Nelson Rockefeller Dead Of Heart Attack

By United Press International

Nelson Rockefeller had almost everything he wanted in the world, except one thing — the presidency.

The man Americans came to know as "Rocky" was once asked during his term as vice president when he first thought about being president of the United States.

"Ever since I was a kid," he replied. "After all, when you think of what I had, what else was there to aspire to?"

Yet despite his fabulous personal wealth — estimated at nearly $200 million in 1974 — despite his years of public service, his influence in world affairs, and the prestige of the family name, Rockefeller was repeatedly shunned as a presidential candidate by the Republicans.

"I never wanted to be vice president of anything," he once said.

In 1974, Rockefeller settled for just that, returning to Washington in the aftermath of the Watergate scandal to serve as President Gerald R. Ford's vice president after Ford was elevated to the White House by Richard Nixon's resignation.

In 1976, he turned down Ford's request to campaign as a team against the conservative Ronald Reagan.

It was the end of the political road for the man whose famous grin and accompanying "hi-ya, fella," had flashed from street corners and TV screens through a tumultous era of Goldwater politics, the Vietnam War and Watergate.

When he left office in 1977, Rockefeller retired to administering his vast art collection, on which he was working late Friday night when he died of a heart attack. He was found slumped over his desk in his office near Manhattan's Rockefeller Center, his latest book in front of him, the second of two volumes on modern art.

Rockefeller's 50 years of public life included four terms as governor of New York state, an array of appointive posts in government during World War II and after, and management of the family's many business enterprises.

His enthusiasm at times seemed irrepressible.

"I never look backward," he said in an interview in 1975. "I never waste time on disappointments ... I've told the boys I plan to live to 100, you know."

Nelson Aldrich Rockefeller was born on July 8, 1908, in Bar Harbor, Maine, the third of six children of John D. Rockefeller Jr. His grandfather, John D. Rockefeller, was the country's first billionaire and the founder of the Standard Oil Co.

In 1930, Rockefeller graduated from Dartmouth College, received a $2,500 bonus from his father for not smoking or drinking, married Mary Todhunter Clark, the daughter of a socially prominent Philadelphia family, and immediately began supervising the family businesses.

Recalling his youth, Rockefeller said his Baptist religion played a major role in his family. "We had family prayers every morning before breakfast and on Sunday attended Sunday school and church," he said.

"We were raised strictly, as was my father and his father before him. The surroundings were obviously different, but the principles and the discipline were the same."

During World War II, Rockefeller served under President Franklin Delano Roosevelt as coordinator of inter-American affairs, and also as assistant secretary of state. He was undersecretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare in 1953-54, special assistant to the president in 1954-55, and chairman of the president's committee on government organization in 1953-58.

In 1958, in his first try for elective office, he scored a political upset by defeating Democrat Averell Harriman for New York governor by 573,000 votes.

His original and somewhat stiff "Call Me Nelson" approach soon gave way to the familiar "Hi-ya fella!" wink-and-grin "Rocky" that proved a delight to political cartoonists and headline writers. He was elected governer four times.

Two years later, he made a belated try for the Republican presidential nomination but was defeated by Richard Nixon, who became a bitter personal political enemy and long-time foe of Rockefeller's liberal tradition.

In 1964, he lost the GOP nomination to Sen. Barry M. Goldwater of Arizona in a bitter fight at the convention in San Francisco where he faced down a howling mob of Goldwater delegates just before Goldwater made his famous "extremism in defense of liberty is no vice" speech.

Rockefeller weathered tragedy and family troubles. In 1961, his son, Michael, was swept out to sea while on an exploration in New Guinea. His body was never found.

Rockefeller and his first wife separated on Nov. 17, 1961, after a 31-year marriage. They were divorced March 17, 1962.

In 1963 he shocked the political world by marrying Margaretta Fitler Murphy, a Bryn Mawr graduate and debutante whose family had made a fortune in the rope business.

Some politicians believe that his divorce and remarriage to Happy cost him the the 1964 presidential election.

In 1968 he lost to Nixon a second time, and in 1972 found himself in the uncomfortable position of nominating Nixon for re-election.

Rockefeller's years as New York governor are best remembered for his stand during the Attica prison rebellion in 1971, during which 43 people died. His refusal to go to the prison in western New York and negotiate with the inmates stirred liberals to charge the governor with a lack of compassion.

As one of the nation's richest men, Nelson A. Rockefeller fully understood the power of money and while he was governor of New York, state spending soared.

Billions of taxpayer dollars went into building an impressive State University system, one of the best highway networks in the nation, a $1.7 billion state office complex in Albany (recently dedicated as the Nelson A. Rockefeller Empire State Plaza), a modern drug treatment program to attempt to deal with narcotics abuse, and welfare and mental health programs.

At the stormy confirmation hearings on his vice presidency in 1974, he was sharply questioned about his holdings, including his $2.5 million in loans and gifts to associates — many of them state officials — and his brother Laurance's financing of a derogatory book about former Supreme Court Justice Arthur Goldberg, whom Rockefeller opposed for the New York governorship in 1970.

Rockefeller apologized to Goldberg for the book. But at one point he got upset about "inaccuracies" in press leaks about his finances, which he had disclosed to Congress.

"I don't think anyone in this country has ever been scrutinized in every detail of their life as I have. I'm getting just a little indignant."

An authority on modern and primitive art, Rockefeller served as a trustee of the Museum of Modern Art in New York City. He also was a founder of the Museum of Primitive Art.

An extremely active man, he maintained an athletic appearing 190-pounds spread over a 5-foot-9-inch frame. He did not smoke and limited his drinking to an occasional glass of wine or beer.

In recent years, Rockefeller continually denied rumors that he intended to return to an active role in politics; instead, he devoted most of his time to his various philanthropic endeavors and to his art collection.

But it was his three runs for the presidency that most intrigued biographers, reporters and the public.

"I have no doubt I could have been president," Rockefeller said in an interview at his family estate in Maine in 1976. "I could have said things — I could have changed parties — if I had been a Democrat it would have happened.

"You know, the problem was I became involved. I cared what was going on. When I was elected governor, I began to care — abortion, welfare, all those things I took a stand on.

"If I didn't care, I would have been president."

Funeral Plans

A private interment service has been scheduled for family members only at 11 a.m. Monday in the Rockefeller family cemetery at their Pocantico Hills, N.Y., estate in suburban Westchester County, after cremation.

The Rev. Marshall L. Smith, pastor of the Union Church in Pocantico Hills, will officiate.

A memorial tribute for family, associates, close personal friends and national and international public officials has been set for Friday, Feb. 2, at 11 a.m. at Riverside Church in Manhattan, with the Rev. Dr. William Sloane Coffin presiding.

Iran's Airports Remain Sealed

By RAYMOND WILKINSON

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Prime Minister Shaphour Bakhtiar sealed Iran's airports Saturday to block the triumphal return of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini but said he would fly to Paris within 48 hours for talks with the exiled religious leader whose return could threaten civil war.

Bakhtiar's message was broadcast on Iranian State Radio and Television after its text was approved by Khomeini, the announcement said.

The government closed Iranian airports including Tehran International "until further notice" to block Khomeini's return despite massive street demonstrations in Iranian cities by millions of the ayatollah's supporters demanding his immediate return from 15 years of exile. Eleven persons were shot to death during the day.

Khomeini has denounced the Bakhtiar government as illegal because it was installed by Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi before the shah left the country last week for an indefinite "vacation." He has the backing of millions of Moslems and says that is enough to form an Islamic state.

Western diplomats have warned that Khomeini's return could touch off a civil war involving his followers and the army which so far has backed Bakhtiar. On Friday the army opened fire on pro-Khomeini demonstrators in the streets of Tehran, killing 28 in what anti-Bakhtiar people called the "Friday Massacre."

Less than two hours after he told the nation he would go to Paris if his talks with Khomeini reached a decisive stage, Bakhtiar announced his plans to visit Iran's main opposition leader in exile "for an exchange of views on the current situation in the country."

Bakhtiar insisted earlier Saturday in a broadcast interview that Khomeini delay his arrival and hinted at an assassination threat to the exiled Shiite Moslem leader, whose title means "beloved of Allah" and is roughly equivalent to the title of cardinal in the Roman Catholic Church.

Airline officials said the airline companies had received official notice advising them the Tehran International and other international airports in the country would remain closed until further notice.

Teng Due Today

By RICHARD S. EHRLICH

HONG KONG (UPI) — Teng Hsiao-Ping, 75, the shrewd Chinese vice premier who survived political disgrace during the Cultural Revolution, left Peking today for Washington and an historic East meets West voyage.

The visit is largely ceremonial and is the first by a high Chinese official to the United States since the Communist armies drove Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek to Taiwan in 1949.

The takeoff of Teng's plane, scheduled for 8 a.m. (7 p.m. EST Saturday), was reported by the New China News Agency. His Boeing 707, one of 10 the Chinese Communist government bought from the United States some time ago, is scheduled to refuel in Alaska and arrive at Andrews AFB in Washington at 2 p.m. EST today.

The agency said Teng and his entourage were seen off at the national capital airport by a host of officials.

During a tour of the United States he will travel aboard a 707 of the U.S. presidential fleet.

The visit is to last nine days and is one of the most talked about and controversial visits by a foreign leader since Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev visited the United States in 1959.

He will face an immense task when he lands in Washington today for three days of official talks with President Carter followed by a tour of various U.S. industrial installations.

Tributes

Tributes to Rockefeller poured in from around the world. In New York, Democratic Gov. Hugh Carey ordered flags at state office buildings lowered to half-staff.

Carey also informed the family he planned a major state tribute and memorial service in Albany, N.Y., at a later date.

From Camp David, President Carter said, "Nelson Rockefeller was born to privilege and accepted his privilege as an obligation to serve his state and nation."

In Amman, Jordan, former President Gerald Ford said, "I have lost one of my closest friends."

Rountree Appointed

Representative H. Horton Rountree of Pitt County was one of four representatives appointed to the State Advisory Budget Commission Friday by House Speaker Carl J. Stewart, Jr.

Representative Rountree, a veteran of 14 years in the House, serves as Speaker Pro Tem and majority leader. A graduate of the UNC Law School, he is a practicing attorney in Greenville. He was reappointed to a two-year term on the commission.

The other three representatives on the commission are Ben Tison of Mecklenburg, John R. Gamble, Jr., of Lincoln and Edward S. Holmes of Chatham.

Dr. White Resigns Post, Plans To Teach

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Dr. James White, director of the Office of Sponsored Programs at East Carolina University since 1965, has resigned the post to return to the classroom full-time.

"I feel this would be an opportune time for me to return to the classroom," White said, explaining, "under the reorganization plan, at this time the role and scope of the Office of Sponsored Programs is uncertain.

"Chancellor Brewer has expressed publically his interest in and support of scholarly research at the University," White continued. By stepping down from the OSP post at the end of the second summer session and returning to the classroom full-time in the fall, it would, "make it possible for him (Brewer) to select his own director of the Office of Special Programs."

Commenting on White's resignation, Brewer said Friday, "he wanted to go back to teaching. This is a normal thing. We always have people who want to go back to teaching."

A Scotland Neck native, White attended Mars Hill Junior College after graduating from high school in 1939, and received his Bachelor of Arts degree from East Carolina University in 1943.

He returned to his alma mater as an instructor in 1948 after receiving his MA degree from Columbia University in 1947 and his doctorate there in 1952, and teaching at Sewanhaka High School in Floral Park, N.Y. and Georgia Southern College in Statesboro.

Dr. James White

He was promoted to Professor of Business at East Carolina in 1960, and was named director of the Office of Sponsored Programs in September 1965 when the office was first established. Since then, White has devoted part of his time to teaching and part to the OSP.

Even though a full-time assistant director was hired in June 1974, White, seven months ago, in a proposal to improve grant and contract activities at the university, suggested that the position of director of the OSP be made a full-time one.

Before the OSP was organized, there was no central office at the university to help professors in the development and submission of proposals to outside agencies for research, training, and demonstration funds to support their academic interests.

The prime mission of the OSP when established — an academic one — was to collect and disseminate information about opportunities for grants and contracts in support of academic programs, to assist

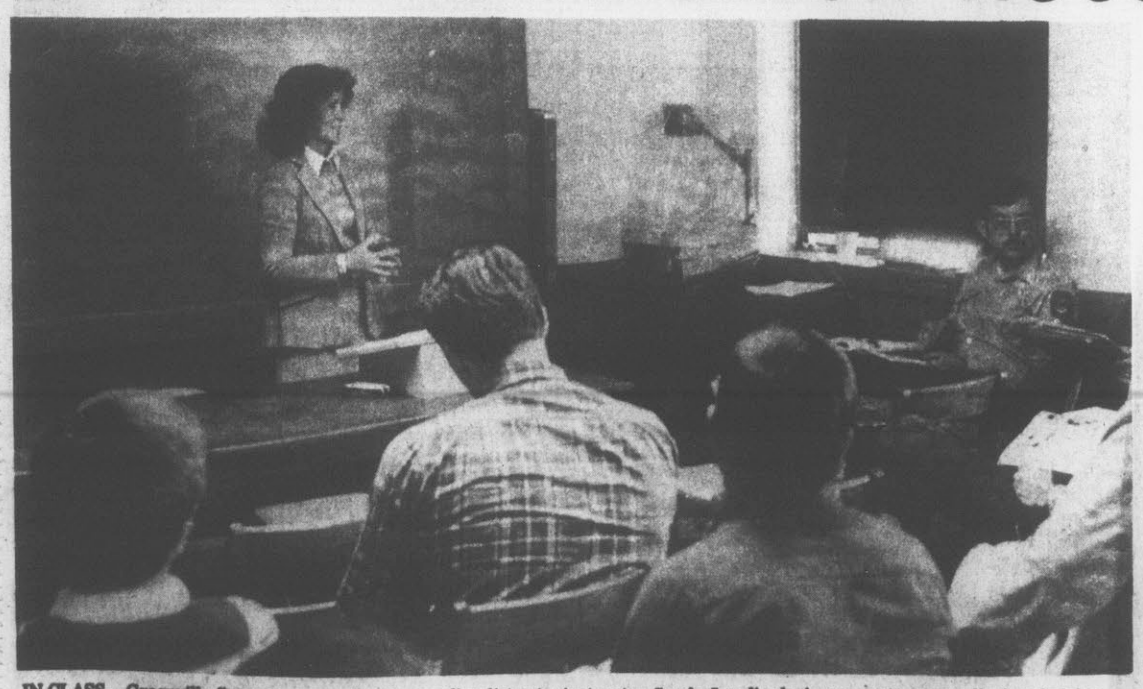
Greenville Firemen Receive Fire-Medic Training



IN CLASS ...Greenville firemen, apprentice fire-medics, listen to instructor Sandy Landis during emergency medical technician class at the central fire station

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Twenty-eight Greenville firemen have embarked on a new national fire-medic apprenticeship program, according to Chief Jenness Allen.

Developed by the International Association of Fire Chiefs and the International Association of Fire Fighters AFL-CIO, and recognized by the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training, the fire-medic apprenticeship requires 7,000 hours of training over a 3½ year period for completion, Allen explained.

Included in the 7,000 hours of training are a minimum of 144 hours of classroom instruction each year. The remainder of the time involves on-the-job work experience, supervised study assignments, and field and clinical internships that add to the apprentice's skill and knowledge of fire protection and pre-hospital emergency care and transportation.

Persons who successfully complete the program, according to Allen, will be designated, "journeyman fire-medic."

Capt. Don Mills, training officer for the Fire Department and supervisor of the local program, said fire-medic apprentices began a 130-hour Emergency Medical Technician course earlier this month as part of the class requirements.

He noted that the EMT class, scheduled to run for the next several months, will include a 20-hour clinical internship (in-hospital training), and 40 to 60 hours field internship — serving as an extra person and in a student capacity, on an emergency medical response vehicle.

Mills pointed out that apprentices can get credit for prior training, and since the program is recognized by the U.S. and North Carolina Departments of Labor, apprentices may qualify for Veterans' Administration benefits in addition to their regular salary.

He added that the designation, "journeyman fire-medic," is a "skill level job recognized by the N.C. Department of Labor and the U.S. Department of Labor," as well as the IAFF and the IAFC.

Mills noted that about two-thirds of the class sessions are held on an apprentice's off-duty time.

Mrs. Sandy Landis of Kinston, a registered nurse, according to Mills, is the instructor for the EMT segment of the course.

Assisting with the apprenticeship training, Mills noted, will be Dr. Walter Pories and Dr. Charles Rob of the East Carolina University medical school faculty, and Al Minor of the State's Office of Emergency Medical Services.

Chief Allen said the department is scheduled to receive a grant from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare of about $2,500 with which to purchase training aids to be used in the apprenticeship program.

In addition to the emergency medical training required under the fire-medic apprenticeship program, a full range of instruction and experience is required in fire combat, fire prevention, fire rescue and apparatus operation areas.

Mills pointed out that when the current BMT program is completed, in about three months, the city will have emergency medical technicians riding on all fire engines.

Hijacking Woman Cites A 'Mysterious Cause'

By ANDREW GELLER

NEW YORK (UPI) — A United Airlines 747 jet with 131 people aboard was hijacked en route from Los Angeles to New York Saturday by a woman claiming to be carrying nitroglycerin and saying she was willing to die for a mysterious "cause."

The hijacker, apparently acting alone, released 26 of the 119 passengers aboard the plane about 10 p.m. EST, 2½ hours after the jetliner landed at Kennedy Airport.

The FBI said the woman, believed to be about 40, had agreed to let 19 adults, four children and three infants off the plane. They were taken to an undisclosed location to be questioned by the FBI.

Several of the passengers released after questioning said they were not aware the plane had been hijacked.

Les Klinger of Beverly Hills, Calif., who was released with his wife said, "We never heard the word 'hijacking' aboard the plane. The FBI questioned us as to whether we had seen or heard anything, and we said no."

Klinger said that after the plane landed the crew did not explain the delay, which he called "very boring."

There was no indication that any of the 119 passengers or 12 crew members who had been aboard the plane was injured, officials said.

FBI spokesman Quentin Ertel said the FBI had put a telephone aboard the plane and the woman was using it to speak to authorities at the airport.

He said some demands had been made but he would not reveal their nature.

United spokesman Charles Novack said officials were trying to install a telephone hookup. In the meantime, the hijacker was communicating with officials through the pilot by means of notes.

The hijacker told a flight attendant that actors "Jack Lemmon, Charlton Heston or Wonder Woman (Lynda Carter) should find a note in a telephone booth at the Trans World Airlines' terminal at Los Angeles International Airport," the airlines said.

In Los Angeles, United spokesman Irving Cuevas said Heston had been brought to the airport at the hijacker's request so he could receive a telephone call from "someone" to discuss the hijacker's demands.

An FBI spokesman said the actor may be "paraded" through the airport to show any accomplices of the hijacker there that he could now be reached.

The spokesman said the part would tell United Airline where a message from th hijacker had been left and giv directions on how it should b delivered to the America public.

The FBI said they wer acting on the suspicion that th hijacker or hijackers wer members of a revolutionar group involved in some kind o "revolution" in their country There was no indication wha country might be involved.

A United spokeswoman saic the hijacker also demandec that a television network give her a half hour of time to reac her note over the air.

The woman said she was "willing to die for the cause, but she did not say what the cause was," the United spokeswoman said.

The FBI, Federal Aviation Administration and airport police set up a command post at the airport, which they planned to keep open to other traffic.

At the United terminal, more than 25 relatives and friends of passengers aboard the plane waited anxiously. As officials tried to brief reporters, an unidentified man shouted, "Talk! Talk! I've got two children aboard that plane!"

The plane was 10 miles west of Prescott, Ariz., when the pilot notified the FAA that it was being hijacked.

Students Being Moved Out Of ECU's Jarvis Hall

Approximately 135 female students at East Carolina University are being moved out of Jarvis Hall as the result of a large portion of the ceiling in the east wing collapsing on Jan. 9.

The incident occurred about 6 p.m. on that date, only two days after the students had returned from Christmas vacation.

One student, freshman Tracey Harlan, was an eyewitness account of the collapse. She had just walked out of her room into the hallway. "The lights went off, and there was a big crash," Harlan said. "Everyone looked out of their doors into the hallway. Then they came out, and we just looked at it."

Eunice Cooper, who lives next door to Harlan, was in her own room when the crash occurred. "The lights flickered. I heard something that sounded like a plane had crashed at the end of the hall," Cooper said. "It was dark, real dusty, and it looked like smoke. A lot of loose wires were also in the hallway."

Cooper said she and other girls called campus security and contacted Dean Fulghum. The dean, campus police, inspectors and maintenance men arrived shortly.

According to Cooper, inspectors and maintenance men pulled down the remaining portion of the ceiling that was left sagging, then boarded up that area of the building.

"Eleven girls were evacuated, but everyone thought it was a temporary move," Cooper added. Those evacuated were Harlan and ten other girls living in that section of the building. They were relocated to other rooms in the dormitory.

At 4 p.m. Friday, Jan. 12, the 11 were allowed to move back into their rooms.

However, last Thursday, Jan. 25, at 7 p.m., a meeting was held for all residents of Jarvis Hall. At that time, students living in Jarvis were told they would have to move out for precautionary measures.

"This was done by a request from the State Dept. of Insurance for precautionary measures while repairs are being done on the building," Fulghum explained. "Right now, we are busy having to move approximately 137 students. It appears," she added, "that the majority will move to other residence halls on campus."

Fulghum said the university is accepting responsibility for relocating the students to other locations on campus and that a plan for re-installing telephones for students is being worked out with the phone company.

"The university will also give those students effected a prorated refund on their room rent if they have to move off campus," she explained.

The move out began on Friday, Jan. 26, and Fulghum said she expected all would be moved out by Jan. 31. However, they will have until noon Feb. 3 to complete their moves.

Several of the students involved were interviewed to get their responses to the move.

"I think the whole situation is downright disgusting," Vanessa Evans said. "I think it's bad for the girls because it affects our academics, our social and emotional life."

Janet Williams, secretary-treasurer of Jarvis Hall, said she believed it was totally unfair for the students to have to move. However, she added she believed it was something the university had to do. "Dean Fulghum has been great," Williams said. "There will be a lot of girls back here when it reopens."

Kathy Adams, a junior who has lived in Jarvis for three years, also feels it's unfair they have to move. "But it's something we can't change or help," she said. "We're victims of circumstances. Girls in single rooms do not want roommates, and we want to keep our own rooms. It's just a bad situation."

One student, Angela Harris, noted "ECU should feel fortunate that it wasn't a ten-story high rise" that this happened to.

Dean Fulghum said that Jarvis Hall would not be reopened until next year, after repairs have been made.

"Even though many students are heartbroken about moving," Fulghum said, "they have cooperated with us as much as we could possibly have asked for."

N.C. News Briefs

Hunt Favors Merit Selection

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt still favors merit selection for judges, but there are indiciations that judicial support for the concept is eroding.

The state's Crime Control Commission, an advisory board to the governor, has come out against merit selection, and there are indications that opinion on the bench is leaning away from the idea.

Under merit selection, a nominating commission would recommend candidates for judgeships. The governor would select an appointee from the list. Periodically, voters would decide whether the judge should be kept in office.

Hunt's press secretary, Gary Pearce, said the governor still plans to include his proposal for merit selection in the crime control message he will deliver to the General Assembly Monday night.

Wants Sansom Back On Board

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt plans to ask the General Assembly to approve a bill designed to allow banker J.J. Sansom Jr. of Raleigh to regain his seat on the Board of Governors of the University of North Carolina.

The bill would allow members of the board of governors to hold seats on other state boards and commissions.

Sansom was forced to leave the board in December, 1977 after the state attorney general's office ruled he was violating state law by holding a position on the state Banking Commission at the same time.

Rules No Discrimination

RUTHERFORDTON, N.C. (AP) — A federal jury has ruled that four women members of the Cleveland County Sheriff's Department who were discharged were not discriminated against on account of sex.

The U.S. District Court jury also ruled this week against a fifth plaintiff who is still employed by the department but had charged racial and sexual discrimination. Dorothy Elliott contended she was passed over for promotion even though she was better qualified than the person chosen.

The jury held there was no discrimination in the discharge of or failure to rehire Marilyn Hoyle, Barbara Long, Kathy Lanier and Cornelia Glover. The women were fired in November, 1977 after allegedly removing from a desk a log their supervisor was keeping on them.

Farewell To Old-Timer

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The 82nd Airborne didn't quite live up to its tough reputation Friday as a dozen general officers, some with tears in their eyes, gathered with 250 other well-wishers to bid goodbye to the division's top non-commissioned officer.

Command Sgt. Maj. John Pearce had become something of an institution with the 82nd and long-time veterans, a few still in uniform but most retired, who joined him at his retirement ceremony.

Pearce, who spent 35 years in military service, signified a vanishing breed of ramrod sergeants. He was one of those veterans who learned to survive combat in World War II and has been teaching the precious lessons to others ever since.

Hill Will Appeal Sentence

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — Gerald Hill, former director of the Lumberton Housing Authority, has filed notice he will appeal his sentence of nine to 15 years in prison on charges stemming from the illegal use of public funds.

Hill, now director of the Beaufort, S.C. Housing Authority, was found guilty last Saturday on three counts of corporate malfeasance and three counts of aiding and abetting false pretense.

He was convicted of paying more than $2,100 in phony freight bills that tile contractor W. Sammy Britt submitted to the Housing Authority.

Seventy Died

DACCA, Bangladesh (AP) — Bangladesh's worst train wreck killed 70 persons and injured 175, some seriously, officials said today.

They said three cars of the train derailed and crashed into a ditch Friday in western Bangladesh. The cause of the accident was under investigation.

Jones To Hold Hearings On Reduction Of Graders

FARMVILLE — Congressman Walter Jones, who is chairman of the House Tobacco subcommittee, says he will hold hearings on proposed budget cuts which would reduce the number of government tobacco graders.

The reduction would force the industry to return to five day sales weeks, rather than the four day sales weeks, which have been normal for a number of years.

Warehousemen say the change will increase their operating costs, since Friday has been used as a clean-up day.

Jones called the budget reductions a false economy that will work a hardship not only on farmers but the entire tobacco trade.

He said it had been pointed out to him that the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service has some workers paid on a per diem basis who will have to work an extra day if the five day week is imposed.

"We will be taking it out of one pocket and putting it in the other," he said.

Rep. Jones said he would schedule the hearings after Congress organizes and subcommittees are appointed.

Needs Exist On Main Campus

East Carolina University is to receive only a slim portion of the higher education capital improvements budget submitted to the Legislature.

The budget includes $1.1 million for renovation of the old Wahl-Coates school to be added to $1.8 million presently on hand.

There is also $1.4 million, to be added to $3.8 million currently on hand for construction of a bed tower at Pitt Memorial Hospital.

This is out of a proposed $120.5 million biennial capital improvements budget for the University of North Carolina system.

Granted there might be some other funds coming to ECU from lump sum items in the construction budget. Granted also that some of the capital improvements projects on other campuses will be self-liquidating or involve funds other than state revenues. The fact remains that mighty little is being done to provide new or renovated buildings on the main campus of ECU in the proposed budget.

There are a number of buildings on the campus that need major renovation and the institution's space utilitization rate shows the need for additional classroom space.

The state has been generous in providing financial support for the School of Medicine at ECU and we don't know of any state funds which will do more good.

Improvements will have to continue on the main campus, too, however, if we are to have adequate undergraduate and graduate academic programs.

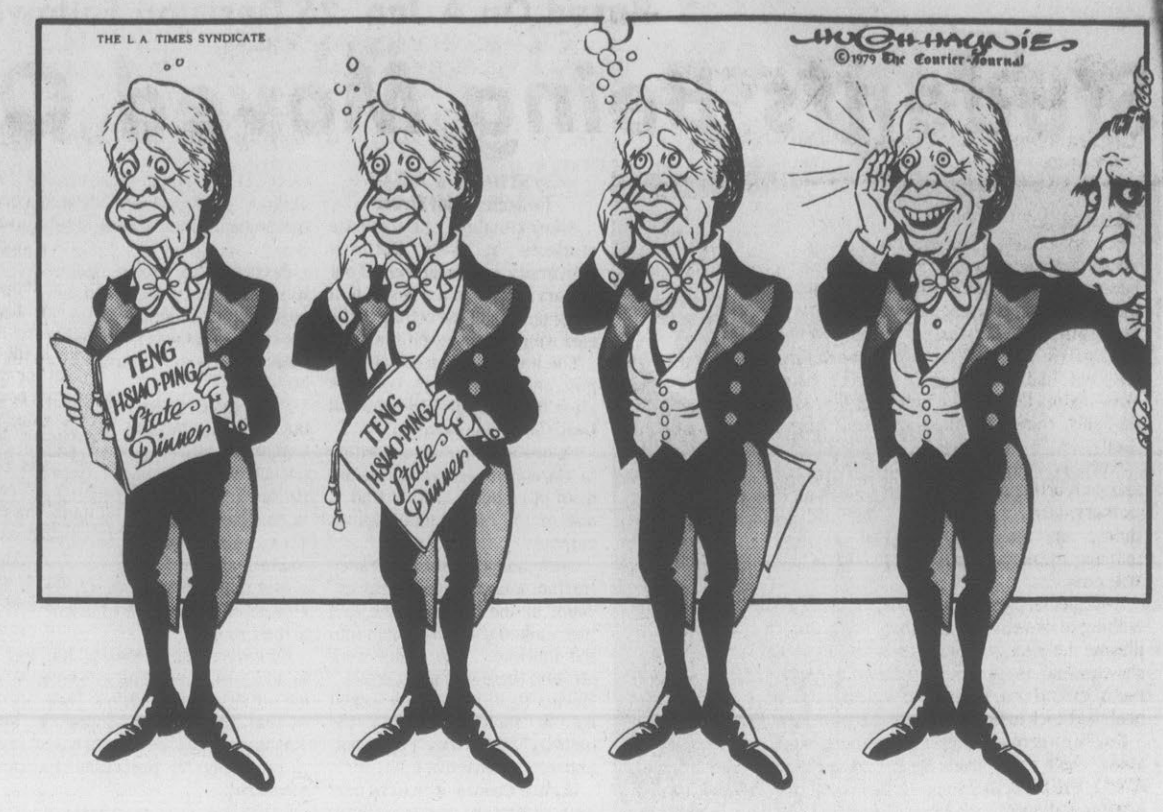
ECU Enrollment Continues To Grow

There is not the crush of college aged young people that once existed, but ECU continues to set enrollment records.

The spring semester saw an enrollment of 11,659, including medical school and evening college students.

Main campus enrollment is 11,464 compared with 11,179 for the same period last year.

The consistant increases are remarkable and very likely due to the broad range of academic programs the university can now offer.



"We've been bitter enemies f'years."

"His is a strange ideology."

"Maybe I was wrong in recognizing him!"

Look For 'Deep Pocket'

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — When lawyers talk about suing, one of the things they take into account is how deep the pocket is on the other fellow.

That quite often determines how much the court will be asked to reward in actual or punitive damages .... the depth of the pocket means how much it can hold.

Gov. Jim Hunt, early in the PCB dumping incident, promised every effort to recover damages for the state. Letting his legal training show, he talked then about the depth of the pocket.

The other day, after those charged with the dumping entered guilty pleas, he was asked if the state intended to pursue trying to get some money, and if so, how much.

"How much depends on how deep the pocket is," he replied. "All we want is all they've got."

No Comment

Will outspoken remarks by high governmental officials on that PCB case spoil chances of court convictions?

Not now that pleas have been gotten and cooperation secured through bargaining, say legal counselors to the governor.

Comments could have caused problems in a criminal trial, and advisors say they "really had to sit on Hunt to keep him from saying too much.

"But not as hard as we had to sit on Rufus (Attorney General Edmisten) who was going around threatening to put the ----- under the jailhouse."

Redneck

When an attorney for the national NAACP labeled Univ. of North Carolina President Bill Friday a "redneck" intent on preserving segregation in this state's colleges, it drew only amused comments from those who know him.

Quite a switch for the man who has been accused of leading Chapel Hill and the state down the paths of liberality over the years. Some officials in Raleigh feel such comments from Washington ought to be encouraged on a regular basis since they help put the fight between North Carolina and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare in a clearer perspective.

BILL NOBLITT

"If Bill Friday's a redneck," commented one lawmaker, "I hate to think what that makes me."

Mutiny?

Some novice observers of the legislative process were pondering the chances of this General Assembly kicking the traces and plunging out of the control of Gov. Jim Hunt.

There is a lot of muttering among the troops that they aren't going to go along with everything this time the way they did the past couple of years, said some.

But that, commented an older hand, is just like breaking a new puppy to a leash and collar. She'll kick and squirm and pull away, roll her eyes, and squeal as though it was killing her .... for a couple of days. Then, she'll come along just fine.

Rebellion?

But even lawmakers must maintain their dignity, and when a novice newly elected to the Senate and named an instant chairman by reason of relationships with Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green began lecturing colleagues on how the committee would be run, his brusqueness was openly challenged.

"You were named chairman .... we were all elected, and you would be well advised to consult with us ... not order us around," he was quickly reminded.

Sunday Morning Notes

Congressman Walter Jones noted in a conversation last week that the cheif surgeon in the operation on famed actor John Wayne recently is a Farmville native.

Dr. Carmac (Mac) Holmes, who was quoted by news services concerning the case, was the son of the late Elbert Holmes of Farmville. His mother now lives in Wendel. Dr. Holmes is now a cancer specialist at the UCLA Medical Center.

He graduated from Farmville High School in 1956, did undergraduate work at UNC-Chapel Hill and graduated from Duke School of Medicine.

Personalized auto license plates abound in North Carolina and each one of them has meaning to the car owner.

There's one in Greenville that reads "Timer". There had to be a story behind it and we contacted the car owner, Ed Wolcott.

The "Timer" plate does indeed have meaning. Ed himself is the "timer".

He times swim meets at East Carolina University and also is the timer for many high school and college track events.

The track meets involve the use of digital timing devices. The swim meets, however, require extensive knowlege to operate the timing computer. It registers the time in each lane when the swimmer touches a plate at the end of the final lap. The timing device is accurate to 100th of a second, and the split second timing is important in determining the winners.

Wolcott acknowleges that the computer requires some skill and training to operate, if the timing is to be done accurately. In case a time isn't recorded coeds provide backup by timing each lane with stop watches.

He is AAU certified in timing track and swimming, has worked skiing, hydroplane and sports car events in his career.

As a sports events timer he cites the 1974 Southern Conference Swimming and Diving Championships as the most successful "because in four straight days of work we didn't make a mistake."

Rural Life Allure

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Hundreds of acres of beautiful pastureland. Colorado's western slope. The Gunnison River Valley. Quiet. Secure. Where the West begins!

That's the kind of vivid prose John Koenig was reading nearly 20 years ago. It urged a return to the land, to self-sufficiency and a healthy environment for children.

Koenig had spent half his life in New Jersey, rising to head Rutgers' School of Ceramics. Retirement and lucrative consulting jobs were on the horizon.

Yet, like millions of Americans, he longed to flee the traffic and noise. In 1969, Koenig mustered his courage and pulled up roots.

He got there through one of the wishbooks put out by two agencies that sell more acres of farm and ranch property than anyone else.

United Farm Agency Inc. of Kansas City, which brought

Other Editors Say Wrong Direction

(Chapel Hill Newspaper)

These two headlines appeared in a recent issue of the Raleigh News and Observer on the same day: "Federal fraud, waste pegged at over $38 billion"; and "School lunch prices sparking a revolt". The first headline carried a Washington dateline, and stated that the federal government was losing as much as 10 percent of this year's federal government funds through fraud, mismanagement, waste and sheer extravagance. The second headline originated in Murfreesboro, N.C., and the story stated that a nickel increase in the cost of some school lunches has sparked a taxpayers' revolt by students and their parents.

The sad paradox about both headlines and stories is that while there is no direct relationship between the two there should be. In the Murfreesboro incident the U.S. Department of Agriculture has increased its reimbursement to the local system by 10 cents for each reduced-price lunch. The savings was passed on to the poorer students, and the school board, noting that it was losing money on full-price meals, decided at the same time to increase the price of that meal from 55 to 60 cents. Those paying the full price decided to revolt. The parents of these children claim that they are paying the tax dollars made available by the Department of Agriculture and at the same time paying more for their own children's lunches. The parents have asked the school board to rescind the price hike and to consider giving free lunches to every student in the school system.

It was tea in Boston that did bring about a tax revolt. Property taxes in California did the same thing. Now in North Carolina a nickel added on to a child's lunch threatens a tax revolt. Emotion always causes reaction where common sense fears to tread.

If the people in Murfreesboro, along with all citizens throughout the land, would become involved in eliminating that $38 billion federal waste and foolishness in Washington, it would more than provide school lunches for every kid in the country. Fighting for the nickel at the local level and continuing to allow the billions in waste at the national level is one of our greatest shortcomings. When are we going to take steps to correct it?

The President's Ball sponsored by the committee for the celebration of Franklin D. Roosevelt's birthday, will be held at the college auditorium Monday at 9 p.m. The purpose of the ball is to raise funds to aid in the fight against infantile paralysis. Fifty percent of the money collected will remain in Pitt County.

The music for the occasion will be furnished by Rudy Walters and his orchestra, featuring as vocalist Miss Juanita Simpson. Miss Simpson has gained widespread popularity thru her appearances on radio network coast-to-coast programs.

Two performances of "Tobacco Road" are scheduled for Greenville next month. The play will be presented at East Carolina Teachers College auditorium. However, the college is not sponsoring the production in anyway.

Mrs. Virginia Nowell of Raleigh, sponsor of Guy Lombardo's appearance here several years ago, was in Greenville yesterday making arrangements for the appearance here of the sexy version of the lives [illegible] of a Southern tenant farmer.

Announcement that the play was scheduled to appear here came on the heels of news that Raleigh Mayor George Isley had cancelled a contract for the play to be shown in the Capitol City with the declaration that it was a "mass of profanity and sex" unfit for "decent folks to see".

THE INSIDE REPORT

The Carter Trump Card

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The difference between labor leader Jerry Wurf haranguing his own union members and facing President Carter just two days later suggests reports of an anti-Carter revolt on labor's left are greatly exaggerated.

Wurf, president of the nation's largest public employees' union (AFSCME), spared no rhetoric Jan. 10 in flogging the same president he had supported early on the road to the White House. At a nationwide meeting of AFSCME officials, Wurf contended the Carter budget "will destroy our jobs" without affecting inflation. He, therefore, promised to express "outrage" at the White House two days later, adding he might "get into a confrontation" with the president.

But the Jan. 12 session between Carter and labor leaders was conciliation, not confrontation. Wurf did criticize the restrictive budget policy but in scarcely the robust language used to his union members, and he omitted his complaint that Carter's budget cuts are ineffective against inflation.

This fits the pattern of Carter's relations with liberal unions, such as Wurf's. Comprising the heart of Carter's labor support, they are distressed by his turn to fiscal conservatism and publicly pressure him to change course. But in the expected absence of a presidential challenge from Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, they have no place to go. That is Carter's labor trump, and the White House knows it.

The dilemma is particularly acute for dynamic and hot-tempered Jerry Wurf. Although he has close ties to the White House, his members as public employees are hit first by tightened public pursestrings. What's more, Wurf faces a possible challenge for the AFSCME presiddency in 1980 from the equally dynamic and hot-tempered Victor Gotbaum, the union's New York leader.

Accordingly, when Wurf read the riot act on Carter to AFSCME officials here Jan. 10, an outsider would have prudently concluded a final break with the president. Asserting that "unions must start facing the truth," Wurf declared: "One of those truths is...what the president is doing to that budget that will destroy our jobs and destroy our ability to get raises and will have no effect upon inflation. The president knows it as well as we do."

Wurf added that the president knows "this terrible infliction of unreasonableness" upon "the have-nots and the public employee" will not impede inflation; "he is playing a public realtions game, a political game, and you are the patsies.

"We can get so enthusiastic about electing a public official...that deep in our gut we're really not disappointed when he screws us after the election is over," he continued. "This means we need an arm's-length relationship with the boss that has sometimes been missing."

Therefore, Wurf promised: "I intend to tell the president on Friday that we think what is happening is an outrage." While declaring "I have no

UNDERSTANDING THE INCOMPREHENSIBLE

Saint Augustine said on one occasion that he thought he understood what time was until he tried to explain it. Then suddenly it became incomprehensible to him.

What St. Augustine said of time can also be said of most of the great principles by which our lives are guided. We all know what honor is, but if we try to explain it, we become baffled and confused. Likewise happiness and true love are easily recognizable, but explaining them becomes much more difficult.

Actually, trying to explain these things spoils them. Just as Augustine felt that he knew what time was but was thrown into confusion when he tried to explain it, so we know the nature of many things very precious to us which we cannot explain.

These are the things in which we should put our faith whether we understand them or not. All understanding does not come through the mind; it comes through the heart and soul as well.

Private Flying Market Soars

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The promoters of private flying, which includes nearly everything in the sky but military activity, commercial airlines and UFOs, say they have hit an updraft

The number of student pilots has grown. Dollar sales last year reached nearly $1.8 billion, a record, and it was not just inflation; unit sales also rose, to 17,807 craft, best ever, 900 more than in 1977.

They say the market atmosphere is brightening, too. Individuals and corporations, they claim, are finding a growing list of reasons why they should own a plane.

The main reason, says Ed Simpson, president of the General Avaition Manufacturers Association, is that the number of airports served by scheduled air carriers is shrinking, a trend that might continue.

At the end October, he told security analysts here this month, only 385 points were served by the regular lines. Of those, 219 were served by just one carrier. And 65 of these points might lose all service.

This, says Simpson, could create not just an inconvenience but a disaster for those businesses that left the big urban centers to settle in the countryside — if it were not for general aviation planes.

Company planes are increasingly used by business to deliver executives and cargoes. Such craft, said Clare Rice, Collins Avionics president, are cost-efficient, "like a milling machine or a computer."

Of the largest 1,000 companies, he said in an interview, 514 now operate a fleet of 1,778 aircraft. And since 1969, he added, there has been a 26.5 percent increase in aircraft ownership by "major" firms.

Smaller businesses too seem to be learning the advantages. Some salesmen, contractors and others with wideflung operations, said Rice, have found they can cover their territories more efficiently.

Then there are the fly-for-fun pilots. Fun, yes, but what about the cost? Simpson, a pilot, as is Rice, has a fixed answer to that question: As a hobby, he claims, it is no costlier than skiing, boating or golfing.

What damage would a recession do? Simpson and Rice are confident. They discount the significance of sharply lower sales that occurred in 1970, 1971 and 1972. The industry is more solidly based now, they say.

When graphed, many of their projections, especially for net billings, have that sweeping inverted arc described by planes taking off into the blue yonder.

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

A person has to be half-crazy, at least, to put himself or herself through the torture of running a marathon. It is the sane half of a marathoner that chooses his torture wisely in finding a well-run race to give him or her the psychological boost of knowing that everything is well taken care of.

Your 1979 Bethel Marathon, just as in 1977 gave my husband and me that good feeling. Having been director of the Washington, D. C. Bonne Bell last May, with 1,400 women participants, I know the time and effort that go into assuring a good race.

We appreciated so many things: the reassuring visibility and comforting presence of the police and rescue squads, the well-organized water stations, the loud recital of accurate times, and those BEAUTIFUL, GLORIOUS BIG BLUE mileage markers. A special thanks to Herb Lee and Clem Williams.

Two special people I would like to bring to public notice had nothing to do with the marathon. My husband, having been ill during the race, desperately needed the warmth of a hot shower, and as soon as he finished the race we drove to our motel in Tarboro. When he'd warmed up and felt better, we hastened back to Bethel for the awards ceremony.

Due to an erroneous gas tank reading, our car ran out of gas about eight miles from Bethel. Remarkably, a car going AWAY FROM Bethel stopped, picked up my husband, turned around and sped back toward Bethel. I thought surely they were runners from the marathon. 20 minutes later when they returned, to my surprise, I met, not runners, but Mr. and Mrs. Robert Haislip of Oak City. They refused our offer to reimburse them, but Mr. Haislip told of his son's car accident: he was pinned under the car and many passersby did not stop to help. Their son's terrible experience had made them more aware of people in car trouble.

This thoughtful act by total strangers will remain in our hearts long after the exhiliration and pain of finishing a marathon is forgotten. I think it typifies the friendliness and genuine sincerity of the people we encountered both times in North Carolina for your race.

To the editor:

I understand that the Greenville Rescue Squad is in jeopardy; yes it is in jeopardy due to interference from the outside by "so called" fire and rescue experts. Unqualified outside interference in the operations of so vital a service should not be tolerated by the taxpayers nor city officials.

The Fire Service originated the concept of rescue services because all fire fighters are trained to "save lives and protect property." Duplication of this service is an obvious waste of the taxpayers' money.

It is also my understanding that the Fire Chief cannot efficiently operate these two emergency services. This new argument is certainly self-contradictory in view of the past State and World competition accomplishments of the local team, coupled with the high esteem with which the fire protection techniques of our Fire Department are held both regionally and nationally. Los Angeles, New York and Chicago employ 8,000 to 10,000 fire and rescue men, each under the supervision and control of a Fire Chief. If they can operate departments of this size under one Fire Chief, then this City should certainly expect to operate a department employing 75 fire and rescue men with a high degree of efficiency; as they now do so well. The Fire Chief, however, can only operate when he is in complete control of his department and free to make decisions and changes as he feels necessary.

I, for one, say let's support the man who has been appointed by our City to operate the Greenville Fire Department and under whose jurisdiction all Fire and Rescue operations may be administered in a professional manner. I intend to support the Fire Chief in this matter and lend only a deaf ear to those few moaning and groaning individuals who are not only ill-informed, but have self-serving interests.

A Few Nice Bureaus That Call For Abolishing

BY JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — All week long, politicians and bureaucrats alike have been prowling through Mr. Carter's proposed budget for the next fiscal year. Some of them are yelling hooray and some are yelling bloody murder, but few of them are thinking in the terms that must be thought if the federal juggernaut is ever to be restrained.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie is the most notable exception. As chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, the craggy gentleman from Maine once again is pursuing the concept of a "sunset" bill. Muskie has been around for 20 years. With a beautiful simplicity of perception, he understands that a federal program or agency, once created, is the nearest thing to perpetual motion ever invented. His purpose is to devise a mechanism that periodically will provide an opportunity to give a few old chickens the axe.

Muskie sponsored a sunset bill in the 95th Congress. It passed the Senate 87-1, but it never came to a vote in the House. This time around, he has 52 other senators cosponsoring the same bill. It seems likely that the bill will be written into law this year, and that Mr. Carter will sign it with genuine pleasure. The sunset approach, which requires that virtually every federal program come up every 10 years for full-scale review, is closely related to the president's advocacy of zero-based budgeting.

Why is it so fearfully difficult to get a handle on federal spending? One reason is that every year's budget is based upon the budget for the year before. In the monumental task of preparing a budget for delivery every January, the budget-makers begin with the assumption that whatever was funded in 1978 is to be funded for 1979. There is no other plausible way to begin. The House and Senate committees, by the same token, proceed from last year's charts and tables to this year's charts and tables, and the threshold question rarely is asked: Should this particular function be continued at all? Instead, the prevailing practice is to haggle over details. In the process, the forest succumbs to the trees.

Muskie has the right idea. The gentleman should have been elected president long ago, and it's a pity he never was. "Sunset attacks the notion," he says, "that government programs, once enacted, should remain forever on the books. Instead, it proposes that a program should continue only if Congress decides that it is needed and is still working well. If a program cannot meet these conditions, it goes out of business."

