DOT Planning Board Approves Road

HIGHWAY PLAN ...The heavy dashed lines on this map indicate a 2000 foot wide corridor along which the U.S. 264 freeway between Greenville and Wilson would be located if the Board of Transportation approves a Department of Transportation staff recommendation for the project. The final right-of- way limits for the highway would be from 250 feet to 400 feet wide. As proposed, the first stage of the project would include construction of the freeway between Wilson and Farmville, and between Farmville and Greenville, and connectors to the East and West of Farmville joining the freeway to the existing Farmville bypass. The second stage would complete the Freeway to the North of Farmville, represented by the slashed line North of Farmville. (Department of Transportation Map)

It's been a long time coming. But freeway access to Raleigh and the West may be a reality in the not-too-distant future if the Board of Transportation gives its approval to a Department of Transportation professional staff report recommending a fully-controlled access roadway be constructed between Greenville and Wilson to replace the existing U.S. 264.

The DOT planning board last week reviewed the staff recommendation and gave its approval.

The proposal is to construct a freeway linking Wilson and Greenville, along a new corridor to the North of the present highway in two stages.

The first stage would include the acquisition of right-of-way for the entire 24.4 mile project and the construction of the freeway between Wilson and Farmville, and between Farmville and Greenville. It would also include construction of connectors to the East and West of Farmville which would link the freeway to an existing five-lane bypass to the South of Farmville.

The second stage of the project would be to complete the freeway by building a bypass to the North of Farmville.

Highway Administrator Billy Rose said the use of the existing five-lane section at Farmville was recommended in an effort to, "get the facility open and functioning sooner," although many have termed the plan a compromise.

Modern-day Pitt County residents, as well as residents of other areas in the East, have complained that there are no superhighways connecting the East with other areas of the State...no four-lane roads leading to the centers of commerce in the central and western parts of North Carolina.

Access to the Eastern counties has never been good. The Spanish explorer DeSoto and the settlers that landed on Roanoke Island in the 1500's and 1600's found only Indian trails.

Since moving over water was easier than moving through the dense forests on the poor trails, waterways in the East became the white man's "roads" in the early days of colonization. Thus little was done to build roads until the need for improved land routes increased as plantations began to expand into areas lacking water connections.

The first roads were made by people simply cutting back the bush to widen foot trails. Later, "corduroy" or log roads were constructed by laying logs lengthwise along the trail and crossing them with small cuttings and sometimes adding sandy soil for surfacing. These types of roads were still in use when the state formed its road system in 1921.

In 1850, six plank roads were chartered in North Carolina. One of those was a Greenville-to-Raleigh trail that was completed to Wilson in 1853, following generally the route of the present-day U.S. 264.

These plank roads cost about $1,500 per mile, and were eight feet wide. By 1920, the Plank Road leading to the West from Greenville, was being "surfaced," and the following year the State took over maintenance and operation of about 10 per cent of the roads. Maintenance of all roads was taken over by the State in 1931.

Thus did the Indian trails, the Colonial stage routes and the plank roads become the concrete and asphalt highways of today. Thus did the Greenville-to-Raleigh Plank Road become the two-laned asphalt ribbon linking Pitt County with the Capital City.

As the major two-lane routes gave way to four-lane highways in the late 1950's and 1960's, Eastern area residents began talking of a four-lane highway to Raleigh.

Early in 1973, Superior Court Judge Robert Browning, then a member of the State Highway Commission (since replaced by the Board of Transportation), urged Eastern area residents to join forces to work for a four-lane highway to Raleigh.

"For some time," area residents, "have been competing for four-lane access to the central area of the state," he said. "This competition...has been detrimental to obtaining at least one four-lane road."

Browning was referring primarily to competition between supporters of a four-laned U.S. 264 and backers of a proposal to four-lane U.S. 64, which links Williamston, Tarboro and Rocky Mount with the Capital.

At that time, construction was already under way on a four-lane bypass at Zebulon, and right-of-way planning and acquisition had begun on a 10-mile long portion of a proposed 18-mile freeway route from Zebulon to Wilson.

"It is my feeling," Browning said, "we can only hope for one four-lane road. We should start to plan now in

Talks Underway

By JUAN J. WALTE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin talked privately for an hour late Saturday but apparently failed to reach agreement on issues blocking resolution of a Middle East peace settlement.

A White House official said the president and the prime minister talked alone for the last hour, after their wives had retired. A final meeting wastentatively set for Sunday, but was not officially announced.

Begin is scheduled to appear Sunday on ABC's nationally-televised news program, "Issues and Answers."

Carter has reportedly been unhappy about Begin's stated intention to discuss the Israel position publicly, but the White House made no comment about any of the evening's events.

Earlier in the day, Carter met with his top foreign policy advisers in the face of widely conflicting reports about the fate of America's tortuous efforts to achieve a peace treaty between Egypt and Israel.

Diplomatic leaks in Washington let it be known the talks were near a dead end with Begin adamantly refusing to budge an inch.

But the unofficial word in Cairo was that Egyptian President Anwar Sadat would fly to Washington in a few days to sign a historic peace treaty aimed at ending three decades of war, hatred and hostility in the Middle East.

Diplomatic correspondents — burned repeatedly during the five months of talks by an assortment of erroneous leaks, background briefings and official statements — were hesitant to accept either report.

An official in Cairo called the report of an impending trip by Sadat "premature" while a spokesman in Washington said, "That's wrong."

Carter conferred with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski and other foreign affairs aides at a morning strategy session in advance of evening talks with Begin.

The prime minister and Mrs. Begin were welcomed by the president and the First Lady as they arrived at the White House's North Portico. They chatted briefly with reporters before going into the dining room.

Begin evaded a question on whether he was now prepared to accept suggestions. He smiled and replied: "We were invited for dinner and are grateful for the invitation. We hope it will be a beautiful dinner."

Leaks have spoken of an air of gloom at the White House and left the impression the talks were at their lowest point since last fall's Camp David summit raised the hope of Israeli-Egyptian peace.

The key issue in dispute has been Egypt's insistence on — and Israel's opposition to — linking their treaty to a timetable for Palestinian self-rule.

Begin, who turned his back on all negotiations during the 24-hour Jewish Sabbath that began at sundown Friday, arrived in Washington last Thursday at the invitation of Carter.

Carter initially tried to arrange a new U.S.-supervised Israeli-Egyptian summit at his mountaintop presidential retreat in western Maryland in an attempt to turn the spirit of Camp David into diplomatic reality.

Sadat refused to attend the session.

Sadat Coming Next Week

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — The weekly magazine October said Saturday that President Anwar Sadat will travel to Washington next Tuesday or Wednesday to sign the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty with Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

The magazine has close ties to Sadat.

"President Sadat is expected to travel to Washington next Tuesday or Wednesday," the magazine said.

"After signing the peace treaty with America and Israel, President Sadat will hold talks with (President) Carter on American aid to Egypt," it said.

At China Reports It Will End 15-Day War

Chinese Surround Lang Son

By PAUL WEDEL

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Waves of Chinese soldiers have burst through Vietnamese defenses in an uphill attack that swept past the strategic Lang Son province capital and pushed at least two miles closer to Hanoi, intelligence reports said Saturday.

Despite a report from Peking the Chinese now would end the 15-day war and withdraw their troops, Hanoi charged the Chinese were sending still more troops into battle. The Vietnamese flew in reinforcements to defend Hanoi.

Lang Son was completely surrounded Friday in a "clear victory for the Chinese," a Western diplomatic source said. With that objective accomplished, Japanese news reports indicated, China's leaders were satisified with their military gains and would withdraw their troops from Vietnam.

The Kyodo news service reported from Peking the Chinese Communist Party's Central Military Commission decided to end the invasion and withdraw from Vietnam. The dispatch gave no date for the withdrawal, however.

Intelligence sources in Thailand reported late Saturday they had seen no indication the more than 85,000 Chinese troops in Vietnam had begun to withdraw.

Even if the Chinese withdrew now, observers in Bangkok said, it would take several weeks for them to move their entire massive invasion force back across the border into China.

But despite the Chinese advance two miles beyond Lang Son, the intelligence sources said, neither was there any evidence that the Chinese would continue to advance toward Hanoi.

"Contrary to their claim about an imminent withdrawal," the official Vietnam News Agency said, "the Chinese aggressors (have) deployed six more divisions" of troops in the region.

Immediately after the Chinese broke past the Lang Son defenses, Vietnam moved to shore up the defenses around its capital. Intelligence sources said the Vietnamese began an urgent airlift, using U.S.-built C-130 air transports, to ferry to Hanoi at least one division of 7,000 to 9,000 regular army troops based in southern Vietnam.

Official Radio Hanoi reported fighting in several other northern provinces and gave detailed casualty and battle reports. In Lang Son, the radio said, the Chinese were using six divisions — about 50,000 men — backed by more than 100 artillery pieces and tanks.

The Vietnamese said the Chinese were suffering heavy losses.

Intelligence sources quoting Western battlefield reports said the Chinese used waves of troops, backed by heavy artillery and tank barrages, to storm Vietnamese positions around the town of Lang Son.

The Chinese armies' performance was described as surprisingly good, with excellent use of tanks, men and supplies — "pretty good for an army that hasn't fought for 20 years," as one source said.

Leading the Chinese attack were two crack mountain divisions, battlefield reports said.

The climax of the attack, which began in earnest on Tuesday, came Friday, when

Flood Watch

By United Press International

The National Weather Service said Saturday several rivers in eastern North Carolina were at or near flood levels and more rain was headed for the state.

The flood watch was posted for the mountains, eastern slopes and foothills as a storm system moved into the state from the central and southern Mississippi River Valley.

Forecasters said rainfall in the west would be heavy at times and a few thunderstorms were possible last night and this morning.

HIGH WATER — This watery scene, photographed late Saturday morning at Greenville's Green Springs Park, is typical of flooding in low-lying areas in the city and Pitt County following recent snows and rains. Saturday's reading of the water level in the Tar River, at 15.7 feet above sea level, is 2.7 feet above the 13 foot level which marks the beginning of the flood stage in this area. Will Accelerate Plans

By JACK REDDEN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter promised Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau Saturday he would accelerate U.S. plans for construction of the $15 billion Alaska highway gas pipeline.

"I was reassured that President Carter insisted that there was a desire on the part of the administration it be proceeded with," Trudeau told reporters after a 90-minute White House luncheon with Carter.

There were increasing fears the pipeline to carry Alaskan gas through Canada to the lower 48 states would never be built. A U.S. official said, however, Carter promised to complete plans for a reorganized pipeline office and forward them to Congress by April 1.

The U.S. official said the target date for completion of the pipeline, which could deliver enough gas to replace 500,000 barrels of oil a day, was late 1984 or early 1985. When the agreement was first drawn up in 1977, completion was scheduled for Jan. 1, 1983.

The two leaders agreed also to discuss increased Canadian gas exports that "could facilitate timely construction of the entire northern gas pipeline," the spokesman said. Last week it was announced Canada had enough excess natural gas to allow exports of 2 trillion cubic feet over the next eight years.

The general energy situation of the two nations, both suffering from cutbacks in oil deliveries from Iran, dominated the brief meeting — that had to be re-scheduled from New York because of Carter's involvement in Middle East peace negotiations.

Doubts about the need for Alaskan gas were raised by the huge cost of the project and increasing reserves of accessible gas available in the United States, Canada and Mexico.

But in a joint communique, Carter and Trudeau, referring to the world oil shortage, said "increased energy self-reliance is a major objective of both ... governments."

North Florida Floods

PENSACOLA, Fla. (UPI) — A storm line dawdled along the Gulf Coast Saturday, spilling as much as 16 inches of rain, spinning off at least three tornadoes and touching off flash floods that forced thousands of persons from homes in two Florida Panhandle counties.

Terry Lockman, Red Cross director in Escambia County, said about 5,000 persons had to flee from homes in the Pensacola area. Most of them moved in with friends or relatives, but at one point there were about 1,000 persons taking refuge in public shelters.

At least two frame homes were swept from their foundations by flood waters on Pensacola's west side.

Authorities said damage to highways would be especially heavy. A number of city streets in Pensacola and to the west of the city were undermined by the water and the pavement was in danger of collapsing into the craters underneath. Much of the paving will have to be replaced, including that on busy Gulf Beach Highway, officials said.

Gov. Robert Graham declared a state of emergency in Escambia and Santa Rosa counties. The National Guard arrived to aid rescue work in the Pensacola area.

Rescuers in the two counties were hampered by power failures, phone outages, water and mud-blocked roads and at least one flood-contaminated water supply.

One Injury Noted

Several vehicle collisions, occurring Thursday and Friday on Greenville streets, resulted in an estimated $3,000 property damage and one injury, according to local police records.

A vehicle driven by Elma C. Wooten, 1214 Battle St., collided with a vehicle driven by Vicky D. McPhaul, 116-A Colonial Ave., about 11:56 a.m. Thursday at the West Third St. and Cadillac St. intersection.

Wooten, who sustained injuries in the collision, is in satisfactory condition at Pitt Memorial Hospital at this time, according to hospital officials.

Damage to the Wooten vehicle was estimated at $600 and damage to the McPhaul vehicle at $800.

According to local police, McPhaul has been charged with failure to stop at a stop sign, driving without an operator's liscense, and a hit and run resulting in personal injury.

On Friday, a vehicle driven by Sharon B. Faulkner, 229 Whitfield St. in Knightdale, collided with a vehicle driven by Ernest C. Averette III, Rt. 1, Box 118-G in Winterville, about 2:30 p.m. on Arlington Blvd. however, no injuries were sustained, according to police officials.

Damage to the Faulkner vehicle was estimated at $600 and damage to the Averette vehicle at $500.

According to local police, Faulkner has been charged with a safe movement violation.

In another collision Friday, a vehicle driven by Austin C. Daniels, 203 Woodside Rd., collided with a vehicle driven by Benjamin E. Thomas, Rt. 6, Box 344-A, about 11:42 a.m. at the Memorial Dr. and Chestnut St. intersection. However, no injuries were sustained, according to police officials.

Damage to the Daniels vehicle was estimated at $300 and damage to the Thomas vehicle at $200.

According to local police, Thomas has been charged with a safe movement violation.

House Fire

A two-story house on 404 S. Summitt St., owned by Dr. Carol Pace, sustained heavy smoke damage due to fire Saturday. Although the house was not occupied at the time of the fire, two firemen received minor injuries while extinguishing the blaze, according to Fire Chief Jenness Allen.

According to fire officials, the fire was reported at 10:23 a.m. and was under control within five minutes after firemen arrived at the house.

The fire apparently began in the kitchen on the bottom floor and then spread to an adjoining bathroom. From there, the fire spread throughout several rooms located upstairs and downstairs.

Cause of the fire has not been determined at this time, according to Allen.

Included on the agenda is consideration of a request from Flynn Home officials for funds to help rehabilitate the home; consideration of a request from Pitt County Fair officials for help on the livestock building at the fairgrounds; approval of additions to the county's solid waste ordinance and approval for the county to enforce subdivision and mobile home ordinances within the corporate limits of Simpson; approval of the final plat of McGregor Downs Subdivision, Section II; and consideration of the federal flood hazard insurance program and ordinance.

Commissioners will also consider designating the county fire marshal as liason officer with the rescue squads in Pitt, ordering educational booklets on county government, appointments to the Pitt Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees, and other items.

News Briefs

New Orleans Strike Ends

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Hours before Teamster leaders scheduled a vote on the city's latest contract offer Saturday, police officers returned to work and department officials declared an end to a 15-day walkout that ruined part of Mardi Gras and cost $1.5 million for emergency protection.

Police Supertendent James Parsons said more than 900 officers from a force of 1,400 were back on duty and whatever the outcome of a 6 p.m. contract vote, "the strike is over."

Storm Wipes Out Transmissions

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Heavy rain from a thunderstorm over an Australian tracking station Saturday wiped out more than three hours of radio transmissions from the Jupiter-bound Voyager 1 spacecraft 418 million miles away.

Reports from Voyager, which was 1.6 million miles from its close encounter with Jupiter Monday, resumed later in the day when Earth's rotation moved a ground station in Madrid, Spain, in range.

More than three dozen photographs of Jupiter's Great Red Spot and two of the planet's moons, Io and Europa, as well as a search for a sodium cloud around Io were lost because of the rain's interference with signals from the spacecraft.

17,000 Evacuated From Fire

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — A liquefied petroleum gas line ruptured in southeast Edmonton, shooting a tower of flame high into the sky and forcing the evacuation of some 17,000 residents from a 700-square-block area.

The evacuees took temporary shelter from the sub-freezing weather late Friday with friends and relatives or in nearby schools turned into emergency havens. There was no immediate word when they would return.

Home Rule Vote Fails

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP) — The failure to get enough "yes" votes in a referendum on home-rule plans for Scotland and Wales brought a risky national election closer for the struggling Labor government of Prime Minister James Callaghan.

Wales voted 957,000-243,000 against home rule in ballots counted Friday. One-third, or 1.23 million Scottish voters cast "yes" ballots, while 1.15 million voted no. But the affirmative ballots were still below the 40 percent of the total electorate the British Parliament stipulated.

Documents May Be Crucial

WASHINGTON (AP) — A defense attorney says classified documents may be crucial in the postponed trial of three former FBI officials if the documents establish links between the terrorist Weather Underground and foreign agents.

The defense lawyer, Thomas A. Kennelly, said if such foreign links are established, the warrantless break-ins the defendants are accused of authorizing may have been legal.

Kennelly made the comments to reporters Friday after a federal judge postponed the trial that was to have begun Monday.

Should Overhaul Food Laws

WASHINGTON (AP) — A complete ban on saccharin would not be a good move at this time, but Congress should overhaul the nation's food safety laws to better deal with similar controversies in the future, says a National Academy of Sciences panel.

The committee of scientists, lawyers and public policy experts said Friday the current food regulation system "has become complicated, inflexible and inconsistent," as highlighted in the saccharin controversy.

At Odds Over Oil Situation

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese government and some petroleum industry officials are at odds over the seriousness of the current oil situation to their nation, which imports 99.7 percent of its energy needs. The government is optimistic; industry men are not.

"We see the situation as it is and it's not as serious as some people might claim," said a Foreign Ministry official, who declined use of his name. "Of course, we will have to use up some of our oil stockpile, but that's what emergency supplies are there for."

May Seek Ruling On Tribes

EL CENTRO, Calif. (AP) — United Farm Workers leader Cesar Chavez, seeking support at an Arizona rally for a 6-week-old strike against lettuce growers, says the union may seek a court ruling on whether Colorado River Indian tribes can bar pickets from their reservation.

Chavez said Friday in Pheonix that the Indian tribes have blocked UFW picketing at Bruce Church Farms operations on the reservation near Parker, Ariz. He said the union may seek a court ruling on whether a reservation can be opened for commercial enterprise and still deny constitutional rights to freedom of speech and assembly.

Former GSA Official Convicted

BALTIMORE (AP) — Charles Phelps, a former General Services Administration store manager, has been convicted on charges of bribery, filing false claims and conspiracy to defraud the government.

A federal jury deliberated five hours Friday before convicting Phelps on 13 counts. It acquitted him of one count of filing false claims.

Phelps, 39, of Upper Marlboro, Md., was released on personal recognizance until sentencing, which is expected within the next several weeks. He faces up to 74 years in prison on the 13 charges.

Chinese Surround...

Chinese assaults forced Vietnamese defense forces to give up at least some of their positions in the steep hills, ranging up to 2,400 feet high, that encircle the town 10 miles from the Chinese border.

By late Friday, the Chinese had Lang Son completely surrounded, the sources said.

Intelligence reports were not clear whether the Chinese troops had actually entered the evacuated, shell-battered town, which once held about 40,000 inhabitants.

Pay Fines

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The U.S. tunaboat Don Juan has been released by Peruvian authorities after its owners paid $193,123 in fines, the American Tunaboat Association says.

NAACP Says Plan Will Meet HEW Requirements

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — North Carolina branches of the NAACP approved Saturday a plan that would meet the federal government's demand to further desegregate the University of North Carolina.

Kelly Alexander Jr. of Charlotte, vice president of the state NAACP, said the plan was presented because UNC hadn't come up with one of its own. He said it would be forwarded to UNC and federal officials and the state NAACP leaders would ask to meet with them soon.

Under the plan, the UNC campuses in the Triad and Triangle areas would become parts of two educational consortia. Each consortium would be responsible for admissions, students affairs, financial aid, records and registration.

According to the plan, all students who applied to enroll at one of the campuses would be listed according to their Scholastic Aptitude Test scores. Those who scored more than 900 on the combined verbal and math sections would be put in one group and their applications would be considered.

Those scoring 900 or less would be required to take a number of other tests designed to find out a student's motivationand chances for success, the NAACP suggested. These students then would be judged separately from those scoring over 900 for admission to UNC.

Alexander said the consortium method would make it easier for a student at one campus to attend classes or take advantage of classes or services at another campus.

UNC has until March 14 to present a desegregation plan that will satisfy the federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare. So far HEW has said UNC's plan is unacceptable, and if a good one isn't presented the 16-campus system could lose up to $89 million federal funds.

More Battles In Iran

By SAJID RIZVI

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Iran radio Saturday reported fresh gunbattles between followers of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and left-wing "counterrevolutionaries" in the northern city of Tabriz. A mob hacked three policemen to death in a southern town.

In Rafsanjan, another southern town, a "revolutionary" firing squad executed another police officer accused of killing two schoolboys and a villager in the anti-shah riots that preceded the revolution.

The capital was calm Saturday after sporadic gun batles in the downtown area Friday. But the new Voice of Islam national radio reported Khomeini's followers fought gunbattles with "counterrevolutionary" elements" in the city of Tabriz, near the Soviet border.

The radio said several "counterrevolutionary" gunmen were arrested but gave no further details. It also reported that Khomeini followers confiscated a number of weapons from left-wing groups in Ardebil.

Philosophy Chairman Resigns, Will Teach

Dr. John Kozy, chairman of the Department of Philosophy at East Carolina University since 1963, has resigned and will return to full-time teaching in the Fall.

Kozy, a Pennsylvania native was an honor student at Pennsylvania State University where he received his AB degree in 1957, a graduate fellow at Cornell University where he received his MA degree in 1959, and was a graduate assistant at Penn State where he received his Ph.D in 1963.

Kozy was an instructor at Penn State in 1961 and an assistant professor at the University of Mississippi from 1961 until coming to East Carolina as professor and head of the Philosophy Department.

A member of the executive council of the national honorary philosophy society Phi Sigma Tau, Kozy has published a number of research works in professional journals.

Kozy's resignation as head of the department is effective August 27.

He took a year's leave of absence from his duties at ECU during the 1975-1976 school year to work in Sen. Robert Morgan's office in Washington, D.C. where he wrote speeches and prepared research papers for the former chairman of the ECU Board of Trustees.

HEW Will Join Fight

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare will join the Rev. Jesse Jackson's fight against teen-age pregnancy by co-sponsoring a conference here, HEW Secretary Joseph Califano said.

Noting that more than 1 million of the 11 million teen-agers in the United States become pregnant each year, Califano said Friday his agency was co-sponsoring Jackson's Push for Excellence conference because "we think they (Jackson's staff) are the best." Califano announced the convention, scheduled for March 14-15 at the Shrine Auditorium, while addressing students at Jordan High School in Watts.

Blessing, Protest

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland (AP) — An ecumenical service will be held Sunday for the traditional blessing of the fleet as it prepares to leave for the annual offshore seal hunt, which begins March 10.

The five ships that will be blessed in the service are the Gulf Star, the Carino, the Arctic Explorer, the Arctic Endeavour and the Lady Johnson II.

Broadcast Dropped

DALLAS (AP) — An anti-homosexual sermon by James Robison, in which he called the gay movement a "perversion," has forced a Dallas television station to drop the popular evangelist's Sunday broadcasts.

David Lane, station manager of WFAA-TV, said he canceled Robison's programs because he believes the evangelist violated the Federal Communication Commission's Fairness Doctrine. Robison's program, produced at WFAA-TV's studio, is carried by about 85 stations.

Morgan Denounces U.N. Tobacco Cartel Claim

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Robert B. Morgan, D-N.C., has denounced a United Nations study that claims seven major American and British tobacco companies operate as a worldwide cartel, manipulating markets and paying millions of dollars in bribes.

The 205-page report, released to two North Carolina newspapers by Morgan's Washington office, was written in Geneva, Switzerland, by an employee of the U.N. Conference on Trade and Development.

Morgan, reached Saturday at his Lillington, N.C., home, called the U.N. report "vicious." He said he scanned the document, then gave it to aide Joe Kinney to read in detail.

"There is no specific evidence to support allegations about price-fixing and controlling leaf production and damn poor evidence to support the other charges," Kinney said.

"What this report does is just string together theories about cartels and monopolies in general and then tries to apply them to the tobacco industry specifically."

A spokesman for R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. of Winston-Salem, N.C., said the report "has so many innacuracies in it we didn't think it was worth any detailed comment at all."

The other six major firms named in the report — "Marketing and Distribution of Tobacco" — were American Brands Inc., Phillip Morris Inc., Gulf and Western Industries Inc., British American Tobacco Co., Imperial Tobacco Co. and the Rupert-Rembrandt-Rothmans Group.

It also named Lorillard Corp. and West Germany's Reemtsma Cigaretten Fabriken GmbH. as "lesser transnational tobacco conglomerates" whose $7 billion in combined sales "boost aggregate sales of the world oligopoly to around $39 billion."

The report said the companies compete only in the advertising of cigarette brands.

"While there is competition within the global oligopoly, there is also collusion, which finds its reflection in interlocking directorates, cross-licensing and mutually supportive brands," published accounts of the report said.

The report also said the seven companies control every step from growing tobacco to production and distribution of cigarettes worldwide.

It said the seven major companies account for more than 39 percent of the world's total cigarette production and claimed an "integral component of world tobacco marketing is global corporate bribery, or the 'pay-off complex,' involving millions of dollars."

While the document claimed the power of the seven firms is "exemplified" by price-fixing, published reports said it offered no hard evidence to support the claim.

"I can't say there's not a word of truth in it, but I don't believe their conclusion that seven companies control the flow and price of world tobacco," said Morgan, who declined to say how he obtained the report.

"They had no documentation to support the sharp rhetoric in it. If there's one thing I'm satisfied of, it's that there's very stiff competition in the world tobacco market."

Morgan said he did not know if the United Nations had made the report public.

Role For A Regional C-of-C

A new organization has come to life here in Eastern North Carolina.

Leaders from 43 counties gathered last week to form an Eastern North Carolina Chamber of Commerce, which will have its headquarters in Greenville.

R. W. (Woody) Harrison of Wilson was elected president of the group and Jerry Powell of Pitt County was named treasurer.

Spokesmen see the area chamber as acting as a voice for area interests of the eastern part of the state. The cooperative effort to obtain improvements to U. S. 264 was cited as the type thing which inspired the organization.

Financing will come from firms and industries and individuals who have an interest in the east as a whole.

We can see many ways the area chamber can be of service. Such an organization would have been helpful in the fights for better health service and health education which culminated in the establishment of the ECU medical school. It can also become involved in promotion of the travel industry in the east, which, as we all know has tremendous potential.

We have long seen the need for a unifying force to promote and point out our needs. The area Chamber of Commerce should not replace local chambers, but it could fill a large role in pulling together the vast resources of the east to solve many of our problems.

Indicative Carter Patience Strained

There is every indication that President Carter is losing his patience concerning the Middle East peace negotiations and probably his efforts to get the talks moving might be aimed at Israel.

The president had new talks with Prime Minister Begin of Israel, described as "frank" in diplomatic language. That is taken to mean President Carter is applying pressure to Israel to bend on some of the issues which have stalled the peace agreement.

Hopefully President Carter's efforts will be successful. Peace in the Middle East might be Israel's greatest chance for survival as a nation.

Then went up Moses again unto the summit, for verily, the tablets had been recalled by the factory.

Draining Patrol Strength

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Strange! While the evidence is overwhelming that driving 55 saves lives, and there is no argument that the slower speeds are essential to saving increasingly scarce fuel, the North Carolina General Assembly seems intent upon nibbling away at the ability of the State Highway Patrol to enforce the speed limit.

Reports from all parts of the state at various times confirm that violation of the speed limit is widespread and flagrant. Averages on Interstates are up to nearly 65.

On one weekend after a special federally funded project of overtime pay to put extra patrolmen on the road had expired, accidents shot up. The accident rate is apparently climbing again as speeds increase.

Yet, several disconnected legislative activities add up to what law enforcement officials regard as diminishing rather than aiding the speed control effort.

Cut Cars

There is strong opposition to highway patrol use of airplanes to help control speed.

Outlawing the fuzzbuster radar detection device which warns a speeding driver of patrol operations is on shaky ground.

There has been criticism of the $3 allotment to the retirement fund from each ticket paid off; complaining that this encourages officers to write more tickets.

No evidence is found of legislative intent to enlarge the patrol, allot more funds to it, or encourage beefed up activities by such steps as replacing the lost federal money for overtime pay.

Gov. Jim Hunt agrees that much of this activity in the General Assembly seems to be aimed at less speed enforcement rather than more; and stems from a greater concern over civil rights than highway safety.

"I would like to see more concern in the General Assembly with highway safety. Saving lives ought to be our primary concern.... ...rather than civil liberties. We ought to concentrate on stronger enforcement of the law, rather than less."

BILL NOBLITT

Battlefield

Apparently, the battlefield has been chosen on which Gov. Jim Hunt and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green can join: the proposed Math and Science High School.

That is a favorite project of the governor, and was put in the budget under the Department of Administration rather than Education in an effort to smooth the way. But Green is pushing for debate and serious consideration by legislators, instead of blind acceptance.

A little-noted report from experts that the school might cost up to $15 million per year is fueling opposition. The state budget would be about $6 million, with the rest from federal or private grants.

There is considerable mumbling about the $6 million which will be needed to renovate the Watts Hospital property at Durham which was donated for the school.

Local school boards generally oppose the facility on grounds it would draw away from local schools the cream of the crop, as well as drain some dollars from local budgets since students attending the specialty school would not be in attendance at home, and thus counted for purposes of state fund allocations.

Plans are afoot for full public airing under Green's guidance.

Sunday Morning Notes

Cloudy weather covered the eclipse of the sun over Eastern North Carolina and, for that matter, in the northwest where it was to be total last week.

Most of us had to see the spectacular event of nature on television.

Here in Pitt County the eclipse would only have been partial . . . hardly worth yawning about to those of us who were here on March 7, 1970.

Then, Pitt County was directly in the path of a total eclipse and it was touted for days as one of nature's greatest shows.

No one was disappointed. Many professional and amateur astronomers decided to make Greenville their headquarters for viewing the event. At East Carolina University arrangements were made to turn the field of Ficklen Stadium over to the visitors for setting up their unique array of telescopes and special camera equipment.

There was concern then, too, about the weather but it turned out that the sun was completely visible as the moon marched across its surface.

And what a show it was. At the moment of total eclipse, the day turned to night and the winds picked up as air temperatures quickly dropped. Street lights with sensors automatically came on, dogs barked and inevitably roosters crowed.

Tom Baines of "The Daily Reflector" described it, "For nearly three minutes early Saturday afternoon, Greenville and other areas on the East Coast were enveloped in a chilly, eerie resemblance of night."

"The rare, yet natural, phenomenon of a total eclipse of the sun was taking place. All elements of the solar happening, including desirable weather, fell into place in flawless fashion."

Those who had travelled hundreds of miles to Greenville to view the show were well satisfied as were local residents who were fortunate enough to be in the right spot at the right time.

Some were speechless and one Roanoke, Va. man caught up on the excitement, forgot to load his camera.

"Maybe next time," he said wistfully.

"If I just didn't have to wait until the film gets back to see what I got," another visitor lamented.

It was accurately pointed out that there would not be another eclipse until 1979 over Washington state, then not another in North America until the next century.

In this area there was no question but that we had seen one of nature's most exciting events. The moment of total eclipse was brief, but nothing can quite compare with the experience of being there at that moment.

Virus Is Not Extinct

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Epidemic smallpox has been wiped from the face of the Earth, but the virus has caused three outbreaks in Britain in the past 12 years, and the last time it left tragic melodrama in its wake.

