

'Death To Carter' Cries By Khomeini Supporters

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer
TEHRAN, Iran (AP) —
Shouts of "Death to Carter!" rang out today as tens of thousands of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's followers surrounded the headquarters of the leader of Iran's revolution while he prayed and mapped political strategy.
The mob also chanted
"Death to Huyser!" U.S.
Gen. Robert Huyser, deputy commander of American forces in Europe, has been in Tehran for several weeks.
U.S. sources say he is President Carter's liaison officer with the Iranian army.

Prime Minister Shapour Bakhtiar, meanwhile, told state radio he wants to meet with Khomeini for an "exchange of views" that could lead to a political solution of the Iranian crisis.

He proposed the meeting in an interview with state radio and did not elaborate. There was no immediate comment
from the Khomeini camp.

Bakhtiar wanted to fly to France last week to meet with the Moslem religious leader, but Khomeini refused, saying Bakhtiar first must resign as prime minister of the "illegal"
government appointed by Shah Mohammad Reza
Pahlavi.

Karim Sanjaby, head of the political opposition to the government of Prime Minister Shapour Bakhtiar, met with Khomeini and said afterward that the tumultuous welcome home

the ayatollah received was a "vote of confidence" in his plans for an Islamic republic

and that Bakhtiar should resign "since he claims to be a strong believer in democracy."

The frantic crowd chanted
"Hail Khomeini!" and "God is Great!" But "Islamic police" organized by his local aides kept them from touching the 78-year-old religious leader as he walked from the Moslem girls' school
he is using as his headquarters to a nearby building for Sabbath prayers.

side Wilmington. (AP Laserphoto)

Unemployed Ranks Show Small Drop

WASHINGTON (AP) —
The nation's unemployment rate declined slightly to 5.8 percent in January, showing the slowdown in the economy that the Carter administration is planning had not yet begun to occur, a government report showed today.

The jobless rate in December was 5.9 percent, and the Labor Department noted in its report that unemployment has hovered at just below 6 percent for the past six months. It has been at the 5.8 percent level twice previously in recent months.

However, the administration predicts that unemployment will rise to 6.2 percent during this year and remain at that level in 1980 as a result of government efforts to retard growth of the economy to help control inflation.

Both the percentage of the population who had jobs, 59.3 percent, and the share of the population in the labor force, 63.7 percent, were at all-time
highs.

The Labor Department said total employment increased during the month by 450,000, with gains occurring in most major industries.
Total employment was put at 96.3 million, while the number of Americans seeking jobs was 5.9 million.

Adult men accounted for most of the job gains in January, although unemployment declined among all population groups.

All figures in the report were adjusted for seasonal variations.

Later he appeared at a window and waved to the crowd as aides led him in chanting "Death to the Pahlavi dynasty" of Shah
Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Several blocks away, 100 soldiers in battle dress with water cannons guarded the home of the Majlis, Iran's Parliament, but no hostile demonstrators approached the building.

Following his triumphant return from France Thursday after more than 14 years of exile, the Shiite Moslem patriarch was flown by army helicopter to the house of a "friend or relative" in central Tehran, where he had dinner and spent the night,
aides said.

Although more than a million Iranians gave the ayatollah a frenzied welcome home, there were no reports of political bloodshed
Thursday for the first time in weeks.

But early today five gunmen killed a 28-year-old ex-boxer in what was believed to be a politically-motivated assassination. They dragged him from his Tehran home and shot him in the street 100 yards away.

Holding Man For Wilmington Plant Uranium-Stealing

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) —
A man accused of stealing some 150 pounds of uranium and demanding $100,000 for its return was held today
under $150,000 bond, the FBI
said.

David Learned Dale, 39, was arrested at General Electric's nuclear fuel plant
near Wilmington Thursday, and FBI agents recovered
two canisters of slightly enriched uranium that had been taken from the plant last Friday. The canisters were recovered in an open field five miles east of the plant about 5 p.m. Thursday.

Officials said the uranium posed no threat to health
unless it was ingested.

Dale was charged under the Hobbs Act, a federal law covering both extortion and theft. Authorities said the extortion charge involved a demand for $100,000 in small bills to reveal the location of the canisters.

Agents said Dale was arrested at mid-afternoon
Thursday while working on a project at the GE site. He was employed by Daniels Construction Co., a subcontractor working at the plant.

The plant manufactures radioactive fuel rods and pellets for nuclear power plants.

In his job, Dale had access to the area where the uranium dioxide was stored,
the company said.

The canisters were discovered missing last week
during normal computer monitoring of inventories, a company spokesman said.
However, it was initially assumed that the material was mislabeled and was in the plant.

An extortion letter was found Monday, propped up against the office door of Randell J. Alkema, manager of the GE plant.

The letter was said to threaten to release to the media information that the canisters had been stolen if General Electric didn't pay $100,000 within 48 hours. The letter also promised to reveal the location of the canisters, but said the price would go up to $200,000 if the time condition was not met.

No money was given, officials said.

Joseph M. Hendrie,
chairman of the NRC, said,
"In view of the minimal health and safety hazards of the low-enriched material, NRC does not prescribe specific details of how it should be protected."

He said "reasonable industrial security measures" would satisfy NRC requirements.

Cost-Cutting

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Even bureaucrats' briefcases have felt the pinch of President Carter's anti-inflation program.

"We've stopped buying leather briefcases for bureaucrats," said Lester A. Fetting, administrator of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy, who was in Raleigh Thursday for the Governor's Conference on Fighting Inflation.

But Fetting warned the cutback may not seem like much.
"We only spent $3 million a year on leather briefcases," he said.

"We've been buying enough briefcases to give one to every civil servant every seven years," he added. "People would just say, 'Hey, pick me up another briefcase — I gave the other one to my kids.'"

"It's got to stop," Fetting said.
A stockpile of leather briefcases is on hand, Fetting said, but when those are gone, bureaucrats will get ones made from synthetic materials, if they get any at all.

Lest the beleaguered bureaucrats think they're the only ones feeling the pinch, Fetting offered that the armed forces are also doing their part.

The services expect to cut their underwear bill by 10 percent by buying Fruit of the Loom briefs instead of shorts made to order to government specifications, he said.

Six Additional Winter Weeks

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa.
(AP) — Punxsutawney Phil
saw his shadow today, and according to the legend that means the nation is in for six more weeks of snow and cold.

The Groundhog Day
forecast came as no surprise to several hundred onlookers who waited to hear the groundhog's verdict in several inches of snow and toe-numbing sub-teen temperatures.

Phil's official guardians,
the Punxsutawney Groundhog Club, insisted that although skies were cloudy here, Phil had seen "a pale shadow" and predicted "six more weeks of mild winter weather."

Phil himself did not emerge voluntarily from his burrow on Goble's Knob, but was trundled out on a special sliding drawer and hung limply in the hands of a club member while the club president delivered the official word.

ERA Bill Filed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A
bill has been filed in the state House that would give North Carolina its own equal rights law.

Rep. Vernon James, D-Pasquotank, filed the bill today. It would "prohibit inequality of rights under the law on account of sex."

Since the bill calls for an amendment to the North Carolina constitution, it would have to be voted on in the next statewide election if the General Assembly approves it.

The legislature will also be deciding the fate of the Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution this session.
No bills have been filed on the controversial amendment yet, however. It has been defeated three times in the legislature.

Two Tax-Cutting Plans Filed In N.C. Assembly

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —
Two methods of cutting taxes, one of them proposed last month by Gov. Jim Hunt, were filed in the General Assembly Thursday.

Hunt's proposal would raise the individual income tax deduction for dependents from $600 to $1,000, and would cost the state an estimated $40 million.

It was filed by the House and Senate finance committee chairmen, Sen.
Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston,
and Rep. John Gamble, D-Lincoln.

The second tax-cutting proposal was filed in the House by Gamble and would remove the state intangibles tax on deposits held in bank checking accounts. That tax, also levied on savings accounts, is at the rate of 10 cents per $100 and goes to local governments.

Rauch, an ally of Lt. Gov.
Jimmy Green, said he introduced the income tax bill at Hunt's request.

"I consider this to be a very good start," he said. "I like that part of it and I'd like to go farther."

Rauch said he believed the state could afford a permanent tax cut of as much as $100 million next year and that he planned to seek a committee amendment to increase the "head of household" deduction. That deduc-tion is now $2,000, but Rauch said he did not yet know how high it could be raised.

Hunt proposed the tax cut in a speech to the General Assembly last month and proposed a second plan to give every taxpayer a one-time rebate of between $10 and $25 if the state has a large enough surplus.

The rebate plan is considered unpopular in the legislature and is opposed by Rauch.

In other legislative action:
Open Meetings

A House judiciary committee took up a study

commission's proposed revision of the state's open meetings law, but took no action. The measure would require public boards to give notice of their meetings and would expand the ability of citizens to sue boards to block illegally closed meetings.

Marion Foster, president of the N.C. Hospital Association, asked for an exemption to allow public hospital boards to take actions involving doctors in private. The N.C. Press Association opposes the move.

Rep. Patricia Hunt, D-Orange, committee chairman, said the panel would consider amendments
Tuesday and vote on the bill itself next Thursday.

