Beached And Dead

SEARCH FOR CLUES — Scientists from the United States and Mexico examine some of the 56 sperm whales that beached themselves last week and died near the town of Mulege, Baja California. The phenomenon is not unique, as each year whales and porpoises are found dead and dying on beaches around the world. But the number involved, 56, both male and female, is a circumstance that the scientists call "confusing". (AP Laser-photo)

Property Of Iran's Royal Family To A 'Foundation'

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi decreed today that all personal property of the Iranian royal family be turned over to a crown-sponsored foundation and ordered the release of 266 prisoners convicted by military tribunals.

Iran's state radio said the property, estimated to be valued at hundreds of millions of dollars, was being transferred to the Pahlavi foundation "for the use of religious, educational, social and welfare organizations organized by the people and run by them."

Palace sources said the divested property included the shah's vast domestic holdings in company stocks, banks, factories and land.

The moves were announced as the nation awaited word on when the shah intends to go abroad on an extended vacation to take opposition pressure off the new civilian government of Shahpour Bakhtiar.

The national Pars news agency said the 266 prisoners had been held at Tehran's central police department prison "for various offenses" and had been pardoned by the shah. Pars attributed the announcement to the imperial Iranian armed forces tribunal.

The announcement also said the pardon of other prisoners was being studied. The government previously had said there were about 200 persons in prison convicted of non-capital political offenses, but today's announcement did not specify whether the pardoned group comprised included these political prisoners.

The divestiture was seen as another step aimed at removing the taint of corruption from the royal family, 64 of whose members have gone abroad since political turmoil mounted here last fall.

While snow-covered Tehran was experiencing one of its quietest days in the last two months, there were reports of at least six deaths in anti-shah violence in the provinces.

Earlier today Karim Sanjaby, leader of the opposition National Front, assailed the new civilian government as a plot by "opportunistic characters" and said he is ready to lead a replacement government if approved by the country's Moslem leaders.

Sanjaby told reporters at a news conference he hopes the Iranian army "will understand the peoples' movement and act in accordance with it." But he denied he was urging the army disobey the civilian government of Shahpour Bakhtiar, formed Friday with Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi retained as constitutional monarch.

"The shah, who claims to have heard the voice of the revolution, has now resorted to a new plot," Sanjaby said.

"With a superficial change of cabinet, by using some opportunist characters and the most condemned tactics of propaganda, the Iranian regime and its supporters are attempting in vain to divert the struggle of the Iranian people in achieving its objectives."

Could See A Doubling Of Electric Bills

George Reel, customer service representative at Greenville Utilities, said today that customers who use electricity as their primary source of heat could easily see their bills double this month.

Reel noted that the primary reason for the higher bills is the increase in electric consumption due to colder weather, longer nights, colder water to be heated, and the fact that greater family activity usually occurs during the holiday period.

During the period of Nov. 8 to Dec. 8, he reported there was approximately 325 degree days of heating recorded. A degree day, Reel explained, is a measurement of the "amount of cold" experienced. From Dec. 8 to Jan. 8, the degree days of heat doubled, therefore requiring twice the amount of energy to heat during this billing period.

Reel said the monitoring of several electric heat customers during this period had indicated the trend.

"One good thing going for us is that there will be a negative fuel charge of $0.0030 per kilowatt-hour, or minus $3 for every 1,000 kilowatt-hours used," he related. "This will certainly help some."

Reel mentioned that anyone who has a question about their bill should call GUCO's Customer Service Department at 752-7166.

"We continue to urge our customers to continue their conservation practices especially during extreme cold periods," he added. Information on energy conservation is available on request, without charge.

Cambodian Conflict Spills Into Thailand

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Cambodia's new Communist government reported today that thousands of people were flocking back to their native villages north of Phnom Penh following the overthrow of the Communist regime which forced them into communal farms.

Western analysts in neighboring Thailand said there was still fighting in northwest Cambodia and Vietnamese air strikes had doubled to almost 100 a day in mopping up operation in the east and west. The war spilled into Thailand briefly when an unidentified jet bombed a border area.

The air strike in Thailand was seen by newsmen at the Thai border town of Ta Phraya 220 miles east of Bangkok. Reporters said a jet swooped down and dropped three bombs into a field between two Thai military installations. There were no injuries.

Analysts in Bangkok said Cambodian leader Pol Pot and his associates who fled from Phnom Penh before it fell were trying to set up a line of resistance near Siem Reap and Angkor, the ancient Cambodian capital, in the northwestern part of the country.

They later added some reports indicated Pol Pot may have been killed and former Deputy Premier Ieng Sary may have fled the country.

SPK, the official news agency of the provisional government which the Vietnamese army installed in Phnom Penh, said from Mimot and Koret to Moli and Stung, in Kampong Cham Province, thousands of buffalo carts loaded with children and belongings were taking the villagers home.

The report, broadcast from Phnom Penh, said a unit of the rebel movement's military forces was detailed to help the returnees. Following the Communist victory over the U.S.-backed Lon Nol government in 1975, the government emptied the cities and villages and forced most of the population into communal farms. Observers estimate that in the process a million or more Cambodians were executed or died of hunger, exhaustion and disease.

"For the first time in many years, young men and women sang happily as they harvested," said the official report. "Fires again warmed the kitchens in the houses on stilts along Highway 7, now restored to family life."

Meanwhile, Premier Pol Pot's previous Cambodian government was reported trying to make a stand in the northwest part of the country, and China promised to support it "resolutely" in a "protracted war of resistance."

The Peking People's Daily, the Chinese Communist Party newspaper, said the fall of Phnom Penh Sunday to the Vietnamese invaders and the rebel Communist movement was a "landmark of doom" for Hanoi and its Soviet backers because it was the start, not the end, of fighting.

The U.S. State Department said Vietnam's invasion of Cambodia raised the danger of wider war and called for foreign forces to be withdrawn. It said "all countries interested in peace, stability and an independent state system in Southeast Asia should urge restraint on both parties to the conflict."

However, Cambodia's geographic isolation from China indicated that Chinese support for the ousted government would be mostly verbal. There was no expectation that Chinese troops and planes would invade Vietnam on behalf of their unsuccessful Cambodian clients.

It also appeared unlikely that the ousted government would be able to command much support among the Cambodian people for a guerrilla war because of the millions of urban dwellers it drove into the countryside to farm and the million or more people it is reported to have executed in its three years in power.

Analysts in Bangkok said Pol Pot and his associates who fled from Phnom Penh before it fell were trying to set up a line of resistance near Siem Reap and Angkor, the ancient Cambodian capital, in the northwestern part of the country.

The new provisional government installed by the Vietnamese in Phnom Penh, the People's Revolutionary Council, said it controlled the area, which is about 120 miles northwest of the capital. But the Bangkok sources said fighting was continuing in some areas around the Tonle Sap, the big lake between Phnom Penh and Siem Reap. They reported the Vietnamese were making air strikes, moving westward from Phnom Penh and mopping up pockets of resistance.

Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the former Cambodian chief of state, told reporters in Peking Monday that the Chinese were in radio contact with the deposed Cambodian leaders and would provide them with weapons and financial aid.

City School Board Plans Next Steps

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

For the first time, members of the Greenville City Schools Board of Education conducted a special meeting a week prior to the regular third Monday night meeting.

The meeting last night, as all second Monday night special meetings will be, was held primarily for discussion and evaluation of forthcoming agenda items to be acted on at the regular meeting.

One action taken was that of selecting a member to serve as Legislative Liaison for the school board. Vice-chairman Ed Carter was unanimously selected to fill this position.

As liaison member, Carter will serve with other liaison members of school boards district wide, and will report to the chairman and superintendent on matters of interest to the school board in the legislative field.

Also, results of the competency testing of 11th graders in Rose High and Agnes Fullilove Extended School program were revealed by Superintendent Glenn Cox and discussed by the board.

The State Department of Public Instruction has imposed an embargo on the results until after Governor James B. Hunt Jr.'s television talk on the tests at 7:30 tonight.

A proposal to consider combining certain operations of the Greenville and Pitt County Extended School Programs was discussed. The proposal calls for an evening program at Agnes Fullilove that would serve students from both current programs. In addition, a combined arrangement would make possible attendance by students in the regular school program who felt the need for the additional training that would be afforded by the added program.

Funds amounting to $230,300 are available for a combined program — $35,300 federal funds; $158,000 state funds; and $37,000 local funds.

Cox noted that if approved by both school boards, arrangements would be made for Pitt County to share a proportionate part of the costs of utilities and other services at Agnes Fullilove.

Following the regular meeting, the board convened in executive session to discuss the performance evaluation of Superintendent Cox. Action on evaluation is due later in the year.

N.C. Students Appear To Fare Well In Tests

By The Associated Press

Students apparently fared better than expected on the state competency test, with figures released Monday ranging from a 20 percent failure rate on the reading section of test in Columbus County to a 5 percent failure rate on the same test in Buncombe County.

School officials in several counties and municipalities had expected higher failure rates.

The statewide scores were to be released by Gov. Jim Hunt in a televised speech at 7:30 tonight.

According to results from several school districts willing to release figures Monday, students did not do as well on the math section. Failure rates on that portion of the test ranged from a high of 30 percent in Columbus County to 7 percent in the Whiteville school district.

To pass, a student was required to answer correctly 72 percent of the reading questions and 64 percent of the math questions. The 11th graders — and all other students finishing high school after 1980 — must pass both tests before they can get a diploma.

If a student fails, he can take the test again May 1 or 2. The student will also have two more opportunities during the following school year to make passing scores. Some school systems will award a certificate of completion to students who fail the test but pass all other graduation requirements.

Among the school systems willing to release scores Monday, and their failure rates in reading and math respectively, were: Greensboro, 11 percent and 16 percent; Guilford County (excluding Greensboro and High Point schools), 7 percent and 8 percent; Buncombe County, 5 percent and 9 percent; Wake County, 7 percent and 11 percent; Bladen County, 16 percent and 27 percent; Columbus County, 20 percent and 30 percent; Whiteville, School District in Columbus County, 5 percent and 7 percent; and St. Paul's School District in Robeson County, 14 percent and 24 percent.

The broadcast of Hunt's halftone talk will originate from UNC-TV.

Two Developers Qualify For Bids On Parcels

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The Redevelopment Commission last night approved the qualification of two developers as bidders on four parcels in the Southside area.

The Evans Co. qualified to submit a bid on three parcels located on Howell Street. The tracts contain a collective total of 10,698 square feet and the prospective developer indicated plans to build residential structures on the property.

It was pointed out that the development property is located on the Henry Street corner of Howell.

Milinda Cousin qualified to bid on Disposal Parcel S-4, located on Green Street in Southside. Plans were also indicated for a residential structure to be built on the 5,500 square foot tract.

In other business, the commissioners agreed to a request by the county to remove the Tucker Building property at the corner of Third and Green Streets from the acquisition list.

When Green Street was widened, a severance was needed from the county property in order to accomplish the street improvements. At that time, the county indicated that it had no relocation possibility for the Tucker Building occupants and asked that the Commission not acquire the property until a relocation site was found. Commission executive director Joe Laney explained that an option was taken on the property but only the severance was executed.

Laney said that the county recently wrote a letter to the Commission asking to be allowed to retain the building for office space. Commissioners agreed last night to remove the property from the acquisition list but indicated that they would like to know what plans the county has for the property. The building, which currently does not meet code regulations, would have to be brought up to full property standards if the plans call for continued use of the structure.

Commissioners adopted a motion approving the acquisition of right-of-way for Railroad Street in the Southside area from Norfolk Southern Railway. The original plan for the street in the Southside area was a project call for the corridor to be paved from the railroad up to 14th Street. Railroad policy at that time allowed for permission to be given for street construction on railroad right-of-way.

Laney said that the railroad has indicated that it now wishes to sell the right-of-way. The Redevelopment Commission will participate in the Railroad Street improvements within the project limits from Howell Street to the railroad. Some 40 feet of right-of-way running approximately 800 feet is involved, he said, or 32,000 square feet.

Women Head Engineering Organizations

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — When they were younger, Taryn Melkus and Sylvia Acevedo were discouraged from studying engineering in college. It was suggested they might not be able to "hack it in a man's world."

Today Sylvia Acevedo and Taryn Melkus are top engineering students at New Mexico State University. And, for the first time, NMSU's major student engineering organizations are headed by women students.

Miss Acevedo, 21, of Las Cruces, is a senior industrial engineering major. She is president of the local chapter of Tau Beta Pi, a national engineering society; vice president of Alpha Pi Mu, the industrial engineering honor society; and an ex-officio student member of the NMSU Board of Regents.

Miss Melkus, 21, of Ponderosa Pines, is a senior chemical engineering student. President of the Engineers Council, a consortium of students representing student engineering groups, she is also a representative to Associated Women Students from the Society of Women Engineers and an advisory board member of the local chapter of the American Institute of Industrial Engineers.

With overall engineering enrollments increasing annually, female enrollment is going up even more rapidly, college officials say. Out of a total of 1,870 students in the college, 235 are women.

According to Miss Melkus and Miss Acevedo, their opportunities as women in engineering are vast — and carry a responsibility to be "careful" in how they handle themselves.

"Initially, because we are minorities, our chances for jobs are better than men's these days," Miss Melkus said. "It's not really fair to the guys at all."

There is also a danger that women will be "used as tokens for display," Miss Acevedo said.

Both women say they don't want to be hired "as girls" but rather as qualified engineers. Being qualified, for them, means working in industry for a while, even though both eventually want to become college professors. More women professors are needed, they say — neither has had a woman engineering teacher.

Besides, life in academia will give them enough flexibility, they believe, to raise families as well as to have careers. Because women still have "an option of staying home to raise children," they don't seem to approach their careers with as much drive as men, both students believe.

Even though in the first couple of years of college, women are more aggressive students, the "men really make an about-face" toward the end of their education, both women agree, adding that they have observed their male counterparts becoming more ambitious recently.

"The women have done really well," Miss Melkus said. "Girls in chemical engineering have higher grades than men. But there is still the difference."