Let me suggest a few sterling possibilities. It would have been a pious idea if years ago a sunset clause had been written into the act creating the National Endowment for the Arts. A recent article in the Washington Star unfolded a depressing account of cronyism, favoritism and personal politics in the Endowment's program of subsidies for writers, poets, editors and little magazines. The program ought to be wiped out, root and branch. A sunset review would do it.

Try another. Congressman George Hansen of Wyoming is out to abolish the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. In a washboard review of the kind Muskie has in mind, OSHA would be compelled to justify its continued existence, and the task wouldn't be easy. Where is the convincing evidence that OSHA has worked? If such evidence can't be produced, the agency ought to be scrubbed.

One more, Sen. William Proxmire of Wisconsin wants to kill of the Small Business Administration. He doesn't want to reorganize the SBA or trim its budget by 10 percent, or reduce the number of regional offices, or fiddle around with half measures. Off with its head! The prospect merits examination.

So it goes. One wonders about the Consumer Product Safety Commission, about ACTION, about the bedraggled remains of the Peace Corps, about the Comprehensive Employment Training Program, about scores of silly and wasteful grants in the Office of Education, about a hundred costly public relations programs in the Pentagon. Like Old Man River, they just keep rolling along.

Maybe Muskie's sunset scheme won't work in practice. Maybe the pressure groups and the affected bureaucrats would make such convincing cases on review that nothing ever would be abolished. But Muskie's bill would give us a fair chance to cry "halt!" That's more than we have now.

Facing South

Not The Textbook Way To Start A Magazine

COLLEGE PARK, Ga. — Sometimes it takes a while for a concept to become a reality. For Fred Brown it was years between the onset of a nagging idea and the first printing of his own magazine, Brown's Guide to Georgia.

"When I was in college (La Grange College, Georgia) I was editor of the school newspaper and got hooked on publications," says Brown, sitting in his comfortable office in College Park, a suburb of Atlanta and his hometown.

The first issue of Brown's Guide to Georgia appeared in December 1972. It was a quarterly and contained articles on hiking, biking, a restaurant review, and a museum tour in its 32 pages. Less than two years later, the magazine went bi-monthly and had over 100 pages. Just this September, it became a monthly with a circulation of 50,000.

When Fred Brown graduated from college in 1964, he went to Massachusetts to write for a newspaper. "It was a funny time in my life," he reflects. "It was my first time I'd been away from the South. I was 24 and struggling with 'what do I really want to do?' Lots of things were going on back home. Ralph McGill's book The South and the Southerner came out and it had a great impact on me. I said to myself, 'Look, you still don't know what you want to do, but whatever it is, you're going to do it in the South.'"

So Brown came home, working at a couple of newspapers, starting graduate school and working a number of odd jobs — none of it too satisfying.

"In 1966 I went to Delta Airlines, based in Atlanta, and got a job revising standard practice manuals. It was dry, precise writing but I found it stimulating and that's when I decided I really wanted to be an editor, preferably of my own publication.

"Delta had an in-house publication and when the editorship came available, I applied for it. I didn't get it the first time. The second time I did. I took seriously the job of explaining to employees the company they worked for."

In a year, Fred Brown was promoted to assistant public relations director of Delta. "I wanted the promotion but at the same time I gave up something important to me, editing."

By 1970, Fred Brown seemed to have it made. There was the great job with one of Atlanta's biggest companies, a wife and child, and leisure time. "We were on vacation at Martha's Vineyard. It was the Fourth of July, 1970. Everybody else in the house was asleep. I was up thinking. It hit me that I was almost 30 years old and if I going to start my own publication it was time I got on with it. I still didn't know exactly what kind of publication it would be.

"Then shortly after that, a friend and I were canoeing down the Chattooga River. At one point you come to the Narrows and it honestly looks like the river completely ends and I remember thinking, if I'd ever read a guide anywhere to this river, I wouldn't be so surprised right now. That's when the idea of Brown's Guide to Georgia crystallized."

Now, six years after the first issue was published, there are twelve employees of the magazine. No longer is it just a guide to recreation in the state — though those articles are still included; Brown's Guide is also doing in-depth stories. There was an acclaimed article about what really happened at the Atlanta Constitution newspaper after the death of editor Ralph McGill. Another article took a look at Albany's controversial wealthy mayor, Jim Gray, who owns the city's only daily newspaper and its only television station.

In the beginning, Brown's Guide was definitely a shoestring affair. Brown financed it with his personal savings and credit. His mother, wife, and sister pitched in in unsalaried positions to help the idea along. "It was not the textbook way to start a magazine," he laughs. "It was rather foolish, actually. But, it worked." For the first four years Brown stayed on at Delta. He quit regretfully and only because the magazine had grown so it required his fulltime attention.

Still, "The magazine is about 50 per cent of where I want it to be," Brown insists. "I want it to be a guide in every way: economically, politically, as well as recreationally."

desire" for a confrontation with Carter, Wurf added that "I also intend to let him know in the clearest possible tones that if confrontation is necessary, we are quite prepared for it." This pledge generated applause.

That Friday, however, Carter's confrontation was with Bella Abzug, not Jerry Wurf. Once in the Oval Office, Wurf cooled his rhetoric. There was no talk of "outrage" or "confrontation." While asserting his union's vulnerability to budget cuts, he politely asked for better communications and greater sensitivity.

The contrast confirmed feelings within the labor movement that Wurf is a Carter man at heart, a view shared by the president's aides. But Wurf is not alone. Except for Carter-hating William Winpisinger of the machinists' union, there is a consensus among labor's liberals that they are stuck with Carter, for better or worse.

This explains delight at the White House over even more conservative fiscal stands by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., Carter's most likely Democratic challenger. If Wurf's speech to AFSCME colleagues temporarily assigned Jimmy Carter to purgatory, it permanently sentenced Jerry Brown to the lowest reaches of hell. Wurf called Brown a "prostitute," contended he "would take a position of Mary Queen of Scots" to be elected president and called him "a man without commitment to anything."

Unless and until Kennedy surprises everybody by running for president, Carter's political operatives can turn the other cheek to public sniping from the president's labor friends. With Brown as the only alternative, they are confident of nothing more strident than Wurf's muted criticism in the Oval Office on Jan. 12.

Koenig to the Rockies, and Strout Realty Inc. of Springfield, Mo., have nearly 150 years of selling country property between them. Their regular seasonal catalogs are seen by more than two million people and they sell property about every 15 minutes.

"The brochures contain actual facts," says United Farm's president, Norman McCain. "Eloquently written of course, but accurate."

"The catalog is our showcase," says D.R. Young, president of Strout. "It's like the window of your favorite haberdashery."

His catalog introduces property in one Tennessee county with phrases such as "Country Atmosphere Prevails!" "Colossal Colonial!" "Sitting Pretty!" "Enter the Enchanted Forest!"

Edwin Strout, a New York City window screen salesman, founded Strout Realty Inc. in 1900. Its office soon moved from a woodshed on the Maine farm to a Wall Street skyscraper and, nearly 50 years later, to Springfield.

United Farm Inc. was founded 24 years later by a Strout protege. Roscoe Chamberlain used Strout's idea, set himself up in Kansas City and purchased a "Farm for Sale" classified advertisement. His firm, with 560 offices, has grown to rival Strout, which now has 700 offices.

The two firms now handle everything from an urban apartment building to a small town grocery store. But the bulk of their sales still come from country property.

Both firms acknowledge that their catalogs play on customers' emotions, but neither will sell a piece of land until the buyer has seen it. "After they have evaluated it with their own eyes," McCain says, "then they can buy it with their heart if they want."

Mind-Reading Is Poor Substitute For Talking

My entire life has been a test. Before marriage, it was multiple choice. Now it's fill-in-the-blank.

Establishing meaningful communication with Phillip has been like learning Russian from a scratched record. He hasn't finished more than six sentences since our wedding day. Not that he doesn't start plenty, but he expects me to finish them.

"Look, Phillip," I told him, "if you wanted me to be a mind-reader, you should have bought me a pink trailer and painted a hand on the front."

"I don't know what you . . ." His voice trailed off as his eyes fixed on something in the paper.

"You don't know what I want?" I asked. "Come on, finish it."

He looked up. "Finish what?"

"The sentence."

"What sentence?"

"Never mind," I sighed. "What did you do today?"

"Well, you know Dorothy? She told me about a neat restaurant . . ." His eyes wandered back to the paper.

"And?"

"And what?" he said. "Oh, yeah, have you seen my glasses?"

"Oh, good grief! No, I have not, and I don't care if I ever do again."

He looked puzzled. "There's no need to get hostile. I think they were next to your . . ."

"My what?"

"Never mind. I'll find them."

"Oh no, you don't," I said, following him into the bedroom. "For once, you're going to finish a conversation with me. Tell me about Dorothy's restaurant."

"I can't remember the name of it, but it serves seafood, and it's close to . . ." He pushed past me and went into the kitchen.

"Close to what?" I screamed.

". . . that other restaurant."

"I can't believe you! Is this just a streak of sadism, or do you think you're an oracle?"

"What are you talking about?"

I was beginning to hyperventilate. "What I need is one of those computers they use to train monkeys. Push the right word, and you get a banana!"

"Gail, you aren't making sense."

"I'm not making sense!" I shrieked. "I'm not making sense!"

Phillip picked up the paper again. " I find it absolutely impossible to talk to you when you get like this."

It's a good thing he can't read my mind.

Carter Felt Treating Israel, Egypt Equally

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — President Jimmy Carter is viewed by the American people as treating both Israel and Egypt equally fairly in their attempt to reach a Middle East peace.

Here is the shape of public opinion as the United States seeks resumption of the peace talks that have been stalled for six weeks:

1. A large majority of Americans (62 percent) among the nine in 10 (92 percent) who are aware of the Middle East situation say Carter is treating both sides equitably, 11 percent say he is siding too much with Israel, and 10 percent say he favors Egypt. Another 17 percent do not express an opinion.

Carter's perceived impartiality is perhaps somewhat surprising in view of the public's basic sympathies in the Middle East situation — feelings that favor Israel over the Arab nations by a proportion of three-to-one — and reflect positively on what Americans see as an even-handed approach.

Here are the questions and findings based on those who have heard or read about the situation in the Middle East:

"Do you think President Carter is leaning too much in favor of Israel, too much in favor of Egypt, or do you feel that he is treating both sides equally fairly?"

Carter Playing Fair In The Middle East Negotiations?

Treating both sides fairly	62%
Leaning too much in favor of Israel	11
Leaning too much in favor of Egypt	10
No opinion	17

2. While the American people were never very optimistic about the chances of the Camp David agreements leading to a lasting peace between Israel and Egypt, they are even less so today. Six in 10 now believe the agreements will not achieve a permanent peace while 26 percent hold the opposite viewpoint.

The question and trend, based on the aware group:

"Do you think the Camp David agreements will or will not lead to a lasting peace between Israel and Egypt?"

	Will	Will Not	No Opinion
Latest (Jan. 5-8)	26%	59%	15%
September	31	42	27

(Note: The September results above are based on a national telephone survey of 592 adults.)

3. Americans who have heard or read about the situation in the Middle East lean to the view that neither Israel nor Egypt is doing all it should to achieve peace. The proportions with this point of view have grown since November 1978.

In the latest survey 60 percent say Israel is not doing all it should, compared to 51 percent who say the same thing about Egypt.

Here are the questions asked and the trend:

"Do you think Israel/Egypt is or is not doing all it should to bring about peace in the Middle East?"

Israel Doing All It Should For Peace

	Is	Is Not	No Opinion
LATEST (Jan. 5-8)	22%	60%	18%

4. American sympathies are still predominantly on Israel's side, although the proportion siding with the Arab nations has increased steadily since last spring.

In the latest survey, 42 percent say their sympathies lie with Israel, 15 percent with the Arab nations. At the same time, however, 29 percent line up with neither side, while another 14 percent are undecided.

faculty members in the development of proposals and to secure university approval for the submission of these, and to serve as liaison between project directors, funding agencies, and the university.

Since December 1970, the OSP has assumed Business Office responsibility for the expenditure of all grant and contract monies coming to the University from outside sources by approving all personnel salaries, fringe benefits, travel requests, purchase requisitions, reimbursement requests, line-item budget changes and all requests for expenditures.

In 1965, when the OSP was established, there were no contracts in effect, and total grant funds in effect at the time amounted to $49,028.

During OSP's first year of operations, fiscal 1965-1966, 53 proposals totaling $2.12 million were submitted. Some 33 of them were funded, involving $848,500.

During fiscal 1976-1977 144 grant and contract proposals amounting to $6.64 million were submitted, with 63 of them funded for a total of $2.31 million — a 171 per cent increase in the number submitted, a 90.9 per cent increase in the number funded, and a 157.5 per cent increase in the total funds received.

During fiscal 1977-1978, 153 proposals requesting $6.62 million were submitted, with 86 being awarded $2.66 million.

Last June, according to White, due to overlapping termination dates, multi-year awards and new grants and contracts received, the university was fiscally responsible for about $4 million in funds from outside agencies.

Dr. Charles Brown, director of Institutional Development at ECU, under whose supervision the OSP operates, said of White's resignation, "if he leaves his job...we'll certainly lose some valuable talents.

"We've seen tremendous growth in grants to the university under his direction," Brown emphasized. "He's very widely respected for his expertise in this field...attracting grants from various sources, a very effective person. He's done a tremendous job," and the university, "will have some big shoes to fill."

Wants Bust Removed

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Many historians credit Civil War figure Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest as having been something of a military genius. But a coalition of leaders from religious and black civil rights groups, citing what they say was his shoddy treatment of blacks, want Forrest's bronze bust taken out of the state Capitol.

The bust of the Confederate cavalry officer from West Tennessee, famed as being "fustest with the mostest," is on display in the Tennessee Capitol along with memorials to other state notables.

His fighting tactics are said to have served as an example to other military tacticians who followed later in history — including the Desert Fox, German Field Marshal Erwin Rommel. And given a niche in history is Forrest's reported formula for victory: "Get there first with the most men."

But there was another side to the Confederate leader — he was a slave trader, he was involved in the disputed Fort Pillow massacre of black troops near Memphis and he headed the infamous Ku Klux Klan after the war ended.

Because of this, the coalition of black and religious leaders takes a dim view of having Forrest's bust, unveiled last fall, in an honored place in the state Capitol.

"The fact that he was one of the founders of the Ku Klux Klan is disturbing to us and should be an insult to most Americans," the Rev. Clarence Thomas, one of the coalition leaders, said Friday.

The coalition includes such organizations as the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; PUSH, which Thomas heads in Chattanooga, the Tennessee Voters Council and several church organizations. Thomas said the groups have been trying to meet with Gov. Lamar Alexander in an effort to persuade him to have Forrest's bust removed. They have been unsuccessful so far, he said.

Thomas said the coalition has uncovered information on the Fort Pillow incident, including testimony before a Senate investigating committee, which shows that Forrest's troops shot black Union troops in cold blood.

Three-Bill Tax Package

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A three-bill tax package that would double tax on cigarettes and eliminate the 4 percent state and local sales taxes on food was filed in the Senate Friday by Sen. Cecil Jenkins, D-Cabarrus.

The bills would raise the per package cigarette tax from 2 cents to 4 cents. North Carolina now is the largest tobacco producing state in the country and has the lowest cigarette tax. Over $19 million was collected from that 2 cents per package last year.

It wasn't until the 1960s that North Carolina added a cigarette tax to the books, becoming the last state to do so. The proposed hike would still leave North Carolina with the lowest cigarette tax in the nation. Budget analysts say an accurate prediction on how much the state would gain by the tax increase is not available because the amount of cigarettes bought in North Carolina and smuggled to high tax states is not known.

Another bill proposed by Jenkins would raise by 1 percent the state tax on all retail liquor sales, raising the rate to 23½ percent.

The third bill would repeal the 3 percent state sales tax on food. Budget analysts say this would cost the state about $105 million a year.

Jenkins' is the third proposal to repeal or reduce the food tax. However, it is the only one calling for elimination of the tax altogether.

"I feel like the taxes ought to be on cigarettes and liquor, which I consider a luxury," the freshman senator said. "That way a man who chooses to spend his money on cigarettes and liquor can't say we're taking food out of his baby's mouth by taxing it."

In other legislative developments Friday.

Balanced Budget

North Carolina became the 23rd state Friday to ask Congress to call a constitutional convention to demand a balanced federal budget.

North Carolina was the last state in the southeast to pass a resolution calling for the convention, and gave its final approval when the Senate voted unanimously Friday to concur with the House on a minor amendment.

Thirty-four states must pass a similar resolution before Congress would be forced under the Constitution to call the convention.

Property Taxes

Rep. Paul Pulley, D-Durham, introduced a bill that would provide property tax relief for the elderly and disabled. The bill would give taxpayers who qualify — those over 65 and the disabled — a credit on property tax bills computed by a complicated formula based on the person's income.

The tax cut would cost the state between $3 million and $5 million per year.

Elections

The House approved and sent the Senate two bills aimed at preventing candidates who lose a primary election from running again in the general election as independents.

The measures were filed by Reps. Louise Brennan, D-Mecklenburg, and Ruth Easterling, D-Mecklenburg, and were prompted after former Sen. James McDuffie, D-Mecklenburg, lost the Democratic primary but won a place on the general election ballot as an unaffiliated candidate last year. He lost that election too.

One of the bills would require an unaffiliated candidate to file for office before the primary date. The second bill would require that a candidate running without a party be registered as an unaffiliated voter three months before the general election.

Taxes

The House also approved and sent to the Senate a bill that would raise the retail malt beverage license and the license for off-premise retail sales of unfortified wine from $5 to $20.

A revenue laws study commission had recommended the two be raised to $10, but the House Finance Committee Thursday amended the bill to hike the license fees to $20.

Cheering Mexicans Greet Pope

By JUAN O. TAMAYO

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Pope John Paul II rode through a fiesta crowd of 1.5 million cheering Mexicans Saturday and opened a conference of Latin American bishops dealing with Marxism in the church, then gave a fatherly dressing-down to priests and nuns, telling them to pay more attention to prayer and less to politics.

Clerical involvement in radical politics is "Inopportune and counter-productive," he said.

"You are not social managers, political leaders or functionaries of a temporal power," the pontiff declared in a private meeting with Mexican priests.

"Let us have no illusions of serving religion if we try to dilute our gifts with an exaggerated interest in the broad field of temporal problems. . .secular functions are the proper field of laymen."

At a similar meeting with nuns, John Paul complained there "is no lack of examples of confusion about the very essence of the consecrated life. . .

"Prayers are abandoned and action substituted. Vows are interpreted by a secularized mentality that dilutes the religious motivations of our estate. The communal life is lightly abandoned. Socio-political postures are adopted as the true goal. . ."

He urged both groups to seek strength in prayer, telling the priests that "a soul living in habitual contact with God" will know how to care for the poor "without surrendering to socio-political radicalisms, which in the end are shown to be inopportune and counterproductive."

The meetings were private but the Vatican made public the text of the pope's remarks. John Paul had earlier said a Mass opening the third conference of Latin-American bishops, gathered to debate the relationship of the church to Marxist revolutionaries and other topics.

The Polish-born pontiff, waving and smiling, drove 12 miles through a crowd of 1.5 million cheering Mexicans to the massive ultra-modern Basilica of the Virgin of Guadalupe on the northern edge of the city, where he blessed the country's most revered religious object — the image imprinted on a cloak of the Virgin as a dark-skinned Aztec princess.

Watched by 9,200 devout Catholics crowded under the 150-feet church cupola, John Paul celebrated Mass with a group of Mexican bishops, the opening act of the Latin American conference.

The meeting brings together 197 bishops and 21 cardinals for 17 days in the city of Puebla. Their debate will reflect the radical-conservative rift that divides the church in an area where it counts 44 percent of its 750 million members.

Experts said its decisions would be an important influence on the stance the Vatican adopts toward the increasing involvement of priests in social and political activities and the contentious question of "liberation theology."

The pope has so far not publicly announced his formal stand on the left vs. right confrontation. His experience in Communist Poland has made him cautious of left-wing doctrines and analysts expected him to urge a middle course.

Police have said at least 8 million Mexicans will see the pope during his six-day Mexico stay. But estimates of Friday's crowds alone ranged between 3 and 5 million.

John Paul's visit to Shrine of the Virgin of Guadalupe endeared him to Mexico's 60 million Roman Catholics — 95 percent of the population. It is the holiest spot in Mexico to Catholics and the Guadalupe cloak, showing what is believed to be the miraculously imprinted image of a dark-skinned Virgin Mary, is the most revered object in Latin America.

Well-wishers threw flowers into the pope's large open bus and shouted "Viva el Papa!" and "Viva Juan Pablo!" At the basilica, about 1,000 of the crowd overran the guards and forced their way inside through iron gates.

Scalpers sold some of the 9,200 free tickets for 500 pesos ($22).

Throngs of Mexicans and pilgrims from the United States and Central America chanted "Viva Juan Pablo!" and "the pope, the pope, rah, rah, rah!"

They threw flowers and torn paper that littered the wide brim of the pontiff's red cardinal's hat.

President Lopez Portillo — whose recent predecessors would not even enter a church for family weddings, for fear of ruining their political careers — appeared unexpectedly to greet the pontiff at the airport on his arrival.

No Priestly Violence

By BARRY JAMES

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Their slogan is Viva Cristo! Viva Marx!

But can the priests who seek to turn the Roman Catholic church into a focal point for Castro-style revolution co-exist with a pope with a deep knowledge of Marxism and its denial of human rights?

The answer clearly is no.

Pope John Paul II has made it clear in past days that there is no place in the church for priests and others who turn to violence and systems such as atheistic communism to spread a message of salvation.

But neither is the 58-year-old pontiff likely to condemn out of hand efforts to involve the church more actively in the struggle to improve the material conditions of the poor, who make up 80 percent of the population in Latin America.

The pope's views will become apparent as he inaugurates and attends the opening sessions of the third conference of Latin American bishops this weekend.

The Catholic revolutionaries take their cue from the so-called "theology of liberation" that teaches people must be freed from ignorance and poverty as part of God's salvation.

Some believe that God comes from the barrel of a gun. In their book, the theology of liberation has become a byword for revolution.

But more moderate priests and bishops say the theology of liberation is a valid way of making people aware of their condition, and of proving that God is at work in the world of today.

Argentine Cardinal Eduardo Pironio said some priests use the theology of liberation as an excuse for violence, but said "all the rest (in the liberation theory) is legitimate."

The pope also, during his flight to the Dominican Republic Thursday, said the theology of liberation could be either true or false.

"If it applies doctrines, systems or ways of analysis that are not Christian," he said, "then it is not true theology. That's the problem. Theology of liberation, yes. But which one?"

Tractorcade In N.C.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — A six-mile-long tractorcade of protesting farmers entered North Carolina Saturday, setting up camp at a fairgrounds for a day of rest before continuing their protest trip to the White House.

The column of tractors and support vehicles, estimated between 400 and 800, crossed into North Carolina about 4 p.m. Saturday on Interstate 85.

A dispatcher for the North Carolina Highway Patrol said the caravan was scheduled to stop at the Matrolina Fairgrounds north of Charlotte for the remainder of the weekend.

Despite the length of the tractorcade, the dispatcher said, traffic was moving along I-85, a major highway connector between Atlanta and Washington.

Reports of the number of vehicles varied. A count of 640 vehicles was reported in North Carolina, but a South Carolina Highway Patrol dispatcher said there were about 800 units stretched between Spartanburg and Cherokee counties when the column began crossing into North Carolina.

Highway Patrol units have escorted the tractorcade throughout the journey, which began as separate units in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas and Oklahoma. The groups formally joined the tractorcade in Atlanta Friday.

Georgia farm leader Tommy Kersey, a spokesman for the protesters, said the American Agriculture Movement has been frustrated by repeated attempts to talk with President Carter.

He said they would like "at least" a 15-minute meeting with the former Georgia peanut farmer.

"Last year we pleaded to see the president, but we couldn't even get three minutes," Kersey said. "Carter has talked with other people about their problems, so we're hoping that he will sit down and talk to us for at least 15 minutes to hear our side."

Huge March At Funeral

ROME (UPI) — The Communist Party, showing its strength after toppling Italy's 40th government since the fall of fascism, marshaled 250,000 workers Saturday to march at the Genoa funeral of a Communist official slain by the Red Brigades.

President Sandro Pertini, the entire Communist party leadership and a crowd estimated at 250,000 paraded through the rain in the funeral-turned-protest march for slain Communist Party union organizer Guido Rossa.

G.R. Whitfield School Emphasizes Bus Safety

GRIMESLAND — Students at G. R. Whitfield School observed School Bus Safety Week Jan. 15-19 by drawing posters, making booklets and hearing discussions by safety officials about correct bus manners.

"Safety is a thing we need to emphasize every day," said Eleanor Mills, school curriculum coordinator. "In our health classes, we have sponsored a poster contest and several groups have made booklets."

During the week, teachers drilled children in correct procedures in getting on and off the buses. One kindergarden teacher had her children sit in the bus driver's seat to show them that it is hard to see things directly in front of the bus.

"Rodney Bullock (Transportation Supervisor for Pitt County) gave a slide presentation," said Mrs. Mills. "One thing he emphasized is to be sure that the bus driver can see the kids when they walk in front of the bus."

When Sgt. Glenn Swanson of the North Carolina Highway Patrol came to talk to the school, he re-emphasized Bullock's point on children making themselves visible to the bus driver when boarding and leaving the bus.

"When you drop something under the bus, tell the bus driver before you pick it up," Swanson noted. "Also, when you go to the bus in the morning, don't run up to it—you might slip and fall under it."

Children saw a film suggested by Sgt. Swanson, "The Big Yellow Fellow." The short film emphasized that the bus can be the children's friend.

"The bus is just like a classroom," Sgt. Swanson said. "Try to keep the volume turned down when you're on the bus."

The Student Government Association gave a party for G. R. Whitfield bus drivers Wednesday, with the PTA meeting Thursday to see the film, 'Priceless Cargo," and to judge the children's safety posters.

Paul Moore, a third grader, Renee Rice, a fifth grader and Paula Gatlin, a seventh grader, were presented trophies for their posters.

Grimesland knows the heartache of school bus accidents. Cornel Jones, a nine-year-old, was killed Jan. 28, 1976.

"It's traumatic for drivers when they have a wreck or someone gets hurt," said Mrs. Mills.

Sgt. Swanson, who is stationed at the Greenville headquarters, said that the patrolmen offer a program for schools to emphasize transportation safety.

"Our program, called 'The Super Trooper Program,' is composed of a 30-minute program with coloring books for the children," Swanson stated.

"We don't want to burden teachers with extra responsibilities, for we also have a busy job," Swanson continued. "But it's no good to teach children how to read and write if we don't teach them how to survive."

Rodney Bullock Responsible For Busing 10,360 Students

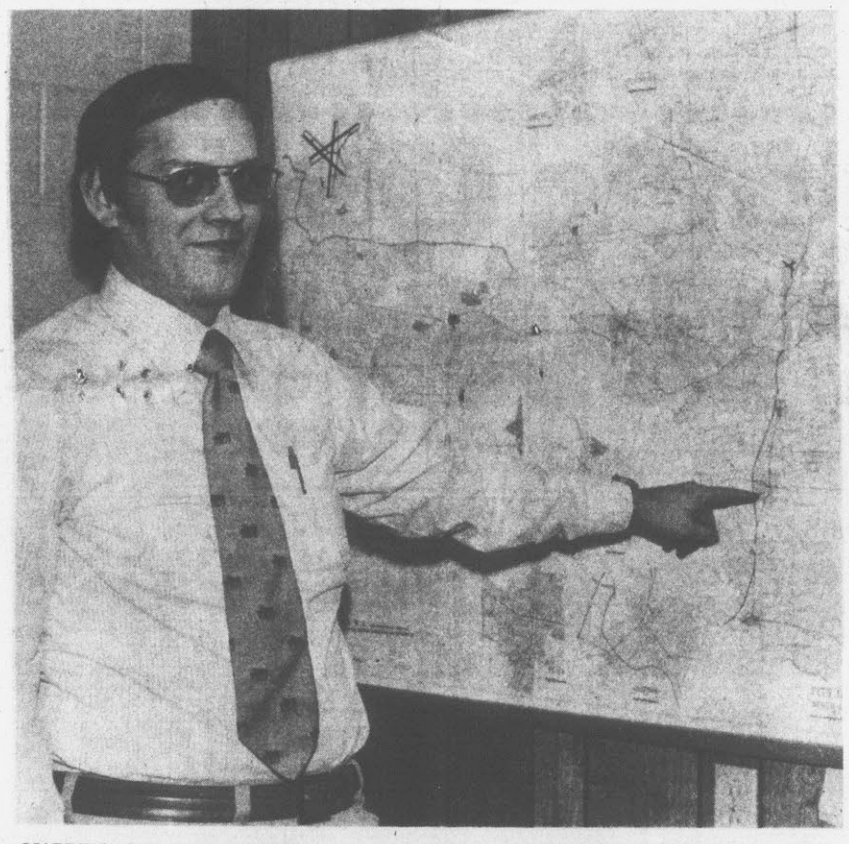

MAPPING OUT BUS ROUTES — Rodney Bullock, Transportation Supervisor for Greenville City and Pitt County buses, points to one of the many maps he uses in charting the routes for his system's 189 buses.

When people ask Rodney Bullock how many children he has, his answer is, "10,360."

Bullock, who serves as Transportation Supervisor for Greenville City and Pitt County schools, has a hectic job, overseeing the performance of 189 school and activity buses.

Bullock knows the problems of busing having talked with parents, teachers and children about safety transportation.

"I tell children to think of the bus as a big dog," said Bullock. "If a child mistreats it, it will hurt him."

Bullock also advises parents to teach safety and respect for buses and cars, as well as to admonish children not to play around the buses.

"Kids should be on time for the school bus," said Bullock. "The school bus runs the same route every day, so it should be at the appointed place within three to four minutes, unless the driver is sick or has overslept."

One problem for the busing system is the scarcity of adult drivers. Pitt County drivers must be 16½ years-old and have passed a two-day class and written exam in order to be certified to drive school and activity buses.

"You can't get adult bus drivers," said Bullock. "I had one lady call over the holidays, but she never came by for the classes."

"A lot of responsibility comes with this job and some people don't want to accept it," said Bullock. "They have a bad image of school buses."

Bullock noted that the Greenville City system employs about 15 adult bus drivers. He explained that it was harder for persons to drive the county routes since they would be so far away from home when the route ended at the schools.

Pitt County and Greenville City bus drivers must have had no accidents or citations to drive the buses. Also, Bullock pointed out that drivers usually serve a three to four month training period before actually taking on a bus route.

The city and county systems also use bus monitors on the buses, usually school children who try to keep noise down to a minimum while in transit.

"They're not there to take names, but to aid in transportation," said Bullock.

With the difference of ages on the bus, Bullock noted that it is often hard to control the noise factor.

Pitt County's last school bus fatality was Tina Carraway of Belvoir, who was killed last Feb. 3.

"I talk to drivers each day and we are grateful we haven't had one (fatality) this year," said Bullock.

According to Bullock, the General Assembly has been requested to allocate funds for special arm monitors and mirrors to be affixed to many school buses to make for safer transportation.

"One thing I advise children to use is the buddy system," Bullock noted. "Then they'll look out for one another."

North Carolina experienced its ninth school bus fatality this school year on Jan. 10 when Michael Steven Moore, a nine-year-old from New Hanover County, slipped and fell under the school bus wheel.

As of now, school bus drivers are paid only $2.62 an hour, compared to the state minimum income of $2.90.

"Like I've said, we're just approximately 204 employees against 10,360 children," said Bullock.

One Of The Legendary Midgetts

By LEONARD LIND
UNC Television Network

Captain Ellery C. Midgett looks like a sea captain. With his sea foam white hair and beard and black captain's hat he gives the air of having weathered many storms and strolled many decks.

His life is profiled in the 30 minute special, "Captain Ellery Midgett: Reflections Of A Seaman," on Sunday, February 4 at 3:30 p.m. on UNC-TV (Channel 25 Greenville.)

The Outer Banks and the sea are two strong threads that weave throughout the Midgett family history. Captain Ellery's grandfather commanded coal ships during the 19th century.

The captain's father, John A. Midgett, Jr., was commander of the Chicamacomico Lifesaving Station at Rodanthe.

At 16 Ellery shipped out of Norfolk as a mess boy beginning a 47 year seafaring career that saw hitches in both the Navy and the Merchant Marine.

In 1968 he retired from the Merchant Marine and married Loraine Ward.

"Captain Ellery Midgett: Reflections Of A Seaman" is the story of life on the Outer Banks before bridges and ferries brought a hoard of touris to its shores. The captain's stories revolve around the surfmen he has known all his life and their heroic lifesaving adventures and rugged life style.

It is also the story of Captain Midgett and Loraine and the special relationship they share.

"Captain Ellery Midgett: Reflections Of A Seaman" is a production of UNC-TV network. Producers of the show are Richard Hatch and Ira David Wood. Director-Cinematographer is David Bogan.

The program will be repeated on Channel 25 at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday, February 7.

Third Street School Using Stickers To Lure Volunteers

Bumper stickers have gone into the schools — or at least into one Greenville City School.

In preparation for the forthcoming Volunteer Month being observed in February, interested parents and PTA members at Third Street School hit upon the idea of bumper stickers to proclaim the need for volunteers.

DISPLAYING A VOLUNTEER STICKER . . . The premiere showing of a sticker to encourage volunteers to help in classroom roles at Third Street School is made by (left to right) Mrs. Esther Warren, principal; Mrs. Frankie Daniel and Mrs. Fran Rostar (both kneeling), co-chairpersons of Volunteer Month; and Mrs. Shirley Morrison, president of Third Street PTA.

Now, fresh from the printers, the gummed admonitions to volunteer time to help students will be seen on back bumpers of cars in Greenville. In dark green lettering on a white background, the sticker reads "I Am A Volunteer At Third Street School." Filling an added role as artist, the school's principal, Mrs. Esther Warren, did the art work for the design.

A trio of mothers of students at Third Street School— PTA president Mrs. Shirley Morrison; and co-chairpersons of the February Volunteer Month Mrs. Fran Rostar and Mrs. Frankie Daniel — talked about the concept of volunteer work being emphasized at this time.

"Our ideas are in line with Governor Hunt's push for parents to volunteer to help in our schools," Mrs. Morrison commented. The stickers are one means of promoting volunteerism. They also serve to recognize those who have given so much in time and effort."

Mrs. Rostar explained that volunteers are most needed for work in classrooms. "There's so much they can do," she said. "Some of the primary roles they fill are listening to children read, reading to children, helping children make their own reading materials and games."

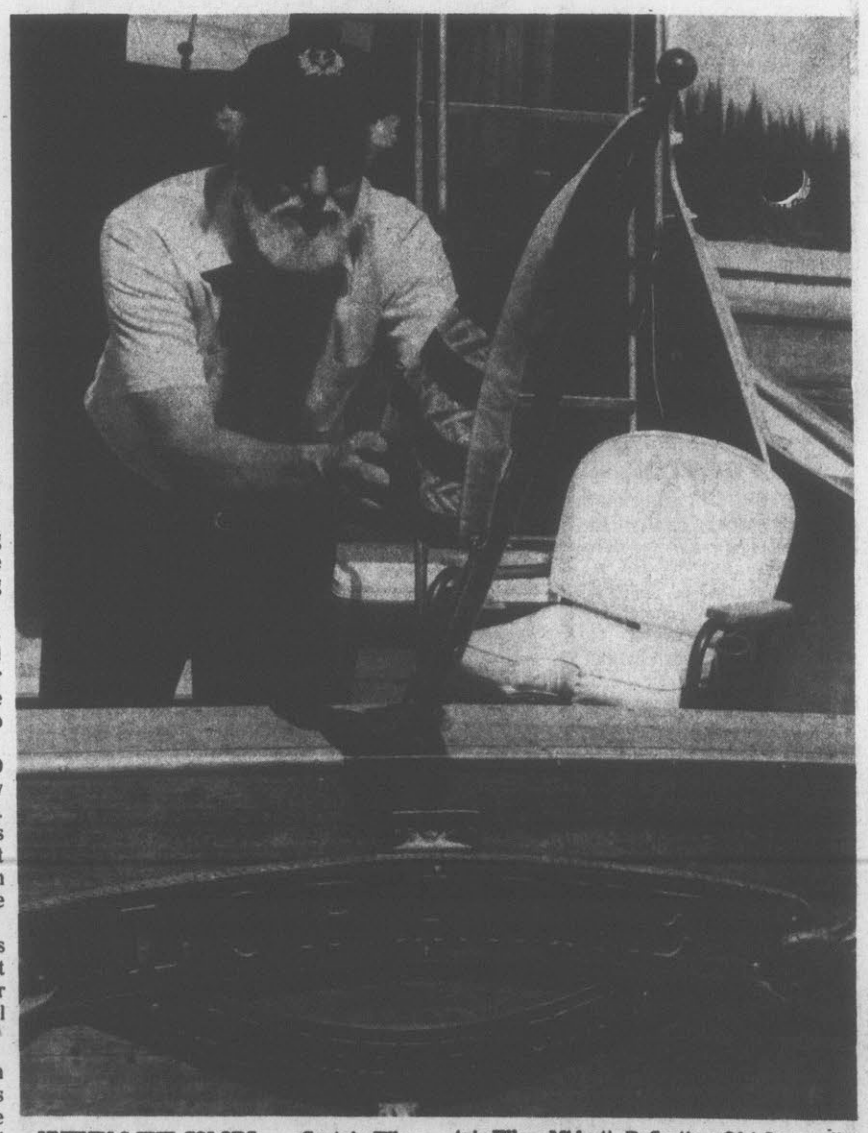
Other volunteer needs mentioned by Mrs. Daniel include those of "drilling children on number facts, assisting teachers in monitoring children as they work independently, helping teachers with children on the playground, and giving a helping hand in the media center."

The three parents and Mrs. Warren all agreed that the ideal is to have a considerable number of parents volunteer to give about one hour time a week to helping out in the schools.

"Just now we have about 20 active volunteers who are very faithful," Mrs. Warren said. "We realize that many parents have limited time to spare, but even if a person can give only an an hour now and then that will be welcome."

Scheduling of volunteers is programmed to insure the most effective use of the particular talent of the individual volunteer.

"We all hope," Mrs. Morrison concluded, "that these stickers will encourage others to give time to volunteer work at Third Street as well as in other schools wherever parents have children."



UNFURLS THE COLORS . . . Captain Ellery Midgett unfurls the colors as he prepars to cast-off in his boat, "Lorraine." The captain's life is profiled in the UNC-TV production "Captain Ellery Midgett: Reflections Of A Seaman" will be on Channel 25, Greenville at 3:30 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 4 and will be aired again at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 7.

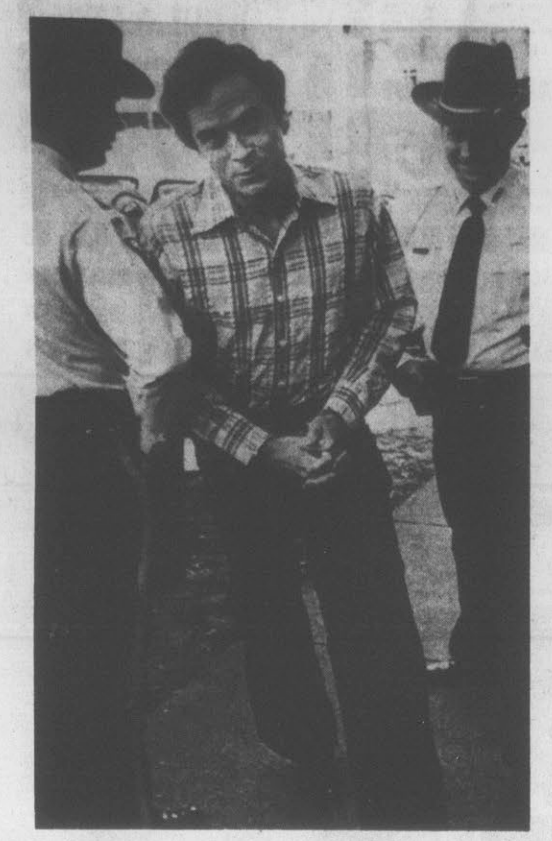
Killer Of Four Slain, Hostages Released



BUNDY ENTERS COURTHOUSE — Accused murderer Theodore R. Bundy is shown Friday entering the Leon County courthouse in Tallahassee, Fla. Circuit Judge Howard D. Cowart met with attorneys for Bundy and the state, closing the hearing to the public in the name of orderly judicial conduct. When asked how he was being treated, Bundy replied, "Like a prisoner." By TELJI SHIMIZU

TOKYO (UPI) — Riot police Sunday stormed a bank in Osaka and fatally wounded the shotgun-wielding ex-convict who killed four persons and held at least 25 people hostage for more than 42 hours. The gunman died later in a hospital.

Police said the hostages were released unharmed.

Kyodo News Service said Akiyoshi Umekawa, the 30-year-old gunman, died in an Osaka hospital of wounds suffered during the shootout with the police.

Armed and helmeted police officers burst into the Kitabatake branch of the Mitsubishi Bank building at 8:43 a.m. (6:43 p.m. EST Saturday) and Japanese reporters on the scene said they heard three shots fired.

Reporters on the scene said the shotgun with which Umekawa had killed four persons and terrorized his hostages was removed from the bank building by police before the hostages were rescued.

A few hours earlier, Umekawa, who was convicted of murder when he was a boy, permitted police to remove the bodies of four people he killed in an abortive bank robbery and freed 13 hostages. But he kept 25 men and women under threat of death, ignoring his elderly mother's pleas to give himself up.

Unmekawa broke into the bank in Japan's second largest city 312 miles southwest of Tokyo Friday afternoon and demanded 50 million yen — about $250,000.

He gunned down the four men and threatened to kill his hostages "one by one" unless he got the money. But since then he has said nothing to police except to ask for food once.

At the outset of the siege, he freed a pregnant woman, then waited until Saturday to release 13 others. Three men had gunshot wounds and one, whose ear had been cut off, was hospitalized in serious condition.

Umekawa himself refused to surrender, training his gun on the remaining 25 captives despite emotional appeals from his 73-year-old mother who was brought to the scene by police helicopter.

Authorities said all the 25 hostages are believed to be bank employees.

Authorities said Umekawa — who has a snake tattoo on his back — killed a 25-year-old housewife and stole money when he was 15 years old. He spent about one year in a reformatory for the crime.

Carolina Waters Heavily Explored

BEAUFORT, N. C. (AP) — During the last 15 years, the waters off the North Carolina-South Carolina coast have been perhaps among the most heavily explored in the world.

During that period, 169 scientists from 57 colleges, universities and research institutes and several governmental organizations have taken advantage of the Duke University Marine Laboratory in Beaufort.

They came from 23 states and six foreign countries. While their efforts concentrated on the coastal waters of the southeastern part of the United States, they ranged to four continents, two oceans and three seas.

Students who studied with the scientists now hold professional positions in 154 colleges and universities and dozens of industrial and governmental capacities throughout this country and in a dozen foreign countries.

Among their findings was the watery grave of the Civil War ironclad Monitor, which sank off Cape Hatteras in 1862.

The accumulated scientific knowledge can be expected to play an important role in the handling of such national concerns as protection of the marine environment and offshore drilling, says Dr. Orrin H. Pilkey, marine geologist at Duke University.

Pilkey and his wife, Sharlene, have compiled a report of the first 15 years of operation for the Research Vessel Eastward and the oceanographic program at the laboratory.

The Eastward was launched 15 years ago this spring. The 117-foot, $750,000 vessel was paid for by the National Science Foundation, which continues to support its research activities.

Pilkey lists among the scientific achievements of the Eastward's 620 research cruises:

—Accumulatiokn of knowledge about the Carolina Shelf that makes possible new studies to assess the environmental impact of offshore nuclear power plants and offshore drilling.

—The discovery of petroleum-splitting bacteria in deep-sea sediments, a slow acting natural mechanism to clean up oil on the sea floor.

—A considerable increase in data on the oceanic food chain.

Especially noteworthy among the scientific achievements was the dredging up in 1967 of 120-million year old rocks from a depth of about 13,000 feet off the coast of Georgia. It was the oldest known sea-floor rock formation to that time.

Possible Criminal Violations

BALTIMORE (AP) — An investigation of "possible criminal violations" involving more than $154 million in contracts to print and distribute food stamps has been turned over to the Department of Justice, the Baltimore Sun reported today.

Senate investigators say senior personnel at the government's Bureau of Engraving and Printing may have been guilty of serious conflicts of interest, according to the report.

Vietnam Denies New Fighting

By ALAN DAWSON

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Vietnam Saturday denied reports of new fighting in Cambodia and dispatched a top woman diplomat to Africa to win support for the regime it installed in Phnom Penh.

China accused Vietnamese soldiers of intruding into its territory and planting landmines that wounded three Chinese guards.

Cambodia's ousted Pol Pot regime claimed in a broadcast from a China-based radio station that loyalist Khmer Rouge troops had taken the offensive against Vietnamese-backed rebel forces now controlling the country.

The loyalists had cut up the Vietnamese troops and bottled them up in the major town "where they are under heavy attack," the radio said.

But the 1,000-word communique gave no details of battles or casualties except to assert that "thousands of Vietnamese aggressors are being destroyed."

Diplomatic sources said they believed the radio report was greatly exaggerated.

Radio Hanoi and Radio Phnom Penh both claimed there was no fighting.

Reports from witnesses at the Thai-Cambodian frontier and Cambodian refugees arriving in Thailand said that some shooting was continuing but that it was sporadic and on a small scale.

Vietnam dispatched Madame Nguyen Thi Binh, its most effective diplomat, to Africa to defend the new pro-Hanoi government in Phnom Penh, the official Vietnam News Agency said.

Mrs. Binh, who represented the Viet Cong as foreign minister and as chief representative at the Paris peace talks with the United States, was going to next week's meeting of nonaligned nations in Maputo, Mozambique, the agency said.

News Briefs

Petition For New Ray Trial

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Attorneys for James Earl Ray have filed a petition for a new trial for the confessed killer of civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr.

The petition, filed by attorneys Mark Lane and Charles Galbreath, arrived Friday by mail, Leland McNabb, an assistant attorney general, said.

McNabb said the petition contends Ray is entitled to a new trial because the original judge in his case died before hearing a motion for a new trial. The petition also claimed Ray's conviction is flawed because no degree of murder — first or second — was specified in the verdict which sent him to prison.

Extending Drug Probe

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — A federal probe of an alleged drug smuggling ring known as "The Company" has extended to an unidentified Florida congressman, The Greenville News reported today.

The newspaper quoted sources close to the probe as saying the congressman and other "prominent Florida citizens" were under investigation. The paper did not mention any names.

Several news organizations in the Carolinas have reported that the probe was aimed at determining what, if any, links existed between the alleged ring and Rep. John Jenrette Jr., D-S.C., and U.S. Attorney Thomas E. Lydon Jr. Both have denied involvement in anything illegal.

Budget A 'Disappointment'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of the U.S. Conference of Mayors have unanimously approved a staff analysis that says President Carter's new budget is "a disappointment to the cities."

Meanwhile, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is challenging the administration on some proposed budget cuts that he says could do "serious damage" to the American health care system.

At a news conference Friday that ended the mayors' annual midwinter meeting, conference leaders played down their budget criticism, stressing that the staff analysis is part of a process of competing for limited federal dollars.

