Listened To The Opposition And Tabled Own Bill

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Don't ever let it be said Rep. George Hux, D-Halifax, can't be persuaded by a good argument.

Hux, who introduced a bill that would make it a crime for one person to permit another to drive while drunk, was so impressed with the opposition Monday night that he made the motion to table — or effectively kill — his own bill.

The House obliged, 91-22.

"I don't like this bill now because of things that have been pointed out to me," Hux told the other representatives.

"I don't want it to be buried in the Senate," he added. "I want it to be buried here where we can give it a good funeral and I can see it."

Hux introduced the bill at the request of the Hunt administration, he said, and supported it even after it was heavily amended in a House committee. Last Thursday it won tentative House approval on a 70-40 vote.

If approved, the bill would have made it a misdemeanor for a person who owns or controls a car "to cause or knowingly permit" to drive a person who is under the influence of alcohol or drugs.

A violator would have faced automatic suspension of his own driver's license for one year.

Hux said later he was concerned that a person who owned a car could be convicted when he really didn't know who was driving his vehicle. As an example, he said a father could be charged if his daughter's date drove her car while drinking, without the father's knowledge.

And he said a female member of the House told him if the bill became law, she would take her name off the title of her car because her husband, on occasion, took a drink.

"Hell, she could be innocent but under this bill could be convicted for letting him drive," Hux said later.

Supreme Court rulings have already made a person subject to prosecution for aiding or assisting a drunk person to drive, he said. That common law is unchanged by the bill's demise.

In other legislative action:

Patrol Cars
A bill similar to one already in the House was filed in the Senate to prohibit the use of unmarked Highway Patrol cars for ordinary law enforcement work. The bill was filed by Sen. Charles Vickery, D-Orange.

Community Colleges
A bill to be introduced in the Senate today would create a new state department to operate the Community College system. It would also create a new 15-member board to run the system, which is now directed by the state Board of Education.

Insurance
A bill filed in the House would extend for 15 months, until September, 1980, the current ceiling on increases in automobile insurance rates. Sponsored by Rep. Ernest Messer, D-Haywood, the measure would extend the time limit on the rate cap applied with the 1977 rewrite of auto insurance laws.

That law reduced the powers of the insurance commissioner to block rate increases, but set a 6 percent a year cap on rate hikes.

Teachers
A bill filed by Rep. Mary Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, would provide for the state to pay the cost of defense and judgments for teachers who are sued. Under the bill, the state would provide counsel for teachers against whom a claim is made for personal injury made during the course of the teacher's duties.

Under the bill, the Attorney General could refuse to defend a teacher under certain circumstances.

Green
The House unanimously approved and sent to the Senate a resolution honoring Pulitzer prize-winning playwright Paul Green. The resolution names him North Carolina "Dramatist Laureate."

"I'm not sure what that means," said the resolution sponsor, Rep. Patricia Hunt, D-Orange. "But what I hope it means is that person is at the top of North Carolina drama."

Find Segregation Level 'Still High'

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Civil Rights Commission said today nearly half the country's minority children go to segregated schools and that segregation is most intense outside the South.

The commission criticized Congress and the executive branch for only reluctantly carrying out the mandate of a Supreme Court decision handed down 25 years ago.

And it said even the court seems to be "retreating from its long-espoused commitment to the right of school children to a desegregated education."

The commission has no enforcement power, but is required by law to evaluate the status of school desegregation across the nation from time to time.

Today's report drew its conclusions from a 1976 survey by the Department of Health Education and Welfare of 3,616 of the country's 16,000 school districts. The data is the latest available, the commission said.

The report said the survey shows segregation in many school districts "remains at discouragingly high levels."

The commission said that through recent amendments, Congress has "undermined the ability of the executive and the judicial branches to guarantee the nation's children and young people their constitutional rights."

"It has thus acted against widely accepted civil rights goals and contributed to a lessening of the national will with respect to equal rights in the vital area of public education."

The commission noted President Carter's commitment when he took office "to complete equality of opportunity in our nation." But it said there is still a question as to whether HEW is willing to cut off federal funds to non-complying school systems.

A fund cutoff had been ordered in six major desegregation cases when Carter took office, the report said, but only one has been settled.

The 90-page volume focused specifically on the situations in 47 school districts ranging from Anchorage, Alaska to Uvalde, Texas.

Segregation was "considerably higher in the northeast and north central regions" than anywhere else in the country and at its lowest in the region that includes Tennessee, Virginia, North and South Carolina, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and Florida, the report said.

"Almost 4.9 million minority children still attend schools in at least moderately segregated districts," the survey said. "This figure represents 46 percent of all minority pupils."

"Sixty-five percent of all minority pupils in the northeast and 68 percent of all minority pupils in the north central region attend at least moderately segregated school districts." No comparative percentages were cited for the Southeast.

The report blamed Congress for adopting antibusing measures which, it said, prevent HEW "from requiring student transportation where it is the only remaining means to eliminate segregated schools."

The commission listed a number of major Supreme Court decisions since 1973 and said minority communities are viewing the nation's highest court as increasingly recalcitrant in matters of segregation.

It made four recommendations:

—Congress should provide positive support for desegregation of schools.

—HEW should intensify its enforcement efforts, using its fund cutoff powers because failure to do so "leads to the conclusion that the government does not really intend to do everything within its power to bring segregated education to an end."

—The Department of Justice should commit resources to step up its response to school segregation cases referred by HEW.

—The president should designate a coordinator for all the resources of the executive branch — "a clear indication of the high priority that in his judgment should be given to the nation's desegregation program."

Jones Sees A Real Try At Balancing Budget

Congressman Walter B. Jones stressed to a Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce group that the present session of Congress will probably emphasize cutting back on expenses, with a real effort toward balancing the budget.

The congressman addressed approximately 85 members of the chamber Monday during a congressional luncheon held at the Holiday Inn in Greenville.

The luncheon, sponsored by the Chamber's Congressional Action Committee, gave Chamber members a chance to query Jones about recent actions in the 96th Congress.

After an introduction by W. R. Roberson, Jones told Chamber members that the present Congressional session would probably not promise any "sensational legislation."

Jones, who serves as chairman of the House subcommittee on tobacco, said that there would be no radical changes in the tobacco program.

Chamber members questioned Jones on such current events as plans for national health care insurance, Patty Hearst's pardon, and the national oil situation.

Touching on the subject of scrap tobacco through foreign sources, Jones termed the situation "delicate" as the U. S. Department of Agriculture is working with trade treaties with hopes of bettering inspection controls.

Jones assured Chamber members that the Kennedy-inspired national health insurance bill would not reach Congressional approval this year, since no real physical plan has been presented.

Jones again stated his position against a five-day workweek for tobacco warehouses, noting that he would begin a series of hearings on the matter Thursday in Washington, D. C.

Jones also voiced his support for a separate Department of Education, stating that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare was "getting too big" to handle the situation.

Dr. David White, chairman of the congressional action committee, closed the luncheon session.

Would Oppose

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green says he would oppose any attempt to raise the salary of the president of the state community college system to $50,000.

The state Board of Education recently appointed Larry J. Blake, president of a junior college in Canada, to the $41,976-a-year job.

"I don't think the job is worth that and I would oppose it," said Green, a member of the Board of Education and an opponent of Blake's appointment, in response to the possibility of a raise.

Hunt and the Board of Education are expected to recommend raising the pay to $50,000.

Two Traffic Collisions

An estimated $1,750 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Officers reported an estimated $550 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 3:45 p.m. collision on Brookgreen Ave. 25 feet East of the Elm Street intersection.

Drivers of the vehicles involved were identified as James Howard Moye of 102 Garden Cir., and Mack Carlton Stocks II of 211 Churchhill Dr.

Investigators charged Stocks with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety.

A 2:22 p.m. collision at the intersection of Washington and 11th Streets vehicles driven by Marilyn Crawford Tucker of 2104 Southview Dr. and Bennie Mills of Route 1, Greenville.

Police estimated damage from the mishap at $350 to the Tucker car and $300 to the Mills truck.

Still Tickets To Hear Bradley

Tickets, at $1 each, are still available for two events on campus this week.

At 8 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 15, CBS television news correspondent Ed Bradley will speak in Hendrix Theater in Mendenhall Student Center.

He will share his experiences during assignments in Vietnam and Cambodia and his present duties as White House correspondent and host of the CBS Sunday Night News.

The "disco jam" concert featuring the Leroy Dawson Mobile Disco is at 8 p.m. Friday, Feb. 16 in Mendenhall's Multipurpose Room. Ticket information is available by calling 757-6611.

A Review

'Emily' Lacked Convincing Aura

Fortunately, it is not necessary to believe playwright Thomas Patterson's unlikely theory that Emily Dickinson had an affair with her brother Austin to find the East Carolina Playhouse production of "Emily," which premiered Feb. 7, interesting and well-acted.

It would have been more interesting if superfluous scenes had been omitted to sustain intensity and the action and dialogue condensed.

"Emily" is marred by a melodramatic first scene in which Ann Franklin's Emily hysterically suffers a nightmare and visions of a naked angel. The nudity initially seems gratuitous. The audience is already supposed to be shocked, even before the leaps of young Emily (Paige Weaver) and Austin Dickinson (Frank Altshuler) into the (literal) hay. Flashbacks into adolescence which follow, Emily's memories, are more successful but still sometimes unsatisfying.

It's never adequately explained how childhood games of "playing doctor" developed into a grand passion and affaire d'coeur, although Emily constantly teases, picks and pokes at her brother and makes naughty remarks; it's also baffling that she seems to take their intimacies almost for granted. Austin occasionally acts guilty.

An incestuous affair, especially in a family like the Dickinsons, is bound to breed emotional turmoil and trauma of a high order but the effects on the two siblings are not deeply explored.

Theater is a loquacious medium, but the lovers never really discuss the strange nature of their actions, and the audience is deprived of knowing all it would like, and need, to know.

The acting of the two principals, especially, helps compensate. Paige Weaver as young Emily is alternately precocious, petulant, spirited and brilliant. The brother's personality is not as mercurial, but Altshuler conveys him energetically and well.

As the mature Emily, Ann Franklin isn't given much to do after her initial frenzy but recite poetry while pacing around or sitting primly in her chair; she does that well. The scenes between Ms. Franklin and the older Austin, thoughtfully portrayed by Donald Wagoner, is frustrating. They talk mainly about only their innocent youthful memories. She has become an hysterical recluse and he is unhappily married.

Del Lewis projects the essence of stern repression as Emily's father and delivers a strong performance. The mother, Hazel Stapleton, is quietly effective, and supporting players Julia Metcalfe and Debra Zumbach, although on stage briefly, give finely crafted portrayals. Laura Janelle Royster as Lavinia Dickinson and Steven Williford as Joe are natural actors. Their romance evidently serves as a healthy, normal contrast to that of the brother and sister.

The play's dialogue is uneven, sometimes clever, sometimes flowery and abstruse and even banal (i.e., "the dawn had to come, and so must I."). Ms. Franklin recites several of Dickinson's poems in an obvious effort to substantiate the playwright's premise but even the strongest hint, "and so as kinsmen we met at night," failed to convince this reviewer that Austin Dickinson was the "mystery man" addressed in his sister's poems.

Technical production of "Emily" is excellent, especially a wonderful painted backdrop that features subtle landscaping and stark black branches etched against a sky that constantly changes colors.

