

South Not Spared In Big Cold Across The Nation

By The Associated Press

It was icy cold from Florida to the Great Lakes today, and at least two persons were reported killed while battling freezing temperatures that sent citrus growers into the fields with heaters, sapped power supplies and set cold records.

An exposure death was reported in Wisconsin.

The cold temperatures worried farmers in Texas and parts of the Southeast, but were called a boon to Georgia peaches.

The National Weather Service said the cold "improves the prospects of a good peach crop this spring," by sending peach trees into a rest period.

Florida citrus growers set up heaters in their fields, but the cold was not seen as a substantial threat. "It will brighten up the fruit and start trees into dormancy," said Bob Gibson of the Florida Citrus Mutual.

The National Weather

Service reported early today that an unexpected wind shift added moisture to the air over the Florida citrus belt, further reducing the threat of crop damage.

In Texas, where less than 10 percent of the $40 million citrus crop is protected by artificial heating devices, growers began gathering oranges and grapefruit for juice. Cabbage and broccoli crops were reported damaged.

Power outages attributed to the cold were reported in widely scattered areas Wednesday, including Birmingham, Ala.; Miami, Key West and Jacksonville in Florida; and Detroit.

Schools were closed in upstate New York Wednesday after the area was blanketed by 16 inches of snow. More than 26,000 youngsters got the day off in Syracuse, N.Y.

In Columbus, Ga., temperatures fell to a record low of 15 degrees, and James Williams, 60, was fatally burned after he lifted a heater from a ditch, spilling flaming diesel fuel onto his clothes.

Leola Matthews, 85, of Ozark, Ark., died after inhaling fumes from an oil heater.

And in West Bend, Wis., the body of Cory Bieniek, 17, was found in a vehicle parked on a city street. Officials said Bieniek apparently fell asleep and died of exposure.

Garbage collection crews in Milwaukee, unable to work because of subzero temperatures, were expected to be sent out Saturday for the first full-scale weekend trash collection since 1971. Some Milwaukee homes have not had garbage picked up in 15 days because of the holidays, heavy snow and cold.

Across the nation's mid-section early today, temperatures were beginning to moderate. But sub-zero readings prevailed across the northern Plains, Minnesota, and from Wisconsin through Illinois.

Brisk winds in eastern Montana and the Dakotas yielded wind-chill temperatures as low as 40 to 50 below zero.

Iran's Premier-Designate Talks Israel Oil Cut-Off

By THOMAS KENT

Associated Press Writer

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Prime Minister-designate Shahpour Bakhtiar has threatened to cut off oil to Israel and South Africa, promised to curb the secret police and the army and again indicated Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi will leave the country temporarily.

"We must not refuse to sell petrol to countries that request it," Bakhtiar told a news conference Wednesday. "But given the conflict that we have on a religious plane with Israel... I think my government wouldn't do that."

Asked to elaborate, Bakhtiar said he thought Israel, which gets 60 percent of its oil from Iran, "should settle its disputes with Arab countries and these countries share our religion."

Although not an Arab nation, Iran is predominantly Moslem like most of the Arab world, and Ayatollah Khomeini, the exiled religious leader of the fight against Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, has called for an end to the oil shipments to Israel. But in Washington, U.S. Energy Secretary James Schlesinger said the United States would fulfill a 1975 commitment and see that Israel was supplied if Iranian shipments to the Jewish nation were cut off.

Schlesinger urged Americans to reduce oil consumption until the resumption of Iranian production, which has been almost completely cut off by a strike against the shah. He said there was no immediate supply problem, but shortages could develop by fall if Iran isn't exporting by then. The United States normally imports about 500,000 barrels a day from Iran, or 5 percent of its needs.

Bakhtiar said he also may refuse oil to South Africa, which gets most of its oil from Iran, because of a dispute "on another plane." He refused to elaborate but obviously was referring to the white-minority South African government's racial policies. Bakhtiar also said he would trim the powers of SAVAK, the shah's dread secret police force and turn it into an intelligence agency. He said his government would not submit "to any military authority, whatever it is." He said he did not think the army, still devoutly loyal to the shah, would attempt to oust him.

Speaking fluently in Persian, French and English, he indicated the troops called out by the shah to battle street demonstrators would be returned to their barracks. He said martial law, in effect since Sept. 7, would end "region by region."

However, he said disorders would not be tolerated and persons arrested for murder, looting and other serious crimes during recent rioting will be prosecuted.

He said the shah "wants to rest and take a vacation — that is the desire he has expressed himself."

Questions about the future of the embattled monarch are "extremely delicate," he said, adding he hoped to restore "the legality of the king."

The shah reportedly has promised Bakhtiar to give up much of his royal power and take a vacation, leaving a regency council to exercise royal authority while the new prime minister's civilian government attempts to end more than a year of rioting against the shah.

Charge Cabbie Price Extortion

NEW YORK (AP) — A New York taxi driver has been charged with grand larceny and extortion after two visiting Iranians told police he charged them $175 each for one-mile rides between two terminals at Kennedy International Airport, police said.

Cabbie David Tzschavshvile allegedly told his passengers they arrived in town Dec. 26 they would have trouble with the police if they didn't pay his price. Officials said the complainants should have had to pay only $1.35 apiece. Both men said they notified authorities shortly after Tzschavshvile let them out.

Sentence Bars Parole Chance

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A 36-year-old New Orleans man who shot and killed one person and wounded nine others has received a life sentence without a chance for parole or probation despite his plea of temporary insanity.

Carlos Poree, convicted last November of first-degree murder in the Nov. 7, 1977, shooting spree, was sentenced Wednesday. During his trial, the defense acknowledged that Poree first shot his estranged wife and father-in-law, then proceeded to shoot eight others in various parts of the city. One of three persons Poree wounded in a busy brokerage office died five days later.

Policy: Test Is A Must

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Board of Education, rejecting a request by the Carolina Friends School of Durham, decided Wednesday that all private schools must give the state's competency test to its students.

The board's policy committee turned down the school's request that it not be required to give students the test, and said all schools, regardless of religious orientation or academic reputation must give the basic skills test.

The committee is made up of the entire board and officials expect the same unanimous vote during this morning's formal board meeting.

The competency test was administered to all public high school juniors in November. But between 75 and 80 of the 250 private schools in the state have refused to give test, which all students must pass to get a diploma next year.

Carolina Friends, a Quaker school, had asked the board to consider allowing it to measure competence by a means other than the test. It said college admission should prove student competence.

How Cold?

FROZEN FOUNTAIN — Cold temperatures in Greenville have slowed a few things, including

Local Electric Use Hit A High In Early Hours

Greenville area citizens seemed to weather a cold snap the past two days with apparent ease, as the Greenville Utilities Commission reported no problems with electric or water utilities.

Malcolm Green of the GUC noted that the Commission experienced its highest winter load this season around 7 a.m. Thursday.

"We've been plotting the energy use and you can really see the use rise as of this morning," said Green. He also commented that Wednesday evening's use was very heavy.

A low of 16 degrees Fahrenheit was recorded by the GUC Wednesday, with a high of 37 degrees. The temperature reading was 20 degrees as of 8 a.m. Thursday.

According to Royce Harris of the GUC Water Department, no problems have been reported with the Commission's water lines.

A random call of area plumbing companies found that frozen pipes were a small problem, concentrated in trailers and trailer parks. Carl Heath, Pitt County Schools Maintenance Supervisor, said that the county schools were in "pretty good shape" as far as heating facilities were concerned.

"We tried to prepare for the cold when schools reopened Tuesday," stated Heath. "We did the best we could and we have no large amount of complaints."

Barbara Kirkman of the Salvation Army reported that only a few calls have been received in the past days concerning fuel donations.

Seeks Addition To Wilderness

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland announced today a proposal to preserve 15.1 million acres of public forest land, nearly doubling the nation's wilderness system.

The proposal also asks that more than 36.1 million acres in the national forests be opened for "multiple uses" that could include recreation, timber cutting and livestock grazing.

Additional areas totaling about 10.8 million acres would be set aside for "further planning" to decide how those will be used in the future.

The 62 million acres comprise land in 2,919 roadless areas scattered among national forests and national grasslands in 38 states and Puerto Rico.

Wilderness areas must be designated by Congress. Bergland said he will work with members of Congress and state governors in the next 45 days before sending his final recommendations to President Carter.

"I expect that shortly afterwards, the president will transmit the wilderness proposals to the 96th Congress with his recommendation that these areas be designated as wilderness," he said.

Bergland added in a statement that no action will be taken on the 36.1 million acres proposed for multiple use until 90 days after Congress is in session. Congress opens its session Jan. 15.

The 10.8 million acres suggested for further planning "do have wilderness values" and will continue under review, Bergland said.

"Pending completion of forest, resource or project planning for these areas, these lands will remain undeveloped," he said.

The wilderness system now totals about 19 million acres officially designed by Congress. About 15.2 million acres of the total is in the national forest system. The remaining land is administered by the National Park Service, the Bureau of Land Management and the Fish and Wildlife Service.

Additionally, the administration has endorsed proposals for 22.9 million acres of wilderness from lands administered by the agencies, including 3.3 million acres in the national forest system, Bergland said.

That land was not included in the review of the roadless areas by Bergland today.

The review of the 62 million acres involved about one-third of the 187 million acres administered by the Forest Service, an agency of the Agriculture Department.

Called RARE II, for Roadless Area Review and Evaluation, the 18-month project included a tentative plan announced last June 15 that presented a list of possible ways the 62 million acres could be used.

More than 264,000 public comments were received.

FIREMEN BATTLE FLAMES AND COLD — Pitt County firemen fought a blaze in below freezing temperatures last night at a house fire near Ayden. The blaze according to fire officials caused an estimated $50,000 to the house. The home was reportedly owned by Michael Karachun. The occupant of the house at the time of the fire was not listed. Firefighters in the left photo prepare to charge fire hoses and firemen in right photo carefully make their way to the second story of the house. Members of the Ayden fire department were assisted by firemen from Grifton, Winterville, Bel Arthur, and Staton House. There were no injuries reported in the 7:51 fire. Investigation is continuing. Worm Dealers Facing Outside Entrepreneurs

WAYNESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Worm dealers in Haywood County are waging a battle with outside entrepreneurs who are literally buying the worms from under their feet.

"Instead of a gold rush, it's a worm rush," said Ann Prince McMahon of Prince's Live Bait Inc. of Canton. "I feel there are million of dollars of worms dying of old age under the feet of poor people in Haywood County. They're not our worms, they're God's, but they were put here for us to use."

On a good night, the Waynesville Country Club golf course yields some 200,000 worms. In a good year, Haywood County's entire output may total 130 million worms.

For years, local buyers have leased pastures and golf courses at night, transported pickers and set them up with the proper equipment — hats with lights on them and coffee cans strapped to their legs with sawdust in one can to keep hands dry. They pay their pickers about $1 for every thousand worms.

Now the outsiders are coming in and buying up the slimy creatures for $18 to $24 a thousand and local businessmen are up in arms. They say they can't afford to compete with higher prices and have petitioned the county commissioners to impose regulations for worm dealing, including steep licensing fees and stiff fines for violators.

"If you will help us with the stiff regulations, we will continue to create an interest in the market and cause Haywood County to become the worm capital of America," a statement by the local Night-crawlers Producers Association to the commission said.

The buyers' proposal would require local dealers to pay a $1,000 registration fee and buy a $500 license annually for three years. After three years, the license fee would drop to $50 annually.

Out-of-town dealers would have to pay a $2,000 registration fee, buy a $1,000 license good for only one year and wait 90 days for the license to become effective. They would be fined $3,000 if caught operating without a license. Local buyers caught without a license would be fined only $1,000.

"We're poor people, but we make a reasonable income," Mrs. McMahan said. "We're willing to pay a high fee."

"We're asking for protection against these people," Jerry Ferguson of Ferguson's Supply said. "They'll leave us with a market we can't live with. If he (the outsider) is here to stay, he'll be willing to pay."

The commission referred the matter to the county attorney to get an opinion on the legality of such regulations.

Pull Workers Out Of Iran

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Facing shortages of food and fuel, and the threat of violence from anti-shah demonstrators, American employees of the J.A. Jones Construction Co. of Charlotte have left Iran.

The company said Wednesday it evacuated 38 American employees and their 18 dependants along with some of Jones' European employees and dependants on a chartered flight out of Iran.

The flight was scheduled to land in Atlanta about midnight Wednesday.

Skip Brodhun, a spokesman for the construction company, said Wednesday's flight followed the departure Tuesday of 11 Jones employees and 15 dependants aboard a commercial airline flight from Tehran.

"All of our American and European employees and dependants are now out of Iran," Brodhun said.

