LOYAL OPPOSITION — Saudi Arabia's Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani, smiles at Caraballeda news conference following the close of the organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. The meeting ended without agreeing to increase oil prices for 1978 — in effect, freezing prices. The Saudis had led opposition to a price increase. Yamani however emphasized that the differences expressed by members at the meeting should not be viewed as a weakening of OPEC. (AP Laserphoto)

Growers Cautious Over Govm't Tobacco Proposal

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Local tobacco growers and processors yesterday said they thought a proposal by the U.S. Department of Agriculture to allow farmers to plant more tobacco and harvest only the up-stalk leaves has some merit, but noted that more study should be given the idea.

William B. Glenn of Carolina Lea Tobacco Co. said "the idea definitely has some merit," but noted it is "still very questionable," how the proposal will be received by farmers.

"It is most important," Glenn said, "that we do try to provide a sufficient quantity of export quality tobacco out of each crop, and this buildup of low stalk tobacco is, of course, placing in jeopardy the growers future productions."

The Department of Agriculture proposal to allow growers to plant up to 120 per cent of the farm acreage allotment and receive higher price supports if they agree not to harvest the four lower leaves of each stalk was made because of the large quantity of lower-stalk leaf now held by the Tobacco Stabilization Corporation.

Chester Don Worthington of Worthington Farms said he had not read details of the proposal, "but from what I've heard, it sounds good," adding that "it gives farmers more options."

Worthington noted however, that in his opinion, grower reception of the plan would be affected by the price of purchasing tobacco allotments.

J. D. Briley, who last season planted 258 acres of tobacco, said, "I think farmers would go along with it. We would want to go along with it," he said, "because the government (Stabilization) doesn't want it (the down-stalk leaf)."

Briley asked, "What's the need to harvest it? It costs the same to cure it and when we sell it, we don't make any money off of it unless it's an unusual crop."

With a normal crop, according to Briley, "there's no money made off the bottom three or four leaves. We didn't break (harvest) some of the lugs this year. We left it right in the field. We figured up we were losing money on it."

Richard D. Harris, vice-president of A.C. Monk and Co. noted, "The only thing I know is what I read in the paper, but frankly I think it has some merit."

Harris said, however, "It depends what price they put on upstalk tobacco. If they put too high a (support) price on upstalk, it could further discourage exports."

Exports consist mainly of upstalk leaf and domestic companies use mostly upstalk tobacco in products produced in the United States. Sand lugs and cutters — the bottom leaves on the tobacco stalk — are heavy and are used primarily for fillers.

According to Harris, "sand lugs... ground leaves never amount to anything anyway. They have good filling power but very little flavor and aroma."

According to Harris, the Agriculture Department proposal hinges on, "what kind of price (support) they put on upstalk...the quality of the crop and the size of the crop."

First District Congressman Walter Jones — chairman of the House Subcommittee on Tobacco — said his committee met with USDA officials last week; were told of the plan; and endorsed the move.

"One question," the subcommittee had, according to Jones, was, "is it enforceable?" Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service officials, the Congressman said, "felt sure they could enforce compliance."

"Its success or failure," Jones emphasized, "will depend on those who choose to (Continued on page 12)

Oil Cartel Buyers Spared Price Hike

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — The United States and other customers of the international oil cartel are being spared a price increase, perhaps for the next six months, because the members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are producing more than they can sell.

OPEC's 13 members failed to agree on a price increase at their annual winter meeting Tuesday and Wednesday at Caraballeda, a beach resort near Caracas. Rather than repeat last year's split, they left the base price at $12.70 a 42-gallon barrel, the price since July 1, until their next meeting.

That meeting is scheduled for June 15, but OPEC Secretary-General Ali Jaidah said the cartel could hold a special session any time all 13 members agree to meet. Some ministers mentioned the possibility of a special price-fixing session in three months.

Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, Saudi Arabia's oil minister, attributed the price freeze to OPEC's current excess production of about 2 million barrels a day, about 6 percent of their total output.

"Market realities have imposed a freeze," Yamani told reporters. "Once the surplus on the market is eliminated, neither the United States nor any other nation can impose a freeze on prices."

Jaidah commented that increasing production from

Alaska's North Slope and the North Sea would eat more and more into OPEC's share of the market.

In the bargaining at Caraballeda, the conservative governments of Saudi Arabia, Iran and the United Arab Emirates held out for the freeze; radical Libya, Algeria and Iraq demanding increases ranging from 10 to 23 percent to counteract inflation in the industrialized countries, and Venezuela urged a hike of 5 to 8 percent.

All agreed, however, that any increase would only be by consensus so as not to have a repetition of their split last December. The opposition to an increase by Saudi Arabia and Iran, OPEC's two biggest producers, and their allies was decisive.

The U.A.E. oil minister, Mana Saad Otaiba, told The Associated Press he asked his colleagues to make voluntary production cutbacks to reduce the surplus, "and the reaction has been favorable."

Cairo Conferees Await Christmas

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The preliminary Cairo peace conference ended its first phase today and suspended its work pending a decisive Christmas summit between the leaders of Israel and Egypt.

"There are still disagreements, but we know where they are," said chief Israeli delegate Eliahu Ben-Elissar after a 50-minute plenary session. "We have defined the areas of disagreement."

He made it clear the next step depends on the talks Sunday between Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. "Everything depends on that meeting," added U.S. spokesman George Sherman.

Egyptian spokesman Morsi Saad el-Din said "definite progress" had been made. "The gap has not been completely bridged, but partly bridged," he added.

Begin and Sadat plan to upgrade the peace talks to the level of foreign ministers if they can narrow the differences sufficiently to agree on a basis for expanded negotiations, Egyptian officials said.

Sadat has rejected Begin's proposals for the West Bank but says "things are moving very fast," an apparent reference to Israeli plans to withdraw from most of Sinai.

At the Vatican, Pope Paul VI hailed peace overtures between Egypt and Israel as "courageous to the point of appearing audacious" and called for "all those responsible" to work together for a just and lasting peace in the Middle East.

"We follow with a very particular attention and interest the developments of the situation," the Pope said in a speech to 33 cardinals who met to hear his annual state of the church address.

Mother Is A Finalist For Assignment To 1980 Space Mission

WASHINGTON (AP) — The mother of a 7-year-old daughter is one of six Americans selected as finalists for a scientific assignment on a joint U.S.-European space mission in 1980, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration announced today.

There will be seats for two scientists on the seven-person Spacelab 1 crew, one an American and one a European.

The other five crew members will be U.S. astronauts.

The American woman finalist is Mrs. Ann F. Whitaker of Huntsville, Ala., a physicist at NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center.

Mrs. Whitaker, 38, said in a telephone interview from Huntsville that she is delighted at her selection.

"I'm very happy, as are my husband and 7-year-old daughter," she said. Her husband, also a physicist, works at the Army's Redstone Arsenal in Huntsville.

She is already working on the Spacelab 1 mission, she said, as principal investigator on an experiment "dealing with the dynamics and lubrication in space of operating journal bearings."

But even if she is selected for the flight, she might not be the first American woman in space. At least three others may have a chance before her.

The other American finalists for the U.S.-European flight are Dr. Craig L. Fischer, 40, of Indian Wells, Calif., a doctor; Dr. Michael L. Lampton, 36, of Berkeley, Calif., a space physicist; Byron K. Lichtenberg, 39, Natick, Mass., a doctoral candidate at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology;

Robert T. Menzies, 34, Pasadena, Calif., a physicist at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory; and Dr. Richard J. Terrile, also of Pasadena, a planetary scientist.

Gave 246 Pints To Blood Bank

The Bloodmobile concluded a very successful two-day visit at the Moose Lodge on Wednesday as area citizens responded to the appeal for holiday blood donations with 246 pints of blood.

Mrs. Ruth Taylor, executive secretary of the Pitt County Red Cross, said that Tuesday's blood drive resulted in the collection 146 pints of blood with three rejections while Wednesday's visit saw 100 pints collected and four persons rejected for various health reasons.

Mrs. Taylor said that the collection total was "very good" considering the busy time of year for everyone and she offered her appreciation to the citizens who took the time and put forth the effort to give blood. She pointed out that a large crowd gathered soon after Tuesday's drive began and some people probably had to wait longer than usual. Wednesday's activities were slower but donors continued to arrive up until closing time at 4 p.m.

The Red Cross official noted that the blood collected will help to meet the critical needs of the holiday season and she said that "although we hope it will not be needed, it is good to have this blood available."

The visits were sponsored by the Moose Lodge with O. J. Smith and Francis Tyson serving as chairmen of the drive. Mrs. Taylor expressed her thanks to them as well as all of the volunteer help, especially the women of the Greenville Service League and volunteer nurses.

Mystery Sonic Booms Repeat

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Another series of mysterious atmospheric booms has been felt along the New Jersey coast, authorities say.

Police departments in South Jersey from Bayville to Tuckerton, including all of Long Beach Island, reported slight tremors and the sound of explosions shortly before 7 p.m. Wednesday.

"I felt the tremor or a shake and a loud clap or bang," said state Marine Police Patrolman Alston Allen at the Ship Bottom station. "As for knowing what it is, I don't know."

"I felt just a rumble, a boom-boom, like a truck going by but it wasn't," said a policeman in nearby Surf City. "It's funny, some people hear it and some don't."

A similar phenomenon was reported on Dec. 2 when coastal residents from Connecticut to South Carolina felt shaking. William Donn, an acoustical scientist at Columbia University in New York, said his instruments recorded two sonic explosions that day and five more Dec. 15. The strongest was equal in force to the detonation of 100 tons of dynamite, he said.

charging racial discrimination in an alleged attempt to force him to retire.

The suit, seeking $100,000 in damages from Chief of Police Glenn Cannon, Mayor Percy Cox and City Manager James Caldwell, said Corbett was told November 11, "to either resign or be summarily fired," for allegedly sleeping while on duty November 9.

The suit charges that the "true reason...is that...there is now a vacancy...in the Lieutenant slot. The plaintiff is next in line for the slot," and by, "forcing plaintiff to retire, the slot will be filled by a white policeman with less seniority than the plaintiff."

City officials said today that they have not received a copy of the judge's order dissolving the restraining order. The city was notified by telephone yesterday from the judge's office, spokesmen noted.

It is believed, however, that Larkins' order yesterday was based, at least in part, on the fact that Corbett has not exhausted the due process procedures available to him under the Police Department's disciplinary procedures policy.

At a hearing in U.S. Eastern District Court in New Bern, December 15, Judge Larkins was told that the city considered Corbett as retired because the officer had indicated that he would retire.

When asked by Judge Larkins at the hearing last week if he had any reprimands for sleeping on the job, Corbett said, "no, not that I recall as of now."

Judge Larkins then read from an affidavit presented by the defense containing Corbett's personal records since 1973 of four incidents where the officer was reprimanded for sleeping while on duty. Other reprimands read by the judge included five instances of neglect of duty, two of failing to report for assigned duty, one in which Corbett allegedly failed to report for scheduled training, two cases where he allegedly failed to answer calls from the department's radio dispatcher, two cases of improper investigation and one incident of failing to report for work.

Larkins has yet to rule on a defense motion made at the hearing last week to dismiss the suit.

A HOTLINE APPEAL

A CHRISTMAS NEED

The Salvation Army has asked Hotline to make an urgent appeal for last minute (today and tomorrow) donations of food, toys (good used ones or new ones) and money to be given out this Christmas (Friday).

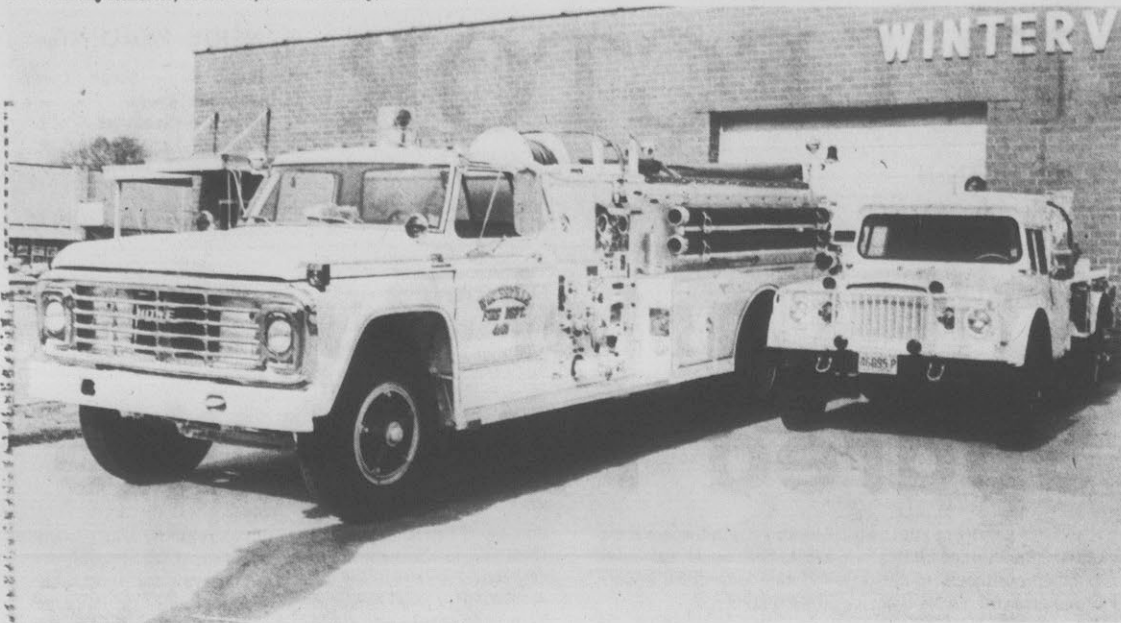

There has been an unusually large number of requests for food baskets and toys this year, probably due to the bad crop year. Mrs. Major Arnold Williford said, and the Salvation Army has seen the need to ask the public for additional help to meet as many of these requests as possible. She said she is willing to shop right up to the last minute, if need be, with money that might be donated today or tomorrow to make Christmas merry for as many families as possible in Pitt County.

Gifts should be taken to the Salvation Army Citadel, located on Dickinson Avenue Extension (U.S. 264A near the western city limits) today and tomorrow till 5 p. m. For more information, one may call the Salvation Army, 756-3388.

U.S. District Judge John Larkins yesterday dissolved a temporary restraining order issued December 12 blocking the City of Greenville from firing Police Department Sgt. Caesar Corbett.

Corbett, a 27-year veteran with the department, and the city's first black policeman, filed suit in U.S. Eastern District Court December 8,

NEW EQUIPMENT — A new truck, replacing an old 1963 model, was recently purchased by the Winterville Fire Department. The new truck, left, is manufactured by the Howe Fire Apparatus Company for a cost of approximately $43,000. The new engine has a 750 gallon per minute pump and a 750 gallon booster tank. Also added to the department was a brush truck used for small grass and woods fires. The four-wheel drive is on loan from the Federal government and was rebuilt by members of the department for a cost of about $4,000. The unit has a 300 gallon tank and has a 100 gallon per minute pump. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Open Final Stretch Of Border-To-Border I-75

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — The nation's first border-to-border freeway, Interstate 75, is open, and President Carter says the whole nation will benefit "from this superb route through the most beautiful regions of the country."