The first and third time it happened at the University of Birmingham Medical School. The latest case history:

Janet Parker died from smallpox. Her father died from shock. Henry Bedson, the distinguished virologist who ran the lab, committed suicide by cutting his throat. He left a note saying he had let everybody down by ignoring basic safety procedures.

The medical school held stocks of the smallpox virus for study. Mrs. Parker worked as a photographer in the anatomy department.

The first outbreak in 1966 was also at the medical school and it was another photographer who was infected. He survived, as did five others he infected, but he was never named and there was no official inquiry to help improve safety standards.

In 1973, the second outbreak killed two: Thomas Hurley and his wife died after visiting a relative in a hospital where a suspect carrier of smallpox was being treated. They were never checked.

An inquiry revealed the virus escaped from the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, a world-renowed disease study center. As a result the Health and Safety Commission and the Dangerous Pathogens Advisory Group were established.

The labor union to which the 40-year-old Mrs. Parker belonged says the experts fell down on their jobs and demands a shakeup of laws covering health and safety at work.

A smallpox virus is so tiny that 300 million would fit into a square two-tenths of an inch across. The disease is transmitted by breathing; the Birmingham outbreak is the first known case of airborne spread from lab cultures.

40 Years Ago Today

March 4, 1939

D. H. Conley, superintendent of the Pitt County school system, returned last night from Cleveland, where he attended the annual meeting of the National Association of School Administrators.

Dr. L. R. Meadows and Dr. H. J. McGinnis of East Carolina Teachers College, also attended the meeting but returned earlier in the week. The sessions lasted from Sunday through Thursday.

House Judiciary Committee No. 1 has killed the Morris-Rasberry bill which opponents claim would have made stool pigeons of every garage owner in North Carolina.

The measure, introduced by two former sheriffs, would have required every garage owner to report to police repair work done by it on every car which appeared to have been in an accident or which appeared to have been hit by bullets.

The committee felt the bill covered entirely too much territory and put too much responsibility and work on garage owners.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Missed Saudi Connection

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Soviet hesitancy to butt into the hot war between China and Vietnam justifies President Carter's efforts to tighten the U.S.-Saudi connection — and demonstrates how critically dangerous it is that those efforts are misfiring.

Barring a major escalation in China's "bloody nose" war against Vietnam, Carter's men believe the Soviets will not attack China. Why? Because to get bogged down in China could jeopardize Moscow's riskless battle to end Washington influence in the Persian Gulf, the lifeline for oil to the West and Japan. "The gulf is where the Soviets get their hand on the Western throat," one cabinet member told us.

That analysis supports the wisdom of the president's strenuous efforts to reassure Saudi Arabia, the oil kingpin in the gulf. His message: collapse and withdrawal of U.S. power in Iran is no harbinger for Saudi Arabia.

Unfortunately, however, identifying the problem has not produced a good solution. Carter's commendable efforts have failed to tighten the Saudi connection. The adverse Saudi reaction to this failure will encourage anti-Arab, pro-Israel senators (including Sen. Frank Church, Senate Foreign Relations Committee chairman) to suggest harsh moves by the U.S. against the Saudis. At the same time, Moscow will be encouraged to redouble its Persian Gulf penetration efforts.

The immediate adverse Saudi reaction was the abrupt cancellation — for reasons having no visible connection with health — of the scheduled state visit to Washington by Prince Fahd, the Saudi strongman and heir apparent. Fahd cancelled purely for political reasons, the heart of which was growing worry in Riyadh that Carter does not understand the subtle signals from the Saudis.

The most important such signal goes back more than a year, when Saudi policy switched from a hostile position toward the radical government of Iraq, another state with immense oil reserves. The Saudis then began trying to detach Iraq from the extremist anti-Israel bloc led by Libya.

The Saudi game, played obliquely in the tradition of desert Arabs, was on the verge of success; Iraq was ready to resume diplomatic relations with the U.S. and support a "comprehensive" Mideast settlement with Israel based on the pre-1967 borders.

But what was perceived in the Arab world after the Camp David summit as U.S. approval of a "separate" peace between Egypt and Israel undercut the Saudi move in Iraq. This suggested to the Saudis that their American friends did not really understand the game in the Middle East.

Carter next betrayed lack of knowledge of Saudi attitudes by nominating Egypt for the pro-West security role in the Persian Gulf — the role filled by the toppled shah of Iran. This ignored a pertinent fact of history: wars waged in Yemen 15 years ago by Egypt's President Nasser terrified Saudi Arabia with the presence of six Egyptian divisions on the Arabian peninsula.

On his otherwise successful visit to the Mideast two weeks ago, Secretary of Defense Harold Brown talked of

Congratulations, Woody Peele. You won!

According to Wednesday night's newspaper, you and your editors placed a very high priority on informing the citizens of Greenville that Larry Gillman was no longer employed in the capacity of Head Basketball Coach at East Carolina University. That is a very heady news item for the front page of a newspaper in these strife-torn times of Mideast war, high inflation, gasoline rationing and other such trivia.

Methinks that possibly, Woody, you might have been caught up in a situation over which you wanted control, and Larry Gillman said, "Go fly a kite." Stick to reporting the facts about sports and you might, more often than not, sound like you know what you are talking about. Oh well, SMALL TOWN, SMALL NEWSPAPER, SMALL POTATOES.

Editor's note: The announcement of Gillman's resignation came in after sports pages had been completed and photographed. This is the reason the item was used on the front, rather than the sports page, Sports Editor Woody Peele indicated.

Strength For Today

LIFE DRAINING AWAY

Some people often turn the volume down on portable radios and then forget to turn off the switch when they put the radio away. The result is, of course, that the battery runs down.

In like manner, some lives are gradually drained of their vitality and significance. No one seems to be particularly conscious of what is going on, not even the person involved. But little by little, through compromise, laziness, taking the path of least resistance, the personality changes and the will power diminishes. One sinks first into weakness, then into corruption, and at last into a state of moral insensibility as marked as the deadness and unresponsiveness of a radio set which no longer has a battery.

Growth takes time, and decay also takes time. Years are needed to build a strong moral character, and years are generally consumed in the process of moral deterioration which brings one at last to frustration and despair.

Old Hands Stand By Stocks

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Yes, the stock market is still there, but like Billy Carter, it is considerably less obvious of late, exhausted after having caused another of those spasmodic commotions for which it is famous.

Too much else is going on anyway, and so its ordinarilly avid fans seem to have forgotten it. In view of high interest and international uncertainties and energy shortages, they ask, where can it go?

No matter that old pros claim to be loading up on bargains, as the legends tell us. No matter that the tiny, 8.1 price-earnings ratio of the Dow Jones industrial average, seems to confirm the bargain thesis.

Can such tempting prospects for distant gains compete with the glossy promises of the gold pushers? Isn't the vision of gold at $300 an ounce sometime this year more thrilling than a 10-cent dividend increase?

Gold has hardly lost its ancient luster, and every time it seems about to gather tarnish there comes a messiah proclaiming it to be the light to follow. It's a cult, the stock brokers say. But cults convert.

Some cult leaders, in fact, magically transmute the economic despair of their followers into gold in their own rather than client pockets. Geared to the despairing, their survival seminars are big money.

But not all those who despair of the stock market switch to gold. They moved to fixed income securities such as bonds, for example, or to the relatively new money market mutual funds.

The latter pool the funds of their shareowners and buy into securities yielding high interest returns. In January, $13.4 billion was held by these funds. A year earlier, the total was only $4.6 billion.

They're still growing swiftly. In January alone, says the Investment Company Institute, an industry group, $2.5 billion was added to their assets. And indications are that the trend continued in Feruary.

Farsighted? Hard to say. But Merrill Lynch Economics, which has a pretty fair reputation, foresees the prime rate, the commercial paper rate and the three-month bill rate plunging in 1979.

All those are short-term rates, the kind favored by the money market mutual funds. But M-L also expects declines in long term rates, such as for mortgages, and for corporate, municipal and government bonds.

While nobody can say where the stock market is headed, it wouldn't be surprising some day to see returning to stocks the prodigal children who fled into gold, the survival cults and fixed-interest securities.

They will come, say the old hands on Wall Street, when stocks are back in favor. When they are "in." And when anything is in, they say, those trying to get in are simply out. It's too late..

Connally Is GOP Force

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — Former Texas Gov. John Connally, recently announced presidential candidate, has moved into third place among the choices of Republicans to be their party's standard-bearer in 1980.

Connally wins the support of 12 percent of GOP voters nationwide, asked to choose from a list of 15 persons. Continuing to lead the pack, but now by a narrower margin, is former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, who wins the support of 31 percent of Republican voters. On Reagan's heels in the latest survey, with 26 percent, is former President Gerald Ford whose 1980 presidential intentions are still unknown. Fourth behind Connally is Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee with 8 percent.

By way of comparison, the previous rankings, based on a survey conducted in early December, showed Reagan leading with 40 percent, Ford next with 24 percent, followed by Baker with 9 percent and Connally with 6 percent.

These four men continue to dominate an already crowded field of GOP presidential aspirants. One major reason for their prominence in this regard is their high name recognition. Ford and Reagan are, of course, familiar to nearly all Republicans. Well over eight in 10 know who Connally is and six in 10 are able to identify Baker.

Survey respondents were handed a card with 15 names listed and asked:

"Which one would you like to see nominated as the Republican candidate for president in 1980?"

Choices For 1980 GOP Nomination

Reagan	31%
Ford	26
Connally	12
Baker	8
Percy	3
Crane	2
Thompson	2
Anderson	2
Richardson	1
Bush	1
Dole	1
Haig	1
Kemp	1
Ray	1
Don't know	7

To determine where Reagan's support would go in the event he decides not to run, his vote in the survey was distributed to the other persons on the list on the basis of second choices. The new line-up shows Ford leading with 36 percent of the choices of Republicans, followed by Connally with 18 and Baker with 13 percent.

Here is the list with the vote for Reagan distributed to the other candidates on the basis of second choices:

Choices For GOP Nomination (With Reagan vote redistributed)

Ford	36%
Connally	18
Baker	13
Dole	3
Haig	3
Kemp	3
Anderson	2
Bush	2
Crane	2
Percy	2
Ray	2
Richardson	2
Thompson	2
Weicker	1
Don't know	9

Similarly, if Gerald Ford eventually removes himself from the race, here is how the figures look when Ford's vote in the survey is allocated to the other candidates on the basis of second choice:

Choices For GOP Nomination (With Ford vote redistributed)

Reagan	43%
Connally	16
Baker	9
Percy	4
Anderson	3
Dole	3
Bush	2
Crane	2
Richardson	2
Thompson	2
Haig	1
Ray	1
Weicker	1
Don't know	10

The results reported today are based on personal interviews with 339 Republicans out of a total sample of 1,512 adults, 18 and older. The interviews were conducted in person in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period Feb. 2-5.

Egyptian-supplied military security, unaware of sensitive inter-Arab politics. The Saudis listened uneasily, without vigorous objection but thinking long thoughts.

That was compounded by a symbolic error unwittingly made by Brown. In defending the U.S. record of standing up for friends and allies, Brown referred specifically to President Harry Truman and the Truman Doctrine. Truman is remembered in the Arab world for only one act: recognition of Israel as a sovereign state. To non-Arabs, Brown's faux pas seems ludicrously irrelevant; in Riyadh, it was a punch in the nose.

Brown's unintentional slight followed unhappy predictions by other cabinet members after earlier visits to Riyadh. Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps angered the Saudis by predicting that their oil fields would be pumped at rates the U.S. wanted. Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal also generated Saudi wrath by predicting the Saudis would protect the U.S. on oil prices.

Against this record, Moscow is offering Saudi Arabia full diplomatic recognition plus a secret guarantee to "neutralize" Soviet-influenced-Marxist South Yemen. Prince Fahd will have none of that — at least, not for the foreseeable future.

But the Saudis, as well the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, know that Moscow will need Mideast oil by the early 1980s. They also know the battle to influence the Arab oil states is on in dead earnest.

The overwhelming Saudi preference is to continue the historic alliance with the U.S., which Moscow is bent on breaking. Thus, the sudden cancellation of Prince Fahd's visit is a portent of trouble stemming not from Carter's good intentions but from the poor way they are being carried out.

As I Recall It

One Of Most Prominent In Central Prison

By NOEL YANCEY

(Noel Yancey retired recently after 39 years of covering North Carolina news for the Associated Press. In this column, he retells some of the big stories he recalls.)

Back in the early days of the great depression there were bankers and other financiers jumping off tall buildings. Others went to prison. Col. Luke Lea was one that went to prison.

Lea, the scion of two of Tennessee's most prominent families and a U.S. senator at 31, was by all odds the most prominent man ever sent to prison in North Carolina. He owned a newspaper publishing empire in addition to banks and was known in Tennessee as the "maker of governors."

Lea went to prison after one of the hardest fought legal battles in state history on charges of conspiring to wreck the Central Bank and Trust Co. at Asheville. He entered Central Prison only after his case had been appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court three times. He had served nearly two years on his six to 10-year sentence when he was paroled by Gov. J.C.B. Ehringhaus on April 2, 1936.

Also serving prison terms in the collapse of the Asheville bank was Lea's son, Luke Lea Jr., and Wallace B. Davis, president of the bank.

In paroling Lea, Ehringhaus called attention to his excellent prison record. He served in the prison hospital as a nurse and orderly and later as general clerk. He was reported to be a devoted nurse.

Upon his parole from prison, the News and Observer observed that it was the first time in nearly a decade that there was not a banker among the Central Prison population.

Lea was also a World War I hero who won world-wide fame as the man who attempted to kidnap the German kaiser. When the U.S. entered the war, Lea was commissioned a colonel by a friendly Tennessee governor. He proceeded to recruit a regiment of Tennesseans that became the 114th Field Artillery. It saw action on four sectors in France, and its leader was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal.

Shortly after the armistice that ended the war, Lea and several of his men startled the world by attempting to kidnap the kaiser who had fled to Holland. They actually entered the kaiser's castle at Doorn and were preparing to seize and make off with the former German ruler when Dutch guards came rushing to his assistance.

As a result, Lea was relieved of his command for a month by Gen. John J. Pershing, commander of the American Forces in Europe. Lea never told exactly what happened or what he planned to do with the kaiser if he had succeeded in capturing him.

Following the war, Lea resumed his work in Tennessee as a newspaper publisher, building a chain of five papers in Knoxville, Nashville and Memphis and again took an interest in politics.

About this time, he became associated with Rogers Caldwell, a Tennessee financial wizard and together they built a tremendous financial structure.

But when the depression hit late in 1929, the Lea financial empire started to fold. Lea's labors to save it from complete collapse got him involved in a series of manipulations which were climaxed by the $17 million failure of the Central Bank and Trust Co.

Fame Of Ann Peace As Tattoo Artist Is Wide

Facing South

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Every tattoo on Crusher Brewer, wrestler, was put there by Ann Peace. Guy L. Ward, ex-Navy man, and Bear, a motorcyclist, will tell you the same thing: Nobody touches them with a tattoo machine but Annie.

"She's better than me," admits Ann's husband, Eddie, who founded Eddie's Tattoo Parlor on Broad Street over sixteen years ago. None of the gaudy signs out front mention Ann Peace, but that doesn't seem to matter. Everyone asks for her.

The entrance-way to Eddie's Tattoos is well worn by millions of foot-steps; the pavement is shiny, cracked. And at night, the neon sign blinks out TATTOOS.

"I don't do too much talking," confides Eddie. "The only thing I have to say is right here," and he points to the sign on the wall: EDDIE PEACE TATTOOING SINCE 1934 KNOWN AND RECOMMENDED ALL OVER THE WORLD. GOOD WORK AND BRIGHT COLORS I APPRECIATE YOUR BUSINESS. Which is next to a red, white and blue sign advising: KEEP AMERICA BEAUTIFUL, WEAR A TATTOO.

Ann and Eddie met in 1943. He taught her the trade and they've been full partners ever since. Their son LeDan and his wife began working with Eddie and Ann in 1962, and plan to carry on the business when they retire.

While we sit talking, Guy L. Ward comes in. He already has several tattoos, and now is ready for Wylie Coyote. Ann rolls up his sleeve and wipes his arm down with alcohol, then vaseline. She powders the design and places it on the arm, leaving an imprint. Using the tattoo machine, Ann outlines the design in black. "The needle goes 1/64th of an inch into the skin, just enough to draw blood. That's the only way the tattoo will take."

I look into Guy's face to see if it hurts. He grimaces at me, then smiles.

"You don't feel anything?" I ask.

"Well it stings a little bit. Hell, what you expect, son?...I got my first tattoo when I was eleven."

When she finishes the line, Annie rubs it down again and Guy moves to a seat next to LeDan, who will add color. A tattoo takes ten days to two weeks to heal. It will be about three months before the full color emerges.

"Sometimes we tattoo forty people a day," Ann tells me. "I couldn't imagine how many I've done in all...."

The number of women getting tattoos has increased greatly in recent years, according to Ann. "I guess three out of every ten people we see now are women...I get a lot of women from Florida who've had breast surgery. The doctor sends them up here to have an outline made of the breast and nipple. Then they return to the doctor and he builds them a new breast. That's getting very popular. It's called Cosmetic Tattoing and I think it's the most interesting thing I've ever done.

"I've tattoed cats and dogs, once an Alaskan Malamute. A vet had to put him to sleep. I put a Red Devil on his stomach and I really didn't want him to move.

"Once, I had a Cuban man come in and tell me he'd been real sick for a very long time. He said he told God that if He cured him, he'd have His picture put on his chest! So I did it for him."

Ann explains the types of tattooes she offers. "The Oriental is done with a five-inch ivory tooth-pick. You dip it in ashes and pick. Also, there's the Jail House Tattoo that's done with a straight pin and matches. And, the Razor Blade Tattoo. You have to bleed to get the color. Tattoo is an abrasion of the first layer of skin, like a scratch. But we don't have anything crazy like tattoos that glow in the dark."

As I am leaving, a group of tough-looking bikers come in. One says it's his buddy's birthday and he wants to buy him his first tattoo. Bear chooses "Harley Riders are Forever" and while Ann applies it, he stares awestruck at the $300 2'x1' biker pattern displayed on the wall. "Ain't that something," he murmurs. "You can see the tread on the tires, even the gas lines and the color of the guy's eyes!" Ann smiles, shakes her head, and keeps working.

IF HE CAN JUST STICK TO THE HIGH ROAD--

By GAIL MICHAELS

Intellectual Growth In A Whole Box Of Candy

Time equals money in our fast-paced society, but most of us parents are willing to give freely of both these commodities in order to insure the physical and mental well-being of our children. We read to them by the hour. We take them on nature hikes which add greatly to their already extensive collections of sticks and nuts. We buy them expensive educational toys which they usually ignore. And we give them self-perpetuating dancing and swimming lessons, they have to take another set so that they won't forget what they have already learned in the first set.

The last sacrifice I made for Meg's intellectual development was a trip to the movie, "Dr. Doolittle." I didn't exactly relish the thought of spending my Saturday afternoon in a dark theatre, but I kept telling myself that this would be one experience that would really expand Meg's horizons. I kept telling myself this as I stood in line for thirty minutes in the freezing cold while Meg stuffed my pockets with landscaping rocks.

I kept telling myself this as I stood at the concession stand for 20 minutes while the weight of the eight little boys who were pinning me against the counter stopped the flow of blood through my legs.

I kept telling myself this when the theatre was jam-packed and the only seat left was smeared with Junior Mints and had a pool of Coke on the floor in front of it.

And from the steady barrage of questions that Meg asked during the movie, I was right.

"Which one is Dr. Doolittle?" she asked. "Did that monkey wash his hands before he cooked dinner? Why is it raining on them? Why did she grab that dog? Did the storm make the boat fall apart? Why is he pushing that wood through the water? Why did that man tie them to a tree? Are all sea snails pink?"

She also provided a running commentary on the parts that interested her most, like poor Dr. Doolittle's stay in jail and the heroine's beautiful dresses. She may not have been quiet, but she really paid attention, and the impact that the movie made on her was astounding. At one point she even flung her arms around herself and sighed dramatically, "O-ooooo, she kissed him!"

Needless, to say, I was satisfied that the outing had been worthwhile. It didn't matter that she had knocked a box of buttered popcorn all over my wool coat or that she had had to go to the bathroom during the last five minutes of the show. I felt sure that the impression she took away from this outing would more than make up for any inconvenience that I had endured. And I was dying to hear her tell her daddy all about it when she got home.

"Daddy, Daddy, we saw Dr. Doolittle!" she screamed the minute we walked in the door.

"Did you enjoy it?" he asked.

"Yes!" she exclaimed. And do you know why?" As I stood proudly waiting for her to elaborate, she opened her eyes and mouth as wide. as she could and threw out her arms. "Because Mommy let me eat a whole box of M&Ms!"

Expect Little Effect In Pressuring Congress

BY JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Most of the state governors have been in Washington this week — a number of state legislators have been here, too — and most of the talk has been about the BB amendment and its several ramifications.

By the BB amendment, of course, is meant the movement to submit an amendment to the Constitution that would require the federal government to operate on a balanced budget. The ramifications involve the possibility of a constitutional convention to draft such an amendment. Most of the speculation focuses upon the prospect that Congress may forestall a convention by proposing a resolution of its own.

My own guess, for what it may be worth, is that little will result from these several streams but a veritable Niagara of oratory. Twenty-eight states reportedly have adopted resolutions under Article V, applying to Congress to call a constitutional convention; the magic number is 34. But many of the petitions are conditional — they ask for a convention only if Congress fails to act — and others are defective in other ways.

A dramatic scenario admittedly can be put together: Thirty-four petitions to Congress can be counted. The Congress refuses to do its duty and call a convention. The aggrieved states ask the Supreme Court for relief. The Court orders a convention held and creates the machinery itself. Delegates are elected, the convention meets, and eventually the convention submits half a dozen proposed amendments to the states — balanced budget, abortion, busing, pornography, prayer in public schools, and limited terms for members of the House and Senate. The whole country would be up to its collar bones in constitutional law.

It all sounds pretty far-fetched to me, and this is not to put anything past the judges. If judges can compel New Jersey to raise taxes, if judges can turn themselves into school superintendents, if judges can reapportion state legislatures and make a president give up his papers, well, then, judges could fashion a whole constitutional convention. But don't hold your breath till it happens.

What is far more likely is that Congress will itself respond in one way or another to the pressure the states are applying. Hearings will be held this month on some of the 20 or 30 different resolutions that already have been intriduced. Most of these resolutions are so clumsily drafted that a James Madison, reading them, would weep tears of dismay. The worst of the lot, sad to say, bears the aegis of my favorite economist, Milton Friedman of Chicago. He would write into the Constitution a wordy provision that if inflation in a given year exceeds 3 percent, "the permissible percentage increase in total outlays shall be reduced by one-fourth of the excess of inflation over 3 percent," and so on. ans so on. This is not constitutional language, this is statutory language, and it has no place intin the supreme law of the land.

A number of proposals suffer from the same fault. Some of the sponsors who would mandate a blanced budget want to dot every "i" and cross every "t." Some of those who would limit expenditures want to tie federal outlays to a specific percentage of the gross national product. Sen. Bob Dole (R-Kan.), for example, would fix a ceiling of 18 percent of GNP. Rep. Stephen Neal (D- N.C.) proposes 20 percent. The actual figure for last year was 22 percent.

The best of the sorry lot are the brief resolutions sponsored in the Senate by Harry F. Byrd of Virginia and in the House by Delbert Latta and Chalmers Wylie, both of Ohio. Their drafts at least have a consititutional ring to them. They would say flatly that Congress shall assure that in any fiscal year, the government's total out lays must not exceed total receipts; their proposals would permit Congress to suspend the requirement by a two-thirds or three-fourths vote.

My guess, as I say, is that we will have hearings, and we will have talk, and that ultimately procrastination will prove the better part of valor. As a working goal, a regularly balanced budget is a splendid goal. The polls indicate that Americans overwhelmingly want to curb federal spending. If the states' pressure succeeds in achieving staturory restraints, wonderful! But if the end is constitutional amendment, let us make haste in boots of lead.

Gas Prices In America Still A Bargain

By WILBORN HAMPTON
United Press International

Even at $1 a gallon, U.S. motorists still would be getting a bargain on gasoline compared with most of the world.

A Sunday drive in the French or Italian countryside already costs about three times as much as visit to an American grandma's house. And prices are expected to go up in France and Italy, among other places, as well.

Although prices per liter converted from foreign currencies into dollars per gallon vary according to daily exchange rates, the Portuguese have the dubious distinction of paying the highest prices for gas: $2.62 per gallon of high-test on Saturday.

But the Israelis, Indians, Rhodesians, French and Italians all are paying close to that price, and may break the record any day now.

Apart from the United States, the only places in the world where gas currently costs less than $1 a gallon are the OPEC nations, whose citizens drive around on top of the petroleum reservoirs.

In Saudi Arabia, for example, residents of Jeddah pay nearly 10 times as much for a gallon of water than for gasoline — a gallon of premium goes for 24 cents at the pump, compared with $2.24 for a gallon bottle of drinking water at the grocery store. The prices are about the same throughout the Arabian peninsula.

Mexicans pay roughly the same as Americans for their gas — about 68 cents a gallon for premium. In Venezuela, the price is 32 cents a gallon for high octane and in Indonesia a gallon of premium goes for 42 cents.

Israel and South Africa — two nations who had depended on Iran for most of their oil — have increased gas prices by 30 to 40 percent since the revolution in Iran. Israelis now pay $2.51 a gallon while South Africans have been hit by two price hikes in two months and now pay $1.82 a gallon.

In Iran itself, strikes by oil workers during the anti-shah revolution halted Iranian oil production, creating shortages even for Iranians. Although gas prices in Iran were affected, they still were lower than U.S. prices.

In Rhodesia, where gas already is rationed due to international trade embargoes and the black guerrilla war, gas is $2.50 a gallon and may go up.

Europe also pays high prices. A gallon of premium gas anywhere in France, Italy, Portugal, Spain, Greece, Austria, Yugoslavia, Belgium, Holland or Finland costs more than $2.

NCAE Not To Get Involved

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The North Carolina Association of Educators announced Saturday it won't represent employees of private schools and colleges in collective bargaining talks.

The decision was prompted by a request from employees of Barber-Scotia College in Concord that NCAE serve as a bargaining agent for them.

NCAE President C. Stewart Stafford said the association believes it cannot legally represent the private educators. The association also is prohibited from bargaining collectively for public school education employees, he said.

Issues Intervening Order

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A U.S. magistrate has issued an order allowing the N.C. Black Student Movement to intervene as defendants in a reverse discrimination suit brought against the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill by two students.

In his order, Magistrate Russell Eliason denied similar requests by the Minority Law Student Association, the N.C. Association of Black Lawyers, Black Student Movement and two students, Larry Donnell Springs and Robin Best.

Eliason said the N.C. Black Student Coalition could adequately represent the interests of all persons who could be adversely affected by the outcome of the case.

$13.3 Million Approved For School

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A budget for the North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics which includes $3.3 million in state money and $10.3 million from other sources, has been approved by the board of trustees of the new institution being set up by the administration of Gov. Jim Hunt.

At a meeting Friday, the board also was told that the list of applications for the position of school director has been narrowed from 106 to five. Dr. Quentin Lindsey, science and public policy adviser for Hunt, said after the meeting that at least one of the five is from North Carolina.

Taking Offensive

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Winston-Salem City Manager Orville W. Powell is taking the offensive in his effort to stop a drive by the Teamsters union to organize the city's police department.

At a news conference Friday, Powell said the union's momentum has been stopped. "Information has come back that there haven't been any additional union cards signed since Monday," he said.

Almost $700 Million

By United Press International

Industrial investments in North Carolina amounted to almost $700 million during the first two months of this year, according to a report made to the state Board of Economic Development.

The board was told Friday 74 industries announced plans to locate new plants or expand existing facilities in the state.

The total investment is four times higher than the first two months of 1978, but half the total involves the construction of a $350 million, medium-sized oil refinery in Brunswick County.

Members of the economic development board's staff said the new industrial investments announced in January and February would create almost 5,000 new jobs.

Meanwhile, officials in Davie County have confirmed that Radio Corporation of America has purchased land for a plant that reportedly will make wooden cabinets for television sets.

Although no details of the proposed RCA plant were released, Glenn Howard, chairman of the Davie County Commissioners, and Mocksville Mayor R.C. Smith said they were given sketchy information and initially sworn to secrecy.

According to records, Crown Wood Products Co., a Delaware firm, has purchased a 25-acre site just outside Mocksville for a price of $125,000.

However, county officials have been instructed to send the property tax bill to an RCA official in New York.

She became ill Aug. 11 but did not enter East Birmingham Hospital until Aug. 24.

On Sept. 1, Bedson's wife found her husband near death in a garden shed, his throat cut. On Sept. 5, Mrs. Parker's 77-year-old father died of a heart attack. An inquest was told he never recovered from the shock of the events and his quarantine. On Sept. 6 Bedson died. On Sept. 11 Mrs. Parker died. On Sept. 14 her mother was diagnosed as a smallpox case, but survived.

The Shooter report revealed that Bedson, 49, regarded as one of the best virologists in Britain, was corresponding with WHO about the safety of his lab. In April, Dr. Iao Arita, head of the smallpox eradication campaign, assured Bedson that the benefit of his study exceeded the "minimal risk" involved.

However, after an inspection for WHO on May 4, Dr. J.H. Richardson, director of the Office of Biosafety at the federal Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga., wrote: "The laboratory falls short of the WHO standard and should be upgraded to meet the standard or discontinue work with variola smallpox at the earliest possible date."

Bedson replied that "the risks must be minimal" and as his smallpox work was being wound down it would be "expensive and very costly in time" to upgrade safety. However, he had just received 22 strains of virus to study, increasing the work of his lab tenfold.

Hours before he disagnosed smallpox in Mrs. Parker, Bedson mailed a letter to WHO promising to improve lab safety but reiterating he could not meet WHO standards.

To be effective, vaccination must be renewed every three to five years. Mrs. Parker had gone 12 years since her last shot.

In 1967, with 2.5 million smallpox cases in more than 40 countries, the World Health Organization began mass vaccinations. One study center supervised by WHO was the Birmingham medical school.

By 1977 the campaign was so successful that WHO reported from East Africa the world's last natural infection of smallpox: Ali Maow Maalin, 23, a hospital cook who survived the disease in Merka, Somalia. Ready to announce the end of the disease in 1978, WHO was stunned by the British outbreak.

Professor Reginald A. Shooter, a bacteriologist at London University, was appointed by Health Secretary David Ennals to investigate.

He eventually concluded that some of the virus escaped Bedson's lab July 25 through a service duct and Mrs. Parker inhaled it on another floor of the building.

Easy Work

SEATTLE (AP) — Wanted: Person to be paid $150 a week as center of attention.

Only qualification: Sleep eight hours a day under glass as an exhibit at the Pacific Science Center.

"We're serious, even if it sounds kind of funny," Dennis Bartz, the center's director of design and exhibits, said Friday.

The center has advertised for someone to go to bed between 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. as part of "Dream Stage — Portrait of a Sleeping Brain." The exhibit is scheduled to run from April 20 to June 9.

"We haven't hired anyone yet, but we found one gentleman who happens to work in one of Seattle's restaurants, gets off and works in a bakery, then sleeps during the day."

The person would climb into bed, have wires attached to his head and fall asleep. A $250-a-week technician would act as a scientific guardian angel.

Greenville-Wilson Freeway Increasingly Nearer Approval...

cooperation with one another and have the road run where the traffic engineers say it should go.

"If we don't join together, we will lose our chance," he suggested.

Highway Department traffic engineers had proposed— but the Highway Commission had rejected — a plan that would build one freeway from Raleigh, that would intersect with U.S. 17 south of Williamston, running between Wilson and Rocky Mount, and passing to the South of Tarboro, Bethel and Robersonville. Feeder routes could be developed from Greenville, Washington, Rocky Mount and Wilson so the four-lane corridor could serve the major population centers of the East.

Even though contracts were let and construction begun on the Zebulon-Wilson Freeway in 1974, still no firm planning had started on a Greenville-Wilson four-lane route. So in 1975, a group of interested citizens joined together to form the Highway 264 Association and present a united front in seeking a freeway from Wilson to Greenville and on to the Coast.