Taiwan Plan Draws Fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's proposed new arrangment with Taiwan is drawing fire from two key chairmen in Congress who say they want better treatment for the former ally.

Calling Carter's plan "a facade," Rep. Clement J. Zablocki, D-Wis., chairman of the House International Relations Committee, said Friday that he thinks Taiwan should get a U.S. liaison office.

Carter said Friday that he would veto any legislation violating the new U.S.-Peking accord but did not say if that includes legislation for a U.S. liaison office in Taiwan.

Two Men Arrested

Greenville Police arrested two out-of-town men on various drug-related charges Friday morning about 8:30.

Franklin Neal Shaw of Lexington and Randall Wayne Deaton of Thomasville were arrested after Officer R. F. McClendon stopped Shaw for driving an automobile with broken tail lights.

Upon seeing an open bottle of liquor in the passenger side of the car, a bong and numerous marijuana seeds, McClendon obtained permission from Shaw to search the vehicle further.

Upon search, police found five syringes, nine plastic bags of marijuana, three tablets of quaaludes and an amount of MDA. An additional bag of marijuana was found in Shaws' pants pocket.

Shaw and Deaton were charged with felony possession of marijuana with intent to deliver, felony possession of MDA, possission of quaaludes, and possession of syringes. Shaw was further charged with transporting liquor with a broken seal in the passenger compartment and equipment failure.

The two suspects were taken to the Pitt County Jail and bond was set at $2,000 each.

Rules Suicide

CONCORD, N.C. (UPI) — Authorities have ruled as suicide the hanging of Cabarrus County prison inmate Michael Price, 19, of Concord.

Frozen Assets Problem Awaits Teng

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sticky money problem involving "ancient claims" is among the items awaiting Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping when he visits here next week.

Those claims have been a key factor in keeping trade between China and the United States from growing to its full potential since 1972 when relations between the two nations began to thaw.

President Carter said Friday at a news conference that he will discuss with Teng the issue of the claims, which the two countries have had against each other since they went to war in Korea in December 1950.

At the time, an estimated $196 million in U.S. assets in China were frozen and the United States did the same to some $80 million in Chinese assets in this country.

The two countries have tried without success for the past six years to resolve the problem.

"As long as U.S. private claims remain unsettled, it is theoretically possible for a claimant to get a court order attaching any piece of Chinese property which came within U.S. jurisdiction," one official said.

The largest of the U.S. claimants is the Boise-Cascade Corp., which owned a power company in Shanghai worth a reported $50 million.

The Chinese position has been that the United States should keep the $80 million it blocked while China would retain the $196 million in seized American assets. This would give the United States 40 cents on the dollar. In taking up previous agreements with other communist countries, Congress has indicated that it will not accept such a small return.

No final agreement on the issue is expected during Teng's visit. Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal will have detailed discussions on the subject when he visits China in several weeks.

At his news conference, Carter said his meetings with Teng starting Monday also could open the way toward agreement on airline travel between the two countries as well as scientific and cultural exchanges.

Teng arrives here Sunday and also will visit Atlanta, Houston and Seattle during his six-day stay.

On domestic issues, Carter once again defended his fiscal 1980 budget, saying the proposed $600 million reduction in Social Security benefits constitutes only one-half of 1 per cent of all payments in the program.

"This is not a politically popular program," Carter said. "I understand that.

"I am not robbing the poor," Carter added, denying that his spending priorities ignore the needs of many Americans. He said the spending restraints would pay dividends later in terms of reduced inflation.

Hope Leads Travolta

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Even Bob Hope had trouble believing it when readers of Seventeen magazine said they admired him more than John Travolta.

"I thought they were putting me on when they told me the results," said Hope. "I mean, can you imagine me being more popular than John Travolta with teen-aged girls? I can't even get my hips out of 'park.'"

The "most admired female" was Barbara Steisand, followed by Carol Burnett, Olivia Newton-John, Kate Jackson, Cheryl Teigs, Betty Ford, Mary Tyler Moore, Shirley Temple Black, Linda Ronstadt and Jacklyn Smith.

All interested persons are invited. There is no admission charge and refreshments will be served.

'Taxmas' Day

By ELLEN HADDOW
Associated Press Writer

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The people who brought you insult cards are back with a suggestion to spend April 15 folded, spindled and mutilated in glorious celebration of the new season of "Taxmas."

That's the traditional date by which Americans must file their federal income tax returns.

This year April 15 is on Sunday and the Internal Revenue Service therefore gives taxpayers an extra day to follow the card folks' suggestions to tell the IRS such things as: "You've actually saved me money this year. I don't need pocket money more."

Another "Taxmas" card is aimed at a policymaker, such as a congressman or IRS bureaucrat:

"You have created a tax system of great distinction...an' de stinc gets greater all de time."

The cards are the creation of a former writers' club, headed by playwright John O'Donnell.

Now known as Group Ten Press, the staff of creative writers and others is calling for a new season called "Taxmas," which would end with IRS Day on April 15.

"Let this day forever remind the politician and the bureaucrat that the people who pay the bill will no longer sulk alone and remain silent. Let the insults ring througout the land," O'Donnell said Thursday in what he called a proclamation of Taxmas.

The group attracted attention about six months ago with its marketing of insult cards, aimed at giving people a chance to say by mail what they wouldn't say in person.

In one such card, an employee could tell his boss that his sense of justice could earn him an appointment to the Supreme Court...of Uganda.

6-Day Sentence

ELIZABETHTOWN, N.C. (AP) — Dublin Mayor James H. Freeman was sentenced to six days in jail Friday after he struck a man accused of killing several of Freeman's relatives.

Superior Court Judge Coy C. Brewer, who found Freeman guilty of direct criminal contempt of court, said his decision "in many ways is one of the most difficult, if not the most difficult, I have had to make since I have been a judge."

Buckminster Fuller To Speak At ECU

Four men, internationally known for achievements in art and art-related fields, will be guest lecturers in The Visual Arts Forum at East Carolina University to be held in February, March and April.

The Visual Art Forum, an art student group, is sponsoring the series of lectures to feature Richard Demarco on Feb. 7, Buckminster Fuller on Feb. 9, Jan van der Mark, March 13, and Kenneth Noland on April 2.

All lectures will be at 7:30 p.m. on the designated date, and will be held in the Leo W. Jenkins Fine Arts Center auditorium. The lectures will be free of charge and open to the public except for the one given by Fuller, for which a fee of $3 will be charged.

— Richard Demarco will open the lecture series on Wednesday, Feb. 7 in a talk to center around the role of the artist as an explorer. Demarco is gallery director and arts festival coordinator in Edinburgh, Scotland, a city noted for its numerous national and international festivals of art, music, and theater.

— Friday, Feb. 9 is the date of the Buckminster Fuller lecture. Generally acknowledged as one of the great thinkers and innovaters of the 20th century, the 83-year old architect, inventor, philosopher, poet and engineer remains an active force in many facets of contemporary American life, particularly in the philosophy of energy and environment as reflected in architectural planning and application of humanistic theories to mankind's well being.

Best known for his geodesic domes — some of his most famous have been the on erected for the U.S. exhibition at Expo '67 in Canada, the one housing the tropical exhibit of the St. Louis Botanical Gardens, and his largest, the dome for the Union Tank Car Company in Baton Rouge, La., — Fuller also gained fame as the inventor, in 1927, of a factory-assembled house, the Dymaxion house.

Another notable invention was his Dymaxion car, manufactured in 1933. This was a vehicle that could cross open fields, attain speeds of 120 miles per hour, carry 12 passengers, and average 28 miles to a gallon of gas.

Despite his accomplishments in technological fields, Fuller considers himself more a philosopher than an inventor or architect.

— The lecture in the series on March 13 is to be given by Jan van der Marck, director of the Dartmouth College Museum and Gallery. der Marck will speak on the topic of art as an intellectual pursuit, and deal especially with art in the 70's. He is best known to the public for his writings on Christo.

— The final of the quartet of noted lecturers is Kenneth Noland. Undoubtedly the most recognized internationally of contemporary painters native to North Carolina, Asheville born Noland is in art circles the equivalent of what Thomas Wolfe was to Asheville in literary circles.

A painter of the Abstract Expressionist school of artists, the 54-year old artist had his first one-man show in Paris in 1949. A student of Black Mountain College in North Carolina, Noland has been a pioneer in techniques involving applying concentric rings and parallels related to the shape of the canvas. He was also an early proponent in staining canvas with thinned paints.

Schlitz at 16 decided he wanted to become a musician, and while a student at Duke University seriously concentrated on the songs of writers and the styles of performance given those songs.

Old Pendulum Clocks Appeal

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

YORKTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — There is no time like the old time, Oliver Wendell Holmes said, a long time ago, and Sy Wittner is here to tell you he was right, especially if the time is kept on an old-time clock.

What is clear, if that isn't, is that Americans by the droves are plainly anxious to have for themselves one of those old pendulum clocks that once hung in schoolhouses and post offices across the land, telling the hours of a non-digital day.

"We never dreamed they would have this appeal," Sy Wittner said. "It's all we can do to keep up with the demand."

Sy, and his wife, Shirley, operate what is itself a rarity, a mail-order antiques business. They call it, appropriately, Pony Express System, and those old clocks are their main stock in trade.

They hang in close-order ranks and files from every available wall of the Wittner plant, ticking and tocking and chiming and wagging their pendulums, an army of restless crickets.

Downstairs, the odor is of turpentine and varnish, the scene busy. Crews fueled by modern rock music work day and night restoring the clocks, packing them, sending them on their way.

For Sy and Shirley Wittner, time wasn't always, er, money.

A few years ago they ran a small-scale antiques business, a literal mom-and-pop operation, which itself had grown from "Shirley's Swap Shop," a sideline by which mom had earned pin money while pop earned a salary in an advertising agency.

Then, like an unbelieving prospector stumbling upon the mother lode, Sy one day discovered a huge cache of the old clocks.

"I will not reveal the supplier," he said, "but I am able to certify the authenticity of every one of the clocks. They were made in New England, most of them in Connecticut, generally between 1890 and 1910. Hundreds of thousands were produced at that time."

The clocks are basically alike, varying mainly in decorative detail and the type of wood used for the cabinet.

Most have an octagonal frame around the face, others a round frame. The pendulum swings in a narrower frame below. The whole clock measures about 22 inches long and 15 inches wide.

Because of his great supply, however (he says he had access to more than 100,000 at the beginning), Wittner has been able to salvage parts from identical clocks that were truly beyond repair.

In the restoration process, Wittner removes the clock's machinery, etches it with a code number, numbers the cabinet, then reunites the two after they have been refurbished separately.

Imagine the lack of electric power for long periods of time. Darkness! Depreviation! Chaos!

Arthur Hailey's latest novel, OVERLOAD is the story of people and events leading to such a crisis. Uncannily real, superbly exciting, it is a tale of power and people — their lives, ambitions, loves, deceits, consciences, greed and terror. Golden State Power and Light, the great public utility is accused of being a heartless monster, piling up profits at the expense of its hapless customers, the users of electricity and gas. Nim Goldman, the dedicated aggressive assistant-to-the-chairman of GSP&L says false to the charges and tries to convince his colleagues of their short-sightedness and the public that a devastating electrical famine is alarmingly near. Davey Birdsong, dynamic leader of power and light for people says the charges are true. Laura Bo Carmichael, ex-atomic scientist and chairman of the prestigious Sequoia Club, a rallying point for environmentalists, says maybe to the charges. These and other conflicts, plus passion and divided loyalties, pit the men and women of OVERLOAD against each other and present inside glimpses of the little known world of electric power production which is vital to us all.

Arthur Herzog, master of the doomsday novel, sends tremors of anxiety through every reader with his latest IQ novel IQ 83. It centers on a scientific experiment in genetics, one which has certain dangers that are implicit in any attempt to tamper with the structure of DNA and the basic genetic code, but which offers great opportunities for raising the IQ of retarded children. In charge of the experiment is Dr. James Healey, a brilliant scientist with an IQ of 165, occasionally appalled by the scenes of random stupidity that occur in any large city and people whose IQs are rock bottom at best, quarrelsome, slow to understand even the simplest things. Yet what are you going to do because the high IQs and the low IQs have to live together. Even scientists with high IQs are subject to human error, and the experiment despite every precaution goes wrong. An epidemic is unleashed and its effect is to reduce the IQ dramatically and drastically. It strikes first among the scientists and their families, then, as the epidemic reaches terrifying proportions, in the population at large. As Healey experiences the loss of his own intelligence and sees his family descending the intelligence scale, he must use every reserve of his will to force himself to find a cure, despite his increasingly lack of control over his own dimming thought process. Thus IQ 83 becomes the most dramatic shocker since THE ADROMEDA STRAIN.

T. H. Althof's THREE DAYS IN NOVEMBER carries the disaster novel to a new level of gripping suspense and terror. Despite weather warnings and the price of gas, millions of people hit the road on Thanksgiving weekend. Conditions are just right for a civilian disaster of unprecedented magnitude, it all depends on the weather. Without smooth and unobstructed pavement, a car is useless. Should you find yourself stranded during one of the worst blizzards on record, pushed beyond your limits, with no means of escape or rescue, a car can become a tomb, filled with terror and death. Should that blizzard happen on the Sunday of Thanksgiving weekend, when more than one million people are on the major Eastern Turnpike at the same time, you have the makings of the greatest disaster in American history. Once a year, every year, it's set to go, everything except for Mother Nature and her sense of timing. She's almost hit twice before as in 1954 people were plowed off the Pike with bulldozers and in 1974 the weather held around the freezing point barely avoiding a major disaster. Beware winter travelers, this could happen to you.

Patterson's 'Emily' Likely To Create Controversy

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

"I haven't persuaded the scholars I'm right," Thomas Patterson emphasized the point in discussing his play' "Emily," which will have its North Carolina premiere and its second ever production at East Carolina University beginning February 7.

Patterson, Professor Emeritus of Playwrighting at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, has based his play on the life of Emily Dickinson on a premise that will surely create considerable controversy and, as he implied, a lack of agreement by scholars and the general public that he has proof for the pudding.

"Researchers have been hunting for lovers for Emily ever since her poems were first published in 1890 four years after her death in 1886," Patterson commented. The list has included men at one time or another prominent in her life — the noted clergyman Charles Wadsworth; Otis P. Lord, her father's closest friend; and Samuel Bowles, a newspaper editor.

Patterson has by-passed these conjectured possibilities. "My research, my story has found another lover. It's incestuous. It's her brother, Austin," Patterson revealed.

"Despite Emily's being a recluse, this love was not a tragic affair. Hers was one of the most joyous lives ever lived. She wrote great poetry, but in her day sex had to be hidden. It was a touching love affair between brother and sister."

After years spent reading her poetry and all available literature on her life, Patterson feels that in the relationship he has projected, "Emily was daring enough not to give a damn about what people thought of her, but she knew the world would see into the brother part.

"That is the reason she had only seven poems published during her lifetime," Patterson said. "She could easily have had her work published, she had friends in publishing houses, and was from an influential family, but she wanted to protect Austin."

Many interpreters of the 1,775 poems Dickinson wrote in her lifetime label them, according to Patterson "as associated with the graveyard poets. But once you see through that symbolism, the grave, you see she refers to death not as real death, but as having to do with the coming to the end of a love affair. These are not morbid death poems."

Mentioning his experience as a cryptographer with the FBI in the early days of World War II, Patterson said "this experience played a part in the systemized way in which I looked for clues in Emily's work. I find Emily Dickinson a master of double meaning that is consistent throughout her poems, not coming directly to the point."

As a playwright and a teacher who taught English and later drama for a stretch of 28 years, Patterson notes "I'm not a successful playwright according to what is generally meant by that term. My plays make little money, I've had no Broadway success.

Patterson's stint with the FBI was followed by service in the Navy during World War II — as an armed guard commander on a Merchant Marine ship in the South Atlantic.

"Soon after the war," Patterson explained, "I found myself momentarily the center of attention at Yale as the winner of the 'best play of the year' award for 'American Primitive,' a play with Negro characters.

"I was 34 then, had a family, a couple of kids. I was told I had talent and a bright future, that I should go to the big city. But I knew I wouldn't want to live in or around New York City starving, waiting for the big chance.

"Anyway," he continued, "I love the campus, and long ago decided not to put my trust in playwrighting. That doesn't mean I ever stopped loving the theater, by no means. I did and I still do."

The early play, Patterson related, "got me an honorary doctorate and a writing scholarship at Stanford University that I couldn't pass up."

In the years since, Patterson has had a long involvement at Chapel Hill, including the chairmanship of the English Department. He retired from active teaching and directing in 1977.

"All those years I worked on plays now and then," Patterson said. "One of the most successful of my efforts was an outdoor drama, 'Old Four Eyes,' based on the life of Theodore Roosevelt.

"It was written as a one-shot centennial play in conjunction with the opening of the Theodore Roosevelt National Park at Medora, North Dakota. Instead of the one-time production, it went on for five years, a wonderful experience for me.

"I finally gave the play to the state of North Dakota," he said, then added, "except, of course, for the movie rights."

Another outdoor drama Patterson wrote was "The Acroma Story" for the centenial of the town of Logan, West Virginia. "That was great fun, writing a story about an Indian princess, a drama that unfolds the history of a local Indian tribe.

"It's a funny thing," he mused, "now that I don't desperately need a little extra money, royalties are coming in every year."

The East Carolina Playhouse production at the Studio Theater on campus follows the American premiere of "Emily" at Bonfils Theater, Denver, Colorado, two years ago.

"It was a pretty bad production," the playwright remarked, "but it had a remarkably good cast, with Eugenia Rawls playing Emily. One good thing about that production, I could see errors on my part, so I have rewritten lots of it for this first production in North Carolina."

Patterson maintains he's ready to accept adverse criticism, which he expects, particularly from certain circles. "There 's nothing more vicious than scholars protecting some cherished little corner," he smiled, "and I've got a feeling I've intruded some of those corners."

Local audiences will have a chance to pass their own judgement of Patterson's premise of who (if anyone) was really the man in Emily Dickinson's life. Whether it's agreement or opposition to Patterson's viewpoint, it is at least another effort to crack the enigma of the private life of the Massachusetts woman who gave America a legacy of many fine poems.

The Playhouse production of "Emily" will be presented nine evenings at 8:15 in the Studio Theater — from Feb. 7-10 and again from Feb. 12-17. Tickets are $2.50 each and can be reserved by calling the box office, telephone 757-6390 between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Captivating Story Of A Boy And His Wagon

The Do-Anything Wagon. By Rebecca Smith Fazio. Ardmore, Pa., Dorrance & Company. Hard cover, illustrated, 26 pages. $2.95.

New Bern resident Rebecca Smith Fazio, wife of a Marine, is the author of this captivating tale spun around a few hours in the energetic life of a young boy.

A book for children of ages seven to ten, it also provides good material for reading aloud to even younger children. Older persons who happen to read this little volume will respond to memories of boundless childhood energy that alas, for most of us, has disappeared.

Young Mike is obviously an only child of a farm family. His range of interests zoom from one to another thing — the hearty meals his mother makes, his dream of becoming a great hero, his delight that it's warm enough to wear his new red shorts.

Central to the story is the project Mike decides on for his day's work, building something with wood. It turns out to be a three-wheeled wagon, a red one. Mike triumphs (with help from his mother) in making a crude but workable vehicle, only to have it collapse after the first day. But heartbreak is avoided with the gift of a real, four-wheeled wagon for his birthday.

Several refreshing touches add to the charm of this story — the inclusion of old fashioned tasks like hauling wood for a kitchen stove alongside Mike's dream of moving a rocket ship to a space station. Another fine touch is the illustrations by Jim Souder. Mike's farm parents are not figures of exceeding glamor. The mother is stout, the father partially bald.

I'm intrigued by Ms. Fazio's concentration on the color red — red shorts, red apples, red wagons and wonder if youngsters will notice that too.

One minor criticism, several of the passages are overwritten, an insignificant quibble in an otherwise fast moving, adventurous book effectively projecting the basic happiness of childhood.

The Do-Anything Wagon can be ordered from the publisher, Dorrance & Company, 35 Cricket Terrace, Ardmore, Pa., 19003 for $2.95, which includes postage and handling.

BEAT THE PEAK.
IT WORKED!

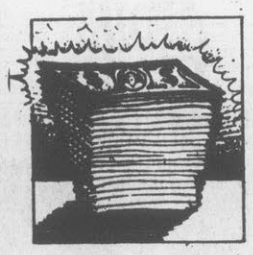
The temperature soared.

It was August 29, 1978, and the thermometer pushed past 95 degrees. Air conditioners strained and the total amount of electricity being used throughout the Greenville area climbed toward a record-breaking peak. Until our load management system, "BEAT THE PEAK," went to work.

Radio signals were sent out from Greenville Utilities' central control tower. Special switches installed on electric water heaters and central air conditioners in 2,700 Greenville area homes received the signals and briefly stopped the flow of electricity to these two appliances. But not long enough to tell the difference. Water stayed hot and air-conditioned homes stayed cool. Meanwhile, the amount of electric energy flowing through our lines and substations stayed at a lower, less costly level.



We "Beat the Peak" that day. Six megawatts of power that otherwise would have been consumed—perhaps needlessly—wasn't used during the "peak" period. Those six megawatts of power saved will yield a net savings to our community's electrical system of over $225,000. BEAT THE PEAK customer volunteers received nearly $70,000 in the form of monthly credits of up to $7.50 on their June through September utility bills. The rest of the savings will help pay for the $450,000 first-year investment in the load management equipment.

Electrical Contractors are now installing special switches in the homes of customers who volunteer to help BEAT THE PEAK. There is no charge for the installation, and no inconvenience. Just savings.

Approximately 1500 applications will be accepted for 1979 installations. Nearly 1000 applications are already on file, with additional ones being received every day. If you live in a house, apartment, duplex, or condominium and have either an electric water heater and/or a central air conditioning unit, you are eligible to participate in the program. You may apply by mailing in the attached application form, or by contacting the Energy Conservation Office at 752-7166, Extension 234. Act Now to be sure you get in on this Summers Savings.

There is one rather important, practically indisputable statement we can make about our load management program, BEAT THE PEAK:
It Works.

ECU Stuns Tech

Mack, Maynor Engineer 66-64 Overtime Upset

ATLANTA — East Carolina University jumped out to a 17-point lead early in the first half, then had to have a buzzer jumper from George Maynor at the end of overtime to claim a 66-64 win over stubborn Georgia Tech.

The Bucs hit the first 13 points of the game, but had trouble with Tech's zone defense, committing a number of turnovers which allowed the Yellow Jackets to cut the lead back and finally gain the lead late in regulation time.

Mack tied it up once more, 64-all with 1:59 left, and after Tech missed a shot, the Pirates got the rebound with 1:13 left and controlled the ball until nine seconds were left.

Following two timeouts to set up strategy, the Pirates had the ball slapped out of bounds under their own nets with four seconds left. Tech then twice called time out to set up its own plans.

But the ball was successfully thrown in to Maynor, who turned to the basket and took a 15-footer from just beside the foul line and the basketball hit only the bottom of the bucket as the horn went off.

The victory was the second in a row for the Bucs and raised their record to 8-10, while Tech fell off to 10-7. It was also their first loss at home after seven wins.

The game also marked the first time that a Pirate basketball team has beaten an Atlantic Coast Conference team, although Tech is not eligible for competition this year, having entered the league last spring.

"When you play a team like Georgia Tech at home, you can't expect them to keep on playing like they did in the first five minutes," Coach Larry Gillman said. "But they kept their composure and came back to give us a tough game."

Gillman said that when Tech hurt the Pirates the most in the first half, when they cut the lead from 17 back to as little as one just before the half, they had switched from a man-to-man to a sort of combination defense that confused the Pirates.

"They played us a man-to-man out front, but when we tried to penetrate, they dropped back into a zone. It caused us some problems, and we really didn't adjust to it until the overtime."

Gillman also had a lot of praise for Maynor, whose game-ender marked the third time this year he has scored the winning points in a tight game. "He played the second half with three fouls on him, and did a real good job. And what can you say about his shot! It was just great."

The coach said he did not think that Tech was at its best, but also added that he didn't feel that ECU was at its best either. "We had a good first ten minutes, but after that, we got a little sloppy, but came back and regained our composure when we had to have it. We played with a lot of intensity right there at the end."

The Bucs moved out early, scoring the game's first 13 points. It wasn't until 14:25 remained that Tico Brown hit for Tech's first points.

Still, the Pirates were able to extend their lead, making it as much as 17 with 9:13 left at 27-10.

But after that, Tech went into its switching defense, and the Pirates ran into turnover problems. As they mounted, the Techmen were able to cut into the margin, finally closing to within one twice in the final minutes before Krusen hit a jumper with 26 seconds left for a 33-10 halftime margin.

The Pirates warmed up again early in the second half and ran the lead back out to nine, 41-32, with 16:35 left, but could get no further out.

Tech stormed back, again taking advantage of turnovers, and finally tied it up on a three-point play by Drummer with 8:57 left, 45-45.

With 1:04 to go, Tech ran its lead out to four, 56-52, but Krusen hit and then, after getting a rebound on a bad shot by Tech, Mack scored with 40 seconds to go, knotting it at 56-56, and Tech's final shot by Lenny Horton missed.

Krusen put the Pirates ahead in overtime, but Tech retied it three times before finally getting the lead with 2:47 left. But they forced a shot, and the Pirates took advantage of it, and were able to tie it once more, then got another key rebound as Tech missed again.

That led to Maynor's shot that won it.

Tigers Spoil Heels' Chance At Top Ranking

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Billy Williams hit a baseline shot with 4:35 left to play to give Clemson the lead for good as the Tigers upset second-ranked North Carolina 66-61 in an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game Saturday night.

North Carolina entered the game with a 15-2 overall record and a 6-1 mark in the conference. The Tar Heels could have forged into the nation's No. 1 spot with a victory after Notre Dame, the top-ranked team, fell to Maryland, 67-66, earlier Saturday.

The victory raised Clemson's record to 12-5 and 2-4 in the ACC.

Williams' shot gave the Tigers a 47-46 lead which they extended to four points, 57-53, on two free throws by Bobby Conrad with 1:33 remaining. Seven of the Tigers' last nine shots came from the charity stripe.

With five seconds left, Williams put the Tigers up 65-61. A full court pass by the Tar Heels fell outer bounds and Clemson got the ball back under its own basket. Horace Wyatt sealed the victory by making the front end of a one-and-one with three seconds left to play.

Larry Nance's 21 points led the Clemson scoring and three others — Conrad, Williams and Derrick Johnson — each had 10.

Al Wood of North Carolina led all scorers with 28 points, but he was the only Tar Heel to hit double figures.

After shooting only 43.8 percent in the first half, Clemson came back with a 60 percent mark in the second half. For the game, the Tigers shot 50 percent, while the Tar Heels had a 46.8 shooting percentage.

After three ties and seven lead changes in the first half, Clemson held a 30-29 advantage at intermission.

No more than four points ever separated the teams in the first half. Clemson had that margin three times and North Carolina four times.

The Tigers jumped into a quick 4-0 lead. When Nance stole the ball and stuffed it at 7:47, Clemson was up 19-15.

Clemson also led 21-17, but the Tar Heels reeled off the next eight points — four of them by John Virgil — and their spread was 25-21 at the 3:59 mark.

However, the Tigers rallied and outsocred North Carolina 94 in the final four minutes of the period.

Pack Downs Cavs

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Forward Charles "Hawkeye" Whitney scored 27 points and 20th-ranked North Carolina State withstood a 38-point performance by Virginia's Jeff Lamp Saturday afternoon as the Wolfpack recorded their first Atlantic Coast Conference victory with an 87-67 defeat of the Cavaliers.

N.C. State improved to 13-6 overall and 1-5 in the ACC in the regionally televised matchup, while Virginia fell to 11-6 and 3-3.

Down by 10 points at intermission, Lamp fired in 22 points in the second half and led the Cavaliers on a rally that brought them within three points. But N.C. State, on the strength of Whitney's 16-point burst in the second half, bulged to the 20-point victory margin.

Virginia, which suffered the loss of five players to fouls, also missed the outside shooting of Lee Raker, who was sidelined with a muscle pull. Lamp, the ACC's leading scorer with an average of 23 points per game, shouldered the offensive burden in style before fouling out with 2:31 left in the game.

Kendal "Tiny" Pinder scored 13 points and Clyde Austin and Kenny Matthews each contributed 10 points for N.C. State. Virginia's only other player in double figures was Mike Owens with 11 points.

Pinder had a game-high 13 rebounds for N.C. State, which outrebounded the Cavaliers 52-29.

Buck Williams takes rebound from Bill Laimbeer

Terrapins Shock Notre Dame

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Notre Dame wasn't surprised by Maryland's last second strategy, but the play worked to perfection, setting up a three-pointer by Larry Gibson which gave the Terps a 67-66 upset victory over the top-ranked Irish Saturday.

With five seconds left in the nationally televised game, the Terps brought the ball inbounds to Greg Manning, who fed Gibson in the lane. The 6-foot-9 center tied the score with a field goal and then, after being fouled by Bruce Flowers, dropped in the winning free throw with one second remaining.

Manning was not in the lineup when Maryland first brought the ball in with 11 seconds left, but he was inserted for the last play.

"Manning was one of the options on the last play," Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell said. "If he has the jump shot, take it. If not, penetrate and take the shot, or hand off. It could not have worked better, but I didn't think we would get a three-point play."

Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps said: "We had the last play figured out during the timeout. We knew Manning would get the ball. It was the same play they ran against North Carolina. We went over and over it and diagrammed it, but we just had a breakdown."

Gibson said he went toward the basket when he saw Notre Dame sagging on Manning along the baseline. "I was looking for a pass, or a rebound if he missed the shot."

Gibson said he was not bothered by the foul by Flowers because "Coach Driesell hits me harder than that in practice." As for his free throw, which came after two Notre Dame timeouts, Gibson said: "It was just a regular free throw. I tried to think of it like that and shoot it that way."

The Terps, 14-5, blew a 12-point lead in the second half, with Notre Dame taking the lead for the first time at 64-62 during a 9-0 streak.

Two free throws by the senior center cut Notre Dame's margin to 66-64 with 1:26 left, and Notre Dame controlled the ball until Stan Wilcox was fouled with 15 seconds to play.

But Wilcox, who converted a 1-and-1 foul situation for Notre Dame's final points, missed his first attempt this time and Buck Williams grabbed the rebound for Maryland.

After two time outs, the last with five seconds left, Greg Manning drove into the lane and fed Gibson who dropped in a bank shot while being fouled by Wilcox, Notre Dame, 12-2 after having seven-game winning streak snapped, called a couple of time outs to rattle Gibson, but he calmly sank the winning point.

Ernie Graham scored 28 points, many from long range, to lead Maryland, which lost to No. 2 North Carolina last Saturday by one point.

Tracy Jackson came off the bench to pace Notre Dame with 16 points. Kelly Tripuka had 12, while Orlando Woolridge and Bruce Flowers scored 10 apiece.

Gibson had hit only three of 11 shots from the floor before sinking his game winner. His last field goal had come during the first two minutes of the second half.

Graham connected on 13 of 23 shots, although he missed twice during a Maryland shooting drought which enabled Notre Dame to run off its nine-point string and take the lead.

Trailing 62-57, the Irish pulled even on a field goal by Woolridge, a free throw by Tripucka and another field goal by Jackson.

Zoeller Comes From Nowhere To Lead San Diego

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Fuzzy Zoeller, one of golf's more happy-go-lucky guys, came from 5 shots off the pace with a 67 and established a 2-shot lead over chipper Jerry McGee Saturday in the third round of the $250,000 Andy Williams-San Diego Open.

McGee, who blew a 2-stroke advantage with a 74, said he was "lucky to be where I am" after his struggling effort and then looked ahead to Sunday's final round.

"Fuzzy hasn't won yet, so he's gonna be nervous," McGee said, then giggled.

"But then, maybe he won't be. As goofy as Fuzzy is, he just might not be nervous at all. He's a character. You can't tell about him.

"He might not even show up."

That, however, seemed unlikely.

"I'm gonna try my damnedest," said the free spirit Zoeller.

The hard-hitting Zoeller, winner of more than $100,000 last year but still seeking his first PGA Tour title, had a 54-hole total of 210, 6 shots under par on the 7,047-yard South course at the Torrey Pines Country Club.

"Winning is just a happening," said Zoeller. "It hasn't happened yet. Maybe this is the one. I'm gonna try my damnedest."

He birdied four times in a stretch of five holes to take the lead, then stretched the advantage to 2 shots with a two-putt birdie 4 on the final hole.

McGee, the second-round leader, slipped to a 74 in the bright, sunny weather that bathed the cliffs and crags of the oceanside course. He takes a 212 total into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $45,000 first prize.

Billy Casper, a 47-year-old veteran, Gil Morgan and Bill Kratzert were another stroke back at 213. Casper shot a 69, Kratzert 71 and Morgan 72.

Seven more players, including Lee Trevino, were at 214. That left 12 men within 4 strokes of the top spot going into the final 18 holes.

In addition to Trevino, those at 2 strokes under par were Tom Purtzer, Victor Regalado, Leonard Thompson, Grier Jones, Jerry Pate and Tommy Aaron. Aaron, the first round leader, slipped to a 75. Trevino, Purtzer and Regalado had 70s. Thompson shot a 71 and Jones matched par 72. Pate had a 15-foot eagle putt on the 18th hole, but three-putted for par and a 72.

Tom Watson, the Player of the Year the last two seasons, shot 72-216 in this, his first tournament of 1979.

Zoeller, 27, who has gained a reputation as one of golf's longest hitters, used his length to an advantage on the final hole, a 501-yard par 5. He was in the fringe in two strokes, putted up to about three feet and tapped that one in for the birdie that put him 2 shots in front of the field.

"It's kind of a surprise," he said. "I didn't expect to shoot 67 in only my second week out of the Indiana snow." He paused for a while as if in deep thought and then, straight-faced as could be, said: "I think, however, I'll take it anyhow."

He scored from about 15 feet on the second hole, missed the green and bogeyed the fourth, then got back to even par for the day with another 15-foot birdie putt on the eighth hole.

He two-putted for birdie-4 on the next, needed only an 18-inch putt after a 4-iron shot on the 11th and birdied the 12th from 10 feet.

McGee had difficulties off the tee and trouble with the varying speed of the greens.

"I'm kind of elated," he said despite the loss of his lead. "I'm lucky to get in with a round like I had and still be just a couple of shots back. There should have been some good scores today. The conditions were perfect. I don't know why no one made a real charge except Fuzzy.

"I'm lucky to be where I am."

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Marty Bodnar's layin at the buzzer after a steal by Tom Staton gave Michigan a 56-54 Big Ten basketball victory over eighth-ranked Illinois Saturday.

Staton stripped the ball from Illinois guard Rob Judson with three seconds to go and slipped a pass to Bodnar to complete the winning play.

Michigan had missed a chance to go ahead with nine seconds left when Phil Hubbard missed a free throw. Illinois center Derek Holcomb grabbed the rebound on Hubbard's missed shot and threw an outlet pass to Judson who was met at mid-court by Staton.

Ohio St. 66, Indiana 63

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Carter Scott scored seven points in overtime Saturday night, lifting 10th-ranked Ohio State to a 66-63 victory over Indiana that kept the Buckeyes undefeated in Big Ten Basketball play.

The Buckeyes, scoring their eighth straight conference victory, came back from a ninepoint deficit in the last two minutes of regulation to force the overtime.

Scott, a 6-foot-2 sophomore forward, sank all three of his field goal attempts and one of two foul shots in the overtime and wound up with 19 points.

S. Carolina 62, W&M 54

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — A three-point play by Mike Doyle with 14 minutes left gave South Carolina a six-point lead and the Gamecocks went on Saturday to a 62-54 basketball victory over William & Mary's Indians.

South Carolina built its margin to 38-28 and the deliberate Indians, who had trailed 19-18 at intermission, never got closer than five points.

UNC-C 80, S. Florida 62

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Chad Kinch scored a game-high 22 points and Kevin King added 17 to pace North Carolina-Charlotte to an 80-62 Sun Belt Conference victory over South Florida on Saturday.

The loss dropped the Spartans to 4-4 in the Big Ten while Northwestern gave Coach Rich Falk his first conference triumph after seven losses.

The game was close through the first 12 minutes and was tied seven times, the last time at 14-14. Roberson then hit a layup to put the Wildcats in front to stay.

Northwestern opened a 39-29 halftime lead as the Spartans' leading scorer, Greg Kelser, failed to make a point in the first half. He was held to six points for the game after averaging 17.5.

Purdue 73, Wisconsin 60

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Purdue's Joe Barry Carroll scored 25 points Saturday, including nine during a second-half surge that cut off a frantic Wisconsin rally, as the Boilermakers beat the Badgers 73-60 in a regionally televised Big Ten basketball game.

The Boilermakers led the entire game, building leads to 21 points early in the second half before Wisconsin rallied behind Claude Gregory, who hit five straight baskets that chopped the Purdue lead to eight, 51-43.

Carroll, Purdue's 7-foot-1 center who had only 11 points at halftime, then scored for the Boilermakers, but consecutive baskets by Dan Hastings and Larry Petty brought the Badgers within six and a pair of baskets by Joe Chrnelich sliced the lead to four, 55-51, before Carroll went to work.

Mississippi 65, Tenn. 64

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — John Stroud hit all seven of his second half field goal attempts and finished with 25 points to lead Mississippi to a 65-64 Southeastern conference basketball victory Saturday over Tennessee.

Reggie Johnson, who paced the Vols with 22 in the regionally televised contest, was the only Tennessee player to score in the first 12:37 of the game as he hit nine of 13 from the field.

Connors, Ashe Move Into Indoor Finals

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Arthur Ashe and Jimmy Connors advanced to the final of the U.S. Pro Indoor Tennis tournament Saturday in matches as different as their styles.

The taciturn Ashe lost the first two sets to Vitas Gerulaitis and then rallied to beat the player 11 years his junior 1-6, 4-6, 7-6, 6-4, 6-4 in a five-set marathon.

Connors, on the other hand, bantered with the crowd and pantomined his mistakes, but beat rocket-serving Roscoe Tanner without too much struggle 6-3, 6-3, 3-6, 6-1.

Ashe and Connors meet Sunday for the $40,000 first prize. Connors seeks his third title here, and Ashe his second, if you count something played in 1967 on a high school court. Ashe was still an amateur, and the prize money barely covered expenses.

In the third set, Gerulaitis broke Ashe's service in the third game and merely had to hold service to complete the match and reach Sunday's final round for a $40,000 first prize.

But Ashe, whose first serve had deserted him, evened the set at 5-5 by breaking Gerulaitis with a crosscourt backhand passing shot. Ashe held service to force the set into a tie breaker, which he won 7-4.

The sudden turnaround appeared to inspire Ashe, who missed the entire 1977 tennis season with an injury and came back last year to earn almost $200,000 and regain top-20 ranking.

The 6-foot-1 Ashe broke Gerulaitis in the ninth game of the fourth set, the winning point coming when Gerulaitis drove over the baseline. Ashe then held his serve to win the set 6-4, and even the match at two sets apiece.

Ashe broke Gerulaitis in the first game of the fifth set of the 3-hour and 30-minute match and then held service to complete his stirring comeback. He won on a second match point, when Gerulaitis netted a backhand return of service. Ashe won the final game 9-7.

For the fourth-seeded Gerulaitis, it was the sixth time in seven meetings with Ashe, dating to 1973, that he lost. His only victory over Ashe was in the fourth round at Wimbleton in 1976, the last time the two played.

Gerulaitis, who last year won $425,845, was steadier in the back court in the first two sets. He was more accurate on first serves.

The 10th-seeded Ashe appeared to lack the consistency and power that featured his play earlier in the week-long tournament.

In the first set, Gerulaitis broke Ashe's service in the fourth game, highlighted by two slams off lobs by the pressured Ashe. Gerulaitis broke again in game six, winning four of the six-point games.

Gerulaitis took the second set despite being penalized a point in game two that lost his service. The penalty was assessed after Gerulaitis hit a ball into the stands behind him in anger at himself for a poor shot.

But the 6-foot Gerulaitis, a native New Yorker, came right back to break Ashe in the third game. He held service, and then broke through again in the fifth game with a placement drive along the line. He went on to take the set 6-4.

Young Loses By Decision

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Osvaldo Ocasio of Puerto Rico won a unanimous decision over veteran Jimmy Young of Philadelphia Saturday in a 10-round heavyweight fight. The win may have earned Ocasio a chance to face World Boxing Council champion Larry Holmes in March.

The 21-year-old Ocasio took charge of the bout in the third round, opened a cut inside Young's left eye in the sixth and opened another cut almost between the eyes in the ninth round.

As the final seconds of the fight ticked off, Ocasio knew that he had won the bout and started waving his hands victoriously.

The two judges and the referee gave Ocasio the fight with the same score, 97-95.

Lady Pirates Rout Longwood

East Carolina's women's basketball team beat Longwood College 82-42 last night.

The Pirates, paced by Rosie Thompson with 23 points, hit 53 per cent of their first half shots as they rolled to a 52-20 halftime edge. They were 44.3 per cent from the field for the game.

Lydia Roundtree had 18 points for ECU, while Marcia Girven rounded out the double figures scorers with 16. Thompson was the top rebounder with 13 caroms.

"We were very pleased with this win," Pirate coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "We saw them play earlier this year against Louisburg College in a close game."

Longwood was led by guards Melissa Wiggins and Cindy Landon with 10 points each.

"Our defense did a super job," said Andruzzi. "We were playing two types of zones. Everybody played a good game."

Colts To L.A.?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Baltimore Colts' owner Robert Irsay met with Los Angeles Coliseum officials Saturday to discuss the possibility of moving his National Football League team to Los Angeles in 1980.

Irsay also said he has had preliminary discussions with officials in other cities seeking an NFL franchise. But he declined to identity the other cities or give any details.

The Los Angeles Rams have signed a contract to play at Anaheim Stadium, about 30 miles from the Coliseum, after their lease at the Los Angeles stadium ends this year.

"I would prefer to stay in Baltimore," Irsay said. But he told of long-standing disatisfaction with the conditions at Memorial Stadium, and he said he has met with zoning problems over his plan to build a Colts' practice and office facility in nearby Towson, Md.

"I am encouraged by what appears to be obvious sincerity on Mr. Irsay's part," said William Robertson, the Coliseum Commission's chief negotiator in efforts to obtain another NFL franchise by 1980.

ECU Wins

34.2 percent. The Bucs also dominated the boards, getting 35 rebounds to 31 for Tech.

Mack led the Pirates in scoring with 25, giving him 1,026 for his career, moving him past Larry Hunt into 11th place in ECU history. He next chases, Jim Fairley, who has 1,031.

The only bad part of the Pirate game was turnovers, where Tech only had three and ECU had 15.

ECU returns home to face William&Mary on Tuesday, and Gillman said the Pirates will have no trouble in getting up for that one. W&M handed the Pirates a 60-54 defeat in their first meeting.

EFFICIENT HEATING—The Craft Stove is a designed heating system to use the oldest, least expensive and most available fuels in the world, which are wood and coal. The slow efficient burning will utilize up to 80 percent of the energy available in a piece of wood, where conventional fireplaces use only about 10 percent. The Craft Stove requires only two or three wood fills a day. With a Craft Stove in your home you can save up to 80 percent of your energy bill.

CONTROLLED HEAT EXTRACTION—Located in the rear of the stove is an electric blower which pushes 148 to 470 cubic feet of air per minute through hot air chambers. The blower is controlled by a built-in automatic thermostat, which will turn the blower on when the temperature reaches 120 degrees. The blower pulls cool air in and routes it through a baffle system, against the inside wall, obtaining the heat off the firebox wall releasing hot air into the room. This creates a push-pull air movement completely through the house. There should never be over an 8 to 10 degrees difference in temperature in the various rooms in the house with the inside doors open.

CONSTRUCTION—The Craft Stove is constructed of the highest quality fire box steel made to specifications of National Steelcrafters, Inc. with fire brick for protection. ¼ inch cast doors of the highest quality. The Craft Stove is factory built with one man on one stove for greater controlled quality.

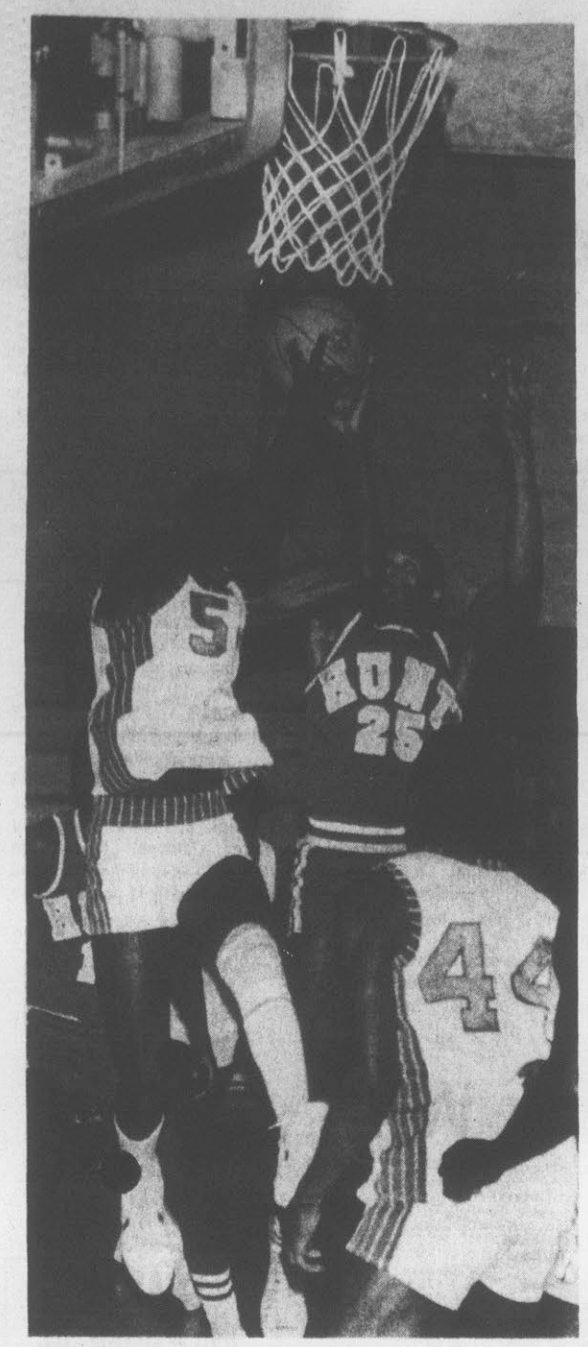
Adams' Jumper Kills Hunt Hopes



Pulling It Down

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

If it weren't for bad luck, the Hunt High basketball team would have no luck at all.

Rose High tried its best to give the winless Warriors their first victory Friday night, but the visitors just couldn't hang on to it. Despite getting the ball twice with the lead in the last 30 seconds, Hunt dropped its 16th consecutive game as Rampant Jamie Adams canned a 15-footer at the buzzer for a 51-50 Rose victory.

The Warriors scored only two points in the entire fourth quarter, a period Dean Smith would have been proud of since both teams used the four corners offense at one time or another.

Hunt entered the frame with a 48-44 lead that was quickly cut to 48-46 when Rampant Derwin Clemons popped in a jumper from the right side.

The Warriors went to their stall offense on the next trip down the floor, but missed a pair of shots and the Rampants pulled the rebound after the second one. Dennis Ross tied the game with 6:03 left.

