Policeman Killed

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Fayetteville police were looking for an armed man with a 357 Magnum pistol Saturday night after a police officer was shot and killed with his own gun.

Authorities identified the slain man as James Joseph McConkey, 25, who came to Fayetteville from the Greenville, N.C., police department a year ago. McConkey was married but had no children.

Officers said that McConkey had been walking patrol in the downtown business district when the department received a call he was in trouble. Officers arriving on the scene said McConkey had been shot in the right eye at close range with his own pistol. They said apparently there had been a scuffle in which the other man got the officer's gun. McConkey was wearing a bullet proof vest at the time of the incident.

According to Magistrate James Parrish the fugitive whose identity has not been revealed, has been charged with murder. Parrish said there were at least three eye witnesses to the shooting, including a companion of the accused man who is being held as a material witness.

FIRE KILLS FARMVILLE MAN — An early Saturday morning fire resulted in the death of Willie Lee Wooten, according to fire officials. Another occupant, Alice Williams Barnes, received serious burns. Donald Ray Milton discovered the blaze. Ms. Barnes was transported to Pitt Memorial Hospital by members of the Farmville Rescue Squad for treatment of second and third degree burns over 80 per cent of her body. Bobby Joyner, Pitt County Fire Marshal, reportedly suffered an injured leg during the fire, and was treated at Pitt Memorial. The wood frame house is located about three tenths of a mile from Farmville on highway N.C. 121. Investigation into the 3:15 a.m. fire is continuing. (Reflector photo by Tommy Forrest)

Purge Ordered For CIA

By DANIEL F. GILMORE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — CIA station chiefs in at least eight capitals have received their pink slips in a sweeping purge that may eliminate up to 1,000 members of the agency's clandestine branch by next year, qualified sources said Saturday.

They said the CIA's roving expert on Israeli affairs also will be sacked in an efficiency drive that has aroused bitter in-house resentment against Adm. Stansfield Turner, President Carter's reform-minded CIA director.

Sources within and outside the agency said the station chiefs — seasoned spymasters who run operations in the field — already slated to be dropped are those in West Germany, Spain, Austria, Sweden, Norway, Canada, Japan and Australia.

"These men are what we call 'walk-upon-the-waters' types," a veteran intelligence officer said in reference to their expertise.

The field posts they are leaving are considered the top rung on a professional spy's ladder — often the last plum assignment before retirement or reassignment to headquarters in senior executive posts.

But the sources said only one of the eight is known to have received reassignment to the agency's Langley, Va., headquarters to serve out his normal career term. The rest are said to have been "invited" to take early retirement.

The eight are among 210 members of the CIA's Directorate of Operations — the ultra-secret branch that runs classical cloak and dagger operations — who received notice of imminent severance last month.

The sources said nearly all of them will be out of the service by dismissal or early retirement by March 31. Then, they said, another 500 to 800 clandestine service employees will be slated for removal during the next fiscal year.

Although the size of the CIA's work force is classified information, it is estimated the clandestine branch now has 4,000 to 5,000 employees — half in the field and half in support missions.

By that standard, Turner's purge would slash staff by 20 or 25 percent.

Even gung-ho intelligence professionals generally agree the Operations Directorate has been grossly overstaffed since the end of the Vietnam War, and that drastic reductions were in the works even before Turner came on board determined to reform and trim the scandal-shaken agency.

But some veterans say he has been "brutal" and "insensitive" in the way he is handling the wholesale sackings, compressing the staff reduction drive from the five years contemplated to just two.

And the critics note there is no severance pay for fired CIA employees.

Those sacked before regular retirement age get only a last paycheck, a refund of accrued pension annuities and dismissal into a world where many employers will not hire former spies.

Charged

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Three teenagers are in custody of Mecklenburg County officials following their arrests Friday in connection with the shooting death of a 78-year-old man.

Authorities identified two of the youths charged with murder in the case as Jack D. Stallings Jr., 16, and Wesley Moore, 16, both of Charlotte. The third person arrested is a juvenile and his name was not released.

Rioting In Bermuda

HAMILTON, Bermuda (UPI)

— Rioting youths battled outmanned troops and police through the back streets of this resort capital Saturday in the third day of protests over the execution of two black convicted murderers. The governor of Bermuda asked Britain to send troops.

In London, British Prime Minister James Callaghan approved the request and defense officials announced that 150 crack troops would be flown to Bermuda early this morning.

In an incident that police said may not have been related to the rioting, the bodies of two elderly American tourists and a Bermudan maintenance man were found in the ruins of the top floor of the six-story Southampton Princess Hotel, which was swept by fire Thursday night.

Police said that arson was one "possible" cause of the fire but they refused to rule out others. The identities of the two Americans were withheld pending notification of their families.

After a night of rioting and fires set by youths hurling molotov cocktails, fighting broke out in Hamilton again Saturday afternoon as police opened fire with rubber bullets on roving bands of black youths attacking cars and their drivers.

No serious injuries were reported but police arrested some 20 of the youths for violating the dusk-to-dawn curfew declared Friday by Gov. Sir Peter Ramsbotham.

A heavy rainstorm Saturday night chased most of the youths off the streets and brought some respite for the vacation resort's 600 police and national guardsmen.

But Ramsbotham, in a terse announcement, said he had asked Britain to send troops to help restore order in the British crown colony, which has been self-governing since 1967.

In London, officials said Callaghan had ordered 150 crack troops from the spearhead battalion of the Royal Regiment of Fusiliers dispatched to Bermuda early Sunday. More troops will be on standby in case they are needed, the officials said.

The last time Britain sent troops to a crown colony was 18 months ago, when it rushed an infantry battalion backed by Harrier jump jets to Belize in Central America to guard against an invasion threat from neighboring Guatemala. The invasion never came.

The curfew confined thousands of tourists to their hotels after nightfall and many kept indoors even during the day because of the rioting.

The disturbances erupted Thursday night after an appeals court turned down a last appeal to stay the executions of two convicted murderers, Erskine Durant "Buck" Burrows and Larry Winfield Tacklyn, both 33.

Burrows was convicted of killing five men, including the Bermuda governor Richard Sharples in 1973. Tacklyn was convicted in the slaying of two supermarket owners in 1974.

Tacklyn and Burrows, who claimed to be the leader of a black power organization were hanged Friday in Bermuda's first executions in 34 years.

Saturday's attacks marked the first time since the disturbances began that rioting broke out during the daytime.

The 250-man Bermuda Regiment, a part-time militia force equivalent to the National Guard, joined the 350-man police force in patrolling the streets in Hamilton, whose 10,000 population is 60 percent black.

Situated in the Atlantic about 700 miles east of the North Carolina coast, Bermuda has been a British crown colony since 1684, with a British-appointed governor responsible for foreign affairs, defense and internal security.

Presumed Dead

WENDOVER, UTAH — Two Air Force fliers stationed at Seymour Johnson AFB, Goldsboro are missing and presumed dead in the crash of their F-4E Phantom jet Saturday.

Their plane crashed during a snowstorm near the Utah-Nevada stateline.

Names of the two have been withheld pending notification of next of kin.

$7 Million Training Funds

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An extensive job training program throughout the state will be financed with $7 million in federal funds, state officials announced Friday.

The Skill Training Improvement Program will involve 29 separate contracts with state agencies, including the Department of Correction, Department of Labor, Department of Commerce and Department of Community Colleges.

Part of the program's goals includes providing advance skill level training to 1,343 workers currently unemployed, underemployed or economically disadvantaged.

Named To Appeals Court

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Three men were named Friday to newly created posts on the state Court of Appeals.

Gov. Jim Hunt named Superior Court Judge John Webb, State Rep. Richard Erwin and Wake County District Attorney Burley Mitchell.

Webb, 51, of Wilson is a former law partner of the governor in the firm of Kirby, Webb and Hunt. His is a judge in the 7th Judicial District, which includes Nash, Edgecombe and Wilson counties.

Erwin, 54, of Winston-Salem will be the first black Appeals Court Judge, and a member of the North Carolina Penal Study Commission. He is a former president of the Forsyth County Bar Association and a former member of the state board of Education.

Mitchell, 36, is chairman of the governor's Crime Commission, and was named Raleigh's Outstanding Young Man of the Year in 1975, and an Outstanding Young Man of America in 1973.

Shipping Estimates Reduced

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Iranian shipping officials Friday considerably reduced earlier estimates of how much military hardware will be shipped to Iran out of Wilmington.

Solomon S. Aparian, assistant director of the Arya National Shipping Line Co., said 30 to 40 van-sized containers will be shipped monthly from the port, of which only half will be filled with military equipment. Earlier estimates placed monthly cargo totals at 100 containers of "strictly military" goods.

Aparian and Arya's American agent, Wilmington Shipping Co., refused to reveal contract costs. The foreign company already has 26 employees in Wilmington, including three officers of the Iranian army and navy.

'Beat The Peak' Is New GUC Project

By STUART SAVAGE

Reflector Staff Writer

If you want to get something for nothing, the Greenville Utilities Commission may be able to help through its new "Beat the Peak" project.

The commission plans to initiate a volunteer load management program, designed to help reduce wholesale power costs paid to the Virginia Electric and Power Co. for Greenville's electricity, GUC director Charles Horne said.

The program, scheduled to go into effect by June 1978, is expected to result in annual savings to the commission in excess of $150,000. These savings will be used to reduce the summer utility bills of the participating customers, and to fund the "Beat the Peak" project costs, according to Reese Helms, who heads the commission's Energy Conservation Office.

He explained the project involves installing radio-operated switches on water heaters and central air conditioning or heat pump units on a volunteer basis, at no cost to the customer. By using the switches, GUC can — for a few hours out of a few days of the year — switch off these major appliances to reduce the demand on the distribution system, Helms said.

Volunteer participants in the program will get something for nothing, Helms said, by receiving a $7.50 discount on their utility bills during each of the four summer months.

Ultimately, all GUC customers will benefit from the controlled reduction in peak demand through a reduction in the amount of future rate increases, according to Helms.

The initial cost of the program will be about $500,000 — a figure that will increase gradually to nearly $2 million over the next seven years. Savings are expected to exceed $4 million during the seven year period.

The "Beat the Peak" load management program is the first of its kind to be used by a North Carolina municipal utility system, although the Lumbee River Electric Member Corporation in Red Springs started a similar program last year with good results, Helms explained.

Malcolm Green, GUC's assistant director, said load management is being initiated because electric power rates are rising rapidly due to the demand or peak usage on the utilities' system. The demand charge in GUC's wholesale power rate has doubled since 1973 and is expected to continue to rise. Ultimately, the consumer has to pay this bill.

"The whole purpose" of the "Beat the Peak" program, Helms emphasized, "is to try to hold down our peak, which normally occurs in the summer." The peak is when the total electric system demand is at its highest point...when customers are using the most power.

According to Green, the peak last summer came on July 20. That 133.5 megawatt demand, he said, "was an all-time high" for Greenville. Once that "demand" is created, GUC has to pay for it for the next 11 months even though its customers may not use that much energy again during that period.

He noted that once a demand is created, GUC is bill-ly named co-chairpersons for the campaign — Mrs. Anne Stott Duffus and Jack Duffus.

Jack and Anne Duffus, local realtors, have been named to head the 1978 Heart Fund Campaign in Greenville and Pitt County. It was announced recently by Dr. Robert Thurber, president of the local association.

Activities will commence immediately with the selection of subcommittee chairpersons who will direct the various fund raising and community awareness programs leading up to Heart Sunday on Feb. 26, the major activity of the year for the association.

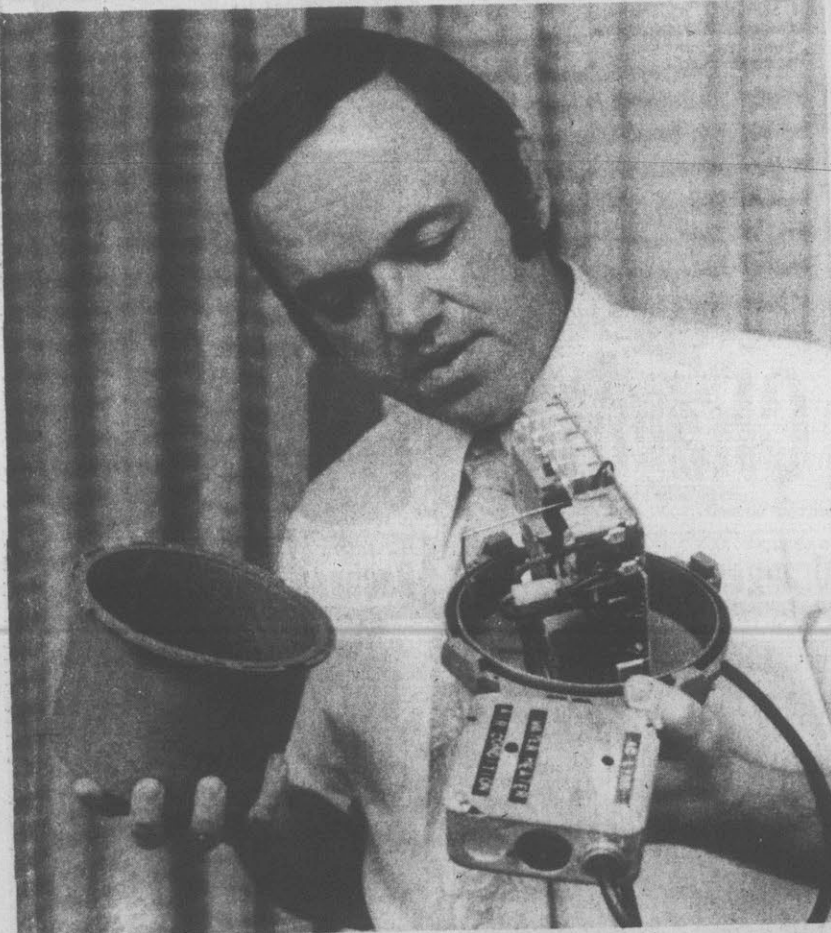

Voluntary public contributions and some annual federal grant monies are the only sources of financial support of the heart program.

"We hope to develop a high degree of community awareness about the heart, its care, and its diseases during the year 1978," said Thurber.

"We want to unite the providers and consumers of health care in a concerted effort to minimize the risk factors, and to plan activities that will have an impact on reducing the mortality figures," he added.

"With community leadership like that exhibited by Anne and Jack Duffus, we look forward to mounting a successful drive."

conditioning units in volunteers' homes to allow the commission to control the appliances' operation during peak demand periods.

Several Accidents

According to police records, James Payton was charged with driving his vehicle too close in an accident which also involved Bessie B. Heath, charged with operating her vehicle with improper equipment of no brake lights. Both were taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital along with another passenger in the Heath automobile, Lori Lynne Heath. All were treated and released. Damages are estimated to be $1,500 to the Payton vehicle and $2,600 to the Heath car.

Linda Vincent Hines of Winterville was charged with failure to yield right of way at a stop sign in an accident also involving Lewis Woodrow Strickland of Clark's Trailer Park. Hines was taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital and released. Police records show. Damages are estimated at $600 to the Strickland vehicle and $500 to the Hines vehicle. Ernest Leroy Bunting of Oak City was charged with a safe-movement violation in an accident also involving Michael Arthur Moran of 1103 Myrtle Ave. Police estimate damages at $200 to each vehicle. Jerry Lee Cannon of Ayden was charged with failure to reduce speed in an accident also involving Joseph William Styron of Ayden. Police estimates damages at $275 to the Cannon vehicle and $525 to the Styron auto.

Missionary Arrives

Elder Daniel Golightly of Bountiful, Utah arrived in Greenville this week to become a resident and to do missionary work for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latterday Saints.

He will work with Elder Thurston of Morgan, Utah. The pair resides at 806 E. Third Street in Greenville.

According to Elder Golightly, he works under the directions of the North Carolina Mission in Greensboro.

The Mormon Church has over 27,000 young missionaries serving in similar capacities throughout the he added.

"We want to share a religious message with the people and tell them about the church we represent," said Thurston.

"Our message is different from the message of any other Christian Church."

The Church in this area is located in the Lyndale section of town on Martinsborough Road.

Diabetes Skate

The Eastern North Carolina Chapter of the American Diabetes Association is sponsoring a Diabetes Skate on Wednesday, Dec. 21, Sportsworld Rink.

Area High School Key Clubs and Hardee's are also helping in the event. There will be free admission and skate rental for all sponsored skaters. Hardee's is also providing free food to skaters.

Forms may be picked up at Hardee's.

Suspect Questioned In Los Angeles Deaths

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A 24-year-old man was questioned Saturday in the strangling deaths of 10 young women and girls, some of whom were raped in a series of attacks which has struck fear into the north Los Angeles area.

At the same time, female police decoys were being sent into the streets where some of the young women were abducted.

Teams of specially trained Metropolitan Division officers were stationed in areas where the nude bodies of the victims were found, mostly in the Glendale and Highland Park areas.

The man being questioned in the so-called "Hillside stran-glings," Bennett Merrett, an Hesperia, Calif., clothing store clerk, was arrested in connection with the rape and robbery of a woman not among the stranglers' victims.

A police official said the lead that resulted in Merrett's arrest appeared during the investigation of the death of Yolanda Washington, 20, the first of the strangling victims. Her body was found Oct. 18.

Police said Merrett resembles a composite drawing of the "long-haired, mustached man" witnesses saw with one of the victims shortly before she died.

Merrett also had women's clothing in his car, and the vehicle was similar to one described by witnesses as the car used to abduct one of the victims.

A spokesman for the special "Strangler Task Force" would not release any new information Saturday on Merrett. He remained in custody, charged with suspicion of robbery in connection with the other case.

The identity of the woman in that case was not disclosed.

Police earlier indicated they were looking for two men because of a witness's report that two male Caucasians were seen with one of the victims before she disappeared.

56 Dead In Crash

By ROBIN STAFFORD
TRIPOLI, Libya (UPI) — The crash of a jetliner carrying Libyan Moslems home from a pilgrimage to the holy city of Mecca killed 56 passengers and three Bulgarian crew members, the Libyan news agency ARNA said Saturday.

The plane crashed Friday at Benghazi in northeast Libya with 165 persons aboard, the agency said. The agency said 46 persons injured in the crash were taken to hospitals in Tripoli and nearby Al Bayda for treatment.

ARNA said all of the passengers were Libyans and the crew of the jet was Bulgarian.

Baghdad radio said the crash occurred near the Mediterranean port city of Benghazi when the plane attempted an emergency landing after poor visibility kept it from landing at another nearby airstrip.

Egypt's official Middle East News Agency said the plane was chartered from Bulgaria to transport pilgrims returning from Mecca, the Moslem holy city in eastern Saudi Arabia.

(In Sofia, Bulgarian sources said the plane was owned by Balkan Airlines. Bulgarian transport ministry officials left Sofia to join Libyan officials in investigating the cause of the crash, the sources said.)

The flight was believed to have originated in the Red Sea port of Jeddah, the principal airport serving Mecca.

The disaster occurred at the end of the annual Moslem pilgrimage season, or Hajj. An estimated 1.6 million Moslems from all over the world made the holy pilgrimage to Mecca this year.

Has Right To Listen

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA, acknowledging the independent role of journalists in American life, says it is stepping up efforts to ensure its agents do not hire reporters as spies.

But the agency insists it has a right to listen to any reporter who wants to provide information "which may be useful to his or her government."

The new regulations became public Friday as the CIA spelled out the relationship between the spy agency and U.S. journalists and news organizations.

In February 1976, then-CIA Director George Bush, responding to published accounts of journalists working as undercover agents for the U.S. government, issued a regulation prohibiting the practice.

Gives Up 6.5 Goal

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the latest unemployment figures in, President Carter apparently has given up his goal of bringing the jobless rate down to 6.5 percent by the year's end.

The Labor Department announced Friday that although the number of Americans holding jobs rose by the biggest margin in 17 years, the unemployment rate dropped in November only one tenth of one percentage point — to 6.9 percent — from the previous month.

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell acknowledged that the administration probably would not reach its first-year goal for reducing unemployment.

Gala Benefit For Humphrey

WASHINGTON (AP) — Visibly weakened by his long fight against cancer, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey was hailed by President Carter and a celebrity audience of 2,500 as a man who lost the presidency but gained the nation's love.

"My knees shake a little but my heart is strong, my spirit is good, the medical reports are encouraging and I have unbounded faith..." Humphrey said Friday night as the audience at a gala benefit gave him a long standing ovation.

May Not Divert Coal Strike

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United Mine Workers and the bituminous coal industry reported some progress in contract talks Saturday, but said their differences were still too great to avert a nationwide strike Tuesday.

Some 1,000 miners already were on strike in West Virginia and Ohio. Others also were expected to jump the 12:01 a.m. Tuesday deadline, when the union threatens to halt half the nation's coal production.

The negotiators met for more than two hours under the supervision of federal mediators, and separate meetings were scheduled later. Union President Arnold Miller did not attend.

No Immediate Plans

WASHINGTON — President Carter would like to visit Egypt at "some future time" but has no plans to go there during the trip he begins later this month, a White House spokesman said Saturday.

"We hope to go to Egypt at some future time," the spokesman said.

"There are no plans to go there now," he added, saying "we are committed to the trip" now scheduled to begin Dec. 29 and to take Carter to six nations, including Middle Eastern stops in Saudi Arabia and Iran.

Viets Postpone Talks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department announced today that Vietnamese officials have postponed talks that were to be held with American officials in Paris next week.

No reasons for the postponement were announced. The meeting would have been the third in a recent series since the end of the Vietnam war.

A department spokesman said that a mutually agreeable alternative date was being sought.

Will Not Slash Staff

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Publisher Joe L. Albritton has backed off plans to slash the staff of the Washington Star by 10 percent and says other economies will be taken to keep the newspaper financially afloat.

Albritton addressed about 150 Star employees in the newsroom Friday to tell them of his decision. The prospect of cutting the staff was thought to be among the reasons editor James Bellows resigned last month.

Albritton said the Star, which was losing $1 million a month when he bought it almost four years ago and is now operating at a "bare minimum" profit.

Hunt And Yeager Honored

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — North Carolina Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. and Durham, N.C., County school superintendent J. Frank Yeager were honored Friday night by the National Community Education Association.

Hunt received the organization's Public Affairs Award for his Community Schools Act, a plank of his campaign platform which was enacted into law by the 1977 General Assembly.

Yeager, who has pushed the community involvement in Durham County schools, was named "Superintendent of the Year."

Aware In Advance

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — A newspaper reported today that a subpoena for Carl Albert's records may already have been issued at the time the former House speaker's aides removed them from University of Oklahoma files.

The Daily Oklahoman, in a story from its Washington bureau, also said it appeared that Albert was notified of the subpoena before it was issued.

Beverly Ledbetter, OU general counsel, confirmed that Albert aides picked up some documents Nov. 15 or 16 and that the university did not receive a subpoena from the House Ethics Committee until Nov. 21.

But the Oklahoman said the subpoena was issued in Washington Nov. 14.

The newspaper quoted Rep. Bruce Caputo, R-N.Y., a member of the committee, as saying he believes Albert had "pretty close to what is called constructive notice," that his files would be requested by the committee investigating reports of influence buying by the South Koreans.

Caputo's administrative assistant, Richard Leggett, said he is sure Albert had prior knowledge of the subpoena.

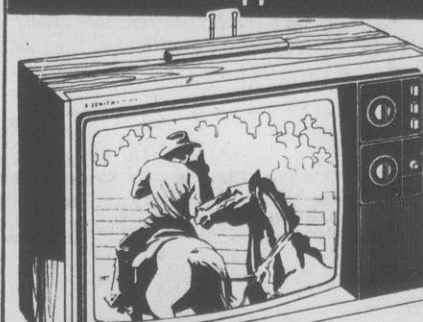

Moves Family

SMITHFIELD, N.C. (UPI) — Shots were fired into a house rented by blacks in a white neighborhood early Saturday.

There were no injuries, but Cornell Cook moved his wife and 9-month-old child from the house and said he would look for another place to live.

"It looked like a shotgun. One shot (went) through the window and one through the front door," said Cook, 24. "There's like 20 holes in the living room wall."

Savings In Load Management

"Beat the Peak" is the slogan at Greenville Utilities these days.

The commission is instituting a load management program which can substantially reduce the amount of money it pays to Virginia Electric and Power Co. for electricity.

Under the plan customers will voluntarily have radio controlled switches installed on electric water heaters and central air conditioners. Power can be interrupted to the heaters and air conditioners with a radio signal when utilities peak electric demand runs too high. This usually happens on the hottest of summer days.

The interruption won't have too much effect on the individual customer, but if the program had been in effect this year Greenville Utilities would be saving over $23,000 per month over an 11 month period beginning last July.

That is true because the highest demand established on any one day determines what is paid for the entire year.

Customers who participate will receive $7.50 reductions in their bills for the four summer months, but all of us will benefit because the amount of money Greenville Utilities pays for electricity will be reduced.

It is a laudatory program that Greenville Utilities is undertaking. If we are to make any progress in solving our energy problems, this is the kind of program that every utilities in the country should be undertaking.

Art World Has Lost 2 Contributors

Greenville has recently lost two citizens who have made immense contributions to the world of art.

Miss Lucy Cherry Crisp, a pioneer in efforts to establish the North Carolina Museum of Art and its first director, died on Nov. 25.

Dr. Wellington Gray, dean of the ECU School of Art, died Tuesday. Dr. Gray built the art program from a department to one of the leading schools of art in the south.

Both Miss Crisp and Dr. Gray will be remembered for their work in making art more meaningful to the people of our state.

THIS AFTERNOON

Ramsey Lines Up Support

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — State Rep. Liston B. Ramsey, D-Madison, appears to have an early lock on becoming the next Speaker of the House of Representatives in the North Carolina General Assembly.

Most sources concede that Ramsey now has enough commitments among present Democratic members of the House to win the post.

Things change, of course, over the period of time involved until the next speaker-ship election; especially now that present Speaker Carl J. Stewart, Jr., D-Gaston, has stated his intention to seek a second two-year term.

Traditionally, the speaker served only one session of the assembly. Stewart has the votes to break that tradition, and repeat as speaker for the 1979-1980 term. Ramsey is lining up support from 1981 and beyond.

Anticipating changes in the membership, Ramsey is busy courting newcomers to the legislative body. Three have been appointed to fill unexpired terms as vacancies occur from legislators taking other governmental posts.

Ramsey is also ready to call on any new Democrats nominated in next year's elections.

Early Vote

Meanwhile, Ramsey has been carefully paying the way for an earlier shot at the speakership should anything happen to Stewart. That is a particularly difficult task, insiders say, since it must not appear that Stewart is being challenged; yet circumstances could develop which would take him out of the race.

The fact that a governor can now seek a second term could be such a circumstance. If Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr. runs again as expected, and is challenged in the primary by Lt. Gov. James C. Green, as those close to Green insist will be done, then the Number Two Slot may look good to Stewart.

While publicly endorsing gubernatorial succession, Stewart privately admitted that the new system would affect his own plans—perhaps adversely. He would like to be governor. Succession changes the whole timetable, making his first shot at the job not likely until 1984. Miss that, and it would possibly be 1992. Thus, Stewart's strategy may well be to run for lieutenant governor in 1980. Such a move could open up the speakership a few months early.

Meanwhile, gubernatorial succession will have its affect on the speakership in other ways.

Legislators agree that steps must be taken to offset increased power in the governor's office by doing a better job in the Legislature.

Power Base

Experience and continuity count when it comes to dealing with complex public issues, say lawmakers, and the General Assembly will need to move toward seniority as a criteria for leadership.

It is already agreed among many legislative leaders that Ramsey—who has been chairman of finance among other leadership jobs and was a key figure in the inner circle when Green was speaker—stands the best chance of becoming a new sort of Speaker of the House; one who serves in the post for several terms establishing a power base to effectively challenge the governor and provide the balance between executive and legislative.

A clear sign of the relationship now between Ramsey and Stewart is seen in the recent appointment of Ramsey to head a legislative study commission. Stewart was opposed in his bid for speaker by State Rep. Billy T. Watkins, D-Granville, who is close to Ramsey and Green. Ramsey was by-passed, as a result, when Stewart appointed committee chairmen, and lost his power base. Last month, however, Stewart asked Ramsey to head a group studying transmitting problems of the public television system.

Sunday Morning Notes

East Carolina University Coach Larry ... started off his first basketball season with one of the major basketball powers of the nation in Indiana.

The season also began with new talent and a lot of hope for building a major basketball program.

The team did pretty well in their televised opener with Indiana. They lost but they kept their poise and were actually leading with ten minutes to go in the game a week ago Saturday.

That was remarkable considering that in addition to being green, the team faced travel delays and rough weather in travelling by plane to Bloomington, Indiana.

Daily Reflector sports writer Jim Kyle accompanied the team on the DC-3 which took them from Pitt-Greenville Airport northward.

The plan was to leave at noon on Friday and be in Bloomington in time for a practice session that evening.

There were delays, however, and it was 1:30 before the plane actually took off.

Then, if you recall, a massive cold front was moving across the nation that afternoon. This created head winds and extremely turbulent weather over the Appalachians.

"The plane started bumping pretty good," Jim says, "and people were coming out of their seats. The door to the pilot's section would not latch properly and kept flapping."

More than one of the 23 persons aboard got airsick.

What was to be a three hour trip stretched out to four and there was concern about making the practice session.

Finally the plane, which was said to have once been Winston Churchill's personal plane landed. The players and those accompanying them alighted to find temperatures in the 20s (it had been in the 50s when they left Greenville.)

The practice was held, the game played the next day and that is history.

Following the game the group returned to the airport and they were told that the plane had engine trouble and couldn't take off.

A replacement plane was summoned from Indianapolis but there was some confusion over whether it was indeed on the way.

(Greensboro Daily News)

While the state tourism bureau contrives new ways to attract human visitors to North Carolina, the Richard King Mellon Foundation has provided, in a single swoop, home-grown hospitality for thousands of visiting birds.

Some 6,500 acres of North Carolina's northeastern county, Currituck, will be bought with foundation funds by a private conservation organization called Nature Conservancy, and maintained as a waterfowl refuge and wetlands habitat. The Conservancy, which has also figured prominently in recent efforts to preserve the Dismal Swamp on the Virginia-North Carolina border, estimates that about 15 per cent of all migratory waterfowl flying south along the Atlantic coast stop in the Currituck Sound. The refuge is for them, and to protect the fragile animal and plant life native to that part of the coast.

People in this area, as it happens, have a slender link to the newly-announced transaction. One of the two properties to be sold to the Nature Conservancy is Monkey Island, long owned by Charles Penn of Reidsville. Penn was one of the founders of the American Tobacco Company and later the squire of Chincapa-Penn Plantation, which was subsequently bequeathed to the University of North Carolina.

The other parcel to be purchased with Mellon Foundation funds is near Swan Island, not far from the Monkey property. Both parcels include stretches of Outer Banks beaches, and nearby marshes, shoals and islands. The area has been a prime duck and goose hunting area (Currituck derives its name from an Indian word for goose). With strictly limited exceptions, it will cease to be so after the coming winter's hunting season.

Whether the Nature Conservancy chooses itself to manage the vast acreage — said to be the largest foundation grant ever made to a private American conservation organization — remains to be seen. In the past, the organization has turned over about half the property it has acquired to state and federal control.

In whatever case, the $4 million grant is one to be thankful for, whether you are a proud North Carolinian or just a grateful duck passing through.

Rare Approval By Businessmen

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — An agency of the federal government has been given an award for excellence by small-business people, an occurrence so rare it falls into the category of man-kisses-hippopotamus stories.

Perhaps you have not been aware, but many leaders of small-business groups, claiming they are the guardians of innovation and industrial vitality, have been in a rage against big unions, big business and big government.

The latter, they feel, react to the needs of small business with the same speed and enthusiasm as might be displayed by a hippo in a mudhole. They felt ignored, crowded-out; they felt an insensitivity to their needs.

Now the Council of Small and Independent Business Associations, whose members represent 750,000 small enterprises, has presented its first annual award for "Federal Small Business Program Excellence" to the National Science Foundation.

Small matter? No, instead, it seems highly significant for taxpayers, business people, government officials and the nation in general.

Milton Stewart, former president of the National Small Business Association, expresses it simply: "The NSF plan could be a prototype for other agencies. It's the first federal program in science and technology that makes sense for small business."

Small business has long complained that it receives too little of federal government money for research and development. Much of the money goes to larger enterprises or to the great universities.

A bill pushed by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who also received an award, now results in small business receiving a percentage of NSF money for research applied to national needs. Now 12.5 per cent, it will rise to 15.

The first competition was conducted this year, when 335 proposals were reviewed and first-stage grants of $1,028,000 made to 42 companies. Sea Otter Trawl Gear, Arlington, Mass., received $17,494 for research on a low drag trawl board. Integrated Sciences Corp., Santa Monica, Calif., received $24,474 to study a visual feedback speed training system for the deaf.

For some small-business people such money could be

Bison, Cattle Mixed

By MERLE KELLERHALS

EDMOND, S.C. (UPI) — When Leo Kerscher is not fixing foreign cars at his shop in Columbia, he can be found tending his small herd of beefalo.

Kerscher has built up a 55-acre ranch he calls the "Circle K Beefalo Range" where he raises and breeds beefalo. He sells the semen to cattlemen in South Carolina.

A beefalo is a new hybrid animal resulting from a cross between the American buffalo and domestic beef cattle.

The meat from beefalo, said Kerscher, has been found to be higher in protein and contain less cholesterol because of the inbreeding of the physically stronger and healthier buffalo.

"The meat from a beefalo tastes better to me than any other meat," he said. "The animals will eat anything making the meat cheaper for the farmer to raise."

Kerscher, 44, said he got into the beefalo business about three years ago because it was something nobody else was doing and he wanted some land of his own. He owns 20 head of beefalo and Herefords.

He came to the United States from West Germany in 1955.

"At my home near Munich," he said, "the biggest plot of land we had was a flower pot."

Beefalo has not been widely accepted as a replacement for regular beef. But then, said Kerscher, it was only recently perfected — in 1973 by D.C. Basolo, a Tracy, Calif., rancher. Many previous attempts to crossbreed the sturdy bison with domestic cattle had produced sterile offspring.

Kerscher said "it may take 20 years to raise the kind of herds it would take to meet demand for beef at the dinner table."

The beefalo are stronger and healthier than other cattle, he said. "They don't get hoof-and-mouth disease, hookworm or 'pink-eye'."

They are usually taller and weigh more than a Hereford or other cows. Kerscher has a six-month-old, 650 pound beefalo named "Valentine" that is as tall as a two-year-old cow in his herd.

Beefalo have floppy ears, fur instead of hair and considerably less fat in the hind quarters (Continued on page A-5)

FULL SPEED AHEAD

We often think how pleasant life could be if all doubts and uncertainties were removed. If we could only stop worrying and plunge ahead, regardless of the consequences, how much more happy and effective our lives would be. In this connection we think of Admiral Farragut's famous statement: "Damn the torpedoes! Full speed ahead!"

Is this kind of attitude the key to a successful life? No, it is not. Great men are not those who have had no doubts. They are the men who through thought and prayer have resolved these doubts.

The Bible shows us that men of sometimes great faith nevertheless were constantly nagged by doubt. When God first called Moses to deliver his people from their slavery in Egypt, Moses timidly replied, "Who am I, that I should go unto Pharaoh?" Peter was at first reluctant to obey Jesus.

But Moses and Peter overcame their doubts, and changed the course of history.

Favor Limit Of 12 Years

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — A solid majority of American voters, 60 per cent, now favor a law that would limit U.S. Senators and Representatives to a maximum of 12 years in office.

The proportion in favor of a limit on the time in office for Senators is up sharply since 1971, when the figure was 48 per cent. (The question on U.S. Representatives was not asked in the earlier survey.)

Although the upward trend is across-the-board with all major population groups, it is most pronounced among younger, better-educated voters.

Sen. John C. Danforth (R.-Mo.) recently proposed a Constitutional Amendment to limit Senators and Representatives to 12 years of service.

Data May Reflect Poor Image Of Congress

The sharp upturn in support for a limit on the terms of office of U.S. Senators may be, in part, a reflection of their unfavorable public image. A recent Gallup survey showed both Senators and Representatives rated relatively low among a list of persons in 20 occupations in terms of honesty and ethical standards.

Another Gallup survey showed only 35 per cent of the public saying they approve of the way the U.S. Congress is handling its job.

Here is the question and the trend:

"A law has been proposed which would limit a Senator to two terms, or a total of 12 years in office. Would you favor or oppose such a law?"

Presidential Advocates

The plan to limit Senators to two terms of six years each has been advocated by at least two Presidents — Dwight D. Eisenhower and Harry S. Truman.

Eisenhower stated the case for the two term limitation in his book, "Waging Peace": "If Senators were limited to two terms of six years, each man so serving would tend to think of his congressional career as an important and exciting interlude in his life, a period dedicated to the entire public, rather than as a way of making a living, or making a career of exercising continuous political power. Possibly, each would spend less time keeping his eyes on the next election, and more in centering them on the good of the nation. A more rapid turnover in the membership of both Houses with its constant infusion of new blood would largely eliminate the 'career politician' in Congress." Political scientists and others point to the fact that unlimited terms for U.S. Senators perpetuate this seniority system, whereby key legislative positions are filled on the basis of length of service and not necessarily ability. The chief opposition to a two-term limitation comes from those who feel that this plan would shorten the tenure of many Senators who have had distinguished careers in government, and that government today is so complex that it takes many years for a Senator to familiarize himself with the labyrinth of government agencies and departments and the legislative process. The results reported today are based on in-person interviews with 1,523 adults, 18 and older, taken in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period Nov. 4-7.

terest. The lure were grants of up to $25,000.

Most of the money awarded is for feasibility studies, to be spent over a four-to-six-month period, culminating in a report of results.

If the results are promising, a company can then apply for a second-stage grant, in which it might receive much larger sums, $100,000 or more, to develop a prototype.

But there is a contingency to this second stage. Part of the plan is to bring in private capital, and so an element in choosing award winners at this point is the readiness of private capital sources to carry on from there.

The fact that government financing will have brought the project through its most difficult formative stage is expected to provide strong reassurance to private financiers, who sometimes aren't noted for their assumption of risk.

The plan, says Stewart, "Makes a small amount do a lot of work. It sets a precedent to be applied on a government wide basis. It's a model."

No hands grubbing for a handout, he said. No wasting of taxpayer money. No competition with private enterprises. And perhaps most important, he indicated, "the government doesn't call the shots."

than domestic cattle. Kersch said the fur is often sold after the animal has been slaughtered for the beef.

The first group of beefalo carcasses to be rated by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's carcass data service show the hybrid beef-bison animals have yield grades between 1.0 and 2.0 and an average dressing percentage of 62, he said.

Kersch said the advantages of beefalo are economic. Like the buffalo, it grows much faster than ordinary cattle and thrives on grass rather than expensive grain feed.

The meat costs as much as 40 percent less than beef per pound. Some 300,000 or more beefalo now exist, all of them derived from Basolo's original strain.

Safe on the ground? Not quite. Remember it had gotten below freezing in Greenville in the meantime. Somehow the sprinkler system had come on at the airport and the water was freezing up on the ground. Some of those disembarking nearly slipped.

Fortunately the basketball Pirates next game was played at home last Thursday night.

A Conservative View

Our World Is Not One For The Bush-Leaguers

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

These are times of acute embarrassment for some of the old professionals of the press who work their beats on Embassy Row. First in the Middle East, then in Rhodesia, important events have passed them by. In the eyes of the world, the United States has been made to look, in the scornful word: bush.

The metaphor comes out of baseball. You have the major leagues, the minor leagues, and the bush leagues. On the playing fields of diplomacy, the same rules apply. Some leaders have class; some don't. The painful impression becomes more vivid with every passing month: The Carter team is little more than a bunch of thumb-fingered sandlotters who couldn't hit their way out of a wet paper bag. No wonder the old timers are wincing.

Let me speak especially to the matter of Rhodesia, for Rhodesia is a matter I know nothing about. Before I visited Rhodesia, for the first time, ten years ago, I read great stacks of books on Africa — history, biography, treatises on tribal customs and tongues. When I set foot in Salisbury, I truly believed I knew something of Africa. What I began to discover was the depth of my ignorance.

A second visit enlarged upon the first. A third unveiled areas of uncomprehension barely sketched before. After a decade of trying to master something of Africa, I am still in the sub-basement of learning, and not even at the threshold. Old China hands tell me that not even the inscrutable Orient presents difficulties more complex than those of the dark continent.

Enter now Jimmy Carter of Georgia, accompanied by those eminent statesmen, Fritz Mondale and Andrew Young. The three of them swaggered into African affairs like three bush-league rubes on a beat-up bus. They had the help of Senator Dick Clark, the senior ignoramus from Iowa. Mr. Mondale brayed about "one man, one vote." Ambassador Flapjaw traveled about the continent, regaling his hosts with tales of how he worked things out in Alabama; and the ambassador did not understand why his hosts gave him such peculiar looks.

In the matter of Rhodesia, Ambassador Young had a great idea. It came to him in the middle of the night. This was his idea: The Ian Smith government in Salisbury would surrender wholesale, in a kind of abject capitulation, to an exiled gang of terrorists, looters, arsonists, and plain opportunists led by Joshua Nkomo, an old Marxist hand whose principal qualification for high office is his total contempt for the democratic process. The ambassador pressed this marvelous idea upon Messrs. Carter and Mondale, and they were captivated by it.

The British, who are rather more concerned with Rhodesian affairs than Mr. Carter could possibly be, regarded Mr. Young's stroke of brilliance with public equanimity and private consternation. Some subtle diplomacy, involving Rhodesian elections among other matters, continued between London and Salisbury. Certain overtures were made of the Rev. Ndabaninghi Sithole, a key figure in all this. Other moves were made toward Bishop Abel Muzorewa, to see if he and Sithole might be brought together. Weeks of careful maneuvering led to Ian Smith's statement of November 24, saying that his government is now prepared "to accept the principle of majority rule, based on adult suffrage."

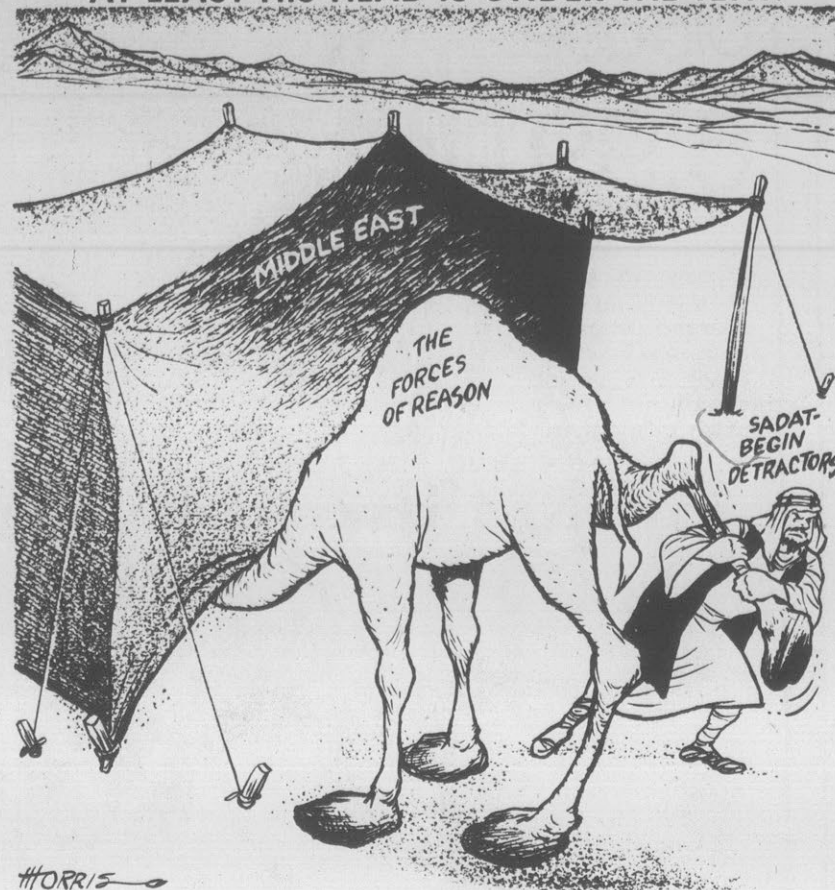

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance — remember him? — was brought in on some of these developments, but Vance is little more than an old utility infielder who spends most of his time drowsing in the dugout. Vance could not communicate to the White House any sense of immediacy. The train left the station with the Hon. Jimmy still on the platform. Smith made his statement. The British promptly responded with modest encouragement. Conferences already have begun among the principals. Maybe events more forward.

I say "maybe" out of a sure sense of ignorance. Smith's principle of majority rule may not be the same principle that Sithole and Muzorewa have in mind. Ten thousand details will have to be worked out. But if, six months or a year from now, a transition of power takes place that preserves white capital, know-how, influence and safety, Rhodesia will have provided a model for a prosperous multi-racial Africa. The important thing is for Mr. Carter to keep his clumsy hands off the ball. Africa is the bush country, but it is no place for bush leaguers.

Fearless Audrey Higgs Never Shirked A Cause

STAUNTON, Va. — "All my life I've fought injustice," says Audrey Blackford Higgs, 73, a native West Virginian who now lives in Staunton, Virginia. Since the age of five when she fearlessly berated a burly blacksmith for beating a cow, Mrs. Higgs has devoted herself to a variety of humanitarian causes, including women's rights and the fight against tyranny in mental institutions.

When she was a child, she says, she noted that the unhappy, fearful of men and society, and she vowed at that time that "no man would ever tell me how to live my life, and that I would never, never show fear to a man." Consequently she took a stand that remained highly unpopular for many years, but one in which she firmly believes: that of equal rights for women.

"I've testified for women in divorce cases when I felt they were unjustly treated," she says. "I believe my standing with them helped." And once, when a neighborhood drunkard beat his daughter, Audrey Higgs, thoroughly infuriated when she heard the news, marched to the man's house and verbally lambasted him. True to her creed, she displayed no fear and so completely shamed the fellow that he began to cry. Shortly thereafter he left the neighborhood entirely.

"It was better for all concerned," she says of the man's desertion. "His family got along fine after that."

Her "longest and saddest struggle" has been the befriending of patients at Western State Hospital in Staunton, an endeavor which has made her unpopular in local political circles, and, at one point, seriously endangered her own welfare.

As a visiting church worker to the hospital in the mid 1930s, Mrs. Higgs learned that many of the patients in the institution didn't need to be there at all. She saw people who could, with a little help, return to a productive life on the outside. Thus began her campaign to free those whose mental health would allow it.

"It was a very tough thing to extract these people from the hospital because the rule was that only the person who had put them in could get them out."

She conferred with relatives of the healthier patients and talked a few of them into helping her. Whenever she managed to pry a patient loose from the grip of the institution, she aided that person in obtaining employment and a place to live.

Angola from Namibia Oct. 27 to fight "a fairly significant action" along the border that might have involved troops of Angola's ruling Marxist regime, headed by Agostinho Neto, as well as Namibian guerrillas. The hint: that South Africa's incursion makes Castro less culpable for his own intervention.

Yet the South African incursion was not mentioned at all when Mr. Carter's White House ended its silence and started blowing the trumpet against Castro.

Some critics attribute these disagreements over policy — and over the facts on which policy is based — on Jimmy Carter's own lack of ideological commitment. But considering that Young told us he and Brzezinski never have had a serious exchange of views on the size of Castro's Angolan involvement, the President's ideological neutrality can't be entirely blamed.

She remembers those prereform years when the hospital administration disliked her intensely and attempted to block her efforts. When this happened she enlisted the aid of lawyers to help with the drive to free those patients who did not belong in the institution. The process was agonizingly slow at times; for instance, it once took her three years to liberate one patient from the hospital.

It was around this time that several patients at Western State expressed concern for her safety. She recalls that the patients were afraid that the hospital authorities would commit her because she was making so much trouble for them.

"It was a very real danger," she says. "In those days it was easy to get committed and I was on highly unfavorable terms with the entire hospital."