Miss Stewart Weds In Washington

WASHINGTON — Miss Lucy Elizabeth Stewart and John William Robertson were united in marriage here Saturday, Dec. 30, in a high noon ceremony in the First Presbyterian Church.

The Rev. Jerry Bron, church minister, officiated during the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abner Thomas Stewart of Washington, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Earl Robertson of Clayton.

Mrs. John William Robertson

Mrs. Edward Gibson, organist, and Warren Goff, cousin of the bride of Williamston, soloist, presented a program of wedding music.

The bride was escorted and given in marriage by her father. She wore a formal gown of white silk chiffonette. The modified empire bodice, fashioned with a Queen Anne neckline, was applied in re-embroidered alencon lace with accents of seed pearls and iridescent sequins. The lace was repeated on the full sleeves to create a deep fitted cuff.

Her veil of French silk illusion, bordered and applied in matching lace, cascaded from a Camelot headpiece. She carried a bridal bouquet of white roses, stephanotis and baby's breath.

Mrs. James Goodwin of Henderson, sister of the bridegroom, was honor attendant. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Robert Rowe of Ahoskie, Mrs. Kathy Lynch of De Ridder, La., Mrs. Terry Hill of Greensboro, cousin of the bride, Miss Lou Anne Goff of Williamston, cousin of the bride, Miss Tina Griffin of Raleigh, and Miss Missy Manley of Tampa, Fla.

Miss Caroline Goodwin, niece of the bridegroom of Henderson, was flower girl and James Goodwin of Henderson, nephew of the bridegroom, was ring bearer.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man and groomsmen included his brother-in-law, Dr. James O. Goodwin of Henderson, cousins, Battle Moore Robertson and Dr. C. Allen Avera of Raleigh, Walter Rasor and Watson O'Neil of Clayton, and Gene McLamb of Raleigh.

Mrs. Leon Thompson and Mrs. Ernest Larkin Jr. were church hostesses and Mrs. Neal Partrick assisted the bride.

The bride is a graduate of Washington High School, Peace College, and North Carolina State University. She received her master's degree from ECU and is a guidance counselor at Pitt Technical Institute. She made her debut at the 1972 Terpsichorean Debutante Ball, Raleigh.

The bridegroom graduated from UNC-CH and was a member of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity. He is employed at the N. C. State Employees Credit Union, Greenville.

Following the reception at the Washington Yacht and County Club, the couple left for a wedding trip to Bermuda. The bride changed into a red, white and blue ensemble.

The couple will live in Greenville.

The bride's parents entertained at the reception.

The parents of the bridegroom and Dr. and Mrs. James O. Goodwin, sister and brother-in-law of the bridegroom, entertained members of the Robertson-Stewart wedding party and out-of-town guests Friday evening at an after-rehearsal dinner at the yacht and country club.

Among the pre-nuptial events honoring the couple was a semi-formal dance Friday evening at the yacht and country club. A cocktail party was held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. E. W. Larkins Jr. prior to the wedding.

Reader Discovered Families Anonymous

DEAR ABBY: In answer to the woman who was sure her husband was on drugs but didn't know what to do about it, you were absolutely right! He must admit that he needs help before anything can be done for him.

But what about the wife? She's going out of her mind worrying about him. A few years ago I was in a similar situation — only it was my son who was on drugs. I felt so guilty and helpless, I didn't know where to turn. Then I discovered FAMILIES ANONYMOUS.

After attending one meeting I had my first good night's sleep in years! From other members who had experienced the agonies I had been through, I learned how to handle my son. When he saw the change in my attitude, his attitude began to change and so did he. It was just like a miracle!

He is now clean and happily married and, best of all, we are a loving family.

Abby, please tell your readers about this wonderful group.

GRATEFUL

DEAR GRATEFUL: I know that you are a legitimate self-help group. There are no dues or fees, no forms to fill out, no formal sign-up, no last names, and visitors are welcome.

FAMILIES ANONYMOUS meets in nearly every major city of the United States (and Canada) to teach parents how to communicate with rebellious, delinquent or difficult-to-handle children of any age.

For the location of a meeting in your area, write: FAMILIES ANONYMOUS, Inc., P.O. Box No. 344, Torrance, Calif. 90501. Please enclose a large stamped, self-addressed envelope for their response as they are a non-profit organization run by volunteers.

DEAR ABBY: Every Monday night my husband goes to a friend's house to watch Monday Night Football with a bunch of guys, so I find something else to do.

Well, last Monday night I went to a movie with a girlfriend and on the way home I spotted my husband's car in front of his friend's house, so I thought I'd run in and say hi.

The door wasn't locked, so I just opened it and walked in. There I found my husband and three other guys sitting around in ladies' underwear, garter belts, wigs, high heels and makeup — the works. I nearly fainted.

They didn't seem upset at all. They just laughed it off. Abby, my husband is normal in every way. We have three children and our sex life is great, so I'm sure he isn't a homosexual.

What do you call a man who gets dressed up in women's clothes just for the heck of it?

HONEY IN OMAHA

DEAR HONEY: A transvestite. And in Omaha, he's a MID-vestite.

If you're broiling steak, make sure it's at least one inch thick. You'll have a difficult time getting a medium-rare steak or any special degree of doneness with a thin steak.

Porterhouse steak, usually considered the best steak, sells at a higher price than the other bone-in steaks. It has a generous section of tenderloin, which can be removed and served separately as filet mignon.

DEAR ABBY: My beloved husband, Jim, was electrocuted last summer at work. He had been in the Navy, but because of alcoholism was given an undesirable discharge. Twenty years later, that discharge was changed to "honorable" because of his active participation in Alcoholics Anonymous. (That's how we met.)

My problem? Jim was given a veteran's funeral and I was presented with a three-cornered flag which I keep in my closet in a plastic bag.

I want to fly that flag, Abby, because Jim was proud of his country and so am I. But some friends say I can't fly the flag. Can I?

I'm another secretary who has trouble with telephone wise guys.

One man called my boss and, when I asked who was calling, he said, "Tell him Graig Nettles is on the line." So I told my boss that Graig Nettles was on the line. How did I know Graig Nettles was some big-shot Yankee ballplayer? So someone made a fool of me.

I'm instructed to ask who is calling and, if my boss doesn't want to talk to him, I say, "Sorry, he's tied up in a meeting. May he return your call?" Then the boss returns the call if and when he feels like it.

Most people are on to that dodge. They say, "I want to ask him just one question" or "Tell him I'll be over in 15 minutes."

In other words, they know I'm lying — that the boss is in his office and doesn't want to be bothered.

Money Will Be Burning Issue

The North Carolina General Assembly will convene in Raleigh Wednesday and the burning issue this year will very likely be — money.

There will be questions about whether there is enough to meet state needs for the next two years, should there be a tax rebate or an outright tax reduction. There will be talk about dwindling highway fund reserves, although nothing is likely to be done about that at this session.

Finally the legislators will have to concern themselves with the effects of inflation on state spending. There is the usual demand for personnel salary increase, but also energy increases force up transportation costs, heating costs and the price of just about everything the state buys.

Building costs are skyrocketing, as the bids for the ECU medical school building — $9 million over the budget — recently illustrated.

Of course, the legislators will start the session with carryover from the previous biennium since revenues ran beyond what was estimated. But they will also face the possibility of some sort of recession which could slow down revenue increases in the coming months.

It doesn't seem likely that either the administration or the Legislature will be pushing for many new programs in the upcoming budget. The biggest may be the proposed veterinary school at N. C. State University. That project has already been initiated and it is almost a foregone conclusion that funds will be found to continue its development.

It may also be a budget of fairly limited capital improvements, since the Legislature may have to find funds to meet inflated costs of projects already approved.

After the money issues, the Legislature could face the Equal Rights Amendment again, insurance law modifications and an amendment giving the District of Columbia two senators and representatives.

There may be some minor changes in the mixed drink law but it is unlikely that the Legislature will uncork a full scale debate on that controversy again.

It could be a fairly unspectacular session of the Legislature, and that could be a blessing. A relatively quiet session could give the General Assembly time to get down to some real serious, if non-sensational, problems facing the state.

Highest Home Mortgage Rates Ever

There it is, folks — the highest home mortgage rates in history.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board said last week that average interest rates on newly purchased homes in December averaged above 10 percent.

The average cost of a home also hit an all-time high for the month.

It was discouraging news to the young couple seeking their first home, but it is a chilling fact of life in our inflation ridden economy.

THIS AFTERNOON Economic Course Planned

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — How can president Carter have it both ways: to slow inflation and avoid a general business slowdown — a recession?

Economists at North Carolina State University don't think it can work that way, and the current issue of "Tar Heel Economist" is predicting a temporary slowdown followed by slowing of the inflation rate in this new year.

The publication is an outlook issue devoted to some serviced predictions on what lies ahead for North Carolina and the nation in business and agriculture.

John S. Lapp, a member of the staff, produced the forecast.

An obvious conclusion is that President Jimmy Carter has taken the necessary steps to produce a downturn in the inflation rate, but would like to avoid the political consequences of doing just that.

Carter has repeatedly downplayed the idea of recession in 1979. No president wants to be blamed for such an event.

Downturn

But economists contend that inflation-fighting measures to be effective must produce — at least temporarily, and preceding their effect on the inflation rate — a downturn in the economy: higher interest rates, and higher unemployment.

"From available data on the President's budget proposals and the recent restraint exercised by the Federal Reserve System" there is reason to believe that this process has been started," reports "Tar Heel Economist".

The two basic methods are restraining government spending, and reducing the rate at which the money supply (and credit) is growing. The President can do the first; his Federal Reserve Board the second.

"Slower economic growth will not affect the inflation rate immediately; we must expect prices to continue to rise rapidly for a while. However, the slower growth may be expected to reduce the growth rate of real economic activity." State economists feel.

BILL NOBLITT

Production of goods and services will be slower, and depending upon the force with which the brakes are applied, the decline will be lesser or greater.

"This should not be viewed as a weakness in, nor a criticism of, the anti-inflation program. Once inflation grips an economy and everyone expects it to continue, a policy to reduce the inflation rate is bound to cause some disruption," the publication comments.

While the federal government appears to be taking the necessary steps defined by State University economists as essential to reducing inflation, public comments generally have centered about the President's wage and price lid pleadings.

Action

While the "Tar Heel Economist" does not say so, it becomes apparent that the federal administration is indeed taking the necessary steps, but would like to keep this course quiet. "It is important to recognize," the magazine cautions, "that this expected slowdown will only be temporary."

Meanwhile, the farm picture appears less than encouraging. After 1978 price increases to farmers, the 1979 projections suggest that farm production and marketing costs will increase still more in 1979, while income will stay at about last year's level.

Nonetheless, retail food prices will likely go from six to 10 percent higher this year than last.

THE INSIDE REPORT Laird's No On SALT

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Efforts by the White House to enlist the support of former Republican Defense Secretary Melvin Laird in selling a new strategic arms limitation agreement (SALT II) to the Senate failed last week when Laird informed presidential aides he would not do it.

The approach to Laird, made several weeks ago, astonished many Republicans who perceive him as extremely wary about the Soviet Union and worried that SALT II would confirm the shift in the power balance away from the U.S. But Laird gave the proposition long consideration, and rejected it somewhat reluctantly.

The reason: Laird lacks hard information on just how fast and completely President Carter will push ahead with major strategic weapons programs after SALT II. They include the MX missile and a basing system that would protect it from a possible first-strike Soviet nuclear attack.

In addition, Laird was under heavy pressure from some of his closest Republican friends, particularly leaders in the defense field, not to touch the White House proposal. They felt Laird's blessing on the new SALT agreement would provide significant help in the Senate, given Laird's reputation as a prudent, solid believer in U.S. military and strategic strength.

Insiders were certain that if Laird had said yes to Carter's request, he would have ended up as chairman of a nationwide citizens' group for SALT II. White House aides are trying to enlist other responsible Republicans for just such a citizens' panel.

The Carter Campaign

While President Carter's political braintrust regards the 1980 Democratic primaries as a snakepit of liberal interest groups that could destroy him, they are thankful that the first-in-the-nation test will be New Hampshire.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy from neighboring Massachusetts would admittedly plow the president under if he entered. But nobody expects him to. The Democrats considered most likely to challenge Carter in New Hampshire — Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California and Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York — are considered by the White House to be highly vulnerable in New Hampshire.

The reason: Carter's political agents see the New Hampshire Democratic primary as one race where the candidates must personally campaign early and often. "Brown and Moynihan are just too exotic to have

SIN IS SOCIAL

William Wilberforce stands out as one of the great heroes of British history. After a lifetime campaign, he finally, in 1833, persuaded Parliament to abolish slavery in the British Empire. Slavery was not abolished in the United States until more than thirty years later.

Wilberforce took the position that all England was guilty of slavery, and that the guilt rested upon people who had never given the situation any thought just as it did upon the men who wielded the whips. He maintained that sin is a social as well as an individual matter. What evil the nation does is not only the wickedness of the men who perpetrate it; it is the sin of all the people as well ... because they tolerate it.

This is another reason to head the words of Jesus, "Judge not lest ye too be judged." We can be held to account for the sins of others just as surely as the people who committed these sins.

FTC Offers A Lemon

WASHINGTON — One by one, the Federal Trade Commission has been rolling proposals off its assembly line — for funeral parlors, TV commercials, trade schools, you name it, Chairman Mike Pertschuk will regulate it — and now comes a staff proposal for the sale of used cars.

This particular trade-rule regulation has been five years in the making. It's a lemon. It provides one more dreary manifestation of the determination of our federal masters to rule us, willy-nilly, and the principles of federalism be damned. The staff report came out in November. The period for comment expires on February 13. Unless an increasingly rebellious Congress intervenes, the commission presumably will approve the regulation with a whoop and a holler, and we will embark upon an era of new and glorious benefits to the consumer.

These new and glorious benefits could impose $1.5 billion to $4 billion in added costs every year on used-car buyers. That is the glum estimate of the National Independent Automobile Dealers Association. The figures may be too high by half, but even discounting 50 percent for the association's bias, you still come up with a sizable economic impact.