"Emily" will continue through Saturday, Feb. 17 at 8:15 nightly in the Studio Theater of the ECU Playhouse.

Joint Recital Thursday Night

Timothy W. Love, clarinetist, and pianist Meggie Louise James will share a recital at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 15 in the A. J. Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall on the ECU campus.

Love, accompanied by Mike Alvey and assisted by Glenard Webb, will perform Tartini's "Concertino," Carl Stamitz's "Konzert B-Dur," and "Sonatina" by James Walker.

Ms. James will play Bach's "Capriccio on the Departure of His Beloved Brother," "Rondo on Argentine Children's Folk Tunes" by Ginastera, and two compositions by Brahms, "Intermezzo" and "Ballade."

The recital is free and open to the public.

Wedding Rings For Men Are Popular

NEW YORK (AP)—Wedding bands for men, once scoffed at as being "unmanly," are becoming increasingly popular both with the young and with older couples who remark, a survey by the Jewelry Industry Council shows.

The Rev. Charles Magistro of the Unitarian Universalist Church in Stamford, Conn., reports he is performing more double-ring ceremonies now than ever before.

"It isn't just the young couples who ask for it, the young at heart do too," he says, pointing out that many older couples in their 50s and 60s remarrying ask for double-ring ceremonies.

"In the past, men didn't see themselves as obligated as women in marriage," he adds. "That was a sexist view. That old saw about men 'losing their freedom' is not heard today. Women are more secure today, and today's couples enter marriage as a shared responsibility. The ring is a constant statement as to how the couples see themselves in their relationship—sharing equally."

Norman DeLorier of Bramley Jewelers in White Plains, N.Y., says he is selling more wedding rings for men today than ever before.

"Today's men like the idea of a double-ring ceremony. As a matter of fact, I may sell as many as three wedding rings to each couple," DeLorier says.

"First, there is the narrow wedding band women want to wear with their diamond solitaire on special occasions, and a simple, wide-band gold ring for every-day wear. Then there is the band for the men. The men usually choose a simple design: even though we have many matching ring sets, most men prefer to select a plain band."

And what of this new generation of golden banders?

Paul Goodman, 24, of Washington, D.C., a bridegroom of five months who had a double-ring ceremony, put it this way: "I wear the ring because of what it symbolizes—eternity in a relationship. I treasure this ring, and I have never desired to wear any other piece of jewelry or ring."

Martin Metzger, 26, of New Hyde Park, N.Y., married only two weeks, had this to say: "I've always liked jewelry...like my birthstone ring and college ring. My wife and I picked out these rings, and it was like part of the ceremony of getting married—choosing the rings together. All our married friends have double rings."

Greg Giammalvo, 29, of Massapequa, N.Y., who has been married three years, says he and his wife agreed on the double-ring ceremony.

"I thought it was a good idea...I like jewelry. The rings were blessed by the church. I never take mine off. I don't think wearing a wedding ring is unmasculine. I'm proud to wear it. I love my wife."

Edgar R. Daniels, 30, of Levittown, N.Y., surprised his wife when he proposed a double-ring ceremony. "I really had nothing to say about it," Jessica admits. "He felt very strongly about it, and I am pleased he did. He never takes his ring off."

"It's symbolic to me of my love for my wife, and it's my way of demonstrating it," Daniels says. "It's not an ornament—I wear no other jewelry except a watch."

Do women notice it?

"If they do, they don't comment. And none of my buddies makes any cracks about it. In fact, most of them wear wedding rings. Marriage is, after all, for two people."

Does Daniels' father wear a wedding band?

"No, it was my own idea," he answers with a smile.

See A Lawyer If Wrongfully Accused

DEAR ABBY: Last Saturday I was to meet a friend in a store so we could shop together. I got there a little early and walked around checking prices. I had been in the store often, and even paid my utility bills there. My friend was late, so I walked out to see if perhaps she had misunderstood and was waiting for me outside.

To my surprise, the store manager followed me and made me go back into the store and empty my purse out on the counter! My knees started to shake and my heart was pounding and I started to cry. It was the most humiliating experience of my life.

After the manager saw that I had taken nothing, he just said, "Sorry." Then he walked away.

It still brings a tear to my eye and a lump to my throat when I think of it. I'm a six-time grandma in my 50s and it hurt me to be taken for a thief.

My neighbor tells me that if a person is searched for shoplifting and is found to be innocent, she can sue the store for false arrest. Is that right?

MINNEAPOLIS STAR READER

DEAR READER: You can't sue for false arrest unless you've been arrested. But if you're wrongfully accused of shoplifting you should see a lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is of a highly confidential nature, and I would feel much more comfortable writing to you in care of a post office box than my hometown newspaper.

If this can be done, will you kindly publish your P.O. Box number? Thank you

SMALL TOWN MAN WITH BIG PROBLEMS

DEAR MAN: Yes. It's P.O. Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.

DEAR ABBY: I have recently taken a job which requires me to work very close to a dentist. (Sometimes our faces are only a few inches apart, and that's close!)

My first day on the job I noticed that my boss must have had onions or garlic for breakfast. Whew! I figured, "Well, that can happen to anybody once in a while."

After lunch there was no improvement. In fact, it was worse! I don't know where he goes for lunch, but he comes back smelling like a delicatessen.

This dentist's offices are in one of the best professional buildings in town and his patients are well-to-do and very particular. I can't understand why one of them doesn't tell him. If I were a patient, I surely would, but I only work here.

Any suggestions? I don't know how much longer I can take this. And I'd look awfully silly working with a gas mask, or a clothspin on my nose.

Love Lore For Valentine's Day

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)—Valentine's Day is marked by some curious local customs in England, where the celebration has been observed since the 15th century.

In some Derbyshire farming villages, girls peep through the front door keyhole on Valentine's Day morning, hoping to see a rooster and a hen outside, says Hallmark researcher Sally Hopkins. If the pair is there, the tradition says, the girl will be married within a year.

In earlier times, English girls wrote their names on heart-shaped slips of paper and put them in a jar on Valentine's Day. Each young man in the community then drew a name and pinned it to his sleeve. He would then escort his selection to the Valentine's Day festivities. From this custom, Miss Hopkins notes, came the expression "He wears his heart on his sleeve."

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Every household has had a piece of furniture that in a moment of passion, you asked to come live with you. There are no promises...no commitments...no talk of marriage. Just a very loose "arrangement" that if things didn't work out, you'd split.

Well, it's not that easy.

A few years ago—26 years ago to be exact—my husband bought a pump organ at an auction for $35. At the time it seemed like a sweet little addition to our kitchen. I covered the little stool in chintz and put a wooden bowl of apples on top of it.

When we opened the table, however, someone invariably had to sit on the keyboard and as I shoved it into the family room it seemed heavier than when we originally moved it in.

The next year when we put up the Christmas tree, the organ stood out like a sport shirt at the prom. I shoved it into the dining room, noting that it had grown considerably and no longer fit through the doorway as it used to.

It occupied an entire wall in the dining room where it began to get on my nerves, what with the new modern dining room set with the padded chairs. I relegated it to our bedroom.

Its prime reason for being in our bedroom was to stumble over it in the darkness and awaken me before I fell into a wall and hurt myself.

When I talked of selling the pump organ, my husband rose to its defense and said, "Nonsense. It grows in value each day," and told me if it bothered me in the bedroom to move it to the living room where it would be the highlight of every party.

For some reason varicose vein-ridden guests did not have a good time sitting around pumping an organ all night.

When we moved it was a blessing. That meant we had seven fresh rooms in which to play musical organ.

A few years ago when we bought a summer cabin, we loaded the organ up for its 300-mile move. To date, it has been on every wall in every room in the house. In 26 years it has grown three feet in width and added 700 pounds to its weight. It's "family."

It is not unreasonable to assume that in years to come, there will be some legal way to disassociate yourself from furniture (using the Marvin decision as a precedent), but with my luck, what do you want to bet? I'd get custody of the pump organ.

The Real Stake: Development

A source that we consider highly creditable has informed "The Daily Reflector" of plans for developing U.S. 264.

The plan, according to the source, would call for continuing the freeway concept as it now is from Zebulon to Wilson, on to the present five lane at Farmville. From there U. S. 264 would continue along the present route with the portion from the east of Farmville to Greenville upgraded to dual lane.

Developing the freeway concept into and through Pitt County would not be ruled out, but that development would be postponed into the indefinite future.

We must caution that no announcement of the state's plans for developing U. S. 264 has yet been made, and is not expected for some weeks.

It goes without saying that such a plan for developing U. S. 264 within Pitt County would not be to our liking. It has been clear to us, as it has been to the vast majority of the public along U. S.

264 for many months, that development of the freeway U. S. 264 eastward and on through Pitt County is essential to our economic development and subsequently to the well being of our people.

On the other hand we would encourage our people not to despair in this fight for the kind of highway that all of us know we need. We should, in fact, be inspired to work harder.

It was, after all, only a decade ago that a bridge to nowhere stood west of Wendell as a symbol of how the politicians regarded Eastern North Carolina.

Since then U. S. 64 has moved eastward as a freeway, and a freeway U. S. 264 has been developed as far as Wilson. We may soon see a plan which could bring the freeway U. S. 264 as far east as the Pitt County line. People can provide their own leadership and if we persevere in this fight we can see our goals reached sooner than anyone may now expect.

Most N.C. Farmers Were Just Too Busy

Some 2,000 farmers and their tractors descended on Washington last week to protest sagging profits and urge changes in government farm policies.

We are pleased to see that most North Carolina farmers stayed home.

The tractor demonstration turned ugly at times, and we doubt it won any friends among the non-farm segment of our society.

Tobacco farmers are constantly having to watch for possible government actions which might be detrimental. The watching, however, is done through proper political channels, and moving en masse on the Capitol lawn has not been our way.

THIS AFTERNOON

Cluttered Wildlife Laws

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — One thing which members of a special committee to bring order from the chaos of North Carolina hunting laws learned is that it probably can't be done.

The charge to the N.C. Conservation Law Study Committee chaired by Woodrow Price of Gloucester included that of clearing up areas where confusion now exist, and clarifying the role of the state's Wildlife Resources Commission in writing and enforcing the rules.

Early in the process, says Price, it became clear that local politics had a great deal to do with the confusion. Local governing boards would put pressure on members of the General Assembly to push local laws to satisfy garrulous game interests; often depending upon which interest happened to be strongest at a given time.

The result of 45 years of doing business in that fashion: 85 fox laws and 137 other different local laws causing confusion and contradictions across the state.

Diversity
But the study committee found that in many instances there were good reasons for the local laws, and that as diverse in geography and climate and social interests as North Carolina is, there is no way a statewide hunting law would work.

"Primarily, then, the intent is to clean the lawbooks up as much as possible," Price said of the proposal now before the members of the General Assembly.

In that proposal, 147 local laws would be struck down unless members of the General Assembly are convinced that local interest in keeping particular laws in force are strong enough to warrant that action.

"The result would be to clean up the books some, and then local interests could begin pushing again. But at least this process will educate Boards of County Commissioners to the contradictory laws and clutter so that it can be somewhat avoided in the future," Price explains.

The committee hopes that the process will produce "reasonably uniform" laws, and give the Wildlife Commission expanded authority and flexibility to change game regulations to reflect changing conditions without need for ponderous laws statewide or local measures.

But a statement from the study group in the conclusion of its report has almost a plaintive tone as it sets forth the goal:

North Carolina well illustrates the dilemma. Previous attempts to bring uniformity to game laws have met such loud and diverse reaction that the effort was abandoned.