Inflation-Fighter Kahn Praises Hunt's Effort

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —
Alfred E. Kahn, chairman of the President's Council on Wage and Price Stability, said Thursday that the high rate of inflation is the price Americans are paying for a successful economy.

Kahn was the keynote speaker at the Governor's Conference on Fighting Inflation, where he praised Hunt's efforts to combat inflation in North Carolina.

"I have read your governor's anti-inflation plan, and it's on the right track," Kahn told state officials and business leaders attending the conference. "This state is leading the way to better cooperation between state and federal governments in the battle against inflation."

Kahn said the rising inflation rate in the nation is bringing out angry citizens' groups protesting spiraling housing, food and medical care costs.

"I don't have to remind you of inflation," he said. "You are reminded of it every time you go to the grocery store or pay a utility bill."

"We see anger in growing numbers of Americans who go out to vote their protests and in the decline of our two largest political parties," Kahn added. "Inflation conflicts with the bonds that hold us together as a nation."

Kahn said the American public must work together to solve the inflation problem.

"This battle will show us if we are a single society or simply 220 million people at war with one another," he said.

In his explanation of what he considers to be the cause of inflation, Kahn said the success of the American economy is a major factor in rising prices.

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used.
Transcribing is done once a day.

WOOD

I would like to know if there is someone who would give me some wood. I don't have enough money to buy any. I would be grateful for either coal or wood.

Hotline couldn't drum up a ready supply. But we did learn from Volunteer Greenville Coordinator Nancy Harrington that her office will be glad to coordinate if anyone would like to cut some wood for another person or family and will keep a list of individuals or families who need wood as fuel and have no way to get it on their own.

We also contacted the Salvation Army and were told it has no wood or coal on hand. If anyone wishes to donate any, however, there is a place to store it at the SA Citadel, Barbara Kirkman told us.

Any person or organization wishing to cut wood is asked to contact Volunteer Greenville, as are those needing wood and also those having land where wood might be cut free of charge for the needy.

QUILT

Some time between 1934 and 1941, during the time when I was a young teacher in the Falkland community, the Falkland Home Demonstration Club made a very elaborate quilt, each contributing a square or more. (Teachers were then required to take part in the church and other appropriate clubs of the communities in which they taught.) The quilt was sold as a fund raiser. I have no idea who bought it, but would be very interested in seeing it once again. If I remember, it was very pretty, and it's a part of the history of this community. Mrs. Mary E. Mayo.

Anyone having knowledge of this quilt is asked to call Mrs. Mayo, 758-3387.

both. D-Davidson. The measure, the result of a study commission, is intended to make the laws uniform in all counties.

Patrol Cars

Two Republican House members filed a bill that would prevent the use of unmarked cars except by supervisors and undercover agents. The bills would require each state Highway Patrol car to be painted with the uniform black and silver combination now used.

Municipal and county law enforcement cars would be required to have identifying markings.

A second bill, also introduced by Reps. Frank Redding and Harold Brubaker, R-Randolph, would prohibit anyone other than a law enforcement officer from possessing vehicles resembling patrol or police cars.

Political Contributions

A bill filed by Sen. Cecil Hill, D-Transylvania, would allow a state tax deduction for political contributions. Under the measure taxpayers could deduct documented contributions of up to $50 from their net taxable income.

Crime Package

Crime Control Secretary Herb Hyde appeared before a Senate committee that will consider the administration's crime control legislation. Hyde reviewed Hunt's recommendations made to the legislature Monday but said he would not push proposals to ban highway radar detection devices, such as Fuzzbusters, or to require licenses to drive motorized bicycles called mopeds.

Hyde said the proposals would cause more controversy than they were worth.

Bonds

The House overwhelmingly approved a bill aimed at making it easier for industries to qualify for a tax break on industrial revenue bonds.

The measure would require corporations locating in North Carolina to pay 10 percent above the average state manufacturing wage in order to be avoid paying state taxes on industrial revenue bonds. The current requirement is 20 percent.

Constitutional Amendments

A Senate committee sent to subcommittee a proposed constitutional amendment allowing citizens to initiate laws. The measure would allow voters to petition to have proposed laws and constitutional amendments placed on the ballot in a statewide election.

A companion House bill was sent to subcommittee earlier in the week. Both are Republican proposals and are not given good chances for passage.

Black Awareness

Rep. Graham Bell, D-Gaston, filed a measure that would annually designate the second week in February as "Black Awareness Week" in North Carolina.

State Retreats On Its Adoption Weight Rule

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Barbara and Gordon Ray say they gained a victory for fat people when the state backed down and said they had as much right as thinner folks to adopt a child.

The state Thursday suspended a rule which barred the couple from adopting a child because they are overweight.

"I think we've served a function in getting the rules changed," said Gordon Ray. "I'm happy we could do some good for other so-called fat people."

The couple, both 28, began their efforts to adopt two years ago after doctors said they would probably never have children.

Social workers told Gordon, 6-foot-2 and 215 pounds, and Barbara, 5-foot-9 and 210 pounds, that she had to lose 40 pounds and he 25 pounds before they could be considered as adoptive parents.

Reports of the obesity rule triggered a legislative investigation, criticism of the rule from portly Gov. Lee S. Dreyfus and suspension of the order by Wisconsin Health and Social Services Secretary Donald Percy.

Percy said he issued a directive that obesity should be ignored in state adoption proceedings except at the recommendation of physicians. He promised the Rays' application would be considered.

Percy cautioned that the Rays, certified earlier as healthy by doctors, must meet all other adoption criteria. He said one in 25 couples who apply actually receive a child.

Percy, who said the obesity rule had been implemented inconsistently on a regional basis throughout the state, defended the philosophy behind the rule but said he has nothing personal against fat parents.

"Clearly obesity is a health problem," he said. "Some of my best friends are fatter than they should be, but they are fine parents."

The Rays were optimistic about their chances of adopting a child, and have said they are willing to take in an older child rather than wait for an infant.

"I'm afraid to feel too much until we get the actual adoption process going," Barbara Ray said. "We've had too many let-downs."

"We're very optimistic about our chances," her husband said. "We'll wait indefinitely, and we feel we have a 100 percent chance as long as we wait."

Program For Pitt OK'd

The 1979 ACP program has been approved for Pitt County, according to the local ASCS office.

The practices are designed to help farms conserve soil and water resources. The high priority conservation problems are the loss of soil from wind and water erosion on the reduction of pollution of streams and rivers.

One major change in the program is that a practice cannot be started until it has been approved by the county committee in order to be eligible for cost sharing.

Interested producers are encouraged to file requests several weeks in advance so the county committee may have time to consider each one.

Pre-measurement requests are now being accepted for all crop and land uses, with an increase in fees for the first time in many years.

A sum of $1.25 per acre will be charged, with a $5 service charge for each request. Minimum charge per farm will be $13.

For more information on these and other programs, call the county ASCS office, 752-6112.

New 'Holidome' Opens To The Public Sunday

The grand opening of the Holiday Inn's new Holidome, the Greenville motel's enclosed recreation center, is scheduled for the general public on Sunday from 2-5 p.m.

Innkeeper Carl Peoples said that Mayor Percy Cox was the guest of honor at a ribbon cutting attended by invited guests on Thursday afternoon.

During Thursday's activities, guests were shown the Holidome and introduced to the features offered in the new recreation complex, as well as the motel's new banquet facilities and lounge.

The Holidome, according to Peoples, is a new concept in the motel industry and is the only enclosed, fully heated and air conditioned motel recreation center of its kind between Pennsylvania and Florida.

Inside the complex are a heated swimming pool, 11-person whirlpool spa, nine-hole putting green, pool tables, electronic games, ping pong tables and waterfall, as well as patio dining facilities. Live trees and hanging baskets accent the interior of the complex, which features a tropic-like environment.

The Holiday Inn construction project here was undertaken at a cost exceeding $500,000, owner Mark Daley reported. He added that 42 rooms are being added at the motel with a completion date set for March. Opening of the new rooms will give the motel a total of 156, the owner said.

Police Counted Three Accidents

An estimated $1,975 property damage resulted from three collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 5:50 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Cotanche and Tenth Streets involving cars driven by Alton Robert Capwell of 206 Dalebrook Cr. and Caren Reese Bills of 800 Heath St.

Police estimated damage from the collision at $800 to the Capwell car and $200 to the Bills auto.

Walter Lewis Stasavich of 1306 Cotten Rd. was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 1:53 p.m. mishap on Elm Street, 400 feet North of the Brookgreen Road intersection.

Investigators reported the truck driven by Stasavich collided with a car driven by Nancy G.

Monroe of 104 West Longmeadow Rd., causing an estimated $75 damage to the truck and $500 damage to the car.

Cars driven by Gail Parker Blair of Route 1, Farmville and Jerry Wayne Avery of Winterville, collided about 6:12 p.m. at the intersection of First Street and Woodlawn Avenue, resulting in an estimated $100 damage to the Blair car and $300 damage to the Avery vehicle.

Honorees are Jake Barr, chairman, Joe Dawson, Samuel Fields and Johnnie Walker.

The service is being sponsored by the pastor, members and friends.