In an effort to plan what was the best approach — construct one corridor to serve Wilson, Greenville, Rocky Mount, Tarboro, Williamston and Washington, or to four-lane both U.S. 64 and U.S. 264 — the Department of Transportation contracted with a consulting firm to conduct a study and recommend the best course of action.

That study, done by W. S. Pollard Consultants, Inc. of Memphis, Tenn., resulted later in 1976, in recommendations to four-lane both the U.S. routes. The Pollard study said a middle route between the two major east-west arteries would not solve the area's transportation problems.

The Pollard study, along with continued pleas from area residents for improvements, led to the inclusion of the four-lane Wilson-Greenville project in the State's Transportation Improvement Plan in 1978.

The project gained momentum when another consultant was hired to prepare an environmental impact statement and public hearings were held to help determine where the four-lane road should go.

At those hearings in November — one in Saratoga and another in Greenville — several alternates were considered. One was to make no improvements to U.S. 264 — a "no action" alternative. Another was to upgrade the existing roadway by adding two additional lanes along the present route. The other alternate was to construct a freeway type road along a new corridor roughly paralleling the present highway which would bypass Saratoga and Farmville.

At those hearings, Transportation Secretary Tom Bradshaw termed the U.S. 264 project, "the number one priority project in North Carolina...the number one priority project of the Governor's administration."

Speakers at the hearings — from Greenville, Wilson, Washington, and the Highway 264 Association — expressed support for a freeway-type highway built along a new corridor, rather than widening the present route.

Farmville area residents, however, urged the use of the present five-lane bypass at the southern edge of the town and expressed opposition to a possible relocation of U.S. 264 to the North.

Ed Davenport, who for 10 years served as president of the Farmville Economic Council, said, "we are concerned about the location. We don't want to lose our identity," and become another Bailey, Sims or Middlesex — towns that were bypassed by the Zebulon-Wilson freeway.

"Farmville doesn't want to be a ghost town on a Wilson-Greenville freeway. We want to be Farmville on a Wilson Farmville-Greenville freeway," Davenport emphasized.

Early in February, "The Daily Reflector" learned that the Department of Transportation staff would likely recommend to the Board of Transportation something less than a fully controlled access route between Wilson and Greenville.

Under consideration was a recommendation that a freeway be constructed between Wilson and Farmville; that the new roadway connect to the present Farmville bypass; and U.S. 264 from Farmville to Greenville be widened to four lanes, along its present route.

"That was one of the things that was looked at," Rose said last week after the planning board approved the freeway concept. However, he indicated that the decision to recommend a fully controlled access route to the Board of Transportation, was based on the need for a new bypass at Greenville. The present bypass is no longer a bypass and can't handle increasing traffic loads.

Rose explained that at the same time the planning board approved the freeway concept, it also approved a study of a new Greenville bypass, "to tie down the location," which would take U.S. 264 traffic to the north of the city.

What actually happens to the proposed Wilson-Greenville freeway, and to the bypass at Farmville, as well as the planning for a northern route around Greenville, is up to the Board of Transportation.

The proposed freeway is only a staff recommendation. Approval of the Board of Transportation is required to make the plan a reality. The recommendation is expected to be presented to the board at a meeting in Raleigh, March 9.

If the freeway is approved, the roadway could be located anywhere within the proposed 2000 foot-wide corridor. The exact location would depend on information gathered at corridor public hearings and detailed design of the new roadway. The final right-of-way limits for the freeway would be from 250 feet to 400 feet wide.

Cost of the proposed 29.4 mile freeway project has been estimated at $51.5 million. Highway officials estimated that the present route followed by U.S. 264 could be widened to add two additional traffic lanes at a cost of $22.3 million.

Widening the present route, DOT officials estimate, would cause 156 families and 24 businesses to be relocated, while building a freeway on a new corridor would displace from 19 to 34 families and, at the most, two businesses.

Questions

WHAT IS THE PROCEDURE?
Money is loaned to the church by members and friends. In return, the church issues Church Bonds, payable to the bearer, maturing at 6-month intervals over a period of 14½ years.

WHAT SECURITY IS PLEDGED FOR THESE BONDS?
The church binds and obligates itself that it will not sell nor incumber the church's equity in the property to render it impossible to meet its obligation to the bond holders. If, for any reason, the church should fail to meet its obligation as to the bonds, the property could be sold for the benefit of the bondholder and the other creditors, if any.

WHAT PROVISION IS MADE FOR THE PAYMENT OF THE BONDS AND INTEREST?
The church agrees to deposit into a special account in its bank a sum of money each week, which is calculated mathematically to be sufficient to pay the bonds and interest thereon when due.

WHAT ASSURANCE IS THERE THAT THESE DEPOSITS WILL BE MADE AS CALLED FOR?
The church by resolution has ordered it. The treasurer has a signed agreement that he will deposit it in the special account. A number of the members of the church agree to see that the treasurer performs this agreement.

WHAT INTEREST DO THESE BONDS BEAR?
The bonds bear interest at the rate of 9% per annum. The interest is payable semi-annually and is evidenced by the coupons attached to the bonds.

WHERE ARE THE BONDS PAID?
Both the principal and interest on the bonds are payable at the church. Bonds and interest coupons, when they are due, are payable at the church out of the special account referred to above.

MAY THE BONDS BE SOLD OR TRANSFERRED TO SOME OTHER PERSON?
Yes, they are bearer bonds, negotiable, and may be sold or transferred.

CAN THE CHURCH REDEEM THE BONDS BEFORE THEY MATURE?
Yes, the church may redeem all or any of the bonds at any interest paying period upon 30 days written notice.

IS IT NECESSARY FOR THE BONDHOLDER TO CASH HIS INTEREST COUPONS ON THE DUE DATE?
No. The bondholder may wait until they are all due, but is encouraged to collect the interest as the coupons mature.

Will Introduce N. C. Crime Victims Compensation Legislation

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Victims of crime in North Carolina who find their finances depleted because of the crime could receive monetary compensation for their suffering through legislation that will be introduced Monday by Sen. Katherine Sebo, D-Guilford.

The bill would provide money for compensation and assistance to victims of crime and to the families of people killed in violent crimes.

The bill would establish a yearly budget of $750,000 for the program, and pending federal legislation to support state programs would cover 25 percent of this cost, Mrs. Sebo said.

"When people incur severe financial hardship because of bodily injury or when a family suffers financially because of the death of a person as a result of violent crime, they should be reimbursed for their loss," Mrs. Sebo said.

The money would be used for medical expenses, lost wages and replacement services.

"The program would apply only if all collateral sources, including restitution, have been exhausted," she said.

Under the bill, no payment would be made if a victim's economic loss is less than $100. Payments for work loss and replacement services would not exceed $200 per week, and the maximum reimbursement available under the bill would be $10,000 per victim.

Schools

The State Board of Education wants nearly $200 million more for its budget for the public schools over the next two years. A request for the money was made Friday to the Joint Appropriations committees that are hearing supplemental budget requests from all state agencies.

The board wants an extra $88 million for the first year of the upcoming biennium and more than $104 million for the second year for increases in some salaries, more clerical positions, more teachers and counselors, more textbooks, and a statewide data processing system, among others things.

Teachers

A bill that would create a uniform salary index schedule for the public schools' professional personnel was filed by Rep. Dave Diamont at the request of the North Carolina Association of Educators.

One uniform salary schedule bill has already been introduced in the House, and it provides for further advancement for support personnel and principals and administrators. Diamont's bill would provide a scale more favorable to teachers.

Custody

By final approval of the House, the General Assembly enacted a law Friday that brings North Carolina under the Uniform Child Custody Act.

The law provides that a North Carolina court authorized to decide child custody matters can determine who will have custody of the child after certain residential requirements are met, if the child has been abandoned or neglected in the state or if no other state has jurisdiction over the child.

But the law prevents the state from deciding custody if a custody suit is pending in another state. It also says a court may decline to decide a custody matter if the petitioner has wrongfully taken the child from another state.

Pet Boa Constrictor Nearly Got Roasted

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Some cultures consider cooked snake a delicacy, but Cathy Mahaley came closer than she knew to roasting her pet boa constrictor.

It wasn't Ms. Mahaley's fault. When her six-foot snake, Reba, disappeared about a month ago, Ms. Mahaley searched her house from top to bottom but gave up on ever finding her pet.

Friday morning, Ms. Mahaley noticed her two cats peering into the living room fireplace. She investigated and discovered Reba's tail hanging down from the fireplace.

The rest of Reba was snaked behind the backwall of the fireplace.

Ms. Mahaley grabbed on but, not wanting to hurt Reba, she didn't pull too hard. She sat on the living room floor for an hour, holding on.

"I just kept hanging on. I didn't want to let go but I didn't want to hurt her either," said Ms. Mahaley.

She called the fire department, but "they thought it was funny. They probably thought it was a prank."

But she called a newspaper, and Ms. Mahaley and a reporter managed to pull Reba free, none the worse for a month's stay.

Anti-Oppression Bill Introduced By Helms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said Friday he has introduced legislation to protect colleges and universities from what he described as oppressive federal regulation.

The bill, titled the Academic Freedom Act of 1979, would have a direct affect on the controversy between the University of North Carolina and the Department of HEW, Helms said. He said it would reduce the power of HEW to cut off federal aid to UNC and prevent HEW from insisting that the university end certain programs at its institutions.

If approved, the bill would:

—Restrict federal regulations to those programs and activities of a college that receive federal assistance directly, rather than to the college as a whole.

—Restrict the power of an agency to terminate assistance to a program which does not comply with federal rules to that program alone, and not the college as a whole.

—Require that federal agencies file an education-impact statement with each new rule the agencies make affecting universities. The statement would assess how much time and money it would take for the school to comply.

—Allow colleges that receive less than 5 percent of their current annual funds from federal assistance to be exempted from many federal regulations.

Helms said that the millions of dollars colleges and universities spend implementing federal regulations could be better spent providing aid to low-income students.

Boy's Club Training Sessions Scheduled

Training dates for campaign workers for the drive to raise $500,000 to finance a new Boys' Club building in Greenville have been announced.

The training sessions will begin at 5:30 p.m. on two dates, Monday and Tuesday, March 5 and 6. These will be held at the campaign headquarters, 218-C Arlington Boulevard.

Austin Britt, campaign chairman for the Boys' Club Development Fund, encourages all campaign workers to attend either of the two training sessions being offered. Each session will last approximately 45 minutes.

The campaign opens officially on March 8. The first contribution to the building fund, one for $25,000 pledged by the Optimist Club of Greenville, will be used to memorialize the Junior Gamesroom of the club, which will be named the Optimist Club of Greenville Junior Gamesroom.

Hunt To Attend

Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr. will attend as a guest the appreciation dinner honoring Dr. John A. Prichett at 7 p.m. Monday at Williamston High School.

Prichett, a lawyer from Windsor, is presently serving as representative for District One of the State Board of Education of N.C.

Seven part-German shepherd puppies need homes. Six are male and one is female and all are healthy pups. Call 758-0873.

Also needing a home is a three-month-old male mixed-breed puppy that will probably grow into a medium-sized dog. He followed a man home and will make someone a terrific pet, the man said. He may be reached at 752-4972.

The Pitt County Humane Society seeks adoptive homes for animals. Those wishing to adopt a pet or place one for adoption may call Mrs. Jeanette Fiore, 756-8413.

State Programs

Artists Recruiting Program

RALEIGH — The N. C. Arts Council is recruiting artists to take part in the Artists Training Program, a pilot project designed to help emerging artists.

A total of 16 apprentice artists — performing, visual and literary — will be employed around the state in two increments — April through September, and October through March, 1980.

Apprentices must meet all CETA Title I eligibility criteria. Applications and supporting materail must be submitted no later than March 23. Apprentices will be paid $3.44 per hour for 40 hours per week.

The portion of the program for employment of masters will pay a $3,000 stipend to conduct an average of about eight hours of instruction per week.

Interested persons are to send for applications and other materials to: N. C. Arts Council, Dept. of Cultural Resources' Raleigh, N. C., 27611. (Telephone 733-2821).

Architectural Grants

RALEIGH — Grants for architectural and archeological inventories of counties and town, ranging from $8,000 to $50,000 will be avaialble for fiscal year 1980, according to Larry E. Tise, state historic preservation officer

These funds must be equally matched by local funds and may include inventories of whole regions, counties, towns, or smaller areas such as central business districts or neighborhoods. Matching funds can come from various sources, including community development funds and revenue sharing.

Information and applications are available from: Lloyd Childers, 109 E. Jones Street, Raleigh, N. C., 27611 or by phone, 733-4763.

Measles Shots To Be Given

By REBECCA BUFFALOE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Schools System will be sending out parental consent forms Monday, March 5, to parents of approximately 900 children in the county system who have not been vaccinated for red measles.

The county Board of Education voted Tuesday, Feb. 27, to require the vaccination after a recent measles outbreak in the Charlotte school system.

The form, which states some basic facts about measles as well as the vaccination, will be sent home via children to be returned Tuesday with the parents' signatures.

Wednesday, staff from the Pitt County Health Department will visit various schools, giving the vaccinations with "jet gun" applicators.

Assistant Superintendent Leck Keeter pointed out that children may bring a medically authorized document to show they have already received the measles vaccination.

Children who received the measles vaccination before age one will also be required to receive the vaccination.

"If parents have any doubts about their child's immunization record, they should call the health department or their family physician," said Keeter. "It will not harm children to have another vaccination."

Children who have been screened as not having the needed vaccination and do not receive the vaccination Wednesday, will not be allowed entrance to school Thursday, March 8. Children will be allowed to go back to school only after obtaining the vaccination from the health department or a private physician.

Requirements for the red measles shot in the county schools was entered in 1971. However, many older children and transfer students have come into the school system without the necessary shot.

"Only eight percent of our students have been found lacking this shot," said Keeter. "This is just a precautionary measure."

Dr. Robert Ehinger, director of the Pitt County Health Department, says that he has no personal knowledge of any red measles cases in the county schools this year.

He added that there would be no cost for the vaccinations, either at the schools Wednesday or the health department.

If persons have more questions about the immunizations, they should call their child's school or the health department.

Suarez' Union Winners

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Premier Adolfo Suarez' victorious Union of the Democratic Center Party will try to govern alone until 1983 despite lacking a parliamentary majority.

Although Thursday's election left the Centrists nine seats short of a majority in the powerful 350-seat Congress of Deputies, a party spokesman said, "We don't see a need to form a government of coalition with any group."

Suarez' supporters said he probably would have to deal for the necessary majority each time legislation comes up.

The premier's party held off an expected Socialist charge and won 167 seats in the lower house, two more than it won in the 1977 election.

Felipe Gonzalez' Spanish Socialist Workers Party remained runners-up with 121 seats at the lower house, a loss of one from 1977.

The Communists of Santiago Carrillo won 10 per cent and picked up three seats for a total 23, while Conservatives of Manuel Fraga, a minister in the government of the late Gen. Francisco Franco, dropped to nine from 16.

A new constitution, approved by voters in December, orders Parliament to convene before March 26 and give King Juan Carlos the name of the man charged with forming a new cabinet.

It will be Suarez, a former minister under Franco and whom the king picked in 1976 to build a democracy in Spain after 40 years of Franco's rightist dictatorship.

The UCD won 15 seats more than needed for a majority in the 208-seat Senate, but the upper house of the Cortes can only delay legislation.

Inflation, unemployment, mounting political terrorism, and regional self-rule will be among Suarez' major tasks.

Venezuelan Doctor Relates Attitude Differences

By STUART MORGAN
Reflector Staff Writer

Most educated persons today, when sick or injured, feel comfortable visiting a city hospital to see a doctor whom they have never even met before.

However, the uneducated and poverty-strickened persons living in the jungles, rural areas, and along the coast of Venezuela (a small country in the northern part of South America) feel different about the matter.

In fact, they often prefer to die at home with their friends and relatives nearby rather than seek help from doctors in distant or nearby cities.

Not trusting such doctors, whose terms and remedies seem strange and unfamiliar, they often remain in their little communities to take care of themselves and receive help from nearby friends and relatives.

Guided by community beliefs and superstititions handed to them from generations before, they believe their home remedies to be the "proper" and all other remedies and persons recommending them to be "strange."

In fact, they believe that a person does not go to the hospital in the city to recover, but instead, that they do so only to die.

"Interaction Between Scientific Medicine and Folk Medicine" was the topic of a lecture given Thursday at the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

The lecture, which included slides, was given by Dr. Jorge Villegas, professor of biophysics at the Venezuelan Institute of Scientific Research.

Villegas graduated from the University of Venezuela in 1959 and in 1961 received his doctorate in medical science.

In his lecture, Villegas pointed out that people with training in scientific medicine today encounter numerous difficulties when they work with people who have their own methods of dealing with and taking care of various diseases.

"There is a culture which does not include science, but does have great knowledge of the natural world," explained Villegas. "People must learn from those people if they are to be able to communicate with them."

In addition to the lack of sanitation, food, water, and jobs, persons living in the jungle are untrained and also are bitten by snakes, attacked by jaguars, and stricken by various diseases, according to Villegas.

However, they prefer the hazardous jungle to the cities because they consider it to be "their place." In the cities, they are treated as "nothings," explained Villegas.

"They would rather trust somebody who lives the way they live and carries on the same activities they do," said Villegas. "If the physician does not acknowledge the existence of such things (their beliefs) they feel he does not have sufficient training."

In other words, Villegas explained that physicians in such areas should learn what the people feel about their diseases and how they take care of them.

By doing so, doctors will be able to diagnose the various ailments the way they do. That would allow the doctor to be accepted by such people.

"They want physicians to know the things they know," added Villegas.

He also pointed out that tenant farmers in various areas of N.C. also practice folk medicine similar to that of the persons in Venezuela.

"Physicians in this area must be able to deal with such people, regardless of whether you think they're right or not," added Villegas. "These people have a different culture; they just happen to be poor.

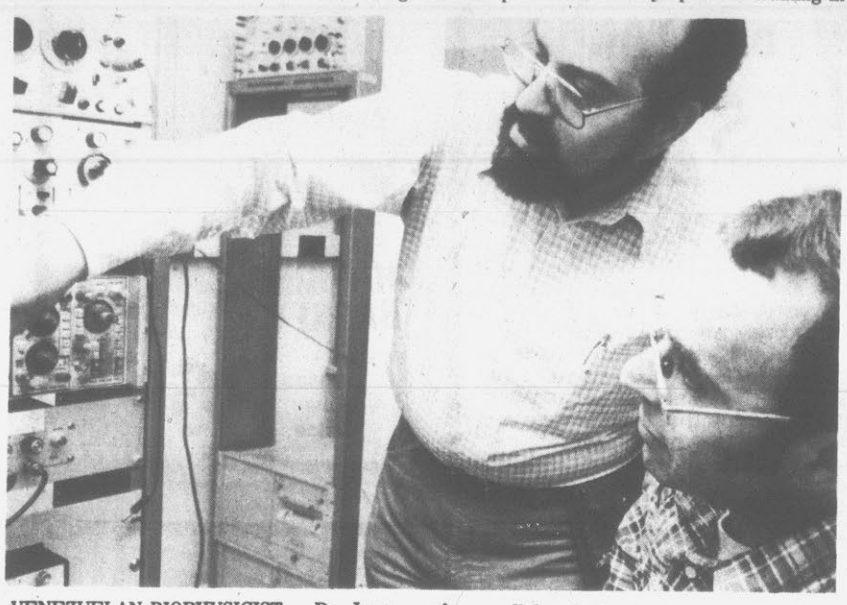

"They don't have an education, and as a result, they don't have scientific medicine."

Villegas, who has had close contact with such people in Venezuella and is able to communicate with them, said that in the future he plans to be in a position to help medical students learn to communicate with persons practiciing folk medicine.

Villegas is currently in Greenville visiting the physiology lab of Dr. Edward M. Lieberman, East Carolina University School of Medicine professor.

Last summer, the two researchers collaborated on a project involving fundamentally important nervous system cells at Villegas' lab in Venezuela.

At the beginning of last week, they presented the results of those studies to the National meeting of the American Biophysical Society in Atlanta, Ga.

Rose High Students At Washington Event

Five Rose High School students are among 400 students nationwide who have been taking part in a week long Presidential Classroom in Washington, D. C. during the latter half of February.

During their week in Washington, the young men have been engaged in intensive in-depth study of government and political affairs through direct contact with government leaders and Washington observers.

Programs in which they are involved include seminars at which national decision-makers discussed the operations and responsibilities of the Federal government.

Three of the Rose High students attended the study program for the period Feb. 24 to March 3. These are:

— Edwin Hardy is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Ira Hardy, Sr. He played on the football team at Rose for two years, and is a member of the French club. An older brother, Ira Hardy, Jr., attended the same program several years ago when he was a student at Rose.

— Thomas Spencer (Skip) Hill, III, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Spencer Hill, Jr., is a baseball player and is also active as a crew member and a sharpshooter in the Greenville Rifle Club. Hill in addition belongs to the Key Club, the French Club, and the Anchor Club.

— Herb Ormond is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Ormond, Jr. A junior, Ormond is active in the Key Club and as a sophomore was a member of the Student Government Association. He is interested in mathematics, history and economics and enjoys water skiing, boating, and basketball.

The other two students attended an earlier program during the period Feb. 12 to Feb. 17 and are:

— Charles Christian (Chris) Ross, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Ross. Active in sports, Ross plays tennis, baseball, and basketball. He is the winner of several awards for creative writing, both in poetry and short stories.

— Garret P. Young is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Pinkney B. Young and is an Eagle Scout. In sports, he plays football, and other activities include membership in the Teen Democrats and the Key Club.

Was Drama Consultant At Bethel Elementary

By REBECCA BUFFALOE
Reflector Staff Writer

When Jimmi-Ann Carnes came to a Farmville school with a touring company of "Mystery of Roanoke Island," she never dreamed that she would be asked to return to Pitt County as a drama consultant for Bethel Elementary School.

"Miriam Harris (Pitt County Schools' Supervisor of Cultural Arts) and Roscoe Locke (Bethel's assistant principal) just picked me out of the cast and asked me if I'd be interested in coming to the schools as a drama consultant," said Ms. Carnes, Carnes, a former teacher, will return to Manteo for her fifth summer with the acting troupe in "The Lost Colony." She received her degree from Winthrop College in South Carolina.

"I've had a delightful time," Ms. Carnes said of her three-day visit with the school children this past week. "The kids are learning through doing."

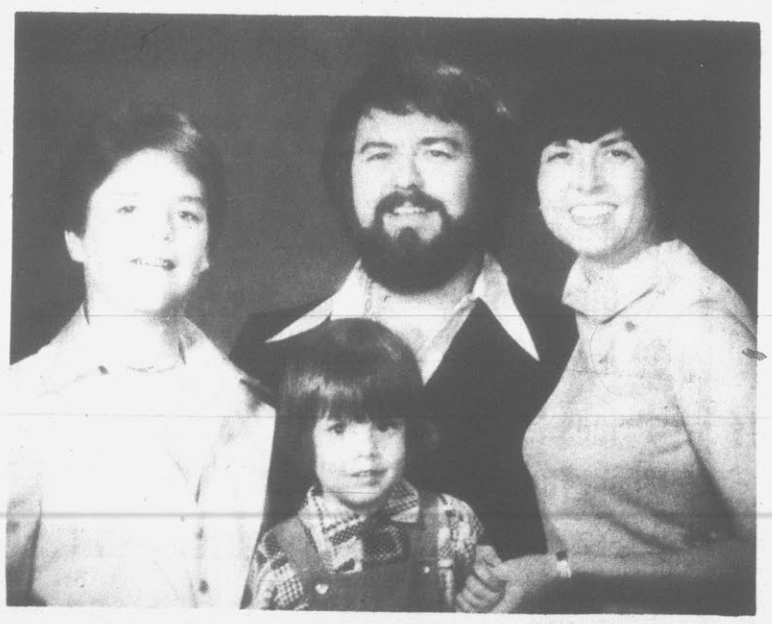

According to Locke, all 24 homeroom classes at Bethel had a chance to work with Ms. Carnes on the history of drama, as well as hear about the "ups and downs of show business."

"I've done some creative dramatics, mime, body movement, voice, just a little bit of everything," said the young actress.

A special part of Ms. Carnes' visit was working with Bethel Elementary's Drama Guild, giving pointers on costumes, diction and stage fright before the Guild's May production of "Monster Soup," a comedy written by Tim Kelly.

"The children have been very attentive and responsive," said Ms. Carnes. "One class ran up and tried to hug me. We've had a good time."

Undimmed By Years As Prisoner In China

By JAMES V. HEALION

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — The 20 years John Downey spent in Chinese prisons was a "pretty boring interlude — stretches of uneventful humdrum time," but the Korean war spy says most people could manage it and not go crazy.

The question as to how he was able to do it is the one friends often ask Downey, an easygoing man of 48 whose smile and soft voice mask a powerful build, and a resolve the Chinese were never able to breach.

Downey said he did his 20 years "one day at a time."

He was a 22-year-old student on scholarship at Yale, a wrestler, and a guard on the football squad in 1951 — the son of a probate judge and the grandson of an Irish saloonkeeper from Wallingford where the clan includes Morton Downey, the popular tenor of yesteryear.

Downey was recruited off the Yale campus as a $4,000-a-year Central Intelligence Agency equivalent of an Army second lieutenant, and shipped to Ft. Benning, Ga., for three months' training. Then he went to Japan for his long trip into the cold.

He helped groom Chinese for resistance movements in their homeland and supplied them by clandestine airdrops. He and Richard Fecteau got aboard a C-47 at Seoul's Kimpo airport and were heading for a rendezvous in Manchuria when they flew into a trap and were caught Oct. 30, 1952.

They were tried after two years for what he recalls as "inciting armed riots." Downey got life imprisonment and Fecteau, now assistant director of athletics at Boston University, 20 years. They were separated but spent time in the same prison later. "I'd know his footsteps anywhere, or his cough," Downey says.

"It's not that easy to go nuts, despite people's thoughts. You just keep your sanity and I think most people would. If you had to do it, you probably could do it.

"That is, spend 20 years in a foreign prison.

"Relatively few people are called on to do it, but I think people are a lot tougher than they give themselves credit for," Downey said, talking at length about his confinement, which he called a "a blank book," in 1973.

But now he is in public life, a lawyer, and a politician who finished out of the money in a crowded field last year in a bid for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor.

Now a Harvard Law School alumnus — he enrolled six months after his release and graduated at 45 — he is married to Audrey Lee, 39, a Chinese-born Yale biochemist. He is Connecticut's secretary of business regulations. He advises divisions of banking, liquor, public utilities, consumer counsel and insurance, and acts as a liaison between them and the office of Gov. Ella T. Grasso.

Reflecting on his years in prison, he said he kept his wits by keeping busy.

"I worked around the cell, studied Russian, exercised, read a lot and sewed, and I've got 10 thumbs. You've got to do a lot of housekeeping chores which are very welcome.

"For a while, I was kind of a semi-trusty, mopping corridors, cleaning toilets. Once in a while, it snowed, not very often — and I welcomed the chance to shovel snow. But I never had a steady job, a work assignment. I just kept busy.

"My most renowned project was washing my quilted jacket (Downey is a size 46) — I took it apart piece by piece, washed it in an earthenware bowl in the cell with a couple of buckets of hot water, and then I sewed it back together." He did the same with his cap and his blankets.

He passed time "one day at a time," and found it better than "looking down the vast corridors of time. I just think I learned a certain amount of patience.

"My concept of time altered a little. I remembered when I went overseas, I thought, 'Two years — my God! That's endless.' I found out two years isn't much at all."

The Chinese gave him no credit for his courage, a quality shared by his late mother, Mary V. Downey, 79, a school teacher from New Britain, Conn. She made four trips to China to visit him and lived to see him return through the efforts of then-Gov. Thomas J. Meskill and President Richard M. Nixon.

"The Chinese were puzzled why I was in good spirits... I remember once or twice that subject came up and they found it hard to understand why I was in good spirits.

"But I think they took that as evidence of reform and that was a sign of good attitude on my part. They might have been concerned that I didn't believe in the reality of my life sentence.

"They might have been afraid I was nurturing illusions I was going to get out some way. They're very strict. If you're on the bad guy's side, they don't appreciate anything about you in principal.

"They don't admire their enemy's courage. They look on the bad side. The better you are, the worse you are — in a sense."

He said that he found no matter how they pressured him ideologically or treated him with scorn and contempt, "I had a certain sense of myself that couldn't be reached no matter how low I sank.

"I still had a certain corner where I knew who I was and where I came from. I wasn't about to accept their judgment of me as a human being or of our country.

The Chinese kept him supplied with all kinds of Communist Party reading material, as well as English classics. He would get an occasional New York Times Book Review section and he now praises an independent American weekly newspaper called The Guardian for its in-depth analysis.

He was able to figure out what was going on in the world even if it was belated. An advertisement on a sports page suggested that man had walked on the moon. That ad came to him 18 months after the epochal event.

He readjusted easily to today's society, although rock music, dress styles, and driving on Interstate 91 for the first time were shockers. He has no regrets, no nightmares. And no alarm bells, as he did in prison.

For those entering confinement, he says:

"I only know that if you fight it, you can really wear yourself out. You had to come to terms with how life is and your position in it. It's something you can tell somebody and expect them to act on it.

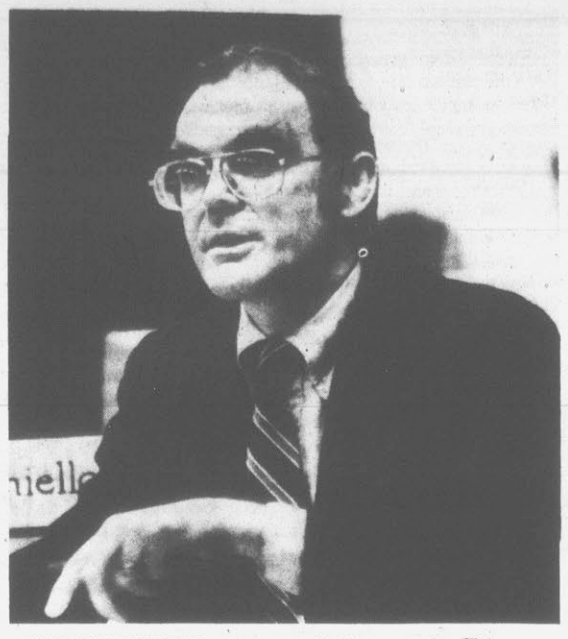

"You have to learn it the hard way. For the first several years I was waking up every day really frustrated thinking they're taking another day from me. I'm another day older.

"In a sense it's a form of feeling sorry for yourself, maybe with very good reason. But that's what it is. I think you just have to toughen up or fall apart."

He did not.

Downey was paid a salary with increments in escrow throughout his confinement. "I had a life sentence. You don't get much satisfaction from the thought of spending that money if you're going to be 90 and unable to enjoy it.

"I would have been willing to trade the salary for my freedom at any point in the 20 years."

Hydroponics Deliver When Snow Covers Area

By MARK D. FRANK

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (UPI) — A "total control" growing system that produces salad vegetables year-round for consumers in this upstate New York city, usually buried under snow from November-April.

Most Americans probably would associate General Electric with light bulbs and home appliances but it has been in the vegetable business for several years and has developed a hydroponics system of raising plants and vegetables indoors in liquid mineral solutions.

Navy personnel in Argentia, Nfld., are recipients of GE's research, too. Three 12-by-42 feet trailers, using the GE-developed system, provide them with their oversized "military" salads all year-long.

Officials say process may revolutionize vegetable production.

"This has fantastic potential," says GE engineer Lewis Fogg, "particularly in countries where there are problems with plant disease."

Presently, GE sells tomatoes under its Geniponics trademark at Syracuse area markets and restaurants.

Hydroponic vegetables mature in less time than greenhouse-grown, or field-grown crops. Tomatoes go from seeds to harvesting in 10 weeks and continue to produce for 14 to 16 weeks.

Compared with greenhouse crops, GE officials are getting 20 times as much lettuce, nine times as much tomatoes, and six times as much cucumbers, measured in pounds per square foot of growing area.

The comparison with field-grown crops is perhaps even more startling: forty times greater for lettuce, 30 times greater for tomatoes and 50 times greater for cucumbers.

"They taste just as good, if not better, than anything grown in the garden," said Fogg, manager of the controlled environment agriculture operation.

The project was developed in the corporation's Electronic Systems Division in 1972 when certain government contracts became limited.