The fox is both a game animal and a fur-bearing animal. There are some 10,000 Tar Heels who chase the fox with dogs and guns; about 5,000 who trap the fox even though trapping has been illegal. Hunters don't like the traps because dogs get hurt and the fox population decimated. But trappers make a lot of money from the pelts. Some county rules protect the fox, some encourage trapping, and one county even offers a $2 bounty on the fox as a predator against farm animals.

The resolution proposed is to proclaim the fox a game animal, but allow limited trapping periods where local officials determine that the population is sufficient to allow that, and where the prevailing local attitude swings strongly in that direction.

It is not likely that North Carolina will soon have uniformity in hunting laws.

BILL NOBLITT

"The experience of this committee has confirmed that there are, in fact, conflicting interests which appear to be insoluble by any sort of compromise that will be completely acceptable to the entire memberships of the opposing factions. However, the committee has striven to arrive at solutions under which those of opposing interest can peaceably coexist."

SOUTH OF THE BORDER

If You Ever Go To Mexico

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

MERIDA, Mexico (AP)—Yucatan sand from the sandals of a columnist south of the border:

In Mexico there is 'no one last drink' before calling it a night. Ordering 'la ultima', the final one, is considered a faux pas worse than stepping on an hombre's sombrero during the Mexican hat dance. Instead, one asks the waiter for 'del estribo', one for the stirrup before riding off into the sunrise.

Mexico is the last stand of the 25 cent (5 peso) shoeshine and the five cent (one peso) subway ride, and both are glittering experiences.

Hernando Cortes vanquished the Aztec empire and other tribes along the way with Spanish infantry, 13 musketiers, 16 horses for the officers, 32 artillerymen and 200 Indian bearers. He was a firm believer in light military budgets.

But Mexico has come to terms with its violent history. A plaque in Plaza de las Tres Culturas — Square of the Three Cultures — at the site of the last Aztec battle reads: "On the 13th of August, 1521, heroically defended by Cuauhtemoc, Tlatelolco fell under control of Hernando Cortes. It was neither a triumph nor a defeat. It was the painful birth of the mixed race people which is the Mexico of today. The square in Mexico City contains pre-Columbian ruins, old Spanish colonial buildings and the glass and marble skyscraper of the Foreign Ministry.

Coyotes still infest the heart of Mexico City in the vicinity of the Monte de Piedad, the national pawn shop. This is the name given to the sidewalk touts offering a quick easy-terms loan to strapped citizens coming to pawn their watch, typewriter or jewelry for ready cash at this unique government institution. The national pawn shop has been in business since the early 18th century. It lends money to any citizen putting up personal property, like a refrigerator or a TV set, as security. Strength For Today

THE COVENANT

Many Bible readers do not understand the central role played by covenant in the Christian religion.

A covenant is a promise. The Old Testament is the promise made in ancient times that God would send a savior. The New Testament is the old promise fulfilled — the savior sent. God's relationship with us is a covenant relationship. He solemnly promises something to us and He requires of us a promise in return. It is no exaggeration to say that without this promise there can be no Christianity.

So the thrilling joy of a life of faith arises from the fact that God promises us guidance, protection, inspiration and salvation. We promise Him obedience. He extends to us a great gift; it is both our honor and our privilege to reach out and take that gift.

It is important to remember that the gift is offered to everyone. Unfortunately not everyone responds to the offer. It is our additional duty to make these people aware of it.

LEARNING HOW MODERN BUSINESS WORKS!

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Our Crippled Giant

CLEVELAND — On the day I hit Cleveland, the immediate, particular row involved Ms. Tonia Grdina. Mayor Dennis J. Kucinich recently had named her to serve as secretary of the Fire Department, and some of the old-time firefighters were upset.

It appeared from a news item that Ms. Grdina was to have command of day-to-day fire operations, with specific responsibility for labor negotiations, department policies, manning levels, and equipment purchases. The old-timers were understandably upset. Ms. Grdina is 23.

This is how things have been going lately in Cleveland. You could wander over the whole country and not find a sadder story than the story of this great city — and it is a great city. Cleveland has everything going for it: a diverse, hard-working population, a superb location, first-rate transportation, multiple small industries, low unemployment, fine schools, good newspapers, an excellent art museum, a top-ranking symphony. Cleveland ought to be embraced instantly in the company of such vital, prosperous cities as Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Atlanta.

Alas for Cleveland, it has become the butt of jokes. This stricken giant of a city has been crippled by a combination of handicaps and misfortunes. Some of the problems are indigenous: Cleveland is a city of more than 30 definable ethnic groups — blacks, Poles, Bohemians, Ukrainians, Puerto Ricans, Orientals, American Indians. This is part of its strength. But the ethnics tend to congregate in tight little closed communities, distrustful of each other and suspicious of all governmental authority. They seldom can be moved to work constructively together.

The city suffers from a lack of cohesion, a lack of leadership, a lack of civic love. Until quite recently, the business community operated aloofly in the high, thin atmosphere of its own Olympus, supporting symphonies, ballets and museums, and neglecting the people down below. Lately business has been trying to do better, but the top people are political amateurs. They want desperately to dump Kucinich, and they don't know how.

Kucinich himself, the impetuous, street-smart, vindictive young mayor, is a large part of the problem. He and his personnel director, Sherwood Weissman, thrive on confrontation and turmoil. Their pitch to the voters is "us against them." Half the city regards Kucinich as a puppet demagogue whose strings are pulled by Weissman; half the city regards the mayor as St. George, out to slay the dragons of Cleveland Trust.

The melancholy prospect is for continued strife. On February 27, the voters will decide whether to increase their local income tax by half a point, and whether to sell the municipal light company. The business community is halfheartedly supporting the tax increase as the only immediate way to bail out the bankrupt city. The mayor is frenetically opposing the sale of Muni Light as the heart and soul of his populist base.

Everyone is marking time until November, when "Dennis" (he is known more by his first name than his last) comes up for re-election to a

Aerial Traffic Remedy

By J. PAUL WYATT
JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — A $3.2 million computerized air traffic cop will help unjam the skies to keep airlines and travelers on schedule when ice and snow sock-in northern airports next winter.

Even more important economically, thousands of barrels of jet fuel won't be burned needlessly by airliners forced to maintain holding patterns over congested or partially closed airports.

The computer system to help controllers monitor and direct the flow of air traffic between major U.S. airports is being developed in Jacksonville for the Federal Aviation Administration by Computer Sciences Corp.

"At present, the FAA does not have an automated way of knowing when an airplane took off, for instance," said David J. Stewart, the project director.

In some cases, he said, one air traffic control center has to telephone another to verify a plane actually took off and is airborne.

Operating from official airline schedules augmented by real-time information from en route control centers, the new system will allow the FAA's Central Flow Control Facility in Washington to monitor the actual movement of aircraft under the influence of wind, weather and other conditions.

Armed with this information, FAA controllers will be able to foresee potential traffic jams and landing delays, and take action to reduce congestion, such as holding departures of some flights.

In case of a snowstorm at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport, which handles an average of 60 aircraft an hour, Stewart said, "We can find out how many planes are in the air and on their way to that airport."

"We also can run a simulation to find out what the

Unpleasant Decisions Coming

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The economic news has not been good. Who said so? Maybe you, for one, but if not you then certainly your neighbor, if we can believe the polls. And the Carter administration for another.

Its official line seems increasingly to be at odds with the more spontaneous, less considered comments of its individual members. And that could mean some unpleasant decisions coming up.

Such as whether or not to curtail gasoline sales, and whether to strengthen or perhaps enforce more rigidly its wage-price standards.

While the official word remains one of optimism that the country can escape the worst of inflation, recession, shortage and other economic stresses, you have to wonder when:

—James Schlesinger, energy secretary, assessed the Iran oil cutoff as "prospectively more serious" than the 1973 oil embargo, and then, to stress the positive, called it "serious" but not "critical."

—Alfred Kahn, chairman of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, called the January producer price increase of 1.3 percent "a catastrophe" and said he couldn't even appear to be optimistic.

—Courtenay Slater, Commerce Department chief economist, expressed surprise at the big producer price rise, saying it was more than she expected, and warning of fairly large consumer price increases to come.

—Michael Blumenthal, treasury secretary, in effect conceded that the dollar has not stabilized in world markets and that "uncertainties continue to generate nervousness" concerning it.

—Kahn, though doing his utmost to sound happy about it, was forced to concede that of the 500 largest U.S. companies, only 207 have pledged to uphold the wage-price guidelines. Among the holdouts: oil and food.

Perhaps nothing has generated more general nervousness than the wide currency of "unanticipated," a word repeatedly used to describe the continued rise in wholesale and consumer prices.

The entire wage-price program — in fact the entire Carter economic plan — is predicated on accurate estimates of future prices, but some of those prices already seem to be slanting off at different angles.

Moreover, economists are complaining that temporary distortions, such as weather, Iran, and a possible Teamster strike are making it difficult even to determine where we are in the business cycle.

Another factor that might be squeezed into that same category is the mind of the consumer, which is far less predictable than some economic modelmakers would like to have it. How do you explain all that credit?

Last year, for example, various debt records were set, including one for the amount of installment credit outstanding. As the year ended it totaled $275 billion, up 19.1 percent in one year.

While that total itself was a surprise to many if not most economists, even fewer were prepared for the surge that occurred late in the year, when $8.4 billion was added to the total in just November and December.

huge department store, it sells unredeemed items in hock over the counter and at occasional auctions.

Two centuries ago, Mexico's Jesuits were the original boat people. After founding 103 Indian missions and 23 colleges, the order fell from favor with the Spanish authorities and was expelled. In 1767, nearly 700 Jesuits were seized in their monasteries and put aboard ships at Veracruz. Like today's Vietnamese refugees, no European country would take them. They wandered around the Mediterranean for more than a year before finding refuge on the isle of Corsica.

Need help with a love letter, a tax form or an irate letter to the editor? Mexico's public scribes still sit under the arches of the Plaza de Santo Domingo at battered typewriters ready to assist the illiterate and the lovelorn. If their passionate prose does the trick, printers with hand presses await under the next arch to churn out the wedding invites.

In Mexico you kiss up a waiter. Making little-smacking sounds with the lips that elsewhere might earn you a belt in the chops. Despite what the language books say most waiters no longer like being called mesero which means table attendant.

Mariachi, the string musicians you hire to serenade your senorita, got their name from the French word for marriage. During the three-year French rule imposed by Napoleon III, French officers hired street musicians to assist them in wooing the local lovelies.

On its food trays, most Mexican airlines serve an individually wrapped chile pepper that erupts in the lower duodenal track like a smart bomb. Fortunately los bomberos, the fire fighters, arrive in the form of free beer served on every flight.

