustabouts were walking the animals along silent, dark streets back to the train — elephants first, camels last.

DOLLY JACOBS makes her debut on the Roman rings in the new edition of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus. Her father has been a clown for 53 years and her mother was an aerialist who now tends a concession stand. (UPI Photo)

Protein Diet Said Risky

CHICAGO (UPI) — The protein diet popular among those seeking to lose weight quickly can be hazardous to your health, says the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The diet is essentially fasting, with the intake of sufficient amounts of protein to preserve lean tissue, vitamin and mineral supplements, and non-caloric fluids, reports the AMA publication.

The article goes on to say, "This type of diet should be undertaken only with the supervision of a physician who is familiar with the diet's protocol, contraindications and possible complications."

Routine monitoring of blood, urine and blood pressure is important. Possible side effects of the diet include low blood pressure, constipation, nausea, vomiting, muscle cramps, dehydration, menstrual disturbances, loss of hair, dry skin and bad breath, according to the AMA publication. And the diet is definitely ruled out in kidney disease, liver disease, pregnancy, nursing mothers, and possibly for children and adolescents.

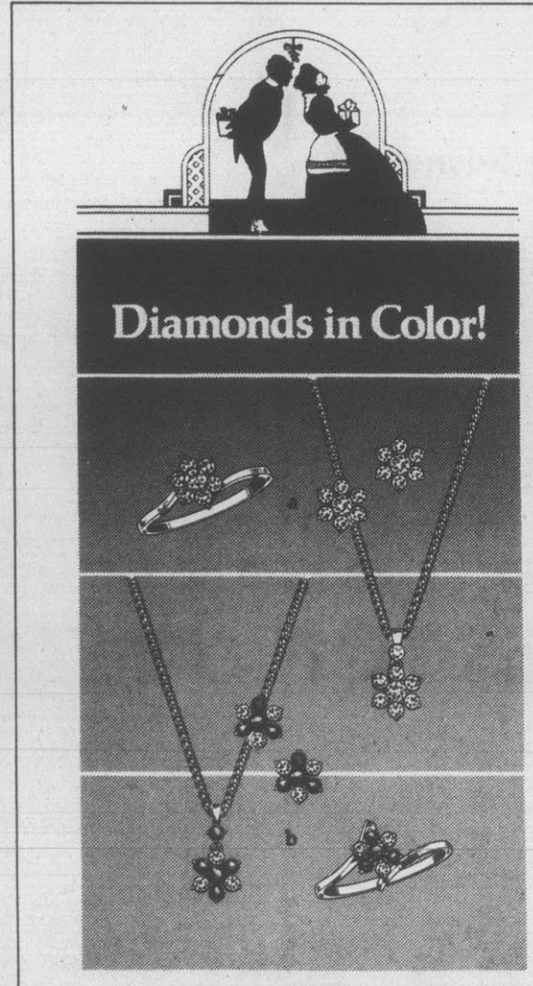

This is a drastic diet that should not be administered to anyone less than 35 pounds overweight, says the report. The medical risks of the diet are greater than the health hazards of being no more than 35 pounds overweight.

The diet will take off the pounds, but it does not promote long-term maintenance of ideal weight. It is so bizarre that it cannot be maintained for long intervals, and once the diet is relaxed the pounds creep back. Permanent weight loss can only be effected by a change in lifestyle.

Houseplant Owners Call For Advice

CHICAGO (UPI) — Walter Edens knows fall has returned when many houseplant owners start calling for advice about their ailing plants.

Edens is chief horticulturist for Lincoln Park Conservatory here. He says most popular houseplants, such as dieffenbachia, coleus and philodendron, need a 30-40 percent relative humidity level because they are tropical or semi-tropical in origin. Without it, they wilt.

People and furniture benefit from the same level, says humidifier expert Gregg Blankenship. But the colder it becomes outdoors, the lower the humidity drops indoors, sometimes as low as one to nine percent.

At that level, people's skin feels dry, furniture can become unglued and warp, plaster can crack, wallpaper peel and floors creak.

Edens and Blankenship, who is president of the industry organization, The Humidifier Institute, have some tips for coping with all these problems:

Both recommend using humidifiers, either portable or built into the house or apartment heating system.

In the case of plants, Edens says frequent waterings won't help because roots absorb water at an established rate. If the leaves are losing moisture faster because of dry air, the plant wilts, and the older, lower leaves drop.

Misting leaves with lukewarm water gives only temporary relief, he said, and it must be done several times daily.

The two or three gallons of humidity a day added by showers, cooking, laundering and other normal moisture-producing activities also are inadequate, Blankenship said.

The institute recommends 6.4 to 13.8 gallons daily for optimum humidity for a 1,500-square-foot house. The amount depends on how tightly the structure is built.

"Homes built before 1950 were not constructed as tightly as newer homes," Blankenship says.

He said the ideal is a whole house humidifier tailored to the size and construction of the building and the type of heating plant.

If that is out of the question, he recommends individual units.

He said the average two-bedroom apartment needs about 10 gallons of water a day, and a two-floor house, about 18 gallons.

To actually determine the size units needed, first learn the cubic footage of the area to be humidified. Blankenship says that information can be obtained from the builder or, if you rent, from your landlord or management company.

The cost, like the number and size of units needed, depends on the total physical layout. He estimated the cost and installation charges for a furnace humidifier for a two-story house with basement and three or four bedrooms at $175-$225.

For a two-bedroom house or a one-or two-bedroom apartment with its own furnace, about $125-$175;

And for a two-bedroom apartment without its own furnace, about $75-$100.

Energy costs to operate vary widely, Blankenship said. He said in many cases a central humidifier hooked up with a furnace uses less electricity than a 25-watt light bulb.

For maximum efficiency, he said, portable humidifiers should be placed near heating and cooling outlets, generally in a hallway, to get maximum distribution.

Plane Replica Given To Paris

PARIS, France (AP) — The "Spirit of St. Louis" has made another trip to Paris. A replica of the famed monoplane flown by Charles Lindbergh nonstop from New York to the French capital in 1927 was presented here to Mayor Jacques Chirac by members of a Missouri Trade Mission, in Europe to extol the advantages of doing business with their state.

The presentation was in conjunction with the city of St. Louis' year-long commemoration of the 50th anniversary of Lindbergh's solo flight. The group of Missouri government and business leaders called on more than 50 corporate and government trade officials in Paris, London, Cologne, Zurich, Liechtenstein and Dusseldorf, where Missouri opened its first office.

ANGLED DECK ADDS INTEREST, LIVABILITY

CONTEMPORARY PLAN SPOTLIGHTS MASTER BEDROOM

By Jerry Bishop

Emphasizing the lavish master bedroom, the angled deck adds visual interest and involves the outdoors in the design of the Stroudley, a striking three bedroom contemporary. The deck, private to the master bedroom, leads to an enclosed courtyard, a privacy-protecting area that is framed in stone and adds a further point of involvement with nature.

Basically, the Stroudley is a family home that allows for formal and informal living areas, a foyer-directed traffic pattern, and two full baths. What makes it unusual, however, is the thought given to the sleeping quarters, where the three bedrooms each merit patio or balcony and enjoy light and scenery through sliding glass doors.

On the exterior, the plan fuses with its surroundings. Naturally attractive stone trims much of the facade, and the court and double entry doors issue a warm invitation to come inside. The tiled foyer permits access to the living-dining area at left and puts guests or family steps from informal living areas and bedrooms.

The L-shaped living-dining area offers a liberal amount of space for entertaining, and, here again, a terrace reached through sliding glass doors, enlarges the area and encourages outdoor living. A built-in china closet benefits the dining area, and a lavish use of windows assures an airy interior.

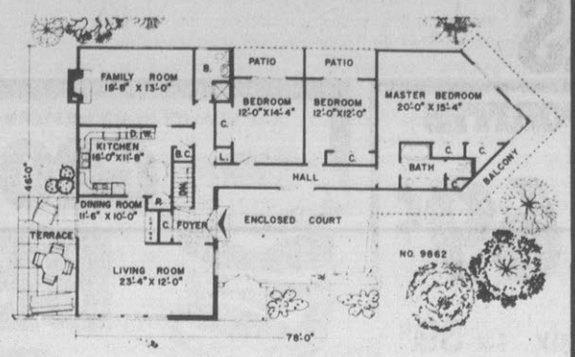

Sandwiched between living area and family room is the kitchen, a roomy work center that allots space for family dining. Cabinets are plentiful and include a handy pantry, as well as a broom closet.

To the rear of the home, a family room is well-placed to permit unrestricted activity, and a wood-burning fireplace adds light and warmth. The full bath that adjoins the family room is located to serve both bedrooms and living areas with ease.

Finally, the bedrooms are zoned for maximum quiet by placing them in their own wing. Ample closet space, decks and patios, and the well-planned master bedroom, combine to make the bedroom wing highly desirable.

A full basement is provided, to add another 2155 sq. ft. of potential living space.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

One way to keep your house from looking too much like your neighbor's is to install a roof of a different color. This can be done during the original construction or when a new roof is in order.

While this desire to avoid sameness is a laudable objective, the use of color should be considered primarily as an exterior decorating feature. Much has been written about interior decorating, but home owners are less than knowledgeable when it comes to the exterior elements of their houses. Yet it's the face of the home that is seen by more persons than the inside.

The roof is the largest unbroken visual expanse in most houses, so it must be considered the key to exterior decorating. Sidewalls and trim are subject to more frequent color changes, but you can expect to "live with" your roof color for up to 25 years.

Manufacturers of roofing have provided greater flexibility in exterior decorating by producing many new colors and textures in recent years. Asphalt shingles, the most popular type of roofing, offer an extensive range of colors. In addition to all the traditional roof colors, the shingles now come in such earthtone colors as browns, buffs, olives and slates. (For a copy of Andy Lang's booklet, "Guide to the Selection of Quality Roofing," send 35 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743.)

Earthtone colors and the three-dimensional appearance of the new textured shingles not only relate a home to its environment, but can also be used to coordinate the roof with masonry walls and muted siding colors.

When it is used effectively, roofing color can make a house stand out as well as complement other color elements of the house. It is a definite part of exterior design, a part that can improve the entire structure. If the roof is light-colored, the eye is attracted to it, thus giving small or very low houses an added dimension. On a contemporary house, a white roof can create a sense of airiness. On a low-slung ranch, it makes the house seem taller. Entirely aside from the appearance standpoint, white helps to keep a house cooler, since it reflects part of the sun's heat, making it an ideal house topping in warm climates.

A dark roof works in the opposite way, especially when it is combined with touches of bright accent color low on the sidewalls. Dark colors help make the unusually tall or steep-roofed house seem less towering, which is why it is often used for certain two-story houses.

Be extra careful when choosing a roof color. Once you select a particular color and have the shingles installed, you have to live with your decision.

GARDEN CLINIC

(N.C. STATE UNIVERSITY)

Q. Can you tell me about the yellow variety of apple with the red check that was displayed at the 1977 State Fair in the R.N. Barber? (S.G., Morganton)

A. That was the Winter Banana — an old cooking-type apple that is used in some commercial orchards. It is also used as a pollinator. (Mel Kolbe, extension horticulturist)

Q. Are there some types of berries that cardinals particularly like? We would like to attract some to our yard. (Mrs. W.S., Salisbury?

A. Red cedar, eyonymous and pyracantha are berried plants that attract cardinals. (A.A. Banadyga, extension horticulturist)

Q. I am planning the design for an open field mobile home park. To save on electrical costs, how can I best plan for the location of trees? (G.C., Fayetteville)

A. Someone has suggested a platform over the trailer with kudzu planted in barrels for instant shade. This probably has little appeal, but you will find that by placing the mobile home with the long axis east and west, you will have less wall area to absorb summer sun rays. For quick shade, plant rapid growing deciduous trees (sycamore, poplar) near the home. Plant slower growing deciduous trees (willow oak, maple) further back on south and west sides. Periodically thin the fast growing trees. Plant evergreen trees (pines, magnolia) on the north and northwest sides. Leave one end open so that the home can be moved if necessary. (Wm. M. Stanton, extension forest resources specialist)

Q. I've heard that there is a company which keeps records on giant vegetables, Do you know the name of this company? (Mrs. W.C., Williamston)

A. Grace's Gardens of Hackettstown, N.J., keeps records of giant vegetables in both the United States and England. Incidentally, two North Carolinians are among the current record holders listed by Grace's Gardens,. Ed Weeks of Tarboro holds the record for the heaviest (36 pounds) cantaloupe and the biggest (197 pounds) watermelon. Dewey Phillips of Mars Hill holds the record for the longest, straightest (72 inches) gourd. (George Huges, extension horticulturist)

Housework Is Rarely For Men

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

A husband who put corn meal instead of soap powder in the washing machine? It was by mistake, but it has happened in the love, honor, obey and help-with-the-housework set.

It seems some wives have even been eager to drop the share-the-work idea. It is not only expensive, "but our house always looked as if it had been burglarized," said one 25-year-old.

Men simply don't have the knack of the fine art of house husbandry whatever it is supposed to be, say wives who discussed homemaking mix-ups.

"Sometimes I've been happy that I can get to a house job before he tries to help me," said one secretary, who aims to spare her husband's feelings. "I never know what he is going to do next. For example, in absentmindedly cleaning out a wastebasket, he managed to discard a brand new blouse that was in a shopping bag that he used for the trash."

For one wife it was the end of her favorite dress. She had asked her husband to give her a little hand with the ironing and he used a very hot iron on her garment of manmade suede. "It almost seemed as if he didn't have common sense, and I guess he wasn't listening when I told him how to do it," she said.

Even so, most wives are in sympathy with their husbands. "He has a lot of things on his mind," one 27-year-old said of her husband, who is a certified public accountant. She had hoped he would help cut the house budget but so far he has increased it.

"He went to the market to buy Chinese cabbage and came back with endive and was surprised to find that it had cost $6 ... "

Another wife is sure her husband doesn't consider it demeaning to help with the housework; he just senses his own inferiority in that respect, she explained. When she returned from an emergency trip to her parents' house she was amazed that the kitchen floor hadn't been washed or the floor swept under chairs in two weeks. He just said that he was planning to get to it, she commented.

One wife has solved that problem: Only ask them to do big things — washing walls, waxing floors, hanging curtains — things a man feels a woman shouldn't do. Her husband is willing because she doesn't ask him to do the piddling things, she explained.

Women have a greater sense of obligation about housework, she feels, perhaps because they were conditioned to it by their mothers. In her house, the boys were rarely expected to help in the kitchen. That's why they hate small chores.

As for cooking, many working wives and husbands eat out more to take the strain off the kitchen chores, but lots of men enjoy cooking when they are given free rein.

"And you can't give them the opportunity to do a big meal or it will be highly cholesterol with gravy, butter, cream, all the fattening things. And they leave a kitchen in chaos." She and her husband argue a lot about food. He insists he's eaten nothing but hamburgers and spaghetti since they were married.

One 23-year-old girl was concerned that her husband of two years insisted on using the fine china and silver instead of the regular flatware and pottery for everyday meals.

"When I told him these wedding presents were for company, he said, 'well I'm company.' With his china-breaking record I really can't let him handle it at all. So I take care of the dishes. And that may be one of the reasons he was inspired to make the suggestion," she said.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — We are getting ready to fix and use an extra room downstairs. We are concerned about noise and want to keep it from going upstairs as much as possible, but we also want to keep the room itself as non-noisy as we can. Do acoustical ceiling tiles really help? I have been advised that they are of little use and that it is far better to use drapes around the room. Is this true?

A. — No. Drapes are excellent sound-absorbers. So are carpets, upholstered furniture and many other non-hard surfaces. But if you do not use a sound-absorbent material on the ceiling, you nullify the effect of the other materials, since a flat, bare, hard ceiling will reflect sound more than anything else because its surface is so large. When sound hits a hard surface, it bounces back, producing what is called sound reverberation. Thus, the room itself will be noisier and so will the upstairs room. Acoustical ceiling tiles absorb sound, which is why you usually see them in a restaurant with a large capacity. The next time you go into a large restaurant that is very noisy, look up. The chances are it does not have an acoustical ceiling. Now, if you combine a sound-absorbent ceiling with other sound-absorbent materials, you will have a room which is quiet and which doesn't send any noise upstairs.

Q. — I had a bloody nose recently. Some of the blood dropped on the wooden arm of a living room chair. Nobody noticed it for days. Is there any way of getting out the stain? I haven't done anything yet.

A. — You will have to experiment. It is assumed that the wood has a varnish, lacquer or similar finish. If it has also been waxed, try removing all the wax with turpentine or a commercial wax remover. There is a good chance this might also take off the stain. If not, rub the area with denatured alcohol. Let a little of it remain on the spot for a few minutes, then rub again. You can also try lacquer thinner (be sure there is plenty of ventilation), but this might also affect the finish, which then would have to be retouched. In an extreme case, you will have to use a varnish remover on the arm of the chair. When the finish is off, the stain will probably come with it. But some of it may have soaked into the wood, in which case the chair arm will have to be bleached, then refinished. In any event, unless the stain can be eliminated simply by taking off the wax or rubbing with denatured alcohol, some kind of retouching or refinishing is inevitable.

Q. — I recently bought a varnish, probably synthetic, which produced a high gloss finish that I do not like. Why is it that manufacturers put out high gloss finishes when nobody likes them?

A. — Nobody likes them? Millions of persons do! Besides, high gloss finishes are generally easier to clean and are usually preferred for surfaces subject to heavy use or severe treatment.

Put Safety In Workshop

CHICAGO (UPI) — If you are among the thousands of Americans now doing their own home repair work, Underwriters Laboratories Inc. has some safety tips for you.

UL is an independent, non-profit organization that tests hundreds of consumer products for public safety.

For home workshop users, it recommends:

— Removing your necktie and jewelry, and avoiding loose-fitting clothing with baggy sleeves that can catch in power tools.

— For good protection against moving parts of tools, wear a snug-fitting shop apron that ties in back.

— Keep your work-bench litter-free, and the floor clear of loose pieces of lumber and nails.

— Use a notched stick to push woodwork pieces the last few inches past the blades of an electric bench saw.

— All power tools should have electrical supply cords with a three-pin grounding plug, and the plug should be connected to a three-terminal receptacle. Two-pin plugs should be used only with adapters whose green-wire pigtail is securely fastened to the center screw supporting the receptacle box cover. Whichever type is used, have a qualified electrician check the receptacle box to be sure it is properly grounded.

To Solve Shortage: Drill Those Gas Wells Deeper

By PAUL ENGLISH

ELK CITY, Okla. (UPI) — The short-term solution to the nation's natural gas shortage is 15,000 feet away — not thousands of miles off in another country.

And a web of interstate pipelines already in the Great Plains could be hooked up in a matter of days to carry the gas to energy-hungry industries and homeowners back East.

But there is a hitch to this optimistic view of Oklahoma gas producers.

The hitch is that the 15,000 feet they talk about is straight down.

They must drill three miles into the Deep Anadarko Basin which covers 12,000 square miles in western Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle.

Estimates of the gas reserves in the deep basin range from a conservative 60 trillion cubic feet to a liberal 300 trillion cubic feet.

For a nation consuming 20 trillion cubic feet of gas a year, the deep basin has the potential of buying time to convert to other energy sources.

The certainty of projections on gas reserves in the deep basin declines as the projected volume increases.

"We're absolutely certain major reserves are there, say 60 trillion cubic feet," said John W. Mason, president of Amarex Inc., an independent active in the search for gas in the deep basin.

The 60 trillion estimate has an 80 percent probability factor, he said. A projection of 100 trillion cubic feet, 20 percent, and finding 300 trillion, about 5 percent.

Such projections are based on a number of factors, including the volume of sediments of types known to generate oil and gas in other parts of the world or at other levels within the same basin.

The accuracy ratings of the projections will change as the unexplored 90 per cent of the basin is drilled during the next 10 to 15 years, Mason said.

"We look at the drilling that has been done in the past and the volume of sediment that has been found, and the recovery rate, the thickness of the potential reservoir rock, formations and trends."

Allen Chatfield, coordinator of exploration for GHK Co., said 500 wells have been drilled beyond 15,000 feet in the basin since the first one went down in 1946.

Two hundred of these deep wells have produced below 15,000 feet. About 65 per cent of all wells drilled produced at some depth.

A total of 2.5 trillion cubic feet of gas has been found below 15,000 feet in the deep basin. Fifty trillion cubic feet has been discovered in formations above that level in the Greater Anadarko Basin, which stretches into Kansas and Colorado.

The world's deepest well, beyond 31,000 feet, was drilled several years ago in a field east of Elk City.

Drilling a deep well, which is any hole below 15,000 feet, generally requires nine months to two years, according to Chatfield.

Some of the super wells in depth have become super producers. More than 20 super wells have produced in excess of six billion cubic feet of gas a year.

A study of the basin indicates 1,150 wells have the capacity of producing the energy equivalent of one million barrels of oil in a lifetime.

State regulations limit the daily production of each well, based on a percentage of the potential maximum daily production of the well. In Texas, the daily ceiling is 25 per cent of the potential maximum and in Oklahoma it is 50 per cent.

But the cost of tapping the rich reservoir through a super well also is super.

Drilling an average 5,200-foot gas well costs $34 a foot. For a well reaching 15,000 feet, the average jumps to $141 per foot, with the price at 20,000 feet rising to $211 a foot.

Mason says the average rig and fuel cost for one day of drilling is $8,000, and the expenses go up as the drilling bit gets deeper.

For example, an ordinary procedure like changing the drilling bit becomes much more time-consuming. To change a bit, all the drill pipe has to be pulled out, then returned to the hole. At 5,000 feet, this takes three or four hours, at 15,000, eight, and at 20,000, all day.

The 96 rigs now active below 15,000 feet have large pumps which force mud three, four and five miles into the earth's skin, then return the rock-laden mud to the surface.

Drillers have to control pressure of 15,000 to 20,000 pounds per square inch — enough to kill a man.

Mason says temperatures in the deep basin normally reach 250 degrees, and water boils there at 212 degrees.

Only one to two percent of the cost of the drilling is in salaries, although six persons must be on hand at all times.