As a countermeasure she and a friend drove to Washington, D.C., and consulted Justice Department officials. From that moment on, she always carried a Justice Department telephone number in case she was spirited away to the institution.

"When it became known that I was protected to the hilt by the Justice Department in Washington, my safety was assured."

As a member of the Staunton Women's Club, and by working hand-in-hand with area ministers, she continued to battle the injustice of any kind, the old anger arises and, "Mrs. Higgs chuckles, 'I'm right in the thick of it in no time at all.'"

Someday We Will Learn All The Sales Gimmicks

Every year some Greenville department store manager creates a new gimmick for his After-Thanksgiving sale.

Last year it was the "hour-by-hour" sale. One store advertised that different sets of merchandise would be on sale for fantastic prices for one hour only. Particularly interesting to me was a sale from 8 p.m. to 9 p.m. on beautiful turtleneck sweaters for $3.00 each. So I showed up at 7:30 and took my place in line beside the sweaters and ten or 15 other women, all of whom were behaving in a friendly, civilized manner.

Our failure to damage even one display rack or to rip the dress off the salesgirl who asked those few women who were hoarding sweaters to return them to the rack did not go unnoticed. In no time at all the manager appeared, transferred all the sweaters to a movable rack, and took them away in a huff, complaining that our behavior wasn't in keeping with the spirit of the sale. He did promise to bring them back at 8:00.

But he didn't. What he did was to wheel them out at precisely 8:00 and leave them at the other end of the store. That was when pandemonium broke loose. The 30 women now waiting stampeded for the rack, and 20 more joined them. One woman threw off her high heels and ran the length of the store barefoot over a shoe display. When I crawled out from the fray, I had two sweaters, size two, one sweater designed as a maternity blouse for the Statue of Liberty, three crushed toes, a jammed finger, and two loose teeth.

This year another store took up the "hour-by-hour" sale theme and added another cute little twist — balloons with certificates entitling the bearer to buy items at reduced cost would be thrown periodically off the roof of the store.

"Would you look at this?" I told Phillip, handing him the advertisement. "I wonder how many suckers are going to stand out in the cold chasing balloons just to buy air freshener at a reduced price?"

"But did you see THIS?", he said with his mouth watering. "They're selling a color TV for $25."

"And there's only one to sell," I sniffed. "Those are worse odds than for those stupid sweaters I bought last year."

Phillip didn't say anything, but after we had taken our own "on-the-blink" television to the shop and before we were due for a lunch date, he pulled into the store's parking lot and ushered me to the balloon "drop", assuring me that we had some time to kill.

"I really don't want to get involved in this," I protested as Phillip pushed me into a crowd of expectant 9 to 13 year olds. "I've got on my good clothes. Besides, this whole thing is degrading."

"Aren't you willing to risk it," he said, "for a COLOR TV?"

"No." I screamed as the crowd closed in around me and he stepped back. "Where are YOU going?!"

"Somebody's got to hold Meg."

Just then the men threw the balloons, and I had to put up my arms in order to redirect 17 elbows aimed at my head. And I caught six balloons.

"Great! Six certificates. That should give us an edge on that TV!" said Phillip.

"I don't think so," I sighed, hugging my broken high heel and examining the five different flavors of handprints on my previously winter white cashmere coat. "They're all marked for specific things."

"Like what?" he said. "A new stereo? I could fork over $25 for a stereo. Is it something big?"

"Sure it is," I said. "Six different scents of air freshener at 10 cents apiece, a cleaning bill for a coat, and a new pair of shoes. Now don't you think these sales are FUN?"

He groaned. "How did I ever let you get me into this?"

Best Course, A Confession From The Losers

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

AP Special Correspondent
RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP)

— Far be it from me to tell the District Attorney of San Francisco how to run his office or to doubt what Olympic decathlon champion Bruce Jenner has for breakfast, but it would seem that the consumer fraud squad is going about the Wheaties investigation the wrong way.

They should bring a confession from the losers, not the winners.

I ate the breakfast of champions for years as a kid and I never was a champion anything.

Like Bruce Jenner, I don't have the boxtops to prove it, but I really did send away to General Mills for all those wonderful premiums: the Junior Gman handcuffs, the yo-yo that lit up, the secret dog whistle that was so high-pitched my dog never heard it.

I "downed a lot of Wheaties," as Bruce Jenner says on TV, in preparation for a lifetime of athletic failures, and "I never did hit a 'Wheaties blast,'" as Red Barber always called it whenever Dixie Walker put one into the bleachers in Ebbets Field.

In fact, I never even made the varsity baseball team at Cathedral High in Brooklyn, which didn't win a single game in my four years. The main reason the coach cut me on the first day of practice up in Prospect Park was that I was too fat from stacking my plate high with Wheaties in cream topped off, Jenner-style, with peaches and banana slices.

The coach said his charts showed that at my weight I ought to be six feet four instead of five feet nine, so I figured basically I had a height problem. Anyhow, I did make our local sandlot team, the Owls, which we originally called the Golden Eagles until the front office, which was really located in the back of Mrs. Myers' candy store, found out that the felt letters to paste on the uniform shirts cost 6 cents apiece at Mancelbaum's sports store on Steinway Street.

After making the team, I doubled my input of Wheaties, and actually got into a game one day when the first string catcher had scarlatina and the second stringer broke his thumb trying to hold onto a splitter that almost drowned him.

My father was coming home from work just as I got a ninthinning rally going by getting hit by a pitched ball. I got so excited waving at him, the pitcher picked me off on the first throw. The next afternoon, the same thing almost happened to Dolph Camille, only he redeemed himself and won a case of Wheaties by belting one into the parking lot.

I used to wonder what Dolph and Dixie did with all those cases of Wheaties, seeing what the rats did to the bin of potatoes in our basement, but after I moved to Boston and matured a bit, I grew less rather than more cynical. I never doubted that Ted Williams, Johnny Pesky and the other Red Sox had any problems getting rid of those cases of Narragansett beer.

But thanks to Wheaties, I once did win something. I won a part in the third-grade health pageant at St. Patrick's school in Long Island City. Let the record show I played Fatty Tissues, a heavy, while the star outfielder on the Owls had a walk-on as Vitamin C.

Later in life, when I changed my morning fare to a bloody mary at Toots Shor's around noon, I could look across the room and see Mickey Mantle, Billy Martin and Whitey Ford brunching on amber fluids that I knew without my secret wrist radio were not concentrated Wheaties.

One day I read in a sports anthology about Babe Ruth downing a dozen hot dogs and a half case of beer in the interval between a doubleheader in Baltimore, along with some clam cakes, corn on the cob and potato chips, and I wasn't shocked at all.

I guess I never did believe that before every fight Sugar Ray Robinson sent over to a slaughter house on Tenth Avenue for a bucket of bull's blood, or that Two-Ton Tony Galento trained with a keg of beer next to the punching bag at Stillman's. But they may have.

Last week in Manhattan I watched a mini-motorcycle cop give a parking ticket to a Cadillac owner outside his shoe store on Madison Avenue. "So do me a favor," he told the officer, "Next time go up to Central Park and catch yourself a mugger. Leave the taxpayers alone." I don't know why it made me think of Bruce Jenner and the Frisco D.A.

'Beat The Peak' Volunteer Load Program

ed for 90 per cent of the demand for the next 11 months, whether the power is used or not.

Through the load management program, the summer peak can be lowered in 1978, resulting in more stabilized electric power costs and a slowdown in the rising cost of electricity.

GUC is asking its residential customers who have electric water heaters and central air conditioning or heat pumps to volunteer for the program by allowing licensed electrical contractors to install a control switch on these appliances, at no cost to the customer.

Green said some 5,000 of the switches will be installed in the first phase of the program — beginning about February. The switches cost $67 each and installation costs have been estimated at $15 each.

Both Helms and Green noted that during the first part of the project, only homes with electric water heaters and central air conditioning or heat pumps will be accepted for participation in the program. They said installation of two switches at one location at the same time will make it easier to place "Beat the Peak" into operation.

Most of the time, according to Helms, the switches will do nothing. Only during peak periods will load management go into effect — only a few hours out of a few days of the year.

Green explained that when a pre-determined demand or peak is reached on the GUC system, monitoring equipment will send out special FM radio signals which will interrupt the flow of electrical current to the appliances equipped with the control switches.

For central air conditioners or heat pumps equipped with the control switches, the compressor will be cut off for 7½ minutes out of every half-hour, Green explained. The switches will not affect the operation of the fan, which will continue to keep the air in the home circulating, he added.

Green noted that shutting off air conditioning compressors for 7½ minutes should have no adverse effect on the level of humidity.

Controlled water heaters, Green said, will be cycled on and off in 30 minute intervals for the duration of the peak period, which typically lasts from four to six hours.

He noted that the typical water heater runs only about 50 per cent of the time. "We're just saying when it can't run," Green explained.

Helms said in Red Springs and in similar programs in Georgia, Ohio and in other areas, the customer experiences little, if any, discomfort. "In most cases," he said, "customers are not aware when the program is in operation."

Helms explained that the "Beat the Peak" program is not an energy conservation program, although GUC's Office of Energy Conservation and Management is administering the project. Instead, it is a program designed to reduce the peak energy demand on the GUC distribution system.

Volunteers participating in the program won't use any less electricity (even though they will receive discounts totaling $30 during the four summer months), Helms said, but they will be helping "Beat the Peak" which will result in substantial savings in wholesale power costs, which in turn, will benefit all Greenville Utilities customers.

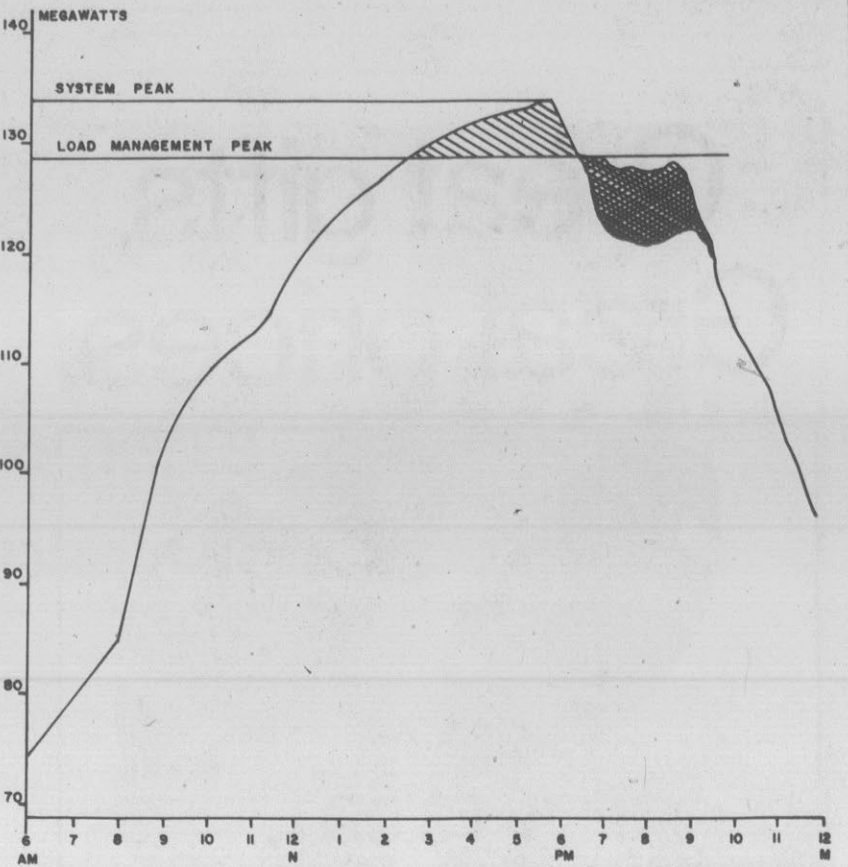

Green said that technically the system is a dual system including two elementary systems, two programmers and two transmitters, providing a back-up system in case one fails to operate.

The system, he said, will control four water heater zones and four zones for air conditioners and heat pumps. The zones will operate normally on a rotating basis, although in an emergency situation, all zones could be activated at one time.

The switches installed in the homes Green described as "fail-safe", explaining that although a radio signal is required to open the switch and cut the appliance off, the switch will close itself and cut the appliance on again.

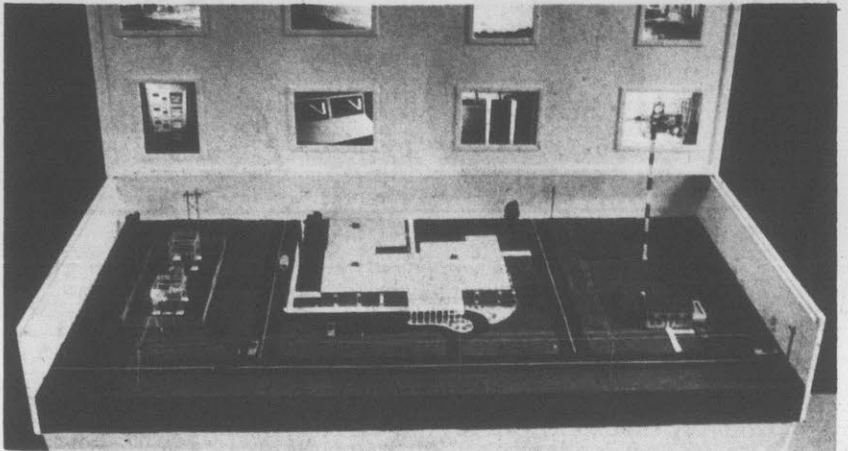

Green said the system could be used in the case of a "big energy crisis" like the one the GUC system faced last winter when the utility was forced to cut entire circuits off on a rotating basis when VEPCO experienced problems caused by the intense cold weather.

In a situation such as that, according to Green, customers might have to do without hot water, but at least they would have lights and heat.

"BEAT THE PEAK" — This graph provided by the Greenville Utilities Commission illustrates the five megawatt demand reduction programmed for the commission's load management program. The 5 mw peak at the top of the graph would be shaved by turning off water heaters and air conditioning units in cycles. Thus the demand could be transferred to a later period — represented by the darker area at the top of the graph — when the normal usage of power would not be as great.

will then transmit signals through antennas to the switches mounted on water heaters and air conditioning units in volunteer homes (right) to control their operations and reduce the peak demand. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Helpers Needed

Nancy Harrington, coordinator of Volunteer Greenville, a city agency which recruits volunteers for various purposes, announced the following service needs:

- Volunteers to help with clerical work at various agencies;
- Volunteers still needed to help tape textbooks for blind students;
- Volunteers needed to help with arts and crafts activities; and
- A volunteer needed to visit disabled lady in her home.

Persons who wish to volunteer or those wishing more information on volunteer opportunities should call Mrs. Harrington at 752-4137, Ext. 285.

Adopt-A-Pet

"Puppy" and Caesar need new homes. Their owners are having to give them away because the husband is going into the Navy and the number of pets that may be taken along to a duty station is limited.

"Puppy" is a long-haired black spayed female. She not quite a year old and is loving and protective with children. Caesar, the larger of the two, is a three-fourths collie, one fourth shepherd male. He's about 18 months old and is very energetic and affectionate.

The family also has two male cats they need to give away. One is gold-colored and is used to living both indoors and outdoors. A solid black one is more of a housecat.

Humane Society President Jeanette Fiore is the person to call if one wishes to adopt a pet. Her phone number is 758-0468. Reduced fee spaying certificates will be given with all these animals upon request, Mrs. Fiore says.

Jeff McAllister Named Aging Council Coordinator

Jeff McAllister is the new program coordinator of the Pitt County Council on Aging.

An Ayden resident, he is looking forward to the opening of the new Pitt County Senior Citizens Center to be located in the nurses' home-education building on the old Pitt Memorial Hospital grounds. He is currently involved in trying to reach as many Pitt Countians 59 and over as possible and will be using Social Security roles and other means for doing this. He wants every person in this age range to know about the services offered here and how they can avail themselves of them as they need them.

The senior citizens' program is operating under Title III of the Older Americans' Act, he said, and is a three-year matching funds program. It's budget is small, but adequate at the present time, he said. All activities will be planned so they can be turned over to other agencies and groups as the three years draw to a close.

Transportation efforts are to be coordinated with the Department of Social Services; the Hypertension (high blood pressure) detection program with the hospital and the mental health center; and the services referral with the Pitt County Information Center, which is a service of Sheppard Memorial Library.

There are between 9,000 and 10,000 persons 59 and older in Pitt County, McAllister said, and the number, here as everywhere in the U. S., grows each year.

A Dinwiddie, Va. native, McAllister served in the U. S. Navy for 23 years and then worked for The Voice of America for a number of years. VoA brought him to Pitt County, where he enrolled in East Carolina University and got an undergraduate degree in sociology in 1976. A widower with five children, aged 14 to 23, he is engaged to and plans to marry Mary Ellen Jackson soon. He is a Sunday School teacher and a choir member in the Ayden Christian Church.

Coronation

Brilliantly colored blue and yellow flags and gold imperial eagle banners flew over Bangui today as the impoverished Central African Empire completed more than six months of preparations for the coronation of self-proclaimed Emperor Bokassa I.

The 56-year-old Bokassa, the son of a minor tribal chief and a former sergeant in the French army, will crown himself emperor today in a ceremony befitting Bokassa's "guide and inspiration," Napoleon Bonaparte.

Several foreign delegations have already arrived in the capital of the landlocked nation of 2 million for what will be one of post-colonial Africa's most colorful and elaborate ceremonies. Diplomatic sources say the coronation is costing some $30 million.

Housing Authority To Meet Monday

The regular meeting of the Greenville Housing Authority will be held Monday, Dec. 4 at 7:30 p.m. at the Authority's 316 Roundtree Drive central offices.

Commissioners will consider routine reports concerning finance, occupancy and status reports on the various projects in development.

BEAT THE PEAK

A Program Designed to Save Money on Electric Power Costs

WHY IS GREENVILLE UTILITIES UNDERTAKING A LOAD MANAGEMENT PROGRAM?

Because wholesale power costs are continuing to rise, and there is something we can do about it. In 1973, Greenville Utilities paid $2.36 for each kilowatt of peak demand. By 1975, the cost had risen to $3.76 per kilowatt. By 1980, we will be paying about $6.70 per kilowatt of demand.

It's not only how much electricity we use that determines our power costs but when we use it. And during certain times of the year, a lot of folks want a lot of electricity — all at the same time.

Peak Demand, which usually occurs during the hottest part of the summer, is the greatest amount of electrical energy, or "Load," used at one time throughout the Greenville Utilities electrical system. Peak demand is costly. Very costly.

Greenville Utilities purchases all of the electric power needed to serve our area from Virginia Electric Power Company. And, because VEPCO must be able to supply the peak amount of power our electric system demands, we incur additional power costs that could be reduced or even eliminated if we could control our peak.

It all adds up to Dollars — and Energy — that can be saved by better managing our electrical load and holding down the peak.

HOW WILL THE BEAT THE PEAK PROJECT WORK?

The Load Management program will work only with the help and cooperation of our customers — those who volunteer to participate.

Since central air conditioning units and electric water heaters are two of the biggest energy users in the home, we can help hold down the peak by temporarily interrupting the flow of electrical current to these appliances. This is accomplished by installing radio-controlled switches which respond to special radio signals sent out from Greenville Utilities' central control station. The radio signal "tells" the switch to turn off the air conditioning compressor for 7 minutes while the fan continues to run. At the end of 7 minutes, the switch automatically restores electrical current to the compressor without the need of sending a second radio signal. The cycle is repeated every 30 minutes while the peak lasts.

A switch on the water heater works about the same way. A radio signal interrupts the current for approximately 30 minutes out of every hour during the peak period.

Peak demand periods are estimated to occur only 10 to 15 days per year and last for approximately 4 to 6 hours. Is the large capital investment which Greenville Utilities must make for this project really worth it, considering the few times the switches will actually be in operation during the year? You better believe it.

When we get our BEAT THE PEAK project in operation before the summer of '78, we should have saved $150,000 in wholesale power costs over the following 12 months. Even greater savings may be possible in later years, when more switches are in operation throughout our system.

WHAT HAPPENS TO WATER AND ROOM TEMPERATURES WHILE THE SWITCHES ARE IN THE "OFF" POSITION?

Practically nothing. Most water heater tanks, particularly those with a 52-gallon or more capacity, can store hot water for 4 hours or more with very little loss of heat. Room temperatures rise only one or two degrees during the 7-minute period that the air conditioning compressor is off.

WHO BENEFITS FROM A LOAD MANAGEMENT PROGRAM?

Everyone benefits. You, the customer benefit. Our community, our utilities system, and our wholesale power supplier benefit. Load management also makes an important contribution to our national energy conservation goals. Why does everyone benefit? Because:

- Wholesale power costs paid to VEPCO are reduced.
- Load Management savings are passed directly to participating customers.
- The need for more generating facilities may be postponed.
- The extra energy required to generate peak load electricity is saved.
- Systemwide blackouts caused by shortages at peak load times can be avoided.

There's something in it for everyone when a utility system and its customers team up to BEAT THE PEAK.

HOW MUCH WILL CUSTOMERS SAVE ON THEIR UTILITY BILLS?

BEAT THE PEAK Volunteers will receive a $7.50 deduction from their June, July, August, and September utility bills for switches installed on electric water heaters and central air conditioners or heat pumps. A total of $30.00 for the four month period. In other words, we pay the customer $15.00 annually for controlled water heating and $15.00 annually for controlled central air conditioning.

WHY WILL THE NUMBER OF SWITCHES INSTALLED BEFORE THE SUMMER OF '78 BE LIMITED TO 2,500 GREENVILLE RESIDENCES?

Because time and money will not permit us to install more. This is unfortunate because installing more switches would enable us to manage more electrical load and further reduce our wholesale power costs.

Each year more switches will be installed, paid for in part by the savings we realize from Load Management. Eventually, more than 20,000 radio-controlled switches will be in operation throughout our electrical system.

It's a big project. It will take time and money. And cooperation. When you volunteer to help BEAT THE PEAK, you can take pride in the fact that you'll be doing a lot more than signing up to receive a monthly credit on your utility bill. You'll be helping to minimize future rate increases. You'll also be helping to conserve our nation's scarce energy resources. Now, that's something to be proud of!

ECU Choruses In Christmas Program

Three East Carolina University choruses will combine to present an evening of Christmas music at 8:15 p.m. Monday, Dec. 5 in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall.

The Men's Glee Club, directed by Max Galloway; the University Chorale, directed by Dr. Charles W. Moore; and The Women's Glee Club, directed by Edward Glenn, are the three choruses to be performing.

Compositions to be sung by The Men's Glee Club are Lo, How a Rose E'er Blooming, Still, Still, and a whimsical song by ECU music student Duke Ladd of Wilmington, Christmas in 3/4 Time.

The University Chorale will perform secular pieces from the madrigal repertoire, several folk songs, a medley of Christmas songs, and a popular song, Chestnuts Roasting by an Open Fire.

Soloists with The Women's Glee Club are Ann Gunn of Durham and Cynthia Staley of Kannapolis. Accompanists will be Robin Porter and Annemarie Lalik. The offering of The Women's Glee Club will include a wide variety of Christmas music.

The program is without charge and the public is invited to attend.

Faculty Members To Be On TV Show

Women in politics, film censorship and the role of America in the Vietnam war will be discussed this month by three East Carolina University faculty members on Twelve At Noon, an interview show broadcast live over television station WCTI, Channel 12, New Bern.

Josh Humphreys, host for the show, will interview the three and will accept telephone comments from viewers during the broadcasts.

The three ECU faculty guests and the dates they will appear are:

— Janice Faulkner, Tuesday, Dec. 6 — A member of the Department of English, Ms. Faulkner is a founder of the N. C. Women's Political Caucus and is active in the Democratic Party. She will discuss the influence of American women on political life during the past several years.

— Dr. William Stephenson, Wednesday, Dec. 14 — Also a member of the English Department, Stephenson is a writer of film reviews and essays for national and European magazines. He will speak on current trends in popular films, public morality and censorship.

— Dr. Robert Gowan, Monday, Dec. 19 — On the faculty of the Department of History, Dr. Gowan is a specialist in Asian history. He will analyze American participation in and withdrawal from the Vietnam war.

pianist Michael Alvey, percussionist Eddie Asten, bassist Jim Heyl and guitarist Jerry Walters.

Music to be performed includes a composition by Dunbar, as well as music by Launy Grondahl, Marvin Lamb, A. A. Schwadron, and Stjepan Sulek.

There is no admission charge and the public is invited.

Broussard Recital Tonight

Trombonist George Broussard, a member of the ECU School of Music faculty, will give a recital at 8:15 p.m. today in the A. J. Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall.

Broussard will be assisted by pianist Gerald Dunbar, trombonists Benny Ferguson, Andy Gilbert and Joe Kasmak, clarinetist Sherry Broussard, Completes Work Experience

East Carolina University art student Denise Pace of Norfolk, Va. has completed several weeks of work experience as a designer with the Galleon Esplanade at Nags Head.

The internship was provided by the ECU Cooperative Education Office, a campus agency which arranges for students to undertake a period of actual work experience to enhance their classroom studies.

Writing Classes To Begin

Two eight weeks sessions of creative writing classes, sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, are beginning this week.

Both classes will be taught by Don Ball, and will be held at the Senior Citizens Center, corner of Fourth and Green Streets. One series of classes will begin on Monday, Dec. 5; the second series will begin on Wednesday, Dec. 7. Hours are 7 to 8:30 p.m. on both nights.

The lessons classes are open to adults and there is no fee.

Captain McCarthy In Marathon

Capt. John J. McCarthy (USMCR) of Greensboro recently ran a 26-mile, 385 yard marathon race sponsored by the Marine Corps and held in Washington, D.C.

The international marathon included runners from over the United States and several foreign countries. Capt. McCarthy, 30, placed in the top 20 percent. There were 3,400 entries in the race.

McCarthy, formerly of Greenville, is the son of Mrs. Juanita McCarthy and the late John J. McCarthy.

Elect Gospel Officers

Roy L. Honeycutt III was elected president of the Greenville Chapter of Full Gospel Business men's Fellowship at a recent meeting.

Honeycutt, a native of Greenville, follows John Montgomery who held the position since 1975. Honeycutt will begin his duties as president on Monday night at the monthly chapter dinner meeting at the American Legion Building, Col. Charles E. Thompson of Cherry Point will speak at 7:30 p.m. Dinner will be served at 6:45. The public is invited to attend.

Big Returns For A Bumper U.S. Sunflower Crop

By GERALD KOPPLIN
MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — A bumper sunflower crop produced this fall by North Dakota and Minnesota farmers is being exported to Europe where housewives use it for oil under a process developed by the Russians.

Europeans buy 90 percent of U.S.-grown sunflowers and crush the seed for an oil that produces a high quality margarine. The weed-like plant is native to North America.

Few Americans are aware of the oil-producing sunflower plant. Most people feed sunflowers to their pet birds or eat the seeds at ball games.

The U.S. sunflower market is still in its infant stage, said Herb Steed of Cargill, Inc., which produces hybrid planting seed varieties and processes sunflower oil for export. Minneapolis and Seattle are two areas where sunflower products are being tested for consumer interest.

"People really bought the sunflower margarine, especially in quarter-pound packages," said Joyce Steele of Minneapolis' Red Owl, a regional supermarket group. "That indicates that people are trying it."

But, she said sunflower oil was more expensive and, while preferred by gourmet cooks, it hasn't caught on yet with housewives.

Margarine is usually made from soybean or corn oils, both low in undesirable fats. Sunflower oil is the lowest in those fats, but the oil still is more costly.

Grower Marvin Klevberg of Northwood, N.D., who has raised sunflowers for 20 years, predicted last spring that sunflowers would return $50 to $60 an acre more than wheat. His prediction was low for Everett Solheim who farms near Crookston, Minn., in the bountiful Red River Valley between North Dakota and Minnesota.

"I guess I'll have to say this year the sunflowers made quite a bit more an acre," said Solheim, who planted 900 acres to wheat and switched 200 acres from barley to sunflowers.

It was a wise choice. Barley produces about 60 bushels and acre and sells at $1.50 a bushel for a gross profit of $90 an acre, he said.

By contrast, sunflowers on Solheim's farm produced a bumper crop of 2,200 pounds an acre and sold at an average price of 10 cents a pound, more than $200 an acre profit before expenses. A 1,100-pound per acre crop is good.

"My only machinery investment was a new $3,700 header for my combine," Solheim said. "I had the rest."

Steed noted that sunflowers "historically have been a very good cash crop in the Red River Valley, even when wheat prices are good. Part of the reason is a good market channel."

The sunflowers are trucked 300 miles to Duluth, Minn., for bulk export by Great Lakes ships to Europe. Minneapolis also is a hub for sunflower oil processing.

North Dakota production went from 400,000 acres in the early 1970s to 600,000 last year and doubled to 1.2 million acres this year. In Minnesota, acreage rose from 214,000 acres last year to 460,000 acres in 1977.

Nearby South Dakota farmers produced 180,000 acres of sunflowers this year. Texas had 250,000 acres.

But Kansas, known as the sunflower state, had only about 30,000 acres in sunflowers, according to a USDA official.

Now Require Bride Test For Rubella

In addition to the medical examination and laboratory statement required of marriage license applicants in the past, all female applicants will be required to have a rubella immunity test in order to obtain a license on or after January 1, 1978.

Pitt County Register of Deeds Elvira Allred said Friday that the additional requirement was enacted into law by the 1977 General Assembly.

Mrs. Allred noted that although the change in the requirements for a marriage license does not become effective until January 1, any certificate completed for a female applicant in December and submitted to the Register of Deeds' office on or after January 1, must contain a certification that a rubella immunity test has been administered.

According to Mrs. Allred, there is no time restriction on when the rubella immunity test was administered. For example, she said, "If a female applicant had a rubella immunity test performed five years ago, the new statute does not require that the test be repeated."

She noted, however, the time restriction of 30 days on syphilis blood testing will continue as in the past.

Mrs. Allred noted that revised application forms—containing space for the rubella immunity test certification—are available from the Register of Deeds' office or from the Pitt County Health Department.

Holiday Events At Edenton

EDENTON — Holiday season events in the historic town of Edenton this year include traditional 18th century Christmas greenery and other decorations used in the town's historic places.

Another event is the third annual wassail celebration to be held at Edenton's 1775 Cupola House on Tuesday, Dec. 6 from 5 to 7 p.m. The celebration will feature wassail prepared by an old recipe, and carols and traditional songs will be sung.

During the holiday season, visitors can see decorations beginning Tuesday, Dec. 6 through Dec. 31. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays, and 1 to 5 p.m. Sundays. Houses are closed on Mondays and from Dec. 23-26 for Christmas.

The public is invited.

Graduates From Patrol School

David Nichols Jr. of Greenville has graduated from the N. C. Highway Patrol Sixth Telecommunicator School in Raleigh.

He was first in a class of 22, having made the only perfect score during the training session. Because of this distinction, he spoke to students and guests during a banquet held the night before graduation.

Nichols graduated from Belvoir-Falkland High School and he attended East Carolina University before becoming a member of the Highway Patrol.

Drama Team To Appear Today

The Academy of Arts Christian Players will appear at People's Baptist Temple on Sunday, Dec. 4, at 11 a.m.

The Greenville, S.C. Drama Team is touring the eastern United States.

Admission is free and the public is invited.

Engineers Will Meet Dec. 8

The Northeastern Tarheel Chapter of the American Institute of Industrial Engineers will hold its December meeting on Thursday, December 8, at 6:30 p.m. The meeting will be held at the King and Queen Restaurant on Greenville Boulevard.

The guest speaker will be D. E. Pecot, plant manager at the Union Carbide Plant in Greenville. Pecot will talk about the Union Carbide Corporation.

Interested persons are encouraged to attend. Information on membership and chapter activities may be obtained by contacting D. Pitts at 758-3436.

A CHRISTMAS CAROL — For the third consecutive year, Raleigh's Theater in the Park will present a musical adaptation of the Dickens classic, "A Christmas Carol." Ira David Wood is featured as Scrooge. The play will be shown at 3 p.m. on Sundays and at 8:15 each night. Dates of performance are Dec. 7 through 11, and Dec. 13 through 18. Admission is $2.50 for students and $4 for adults.

Art Fund Drive For New Building

RALEIGH — Joseph C. Sloane, chairman of the North Carolina Art Commission, has issued an appeal to North Carolinians to contribute to a drive to raise funds to complete the new North Carolina Museum of Art Building.

Sloane reports that the General Assembly has already appropriated $10.75 million toward the construction of the new facility, but that another $5 million is needed to complete the building as planned.

To achieve this, a drive has been launched to raise additional funds from private sources. In the first phase of this drive, contributions will be sought from corporations and foundations.

Already, Sloane reports, "We have gained a $1.5 million challenge grant from the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation, a grant which expires on December 31, 1978, so we must meet our goal by that date."

Sloane says "another phase of the campaign will commence with the New Year. The N.C. Art Society is organizing a county-by-county fund raising effort and will be seeking funds in any amount and from people from all walks of life because it is important that the museum be built on a foundation of broadly based public support."

The new museum building, Sloane comments, will be the best art museum in the South and will be "a fitting complement to the best art collection in the South."

Lecture Today

RALEIGH — Gilbert Carpenter, Director of the Weatherspoon Art Gallery, UNC-Greensboro, will lecture at 4 p.m. today on the "40th Annual N. C. Artists' Exhibition," currently on display at the N.C. Museum of Art.

There is no admission charge for the lecture and the public is invited to attend.

Playhouse Auditions

Auditions for the third production in the current season of the East Carolina Playhouse will be held on two dates, Thursday, Dec. 8 and Tuesday, Dec. 12.

Auditions on both dates will be from 7:30 to 10 p.m. in the Drama Department's Studio Theater.

The play, National Health, part satire and part life study of illness and the hospital routine, will be dedicated to ECU's new Medical School. Edgar E. R. Loessin will direct. The large cast calls for 16 men and 7 women. Loessin is urging non-students to attend the auditions, especially since there are several excellent roles for mature males.

Scripts of the play are on reserve in Joyner Library for study prior to auditioning. Persons desiring further information are to call 757-6390.

Symphony Concerts

GREENSBORO — The N. C. Symphony Orchestra is performing at 8:15 p.m. Monday in Aycock Auditorium on the campus of UNC-Greensboro in a program of Greco-French, Scottish and romantic music.

The concert will feature violinist Frank Gullino as guest soloist. Selections to be performed are the "Orchestral Suite No. 2" from Ravel's ballet music, Daphnis and Chloe; Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 3, the "Scotch" symphony; and Max Bruch's Concerto for Violin and Orchestra No. 1.

Admission is by season membership or by single tickets which will be available at the door.

The orchestra will also be in concert on Monday, Dec. 12 at the Rocky Mount Senior High School, at 8:15 p.m.

At that performance, guest soloist will be violinist Ruggiero Ricci, who will perform the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto. Season membership tickets will be honored for the Rocky Mount concert.

A Grand Disappointment

The movie biography of Rudolph Valentino now playing at the Buccaneer is a disappointment on a grand scale.

Ken Russell's Valentino is drenched in an avalanche of stereotyped references to the social milieu of the early 1920's and countless tired clichés of Hollywood in those early years. The movie never deals meaningfully with Valentino as a person.

It's a pity that the story of this legendary idol of the silent movies never has a chance to emerge above the desperate, disjointed chaos of shifting, conflicting viewpoints. The absence of any pattern of continuity also seriously mars the film.

If the intent of the movie's makers was to project a vivid sense of the mindless hysteria characteristically associated with the lost generation, they succeeded only in caricaturing this era — projecting instead what often becomes a pointless charade.

As Valentino, famed dancer Rudolph Nureyev struggles to overcome these obstacles, but he is never given a chance to bring a cohesive realization of the misfortunes, the torments and sorrows known to have beset the man's whose life was a striking example of rags to riches — simply because these factors are not delineated in the script. They are hinted at, then obscured or sacrificed to the endless tangents the film takes.

In dealing with the alleged dual sexual orientations of Valentino, the film never takes an honest stand. The subject is handled in a manner that vacillates between tasteless scenes and ambivalent implications.

Despite these shortcomings, there are some real compensations.

Nureyev's dancing is first rate, and the musical score is satisfying. Sets and costumes, which can best be described as late decadent art nouveau adapted to Hollywood, is striking if sometimes garish.

The best things in this film goes to the actresses — particularly Michelle Phillips and Carol Kane. Veteran Leslie

Cultural Directory Available

North Carolina Cultural Directory. Project Administrator Linda Haac, Graphic Design J. A. Brothers, Photography Cliff Haac, Raleigh, N.C. Arts Council, Dept. of Cultural Resources, Large format, paper, 222 pps' illustrated, $4.00

It's not the prettiest book to be published by one of North Carolina's state agencies, but the North Carolina Cultural Directory is definitely chock full of information that will be useful to some individuals and many organizations.

Sponsored by the N. C. Extension Homemakers Association, the N. C. Arts Council, and the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service, the book is the first comprehensive directory listing of cultural services, events, agencies, etc.

Information is carried under eight major sub-divisions — visual arts, craft, performing arts, literary arts, environmental art and design, service and promotion, education, and fairs and festivals.

In addition, there is a brief explanatory preface, a county index, subject alphabetical index, and last of all, a survey.

Within each division, detailed data is given Alphabetically for each of the state's 100 counties. Sufficient information is furnished to give the user necessary details without recourse, in most instances, to other sources of information.

An idea of the extensive scope of the book's information can be gleaned from a look at data provided for Pitt County: Under the Services and Promotion Division, for example, agencies and departments listed are Mendenhall Student Center and Student Union; the ECU Speakers Bureau; Greenville Recreation Commission; Grifton Arts and Crafts; and Pitt-Greenville Arts Council.

Goals, services provided, ticket prices where applicable, examples of typical activities, persons to contact, and telephone numbers are all given for each listed service or agency.

Criteria for inclusion in the directory is based on the service or agency being a non-profit one; one that has been in existence a year or longer; and one that serves at least 25 people.

Plans are to periodically update this basic compilation — thus those investing in it will not have a document that will go dead in a short time.

The directory makes very clear that lots is happening in North Carolina, and that many groups, organizations and individuals are at work providing Tar Heels a tremendous range of cultural and cultural related outlets.

North Carolina Cultural Directory fills a big gap in the need for a handy, one-source reference of this kind.

Copies can be obtained for $4 from the Agricultural Extension Service, P. O. Box 5097, N.C. State University, Raleigh, N. C. 27607.

Kinnaird Top N.C. Art Award Winner

RALEIGH — The winner of the first-place gold medal in the 1977, 40th annual N. C. Artists Exhibition is Richard W. Kinnaird, a professor in the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, Art Department.

His winning work is an acrylic painting entitled "Precession." Other top winners in the annual show, announced on Wednesday, "Art Day" of the N. C. Culture Week, are:—

W. C. Richardson, Chapel Hill, honorable mention, "Batucada," an acrylic painting.

Jurors for the show were Robert T. Buck, Jr., Director of the Albright-Knox Art Gallery, Buffalo, N. Y., Dorothy Miller, formerly Curator of Painting and Sculpture, Museum of Modern Art, New York; and Paul J. Smith, Director of the Museum of Contemporary Crafts, New York.

The jury chose 107 works in various media representing 102 Tar Heel artists. Their selections were made from a total of 964 works submitted by 542 artists. Greenville artists whose work has been chosen for the 40th annual show are: Barry Bailey, George W. Brett, II, Charles Keith Britt, Louis W. Cherry, Michael Ehlbeck, John Gresko, Art Haney, Paul Hartley, Benjamin H. Jenkins, Aaron Karp, Norman G. McLeod, Herb Parker, John Quinn, Roxanne Reep, Matt Smartt, Robin Leroy Smith, Melvin Stanforth, David and Mary Louise Strider. A Snow Hill artist, Robert L. Jones, also had a work chosen. The show went on view to the public on Thursday and will remain open through January 8 at the N.C. Museum of Art. There is no admission charged for the show, which can be seen weekdays Mondays and also on Saturdays and Sundays.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Linda M. Stancill

Couples in search of sanity and real meaning in their lives can benefit from THE DANCE-AWAY LOVER AND OTHER ROLES WE PLAY IN LOVE, SEX AND MARRIAGE BY Daniel Goldstone and others. The authors, who have done research over the last five years at the Berkley, California Therapy Institute believe in lasting couple relationships and are determined through THE DANCE-AWAY LOVER to fortify people for the struggle against the difficulties inherent in any lasting partnerships. The authors deal in an innovative way with the life-cycle or relationships, including the inevitable time of pain, distaste, and anger between two people. Though there's lost faith in long-term relationships and the average American marriage lasts 7.2 years, they still believe that a couple relationship can be strong, sweet and secure. They hope that the framework of the ideas in THE DANCE-AWAY LOVER will help people to discover where their relationships get stuck and how their own behavior creates and perpetuates those muds. Their ideas should lead to personal growth as well as to the maintenance of the couple relationship.

Of particular interest to women will be DIANE VON FURSTENBERG'S BOOK OF BEAUTY: HOW TO BE A MORE ATTRACTIVE CONFIDENT AND SENSUAL WOMAN. One of the most glamorous, exciting and successful women in America, Diane von Furstenberg writes candidly about her life and her success, about beauty, nutrition, exercise, discipline, men, women and the family and shows how any woman can be dynamic, fascinating and successful by following this honest and practical guide. She offers useful and specific advice about health and beauty and devotes a chapter helping you achieve healthy, slimming and sensible eating habits. Illustrated exercises especially designed for people who hate to exercise offer maximum benefits for minimum effort. She also discusses makeup, care of skin, nails and hair, and plastic surgery. As a known fashion expert, she explains how to wear clothes and helps you camouflage your flaws, bodily and facial, and highlight your best assets through color, style and common sense. This fascinating and useful book is a must for every woman who seeks a richer and more beautiful life.

Eileen Ford's BEAUTY FOR NOW AND FOREVER: SECRETS OF BEAUTY AFTER 35 is her personal and candid book about the realities of retaining and enhancing your health and beauty. Ford, head of one of the world's largest model agencies, presents a program to bring out the best body and spirit from your mid-thirties on, so that the late years are rich and meaningful. She gives you a unique, super 14-day diet and exercise plan, as well as advice on make-up, skin and hair care, all designed to help you get in shape and stay in shape.

N.C. Literary Awards

Presentation of six prestigious literary awards highlighted the 77th annual meeting of the N. C. Literary and Historical Association held in Raleigh on Friday in conjunction with N. C. Culture Week.

A new award, presented the first time this year, is one for the best student publication submitted, known as the N. C. Student Publication.

West Lincoln High School in Lincoln won for its publication school publication, De Novo.

The Roanoke-Chowan Poetry Award for the best volume of poetry went to Norman Macleod, author and teacher at Pembroke State University, for his volume, The Distance.

Sylvia Wilkinson of Durham is the recipient of the Sir Walter Raleigh Award for fiction. The award was given for her novel, Shadow of the Mountain, a story of poverty in the North Carolina mountains. Ms. Wilkerson Wilkerson is a previous winner, in 1968.

The Mayflower Society Award for non-fiction was presented to Lawrence Goodwyn for his book, Democratic Promise: The Populist Movement in America.

Dr. H. G. Jones received the Christopher Crittenden Memorial Award for his major and continuing contributions in the field of North Carolina history.

The City Rose is the book that received the award of the American Association of University Women Award for Children's Literature. Ruth White Miller of Summerville, S. C. is the author of the children's book.

History Awards

The acquisition, planning and development of Reed Gold Mine as a state historic site won for the N. C. Division of Archives and History an award of merit from the American Association for State and Local History. The award was presented Friday at a meeting of the association during N. C. Culture Week.

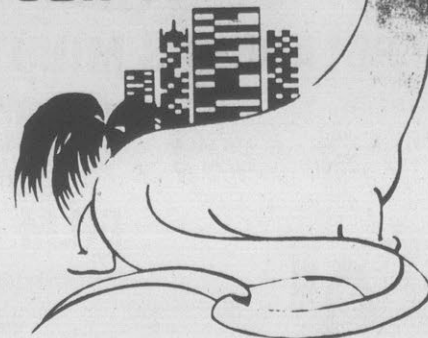

The state agency was cited for its work at the mine, scene of the first documented discovery of gold in the U.S.

Former Gov. Robert W. Scott received an award of merit for "outstanding contributions as a public official and as a private citizen."

Other recipients were the N. C. Department of Community Colleges for a program, "Research in Local History and Biography," initiated by Dr. W. Dallas Herring and directed by Dr. Maurice R. Stirewalt; and the Yadkinville Tar Heel Junior Historian Club for assistance in the renovation and development of the Yadkin County Museum of Art and History.

Solving Leftovers Blues

What's Left Is Right — What To Do With Leftovers When You're Desperate. By Susan Sibley. Woodstock, Vermont. 136 pps., illustrated with line drawings. $5.95, plus 50 cents postage. (Available from: The Kinford Press, Box 177, Woodstock, Vermont, 05091.)

All the women I call on to review cookbooks lamented about the Christmas rush when approached — so here's a man's viewpoint on a cookbook that concentrates on creating succulent dishes from untidy (or tidy) leftovers.

If I cooked a lot, I'd bless the way the book is spiral bound, so it would stay open without having to smudge the pages with greasy fingers desperately flipping back to the right pages.

I rather like some of the comic line drawings and hope they will not distract cooks to the point of letting things burn while coloring in the tempting white spaces within black lines — which I'd likely do.

Hospitality House

Kay Currie's Hospitality House today will begin at 11:30 a.m. and run til noon over WITN-TV, Channel 7.

The scene for today's show is the Brook Valley Country Club in Greenville — and the subject is golf.

Appearing with Ms. Currie are several prominent golfers, including Reynolds May, a member of the Board of Directors of the N. C. Hall of Fame and a former athlete, and Harold Thomas, Thomas is a club professional and is vice-president of the Eastern N. C. Professional Golfers Association.

The program was filmed in the rain on Wednesday, with players demonstrating putting while using umbrellas.

Another point of appeal is the presence of several recipes for squash and spinach, two vegetables that just happen to turn me on burned or raw. These are in the "I Never Promised You A Truck Garden" chapter for vegetables and fruits recipes.

What doesn't exactly make my taste buds light up is the idea of "tipsy meatballs," a concoction of ground beef, a whole bottle of catsup, and a big can of beer. This gem is tucked in the chapter entitled "High Spirits for Lowly Cooks."

To reveal a little more about the chapter arrangement — these are "Trick or Treat," for sauces and soups; "One Woman's Meat," with recipes for beef, lamb, and veal; "Ham It Up — The Ubiquitous Pig," which stretches the versatile porky into divisions of pork, ham, bacon, sausage, and (yes) frankfurts.

The chapter on "One Potato, Two Potatoes," sticks to three starchy items, potatoes, rice, and noodles.

One thing puzzles me — the title and tenor of the book stresses "leftovers." And yet, some of the recipes — like the one "South Seas Ham Loaf," the very title of which makes me hungry — casually calls for both ground ham and ground pork. Who in these days of tight budgets has two types of pig leftovers stored uneaten at one time?

But Ms. Sibley compensates for the implication of abundance, and comes down to my occasional "bachelor" cook-it-yourself status of desperation in the very last page. There it is, directions for a genuine catch-all recipe. "When . . . it's time to empty the refrigerator, empty contents of everything you find in there into your biggest casserole. Stir. Mix around. Add a little milk if it looks too dry (it will probably be stiff with thirst). Careful with the salt. Cover with stale bread, torn into shreds. . . (and) the limp potato chips you've been hoarding all these weeks . . . Bake at 350 as long as you like."

That's the kind of recipe that makes cooking an exciting art, an adventure with no guarantee whether a taste-treat triumph or slim chances for survival will be the ultimate consequence.

Author of a novel, Woodsmoke, published by Blair, Ms. Sibley brings to this cookbook some nice fictional touches — directions such as "(this is a lot of work to go to for soup, but you might want to)" and, after listing chopped red pimento in a recipe, she adds "(if you like it, I don't)." Tar Heels Trim State

By BILL WELCH
Associated Press Writer
GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's Phil Ford poured in 14 points in six minutes of the second half to lift the second-ranked Tar Heels past surprisingly tough North Carolina State, 87-82, in the championship game of the Big Four basketball tournament Saturday night.