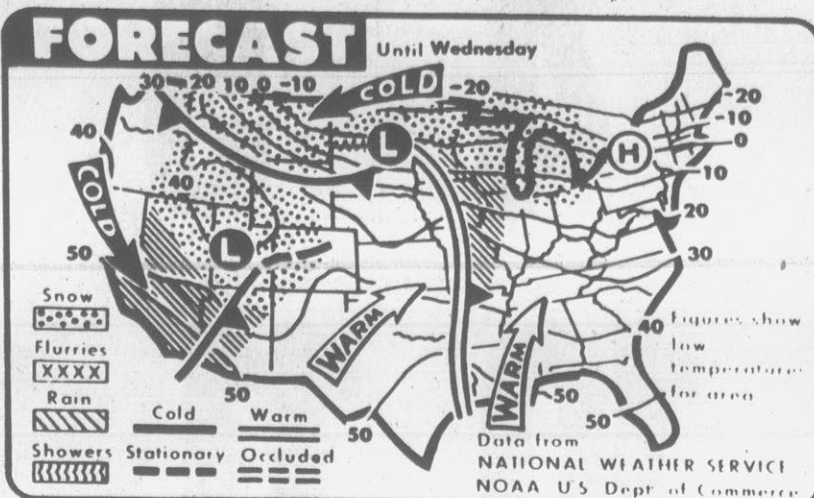

The chamber of commerce and the government tourist ministry think the gringo affliction known as "Montezuma's revenge," has been vastly exaggerated. They say the same or worse happens to them in Colorado or Boston. Still, jogging seems to be a less than optional activity down here and an official tourist brochure did carry the warning: Play safe: purify all drinking water with hydroclonzone tablets.

In Wales they pride themselves on town names that take up half the railway platform to spell out. The Mexicans pride themselves on unpronounceable jaw busters like Tlaco Chahuaya and Yeixochilt. Great places to visit, they say if you can bring yourself to ask how to get there.

The Mayans and later other tribes appeased the gods by tossing cross-eyed virgins, spaced out on hallucinogenic mushrooms, into a sacred well. Cross-eyed was considered beautiful. Mothers hung a jewel in the center of a young girl's forehead to configure their eyes according to the reigning fashion.

Mexicans joke that the conquistadors came from Spain to find yellow gold and now the Yanqui come south of the border for green gold to smoke. The sun god of the Aztecs is appeased these days by pie-eyed tourist zonked on Acapulco gold.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST—Snow is expected in the forecast period, Tuesday until Wednesday morning, for much of the West and for the northern Plains and Great Lakes. Rain is due for southern California, parts of Nevada and Arizona and in the Midwest. Warm weather is forecast for the Southwest and western Gulf, but most of the country will be cold. (AP Laser-photo Map)

The northeastern portion of North Carolina received a light dusting of snow before day-break today in connection with a low pressure system that moved through Virginia. The snow ranged along the northern tier of counties and fell as far east as Cape Hatteras.

The low began moving through Virginia Monday evening, scattering light rain over eastern North Carolina. But as the low moved offshore, cold northerly winds changed the precipitation to snow that was too light to measure.

Northerly winds between the low offshore and high pressure over the midwest will bring one more cool day to the state before the expected trend to some significant warming.

Southwesterly winds helped raise temperatures to the 40s over northern sections and to the low to mid 50s over southern sections of the state Monday. Wilmington was the warmest reporting station with a high of 56 degrees.

Temperatures fell rapidly during the early morning hours today, dropping to the 20s over northern and eastern counties. Highs today were expected to hold generally in the 30s over northern sections and get no higher than the 40s elsewhere. Lows tonight will drop to the teens in the northwest mountains and range to the low to mid 30s on the coast.

A warming trend is expected Wednesday with highs reaching the low to mid 50s in the south and the 40s in the north. The trend is expected to continue Thursday and Friday with highs reaching the 60s.

capacity of the airport is, so we don't get a stack of planes in Chicago."

The system being developed by 65 computer programmers and analysts will perform 26 defined operations. Stewart said, including four basic ones — listing traffic, accounting for traffic, simulations and updating information.

The FAA computer is an IBM 90-20A located at the Air Route Traffic Control Center at Hilliard, about 30 miles north of Jacksonville. Tie-lines connect CSC's Jacksonville office with the computer.

"This system doesn't require additional equipment, just some additional data communications lines," Stewart said.

The lines from Hilliard go to FAA centers in Washington, Indianapolis, Los Angeles, Kansas City and Jacksonville. These, in turn, are connected with the control towers at 15 major airports, which handle 95 percent of U.S. commercial air traffic.

The new system is scheduled for completion in October and the target date for putting it in operation is December. CSC will remain under contract during the first year of the system's operation.

Edward Feighan, who lost to the mayor by an eyelash in 1977, is now on the county commission; he has so far refused to run again and no other really potent opposition is in sight. The city lurches along from crisis to crisis — layoffs, strike threats, interest payments defaulted. Animosity hangs in the air as tangibly as smog.

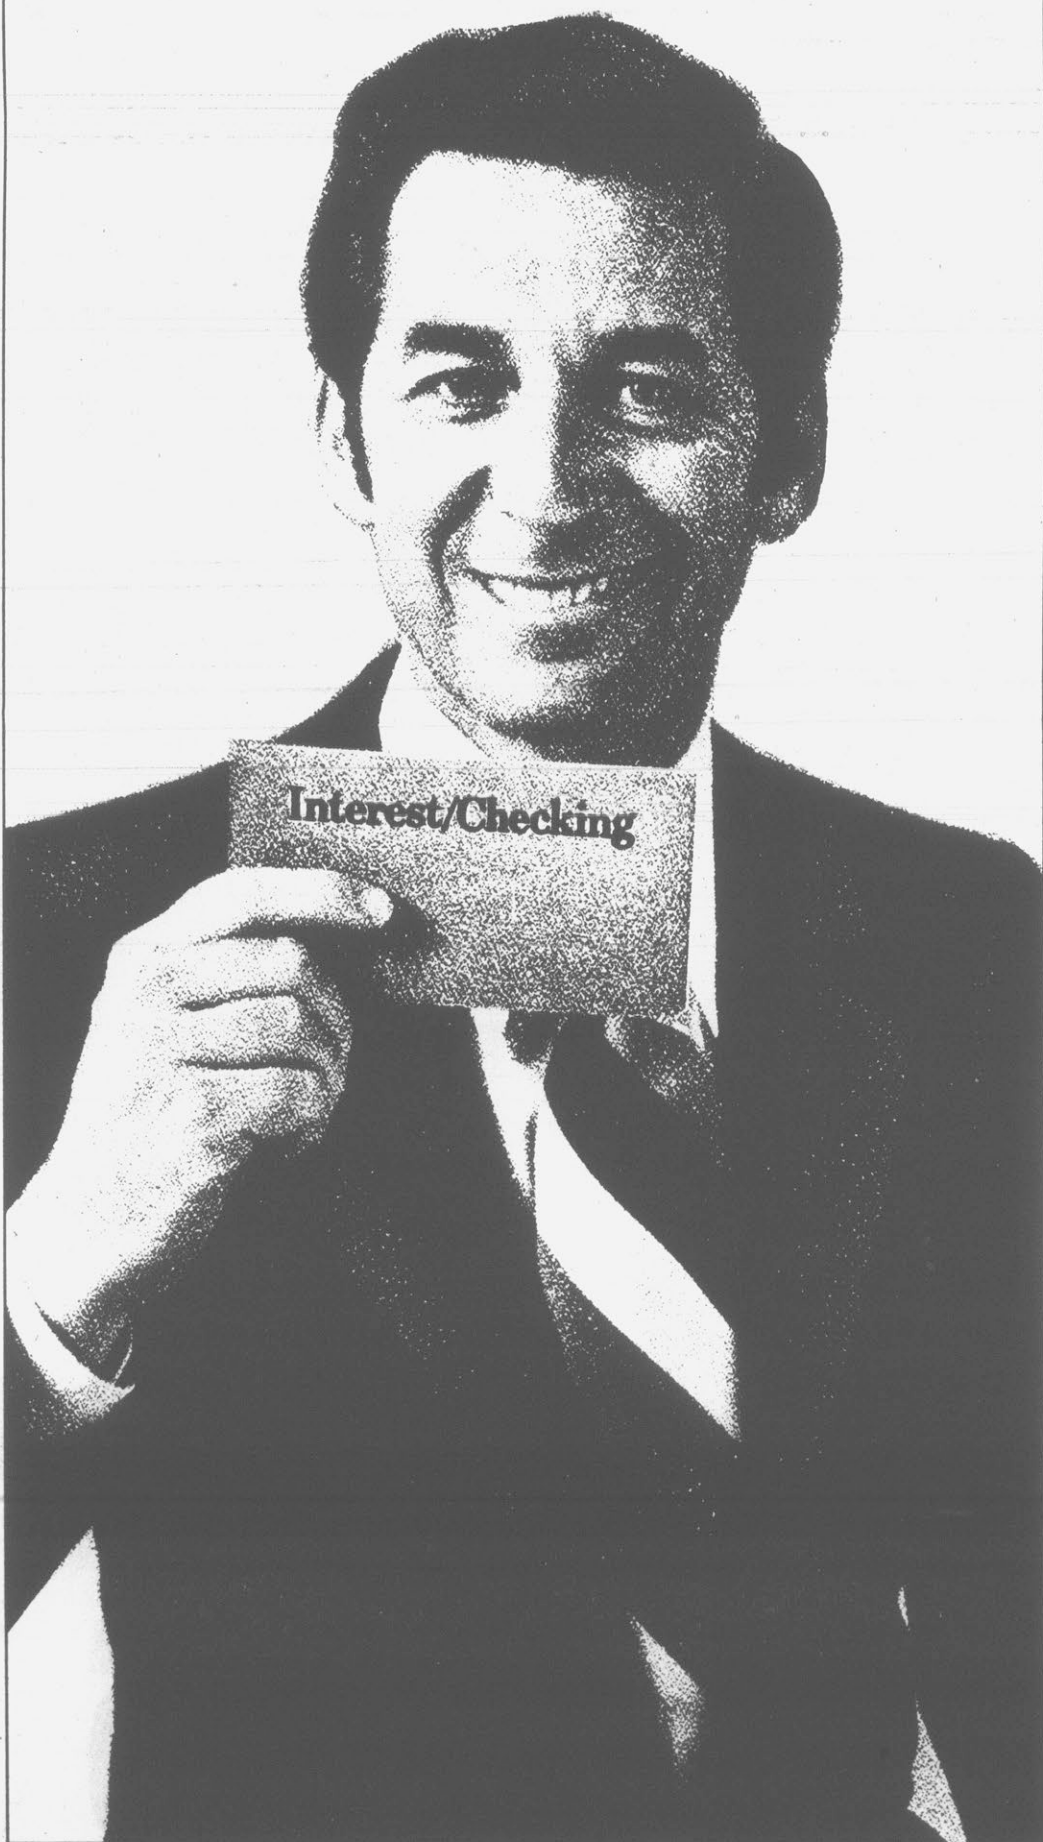

The window of my hotel room looks down on the city's convention center, erected in a happier time some 40 years ago. Carved into its classic facade is a long legend. Through a spitting, spiteful snow, I could barely make it out. Jaguars Advance, Lady Rams Ousted

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

SPRING HOPE — The first round of the Eastern Carolina Conference tournament is supposed to be little more than a warm-up game for the regular season champions. Pitted against the bottom-seeded team in the event, the champs are supposed to waltz into the semifinals, barely breaking a sweat.

But it didn't quite work out that way last night. In the opening game of the tourney at Southern Nash High School, regular season champion Southwest Edgecombe's girls barely squeaked by number eight Greene Central 21-20, and in the second game, the top boys' team, Farmville Central, had to go into overtime to defeat eighth-place Ayden-Grifton 50-48. In the nightcap, the fifth-seeded North Lenoir girls topped fourth-place C.B. Aycock 48-46.