The final 17-mile stretch of the superhighway was dedicated just northwest of Atlanta Wednesday. Dignitaries including Gov. George Busbee of Georgia, U.S. Secretary of Transportation Brock Adams, Georgia Transportation Commissioner Tom Moreland and former budget director Bert Lance cut the ribbon to open the four-lane highway in windy, 30-degree weather.

Lance was commissioner of transportation in Georgia before going to Washington with Carter to serve briefly as director of the federal Office of Management and Budget.

Carter, in a telephone conversation from Plains, Ga., which was amplified at the ceremony site, said:

"It is going to mean a lot to the people trying to go to and from Atlanta in the holiday season to have I-75 open."

The highway, which stretches 1,564 miles from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico, was officially opened when a truck driven from its most northern end at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., and a car driven from its southernmost point at Tampa, Fla., drove through a banner.

Busbee named Lance as the man "who broke a long-standing impasse which prevented successful completion of this road."

The highway, which crosses Lake Allatoona, was the subject of battles between environmental groups and government agencies, delaying the completion of the route, which was ultimately changed.

"A previous commissioner of the Georgia Department of Transportation by the name of Bert Lance took care of the environmental concern by setting aside a less than desirable route and placing the final decision in the hands of one of this nation's foremost environmentalists, Dr. Eugene Odum of the University of Georgia," said Busbee in his dedication speech.

Lance was given a souvenir, one of the "Temporary end, Interstate-75" signs which had marked the detour by way of U.S. 41, which had been plagued with accidents.

OUT, OUT, SPOT!

For some strange reason Christmas seems to bring more spot and stain problems than any other time of year. Perhaps it's because we're busy and therefore less careful, or because we're entertaining more and there's more chance for spots to occur, or just because.

Many stains can be removed successfully from washable fabrics when they are promptly and correctly treated.

Prompt attention is the most critical factor in successful stain removal. Attend to a spill as soon as it occurs. Remove any excess stain before it has time to penetrate the fabric. If the staining material is a liquid, use a clean white blotter, tissue, or paper towel to absorb the excess (blot, do not rub). Work from the center to the outer edges of the stain working from the back of the stain. This pushes the stain off, not through the fabric. Move the blotter as it begins to absorb so the stain will not be redeposited. When all of the stain cannot be removed with clear water, use an appropriate solvent as soon as possible. Lift off excess nonliquid stains with a dull edge (table knife, letter opener, paper shears).

If the proper solvent is handy and immediate attention to the stain is possible, follow the appropriate procedure. When nothing else is possible, sponging with clear water will help.

Working with a stain while it's fresh and still wet generally will prevent it from becoming "set." Most "set" stains are impossible to remove.

Alcoholic Beverages: 1. Sponge at once with cool water. Wash in warm, sudsy water. Soak 15 minutes in a solution of 1 T. chlorine bleach to 1 qt. water (2 T. 3% hydrogen peroxide to 1 Gal. water when chlorine bleach cannot be used). Launder. 2. Sponge at once with cool water. Soak in a solution of lukewarm water, liquid detergent and a small amount of white vinegar. Rinse. Launder, using bleach appropriate for the fabric. 3. Sponge at once with cool water. Apply glycerin followed by more cool water. Sponge with white vinegar. Rinse. Launder, using bleach safe for the fabric.

Fruit Juices, Berries: Do not use soap on fruit stains. It will set stain. 1. An enzyme pre-soak may remove fruit stains. Launder, using a bleach appropriate for the fabric. Note: Sponge old stains with white vinegar. Then follow above procedure. 2. If safe for fabric pour boiling water through stain. Treat remaining discoloration by sponging with lemon juice or 3% hydrogen peroxide solution. Launder, using bleach appropriate for the fabric.

Gravy: Scrape off excess with dull table knife. Soak in cold water or cool enzyme pre-soak. Work detergent into stain. Rinse. Treat any grease stain by sponging with trichloroethane. Launder using bleach appropriate for the fabric.

Pine Resin, Tar, Asphalt: May be impossible to remove. Work on stains before they dry. Sponge with trichloroethane. Work detergent into stain. Rinse. Treat stubborn stains with ammonia. Rinse and launder.

PRECAUTION: Always test the solvent to be used on an inconspicuous part of the garment to see if the fabric will be harmed.

Felt 'Power' In Killings

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Patrick Wayne Kearney, sentenced to life imprisonment after pleading guilty to three "trash bag murders," said the killings helped vent his frustrations and gave him feelings of power.

Grisly details of the slayings, some included in interviews with two doctors, were released Wednesday when a gag order was lifted after Kearney's sentencing.

Prosecutors also disclosed that Kearney at least twice came close to getting caught with victims in his car. Once he locked himself out of the car and jimmied the lock with a coat hanger. A second time, he had a flat tire and had his car towed to a gas station for repairs.

Kearney was sentenced for the first-degree murders of Albert Rivera, 21, of Los Angeles; Arturo Marquez 24, of Oxnard, and John LaMay, 17, of El Segundo. Superior Court Judge John Hews imposed the life term after Kearney requested immediate sentencing.

Kearney, 37, was arrested last July. The killings, linked to homosexual activities, were termed the "trash bag murders" because many of the 15 victims were found dumped along highways in large plastic trash bags.

Authorities have said Kearney may be linked to as many as 28 slayings.

Govm't Declines To Prosecute

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government has declined to prosecute a misdemeanor charge against comedian-activist Dick Gregory, who was arrested Thanksgiving Day for demonstrating within 500 feet of the South African embassy.

Gregory, his wife and Massachusetts state Sen. William Owens denounced American business involvement in South Africa at a news conference in front of the White House before going to the embassy to demonstrate against that nation's racial policies.

Charges against Mrs. Gregory and Owens also were dismissed.

Gregory spent one night in jail after his arrest.

Specialties Are Game Hunters' Bag

By RONALD E. COHEN
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Are you a hunter who loves traipsing through snow for hours searching for deer? Or standing motionless for what seems like days in a duck blind?

Are you helpless after you've bagged your prey?

Take it to Camille.

For years now, Camille Richaudeau has quietly offered a unique service for long-time customers: you shoot it, he'll cook it.

Richaudeau is a jolly, garrulous Frenchman. He runs Chez Camille, one of the best but least pretentious restaurants in a city full of pretentious French restaurants.

He'll cook anything for you. His favorites so far were a big-horn sheep he did for a small supper party and several Michigan moose made into thick, juicy steaks for 40 diners who were "hungry as bears."

"They loved it," he said. "I tasted it myself. It was juicy, tender, delicious."

He has prepared antelope steaks, bear, ducks, Canadian geese, quail, partridge, pheasant, venison — you name it, it will be prepared in the finest traditional French manner.

Bring in a brace of pheasant, it will be prepared in a classic cream sauce; if it's venison, you'll get it with chestnut dressing; with geese, braised cabbage; quail is prepared with grapes.

The only restrictions are that you bring your game in cleaned (cut into steaks, feathers removed, etc.) three or four days before your party. This way chef Roland Bouyat can trim the less tender parts to make pate and marinate or especially treat the best meat for the perfect dinner.

Richaudeau lays out his special service a couple of times a week.

"We treat them just as if they were at home," he said. "Tonight a young man who shot two pheasants will be in here with his fiancée. He's so excited, so very proud. It will be delicious."

There is no charge for cooking unless the game is prepared with cognac or special wine — then, only token.

But the hunter pays for the fixings — whatever cocktails, wine, salads, appetizers, desserts, and after-dinner cognac is consumed. It can be very cheap or very expensive.

"A party of eight had venison last week," he said. "They were very happy. They drank six bottles of wine, had cognac, fancy dessert. L'addition came to $100. But they said it was worth it."

If your party is just two and you bring in your goose and order an unpretentious bottle of wine, a little pate, some bread and butter, perhaps a modest dessert, you can dine in elegance with very little pain to your pocketbook.

Three times a year the Safari Club, a group of serious hunters, gets together at Chez Camille to eat their prey and drink a lot of wine. Richaudeau sets aside a room for 40. Club members show movies of their hunting expeditions.

"I always taste," he said. "I love all game. Magnifique!"

Any troubles?

"No," he says, smiling. "My customers are always satisfied. They keep coming back."

Once a hunter brought in five ducks.

"The poor ducks," he said. "The hunter must have been a butcher — shots here, shots there, shots everywhere. There was barely any meat left on the bones. But we cooked it and he ate it. No complaints."

Grandmother Doesn't Always Know Best

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem concerning my daughter-in-law (I'll call her Mary) and my three beautiful grandchildren, who are all under 10 years of age.

Mary doesn't work, and about three times a week she brings the children over for me to baby-sit while she goes out with the girls, attends club meetings, etc. I love having the children, but it breaks my heart to see them looking so neglected. Their clothes are soiled and tattered, and they always look like they could use a good bath.

Last week when Mary dropped the children off, I took the boys to a barbershop for much-needed haircuts. Then I took the girl to my beautician, who shampooed the child's hair and gave her a shorter, more manageable, hairstyle. (She loved it!)

When Mary came to pick up the children she hit the roof! She screamed at me and told me she'd never bring the children over again if I didn't leave them exactly as she dropped them off. (In the past I've bathed them and bought them new clothes, and she never complained about that.)

Meanwhile, I haven't seen the children in a week. Do you think I was wrong? I only did what I thought was best for the children.

GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: Cleaning up the children, and even buying them new clothes, is one thing—but haircuts without their mother's permission is something else. Even though you meant well, you overstepped your bounds.

If you want a good relationship with your daughter-in-law, you should have a clear-cut understanding of what you may and may not do for your grandchildren, regardless of how neglected they may appear to you.

DEAR ABBY: In one of your columns a while back you said that the IRS ruled that a face-lift for either a man or woman is a legitimate deductible medical expense.

Well, I just had a hair transplant performed by a licensed surgeon, and I assumed that it was also tax deductible because it was done for cosmetic reasons—same as a face-lift.

I phoned my local IRS office and a man there said there is nothing in their files that states that a hair transplant is deductible, but I should go ahead and deduct it and see if it's allowed.

I don't want to get into any trouble with the IRS, but I certainly don't want to pass up a chance to save some money. What should I do?

UNDECIDED

DEAR UNDECIDED: Consult a C.P.A. or a tax expert who is informed on what the IRS considers deductible.

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating a divorced man for three years. His ex-wife still calls him to trim her shrubs and fix her furnace.

His daughter is getting married soon and my boyfriend's ex-wife has refused to attend the wedding if I'm there.

The daughter has asked me to attend. She says we should all bury the hatchet for that one day and attend the wedding in harmony.

Should I go? Or should I step aside if the girl's mother positively refuses to come if I'm there?

THE OTHER ONE

DEAR OTHER: The word from here is to step aside.

Appeal Made For Little Red Stocking Funds

With only a few days remaining until the end of the year, the 1977 Little Red Stocking appeal of The Children's Home Society of North Carolina is a considerable short of its goal.

According to Miss Ruth McCracken, executive director, through Dec. 19 the society has received $78,619.52 toward the goal of $120,000.

Miss McCracken said, "A successful Little Red Stocking appeal is critical to maintaining our statewide services. In addition to the allocations from the United Ways across the state, which provide approximately 31 percent of our total financial support, the society depends heavily each year on direct contributions to our Little Red Stocking. We rely on the stocking appeal each year to provide approximately 13 percent of our annual operating budget. A gift to the Little Red Stocking is tax deductible and is an investment in the life of a child."

Each year The Children's Home Society places approximately 200 infants and older children in permanent, adoptive homes. Through its seven offices, located in Asheville, Chapel Hill, Charlotte, Fayetteville, Greensboro, Greenville and Wilmington, the society serves every part of North Carolina.

Gifts to the Little Red Stocking may be mailed to: The Children's Home Society of North Carolina, P. O. Box 6587, Greensboro, 27405.

Holiday Lunch Held Tuesday

Members of the Greenville Garden Club held a Christmas luncheon party Tuesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Holt.

Mrs. J. G. Galloway, president, welcomed the husbands and special guests. Mrs. Thelma Harris gave the invocation.

The house was decorated in a holiday motif. Auxiliary tables were covered with green and red cloths and centered with lighted candle arrangements.

Mrs. J. R. Carrington, second vice president, introduced Dr. Will Wallace and daughters, Cindy, Laura and Connie, violinists who gave a musical program. They were accompanied by their father, who played the guitar.

Good-byes were said to the hostesses, Mrs. J. Con Lanier Sr., Miss Maud Moore, Mrs. H. G. Williams and Mrs. Holt.

Dr. Rives Is Department Speaker

Dr. Ralph Rives, professor at ECU in the English Department, was guest speaker at the meeting of the Home Life Department of the Greenville Woman's Club.

The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. S. E. Haines.

Mrs. J. E. Ricks, home life chairman, introduced the speaker. Dr. Rives was selected for a special summer course at the University of London this year. While traveling throughout the British Isles, he was able to trace his family tree as far back as 1490.

Dr. Rives' program topic was "Christmas in the Past." He reviewed the many ways Christmas was observed in the past. Christmas was a family affair — sometimes relatives came for the holidays and stayed two and three months, he said.

Following the program, members were invited to share one of their early memories of Christmas. Carols were sung accompanied by Mrs. Hope Anderson.

A business meeting was held and it was decided that the department would meet one week earlier next year on Dec. 12.

Hostesses assisting Mrs. Haines were Mrs. Lella Rives, Mr. W. S. Kiger, Mrs. Joseph Kinnaman, Mrs. L. S. Worthington and Mrs. Doris Ballengee.

Guests for the afternoon were Mrs. W. A. Heymann, Pollard.

Late Gifts Pleasant Surprise

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

For people with bad memories, New Year's gifts can be friend savers.

Scents, books and wine can save the day when one has been confronted at Christmas with an unexpected gift. Or one may have forgotten tradespeople or office friends.

The late Christmas gift idea not only gives you a chance to correct an oversight that might be made during the Christmas gift buying rush but also can give unexpected pleasure, a surprise gift to someone who might have thought he had been forgotten.

A good choice for any man can be made in a few minutes at a fragrance counter. A chic, attractively wrapped package can make a good impression even if it is nothing more than a shower soap on a rope.

Wine or a book are other good "last minute" or "I forgot" gifts. Good domestic wines need not be expensive, and are always welcome.

And don't stew over your choice, especially if the gift is for a casual friend or business acquaintance.

"Forget the age of a man when you are choosing toiletries. It makes no difference whether he is a college student or a business executive. They all have the same needs," says toiletries executive Alyn Sym-Smith, of Black Tie Fragrances.

He suggests that a good choice for all men on your list might be the newer, popular, musk-based colognes.

"For the man you know would like to portray a masculine image, think robust," advises Sym-Smith. Usually the blend will combine a variety of challenging spices.

Or you might know he is hard to please — the ideal candidate for a new and distinctive scent. At least he won't have any built-in prejudices if the scent is new.

Holiday Meet Held By Pilots

The Pilot Club of Greenville celebrated the Christmas season by having husbands, children and friends present at the social hour, dinner and business meeting held at the Ramada Inn last week.

Louise Downing introduced banjo player Carl Hunt, who provided entertainment for the evening.

Hunt, visiting artist for Pitt Technical Institute for 1977-78, is a performing artist of the Visiting Artist Program which is sponsored jointly by the N. C. Arts Council and Department of Community Colleges.