Ford, an all-America guard, scored 30 points, 24 of them in the second half, and ran North Carolina's four-corners offense for the last 5½ minutes to ice the win.

North Carolina, hurt by 36 percent free-throw shooting in the first half, coasted to the win with 14 points from the line in the final three minutes after trailing most of the second half. Ford scored half the final free throws and was named the tournament's most valuable player after the game.

Ford's 14-point barrage began with 12:11 remaining and the Tar Heels down, 62-54. With 6:33 left, Ford stole the ball and drove to the key where his jumper put the Tar Heels up, 67-66.

State went ahead again on a basket by Art Jones, but Ford was good on a one-and-one and sophomore Al Wood, who had 12 points in the game, hit two more from the line to put the Tar Heels up for good, 71-68.

North Carolina's Mike O'Koren scored 16 points and played most of the second half with four fouls. N.C. State's Hawkeye Whitney scored 17 before fouling out with 5:42 remaining, and Clyde Austin scored 14 for the Wolfpack before fouling out with 2:20 left. Jones added 12 and Kenny Matthews had 10 for N.C. State.

East Carolina Hosting Alderson-Broadbudds Monday

East Carolina University's basketball Pirates, still looking for their initial victory of the young season, play host to Alderson-Broadbudds College Monday night at about 8:30 p.m.

The "about" is brought about by East Carolina's women opening a doubleheader evening, starting at 6 p.m. The Lady Bucs will be facing Appalachian State University.

Alderson-Broadbudds is somewhat of a mystery team.

The first question almost everyone asks is: "Where is Alderson-Broadbudds?" Well, it's located in Philippi, West Virginia, about 35 miles south of Morgantown, home of West Virginia University. The Baptist school has an enrollment of 1,000.

The Battlers posted an 8-14 record last year on the way to a ninth place finish in the West Virginia Intercollegiate Athletic Conference.

So far this year, they've played six games, but the results of only two have reached this far south. Their first two games were in the Shrine Tournament, while they followed that up with stops at George Washington (losing by 18), and at VMI (losing 107-90). They played Friday and Saturday night in the Randolph-Macon Tournament.

Top returning veterans include 5-11 guard, Dave Gande, 5-7 guard Heyward Graves and 6-1 guard Mickey Hampton.

Their recruits include 6-6 Ronnie Peyton, 6-4 Carl Heyward, 6-6 Larry Aheard, 6-1 Dennis Lee and 6-6 Jim Foreman.

"They've played their only two major college teams good games," ECU Coach Larry Gillman said. "They were down by nine to GW at the half and gave them a good game. They played VMI very good and were up by nine points at one time and led at the half."

"And they've proved that they can score," Gillman added. "Gande is supposed to be scoring about 25 points a game, I understand. They play a lot of people, and they have a lot of good athletes."

The coach added that he is sure that the Battlers will live up to their nickname and that the Pirates had better be ready to play. "I think the game I saw Thursday night (92-66 loss to UNC Wilmington) was the most passive display of basketball I ever seen. Between our play and their ability, we learned that it wasn't an easy game."

Gillman added that he had warned that the team would have its ups and downs during the year. "We had a down Thursday night. I didn't think it would be that down, however. We had a great up for Indiana, and even though we lost, I was proud of the way the kids played. I wasn't proud or happy Thursday."

The coach said that he "just didn't properly prepare the players. The players don't lose, Larry Gillman does," he said.

The game is only the beginning of a rugged week for the Pirates that sees them play four games.

Following Monday night's home contest, the Pirates go on the road, facing the University of Maryland on Wednesday in College Park, Md. Then, Friday night, they meet LaSalle in the opening round of the First Union Tournament in Charlotte. The second night, they play either Boston College or UNC Charlotte.

"I know we have to play good in those games. Maryland has as great a group of talented people as we'll play. LaSalle is 2-0 right now and is a very well coached team. Then either Charlotte or Boston College will be tough."

"But the more games we play, the more we'll grow up and learn," Gillman said.

"I'm not disillusioned. I expected us to play at times as we did. But not Thursday night. Now we have to get ready to put on a good show Monday night."

Gillman said that he appreciated the patience of the fans. "We didn't play well, but the larger part of the crowd stayed with us. I hope the fans will realize that we are young and anxious. The team appreciates them and will respond to them. We hope they respond to our need for them."

"Another crowd like Thursday night's will be a morale booster for the players," the coach said.

Herb Krusen leads the Pirates scoring with a 22.0 average, but has played but one game. Herb Gray is next with a two game average of 18.5 points per game, while Oliver Mack is the only other player in double figures with 12.0 for two games.

Texas A&M Romps Past Houston In Southwest Conference Action

bench to enflame sluggish Texas A&M with two touchdown runs Saturday, and the 17th-ranked Aggies clinched third place in the Southwest Conference with a 27-7 victory over the Houston Cougars.

The 6-foot-2, 176-pound Mosley, entered the nationally televised game late in the second quarter and posted two touchdowns in a 79-second span to daze the Cougars, who led 7-3. Mosley guided the Aggies on an 83-yard drive in eight plays, climaxed by his 13-yard touchdown run with 1:23 left in the first half.

Houston's Alois Blackwell fumbled after the ensuing kick-off and Jacob Green recovered on the Cougar 23. Mosley worked the Aggies to the Houston 2-yard line where George Woodard crunched across with 42 seconds left in the half for a fat 17-7 Aggie lead.

The swift Mosley dashed 35 yards for a touchdown on A&M's first play in the second half and the Aggies poured it on.

A 57-yard field goal by barefoot Tony Franklin, who had kicked a 27-yarder earlier, finished the Aggies scoring.

A&M finished the regular season with an 8-3 record and the Aggies were 6-2 in SWC play. Houston was 6-5 and 4-4.

The explosive Cougars grabbed a 7-3 lead midway through the second quarter when quarterback Delrick Brown flicked a 3-yard scoring pass to tight end Willis Adams.

The Aggie offense floundered under senior quarterback David Walker. The Cadets only had 45 yards offense until Mosley stepped on the field with five minutes to play in the second quarter.

Mosley completed passes of 12 and 11 yards to wide receiver Doug Teague on the 83-yard drive that put the Aggies ahead to stay.

Mosley had carried the ball only 27 times all year, playing in three games.

The Aggies padded their 17-7 halftime lead when Mike Williams returned a Cougar punt 23 yards to the Houston 35. On the next play, Mosley followed a crushing block by Curtis Dickey and bolted 35 yards untouched. The Aggies had struck with only 69 seconds elapsed in the third quarter.

This gave heart to the Aggie defense which had yielded 57 points last week against No. 1-ranked Texas. There were five new starters for the Aggies on defense including Green who was the outstanding defender on the field.

The elusive Mosley rushed 12 times for 109 yards against the shocked Cougar defense to delight the partisan crowd of 51,790 in Kyle Field. Mosley completed 6 of 6 passes for 43 yards.

Houston's big offense weapon was Blackwell, who gained 160 yards on 29 carries.

The Aggies will play Southern California Dec. 31 in the Bluebonnet Bowl.

The game had a bizarre ending as Houston flanker Rickie Maddox caught what appeared to be a touchdown pass in the end zone on the last play of the game. However, both sides were penalized for offside, and the touchdown was negated.

There were bitter feelings throughout the contest as officials ejected two Houston players, offensive guard Jim Wells and linebacker Hosea Taylor.

For the Aggies, offensive tackle Cody Risien was thrown out of the game for fighting.

The Aggies, in fact, played the second half without both of its starting offensive tackles as All-SWC tackle Frank Myers suffered a knee injury.

Bird Holds Mixed Lead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

LARGO, Fla. (AP) — U.S. Women's Open champ Hollis Stacy converted long birdie putts on two of the last three holes Saturday as she and partner Jerry Pate blended their talents for a 3-under-par 69 that enabled them to retain a three-stroke lead in the third round of the $200,000 Mixed Team Golf Championship.

Pate and Stacy, leaders since a spectacular 61 in the opening round, compiled a 54-hole total of 200. That put them 16 strokes under par on the Bardmoor Country Club's 7,015-yard North course, still wet and slow from a drenching rain that delayed play for two hours Friday.

That delay caused Pate, a two-time winner this year despite missing much of the season with an injury, and Stacy to be stranded by darkness in the second round. They had to come back Saturday morning to finish off a round of 70 and then went into regular third round play with a three-stroke advantage.

The margin dwindled to one in the face of a challenge by rookies Curtis Strange, 22, and Nancy Lopez, 20. Bouncy little Hollis built it back to three, however, with her birdie putts of 25 feet on the 16th and about 20 feet, from the back fringe, on the 18th.

Strange and Lopez were second with a 69-203.

They appeared to be the only team with a chance of catching the front-runners. It was another three strokes back to the teams of Tom Purtzer and Sandra Post and the defending titleholders, Chi Chi Rodriguez and Jo Ann Washam, tied at 206, six strokes back of the leaders.

The Post-Purtzer team had a 67 in the bright, warm, sunny weather and Rodriguez-Washam shot a 68.

The unique format calls for both members of the team to hit tee shots. The man then plays his second shot on the woman's drive and vice versa. They then decide which one they want for their third and play alternate shots on that ball for the remainder of the hole.

"I think it's important for me to get it close to the hole and let her putt it," Pate said. "It's not that I'm a bad putter, I just can't seem to get the ball to the hole on these greens. She puts them much better than I do. Any time there's a choice, I want her to do the putting."

It worked perfectly in the run down the stretch.

Fuller's Team In The Finals

ANNISTON, Ala. (AP) — Quarterback Bobby Ray Green passed for 145 yards and two touchdowns to lead Jacksonville State to a 31-7 football victory over North Dakota State in the NCAA Division II semi-finals Saturday.

The Gamecocks advanced to the Pioneer Bowl, national finals at Wichita Falls, Texas, where they play Lehigh Dec. 10. Lehigh defeated California-Davis, 39-30.

Jacksonville jumped ahead early in the Grantland Rice Bowl game, stopping the Bisons cold. Freshman Pat Clements ran for 101 yards on 22 carries, his fifth straight game run over the 100 mark.

James Coleman scored on a 1-yard run and Rocky Riddle kicked a 27-yard field goal, ending the first quarter 10-0.

Jacksonville ran for 223 yards, while the Bisons averaged 148. Defensively, the Gamecocks held North Dakota to 244 yards.

Tight end Butch Barker caught a 5-yard pass from Green in the second.

Randy Walker scored on a 1-yard pass from Green to make it 24-0 at the half.

In the third, Green added a touchdown on a 5-yard run.

Gordy Sprattler of North Dakota put the Bisons on the scoreboard with a 2-yard run in the fourth.

North Dakota earned its berth in the Grantland Rice Bowl by whipping Northern Michigan.

Gminski Paces Duke Past Deacons, 97-84

By BILL WELCH
Associated Press Writer

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Mike Gminski poured in 20 points and freshman Eugene Banks added 19 to lead Duke to a 97-84 upset over 18th-ranked Wake Forest and third place in the Big Four basketball tournament Saturday night.

It was the second setback in a row for the Demon Deacons, who fell to second-ranked North Carolina on Friday night, and spelled the end of Wake Forest's three-year domination of the in-state tournament, which does not count in league standings for the Atlantic Coast Conference teams.

Duke overcame a poor first half, in which the Blue Devils trailed by as many as 15 points, and knotted the score seven times in the second half. The Blue Devils took control for good when Gminski hit a foul shot with 6:09 remaining and Banks added a lay-up seconds later for a 74-71 lead.

Wake Forest drew back within one point with 2:02 remaining on a Larry Harrison dunk, but Duke freshman Kenny Dennard, who scored 14 points, responded with two from the free-throw line and a three-point play on a lay-up.

The tired Deacons never recovered.

Wake was led by Rod Griffin with 31 points and Frank Johnson with 18.

Wake Forest led Duke the entire first half, holding a 45-43 edge at intermission.

Duke scored six straight points in 22 seconds — four of them by Dennard — to tie the score at 16-16 with 7:34 remaining in the half. But the Deacons then put on a furious scoring burst, outpointing the Blue Devils 15-2 in the next 4½ minutes.

Duke's Harold Morrison hit a 15-footer to break the ice, but Griffin scored a tap and a dunk to open a 15-point Wake Forest lead, 35-20, with 7:30 remaining in the half.

A technical-foul call on Wake coach Carl Tacy with 6:05 left in the half keyed a nine-point spurt by Duke, including five by Jim Spanarkel, to cut the deficit to seven points.

Duke drew within one point with 2:06 left in the half on a 10-footer by Spanarkel, but could get no closer.

Spanarkel and Dennard had 11 points each in the first half for the Blue Devils. Griffin led the first-half scoring for Wake with 16 points.

Swimmers Fifth At Penn State

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. — East Carolina's swim team opened its season this weekend at the Penn State Relays, wanting to improve on its eight place finish a year ago. They did just that.

The University of North Carolina was the unofficial overall winner in the meet, edging out the University of Pittsburgh. Maryland was third, followed by Columbia. East Carolina moved up to fifth place, with a total of 192 points.

The Pirates were able to successfully defend their title in the 500-yard crescendo relay, setting a new pool and varsity record. The team of John McCauley, Billy Thorne, Ted Nieman, John Tudor and Bill Fehling came through with a time of 4:00.91.

The Pirates' best finish in the other events was a second place in the 2,000 yard freestyle relay where Tudor, Kevin Meisel, Doug Brindley and Nieman finished at 19:13.64, another varsity record.

The Pirates also finished second in the 400 freestyle with McCauley, Fehling, Thorne and Nieman swimming it in 3:10.38. They were ninth in the 400 backstroke relay in 3:54.07, fifth in the 200 medley relay in 1:40.91; sixth in the 400 individual medley relay in 3:48.7; second in the 200 freestyle relay in 1:26.93, 11th in both one and three meter diving, ninth in the 400 medley relay and seventh in the 400 butterfly relay.

Irish Win

MIAMI (AP) — Fifth-ranked Notre Dame concocted its own version of orange crush Saturday night, mashing the University of Miami 48-10 in a college football game.

The Fighting Irish, 10-1, now turned to preparation for meeting No. 1 Texas in the Cotton Bowl Jan. 2.

Dowdy In Vault Win

LEXINGTON, Va. — East Carolina University high jumper Curt Dowdy took first place in the high jump at the VMI Open Invitational indoor track meet yesterday.

Dowdy cleared the bar at 6-10 for a new ECU indoor record. Second place was taken by Appalachian State's Bill Terry at 6-6.

South Carolina State Eases Past Winston-Salem State, 10-7

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Malcolm Montgomery made only one of four field goal attempts Saturday, but that was enough to lift South Carolina State's Bulldogs to a 10-7 victory over Winston-Salem's Rams in the Gold Bowl football game. Montgomery's successful field goal came with 3:15 left in the third period and enabled the Mid-Eastern Conference champions to win their second straight bowl duel with the champion of the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association before a crowd of 14,000. Winston-Salem, which suffered its first defeat in 12 outings, took a 7-0 lead when the Rams drove 49 yards in eight plays on their first possession. Arrington Jones scored on a one-yard run. The Bulldogs, who finished 9-

1-1, quickly got even on their next possession when Nate Rivers, named the game's most valuable player, broke around right end and raced 64 yards for the tying touchdown. Montgomery, who had missed from 48 and 44 yards, then was true from 24 in the third period and the Bulldogs' defense made it stand up. He later missed from 42 yards in the fourth period. The Rams posed a late threat when a bad snap and a blocked punt gave them the ball at the Bulldogs' 27 with 45 seconds left. But four plays later, Derek Brewington was well short on a 47-yard field goal try with five seconds left. Rivers rolled up 137 yards on nine carries in the first half but lost three yards after intermission for a net 134 yards.

Besides Rivers, who carried 16 times, the Bulldogs got 89 yards on 18 carries from Ricky Anderson and 86 yards on 16 carries from Charles Burgess as they rolled up 286 yards on the ground to 174 for the Rams. Winston-Salem's top ground gainer was Randy Bolton with 86 yards on 13 carries. Each team completed just two passes in the ground-oriented game.

Five Rampants On All-Division

Five members of the Rose High School football team have been named to the All-Division I team, selected by the coaches of the league. Rocky Mount, which won the league championship and went on to become the state runner-up in 4-A classification, paced the team with nine selections. Wilson Pike, with a third place finish, was next with six, followed by Rose, the fourth place team, with five. Northeastern, which finished second, along with number five Bertie and number six Northern Nash each landed three people on the team. Selected from Rose were senior defensive lineman Mike Joyner, senior linebacker David Northrup, senior defensive back Mike Shank; senior offensive lineman Franklin Clark, and senior running back Mac Washington. Selected from Rocky Mount were defensive lineman Dennis Battle, defensive back Mike Jones, offensive end Mike Lewis, offensive linemen Gaither Weeks, Jim Laughridge and Russell Barnes, quarterback Jesse Eberdt, running back Dee Whitley, and specialist Rocky Speight. Northern Nash landed defensive lineman Kenneth Harper, defensive back Ricky Smith, and offensive lineman Jerry Richardson. Bertie placed defensive lineman Ronnie Hoggard, linebacker James Speller and offensive lineman Marshall Bennett. Picked from Wilson Pike were defensive linemen Gurnust Brown and James Baron, defensive back Dwight Taylor, offensive end Richard Knox, offensive lineman Tony Bartlett, and running back Frank Hinnant. Northeastern placed defensive lineman Mike Meads, linebacker Andy Boada, and offensive end James Tyler on the team. All those selected are seniors except for Harper, Hoggard, Taylor, Lewis, Tyler, Knox, Hinnant and Whitley, all juniors.

Virginia Tech Tops Richmond

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Center Wayne Robinson stuffed in nine straight points and contributed a total of 14 to a second-half surge that carried Virginia Tech's Gobblers to an 86-76 college basketball victory over Richmond Saturday afternoon. Tech led by just 43-41 at intermission and was ahead by only 48-43 when Robinson, a sophomore from Greensboro, N. C., got the Gobblers rolling with a three-point play. Richmond's Mike Perry managed to sandwich a pair of baskets around another Robinson two-pointer, but Robinson and his teammates responded with 14 unanswered points to take a 20-point lead with 13 minutes left. Moments later, the Gobblers extended the lead to 23 points, then coasted their third straight victory without a loss. Robinson scored 20 points in the second half and finished with a game-high 31. He also led the Gobblers in rebounding with 13. Other double figure scorers for Tech were Tic Price with 18 and Ron Bell 17. Richmond put up a tough fight for 20 minutes, leading by two points on three occasions near the end of the first half. But 31 turnovers — eight of them coming during the first seven minutes of the second half — were largely responsible for the Spiders suffering their fourth loss without a victory. The Spiders actually out-rebounded the taller Gobblers, 49-40, but lacked Tech's balanced scoring punch. Their only man in double figures was Perry, who pitched in 25.

Best Paces Greene Central To Victory Over Saratoga, 49-47

SARATOGA — Greene Central's James Best scored 21 points, five of them on fourth-quarter free throws, which helped the Rams squeak past Saratoga Central, 49-47 last night. The win was the second of the evening for the Snow Hill school, which also won the girls game, 38-32. Greene Central held the lead in the boys contest for most of the game, but saw the Cougars come back in the fourth quarter to take command and go up by five at one point. But the Rams came back behind Best's five-for-five performance at the line to win it. Best got help in the scoring department from Dale Dixon, who picked up 12 points. Saratoga was led by Sellers Jenkins' 19 points and Kirby's 11. Greene Central jumped out to an 8-2 first-quarter lead in the girls game and extended that to 19-7 at halftime. The Lady Cougars cut into that margin in the third quarter and the Ewes were forced to hold them off in the final period to get the victory. Iris Pridgen led the way for the Ewes with 11 points, while Gwen Williams scored 13 and Sheri King 10 for Saratoga. The victories give Greene Central's boys a 1-1 record and the girls a 2-0 mark. Both the Saratoga teams are now 0-3. Greene Central will host West Edgemont on Tuesday night.

Illinois Tops South Carolina

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Illinois reeled off 14 straight points late in the second half to break open a close basketball game and defeat the University of South Carolina, 84-68, here Saturday night. The Illini took the lead on the final shot of the first half and never relinquished it. Illinois had trailed until Rich Adams hit two consecutive baskets, giving the Illini a 34-33 lead at the half. With 4:59 to play, Illinois led by five points, 62-57. Then the visiting Illini ran off 14 straight to take an insurmountable 76-57 lead with 2:30 to play. Audie Matthews and Reno Gray sparked the second half surge. Gray took scoring honors in the game with 22 points and Matthews had 18.

Shaffer Stars For ECU Women

RALEIGH — Although the East Carolina women's swim team did not fare well in the NCAA meet at Raleigh, the Lady Pirates, Julie Shaffer proved that she is a rising star. Shaffer, a freshman, set three new women's varsity records in the meet, which North Carolina won, edging out N.C. State in the final relay. The highlight of the meet came in the 200 yard freestyle relay, which State won in a national AIAW record time of 1:35.67. Shaffer set school records in the 100 and 200 yard individual medleys and in the 500 yard freestyle. The time in the 100 was 1:04.18, finishing seventh. She was fifth in the 200 in 2:16.7 and seventh in the 500 freestyle in 5:19.2. The team of Lucy Weckerling, Shaffer, Cindy Sailer, and Sharon Burns finished fifth in the 200 medley relay in 2:06.51, and Sailer, Burns, Ann Weldon and Shaffer were fifth in the 200 freestyle relay in 1:48.61. Shaffer was also fourth in the 200 freestyle consolation in 2:00.4; and seventh in the 100 butterfly in 1:02.67. Sailer was 16th in the 50 butterfly in :29.19.

Tigers Rip The Citadel

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Clemson opened up an early lead in the first half and then played on even terms with The Citadel in the second half to down the Bulldogs, 99-65, here Saturday afternoon.

Tom Slawson of The Citadel took scoring honors with 23 points, all in the second half. But Clemson had four players in double figures to offset the hotshooting Slawson.

John Campbell, 6-foot-9 sophomore, led the Tigers in scoring with 19 points in a reserve role. Three Clemson starters were also in double figures, with Colon Abraham having 16 points, Stan Rome adding 13 and Jim Howell contributing 10. The victory pushed Clemson's record to 4-0 on the year, while The Citadel suffered its first loss after three straight wins.

After 2-2 and 4-4 ties, Clemson scored 17 straight points to take an early 21-4 lead. Four Tiger players had a hand in this unanswered spurt, with Howell scoring seven points and Derrick Johnson six.

The total span of the Citadel drought was over five minutes. Mike Ange scored for The Citadel at the seven-minute mark and it was not until his two free throws with 1:55 left in the half that the visitors tallied again.

The Bulldogs shot only 16 percent in the initial half, while Clemson hit over 53 percent of its shots.

For the game, Clemson shot an even 50 percent. The Bulldogs improved in the second half, shooting 61.7 percent in the final 20 minutes, for a game percentage of 42.4.

Clemson controlled the boards against the shorter Bulldogs, 54-26, with Campbell claiming a game-high ten.

Clemson coach Bill Foster said afterwards one "big bright spot" in the game was the way his players kept their poise on defense and built up a lead, despite The Citadel's attempts to slow down the Tigers' offensive tempo.

"We knew that we would see some deliberate offense this season, and the thing I liked about the game today was the way our team kept its poise...Everybody played well," said Foster.

Clemson experimented with Jim "Chubby" Wells and Marvin Dickerson at short forward, and "we liked what we saw," said Foster. "There will be a time later in the year that we will need height in the lineup at this spot."

Losing coach Les Robinson of The Citadel said, "Our kids played scared. It was obvious to anyone who saw the game.

"We felt that we had a good game plan coming into the game, and we were going to get that good shot. But when you hit but four of 25 shots you won't be in the same gym with anyone," Robinson added.

Florida State Romps Past Florida, 37-9

By F.T. MACFEELEY
Associated Press Writer
GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — "We ain't second rate no more," Florida State football Coach Bobby Bowden croaked as he joined his players in celebrating a 37-9 victory Saturday over bitter-rival Florida before a stunned crowd of 63,563 and a regional television audience.

Bowden was hoarse from hollering "WHOO-OO-OO" in the jubilant winners' dressing room celebrating the first football victory over Florida in 10 years.

"We thought they were weak in secondary," Bowden said. It was an understatement as his quarterbacks, Jimmy Jordan and Wally Woodham, completed 20 of 31 passes for 344 yards.

"I just go back, look and the guys would be open," said Jordan, who hit wide receiver Roger Overby with three touchdown tosses.

Florida Coach Don Dickey said the outcome was a matter of Florida State's strength concentrated in the area where Florida was weakest — in its injury-plagued defensive secondary.

"We knew they talked all week about defending Larry Key, so we faked the ball to Key and threw downfield," Bowden said.

Key, who became the first Seminole in history to gain more than 1,000 yards rushing, wound up the day running for 143 and a season total of 1,117.

With all-Southeastern Conference wide receiver Wes Chandler out with pneumonia, the slightly-favored Gators had to settle for three second-quarter field goals by Berj Yepremian, from 32, 50 and 41 yards.

Florida State's defense, led by linebacker Aaron Carter and tackle Lewis Richardson, swarmed all over Florida quarterbacks Terry LeCount and John Brantley, heading off any Gator passing attack.

The Seminoles stopped one Florida drive a yard from the goal in the third quarter, and Jordan calmly took FSU 99 yards to a Mark Lyles touchdown which put them in front 31-9 and clinched the outcome.

Northeast Tops Martin Academy

LASKER — Northeast Academy took three basketball victories over Martin Academy Friday night with a 48-27 jaycee win, 65-27 girls win and 74-63 varsity win.

Northeast easily defeated Martin in the girls game, running to a 29-14 final lead and then stretching that margin out to 38 points in the final quarter. Barrett scored 14 points, J. Turner 12 and Jorban 11 to pace Northeast, while Martin was led by Liv Johnson with 11.

Northeast held off a fourth-quarter Martin rally to win the varsity contest. The home team was leading by a 53-36 margin going into the final period, but was outscored 27-21 in the last frame.

Garris Reed and Rodney Bryant each scored 13 points to pace the winners, while Neil Lassiter added 11. Martin was led by Grady Smith's 17-point production and Cliff Haislip's 12.

Ayden-Grifton Feels It Can Be Among Eastern Carolina's Best

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

Despite some pretty stiff competition in the Eastern Carolina Conference this year, Ayden-Grifton basketball coach Bob Murphy feels his team can do well if gels quickly.

"I'd say if they mold together a little bit, we'll have a good team. I don't know how well we'll do in the league, but I feel like we'll be in the top three or four," Murphy said.

"We're hoping for a good year. I'm optimistic so far. We have some experienced players back and some good young players up from the junior varsity that are helping us."

The Chargers lost five players, two of them starters, off of last year's team which finished second in the conference to state 3-A runner-up North Pitt and second in the district to the same team.

Five seniors return off of that squad and their experience is a big strong point for the team. The seniors are guards Paul Setliff (5-11) and Terry Morris (5-11), center James Leggett (6-6) and forwards Mike Teachey (6-3) and Frankie Dail (6-1).

Murphy lists overall size as another plus for Ayden-Grifton, along with added quickness. "We got some quick players off the jaycee team that will inject some quickness, which is something we need. It was something we were lacking last year."

The team also has strong balance and depth, Murphy said. "I'm going to try to play a lot of players this year. I know I say that every year, but I think I will really be able to this year."

Before the season, Murphy felt his guard spots might be a weak point, but now, he said, "the situation is going to be better than I thought. Terry Morris has improved, Paul Setliff has some experience and we've got three good young guards, Sheldon McCarter (5-9), Henry Ormond (5-9) and Donnie Jackson (5-11). The latter three are all juniors.

However, "Our defense is not what I would hope for it to be at this time," Murphy said. "That is something we've got to do for us to win — play good defense. There are a lot more high-powered offensive teams than we are. Right now, I'm not very satisfied, but we are very capable of playing good defense."

Joining Mike Teachey and Dail as relief men at the forward spots will be juniors Hosea Coley (6-0), David Smith (6-1) and Oliver Moye (6-0). Mike Hardee, a 6-2 junior, is listed as a forward-center, while Corky Teachey, a 6-2 junior, will be a back-up center.

"I'm getting a real good effort from these guys; they seem to be rebounding fairly well but it will take time for the younger players to fit in," Murphy said.

D. H. Conley is the class of the conference this season, according to Murphy, followed by North Lenoir. "I think the other teams in the league are certainly to be considered, too. Even North Pitt and Farmville Central are better than people think they will be."

Murphy said of his own team, "I have confidence in this group. I think the possibilities are there, if we can mold together and improve our defense. I think we can be a factor in the conference race."

Hot-Shooting Washington Nips Rose

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Washington High School's Pam Pack, rated as one of the top 3-A powers in the state, put on a shooting display in the second half Friday night, but still had to hold off a Rose High School rally to claim a 64-59 victory.

Rose's girls opened their season with a 44-36 win earlier in the evening.

Washington seemed to have salted away an easy victory earlier in the final period, when Rose came from as far as 15 points down in the final three minutes of play to close within the final five point margin.

The Pam Pack, experiencing a poor shooting first half, held a 29-24 halftime lead. But in the third and fourth periods, the Pack fired through 60.7 per cent of their shots, allowing them to run out to a 15 point spread on several occasions.

The Rampants were hampered in the game by having Greg Guthrie, who scored 15 points in the opener against Kinston, benched with an injury.

"Not having him in there cost us some points, of course," Coach Jim Brewington said afterwards.

"Washington has got a good club, no doubt about it. But they got a lot of garbage baskets and that killed us. They dominated the boards (48-36).

"Still," Brewington added, "I'm proud of the kids. They didn't give up. If we could have blocked them off the boards, we could have been ahead at the half, and maybe even won. (Dominique Wilkens) got a lot of his points off rebounds. The kids did well, though, considering the height advantage Washington had on us. We got off to another bad start in the third quarter too, and that hurt us."

Rose suffered from turnovers in the early minutes of the period, and Washington used that to run out to a 12-point lead, 36-24, from a 29-24 lead at the end of the second frame.

"After playing Kinston and Washington, I'm looking forward to playing someone who is not ranked quite as strong. Kinston and Washington both took a physical drain on us."

While Brewington felt that Guthrie's absence hurt the Rampants, cutting off his outside shooting, he had praise for Billy Roberson who started in his place. "He's going to be a great asset to the program before this year is over," the coach said.

As in their first outing, the Rampants were hurt by their shooting, hitting just 41.3 per cent for the game, compared to Washington's overall 49.2.

Wilkens was the dominating force in the game, scoring 33 points on 16 field goals and one free throw.

His points came from baseline jumpers and rebounding off the offensive boards.

Rose jumped out to an early lead in the game, gaining a 6-4 advantage as the first three Rampants shots went through the nets.

But with Wilkens leading the way, Washington stormed back to erase a 10-5 deficit, and gain an 11-10 lead with 1:49 left in the period. Wilkes got that basket on a stuff.

Eric Harris added a free throw and Alvis Rogers got a shot from underneath to run the lead to 14-10 before Rose hit the final basket of the period.

Washington extended its lead to 20-14 to hold its widest margin of the second quarter. Rose fought back within two at 22-20, but could come no closer, and the Pack pulled back out to a 29-24 halftime edge.

Washington hit the first seven points of the third period to take a 36-24 lead before Rose got a point. Baskets by Harris, Rogers and Wilkens ran it out to 44-28, the biggest lead the Pam Pack enjoyed. That came with 5:23 left in the period.

Rose put on a rally of seven points after that, cutting the lead to nine, but they fell back by 13, 54-41, as the period ended.

Washington was ahead, 62-47 with 3:16 left when Rose went to a press and started a rally. But the clock worked against them, and they got no closer than the final five-point margin.

Besides Wilkens total, Rogers added ten for Washington.

William Barnes again led Rose with 18, while Anthony Bryant had 15 and James Hawkins had 12.

Rose's girls posted their opening win by scoring clutch baskets in the final period.

The Rampettes pushed out to an early lead on baskets by Donna Cullipher, Karen Jeffreys and Patricia Bynum to take a 6-2 lead. They held on to a 7-5 margin after the first period.

Rose extended its lead to 13-5, on two baskets and a couple of free throws by Bynum during the first half of the second frame. But Washington chopped it back to two before trailing, 16-11, at intermission.

In the third period, the Lady Pack rallied behind six points by Brenda Minns to take a 25-23 lead, before Bynum tied it at 25-25 at the end of the period.

The two swapped baskets during the first two minutes of the final quarter before Bynum hit to give Rose the lead for good, Margaret McGlohon hit off a drive to run it to 33-29, and although Washington cut it back to one, 33-32, Rose pulled away again on a Jeffreys basket, four free throws by Cullipher and a bucket by McGlohon for a 41-32 lead with 2:11 left. After that, it was just a question of time. Bynum led Rose with 19 points, while Minns and Sheila McDevett had 10 each for Washington.

Rampants In Action

Washington and Rose High School split a pair of basketball games last night with the Pam Pack taking the boys game, 64-59, and the Rampettes winning the girls, 44-36. At left, Rampant Billy Roberson (52)

goes up for a shot over the defense of Washington's Eric Harris and another hidden Packer. At right, Rose's Patricia Bynum (21) gets off a shot despite the efforts of Sheila McDevett of Washington. Bynum paced the win with 19 points. (Reflector Photos)

Goldsboro Tops GCA

Goldsboro Christian Academy nailed the Greenville Christian basketballers Friday night, 67-53.

Goldsboro jumped off to a 17-8 lead in the first quarter of play and never trailed. They added to that lead in the second frame and held a 35-20 lead at the half.

Greenville put on a rally in the third quarter, outshooting Goldsboro, 17-10. That cut the lead back to 45-37. Greenville was out, 22-16, by Goldsboro in the final frame.

Billy Skuggs led Goldsboro with 26 points, while Cliff Forrest added 19 and Johnny Alberton hit 13.

Greenville was led by Steve Tyburski with 23, while Ben Haddock had 16 and Rodney Harris, 10.

Panthers Glide Past Dragons

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

BETHEL—Despite a number of turnovers, North Pitt's basketball team managed to break in front of South Edgecombe in the second quarter and hold the lead for a 62-43 victory over the Dragons Friday night.

The win completed a three-game sweep for North Pitt, which also won the junior varsity contest, 60-52, and the girls game, 28-26.

Panther coach Cobby Deans said the team made up for its mistakes with hustle, and that was the difference in the contest. "Hustle made up for a lot of our mistakes," he stated, blaming those mistakes on his team's youth and inexperience in only the second game of the season. "We haven't gotten our starting five down; they just haven't played that much together and, of course, they're all new."

The teams battled to a 7-7 tie in the low-scoring first quarter, with the Dragons getting the final three points of the period to put the game in a deadlock.

South Edgecombe's Wade Farmer, who led his team in scoring with 11 points, connected on a follow shot to tie the game at 11 early in the second period, but that was the last time the Dragons would be that close.

Panther Lawaskia Jenkins connected on a foul shot a half-minute later, William Knight hit a jumper and a pair of foul shots and Calvin Carmack scored from the right corner to make it 18-11 with 4:40 left in the half.

North Pitt extended that lead to 30-14 on Reginald Knight's tip-in of a missed foul shot with just 34 seconds left in the half. Dragon Leonard Mayo's 15-footer with five seconds on the clock made it 30-16 at intermission.

South Edgecombe had a five-point scoring burst early in the third quarter to pull to within eight at 35-27, but eight points was as close as the Dragons could get for the rest of the way.

The Panthers held a 39-31 edge with just over a minute left in the third period when Reginald Knight hit a free throw and Terry Shelton connected from the lane to put them up 42-31 going into the final period of play.

In the fourth quarter, North Pitt scored 12 of its 20 points from the free throw line, despite the fact that they missed nine charity tosses in the period.

A number of fouls, including two technicals on the Dragon bench, made the final quarter drag on and on. Both coaches emptied their benches halfway through the quarter as the North Pitt lead built up. The highest margin of the night was 20 points, 62-42, with 25 seconds left.

North Pitt greatly outshot South Edgecombe, hitting 20 of 49 from the floor for 40.8 per cent to just 14 of 48 for the Dragons, 24.1 per cent. South Edgecombe held a 49-48 rebounding edge, but got 21 of those caroms in the final quarter. Both teams committed a number of turnovers, 31 for North Pitt and 29 for the Dragons.

Reginald Knight paced the Panther scoring with 14 points, while William Knight had 12 and Jenkins 11. Farmer was the only South Edgecombe player in double figures.

In the girls game, the PantHERS came from as many as ten points down in the second half to defeat the Lady Dragons, 28-26.

South Edgecombe held just a 14-12 halftime lead, but extended that in the third period and led 24-17 at the end of the quarter.

But, North Pitt's pressure defense held the Lady Dragons to just two points in the final quarter, while the PantHERS came up with 11, to win the game.

Carolyn Best, who led North Pitt with nine points, hit the first of a one-and-one to tie the game at 24 with 2:07 left and then took a feed from Cynthia Barnes for a layup to knot the score again at 26. Jackie Clemmons' shot from underneath with just eight seconds on the clock provided the winning margin.

In the junior varsity game, the Cubs broke open a close contest in the final minutes of play to win going away, 60-52.

North Pitt's varsity record is now 2-0, while the PantHERS are now 1-1. The teams play again Tuesday when they will host Rose High.

The term "purse" in horse-racing comes from the early days of the sport on the English moors. A bag of coins was hung from a pole at the finish and the first rider to reach it got the purse.

Looking To Pass

Farmville Captures Second Win, 63-57

NEW HOPE—Farmville Central held off an Eastern Wayne rally to claim its second straight basketball victory of the year, 63-57 last night. The Lady Jaguars, however, lost their first game in two starts, 47-35.

Eastern Wayne's boys edged out into a 12-11 lead in the first quarter, and both teams pushed through 15 points in the second frame. That left the Warriors ahead, 27-26, at the half.

But in the third period, Farmville got wound up and rushed through 23 points to just 12 for Eastern. That gave the Jaguars a 49-39 lead to carry into the final quarter. Eastern outshot the Jags, 18-14, in the final quarter, but never caught up.

Calvin Horne led Farmville with 16 points, while Donald Freeman added 12. Dwayne Naylor paced Eastern Wayne with 17, while Brian Sass had 12 and Leo Taswell added 11.

Eastern's girls moved out to an 11-5 lead during the first quarter, but Farmville rallied for a 20-7 margin in the second, forging a 25-18 halftime lead.

But Eastern controlled the game throughout the second half. The Lady Warriors went back ahead, 32-31, by the end of the third frame, and outscored Farmville, 15-4, in the final quarter.

Cookie Best led Eastern with 15 points, with Darcy Lee adding 11. Dianne Barrett had 12 to lead Farmville.

NC STATE INSPECTION STATION

PUBLIC DUCK HUNTING will be permitted for the first time ever on a portion of Swanquarter National Wildlife Refuge, it was announced last week by James H. Roberts, refuge manager.

The area to be opened will include Marsh Island, Great Island and refuge lands east of Juniper Bay. This area, which will be designated by signs, comprises 6,305 acres of needlerush-cordgrass marsh and is within the Swanquarter NWR Wilderness Area. Roberts said that due to the order prohibiting the taking of migratory birds on the waters surrounding these areas, a 100-yard zone immediately adjacent to the hunting area will be used for retrieving downed ducks.

Duck hunting in the Swanquarter Refuge is restricted to the second segment of the North Carolina split duck season, which will open at noon on Dec. 7 and close at sunset on Jan. 20, 1978. The state law banning hunting on Sundays will apply.

In addition to the required state hunting license and federal duck stamp, a refuge permit will be required of everyone wishing to hunt the Swanquarter Refuge, regardless of age. Refuge permits will be available free of charge and may be obtained by writing to: Mattamuskeet National Wildlife Refuge, Rt. 1, Box N-2, Swanquarter, N. C. 27885, or by visiting the refuge office located next to the old Mattamuskeet Lodge at New Holland. Refuge permits will be issued on a first-come, first-served basis.

HUNTING AT SWANQUARTER will be restricted to ducks and coots, with the exception of the following species, which are protected: scoters, eiders, old squaws, canvasbacks and redheads. The shooting of geese, swans or any other non-game migratory bird will be prohibited.

A number of other restrictions will also apply:

- Hunters traveling to and from the hunting area or retrieving downed birds in the 100-yard zone adjacent to the hunting area will be required to have their guns dismantled and/or encased and unloaded.

- In accordance with the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service policy, hunters will be restricted to 12 gauge shotguns and steel shot shells. No lead or other toxic shells or other gauge shotguns will be permitted in the hunting area. Hunters are advised that steel shot shells are not available locally.

- The construction of permanent or seasonal hunting blinds will be prohibited. Temporary blinds, carried in and out daily or made of native vegetation, are permissible. This rule is due to the Wilderness Act of 1964, which permits public hunting on refuge areas so long as it is compatible with refuge objectives. This act prohibits the construction of permanent structures.

- For safety reasons, hunters will not be permitted to hunt closer than 100 yards apart.

- Hunters under the age of 18 must be under the close supervision of an adult. Ideally, the ratio should be one adult to one juvenile, but in no cases should one adult have more than two juveniles under his supervision.

- The use of dogs for retrieving purposes is permissible and encouraged, but dogs must be under firm control at all times.

Second Waterfowl Season

The second portions of North Carolina's waterfowl hunting seasons are scheduled to get underway Wednesday, Dec. 7.

The second seasons for Canada, blue and snow geese will start Wednesday morning, while the season on ducks, mergansers and coots will open at noon.

The limits for the second season will be as follows:

- One Canada goose per day and two in possession.

- Two snow or blue geese per day and four in possession.

- Two wood ducks per day and four in possession.

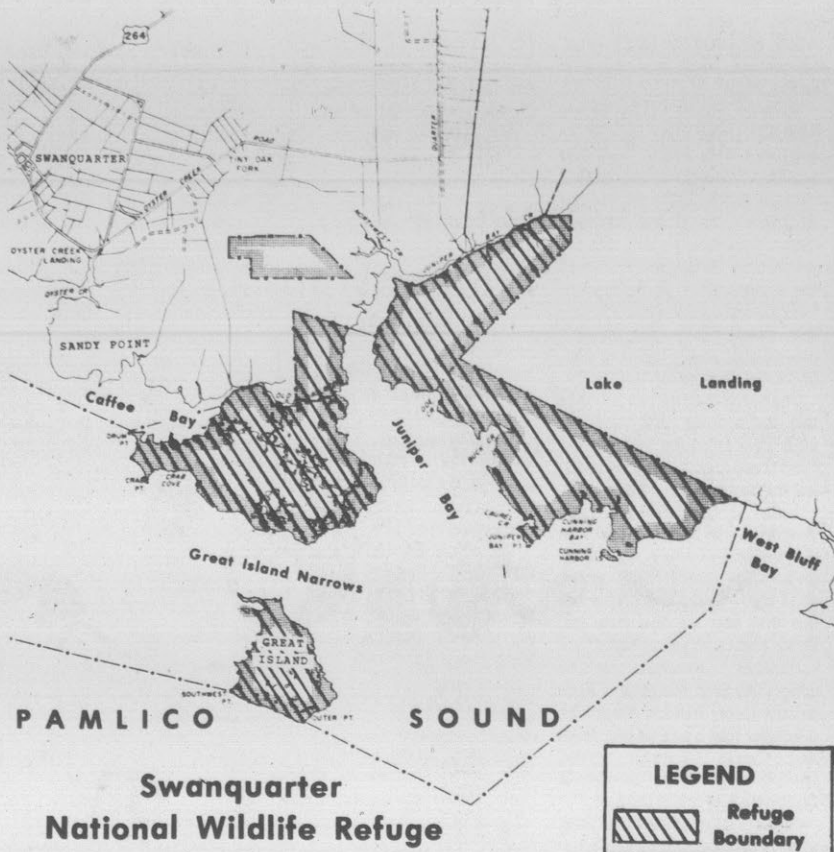

- One black duck per day and two in possession.

- One hooded merganser per day and two in possession.

- A special bonus on scaup shall be allowed with a bag limit of two and possession limit of four in addition to the regular duck limits. This bonus applies only in coastal waters designated as commercial fishing waters east of U.S. Highway 17, but not in: Core Sound between Drum Inlet and Harkers Island, the Pamlico River upstream and west of a line between Pungo River and Goose Creek, or Currituck Sound north of U.S. Highway 158.

□ On all other ducks, the limit will be five per day and ten in possession, while the limit on coots will be 15 per day and 30 in possession.

Big Ten Gives Hayes Probation

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State University President Harold Enarson says the school accepts Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Duke's decision to place football Coach Woody Hayes on probation for unsportsmanlike conduct.

"We do not disagree with the commissioner's finding ... and we will not appeal his decision," Enarson said Friday.

Duke placed Hayes of probation and publicly reprimanded him for taking a swing at ABC cameraman Mike Freedman late in a 14-6 Ohio State loss to Michigan Nov. 10. Hayes later publicly and privately apologized to Freedman.

Hayes will have to be on his good behavior for the next year and if he draws another reprimand from the commissioner during that time, he will automatically be suspended from coaching Ohio State for the following two games.

Hayes had no comment about the reprimand and probation, but Enarson said, "The cruel fact is that a coach is subjected to great provocation. However, this does not justify physical assault upon another person. Coach Hayes understands that."

Duke said in Chicago Friday his investigation of the incident led him to conclude that Hayes "violated the Big Ten Conference's regulations dealing with sportsmanlike conduct."

"In accordance with conference rules ... I am issuing this public reprimand ... citing his actions as an unfortunate display of unsportsmanlike conduct and invoke the conference rule requiring that should Coach Hayes engage in another unsportsmanlike act within one year from this date, he will be automatically suspended from coaching the two football games for Ohio State following the second offense."

Pirates Win Three In First Outing

LEXINGTON, Va. — East Carolina University's track and field team opened its 1977-78 indoor season Friday night, competing in the VMI Open Invitational and coming away with three first-place finishes.

Richmond and William & Mary, keyed by strong distance running and field events, each won five firsts, while the host Keydets took three events. Appalachian State and James Madison University also competed.

VMI's Malcolm Grimes and the Pirates' Calvin Alston were the meet's only double winners. Grimes took both the long and triple jumps, while Alston ran on the Pirate's winning 440-yard relay team and shared the 400 open championship with ECU's Terry Perry and Appalachian's Lafayette Jordan.

A much-anticipated duel between the Bucs' Herman McIntyre and Grimes in the triple jump failed to materialize. McIntyre was injured this week and forced to forego competition. McIntyre was all-America last season in the triple jump, but was defeated by Grimes on a couple of occasions.

The top individual performance came from Richmond freshman Jesse Williams, who blistered the field in the 60-yard dash for a VMI Fieldhouse record of 6.0 seconds, just a tenth of a second off the world record. East Carolina's Donnie Mack, James Rankins and Carter Suggs trailed Williams, all being timed at 6.3. Williams, time qualifies him for the NCAA Championships at Detroit in March.

Alston, an all-America in the outdoor 200 meters, got the Pirates going in the 440 relay.

teaming with Larry Austin, Suggs and Otis Melvin to run a 44.0. Alston, Perry and Jordan were all timed in separate heats in 50.9 in the open 440.

The Pirates' Marvin Rankins continued his domination of area hurdlers in the 60-yard high, winning in 7.3, just a tenth off the NCAA qualifying standard.

Grimes leaped 50-4 in the triple jump to win over teammate Paul Perry and ECU's George Jackson.

Another top individual performance came from Hillary Twel of Richmond. The African star won the three mile in 14:03.5, took second in the two mile in 9:05.8 and third in the mile in 4:17.9 for a strong triple distance run.

Pirate freshmen middle distance runners Ray McDaniel and Tim Jones started off their collegiate careers well, with McDaniel taking second in the 1,000 to the Spiders' Ed Perkins in 2:14.8, and Jones placing third in the 800 in 1:59.6.

ECU will have more than a month to get ready for the strong national meets in January. The Pirates will be in the CYO National Invitational at College Park, Md. on Jan 13 and the East Coast Invitational in Richmond on Jan 14. The following week will carry the Pirates to the Spectrum in Philadelphia for the Enquirer Invitational.