Another missed shot by Hunt was rebounded by Rose and the Rampants went into a freeze of their own with 5:20 showing. They ran the clock down to the 3:18 mark before Hunt came out of its 2-3 zone and went into a man-to-man defense.

Wallace Brown gave the Rampants a 49-48 lead, their first in the second half, when he hit the second of a two-shot foul with 2:54 showing. Rose got the ball back after another missed Warrior shot, but missed an opportunity from the line at the 2:26 mark and Hunt took control.

From then on, it was a question of who could give the game away. After an exchange of turnovers, David Mitchell hit from the key to put the Warriors in the lead. Rose was then called for traveling and charging within five seconds, and the Rampants fouled Dwight Taylor with eight seconds left.

He missed his free throw and John Sheppard grabbed the rebound. Rose moved the ball downcourt and got it to Adams at the left of the foul line. He put up a jumper with two seconds left that gave the Rampants their fifth Division I win in eight tries.

"It was a good one," an exhausted Jim Brewington said after the game. Just moments before he had been less than pleased with his team's play, but he had to be happy with the victory.

And there was also a bit of sympathy for Hunt, a school in its first year of operation. "I feel sorry for those boys," Brewington said. "They've been playing like that all year. They're the best 0-16 team I've seen." The Rampants defeated Hunt by one point earlier in the season.

"I was glad to see our kids win a close ballgame," the coach said. "I thought we played real good. Against some other teams, it probably wouldn't have been that close."

The game was close nearly the entire way, especially in the first half when the lead changed hands eight times.

Hunt, getting numerous points on fast breaks, was up by four at the half and built that lead to six in the third period before Rose, with the outside shooting of Ross and Wallace Brown, began to come back.

"We had a new hero tonight," Brewington said of Adams, who came off the bench to score eight points, including the winning bucket. "He substituted for Calvin (Whichard) and did a real good job. I thought our kids that came off the bench did real well."

Ross was the only Rampant in double figures with 14, while Dwight Taylor led Hunt with 19 and teammate David Mitchell added 10.

Rose was 25-55 from the field, 45.5 per cent, while Hunt was 21-46, 45.7 per cent. The Rampants held a 34-29 rebounding advantage.

Rose also got a victory in the girls' game, though it wasn't nearly as close. The Rampettes defeated the Lady Warriors 57-48.

Rose held a narrow 28-27 lead at halftime of the game, but outscored Hunt 14-6 in the third quarter and held on to win.

Rampette coach Robert Carraway said, "I thought the key was holding them to six points in the third quarter. As I team, I really didn't think we played that well, but we played well individually."

Carraway praised the efforts of Kathy Streeter, who had 26 points, Donna Cullipher with 13 and Margaret McGlohon with 12.

The Rampette total was one of the highest all season and Carraway commented, "I was surprised we scored that many points because I didn't think we played that well. But Streeter played tremendous."

Terry Taylor led Hunt with 20 points and Cynthia Tyson added 10.

Pirate Swimmers Easily Top Seahawks

The host team took 10 of 13 first places, with Jack Clowar and Tom Bell each winning two events. Clowar won the 100 free in 48.11 seconds and the 200 free in 1:45.22. Bell took both the one-meter and three-meter diving events.

In women's competition, Cindy Sailor was a triple individual winner, and Lucy Weckerling set a new varsity record in the 50 backstroke, to lead the Lady Pirates swimmers to a 65-44 win over the Seahawks.

Sailor won the 50 butterfly in 28.34 seconds, the 100 butterfly in 1:02.38 and the 50 freestyle in 26.23. Weckerling's winning and record time in the 50 backstroke was 32.17 seconds.

Coach Ray Scharf was pleased with his team's performance and felt that UNC-Wilmington gave his swimmers good competition.

"This was a good meet to prepare us for Tuesday's meet with N. C. State. UNC-Wilmington gave us much more competition than Richmond did last week.'

"Our kids are tired right now," Scharf continued, "but we swam people out of their events today and they did very well overall. The women turned in good performances, breaking one varsity record and coming close in a couple of others."

East Carolina goes into competition again on Jan. 30 at N. C. State. They enter the meet with a 4-2 mark against a very strong Wolfpack.

ECU Gymnasts Split; Host Madison Today

East Carolina's women's gymnastics team will host Madison at 1 p.m. today in the Bucs' third meet in as many days. The Pirates split two meets Friday and Saturday.

Radford used a strong team effort to surge past the Pirates Friday night and capture a 114.7-100.9 victory at Radford, Va. The Highlanders swept all four events and the all-around competition.

In an exciting meet here yesterday, the Lady Bucs came back to defeat Longwood by an ultra-slim 111.875-111.65 margin. It was ECU's first win over the Lancers.

The highest places won by ECU Friday night were a tie for third in vaulting by Elizabeth Jackson at 8.3, a fourth by Susan McKnight in the floor exercise at 7.1 and a tie for fourth in the all-around by McKnight at 26.3.

Phyllis Nelson was fifth on the uneven bars against the Highlanders with a score of 5.4, the same spot earned by Carol Layton on the balance beam at 6.4.

The Pirates took two second places in individual events Saturday with Ruth Kearns scoring 7.75 on the balance beam and McKnight scoring 8.55 in the floor exercise.

Jackson was third in vaulting with a 7.1 mark, while McKnight was third on the uneven bars at 6.8 and Layton was third in the floor exercise at 8.15. Jackson also had a fourth place in the floor exercise with an 8.1 score.

In all-around competition against the Lancers, McKnight scored 28.40, a regional qualifying score, to take second. The Pirates also took third, fourth and fifth in the all-around.

East Carolina takes a 4-3 record into today's meet. The Duchesses of Madision are the reigning Virginia champions and annually field a strong squad. The Pirates have never beaten Madision in dual competition.

Conley was held scoreless in the first quarter as North Pitt got out to a 13-0 lead and held a 22-9 halftime margin.

But the Valkyries held the Pant-HERS without a point in the third quarter to take the lead and they went on to win by a margin of 10 points.

Suit Over T-Shirts

PITTSBURGH (AP) — In the aftermath of the Pittsburgh Steelers' Super Bowl victory comes a civic celebration and a lawsuit over T-shirts.

At the celebration, set for Feb. 2 in Market Square, the Steelers will present their Super Bowl trophy to Mayor Richard Caliguiri. The trophy will be placed on display at the city-county building.

On another front, the team has gone to Allegheny County Court with a suit against a clothing store for allegedly selling "unauthorized" Steelers T-shirts.

Kings Blast Bullets, 142-128

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

After you score 128 points and lose by 14, after three players combine for 105 points against your team, after two of your most potent weapons are held to a combined 20 points, you say things like:

"They cause us problems."

Those gems of wisdom came from Washington Bullets Coach Dick Motta Friday night after his team lost 142-128 to the Kansas City Kings in a battle of National Basketball Association division leaders.

Otis Birdsong scored 39 points and Phil Ford and Scott Wedman each had 33 as the Midwest Divison-leading Kings rolled up their biggest point total since Jan. 5, 1971, when they were the Cincinnati Royals.

At the same time, Kansas City nullified the scoring power of Washington's two big men, Wes Unseld (9 points) and Mitch Kupchak (11).

The NBA schedule Friday night also matched the other two divison leaders. San Antonio, on top of the Central Division, whipped the Pacific Divison-leading Seattle SuperSonics 125-108.

Spurs 125, Sonics 108

San Antonio never trailed in beating Seattle behind George Gervin's 34 points. James Silas and Larry Kenon each added 20 points for San Antonio, and center Billy Paultz scored 18.

Nets 110, Jazz 104

John Williamson came off the bench to score 25 points and help New Jersey hold off New Orleans with several key baskets in the late going as the Nets won only their fifth game in the past 15.

Pacers 119, Celtics 106

Johnny Davis had 28 points to lead four Pacers with 22 points or more, and Indiana's defense held Boston scoreless for nearly five minutes in the first quarter.

Clippers 107, Bulls 91

Lloyd Free scored 28 points to lead San Diego to its third consecutive victory and a fourgame sweep of the season series with Chicago.

Nuggets 119, Lakers 107

David Thompson scored 32 points, including six slam dunks, and helped a third-period Denver rally as the Nuggets broke a three-game losing streak.

Suns 108, Knicks 107

Walter Davis led a balanced Phoenix scoring attack with 24 points, and the Suns short-circuited a New York rally that fell only seconds short.

76ers 105, Warriors 96

Philadelphia got off to a 30-16 lead after one period, behind the 10 points and eight rebounds of center Caldwell Jones, and cruised to an easy victory. Jones wound up with 17 points and 19 rebounds.

Watson Not Satisfied

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Tom Watson took a long look into the future and saw what he wants.

"My goal is that when I'm through playing, my peers, the other players, can say, 'That Tom Watson, he was a one hell of a player.'"

He paused a moment and then, very softly — with surprising emotion — said:

"That's what I want."

Most critics would say he's reached that goal. There are very few — if any — touring golf pros who would hesitate to say that Tom Watson is, indeed, "one hell of a player."

His credentials, his claim to that position, are all in order.

Last year he set a single-season money-winning record with $362,429. He won the coveted Vardon Trophy for the Tour's low stroke average for the second consecutive year. He was named Player of the Year for a second time and became the first man to sweep those honors two years in a row.

Over the last two seasons he's won 10 times, including the Masters and a second British Open.

And he is considerably less than satisfied.

"My standard of play is not excellent," he said. "Far from it."

But doesn't his performace make him golf's No. 1 player?

Uncharacteristically, he skirted the question. But his answer was significant of the standards and goals the thoughtful, intelligent Watson has set for himself.

"I'm not the best of all time," he replied.

But he's working toward it. He's seriously, consciously, devotedly working toward it. At the same time, he's attempting to keep his priorities in order.

"At the risk of sounding trite, it's still only a game," he said. "It's rare in most people's lives that they can find something they love, something they do well but can do better, something at which they can make a damn good living with very little sacrifice."

But some sacrifices, some difficult decision may await Watson. He and wife Linda, each 29, recently purchased a home in Kansas City, Kan. They're considering starting a family.

"I know what when I have a little boy or a little girl, I'll be a different Tom Watson," he said. "There will be some tough decisions to make. It's like a traveling salesman. When he starts to have a family, does he love the family enough to give up the job?"

And, at that point, he took note of the trimmed-down tour schedule planned by Jack Nicklaus, the man who has dominated the game so long. Nicklaus has been the object of considerable criticism over his announced plans to play only about a dozen tournaments a year.

"He's been out here 18 years," Watson said of the man he's challenging for golf's premier position. "He's paid his dues.

"Right now, his family is No. 1."

Right now, Tom Watson's golf swing is No. 1. "I'm obsessed with it," he said.

That obsession has led him into long practice sessions with Byron Nelson, a longtime friend and mentor and, according to Watson, "maybe the best of them all."

He had a recent session with Nelson in Dallas before opening his 1979 campaign in the San Diego Open.

"Byron's always kidding me," Watson said. "'You want too much,' he'll say. 'I'm not knocking this search for perfection, but you want too much.'"

And Watson, quite obviously, is searching for perfection. "There's always room for improvement," he said.

"It's only a game, but I love it and I'm serious about it. I want to perform my best.

Carew Fight Goes On

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — The fight for the services of Minnesota Twins first baseman Rod Carew goes on between the California Angels and New York Yankees.

But the Angels appear to be getting more cautious about mortgaging their future and the Yankees failed to deliver Friday what Twins' owner Calvin Griffith considered a firm offer as they said they would.

California General Manager Buzzie Bavasi said he would not "ruin the future" of his club by trading third baseman Carney Lansford and pitcher Chris Knapp, two players the Twins say must be included in any deal.

"We ... feel these youngsters represent the future of the California Angels," Bavasi said. "We simply are not in a position to part with these players at this time. We just can't do it. The asking price is too high."

Bavasi left the door open, however, saying, "This does not mean we are severing negotiations with the Twins."

Carew, a seven-time American League batting champion, has stated repeatedly that the Angels are his first choice if he is to be traded. The 33-year old Carew came to terms with California last week on a $4 million, five-year contract, but Griffith refused to accept the Angels' offer, which did not include Lansford or Knapp.

He said Thursday night that he would trade Carew by the start of spring training, and Carew also issued a Feb. 10 deadline for any trade.

Thompson Stays On Top Of Heap

East Carolina's Rosie Thompson continues to lead the state's Division I women basketball players and has regained the leadership in rebounding in the current statistics released by the North Carolina Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women.

Thompson has a scoring average of 25.1 points per game to place her in front of Jayne Arledge of Western Carolina at 23.4. She also leads in rebounding with 12.4 takedowns per game, while teammate Marcia Girven is third with a 10.6 average. Duke's Bark Krause falls between the two with a 12.2 average.

Gale Kerbaugh of the Pirates maintains an average of 13.8 points per game, while Lydia Roundtree maintains a 12.1-point mark. Marcia Girven has a 10.7 average and Lynne Emerson is at 8.8.

Carol Almond of Appalachian State tops the state in assists with 6.1 per game, while reserve center June Doby of N. C. State is the top shooter from the floor, making 61.2 per cent of her shots. Thompson is the free throw leader, hitting 75.8 per cent from the line.

In the overall team standings, N. C. State is on top with a 6-0 league record and is the top scoring team with 89.4 points per game. The Wolfpack also leads the state in field goal accuracy with 52.7 per cent and free throw accuracy at 69.9 per cent.

East Carolina is third in the team standings with a 5-2 league mark. The Pirates have a free throw accuracy ratio of 66.7 and their scoring margin is 13.0. The ECU rebounding average of 48.5 per game is first in the state.

Tankers Ranked

The freestyle events are the Pirates' strongest; they own the top positions in all six events. The 400-yard freestyle relay time of 3:04.89 placed John Tudor, Jack Clowar, Bill Fehling and Ted Nieman first.

Individually, other number one positions held by East Carolina swimmers include the 200-yard freestyle and 100-yard freestyle spots maintained by Tudor with times of 1:39.24 and :48.51, respectively. Tudor also owns the second spot in the 50-yard freestyle.

Nieman holds the first position in the 500-yard freestyle at 4:38.52 and the second spot in the 200-yard freestyle.

Clowar kept a hold on the top ranking in the 200-yard individual medley with a time of 1:55.54. This ranking is the only top position that an East Carolina swimmer holds in an event other than freestyle.

The East Carolina team of David Moodie, Dan Newhaller, Clowar and Fehling continues to hold the number seven position in medley relay.

If you heat your home with electricity, oil, or gas, you already know what kind of bills you're going to face this winter.

The Amazing Buck Stove.

The amout you save depends on a number of factors, but based on actual records Buck Stove owners report savings of between 50% and 80% on their heating bills.

(And when you consider that wood produces heat for about 1/5 the cost of electricity, and 1/3 less than the cost of oil,* it's not hard to see why.)

It heats your whole house. Evenly. Thanks to a thermostatically-controlled Heat Extraction System that forces air through the stove at the rate of 140 to 465 cubic feet per minute, The Buck Stove is truly a whole house heating system.

In fact, even in rooms relatively far removed from your stove, the temperature difference may be as little as 10%.

It doesn't go out when you do. Because the Buck Stove burns very efficiently (extracting up to 80% of the available energy from a piece of wood), a single fire will burn from 6 to 12 hours, without any attention from you. It's safe. The Buck Stove meets or exceeds all safety standards set by The National Fire Protection Association.

	Heating Capacity	H	W	D
Regular Buck	2500 sq. ft.	26"	32"	16"
Super Buck	3600 sq. ft.	28"	42"	20"

We recommend that your fireplace be approximately four inches wider than the Buck Stove you select.

Buck Stoves come in fireplace or free-standing models, recommended for areas as small as 1800 square feet, and as large as 3600 square feet.

Knoetze Ruling Feb. 12

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — South African boxer Kallie Knoetze must wait until at least next month for the outcome of his visa bout with the State Department before he can step into a U.S. ring with former heavyweight champion Leon Spinks.

At a Friday hearing here, U.S. District Judge Norman C. Roettger said he will rule after Feb. 12 on whether the State Department should be able to revoke Knoetze's visa because of a 1977 obstruction of justice conviction in South Africa. If Roettger rules against Knoetze, the boxer could face permanent exclusion from this country.

Roettger said the delay gives the defense time to produce an expert witness.

However, defense attorney Michael J. Ryan said his clients had hoped for an earlier conclusion of the case because of negotiations for the Spinks fight. Ryan said Knoetze's agents needed a decision next week to let Bob Arum, Spinks' agent, know whether an early-May fight was possible.

Arum, head of Top Rank Inc., said from New York that the delay "may cost him (Knoetze) a chance to fight Spinks in the United States."

Arum said negotiations have been going on for a Spinks-Knoetze fight and a fight between South African Gerry Coetze and the winner of the John Tate-Duane Bobick fight.

However, Arum said the fights could conceivably take place in South Africa if Knoetze is banned from the United States.

WHEAT SWAMP — North Lenoir held Ayden-Grifton to just five points in the second quarter and was able to come from behind to defeat the Chargers 62-55 Friday night.

Ayden-Grifton blistered the cords for 20 points in the opening period and led 20-16 going into the second quarter. But the Hawks outscored them 13-5 in that period for a 29-25 lead that they made stand up in the second half.

Both teams sported balanced attacks in the game. Amos Pearcill and Randy Johnson each scored 14 points for the winners, while teammate Eugene Connors added 13. The Chargers were led by Henry Ormond and Mike Hardee with 14 each and Sheldon McCarter with 11.

The Ayden-Grifton girls continued their winning ways in the preliminary to the boys' game by defeating the Lady Hawks 58-47.

Fullilove Cagers Win On Late Shot

He dribbled downcourt for a layup and missed, but Edgar Lloyd got the rebound and hit a follow shot with two seconds on the clock for the Fullilove win.

Danny Carmon led all scorers with 16 points for Fullilove, while Jones scored 12 and Lloyd 11. Marshall Crumpler and Sammy Harris each had 11 for the Knights, while Steve Tyburski added 10.

Yank Workouts Begin

NEW YORK (AP) — Everything seemed the same in the New York Yankees' clubhouse. Outfielder Paul Blair kept up his usual steady chatter as he changed into his work clothes. First baseman Chris Chambliss, a cutoff sweatshirt baring massive, powerful arms, fiddled with a bat.

Across the famous room with the curious purple carpeting, second baseman Willie Randolph prepared for another day at Yankee Stadium, as did coaches Yogi Berra and Elston Howard and shortstop Bucky Dent.

Another normal day at the ballpark — normal but for the fact that a perfect white blanket of snow had covered the abandoned playing field this January morning and spring training was more than a month away.

This was pre-spring training, a voluntary exercise program available to any of the Yankees who reside year-round in the metropolitan area.

"This program has several objectives," said trainer Gene Monahan. "It rehabilitates injuries and rejuvenates bodies; it makes spring training lighter and less traumatic; it helps build strength, flexibility, endurance and power."

That's why, on this January day, nearly a dozen Yankees would strain at the complicated exercise machines, grunting in a spacious storeroom down the hall from the main cage at the "Bronx Zoo."

"I'm getting too old for this stuff," said Howard, puffing slightly after the sequence of exercises at the seven Nautilus machines the Yankees had installed years ago.

At the side of the room stood Randolph, assuming his stance with a weighted bat, waiting for a fastball from some imagined hurler. Down the hall, at the indoor batting cage, catching prospect Dominic Scala smacked some line drives off the ever-cooperative pitching machine.

A bearded Reggie Jackson strode in late one afternoon and said, "I want to hit." Though most of the Stadium personnel had gone home, someone was found to feed the machine...and Reggie Jackson hit.

"Give me 12 of those," said Monahan, speaking as Chambliss positioned himself on one of the exercise machines. Chambliss gave Monahan 12 and moved on to the next test. So it would be with the rest of the players who came to work that morning — with an eight-month season just around the corner.

"Most clubs are beginning to get the idea of how good this is," said Blair, just days away from his 35th birthday. "The guys are getting better muscle tone, and that will cut down on injuries.

Cazzie Russell Bitter At NBA

GREAT FALLS, Mont. (AP) — Unlike his teammates, Cazzie Russell doesn't have his name on the uniform he now wears for the Montana Sky of the upstart Western Basketball Association.

Perhaps it's because the former National Basketball Association all-star doesn't plan on sticking around for long.

The 34-year-old veteran of 12 NBA seasons, a victim of age and growing frustration, admits he might be playing his last pro season.

The age problem Russell explains freely:

"In professional basketball, you take out one-year leases. I've just been lucky enough to take out 12 one-year leases."

But Russell's frustrations are a much deeper subject. He grows impatient with the apparent selfishness of his present teammates, a collection of NBA hopefuls, almost-weres and never-will-be's.

Russell also is resentful about his departure from the NBA.

"Of course I'm bitter," he said after a recent game on the Sky's home court in Great Falls, a city of 70,000.

"I think sometimes that I got the bad end of the deal, that politics played more of a part in my leaving than my playing did."

The 6-foot-6-inch forward broke into the pros in 1966 as the first-round draft choice of the New York Knicks. He played five seasons in New York, three with the Golden State Warriors, three with the Los Angeles Lakers and one season with the Chicago Bulls.

As a starter for the Lakers, Russell played in all 82 games of the 1976-77 season, averaging 16.4 point per game.

The next year, Russell was cut by the Lakers — two days before the season opener.

The Lakers said his defense and rebounding were weak.

Russell said there was more to it.

"I was playing well...," he said. "But they released me because I didn't get along well with a couple of the guys on the team. It was all politics."

Besides, releasing him so close to the beginning of the season made it difficult to be picked up by another team, Russell said.

After some brief work as a radio-TV sports commentator, the former Michigan All-American joined the Bulls, for whom he played 36 games last year and was then released.

Last December, the call came from the Sky, a squad at the bottom of the seven-team WBA.

For Russell, it was a chance to continue playing the game he loves. But the difference between the NBA and the WBA is staggering.

"People in the NBA know what they're working for. There's a good attitude. Guys down here don't take it seiously," he said.

Except for one other player on the Sky's 10-man roster, Russell is the only one over the age of 24, and sometimes his youthful teammates are a source of anger. After one recent loss, the usually optimistic Russell was particularly upset.

"This team really has no concept of team play. I'm not effective as a player if the team plays as a bunch of individuals. I keep telling them to move the ball, to seek out the open man, but they don't listen," he said.

But Russell's frustrations have not diluted his love for basketball and his intensity has made him a favorite of the crowds in Great Falls.

Coach Rex Hughes said he is continually amazed by Russell's enthusiasm for the game.

"I've never seen a man who loves basketball as much as he does. Most of these players expect to get something out of basketball, but all he wants to do is give back to the sport what it's given him," Hughes said.

Disappointment In Devotion To Hunting Sasquatch

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — Dr. Grover Krantz, a physical anthropologist at Washington State University in Pullman, sometimes drives at night along lonely back roads with a rifle by his side and bullets in his pocket.

That's out of character for the gaunt, bearded Krantz, because he's not a hunter. His conscience still bothers him because he shot a deer when he was 14.

But he is armed for Bigfoot, the giant, hairy, apelike creature that is said to stalk the Pacific Northwest. More than a thousand people swear they have seen the creature and others claim to have captured it on film. In Canada, Bigfoot is called Sasquatch, an Indian word for "Big man."

Krantz is about the only accredited member of the scientific community who says categorically the creature is alive. A few scientists waffle, but most say Bigfoot is "bunk."

Krantz became interested in Bigfoot in 1969 when a deputy sheriff related a sighting. He became convinced a journalist-politician in British Columbia dragged him to Bossburg, Wash., to see about 1,000 footprints ascribed to a crippled Bigfoot.

Krantz decided the prints couldn't be fake. "It would have taken a brilliant anatomist with a very inventive mind and we haven't had one of those around since Leonardo da Vinci," he says.

Krantz, 46, has suffered in academic standing because of his position, and that's one reason he wants a Bigfoot caught.

"Even if you photograph them down to their tonsils, it will never convince the scientific community," says Krantz. "We need the body or bones."

That appalls John Beckjord of Seattle, another Bigfoot believer. "It might be the missing link," he says. "We may have a better chance of communicating with this animal than with any other."

That issue has touched off wild arguments among about 200 persons in the loose, discordant network of Bigfoot hunters.

"There is no second prize" in the Bigfoot sweepstakes, says John Green, former editor and publisher of the Agassiz-Harrison Advance in British Columbia who has collected 1,800 reports of Bigfoot sightings and written four books on the creature.

"The man who actually collects one sees a pot of gold and fame out there. And if you preselect a group of individuals who are willing to fly in the face of society, you tend to get some pretty opinionated individuals."

An example:

Rene Dahinden of Richmond, B.C., a leathery-faced old-timer from rural Switzerland who is fond of quoting from "The Thoughts of Chairman Mao." He has never laid eyes on Sasquatch.

His rivals say he spends more time in the courtroom than the bush, suing and being sued over Bigfoot evidence and rights. Dahinden: "As Mao would say, there's a time to be in the field and a time to be in the courtroom."

Beckjord claims to have seen a Bigfoot, perhaps two, on the Lummi Island Indian reservation in northern Washington. He claims to have a photograph of four Sasquatch — a family.

Dahinden doesn't think much of Beckjord's treasures. "I'd need a 60,000-ton truck if I collected everything he thinks is evidence."

Beckjord and Dahinden are also at odds over the most famous Bigfoot film, shot in 1967 by the late Roger Patterson and Bob Gimlin.

Dahinden demands in a letter that Beckjord stop showing the film. Beckjord corrects a score or more of spelling errors, returns the letter with a red "F-minus" at the top.

Dahinden lives in a trailer at the Vancouver Gun Club and supports himself by scooping up spent bullets, recycling and selling them. Beckjord, 39, is a sometime cameraman, oil rigger and mortgage broker.

Another Bigfoot pursuer is Peter Byrne, a silver-tongued Irishman who runs the Bigfoot Information Center and Exhibition in Hood, Ore. He swore out a warrant against Dahinden to keep him out of Oregon.

Byrne has obtained funds to finance his search from the Academy of Applied Sciences in Boston, which also has supported hunts for the Loch Ness monster.

Krantz, on the other hand, isn't trying for a grant. He spends a few thousand dollars of his own money each year. "What else have I got to do with it? I live alone with two dogs."

Dr. Marjorie Halpin, an anthropologist at the University of British Columbia at Vancouver, managed to get the warring Sasquatch tribe together last May for the first-ever Bigfoot conference.

She rounded up scientists, Sasquatch investigators and philosophers. Papers ranged from an analysis of droppings and hair — not conclusive — to "The Wild Man in Medieval Irish Gaelic Literature."

Never again, says Dr. Halpin, who calls herself a "closet believer." The hunters weren't much interested in the role of the monster figure in literature, while the English professors didn't care much for the Sasquatch war stories. Besides, Beckjord and Dahinden got into a shoving match.

Most Bigfoot sightings have been reported by loggers, hunters and hikers not obsessed with the Sasquatch Saga. Saquatchians cite the numerous footprints in locations they think hoaxers would be unlikely to pick.

But hoaxes there have been. Even Dahinden, the expert, bit on one in May, 1977 when a "Bigfoot" ran in front of a busload of tourists in British Columbia. Dahinden rushed to the scene, proclaimed the tracks authentic — and two days later the perpetrators brought their monkey suit to a news conference.

For most people the Sasquatch debate is a casual entertainment, but to the hunters it's an obsession, and there's even talk of a Curse of the Sasquatch.

Shad Festival On April 20

GRIFTON — The Ninth Annual Grifton Shad Festival will be held April 20-22, offering fun for the entire family.

One important event in the festival is the Shad Fishing Contest. Rules for entering the contest are as follows:

— Only hickory shad are eligible. These fish must be caught in the Grif[illegible]rea, approximately 20 miles [illegible]n the Shad Festival center. Most shad previously entered have been caught at Pitchkettle Creek, Grindle Creek or Contentnea Creek, all tributaries of the Neuse River.

— Shad entered must have been caught on hook and line; those taken in nets are ineligible. The entries must be weighed at the Sport Shop in Grifton.

— An adult division for persons 13 and older and one for those 12 and under are offered in the contest.

— The contest closes at noon Friday, April 20. The winners will be announced during the intermission of the Shad Queen Pageant that night, with prizes of fishing tackle and equipment for the winners.

— Prizes will be awarded for the first shad entered in the contest and for the fisherman who travels the most distance to enter the contest.

A new addition for the Festival will be a Bass Fishing Derby during April. Details will be announced later on this event.

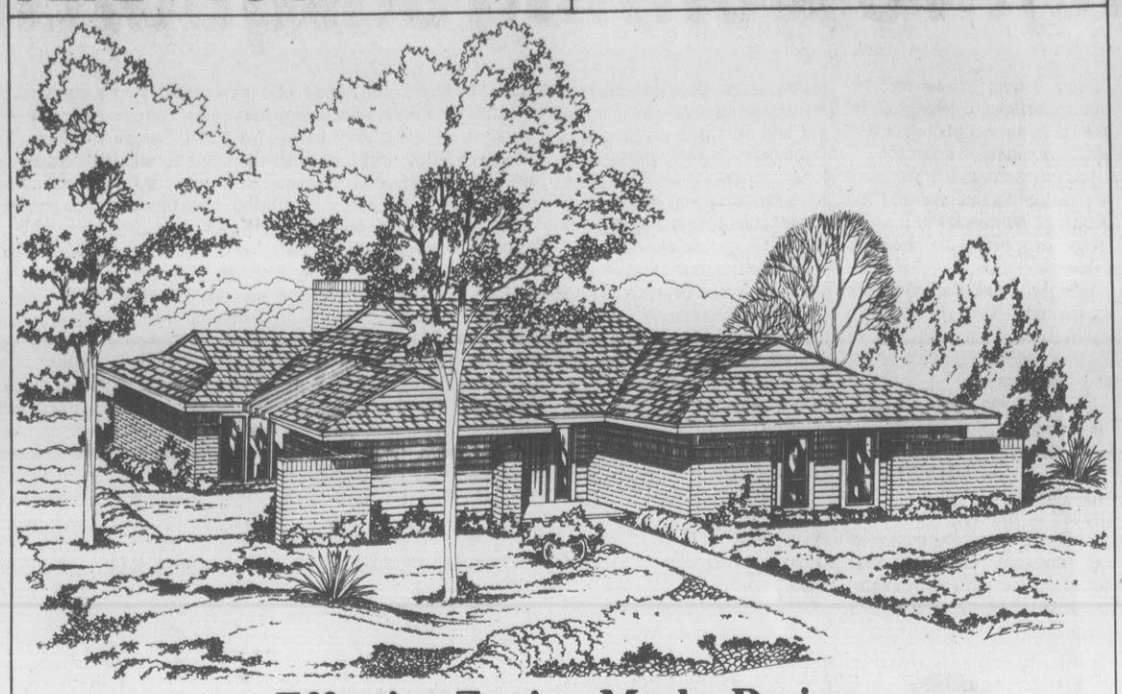
PLAN YOUR HOME

The Islington



Effective Zoning Marks Design

By Jerry Bishop

Work, play, and sleeping areas are carefully defined and separated, accounting for the successful floor plan of the Islington, a multi-winged one story design.

In all, three bedrooms and two and one half baths are offered, as well as a formal dining room and informal family room/kitchen complex.

Trim exterior lines are created by the use of brick and horizontal siding, and walls are extended in front for added privacy. Inside the gracious foyer, the unique floor plan is immediately evident. The plan actually encircles a private patio, thereby using outdoor space to help define indoor living areas.

At left of the entry, the formal dining room enjoys a commanding view of the patio, and, back a small haliway, the family room is glassed to ensure an equally attractive view. The family room is the largest room of the home and is conveniently supplied with half bath and closet.

A few steps to the right is the kitchen complex, a substantial area that takes in a dining nook with access to the rear patio, the utility or laundry room, and the double garage. The kitchen merits a pantry.

Sleeping areas are grouped to the right of living areas and include three bedrooms and two full baths. The 15-ft. master bedroom enjoys a luxurious arrangement that includes a full bath, separate dressing area with built-in double vanity, and oversized walk-in closet. Another compartmented bath serves the remaining bedrooms.

Noteworthy is the size and abundance of closets throughout the plan.

Allergy-Victims Might Check Home Furnishings

By ELAINE Q. BARROW
AP Newfeatures

"Bare is beautiful."

That's the appraisal offered by Dr. H. L. Newbold in referring — not to nudism — but to home decorating.

"The less you have in a place, the better off you are," he says. "Besides, space is the most luxurious thing you can have. It costs more to get space than it does to buy antiques."

But his real concerns are the allergies he says many people may have to carpeting, draperies and other things in their surroundings — usually without knowing it.

Newbold, a specialist in nutritional psychiatry, said carpeting was a common source of contamination.

"Many are allergic to the dust a carpet collects and there's also what we call outgas exuding from synthetics," he says. "Even the padding under it can cause a problem. Wool carpeting is treated to keep out moths. But remember, if it kills moths, it kills us a little, too."

If you feel too bare without floor covering, he suggests cotton rugs, preferably white so they must be washed frequently.

Draperies also can harbor dust, and Newbold prefers vertical metal blinds or plain shades. For the homemaker who insists on draperies, he favors simple cotton material washed once a month.

He also advocates metal furniture. "Wood is pretty good," he says, "but the varnishes and glues may cause trouble."

Chemical fumes are the culprit and for the same reason he opposes varnishing or waxing floors. Beeswax could be used, he says, but the most healthful solution would be glazed tile.

Newbold, a lean, bearded physician in blue jeans, described the subtle sources of allergies he has tracked down in home furnishings.

Some of his patients have proved allergic to fumes from gas kitchen-stoves. "It's a big problem," he says. "Someday gas will be illegal."

He also predicts that plastic will eventually be outlawed as food wrapping.

"Food should be wrapped in aluminum foil because plastic gives off gas," he says. "To shape it, it has to be liquefied, but during the evaporation process not all of the out-gas is removed. It's very toxic. It's worse with soft plastics than it is with the hard."

Even cooking has hazards that can be avoided. Newbold says meat should be pressure-cooked or boiled. Broiling meat under a gas flame, he says, causes it to pick up hydrocarbons which are very carcinogenic.

He warns do-it-yourself home decorators that paints can be toxic for months. His choice is a major-brand, water-based latex which he says should be mixed with three small boxes of baking soda per gallon.

Household cleansers and detergents can be a problem for some people, he says. And he places insect sprays in the same hazardous category as moth-proofing.

He has worked out a non-toxic defense against insects:

Remove cabinets from the wall and fill all wall holes around pipes with steel wool which you then pack with grout (using old-fashioned grout containing no plastic). Then sprinkle boric acid behind the cabinets when replacing them.

While you are at it, he says, you might as well remove the wall trim and fill all spaces behind it with grout before replacing the trim.

Newbold has uncovered allergenic substances lurking in the bedroom and bath. Many people are allergic to kapok used in pillows, he says. Rather than buying synthetics, he suggests making your own pillow by folding bath towels into a pillowcase.

"Allergy to toothpaste is not rare at all," he adds. "Many people are sensitive to fluoride. It doesn't make much sense to give a drug to treat a drug. We're really clever people. Invent sugar to rot our teeth and then educate dentists to fill cavities."

Throughout the years, the doctor adds, our environment has spawned elements faster than the human has been able to develop tolerances for them. The results have ranged from vague discomfort to outright poisoning. He backs his beliefs with case histories in a recent book, "Mega-Nutrients for Your Nerves."

Newbold's interest in nutrition and cerebral allergies was kindled after he himself became a victim of hypoglycemia (low blood sugar) which made him "feel weak, anxious and miserable" and eluded diagnosis by two top "establishment" physicians.

After diagnosing his own condition and correcting it, he began to wonder how many other kinds of nutritional imbalance might be at the root of emotional problems "that most psychiatrists treat with words and drugs."

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG

Q. — The door to one of our bedrooms binds whenever an attempt is made to close it all the way. I have determined that several of the screws are loose in the hinges. Before I try to replace them with longer screws, I want to be sure that I know exactly what I am doing. Most important, what do I do if longer screws go through the door?

A. — In that event, you will have to fill the old screw holes with wood putty, plastic wood or wood pegs. You then can use the old screws or, if they are rusted or damaged, new screws of the same size.

Q. — I have been shopping around for a new wood plane to replace the old one I have had for many years. I notice that one type of plane is longer than the others. The salesman says it is a jointer plane, but he doesn't seem quite sure of its precise use. Can you tell me?

A. — A jointer plane usually is used for large wood surfaces. Its length — between 20 and 28 inches — enables it to shave wood especially well where a surface has slight hollows in it, since the long base and blade level off the higher spots before shaving the lower ones.

Q. — The family room in our house has knotty pine walls. I recently used denatured alcohol to rub down the walls and get them clean. Now I want to put a finish on them. I have some floor sealer left over from a recent project. Would it be all right to use this on the knotty pine?

A. — It not only would be all right, it would be an excellent idea. As with shellac, two thin coats are better than a single thick coat. Most floor sealers give a less lustrous coat than shellac, varnish or lacquer, but then you already know what type of finish to expect since you have used the sealer in the past.

Q. — In preparing pine wood for a pickled finish, does the wood have to be lightened first?

A. — Yes. Use a bleach.

Q. — I intend to coat the bottom of a fence post with a wood preservative before putting it into the ground. I have always done it this way — that is, by applying the preservative with a brush. My friend says this doesn't keep the wood from decaying, but two posts I put up a few years ago seem to be holding very firm. Is he right?

A. — To a degree. There is no doubt that it is much better to soak the end of the post in a container of wood preservative for about 12 hours than it is to brush on a coat of the preservative. Therefore, you should use the soaking method. But there are other factors that determine how solidly the post remains in place over a long period of time. If, for example, you set the post in a concrete base, the part of the post that is imbedded in the concrete will probably hold indefinitely regardless of how a preservative is applied, although it should not be bypassed. Other factors that influence the permanence of the setting are drainage conditions and the care with which the job is done.

Q. — Do I or don't I need a padding under a 9 x 12 carpet I soon will be putting down? One salesman in one store told me I do, another in a different store said I don't.

A. — Padding under a carpet adds to comfort, soundproofing and the product's life. It sounds very much as though, in the first store, you were contemplating a carpet without a backing, whereas in the second, you were considering a carpet with its own backing. Sure, you can use any kind of carpet without padding if you wish, but it won't function as well as one with it.

Precautions Against Fire

By United Press International

Basic safety precautions could prevent thousands of deaths and injuries each year from household fires. The Continental Insurance Cos. recommend these precautions:

— Before going to bed, check to see that all cigarettes, cooking appliances and portable heaters are out and fireplaces are screened.

— Make sure windows and screens open easily. Be prepared to break them in an emergency, covering glass fragments with blankets, bedspreads or other heavy material.

— Diagram your home, marking normal and emergency escape routes. Your local fire department can help.

— Obtain a whistle, bell or other noisemaker for use as an alarm in case of fire. Better yet, install a smoke alarm; it could save you money on insurance, as well as saving lives.

— Practice household fire drills until each member of the family can escape alone or with assistance from all rooms.

— Designate a meeting place outside the house where everyone can assemble for a head count.

— Locate the nearest fire alarm box or telephone so you will be able to call the fire department immediately if there is a fire.

A vital factor in the performance of a solar system in a house is the quality of the workmanship and materials.

While this might be said about home construction in general, it is even more pertinent in solar residential building because of the lack of experience and knowledge among some contractors and the use of materials that haven't proved themselves over long periods of time.

A residential solar program report was published last year by the U.S. Department of Energy. It is called "Building the Solar Home" and was prepared by an engineering firm called Dubin-Bloome Associates based on its own research and not necessarily reflecting the policy or view of the government departments.

What was especially interesting about the report is that, while it was aimed primarily at builders and developers, it dealt with some aspects of residential solar energy mentioned in numerous letters to this column over the past few months. The following quotes were contained in various sections of the report, which emphasizes some "Early Lessons Learned" during the first three years of the HUD Residential Solar Heating and Cooling Demonstration Program:

"To prevent pressure buildup and to permit condensation to escape, some solar collectors require venting devices, such as weep holes at the top and bottom."

"Raising collectors off the roof is preferable to mounting them directly on the roofing surface and reduces the potential of moisture retention, dry rot and even carpenter ants."

"The ideal placement of the storage system is in the center of the dwelling. However, when the main concern of the solar system is cooling, the storage component — which is a heating element — should not be located inside the dwelling."

"Check local public-health regulations to determine whether used transfer fluids can be drained to public sanitary or storm sewer systems. In some areas it may be necessary to contract for system draining and disposal."

"Poor workmanship is the most serious installation problem."

"Don't try to save money by using the cheapest pumps available."

"It is necessary to examine how solar components will affect other building materials."

"Check on the availability of replacement parts."

And, in conclusion:

"Building the solar home: Some Early Lessons Learned has shown that problems can and do arise at any stage of solar energy use (design, installation, construction and operation). This can be attributed in part to the lack of experience of those involved in solar applications and to the experimental nature of the technology. However, watchfulness and careful attention to detail can lead to early detection of problems or can help to avoid them altogether."

N.C. State Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. During the last ice storm a young long-leaf pine in my yard was bent completely to the ground. It appears to have straightened some, but will it ever recover? Should I prune it off and expect it to come? (T.R., Greensboro)

A. The tree should recover some by itself. You can help the recovery process by staking it back up. Don't prune the tree except to remove broken or dead branches. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. How long does firewood need to be dried before it produces the maximum amount of heat? (L.L., Conover)

A. Firewood needs to be air-dried for at least six months before it is burned. If you are purchasing wood, ask when it was cut. Also look for cracks in the end of the logs as an indicator that the wood is seasoned. (Larry Jahn, extension forestry specialist)

Q. I understand some new collard varieties have been developed in recent years. What varieties are now considered the best for North Carolina? (S.G., New Bern)

A. The N.C. Agricultural Extension Service still recommends Morris' Improved Heading and Vates. At least two new varieties, Carolina and a hybrid, were released last year, but they have not been tested sufficiently in North Carolina for the Extension Service to recommend them. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Q. My azaleas are sick. The leaves are yellow with green veins. What could be the problem? (B.N., Scotland Neck)

A. Yellow leaves with green veins usually indicate too much fertilizer and poor underground drainage. When fertilizing azaleas, it is better to make a split application than to apply one heavy application per year. Also be careful not to apply too much fertilizer to small plants. Plants less than 12 inches high should receive no more than a teaspoon per application. For larger plants a heaping tablespoon per foot of height would be a safe application. Broadcast the fertilizer evenly under the plant and soak it in with water to reduce the possibility of injury. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticulturist)

More Humidity A Fuel-Saver

ITHACA, N.Y. (UPI) — A 30-50 percent humidity level is comfortable for most people and, in winter, can keep people slightly more comfortable at a few degrees lower temperature, says the cooperative extension service of Cornell University.

Higher humidity also helps protect home furnishings, especially wood, from warping, cracking or coming unglued in a dry environment.

Day-to-day living adds some humidity to a home or apartment. By using exhaust fans sparingly during the heating season, water vapor from cooking and bathing will add moisture indoors.

The service also says an electric clothes dryer can be vented indoors during winter and outdoors in summer. It will need an extra lint trap, the service says. But indoor venting should be discontinued if condensation runs off windows or if a dust problem occurs.

Brick Warmers Are Tried Anew

READING, Pa (UPI) — The old-fashioned practice of warming beds with hot bricks on cold nights is being revived to heat entire homes.

The modern concept involves heating brick storage chambers electrically at night, when energy is cheaper and more plentiful, to warm homes by day. Several central heating systems incorporating this principle are being installed in a research program in Pennsylvania homes by General Public Utilities Corp.

GPU's consumer affairs manager, Robert W. Smith, says the system uses electricity at night to simultaneously heat the home and the special ceramic brick storage chamber. Electricity shuts off during the day but the brick chamber continues to provide heat.

Smith said the research is designed to demonstrate practical ways for consumers to save both money and electricity.

And when they did, they discovered that Pam and Jim had just moved into a rental home vacated by Jan and Tim.

Mansfield Helps 'Mold' Japan

EDITOR'S NOTE — Before going to Congress, Mike Mansfield was a professor of Asian history. Now, as ambassador to Japan, he is helping mold the history of an increasingly important nation.

By JOHN RODERICK
AP Special Correspondent

TOKYO (AP) — Mike Mansfield is as plain and American as apple pie, a man with no pretensions. Many Japanese describe him as the best U.S. ambassador ever sent to Japan.

When he meets you in his embassy office he brews you a cup of coffee. After you are gone he washes the cups and saucers himself.

Eighteen months after taking over America's biggest embassy — it has 800 staffers — the former Senate majority leader, now 76, is enjoying himself hugely and has no thought of stepping down until President Jimmy Carter asks him to.

He has brought an almost undiplomatic style of candor to his assignment. Unlike previous ambassadors, he speaks only for the record. And he says frankly what he thinks, even if it doesn't always coincide with the truth disclosed from Washington.

What the Japanese like about him is his "elder statesman" age, his openness, his long-time political stature and his direct links to President Carter.

"Do you see yourself as working for Jimmy Carter?" Mansfield once was asked. "With," was his reply.

Almost as important as being liked by the Japanese is to have the affection and confidence of the Americans, many of them career officers, of his staff.

One: "I don't know of anyone in the embassy who doesn't like him."

"I think he is the most effective ambassador we have had in Japan," said another. "He is not by nature a warm, friendly person. He is withdrawn, shy and sees himself as doing his duty. He is humble."

Mansfield's petite, white-haired wife Maureen is a major asset.

"Everybody likes her," an embassy staffer says. "She is much more realistic than he is. Don't forget, she ran most of his campaigns for the Senate."

The ambassador leaves the knotty job of embassy housekeeping to his lieutenant, deputy chief of mission Bill Sherman.

"Personally I'm a lazy man physically. When I get a chance for rest and recreation, I take it. I go to a reception if I can sit down rather than stand up; I don't play golf. Nothing else either."

He confessed he hasn't found much time to pick up Japanese but "I've dug up a few words like o-hio, arigato and syonara" — good morning, thanks and good-bye.

He eats raw fish, sukiyaki and most other Japanese dishes, but his preferences are for American food. "Meat and potatoes, apple pie and ice cream, the usual grub."

As ambassador, the former University of Montana professor sees his job as mediator of the problems which constantly pop up between the surging Asian economic power and its American ally. He is not content to be a glorified messenger boy in striped pants. Nor does he beat around the bush with the Japanese, a style that took some getting used to but added to his credibility.

Asked to identify the three major problems between the United States and Japan, he replied: "Trade, trade, trade."

U.S.-Japanese trade is at once the cement and the sand in the relationship. Topping $31 billion both ways, it is a historic phenomenom. But, after decades of being on the short end of the stick, the Japanese have in recent years come out billions of dollars ahead. That disgruntles American government and business.

Mansfield preaches that U.S. businessmen should be more export-oriented — emulate the Japanese in making long-term commitments after carefully exploring the market.

His embassy's accomplishments, he says, include:

—Fewer complaints of Japanese steel flooding the U.S. market;

—What could have been the most serious issue: U.S. objections to the Tokai Mura nuclear reprocessing plant, capable of producing nuclear weapons material. The issue was defused through negotiations which will permit peaceful uses of nuclear energy.

Tobacco Farming Economy May Have Curbed Area Outmigration

By MARGARET BUNCH
ECU News Bureau

Eastern North Carolina's predominantly tobacco farming country may be unique in the South in that it did not experience an extreme outmigration of blacks after World War II, two university researchers suggest.

One reason, according to the researcher's published study, may be the unusual situation of the tobacco farm economy itself.