The Jones company had been working on two projects in Iran — a $150 million contract for a helicopter facility and a $30 million contract on a foreign trade bank.

"The evacuation was necessary because of the cancellation of our major contract and the deteriorating conditions near our second contract," Brodhun said.

No employees were injured during their time in Iran, he said.

"We wanted to make sure it didn't go to the point where it did happen," Brodhun said.

Seek Millions For Literacy Program

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Department of Community Colleges plans to ask the General Assembly this year for $15 million over the next two years to expand a literacy program at North Carolina technical institutes and community colleges.

A report on a pilot program designed to attack functional illiteracy among adults said the adults and their children "will face lives of chronic unemployment or underemployment with tremendous costs to the public and incalculable losses in human potential unless efforts are undertaken to assist them."

The report was prepared by the National Testing Service Research Corp. of Durham and was presented to the state Board of Education Wednesday. It concluded that the $1 million pilot project was successful in increasing enrollment in adult literacy programs and in improving the reading and math skills of participants.

Many functional illiterates are unable to read street signs, job directions and newspapers; write letters; fill out applications or add a grocery list.

The program was designed to improve the communication and social skills of more than 749,000 functional illiterates across the state. It was conducted at Caldwell Community College in Lenoir, Wilkes Community College in Wilkesboro, Forsyth Technical Institute in Winston-Salem, Robeson Technical Institute in Lumberton and Martin Community College in Williamston.

Enrollment in adult basic education classes at the five institutions increased from 2,100 to 5,000 during the 12-month trial period. The report said students made "substantial gains on both reading and math achievement."

truck. An estimated $200 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 4:22 p.m. collision at the Greene and Martin Streets intersection, officers noted.

Drivers involved in the mishap were listed as Jennifer Eliza Lambeth of 2002 Brook Rd., and Charles Edward Highsmith of 606A West 14th St.

Hang Up On His Hang-Up

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR READERS: My recent item, "What to do about obscene telephone calls," prompted a rash of responses. Some berated me for suggesting that a police whistle be kept by the phone to blast the caller into the next county. ("What if your mother-in-law calls and you mistakenly think the obscene caller is calling again? That blast could seriously impair her hearing," one reader stated.)

Well, here's the official word from the Pacific Telephone Co.: If you should get an obscene phone call, HANG UP! That's right, just hang up. That's the fastest, most effective way to discourage annoying calls. The people who make them actually need an audience. And taking that away from them—by hanging up—takes away their entire motivation for making the calls in the first place.

So at the first disturbing remark, simply hang up. Gently—because any reaction at all can serve to encourage them. Don't yell, don't speak, don't even mutter. Don't give the caller the satisfaction of any response whatsoever. Just hang up.

If the caller continues to harass you, call the business office of your phone company. They have people trained to deal with this type of situation. And they will do everything, including working with your police department, to avert further problems.

Obscene phone calls are illegal. A convicted offender can be sentenced to up to six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

But the best thing to do is just remember that simple rule: It's your telephone—if you don't like what's being said, HANG UP!

DEAR ABBY: What advice have you for a 23-year-old girl who, everybody says, is pretty and smart, but who lives in a small town with snobbish people who won't let her forget that she lives on the wrong side of the tracks?

ME IN IOWA

DEAR ME: The next time the train comes through—get on it.

DEAR ABBY: I was married at a very young age to a man I never really loved. I have two fine teen-age children. My marriage didn't work out because my husband used to beat me a lot. After I divorced him, I fell deeply in love with a woman. It was easy for me, since I had always felt a strong sexual attraction for women, but I never allowed myself to have an affair with one.

I am now living with this wonderful woman and have never been happier. The relationship is so comfortable and natural for me. My children know what I am and accept it, but my parents are giving me a hard time.

I love my parents and know they love me, but they just don't understand my feelings. They disapprove of my mate and my lesbian lifestyle.

Should I give up my lover to please my parents? I'm 34.

TORN IN TWO

DEAR TORN: If you are mature, you will make your own choice based on what YOU want, not on what your parents want. If your parents love you, they'll accept you as you are.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I read a spine-chilling statistic the other day.

Educational theorist John Holt predicts that within the next ten years, more than 500,000 U.S. families will be schooling their children at home.

Have you any idea what that means at our house? It means our kids will be close to 35 by the time they graduate. My husband holds three college degrees. I hold one. We have never been able to tell our children anything.

If I said, "Children, today is Tuesday . . . ergo, tomorrow is Wednesday," they would cock their heads to one side; squint at me suspiciously and say, "Are you sure?"

I know it seems like a wonderful idea having the children sitting around a study table at night singing "Inchworm," but trust me. I'm a pioneer parent who goes back to the days when parents alone shouldered the responsibility for preparing a child for his place in the world . . . the days before they offered driver's education in the schools.

Now, there's a bit of home education guaranteed to stunt your growth. Maybe home education would have worked when the kids were younger. I had the "fear factor" going for me then. I would reach out to pick a piece of lint off their jacket, put their collar outside a sweater, or pat them on the head, and they would flinch. They were never really too sure. As years went by, they came to know me too well and they stopped flinching.

I stopped by my son's room the other night, poked my head in the door and said, "How's it going?"

He said, "The Celtics are ahead by two."

"C'mon, fella," I said, "That will never do. I'll help you with your homework. Got a pencil?"

He spread out on the desk his "School Organizer," a notebook that looked like a General Services warehouse.

"Could we talk about math?" I asked. He turned on his calculator with the printout and asked, "What do you want to know?"

"Want me to read through your essay?" He flipped the cover off his electric typewriter and said, "It's done."

"I can give you Spanish words," He pointed to his audit cassette tapes and said, "No need."

"Hey, how about some history questions?" He said, "I borrowed a computer from the library. It's all there. I just push a button."

I closed the door softly. Why did I have the feeling that it was only a matter of time before I would be replaced by a box, a beep and two dry cell batteries.

Bitterest Enemies Now Allies

United States and China launched formal relations over the weekend with receptions, formal statements and, on the part of the Chinese, blasts at Russian "expansion and aggression."

Vice President Mondale said it was "the dawn of a new and bountiful era."

China Ambassador Chai Tse-min saw the historic day as one "upholding peace and stability in Asia and the world."

The Chinese government, once thought of as aggressive, seemed consumed with thoughts of peace, even to inviting Taiwan to reunite with the mainland through peaceful means.

There was also an invitation to Sen. Barry Goldwater to visit China. Goldwater was most upset with the recognition of Red China and the abandonment of Taiwan by the United States.

The Chinese called on Goldwater to visit and discuss the reunification of China and Taiwan, China felt it could convince even Goldwater that the sweeping changes in U.S.-Chinese relations and reunification were in the best interest.

Relations between the United States and China were far different than during the dark days of Vietnam and, earlier, Korea.

The world changes, however. After all, our bitterest enemies of World War II are now our closest allies. Given the vast differences in governmental philosophies between the United States and China, closeness such as that will never be achieved.

There was no doubt, though, that a new era had dawned and it would spawn great changes in the international relationships.

New Capacity For Medical Miracles

Medical miracles continue, and one of the most recent ones was the reconnection of the leg of an 11-year-old New York girl.

The youngster lost her leg at mid-thigh when she was hit by a train.

Surgeons said the girl was doing beautifully

Wednesday.

The surgery depended on quick action by police and ambulance attendants in saving the leg and preserving it so that reconnection was possible.

Such medical techniques would not have been possible a generation ago.

Who'll Take Higher Tab?

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Local and state decision-makers will be wrestling in coming months with a thorny philosophical question: who is going to pick up the tab for increased costs of local governmental programs and salaries?

The question isn't really all that simple. It is complicated by a variety of rapidly changing circumstances, many still not clearly defined.

The most compelling factor, however, is President Jimmy Carter's insistence on cutting the Federal budget and deficit accompanied by North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt's demand for that action in Washington.

Hunt, realizing fully that a federal cut will mean lost dollars for this state and her county and municipal governments, still finds the action compelling in order to meet headon the illnesses of inflation.

Social Aid

The cuts will most likely come in social programs, supported with both federal revenue sharing dollars and categorical grants.

Good conscience might dictate that the government not whack into programs designed to help the needy, but there is widespread conviction that such efforts have worked mostly to aid the bureaucrats and planners rather than the people needing help, so can be done away with.

Obviously, many are also critical to a lot of people.

The challenge will be to keep the essential and truly workable aid efforts while junking the useless. The same is true of the laundry list of local and state projects such as airports, water resources, road and bridge building, planning, law enforcement, education (and the list could continue) which are done with federal matching money.

Meanwhile, across North Carolina's landscape numerous local projects, jobs, programs, and plans are underwritten with federal dollars soon to expire or be cancelled at the same time that local officials have their backs to the wall on use of the prime source of local income — the property tax.

BILL NOBLITT

Gov. Hunt has pledged that he will suggest no state-mandated programs which require increased local spending. The state will come to the aid of local governments in such instances, he has told local governmental leaders.

More recently, Gov. Hunt has recognized the impending loss of federal dollars, and is proposing that state government must come up with some way to take up the slack: not by helping to fund every "kneejerk local application that comes along", he observed, but by helping to meet the cost of those which meet the test of desirability.

Increased

Local officials are watching closely developing trends in the 1979 session of the General Assembly. State-mandated programs involving local spending are guaranteed: higher law enforcement salaries; day care; public school programs; land use planning, etc.

Having skimmed the surface of the dilemma, we come full circle to the original question of how the higher bills will be paid with less money.

Given these circumstances, we asked Gov. Hunt which would prove the desirable resolution: increased state funding of local programs (which automatically means more state bureaucrats to handle the grants and plans and applications and supervision), or authority from the state to local governments to implement new taxing methods to shore up the ailing property tax structure?

Local governments have been and still are clamoring for local income taxes, hotel and motel levies, and others.

Hunt's response: that is a deeply thoughtful question requiring much careful study in coming months.

Carter Taking Risks

By RICHARD E. MEYER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is taking what his top aide calls "considerable risks" with his political future.

Hamilton Jordan, presidential assistant and the person Carter values as his best political brain, argues that two of those risks will pay dividends. But the third looks like a crap shoot.

First is the budget. Carter is cutting back some traditional Democratic programs and holding others at current levels of spending. The programs are designed to help the poor and disadvantaged.

When Carter unveils his budget later this month, blacks, big-city mayors, consumer advocates and labor leaders are not likely to be very happy. It might prompt some to withhold active support if Carter decides, as most expect he will, to seek a second term.

Carter has one more budget to prepare — a year from now — before the 1980 election. He can give back half a loaf. And if disaffected Democrats have no one else to turn to, he might be able to persuade some of them to work for him after all.

But then again, he might not. "I'd argue that, although it's upsetting to some people to cut the budget, the option is for the government not to do its part in the fight against inflation," Jordan says. "And that's the single most pervasive problem the people face."

The second risk is Carter's effort to make the government responsive politically and administratively.

To that end, the White House personnel office, under Jordan's supervision, began a review several months ago of second and third-ranking officials in the departments. It sent evaluation reports in mid-December to Labor, Commerce, Justice and Energy.

The move resulted in public embarrassment. Word leaked that the White House didn't like the way Under Secretary of Labor Robert Brown and Assistant Secretary Francis X. Burkhardt were performing.

Secretary Ray Marshall asked Burkhardt to resign. Burkhardt once worked for the AFL-CIO. The labor federation called the effort to oust him "a damn outrage."

Jordan considers such embarrassment an acceptable risk. The review will go on.

The crap shoot has to do with

A Grand Golden Fleece

By ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON — Back in November, Mr. Carter flew to St. Louis to tell the National League of Cities all about his forthcoming budget. "It will be an austere budget," he said. "It will be very, very tight."

Last week Sen. William Proxmire, Wisconsin's favorite Scrooge, brightened the Yuletide season with a Golden Fleece of the Month Award. It was one of his better awards, presented for an absolutely maddening waste of the taxpayers' money by the U. S. Office of Education. If the body of the president's recommendations could be infused with the senator's spirit, we might begin to get somewhere. The prospect seems unlikely.

Mr. Proxmire gives his monthly awards for "the biggest, most ironic, or most ridiculous example of wasteful government spending for the period." The December prize — it might claim the award for all of 1978 as well — went to the Office of Education for frittering away $219,592 to develop a "curriculum package" intended to teach college students — brace yourself! — intended to teach college students how to watch television.

The senator is not making this up. This particular contract is part of an $823,000 project intended to develop "critical television viewing skills." Another $800,000 will be spent to train teachers and to distribute the materials developed by the contractors.