"The division had been doing military systems work for many years," Fogg said. "Starting in 1972-73, government contracts for radar and sonar became rather scarce. A task force was organized to look at the possibility of taking the systems approach to solving some problems in agriculture."

The first production module, a growing chamber 14 feet by 20 feet by 13 feet, was completed in March 1973. A series of growing tests were conducted on tomatoes, lettuce, cucumbers and radishes, in which electric lamps were used as the prime energy source. The lamps were placed outside clear plastic, but engineers discovered the plastic reflected 30 percent of the light.

"We found the rooted crops, such as radishes, weren't helped by the controlled environment," Fogg said.

The engineers redesigned the facility, put the lamps inside, covered them with thicker, but highly reflective plastic and stopped growing rooted crops.

In December 1973, GE began feasibility tests on salad vegetables and ornamental plants, such as geraniums and ferns. About three years later, GE began studying the economics of each crop and decided to build four production modules, 50 feet by 80 feet.

Construction was completed in December 1977 and the planting began.

GE began marketing Geniponic tomatoes in various supermarkets and "better restaurants" in the Syracuse area in March 1978.

"We found that housewives were totally dissatisfied with tomatoes in winter because they're shipped in from California, Mexico and Florida and they're picked green," Fogg said. "They don't have a chance to formulate vitamins and taste.

"We pick our tomatoes red ripe and deliver them in three hours. The response has been very favorable. They're decidedly better than the ones shipped in."

The plants are grown in open-topped troughs without soil. A thin film of recirculated nutrient fluid trickles through their roots from one end of the trough to another. The troughs are mounted on five-tiered, Christmas-tree type racks so that the vertical as well as the horizontal dimension is filled, to take advantage of all the carbon-dioxide enriched atmosphere.

Since the racks are moveable, space for only one aisle is needed. Workers enter the facility through airlocks.

The crops are of uniform quality since they aren't subject to the stresses of weather. The system can be adjusted to produce varying tastes.

Geniponic tomatoes are priced "about 30 cents over whatever else is on the market," Fogg said. Prices ranged from $1.59 a pound in November to 69 cents a pound in summer.

But Fogg believes the quality more than makes up for the cost to consumers.

"I know the consumer is willing to accept the higher price," he said.

Considering higher quality and including energy requirements for the lights, Fogg said the tomatoes are cost-coopetitive with those shipped in. He said this is because "you can produce seven crops of tomatoes in a year compared to two crops in a greenhouse and one for a farmer working in the fields.

"The yield is higher, too. We can grow nine times as many as a field farmer and we've increased the Vitamin C content by 30 percent."

Though GE has marketed only its Geniponic tomatoes, the company also grows cucumbers and lettuce in the four modules located in the 16,000 square foot area.

GE is spending the first eight months of 1979 studying its growing and marketing methods and will conduct a series of experiments.

"What we're trying to do is pin down the production cost," Fogg said. "We know it will be economically viable in the Northeast and North Central part of the country."

Fogg said similar systems exist in Alaska and Sweden, there is interest in them in Middle East oil countries and Canadian representatives are expected to come to Syracuse this year to discuss hydroponics.

Nutrition Week Being Observed

"Set the Pace! Take the Food Way for Good Nutrition" is the theme of the seventh annual National Nutrition Week, March 4-10.

Approximately 36,000 dieticians and nutritionists affiliated with the American Dietetic Association will sponsor the week-long observance, using the symbol of good nutrition, "Nutribird," to carry the message of good health through sound nutrition practices.

"Exercise and a sound diet are the cornerstones of good health," said Loraine Nobles, president of the North Carolina Eastern District Dietetic Association. She also noted that good nutrition and regular exercise can help cut health care costs.

Ready Monday

Pitt County Manager Reginald Gray said Friday that the Farmville solid waste container site will open at 12:30 p.m. Monday.

The container site is the fourth such facility to be opened in the county as part of the solid waste disposal plan.

The first site was opened last year on the County Home Road near Bell's Fork, while the second site was opened west of Greenville on the Stantonsburg Road. A container site is also operating at the landfill behind Greenwood Cemetary in Greenville.

The container sites provide area residents with a place to dispose of their solid waste without having to travel to the county landfill.

Local Student On Dean's List

WINSTON-SALEM — Elizabeth Whitehurst of Greenville has been named to the Dean's List for the fall semester at Salem College. Ms. Whitehurst is a junior at the college.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Whitehurst Jr. of 1712 Forest Hills Dr., Greenville.

WARNS OF CONFLICT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Griffin B. Bell says members of congress may be involved in conflict of interest if they exert pressure "on behalf of their constituents in an inordinate manner to obtain grants or loans or contracts for them."

Winterville Bd. Meets Monday

WINTERVILLE — Highlights of the Winterville Town Board of Commissioners Monday, March 5, 7 p.m., is as follows:

— A public hearing will be held on the granting of a non-exclusive franchise to Greenville Cable TV, Inc.

— Guidelines will be discussed concerning the rehabilitation project funded by Community Development monies.

— Information will be presented by Bill Forrest, developer, on a proposed street opening between Weathington and Roberson Heights.

-- Wayne Harris of the Mid-East Commission, will present information on a 701 grant for planning purposes.

— Discussion will be held on the naming of a new Safety Director.

Could Value-Added Tax Sub For Social Security?

By LeROY POPE
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sentiment for a value added tax as a replacement for the social security tax and possibly to reduce both the corporate and individual income levies appears to be building slowly in Washington.

The value added tax is a hidden sales impost levied at many different levels of manufacturing, processing, distribution and services.

There also is support for the VAT among some academic and business economists who are impressed by its overall success in Britain, France, Germany, Italy, the Scandinavian countries and the Soviet Union.

On one thing there appears to be universal agreement, that the VAT raises revenue faster than any tax ever discovered.

Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal said recently that the VAT should be given a thorough airing but that he didn't think Congress would be seriously inclined to take action on it before 1981 at the earliest.

The present impetus is coming mainly from Sen. Russell Long, D-La., head of the Finance Committee, and Rep. Al Ullman, D.-Ore., head of the Ways and Means Committee.

Prof. Richard Lindholm of the University of Oregon, who has been one of Ullman's mentors on the question, told UPI he believes the VAT to be inevitable in the United States.

Because the social security tax now accounts for 30 percent of the federal government's revenues and is the most continuously and painfully visible of all taxes, it is hardly surprising that the idea of replacing it with the hidden VAT is starting to appeal to politicians.

But Lindholm would like a VAT that would replace the corporate income tax or at least see it integrated with the individual income tax as is done in Germany by giving stockholders credits on their personal income tax for their pro rata share of the corporation's taxes.

Lindholm does not believe in a profits tax for business which enables a corporation that does hundreds of millions of dollars of business but does not make a profit to escape federal taxation. Under the VAT, all companies would be taxed much alike whether thay made a profit or not.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wisc., has been campaigning for years against the corporate income tax on the grounds it is inflationary because it penalizes efficient companies and rewards the inefficient, thus discouraging productivity. Many economists and businessmen believe enhancing productivity and capital formation is the only real way to end inflation.

Curiously though, Proxmire is opposed to the value added tax as an alternative on the populist grounds that it is regressive — meaning it bears hardest on persons with low incomes and least on the wealthy.

Organized labor in the United Sates consistently has opposed the VAT on the same grounds but Prof. Gerard Brannon of Georgetown University says regressiveness should not be the decisive factor in considering the VAT. He says the tax's admitted regressivness easily can be offset by giving big tax credits to low income families. Lindholm pointed out that this is done in some of the European countries that depend on the VAT for their revenues.

In fact, the relative ease of giving tax credits and exemptions under the VAT always has been one of its advocates' chief arguments.

For example, it is easy to rebate or waive the VAT on exported goods and thus reduce their selling prices and make them more competitive in world markets. All the European countries that have the VAT do that.

On the other hand, it is next to impossible to rebate the corporate income tax on exports. So it is claimed the corporate tax is a major cause of the mounting U.S. foreign trade deficits.

But the big reason the VAT is not likely to make early headway in Congress is that a lot more heat than light will be shed on the subject, at least in the early months of discussion.

Georgetown's Professor Brannon said, despite his warm support of the principle of the VAT, he would not like to see it replace the corporate income tax. He said that would be politically impossible anyway.

He recalled that during the years between 1913, when the original corporate income tax was only 1 percent, and the Roosevelt administration, corporations retained billions of dollars of earnings without paying taxes on them. He said this was of great and unfair benefit to their rich shareholders.

Brannon also asked UPI if boxer Muhammed Ali should be allowed to retain all his huge purses without paying taxes on them simply by incorporating himself.

"Why," he asked, "should incorporated businesses escape taxes on their profits if unincorporated businesses are taxed heavily under the individual income tax?"

Professor Lindholm of the University of Oregon and other VAT advocates who want the corporate tax abolished or greatly reduced counter this argument by charging that the corporate income tax enormously distorts management decisions to the great harm of the national economy and American society.

For example, they say, the corporate income tax favors the use of debt financing instead of selling stock to the public and it can favor unprofitable and socially undesirable investments because the losses of such investments are tax deductible.

Lindholm said there can be no doubt the VAT is vastly superior to the corporate income tax in its effect on the allocation of national resources.

The regressive argument against the VAT is somewhat deflated because the social security tax obviously is quite as regressive as the VAT.

Joseph Pechman of the Brookings Institution explained what is meant by a regressive tax: "Poor people spend a far higher proportion of their income on consumption than rich persons and therefore any sales tax puts a much bigger burden on them." But so does the weekly collection of social security taxes.

Then there is the argument that the VAT is inflationary because the addition of the tax to the prices of goods in process at each step necessarily raises the prices. White House economist Charles Schultze is one of those who has called the VAT pretty inflationary.

But the evidence that the VAT is highly inflationary is far from convincing. In Britain, adoption of the VAT to bring the British economy in line with that of the Common Market countries did appear to cause a big surge in prices at first.

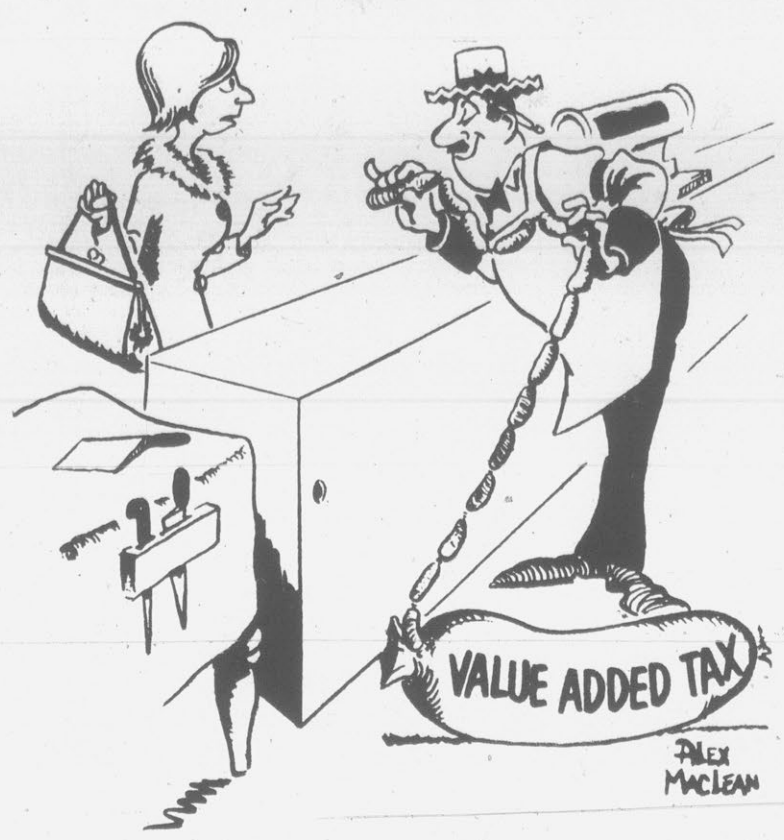

But British Treasury officials now are arguing that the VAT makes it easier to curb inflation because the revenue it produces so rapidly increases with prices and this eliminates the temptation to the government to expand the money supply in order to pay the bills.

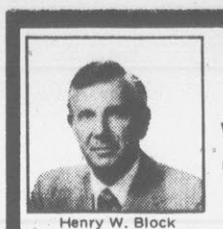

The senior economist of the London subsidiary of Bankers Trust Co. told the Wall Street Journal recently that, after observing the VAT in action in Britain, he did not believe it was any more inflationary than other taxes.

Also, the militant British labor leaders appear to have decided that the VAT in its actual working is neither inflationary nor regressive. British labor chiefs lately have been saying they are satisfied with the VAT.

A tax analyst for the Organization for European Economic Cooperation predicted that European countries will turn increasingly away from such direct levies as income taxes and purchase and payroll taxes to getting bigger percentages of their revenue from the VAT.

France draws 24 percent of its revenues from the VAT and has had the longest experience with it, some 25 years.

LATER IN MARCH — At 8 p.m. Wednesday, March 28, the fourth in the presentation of "The Shakespeare Plays" will air over PBS-TV. The play is "Richard II," and actor Derek Jacobi (above) portrays the tragic dreamer-king. The cast of Shakespeare's drama of upheaval and revolution includes Sir John Gielgud, Jon Finch, Dame Wendy Hiller and Charles Gray. "The Shakespeare Plays" is a BBC-TV and Time-Life Televison co-production, presented by WNET /Thirteen, New York and made possible by grants from Exxon Corporation, Metropolitan Life Insurance Company and Morgan Guaranty Trust Company.

N.C. Dance Company To Perform Here

The North Carolina Dance Company, which has been performing throughout the U.S. will be in Greenville to give two performances — a 1 p.m. matinee on Tuesday, March 13, and a 8 p.m. performance on Wednesday, March 14.

Different repertoires will be used for the two performances. Only one dance, "The Gray Goose of Silence," will perhaps be used in both programs.

"The Gray Goose of Silence," one of the company's outstanding pieces, was made possible by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts, and depicts a mythical town named Silence, somewhere in the Appalachian Mountains. The story of the ballet is that of love and change in an atmosphere of indifference and brutality, and was created especially for the N.C. Dance Theater with choreography by Norbert Vesak and music by Ann Mortifree.

Works choreographed by George Balanchine and Alvin Ailey are also included in the company repertoire — a privilege accorded to only a few select dance companies.

The dance programs are offered under the auspices of the Student Union Theater Arts Committee, with the residency made possible by funding from both the National Endowment for the Arts and the North Carolina Arts Council.

Tickets for the March 13 matinee are priced at $3 ($2 each for groups of 20 or more), and for the evening performance March 14 tickets are $4 ($3 for groups of 20 or more). For further information on tickets, call 757-6611, ext. 266. Tickets will also be available at the door.

Performances will be in Wright Auditorium.

Rose Stage Band Concert

Two guest soloists — Dennis Reaser and Tom Smith, will appear in the annual jazz concert being presented by the Rose High School Stage Band at 8 p.m. on Thursday, March 8, to be held in the school's gymnasium, with James E. Rodgers directing.

Reaser, director of the East Carolina University Marching Band, will be featured in a trumpet solo, "Misty."

Trombonist Smith will be heard in the solo passage of "Blue Prelude." Smith has performed in Crazy Shirley's Club in New Orleans and has been a guest on the Captain and Tenille Show.

Selections to be performed by the Stage Band range from Big Band era tunes to today's hits, and will include "MacArthur's Park," "Send in the Clowns," tunes from "West Side Story," and a "Salute To Bands." Several students will be featured in solo passages.

Tickets for the concert are priced at $1 for adults and 50 cents for children, and can be purchased at the door or in advance from any Stage Band member.

A Review

Unusual Tale Of Love

The Way Out, A Love Story For Adults. By Mary Frazier Phillips. Raleigh. Feet Publishing Co., Paper, 43 pages, $2.00 (P.O. Box 58177, Raleigh, N.C., 27658).

Feet Publishers in Raleigh is obviously a newcomer to the Tar Heel arena of publishers, at least from what I can gather.

At any rate, the publisher's current offering by Mary Frazier Phillips is one of the strangest "love story for adults" encountered in many a moon.

In the preface, the author explains she was in search of some way to reach a Sunday School class of 12 year olds in a "nice, middleclass church in a highly intellectual university town."

Mrs. Phillips then adds (the story) "fell into my head — a story, complete and awesomely beautiful. As I told it to the children they hung on every word."

That may sound like boasting on the author's part, but it's likely true that children as well as adults will find this spiritual horror tale absorbing. Essentially, it is a retelling of the fall from grace of the Archangel Lucifer in the time of his rebellion, and later, redemption of the misguided through the agony of an innocent going to battle against evil.

Compounded of elements that recall the Old Testament, the Sleeping Beauty fairy tale, and the remote horror-beauty landscapes of Peakes' "Titus Groan," with dashes of Oriental cruelty and the spectre of misery amid seemingly bounty, it is a tale replete in dramatic extremes of good and evil.

The King, his son, his ambassador, and his prime minister— no females among the heroes or culprits — early in the story survey the kingdom from "the castle's roof (of) ten thousand golden shingles. Pointing West, the king declares his intention of establishing a garden (Eden?) where every good and beautiful thing will abound, no pain exist, and nothing ugly or hurtful allowed within the walls.

Enter the serpent of envy poisoning the mind of the "beautiful" Prime Minister, who secretly years for power for himself. He rebels, and beguiles and flatters followers into a battle against the The King which they lose. Shut out from the kingdom, the "Rebel" as he is named in exile, becomes increasingly despotic and degenerate. His hopeful followers become numb, suffering, servile creatures, hopelessly seduced by the Rebel's cunning.

They are even enticed into relinguishing the one precious heritage each possesses, a small gold seal, given by the King to each citizen at birth, and crushed and buried with the owner's body at death. And this for the price of admission to the garden of torture from which there was no escape.

The King, from the vantage point of his castle, looked sadly upon these events, yet long remained passive. Eventually, he decides to send his son to save the rebellious former citizens, now reduced to endless suffering.

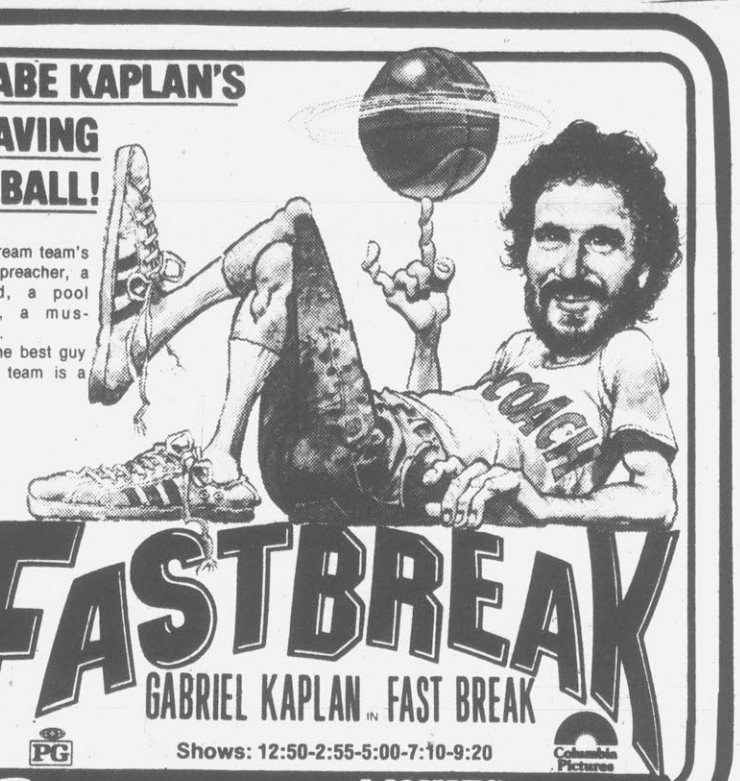

The adventures of the son in reaching the garden of terrors, his battle with the Prince of Rebels, and his victory are vividly detailed.

A Look At The Record Of The Greenville Writer's Club

A Success Story Spanning Ten Years

Text And Photograph By Jerry Raynor

AMUSED OVER A PASSAGE . . . Members of the Greenville Writers Club register amusement over a passage in a manuscript being read by Nancy Patterson, front. Listeners, left to right, are Edith Walker, Ralph Steele, Bill Stephenson, and Helen Parks. All five, along with several others, have long been active in the club which meets in various homes twice each month.

Tom Forbes, a Beaufort County farmer-tobacco buyer, author of a successful depression era novel, "Quincy's Harvest;" Dr. Raymond Moody, now living in Charlottesville, Va., nationally known author of the best seller, "Life After Life;" and Diane Leggett, a young Greenville housewife who has sold an impressive string of true romance stories — all have one thing in common.

These three, along with more than a dozen other published writers, are now or have at one time been members of the Greenville Writers Club. A few months ago the club rounded out its first decade.

Early Days

It all began when Helen Parks, a Montana native transplanted to Greenville when her husband accepted a teaching position at East Carolina University, looked around and discovered that the university town lacked one thing she had been devoted to out West -- a writers club.

Friends she approached were enthusiastic about the prospect of such a club. One in particular, Betty Casey, had entertained a similar hope, and the two soon joined forces to get the ball rolling. That was late in 1968.

Basic Concept

The basic concept behind the club was, and continues to be, simply an opportunity for writers, professional, amateur, and just plain hopefuls, to meet, read and constructively criticize manuscripts.

From the beginning, the Greenville Writers Club has been totally unstructured — no membership requirements, no fees, no constitution or rules. The only criteria to belong is to come to the meetings. These are held the second and fourth Tuesday evenings of each month at the homes of various writers. Meetings begin at eight, and last anywhere from two to four or more hours, depending on the number of manuscripts to be read and the level of interest generated.

Serious Approach

This informal, congenial approach does not mean, however, that the writers are not serious about writing. Far from it. Despite the closeness of many who have become friends through the club, candor in criticism is the key factor in letting the writer know what each one present feels are the strong and weak points of a particular literary effort.

Guidelines for criticism are ones fundamental to any type of writing — Is the story or article convincing, or contrived? Are characters fully drawn, believable? Is the story line cluttered with unnecessary, distracting details? And above all, does the work sparkle with genuine interest for the potential reader?

Diverse Scope

The scope of literary offerings is as diverse as the background of writers who have attended meetings. Novels, short stories, plays, children's stories, columns for newspapers, travel pieces, photographic essays, articles on historic people and places, fantasy, science fiction, even a manual on hitching implements to a tractor (by a woman writer) have been written by housewives, ministers, East Carolina University faculty members and students, secretaries, farmers, newspaper people, high school students and teachers, nuns and retired loafers.

Any form of creative writing, with the exception of poetry, is permitted. (Poetry has been excluded as the Poetry Forum at East Carolina University meets twice monthly and fills the need of local poets). A sizeable number of prose writers, it should be noted, are also poets and have had both prose and poetry published.

A Few Dismayed

The club's policy of frank criticism, coupled with complete freedom of subject matter and language, has not been to every writer's liking. A few along the way have been dismayed to discover their literary effort did not receive at writers meetings the same lofty opinion held by doting friends or relatives. Occasionally, a writer of promise has dropped out, expressing distaste for the scarlet language and vividly graphic situations used by some writers.

The majority of writers, however, agree that mutually sharing their work with others has been the positive prod needed to make them complete and submit to publishers a story or article that before had not progressed beyond the conception stage.

Proof of the effectiveness of the Greenville Writers Club in stimulating local writers to achieve at least a degree of their potential can best be demonstrated by citing the successes of a random few from among many who have been members in the past ten years.

Achievements

In addition to the trio mentioned previously, several instances of personal achievements are:

— Betty Casey, now living in Texas and active in local and state writers clubs there, put to good use her love of dancing and teaching in several foreign countries where she lived with her VOA husband. The result is an illustrated book, "The Complete Book on Square (And Round) Dancing," published by Doubleday in 1976. Greenville friends celebrated with her in a visit she made here during a nationwide publicity jaunt for the book.

— Dr. William Stephenson, Indiana native who grew up in California, a teacher of film and 18th century literature in ECU's English Dept., is perhaps the most prolific writer in the club. One of six contributors to "Awakenings' " a 1978 book on the role of women in eastern North Carolina, he is now expanding his original article into a full-scale biography of the late Mrs. Sally Southall Cotten, a Pitt County woman prominent in North Carolina in her lifetime. Stephenson is the author of numerous book and film reviews for newspapers, including "The Daily Reflector;" has written articles for "Film Heritage" and "Cinema Journal;" for "Wordsworth Circle," "Philological Quarterly," "English Language Notes," and for "Orion," a journal of classical literature in Latin and Greek. His most recent publication is an article for "Harvard Theological Review," based on a document of Isaac Watts he discovered in a London library.

— Gail Michaels, housewife and an ECU graduate student now living in Durham, has seen her weekly Sunday column for "The Daily Reflector," one on the trials and tribulations of wifehood and motherhood, widely acclaimed. The column now runs also in a Durham newspaper. Ms. Michaels has additionally had short stories and children's stories published.

— Helen Parks has written many book reviews for "The Daily Reflector" and is a winner of a short story prize in the N. C. Roundtable Writers Competition. Like some other club members, she also writes poetry, which has been published in "Tar River Poets" and "Crucible," the Atlantic Christian College, Wilson, art and literary magazine.

— A man of multiple talents, Dr. Ralph Steele, Chicago native and holder of two positions at ECU — Professor of Parks, Recreation and Conservation, and Associate Instructor for Coastal and Marine Resources, experiments in conventional and "way out" styles of writing. His conventional works include contributions to "Traps," "Happenings," and "Voyager," publications of the Texas Recreation and Parks Society, the Outward Bound School, and the Minnesota Outward Bound School, respectively , and for the N. C. Recreation and Parks Division. Steele prepared text and visual devices of an unusual nature for the N. C. Sea Grant program, and wrote and presented lectures at the International Symposium on the Use of Oceans, held in Japan in 1976. Another creative field for Steele is that of making a film, "Water Spellbound." He has contributed book reviews to "The Daily Reflector" and for his own (and the club's) amusement works out sophisticated interaction processes on words and word roots.

— Edith Walker is an example of a writer returning to writing after a hiatus of several years. Early in her life, she won awards for prose and poetry at UNC-Greensboro. Since becoming active with the Greenville Writers Club, she has had poetry and a short story published in "New East," poems included in a national anthology, and has written articles on art in conjunction with her duties as Director of the Greenville Art Center, including an introduction to the catalog of the Ed Reep exhibition a couple of years ago. Ms. Walker is a native North Carolinian from the mountain village of Old Fort.

— Ohio native Nancy Patterson, now with Joyner Library on the ECU campus, is winner of a Charlotte Writers Club competition and has had several articles in "Tar Heel" and its predecessor, "New East" magazine. Her poems have appeared in "Tar River Poets" and she has contributed book reviews to "The Daily Reflector." Long-time club members enthusiastically agree that short stories by Nancy Patterson are mostly minor masterpieces, and that all the world will recognize this once she gets around to sending them to publishers.

— Jerry and Bernelle Raynor, the most active husband-wife team in the club, collaborated on a play, "The Christmas Star," before Raynor retired from military service. The play was produced several times in Japan and Germany. Mrs. Raynor concentrates on writing childhood stories and science fiction. Two of her one-act plays have been staged at Atlantic Christian College. Raynor, a staff writer with "The Daily Reflector," has had prose and poetry published in "Crucible;" and has contributed articles and photographs to "New East," "Horticulture," and "Frontiers;" philatelic articles for "Stamps" and "Western Stamp Collector;" and occasional articles for Armed Forces magazines. The Raynors are both natives of nearby Martin County.

— Claude West, chairman of the Vocational Education Dept. at Rose High School, is one of two — along with John Robbins— whose specialty is playwriting. Two of West's plays, both with rural Carolina settings, were read in manuscript at writers meeting, and later produced at Rose High School, with both accorded a warm reception.

— Dr. Thomas Williams, of the Foreign Language Dept., ECU, is currently wrapping up for publication a collection of southern tobacco stories. A couple of years ago "Esquire" magazine published his article on living in France at student discount prices.

— Tillie Knowles of St. Delight's, near New Bern, is one of several out-of-town persons active in the club. A few years ago her children's book, "Mindy and Cindy" was published in an illustrated edition, and she has a novel currently being considered for publication.

Other Writers

Other writers who at one or another time have been active in the club include several who had published works to their credits before becoming affiliated with the club. This group includes Dr. Emily Farnham, recently retired from ECU's School of Art, whose biography of artist Charles Demuth titled "Charles Demuth: Behind A Laughing Mask" was nominated for a National Book Awardin the biography category; and the venerable scholar and former newspaperman Dr. Sylvester Greene, author of several books on local subjects, biographies, and writer's guides, now at work on a history of the Greenville Art Center.

Another in this group is a couple who were long active in the club — Bill and Mary Faye Shires. Shires, chief of the ECU News Bureau, has written several sensitive character sketches, and Mrs. Shires has to her credit a number of published poems and short stories.

One of the newest members for whom high hope is held is Terry Davis of the ECU English Dept., who is working on a novel based on his boyhood in the Northwest

There's one "all in the family" situation within the club. Ola Forbes, twin brother of farmer- novelist Tom Forbes, his younger brother, Bill, and Tom's wife, Irene, are all writers.

Poets Too

Several writers oriented more to poetry than to prose, who nonetheless are endowed with a yen for story writing, have often passed through the portals of the writers club — poets like the gifted ECU student, Jeff Rollins, Greenville women poets Claire Pittman and Gerda Nischan, and Beaufort County's colorful folklorist poet, Taylor Koonce.

There are many others of all ages and professions whose creative urges have led them to the club — Bill and Margaret Hadden, Lois Dean, Joan Bowen, Rosie Griffin, Hugh Stanley, Margo Mangum, Dr. Alan Gibbons, Lena Carrawan, Dr. Ed Leahy, Pat Marshall and Mike Karachan.

As the club moves into its second decade, chances are that the public will be reading more of works first brought to light at a Tuesday night meeting of the Greenville Writers Club.

Stereotyping Mars Adventure

Serpent Treasure. By Suellen R. McDaniel. Winston-Salem. John F. Blair, Publisher. 129 pages, $7.95.

Suellen McDaniel, a North Carolinian, has chosen the American southwest as the setting for her first book, an adventure for young readers. It is filled, as might be expected, with prospectors, silent, majestic Indians, storehouses of buried gold and greedy men ready to do anything to get their hands on it.

Chris O'Reilly and his father Tom hike down into a river gorge supposed to contain the buried gold of a lost Aztec tribe. There they join Andrew Mahler, Tom's longtime friend, who has spent his life looking for the treasure. Andrew is in trouble -- his nephew, Deke, is trying to have him declared incompetent so that he himself can claim the gold.

Deke Mahler and his two companions dynamite the entrance to the cave where Tom and Chris are camping, sealing them inside. But, the O'Reillys find a tunnel leading down into the mountain. There they find the giant mounds of golden artifacts they'd dream of, plus trap doors, diamondback rattlers and underground torrents. Deke also finds his way into the caverns and the O'Reillys must find a way to escape him.

While McDaniel fills the book with action, enough to satisfy the most avid Saturday morning cartoon watcher, she fails to develop her characters fully. Chris thinks adult thoughts and seems a carbon of his father. McDaniel shows at the least insensitivity in making two of the three evil characters retarded and malformed. "The creature (Sully) . . . looked as if a great weight had slowly compressed his skull during his formative years . . ." while Dutch is presented in this fashion: "The long, rectangular face which looked down at him was frightening in its lack of intelligence . . . (he) exhibited the dull expression of a man of subnormal intelligence."

Stereotyping without purpose is usually the result of careless writing. With all that has been written about the quality of children's fiction and television programs, is there any excuse for continuing to indulge in these stereotypes? Why should children be led to believe that evil looks unpleasant, that it is tied to ugliness, low intelligence, animal strength, and unblinking eyes? The better juvenile books have long had complex characterizations where evil may appear in charming guise or may result from good intentions. McDaniel would be wise to work on this aspect of her writing in her next book. Children understand subtlety of motivation even though they aren't usually practicioners.

The action sequences are graphic enough to hold the young reader and she uses her locale to advantage. She has no difficulty in keeping the reader oriented in spite of many winding passages and cavernous rooms.

Mrs. McDaniel lives in Newton, North Carolina, raising and riding Paso Fino horses. She is at work on her second book.