He has worked professionally with Arthur Smith, A and R Promotions and several groups in Nashville, Tenn.

President Kay Whitehurst and Mrs. J. B. Spilman, honorary member, were recognized and presented a poinsettia.

Christmas gifts were distributed to all members.

ESA Members Hold Meeting

Members of ESA Gamma Delta Chapter met Saturday night at the home of Mrs. Francis Cassick for their December meeting. A covered-dish supper was served to members and their guests.

After the Christmas party, a meeting was conducted by President Rubelle Goin. Plans were made to entertain and give fruit to several handicapped children Friday. Fifty dollars is being sent to the Salvation Army for a handicapped child.

A Christmas gift was presented to the president.

Voters To Polls Again In May

In case you figure you have your voting chores out of the way, maybe you should be aware that another primary is coming up May 2.

Party faithful will be choosing candidates for Congress, N. C. Senate, N. C. House of Representatives, sheriff, three county commissioner districts and other offices.

Of major interest, of course, will be primaries to choose candidates for the U. S. Senate. GOP Senator Jesse Helms currently holds the seat and he is almost certain to be nominated. The Democratic primary will determine who will oppose him.

Potential voters can register until April 3 and those who are not currently registered should plan now to become eligible for the primary.

Rail Merger Would Have Local Effect

An interesting possibility for railroad service emerges with the exploration of a merger of Seaboard Coast Line Industries and Southern Pacific.

SCL tracks stretch across Eastern North Carolina and traverse Pitt County. They were a part of the old Atlantic Coast Line system which later merged with the Seaboard railroad.

If the merger of SCL and Southern Pacific took place shippers here would be able to send goods to the west coast on one railroad.

It undoubtedly will be a long time before it is determined if such a merger is feasible and practical. It would, however, have its effects locally.

Camps Cut Agency Lines

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The first of North Carolina's Wilderness Camps opened this month in the mountains near Hendersonville.

A significant bureaucratic maneuver accompanied this event which will help shape the program as a second camp opens in February, two more are launched next fiscal year, and a program for girls is planned for future implementation.

The camps are being operated directly out of the office of Human Resources Secretary Sarah T. Morrow.

This resolves a long-running feud involving several state agencies attempting to get control of the camping program. It will also end the red tape snarling which has jeopardized the camp approach over the past couple of years.

A pilot project in camping launched by the Youth Services division which operates the juvenile training school system, for example, was scuttled after inter-agency fights developed: arguments in the property office over who could own property or lease it; in the courts about whether children could be turned over to the youth division without being sentenced; in the welfare offices about whether children in a camp were still eligible for aid.

Agency Feud

As camping as therapy for kids in trouble gained attention and proved effective, other agencies joined the fray: the Mental Health people figured they ought to set up the program, design the therapies, and control the money; other agencies felt the same way, or at least objected to only one agency gaining control. Despite pledges from various quarters that, given control, the program would be available to all, experienced governmental workers knew better: the one who holds the purse strings and writes the regulations automatically favors itself.

Secretary Morrow has put a stop to the inter-agency bickering by putting the camping system directly under her supervision in the top-level Division of Plans and Operations.

"These camps are established within the Office of the Secretary. This allows all Department of Human Resources divisions and other state and local agencies that have responsibility for children with behavioral problems access to the program on an equal basis," Dr. Morrow states.

"Therapeutic wilderness camping is a multi-agency program," she adds emphatically.

She also makes it clear that the system will not be influenced by agency arguments over whether the child qualifies: This service will support and extend the present services of many agencies that are helping children who are in conflict with the law or who have behavioral problems."

Admission guidelines are drawn to allow referrals from any public or private children's services agency or professional, or from private psychiatrists. The screening and referral committees (one in each of four regions) include the courts, youth services, mental health and retardation, the schools, welfare, health services, and the camp system contract manager.

Joint

Under that approach, parties to the feuding are brought to the table together to decide on admissions. The camps are being opened under a $2.9 million appropriation from the General Assembly. The Eckerd Foundation of Clearwater, Fla., has contracted to provide services, staff, and camp operations. Eckerd is a non-profit organization with 10 years of experience in camp programs in Florida. A counterpart (Eckerd Wilderness Educational System of North Carolina) has been created to take over the camp program and to raise funds for it in the future.

The four camps for boys between eight and 15 provide close supervision and counseling situations designed to build self esteem and reliance with the aim of returning to society. The second camp to open will be in Montgomery County near Candor on the edge of Uwharrie National Forest.

Next year there will be one in the eastern section, and one in the north central section.

A New Christmas Carol

"Uncle," said Bob Cratchit, "why not come to our house tomorrow for a three-martini Christmas dinner?"

"Bah, humbug," said Scrooge. "I don't believe in three-martini Christmas dinners."

"But Uncle, if you come we can discuss business and then the dinner will be tax-deductible and I will be able to afford to buy poor Tiny Tim a bird."

"I'm against all tax-deductible dinners and lunches too. I don't believe in them even when they come at Christmas time."

"Oh, Uncle, what a terrible thing to say. Where would we all be if we couldn't deduct our holiday lunches and dinners as legitimate entertainment?"

"Bah, humbug," said Scrooge as he went home to have a peanut butter sandwich.

Scrooge put on his nightcap and sat by the fire when suddenly there appeared before his eyes the apparition of his old friend Bert Lance.

Lance still had all his bank books, ledgers and deeds, and was holding in his right hand a diplomatic passport.

Scrooge said, "What do you want, Bert?"

"I came to tell you that you will be visited by three spirits. Listen to what they have to say, Scrooge. Otherwise you will be like me, doomed forever trying to unload my stock in the National Bank of Georgia."

This really frightened Scrooge, as he knew Lance was in a bad way.

The first spirit showed up exactly at midnight. "I am the martini of Christmas-past," it said. "Come." The spirit took Scrooge back to his farm. "Do you see that happy man behind the plow?"

"It's me," said Scrooge.

"Who paid for the plow and the land and the peanuts you couldn't sell?"

"The taxpayer."

The martini spirit said, "And you never said a word then about the tax laws being unfair and a disgrace."

Tears filled Scrooge's eyes. "They didn't seem unfair then. But getting farm rebates is different than having tax-deductible lunches and dinners."

ART BUCHWALD

"Scrooge, how are you going to keep them down on the farm if they don't serve tax-free meals in town?"

The second martini showed up an hour later.

"I am the spirit of Christmas-present, Scrooge. Come with me."

The spirit took Scrooge to a convention where a sandy-haired fellow was sitting on the stage drinking beer and talking about his kinkfinks.

"Why, it's my brother Billy," Scrooge said.

"Yes, and do you realize where he'd be today if conventions weren't tax deductible?"

"Stop," begged Scrooge. "I don't want to hear anymore."

The third martini showed up. "I am the spirit of Christmas-future. Would you like to see what will happen to your tax reform bill by the time the House and Senate get through with it?"

"No more," cried Scrooge. "I have been persuaded."

"Good," said the third martini. "Then you know what to do."

Scrooge went out and bought the biggest bird he could find, for which, of course, he got a receipt. He then went to Bob Cratchit's house and presented him with it. "I'd like to talk to you about the Whitney Account over dinner," Scrooge said.

THE INSIDE REPORT

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Peter F. Flaherty, President Carter's first major appointment to decide he simply would rather be elsewhere doing other things, quietly slipped out of Washington Dec. 9 after nine unhappy months as Deputy Attorney General that help show what has gone wrong in the Carter administration.

His departure was marked not by major ceremony, but only a quiet little party in Flaherty's office. Indeed, some Justice Department colleagues muttered good riddance and some officials elsewhere groused that Flaherty's major action at the Justice Department was to send the Bert Lance case to an Atlanta grand jury for possible criminal indictment. Friends of Lance saw this as a self-serving act to boost Flaherty in his race for governor of Pennsylvania.

But Pete Flaherty was more sinned against than sinning. He was placed in an impossible posture by an administration that rejected old-style politics but was so far from achieving politics-free government that it named politician Flaherty second-in-command at Justice. Then, distrusted for being a politician, Flaherty was never accepted as part of the Justice Department team.

Flaherty is accused behind the scenes of being less than a good soldier in his final days at Justice. Yet he never had been given any reason to feel the slightest sense of collective responsibility for the Carter administration. The sad fact of Washington today is that nobody else has that sense of responsibility either.

Pittsburgh Mayor Flaherty endorsed Jimmy Carter for President in 1976 in a major boost for his pivotal Pennsylvania primary victory. Like Mr. Carter, Flaherty was a maverick who bucked the organization. A fiscal conservative with considerable Republican support, Mayor Flaherty followed doctrines of less government that Mr. Carter's campaign also suggested.

When Flaherty wanted to come to Washington, Carter political aide Hamilton Jordan put him in the No. 2 slot at Justice. That displeased former federal Judge Griffin Bell, a Georgia non-politician who had agreed to be Attorney General in the belief he would have a free hand.

Here was an administration that talked about a Justice Department divorced from politics but was eager to place an active politician in a key spot. In the unhappy compromise, Flaherty got his title but most of his duties went to another Georgian, Michael Egan, as Associate Attorney General. Other pieces of Flaherty's turf were later covered by Benjamin Civiletti, the hard-charging head of the criminal division (and now Flaherty's successor as Deputy Attorney General).

His Justice Department colleagues privately grumbled about Flaherty's lack of experience in criminal justice (despite seven years as an assistant district attorney). No wonder that other administration officials encountering him at meetings found Flaherty, self-assured and incisive as mayor of Pittsburgh, to be tentative and embarrassed. Nor did he have access to the President.

Unlike past administrations, veterans of the Carter campaign formed no band of brothers. Flaherty found himself a stranger in Washington.

In this posture, Flaherty was given the decision-making on the Lance case. When Flaherty sent the case to the grand jury last month, Lance and friends were furious.

Economist Eliot Janeway, an early Carter supporter and Lance intimate, charged in his Dec. 7 newsletter that Mr. Carter had "lost control of his own Justice Department" and that Flaherty used the Lance case as an "attention-grabber...to launch his campaign" for governor.

That view has some support. One subcabinet member told us: "I think Pete was helping himself. When you have somebody's name sent to a grand jury, he'll never be the same again. As a politician, Pete knows that." Similarly, Flaherty is criticized for using his nasty quarrel with Bell over the next U.S. Attorney in Pittsburgh as a campaign ammunition.

Whether or not Flaherty's professions of innocence to these accusations are valid the administration's lack of political cohesiveness is obvious. From the beginning, the White House ignored Flaherty's formidable assets to help mold an administration-wide Carter team. If Flaherty's final actions were not those of a loyal Carterite intent on protecting his administration, the President has himself to blame.

To the editor:

I recently read a little vignette about the life of Jesus Christ. I don't know who wrote the sketch, but I think the message is worth reflection.

He was born in an obscure village, the child of a peasant woman. He grew up in still another village, where he worked in a carpenter shop until he was 30. Then for three years he was an itinerant preacher. He never wrote a book. He never held an office. He never had a family or owned a house. He didn't go to college. He never visited a big city. He never traveled 200 miles from the place where he was born. He did none of the things one usually associates with greatness.

He had no credentials but himself. He was only 33 when the tide of public opinion turned against him. His friends ran away. He was turned over to his enemies and went through the mockery of a trial. He was nailed to a tree among four criminals. While he was dying, his executioners gambled for his clothing, the only property he had on earth. When he was dead, he was laid in a borrowed grave through the pity of a friend. 19 centuries have come and gone, and today he is the central figure of the human race and the leader of mankind's progress.

All the armies that ever marched, all the navies that ever sailed, all the parliaments that ever sat, all the kings that ever reigned, put together, have not effected the life of man on this earth as much as that ONE SOLITARY LIFE.

If I could add anything to this vignette, it would be the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. God intended the resurrection — not the cross — to be the centerpiece of Christianity. With the resurrection, "Joy to the World" becomes a living reality for the individual believer.

Wall Streeters Trust Burns

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Whenever something good happens in Wall Street these days, the shadow of Arthur F. Burns is apt to be glimpsed offstage. If something bad happens, Wall Streeters often look toward President Carter.

There was a bond market rally one day last week and sage observers were quick to attribute it to a rumor — nothing more than a rumor — that Carter was about to reappoint Burns as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. The chairmanship falls vacant on Jan. 31.

A month earlier, Carter himself had sparked the biggest, if shortlived, stock market rally of the year when he voiced a few kind sentiments about Burns at a news conference.

Those whose blood pressures gyrate as Burns rumors come and go should repair to a quiet corner with a copy of the Carter "Promises Book." This is the official compilation of commitments the Georgia farmer made during his three-year effort to change his occupational shoestyle from brogans to wingtips.

Some readers might prefer to sit down before opening to Page 6, where the promises include lower interest rates and "an expansionary fiscal and monetary program in the near future, with some deficits if necessary, to reduce unemployment more rapidly."

Offer a chair, for example, to Henry Ford II, who recently suggested, "From a businessman's standpoint, it would be unfortunate if Arthur Burns weren't reappointed."

While Burns' term as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board expires at the end of next month, his tenure

Island At Its Finest

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
NANTUCKET, Mass. (AP) — When winter's rains and ruins are over, half a million people will crowd this little island. Now, though, it belongs to the islanders, just 4,000 of them, and they have a secret.

They know, and would just as soon not many others knew, that now is the time when their island is at its most seductive.

Now is the time when tranquility nudges aside gaiety, when the sight of blue chimney smoke rather than white sails gives an even cozier meaning to the phrase snug harbor, when the cobbled streets are vacant and the undulating dunes wear a simple coverlet of snow instead of gaudy bathing towels and the only footprints on the beaches are the chevrons left by gulls.

The old bell tolling the hours from the Unitarian Church spire, as it has since 1815, seems to ring with special clarity in the cold December air: just so does winter's hush allow a more penetrating view of what is generally taken to be a summer resort, an exclusive playground for the well-to-do.

In the winter it is all the more exclusive for being, simply, a home.

Nantucket has always been a precious place to those who live here all year long, to the whalers of the storied past and the innkeepers of the romantic present.

"The inhabitants," observed one Nantucketer, Obed Macy, who lived here 150 years ago, "generally were attached to their place of nativity and were seldom desirous of leaving it."

He had an observation about the summer people, too, which likewise is as true now as then: "When strangers came to the island, the longer they stayed, the more they were pleased..."

To a Nantucketer, everyone who wasn't literally born here is considered an off-islander. They tell the story of the man who was brought here as a baby and died in his 90s. At his funeral, the preacher praised him as "an honest and upright man, for an off-islander."

That island pride is better understood in the wintertime.

In the winter, the island's isolation, 30 miles at sea, becomes less a symbol of escape than a hard fact of life. Last winter the harbor was frozen solid for three weeks so that not even the twice-daily ferry could arrive with supplies.

Winter gives the islanders a sense of shared adventure; summer is the reward.

REWARDS FROM GOD

We are sometimes inclined to believe that divine providence can be arbitrary and harsh. We can be sure, however, that when God takes something from us, He always puts something better in its place. For every material loss there is some richer spiritual gain.

The eagle roughens the nest and pushes the young eaglet out, in order that it may learn how to use its wings. In the same way God often pushes us out of narrow comfort into ultimate wider space and larger liberty. His calls are upward to broader service, freer life, and larger joy.