Haddock To Return

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Jesse Haddock will return to coaching Wake Forest golfers January 1, 1978, Wake Forest athletic director Gene Hooks has announced.

Haddock was golf coach at Wake Forest when his teams won NCAA national championships in 1974 and 1975. His teams placed in the top ten of the NCAA nine of the last ten years and captured 10 consecutive Atlantic Coast Conference golf titles.

Haddock resigned his post with the Deacons to accept a golf coaching position at Oral Roberts University in June, 1976.

During his 17 years as golf coach at Wake Forest, he coached 26 All-American golfers and 13 of his former Deacon players currently are in the professional ranks.

Bullets Nip Bears By 70-69

BEAR GRASS — Tommy DiNardo hit a shot with one second left on the clock to give Jamesville a 70-69 victory over Bear Grass High School Friday night.

The Lady Bears got their third victory in four starts earlier in the evening with a 50-44 win.

Bear Grass, boys jumped out to a 16-10 lead in the first period of the game, but couldn't hold off a Jamesville rally. The Bullets outthit the Bears by two in the second frame, and trailed by 37-33 at intermission.

Bear Grass tacked one point onto the lead in the third quarter, going out 58-53, but Jamesville came back in the final quarter and cut away at the lead until DiNardo hit his winning shot just before the horn went off. Jamesville outthit the Bears, 17-11 in the last quarter.

DiNardo finished with 26 points, while Ricky Whitehurst had 22 and Trent Ange added 18. Jackie Harrison led Bear Grass with 17, while Jesse Bullock had 12 and Dwayne Baker added 11.

The Bear Grass girls slipped out into an 11-8 lead after one quarter and both teams pushed in ten points in the second quarter. The Lady Bears took a 21-18 lead into the dressing rooms.

The Bears added two more points to the margin during the third period, 35-30, and outscored the Lady Bullets, 15-14 down the stretch.

Patricia Taylor led Bear Grass with 19, while Debra Jo Peaks added 15. Joyce Manning led Jamesville with 22, while Edith James had 10.

Jamesville plays host to Belhaven and Chocowinity is at Bear Grass on Tuesday.

East Tops Rocky Mt.

By The Associated Press
East Mecklenburg, Western Guilford and Charlotte Catholic won high school football championships Friday night in their respective divisions.

East Mecklenburg took a 28-9 win over Rocky Mount in 4-A action, Western Guilford won 26-20 in the final two minutes over South Caldwell in 3-A competition, and Charlotte Catholic clobbered Clayton 42-20 in 2-A finals.

Calvin Seegars ran for two touchdowns in East Mecklenburg's win, his first score coming on a 2-yard run with 6:30 left in the second period to make it 7-3.

A third period fumble recovery by Jerry Gaines gave East Mecklenburg the ball on its own 48. The drive ended with Seegars' second score, a 5-yard scamper, with 1:07 left in the quarter.

Rocky Mount's only touchdown came in the fourth quarter on a 7-yard pass from Eberdt to Mike Lewis. A pass attempt for a two-point conversion failed.

David Bumgardner intercepted an Eberdt pass to set up East Mecklenburg's final scoring drive, which climaxed with Greg Sigmon's 26-yard run.

Western Guilford senior Rufus Webster scored on a 10-yard run with 1:28 remaining to give his team the 3-A division title. Webster ended the night with 157 yards rushing on 19 carries, including two touchdowns.

South Caldwell led 20-14 in the fourth quarter when Western Guilford's Aaron Stewart connected on a 17-yard pass play to Mark Peterson to tie it up. The kick failed.

After South Caldwell took over, Western Guilford's Earl Gower intercepted a pass at the South Caldwell 25. Four plays later, Webster scoring the decisive touchdown.

Charlotte Catholic halfbacks Frank Lampke and Marcos Valazquez combined for five touchdowns as the Cougars clobbered Clayton, 42-20, in the 2-A championship game.

Valazquez' 3-yard scoring run and Lampke's touchdown runs of 38 and 1 yard staked Charlotte Catholic to a 22-0 lead in the second quarter.

Charlotte Catholic finished the season as the only school in the N.C. High School Athletic Association with an undefeated record. The Cougars were 14-0.

Heinsohn Angry At Celtics

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Boston Celtics Coach Tommy Heinsohn is fed up.

"What this team needs is a good kick in the butt," Heinsohn said following Friday night's 111-89 embarrassment at the hands of the lowly Seattle SuperSonics.

The once-proud Celtics, champions of the National Basketball Association just two years ago, are now 7-13 and facing road games at Washington tonight and New York Tuesday night.

The 11,101 fans at Boston Garden who watched the Celtics get clobbered voiced their displeasure, and Heinsohn agreed with them.

"When we stink, we deserve to get booed — and we heard the boos tonight," said Heinsohn.

In other NBA games Friday night, the Chicago Bulls beat the Indiana Pacers 117-112, the Portland Trail Blazers trimmed the Phoenix Suns 106-103, the Washington Bullets topped the Milwaukee Bucks 108-95, the Kansas City Kings defeated the Detroit Pistons 108-97 and the Denver Nuggets routed the New Jersey Nets 126-92.

Gus Williams and Dennis Johnson, starting in the backcourt for Seattle because of Slick Watts' demotion to the bench and Fred Brown's injury, combined for 47 points as the Sonics raised their record to 7-17 overall but 2-0 under Coach Len Wilkens, who took over after Bob Hopkins was fired on Wednesday.

"The Celtics just didn't have the zip they've had in the past," observed Williams, who had 23 points, six rebounds and six assists.

Seattle burned the Celtics all night with its fast break, Marvin Webster getting it started with 15 rebounds and crisp out-let passing.

Williams scored 16 of his points in the second period, when Seattle outscored Boston 37-21 to take a 57-39 halftime lead. The gap was 28 points in the third period when many in the crowd headed for the exits.

Bulls 107, Pacers 102

Chicago outscored Indiana 18-2 in a seven-minute span to open a 70-50 advantage with 6:38 left in the third quarter and the Pacers came no closer than the final five-point margin. Chicago's Artis Gilmore scored 27 points and grabbed 17 rebounds.

"We have to play a different kind of game when Artis Gilmore plays," said Adrian Dantley, Buffalo's high scorer with 30 points. "He's so intimidating."

Blazers 106, Suns 103

Portland posted its seventh consecutive victory as Lionel Hollins sank two free throws and a field goal in the final 66 seconds to finish with 22 points. The Blazers took the lead with 12 straight points early in the final period, but Phoenix pulled within one before Hollins clinched it.

Bill Walton had 20 points and 18 rebounds in 33 minutes for Portland, whose 17-3 record in the best in the NBA. Paul Westphal scored 32 points and rookie Walter Davis 31 for Phoenix, which now trails Portland by 5 1/2 games in the Pacific Division.

Bullets 108, Bucks 95

Washington got 29 points and 19 rebounds from Elvin Hayes and 26 from ex-Milwaukee star Bob Dandridge to post its seventh victory in the last eight games. The Bullets out-rebounded the Bucks 58-32.

Kings 106, Pistons 97

Detroit suffered its seventh loss in nine games as Lucius Allen scored 22 points for the Kings and reserve center Tom Burleson contributed 14 points in 19 minutes. Burleson's two free throws triggered a 12-2 burst in the fourth quarter that broke the game open for Kansas City.

Nuggets 126, Nets 92

Denver raised its home record to 11-0 as Dan Issel scored 22 points and became the 26th player in pro history to pass the 15,000-point mark for his career. The Nets stayed close until midway through the second period when Denver began pulling away steadily.

The margin of victory tied the Nuggets' team record.

In 1973, Willie Stargell of Pittsburgh set a team record with 90 extra base hits in one season.

Lot Of 'Ifs' On NFL Weekend Schedule

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

If you like to fool around with ifs, there are all sorts of possible combinations available in the National Football League this weekend as the division races head into their final three games.

The "ifffiest" contest on the schedule is Oakland's match at Los Angeles with a number of possibilities depending on the outcome.

If the Rams beat the Raiders and if Atlanta loses to New England, Los Angeles wraps up a fifth consecutive National Conference West championship.

On the other hand, if Oakland wins and if New England loses to Atlanta and if Miami loses to Baltimore, the Raiders would be assured of at least the American Conference wild card playoff berth.

Then there's always the Monday night Baltimore-Miami battle to think about. If the Colts win and New England loses to Atlanta, Baltimore clinches the AFC East. If that happens and if Oakland also wins on Sunday, the Dolphins can forget about the playoffs.

But if the Dolphins win, the AFC East race would be tied going into the final two weeks of the season.

A similar situation exists in the NFC Central, where Minnesota is nursing a one-game edge over Chicago. The Vikings host San Francisco Sunday while the Bears visit winless Tampa Bay.

And Pittsburgh holds a one-game lead over the three other teams, Houston, Cleveland and Cincinnati, in the AFC Central. If Seattle upsets the Steelers Sunday and the other three teams win — Cleveland at San Diego, Houston against Denver and Cincinnati at Kansas City — it would mean a four-way tie at the top.

The other if is Dallas, which can nail down the NFC East championship by beating Philadelphia. The Cowboys already have clinched no worse than the NFC wild card berth.

In Sunday's other games, Detroit plays at Green Bay, St. Louis visits the New York Giants, the New York Jets are at New Orleans and Washington plays at Buffalo.

Because of the relatively short 14-game season, the NFL always faces the possibility of division ties. The crowded calendar does not allow room for extra playoff games to break those deadlocks, so the league lives with a complicated formula that eventually delivers a winner.

The eight criteria to snap ties begin with won-lost records, first in head-to-head meetings, then within the division and then within the conference, provided the tied teams have played the same number of intraconference games. The fourth rule, which could apply in projected Chicago-Minnesota and Oakland-Denver ties, is point differential in head-to-head games. If it comes to that, the Vikings and Broncos have the edges, Minnesota by three points in its two games against the Bears and Denver by 13 in its two games against the Raiders.

Average point differentials would be applied to games within the division, games within the conference and finally the whole schedule. The eighth and final tie-break solution is a coin flip.

Sports Briefs

By The Associated Press
COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — A decision to move the United States Olympic Committee headquarters from New York to Colorado Springs is certain and will be finalized sometime this month, Bob Mathias says.

Mathias, executive director of the Olympic Regional Training Center here, said confirmation of the move would be made during a meeting of USOC later in the month.

CHICAGO (AP) — Darryl Rogers, who completed his second season at Michigan State by lifting the Spartans to third place, has been named Big Ten Conference Football Coach of the Year.

Rogers, who collected 37 of the 70 first-place votes cast by Big Ten sports writers, led the Spartans to a 7-3-1 season after they had been 4-6-1 in 1976.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The New Orleans Saints of the NFL have signed Mike Watson, a 6-foot-6, 275-pound rookie offensive tackle who was released by the Miami Dolphins in mid-September.

Watson, 22, played college ball at Miami of Ohio. He was the Dolphins' third-round draft choice.

A Saints spokesman said Watson fills a spot on the roster that opened up when Derland

Moore hurt a knee and had to be put on injured reserve. Watson is not expected to play this season.

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Only three strokes separated nine college golfers heading into today's final round of the fourth annual Sun Bowl golf tournament with John Cook of Ohio State holding a one-stroke lead.

Cook fired a four-under-par 68 Friday and had a two-round, five-under-par total of 139 over the 7,010-yard Santa Teresa Country Club course.

Sloan Is Ready To Sink, Swim

By ROBERT SHAW
Associated Press Writer
OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — Steve Sloan says he's ready to "sink or swim" as head coach of the Mississippi Rebels after leaving a long-term contract and winning team at Texas Tech.

"You've got to go by the dictates of your heart," he told cheering Ole Miss supporters at a pep rally-news conference Friday. "When you make a decision, never look back. Set up your goals and then proceed."

After Ole Miss' formal announcement of his hiring, Sloan said a prime factor in his decision was that "I felt in my heart it was the best thing to do. My feeling is I'd like to sink or swim here."

Sloan, 33, receives a four-year contract that he said would include an annual salary of $40,000 to $45,000. Ole Miss officials, asked if the tradition of paying head coaches no more than the college president was being broken, said Sloan's official salary would be about equal to that of Chancellor Porter Fortune, who earns just under $40,000.

However, benefits and television proceeds reportedly will bring Sloan's total package to $75,000 to $100,000 a year.

He succeeds Ken Cooper, who resigned Wednesday under alumni pressure after a four-year record of 19-25, including 5-6 this season.

In contrast to Thursday, when he choked up and could not complete reading his resignation statement, Sloan spiced Friday's meeting with humorous comments that drew laughter and cheers from the throng gathered in the Ole Miss athletic dormitory.

At Texas Tech, Sloan's teams were 23-11 in three seasons and the Red Raiders landed a spot in the Tangerine Bowl with a 7-4 record this year. Previously, he coached two years at Vanderbilt, compiling a 12-9-2 record.

He leaves a 10-year contract at Texas Tech with an option to become athletic director at the school.

Retiring Ole Miss Athletic Director John Vaught said Sloan was "the most brilliant young coach in America."

Vaught noted that Sloan had "moved around a great deal in his short career," and added: "He told me he never felt he could tell a recruit 'I'll be with you the next four years. Now, I feel deeply down in my heart I can tell the recruit I'm going to be with you in the next four years.'"

Sloan has been mentioned as the successor to Alabama's Bear Bryant but said Bryant's decision to stay on until he sets a collegiate coaching record did not figure in his move to Ole Miss.

"I've got to make a decision on my life and he's got to make a decision on his life, and they're both not intertwined," said the former Alabama All American.

"I pledge to you I'll do everything possible in my power to put the University of Mississippi football program back on top," Sloan said.

With him at the news conference were four of his Texas Tech assistants: John Cropp, Tommy Limbaugh, Romeo Gremmel and Mike Pope. Sloan said each had been offered a position at Ole Miss and "They've got a decision to make, but they're interested enough to come here and recruit."

Sloan said his first priority would be recruiting, sandwiching it around Texas Tech's preparations for the Tangerine Bowl against Florida State.

TROTTERS SRO
NEW YORK (AP) — Record crowds turned out in eleven European countries and Israel for a tour this spring by the Harlem Globetrotters. They played to 1,589,632 fans in 140 games. Every contest was sold out and in many of the cities police had to be called out to control fans who could not get tickets.

The Globetrotters used two units, the Trotters who played 68 games and the International squad which played 72 times. Prior to a game in Amsterdam, the team visited nearby Haarlem, the namesake city of New York's Harlem.

To help you win, the Master Card has four squares for the same as the numbers on the discs. 4. When you have punched a complete set of four numbers, vertically horizontally or diagonally on any one of the 6 games on the Master Card, you have won the cash prize shown at the top of that game. Only one cash prize per game, or game card. 5. If a disc shows the words "you win $1," you may immediately turn it in to our store manager and receive the cash amount. 6. Verification: Winning card should be taken to store manager only. The Master Card and the matching concealed 1000 Cash Bonanza game piece must be signed by the customer in the presence of the store manager. You will be given a receipt for your winning game card and after it is verified, you will immediately receive your cash prize from the store manager. Prizes $25 and over will be paid by check. When you turn in your winning card, you will be given a new Master Card so that you can keep playing and winning 1000 Cash Bonanza. There is no limit to the number of times you can win. Winners consent to the publication of his or her name and photo in the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. IMPORTANT: Any Master Card or individual concealed number discs will be judged void and not accepted if altered, defaced, mutilated, torn or tampered with in any way.

7. Employees and their U.S. listed dependents of The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. and Sterling Lumber Programs, Inc. are not eligible to play. Games and prizes are prohibited to use. We reserve the right to reject any 1000 Cash Bonanza game material not obtained legitimately through authorized personnel. We also reserve the right to reject or reward any tampered with or fraudulent game material or prize. In any 1000 Cash Bonanza game material and to reject any tampered with or fraudulent game material or prize. Big Four Brought Out Worst In Duke

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Big Four Tournament usually brings out the best in everybody.

But Friday night it brought out the worst in Duke. "We got tired early," said Blue Devil Coach Bill Foster. "At the end we just didn't have enough."

Not only that, the Blue Devils committed too many fouls and the result was a conclusive 79-66 victory for second-ranked North Carolina and a place in Saturday night's finals against North Carolina State. The Wolfpack upset No. 18 Wake Forest 79-77 in the other opening-round game.

Always an emotional basketball tournament because the teams are all from the state of North Carolina — and all fiercely competitive — the players expressed their usual zeal in the first-night doubleheader. In the North Carolina-Duke game, for instance, a total of 53 fouls were called.

In other games involving ranked teams, No. 5 San Francisco stopped Tennessee 84-75 in the Fiesta Classic at TEMPE, Ariz.; No. 6 UCLA crushed Colorado 104-70; No. 7 Arkansas whipped Hawaii 78-53 and No. 12 Syracuse defeated LeMoyne 90-62 in its own Carrier Classic.

Phil Ford and Mike O'Koren each scored 23 points to lead North Carolina's victory. The Tar Heels were a cold-shooting team before getting untracked in the second half behind their two scoring stars. North Carolina took the lead for good on a tip-in by O'Koren that made the score 58-57.

Freshman Kenny Matthews scored with one second remaining to give North Carolina State its victory over Wake Forest. Matthews, who scored eight points, won the game on an 18-foot jump shot. Wake Forest had trailed nearly the entire second half but tied the game at 77 when Rod Griffin scored with six seconds remaining. James Hardy and Chubby Cox scored 22 points apiece, leading San Francisco over Tennessee. In the nightcap of the Fiesta Classic, Arizona State defeated Iowa State 87-69 as Rick and Blake Taylor combined for 49 points.

Dale Shackelford scored 17 points and Billy Drew came off the bench to score 17 as Syracuse beat LeMoyne. Robert Chapman's 30 points powered Michigan State over Rhode Island 92-64 in the second game of the Carrier Classic.

Raymond Townsend scored a career-high 21 points and UCLA made 42 of a Pauley Pavilion record 52 free throws to beat Colorado.

Sidney Moncreif's 25 points led Arkansas over Hawaii. Elsewhere, Missouri and Texas-El Paso advanced to Saturday's finals of the Show-Me Classic in Columbia, Mo. Brad Droy scored 14 points to lead Missouri over Butler 87-66 and Texas-El Paso whipped Northwestern 58-54 with the help of Calvin Hale's layup in the closing minutes.

Tom Carluccio scored 26 points to lead Delaware over Davidson 92-89 in a first-round game of the Charlotte Invitational. Illinois State won the other first-round game, ripping Colgate 94-62.

Northeastern past American University 72-68. In the Florida Southern Citrus Invitational at Lakeland, Fla., a 22-foot jump shot at the buzzer by Kevin Hamilton gave Iona a 69-67 victory over North Alabama and Florida Southern topped Flagler College of Florida 69-58 behind Marshall Lester's 22 points. Reggie Hannah's 20 points led

Florida over Manhattan 93-81. Kansas blasted SMU 107-71 behind John Douglas' 22-point performance and John Woods scored two crucial baskets in the last two minutes to lead Washington over Seattle Pacific 78-70.

Smith Doesn't Like Tournament

By BILL WELCH
Associated Press Writer

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — No. 2 North Carolina met unheralded North Carolina State for the championship of the Big Four basketball tournament Saturday night, a game Tar Heel coach Dean Smith would rather not have to play.

"I've been against the Big Four tournament since the beginning," Smith said of the eight-year-old battle of the state's four Atlantic Coast Conference teams.

North Carolina earned its way into the final game with a 79-66 win over Duke, as the Tar Heels got 23-point performances from both guard Phil Ford and forward Mike O'Koren. N.C. State won its berth with a 79-77 upset over No. 18 Wake Forest in a thriller that was decided by freshman Kenny Matthews' last-second 18-foot jump shot.

"These are two tough non-conference games, referring to the fact that the outcome won't count in league standings. It's so much harder. Next time, Duke will be waiting for us."

N.C. State beat Wake Forest — winner of the Big Four tournament the past three years — on a desperation shot. Wake's Rod Griffin, who finished with 30 points, had tied the score with six seconds remaining and the Wolfpack got the ball down court to Matthews without calling a time out.

"We didn't expect it to go in," admitted State sophomore Clyde Austin. "It wasn't supposed to go to anybody. There wasn't a play. Kenny is about the best shooter on the team. He's a pure shooter."

"It's hard to describe," admitted Matthews, the hero of his first ACC game. "We just went for one shot. Somebody had to get open. I didn't hesitate at all."

Hawkeye Whitney led N. C. State with 26 points, while junior transfer Kendal Pinder had 13 and Tony Warren tossed in 14 before fouling out. Center Larry Harrison displayed his newly developed hook shot while scoring 16 points for Wake Forest, and Griffin dominated the boards with 12 rebounds.

"It was nice to beat a nationally ranked team," admitted State coach Norm Sloan afterwards. "It was one of the most physical games I've ever seen. They were uptight and some got a case of the nerves. I guess the coaches did too."

North Carolina warmed up its shooting hand in the second half, hitting two-thirds of the second half field goal attempts after shooting 33 per cent from the floor in the first. "The teams were a little too excited," Smith said. "It was a rugged first half. In the second half, we played better offensive basketball."

The Tar Heels went into their Four Corners offense with 5:23 remaining and a two-point lead, and UNC rattled off 17 points to Duke's six in the supposedly slow-down offense.

Duke stayed close for much of the game, with both teams exchanging the lead 13 times in the second half before UNC took over for good with eight minutes remaining.

The Blue Devils hit 26 of 33 free throws, with 18 of Jim Sparnackel' 26 points coming at the stripe.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers have signed free-agent linebacker Brad Cousino as a roster replacement for injured defensive lineman John Banaszak.

Banaszak, a four-year veteran, was placed on the injured reserve list with a knee injury and will not be eligible to play in the Steelers' remaining games this season.

Cousino, 6-foot, 216 pounds, played 14 games with the Cincinnati Bengals in 1975 after earning a place on the roster as a free agent.

Youth Basketball

Youth basketball programs begin registration and practice this week in the Greenville Parks and Recreation Department.

On Monday and Wednesday, from 3 to 4 p.m., the "Pee Wee" Division, ages 9-10 meet.

On Monday and Wednesday, 4 to 5:15 p.m., the "Midget" Division, ages 11-12 meet.

On Tuesday and Thursday, from 4 to 5:15 p.m., the "Youth" Division, ages 13-14, meets.

On Friday from 4 to 5:15 p.m., the "Senior" Division, ages 15-16 meets.

A child's age as of April 1, 1978, will determine which division he plays in.

Registration will be held at Elm Street, South Greenville and West Greenville gyms for all divisions.

Ahoskie Run Set

The 11th annual Winter Runathon will be held in Ahoskie on Saturday. The race is sponsored by the Ahoskie Rotary Club.

Registration will get underway at 9:30 a.m. at the Ahoskie High School gym, and entries will close at 11 a.m.

A ten-mile race will begin at 12 noon, with bus transportation from Ahoskie to the starting site at 11:30 a.m. All entrants in this race must be known to meet director Ric Rogers or present a coach's or physician's note or a news clipping of a performance of over two miles.

A one-mile run for ages 12 and under will start at 12:30 p.m., with a one-mile Rotarian's Joggers Special at 12:45 p.m.

A two-mile run for ages 13 and up will be held at 1:30 p.m. Prizes will be awarded to the top ten finishers in the ten-mile run, along with the top five 40 and over, the oldest runner, the first place woman, and awards for all finishers.

Special awards will be made for the youngest runner, the first place boy and girl, and to all finishers in the fun-run. Awards will be made in other events, also.

An entry fee of $2 is charged for all races except for the fun-run, which has a $1.50 entry fee.

Another Try For A National Securities Market

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer
BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — Some day, maybe soon, American investors will be buying and selling stocks through something called a national securities market. Congress said so in legislation passed two years ago.

But when? What will it be like? How well will it work? And will it give investors benefits they can't get now through today's diverse array of stock exchanges and markets around the country.

Wall Street leaders and their regulators from Washington, who have been grappling with and haggling over those questions for years, had another go, at it here this past week.

But as the days passed at the winter meeting of the Securities Industry Association, the brokers' trade group, many of the answers proved as elusive as ever.

While they debated the future, the stock market itself had its hands full with the present. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 20.44 to 823.98 in the past week but the broader market did not fare as poorly.

Standard & Poor's 500 stock index fell 2.02 to 94.67, and the New York Stock Exchange composite index lost .99 to 52.34.

Big Board volume averaged 22.51 million shares a day against 23.94 million the week before.

To Boca Raton, five of the nation's stock exchanges brought along what they held out as evidence of a healthy step forward toward the central market.

They demonstrated what they called an Intermarket Trading System, designed to provide a computerized communications linkup of their trading floors, and slated for a pilot test next spring.

Through this system, they said, brokers who make markets in given stocks at each exchange would compete with each other for buy and sell orders, thus providing brokers representing investors with a chance to shop around for the best price available.

If a Los Angeles investor's broker could get him a better price in Philadelphia than at the Pacific Stock Exchange, it would be there for the taking.

The officials took pains to point out that this system, presuming it eventually is put into effect, wouldn't settle all the debates or resolve all the jockeying for position that has been going on in the industry and Washington for so long.

But as John J. Phelan Jr., vice chairman of the NYSE, said in an interview, "at least this gets it going."

SIA president Edward I. O'Brien, who had chided the industry at its last convention last spring for its failure to agree on central market issues, sounded a considerably more optimistic note this time.

"While progress has been mixed, progress there has been," he declared in a speech.

The brokers also seemed to win something of a victory when the Securities and Exchange Commission backed off on a Jan. 1 starting date for a big change the SEC had proposed over strong industry objections—allowing brokers for the first time to act as dealers in listed stocks without going through exchange facilities.

But Harold M. Williams, the SEC chairman, said a new target date for the start of off-board trading would be set soon. And whatever hopes the industry leaders had for a pat on the back from Williams for their most recent efforts went unfulfilled.

Williams did go so far as to acknowledge, "there are some encouraging signals that the industry has begun to perceive its responsibilities."

He called the Intermarket Trading System "a real step forward" but he also said it was "not a solution."

And, frequently citing the fact that the SEC is under orders from Congress to develop a central market, he asserted, "The commission is not satisfied with the current rate of progress, despite the difficulty of the task."

"We are concerned with the inability of the industry to provide its own leadership — even when it claims to feel as threatened as it does."

Still another note of uncertainty and controversy was sounded on an element of the central market plan that is already in effect — the full price competition on brokerage commissions which replaced the previous fixed rate schedule May 1, 1975.

In the 2½ years since that "May day" came to Wall Street, fierce competition has raged among brokers for the once highly-profitable business of big investing institutions like banks and insurance companies. This in turn has helped prompt a rash of mergers and closings among brokerage houses, which Williams noted has reduced the exchange community by roughly 100 firms.

Wild Dog Packs Being Destroyed

By PETER MATTIACE
Associated Press Writer
BUENA, N.J. (AP) — The scraggly collie, starving and dazed from weeks in the cold pine barrens, stared into the muzzle of Guerdan Smith's shotgun.

"Here boy, come here," Smith said. But the collie backed away.

Crack! The collie was blown on his side, yelping and wagging its tail frantically. Smith quickly reloaded and fired again point-blank. It was over.

"We love them, but what can we do? It's out of control right now," he said.

In the farm and pine country of southern New Jersey, man's worst enemy is the wild dog. One farm was raided in October by a pack of dogs that killed two sheep, seven goats and 13 pigs. The pack, officials say, may have been made up of as many as 20 dogs.

Smith, 60, a tall, gentle paint contractor and recently deputized wild dog warden of the area, today leads a posse of about 15 experienced hunters in an effort to thin out the population of wild canines.

"The dogs, it's not their fault," Smith said, cruising the back roads in his pickup truck Friday. "It's those out-of-town folks who are dropping their dogs off here. They get rid of them. And dogs have to eat. I even caught a Philadelphia cop doing it once."

"Everybody thinks this is a game for kids, but you've got to know what you're doing, boy," he said. "They'll turn on you. Just as soon as run, they'll turn on you."

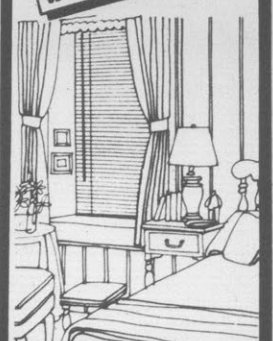

Smith knows his wild dogs. He was last called to duty 10 years ago when a dog pack killed half a dozen sheep.

"I got 'em that same night," he said. "I left one carcass out there and they came back at night to kill some more. I got 'em all."

The wild dog warden turned his truck into an old gravel pit. "I don't wish anybody any trouble, but I hope there's no one in here dropping off a dog."

Two hounds bounded out of the woods, barking playfully. Smith stepped out of the cab and took aim. The dogs looked up innocently.

AM Mobile

Honest Abe was designed and priced with one thing in mind: to become the biggest selling 40 channel AM mobile unit in America. It's got the styling. The kind that talks even when the power's off. It's got the features. RF gain control and delta tune. A variable mike gain control right on the front panel, so you can modulate just right. A big meter that not only reads signal strength received and relative RF output, but also turns into a true modulation meter with the flick of a switch.

Mrs. Emma Dupree of Fountain

She's Lucky, She Says

FOUNTAIN — "I'm a lucky woman," Mrs. Emma Williams Dupree said. "They used to say the seventh child of a family was the lucky one and that didn't seem to fit me. Then I happened to think one day — 'I'm not the seventh child my mama had, but I am her seventh daughter. That must be why I always was so lucky.'"

"My mama had 14 babes to cry and she raised 11. I was the 13th."

Mrs. Dupree celebrated her 80th birthday July 4. She does her own housework, tends her garden with a hoe, makes soap and quilts in her spare time, cares for an older brother and a great grandchild every day, and still has time to receive a visitor or help a friend or a stranger in need whenever she's called upon.

"When I was young, I could pick 310 pounds of cotton in a day and leave the sun runnin'," she said. "I never have known what it's like to be tired. I'm gettin' on in age now, but I still ain't tired."

Mrs. Dupree grew up in Falkland, the daughter of Noah and Penine Williams. She worked from the time she was a child as a maid in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eaton King. Her husband, Austin Dupree Jr., was a driver for Dr. Jenness Morrill and she sometimes went along with Dr. Morrill on difficult house calls to help out with a severely ill person or a newborn baby.

"Dr. Morrill used to say it was a pity I didn't get a chance at much education," she said. (The school for the black children then ran only to the fourth grade.) "He said he never knew a quicker mind or more willin' hands than mine. There's never been a job I was asked to do that I wouldn't do the very best I could. And I never ran into many I couldn't do right well."

Mrs. Dupree bore six children. One died in infancy. Two sons, John and Herbert Dupree, were career military men. Both have died in recent years. A daughter, Lucy, died last year. Only Doris Vines, who lives in Fountain, and Mary Emma Dupree of Newark, N. J. are living. Her husband died about three years ago.

"When Dr. Morrill stopped

needin' a driver, he suggested my husband to a doctor in Greenville," she said. "But I didn't want to move over there. I wanted to raise my children out in the country, yet near a school and a church so they wouldn't stray. We found a place here near Fountain. I've been right around here ever since — in several different houses."

Mrs. Dupree was in the midst of soap-making the day a reporter visited her. She'd already cut out three washpots full and had one to go. "Soap's not hard to make if you know what it's supposed to do and when to make it," she said. "I made this the other Saturday after dinner."

"The best time to make it is on the full of the moon when it's swingin' away. I don't go by a recipe for soap or anything else I cook. I just know how it's suppose to turn out. I put about two buckets of water in the pot and then add lye (about four boxes to each pot) and the grease. I used 100 pounds of grease in the four pots. I keep a plenty of water sittin' by each pot, so I can add it as I need to to get the right consistency."

"I sho' do thank the man that brought me this grease," she said, as she slapped a cake of the brilliantly white soap. "This is fine soap. Good grease is hard to come by these days. He just asked someone if they knew anybody who still makes soap and she sent him to me."

She said she used to make soap twice a year, in the spring and in the fall. That was the custom of almost everyone, she said.

The first she ever made, she said, was done on the sly when she was 12 years old. "My mama was sick," she recalled, "and I knew it was about time to get some soap made. So I just got the grease out of the smokehouse and tackled the job. It turned out good and, good gracious, did I get the praise. I've been makin' it ever since."

Mrs. Dupree loves to tell about the time she was visited by two doctors from a pharmaceutical company in New Jersey. They wanted her to share with them her knowledge of herbs. She did just that. "My mouth was made to talk," she said, "and I'll tell anyone any little bit I know about anything if they seem to really be interested the way these ladies were."

She raises a number of herbs — maypops, hollychoke, mint, foxglove, and others—in her yard and can tell the benefits of each of these. She knows about many more herbs that she helped "an old granny woman we called Aunt Susie Golden" collect in the lowlands around Falkland when she was a young girl. "There used to be gingseng around here," she said. "I don't know about now, but I saw those roots shaped like little men when I was a child."

Noah Williams Jr., 89, who lives with her, is the only sibling Mrs. Dupree has left. "I nursed all my brothers and sisters but two," she said, "and I nursed my mother and some of my aunts and cousins, too. 'I had to go and get one of my aunts when she got old and feeble and hang her furniture up to the rafters in the shed. I didn't have room enough for her furniture, but I had room enough for her, and that was when my children were home and we were living in a three-room house.'"

Mrs. Dupree has collards and salad greens growing this time of year and raises these and other vegetables in summer. "I've always had a knack for growing things," she said. "They used to say around here that even a rotten seed would sprout if I planted it. People used to come and get me to go and plant their gardens for them. They declared they did better when I planted them."

She often cooked game scorned by hunters' wives when she was young, she said, and also took in sewing. She still does some hand sewing and especially enjoys piecing quilt tops, though she calls on a cousin to finish them because she dislikes the quilting phase of the job.

"Taking care of children is what I have always liked to do the most," she said. "I never could stand to see a parent or a cook not take up time with children. When I saw little children being ignored, I'd go get them and play with them myself. Black or white didn't matter with me. I just love little children."

Asked about church membership, she said, "I go to all the churches. I don't go to church to know the Lord. I know Him in my heart. I just go 'round to all the churches whenever I can so I can see the people. That's what I enjoy."

"I never was one for sleepin'," she said. "Now I try to get to bed after the 11 o'clock news goes off, but I don't always sleep. I just stay there long as I can so I won't keep the others awake. I get up in time to get things straight before the grand baby comes—along about 4 o'clock usually."

"I think the reason I'm so well off is that I've used myself. I hope there never comes a time that I have to be done for. I wanta keep on doin' for other folks."

NOT YET CUT OUT... soap fills a washpot used by Mrs. Emma Dupree a few days earlier to make a four-pot batch in the yard of her Fountain home.

Miss Payton, Mr. Clemons Are Married On Saturday

Shirley Ann Payton and Raymond Earl Clemons were married in Cedar Grove Missionary Baptist Church Saturday at 5 p.m. by Rev. Kenneth Hammond in a double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. (Buster) Payton of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Mamie Ruth Joyner of Baltimore, Md.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of white silk organza over peau de soie designed with a high collar encircled with floral Venise lace. The empire sheer bodice featured rows of matching lace, extending down the front and also in a V-design trimmed in ruffled Brussels lace. The dress also featured an A-line skirt. The chapel length train was enhanced with a flounce of Brussels lace at the hemline. The waistline was trimmed with floral Venise lace. She wore a walking length mantilla edged in Brussels lace held in place by a Camelot cap over-laid in lace beaded with bridal pearls. She carried an all-white cascade bouquet of princess carnations, pom-poms, and baby's breath.

The church was set in candlelight with a brass archway with two single branch candelabra standing on each side. In the front of the archway stood a kneeling bench. On each side of the church stood two sets of three-branch candelabra, with one set of seven-branch candelabra in the choir stand. Emerald palms were used throughout the church. Two arrangements of white gladioli and yellow chrysanthemum were used on the altar. The pews were marked with aisle markers of brass standard with burning tapers, holding arrangements of palms and pom-poms.

Vera Blackwell of Greenville, sister of the bride, was honor attendant. She wore a formal gown with butterfly sleeves and a matching veil with a bow. She carried a traditional high-style bouquet of blue carnations, pom-poms and baby's breath.

Bridesmaids were Jackie Payton, sister of the bride, Laverna Blackwell, niece of the bride, Debra Clemons, cousin of the bridegroom, all of Greenville, and Berul Gatlin of Grimesland. They wore dresses identical to the honor attendants and carried bouquets of yellow similar to the honor attendants.

Karla Williams of Hyattsville, Md., and Nicole Gatlin of Grimesland, both cousins of the bride, were flower girls. They wore formal dresses with butterfly sleeves with a matching bow. They carried a floral ball with carnation petals accented with white pom-poms and miniature carnations.

Ray Sharp of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were David Payton, brother of the bride, Cyprus Blackwell, Jeffery Adams, cousin of the bride, all of Greenville, Randy Freeman of Williamston, cousin of the bride, and Eugene Gatlin of Grimesland. Ring bearer was cousin of the bride, Bryan Hines of Greenville.

Wedding music was provided by organist Rodger Ingram of

MRS. RAYMOND EARL CLEMONS

Ayden, and soloist Vergeneil Person of Winterville.

A reception was held in the church dining hall. The tables were decorated with holly and candles. The wedding table was decorated with a white cloth trimmed with Venise lace and candles. Cake was served by Ms. Barbara Leary, dinner was served by Mrs. Shirley Adams, Mrs. Mamie Walter, Ms. Fay Stock, Ms. Lillie White, and Ms. Gladys Whitehurst. Guests were greeted by Ms. Ellen Moore, and Mrs. Rosa Little was in charge of gifts.

Westhaven Club Has Dinner

The Westhaven Home and Garden Club held its final meeting for the year at the King and Queen Restaurant Tuesday evening.

New officers were elected during the business meeting. Felice Parent is the new president. Other officers are Tommie Pratt, vice president, Alice Angel, secretary, and Becky Alexander, treasurer.

It was decided that luminaries would be placed at the subdivision entrance Christmas Eve and contributions would be made, to schools that Westhaven children attend, by the club.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Vertie McFall Jan. 31.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Americans aren't intimidated anymore by authority, big business, or strong unions. But let a telephone ring and everything stops.

On television the other night, I watched a love scene that was so torrid my kids suggested I leave the room. As the couple hungrily clung to one another, shutting out all reason and giving way to animal lust, the phone rang. The man dropped the woman like a bad habit and said, "I'll get it."

I've seen war movies where men will be engaged in a full-scale battle for their lives. As mortar shells explode, tanks squeak along, artillery thunders, guns crack and aircraft roars, a phone will ring. Everyone hears it and freezes with anticipation.

Instinctively, one poor infantryman will crawl on his stomach for 500 yards, dodging mines and bullets to answer it. In one flick I actually heard the guy yell down to a foxhole, "Hey Capt'n it's for you." (Wouldn't they feel like a fool if it was a wrong number?)

One evening when I was taking out the garbage cans I was at the end of the drive when I heard the phone ring in the house. Instinctively, I dropped the cans and as they rolled into the street, I collided with a garden hose in the garage, spiked a small child, knocked over a kitchen chair and called the light switch an obscene name. When I realized whomever had hung up, I said aloud, "I don't know who you are, or where you are, but someday, Mr. Three-ring-a-dings, we'll meet, and when we do, I'm going to fix it so your fingers will never walk through the yellow pages again."

A few years ago, I discovered another strange phenomenon about the phone. Not only did its ring make our heart beat faster and bring us to our feet, but the phone always knew when we sat down to dinner and alerted everyone within our radius. I tried rattling dishes around 4:00 in the afternoon in an effort to fool it, but the phone was too smart. It rang only when we sat down to eat.

We made a gutsy stand. We decided not to answer the phone during the dinner hour. That night we sat at the table for 45 minutes during which time the phone didn't ring once.

Finally, I grabbed the phone and called the operator to find out what was wrong.

You see? The phone even has ways of making you talk!

Help Girlfriend In Time Of Need

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My girlfriend's husband got on the wrong side of the law and might have to spend some time in prison.

My friend will be living all alone in a trailer, and she is very much pregnant. I want to go and stay with her at least until her baby is born. I know she needs me.

She's my dearest friend. She and her husband took me in when I really needed it. They proved to be true friends, and I will never forget it.

My problem is my boyfriend. He says, "Forget them—they aren't worth bothering about."

He's never met her husband, and he met my girlfriend only once.

What should I do? I love my boyfriend but I feel I owe my girlfriend something.

NEEDS ADVICE

DEAR NEEDS: Tell your boyfriend that you are quite capable of determining what your friends are "worth"—and they are worth a lot to you. Then go help your girlfriend in her time of need.

DEAR ABBY: I am 41 and Mel is 44. We've been married for 20 years and have three nice children—one is still at home. We have no money problem and no sex problems, but all of a sudden Mel says he wants to be "free." No divorce, mind you, he just wants to be free to come and go as he pleases, so he rented an apartment and bought new furniture. I even helped him move.

He was gone for a week, then he came home. He said he missed our dog.

I prayed night and day that he'd stay home, but three days later he went back to the apartment for the weekend.

I told him I loved him and begged him to give up the apartment. He said he liked me as a person, but he didn't think it was "love." Also, he didn't want to hurt me, but he had to be "free."

I don't think there's another woman. (There's hardly enough for me.) I'm so confused, it's tearing me apart. What should I do?

PART-TIME WIFE

DEAR PART-TIME: Marriage is a full-time commitment with no time off for good (or bad) behavior. If your husband wants to be "free," give him his freedom (legally) and you take yours. If the dog dies, he'll have nothing to come home for.

Diamonds More Than Girl's Best Friend

LONDON (UPI) — People once thought they were splinters of stars, or congealed dewdrops. Always there has been something mystic about diamonds.

"The diamond is more than just a beautiful stone," says George G. Blakey in "The Diamond," a sparkling new book about a girl's best friend.

To win them, it has been said, temples have been profaned, palaces looted, thrones torn to fragments, princes tortured, women strangled, guests poisoned by their hosts and slaves disembowled.

This is the 500th anniversary of the diamond's best known use, in an engagement ring. The first such ring recorded was ordered by Archduke Maximilian of Austria for Princess Mary of Burgundy in 1477.

In other eras diamonds were swallowed as curing medicine or as killing poison — powdered diamonds were Catherine de Medici's favorite brew for unwanted guests.

"No more than 40 tons of diamonds have been excavated since the beginning of time," Blakey says.

Not all this tiny quantity is of flashing, transparent stones. Some diamonds are pure black, like the 33.7-carat Amsterdam, which is "completely opaque even when submitted to the strongest light."

Blakey's delightful book is a mine of this kind of diamond lore. It covers every glittering facet of the subject from diamond mining to synthetic diamonds made in the laboratory.

A diamond, as everyone knows, is the hardest and purest substance in nature.

It is nothing but crystallized carbon — and carbon is one of the earth's most common elements. Every diamond is millions of years old, forged in heat and pressure deep inside the earth.

Yet people once "believed that such marvelous stones were splinters of the stars," Blakey writes. Ancient Greeks thought they were formed by lightning, and others said they were hardened dew.

"Some Hindu miners believed that diamonds grew like onions, and that size and quality denoted age. The belief that diamonds are living, growing things is still held in some parts of India."

Just the same, India's diamond mines — the world's first great source — were giving out by the early 1700s. "By a strange coincidence," diamonds were discovered at this time in Brazil, and just as Brazil's deposits were exhausted came the Great Diamond Rush in South Africa.

Not even the Klondike saw anything like it. It began in 1866 when a 15-year-old Afrikaner farm boy picked up a "pretty stone" — a 21.5-carat yellow diamond later called the Eureka. It has not ended yet.

Today the former Belgian Congo, rather than South Africa, is the greatest producer among the world's 17 diamond-mining countries. But most gem stones still come from South African mines.

Blakey, with typical thoroughness, outlines the high-finance maneuvers by which the great diamond magnates Rhodes, Barnato and Oppenheimer created the unique diamond monopoly still maintained by De Beers Consolidated Mines.

He describes how diamonds are cut and polished, how much of modern industry depends on industrial diamonds, how "crime and diamonds have gone hand in hand since the first diamond was discovered."

But the romance of diamonds runs continuously through his lavish book, published by Paddington Press.

He tells tales of "Diamond Jim" Brady and his 31 diamond-studded sets of cuff links, shirt studs and belt buckles. One set, each piece shaped like a railroad car, contained 2,548 diamonds.

"Literally the most expensive piece of jewelry in the world" was the 647-diamond necklace ordered by King Louis XV for his mistress, Madame du Barry, but never delivered. "Some historians," Blakey says, "believe it sparked the French Revolution."

"Nearly all the great diamonds have stories," he says,

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C.—Sunday, December 4, 1977—C-3

although "the legend of ill fortune attaches to remarkably few." The great exception is the Hope, which inflicted bad luck upon its owners "with monotonous regularity."

The oldest diamond known is the Koh-i-Noor ("Mountain of light"), first reported in 1304. When it was given to Queen Victoria in 1850 she was "positively disappointed" at its unflashy look — she had the 187-carat stone re-cut.

The 3,106-carat Cullinan is the biggest diamond ever found. All nine major gems cut from it — including the world's two

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

"One great impression which lingers in our minds is — how well most of us live in the United States. We are all quite spoiled by material things, while, in other countries, daily life is mostly hand-to-mouth existence," said Mrs. Bryce Tharp of Greenville.

The Tharps recently returned from a tour to Rome, Egypt, Syria, Jordan and the Holy Land. This was their fourth trip abroad and previous tours included two cruises and a three-month excursion to 15 countries.

The couple made 12 flights including one in a helicopter while they were gone. They rode horseback, camelback, in a horse-drawn carriage, on a felucca (Egyptian sailboat) ferry, bus, and minibus. Mrs. Tharp said they did a lot of climbing and a lot of walking.

Some of their souvenirs include rocks from Solomon's Quarries, from near the Great Pyramid, from Saqqara near the Alabaster Sphinx, from Bethany, sand from near the Sphinx, a "cartouche," like an Egyptian seal with their name in hieroglyphics and in Arabic, an Egyptian dress, Israeli dress, a brass sign of life and inlaid boxes from Damascus.

After spending part of a day in Rome, the couple left for Cairo, Egypt. "We were in Egypt a week — eating no salads and drinking no tap water the entire time. In fact, this was the general rule until we reached Jerusalem," added Mrs. Tharp.

"We found the Egyptians to be extremely polite — and filled with delight when they discovered I could speak a few words of Arabic. One pleasant young man invited us to accompany him to his village to see an ox-driven well which was over a 100 years old. Stone jars were bound on the vertical wheel to raise the water as the ox turned the horizontal wheel.

"We'll never forget the experience of being served hot tea in glasses in shops while visiting with the shopkeepers as we debated a purchase," continued Mrs. Tharp.

"We arose at 2:45 a.m. the day we left Jerusalem and drove to Tel Aviv where we began our journey home, by way of Rome and New York. Because our flight from Rome was an hour and a half late, we made our connecting flight from New York to Raleigh by a scant three minutes after hurrying through customs and a mad dash by helicopter from JFK Airport to LaGuardia.

"Finally, I must admit that it was a tiring trip but at the same time describe it as a fantastically wonderful experience," she concluded.

On The Young Side

By Sharon Connolly

The holiday spirit is beginning early for Rose High students as preparations for Christmas activities begin. Another topic on the minds of most students is fund-raising.

Acting upon the request of UNICEF, several clubs are planning various projects to raise money for this worthwhile cause.

The Math, Science-Ecology and Chess Clubs will be sponsoring a rock-a-thon on Dec. 9 and 10. It will begin at noon Friday and will end at noon the following day. The front of Rose High School will be the sight of this upcoming event. All proceeds will go to UNICEF.

One club has already earned money for UNICEF. The Health Horizon Club earned the money last Saturday as they held a bake sale.

The Math Club started something new last week. It was the sponsoring of a "logic problem contest".

Each week a logic problem will be available to all interested students. The first person to solve correctly the problem and turn it in will be the winner. The prizes awarded for this will be presented each Friday.

Christmas parties have already been planned by a few clubs at Rose. The Spanish Club decided on Dec. as the date of their annual affair.