This is the staff proposal: Every used-car dealer in the country henceforth would have to conduct a meticulous inspection of every vehicle he offers for sale. At least 60 different parts or functions would have to be checked. The specifications for brake inspections alone run to three pages.

Then the dealer would have to fill out a handy-dandy form

House Needs Upkeep

By LOUISE COOK

Drip, drip, drip.

Lots of things can go wrong with a house and a leaky faucet is only one of the problems you'll probably face sooner or later.

High costs make it more important than ever for homeowners to protect their investments. "Maintenance chores worry or bewilder most new home purchasers," reports the Department of Housing and Urban Development. "Yet systematic attention to the condition of your property and early correction of defects saves both time and money in the long run."

A HUD guide, "Protecting Your Housing Investment," says there are three potential areas of concern: the central utility systems of plumbing, heating, electricity and gas; the structure of the building

To the editor:

I noticed in the Daily Reflector that 3,000 more Cubans are going to "favor" us by being allowed to emigrate to our country. Also, have you noticed the huge number of Vietnamese coming in on us, greatly exceeding our emigration quotas? They are putting themselves in extreme situations so that we feel obligated.

Where are these foreigners going to live and whose jobs are they going to take over from our own United States people? Foreign countries have strict discriminatory laws protecting their own people. Let's look after our own people first!

The United States is an English-speaking country. These Spanish-speaking people coming in on us are even now demanding that we turn our country into a bi-lingual country! They will someday be causing the same kind of trouble that Canada is having with its French.

I am certain that we have plenty of problems of our own in this country without them being aggravated by this influx of misfit people.

Let's stop the sale of farm land to people in foreign countries who do not even intend to live on these lands they purchase. Most foreign countries have very discriminatory laws against our doing this to their country.

About the best way to control all this illegal emigration from these Spanish people would be to require all of us to have identity cards, with fingerprints. This should be required to be shown for employment and whenever requested.

Sometimes I see pictures in newspapers of United States people who have adopted some Asiatic children. Why did they not adopt some of our own orphans?

Let's give preferred treatment to our own people first, the way that foreign countries look after their own people first.

Read the book, "The End of Affluence" and you will wonder how we, in the near future, can supply food and energy to these incoming people.

New Housing Discrimination

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — There is a new form of discrimination in the land, "an anti-housing philosophy in towns around the country," said Donald Hovde, the new president of the National Association of Realtors.

As vice president last year, Hovde travelled 100,000 miles into scores of cities and hamlets. Almost everywhere, he said, he found evidence of building moratoriums — in effect, planned, or being talked about.

They take various forms, he said, such as legal limitations, zoning changes, resolutions, regulatory harassments, and an unwillingness to extend facilities such as utilities, fire protection and the like.

Whatever the form, said Hovde, 47, a second-generation Realtor who operates a commercial and investment real estate firm in Madison, Wis., the effect is the same:

People are denied housing and prices are forced up. And a rage against the injustice is being fired among the "outs" all over the country, he said.

When a Realtor (it's a proper noun, they remind you) talks this way there is a tendency to discount the words. Clearly, real estate people profit from housing; it's their product. But it doesn't mean they don't speak from conviction, too.

The anti-housing forces aren't the only ones making it difficult for people seeking a home. They contribute to higher prices, Hovde observes, but so do buyers, who demand more and more. And so also does a changing market.

Together, he fears, they have driven prices so high that a good many people already have been priced out of the market, forced out of the system, where they smolder in frustration.

Those forces — anti-housing, needlessly larger homes, and a market swelled by more households — including singles — have added greatly to higher prices, although there are still other reasons.

"Too many people are

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Snow flurries and snow are expected in the period until Wednesday morning from the northern and central Rockies across most of the Plains to the Midwest. Rain is forecast for eastern Texas, southern Oklahoma and western Arkansas. Rain is also due for the central Pacific coast. Cold to very cold temperatures are in order for most areas. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Another cold front has passed through North Carolina and temperatures this morning were chilly proof, ranging from near zero in the northwest mountains to the teens in the Piedmont and around 30 along the coast.

Temperatures reached their highest level in the morning Monday and then began dropping with the passage of the front. The mercury climbed to the 50s in the mountains and the 60s elsewhere before beginning the drop.
Light snow and scattered flurries occurred during the night over portions of the mountains. The northwest mountains had one to two inches.

Low readings this morning included: Asheville 11, Charlotte and Greensboro 15, Raleigh 18, and Wilmington 27.
Clear, cold weather is in prospect through Wednesday, and then temperatures will begin to moderate Thursday and Friday. The warming also will bring a chance of rain.
There will be a chance of rain or snow in the mountains Thursday, and a chance of rain over the rest of the state Thursday and Friday.

Temperatures were expected to get no higher than about 20 in the northwest mountains today and range from the 30s west to the 40s on the coast. Lows tonight again will drop to zero to 15 in the mountains and range to the 20s on the coast.

Another 'Gay' Is Appointed

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Harry B. Britt, a 40-year-old homosexual and former Methodist minister, has been chosen to replace the slain Harvey Milk on San Francisco's Board of Supervisors.

In announcing the appointment Monday, Mayor Dianne Feinstein stressed that Milk's seat on the board was "not a gay seat." But she added that she had appointed a homosexual because of her commitment that "violence not change the course of government."

Milk, one of the nation's few avowed homosexual political figures and San Francisco's first homosexual supervisor, was gunned down Nov. 27 in City Hall, along with Mayor George Moscone. Former Supervisor Dan White has been charged with the shootings.

Agree Climate Changes Likely

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — A voracious appetite for fossil fuels could change the world's climate so drastically that an overgrown ocean might one day send waves crashing against the steps of the U.S. Capitol, scientists suggest.

While some climate researchers described man-made actions that could raise temperatures, melt polar ice caps and inundate coastal cities, others warned that nature itself is pushing the world slowly but inexorably toward a new ice age.

The panel outlined some possible future weather problems at a news conference Sunday during the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

"We've had 10,000 or 11,000 years of warmth, and judging from the geologic record, we've just about had our ration," said John Mercer of Ohio State University. "In the natural course of events, we would probably sink gradually into the next ice age."

"But," he said, "the advent of man and his proclivity for fossil fuels may alter the picture somewhat."

The threat is called the "greenhouse effect," a subject of growing debate over the past two decades. Some scientists say the atmosphere is being dangerously overloaded with carbon dioxide, a byproduct of burning oil, coal and natural gas.

Carbon dioxide acts like the glass walls of a greenhouse — it allows the sun's heat to reach Earth, then keeps much of it from being reflected back into space.

Roger Revelle of the University of California at San Diego said some experts predict that within 75 years world energy consumption could double the amount of carbon dioxide normally found in the atmosphere. He said that could raise global temperatures an average of more than 5 degrees Fahrenheit.

Mercer said that's enough extra heat to melt perhaps 10 percent of the gigantic ice sheets of Antarctica and add incredible amounts of water to the oceans. The last time the ice melted, about 125,000 years ago, sea levels rose at least 12 to 20 feet, he said.

Mercer said the warming trend might take a century or more or it might occur catastrophically in a few decades or even years. Revelle said the warming could continue for 1,000 years.

James Hays of Columbia University said that he still forecasts cold centuries to come — the result of cyclic changes in the Earth's orbit about the sun.

"The long-term trend over thousands of years is toward cooling," he said. "It may well be that we will get a (warming) bump in there, but its duration will be limited. Then you'd go back to the long-term trend. You could have both."

much staying power in New Hampshire," one presidential insider told us.

A footnote: Senior aide Hamilton Jordan and pollster Pat Caddell, key strategists in the 1976 Carter campaign, are preparing lengthy memos on the 1980 campaign for the president's use. But the actual campaign chairman is almost certainly going to be Evan Doherty, a recently converted Massachusetts Republican who is currently Democratic national treasurer.

Hatch vs. Heinz

The unannounced decision of Sen. Pete Domenici of New Mexico to throw his support to conservative Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah for the potentially powerful post of Republican senatorial campaign committee chairman gives Hatch a long leg up against liberal Sen. John Heinz of Pennsylvania.

The hot Hatch-Heinz battle for control of the staff, money and prestige of the campaign post had been a dead heat. The count was 18 to 18 with five uncommitted senators among 41 Republicans in the new Senate, before Domenici privately informed Hatch that he would back him. Heinz had made three separate efforts to pick up Domenici's support.

Domenici's decision to support a fellow Westerner against an Easterner shows the importance of regional grouping, second only to ideological factors.

In the early stage of the Hatch-Heinz battle, an unsuccessful effort was made to get Domenici himself to run as a third force. Instead, he quietly lobbied his New Mexico colleague, Sen. Harrison Schmitt, plus Sens. Henry Bellmon of Oklahoma and Malcolm Wallop of Wyoming, to back Hatch. As of now, all support hatch.

Iran vs. Paraguay

An ironic asterisk to the tragic upheavals in Iran is the fact that the 1978 list of priority problems made up by the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) for potential trouble spots around the world had "stability of the Iranian government" in "Category 4" — behind "civil liberties in Paraguay" in "Category 3."

The U.S. government was more troubled in early 1978, when the CIA's regular yearly list of potential disaster areas was made up, by human rights in a right-wing dictatorship — no conceivable threat to the U.S. — than it was about oil-rich Iran, so important to the West.

The list is supposed to be a guide for the CIA's clandestine service, the battered cloak-and-dagger branch of the once mighty CIA.

Major structural improvements or repairs in the electrical and plumbing system generally call for the services of an expert. Never try this kind of job unless you are skilled. HUD warns.

There are some things you can do yourself, however. That leaky faucet, for example, may be caused by dirt particles under the valve seat or an improperly sealed valve washer. Either problem is easily corrected. The 32-page HUD guide provides some basic advice for homeowners on maintenance. It is available, at no charge, from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 616G, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

One way to get protection for your home is with a warranty.

The National Association of Home Builders sponsors one of the most widespread warranty efforts through its HOW program.

The HOW program basically is designed for new homes. A HOW warranty lasts for 10 years; if the house is sold during that period, the warranty goes with it. The builder bears the cost — $2 per $1,000 of the selling price of the house.

During the first year of the warranty, the builder guarantees the house against defects in workmanship, materials and structure.

The guarantee against structural defects continues during the second year. The builder also warrants that the plumbing, heating, cooling and electrical systems will perform according to approved standards.

For the remaining eight years, the owner is insured by HOW's insurance carrier against major structural defects.

If you buy a HOW house, you will get a copy of the warranty agreement at closing time; you and the builder both sign. About six weeks after you move into your home, you will receive your individual policy. Disputes that arise during the period of the warranty can be settled by use of the HOW arbitration and conciliation period. If you have a problem that you cannot settle directly with the builder, contact the local HOW council listed on your warranty.

Prison Inmate Readies For Classes At UNC

HILLSBOROUGH, N.C. (AP) — Like hundreds of other students, 23-year-old Larry Gregg White plans to register early Monday morning for classes at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill.

But unlike other freshmen, White will do his homework in a prison cell.

He is serving two 10-year consecutive sentences on drug-related charges at the Orange County Prison. White will attend classes under the Study Release Program.

White, who already contributes editorials to the prison newspaper, wants to study journalism. He admits he has "wasted seven years" of his life.

"A lot of people have helped me over the past year," White said. "They helped me when I was down, helped me to stand up again — to face myself and the world. I can make it now, knowing I have such friends."

White credits "all the many people who make up and work with the Inreach Program and the Community Volunteer Sponsor Program" for encouraging him to pursue academics.

"All I had to do was extend myself, reach out and listen to them and then put a couple of things together in my mind to find out they were right," he said.

Orange County Prison Superintendent Cooper Ayscue said the Study Release Program permits prisoners to go to colleges and universities. He said tuition is paid either by family members, through vocational rehabilitation programs, the Veterans Administration or other types of loans or grants.

Much depends on the work habits, the attitude of the inmate and the length of time to be served and type of crime committed before approval is given.

"Reducing our prison population would not be a terribly difficult task if we can all work together to help people get out and then stay out of prison," Ayscue said. "Community involvement, in fact, may well be the most instructive influence on the lives of many prisoners."

The Inreach Program includes visits with an inmate by a sponsor at the prison unit a couple of times a week. The sponsor is charged with helping the inmate learn the value of interpersonal relationships.

The Community Volunteer Sponsor Program allows a volunteer to take an inmate out for recreational, religious or social purposes for up to six hours and as often as three times a week.

Ayden Board Okays Revised Recreation Ordinance

AYDEN — The Ayden Town Board of Commissioners voted Monday to adopt a revised recreation ordinance that would allow the creation of an Ayden Department of Parks and Recreation, thereby calling for the hiring of a recreation director.

The revised ordinance will expand the duties of the Ayden Recreation Commission, tying the director's duties in with both the commission and Board of Commissioners.

The ordinance is basically the same as the old one in the area of restrictions, allowing the Board of Commissioners to have the final say-so on contracts and grants.

The board also discussed the creation of a Tree Ordinance that would call for a board of Ayden citizens to study the tree trimming situation.

The proposed board would take an inventory of all trees located on the right of way of all Ayden streets and parks and suggest possible trimming to the Board of Commissioners.

The five members would be appointed by the mayor and receive guidance from the North Carolina Department of Forestry, which has offered its assistance if the ordinance is adopted.

Board members agreed that the Tree Board would allow Ayden citizens to become more involved in board decisions, but felt that the matter should be tabled until the next meeting.

Commissioner Dr. Elliott Dixon queried Michael Finney, Ayden's Utility Director, as to his feelings on the matter.

In the past, the Utility Department has come under fire for the trimming of several town trees in order to provide service to town customers.

Pinney replied that the board would be good if the citizen output would be consistent. He warned board members that if the tree board did not keep up with its job, the Utility Department would not be able to do needed tree trimming.

Upon agreement by board members, Mayor Ross Persinger tabled the matter until the February meeting.

The board voted to hold a public hearing at the Feb. 12 meeting so that the board might have first reading and approval of an amended ordinance for a non-exclusive franchise with Greenville Cable TV, Inc. for services to Ayden.

If all goes as planned at the February meeting, a second reading of the ordinance and approval will be held at the March regular meeting.

The board discussed the possibility of rescinding an ordinance so that Pitt St. could be changed to a two-way street.