Visual Images At Gray Gallery

"Visual Images ," the five-man show now on view at the Wellington B. Gray Gallery, Leo W. Jenkins Fine Arts Center on the East Carolina University campus, is a lightweight effort with some amusing touches and a couple of interesting experiments in the utilization of electrically operated art forms.

Richard C.'s contribution consists of five narrow padded shelves with story telling arrangements of standard commercial consumables — thus the shelf entitled "Homage to the North Carolina Legislature" features products with the names of "All," "ERA," etc.

Devi Det Hompson's visual event is equally simplified, a slide projection show throwing typed words and short phrases on a darkened wall. It's a fun thing, reading the non-connected ideas conveyed by the words — somewhat like stumbling across a grabbag of Gertrude Stein leftovers — mentally, if not visually stimulating.

George Bretts's postal card communication system (titled "Pyramids") would be better served if housed in display cases or in an album instead of suspended on neck-craning strings in mid-air. A project similar to Ray Johnson's Correspondence School, Brett at this point has not acquired Johnson's flair for this seemingly simple, but deceptively demanding art form. A greater variety of stamps would help too.

Henry Stindt's nine wall videoboxes on a wall, matched by a series of nine operational boxes taped to the floor, is an intriguing concept of the artist's effort to project video as a visual instrument with fresh possibilities. To fully understand his idea, viewers are advised to read the premise behind this pioneering effort. The visual images in the nine boxes, though small, are provocative, and lead the eye to search out patterns and dimensions.

Of the five artists, only Tom Adair approaches the show in a conventional manner. He shows three photo lithographs, and two drawings, all in black and white. This group, small in number, compensates by saying much with little, with the repeated details of the drawings carrying out the visual directness of the photographs.

The secondary (though much larger) show, a traveling exhibition provided by SECCA (The Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art, Winston-Salem), is an excellent overview of contemporary work by artists from several southeastern states. Some straightforward black and white photographs, prints in a variety of techniques, and a few paintings provide a fine corroboration to the local artists' "Visual Ideas" theme.

West Meets East

By Michael Matros
N.C. Museum of Art

RALEIGH — A new exhibition in the N. C. Musuem of Art had its beginnings in the Paris of the late 1850s when little shops on the Rue de Rivoli quietly began selling art from the Orient, a land of mystery to most Western Europeans.

Before long an influence was felt, and it expanded until Oriental art, specifically Japanese prints, began to exert a significant impact on French and English 19th century art.

A reception is being held at the N. C. Musuem of Art in Raleigh from 2 to 6 p.m. today for "Impressionism in 19th Century Prints: West Meets East," which features 20 prints from each of the two 19th century cultures — Western and Eastern.

The show was organized by the Georgia Museum of Art at the University of Georgia. Oriental works are from Japan, with Utagawa Hiroshige contributing the largest number of works. Artists represented in the Western phase of the show include French arists Toulouse-Lautrec, James Jacque Joseph Tissot, and Bracquemond; British artist Sir Francis Seymour Haden; Holland's Johann Barthold Jongkind; and Americans James McNeil Whistler and Mary Cassatt.

Edmond deGoncourt, one of the first Frenchmen to becometranced by Oriental art, noted its impact upon modern art in the Feb. 18, 1877 entry in his journal: "It is strange, this revolution brought by Japanese art in the taste of a people, who, in matters of art, are the slaves of Greek symmetry and who suddenly are becoming impassioned over a plate on which the flower is not dead set in the middle." He adds that the Japanese "represent what they see: the incredible effects of the sky, the stripes on a mushroom, the transparency of the jelly fish."

Japanese printmaking was itself impressionistic, reflecting an Oriental philosphy which viewed life as ephemeral, fleeting. The Eastern works provide a glimpse into a moment without attempting to impose a strict regularity of composition.

Many European artists identified with the "floating" quality inherent in the Japanese prints and began to make use of the same visual elements.

"Impressionism in 19th Century Prints; West Meets East" will be on view on the Museum's third floor through April 1.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Meredith S. Foltz

The popular science fiction of Star Wars, Battlestar Galactica,. and countless books is grounded in the accepted knowledge and educated guesses of current science fact. Space-age science and technology are featured in several new books at Sheppard Library.

ROBOTS: FACT, FICTION, AND PREDICTION, by Jasia Reichardt, is a history of the machines which humans have envisioned and sometimes built to imitate themselves and their work. Abundant photographs and drawings illustrate the varied image of robots in drama, literature, comics, movies, television, art, toys, and science. Experimentation in robotics has yielded some devices of indisputable value such as computers, industrial robots, artificial body parts, and machines to handle dangerous objects such as bombs and radioactive substances. In closing, Reichardt addresses himself first to the expectations of some people that these positive achievements will be extended to eliminate all human drudgery and then to the fears of others that superintelligent machines will someday dominate their human creators.

SPACE COLONIES, edited by Stewart Brand, is a presentation of Gerard O'Neill's controversial proposals for human habitation in outer space. O'Neill suggests that rather than colonizing other planets, we should construct "Bernal spheres" to orbit the earth at a fixed distance between the earth and the moon. The raw materials for these structures would come from the moon or asteroids, and each colony would support thousands of people in an earth-like environment. Editor Brand has included a generous sampling of the published arguments of scientists, authors, politicians, and ordinary citizens caught up in the vigorous debate over O'Neill's space colony ideas.

Another debate goes on among enthusiasts of SETI or the search for extraterrestrial intelligence. One group recommends human travel among the stars in an attempt to contact other creatures. Opposing these "travelers" are the "listeners" who argue for working to detect radio transmissions from distant civilizations in the universe. WHO GOES THERE? THE SEARCH FOR INTELLIGENT LIFE IN THE UNIVERSE, by Edward Edelson, is more than just a summary of these two viewpoints on SETI. Edelson reviews our current knowledge of the potential for other life in our solar system and beyond. He explains convincingly why SETI activists reject UFOs as evidence of intelligent extraterrestrial life. If not always as romantic and glamorous as the ships and machines of science fiction, the technology required to execute the proposals from SETI's "travelers" and "listeners" is nevertheless equally enthralling and mind- boggling.

Reception Today At Art Center

A reception is being held at the Greenville Art Center, 802 Evans St., from 3 to 5 p.m. today honoring student artists of senior high schools in Pitt County, whose show is leading off the series of school shows at the center this spring. Refreshments will be served and the public is invited to attend.

O'Koren Leads Heels Over Duke, 71-63

By GARY SEASE
Associated Press Writer

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Forward Mike O'Koren scored 19 points, including nine in the final minute, and guard Dudley Bradley added 16 Saturday as seventh-ranked North Carolina defeated number-five Duke, 71-63, to lock up the Atlantic Coast Conference championship and an automatic berth in the NCAA playoffs.

O'Koren hit six foul shots in a row in the waning seconds as Duke, playing without the services of starting guard Bob Bender, desperately tried to regain possession of the ball from North Carolina's frustrating four corners delay offense.

Bradley, named the ACC tournament's Most Valuable Player, forced a steal with 15 seconds remaining and O'Koren was fouled on the tap-in for a three-point play as the Tar Heels won the title game going away.

North Carolina, now 23-5, capitalized on nine Duke turnovers to a take a 31-25 lead at intermission. The Blue Devils, now 22-7 and the defending conference champions, are virtually assured of the ACC at-large berth in the NCAA tournament.

Both clubs finished with 9-3 conference records. Duke beat North Carolina in the Big Four tournament and at home, but the Tar Heels recorded a victory over the Blue Devils at Chapel Hill.

Guard Dave Colescott added 11 points for the Tar Heels, and Al Wood and Rich Yonaker each scored 10.

Center Mike Gminski, who led Duke with 19 points, sank the opening basket. But it was the only time the Blue Devils led throughout, though they managed to tie the score, 39-39, at the 6:50 mark of the second half.

Jim Spanarkel and Vince Taylor each scored 13 points for Duke and Gene Banks contributed 12.

Spanarkel, a 6-foot-5 senior guard, became Duke's all-time leading scorer with a four-year career total of 1,996 points. He eclipsed the record held by Art Heyman, who had 1,984 points during his career at Duke in the early 1960s.

North Carolina led by as many as 10 points, 37-27, in the opening minutes of the second half. But Duke trimmed the margin to one point, 53-52, with less than four minutes remaining as Spanarkel sank a pair of free throws.

North Carolina has now won the ACC tournament seven of the last 13 years.

Bradley Picks Up MVP Award

By BILL WELCH
Associated Press Writer

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina senior Dudley Bradley played the greatest game of his career while winning the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament's Most Valuable Player award, a jubilant Tar Heel Coach Dean Snith said Saturday night.

Bradley scored 16 points and played dazzling defense, making seven steals, as North Carolina whipped Duke, 71-63, to win the ACC crown.

"It was Dudley's best overall game as a Carolina player," said Smith. "And it couldn't have come at a better time. We're happy he won the MVP."

Duke, ranked number five nationally, and North Carolina, ranked seventh, had tied for the regular season ACC championship. And Smith — who has never liked the ACC's tournament system — found the ending fitting.

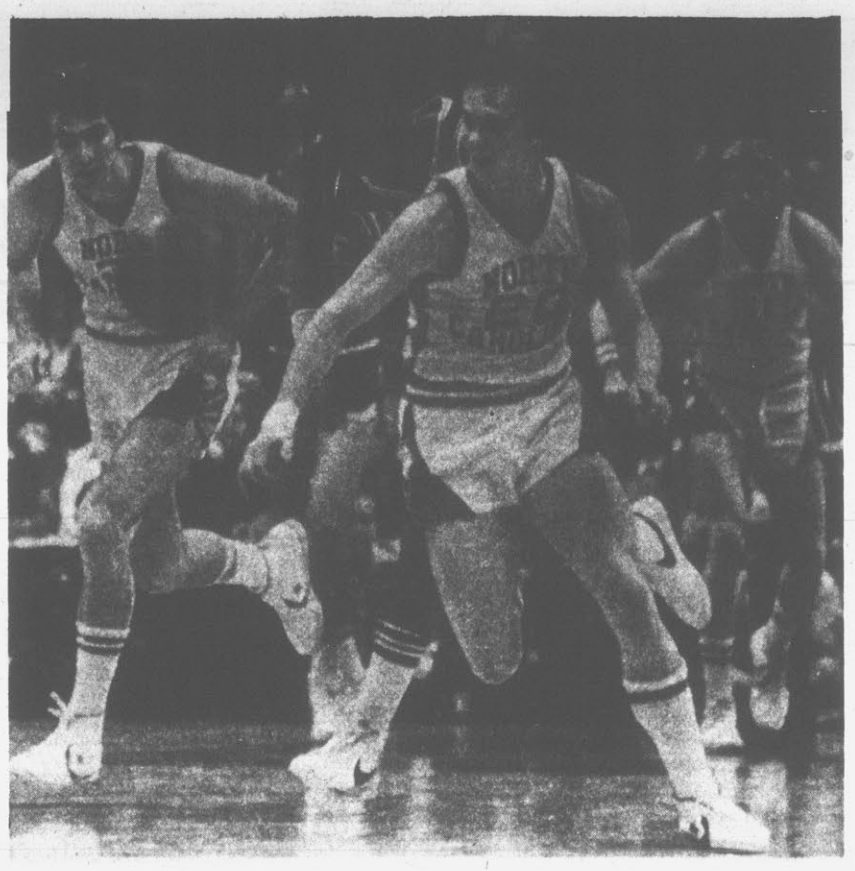

Duke Coach Bill Foster said his Blue Devils simply could not contain Bradley. "We tried to key on (Mike) O'Koren and (Al) Wood, but it certainly broke lose somewhere else," he said.

"We had to play catch-up," he added. "I still saw it in the second half. We could catch them. We had our opportunity. We just couldn't take advantage of them."

Foster said the loss of starting guard Bob Bender, who was operated on for acute appendicitis Saturday night, came so suddenly he had not had time to assess what his absence meant to the team.

"He played maybe his best all-around game last night. Who knows? I'd have liked to have had him here."

A Duke spokesman said Bender was resting comfortably after the surgery Saturday night. Foster said he did not know if Bender would be available for any NCAA tournament play.

O'Koren, Banks, Colescott chase loose ball during finals.

Drivers Eye Sky

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — Bad weather, which has played havoc with every major auto race so far this season and threatens to cause problems for some events still a week or more away, put the scheduled running of Sunday's $155,000 Carolina 500 Grand National stock car race in jeopardy.

The National Weather Service predicted a 60 percent chance of rain all day in the sandhills area where North Carolina Motor Speedway is located.

"Remember that just means out of every 10 times this kind of weather pattern develops, it rains six of the 10 times. We hope this is one of the four times it doesn't," commented a speedway official. "We'll make every attempt to get the race in as scheduled."

Smith's Homer Lifts ECU In Opener, 4-3

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Designated hitter Butch Davis lofted a 360-foot home run over the left center field fence in the tenth inning to send East Carolina past South Carolina Saturday afternoon, 4-3, in the season opener for the Pirates.

Davis had doubled in the sixth and became the fourth Pirate to have two hits in the game with his game winner.

Third baseman John Marquardt of the Gamecocks, now 4-1, opened the bottom of the fourth with the game's first hit, a single to right. First baseman Jim Curl doubled down the right field line to score Marquardt.

The visitors jumped to a 3-1 lead in the seventh with doubles from the bats of Moye, Sage and shortstop Jerry Carraway.

The Gamecocks posted a single run in the bottom of the inning with Marquardt doubled home second baseman Tom Williams, who had walked. Williams drew four of the ten walks issued to Gamecock batters in the game. He has now walked 12 times in five games.

An unearned run in the bottom of the eighth tied the contest at 3-3. Curl walked and moved to third on a throwing error by Pirate reliever Bob Patterson. With the infield drawn in, shortstop Greg Jonson singled to right to score Curl.

The Pirates had exactly the same situation in the ninth when second baseman Mike Sorrells reached on an error and advanced to third on an errant pickoff attempt, but left fielder Tim Hardison fanned to end the inning.

The Gamecocks had two-out walks in both the ninth and tenth, but couldn't manage any hits after Jonson's eighth inning single.

The same teams play today at 2 p.m. in Columbia, then the Pirates move to Clemson, S.C., for games Tuesday and Wednesday against the Tigers.

Tennessee Claims SEC Title With Win

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A free throw by Chuck Threeths and a three-point play by Reggie Johnson in the first 19 seconds of overtime put Tennessee in control Saturday night as the Volunteers defeated defending national champion Kentucky 75-69 in the finals of the Southeastern Conference basketball tournament.

The victory earned Tennessee, which finished second in the conference race, a berth in the NCAA tournament beginning next week.

Kentucky, playing its sixth game in nine days, had three opportunities to win the game in regulation time, but Kyle Macy missed two shots and LaVon Williams missed a tip in the closing seconds, leaving the teams tied 55-55.

Tennessee thus became the first team to defeat Kentucky three times in a season since the Vols did it in 1920.

After Johnson's three-point play, freshman Gary Carter took charge for the Vols, hitting six straight free throws and a layup as Tennessee built an eight-point lead at 71-63 with 1:19 remaining.

Kentucky closed the margin to four and twice had the ball after that, but failed to score either time.

Group Named To Seek Coach

Dr. Thomas Brewer, chancellor of East Carolina University, has appointed a search committee to screen applicants for the head basketball coaching position at the school.

The job became open Wednesday when Larry Gillman, who had held the job for two years, resigned, citing the school's refusal to give him a long-term contract, and the fact that he had grown to dislike coaching, as he reasons.

Gillman said the school needed to give him a long-term contract if he was to be able to build a winning program. He was in the second year of a three-year contract, and reportedly will be paid for the final year.

It was not known who Brewer had appointed, although it was believed to be a four-man committee. A university spokesman said the names of the committee members would not be made public.

Athletic Director Bill Cain is known to have received a number of contacts from people interested in the job, but he declined to say how many or to list their names.

It is known that Terry Kunze, currently an assistant in the program, and believed largely responsible for the successes of this year, is a major candidate. It is also believed that Dave Odom, a Wake Forest assistant, has visited Greenville during the past few days.

No deadline has been set for the completion of the selection committee's duties, but Cain had said earlier that he hoped it could be done as soon as possible to avoid being caught in a bind on recruiting.

Bucs Qualify For NCAA Meet

MURFREESBORO, Tenn. — East Carolina quartermilers Calvin Alston and Otis Melvin as well as the one-mile relay team bettered the qualifying standards for the upcoming NCAA indoor track championship Saturday afternoon in the Last Chance meet held at Middle Tennessee State.

Alston was timed in 47.9 seconds in winning his section of the 440-yard run, while Melvin was also a winner in 47.7 seconds. No finals were held as the meet was staged simply to record individual times.

The Pirates relay quartet also eclipsed the NCAA standard with a 3:12.0 clocking on the large oval. The track was approximately six laps to the mile.

In other events, high jumper Russell Parker cleared seven feet even, placing fourth, while hurdler Marvin Rankins was timed in 7.3 seconds for 60 yards, and Terry Perry completed the 400 in 49.8 seconds, missing the qualifying standards.

Bird-Led Sycamores Clinch NCAA Berth

By HANK LOWENKRON

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP) — Indiana State is composed of "excellent parts, which makes them an outstanding whole," said New Mexico State Coach Ken Hayes Saturday after the top-ranked Sycamores defeated the Aggies 69-59 in the nationally televised Missouri Valley tourney championship game.

"They're an excellent, intelligent, well-coached team," he added. "When their star (Larry Bird) was hurt, they knew right away to control the ball and run the clock down."

Bird, a two-time All-American, scored 20 points and pulled down 10 rebounds despite sitting out more than six minutes with an injured thumb.

"He gets most of the publicity, but they're not a one-man show," Hayes said of Bird.

Sycamore Coach Bill Hodges, who took over for ailing Bob King in October, said his team is built on "loyalty and respect."

"We really like each other. Coach King told me when I was his assistant you build a club when you recruit. I know now what he meant. You don't teach a player some things like loving basketball. They've got to have that when they come here."

The victory over the Aggies earned an automatic bid to the NCAA tourney for the Sycamores, now 29-0.

Hodges said he was told his Sycamores will be going to Midwest Regional at Lawrence, Kan., although the NCAA will not make its pairings official until Sunday afternoon.

"I don't know, I've just been told that's where we're going," said Hodges, who declined to say where he got the information.

With Bird on the bench, the Sycamores slowed down their attack. When Bird returned with 12:03 remaining, he immediately scored two consecutive field goals, and teammate Alex Gilbert added a 10-foot jumper to give the Sycamores their biggest lead at 59-41.

Junior guard Chuck Goslin came off the bench to lead the Aggies, now 22-9, with 16 points, most of those coming in the first half which ended with Indiana State ahead 45-31.

Junior guard Carl Nicks added 15 points for Indiana State, and Slab Jones had 12 for the Aggies.

Hodges said Bird suffered a slight crack on the tip of his thumb, but it was not expected to keep him out of NCAA tourney action.

"It's been bothering him off and on for a while. The only way it's going to get better is with rest, and it looks like we won't be having that for a little while at least."

Hodges said he wanted his team to work on ball control with Bird out of the game, but they overdid it.

"I didn't want to go into a delay, but it was so easy for them, they did it longer than I would have liked. We lost some momentum," he said.

Indiana State took control of the game by outscoring New Mexico State 13-4 midway through the first half. A jumper by Steve Reed, two free throws by Leroy Staley and a basket by Bob Heaton made it 22-15 with 12:19 before intermission.

Six minutes later, the Sycamores led 30-25, and Hodges called a time out.

"Our guards were a little tired and were making mistakes. I wanted to get them out."

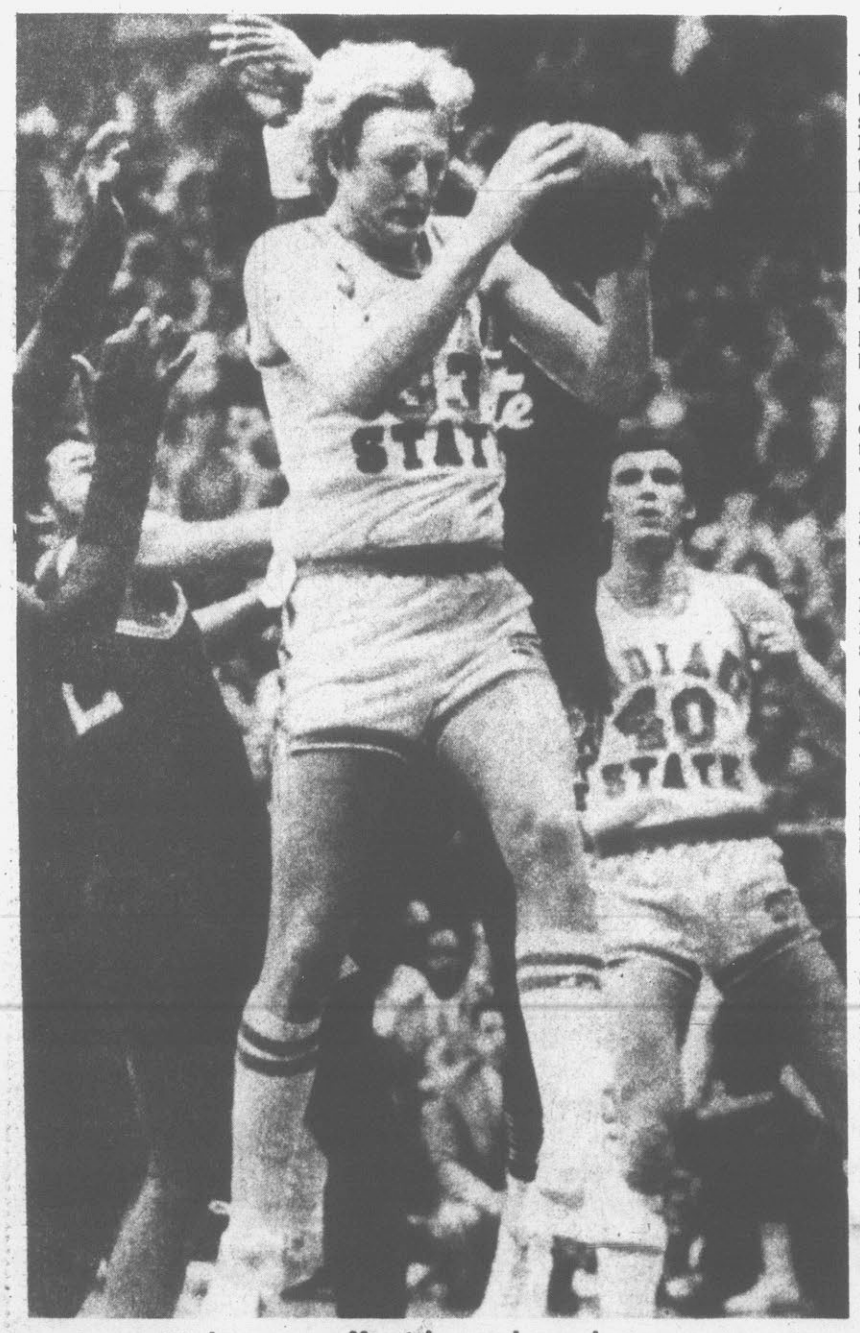

The Sycamores came back with eight straight points and opened a 38-25 advantage.

"We were playing the No. 1 team in the nation under bad conditions," said New Mexico State Coach Ken Hayes. "We didn't leave New Mexico until 6 a.m. Friday and didn't get here until Friday night. Conditions like that don't enable you to beat the No. 1 team in the nation, and that's what Indiana State is."

Pairings To Be Announced Today

By DOUG TUCKER
AP Sports Writer

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — Nine men under pressure will announce on national television Sunday their choices as the top 40 college basketball teams, plus seedings, pairings and first-round byes in an expanded NCAA Basketball Tournament.

For many teams, the difference between a successful season or failure will be riding on their decisions. Wayne Duke, chairman of the Division I Basketball Committee, will make the announcements from NCAA headquarters at 3:30 p.m. EST.

The tournament has enlarged by eight teams this year to 40, but there are more significant developments. Teams will be seeded for the first time ever, 24 will get free passes into the second round, and the committee is free to ship out anybody it wishes to any of four regional competitions. In addition, they will award 17 at-large bids.

"All these changes will impose additional burdens on the committee, no question about it," said Duke. "But they were wise and necessary moves and we're willing to accept the inevitable criticism in the interests of providing a well-balanced tournament."

The tournament opens March 9 at four sites, with the No. 7 seeds in each region meeting the No. 10 and the No. 8 seeds going against the No. 9. Second-round competition will be held March 10 and 11. The four regional champs will move to the nationally televised semifinals and finals March 24 and 26 in Salt Lake City.

Twenty-three conferences automatically send either their league champion or post-season tournament winner. Sixteen of those from conferences with the best won-loss record in tournament play the past five years will receive first-round byes. The committee decides who gets the other eight byes. The 17 at-large entries will be independents or second teams from conferences. To the consternation of powerful basketball leagues such as the Atlantic Coast Conference and Big 10, no conference can send more than two.

Committtee members, who have been in contact with regional advisory panels for almost a month, began meeting in Kansas City Friday, and Duke predicted they would work "far into the night" Satuday.

"The first thing we'll do is select 40 out of about 250 Division I teams," said Duke. "Then we will attempt to balance the brackets through the seeding process and assigning teams to various regions."

What will they look for in sizing up teams? The various all-American squads and the two news service polls voted weekly by writers and coaches will be largely ignored.

"In all sincerity, I think the basic criterion used in the polls is the won-loss record," Duke said. "We'll have a lot more information available to us. In effect, we'll make a poll of our own."

Throughout the season, the NCAA's computerized statistical service has been turning out, for the perusal of the committee, "reams and reams" of facts of which few basketball fans are aware.

Two To NCAA; Hill Resigns

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina University's wrestlers will carry two men to the nationals at Iowa State University this week, and it will be the "last hurrah" for Coach Bill Hill.

Hill has announced that he is resigning his post as wrestling coach at East Carolina. He has served two years in the position.

Butch Revils, at 177 pounds, and Mendell Tyson, heavyweight, both qualified for the NCAA nationals which start Thursday, by winning the regionals at Virginia Tech last weekend.

Revils finished his sophomore season with a 17-2 record, while Tyson was 10-1-1. Both missed out on the early part of the season, Revils due to an injury, and Tyson because he was involved with the ECU football team and its preparation and play in the Independence Bowl.

"Both of them missed the early part of the season when we were participating in some of the big tournaments. I think that's probably the biggest reason why neither of them got ranked this year," Hill said.

Hill feels that Revils, who was at the nationals last year, and Tyson, who'll be making his first appearance as a freshman, both could place and gain All-America status. "The odds are more so that Butch would place, since he's been there before and knows the situation. It's tough for a freshman to place, but Mendall has the ability to do so."

Hill said his resignation as wrestling coach was due to several reasons, the most prominent being that he is not on the staff of the university fulltime, but runs a business here in Greenville. "This is going to be my career, and I feel that I just can't give enough time to the wrestling program. It's unfair to the school and to the kids to have a coach who isn't at East Carolina full-time." Hill owns Dip 'N Strip, a furniture refinishing business.

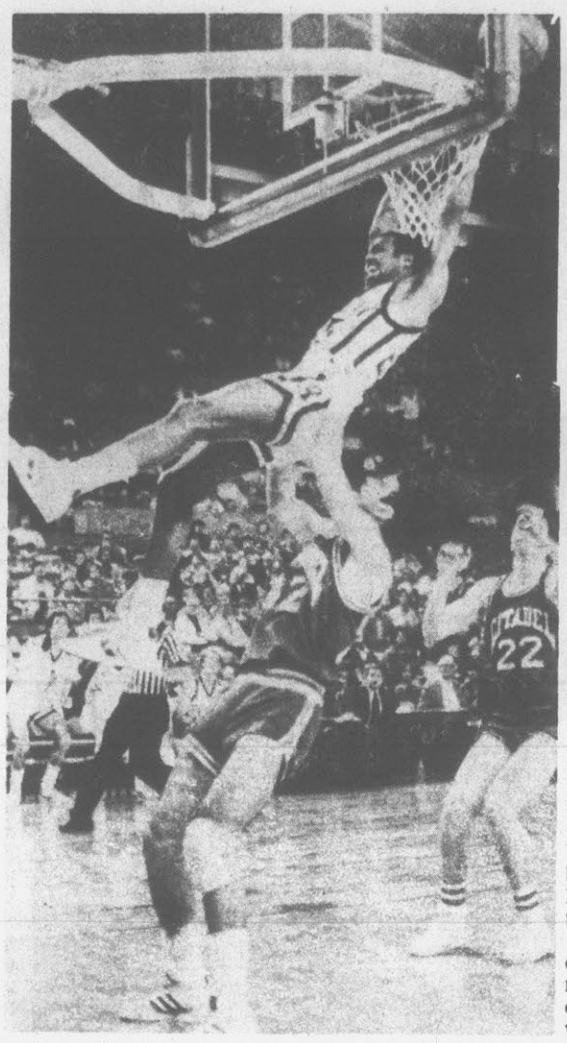

"I hope that East Carolina will hire someone who can be on the faculty, too, and will be available to the kids all the time. Trying to coach on a part-time basis is too difficult. I feel that I was a better wrestler than a coach, and being involved in a business is probably the main reason.

"I hope that East Carolina will hire a replacement for me quickly, since the recruiting season is already underway," Hill added.

Hill took over the coaching reigns from John Welborn, now assistant athletic director, two years ago, after an illustrious career as a wrestler under Welborn.

A four-time Southern Conference champion from 1970-74, Hill amassed a 122-15-1 record as an undergraduate. He won four North Carolina Collegiate titles, and was twice selected as the "Best Wrestler in North Carolina." He finished fifth in the 1974 NCAA championships, and became the school's only All-American in the sport.

Hill served as a graduate assistant with Welborn in 1975, then coached at E.C. Glass High School in Lynchburg, Va., before returning to Greenville to open his business and become head wrestling coach at East Carolina.

Double Play

Two fouls were called on this play as Furman's Ronald White hangs the rim and The Citadel's Wade Moore hangs onto White. White's foul was a technical, and Moore's, a personal. Furman topped The Citadel, 105-94, to move into today's Southern Conference tournament finals. (AP Laserphoto)

Furman Rallies Past Citadel; Appalachian Downs Catamounts

By BILL BASKERVILL

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — Renaldo Lawrence keyed a 10-2 second-half scoring run by Appalachian State and the Mountaineers pulled away from there for a 65-43 victory Saturday over Western Carolina's Catamounts in the semifinals of the Southern Conference basketball tournament.

The regular-season champion Mountaineers, 22-5, advanced to Sunday's 4 p.m. title game against Furman's defending champion Paladins, 20-8, who defeated The Citadel's Bulldogs 105-94 as Jonathan Moore, Al Daniel and Ronald White combined for 84 points, 52 in the second half.

The Mountaineers were unable to shake the scrappy Catamounts, 14-14, until Lawrence scored five of Appalachian State's points between the 11:03 and 5:16 marks, while Western Carolina got only a basket by Eric Young. All of Lawrence's points were free throws.

Darryl Robinson then scored eight of Appalachian State's next 10 points as the Mountaineers pulled away to a 22-point victory.

The lead changed hands 10 times in the first half and the Mountaineers were able to go into intermission with but a 27-26 margin on freshman John Fitch's field goal with two seconds remaining.

Western Carolina scored the first basket of the second half to take a 28-27 lead, but Mel Hubbard's field goal 17 seconds later put the Mountaineers ahead for good.

Lawrence led the Mountaineers with 15 points, while Robinson and Hubbard scored 12 each. Raymond Person paced the Catamounts, who finished fourth in the conference in the regular season, with 16.

Despite the scoring fireworks of Moore, Daniel and White, the Paladins were unable to shake the pesky Bulldogs, 20-7, in the regionally televised opening game until the final 90 seconds, in which Daniel scored seven points.

The Paladins had led 91-80 with 3:01 to go, but the Bulldogs charged back behind Rick Swing, who finished with 29 points, and Tom Slawson to pull to within 94-92 with 1:30 left. But they managed just two points after that.

It was the first 100-point game in the conference tournament since 1973 when Furman defeated Appalachian State 101-68 in the quarterfinals.