"Trying to find other reasons or all of the reasons is frustrating," says Dr. Ennis L. Chestang, professor of geography at East Carolina University, who with Dr. John Fraser Hart, professor of geography at the University of Minnesota, explored this question as part of a study conducted while Dr. Hart spent a year at ECU as a Distinguished Visiting Professor.

Dr. Hart grew up in farming country — Virginia — and was familiary with tobacco before he came to ECU to study and teach. Dr. Chestang also grew up in a farming region of Florida.

Both professors put their farm backgrounds to good use trying to discover the cause and effect sequence of this stay-at-home attitude that came from the interwoven technological and industrial changes that had taken place in the eastern part of the state.

According to the two, "the traditional techniques of flue-cured tobacco production required large numbers of farm workers, mostly black people, but farm mechanization has not triggered a massive outmigration of displaced farm workers.

The availability of a large labor force, emacipated from the land by the new farm machines, has attracted many new factories to the tobacco districts, and eastern North Carolina has made the transition from an agricultural to a mixed economy. . ."

As described by the study, the modern tobacco farm no longer resembles the small homestead farm of the 1940s. It consists of many parcels of land that are scattered over an area of ten miles or more, and the labor is not done with mule and plow, but with large machines costing thousands of dollars. Human hands have been replaced by mechanical devices that can do the work of many humans in a day.

Heavy labor requirements of old time farming kept large numbers of black hands on the land until the mechanization of the farms and the industrialization of the area took place at approximately the same time over a long period of time.

According to Hart and Chestang ". . . the black population in North Carolina east of the Yadkin River increased steadily from 1890 until 1960 and did not start to drop off until after 1960. The growth of the black population had begun to level off half a century earlier in the cotton South."

This is not to say that black people have not left eastern North Carolina. They have. But not in the large numbers of other regions. "Eastern North Carolina probably is the only part of the United States where a large native black population has been integrated in the same situation in which they previously lived," the two say. "Blacks native to other areas in the South were not integrated until after they had been uprooted by migration to cities, either within or without the region.

A boom in manufacturing employment in eastern North Carolina coincided with the mechanization of tobacco in the area. The number of workers employed in manufacturing in the counties of Pitt, Nash, Edgecombe Wilson, Wayne, Lenoir and Greene skyrocketed from 24,700 in 1963 to 50,606 in 1976 — while the number employed in agriculture dropped by half.

The Hart-Chestang study is reported in their article, "Rural Revolution in East Carolina," in the "Geographical Review," October 1978.

Pupils Learn Nutrition

Students in grades K-6 in Pitt County will learn important nutrition information this spring as part of North Carolina's Nutrition Education and Training Program.

Administered by the Department of Public Instruction's Division of School Food Services, the initial training phase of the program began Jan. 11. The program is funded through the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

University personnel in each of the eight educational regions in the state are training the student-trainers from January to March.

Donna Ware, Director of Pitt County School Food Service Program, is attending a total of 15 workshop days at East Carolina University to receive the training. Dr. Joan Cassilly is the program coordinator at East Carolina University.

Students will participate in various classroom activities associated with the nutrition/education program in the spring.

Students will learn about the nutritional value of foods and the relationship of food to health. Utilizing the school lunchroom as a learning laboratory, school food service personnel will be trained in principles and practices of nutrition relevant to quantity food production and service. Classroom teachers will study sound nutritional values to teach students.

Birthday For Medical School

CHAPEL HILL — Feb. 12 1879 was the founding date of the School of Medicine, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, and the school's 100th birthday is being observed with celebrations to be held on Feb. 9-10.

Prominent faculty from medical schools across the country, as well as UNC-CH faculty, will head the list of speakers for the two-day program.

Dr. Donald S. Frederickson, director of the National Institutes of Health, will address an 11 a.m. University convocation in Memorial Hall on Saturday, Feb. 10. Honorary degrees will be awarded by the University during the convocation, which is open to the public.

Two public symposia will be held on Feb. 9 — one beginning at 9 a.m., the second beginning at 2:30 p.m. Presentation of Distinguished Service Awards, the School of Medicine's highest honor, will highlight the annual alumni banquet Friday evening, being held in conjunction with the 100th birthday. The Distinguished Faculty Award will also be presented.

The UNC-CH School of Medicine, established in Feb., 1879, opened in September of that year with Dr. Thomas West Harris, a Civil War veteran of-fice, as dean.

The school offered only a two-year program until the N.C. General Assembly appropriated funds in 1947 for expansion.

Nuclear Wastes Piles Up, Threatening Shutdown

EDITOR'S NOTE — For more than three decades nuclear wastes have piled up without a plan or place for final disposal. Now the byproducts from commercial nuclear power are accumulating so rapidly that parts of the industry are threatened with shutdown.

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK
AP Newsfeatures Writer

MORRIS, Ill. (AP) — High up in the Dresden Nuclear Power Station, close by the concrete lids on two 70-foot steel reactor vessels, two pools of water await the deadly leftovers of nuclear fission.

Every 18 months a crane lifts the lids, pulls out the uranium fuel rods that are no longer useful, and lowers them into 38 feet of water. There in the clear, silent deep they yield an eerie blue glow.

Without the water as a shield, radiation from the rods could kill anyone leaning on the rail, or reach inside living cells to produce cancers or alter genes. The radioactivity will linger for hundreds of thousands of years.

So far there is no permanent resting place for these and other toxic byproducts of nuclear energy, and it's been 35 years since they were first produced by World War II bomb-making. The inventory has grown to hundreds of thousands of tons.

And although the government has drawn up a disposal strategy and a presidential go-ahead seems near, it is no longer automatically assumed that burying atomic wastes will be simple and safe.

But the pressure is on. The number of commercial power reactors has reached 72 and is growing. Already, older ones like Dresden are running out of storage space in their swimming pool-like basins. If more isn't found, some may have to shut down in a few years.

At the same time, states and cities are putting new restrictions on shipping nuclear wastes, and 33 states have passed laws governing their burial. Four states have in effect halted the building of new reactors until they see proof that wastes can be safely disposed of.

That is the real issue — whether nuclear power should be allowed to grow as industry and government insist it must. Already it provides 13 percent of the country's electricity.

President Carter stepped into this picture a year ago, forming a multi-agency committee to recommend a solution.

"There are no easy answers," says Gus Speth, a member of the President's Council on Environmental Quality and a committee member. "I find it amazing that a problem this distressing and obvious has been swept under the the rug."

Carter's Interagency Review Group looked at all kinds of nuclear garbage — the worst in terms of radioactivity from commercial reactors, but the largest part by volume from defense programs, which have generated half a million tons of high level waste and another 14.7 million cubic feet of lower level waste.

The high level wastes are liquids kept in steel tanks. These have often leaked, spilling their radioactive contents into the nearby ground. The liquids are being turned into more manageable forms, such as a waxy-looking salt cake or granules that resemble laundry detergent.

In addition, some 140 million tons of uranium "mill tailings" lie at dozens of sites in Colorado, New Mexico, Utah, Idaho and other states, and the amount grows by 10 to 15 million tons a year. These scraps from the milling of uranium ore give off radon, a gas that can be carried on the wind. If inhaled it can cause cancer.

For a long time nobody thought much about mill tailings. They look like ordinary sand, and in some places were scooped up and used to build homes and schools, giving the gas access to living and working areas. These must be torn up to remove the tailings.

"It's beautiful sand and it was free," says Dr. William E. Mott, the Department of Energy official over a program dealing with tailings. "No one realized the extent of the radon inhalation problem. But this exposure will go on for thousands of years, and there are people who say radon is a greater problem than the other, hotter wastes."

Nuclear reactors also generate vast quantities of low level waste, ranging from residues flushed from the system to contaminated tools, gloves and booties used by workers. These are buried in licensed trenches.

About 66.6 million cubic feet of low level waste are buried at several sites. A typical commercial reactor produces about 45,000 cubic feet year. In a year Dresden expels about 3,000 55-gallon drums of sludge mixed with concrete and about 500 drums of other contaminated trash.

Dresden used to ship this to Sheffield, Ill., but the burial ground there — the object of protest by environmentalists — is closed pending license renewal. Of the remaining five commercial burial sites, two have been closed by operating problems and another is restricting how much it takes.

What may become the most troublesome waste of all are the facilities themselves: power reactors, plus more than 1,000 accelerators, 21 commercial fuel fabrication plants, 20 uranium mills, and more than 300 Department of Energy facilities already out of use.

Commercial reactors have a useful life of only about 40 years. The most promising plan is to encase their radioactive parts in concrete for about 100 years.

The problems come into focus out here at Dresden, a white cube and dome rising against the black loam of freshly harvested cornfields south of Chicago. The station can generate enough electricity for a city of more than a million people. Commonwealth Edison, its owner, depends on nuclear energy for nearly half its supply to northern Illinois. But Dresden's pools are running out of room.

Its request to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission for permission to store more rods in the same pool using special racks has been challenged by the state. And its request to ship rods to another of its nuclear plants has also been challenged by the Natural Resources Defense Council, an environmental organization.

"Constant half measures like this are postponing the government from biting the bullet on waste," says Tony Roisman, an NRDC lawyer.

"I'm confident we will make the changes, but I've been wrong before," says Dr. David Rossin, a research engineer who advises management on these worries. "A clever intervenor can cause enough delay to really screw things up."

Half the commercial reactors have asked to use the new racks, and one is already shipping rods off-site. Utilities never expected their storage pools to hold rods for more than a year or two. Originally they were to be shipped to reprocessing plants and chemically treated to separate the uranium and plutonium, which would be refabricated into new rods.

But plutonium is also used to make bombs, and in 1977 President Carter indefinitely suspended reprocessing, fearing it would produce large amounts of plutonium easily stolen by terrorists.

When he suspended reprocessing, Carter said the government will store the spent fuel now accumulating at reactors. But this too is only temporary. Eventually it must be permanently isolated from man.

Opinions on how long nuclear wastes will be hazardous range from several hundred years to several million. The Interagency group said the minimum is 1,000.

The most likely plan is to bury it in steel canisters several thousand feet underground in stable rock, such as salt. Liquid and granular wastes would first be melted with glass and this mixture hardened in the canisters.

Once the wastes are in the ground, keeping them there will require several layers of protection. The canisters might erode after several days or weeks if hot brine fills the repository, so the surrounding earth will be the real container.

But geologists haven't been significantly involved in waste planning until recently, and last year the U.S. Geological Survey issued a report that raised doubts about burial.

Will the rock buckle under the heat? Will surface rivers cut through? Or earthquakes upheave the wastes?

Puckett Liked The Limelight

YAKIMA, Wash. (AP) — Remember Gary Puckett and the Union Gap? Do the songs "Woman, Woman," "Young Girl," "Over You," "Lady Will Power" and "I Just Don't Know What To Do With Myself" sound familiar?

Then you must have been listening to rock music about 10 years ago. It has been that long since Puckett and his group enjoyed their flash-in-the-pan success.

These days he lives a vegetarian, outdoors-oriented lifestyle in Hollywood. He has been married and divorced.

At age 35, Puckett is laying plans to rock out again. He says he's been writing songs with brothers Mike and Brian, has a management company and plans to assemble a new band for recording and performing.

"It's going to be a whole different thing, but with me singing the way I sing," he said in a recent telephone interview. "We'll be trying out new sounds. I will be working a lot of small clubs."

Gary Puckett and the Union Gap worked a lot of big concerts, wearing mock Civil War uniforms.

"I wanted a group that was visually fun as well as musically fun," he said.

Puckett formed the group in 1967 while studying at San Diego City College, but he said the name didn't come to him until a visit to his home state a year later.

"Being in Seattle and close to where I used to live — we used to go to Fort Simcoe a lot — I thought, 'What's in a name?'" he said. "I've always been into historical things. I had read a lot about the Civil War and thought, 'Union Gap. Yeah.'"

Puckett did most of his growing up in and around Yakima, attending West Valley High School. Union Gap is a town south of Yakima, named for the break in Antanum Ridge through which the Yakima River flows. Fort Simcoe lies about seven miles southwest of White Swan on the Yakima Indian Reservation.

During 1968 and 1969, while under contract with Columbia Records, the group went gold with four singles — three in less than a year.

"It (stardom) was my teacher, my guru," Puckett recalls. "It was guiding me in making up my mind and lifestyle."

Within another couple of years, however, the band had dropped clean off the charts.

"They wanted me to keep recording the same types of songs, over and over again," Puckett said.

The group broke up as the contract with Columbia expired in late 1972.

"From that point on, it was another way of life," Puckett said, "working on my re-emergence into the musical spotlight."

Surgery Restores Another Limb For Victim; Successes Grow

EDITOR'S NOTE — Last year a young Pennsylvania boy became one of the growing number of people to have a severed hand or limb restored through surgery. Now he's looking forward to his first little league homerun.

By LEE LINDER
Associated Press Writer

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Nathan Greiner, just weeks away from his fourth birthday, was bored helping his grandfather and brother gather eggs and wandered away to find something more interesting.

Moments later the dazed boy had lost his left hand, crushed off at the wrist by the pulley of a chain-driven chicken feeder.

He whimpered in shock, and ran to his grandmother who was washing eggs. And then he cried, just a little — the only time he did.

Grandmother Naomi Greiner wrapped the bleeding arm. Her husband, Lester, dug through the grain, found the severed hand, placed it in a peroxide solution, covered it with aluminum foil and sent it with Nathan in the ambulance.

The ambulance went from the farm in Manheim to Lancaster General Hospital. Then a state police helicopter flew the boy and a doctor to Philadelphia's Jefferson University Hospital for a 13-hour microsurgical transplant to reconnect nerves, tendons and the tiny arteries and blood vessels.

That was last June 30. Today Nathan is able to pick up little objects and turn pages of picture books.

He is one of perhaps 1,000 persons across the country who had fingers or limbs surgically reimplanted after accidents last year. Early in January, an 11-year-old girl from Long Island, N.Y., had a leg reimplanted after a railroad accident. The operation, which was first performed with an arm reimplantation in Boston in 1964, was spurred by advances in mircosurgery in the late 1960s. It is now handled by teams of specialists at more than a dozen medical centers like the one in Philadelphia.

Nathan's parents, the Rev. Gerald and Diane Greiners were on a Bermuda cruise ship when the accident occurred. They had to wait 14 hours before the ship docked and another three hours to get to Nathan's bedside.

A year-end examination at Jefferson's Hand Rehabilitation Center showed Nathan can move the fingers and wrist and feel sensation.

The surgery required a microscope and sutures invisible to the unaided eye.

"It was not a sharp cut," Dr. Nissenbaum says. "It was a crush. And that causes many, many more problems than a clean amputation.

"No part of the human body can survive without blood. We had to repair the two major arteries that run into the hand, and also four veins. This also required delicate grafting, and we took six veins that could be spared from Nathan's left forearm.

"The crush also destroyed one row of the wrist bones, and the remaining bones were connected to the arm with steel pins."

Nissenbaum said Nathan's flexor tendons, those that bring the fingers down to the palm, were repaired on each finger and thumb "and he has good motion."

"There was a large gap over the crush area," Nissenbaum said. "This required skin grafting over the palm and the top of the hand, and this skin came from the groin. In time the scars will mostly fade away.

"But because of skin loss on top of the hand, he'll probably require some additional surgery in order to give him lifter tendons, artificial ones, to lift the fingers out of the palm. This won't be for another year or two.

Nissenbaum says total healing will take three to five years. He predicts Nathan will recover 50 to 75 percent use of his left hand.

"There will be a big celebration the first home run he hits in little league, or maybe the first hit," Nathan's father says.

Nathan complains only that his hand gets cold, even before winter came, Mrs. Greiner, a department store interior decorator, says.

"He is part of a nursery school situation and I told the teacher from the very start I didn't want the hand emphasized in any way," she says.

After Nathan was discharged from the hospital, two weeks after the surgery, the Greiners stopped off at grandfather's farm where the accident happened.

"He was very shy, reluctant, and he said, 'Daddy, I don't want to go near that chicken feeder,' and then he said, 'I might if it's not running,'" Greiner said.

"Once he said, 'Daddy, why do you love little boys who cut off their hands?' And I told him, 'You're special, and therefore I love you.'

"Nathan always speaks in positive terms. He says, 'When my hand gets better' rather than 'Why is my hand crippled?'"

Deplores Loss In Basics Study

ECU News Bureau

In an article published in the current issue of "North Carolina Education," Dr. Charles Coble of the East Carolina University science education department, and Dr. Paul B. Hounshell of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, deplore the current trend to de-emphasize science instruction in the elementary schools.

The article states that teachers cited the pressure to return to "basics" - reading, writing and arithmetic as leaving little time in the classroom for science instruction. Coble and Hounshell say that this is a nationwide trend.

By JOHN MOODY
United Press International

The world's greatest cities are slowly dying. By the dawn of the 21st Century they will be eclipsed by a new breed of giant struggling Third World capitals.

New York, London, Rome, Paris — metropolises that dominate the map of 1978 — could be unimportant by the turn of the century to all but tourists, aging titans who have seen their best days pass.

Taking their place are the premier cities of the next millenium — most of them in the Third World — growing at such a rate that by 2000 there will be 10 cities with populations of more than 10 million.

None of them will be in the United States. Nor will they be in France or Britain, a UPI survey shows.

The International Labor Organization predicts that by the turn of the century, Mexico City will be the largest metropolis in the world with 32 million dwellers. Then Tokyo.

Close behind with 26 million will be Sao Paulo, Brazil's largest city, already suffering from incredible poverty, stifling pollution and stagnant industry. Others among the predicted top ten are Rio de Janeiro, Cairo, Calcutta, Jakarta, Manila, Shanghai and Bogota.

There is an uphill-downhill effect taking place. Cities that for the last century have dominated the world are losing their most valuable assets — people — due to lack of jobs and money and an explosion of crime.

The new powers face exactly the opposite problem — an incredible influx of people from surrounding towns and countysides. Their ability to cope with pollution, unemployment, overcrowding and inflation will determine whether city life in the 21st century will be utopian or unbearable.

"There appears to be a saturation point" for cities, said Harold Lubell, the ILO official who compiled the report.

"The economic and political interests involved in continued expansion and development of Third World metropolises ensure that at least partial solutions will be found to the most urgent problems, including employment.

"However, unless programs to build the necessary infrastructure are designed and implemented on a massive basis, Third World metropolises will be increasingly threatened with urban stangulation due to inadequate road networks, inextricable traffic jams, bad city services, flooding and other infrastructural shortcomings."

A look at some of the today's great cities and what is happening to them:

New York

New York City and its vast suburbs is listed as either the first or second most populous urban spread on the globe (after Tokyo) with 16 million persons, depending on which source is used. But all recent censuses show a steady population erosion, a condition seen throughout the northeast United States.

The 1975 fiscal crisis nearly drove the city bankrupt and draconian cuts in municipal services and education have hastened the exodus of the middle class. Long-range urban planners have suggested that by 2000 New York — long the nation's leading city — may place only third or fourth behind Houston, Los Angeles and Chicago.

London

To Americans, London's slow descent to ignominy is the most vividly understandable and regrettable of any foreign city.

"London is a city in decline," says John Edwards of Thames Television, who assembled 300 town planners to speak out on the future. "Ten years ago it had all the appearances of a dynamic world capital ... but today though it looks much the same to the tourists, it's a very different city."

From a peak of 8.5 million on the eve of World War II, its population has fallen to 7 million and will be 6 million in 2000. More than 500,000 factory jobs have disappeared in a decade and the exodus is still in high gear.

How could such a fate befall this city, the center of the British Empire?

The answer is that the empire itself no longer exists. Britain has suffered a prolonged and general decline since the end of the war, and its economic situation has badly eroded.

Paris

Whether it is worth it or not, people will always talk about Paris.

The City of Light has seen better days but is still aglimmer.

The old artists' quarter, stomping grounds of American expatriates like Hemingway and Thurber, now lie in the shadow of the new Montparnasse Tower and La Defense skyscraper blots out the sky through the Arch de Triumph once enjoyed by strollers on the Champs Elysees.

Like New York's infamous subways, riding the Metro system is fraught with danger, and dogs make their presence unpleasantly and unavoidably known on every sidewalk.

The situation is not enhanced by frequent and prolonged strikes of garbagemen and street cleaners, a condition that seems to go with big city living in this generation.

Rome

Like the Colosseum and other relics of a dynasty turned to dust, Rome is a standing anachronism.

Its population of 3.2 million is expected to nearly double to 6 million by the end of the century, but, asks a recent emigree "Where will they put them?"

The tremendous overcrowding is complicated by a 14 percent unemployment rate, still on the rise, and the threat of crime is constant from the slums to the campus of Rome University, Mussolini's creation, where 200,000 students study in space meant for 20,000.

Cynics scoff at innocent suggestions that a new city revitalization program could solve many problems.

"With what money?" they hoot. Rome's municipal deficit is about $5.8 billion, several times the amount that threw New York into panic.

With irony worthy of Senaca, one Roman says, "The eternal city does not die. It just stumbles along."

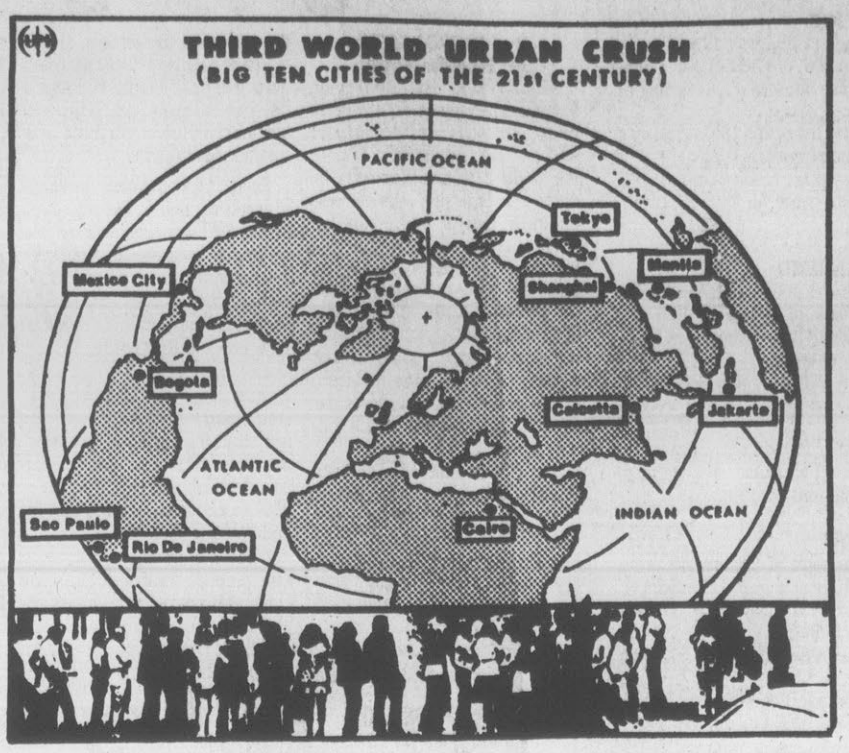
Mexico City

Already a cancer out of control, in 22 years Mexico City will be the largest city in the world with 32 million residents.

Once portrayed as a maze of dusty streets lined with sombrero-hatted snoring gauchos, Mexico City is a crowded, contaminated turmoil of 1.5 million cars inching around 13.2 million inhabitants.

Water is in short supply as are jobs and educational facilities.

Luis Unikel, a U.N. sociologist, sees irony in the urban problems that beset Mexico City. Their source, he says, is rural.



THE POPULATION OUTLOOK — It is predicted that these ten cities, most of them in the Third World, will have populations of more than 10 million each by the dawn of the 21st century. Mexico City is expected to be the largest with 32 million dwellers. Tokyo, an exception in major capitals of the world today, is expected to pass 30 million. (UPI Photo)

Thousands of peasants move from the country to Mexico City every day — a trend that is picking up momentum at exactly the time experts agree Mexico must reverse its population centralization.

"For a poor fellow starving and without the hope of a job, Mexico City is still a paradise," Unikel says.

But once in the city, paradise won can quickly turn into paradise lost.

A Mexican senator said recently the city is a mass asylum of "neurotics" and blamed drug addiction, family breakup, alcoholism and violent crime on "unhealthy urban growth."

An 8.3 percent unemployment rate has resisted government job infusion efforts, and resulted in tens of thousands of idlers in the street who survive by beggary, or if that fails, crime.

As difficult to find as a job is a whiff of clean air. The average visibility has dropped since 1950 from 7 miles to 3. Studies on 7,500 corpses revealed signs of pulmonary ailments related to air pollution in every one.

The salvation of 21st century Mexico City is oil.

"The development of Mexico's oil reserves means a whole range of new decentralized activities throughout Mexico," says Unikel. "Future migration could then be directed to other cities."

Tokyo

The exception to declining populations in the world's major capitals is Tokyo. Some 27.1 million now live in the city and suburbs, and by the turn of the century that figure will jump past 30 million.

The city, largely destroyed by World War II, has practically been rebuilt. But for a country that has outstripped the United States in technical innovation, Japanese planning was unbelievably short-sighted.

Though it holds 10 percent of the country's population and 60 percent of its companies, Tokyo has only 2 percent of Japan's roadways.

Thirty four percent of the city's houses lack sewage systems. Those that have them discharge the effluent directly into rivers. A dense concentration of rickety wood houses courts disaster in the event of an earthquake like the one that hit the Izu Peninsula in January.

Yet immigrants from the countryside pour in, sure they will make their fortune in the lively, bustling city.

Calcutta

Usually considered the worst city in the world. It used to be famous for its "Black Hole" dungeon. Today Calcutta symbolizes the problems in overcrowded, undernourished, impoverished India.

Of the 3.3 million in the city proper, 1.1 are slum dwellers, and one in 10 of that number literally lives on the streets.

Visitors recoil at memories of half-dead skeletons lying in the street suddenly rearing up and demanding money from passers-by.

Cholera epidemics periodically thin out the ranks of "street rats," but the physical plant of the city is in critical condition.

No new waterworks have been built in 140 years, no major new roads since 1940 and the newest sewers are nearly 50 years old.

"Calcutta is in the worst shape and will remain so," says urban architect Jasbir Sechdev.

New Delhi

When New Delhi replaced Calcutta as India's capital in 1911, it inherited the headaches of an aged city facing modern-day problems.

Now uncomfortable with 5.5 million and with a growth rate of 5 percent, it will be home to 11 million in 2000, a situation Delhi Development Authority Chairman M.N. Buch fears.

"There's no real need for them all to be here," he says. Buch hopes to take advantage of Delhi's location — on the plains of the Ganges River — to encourage development of nearby villages.

"Personally, I think that's the only hope for Delhi," Buch says.

Sao Paulo

If pollution does not choke Sao Paulo first, people may. It is already the world's sixth largest city with 7 million, but by 2000 the ILO says it will house 26 million, almost none of them comfortably.

Each year, 500,000 new people make their home there, the equivalent of anually adding the population of Cincinnati.

Despite a new subway system, the air reeks of noxious fumes from endless lines of traffic. Jobs are scarce and unemployment high, but to appease environmentalists, the federal government has passed a law prohibiting any new industries in the town.

As in India, Sao Paulo planners hope to channel people out of the city by moving the state capital. But Brazilians tried that once before — moving the federal capital from Rio de Janeiro to Brazilia, a city carved out of dense inland jungles.

Bogota

The capital of Colombia has many problems in common with Brazil's mega-metropoli. Traffic and air pollution combined with infrequent and inefficient garbage pickups make day-to-day existence unhealthy; rampant street crime makes it unsafe.

Its sprawling slums were largely destroyed by a riot-inspired fire in 1948 and the city was given a rare opportunity. But lack of vision resulted in careless rebuilding and the city now faces a future of explosive growth with no master plan.

Across town, the wealthy huddle in privately guarded residential sections and patronize lavish entertainment spots most Bogotans have only heard about.

Cairo

"Cairo is literally bursting at the seams," says UPI Bureau Chief Maurice Guindi. The 1,000-year-old capital now houses 8.4 million and will be home to 15 million by 2000. In contrast to London, Paris and other dwindling Western cities, Cairo gains 360 people a day from outlying areas who come looking for jobs.

The job that most Egyptians would like to see done is removal of the 150 tons of desert sand and dust that are blown into Cairo every day.

Funds that might otherwise go to urban renewal have been siphoned off to fight four wars with Israel. Water mains break regularly, power failures are a daily occurence, sewage pipes explode under immense pressure.

Microwaves Are Versatile If So Used

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

"Microwave ovens aren't just for defrosting and reheating. They're for all kinds of cooking," says Pitt County Extension Agent Addie Gore, who conducted a "So You Got A Microwave for Christmas" workshop here recently.

Ms. Gore said virtually any recipe one now uses can be adapted for the variable-power microwave with just a little experimentation.

She demonstrated that, when she is unsure of the time of any food, she sets the control for less time. "Time can easily be added and the dish is just as good as ever, but the damage cannot be undone once the food is overcooked," she said.

Overcooking is even more likely to happen with microwaves than with conventional ranges, she said, since there is carry-over cooking time. This is especially noticeable in breads, she said, which tend to cook on a minute or two and either harden or toughen if they're overcooked.

In the microwave, she pointed out, foods can be checked and stirred just as often as necessary with no ill effects. Even a cake won't fall if the door's opened for frequent checking, since there is no heat buildup in the oven and, therefore, no change in air pressure when the door's opened.

Increased volume calls for increased cooking time in a microwave. For instance, baked apples, which might take two minutes each, would take seven minutes for four.

The dispersion of microwave which cook the food is somewhat circular. Therefore, it's best to use circular dishes, when possible and to arrange items cooked simultaneously together in a circle. Much but not all, equipment made especially for microwaves is being made round, rather than square or rectangular — even some items traditionally rectangular like muffin tins.

What kind of utensils does a microwave use? Almost any kind but metal and metal-containing ones can be used. No metal pan can be used and not even a piece of china that has metal paint.

Ms. Gore suggested a way to learn if a particular utensil can safely be used day-in and day-out in the microwave: put it in and set the oven on high for 15 seconds. If it's cool when you take it out, it's okay. If it has absorbed microwaves and is hot, then it's not suitable and could even be damaging to the magnetron tube that generates the microwave energy long-term.

Contrary to popular opinion, Ms. Gore said, microwave energy does not cook food from the inside out. It's just the opposite. Therefore, it's wise to place food so that the more time-consuming part is away from the center. For instance, in cooking fresh broccoli, it would be well to place stalks heads toward the center and also to split larger stalks so the size would be uniform.

Microwaves cook by causing motion within fat, sugar and moisture molecules and creating friction which, in turn, creates heat. Therefore, foods high in fat and sugar content tend to cook faster and even to brown, whereas most food will not, without a special searing grill that's placed in the oven early to heat it to a temperature that will sear, or brown, the meat, or other food.

Ms. Gore quotes Dr. Sol N. Michaelson, who says there are no recorded injuries from use of a microwave oven. "Nor will there be," he adds, because microwaves are non-ionizing radiant energy; therefore, damage to tissue, as with x-rays and the like, cannot occur." He also reassured that microwaved food is no more charged with microwaves than conventionally cooked food is electrically charged.

Ms. Gore said it's important that another appliance not be served by the same outlet as a microwave, with both in use. When this happens, she said, the cooking settings might not be accurate, since they're set for a certain amount of voltage, which might be depleted by the other appliance. "It's really best," she said, "not to have anything plugged in the same outlet with the microwave."

She said an effort is underway to have all microwave settings uniform among the different manufacturers' models so cooking directions can be interchangeable. In the meantime, though, she advised use of the manual and recipe book that go with one's own oven — at least until the basics are learned.

Among advantages of microwave cooking, she listed speed; decrease in energy use (up to 80 percent less than with conventional ranges); fewer burns and fires; the need for little water so vitamin and mineral worth are retained; easy cleanups; and better retention of flavor and appearance of fruits and vegetables.

Below is a microwave recipe demonstrated by Ms. Gore:

"IMPOSSIBLE" COCONUT PIE
one and a half cups milk
3 eggs
one-third cup soft butter or margerine three-fourths cup sugar one-third cup flour three-fourths tsp. nutmeg
three-fourths cup coconut

Lightly grease and flour a nine-inch glass pie plate. Blend all ingredients, except coconut, in blender at once. Stop blender. Add coconut. Cover and continue to blend one cycle. Pour mixture into pie plate. Bake in microwave oven at 80 percent power eight to 10 minuts. Try eight or even seven minutes first — you can always add time. Remember carry-over cooking time and be cautious, knowing you can always put it back to cook a minute or even a few seconds longer, if necessary.

This pie makes its own "crust" and is a popular quick, yet delicious, dessert, Ms. Gore said.

She said the Extension Service will be glad to conduct future workshop, perhaps on specific food types, for microwave users if there appears to be sufficient interest. Anyone wishing to take part in such a workshop is invited to call the Extension Office, 758-1196 and indicate interest.

USE YOUR MANUAL. . .Ms. Gore (pictured) urges to make the best possible use of your microwave oven. Don't just defrost and reheat with it, as so many owners do, she advises.

EASY HORS D'OEUVRES. . .can be made in the microwave by "butterflying" weiner portions and heating them in a barbecue sauce-honey mixture, Ms. Gore demonstrated.

MIXED IN A BLENDER,. . .baked in a microwave oven, "Impossible" coconut pie can be made in less than 15 minutes, start to finish.

This Year's Inflation Spurs Friendly Divorce

CHICAGO (AP) — Will divorces be friendlier in 1979 than in 1970?

Yes, says Chicago attorney Herbert A. Glieberman, and for one overwhelming reason — inflation.

"The escalating cost of divorce is the primary reason more couples today choose amicable out-of-court settlements over long, expensive trial proceedings," said Glieberman.

A frequent lecturer on the subject of divorce, Glieberman is author of a recent book, "Closed Marriage," and of "Confessions of a Divorce Lawyer," published in 1975.

The cost of divorce includes not only legal fees but also the division of assets such as real estate, stocks, bonds, business ownership and other investments, he points out.

As an example, said Glieberman, a husband decides at the time of divorce settlement to give the wife his half of the house they owned in joint tenancy. Because the house, originally purchased for $40,000, is now worth $100,000, the husband's gift has created an economic event for which he will have to pay a capital gains tax on $30,000, or his half of the appreciated amount.

Another item adding to the cost of divorce is professional counseling.

"Many couples, reluctant to seek professional help during the marriage, often decide to get outside help after the divorce to find out what went wrong, why the marriage failed. Although tremendously helpful to most people, post-divorce counseling is not inexpensive," said Glieberman.

In further explaining why divorces are less acrimonious, Glieberman cites examples of husbands and wives being in business together.

"When the marriage breaks up, so does the business partnership. Economics aside, the dissolution is more likely to be handled in a straightforward way, because these people will probably be doing businsss together in the future," he noted.

Consideration of the effects of divorce on children is another reason for "friendly" divorces. Divorcing parents realize that physical separation of one of the spouses from the family can be traumatic for the children.

"A lengthy, bitter court fight only adds to the trauma, as well as the expense, and may irreparably harm the children," said the attorney.

Glieberman cited "rehabilitative alimony" as a recent innovation in domestic relations courts to help stem the tide of rising divorce costs.

"Under this plan, a man pays his ex-wife a monthly allowance but only for a limited time, usually several years," he said. "Thus the divorced wife is able to prepare herself through job re-training or additional education for eventual economic independence.

"Most women, especially those under 55, find this to be fair and equitable settlement, since it gives them a running start and it affords the ex-husband a measure of economic relief. The courts have recognized the near-impossibility of any one person today supporting two households and have begun to institute these changes."

However, the attorney said there still was and always would be the bitter spouse, so filled with hate that the only way to divorce is through a courtroom battle.

("Closed Marriage" is published by Sheed, Andrews and McMeel.)

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

On top of my typewriter this morning, I found a note from my husband that read. "Walrunch Hnchinty. Sol. Quea?????Jne 17."

"What's this mean?" I asked.

"Can't you read my handwriting?" he snapped. "It says National Handwriting Week. Column idea????? I thought maybe there was something in the fact that one day is being set aside to improve the writing habits of Americans and you could do a column on it.

"I write humor."

"What's that supposed to mean?"

"It means if you had penned the Declaration of Independence, the United States today would stand for "lfn. liverte, and the prsut of hapines."

"That's a fine way for someone to talk who makes her sevens look like ones."

"Says who?"

"Says the wrong number I got the other night from a phone message you left me."

"You try writing a phone message on a piece of waxed paper with a steak knife."

"I still think you could make a funny column about how you flunked ovals in the first grade and went on to give birth to children whose 8's look like 3's and who forget to close their G's."

"Don't forget they were sired by a man who loops his O's and who once wrote a check to the paper boy for $8,000!"

"At least I didn't write a note to the school when one of the kids was sick and have the nurse call to see what it was we had under control...his 'diarrhea' or his 'drain.'"

"You know, it might be nice to have just one day when everyone took the time to write legibly . . . dotting their I's and crossing their T's. I bet millions of dollars are spent each year on people making mistakes and not saying what they really mean. I'm sorry I snapped at you. I'm going to file this idea until next June 14 and maybe get the country to observe a day when we could all read what one another is writing."

"What June 14?" asked my husband. "National Handwriting Day was Jan. 23. See? That's an A which you mistook for a U and the 4 is a 3 and is nowhere near what you thought it was and who would listen to a woman who can't even read English anyway?"

Planning Helps Put Color Into Mondays

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Ever wished you could get rid of Mondays?

You're not alone if you'd give a lot to be able to leapfrog over the day that straps you into that job harness again, says Carol Loganbill of the University of Iowa Counseling Service.

"Blue Monday is nothing to joke about to some people," Dr. Loganbill says. "Actually, there's a very logical explanation for the dampening effect Monday can have — we chafe at being locked into routine again after being our own boss for the weekend.

"Most jobs have a lot more structure than weekends do. Saturday and Sunday may be turned upside down as we sleep late, change our eating patterns and stay up partying or just watching a late movie."

Getting back into the groove on Monday is bound to be a shock to some people, Dr. Loganbill explains. She offers these suggestions for easing into the week:

—Fatigue is apt to be a major dampener of Monday morning spirits. If you're bushed every Monday, better tool down your weekends. You shouldn't expect to make a thousand-mile auto trip, for example, on a weekend, and be able to function adequately on the job Monday.

—A reasonably full weekend offering a nice change of pace from your work is most likely to bring you to Monday morning relaxed and ready to go. Outdoor sports could be the answer if you have a desk job — maybe a play and a good book to read if you're on the go continually at work.

—Study what works best for you. If you've plowed through a lot of work by Friday, probably a low-key, lazy weekend without any set timetable or deadlines will offer the best safety valve.

—On the other hand, when you've had a week when nothing pleased the boss and you weren't able to reach any of the goals set for your job, the best way to take the sting out of your frustration could be a weekend producing something you can see. Maybe refinishing an antique. Or cleaning out the attic.

—Make a special effort to look your best Monday morning. Wear a favorite suit, colors that give you a lift. You'll feel challenged to live up to the way you look.

—If your job has flexibility at all, don't take on any of its drudgery on Monday morning. Schedule something you enjoy that will let you see results. Bury dull tasks in the middle of the week.

—Figure out your attention span for various tasks of your job. Then shift to a new task before it's time to become bored. Find the parts of the day you work best. If you're a morning person, for example, schedule your most challenging tasks before noon. Any steps you can take to make the most of your own peak periods will brighten not only blue Monday, but every other day in the week.

—Plan fun for Monday outside job hours to give you something to look forward to. Lunch with someone you know will "pick you up." Shop for something that will give you a lift. If bowling is your thing, make Monday night bowling night.

Finally, count your blessings if it is a little tough to get back into the groove Monday morning. There are "workaholics" for whom weekends drag so badly that they can't wait for them to end, Dr. Loganbill points out. They're in this state because they've never learned how to use leisure. So be thankful you've learned to live it up a little, she adds.

Ms. Holley Gives Program

Hostesses included Mrs. Mavis Adler, Mrs. Lane Hartley and Mrs. Mary Rose Stocks.

Ms. Theresa Holley, of the Boby Shoppe, was a special guest and discussed the various exercise programs available at her shop. President June Carson conducted the meeting.

Baby-Sitting Dos And Don'ts

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I have just begun to baby-sit and it would be helpful if I had some rules to go by. Will you please write some "Do's and Don'ts" on baby-sitting?

BETSY B. IN BIRMINGHAM

DEAR BETSY: How's this:

WHEN YOU ARE ASKED TO BABY-SIT:

Be businesslike. State the days you will be available, the experience you've had, and the pay you consider fair. NEVER accept a job from a stranger. If you don't know the person calling, ask who recommended you, then call that person and check it out.

If you can't provide your own transportation to and from the job, ask what arrangements can be made.

Find out in advance the name, address, phone number, number of children, and how long you will be expected to stay. It's always a good idea to get acquainted with the family (and especially the child) before you go to baby-sit.

Always ask beforehand what your duties will be.

When you take a job, be sure your parents have the name, address and phone number of the people for whom you are sitting.

Before you are left in charge of a child, be sure you know where the parents can be reached.

Have the phone number of the family doctor, paramedics and a close relative or a trusted friend or neighbor handy in case of emergency.

Ask how you should handle incoming phone calls, and always keep a pencil and paper near the phone.

Get full information about locking doors and windows, lights to be left burning.

Ask what you should do if the doorbell rings.

Get special instructions (diapers, bottles, bedtime snacks, children's use of TV or radio, "lights out," etc.) and write them down if there are many.

If medications are to be given, have parents write down all pertinent information (name of medicine, amount, time, and child's name).

Accept escort to your home as planned unless the person who is to drive you home appears drunk. Then insist on phoning your own parents to make other arrangements.

WHEN YOU ARE LEFT IN CHARGE OF A CHILD:

Guard against strangers. Don't unlock the door for ANYONE! If you see a strange face in the window, or if someone tries to get in, call the police at once.

In case of fire, FIRST get the baby and other children out of the house or apartment, then call the fire department from a neighbor's phone.

Guard against accidents: Be alert to possible hazards such as medicines in bathroom, knives, scissors and other dangerous utensils in kitchen; poisons, cleaning fluids, etc., under sink within baby's reach.

Check frequently on a sleeping baby.

Remember, you are a guest: take food only if you have permission. Eat moderately and wash dishes you've used.

Don't allow friends to visit you while you are baby-sitting. Give your job your undivided attention. Avoid making personal phone calls. Keep line open for incoming calls from baby's parents.

I am indebted to Capt. H. C. Salter Jr., Police Department, West Columbia, S.C., for the above.

If you need help in writing letters of sympathy, congratulations or thank-you letters, get Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for all Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212

TOUCH OF GOLD—Gold casts a bewitching spell, advises the Jewelry Industry Council, which suggests for Valentine's Day a gold bar or heart pendant, heavy link bracelet, handsome ring or his and her bracelet—all in karat gold.

Jewelry Speaks Mind And Captures Heart

NEW YORK (AP) — Once upon a very long time ago, a beloved was ensnared with a love potion or magic spell.

Modern romantics have devised less subtle, but more effective techniques, the Jewelry Industry Council reports. Today's bolder damsel can capture her beloved this Valentine's Day by encircling him with gold.

Certainly there's no better way to show how much he means to you than with a handsome gift of gold jewelry, the council notes, but on Valentine's Day the savvy sweetheart might choose to say something more by giving him jewelry with a message.

A gold bar pendant — karat gold because nothing less would do — says you think he's worth his weight in gold. In bracelets, the heavier the chain, the stronger the "link" between you. And — fashion extra — a heavy ultra-masculine look in gold chain is quite in style.

Rings, the symbol of eternity, offer endless possibilities to the inventive Cupid courter, the council points out. A character ring showing his hobby or profession indicates that you approve.

A puzzle ring with two halves that together make a ring is a highly romantic statement, while a symbol ring such as the Molby Strip, the twisted circle that can never be split in two, says that you're hoping for a love that lasts.

"His and hers" jewelry, tailored unisex bracelets, chains, or rings are a a means of expressing coupledom. Give him "his" and he may reciprocate with "hers."

A bit of diamond sparkle on a tie tac, ring or pendant is sure to spark amorous thoughts in the mind of the lucky recipient.

As for hearts, on Valentine's Day the special man in your life could hardly do better — he has your heart already. But, the council suggests, he might offer you his heart — in the form of a gold pendant.

PERSONAL TOUCH—Carol Fitzgerald, 31-year-old former schoolteacher, works in her Baltimore toy store. She and Wade Wright, a one-time lay minister, opened the store two years ago and make all the toys by hand.

Old Fashioned Wooden Toys Made By Partners

By NANCY KERCHEVAL
Associated Press Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Children used to entertain themselves for hours spinning two buttons on a cord or whipping the string off a top and watching the toy twirl across the floor.

And there were wooden blocks to build houses with garages that held unsophisticated little cars carrying tiny people.

Then in marched the big toymakers who flooded the market with intricate toys, and games requiring college degrees to assemble and a set of batteries for power.

And with these new toys came higher and higher prices.

Carol Fitzgerald remembers the toys grandmothers talk about. And many of her East Baltimore customers also get nostalgic when they walk into her shop — the Marvelous Toy Store.

The 31-year-old former schoolteacher, and Wade Wright, a one-time lay minister, opened the store two years ago. They learned the skills of the trade, bought several large power tools and started making simple wooden toys.

"They're old folk-toys. We're bringing them back — trying to revive them," Ms. Fitzgerald said.

Their first toy was an old-fashioned milk truck, made of solid maple. The wheels are attached with dowels instead of nails, for durability and safety.

"We figure if we pound a dowel in, it's almost impossible to take apart," she said.

"There is really not much design," Ms. Fitzgerald said as she sat in the living room of the store-home-workshop building, converted from an old sheet-metal factory which had been vacant for 15 years. "We want to produce fast and make good quality toys at a fair price. This is a working-class neighborhood which can afford our toys."

Most of the tops, tugboats, sailboats, ferry boats, trains, trucks, games and other small items for young children cost between $1 and $10. The wagons, blocks, rocking horses, table and chair sets and doll houses range from $20 to $50.

When the shop opened, Ms. Fitzgerald said, about 50 items were produced. But business grew quickly, and now they stock about 200 toys. After the summer fairs are over, business slows down, which gives the toymakers time to build up their stock.

Most of the toys are plain wood, but the tugboat is painted by hand and the train carries small brightly colored people. "Kids love colors," she said, adding that the tub toys are made of pine so they will float.

For Ms. Fitzgerald, toymaking was the result of a dream and a need to work with her hands.

"I had a dream of being a cabinet maker. It sounded so romantic," she said. "Instead, we started toymaking.

"It was hard at first, but it's working real well. Anything working with my hands, I really get into. It's therapy for me."

Toymaking is definitely not an eight-hour-a-day job, Ms. Fitzgerald said. "While we're making toys, we can't keep the shop open, too, so we have very sporadic hours."

And when they are working, they have all sorts of help from the neighborhood.

"We're running a free day-care center. Mothers who go to the store send their children down here. I put them to work and they love it," she said.

"Lots and lots of kids come in. Some are friends of the shop and some help by coming to fairs with us. We feel we're an integral part of the neighborhood," she said.

One day, Ms. Fitzgerald said, she would like to offer apprentice programs for the neighborhood boys and girls, "but that's probably not realistic."

In addition, the shop lends its tools to neighborhood machinists. "We get a nice friendly feeling of mutual aid," she said.

Wade and Ms. Fitzgerald have set up a worker-managed operation. As the sign says in the shop: "In a worker-managed shop everybody is their own boss."

"It's an important experiment — taking a workplace on a small scale. We're finding it's real hard — it's a lot easier to ask someone what to do," she said.

Profits are not great. "We're trying to make a living while giving ourselves meaningful work," she said. "The shop provides us enough to live simply."