Single Charge

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said today that a Rt. 2, Falkland man was charged with only one breaking, entering and larceny count in connection with a recent investigation of an incident in Falkland, rather than two counts as reported by his office Thursday.

The sheriff said that Marty Ray Dunn, 18, was charged in connection with a Jan. 30 break-in at Oscar Norville's Snack Bar, but has not been charged with a Jan. 26 incident at the business as indicated in a story Thursday. Investigation of the Jan. 26 break-in is continuing, he added.

Dunn was incorrectly identified by the Sheriff's Department in Thursday's story as Walter Ray Dunn.

Valentine's Day 1979: Love's Not What It Was

By JOE WING
For AP Newsfeatures

This being the season of St. Valentine, let us consider the status of love in America. The status of romantic love, since its invention in the 12th century by French troubadours, has rarely changed more than in the decade past. Originally, the idea was for a knight to sigh after the favors of a high-born lady. Now, hopeless sighing is out of fashion. A young man is likely to move right in with his girl friend.

Recently, the Population Reference Bureau estimated that nearly a million unwedded couples are living together, an 83 percent increase since 1970. It's not only the youngsters who are doing it, but also oldsters who fear marriage will slash their Social Security benefits.

Unmarried bliss is not unalloyed, however. Psychologists observe that unmarrieds have many of the same problems of money, personality conflicts, division of labor and sexual conflicts as do marrieds. And their breakups are often as traumatic as divorces.

By no means are all singles enamored of one-night stands or two-name households. A New York man who announced in singles bars that he was looking for a wife received 5,000 letters from women.

There have been commentaries by the yard on how pervasive sex is in America's culture. Advertisements and novels, as well as movie, TV and theater themes, bear this out. Obvious also is the spread of prostitution, massage parlors, sex shops, racy entertainers, girlie magazines and peep shows. Police are hampered in efforts to control this, they say, by court rulings.

With such goings on, it might be expected that the nation's birth rate would shoot up. Instead, there was a decline from 18.4 births per thousand to 14.7 in 1976. This edged up to 15.2, however, part way through 1978. Even that small rise was puzzling to those who noted that in a decade the number of working women had risen from 29 million to 35 million, legalized abortion had spread, zero population growth had been touted and birth control techniques and materials had proliferated.

A rise in the marriage rate to 10.1 per thousand population was reported in 1977 after a drop from 10.6 in 1970 to 9.9 in 1976. That was still double the divorce rate, even though the latter had risen spectacularly.

Still, when all statistics are said and done, and sociological developments ticked off, the spirit of Valentine lives on.

One story is that this third-century saint, on the night before he was beheaded, wrote an affectionate note to the jailer's daughter, whom he had cured of blindness, and signed it "Your Valentine."

In America, Valentines have been exchanged since early in the country's history. And Valentine's Day continues to be a red-letter day for greeting-card shops, candy stores, flower shops — and lovers.

Maple Syrup Goes To Scotland

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Eudice and Edward Segal, former neighbors of mine in New York City, now live in Mount Holly, Vt., and travel a lot.

Last fall they spent a month or so in Scotland, visiting their friends John and Ursula Weaver.

Eudice, as is her kind custom, brought back a recipe for me. It's for a quick-and-easy dessert improvised by Mrs. Weaver one night at dinner time. Served to the Weavers-Segals foursome, it was a great success.

When I saw the recipe included that very American product, maple syrup, I asked, "How come?"

"Because we took it along," Eudice said. "The Weavers would rather have maple syrup than any other gift!"

The dessert is similar to Louisiana's "Bananas Foster," originated by Brennan's restaurant in New Orleans. But the Scottish improvisation uses maple syrup instead of sugar and omits spirits.

I'm sure the Segals took Grade A pure maple syrup to Scotland. But our advice is to use Grade B: it may have more robust flavor and cost less than Grade A. At present, Grade B is not generally sold in supermarkets and you may have to order it, as we do, by mail.

URSULA WEAVER'S BANANA COMPOTE

1 cup butter
1/2 cup maple syrup
Juice of 1/2 of a medium lemon (4 teaspoons)
2 tablespoons water
4 medium-size bananas (ripe but firm)
Topping: whipped cream, creme fraiche or vanilla ice cream

In a 10-inch skillet bring the butter, maple syrup, lemon juice and water to a boil; stir

You Can't Live In Dream Castle

DEAR ABBY: Our 14-year-old daughter (I'll call her Meg) has been corresponding with an English pen pal for nearly a year. Derrick is 16. She found his name and address in a magazine.

Well, it seems that Meg told Derrick a lot of things in her letters that were not true. For example, that we were very wealthy, lived on a 3,000-acre ranch and kept horses, etc. Actually, we are far from rich and live in a three-bedroom home in a project in New Jersey. (By "we" I mean my husband and I, Meg and her two brothers, an older sister and Grandma.)

Derrick TELEPHONED Meg to tell her that he was coming to visit us! She broke down and told us, and of course we have no room for this English fellow. I am a nervous wreck and could cheerfully wring Meg's neck, but that won't solve anything.

How can we head off Derrick?

MEG'S MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Either telephone or cable Derrick and advise him to postpone his visit. Then have Meg write him a long, true-confessions type letter to set the record straight. And tell Meg that fantasies are lovely, but they're like dream castles—fun to build, but you can't live in them.

DEAR ABBY: What would you do if you had a friend who wears a hairpiece that makes him look ridiculous?

The man I have in mind has a terrific personality and is happily married to a beautiful, intelligent woman.

He must care about his appearance or he wouldn't have bought a hairpiece in the first place. He can well afford the best, but instead he wears one that looks cheap, is too dark, too full, and doesn't fit. He looks laughable, but I like him so much that it bothers me.

Abby, what would you do if he were your friend?

ANONYMOUS, PLEASE

DEAR ANONYMOUS: I would assume that since he is married to an intelligent woman, if he looked ridiculous to HER, she would surely tell him. I'd curb my compulsion to "help" him, and would keep my well-meaning nose out of his ill-fitting hairpiece.

DEAR ABBY: My friend and I have a problem. We want to know how to attract guys.

If you're loud, they think you're a big mouth. If you're quiet, they don't notice you. If you tell a guy you like him, he says you're bugging him. If you don't tell him, how is he supposed to know?

Thanks for any help you can give us.

BEWILDERED IN BRENTWOOD

DEAR BEWILDERED: The secret is to get the guy interested in YOU. First, get him to talk about himself, his work and his hobbies. Feed him questions and he'll open up like a flower. The more he talks, the more convinced he'll become that you are the most interesting conversationalist he's ever met.

The teen years are the questioning years. Abby has the answers to all your questions in her booklet, "What Teenagers Want to Know." Enclose $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope.

Some Boat-Rocking In Order

The legislative leadership of Eastern North Carolina has had its ups and downs over the years.

There was a time when our General Assembly members went to Raleigh hat in hand, and bowed and scraped as they took whatever those who controlled things gave them.

Our legislators began to exhibit a little independence during the 1960s as at last they found some issues they could rally around.

Foremost among them were things affecting the then East Carolina College — providing better facilities, university status and finally the medical school.

Eastern voters loved it, and some of those great legislative debates provided the training and forum which some needed to develop true leadership qualities.

At least one congressman and a U.S. senator were the product of those times when eastern legislators finally stood up to be counted. Almost surely as a result, things are going better for the eastern section these days. U. S. 64 and U. S. 264, hopefully, are stretching eastward as controlled access freeways. Just recently, a $17.5 million prison facility was announced for Green County.

Still, we have the uneasy feeling that the fight has gone out of many of our legislators: that they don't want to rock the boat.

A good example is the recent container crane controversy at Morehead. Admittedly the crane was little used and there was need for an additional one at Wilmington. But moving the crane from Morehead where it was already installed meant reducing the port to a second rate facility for the foreseeable future.

Well the move was approved and contracts have recently been let — costing hundreds of thousands of dollars — to disassemble the crane. Embarrassingly even as this is being done the long awaited container business is beginning to come in at Morehead.

It is incredible that there was hardly a peep from legislators representing central counties whose economies can be greatly affected by the downgrading of the Morehead port.

What kind of leadership is this from those who are elected to represent their constituent's interests in Raleigh? If these people are not going to speak up, who is?

A bill has been introduced in the Legislature to prevent moving of the crane. Area legislators can continue to look the other way, or they can start fighting for the economic interests of their respective districts. It will be interesting to see what they do.

THIS AFTERNOON

Social Breakdown Posed

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — There is far more to be feared from the inflationary spiral gripping the nation than simple erosion of purchasing power. Leo Jenkins fears.

"If this thing gets too far out of hand, we are going to have all kinds of troubles — political, social, criminal, and otherwise," says Jenkins, former chancellor at East Carolina University and now a special advisor to Gov. Jim Hunt.

"People are not going to starve; they're going to steal," Jenkins is afraid.

And when erosion of the dollar causes people to abandon their dreams, give up their lifestyles, delay marriage and children, despair of home ownership and otherwise face drastic changes in their lives, the political structure becomes ripe for a dictatorship.

That is what happened in Germany. Hitler came to power on promises to control inflation which had seen money become worthless.