Moore finished with 33 points and 16 rebounds, White with 26 points and Daniel with 25 for the Paladins. Seventeen of Daniel's points came at the foul line.

Dan Gordon Resigns Little League Post

Dan Gordon, supervisor of the Greenville Little Leagues for the past 12 years, has resigned, citing business duties as his reason.

Gordon offered his resignation to the league's officers this week, but said that he hopes to be able to return possibly next year.

"I really don't know for sure what I'm going to do," he said. "I'm going to lay out this year and see how things go. I may come back, but I don't know for sure what the league will do or want me to do."

Gordon took over the league when it was financially unsound and has built it into a finely tuned instrument. "Our project, the chicken luncheon-supper is making more than ever before now," he pointed out, and the league is in excellent shape financially.

Gordon considers the financially-sound condition of the league one of his top accomplishments during his tenure. He also points to the installation of two electronic scoreboards at the two Little League parks, the installation of the new backstop at Elm Street Park, and the abandonment of the auction system in favor of the draft system for player selection as other top achievements.

"The draft has made the leagues much more balanced," he said.

One Greenville team captured a state championship and went to the regionals during his tenure. Greenville has also hosted several state championship tournaments, and Gordon added that this year's state event will be in this district, although not necessarily at Greenville.

Gordon also is serving the final year of a three-year term as district administrator. "I'll probably continue to serve in this position, but I have not decided whether I will stand for reelection."

Dr. Emmett Walsh, president of the Tar Heel Little League, said that he and Dr. Charles Rand, president of the North State Little League, the two sections of the Greenville Little League, are currently carrying on the operation of the program.

"We will have Little League in Greenville this year," Dr. Walsh said. "We hated to see Dan leave us, but we're going to do the best we can in the meantime."

Walsh said that no decision had been reached on whether to carry on this year without a supervisor to see what Gordon's future plans might be, or whether to hire a new permanent supervisor, or an interim one.

"He left us financially sound, with a lot of equipment, and with the facilities in good shape," Dr. Walsh said. "He also left a lot of instructions that will help us to handle the situation without him. But he certainly will be missed."

Tudor, Relay Spark Pirates

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. — East Carolina University swimmers captured two championships, setting records along the way, and moved within striking distance of second place in the Eastern Intercollegiate Swimming and Diving Championships Friday night.

The meet, which began Thursday, was to wind up Saturday night.

Pittsburg led the field after two days of competition with 273 points, while West Virginia was second with 197. East Carolina was a strong third with 194, followed by Maryland with 162 and Syracuse with 105. Hosting Penn State had 88, followed by Marshall with 49, St. John's with 44, Rutgers with 28 and Villanova with 27.

John Tudor set a new meet, varsity and pool record and cracked NCAA qualifying time in winning the 200-yard freestyle. He swam home in 1:39.27. Teammate Ted Nieman was second in 1:39.71, with Bill Fehling finishing sixth in 1:43.81.

In the 100-yard butterfly, Jack Clowar finished second with a time of 50.67 seconds, setting a new varsity record.

Doug Nieman was fourth in the 400-yard individual medley with a time of 4:12.87, a new freshman record. John Akright was eighth in 4:17.86; Kevin Meisel was ninth in 4:17.86; Chip Green was tenth in 4:19.21; and Mike Triau was 11th in 4:20.42.

East Carolina then finished off the evening by taking first in the 800-yard freestyle relay. The Pirate team of Ted Nieman, Clowar, Fehling and Tudor won the event in 6:44.67, setting new meet, pool, and varsity records, and qualifying for the NCAA nationals.

Rookie Moves Past Old Pros

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Rookie Bob Byman slipped past the faltering pacesetters with a wind-blown 1-under-par 70 to assume the third-round lead Saturday in the $250,000 Bay Hill Citrus Golf Classic.

Byman, 23, who won three national open titles in other countries before gaining his American playing rights, had a 54-hole total of 207, six shots under par on the Bay Hill Club course that, to the obvious and ill-concealed delight of owner Arnold Palmer, snapped back at golf's premier touring pros.

John Schroeder, who had a share of the lead when the national television cameras ended their coverage for the windy day, bogeyed the final hole for a 72 and a 208 total, 1 stroke behind Byman. He was tied for second with Ed Sneed and Rex Caldwell.

Sneed shot a 73 and Caldwell had a 68.

"Well," said the disgruntled Schroeder, who limped home double-bogey, bogey, "at least I finished without falling in the water."

But the various lakes and ponds that dot the course — which turned into a raging monster in 20 mph winds — claimed their share of victims.

There was Andy Bean, the big guy who led through the first two rounds. He watched in dismay as his lead diminished and eventually vanished in the whipping winds.

He collapsed on his back on the par-3 17th when his tee shot found the water.

"The wind changed while the ball was in the air," he said. "It was such a good shot it just turned my stomach when it went in the water."

It also led to a double bogey. Bean finished with a 76 for 209. He was tied with Dave Edwards, who shot a par-71.

And there was Lee Trevino. He pumped three consecutive shots into the huge lake on No. 6.

He scored an incredible 11 on the hole, finished out his 78 and pulled out of the tournament.

Byman, who went to Wake Forest on an Arnold Palmer scholarship, had matched three bogeys with as many birdies over the first 16 holes but — at par — was making up ground on the leaders.

He stroked in a 25-foot birdie putt on the 17th, made par on the 18th and finished his round at 70.

Rampants Take Athens Drive

Rose High School's boys and girls swimming teams captured a pair of victories over Raleigh's Athens Drive High School Saturday afternoon.

Rose had four double winners during the afternoon. Kevin Richards won the 200-yard and 500-yard freestyles, while John Richards won the 200-yard individual medley and the 100-yard butterfly. Susan Tucker won the 50-yard freestyle and the 100-yard breaststroke, while Amy Lawler took the 100-yard freestyle and the 100-yard backstroke.

Rose will participate in the state meet next Friday.

Two Gymnasts ReachStandards

DURHAM — Two East Carolina gymnasts, Susan McKnight and Elizabeth Jackson, qualified for regional competition in yesterday's NCAIAW championship meet held at Duke University. East Carolina finished last in the five team field.

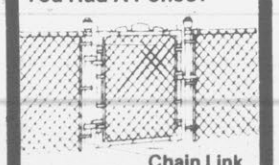

Defending champion North Carolina again captured the state crown winning with a score of 126.30. Appalachian State was second with 124.35; Duke, third with 119.10; Western Carolina, fourth with 112.15; and East Carolina, fifth with 111.55.

McKnight, who finished 11th all-around with 28.95, took ninth in the balance beam. Jackson, a freshman, placed 13th all-around with 28.50, including a seventh-place finish in the floor exercises. Both girls now advance to the regional championships to be held in two weeks at James Madison University in Harrisonburg, Va.

Coach Stevie Chepko was pleased with her team's overall effort, and particularly with the performances of McKnight and Jackson. "Last year, we only qualified one gymnast for regionals and this year, we have two. This was the first state meet in which all the teams were very tightly grouped (in scoring). The level of competition has improved in the state."

Heels, Devils Gain ACC Finals

By GARY SEASE
Associated Press Writer

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Scrappy North Carolina State nearly ruined a classic confrontation for the league championship between the Atlantic Coast Conference's two first-place teams, but Duke's Jim Spanarkel used an 18-point scoring spree to set up Saturday night's battle between Duke and ACC tournament top-seeded North Carolina.

Spanarkel's 18 points led second-seeded and fifth-ranked Duke to a 62-59 victory over N.C. State in the semifinals of the ACC tournament. Seventh-ranked North Carolina, now 22-5, whipped Maryland, the number-four seed, 102-79 in the other semifinal battle.

Duke, 22-6 and the defending conference champion, and North Carolina tied for first place in the ACC regular standings. The tournament's winner is deemed the ACC champion and receives an automatic berth in the NCAA playoffs. In the case of the North Carolina-Duke matchup, the loser is assured of the league's at-large berth.

"It'll be a Duke-Carolina game, and that's pretty big to me," said Duke Cooach Bill Foster. "But it should take a little pressure off us."

Spanarkel snapped a 53-53 tie with a three-point play but an eye injury forced backup Steve Gary to sink the free throw for him. The injury was not believed to be serious and the senior guard was expected to be in the starting lineup for Duke tonight.

N.C. State, the number-six seed, finished with an 18-12 record. The Wolfpack got an 18-point performance from Charles "Hawkeye" Whitney, who played with a sprained finger suffered in N.C. State's opening round victory over Virginia.

Duke clung to a precarious 32-29 lead at the half and never managed to lead by more than five points. The advantage switched hands six times in the second period until Whitney hit two free throws to tie the score at 53-53 with 1:04 remaining.

Clyde Austin, who was deadly from the 20-foot range, twice pulled the Wolfpack to within one point, the last at 60-59 with less than five seconds to go.

"They made every shot coming down the stretch, so we tried to keep them outside," Foster said. "Give State a lot of credit, they controlled the tempo."

N.C. State Coach Norm Sloan, who said he had not dismissed a possible National Invitation Tournament bid, said, "We gave it our best shot. I do not know if we could have played any better."

Any time a shot needed to be made by either team, they made it," he said. "Any time a free throw needed to be made, it was made. It was almost the perfect basketball game by two teams."

Al Wood scored 19 points and Dave Colescott added 14 as North Carolina overwhelmed Maryland, which finished with an 18-10 record.

The Terps were led by Larry Gibson's 23 points. But after Gibson hit a foul shot in the first minute of the game, Maryland never led and fell behind by as many as 30 points on three occasions, the last time at 100-70 with less than two minutes remainding.

"Certainly it was one of our best games of the year," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith. "We played extremely well. Someone once said you don't want to blow out a team in a tournament. But I'd like to see us do this well every night."

For Maryland, it was the third defeat at the hands of the Tar Heels. But Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell said it was by far the worst.

"It was one of those nights you should have stayed in bed," Driesell said. "We got a horrible start. I can't remember a team of mine that played that bad before."

In last December's Big Four Tournament, Duke defeated North Carolina. But during conference play, the two clubs split their two meetings.

North Carolina has finished first in the ACC regular season standings for four straight years. Duke is the only other team to accomplish that feat. The Blue Devils were first in the years 1963-1966.

Signs Are Popular

FRENCH LICK, Ind. (AP) — The novelty of having a celebrity in this southern Indiana resort community has created a problem for the town board in its efforts to honor All-American Larry Bird, the star of top-ranked Indiana State's basketball team.

Last week, the French Lick-West Baden town boards erected street signs before television cameras and other news media designating the former Monon Street as Larry Bird Boulevard. The street runs past Springs Valley High School, Bird's alma mater.

Now, Supt. Dennis Weikert says the sign in front of his office has disappeared. And he says he's been told all the other signs have fallen victim to souvenir hunters or vandals.

Sparky To Give Reports

East Carolina Announces Grid Signees; Results Please Dye

East Carolina football coach Pat Dye today announced the signing of 26 high school players to football grants-in-aid for the coming season.

The group, including six members of North Carolina's 1978 Shrine Bowl team, is dominated by North Carolina natives, showing 18 in all.

"I like this recruiting class," said Dye, who heads into his sixth season with the Pirates next fall. "Particularly since we seemed to help our team in areas where we lack depth right now.

"The group includes some people who will help in the interior line spots and others who will fit in in the secondary.

"Individually, Doug Smith has to rank as one of East Carolina's top signees ever, along with Mike Brewington who will be a senior and an All-America candidate at linebacker next fall, and Carlester Crumpler, the school's top all-time rusher."

Smith a 6-4, 255-pounder from Bayboro, won the most valuable player award in the Shrine Bowl.

Maury Banks of Thomasville, Lloyd Black of Sanford, Mark Ervin of Morganton, Gary Gambrell of Goldsboro, and Mike Meads of Elizabeth City were all Shrine Bowl linemen who will join the Pirates. Tony Elliott of Tabor City, a 2,000-yard rusher, is the lone Shrine Bowl back to sign with East Carolina this year. Meads played in the 1977 game and transferred from Duke. He has enrolled in school and will be eligible as a sophomore for the 1980 season.

The only other signee not direct from high school is Jess Eberdt who labored as a walk-on with the Pirates last fall but did not see action. He will be a freshman for the 1979 season.

East Carolina completed a 9-3 season in 1978 including a convincing 35-13 Independence Bowl victory over Southland Conference champion Louisiana Tech in Shreveport, La. The five year record for Pat Dye's Pirates stands at 41-15.

Statistically, the next freshman class at East Carolina shows players from only three states. It includes 18 North Carolina natives, five from Virginia and three from Georgia, Dye's native turf.

In the group of 26 are 12 backs and 14 linemen. Eleven of the 14 linemen measure in at 6-2 or taller and the same number weigh in at at least 220 pounds.

Rampants Open Year In Baseball Friday

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School's baseballers open the 1979 season at Goldsboro on Friday, and Coach Ronald Vincent is a little worried.

The chief cause for his troubles is not his team but the weather conditions that have plagued practice. "We're behind where we should be," Vincent said, "and the weather is the cause. Our pitchers haven't been able to do as much throwing as we'd like for them to have done. And the batters haven't had the chance to face as much live pitching as we'd like for them to do."

Nevertheless, Vincent is looking for a good year from the Rampants, who tied for the Division I championship last year, then lost in an extra-inning game at Wilmington on a fog-shrouded field in the first round of the state playoffs.

While only five starters return from last year's team, Vincent feels that there is good experience through the lineup due to the fact that most saw action either as reserves or on the "B" team last season. "I think we're in pretty good shape as far as experience goes," the coach said.

Three starting pitchers also give Vincent a lot of hope for a good year on the mound.

Leading the team in that position is senior righthander Mike Williams. "He's grown a couple of inches and put on 20 pounds," Vincent pointed out. "He's worked real hard during the winter and just needs the opportunity to throw a little more to get ready." Williams, who was 9-2 last year, is a blazing fast ball hurler.

Also returning from last year are the number two hurler, Skip Topping, who lost only once while showing a lot of good pitches, and Lindsey Winstead, who pitched well, but was plagued by an injury problem throughout most of the season. Winstead is a senior, while Topping is a junior.

These three are expected to handle most of the mound duties, with Joey Mattheis available for short relief duty.

The catching position may be the strongest on the team aside from the pitching. Topping, when not on the mound, will be back behind the plate, where he saw some action last year. Backing him up are Mark Shank and Charles Daise, both good catchers, while Emmett Walsh also shows a lot of promise.

Will Sanderson returns at first base, with both Jeff Wilson and Daise as backups.

Ronnie Chapman, who played second base last year, has been moved to shortstop, while Mike Campbell currently is at second. Junior Neal is at third, and Vincent notes that Skip Hill can play any of the infield positions in a backup role.

"Our outfield is still a toss-up. Right now we have Joey Mattheis in left (moved from third), and the other two positions could go to either Robert Morehead, Will Barrett, Marshall Heath, Shank or Williams."

Vincent believes that the Rampants will have a strong defense, especially in the infield. "And we can put in a very strong defensive outfield, too."

The hitting right now is behind because of the weather conditions. "We won't have a great deal of power, however. We're going to have to rely on our defense and pitching to win for us. But we do have the potential at the plate, but we have to hit intelligently."

Vincent also plans to take advantage of some good speed on the team. "We will be a running team," he promised.

Rocky Mount, which tied with Rose last year for the title, will be again the team to beat, Vincent feels. "They have four all-conference performers returning, and should be among the best in the state.

"I also understand that Wilson Hunt has a good team, but I really don't know what to expect from the three Wilson schools because of all the moving around of people. I really think that there are no weak teams in our conference this year. It should be a very strong league."

The conference again has two berths open for post-season play, and Vincent and the Rampants have their eyes on one of those two again this year.

DePaul Embarrasses Irish

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

For Notre Dame, a loss Friday was little more than embarrassing. For Louisiana State and Louisville, however, defeat may well be disastrous.

While the Irish were beaten 76-72 in a regular season game at DePaul that did not jeopardize either team's postseason chances, Louisiana State's 80-67 loss to Kentucky in the Southeastern Conference playoffs and Louisville's 72-68 defeat at the hands of Virginia Tech in the Metro 7 tourney put both of those ranked clubs in precarious positions. No. 8 LSU and 13th-ranked Louisville now must hope NCAA officials invite them to the championship tournament despite their conference also-ran status.

In other conference tournament action, Tennessee earned the right to meet Kentucky in the SEC finals with a 75-64 victory over Auburn; Florida State topped Memphis State 35-34 and will take on Virginia Tech in the Metro 7 finals; favorites Texas and Arkansas advanced to the Southwest Conference title match, ninth-ranked Arkansas a 93-77 victor over Texas Tech and 14th-rated Texas taking Houston 70-65; Atlantic Coast regular season co-champions Duke and North Carolina made it to the finals, No. 5 Duke beating North Carolina State 62-59 and No. 7 North Carolina mauling Maryland 102-79, and Kansas edged Missouri 76-73 and will meet Big Eight regular-season titlist Oklahoma, a 72-68 winner over Kansas State, in that conference's finals.

In more conference playoffs, it was Eastern Kentucky 90, Middle Tennessee 81 and Western Kentucky 90, Morehead St. 85 in the Ohio Valley; Mercer 90, Oklahoma City 70 and Northeast Louisiana 89, Houston Baptist 62 in the Trans American; St. Joseph's (Pa.) 69, Bucknell 61 and Temple 53, Lafayette 50 in the East Coast; Pacific 74, Long Beach State 69 and Utah State 81, Fresno State 74 in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association, and Weber St. 98, Montana 71 and Northern Arizona 90, Idaho State 76 in the Big Sky.

DePaul upset Notre Dame for the second straight year, winning its 28th consecutive home game and making both teams 22-4 and certain of NCAA bids.

Louisiana State will have to hold its breath and hope the NCAA remembers the Tigers were 22-4 and a solid first in the SEC regular season. Kentucky, whom LSU beat twice during the season, got 49 points from its backcourt combination -- Kyle Macy and Truman Claytor.

Reggie Johnson scored 26 points and spurred a late blitz that boosted Tennessee past Auburn. Tennessee, 19-11, won its seventh in a row.

Virginia Tech played extremely well in bouncing Louisville from Metro 7 title contention. The Cardinals, like LSU, must pray for an NCAA bid as a conference runnerup after waltzing to the Metro regular season title.

Tech, 20-8, in its first year in the Metro 7, got 28 points from Dale Solomon and hit 27 of 56 shots from the field and 18 of 21 free throws. Louisville, 23-7, was led by Darrell Griffith's 22 points.

Texas made just six field goals in the second half but deadly free throw shooting (24 of 29) kept the Longhorns ahead of Houston. The Longhorns shot 44.2 percent for the game, 28 percent in the second half.

Arkansas was more impressive. U.S. Reed had a career-high 22 points and All-American Sidney Moncrief added 21 points and 13 rebounds for the Hogs.

Duke never led N.C. State by more than five but outscored the Wolfpack 9-6 in the final minute for victory.

Both ACC finalists are sitting pretty; Duke and North Carolina each are expected to receive NCAA bids.

Darnell Valentine scored seven points in the final two minutes to pace Kansas. Oklahoma got 17 points and five blocked shots from Al Beal to beat Kansas State.

In a regular season contest, 20-5 Penn upended Yale 94-81 to notch its eighth 20-victory season in the last 10 years.

Fuller Is The Winner

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Clemson University football standout Steve Fuller has been chosen the winner of the 1979 Jim Weaver Postgraduate Scholarship. The award is given to an Atlantic Coast Conference athlete for his academic record and leadership qualities.

The $1,000 scholarship is presented in memory of the late Jim Weaver, who served as commissioner of the ACC for 17 years.

The senior quarterback from Spartanburg, S.C., was the ACC's total-offense leader and conference Player of the Year for the past two seasons.

Fuller had 1,515 passing yards and 2,164 total yards last fall to lead the Tigers to an 11-1 record, the ACC championship and a Gator Bowl victory over Ohio State. He was unanimous choice for the all-conference team and was sixth in voting for the Heisman Trophy.

A history major, Fuller is a member of several honor societies, has been a three-time member of the All-ACC Academic team and twice was named an Academic All-American.

NASCAR Spreading Blame; Cale Is Hit

By JERRY GARRETT
AP Motorsports Writer

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — "It's still not completely fair, but it's fairer than it was. It still doesn't win the Daytona 500 for me," Donnie Allison muttered.

The National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing announced Friday that it had decided to spread the blame equally between Allison and Cale Yarborough for the last lap crash that cost them both a chance to win at Daytona two weeks ago.

An angry Yarborough told an official of NASCAR that he would appeal the new ruling.

In a decision announced Feb. 20 by NASCAR Competition Director Bill Gazaway, the sole blame was placed on Allison, who was leading that last lap, for putting an unorthodox block on Yarborough that resulted in a crash. Allison got six months probation while Yarborough was exonerated.

However, Allison, his brother Bobby and Yarborough were each fined $6,000 for fighting after the race.

However, the National Stock Car Racing Commission, which convened last Monday to hear an appeal by the Allisons on the matter, judged that "the accident was a result of two competitors' errors in judgment and not solely the fault of Donnie Allison."

Based on the commission's recommendations, Allison's probation period was cut in half and Yarborough was also given a matching three months probation. The fines were all upheld.

Allison's mood, not helped by his crash in practice Friday morning for the Rockingham 500, was noticeably improved by the action. He celebrated with a round of golf in the afternoon.

Yarborough, who claimed he was an innocent victim of malicious double-teaming by the Allisons, was greatly upset by the reversal.

The three-time national champion told NASCAR official Ray Hill he would appeal. Hill informed him an appeal would have to be made in writing within 30 days. Hill said no written appeal had been filed by the end of action at the track Friday.

"It's not fair. I'm not guilty," Yarborough said angrily.

U.S. Tops Russians

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — The United States swept the top four places in the final event and defeated the Soviet Union by a scant 47 points in the first indoor septathlon competition between the two countries, a two-day event completed Friday.

The United States trailed by 246 points going into final event, the 1,000 menter run. But Grant Niederhaus won it in a time of 2:34.2, and Mike Hill, John Crist, and Mauricio Bardales completed the sweep.

That gave the United States a total of 32,932 points for the seven-event competition to 32,885 points for the Soviets.

Other American winners were Fred Samara, long jump, 24-7¾; Lee Palles, high jump, 7-1, and Bob Coffman, 60-meter dash, 6.97 seconds, and 60-meter hurdles, in 7.96.

Victor Gruzenkin of the Soviet Union won the pole vault at 15-5 and was the overall individual winner with 5,649 points.

A fireplace (or free-standing) Buck Stove will go a long way toward heating, not just a room, but your whole house.
Thanks to a thermostatically-controlled Heat Extraction System that forces air through the stove at the rate of 140 to 465 cubic feet per minute.
It doesn't go out when you do. Because the Buck Stove burns very efficiently (extracting up to 80% of the available energy from a piece of wood), a single fire will burn from 6 to 12 hours, without any attention from you.
It's safe. The Buck Stove meets or exceeds all safety standards set by The National Fire Protection Association.
About that small fortune. Based on actual records, Buck Stove owners commonly report savings of between 50% and 80% on their heating bills.
All this from $599. Buck Stoves come in fireplace or free-standing models recommended for areas as small as 1800 square feet and as large as 3600 square feet.

One-On-One Clippers Clip Celtics

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Gene Shue knows what one-on-one basketball is all about. He coached the Philadelphia 76ers when that team boasted solo artists like Julius Erving, George McGinnis and Lloyd Free, and he took them to the National Basketball Association playoff finals.

Now Shue is coaching San Diego, and he's got another bunch of one-on-one aces.

"Everyone knocks one-on-one basketball but I think it can be quite successful in the NBA," declared Shue, whose Clippers beat the Boston Celtics 106-99 Friday night for their eighth consecutive victory and 15th in their last 20 games.

The Clippers now lead the Portland Trail Blazers by two games in the race for the final Western Conference playoff berth.

"For us, one-on-one allows our forwards to get position under the boards," explained Shue. "When our shooters do miss, we get the rebounds. Look at the statistics. We had a 63-53 advantage in rebounds and that tells a lot.

"Of course, the overall reason we're successful is that everyone is playing up to his ability."

That includes the Clippers' guards, who know how to put the ball in the hole. Lloyd Free led the way with 28 points, Randy Smith scored 20 and reserve Freeman Williams contributed 18.

In other NBA games Friday night, the San Antonio Spurs edged the Kansas City Kings 129-125 in overtime, the Houston Rockets beat the Portland Trail Blazers 118-98, the Denver Nuggets defeated the Phoenix Suns 119-105, the Cleveland Cavaliers nipped the Seattle SuperSonics 111-109, the Los Angeles Lakers outscored the Philadelphia 76ers 126-111, the Golden State Warriors beat the Indiana Pacers 105-98 and the New Jersey Nets defeated the Milwaukee Bucks 99-91.

Spurs 129, Kings 125, OT

James Silas scored eight of his season-high 31 points in overtime as the Spurs beat the Kings in a battle of division leaders. Larry Kenon scored 32 points for San Antonio and George Gervin added 30, extending his streak of 20-plus point games to a franchise-record 35 in a row.

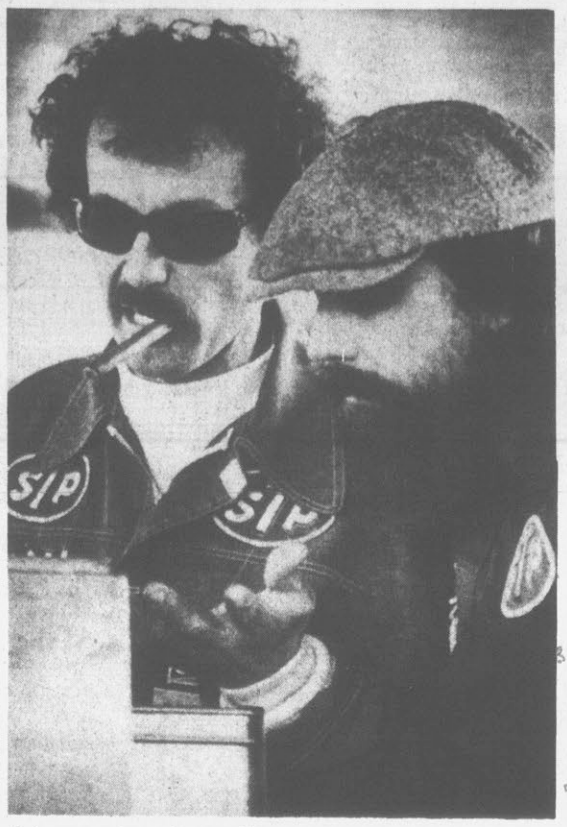

Kansas City's Otis Birdsong hit a jumper with 16 seconds left to tie the score at 111 and was fouled by Gervin. But he missed the free throw and the game went into overtime.

Rockets 118, Blazers 98

Rudy Tomjanovich scored 33 points and Moses Malone got 29 points and 16 rebounds as Houston beat the Blazers in Portland. The Rockets broke the game open with a 13-4 burt late in the third period that established a 74-62 lead.

Nuggets 119, Suns 105

David Thompson and George McGinnis scored eight points each in a 34-point Denver third quarter that broke open the game. The lead changed hands 23 times in the first half but the Nuggets outscored the Suns 34-20 in the third period to take command 89-73.

Discussing Details

Cavs 111, Sonics 109

Jim Chones sank a pair of free throws and a layup in the final 48 seconds as the Cavs beat the Sonics in Seattle.

There was a brief scuffle early in the final period when Cleveland rookie Ken Higgs ran into Tom LaGarde, Seattle's injured center who was sitting in street clothes on the team bench. Higgs took a swing at LaGarde and had to be restrained by several Seattle players before he was ejected.

Lakers 126, 76ers 111

Jamaal Wilkes' season-high 31 points, on 14-for-20 shooting, and Norm Nixon's 17 assists helped Los Angeles beat Philadelphia before a crowd of 16,534, largest of the season at the Forum in Inglewood, Calif. A jumper by the Lakers' Adrian Dantley snapped a 77-77 tie midway through the third period and Los Angeles pulled away in the final quarter.

Warriors 105, Pacers 98

Golden State snapped a five-game losing streak as Robert Parish scored 24 points and JoJo White added 23. The Warriors were aided by a zone defense technical against Indiana after the Pacers had closed to within one point at 96-95 with 2:36 remaining.

Nets 99, Bucks 91

Bernard King scored 14 of his 23 points in the first period as the Nets jumped in front and were never headed.

Bob Robertson Trying To Hang On To Fading Baseball Career

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Bob Horner is 21 years old, the 1978 National League Rookie of the Year, a budding star with a brilliant future. He is not in spring training because of a contract dispute.

Bob Robertson is 32 years old, a major leaguer since 1967 whose best years are behind him — and he knows it. He can't afford to skip spring training.

"I know I've had some physical problems, but I'm in perfect condition now. All I want is a chance," said Robertson, a power-hitting first baseman who spent the bulk of his career with the Pittsburgh Pirates, but is now trying to hook on with the Kansas City Royals.

Robertson, who hit 53 home runs and drove in 154 runs for the Pirates in 1970-71, missed the 1977 season because of chronic back trouble. He caught on with Seattle last year, but was released by the Mariners at the end of the season. A phone call to Royals General Manager Joe Burke got Robertson invited to spring training, but he still has to win a contract.

"Bob's got some strength, I've always been impressed by that," said Royals Manager Whitey Herzog. "We're looking for someone with power to pinch hit, somebody who can come up in the ninth inning and hit one out."

Robertson hit two out of spacious Terry Park in Fort Myers, Fla. Friday, connecting off the Royals' ace reliever, Al Hrabosky.

One factor working in Robertson's favor is that designated hitter Hal McRae, also a right-handed hitter, is recuperating from shoulder surgery and may not be ready to open the season.

Horner's agent, Bucky Woy, filed a grievance contending the team failed to offer his client a valid contract by the Dec. 20 deadline set by major league baseball and that Horner should be declared a free agent. He also contends the Braves reneged on an agreement reached in January that would have provided Horner with about $300,000 a year.

The Braves have filed a counter-grievance in the case, but no arbitration date has been set.

"There's no way he's coming (into camp) until we get this settled," said Woy. "And I don't see how it can be settled before Easter. I never like for a player to have to sit out, but it's not doomsday. If you've got it, you've got it. Missing spring training ain't going to ruin Bob Horner. Ain't nothing going to hold Bob Horner back."

Horner hit 23 home runs in 89 games for the Braves last season after leaving Arizona State, where he was college baseball's "Player of the Year."

In other contract matters, free agent outfielder Bernie Carbo signed a two-year pact for a reported $225,000 with the St. Louis Cardinals and pitcher Pat Zachry signed a one-year deal pegged at $125,000 with the New York Mets.

The Cincinnati Reds are negotiating with outfielder George Foster and are expected soon to announce a five-year deal for $750,000 a year. "We have made good progress and we're hopeful the signing can be done by Monday," said Reds General Manager Dick Wagner.

San Francisco General Manager Spec Richardson said he had made a final offer to free-agent outfielder Billy North, but North has not responded yet. Richardson also said he would invoke the renewal clauses in the contracts of four unsigned players — pitchers Bob Knepper and Greg Minton, outfielder Jack Clark and infielder Tom Heintzelman — on Monday.

The clause, if invoked by a club by March 10, binds the player to the team for another year even if he has not signed a new contract.

American League President Lee MacPhail has sent a telegram to the Detroit Tigers condemning Rusty Staub's demand that the team renegotiate his contract and his failure to report to spring training.

THE 300-SEAT AUDITORIUM of the North Carolina Legislative Building was packed last Tuesday as supporters and opponents of proposed sweeping changes in the state game law spoke before a joint hearing of the House and Senate Wildlife Committees.

The proposed revision is designed basically to provide stiffer sentences for game law violations and to eliminate many contradictory and outdated local game laws. The state game law has not been revised since 1935.

Proposed changes in the state game law were introduced in the 1977 session of the Legislature, but because of the length and complexity of the bill, it was referred to a special Conservation Law Study Committee. This group conducted a series of 12 public hearings across the state last year and recommended to the Legislature the changes now being considered.

Opponents of the proposals complained Tuesday that they would remove control of wildlife from the hands of local officials and give it to the state Wildlife Resources Commission. Supporters said state regulation of wildlife is necessary if the animals are to remain a part of North Carolina's environment.