Police Chief Tommy Burney said that the change would aid the traffic at the Post Office. Dr. Dixon noted that the parking lines at the Post Office would have to be changed to allow convenient parking at the post office.

The board instructed Police Chief Burney to talk with various business owners along the street to get their feeling on the matter.

A Parking Committee consisting of Bill Cozart, Diane Hill, Police Chief Burney, Willard Hall and Dr. Elliott Dixon as chairman was appointed to study the downtown parking situation, with recommendations to be reported to the Board of Commissioners.

The board voted to accept a low bid of $7,185 from Rigby Electric Company for 20 miscellaneous transformers, a high bid of $200 on a 1966 dump truck, no longer operable, and a high bid of $450 from Lee Fire Equipment of Kinston for a 1951 fire truck, no longer operable.

Town Manager Don Russell informed the board that Commissioner Robert Booth had received information from Seaboard Coast Line allowing the board to sublease property to Marshal Desten's Wild West Show. A public hearing will be needed to allow the board to adopt a resolution to sublease the property to the show group.

Mayor Persinger was reappointed by the board to serve another term as municipal representative to the Mid-East Commission.

The board voted to add $35.95 in taxes to the 1978 levy.

Commissioner Robert Booth pointed out to the board that a new one-way sign was needed at the Ayden Methodist Church to alleviate the confusing traffic situation.

Jerry Cox, Director of Ayden's Housing Authority, reported to the board that $75.17 was the average rent for December. He also noted that the Authority had an underground cable outage in December and had to replace approximately 1,100 feet of cable. Cox said that some outside painting on some of the buildings would be conducted when the weather was more stable.

The board heard reports from Jim Caldwell of MICA (Management Investment Corporation of America) concerning work presently being conducted for the town.

Also, Everette Arnold presented for the board's perusal a risk management report concerning Ayden's insurance coverage.

The board adjourned until Monday, Jan. 15, at which time the Ayden Municipal Election Board will present the report on the three bond referendums held Tuesday, Jan. 9.

Seeks Change Law On Bad Check Prosecution

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — With attorneys hard-pressed to prove wilful intent to defraud, many business firms write off losses from most of their worthless checks rather than engage in expensive legal procedures.

But J. Phil Carlton, former secretary of the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, has proposed changing the state's worthless check law to make prosecution easier for North Carolina businesses.

Carlton is now an appeals court judge.

What Carlton has proposed would make an average citizen who overdraws a checking account subject to arrest and prosecution. As a result, retail merchants and the state's consumer groups could find themselves in a battle with the General Assembly if the administration of Gov. Jim Hunt backs the proposal.

Carlton's proposal would make writing a bad check prima facie evidence of violation of the worthless check law.

Claiming heavy losses and inability to recoup losses because the present law requires proof of wilful intent to defraud, merchants have long sought a tougher and easier to use statute.

M. Thompson Greenwood, executive director of the North Carolina Merchants Association, said the "bad check situation is getting worse. You're dealing in money here, millions in North Carolina every year."

Carlton has suggested allowing "sufficient time for widespread publicity to be given this new law. We are sensitive to the fact that people do inadvertently overdraw their checking accounts, but emphasis on this statute should make them sensitive to the problem and cause them to make proper arrangements."

He said the proposal would "encourage sound book-keeping" by consumers and "prevent people from getting into 'credit trouble.'"

State Rep. Ruth E. Cook, D-Wake, who is a member of the executive committee of the North Carolina Consumers Council Inc., said she was aware of the increasing problems caused by worthless checks. However, she said "there must be some proof that it was wilful. Sometime you might not have balanced your checkbook and be overdrawn by a couple of dollars. That's not a criminal offense."

Worm Farm Is Ruled Out

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Pat Exon has gone to Washington to join her husband, Nebraska's new junior senator — leaving her worm collection behind.

That doesn't mean, of course, that the wife of Democratic Sen. J.J. Exon has ruled out the possibility of starting a worm farm in the nation's capital.

"I'm taking my fishing equipment and I may start another worm farm in Washington," said Mrs. Exon, who left for Washington on Monday.

An avid fisherman, Mrs. Exon raised the worms for bait and kept them in a bomb shelter in the basement of the governor's mansion. She said she gave her worms to a fishing buddy, Dorothy Hyatt.

Mrs. Exon's worm farm attracted national attention several years ago when The Associated Press carried a story about a drought that depleted her supply.

She said people from all over the country then sent her worms.

"I never knew you could send worms through the mail. One person even left a can of worms on the mansion doorstep," she said.

Conference On Thursday

One of four regional drive-in conferences sponsored by the North Carolina Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development will be held at the Greenville Moose Lodge, Thursday, Jan. 11, with registration at 9 a.m.

The workshops, initiated by the ASCD Staff Development Committee, are held annually to help supervisors of instruction and other resource personnel improve the quality of public school education.

Dr. Betty Siegal, Dean of the School of Education, Western Carolina, will be the keynote presenter. The theme of the conferences is "Translating Goals into Instruction."

Others appearing on the program will be George Kahdy and State Department of Public Instruction Program Services Staff with a brief discussion of "The New SDPI-LEA Competency Goals."

Some representation from the State Board of Education and State PTA is expected to attend. The attendance area of the workshop will cover counties from Pasquotank to Columbus.

The program will begin at 10 a.m. Mrs. Lillian D. Bradley is chairman of the local arrangements committee.

Oil Refinery Workers Awaiting Reaction To Pay Raise Contract

By JOHN MOSSMAN
Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) — The nation's 60,000 oil refinery workers continued to delay their threatened nationwide strike, as union officials awaited Carter Administration reaction to a possible 73-cent-per-hour raise.

The contract dispute is the first major union showdown over President Carter's voluntary wage-price guidelines, which allow for a 7 percent increase in wages and benefits over the life of a contract.

A.F. Grospiron, president of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union, confirmed Monday that he had been in touch with officials of Carter's anti-inflation program.

He said he sought "an interpretation of how the wage guidelines would be applied to contract settlements within the oil industry."

Some of the officials, who Grospiron did not identify, were to meet with Grospiron today in Denver, the union president said.

White House spokesman Mark Henderson said he did not know of any such meeting.

The union leader said Monday the possibility of a nationwide walkout remained "very real." But he said there would be no immediate strike despite the expiration of contracts Sunday night. Most workers were on the job Monday, although oil workers stayed out at Gulf and ARCO refineries in Port Arthur, Texas.

The strike was delayed by an offer from Amoco calling for a 73-cent-per hour raise in the first year and a wage reopener clause the second year.

With oil workers currently averaging $8.82 an hour, the 73-cent increase amounts to a 8.3 percent increase. If the union agreed to hold its wage increase to less than 6 percent in the second year, the contract apparently would comply with the 7 percent guideline.

Amoco, a subsidiary of Standard Oil of Indiana, contended Monday that its workers average $9.34 per hour and certain employees are exempt from the increase. The proposal, Amoco said, would therefore comply with the 7 percent guideline.

Grospiron said earlier Monday that the union's oil policy bargaining committee had rejected contract offers from 21 companies, including Gulf, Mobil, Texaco, Conoco and Exxon. He said all of those offers pro-

Kiwanians Adopt Floral Arrangement

The Golden K Kiwanis Club of Greenville has adopted a standard floral arrangement to be sent to families of deceased members of the organization.

The floral design consists of large yellow chrysanthemums in the form of the letter "K" which encircles the letter "G" made of small yellow mums.

White orchids grace the letter "G" at the top and bottom, with the entire design fluted with gold satin ribbon.

The design was created by Claude Goodman, vice president.

Les Garner, local businessman who has been active in Kiwanis affairs for many years, has recommended to Kiwanis International that the floral design be adopted for use by other Golden K Clubs throughout the international organization.

According to an announcement by Henry Oglesby, president, the Greenville Golden K Kiwanis Club is the original Kiwanis Club founded for retired men who continue to be active and interested in the various projects of Kiwanis International. There are now 30 Golden K Clubs in the nation and foreign countries.

The Greenville chapter meets weekly, 10 a.m., every Tuesday at the Greenville Moose Lodge. Retired persons interested in joining should contact Claude Goodman, vice president, 752-6881.

Got Their Last Moonshine Gift

ATLANTA (AP) — State Rep. Jack Irvin of Baldwin says his constituents have received their last Christmas moonshine gifts from him.

Irvin pleaded no contest Saturday in Habersham County State Court to charges of possessing and transporting non-tax-paid liquor. Clerk of Courts Ernest Nations Jr. said Monday, Irvin was fined $250.

Irvin was involved in a three-car traffic accident last month in Baldwin, and officers said they found several half-gallon jugs of liquor in Irvin's automobile.

Irvin said gifts of moonshine from politicians at Christmastime is a northeast Georgia tradition, but he said, "My friends will just have to do without from now on."

Will Speak At ACLU Meet

Julia Talbutt, legal consultant to welfare offices in 33 eastern North Carolina counties, will be guest speaker at this month's meeting of the Greenville chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union.

The meeting will be held Wednesday at 8 p. m. at 501 E. Fifth Street.

Ms. Talbutt will discuss child abuse cases, with attention to the constitutionality of the legal procedures followed in this state. Visitors will be welcomed.

Chimp Jailed For Trespass

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Ga. (AP) — A trespassing chimpanzee has been turned over to animal control authorities after spending time in the Mountain View city jail.

Police spokesman Ernest Walker said police and firemen trapped the chimp Monday in the home of Lucy Reeves. The chimp went to jail because, "We didn't have anywhere else to put him," Walker said.

Mrs. Reeves told police the chimpanzee ran into the house as she carried an armload of groceries through the door and began helping himself to apples, bananas, gum and mints.

"He just had himself a ball," Walker said. He said the chimp was a neighbor's pet who apparently escaped and ran to Mrs. Reeves' house.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 2.59 on Monday, rose 1.64 to 829.78 by noon today.

Gainers outpaced losers by better than a 2-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

One influence working in the market's favor was a steady showing by the dollar in foreign exchange.

Analysts also noted that investors seemed to have been impressed with the behavior of the market on Monday, when prices rebounded from a broad early decline to show only a modest loss by the close.

Meanwhile, takeover news continued to generate excitement on Wall Street. American Express proposed to acquire McGraw-Hill for $34 a share.

Diamond International, trading for the first time this week, jumped 4 1/2 to 37 1/2. The company said Monday a French holiday company plans to acquire more than $15 million worth of its stock.

Questions And Answers About Key Aspects Of New Conflict

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer
BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Cambodian rebels, backed by a Vietnamese invasion force, claim they have seized control of Cambodia, capturing the capital city of Phnom Penh and forcing Premier Pol Pot's 44-month-old radical government to flee into the countryside.

Here in question-and-answer form are key aspects of the conflict:

Q: Who is fighting?
A: Intelligence analysts in Bangkok say about 100,000 Vietnamese troops, supported by modern tanks and warplanes, were matched against a tough but weaker Cambodian army, thinned by three years of fighting over disputed border areas with Vietnam.

Vietnam, disclaiming any aggression, credits the victories to a rebel group formed last month — the Kampuchean National United Front for National Salvation. Estimates of the insurgents' strength have ranged from a few thousand to 20,000. Indochina experts say their ranks may have swelled from a population eager to throw off the repressive Phnom Penh authorities.

Q: What is the current military situation in Cambodia?

A: While there has been no independent confirmation of the rebels' battlefield claims, a State Department spokesman said Sunday that Washington was "prepared to believe that the capital of Phnom Penh has fallen to Vietnam or Vietnam-backed insurgents." Vietnam radio said the rebels also captured six provisional capitals.

Q: Are any of the world's powers involved?

A: U.S. National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski several months ago called the conflict "a war by proxy" between the Soviet Union, which supports Vietnam, and China, Cambodia's sole major backer.

Both powers have been providing their allies with large quantities of military supplies but charges and countercharges of Chinese and Soviet military advisers involved directly in the fighting appear dubious.

Q: What is the U.S. position?
A: The Carter administration said Vietnam's invasion was unjustified, even though Washington looks upon Cambodia's human-rights record as a poor one. The United States has expressed hope the conflict would be settled without "great-power involvement."

The United States backs Cambodia's request to bring the issue before the U.N. Security Council in New York.

Killed Delivery Boy By Mistake
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A delivery boy was shot to death as he left a movie theater by a man who apparently thought the boy was carrying proceeds from ticket sales at the last showing of the film "Superman," police said.

The unidentified victim, who worked for a courier service, was shot late Monday as he left the theater carrying a bag containing only accounting documents, police said. Witnesses told officers the assailant escaped in a battered red pickup.

VEPCO Rate Boost Cleared

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The staff of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission has recommended that Virginia Electric & Power Co. be granted $7 million of a requested $10.2-million wholesale rate increase affecting North Carolina and Virginia municipalities.

The requested 19.8 percent increase went into effect Sept. 30, subject to refund plus 9 percent interest if any part of it is rejected by the commission.

The U.S. Court of Appeals has rejected a request by Electricities, which represents the 24 municipalities, to suspend the rate hike for five months.

"The staff isn't all that thrilled over the FERC report because we feel it should come down even more," said Jack Aulis, deputy executive director of Electricities.

Aulis said the FERC staff unofficially has recommended that the Vepco hike be cut even further to $6.2 million because of delays in construction of its North Anna nuclear generating plant.

Electricities represents about 56,000 customers in 16 eastern North Carolina towns and the Virginia municipalities of Blackstone, Culpeper, Elkton, Franklin, Harrisonburg, Iron Gate, Manassas and Wakefield.

The municipalities buy electricity from Vepco at wholesale rates and resell it to individual consumers.

Proposes Add Tunnel To Plan

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Wilmington architect has proposed adding a non-public, $341,000 tunnel to plans for the new state office building to connect it to the Legislative Building.

No formal action was taken on the proposal. It now goes to the Department of Administration for action.

However, the head of that department, Secretary Joe Grimsley, says he is in favor of the idea.

Herbert McKim told a work session of legislative and administration officials and their staff Monday that this tunnel was necessary to keep legislators and their secretaries out of the cold and rain.