Conference

Jenkins is chairman this week of a statewide Governor's Conference on Fighting Inflation held in Raleigh. Business, civic, and political leaders have gathered for the occasion to discuss ways to fight inflation.

"But what of the simple fact which most economists agree on — including President Carter's advisors — that the only way to control inflation is to put the lid on the federal money supply which means less money for banks to loan which means higher interest rates which leads to fewer dollars for capital expansion and investment by business in increased production which produces a higher unemployment rate ... in short, a recession?" Jenkins was asked.

Just maybe North Carolina is ready to send a message to Washington that we are ready to accept that, to accept the fact that somebody will get hurt and the medicine is bitter but it is the only way, Jenkins said.

BILL NOBLITT

Admitting that the state conference and efforts to enlist private and corporate citizens in the battle is more symbolic and psychological than real, Jenkins argues that it will take this kind of activity to both convince the general public that something can and will be done so that the "inflation fever" gripping the nation can be eased. The average person continues to press for wage increases, to borrow for major investments despite high prices and interest rates out of fear that things will be worse next year and the next.

Medicine

The situation is like that of an individual with high blood pressure, Jenkins says. You can ignore it, hope it will go away, but accept the fact it is likely to kill you. Or, you can take the medicine, diet and exercise necessary to bring it under control. "We don't have much choice, how, other than to make some hard choices," he feels.

One of those hard choices would involve selective economic boycotts against merchants and lending institutions. "We ought to boycott stuff ... let it rot on the shelves. If we could only educate people, convince them not to buy things, not to borrow."

"This is a survival issue ... like war ... and this is not the time to worry about hurt feelings."

Another of Jenkins' ideas is to issue a flag or window display to businesses which pledge to fight inflation so the customer can choose to do business where prices are being kept down.

THE GALLUP POLL

Carter Popularity Holds

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — President Jimmy Carter's popularity holds firm at 50 percent approval at the midpoint of his first term in office, but this rating falls below that of five previous chief executives at a comparable point in their administrations.

In the latest survey, completed during early January, 50 percent of Americans say they approve of Carter's stewardship, 36 percent disapprove, and 14 percent are undecided. But this rating does not compare favorably to those recorded for other presidents during the last 30 years.

For example, John Kennedy and Dwight Eisenhower scored ratings of 74 and 70 percent, respectively, when they were two years into their tenures. And Lyndon Johnson, the last Democrat to occupy the White House before Carter, received a 62 percent rating.

Presidents Harry Truman and Richard Nixon received marks of 57 and 56 percent, respectively — both ratings significantly higher than Carter's. No comparable reading exists for Carter's immediate predecessor, Gerald Ford. At the time of Ford's second anniversary in office, he was in the midst of the 1976 presidential campaign — a period when the Gallup Poll has traditionally refrained from conducting surveys measuring the president's popularity.

Consistent Ratings

Carter's popularity, which has ranged from a high point of 75 percent (recorded in March 1977) to a low of 39 percent (July and August 1978), has been remarkably stable since the congressional elections last November. In four successive surveys between mid-November 1978 and the current reading (Jan. 5-8) the president's rating has not deviated from the 50-52 percent range. This consistency allows a combination of the four surveys to examine the findings by various subgroups of the public. Results of the surveys, based on interviews with more than 6,000 Americans, dispel certain assumptions that have been made about the president's standing among certain segments of the population.

For example, Carter has come in for a good deal of criticism lately from black leaders unhappy about his economic policies, from labor leaders because of perceived unfairness to their constituencies, and from some Jewish leaders because of his Middle East policy.

However, results of the surveys indicate the following:

* Carter remains more popular with non-whites (a group composed mostly of blacks) than with any other group of Americans. Among non-whites, 61 percent approve of his handling of the presidency and among Southern blacks the figure is 66 percent.

* The president's rating in labor union households (those homes where one or both of the adults is a member of a labor union) is no different from his grade among non-labor union members. In both instances 50 percent approve while 34 percent disapprove.

* Among Jews, the president does have a problem. With this normally heavily Democratic group, just four in 10 (39 percent) approve while nearly half (46 percent) disapprove.

As one might expect, Carter has a firm backing among Democrats (61 percent approve) while Republicans are the most critical (just 31 percent approve). Independents, reflecting national opinion,

Strength For Today

DON'T ADMIT DEFEAT

A wealthy old man, now nearly eighty, was reminiscing about his experiences as a youth. Shortly before he was to go to college his parents raised every cent they could on their meager property and handed it over to him for his education. He deposited the money in the bank. A short time later, in the depth of the Great Depression, the bank closed its doors and he lost everything.

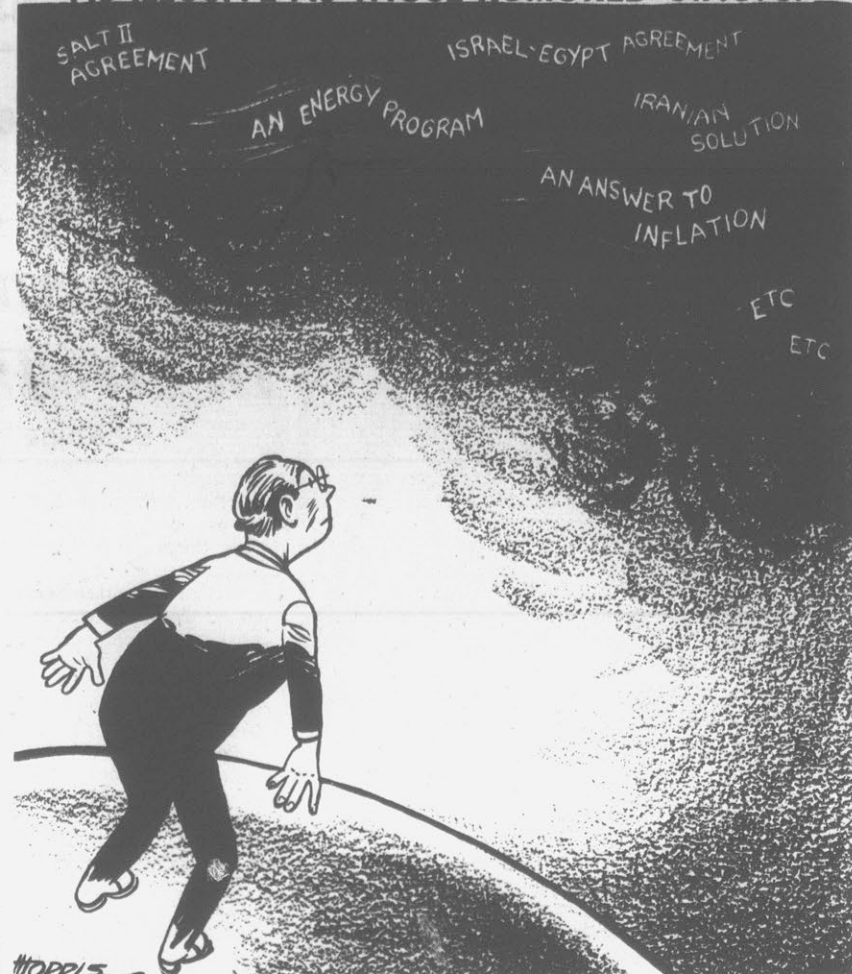

Nevertheless, this young man got his education. He went to college and graduate school, and twenty years after that bank closed he had practically forgotten the severe financial loss on that dark day in 1933 which seemed to spell for the end of all opportunity.

Opportunities never end until we allow them to end. Even if the bank fails or the loved one dies; even if good health departs or the job one has always wanted goes to someone else, we should remember that we are never defeated until we raise our hands and say "We're through."

The 'I Love You' Thing

WASHINGTON — Without taking a position on the Lee Marvin case, I'm willing to discuss it. Mr. Marvin is being sued by Michelle Triola Marvin for $1 million because she claims she should have the same property rights as if she had been married to Marvin for six years, instead of living with him out of wedlock for that period of time.

The case hinges on whether Ms. Marvin shared Mr. Marvin's bed and board for fun or for real. If it was for fun, then there was no contract implied in their housekeeping. But if it was for real, Ms. Marvin could share in all the material things Mr. Marvin acquired during that period.

How do you prove it? The plaintiff's lawyer is trying to do it by producing letters and other evidence showing that Mr. Marvin was dead serious about the relationship. He allegedly told his roomie on many occasions that he "loved her" but on the stand Marvin said that these were "common show business expressions" and "idle male promises."

ART BUCHWALD

Also Ms. Marvin's lawyer produced love letters from Marvin, one which read "I guess we'll have to spend the rest of our lives hiding in bed." The lawyer said this gave rise to his client's expectations that she would receive continuing financial support. But Lee Marvin claimed that this statement was an "idle sexual promise" — "I think we've all said things like that."

What we have here, then, is one of the most difficult legal questions any judge has been asked to answer. When someone says, "I love you," does it mean not for just a day, not for just a year but until a property settlement is made between the two bitter parties?

When you write to someone, "I guess we'll have to spend the rest of our lives hiding in bed," is this a serious promise or is it the same thing as scribbling "Having a wonderful time. Wish you were here?"

I don't know the answers so I sought out Prof. Heinrich Applebaum, Doctor of Amoroso Law at Cat Ballou University.