Always Check Escape Windows

Before buying a new mobile home, check the escape windows in the bedrooms to be sure they open easily.

According to NCSU agricultural extension specialists, mobile homes built since June, 1976, have windows designed as escape routes in emergencies.

Be sure the windows in the one you buy work satisfactorily.

Men Now Baking Bread At Home

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

In the first years of this century, women were the breadmakers in American homes. Most of the American cookbooks on bread written since then — and there are at least two dozen of them — have women as authors.

But in recent years, an increasing number of men are enjoying baking good loaves at home and some of them are writing about the craft.

Bernard Clayton, Jr., author of the new "The Breads of France" (Bobbs Merrill), entered the cookbook field five years ago with his "The Complete Book of Breads"—the result of a hobby. After the publication of his first book, Clayton started giving classes in bread-baking along with his work at Indiana University, Bloomington, Ill., as a writer and editor.

Clayton is an inveterate researcher. In preparation for his new book, he and his wife spent months traveling in France while he learned, at first hand, how to make the specialties of French bakers in 21 regions. Only one shopkeeper, the widow of a boulanger, refused to part with a recipe for a galette because she had promised her husband never to give it away.

Before each chapter in "The Breads of France," there's a generous "travel scenario" and each recipe has an introductory note.

Here is Clayton's recipe for the famous Parisian pain d'epice. Cooks in the United States have long been interested in these spice loaves — perhaps because they are so different from traditional American gingerbread.

BERNARD CLAYTON'S PAIN D'EPICE

- 1 cup hot tap water (120 to 130 degrees)
- 1 cup honey
- ¼ cup sugar
- 1 pinch salt
- 2 teaspoons baking soda
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- ¼ cup rum or water
- 1½ teaspoons ground anise seeds
- 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- ¾ teaspoon ground ginger
- ¼ teaspoon ground cloves
- 2 cups rye flour
- 1½ cups unbleached white flour
- 1 teaspoon grated orange rind
- 2-3rds cup chopped almonds
- ½ cup raiins (finely chopped) or currants

In a large bowl, pour hot water over honey. Add sugar, salt, baking soda and baking powder; stir to dissolve. Add rum, spices, 1 cup of rye and 1 cup of white flour and stir to blend. Stir in the remaining rye and white flour to make a thick smooth batter. Add orange rind, almonds and raisins; stir about 25 strokes to mix thoroughly, but don't overbeat. Set aside while preparing pans.

Grease two small (7½ by 3½) loaf pans. Line each with a sheet of wax paper that overlaps the long sides (but not the ends) by 1 inch. With large spoon and rubber scraper (dipping scraper in water if dough sticks to it), fill pans ¾ full.

Bake on the middle shelf of preheated 400-degree oven for 10 minutes; reduce heat to 350 degrees and continue baking until a cake tester thrust into the center comes out clean and tops are a deep brown—50 minutes. A large crevice will probably run the length of each loaf. Place pans on their sides on wire racks; using the overlapping paper to help you, gently tug the loaves free of the pans. Cool completely. Wrap tightly and age for several days before slicing thin. May be refrigerated for several weeks or frozen for several months.

IMMIGRANT

Shige Tahara, the widow of a hotel and boarding house operator, had just handed the council a cashier's check for $60,000 as a gift.

"It's a small token of my appreciation to Sacramento," said the native of Japan through an interpreter. Mrs. Tahara, who came to the United States in 1925, was interned in a relocation camp with her husband, Matsutaro, during World War II.

City officials said it was the first time in memory someone had given a substantial cash gift with no strings attached.

Accidental Poisonings

Most accidental poisonings occur in the home. These are accidents that could be prevented say specialists with the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service.

Never store pesticides near food or where they may get mixed with cleaning supplies, other household items or medicines.

Always keep pesticides in their original containters, tightly closed and well labeled. If the original label comes off, paste it back on. If a pesticide or container has lost its label, don't guess what it may contain, dispose of it carefully.

Stamp Deal Still Worst

By United Press International

The world's most valuable stamp, the one-cent British Guiana black-on-magenta of 1856, found its way into the philatelic field through the worst stamp swap in history, according to Alain de Cadenet, of the British Post Office.

In 1873, L. Vernon Vaughn, who lived in Georgetown, British Guiana, found a shabby-looking, octagonally-cut black-on-magenta Guiana stamp on an old envelope. The stamp had been initialed E.D.W. and was postmarked Demerara, AP4, 1856.

British Guiana was the first British colony in the Western hemisphere to issue stamps in 1850, and when they ran out in 185[illegible] new provisional stamps were used, with the initials of the postmasters written as they were sold to prevent forgery.

Later the young collector received on approval mint stamps from a dealer in London. He needed $2.50 to buy them and persuaded the top local collector, N. R. McKennan, to give him that sum for his black-on-magenta.

When McKennan sold his collection to a dealer friend in Scotland five years later, the rare stamp was quickly noticed and it was passed from dealers to collectors, with its price ever increasing.

In 1968 the famous one-cent black-on-magenta was purchased by Irving Weinberg at auction for $280,000, to date the highest price paid for a single stamp.

WATER

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The most serious problem facing Californian farmers in the 1980s will be the same one that has plagued them since large-scale irrigated farming started here a century ago — the availability of water, according to a University of California task force.

Mechanic Tunes Car As Musician Tunes A Violin

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

STOCKTON, N.J. (AP) — On the way to the hospital one dark September night, Bertha Schuck, assisted by her nervous husband, Anton, gave birth to a baby boy in the back seat of the car.

The car was a 1932 Franklin which was two years old at the time. It has since passed to the son's ownership and still runs perfectly. No wonder. Even those unaware of the circumstances of his arriving will tell you that Richard Anton Schuck is a born car expert.

That is why people drive hundreds of miles to this rural Delaware River village of 600, after waiting two months for an appointment, to have Richard work on their precision-built cars.

"There was never any question that I would be a mechanic," Richard said. "Growing up, most kids play with toys. I didn't. I played with auto parts, which were more fun. They did something."

Mechanic he is, of a sort rarely found these days, but to see him at work the word artist also comes to mind.

Richard Schuck tunes a car the way a musician tunes a violin, puts his ear right up against the engine and fusses with it until every noise becomes a note precisely to his liking.

He disdains electronic analyzers and other diagnostic gadgets. "All those things do is give you averages. They read the same in Florida as in Alaska, the same if a person drives on the highway or just drives to the store.

"That's not good enough. I know my customers and how they use their cars. Besides, I know better than a machine when a car is right. I can just tell."

What is more, he fixes cars, actually fixes what's wrong.

"That car there has a bad alternator. I think it's fair to say most shops would replace it. But it doesn't need an $80 alternator, it needs a $6 bearing. I'll fix the bearing."

Schuck's garage is an old building with no advertising on it, nothing even that says it is a garage, just his name on the facade, and, chiseled on a stone in the foundation, an inscription: "In this building the public has been served since 1832." It had been a blacksmith shop before his father, a German immigrant, converted it into a garage at a time when an automobile was still a novelty. Until he built his own house a few years ago, Richard lived all his life in an apartment upstairs.

Because of his reputation, and that of his father before him, a reputation spread solely by word of mouth, Richard turns away twice the work that he takes in but he refuses to expand.

"I would lose touch. I want to see, personally, every car that comes in. I'm a mechanic, not a businessman."

Instead, he has taken to specializing. He fixes only foreign made cars, almost exclusively German ones.

"German cars are not only made better but are made with the knowledge that sooner or later they will have to be worked on. They are put together with the mechanic in mind. Common sense.

Dog's Bid For White House Helping Strays

TULLAHOMA, Tenn. (AP) — Lady, a mongrel dog that racked up 140 votes in the 1976 presidential election, is running again. She has given up her advice-to-dog-lovers column in a national weekly newspaper to devote full time to campaigning.

As in 1976, Lady's 1980 campaign slogan is "It's better for a dog to go to the White House than for the White House to go to the dogs."

C.E. "Stoney" Jackson, Lady's secretary and spokesman, says Lady's campaign is serious. "There are a lot of two-legged dogs in Washington," Jackson said in a telephone interview, "so we might as well have a four-legged one."

Of course, if you want to vote for Lady you'll have to write her name in. Election officials aren't likely to permit her name on the ballot.

Animals have run for office before. Back in the 1950s, in Sao Paulo — Brazil's largest city — a popular rhinoceros in the city zoo named Cacareco got enough votes to be elected city alderman. The write-in votes were voided, however, and the rhino never took office.

In Brazil, where voting is obligatory, voting for an animal or fictitious character has long been a way of registering protest to official candidates.

Lady's campaign is not all just in fun. Jackson, 65, an ordained minister and former sports writer, hopes her campaign will publicize his efforts on behalf of stray dogs everywhere.

To this end, he has started a petition drive with the acronym of PAWS — Political Action for the World's Strays — calling for legislation outlawing the "mercy" killing of healthy animals.

"Millions of such animals are administered capital punishment each year, without indictment and without trial, in so-called humane society 'shelters' and in dog pounds operated by municipalities and countries," the petition says.

Jackson has already taken on city hall in this small community and has won. Acting as his own lawyer, he obtained a Circuit Court injunction prohibiting the city from leaving animals in its pound unattended without food or water during weekends.

Jackson is also publishing a second edition of Lady's book, "The Gospel According to Lady," in which the canine author relates how she, a mistreated stray, came to stay with Jackson.

Jackson, in addition to Lady, boards about 18 other dogs. "This is not a house," he says, "It's a kennel."

Jackson says some Hollywood producers are interested in filming Lady's story and he quotes Lady as saying, "If I don't make it to the White House in real life, I hope to make it in reel life."

But Jackson's and Lady's true goal is to focus attention on the plight of strays.

'Wurd Factory' Is Gill's Humor

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — Written large on the glass of the door opening into a midtown Manhattan building's Room 1515 are the words: "The Wurd Factory."

Inside the office are words by the thousands. They are in books, and the books are piled randomly all over the small room so that it seems clothed in them.

Standing behind a heap of miscellaneous volumes is writer Brendan Gill.

"The misspelling on the door is my idea of a joke," Gill, who has written many, many words over the years, explains with a smile. "As for this," and he waves at the clutter of books surrounding him, "I pretend to know where everything is, but all I really know is that the book I want is somewhere in this room."

A tall, relaxed man with a ready laugh, the 64-year-old Gill has been with The New Yorker magazine "ever since I was a little boy.

"I graduated from Yale, I was married the next day, we honeymooned, we came back, I sold a short story to The New Yorker and I've been with the magazine ever since — 43 years."

For 10 years he has been the magazine's Broadway drama critic, but before that, he says, "there are many things to do at the magazine and I've done dozens. In fact I've done everything on the magazine that can be done except sell them a drawing. I draw all the time. I hope they buy one of my drawings before I die."

Gill also writes books — poetry, fiction, nonfiction — and has 11 to his credit.

Gill currently is working on a book about Stanford White, "a great American architect. I am not an architect but my hobby is the study of architecture. I guess I am an architectural historian.

Gill, who lives in Bronxville, N.Y., has ambitious plans when he finishes his book on White.

He loves writing — "I'm doing exactly what I want to do so I can hardly wait to get up in the morning to do it." His schedule calls for more books:

"First, a book of essays about the people and the times of 1930s; then a book of fiction; then four novellas which would appear in one volume, and when I'm in my 80s I want to write a book about the houses that architects designed for themselves. Actually, I look forward more to doing that book than being in my 80s."

Gill has written fiction, nonfiction and poetry but given a choice "I'd rather be a poet than anything else. Poetry is the highest form of writing there is. It is followed by fiction and then by factual writing.

Martian Probes Uncover Big Diversity In Planet

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Earth's most intense probe of another planet shows Mars to be a surprisingly diverse world of gigantic volcanoes, great channels and canyons, meteor craters, swirling red dust and polar ice fields.

For nearly 2½ years now, the planet has been probed and sampled and photographed and analyzed as the billion-dollar Viking mission — which began as two orbiting spacecraft and two landers — continued operations beyond even the most optimistic projections.

"Mars has come into much better focus, but the number of mysteries has also increased," said Bruce Murray, director of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory here.

Murray was one of about 500 scientists at last week's Second International Colloquium on Mars whose scientific interest has long been shared by the public in its fascination with the planet.

Virtually everyone agreed with James R. Arnold of the University of California-San Diego that "Mars is an extremely diverse object and we have consistently underestimated that diversity. I feel certain there are many surprises still in store for us."

The planet's surface varies from gigantic, permanent ice caps to sprawling dusty plains, from thousand-mile canyons to immense volcanic cones that climb 15 miles from the surface.

From night to day, the always frigid temperatures vary 100 degrees or more. Temperatures dip to 238 below zero at Mars' north pole in Winter. The polar ice caps grow and shrink with the seasons.

The scientists also agreed that:

—The channels and canyons that slice through the martian surface were cut eons ago by mammoth floods. "It has been generally agreed," Murray said, "that catastrophic flooding really did happen on Mars in a very large way." Where the water came from and where it went are open to debate.

—The ice that gives a permanent white cap to the north pole is almost certainly frozen water, although mostly covered with a layer of frozen carbon dioxide — or dry ice — in the winter. The south pole is also covered with ice, but its composition is less certain.

—The very thin martian atmosphere is about 96 percent carbon dioxide and contains less water vapor than Earth's driest deserts. Earth's atmosphere is mostly nitrogen and oxygen.

—There is no evidence of life, as we think of life, in the martian soil where the two Viking missions landed. The search for extraterrestrial life was easily the most exciting part of the mission after the landers settled on the planet in 1976.

The returns have been studied and restudied, but "it is clear ... that there is no strong evidence for life on Mars at the present time," said J. William Schopf of UCLA.

Then, like most other scientists, he adds, "I don't think Viking has been able to tell us whether there is life on that planet or whether there is no life .... It is impossible for the life problem to be resolved ... without bringing rocks back from Mars."

That sentiment reflects another topic of the conference: What next?

"This is, of course, the Viking wake," said Richard M. Goody of Harvard. "We are burying a very large mission."

Viking, with one of its orbiters and both landers still working, has lasted far beyond its contract lifetime of three months and its 2½ years of data will keep scientists busy long into the future.

The mission was to be shut down next month, but the Jet Propulsion Laboratory now talks about keeping one lander operating for up to another decade to make once-a-week transmissions of weather data and perhaps some pictures. The second lander and orbiter would not be decomissioned and might be reactivated to monitor special situations.

JPL chief scientist Arden L. Albee noted, however, "At this time, there is no planned next mission to Mars."

Several scientists said that the cost of even modest visits to other planets is skyrocketing while Congress and the administration seem increasingly hesitant to finance such massive projects.

Future missions, Murray said, "will not happen simply because scientists sit down and come up with a mission that sounds good to them and then expect society to implement it.

"Good science must be coupled with other themes" of public importance, he said. National pride was a major impetus for the Apollo program, he said, while the public's imagination was caught by Viking's search for life and technological wizardry.

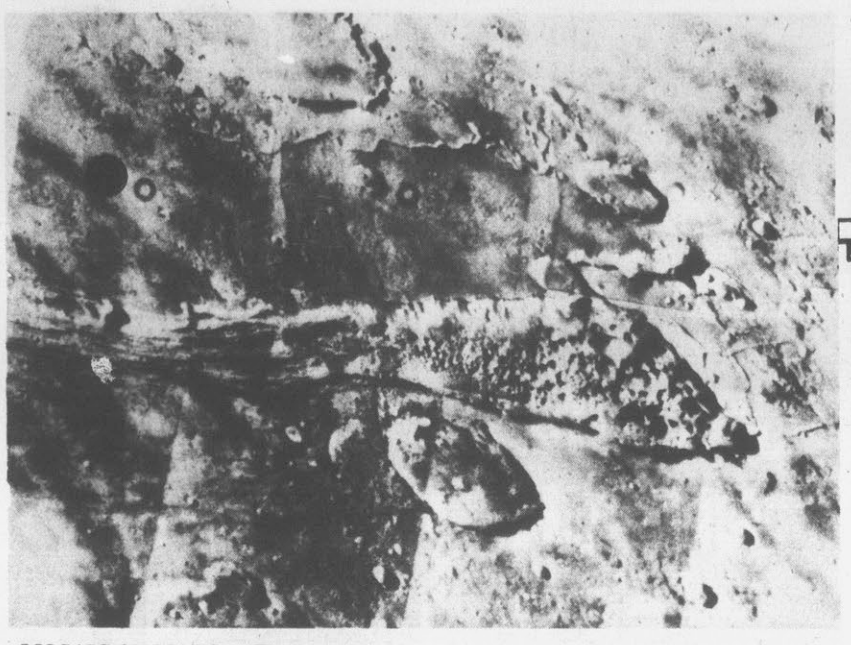
"I don't think the U.S. planetary exploration program has closed down," Murray said. "But there is a definite shift away from the moon and an apparent shift away from Mars."

But a panel of scientists nonetheless talked with hope over the options for further exploring Mars, and Albee estimated the costs.

Least expensive, perhaps $250 million, would be an orbiter that would repeatedly circle the planet. Another $150 million would allow a handful of landers to scatter over the surface. For roughly $1 billion, an unmanned rover could wander over perhaps 120 miles of Mars. Finally, for something over $1.5 billion, an unmanned craft might bring back martian soil to Earth for analysis.

Years of experience with the rocks brought back from the moon have given scientists the ability to extract huge amounts of information from dust-sized particles, said Gerald R. Wasserburg of the California Institute of Technology.

The idea of another Apollo-style commitment to send people to Mars was scarcely discussed. It was dismissed as too expensive and too complex for the forseeable future.



MOSAIC OF MARS — This mosaic of eight photos of the surface of the planet Mars was taken by Viking I in 1976. Nearly two and a half years of intense probing shows the planet to be a surprisingly diverse world of gigantic volcanoes, great channels and canyons, meteor craters, swirling red duce and polar ice fields. Common Earache Gets Special Research Sum

The basic childhood earache. It's painful middle ear infection which can turn the sweetest of youngsters into irritable patients while parents dial for a doctor's appointment and dig the heating pad out of the closet.

The classic earache, known to physicians as otitis media, most frequently strikes children from six months to five years old. To treat the problem, doctors generally prescribe antibiotics, but the drugs are not always effective. That's because in some cases laboratory technicians are not able to identify the type of bacteria responsible for the infection and, without an accurate diagnosis, doctors cannot be specific in prescribing the appropriate drug to overcome it.

An East Carolina University School of Medicine microbiology professor currently is studying organisms in the middle ear to learn more about the bacteria present in otitis media. The project is funded by a $10,000 grant from the Deafness Research Foundation.

"Some children have recurrent otitis which does not respond well to therapy," says Dr. Robert Fulghum, principal investigator for the project. "We know that in children six months to two years old, we usually find one type of anaerobic organism in the middle ear, and in children two to 10 years old, we find other types."

The purpose of the current project, Fulghum says, is to see if these anaerobic organisms — bacteria which cannot grow in air — are the cause of an otitis infection or just naturally present in the middle ear.

The project represents a team effort by the medical school's pathology department, which will provide microscopic studies of the infection, and Dr. H. Jefferson Daniel of the ECU Speech, Language and Auditory Pathology department, who will examine the animal models for behavioral signs which are symptomatic of earaches.

In investigating another aspect of the disease, Dr. A. Mason Smith, a microbiologist at the School of Medicine, will contribute immunological studies to see if the body develops antibodies against the organisms.

Overcame Club Foot Handicap

NEW YORK (UPI) — When he was born Harold Roberts' parents were told that his two club feet would restrict him to life on crutches. But six operations and specialized care helped the now 13-year-old Bayshore, Long Island, youngster overcome his handicap and become the star of a championship little league football team last fall.

The dramatic recovery was due to the treatment rendered by the children's foot clinic at Presbyterian Hospital.

So many of the club foot patients are sports-minded that psychiatric researchers from Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center plan to study them to find out precisely what spurs them onto the athletic field.

Club feet are usually twisted in such a way that untreated patients find it difficult to walk.

Remembers Chesapeake

By PETER VANDEVANTER

ST. MICHAELS, Md. (UPI) — James Michener visited the Chesapeake Bay in his childhood and remembered as an adult that its lush Eastern Shore "cried out for literary form." The result: his current best-selling novel "Chesapeake."

"It has a thousand inlets and, like Scheherazade, you could spend a thousand nights exploring them," marveled the Pulitzer Prize-winning author. "It cried out for literary form."

The novel, the story of three families spanning four centuries, has sold nearly a million copies. Michener says he is mystified by its success.

"I never thought such a regional subject as the bay could have such appeal," he said. "Perhaps I touched things that were more universal than I thought. The great subjects in the book are religion, slavery and watermen."

Michener — who has penned socio-historical fiction about such diverse places and cultures as Hawaii, Spain, Hungary, Israel, and Japan — wrote "Chesapeake" while living two miles outside the quiet Chesapeake Bay resort town of St. Michaels.

He moved to the Eastern Shore from his Tinicum Township farm in Bucks County, Pa., three years ago to learn about watermen.

"I just moved in and waited six months so that everybody would get used to me, and then they were knocking on my door to tell me stories and I just listened," said Michener.

Michener went oystering, turtling and sailing and then, based on those experiences and his own knowledge, created fictitious islands, towns and people. He is a Quaker with a strong sense of the "brotherhood of man," so he made one of the three families in the book a Quaker family that fights for equal rights for blacks.

Michener said he gets his deep-seated desire to travel from his orphan childhood. After being cared for by a poor seamstress during his early years, he began a hitch-hiking tour of America at 14.

Michener did not write his first book until he was 40. Now, at 71, he has 26 to his credit. He also has taught in high school and college, edited textbooks, done a stint in the Navy and campaigned, unsuccessfully, for Congress.

"I never worried about the fact that I came to writing late," he said. "It was always in the cards. I jumped around early in life, but I never left a job. Other jobs always found me."

Michener, who writes five hours a day beginning early in the morning, calls each one of his books a "one-shot freak."

"I come to write every book in an arbitrary, personal way," he said.

"There are days I sit here writing and every invitation that comes in I would give a right arm to do. I don't always think writing books is the most important thing. But under the circumstances I'm getting older."

Always restless to work and travel, Michener said his next book will deal with Africa in the panoramic style that has become his trademark. He said he has visited the continent and already knows how the book will be structured.

Michener, who claims he never sermonizes, said the irony that a modern-day descendant of the Quaker family in "Chesapeake" becomes involved in Watergate and commits suicide is only "laid out" for the reader.

"I don't worry about people trying to figure out how much is true and how much is false," he said. "On the face, it's all false, but you see how close to home it hits."

Favors Surgery For Obesity

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — Surgery, not diet or drugs, is recommended by a Mayo lecturer as the best way to handle extreme obesity that is endangering a patient's health.

In a speech at The University of Michigan Medical Center, Dr. Ward O. Griffen, Jr., said the treatment of extreme overweight should not be regarded as simply a cosmetic measure.

Griffen, a professor and chairman of surgery at the University of Kentucky, said his patients include persons whose weight aggravated existing illnesses, imposed serious health risks of its own, provoked emotional problems and even prevented some from holding jobs. One such patient is a truck driver who sought treatment when he could no longer get behind the wheel of his vehicle.

Griffen added most patients treated by non-surgical methods eventually gain back all the weight they lost. He said the usual success rate for such treatments seems to be less than 10 percent.

Atomic Reactor Good Detective

COLLEGE STATION (UPI) — The one-megawatt atomic reactor at Texas A&M University has sent men to jail.

Because of irradiation, hair samples have been matched more closely than before, bullet fragments were traced back to their name brand and gold collector's coins have been checked to see if they were fake.

Several criminals have been convicted on the basis of evidence obtained through Texas A&M's Nuclear Science Center, and at least one acquittal resulted.

This kind of detective work is one of the more colorful aspects of chores handled regularly by the reactor, one of the nation's busiest, says director John Randall.

U.S. Airlines Are Flying High

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The nation's airlines may reach the 300-million-passenger mark in 1979, according to Paul R. Ignatius, president of the Air Transport Association.

Ignatius told an airline-industry purchasing and supplier forum here that, "It is possible that the U.S.'s scheduled airlines next year will carry 300 million passengers, compared with about 49 million just 20 years ago when the jet age began.

"This is possible," he added, "if the economy holds strong."

TARHEEL'S TOTAL DEAL

POLYGLYCOAT LUSTERIZING SEALANT
Polyglycoat is not just a polish, glaze, or wax. It is a liquid sealant providing a lustre surpassing that applied to your Toyota at the factory. When Polyglycoat is applied to the surface of an automobile, it penetrates the pores of both the paint and chrome to seal out the damaging effects of sun, wind, rain, salt and road abrasives that can make your car look old before its time. And it even makes your Toyota easier to wash. The best sealant available, Polyglycoat is guaranteed for 3 years.

6, 12, 18 MONTHS POLYGLYCOAT SEALANT RENEWAL
At intervals of 6, 12, and 18 months, customers should bring their Toyotas back to the dealer for a first-class, professionally applied Polyglycoat renewer at no extra cost. This renews surface silicones that are lost due to normal (exposure) wearing process.

POLYGLYCOAT RUST PROOFING SHIELD
To protect your investment in your new Toyota we rustproof your car in all places where rust can get a start such as seams, cracks and crevices, boxed-in areas and enclosed support sections, where water and moisture collect. What's more, if damaged, it heals itself by flowing over and shielding the exposed metal area. Polyglycoat Rustproofing Shield, rated no. 1 by independent laboratories in a comparison of 7 leading rust preventatives, is guaranteed for 7 long years with the best guarantee in the business.

POLYGLYCOAT INTERIOR PROTECTION
This quality stain repellent offers complete protection for vinyl and cloth as well as carpeting in your car against any spills such as cola, ice cream, chocolate, etc. This product maintains the beauty of your car's interior and keeps vinyl soft, leather like and new looking.

POLYGLYCOAT UNDERCOATING
This process not only is an undercoating but a sound deadener against road noise. It is also an undersealant offering superb protection against road salt, chemicals and stone bruises. Your car runs and rides quieter.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

Eye on our ramparts.

FOR O.W. SILER, Admiral, U.S. Coast Guard

Whenever I read of the Coast Guard, it's always a heroic deed in rescuing ships or sailors in distress. What other functions does the Guard fulfill? —J.E., Green Bay, Wis.

● Search-and-rescue missions have traditionally been our bread-and-butter operations. Other demanding missions are the protection of our fish stocks in the 200-mile conservation zone off our coasts, developing regulations governing standards for oil tankers and monitoring the cleanup of oil spills. We also are called upon to work with other agencies to stop illegal drugs from reaching our shores. Additional peacetime missions include merchant marine safety, maintaining aids to navigation, operating waterway and harbor navigation systems, domestic and polar icebreaking activities, recreational boating safety. We are truly a multimission service.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

I just saw Force 10 From Navarone (filmed in Yugoslavia) and got green with envy at the thought of Barbara Bach being the only woman in the cast. Tell me that it wasn't all fun. —T.D., Pomona, Calif.

● Can't do that, because she had a ball — but not in the way you think. Said Barbara: "The most fun I had was doing all my own stunts, such as the scene where Franco Nero chases me through the heavy underbrush, shoots me in the back, and I fall and roll down a 25-foot stony hill. It could have been done by a stuntwoman, but I wanted to do it myself." She does admit that being the only gal around to cash in on masculine attention wasn't all that bad; as well as the 13 male stars, there were also 2,000 soldiers supplied by Marshal Tito as extras. But to show there was a fly in her ointment, Barbara said it was bitter cold in the Yugoslavian back-mountain country.

American International Pictures

Barbara's monopoly game.

FOR CAROL BURNETT

Is it fact or fiction that funny people never get nervous when acting? —I.R., Trenton, N.J.

● I can only speak for myself, and the answer is fact! Many other things set me on edge, and from a professional point of view, the idea of making a speech does more than make me a nervous wreck; it terrifies me. Acting, though, is different. I'm always doing things with other people. But a speech! I'd rather scrub floors — without knee pads.

FOR MIKE DOUGLAS, talk-show host

How did you manage to conquer your terrible fear of flying? —I.P., Richmond, Ind.

● In the course of going to our many remote locations — from Monte Carlo and Moscow to Hollywood and Dubuque — in all sorts of planes, I find one thing is constant; my white knuckles. So I try to keep my mind occupied. My wife, Gen, and I will stock up on newspapers and magazines. If there's a movie, I'll watch it. Anything to avoid thinking about where I am and how I am going to get down.

FOR TIM MATHESON, star of National Lampoon's Animal House

I've heard your house is a bit peculiar. Please tell me about it. —W.P., Cocoa Beach, Fla.

● It's built from recycled materials, and I helped design and construct it, incorporating a solar heating system throughout. I believe that the kind of place you live in should be fun and an extension of what you are. The circular house is made of wood, poured concrete and glass, set high in the hills with a canyon and ocean view. Does that sound peculiar to you?

FOR LANI O'GRADY, star of ABC-TV's Eight is Enough

Please explain why no one likes to eat with you? —J.K., Easton, Pa.

● I'm very finicky about food. I'm a vegetarian, and there aren't too many restaurants around that cater to my breed! I prefer the freshest produce available, and there's nothing fresher than going into my garden and picking my own supper. I went vegetarian last year, and working 12 hour days, need all the energy I can get.

FOR SUSAN SARANDON, star of King of the Gypsies

How do your folks feel about your being in films that aren't geared toward the family? —T.J., Decatur, Ala.

● My father is more offended by foul language than nudity. Once, when my young brother asked me to explain something I said and did in a movie, Mom kicked me under the table so that I would change the subject. Anything I might do to raise eyebrows is cancelled, as far as Mom is concerned, by the fact that Robert Redford is my friend. She considers that the ultimate in achievement.

FOR DR. GEORGE GALLUP, chairman, the Gallup poll organization

● A recent poll brought the surprising results that more than four adults in 10 in the United States believe that there is a place for a new "center" party, with Republicans representing the conservative/right and Democrats the liberal/left. In recent decades, third parties have appealed to only a rather small minority.

PRO AND CON

Should It Be Legally Permissible For Corporations to Support Political Candidates?

PRO Stanley Kaleczyc, Associate General Counsel, U.S. Chamber of Commerce

The question, more properly stated, is whether any organizations, which espouse a particular social or economic point of view, including labor unions, environmental groups, tax and "reform" councils, as well as corporations, should be permitted to participate actively in the political process. The answer in each case must be in the affirmative. If the constitutional guarantee of freedom of speech means anything it means the right to participate in the political process. The Supreme Court has stated political speech itself is protected, regardless of the speaker. Contributions to candidates and campaigns, including those voluntarily made to corporate political action committees, are fundamentally a form of speech.

CON Senator Ted Kennedy, (D.-Mass.)

Allowing the direct infusion of vast amounts of corporate influence money into political campaigns will put elections squarely on the auction block, for sale to the highest bidder. Congress should clamp down on the mushrooming abuse of corporate "political action committees," which are being created at the rate of over one a day. More than 800 corporate PAC's are now in existence and thousands more are on the drawing boards. These PAC's are multiplying, and they are trying to buy every Senator, every Representative and every issue in sight. The First Amendment was never intended to protect such an assault on the integrity of government. Individual contributions, yes; corporations, no.

Port Huron, The Times Herald

A crowd rallying in Lansing, Michigan, to listen to speakers denounce the porn merchants.

THE PROBLEM OF PORNOGRAPHY IN CITIES LARGE AND SMALL

By Allan Dodds Frank

A pornographer recently showed The Seduction of Amy at his theater two blocks from the White House.

While Amy Carter's parents have the Secret Service to protect her, most other parents don't have the luxury of knowing that their children won't be exposed to pornographic material.

Only days earlier, the theater owner and two associates had escaped prosecution after a federal jury of seven men and five women could not decide what was obscene. Playing a movie that may have taunted the First Daughter's parents was a typical stunt for a big-time smut peddler who may be more knowledgeable than most prosecutors are about what the community will tolerate.

A Family Weekly study of 14 middle-sized cities shows that the most-frequently voiced concern about pornography is that it may harm children.

There were other major dilemmas:

1. What are the effects of pornography and prostitution on the mores and economy of a community?

2. Do breakdowns of authority and in the belief of the sanctity of sex result from hard-core porn?

3. Is there a resolution to the division between people who advocate censorship of pornography and those persons who feel that all free speech suffers from forms of restrictions?

4. Is there a constitutional way to control pornography?

Following recent Congressional passage of child-abuse laws that provide severe penalties, graphic smut involving children can no longer be found on display at adult stores. So-called "chicken"books and films are now almost always sold surreptitiously, as most nude pictures were handled 30 years ago.

Even in communities that have not yet prohibited the sale of X-rated material to youngsters, dealers have voluntarily instituted bans on customers younger than 18 or 21 years old.

Large urban centers are no longer the only places where the pornography business flourishes. The Family Weekly survey found that in most communities of 100,000 or more people, there are several adult entertainment businesses.

In Ventura, Calif., for instance, some citizens became so frustrated by their inability to prevent "adult" newspapers from being displayed in street vending racks last year, they began illegally attacking the racks with spray paint.

The mass circulation men's magazines rarely encounter difficulty anymore, although merchants in some communities continue to sell them secretly. The demand for pornography remains almost insatiable.

And the entwined issues of censorship, First Amendment protection and the meaning of obscenity are very complicated. The question is so difficult that the Supreme Court has handled more obscenity cases than nearly any other issue in its history.

A 1973 decision by a divided Court still provides the basis for a community to decide what constitutes obscenity. The material can be classified as obscene if it violates "contemporary community standards" and is without any redeeming literary, artistic or social merit.

Yet the Court chose not to prescribe methods to guide a community in determining what the standards are.

The experience of a Washington, D.C., jury is typical. On six of 12 counts involving racy adult movies portraying graphic sex acts, the jury acquitted the defendants. On the remaining counts, the jury decided it could not agree on a standard for obscenity.

While it is a frustrating process, more conservative communities continue to try to establish a community standard.

In the heavily Mormon community of Logan, Utah, politicians and a citizens' group last year attacked as obscene the movie Looking For Mr. Goodbar that was generally regarded by critics as a serious feature film with an R-rating (restricted to 16 years old and older).

"Hundreds wrote letters and signed petitions demanding that the exhibitors be hauled into court and run out of town," the Logan Herald Journal newspaper reported. "Defenders of the movie responded by giving the theater its best box-office receipts ever."

The futility of preventing the screening of serious films with offensive scenes had been displayed only weeks earlier in Provo, Utah, an equally conservative community. In an opinion dealing with the same film, a Provo judge ruled that Goodbar could not be classified as obscene because, under the U.S. Supreme Court guidelines, "the film is a serious work of art and literature and for that reason alone is entitled to the protection of the First Amendment."

In an effort to meet the prevailing community mores in Logan but avoid wasting time and money on losing court cases, police and prosecutors try to obtain "gentlemen's agreements" from Logan's booksellers and movie distributors. If material borders on the obscene, authorities ask that it be withheld.

In Pontiac, Mich., the Oakland Press has promoted a drive to clean up the community by controlling pornography sales establishments with restrictive zoning ordinances.

Another Michigan paper, the Port Huron Times-Herald, has been one of the most active newspapers in the nation in fighting so-called obscenity. As many other newspapers have done, the Times-Herald has refused to accept advertising for movies it considers obscene.

The pitfalls of censorship can be avoided, the paper argues, if elementary economics are exercised. If people stop buying pornography and merchants stop stocking it, producers of the blue material won't be able to find markets.

In Concord, Calif., the economics issue pushes the situation into "battle after battle of what's obscene and what's freedom of expresion," according to Contra Costa Times' managing editor Jack Winning.

The confrontation in Concord between an adult theater, a religious bookstore next door and city prosecutors has been rife with civil and criminal cases against the theater's operator.

The Bloomington, Ill., Daily Pantagraph reported that one Chenoa, Ill., business man became so upset about X-rated movies that he bought the local adult theater, then discontinued its policy of showing skin-flicks.

Other cities where adult theaters are widespread will never have the option to solve the problem by buying out the only show in town. In those communities authorities have found that a concentration of porno businesses often creates more problems, such as loitering hoodlums, than does "scatter zoning," where one store per area may be permitted.

Law-enforcement sources believe that the changeover from straight movies to adult fare is in large part due to a takeover by organized crime of the pornography business.

Organized crime operators own distribution rights to many adult films and make pirate copies of others. Also, the mobsters hire outsiders to run the theaters, and then they put their names on the corporate papers. The result is that, even when prosecutors win cases against porno shops, they rarely touch the important owners.

Neal Bintz, managing editor of the Utica Sunday Observer-Dispatch, perhaps best summarizes the lack of success in stemming the flow of pornography. Bintz expressed his personal feelings in a letter to Family Weekly.

"As a father of seven, I guess I have some background for speaking out as a concerned family man. Most of us seem to protect our own as far as what they see, what they read and who they associate with. But we don't seem to be able to band together for any concrete effort that might really bring results.

"Perhaps this thrust should come from the churches. I am an elder in our church, charged with the responsibility of looking after the morals of our congregation, and yet I have never stood up and demanded that we act as a body against the filth that surrounds us. I buy magazines at a newsstand that has a whole rack of the stuff. Shouldn't I boycott the place? Apathy has grown in this country, and, even though we pride ourselves on our togetherness, we are really separate little enclaves protecting our own. FW

FAMILY MEDICINE AND HEALTH

All of us are interested in our own and our children's health, what harms or helps it.

THE VITAL IMPORTANCE OF CHILDHOOD INOCULATIONS

Bacteria have existed throughout recorded history. Whole populations were wiped out by epidemics before the study of immunology developed vaccines to protect against these terrible diseases. The currently available vaccines are safe, easy to administer and effective. Despite this, a large percentage of our children are still inadequately protected. In this day and age, it is downright criminal not to make certain that each and every child is properly immunized.

Many of us still vividly remember the dreaded fear of smallpox and the horror of living through a polio epidemic. Nowadays, few give these killer diseases a second thought. With the widespread use of the vaccines we have, the incidence of many illnesses has dramatically decreased. The result has been that too many of us have been lulled into a false sense of security. Except for smallpox, all but eradicated from the face of the earth, other dangerous and potentially lethal bugs, for which there are vaccines, are still around. If enough children are not given these immunizations, the chances of an epidemic increase. This is exactly what happened with measles. Outbreaks of measles have been occurring in various sections of the United States in recent years where a significant percentage of the children were not immunized against measles. Many people are under the false impression that measles is a benign and harmless illness. Not so. The complications of measles can lead to permanent brain damage or death.

All segments of our population are not being adequately protected. Although the problem is greatest in the inner cities and urban ghettos and among the rural poor, many thousands of middle-class children are also unprotected. The sad fact of the matter is that more than five million preschool children currently are not fully immunized and protected. One out of every three preschool children has not been immunized against one or more diseases. This is a disgrace.

Every parent must get busy right now. You must make sure that your child receives all the immunizations he or she requires. There is no excuse for neglecting this most important area of health care.

Family Medicine

THE FOURTEEN MOST COMMON MEDICAL MYTHS

By Marilyn Mercer

Myths abound in almost every field of human interest, and medicine is no exception. Folk tales about the care and health of the human body are often passed from generation to generation, from one family to another or from friend to friend. Not unlike Hollywood gossip, medical rumours that seem even vaguely possible can quickly become established "facts" in our culture's consciousness. On these pages, the air is cleared by coming to grips with some of the most widespread notions about what can harm or help your health — and we are all set straight by separating medical fact from unfounded bunk.

Blood Pressure Should Be 100 Plus Your Age

This is a myth, and a dangerous one for several reasons. First, it refers only to systolic pressure. Blood pressure readings are given in two figures — 120 over 80, for example, or 130 over 85. The top figure — the systolic pressure — is a measurement of the force exerted against the arterial wall at the beginning of a heart beat. The second — the diastolic pressure — is exerted while the heart is at rest. The systolic pressure is affected by stress and can be much higher when the patient is being examined by a strange doctor for an insurance policy or a much desired job. Doctors call temporarily elevated systolic pressure "cuff fever."

The bottom figure, the diastolic pressure, is the more important one. It generally stays the same, regardless of circumstances, and if it's over 90, that's a danger signal.

The "100 plus your age" formula obviously has nothing to do with diastolic pressure. Furthermore, most physicians agree that a consistent diastolic figure of 135 or more is as dangerous for a 50-year-old as it is for a 20-year-old. A senior citizen of 80 with a systolic reading of 180 would be in serious trouble. Blood pressure tends to grow higher with age, and it also becomes more damaging with age. Fortunately, there are drugs that can bring most cases of high blood pressure to a safe level at any age.

Eating Chocolate Causes or Aggravates Acne

Acne is caused by hormonal changes in the body that stimulate the production of natural oils in the skin. This usually happens at puberty, but may happen to some adult women just before their period. The pores become clogged with oil, attracting dirt and grime to form blackheads. If the clogged pores become infected, the familiar acne pimple forms. Overindulging in chocolate, nuts and other fatty foods can be bad for your teeth, weight and general health but have nothing to do with acne. Studies, however, have shown that iodine, found in shellfish, iodized salt and the seaweed favored by health-food enthusiasts, can promote acne. So can another "health food" — wheat germ, which contains a substance that's the chemical equivalent of the sex hormone androgen.

Massive Doses of Vitamin C Can Prevent Colds

This is one of those irritating half-truth myths that plague nutritionists. If you've been getting too little Vitamin C in your diet — skipping breakfast, having a tuna salad or hamburger lunch and a meat-and-potatoes dinner, adding Vitamin C tablets can certainly increase your resistance to colds — or other diseases.

The Nobel Prize-winning scientist, Dr. Linus Pauling, has determined, by experimenting on himself, that massive doses of Vitamin C have rendered him and his wife cold free. This may be true. The big question is: what was Dr. Pauling eating before he discovered Vitamin C? Moreover, the massive doses Dr. Pauling recommends for everyone may indeed prevent colds, but at the same time, initiate kidney damage. The "megavitamin" program, that is, masses of any particular vitamin, should only be undertaken under a doctor's supervision, when it is determined for one reason or another that the patient is deficient in or for various reasons cannot utilize a particular vitamin.

Red Meat Is the Best Source of Body-Building Protein

No, it's not. Eggs are the most complete source of protein, followed closely by milk. Fish and chicken (with fat removed) yield protein of equal quality to red meat and at a lower calorie count, since even lean beef contains a certain amount of fat.

Eating Chicken, Potato or Other Creamy Salad at a Picnic Can Cause Botulism

These creamy, nonacid foods can cause food poisoning and a resultant upset stomach if they've been left standing around unrefrigerated too long. But the potentially deadly botulism bacillus can only grow in a closed container. The most frequent causes of botulism are home-canned, nonacid foods (string beans, canned corn and the like) that have been improperly heat-processed. Many good general cookbooks contain home-canning guides — and if you do your own canning, follow instructions to the letter.

If You Get Your Feet Wet, Sit in a Draft or Are Otherwise Exposed to Wind and Weather, You'll Catch Cold

The common cold is caused by a virus, and if you're in normal good health, even if you're soaked to the skin on a rainy day, you won't usually catch cold — unless you share an umbrella with somebody who already has one.

The best preventive for the common cold is building up your resistance to infection of any kind by good health habits, enough sleep and a balanced diet that includes plenty of vitamins, especially Vitamin C, found in citrus fruits (orange juice, cranberry juice, grapefruit juice are the richest sources). If you drink juice for breakfast and eat plenty of vegetables, you're probably highly resistant to the cold virus. But even so, when colds are going around, it's wise to st[illegible]m people who already have them.

If You Pass Your Papanicalou Test (PAP), You Haven't Got Uterine Cancer

This only applies to one kind of uterine cancer: cancer of the cervix. In endometrial cancer, which is cancer of the lining of the uterus, a Pap test is only about 60-percent effective. A Pap smear is taken at the mouth of the uterus, and in many cases of endometrial cancer, the cells remain attached to the interior uterine wall where the Pap test can't detect them. The symptoms of uterine cancer are abnormal bleeding or spotting of any kind, especially in women of menopausal or postmenopausal age. If you notice these symptoms, report them to your doctor immediately, even if you have recently passed your Pap test with flying colors. Like cervical cancer, endometrial cancer is completely curable if caught in time.

A Hard Toothbrush Is Best Because it Removes Stains More Efficiently and Stimulates the Gums

Most dentists today disagree and recommend a soft brush. Stains are not scraped away by brush bristles; they are washed away by the dentifrice, which can be applied effectively by a soft brush — or by your finger, for that matter. And a hard toothbrush may irritate, rather than stimulate, gums, and set the stage for infection. On the other hand, a soft brush can more easily penetrate between the teeth and above the gumline to help remove cavity-forming plaque.

The Symptom of Appendicitis Is a Sharp Pain in the Lower Right Quarter of the Abdomen

Often, but not always. In some people, the pain may be felt in the center or on the left side of the abdomen. Sometimes appendicitis is signaled by severe generalized abdominal pain, accompanied by fever and nausea. If you have these symptoms and still have your appendix, report them immediately to a doctor. If one is not available, go to the nearest hospital emergency room.

Nursing Mothers Can't Get Pregnant

Often they can. Breast-feeding seems to inhibit conception, but in no way prevents it. Most women resume menstruation three or four months after delivery, and, whether or not they are nursing a child, pregnancy is distinctly possible. Nursing mothers who don't want another child too soon should use contraceptives as soon as they resume intercourse. Mechanical devices — the diaphragm or condom — are the best choice. The Pill, according to many doctors, can cause problems at this point.

Exercise Will Take Off Pounds

Not exercise alone. You would have to run for three and a half hours or bicycle for 12 hours to take off even one pound. However, exercise is a valuable adjunct to a weight-loss diet. If you're on a regime of 1,200 calories a day, the 150 calories you burn off in 20 minutes of steady swimming, the 410 you expend in an hour of vigorous tennis or the 310 calories you can use up in a brisk hour's walk count for a lot. Exercising while you're dieting has another built-in plus — it tones up the muscles as you lose, so that you'll be thin and trim instead of thin and flabby.

Reading in a Poor Light Can Impair Vision Permanently

Reading in a poor light is not a good idea. It causes eyestrain, resulting in fatigue or headaches. But it will not cause astigmatism, near- or farsightedness. These are structural defects of the eye that can and do occur in people who never suffer from eyestrain. Blindness is also a completely different matter. It is caused by congenital factors, injury to the eye and diseases such as diabetes or glaucoma, the result of excessive pressure within the eye.

Everybody Should Have Eight Hours Sleep a Night, No More, No Less

Not at all. The sleeping period is the time the body takes to repair the toll taken against it during the day, both physical and psychological. With teenagers and young adults who are physically active and who are concerned psychologically with school grades or how to feed the family, more than eight hours sleep may be required. For retired people, secure financially, and not terribly physically active, five hours sleep may be enough, allowing them more time to enjoy life.

The Best Way to Lose Weight Is to Go on an All-Protein, High-Protein or No-Protein (Fasting) Diet for a Week

Most people who try this find that at the end of the week, they have lost a considerable number of pounds — sometimes up to 10 or 15. But what they have lost is not weight, it's water. Protein without other foods acts as a diuretic: it drives water from your body. If you fast, body mechanisms will draw upon the protein in your body, achieving a similar result. You could accomplish a similar result by taking "water pills" (diuretics), drinking heavily (alcohol is a diuretic) or doing as jockeys do — sitting in a hot box to sweat off the amount of water that it takes to make the weight for a particular race.

Stepping on a scale after a few days of a high-protein diet can be a psychological boost, but that is the time to switch diets.