The French Club's party will be Dec. 15. Refreshments will consist of various foods made from French recipes by the club members.

The Math Club has also begun planning for a Christmas party, but the date has not been decided yet.

Don Carr, Paige Levey and Tom Proctor, along with Science-Ecology advisor Ellis Banks, spent Saturday at a district meeting of the North Carolina Student Academy of Science in Goldsboro.

biggest cut diamonds — are now in the British crown jewels or owned by Britain's royal family.

Perhaps the most curious of diamond stories is the lamentable fate of the Carlotta.

This 33-carat stone, once owned by Emperor Maximilian of Mexico, eventually passed to a New York jeweler. In 1961 his daughter, thinking she heard burglars, hid the gem in a garbage can — and forgot to retrieve it. The garbage men came the next morning, and the Carlotta diamond was never seen again.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good time to consider how you can apply the principles and tenets that mean the most to you. Although you may feel you are not getting ahead fast enough, you can make considerable advance towards a well-organized and detailed course of action that helps you in the future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study details of any points you want to get across to others today and you won't be disappointed. Take needed treatment to get more pep.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Use your good judgment and taste and don't rely on hunches that could be erroneous. Loved one is in poor humor, but this changes.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Show more thought for those who live with you and avoid tense situations that might otherwise arise. Take time for meditation that could bring more harmony.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Show more concentrated effort in your work. Avoid one who could be detrimental to your best interests.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Don't be discouraged if your savings account is small. Study new source of revenue that can quickly build it up. Put economic measures into effect.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) An annoying situation should be handled conscientiously if you are to clear it up nicely. Good time to entertain close friends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A friend comes to you for advice. Be sympathetic, but avoid becoming involved.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) If you criticize friends too much you could easily lose them, so be tactful instead. Try to help with their problems.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Pay particular attention to practical affairs and be very precise in handling public matters. Take no risks with your credit.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Study all facts of a new enterprise you want to engage in. A new ally could be troublesome at first. Later it is just the opposite.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be conscientious in handling obligations and get good results. Be gentle with loved one and relieve tensions, increase happiness.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Be more active where association matters are concerned and get good results. Be more understanding and less critical.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have a flair for detail and should therefore have as fine an education as possible. Add a course in psychology so that your progeny will know how to handle people better.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, DEC. 5, 1977

GENERAL TENDENCIES: It could be difficult to gain your cherished desires early in the day, but later you will be able to handle matters of great importance. You can easily gain the goodwill of others now.

Claims Sound Repels Sharks

By CARL D. ROBINSON
SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—Sound waves in the surf from underwater loudspeakers may end the threat of shark attacks on Australian beaches next summer.

That is the hope of Theo Brown, 43, an Australian marine researcher who claims to have developed a new method of repelling the most feared denizen of the deep.

Beach-crazy Australians, who flock to their magnificent surfing beaches each summer, spend millions of dollars a year on aircraft, helicopters and beach patrols against sharks, erecting sharkproof nets on harbor beaches and catching them by the hundreds from trawlers.

Even though fatalities are few, the fear of sharks is with every swimmer in shark-infested Australian waters. In an average year, there are one or two fatal shark attacks and two or three non-fatal attacks, according to the best available statistics.

Brown plans to install his radical anti-shark device at Manly Beach, a popular resort in Sydney Harbor, starting in the summer of 1978.

Brown, who recently returned from five years of experiments in French Polynesia, said in an interview that he will set up three transducers or underwater transmitters on the sea bed about 300 yards offshore. The speakers will sound a very strong signal which he hopes will drive the sharks away.

Brown estimates he has spent more than $100,000 so far on developing his method, most of the money from private companies in Australia and overseas. His personal expenses are paid by the California-based World Life Research Institute.

Brown's experiments have touched off some controversy within the Australian scientific community. Much of the criticism centers on how long the noise will keep the sharks away, or even if it will deter them at all.

Chris Warner, the manager of a local shark aquarium, said he didn't think the method would be effective. "The beauty of the shark is its adaptability," he said, "and while you can irritate the shark's nervous system with a high-pitched sound, it will end up getting used to it. To the shark it's more the fear of the unknown rather than the sound itself."

Brown said his long-term goal is to develop a shark-repellent system that could be used for emergencies at sea, where most shark attacks take place.

Maverick Politicians Using 'System'

EDITORS NOTE—Kandra Hahn, city clerk of Lincoln, Neb., is one of a growing number of self-styled alternative politicians, dissatisfied with the status quo, but working through elective politics to change it. She was not a '60s radical, and she is unknown outside Lincoln. But she has a number of more famous colleagues, Tom Hayden among them, trying to do the same thing.

JONATHAN WOLMAN
AP Urban Affairs Writer
LINCOLN, Neb. (AP)—Kandra Hahn, a young Nebraskan who gave up a good job to risk running for the obscure post of county court clerk, is an unlikely political maverick.

In the 1960s, when other students were gearing up anti-war or civil rights campaigns, Ms. Hahn was studying Faulkner. When others left the Wheat Belt, heading for one coast or the other, she came home to Lincoln.

There was a brief stint with Nebraskans for Peace, but on the whole, the 1960s were quiet years for her. There was a marriage, a child, a divorce, a good job as a city hall reporter for the Lincoln Journal. But she quit the job in 1974 to run for office because she didn't like what she saw officeholders doing.

Now 30, Kandra Hahn is a political comrade of the likes of former antiwar leader Sam Brown and Florence McDonald, the feisty 60-year-old socialist auditor of Berkeley, Calif. In the past year, Ms. Hahn has been enrolling in workshops on "alternative public policies" with people like Brown and Mrs. McDonald. All are part of a growing network of alternative politicians.

Depression Goes Untreated

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Depression is a common illness in the United States that often goes untreated.

Recent surveys indicate 20 million people may suffer from serious depression, according to the California Medical Association. Severe depression often can be treated with medications.

Symptoms can include insomnia, extreme weight gain or loss, quick tiring, indecisiveness, difficulty in concentrating, anxiety and inability to experience pleasure.

FRESH FRUIT HARVEST UP

BUENOS AIRES (AP)—Argentina's fresh fruit industry reported significantly larger harvests in 1976-77, the Secretary of Agriculture and Livestock has reported.

Apples constitute two-thirds of the fruit harvested. Apple exports were up 28 percent; pear exports gained 45 percent.

Brazil is Argentina's largest customer for fresh fruit, consuming half its exports. Holland, Switzerland and West Germany are other important buyers, according to the secretary.

government, sitting through boring meetings and watching outrageous activities—not the least of which was incompetence," recalls Ms. Hahn, who ran as a Democrat. "Finally it occurred to me that I could do it better."

This political force emerged several years ago with leadership from a handful of former campus activists who had moved into the traditional political arena. Now there are an increasing number of officials, like Ms. Hahn, who never were really active in civil rights or antiwar campaigns, who are working to create alternative public policies.

Alternative policymakers are a loosely organized group with little in common—except a view that the corporate establishment has too much influence on public policy, and the average people too little. They are traditional Democrats like state Rep. Barney Frank in Massachusetts; prairie populists like North Dakota tax commissioner Byron Dorgan, avowed socialists like Mrs. McDonald.

Their major goals have been to find alternative approaches to investment of public funds, tax reform, energy policy, farm ownership and urban revitalization.

Many alternative politicians are obtaining real influence, ironic for those like Marion Barry, a civil rights activist who marched and boycotted and organized his way onto the District of Columbia city council; or those like Tom Hayden, who began their public careers in frequent clashes with the government, piling up criminal charges and often "anti-American" reputations as they challenged the system.

Some of the alternative politicians are well known because of their backgrounds, because of the jobs they have today and because of key "alternative policy" accomplishments. Chief among them:

Sam Brown: The antiwar, anti-Olympics activist was elected state treasurer in Colorado and then appointed by President Carter to head the ACTION agency which runs Vista and the Peace Corps.

Brown left Colorado reluctantly and only after initiating efforts to enforce "public control" over state money, a major thrust of the movement to find alternative approaches to public policies.

Tom Hayden: One of the defendants in the Chicago Seven conspiracy trial, Hayden tested his analysis of California's future at the polls, tallying more than a million Democratic votes in his primary challenge for a U.S. Senate nomination. He was defeated by incumbent John Tunney, who subsequently lost to Republican S.I. Hayakawa.

John Froines: Another Chicago Seven alumni, Froines is an accomplished chemist whose appointment as occupational health director of Vermont created a furor. On the basis of the job he did there, Froines has taken over as head of the federal Office of Toxic Substances.

Alternative policymakers are attempting to take the focus off the well-known personalities, to concentrate instead on finding new answers to old problems that plague public officials and then working to have the policies implemented.

There already have been some successes. Among them:

—In Madison, Wis., local lawmakers created a city-owned Community Development Corp., designed to channel federal urban aid and private investment dollars into projects like buying up land for public use and perhaps setting up a small business to provide job training.

—In Colorado, then-Treasurer Brown set up a policy in which banks which demonstrated "socially responsible" financial policies were favored for the deposit of state money. It has become a model in the movement for an activist view of "public use of public money."

—In Lincoln, Ms. Hahn moved quickly to streamline procedures to ensure that single parents receive child support payments as ordered by county judges and opened the court clerk's office to the public.

—In Washington, D.C., Marion Barry led the fight to ensure that low-income homeowners are not forced from their neighborhoods by property tax increases.

Alternative policymakers also are examining new proposals for property tax relief, severance taxes to compensate states for fuel and minerals extracted by private firms, and analyzing incentives for maximizing investment to rejuvenate central city neighborhoods.

'Snack Shack' Morning Coffee Break Center

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
HARRISON, Ark. (AP) — Washington has its cocktail parties, New York its three-martini lunches, but in small-town America it is at the morning coffee session that the moving and shaking is done.

Across the land, doctors, lawyers and merchant chiefs leave their offices at an appointed hour, gather at an appointed place, listen to the latest gossip and the latest jokes, rehash the latest athletic events and business deals and discuss the ones upcoming, and return to their daily toil reassured that stability still reigns in their town and, if not, at least they are in the know.

"We're going to get a new principal soon," a teacher at the Harrison High School confided. "The selection will be influenced, if not actually made, at the back table at the Snack Shack."

In Harrison, the appointed place is the Snack Shack — 10 is the appointed hour.

It is not the only coffee spot in town, of course. City and federal employees tend to gather at the Holiday Inn, retailers and advertising folk at the Calico Kitchen in the mall, another group at the Ramada, another at the bus station.

But the oldest established permanent floating coffee group in Harrison, and the most prestigious, is the one at the Snack Shack.

"We've been meeting every morning since the mid-'50s, since coffee was a nickel," said Jim Tilley, a banker. "Same people. The Snack Shack is the third place we've met. We've outlasted the first two, they're both long gone."

"We're just old friends who like to visit and insult one another and tell tall tales. It's a social thing."

Yes, but take a look at who the socializers are.

Regulars include members of the school board, the local Civil Service Commission, the president of the Community College, the editor of the paper, the head of the Parks Commission, the executive vice president of the Chamber of Commerce, the mayor on occasion, the congressman when he's in town, the district attorney, the stock broker, the fire chief, and, if the high school team won its most recent game, the coach.

"Power structure?" Bevan Dunlap laughed. "No, liars' club is more like it."

"In fact," said Dunlap, who is the Chamber of Commerce executive and resident wit, "if b.s. were music, this group would be the Norman Luboff Choir."

They are, indeed, a relaxed group, and the Snack Shack is a relaxed place for any group to gather, or any choir.

It is a block off the courthouse square, a linoleum and formica haven presided over by Irene Starkey, who calls everybody honey. She charges 30 cents for coffee, refills free, as many as you want, and always has a fresh batch ready at 10.

'Rat Fair' Is Control Step

By NEAL ULEVICH
PATHUM THANI, Thailand (AP) — A Third World Pied Piper tosses a squirming rat into a crowd of children — and the youngsters go wild with glee. Welcome to the Pathum Thani "Rat Fair."

Unlike the age-old fairy tale, Thailand's latest venture in pest control has a happy ending — unless you're a rat.

Officials of this rice-rich agricultural province 20 miles north of Bangkok say villagers killed 71,315 grain-gorged rodents in a recent two-day search-and-destroy mission. And they had a good time doing it.

The provincial government provided entertainment including boat races, a beauty contest, folk dancing and a gourmet rat barbecue.

Some Thais and visiting foreigners found the cuisine revolting and the "rat killing lessons" barbaric. But few argued with the results.

One expert estimated that the rat fair exercise wiped out 10 percent of Pathum Thani's resident rodent population, not bad for two days' work.

Pathum Thani lies in the Chao Phya River floodplain, an area rich, well-watered and blessed with a climate just right for rice cultivation. But it has a rat problem.

Last year, Thai government experts say, rats caused $10 million in losses to farmers throughout the country.

Pathum Thani province was one of the worst-hit by the plague. Thailand's agriculture ministry distributed different kinds of poisons to farmers, but the program was slow in catching on.

Bannasith Salabsaeng, a senior district officer in the province, thought a little local action coupled with "sanuk" — Thai for fun — might produce results.

A trial rat kill early this fall wiped out more than 20,000 of the pests in a single day. Pleased, Bannasith planned a full-scale offensive. He interested central government officials.

A much-heralded rat fair would rid the province of even more rats and promote one of Bannasith's pet projects — "Nutritious rat meat."

Farmers, mindful of the losses they suffer to the fast-breeding rats, rose at dawn on the festival day. Whole families took up hoe and stick, and flushed the rats out of paddies and brush.

Villages vied for silver trophies. Farmers converged on the province seat, site of the rat fair, for a grand tally of kills. Mercifully, rat tails sufficed for counting purposes.

The growing crowd watched traditional-style boat races on the Chao Phya and graceful moon maidens danced.

The crowd gravitated to the barbecue pit.

Cooks compared recipes, but most chefs appeared satisfied with a charcoal-broiled approach. The larger animals were dropped into a pile of burning hay.

The Thais were adamant in their hospitality, especially toward visiting Westerners.

"Try some, try some," coaxed one backyard chef, thrusting a plate of roast rat at a newsman.

"Um." There was a pause.

"A little bit like chicken, I guess."

Say U.S. Losing In Productivity

MENLO PARK, Calif. (UPI) — Research and development continues to decline in the United States, a decline that threatens a lower standard of living, according to Stanford Research Institute's magazine.

The quarterly cites a number of economic indicators, suggesting that the nation is losing its lead in productivity and technological innovation. A slowdown in innovation could mean fewer jobs and less trade overseas.

New Span On River Kwai

RIVER KWAI, Thailand (UPI) — The River Kwai has a new bridge but it is very shaky and even more temporary.

Film makers involved in the movie, "The Deer Hunter," have strung a swaying bamboo bridge over the 40-yard river, about an hour's trip by boat upriver from the most famous structure.

The film bridge is the third known span over this muddy river that was made famous by a book and a movie about the World War II Allied prisoners who built it under Japanese guard.

The original bridge was not used after the war. It later collapsed. Only a few pilings can be seen today.

A second, steel bridge over the river is used by the State Railways of Thailand. It carries hundreds of tourists a week to and over the river.

Now the EMI-Universal film starring Robert De Niro is going to use a third bridge.

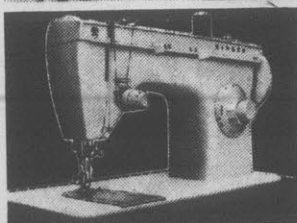

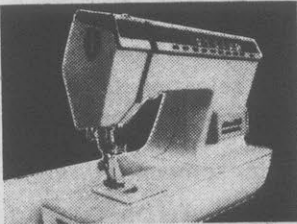

"The Deer Hunter" is set partly in Vietnam but the war scenes are being filmed here in the jungles of Kanchanaburi Province.

Stars De Niro, Christopher Walken and John Savage fall from the bridge (stuntmen will handle that part) after a brief fight with a Viet Cong guard.

Cincinnati City Manager A 'Model'

By LEE MITGANG
AP Urban Affairs Writer
CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — When William A. Donaldson became city manager two years ago, he found Cincinnati in decline. And city residents quickly found that their new man is not the typical bureaucrat.

For one thing, he doesn't like doors or walls or drawn curtains or anything that might stem the flow of people into his office or the offices of other city bureaucrats accustomed to working in cocoons.

Also, he never raises his voice.

This no-doors, no-yelling policy is the symbol of a brand of management that has made Donaldson one of the most praised city managers in the country. Both professional city administrators and elected officials in the cities where he's worked consider him one of the best in the business.

"You have to break down the institutions that isolate people from accountability for what they're doing," he explained between puffs on his pipe.

"What's happened in city government is that you have 18 or 20 different governments — the water department feuds with the sewer department and the sewer department feuds with public works. They become isolated little kingdoms. We end up changing the problem to fit it into a department. So the question is, what can we do to wreck that system?"

"The Donaldson style is an assault on the substance as well as the symbols of bureaucracy. He saw the principal role of the city manager not as making 'right' decisions but in getting other people to make right decisions," urbanologist Frederick O.R. Hayes wrote in a recent book, "Productivity in Local Government."

Donaldson was an apprentice embalmer in his teens, but he found his interest in public administration outweighed his interest in corpses. After taking some courses in public finance, his career eventually led him to jobs as city manager of four cities with different kinds of problems — Montclair, Calif., Scottsdale, Ariz., Tacoma, Wash., and now Cincinnati.

Reluctant to take the job in Cincinnati at first — "I only came because I heard they had a great zoo" — Donaldson soon discovered he would be dealing with a city in deeper trouble than its citizens or government realized.

"Cincinnati was the only city I ever went to that didn't seem to be in a lot of trouble when I got there. What happened was it took about a month after I arrived. The city couldn't pay its bills. And no one had paid a bit of attention. And then we got indications of, by our standards, gross corruptions in the police department and we ended up getting the police chief indicted."

A series of swift actions by Donaldson followed to bring the city's deficit ridden budget under control. He put a freeze on city jobs and cut the work force from about 9,200 workers to 6,500. He also got the city to face the fact that it was shrinking.

"What I found out was that every city department was still planning to get bigger. Nobody likes to talk about getting smaller. I told the Chamber of Commerce we were planning on getting smaller, and they had a hemorrhage. So finally we called it 'managing the mature city,' and that sounded better."

Now, with increased aid from the federal government and an improving local economy, Donaldson feels the city can operate less stringently, at least for the next two years. But he has been working hard to get the city's department heads "to find what the opportunities are for getting smaller."

In every city Donaldson has been in, there are pictures of him wearing firehats and zooming around town, an insatiable tinkerer forever thinking out loud how a firetruck, firehose, garbage truck or police squad car can be made better.

Best known is the story of "Godzilla," the giant, one-armed garbage truck Donaldson brought to Scottsdale, where he was city manager from 1965 to 1971. The metal arm on the side of the truck is able to lift plastic garbage cans off the sidewalk, empty them into the truck and return them to the sidewalk. All that is needed to run "Godzilla" is the driver.

By comparison, even cities with relatively efficient garbage systems generally use two-man crews, and in New York there are three men to a truck.

But to Donaldson, "Godzilla" did more than just save the city money.

"Scottsdale was a very rapidly growing area. What they really needed to do was develop a sense of identity. We built the new garbage truck which made everyone take notice. It worked very well."

It was in Tacoma, from 1971 to 1975, that Donaldson was able to hatch many of the city management techniques that now are his trademark in Cincinnati.

He developed a working relationship with outside experts and technologists and encouraged city department heads to do likewise.

He also developed an ingenious "intern program" that has worked in both Tacoma and Cincinnati. For three months each, two middle-level managers in city departments sit in Donaldson's office and are given tasks that have nothing to do with their usual jobs.

As a result, the interns learn a lot about other city departments, including the city manager's office.

Donaldson is a firm believer in the manager-council form of city government, in which an elected mayor handles the politics and the manager answers only to the city council in administering day-to-day municipal operations.

Lights Change For The Season

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Empire State Building changes its colors to suit the season. A new floodlighting system that uses 204 giant arc lamps bathes the top 30 floors in red and amber light for fall, red and green for the Christmas season, white for New Year's Eve, red, white and blue for Washington's and Lincoln's birthdays, and green for St. Patrick's day. The building is lit in white the remainder of the year.

A Raw Energy In Tina Turner

By CRAIG SCHWED
MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Tina Turner comes on stage like a tigress — prancing, dancing and shaking her scantily-clad torso while she belts out tunes ranging from rock 'n' roll to ballads.

Raw energy is what comes across the footlights when she performs with her eight-piece band and four dancers.

But the quiet-spoken singer does not think of herself as a sex symbol.

"I'm not a sexpot," she said in an interview between shows. "That's just how the performance comes through."

Her energy, however, does not end when she steps off the stage.

"I'm an energetic person wherever I go. In the supermarket or wherever, I get things done quickly."

Tina began touring in May, without her husband Ike and the Ikeettes for the first time in 16 years. The two are getting a divorce.

She said things on the road are not quite the same without her husband:

"All the responsibilities and decisions are left up to me. The show is basically the same but it's a little hard for me 'cause he was the businessman."

Tina, who was born 55 miles from Memphis, in Nutbush, Tenn., said, however, that she still enjoys the traveling revue.

"We're getting to all the people. The act has something for everyone and it makes me feel good."

The brown-eyed singer said the group will interrupt its tour several times to record an album of songs written by Turner and other artists. She said the album will be ready for release in January.

"I will follow the style of music today, the 'disco-inferno,' don't leave me this way" type of music. I'll put more emphasis on singing to show people the other side of me."

The band began the set in Memphis with an instrumental version of the Turners' most popular hit, "Proud Mary," then Tina strutted on stage in the first of four brief outfits.

The middle-aged-to-young crowd oohed and aahed, and by the time she exited everyone was on their feet for her performance which included such songs as "Ain't it Funny How Time Slips Away," "Watch Closely Now," "Proud Mary" and others.

The rock 'n' roll band backing her shifted easily to rhythm and blues numbers and a few ballads done to "bring out the misty feeling in people."

Life On Ohio River Now A 'Four-Lane Boulevard'

By STRAT DOUTHAT
Associated Press Writer

Fred Way and Tom Miller live nearly 1,000 miles apart, yet their lives are closely connected by the same great stream of twisting, turning energy that flows through the heartland of this country.

Both men live near the banks of the Ohio River. They are riverboat pilots, past and present. Way, who received his pilot's license a half-century ago, is retired. But he still keeps close tabs on the river, editing a quarterly magazine devoted to life on the Ohio.

"It's a four-lane boulevard out here now, compared with what it used to be," he said one evening, while cruising downstream in the Delta Queen, one of two steamboats still plying the Ohio. "The river was just a narrow path back when I began. There were lots of places where you had to stop and calculate before passing a boat coming the other way."

A resident of Sewickley, Pa., Way has been a riverman for all but a handful of his 76 years. He dates back to the Ohio's grand and glorious age, when hundreds of proud steamboats churned up and down the river, carrying goods and passengers. It was an era that spawned its own, unique culture and it lasted more than a century, from the 1820s — when Indians and river pirates often preyed upon the steamboats — until the advent of the diesel engine in the 1930s.

The river today is a series of long, stable pools created by a system of locks and dams. Fifty years ago, however, the river's shifting treachery resulted in dozens of fatal accidents.

"Back when I started, the river would get so low in the summer that the boats would stop running," Way said as he sat in the Delta Queen's glassed-in pilothouse. "River people also had to be farmers in those days. All they ever talked about in the pilothouse back then was crops and hogs."

"That's right," agreed Capt. Harry Loudon, 70, of Cincinnati. "The river has changed a lot since those days. We used to set our own buoys with milk cans or coffee cans, anything that would float. That was before 1929, when the Corps of Engineers finished marking and dredging the channel and building the dams."

Loudon stood braced at the steamboat's wheel. He peered through the pilothouse window, spied an approaching towboat and quickly gave a long pull on

His action released a tremendous "Ommmmmm" which bounced off the surrounding hills and floated back through the darkness.

The Delta Queen was some 50 miles downstream from Pittsburgh, where the Ohio is born of the wedding of the Allegheny and the Monongahela. Between there and Wheeling, W.Va., some 80 miles downstream, the river is lined with heavy industry, especially glowing steel mills which periodically emit huge sprays of sparks that lend a rosy glow to the night sky.

The mill towns along this section of the river swelled dramatically during the early years of this century as countless thousands of Middle European emigrants answered the call of the blast furnaces. As a result, the communities not only became steel-producing centers but human melting pots as well.

But the Upper Ohio Valley's economic picture is not so rosy these days. The vast quantities of imported steel are beginning to take a toll in communities like Youngstown, Ohio, where the jobs of 5,000 steel workers recently were wiped out by a mill closing.

These closings are becoming commonplace. While some mill towns are still prosperous, others — such as McKees Rocks, just a rifle shot downstream from Pittsburgh — are suffering from rising unemployment and dwindling tax bases, due to mill closings. The result is massive urban decay, accompanied by growing crime and welfare costs.

But the Upper Ohio's mill towns still produce one-third of this nation's steel. And the coal industry is booming along the upper regions of the valley, in Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia.

This has called for a flourishing barge traffic in the Ohio. Industry sources estimate these barges carried some 140 million tons of coal, coke, oil, steel and gasoline up and down the river last year. On almost any given day, dozens of towboats and hundreds of barges can be seen chugging back and forth along the 981-mile stretch of river between Pittsburgh and Cairo, Ill., where the Ohio empties into the Mississippi.

The crewmen aboard these towboats are no longer the heroic figures of the past when Mark Twain glamorized life on the river. Today's rivermen are an almost anonymous breed, spending long, lonely hours performing demanding and dangerous tasks.

Many of the crews operating on the Ohio begin their journeys weeks earlier in New Orleans or Texas. Often, their only contact with their families is through the help of marine telephone operators such as Elizabeth Stiers of Marietta, Ohio.

Known as "the angel of the river," this jolly, grey-haired woman is one of several operators strung along the river. Like the others, she has many friends she has never seen.

"I hardly ever leave my home," she said, seated beside her two-way radio in her living room, high on a hill above Marietta. "But I've got dozens of friends on the river, from Pittsburgh to New Orleans. Lots of them call just to say hello when they're passing by. Why, I even played cupid for a neighbor of mine who married a boat captain."

Elizabeth Stiers is on duty around the clock, seven days a week.

"I'm never very far from this radio, but I don't mind," she says. "This is an interesting, rewarding job and I like helping my friends when they have a problem such as injury, a breakdown or a family emergency. Life on the river is no picnic. When something happens out there, there's not many people they can turn to."

A man who someday might have to turn to Elizabeth Stiers is Capt. Tom Miller of Rockport, Ind. Miller has been a towboat pilot for 40 of his 63 years, and he's still pushing barges up and down the river.

"I'm not out for 30 days at a time anymore, though," he said, seated on his porch overlooking the river. "I do trip work now, mostly for the Ohio River Barge Co. out of Cincinnati."

"That's a relief," said Kasey Miller, as she sat beside her husband. "I used to have to have a radio to monitor conversations so I'd know where he was on the river. Of course, he'd toot at me whenever he passed the house and I'd wave back. He still does that."

The Millers live on a bluff overlooking the Ohio, along one of the loveliest spots on the river. They have a panoramic view of the river and of the patchwork of farmland along the Kentucky shore.

"Used to be I'd know every boat coming by, but nowadays there's just so many I can't keep up with them all," Miller said, eyeing a towboat coming upriver, pushing a long string of coal barges.

"That coal probably is coming from Wyoming," he said, squinting for a better look. "They bring it in by train to Metropolis, Ill., and put it on barges. Then they bring it down the upper Mississippi and up the Ohio. There are power plants all along the river, you know.

"There's more and more coal coming up the river these days. American Electric Power has built 20 new boats. Each one will haul 15 of those big, jumbo barges."

He shook his head.

"Used to be, 15 barges was considered a big tow. Now it's standard, and some of those jumbo barges run 195 feet long and 35 feet wide. Each year the river gets busier and the tows get bigger but the Ohio stays the same size."

We've got what you want.

Letters Provide A Daily Drama

By DONALD McNICOLL
LONDON (AP) — If you want to learn odd bits about Britain, you could do worse than study the "Letters To The Editor" that most newspapers and magazines print. These letters often give an insight into the way ordinary people think and the things that happen to them.

As an example, here is Mrs. Rhina Stitt writing from Belfast to the Daily Mail: "For my husband and me, LOVE is holding hands on your wedding anniversary, 30 years and four children later. This might be some encouragement to those who get disillusioned at the first rough patch of marriage or on reading stories of the so-called top people with their endless ex-wives, ex-husbands and ex-mistresses."

Mrs. D.M. Pettigrew of Basildon, 20 miles east of London, wrote to the Sunday People: "My daughter, 15, visited a friend who was (in a hospital) recovering from a motorcycle accident. On seeing the pin through his leg, she fainted, hit her head on the floor, and ended up in the casualty department."

Mrs. D.R. Savage, of Blackpool, a holiday resort in north-east England, said in a letter to the Daily Express: "Almost from birth boys are treated as superior human beings. Walk down any high street (main street) and you can hear some doting parent say: 'Come on, son.' I've never yet heard any parent say, 'Come on, daughter.'"

Mrs. Eileen Bissett of Burton Latimer, 75 miles north of London, asked the Sunday Express editor whether this is "the ultimate in men's laziness — on a lovely autumn morning I saw a poodle out for its exercise with its owner ... The dog was running along the pavement on its own, and the owner curb-crawling in his car."

Mrs. J. West of Bristol in the west of England told the News of the World editor how she "stooped to conker": "When I saw youngsters searching the fallen leaves for conkers (chestnuts), I told my husband to stop the car so I could join them. The sight reminded me of my own happy childhood. But ... you shouldn't turn the clock back at a whim. As I rushed to bend down for a conker, I ricked my back and was in agony."

The sympathetic editor put this footnote to Mrs. West's letter: "We're sending you a bag of conkers. Mrs. West, to help ease the pain."

Mrs. G. Shaw of Edinburgh, the Scottish capital, also wrote to the News of the World: "The pigeons are getting clever in London. On a visit we fed them in Trafalgar Square, and one bird followed us onto the Tube (subway) and got off with us at the Tower. The rest of the passengers thought the bird was our pet. After spending a couple of hours with us, the bird flew off."

Diane Petrie, in a letter to the editor of the New Statesman, a left-wing weekly, said: "I am compiling a collection of Excuses, subtitled Lies, Evasions and Deceits ... Any suggestions would be most gratefully received, acknowledged in the book, and returned."

A reader who signed off as V. Farrell of Newpark, Antrim, in Northern Ireland, told The Sun: "In our local supermarket, an old lady accidentally smashed a bottle of orange juice against the till (register), spraying everyone with squash (fruit drink) and glass fragments. In the silence that followed, somebody shouted: 'God bless this shop and all who sell in her.' Everyone dissolved into fits of laughter."

Bulb Adapter Is Energy-Saver

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — A manufacturer here is making and marketing an adapter to convert conventional light bulb sockets to energy-saving fluorescent lights.

International Lighting Manufacturing says the fluorescent adapters carry a higher price tag than light bulbs, but recoup the cost through energy savings.

Fluorescents need less wattage, burn at lower temperatures and last longer than regular light bulbs.

The adapters use one or two circular fluorescent tubes. They screw into any standard household electric socket.

The adapter also can be used for many standard table lamps. (Watt-Saver)

Community Mental Health Plans Have Weakness

EDITOR'S NOTE — Most experts agree that most mental patients will be better off outside the hospital, in the proper community setting. But hospitals provide for all needs under one roof and budget, while life in the community often casts the patient adrift in a bureaucratic maze of fragmented responsibilities. That's one reason why, say critics, that the community mental health policy needs rethinking and reform.

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer

In the past 14 years, more than 300,000 mental patients have been discharged from public hospitals — an exodus intended to give them a healthier life in community settings.

Those lucky enough to have families to return to, those lucky enough to find financial help, human warmth and a sense of dignity through well-organized programs, may be making it. And operations like New York's Fountain House, or some aspects of community care in well-to-do San Mateo County, Calif., bear out the contention of experts that the community mental health movement, now in full swing, can succeed.

But the nomadic life of poverty, threatening surroundings and marginal help for many other former patients shows that the program has a long way to go. A long way to retrieve those who seem to be adrift, as on the ships of fools that 500 years ago shunted lunatics from port to port.

Many former patients live in decaying apartments, palatial hotels of yesteryear converted to nursing and boarding homes with minimal care. Others don't even have that. They live on the street.

Uptown Chicago, one example of many, is a no-man's land of trouble and trouble-some people. On nearly every street corner is an uneasy parade: the demented, the sick, the drunk, the lame. Those who prey on them.

On one corner, thugs find an old man who has strayed from his nursing home. They make him strip naked and stand on his head. On another, a man sits on the curb and plucks cobwebs from himself. Another directs traffic with a broom.

Day in, day out, precisely at 6 a.m., a woman walks into a coffee shop, buys coffee and a sweet roll then shouts obscenities. Another woman, who lives in an apartment, pays her rent with a dead cat cradled in her arms. She says he's asleep but that he'd better wake up because he owes her $19,000. She screams.

These are the victims of the human failings and financial flaws that work against a successful return from institutions. The reasons for rising criticism and some rethinking.

In a report issued last January, "Returning the Mentally Disabled to the Community: Government Needs to Do More," the General Accounting Office said:

"Mentally disabled persons have been released from public institutions without 1. Adequate community-based facilities being available or arranged for, and 2. An effective management system to make sure that only those needing inpatient or residential care were placed in public institutions and that persons released were appropriately placed and received needed services.

"As a result, many mentally disabled persons enter, reenter or remain in public institutions unnecessarily. Many others have been placed in substandard facilities or were not provided needed services."

Dr. Steven S. Sharfstein, director of the division of mental health service programs at the National Institute of Mental Health, summed it up like this: "The system out there is thought-disordered, and that's usually what we say about the patients. It's a jumble of agencies, eligibility requirements, restrictions, conflicts and barriers."

In a mental hospital, Dr. Sharfstein notes, everything is taken care of under one roof and one budget — food, shelter, clothing, medication, therapy, vocational rehabilitation and recreation.

In the community, however, there is no one agency to handle everything. Responsibility is fragmented, and the mentally disabled must work their way through a bureaucratic network and ferret out what they need.

Recognizing the problem, the National Institute of Mental Health will spend $3.5 million on 16 pilot projects to set up comprehensive community support for returning patients. The object is to provide a network of care and to fix responsibility for all patient services, not just mental health.

De-hospitalization was based on many premises: philosophical, humanitarian, financial and legal. Its main tenet is that most people are better off outside hospitals and do better in their own communities. Hospital stays should be as brief as possible.

The exodus from state hospitals began in the late 1950s with the advent of tranquilizing drugs that made it possible to control and treat many mental patients outside of hospitals.

It was a humanitarian idea fed by the optimism of the 1960s. President Kennedy called mental hospitals "veritable snakepits" — as some of them were — and wanted to bring the people home for community care.

In the mid 1960s, new state and federal money — Medicaid and Supplemental Security Income — became available for community care of the mentally ill. And with Medicaid and SSI, the states found a strong economic incentive, besides the medical and humanitarian ones, to discharge patients.

Large sums could be saved by shifting people from state hospitals into private nursing and boarding homes where the federal government would pay all or much of the cost. People en masse moved from the mental health budget onto welfare rolls.

States pay an average of $11,250 a year less to support someone in a private board and care home or intermediate care facility — many of them converted old hotels. And the federal government will pay much of the bill.

More than $1 billion is spent a year under Medicaid for care of the mentally disabled in the community.

And today, more mentally disabled persons live in nursing homes than in state hospitals.

In 1975 there were 191,395 persons in state hospitals — down 367,736 since 1955. In 1969 there were 607,400 nursing home residents with mental disabilities. By 1974 the number had risen to 899,500.

"They're out in the community all right," says Dorothy Seaman, Uptown placement director for the Illinois Department of Mental Health. "But they're not part of any community. They have just moved from one building to another, and there's little integration."

Although their patient populations have declined, state hospitals around the country still account for the biggest share of state mental health budgets. Expenditures for state mental hospitals increased from about $1.7 billion in 1968 to $2.8 billion in 1974.

Only a handful of state hospitals have closed because of the exodus — seven in seven years. The number of state hospitals actually has increased from 286 a decade ago to 333 today, but many are small, specialized, regional and community centers.

Some groups argue that modern state hospitals, far from being the snake pits of the past, are better than a community that doesn't care or even exist. State employees' unions are among the most vocal, partly because they have jobs to protect as well. They have taken strong stands against closing hospitals unless there's good community care, preferably with retrained hospital employees.

"If the choice is between a board and care facility not adequately staffed or inspected and a state hospital, we say people ought to be kept in the hospital until there are good alternatives," says Rob McGara, spokesman for the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

The problems of discharged patients are not confined to big cities, big hotels and sprawling ghettos.

Take San Mateo County, Calif., a prosperous suburban area of 578,700 on San Francisco Bay. The county's annual mental health budget for all services is $14.5 million. The money is a combination of special state funds for community mental health, Medi-Cal money matched by federal funds and other county and federal dollars.

In the 1960s, San Mateo County was a national leader in community mental health. And it remains among the best, providing some good halfway houses, programs and satellite apartments.

"It may be one of the best, but the best has an awful lot lacking," says Dr. Mike Rankin, county mental health director who must run a no-expansion program.

Rankin says that since 1971, there has been progressive retrenchment because of inflation, rising hospital and other costs and decreasing federal staffing grants.

But there is a critical shortage of housing for former patients — only about 36 beds in residential facilities for the most severely disabled, like young schizophrenics. Ten years ago there were about 100 beds, but home operators have been going out of business.

Even in this affluent county, the less fortunate live in crevices, in small hotels like the Vendome near the railroad tracks in San Mateo, in cheap motels by the freeway, in crumbling frame rooming houses in Redwood City, in little mom and pop homes in the high-crime area of East Palo Alto.

The county has a conscientious system to track returning patients, but it isn't perfect and many people don't want to be tracked.

Dr. Lowell Streiker, director of the county mental health association, says of a typical returning patient, a 35-year-old schizophrenic:

"The odds are great that somewhere he will totally drop through the cracks and be wandering around without supervision in one of the best systems in the country."

Former patients contend not only with a disconnected system of care but also with poverty.

They live in the worst housing in the worst neighborhoods.

Most have some type of public assistance. If they live in a home, the home gets most of their money. If they get a job, they only can keep a portion before earnings are deducted from support payment.

Many get only a slight personal allowance, some as little as $25 a month from SSI.

"How can you live on $25?" asks Helen Mitchell, 41, a pert, brightly rouged former legal secretary who lives at the Hazel Wilson home in Uptown Chicago and works parttime. "I have to buy everything — my clothes, my snacks, my transportation."

"Cigarettes are 55 cents and pop is 30 cents. The idea is to move out. But how can I save for a rent deposit? I can't even afford an omelette."

Police, psychiatrists and social workers say that as a group, former patients are far less dangerous than the population as a whole. They are far more likely to be victims than victimizers.

"We can't say these people have had much impact on the crime situation," says Sgt. Carl Sonne of the Chicago Police Department Uptown. "They are continually running away and getting lost and we have to take them in for safekeeping and play nursemaid."

Because they have so many former patients, communities like Long Beach, N.Y., are known as "impacted" areas where the problems of patients and residents collide.

Residents concede that the former patients don't hurt anyone, that their biggest sin may be panhandling.

"But they are disruptive," says Long Beach Supervisor Hannah Komonoff. "Sometimes they accost you or beg and say they are hungry or thirsty. Sometimes they urinate in public. Or they wander into houses and don't know where they are or who they are."

"The children are afraid. 'We feel sorry for them, but what about us?'"

CYPRESSES IN A QUIET EXPANSE OF WATER . . . This gentle stretch of the wide Chowan River, photographed from a bluff near Scotch Hall, is framed by boughs nearly bare of leaves. Just downriver from this point, the river empties into the Albemarle

Bertie County Is Called Francis Speight Country

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

BLACKBIRDS FLY AGAINST THE SKY . . . When autumn days come, flocks of restless blackbirds arrive, flying to and fro from treetops to cultivated fields to feed on peanuts and soybeans left behind in harvest. Group singers, theirs is a soft twittering chorus.

For a long time, the county of Bertie, a large, sparsely populated rural county in northeastern North Carolina, has been called "peanut country."

In recent years, residents of Bertie are increasingly referring to their home land by an additional name — "Francis Speight country."

Anytime the name of the 81-year old artist is mentioned, someone invariably notes with pride that he is one of them, a man of their own who has made good. More importantly, they point out he is a man who has remembered and honored the land of his birth.

Through his landscape paintings, he has expressed a deeply felt, abiding love for the fertile land, the forests, the dark, slow flowing waters of creeks and rivers, and man-made structures that are physical symbols forming a bond reaching back to the years of his boyhood.

His brush has captured images of the broad, placid Chowan River that bounds Bertie County on the east, and the looped, fast flowing Roanoke that encircles Bertie in the south. He has painted humble fishing sheds and stately old plantation houses, gnarled oak trees and fields of stacked peanuts, moss festooned cypresses and the lyrical green of early spring.

The site of the cable-drawn ferry at Sans Souci, with sandy paths that lead to either shore of the broad Cashie River is a scene Speight has painted time and again, in all seasons and in every light.

In the years Speight was away from his native territory — first for studies, later in years spent teaching and painting in Pennsylvania, he never lost touch with his rural heritage. Nearly every summer he returned to sketch and to paint.

Several years ago Speight proved, that unlike another Tar Heel, he could come home again, welcomed and honored. He returned to eastern North Carolina to accept a position as artist-in-residence at East Carolina University, an hour's travel from Bertie.

Since his return, Speight has strengthened old bonds of friendship, and has earned widespread admiration among younger generations in Bertie County.

His admirers are by no means, however, confined to his native area. They are to be found among the young and old, among artists and non-artists, across the nation as well as abroad.

Last week, another noted North Carolina artist, Pulitzer Prize winner Philip Moose, visited Bertie County, fulfilling a dream to make a sightseeing pilgrimage to the Speight country.

Moose, a native of mountain North Carolina, had as his guide another mountain Tar Heel native, Edith Walker, director of the Greenville Art Center. Ms. Walker has lived more than twelve years in Greenville, and knows well the byways and hedges of rural Bertie County.

Together, the two explored fine old homes such as Scotch Hall, built in the 1830's on a bluff overlooking the Chowan River.

They visited tiny, tree-shaded Capehart Chapel and deciphered faded inscriptions on tombstones dating back two centuries. They watched flocks of blackbirds lift into the air, then settle back to bare fields; and browsed among weathered farm buildings housing rusting relics of old farm machinery.

They chanced upon a rare field of peanuts stacked in the old manner, and saw the breeze stir the sensitive scarves of moss draped from tree limbs at Shipyard Landing.

Moose, like others before him, discovered something of the ties of nature and man that bind Francis Speight and his fellow Bertians to a part of North Carolina that has changed far less than most since the turn of the century.

It is this enduring poetry of time and place that Francis Speight has articulated in his paintings — and it is this that the people of Bertie County recognize when they tell you, "this is Francis Speight country."

SHIPYARD LANDING . . . Just off highway 45, a short distance from where the Cashie, Middle, and Roanoke Rivers flow into the Albemarle, Shipyard Landing is the subject of paintings both by Francis Speight and his artist wife, Sarah Blakeslee. The dark waters of the stream has long been a favored spot for fishermen to launch their boats for fishing in deeper waters nearby.

ART IN IRON . . . The trunk of a small dead succard adds a note of contrast to the ornate design of a mid-19th century wrought iron fence surrounding a Bertie County cemetery.

Cotton Winning Back Old Throne

By LeROY POPE
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — King Cotton, whose rule has been challenged by substitutes, is winning new favor.

Of the many reasons for renewed interest in cotton, the one least talked about may be the most important. Cotton is a renewable resource, a crop that can be expanded at will and grows readily in many parts of the world.

The United States is the most significant producer and the world leader in cotton technology by a wide margin.

On the other hand, polyester fabrics such as dacron, nylon, acrylics and other synthetic textiles are not produced from renewable crops but from petroleum which, in the long run, is certain to become relatively scarce. These synthetic fibers can be made from coal but that costs a lot more than making them from petroleum.

Donald S. Kleckner, vice president for marketing of Cotton, Inc., a New York research and marketing company owned by 100,000 American cotton farmers, told United Press International he believes the price of polyester will rise gradually until it reaches $1 a pound in today's money.

"At the same time" (he didn't hazard a guess at the exact time) "the price of cotton will rise from the present 53 cents a pound or so to 80 cents," Kleckner said.

At those levels, he said, synthetic fibers will have absolutely no price advantages over cotton; indeed, even 100 per cent cotton garments, sheets, pillowslips and other household fabrics may be substantially cheaper than synthetic fiber fabrics.

But for the present, Cotton, Inc., which was founded in 1971, is pressing and has achieved considerable success with a wide campaign to get the textile and garment industries to reverse the prevailing mixture in shirtings and some other fabrics of 65 per cent polyester and 35 per cent cotton to 60 per cent or more cotton.

Seven of the country's biggest fabric producers now are making the new predominantly cotton fabrics, which are sold under the trademark "The Natural Blend." Manhattan, Van Heusen, Arrow and nine other leading shirt manufacturers are using them and they are being sold in Sears, Roebuck, Montgomery Ward and many other retailers' stores. The fabrics also are being used in feminine garments.

At present, they are in the middle and upper price ranges but J. Dukes Wooters, Inc., president of Cotton, Inc., believes that, at no distant future, the 60 per cent cotton mixtures will be able to penetrate lower priced mass markets.

Cotton Inc., has scored another breakthrough by persuading a score of double-knit mills to turn out the dominant cotton mixture on their machines. Jantzen and Catalina, two leading makers of feminine sportswear, and mills knitting for the J.C. Penney retail chain are doing this.

"When the double-knit vogue came in some years ago, it grew spectacularly. Then all of a sudden, customers became disenchanted with the all-synthetic double-knits, the boom collapsed and a lot of the mills were idle. We have showed them how to modify their machines and even have developed new more sophisticated double-knit machines to make fascinating color patterns and weights in the cotton-polyester mixture."

But Cotton, Inc., represents farmers, not textile mills or garment makers. The farmers support it by a voluntary levy of $1 a bale (a bale is 500 pounds of ginned cotton) on their harvested crops. Therefore, Cotton, Inc., is as much concerned with agricultural research as textile research and garment manufacture and marketing. It does both field and laboratory research in fighting the boll weevil and the western pink bollworm, which, between them, cost cotton farmers an estimated $260 million a year.

It has helped farm machinery manufacturers to achieve another remarkable breakthrough that is cutting $15 to $20 a bale off the cost of producing raw seed cotton. If you drive through some of the major cotton growing regions in the late summer or early fall, you will see a new phenomenon — the cotton stack — which is shaped exactly like a modern rectangular haystack and is the same size.

It is made of compressed seed cotton by a compacting and moulding machine that is towed by the Rust cotton picking machine. This eliminates the costly practice of loading each bale (it takes 1,500 pounds of seed cotton to make a bale of raw cotton) to the gin in a separate truck or wagon. The cotton stack is moved to the gin on a huge truck and another machine breaks it down and feeds the cotton into the gin to extract the seeds, which are crushed for oil.

Farm research in cotton has paid off in other ways. In the days when King Cotton ruled Dixie's boom-and-bust economy without rival, a yield of a bale and a half to the acre was sensational. Nowadays, there are regions in the southwest that yield four bales to the acre.

Cotton, Inc.'s big effort right now, Kleckner said, is to sell all-cotton and predominantly cotton fabrics to the public because of their comfort, coolness and crisp, elegant appearance. "We also have demonstrated that cotton actually has better permanent press qualities and can be given better fire retardant qualities than synthetic fibers," he said.

L-SHAPED CONTEMPORARY TRIM, EFFICIENT

MODERATE SIZE PLAN OFFERS MUD ROOM, TERRACE

By Jerry Bishop

Expert planning maximizes livable space in the Celina, a sizable area for food preparation, dining, and relaxing. In the L-shape as a natural form of zoning. Backing the which also features a closet, garage is the mud room. Per- elongated garage is a combination mud room and laundry center, and the home also boasts sliding glass doors to the terrace and an extra half bath for convenience.