"Professor," I said, "legally speaking, if one person tells another person he loves her, can someone make a federal case of it?"

Prof. Applebaum took a few puffs on his pipe. "Vell it is a show business expression which has become part of the common language and certainly cannot be copyrighted."

Movies Aren't For All

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

AP Special Correspondent
OVER THE GULF OF MEXICO (AP) — Flying down to Mexico, the stu got on the horn to announce which in flight movies had been mandated for our compulsory viewing.

In the aft cabin it will be "Somebody Killed Her Husband" with Farrah Fawcett-Majors," she intoned, "and in the forward cabin it will be 'Hooper' with Burt Reynolds. Except she renamed it 'hooker,' which raised some leering expectations among the macho oil workers in the smoking section. "Both movies," she added, "are rated PG — parental guidance."

There were a number of ur-chins abroad. I looked around to see if any of the parents were stuffing them under the seats with the carry-on luggage.

Maybe declining to rent the earphones at $2.50 a set might be a partial exercise in parental guidance, but even with the sound shut off there was no getting away from the picture. The seats didn't swivel in the direction of the tail, and leaving the reading light on or the window blind up was considered an anti-social act that brought a stern reproof from Big Sister on the microphone.

Sixteen priests heading down to a conference of Latin American bishops squirmed perceptibly behind their Roman collars and settled back for simulated naps as the title credits for "Hooper" flashed on the screen in that dark aluminum tunnel.

It was a moderately amusing and adventurous flick about Hollywood stunt men.

The characters for the most part were amiably violent people who mouthed a number of four-letter rudities which have become fashionable on the silver screen.

This is called an adult movie because adults are supposed to talk like that all the time. However, if anyone on board had started using the language heard on the sound track, the pilot would have been summoned from the flight deck to make a command decision about cutting off his or her booze ration.

Over the Gulf of Mexico, the weather turned frightful. The pilot put the seatbelts and Marvin K. Blount will not run for re-election as mayor of Greenville in the city election May 1. It was learned authoritatively today.

Mayor Blount, asked about frequent rumors that he would not be a candidate to succeed himself, declared he preferred not to make a statement just then, but indicated he would have an announcement for tonight's meeting of the Board of Aldermen.

Blount was appointed to the office of Mayor in 1935 to fill out the unexpired term of the late Roy C. Flanagan. He was elected in the May, 1937 election.

Immediately upon assuming the mayoralty of Greenville, Blount began taking active part in the League of Municipalities, an organization composed of city and town officials in North Carolina.

Organized Activity Advocate

By GAIL MICHAELS

Mothers spend a ridiculous amount of time and energy entertaining their children. Why? Because their children are so adept at entertaining themselves. Left on her own, Meg is rarely at a loss for something to do. Like using my best blouse for a smock while batiking the white bedspread with red lipstick. Or engaging in waterplay in the humidifier. Or giving her doll a bath in Chanel No. 5.

It's no wonder that we mothers opt for organized activity. Some of us even make the ultimate sacrifice of delivering two kids less than two years apart so that they can entertain each other. I could never go that far. The closest I've ever come to that is arranging for Meg to have a playmate over. And this act alone has come close to precipitating a total breakdown on my part. Meg and her playmate vie to see who'll be the first to send me running for the aspirin bottle.

The last playmate wasn't here for more than 30 minutes before Meg had shut her in the closet, she had pushed Meg off the tricycle, and Meg had hit her over the head with a blocks can. And the fun was just beginning.

"I'm never going to come play with her again because she hit me," Meg's little friend told me.

"I don't blame you," I said. "If I didn't live here, I wouldn't ever come play here again either. Now why don't we see if we can find a toy for you."

I propelled her over to the toy box and very carefully directed her to a toy in which Meg had never shown the slightest bit of interest.

The howling started almost immediately. "I wanted to play with that!" Meg wailed.

"You did not!" I said. "You find another toy to play with."

"I want that one! It's mine!" And she snatched it from her friend's hands.

I snatched it back. "Go sit over there in the corner until you can play nicely!" Her friend watched Meg as she limped to the corner, whimpering pitifully, then poked me in the ribs and grinned. "I'm never going to come play with her again because she hit me."

Time did not improve matters. If one found a toy, the other wanted it, no matter how dingy, how old, or how babyish. They actually fought over an old teething ring that they found at the bottom of the toy box. Three dolls lost legs or arms during the morning, and the noise level never fell below 105 decibels. When the little girl's mother came to the door, they were arguing over whose turn it was to pull the sheets off the bed.

"Well, I see that everything's normal," said her mother, grabbing her arm. "Come on. Let's go home."

At that the little girl screamed even harder. "I don't want to go home," she sobbed. "I'm having a good time!"

IT'S NOT THAT EASY!

When the going gets rough, sometimes we wish we could be magicians and simply pull a rabbit out of a hat at the right moment.

But, it doesn't work that way. We have to face up to things like rising prices, the energy crisis, the kids' education and getting braces for Susie's teeth.

Sometimes there seems to be no end to it. And we're not magicians. Yet, even on the gloomy days, we have something that keeps us going. Guess you'd call it faith. It's not easy to come by, either — but once you have it, it is yours for keeps!

Where do you start looking? How about in the church of your choice?

Valentine 'Teaser'
A Pupil Fund-Raiser

A Valentine teaser has been adopted by members of Aycock Junior High School's Student Council Association to raise money for its treasury.

The rose puzzle works like this. A person receives an unsigned rose Valentine in one of three colors. A red rose means "I love you," a pink rose implies "I like you," and a yellow rose means "I'd like to get to know you."

To find out who the sender is, a student has to contribute 25 cents.

Raymond Williams and Mrs. Jane Laughinghouse are sponsors of the "Send-A-Rose" affair.

Other recent happenings at Aycock include a visit by members of Mrs. Sheila Kornegay's eighth grade V-Pac class to the Kinston Jetport to observe the arrival and departure of planes; a visit by Ken Robertson's ninth grade P-Vac class to the Weyerhaeuser Plant in New Bern and Conner Mobile Homes Manufacturing plant in Newport.

The school's librarian, Mrs. Beatrice Maye, will appear on "Carolina Today" at 7:10 a.m. Monday in connection with Black Awareness History Week.

Embittered; Discards
Idea TV An Art FormBy PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Television is not an art form. It's just a business."

The words of John Wilder, an embittered man. A writer and producer who thought being good was good enough, and was proven wrong.

Wilder is the man who made the television version of James Michener's saga of the American West, "Centennial." If you know the book, you know that NBC's "Centennial" is a rare thing indeed, a film adaptation that is true to the spirit of the book.

When NBC asked him to produce a 26-hour "Centennial," Wilder told the network: "I'll do this as long as you understand that I only mean to please one man — James Michener. If you can't live with that, get someone else." Michener, the closest thing to an idol Wilder has, was pleased.

Wilder knew the project would take time. He wanted NBC to hold the series until midseason. "But NBC said they needed it for the fall, they felt they had to have something of substance for the fall season."

So, it was agreed that "Centennial" would be presented in blocks; it would air two or three consecutive Sunday nights, then a production gap, then return for two or three more Sundays, and so on.

"Centennial" was cheered in its debut. Its first three episodes rated well, and the network hoped the show could carry the clout of NBC's

"Holocaust" miniseries the season before.

Then the thing started to fall apart. Somebody in NBC programming noticed that another network was airing the popular movie "The Sting" on the Sunday night "Centennial" was to make its first return. The show was moved to Saturday at the last minute, without much promotional notice of the change.

"Centennial" fans were confused. The ratings dropped. The next episode was also aired on a Saturday. But the next appeared on Sunday. By then, you needed a map to find "Centennial." It was easier just to not look for it.

Then NBC told Wilder it wanted a rush job on the last five hours. Instead of airing the final episode Sunday, Feb. 11, the network wanted it for this weekend, a back-to-back, Saturday-Sunday airing.

John McMahon, vice president of programming at NBC, said, "... we wanted to help the show, give it the best exposure we could."

As to the rush job ordered on the last five hours, McMahon says, "If we'd kept it the way it was, he'd have been up against 'Gone with the Wind' and the 'Elvis' movie (ABC)."

But McMahon does admit NBC goofed when it played musical time-slots with "Centennial" in the early going.

It's hard to doubt McMahon when he says, "When we did the things we did, we thought it was in the best interest of the show." Considering the battering NBC took in the fall season, it could have used "Centennial's" help. The botching of "Centennial" pains Wilder, I'm sure; but it stings NBC where it really hurts, in the ratings.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Everyone may love a parade, but there's good reason to believe the same can't be said about ceremonies.

Off-duty Jefferson County sheriff's deputies were summoned to attend the sheriff's inauguration Jan. 19, and 41 showed up.

But the county personnel director said the deputies demanded and will receive two hours of overtime pay for their appearance.

Sheriff Mel Bailey termed the pay claim "childish."

Pre-Release, Aftercare Center Will Graduate First 25 Clients

Twenty-five clients are scheduled to receive certificates signifying completion of the first training class at the Greenville Pre-release and Aftercare Center Monday.