If you stay with nothing but protein, you will develop other problems: ketosis, which can damage your kidneys; or simple loss of potassium and sodium, which is bad for many reasons; to say nothing of vitamin deficiency. The best way — and the only way, in the long run — to lose weight is to stick to a healthy, balanced diet that contains all the needed nutrients and runs low on sugars, fats and carbohydrates. FW

CPR: HOW YOU CAN SAVE A LIFE

By Nolan Finley

Three-year-old Aaron Way walked out of the University of Michigan Hospital last September tugging impatiently on his father's hand.

Doctors at the Ann Arbor hospital called his recovery a tribute to cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR), a first-aid technique being used by the nonmedical public to save thousands of lives each year.

Just a week earlier, the boy's father, Daniel Way, had found Aaron floating face down in a neighbor's swimming pool. He had been in the water for at least ten minutes.

"I thought he was gone," Way said. "He wasn't breathing. I couldn't hear a heartbeat and the water just rolled from his mouth."

Grasping to the barest of hopes that his son was still alive, Way began massaging Aaron's chest while an uncle breathed air into his lungs. Both men had recently passed CPR courses.

Each year, thousands of persons like Aaron are literally brought back to life by rescuers familiar with CPR. And CPR has the potential to save thousands more, if the technique is learned by a majority of the general public.

When a cardiac arrest occurs, the heart stops beating. The victim in most cases will stop breathing also. When this happens, the victim may be described as "clinically dead."

CPR can bring a person back from this clinical death by the dual application of rhythmic, external chest compression and mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, restoring heartbeat and breathing.

To spread CPR to as many persons as possible, the Red Cross and the American Heart Association are saturating the country with instructors and classes.

Royce J. Britton, chief of the emergency cardiac care section of the American Heart Association, said six million Americans are now familiar with CPR.

"Our long-range goal is to teach CPR to at least one person in every five," Britton said. "The odds would then be very good that someone with CPR abilities would be present at almost every emergency situation." He stressed that CPR can only be learned in a course taught by a certified instructor. "Considerable damage can be done if CPR is administered improperly or when not needed."

Courses being taught by both the Heart Association and the Red Cross follow basic steps for administering CPR.

Before beginning CPR, it is essential to insure that the victim is actually in need of help. The first step of CPR is to shake the victim; if he doesn't respond, he probably needs aid.

The victim should then be placed on his back upon a firm surface, and the rescuer should also shout for help.

When the victim is in position, his airway must be opened. This is done by tilting the head all the way back, except when neck or back injuries are suspected.

The rescuer then determines if the victim is breathing. If the victim is not breathing, the rescuer seals his mouth over the victim's mouth, pinches the victim's nose to prevent air escape and gives four quick, full breaths at twice-normal breathing volume, without allowing any air to be exhaled from the victim's lungs between breaths.

After giving those breaths, the rescuer checks the victim's pulse to determine whether his heart is beating. If not, he begins chest compressions.

If the steps are properly followed by someone trained in CPR, the rescuers should be able to sustain the victim's heartbeat and breathing until medical help arrives.

"Everyone who can should take the opportunity to learn CPR," Royce Britton says. "You don't have to just stand by and watch someone die." FW

Cool the fever.

This winter, many people will take Bufferin® instead of Bayer.®

Considering all this, perhaps you should, too.

- Bayer is plain aspirin. And plain aspirin can't reduce fever of colds or flu faster than Bufferin.
- Bufferin has special ingredients to help prevent the stomach upset plain aspirin can cause. This could be especially important when colds and flu call for frequent doses.
- The special Bufferin formula starts pain reliever going to the aches and pains faster than plain aspirin like Bayer.

"Easy Switch" Say 85%.

Research concludes MERIT taste makes move to low tar smoking unexpectedly easy.

Every smoker knows it's tough to find a low tar cigarette with enough good taste to switch to—and stick with.

Does MERIT with 'Enriched Flavor'™ tobacco deliver enough taste to make the switch to low tar easy?

Results Endorse MERIT Breakthrough

Confirmed: 85% of MERIT smokers say it was an "easy switch" from high tar brands.

Confirmed: 9 out of 10 MERIT smokers not considering other brands.

SOME NEW FACTS ABOUT THE COMMON COLD

By Paula Dranov

Half the people reading this article are going to get a cold this winter. It's an unpleasant but undeniable reality. One out of every two Americans catches cold during the peak season — which is now.

Without a doubt, colds are much more than an uncomfortable nuisance — they're the single-most expensive illness in the United States in terms of time lost from work and school. But given the odds of catching one, there's not a whole lot any of us can do to avoid this ubiquitous ailment. And despite the fact that medical science now knows what causes colds and how they're transmitted, there's still no cure in sight. About all we can do is treat the symptoms and wait it out. It may help a little, though, to know what researchers have learned about what causes colds, how we catch them and how medical researchers hope to someday prevent them.

Contrary to popular belief, getting chilled and wet in bad weather is not what causes colds. The culprit is a virus — more precisely, upwards of 200 different viruses that are known to cause colds. Researchers blame more than 100 strains of rhinoviruses for most of the colds caught by adults, although recent studies point toward another group, the corona viruses, as possibly the most important cause of adult colds.

Susceptibility to these viruses varies from person to person, although extreme fatigue and emotional stress may undermine anyone's resistance. Children are most susceptible — they catch between eight and 12 colds a year. Most adults can expect to get one or two, but those with young children catch about six per year. In general, women get more colds than men.

Strangely enough, more people seem to get colds on Monday than any other day of the week. That could be because the viruses were transmitted during the previous school or workweek and the symptoms developed over the weekend — the incubation period for the common cold is only 18 to 48 hours. It's also been suggested that for some people the prospect of another workweek is depressing enough to lower their resistance.

Just how bad a cold turns out to be depends on the type of virus responsible. Cold viruses aren't as damaging to the respiratory system as flu viruses, and though the symptoms are often similar, the flu is worse — on top of the scratchy throat, the headache and the sneezing, you usually run a fever, have a dry cough and feel even more worn out than you do with a cold.

The quickest way to catch cold is via direct contact with someone who already has one. As a matter of fact, a cold victim can literally hand you the virus. Researchers at the University of Virginia recently discovered that we're far more likely to catch cold by touching something that a cold victim has handled than by inhaling viruses sprayed in the air by coughing and sneezing. They've learned that rhinoviruses can survive on the skin and on hard surfaces for at least six hours. So, if someone with a cold coughs into his hand and then touches a faucet or a doorknob, he may leave the virus sitting there ready to leap onto the hand of the next person to come by who then infects himself by rubbing his eyes or nose. For this reason, doctors are suggesting that washing your hands frequently and keeping them away from your face may reduce your chances of catching cold. And, if someone in the family has a cold, a good way to protect the others is by using paper plates and cups — washing dishes by hand doesn't always get rid of viruses.

Extreme fatigue and stress undermine your resistance. Women and kids are most susceptible.

Unfortunately, science is nowhere near offering us anything more reliable in the way of prevention. The problem is the number of viruses known to cause colds. Developing a cold vaccine would mean finding something that would work against more than 200 different viruses. Although there are a few vaccines available, each one is effective only against a specific strain of virus. Inoculation against one — or even more than one — cold virus wouldn't prevent colds caused by all the others.

Another approach to prevention does show some promise, however. It involves a naturally occurring substance called interferon which is produced by our cells when they are being attacked by a virus. Scientists know that interferon works against a number of viruses, and they have succeeded in producing it in the laboratory. But because the costs of mass production would be prohibitive, they're trying to develop a chemical (they call it an interferon inducer) that would stimulate our bodies to produce more interferon. Theoretically, this drug would enable us to mobilize our own bodies to fight viruses during the cold season.

In the meantime, about all we can do to keep healthy is eat well, get enough rest and exercise — and try to wash those viruses from our hands. FW

2. Since this FORMULA won't wear out . . . lose its strength . . . fade or weaken from age — you only reapply it if somehow it gets damp, wet or washed away — painted over or covered up — or, of course, if you move to a new dwelling.

And since this entire anti-roach program not only kills all roaches plaguing you today — but CONTINUALLY KILLS OFF potential new invasions . . . YOU ARE PROTECTED AGAINST NEW HATCHES TOO!

Amazing European NIGHT-FOOD-EXTRACT FOR THE SKIN

and keeps you younger-looking FOR THE REST OF YOUR LIFE Thanks to Doctor's nightly wonder food-extract treatments for the skin.

1 Amazing night-food-extract for the skin . . . developed by European doctors . . . goes on in minutes . . . works so fast — your face grows younger-looking all night long.

BEFORE ANOTHER NIGHT PASSES — READ THIS!

(Paris, France): At a dramatic news conference today, held for leading magazine and beauty editors and reported by Associated Press, a leading European specialist revealed that science has not only discovered a way to restore youthful beauty to aging skin . . . but actually KEEP YOU YOUNGER-LOOKING FOR THE REST OF YOUR LIFE!

The secret is an incredible natural "anti-sag" factor discovered by European doctors that has been tested by leading medical specialists and shown to not merely help plump out collapsed skin tissues — make lines, crow's feet, and pouchy dry-skin wrinkles appear to vanish from sight in just a matter of days . . . but actually FIRM YOUR SKIN WHILE YOU SLEEP and help counter-act the major cause of aging appearance STARTING THE VERY FIRST NIGHT!

WONDROUS "ANTI-SAG" FACTOR SO EFFECTIVE, SO DIFFERENT IT HAS BEEN AWARDED PATENTS BY BOTH THE FRENCH AND U.S. GOVERNMENTS

Just to give you an idea of the wonders this NIGHT-FOOD-EXTRACT for the skin can do for your appearance . . . how it can help make lines and signs of age appear to vanish from sight starting after just a few nighttime treatments here is the incredible wonder-treatment cosmetic scientists have in store for you . . . yours to try in the privacy of your own bed, without risking a single penny!

SUDDENLY YOUR VERY OWN BED BECOMES A EUROPEAN "YOUTH CLINIC"

Yes, just a few weeks from today you are going to take your first step to the LIFETIME LOOK OF YOUTH as you turn your very own bed into a European "Youth Clinic" — actually start to make your face look up to 15 years younger . . . ALL WHILE YOU SLEEP!

You are going to take an amazing youth-food-extract formula for the skin — NOT A DRUG — NOT A HORMONE — but a marvelous scientifically cosmetic formulation . . . a natural ANTI-SAG EXTRACT that has been developed and tested by doctors . . . and start to tighten and firm your facial tissues with the very first treatment. Yes, apply it directly to your face for a few nights in a row . . . go to sleep . . . and suddenly wake up one morning to thrill to OVERNIGHT WONDER-RESULTS that up to now you might have thought were utterly impossible!

So effective is this incredible French food-extract that according to leading European Specialists . . . in case after case, middle-aged women who long ago gave up all hope of ever again recapturing their youthful looks, suddenly arose one morning LOOKING YEARS YOUNGER . . . and continued to look YEARS YOUNGER right through the rest of the day!

Even more starting . . . by the time only a few short weeks of treatments had passed, they felt they had actually shed as much as 15 years from their appearance as lines, creases, crow's feet about the eyes, nose-to-mouth furrows . . . why even crepe-paper skin around the chin and throat became firmer, tighter, appeared to vanish from sight!

A DOCTOR EXPLAINS HOW AMAZING "ANTI-SAG" EXTRACT MAKES YOUR FACE GROW YOUNGER LOOKING WHILE YOU SLEEP!

You see, unlike ordinary cosmetics that merely coat and mask complexion problems . . . this European youth treatment penetrates the surface layers of your skin while you sleep — while the muscles and glands of your face are most relaxed. Immediately — ON CONTACT — this natural "anti-sag" extract starts to penetrate and promote from beneath the surface of your complexion the appearance of fresh, young-looking tissues. In mere hours it starts to expand and gently firm out those hollows and crinkles that mask your natural beauty in a veil of age. Yes, starts to plump out collapsed and shrunken skin tissues . . . draw . . . tighten and firm facial tissues . . . so that after just a few evenings of this "all-while-you-sleep" treatment, you start to firm away lines, crow's feet, and crepe-paper skin . . make your complexion look younger, firmer, smoother!

2 Yes, a doctor-tested anti-sag formula that actually helps firm your skin while you sleep . . . helps make lines and signs of age appear to vanish from sight.

Yes, just as a professional SALON FACIAL firms your complexion — overcomes the most heart-wrenching effects of sag . . . recaptures years of youthful beauty . . . so this ALL-NIGHT FACIAL FIRM-UP frees your appearance from the most dreaded ravages of time . . . only with this one vital difference!

Unlike a ONE-TIME SALON FACIAL that loses its effectiveness after a few days . . . this clinically tested ALL-NIGHT EVERY-NIGHT FACIAL FIRM-UP works deep from within — meaning, its wondrous "youth-appearing" benefits continue to work from treatment to treatment. So instead of your face growing older-looking each night — IT ACTUALLY GROWS FRESHER AND YOUNGER LOOKING!

NOW STEP INTO THE WONDROUS AGE OF THE "ROUND-THE-CLOCK" FACIAL FIRM-UP

Yes, when you use this clinically-tested 'face-saver' program . . . this wondrous ALL-NIGHT FACIAL FIRM-UP it's like a visit to a European "Youth-Clinic" as you ONCE AND FOR ALL help reverse the appearance of age these 5 different ways:

ALL NIGHT LONG 8 hours of	continuous FACIAL FIRM-UP . . . to counteract the age-screaming effect of lines, wrinkles, crow's feet
ALL NIGHT LONG 8 hours of	continuous TIGHTENING ACTION to your complexion . . . to overcome harsh effects of sag spots, deep furrows, under-eye crepe-iness
ALL NIGHT LONG 8 hours of	continuous DEEP MOISTURIZING for overall smoothness and suppleness
ALL NIGHT LONG 8 hours of	continuous PENETRATION effects — to discourage external "dry-up" effects of the skin
ALL NIGHT LONG 8 hours of	continuous MASSAGE ACTION — by gently increasing circulation to the surface skin tissues to promote natural beauty

Think of it! Each single night — in just 3 hours time — all in your very own bed — all while you sleep — you actually do as much to make your face younger-looking, smoother, softer . . . as if you flew to Europe . . . visited this renowned specialist in his very own office and had him treat you with this "anti-sag" wonder-treatment.

Better still — it means that by simply using this "overnight youth-treatment" once each night, (and for even more effective results once again in the morning) . . . in just a matter of a few weeks time you cannot only make yourself look up to 15 years younger . . . but KEEP ON LOOKING UP TO 15 YEARS YOUNGER THAN YOU REALLY ARE . . . EVERY DAY FOR THE REST OF YOUR LIFE!

3 Meaning: You literally awaken looking up to 15 years younger thanks to doctor's nighttime wonder-treatments! And keep on looking younger for the rest of your life!

HOW TV AFFECTS YOUR CHILDREN

Sesame Street's Bert and Ernie: "They aren't kind to each other."

By Rozanne Weissman

As a young head-start teacher in Harlem, Susan Futterman studied television's positive and negative influences on impressionable children. "By high-school graduation," she explains, "students have spent some 11,000 hours in class and 15,000 in front of the TV."

Futterman, highly critical of the TV industry when she was affiliated with the Center for Research in Children's Television, is still one of its toughest critics. That's her job as manager of ABC-TV's Children's Programs Broadcast Standards and Practices Department, which clears programs for broadcast. Unfettered by concern for ratings, she has the power to say, "It's not going on the air."

Her priorities: creating characters who reflect a society in which minorities and women have important roles and eliminating senseless violence and destruction of environmental resources.

Growing public criticism of "kidvid" (industry slang for children's television) prompted ABC to hire Futterman, the only childhood development specialist at any network. "It was gutsy of ABC," acknowledges Futterman. "But real change will occur only when the other two networks hire my counterparts.

"If children have parents who transmit strong, clear values, outside influences such as TV and peers are secondary." As for how parents can pass on their values, many of which conflict with those on television, she suggests, "Comment on what you value on TV. I told my preschoolers, 'I like the way Mr. Rogers cares about people.' They then picked up values of sharing feelings and being cooperative. I said, 'I don't like the way Bert and Ernie treat each other on Sesame Street. They aren't kind to each other.' I didn't put down the show, only individual behavior within the show. If you say nothing, children assume you approve."

About Sesame Street Futterman says, "It raised the public's consciousness that children learn from TV. It got federal money into children's programming." She turns critical, however, when discussing its format. "Its fast-paced programming designed like commercials holds attention for short spurts and creates hyper children trained for interruption."

When it comes to commercials, Futterman thinks parents should "teach children to recognize bumpers — animation or art work separating commercials from programs. Call a commercial 'stupid' if it is. Explain how exaggeration makes a product seem more desirable."

Exaggeration in the form of superheroes is something else, she claims. "Children ages three to six find it comforting to believe that larger-than-life heroes are keeping order. While engaging in the battle of good over evil, superheroes fulfill that desire with their feats. Children move from these perfect idols to regular, less-perfect, subtle heroes.

"We carefully watch that our TV superheroes operate on moral principles. We now insure that TV superheroes are not just white males. Also, we use them to communicate vital information." Futterman cites an example. "A Minneapolis fourth grader saved her friend's life with the Heimlich maneuver on choking demonstrated in a safety spot on ABC's Super Friends Hour."

That the medium has had its effect on role-playing, there is little doubt. Futterman recalls: "My preschool students were playing the characters on Emergency exactly as on TV. Imagination — so important to reading — was affected.

"If kids and their parents watch TV nightly, less reading and writing are occurring. Nothing takes the place of an adult reading to a child at bedtime."

In Futterman's opinion, indiscriminate TV-viewing is a reflection of indiscriminate parenting. Good viewing habits require parental guidelines. Watch once each program that your children watches. Treat TV as an allowance. Determine the appropriate amount of TV for the day/week, consult TV listings for special programs and tape an agreed schedule of shows to the TV. Allow some junk programs — peer favorites — because a balanced diet won't hurt. When the week's time allowance is spent, make it clear that the television-viewing is over.

Says Futterman: "Progress will be slow as long as children's TV remains the stepping-stone for those more interested in moving to prime time and other network slots. The networks need people in key programming roles who care about children, have child-oriented backgrounds and make decisions based on healthy development of children. Until this happens, I will be depressed about the state of children's TV. Parents, teachers and consumer groups must make their preferences known to broadcasters; they must support quality shows and ask for different types of people to program for our children." FW

KATIE AND CUKOR: TOGETHER AGAIN ON TV

By Isobel Silden

It's old Beverly Hills: a residence encircled with high walls flanked by heaven-stretching hedges. Admittance is gained by telephone communication from outside the walls. Inside is a tremendous courtyard. At the left, plump goldfish swim about in their sun-dappled pool. At the right, a 56-foot swimming pool is surrounded by flowers and plants of every description.

This is home to George Cukor, the 79-year-old movie and television director, who has worked with Hollywood's most glamorous stars for nearly 50 years.

He is still doing it. His most recent project stars his good friend and former neighbor, Katharine Hepburn, in The Corn Is Green, to be aired Monday night on CBS.

He is not very tall, perhaps 5 feet 5 inches. His mild eyes twinkle behind small bifocal spectacles. Life is an eternal and subtle joke for this very gentle man.

Because Miss Hepburn is famed for refusing interviews, Mr. Cukor agrees to speak of and for her. He does it well. The two have worked together since 1932, when he directed her first movie. The Corn Is Green marks the 10th film in which he has directed her.

He remembers their first meeting clearly.

"I met her in 1932. I was a child, of course, and she was a big star."

He speaks with total solemnity. When he hears the anticipated laugh, he continues. "She was awfully sure of herself even then, and this was her first movie, A Bill of Divorcement. I showed her the costume sketches, and she didn't like them. I told her, 'This is perfectly ridiculous. Here you are disagreeing, and wearing the damnedest-looking outfit!' And she said, 'But it cost me $350.' She wasn't offended. Later on, she told me she'd grown up in a large family, and they all talked a lot. Her father would swat them if they sounded off too much. So she is used to not being thrown by a strategic hit. Her spirit is not broken.

"Kate is extraordinarily nice and intelligent. I spoke to her this morning in New York. She was very upset. She told me, 'I don't know Julia's last name.' She is the substitute cook who comes in on Thursdays," he explains. "Kate said, 'I just wrote her a letter, so you make sure she gets it.' She cares about people," he adds unnecessarily.

He is talking of a far different lady than the one described by the press as difficult and temperamental.

"She does like to give advice, on and off the set," he will concede. "Much of it is very sensible. When she's on the set or when she's rehearsing, she's like a horse wearing blinders. She can see only the job ahead. Many people, seeing her like this, think Kate is cold. She isn't."

Until recently, Miss Hepburn rented one of the three houses Cukor owns on his two-acre estate.

"She has moved East because the climate here does not agree with her. The sun is too hard on her skin. She has an apartment in New York, a house on Long Island Sound, and she plans to buy a farm. Like all New Englanders, she's very thrifty, and so she's very rich."Again, he waits for his laugh.

"When she comes out here for more movies, I suppose I just might put her up in this house.

"It caused her great pain when she moved. I have the only unheated swimming pool in Beverly Hills, you know. That's because I'm cheap."

The truth is that when Cukor built his homes in 1935, pool heaters were not considered a necessity. To install the equipment today would be more difficult than he believes worthwhile.

"When Kate lived here, she swam every morning. And oh, the noises she made when she'd plunge in! I? Of course, I don't go in," he almost sniffs with derision at the suggestion.

"She is not a monster. she is very human. She is extraordinarily nice and intelligent," he reiterates. "Of course, you must understand we work together so well because I'm so sweet, and she's rather crusty."

The Corn Is Green is the second TV film on which Cukor and Miss Hepburn have worked together. In 1976 she starred with Sir Laurence Olivier in Love Among the Ruins under his direction.

"This project came about because Alan Shayne at Warner Brothers asked me to redo it, because he'd always had an enthusiasm for it. I called Kate in New York and asked if she would like to do it. 'Oh dear, dear, it's been done,' she said. 'I simply asked her to read the script. She called back and said, 'Let's do it.'

"I am as happy as one can be with it, but I'm no judge," Cukor adds, refusing to compare the two previous performances, by Ethel Barrymore on Broadway and Bette Davis in the 1945 movie.

The Corn Is Green is the story of its author Emlyn Williams' own life. He was an improverished Welsh boy who was befriended by a teacher, who saw to it that he received an education.

"Emlyn found some of the letters his teacher had written, and he gave them to Kate. We filmed all the exteriors at the actual location in Wales. The house was a real home, not a set, in London.

"When we began casting, we wanted a Welshman for the part. Ian Saynor, who plays Morgan Evans, was the first actor we saw. We did see others, and we kept the chap waiting for two weeks until we told him he had the part."

He is interrupted by the bounding arrival of Mr. Whitney, a rare, huge and somewhat overweight white Labrador retriever. His condition is immediately explained by his crafty snaffling of a British pastry from the tea tray. He is barred from the room by his master, who explains mildly, "He's somewhat spoiled."

Although Cukor is of an age when one might start thinking about retirement, he disclaims any such ideas.

"I have several things cooking. I'm not retiring. I can't afford to," he gestures about his immense sitting room. The walls are lined with paintings by Matisse, Picasso, Braque, a Sargent portrait. There is a Rodin bronze.

This is old Hollywood money and elegance. Rooms flow into each other from formal entry hall to drawing room to a short corridor whose walls tell the story of George Cukor's life. There are portraits of the famous stars with whom he has worked in his 50 films.

There are Miss Hepburn, of course, Greta Garbo, Ava Gardner, Julie Andrews in My Fair Lady, for which Cukor won his only Oscar, Joan Crawford and Ingrid Bergman, who won an Oscar under his direction in Gaslight. (So did Vivien Leigh when he directed her in Gone With the Wind.) There are Norma Shearer, Tallulah Bankhead, Audrey Hepburn, Elizabeth Taylor, Greer Garson, Judy Holliday, Judy Garland, Marilyn Monroe, Anna Magnani, Sophia Loren, Lana Turner, Jeanne Crain, Jane Fonda, Shelley Winters, Maggie Smith.

Because he has worked with the most beautiful women in the world, Cukor has had a reputation as a "woman's director."

"I'm flattered, but it's unfair. I've also directed John and Lionel Barrymore, Cary Grant, Jimmy Stewart, James Mason, Spencer Tracy, Charles Boyer, Fredric March, Joel McCrea, Tony Quinn and Sidney Poitier, among others.

"And I am not going to tell you my so-called secret for handling women because that is my secret," he teases. "Really, there is no difference between handling women and men. Women are tougher, more realistic and less emotional. They put on an act to make us think otherwise. Am I a feminist? No, I'm a realist," he believes.

"I don't know who gave me that reputation of being a woman's director. When I came out here (in 1930) there were all these movie queens, and I worked with them all," he states matter-of-factly. He makes it sound as though it were just a job, albeit well paid and superglamorou

He prefers not to say what is next on his work schedule. His full-time secretary is kept busy handling phone calls for his directorial services.

"And yes, of course, Kate and I will work together again. Always, she is fun to work with because, with each other, we hold nothing back. We share a sense of humor that allows us to say outrageous things that otherwise would be offensive. I think, unconsciously, we work harder for each other than we do for strangers."

The love they share is evidenced by a sterling-framed photo of Katharine Hepburn and Sir Laurence Olivier in a scene from Love Among the Ruins. It is inscribed, "July 15, 1976. For George — As it was in the beginning. Kate."

That says it all. FW

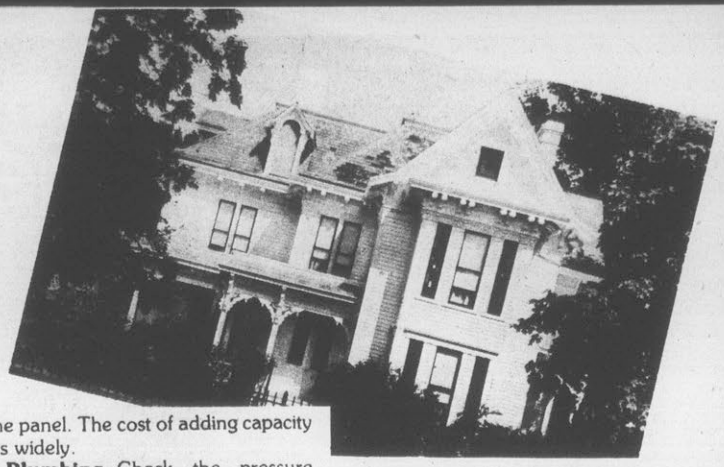
TIPS FOR BUYING A GOOD OLDER HOME

By George Campbell



Is the high cost of new housing making you think about buying an older home? If so, you're part of a growing trend in home-hunting. Older homes offer several advantages: lower cost, the attraction of owner-financing and the homey feeling that often pervades them.

Unfortunately, there can be pitfalls. For too many families, hidden defects have turned a dream house into a nightmare. Here are 12 areas to check in a two-hour inspection of any older home.

You'll need a ladder to reach the roof, a flashlight and a screwdriver. Take along a notebook and jot down deficiencies.

1. Roof. Begin the inspection by checking for a sagging roof. Place the ladder carefully and sight down the edge of the roofline. It should be perfectly straight. A sagging roof indicates the need for major structural repairs. Get an estimate from a reputable contractor.

2. Exterior Finish and Termites. While outside the house, inspect the condition of the paint, especially under the eaves and at ground level. Blistered, peeling or chalky paint indicates the need for a paint job. Check, too, for signs of termite infestation: tunnels of mud near wall bases or piles of powder resembling sawdust. These indicate the need for a professional inspection by an exterminator.

3. Foundation. Check the foundation of the house for cracks or other damage. If the house has a wood foundation, check the condition of the wood by attempting to stick a screwdriver into exposed surfaces. The point shouldn't penetrate more than 1/8". Houses built on a slab should show no cracks where the slab meets the wooden construction of the house. If there is a crawlspace under the house, give the floor joists the screwdriver test. The ground under the house should be dry.

4. Location and Drainage. This is a good time to check the location of the house on the lot. The ground should slope down and away from the house. Otherwise there may be problems during the rainy season.

5. Doors and Windows. Check the fit of exterior doors. If they bind, the house may have settled, indicating the need for major structural repairs. Windows which open should operate easily. If not, check to see if they are simply painted shut, a simple fault to repair.

6. Electrical System. Many older homes have inadequate systems. Check the fuse or circuit-breaker panel. The capacity of the circuitry will be indicated on the panel. The cost of adding capacity varies widely.

7. Plumbing. Check the pressure and flow from each tap, both inside and out. If it seems inadequate, the pipes may be clogged with mineral deposits. In rural areas served by private wells, expect trouble if the pump is over five years old.

8. Floors. If the house has wooden floors, be sure to walk the entire floor area. There should be no perceptible movement, which would indicate structural weakness. Floors should be level.

9. Heating System. You'll want to inspect the heating system carefully. If the house is equipped with central heating, examine the furnace. If it's over five years old, have it inspected by a reliable heating contractor. The same rule applies to air-conditioning systems. Above all, ask to see fuel bills for the past winter.

10. Stairs. If the house has a second story or a basement, you'll need to check the design and condition of stairways. Watch for loose treads and give banisters and railings a good shake to test them.

12. Attic. Last, but not least, climb up into the attic or crawlspace above the ceiling of the house. You may need a flashlight here. Check the roof sheathing for water stains, the sign of a leaky roof. Give all exposed beams the screwdriver test.

If you've found problem areas during the inspection, be sure to seek estimates from more than one contractor before buying the house. If structural repairs are needed, insist that they be made before you take possession of your new home. Other repairs may be delayed, but adjustments should be made in the purchase price to reflect the cost of needed repairs. FW

PEOPLE QUIZ/By John E. Gibson

DOES "FATE" CONTROL YOUR LIFE?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Most people are inclined to feel either that what happens to them is pretty much the result of their own behavior or that their lives are controlled more by forces such as luck, fate, or powerful others.

2. The persons who believes that his success or failure is largely due to his own efforts is the easiest to get to really know, because he doesn't pretend to be something he's not to make an impression, and will usually level with you.

3. People who have no feeling of being master of their fate are much better at taking disappointment, frustration and adversity in their stride.

4. Many people who feel like "pawns of destiny" wouldn't have it any other way.

5. There is one thing that can change an individual's personality and outlook from a "pawn of destiny" attitude to that of being the master of his fate.

6. The individual who feels he has little control over what happens to him is also lacking in self-confidence that he is afraid to take a chance in any enterprise unless he is convinced that he can't lose.

ANSWERS

1. True. The evidence is strong according to psychological studies at Southeastern Missouri State University and elsewhere. Virtually nobody believes he is completely the master of his fate, but some people exert more positive control over their lives than others. On the other hand, many perceive themselves more as pawns of destiny, whose lives are affected more by "the winds of chance" than by their own efforts.

2. True. Studies at Wayne State University (Mich.) show that such people are found to be significantly more willing to reveal themselves to others since they don't feel the need for subterfuge. And it is suggested that "those who see themselves as more responsible for their personal outcomes are not as threatened by potentially negative interpersonal feedback from another person."

3. True. It's much easier for such people to shrug off disappointment and failures, and roll with the punches life hands them. To them it's just a self-fulfilling prophecy illustrating how little one's own efforts count when compared with the machinations of circumstance or the variable whims of Lady Luck. As is pointedly observed in a Boise State University (Idaho) study, such individuals "can potentially attribute undesirable experiences to chance or fate and need not feel personally accountable for success attainment."

4. True. Studies conducted by behavior scientists from two universities (Ohio State U. and Arizona State U.) cite findings which strongly suggest that "for some people, a feeling of powerlessness is the most comfortable or even adaptive orientation to the environment, and consequently they are loath to abandon it."

5. True. Temple University (Pa.) studies using a national cross section of middle-aged American men examined the influence of work experience on change in attitude showed that repeated successes in the world of work tends to change the attitude of the "pawn of destiny" type and convince him that his fortunes are largely the result of his own efforts, skills and abilities.

6. False. University of Alabama studies show that the individual who feels you get largely what you deserve and what you work for, is less inclined to take unnecessary risks or long chances. He believes that a man makes his own luck. Not so, however, with the person who feels he has little control over how he fares in life. This type, the study shows, is much more partial to taking risks and gambling on long shots. He feels that luck and chance play a far more important part than he does in determining what life holds in store for him. Studies at the University of Southern Mississippi have yielded similar findings. FW

You can't be turned down for this Insurance if you're 50 to 80!

Here is a life insurance policy that can be yours for the asking if you inquire before March 7th. Not only is no physical examination required, but the policy is actually issued to you without a single health question!

PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS® is an individual life insurance policy that guarantees to accept every man and woman between 50 and 80 who applies during the Guaranteed-Acceptance Period—regardless of any other insurance carried.

PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS is underwritten by Colonial Penn Life Insurance Company of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, specialists in serving the specific needs of America's older population. This protection is recommended to their members by two of America's highly respected national nonprofit organizations of the mature: the National Retired Teachers Association (NRTA) and the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP).

An Important Opportunity for Every Older Person!

PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS is a remarkable concept of life insurance, achieved as a result of the efforts Colonial Penn has devoted to meeting the insurance needs of mature people.

It is a life insurance policy we can make available to all mature people—a policy whose cost is reasonable and whose benefits are worthwhile.

Here's How PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS Can Do This For You:

During the first two years that your policy is in effect, your coverage is reduced. If you should die during the first policy year, the benefit paid to your beneficiary is $100. If death occurs during the second policy year, your beneficiary receives $250. Once two years have passed, you are covered for the full face amount of the policy.

PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS enables the older person to obtain worthwhile benefits for his insurance dollar—and, at the same time, guarantees acceptance for all applicants.

PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS also provides increasing cash values which begin in the first or second year.

The cost? JUST $6.95 A MONTH!

No matter what your age, your sex, or the condition of your health, you pay just $6.95 a month. The amount of coverage you receive is based on your sex and age. However, once you are insured the amount of your insurance will never go down, and your payments will never go up!

Act Now—You Have Nothing To Lose!

To obtain full information on PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS in time to take advantage of this opportunity to become insured, please mail the coupon before March 7th.

FOR THIS BASKETBALL COACH, IT'S THE PLAYERS, NOT THE GAME

Chris Sheridan (Iona)

By Barry Wilner

Football coach Vince Lombardi once said that winning isn't everything, it's the only thing. You'd never catch Jim Valvano repeating such hardline rhetoric.

"I don't measure the success of my program on wins and losses," says Valvano, the basketball coach at Iona College in New Rochelle, N.Y., a suburb of New York City. "I judge it on how well-rounded a kid is after he leaves the school."

Valvano has left two schools, Johns Hopkins and Bucknell, after building winning basketball programs. Now he is in the process of making Iona a winner.

In 1975 he came to Iona to turn a dying basketball system into a healthy one. Now in his fourth season at the 3,200-student school, Valvano has built a team considered one of the best in the East. The Gaels even have national championship aspirations. "Once, we weren't even the best team in New Rochelle," he notes.

But going from a 10-16 record in his first season at Iona to a 17-10 mark last year is only a part of his overall scheme. The 32-year-old coach realizes there is a place in life for the sport:

"Athletes are nothing special, they're just a part of the community. I want my kids to understand that basketball is a leisure-time activity."

But basketball also is Valvano's life. He grew up in Seaford, L.I., went to Rutgers University and played guard alongside Bobby Lloyd, possibly the best player in the school's history.

"I knew I'd like to coach someday," he admits. "I like trying to influence kids and help them grow."

Valvano started his coaching career at Johns Hopkins, revitalizing the basketball program before he moved on to Bucknell. After he again turned their program around, Valvano headed for Iona.

"We provide the alternative. We'll never be a big basketball factory, that's not what I'm about. We think big time, without the trappings, but we don't hide the fact we'd like to win the NCAA tournament.

"Still, we have a more personalized atmosphere here. It's like the best of both worlds. We have a 'big time' basketball program, but academics and people are important, too, and you can't sacrifice being a person and just be on a sports level."

In outlining his program goals, it is obvious that Valvano's values are based on success. But winning the National Collegiate Athletic Association championship is not necessarily the first priority.

"I set program goals on and off the court, for my players and myself," he says. "First, to be successful, you have to reach your potential. Then, though it may sound corny, you have to lead respectable lives. And you have to contribute to society."

This approach has been responsible for Valvano's landing some top talent. The best of the recruits have been 6′ 3″ guard Glen Vickers, a smooth junior and now the acknowledged leader of the team, and Jeff Ruland, a 6′ 10″ center, considered by some to have been the best high-school player in the country two years ago.

As a freshman, Ruland was the top scorer (22.3 points per game), rebounder (12.8) and percentage shooter (59.4%) among collegiate rookies. He had more than 300 scholarship offers before deciding on Iona.

"The main reason I came here is that Coach Valvano has always dealt honestly with me," says Ruland, who like Valvano and Vickers is a Long Islander. "I remember a game in high school that a lot of scouts and coaches came to. I played terribly. After the game, Coach Valvano came up to me and said, 'Jeff, you really stunk tonight.' I liked that he was straight with me."

Valvano out-recruited 300 schools for a potential All-American.

"Jeff agreed with our 'concept recruiting,'" Valvano notes. "He likes the fact we won't sacrifice integrity to win basketball games. He could be a hero, have a tremendous impact, but Jeff's like the rest of the boys here. He knows he'll grow in all kinds of ways."

Until 1974, the Gaels didn't even have their own gym and played in local high schools. That year they were 4-19, the second-worst record among major independent schools in the nation. The only team worse, Army, beat Iona by 20 points. So Valvano was called upon to rescue the team.

"My future plans?" he asks rhetorically. "Next year we'll go national in our recruiting. I am committed to that; somewhere there's a kid who'll agree with what I'm trying to do here.

"I feel there's another step to take. It can be done at a big school, if you can provide the kids with the right kind of motivation. You can still compete with a balanced program that helps the athletes as students.

"Someday, the cheering stops. When it does, I want these kids to be ready." FW

R2D2's KIN: ROBOTS ARRIVE!

By Mary Long

The smash hit on Broadway in 1921 had a startling plot about machines shaped like men going mad and taking over the world. Czech playwright Karel Capek introduced these monsters and gave them a name: Robots. His play, R.U.R. (Rossum's Universal Robots) stirred up the public's hidden fears about the marvelous Machine Age.

By the end of the 1950's, the landscape was teeming with robots. These new robots, however, were real, the creations of science rather than science fiction. The invention and combination of video cameras, computers and precision engineering made these machines capable of performing extremely delicate and complicated tasks. They were soon standard equipment in our space program and in research laboratories; bringing robots into the working world was simply a matter of producing more involved devices and calculations.

Today's three basic robot designs, all featuring a single mechanical arm, dominate the market. One design looks like a tank; another resembles a long, two-elbowed arm that bends and twists in several directions; and the third looks like a phone booth.

These contemporary robots may not have the charm of their descendants R2D2 and C3PO, but they do pick red-hot billets out of steaming presses, lift heavy motor casings onto hooks, spray paint onto automobiles on assembly lines, and perform many dangerous tasks.

To teach a robot, a human takes the "arm" through the motions required for a job while the robot's "learning" program is engaged. After that, the robot can retrace those steps to a fraction of an inch. Some can memorize thousands of moves, change speeds between moves, or lift one-ton objects; depending on its technological sophistication a robot costs from $10,000 to $100,000.

Can robots replace human workers? Some people envisioned laborers starving in the streets after employers replaced them with tireless feeling and efficient machines that never tire, never stop for lunch, never need dental insurance, workers that would give the strictest attention to duty. On the other hand, theorists have imagined a prosperous society in which automatons took over the work that breaks backs and severs fingers, while laborers enjoyed more leisure time.

The realities have not yet caught up with the worst and best of these visions, but they come closer all the time.

Already the first wave of working robots — 20,000 strong — have invaded automotive, plastics and tool-and-die industries. Industries such as huge oil refineries have become almost totally automated and some jobs have disappeared completely from the industrial roster; others have been changed beyond recognition. Yet, robot expert Robert Malone insists that jobs alone will become obsolete, not people.

"Sorting out the work that should be done by machines and the work that should be done by people isn't easy," he says. "Machines replace man only when the work is in some way 'inhuman' — too delicate, too repetitious, too heavy, too dangerous, too minute."

At home, robots can aid us with our chores and join in our games. The development of the micro-computer has resulted in a wave of games and toys that make use of a computer chip, with your TV screen serving as a game board. And, some 50,000 "personal" robots have been sold this year alone. These robots can play bridge with you, help you plan your meals, turn on your air conditioning and take your phone messages.

The experts think that, in the future, you will probably be able to rent a wide variety of robots. You could order a small model for personal or household use; a more powerful one for difficult calculations or heavy physical work, or even a mammoth robot, capable of intricate sensory perceptions, able to perform several related tasks at the same time.

According to Robert Malone, rental robots may become universal tools, using plug-in devices called terminals and interfaces. You might, for example, plug the robot into your car and punch out a destination, and it will drive you there. It would wash your dishes. If you're a farmer, it would stand ready to plow your fields and plant your crops.

It seems inevitable that robots will make enormous contributions to the productivity of our industries while, concurrently, increasing our leisure time. What we do with that time will determine the future relationship of man to machine. FW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

What Your Eyes Really Reveal

Whoever said that eyes are the mirrors of the soul knew what he was talking about. After studying thousands of people, Tennessee psychologist A.L. Gary says there's a dramatic link between eye color and personality. Light-eyed people, Gary concludes, tend to have a lot of patience, holding back their reactions until the last possible minute, while dark-eyed people are quicker to be stimulated and to respond.

For instance, in tests of school children Gary says dark-eyed youngsters did better in timed tests when the pressure was on. They were more energetic and inventive — and more likely to give up when the work became tedious. On the other hand, light-eyed children did better on tests involving careful consideration and staying power.

Sounds slightly off the wall, you say? You'll see it his way, Gary explains, once you understand that the key to the research involves a skin pigment which he claims occurs in the same proportion in the eye as it does in the brain. Gary says this pigment has a lot to do with how we respond to our environment.

Check out Gary's observations for yourself. He says blue-eyed people have extraordinary stamina but tend to be bogged down by routine. Light brown-eyed people are individualists who find it hard to take orders. Black-eyed people are likely to be impulsive and hot-tempered, but capable of taking command in a crisis. And those with green or hazel eyes are the happiest , according to Gary, stable, yet imaginative.

Is there more to Gary's work than meets the eye? See for yourself.

Baby Talk

Talking to an infant may feel foolish, but researchers at the University of Florida have found evidence that cooing and gooing could be one of the most important conversations you can have with a child.

University of Florida

In fact, they could be the sounds a baby hears best.

"Infants respond first to low-frequency sounds and not until they are 12 months old does their response match an adult's in the higher-frequency range," says Dr. Donald C. Teas, an auditory psychologist. "When we talk to infants during their first 36 weeks, they may be hearing something very different from what adults hear. We are just guessing, but to them our words may sound like deep mumblings — the long vowels which are at lower frequencies may be the only sound that gets through."

To determine exactly what sounds infants hear and how the sense of hearing develops, Teas and his colleagues William and Kathleen Berg have been performing tests on more than 72 babies. The researchers hope that their information may help diagnose hearing deficiencies sooner.

"It's also possible that stimulation begets growth," Teas says. "You really can't lose by stimulating the infant as much as possible."

All About The American Male

What's the American male really like? Well, according to a just-released Harris survey commissioned by a men's magazine, there are a lot more supporters of traditional values than one might think. After surveying 1,990 men who, he says, are representative of the 46 million men in America between the ages of 18 and 49, Harris reports:

- Nearly 85% of American men feel that "family life" is very important for a happy, satisfied life — and a like number regard love as very important for happiness. In contrast, less than half (49%) consider sex as very important for personal happiness.
- Three out of four men consider sexual fidelity to be very important for a successful marriage — with the husband's faithfulness just as important as the wife's.
- Most men rank money at the bottom of a list of 11 individual factors that contribute to a happy, satisfied life. But men in the lower economic brackets are more likely than other men to view money as very important.
- Job satisfaction is more important than economic reward to most men. But just over a third consider themselves very satisfied with their jobs.
- The occupations American men respect most are doctor, scientist and master carpenter. On a list of 24 occupations, men ranked U.S. Congressman 19th and corporation executive 20th.
- Men today are more attracted to participatory than spectator sports.
- The most important issues confronting society, according to most men, are: reducing crime (90%), eliminating government corruption (81%) and curtailing inflation (78%).

When Fathers Are Mothers

Attention, ladies. For a change, how about a system where fathers carry the babies from conception to birth? A buggy idea, you say? Exactly. According to Arizona researchers, giant water bugs have been using the turnabout method for ages, with splendid success.

Dr. Robert L. Smith, an assistant professor of entomology at the University of Arizona, and his assistant, Dan Forey, a graduate student at Arizona State University, say that during the mating process, the female diligently applies more than 100 self-stick fertilized eggs to her partner's back. Then she loses interest and bugs off, leaving the male to nurture the eggs until they hatch.

Although observing the insects would drive some people buggy, Smith says he finds them so fascinating that he even keeps an eye on them for recreation. His assistant, Forey, isn't about to bad-mouth the bugs, but allows, "If I had the money I'd go to Africa to study wolves or hyenas or something like that."

Lifestyles

Psychology. Women at six of the country's most prestigious colleges have lower self-esteem and aspirations than their male counterparts even though their grades are about the same, reports a recent study. Fewer of the women said they thought they would earn a PH.D., and fewer wanted to become doctors, lawyers or enter business. According to the study's coordinator, the women "underestimate their academic ability, and they underestimate their career goals."

Industry. The Better Sleep Council has talked to a lot of truckers nationwide and discovered that many of them don't get much. "Sleep is a waste of time," explained one haggard trucker, while many others admitted to popping amphetamines so they could stay awake for days at a time. According to the council, this sleep deprivation is very serious, slowing down reaction time. And studies show that one-fifth of highway accidents involved drivers who admitted they were sleepy.

Law. It pays to go to law school — at least financially. This year a few New York law firms have broken the $30,000 barrier in starting salaries for law-school graduates, according to a survey published in Student Lawyer magazine.

Katherine Hepburn Is An Original

She's the Rock of Gibraltar, Wonder Woman, The Magnificent Yankee. When others would clam up, she talks; when she talks, she's sharp as a tack. She's never fought for liberation — that was her birthright and she gobbled it up. She's bossy, a push-over if you need a hand, private and elusive. Like Reims Cathedral and Mickey Mouse, she's an original.

She's Katherine Hepburn.

On Monday, Jan 29 (9 to 11 p.m.), Hepburn, working under the direction of George Cukor for the 10th time, stars in "The Corn Is Green" on CBS-TV.

The Connecticut-born daughter of a free-thinking, eminent surgeon and suffragette mother believes in the efficacy of hard work. And work she has, first appearing in pictures in 1932 ("A Bill of Divorcement"). Her career, she says with characteristic candor, has "stumbled, wavered around, picked itself up, fallen, crawled back and jumped. "You're not," she continues, "talking about somebody who has just sat on a throne."

The ups certainly were there. You can start with the three Oscars she has at home and the 11 more she's been nominated for. For one of the downs you can count in the time in 1937 when theater owners hired a billboard to shout that Hepburn was "box office poison." But she weathered it all like a surfer riding a tidal wave.

"Compared to most people," she says, "I've been very lucky. There are so many people who never see their dreams come true. I think one has only one regret, and that is we can't accomplish four times as much as we do. So much of our time is wasted."

Not Hepburn's. Except when she is working in a play, she goes to bed at 8 and gets up at 4 a.m. "I've retained that schedule, ever since childhood," she says. "I was the eldest and I had to get up very early to study and do my homework."