"Your sales taxes on supplies are greater than that," Chatfield said.

Independent gas producers operating in the deep basin say the current regulated interstate price of $1.46 per thousand cubic feet makes the deep well effort hardly worthwhile, considering the risk involved.

"If you're going to ask us to take extraordinary risks, we've got to have the chance of making extraordinary profits," said Robert A. Hefner III, whose GHK firm is active in the deep basin.

Any ceiling on gas prices is a barrier to attracting risk capital needed for such ventures, he said.

Most of the money to finance the drilling is borrowed at 12 to 15 per cent interest, Chatfield said.

Two-thirds of the deep wells now are economically successful, Mason said. "As time goes on that should increase with more development and less wildcat wells."

But he said every producing well must make enough to offset a portion of the cost of drilling a dry hole.

These men say the cost of drilling a super well can be recovered in 18 months to three years if it becomes a super producer. The typical gas well, Mason says, will produce gas for 10 to 20 years.

They believe the leasing of land and the drilling now in the deep basin reflects industry's expectation the price of new gas will be deregulated.

Competition for leases in the deep basin is intense. A lease on land near a presently producing well recently went for $18,000 an acre compared with an average $150 an acre.

"We're gambling that we will get deregulation of new gas," Mason said. "Deregulation of new gas is so obviously in the best interest of the country that it will come about."

Stella Creating Her Own Career

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — How does it feel being Dolly Parton's younger sister?

Stella Parton, a country music singer herself, is asked that almost every day she's on the road performing.

"I tell them it feels good," she said. "What more can I say?"

Stella, who has been to hairdresser's school, could spend a glamorous and exciting life working on sister Dolly's wondrous wigs. But she prefers a country music career of her own despite the dilemma of carving an identity separate from Dolly's.

She's making inroads on her sibling's spotlight. Her last single, "Danger of a Stranger," was a moderate hit in the United States and abroad. She also has recorded her second album, "Stella Parton Country Sweet," and recently began work on a third.

Her popularity has reached the point that Tammy Wynette called a West Palm Beach, Fla., radio station last spring while in Florida and requested one of Stella's songs.

But success has brought out detractors. She's capitalizing on her famous name, some say. Others speculate that Dolly has helped her.

The truth is that Stella has not asked her sister for favors and Dolly hasn't offered any.

"It wouldn't have been fair if I'd have asked her," said Stella, four years younger than Dolly.

They hardly ever see each other. They checked separately into the same Los Angeles hotel recently and neither knew the other was there. When they do get together, cooking, rather than careers, is a major topic of conversation.

Then there are the comparisons: singing style, appearance, everything. Stella regards the comparisons — disguised expectations of greatness — as compliments.

"I'm me and she's her," she said in an interview in her record company office. "Everybody is doing their own thing. There's room for both of us, but not for two Dollys."

She's shorter and slimmer than Dolly, appearing as fragile as a snowflake. Their voices are somewhat alike and both have dimples. While Dolly is enamored with wigs, Stella is fascinated by hats. She owns 200.

Stella shows indications of the Parton ambition. She keeps all her press clippings and diligently writes thank you notes to fans.

Like her sister, she moved to Nashville from her family home near the Smoky Mountains right after graduating from high school. Her first hit was "I Want To Hold You In My Dreams Tonight" in 1975 — 10 years after Dolly became famous. Five other releases followed.

HER OWN CAREER — Stella Parton, younger sister of Dolly, has a career of her own. She says she has not asked Dolly for favors and her sister hasn't offered any. (AP Laserphoto)

Display Prints By Munakata

BOSTON (AP) — Several original woodblock prints by Shiko Munakata, a Japanese artist who died in 1975, and photographs of his work will be on display at the Museum of Fine Arts here until the end of 1977.

Munakata, born in 1903, first worked in oils but changed to the wood medium early in his career. His black and white prints gained international recognition after World War II, but Munakata also worked with colors.

The photographs were taken in 1959 by Boston photographer Bela Kalman. Louise Moorrees of the museum's department of Asian art, organized the exhibition.

Cut Heating & Cooling Bills Up To 65%!!

Our Low-E houses are designed from the ground up to be the most energy-efficient you can buy. Purely and simply, what, we have done is combine all the existing energy-saving techniques with some innovative building methods. The result is a home that can cut heating and cooling costs up to 65%. The Arkansas Power and Light Company reports that homes built to Low-E specifications in their areas are averaging a 65% savings when compared to homes built to FHA minimum property standards. The Arkansas results are actual metered results over a 2-year period . . . no gimmicks, no guesses . . . but actual metered results! Imagine what that means to you in dollars-and-cents terms. A Low-E Homestead® represents energy savings wrapped up in one beautiful structure.

Not a pre-fab. Not a shell house. Each energy-efficient Homestead® is a complete materials package necessary to build the home of the future . . . today . . . on your lot from the foundation plate up. Construction labor costs not included.

You provide the construction labor, lot, and foundation; we provide the materials to complete — from the foundation plate up — the interior and exterior of these homes according to plans and specifications. The materials furnished will meet or exceed the national minimum property standards of FHA. Any changes required to meet local or state codes may alter the price accordingly. Lowe's quotes you one price for all the materials, so you know before you start, your total cost.

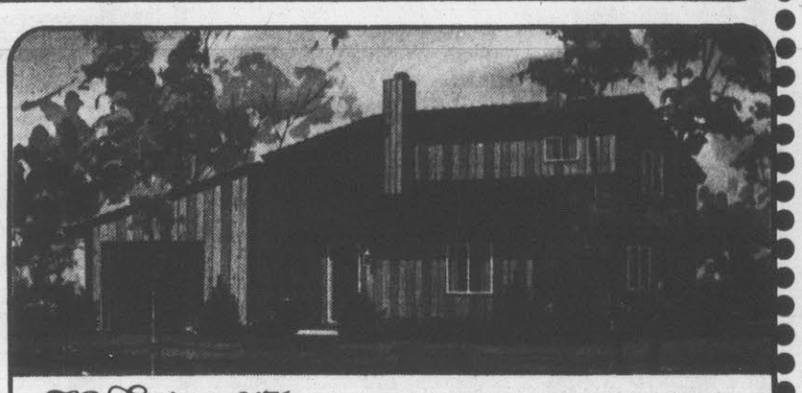

Designed from ground up to meet the demands of a changing world. Here's how we did it!

We obviously can't go into complete detail here — we've got an 8-page brochure to do that. But, briefly, we began by doubling the standard amount of insulation used: to 12" in the ceiling and 6" in walls and floors. We used 2 x 6 studs with post and beam construction, 24" on center, in the walls to accommodate 6" insulation and specially designed trusses for 12" insulation in the attic. An electrical raceway allows application of insulation flush to the walls, while the electrical cable in the attic is strung above the insulation. We also cut window area down to 8-10% of the floor space, used caulked double-paned windows, and insulated metal doors with magnetic weatherstripping. We caulked between the sole plate and the flooring, with insulation between the sill plate and foundation wall. A vapor barrier is used next to the sub-flooring and in the walls and ceiling. The design also allows enough roof overhang to shade windows and a light-colored roof to reduce heat in summer, with natural air flow throughout the attic. Finally, polyethylene was applied to the ground in the crawl space to greatly reduce moisture accumulation.

Can cost no more to build than a minimum property standard home having similar features.

Does that sound too good to be true? Well, believe it! We've utilized some innovative building techniques to really trim labor costs. And our homes require fewer board feet of lumber, which reduces construction costs even more. Even better than that — studies have shown that a Low-E Homestead® is as structurally sound as a conventionally built one.

Interested? We've got a beautiful brochure that tells the complete energy-efficient Low-E story. It's yours for the asking — just drop by our store.

Frank McHugh Is Like An Old Friend

By JAMES V. HEALION

McHugh was "Spud" Connors in "The Crowd Roars," "Droopy" in "Here Comes The Navy," "Crash" Connors in "Devil Dogs of the Air," "Crepe Hanger" Burke in "The Fighting 69th," and "Festus Garvey" in "The Last Hurrah," with Spencer Tracy, to name just a few of the parts he played in 150 movies.

"People think they really know me. I go along with it," he chuckled. But then with a tenacity that belies his 79 years he said, "It's the guy who has no hair and a crutch and who says 'I remember you when I was a kid,' that kills me."

Many moviegoers of the 1930s and 1940s identified with McHugh, probably because almost all red-blooded American boys, and the GIs they sometimes later became, had a friend with a nickname. And McHugh portrayed the good buddy with finesse.

It is also likely he was playing variations of himself.

"There is in his acting a very warm and methodical determination that is really a reflection of the man as he is in real life," says James Cagney in his 1974 autobiography, "Cagney by Cagney."

It is hard to tell if McHugh, a past master of the put-on, is having some fun at his listener's expense.

"Nobody ever called me 'John,'" he said. "It was almost always 'Bugs,' 'Spud' 'Droopy' or 'Crash.'

"Just once, why couldn't it have been 'Charlie?'"

He has lived modestly since 1950 in Cos Cob with his wife, the former Dorothy Spencer, of West Hartford. The couple has two children, Peter, a professor of sociology at York University in Toronto, and Susan, a photography specialist.

Except for his ascot, strangers would take McHugh for another of the town's more solid burghers. Once a week he takes the train to Manhattan for some socializing at the Player's Club.

The local library asked him recently to come and chat about "Midsummer Night's Dream," Shakespeare's comedy-fantasy in which McHugh played "Quince" to Cagney's "Bottom." The movie lost the Oscar for best picture to "Mutiny on the Bounty" in 1935.

"Midsummer Night's Dream. Was it really 40 years ago? My God!"

But he does not dote on the past. He talked of it only for the benefit of a listener. With almost total recall, he quoted from parts he played.

He was suddenly "McCue of the City News Bureau," a character in "The Front Page," the great 1928 stage play, later a movie classic, about the Chicago newspaper business in the roaring '20s.

McHugh was known for his ad libbing. Cagney recalls in his book a scene from "The Irish In Us" when McHugh returns home in tuxedo and white cap after a full dress affair:

"Pat O'Brien looks at him and says, 'You didn't wear that cap to the ball?' to which Frank improvised the great reply, 'Oh, I know, it should have been black?'"

McHugh's mother and father were traveling actors from Homestead, Pa. With their five children, they made up a troupe.

When McHugh went to Hollywood, he was already a stage veteran like his friends Cagney, Tracy, O'Brien, and Edward G. Robinson, "a great character actor, a fine human being — and easy to put on.

"Eddie said to me one day, 'I saw you talking to Claude Raines,' and I picked it right up. 'Eddie,' I said, 'Claude Raines is the greatest character actor in the motion picture business.' He said, 'You really think so?' And I said, 'He may even be the greatest character actor in the world!'

"Well, that got Eddie. He was exasperated by then and he said, 'Jesus, Frankie, I wouldn't go THAT far!'"

He may watch his old movies on television, but he doesn't enjoy them. His old friends are all there.

"There they are — exactly as if it were that very day — their voices, their mannerisms. There's Guy Kibbee, Walter Catlett, Hugh Herbert, Arthur Treacher, Joe E. Brown. All dead. It's just like a post mortem. That's why I don't look for them. It's too sad."

Cricket Is Losing Out In Singapore

By KENNETH L. WHITING

SINGAPORE (AP) — The police and armed forces here have switched their saluting style from British to American.

The English language, long regarded as one of the most important things the British left behind in India, came under attack there last year. Former minister of state for law Syed Muhammed complained "The language of our former rulers is still with us, an obstacle to progress."

Asians sip tea in once sacrosanct British clubs from Kuala Lumpur to Calcutta.

With the exception of Hong Kong, British colonial rule is a thing of the past in this part of the world. And cricket, a sporting symbol of the imperial presence, is fading along with memories of empire.

Ardent nationalists attack it as a colonial relic. In Sri Lanka, which Britain called Ceylon, the government campaigned last year to ban cricket as "a reactionary game left behind by British colonialists," according to a Colombo newspaper.

Mostly, however, the game with its genteel rituals and arcane rules is losing favor to other sports or leisure activities.

A survey by the Singapore Sports Council found only 550 active cricketers in a population of 2.2 million. Ice skating (there are two indoor rinks 77 miles north of the equator), cycling, boxing, softball, shooting and roller skating are more popular, the council found.

Soccer is the top sport, with badminton a close second. Basketball and ping pong are also popular.

The tennis boom that swept the United States several years ago has finally reached Singapore and one sporting goods dealer estimates that it may be second only to soccer in another couple of years.

Cricket has been played in England for at least 700 years and in Singapore since 1884.

Its decline is traced directly to the withdrawal of thousands of British troops based here until the late 1960s and early 1970s, a measure of how closely the sport was linked to the British presence.

A half-dozen British service teams of 11 men each were replaced by a single ANZUK (Australia-New Zealand-United Kingdom) team. After the Australians pulled out, this was reduced to the New Zealand forces' team.

Another blow came when cricket was dropped as an official schoolboy sport. Only eight teams entered the interschool tournament last summer, against twice as many a few years ago.

Neighboring Malaysia also cut cricket but has decided to reintroduce the sport in schools next year after noticing a decline in the standard of play among youths.

At least seven tournaments have been scrapped, leaving only two major competitions. A large crowd at a key match these days is about 100 people, one sportswriter said, compared to thousands in the heyday of cricket.

Hair Net Is Still In Use

NEW YORK (UPI) — Whatever happened to the hair net? Is it a victim of long, loose, curly and blow-dried coiffures?

Not at all, says Ed Sanders, a retail chain store executive.

Hair nets are no longer a fashion accessory, except for some elderly women, Sanders said.

But they are still widely used in hair-dressing salons, and worn for safety's sake by women in some manufacturing industries and in laboratories where environmental control is critical. Some women also wear nets to protect their hairdos while they sleep.

Sanders's firm, the F.W. Woolworth Co., has been selling nets since the 1920s, but their forerunners date back at least to the Middle Ages. Women then wore crocheted snoods and elaborate caps.

The first nets introduced by the chain were American-made copies of imported Chinese nets, handwoven and handknotted of real hair. The originals were $5, the knockoffs, 10 cents. Today, similar nets made by and for the same companies retail for 17 cents each or three for 37 cents.

'Mary White:' Two-Hour Dramatic Special From ABC Gets Big Rating

"Mary White," a special presentation about the life of a spirited young girl and her moving relationship with her famed father, Pulitzer Prize winning newspaper editor William Allen White, will be presented on the "ABC Theatre," Friday, Nov. 18 (9-11 p.m.) on ABC-TV. Ed Flanders and Kathleen Beller star.

The two-hour dramatic special "Mary White," which will air Friday, Nov. 18, 9 to 11 p.m. on ABC-TV, was inspired by the famed editorial written by Pulitzer Prize-winning editor-publisher William Allen White as a tribute to his daughter who was killed at age 16 in a horseback riding accident.

Although it was written for White's paper, the Emporia Gazette, it was picked up by the AP wire service and printed by papers all over the country. At the time (1921), White wrote a friend: "The editorial has gone out in papers aggregating a total subscription of 2 and one half million, probably a wider circulation than anything that has ever been published in the Gazette. And I cannot help feeling that someplace along the line, Mary's life has reached out and touched other lives through this article, and I hope it has touched them for good. That immortality is sure. And it heals my sorrow somewhat to know that I helped her to that wider influence."

Letters poured into the Gazette office for many months afterward, and friends and strangers told White how deeply touched they had been by his editorial. It was subsequently reprinted in magazines and by the time the Emporia editor died in 1944, "Mary White" was being studied in high school and college textbooks throughout the nation.

As a 12-year old schoolboy, film producer Robert B. Radnitz first read "Mary White" and thought that someday he would put it on film. His long-time ambition will be realized when "Mary White" airs as his first television project.

Young Kathleen Beller portrays the pivotal role of Mary. She has appeared in numerous roles on television and was a regular for two years on the daytime serial "Search for Tomorrow."

Starring as White is Ed Flanders, and playing White's wife, Sallie, is Fionnula Flanagan.

In the role of the Whites' son, Bill (William L. White, foreign correspondent, writer and publisher), is Tim Matheson, and Diana Douglas as Jane Addams, founder of Chicago's Hull House.

Carroll O'Connor Stars In Hallmark Production

Old acquaintances were not forgotten in the Hallmark Hall of Fame production of Carroll O'Connor's "The Last Hurrah" which will be seen Wednesday, Nov. 16, 8 to 10 p.m., on NBC-TV. O'Connor, who is executive producer, writer and star of the production, had worked before with the director and most of the members of the large cast.

The all-star cast includes Leslie Ackerman, John Anderson, Dana Andrews, Robert Brown, Jack Carter, Tom Clancy, Brendon Dillon, Arthur Franz, Alan Hamel, Mariette Hartley, Burgess Meredith, Stewart Moss, Patrick O'Neal, Paul Picerni, Patrick Wayne and Kitty Winn.

Burgess Meredith, who plays Cardinal Burke in the production, first worked with O-Connor in New York. He directed him and Tom Clancy (Ditto Boland) of the 'Hurrah' cast in an off-Broadway cast of "Ulysses in Nighttown."

Meredith was also last seen on the Hallmark Hall of Fame in the series' production of "Ah, Wilderness" in 1959. Years later, he and O'Connor appeared on stage together in a Los Angeles revival of "The Little Foxes." Robert Brown (Nat Gardiner), who was a friend of O'Connor's when he was a struggling actor in New York, was in that production too.

Coincidentally, Vincent Sherman, director of the production, hired O'Connor for his first Hollywood feature role, "Fever in the Blod," which was another film on politics. He remembers himself as a hard taskmaster who often gave novice O-Connor very stern directions. "He never said anything to me during the production and I thought he didn't like me," says Sherman. "Now he hires me to direct his first feature production, 26 years later."

Mariette Hartley, who plays Clare Gardiner, Skeffington's mistress, first met O'Connor when they starred in an episode of the "Insight" series. She played his wife. He played — you guessed it — an ambitious politician.

Katharine Bard (Grace Minihan in the movie) initially worked with O'Connor when he directed her in a little theater production of his own play, "The Ladies of Hanover Tower." Bill Quinn, Brendon Dillon, Arthur Franz, Paul Picerni and John Anderson of the cast all worked with O'Connor in Hollywood films during the days when he was one of the busiest character actors in town.

Stunts Are Easy For Talented Kitty O'Neal

Talented, attractive stuntwoman Kitty O'Neill, like any performer, seeks applause and gets plenty of it. But she will never know the sound of it for she is totally deaf. Despite her affliction, Kitty has become one of the world's best stunt performers.

She adds more credit to her already illustrious career with breath-taking stunt work on NBC-TV's Big Event two-hour special "Superstunt," Thursday, Nov. 17, 8 to 10 p.m., on NBC-TV.

Kitty is among the more than 50 Hollywood stunt men and women featured in the action-packed special which salutes those inteprid professionals who risk life and limb nearly every time they work.

Quite apart from the petite 29 year-old's incredible acts of derring-do is Kitty's life itself, which is as aspiring as her profession is hazardous.

Kitty has been deaf since she was four-months old, and she has taught herself to speak and read lips, placing her among the small percentage of those totally deaf who can do so.

Before she was in her teens, she contracted spinal meningitis and was told by doctors she would never walk again.

She took up swimming as therapy, and by the time she was 12, was a swimming and diving champion of Wichita Falls, Kan., where her family lived. In her late teens, she participated in National A.A.U. Swimming and Diving competition, the Pan American Games and the 1964 Olympics in Tokyo.

She has also taught herself to play the cello and piano, and is an expert dancer and gymnast.

Kitty, who is married to stuntman Duffy Hambleton, is one of 33 members (one of two women) of the "Stunts Unlimited" organization in Hollywood. She was once the world's "Fastest Woman Water Skier" with a speed of 104.85 mph.

For the last six years, Kitty has been racing off-road vehicles in rugged tests of endurance for car and driver, and among her goals are to set the world speed records on land, water, snow and in the air.

Kitty does not consider her deafness a handicap. "It is a challenge to meet and conquer," she explains, "not unlike being called to do a difficult stunt."

Jules Verne Airs

According to many literary historians, Jules Verne gave birth to the science-fiction story in 1864.

An animated special. "Journey to the Center of the Earth," based on this groundbreaking novel about a wonderous adventure in an underground world, will be broadcast on "Famous Classic Tales," Sunday, Nov. 13, 5 to 6 p.m., on CBS-TV. The special was produced in Australia by Air Programs International.

Science fiction arose out of a tradition as old as literature itself — the wonder story. However, rather than resorting to pure fantasy, Jules Verne started a new genre by basing his imaginative tales on what were then plausible scientific theories.

One of Verne's chief aims was to impart scientific knowledge through the medium of a good adventure tale. A century ago, knowledge was far less widespread than it is today. Popular education was still in its infancy and readable scientific books and articles for the average layman practically were unknown.

At that time, a debate raged in academic circles over what the center of the earth was really like. Some held, as we now know, that the earth's core was an immensely hot region of molten rock. Others, however, believed that the earth was hollow.

While writing his North Pole adventure novel, "The Adventures of Captain Hatteras," Verne became interested in geology, particularly in the hollow earth theory. Specualtion that the aurora borealis, or northern lights, emerged through great chasms at the Pole was particularly fascinating. Some scientists also suggested that underground fissures connected the volcanoes of Italy.

Multi-Winning Special Encores After School

"My Mom's Having a Baby," the multi-award-winning and critically acclaimed special which captivated the largest audience of any daytime special in television history, will have an encore showing on the "ABC Afterschool Specials" series Wednesday, Nov. 16, from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m.

Shane Sinutko stars as nine-year-old Petey Evans, whose mother is having a baby. Petey and his young friends, played by Rachel Longaker and Jarrod Johnson, gain an undertanding of pregnancy and the process of birth with the aid of a friendly pediatrician, played by Dr. Lendon Smith.

Candice Farrell, in her first featured dramatic role, playing Petey's mother, is seen actually giving birth to a baby boy. (The birth was videotaped originally as part of an ABC late-night special, "David Hartman: Birth and Babies.")