The particular $219,592 contract that caught the senator's acidulous eye went to the School of Public Communication at Boston University. The idea is to help college students understand the differences between soap operas and situation comedies. The students are to become aware of how issues are presented by TV dramas and by TV news. Their critical skills are to be assessed by regression analysis and canonical correlation.

This describes the field test: "A series of univariate and multivariate analyses will be performed in order to delineate the characteristics of the sample in terms of pre-test level of critical viewing skills, as well as sociodemographic and other variables, and the effect of the test curriculum." And so on.

Let us cut through the mush. This is waste. This is pure, unadulterated waste. If Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano sat up all night for 30 nights, he could not find persuasive arguments to justify this waste. He knows, and I know, and every fed-up reader knows what will happen to this project when the money runs out: The assembled materials will be deposited to gather dust on some dark shelf, or they simply will be cast in the

Other Editors Say 'Victimless' Crime

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

Of all the mistaken notions to be found in the new morality, the most pernicious is the idea that there are "victimless crimes." There is always a victim of a crime, whether it is the perpetrator himself, a consenting participant, the perpetrator's family or associates, or society at large.

Unfortunately, many state legislatures have acted on the "victimless crime" notion so as to remove penalties for various crimes, including drug offenses, pornography, prostitution and deviate sexual behavior. The result is a serious deterioration in the quality of life in the United States. Kenneth C. Pillack, former assistant solicitor general for Atlanta, wrote a superb analysis of the "victimless crime" concept for The Atlanta Lawyer, a publication of the Atlanta Bar Association. His analysis should be read, studied and inwardly digested by thoughtful citizens across the country.

Mr. Pollack warned that to remove "victimless crimes" from the list of illegal activities in effect signifies society's approval. "We should maintain these badges of disapproval," he said.

The advocates of decriminalization argue that the law doesn't have the right to deal with society's morality or to intrude upon private acts. This history of law shows it always has been concerned about society and about right and wrong. In the Western world, the law hasn't been neutral regarding morality.

At the moment, major efforts are underway to remove restrictions against the use of drugs. Society, however, cannot be unconcerned with drug-use by individuals. A drugged society is not a viable one. A drugged society is weak, incapable and subject to external control, as the history of certain Asian countries make clear.

The vital connection between private and public morality needs continual restatement and emphasis in our times.

Foreign Policy Disarray

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — A warning from one of the West's revered elder statesmen that U.S. leadership under Jimmy Carter "is the weakest in my lifetime" reveals Western fears over Carter's inability to resolve basic foreign policy differences within his administration.

These differences were symbolized last week when the president quietly authorized a U.S. carrier task force to steam from its Seventh Fleet base in the Philippines toward the Indian Ocean as a belated warning to Moscow of the West's special interest in Iran.

Precisely such a show-the-flag task force had been desperately urged on Carter last spring, at the height of Soviet successes in the Horn of Africa, and later when Iran entered its crisis. It was vetoed by the State Department.

But moving a U.S. task force toward the Persian Gulf today is late indeed, probably too late — a costly procrastination caused by disarray at the top. Overruled last spring were Pentagon and national security advisers; but last spring's losers were last week's winners in the bureaucratic struggle for power that has moved Carter's foreign policy in opposite directions at the same time, leaving his chief foreign allies in disbelief and disarray.

The esteemed elder statesman who told so much truth about the Western view of Carter's foreign policy was former British Conservative Prime Minister Harold Macmillan. Now 84, Macmillan said the following at an off-the-record dinner given by the Aspen Institute's Robert Anderson (chairman of Atlantic Richfield) in London Dec. 3: "Things are as bad for the West as they could possibly be and they are getting worse. The Europeans have to deal with the weakest American administration in my lifetime."

At least part of the explanation for Macmillan's views about Carter has been the president's seeming reluctance to knock heads together and instill order and direction within his foreign policy establishment, particularly inside the State Department. That may be changing.

For example, Leslie Gelb, head of the department's bureau of political-military affairs, is now on a short leash as a result of his public run-in with Zbigniew Brzezinski. Carter's national security aide, over U.S.-Soviet arms sales negotiations. The background of that vigorous dispute was to what extent Gelb could negotiate regional bans on the sale of U.S. and Soviet arms.

This issue of cutting back the sale of conventional arms was a major one with Carter two years ago; today, despite Gelb's best efforts during months of negotiations with the Soviets, it has proved to be, as experienced officials had always predicted, a problem without any remote possibility of solution.

Silent but anxious observers of the Brzezinski-Gelb public fracas have been the British, French and West Germans. They not only see no prospect of negotiating limits on arms sales with the

Psychotic Gene 'Discovered'

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — A newly discovered gene dramatically increases the risk of a severe mental illness and seems related to alcoholism and perhaps even multiple sclerosis, a California scientist says.

Dr. David Comings said a person who inherits the gene from one parent is more than twice as likely to develop severe psychotic depression as is a person without the gene.

And if two such genes are inherited — one from each parent — the risk increases eightfold, he said in a telephone interview Wednesday.

Psychotic depression is a debilitating illness characterized by extreme withdrawal and inactivity. Comings said his discovery has implications for improved understanding and treatment of such depression.

He said the gene's relationship is less clear to multiple sclerosis, a disease of the nervous system, and to chronic alcoholism. The gene is more common among victims of the afflictions than in the rest of the population, he said, but "we really don't understand what the situation is." We're just reporting what we found.

Comings is based at the City of Hope National Medical Center in Duarte, Calif. His findings were being published this week in the British scientific journal Nature.

He said the gene, which he calls Pci Duarte, seems to be present in about one-third of the population. And although its presence increases the likelihood of psychotic depression, the gene is not the sole cause of the disease, Comings said.

"There is an increased susceptibility, but environmental factors are involved," he said. "A person can have this gene and be perfectly healthy, or he cannot have the gene and develop the disease."

Scientists have generally been convinced of genetic influence on psychoses such as depression and schizophrenia. But Comings said his findings are "the first biochemical evidence of the mutant protein that's involved in this psychosis."

He said the protein that signals the gene's presence was identified in brain tissue taken from the bodies of accident or disease victims. It has been found nowhere else in the body. This means the gene can currently be detected only in cadavers, Comings said.

The identification of the protein, he said, enables researchers to begin unraveling its role and, perhaps, Comings said, "the cause of depression."

Knowledge of the cause of depression, he said, could then lead to more effective treatments than the drugs now used.

The gene was identified initially in tests on brain samples from 152 individuals which showed 31 percent carried the gene. The brain tissue of 28 persons who had committed suicide or were diagnosed as depressives or alcoholics were then tested, he said, and more than 64 percent carried the gene.

Tests on 40 multiple sclerosis victims showed 21 — 53 percent — had the gene. Comings said the gene might increase susceptibility to multiple sclerosis, or might operate with another gene. But he said it is also possible the gene has little or nothing to do with multiple sclerosis.

Strength For Today

GAMBLING

The recent sharp advance of gambling stocks on the American Stock Exchange has revealed in startling fashion how widespread gambling has become and how archaic the old-fashioned moral sanctions against it seem to have become.

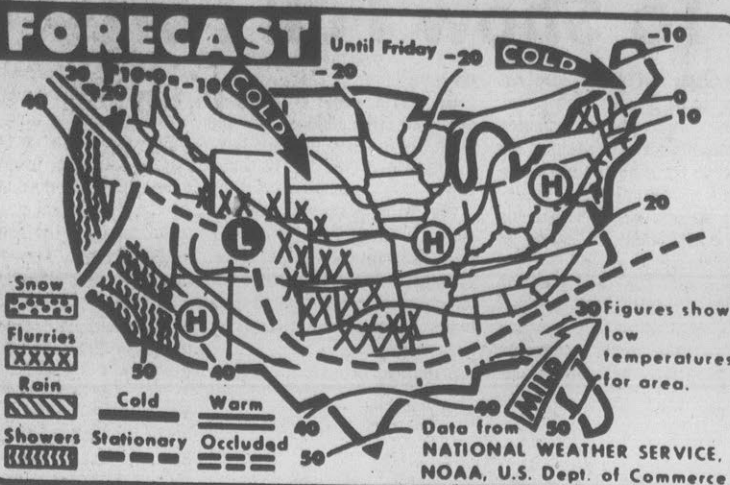

One might suppose that intelligent people would be immune to the lure of gambling. Common sense should tell us that we cannot get something for nothing. The vast amounts which professionals make from the public every year should be a warning to the gambler that the odds are stacked against him. He gambles; the professionals do not.

Sincere Christians have an additional reason not to gamble. The basic Christian spirit is one of giving, not getting. Jesus's message is not one of self-enrichment or getting something for nothing, but a message of sacrifice and unselfishness. "It is more blessed to give than to receive." "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul."

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Continuing cold weather is expected for most of the country until Friday morning. Milder temperatures are due for Florida. Rain is forecast for Pacific coast states and snow from the central Rockies to northern Texas and for western New England. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Temperatures dropped to record levels again this morning as North Carolina continued in the grip of its most severe cold spell of the winter.

The National Weather Service office at the Raleigh-Durham Airport recorded a low of 10 degrees shortly before daybreak, establishing a new low for Jan. 4. The previous record was 16 set in 1958.

Greensboro equalled Raleigh's 10 degrees, which was colder than mountainous Asheville's 13. Charlotte also had a low of 13 and other low readings this morning included Hickory, Elizabeth City and Fayetteville 14, Rocky Mount 15, New Bern 17, and Wilmington and Goldsboro 18.

Temperatures were expected to be just a little warmer today, ranging from the teens in the mountains to the low 40s along the coast. Most high readings Wednesday failed to get above the freezing mark around the state.

It will be mostly cloudy in the west Friday with a chance of light snow in the mountains.

Soviets but also are fearful of the spillover effect on them of Gelb's unchecked enthusiasm for trying. Brzezinski has now checked Gelb, but whether he stays checked remains to be seen.

The administration's confusion over the sale of conventional arms is no less puzzling to Carter's European allies than disorder over Carter's true policies in black Africa. The Europeans, led by the French, agree with Carter's Pentagon officials and most of his national security aides that Moscow is playing a strategic game in Africa for very high stakes, and with very great dangers to the West. They would like a more active American response.

But Carter's assistant secretary of state for African affairs, Richard Moose, does not view the Soviet penetration of Africa in strategic terms. He told reporters at a Godfrey Sperling breakfast last week that "conceivably in the long term" the Soviets might be seeking "strategic advantages" from their African adventures, but that the Soviet effort had cost Moscow more than it had gained.

That view is not shared by Carter's European allies and it is ridiculed by Carter's Pentagon officials and most of his national security aides. Yet, as chief African policymaker, Moose speaks for the State Department and for the president, a confusion that agonizes Carter's friends in Europe.

This confusion spreads far and wide through the policymaking pastures of the Carter establishment. The State Department not only quietly opposes British sale of short-range Harrier fighters to Communist China but has informed Prime Minister James Callaghan of that fact; yet the White House "official" policy is one of complete neutrality. Most of Carter's national security aides are praying that the British will sell Peking all the defensive arms they want.

These disagreements, some revealed, some concealed, explain European dismay at being unable to know what Carter really wants for both the U.S. and for the West. When the European leaders gather with Carter around the swimming pool and on the beach at Guadalupe Jan. 5, the president will be asked many questions. If he cannot answer — if he cannot choose between, say, Gelb and Brzezinski or between Moose and the Pentagon — the harsh verdict of Harold Macmillan will ring in his ears.

Note N.C. Job-Related Injuries Below Average

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The incidence rate of job-related injuries and illnesses in North Carolina's private businesses during 1977 was below the national rate for the sixth straight year, N.C. Labor Commissioner John C. Brooks said this week.

"We are pleased, although not complacent, about reporting the continuing annual decline in statewide incidence rates for on-the-job injuries and illnesses, because we believe that they indicate our program is working well," Brooks said, re-fering to the state's occupational safety and health program.

In 1977, North Carolina's incidence rate was 7.6 injuries and illnesses per 100 full-time workers in the private employment. That is 18 percent below the national rate of 9.3, Brooks said.

One in every 14 workers in private businesses in North Carolina, compared with one in every 11 workers in the nation, experienced a job-related injury or illness in 1977, Brooks said.

National data compiled by the U.S. Department of Labor do not include public employment. But the N.C. Department of Labor's annual survey for 1977 did.

The state survey covered some 1,854,700 private sector employees and 299,200 state and local government workers. The combined incidence rate for both groups in 1977 was 7.1 injuries and illnesses per 100 full-time workers. That was a 4 percent decrease from the 7.4

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C.—Thursday, January 4, 1979—5

incidence rate the year before. The number of work-related injuries and illnesses in both private and public employment increased from an estimated 131,079 in 1976 to 134,317 in 1977. At the same time, annual average employment increased by 75,300, from 2,078,600 in 1976 to 2,153,900 in 1977.