Members of the public walking in the same area would get a more costly open-air bridge linking the proposed state office building to the second level patio area of the Legislative Building, if McKim's proposal is accepted.

The cost for these tunnels would be in addition to the $8.5 million authorized by the 1978 General Assembly for the six-level, 170,000-square-foot, legislative-executive office building.

McKim said the tunnel was necessary "because you don't want legislators and their secretaries going back and forth between the buildings in weather like this." He was referring to Monday's weather which was cold, damp and windy.

Although the tunnel was described as non-public, it would not be off limits to the public. But McKim said its location would make it "non-public."

Prosecutors argued against the defense motion to exclude reporters and other representatives of the media from the courtroom, claiming it would violate freedom of the press.

"Atkinson has no prior record of violence and has an impeccably clean prison record," said John Duke of Goldsboro, Atkinson's stand-by counsel.

Atkinson, 54, has been charged with conspiracy to distribute heroin, operating a business for crime and related charges. If convicted, he faces life imprisonment.

He is already serving a 44-year sentence in federal prison on two convictions in federal court of heroin smuggling. He is being tried with members of his family and alleged associates.

Approval was given to the development plan submitted by the firm of Worsley, Farley, Prescott & Mizelle for the small parcel located at the corner of Third and Cotanche Streets adjacent to the firm's office structure.

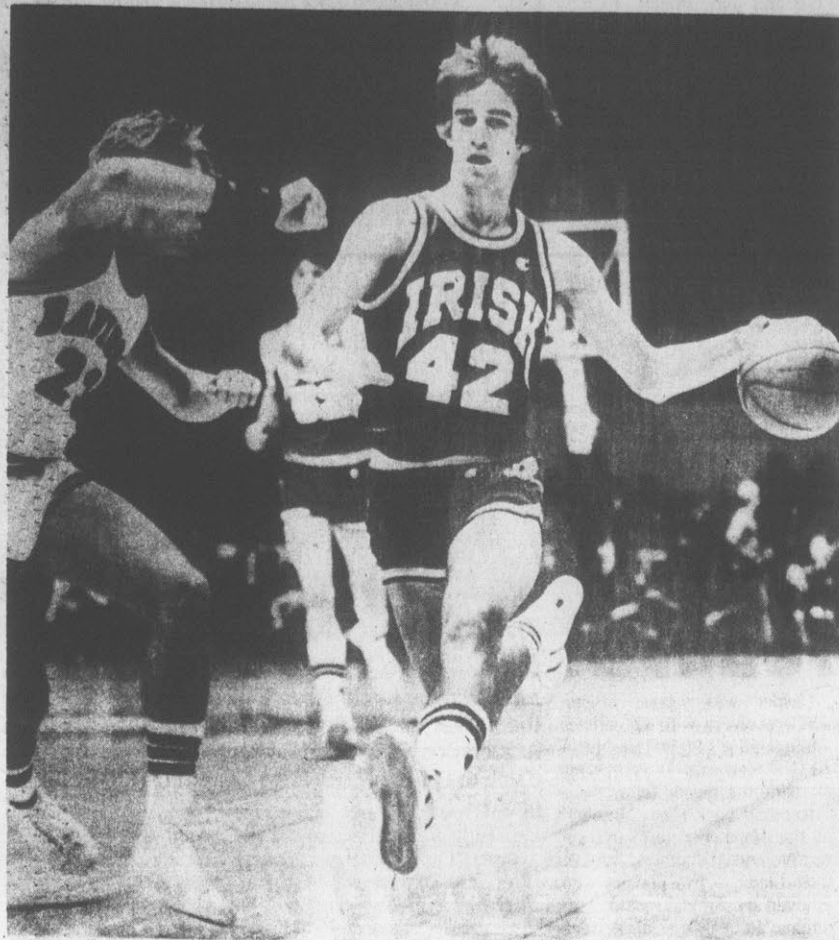

Laney said that plans call for fill to be added to the parcel in order for proper drainage to be accomplished and landscaping.

Pirates Entertain South Carolina

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

It's been almost ten years since Frank McGuire last paid a visit to Greenville, N.C., bringing in his University of South Carolina Gamecocks to face the Pirates.

In that meeting, the Gamecocks were ranked tops in the nation and had their hands full with the pesky Pirates before managing to pull off a victory.

Those days of glory seem to have passed McGuire and his team by, but the name South Carolina still brings to mind a "name" basketball program.

McGuire is hopeful that these days of glory may return and that they may be soon. Currently, the Gamecocks are 6-3, and their last victory was a 57-53 win over strong Minnesota on the Gophers home court.

"We beat Minnesota, but we also lost to Delaware (in the Roanoke Tournament) and they were 0-5 at the time," McGuire said in a telephone hookup press conference at East Carolina yesterday. "So it all evens out."

McGuire said, for once, he is at a loss to name his starting lineup at the time. "I probably won't know for sure until around game time. (Jimmy) Graziano isn't running right yet, and he's a doubtful starter. He injured an ankle and I don't know whether he's going to be ready to play or not."

Another factor in the lineup, the return to the team by Furman transfer Jim Strickland, a 6-11 center, is uncertain. "He missed about a month of practice, and I don't know how much that has affected him," McGuire said.

The Gamecocks haven't played for 17 days, and that, too, could be a problem, the veteran coach, who recently recorded his 700th basketball victory (all levels) added.

"That's one of the problems on being an independent. A lot of times, you can't get some of the bigger names to play you over the holidays, and when you can't bring in a big name when the students are out of town, it's hard to bring in any kind of a crowd. So instead of being able to dictate your schedule, it's dictated to you."

McGuire also made another pitch for South Carolina to seek readmission to the Atlantic Coast Conference. "I've been yelling since the second year out that it was a mistake. No matter who you play from outside the ACC, Notre Dame or whoever, you just don't get the crowds like you do against an ACC team."

The coach added that he thought Notre Dame was really the only school that can survive year after year without being in a conference.

McGuire admitted that the prospect of playing East Carolina bothered him. "I saw them beat Iowa, and I thought Iowa was the best team in New York State. Some of our people are trying to tell us it will be an easy game for us, but I don't believe that there are easy games. I look for a tough game."

Asked about what he thought of Oliver Mack, McGuire said, "I'm not going to tell you what I think of him, except to say that we're worried about him."

The Gamecocks can put up a big front line, even without Strickland. Graziano is 6-10, Cedrick Hordges is 6-9, and Tom Wimbush is 6-7.

Hordges is the top scorer for the Gamecocks with a 21.7 average while Mike Doyle is the only other scorer in double figures at 13.3. Wimbush is averaging 9.2, with Zam Frederick hitting 7.9. Graziano is scoring 6.5, with Kenny Reynolds scoring 6.0. Hordges is also the leading rebounder, grabbing off 11.2 per game.

As a team, the Gamecocks are hitting 45.7 per cent of their field goals and 65.6 per cent of their free throws, with a 73.9 scoring average. They have allowed 66.8 per game.

Mack leads the Pirates with an 18.5 average, while David Underwood, a transfer from South Carolina who will be playing in his fourth game, is next at 15.3. Greg Cornelius is averaging 11.3, while George Maynor is at 11.2. Clarence Miles has an 8.1 average and Frank Hobson, 6.0.

The Bucs are hitting 47.1 per cent of their shots from the floor and 69.1 per cent at the line, with a 75.5 per cent scoring average. They are allowing 80.5 per game.

"Hordges is one of the top players in the country," Pirate coach Larry Gillman said. "And their victory over Minnesota has to count as one of the big ones for them this year. They also played Illinois a real good game, getting beat 64-57."

While saying that the team's come-from-behind victory over Iowa was the biggest so far for the Pirates under him, Gillman added, "We have a chance to play a nationally known basketball power in South Carolina, but on our own floor. If we are fortunate enough to win, this will pick us up some momentum, especially with the games we've got coming up."

"But any team that can beat Minnesota in Minneapolis can beat anybody," he added.

The game will tip off Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

The next Pirate outing will be Saturday night against strong Virginia Commonwealth before returning to the road again to face Tennessee-Chattanooga on Monday.

Pirates Rally Past WCU

CULLOWHEE — East Carolina rode the hot second-half shooting of Rosie Thompson and the strong board play of Marcia Girven to a come-from-behind 84-73 win at Western Carolina last night.

The Catamounts led 40-32 at halftime, but Thompson, the state's leading scorer and rebounder this winter, hit her first 12 shots of the final half and Girven gleaned 12 rebounds to push East Carolina to its seventh win in 11 starts. The Pirates stand 4-1 in NCAA Division I play, while Western Carolina is 5-5 overall and 2-2 in league play.

"Rosie made the difference, that's for sure," said Pirate mentor Cathy Andruzzi. "We were slow-starting tonight and did get in some foul trouble early. Gale Kerbaugh kept us in it the first half and Rosie came out and showed why she is one of the best players in the region in the second."

Thompson, a junior from Blounts Creek, hit her first 12 shots from the floor after intermission on her way to a 34-point effort. Kerbaugh's 18 points and 16 by Girven supported Thompson's performance.

The Pirates jumped to a 16-8 lead in the first seven minutes, led by Kerbaugh's outstanding shooting, but the Catamounts tied the count at 20-20 on a layup by Jayne Arledge, the state's second leading scorer, with 9:45 left in the half. The hosts then outpointed the Pirates 13-3 and surged to a 40-32 lead at halftime.

Thompson scored on a layup after a pass from Lydia Rountree and gave the visitors a 51-50 lead with 12:30 to play. WCU could never regain the lead and trailed by as much as 14 points with four minutes to go when Girven netted a follow shot to make it 78-64.

"Western came out fast and strong and we were a step slow in the first half," Andruzzi said.

Bradshaw Gets AP Grid Honor

NEW YORK (AP) — Terry Bradshaw, who quarterbacked the Pittsburgh Steelers to the National Football League's best record during the regular season and into the Super Bowl, was named The Associated Press' Most Valuable Player today.

Bradshaw, who led the American Conference in passing and the league in touchdowns with a career-high 28, edged rookie running back Earl Campbell of the Houston Oilers 36 votes to 33 in nationwide balloting by 84 sports writers and broadcasters, three from each NFL city.

Jim Zorn, the left-handed quarterback of the Seattle Seahawks, was a distant third in the balloting with six votes, followed by Dallas Cowboys' quarterback Roger Staubach with four. No other player received more than one vote.

"Terry's play and statistics speak for themselves. Both were outstanding," said Steelers Coach Chuck Noll. "He is deserving of any award. The players voted him MVP for two successive seasons and now this honor proves what a great player he is."

And Dick Hoak, Pittsburgh's backfield coach, added: "Terry has always been an underrated football player. He's big, he's strong, he throws as well as anyone, he can run with anyone and he has matured to become an outstanding quarterback."

Bradshaw, an AP College Division All-American as a senior at Louisiana Tech and the Steelers' No. 1 draft choice in 1970, completed 207 of 368 passes for 2,915 yards, a league-high 7.92 yards per pass as the Steelers compiled a regular-season 14-2 record en route to the AFC's Central Division title.

Most notable, perhaps, was the absence of injuries which had plagued Bradshaw in past seasons, and the presence of a consistency which had been missing much of that time.

Despite being blessed with a corps of receivers including Lynn Swann, John Stallworth and Randy Grossman, Bradshaw was relatively sparing in his passing. When he threw, he was rarely off target.

Against Buffalo he completed 14 of 19 passes, then did the same against Cincinnati. He hit on 13 of 18 against Atlanta, 16 of 23 against New Orleans and 10 of 14 against Denver in other regular-season games that turned what was supposed to be a close division race into a runaway.

Campbell, the Heisman Trophy winner from the University of Texas, took the NFL by storm, winning the rushing title with 1,450 yards and scoring a league-high 13 touchdowns on the ground to lead the Oilers into the playoffs.

Zorn, often called a young Fran Tarkenton because of his scrambling techniques, led the AFC in passes, completions and yardage and sparked the Seahawks to a 9-7 record, just shy of the playoffs in only their third year in the league. Staubach was the league's passing leader as he directed Dallas, No. 1 in National Conference offense, to the East Division title.

Visa Is Denied

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — South African heavyweight boxer Kallie Knoetze's visitor's visa into the United States has been revoked, blocking his scheduled fight in Miami with Bill Sharkey, a U.S. embassy spokesman said Tuesday.

The spokesman said word had been received from the U.S. State Department about the revocation of the visa earlier in the day.

The visa revocation, sought by U.S. civil rights groups, made Knoetze an illegal alien in the United States and blocks the fight, scheduled for Saturday.

JACK EXPERIMENTS

NORWALK, Conn. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, the acknowledged King of Golf, admits that he still makes changes in his swing, even in the pressure-cooker of a big tournament.

"I experiment all the time on a golf course," Jack admitted. "I don't care if it's the Masters or the U.S. Open. I won't be satisfied with a bad swing."

"If you don't work at it and try to change for the better, you may go to an 85 in a hurry. If you do get it straightened out, you may finish with a 68."

LSU Handed 1st Loss; Long Beach Hit Again

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Mike Rhodes couldn't believe it and Wayne Dobbs couldn't describe it.

Those are the kind of reactions you get after upsetting Louisiana State's fifth-ranked basketball team.

The surprising Vanderbilt Commodores, unlikely contenders to the crown in the Southeastern Conference, moved into first place with an 88-87 victory over the tough Tigers Monday night, prompting this remark from Rhodes, Vandy's high scorer with 24 points: "I can't believe we really won it, and I also can't believe how good it feels."

Two of Rhodes' points came at a most opportune time — a pair of free throws with 42 seconds left that provided the underdogs with their winning edge.

Dobbs, the Vanderbilt coach, meanwhile called the victory "the biggest moment in my life."

"Words could never describe my feeling tonight," he said. "We deserved to beat them. We paid the price. We deserve to be on top of the SEC tonight."

That was made possible by Tennessee's 72-62 loss to Mississippi State Monday night. The Commodores, now 3-0 in the conference and 10-1 overall, were picked no better than eight in the 10-team league in the preseason poll of coaches. LSU, by the way, lost its first game of the season after 10 victories.