Dr. Lendon Smith, known as the "Children's Doctor" on his own TV series during the late 1960s, is a regular guest on ABC's early-morning program, "Good Morning America," and practices pediatrics in Portland, Oregon.

According to Mr. Smith, "My Mom's Having a Baby" is an important contribution to sex education for young people, since the treatment of the subject in schools is, at best, "inconsistent."

"Frequently," says Dr. Smith, "the kids who need the information most are the young people who are least informed. Young people, particularly teenagers, prefer to believe other teenagers about sex, and the myths are perpetuated."

Dr. Smith emphasized the strict attention paid to detail in the special and the use of proper terminology concerning anatomical matters. At the same time, however, he pointed to the ingenious use of animation as part of the explanation of the events leading to birth, which has made the information "non-threatening" even to some very young viewers who, as Dr. Smith puts it, "would rather that it happen the way flowers do it."

When "My Mom's Having a Baby" first aired, Bernie Harrision, in the Washington Star, called the special "worth nothing in advance . . . which dispels common misconceptions among children."

RON TO CO-WRITE AND DIRECT COMEDY

Ron Howard, star of "Happy Days," will be director and co-author of "Cotton Candy," a two-hour NBC World Premiere movie comedy about a group of high school misfits who form a rock band.

Actor Kurt Russell Discusses His Trade

Kurt Russell, who plays a hip collegian shocked into genius by a miscalculating computer in "The Computer Wore Tennis Shoes," airing Sunday, Nov. 13, 7 to 9 p.m., on NBC- TV's "Wonderful World of Disney," is an outspoken young star with some definite ideas about acting.

The epitome of the all-American boy, the clean-out, 27-year-old leading man has been acting since he was ten. He's starred in several Disney films and his face is familiar to millions of television viewers.

"The primary thing about acting is that you must entertain the people," says the brown-haired, blue-eyed actor. "It doen't matter what a critic says, because, if the people can't like you, then you're a bad actor.

"I think a ten-year-old kid's opinion is just as important as any critic's. I've received both good and bad reviews, and the bad ones bothered me in the beginning. But now I just ignore them and do the best I can and let the audience be the judge."

Kurt says he knows it "sounds corny," but he loves to act. "Anyone who gets into it and doesn't is crazy — it's hard work. I never considered it as a career though until I realized how much money I could make at it for the few hours I worked. That's a big part of it now, because I believe money has to be a part of everyone's philosophy. It's a fact of life. I'm just lucky that I can make a good living doing what I enjoy."

Kurt's father is noted actor Bing Russell, and from time to time his dad offers him helpful tips on acting.

"The tips my dad's given me are the basis of my technique today," smiles Kurt. "I've never had any formal training but I will say that I know my abilities as well and any other pro. I've been in it for several years and in that time I've learned a great deal just from 'doing.' Oh sure, I'm not as talented as some, but I always give it my best and try to improve each day."

A HOT TIP — Dexter Riley (Kurt Russell) uses his computer-like mind to calculate the odds and pick the winners for mobster Angelo (Bing Russell-his real-life father) while being held hostage in this scene from "The Computer Wore Tennis Shoes," a special two-hour comedy course in campus calamity airing on "The Wonderful World of Disney," Sunday, Nov. 13 (7-9 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

'Lady Chatterly's Lover' Premieres

"Lady Chatterly's Lover," D. H. Lawrence's classic and controversial novel about a wealthy woman's affair with her young caretaker, will be produced as a two-hour NBC World Premiere movie starring Oscar-winning actress Joanne Woodward in the title role, Deanne Barkley, Vice President, NBC-TV, recently announced.

Production will start early next year in England for presentation on the Network during the 1978-79 season.

"Lady Chatterly's Lover" is still banned in some libraries because of its frank sexual overtones. It concerns a frustrated woman who, feeling unfulfilled by her invalid husband, a dispassionate intellectual, finds the tenderness she seeks from the caretaker, a rough-hewn but sensitive man.

Clu Is Private Eye

Clu Gulager stars as Charlie Cobb, a private eye of the 1870s hired to deliver a young girl to a California rancher who believes she is his long-missing daughter, in "Charlie Cobb: Nice Night for a Hanging," the "Late Night Moive" Sunday, Nov. 13, at 11:30 p.m., on NBC-TV.

Ralph Bellamy, Stella Stevens, Blair Brown, Pernell Roberts, Christipher Connelly and Tricia O'Neil are guest stars.

Rancher McVea (Bellamy) seems convinced that Charity (Brown), delivered by Cobb despite numerous attempts on their lives en route is his heiress. While Cobb's mission is legally completed, he suspects that McVea's second wife, Martha (Stevens), resents Charity and the prospect of sharing the wealth.

END OF A COMEDY ROUTINE

For years actor-comedian Red Buttons has regaled audiences at testimonial dinners with a comedy routine about never having a dinner of his own. Buttons may now have to change his act, because he will be honored by the Los Angeles City of Hope Medical Center at a dinner this month.

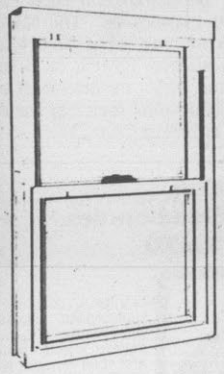

FAMILY PORTRAIT

If you note a distinct resemblance between Patrick Wayne, who plays the estranged son of Carroll O'Connor in "The Last Hurrah," and the portrait on the library wall of Mayor Frank Skeffington (O'Connor) there's good reason — it's a portrait of Wayne's mother, Josephine. It was re-created by a studio artist from several portraits belonging to Mrs. Wayne, who was John Wayne's first wife.

'CUSTER' SPECIAL BEING FILMED

Brian Keith, Ken Howard, Blythe Danner and James Olson are co-starring in "The Court-Martial of George Armstrong Custer," currently being filmed.

The drama, based on the premise that Custer survived the battle at the Little Big Horn in which three Cavalry battalions were wiped out, will air later this season on NBC-TV.

The Dallas Cowboys' Breunig Friendly, Out-Going Gentleman

The Dallas Cowboys clash with the St. Louis Cardinals Nov. 14, on ABC-TV's "Monday Night Football," beginning at 9 p.m.

When you catch him at the practice field club house, he's often strumming his guitar. He and fellow third-year linebacker Thomas Henderson recorded a soulful version of "Ain't Too Proud to Beg" recently, to the delight of a Dallas radio man.

At one time, while attending Arizona State, Bob earned spending money by playing and singing in a supper club. His Elvis Presley renditions are always in great demand at dinner during summer training camp. And Bob's musical talents lend plenty to his church choir and to Sunday devotions on the road.

But once he steps into his Cowboy uniform on Sunday, the new man in the middle for Dallas is such a competitor that the adjectives fierce, intense or touch are trite when used to describe Breunig.

"He is without question the most intense, hardest-working, serious football player I have ever seen'" says Jerry Tubbs, the Cowboys linebacker coach and original Dallas MLB in the expansioob season 1960. "He comes to practice every day with blood in his eyes," says Henderson.

After racking up 63 tackles and 33 assists and recovering three fumbles last year, Breunig is enjoying himself more than ever this season as the axis of Doomsday II, the new moniker for Dallas' famed defensive tradition.

Asked about a square-off the seemingly mild-mannered Breunig had with St. Louis Cardinals middle linebacker Tim Kearney when the two tangled on a St. Louis field goal attempt in their first meeting of the season, Breunig shrugged and said: "He swung around at me after the play was over, so I decided we'd better talk about that. There was a lot of talking out there. I kept wanting to say 'Okay but let's just play football.'"

"Old 'Bru-god' was a little upset on that one," said close friend and fellow defender Randy White, who tried to play peachmaker between Breunig and Kearney but was rebuffed by Breunig. "Bob can take care of himself."

That he can. And he also adds so much to any church choir.

Karen Likes Roles

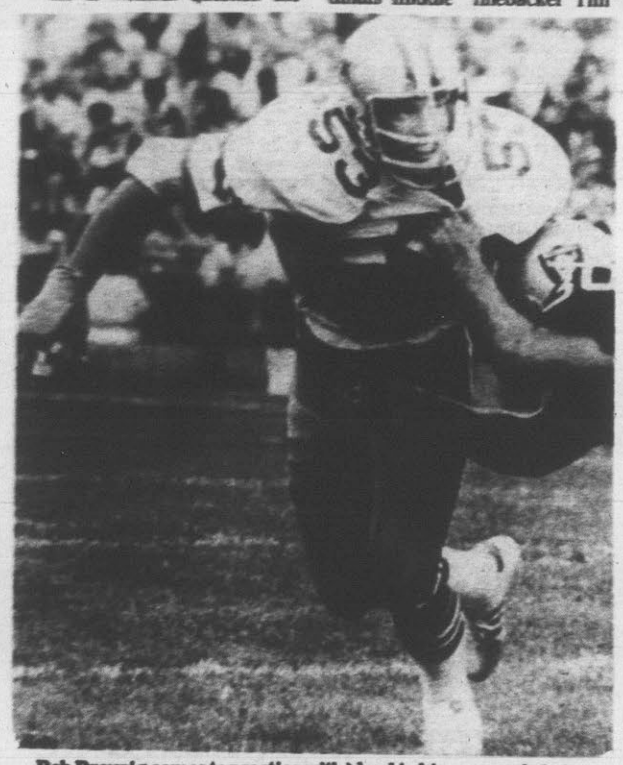

Karen Valentine shows her good nature when asked about what many performers regard as an unfortunately worded term—and out-of-character role.

"An actress," she sighs patiently, "likes to think she can play practically anything she's asked to do. But if you play a scatter-brained schoolteacher in a television series, people tend to think of you like that forever.

Talented Miss Valentine has an untypical role as an airline stewardness married to two men in the comedy "Coffee, Tea or Me,'" the "CBS Late Movie" airing Monday, Nov. 14, at 11:30 p.m. on CBS-TV.

"It's kind of a Women's Lib version of the sailor with a girl in every port," she said. "I play a girl who tenderhearted to a fault, with one husband in London and another in Los Angles."

That does seem removed from her Emmy-winning role as proper schoolteacher Alice Johnson in the series which aired a few uyears ago, "Room 222." But she welcomes a change such as this.

Bob Breunig comes to practice with blood in his eye, ready to try to take somebody's head off," says fellow linebacker Thomas Henderson. Only a man like Breunig could fill the shoes of 14 year veteran Lee Roy Jordan as the axis of the Dallas Doomsday Defense. The Dallas Cowboys will host the St. Louis Cardinals on Monday evening Nov. 14 at 9 p.m. on ABC-TV.

'Dain Curse' Airs As Mini-Series

Dashiell Hammett's "The Dain Curse," starring James Coburn as Hamilton Nash, a character who was a forerunner of the stylized literary private eye popularized in such Hammett classics as "The Maltese Falcon" and "The Thin Man," has started filming on Shelter Island, N.Y., for broadcast as a six-hour mini-series in the spring of 1978 on CBS-TV.

Also starring are Hector Elizondo, Jason Miller, Jean Simmons, Paul Stewart and Beatric Straight, and Nancy Addison will be intorduced as Gabrielle Leggett.

The compelling and complex tale of a young woman, whose fascination and obession with a deadly family curse draws the private eye into a whirlpool of mysterious killing, is set in 1928.

Hector Elizondo, gifted stage and television actor, had his own series, "Popi," and has appeared on "Kojak" and in "Wanted: Sundance Woman," a motion picture for television. He won an Obie Award for his performance of God in the off Broadway production of "Steambath." He also starred on Broadway in "The Prisoner of Second Avenue" and most recently in the smash comedy hit, "Sly Fox."

Jason Miller, as a playwright, won the Pulitzer Prize for "That Championship Season," and as an actor he appeared in the record-breaking film, "The Exorcist," and in such other films, as "The Devil's Advocate" and "The Nickel Ride."

Jean Simmons was twice-honored with Academy Award nominations for her performances in "Elmer Gantry" and "The Happy Ending." Her long list of distinguished film appearances include "Hamlet" with Laurence Olivier, "The Actress" with Spencer Tracy, "The Robe" with Richard Burton, "Spartacus" with Kirk Douglas, "Guys and Dolls" with Marlon Brando, and many other films.

Veteran character actor Paul Steward made his fil debut with Orson Welles in "Citizen Kane." Since then he has appeared in many films, including "The Window," "Twelve O'Clock High," "The Bad and the Beautiful," "Kiss Me Deadly" and others.

Beatrice Straight won last year's Academy Award for Best Actress for her moving portrayal of a wronged wife in the successful "Network." She portrayed Mrs. Hacker, the housekeeper, on "Beacon Hill," and has appeared on many major dramatic television shows and in many specials.

Nancy Addison, an actress with extensive experience in regional theater and in off Broadway and other New York theater productions, is best known to TV viewers as Jullian Coleridge in the daytime drama "Ryan's Hope."

Valentino Film To Rebroadcast As 'Tuesday Movie Of The Week'

He was the most magnetic personality and the most talked about star of the silent movies, Men around the world sought to emulate him. Women simply swooned. His career lasted only six years and when he died he was $500,000 in debt. He was Rudolph Valentino.

The myth of Valentino is explored in "The Legend of Valentino," the romantic drama which will be rebroadcast as the "Tuesday Movies of the Week" Nov. 15, at 11:30 p.m. on ABC-TV. However the film's director, Melville Shavelson, believes that we will never really know the man.

"There is just no way to separate the myth from the reality," Shavelson said. "In my research I found four or five different men, all called Rudolph Valentino. Some records showed him to be a loner, others said he was a great lover of night life. He was called a homosexual by some and by others he was thought to be Hollywood's most sought-after and successful lover. I found that the easiest way to write the script was to work from his image and not from reality. There is no reality to be found."

Shavelson and producers Aaron Spelling and Leonard Goldberg hired Franco Nero, a major star in Europe, to play the title role.

"I was not so concerned with finding an actor who looked like Valentino," Shavelson indicated, "but I insisted that he be Italian. Valentino never lost his Italian heritage and spoke with a thick accent up to the day he died. I felt that only an Italian could really do justice to the part.

"In many ways Franco Nero and Valentino are very much alike. Both came from small towns in Italy and struggled before they made it big."

Since Valentino was only 31, when he died, much has been written to what really killed him. The official report stated that he died of peritonitis resulting from perforated ulcers. Shavelson believes that it was the image that killed Valentino.

"There was no way that he could live up to his image, and he suffered because of it. People wanted him to be things that he couldn't be and he never found a woman with whom he could have a lasting relationship. We will probably never see anyone like him in our lifetime. He will continue to be a myth forever."He will continue to be a myth forever."

Changing Male Viewed

What makes a man—Once the answers were easy. American was a man's world, and the then men knew it. Today, however, traditional machismo roles and values are increasingly being questioned.

In the search for new answers PBS will broadcast the American premiere of "To Be A Man" Tuesday, Nov. 15, at 9 p.m. The special is a documentary film by Christian Blackwood about the changing roles and values of the American male.

Staring with a millioniare Arizona auto dealer named Tex Earnhardt, a proclaimed traditional man, the film explores how the old patterns of male behavior were established and passed from father to son.

Film clips will illustrate the way motion picture idols such as William S. Hart and John Wayen, classic cowboys heroes, both reflected and created the American male's self-image. The modern day extension of taht tradion of brute physical success, stripped of emotion, is observed in seven-year-old Danny Wagner's devotion to the martial art of Karate and in his father's influence.

If "to be a man" once meant putting women in their—place—whether in the kitchen, on a pedestal, or between the sheets; devoting one's life to work, and striving desperately for success in strictly financial terms, Blackwood's film gives ample evidence that these traditional notions of masculinity are changing.

Feminist Betty Freidan talks about the new demands that women are making on "real men," demands for sensitivity as well as strength. And, her view is powerfully dramatized by the candid searching of Bob and Shirley Campbell, a recently-divorced New Jersey couple trying to cope with the factors that came between them.

Psychologist Dan Sullivan explores the emotions evoked by changing sex roles. He says that many men want out of the competitive "rat race," want lives with less pressure and more emotional satisfaction. Sullivan provides his own exmaple—a successful professional man woh now spends much of his time keeping house while his wife works.

Looking at the results of these alternate life styles, Professor Waybne Johnson of Temple University and writer Pete Hamill talk about the benefits this and other forms of men's liberation may have for domestic politics, foreign policy, and everyday life in the United States.

As the film closes, Bob Campbell sums up the male search for identity with: "I won't say what a man should be, but a man needs to take the time to find out."

Janet Leigh Stars

Janet Leigh stars as an aging dancer-movie queen who yearns for a return to the glamour and glitter of show business so intensely that she plans her husbands's demise in "Forgotten Lady," a segment of the Columbo" series to be rebroadcast as "The CBS Late Movie" Tuesday, Nov. 15, at 11:30 p.m. on CBS-TV.

The guest list also includes John Payne, Maurice Evans and Sam Jaffe.

Still beautiful but aging, Grace Wheeler Willis (Leigh), forced into retirement from a successful career, makes up her mind to return to the stage in a Broadway musical. But her wealthy retired physician- husband, Henry (Jaffe), refuses to finance the project. Because she has already convinced her former dance partner, Ned Diamond Payne), to be the producer and has her heart set on performing again, Grace fakes Genry's 'suicide.' Lt. Columbo steps in to investigate the mysterious death.

TUESDAY WELD TO STAR

Tuesday Weld will star in "A Question of Guilt," a two-hour special program for CBS-TV.

Wedding Scenes Depict Contrast

Among the more than 120 locations used for filming "The Godfather," now airing as an NBC Big Event, two diverse sites — one on New York's Staten Island, the other in a small Sicilian village — were used as the backgrounds for the film's memorable wedding sequences.

For the drama's scenes depicting the lavish wedding of Connie Corleone (Talia Shire) to Carol Rizzi (Gianni Russo), a quite side street in a residential area of Staten Island was further isolated by an eight-foot-high simulated stone wall which blocked the area from view. It was on the sprawling lawn, behind the stone wall, that the festivities were filmed.

Preparations for the wedding were actually begun when rights were first acquired to Mario Puzo's best-selling novel. The location, band, menu and decorations were selected even before the bride and groom were cast.

The lawn was decorated for the occasion with Chinese lanterns and a network of colored lights on a frame of floral patterns and scrolls resembling those used in Italian street fairs such as the Feast of San Gennaro in New York.

For the wedding feast, a 20-foot-long buffet table was set with yard-wide trays of lasagna; pizza grandi; capuzelli; thousands of cookies; a six-foot high, four-tiered wedding cake; 2,000 barrels of beer; 1,000 bottles of wine, and more than a ton of fruit and pasta.

By contrast, in the Sicilian wedding sequence, an exiled Michael Corleone (Al Pacino) weds beautiful peasant girl Appolonia (Simonetta Stefanelli) in a traditional ceremony distinguished by its stark simplicity.

Nearly as important as the wedding itself was the long, rutualistic courtship preceding the marriage in which Michael first acquaints himself with his future bride's parents, marking his strictly chaperoned visits to their home with gifts for the entire family.

Here, in the final wedding rites, the guests, seated on wooden chairs in a large circle, were individually offered spoonfuls of wedding cake by the new bride who then danced the traditional first dance with her father in the center of the circle.

Family portrait is taken at the wedding of Don Corleone's daughter in a scene from "Mario Puzo' 'The Godfather': The Complete Novel for Television" airing on "The Big Event" currently being televised in four parts on NBC-TV.

BRETT, THE NOVELIST

Brett Halsey, an actor featured in 60 motion pictures and currently starring in "General Hospital," is about to publish his first novel, "Magnificent Strangers," a fictionalized account of his life in Italy's movie colony in the 1960s. The writing bug seems to have taken a big bite because Brett is now hard at work on his second novel, on a subject with which he is equally knowledgeable — daytime TV dramas. Tentatively titled "Yesterday's Children" and due for publication in 1979, the book will maintain the same style' serious fiction incorporating real-life experiences.

"Soap writing is the most difficult writing I know of," says Brett. "I can't type fast enough to keep up with the volume.

CONRAD IN "NIGHT CRIES"

Poseidon Adventure' Encores On Sunday

"The Poseidon Adventure," one of the top rated movies in television history, will have an encore showing as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," Nov. 13, 9 to 11:25 p.m., on ABC-TV.

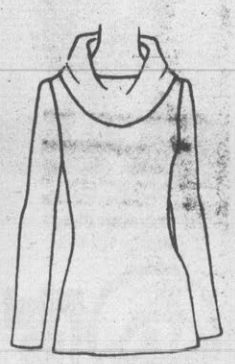

The movie, which won two Academy Awards, stars Gene Hackman, Ernest Borgnine, Red Buttons, Carol Lynley, Roddy McDowall, Stella Stevens and Shelley Winters. Jack Albertson, Pamela Sue Martin, Arthur O'Connell, Eric Shea and Leslie Nielsen as the Captain are co-starred.

The sensational special effects in the film, which won an Oscar, also received wide critical admiration: Vincent Canby in the New York Times found the picture "innocent, earnest entertainment," and added, "I also have affection for the kind of special effects that are so beautifully executed in 'The Poseidon Adventure' and make the film so much fun." The New York Daily News critic welcomed the overall results as "a harrowing, suspenseful sea drama" with "many tense moments."

Critic Judith Crist, said, "the sight of an ocean liner toppling over in a tidal wave with a ballroom full of New Year's Eve celebrants" was, in a word, "Wow."

The once-great ocean liner, S.S. Poseidon is making her last voyage when a 90-foot wave, caused by a seaquake, capsizes the ship. When the chaos subsides, and the liner is floating upside down in the water (something which once actually happened to an ore ship), an outspoken preacher (Hackman) leads nine of the survivors on a hazardous journey up through the bowels of the ship, hoping to find a way to escape the rising water and locate an exit from the hull of the ship.

O'Connor Discusses His Desire To Write

The results can be impressive either way.

"I never hankered to write this," Carroll O'Connor explained. "We thought the project would be a good idea. We needed a writer. I said I'd write the scenario and, if it looked good, do the screenplay. The situation just dictated that I write it."