Great calls to duty are always accompanied by great promises. We are not to serve God for rewards, but it always happens that when we are loyal to Him, life becomes more abundant for us. Said the psalmist, "The judgments of the Lord are true... and in keeping them there is great reward." Said Jesus, "Great is your reward in heaven."

Some Walk To School In Hazardous Condition

Students walking to school in local city and county school districts may face hazardous or dangerous walking conditions according to a recent survey conducted by the Department of Public Instruction's Division of Transportation at the request of the State Board of Education.

The survey was conducted of each local education agency (LEA) in the state to determine the number of children who live within one and one-half miles of school, and face dangerous or hazardous walking to and from school.

Fifty Students in the Green County LEA, according to the survey, walk in hazardous conditions, but the $12,500 needed to provide an additional bus should not be made.

Pitt County school children are all provided for as none face hazardous conditions in getting to school, as the survey indicates that no child needs to walk to get school.

In the Greenville City School system, 621 school children are walking in hazardous conditions to get to school, and would require eight additional buses, at a cost of $100,000, and a yearly expenditure of $36,373 to operate the buses. The survey indicates that this provision should be made.

In the Martin County LEA, there are 587 school children walking in hazardous conditions to get to school, and the survey indicates that an initial expenditure of $50,000, and a yearly cost of operation of $18,187 for four additional buses be made for the LEA.

The Washington LEA school children walk a total of 270 miles in hazardous conditions to get to school, and the survey indicated that seven additional buses would be needed to provide for these children. The initial cost of these buses would be $94,500 and would cost $31,827 a year to operate them.

Unions Organizing Food Chain Boycott

By The Associated Press

A boycott of the Winn-Dixie chain, which one labor official has called "the J.P. Stevens of the grocery industry," is being organized by labor leaders in North Carolina and South Carolina.

The planned boycott is part of a nationwide action against the giant Southeastern food store chain, approved recently by the national AFL-CIO Labor Council.

James Adler, chairman of the AFL-CIO's South Carolina Labor Council, compared Winn-Dixie to J.P. Stevens, a huge Greenville-based textile firm that has developed a national reputation for fighting unionism.

Adler says the boycott will become effective as soon as the executive board of the council can meet and get the boycott machinery working.

Winn-Dixie has 107 stores in South Carolina.

In North Carolina, state AFL-CIO president Wilbur Hobby said the chain has a long record of anti-labor activity. He added the state's boycott should get into full swing early next year.

James Davis, corporate chairman of the grocery chain, which is based in Jacksonville, Fla., said that his workers are happy and that half of them own company stock. Davis said he feels the wages of Winn-Dixie workers are comparable to those paid according to union scales.

Labor officials in both states indicated some Winn-Dixie stores will be picketed, but in most places labor representatives will hand out leaflets describing their problems and urging a consumer boycott.

Funding Has Board OK

Pitt and Greene county schools have been approved for funding of a community schools project by the State Board of Education.

The Community Schools Act was a result of legislation enacted by the 1977 General Assembly for the purpose of encouraging greater community involvement in the public schools and greater community use of public school facilities. The General Assembly appropriated $1,250,678 for 1977-78 and $1,251,748 for 1978-79 to fund these projects.

Selected school systems are required by the Act to establish a community schools advisory council, develop local policies, rules, regulations and plans for increased community involvement in public schools and develop policies, rules and regulations for increased use of public school facilities.

The primary expenditures of community schools funds will be for the employment of a community schools coordinator and related expenditures.

In the winter the islanders can travel the 15-mile length of their island and read, with a certain smugness, the names on the boarded-up cottages of the summer residents, names somehow revealing of what an off-islander expects of Nantucket: Heart's Ease, Whiteaway, Keepsake, Sea Breeze, Sunny Cliffs.

They sound so ... temporary. The more so in the winter, when the message this tough little island sends back across the icy waters to the mainland is ... durability.

For all its ice-bound remoteness, the feeling on Nantucket Island in the winter is of abiding security.

The whalers who put out from here a century ago, two centuries ago, sailed all the seas of the planet. The place they picked to return to after every voyage, the place to spend the winter, was Nantucket. They knew its secret.

Some Vietnam Refugees Find American Dream

By PETER ARNETT
AP Special Correspondent
IRISH BAYOU, La. (AP) — Once he was one of Dr. Tom Dooley's "children of fear," snatched from his North Vietnamese fishing village by the American medical missionary as the Communists took over in 1954.

He was shipped in a U.S. Navy boat to safer haven in South Vietnam.

Twenty years later an adult

Nguyen Duc Doan was fleeing again, picked up at sea from his 90-foot fishing boat by a U.S. Navy ship and with thousands of others, sent first to the Philippines and then to the United States.

Today the stocky 30-year-old Doan still spends much of his time at sea, trawling the rich shrimp waters off the coast of Louisiana in a 30-foot boat he built last year with his own hands.

With the average of $1,000 he makes shrimping each month, Doan has started to live the American dream, driving to vacations in Florida and Washington, D.C., heaping gifts of clothes and toys on his two children, both born in the United States, and putting some money aside in a savings account.

He is one of nearly 2,500 Vietnamese, mostly Catholics, who have almost taken over a housing development in New Orleans' Algiers section and transformed it into the village of "Hung Dao," the name of a legendary Vietnamese emperor.

At first it looks like any other middle-class development with its landscaped lawns and neat bungalows.

But the sign that says "be-ware of children playing" is written in Vietnamese. Lots of cars are parked at curbside and on lawns, an average of two to every housing unit. Pasted in house windows are signs reading "hot loc," barbershop, or "von toc," beauty salon, and others meaning grocery store and repair shop.

Unlike their home village in Vietnam, there is no church as yet at Hung Dao. Mass is said each morning at a small office run by local Catholics. Sunday services are held in a nearby open field, and are followed by a noisy parade of the participants around the streets.

Christmas is a major celebration among the Catholic Vietnamese in Louisiana. "I pray at mass four times every week to thank God for what he gave me here," said fisherman Doan, "but at Christmastime I make ever greater thanks."

Most homes at Hung Dao have posters of Santa Claus on their windows and scrawled "season's greetings." Inside several homes a reporter visited there were resplendent trees, all surrounded by neatly wrapped presents. Tran Huong, Doan's baby daughter, will get a cloth doll nearly as tall as her mother.

Doan paid $6,500 for the materials and engine of his shrimp boat. He works it with an assistant. He says he gets along fine with the American fishermen, but has no American friends.

"I live with my own people, and we are all happy here," he said.

Buddhist flags fly overhead. It is to this room that Sam retreats to meditate with Vietnamese friends from other New Jersey communities.

He is also a strict parent in the traditional Vietnamese sense. His word is law, befitting a former police captain in the coastal resort of Vung Tau. And the word is no presents. "We are refugees, and we pay the rent first," he said. "And my children are not spoiled. Vietnamese kids are not like Americans. They understand."

The Sam children have their own style of understanding. Huong's audacity to go direct to Santa is backed up in spirit by her nine siblings who spill all over the narrow three-story wooden frame house at 46 Cottage Street. Huong asked for the "Baby Burp" doll she saw advertised on TV. Her sister, Hai, 9, wants a knitting set. Baseball-playing Minh, 12, wants a bat and ball.

The Americanization of the Sam children goes beyond Christmastime. The five boys aged between 11 and 18 attend Jersey City schools. All have had their share of fistfights and run-ins with other youths testing this lone Vietnamese family in the community.

The family had an unfortunate experience with private enterprise when their first sponsor at Island Pond, Vt., in 1975 worked the parents and the older children in his restaurant from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. six days a week for room, board and $70 a week.

In Jersey City in the shadows of Manhattan's skyscrapers across the Hudson River, the Sams try to survive the best way they can, as a close-knit family unit.

When asked what they would do Christmas Day, Son, said, "We will probably just sing Vietnamese songs while I strum on my guitar."

But the kids have hopes for next year. As a concession to the new American culture, Sam allowed his children to place a tiny plastic Christmas tree in his Buddhist shrine.

PROUD OWNER — Nguyen Duc Doan poses in front of the 30-foot shrimp boat at Irish Bayou, La., that he built with his own hands and now uses to earn about $1,000 a month. The fisherman and his family first escaped from North Vietnam and then from South Vietnam to settle in Louisiana. (AP Laserphoto)

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

EDITOR'S NOTE — For many of the 140,000 Vietnamese refugees now living in the United States, Christmas 1977 is a time of rejoicing, but for some of them it is just another day. In these two reports, Associated Press Special Correspondent Peter Arnett, who covered Vietnam at war and in peace, looks at two refugee families living in the United States, one successful, the other poor.

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (AP) — The 10 children of Tfan Van Sam are resigned to going without presents again this Christmas.

Against the scornful advice of her teen-age brother, Son, 6-year-old Huong wrote a letter to Santa Claus. She knows Daddy does not believe in Christmas or in presents.

Sam, who came to the United States with thousands of other Vietnamese in 1975, is no Scrooge. He told a visiting reporter that more than half his $600 monthly wage as a radio

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

The most noticeable change that has come as a result of so many employed women—these days has been in the office Christmas party.

I overheard our neighbor, Fred, and my husband discussing it yesterday morning.

"What time did Kay get home last night?" asked my husband.

"It was after midnight. I was in bed. Kay had to take Mark home."

"Whose Mark?"

"You know, the little redhead secretary to Ms. Hamstein in Research and Development."

"You mean he had too much to drink?"

"Kay told me he was running around with a Cadillac hood ornament in his hand shouting, 'Anyone here lose a Kruger- rand?'"

"Disgusting. He's married, isn't he?"

"Sure. He probably should be at home with the kids. He doesn't have to work. It's an ego thing."

"I think office parties should be legally outlawed. What purpose do they serve?"

"Kay says it's a nice thing to do, but I don't know. Women turn into beasts when they've had a drink. Can you imagine those women executives plying all those struggling clerks with drinks they're not used to? Why, even Cecil Frampton was doing the hustle."

"You're kidding."

"Kay said he really has a nice figure. He just hides it under those leisure suits. By the end of the evening he was calling Ms. Hathcock... Gloria!"

"Get serious. Called the president of the company Gloria? I suppose Debbie Fransworth was cruising around. Marriage certainly hasn't settled her down."

"Kay says she's dating less but she left with a new office boy. She's old enough to be his mother."

"There's something about a successful woman who refuses to grow old. It's pathetic. They take advantage of a boy's ambition."

"It may be a way out of the mail room... but will she respect him in the morning?"

"That's beautiful. Where did you hear that?"

"From Kay. She read it on a restroom wall."

Unemployment Slightly Rose

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Employment Security Commission says unemployment in North Carolina rose to 4.8 percent in November, the first increase in four months.

There were 124,700 workers without jobs last month, 7,900 more than in October when unemployment was 4.5 percent. Last November's figure was 5.8 percent and the national rate last month was 6.9 percent.

Zenith Corp. Workers Face Layoffs

By CHRIS ROBERTS
Associated Press Writer
WATSONTOWN, Pa. (AP) — John L. Sullivan, this little company town's philosopher, leaned on the bar. "Hell, you can't even pay your taxes out of a dollar an hour," he said.

Everyone laughed, but it hurt. He was talking about the wages of people in far off lands who will take the jobs of some 1,800 American workers at the giant Zenith Radio Corp. plant here.

Come spring, the Zenith plant will shut down, and the town's only traffic jam, a mini-snarl that occurs each day at 3:30 p.m. when the day shift gets off, will have unraveled for the last time.

For years Zenith prided itself on employee craftsmanship in the fight by American television makers against Japanese imports. But recently it gave in, announcing it was closing plants at Sioux City, Iowa, and in this town of 2,500 and shifting production of component parts to plants in Taiwan and Mexico.

The price: 5,600 American jobs and the death of the last all-American television set and an estimated $75,000 a year in lost borough income and occupational privilege taxes for Watontown, a big chunk in an annual operating budget of only $600,000. Already some 500 workers have been let go here; the others will be idled by April.

"What are the old people going to do who worked there all their life?" asked Sullivan, a barkeep and landlord who rents rooms and apartments above his tavern. "After you're past 40 you don't pick up a job no more."

Jim Smith is four years past 40 with a wife, seven kids, two dogs, mortgage payments of $239-a-month on a new $25,000 house and a pension plan that is a measly three years old because of a change of ownership at the plant, where he has worked for 20 years.

He operates a belt sander in the cabinet making division. "It's no happy thing," he said.

Last Friday was opening day of Pennsylvania's deer season, and as is the custom in these parts, Zenith employees had a paid holiday.

Smith was out at the Limburger Rod and Gun Club near White Deer drinking beer with Possum Clemens and trying to forget Christmas.

"I don't intend to buy nothing," he said. "I always get my wife and my dad something but my dad's dead now. I'm just not going to get her nothing this year."

"Zenith come in here three years ago and promised a lot of things. They was going to make Watontown the hi-fi capital of the world. This is going to do a lot of people in."

Workers employed at the non-union Zenith plant more than six months are eligible for special federal help because they

Joan Little Awaits January Hearing

NEW YORK (AP) — Joan Little says she isn't pregnant but told her former fiancé in an effort to get money from him that she was going to have his baby.

In an interview with the Associated Press, Miss Little said she had "got kind of tired" of Yernell Muhammad and had told him they were through about a week before she was arrested in New York. She is in jail awaiting a Jan. 6 hearing on charges of assault, reckless endangerment and resisting arrest. Miss Little is also wanted in North Carolina, where she escaped Oct. 15 from the Women's Correctional Center in Raleigh. She had been serving a seven-year term for burglary. She became a national figure during the trial in which she was acquitted of murder in the slaying of a Beaufort County jailer whom she said she stabbed to death when he tried to assault her sexually. Miss Little said she decided to escape from prison after she had been removed from her work release job as a dental assistant. She also said she was unhappy about her assigned prison job, refusal of prison officials to let her attend business school and denial of her parole. Miss Little's parole was denied once, but she was expected to win parole in November until prison officials said she had not gone to her work release job every day as she claimed and confined her to the prison.

"They just kept harassing me and harrasing me," Miss Little said. "I said to myself, 'I have taken all I can take. Everything has gone bad. I have nothing else to lose.' I was in such a depressed mood, nothing really mattered to me."

She said she was angered over prison officials' refusal to believe that she had attended her work release job faithfully. Muhammad has said in interviews that he and Miss Little had sexual relations two or three times a week while she was out of prison on work release.

Muhammad said he believed Miss Little was pregnant and he was worried about her safety, so he tipped police to her whereabouts.

Miss Little said she would fight efforts to extradite her to North Carolina.

"I'd rather be dead," she said she told herself as she contemplated her escape. "I'd take my chances of their killing me first."

"I know they're going to be harassing me and they're going to provoke me to do something I wouldn't ordinarily do," she said. "I'm not trying to get out of doing time. I want to do it to get it over with."

Miss Little said she wanted "a new beginning" with more education and a job, perhaps as a prison counselor. She also wants to change her name.

"That name, 'Joan Little,' it kind of holds you back," she said. "It doesn't help to be remembered as a murderer."

Weather Frustrating Yuletide Mail Effort

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Bad weather in parts of the country is frustrating postal officials trying to get all Christmas mail delivered by Sunday.