On the facade, lines are simple and appealing. Brick siding is used abundantly to soften the contemporary exterior, and wide overhangs promise shelter from sun and weather. Inside, the arrangement separates bedrooms from living areas and includes a formal living room for entertaining.

Entry is directly into the living room, with coat closet handy for efficiency. The room itself measures over 16 x 13 ft. and is well-windowed for ample natural light.

At rear, the family room plentiful kitchen cabinets, and merges with the kitchen to form the terrace, where the family can enjoy sunning or picnicking.

Tucked between kitchen and laundry room, an extra half bath, and a corridor for easy transportation of groceries and packages directly to the kitchen.

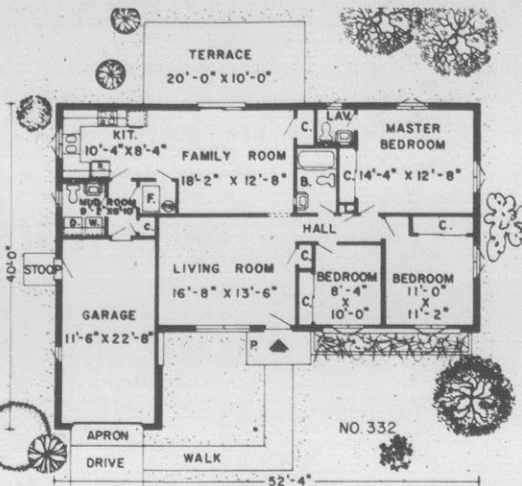

In addition, parents of small children will find it invaluable for its basic function as a mud room.

Separated from living areas, the bedrooms are carefully supplied with closet space. The master bedroom, a comfortable 14 x 12 ft. area, merits a private half bath, with another full bath situated in the hallway to serve bedrooms and living areas.

Usable living space in the Celina totals 1324 sq. ft., with the single garage adding another 298 sq. ft.

Field Animal Poor Indoor Pet

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Those little and big holes that might be found in your field-stone house foundation should be plugged up to protect house- holders from little animals or insects that might want to spend the winter indoors.

Some people might be amused that tiny animals — chipmunks, field mice, squirrels and others they admire in the wild — could harass a householder, but it isn't funny when they unexpectedly come across one of the creatures in their cellar.

A young man who works for a fix-up service was called by one client at dawn. She said she hadn't slept all night because she thought the screen he had hung over an attic opening would not keep the field mice and other varmints from getting into the living area of the house. She wanted the screen replaced by a solid wood covering.

New rural residents may be especially wary of such intrusions.

One woman became hysterical when she encountered a swarm of bees in her house. She didn't know what to do — and still doesn't know where they came from — but she happened to have the vacuum cleaner nearby and used the tool to suck up as many of the insects as possible as they went to the window seeking bright light.

Another woman sensed something sailing above her, as she sat in her living room, and when she called out to her husband — "It's a bat — catch it," he laughed. He knew that bats avoid objects, including men trying to catch them, by a very sophisticated sonar system. They can fly through caves or houses using their built-in sonar without touching any solid object, and they are almost impossible to snare when in flight.

The bat in this case took refuge behind a large picture. The man of the house brought a large towel and a stepladder to the spot and peered carefully behind the painting in anticipation of the bat's flight from behind it.

But no bat! Where did it come from? Where did it go? It was anyone's guess and the lady of the house declared she could not sleep there; it might be anywhere, she pointed out. The fact that the bat appeared on Friday the 13th didn't make things any better.

The man, however, decided that since it had appeared during the winter season, it must have come out of the kitchen chimney flue. And, when it disappeared, had probably found its way back. Most bats hiber-nate for the winter, but this one apparently had stayed around a while longer.

In fact, chimney flues are a good source of unwanted birds (bats are mammals but they fly!). Several birds, including an owl, had fallen down the chimney and there was no way to escape. The man of the house was finally persuaded, after the bat's appearance, to close the flue when it was not being used.

If a house is a new experience, it is best to hire a professional mason to plug up foundation holes and a chimney man to cap chimneys. Experienced do-it-yourselfers would know how to go about treating the foundation and books can be helpful. Many amateur fixers do a fast but inefficient job of stopping up foundation holes. Unwanted visitors of the animal variety are adept in wriggling through the smallest opening.

After a person has lived in a rural area for a while, most intrusions can be taken in stride. But even the most blasé sometimes jump when the unexpected happens. One woman told her husband that she had thought there was a long limb of a tree stretched over their house path.

"Oh it's just a garter snake," he said after looking at it and recovering his composure. "They're very beneficial and shouldn't be harmed," he added. The lady wasn't amused. Any snake is a bad snake was her conclusion.

Answers Timely Gardening Questions)

Q. My five-to-six-year old peach tree has lost all of its leaves. Should it be pruned now? (L. C., Holly Springs)

A. No. Wait until the buds start to swell next spring. It is better to prune peach trees at full bloom or just after than to do it before late February or early March in the Raleigh area. (Mel Kolbe, extension horticulturist)

Q. I would like to have a seedless grape for my house use. Are they any that will grow here? (C.M., Winston-Salem)

A. Two seedless grapes that will do fairly well in the upper Piedmont and mountains are Himrod and Romulus. With a little extra care, I believe you would be successful growing these. (Joe Brooks, extension horticulturist)

Q. Last spring I planted my first strawberries in the garden. Someone mentioned mulching with straw. Is this necessary and if so when should it be done? (B. B., Wilson)

A. Strawberries will grow and product fruit without mulching. However, straw or some similar material is helpful in protecting the plants from severe winter weather. It's main benefit is to keep the fruit clean as it ripens. Mulch also helps conserve soil moisture and to some extent suppresses weeds and grass.

What's new on the market?

THE PRODUCT — A snap-off blade hobby knife.

Manufacturer's claim — That this tool is designed especially for the do-it-yourselfer or hobbyist and can handle such jobs as wallpaper trimming, leather crafting, model making and any project where fast, accurate cutting is necessary ... that it features 12 sharp cutting tips in each master blade ... that, when a cutting tip becomes worn, it can be broken off at the scored lines and a new tip advanced with the slide mechanism ... that the knife is equipped with a retractable blade unit for added safety.

THE PRODUCT — A garage door opener package for do-it-yourself installation.

Manufacturer's claim — That this is an advanced door opener that eliminates such problems as slipping belts, radio control phantoms and malfunctioning electrical components ... that it incorporates all the latest in technology, including a gear drive mechanism, digital radio controls, a built-in receiver, all solid state, modular circuitry and an electronic light time delay ... that it will operate one-piece or sectional overhead garage doors, wood, steel or fiberglass, up to 18 feet wide and 7 feet high.

THE PRODUCT — A device that reclaims heat from the burner normally lost through the stack pipe and up the chimney.

Manufacturer's claim — That this device clamps around the flue stack directly above the furnace ... As the temperature against the unit rises, a built-in thermostat activates a blower, causing it to draw cool room air through the conductive media, filtering it and heating it and dispensing warm air into the basement or by flexible duct to any troublesome area of the house.

THE PRODUCT — Another device that reclaims waste heat.

Manufacturer's claim — That this heat pipe can be installed in about 15 minutes ... that it is a fully automatic recovery unit using heat pipes to reclaim heat from flue gases in a home system ... that, while the pipe picks up some heat for transmission outside the flue stack, a solid-steel wall keeps the gases from escaping ... and that it has a thermostat to activate a small duct fan which moves air over a heat-transfer system.

THE PRODUCT — A treatment to keep carpets newer looking much longer.

Manufacturer's claim — That this treatment can be applied professionally in one's home after a carpet has been cleaned by extraction ... that it provides a chemical barrier that makes it difficult for dirt to cling to fibers ... and that it helps prevent water and oil-based spots from spreading out, so they can be blotted up easily, thus preventing the carpet from getting an odor as bacteria spread.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available from this newspaper by sending $1 to Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

LEGAL NOTICE

Pursuant to U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare regulations, the State Health Planning and Development Agency, Office of the Secretary, North Carolina Department of Human Resources, announced on November 25, 1977 approval of the proposal of Alfred L. Ferguson, M.D. to incur a capital expenditure to acquire and subsequently lease space and equipment for the Greenville Hemodialysis Center. Prior to approval, the project proposal was reviewed by the Division of Facility Services, North Carolina Department of Human Resources, and by the Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency, Inc. The approval decision was consistent with the recommendations of these agencies. December 4, 1977

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA

ENVIRONMENTAL

MANAGEMENT COMMISSION

Raleigh, North Carolina

OFFICE OF RECEIPT OF AN APPLICATION FOR FUNDING UNDER THE CLEAN

WATER BOND ACT

Pursuant to Section 9(c) of the North Carolina Water Bond Act of 1977, notice is given that the Town of Bethel has submitted an application to the Environmental Management Commission requesting a State grant in the amount of $39,325. These grant funds are requested to assist in the construction of approximately 4,900 lineal feet of 8-inch collection sewer, one (1) pump station, force main and related appurtenances to serve presently unserved areas within the Town of Bethel.

A determination has not been made of adequate treatment for the wastewater to be received by the proposed project. However, in the event adequate treatment cannot presently be provided, the funds can be reserved for subject project if planning for adequate treatment is proceeding and will be included in the (201) Facility Plan for the project area. The Environmental Management Commission by Resolution No. 75-44 has determined that all such applicants for grants are eligible for consideration provided a grant for facility planning has been certified and that the facility planning is proceeding.

And State grant funds approved for this project will be subtracted from the $545,300 allocated to Pitt County for wastewater collection systems under the Act.

Section 9(d) of the Act provides, in essence, that any citizen who resides in Pitt County may request a public hearing on the application. A request for a hearing and the reasons for the request must be filed with the Commission at P.O. Box 27487, Raleigh, North Carolina 27611, within fifteen (15) days of the date of mailing of this notice.

LIFE TIME SALES OPPORTUNITY

ONE GREAT

ONE GREAT

SALES REP.

Certified Laboratories, has a sales opportunity for "our kind of person." And what's that? A really nice individual who likes people and more importantly, who is well liked in return... a hard worker concerned with his (or her) family's well-being and future... someone with guts and determination who is capable of succeeding in a highly competitive industrial product market.

We take good care of our kind of people. If you're for us, your earnings will be unlimited ($25,000 is an average income, based on a draw vs. comm.). Your accounts are never taken away — nor are you transferred. And your fringe benefit package is outstanding.

If you really can sell and would like to be part of a company whose primary interest is in your success, please get in touch with me.

Mercedes-Benz gave their new coupe such a pretty face, you might overlook its other features.

Beneath that beautiful profile, the 280CE is spectacular—in the tradition of all Mercedes-Benz coupes.

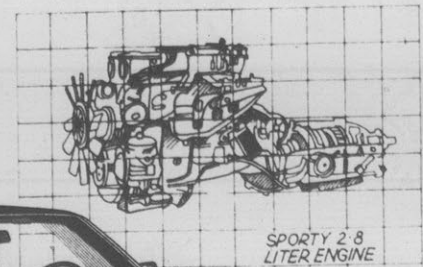

The 2.8-liter six-cylinder engine (see diagram), with C.I.S. fuel injection and two overhead cams, offers the kind of performance engineering that just begs to be put to the test.

Fully independent rear suspension and zero-offset front axles create a special feeling for the road.

The 280CE has automatic climate control, stereo radio, tinted glass, electric windows, a central locking system—even hand-selected burl walnut root trim. All these items are standard, yet they exemplify engineering rather than extravagance.

Don't let the looks of the 280CE blind you to its other virtues—call us and drive it.

Daytime Drama Stars Are Featured In CBS Musical Special Tuesday

Victoria Mallory and John McCook of "The Young and the Restless" cast demonstrate their versatility as musicians in "After Hours: Singin', Swingin' and All That Jazz," third in a series of daytime musical specials, Tuesday Dec. 6 (3:30-4:30 p.m.) on CBS-TV. Also starring are Don Hastings and Keith Charles of "As The World Turns" and Beau Kayzer of "The Young and the Restless."

Those of you who follow the twists and turns of the daytime drama "The Young and the Restless" may have noticed recently that Leslie, Brock and Lance were out of sight — but surely not out of mind — for about a week.

Just to fill you in: Lance was pining, unaware that Lorie was off to Hong Kong in search of his long-lost brother, Lucas. Meanwhile, Leslie had embarked on an extended concert tour of South America, leaving Brock to while away his lonely hours at the Allegro.

Of course, you didn't see all this, because the actors involved — John McCook (Lance), Victoria (Leslie) and Beau Kayzer (Brock) — had been "written around" while they rehearsed and taped "After Hours: Singin', Swingin' and All That Jazz," the third in a series of daytime musical specials, to be broadcast Tuesday, Dec. 6, 3:30 to 4:30 p.m., on CBS-TV. The special also stars Keith Charles (Ralph Mitchell) and Don Hastings (Dr. Bob Hughes) of "As the World Turns."

McCook and Kayzer were back in "The Young and the Restless" the following week, but Miss Mallory was to be out for more than a month while she starred in "Kismet" in San Francisco. Which brings up the question, how will her fans keep track of her?

"We make a point, when someone is out for a week or two or more, of bringing up the character's name from time to time," says Pat Wenig, producer of the series.

"Viewers have their favorites, and if the write-arounds are not specified, we get letters," Ms. Wenig continues. "So we'll have someone in the cast say, 'Oh, by the way, I just got a letter from Leslie — she says Paraguay is lovely this time of the year,' or something like that. We don't want their fans to hang on edge."

"These days," notes Ms. Wenig, "it's not likely that write-arounds will jar the sensibilities of viewers. Every effort is made to keep it all plausible. Leslie's tour, for example, is plausible because Leslie is a concert pianist."

Kayzer, who was voted best actor in a daytime drama magazine's annual readers' pool, enjoys his role in the series for a number of reasons. "For one," he explains, "I like combining singing and acting in my career, and my role as Brock, the manager-performer at the Allegro Restaurant, is perfect. For another, despite the cut-and-fill of working through the plot every day, when you sometimes feel like a rubber band, it's invaluable training. You couldn't pay for this kind of training. What's great is that you get paid to hone your craft."

Filming Wasn't Easy

After five years of filming in San Francisco, Karl Malden thought he had worked in just about all kinds of weather — until he filmed off the coast of Maine.

Malden went to Maine to film "The Bell System Presents Captain Courageous," a new production of Rudyard Kipling's classic novel of the sea, which will air Sunday, Dec. 4, 7 to 9 p.m., on ABC-TV. The constantly changing weather forced Malden, his fellow actors and the production crew to learn how to adapt quickly to any situation.

"When we were doing 'The Streets of San Francisco' we went indoors if the weather got bad," he said. "Out at sea you can't go anywhere, so you adapt. If the sun was out we shot the sunny scenes; if the clouds came over we shifted to a cloudy scene. We couldn't plan ahead for anything. It made the acting we all had to do, though, more exciting and spontaneous."

Producer Norman Rosemont had heard some wild tales about filming at sea and planned ahead. He and director Harvey Hart brought the cast in ahead of time and spent four days rehearsing the entire show.

"It was like the old days on Broadway," Malden said. "We went through the script scene by scene and gained insight into our characters. Television doesn't usually allow time to rehearse.

classic, "Captain's Courageous," airing as a two-hour special, Sunday, Dec. 4 (7-9 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Loudon Serious About Clowning

Dorothy Loudon is very serious about being funny.

The Tony Award-winning co-star of Broadway's smash hit, "Annie," displays her skills as a singer and comedienne in "The 'Annie' Christmas Show," featuring the entire cast of the Tony Award-winning musical, which is to be telecast Sunday, Dec. 4, 8 to 9 p.m., on NBC-TV.

Said Dorothy: "What you need most of all is discipline. I get that from working in the theater. You have to be prepared and at your best no matter what. You realize early in this game that other people are counting on you and you cannot let them down."

"Being in a stage show is like punching a clock. You have to be on time and on stage night after night, doing the same thing to the best of your ability. If you can't cut it, you are out of a job."

It's not quite that way in movie-oriented Los Angeles, according to Dorothy. She has worked in television both in New York (in the live TV days and with Garry Moore) and in Los Angeles.

She said: "California is so balmy, people out there get into a state of euphoria or something. The concept of time just doesn't exist in Los Angeles as we know it in New York."

While on stage at the NBC studios in Brooklyn, Dorothy said, she blocked out of her mind the fact that "The 'Annie' Christmas Show" was being taped. "I Played it as if it was on right at the moment. I'm at my best that way. I prefer the spontaneity of facing a live audience."

Performed for the first time via "The 'Annie' Christmas Show" will be a new song — "It's Christmas" — written by the play's composers, Charles Strouse and Martin Charnin.

SUSAN FORD GETS ASSIGNMENT

Susan Ford, daughter of the former President, has been signed to act and serve as photographer for a syndicated program starring Jim Nabors.

Biblical Approach Different

A re-telling of the Biblical stories of Noah and Samson highlights "It's a Brand New World," an animated musical "Special Treat" to be rebroadcast Monday, Dec. 5, 4 to 5 p.m., on NBC-TV.

Through the eyes of four young would-be angels — Jezebel, Elijah, Barnabas and Aaron — the program focuses on Noah, the good man who built an ark and with his family survived the deluge, and on Samson, who fought for his people against the Philistines.

Songs created to carry the story along include "Four Would-Be Angels," "Shem Ham and Japeth," "It Rained for 30 and 10," "It's a Brand New World," "Samson's Gonna Be Born," "The Riddle," and "Jaw Bone of a Donkey."

Telling Bible stories in song and animation is producer Al Elias's idea of how to bring the Good Book closer to children, and this is the culmination of his efforts. The special features original songs about Noah and his ark and Samson and his feats of strength.

"We are telling these stories through the device of having four typical, fun-loving kids, who are attending St. Gabriel's Celestial Academy, study these stories in their class," says Elias. "These four children are enrolled at the academy in hope of becoming angels. So far they are flunk-outs, and have to attend a remedial Bible history class."

The script is contemporary, and the children wear jeans, sweaters, loafers and travel via clouds and other heavenly 'vehicles.' Music is of the semi-rock type.

The voice of the teacher, a character never seen, is by Joe Silver. The would-be angels' voices are provided by Malcolm Dodd (Elijah), Dennis Cooley (Aaron), Boni Enten (Jezebel) and George Hirsch (Barnabas).

'The Winners' Is True

The true and remarkable story of an 11-year-old Sioux Indian boy who was instrumental in establishing a special school for Indian children will be dramatized in "You Gotta Start Somewhere," the third episode of "The Winners," a monthly series of half-hour specials directed toward young viewers, to be broadcast Thursday, Dec. 8, 4 to 4:30 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Each monthly episode of "The Winners" features a different story highlighting the true experiences and accomplishments of young men and women who reach their special goals despite personal and physical obstacles.

"You Gotta Start Somewhere" dramatizes the true story of young Philip Gilbert, who decided to start his own school in a predominantly Indian area in Rapid City, S.C., about four years ago. The story tells of his frustrations with his grammar school curriculum that ignored his Indian heritage and how, encouraged by his mother and uncle, the 11-year-old set out to organize his fellow students, obtain a school building and convince the local school board that his mother and uncle should teach in this special school for Indian children where they could learn about their background.

The school proved to be successful and it continues today as a fully accredited institute of learning, having been moved from its humble beginnings in an old, abandoned building to a place of prominence on the Pine Ridge Reservation outside Rapid City.

Panchito Gomez, who stars as Philip Gilbert, has been acting for seven of his 14 years. He will soon be seen in the title role of "Paco," a major film photographed in Colombia, starring Jose Ferrer. He also appeared in the feature-length film "Thoroughbreds," starring Stuart Whitman and Vera Miles, and in the television special "Dr. Max," with Lee J. Cobb.

Dimitra Arliss, who stars as Madonna Gilbert, the boy's mother, is well-remembered for her role as the "hit man" who stalked Robert Redford in the movie "The Sting," and for her portrayal of Marie Falconetti in "Rich Man, Poor Man."

Van Williams of "The Green Hornet" TV series fame appears as Ted Means, Philip's uncle. For the past eight years, Williams has served as a reserve officer in the Los Angeles County Sheriff's department and has proved to be a successful businessman as well.

Lucci Honored

Susan Lucci, who portrays the lovely and volatile Erica Kane on ABC-TV's "All My Children," was selected by the Council of Cerebral Palsy Auxiliaries to receive their prestigious "Today's Woman '77 Award."

The award, won last year by Margaret Mead and Rose Ann Scamarella, is given to women considered to be outstanding in their particular field of endeavor by the council, which raises money for the United Cerebral Palsy Vocational and Rehabilitation Center in Long Island.

Yule Season Provides Family Second Chance

The traditional coming-together of Christmas provides a broken family with one last chance to rediscover the love they have misplaced — but never lost — in "The Gathering," a new drama by Oscar-winner James Poe airing as an "ABC Theatre" presentation Sunday, Dec. 4, 9 to 11 p.m., on ABC-TV.

Emmy winner Edward Asner stars as a successful businessman making an 11th hour effort to pull together the family he shattered by allowing them to become second to his work. Maureen Stapleton, one of the American theatre's most distinguished actresses, is the drama's special guest star as Asner's wife, a woman who lost her husband to his drive for success.

It is Christmas in New England, and Adam Thornton (Asner) knows that this Christmas — his 58th — will be his last. His doctor's report has given a number to his days, and the crusty industrialist is determined to make one last effort at bringing together the family he left years ago.

The family is his wife, Kate (Miss Stapleton); their daughter

Julie (Rebecca Balding), who now has children of her own; their son Tom (Lawrence Pressman), a cynical young man who is as stubborn as his father; their daughter Peggy (Gail Strickland), a successful career woman in her own right, and son Bud (Craig Harrison), an expatriate who fled to Canada during the Vietnam War.

Calls go out to the family — the family Adam hardly knows anymore — for a reunion at Christmas, and slowly they arrive at their childhood home to reclaim the love they have missed more than they dare admit.

Young Randal Kleiser directed the powerful film and, at his suggestion, it was filmed in Chagrin Falls, Ohio, where he'd spent many holidays as a child.

"It's still a lovely unspoiled small town," said Kleiser, "that looks as if it should be somewhere in New England."

The years have separated Edward Asner and Maureen Stapleton, but the Christmas season brings hope for a new beginning, in "The Gathering," an "ABC Theatre" presentation on Sunday Dec. 4 (9-11 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Readers Asked To Name That Award

The movies have Oscar, television has Emmy, the recording industry has Grammy and Broadway has Tony. But a prestigious and coveted trophy, awarded to the top nightclub entertainers in the world, has no affectionate nickname.

"The Seventh Annual Las Vegas Entertainment Awards" will be presented as an NBC-TV "Big Event" Sunday, Dec. 4, from 9 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV, and Emmy winning writer and producer Paul W. Keyes has created a new format for the show, designed to make it uniquely different from other awards shows.

There will be no host, and every star who presents an award will also perform a specialty from his or her nightclub act. Among the stars who will entertain and serve as presenters are Don Rickles, Tina Turner, Charo, Rip Taylor, David Brenner, Ann-Margret, Gladys Knight and the Pips, Sheeky Greene, Merle Haggard and Totie Fields.

Keyes perplexed over the lack of a nickname, points out: "It's quite a mouthful for Ann-Margret to say, 'and-this-year's-winner-of-the-Las-Vegas-Entertainment-Award-for-Male-Musical-Star-of-the-Year-is...'"

He continued, "We'd like to have a short, catchy name for the award, but we don't know what to call it. The trophy, three silver shafts projecting from an ebony base, was designed to represent three beams from spotlights, but we can't very well call it the 'Spotty.' I wish the audience could find a name for this prize."

Readers of this column are invited to submit their suggestions to:

Kipling's Classic Adapted

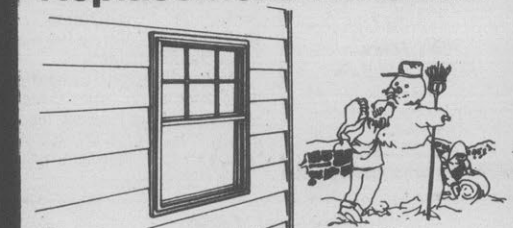

A spoiled rich kid grows up fast under the care of a crusty sea captain who has no time for pampering and special privilege in "The Bell System Presents Captains Courageous," a new adaptation of Rudyard Kipling's rousing tale of blustery men and windy seas, airing as an adventure special Sunday, Dec. 4, 7 to 9 p.m., on ABC-TV.

Karl Malden stars as Disko Troop, the captain of the fishing ship called "We're Here." Also starring are Jonathan Kahn, Johnny Doran, Neville Brand, Fred Gwynne, Charles Dierkop and Jeff Corey. Fritz Weaver makes a special guest appearance and Ricardo Montalban is the special guest star.

Based on Kipling's 1897 story, "Captains Courageous" opens with the tense rescue at sea of Harvey Cheyne (Kahn), an insolent boy whose childish indulgences have led him to fall overboard from his father's ocean liner.

CARPET TIPS

We're In The "Know"!

You don't need to know all the specifics of carpet to make the best choice.

However, it does help to understand that carpets have four basic characteristics: 1) plain, 2) tweed, 3) textured, and 4) patterns. So, when you re-decorate a room, try to match your style to a carpet characteristic best suited to that style.

For example, plain carpet usually makes the best background for prints, patterns and furniture of unique design. But ask us about the rest. Our business is to "Know". So, know we'll help you!

"HEIRS" TO AIR ON ABC-TV

"Missing Heirs," a pilot-special which will air in the spring on ABC-TV, deals with the fourteen billion dollars in outstanding estates throughout the U.S., unclaimed by assigned heirs.

Executive producer Alan Landsburg has been working with the state banking departments of Calif., Ill., Fla., Ariz. and Wis. to dramatize the stories of people whose estate has escheated.

Thirty-five of the most popular television and movie stars temporarily abandon their acting careers to become daring circus performers on the all-new 2nd Annual "Circus of the Stars," special to be broadcast Monday, Dec. 5, 8 to 10 p.m. on CBS-TV.

Lucille Ball, Telly Savalas, Cindy Williams and Michael York will be ringmasters for the gala event that includes performances by: Marty Allen, Lucie Arnaz, George Burns, Lynda Carter, Gary Collins,

On the program, the stars themselves actually perform dangerous feats on the high-wire, on the flying trapeze, and in cages with wild animals.

Merged with strong comedy performances, the 2nd Annual "Circus of the Stars" is a breathtaking blend of thrills, risks, comedy and color.

With only a few weeks of the most rigorous training, the stars execute their hazardous acts. Bob Conrad does the "Slide For Life," never before done by an amateur in the U.S. or Europe.

CLASSROOM TV INCREASING

TV use in classroom instruction is on the increase, according to a just-completed study on School TV Utilization.

Fifteen million elementary and secondary school students are now being taught regularly by TV, Henry Loomis, president of the Corp. for Public Broadcasting, and Marie Eldridge, administrator for the National Center for Education, reported this week.

Roundtree dives from a high tower through a ring of flaming (and very sharp) spears; Tony Lo Bianco puts a leopard (the most unpredictable big cat) through rings of fire; and Peter Fonda rides a motorcycle on the highwire.

Other highlights include a precision flying trapeze act with Richard Hatch, Jamie Lee Curtis, David Nelson and Beth Nufer; Valerie Perrine water skiing on three dolphins; Abe Vigoda and Susan Saint James working with Brahman bulls; Paul Williams and the U.S. Army Golden Knights in a precision 12,000-foot free fall and parachute jump; Cindy Williams shot from a cannon.

Lucie Arnaz performs a spectacular elephant act, the role her mother, Lucille Ball, had to forego years ago when she was pregnant (with Lucie).

Other thrilling acts include beautiful Ann Turkel (Mrs. Richard Harris) as the target of stainless steel tomahawks (really thrown).

Lucie Arnaz tests her skills with an elephant, in the second annual "Circus of the Stars," a two-hour special on which motion picture and television stars become circus performers for just one night, Monday, Dec. 5 (8-10 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Miss Eva Beadle Lands A Husband

There's a running joke on the set of the top-rated "Little House on the Prairie."

The joke, between veteran actors Kevin Hagen (Doc Baker) and Karl Swenson (Mr. Hanson), is, "Who gets to take Miss Beadle home?"

In four years, the spinster school teacher has been kissed only twice, by men never to be heard from or seen again. But God rewards those who are patient.

Miss Beadle becomes a bride for keeps in the "Here Come the Brides" episode of NBC-TV's "Little House" series Monday, Dec. 5, 8 to 9 p.m., on NBC-TV.

"Miss Beadle has never had a romantic interest," Charlotte Stewart, who stars as Miss Beadle, remarked. "I've often wondered about it."

"The idea of giving Miss Beadle a husband is a terrific one and the humor is great. I have a first name now and it's Eva. My betrothed is Adam Simms (played by Joshua Bryant). Great pair — Adam and Eva," Charlotte observed.

"We've only seen Miss Beadle's room twice in four years. We have known nothing about her personal life. Now, she'll have a home and a family (she gets pregnant later in the season). She'll have a background — another dimension."

The casting of Miss Beadle's husband also elicited a sigh from Charlotte. Bryant is an old friend.

"I knew Joshua 19 years ago at the Pasadena Playhouse. I thought he was one of the handsomest men I've ever seen. We hung around with the same friends, but never dated."

"It makes a difference when you know the person who's going to play your husband," Charlotte added. "The arm is familiar and the eyes are familiar. We have affection for each other and it's genuine."

Yukon Trek Dangerous

In the late 1800's, thousands of fortune seekers "stampeded" to the Yukon — the "River of Gold." They were a breed of men and women made legendary for their wilderness adventures. Monday, Dec. 5, in "Yukon Passage," the premiere documentary of the new season of National Geographic Specials on PBS, four young men — Keith Tryck, surveyor; Bob Clark, professional skier; and Jerry Wallace, logger — turn their backs on "Civilization" to challenge the Yukon in the manner of the old prospectors.

"Yukon Passage," the story of their trek over snow, through wild waters, and across ice, is narrated by James Stewart and hosted by E.G. Marshall. It will air on PBS stations at 8 p.m.

In the Klondike where men once heard cries of "gold," the four relive the time and spirit of a colorful era. As Keith Tryck says, "We were four men with a common goal: To see the Yukon as others had seen it more than three-quarters of a century before. By following the route and techniques of the early 'stampeders,' we hoped to experience some of the adventures and challenges of that era."

The Yukon winds nearly 2,000 miles through wild terrain of western Canada and Alaska. To ride it, the foursome built a raft 38 feet long and 20 feet wide, weighing about 10 tons, and secured by wooden pegs driven into hand-augured holes. It was their home for the better part of eight months and 1800 miles. Part of their route was the one followed by Keith Tryck's grandfather from the long-abandoned port of Dyeas and Alaska's southeastern coast, northward on foot across the treacherous Chilkoot Pass to Bennett Lake.

Swift current, snags, and low-hanging sweepers posed a constant threat to the travelers. And when the raft grounded on a gravel bar, they could only pry themselves loose after tedious hours of maneuvering and angling the raft off to one side. Despite the rugged travel, Keith, Bob, Paul and Jerry never lost faith or heart or humor. Between stints of disengaging themselves from sweepers and maintaining their raft, they played pinochle, read, chatted, and indulged in some horesplay in the river. They feasted on fish, wild berries mixed with sugar and condensed milk, homemade bean stew, or hearty provisions they found in small, scattered river villages.

Festivities were also part of the trip. The men visited Dawson City's gambling house, Diamond Tooth Gertie's and engaged in a rough tug-of-war with the Dawson City smoke jumpers.

ACTING GIVES BROPHY PLEASURE

Kevin Brophy, who plays the title role in the new "Lucan" series, says that early in life he dreamed of becoming a baseball player or a race driver, but a knack for doing well when speaking before his classmates or other audiences convinced him to become an actor.

"Acting seemed like something I could step into with ease," quips Kevin. "It gives me pleasure and hopefully is entertaining to others."

Brophy had never worked professionally as an actor until he was signed for the series which will commence appearing on ABC-TV soon. The series deals with the search for identity by a young man who was raised by a wolf.

Barbara Interviews Personalities

Gary Morton and Lucille Ball talk candidly with Barbara Walters (l to r) about their marriage and life in the pressure-cooker of success in the first interview they have granted at their Beverly Hills home, airing on "The Barbara Walters Special," Tuesday, Dec. 6 (10-11 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Barbara Walters presents an intimate look at the private lives of some very public personalities when she visits Lucille Ball and husband Gary Morton in their Beverly Hills home, Dolly Parton in the bus she calls home for most of the year, and Henry Winkler with his new love, Stacy Weitzman, in his modest home in Los Angeles.

Revealing interviews with these stars on the subject of love and success — and a look at Dolly Parton in performance at the American Royal Rodeo in Kansas City, Missouri — make up this season's first presentation of "The Barbara Walters Special" Tuesday, Dec. 6, 10 to 11 p.m., on ABC-TV.

Lucille Ball and Gary Morton open their home to the television cameras for the first time as Ms. Ball speaks openly of her current marriage and its difference from life with her ex-husband, Desi Arnaz ("I like Gary because he doesn't play games...and I was pretty used to a lot of 'games.' And I'm not talking about Scrabble.")

After capturing the glitter of Dolly Parton's performing self, and the adoration of the fans at the rodeo as she sings "Here You Come Again," Ms. Walters takes the cameras indoors for a look at the luxury of the singer's $130,000 touring bus, where she and nine others live for upwards of 300 days a year while she is "on the road." Their conversation ranges from her poverty-stricken childhood to her "unfashionable" wardrobe and hairstyle — "I would never stoop so low as to be fashionable; that's the easiest thing in the world to do" — and her complicated marriage.

Ms. Walters then visits Henry Winkler and fashion publicist Stacey Weitzman to discuss their relationship and their future plans. Winkler also recalls his childhood, his sudden elevation to sex-symbol status, the reactions of public and press to "Fonzie" and his own image of the character he plays on "Happy Days."

Goodman Still Practices

Fifty-nine years ago, Benny Goodman was a nine-year-old kid in Chicago, who played the clarinet and practiced for hours every day.

Today, Benny Goodman is "The King of Swing" — one of the best-known and most respected jazz musicians who ever lived. And he still practices every day.

On Tuesday, Dec. 6, at 8 p.m. on PBS, Goodman will bring the results of his nearly six decades of practice for a lively 60-minute concert special.

National television viewers will see, on the program, what the Wolf Trap audience saw during the taping this past summer — a slick and polished performance by Goodman, his sextet and his big band.

In addition, viewers will see something more — a brief look at Goodman in rehearsal, working with his sidemen and practicing his solos.

"If you're interested in music, you can't stop around," Goodman once said about his marathon practice sessions.

Not "slopping around" means hours and hours of rehearsal — as the musicians in Goodman's bands learned.

"Working for Benny was like being in a school of music," saxman George Auld once said. "His discipline, knowledge and ability were great determining factors in my musical life."

Harry James recalled that Goodman rehearsed the band a great deal but added, "Benny used to practice fifteen times more than the whole band combined."

And while James may have exaggerated some, Goodman's visit to Wolf Trap made it clear that he didn't exaggerate too much.

Goodman's day in Vienna, Va., for example, began at 9 a.m., with a lengthy radio interview. The interview room was in one part of the hotel, Goodman's room in another. When the interviewer went to find Goodman, he was drawn directly to the right room by the sound of his clarinet.

When the interview was over, the audio crew packed up and left. The interviewer went to the hotel bar for lunch. And Goodman went back to his room to practice some more.

There was a rehearsal that afternoon and when Goodman returned that evening, he asked for an hour alone before the show "to get warmed up."

Then "The King of Swing" presented a concert that drew sustained ovations from the standing-room only audience.

Cosby And Poitier Featured In Comedy

The frantic search for a stolen lottery ticket by two good-natured buddies — played by Sidney Poitier and Bill Cosby — who find themselves over their heads in gangland shenanigans, cues the action in "Uptown Saturday Night," airing as the "CBS Wednesday Movie" Dec. 7, 9 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Poitier, who also directed, plays a down-to-earth but innocently rakish factory worker who, along with his slightly more cosmopolitan buddy (Bill Cosby, a bearded and twinkling-eye cab driver) sneaks away from his wife one evening for a late-night fling at Madam Zanolbia's, a posh black gambling joint. Duded up and with a phony letter of introduction, the two guys make out pretty well until, just when Cosby has won a bundle, the club is raided by a gang of unidentified robbers. Poitier counts himself lucky that he only lost a wallet but doesn't realize until the next morning that it contained a $50,000 winning lottery ticket.

Their crusade to retrieve the stolen ticket forms the mainstay of the film as they seek help from a bevy of zany characters ranging from a paranoid con-man posing as a private eye (Richard Pryor) to a pompous and slimy politician (Roscoe Lee Browne) who alternately hands a portrait of Richard Nixon or Malcolm X, depending on who is visiting his office. From there, it's off into the underworld where Poitier and Cosby cleverly play two rival gangleaders (Harry Belafonte in a broad take-off of Brando in "The Godfather," and Calvin Lockhart) against each other. After a variety of sprightly ruses, tall-tales and physical dexterities there's a predictably happy ending although our two heroes are considerably the worse for wear.

Poitier's performance is a looser and leaner one than he's ever given before, and Cosby, too, is excellent, maintaining a perpetually ironic presence which only falters when he's called on to deliver some superbly embroidered lies.

On the directorial side, Poitier has made the material extremely workable, moving the narrative crisply along and conjuring up some nicely orchestrated bits of physical comedy, particularly in a hilarious bar room confrontation with a midget gangster and his giant bodyguard.

Miami Faces Colts

When the Miami Dolphins take on the Baltimore Colts Monday, Dec. 5, at 9 p.m. on ABC-TV, Vern Den Herder will once again be leading the Dolphin defense. The Dolphins' defensive captain, Vern was voted outstanding defensive lineman for the third year in a row last season. He is the epitome of consistency and durability.

The 6-6, 252-pound defensive end is a quiet, intelligent leader. His durability makes him a tireless worker and he always gets the job done. Last year, Vern had a career-high 105 tackles and blocked two field goals.

Coach Don Shula describes him as a "most solid performer," and he is the foundation of the new rebuilt defensive line.

He wasn't always a football star. At Central Iowa he earned all-state honors in basketball

'Frosty The Snowman' Is Back In Animated Musical Saturday

Frosty, that "happy, jolly soul" whose old silk hat full of magic has turned him into a musical Christmas legend, demonstrates his unique snowmanship in the popular holiday perennial "Frosty the Snowman," animated musical

LYNDE STARS IN CHRISTMAS SPECIAL

Paul Lynde will star in a special holiday program, "Twas the Night Before Christmas," airing on ABC-TV Dec. 12.

Starring with Lynde will be Anne Meara, Foster Brooks, Martha Raye, Alice Ghostley, Howard Morris, George Gobel and Anson Williams.

special, narrated by Jimmy Durante, to be rebroadcast Saturday, Dec. 10, 8:30 to 9 p.m. on CBS-TV.

Comedian Jackie Vernon provides the voice for Frosty in the musical Christmas fable, originally broadcast on the Network Dec. 7, 1969. The special, based on the popular song of the same title, about the happy-go-lucky snowman with the corn-cob pipe, the button nose and two eyes made out of coal, features Billy De Wolfe as the voice of the villainous Professor Hinkle, a magician whose stove-pipe top-ter transforms the lifeless snow figure into an enchanting song-and-dance man.

Pursued by the hatless professor and rising temperatures, Frosty sets off for the North Pole to keep from melting. En route, the indomitable snowman weathers a whirl of adventures and overcomes the threat of evaporation.

Jimmy Durante is a product of Manhattan's Lower East Side. As a youngster, one of his first jobs was delivering newspapers in Manhattan's Broadway area. Many of his customers were in show business.

His success story started one day when his father brought young Durante a piano and hired a piano teacher for him. Jimmy worked at many odd jobs to help pay the bills, and would practice on the piano day and night in between jobs. In no time at all, he was earning a few dollars a night playing at neighborhood parties and athletic club dances.

Then followed other jobs in saloons and dance halls on the Bowery, Coney Island and in Chinatown — and once as an accompanist to a singing waiter named Eddie Cantor.

But it wasn't long before Durante's versatility blossomed, and he became a household name. Indeed, determination paid off. And, like Frosty the Snowman, Jimmy Durante has melted the hearts of millions.

FIREWORKS IN OHIO

A spectacular pyrotechnical display against a snow-covered landscape in Chagrin Falls, Ohio, will be seen in "The Gathering."

The scene calls for star Ed Asner to receive the fireworks as a Christmas gift. While the fireworks in the script cost around $25, the actual tab was closer to $2,000, as the display was done by experts from a nearby Hanna-Barbera Theme Park.

Davis Takes Audience On Christmas Journey

Mac Davis and his guest — David Soul, Shields and Yarnell, and special guest star Engelbert Humperdinck — take viewers on a musical tour of Christmas, recalling different customs and childhood memories, when NBC-TV presents "Mac Davis...I Believe in Christmas," Wednesday, Dec. 7, 9 to 10 p.m. on NBC-TV.

Davis greets his friends as he opens the show singing "Good Times, Good Music, Good Friends," and reminisces about Christmas in his hometown of Lubbock, Texas. With the aid of actors portraying relatives, he re-creates family celebrations as he sings "Uncle Booger Red and Byrd Nelle," "Babies Butts" and "Love the One You're With."

Soul offers "Tomorrow's Child," recalling childhood years in Sioux Falls, S.D.

Humperdinck reflects on Christmas in Leicester, England, recalling some unusual customs, and performs in a production number singing "O Christmas Tree" and "Lovers' Holiday."

Shield and Yarnell appear in a specialty number as two robots celebrating Christmas. Mac follows with "Blue Christmas," which leads into "I Wish," in which Mac is joined by David and Engelbert as they try to recall musically how Christmas appeared to them as youngsters.

Davis and his guests proceed to capture the deeper spirit of Christmas, as Soul has them participate in a special holiday candle ceremony, with David singing "What Child Is This," Engelbert offering "Home for the Holidays" and "I'll Be Home for Christmas," plus Davis and his guests singing "Last Month of the Year," with Shields and Yarnell participating. Davis concludes the special with "Silent Night."

Davis, who attracts enthusiastic audiences wherever and whenever he performs, was voted Artist of the Year in 1975 by the Country Music Association.

Humperdinck has sold more than 125 million records during the decade since "Release Me" catapulted the young Englishman to stardom. His smash single and album, "After the Lovin'," recently have been certified platinum.

Soul, star of "Starsky and Hutch," also has emerged as a hot, new recording artist with his first album, "David Soul," and Robert Shields and Lorene Yarnell are noted mimes who were married in a mime-ceremony that attracted national attention.

All Specials Night on NBC-TV Wednesday, Dec. 7 will presents: Mac Davis — I Believe in Christmas — Mac Davis is joined by David Soul, Shields and Yarnell and special guest Engelbert Humperdinck in a holiday trip through childhood memories (9-10 p.m.) on NBC-TV, followed by "The Bette Midler Special" starring Bette in her first network TV special with guests Dustin Hoffman, Circus Clown Emmett Kelly and The Harlettes at 10 to 11 p.m.

Real-Life Story Airs seems highly likely that he will trade "ho-ho-ho" for a loud "Bah, Humbug."

Finally, the question becomes: Will his frazzled nerves shatter the vision of sugar plums, or will the magic of "Twas the Night Before Christmas" revive the flagging Yule spirit?

"Twas the Night Before Christmas," an ABC-TV holiday special starring Paul Lynde as the head of an old-fashioned household where absolutely nothing is quiet, not even the mice, will air Wednesday, Dec. 7, 8 to 9 p.m., on ABC-TV.

Paul Lynde stars as Clark Cosgrove in the warm and humorous story of how one American family celebrated Christmas in the 1890s.

Starring with him are Anne Meare as his wife; Foster Brooks, Martha Raye, Alice Ghostley, Howard Morris, George Gobel and Anson Williams.

Clark Cosgrove is a nervous man at best, and after a long, hard day at work he is in no mood for a Christmas Eve with noisy children, gabby in-laws, uninvited guests and an irksome cat. As his patience grows thin it "Abide With Me," a moving dramatic interpretation of a real-life story, will be shown on "Great Performances" Wednesday, Dec. 7, at 9 p.m. on PBS.

Featuring Cathleen Nesbitt and Ann Francis, "Abide With Me" was dramatized by Julian Mitchell and is based on Winifred Foley's autobiographical "A Child in the Forest" and filmed in the original Gloucestershire setting. It is set in 1928, in a small sleepy village in England's Cotswold Hills. Fourteen year old Winnie Mason arrives to stay for six months as housekeeper and maid to ninety year old Mrs. Hollins, a lady who insists on being called "Ma'am" and who keeps the child's nose to the grindstone.

In a distinguished career that spans nearly 70 years, Cathleen Nesbitt has played literally hundreds of roles, ranging from ingenue to dowager, on the London and New York stages, with the Old Vic, at the Abbey Theatre, on screen and on television.

"Abide With Me" drew high praise in its original broadcast. Said the "Daily Telegraph,"

"beautifully directed, it was full of loving touches and rich in human understanding. The "Guardian" concurred, "it had the compelling contrast of Cathleen Nesbitt, some seventy years in the theatre, and Ann Francis who has never acted before."

'The Paul Simon Special' To Air

Singer-composer Paul Simon, one of the most highly esteemed figures in contemporary American music since the mid-60s, will star in a variety special Thursday, Dec. 8, 9 to 10 p.m., on NBC-TV.

"The Paul Simon Special" will feature Simon in musical and comedy segments with his guests Chevy Chase, the Jesse Dixon Singers, Art Garfunkel, Charles Grodin, Eric Idle, Twyla Tharp and the Twyla Tharp dance company and Lily Tomlin.

Multi Emmy Award-winning writer-producer Lorne Michaels produced "The Paul Simon Special." Michaels is the producer and one of the writers of "NBC's Saturday Night Live," for which he has so far personally earned three Emmys. In addition, he won two Emmys for specials starring Lily Tomlin. He has also produced specials headlined by Flip Wilson, the Beach Boys and Perry Como, among others, and was one of the writers of the original "Laugh-In" series.

won a 1975-76 Emmy for an edition of the program that was hosted by Simon.

A total of 13 Grammy Awards and the sale of millions of his records attest to Simon's stature as one of the most influential and enduring of popular music personalities. His albums (seven of which he recorded while part of the Simon and Garfunkel performing duo) and singles have earned an impressive 16 gold records. Topping the list is the memorable "Bridge Over Troubled Water" album which remains one of the most successful LP releases of all time.

Among Simon's other compositions that have been popular hits are "Mrs. Robinson," "Mother and Child Reunion," "Still Crazy After All These Years," "Kodachrome," "The Sounds of Silence," "Cecilia," "I Am a Rock," "Homeward Bound," "59th Street Bridge Song," "Fifty Ways to Leave Your Lover," "Loves Me Like a Rock" and "The Boxer."

Never a frequent performer on television even earlier in his career, Simon has been even more selective about his TV appearances in recent years. The notable exception has been "NBC's Saturday Night Live" on which he has appeared three times — twice as host and once as a special guest.

"CINDY" FILMING BEGINS

"Cindy," a two-hour original musical-comedy based on the classic Cinderella story, has entered production.

The ABC special featuring an all-black cast, set against the backdrop of the 1940s in New York's Harlem, will air Dec. 18. Starring are Charlene Woodard Scoey Mitchell, Mae Mercer and Alaina Reed.

FROM THE CLASS OF '65 — Annette O'Toole stars as Kathy, who had a particularly bad reputation among her fellow seniors but who is now supposedly happily married, in "Everybody's Girl," the premiere presentation of "What Really Happened to the Class of '65," a new anthology series on Thursday, Dec. 8 (10-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

HOLLYWOOD — Caroline Kennedy must be taking her journalism career seriously, because she's looking for Robert Redford, hoping to corner him for an interview. The magazine Rolling Stone has asked her to do a profile of him.

So friendly are Rick Nelson and his estranged wife Kris that, while Rick was away on a concert tour, she found him a bachelor pad, then decorated it from top to bottom.

Production's been halted for a month on "The Life and Times of Grizzly Adams" while star Dan Haggerty recovers from severe burns sustained when his beard caught fire at his 36th birthday celebration.