That's how O'Connor (also known as Archie Bunker of "All in the Family") came to write "The Last Hurrah," which will open the 27th season of the "Hallmark Hall of Fame" Wednesday, Nov. 16, 8 to 10 p.m.., on NBC-TV.

Not only that, but O'Connor stars as the scheming, charming, charismatic mayor, Frank Skeffington, who is determined to stay in power and win a fourth term in office. The two-hour drama is based on the 1956 best-selling novel by the late Edwin O'Connor.

"I went back to the book," said O'Connor, "and found that it was a brilliant novel about conversation. It is all talk and very little action. I also saw the weakness of the original motion picture based on the novel."

O'Connor used the names of the characters, created several new ones, and rewrote the story, giving it action and dramatic structure.

He kicked the plot around with executive producer Terry Becker and director Vincent Sherman.

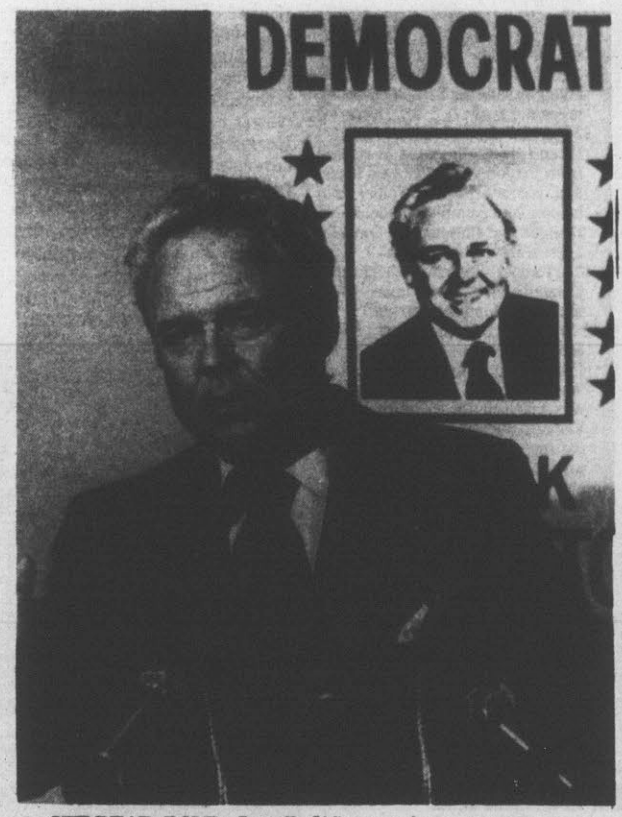

"They had many suggestions that I took and incorporated," he said.

O'Connor is no stranger to writing. He was the author of a three-act comedy, "Ladies of Hanover Tower," wrote a TV special, "Three for the Girls," co-created the "Bronk" TV series, and has an unproduced screenplay still on the back-burner.

"I always wanted to be a writer," he said. "As a kid I wanted to be a newspaperman. But I'm one of those guys who could never get anything done unless asked to write to order."

O'Connor'"Last Hurrah" differs in one other significant way from the novel.

"I changed the author's intention," said O'Connor. "He was telling us that the old style of ward politics, of personal politics, of personal politics, was dying out. I made my version say that it never really dies but will go on as long as men go on. I don't think that politics can ever be impersonal."

OFF-BEAT ROLE—Carroll O'Connor, know to millions as Archie Bunker of "All in the Family," will star in "The Last Hurrah," which he also wrote, airing on "The Hallmark Hall of Fame," Wednesday, Nov. 16 (8-10 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Compelling Drama Premieres On PBS

"The Arcata Promise," a tragic drama by acclaimed British author David Mercer, will air on "Great Performances" Wednesday, Nov. 16, at 9 p.m. on PBS. Anthony Hopkins, Kate Nelligan and John Fraser are the players in what has been called "A powerful and harrowing essay into self-destruction."

"The Arcata Promise," like much of Mercer's work, is an honest portrayal of people at the breaking point, inviting tragedy by their unavoidable human weaknesses. In the small American town of Arcata, Theo Gunge (Hopkins), a rich, arrogant and successful actor, makes a promise to Laura (Nelligan), a beautiful and vulnerable young girl. He promises that "he will love her, look after her, never hurt or oppress her in any way."

But he breaks the promise, and abuses Laura for her frailty, until she can take no more punishment. She leaves the actor, who is now embarked upon a downhill course, his grip upon reality loosened by drink and his own self-destructive urges, only to meet him once again at "The Arcata Promise's" shattering conclusion.

Mercer told England's "Stage and TV Today," he had made the play by "thrashing about in life's terrible troubles." The publication went on to praise 'Arcata' as "a brave play, an exploration of the hurt and secret places of the mind, the inability to communicate which can only lead to disintegration and untimately to annihilation.

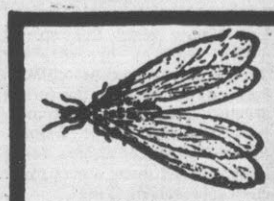

Mercer has been acclaimed as "a triple threat man who writes for all the media — film, TV and stage." He recently wrote the script for Alan Resnais' film "Providence," and has had his dramas televised in England since 1961. The stage presentations of such works as the surrealistic "Belcher's Luck" make Mercer a sough-after figure by theater-goers.

Charles Bronson Stars In Western

The Old West is the setting for a sophisticated comedy about how legends are born, in "From Noon Till Three," starring Charles Bronson and Jill Ireland, which has its world television premiere on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movies," Nov. 16, 9 to 11 p.m. on CBS-TV.

The story begins with the arrival of Graham Dorsey's (Bronson) gang at a majestic house just outside a small town whose bank they intend to rob later that day. Determined to requisition a new horse to replace his lame one from the young widow, Amanda Starbuck (Ireland) who lives there, Dorsey — who dreamt that the bank job would result in a massacre — contrives to remain behind. Amanda, quelled at gunpoint, is none too happy about the intruder, but as the hours tick away from noon until 3 p.m. (when the gang is due back to pick up Dorsey), Dorsey's well-honed ability to play upon female loneliness and passion melts her resistance.

THRILLED TO THE CORE

Neil Diamond Finds Himself

Andy Warhol once remarked that "in the future everyone will be a superstar for fifteen minutes." These words of wisdom must have been something that Neil Diamond thought about during his more than three years sabbatical from the concert stage. As a musician who had achieved phenomenol success through numerous record albums and concert tours, Diamond came to grips with the problems of super stardom — he decided to leave the scene for awhile to take stock of himself. "One of the reasons I quit in 1972 was that I felt it was important for me to get a concept of who I was again. You can get so lost in what the public thinks you are. I just wanted to withdraw and find out who Neil Diamond was," says the star of "I'm Glad You're Here With Me Tonight."

The all-new special, which features Diamond performing some of his bestloved songs, will air Thursday, Nov. 17, 10 to 11 p.m., on NBC-Tv.

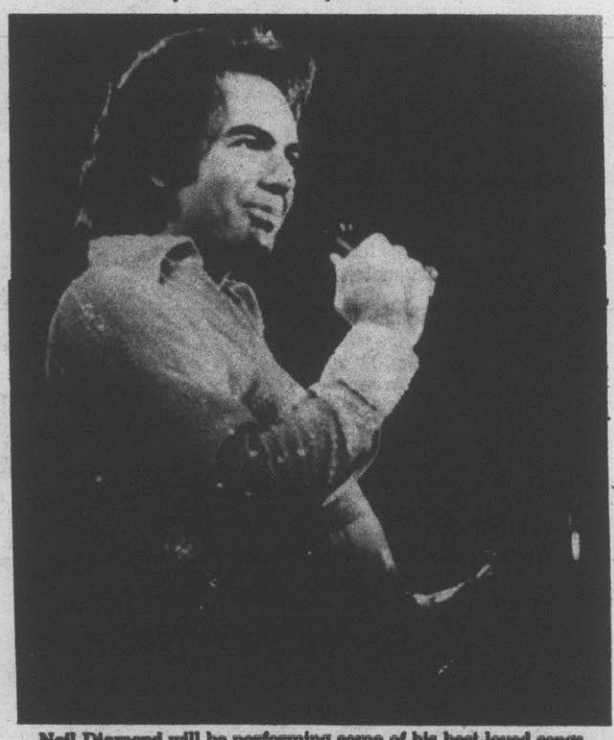

One thing Diamond knew he wasn't was a fifteen minute star. He knew that longevity in his career was a major goal, and he reflected on the best way to achieve that goal. "In order to make a career last in this business you've got to eliminate as much interference as possible. That's why I don't want to do a television variety series or a bunch of specials. You become public property. That's one thing I learned from Elvis. Nothing is worth that. Either you control your goals or they control you. I think I've gained control now."

Born in New York City 35 years ago, Neil Diamond received a second-hand guitar as a birthday present when barely into his teens. He began taking lessons, and soon he wrote a very waking moment, establishing a pattern of a few hours of sleep during the early hours and then writing throughout the night.

While a pre-med major on a fencing scholarship at New York University he wrote with a vengeance. "I knew that I was a songwriter and that I would always be a songwriter."

Within a half-year of graduation, Neil was signed to a writing contract by a publishing company. "The minute the writing offer was made, I jumped at it without a moment's hesitation, even though the salary was only $50 a week. I quit college — thrilled. Someone was actually paying me to write music."

Many famous performers have recorded Neil's work, but most people consider a Neil Diamond song inseparable from a Neil Diamond performance. It's these songs, performed by their composer, that will highlight the special on NBC.

Neil Diamond will be performing some of his best-loved songs when he stars in his own special "I'm Glad You're Here With Me Tonight," Thursday, Nov. 17 (10-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Pike's Peeks

By Charlie Pike
TV Showtime Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD — Former teen idol David Cassidy, who's been out of the public's eye for the last two years, is now filming a "Police Story" special, "Narc." This is David's first time in front of the cameras since "Partridge Family" completed production three years ago.

Word's going around that there's a pilot in the works for Suzi Quatro, who did such a fantastic job playing Leather Tuscadero in "Happy Days."

Totie Fields is reported to be in "supper" condition following her recent mastectomy. In '76, the actress' left leg was amputated, and last May she had undergone eye surgery due to a disabetic condition.

There'll be another "Father Knows Best Reunion" — this time around it's to be a Christmas reunion that will air on NBC as a "Big Event."

Are Cher and Gregg Allman heading for a European tour together? That's what people in the record business are saying.

Everybody's talking about the fantastic job Tanya Welk's doing in a L.A. nitery. "I've waited 10 years to leave the Welk show and get into show business," she quipped opening night.

Miss Teenage America 1977, Becky Reid, has been on the road (and in the air) some 300 out of 365 days of the year, logging over 100,000 miles. But Becky actually had it 'easy' compared to some winners since her hometown is Dallas, where the pageant's headquarters are. Her predecessor, Cathy Durden who's from Hawaii, traveled at least twice Becky's distance.

Heather Menzies ("Logan's Run") and husband Bob Urich ("Soap") have found a way of getting rid of tensions after a long day before the cameras. "Whichever of us is the last to come in gets a full 15 minutes of silence from the other," explains Heather. "That's 15 minutes in which to unwind without even having to say hello. It saves a lot of fights."

When "Miss Lillian" Carter was interviewed for the premiere segment of Hugh Downs' "Over Easy," she said, "I'm what they call controversial, and controversial to me means saying what you feel is right and not caring about the consequences."

Looks At Motherhood

"The Waltons" series has propelled Judy Norton-Taylor's life into a pace faster than she is ready to undertake, or in this case, wants too.

Judy, as Mary Ellen, recently gave birth to a baby on the series and, looking back to the time prior to the baby's 'birth,' she said: "It was really crazy. Everyone in the cast was running around saying, 'I'm going to be an uncle,' or 'I'm going to be an aunt,' or 'a grandparent.' Before long, I'm going to start believing it."

Judy is married to Douglas Taylor, an entertainer and when asked if she thought her real life will mock her stage life, she quickly replied, "No way. At least not for a while. I had fun being pregnant on 'The Waltons,' and I'm having fun being a mother, but Doug and I are not ready for children yet."

Unlike most women, the actress did get a chance to experience some of the pleasures and discomforts of motherhood before she passed judgment. Visitors wandering on "The Waltons" set offered ostensibly pregnant Judy their seats, while the crew jokingly told her, "If there's a fire on stage, we'll be sure to get you out first."

Dean Is Surrounded By Bevy Of Beauties

Dean Martin stars with a bevy of international beauties, among them Elke Sommer, Nancy Kwan and Tina Louise, in "The Wrecking Crew," to be rebroadcast as "The CBS Late Movie" Thursday, Nov. 17, at 11:30 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Martin plays Matt Helm — super-slueth, man of adventure — who's called into the international case when a billion dollars in gold intended to bolster the British economy is hijacked in Demark by a crime ring headed by County Contini. Although the Count's former friend Lola offers to help Matt, she is killed by a bomb-rigged bottle before she can talk. Also eager to assit Matt is Frya. On the other side are the Count's charming, seductive ladies, Linka and Yu-Rang. The girls are the lures into dangerous and deadly traps for the special agent, who counters with split-second responses and magically quick getaway.

'The Three Musketeers:' Film Is Rollicking Adventure Story

Charlton Heston and Richard Chamberlain head an all-star cast in the special movie presentation of "The Three Musketeers," airing on Friday, Nov. 18 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

With rousing comedy as its mainstay and an all-star cast bringing Alexander Dumas' classic characters to vibrant life. "The Three Musketeers," airing Friday, 9 to 11 p.m. on CBS-TV, is one of those ever-dwindling rarities—a film capable of entertaining people of all ages.

Starring are Oliver Reed, Raquel Welch, Richard Chamberlain, Michael York Faye Dunaway and Charlton Heston. Also featured in the cast are Frank Finlay, Geraldine Chaplin, Christopher Lee, Simon Ward, Jean Pierre Cassel and Spike Milligan.

In keeping with the film's offbeat slant, the fabled musketeers are hardly the conventional, dashing and chivalrous "one-for-allers" most folks remember. With each of them a model of zesty bravado, Reed is the stocky, rough-hewn Athos; Chamberlain, the well-groomed Aramis; and Finlay, the dandified Porthos. As it turns out, their fidelity to the Queen (Chaplin) seems prompted mainly by the chance to live well and raise hell. Off duty, they're not above such activities as instigating saloon brawl in order to steal a lavish meal.

The dominant action begins when young D'Artagnan (York) ventures to Paris to join the loyal legion, unwittingly insults each of the musketeers in turn, but quickly becomes a trusted partner when they are mutally set upon by the Cardinal's guard. It isn't long before they pool their talents to aid the young queen in keeping proof of her infidelity to effete King Louis XIII (Jean Pierre Cassel) from the slimy hands of the power-hungry Cardinal Richelieu (Heston). Needless to say, their mission to retrieve the diamond necklace she had given her British lover (Simon Ward) comes off with fairy-tale perfection.

The villians in the film are truly the kind you love to hate.

Leapin' Parrish Stirs Excitement

With blazing speed and moves that would make a disco dancer jealous, Leapin' Lemar Parrish burst onto the National Football League scene eight years ago. He went to the Cincinnati Bengals and has been a starter with them ever since.

The Bengals, with their potent offense and solid defense, will face the rugged and experienced Minnesota Vikings Sunday, Nov. 13, at 4 p.m. on NBC-TV.

An exciting player with a speed of 4.5 for the 40, Parrish combines speed and agility so well that he is rated one of the top cornerbacks in the NFL. In addition, he is a top kickoff and punt-return specialist.

At 5-11, 185 lbs., Parrish admits "I would like to play offense, but I know I'm too small."

His size, however, has not diminished his championship qualities one whit. He's been named to several All-Pro teams and was a member of the AFC Pro Bowl squad for his third consecutive year.

Paul Brown, Vice President and General Manager of the Bengals, has said that Parrish was "one of the best prospects for his position I'd seen in my career."

At the start of this season, Lemar had 21 interceptions during his career. He had three kickoff returns for 62 yards and 20 punt returns for 122 yards last year.

Osmonds

Donny and Marie Osmond greet Cindy Williams of "Laverne and Shirley," Paul Lynde, Jay Osmond, Bruce Kimmel and the Ice Angles as their guests in a fun-filled hour, which includes their recreation of the Hatfield—McCoy feud, on "Donny and Marie," airing Friday, Nov. 18, 8 to 9 p.m. on ABC-TV.

In the music-filled Hatfield-McCoy segment, the two hosts and their entire cast play in McCoys, who in this version—are much to happy to fuss about the Hatfields, who are always shooting at them from offstage.

Other highlights include Paul Lynde playing the new social director of a very tough pirate ship, and Jay Osmond singing You Make Me Feel Like Dancing."

Lightning Rod Strikes Blow

Ohio State quarterback, Rod Gerald has a quick, darting style that makes him a breakaway threat all the time. Gerald and his teammates will have to be at their best when they meet the University of Michigan on Saturday, Nov. 19 at 1 p.m. on ABC-TV.

While the Ohio State defense is a tough veteran unit that set a school record against Southern Methodist earlier this season with seven interceptions, it is their offense that strikes the lethal blow.

This week, Ohio's lethal blow will be aimed at Michigan when the teams meet Saturday (Nov. 19). The action will be televised by ABC beginning at 1 p.m.

Ron Springs (6-2, 197 lbs.), junior from Williamsburg, Va., has been the workhouse for the Buckeye ground attack averaging better than 5 yards per carry. He has been joined by two fullbacks—Paul Campbell, sophomore and Joel Payton, a freshman. Payton has scored eight touchdowns in his first five games.

"Joel is really coming," noted coach Woody Hayes. "He has the size (6-2, 210 lbs.) we are looking for on short-yardage plays and he learns very quickly."

Of course, if quarterback Rod Gerald should ever tire of playing football, he can always pursue a career as a magician. Indeed, players who have played against the elusive Ohio State Quarterback must feel that Gerald is already part magic. How else can he moved with such incredible quickness, seemingly disappearing right before a would-be talker's eyes?

OSU quarterback coach George Chaump won't call it magic, but he readily agrees that Gerald's lightning-like quickness is something special.

"I wouldn't trade him for any quarterback in the country in terms of quickness," declares Chaump of his prize junior. "That kind of quickness just doesn't come along very often."

But quickness isn't Gerald's only attribute.

"He is fast on his way to becoming a complete quarterback," assesses Chaump. "Last year was his first as a starter and his inexperience was obvious much of the time. But he is a year older and wiser now, and it shows in everything that he does. He is improved in all areas."

Hayes says, "Rod's becoming one of the best quarterbacks every to play at Ohio State. He has always been an effective runner, and now is showing that he can pass."

By the fourth game of this season he had already eclipsed his last season's completion mark. Now that Gerald is doing it as well, Ohio fans still have a lot to look forward to. Most importantly, they also have next season's 'Lightning Rod Strikes' in their future.

MOORED SETTING FOR SEA ADVENTURE

Irwin Allen, producer of "The Poseidon Adventure," has never been known to cut corners on building sets for his lavish productions, but even with the most open-handed of backers he could never have constructed the setting used for most of the scenes that were filmed before the great liner turns upside down.

Those shots were made aboard the Queen Mary, the 81,000-ton luxury liner now permanently moored at Long Beach, Calif., and the city of Long Beach and other investors poured a reported $100 million into her rehabilitation.

Buffalo's 'Juice' Is Sidelined For Remainder Of The Season

On Sunday, Nov. 13, the Buffalo Bills will host the Baltimore Colts. NBC will televise the game beginning at 1 p.m.

For nine seasons, football fans across the country knew that when Buffalo was on the tube — win, lose or draw — the magic of J.J. Simpson insured excitement. Simpson has simply been the finest running back of his time. The controversy surrounding him is concerned with the premise of whether or not he is the greatest of all-time. There is no runner in his class in the pro game today.

Yet, when the Bills and Colts meet on your TV Sunday, you will instantly notice something missing. That something is the magic of O.J.

Simpson's spectacular career may be over. He underwent surgery for the removal of the cartilage in his left knee and will be out for the remainder of the season. Simpson had said he would retire from football after the '78 season.

As to whether O.J. will play again, he said: "That's a subject I can't deal with right now; I have another year on my contract with the Bills. Once the operation is over and rehabilitation is complete, I'll begin to think about the future. But not before this."

Simpson, who holds the league's single-season rushing record with 2,003 yards gained in 1973, has been bothered by nagging injuries this season. A blurred vision problem in his left eye during training camp was diagnosed at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore as a self-healing condition.

He suffered a right ankle injury in the Bill's season-opening loss to Miami. As is par for the course, when a player is plaqued with nagging injuries, you can be sure a serious injury is close at hand.

Even though O.J. proved more durable than most running backs en route to becoming only the second man ever to eclipse 10,000 yards with 10,183 yards in his nine seasons, his loss ot the game of football will not be any easier for us, the viewers.

Buffalo Guards Joe DeLamielleure (68) and Reggie McKenzie (67) guard their main man, O.J. Simpson, even on the bench. The Buffalo Bills will host the Baltimore Colts on Sunday, Nov. 13 at 1 p.m. on NBC-TV. Unfortunately, O.J. will not be in action due to knee surgery and his magic will surely be missed.

Joe Theisman Is A True Competitor

When the Washington Redskins' fans start yelling "We want Joe," they're referring to Joe Theismann. A sprint-out type quarterback, Theismann resembles his counterpart Billy Kilmer in that he is a true competitor.

The staid and resilient Washington Redskins will battle the Philadelphia Eagles Sunday, Nov. 13, at 1 p.m. on CBS-TV.

In his first two seasons with the Redskins, Theismann played sparingly at the quarterback position. Yet, in the truest form of sportsmanship, he did what ever was asked of him. He is a holder for field goals and has often provided excitement with his fake field goal passes and runs.

The 6-0, 190 lbs. Theismann was an All-American at Notre Dame where he set numerous passing records for the Irish. He still holds the record for the best passing mark in a season. He led Notre Dame to the Cotton Bowl twice, losing to Texas in 1970 and beating the Longhorns in '71. He was also runner-up in the Heisman Trophy balloting to Jim Plunkett.