"For mail that is in the system now, whether we get it delivered by Christmas Day depends in part on the weather. If winter storms delay transportation, then deliveries will be delayed," a Postal Service spokesman said Wednesday.

The biggest weather problem in recent days was the snowstorm that moved across the Midwest Tuesday and Wednesday, dumping 9 inches of snow on Chicago and closing O'Hare Airport.

Much of the mail that would normally go through O'Hare, a main transfer point for items moving cross country, has had to be re-routed, spokesman Lou Eberhardt said.

High winds in California have been another problem. In some places, with winds up to 80 miles an hour, carriers had to be called off their routes because of swirling dust, he said.

And, although the volume of holiday mail peaked a week ago, it is still heavy.

The biggest single day was last Thursday, when 491 million pieces were deposited into the mail system, of which 441 million were Christmas cards and letters, Eberhardt said.

Mail volume thus far in the Christmas season, the Postal Service's busiest time of year, is running at about the same level as in 1976, he said. "It looks like we are going to have about the same volume or a little higher," he said.

For mail that has not been deposited yet, the Postal Service says there is a chance it won't be delivered by Christmas Day, especially if it is mailed to a distant address.

"We'll do everything we can, but anybody who is still sending Christmas mail is taking a chance. It may get there by Christmas and it may not," Eberhardt said.

Farmers Vote A Tractorcade

JACKSON, N.C. (AP) — About 50 Northampton County farmers have voted to organize a tractor caravan on Interstate 95 to protest farm prices.

They also agreed to "slow down the flow of food to market" and to conduct a letter writing campaign to Congress.

Definite plans for the tractorcade were to be made at another meeting after Christmas.

CP&L Dividend Is Announced

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Carolina Power & Light Co. raised its quarterly dividend on common stock to 46 cents per share, up from 43 cents, payable Feb. 1, the first dividend increase since last year.

CP&L directors declared its usual dividends on preferred and preference stock, payable April 1.

Board chairman Shearon Harris said the firm was raising dividends to attract capital for its construction program.

NOTICE TO OWNERS OF PROPERTY IN PITT COUNTY

The listing of property for tax purposes in Pitt County will begin January 3, 1978, and will continue through January 31, 1978.

Any person, firm, corporation or organization owning property in this county as of January 1, 1978, whether real or personal, must list such property within the listing period or be subject to the penalties prescribed by North Carolina Law. Property must be listed in the township in which it is located.

Persons who requested to list by mail should receive their listing forms early in January. These must be completed and returned to the office of the Tax Supervisor before the deadline of January 31, 1978.

Bring your social security number and your motor vehicle registration cards with you when you come to list.

Owners and operators of parks or storage lots renting space for three or more house trailers or mobile homes are required by law to furnish the Tax Supervisor of the county in which the lot is located, the name of the owner and a description of each trailer or mobile home situated thereon. This list must be submitted by January 15 of each year. Owners and operators failing to comply with the law shall be liable to payment of tax in addition to a penalty of $250.

Persons having custody of taxable tangible personal property belonging to another firm or individual that is held for storage, sale, rent or any other business purpose shall furnish the Tax Supervisor a report of such property by January 15th or will be liable for the tax on the property plus a penalty of $250.

FOR A COMPLETE LIST OF LOCATIONS AND DATES FOR LISTING TAXES IN JANUARY, SEE OTHER AD IN THIS PAPER.

SCLC Asks Probe Into Use Of Federal Money

The U.S. Justice Department has been asked by the Southern Christian Leadership Conference to investigate the use of federal funds by the City of Greenville.

In a telegram to the Justice Department's Office of Civil Rights, SCLC field director Golden Frinks asked officials to "investigate the City of Greenville's use of federal funds to determine if there is misuse and what areas these funds are aiding all citizens, especially minorities and blacks."

The telegram specifically mentioned, "...all programs in education employment, health care, welfare housing, (and) LEAA (Law Enforcement Administration Act) funds to city, hospital and health units."

SCLC officials indicated they found what they considered discrepancies in the handling of federal money while investigating the case of Ceasar Corbett, a black policeman who is fighting city officials in U.S. Eastern District Court to keep his job. Corbett, a 27-year Police Department veteran was allegedly told to retire or be fired for allegedly sleeping on the job November 9. He has filed suit in U.S. District Court in an attempt to keep his job, but U.S. District Judge John Larkins yesterday dissolved "a temporary restraining order he issued December 8 which prevented the city from firing the officer."

Frinks said he believes, "a difference exists on racial lines as to job recruiting, hiring, compensation, training, promotions, upgrading and transfers and the policies of the City of Greenville in the use of federal funds."

City Manager James Caldwell, who said, "I think some people are trying to use this for their own personal reasons," indicated, "I do not think they (the Office of Civil Rights) would find anything," in an investigation.

"If they choose to come, that's fine with us," Caldwell continued. "We are always subject to being audited by LEAA and HUD (The Department of Housing and Urban Development) and other federal agencies."

Hoosiers Pull Another Upset

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Indiana's onetime college basketball giants are playing the role of giant-killers these days.

The newest victim of the Hoosiers is Alabama. "I'm really proud of this team," said Coach Bobby Knight after Wednesday night's 66-57 victory over the Crimson Tide.

Knight should be. Although no one thought it likely, the victory was Indiana's second in a week over a Top Twenty team. Before beating the 18th-ranked Alabamans, the Hoosiers had pulled off a 67-66 upset of Notre Dame, ranked No. 2 at the time.

That type of action wasn't really expected of Indiana because Knight has been rebuilding since his national championship team of two years ago.

"Wayne Radford played probably his greatest game at Indiana tonight," said Knight after watching the Hoosiers' inspirational leader score 24 points.

Indiana's victory wasn't the only surprise Wednesday night. The University of Detroit, the nation's No. 15 team, was stunned at home 103-74 by Michigan State.

Elsewhere, No. 9 Nevada-Las Vegas escaped with an 84-83 victory over Iowa in the second annual Rebel Roundup tournament; the 12th-ranked Cincinnati Bearcats walloped Austin Peay 81-67 and No. 20 Maryland whipped Army 99-77.

Radford scored five points during a nine-point streak that broke a 40-40 tie and put the Hoosiers on top for good.

Junior forward Greg Kelser scored a career-high 36 points and freshman sensation Earvin Johnson had 13 assists, 10 rebounds and 11 points as Michigan State overwhelmed Detroit.

Earl Evans' tip-in with two seconds remaining gave Nevada-Las Vegas its dramatic victory over Iowa. The Hawkeyes took an 84-83 lead over the Rebels with 13 seconds remaining on a foul shot by Ronnie Lester. UNLV's Tony Smith missed a jump shot with four seconds to go but Evans was there for the winning shot.

Pat Cummings scored 18 points and center Marcus Penny added 14 to power Cincinnati over Austin Peay.

Freshman Greg Manning scored a career-high 25 points to lead Maryland to a runaway victory over Army.

Elsewhere, Frank Johnson's 19 points led Wake Forest over Seattle 87-67; Miami of Ohio beat Purdue in overtime 84-80 as Bernard Newman pumped in 22 points; a 34-point performance by Keith McDonald boosted Utah State past Brigham Young 91-89; Herb Williams and Kelvin Ransey scored 16 points each to power Ohio State over West Virginia 89-80; Chubby Wells had 20 points to pace Clemson to a 94-61 victory over Canisius and Catholic University edged The Citadel 74-72 as Stan Cooper scored 19 points.

Also, LSU downed previously undefeated DePaul 68-67 as Jordy Hultberg hit for 18 points; Bob Roma and Frank Sowinski combined for 31 points to lead Princeton past Bowling Green 67-46; Carl McPipe's 20 points led Nebraska over Western Illinois 73-72 and Minnesota stopped South Florida 75-61 as Osborne Lockhart and Kevin McHale teamed for 41 points.

Two Rookie Coaches In 'Little Eight'

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

While bullies Michigan and Ohio State soon will be flexing their muscles in bowl games on television, a couple of rookie coaches in the Big Ten hope no big-shot high school senior will be watching.

And if anybody can convince a blue-chip football player to turn off his TV set, the people at Northwestern feel it's Rick Venturi and the folks at Wisconsin think it's Dave McClain.

Venturi and McClain are the newly appointed football coaches at two of the conference schools often included in the group known as the "Little Eight" to Michigan and Ohio State's Big Two. The Big Two has won or shared the conference title and gone to the Rose Bowl every year since 1968. (This year Michigan is going to the Rose Bowl while Ohio State is going to the Sugar Bowl.)

Venturi and McClain are both good coaches, but they also are good salesmen, which, more than anything, is the difference between winning and losing in college football today. The games are won in the trenches — the living rooms and kitchens of the college recruits. And they are often won because of a kind word to the prospect's mom or an honest talk with his dad.

"There are two things we have to do at Northwestern," said Venturi, a Wildcat alum who is returning to Evanston, Ill., after assistant coaching stints at Purdue and Illinois.

"First, we have to identify the student-athlete who really and truly is interested in getting a class degree. We graduate 95 percent of our athletes on time. That's a fact, a damn important fact."

"Northwestern is the only private school in the Big Ten. It has a small student body of 6,000, there's metro exposure in being near Chicago and we play in the tough Big Ten."

"Once we've identified these people, we have to show them we have a helluva product. Marketing, that's the key. It's my job and the job of my coaches to take this information to their homes on a personal level.

"Personal sales involves personal relationships. You can't just sit in your office in Evanston and expect it all to happen."

McClain, who successfully built the football program at Ball State, also thinks he has the better mousetrap to sell.

"We have a lot to sell a young man," said McClain. "We have a great stadium and have fantastic fan support. We rank fifth in the nation in attendance.

"We're looking for the darn good student with top-notch character. We're going to sell academics here. We're going after the super student who wants to play big-time football. "How well we recruit will be the answer. It always comes down to recruiting. It's like sales. When you have a great thing to sell, you have to go out there and sell it."

This past season Wisconsin was 5-6 while Northwestern was 1-10. Wisconsin last went to a bowl in 1963, Northwestern in 1949. Ohio State and Michigan can just about promise their recruits a winter vacation in the sun and frequent national television exposure.

That's a hard act to beat, but the word "impossible" is not part of any pitchman's vocabulary.

Crowd Helps 76ers In Rally

By The Associated Press

The Philadelphia 76ers and their fans are a tough team to beat.

"The 76ers are powerful and the crowd just makes them better," says Phoenix guard Paul Westphal.

Urged on by their highly-vocal backers at The Spectrum, the inspired 76ers wiped out a 14-point Phoenix lead and came back to pull out a 125-119 National Basketball Association victory Wednesday night.

Afterwards, Philadelphia forward Joe Bryant gave an assist to the 76er crowd for the dramatic triumph.

"The fans motivated us, no doubt about it," said Bryant, who scored 14 of his 24 points in Philadelphia's fourth-quarter rally. "We had to play our hearts out to win this one. It seems other teams get up for us. The Suns move the ball so well. It was just a matter of picking our defense up."

Bryant, who had only two field goals but 10 free throws in the period, put Philadelphia ahead 121-119 by dropping in two from the foul line with 47 seconds remaining.

In the other NBA games, the Golden State Warriors beat the Boston Celtics 111-106; the Milwaukee Bucks routed the San Antonio Spurs 116-92; the Indiana Pacers whipped the Atlanta Hawks 109-98 and the Houston Rockets defeated the New Jersey Nets 103-93.

After Bryant's free throws gave the 76ers their lead in the last minute, the Suns turned the ball over when they were unable to shoot within 24 seconds. Doug Collins, who led the 76ers with 27 points, added two free throws and Lloyd Free scored on a dunk after Philadelphia got the ball back on a steal.

Warriors 111, Celtics 106
Rick Barry and Phil Smith combined for 74 points and Golden State held on to beat Boston. The Warriors almost lost a 31-point lead.

Barry hit for 42 points, and Smith added 32 as the Warriors broke a four-game losing streak and handed the Celtics a loss which made their road record 1-13 this season.

Bucks 116, Spurs 92
Milwaukee, blending pressure defense with Marques Johnson's 23 points, opened a 28-point second-quarter lead and rolled past San Antonio.

Pacers 109, Hawks 98
Ricky Sobers scored 22 points, leading a balanced Indiana offense that buried Atlanta. Six Pacers finished in double figures, including John Williamson with 19 and Dan Roundfield with 17, as Indiana rallied from eight points down late in the first quarter.

Rockets 103, Nets 93
Calvin Murphy scored 21 points and led a game-breaking stretch in the fourth quarter to help Houston beat New Jersey. Murphy scored eight of his team-leading point total as the Rockets broke away from a 75-75 tie in the fourth quarter with a 15-6 burst and they were never headed.

Tar Heels Return

University of North Carolina football coach Bill Dooley leaves the plane that brought home members and friends of the Tar Heel squad after their Liberty Bowl trip to Memphis. The Tar Heels lost the game to the University of Nebraska and Dooley now turns his sights to next season. (AP Laserphoto)

Dooley Looks To Next Year

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — With an 8-3-1 season and an Atlantic Coast Conference championship behind him, North Carolina football coach Bill Dooley already is looking ahead to next season.

And between now and next September, he has a few jobs to fill.

"Recruiting has already started, and of course it's our number-one priority right now," Dooley said Wednesday as the Tar Heels returned from Memphis after their 21-17 loss to Nebraska in the Liberty Bowl.

"We've got a young team," he continued. "We've played a lot of freshman this year, and I imagine we'll do the same next year."

North Carolina's 1977 performance will not hurt Dooley's recruiting efforts. The Tar Heels lost only to Kentucky, Texas Tech, and Nebraska — and the three defeats were by a total of 11 points.

"We played well all season," Dooley said. "Both the offense and the defense had their moments. Nobody overpowered us."

And Dooley made it clear he included Nebraska in that last statement.

"We lost because of a bad last quarter," the coach said, referring to Tar Heel errors that helped set up the Cornhuskers' come-from-behind victory.

"But we proved we could play with Nebraska," he added. "We could have beat them. And we should have beat them."

Four players were injured Monday night, and two of them — freshman running sensation Amos Lawrence and defensive tackle Rod Broadway — had to leave the game. But Dooley said he was "not going to blame injuries" for the loss.

"I was proud of our team all season and I was proud of them in the bowl game," he said, allowing that he was "disappointed, of course" by the outcome.

Broadway was limping noticeably Wednesday as about 35 players, along with a contingent of Carolina fans, came off a chartered plane and boarded buses for Chapel Hill. Some team members, including Lawrence, flew home Tuesday.

Dooley said Broadway's knee injury was serious enough that it would have kept him out of action for three to four weeks. But none of the injured players will require surgery, Dooley said.

Gophers Like Grits; Want H of F Victory

By HOYT HARWELL

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — If Minnesota's Golden Gophers adapt to Maryland's football team as quickly as they did to grits, the Terrapins will have their hands full in the first Hall of Fame Classic tonight.

"When they came in Sunday, they didn't know about grits," said Mrs. Mattie Lavender, who serves meals at the team hotel. "I told them. They came back three or four times. They must have eaten four gallons."

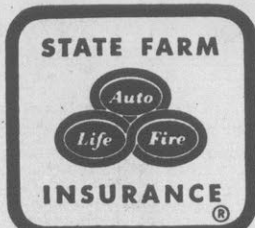

Nevertheless, Coach Jerry Claiborne's Terrapins are a one touchdown favorite over the grit-fed Gophers in the 8 p.m. EST game.