The opening round continues tonight as the number four Southwest Edgecombe boys face number five Aycock at 5:30, the second-seeded Ayden-Grifton girls play seventh-place North Pitt at 7:15 and the number two North Lenoir boys take on seventh-rated Greene Central at 9.

Only the top eight teams in the nine-member conference were seeded in the tournament. Originally, plans called for a playoff game Saturday night between the eighth- and ninth-place teams with the winner entering the tournament as the number eight seed. But Friday's snow caused most teams to postpone their Friday night regular-season finales until Saturday night and the playoff game was not possible.

Conference officials decided over the weekend to simply drop the two ninth-place teams, which, ironically, turned out to be both the Southern Nash boys and girls.

SWE Girls Edge GC

Southwest Edgecombe's girls shook off a horrifying performance to slip past Greene Central 21-20 in the tourney opener.

The Lady Cougars turned the ball over 32 times and hit only nine of 28 shots, 32.1 per cent, while the Lady Rams held Southwest ace Alpha Jenkins, the leading scorer in the conference, to just four points.

Although the final score would seem to indicate otherwise, the game was not a deliberate slowdown. It's just that neither team could hit a shot. The Lady Rams were seven for 29, 24.1 per cent, from the field and had 19 turnovers.

The Lady Cougars led most of the game, although Greene Central tied the contest once in each of the first three quarters. Sarah Taylor canned a pair of foul shots with 3:44 left in the final period to give the Lady Rams the lead for the first time, 19-17. Southwest regained the advantage a little over a minute later when Jenkins hit a free throw and a shot from underneath to make it 20-19.

Iris Pridgen dropped in the first of a two-shot foul to knot the score at 20-20, but the Lady Rams missed on a one-and-one opportunity with 38 seconds left and Delphine Mabry hit a foul shot for Southwest two seconds later to give them the victory.

Greene Central ran a play that set up a baseline 15-footer for Melody Ham, but the ball bounced off the rim with six seconds left and the Lady Cougars grabbed the rebound.

"I thought that last shot was going to go when it left her hand," Greene Central coach Jim Fulghum said. "We got a good shot."

Fulghum praised his team's defensive effort, but added, "when we got to the other end, we couldn't put it in the hoop."

The game was the "way we played all year," Fulghum noted. "We played well enough to be close, but just couldn't come through."

Ham was the only player in the game in double figures with 10. The Lady Cougars held a 35-18 advantage on the boards, a decisive factor in the ballgame.

Jags Take OT Win

Jeff Tyson hit a foul shot with nine seconds left in the fourth quarter to send the game into overtime and then tipped in a missed shot at the buzzer in the extra period for a 50-49 Farmville Central victory over Ayden-Grifton last night.

The Jaguars, who were tied several times in the first quarter, never trailed in the game until Wayne Newton capped a Charger rally with two free throws to make it 44-43 with 43 seconds left in regulation.

The Chargers had been down by as many as seven points in the fourth quarter, but hit six straight buckets to pull to within one and had the ball again after a missed Farmville shot.

Guard Sheldon McCarter spotted Melton Cannon underneath and fired the ball to him, but he was fouled as he went up for the shot. Cannon was unable to shoot his free throws, so coach Bob Murphy inserted Newton into the lineup and he drilled them both.

The Chargers missed a two-shot opportunity at the line with 19 seconds left and Tyson went to the line with a pair of free throws with nine seconds showing. His first shot bounced off the front of the rim, but he canned the second to send it into overtime. A final Ayden-Grifton attempt was blocked by Earl Harris.

The Chargers drew first blood in the extra period when David Smith hit a free throw after being fouled on a fast break. Donald Freeman then gave the Jaguars a 46-45 lead with a jumper from the left corner.

McCarter hit from the key, but Freeman dropped in two free throws with 37 seconds left to put the Jags back in front by one.

McCarter went to the line and hit his second shot to tie it. Farmville then came down and worked for one shot. Calvin Horne fired it up from the left side and missed, but Tyson was there to tap it back in with one second showing.

"We were trying to go to the baseline with Freeman," Jaguar coach Mike Terrell said of the play he put in for the last shot. "Of course, when you get in a game like this, you might as well forget plans."

Terrell said his team was over-enthusiastic and a little tight, while Freeman, the leading scorer, was playing with a slight temperature. "They (Ayden-Grifton) had everything to gain and nothing to lose, but we've got a lot to play for, too."

Despite being on the ropes a couple of times late in the game, Terrell said he never gave up on his team. "We were at a disadvantage two or three times at the end, but I still thought we could win the game. We've won several games like this, so I have confidence we're going to win until the game's over with." Both coaches agreed that the Jags' 38-31 advantage in rebounding was probably the decisive factor. "We can't keep them off the boards," Murphy commented after the game. "We might should have gone to a man-to-man to block them out a little better."

Murphy's team has been involved in several games like last night's this season. Despite a poor record, the Chargers were in most of their games until the final seconds. "That's the way our season's gone. I guess it's fitting that it ends that way."

The Chargers "played real good defense, fought hard and hustled. We just couldn't make a play when we needed it," Murphy said.

McCarter was the game's leading scorer with 13 points, while Henry Ormond added 10 for the Chargers. Donald Reid had 11, while Freeman and Harris, who had an intimidating defensive game, added 10 each.

Nissen Leads ODU Past Pirates

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Old Dominion's Nancy Lieberman gets the bulk of the publicity when the unbeaten Lady Monarchs take to the court, but last night, the team's top scorer Inge Nissen was the player who did the most damage to the East Carolina Lady Pirates.

Nissen, a 6-5 center, dominated the inside game, scoring 24 points as she led the Monarchs to a 95-70 win over the Pirates. For Old Dominion, it was their 24th straight victory against no losses.

The nationally ranked top team pulled away from the Pirates during the second ten minutes of the first half to build up an 18-point lead, then coasted on in from there behind the play of Lieberman and Nissen.

The biggest problems the Pirates had were stopping Nissen inside, rebounding and in their shooting. Old Dominion outscored the Pirates, 54-44, and shot 48.8 per cent for the game, as compared to 32.9 per cent for the Pirates.

During the first seven minutes of the second half, when the Monarchs put the game on ice, they hit on 11 of 14 shots from the floor.

ECU Coach Cathy Andruzzi felt afterwards that the Pirates had nothing to be ashamed of. "It was a great challenge for us. It's good to have a team like Old Dominion come in here and show the people the type of basketball we want our program to move towards. After playing three good games in the Winthrop Tournament (Thursday through Saturday), and getting back into Greenville at 4 a.m. Sunday morning I think we did a great job, and I'm really proud of my girls."

Andruzzi said the Pirates just tried to play their game. "I knew that there was no way we could stop Nissen. She's a dominating center. Lieberman is also a great player, but we played her well and didn't foul out on her."

"Considering the height difference they had on us, the rebounding really wasn't bad. We did the best we could. We did stop their fast break, and we broke their zone press defense. As far as our shooting was concerned, we used a lot of head fakes and got them into foul trouble, but perhaps we took some bad shots too, or hesitated too much."

Old Dominion coach Marianne Stanley also had praise for the Pirates. "I was impressed by them, especially with (Rosie) Thompson. For such a young club, they have a lot of potential, and they were one of the few teams we've played this year that were not awe-struck by us. They stuck with us a lot better than some other teams have. They just went out and played the best they could."

Stanley said that the Monarch game plan had been to go inside with Nissen, and it proved to be a good plan. "The height advantage was obvious."

As to Lieberman's lack of scoring in the first half (only six points), Stanley noted that she didn't get the ball much since they were trying to get it inside.

Lieberman ended up with 16, two below her average.

"I was really afraid that we'd have a letdown following our game with Tennessee (Saturday night), but we didn't. It would have been easy for us to have done it."

East Carolina never led in the game, and tied the score only once, at 2-2. After that, two straight baskets by Nissen and Lieberman made it 6-2 and the Pirates never caught up again.

Never in the first half did the Pirates manage to score more than two straight points, and that was one of the real reasons the Monarchs were able to pull away. They steadily built up their lead, finally reaching 18 at 49-31 with four seconds left in the half.

After scoring the first three baskets of the second half, Old Dominion continued to pull away, finally reaching their biggest lead, 78-45, a 33-point bulge with 9:26 left. After that, the Monarchs went to their bench for the final nine minutes.

At that point, the Pirates had managed only once to put more than two points together, getting three at one point on a basket and a free throw.

Besides the scoring of Nissen and Lieberman, ODU put three others in double figures. Angela Cotman and Rhonda Rompolo each had 15 and Jan Trombly had 13.

Williamston, Roanoke Post Tournaments Wins

Roanoke and Williamston both advanced into the semifinals of the Northeastern Conference Tournament last night, along with top-seeded Washington and Plymouth.

Roanoke, second seeded in the tournament, disposed of number seven Edenton, 74-57, while Williamston, the third-seeded team, dumped number six Roanoke Rapids, 58-46.

Washington downed Ahoskie, the number eight seed, 86-50, while Plymouth upset Tarboro, number four. The score of the latter game was not available.

Games were played on the home courts of the higher seeded teams.

In the Roanoke game, at Robersonville, the Redskins jumped out to an 18-10 lead in the first period and padded that to 36-24 by the end of the half. They continued to pull away in the third period, running their lead out to 57-34. Edenton was allowed a slight comeback in the final period.

Jasper Martin led Roanoke with 17, while Sutton Edmondson had 14 and Ronnie Highsmith had 10. Earthen Ward led Edenton with 20, while Frank Hardy added 10.

In the Williamston game, played on the Tiger court, the hosts ran out to an 18-10 margin in the first period. Roanoke Rapids rallied in the second quarter, however, and cut the lead back to a single point, 33-32, at the half.

Williamston pulled away again in the third period, building the lead back to 47-38. They finished off the Yellow Jackets, 11-8, in the final quarter.

Joe Peele led Williamston with 21, while Walter Harris and James Woolard each had 12. Carl Gregory led the Jackets with 14, while William Potney and Chuck Maness each had ten.

Washington entertains Plymouth, and Roanoke plays host to Williamston in the semifinals on Wednesday night. Tonight, play opens in the girls' event, with Williamston hosting Tarboro. Roanoke Rapids entertaining Plymouth; Washington home to Ahoskie and Edenton visiting Roanoke.

Indiana State Slips Past UCLA For First

NEW YORK (AP) — Indiana State Coach Bill Hodges said his Sycamore basketball team should be No. 1 and they are today — but just barely.

The Sycamores, who rolled to their 23rd consecutive triumph with a 100-75 win over West Texas State Monday night, collected 43 of 62 first-place votes and 1,196 points in balloting by The Associated Press' committee of sports writers and broadcasters. They edged second-place UCLA by a scant six points.

"If we were good enough to be rated No. 2 on our schedule, we're good enough to be No. 1," Hodges said, replying to critics who felt Indiana State's schedule is weak.

And the AP committee agreed, although there were exceptions. Indiana State and UCLA, which received 19 first place votes, were both named on all 62 ballots. The Sycamores were listed as low as No. 9 by one voter, while the Bruins, who upset then No. 1 Notre Dame 56-52 Sunday, were ranked no lower than fourth.

The Fighting Irish, who handed North Carolina State its first non-conference game home loss since 1968 Wednesday, slipped to third with 1,073 points. Atlantic Coast Conference teams occupied the next two positions. North Carolina, No. 6 last week, jumped to fourth with 983 points following wins over Maryland and Providence. Duke, top-ranked in the pre-season poll and third last week, slipped to fifth with 901 points after being upset by Pittsburgh 71-69 on Saturday.