Another Top Twenty team was upset Monday night when No. 19 Long Beach State lost to Loyola of Chicago 95-86.

In other games involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 2 Notre Dame rolled past Davidson 95-63; No. 6 UCLA beat Oregon 74-71; No. 11 Texas A&M stopped Baylor 77-64; No. 12 Louisville crushed Marshall 112-64; No. 17 Kentucky defeated Mississippi 90-64 and No. 20 Syracuse whipped American University 103-73.

Larry Knight scored 31 points as Loyola of Chicago handed Long Beach State its third straight loss. The 49ers were beaten by Duke and North Carolina State in Raleigh, N.C., over the weekend.

Bruce Flowers scored 15 points and Stan Wilcox added 14 to power Notre Dame past Davidson, the Fighting Irish's seventh victory in eight games this year.

David Greenwood scored 21 points to lead UCLA to a comeback victory over Oregon. The Bruins trailed by as many as eight points in the second half before coming on strong at the end of the Pacific-10 Conference game.

Tyrone Ladson and Vernon Smith teamed for 35 points, leading Texas A&M over Baylor. Darrell Griffith collected a career-high 30 points as Louisville routed Marshall. Kentucky beat Mississippi as Dwight Anderson scored seven points during a game-ending 18-4 scoring run.

Roosevelt Bouie's 17-point, 11-rebound performance led Syracuse over Amerjean.

Greg Grim's 24 points led Mississippi State over Tennessee; Alabama beat Georgia 83-71 as Eddie Phillips and Reggie King teamed for 49 points; St. Bonaventure downed Virginia Tech 95-76 behind a 23-point performance by Earl Berlacher; Marty Coyne scored 17 points to pace Army over Kings Point 81-73; Virginia Commonwealth tripped Cincinnati 74-63 as Edmund Sherod and Lorenza Watson combined for 30 points after intermission and Mike Edwards scored 24 points and pulled down 13 rebounds to trigger the University of New Orleans past Georgia State 83-68.

Also, Sly Williams poured in 26 points as Rhode Island routed Brown 73-51; Dan Elmer scored four points in the last minute of overtime to trigger West Texas State to a 72-69 decision over Southern Illinois; Duquesne edged St. Francis (Pa.) 79-77 on B.B. Finley's two foul shots in the final seven seconds; little-used Jay Boyle sparked a second-half rally with 13 points to lead Seton Hall over Lehigh 85-61; Derrick Mayes had 23 points as Illinois State posted a 98-80 decision over North Texas State; Tyrone Bryanan's 18 points powered Texas over Houston 75-57 and two free throws by Glen Riecke with seven seconds remaining lifted Rice over SMU 78-76.

Texas Tech beat Texas Christian 99-75 as reserves David Little, Ben Hill and Joe Baxter came off the bench to combine for 50 points; Calvin Garrett scored a field goal with 15 seconds left, leading Oral Roberts past Auburn 63-62 and Alton Byrd and Shane Conner combined for 25 points to pace Columbia over Florida Southern 68-60.

Cale Out For Title

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — Veteran race car driver Cale Yarborough says he hopes to break his own record this year by nabbing his fourth consecutive Winston Cup title.

"I'm definitely going for four in a row. And it's really going to be a challenge with all the great drivers around these days," Yarborough said.

Title IX Is Chief Topic At NCAA Meet

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "An illegal power grab by the federal government...calculated ambiguity...a quantum leap in federal control over higher education...stupid..."

University presidents, lawyers, professors and athletic directors gathered Monday at the NCAA convention to discuss Title IX and what affect it will have on college athletics.

And any sports fan who's having trouble figuring out what all the complicated legal mumbo-jumbo means would have found himself in good company. The university presidents, athletic directors, professors and lawyers weren't sure themselves.

But they were unanimous on one key point — Title IX, federal legislation prohibiting discrimination against women in college athletics, will be a disaster if football and basketball, the sports that make most programs self-reliant, are not exempt from strict per capita expenditure enforcement.

Many delegates also questioned the legality of the legislation, as well as its wisdom.

"Title IX is for real," said Bud Davis, president of the University of New Mexico, who spent several weeks in Washington studying the guidelines with officials of the department of Health, Education and Welfare who wrote them. "It will involve massive sums of money at a time of fiscal exigencies in higher education, and the financial base of a major collegiate activity may be in jeopardy."

Davis and Philip B. Brown, an NCAA attorney, addressed more than 1,000 worried convention delegates on Title IX compliance requirements, which HEW has said must be observed by Sept. 1, 1979.

"The crux of Title IX is football and basketball," said Davis. "Where, in the past, considerable reliance has been placed on funding athletics as an auxiliary enterprise with resources coming from revenues from games (football and basketball ticket sales), gifts (alumni and booster donations) and student fees, Title IX will necessitate either substantive increases in resources or reallocation of often limited funds.

A number of delegates suggested the NCAA pursue Title IX through the courts and argued that athletic budgets which receive no federal assistance should not be subject to federal control.

"What we have here is a quantum jump in federal control over higher education," said Dallin Oaks, president of Brigham Young University, "an illegal power grab by the federal government."

Spartans Hold To First; Irish 2nd

By The Associated Press
Michigan State, which erased a 13-point deficit and beat Big Ten rival Minnesota 69-62 in its only game last week, remains on top in the latest Associated Press college basketball poll.

The Spartans, 9-1, received 38 of 59 first-place votes from the nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters and a total of 1,140 points for a comfortable lead over runnerup Notre Dame, which collected eight first-place votes and 1,048 points.

The poll, released Monday, was based on games played through Sunday, Jan. 7.

The top four teams were unchanged from the previous week, with Michigan State and Notre Dame followed by North Carolina and Illinois. The Tar Heels got just one first-place vote but totaled 1,010 points.

while the Illini, unbeaten in 14 games, received five first-place votes and 994 points.

Louisiana State, which was unbeaten before losing to Vanderbilt Monday night, moved from seventh place to fifth with six first-place votes and 968 points.

UCLA retained sixth place with 837 points while preseason favorite Duke slipped from fifth to seventh with 823 points despite victories over Davidson, Long Beach State and Tulane last week.

The lone remaining first-place vote went to North Carolina State, which remained in eighth place with 801 votes.

Two newcomers enjoying unbeaten seasons completed the Top Ten. Indiana State, 11-0, moved up to ninth place with 608 points followed closely by Arkansas, 9-0, with 606 points.

Texas A&M, idle last week, fell one notch to 11th place, followed by Louisville, Marquette, Georgetown, D.C., Kansas, Michigan, Kentucky, Temple, Long Beach State and Syracuse.

It was the first appearance on the list for Temple, which is 11-0 and joins Illinois, Indiana State and Arkansas as the nation's only four unbeaten major college teams. Syracuse returned to the chart after a one-week absence while Mississippi State and Maryland dropped off the list.

Jim Rice Newest Millionaire As He Signs Seven Year Pact

BOSTON (AP) — American League MVP Jim Rice is baseball's newest instant millionaire, and the Boston Red Sox are bracing for a new wave of salary demands from their other high-priced stars.

Rice, the 25-year-old outfielder whose slugging dominated baseball last season, agreed to a new seven-year contract Monday calling for more than $5 million.

Rice's annual salary of more than $700,000 doesn't make him the highest paid player in baseball, but jumped him from the rank-and-file — at about $125,000 a year — to the stratosphere of baseball salaries.

"I guess every player wants to be the richest in pro baseball," said Rice at a news conference at Fenway Park. "I don't worry about what other players make. I just want to be an every day ball player."

The contract agreement was unveiled by Red Sox General Manager Haywood Sullivan, accompanied by team vice president Buddy LeRoux. Rice was shepherded by his agent, Tony Pennacchia, who dickered with Sullivan for nearly a year.

Rice led the major leagues in home runs with 46 and RBI with 139 while batting .315 last season. He was under contract for 1979 and his option season of 1980. Sullivan, thus, effectively renegotiated Rice's pact and extended it through the 1985 season.

The general manager conceded that he is concerned with new demands from other Red Sox players, but added, "I'd rather sign Rice than worry about the others."

Rice's deal makes him the highest-paid Red Sox player, ahead of right-handed pitcher Mike Torrez, who signed for about $600,000 as a free agent in 1977, and veteran superstar Carl Yastrzemski who earns less than $300,000 a year.

The Rice contract has a no-trade provision for several seasons but does not include incentive clauses that would provide bonuses based on future performance.

Sullivan called Rice's contract the longest and richest in Red Sox history, but it apparently is somewhat shy, on an annual basis, of the $3.2 million four-year contract signed by free agent Pete Rose with the Philadelphia Phillies.

The slugger from Anderson, S.C., whose batting record last year was the most impressive in several decades, said he did not want to become a free agent, although Pennacchia had made that threat on behalf of his client.

The 6-foot-2, 205-pound slugger said he would simply invest his money because "a lot of ballplayers come out broke."

"I don't need a yacht or another fancy car. I save."

Champs Pace All-Pro Team

NEW YORK (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers and Dallas Cowboys, who meet to decide the National Football League championship on Jan. 21, placed a total of six players on The Associated Press All-Pro team for 1978.

The American Football Conference champion Steelers led all teams by placing four players — wide receiver Lynn Swann, center Mike Webster, quarterback Terry Bradshaw and outside linebacker Jack Ham — on the 25-player first team.

Free safety Cliff Harris and tackle Randy White represent the National Conference champion Cowboys on the team selected through voting by a national panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Pittsburgh's placing represented the trend in the first-team selections, as 18 AFC players and seven from the NFC were chosen.

Bradshaw quarterbacked the Steelers to 16 victories in the 18 regular season and postseason games played on the way to their Super Bowl XIII meeting with the Cowboys at Miami. He finished the regular season as the leading passer in the AFC and had 28 touchdown passes — many of them to Swann, whose 61 receptions placed him third among AFC pass catchers.

The other wide receiver was Wesley Walker of the New York Jets, who led NFL pass catchers with 1,169 yards and a 24.4-yard average, while Dave Casper of the Oakland Raiders won the tight end voting.

Casper was second among AFC receivers with 62 catches while Seattle's Steve Largent — AFC leader with 71 receptions — made the second team.

Running back Earl Campbell of the Houston Oilers and defensive end Al Baker of the Detroit Lions — two players who enjoyed sensational rookie campaigns in 1968 — also were named to the first team.

Campbell, who gained 1,450 yards in his first season, is joined in the All-Pro backfield by Delvin Williams of the Miami Dolphins, who gained 1,258 yards and finished second to his running mate.

Blocking for the high-powered backfield on The AP's first team are tackles Leon Gray of the New England Patriots and Dan Dierdorf of the St. Louis Cardinals along with guards John Hannah of the Patriots and Bob Kuechenberg of Miami.

Dierdorf is the only NFC starter on offense.

Three Denver Broncos were voted to the team: middle linebacker Randy Gradishar, cornerback Louis Wright and kick returner Rick Upchurch. Upchurch led NFL punt returners with a 13.7-yard average.

The rest of the starting defense: defensive end Jack Youngblood of the Los Angeles Rams, tackle Louis Kelcher of the San Diego Chargers, outside linebacker Robert Brazile of Houston, cornerback Willie Buchanan of the Green Bay Packers and strong safety Ken Houston of the Washington Redskins.

Carter Proposing Model Drug-Substitution Law

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is proposing a model drug-substitution law that could save consumers up to $400 million a year, or about 5 percent of the average American's drug bill.

The legislation, which was to be announced today, would list popular brand-name drugs and cheaper, "therapeutically equivalent" products sold under generic names.

A Federal Trade Commission study says that if the model legislation were adopted in each state, consumers could save $400 million a year on prescription drugs based on savings of about 5 percent on the average American's drug bill of $32 a year. People over age 65 spend about twice that amount.

The Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association, which represents most of the nation's big-name drug makers, has opposed listing "equivalent" drugs, arguing that possible differences could be important. But pro-substitution forces say the main difference between brand-name drugs and generic, or chemical-name, products is the high cost of promotion to encourage physicians to prescribe certain brands.

The administration proposal would not be a federal law but a model for states to copy.

About 40 states already have laws permitting or requiring pharmacists to substitute cheaper, generic-name drugs for brand-name products prescribed by physicians. But advocates of substitution say the laws generally are inadequate, or pharmacists ignore the laws because there is no incentive for dispensing cheaper products.

Sources familiar with the administration proposal drafted by the FTC and the Food and Drug Administration say the government is trying to give pharmacists that incentive. The legislative model would make it clear pharmacists do not have to pass all the savings from substitution on to the consumer but could keep all or part for themselves.

The government is said to believe increased competition resulting from active substitution would ensure the bulk of the savings would be passed on. But any requirement that consumers get the financial fruits of substitution would be self-defeating, sources said.

Under the model legislation, pharmacists still would have the choice of substituting generic drugs for brand-name products rather than being required to do so. And the prescribing physician could prevent substitution by writing "medically necessary" or some similar term on the prescription.

Consumers also could insist the prescription be dispensed as written.

A key element of any drug-substitution law is an accurate guide to products that are essentially the same, and only the FDA has access to the trade secrets necessary to compile an accurate list.

Last year, the FDA helped the state of New York compile such a list for use with that state's new substitution law, which is tied up in a court battle with drug manufacturers and pharmacists.

PERESIS DONATION.... was officially done in Greenville for the first time yesterday morning at the Tar River Blood Center. Because of the great need in this area, the local center has borrowed a pheresis (blood cell separation) machine from the Norfolk Red Cross Blood Center until local donations are sufficient to purchase a machine for local use. The first donor, pictured, was Ed Williams Jr. of Kinston, a member of the Kinston Jaycees, one of the first organizations to contribute to the pheresis cause. A two-gallon donor in the "regular whole blood program" of the Cross, Williams said he has found pheresis donating no more difficult. Pictured with him is Clyda Creech, Red Cross nurse. If Brezhnev Visits, He Will Be Asked Avoid Asia Confrontation

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON
AP Diplomatic Correspondent

GOSIER, Guadeloupe (AP) — If Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev comes to Washington to sign a new SALT treaty, President Carter will urge him to join in avoiding a Soviet-American confrontation in Southwest Asia.