The hearing was conducted to give equal time to both sides. One hour was set aside for proponents and one for opponents. Each speaker was given three minutes for his arguments.

Much of the controversy of the proposal centers around the classification of the fox. The revision would not change the fox's current status as a game animal, instead of a fur-bearing animal. Not only does this allow the hunting of foxes, but the Commission could declare a trapping season on the animal if information indicates the fox population in a certain area could support it.

Several opponents said Tuesday they would like to see the selling of foxes or fox hides banned in the state. Foxes currently come under many local laws, some of which go back to 1935. The new law would repeal all local laws regarding foxes.

Conservation Lithographs Available

The third in a series of limited edition lithographs as been issued to the N. C. Wildlife Resources Commission in connection with its Carolina Conservationist program.

The lithograph is by Pete Turner and is from a painting that shows seven species of wildlife which once lived in North Carolina, but are now extinct or no longer found in the state. The featured animals are the timber wolf, passenger pigeon, Carolina parakeet, elk and buffalo. Two other species, the beaver and cougar, are again found here after a period of absence.

The Carolina Conservationist program gives nonsportsmen a means to contribute to wildlife conservation of nongame species. All funds raised through this program are used for the conservation, protection and study of nongame species.

For a contribution of $25 or more, you will receive a 16 by 20 signed and numbered lithograph of a series limited to 1,000 copies. Additional signed, but not numbered, prints are available for $10 each.

The first two prints done for the Carolina Conservationsist program are also available. They are pictures of the red-cockaded woodpecker and the brown pelican. Prices are the same.

The prints can be ordered by writing the N. C. Wildlife Resources Commission, Division of Information and Education, 512 N. Salisbury St., Raleigh, N. C. 27611.

Guidry, Lopez Get AP Athlete Honors

By PAT LEISNER
Associated Press Writer

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Three years ago, a frustrated pitcher named Ron Guidry almost quit professional baseball. But his wife talked him into giving it one more try.

"I'm sure glad I did," said Guidry, who last year was the game's premier pitcher and was honored Friday night as Associated Press male athlete of the year.

"This is probably one of the awards I'll treasure most in my life," Guidry said. "All the sporting world was involved — basketball, baseball and football, and they chose me. It makes you think — were you really that good and what made you that good?"

Guidry had a 25-3 season and led the Yankees to victory in the World Series in 1978.

Lopez, at 22, is the hottest pro golfer around. She is credited with raising women's golf to unparalleled heights last year — her rookie season.

"I've never spoken to this many people before," said the smiling, walnut-eyed athlete as she accepted her trophy from AP Special Correspondent Will Grimesley before a banquet crowd of 1,300. "Maybe I've played before that many. That's easier."

As a rookie on the LPGA tour last year, Lopez scored a stunning five-tournament victory streak, caught the imagination of fans across the country and almost singlehandedly raised women's golf from step-sister status in the sports world.

The awards were initiated by the AP 43 years ago to honor the outstanding male and female athlete each year.

Sinai Coast Attracting The Divers

By MICHAEL PRECKER

EILAT, Israel (AP) — Eleven years of Israeli rule have turned the Sinai coast into one of the premier diving attractions in the world, and the Israelis who have developed it fear for the future of an area they have grown to love.

Israel has agreed to hand back to Egypt the 150-mile coastline, from this Israeli resort town to Sharm el-Sheikh, in the final stage of withdrawal, three years after a peace treaty is signed. That will leave the booming Israeli diving industry with just seven miles of seashore.

What happens then?

"We've created a reality, and the Egyptians are going to walk right into it," said Howard Rosenstein, co-owner of Red Sea Divers, largest of three diving clubs at Sharm el-Sheikh. "The question is what they are going to do with it."

Once peace is established, Israelis hope they will be able to take divers across the border for excursions along the coast. But Egyptians will be in control — a prospect that worries many Israelis who say Egypt ignored the natural wonderland of coral reefs and tropical fish before 1967.

A number of people interviewed asked to remain anonymous, for fear of souring future relations with the Egyptians.

"The Egyptians never thought of doing anything. There were no roads, no towns, nothing," said a prominent Israeli authority on diving. "It's not anything against the Arabs, but they just don't feel the same way about nature that we do.

"The strongest authorities in Sinai now are the Israeli nature-reserve inspectors," he said. "You can't even take a shell out of the sea or they'll arrest you. The Egyptians just don't think that way. I'm afraid it will be destroyed or closed to divers."

The object of the concern is a geological oddity called the Gulf of Aqaba, one of two northern branches of the Red Sea and part of the Syrian-East African land rift. The narrow gulf, ranging between 3 and 18 miles wide, drops to depths of up to 6,000 feet in a nearly sheer decline that affords spectacular panoramas of coral along the shelf.

"It's the best diving in all the world," said Shlomo Cohen, author of the "Red Sea Diver's Guide." "It's very deep, with the best coral and it's very rich in all kinds of fish. The seas are quiet, the days are sunny and it's untouched, unspoiled, unpolluted."

Willy Halpart, owner of Eilat's Aquasport Diving Center, which conducts "diving safaris" along the coast, says diving here is far superior to the famous Great Barrier Reef of his native Australia.

"If you dive in the barrier reef, it's far offshore," he said. "So you go out in a boat, probably get seasick on the way and maybe get two dives in on a good day. Here you can drive along the coast, pick out a likely spot and jump in."

Halpert opened Eilat's first diving school in 1959, but says interest was limited by the modest resources in Israeli waters.

The capture of Sinai in 1967 "really gave us a fantastic push," he said. "We became explorers. Every dive was a new page in a book."

Israel declared most of the coast a nature preserve and built the first coastal road. Private entrepreneurs, encouraged by government guarantees of compensation should they be forced to leave, opened businesses at the Dhab and Neviot holiday resorts along the coast and at Sharm el-Sheikh at Sinai's southern tip.

The result was a boom. Sinai annually receives thousands of divers from Europe and America, as well as Israel's 10,000 licensed divers. For those lacking diver training, snorkeling is popular, while many tourists ride glass-bottom boats for a peek under the sea.

PLAN YOUR HOME

The Cayman

Contemporary Plan Emphasizes Space

By Jerry Bishop

Cathedral ceilings crown the array of windows that marks the Cayman, a generously proportioned contemporary plan with an interior bursting with light and space.

Four full-sized bedrooms, a handy utility room, two and one half baths, and well-defined living areas meld to create this airy plan.

Fronted by a small covered porch, entry is into the foyer, open to the formal dining room at right and formal living room ahead. Carefully placed to offer a cozy welcome is the wood-burning fireplace, clearly visible from the foyer. The living and dining room, both private and sizable, promise a natural setting for entertaining, while the sprawling and casual family room-kitchen sparks informality. With access to the basement and terrace, the family room is a hub of family activity and is linked to the kitchen by a useful breakfast bar.

Three entrances maximize the efficiency of the bordering utility room. A logical location for laundry equipment, the room also functions as a mud room, joined to the garage and outdoors, and edges a handy half bath.

Four large bedrooms are lodged in the left wing of the plan, with two baths, each with towel closet, neatly tucked at the end of the hallway. The master bedroom is favored with a private bath and double closets, as well as a liberal splash of natural light.

Storage problems are solved by the basement, another 1817 sq. ft. of useful space. In addition, the oversized garage allots a storage area with an outside entry for convenient storage of bicycles and garden equipment.

For large families, or families who prefer plenty of room, the Cayman provides an appealing combination: light and space.

A Little Psychology Can Help In Warming Homes

By ELAINE Q. BARROW
AP Newsfeatures

As fuel costs soar in warming a home, a little psychology applied to decorating may help you save money.

It's a simple theory: the room that looks warm will make the occupant feel warm.

As we know, an appreciable amount of fuel can be saved by even a slight reduction in a room's temperature setting. But would you notice the difference?

A lot depends on the decor, according to a research project at Kansas State University. It was found that a warm-appearing room could be 2.4 degrees cooler — even 6 degrees cooler — than a cold-appearing room. Yet the occupants rated it as being equally warm.

At KSU, students volunteered for the experiment and it was conducted with 12 men and 12 women. Dr. Frederick H. Rohles, Jr., director of environmental research, explains that the subjects were exposed for two hours to three different test chambers. Each chamber was warmed to the same temperature.

A temperature of 74 degrees F. was chosen because light clothing — cotton shirt and trousers — was prescribed for the test and, although the participants were not told, the purpose was to gauge responses to the room decor only. Ballots were used.

The result was that the participants noted, and voted, that one of the 74-degree rooms was "warmer" than the others.

Researchers using body-temperature and other sensitized instruments pointed out that no differences were found in the participants' skin temperature. It was concluded that the reaction was purely psychological.

But the psychology was potent enough that in further tests the participants failed to detect a cooling when the temperature was surreptitiously lowered to 72 degrees, to 70 degrees and to 68 degrees.

Differences in the test environments were chiefly visual.

The first room, called the Sherer Chamber, resembled a supermarket's cold-storage room, even to a refrigerator-type door. With stark white walls and ceiling, it was lighted by bare fluorescent tubes. Rubber matting covered the floor.

Exact in every detail was the second room, the Ashrae Chamber, only it was slightly larger.

Third was the decisive environment which was actually a duplicate of the first — the Sherer Chamber — but modified by furnishings.

An acoustical-tile ceiling and red carpeting were installed. Fluorescent lighting was diffused by baffles and two pole lamps were added, as well as upholstered furniture and pictures on the wall. And the overall effect was enhanced by hard wood paneling covering the walls, both inside and outside the chamber.

The comfortably furnished, wood-paneled, chamber — in contrast to the refrigerator image of the other two — was voted warmest of the three.

In academic jargon, the report of the experiment explained that the study "was undertaken to determine if enriching the room decor and the adding of embellishments would alter the responses to thermal environment..."

And "thermal comfort is defined as that condition of mind that expresses satisfaction with the thermal environment ..."

With today's trend to larger windows, their expanse between you and the weather calls for special consideration. Decoratively speaking, the type of window treatment you choose can make a difference in the cost of heating and, for that matter, air conditioning in the summer.

The virtue of Venetian blinds is their adaptability. Shut, they enclose a column of air against the window pane as an additional insulation against winter chill — and summer heat.

Open, they not only reduce the need for electric lighting, but in summer they can be partially opened to minimize the effects of the sun's rays while supplying illumination. The reflecting surface of the slats is not to be overlooked. Natural light can be bounced to diffuse light around the room.

Considering the solar properties of color, another tip is to paint the outside surface of the blinds white — to absorb a minimum of heat — while the inside surface cannbe painted in the color compatible with the decor of your room.

Decorating ideas that also help the family budget become a bonus to any household.

'Passive' Home Solar Heating System, Rare, But It Works

By DALE SINGER

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — A fresh snowfall blanketed the area overnight and the afternoon high temperature was a sunny 2 degrees above zero, but Tim and Wanda Michels still had to turn off the radiators in their home.

The Michels' 40-year-old home features a passive solar energy system, partially financed by the Department of Energy. It is one of a few homes nationwide converted to take advantage of the natural heating from the sun.

Michels, an energy consultant who designed the system as well as an intricate computer-monitoring system to keep track of the results, was surprised when he received approval in 1977 for federal money to help the conversion.

"They were extremely interested because at the time I believe this was the only retrofit they had," he said in an interview in his living room, which features a large picture window facing south. "A couple of years ago the concept of a retrofit to a passive system was laughed at."

Passive systems differ from active solar systems, he said, in the way they take advantage of the sun.

"Most people's image of a solar collector is a panel on the roof. But with that system, the sun first has to heat up black pipes, then air or water has to take the heat away to heat exchangers which bring the sun's heat to where it's needed.

"Here, the sun can come directly through the glass to the space that needs the heat. When the sun is out, it really toasts this place. Yesterday was perfect. We had to run around turning the radiators off."

Besides the 140-square-foot window, the system includes a 15-foot cathedral ceiling in the living room which traps the excess heat, a fan to circulate the excess heat to the north part of the house and an exterior greenhouse that channels heat through vents near the window.

Work on the house also included standard conservation techniques such as improved insulation and closing of any leaks that allowed heat to escape to the outside.

The conversion was a lot of work — "It was a real mess for about 10 months," Michels said — and cost about $11,000 for his 2,300 square feet of second-floor living space. But he figures he's saving 80 percent on energy costs.

When the furnace needed replacing, Michels bought one half the size. His figures show that inside comfort of 68 degrees can be maintained for 24 hours on a sunny day with a temperature reading of zero.

The system helps keep things cool in the summer, too. Michels has no air conditioners, using insulation and natural ventilation instead.

A computer in the living room reads out data from the set of sensors that have been placed to help Michels analyze the success of his project. The temperature on each wall is measured in four different places, from outside to inside, and a special gas meter lets him know how much fuel the furnace alone is using.

The figures show him that a conversion such as his will pay the owner back in about 10 years. But with energy tax credits, rising fuel costs and the recent deregulation of natural gas, that time could be cut back to six or seven years — a favorable return on anybody's money.

The system is especially ideal for converting older homes with brick or masonry construction, Michels said.

"We can't abandon the older housing stock in this country, with projections of what we will need by the year 2000. Especially since most of the older buildings are where lower-income people live who can't afford to pay the increased energy bite."

A year-long period of intensive testing of the system begins in March, and Michels hopes the results will help convince Americans to end their wasteful energy ways.

ON THE HOUSE

What's new on the market?

THE PRODUCT — A caulking material guaranteed to last as long as you own your house.

Manufacturer's claim — That this caulk clings tightly to clean glass, wood, concrete, plaster, dry walls, brick, plastics, ceramic and metal...that it is highly resistant to cracking, is not affected by sunlight or most chemicals and can be painted after its skin has formed, generally two hours or longer after application...that it forms a hard, waterproof finish...that it is a tough acrylic with moisture-repelling silicone...and that if it cakes, peels or separates while you own your home, it will be replaced without charge.

Manufacturer's claim — That it can be used on virtually any dark surface and, once dry, will not smear...that it is as durable as paint, yet can be removed with a solvent such as alcohol or acetone...that it can be applied at temperatures ranging from 20 degrees to 160 degrees Fahrenheit...and that it does not have a nib that clogs or a felt tip that dries out.

THE PRODUCT — A four-way screwdriver.

Manufacturer's claim — That this tool takes the place of four individual screwdrivers, having two slotted bits 3-16ths of an inch and one-quarter of an inch, and two Phillips bits...that the bits lock into the barrel of the driver, while the barrel locks into the handle...that a flip of the barrel places the designated bit into position for use...that all bits are protected with black oxide for rust resistance...and that the handle has a triangular shape that fits the fist naturally for better comfort and more torque with less effort.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much useful information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

(The caulking material is manufactured by Red Devil, Inc., 2400 Vauxhall Road, Union, N.J. 07083; the white marker by the Sanford Corp., 2740 Washington Blvd., Bellwood, Ill. 60104; and the four-way screwdriver by the Stanley Works, 195 Lake St., New Britain, Conn. 06050.)

Economies In 2-Story House

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Cutting costs on home construction isn't easy in these inflationary times, but it can be done, according to a new government booklet.

Among its tips are:

— Remember that rectangular homes are the most economical and two-story designs are cheaper because they need less roof area. A single gable roof is least expensive because many peaks and valleys are hard to build and flat roofs are expensive to maintain.

— Select a site with firm, well-drained soil and convenient access to utilities and sewage disposal.

— Orient the house for best ventilation and sun exposure to save energy: use a southern exposure in cooler climates to take advantage of solar heat but avoid it in warm areas to cut cooling expenses.

Gardening Questions

Q. When will Arbor Day be held this year? (Mrs. W.S., Concord)

A. Arbor Week is the week of March 11. Any day during that week may be designated locally as Arbor Day. North Carolinians are encouraged to help beautify and conserve the state's resources by planting trees and shrubs during Arbor Week. (Dick Allison, extension forestry specialist)

Q. What is the best type of site for growing a crepe myrtle? (C.G., Wilmington)

A. Crepe myrtle is not particular about soil. But it will grow best in a loam that is slightly acid. A pH of 5 to 6.5 is best. Crepe myrtles do need to be in a sunny, well drained location. Full sun is needed for maximum blooms. Powdery mildew is the biggest disease problem of crepe myrtle. It can be controlled with a fungicide. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. Which is the best way to run rows in a garden? East and west or north and south? (H.W., Winston-Salem)

A. East and west. Your vegetables will get more sun this way. Here's another tip: Group tall-growing vegetables together, and don't plant tall-growing vegetables on the south side of lower growing ones. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Q. My lima beans grew well last summer but the pods did not fill out properly. I planted the Fordhook variety and I did not use nitrogen fertilizer on them. How can I be more successful this summer? (H.W., Carthage)

A. The fact that you did not use any nitrogen might have been the cause of your problem. You could have also planted too late. Lima beans, and especially Fordhook, do not set pods well in mid-summer. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Last Longer In Deionized Water

LOMBARD, Ill. (UPI) — Florists have discovered how to make cut flowers last longer. They use deionized water, or water from which virtually all minerals and salts have been removed.

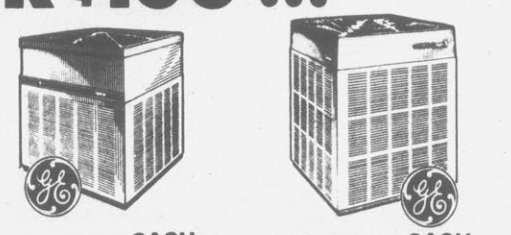

According to the Water Quality Association, cut flowers which typically may last 5.5 days in ordinary tap water may stay fresh for nine days in deionized water. By adding a special preservative to the water, vase life may be extended further to 10.25 days. Even though the preservative may add little more than an extra day, it's important because it helps maintain flower color.

Tarot Card Readers Play Part-Time Psychiatrists

By CYNTHIA STEVENS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — They pay $3.50, take a number, then sit at a table and stare at flowered wallpaper, waiting for a tarot card reader to resolve all their conflicts and deliver their dreams in 15 minutes.

Many customers at the Caravan Tea Garden, like clients of psychics, palmists and astrologers elsewhere, are regulars. Some go every week, even every day, to consult the occult on the course of their lives.

In New York and on the West Coast, increased interest in the supernatural means increased business for its practioners.

"We're the poor man's psychiatrist," says Marilyn Ficlare, the Caravan tearoom owner. She says her clientele has tripled in the last year. Her eight readers, all said to be gifted with extrasensory perception, handle about 30 people each evening. Up to 200 would-be customers, mostly women, are turned away every week.

Ms. Ficlare says a reading is "almost like a confessional." And Joan, a Caravan reader, says: "There's almost a panic on because of the economy. People are afraid of losing their jobs, homes and husbands' attentions. The children have gone haywire."

Tarot readers who work for tips in Manhattan's two tearooms are one facet of a nationwide hodgepodge that includes storefront gypsy palmists, astrologers working at home, and psychometrists, who trace a client's past, present and future by feeling "vibrations" in a personal item. Even some psychotherapists admit to using astrology.

Interest in the occult has increased dramatically in a decade, spreading from the '60s hippie counterculture. It has spawned horoscope columns, astrology magazines and movies with psychic themes.

Parapsychologists attribute the boom to fascination with Eastern mysticism and disillusionment with a world that has failed to erase violence and poverty. It coincides with a yen for an emotional, intuitive, spiritual approach to life, a search for the answer.

How much credence can be put in occultists who claim that "forces" outside the mind and physical environment allow them to perceive another person's emotional and mental state? Answers vary.

Take Dr. Bernard Rosenblum, a New York psychiatrist, who uses astrological charts "to help a person get a real in-depth understanding of who he is in terms of his potential."

Some astrologers, like Marcia Kaplan, insist they're not predicting the future, only analyzing personalities in terms of probabilities.

Ms. Kaplan, 30, is editor of four astrology publications. She says astrology is a "based on 6,000 years of observation of human behavior. There's a tremendous amount of information in it on what people are likely to do in a given set of circumstances."

She charges up to $75 for three hours. Her clients, she says, are "very put together, achieving interested, interesting, intelligent middle class." Many have been in therapy and she says she's had therapists as clients — "There's starting to be a hookup."

Tony Joseph of San Francisco, who's working toward a license in marriage and family counseling, says his experience in tarot, palmistry and astrology can be a tool for clients. "You can point out potential difficulties and see areas of growth," says Joseph, who has a master's degree in psychology.

Most scientists are skeptical. "People who go to astrologers, psychics and assorted seers are being deceived. They're being sold an empty bill of goods," says Paul Kurtz, philosophy professor at the State University of New York at Buffalo and head of the Committee for the Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal.

He insists psychic claims have no scientific foundation and says interest in the occult stems from loneliness. "They like to talk to somebody. They want someone to take an interest in them."

Most believers insist psychics are right 80 percent to 90 percent of the time. "Psychics have good or better percentage of success as the medical profession," says Gloria Rivers, an astrologer-psychic in Lewiston, Calif. "Because a surgeon loses a patient on the table doesn't mean he's a bad surgeon."

There's also a compulsion to return. The waiting list for one New York psychic is a year and a half, followers say, and it's not unusual to have a three-month wait. Prices for private sessions, which last up two hours, are usually about $30, although some astrologers in San Francisco are known to ask from $200 to $400.

In the end, the motivation often is the same — a need to learn when and how troubles will end.

And practitioners say clients almost always go away satisfied.

"When the psychiatrists can't deal with anybody anymore they send them to me," says 80-year-old Bolla Nordick, who like many psychics, believes in reincarnation. Knowing "the previous lifetime helps understand certain fears about this lifetime. It's a carryover from the past. Once you understand it, you can let it go."

Mrs. Nordick, a British-born widow who wears fresh flowers in the white braid wound around her head, has noticed a growing public acceptance of the occult. "New York is becoming a city of psychics," she says. "When I first came in the 1950s people said not to mention tarot or I'd be put in jail."

Fortune tellers still can go to jail. In Los Angeles, it's a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of $500 and up to six months in jail. But deputy city attorney Mark Brown says police don't actively pursue fortune tellers unless it's "commercial, conspicuous and complained of, with complained of being the big one."

Graveyard A 'Gem' To Caretakers

By NANCY KERCHEVAL
Associated Press Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Giant stone jigsaw puzzles sit atop old horizontal grave markers. The doors to 18th-century mausoleums are blocked with fresh concrete and bricks.

No one comes to put flowers on the graves. No one has been buried at Old St. Paul's Church Cemetery since 1943, where the first interment was in 1739.

But two people watch over the cemetery, which belongs to the oldest parish in Baltimore.

Gunner Richardt and Pat Diniar work every Saturday to restore the gravesites — putting the jigsaw puzzles of the markers together — hoping people will one day wander through the area to view a touch of Maryland history.

"This is a living place to me," says Ms. Diniar. "It's not a place for the dead — it's an historical place."

Richardt, a psychologist at the Maryland Penitentiary, became the caretaker 10 years ago when he was in college and needed a part-time job. But after college, he stayed.

"I got attached to the place. There was a sense of territorial imperative I recognized. It's like finding an old gem in the rough which can stand some polishing."

The first few years, weeds thrived in the nearly three acres of gravesites and vandals occasionally disturbed the mausoleums. But in recent years, Richardt has gotten the vegetation under control and says there's been no vandalism in 2½ years.

The cemetery began deteriorating in 1892, he says, and the original plot identifying the graves was destroyed in the Baltimore fire of 1904. "We don't know who's here except by the markers."

Among those interred are Samuel Chase, a signer of the Declaration of Independence and U.S. Supreme Court justice who died in 1811, and his father, the Rev. Thomas Chase, first pastor of Old St. Paul's who died in 1780. George Armistead, the defender of Fort McHenry, is buried there, as well as the Hollingsworths, the Worthingtons and other 18th century patriots.

"It was the place to be buried at one time in the 1850s. If you were interred at St. Paul's you had social prominence. At that time, most of the wealthy persons were Episcopalians. The size of the monuments show the financial situation of the families," Richardt says.

Isaac McKim, a well-known philanthropist and father of Baltimore's clipper ships, was buried beneath a six-ton monument.

Ms. Diniar, a patient coordinator at Johns Hopkins Hospital, joined Richardt at the cemetery four years ago, allowing him to turn his attention from mowing the grass to restoring the grave markers.

He finds pieces of broken sandstone and then searches for the stones to which they belong. Or he lays them aside and then, weeks later, he'll notice a stone with a missing piece that matches one he found earlier.

Although some inscriptions are worn away, Richardt can read most. "After you read enough you get a feel of what it should say," he says. "They really pour emotions into stones."

Richardt finds himself a member of a special breed.

"Most caretakers take care by planting, mowing, moving stones. The unique aspect of our work is we're restoring stones that are broken," he said.

Ms. Diniar looks at her work in another way. "It's like a trust," she says. "It belongs to everybody in the United States. We felt like trustees of part of our heritage. It's odd but there aren't any cemeteries in the city being restored."

There's a lot of work still to do. Richardt says he can only rebuild eight mausoleums a year. About 50 need repair.

"I'd like to see it done while I'm still alive — see it cared for when I'm dead," adds Ms. Diniar. "I will miss being a part of it."

A Silent, Year-Long War In Peace Corps Erupted

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — To many in the Peace Corps, the evening of Wednesday, Nov. 8, 1978, is known as "The Last Supper."

At a restaurant in Mohammedia, Morocco, 20 miles outside Casablanca, Carolyn Payton, 53-year-old black psychologist, tearfully told a supper meeting of Peace Corps country directors, desk officers and regional officials that she was through. She'd had it. It was over.

It had been almost 13 months since she'd taken over as the Peace Corps' first black and first woman director. Now she was quitting. The assembled Peace Corps officials tried to talk her out of it.

She moved across the room to speak with some black Peace Corps workers. At the first table, her deputy, Ruth Saxe, asked the group what they would do when Carolyn resigned. "It was clearly a request for mass resignation," says one participant. Only one person offered her resignation and she eventually stayed on.

Late that night, Sam Brown, 35-year-old director of ACTION, Peace Corps' parent agency, returned from another dinner to the hotel in Mohammedia where the Peace Corps was holding an annual regional meeting. He learned of Ms. Payton's dinner. He was furious that she had disclosed her intention before resolving it with him, incensed at the bid for mass resignations.

From his room at 1 a.m., Brown telephoned Ms. Payton. He says he was blunt. He told her in undiplomatic language to get out of the country. She hung up on him.

The next day, Ms. Payton changed her mind about quitting but the matter was out of her hands. Sixteen days later, the White House announced her forced resignation. Ms. Saxe left, too.

How did Sam Brown — bright, young light in the left-liberal wing of the Democratic Party, organizer of the 1969 anti-Vietnam War moratorium, former Colorado state treasurer — come to fire Ms. Payton? She was his choice alone, after a six-month search, without pressure from the White House or Capitol Hill.

The answers lie in the silent war inside the Peace Corps, which lasted one full year. At stake were elementary issues over what kind of Americans the Peace Corps would send abroad, where they would go and what they would do when they got there. In question was what kind of Peace Corps was appropriate to the world of the 1970s and 1980s, a world with 50 nations younger than the Peace Corps itself.

Brown is determined to get on with the changes he believes are needed, and Congress is certain to take a look this year to be sure it is satisfied with that direction.

When Brown and Ms. Payton took over, they found the corps shrunk to fewer than 7,000 volunteers from a mid-1960s high of 15,000. They found training cut from 12 weeks to eight.

They found political appointments, like a former press secretary to Spiro T. Agnew as country director in the Phillippines. They found country directors who couldn't speak the language of the country where they were stationed.

They found the Richard Nixon administration had gone a long way in replacing young, liberal arts graduates in the Peace Corps — some of whom had protested Vietnam policies — with older, technical specialists who often did not work with poor people in villages.

The problems were obvious to both Brown and Ms. Payton; they disagreed on the solutions.

Brown thought that new strategies of development emerging in the Third World required the Peace Corps to redefine what work it did and concentrate on that work. Brown believed the Peace Corps with its limited budget of only $95 million a year should focus on helping the poorest of the poor to survive.

He believed that if the work was valuable it would guarantee that the corps contributed to better understanding between Americans and the third world.

For Ms. Payton, "the volunteer experience" and its contribution to international understanding was more important than the work.

In Ms. Payton's view, "The Peace Corps' primary purpose is enhancing world peace and friendship. I never focus on the task per se, only as a means to that end. I emphasize the human relationship rather than the quantifiable goal," she says.

That struck Brown as backward. "If the volunteer experience is primary, you may construct lots just leeching off the country. Peace Corps can be a meaningful development agency."

Brown has reduced the proportion of volunteers in teaching from 55 percent to 44 percent, but teaching English as either a second or a third language remains the largest single activity of volunteers. With programs under revision, the best estimate now is that between 28 percent and 38 percent, or up to 2,700 of the 7,000 volunteers, teach English.

Brown notes than fewer than 10 percent of the people in the Third World reach high school. "Those who do are the elites, the ones who are going to make it," he says. "We should be out in the villages with the poorest of the poor, doing the hardest, dirtiest work there is."

Brown feels that children getting only two or three years in school need "education for survival." A child in a village 30 days by camel from the capital city, with impure water, inadequate protein and a very short life expectancy has little need for a second or third language or mathematics and science courses designed to prepare for high school, they feel.

For Brown, this means an end to Peace Corps volunteers teaching linear algebra in universities, an end to the use of language texts that talk about the bistro in Paris.

He wants volunteers who can train people to dig wells for good water, to keep their cattle away from newly planted areas, to start fisheries to increase protein in the diet, and they want to use texts that deal with these questions.

But Ms. Payton sees it differently. "It is wrong for the Peace Corps to tell other countries what to do. It is arrogant and neo-colonialist for the American Peace Corps to say to a nation, 'We will no longer teach your children mathematics and science,' or 'We will not teach your children an international language'," she says.

Brown counters, "It's just as colonialist to let a country tell us what to do as to tell them," he says. "That's not a partnership of equals. In a true partnership, both sides have interests and they make a deal when they can both get something they want."

English teaching was not the only point of conflict between Brown and Ms. Payton. Brown wanted to change the countries where the Peace Corps worked, part of his policy to concentrate the agency's scarce resources on the poorest people.

So he is taking the Peace Corps into Bangladesh, Malawi, Tanzania and the Congo, which he notes "are all very different politically but all very poor." He plans reductions in Korea and several other Asian and Latin American countries. "And for the first time in its history, the Peace Corps is leaving one country voluntarily without any pressure," Brown says. The country is the oil-rich Persian Gulf nation of Bahrain.

This runs entirely counter to Ms. Payton's view of the corps as primarily a means of enhancing peace and friendship.

"We should only come out if we don't need to be there and that would only occur if there were enough there who were familiar with Americans and enough Americans who were familiar with those people," Ms. Payton says. "I'm trying to think of such a country."

Another dispute developed between Brown and Ms. Payton over what kind of Americans the Peace Corps would send abroad, and in particular over Brown's methods for increasing minority participation.

Together, they had some success in integrating high-level Peace Corps jobs. Of the 34 country directors named since Brown took over, 14 belong to minorities and 12 are women.

But the Peace Corps continues to be a predominantly white, college-educated, middle-class operation. A year ago, only 5.2 percent of the volunteers were minorities. Seven percent of last summer's recruits were minorities. By 1982, Brown wants 20 percent of the volunteers to be blacks, Hispanics or Indians.

"That's not a quota," Brown says. "That's just what the country is. The volunteers have got to reflect more of America."

Brown felt the best way to attract minorities and older volunteers was to create a more flexible Peace Corps: recruit generalists, even if they lack language skills or college degrees; plan projects that don't require doctors, engineers or other specialists; break away from the traditional two-year volunteer commitment and get shorter projects under way; coordinate activities with the foreign nation's own volunteers.

Ms. Payton resisted, and by all accounts, that resistance blocked most of the changes Brown advocated.

"To change programming to get minorities is racism," she says. "You don't have to lower standards to get minorities."

A leading candidate to replace Ms. Payton as Peace Corps director is Larry Brown, assistant ACTION director for recruitment. He agrees with Sam Brown on minority recruitment.

"Without changing our programming, I can get 8 to 10 percent minorities," Larry Brown predicts. "But we won't reach our goal unless we turn programming around."

ACTION's domestic programs director, John Lewis, agrees. "This is a deliberate effort to bring in people who were left behind," says Lewis, who as head of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee from 1963 to 1966 was a legend in the civil rights movement. "People who have never seen the inside of a college, elderly people, women and minorities all have a lot to offer. These people shouldn't be discriminated against."