A total of approximately 702,000 workdays were lost in the state as a result of injuries and illnesses during 1977.

The largest over-the-year change in the incidence rate was in the mining industry, which had a 29 percent increase. Rates also increased in construction, wholesale trade and in finance, insurance and real estate.

Decreases occurred in manufacturing; transportation and public utilities; agriculture, forestry and fishing; retail trade and services.

Solar Power Feasible Today, Says Speaker

By CAROL TYER

Donald Bowden of Huntsville, Ala. told those attending a Greenville Chamber of Commerce and Merchants' Association coffee this morning, "Don't listen to the government. Solar water and space heating is economically advisable today."

Bowden is president of Solar Unlimited, Inc. of Huntsville, of which The Solar Shop here is an affiliate. The Solar Shop, operated by Keith Bishon, sponsored the Chamber coffee. Bowden is the former manager of NASA's Solar Heating and Cooling Program. He helped write the National Solar Heating and Cooling Program Plan and initiated action that resulted in the award of contracts to more than 70 companies to develop and demonstrate solar heating and cooling equipment.

Bowden said sales of solar heating equipment is doubling every nine months. The reason for this phenomenal growth, he said, is the ever-increasing cost of electrical utilities which are averaging nationwide an increase of 15 percent per year.

He said North Carolina is in an enviable position in that our state government is providing a sizeable tax break in addition to a

School Boards Meet Jan. 10

WASHINGTON — Approximately 150 school board members, educators, and officials will meet at Washington High School Wednesday, Jan. 10, for the Annual District No. 2 meeting of the North Carolina School Boards Association.

The meeting will begin with registration and a general session in the afternoon. Discussion groups will follow, with a banquet in the evening.

Speakers on the roster include George Register, attorney for the NCSBA; George Kahdy of the State Department of Public Instruction; Edwin Speas, Special Deputy Attorney General; Dr. George French, Southern Region School Boards Research and Training Center; and Dr. Lacy Presnell, Director of School Planning, SDF.

Featured speaker at the banquet will be Dr. William H. Wagoner, Chancellor of the University of North Carolina at Wilmington.

Banquet Held By Aid Club

The Women's Aide Club of Greenville, during its second annual banquet recently, heard a panel of persons from area organizations tell who in Pitt County needs the help of the club.

On the panel were Mrs. Rosa Harris of the Dept. of Social Services; Mrs. Jean Darden of Rose High School; Kelly Darden of N. C. Mutual; Mrs. Rosalie Jones of Robinson Primary School; Mr. and Mrs. Wilson McDowell of Aycock Jr. High School; Larry Hardy of Chesterfield High; Chesterfield, S. C.; the Rev. Kenneth Hammond of ECU and Cedar Grove Missionary Baptist Church; Mrs. Annie B. King of the Ladies Auxiliary and Ruff and Ready Volunteer Fire Association; Mrs. Doris Hansley of Les Gaylenettes; Miss Cheryl Merritt of the Dixwell Day Care Center of New Haven, Conn. and Mrs. Mary Teel and Alex Darden. A question and answer period was conducted by Mrs. Mary L. Vines, club president. She said that, if more clubs and organizations worked together, there would be fewer people in need of help in and around Greenville and Pitt County.

SPECIALIZED FIELD
TOKYO (AP) — Handicapped persons in China produce wheel chairs, special shoes and hearing aids in nearly 800 specially-equipped factories, the official Hsinhua news agency says. About 120,000 workers in the factories are blind, deaf, mute or otherwise handicapped.

More Harm In Unarmed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An unarmed robber is more likely to harm his victim than a robber who carries a weapon, according to a nationwide study by two Duke University researchers.

"If you think about it, it's not that surprising," said Philip Cook who conducted the research with Daniel Nagin. "Robberies which involve an injury tend to be a quite different event from those that don't."

"An unarmed robbery is a mugging. The way you do it is, you jump someone. In an armed robbery, you point a gun at someone and say, 'hand over your wallet.'"

The two professors drew their conclusions from interviews collected by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration between 1972 and 1974 in 26 cities, including Charlotte. The LEAA interviewed a random sample of 10,000 households in each city and paid the researchers $10,000 to study the data.

Cook said 1 to 2 percent of the households had been victims of robbery during the last year.

The researchers concluded that robbers with guns kill 1 percent of their victims, while other robbers kill 0.2 percent of their victims. They said robbers who carry guns harm about 5 percent of their victims seriously enough to require medication, and robbers who carry other weapons or no weapons seriously injure 10 percent of their victims.

Cook added that charges may differ between robbers who injure victims and those who do not, but said plea bargains are given just as frequently.

"My suspicion is that some counties in North Carolina take the robbery injury more seriously," Cook said.

Ethel Sued For Non-Payment

ASPEN, Colo. (AP) — Ethel Kennedy is being sued by the owners of an Aspen catering service who allege she refused to pay $500 for a Christmas dinner for 20 people.

The suit, filed in county court here, said Mrs. Kennedy's housekeeper called Christmas Day asking if a dinner could be prepared that evening.

Because of the holiday, caterer Dean Small said he charged $90 an hour for his work — $360 for four hours. Small said his normal rate is $45 an hour. He said other charges included $50 for cab fare because the firm's van was broken and $90 for the food itself.

"We've done work for the Kissingers and the Rockefellerers. We don't believe in overcharging just because of their name," said Tom Gerlak, the firm's president.

Small said he presented the bill to Mrs. Kennedy the day after Christmas — $500 plus $35 tax. "She was really furious," he said. "She said it was worth $25..."

Mrs. Kennedy, who was on a skiing vacation with her children, could not be reached for comment.

Foes Of PCB Dumping Site Expected To Show Full Force

WARRENTON, N.C. (AP) — Warrenton National Guard Army. Persons opposing the state's plan to build a permanent disposal site in Warren County for 40,000 cubic yards of PCB-contaminated dirt are expected to be out in full force tonight at a public hearing on the proposal.

Officials for the state and the Environmental Protection Agency, which must approve the state's plan, are co-sponsoring the hearing at 7 p.m. in the Warrenton National Guard Army. He said it would be a "tough decision" and added, "But the buck stops here, and we have to dispose of the PCBs somewhere."

The Warren County commissioners voted Tuesday to oppose the state's disposal plan, saying it would jeopardize the natural environment and economic development of the poor, rural county.

A number of civic groups, including the Warren County chapter of the NAACP, have also come out against the plan.

The state has an option to buy a 142-acre tract of land near Afton, and does not legally need public approval of the proposal because the land is privately owned. The state had originally considered disposing of the toxic chemical in Chatam County, but public sentiment prompted the county commissioners to withdraw an offer to sell the state six county-owned acres for the dump.

The state has been looking for a permanent disposal site ever since PCB-laced oil was illegally dumped along 210 miles of North Carolina highways last summer.

The state intends to bury the contaminated dirt in a trench lined with five-foot-thick walls of compacted clay, covered with a plastic umbrella and several feet of soil. PCB is a nearly indestructible chemical.

Executives To Assist In Hunt Advisory Panel

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt said Wednesday that he has formed an advisory panel of some of the state's top executives to give him advice on state government and long-range economic policy.

"I feel there is a further need, during this period of inflation and increasing economic uncertainty, for our state to use the best talents of our business leaders to help make long-run decisions," Hunt said.

The governor announced that 17 top executives from some of North Carolina's largest corporations have been selected to form the North Carolina Council of Management and Development. The panel is fashioned after the President's Business Roundtable and will be headed by Paul Stich, chief executive officer of R.J. Reynolds Industries in Winston-Salem.

Members represent the state's two major electric utilities, large banks, retail stores and industries, transportation companies and national corporations doing business in the state. Hunt said the executives were chosen for their companies' research capacity and ability to provide technical and professional expertise to state government.

Members of the panel and their companies are: Claude Ramsey, vice chairman, Asheville, Akzona Inc.; John Belk, Charlotte, Belk Stores; C.C. Cameron, Charlotte, First Union Corp.; Fred Coe Jr., Raleigh, Burroughs Wellcome and Co.; Richard Daugherty, Raleigh, IBM; T.H. Davis, Winston-Salem, Piedmont Aviation Inc.; J.L. Imported Carp To Eat Weeds

By TOM FENTON
Associated Press Writer

GAMBOA, Canal Zone (AP) — Thousands of Chinese grass carp have been dumped in the Panama Canal in the hope that they will eat up weeds that foul ship propellers, plug water intakes and clog the gates of the canal locks.

"We've controlled the weeds so far by dumping copper sulphate and herbicide on them," said fisheries biologist Rene Sanchez, "but we'd like to get away from using chemicals and believe the fish may eventually save money."

Sanchez said in the 1978 fiscal year the Panama Canal Company dumped 625,000 pounds of toxic copper sulfate on thousands of acres of hydrilla, a plant whose tendrils may extend 40 feet. Four other kinds of aquatic weeds also can cause trouble in the waterway.

The biologist said the carp, also known as the White Amur because it is native to the Amur River on the Chinese-Soviet border, weighs 50 to 60 pounds at maturity and eats well over its body weight in weeds each day.

The fish has teeth in its throat and eats the weeds by sucking them into its mouth.

It is not expected to spawn in the canal waters, which will enable biologists to control the population.

"To spawn the fish eggs must float down a one-mile-an-hour current of siltless water for about 50 hours," Sanchez said. "We don't have conditions like that here."

The Panama Canal is an inland fresh water system covering more than 170 square miles.

It includes Gatun Lake, which stretches about halfway across the 50-mile-wide isthmus. The lake is 82 feet above sea level and drains through the canal locks into both the Caribbean and Pacific.

Some of the carp are expected to be lost through the locks while others will be eaten by predators. Sanchez said that beginning in two or three years about 25,000 fish will be added annually to replenish the population.

Carib Tribe Has Stake In Survival

By PIETER
VAN BENNEKOM

CARIB INDIAN RESERVATION, Dominica (UPI) — When the Caribbean island of Dominica became independent from Britain in November, there was no great joy in the Carib Indian reservation.

The remote settlement — without electricity, running water, transportation or medical services — is the place where the last of a once-mighty race are trying to save themselves from total extinction.

When Columbus reached the New World, the Caribs inhabited all the islands in the Caribbean. Over the centuries, however, they were eliminated — often brutally — everywhere except on Dominica.

Instead of celebrating the island's independence under its new black leadership, the Carib tribesmen gathered on the reservation to hear their five council members recite the history of the Caribs, denounce five centuries of oppression by both whites and blacks and warn the Indians against more broken promises by the rulers of the day.

The Indians' main complaint is over land. They claim black Dominican squatters have been invading their communally-owned tribal lands and they have been unable to evict them because they have no legal title.

Before independence, the Dominican government of Prime Minister Patrick John promised to give the tribe title to about 3,700 acres. The tribe claimed double that amount.

"But I'm still waiting to hear from him," says Faustulus Frederick, the 28-year-old chief of the tribe who has served one three-year term and is running for re-election. "It looks like another case of broken promises."

Frederick says the discrimination and oppression the Indians are suffering at the hands of black rulers hurts even more than the persecution by whites in centuries past.

Because the Caribs resisted being enslaved by whites until death, he said, they looked with sympathy upon runaway black slaves imported later by white planters and gave them refuge on their reserve, letting them marry into the tribe.

"But the black man didn't show any gratitude," Frederick says.

He also explained that the mixture with runaway slaves started the watering down of the race. At present, the Carib Indian reservation has 2,500 residents but Frederick himself says he doesn't think there are any 100 percent pure Indians and only 25 percent or about 600 are "pretty close to pure."

Outside sources estimate the number of more-or-less pure Indians at about half that — 300 — even though many residents of the reserve seem to have typical Indian features such as long, wavy black hair, light skins, narrow eyes and delicate facial features in sharp contrast to blacks.

They scrounge a precarious living on the rugged eastern Atlantic shores of Dominica, making dugout canoes, weaving baskets, fishing and growing bananas and other food crops. But the reserve is becoming more and more a cash economy with people buying supplies from a grocery truck which makes the difficult trip into the grass huts area once a week.

Frederick says he isn't sure whether the tribe can survive.

"On the one hand I say, yes, we will survive, because our political consciousness is higher now — we know what affects us. But on the other hand, I say, no, we probably cannot survive because we have been oppressed so long and if the oppression continues, we will disappear from the face of the earth."

When Columbus discovered the West Indies in 1492, he found the Caribs, then a tribe of fierce warriors, in control of all the islands. The word Carib is a bastardization of "cannibal" because the first Spanish historians to reach the area thought they ate each other.

