This was the night for the election of the Editor-in-chief of the Quarterly, and also of a new president.

Mattie McArthur was elected Editor-in-chief, and Lois Hester president.

Miss Hester took the oath of office.

Miss Jones, the outgoing president, told the Society how much she had enjoyed this year's work with the Society, and gave us some splendid advice for our work for next year.

Miss Jackson then told Miss Jones how in behalf of the Society how much we had enjoyed working under her excellent leadership.

There was a favorable report from the critic.

Mr. Austin talked to us for a few minutes, and he also gave us some good advice.

There was no further business, so the meeting adjourned.

On April 20, 1918 a call meeting was held for the purpose of deciding what we should give our ex-president in remembrance of her faithful services.

After much discussion it was decided upon that we give her an Edgar Allen Poe Society pin.
