Tucker and Jennie McGlohon for a contribution of $1.00 each to this Society.

There was no further business, so the meeting adjourned.

There was a call meeting of the Society Mar. 2, 1918 for the purpose of informing the Society that the committee and advisory board had decided it best not to admit any girl into this Society whose name had been drawn by the Lanier Society that year.

—We lost in the debate, but we at least got one vote—

The regular business meeting of the Society was held April 9, 1918.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

A committee of the following girls was appointed to see about entertaining the Laniers, and to see Miss Graham about getting a man who has been to France to come and talk to us about the war.

There was a favorable report from the treasurer.

The president thanked the debaters in behalf of the Society for their work, and she also thanked the girls who got up the yells, decorated, and the marshals.