Carib custom was to dig up the bones of strong, powerful tribesmen from the cemetery long after they had died and their flesh had rotted away and hang the human bones in their huts in the hope that some of the strength might rub off on them, too.

But Frederick says the Spanish conquerors drew the wrong conclusion and the cannibalism story is a "myth — there is no evidence to support it."

Colonization of the Americas by white European settlers pushed the Indians farther and farther back because they would rather die than work as slaves on plantations. In Grenada, at a place called Sauteurs (The Jumpers), many Indians jumped to their deaths off a cliff rather than become slaves.

The Caribs eventually were pushed back to Dominica, an island with such a rugged terrain that it didn't lend itself to plantation culture. A Franco-British peace treaty in 1763 left Dominica, called Wytukubuli (meaning: this island has no poison), to the Indians.

But the French and English soon started fighting again over the right to "protect" the Indians and eventually the island came under Britain.

After centuries of degradation and denigration, Frederick says, he now is trying to revive the tribe's interest and pride in its ancestry. He says he has compiled a list of about 200 surviving words from the Carib language — most of the Indians these days speak a French patois — and he hopes to expand that vocabulary into a full-fledged, living language again.

He says he is trying to get money to build a "model village" on the reservation where Caribs can learn how they used to live, cook and speak, as a monument to the history of the race.

He has joined the World Congress of Indigenous Peoples, a federation of aboriginal groups from Australia, Canada, the United States, Central and South America. He traveled to Sweden last year for a congress to drum up international publicity for the Caribs' struggle for survival.

He claims he has been successful in getting the Dominica government to pay some attention to the plight of the Caribs only by putting pressure on Canada, a major foreign aid donor.

But he says the tribe has a long way to go to create the conditions for its own survival. He denounced the Carib Act passed by the Dominican parliament, which includes the promise of the land title, as "too much interference in Carib affairs."

The act creates the new position of deputy chief named by the prime minister. Frederick says he needs a government-appointed deputy "like a hole in the head."

The law also provides for regulation of tribal elections by Dominican officials and doesn't even attempt to define a Carib. Frederick said he had pressed unsuccessfully for a ruling that only those born on the reserve of at least one Carib parent be allowed to live here and that persons marrying outside the tribe should be forced off.

The Caribs have a hard time getting loans for development projects because tribal regulations forbid the mortgaging of communal lands as collateral. And they have a long list of other grievances.

Frederick, an abstract painter who is the youngest tribal chief ever, says he's willing to give it a try, living in the new nation of Dominica, "but if they (the government) don't give us what we want, we'll have to get our own independence."

Reminds Trees Need Attention

"Every farmer knows that row crops need almost continuous attention from planting to harvest. But some believe that they can leave their woods completely alone up to 10 or 20 years and they'll do alright."

This comment was voiced by Chairman Robert G. Little of the Pitt Soil and Water Conservation District, who added, "Management of woodlands can be one of the most profitable farm enterprises and here in winter, during a slack time for field crops, is the best time to take a good look at your trees."

The chairman pointed out, "Winter is a good time to work in the woods. The weather is cool and there are no insect bites. The leaves have fallen and you can see what your woodland really looks like."

He continued that winter is the best time to cut firewood and cutting defective trees gives quality trees room to grow. "Don't fool yourself, they do need room. Crowding reduces growth and takes away some of your potential profit from woodlands. Pine trees particularly need full sunlight and room to grow to produce sawtimber and bring the top dollar."

"Expensive tools are not necessary. You will be surprised what you can do with a power saw, an axe and a pole pruning saw — and if you put in a couple of weeks work each winter, the results will soon be easy to see."

The chairman pointed out technical expertise is readily available and provided free by service agencies. He said planning assistance can be obtained by calling the USDA-Soil Conservation Service, Extension Service, N. C. Forest Service or from industrial or consulting foresters.

Groundbreaking

Groundbreaking ceremonies are scheduled for Friday at 11 a.m. for the new East Carolina Stockyards, located on NC 11 just south of Ayden-Grifton High School.

Brian Hargett, owner, said the facilities are scheduled for completion by Aug. 1.

Included in the planned facilities are a livestock building with hog and cattle pens, and also offices and an arena with heating and air conditioning. The arena, Hargett added, will have theatre seats for buyers and spectators.

Sales, accomplished through tele-auction, will be held at the stockyards every Monday for feeder pigs and every Wednesday for hogs and cattle, it was reported.

Hargett noted that the facility may be used for shows and pure-bred sales by county agriculture agents, 4-H groups and other agencies.

Dr. Hook: Proved Too Hot For Laundromats

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

"In Europe, we're so successful, Ray can't go out and do his laundry. He'd be mobbed," says Dennis Locorriere, one of the lead vocalists in Dr. Hook, about the seven-man group's other lead vocalist, Ray Sawyer.

"Everybody in music complains about that kind of thing, but who ain't looking for it?"

Dr. Hook has a hit single, "Sharing the Night Together." The song started December by jumping into the 10 best-selling records in the U.S. and kept climbing. The Capitol album it's from, "Pleasure & Pain," also is climbing the charts. Dr. Hook has three gold singles already. "Sylvia's Mother," "The Cover of the Rolling Stone" and "Only 16."

It has been an up-and-down life for the group but optimism and friendship have been constant, the two lead vocalists say. Dr. Hook started as a bar band and once landed right back in the less-than-fancy bars.

The start was 1969, when Sawyer and Billy Francis decided to try the New York music scene.

"We stopped in Union City, N.J.," Sawyer recalls. "We thought we were close enough. All this area is New York to me." Locorriere, who lives in Union City, sat in, playing drums or guitar or singing, with whatever bands came through town.

The name, Dr. Hook and the Medicine Show Band, came from Francis, who had Captain Hook and his missing hand from "Peter Pan" in mind, applying it to Sawyer, who wears an eye patch because of losing an eye in a car wreck 14 years ago. Locorriere thinks Francis may have had had the Peter Pan story slightly mixed up. They needed a name so the bartender could put a sign in the window saying who was playing music in his establishment.

"Every night some drunk would tell us he could make us famous," Locorriere says. "We believed it every night. We made a tape with a Bob Dylan song on it and two songs we wrote that afternoon and a Buck Owens song — anything we were playing well at the time."

The tape went to a fledgling record producer who decided he couldn't use it but played it for Ron Haffkine, who was musical director of the movie "Who Is Harry Kellerman and Why Is He Saying Those Terrible Things About Me." Haffkine hired them to sing Shel Silverstein's "Last Morning" for the movie, Locorriere says.

RAY SAWYER

Then they were signed to Columbia Records, where they made three LPs and had their first two single hits. They also went broke. "We were living in San Francisco then," Locorriere says, "and if someone in Indiana wanted us to come and play, we'd do it, even if it cost us more to get there than they paid us."

It was also at the time of a recession. The group's lawyers advised them to go into bankruptcy and they did. Sawyer says, "We went back into bars — in Berkeley and Oakland. Everybody took $6 a day for food, for about a year and a half."

Contracts were canceled by the bankruptcy action, including with Columbia Records. Haffkine, the group's producer and co-manager since 1970, called a meeting and said anybody who wanted to could leave. Nobody did, from roadies to group members to Haffkine.

"I have to attribute it to friendship," Locorriere says. "Attitude is much more important to us even than the music, if a band is allowed to say that. A philosophy you can roll with — you can't want anything better than that."

"We recorded five tracks in a little studio in Chinatown in San Francisco. We recorded 'Only 16,' which pulled us out of bankruptcy, and 'The Millionaire.'

"It was a strange thing for a bunch of guys who couldn't see light at the end of the tunnel to be recording that song while the engineers were saying, 'If we don't get paid, we're going to have to shut this session down.'" Sawyer says they always thought they would be successful again. "It worked yesterday. Why wouldn't it work tomorrow?"

Capitol Records signed them, on the basis of those five tracks, and they have put out "Bankrupt," "A Little Bit More" — with its hit single title-song, "Makin' Love and Music" and "Pleasure & Pain."

Every single is much different from the one before.

Researches Find Risk Of Cancer In Estrogen

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — The largest study ever conducted on women who take estrogen during menopause concludes the medicine can cause cancer of the uterus and that the risk increases the longer it is used.

Estrogen should be prescribed "only for important indications when the benefits seem to outweigh the risk," it said.

The study, conducted at Johns Hopkins University and published in today's edition of the New England Journal of Medicine, refutes a Yale University report published two months ago which concluded that the link between estrogen and cancer is based on faulty research.

Estrogen is a natural female hormone that is widely prescribed to ease the discomforts of menopause in middle-aged women.

"The new work should dispel controversy about the association between estrogen use and uterine cancer," Food and Drug Commissioner Donald Kennedy said in Washington. "Women now taking or considering taking these drugs should read carefully the information provided with them and discuss the drugs with their doctors."

The study is the latest argument in a continuing debate over the safety of estrogen supplements during the change of life.

The study examined 1,339 women in menopause and concluded that those who take estrogen pills are six times more likely than non-users to have cancer of the uterine lining.

For those who use the medicine for more than five years, the risk is 15 times greater.

A series of earlier reports, most of them also published in the New England Journal, found that estrogen increased the risk of cancer four to eight times. All of them were based on smaller numbers of women than the latest study.

However, last November, the journal carried another study by Yale doctors that concluded the suspected cancer link could be discounted if erroneous research methods were taken into consideration. They maintained that uterine cancer is more likely to be discovered in women who take estrogen because they are under a doctor's care.

Authors of the Johns Hopkins study said their survey took into account this and other objections, but their research still showed a risk of cancer.

Dr. Paul Stolley, who directed the new study, said women can still take estrogen during menopause without facing an unreasonable threat of cancer.

"I think it could be discussed with the woman whether or not she wants to run the risk," Stolley, who is now at the University of Pennsylvania, said in an interview. "The data suggest that the short-term use of a year or six months is not a great risk. The big risk comes at five years or more."

Stolley said hot flashes are the only symptom of menopause that estrogen is proven to be effective against. He said doctors should not prescribe the hormone for other complaints, such as depression and irritability.

Summitry In The Caribbean

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON
AP Diplomatic Correspondent

SAINT-FRANCOIS, Guadeloupe (AP) — President Carter and the government chiefs of Britain, France and West Germany begin an informal, two-day summit meeting today haunted by the specter of anarchy in Iran.

Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, told reporters in Washington Wednesday that the president in his talks with French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and British Prime Minister James Callaghan would reiterate his support for Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Brzezinski said the three European leaders agree with Carter's backing for the threatened shah, one of the biggest customers for their arms and other manufactures and a major source of oil for Western industry. All four leaders are deeply concerned that if power slips from the shah's grip, Iran's new leaders might turn to the Soviet Union, the country's big northern neighbor.

Billed by the French hosts as an "informal and friendly meeting" on "the state of the world at the end of 1978 and beginning of 1979," the summit will also assess new moves in the American-Soviet SALT negotiations to limit nuclear arms, the normalizing of relations between the United States and China, Chinese shopping for Western arms, the deadlocked Egyptian-Israeli peace negotiations, the continuing black-white confrontation in southern Africa and the money and trading problems of the Western world.

Brzezinski said Carter would solicit advice from the European leaders about how to deal with "gray area" tactical nuclear weapons — those with short or medium range — during the next phase of SALT talks with the Russians.

These have been excluded from previous SALT talks, which have dealt with the long-range missiles and aircraft that constitute the chief Soviet and American deterrents on each other. But the "gray area" weapons threaten European cities; the French and British have their own, and the Germans provide the territory on which the Americans deploy about 7,000 to 8,000 tactical nuclear weapons.

The Carters were also bringing their 12-year-old daughter Amy and planned to stay on for a three-day vacation, returning to Washington Tuesday night.

Trading-Cards To Fight Crime

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — Seattle-area police are giving crime-fighting advice to kids through basketball trading cards.

And youngsters in this 72,000-population community are swapping them with a frenzy, says Police Capt. Dan Hansen.

On one side of the cards are pictures of the Seattle SuperSonics, the city's pro basketball team. The other side contains a bit of basketball wisdom and a crime-fighting tip.

"We've distributed thousands," Hansen said. "We just put them all in a box and the men grab them in the morning on their way out. It's part of their equipment now, like hand-cuffs and guns. The officers are besieged by kids when they drive by an elementary school."

The back of one card featuring 6-foot-7 forward Wally Walker defines the basketball term, "fast break," then reminds youngsters: "If you see a stranger offering rides, candy or presents make a fast break and tell your parents or teacher."