An open house will be held at the center, located at 108 Dexter St., Monday, prior to the noon graduation program.

Edward Knox, former Senator from Mecklenburg County and chairman of the North Carolina Commission on Correctional Programs, and currently chairman of the State Advisory Budget Committee, will be the principal speaker at the graduation program.

The local Pre-release and Aftercare Center — the sixth such center in the State — began training operations under the Department of Corrections' Division of Adult Probation and Parole some four weeks ago.

The first such facility in the East, the local training center was created by the 1978 General Assembly and based on a pilot project started in Charlotte in 1974 with federal grant funds.

Pat Higgins, the center's director, explained that the center offers an intensive training program for prospective parolees as well as intensified after-release supervision.

In order to qualify for participation, Higgins said, clients must be within one year of release, must be eligible for parole, and must reside within the 25-county area served by the Greenville center.

Housed in Williamston, the clients are brought to the Greenville center each day. They spend 4½ days each week in class and a half-day out in the community visiting local industries, participating in activities at East Carolina University's gym and pool, or in other activities, Higgins explained.

Classroom sessions cover such subjects as basic first aid, adult basic education, and assertiveness training.

All of the topics — the male role in child care, returning to the family, the job application and interview, understanding the police officers role in law enforcement, communicating with your employer, the structure of local government, the bank and you, and many others — are designed to prepare the prisoners for the problems they will face when they are released, and make them more able to cope with life on the outside.

Completion of the four-week program doesn't guarantee release however, according to Higgins. Although there is, "no guarantee when they come into the program that they will be released...the Parole Commission still has to approve their parole," about 95 per cent are released, he noted.

It's expensive to keep a person in prison, Higgins said it costs $14.70 per day per inmate, while it costs only 99-cents per day for each parolee.

Through the intense training at the center — focusing on the transition from prison to a free society in which attitudes, motivation, information, survival and coping skills and responsibilities in a free society are stressed — and the intense supervision after their release, it is hoped that the clients will not be repeat offenders.

"The most difficult period," according to Higgins, "is from three to six months after release."

In the aftercare program, the parolee is provided close supervision up to his unconditional release date. If the parolee so desires, he may receive follow-up assistance for another year after that.

Since the first program began in 1974, only about 17 per cent of those participating in the pre-release and aftercare program have returned to prison, while recidivism — returning to prison for violations — for regular parolees is about 60 per cent.

Higgins, for the past eight years, has been a probation officer in Pitt County. Prior to that he was business manager for the N.C. Commission for the Blind, an administrative officer for the N.C. Teachers and State Employees Retirement System, and for 10 years a management analyst for the Internal Revenue Service.

In addition to the director, the center staff includes training coordinator Ann Bennett, assistant training coordinator Matt Brewington, six field service counselors who supervise clients after their release, two secretaries, and a social work and corrections intern from ECU.

But there are situations where it could get someone in trouble."

"When is that?"

"If one party wishes the other party to do something the party may not want to do. For example, in the case of Sandwich vs. Mayonnaise, Fred Sandwich told Millie Mayonnaise he loved her, and then asked her if on the way home from the bank she would mind sticking it up and giving him the money in a plain brown paper bag. Millie told the judge she wouldn't have done it if Fred hadn't said he loved her."

"The judge ruled that when Fred told Millie he loved her it was the same thing as if he had said 'Have a nice day,' and therefore Millie was under no obligation to stick up the bank."

"Professor," I said, "there is one thing that bothers me. In many cases a party may say 'I love you' and then immediately follow it up with the question 'Do you love me?' In that situation, unless you want a really good fight, the person asked must say 'yes.' Does this 'yes' legally constitute a contract or can the person claim he or she was forced to say it under duress?"

"In Chiblain vs. Syrup, a judge ruled that Syrup's 'no' meant 'yes.' But in Harroway vs. Murphy, Harroway's 'yes' meant 'no.' The rule of thumb when you are dealing with love is the time frame."

"How long a time frame?"

"Anywhere from six years to six minutes."

ELECTED — Larry J. Blake is all smiles after the state Board of Education selected him as president of North Carolina's community college system. Blake was elected by a vote of 10-2 in secret balloting by the 13-member board during their meeting in Raleigh Thursday. (AP Laserphoto)

Differences in the ratings by formal education and age are not as marked as those by political affiliation. Carter is slightly less popular among the college-educated (49 percent) than with those whose education ended at the grade school level (53 percent). NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned in a mixed showing today in the midst of conflicting signals on the direction of interest rates.

Gainers held a slight lead over losers in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

But the noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 3.64 at 837.23.

More than a point of the average's loss was due to ex-dividends, or dividend-payment adjustments, in the prices of two of its component stocks.

At Thursday's close the Federal Reserve listed a $3.1 billion decline in the basic measure of the money supply for the latest reporting week.

Investors seemed to take the news as further evidence that the Fed might be able to pursue a less restrictive credit policy in the months ahead.

Earlier this week New York's Chase Manhattan Bank lowered its prime lending rate from 11 1/2 to 11 1/4 percent. Today Philadelphia's First Pennsylvania Bank posted a similar cut, but Citibank of New York held its basic rate on business loans at 11 1/4.

Sterndent rose 1 1/4 to 25 and Cooper Laboratories lost 1/2 to 21 1/4. The two companies announced plans for a merger in which Sterndent holders would receive $28 worth of Cooper stock.

The NYSE's composite index

eased .07 to 55.93. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose .32 to 159.10.

Volume on the Big Board came to 11.24 million shares at noontime, down from 12.85 at the same point Thursday.

Explosion And Fire

GLENDALE, Calif. (AP) — An explosion and fire in a commercial complex today destroyed half a city block, forcing evacuation of a nearby apartment house and injuring several people, one critically, authorities said.

One businessman was hospitalized in critical condition with second-degree burns. About 20 residents of an adjacent apartment building, many elderly and one an invalid, were evacuated and some of them suffered minor injuries, said Fire Capt. Tony Fink.

Fink said five businesses were destroyed.

The explosion at 3:30 a.m. awakened firefighters in a station a block away, Fink said. "It literally rocked the men from their beds," he said.

The Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department bomb and arson squad was called out to investigate, but Hanson said the cause of the blast was unknown.

Jones To Map Opposition

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Congressman Walter B. Jones, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, Tobacco Subcommittee, today announced that he will hold a hearing to direct opposition to a proposed five-day sale week for flue-cured tobacco markets.

The hearing is scheduled for Thursday, Feb. 15, at 9:30 p.m., in 1302 Longworth Bldg., Washington, D.C. Congressman Jones noted that all segments of the flue-cured tobacco industry have been highly pleased for years with a four-day sale week.

"We intend to show those federal officials who advocate a five-day sale week that the change would disrupt long established practices and impose greater economic burdens on warehouses and others, without producing significant savings to the government," Jones explained.

The hearing was set after Jones consulted with Representatives Charlie Whitley and

By RANDOLPHE SCHMID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Spying may sound glamorous, but lack of money forced at least one Nazi agent to curtail his illicit American activities and get a job, according to government documents.

Once-secret World War II documents released Thursday by the National Archives include nearly 500 pages of intercepted messages between German spies in the United States and their base — called U- — in Hamburg, Germany.

The messages sent in 1944 and through the end of the war the next year include many items of military information. They also present a picture of one worried agent, trying to cope without enough money.

"I need money badly. I have an opportunity to go to the West Coast at an excellent salary. You ought to provide some safe method of effecting payment," the unnamed spy based in Washington messaged Germany on Sept. 11, 1944.

But he didn't go, and there was good news shortly. On Oct. 21 he messaged

Hamburg: "I have received $16,776 from Montevideo (the capital of Uruguay, where the Germans maintained an embassy). I am very happy about this."

But spying is an expensive business, and he referred continually to "friends" who demanded more and more for their assistance and information.

By Nov. 14 he was "disappointed in your continued failure to make remittance. I am despondent and I wonder whether it's worth the risk."

By Jan. 2, 1945, he said, "My financial situation is critical as service expenses here are enormous."

The fatherland, however, didn't understand. On Jan. 4 Hamburg responded:

"Absolutely incomprehensible. Just a few weeks have passed since you acknowledged receipt of the last sum sent you which was... quite an amount."

Meanwhile, two German spies who had been brought to Maine in a submarine were caught, getting considerable publicity.

The Washington agent immediately messaged Hamburg: "Did they have the money for me?"

His contact in Germany tried to be encouraging, messaging him on Jan. 19: "Sorry old boy to have made you wait so long. AH—the money at my disposal I sent you already. I am sure to get some more, but it will take a while."

But it was too late. On Jan. 27 the agent messaged Hamburg:

"I am sorry. I have found it necessary to accept a job. I shall not be at your disposal except on Saturdays."

Bucs Seek To Even Record Vs. ODU

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina University's Pirates seek to even their record at 10-10 Saturday night when they play host to strong Old Dominion University in Minges Coliseum.

The game is set for at 7:30 p.m. tipoff.

East Carolina won its third straight game Tuesday night, claiming a 61-59 double overtime victory over William & Mary after blowing an 11-point halftime lead. Old Dominion comes in following a 90-72 win over Boston University Wednesday night.