Southeastern Conference leader Louisiana State, No. 8

last week, was a close sixth with 895 points while Syracuse, 20-2, remained No. 7 with 869 points.

Michigan State, which defeated Iowa 60-57 and bombed Ohio State 73-55 last week, jumped from 10th to eighth with 795 points. Louisville, No. 5 last week, tumbled to ninth after losing to Marquette. No. 10 this week.

Arkansas headed the Second Ten, followed by Southwest Conference rival Texas. Purdue, unranked last week, jumped to 13th, followed by Iowa, Temple, Georgetown, Ohio State, Detroit, Vanderbilt and Alabama.

Texas A&M, No. 11 last week before losing to Arkansas and Texas Tech, and Illinois, No. 20 last week, fell from the Top 20. Detroit joined Purdue as the only newcomers to the Top 20.

Sycamores Clinch Loop Title

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Nothing's changed now that the Indiana State Sycamores are finally No. 1 — they're still winning basketball games.

Undeclared but relatively unopposed by the voters throughout the season, the Sycamores have moved to the top of The Associated Press poll and established their new beachhead with a handsome 100-75 conquest of West Texas State Monday night.

Incidentally, that not only gave some more substance to their top-ranked status, but clinched the Sycamores' first Missouri Valley Conference championship.

"They are certainly one of the better teams in the country," said West Texas State Coach Ken Edwards of Indiana State, a possible answer to some charges that the Sycamores play a soft-touch schedule.

That was apparently the thinking of AP voters who in past weeks voted Indiana State

No. 2 even though the spotless Sycamores had the best record in the Top Twenty. Indiana State Coach Bill Hodges was miffed, pointing out: "If you're voted No. 2 in the nation, why aren't you good enough to be No. 1?"

They certainly looked good enough Monday night.

"The second half," said Hodges, "we just got out there and played at both ends of the court."

In other games involving the ranked teams, No. 6 Louisiana State beat Auburn 78-68; No. 11 Arkansas stopped Baylor 71-62; No. 12 Texas whipped Texas A&M 65-57 and No. 19 Vanderbilt beat No. 20 Alabama 65-57.

As on many other occasions, Larry Bird was the reason that Indiana State won its most recent game. Bird scored 27 points and registered 19 rebounds against West Texas State.

"The second half, we just stuck it to them," said Carl Nicks, who scored 17 points for the winners. "We started to fast break."

Jordy Hultberg scored 16 of his 20 points in the second half as LSU rallied from a 12-point deficit in the final 17 minutes to beat Auburn. The Tigers, recording their sixth straight victory, went ahead for good at 58-56 on a basket by Hultberg with 8:42 remaining.

"This team really believes in each other," said LSU Coach Dale Brown. "Even when we were 12 down, you never saw any of them snapping at each other or getting on each other. We were able to scratch back because we never lost our togetherness."

Noted Auburn Coach Sonny Smith of LSU: "There is no doubt they are the class of the league. LSU did what you have to do to win — they attacked us from outside, and scored well." Ulysses Reed scored 10 points in the second half to lead a torrid Arkansas shooting spree that carried the 18-4 Razorbacks past Baylor. The Razorbacks hit 83 percent of their shots after intermission.

John Moore's 23 points paced Texas over Texas A&M in a key Southwest Conference game. The loss dropped the Aggies three games behind the league-leading Longhorns.

The Longhorns' iron-man starting five played the entire game.

"We could play the whole game because we slowed it down in the second half to take a breather," forward Ron Baxter said.

It was the third straight key loss for the Aggies, who previously were beaten by Arkansas and Texas Tech. But A&M Coach Shelby Metcalf said, "This game cleared the air. I feel like we will come back and play two good ball games (TCU and Rice) and be ready for the tournament. I know that the Aggies are disappointed but we probably are right on schedule."

Mike Rhodes scored 32 points as Vanderbilt beat Alabama, overshadowing a 29-point performance by the Crimson Tide's Reggie King.

Elsewhere, Chad Kinch and Kevin King each scored 24 points to lead North Carolina-Charlotte over New Orleans 76-66; Marty Coyne's 17 points led Army over Fordham 71-70; Florida State stopped St. Louis 84-79 as Kris Anderson put in 20 points; Kelvin Troy had 19 points as Rutgers defeated New Hampshire 83-73; Cincinnati held off Xavier 60-58 behind Pat Cummings' 25 points and Les Henson had 18 points to power Virginia Tech past William & Mary 55-49.

Also, John Stroud sank two free throws with one second left to give Mississippi a 67-65 victory over Florida; Davidson turned back Tennessee-Charlottesville 70-64 as John Gerdy scored 36 points; Tom Slawson's 16 points led The Citadel over VMI 72-69; Carl Belcher scored 26 to lead St. Bonaventure over St. Francis (Pa.) 86-77; Kenneth Williams scored 38 points as Houston trimmed SMU 101-94 and Anthony DeCello hit two free throws with 11 seconds left to ice an 84-80 victory for Rice over TCU.

Dwight Anderson scored 26 points to pace Kentucky past Mississippi State 80-65; Tulane's Joe Holston sank a 20-foot jumper with 24 seconds remaining to give the Green Wave a 75-74 decision over Southern Mississippi; Wayne Kreklow fired in 30 points as Drake edged Southern Illinois 79-75; Dana Perno's 19 points triggered West Virginia past Robert Morris 85-79 and Michael Brooks and Kurt Kanaskie combined for 56 points as La Salle defeated Lehigh 100-93.

Helms Is Top Rookie

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Wake Forest freshman guard Mike Helms, who came off the bench to spark the Deacons to a 60-56 win over North Carolina State Saturday night, has been named Atlantic Coast Conference Rookie of the Week.

Before playing the Wolfpack, Wake Forest had lost its last six conference games.

Helms played his top game of the season against North Carolina State, hitting eight of 13 shots for 16 points and dealing out five assists.

In a game against Clemson earlier in the week, Helms scored eight points, hitting four of seven shots from the field.

Helms was chosen by a selection committee of the Atlantic Sports Writers Association. The committee earlier selected Virginia center Steve Castellani as the ACC Player of the Week.

Miller Huggins, who won six pennants as manager of the New York Yankees, was 5 feet, 4 inches tall.

GRIMESLAND — G. R. Whitfield took a pair of victories over Farmville Middle School yesterday, 39-27 in the girls' game and 41-40 in the boys' contest.

M. Komegah had 11 and C. Thompson and I. Barnhill 10 each for the Whitfield girls.

Artell Ruffin hit a free throw with six seconds left to lift the Whitfield boys to their win. They were led by Keith Gatlin with 21 points. B. B. Joyner had 19 for Farmville.

GRIFTON — Chicod and Grifton split a pair of games yesterday. The Chicod girls won 21-10, while the Grifton boys won 34-31.

Daine Roach was the only girl in double figures with 16 for Chicod. Joey Kennedy had 10 for the Grifton boys, while Eddie Roberson scored 15 and Billy Roberson 10 for Chicod.

Red Sox Get Larry Wolfe

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Red Sox have acquired light-hitting third baseman Larry Wolfe from the Minnesota Twins in exchange for infielder-outfielder Dave Coleman, who hit 24 home runs last year for Pawtucket in the International League, the Boston club announced Monday.

Wolfe, 25, hit .234 and drove in 25 runs in 88 games while platooned with left-handed hitter Mike Cuddage for the Twins last season, Wolfe's rookie year.

He joined the Twins in September 1977 after hitting .304 with 39 doubles at Charleston in the International League, and leading the league's third baseman in putouts and assists.

Coleman, 28, hit .270 with 24 home runs and 83 runs batted in at third base and in the outfield for Pawtucket last year. He appeared in 12 games for the Red Sox in 1977, going hitless in 12 at-bats.

McAdoo Trade Signals Changes Of Policies

NEW YORK (AP) — The trade of Bob McAdoo from New York to Boston has dramatically reshaped the futures of two of the National Basketball Association's most prestigious franchises.

The deal, arranged over the weekend and announced Monday, signals an end to New York's "open checkbook" policy of trying to achieve instant success by buying the most talented athletes available and a return to the more traditional route of rebuilding through the college draft.

From Boston's angle, it is a gamble that a player of McAdoo's magnificent offensive talents can be blended into the Celtics' time-honored team concept without upsetting the apple cart.

The trade was engineered by Sonny Werblin of the Knicks and John Y. Brown of the Celtics, two owners who are not afraid to roll the dice.

New York will receive the three first-round picks Boston had accumulated in the 1979 draft — Boston's own, Golden State's and Seattle's, the latter two having been obtained in deals for Jo Jo White and Dennis Awtry. Boston retains the draft rights to Indiana State's Larry Bird, whom the Celtics picked last June.

New York will also get a player to be named later this week, a front-court reserve from either Boston or another NBA team.

The Knicks had been without a first-round pick in the draft, which is what prompted the deal.

"I was in a ridiculous situation," said Werblin. "I was trying to rebuild without draft choices. Bob happened to be a tradeable commodity we could move to improve ourselves. We have now put ourselves in a position to rebuild the team and perhaps make more trades this season and next."

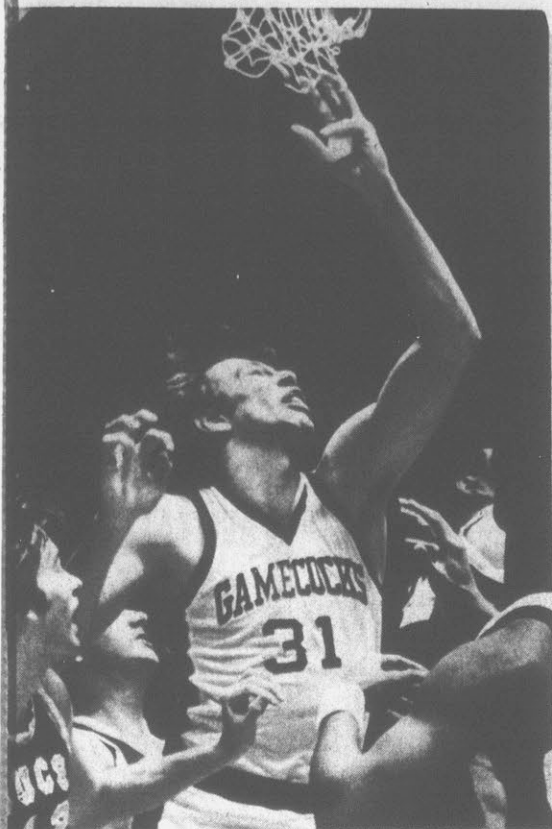

Werblin felt the Knicks had gone as far as they could with McAdoo, a three-time NBA scoring champion and currently the league's No. 3 scorer with a 26.9 average.

"Our coaches were not able to get him to fit into the team concept," said Werblin. "Maybe he will somewhere else."

Red Sox Get Larry Wolfe

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Red Sox have acquired light-hitting third baseman Larry Wolfe from the Minnesota Twins in exchange for infielder-outfielder Dave Coleman, who hit 24 home runs last year for Pawtucket in the International League, the Boston club announced Monday.

Wolfe, 25, hit .234 and drove in 25 runs in 88 games while platooned with left-handed hitter Mike Cuddage for the Twins last season, Wolfe's rookie year.

He joined the Twins in September 1977 after hitting .304 with 39 doubles at Charleston in the International League, and leading the league's third baseman in putouts and assists.