Rose Holds Off Hunt For 70-69 Win

By WOODY PEELE

Reflector Sports Editor

ROCK RIDGE — Rose High School opened its Division I conference schedule last night by holding off Wilson Hunt High School, 70-69, in a game that was close all the way.

Hunt's girls, however, nipped the Rampettes, 52-50, to spoil their conference debut. Earlier, Hunt's junior varsity gained an 82-74 win.

The game was a back-and-forth affair through the first three quarters, as the score was tied on eight occasions and saw 20 lead changes.

Rose, however, managed to pull away to a five-point lead just before the period came to an end, and they pushed out by nine with just over three and a half minutes left in the game.

But in the final two minutes, Hunt put on a rally that nearly brought them back, and left the end of the game surrounded in controversy.

Hunt's Dwight Taylor converted from underneath with four seconds left, and the in-bounds play saw the ball go out of bounds on the sideline near the Warrior basket. Neither official, however, saw who knocked the ball out, and despite Hunt pleas that Rose had knocked it away, a jump ball was called with one second showing. Hunt controlled the tap, but the horn went off before the ball could be shot.

"The officials just didn't see it," Rose Coach Jim Brewington said. "I don't know who knocked it out. It was just one of those things."

Brewington said he felt the Rampants got good play from everyone in the game. "We had too many turnovers. It was a tough game all the way."

"We did some things that we had practiced right, but we tried to give it away there at the end. I'm just glad to get our first conference win in our first game."

Neither team could establish a lead early, as Rose took the initial lead on a shot by Anthony Gorham. But Hunt came back to take a 6-2 lead, as Taylor hit two free throws, and Jerome Bullock and Stan Woodard both scored baskets.

Rose kept it close, and eventually moved up by three at 16-13 before taking a 20-17 lead at the horn.

Rose got its biggest lead of the first half on the first basket of the second period as Dennis Ross hit for a 22-17 margin. Hunt came back, however, and again the two swapped the lead back and forth with Rose emerging with a 34-32 margin at the half.

The third quarter was even more hectic, with neither team able to pull away until the final minute, when the Rampants finally inched out by five, 54-49. Calvin Whichard put Rose ahead to stay at 50-49 with 1:06 left, and Gorham added two free throws with 44 seconds to go. Donald House hit off a rebound with eight seconds left for the final score of the quarter.

In the early going of the final period, Rose pulled out to a nine-point spread, 63-54, as House hit a three-point play with 3:33 remaining.

But Taylor sparked a comeback in the final three and a half, most of it coming in the final two minutes, when they rimed it from 68-60 to 68-67.

Whichard then hit two free throws with 21 seconds to go, but after Wallace Brown missed on the front of a one-and-one with 12 seconds left, Taylor came down o score and cut it to one, nearly forcing the turnover after that.

Taylor finished with a game-high 26 to lead Hunt, while David Mitchell added 19 and Woodard had 12.

Rampants Top Nash

Rose High School's Rampants rolled to a 32-20 wrestling victory over Northern Nash last night.

The victory was the fourth in five league starts for Rose and left them with a 4-4 overall record.

The Rampants took seven of the 13 weight classes, while Northern took five, including one by forfeit. One weight resulted in a double forfeit.

The Rampants play host to Wilson Fike tonight.

Rose was led by House with 21, while Ross had 12 and Whichard had 11.

In the girls' game, the Rampettes trailed all the way, falling back by as much as 12 points before coming back to force three ties. But Rose was never able to take the lead.

"We were very sluggish early," Coach Robert Carraway said. "But I wasn't worried. We had been doing real well in practice and I was sure that once we got going, we'd get back in the game."

"But we did everything fine except rebound, and that killed us. We had no offense inside. Without Donna (Cullipher) we are hurting inside," Cullipher led a comeback that cut it to 29-21 at the half.

Rose continued its comeback in the third period, holding Hunt to only six points, as the Warrior lead fell to 35-33 by the buzzer.

Rose then tied it up at 35-35 and 37-37, but missed out on a chance to take the lead, and fell back again by as much as five, 47-42. They came back to finally tie it again at 50-50 with 39 seconds left on a running hook by Streeter, but Theresa Wells scored from underneath with 16 seconds left for the final 52-50 margin.

Rose had one more chance to tie it up, but missed.

Wells added 13 for Hunt, while Cynthia Tyson had 11.

Rose was led by Streeter with 18 and McGlohon with 16.

The Rampettes are now 3-4 overall and 0-1 in the league, while Hunt is 2-7 overall and 1-0. The Rampants are 3-6 overall and 1-0 in the league, while Hunt

Washington Easily Holds To Number One

By Al Carson

The Durham Sun

Gastonia Ashbrook held onto the number one position in The Associated Press North Carolina 4-A high school basketball rankings with 44-44 win over No. 2 Hickory this week.

In the 3-A poll, Washington remains the No. 1 team, by a unanimous vote, following its 111-72 drubbing of Plymouth.

Ashbrook handed Hickory its first loss of the season, paced by 6-foot-8 James Worthy's 14 points. Gastonia used its zone defense and control offense in upping its record to -1, with the only loss coming against Dematha.

"They not only have Worthy, they have a heckuva good team," said Hickory coach David Craft, after the loss.

Washington went to Dominique Wilkins once more, in its latest romp. Wilkins scored 44 points and grabbed 22 rebounds as the Pam Pack upped its record 10-0.

South Iredell (10-0) and Hendersonville 9-0 are the second and third place teams in the 3-A ranks this week and the only undefeated teams other than Washington.

Television's Finest Hours Certainly Not Bowl Coverage

By HOWARD SMITH
AP Sports Writer

ABC kicked off college football's biggest weekend of the season by fumbling the ball on the Woody Hayes' incident, then compounded the fracture by blowing the opening kickoff of the Sugar Bowl.

CBS, with only one bowl to deal with, provided absolutely amateurish coverage of the Cotton Bowl, topped off by completely missing the touchdown that Notre Dame scored as time ran out to cap its amazing comeback.

NBC didn't blow anything of import and, in fact, did a good job capturing the only controversial play that came up. Charles White's fumble that officials wrongly ruled a Southern Cal touchdown. But NBC did manage, with questionable motives, to sabotage the Rose Bowl's halftime show.

It was not television's finest hour. Bleary-eyed viewers who sat through nine national games, including the pros, over a 4-day period deserved better.

The main cause celebre, of course, came Friday night in the Gator Bowl when Ohio State's charming coach Woody Hayes slugged a Clemson player in the game's waning moments. The incident, unprecedented on national TV, led to Hayes' dismissal after 28 years on the job.

ABC showed the incident clearly but never televised a replay. And commentators Keith Jackson and Ara Parseghian ignored the whole thing.

All of which brought forth an avalanche of irate phone calls to the network's switchboard in New York and cries of "cover-up" throughout the land.

Producer Bob Goodrich, the man running the show in Jacksonville, offers the following explanation. He had three sources for videotape replay. With Ohio State driving toward a possible score with less than two minutes left, he decided to use the videotape on two wide receivers and use the third for an end zone shot. Thus he had no replay capability on the main feed, the picture that everyone sees at home.

Upstairs in the broadcast booth, Jackson and Parseghian were not watching their monitor. They were watching the field and lost track of the Clemson player in a sea of bodies when he was knocked out of bounds.

There is no excuse for missing the opening kickoff of the Sugar Bowl, a game ABC has been touting for weeks. The network was showing a commercial at the time and that was just poor coordination, an embarrassment to a network that considers itself No. 1 in sports.

CBS does not consider itself No. 1 in sports and after watching its Cotton Bowl coverage one can see why. Poor camera angles, sloppy sideline work, a lack of interesting replays all led to the ultimate failure, showing the crucial touchdown from an angle that made it impossible to see what happened. Even the presence of old pro Lindsey Nelson could not compensate for a dismal production.

As for the Rose Bowl, what we have here is one of those fascinating "coincidences" that pop up from time to time. At halftime the Michigan band had planned a salute to "Battlestar Galactica", which is an ABC show. NBC cut away to provide viewers with old Olympic footage of George Foreman and others in whom there is virtually no interest these days.

O'Koren Leads Tar Heels Past Clemson; Virginia Tops Wake

By The Associated Press

North Carolina Coach Dean Smith said Mike O'Koren played his "usual sensational game" Wednesday night as his 22-point effort led the Tar Heels to an easy 90-68 win over Clemson in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball action in Greensboro.

In other games involving ACC teams, Virginia coasted to an 88-75 win over Wake Forest and Maryland overcame a George Washington lead to score an 84-72 victory. There are no matches tonight involving ACC teams.

Clemson had been undefeated until third-ranked North Carolina outshot the Tigers, now 9-1 overall and 0-1 in the ACC.

Smith said the Tar Heels played solid defense and "shot well and took good shots." North Carolina, now 8-1 overall and 1-0 in the ACC, is the first squad this season to score more than 74 points on the Tigers.

In addition to O'Koren's 22 points, Tar Heels Al Wood and Dave Colestock scored in double figures, with 16 and 10 points respectively.

over Wake Forest in the ACC opener for both clubs. Lee Raker hit 10 of 17 shots from the field, scored five baskets in a four-minute span midway through the first half when Virginia, 6-3 overall and 1-0 in the ACC, streaked to leads of as many as 13 points.

"We got off to a very good start and that was really important," Holland said. I was pleased with the movement away from the ball."

MARYLAND 84, GEORGE WASHINGTON 72

Albert King and Larry Gibson scored 20 points apiece to help 20th-ranked Maryland overcome George Washington lead for an 84-72 victory at College Park, Md.

It was a comeback for the Terps who had lost the last two years to GW, and also their eighth win in a row.

Maryland, now 10-2, trailed their neighborhood rivals 42-35 with time running out in the first half before King rallied the Terps by scoring four fast points in a row.

Gibson added another four early in the second half, followed by three by Ernie Graham, to put the Terps ahead 57-48.

VIRGINIA 88, WAKE FOREST 75

Virginia Coach Terry Holland said the Cavaliers weren't up to their potential, but said he was pleased with their 88-75 win

THE WOODY HAYES incident in Friday night's Gator Bowl was a deplorable spectacle, but ABC-TV's handling of the matter on the game broadcast was almost as bad.

Announcers Keith Jackson and Ara Parseghian completely ignored the fact that Hayes slugged Clemson nose guard Charlie Bauman after the latter intercepted a fourth-quarter Ohio State pass that ended the Buckeyes' hopes of a victory. The Tigers won the game 17-15.

The way the network handled the matter, many viewers had to wait until the next day to find out for sure if they saw what they thought they saw: Hayes attacking Bauman and striking him in the throat when he ran out of bounds at the Ohio State bench after his interception.

The veteran coach's action started a melee that lasted several minutes and cleared both benches. But even after showing a replay that was stopped just at the point of Hayes' attack, the ABC crew said they could figure no cause for the fight that resulted in a 15-yard penalty against the Buckeyes. Baloney. They just weren't saying.

The network later explained that there was no replay equipment on the upper deck camera and therefore they could not show the scene from that angle. But the end zone camera that they used for the replay during the broadcast would have shown what happened if only they had left it on long enough.

Whatever the reason for not reshooting what happened on the sideline, there was no excuse for Jackson and Parseghian not telling fans what was going on. Hayes' anger and the fight itself were repeatedly mentioned, but the two were never tied together. This was a great disservice to the game's viewers.

Parseghian, the former Notre Dame coach who may end up at LSU after next season according to the rumor mill, can probably be excused for not placing blame on one of his former colleagues. But there is no excuse for Jackson, who is first and foremost a journalist.

Jackson has always been one of the better sports announcers in the ABC stable, but his handling of the Hayes incident is regrettable at best.

What Happened To Duke?

Duke's top-ranked basketball team was riding high when they reached Madison Square Garden last weekend for the ECAC Holiday Festival tournament. The undefeated Blue Devils were heavy favorites to extend their winning streak.

Friday night against Ohio State, all was going well for Duke as it built up a 17-point lead and appeared ready to ride it out for an easy win. But the bottom fell out on the Blue Devils and they allowed the Buckeyes to battle back for a 90-84 victory.

Pity poor St. Johns, which had to catch the Devils on the rebound and bear the brunt of the previous night's frustration. Duke took it out on the Redmen for three-quarters of the game, building up a 19-point margin. But again the tide was turned on the Blue Devils and they fell to their second straight defeat, 69-66.

Coach Bill Foster and the team are now in a position where they must turn things around fast, but there are a couple of good things about the losses. First, they occurred early enough in the season that there is plenty of time to make up for them; second, they were both non-conference games and therefore don't affect the team's ACC standing.

Tuesday night's 77-59 win over Davidson was evidence that perhaps they are back on the right track.