The Monarchs have a 14-3 record on the year, and have won four in a row.

Their last loss came against a common foe, Virginia Commonwealth, which took a 95-87 win to gain revenge for an earlier 70-68 defeat. The other two defeats came back-to-back at the hands of Virginia Tech (91-88) and to Austin Peay, 68-65.

They count among their victims Virginia, 65-61, St. Bonaventure, 87-70, and Florida State, 80-76.

Their current win streak started with a 48-42 win over William & Mary.

"They have an outstanding team," Coach Larry Gillman said. "They're very strong inside, and are a true post-season contender. It will be a very difficult game for us, but we've played a lot of difficult opponents, so we're looking forward to playing another team of their caliber."

The Monarchs are led by their

All-America candidate, Ronnie Valentine, who is scoring at a 24.9 clip and pulling down ten rebounds a game.

Next in the standings comes Ronnie McAdoo, selected last week as the ECAC Rookie of the Week. He's scoring 14.0 points a game, and grabbing off 9.9 rebounds a contest.

Other starters include point guard Tommy Conrad, guard Bobby Vaughn, who averages 8.2, and center Steve Ray.

Two freshmen guard, Billy Mann and Ricky Adams have seen a great deal of duty, along with center Tommy Branch, a sometime starter, who is averaging 12.4 points a game.

The Pirates, in trying to win their fourth straight game, will be trying also to improve on their record of last year, which saw them win just nine games under Gillman in his first year as head coach. Compared with that season, any wins from here on in are gravy.

Oliver Mack continues to lead the Pirate scoring with a 17.8 average, while George Maynor is at 12.2 and Greg Cornelius is at 10.3.

Herb Krusen at 7.5, however, has been scoring at a steady double-figure clip since breaking back into the starting lineup against Detroit. In three of the last five games, he has been the team's high scorer.

Mack will be seeking to become the school's number nine all-time scorer during the game. He currently has 1,038 points for his career, leaving him ten behind Tom Miller. There is a 50-point gap between Miller and number eight Billy Brogden at 1,098. If Mack keeps up his present average, he would finish up in sixth place, just ahead of Jim Modlin, 1,174, and just behind Jerry Woodside, 1,189. His best finish, however would be fourth, passing Jim Gregory at 1,193.

Catching third place Bill Otte, at 1,368, is now out of reach.

Following Saturday's contest with Old Dominion, the Pirates pay a return visit to Virginia Commonwealth on Wednesday, seeking revenge for an 85-83 overtime defeat in Greenville, then return home to face South Carolina-Aiken on Saturday.

Gymnasts At Duke

The East Carolina gymnastics team will travel to Duke on Saturday for a 1 p.m. meet against a strong Blue Devil squad.

East Carolina holds a 2-3 record, while Duke is 3-2 with a recent win over Madison, which beat ECU last Sunday.

Pirate coach Stevie Chepko remarked, "Although Madison was beaten by Duke, I still feel we will be tough competition for them. It should be a fairly close meet."

"This is our first event where our top performer, Susan McKnight, will be participating at full strength. She has made a strong comeback from her injury and will be ready to go against Duke."

The Blue Devils are led by all-around performer Karen Schramm.

BETHEL — North Pitt High School rallied in the final period to gain a 44-40 victory over Ayden-Grifton last night.

In the girls' game, Ayden-Grifton pulled out a 39-30 win, while North Pitt's junior varsity won, 63-60.

Ayden-Grifton eased out into a 12-9 lead in the first period of the boys' game, and added to that in the second quarter. The Chargers held a 26-19 margin at halftime.

But in the third period, North Pitt began to rally, outscoring A-G, 11-6, to cut the lead to 32-30. In the final quarter, the Panthers outscored the Chargers, 14-8, to pull out the win.

Reginald Knight led North Pitt with 18 points, while Greg Langley added 13. Mike Hardee and Donnie Jackson each had 10 for Ayden-Grifton.

In the girls' game, Ayden-Grifton managed an 11-10 lead after one period, but then fell behind to trail, 21-17, at the half.

The Chargerettes rallied, however, and regained the lead in the third period, 28-23. They finished off North Pitt, 13-7, in the final quarter.

Mary Rowe led A-G with 12, while Marie Lewis had 10. Cynthia Barnes led North Pitt with 14.

Ayden-Grifton plays host to Southern Nash tonight, while North Pitt entertains Charles B. Aycock on Saturday.

Rosie Thompson Set To Pass 1,500-Point Mark For Pirates

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Sometime early in the stages of tonight's game between N.C. State and East Carolina, Rosie Thompson will become the second Pirate woman to cross the 1,500-point barrier.

Currently with 1,493, Thompson needs only seven to move past the mark, as she begins to take aim on the school career record of 1,570 held by former teammate Debbie Freeman.

And with another year yet to go on her eligibility, Thompson should pass 2,000 points, and could become the all-time scoring leader for either men or women in basketball at East Carolina.

Bobby Hodges tops the men with 2,018 points.

"I really never thought about it until a few days ago," Thompson said. "I knew I had passed 1,000, but I really didn't think I was close to 1,500."

As far as the 2,000 points goes, the Blounts Creek junior said she thinks that it will give her extra incentive for next season.

Currently, the 5-9, 140-pounder is the leading scorer in the state with a nifty 24.5 average. She's also the leading rebounder with a 12.7 mark, and she is seventh in field goal shooting with 53.0 per cent. She is again tops in free throw accuracy, hitting 75.8 per cent of her charity shots.

In AIAW Region II, which covers the Carolinas, Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee, Thompson ranks second in scoring just a half-point behind Donna Murphy of Morehead State, fourth in rebounding.

Rosie's basketball prowess came mostly through her own natural abilities. "Coaches have helped me a lot, but I guess I did have to some ability to start with," she said. She credits current coach Cathy Andruzzi for improvement in her game, and heaps praise on Chocowinity coach Neal Titus for his inspiration.

Coming up, however, it was Rosie against the boys. And when the boys didn't want to play with her, she got her own basketball. "Then, they had to let me play, or I'd take the ball and go home."

"I learned a lot playing against the guys. All the girls in my neighborhood liked to play indoors stuff, so I'd go and play basketball with the boys. I really didn't play the team game (with girls) until the tenth grade."

Thompson's goals for this year are not point scoring ones. "I want to get back into the regionals," she said. "That means we either have to win the state title or finish in the top two, since two teams go. The best way would be for us and N.C. State to both go to the state finals in the tournament. That would about insure our going."

Away from the court, Rosie spends her time primarily on studies and sleeping. "The funny thing is that when basketball season is over, I'm usually out looking for a pickup game. I guess I just cling to basketball."

Perhaps the most prominent thing missing from women's

Bucs In Quad-Meet

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — East Carolina, Old Dominion, Virginia Tech and William & Mary will stage a quadrangular wrestling meet here Saturday afternoon.

The Pirates, 0-4, should have 177-pounder Butch Revils, 158-pounder Steve Goode and 167-pounder Vic Northup all healthy for the meet for the first time since early in the season.

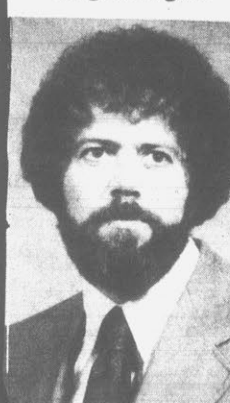

Revils, 9-2, will be joined by Northup, who has had knee surgery, and Goode, who has been out a month with shin problems.

"I'm not sure all three men will wrestle all three matches," said Pirate coach Bill Hill. "But we want to have them ready for Saturday. Any one of them could win all three times if they are ready to wrestle."

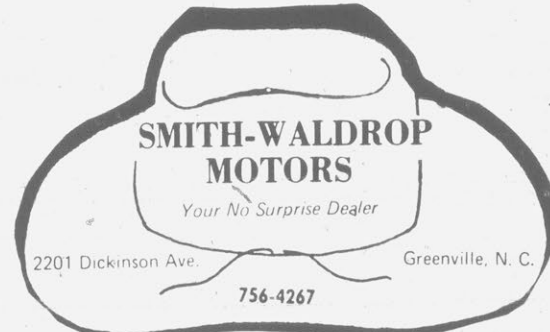

With individual bouts lasting only six minutes instead of the usual eight minutes, the Pirates will meet Old Dominion at 1:30 p.m., host William & Mary at 3 p.m. and Virginia Tech at 4:30 p.m.

High School basketball conference races are down to the nitty-gritty now, and several area conference titles could be decided tonight.

For instance, in the Eastern Carolina Conference boys' race, Farmville Central (12-1) could just about sew up their crown with a victory over North Lenoir (11-2) tonight. Both teams have two games left after their meeting tonight, and should the Jaguars win, they'd need only one more win or one more North Lenoir loss to clinch the title and top seeding in the tournament.

In the Northeastern Conference, unbeaten Washington plays host to Roanoke, the only team that has a chance to catch the Pam Pack. The surprising Redskins, in only their first year of 3-A competition, would be eliminated should the Pack win tonight.

Roanoke's girls, in addition, are currently tied for the lead in the conference, showing the strength of the school's program in a year generally seen as a transition year when the team takes its lumps.