Both teams carry 7-4 records into the game, which marks Maryland's fifth straight post-season bowl but the first for Minnesota since 1962.

"That's something Maryland has going for it," Coach Cal Stoll of Minnesota said. "For many of their players, it will be the third or fourth post-season game. But I think we have enough leadership on this team that they'll know how to handle it."

ACC Dominating Foes

By The Associated Press

Atlantic Coast Conference basketball teams have outscored, outrebounded and outshot their non-conference opponents so far this year, which helps explain why they had won 35 out of 39 games against outsiders as of this week.

Season statistics show ACC teams all shooting better than 50 percent from the floor and 65 percent from the foul line, out-scoring foes by a double-figure margin.

Maryland leads the ACC in scoring with 95.3 points per game. Clemson has 94.9. The Terps also lead rebounding with 51.1 per game.

Virginia is league leader in scoring defense and free throw percentage at 63.6 points per game and 79.5 percent respectively. Duke is tops in field goal percentage at 57.1 percent. Clemson has the highest scoring margin against its adversaries with 23 points per game.

Wednesday's games:

Maryland 99, Army 77

It was freshman Greg Manning's night to shine. He pumped in 25 points to lead the 20th-ranked Terps to their seventh victory against one loss.

A seven-point play was the key. The Cadets trailed 61-54 when Albert King scored a field goal and got two free throws for a deliberate foul.

He sank one, before the Army bench was assessed two technical fouls for disputing the previous call. Manning sank them both. Larry Gibson added a field goal because the Terps retained possession after the technicals.

Clemson 94, Canisius 61

Canisius managed to take a 26-25 lead in the first half, but once the Tigers got turned on the game was no contest. They scored 21 of the next 23 points and ended the period with a 46-28 lead.

Clemson is now 8-1 for the season. There were four Tigers in double figures, led by substitute forward Chubby Wells, who had 20.

Wake Forest 85, Seattle 67

The Deacons had little trouble dispatching Seattle. Frank Johnson had 19 points, to pace the winners, and center Larry Harrison chipped in 18.

Harrison and Rod Griffin did most of the rebounding on both ends of the court, especially in the first half when Wake used its fast break to take a 47-30 edge.

The Chieftains couldn't get in for the close shots, and they couldn't seem to find the range from outside. The Deacons are now 6-2.

Smith Answers Cincy's Catlett

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina basketball Coach Dean Smith lashed back Wednesday at Cincinnati Coach Gale Catlett, quoted earlier as saying bad calls by the referees were responsible for his team's 67-59 loss to Carolina.

"This is not the first time coach Catlett has used the officials as an excuse for a loss. I remember reading in the last two years where he blamed his team's loss at Louisville on officiating," Smith said in a response released Wednesday night.

Smith said he also saw Catlett quoted in a national magazine as saying foreign officials kept his Metro-Seven all-stars from winning in an International Cup game. "He made that statement after one of their losses, a 20 or 30-point defeat to Italy," Smith said.

Catlett was reportedly heard to curse Smith during the game by television viewers in Cincinnati. A local station there had wired the Cincinnati coach for sound during the telecast.

Evidently, he was upset about the technical foul called on his team late in the game. Apparently, he was trying to blast the official to cover up his own mistake of not forcing action," Smith said.

North Carolina and Cincinnati were tied at 57 with 4:59 remaining when the Bearcats were charged with a technical. Smith said Catlett was arguing with an official about the call when he approached the discussion, and Catlett then cursed Smith.

Smith said there was another confrontation when Catlett "complained about a television timeout."

"I very calmly said to him, 'Gale, it was your own television station, acting through your athletic department, that asked for the two timeouts,'" Smith said.

Smith also said Catlett had been warned by officials to come out after the North Carolina players that had slowed down the game. "Coach Catlett obviously forgot about the earlier warning," he said. "In fact, his own television tape had him telling his team during that particular timeout to lay back until the officials made them come play."

Rampants Qualify For State; Look For Successful Season

By WOODY PEELE

Reflector Sports Editor

With one meet already behind them, the Rose High School boys' swimming team has already seen several of their number qualify for this year's state championship meet.

And Coach Sam Collier feels that there can be several others before the season comes to an end in March.

"Our workouts have been real good so far," Collier said. "Our first meet was against Greensboro Grimsley, which won the state meet last year, and we didn't do too well there, except for the qualifying times."

But competition the likes of Grimsley won't be on the schedule all the time, and Collier is looking for a winning season for the Rampants this winter.

Top men on the team are Lance Timmons and John Bennett. "Both of them have a real good shot at placing high in the state meet this year," the coach said.

With 15 swimmers on the team this year, the Rampants have more depth than usual, and Collier feels that this is a strong point for the team. "Most of these boys have been swimming for most of their lives, so they have a real good background in it. We've been getting in a lot of good practices, and we're building a lot of stamina, and hopefully a lot of motivation."

Collier feels that Timmons is a good bet to place in the 200 freestyle, and the 100 freestyle, both of which he qualified for during the Grimsley meet. Bennett qualified in the 50 and 500 yard freestyles. Both also were a part of the medley relay team that also qualified.

Steve Woodward has also qualified in the 500 freestyle while John and Kevin Richards both are set for the 100-yard butterfly event.

"Timmons also has a good chance to qualify in the 200 individual medley before the season is over," Collier noted.

Timmons and Steve Lawler look to be the top people in the 200-yard freestyle, while Stuart Long and David Johnson usually will handle the 200-yard individual medley.

Bennett, Eric Downes and Billy Hamblen are the top swimmers in the 50-yard freestyle, with the Richardses in the 200 butterfly.

Timmons, Don McGlohon and Roger Clemons pace the way in the 100-yard freestyle, while Bennett and Woodward are joined by Greg Churchill and Lawler in the 500-yard freestyle.

Kevin Richards and Long lead the 100-yard backstroke event for Rose, while McGlohon and Woodward are the 100-yard breaststroke leaders. The Richardses also handle the 100 butterfly.

Tony Dickens and Chris Knight will handle the diving.

"I definitely feel we can have a winning record," Collier said. "We have one more meet with Grimsley, and that will be a tough one, but we have good depth and the ability to win the others."

Rose last year finished sixth in the state, and this season Collier feels that the boys have a good shot at winding up in the top five. "We're shooting for the top three," he added.

Vikes Take 3 From Wildcats

HOLLYWOOD — D. H. Conley won all three games against West Edgecombe last night, taking a 56-52 overtime win in the junior varsity game, a 39-31 win in the girl's game and an 82-72 win in the boy's game.

In the girl's game, the Valkyries held a slim 5-4 lead at the end of the first quarter, but extended that to 16-10 at halftime. They added to that margin during the third period and then played evenly during the fourth quarter.

Conley was led by Annie Wooten with nine points, while West Edgecombe's Harriet McNeil led all scorers with 11.

In the boy's game, the Vikings ran out to a big lead and then had to hold off the hot-shooting Wildcats in the final period.

Conley took a 21-10 first quarter lead and stretched it to 45-28 at halftime.

The Wildcats cut into that margin in the third period and then began to hit from the outside in the final quarter. Conley made nine of 11 free throws in the final period to hold off the rally.

Ben Pope led all scorers with 30 points for West Edgecombe, while teammate Wayne Gray added 12 and Dennis Batts added 10. Al Tyson and Darryl Thompson each scored 21 for Conley. Shawn Little hit 12 and Ricky Rountree 10 for the Vikings.

Both the Conley girl's and boy's teams are now 6-1 for the season. The boys will play in the Rose Holiday Tournament next Wednesday and Thursday nights.

ASU Mormon QB Will Play Sunday

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Sunday's Fiesta Bowl battle with Penn State is only one battle that day for Arizona State quarterback Fred Mortensen.

The contest, to be played Christmas Day, also represents a conflict in his Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints beliefs and the personal conflicts he has endured the past three years as an Arizona State quarterback.

Playing in the post-season contest was Mortensen's decision. Being the starting quarterback — almost a certainty due to Dennis Sproul's ailing back — is a matter of fortunate circumstances.

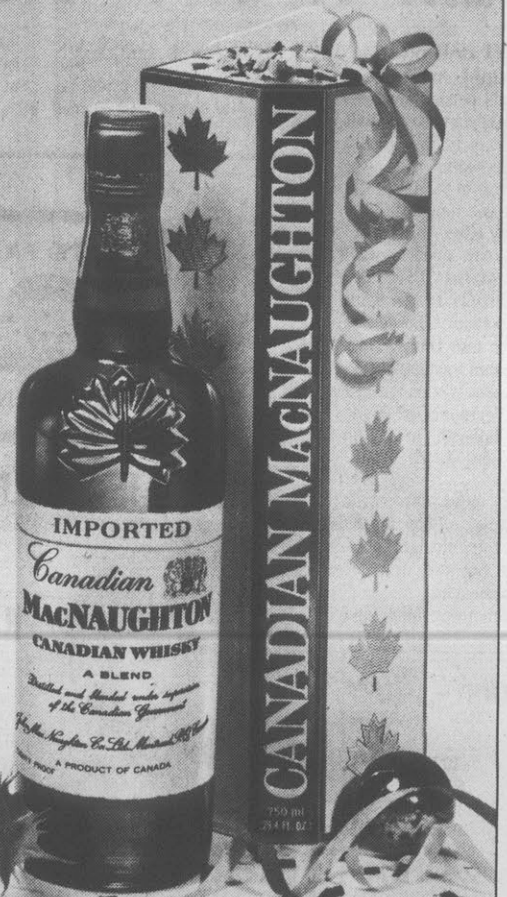

"I decided at the start of the season that I'm a part of this team, and if we go to the Fiesta Bowl, I'll play," Mortensen said.

At the start of the season Brigham Young announced if it won the Western Athletic Conference title, it would turn down its right to be the host team on religious grounds. BYU finished the season in a tie with Arizona State for the WAC title.

"It's not just any other day," said Mortensen. "I'd prefer not to play on Sunday; it comes down to that. But we don't always have things the way we want them."

NORTH CAROLINA'S LOSS to Nebraska in Monday night's Liberty Bowl came in a most disappointing fashion — with victory in seemingly easy reach, the Tar Heels literally gave the game away in the fourth quarter.

The Christmas spirit apparently came early to the team from Chapel Hill, which gave the ball up on turnovers three times in the game's final period, giving the Cornhuskers the opportunity to move from a 17-7 deficit to a 21-17 victory.

Carolina showed a surprising amount of offense against Nebraska, and after going into the locker room at halftime with a 14-7 lead, the Tar Heels came back out and put three third-quarter points on the board for a 17-7 lead.

Things were really going well in the opening moments of the fourth quarter. The Heels were driving for a touchdown that could have iced the game when disaster struck. Quarterback Matt Kupec was rolling to his left, looking for a wide-open Doug Paschal in the flat, but his pass was tipped by Lee Kunz and intercepted by Barney Cotton for Nebraska. The Huskers easily drove in for the second TD of the game, with Curtis Craig catching a pass from Randy Garcia for their final 10 yards.

The Tar Heels set up Nebraska's go-ahead touchdown with a Kupec fumble later in the fourth period. Carolina had recovered a fumbled punt at the Nebraska 26, but failed to move the ball in three plays. Kupec faded back to pass on fourth down and lost the ball after he pumped under a big rush. The Cornhuskers recovered all the way back at the UNC 43 and quickly pushed the ball in.

The touchdown play was a 23-yard Garcia pass to a streaking Tim Smith.

Yet another Kupec fumble took Carolina completely out of the game with just over a minute remaining.

DESPITE THE LOSS, the Tar Heels played excellent football for three quarters. The defensive front held up well, even under the pressure of the turnovers. Nebraska's heralded tailback I. M. Hipp was held to just 52 yards, well below his average.

In addition, the Carolina offense was surprisingly strong, despite the loss of Amos Lawrence with an ankle injury in the second quarter. The offensive unit had been criticized many times during the regular season even with the running of Lawrence, who gained over 1,000 yards this, his freshman season. When he went out with the score tied at 7-7, it seemed a good possibility that UNC would not be able to score again.

Lawrence was replaced by Paschal, who two years ago led Rose High School to a state championship, and the husky tailback responded admirably. He was the leading rusher in the game with 77 yards on 16 carries and had a couple of key receptions. His play was instrumental in Carolina's last two scoring drives.

The only problem for the Heels, besides the key turnovers, was pass defense. The Huskers passed for well over 100 yards, including the two TD tosses. On both scoring plays, the receivers were wide open. There was not a Carolina defender within 15 yards of Craig, who caught the ball in the end zone, while Smith blew by the Tar Heel defensive back in man-to-man coverage and was five yards behind him when he caught the ball.

THE TAR HEELS PROVED one thing, however: a team from the Atlantic Coast Conference can stay on the field with a team from the Big Eight. Had Carolina played as flawlessly in the final period as it did in the preceding three, the Heels could very well have defeated the Cornhuskers handily.

Basketball Pollsters Disagree
The voters in the Associated Press and United Press International basketball polls apparently don't agree with Cincinnati coach Gale Catlett.

Catlett, angry over North Carolina's use of the four corners offense in the last seven minutes to defeat his Bearcats 67-59 last Saturday, said, "The best team didn't win. If Carolina had played ball in the last seven minutes, instead of the corners, we would have won."

But the pollsters didn't concur with Catlett's opinion. When the AP and UPI polls came out this week, the Tar Heels, who had been ranked fifth going into the game, jumped up third, while Cincinnati, which had been sixth, fell two 12th.

USC Without Center

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Southern California will play without its top rebounder and second-leading scorer tonight when the Trojans challenge host South Carolina in the first round of the fourth annual Carolina Classic.

Freshman center Cliff Robinson, averaging 15 points and nine rebounds, was not with the team when it left Los Angeles Wednesday for the four-team tournament at Columbia, S.C. The 6-foot-9 center has the flu.

San Diego May Get Bowl

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego County has been asked to put up $25,000 along with $100,000 approved in city hotel funds to help stage a football bowl game here every December.

A delegation plans to carry the plan to the Special Events Committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association meeting Jan. 10 in Atlanta.

Find Broken Dam Poorly Maintained, Inspected

ATLANTA (AP) — The earth dam that ruptured near Toccoa on Nov. 6, unleashing a 30-foot wall of water that killed 39 people, had not been properly inspected or maintained, a federal investigative board says.

The board reported Wednesday that several factors contributed to the disaster, but said it was unable to blame the failure on any single cause.

The dam, which backed up a 40-acre lake above scenic Toccoa Falls, burst early in the morning of Nov. 6, sending tons of water cascading down the 186-foot high falls and through the sleeping dormitories and trailers of Toccoa Falls Institute, a small Bible college at the foot of the falls.

Robert L. Crisp Jr., who chaired a four-member federal investigating board, said the study revealed there had been seepage at the base of the dam for several years, an unrepaired landslide on the downstream side of the dam and vegetation-choked spillways at the crest.

All the problems were either undetected by inspection or were left unattended, the panel concluded.

Crisp said the board was not charged with placing blame, but added, "I think a proper inspection would have indicated there was a problem with the dam."

Most of the disaster's victims were students, faculty members or their relatives. The school had an enrollment of about 425 students from around the country.