The rock group Kiss is the first to lease one of the swank new 40-foot luxury touring buses that are now on the market. It features a Jacuzzi, studio-quality sound system, soundproof sleeping quarters for 12, videocassettes, central air conditioning, a dining area, refrigerator, microwave ovens and TV sets.

Among the carolers seen in the Christmas Eve segment of "The Gathering" are Ed Asner's children. They were visiting Ed on location when the show's director recruited them for the singing group.

Donny and Marie are now taping their show in the Osmond family's plush production facilities near their hometown of Provo, Utah.

Glen Campbell, Natalie Cole and David Soul are the entertainers pegged to host the fifth annual "American Music Awards," which will air on ABC-TV Jan. 16th.

The Barney Millers seen on John Davidson's Christmas show this week aren't the Millers of the popular ABC-TV series. They're John's in-laws.

NBC-TV's planning a look at the '60s through music with a two-hour special, "The Music Never Stops." The show, to feature 100 minutes of music, begins with the arrival of the Beatles and ends with the Apollo 10 landing on the moon. All changes of the period — philosophical, political and fashion — will be reflected in the lyrics. Twiggy will do the hosting duties and guests include Jerry and the Pacemakers, the Kinks, Donovan, Mary Travers (plus footage of Peter, Paul and Mary).

Comments On Popularity

"I was not at all popular in high school. It's kind of ironic that I'd play that kind of character," said Annette O'Toole, co-star of the current hit motion picture "One on One" starring Robby Benson and starring as Kathy Adams, the most promiscuous girl in the graduation class of 1965 at fictitious Bret Harte High School.

Kathy's story is told in "Everybody's Girl," an episode of the NBC-TV drama anthology series "What Really Happened to the Class of '65," airing Thursday, Dec. 8, 10 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV.

"In the episode Kathy has been intimate with nearly every boy in the school and in that way was popular, though she didn't even get asked to the prom. That was an event boys took nice girls to," said O'Toole.

The actress had a high school life somewhat different from the life she depicts in the fictitious public school in the series. "I went to Hollywood Professional School and my foremost desire then was to get work as an actress. I had my first TV job on 'The Danny Kaye Show' when I was 13, then when I was 14 I had roles on 'My Three Sons' and 'The Courtship of Eddie's Father.' I just wanted to work more and go to school less."

Other professional children attending high school with O'Toole were the singing Cowells children, Jay Norris of "Dennis the Menace" and Jon Provost of "Lassie."

"I was not popular, I think because I was withdrawn, anti-social, and too work-oriented. I didn't like school at all. I felt stifled there.

Success Changed Their Holidays

"This will be the first time Karen and Richard will not be home for Christmas," was the plaintive lament of Mrs. Harold Carpenter, mother of those two musicians who gained fame as The Carpenters. "But we'll join them wherever they are."

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Carpenter sat on a couple of off-stage props while listening to the perfectly-pitched bell of Karen's voice and Richard's lush glistening musical arrangements for their holiday special, "The Carpenters at Christmas," airing Friday, Dec. 9, 9 to 10 p.m., on ABC-TV.

The Carpenter family has been together each holiday since their beginnings in snowy New Haven, Conn. 30 years ago.

"No, it isn't quite the same now as then," recalls the beautiful proud silver-gray-haired mother. "As a matter of fact we've almost stopped giving gifts — they get so many things from admirers all over the world — it takes us two days to open everything. Of course, there is always something very personal and special we give each other."

The Carpenter family moved from Connecticut to Downey, Calif., when Karen was 13 and Richard was 16.

Mr. Carpenter said, "Richard has always had an incredible ear for music, even as a baby. We bought him an accordion when he was four, then he started piano lessons at age 12. From there he began composing his own music and doing arrangements. He has such extraordinary talent — it always made me mad that he let others take the limelight.

"Karen became interested in music when she was in junior high," said Mrs. Carpenter. "She saw the school band practicing and decided then and there to play the drums. Richard and Karen formed their first group while attending Long Beach State College, later won the Battle of the Bands at the Hollywood Bowl and they were off. Richard took his music very seriously and wanted expert advice. He once arranged for the noted musician Pete Jolly to hear the group, and after hearing them play, Pete told Richard, 'You don't need me.'"

"The way Karen became a singer just happened," said Mrs. Carpenter. "She just started singing along while playing the drums and finally the singing took over. Now she leaves the drumming to Cubby (Cubby O'Brien, the former Mouseketeer). She never had one singing lesson."

Karen and Richard Carpenter, three-time Grammy Award-winners, will star in a special holiday presentation "The Carpenters at Christmas," Friday, Dec. 9 (9-10 p.m.) on ABC-TV. Featured guests are Harvey Korman, Kristy McNichol and puppeteer Burr Tillstrom and Kukla and Ollie.

John Davidson's Christmas Show

Singer John Davidson stars in a charming and music-filled tale of the search for the original plum pudding in "The John Davidson Christmas Special," airing Friday, Dec. 9, 10 to 11 p.m., on ABC-TV.

Tim Conway is John's guest star and Betty White is his special guest star in the program that has John and his wife, Jackie, and their two children and other members of the Davidson family taking a trip back in time to the colorful England of the early 19th century.

The story begins in the present in the Davidson living room where the family has gathered for Christmas dinner. As usual, problems with the Davidson family's old English plum pudding recipe, which has been handed down through generations, delays the dinner. John, contemplating the yellowing, ancient recipe, suddenly finds himself on the snow-covered streets of 19th century London.

There he meets Charles Dickens (Conway), selling yule logs at a time before he became a writer. Then he encounters a London street girl played by Betty White.

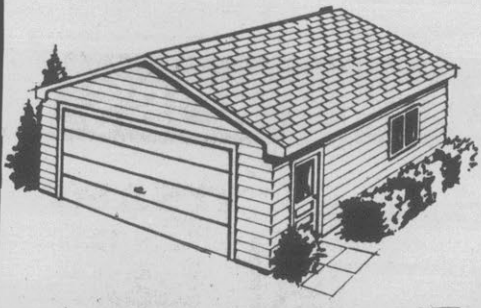

Joined by Jackie and his children, he visits an old English pub run by Tim Conway. Then they take a train to Birmingham Castle where Betty White, as the Duchess of Birmingham, is presiding over a Christmas party. Tim Conway plays the ghost of the Duke who always returns during the holidays to make the plum pudding because he "invented" it and refused to pass the secret on.

When the Duke's ghost appears, the search—John thinks—is ended.

Animated Version Of 'A Christmas Carol' To Be Presented On CBS

"A merry Christmas, uncle" cried a cheerful voice. It was Scrooge's nephew... "Bah," said Scrooge, "Humbug."

Ever since 1843 Charles Dickens and Christmas have been synonymous. In that year, "A Christmas Carol" was published. And from that time to this, Scrooge, the Cratchits, the Ghosts of Christmas Present, Past and Yet to Come, and of course, Tiny Tim, have represented the true spirit of the holiday season more than any other single piece of writing.

An authentically reproduced version, in animated caricature form a Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol," will be presented Saturday, Dec. 10, 1 to 2 p.m., on CBS-TV, with Sir Michael Redgrave as the narrator. Alistair Sim portrays Scrooge and Michael Hordern is heard as the troubled ghost of Marley.

"My chief purpose," wrote Dickens in the preface, "was in a whimsical kind of masque which the good humor of the season justified, to awaken some loving and forbearing thoughts, never out of season in a Christian land." He succeeded admirably. In 1867, Dickens came to America, and on Christmas Eve in Boston, read the text of "A Christmas Carol" to a hall filled with guests, among whom were Mr. and Mrs. Fairbanks, of Johnsburg, Vermont. It is said that after listening to Dickens read the tale, the Fairbanks went back to their hotel where Mr. Fairbanks fell into a deep reverie. Asked what was the matter, the factory owner answered:

"I feel that after listening to Mr. Dickens' reading of 'A Christmas Carol' tonight, I should break the custom we have hitherto observed of opening the works on Christmas Day."

And so, on the following day his factory was, indeed, closed. The following year, it is believed another custom was established, where not only was the business closed on Christmas Day, but each and every worker received the gift of a turkey.

Charles Dickens probably never knew his story had wrought such a profound change in Mr. Fairbanks, but since his intent was clearly to bring Christmas to the hearts of his readers, he would certainly have been gratified.

"I have endeavored in this Ghostly little book to raise the Ghost of an idea," it says in the dedication, "which shall not put my readers out of humour with themselves, with each other, with the season, or with me."

Patera Leads World's Strongest Men Events

Ken Patera, a 31-year-old former NCAA shot put and weightlifting champion and now a professional wrestler, led the pack at the halfway point in "The World's Strongest Men" competition, held last July in Universal City, Calif., which is being televised throughout the fall on "CBS Sports Spectacular," Saturdays, 4:30 to 6 p.m.

Patera and the seven other competitors were chosen for the unique decathlon of events, specifically designed for eight of "The World's Strongest Men" by the tournament's producers, Trans World International, on the basis of recommendations received from the top authorities in the field of strength, weightlifting and body building.

Patera, the NCAA All-American who put the shot 65 feet, 11 and one half inches while at Brigham Young University, was also an NCAA weightlifting titlist. He headed the opposition after five events with a total of 22 points.

Patera's lead was built on consistency, placing anywhere from first to fifth on four of the five events, and getting 10 points for winning the tire toss, seven for finishing second in the wheelbarrow race, three for being fourth in the barrel lift, and one point for placing fifth in the wrist roll.

His closest pursuer, with 21 points at the mid-point stage, was 330-pound Bruce Wilhelm, who won a silver medal in a weightlifting event at the Montreal Olympics. Wilhelm, received top honors of 10 points for winning both the barrel lift and the wheelbarrow race, but the best he could do in the other three events was one point for finishing fifth in the steel bar bend.

In the third place, with 16 and one half points, was the lightest man in the field, Italy's Franco Columbu, at 188 pounds. A former boxer turned body builder, Columbu was just one point ahead of Lou Ferrigno with 15 and one half points. Ferrigno, who is also a body builder, appeared in the movie "Pumping Iron."

Tied for fifth place with 10 points each were Mike Dayton and George Frenn. Dayton, a Kung Fu master who specializes in snapping locked handcuffs off his wrists, took first in the wrist roll event, naturally.

Pat Haden To Lead Rams To Super Bowl

Last Season, the Los Angeles Rams' Pat Haden figured he would ride the bench as an understudy to veteran quarterbacks James Harris and Ron Jaworski, but by the time the year was over, rookie Haden had won the starting job. This fact, of course, was no major surprise to anyone who had followed his brilliant collegiate career at nearby USC.

Injuries to both Harris and Jaworski played a critical role in Haden's breaking into the Rams' lineup. Once in, his performances as both starter and in relief were so impressive that he got the nod in mid-November to guide the team through the final five games of the regular season and into the playoffs.

This Sunday, Dec. 4, the Rams meet the Oakland Raiders, and NBC will televise the game, beginning at 4 p.m.

Last year wasn't exactly a bed of roses for the former Rhodes Scholar. Against the Chicago Bears in game six, he was knocked dizzy in the second quarter and was replaced by Jaworski. A week later, Haden came off the bench in the fourth quarter against New Orleans, and completed his first pass to Harold Jackson for a game-winning touchdown.

In a vital game against San Francisco late in the season, he scored a touchdown, threw for another, then backed up that performance with two more paydirt pitches and another rushing touchdown against the Saints the following week.

Haden's bid to become the first rookie quarterback ever in the Super Bowl was halted in Minnesota where the Rams lost the NFC Championship Game to the Vikings, 24-13.

At the start of this season, Haden had figured he would again ride the bench as an understudy to the newly acquired Joe Namath, who had been the most highly publicized and accomplished quarterback in professional football.

To date, Haden is the leading passer in the NFC, based on his total rating, and he has done an excellent job avoiding interceptions, all the while leading the Rams to victory.

Look for this Rhodes Scholar to play an ever-increasing major role in the Rams' future.

Falcon Front Four Is Strong; Face N.E. Patriots On Sunday

The Falcon front four has been given more nicknames than one can remember in recent weeks. A Georgia newspaper tabbed them the "Peachtree Posse," an Atlanta radio station suggested the "Grits Blitz," and someone labeled the unit "Leeman's Demons."

Call them whatever you like says defensive end Claude Humphrey, but it's the results that are important. If that is the case, the best thing to call them is successful.

The Falcons will meet the New England Patriots Sunday, Dec. 4, at 1 p.m. on NBC-TV.

Midway into the season, the Atlanta defensive line of end Humphrey and Jeff Merrow, tackle Mike Lewis and Jim Bailey had established itself as one of the best starting units in all of football. Lending a helping hand in a reserve role has been Wilson Faumuina of Jeff Yeates.

Their success has been to the surprise of nearly everyone, but defensive line coach Jim Champion.

"I'm not surprised, but I am pleased," says Champion. "They are all good athletes who are giving a total effort. We still have some problems, but we are working them out."

The Falcon sack total comes from everywhere on the defensive unit since nine players have recorded a sack, but the impetus still comes from the defensive line.

"We shoot for a total of 40," explains Champion. "If we reach that mark, we feel we will be competitive. However, it all goes hand in hand. You've got to have good pass coverage to get sacks and you usually have to be ahead."

Humphrey is a long standing name of respect around the NFL, but Merrow appears to just be coming into his own. He leads the squad in sacks despite playing several games on a injured toe.

"Bailey and Lewis are the least known members of the Falcon front, but have repeatedly received praise from head coach Leeman Bennett as a couple of veterans who are doing exactly what we ask."

Meanwhile, Faumuina may develop into the most colorful member of the unit. A native of Samoa, he plays primarily in passing situations and describes his task by saying, "It's my job to break out the centers."

Defensive tackle Mike Lewis will lead the Atlanta front four against the New England Patriots on Sunday, Dec. 4 at 1 p.m. on NBC-TV.

Statz Has A Big Day

STATZ, the computerized robot, who spews out predictions of NFL games on NBC's "NFL '77" program, has every right to work up a good head of steam over his latest batch of predictions. STATZ picked 11 winners in 14 games in contests played during NFL week Nov. 9.

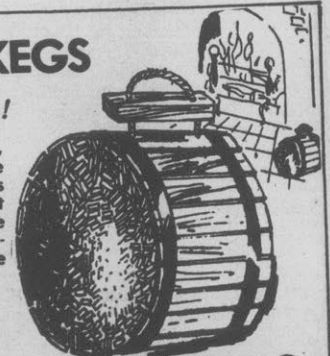

Just to show STATZ had a strong yen for the figures he ingested, NBC Sports' reigning handicapper picked three games right on the money. He tabbed Pittsburgh over Cleveland by four points and that's what happened. He then had Washington three points better than Philadelphia, and that's how it turned out. San Francisco over New Orleans by three was another STATZ selection which was right on the nose.

Julie Harris Stars

Julie Harris recreates her award-winning portrayal of Mary Todd Lincoln in the Hollywood Television Theatre production of "The Last of Mrs. Lincoln," airing Saturday, Dec. 10, at 9 p.m. on PBS.

This Hollywood Television Theatre was directed by George Schaefer, who directed Miss Harris on Broadway in 1972 when she won the Tony Award for Best Actress of the Year for the role.

The play covers the 17 years of Mary Lincoln's life following the assassination of President Lincoln. Faced with large debts incurred during the Presidency, including the cost of installing water, gas lighting and furnaces at the White House, she is forced to sell for exhibition the suit the President wore when he was killed.

She becomes estranged from her elder son, Robert, and when her younger son Tad dies at age 19, she retreats into insanity and is periodically hospitalized for a number of years. Finally taken in by her sister and brother-in-law, Mrs. Lincoln goes to live in the house in Springfield where she was married.

Julie Harris has acted in comedy and drama, classic and contemporary works. It was as a lonely 12-year-old in the wistful "A Member of the Wedding" that she first attained fame, winning the New York Drama Critics Award for her performance. She played Sally Bowles in "I Am a Camera," and Joan of Arc in "The Lark," and has starred in the films "East of Eden" and Harper."

During his long career, director George Schaefer has won eight Emmy Awards and four Directors' Guild of America Awards.

Film About W.C. Fields

The woman who lives as the devoted and tormented lover of a master comedian recalls their years together in "W.C. Fields and Me," on NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" Dec. 10, 9 to 11:15 p.m., on NBC-TV. Oscar winner Rod Steiger (Best Actor, "In the Heat of the Night," 1967) stars with Valerie Perrine.

The film begins with Carlotta Monti's (Perrine) narration, as Fields (Steiger) goes through his turns on the Vaudeville stage, fighting with Flo Zeigfeld (Paul Stewart) for "artistic integrity," which in his case amounted to filling the routines with gross double entendres and smutty gestures.

The action then moves to Hollywood, where a combination of cantankerous chutzpah and sheer talent eventually net Fields a lucrative run of features with Paramount, which become progressively less satisfying as his heavy drinking and fierce temper gradually make him persona non grata at the studio.

Keeping up his drunken revelry with Barrymore (Jack Cassidy), director Gregory La Cava (Allan Arbus), and Gene Fowler (Louis Zorich), Steiger manipulates a pretty would-be starlet, Carlotta, into showing up at his palatial Beverly Hills mansion and ends up by asking her to keep company with him, at first platonically and later as his mistress. As Hollywood would have it, her own efforts to secure a screen test at Paramount are quashed by Fields (who is afraid that the sniff of success will steal her away from his side), resulting in a long estrangement. The story subsequently follows Fields through his successful comeback and in to a final, fatal bout with alcoholism that brings both Carlotta and his unknown son to his side.

There are some extremely effective sequences in the film. Included are Barrymore's wake, an occasion he himself attended with a Martini carefully placed in his embalmed hand; a joyous spree into Mexico where Fields is arrested for indecent acts; and Field's casual brushes with child actors, dogs (who treated him the way he treated the visiting dignitaries), and the studio brass.

Color Study Focuses On Humpback Whales

The fascinating story of the endangered humpback whales who travel many thousands of miles each year to meet in the waters of the Hawaiian islands is told via close-up photography in "Gentle Giants of the Pacific," a Survival Anglia Ltd. nature-adventure special to be colorcast Saturday, Dec. 10, 8 to 9 p.m., on NBC-TV.

This is the third in a series of seven nature-adventure specials chronicling real-life events around the globe which are being specially produced by Survival Anglia Ltd. for presentation on NBC-TV over a three-year period.

"Gentle Giants of the Pacific" focuses on the playful mammals — called the "singing whales" because of the complex patterns of resonant sound they emit — as they congregate in the clear waters off the island of Molokai in Hawaii to court and breed.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry we can't answer others.

FOR WALTER F. MONDALE, Vice President

John Adams, the first Vice President, called his job "the most insignificant office that ever the invention of man contrived or his imagination conceived." Do you agree? — Mrs. L. Mills, Hobart, Ind.

● President Carter and I have what I believe is an unprecedented relationship, one which I hope disproves John Adams's assessment. When the President asked me to serve, I told him I could be most helpful to his Administration by functioning as a senior advisor and troubleshooter — not as a ceremonial Vice President. He agreed.

FOR VALERIE BERTINELLI, star of One Day at a Time

Why do you think teenagers go wrong and end up in trouble? — M.C., Lima Ohio

● Must be the home life. If parents aren't around to keep the family together and aren't there when their kids need them, the kids will go elsewhere for attention. I've always had lots of it, and affection, too. I've never taken drugs and don't smoke or drink. Well, I do drink — wine. I'm Italian, it's part of dinner and growing up, but I can't stand hard liquor.

FOR CORA ALCINDOR, mother of Kareem Abdul-Jabbar

Was your son always interested in basketball? — R.H. Savannah, Ga.

● He loved all sports — even horseback-riding — and got into basketball because of his height. In those early years, however, he preferred football, but we sensed he wasn't made for it. When one of his friends broke his foot, we forbade Kareem to play. He took it well, and said he'd just watch. That's when his interest in basketball really got going.

FOR DR. CARLTON MOORE, director, Center for Meteorite Studies, Arizona State University

What's all this about painting mountains, terrain disfigurements, etc.? How much is that costing us taxpayers? — Clarice Horvath, Seattle, Wash.

● Mountains and rock surfaces in arid climates develop coatings called desert varnish, which often has taken thousands of years to form. When man builds roads or scrapes the surface, highly visible scars appear. We've learned how to replace the varnish and cover up the scars using the same chemicals that nature does. They cost only a few cents per square foot.

FOR DON RICKLES, comedian

Let's have the truth, now. Just how did you lose your hair? — S.G., Hot Springs, Ark.

● At 18, during WW II, when I went in the Navy (we won the War, in spite of it). When we crossed the equator, we had to shave our heads according to an old custom. My gorgeous hair, the pride of my life, was never the same after that. It very halfheartedly tried to grow back. Then it totally dissipated to the point where it is now — or isn't. Do you think it's too late to sue the Government for the loss of hair?

FOR ROBERT GOULET, singer

I hear you have trouble remembering lyrics. True? Has it hurt your career? — C.C., Stowe, Vt.

● It's partially true, but it doesn't give me any career problems. Even when I do a show twice a night for a month, I still forget certain lines at times. Once I even forgot every single word to "The Star-Spangled Banner." So what I do is ad-lib — and you should hear some of the words I make up.

FOR EVELYN KEYES, author of Scarlett O'Hara's Younger Sister

Did Artie Shaw or your other ex-husband object to what you wrote about them in your book? What about other friends you included? — S.I., Asbury, N.J.

● You've got to be kidding. All those people I wrote about are worldly, sophisticated grown-ups, quite able to take care of themselves in every way. They wouldn't dream of complaining. Actually, the only gripes I got came from those not included in the book. If I lose a friend because of something I said, he or she couldn't have been one in the first place.

FOR CRYSTAL GAYLE, singer, sister of Loretta Lynn

Has being Loretta's sister been of much help to you? — G.S., Salinas, Calif.

● A lot, because it created immediate interest on the part of disc jockeys. My records became conversation pieces for them. Of course, no one played or bought my records just because I'm Loretta's sister; they have to stand on their own. But I am fortunate in that once the door was opened, I've been able to keep it open.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

Has Dr. Christiaan Barnard retired? — M.N., Rome, Ga.

● The 53-year-old heart transplant pioneer says his days as a surgeon are numbered. His hands are almost crippled by rheumatoid arthritis, and he's using anti-inflammatory pills to control the pain and puffiness. Unfortunately, they aren't much help. During surgery he sometimes hands over the reins to other doctors. The colorful Barnard claims he's tired and can no longer defend his techniques: "When I was younger and more resilient, harsh criticism made me more determined to bounce back. Not anymore. I'm getting too old."

FOR ROBERT SHAW, actor

Is there anything your fans don't know about you? — S.A., Lebanon, Pa.

● Well, I can lose my temper quickly but only for a short time. I'm a good friend and a rotten enemy. I have to use a woman's hair brush because my hair is so thick a man's comb is of no use. I get furious when I'm misquoted — which I often am. I'm an insomniac and spend most of the night roaming around the house. Fortunately, all my wives have been great sleepers, and my nocturnal wanderings have never bothered them.

PRO AND CON

Should There Be A Separate U.S. Department of Education?

PRO John Ryor, president, National Education Association

Some say that public education has "failed." In fact, quite the opposite is true. Because American public education has succeeded so well, we have developed a highly complex and technical society that demands more and more of an educated population. At the same time, we've created an idealistic and articulate citizenry dedicated to true social justice. It is these new demands, and the unparalleled mushrooming of social needs, that education struggles to meet without adequate money, status, legal support or a sound organizational base. Such a base could be provided by a Federal Department of Education.

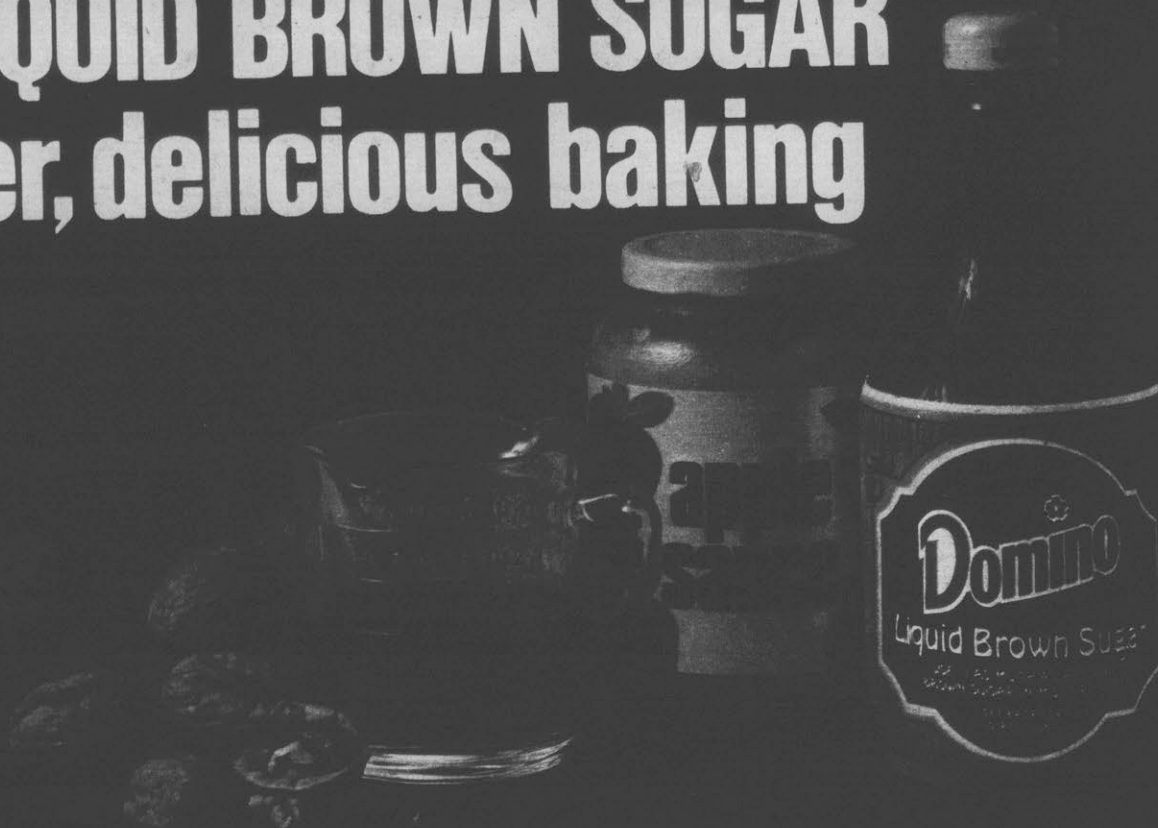

CON Albert Shanker, president, American Federation of Teachers

We believe it would represent only a cosmetic change, offering parents, teachers and administrators the illusion of Federal concern instead of real help — a palliative instead of the massive increase in Federal aid to education which is necessary. Also, some welfare matters under HEW relate to education. If welfare is to become more work-related, unskilled adults will need skills to obtain and hold jobs — a huge educational undertaking for our schools. Day care must be readily available for their young dependent children. The AFT's proposal that day care be combined with early education under the auspices of the public schools would gain new force.

NURSES FOR CRISES: HOW THEY SAVE LIVES

Life-and-death decisions that require instantaneous action are part of their everyday routines.

Lynn Goldsmith

A dummy is used in teaching nurses at NYU-Medical Center the procedure to follow for cardiac arrest. Our cover shows NYU's critical-care staff on rounds in which plans for patient care are updated every eight hours. These are only two of the kinds of responsibilities of today's highly skilled nurses that once belonged primarily to doctors. Right: Nurse Patty Brownstein.

By Donna Buys

Just before 7:00 A.M. nurse Patty Brownstein hears the alarm sounding. It signals that a patient's heart has just stopped.

Patty, a critical-care nurse on duty in the seven-bed intensive care unit (ICU) of UCLA Hospital, must act fast.

Within seconds, she is at the patient's head squeezing a respirator bag, forcing air into the lungs. Another nurse injects a heart-stimulating drug. No response.

A third nurse places two metal paddles on the patient's chest; she presses a red button, sending an electric current into the chest. The entire body shudders. All eyes are on the monitor recording the heart's electrical activity.

Patty and the other nurses sigh in relief as the heartbeat is restored. A life is safe.

Five minutes into her workday Patty has participated in a life-saving drama that has become a daily routine to be re-enacted by 60,000 to 70,000 critical-care nurses around the country. Fifteen years ago, this same patient would have died because nurses like Patty did not exist. Like all critical-care nurses, Patty is an RN — a registered nurse who has passed state boards to qualify as a professional.

Patty is a slight, brown-haired 26-year-old who "always wanted to be a nurse." After graduating from Westchester High School in Los Angeles, she studied nursing in a four-year baccalaureate curriculum at UCLA. Following graduation, she worked at her alma mater on a postoperative floor for six months before transferring to the cardiothoracic general surgical ICU.

Donna Buys is a registered nurse and a freelance writer specializing in medical articles.

Donna Buys

She continues her initial assessment of the patient. She listens with a stethoscope over the chest to make sure both lungs are getting enough oxygen.

At 9:00 the surgical resident in charge of Joan asks Patty if the patient can be weaned from the respirator.

The doctor respects her judgment when she says Joan is not ready. Because Patty measures the blood oxygen level every hour, she knows the patient needs continued forced oxygen. She tells him she will now get a current reading, and at 10:00, she takes Joan off the respirator.

After they remove it, Patty stands by Joan's head for 15 minutes, one eye on her breathing, the other on the flashing pulse and blood pressure indicators.

Joan has no trouble breathing, but suddenly the heart rate shoots up to 150. She begins to lose consciousness. Patty calls out an emergency. She quickly hooks up the respirator again. She tells another nurse to inject a heart drug. There are no doctors present, but as quickly as the emergency has begun, it is over after the drug restores the normal heart rate. Exhausted, Patty finally sits down to record the time and nature of the events.

Joan is hypersensitive to the medication used to keep the blood pressure low. The intravenous drip needs constant observation and adjustment. Patty and a surgical resident go over the chart detailing the morning events.

At 1:00 Joan is stable and another nurse looks after her while Patty leaves for a delayed lunch in the cafeteria. Patty and Nancy Ellis, who has just been promoted to Clinical Nurse II, talk about work.

"It's exciting," says Patty, "but it's also stressful. Today I stood for 45 minutes with 100-percent concentration on the IV drip, the monitor, the respirations...no detail could be overlooked. Some days, you can't even find a minute to go to the bathroom." They agree they could not stand the pace of a patient like Joan every day.

Virtually all ICU nurses are under 30, and few stay longer than six years. Most drop out when they marry or have children. Although married, Patty is the sole breadwinner while her husband studies law. When they have children, Patty says she will work part-time in the ICU.

They return to the unit to find Joan stable. At 3:00 a new group of nurses arrive. Patty gives a detailed report to the next nurse. She takes Joan's hand to say goodbye. Joan nods and smiles. She has not been able to utter many words during the past eight hours, but the look in her eyes conveys her appreciation.

For Patty, the patient's gratitude is only part of the reward. What keeps her in critical-care nursing is the constant challenge, the responsibility and the recognition as an integral part of the health team.

Through a critical-care course and on-the-job training, she learned about the complexities of heart rhythms, breathing mechanisms, the body's fluid balance and other vital functions that often hang in the balance after major surgery.

Patty still learns something new every day. Except for days when the head nurse is off and Patty is in charge of the unit, she is responsible for no more than two patients, and she must learn about each in great depth. At all times she is aware of how each bodily system is functioning. Like most critical-care nurses, she works in this area because of the challenge.

On a recent day Patty's challenge was Joan, a 60-year-old woman who had undergone open-heart surgery.

For the first 24 hours after surgery, an open-heart patient such as Joan is a "one-on-one"; she has the undivided attention of one nurse. By 7:20 A.M. Patty is at the bedside introducing herself and reassuring Joan that she will be with her all the time. The equipment around the bed looks like a scene from a science-fiction movie. Large red flashing digits provide a constant read-out of the pulse and blood pressure. Six tubes are coming out of Joan's heart, lungs, arms and bladder. She has two intravenous bottles and a breathing tube coming out of her mouth, preventing her from talking. A machine is breathing for her. Patty explains to Joan what she is doing as she checks all the tubes and equipment. Besides taking care of the patients, the ICU nurse has to know how to look after the machines.

THE NEW NURSES

The past 15 years have brought many changes in nursing. The new nurses are skilled professionals with college degrees. Many have master's degrees, and professors of nursing have doctorates.

Nurse practitioners are nurses with both advanced degrees and clinical expertise. Of an estimated 10,000 practicing in the United States, the largest group are the 3,000 pediatric nurse practitioners who now work in nearly every state, primarily in agencies dealing with high-risk populations, screening and treating routine child illnesses. A few have independent practices, and others work in partnership with physicians.

At the VA Hospital in Minneapolis, for example, two nurse practitioners staff the hypertension clinic. They do initial evaluations, order lab tests, see patients on return visits and adjust medication dosages.

In Long Beach, Calif., a nurse practitioner with Family Health Program, a Federally qualified health-maintenance organization, does routine health screens consisting of complete physical exams. She palpates livers, listens for heart murmurs and analyzes electrocardiograms.

In Denver, a group of nurses have an independent practice called Creative Health Services. Specialists in adult health, maternal and child care and psychiatric nursing, they treat hypertensives, depressed women and patients on regimens to combat obesity. They do basic lab tests and many preventive health procedures.

Near Washington, D.C., M. Lucille Kinlein, who holds a doctorate in nursing and professorships at two universities, opened an independent practice in 1971. More than 900 patients have come to her for counseling, follow-up and treatment.

In every aspect, nurses easily win acceptance, and sometimes adoration from their patients. But this year, The American Nurses' Association hopes to increase the recognition of nursing. It has declared 1977 The Year of the Nurse.

SECRETS TO GETTING AHEAD IN TODAY'S BUSINESS WORLD

You may not agree with everything Dr. Adele Scheele says, but she's highly paid for advice that stresses "tooting your own horn."

Family Weekly: What is careering, anyway?

Dr. Scheele: It's the art of moving forward in the business world. Everybody gets dealt a hand of cards in life. People with the best hands don't necessarily win, and those with the worst hands don't necessarily lose. It's how you negotiate what you have that makes the difference. Careering teaches who you know is just as important as what you know.

FW: How can someone learn to make contacts?

Dr. S.: You must have relationships. No manager or supervisor will go out of his way to encourage people he doesn't like. And he only likes people who scratch his back or who resemble him enough so the relationship validates who he is.

Smart employees appreciate their bosses and show that appreciation. Early in life we learn that flattering people is in poor taste. So when we do it, we feel guilty. However, if we don't flatter others, we get cut off from whatever organization we're in, whether it's the family unit or the international corporation.

FW: Are you saying there are unspoken rules you must follow if you want to be successful?

Dr. S.: Yes. Anybody who works needs to do his job reasonably well. But that's only 50 percent of what it takes.

The next 30 percent involves making sure you get recognition for what you do. As others usually don't see your work, tell them how good it is over a business lunch, in the office, at parties.

You also have a PR person get your name in print or, if you can't afford that, make contacts yourself at newspapers. You get on radio and TV talk shows. You speak to church groups or civic clubs and have them send notices to local papers.

You give away lots of ideas, and you do it as a way of life, far beyond any 40-hour work week. And never be stingy with your ideas. My research shows that most successful people make opportunities for others as well as for themselves.

The final 20 percent involves keeping an eye out for new things. That keeps your fires up.

FW: How important are first impressions?

Dr. S.: Very important. If you look like a winner, people take you for one.

FW: How does a person look like a winner?

Dr. S.: Follow these four rules and you're on your way. First, never complain. Don't ever say, "It's too hard for me," "My boss is stupid" or "There's bad management in this company." If you complain like that, there's nothing anybody can say except "poor thing." A poor thing is a loser, the worst thing to be.

Juneau J. Alsin

Second, be aware. Learn to see everything that is going on, even if it has nothing to do with your job. If you are invited into the boss's office and find the walls decorated with lions' heads, not to say something about that would be foolish.

Third, learn to interact. You have to practice beforehand, away from work, so when a moment of truth comes, you fall into it naturally. Practice talking to people in lines, on buses and planes and at supermarkets. Don't be embarrassed to make small talk or to crack jokes. Soon you'll develop your own style for dealing with people.

Finally, don't stay too long at the same job. You need to grow or you'll suffocate. And by too long, I mean a year or two at the same rank, no longer.

FW: What about the old idea of working hard, keeping your mouth shut, and you'll get recognition without trying?

Dr. S.: That's a terrible myth. People believe that if you simply do good work and sit back, others will recognize you. But that's not where recognition comes from. You have to learn to toot your own horn, but without seeming obnoxious.

One way is to "engage" people. You do that by sharing something terrific that happened to you. You can say, "Let me tell you what happened because I'd like your opinion on how I did and on how you would have handled that." This flatters your listener and puts him on your side.

Remember, your reputation is negotiated. It's who other people think is the best that wins the game. You must learn to project a winning reputation so others will believe it.

CRAFTY TREE-TRIMMING IDEAS

This year, adorn your tree with ornaments the whole family can make.

One of the joys of the holiday season is decorating the Christmas tree. And it's even more fun if you trim the tree with home-made ornaments.

PAPER ORNAMENTS

A paper chain cutout, made from connecting loops of construction paper, makes an attractive garland to drape around the tree. Each link of the chain is made from a strip of paper about an inch wide and four- to six- inches long, with the paper folded into a loop and the ends glued. The chain can be of one or more coordinated colors, or it can be a rainbow of shades with every few links the start of the next color in the spectrum.

Another idea: find pictures of Christmas trees, Santas and reindeer. Use tracing paper to get the outline onto construction paper and cut. A loop of yarn or ribbon can be attached through a small hole or taped to one side of the ornament.

To make unusual snowflakes, vertically fold an eight- x eight- inch piece of white bond or colored construction paper in half. Fold it in half again, horizontally, and then again in half, diagonally. Cut triangles and random shapes into the edges around the sides, rounding off the corners. Unfold, and you have a snowflake for hanging on the tree or in the window.

A cornucopia can be made from large (six-inch diameter)

paper doilies, backed with white cardboard or construction paper. Fold the doily in half. Then shape into a cone. Glue or staple to keep the cone shape, trim with narrow ribbon and hang from the tree, using a colored pipe cleaner for a hook.

FOAM BALLS

An inexpensive material for Christmas-tree decorations is foam balls. They come in several sizes and are available at variety stores. Very little is needed to make them into attractive ornaments. First, poke a small hole in the ball, stick the end of a piece of thread inside and dab a dot of glue into the hole. Allow to dry completely.

To trim, you can use a variety of techniques. For instance, the ball can be covered with scrap fabric, or it can be brushed with glue and rolled in metallic glitter. You even can add color with a spray paint such as Krylon. With a larger foam ball (at least three inches wide) you can stick it full of toothpicks topped with jelly beans for a finishing touch.

A snowman ornament is easy to make from two foam balls. Attach the balls with a small piece of pipe cleaner stuck into a hole in each foam ball and secured with glue. Twigs can form the arms; cloves can be glued on for eyes, nose and mouth. Scraps of bright-colored felt can be used for the hat, scarf and buttons.

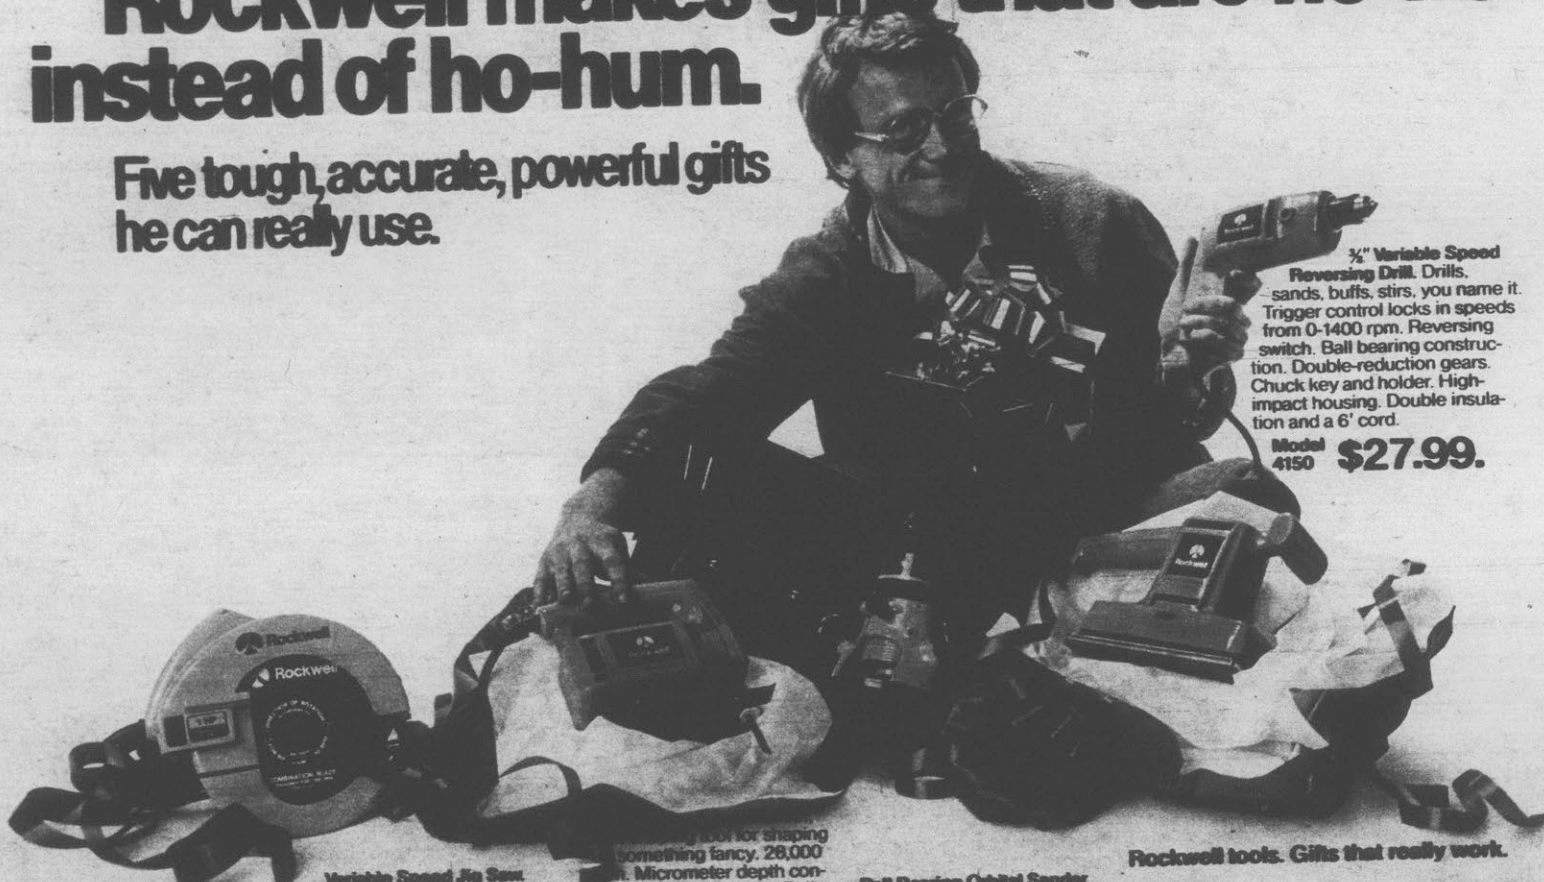

NATURE'S OWN

Nature provides some of the best raw materials for tree trimmings. Pine cones, in their natural color or spray-painted, can be hung from the tree. If you live near the seashore, seashells, with their interesting designs and soft pastel colors, make great tree ornaments. Simply glue thread or ribbon to the shell. Paper or felt letters can be cut out and glued to the inside of open shells to spell a Christmas message.

Assorted nuts and seeds can be used as decorations on cardboard cutouts of stars, snowmen and angels. Cookie cutters can provide the shapes for tracing onto the cardboard. First, cover the entire cutout with glue, then sprinkle with seeds. Different colored or shaped seeds and beans can be used for facial features. Hang the ornaments from the tree with a colorful pipe cleaner, ribbon or thread.

HOUSEHOLD ODDS 'N ENDS

One household item you'd ordinarily dispose of can be quickly transformed into a tree ornament. It's an empty thread spool.

Spools can be painted and hung in a chain, or each one can be decorated to look like a whimsical Christmas character. Cardboard tubes from bathroom tissue and paper towels also can be made into holiday characters, using crayons, scraps of felt, cotton and glue.

Even old light bulbs make gay ornaments when colored with felt-tip marking pens. They also can form Christmas characters. A Santa can be made using a black felt-tip pen to draw the facial features, red felt glued to the round part of the bulb as a hat, and tufts of cotton for the beard and bushy eyebrows.

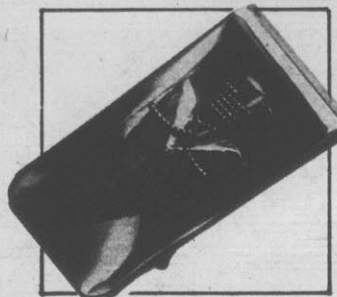

Another easy item to turn into a bright tree ornament is the egg-shaped container from L'eggs hosiery. The eggs come in white, silver, gold and robin's-egg blue. A push pin or thumbtack can be poked into the top of the egg, with a loop of thread or yarn tied around the pin and a dab of glue to hold it all in place. The hosiery eggs, which come in two halves, should be glued together. They can be decorated with felt, rickrack glitter or other trim. Each family member can put on his name with letters cut from felt or construction paper.

With half an egg and a handle from a loop of rickrack, you can make a basket that holds candy or dried flowers. You also can hang an egg-half sideways (by attaching thread on one side of the egg just below the rim) to view a Christmas scene or a family picture fixed inside.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS FROM YOUR KITCHEN

EASY POPCORN BALLS

- 1 cup liquid brown sugar
- ½ cup light corn syrup
- 1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract

- 12 cups (3 qts.) popped popcorn, warmed
1. Combine liquid brown sugar and syrup. Cook rapidly for 10 minutes. Stir in vanilla.
 2. Pour popcorn into large kettle or Dutch oven. Quickly stir syrup into warmed popcorn. Stir over low heat a few minutes until popcorn sticks together.
 3. Shape into balls. Use thin rubber gloves and dip gloved hands into cold water before shaping balls.
 4. Wrap in plastic film or cellophane. Tie with yarn or ribbon to hang on tree. Makes 12 popcorn balls

PEANUT BRITTLE

- 2 cups liquid brown sugar
- 1 cup granulated sugar
- ¼ cup water
- 2 cups salted peanuts
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 tablespoon warm water

1. Combine liquid brown sugar, sugar and water in large, heavy saucepan. Cook and stir over medium heat until syrup reaches 270°F. (soft-crack stage) on candy thermometer.
2. Remove from heat; stir in peanuts and butter.
3. Combine vanilla, baking soda and water; stir into syrup until mixture foams. Pour at once into a buttered jelly-roll pan (15½" x 10½" x 1"). Cool completely; break into pieces.
4. To hang on tree, place several pieces of peanut brittle in plastic film, draw together corners of film, tie with ribbon.

Makes 2¼ lbs. candy

COCONUT SNOWBALLS

- 1 cup butter or margarine, softened
- ½ cup sugar
- 2 teaspoons pure vanilla extract
- 2 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1½ cups flaked coconut

1. Grease cookie sheets; preheat oven to 350°F.
2. With electric mixer, beat butter until creamy, gradually beating in sugar. Add vanilla.
3. On sheet of foil, stir together flour and salt; add to butter mixture, blending well.
4. Form dough into 1-inch balls. If too soft, refrigerate dough for 2 hours. Roll in flaked coconut and place on prepared cookie sheets.
5. Bake 8 to 10 minutes or until lightly browned.