Coleman, 28, hit .270 with 24 home runs and 83 runs batted in at third base and in the outfield for Pawtucket last year. He appeared in 12 games for the Red Sox in 1977, going hitless in 12 at-bats.

Ingram Wants 'Old' System

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Insurance Commissioner John Ingram says he favors a return to the system of approving insurance rates that was used before 1977.

Under the law at that time, the insurance commissioner had to approve higher rates before they could go into effect.

The General Assembly changed the law in 1977 to allow insurance companies to implement increases in the rates charged for automobile worker's compensation and homeowner's insurance while they appeal the insurance commissioner's rejection of the rate hike proposals.

Ingram, speaking at a news conference Monday, listed a series of recommendations on insurance laws he expects to be introduced in the General Assembly within the next week. Ingram said he would contact Gov. Jim Hunt, Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green and House Speaker Carl Stewart to urge them to support the proposed legislation.

Ingram's proposals include the creation of reinsurance facilities for automobile collision, worker's compensation and homeowner's insurance.

Reinsurance pools have been created for automobile liability insurance. Insurance companies can place persons they feel are high-risk policyholders in the pool and share any profits or losses that result. Drivers in the reinsurance facility must pay a 10 percent surcharge on standard insurance rates.

Chief Deputy Insurance Commissioner Roy Rabon said Ingram's recommendation would eliminate the 8 percent surcharge on worker's compensation and replace it with an assigned-risk system.

The proposed homeowner's reinsurance facility would make insurance available to persons who are unable to find an insurance company to write them a policy.

Rabon said Ingram wants reinsurance-facility laws to be changed to eliminate surcharges and higher rates.

Correction

It was reported in an article about the Farmville Board of Commissioners' February meeting published Thursday that the board "agreed to allow Scientific Products Company to withdraw its bid for the supplying of chemicals for the town's sewage treatment plant, since a $6,000 mathematical error was made by the company." Actually the board indicated it would consider a written request for withdrawal, as required by state statute.

Town Administrator Patrick A. Thomas reports that, since the board meeting, it has been learned that certain provisions of the statute probably will not allow withdrawal.

No One Ever Tried For Valentine Day Massacre

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Fifty years ago, on a day when Cupids are supposed to shoot arrows of love, mobsters delivered a Valentine of lead.

Seven men associated with George "Bugs" Moran were lined up against a brick wall inside a North Side garage and riddled with machine gun slugs.

The St. Valentine's Day massacre, Feb. 14, 1929, was Prohibition's goriest gangland crime. It awakened the public's fear of organized hoodlums and was instrumental in bringing the federal government into the Chicago crime picture.

The massacre climaxed 10 years of gang battles for control of illicit beer and whiskey profits. The warfare had narrowed to a fight for supremacy between Al Capone's South Side mob and the henchmen of Moran, the North Side booze czar.

The massacre still is listed in police files as "murder by persons unknown." No one was ever brought to trial, but gangland vengeance erased 22 men whose names popped up in the investigation.

"Machine Gun" Jack McGurn, who had been in contact with Capone, was believed to have masterminded the hit. He and John Scalisi of the Mafia were indicted for the murders and released on $50,000 bond.

Scalisi later was slain, and the state lacked enough evidence to bring McGurn to trial. Seven years after the massacre, McGurn was machine-gunned down at a Northwest Side bowling alley.

Police blamed the Capone mob for the massacre, but couldn't prove it. The garage had served as Moran's booze depot, and Moran missed being there by a stroke of luck. Afterward, Moran told police:

"Only the Capone gang kills like that."

But Capone himself had an iron alibi. At the very time that tommy gun slugs were ripping into the seven victims, "Scarface Al" was chatting with the district attorney in Miami, Fla., where he was vacationing. Told about Moran's accusation, Capone replied:

"They don't call that guy Bugs for nothing."

Earl Aykroid, retired Associated Press staffer, was one of the first reporters to enter the garage after the shooting. "Inside was a scene of carnage rivaling a battlefield," he recalls. "Six men lay dead along the north wall of the building, their bodies riddled by machine gun bullets. A seventh man, fatally wounded, was being carried to an ambulance by two patrolmen. He lived only briefly."

But the attempt to rub out Moran's gang was a botched job, according to various accounts. Only two of Moran's toughest musclemen were killed — Frank and Pete Gusenberg. The other victims were Johnny May, a mechanic who kept the bootleg trucks working; James Clark, Moran's brother-in-law who once was tried for murder; Adam Hyer, a trained accountant who has served time for embezzlement and now handled the gang's finances; Albert Weinshank, operator of a speakeasy, and Dr. Reinhart Schwimmer, an optometrist strangely fascinated with underworld factions.

What brought them together? One account is that a hijacked truckload of whiskey was being brought in for sale. Other accounts say that was a phony report spread to get the Moran boys together.

Across the street, two brothers identified as Phil and Harry Keywell of the Purple Gang, which had interests in the Detroit bootlegging racket, watched the garage from a rented boarding house room.

They saw Moran's boys go in at about 10 a.m. The last was Weinshank with his German shepherd dog, High Ball, on a leash. Weinshank looked like Moran. Police think the watchers mistook him for the big boss.

The brothers telephoned the Circus Cafe 20 blocks south and said Moran and six others were inside. The cafe contact went to a small garage and said, "He's there and he's got six of them with him."

Two men dressed like policemen and two in street clothes piled into what looked like a detective bureau car and drove to the garage.

The "policemen," brandishing revolvers, entered the building and went to the back, where the trucks were. The two others followed, one with a package wrapped in newspaper. Moran's men thought it was just another raid. They were ordered to line up against the wall, and did.

The man with the package ripped off the newspaper. It was a tommy gun. He sprayed the seven men with slugs, back and forth, back and forth, and squeezed a torrent of shots into them after they fell.

Most of the victims were bundled in overcoats and wore fedoras. There was no heat in the garage.

The dog High Ball barked and snarled. He had been tied to a truck and kept lunging the length of his leash, but could not break free.

A landlady saw two men leave the garage with hands raised, followed by two policemen with guns. "Just another arrest," she thought.

But the shots and the dog's howls had drawn attention. Police found four men lying face up, blood pouring from their heads. Another was face down against the wall. A sixth was sprawled over a chair.

Crawling out from the entanglement of bodies was Frank Gusenberg, with 22 slugs in him. He lived for 90 minutes and was asked who shot him. True to gangdom's code, he replied: "Nobody."

Moran and two of his top boys were reportedly nearing the garage on foot when they saw the execution squad's parked car. Thinking it was a police shakedown, they went to a restaurant nearby. Afterward, they went back and found the street cluttered with police. They scattered.

Moran bootlegged until repeal, then turned to other crimes. In 1957, at 64, he died of cancer in prison, serving time for a bank holdup. Capone, who served time for income tax evasion, died in 1947.

The garage was used by a moving and storage firm until 1967, when it was torn down to make room for apartments for the elderly.

The bullet-scarred bricks were sold to a Canadian food executive, George Patty of Vancouver, who planned to reconstruct the wall of his den with them.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

That Shakespeare TV Series Is Far From The Customary Fare

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There's a new series coming to TV Wednesday night. Big deal. There's a new series every night, isn't there?

So, what'll this one be? Fleishy detectives? A show about adolescents? Maybe a sitcom about a divorced parent with teen-agers; that would be novel.

Let's see... "The Plays of William Shakespeare" on public television.

Well, that sounds interesting. I wonder which ones they'll do. Better check the publicity sheets.

All 37 of them? Aw, c'mon. When is public television going to catch on? TV series are supposed to be conceived in flashy Beverly Hills restaurants with unlisted phone numbers; they're supposed to take two, maybe three months from linguistic to debut date. All of the Shakespeare plays would take a year or two to make and air.

I'd better find out who's running this show. Hmm... Cedric Messina of the British Broadcasting Corporation. That figures. Only the BBC would try to pull off a television series that could take two years to produce.

"Six years, actually," Messina corrects. He says it took a year to produce seven plays, six of which will air this season, and the series will run for five years.

The entire first folio plus "Pericles, Prince of Tyre." No light undertaking. Why all this? "Why not?" Messina asks. Oh, OK.

"Julius Caesar," the enduring tale of envy, treachery and betrayal, will be the first airing of the season, Wednesday night. The plays will not be shown in chronological order, allowing a mixture each season of Shakespeare's comedies and his tragedies, his popular works and his lesser known plays.

Following "Julius Caesar" this season will be "As You Like It," "Romeo and Juliet," "Richard II," "Measure for Measure" and "Henry VIII," airing every other week.

This BBC series was also sold to Australia, Canada, Sweden, Germany, Japan and the Soviet Union. It will bring Shakespeare to more people the next six years than have seen his works in the 363 years since his death.

Floods Of Mail Cheered Wayne

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Letters from well wishers — including England's Queen Elizabeth II — helped keep up his spirits while he recovered from surgery to remove his cancerous stomach, says actor John Wayne.

The gravel-voiced box office king says he's now "feeling fine and going to make it."

In a copyright interview with the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner, Wayne said he got "30,000 letters at the hospital... and there were another 10,000 here when I got home. I skimmed through some of those and found one from one of my grand kids, who wrote it the day I was operated on."

He made his comments Sunday from his Newport Beach home — a day after being released from UCLA Medical Center.

"I still have a little trouble (a slight infection), but as soon as that clears up, I'll be up and at 'em," Wayne said.

Wayne underwent 9½ hours of surgery Jan. 12. Doctors at the medical center have said they expect him to make a quick and complete recovery.

GARDEN CITY, N.Y. (AP) — Inca and Catherine proudly marched down the aisle together to receive special honors awards during Adelphi University commencement ceremonies.

Catherine Gleitz of Baldwin, N.Y., was honored for her four-year, 3.9 average at the school. Inca, a Labrador retriever, was honored for seeing the blind woman through the task.

The bidding:

1 ♦ Pass Pass Dble.
2 ♦ 3 ♥ Pass 4 ♥
Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Three of ♠.

South, declarer at four hearts, had an unusual choice of end plays to execute in the middle game. By selecting the right one, he was able to bring home his tricky contract.

A balancing bid by the fourth player does not necessarily show a good hand — North would have been fully entitled to reopen with two hearts if he had a low diamond instead of the ace. Since he, in fact, had a full opening bid, North decided to double first, planning to introduce his hearts at his next turn. East tried to shut out the opponents by rebidding his spades, but South had just enough to compete at the three-level. That was all North needed to hear, and his raise to four hearts ended the auction.

West led his fourth-best spade, declarer won the ace and ruffed a spade in dummy. After drawing trumps in two rounds, he then had to decide on how to tackle the minor suits. The normal play would be to try two diamond finesses, hoping the honors were split and the fourth diamond could be set up for a discard. From the bidding, however, it was likely that East had both honors, so declarer rejected that plan and decided to go after clubs first.

He led a low club and, when West followed low, inserted dummy's ten. East won the queen, but had no attractive return. Since a diamond or spade lead would have been fatal, he elected to get off play by cashing the ace of clubs and conceding a trick to dummy's king.

This merely postponed the moment of truth. Declarer entered his hand with a trump and ran the ten of diamonds to the queen. East was trapped again! A diamond return would be into the A-J tenace, while the lead of a spade would allow declarer to ruff in his hand while discarding the jack of diamonds from the board. Either way declarer would lose only one diamond in addition to two clubs.