In this season's first meeting with the Eagles, Theismann replaced Kilmer at the quarterback spot and led the 'Skins' to a needed victory. The question is . . . can Joe do it again?

Saturday Is Big Day For Football

Saturday, Nov. 19, is a big day in the world of college football. In addtion to being the earliest day the official bowl invitations can go out, it is the day the Big Ten Championship will be determined.

The Big Ten is becoming known as the Big Two — Little Eight. On this particular Saturday (ABC will televise the action, beginning at 1 p.m.) the Big Two — Ohio State and Michigan — will meet in 'The Big Ten Bowl' at Ann Arbor, Michigan for the title and the trip to the Rose Bowl. This marks the eighth time in nine years these two titans have squared-off for all the marbles in the Big Ten.

The Wolverines ripped the Buckeyes 22-0 last Nov. (the first time since 1964 Ohio State had been shut-out), but the traditional rivals shared the conference crown for the fifth time in the last eight seasons.

While Bo Schembechler is 76-11-3 in his eight years at Michigan, he still trails his former coach and boss, Woody Hayes, by 3-4-1 in their private duel and 1-2 in outright Big Ten titles. In his 26 years at Ohio State, Hayes is 189-54-9, and 72-13-1 over the last eight seasons.

The two grand masters of power football, while winning or sharing every Big Ten grid title since 1968, have also reaped the recruiting awards, and the 20 extra practice sessions every holiday season. Don't think those 20 practices don't make a difference in future preparations, too.

Michigan and Ohio State have the best of both worlds — extra practice and the recruiting magnet ofg post-season play.

Where will it all end — especially for the Little Eight in the Big Ten? Alex Agase, former Purdue coach and now athletic director at Eastern Michigan, may have put it into perspective in a mid-winter speech when he said: "The way things are going in the Big Ten these days, the ONLY way anybody is ever going to beat Ohio State and Michigan out of a title is to cheat."

He may be right. Ohio State finished 5th nationally with a 9-21 record and returned 8 starters on offense and 8 starters on defense. Michgian, third nationally with a 10-2 mark, returned 9 starters on offense including the entire line and six on defense. Both schools, as usual, packed away the blue chippers in the spring recruiting wars.

Everybody talks about 'Big Time' college football, and when these two teams take the field at Michigan Stadium, fans will truly see 'Big Time' college football at its best.

Ali Gives Advice

World Heavyweight Boxing Champion Muhammad Ali not only supplies the voice of the lead character in the NBC-TV animated children's series, "I Am the Greatest: The Adventures of Muhammad Ali" Saturdays, 10:30 to 11 a.m.), he also appears at the close of each show and offers personal advice.

Following is Ali's message from a recent show:

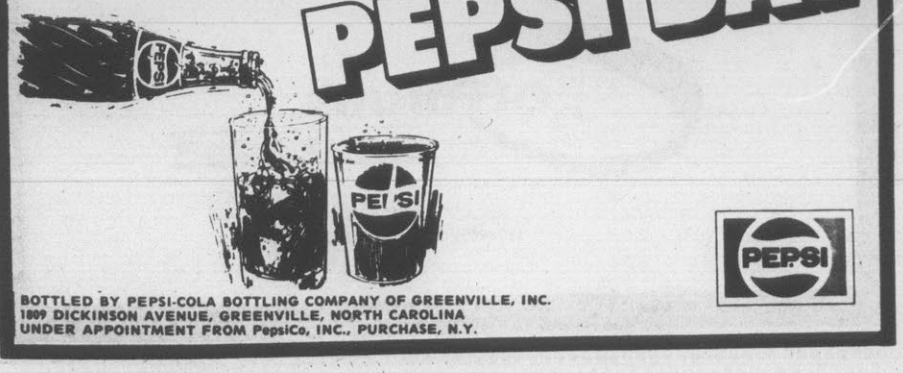

"You know me, I'm Muhammad Ali,, the heavyweight champion of the world. . .that's right—the whole world. But if I'm violent and do my fighting, I do it inside the boxing ring, not in the streets, not at home. I'm rated now as the greatest fighter of all times. As good as I am, I can beat every man in the worl d and still when I have problems."

Film Stars Frank

Two-time Academy Award winner Frank Sinatra, in his first movie for television, stars as a New York City police inspector who sets out to nail the heads of the local underworld after years of watching them openly evade prosecution, in "Contract on Cherry Street," an NBC World Premiere drama to be colorcast on "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" Nov. 19, 8 to 11 p.m. Verna Bloom, Harry Guardino, Henry Silva and Martin Balsam also star.

Sinatra, who received a Best Supporting Actor Oscar for his performance in "From Here to Eternity" (1953) and a special Academy Award for "The House I Live In" (1945), portrays Inspector Frank Hovannes, a veteran officer nearing retirement.

Hovannes, who heads up the elite Office of Crime Control, has been under pressure from department brass for months, but is encountering difficulty building a case against the operators of a number of rackets, including fencing stolen atuo parts.

When his close friend and team partner, Lt. Ernie Weinberg (Balsam), is slain in a shoot-out, Hovannes can no longer contain his pent-up frustration. Casting aside any further desire to make arrests in the investigation, he and the members of his squad isolate key underworld leaders and, in a bold move, take the law into their own hands. When news of the mob slayings begin to reach the public, Hovannes successfully keeps his involvement in the plan from his wife, Emily (Bloom).

Oliver Clark Is Lighter And A Lot More Secure

Oliver Clark, who stars as Stuart Hibbard in the new comedy series, "We've Got Each Other," seen Saturdays, 8:30 to 9 p.m., on CBS-TV, is not a man to make up his mind in a hurry, but when he dowes, he sticks to it.

A perfect example is Clark's newly trimmed figure. At one point in his life, he ballooned up to 300 pounds, but when he decided that enough was enough he lost 110 pounds in five months.

Explaining how he had gotten so heavy, Clark said, "My family was Greek-Armenian and ran a restaurant in Buffalo, N.Y. It was the era of believing that a healthy child was a well-fed child. Believe me, I was well fed."

Another decision which was hard for Clark to make was being persistent about his acting career. After graduating from the University of Buffalo with a degree in English and drama, he tried his hand at producing an Off Broadway production, but in his words, "It was an immense bomb."

He returned to Buffalo for four years to teach English at the junior high school level, but wasn't happy. He then moved to Middleton, N.Y., which was closer to Broadway, but reamined as a teacher.

Deciding to give it another try he landed a part in "Arturo Ui," and his teaching days were over. After a series of stage and motion pictures roles, Clark became known to the viewing public for his regular roles as a patient in the therapy group on "The Bob Newhart Show."

"They originally wrote me 'fat jokes,' Clark explained, "until I begun to lose all that extra weight. When they couldn't write about my weight any more, I got the insecurity jokes."

Borgnine Had Near-Prelude To Movie

Ernest Borgnine, playing one of the desperate passengers trapped in the floating nightmare of a luxury liner turner upside down at sea in "The Poseidon Adventure," which will be rebroadcast as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie" Nov. 13, 9 to 11:25 p.m., on ABC-TV, had the proper dramatic training for the role — he once almost lived the experience.

Borgnine spent 10 years in the U.S. Navy (he was Ermes Efron Borgnino in those days) before he returned to civilain life to become an actor, and an event at sea brought him much closer to the reality of "Poseidon's" terrifying adventure than anyone would care to be:

"We were caught in a hurricane off the coast of Florida," he recalled during a break in the movie's production. "Our ship was an old barkentine converted to naval service and she was under-powered. The waves were coming from every direction anyway, and finally one caught us on the beam and we heeled over 54 degrees — enough so that our crow's nest was thrust underwater.

"It seemed as though we stayed on our side forever and then, because the ship has been a sailing vessel and still had her keel, she started to right slowly and then another big wave piled on the keel and brought us upright.

"Everything in the ship that could break was broken, but the Good Lord was looking after us and we made part without losing a man."

Sensational new world of sight and sound!

Computers influence new home products

By David Lachenbruch
Editorial Director,
Television Digest with Consumer Electronics;
Contributor to TV Guide

Computer-age technology moves into the home in the new consumer electronic products for 1978, now on display at local sight and sound dealers.

From the oldest consumer electronic products (radios and phonographs) to the newest (video cassette recorders), the close relationship to the computer is evident in the large number of automatic "electronic brain" circuits. For example—

Many color television sets now are virtually self-adjusting, requiring little or no knob-twiddling except for channel selection—and often this selection is done with a pushbutton, instead of a knob.

The increasingly popular video game attachment for TV sets now often contains a minicomputer (known as a microprocessor) which permits the viewer to change games at will by inserting new program cartridges including such complex games as blackjack and math quizzes, which were unheard-of in home video just a couple of years ago.

These same "intelligent" electronic circuits are transforming the popular citizens band—CB—radio into a far more versatile and safer personal communications tool.

For safety, many of the new models have pushbutton channel tuning built into the microphone so that the driver may select his channel without looking down at the dashboard.

Some of the most sophisticated CBs include a selective-calling feature, which lets the caller activate a specific receiver in the area—much like dialing a telephone.

The increasing use of tiny integrated circuits in radios has made possible more powerful and more sensitive sets with better tone quality in the same or smaller space as previous models, and without increased prices.

Among the most popular portable radios this year are those with built-in cassette recorders, making it possible to program recorded selections outside the home, listen to radio, or make recordings from the radio at any time.

The clock radio has gone completely electronic. Many versions now have no moving parts at all. The "clockwork" has been replaced by ultra-accurate integrated circuitry, and the time is told in glowing computer numerals.

Scanner radios continually monitor a number of preselected frequencies, such as police, public-service or aircraft, automatically stopping when an occupied channel is found, eliminating manual hunting and scanning across the dial.

Electronic wristwatches, using compact computer-bred time-telling circuits, are far more accurate than conventional dial-and-hand watches, and very often are less expensive as well.

This year, an increasing percentage use liquid-crystal displays which tell the time continuously with no buttons to push, and which cause far less battery drain than the standard glowing light-emitting diodes.

The influence of the computer is being felt in stereo, too. Many component hi-fi tuners feature digital readout, which means actual frequency numbers are displayed on the dial for exact tuning.

Some tuners even have "programmable" call letters so that the "names" of the stations appear on the dial, in addition to their numbers. Computer-inspired phonograph turntables can now electronically locate any individual selection on an LP.

Calculators are looking more and more like computers. While very low-cost and simple units are available for everyday household tasks, new versions aimed at serious scientific-minded students and others may actually be programmed like computers. In fact, they do many things which until recently were possible only with giant computers.

The very newest in consumer electronic products is the home video cassette recorder, which lets the viewer make his own videotapes in color from his TV set.

The first videotape recorder was marketed just 21 years ago. It cost $75,000, was the size of a baby elephant and was black-and-white only. Thanks to advanced computerized circuitry, mass production and miniaturization, the current home version fits atop a TV set and is available at a cost well within the reach of many consumers.

THE NEW SENSATIONS in Sight and Sound? They're more exciting than ever before! Color television's independently self-adjusting for optimum viewing pleasure. Audiophiles can tune in to finer quality in a wide variety of systems, all with new precision developments. CB is still the rage, moving from highways into the home and the hands of people everywhere. Videogames have broadened in scope, so that now there's a puzzle or picture challenge to suit everyone's abilities and interests. Energy total of new color TV no greater than 100-watt bulb

With a goal of only two cents a day for operating costs, RCA has begun converting all of its color television receiver models to new low levels of energy consumption that will result in TV sets operating on the same energy level as that of a 100-watt light bulb, or less.

Expanding the use of a new chassis design, RCA said the sets will operate at half the power requirements, on average, of the 1972 base year when the average RCA color TV receiver consumed some 200 watts of power.

The new "XtendedLife" chassis, with its four micro-integrated circuits, makes it possible to reduce energy consumption to that of a 100-watt light bulb, or lower in many cases.

The earlier RCA tube-type receivers used at least 375 watts. Estimates by the Edison Electric Institute place the electricity requirement of today's average solid state color TV receiver at 145 watts.

Roy H. Pollack, Vice President and General Manager of RCA's Consumer Electronics Division, said "complete conversion to the new chassis design will be accomplished by mid-1978."

RCA, which pioneered the television industry in 1947, is believed to be the first domestic manufacturer to accomplish such a drastic energy-reducing model changeover.

Improved design and production efficiencies have permitted an optional retail sales price that is essentially the same as previous models, Mr. Pollack said. At the same time, the "XtendedLife" sets will operate at lower temperatures which, combined with other design features, will increase the sets' life expectancy.

"Nearly four years ago, when it became clear that the nation's energy crisis was permanent and not transitory in nature, we made the decision to develop the most energy-efficient television receivers possible," Mr. Pollack said.

The first step in RCA's energy savings program took place in May, 1974 when RCA became the first manufacturer to introduce a full line of solid state receivers, eliminating all power-draining tubes in the chassis.

The following year, RCA switched its black-and-white line to all solid state operation and eliminated the energy-drawing "instant-on" feature in all color and black-and-white models.

Earlier this year, the company took its most significant energy reducing step with the introduction of the "XtendedLife" chassis in a series of 19-inch (diagonal) models.

RCA's new "XtendedLife" chassis consumes only 89 watts in both the XL-100 19-inch (diagonal) and 25-inch (diagonal) screen sizes, while in the deluxe "ColorTrak" 25-inch (diagonal) receiver it uses 102 watts.

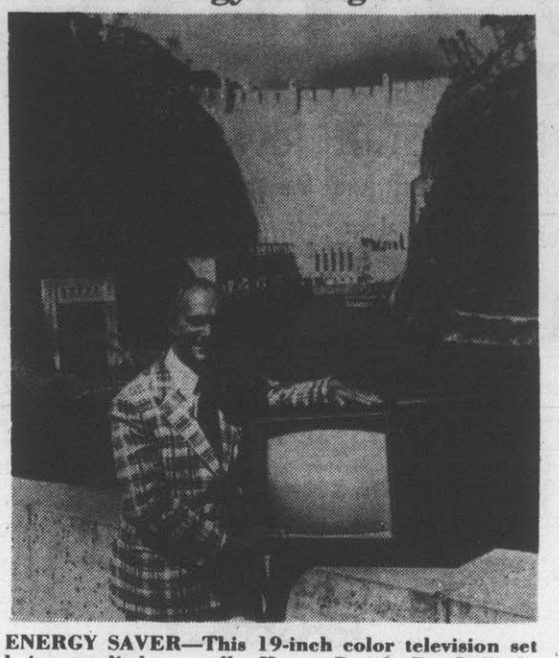

Mr. Pollack noted that significant reductions also have been made in the company's black-and-white line, with average energy consumption now rated at 45 watts, compared with 120 watts of energy in the 1972 period.

Edison Electric Institute estimates the national average cost of electricity at 3.5 cents per kilowatt-hour. Average family television viewing totals 6.3 hours per day, according to the latest Nielsen study.

On an operating basis, the consumer would pay approximately two cents a day to operate the new "XtendedLife" color TV receivers, compared with four cents for past solid state sets and eight cents for the earlier tube-type receivers.

Over a year's time, the average RCA "XtendedLife" color receiver will cost $7.70 to operate, compared to $28.88 for past tube-type RCA sets.

Energy-saving sets

ENERGY SAVER—This 19-inch color television set being steadied on a wall at Hoover Dam by Roy Pollack, Vice President and General Manager of RCA Consumer Electronics, uses only 89 watts to operate. Hoover Dam, which has a capacity of 1,344,800 kilowatts, can power 15 million such TV sets an hour. RCA reports it is first in the industry to offer a complete line of extended life sets that also save energy.

Like charity, energy saving begins at home

No matter what the weather is outside, energy saving is a hot or cool topic these days and chances are people will have to begin altering their lifestyles drastically to live with the energy program.

Most people are aware of recommended thermostat settings of 65 degrees in winter and 76 in summer, but there are a number of small ways to reduce energy usage around the house.

Statistics show, for example, that a dishwasher uses an average wattage of 1,201, an electric oven requires 12,200 watts and a clothes dryer averages 4,856 watts.

On the other hand, a new solid state color TV uses 89 watts, a sewing machine 75 and a clock 2.

What can you do to cut down on energy consumption at home? Here are a few tips:

- Turn off lights, television and other appliances when not in use.
- Select the bulb that produces the most light by checking on the number of lumens (the unit that measures light).
- If you're in the market for a new color TV, look for one that saves energy. One television manufacturer, RCA, now offers a new chassis design that offers extended life and energy consumption of approximately a 100-watt light bulb or less.

Since the average American family spends 6½ hours watching television, this can represent new low operating costs of approximately two cents a day.

- When washing or drying clothes, be sure to do full loads and don't dry excessively.
- Fold laundry as soon as you take it from the dryer, to cut down on wrinkles and ironing.

Since kitchen appliances get constant and repeated use, here's another good place to cut down.

- When using your oven, pre-heat only when necessary and turn off the heat about 10 minutes before cooking time is up. The accumulated heat should be enough to finish the job.
- Using a dishwasher can save energy because it requires less hot water than washing by hand, but wash only when there's a full load. Then let dishes air-dry to save on electricity.
- Make ample use of outdoor cooking. Charcoal grilling adds flavor and makes use of a less scarce fuel.
- When boiling water or simmering vegetables, remember to cover the pot to seal in heat and think about using a pressure cooker more often. Most foods can be cooked in this way in about 15 minutes, so besides saving energy, you'll be saving time.
- Teach the kids to kick the habit of opening and closing the refrigerator or freezer door at whim, and practice what you preach! And while you're at it, be sure to check the insulation on your refrigerator door to see if cold air is escaping.

Now that people are finally taking the energy shortage seriously, it's time for action instead of words. As with charity, conservation begins at home.

You're the boss in the new home TV era!

By Cathy Ciccolella
Executive Editor
Dealerscope Magazine

The final episode of that serial you've been following for weeks is on television tonight . . . but it's on at the same time as the big sports event you've waited for all season.

The entertainer you like best is the featured guest on tonight's late-night talk show . . . but you have to get up early in the morning for an important meeting.

Why miss out?

It's time for the once-a-year TV showing of your very favorite movie . . . but you made other plans for the evening over a month ago.

Until very recently, these common TV viewing situations would have called for some tough decisions.

If you decided to watch how your serial turned out, you'd have to read about the sports event in the next day's newspaper or catch highlights on the TV news.

No more lost sleep

If you stayed up late to watch the midnight talk show, you'd risk yawning through your early-morning meeting. And a previous commitment might mean waiting another year to catch that movie you enjoy so much.

But not any more, thanks to the latest development in video technology, now finding its way into retail stores around the country.

It's the home video cassette recorder, and it puts you in charge of seeing the TV programs you want to see when you want to see them.

In effect it's a "time-shift" device, allowing you to determine for yourself when you want to watch the programs being broadcast on TV, independent of your local station's schedule.

Small wonder

The video cassette recorder, or "VCR," works on the same general principle as an audio tape recorder, but it records the television picture as well as the sound.

With the use of a video cassette tape about the size of a paperback book, the video recorder can capture one or two hours of TV programming (up to four hours with some machines), then store it on the tape for you to play back at a more convenient time, or to keep permanently.

Turns itself on!

The VCR can silently record one program at the same time you're watching something else on a different channel—there's no longer any reason to miss a program you want to see.

It can automatically turn itself on, using its timer, to record a program while you're asleep or away from home, then turn itself off at the end of the tape. And the VCR can play back prerecorded video cassettes offering entertainment, educational, sports or other programs.

Many VCR models also have an optional camera, so you can produce your own program on tape and see it played back on your TV set, or store family memories such as the baby's first steps, a wedding or a holiday celebration as a kind of "living scrapbook." And some models have attachments so you can transfer home movies shot on conventional movie film onto video cassettes to show on your TV screen.

Capture special events

With a home video cassette recorder, special televised events such as man's first steps on the moon, the Olympics or other once-in-a-lifetime events could also be captured on tape and preserved. Or you could build up your own home library of your favorite TV specials.

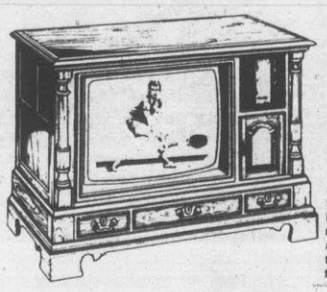

In terms of its ability to receive television broadcasts, the video cassette recorder might be described as "a television set without a picture tube."

Tips on cassette care will improve sound enjoyment

Tape recording has undergone dramatic growth since the first audio tape was commercially introduced in the U.S. in 1947.

Today, tape recording is so popular, says 3M Company, which developed and introduced the first Scotch brand recording tape 30 years ago, that an estimated 37 million households, one of every two in the U.S., has one or more tape recorders. A major factor has been the audio cassette.

While the audio cassette has greatly simplified tape handling and made tape more foolproof, the sound experts at 3M indicate there are some important do's and don'ts to achieving good, lasting recording results.

They offer the following common sense tips:

1. When recording cassettes, be sure to cue the cassette tape to allow for the non-magnetic plastic leader. It's easy to forget that on a new or fully rewound cassette, leader not magnetic tape is exposed to the recording head when first inserted into the machine. Failure to cue can mean losing the opening words or music of your recording.

2. Some machines leave an audible click when the record button is pushed. These annoying sounds can often be eliminated by back-winding the tape very slightly before putting the tape in motion.

3. Microphones pick up every sound. Reduce unwanted noises when tape recording by placing the mike close to the sound source.

Some cautions: When taping a person speaking or singing, the mike should be about eight inches from the mouth to make the voice the dominant sound, yet avoid accentuating the hissing "s" and explosive "p" sounds.

When recording a group, arrange people in front of microphone, rather than passing or holding the mike. When recording outdoors, cover mike with a heavy woolen sock to reduce wind noise.

4. When possible, wire into an amplified sound source, such as a radio or tuner. This eliminates room noises. It can be accomplished with commercial or homemade "patch" cords with the appropriate plugs or alligator clips on the ends.

5. Select the proper length of cassette tape for the activity you'll record. There's nothing as frustrating as coming to the end of the tape before the conclusion or a natural break in your recording session.