OLD-FASHIONED PRALINES

- 2 cups liquid brown sugar
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- Dash salt
- 1 cup pecans
- 1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
- ¼ cup evaporated milk

1. Combine liquid brown sugar, butter and salt in heavy saucepan. Bring to boiling; reduce heat and cook until small amount of mixture forms a soft ball when dropped in a cup of cold water, or indicates 240°F. on candy thermometer.
2. Remove from heat and cool 10 minutes. Stir in pecans, vanilla and evaporated milk.
3. Beat until mixture thickens. Drop by tablespoons onto foil or lightly greased cookie sheet.

GREAT HOLIDAY CENTERPIECES YOU CAN MAKE YOURSELF

Elegant designs with a decorator touch, yet so simple to create you won't believe it.

The most memorable holiday dinners are those with just the right mix: family and friends who enjoy being together, food that's been especially selected and prepared and a table decorated to reflect the joy of the season.

Nothing helps set the mood of that holiday table as much as a festive, colorful centerpiece. It serves as a reminder of the gathering's special significance and provides an opportunity for the hostess to show her ingenuity and to create something special.

If you've never made your own centerpiece, here's a chance to try. Christmas is still a few weeks away, so there's plenty of time for experimenting. If you are accustomed to do-it-yourself projects, put some extra effort into this one and come up with something smashing.

Think of a centerpiece as part of a complete picture. What are the size and shape of your table? Will you be serving buffet or sit-down? If buffet, will the table be against the wall? Will all the guests be adults or will children be present? What china, stemware and table linens will be used? All these factors should be taken into consideration.

DESIGN TIPS

Because a centerpiece is really a design, all the traditional rules of design are applicable. That means paying attention to form, pattern, line, color and texture.

Let's begin with form. In this case it's basically controlled by the overall shape of the table, so elements on it should be harmonious. A round table, for example, will "take" round or square tabletop elements, but oval-shaped accessories will not work as well.

The arrangement of the china, stemware and utensils in conjunction with the centerpiece creates a pattern. Ideally, this configuration should create a balanced effect.

Line is generally produced by color, pattern or areas of light or dark. The eye naturally follows this line, so special attention should be paid to it.

What colors are you working with? The ones you choose must not only complement one another but harmonize with the tableware and room surroundings as well.

The actual and visual feel of your tableware may help determine the nature of the centerpiece. Each case is individual because sometimes like textures are best in similar company, and at other times contrasting textures are more appropriate.

Your centerpiece will largely determine the overall grace of your holiday table. Be sure that it is generally in proportion to the table itself, that balance is achieved by it, that its scale is in keeping with the other tabletop elements and that the whole setting has a rhythmic flow.

WHERE TO START

It's helpful to give yourself a theme. You might think of the elements earth, wind, fire, water.

Wonderful ideas are everywhere. To get you started, here are just a few.

- Select some pine boughs (or prune them from your tree), arrange gracefully on a silver platter and decorate with satin or glass balls in silver or gold.

- Fill a crystal bowl with clear marbles and cover with icy-blue water (colored with vegetable dye). Surround with wide silver candles and sprigs of fresh holly.

- Fashion a three-tiered tray of holiday greens and nestle small gifts or favors for your guests around the tiers. Use round cake pans of descending diameters. Cover the largest one with pine sprigs, add a medium-sized, holly-covered one next and finish off with the smallest tier decorated with mistletoe. Glue the greens to each tier, then stack appropriately. Complete the decoration by arranging some more gaily wrapped gifts around the whole centerpiece.

If you'd like to tackle one of the illustrated centerpieces, follow these instructions.

POINSETTIA CHRISTMAS TREE

Borrow an idea from some creative florists by fashioning your own floral Christmas tree. Start by gluing together a stack of four 10- x 16-inch foam rectangles. (Your tree will be constructed of triangles cut from these pieces, so be sure you take the table size and shape into consideration when determining how high and wide the tree will be.)

After allowing the stack to dry, draw a triangle on the top piece and cut through the layers with a coping saw. Use a six-inch piece of plywood for the base and any of a number of household items for the trunk. A halved salt container, for example, will do nicely. Glue these three items together. Allow to dry and you are ready to decorate. The items you'll be working with are fresh poinsettias (or other red flowers, such as carnations), round mirrors and holly sprigs. You can order small 1½-inch round mirrors from your local mirror or glass store, or if you prefer to do the job less expensively, cut circles from heavy-duty aluminum foil, using a lid or bottle bottom to get a perfect circle. The same goes for the holly. You can make your own by cutting holly sprigs from green crepe paper and backing them with thin wire.

Begin the decoration by gluing on the mirrors, taking care to allow enough space in between for the flowers and the holly. When inserting the flowers, use small floral water tubes to keep them fresh, or wrap each stem with saturated paper toweling protected by aluminum foil. Finish by covering the base with holly and interspersing it throughout the tree.

PARTRIDGE IN A PEAR TREE

In just a few hours you can create this elegant symbol of the season with some easy-to-find materials. Start by crafting the body, tail, neck and head, using a small kitchen knife or single-edged razor blade. Make the body by paring down round or cone-shaped Styrofoam to an oval. Then cut both the fan-shaped tail and the head and neck pieces from lightweight cardboard or oak tag. Next make a supply of ribbon "feathers" by cutting one-inch lengths of ribbon, stacking them and then notching the ends to achieve a feathered effect. Using a strong glue, such as Scotch Super Strength adhesive, paste overlapping layers of ribbon on the head, neck, tail and body pieces. Once these are dry, burrow the neck and tail into the body. Then add features to the bird's face with Christmas glitter, sequins or pearls. If you'd like to use actual feathers (craft shops sell them), you might try decorating the bird with these for a custom effect.

Rest your partridge in a graceful arrangement of pine boughs and surround it with some fresh pears, which are easily found this time of year. Or use artificial pears sprayed with gold paint or dipped in glitter.

CHRISTMAS CAROUSEL

If planning a buffet, with your table set against the wall, you can create a one-dimensional carousel. If serving a traditional sit-down dinner, your carousel should be three-dimensional.

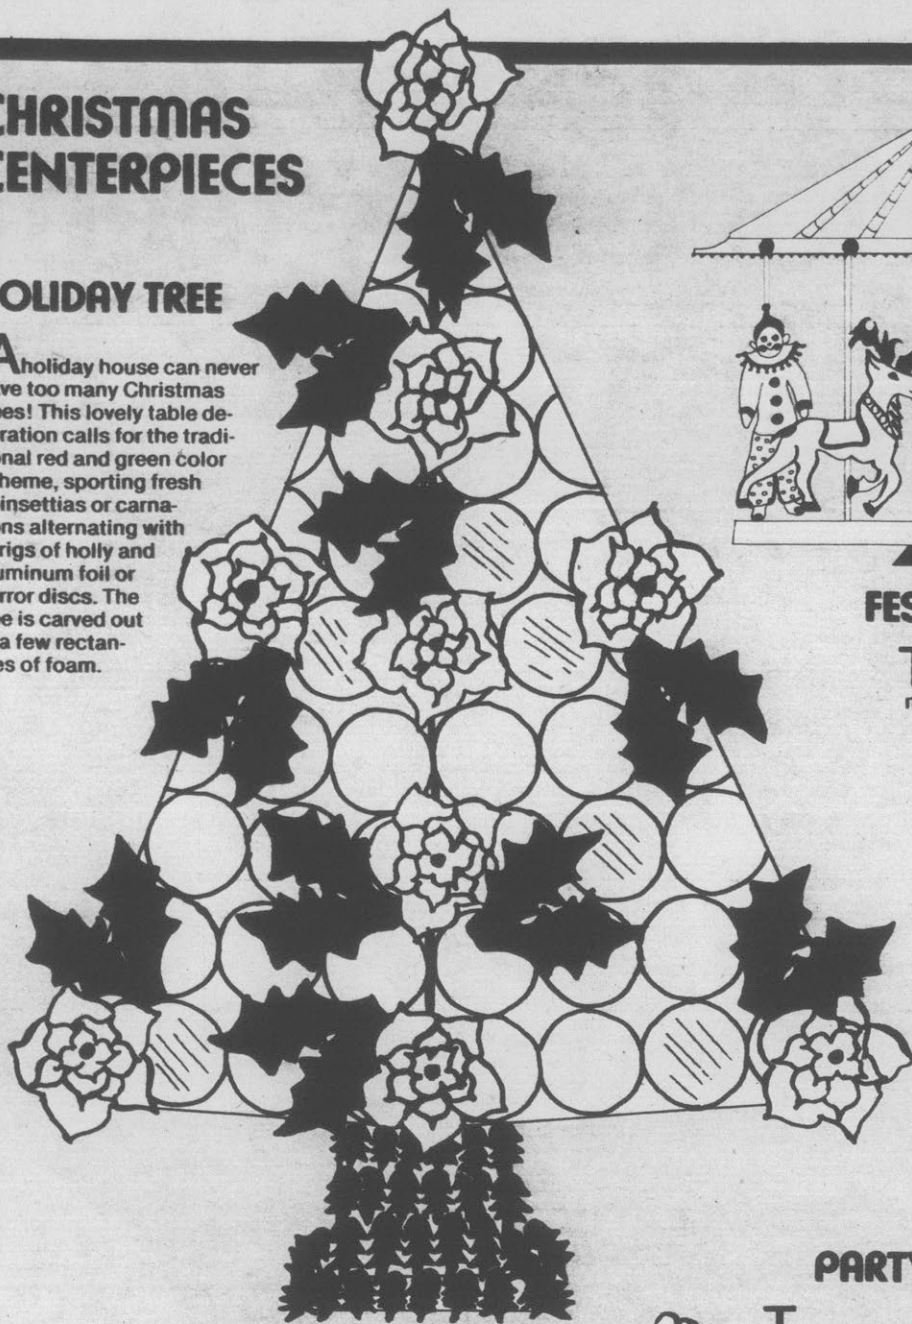

For one-dimensional characters, flip through last year's Christmas cards. You'll find lots of Santas, Rudolphs, elves, snowmen, carolers and the like. You'll also find these holiday creatures on wrapping paper and in magazine advertisements. Cut them out and glue them to cardboard, in the same shape. For the base, cut a semicircle of cardboard and cover with velvet or other festive-looking fabric remnant in your sewing box. The same goes for the carousel top — a cardboard triangle covered with the fabric.

If you like, you can add tiny felt flags and trim them with ribbon, sequins or fringe. Colorful plastic beverage straws make ideal poles. If they are not long enough for your carousel, tape two together, cut to the right size and cover with aluminum foil.

For a carousel with three-dimensional figures, use a lazy susan for the base. (You can buy an

a-tree shop of your favorite department store. Unsharpened pencils can be used for the poles or get some dowels from your hardware store. Both can be

FESTIVE CAROUSEL

To delight guests of all ages, make this imaginative Christmas Carousel. You can fashion it flat for a buffet table or make it round for traditional dining. In either dimension, Christmas creatures are certainly plentiful and easy to find this time of year from cutouts, backed with cardboard, or wood or plastic figures found at hobby and craft shops.

spray-painted. For the dome, select a foam ball proportionate to the base. Cut off the top for your dome shape, then cover with fabric. Or for a pointed effect, position a cardboard cone on top of the dome, then cover the whole piece with fabric. Glue together and your Christmas carousel is ready to go. Continued

"Vantage is changing a lot of my feelings about smoking."

"I like to smoke, and what I like is a cigarette that isn't timid on taste. But I'm not living in some ivory tower. I hear the things being said against high-tar smoking as well as the next guy.

"And so I started looking. For a low-tar smoke that had some honest-to-goodness cigarette taste.

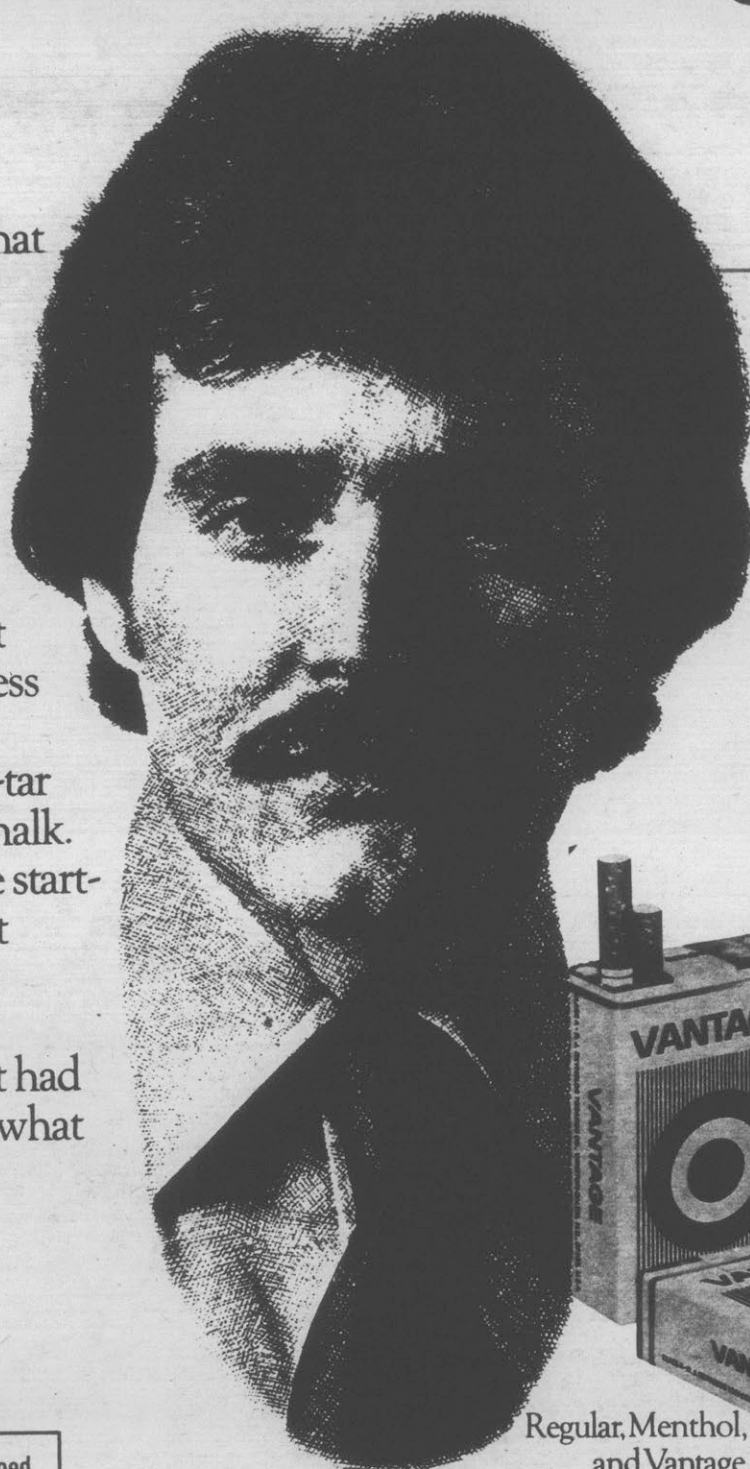

"It wasn't easy. The low-tar cigarettes I tried tasted like chalk. And high-tar cigarettes were starting to taste rougher as I went along.

"Then I tried a pack of Vantage. It was smooth yet it had taste. And a lot less tar than what I'd been smoking.

"As far as I'm concerned, when I switched to Vantage, I changed to a cigarette I could enjoy."

AN INFORMAL, FESTIVE HOLIDAY PARTY

A make-ahead platter of canapés, a spicy, hot punch and our delicious nutbread are keys to a festive party.

DEVILED HAM CANAPES

- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, softened
- ½ teaspoon prepared mustard
- 10 slices thin party rye bread
- 2 cans (2¼-oz. size) deviled ham
- Dash Tabasco
- Dash ground cloves
- Thin slices dill pickle
- Tiny triangles of pimiento or sliced stuffed green olives

1. Blend butter and mustard smoothly. Spread on bread slices.
2. Blend deviled ham, Tabasco and cloves; spread evenly on buttered bread slices.
3. Garnish with dill pickle and pimiento or slices of stuffed green olives.

Makes 10 canapés

GRANOLA COOKIES

- ¾ cup solid all-vegetable shortening
- ¾ cup sugar
- ½ cup liquid brown sugar
- 2 teaspoons pure vanilla extract
- 2 eggs, beaten

- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon baking soda
- ½ cup milk
- 2 cups granola cereal
- ½ cup wheat germ or unprocessed bran
- 1 cup raisins

1. Preheat oven to 375°F. In large bowl with electric mixer, beat shortening until fluffy; add sugar, liquid brown sugar, vanilla and eggs.
2. Sift together flour, baking powder, salt and baking soda. Beat into creamed mixture alternately with milk.
3. Mix in granola, wheat germ and raisins. Drop rounded teaspoonsful about 2 inches apart on greased cookie sheet.
4. Bake in a moderate oven (375°F.) 10 to 12 minutes. Let stand a few minutes on pan. Remove and cool on rack.

Makes 6 dozen

HOT SPICED CIDER

- 1 cup packed dark brown sugar
- 1 cinnamon stick
- 1 tablespoon whole cloves
- 2 cups water

- 1½ qts. apple cider or apple juice
- ½ cup lemon juice
- 4 cups orange juice
- 1 lemon, thinly sliced
- 1 orange, thinly sliced

1. Combine sugar, spices and water in saucepan; heat to boiling, stirring until sugar dissolves. Reduce heat and simmer 10 minutes. Strain and discard spices.
2. Pour spiced syrup into large kettle or Dutch oven. Add cider, lemon juice and orange juice; heat to a simmer to serve hot. Garnish with sliced fruit.
3. May also be served cold. Makes 3 qts.

Dark and devastating. Caribbean Black Fruitcake.

By Marilyn Hansen

CARIBBEAN BLACK FRUITCAKE

- 2 jars (1 lb. each) diced, mixed, candied fruits (4 cups)
- 1 pkg. (10 ozs.) pitted dates, chopped
- 1 cup dark raisins
- 1 1/2 cups dark rum
- 1/2 cup butter or margarine, softened
- 4 teaspoons pumpkin-pie spice
- 1 cup packed dark brown sugar
- 3 eggs
- 1 1/4 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 can (4 ozs.) chopped, blanched almonds

1. In a large bowl, combine candied fruits, dates, raisins and rum; cover. Let soak at room temperature at least 4 to 7 days.
 2. On day of baking, in a large bowl with electric mixer, blend butter with pumpkin-pie spice. Gradually blend in sugar. Add 2 of the eggs; beat well.
 3. On sheet of foil, combine flour, baking powder and salt. Add 3/4 cup flour mixture to the butter-sugar mixture. Beat in remaining egg.
 4. Preheat oven to 275°F. Stir in rum-soaked fruits and nuts. Add remaining flour mixture; mix well.
 5. Grease a 9- x 5- x 3-inch loaf pan, line with brown paper, grease again. Add batter.
 6. Place loaf pan in a large, shallow pan of hot water on a low rack in oven.
 7. Bake cake until a tester inserted in center comes out clean, about 3 1/4 hours. Cool in pan on a wire rack for 1 hour.
 8. Turn out of pan onto wire rack; remove paper. Cool. Wrap in rum-soaked cheese cloth, then in foil.
 9. Cut into thin slices to serve. As cake is so rich, you may warm it and serve with Hard Sauce.*
- Makes 1 loaf cake
- *Hard Sauce: Blend 1/3 cup butter or margarine, with 1 cup confectioners' sugar. Flavor with 1/2 teaspoon pure vanilla extract or 1 teaspoon brandy.

LONELINESS: AS UNIVERSAL AS THE COMMON COLD

One out of four of us recently felt "very lonely," but specific steps can be taken to alleviate the problem.

By Edward Wakin

When Life Line International analyzed millions of phone calls to their 132 crisis-counseling centers in 12 countries, loneliness ranked with anxiety and depression among the most common problems. "Loneliness has deepened everywhere," the volunteer organization reported.

In the United States, where experts report a tendency to sweep the problem under the rug, loneliness is as common as the common cold. A survey found that one out of four Americans had felt "very lonely" during the previous few weeks. Another survey reported that one out of 10 had felt "very lonely" as recently as the previous seven days.

Loneliness strikes freshmen going away to college, the 40 million Americans who move every year and the 45 million Americans who live without partners. Americans feel lonely in cities, in the suburbs, out on the farm. Experts point out that no one is immune to loneliness, whatever their present circumstances, and changes in circumstances commonly bring on feelings of loneliness.

But because being lonely is considered "un-American," people hesitate to talk about it. When they do, loneliness has many voices:

A single woman: "I only worry when I find myself talking back to the voices coming out of the radio and television sets. You need the sound of human voices to survive as a human being."

A businessman: "It's hard to be personal friends with men you're competing against, so you don't talk about your feelings at work. Then your family doesn't understand what goes on at work, so you're left out in the cold both places. That's what I call lonely."

A high-school senior: "Loneliness is when your close friends split up and go away to college. It can affect you when you first fall in love and when you break up. That empty feeling is loneliness."

In modern America, loneliness is bound to threaten a nation of people on the move — changing jobs, schools, homes, friends and divorcing. (One out of four marriages ended in divorce during the 1960's; the rate increased in the 1970's.) If divorce does not leave someone alone, death does, widowing two out of three women over 65. With each such crisis, loneliness emerges as a major problem.

Running away from loneliness can lead to other problems, such as overeating, heavy drinking or promiscuity.

In a pioneering examination of the medical consequences of loneliness, Dr. James

M. Lynch has linked loneliness to premature death. He cites "many weapons" that nature uses "to shorten the lives of lonely people," with heart disease the most frequent. He reports that "social isolation (the lack of human companionship, death or absence of parents in early childhood), sudden loss of love and chronic human loneliness are significant contributors to premature death."

Psychologists are concerned about loneliness in early childhood as an indicator of future emotional problems. At the other end of the life cycle, social workers are concerned about the newly widowed and are working to get them reinvolved. In between, clubs and churches work to provide social and religious frameworks where people feel "at home."

But even with outside help, coping with loneliness is primarily a do-it-yourself effort. Psychologists counsel coming to terms with feelings of loneliness rather than trying — unsuccessfully — to run away. Dr. Marsha M. Linehan of Washington, D.C., who deals with loneliness in her therapy practice, says, "The central thing about loneliness is accepting that you are lonely and are going to be lonely again." She adds, "It is painful, but it's not a great catastrophe, and life is not going to stop. Once you accept all this, you can start to cope with loneliness."

Since loneliness strikes different people in different ways and at different times, it helps to ask questions about who, when, what and where:

Whom are you with or not with? Whom did you just see?

When does loneliness strike?

What are you doing or not doing?

Where are you?

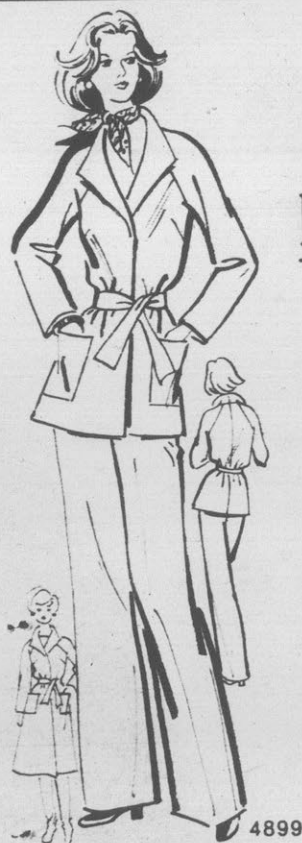

Keep such an inventory in a personal journal to monitor past experiences of loneliness and to identify ways to cope.

There are specific things to do, particularly getting in touch with someone else. It can be a phone call or a personal visit. Sharing feelings of loneliness is a relief, but in doing so deal directly with the feeling and don't expect someone else to solve your problem.

Besides feelings of loneliness that come and go, a crisis can leave a person feeling abandoned. The most common is the end of a marriage by divorce or death, which can be painful, even shattering.

Then the struggle must begin to become reconnected with others. That means being active, reaching out to friends and family, sharing feelings and interests.

For those who work out their loneliness, the experience is not a dead end but an invitation to get in touch with oneself and with others. Then the other side of being alone emerges: the ability to enjoy being by oneself. That is what theologian Paul Tillich meant when he said: "Language has created the word loneliness to express the pain of being alone, and the word solitude to express the glory of being alone."

TEACHING YOUR CHILD RIGHT FROM WRONG

Here's a new simple method to help you instill basic values in youngsters — and they'll enjoy it.

By Sally Wendkos Olds

In a time of rapidly changing values, today's parents are often confused about the best ways to teach their children right from wrong. In response to this confusion, psychologists and educators have developed new ways to help parents, the essence of which is teaching children how to figure out right from wrong for themselves.

In the past, says Dr. Sidney B. Simon, professor of humanistic education at the University of Massachusetts, most parents have relied on the "three misleading M's": moralizing (invoking religion, patriotism and guilt), manipulating (using rewards and punishment) and modeling (setting the ideal example, which is often hard for parents to do). "All these M's are sometimes useful in bringing up children," says Dr. Simon. "But none of them teaches children how to analyze confusing ideas and situations.

Parents can help their children most by teaching them how to arrive at their own values. They can do it in a way that is fun for everyone by using Values Clarification strategies. These are an assortment of gamelike exercises that help adults and children talk about a wide range of issues and to examine their feelings about love, friendship, money, work, honesty and responsibilities. Here are a few strategies especially suited for family discussions around the dinner table or in the car.

Seesaw: Everyone is asked to decide which of two things he or she is more like, and then to explain the answer. Here are a few seesaw questions popular with children: Which are you more like: a daisy or a rose? the city or the country? a comic book or an encyclopedia?

This strategy illustrates in an often lighthearted way the difficulty of making a decision, the things that are important to us and how we are influenced by the way we see ourselves.

Priorities: Everyone is asked to rank three or more different answers to a question in order of desirability or importance. For example, if you had bad breath, would you prefer: your best friend to tell you? to receive an anonymous note? your parents to tell you? nobody to tell you?

Which punishment would you most hate: to be scolded by a parent in front of a friend? to be spanked? not to be allowed to watch TV?

By forcing us to rank our choices in order, this strategy makes us think hard about them. Since most decisions in life are not either/or propositions, getting into the habit of weighing the pros and cons of a variety of possibilities is helpful.

Sally Wendkos Olds is co-author with Dr. Sidney B. Simon of Helping Your Child Learn Right From Wrong.

Magic Boxes: Imagine a messenger has come to your door with a large, medium and small box. What would you love each to hold? Your answers can be tangible or intangible, realistic or fantastic, silly or serious. The only criterion is that whatever you choose should bring you joy.

This strategy helps people to think about the things that are important to them and lets them share their dreams with family members.

Here And Now Wheel: Everyone draws a circle and marks off four spaces in it. Each of you then identifies and writes down four emotions you're feeling. This strategy helps us to zero in on the way we feel and to share our emotions.

Raising children seems to be harder now than ever before, and they are subjected to a bewildering number of different value systems. Therefore, parents who are willing to take the time to raise value issues within the bosom of the family can help their children find out what they believe in, which is the first step toward their living their lives according to those beliefs.

MONEY

How To Strike Oil — By Mail

Want to invest $10 for the chance to be an oil baron? No, it's not the latest con game — it's a little-known lottery run by Uncle Sam, and here is how it works.

For more than 50 years the Department of the Interior has been offering leases on Federal lands. Some of these parcels of acreages, particularly in the West, are potentially oil-bearing land. At first, the offers were made on a "first-come, first-served" basis, and major oil companies lined up early to apply for those leases that seemed likely to be most productive. But that system soon became infested with various forms of skulduggery.

Today, anyone interested in a parcel of land can file an application card for a $10 fee. Only one card per applicant is permitted — whether the applicant is an oil company, an Arab sheikh or John Doe. If there is more than one application for the same acreage, the cards are put into a bin and the one drawn by Uncle Sam is the winner.

To keep your land, you must pay a yearly rental per acre. But if your acreage is a likely oil producer, oilmen probably will offer either to buy you out at a good profit or to lease your land and pay you royalties if oil is discovered there.

The odds are high, the risks low and the possible returns are sometimes enormous. For details on how to get into the lottery, write: Bureau of Land Management, Dept. of the Interior, Dept. FW, Washington, D.C. 20240.

Charities: Strategy For Giving

Some years ago a woman collecting for a charity rang my doorbell and asked for a contribution. Guilt was about to make me give when I suddenly surprised myself by saying: "You know, I'm not really involved in this particular charity. I give most of my donations to ____ Fund. I don't think I should contribute." After a moment, she agreed.

Most of us like to feel that our donations are voluntary offerings inspired by concern. But too often, giving is a guilt-provoked or annoyance-provoked response to pressure.

Here's how you can make sure that your charitable contribution becomes an act of personal fulfillment rather than a sterile obligation.

- Realize that you have a right to say a polite "no" to causes that don't interest you.
- Work out a flexible plan for giving. Money-raising is a science; money-giving, for most of us, is not. Consider developing a family "charity budget" on a quarterly or annual basis. One family sets aside a certain sum each January: 25 percent for the church, 50 percent divided among five charities in which they have an interest and 25 percent for spontaneous giving.
- Give of yourself. Contributing time, thought, skills and energy often can be more important than a gift of money. Putting a check in the mail has no real connection, for most people, with doing something for someone.

- Give creatively. Don't give to the same groups each year out of habit or inertia. New problems need solving. Personalize your giving — help the library buy more books or a small school build a science lab, for instance.

- Make sure the organization you contribute to is honest, legitimate and well-administered. Despite policing efforts and new laws, some groups still funnel more than half the money they collect into fund-raising and administrative expenses.

A pamphlet, Give But Give Wisely, that tells whether charitable organizations meet the Better Business Bureau's standards (and if not why) may be obtained by writing: Council of Better Business Bureaus (PAB), Dept. FW, 1150 17th St. NW, Washington, D.C. 20036. Please enclose 50¢ and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

RINGS ON HER FINGERS

Brass knuckles long ago went out.
Except for muggers, gangsters
And others who, with violence,
Are buffers and bangsters.

But I've seen girls, and women, too.
With jeweled rings enormous.
And must confess the sight of such,
In settings rough, alarm us.

Now rings on fingers can look nice
But I, for one, insist
I cringe to see a ring-filled hand
When coiled into a fist.

UNDERSTANDING WARRANTIES

A wise consumer still heeds the warning, "Buyer Beware," but now there's a tough law on his side

Historically, one of the great confusions of the American marketplace has been the degree to which a manufacturer, distributor or retailer should stand behind his wares. Today the Magnuson-Moss Warranty Act, passed in 1975, protects consumers against deceptive warranty practices, inferior products and poor service.

Implied Warranties. Under the terms of the act, no manufacturer or retailer is forced to provide a written warranty. But it is a well-established principle of law that every new product carries a so-called implied warranty — unless a disclaimer on the merchandise, such as "sold as is" or "damaged goods," expressly states otherwise.

What is an implied warranty? Suppose a consumer purchases a set of molded plastic chairs and two weeks later the chairs begin to buckle and crack under the weight of their occupants. As the function of a chair is to be sat upon, there is an implied warranty that these pieces of furniture are strong enough to support the weight of adults. If the store fails to give satisfaction, the customer may go to his state consumer protection agency, the Better Business Bureau or to court.

Express Warranties. The written, or express, warranty comes packed with thousands of manufactured goods, ranging from television sets to refrigerators.

The Magnuson-Moss Act requires the Federal Trade Commission to set standards for express warranties and to enforce their terms. Under the act manufacturers have three choices: to issue no warranty at all, to issue a full warranty for a clearly stated period of time, or to issue a limited warranty.

The lack of a written warranty does not mean the producer will not stand behind his product. Often a letter to the customer relations department of the manufacturer will bring quick relief. In any case, the retailer's implied warranty automatically takes effect when an item is purchased.

Important facts about warranties. If a manufacturer offers either a full or a limited warranty, several requirements must be fulfilled:

1. The retailer may attach the warranty to a floor model or may post it in a conspicuous place, but the consumer must have the opportunity to examine its terms before making the purchase.

2. The terms of the warranty must be written in clear English, understandable to any literate person. Then, the time period the warranty is in effect must appear in large type at the top. A typical example: "Full 12-month warranty."

Limited warranties also must include the period of time they are to be in force, as well as outline exactly what is included and excluded from their terms. For example, if parts, but not labor, are covered, that must be clearly indicated.

3. Full warranties must apply to any owner of the item in question during the time the document is in force.

4. Under the law, a warranty does not have to be mailed to the warrantor to take effect. However, a manufacturer or a retailer can demand proof of purchase when an item is presented for repair.

5. The Magnuson-Moss Act includes a so-called antilemon provision, which requires the warrantor to replace an item or refund its cost after he has tried and failed to fix it a "reasonable number" of times. A "reasonable number" is left to the Federal Trade Commission to decide.

6. Every warranty — full or limited — must include clear directions for filing a product complaint as well as information about repair facilities. The issuer of a full warranty no longer can require that the purchaser pay mailing costs when he returns the product to an authorized repair shop. The warrantor bears the cost.

7. The holder of a warranty who fails to obtain satisfactory service from the warrantor may seek relief. It could include a complaint to the local appliance retailer, a call or letter to the manufacturer or a letter to the president of the firm that made the product. Should these initiatives fail, you can complain to your state consumer protection agency or to the Federal Trade Commission, either of which can intercede in your behalf. Finally, you can go directly to court.

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Your ability to impress a person favorably depends largely on the amount of self-confidence you radiate and the persuasiveness of your speech and manner.
2. Many people fail to impress others favorably because they neglect one important point.
3. Often the most effective way to impress a person or persuade him to pursue a desired course of action is by a suggestion.
4. Some people have difficulty impressing or persuading others because they are so reserved or formal that they tend to hold others at a distance. Unfortunately, they can't do much about the problem.
5. The secret to getting names on a petition is to impress each potential signer with a forceful approach and to obtain a number of previous signatures.
6. When the impression you are making on another person is important, you should consult the thermometer before making your play.

ANSWERS

1. True. As City University of New York studies show, self-confidence is expressed with persuasive effect over all three of our communication channels: language (the words we use), para-language (our manner of speaking, tone-of-voice, inflection) and body language. To be effective, these three mediums should all carry the same message. For even if a person's words and speech delivery express confidence, the effect is negated if his body language expresses doubt (fidgeting, nervous coughing, restless movements of hands or limbs and frequent shifting of posture). Such body language is often quite involuntary, and it makes a definite impression on the other person.

WAYS TO IMPRESS PEOPLE

2. True. In a study reported by the University of Michigan's Human Resource Management, the importance of establishing real communication with the other person is emphasized. Never just "talk at" the person you hope to impress. You must, it's pointed out, take responsibility for making communication happen — and remember that communication is seldom effective unless it is two-way.

3. True. Psychological studies at Hanover College have demonstrated the effectiveness of suggestion in causing a person to alter his course of action. For example, in a test to determine how shoppers could be led to approach a specific part of a store, which they otherwise might not go anywhere near, an arrow painted on cardboard pointing toward the area was placed just inside the only entrance to the store. Result: a significantly larger percentage of persons visited the specific part of the store. The experiment worked equally well on men and women. This principle of suggestion can be so subtly incorporated in a conversation with someone you wish to impress or influence that he may act on the suggestion even without being aware of what prompted him to do so.

4. False. In their treatise, Persuasion: A Means of Social Influence, behavior scientists Winston L. Brembeck (University of Wisconsin) and William S. Howell (University of Minnesota) point out: "If a persuader thinks his receivers regard him or her as too formal, cold or distant, he can make fun of himself to disarm them and enhance his credibility."

5. False. In a University of Rochester investigation 180 males and 180 females were approached in the downtown area of an Eastern city by a male or a female experimenter. They were asked to sign a petition containing from zero to eight previous signatures. Either a mild or forceful approach was used in soliciting signatures. Results: 51 percent of the subjects signed the petition. The number of previous signatures did not influence signature rates nor did the forcefulness of the approach.

6. True. If the weather's hot, wait for a cooler day — or take whomever you want to impress to an air-conditioned restaurant. Kansas State University studies show that, no matter how positive your approach, you're more likely to get a negative reaction when the temperature's too warm for comfort.

Booklets For You And Your Family

Where should your child go to college, and how will you pay for it? With college-application deadlines approaching, and those for scholarships only a few months away, now's the time for your family to do some serious planning. Here are a few inexpensive booklets to give you some up-to-date information on college selection and financial aid.

Don't Miss Out — The Ambitious Student's Guide to Scholarships and Loans ($1.25): A step-by-step, student-parent guide to determining how much college will cost and how to finance it. Tips, scholarship strategies and time organizers are included in this 32-page booklet. Send your check or money order to: Octameron Assoc., P.O. Box 3437, Dept. FW, Alexandria, Va. 22302.

The Parents' Guide to Understanding Tests (Free): PSAT, SAT and ACT are some of the standardized tests college-bound students will be taking. This booklet tells you how they are used by colleges and what your child's scores mean. Send a stamped, self-addressed business envelope to: Dr. Frank Snyder, CTB/McGraw-Hill, Del Monte Research Park, Monterey, Calif. 93940.

How To Winterize Your Dog

Although your dog already has a fur coat, he needs some help from you to make his winter as comfortable as possible.

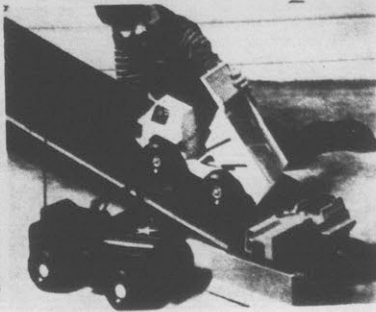

- Pets living in heated houses need extra protection, such as a snug-fitting sweater or coat, when taken for walks on windy winter days. And it's especially needed by puppies and older dogs.
- Keep pets away from radiators or hot-air vents; the heat will cause excessive shedding and dry skin.
- If you keep your dog outside, make sure the doghouse has no leaks and that it faces away from prevailing winds.
- Dogs kept outdoors need extra food in cold weather to increase their body heat.

Safety Tips For Toy Buyers

What should you look for when buying toys? Although only you know what kinds of toys your child would enjoy, there are some safety considerations every parent should keep in mind. The Consumer Product Safety Commission recommends asking the following questions:

- Does the toy suit the child's age and abilities? Toys that may be safe for older children can be extremely dangerous for younger ones.
- Does the toy have sharp edges? If it is made of plastic, is the plastic durable enough to hold up in rough play?
- Are there small parts that can be swallowed or inhaled?
- Does the toy include shooting or throwing objects that can injure eyes?

- Does the toy make extremely loud noises that can damage the child's hearing?
- Is it coated with nontoxic paint?
- Are electric toys safely wired? (To prevent accidents to younger children, stick to battery-operated toys.)

Once you've bought the toy, minimize accidents with proper maintenance and by supervising play. Check all toys periodically for breakage and potential hazards. Teach children to put their toys away to prevent falls and other injuries.

Early Warning Signals Of Cataracts

Despite surgical procedures that are effective in more than 95% of cases, cataracts remain the leading cause of blindness in the U.S. And many people lose their sight because they let fear of blindness keep them from seeking treatment.

Cataracts are most common among older people, but they occur in younger individuals as a result of injury, diabetes and the use of certain medicines, says Dr. Jack Nauheim, pres. of the N.Y. State Ophthalmology Society.

Cataracts are a cloudiness or opacity in the lens of the eye which interferes with vision. "You can visualize it by thinking of a frosted lightbulb," says Dr. Nauheim. "Instead of being translucent, it's hazy."

Symptoms of an early stage of cataracts include double vision, seeing spots and fuzzy, blurred vision. One kind of cataract may cause a farsighted person to be less farsighted, a nearsighted person to be more nearsighted.

If you have any of these symptoms, see your eye doctor for a checkup — don't be one of those patients who may suffer irreparable vision loss from fear.

The Truth About Bats

No one would call them man's best friends, but it seems that bats are not the creepy critters most people think they are. "Bats have been abused for a long time, and someone needs to come to their defense," says Dr. Hal Black, a bat specialist at Brigham Young Univ.

This will come as a stake in the heart to vampire lovers, but, despite their popular image as bloodsuckers, only three of the 900 species of bats feed on blood. Most of the furry black creatures eat insects and can be used as a natural form of pest control.

Dr. Black also says the danger of contracting rabies from bats is exaggerated. "Most people encounter bats in unnatural circumstances, such as on the ground," says Dr. Black. "The bat is usually ill then and should not be touched."

Quick Takes

Does he or doesn't he? Now your friends will never be able to tell if you wear bifocals. There's a new lens that eliminates the "telltale" segment line. The lightweight, hard resin lenses, which are available nationally, also feature tinting and fashionable large sizes. But beauty does have its price — the new lenses cost 50% more than standard bifocals.

How long do you have to work to buy the food on your table? Based on national-average take-home pay, you have to work half an hour to buy a lb. of roast beef, 10 minutes for a lb. of white bread and 7 minutes for a qt. of milk. As they say, time is money.

High-school students in Los Angeles who are bored with their studies are leaving school — as part of an experimental school program. Under Project Furlough, students who have lost interest in their studies can take a year's leave of absence without penalty. The students find their own jobs, gain life experience, then return to school when they're more positively motivated. In the program's 5 years of operation, almost 60% of those who left school through it have returned within a year. Look for similar programs to be starting across the country.

A little wine may be just the thing to knock off a virus. Science magazine reports that preliminary research by Canadian virologists indicates that the juice of the grape — fermented or plain — can inactivate viruses with which it comes in contact. Any volunteers for further research?

My Feet Were Killing Me...Until I Discovered the Miracle of Hamburg!

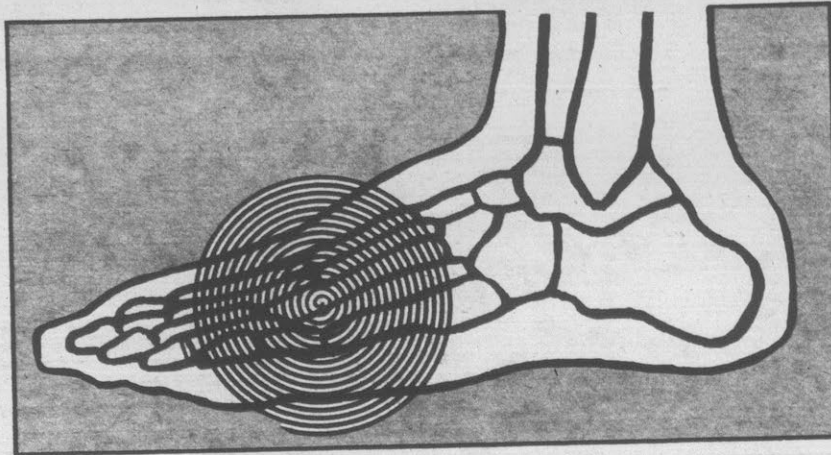

It was the European trip I had always dreamed about. I had the time and money to go where I wanted—see what I wanted. But I soon learned that money and time don't mean much when your feet hurt too much to walk. After a few days of sightseeing my feet were killing me.

Oh, I tried to keep going. In Paris I limped through Notre Dame and along the Champs-Élysées. And I went up in the Eiffel Tower although I can't honestly say I remember the view. My feet were so tired and sore my whole body ached. While everybody else was having a great time, I was in my hotel room. I didn't even feel like sitting in a sidewalk cafe.

The whole trip was like that until I got to Hamburg, Germany. There, by accident, I happened to hear about an exciting breakthrough for anyone who suffers from sore, aching feet and legs.

This wonderful invention was a custom-made foot support called Flexible Featherspring. When I got a pair and slipped them into my shoes my pain disappeared almost instantly. The flexible shock absorbing support they gave my feet was like cradling them on a cushion of air. I could walk, stand, even run. The relief was truly a miracle.

And just one pair was all I needed. I learned that women also can wear them—even with sandals and open backed shoes. They're completely invisible.

Imagine how dumbfounded I was to discover that these miraculous devices were sold only in Europe. Right then I determined that I would share the miracle I discovered in Hamburg with my own countrymen.

Today thousands of Americans including those who have retired — many with foot problems far more severe than mine — have experienced this blessed relief for themselves.

Here's why Feathersprings work for them and why they can work for you. These supports are backaches or just generally sore, aching feet. Flexible Feathersprings will bring you guaranteed relief with every step you take.

Don't suffer pain and discomfort needlessly. If your feet hurt, the miracle of Hamburg can help you. Write for more detailed information. There is no obligation whatsoever. Just fill out the coupon below and mail it today.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY ABOUT THE MIRACLE:

"Your Featherspring Foot Supports are wonderful . . . Since I walk or am on my feet all day as a nurse, my feet were painful, callused, and in general poor shape. Now my foot supports have made walking and standing a pleasure."

D.H./Wayne, New Jersey

"My husband felt a great relief and no more pain. They are truly an answer to our prayers. Only wish that he had heard of them twenty years ago."

Mrs. F.J.S./Metairie, Louisiana

"Since I've been wearing Feathersprings I have been able to wear shoes I wasn't able to wear before. Mainly because of my corns and calluses. Thanks a hundred times over."

A.H./East Orange, New Jersey

"It's great to be 70 years young again and not 70 years old. What a wonderful feeling to wake in the morning and really want to get in my shoes and start the day."

A.J.E./Baltimore, Maryland

Prince Valiant

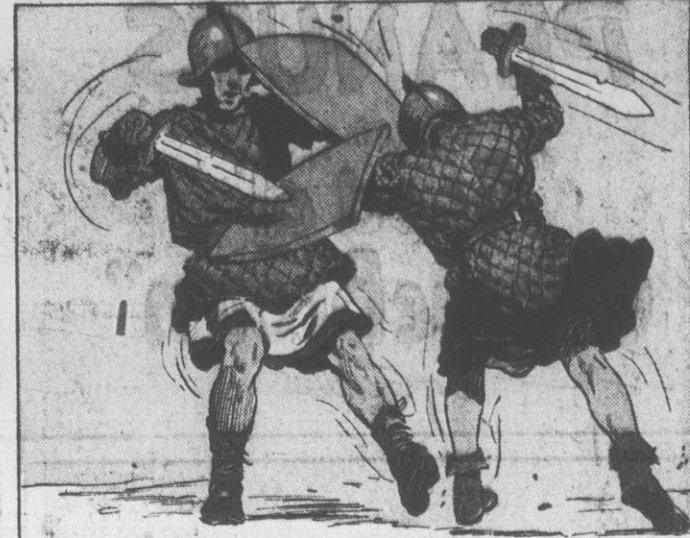

Our Story: VALETA RISES AT DAWN TO WATCH THE SUNRISE, AND IS SURPRISED TO SEE HECTOR ON THE BATTLEMENTS. "GOOD MORNING, VALETA, AND WHERE IS KAREN?"

"SHE IS DOWN THERE ON THE PRACTICE FIELD HURLING JAVELINS AND TAKING LESSONS IN THE ART OF MAYHEM."

THEY DESCEND TO THE FIELD WHERE KAREN HAS DONNED THE PADDING USED IN SWORDPLAY. "HELLO, WARRIOR," LAUGHS HECTOR, "WHEN IS THE NEXT WAR?" "RIGHT NOW IF YOU WILL DON THE PADS," SNAPS KAREN.

SO THEY DUEL. KAREN FIERCELY, BUT HECTOR ACTS AS IF HE HAS NEVER HELD A WEAPON BEFORE. CLUMSY THOUGH HE IS, HE MANAGES TO PARRY MOST OF HER STROKES.

SUDDENLY HER HELMET RINGS LIKE A BELL, STARS DANCE BEFORE HER EYES. "DID I HURT YOU?" ASKS HECTOR GENTLY. "A LUCKY STROKE GOT THROUGH YOUR SUPERB DEFENSE. I AM SORRY."

WHILE KAREN GOES TO HER ROOM TO NURSE A HEADACHE, HECTOR AND VALETA WANDER TO THE CLIFFS BY THE SEA. "WHEN I FINISH MY MILITARY TRAINING, I'D LIKE TO SERVE IN A WATCH TOWER. ARE THERE MANY OF THEM?" "YES, THEY ARE ALL AROUND THE ISLAND, BUT THERE ARE NOT ENOUGH SOLDIERS TO MAN THEM."

HAGEN, THE SERGEANT-AT-ARMS, SEEKS OUT VAL: "SIRE, I DO NOT TRUST THIS HECTOR FELLOW. HE IS MORE FAMILIAR WITH WEAPONS THAN HE PRETENDS."