Informed sources reporting this said the idea would be for the two sides to avoid tangling with each other in an area that easily could be transformed into a powder keg.

They said during the two-day Guadeloupe summit Carter mapped ways with British Prime Minister James Callaghan, West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing to check the creeping advance of the Soviet Union toward the Persian Gulf.

But the only initiative spelled out by the sources, who declined to be identified either by name or nationality, was the proposal to avoid a clash that Carter was to broach with Brezhnev in Washington.

Carter, his wife Rosalynn and daughter Amy were returning to Washington tonight after three days of vacation following the summit that ended Saturday.

The sources said that general agreement emerged during the summit that the balance of world power could be transformed if Moscow becomes dominant in the huge intercontinental triangle between Turkey, Afghanistan and Ethiopia.

Nearly half the non-communist world's oil comes from this region, and there was a recognition by the heads of government, based on pooled intelligence estimates, that the Soviets in the 1980s will have dire need of access to the same fuel sources.

The sources offered no information to suggest that Carter had been criticized for failing to respond to the opportunism of the Soviets. There was also acknowledgement that Moscow did not create the difficulties gripping the countries in the Ankara-Kabul-Addis Ababa triangle. But none of the four doubted that the Kremlin leadership has been quicker to exploit the situations than Western leaders have been.

Taken together the events of the past year have transformed the geopolitical picture of a region vital to the West not only for its oil but also for its five-fold-increased buying power.

Tobacco Leaders Take Case To U.S. Customs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm leaders from seven tobacco-producing states met with U.S. Customs officials Monday in an attempt to find some way to stop foreign nations from selling quality cigarette tobacco in this country under low tariffs.

However, customs officials say it is too late simply to rescind what has become a widespread practice of allowing the foreign leaf to come into this country as low-duty "scrap."

John W. Sledge, president of the North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation, said the group of 15 farm leaders had discussed the possibility of asking Congress to pass a law redefining scrap tobacco for tariff purposes.

The farm leaders say foreign nations have been taking advantage of loose U.S. Customs definitions to pay 16.1 cents per pound tariff on leaf tobacco rather than the legal 45 cents.

Sledge told the customs officials that nearly 600 million pounds of U.S. tobacco sits unused in storage warehouses. He said much of it was unsold due to the escalating "scrap" imports.

Sal Caramagano, director of customs' classifications value, told the 15-member delegation that farmers must follow a complicated and time-consuming appeals process to get the practice changed. It involves petitioning for the change and holding hearings for both sides of the issue. He said this could take a year or a year and a half.

Importers are able to escape the 45-cent a pound tariff on their tobacco by threshing it and calling the chopped up tobacco "scrap."

Customs officials said they first noticed that importers were calling the processed tobacco "scrap" in 1977. They said they tried to stop it then but found it was too late.

"Believe me," Caramagano said, "we did investigate it — it took us almost a year. We found the practice had been going on for 15 years. Then we found we were bound by law not to change an existing practice."

Tug-Of-War To Save A Child

By ARNOLD ZEITLIN

PLYMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — A Mexican doctor who uses Laetrile to treat cancer patients says the life of 3-year-old leukemia victim Chad Green could be endangered if his chemotherapy treatments are stopped.

"We cannot risk the life of the boy by withdrawing the chemotherapy," said Dr. Ernesto Contreras, who runs a clinic in Tijuana, Mexico. He testified for Chad's parents, Diana and Gerald Green of Scituate, in their effort to win the right to decide how Chad's illness should be treated.

"I stated very clearly that chemotherapy should continue as the basic treatment with metabolic therapy, including the use of Laetrile, to improve the quality of the boy's life and, possibly, prolonging his remission," Contreras said in describing his testimony Monday before a closed court hearing.

Judge Guy Volterra of Plymouth Superior Court is reviewing his April 18 order requiring the chemotherapy and making Chad a temporary ward of the state for purposes of treatment. During the treatment, he is still living with his parents.

The Greens are trying to regain legal custody of Chad in an effort to decide his treatment themselves.

The couple had opposed chemotherapy for their son in earlier court fights and argued he should be treated only with Laetrile and a special diet. But now they indicate they might permit the chemotherapy to continue.

Laetrile is a trademark for a substance derived from a substance extracted from peach or apricot pits. Although advocates claim it can cure cancer, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration has banned it from interstate commerce, claiming there is no proof of its effectiveness or safety.

Winterville Bd. Okays Subdivision Sections

WINTERVILLE — The Winterville Town Board approved sections one and two of the Weathering Heights subdivision Monday. The sections had previously been approved by the Winterville Planning and Zoning Board.

Thomas Hudson, representing the Winterville Rescue Squad, presented for the board's approval plans for building changes in the old maintenance building located behind the Winterville Town Hall.

The maintenance building has now been turned over to the Rescue Squad, with the maintenance department housed in the new building. The board approved the Rescue Squad's plan.

Joan Hooks, representing the Winterville Historical Society, asked for the town to secure permission from Seaboard Coast Line to allow restoration of the Old Well site located on North Railroad St. The Society also wants to restore the main switch located on the street. The board agreed to look into the matter.

Town Advisor Rodger Stancill was appointed by the board to be in charge of disposal and sale of land that had been declared surplus by the town. The property is located between Jones and N. Railroad Streets.

The regular outside tapping fee was set for residents on Tar Road (SR 1700) for town water services.

Mayor Walter Dail was reappointed to serve as the 1979 representative to the Mid East Commission.

It was noted that the 30 units at Winterville Apartments have been almost filled. The Mid East Housing Authority is in charge of the facilities.

According to the building permit, R. N. Rouse & Co. of Goldsboro is the construction contractor. The permit value was $304,361.

The new office site is located at the northwest corner of Third and Green Streets.

Permit Issued Banking Firm

A building permit has been issued for a new office of Branch Banking & Trust Co. at 300 W. Third Street here.

Branch Banking & Trust, however, contacted Monday at the bank's Wilson headquarters, declined to divulge any information regarding the new office here.

Prosecution To Ask Gacy Execution

CHICAGO (AP) — The electric chair will be sought for John Wayne Gacy, indicted on charges of murdering seven young men and boys whose bodies were buried at his suburban Chicago home or thrown into a nearby river, authorities say.

Bernard Carey, Cook County states attorney, said Monday he would ask for Gacy's execution. He said there was "more than one reason" why prosecutors could ask for the death penalty, but he refused to elaborate.

Gacy was indicted Monday by a Cook County grand jury for the seven murders.

Investigators have found the remains of 26 young men and boys beneath Gacy's home in Des Plaines, a northwest Chicago suburb. The remains of another body were found beneath his garage.

Gacy reportedly has confessed to the killings — the nation's largest mass murder in this century — telling police he had sex with 32 boys and young men, then killed them.

Police believe five bodies were thrown into the Des Plaines River. The bodies of two young men have been recovered from the river and linked to Gacy, authorities said.

Eight of the remains found at the Gacy home have been identified, in addition to the two bodies recovered from the river.

Carey said he believes 12 unbiased jurors can be found in Cook County, where Gacy's home is located, and that he will oppose any attempt to move a trial elsewhere.

The 36-year-old contractor has been in custody since late last month and was charged Dec. 22 with murdering 15-year-old Robert Piest, whose disappearance earlier in the month led to Gacy's arrest.

Policeman To Become Priest

WARNER ROBINS, Ga. (AP) — For years, Jim Mayo hated God because of the deaths of his wife and son. Now, the former policeman is ready to become a Roman Catholic priest.

The change didn't take place overnight, said Mayo, who came to Georgia from Nantucket, Mass. It took almost 17 years.

But on Jan. 29, he will become the first priest to be ordained in the small Warner Robins Catholic parish.

Mayo's wife and son died in childbirth just a year after the couple was married. It was a real test of his faith in God, a test which Mayo said he failed in the beginning.

The young priest who buried his wife told him, "If God was going to pick a flower, of course he would pick the sweetest of them all." Mayo recalled. "My response was to tell him to go to hell."

"I was very angry with God," he said. "I would tell him in dialogue. Now, I would tell him in prayer. But I came from a cultural background where anger was a sin."

After his wife died, Mayo became involved in politics, worked at four jobs and ran a Boy Scout troop to keep busy. But, he said, he continued to hate God.

Eventually, he became a policeman and later was chaplain of the Warner Robins police department.

Mayo said he began to change his mind about God two years after his wife's death, when he saw a young woman in a nursing home, a victim of brain damage from a stroke.

"She was a vegetable, a complete vegetable," he said. Her husband brought her flowers, "and she didn't even know what they were."

Mayo said he suddenly realized that this could have been his wife. "Had she lived, that is what she could have been," he said. "I saw only myself in him (the husband), not what God had done to her."

Mayo said he made the decision to become a priest after completing a project to raise money and build a Boy Scout camp. When that was done, he realized he had run out of things to do, he said.

"I took a vacation and played golf, and I said 'yes' to the Lord," Mayo said. "That's when I made my peace and I felt relieved, happy."

"We can make our plans," he said. "But the final outcome is in God's hands."

Again Seeks A State Holiday

ATLANTA (AP) — Coretta Scott King has renewed her efforts to convince the Georgia Legislature to declare Jan. 15 a state holiday in memory of her late husband, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Mrs. King, who was at the Capitol on Monday to attend swearing-in ceremonies for her niece, state Rep. Alveda King Beal, spoke with several legislators about the proposed holiday, which would mark the anniversary of King's birth.

Opponents of the measure have said that creating a new state holiday would be costly because of lost work hours.

A six-day observance of the 50th anniversary of King's birth begins Thursday.

Slimmer Burl Ives Plans Tour

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The new, trim version of actor Burl Ives — all 275 pounds of him — is getting ready for a wide-ranging concert tour of Europe as he approaches the age of 70. Ives, who once weighed 365 pounds, is taking his bag of songs to England in April, touring the Isles for the first time in 25 years. He plans 50 concerts in seven European countries during the spring, beginning with a sentimental return to the Royal Festival Hall.

Ives turns 70 on Flag Day — June 14 — and says he is surprised and "delighted to reach such an advanced age."

Teng Invited

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt has invited Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping to visit the Research Triangle Park during his tour of the United States next month.

In a letter mailed to President Carter Friday, Hunt said Teng might be interested in looking at the high technology industries and major research universities located in the Triangle.

Stephanie Bass, the governor's deputy press secretary, said Hunt has asked business, education and political leaders to lobby the White House on behalf of North Carolina. But a White House spokesman said Monday it was "a little premature" to comment on Hunt's invitation.

Bass said the Chinese also may be interested in visiting the state's tobacco and textile manufacturing plants, computer equipment, soybean production and medical facilities.

NCCLU Plans Seek Approval Of Victim Compensation Law

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — In a break from tradition, the North Carolina Civil Liberties Union is planning to seek approval of a victims compensation proposal that would provide up to $25,000 in compensation for victims of criminal acts.

Under the NCCLU plan, one of many of the group's legislative goals revealed Monday at a news conference, the state would pay the victim with revenues generated by a $1 increase in court costs.

The NCCLU has traditionally concerned itself with protecting the rights of criminals and the accused rather than victims.

"We feel the people who are victims, and particularly their families, also have rights to be protected," said the Rev. W.W. Finlator, a Raleigh Baptist minister and legislative chairman for the NCCLU.

The NCCLU will continue its support for the Equal Rights Amendment and abolishing the death penalty when the General Assembly convenes on Wednesday.

George Gardner, a Greensboro lawyer and executive director of the group, said the NCCLU will push for passage of continued state funding of abortions for indigent women and a state privacy act.

Also on the list are a presumptive sentencing act, laws protecting children's rights, a bill of rights for prisoners, the District of Columbia amendment to the U.S. Constitution and decriminalization of victimless crimes.

Among the victimless crimes cited for repeal are prostitution, gambling, adultery and other illegal sexual practices between consenting adults committed in private, and marijuana possession.

"That's to be regarded as a goal," Gardner said. "It's unrealistic to think drug use and prostitution are going to be decriminalized in the near future."

Finlator said the group would oppose any attempt to revive the state's outlaw statute, which allowed judges to issue declarations that permit citizens to kill dangerous fugitives.

The law was ruled unconstitutional, but a proposal for a new outlaw statute was contained in a report issued last month by former crime control Secretary J. Phil Carlton, now an appellate judge.

The NCCLU, a branch of the American Civil Liberties Union, will have a lobbyist in the General Assembly.

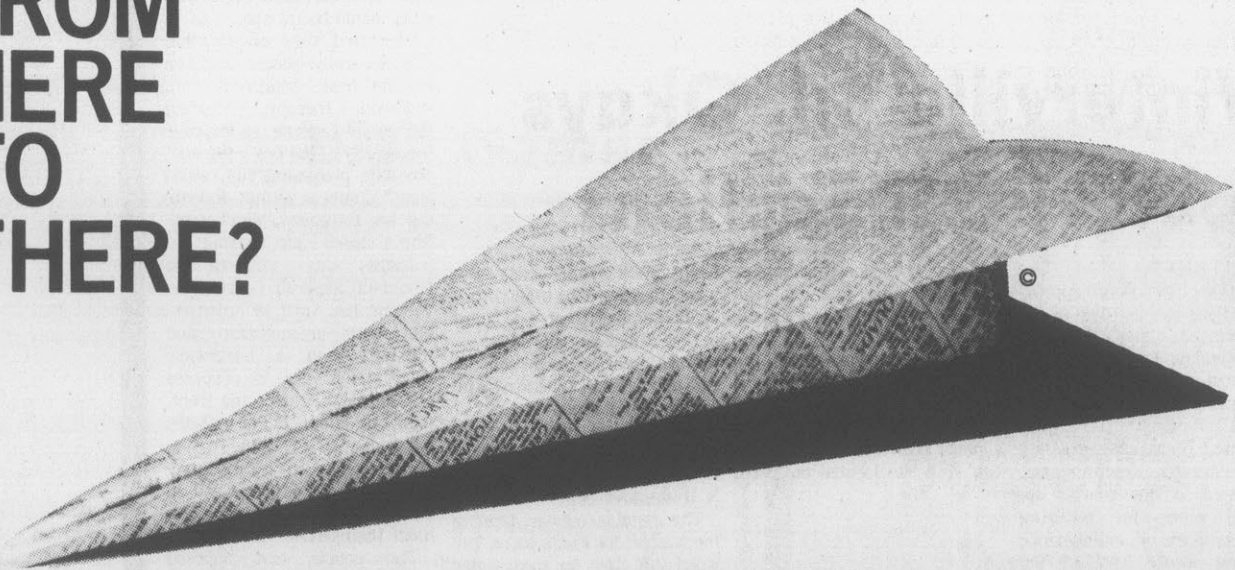

Security Agents To Guard Pope

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Security will be tight when Pope John Paul II visits Mexico later this month.