Although a school official, vice president F. R. Handson, made a visual inspection of the dam several days before it collapsed, Crisp told reporters

Wednesday he did not consider that a proper inspection.

The 38-foot-high dam initially was begun in 1899 to generate hydroelectric power, but was expanded and perhaps partially rebuilt in the late 1930s, according to the report.

During the reconstruction phase, Crisp said, silt that had built up in the lake bed was not cleared away and the new portion of the dam was built on top of the unstable soil.

Among other things, the investigators said that water from the 40-acre lake could have worked its way along the outside of an unused spillway pipe enclosed within the dam.

eroding enough dirt to cause saturation and an eventual collapse.

The investigators also studied evidence of a small landslide which occurred in 1973 on the downstream face of the dam, and said a similar slide on the morning of Nov. 6 could have either weakened the entire structure or caused a breach at the dam's crest.

The investigators discounted the notion that the lake, swollen by rain which had fallen abundantly just before the disaster, had simply risen above the dam and chewed it away from the top.

A spokesman for the college,

Dr. Jim Grant, said he was "pleased with the professional and objective way" in which the report was compiled.

"Hindsight is 20-20 vision," he added, "and I think if we all had chances to do things over again we would do some things differently. But I really hope that a positive result of this is a strong dam safety and inspection law."

The board said there was evidence of a partial failure of the dam just prior to the disaster, even though several persons associated with the college inspected it about two hours before the failure and found it "as solid as a rock."

According to the board, there was evidence that the water level of the lake dropped about four feet some four hours before the failure, "in spite of continuing thunderstorms in the area and extensive inflow into the lake, which should have caused the lake to continue to rise."

"A number of observers reported seeing almost continual seepage on the downstream slope of the dam in the vicinity of the spillway pipe for some years prior to failure," the report continued.

"In addition, a 1973 photograph shows a relatively large embankment slide occurred on the downstream slope, which partially exposed a spillway drain pipe."

There were two spillway pipes embedded in the dam, neither of which was the main spillway at the time of the disaster. They had been installed to carry water to power generators. The report said those pipes were either partially or totally clogged by debris.

Norman Underwood, executive secretary for Gov. George Busbee, said that since the Toccoa tragedy, 187 dams in Georgia, including 84 "high risk" ones, have been inspected, and eight of them have been referred to their owners for maintenance. "We have a task force looking into legislation existing in other states, and I think we're in the final stages of having a recommendation for the Georgia legislature," he said.

Besides Crisp, who is a dam construction expert for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, members of the task force were William E. Fox of the National Weather Service; Robert C. Robison of the Soil Conservation Service; and Vernon B. Sauer of the U.S. Geological Survey.

The investigation was made at Busbee's request to President Carter.

Have Tip To Old Killing

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Parents who waited ten years to tell police what their child saw may have provided a key to the so-called Lost Colony murder case.

The State Bureau of Investigation says it is reopening its file on the murder of Brenda Joyce Holland, 19, who was supervising makeup for the case of "The Lost Colony" pageant in Dare County.

"We now have a chance at identifying a person, the best chance we've got," said SBI Director Haywood Starling.

Starling said the new information was "something that somebody saw. One child saw something and told his parents...and they just got around to telling us."

"We don't know who it was. We got some information an individual should have given to us nine years ago."

Miss Holland disappeared before dawn on July 1, 1967 after a date with a member of the cast of the pageant. Her badly bruised corpse was found six days later in Albemarle Sound.

She was with Daniel Barber of Goldsboro the night of the slaying. Barber said they went to a tavern, then for a stroll before returning to a cottage he shared with two other young men.

After a while, he said, he fell asleep in a chair and when he awoke later Miss Holland was gone.

Someone living nearby said they heard a scream in the night, but authorities say they haven't been able to determine where Miss Holland went after that.

Starling indicated the new evidence might place Miss Holland with someone closer to the time she was killed.

Re-Attach Man's Hand

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A South Carolina man whose hand was cut off in an industrial accident and then re-attached in an 11½-hour operation was listed in satisfactory condition Wednesday at Duke University hospital here.

Frank Gaskin Jr., 26, of Greenwood, was flown to Duke after his right hand was almost completely severed at the wrist Tuesday at Abney Mills' Grendel plant.

The accident occurred while Gaskin was operating a waste machine in the card room, plant manager Jim Brabham said.

Brabham said Gaskin was flown from Self Memorial Hospital in Greenwood to Duke by a plane chartered by Abney. A Self Memorial nurse accompanied the flight.

Brabham said the Duke surgical team described the operation as "successful." He said they had "high hopes" of saving the hand, because the surgery was performed within 12 hours of the accident and the hand was not mangled.

The Grendel plant was within 10,000 man-hours of achieving three million man-hours without a lost-time accident.

Thefts Will Spoil The Yule Season For Many

This holiday season will be a sad one for some Pitt Countians because they will be "ripped off" by a burglar or other thief, according to Pitt County Sheriff Department Crime Prevention Officer Keith Knox.

The Pitt County Sheriff Department conducts an average of 64 investigations per month dealing with the crimes, burglary and larceny, Knox said.

Some homes in this county, Knox said, are secured with locks that even a 10-year-old could easily jimmy or force open. Others could easily be entered by breaking a glass near the lock and reaching inside to unlock it. And some people, he said, do not even lock their doors.

Windows are also a target when they have no locks or when they have ones that can be slipped or unlocked by breaking out a pane.

Some people advertise that they're not at home by leaving newspapers lying in their yards or announcing in the newspaper that they're visiting someone.

Many people, he said, cannot give an accurate description of what is missing to an investigating law enforcement officer. This hinders or makes impossible the recovery of stolen property, and thus gives the criminal a chance to strike again.

Knox said the individual can reduce or prevent becoming a victim through "the anticipation, recognition, and appraisal of a crime risk and the initiation of some action to reduce or remove that crime risk."

He suggested installing good deadbolt locks on doors and pinning windows; installation of an alarm system; the inventorying of valuables, listing make, model, serial number, value, and general description of each item.

One's N. C. License number should be engraved on each possession of value. Items that cannot be engraved should be photographed.

The Sheriff Department has personnel specially trained in crime prevention who are willing to assist anyone in making his or her property more theft-proof, Knox said. For further information, one should contact Knox at 758-9154 or 752-3312.

Rain Followed Wind Storm

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hurricane-force winds that spawned two days of destruction throughout California subsided and light rain began to turn the dust-covered debris into muddy wreckage today.

At least nine people died in accidents and fires caused by the wind storm Tuesday and Wednesday, authorities said.

The storm caused widespread crop damage, with damage to Southern California's avocado crop alone estimated at $5 million to $10 million, the California Avocado Advisory Council said.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. declared a state of emergency in the tiny San Joaquin Valley farming community of Arvin and in Humboldt County in Northern California.

Nearly 65,000 of Humboldt County's 100,000 homes had their electricity knocked out by giant redwoods that were sent crashing down on homes and power lines and across highways.

Two people were killed when one of the trees fell on their car.

The National Weather Service said the low-pressure system that started all the trouble by sucking air from a high-pressure area over Nevada was still hovering 300 miles off the Northern California coast. But a front was expected to move over the Los Angeles area today, spilling the last of the showers.

No Let-Up In Entertaining For Lonesome George

There Are Plenty Of Gifts For Dime

SEATTLE (AP) — Got a long Christmas shopping list and an empty wallet? Don't worry, there are plenty of gifts available for a dime or less.

Reporter Richard Buck of the Seattle Times bought 60 items for a total of $4.24. But he found that you can't just drop in any store.

"I can't understand anybody thinking like that," said one salesman when asked if his store had any items for less than a dime.

Among the budget items that Buck did find were:

- A tiny clamshell.
- A stick pin for mounting stones.
- A "donkey bead" good luck charm.
- A candy stick.
- A tree-shaped butter cookie.

- A one-foot piece of purple ribbon.

- A fishing bead.
- A one-ounce fishing weight.
- Seven golf tees.
- A pencil.
- A blue balloon.
- A lollipop with bubble-gum filling.
- A 10-hour candle.
- A box of 24 birthday-cake candles.
- A juke box rendition of "White Christmas."
- A postage-paid postcard.

- A juke box rendition of "White Christmas."

- A juke box rendition of "White Christmas."

- A juke box rendition of "White Christmas."

In one store, Buck bought a party popper, two replacement Christmas-light bulbs, a picture postcard and a green bow for a total of 47 cents.

When he returned to his car he found a $3 parking ticket. He had forgotten to put a dime in the meter.

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — About 44 years ago, Lonesome George Gobel was spending his first Christmas in show business, as a boy soprano on a country music show on station WLS in his hometown of Chicago.

"I did stuff like, 'I Heard the Bells on Christmas Day,'" he said, giving a sample right there in the restaurant near his home in suburban Encino. "There wasn't a dry eye in the house."

Gobel, now 58, went from singing to teaching people to fly B-26 bombers in World War II, then to comedy and singing in night clubs, then had his own hit comedy show on NBC from 1954 to 1957.

For the past 4½ years, he's been a regular on "Hollywood Squares" and a frequent visitor on "Tonight."

But in the 1960s, it almost seemed the man who joked about his wife, Alice, and had everyone saying, "Well, I'll be a dirty bird," had disappeared, had run into a lull of sorts in his career.

"No, there was no lull," he said. Not only did he pop up on shows run by Red Skelton and Dean Martin, among others, he said, he also spent a full year touring in the play, "The Odd Couple."

And, he added, he also worked extensively in night clubs and in an aspect of show business that gets little press attention but earned him much loot — conventions and "industrial" or trade shows.

"They're really very lucrative," he said. "You might be working a plumbers' convention somewhere one night, and the National Association of Grocers two nights later in Cleveland ... It may seem I was in a lull, yeah, but I was working more there than doing television, and making almost as much money."

Gobel, who recently celebrated his 35th year of marriage, and still sports the crew-cut that was his tenuous trademark in the 1950s, was asked how the recognition he gets from "Hollywood Squares" compares with those earlier days of stardom on NBC.

There's no comparison, he said, "not only with my old show, but also other (prime time) shows I've been on. There are more people who tell me they've seen me on 'Squares' than on anything else."

Gobel's production company once managed the career of Peter Marshall, host of "Squares." In time, he said, Marshall tried to get him to join the show's star panel, but he refused for several years.

"I said, 'It's not the money, I don't care about that, but I don't know how to do those things,'" the comedian recalled.

But finally, he said, when he was on "Tonight" with actress Karen Valentine, another "Squares" regular, she convinced him the mental demands of the game show were nothing to fear.

TAKING IT EASY — Comedian Tim Conway relaxes at the home of his parents in Chagrin Falls, Ohio, during a Christmas holiday visit. He has recently signed a contract to make a series of comedy films over the next four years for general audiences. Conway said in an interview, "There's room for good solid comedy where you actually go into a theater and laugh." — (AP Laserphoto)

Elvis Tribute

On January 8

NASHVILLE (AP) — Elvis Presley will be remembered in words and song by the artists who were influenced by him musically and worked with him in NBC's "Nashville Remembers Elvis on His Birthday."

The tribute will be aired on the anniversary of his 43rd birthday, Sunday, Jan. 8. Jimmy Dean will be the host, and among the guest stars will be Chuck Berry, Chubby Checker, Larry Gatlin, Carl Perkins, Charlie Rich, Conway Twitty and Dottie West.

Another Role For Sam Elliott

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sam Elliott, who recently starred in the NBC miniseries "Aspen," has been signed for "The Legacy."

He will star in the supernatural thriller with Katherine Ross. Richard Marquand will direct from a screenplay by Jimmy Sangster. Filming will begin in London in late January.

Enraged Hostages Beat Their Captor To Death

By ROMMEL CORRO
Associated Press Writer

SUBIC BAY, Philippines (AP) — Enraged by a Filipino gunman's threat to burn a pregnant woman, male hostages beat to death the man who held them captive for 48 hours inside a small bank

Lt. Cmdr. Michael Sherman, the base public affairs officer, said Navy officers negotiating with the gunman by telephone told him today: "If you're not going to give us any hostages,

Although the bank is just inside the main gate of the base, 50 miles northwest of Manila, it is operated by the Prudential Bank and Trust Co. for the benefit of Filipinos employed on the base, and no U.S. Navy funds are deposited there. American personnel use it chiefly to exchange dollars for pesos, and the vault was believed to contain about $130,000 in local currency.

Armed with a .38-caliber revolver, the man entered the bank Tuesday afternoon and ordered the manager to telephone a Marine guard at the base gate and tell him the bank was being robbed.

A contingent of Marines and Filipino base security men set up a cordon around the bank along with Philippine soldiers and local police.

The man first demanded to talk with Rear Adm. Huntington Hardisty, who took command of the base last week, then changed his mind and asked for a helicopter to take him away, but he did not give his destination. Sherman said.

The gunman set three deadlines Wednesday for the Navy to provide him a helicopter in exchange for hostages. The chopper was sent in to meet each deadline, but each time the man refused to free any captives, apparently because the aircraft was landing more than 100 yards from the bank.

"He threatened to blow up the bank. He claimed he had a hand grenade and a time bomb," the spokesman said. However, no explosives were found.

Offering Course In First Aid

Pitt Technical Institute will offer a 12-hour course in Basic Multi-Media First Aid beginning at 7 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 5.

The class will meet from 7-10 p.m. for three additional sessions on Jan. 18, 23, and 24.

Satisfactory completion of this course meets the First Aid requirements of Pitt County American Red Cross and the Occupational Safety and Health Act.

There is a $5 tuition fee. Books can be purchased the first session for $4.60. For further information, visit the Office of Continuing Education at Pitt Technical Institute or telephone 756-3130, ext. 238 or 266.

Says Money Pinch Felt

WASHINGTON (AP) — The numbers of married U.S. soldiers are increasing and so are their financial problems, the Army's chief of staff says.

Gen. Bernard Rogers estimated Wednesday that 50 to 80 percent of the young married enlisted soldiers are losing the battle against high rents and other costs.

He said one way to solve the problem is regional allowances for high-cost areas, a system used for blue collar federal workers.

That system features matching federal salaries with those of local craft jobs in the private sector.

Rogers told a presidential commission that about one-third of the 430,000 Army personnel in the lower four ranks now are married. This would mean between 70,000 and 112,000 are in financial difficulties.

Marine Gen. Louis Wilso and Air Force Gen. David C. Jones joined Rogers in opposing reduction of military benefits such as early retirement options and commissary privileges.

Spendthrift's Habit Makes For Unique Museum

By TOM MADDEN
FRANKSTOWN, Miss. (UPI) — Gray-haired and bearded James Franks, peddler, mechanic, junkman, politician, curator, craftsman and actor, has never put much stock in saving money — what little he's accumulated during his 67 years he's always spent.

"The way I spend money I ought to be a purchasing agent for the government," Franks said from this tiny Prentiss County community named for his father. "Money has never been important to me, it's what money buys that I like."

Franks, dressed in blue denim overalls and sporting a flannel shirt, occupies his retirement time as curator of his own museum — the latest in a long line of occupations for the "Mississippi born and raised" entrepreneur.

"It (the museum) started off by me buying junk. I would buy something and my wife would fuss. I'd get a few more bucks and buy something else and my wife would continue to fuss. My wife calls it junk. Other people call it antiques," he said, indexing his mind for when the collection process started. "I can't really remember when I started collecting the stuff. But, I have just never thrown anything away."