Observe what happens if declarer tackles the diamond suit before clubs: East wins the first round of diamonds with the queen, but he can get out of his hand quite effectively by leading the ace and queen of clubs! Now it's declarer who has no recourse, for no matter what he does, he cannot prevent East from taking a second trick to go along with two club tricks.

Singer 'Aged' In Plane Crash

CLARKSBURG, W.Va. (AP) — Singer Leon Redbone is in his 30s, but says he feels "like I'm 93" after escaping without serious injury from the crash of an Allegheny Airlines plane at a local airport.

"I ache all over and my hip hurts. But nothing is broken as far as I know," Redbone said from his hospital bed a few hours after the crash. He was one of 25 persons aboard the Washington-bound plane.

Two people were killed and 23 others were injured when the propeller flipped and crashed shortly after taking off in a snowstorm.

Redbone is a blues singer from New Hope, Pa. He said there was little time to prepare for the crash. "All of a sudden I was hanging upside down in the plane," he said. "It was a matter of moments before the plane came down. Everybody was disoriented, but no more than could be expected."

Judge Orders Abide By Vote

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The Durham City Council has been ordered by Superior Court Judge Robert Farmer to seat Adrienne Fox as its newest member.

Farmer's order on Monday was based on an Oct. 2 vote in which Mrs. Fox received six ballots from council members in favor of her confirmation.

The city had contended that seven affirmative votes, a majority of the full 13-member council, were required for any council action.

But the judge said because there were only 11 members on the council on Oct. 2, the affirmative votes constituted a majority.

Scoliosis Screening In Schools Is In Progress

The Pitt County Community Health Department is conducting a scoliosis screening program during February and early March for all fourth and sixth graders in the Pitt County and Greenville City Schools, according to Dr. G. Earl Trevathan, acting health director.

The health department is undertaking a screening program in cooperation with the North Carolina Division of Health Services, Crippled Children's Program.

Scoliosis, which is basically a side to side (lateral) curvature of the spine, can progress to a severe S-shaped curve in the spinal column if untreated.

School screening programs on children ages 10-11 have revealed some evidence of scoliosis in about 15 percent of the children.

Those children who need active treatment by a physician average about two to four children per 1,000 students. Officials feel that these statistics show that the vast majority of children who do have a mild curve will not progress to a more severe curve.

Scoliosis screening is important, for surgery can often be avoided if children are treated early. Also, curves which show evidence of progression tend to progress rapidly during periods of rapid growth, with progressive scoliosis a factor in interference with heart and lung functions, which can lead to early death.

Early forms of scoliosis call for bracing, with untreated curves often requiring a form of surgery known as spinal fusion.

The initial screening in the county and city schools will employ school health nurses from the county Community Health Department and the medical-social counselors from the county school system.

The screening will involve a simple forward bending test which will point out specific evidence of curvature.

If referral is needed, a child may go to a private physician or be seen at a special orthopedic clinic to be held at the county Community Health Department in mid-May.

The initial visit to the health department clinic is free of charge, including any needed x-rays.

Approval for the initial school screening for children will be obtained through letters sent to parents. A subsequent report will be sent to parents if a child is in need of medical evaluation.

For more information about scoliosis and the screening program, call Martin McDowell, health educator, or Marie Arnaud, school health coordinator, Pitt County Community Health Department, 752-4141.

Patent New Bed For Insomniacs

WASHINGTON, D.C. (UPI)—In the wake of the water bed, which flooded the market a few years ago, the United States Patent Office has issued Patent 4,055,866 on a new kind of bed for insomniacs.

Frank Evans, a psychiatrist trained at Yale and Harvard and with research experience at the National Institute of Health, has invented what he calls a "bedder" to help many of his patients get a good night's rest, according to Intellectual Property Owners, Inc., a non-profit group dedicated to preserving the U.S. patent system.

Evans' creation consists of two-by-two-foot stretch nylon bags filled with about 25 pounds of tiny plastic beads. A number of these bags piled in a frame readily conform to body contours.

Compared with the water bed, Evans says, his bedder weighs less and doesn't "ripple" or continue to shift once the user has settled in.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market jumped ahead today as the gradual rally of the past three sessions accelerated.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had climbed 8.83 points since last Wednesday's close, was up another 7.28 at 832.12 by noon today.

Gainers outdistanced losers by more than a 3-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the stage for today's advance was set over the past several days, during which the market managed to move ahead despite a generally dismal news background.

Late last week the government reported the sharpest rise in wholesale prices in the last four years. And uncertainties abounded about the energy outlook after the revolution in Iran.

When those developments failed to touch off any significant declines, analysts said, traders seemed to conclude that the balance of supply and demand for stock favored a rally.

The dollar, meanwhile, turned in a steady showing in foreign exchange today.

Coal stocks extended their recent gains. Pittston rose 1/2 to 21 1/2 and Continental Oil, which has extensive coal operations, added 1/2 to 31 1/2, both in active trading.

Buyers of the stocks evidently believe the industry will benefit from new pressures on oil supplies resulting from the upheaval in Iran.

The NYSE's composite index rose .42 to 55.46. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.06 at 161.77.

Redevelopment...

"Now that the private sector has successfully constructed new homes in the Southside Project, two major developers are interested in this neighborhood. This will assure the major objective of this project to provide standard homes for the low and moderate income working families."

In conjunction with the annual report, the Commission will also submit a summary of Community Development activity for the Jan. 1 to Dec. 31, 1978 period. According to the summary, 49 parcels were acquired in the five project areas at a cost of $209,327.15, while 36 families were relocated at a cost of $84,538.89. Some 33 structures were demolished in the project areas at a cost of $11,425, while ten structures underwent rehabilitation at a cost of $92,201.

Laney reported that the city Codes Review Committee is currently revising the Zoning Ordinance to include sign control provisions. In that regard, commissioners approved a resolution recommending that the ordinance prohibit projecting signs in the downtown mall area in order to maintain effective sign control.

The resolution also recommended that the committee consider expanding the policy limiting projecting signs to the commercial district of the downtown section, involving an area of four to six blocks immediately surrounding the mall.

Southside project manager Faye Brewing reported that one acquisition took place in the project area since the last meeting and one demolition and one removal took place. One acquisition and three demolitions took place in the South Evans area, she said, while one demolition was handled in West Meadowbrook and one in the Central Business District. No relocation activity took place during the month, she added.

Ed Cobb, staff rehabilitation officer, said that rehabilitation work on three properties were completed since the January meeting and approval has been received for a 312 loan. Bids will be taken on five CD grants this week, Cobb noted.

According to the rehabilitation officer, financial data is being gathered for five new 312 loans. He added that the weather has hindered rehabilitation progress in the past two months.

Commissioners approved amendments to the appraisal contracts of Moore and Sauter of Greenville and Calvin Reynolds of Winston-Salem for 25 additional appraisals in the South Evans area. In addition, the contracts of Moore and Sauter and also Wheelless Realty for appraisal services were amended to cover seven additional parcels in the Broad Street to Farmville Boulevard section of 14th Street.

An amendment to the contract with Rivers & Associates increasing the hourly rate schedule for engineering and survey personnel was also approved. The original contract was based upon 1973 prevailing rates for engineering and survey services and the amendment will bring the personnel up to prevailing rates in effect in March of 1978.

Commissioners approved the granting of sewer easements in Southside as requested by Greenville Utilities Commission.

Eden Policemen Are Unhappy With Pay Scale

EDEN, N.C. (AP) — Eden police have asked for a meeting with city officials Thursday to discuss salaries and other benefits.

Patrolman Fred Chilton, a spokesman for the officers, said policemen are upset over their pay scale, the lack of a system for determining merit raises, the city's alleged failure to give promised merit raises last month and the fact that some veteran officers earn less than some newcomers.

"People have told me that if I don't like my job, why don't I quit," said Chilton, who has been on the police force for three years. "But I do like my job and I'm going to fight for it, especially when a new officer makes more than me."

He said his makes $9,672 a year and that one 13-year veteran earns the same as he does and less than one new officer.

Police Chief Marshal Clark said officials would investigate the complaints.

Schoolgirl Died From Sedative

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A 16-year-old girl who collapsed on a school bus Jan. 17 died of an accidental overdose of a sleeping medicine, the state's chief medical examiner has ruled.

Dr. R. Page Hudson Jr. of Chapel Hill, the chief medical examiner, said Robin Lea Lundy accidentally took an overdose of Noctec, a sedative that depresses the central nervous system.

Miss Lundy was a student at Kennedy High School.

Expand Bethel Center Service

BETHEL — The Pitt County Mental Health Center expanded services in the Bethel community, beginning Monday.

At the first meeting of the Mental Health Advisory Committee for the Bethel Resource Center, Robert L. Martin was elected chairman and the Rev. Norman Joyner was elected vice-chairman.

According to Dr. Robert P. Nenno, director of the Bethel Clinic, the recently appointed advisory committee met for an orientation and needs assessment session. Ideas for community outreach were discussed.

Appointed to the Advisory Committee, in addition to Martin and Rev. Joyner, were Carolyn Smith, Rebekah Cranford, the Rev. Ellis Bedsworth, Mayor James Dupree, Mabel Blount, and Betty Speir.

The telephone number for the center, located in the Bethel Clinic, is 825-2961. The center hours are from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. each Monday.

Ayden Board...

tion on adoption of a tree ordinance due to the hospitalization of Mayor Ross Persinger.

Board members felt that the mayor needed to be present at the resolution's adoption, since he would be an essential part of the Tree Board, which would be formed if the resolution was adopted.

Utilities Director Mike Finney asked board members for direction on the tree trimming matter, pointing out that work needs to go forward with the project.

Town Manager Don Russell said that $11,000 was allotted in the present budget for tree trimming.

Board members told Finney to go ahead with the tree trimming list until adoption of the proposed tree ordinance.

The board voted to give Town Manager Russell authority to work with the Farmers' Home Administration in amending the Administration's loan for the water and sewer projects from $684,000 to $725,000.

The board adopted an equal opportunity and non-discrimination resolution concerning work on the water and sewer projects as specified by the FHA.

Lengthy discussion followed an item concerning leasing of Mildred Worthington's property for a town parking lot.

Attorney Robert Booth pointed out that Ms. Worthington wanted to limit parking on her property to regular cars (no heavy vehicles) and that the agreement include a mutual consent clause between the town and Ms. Worthington.

The board decided to table voting on the lease until agreements could be reached with Ms. Worthington on the lease.

Board members felt that restrictions on parking lots should extend to all lots, and not just one in particular. A parking committee is presently studying the lot situation in Ayden, and will probably suggest to the board that some sort of restrictions be made in the future.

The board set a public hearing for the March meeting concerning possible rezoning of land located on Old Snow Hill Road from R-20 (agricultural and residential) to RA-8 for construction of a rest home facility.

The board adopted a resolution honoring Mrs. Mary Dixon for her 18 years of service as assistant librarian for the Ayden Library. Mrs. Dixon resigned in December.

The board voted to release $37.92 from the 1978 tax levy. Also, after discussion presented by Ayden Housing Authority Director Jerry Cox, the board voted not to press collection of $129.50 from a former housing authority resident who has moved to Texas.

The board also voted to enter a neutral use pole agreement with Carolina Power and Light Company after information presented by Utilities Director Finney.

The board will meet Monday, Feb. 19, 7 p.m., to review bids for the electric project and to hear information concerning a Housing and Urban Development program.