In the Beaufort-Hyde-Martin boys' race, Jamesville is within reach of another title, while Bear Grass still has a chance to make it to the district tournament.

The 3-A district tournament, by the way, will be played at Williamston this year, while the Eastern Carolina Conference affair will be at Southern Nash.

The Division I 4-A tournament, which still is far from set, will be, as usual, played at different sites, depending on which team has the higher seeding.

Where To, Division One?

Speaking of Division I, we have to wonder how long the current membership will continue as it is.

This past fall, the two new Wilson schools, Beddingfield and Hunt, joined the conference. That followed the merger of the Wilson county and city school systems, leaving three schools in the county, along with Fike.

Eddie Sutton and Abe Lemons met at midcourt in a real

Texas-size shootout, tempers exploding. "You're too good to take cheap shots at us," Sutton told Rosie Thompson...

basketball is the dunk.

"I've never really tried it," she said.

"Well, there was one time, when we got out a mini-trampoline and were doing it then, and it was a lot of fun," she continued. "Actually, from the floor, I can't even touch the rim."

But she does see the day coming. "I think girls are going to be getting bigger in the future, just like the boys have. If I ever do get a chance to play any professional ball, I'd probably have to be a guard, since there are already a lot of girls taller than I am."

"And I wouldn't have the slightest idea what to do!"

Maybe not, but on the Pirate team, her ideas bring smiles to the faces of her coaches and the fans.

Even though they joined the 4-A conference, there was much talk of Beddingfield and Hunt remaining 3-A, as they competed during football season. Fike, however, wanted to stay in the 4-A ranks. All three, reportedly, had attendance levels that would qualify them for 3-A rankings.

It is also reported that Bertie, another member of the conference, has a falling attendance level, and could also shortly become 3-A size.

That could, in a couple of years, result in another change in the conference alignment, with the three Wilson and Bertie schools dropping out. That would leave Division I with only four schools, and further realignment would be necessary.

Whether part of Division II, which includes schools below U.S. 70 to Wilmington would be split up, or whether a "super" conference of 12 schools, playing non-round-robin schedules would be formed is questionable.

Should the two merge, that would make it difficult for nearly all of the Division II schools to have to work with Elizabeth City's Northeastern High School, due to the great travel distances. Even now, it is nearly two hours for the closest of the schools that might remain in the league.

A lot of course, will depend on how Beddingfield, Hunt and Fike, along with Bertie, do in competition over the next couple of years.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is expected in the forecast period until Saturday morning, from the eastern Gulf to the Ohio Valley, changing to snow in the lower Midwest. Showers are forecast for west Texas and snow is expected from Arizona and New Mexico into the central Plains. Rain is due for the north Pacific coast and snow in the northern Rockies. Cold weather will extend across the nation. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Snow was forecast over the mountains and the northern Piedmont counties for late tonight as a weather pattern developed that sent a weak low pressure system toward North Carolina from the south.

It appears to be a repeat of this past Wednesday when snow dusted much of the state, except that forecasters noted the air mass will be slightly warmer on Saturday than it was last week.

The snow was expected to turn to rain unless the temperatures early Saturday fall just a few degrees lower than forecast. In that case, more snow than expected will develop.

Meanwhile, strong northwesterly winds along with cold temperatures on Thursday made for a chilly day. Highs were generally in the upper 30s to low 40s with the highest reading of 42 degrees reported at Fayetteville, Jacksonville, Wilmington and at the Raleigh-Durham airport.

Additional snow accumulation was reported in the northwest mountains Thursday. Travelers advisories continued in effect over the northwest mountains for snow-covered and slippery roads, and also for the central and southern mountains for slippery conditions mainly on secondary roads.

Bike Registration Is Still Underway

Dr. Jim Hix, chairman of the Citizen Bikeway Committee, reported that the new bicycle registration program which began last November is continuing.

According to Hix, the program is designed to assist in recovering a bicycle which has been misplaced or stolen and to see that it is returned to its owner.

He said that basic information about the bicycle is required and the information is kept on file in the Police Department and Recreation Department. Any person who registers will receive a sticker to display on the bicycle, Hix noted.

Charlie Vincent, the city's assistant director for recreation, said that 650 bicycles have been registered under the program to date. He added that the registration is offered free of charge and a bicycle need only be registered once.

Vincent said that bicycles may be registered during normal working hours at the Recreation Department office at Jaycee Park, Elm Street Gym, South Greenville Recreation Center, West Greenville Recreation Center, or city hall. More information is available by calling 752-4137, extension 262.

Opening lead: Nine of ♣.

Whenever possible, give your opponent a choice of plays. On occasion he might go wrong.

With 18 points and a good five-card suit, South reckoned his hand was too strong to open one no trump. He showed his strength by rebidding two no trump after North responded to his one club opening bid with one diamond, which covered the only unstopped suit. North added his 14 points to partner's expected 19 to 20, then knew exactly where he wanted to play the hand.

Since he did not want to lead from any of his honor holdings, West chose the top-of-nothing heart attack. Declarer could count eleven tricks. The twelfth could come either from spades, if East held the ace, or from diamonds, if West held the king.

Declarer won the opening lead in his hand, crossed to dummy with a heart and led a spade to the king. West won the ace and exited with his last heart. Declarer won, cashed the queen of clubs and came to his hand with a club to take the diamond finesse. When that succeeded, he was home free.

Declarer might have made the hand anyway, but West forced him into the winning line by prematurely grabbing the ace of spades. West should have reasoned that it was unlikely that declarer would lead toward an unsupported king so early in the play of a slam contract—he almost certainly had the queen as well. Therefore, West should smoothly duck the first spade trick.

Now declarer has a choice of plays for his twelfth trick. He can either take the diamond finesse, or go back to dummy and lead another spade up to his hand in the belief that East has the ace. If declarer chooses the latter line, the defenders will be able to cash three spade tricks for a two-trick set.

Banking Committees Declare Action Taken For Consumers

By LORI COOKE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Both the House and Senate Banking Committees Thursday said they were acting for the consumer as they dealt with bills on savings and loans associations and finance company loans.

The Senate Banking Committee sent to a subcommittee a bill requiring a new savings and loan to meet requirements for public need before the state Savings and Loan Commission may approve it.

A House Banking Committee Thursday crushed a move to lower interest rates charged on finance company loans but approved a bill allowing the companies to make larger loans.

The Senate bill requires that any new association be in "the public interest and advantage" for it to be approved for a charter. It also stipulates that the character and responsibility of those proposed as stockholders in the association should command the confidence of the community, and sets up additional similar criteria. The bill deals with both stockholder-owned and mutual savings and loans.

Ralph Hodges, chairman of the board of directors of the N.C. Savings and Loan League, told the Senate Banking Committee the league wants "to prevent so-called 'overbanking' in advance."

Jim Spearman of Greensboro, a member of the Savings and Loan Commission, said the thrust of the bill was to keep

"ruinous competition" from forcing savings and loans to close down.

"We're not like hamburger joints," Spearman said. "You can't have six of us on a block. After all, we're dealing with the life savings of widows and orphans."

Durham attorney W. Travis Porter, speaking for the Association of State-Chartered Thrift Institutions, Inc., said "We oppose any laws of any kind which would restrict the flow of money to the home-buying public."

Porter said state-insured or chartered savings and loans may offer a higher rate of interest than federally insured or chartered associations "which is what this bill is all about."

The House bill, introduced by Rep. Jim Morgan, D-Guilford, would raise the limit on consumer finance loans from $1,500 to $3,500.

The loans now are subject to 36 percent interest on the first $300 and to 18 percent on the remaining amount.

Rep. Ruth Cook, D-Wake, attempted to amend the bill to reduce the rate on the first $300 to 30 percent and limit interest on amounts above $1,500 to 12 percent.

But the committee voted 19-3 against the amendment, then approved Morgan's bill on a voice vote and sent it to the full House.

"I consider this a very serious blow to the consumer," Mrs. Cook said after the action.

Observing Black History Month

"History: Torch to the Future" is the theme of this year's February observance of National Afro-American History Month.

This theme was chosen by the Association for the Study of Afro-American Life and History Inc. for promotion of ethnic understanding in America, according to Mrs. Beatrice C. Maye, who will appear on "Carolina Today," WNCT, Channel 9, Monday, Feb. 12, at 7:10 a. m. to talk about the celebration of this special month.

The observance, she said, was the idea of Dr. Carter G. Woodson, known as "Father of Black History." In 1915, he founded the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History, now the Association for the Afro-American Life and History, to help black persons appreciate their African history and to make them and other Americans knowledgeable about contributions of black persons to the United States and the world.

This month, she said, is a time for studying and sharing the deeds of Blacks in politics, religion, finance, and social, cultural and other areas of American life.

The media personnel at E. B. Aycock Junior High School will display books and materials on Blacks who deserve special attention, Mrs. Maye, media specialist at the school, said.

He will be emphasizing the role of the Sunday School in the 11 o'clock service and in the 7:30 p.m. service, the youth in the church.

The award will be presented at the Raleigh Civic Center on Feb. 27, with correspondent Charles Kuralt to be on hand to read from his text of the "Bob Timberlake Collection" art book.