The museum rests on the edge of Highway 45 between Booneville and Tupelo and contains a wide assortment of items, ranging from a collection of classic cars to a set of early washing machines.

"As long as it didn't eat I like it," Franks said. "You name it and I probably got it."

Among Franks' most cherished items is a restored 1915 Buick with a center-door, a 1919 Model-T Ford, a doctor's buggy and a black funeral hearse complete with its own casket.

The collection also includes a 1923 school bus, more than 50 gasoline-powered engines, a slave-labor threshing machine and a butter churn equipped with its own fan to keep the flies away.

"I had a store next to my daddy's when I was six years old. I fixed about everything," the rosy faced, heavy set man said. "People back then didn't always have money. I've taken ducks, geese, tobacco and even some rabbits for pay."

But life hasn't always been peaceful for the father of three. "Went broke in 1959. Just sat around and did nothing so I decided to run for sheriff," he said, pausing to laugh at his one unsuccessful venture into politics. "I finished fourth from the top and fifth from the bottom. You take your pick."

"But, I learned a lot. Made a lot of friends and came away with an understanding of people. I thank the good Lord I'm not in as bad shape as some. People in this county are poor. I saw that while I was running," he said while talking in a more serious vein.

Franks said it was 1972 when "them New York movie folks" came into his museum and signed him up for a part in the film "Tomorrow."

"Them folks came in here and kept talking about a preacher," he said. "Before you know it they had me reading the script. They said I read beautifully and I got the part. Robert Duvall was the star and I had the second largest speaking part in the thing."

"I wasn't too interested in the movie until they told me they paid $120 per day and that sort of convinced me. I've seen the movie twice and over in Tupelo they had a big sign out front of the moviehouse with my name on it," he smiled. "In fact, I just recently took my wife over to Pontotoc to see it. They had my face covering the entire screen. Everytime I see the thing there is something different I catch."

Franks said although "them movie folks talk funny" after working in the film he came away with an admiration for the crew. "Them folks are like brickmasons, never seen a lazy brickmason, they just pick up things and go," he said while sitting on the front porch of a country store adjacent to his museum.

The storytelling Franks is currently renting some 70 antique items for an ABC-TV production of William Faulkner's "Roll of Thunder, Hear My Cry." He also had a speaking part in a government film shot in the area on poverty. "Never did see that one. I wonder if it ever came out?" he said.

Franks sells home-made molasses in the front of his museum, a thick brew he manufactures with the aid of a pair of mules, a cane grinder and a huge kettle.

"I few years ago I was about the only one in the area that knew how to make molasses," he said. "Now there are people all over the place making it. I'm glad to see young people taking an interest in this sort of thing. It is a dying art."

Franks said he plans to have a hog killing when it gets cold and maybe some more activities to get people out to his museum. "You need something that's moving, some activity to really get people interested in something today," he said.

The slow-talking Franks said, however, that whatever comes his way he sure isn't going to spend the rest of his life worrying.

"There's a lot more to life than money and getting rich," he said. "You just got to make the best there is with what you have. I'm doing what I like to do."

JAMES FRANKS is shown at his general store posing with 1930 Ford he bought for $100. "Money has never been important to me, it's what money buys that I like", he said. (UPI Photo)

Pediatrics Residency Program Is Accredited

ECU News Bureau
The ECU School of Medicine has reached another stage of development with the accreditation of its pediatrics residency program, the fourth residency program at the school to receive approval from the Liaison Committee on Graduate Medical Education.

Dr. Jon B. Tingelstad, chairman of the Department of Pediatrics, says the accreditation allows the department to accept 12 residents in the first, second and third year of residency beginning in July, 1978.

The program will provide residents with the training and experience needed to qualify for certification by the American Board of Pediatrics, according to Tingelstad.

The residents will receive their training in Pitt County Memorial Hospital, where the pediatric facilities include a 34-bassin newborn nursery and a 43-bed pediatric ward. A 33-bed neonatal care center is under construction and should be complete in May, 1978.

Other accredited residency programs at the School of Medicine include family practice, internal medicine and psychiatry.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2NT	Pass	3♥	Pass
3♦	Pass	4♦	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♠.

Jim Borin of Australia used deductive reasoning that would have made Sherlock Holmes proud to bring home this four spade contract at the recent World Team Championship in Manila.

North-South were using transfer bids over no trump openings, so North's three heart bid showed a spade suit. South dutifully transferred to three spades, and North raised to game.

At four of the six tables in play, the defense started in world championship style. West led a club, East won the ace and shifted to a low heart. Three of the four declarers played low. They were all defeated when West won the queen, returned a heart to the ace and scored a heart ruff for the defenders' fourth trick.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deal opening leaders!" Ag Schools Find More Interested In The Fields

By DAVE CARPENTER
Associated Press Writer

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Keeping 'em down on the farm, as the old saying goes, is less of a problem these days for agricultural schools.

State universities around the country are finding that an increasing number of students are enrolling in agriculture programs.

Newly released national statistics show there are 98,519 students of agriculture or related topics. That's up about 80 percent from the 1970 figure of 54,000, according to Dr. Louis M. Thompson, associate dean at Iowa State University's College of Agriculture at Ames.

Thompson compiles enrollment statistics for the National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges, which represents the major public universities in the country.

The deans say it's evidence of a growing interest in farming and "agribusiness."

"The growth has been just phenomenal," said Roy Kottman, dean of Ohio State University's agricultural school, the nation's third largest.

Ten years ago only 10 percent of agricultural school graduates went into farming, but that figure has now doubled, Thompson said.

Today, 30 percent of the graduates enter agribusiness — food production and related fields — where job opportunities remain good and starting pay averages $11,500. Twenty percent go to graduate school and the rest enter government service or some form of private employment.

Thompson attributes the boom over the last decade to several factors: the increase of women in formerly male-dominated programs, an increase in farm income, publicity given to the world food shortage and the increase in popularity of courses that deal with the environment.

The ISU dean was "overwhelmed" to discover that enrollment at his own school this fall was up 10.6 percent from 1976.

"Enrollment has actually been going up since 1964 across the country," he said. "Today it's the high number of women that are keeping the figures on the rise."

Women now account for more than 30 percent (31,000) of the total, he said, especially in classes in horticulture, floriculture and animal science, where they frequently outnumber the men.

"Until 1971, we had so few women in agriculture we didn't even keep records on just how many there were," said Harry Kunkel, dean of the agricultural school at Texas A&M, the nation's largest with 5,548 'ag' students.

And in the last six years the total of women has mushroomed from 128 to more than 1,500, according to Kunkel.

Ohio State's Kottman says the current rosy outlook for agricultural schools has its roots in the 1950s.

"Some of us got angry about people saying vocational agriculture was for the birds," he said, and launched a recruiting drive while promoting the image of agriculture.

But it wasn't until the mid-

1960s, says Kottman, that agriculture established itself as a respected area of study and was able to attract top students.

"They used to poke fun at us, but today we're drawing many of the best students," he says.

Agricultural students are also taking advantage of excellent job opportunities in the field.

Iowa State placement officer Roger Bruene said, "It appears there's a continuing recognition of the value of education for many phases of agribusiness, including those returning to farming."

Bruene said nine farmers showed up at the ISU campus one day recently to interview students for farm management positions.

An abundance of off-farm jobs, too, is drawing young men and women of urban backgrounds, said Kottman.

Ted Hartung, dean of the University of Nebraska's College of Agriculture, said 46 percent of this year's freshmen at his school come from towns with populations of 5,000 or more, a sizable increase over past years.

"It's a lifestyle that attracts young people," said Hartung.

Kottman sees the farmer as the beneficiary of the sudden surge of interest in agriculture because "with specialized people doing specialized jobs the farmer doesn't have to worry about all that."

The "flowering of agricultural science," he feels, was inevitable.

"People realize they can't take agriculture for granted any more."

Answer to yesterday's puzzle:

CRYPTOQUIP 12-22

PHRIAUIK LS FFXWIAUR MAU
SMXBPSHW BL KMRBM FWMHK

Yesterday's Cryptquip—SILVER TINSEL IS ADVISED AS MODERN TREE ADORNMENT.

© 1977 King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Today's Cryptquip clue: R equals N

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, DEC. 23, 1977

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early part of the day, when you are most clever, is the best time to exercise your creative skills. However, the good influences dwindle as the day progresses. Safeguard your health.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Contact influential persons who can give you the important data you need in a new project you have been working on.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Any financial problems should be handled now without fail, otherwise the situation could get worse later on.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You are able to handle personal matters well early in the day but later you had better rest or there could be confusion.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Observe what is taking place around you, but avoid hasty action or you could be in error. Don't neglect responsibilities.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Avoid those who make trouble and be sure not to do anything of a destructive nature. Working alone is your best mode of procedure now.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Avoid a situation that could spoil your carefully built-up reputation. Show that you are truly devoted to family members.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study new ideas well before you put them in operation. Widen your vistas via sensible methods. Strive for more harmony at home.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be certain to carry through with any promises you have made to others. Take no chances with your fine reputation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Instead of arguing with one who opposes you, try to reason with this person. Take needed health treatments.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You have much work to do so don't go off on any tangents. Be sure to accept a social invitation. Think logically.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't go away today for a good time and neglect important duties. Be careful of your diet. Strive for happiness.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Try to make conditions at home more pleasant and avoid arguments of all sort. A good time to make plans for the future.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have a brilliant mind but will need proper direction in order to keep from scattering the forces, and then there can be much success in this lifetime. Give good spiritual training early in life. There's musical talent in this chart.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to You!

Teletypewriters Donated To ECU

ECU News Bureau

Two teletypewriters have been given the East Carolina University Program for Hearing Impaired Students by the Crabtree Valley Sertoma Club of Raleigh.

An apparatus for sending messages in print instead of the spoken word, the teletypewriter operates through telephone lines with a special coupler, so that its user can communicate with someone at the other end with a compatible unit.

According to Michael Ernest, director of the ECU program, the installation of the Sertoma gifts increases to four the number of teletypewriters available to deaf or hard-of-hearing students at ECU.

Nominated For 1977-78 Listing

Miss Eunice M. Gay of Greenville was recently nominated for inclusion in the 1977-78 Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges.

Miss Gay is the daughter of Mrs. Lucille Gay Blow of Greenville and is a senior at Elizabeth City State University. Her major is Intermediate Education with a concentration in both Special Education and English.

Read-A-Thon Is Benefit Event

Students at St. Peter's School here recently participated in a Read-A-Thon to benefit the North Carolina Association for Retarded Citizens.

The students, who received pledges from Greenville citizens for the number of books read, raised over $300 for the association.

Two of the participating students, Rodney Brown and Connie Stehlin, raised over $20 each with their reading efforts.

The Read-A-Thon was conducted during November and December.

An Old Pro Lives With Highs, Lows

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Kenny Rogers sat in his hotel suite and pondered an advertisement in a music magazine proclaiming: "Kenny Rogers Is Hot!"

It didn't take long to realize the ad was exactly right.

He had just appeared on national television for the second time in four days. This time it was on NBC's Today Show, which telecast a segment from Nashville. Just 96 hours earlier, Rogers performed on the Country Music Association awards program and was honored for recording the single of the year, "Lucille."

He began reflecting on his career, only to be interrupted by a string of phone calls. One came from the governor of Louisiana, inviting him to visit his mansion.

For lunch, he has only a cheeseburger because there's no time for more. He had only one hour of sleep the previous night and recently performed in 23 cities in 26 days.

His next album, "Ten Years of Gold," isn't out yet but he's already received 600,000 orders.

'Lucille' was the catalyst to it all," he said. "But 'Daytime Friends' was No. 1, too. I've always done a lot of television, but all this is coming together at a concentrated time. It's more impressive than if it was spread out. It's momentum."

More than most entertainers, Rogers knows the insecurities of show business. He has had two previous peaks, both separated by valleys.

In the late 1950s he had a million-selling rock song, "Crazy Feeling." Then came the first valley, followed by the second peak when he formed a soft rock group, The First Edition, some 10 years later. The group had hits like "Just Dropped In To See What Condition My Condition Was In," "Ruby (Don't Take Your Love To Town)," "Rueben James" and "Somethin's Burnin'."

The group disbanded in early 1976 after a couple of hitless years. So Rogers turned to more of a country sound and, with "Lucille," hit his third peak.

"You have to accept the fact that this is a roller coaster business," he said. "If you enjoy the highs and prepare for the lows, the highs will come back. If you are professional, you can make it work."

Dixy Lee Ray A Calendar Girl

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Twenty-thousand calendars featuring a picture of a beaming Dixy Lee Ray superimposed on an orange sunset over Puget Sound are being distributed as holiday gifts from the governor. Campaign workers and friends of the governor commissioned the calendars, and private donors are picking up the $2,000 tab.

winter nights with roaring log fires. Consumers will find it pays to know something about the wood they burn.

Fireplaces seem to be growing in popularity. A spokesman for the National Association of Home Builders said Census Bureau figures show 58 per cent of all new homes built in 1976 had at least one fireplace, compared to only 37 per cent in 1972.

A growing number of people also are using firewood in wood-burning stoves. Since stoves are more efficient than fireplaces the price of the wood burned in them becomes competitive with that of other fuels.

But it is also important to realize that fires in fireplaces waste energy. As much as 20 per cent of the air in your house can be pulled up the chimney in an hour when a fire is burning.

Unless you install special equipment, more than three-fourths of the heat produced by the fire will go up the chimney.

To select the right firewood, you must take into consideration the size of your fireplace and the type of fire you want.

The best fires come from a mixture of woods.

Softwoods like pine, spruce and fir catch fire easily and burn quickly with a hot flame. They are good to use to start your fire, but a blaze made entirely of this kind of logs needs constant replenishment or it will burn out rapidly. Your expensive woodpile also will disappear quickly.

For a long-lasting fire, you should choose denser hardwoods like ash, beech, birch, hickory, maple and oak. They burn with a shorter flame than softwoods but last longer. Oak gives the most uniform flame and provides steady, glowing coals.

Logs from fruit and nut trees such as apple, cherry, hickory and pecan give off a pleasant aroma when burned. Add some of these after you've got your fire going.

Most wood will not burn well unless it is dry. The easiest way to make sure the wood is properly seasoned is to buy it several months before you use it. If this isn't practical, look for wood with cracks in the end pieces; freshly cut wood will have tight, solid ends with visible sawmarks.

The most common measure of firewood is the standard cord which measures eight feet by four feet by four feet or 128 cubic feet. A standard cord of dense, dry hardwood generally weighs about two tons and provides as much heat — assuming none of it is wasted — as a ton of coal, 150 to 175 gallons of heating oil or 24,000 cubic feet of natural gas. Few people burn eight- or four-foot logs so most dealers cut the wood into smaller lengths and sell it in something called a face cord. A face cord of 16-inch lengths is one-third the size of a full cord. Look for a cord that is tightly stacked without large gaps between the logs. If you buy according to weight instead of volume, look for the driest wood. Don't pay for extra water.

Prices — and the amount you need — vary widely depending on where you live and how often you have a fire going. If you buy a hard wood and light a fire only once or twice a week, a face cord equal to one-third a standard cord should be adequate for a season.