Mexican officials said Monday that more than 10,000 security agents will be mobilized to protect the pope, who plans to visit four cities and will be seen by about five million Mexicans. Nearly all of Mexico's 64 million people are Roman Catholics.

The main purpose of his trip will be to inaugurate the Third General Conference of Latin American Bishops in Puebla. He also plans to visit Mexico City, Guadalajara and Oaxaca.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, JAN. 10, 1979

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Despite some confusion where uniting several projects are concerned, you find you are able to accomplish much of value today. Let situations work themselves out and go along with conditions as they arise.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Don't try to force associates to do as you wish, but combine efforts and ideas for best results. Use care in motion of any kind.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Listen to what experts have to say before you reach any decisions in important money matters. Study various sources for ideas on how to best repair property.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have personal wishes which are fine, but don't be forceful in trying to gain them. Enjoy casual social events instead of planning any right now. Be more thoughtful of kin.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Personal anxieties should throw you for a loop, but be calmly gotten rid of. Try to meet expectations of kin and have more accord. Learn to relax more.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Accept invitations from friends, but only after work is done. Don't force some wish but let it work out naturally later. Avoid one who does not understand you at all and could make you angry.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You still do not know what to do about an outside matter, so sleep on it and tomorrow you handle it wisely. Try a new tack where career problems are concerned and get better results.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Join forces with others in gaining the new interests that are mutually appealing. Do not try to make any changes that are difficult and annoying. Relax and rest more.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have many responsibilities to handle, so be sure to study them well before trying to discharge them. Early confusion clears up later.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Make sure you consider every angle of dealings with associates and confer with them intelligently. A worldly affair has you confused, but later it clears itself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Stick to proven methods for handling duties instead of trying anything new. Be more cooperative with co-workers. Do not overdo in the evening in social matters, entertaining.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Gain the assistance of those with whom you often get together socially. Find a better way of pleasing loved ones. Improve health and appearance in some way.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Take more interest in what your family is doing and try to make them happier in some way. Keep busy and you are happy.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have much ability in understanding problems of the mind and behaviorism, and should have the education slanted along such lines as psychiatry, psychology, government, etc. Your progeny can be a boon to society because of the logical reasoning and brilliance here.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

The bidding:
North East South West
1 ♠ 1 ♣ 6 ♦ Pass
Pass Pass
Opening lead: Two of ♣.

Every card tells a story. Declarer read the opening lead correctly and came up with a brilliant play to bring home his diamond slam.

The bidding was direct and to the point. After East's overall, South decided that he wanted to be in slam, so he just bid what he expected to make.

West led the deuce of spades, and declarer correctly read it as a singleton. If the diamonds divided 2-2, the hand would be a piano—a declarer would draw trumps, then enter dummy by over-taking the trump two to take discards on the hearts. To test this, declarer won the ace of spades and cashed the ace and king of diamonds.

Unfortunately, West turned up with three trumps. Declarer could not afford to concede a spade, for a third spade from East would allow West to ruff higher than dummy. At first glance it seemed that declarer's only chance was to find West with the king of clubs, and so force an entry to dummy in clubs while keeping East off the lead. But the fact that East had made a vulnerable overcall made it likely that he held the monarch.

After some thought declarer found a sure-trick line. He continued with his low trump, allowing West to score a trump trick with the eight!

West did not relish the prospect of being on lead. He was down to nothing but hearts and clubs, and no matter which suit he led, he would have to put declarer in dummy. There was obviously no point to a heart return, so West tried a club in the forlorn hope that East held the ace. Declarer played the jack from dummy, East covered with the king and declarer won the ace. A club to the queen put him in dummy, and the good hearts provided a welcome remaining spot for the three remaining spades and one club.

Lee Marvin And Former Lover In Court Over Compensation Claim

By LINDA DEUTSCH

Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) —

Eight years after they called it quits, Oscar-winning actor Lee Marvin and his former lover, Michelle Triola Marvin, meet in court today for a landmark trial involving love, money and the changing morality of American couples.

Jury selection was to begin today in the suit filed by Miss Marvin, who legally changed her name while she lived with Marvin. She is suing for the same compensation a wife would get in a divorce — half the property accumulated during their six years together — or $1 million.

They were never married and Marvin is contesting the right to use his name.

Marvin and his attorneys were expected to argue that the mere fact that Marvin never married Miss Marvin shows he wanted to avoid the responsibilities and obligations of marriage.

Marvin has filed a counter-suit asking $1 million from Miss Marvin for compensation for the companionship and other

Teamster Union Dissidents Fight An Uphill Battle

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — At a Teamsters union banquet, a man walks up to attorney Ann Curry Thompson, douses her with motor oil, hits her on the head with an empty bottle and strolls away. Her clients include a group of insurgents called Teamsters for a Democratic Union.

When Jean Clark runs for union office in Detroit, the incumbent asks her to pull out. She refuses. The next day, her employer tells her there is no more overtime for her. Then, a Teamster business agent tells her she must resign as union steward. Again she refuses. She is running on the TDU slate.

Teamster officials deny the union had anything to do with those incidents, but TDU organizer Ken Paff claims they reflect the growing concern of entrenched Teamster officials about his small group, which is pledged to turn the hierarchy out.

"Our job is to get the silent majority," says Paff. "We want to give the union back to the members."

The dissidents say their power is growing. They claim only 3,500 active members among the more than 2 million Teamsters.

But last year, dissidents in Flint, Mich., including several TDU candidates, swept incumbents out of office at 4,000-member Local 332. In all of Michigan, where there are 100,000 Teamsters, the TDU claims only 600 members — 500 of them in Detroit, its biggest chapter.

Last year, in Oklahoma City, four of seven TDU candidates won; in Green Bay, Wis., all four TDU candidates won; and in Vancouver, British Columbia, three of five insurgents won and then promptly joined the TDU.

Last month, in Pittsburgh, a TDU candidate was elected to the executive board of the 6,500-member Local 249 Of the Teamsters. But a TDU candidate for the presidency of that local lost.

Teamsters for a Democratic Union had its origins in a meeting in 1975 of about 40 Teamsters and independent truckers. Distrustful of the union hierarchy in coming negotiations, they formed Teamsters for a Decent Contract. In March 1976, Detroit members stayed on strike briefly after Teamsters President Frank Fitzsimmons told them to return to work. Then, in September 1976, after the next Teamsters convention in Las Vegas, the dissidents staged their own convention at Kent, Ohio, and formed the TDU in September 1976.

Paff, 32, is TDU's only full-time organizer today. He says goals for the next six months are to double membership, win local union elections, and influence the course of contract talks.

Paff teams with Pete Camarata, a 285-pound loading dock worker who gained TDU its first publicity in 1976 by being the only one of 2,750 delegates to oppose Fitzsimmons' re-election at Las Vegas. On the last day of that convention, he was beaten in front of the Aladdin Hotel and Casino as Fitzsimmons climbed into a car a few feet away.

Now, Camarata says he'll run against Fitzsimmons in 1981. "If there was an open election, Frank Fitzsimmons wouldn't stand a chance," said Paff in the TDU's Detroit office. "I think you could stand out there all day, ask the drivers and couldn't find one who would vote for Fitzsimmons — and this is his town."

TDU leaders insist they want to reform the union, and Paff says the TDU wants "to rewrite the international constitution" — to prohibit holding multiple union jobs, to ban patronage, to prohibit membership for convicted felons, and to elect the president by vote of the entire membership, not just convention delegates.

"Last time we were one vote. By 1981, we want to be a force, not the biggest force, just a force," says Paff. And he adds that by the 1986 convention, the TDU may be able to throw the old guard out.

Camarata is a co-chairman of TDU's steering committee, and a steward in Local 299 here — the home unit not only of Fitzsimmons but of missing ex-Teamsters boss James R. Hoffa.

With 500 members, it is TDU's largest chapter, and Hoffa's rank-and-file popularity is a point not lost on the TDU. Its members frequently tout their cause with favorable references to him.

Hoffa, when he went to prison in 1967, entrusted union leadership to Fitzsimmons and later resigned as president, letting Fitzsimmons be elected on his own. But when Hoffa went free, he accused Fitzsimmons of having conspired with the Nixon White House to write a restriction into his parole barring him from union activity until 1980 — an allegation Fitzsimmons denied. After Hoffa vanished in 1975, federal investigators said they believed he was slain by organized crime figures who wanted the Teamsters power structure undisturbed.

Now Camarata fights in Fitzsimmons' home base. He lost a bid for the local vice presidency in 1977. Last year, 63 percent of those voting — just short of the needed two-thirds — favored a TDU-inspired call for elected, rather than appointed, business agents. Camarata says another such drive will be mounted this year.

One result, TDU members say, is that Fitzsimmons has become uncertain of how he would be received in his home local. "There's a lot of Old Hoffa supporters here," says Camarata. "And Fitzie doesn't like being seen with me. He's a finicky old guy."

Meanwhile, the hierarchy accuses the dissidents of being radicals. Paff says he is in a group called International Socialists but his political views have no relevance to the drive to reform the union.

Fitzsimmons' other swipes at dissidents include this statement on Oct. 5, 1978: "These liars and cheap shot artists ... call the best pension plans in America a sellout ... They call the most democratic institution that God ever put on this earth a tyranny ... They call me a tool of organized crime ... I call them a pack of lying jackals ... It is obvious that their sole mission is to try to tear the Teamsters union apart."

IN NEW QUARTERS — Ken Paff, the only full-time organizer of the Teamsters for a Democratic Union, is shown in his new Detroit office. The TDU is a group of insurgents pledged to turn out the hierarchy of the huge union. (AP Laserphoto)

NCAE Concerned Over Dropouts After Test

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Association of Educators is urging its 50,000 members to intensify their efforts to keep in school those students who fail the state's first competency test.

"Even though the failure rate is apparently much lower than some had expected, educators must redouble their efforts to assure that no child is abandoned," Lloyd S. Isaacs, NCAE executive secretary, said.

Isaacs said NCAE is concerned that many students who fail the first competency test will lose heart and drop out of school.

According to Isaacs, the Association is requesting its members, particularly high school guidance counselors, to concentrate their efforts to help children who failed the first test.

Isaacs noted that the Association's Board of Directors, which is largely composed of teachers, has expressed grave concern that the drop-out rate will accelerate substantially after the first testing period.

"It's a fact of life that we have too many borderline students, and failure on this first test could be the final blow for many of them," Isaacs, who has endorsed use of the test, said.

The NCAE executive secretary pointed out that failures on the first test are directly traceable to North Carolina's traditionally low expenditures for public education.

Isaacs said that when 11th graders of today entered first grade, North Carolina was spending $464 per pupil on their education and ranked 45th in the nation. He noted that the state currently spends $1,343 per pupil and ranks 44th in the nation.

"Our public school educators have done a tremendous job with limited resources, and the test results will show that," said Isaacs.

The executive secretary noted that the per pupil expenditure figure is the most accurate measure of a state's efforts on behalf of its schools, since it include all books, supplies and staffing.

Studying Drug To Induce Sleep

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A team of Duke University researchers is hoping its studies will introduce to the United States a drug for treating insomnia, a "very, very common complaint" that has Americans shelling out $20 million annually for medicine to induce sleep.

Dr. W.C. Erwin, an associate professor in the Duke University Medical Center's Psychiatry Department, is studying a drug with the generic name flunitrazepam along with his fellow investigators. The drug has been on the market in Europe for more than two years, but it has not been approved for general use in the United States.

Erwin thinks the drug "is better at inducing sleep and has fewer side effects" than commonly prescribed sleeping aids.

"There is a great deal about sleep we don't understand," Erwin said. "Insomnia is a very, very common complaint. We are confronted with the fact that millions of people report they suffer from this" and seek medication from their doctors.

Erwin said non-prescription sleeping pills are virtually worthless, "except for the placebo effect."

In the study, the Duke University team is comparing the side effects of flunitrazepam with phenobarbital, a commonly prescribed sleeping medication. Erwin and his team are testing the drug for Hoffman-LaRoche Pharmaceutical Corp. under the watchful eye of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

Volunteers in the study must be physically fit with no medical problems other than severe and chronic insomnia. The volunteers participate for 58 nights.

They are divided into three groups — one is given flunitrazepam, another is given phenobarbital and the third is dispensed placebos or sugar pills.

Not knowing which medicine they are given, the volunteers then report on their sleeping activities. They are tested for their reflexes, coordination and memory.

Asking Comments OnPeanut Program

WASHINGTON — The public has been invited to recommend price support levels and other provisions of the 1979 crop peanut program by Feb. 5. Ray Fitzgerald, administrator of the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service said.

Among the items for which recommendations are sought include the national support level for quota and additional peanuts and the sales policy for additional peanuts acquired by the government under the 1979 program and sold for export edible use.

Legislation requires price support of not less than $420 per ton to be made available on 1979-crop peanuts produced within a farm's poundage quota.

It also requires price support on peanuts produced within a farm's acreage allotment, but in excess of the poundage quota, but leaves the support level for those peanuts up to the Secretary.

In determining the price support level for those additional peanuts, the Secretary will be looking at current demand for peanut oil and meal, expected prices of other vegetable oils and protein meals, and the demand for peanuts in foreign markets.

In 1978, price support was available on quota peanuts at $420 per short ton. Additional peanuts were supported at $250 per ton. The 1978 Commodity Credit Corporation minus sales price for edible grades of additional peanuts for export was $400 per short ton.