PROTECT VALUED RECORDINGS on audio cassettes from accidental erasure or rerecording by simply breaking out the small plastic tabs on the spine of the cassette. While some brands of cassettes have arrows to indicate the proper tab for each program "side" or tape direction, the tab in the upper left is always for the program facing you. To intentionally rerecord at a later time, simulate these tabs by sticking pieces of cellophane tape across these gaps.

Remember the length of time on the cassette is for total tape time or twice the time on one side. For example, it would be best to use a 90-minute cassette to record a session of more than 30-minutes without interruption.

6. Which brand to buy? It's safest to purchase products of a company well known for quality products as it has a reputation to back up with rigid quality control standards.

While a cassette may appear to be a simple piece of tape hardware, it is actually a very sophisticated tape guidance system. A deviation in tape or shell tolerances of a couple thousandths of an inch can have an effect on sound quality or even tape jamming.

7. To protect a cassette recording from accidental erasure or rerecording, break out the small plastic tabs on the spine of the cassette. If at a later time, you want to rerecord, then apply a piece of cellophane tape across the gaps.

8. High heat or direct sunlight can ruin a cassette. Never leave a cassette in a car's glove compartment when it's hot or near a window as the plastic can warp and the tape stretch.

If accidentally exposed to temperature extremes, allow the cassette to return to room temperature over a 16 to 24-hour period before attempting to use it.

9. Recorded magnetic tapes should never be placed too close to strong magnetic fields, such as loud speakers or electrical appliance motors.

10. Dirt is another enemy of magnetic tape. A fingerprint or dirt on the magnetic surface will cause loss of signal and perhaps permanent damage. Store cassettes in their original containers.

11. Dirt on the equipment heads can also result in poor recordings. Occasionally clean heads with an inexpensive fluid or special cassettes sold for this purpose by most dealers.

12. Tapes stored for long periods of time should be rewound about twice a year to release tension and stress that might cause tape distortion.

Be your own producer . . .

A revolutionary breakthrough brings freedom to TV viewing!

Now every home viewer has the chance to become a television producer—recording, editing and scheduling programs in the comfort of the family living room or den!

America's first home TV color camera and video recording system is being introduced this year by JVC, and it's already being heralded as the basis for an entire new era in television.

With the JVC Vidstar VHS Video Home System television viewers can for the first time create and schedule their own TV programs in at least four different ways.

The Vidstar home color camera enables viewers to make instant color "home movies" on videotape, or transfer existing 8mm or Super 8 movies to handy videotape cassettes through a simple and inexpensive optical attachment.

Pre-recorded entertainment and educational programs can be purchased for home viewing.

And there's no longer any need to miss favorite shows with Vidstar to help. Televised programs can be recorded for later viewing—even if you're asleep, away from home, or watching another program.

Spokespersons for JVC, a 50-year-old manufacturer of home entertainment and video systems, expect that by 1978 almost 300,000 U.S. homes will own a video recorder, with an estimated nationwide use of as many as one million by 1980.

The JVC Video Home System offers the home viewer the single most important element that was missing from television: freedom of choice in viewing time and selection. And that's a breakthrough, indeed!

Color television: the key word is 'automatic'

By David Lachenbruch
Editorial Director,
Contributor to TV Guide

"Automatic" is the key word in the new 1978-model color television sets. Virtually all brands now feature sets which require little more than selection of the channel to be viewed—all other adjustments are made automatically.

Some of the automatic systems in the new sets include color consistency, tint and flesh-tone, black and white levels, fine tuning, contrast and brightness.

Change with light

Many sets even keep track of the lighting in the room, maintaining the best possible picture as light conditions change. Some sets adjust themselves automatically, using a special control signal transmitted by the station. No matter how they do it, the aim is "hands-off" operation in the living room.

One automatic feature which is sweeping the color television industry is all-electronic tuning, which eliminates the clunking mechanical tuner, one of the parts most likely to cause trouble in a TV set.

David Lachenbruch

Electronic tuning shows up in many different forms. Some electronic tuners substitute single-knob tuning for the dual VHF and UHF tuners on conventional sets.

Others permit tuning by pushbutton in "random-access" systems—which means that the viewer can tune from one channel to another without going through all the channels in between.

Calculating tuner

The most sophisticated new tuning system is probably the calculator-type tuner, which resembles a Touch Tone telephone control panel. This same type of tuning device is used with many remote-control sets.

Remote control, in fact, is now emerging as the leading feature in color TV, and it's now available in sets from 13 to 25 inches in diagonal measurement—making it possible to tune the set without leaving the chair.

Reflections removed

Most of the new 1978 sets have high-brightness and high-contrast black-matrix picture tubes, which previously were found in only a few expensive sets. The coating of black between the phosphor dots or stripes on the screen absorbs room light which ordinarily would be reflected, improving both contrast and usable brightness.

The new model year is the first in which all major-brand color sets being offered are all-solid-state—that is, they contain no vacuum tubes except the picture tube. This makes possible higher performance, greater freedom from failure and reduced energy consumption. Some of today's sets use as little as half the amount of electricity as their 1972 counterparts.

Color expansion

Once reserved exclusively for the living room, color is now spreading to virtually every room in the house, thanks to an increasing variety of screen sizes and cabinet configurations.

In addition to the family-sized 25-inch sets, the most popular screen sizes are 19, 17, 15 and 13 inches diagonal measurement. Sets with screens as small as five inches are available for battery and AC operation.

Moving out!

Black-and-white sets are also becoming more versatile. The most significant trend for 1978 is the sharp growth in number of models being offered for use outside the home, beyond the reach of the line cord. The combination battery-and-AC set now plays longer before it is necessary to recharge the battery, gives a brighter picture and is easier to tote than its ancestor of a few years ago.

THE ELECTRONIC TOUCH—Setting the hands is almost the only time you touch the newest, cordless wall clocks, because their movements are electronic. A single battery keeps each of these Bulova clocks operating accurately for a full year. The day-and-date calendar on big, bold, colorful modern styles and the brass pendulum of traditional fine-furniture models keep moving every day, all year long. Style C3402 (left and bottom) is available in white/black dial, beige/cream dial, or brown/white dial for suggested retail of $29.95; style C3060 (right) is available in solid oak with burnt umber finish for suggested retail of $150.00.

Table radios styled for home or office

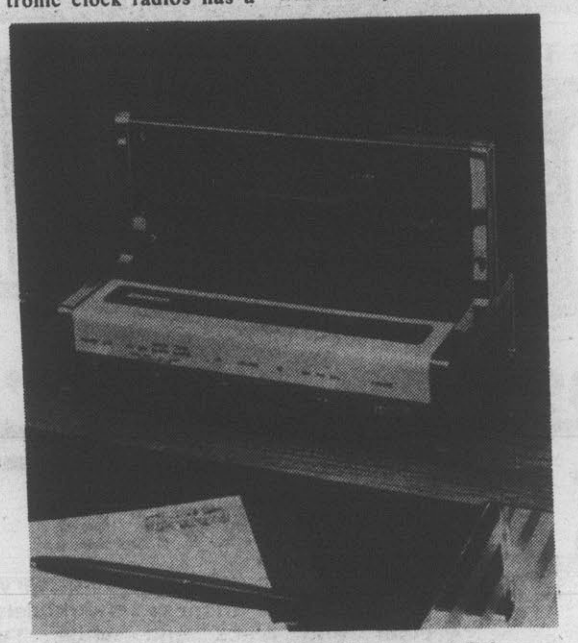

The "easy listening" sounds of radio make life more enjoyable at home or in the office. And table radios provide the perfect answer, if you're adding style to a small office or selecting the right radio for your kitchen, den, or bedroom.

Each of these digital electronic clock radios has a unique feature called "Power Reserve." This special feature is designed to keep the electronic clock circuitry functioning for up to four hours in the event of a temporary power interruption. When power is restored, a flashing part of the time display on the face of the clock indicates that an interruption has occurred.

An alarm feature displays the exact minute to which the alarm has been set.

These radios have been styled to meet the decor needs of any home or office.

TIME AT A GLANCE. The Billboard, a full-feature AM/FM electronic digital clock radio, joins Zenith's 1978 radio line. Its Power Reserve feature keeps the clock circuit functioning up to four hours if a temporary power interruption occurs. Cabinet of simulated wood, grained walnut color.

Easy to look at, delightful to hear

SIGHT AND SOUND PLEASURE—Zenith's Mediterranean styled console stereo, the Tassara, features AM/FM/Stereo FM tuner-amplifier, stereo precision record changer, 8-track cartridge tape player/recorder and Allegro high-performance speakers. Cabinet top and sides are of genuine pecan wood veneers, the front of simulated wood in matching pecan finish.

Select a home stereo unit that meets your needs

Are you planning to buy your first stereo or a replacement for the one that's been in the repair shop more than at home?

Here are some valuable tips from Zenith Radio Corporation to help you select the stereo to meet your specific needs.

If you plan to have your new stereo unit in a living room or any other large room, consider buying a console unit. All of the associated equipment—the tuner, amplifier, tape player or player/recorder, record changer and speakers—are combined in one piece of furniture. You'll also have a broad selection of console styles to choose from. Zenith, for instance, has a 14-model line that offers consoles in Mediterranean, Colonial or Early American, and Country styling.

If, however, your stereo is for an area with limited space—such as a wall unit—or if you want maximum flexibility, consider a modular stereo system. It usually consists of three pieces, the main modular unit—containing a tuner/amplifier, plus one or more of the following: record changer, cassette tape player/recorder, or an 8-track tape player or player/recorder—and two speakers.

THE MINI-WEDGE, a new modular stereo idea from Zenith, is designed for smaller spaces. This stereo system contains an AM/FM/Stereo FM tuner-amplifier, stereo precision automatic record changer, and comes with either cassette or 8-track player/recorder or 8-track player only. The cabinet is of simulated wood with a richly grained walnut finish.

Modular stereo also offers flexibility. These units may be moved easily from one part of the house to another and blend in with any decor. The speakers offered with the unit are designed for that specific instrument.

Zenith's Allegro modular systems provide three different sizes of speakers, so that the customer can choose the size that fits his space and sound performance requirements.

Regardless of your final choice of stereo, visit a dealer who offers a large selection of console and modular stereo so that you can compare for yourself.

Ravaged records spoil sounds!

With record prices going up all the time, it's more important than ever to take good care of your precious collection. Think of it as an investment.

Here are some things to keep in mind when storing and playing records:

Store records in a vertical position, not horizontally stacked on each other. And never, never store them in a sunny window or near any source of heat—including your amplifier.

Never stack records directly on top of each other—put them back in their jackets as soon as you've taken them off the turntable. Even if you think you're being careful, you'll scratch them before you know it.

GREENVILLE, N.C. 7 BLOCKS FROM PITT MEMORIAL HOSPITAL IN THE C.L. LUPTON BLDG.

THE MILLION-SELLER, Koss Pro 4/AA stereophone, shown with the young woman above. Since the hi fi component was introduced in 1970 by Koss Corporation, inventor of the stereo headphone, more than 1,000,000 of the units have been purchased. Koss officials predict that the days as "number one" for the Pro 4/AA are almost over, however. They have just introduced the new Pro 4/Triple A (right). Early sales suggest it will set new records for popularity. According to Koss officials, the most lifelike stereo sound reproduction possible and listening privacy are the key reasons for the successes of their stereophone products.

"Build a better stereo headphone, and you'll beat a path to the world's ear."

Well, according to John Koss, the man who invented the stereo headphone, the saying goes something like that, anyway. And he's not sure whether it was his grandmother or one of the sound engineers at Koss Corporation who first said it.

Whether it was Grandma Koss or whoever, it was sound advice. It led to Koss Corporation creating and marketing their famous Pro 4/AA stereo headphone which has now sold more than 1,000,000 units.

"We believe that this makes the Pro 4/AA one of the largest selling hi fi components in history. There may be some cartridges and other accessory items which have done as well, but for certain, this is a record in the high quality stereophone category," said John Koss, chairman of the corporation which he founded in 1958.

Today the company, which is based in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, is the world's largest manufacturer and marketer of stereophones.

There are 20 stereophone models in the Koss line ranging from $20 to $300. What makes a product the most popular hi fi component in the world?

Well, in an industry that is based on entertaining people through providing listening pleasure, if a product is the most popular, it obviously is the one which delivers the greatest amount of listener pleasure per dollar invested.

According to Koss officials, who stay in close touch with purchasers of their products, the amazingly lifelike reproduction of music and the opportunity for private listening are keys to their products' successes.

The sound reproduction, which is more perfect through a stereophone than with most speakers costing many times more, is what impresses people who try stereophones for the first time. True stereo separation and the big, clear sound make many people purchase the first time they listen.

According to surveys of purchasers of the product, however, a close second is the privacy factor. As privacy becomes difficult to achieve in a closer world, people are turning increasingly to the stereophone. It enables a private musical listening experience—free from the interruption of sounds nearby and, better still, free from worry about offending others.

It's qualities like these that Koss executives believe have brought such distinction to their Pro 4/AA stereophone.

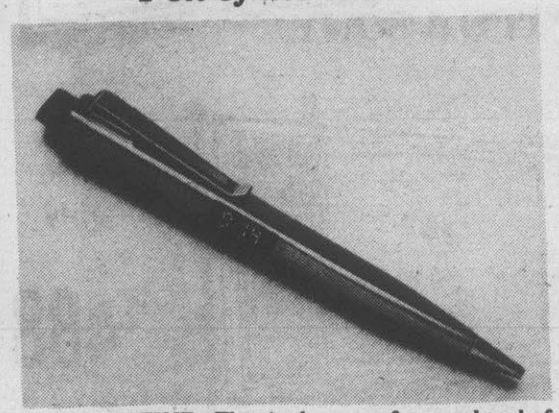

So what has Koss done now? Well, he seems to have followed grandma's advice once again. He and the sound engineers at Koss Corporation have created an even better stereophone—sure to catch the ears of the world.

Business on the go

POCKETFUL OF MEMOS . . . Her busy day of typing will follow his hectic business trip as the Panasonic Micro Cassette Recorder brings back memos, letters and business meeting minutes. Lightweight, dependable and just a shirt pocket away at all times, the unit features built in condenser microphone, accidental erasure prevention, and AC adaptor/charger.

Pen of the time!

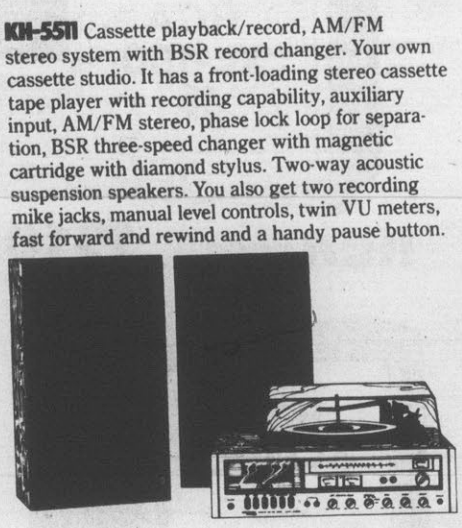

WRITE IN TIME—The single most often used tool of the busy executive is the lowly ballpoint pen. Until recently, the ballpoint rolled along with its one simple function—but now there's a pen with a higher purpose! The "Rite-Time" pen/watch combines the solid-state precision of a digital display watch with the convenience of a stylish ballpoint pen. Simply touch the pocket clip for an instant L.E.D. display of the correct time. Hold the clip for a moment and the seconds will begin to count down. Press the clip twice and the date appears. For the busy executive, doctor, lawyer, or student, the "Rite-Time" adds a new dimension to all those writing duties—and guarantees time on hand!

EARLY AMERICAN STYLING comes in the Abbey, one in a new series of credenza-shaped color TV consoles from Zenith in the 25-inch diagonal screen size. It features 14-position Touch-Command push-button channel selection. Cabinet top and ends of pine wood veneers and select hardwood solids, with decorative gallery, front and base of simulated wood in a matching knotty pine wood finish.

Shop for color TV set to match your lifestyle

There's a color TV set to match your home decor and style of living, whether you live in a one-room high-rise studio or a ranch-style house.

New color TV receivers from Zenith this year include compact portables in the 13-inch diagonal screen size, attractive table models in the 17- and 19-inch diagonal screen sizes and elegant furniture-styled consoles in the 23- and 25-inch diagonal screen categories. Among these models you are sure to find one to meet your particular needs and fit the space available.

For example, there's a 13-inch diagonal portable-size set particularly suited for use in a bedroom. Its built-in timer allows the viewer to pre-set the TV up to 3½ hours so that it automatically turns itself off.

Another set in this screen size has Color Sentry automatic color picture adjustment, plus Space Command remote control. This feature allows the viewer to turn the set on or off and change channels from across the room.

If you desire a larger screen for viewing, but don't have the space for a furniture-styled console, there are 17- and 19-inch diagonal table model sets available. These color TV sets have the performance features of many larger receivers, but are built to fit into smaller areas.

For those who love the look of fine furniture, and also want the latest in home entertainment, 23- and 25-inch diagonal TV consoles come in a variety of styles: Early American, Mediterranean, Country, Contemporary and Ultramodern.

New this year from Zenith is a series of credenza-shaped consoles, each with Electronic Video Guard tuning. These are available in Touch-Command direct channel selection, and others are also available with Space Command 1000 remote control.

There are different styles, screen sizes and cabinet finishes to choose from, of course, so let your home and your lifestyle help you determine the color TV set that's best for you.

Have fun shopping . . . and viewing!

The independent set

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

DR. WILLIAM M. LUKASH, physician to the President

Does the President take any special vitamins or do any unusual exercises to keep himself healthy and in good shape? —O.M., Las Vegas, Nev.

● The President's typical diet is nutritious and well balanced, so no specific vitamins are required. In addition to his usual exercise program, I have recommended that he take a five-minute period of stretching and limbering-up exercises prior to rushing out on the tennis court to prevent inadvertent strains.

FOR REP. PATRICIA SCHROEDER (D.-Colo.)

What has happened to your bill regarding pensions? —R.P.L., Little Rock, Ark.

● I take it you are referring to the bill I introduced to entitle divorced spouses of Federal employees to a share of the employees' retirement and death benefits. A House subcommittee recently approved part of my plan by allowing state courts to treat Federal pensions as community property in a divorce settlement.

FOR LEE MEREDITH, actress

I haven't seen you in anything since the movie The Sunshine Boys. Have you retired? —J.R., Asbury, N.J.

● I've a good reason for not being around — I just had my second baby. What aggravates me is that from the moment I became pregnant to the time I delivered I was inundated with stage and screen offers, none of which, of course, I could accept. And I bet that now I'm ready to go back to work, I won't get one! Producers, please prove me wrong.

FOR NICK NOLTE, star of The Deep

Is it true you're a loner and money means nothing to you? —B.K., Montgomery, Ala.

● No. I love being with people. If I have that reputation, I guess I got it because I don't live in Hollywood. Funny thing about Hollywood: if you aren't around, people don't stop to consider the reason. They think you're avoiding them and stamp you as a loner. As for money, of course it means something to me. What means nothing is being an actor just for the money. I wouldn't work for nothing. Nor would I be an actor if I didn't like what I was doing.

FOR PAUL HARVEY, newscaster

Is your wife's real name Angel, or is that an endearing term you use when referring to her on your programs? —Martha Durham, Lakeland, Fla.

● Angel's given name is Lynne. She was the youngest of seven daughters, so it is understandable that the family started calling her Angel at infancy. The name still fits. After 37 years married, after a lifetime of seeing glamor at the ironing board, she is still the daintiest, most feminine creature I've ever met. And this quality remains intact after 37 years of skillfully managing all my business affairs.

FOR ELIZABETH L. POST, etiquette expert

● It's perfectly all right, as long as you don't get the page wet. But for your own protection, why not use the eraser on a pencil to turn the pages of a newspaper or a magazine. Anyway, what's so tasty about newsprint or well-worn pages?

FOR RAQUEL WELCH, actress

Who among actresses influenced your career the most? — L.V., Santa Fe, N.M.

● As a child, Moira Shearer, the English ballet dancer; Katharine Hepburn when I grew up. I started by wanting to be a ballerina. When I saw Moira in The Red Shoes, she had a great effect on me. Then I developed a terrific admiration for Katharine Hepburn, whose strength, individualism, talent and moral behavior are unsurpassed. I've never met either of them.

FOR ARTHUR FIEDLER, conductor of the Boston Pops

Why do so many conductors — including yourself — remain active and healthy for so long? —Ruby Michel, Chicago, Ill.

● I think it's because most of us remain active beyond the age of 65. The physical exercise we get while conducting is probably another reason why many conductors live to a ripe old age. However, I have known many colleagues who have died in their 40's and 50's.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

● Peter is 51 and the fourth Mrs. Sellers — actress Lynne Frederick — is 22. When we last heard they were blissfully happy in their Port Grimaud (St.-Tropez) home, in front of which is anchored a pink boat called The Pink Panther. When Lynne's mother heard Peter was about her own age, she was less than happy. "She'd have more fun with someone younger," she complained to friends. Oddly enough, "too young" is how her own friends rate Mrs. Frederick's current 36-year-old beau.

FOR STEVE NEFF, pro bowler

Why do you always rub your left shoe heel before throwing the ball? —Victoria M. Dempsey, Grand Rapids, Mich.

● There are two reasons: The dust on my left shoe acts like resin and dries my hand. (I don't use resin because it causes my calluses to split.) The other reason for rubbing my shoe heel is to get a more consistent slide during my release.

PRO AND CON

Should The Airline Industry Be Deregulated To Increase Competition?

PRO Sen. Howard W. Cannon (D.-Nev.) chairman, Aviation subcommittee

The effort to reform airline regulatory practices is primarily an effort to reaffirm a basic American principle — competition. It is an effort to loosen the grip of the Civil Aeronautics Board so new airlines can start flying or existing ones can expand their routes. Not one major trunk carrier has been permitted to challenge the established order since the CAB was created in 1938. From competition will come lower fares and better service to small communities from local commuter airlines designed to meet their needs. Without competition may come Federal takeover, just as happened with the railroad industry.