Throughout all these years, fans have never penetrated the private Miss Hepburn. She staunchly refuses to give autographs. But, while shooting "The Corn Is Green" in Wales, she bit the bullet and scribbled her name for a few young on-lookers. They had no way of knowing her feelings and, considerately, she didn't want to hurt them.

Back on home turf, it's a different story. Take the time a fan pounced on her.

"Sign this, the admirer demanded.

"I don't give autographs," she replied.

"You don't, huh? Just remember that we made you what you are today!"

Volleyed she: "Like hell you did!"

The Great Kate. We'll not see the likes of her again.

Katharine Hepburn, under the direction of George Cukor for the tenth time in her career, stars as Miss Moffat, in "The Corn is Green," a special presentation to be broadcast Monday, Jan. 29 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

White House Seen Through Servants' Eyes

WASHINGTON DRAMA — Louis Gossett Jr. joins Olivia Cole and Leslie Uggams (l and r, seated) in "Backstairs at the White House," powerful nine-hour miniseries about a mother and daughter, who, between them, served 52 years as White House maids, from the Tafts through the Eisenhowers. The drama will be presented on "Monday Night at the Movies," Jan. 29 (8-11 p.m.) and Feb. 5, 12 and 19 (9-11 p.m. each night) on NBC-TV.

There is an interesting series of events which led to the filming of "Backstairs at the White House," NBC-TV's nine-hour mini-series to air on four consecutive Mondays (8 to 11 p.m), Jan. 29, Feb. 5, 12 and 19, (9 to 11 each night).

A New York literary agent with whom Producer Ed Friendly was involved in another project, casually commented one day that he had represented an author in 1961 who had written a book about the White House.

"It had never been converted to film or television, and the book was even out of print. However, he asked if I would like to read it. I said yes, and out it came," Friendly recalled.

"Our writers, Gwen Bagni and Paul Duboy, went to Washington, D.C., and met with the co-author on whose experiences as a maid in the White House the book was based. She is Lillian Rogers Parks, a dynamic, ingratiating 81-year-old lady. Gwen and Paul ferreted out some incredible information about her, her family and her own desires that weren't in the book."

They dug out the humanity of the story. The original best-seller was a fine book (My Thirty Years Backstairs at the White House), but it was more factual than dramatic. Through hours of interviewing her, they got underneath the story.

"They came back with the tapes and we listened to them. Then they wrote a grand 187-page treatment, and then the script, and for six months before we began filming last June we began casting and prepping. We recreated portions of the White House on two sound stages at Samuel Goldwyn Studios — family quarters, dining room, kitchen, elevators, backstairs and attic," he continued.

"Casting was a complete effort between our director, Michael O'Herlihy, and myself, and we assembled a really wonderful cast."

That could be the understatement of the season. The cast, collectively winners of 28 Oscar, Emmy and Tony awards, includes: Olivia Cole, Leslie Uggams, Louis Gossett, Jr., Cloris Leachman, Robert Hooks, Leslie Nielsen and Harry Rhodes as White House staffers.

A host of other well-known stars are cast as the Presidents and their wives.

Osmond Family Stars In New Series

"The Osmond Family Show," a new series which each week will present an entertainment spectacular centering on a theme of interest to American families, will premiere on ABC-TV Sunday, Jan. 28 (7 to 8 p.m.), with a visit to the colorful Winter Carnival in Park City, Utah, training ground for the U.S. Ski Team.

Starring are Donny and Marie Osmond, their performing brothers (Alan, Jay, Merrill and Wayne), their youngest brother, Jimmy, Mother and Father Osmond and other Osmonds, including Virl and Tom. Guest starring are country-western star Roy Clark, magician David Copperfield and members of the U.S. Ski Team. The famed Lassie will make a special cameo appearance.

Among the highlights will be Jimmy making up his nephews, Aaron and Jared Osmond, as clowns so they can get free rides. Jimmy is so carried away with his job that he bursts out singing "Be a Clown."

Marie interviews skiers who are in Park City already training for the 1980 Olympics, then sings "High Hopes" while beginning skiers are shown struggling on the slopes.

Donny and his brothers bundle up in their warmest winter clothing so they can build the World's Largest Snowman, and the entire family, along with Roy Clark, participate in the "First Annual Osmond Invitational Race" on skis.

A musical segment features the Osmond Brothers singing their newest hit, "Steppin' Out," and, with Donny, Marie and Jimmy, singing "Instant Replay," "I Just Want to Stop" and "September." Roy Clark sings the ever-popular "Top of the World."

Struthers In Premiere

Sally Struthers and James Woods star in "And Your Name Is Jonah," a poignant drama about a New York couple whose 7-year-old son is discovered to be profoundly deaf after having been diagnosed as mentally retarded, airing Sunday, Jan. 28 (9 to 11 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

The film also introduces 9-year-old Jeffrey Bravin, a deaf child from Staten Island, N.Y., in the title role of Jonah. Also starring are Randee Heller, Titos Vandis, Ruth Manning and Penny Santon.

Miss Struthers and Woods appear as Jenny and Danny Corelli, a couple of modest means who are suddenly launched beyond their emotional depths when their newly diagnosed deaf son is returned home after having spent three years in a hospital for the mentally retarded. Their comfortable life style, which includes a normal 6-year-old son, Anthony, is confounded by Jonah's presence. The deaf youngster is delighted to be reunited with his parents, but is completely untrained, undisciplined and incapable of making himself understood.

The Corellis seek help in placing Jonah in a special school for the deaf, to no avail. Their strained family situation becomes intolerable for Danny, who feels personally threatened by the attitude of friends and neighbors who reject his son as "different."

Jenny is forced to go it alone in her loving and desperate search for any way to release her son from his silent prison. She is thrust headlong into the sharp controversy of how best the deaf should be trained, and it is not until she haltingly makes friends with the deaf community that her anguish becomes lightened by hope.

When the call went out for a deaf child to portray the central character in "And Your Name Is Jonah," the film's technical advisor, Bernard Bragg, who founded the National Theater of the Deaf, remembered Jeff Bravin, a kid who had spoken to him "from the heart" two years before.

Bragg met the sandy-haired youngster at a ceremony at the New York School for the Deaf in White Plains, N.Y. At the end of the festivities, the boy walked up to Bragg and gestured in sign language that he admired his speech.

"I was so impressed," said Bragg, an admired deaf actor and mime. "He was only seven years old at the time."

Sally Struthers, as Jenny Corelli, struggles to find a way to communicate with her deaf son, portrayed by Jeffrey Bravin, in "And Your Name Is Jonah," a new motion picture-for-television, to be broadcast as a special movie presentation, Sunday, Jan. 28 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Reality Evident In Drama

"You can't imagine the enormous sense of reality one gets when you look out the window of the ranch house and see the very mountains Michener was writing about."

Speaking is Lynn Redgrave about her role as Charlotte Secombe and later as Charlotte Lloyd in "Centennial."

"Many of the scenes in the segment, 'The Winds of Fortune' (Chapter Ten set for Sunday, Jan. 28 (8 to 10 p.m.), on NBC-TV were filmed inside the actual Colorado mansion where the woman, on whom Michener based the character, lived," Lynn said.

"It is a marvelous role and I was at it for nearly four months, flying in and out of Colorado with trips to both coasts when not scheduled for work," Lynn recalled.

"As Charlotte, an adventurous young English girl who comes to America with her father, I age from a 19-year-old to a woman of about 85. The aging process was a natural progression and I got to know the woman very well," Lynn said, adding:

"The main problem was to 'stay' in character. There had to be the same core of the woman, no matter what her age.

"My last trip to Colorado and the one in which I required the maximum age makeup was helped considerably by a cold spell. The makeup was helped, but the working conditons were pretty difficult.

"The aging was done with latex and it seemed to work better in the cold. I understand some of the other actors had problems with their makeup in the summer heat when the latex didn't behave so well," Lynn said.

"I had read some history of America and was vaguely familiar with the fact that many British investors settled in the Colorado and Wyoming territory, so I knew that the role of an English woman such as Charlotte was accurate.

"Not only did Michener's book lay out Charlotte's character, I reviewed an Alistair Cooke version of the West at this time. I was quite comfortable with Charlotte," Lynn said.

Redgrave took full advantage of her stay in Colorado and did "all the tourist side trips I could get in. I had done plays in Denver before, but never quite had the time to see the beauty of the area.

"My only regret on the 'Centennial' production is that I missed meeting Michener both times he came to our location sites," she concluded.

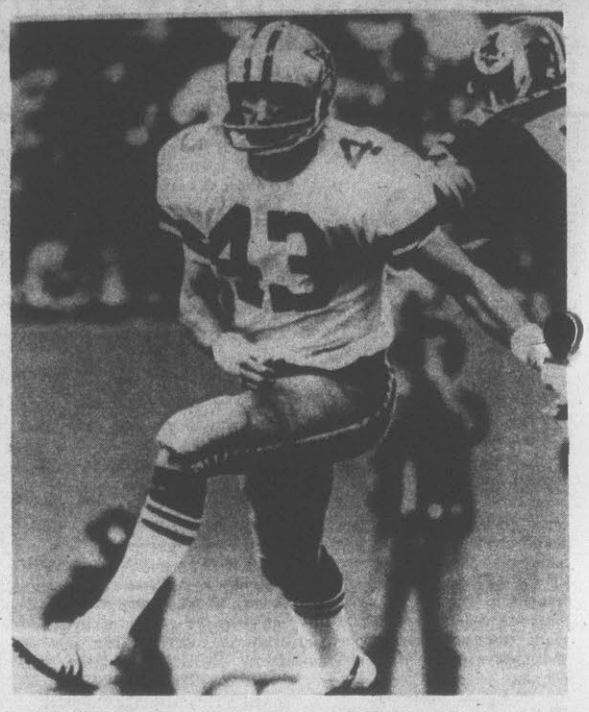
Pro Bowl Is Harris' Fourth



The AFC-NFC Pro Bowl, to be played Monday, Jan. 29 at 9 p.m. on ABC-TV, will be heavy with the flavor of the Super Bowl. Ten members of the Pittsburgh Steelers are on the AFC's roster, while Dallas has eight on the NFC squad. Among these is safety Cliff Harris, who will be playing his 4th consecutive Pro Bowl game.

Today, at age 30, Cliff Harris, the All-Pro safety in the National Football League the past three years, will be playing his fourth consecutive AFC-NFC Pro Bowl, to be played Monday, Jan. 29 (9 p.m. on ABC-TV).

A few more All-Pro namings probably will put him in the same class former Cardinals free safety Larry Wilson was in during the 1960s. And should that happen, Harris is one member of the current Dallas Cowboys who has an excellent chance at being inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame some future July afternoon.

He's that good.

Harris had a — mostly — unnoticed year of excellence for the 1978 edition of the Cowboys, for the fourth year in a row, which matches Harris' string of All-Pro spots. The latter is no small coincidence.

The Cowboys safeties, Cliff Harris and Charlie Waters, are the class of the league whether it's pass defense or run defense," says Giants fullback Larry Csonka.

"Harris is a helluva free safety," says Harold Carmichael of the Eagles.

"Harris has changed the way the position is being played today," says Wilson, now a front office executive with the St. Louis Cardinals. "You see other teams modeling their free safeties around the way Harris plays, strong as can be against the run, able to go back and cover against the pass, and striking fear in everyone on the field because he hits so hard."

Harris' pre-game preparation in other areas besides daily practice does not go unnoticed by the Cowboys coaching staff. Says secondary coach Gene Stallings, "One of his greatest strengths is hard work and pre-game preparation during the week, studying films, asking questions about the game plan, knowing his opponents."

Explains Harris, "I want to be able to tell what's coming before the play starts. When I do, that's when I'm really on. It's not any psychic power, just preparation. If you're prepared, you can anticipate."

Although known for his tackling, Harris has also achieved notoriety through a parcel of interceptions each season. With six thefts this year, Harris is above the averages of earlier years in his career.

"I go where the computer tells me to go," he says, "and I play our defense first. I stop my guy first, and when the quarterback throws I go after the ball."

And Harris goes after a few tackles, too. "Oh, yes, I love to tackle people," he laughs. "Give them a good, clean, solid lick. Love it."

He's done plenty of that, having either led or been runnerup on the Cowboys in total tackles for several seasons now, including a club-leading 118 in 1976.

Griffith In Adventure Series

Andy Griffith is one of the true veteran actors in show business who handles all roles — comedy or drama — film, television or the legitimate stage — with equal ease.

Griffith currently stars in "Salvage," ABC-TV's new adventure series about a salvage man and his two cohorts who are looking for excitement and a fast buck. The show premieres Monday, Jan. 29 (8 to 9 p.m.).

Born in Mt. Airy, N.C., Griffith was educated at UNC where he majored in music and for a time contemplated a career in the ministry.

After completing college, Andy taught high school in Goldsboro, N.C., for three years. During college and after graduation, he starred as Sir Walter Raleigh in the Carolina Playmakers' famous outdoor pageant, "The Lost Colony."

While teaching music and glee club in Goldsboro, Andy put together an act which he performed for civic groups at various functions in the North Carolina area.

"On one occasion, I was booked to appear before the same group twice," he explains, "and I couldn't do the same act, obviously. So while driving the 75 miles from home to the second appearance, I made up a new monologue and called it, 'What It Was, Was Football,' based on an old joke I had heard.'

The monologue was so successful that Andy was asked to record it by Orville Campbell, head of a small record company in Goldsboro. This snowballed into a Capitol Records contract in 1953 which led the way to an appearance on "The Ed Sullivan Show" the following year. This resulted in a whirlwind 18-month tour of nightclubs throughout the South.

Andy's first big break came with "No Time For Sergeants." He starred in the TV production, played 345 performances on Broadway and then starred in the movie version. This was followed by two more films, "A Face in the Crowd" and "Onionhead," and the Broadway musical, "Destry Rides Again."

In 1960, Griffith moved to Hollywood to start production on a series which not only lasted eight full seasons, but consistently maintained its rating as one of the top shows in television history. It was succeeded by "Mayberry R.F.D."

Andy is married to Greek actress Solica Casuto and the couple reside in North Hollywood, Calif.

Gossett's First

Lou Gossett has been signed for his first title role in a movie-for-television, "The Satchel Paige Story," slated to air on ABC.

Lou, who has never played baseball, is now practicing fastball pitches and will continue to do so until the production gets underway in March.

Interrupted Tour

Burl Ives will interrupt a European tour to fly back to Washington, D.C., April 4 for a performance that evening before President Carter at the White House. He will return to England the following day to resume a concert series of 36 engagements.

Premiere Based On Fact

Tom (Bosley), Charlotte Rae ("Diff'rent Strokes") and Tovah Feldshuh ("Holocaust") star in "The Triangle Factory Fire Scandal," a stirring World Premiere drama about a group of young immigrant workers trapped in a blazing factory on NBC-TV's "The Big Event" Tuesday, Jan. 30 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Stephanie Zimbalist, Ted Wass, Janet Margolin, David Dukes, Lauren Frost, Stacey Neilkin and Erica Yohn also star.

The story, based on an actual event, tells of one of the worst conflagarations in American history. The drama tells of the cause of the sweatshop fire and the effect of the tragedy on the lives of Florence (Feldshuh), a pretty, young machine operator who dreams of marrying a millionaire; Sonya (Frost), who works on Saturdays, even though it is against her religion; Vinnie (Wass), the garment factory playboy; Connie (Zimbalist), his fiancee; and other young immigrants working in unsafe, inhumane conditions under the supervision of the insensitive foreman, Morris Feldman (Bosley).

Being cast as Florence in 'Fire Scandal' is another jewel of a role for Tovah Feldshuh, who won critical acclaim for her portrayal of a Jewish girl trying escape from Czechoslavakia in "Holocaust."

In fact, since "Holocaust," acting roles have been coming her way faster than she can accept them. But this avalanche of success hasn't bothered her in the least.

"I love to laugh, to cry and to be frightened. I love to feel my feelings while I'm acting," she explains, which may account for her choice of roles. Playing a rabbi's daughter masquerading as a boy in "Yentl" on the New York stage won her an Obie and a Tony nomination. Her favorite roles, however, have been Katharine in TV's "The Amazing Howard Hughes" and Peter Pan.

SWEATSHOP — Tovah Feldshuh stars as a pretty, young machine operator forced to labor in an unsafe "sweatshop" factory that catches fire, in "The Triangle Factory Fire Scandal," a gripping fact-based World Premiere drama on "The Big Event," Tuesday, Jan. 30 (9-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Newhart Returns

Bob Newhart, television and nightclub star whose many appearances on "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson" have made him extremely popular with late-night viewers, will return as guest host of the program Feb. 12 and March 5 and 6.

Newhart has been a guest or guest host on 'Tonight' for more than 12 years.

O'Neal As Jewel Thief

Ryan O'Neal stars as a bright young man with a taste for the finer things — other people's finer things — in "The Thief Who Came to Dinner," rebroadcast as the "CBS Late Movie" Tuesday, Jan. 30 (12:30 a.m.).

The stylish drama of a very inventive jewel thief also stars Jacqueline Bisset as the Houston socialite who loves him and shares his work (and his profits) and Warren Oates as the dogged insurance investigator determined to take the payment out of his crimes.

Webster McGee (O'Neal), who sees absolutely nothing wrong in stealing jewels from people who can afford to buy new ones, forms a profitable partnership with socialite Laura Keaton (Bisset) — who is very beautiful and very broke — which allows them to wine and dine — and rob — in the landed gentry of Houston.

Insurance investigator Dave Reilly (Oates) isn't exactly happy about this terrific partnership, since his company has to pay for the jewels that Webster is taking from the company's clients. Reilly is also a very bright young man, and baits his traps with Webster's ego, which is considerable.

John Wayne In Western

A cowboy tracks down the gang that has kidnapped his grandson in "Big Jake," a western starring John Wayne, Richard Boone and Maureen O'Hara, to be broadcast on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies," Jan. 30 (9 to 11 p.m.).

A gang led by John Fain (Boone), invades the McCandles ranch, killing the family's servants, wounding one of the McCandles sons (Bobby Vinton) and kidnapping the young grandchild (John Ethan Wayne) of Jacob "Big Jake" McCandles.

Robert De Niro Stars In ABC's 'Taxi Driver'

An angry and tormented young man hating everyone but a pure and beautiful woman who fears him and a teen-age street hustler who is too cynical to trust him, explodes into a savage frenzy in "Taxi Driver," the much-honored contemporary drama which will have its television premiere as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," Jan. 28 (9 to 11 p.m).

Robert De Niro, hailed by Newsweek's Jack Kroll as "the most remarkable young actor on the American screen," stars as Travis Bickle, the alienated cabdriver who sees only the ugliness and evil in the city's nighttime streets. De Niro was nominated for an Academy Award for his performance, as was Jodie Foster, who plays Iris, the painfully streetwise teenager who inspires the film's shocking conclusion.

Cybill Shepherd plays Betsy, the lovely and naive presidental campaign worker who is first fascinated and then repelled by Travis' crush on her. The Hollywood Reporter's Arthur Knight said, "I seriously doubt whether any other young actress could have caught so well all the shadings."

Peter Boyle, Harvey Keitel and Leonard Harris are also featured.

The story of "Taxi Driver" follows Bickle through his long days and nights behind the wheel as he grows more and more convinced that a strong man — himself — must take all necessary action to stamp out the decadent and disgusting city life that he feels is choking him. He sees beauty in Betsy — and is crushed when she runs away from him. He feels pity for young Iris — and feels fury when she returns to the street life. The world is too much for Travis Bickle, and he must do something about it. And he does.

As expressed by the producers of "Taxi Driver"; "In the aftermath of violence, the distinction between hero and villian is sometimes a matter of interpretation or misinterpretation of facts. 'Taxi Driver' suggests that tragic errors can be made."

Carradine Has Title Role In Mini-Series

David Carradine stars in the title role of "Mr. Horn," a dramatic, four-hour mini-series revealing the fascinating story of the enigmatic frontier figure Tom Horn, whose colorful Wild West career encompassed the capture of the legendary Apache warrior Geronimo in the 1880's and a rough-and-ready, turn of the century life as a Wyoming bounty hunter, to be broadcast in two episodes, Thursday, Feb. 1, and Saturday, Feb. 3 (8 to 10 p.m. each night), on CBS-TV.

Also starring are Richard Widmark as Al Sieber, whom many historians regard as the greatest Indian scout to roam the western plains, and Karen Black as Ernestina Crawford (Mrs. Irwin), who becomes romantically involved with Horn after her brother dies in a preliminary skirmish of the torturous Geronimo campaign. The production was filmed on location in Mexico near Mexicali and Tecate and in Los Angeles.

Others in the cast are Richard Masur as Sheriff Ed Smalley, who plays an important role in Horn's destiny; Clay Tanner as Lt. Henry Lawton, an aide to Nelson Miles, the general who takes credit for Geronimo's capture; Pat McCormick as John Noble, the wealthy cattleman whose hiring of Horn to clean up Wyoming rustlers is a turning point in the cowboy's intriguing career; John Durren as Marshal Joe LeFors, who investigates charges against Horn in Wyoming; Jeremy Slate as the ill-starred U.S. Cavalryman Capt. Emmet Crawford, and Enrique Lucero as Geronimo. Stafford Morgan portrays General Miles and Don Collier is Mr. Mickell, a Wyoming sheep rancher and another key figure in that period of Horn's life.

Horn meets Sieber and because of his ability to speak American Indian dialects is convinced to join him as a U.S. Cavalry scout for what he later learns is the Army's relentless campaign to capture Geronimo.

Only an incredible 1,000-mile search in Arizona, New Mexico and Mexico under intolerable desert heat that takes a terrible toll of men and equipment enables the two scouts to lead the successful trackdown of Geronimo.

After General Miles breaks Horn's promise to Geronimo of sanctuary on an Arizona reservation and the mightly Apache is subjected to a degrading, circus-like surrender ceremony, Horn has had his fill of the Southwest.

'You Gotta Have Heart'

Should Conrad Bain burst into song with the tuneful "You Gotta Have Heart," it's for a good reason: he has just been signed to play the real-life role of Dr. Christiaan Barnard, the heart transplant pioneer, in the film titled "The Man of Heart."

Evil Knievel Stars As Motorcycle Stuntman

Evel Knievel stars as himself in "Viva Knievel," an action drama about the stunt motorcyclist's plan to set a new world's record in spite of efforts by criminals to sabotage the daredevil's jump. Gene Kelly, Lauren Hutton and Red Buttons also star in the adventure, which will be colorcast on "NBC Wednesday Night at the Movies," Jan. 31 (9 to 11 p.m.).

In this fictional drama, Knievel, known throughout the country for his successes and failures as a motorcycle stunt rider, starts out for California where he will attempt to set a new world's record. Knievel and his mechanic, Will Atkins (Kelly), arrive on the West Coast, where they meet Kate Morgan (Hutton), a photographer assigned to shoot Knievel if he crashes.

While in California, Knievel meets an old friend, Jessie Hammond (Marjoe Gortner), who wants the famed stuntman to join him on a motorcycle tour of Mexico. Despite Will's protests and warnings about the promoter, Millard (Leslie Nielsen), Knievel agrees.

Ben Andrews (Buttons), the promoter of the California jump, is unexpectedly slain in a robbery and Knievel is severly injured when he actually attempts the stunt.

Circus Highlights Air

Or to a lion, leopard, puma, elephant or horse?

Plenty, if you're Gunther Gebel-Williams. But only he and the animals can understand it.

Gebel-Williams, along with other outstanding circus stars, will be featured on the all-new "Highlights of Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus," Wednesday, Jan. 31 (8 to 9 p.m.), on NBC-TV.

The program, hosted by Emmy and Peabody Awards winner Danny Kaye, will include performances by Rudi Lenz with his chimpanzees; Anna's Dobermans — the first Doberman pinscher circus act in the world; Marguerite Michele with a hair-suspension act; trampoline artist Canestrelli; and the Wally Naghtin Bears.

Danny Kaye clowns around with female funster Denise Wilson as he hosts the all-new "Highlights of Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus," Wednesday, Jan. 31 (8-9 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Production Underway

Production has begun on the short NBC-TV series "Harris and Company," a drama starring Bernie Casey as the widowered father of five children.

More 'Dukes'

CBS-TV has ordered an additional eight hour-long episodes of the new series, "The Dukes of Hazzard," which premiered last week.

Martinez Stars On 'Quincy'

Self-image plays an important part in any actor's life, and young Chicano actor A Martinez is the first to admit it.

When Martinez was called in to see Jack Klugman and director Paul Krasny for a major role in a "Quincy" drama, Martinez — though nervous — was ready.

"Jack asked me some questions about my acting background and I think the thing that convinced him was my theater training," he said. "Then I took a swallow and made some suggestions to improve the role and make it more realistic. When writers put on paper what a character is like, he doesn't always fully flesh it out and it's up to the actor to help with the characterization."

For an actor to suggest improvements on a role even before getting the job is sometimes frowned on. But Martinez, an actor for ten years, has control of his self-image and is one of the busiest and most highly regarded actors in Hollywood.

He shares the predominant acting chores with Klugman in the two-hour episode, "Walk Softly Through the Night," on NBC-TV's "Quincy" Thursday, Feb 1 (9 p.m.). He plays a Chicano premed student who teams with Quincy to fight illicit drug traffic at a local college.

He describes his role of Marty Herrera as: "Good — there was so much of it. The sheer volume was nice. The only danger was that Marty not come off self-righteous. In grasping for a positive image, the writer made him too perfect — a saint. He needed a balance, so I suggested a change and they went for it."

For a Chicano actor to ask for a Chicano character to not be too positive is a switch in acting, but Martinez has his thoughts about the Chicanos' image in films.

"I have a different kind of attitude than many Chicano actors," he explained. "I don't reject the image. More than moaning and groaning about a part being too stereotypical, you should try, as an actor, to do something with it. Especially in television, where you're expected to show up on the set to deliver a characterization. But this is how I got started and I'm certainly not ashamed to play those roles."

HOLLYWOOD — On the heels of the discovery that SUZANNE SOMERS will appear in a six-page Playboy Magazine layout, but NOT in her birthday suit, comes word that Suzanne is also preparing to pose for a new poster. This time, though, she won't be wearing a bathing suit — just a lot of glittering jewelry. Still, Suzanne says it won't be too revealing.

Word has it that OLIVIA NEWTON-JOHN has gifted sister RONA and her boyfriend JEFF CONAWAY of TV's "TAXI" with a home in Malibu for them to share.

It's also understood that at some of the major public appearances being made by LARRY WILCOX and ERIK ESTRADA of "CHiPs," the pair is charging $5 for their autographed pictures. Such was the case, at least, at a recent auto show appearance the two made together.

To avoid hurting any of her co-worker's feeling, CHERYL LADD is having nothing to do with casting the guest stars on her first primetime TV special which will air in April just before the Oscars.

Unusual sight outside the Beverly Hills Hotel . . . There was STEVE McQUEEN, attired in grubby jeans and a T-shirt and unshaven, with his head under the hood of a Porsche 911. Seems one of the hotel guests couldn't get his car started, and Steve happened by and helped the stranger with the problem.

Scuttlebutt has it that LOU FERRIGNO is not getting along with the make-up artist he has to spend endless hours with in preparation for his 'HULK' role. At least, that's the impression inasmuch as his current make-up man is the third hired for the job since the show debuted.

Contrary to gossip, FARRAH FAWCETT-MAJOR's last appearance on "CHARLIE'S ANGELS" for the season went as smoothly as ever. Someone tried to spread the rumor that Farrah was bored and difficult to get along with on the 20th Century-Fox set, but anyone who spent the week here will offer comments to the contrary.

PAM DAWBER isn't letting opportunity slip through her hands. TV's 'MIND' makes no secret of the fact that she's doing everything possible to utilize the show's popularity to spread the word on solar energy and the overall conservation of energy. "If I can just get some of the youngstesrs to remember to turn off their bedroom lights when they leave the room, then I will have accomplished something," suggests Pam.

Pilot For CBS

"The Ultimate Imposter," a two-hour pilot for CBS-TV, is now in production. Joe Hacker stars in the drama of espionage intrigue, and Richard MacKenzie and Erin Gray co-star.

'Imposter' is about a U.S. spy in China who is captured, and when the Chinese release him, it is learned that they have erased 90 percent of his memory. He is then given information via a computer, absorbs it all and becomes, in essence, a computerized spy.

But there is one hitch — the information data fades from his brain after 72 hours.

Women Decide Between Love Or Success

Four young women working at a magnificent new Texas department store go for love and success and discover that sometimes you have to choose between them in "The Girls in the Office," a romantic drama which premieres as "The ABC Friday Night Movie," Feb. 2 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Susan Saint James, Barbara Eden, David Wayne and Tony Roberts head the cast; also starring are Robyn Douglass, Penny Peyser, Joe Penny and Jonathan Goldsmith.

Making special appearances are ABC Records country singing star John Conlee and Olympic skating champions Jo Jo Starbuck and Ken Shelley.

Miss Saint James is seen as Rita Massaro, a girl hardened by her past, who is determined to have a better life and is willing to pay any price to get it.

Miss Eden as Lee Rawlins is a career woman and long-time employee of Nayfack's old department store whose conservative attitude has kept her from the full life she secretly wants.

Babes in these commercial woods are Miss Douglass as Karen Heineman and Miss Peyser as Tracy Beaumont, who — despite their youth and inexperience — learn to stand up for their rights.

Wayne as Ben Nayfack is a pioneer who rose from shirt peddler to tycoon, and as his crowning glory is determined to build the world's grandest department store.

Joe Penny plays Beau Holliday, who is in charge of building the new store. Right-hand men to Nayfack, jockeying for top position, are Tony Roberts as Mike Holden and Jonathan Goldsmith as Bill Pearson.

'Dana' Stars

Melissa Sue Anderson and Robert Carradine have been signed to star in "Survival of Dana," a TV movie about a teenage girl who comes to Los Angeles and becomes involved in gang warfare.

Sexes Do 'Turnabout'

A casual wish to change places with each other becomes a shocking reality for a couple in "Turnabout," NBC-TV's new comedy series now airing on Fridays (9 to 9:30 p.m). Sharon Gless and John Schuck portray the couple who experience this zany switch in sexes.

Sharon, a fifth-generation Californian, was most recently seen as the distracted secretary, Maggie, in "Switch." She has also had featured roles in television series and feature films. Among these films are "The Longest Night," "All My Darling Daughters" and "My Darling Daughters' Anniversary."

John Schuck, who endeared himself to television viewers when he played the police sergeant-sidekick to Rock Hudson's Commissioner McMillan, never thought he would wind up in television.

"Somehow, I ended up in Hollywood, but I never planned it that way," the dark curly-haired actor explains. "I was working in repertory on the stage in various cities across the country and if you had asked me then what I thought about being in television and films, I would probably have been at a loss for an answer. It just didn't occur to me."

But it did occur to director Robert Altman, who caught Schuck's performance in a play. He was looking for actors to cast in this film, "M*A*S*H," and offered Schuck the role of Painless, the impotent dentist. Schuck continued doing Altman movies . . . as a sex-crazed hillbilly in "McCabe and Mrs. Miller," a vicious narcotics cop in "Brewster McCloud," and a surly, one-quarter-Indian bankrobber in "Thieves Like Us."

In 'Thieves,' Schuck received glowing reviews. Pauline Kael in the "New Yorker" said: "Schuck gives a performance that in some ways rivals the intensity that Bogart brought to his Fred C. Dobbs in 'The Treasure of Sierra Madre.' His comic, terrifying big scene, when he insists on play-acting a robbery at home with small children and explodes in a murderous rage when they lose interest, and his last scene, in which he's deserted, yelling in torment on a country road, are classic moments."

Michele Will Tell

TO LAWRENCE WELK'S FANS: Cellist Charlotte Harris left the show because she didn't want to go on tour, something Welk insists upon.

After 11 years with the Welk group, Cissy King decided to further her career in other areas. She is now choreographing touring dance groups. Meanwhile, Bobby Burgess is busy with auditions in his search for a new partner.

Q: Tell me about the old trucking show on TV called "Cannonball." When did it air, and what are the stars doing now? D. MONHAUT, BURTON, S.C.

A: "Cannonball" was a syndicated show that aired one year — 1958 — and starred Paul Birch as Mike 'Cannonball' Malone and William Campbell as Jerry. Birch died in 1964. Campbell has been active in feature films ("Dirty Mary, Crazy Larry," "Hush, Hush, Sweet Charlotte," etc.) since his role in the series.

Q: Is it true that "Starsky & Hutch" won't be back next year? M. ROYAL, GODWIN, N.C.

A: The show has been steadily slipping in the ratings all season, and if there's not a drastic upswing soon, it's on the way out.

Q: What is the title of the book that the TV movie, "Some Kind of Miracle," was based on? B. MASON, CANTON, N.C.

A: But There Are Always Miracles," written by Mary and Jack Willis. The couple also wrote the movie script in which they described their day-by-day feelings as he worked toward his recovery from a near-fatal accident that left him paralyzed.

A: CBS-TV, 7800 Beverly Blvd., Hollywood, Ca. 90036.

Q: A friend says that the bear named Ben, who was on 'Grizzly Adams,' was really a man in bear's clothing. Is this true? E. LOVE, LEXINGTON, N.C.

A: Absolutely not! Ben is a bona fide, 550-pound bear.

Q: I recently saw Tony Orlando's special. Where do I write him to tell him how glad I am that he's back on TV and doing so well? L. BROWN, SPARTANBURG, S.C.

A: Three cheers for Orlando! He is making a fabulous comeback from a severe nervous breakdown. Be sure to write that letter and send it to NBC-TV, 3000 W. Alameda Ave., Burbank, Ca. 91505.

Q: Could you tell me something about Lloyd Battista, who plays Ray Slater on "Love of Life"? B. HAM, DARLINGTON, S.C.

A: Lloyd has been acting since he was a child. The only thing he regrets about his career is that he is always playing villains now. He has a great interest in jazz,and although he has never married, he loves kids. Lloyd is a co-owner of a real estate business in Hollywood, although working in New York makes it difficult for him to spend time on the venture.

Campbell Proves Real Bargain

He came at a heavy price, but how can you even begin to talk about the value Earl Campbell has been to the up-and-coming Houston Oilers?

The Oilers surrendered tight end Jimmy Giles and four draft choices to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers for the right to draft first in last year's college draft, and they wasted little time in selecting Campbell, the 1977 Heisman Trophy winner.

Little did they know what kind of bargain they were getting.

Campbell will be in the American Conference starting backfield when they take on the best from the NFC in the annual Pro Bowl Monday, Jan. 29 (9 p.m. on ABC-TV).

All the rookie did was rush for a league-leading 1,450 yards, score 13 regular-season touchdowns and lead his team to the NFL playoffs for the first time in 9 years.

Add to that a clinching touchdown in the big Oiler victory over the Miami Dolphins in the first round of the playoffs and an equally fine performance against the New England Patriots in the ABC semi-finals. Then you begin to get the picture: Earl Campbell is a gifted runner.

As soon as Campbell entered the Oiler lineup for the opening game of the season, the Houston offense showed marked improvement. Their record climbed from 8-6 last year to 10-6 this season.

Time and again, Earl wore down defenders on key third-down runs with his slashing, rumbling style of running. The Oiler point production went from 222 in 1977 to 283 in 1978.

"You don't appreciate him like us coaches do," Oiler coach Bum Phillips commented to a group of reporters after the season was over.

"He doesn't just carry the ball. He blocks like the devil when someone else is carrying."

NBC-TV Revises Cartoon Line-Up

"The New Fred and Barney Show," featuring the prehistoric cutups, Fred Flinstone and Barney Rubble, in an all new series of comic adventures, and "The Jetsons," which follows the space age misadventures of a family living in the 21st century, will join NBC-TV's Saturday morning schedule effective Saturday, Feb. 3.

Another new half-hour series also debuting on that date is "Buford and The Galloping Ghost," currently a featured element of "Yogi's Space Race."

"The New Fred and Barney Show" is set in the pre-historic suburb of Bedrock, the home of Fred and Wilma Flintstone, their daughter Pebbles, and the family's pet dinosaur, Dino. Barney and Betty Rubble, the Flintstones' next-door neighbors, join Fred and Wilma in a series of adventures and misadventures.

"The Jetsons" features George and Jane Jetson and their two children, Judy, 15, and Elroy 8, who brave the fully automated 21st century, with its walls of push-bottons, jet cars and other supersonic conveniences, but are burdened with many inconveniences, as well.

"Buford and The Galloping Ghost" incorporates two elements from the "Yogi's Space Race" series. The Ghost, called Nugget Nose, who, at the ripe age of 150 years, continues to plague the owners of a dude ranch, and Buford, a Confederate bloodhound, link fortunes in a series of new adventures.

"Yogi's Space Race" — 8 to 8:30 a.m.

"The Fantastic Four" — 8:30 to 9 a.m.

"The Godzilla Super 90" — 9 to 10:30 a.m.

"The Daffy Duck Show" — 10:30 to 11 a.m.

"The New Fred and Barney Show" — 11 to 11:30 a.m.

"The Jetsons" — 11:30 a.m. to 12-noon

"Buford and the Galloping Ghost" — 12-noon to 12:30 p.m.

Time Change! — Alley Oop (shown here wielding his axe) and The Captain and the Kids are some of the characters that provide non-stop comedy on pro-social themes in "The Fabulous Funnies," to be telecast Saturdays (12:30-1 p.m.) beginning Feb. 3 on NBC-TV.

Son To Host Tournament

Nathaniel Crosby gets ready for the 38th annual Bing Crosby Pro-Amateur Golf Tournament while CBS sports commentator Vin Scully looks on. The tournament will be televised Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 3 and 4 on CBS-TV, and marks the 21st anniversary of the first telecast. At right is a scene from the very first telecast in 1958 with Kathryn Grant Crosby, John Charles Daly and the late Bing Crosby, tournament sponsor and founder.

Twenty-one years ago sports television was in its relative infancy.

The star-studded Bing Crosby National Pro-Am was selected by CBS-TV to break television golf into the big time.

On Feb. 3 and 4, the 38th edition of the Crosby will be televised — again by CBS (Saturday, 5 to 6:30 p.m., and Sunday, 4:30 to 6:30 p.m.) — but instead of the prize money of $50,000 offered the touring pros in 1958, there will be $330,000 available to shoot for on the three beautiful Monterey Peninsula golf courses.

Although Bing, loved for his inimitable style, his dedication to sports and charities, and his friendships with golfers and celebrities alike, died in 1977, the tournament continues on with Nathaniel Crosby, 17, as the host.

"We will have an outstanding tournament this year," says young Nathaniel, a scratch handicapper who will compete in the classic.

"Many of Dad's old friends such as James Garner and Jack Lemmon will play, plus other golfing celebrities including Johnny Mathis, Efrem Zimbalist, Jr., Lawrence Welk, George C., Scott, Charley Pride, Clint Eastwood and Glen Campbell. Also former President Gerald R. Ford will be among the amateurs."

All of the top pros including Tom Watson, Gil Morgan, Andy Bean, Hubert Green, Lee Trevino, Arnold Palmer, Hale Irwin, Lee Elder, Tom Weiskopf and Ben Crenshaw will be on hand for the tournament.

All profits from the tournament go to the Bing Crosby Youth Fund which provides grants to youth organizations and interest-free scholarships to private colleges and universities. To date, more than $4 million has been disbursed.

Nathaniel notes that his playing in the tournament will not give him time to comment on the telecast as Bing did.

"Phil Harris will be working with Vin Scully, the CBS announcer. Phil knows most of the pros and celebs and played in the tournament for years. He'll be a major asset to help viewers enjoy our 1979 telecast," concluded Nathaniel.

Lopez And Irwin Tee Off

Two of the world's top professional golfers, Nancy Lopez, who was just named Female Athlete of the Year by the Associated Press, and Hale Irwin, winner of more than $1,250,000 in his career, head the list of male vs. female competitors, when CBS Sports presents "Challenge of the Sexes," Sunday, Jan. 28 (1 to 1:45 p.m.).

Also competing on the program are two of the best gymnasts from the United States, Kathy Johnson, who is the United States Gymnastic Federation's All-Around champion for 1978, and Mike Wilson, third-place finisher in the NCAA All-Around last year; and, show jumping experts Rodney Jenkins and Melanie Smith.

Twenty-one-year-old Nancy Lopez set the LPGA tour ablaze last summer when she won five tournaments in succession, and nine altogether. Her earnings of $189,813 were a record for a rookie (man or woman) on the professional golf circuit.

Hale Irwin, who is 33 and originally from Joplin, Mo., rose to international prominence by winning the U.S. Open in 1974. For six consecutive years (1973 through 1978) Irwin was among the top seven money earners on the PGA Tour.

Olympic Diary Airs

The first installment of "NBC's Olympic Diary — The American Way," profiling many of the United States' top 1980 Olympic hopefuls alongside the athletes of other nations that they are likely to compete against at the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow, will air Sunday, Jan. 28 (1 to 2 p.m.). Bruce Jenner and Donna de Varona host the special, much of which was filmed in and around Moscow, at venues of the 1980 Olympic Games.

Boxer Clinton Jackson, who competed for the U.S. in the 1976 Olympic Games at Montreal, is training hard in pursuit of a gold medal in the welterweight division at the 1980 games. Jackson, who makes his living as a deputy sheriff in Nashville, Tenn., combines this professional law enforcement career with his boxing by coaching and training prison inmates and running youth programs. Jacksons efforts to back to amateur athletics the kind of coaching and leadership that helped him make the U.S. Olympic team, are in revealing contrast to the career of two-time Olympic heavyweight champ Teofilio Stevenson of Cuba.

Liberace Celebrates Valentine's Day On CBS

Liberace, "Mr. Showmanship," celebrates Valentine's Day with a gala musical party conducted on the decks and in the main ballroom of the Queen Mary in Long Beach (Ca.) harbor on "Liberace — A Valentine Special," Saturday, Feb. 3 (10 to 11 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

Other sites at which the master showman, and special guest stars Lola Falana and Sandy Duncan, pay tribute to the day devoted to love and affection include the entertainer's home and museum in Las Vegas and the Las Vegas Hilton Hotel.

Known for his flamboyance and theatricality, the style that is Liberace's trademark is evident from the show's opening, which finds Liberace landing in a hot-air balloon at the Las Vegas Hilton Hotel. There, from the stage, he introduces Lola Falana and Sandy Duncan and dedicates a "Funny Valentine" medley of songs to his mother, whom he introduces from the audience, and to all mothers watching the show.

In a segment taped at Liberace's palatial Las Vegas home, viewers see some of the lavishly-decorated rooms and are then taken on a tour of his newly opened museum.

In a musical finale held aboard the Queen Mary, Liberace, Miss Falana, Miss Duncan and a group of dancer perform a musical "Boogie," and "Mr. Showmanship" closes the show with his signature-theme, "I'll Be Seeing You."

Liberace has been breaking records throughout his career, which started at age 16, when he was a guest soloist with the Chicago Symphony. When he opened in Las Vegas in 1957, it was as the highest-paid entertainer in history, and when he performed at New York's Madison Square Garden, also in the 50's, it was to a then record-breaking crowd of 16,000.

Since then, Liberace has been honored as Variety Club's "Entertainer of the Year" in 1976, and as Keyboard magazine's "Pop Keyboard Artist of the Year" in 1977. His other honors include two Emmy Awards and five "Gold" albums, each one selling over a million copies.

Dramatic Epic Ends Sunday

"Centennial," the critically acclaimed television adaptation of James A. Michener's best seller, will be brought to a dramatic conclusion with a final five-hour, two-part presentation on NBC-TV's "The Big Event," Saturday, Feb. 3 (8 to 10 p.m.), and Sunday, Feb. 5 (8 to 11 p.m).

"Fans have a treat in the final chapter," says David Janssen, who has narrated the first 23 hours and appears in the three-hour finale as Venneford Ranch owner Paul Garrett.

"We are using flashback footage of incidents in all the previous shows dating back to Pasquinel (Robert Conrad) and McKeag (Richard Chamberlain) and moving up to contemporary times," Janssen says.

Andy Giffith and Robert Vaughn share star billing with Janssen in Chapter 12, "The Scream of Eagles."

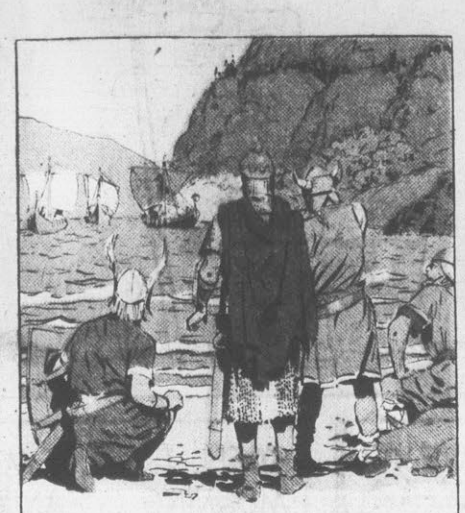
Our Story: FROM HIS LONELY LOOKOUT ARN SEES THE SIGNAL FIRE... THAT MEANS GRACE HAS BEEN FREED FROM THE MARRIAGE CONTRACT WITH HROTHGAR. HE SCRAMBLES DOWN THE MOUNTAIN.

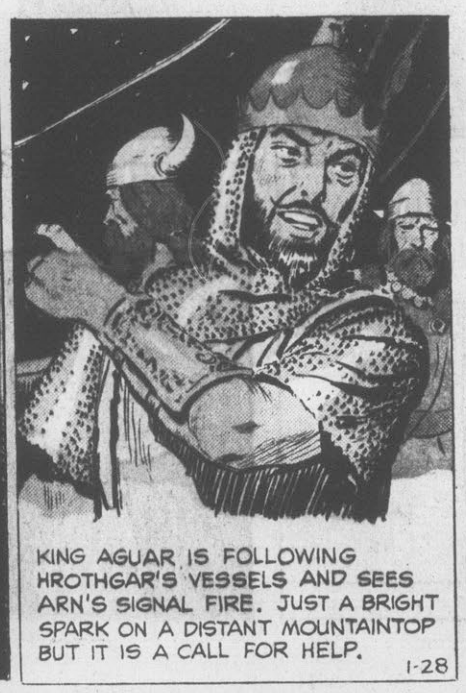
BREATHLESSLY HE TELLS GRACE SHE NEED NOT FEAR A MOST UNPLEASANT FUTURE WITH BRUTAL HROTHGAR.



NOW THAT AGUAR HAS TAUGHT HROTHGAR A LESSON IN GOOD MANNERS THEY WATCH HIM GO. "THAT IS NOT THE CHANNEL TO HROTHLAND," STATES THE KING'S SHIELD BEARER. "HE IS HEADED BACK TO CNUTE'S FIEF."

HROTHGAR IS IN A FOUL MOOD. BALKED IN HIS HUNGER FOR REVENGE, HE WANTS SATISFACTION. SO HE SAILS HIS ARMED SHIPS BACK TO CNUTE'S CASTLE TO CLAIM HIS PROMISED BRIDE. "DELAY HIM IF YOU CAN WHILE I LIGHT UP THE SIGNAL FLAME," CRIES ARN.

NIGHT HAS FALLEN WHEN AT LAST HE REACHES THE MOUNTAINTOP AND KINDLES A FLAME. THEN HE SPEEDS DOWN RECKLESSLY, READY TO FIGHT FOR GRACE.



KING AGUAR IS FOLLOWING HROTHGAR'S VESSELS AND SEES ARN'S SIGNAL FIRE. JUST A BRIGHT SPARK ON A DISTANT MOUNTAINTOP BUT IT IS A CALL FOR HELP.