Judge Hinders Colorado Move

BOSTON (AP) — A U.S. District Court judge has sacked lame-duck New England Patriots Coach Chuck Fairbanks, who wants to run from the National Football League to the University of Colorado.

Responding to a suit filed by the NFL team, Judge A. David Mazzone issued a temporary injunction Wednesday prohibiting Colorado from signing Fairbanks to a coaching contract.

A hearing will be held Jan. 12 on the Patriots' request for a permanent injunction that would bar the university from inducing the coach to break his NFL pact, which has four years and an option season left at $150,000 a year.

Colorado Athletic Director Eddie Crowder already has said Fairbanks will coach at the university. Crowder, who was in Miami for a Big Eight Conference meeting, was unavailable for comment Wednesday.

Colorado President Roland Rautenstrauss said he could not comment

Wildcats Find Gator Alley A Tough Place To Swallow

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

They call it "Gator Alley," and more than one visiting college basketball team has been swallowed up there.

That's what happened to the Kentucky Wildcats Wednesday night.

"I guess we didn't have the same mental attitude and enthusiasm as we had against Notre Dame," Kentucky Coach Joe Hall said after his ninth-ranked team dropped a 76-65 decision to Florida in Gainesville, a ferocious court for a visitor.

The Wildcats, who had upset second-ranked Notre Dame 81-76 last Saturday night, certainly didn't match that fiery level Wednesday night. The Gators, meanwhile, didn't lack for intensity.

"We won this game because my players didn't let up for 40 minutes," said Florida Coach John Lotz. "We needed this one for our confidence. There are difficult games ahead and I'm thinking about Alabama next week. But I'm really not surprised we won, because we worked hard for it."

Hall was perplexed, though. "It was hard to understand the loss," he said. "But I guess it's a young team on the road. We played like a young team. We didn't play with enthusiasm and aggressiveness."

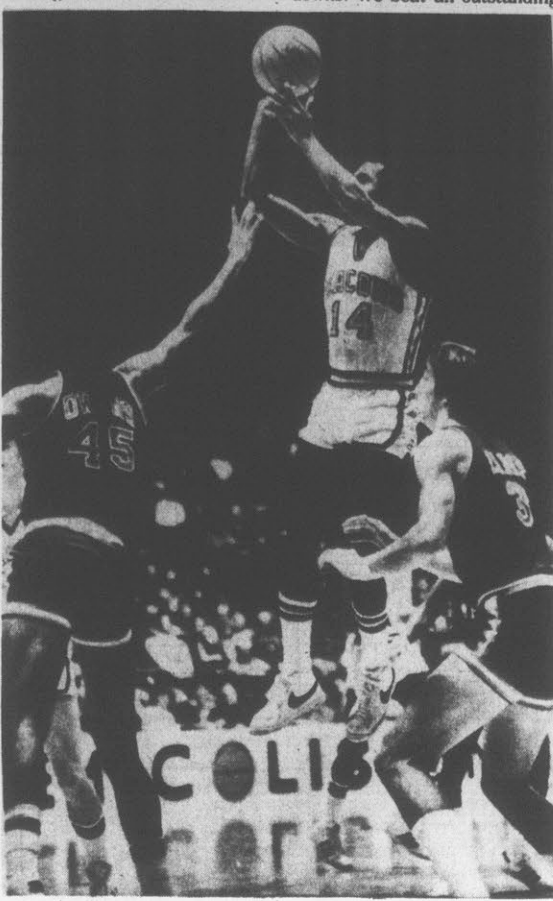

Kentucky wasn't the only ranked team that had problems in the Southeastern Conference Wednesday night. Mississippi State, the nation's No. 18 club, was beaten 87-65 by Alabama.

In another SEC opener, No. 7 Louisiana State played according to form and blasted Georgia 97-75.

In other action involving the Top Twenty, No. 3 North Carolina whipped Clemson 90-68; No. 11 Indiana State defeated Tulsa 101-89; 17th-ranked Marquette turned back Brown 57-49 and No. 20 Maryland trimmed George Washington University 84-72.

Reggie Hannah scored 21 points and Ric Clarkson had 20 to lead Florida's upset of Kentucky.

"Clarence Tillman played aggressively on offense, but defensively, the team was unable to stop anything from Florida's offense," said Hall. "Florida played really well tonight. They played an overall good game throughout."

Eddie Phillips scored 21 points and collected 10 rebounds to pace Alabama over Mississippi State. Phillips took over the Crimson Tide's main duties when leading man Reggie King was hit with early foul trouble.

"The young kids played super," noted Alabama Coach C.M. Newton. "We had no let-downs. We beat an outstanding basketball team." Al Green scored 27 points and DeWayne Scales had 23 as undefeated LSU beat Georgia for its ninth victory. Georgia played without Lucius Foster, the Bulldogs' top rebounder.

"We beat the point spread by probably 25 points," Georgia Coach Hugh Durham said, tongue-in-cheek. "We played the No. 7 team in the country and we're probably somewhere around 75th. You figure two points by position and they ought to beat us by 150 points."

"They're talented. If you were going to choose up sides you wouldn't pick too many of those red shirts (Georgia) out there."

LSU Coach Dale Brown enjoyed his conference-opening victory, but dreaded the coming week.

"We now have a ludicrous road trip — three games in one week," Brown said. "That shouldn't happen. Kentucky, Vanderbilt and Alabama, all in one week and all on the road."

Mike O'Koren's 22 points led North Carolina past Clemson, which lost for the first time after nine straight victories.

"I thought O'Koren played his usual sensational game," said Tar Heel Coach Dean Smith. "He does so many things that don't show up in the box score."

Larry Bird scored 27 points and grabbed 19 rebounds as Indiana State opened its Missouri Valley Conference season with a victory over Tulsa. Bernard Toone's 22 points powered Marquette over Brown. Albert King and Larry Gibson contributed 20 points apiece to lead Maryland over George Washington. The Terps established themselves with an 11-point run near the end of the first half.

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Considering that New Orleans was 2-18 on the road this season and the San Antonio Spurs had won six in a row at home and 10 of their last 11 overall, maybe the Jazz did pretty well to battle to an 18-18 tie with Larry Kenon in the last quarter.

Unfortunately for Elgin Baylor's club, the rest of the Spurs scored 23 more over the same span to give San Antonio a 123-97 National Basketball Association victory Wednesday night.

Kenon, ignoring a sore wrist, scored 12 of his 18 fourth-quarter points in a six-minute span during which the Spurs scored 21 straight points to go from a 90-89 edge to a 111-89 lead. He finished with 35 points and 17 rebounds.

Julius Erving scored 26 points and Henry Bibby added a season-high 24 as Philadelphia moved into first place in the Atlantic Division by the slimmest of margins over the Washington Bullets.

The standings read .676 for both teams, but carried out another percentage point, Philadelphia is .6764 to Washington's .6756.

Kings 108, Nuggets 101 Kansas City opened a four-game lead in the Midwest as rookie Phil Ford scored 26 points

"I thought I played a pretty good game overall. Once we got our running game going, we took off," said Kenon in quite an understatement.

The Jazz, led by Truck Robinson's 29 points for the game, led 54-50 at halftime and stayed close until the 21-point blowout, but 30 errors, most in the final quarter, left asur taste in Baylor's mouth.

In other NBA games, the Los Angeles Lakers beat the Atlanta Hawks 99-96, the Philadelphia 76ers crushed the Chicago Bulls 111-98, the Indiana Pacers defeated the Milwaukee Bucks 108-102, the Houston Rockets outscored the New Jersey Nets 127-122, the Kansas City Kings belted to Denver Nuggets 108-101, the Golden State Warriors bested the Detroit Pistons 96-81 and the Seattle SuperSonics trimmed the Boston Celtics 123-116.

76ers 111, Bulls 98 Julius Erving scored 26 points and Henry Bibby added a season-high 24 as Philadelphia moved into first place in the Atlantic Division by the slimmest of margins over the Washington Bullets.

The standings read .676 for both teams, but carried out another percentage point, Philadelphia is .6764 to Washington's .6756.

Kings 108, Nuggets 101 Kansas City opened a four-game lead in the Midwest as rookie Phil Ford scored 26 points in the foul-filled game.

Denver, which has lost seven games at home after dropping only eight last season and five the year before, got 26 points from David Thompson, but George McGinnis, one of five players who fouled out, managed only 14 — 11 below his average.

Rockets 127, Nets 122 Four Rockets netted more than 20 points and Rudy Tomjanovich, a mask covering his broken nose, contributed 17 more, including two critical jump shots down the stretch, as Houston handed New Jersey its sixth straight loss.

Rick Barry led the Rockets with 28, Moses Malone and Calvin Murphy tallied 27 apiece and Mike Newlin added 21.

The Nets, playing without suspended Coach Kevin Loughery, dropped to a 17-17 record after a brilliant start for last year's doormats.

Pacers 108, Bucks 102 Reserve Alex English, boos ringing in his ears, scored 19 of his 27 points in the fourth quarter as Indiana rallied from a 14-point deficit to defeat Milwaukee.

English, who signed with the Pacers as a free agent last year after his Milwaukee contract expired, sank 11 of 16 shots to give Indiana only its third road victory in 18 games this season. Ricky Sobers led the Pacers' scoring with 28.

Lakers 99, Hawks 96

Jamaal Wilkes scored 20 points and started a 10-point streak in the final minutes as Los Angeles broke an 11-game homecourt winning streak for Atlanta.

The Hawks led 92-87 with five minutes remaining, but the Lakers ran off 10 in a row to take a commanding lead. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who had two baskets in the streak, finished with 18 for the Lakers.

Warriors 96, Pistons 81 While Detroit center Bob Lanier sat on the bench with foul trouble, Golden State outscored the hapless Pistons 15-3 in a five-minute span of the third period to wipe out a 48-39 deficit.

The Pistons, with the NBA's worst record at 12-26, hit only four of 20 shots in the third quarter after taking a 40-35 halftime lead.

Sonny Parker led all scorers with 24 points for Golden State.

Avoided Reruns To Win Ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS avoided the Christmas week reruns offered by the competition, and won the network's ratings race for the week ending Dec. 31 despite a strong showing at the top by ABC.

For CBS, it was the second No. 1 finish in three weeks, and just the fourth time since the season's start that ABC was lower than first, NBC, meanwhile, was No. 3 for the 10th week in a row.

The week was hardly typical. ABC listed the five most-watched prime-time programs, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed, but all were repeats of previous episodes. Of CBS' four top-rated programs, three were new installments.

"Laverne and Shirley" was No. 1 for the second week in a row, with a rating of 30.3. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, 30.3 percent saw at least part of the program.

CBS' top show for the week was "60 Minutes," sixth in the ratings, followed by a new episode of the network's hit comedy, "One Day at a Time." A new version of the Victor Hugo classic, "Les Miserables," on CBS, was a strong finisher — tied for ninth with a rerun of the same network's "M-A-S-H."

For NBC, it was one of the worst weeks of the season. The network's top-rated program, "Quincy, M.E.," was tied for 19th.

CBS avoided the bottom of the ratings, while ABC had three in the last five and NBC two. An "ABC News Closeup" on human rights was tied for 37th with "David Cassidy: Undercover" on NBC, and followed by "Hardy Boys Mysteries" on ABC, NBC's "Weekend," and ABC's "Fast Lane Blues."

CBS' rating for the week was 19.9, followed by ABC at 17.1 and NBC at 14.2. The networks say that means in an average prime time minute during the week, 19.9 percent of the homes in the country with TV were tuned to CBS.

Here are the week's Top 10 programs:

"Laverne and Shirley," with a rating of 30.3 representing 22.6 million homes, "Three's Company," 30.2 or 22.5 million, "Happy Days," 27.6 or 20.6 million, "Mork and Mindy," 27.4 or 20.4 million, and "Love Boat," 26.4 or 19.7 million, all

ABC: "60 Minutes," 24.6 or 18.3 million, and "One Day at a Time," 23.7 or 17.7 million, both CBS: "What's Happening," 23.3 or 17.4 million, ABC, and "M-A-S-H" and "Les Miserables," both 23.2 or 17.3 million, both CBS.

The next 10 shows: "Taxi" and "Fantasy Island," both ABC; "Barnaby Jones," "Alice" and "All in the Family," all CBS; "Barney Miller," "Eight is Enough" and "Charlie's Angels," all ABC, and "The Incredible Hulk," CBS, and "Quincy, M.E.," NBC, tie.

at some tables East found the killing defense of a third diamond.

Declarer ruffed with an honor, and had West overruffed, there would have been no tale to tell. But West simply discarded, and now he had to score a trump trick as well as the ace of clubs for a one-trick set.