CON Sen. George McGovern (D.-S.D.)

Adjustments are needed in the CAB rules governing the airlines, but deregulation is not the whole answer. It would permit a relaxation of the rules under which an airline may begin or drop service to a community. A few major carriers, financially strong with excess fleets, could dominate high-volume markets. Less affluent carriers may be driven out of business. Smaller communities now being served by regional carriers may have to accept the traffic of smaller aircraft, after having spent millions to upgrade their airports. The result could be more competitive service between major cities, but many rural Americans would be denied access to the national system.

THE WORLD'S MOST BEAUTIFUL SANDCASTLE

When Norman Kraus goes to the beach to build a sandcastle, he doesn't start with a pail and shovel. He starts with a bulldozer.

By Scot Morris

As Kraus directs, the dozer piles hundreds of tons of beach sand into a huge mound with a volcanolike depression at the top. An hydraulic pump then brings hundreds of gallons of seawater to the top of the mound. The water soaks into the sand, compacting it into a dense block. Then Kraus starts sculpting.

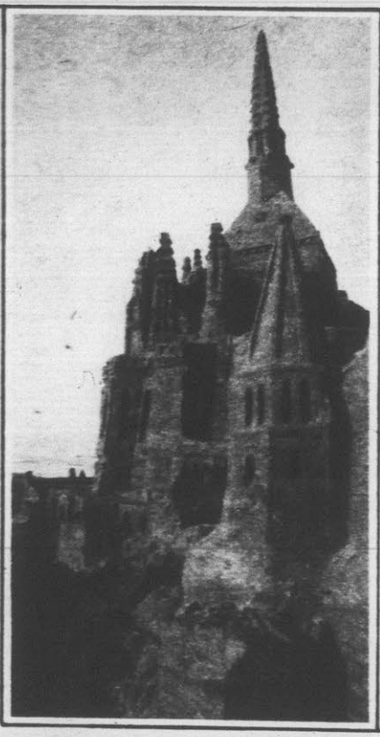

In this case what Kraus wanted to reproduce was Mont Saint Michel, the medieval island-city a mile off the northwest coast of Normandy, France. Not just the famous abbey and spire at the top — which were built in the 13th century, over 200 years before Columbus's birth — but all the outbuildings, too.

Actually, Kraus's preparations for this sandcastle began three months before the first grain of sand was moved. He first had to get permission from the Regional Coastal Commission, then from the city of Del Mar, Calif., to build a "structure" on the public beach.

Kraus's wife Marlyn, and a close group of designers, architects and sculptors who call themselves Sandcastle Construction Ltd., then combed libraries to learn all they could about Mont Saint Michel. Floor plans were photocopied and studied, and detailed photographs were copied and enlarged so that every buttress, turret and spire corresponded as closely as possible to those on the island-city.

The reproduction is estimated to be on a scale of about 1:150. The sandy sculpture rose 24 feet above the Del Mar beach, within inches of the height-limitation for two-story houses along this stretch of Pacific coast some 15 miles north of San Diego.

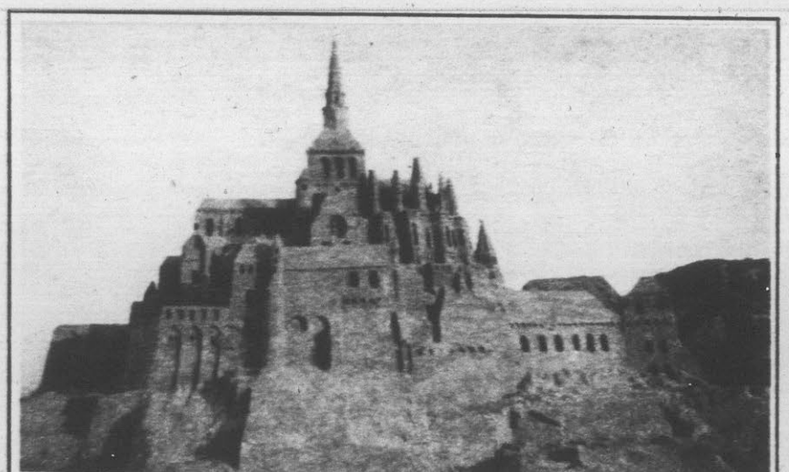

Mont Saint Michel-Del Mar was a labor of love. No one was paid to work on the castle, but at times 30 or more people were working on it at once, wielding shovels for hours or carving a building out of the wet, compacted sand.

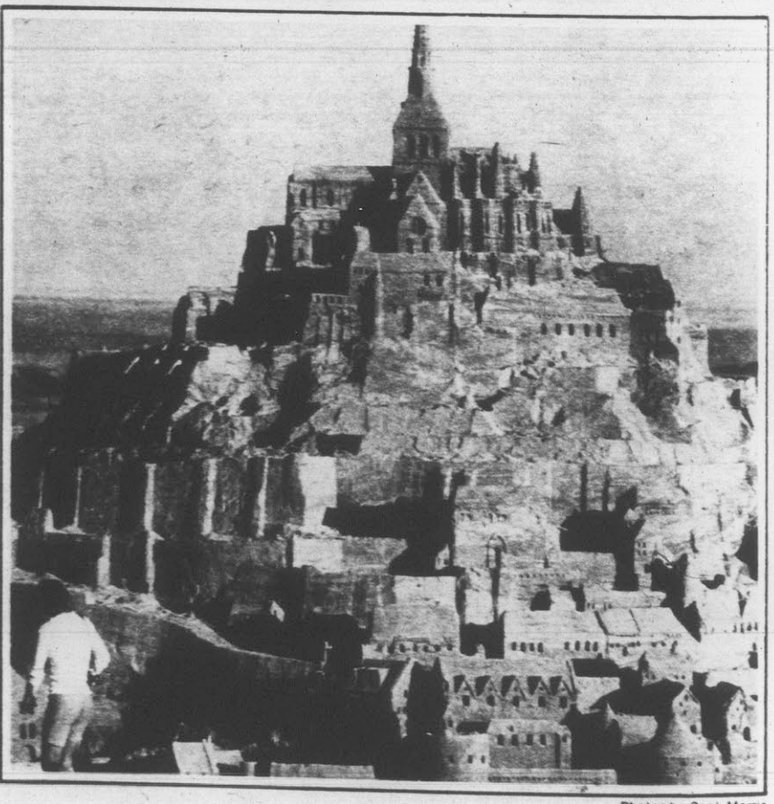

The mammoth spectacle drew thousands of amazed onlookers to the usually placid stretch of beach, including some celebrities with summer homes in the area.

Burt Bacharach and Angie Dickinson, visiting their daughter at a beach house within sight of the castle, each walked down to view the spectacle and to marvel at the immensity of the project. "I guess I visited it in about four different stages of construction," Bacharach said later. "It was marvelous how dedicated those artists were, knowing how temporary their creation would be. Watching the masses of onlookers was equally fascinating. It was like a five-day parade by here. When I write a song, I record it or write it down, and then I'll always have it. But these people — you have to admire their artistic spirit, their willingness to work for hours, even days, on a creation that, a day or two later, will be just a memory. On the other hand, the decay and collapse of the castle was symbolic of the end of summer."

DON'T GET OLDER– GET BETTER

Researchers are beginning to find that stereotypes of old age, such as inevitable disease, declining mental ability and loss of sexual capacity, are false.

John Neubauer

Dr. Robert Butler, director of the National Institute on Aging, and wife Myrna.

By Rochelle Jones

If the thought of growing old depresses you, an afternoon talking with Dr. Robert Butler, director of the National Institute on Aging, would pick up your spirits fast. Butler, who is in charge of coordinating all Government-sponsored research in aging, probably knows more about old age than anybody in the country. And his views on aging, based on the most up-to-date facts and statistics, are decidedly more upbeat than the commonly held images.

In fact, at age 50 Butler is looking forward to something that most of us dread — old age. He considers growing old an opportunity to experience firsthand something he has studied all his life. As a psychiatrist in private practice, as author of a Pulitzer Prize-winning book on aging called Why Survive? Being Old in America, and now as director of the Institute, Butler has spent the last 20 years researching and writing about older adults.

"I've had the feeling recently," he says, reflecting on his own aging process, "that it would be a shame not to live long enough to experience old age. The secrets of old age are hard to communicate. The old, for instance, are not nearly as fearful of death as the young. It would be interesting to understand why. I've worked hard, and it's possible that I might, because of a heart attack or something else, miss the final chapters of life. But I'd like to be here."

Not everyone can generate the enthusiasm for growing old that Butler possesses, but there are more reasons for a positive attitude toward aging than is generally supposed. Researchers are finding that old age is not inevitably a time of debilitating disease, declining mental ability and sexual neutrality. And although the biological basis of aging is still poorly understood, new research holds the prospect of postponing the aging process.

A long-suspected cause of aging is a steady failure of the body's immune system, the white blood cells and antibodies that are the first line of defense against disease throughout life. With advancing age the immune system, like worn-out combat troops, seems to slow down and to function less efficiently so that the old no longer have the resistance to disease of the young. Now, Butler says, we might be able to "pep up" the immune system with immeasureable benefits.

A researcher at the National Institute on Aging has recently succeeded in rejuvenating the immune system by transferring this youthful capacity of resistance to disease from young to old animals. If the process can be accomplished in animals, there is always the hope of doing it in people.

"This is quite a significant finding," says Butler. "We are still a couple of decades away from an animal to human transfer of this beginning research, but it does show that we can, at least in animals, reconstitute the immune system."

A true "cure" for aging, in the sense of reversing the physical changes that accompany growing old, seems to be a long way off and depends on further research into basic life processes.

Meanwhile, much can be done to make old age a more productive and creative time of life. The key, Butler says in a recurring theme, is the ability to distinguish between aging and disease, to differentiate between the changes that normally accompany aging and those that are a by-product of disease. Unfortunately, it is not easy to sort the two. In the 1950's, Butler recalls, when he was doing research at the National Institutes of Health, hardening of the arteries was considered an inevitable consequence of aging. Since then, the beginning stages have been spotted in children only a year old. Arteriosclerosis, which was thought to be a sign of old age, may be a pediatric disease after all.

Old people who experience memory lapses, forgetfulness and confusion are labeled with the catch-all tag of senility when they actually suffer from a variety of ailments. "This is a reason that it is so important to get over the stereotype that old people are senile," says Butler. Although an estimated 20 percent have brain damage as a result of hardening of the cerebrovascular arteries, some are simply depressed, and others have what is termed reversible brain syndrome brought on by such things as malnutrition, drugs or congestive heart failure.

The stereotype of senile old folks is just one of the false images of aging. Mental faculties stay clear and sharp until very late in life, and earlier decline is likely to be caused by disease. "It's as if we rediscovered the wheel," says Butler. "The saying 'a sound mind in a sound body' is true after all." Sexual ability also continues well past middle age. "It's abundantly clear," he goes on, "that neither the desire nor the capacity declines."

Too often, Butler says, the old "collaborate with the stereotypes" to their own detriment. As an example Butler recited the case of an 82-year-old woman who fell in love with a young new minister at her church. Much to her dismay she found herself daydreaming about him, even having fantasies of sexual interludes. Embarrassed and in anguish, she sought help. Fortunately, she was reassured that sexual feelings are normal and natural throughout life.

Butler came by his interest in the elderly naturally. Shortly after his birth, his parents separated, and he was left with his grandparents. They lived on a farm in Vineland, N.J., and every day he and his grandfather, then in his 70's, rose at 4:00 to feed the chickens and to gather eggs. When he was 7, his grandfather, who Butler says in his book "would undoubtedly qualify for resurrection and continued life," died. Together, he and his grandmother weathered the Depression — but not easily. First, they lost the farm and moved into a hotel. Then, when Butler was 11, the hotel burned to the ground and all their possessions were lost. To survive they went on welfare, eating Government-supplied food. His grandmother went to work in a WPA sewing room while he sold newspapers and repaired bicycles for 10¢ an hour. Somehow they made it.

Butler says his relationship with his grandparents stimulated his interest in old age. "I saw both of them as active, resilient and tough, especially my grandmother, who came through the Depression. Because of that, I never acquired a lot of the attitudes that most people have toward the old. I didn't have the deep-seated stereotypes of a lot of people I've met."

Consequently, Butler is acutely conscious of the compensations of the later years. All is not loss. Old age can be joyful. It can be a time of fulfillment, of curiosity, of new experience, of a growing perception of the true meaning of things, of freedom from pressure and competition.

"There are an awful lot of happy older people," he says. "As people begin to count time backward from death, they are able to see the importance of things — like looking out this window and seeing the trees. I don't mean to be maudlin about this, but we encrust life with certain social expectations and think they are all- important. There is a re-evaluation, a life review, that people go through as they have to face finitude. Wisdom is not a very scientific term, but life experience does bring a certain sagacity."

The problem, as Butler sees it, is that old age and death have become intimately associated in most people's minds. A generation ago many people never survived infancy, and only the lucky few lived to reach their 60's and 70's. With increased longevity, the majority can expect to celebrate their 65th birthday.

Despite all his knowledge about aging, Butler doesn't claim to know any secret formulas for staying young, but he does have a few suggestions for those who want to live a long and happy life:

"Get off apathy and be a self-starter. Keep mentally fit as a way of keeping yourself alive. I don't mean this in an elitist sense. Take up woodworking and build a cabinet, for example. Stay socially fit. You don't have to be gregarious or have tons of friends, but you need a basic social network. Stay physically fit. That means moderation in habits. It sounds boring, but take decent care of your body. It's the only one you've got."

OLIVIA NEWTON-JOHN: POPULAR, WHOLESOME AND DOWNRIGHT NICE

"As I grow older, I'd like to have a family. I have everything else, and now it would be good to share it."

By Gloria Paternostro

Gold and platinum records are on the walls of her beautiful Malibu home, but they're not featured. Instead, they are hung modestly in the hallway, which says a little bit about the character of Olivia Newton-John. This British-born, Australian-raised singer, winner of three Grammys and just about every other award the music business has to offer, has taken her success in stride and has no pretensions. Nor does criticism bother her. Her sweet, ethereal voice, coupled with her fresh, lovely looks, have made her the darling of the public, but some critics have labeled her as "pleasant" with an undercurrent of "bland." She shrugs it all off with a smile, knowing there isn't too much she can do about it.

Although Olivia seems young (she's 29) and fragile, she is, in fact, a long-time professional who appeared regularly on Australian television from the age of 16. When she won a talent contest and a trip to London, her mother encouraged her to go and went with her. Her first single, Bob Dylan's "If Not For You," became an international success and started her on the road to stardom. Her big break came when she toured with British idol Cliff Richard and became a regular on his TV show.

Her grandfather was British physicist Max Born, 1954 Nobel Prize winner, and her Welsh father was headmaster of Ormond College in Melbourne. Despite such an academic background, Olivia dropped out of school at 15 to pursue music.

Today the independence remains. She and her producer, John Farrar, were the only professionals who liked "Have You Never Been Mellow?" and "I Honestly Love You." Both became hits, the latter winning two Grammys and leading to the Top Female Vocalist of 1974 Award from the Country Music Association. There was some dissension in Nashville about the award going to someone not considered true "country," but Olivia crossed the charts even more successfully than John Denver, and probably did country music a lot of good by attracting new fans.

On stage, she is a low-key performer who totally disarms her audience, winning standing ovations wherever she goes. Even the prestigious New York Metropolitan Opera House did not intimidate her, and despite critics' predictions that the blasé New York crowd would be hard for her to conquer, conquer them she did, keeping her standing-ovation record intact.

Behind her outward charm there is not only warmth but also a quick intelligence and a lively personality that quickly surface as she warms to a conversation, although, she says, "I'm not very good on chat shows — I tend to clam up. Everybody goes on them trying to impress, but I can't talk about myself that way. So people think I'm shy, which I'm not, really, or a bit colorless, with this virginal, white image."

And then she is laughing because she finds the image somewhat ridiculous. She has never hidden the fact that she was romantically involved with her manager, Lee Kramer. Then Lee left the scene, and her personal life was up for grabs. So it wasn't long before rumors linked her with Grease costar John Travolta. (This is Olivia's first starring role in a film. It will be released early next year.)

Nate Cutler/Globe Photos

She stars with John Travolta in Grease.

"I expected those rumors," she says calmly. "We did nothing to encourage them, but there was no point discouraging them. I mean, if you're hanging out together because you're working on the set 12 hours a day, it's bound to happen." And, in fact, although Olivia speaks cautiously about it, Kramer now seems to be back in her life — at least for the moment. "He's managing my business affairs again, and we're sort of seeing each other," she says with a smile.

She has been quoted both as wanting a family but being afraid of marriage. Which is really true? "As I grow older," she says, "I'm beginning to think how nice it would be to have a proper home life and a family. After all, I have everything I want, and now it would be good to share it. If you'd asked me a year ago if I wanted children, I'd probably have said no, but now, . . Still, there are a few things I want to do first. I know I'm much more fortunate than most people because I could afford to have someone look after the child so I wouldn't exactly be tied down, but I really want to be mentally prepared for it. It's such a big change.

Olivia adores animals and has five horses, four dogs and three cats in her home.

Right now, her family consists of five horses, four dogs and three cats. "My animals make me happy," she says, her face lighting up. "My dogs' faces . . . they meet me when I come home, and they're so loving and sweet and gorgeous." She likes animals so much that when performing at the Metropolitan earlier this year, she took time out to work on a week-long drive to place stray animals.

"And I love nature — particularly oceans and sunsets and moonlit nights," she continues. "I like romantic settings. But I'm not as romantic about friendships. My close friends are generally those I've had for a long time, and their friendship was there before I was successful. They like me for me, not my success. Maybe that's just playing it safe, but I meet hundreds of people and have to find out every time which ones really are friends and which aren't. Basically, though, I'm the sort that likes everybody and then finds out later I was wrong."

Nate Cutler/Globe Photos

With manager and beau Lee Kramer.

Olivia is most easily drawn to people with sensitivity and a sense of humor. She quickly sees the funny side of almost any situation, and the laughter bubbles up in her, something one humorless writer misinterpreted as "nerves."

Olivia is known to have a shrewd business sense, and it shows in her reasons for declining all offers for a television series. "To keep up the same standard of good work every week for so many weeks . . . you can't possibly do it," she says. "You haven't got the time to devote to it. It's better to be seen now and again and have people pleased to see you rather than have them say, 'Oh, her again.'

"I've accomplished most things I ever wanted to do and things I never dreamed I would. I never thought I'd make a film — now I have. I'd love to write one. That would be fun. Directing interests me a lot, too. Whenever I look at things, I tend to think how they would look through a lens. I think it would be a fantastic challenge."

In the final analysis, how would she like to be remembered? "I'd like to know I had made other people enjoy my music. [Her Greatest Hits album was recently released.] I'd like people to be able to say I was good at what I did. As a person, they can't all know me — only a few people really know me. I just hope I give them pleasure, that's all. And I'd like people to say that they liked me. It's important to me to be liked."

Of all the things Olivia Newton-John has wanted to achieve, this would seem to be the easiest.

THE RUBY RED BERRIES

Walter Storck

Cranberry Sweet Potato Bread. Two seasonal favorites combine in this moist, quick bread.

Cranberries, those cheerful, bouncy, ruby red berries that always seem to say "Happy Thanksgiving," are at the peak of their season now. Cranberries are native to North America and are grown in Massachusetts, New Jersey, Wisconsin, Oregon and Washington.

Our tradition of serving cranberries at Thanksgiving goes back to the first Thanksgiving in Plymouth, Mass. The Wampanoag Indians of Cape Cod introduced their treasured berries, which they called "Sassamanesh," to the Pilgrims, who renamed them crane berries because the pink blossoms on the vines in late spring resemble the heads of cranes. Eventually the name was contracted to cranberry.

Our resourceful Pilgrim cooks were also the first to use the berry in puddings and pies. Today, too, we find many varied uses for cranberries that make good additions to our tables.

MARILYN INTERVIEWS PRODUCE EXPERT PETE PURCELL

An active man whose work involves getting fresh fruits and vegetables to your local supermarkets in the best possible condition is Pete Purcell, president of a consulting and marketing firm specializing in the produce industry. We talked to Pete about the fresh fruit and vegetable market situation at this Thanksgiving period.

"First," he said, "what comes to mind is weather, and this year the weather in all growing areas should be completely favorable. The result will be an abundance of all fresh fruits and vegetables. If anything will be in short supply it might be Thompson seedless grapes. The availability of the bronzy red Tokays and black Ribiers, however, will be fine."

We then asked him what he would suggest to consumers about keeping produce fresh at home.

"First, the makeup of vegetables is almost 95 percent water. So, after washing them, put them in plastic bags to prevent dehydration. Keep them in your refrigerator vegetable crisper at a temperature of 33° to 35°F. There are three exceptions: green beans, which should be refrigerated but not washed, and which should be bought only one or two days before using as they decay rapidly, and cucumbers and green peppers, which keep best at a temperature of 45°F.

"Keep all fruits except tropicals (pineapple, bananas, papaya, avocados, etc.) in the refrigerator. Put tropicals in a cool place, but near room temperature.

"The best temperature for ripening bananas is 59° to 65°F. It takes 3 or 4 days for full ripening, and don't place them in the sun. Instead, let bananas ripen gradually.

"Tomatoes should be allowed to ripen at a cool room temperature, 55°-60°F., away from sunlight. Once fully ripened, you can put them in the refrigerator.

"Ripen pears at room temperature, too. They are generally sold underripe and must be ripened at home."

THE WINTER SQUASHES

Walter Stork

Glazed Acorn Rings glisten with orange juice, brown sugar and lemon.

Have you ever stopped at a roadside market and marveled at a group of unusually shaped and colorful vegetables? Chances are you were fascinated by the members of the winter squash family.

By winter squashes we mean those that are harvested in late summer and fall and have hard skins. Examples of this category include acorn (Danish), hubbard, turk's turban, mammoth, cushaw, Canada crookneck, spaghetti and winter crookneck. Pumpkin is also a member of this family. Here are several recipes to try.