Among the players to find the defense were world champions Bob Hamman and Bobby Wolff, and two California ladies — Jill Meyers and Kay Schulle-Mohan.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, JAN. 5, 1979

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are likely to display a bad temper today, so make a definite point to stop, look and listen to what others have in mind, and you can then turn today's troubles to your benefit.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Take care you don't irk higher-ups in any way and this becomes a good day for you. Use tact in handling business affairs.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You had better clear up pending duties before you go delving into new activities. Take steps to improve your health.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Steer clear of one who is too demanding and handle any personal matters exclusively. Thing along logical lines.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Make plans to have more abundance in the days ahead. Sidestep a possible argument with associates. Be wise.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) If you budget your time well, you can handle today's work in good fashion and then look into new outlets that appeal to you.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Entertaining those you like in a simple and wholesome way now is better than spending a lot of money foolishly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Assist family members in attaining their most cherished aims. Keep busy at duties that can bring you added income in the future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Much care in motion of all kind is important now, since there are dangerous conditions around you. Be more proud of yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Showing more devotion to the one you love is wise, but don't go overboard by spending more than you can afford.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Find the best way to handle personal affairs and do nothing to upset a family tie. Avoid one who is depressive.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You may want to get even with one who has annoyed you, but it's to your best interest to go on with your regular routines.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Seek the advice you need in personal matters from an older person of experience and then use it wisely. Be more optimistic.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be one who can see errors in present modes of expression, and will do something to eradicate them for a better and more advanced form of existence, in business or whatever. A good family life in this chart.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Hilton Chain Founder Dies

HILTON DIES — Hotel magnate Conrad Hilton is shown at his office in Beverly Hills on Dec. 8, 1977. He died Wednesday of pneumonia. (AP Laser-photo)

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Conrad Hilton, 91, a small-town New Mexico boy who became a millionaire innkeeper and counted presidents and popes among his friends, is dead of pneumonia.

The hotel magnate died at 10 p.m. Wednesday, three days after entering St. John's Hospital, said Jacques Cosse, spokesman for the Hilton Hotels Division of Hilton Hotels Corp.

"He was working right up until just before Christmas," Cosse said. "He was ill and went into the hospital just before the holidays and then went back into the hospital three days ago."

Hilton was board chairman of Hilton Hotels Corp. and Hilton International, owned by Trans World Airlines Inc. after a 1967 merger. The domestic and international hotels were valued at well above half a billion dollars.

Until he acquired the Statler Hotels in 1954, Hilton was known in the trade as "the man who bought the Waldorf."

"The word Hilton means hotel. People say, 'Take me to the Hilton,' not the Hilton Hotel," said Cosse. "That's how he will be remembered — for a new word, Hilton."

He is survived by his third wife, Mary Frances, whom he married in 1976 after two divorces; two sons, Barron Hilton, 50, president of Hilton Hotels Corp., and Michael Eric Hilton, a corporation vice president in Houston; and a daughter, Francesca, of Los Angeles.

A third son, Conrad Nicholson Hilton Jr. — known as "Nick" — and the first husband of actress Elizabeth Taylor — died of a heart attack in 1969.

Besides a Palm Springs home, Hilton had a 61-room mansion at Bel-Air, near Santa Monica, which was his primary residence and where he had 19 servants.

Work was said to be the great love of his life, his devotion to it being partly responsible for the breakup of his first two marriages, to actress Zsa Zsa Gabor and to Mary Barron.

Hilton — 6-foot-2, 195 pounds, lean, mustachioed and permanently suntanned — was known to employees as a gentle executive.

Boysish, candid and trusting, he had a hard streak of practicality and the ability to turn a shrewd deal. "Connie," as friends called him, credited his success mainly to opportunities he saw lying in front of people who were looking elsewhere.

In 1949, he acquired operating control of the fashionable Waldorf-Astoria in New York for $3 million.

He hired hotel managers who knew the business and did not concern himself with operating details. But he insisted on increased financial returns, the quest for which he called "digging for gold."

He was born in San Antonio, N.M., on Dec. 25, 1887, when New Mexico was still a territory.

The son of a successful merchant, Hilton invested his life savings of $5,000 in 1919 to buy his first hotel, the Mobley, in Cisco, Texas. He acquired a small Texas chain before the Depression wiped him out.

But he came back through a series of bold transactions to acquire a collection of prestigious hotels. First was the Town House in Los Angeles, followed in 1945 by Chicago's 3,000-room Stevens.

His biggest satisfaction came when the Waldorf-Astoria joined the Hilton chain in 1949, making him the No. 1 American hotelman.

The corporation's 185 domestic hotels include the Palmer House and Conrad Hilton, formerly the Stevens in Chicago; the Denver Hilton; the Shamrock Hilton in Houston, Tex.; the Flamingo Hilton and Las Vegas Hilton in Las Vegas; Beverly Hilton, Beverly Hills; and the Waldorf-Astoria and New York Hilton in New York City.

"In his time, he pulled off the biggest real estate transaction in business by acquiring the Statler Hotels chain in 1954," Cosse said.

The Statler Hotels became the Statler Hiltons in Boston, Buffalo, Cleveland, Dallas, Detroit, Hartford, Los Angeles, St. Louis, Washington and New York.

Abroad, either leased or run on management contract are Hiltons in Acapulco, Amsterdam, Athens, Berlin, Cairo, Istanbul, London, Tehran, Tokyo and several other world capitals.

Atkinson Drug Trial Underway

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Testimony was expected today on several motions in the trial of convicted heroin smuggler Leslie "Ike" Atkinson and 12 other persons, including one motion to quash a panel of 500 prospective jurors on grounds of inadequate minority representation.

Defense attorneys made the motions Wednesday as the multiple-charge trial got underway in Wayne County Superior Court.

The attorneys said Atkinson is willing to take the stand for some members of his family scheduled to be tried with him this week on drug charges, but will not testify in his own defense.

Attorneys Jeffrey Hoffman of New York, Thomas Loflin of Durham and Robert Levin of Washington said Atkinson had offered to be a defense witness for Essell and Edward Atkinson Sr., his brothers, and Larry Drake Atkinson, his nephews.

The lawyers asked that the three cases be separated from the Atkinson trial so that he could testify. If he took the witness stand while being tried with his family members, he would subject himself to examination by prosecutors in his own case.

Atkinson, 54, has been charged, among other things, with conspiracy to distribute heroin and operating a business for crime. If convicted, he faces life imprisonment.

He is already serving a 44-year sentence in federal prison on two convictions in federal court of heroin smuggling. He did not testify in any of the previous trials.

Three guilty pleas have already entered guilty pleas in the current case.

If jury selection begins this week, Atkinson will go on trial without an attorney.

The first 100 jurors are scheduled to report to Goldsboro Friday morning.

Sugar Loaf Mountain's Trail

By JUDY BOCKAGE
Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — It took Mother Nature 300 million years of erosion and weathering to produce the rocks that make up Sugar Loaf Mountain.

It's only been about a century since hikers discovered the mountain's wild and rugged beauty, and less than a decade since the Sugar Loaf Mountain Trail was designated the first National Recreational Trail in Arkansas by the Department of Interior.

The foot trail winds 8,448 feet through a panorama of vegetation and sandstone formations to a flat-topped peak.

There, at the turn of the century, farmer Fate Winfrey planted an orchard which gave way to lush vegetation when the orchard was abandoned.

The trail to the top of the mountain-island was built in two phases by the Little Rock District of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. One trail that goes directly to the mountain-top was built in 1966. Another, encircling the top of the 250-acre mountain, was finished in 1969.

Benches along the trail give the hiker a chance to rest. Tree roots provide a natural drainage system, so the hiker can take the trail even after a heavy rainfall.

Near the top of the mountain the trail divides, with one fork following the south slope, and the other taking hikers around the north face, where vertical fractures up to 100 feet deep scar the sandstone.

Scattered among the pine, scrub oak and black oak trees are the less common dogwood, black locust, black gum and overcup oak.

Atop the mountain, 540 feet above the normal lake level and 1,001 feet above the sea level, are red cedar trees, stunted in growth by low nutrition, and twisted by the wind into grotesque forms.

"What makes Sugar Loaf unique is a mountain of that magnitude being completely surrounded by water, accessible only by water," explained Jesse Masters, of the Corps of Engineers at Little Rock.

It wasn't always so. Sugar Loaf became an island in 1961 when the Little Red River was dammed to provide hydroelectric power and flood control. The dam created Greers Ferry Lake, now a popular recreation spot.

"The view from the top of the

'Knobby' Is Unknown

TOLUCA, N.C. (AP) — When her dog started barking in the front yard on the morning of Dec. 21, Minnie Cook was understandably curious.

She declares she spotted some sort of ape-like animal in a wooded area near the house.

"These old eyes are 88 years old, but I saw it, that's all there is to it," she says. "I can't name it and I don't want to see it again, but I saw it."

Mrs. Cook is not alone in reporting a sighting of some creature. Nobody knows for sure exactly what it is, but folks in this Cleveland County community are calling it "Knobby," after Carpenter's Knob, where the beast has been seen most frequently.

Witnesses say the animal is covered with black fur, has a flat face like an ape and varies from standing on all fours to walking on its hind legs. Witnesses estimate it to be over six feet tall.

"It wasn't a bear," Mrs. Cook declared. "I've seen many a bear in my time and I know one when I see one. And this wasn't one."

People have reported watching the beast munch what appear to be holly berries.

A neighbor of Mrs. Cook's said he passed the animal while he was bringing in a load of wood. The neighbor turned around and came back and watched as it ate vegetation.

"I guess I've had as many as two dozen people in here during the past week who have either seen the animal or have talked to someone who said he had seen it," says R.M. Newton, who operates a gas station about three miles south of Toluca.

Knobby hunters have left trails of bread crumbs in hopes of luring the creature in for a closer look. So far, the beast has preferred the natural foods of the woods.

mountain is splendid. You can see almost all the lake," Masters said.

Newspaper clippings indicate that the mountain was a popular climbing attraction for family picnickers for many years, but ravines made it difficult to climb, Masters said.

"Now we have developed walkways, steps and a bridge, so a person without an extreme physical impairment can traverse it."

The mountain is located in the southwestern foothills of the Ozark Mountains, 70 miles north of Little Rock in Van Buren county.

It is open year-round, and attracts an average of 30,000 visitors each year.

UP, BIG FELLA — Jimmy, a 3-year-old western painted turtle, begs for a bit of fish. Peggy Detmers, of Brookings, S.D., says her pet has a curved-up shell which allows him to stand up on his hind legs. (AP Laserphoto)

Literacy Report Is Too Literate

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A program designed to attack functional illiteracy among adults statewide has apparently produced promising results but it may take a very large dictionary for the state Board of Education to know for sure.

A report, prepared by the National Testing Service Research Corp. of Durham, N.C., and delivered to the board Wednesday, said in part: "The conceptual framework for this evaluation posits a set of determinants of implementation which explains variations in the level of implementation of the Comprehensive Program..."

Simply put, the report said the project was successful in increasing enrollment in adult literacy programs and in improving the reading and math skills of participants.

Convinced Gold Is Still In Area

CENTERVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The 84-year-old mayor of Centerville is convinced there's a fortune in gold hidden in the red clay of the area.

John Neal, who mined gold in the area during the 1930s, is not alone in his conviction. A company, whose name is not known, has drilled three deep holes in the area during the past year.

"It might be they were looking for something else, but it probably was gold," Neal said. "There's a fortune in gold here if they can find a way to get it out of the dirt."

Neal said the clay put an end to the mining in the 1840s and fortune-seekers headed for California. "There's no way to dissolve it (the clay) to make it give up its gold... It just won't dissolve."

Legend has it that gold was first discovered in the area by a back-peddler who noticed shiny specks in the clay caulk of one of his customers' homes. Mines began operating in 1835 and produced nearly $3 million in gold before they closed in 1936.

"When I was just a boy, they had a barge that pulled up the sludge" in the swamp area, Neal said. "It just dug its own channel as it went along."

"Way back there, too, I remember they built a big tower on the hills on each side of the swampy area and a chain of buckets would dip the ore and bring it up for processing," Neal said.

The mayor got into the mining business in 1935 with three partners from Norfolk, Va. "Horace Bluford was the money man. I was the front man. I was local and bought the 111 acres for $1,100. They put up the money. I worked the mine."

Neal said they paid labor 15 cents an hour and made some profit "until we hired an engineer and he broke us. But we still made some money."

And he said if he were young, he'd be down in the clay right now seeking his fortune. "Some people like golf. Some like tennis. I like mining gold," Neal said. "You get tired and discouraged, then a nugget shows up and you're all right again."