GLAZED ACORN RINGS

2 acorn squash
⅓ cup fresh orange juice
½ cup packed brown sugar
¼ cup light corn syrup
¼ cup butter or margarine
2 teaspoons grated fresh lemon rind
⅛ teaspoon salt

1. Cut off ends of squash. Slice crosswise into 1-inch rings and remove seeds.
2. Place in a single layer in a large, shallow baking dish and add orange juice.
3. Cover and bake in preheated 350°F. oven 30 minutes. Combine brown sugar and remaining ingredients; simmer 5 minutes. Pour over squash rings and bake, uncovered, 15 minutes longer, basting occasionally. Makes 6 servings

JAMAICAN SQUASH SOUP

2 lbs. peeled, cubed winter squash: turk's turban, butternut, hubbard or acorn
1 lb. tomatoes, peeled and diced
½ cup rice
1 large clove garlic, crushed
2 bay leaves
¼ teaspoon marjoram leaves
¼ teaspoon dried thyme leaves
1 cup chopped scallions
1 tablespoon bottled steak sauce
Dash ground allspice
1 teaspoon sugar
2 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon ground black pepper
3 cans (10½-oz. size) beef consommé
5 cups water
4 tablespoons chopped parsley

1. Place squash, tomatoes, rice, garlic, bay leaves, marjoram, thyme, scallions, steak sauce, allspice, sugar, salt, pepper, consommé and water into large kettle or Dutch oven.
2. Heat to boiling, stir, reduce heat and let boil gently 45 to 60 minutes until vegetables and rice are very tender.
3. Ladle into soup bowls; sprinkle each serving with a little parsley.
Makes about 3 qts.

TOASTED SQUASH SEEDS

Seeds from winter squash: turk's turban, hubbard, acorn or pumpkin
Salt

1. Rinse seeds in colander or coarse strainer. Turn out onto paper towels and rub off all fibrous material.
2. Rinse seeds again. Spread wet seeds on cookie sheet and sprinkle with salt.
3. Bake in preheated 350°F. oven for about 15 to 20 minutes until very pale gold color. Cool. Eat as desired.
Makes as much as you want

GOLDEN SQUASH SOUFFLE

1½ cups mashed, cooked winter squash: turk's turban, hubbard, acorn or spaghetti
6 eggs, separated
1 cup grated natural Swiss cheese
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon ground black pepper
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

1. Preheat oven to 350°F. and grease a 2-qt. casserole.
2. Beat squash until fluffy. Add egg yolks, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Stir in cheese, salt, pepper and nutmeg.
3. In medium bowl, with clean beaters, beat egg whites with cream of tartar until stiff peaks form.
4. Fold whites into squash mixture, turn into soufflé dish and sprinkle surface with Parmesan cheese. Bake 1 hour until puffy.
Makes 4 to 6 servings

PEOPLE QUIZ/ By John E. Gibson

Are the elderly the most frequent victims of homicide? Has an effective means to deter shoplifting been found?

ON CRIME AND CRIMINALS

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. When white-collar petty crime (thefts, pilfering, altering of records, etc.) occurs in an office and is detected by fellow workers, whether it's reported to the boss depends on both the sex of the observer and the sex of the culprit.

2. Most criminals are quiet loners.

3. Elderly people are the most frequent victims of homicide.

4. No really effective way has been found to deal with shoplifting.

5. It's the rare youngster who isn't tempted occasionally to commit delinquent or antisocial acts, and it only takes a minute to tell how likely he is to yield to such temptations.

6. Most crimes would not be committed if criminals were more intelligent.

ANSWERS

1. True. Studies conducted by Purdue University investigators show that in such circumstances female wrongdoers are more likely to be reported than males; that females report females most often; and that males report males least often.

2. False. A University of London study shows that the opposite is true, that the typical criminal likes to have people to talk to, does not like to be alone for any length of time, craves excitement, takes chances, is aggressive and restless, likes to keep moving, loses his temper quickly and is given to acting impulsively. The study also shows that people who attempt to satisfy their ambitions by criminal rather than legal means "tend to be athletic in body build, that is, stocky and muscular."

3. False. A statistical study of the general population reported by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company showed that if you make it through your 34th birthday without being fatally slugged, shot or otherwise rendered a candidate for the obituary column, your chances of suffering such a fate diminish dramatically. It was found that "mortality from homicide is highest between ages 25 and 34 for both men and women." And current FBI crime reports are cited showing that in a substantial percentage of cases the person who pulls the trigger, wields the knife or whatever is neither a stranger nor someone you'd be likely to view with suspicion.

4. False. University of Kansas and Middle Tennessee State University investigators conducted a series of experiments in a large downtown department store. They found that the placing of conventional anti-shoplifting signs appeared to reduce but not eliminate shoplifting. So special signs were devised and placed in departments where shoplifting was a serious problem. The signs read: SHOPPERS & SHOPLIFTERS: The Items You See Marked With a Red Star Are Items That Shoplifters Frequently Take. Results: "When merchandise was publically identified (by these signs) as frequently taken by shoplifters, shoplifting was virtually eliminated." One explanation offered for the effectiveness of the signs and red stars is that because they indicated that merchandise was under close surveillance, potential shoplifters and dishonest employees realized the increased threat of apprehension.

5. True. University of Alberta sociologist Gwynn Nettler cites evidence in his treatise, Explaining Crime, that shows delinquents "are more impatient and impulsive than nondelinquents. Time seems longer to them. That is, when you ask youngsters to 'guess a minute' — to tell you when a minute has passed — the delinquent guesses sooner." Other studies bear out this finding.

6. False. Noted criminologist Hans von Hentig has concluded from his Studies in the Sociobiology of Crime that "Intelligence does not appear to reduce criminal tendencies; on the contrary, it seems to play a considerable role in protecting the shrewd perpetrator from the grip of law-enforcement agencies. Intelligence, then, may be called a crime-furthering element in contrast with dullness or stupidity."

Observations

What's in a star? Well-traveled gourmets eagerly await the publication each year of the new Mobil Travel Guide, with its coveted handful of ★★★★★ restaurants. Over the years since the Guide's inauguration in 1958, this annual unveiling of the nation's crème de la crème of culinary emporia has become an event of growing significance among America's restaurant owners and chefs.

Star trek. For months prior to the Mobil Travel Guide's publication, its 80 incognito inspectors visit thousands of restaurants across the nation, rating them on the basis of food, service, atmosphere, and cleanliness. When the inspector feels a restaurant's quality warrants an "inside look," he identifies himself, discusses menus and food preparation with the chef, then checks the kitchen to see if meat and fish are stored separately, whether canned or frozen vegetables are used, and so forth.

Reaching for the stars. The inspectors' reports, plus letters from thousands of Travel Guide users, form the basis for a selection committee's ratings. Space limitations alone keep many good restaurants out of the Guide (but there's always next year). Those which do make it—more than 4,000 in the seven volume 1977 edition—are ranked: ★good, better than average; ★★very good; ★★★excellent; ★★★★outstanding, worth a special effort to reach.

"He heard a rumor that the Mobil man was in the area."

Five-star final. In the course of the rating process, a handful of restaurants is nominated for possible ★★★★★ acclaim. Each of these receives a second anonymous visit from a Mobil Travel Guide inspector before the committee decides which—if any—qualifies for the rating, which translates into the simple statement, "One of the best in the country." Only nine restaurants presently display the ★★★★★ award.

★★★★★ What can you expect in a five star restaurant? Perfectly served culinary masterpieces, not just cooking, for one thing; a wide selection of meat, poultry and fish dishes, plus appealing appetizers and imaginative desserts. The wine list will be studded with famous chateaux and exceptional vintages. Breads and pastries will be hot and fresh; the table settings and decor, outstanding.

Star struck. If you're lucky, you live just around the corner from one of the current ★★★★★ greats: Cafe Chauveron, Miami; Ernie's, San Francisco; Le Perroquet, Chicago; Le Ruth's, New Orleans; Lutece, New York; Maisonette, Cincinnati; Petite Marmite, Palm Beach, Fla.; Rancho Del Rio Tack Room, Tucson; Tony's, St. Louis. Will they repeat next year? Are there ambitious young restaurants climbing toward future ★★★★★ glory? Stay tuned, the 1978 Mobil Travel Guide will be off the press in January.

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS AS A PATIENT

By Jean E. Laird

Here's what you must understand to get the very best care from your doctor and hospital.

What are your rights as a patient? Today you, as a patient, can — and should — exercise the following rights concerning your medical care.

The Right To Be Selective. Doctors will not be offended if you check their training.

You also might contact your local or county medical society, or your community hospital. These will give you as many names of qualified and accredited physicians as you desire.

The Right To Change Doctors. Remaining with the same doctor has obvious advantages: he has recorded your past health problems and the results of all tests you have taken. And if you have been seeing him for a long time, he knows you as a person, as well as a patient, which can be valuable when you seek medical advice.

But the mere fact that one doctor has your medical history in his files shouldn't stop you from seeking outside help if you aren't completely satisfied with his care.

The Right To Full Information. Fifty percent of the persons queried in a national survey said that their doctors didn't tell them enough about their condition. Yet you not only have the right to ask questions but you also have the right to expect truthful answers and explanations you can understand.

That means you have the right to know as much — or as little — as you want about your condition, care, treatment, the purpose and results of tests and the name and possible side effects of medications your doctor may prescribe. If the doctor believes it is medically inadvisable to give information to the patient, it must be made available to an appropriate representative of the patient.

The Right To Privacy Concerning Your Medical Care Program. Those not directly involved in your care must have your permission to be present during case discussions, examinations or treatments. Your remarks and revelations also must be accepted in the strictest confidence. In addition, your health records are your private property and should not be made available to anyone not directly involved in your care.

The Right Not To Settle For A Single Opinion. Two opinions — that of your family physician and a surgeon's — are a must when it comes to surgery, and a third opinion, obtained independently of the other two, makes good sense.

Except in a life-or-death situation, there is usually ample time to consult another surgeon, a procedure which, says Dr. Lawrence P. Williams, prominent West Coast surgeon, could reduce the number of operations anywhere from 20 to over 60 percent.

Be sure the surgeon is qualified. According to an editorial by Dr. Eric W. Fonkalsrud, in the American Medical Association's Archives of Surgery, about half of the operations performed in the U.S. are being done by doctors not certified for surgery by an American Specialty Board. While this does not necessarily mean these doctors are not qualified to perform surgery, it does indicate that they haven't taken the rigorous examinations required of surgeons who want this certification.

The Right To Know Medical Costs And Fees. In fact, the President's Price Commission has asked that signs indicating willingness to discuss fees be displayed in doctors' offices. And you have the right to ask exactly what your medical care will cost. .

Quips & Quotes

TIP TOADY

I well remember when we all
Tipped waiters 10 percent.
Just right it was; not large or small,
No matter where we went.

In time, 15 percent it was
And not a penny less.
This later was increased because
All costs went up, I guess.

Today I panic in the clutch,
Am flighty as a bat.
In fact I'm not quite sure how much
I ought to tip my hat.

—Richard Armour

From the school of hard knocks: Education — what you get from reading the fine print. Experience — what you get from not reading it. —Frank Flanders

The nervous patient said, "Doctor, I need something to stir me up and put me in fighting trim. Did you put something like that in the prescription?"

"No need," the doctor replied. "You'll find all that in the bill."

—Conrad Fiorello

One of two special Christmas stamps they're preparing now will show George Washington in prayer. What he's praying for is that the card be delivered before Easter. —Robert Orben

THROUGH A CHILD'S EYES

Kids see life differently. Send contributions to "Child," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., N.Y., N.Y. 10022. $10 if used — none returned.

My 4-year-old and her grandfather were waiting for Grandma to get ready for a fall outing. Impatient, Grandpa was pretending to leave without her. My little one pleaded, "Please, wait, Grandpa. If Grandma doesn't come, my heart will break out."

—Linda Cover Stalmach

PARTY OF THE FIRST PART

My uncle believes in reincarnation;
He'll be back again, he knows.
That's why he's made his will
To himself — before he goes.

—Olga McCoy

If it's true that women are inclined to marry men like their fathers, it's understandable why so many mothers cry at weddings.

LITTLE EMILY

"Mom's out of cookies."

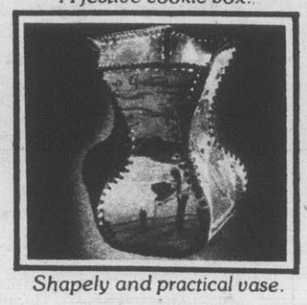

CRAFTS/By Rosalyn Abrevaya

EASY-TO-MAKE, GLAMOROUS GIFTS

Here's a simple way to turn greeting cards, shelf paper or wallcoverings into decorative bowls, boxes, vases...you name it.

A festive cookie box.

Tissue holder with style.

Chances are you have a drawer full of greeting cards you're keeping for sentimental reasons or because they are just too pretty to throw away. But how often do you enjoy them?

Many years ago they wouldn't have been hidden away but turned into useful nut bowls and cookie boxes for the holidays. Vases, for dried or fabric flowers, and tissue-box covers are other containers you can create.

And you needn't limit yourself to cards. You can opt for a sleek look by using plastic-coated shelf paper, colored construction paper, posterboard, wallpaper remnants or other coverings.

Using FAMILY WEEKLY's full-size patterns and instructions, you can make bowls, baskets, cookie boxes, tissue-box covers, vases, old-fashioned miniature lanterns — even tiny slippers to decorate your holiday tree.

The items illustrated here are created by cutting greeting cards (or your choice of covering) into sections. Holes are punched around the edges, then the sections are joined together with a single crochet stitch; or, to simplify construction, the sections can be laced together with yarn, twine or leather.

To order full-size patterns and instructions for all these creations, send $1 for each copy of Crafting Bowls, Boxes and Vases Leaflet #304 to:

FAMILY WEEKLY Magazine
P.O. Box 438
Midtown Station
New York, N.Y. 10018

Be sure to include leaflet number and your name, address and zip code. (New York residents please add sales tax.)

16 mg. "tar", 1.0 mg. nicotine av. per cigarette, FTC Report Aug. '77

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

Viceroy

More Tobacco, Less 'Tar' than Winston or Marlboro.

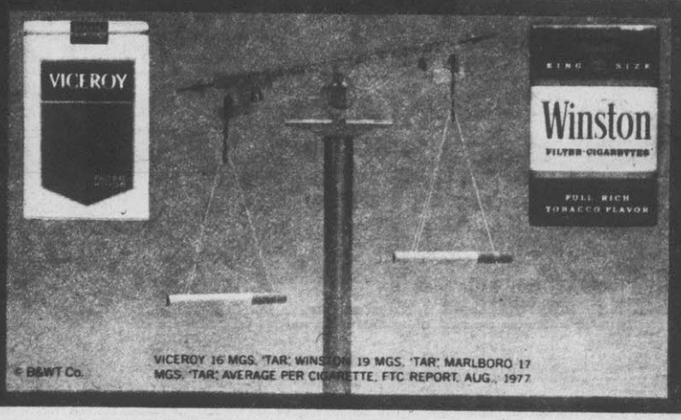

Rich, full flavor is the promise that Viceroy makes.

And it's a promise that Viceroy keeps.

The method for delivering flavor is as simple as it is smart.

Instead of using stronger tobacco, Viceroy uses more tobacco, and a lower 'tar' blend than Winston or Marlboro.

The result is a mild, fully packed cigarette with an extra satisfying taste. And, yes, lower 'tar' than Marlboro or Winston.

WHAT IN THE WORLD...

What's Your Credit IQ

Who knows more about credit — men or women? According to a national survey by American Express, the answer is neither. Although men have legally been managing the family assets far longer than women, they proved equally ignorant when asked to answer 10 basic questions about credit.

Questions most often missed by respondents, most of whom carried credit cards, were those concerning which charge cards do not have a preset spending limit and a cardholder's liability for lost or stolen charge cards. (In case you're not sure of the answers, bank cards set a spending limit while travel and entertainment cards don't. And if a card is stolen, you're only liable for a maximum $50 per card regardless of how extensively it is misused.)

If you think you could use a brushup on credit facts, here are 2 booklets that, despite their titles, are not for women only. For a free copy of Women: To Your Credit, write: Commercial Credit, Baltimore, Md. 21202 or call toll-free (800) 638-1900. If you'd like a copy of American Express's free booklet, The Credit Handbook for Women, write: American Express Co., Dept. 115-FW, P.O. Box 927, New York, N.Y. 10010.

Toys That Teach Kids

When is a toy not a toy? When it's a learning aid like Scamper the Climbing Squirrel, a "toy" designed to encourage deaf children to speak. As the child attempts to speak into a telephone headset, the squirrel climbs the fiber-glass tree by means of a voice-operated relay. And since he climbs in proportion to the sound the child makes, a teacher can use the squirrel to elicit the desired voice level.

Scamper was developed by Donald Swarthwout of Biloxi, Miss., with the help of fellow members of Telephone Pioneers, a club of telephone-industry employees involved in community-service activities.

Charles Gammel, director of the Magnolia Speech School for the Deaf in Jackson, Miss., one of several schools using the animals, says, "Since we start working with children around age 2, we try to approach everything through the use of play. The squirrel works so well that we have one 2-year-old who will do anything just so she can work with it."

The Biggest Thanksgiving Dinner Of Them All?

When it comes to Thanksgiving dinners, Refer Switchboard believes the more the merrier. Last year 900 people joined volunteers from Refer, a 24-hour crisis intervention center in Albany, N.Y., for a soup-to-nuts Thanksgiving feast (500 dinners were also home-delivered). Spokesperson Jeff Katz says that during the dinner Refer served 531 lbs. of turkey, 70 lbs. of donated butternut squash and scores of homemade desserts.

"Ours isn't just a charity affair," says Katz. "If someone wants to come to have Thanksgiving dinner with their neighbors, they're welcome." Katz thinks last year's dinner was the largest in the country and called Guinness only to find that they don't have a record for the largest Thanksgiving dinner. But this year Refer expects to break its own record — word of mouth has talked the dinner up enough so that they plan on serving somewhere between 2,500 and 3,000 meals.

Chances are your community won't be having as large a celebration, but if you're interested in helping someone else have a happy holiday, check with local service groups to find out how you can pitch in.

Late Again

Why are some people never on time? According to Chicago psychiatrist David Dean Brockman, "Lateness is a serious problem with certain persons that requires a concerted effort by therapist and patient to deal with." Brockman says that for some people lateness may be an expression of unconscious hostility; the person shows how unconsciously angry he is by making the other person wait.

What should you do if you're habitually stood up? "There's no ready-made answer," says Brockman. "Many people just accept it as part of the relationship." But he adds that if you're willing to risk a breach, confronting the person about what he's doing might prod him to change.

How Art Is Helping Some Hospital Patients

The colorful pictures on the walls of New York's Hospital for Joint Diseases and Medical Center are doing a lot more than looking pretty — they're providing medical care for needy artists. The hospital is the first health-care facility to participate in a new nationwide program organized by Change Inc., a nonprofit corporation.

Anonymous donors are providing $10 million worth of art work, which will be given to participating hospitals. When needy artists receive care in one of the participating institutions, the cost of their care will be deducted from the value of the art.

However, artists won't be the only ones to benefit from the program. Harvey Machaver, exec. director of the Hospital for Joint Diseases, says, "Art in the corridors will attract patients out of rooms, encouraging them to become ambulatory."

Quick Takes

An eye-opening statistic from a survey conducted by a major optical-products manufacturer — women with contact lenses are significantly more likely to have full-time careers than those who don't wear contacts....Advertisers appear to believe that women should be seen and not heard — men do more than 90% of the lucrative, off-camera voice- over roles in TV commercials. And the number of women in TV commercials has increased only slightly during the last 3 years, according to a study by the women's committee of the Screen Actors Guild.

Working may be hazardous to your health says a survey by the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health. The study, conducted by trained inspectors who visited 4,636 plants across the country, concludes that 1 out of 4 American workers is exposed on the job to some substance suspected of causing death or disease....Your car is the most expensive member of your family to maintain on a daily basis. The Labor Dept. says expenses for cars eat up 1/5 of the money spent by the average American family.

The family physician is going out of style, according to a Roper poll, which reports that 2 out of 3 Americans now regard hospital emergency rooms as interchangeable with their doctors' offices for general treatment. Most of those surveyed said they would take a broken arm to an emergency room before calling a doctor, and 14% would choose an emergency room even for minor medical complaints like chills and fever.

Prince Valiant

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

by HAL FOSTER

Our Story: AT DAWN, PRINCE VALIANT COMES TO THE EDGE OF THE DEPRESSION WHERE THE KIDNAPPERS ARE CAMPED. THEY STAND IN SILENCE BEFORE THE MENACE IN HIS EYES. "DAUGHTERS," HE CALLS, "WALK SLOWLY TOWARDS ME."

BUT ASSUR SEIZES VALETA. "HARM ME AND YOUR DAUGHTER WILL DIE!" HE SHOUTS.
VAL DOES NOT HESITATE AND THE 'SINGING SWORD' COMES WHISPERING FROM ITS JEWELLED SCABBARD, EAGER TO DO ITS APPOINTED WORK.

SO VAL GOES DOWN AND PUTS THE BRIGHT BLADE TO ITS TASK. IT FLASHES IN THE MORNING SUN, THEN GLEAMS RED AND FINALLY COMES TO REST, ITS WORK DONE. HE WIPES CLEAN HIS SWORD ON A BURNOOSE WHOSE OWNER WILL HAVE NO FURTHER USE FOR IT. THEN HE TURNS TO FACE ASSUR AND HIS FAIR HOSTAGE.

THAT BOMB-PLANT TRANSMISSION COULD HAVE BEEN A SKIP-SIGNAL! IT HAPPENS NEAR THE POLE! I THINK THEY'D FLY FROM THE SOUTH END OF THE PIPELINE..

..LESS CONSPICUOUS! SO THE BOMB CIRCUITS COULD BE IN THIS BUILDING! GOTTA MOVE! NOTHING PERSONAL, OLSON, BUT I'M GOING TO SCREAM.. ..AND TELL THE GUARD I MUST BE MOVED—BECAUSE YOU TRIED TO ATTACK ME!