Looking back on the disputes with Ms. Payton, Brown says they lacked a basic philosophic agreement. "We never had that discussion before she was hired," he said. "That's my fault."

"I felt Peace Corps should have a lot of latitude so long as the policy was being implemented and the administration was sound."

Ms. Payton and Ms. Saxe contend that Brown was dictatorial in dealing with the Peace Corps.

"I made the mistake of assuming the Peace Corps director title meant I made policy," Ms. Payton said. "But I was constantly brought into check. I was never allowed to be director."

In her view, the only solution to such problems is to return the Peace Corps to its former status as an independent agency. Rep. Don Bonker, D-Wash., has introduced a bill to accomplish that end.

But Brown opposes taking the Peace Corps out of ACTION now, arguing the volunteer agencies should be kept together. Just last month, he persuaded Carter and the president's reorganization planners to reject proposals either to make the Peace Corps independent or fold it into the newly proposed International Development Cooperation Administration.

Japanese Are Resisting Anti-Smoking Campaign

By MARIANNA OHE

TOKYO (UPI) — Japanese commuters take a last drag as the train rolls in, grind out their butts on the platform as the doors open, and pile into the crowded cars — leaving a pall of smoke hanging in the station.

A determined anti-smoking campaign is taking root in Japan, but you'd never know it living here day-to-day.

At Tokyo news conferences, there is usually one ash tray for every two or three seats. Ash trays also pepper business offices, lobbies and waiting rooms.

"I'd rather die than quit smoking," many Japanese say with a complacent smile.

A government monopoly called the Japan Tobacco and Salt Corporation, which manufactures and sells all tobacco products, places only a gentle reminder on cigarette packages: "Let's be careful about excessive smoking for the sake of our health."

The warning's cautious phrasing owes something to the fact that revenue from tobacco sales is an important source of income for the deficit-beset central government.

About 29 million men — nearly three out of four males compared with two out of five American men — are smokers, according to the tobacco corporation's estimates. About 6.6 million women are smokers. Together, they smoked 389 billion cigarettes in 1976.

But a survey last May showed that while the number of men who said they smoked decreased by 0.4 percent over a year earlier, 16.2 percent of the women polled admitted to smoking, up 1.1 percent from the previous year.

The survey found the largest group of women smokers were young and either service industry employees or women in business for themselves.

"I have the feeling they're just puffing to assert their freedom," says a 30-year-old Japanese professional woman who began smoking in college to ease tension during thesis writing.

"In the past, daughters of good families never smoked," she says. "Only uneducated or degenerate women or bar hostesses did. In most business offices now, there is a kind of tacit agreement that female employees won't smoke while on the job because it looks unladylike. So the women go to the ladies room to smoke, or to coffee shops during their lunch hour. It's a way to break free from all the inhibition."

Others believe young women associate smoking with sophistication and high fashion. "Cigarettes are the action accessory," went a slogan used by the government tobacco company about 10 years ago to attract young women to the habit.

But recent reports on the connection between smoking and such diseases as cancer has had some impact on Japanese smoking habits. The smoking rate among Japanese men has decreased steadily since it peaked at 83.7 percent in 1966.

Japanese smokers are increasingly turning to cigarette brands with lower levels of tar and nicotine. The average cigarette this fiscal year contains 1.11 milligrams of nicotine and 16.5 milligrams of tar — down 0.009 and 0.6 milligrams respectively from the previous year — according to the government.

The corporation says the decrease is largely due to the instant popularity of "Mild Seven," a low-tar, low-nicotine filter brand that was introduced last year and became the nation's best-selling cigarette within 12 months.

The corporation says nicotine and tar levels in Japanese cigarettes have dropped 29.8 and 16.7 percent, respectively, in the past seven years.

Cigarette sales also dropped for the first time in 1976 to about $8 billion. The trend has continued and an alarmed tobacco corporation recently reported only 24.5 billion cigarettes were sold last November, down 2.6 percent over a year earlier.

"Hate-smoking" groups have sprouted up around the country, determined to assert their right to breathe smoke-free air. Pressure from such groups recently led the Health and Welfare Ministry to ban smoking in waiting rooms of state and municipal hospitals.

It also was instrumental in getting Japanese airlines to introduce no-smoking sections on domestic flights, and a number of Tokyo train stations to forbid smoking on platforms during rush hours.

A group of lawmakers in Japan's parliament plans to introduce a bill banning smoking in all public places and transportation vehicles unless specifically permitted, as well as in all work places except for designated areas.

"It is wrong for the government to make money by exploiting this habit which is eating away at the health of the nation," says Kazuto Mukaiyama, a member of the parliamentary anti-smoking group and of Japan's ruling Liberal Democratic Party.

But with all the exertions of the anti-smoking groups, the government is unlikely to launch any major campaign to educate the public to the hazards of smoking.

Tanaka says Japanese studies show deaths due to lung cancer in Japan are 3.6 times higher among smokers than among nonsmokers. He says he thinks it would be better if Japan's tobacco industry were in private hands so the government could take a more disinterested stand.

But at the same time he maintains no government in any country can restrict smoking. "Finally, it is a question of individual will," he says.

An official of the tobacco corporation, asked if he thinks the trend toward increased smoking among young women is a good thing, replies: "We are not in a position to support or not support the situation. We take it as it is and make our sales policy on this basis. We believe we should supply what cigarettes the consumer wants."

Concerning studies showing smoking to be dangerous to health, the official says, "There are no concrete results. There are findings showing smoking is one of many causes of certain diseases. We are not planning to single out only smoking."

The official says the corporation supports the basic idea of rights of non-smokers and was first to organize a campaign for more "mannerly and clean" smoking. "But if it goes to the point of restricting smoking, it invades the rights of smokers," he says.

He says the corporation advertises on radio and television only when introducing new brands or promoting its "smoking clean" campaign, but added it runs ads in other kinds of media for brands already on the market.

The majority of Japanese are not too gung-ho on the smoking question either, although a solid minority support the antismoking campaign.

A recent newspaper poll showed 27.7 percent of the respondents supported the anti-smoking campaigns, 2.4 percent favored a total ban on smoking, 23.4 percent felt nonsmokers should "not interfere with individual freedom." Of smokers, 19.1 percent said they didn't care one way or another, and 17.6 percent said they felt the antismoking campaigners are making "a big fuss."

Just Dial 111 For Rescue Dog

By SUE BAKER

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — Switzerland, efficient as ever, must be one of the few countries in the world where you can telephone someone who has no telephone.

Dial 111, the Swiss information service, and you're given the number of the nearest telephone. It's up to you to persuade whoever answers to bring the person you are calling to the phone or pass on your message. That number will also get you a mountain rescue dog.

It's all part of the service the Swiss post and telecommunications, PTT, provides to its 2½ million subscribers — and non-subscribers.

For as little as six cents from home or 24 cents from a public callbox, you can dial one of 27 three-digit numbers that offer a whole range of services.

There are numbers to call for help with leaky central heating, cars that break down in the middle of the night, the nearest pharmacy open on a Sunday or the number of the winning ticket in the latest national lottery.

There is an automatic wakeup system and information on anything from current exhibitions to film, theater, museum and concert programs.

If in "moral distress," the "helping hand" service offers "private, anonymous and denominationally neutral" advice.

The Swiss have the right to vote on all local and national issues, however small. They can get the results of elections and referendums by dialing 180.

The money-conscious Swiss have two financial service numbers: one for up-to-date foreign exchange rates and another for stock market bulletins.

The Swiss news agency gives eight daily reports of international and domestic news in German (167) and French (168). Its number for sports results is 164.

Switzerland has 39.74 telephones per 100 people, slightly higher than the United States' 38.49. Sweden is tops with 52.99.

Americans have more extensions — 71.80 phones and extensions per 100 people. Sweden has 68.90 and Switzerland is third with 63.80, followed by Canada with 60.40, according to a 1977 Bell Systems report.

Figures show Mexico by far the most talkative: 2,670 calls per telephone, the United Kingdom third with 762 and Switzerland fourth with 490.

Business Notes

POSTED RECORDS

Vermont American Corp., in its quarterly report to shareholders, indicated that record annual sales and earnings were achieved by the company in 1978.

In the year ended Dec. 31, sales were $145,684,000 compared with $138,038,000 last year. Net income was $9,800,000 compared with $9,449,000 in 1977, the company reported.

In the fourth quarter, sales were $37,360,000 compared with $38,883,000 a year earlier. Net income for the quarter was $3,050,000 compared with $2,981,000 in the fourth quarter a year ago.

NEW BOARD MEMBER

Robert L. Beaman, vice president of operations for Fast Fare Inc., was elected to serve on the board of directors of the North Carolina Association of Convenience Stores.

Beaman joined Fast Fare eight years ago after receiving a degree from East Carolina University. He began with the company as a store manager, became a division manager, moved up to director of operations in 1975 and then vice president in 1977.

DEBIT CARD

North Carolina National Bank announced that later this month it will become the first bank in the state to offer a Visa debit card, a reusable "plastic check," when it begins issuing NCNB Checkmate, a new service linked to checking accounts.

NCNB said that Checkmate will allow users to pay for goods and services directly from their checking accounts by using a blue, white and gold Visa card with "NCNB Checkmate" printed on the blue band.

The card, it was noted, will work just like a Visa card, except that purchases will be deducted directly from customers' checking accounts just as if they had written a check.

PROPOSED MERGER

Liberty Bank and Trust Co. of Durham terminated its merger negotiations with Southern National Bank in Lumberton and has executed an agreement to join Planters National Bank, headquartered in Rocky Mount, according to a joint announcement by Liberty and PNB officials.

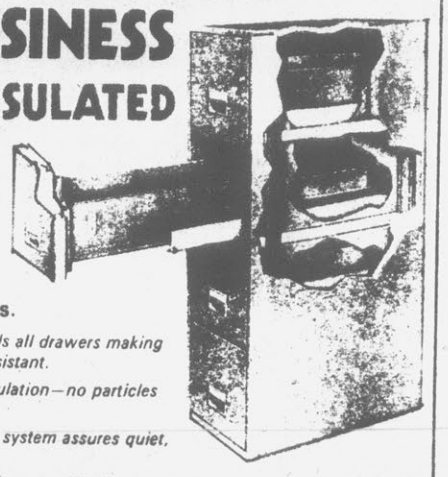

The proposed merger terms call for a cash acquisition of Liberty by Planters Bank. The agreement has been approved by the boards of the two banks and signed by the respective chief executive officers.

The proposed acquisition is now subject to approval by Liberty's shareholders and by various state and federal regulatory authorities.

At year end, Liberty's assets exceeded $15,600,000 with four branches in Durham. Planters assets exceeded $320,000,000 with 35 offices in 17 North Carolina cities.

Steel Price Increases Announced

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Three major U.S. steel companies have announced price increases that they say fall within the Carter administration's inflation guidelines.

Friday's announcements by Bethlehem, Jones & Laughlin and Republic steel companies came two weeks after U.S. Steel Corp., the nation's largest steelmaker, said it would increase prices 4 percent to 6 percent on a variety of products.

All the increases are effective April

A New Life In Walking

LONG HIKE—Peter Jenkins, 27, spent five years walking across the United States, acquiring a wife and a new outlook on the country in the process. He has written a book, "A Walk Across America," about his travels.

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — When Peter Jenkins decided to see America first, he did it the hard way. He walked.

Jenkins hiked out of Alfred, N.Y., on Oct. 15, 1973, figuring he'd roam the country for about eight months. Instead, he was gone for more than five years on a rambling walk across America that eventually led through 17 states and the District of Columbia and totaled nearly 5,000 miles before it ended Jan. 18, 1979, at Florence, Ore.

"I was 22 when I started," the powerfully built, red-bearded man says. "I'm 27 now, and I don't think I'll be doing much walking again — at least, not for a while."

Jenkins made his trip in two segments. The first led from Alfred to New Orleans, and he tells about his experiences on this hike in his book "A Walk Across America." After spending about a year in New Orleans — where he met and married Barbara Pennell — he and his new wife set out on the second leg, New Orleans to Florence. Jenkins says he will tell of this long hike in another book.

An amiable, soft-spoken man, Jenkins says he set out on the first leg of his hike — accompanied by his dog, Cooper, who was later to die along the way — because:

"I had all these swirling feelings and emotions. A lot of it was disillusionment. I was married at 19 and that didn't work out. Then there was disillusionment with the country. A lot of my generation just stopped listening to our elders, all we wanted to listen to was rock stars and people like that. Their songs became our anthems.

"I was being torn apart, and finally I got fed up. I was sick of listening to everyone, and I just decided that I was going to go out and find out once and for all what America was. Well, I did find out. A lot of my friends dropped out and they came back in worse shape than when they left. But I came back in much better shape."

Jenkins continues, "My plan was to check out America and if it wasn't good, then I was going to check out other countries. I'm glad I did this country first because I found it full of fantastic people. That's why I took so long.

"I started staying with people — a mountain man, a rancher, a black family — that became teachers to me. They taught me more than any textbook on relations between people. When I started I had a lot of hopeless feelings about this country, now I just love it so much."

Jenkins, who thinks he wore out about 15 pairs of boots on the first leg of his hike and another 15 on the second, says he carried everything he needed — food, tent, clothing, bedding — on his back.

"The pack weighed anywhere from 50 to 70 pounds," he recalls with a smile. "In the summer it's heavier because you've got to carry a great deal of water."

He held a variety of jobs to earn the money to get to New Orleans — "I worked in a sawmill, as a farm hand harvesting potatoes, on a ranch, as a tree surgeon."

In New Orleans, he says he worked on an off-shore oil rig to earn money to continue on the second leg. "I was on a week and off a week, so on my off weeks Barbara and I trained. We walked and jogged, farther and farther each time, until we were ready."

He says they tried to walk an hour and then rest 15 minutes, "but it depends on the time of the year. In summer you have to rest more, in winter you've got to keep going because of the cold."

He again held a variety of jobs on the second part of the hike, one of them as a waiter in a Mexican restaurant in Dallas.

Jenkins, a native of Greenwich, Conn., says he and his wife plan to settle on the Gulf Coast near New Orleans.

"In addition to writing a book about the second part of the hike," he says, "I want to keep on writing. I want to tell stories — fiction and nonfiction. I met a lot of incredible people in America and I heard a lot of wonderful stories. I hope to tell them."

Childfind Program

'If The Hands That Reach Could Touch'

Rebecca Buffaloe

Monday, March 5, is one of twelve "Child Find Days" in North Carolina as designated by Governor James B. Hunt.

"Child Find Day" is an effort to locate all handicapped and gifted children, ages birth through 21, who are not currently receiving appropriate educational services.

In 1974, the N. C. Department of Public Instruction joined forces with the Department of Human Resources to conduct a serach, known as "Count the Children," which yielded information on many unserved and inappropriately served children.

In 1977, the state General Assembly passed chapter 927 of the Equal Education Opportunity Act, which calls for a yearly census of children with special needs. This section is consistent with the federal laws which mandate equal education for every child, as well as a child find program.

PARENT ADVISORY COUNCIL

The Greenville City Schools System has formed a parents' advisory council for parents with special children in the city schools.

What constitutes a "Special child?" The list ranges from those who are mentally retarded, epileptic, learning disabled, cerebral palsied, and seriously emotionally disturbed, to those who are orthopedically impaired, autistic, multiple handicapped, pregnant, speech, hearing, or visually impaired, blind, genetically impaired or gifted and talented.

At the present time, the city school system is servicing 1,500 children with special needs. The total school population consists of roughly 5,000 children.

The advisory council, chaired by Mrs. Dianne Pickett, serves the school system by keeping up with what the schools are doing as to special children's needs. The group also serves as a kind of "welcoming committee" to new parents in the city school system with special children.

The group consists of ten parents representing different kinds of special need children in the system. These parents serve as a reacting group for the city system, interacting with the three facets of GCS services for special children: school level services, system level services, and community level services.

"I'M A PARENT, NOT A PROFESSIONAL"

One important aspect of the parent in advisory council is its struggle in aiding parents understanding the myriad forms and tests that special children must undergo in order to be adequately serviced.

"I'm a parent, not a professional," said Dianne Pickett. "There's a problem of using different levels of language."

One major problem for parents with special need children is the annual filing of the child's "Individual Educational Program" with the child's teacher. The IEP, is it is more commonly known to educators, helps determine a child's strengths and weaknesses, and helps point out what direction should be taken with the individual student's education.

"You have to get on the same level with IEP's," said Mrs. Pickett. "There's a problem of lack of parent participation."

Mrs. Pickett noted that there was a "communication lag" between parent and children, as well as with parents and the school house. The advisory group is working to bridge the parent-school gap.

INDIVIDUAL HELP OFFERED

Mrs. Pickett knows the struggle parents have with special need children. Her daughter, Roslyn, is in a self-contained classroom for learning disabled children at Elmhurst Elementary School.

Mrs. Pickett explained that although Roslyn had been termed physically fine by medical doctors, she knew that something indefinably was wrong with her.

"She was having trouble with hand-eye coordination," said Mrs. Pickett. "We just didn't know what to do."

When the Picketts, which include husband Daniel and older daughter, Celeste, moved from Charlotte to Greenville, they enrolled Roslyn in the Wahl-Coates School kindergarten.

Roslyn was retained in kindergarten, while a battery of test were performed to ascertain her problems.

"Testing is the thorn in everybody's side," said Mrs. Pickett. She also noted that there have been no tests developed to pinpoint learning disability.

"Five years ago, nobody knew about learning disability," said Mrs. Pickett. "Those kinds of problems were always termed 'behavioral'."

It was a tense time for the Picketts during the series of testing. Mrs. Pickett, who is an accomplished singer, had to drop her studies with the East Carolina University School of Music in order to help out with Roslyn.

"Identification is probably the hardest part," said Mrs. Pickett. "It was a never-ending battle until Roslyn was identified and placed in the special class. We wept for we knew she'd get individual help."

Roslyn, a vivacious seven-year-old, seems to enjoy her classes. She also has a special tutor from ECU who helps her with her studies.

"In three years' time, we hope to have her caught up, and hopefully have her participating in a regular classroom," concluded Mrs. Pickett.

"FREE AND APPROPRIATE EDUCATION"

"It's helpful to have a parents' advisory council," said Ann Harrison, director of exceptional children, Greenville City Schools. "When you work with these things so much, you tend to use a lot of jargon, which confuses a lot of people."

Mrs. Harrison explained that the advisory group serves as support for one another, and also helps to find out about special concerns from new parents in the school system.

Perhaps some of Mrs. Harrison's concern for special children stems from the fact the she has a child with special needs, who is now grown.

Since Mrs. Harrison has come to work with the city system, many innovative programs have come into effect, not only for special children, but others as well.

"The law says very clearly that all are entitled to 'free and appropriate education,'" said Mrs. Harrison.

Mrs. Harrison praised the childfind effort. Mrs. Harrison and Mrs. Pat James, supervisor of exceptional children for Pitt County Schools, serve as co-chairmen for the Interagency Child Service Team, which coordinates services for 25 different child service agencies and programs in the county.

Testing is "essential" for proper identification, said Mrs. Harrison.

"We like to do individual testing," said Mrs. Harrison. "Some children have difficulty in group testing. We also can't identify a child's problems with just one test."

Mrs. Harrison pointed out the need for teachers to feel free to call on other special teachers for help with children's problems.

"I think we tend to put teachers up on a pedestal," said Mrs. Harrison. "They get guilt feelings when they can't help a child."

Mrs. Harrison noted that children "are a lot more alike than different" and called for the day when teachers will have more help in aiding special children.

ADOPTION OF CHILDFIND

The Greenville City Parent Advisory Council has adopted Childfind as sort of a special project, according to Mrs. Pickett. The group will try to get parents involved in doing "footwork" to identify pre-school children.

A screening of Greenville kindergarteners was held this past week at the Greenville Moose Lodge so that possible learning problems could be diagnosed.

The parent advisory group is offering a parent sharing group the fourth Tuesday of each month at St. James United Methodist Church.

The parent sharing group is open to all parents of special children, whether in the city or the county.

"Parents need to share emotional problems," said Mrs. Pickett. "It gets rough."

Dr. Charles Mitchell, president of the Pitt County Mental Health Association, has been meeting with the group, aiding the parents with personal problems.

"We want to deal with parents whose children have been passed on," said Mrs. Pickett. "That's why it's so important to identify children's problem while they're young. The older they get, the harder it is to help them."

Realistic Books Not Necessarily Beneficial

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

You cannot know the impact of a book on a child, but you can make educated guesses, says author Josette Frank.

One guess Miss Frank makes these days questions the wisdom of an award established in 1942 for children's books that deal with realism.

"Today we wonder if we were too successful," she said in an interview. She was speaking as consultant to the Child Study Children's Book Committee at the Bank Street College of Education in New York City. In that position she and 24 other mothers and grandmothers meet weekly to evaluate the more than 2,500 children's books sent them annually by publishers.

The committee of volunteers, all of whom have backgrounds in working with children, selects about 600 books for listing in an annual catalog recognized as an authority in its field.

Miss Frank said her doubts about the award arose because some books for 11, -12 and 13-year-olds today deal with drugs, abortions, sex before marriage and babies out of wedlock. Some almost give specific directions, she said.

"Children can and do know what goes on. But how far do you push their emotions about things they cannot handle?

"When we read these forbidden books as children, they were about adults doing these things. I can't believe this is something you give to 11-or 12-year-olds."

She feels just as doubtful about books whose realism extends to four-letter words and street language.

"Do you give (these books) with your approval? Ghetto children are more likely to read them, but isn't one of our jobs to make them familiar with good language?

"The committee is divided, it hasn't reached a decision on this."

Miss Frank said the catalog covers books for children from 3 through 13 years.

"We don't go into what are called 'young adult' books. The New York Public Library lists them very competently."

Besides, she said, "When children get to be 13 they're choosing their own books. They're going into adult books. They're choosing books by word of mouth.

"There are plenty of librarians and teachers who can judge a book on its beauty and literary value. We care about that, too."

But most of all the committee cares about the immediate and long-lasting effect books have on children, including the safety hazards some pose and the moral, ethical and educational issues they raise.

In an isolated incident a few years ago, the committee decided not to list a novel that had won a prestigious award.

"We felt (the book) was unmoral," Miss Frank said. It was about two children who ran away from home and lived in a library for a week. The children stole, and no adult character in the book ever told them stealing was wrong.

"We felt it was unseemly to present the book to children with our approval," Miss Frank said.

The committee was founded at the turn of the century as part of the Child Study Association. When the association disbanded in 1977, the committee moved to the Bank Street College of Education.

Its all-woman membership should not be interpreted as sexist. It's just that more women tend to be at leisure and available to attend the morning meetings, Miss Frank said. The members range in age from the 30s to Miss Frank herself, a vibrant 85.

She said the committee includes "...librarians and teachers, a pediatric nurse, a consultant to the book department of (a famous department store), a biology teacher, a history teacher."

Christmas Decorations Featured At State's Designer Showhouse

Pine Hall Farm, a country estate located on the outskirts of Raleigh, will be the site of the North Carolina Museum of History Associates, second "Designer Showhouse." Plans for the Showhouse have been announced by Mrs. Frank A. Daniels Jr., president of the Museum Associates, a statewide volunteer and financial support group for the N. C. Museum of History.

Mrs. Daniels also announced that Mrs. E. Runyon Tyler Jr. of Raleigh will serve as chairman of the Showhouse, with Mrs. Fred P. Parker III as co-chairman. The chairmen have set Nov. 25 through Dec. 16 of this year for the opening of the 19-room house to the public.

Mrs. Tyler said, "Designers from across the state will be invited to take part in the project which will be a major fund-raiser for the Museum of History."

Christmas decor will be featured.

The owners of Pine Hall Farm, Barry and Susan Foote, will move out of their Greek revival plantation house while it is being redecorated and on view. Foote, who plays professional baseball for the Philadelphia Phillies, and his wife share an interest in antiques and historic houses. Their purchase of Pine Hall Farm ended a three-year search for their own historic house.

Fotte said, "The book, "North Carolina's Capital, Raleigh," describes Pine Hall Farm as having been 'built around 1840 as the dominating structure for 5,000 acres of farm land. The lower portico is Doric, the upper, Ionic, and the columns appear to be solid tree trunks, hand planed into form.'"

In addition to the rooms which will be redecorated for viewing, several rooms will house boutiques with specialty items for sale, Mrs. Tyler said. The enclosed veranda will serve as a tea room where lunch will be served and other rooms will be rented in the evenings for private parties.

Profits from the Showhouse will be used by the Associates to purchase historical North Carolina artifacts for the Museum which receives only $4,000 annually from the state for acquisitions. Among items purchased with proceeds from the first Associate-sponsored showhouse in 1978 were an 18th century North Carolina-made barrel back corner cupboard and a rare 17th century document outlining conditions of settlement as stated by the eight Lords Proprietors. Funds have also been used for "Museum Days," which take the Museum collection and staff curators to communities across the state for traveling exhibits and for publications.

"Visitors to the Showhouse will see, not only the finest in interior decor, but the surrounding property, which includes stables, ponds and rolling pastures," said Betty Ann Parker, co-chairman.

PINE HALL FARM. . .will serve as the second "Designer Showhouse" to be used by the N. C. Museum of History Associates as a money-making project for the history museum. The 19-room plantation house is located near Raleigh and owned by pro baseball player Barry Foote and his wife, Susan. (N. C. State Archives Photo)

Clinton-Crist Vows Said In Immanuel Church

Immanuel Baptist Church was the scene of the Saturday wedding ceremony of Margaret Elizabeth Crist and James Frederick Clinton. The Rev. Donald Clinton, father of the bridegroom, performed the double ring ceremony at 2 p.m.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Margaret E. Crist of Fayetteville. The bridegroom is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. of Merry Hill.

The bride, given in marriage by her mother and her brother-in-law, John Thomas, wore a formal gown of white silkened organza over white peau de soie designed with a high neckline encircled with floral silk Venise lace. The sheer empire bodice was enhanced by an overlap of Venise lace, with the full bishop sleeves repeating the silk lace in appliques with the cuffs trimmed in miniature lace rows. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel length train were complemented by a flared flounce, topped by a row of scalloped Venise lace. The bride wore an elbow-length veil of silk illusion attached to a lace and seed pearl camelot cap. She carried a cascade of miniature white and pink carnations, blue silk bell blossoms, springerii and ivy, accented with gypsophilia.

Mrs. Cheryl Thomas of Fayetteville, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. She chose a formal length gown of rosejay lustre-glo designed with an open neckline featuring miniature rolled shoulder straps, fitted gathered bodice and A-line skirt. A crystal pleated jacket trimmed in ivory chantilly lace, designed with a high neckline and pearl button closure, complemented the outift. A rolled self-tie sash created a peplum effect below the waistline. The matron of honor carried a cluster bouquet of dark pink carnations, gypsophilia, garden greenery, tied with a pink sonic satin ribbon, highlighted with a touch of blue. She wore a pink silk blossom with gypsophilia in her hair.

Ms. Karen Crist of Cincinnati, Ohio, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. Ms. Mary Patricia Akers of Roanoke Rapids was bridesmaid, with Vanessa Beaman of Wilson as honorary attendant. The bridal attendants wore gowns similarly styled to the matron of honor's gown in blue lustre-glo and carried cluster bouquets of light pink carnations, gypsophilia and garden greenery, tied with blue satin streamers. They wore blue silk flowers and gypsophilia in their hair.

MRS. JAMES FREDERICK CLINTON

Vanessa Beaman, pianist, and Mrs. Diane Gerard of Washington, soloist, presented a program of wedding music.

Peter Clinton of Merry Hill, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. Ushers were Keith Piland of Winton and Douglas Amerson of New Bern.

A reception was given by the bride's mother following the ceremony in the church fellowship hall.

The bride is a student at East Carolina University and is a nurse intern in pediatrics at Pitt Memorial Hospital. The bridegroom is dairy and frozen food department manager of Winn-Dixie, Greenville. He attended East Carolina University.

A rehearsal dinner was held Friday in Colerain by Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Perry. The bridal couple was entertained with a pig picking.

Pre-School Census And Registration This Week

A pre-school census and registration for Greenville children who will be attending kindergarten or entering the first grade in Greenville schools during school year 1979-80 will be conducted the week of Monday, March 5 through Friday, March 9.

Eligibility for children to enter the kindergarten program is based on a child being five years old on or before October 16, 1979.

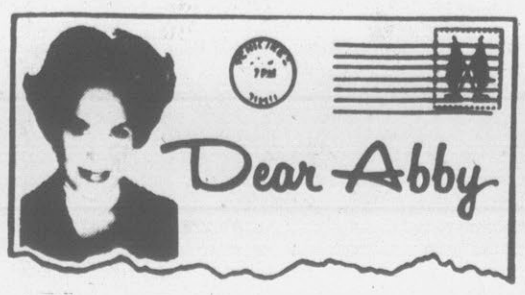

Certain immunizations are required, and can be obtained from a family doctor or at Pitt County Community Health Department Monday through Friday from 8 to 4 each day. Medical examination forms are being sent to known parents of children eligible for kindergarten in the coming school year, and these are to be completed by a doctor at the time of preschool medical exam and returned for registration purposes.

The same general procedures apply to children entering the first grade in any of the Greenville City Schools. The basic age requirement is that a child be six years old on or before October 16, 1979.

For those with children already enrolled in kindergarten in the city schools, it will not be necessary to complete the forms that have been mailed out or sent home by older students.

Any parent or guardian of an eligible child who has not received an explanatory letter and application form from the school office is urged to contact any of the offices of elementary schools or the central office, 752-4192.

Wife-Shopping's Easier In Good Ol' U.S.A.

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc

DEAR ABBY: About the letter from ONLY KIDDING, who compared women to automobiles, and your reply—"A restored antique is worth much more than a new model":

Maybe so, but a man keeps his antique car locked up to preserve it and brings it out in public only on special occasions. His antique wife would never hold still for that!

The ideal place to go wife-shopping would seem to be at a nudist camp, where all the merchandise is on display for inspection.

R.S. IN SWISHER, IOWA

DEAR R.S.: I understand that's the customary way to shop for a bride in some of the Mideast countries. So, kiss your Stars and Stripes!

DEAR ABBY: Fourteen years ago my husband had lower back pain and went to a doctor who told him to take a swim. Well, George can't swim. He nearly drowned.

He was still in pain, so he went to an orthopedic doctor who took X-rays and told George it wasn't his back, it was his hip. George let this doctor operate on his hip, then his neck started to bother him.

He went to a chiropractor, who gave him a series of adjustments which seemed to help some. But George bent down to take off his shoe and his back went out on him. By this time he was beginning to look like a pretzel.

The neck pain came back, so George tried acupuncture. That helped for a while, but not for long.

Three-quarters of George's life is gone and he's still walking the floors at night because he can't sleep for the pain.

We live only 36 miles from the Mayo Clinic, but my husband got into an argument with someone at the clinic 15 years ago and vowed he'd never go back.

Any suggestions before George turns into a complete pretzel?

MINNESOTA MRS.

DEAR MRS.: Tell George to bury the hatchet with the Mayo Clinic before you bury HIM. He needs a complete check-up—including from the neck up!

DEAR ABBY: How long does a person have to live in a place before it's "home"?

Even after 14 years of marriage, whenever my husband goes to see his parents he says, "I'm going home."

Maybe I'm out of line to get so upset, Abby, but it just burns me up to hear him say that. Don't you think "home" is where a man's wife and children are? Or do you think maybe my husband actually still feels more at home with his parents than he does with me?

ONLY HIS WIFE

DEAR ONLY: Where one has spent his childhood is usually "home" no matter how long he's been away from it. Many old-timers who have been on this side of the ocean most of their lives still refer to their native lands as "home," so don't take it personally.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "WISHING": Benjamin Franklin once said, "If a man could have HALF his wishes, he would double his troubles." (Small wonder someone told him to go fly a kite.)

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own-thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Dancing Can Whisk Those Troubles Away

CHICAGO (UPI) — An innovative program in dance and movement therapy is helping adult psychiatric patients at the University of Chicago Medical Center express themselves and interact more freely with other persons.

Gina Demos, a dance and movement therapist, teaches patients to use body movements to help them become more aware of themselves physically and to interact with each other in a way that is often easier than talking to each other. Mrs. Demos's lessons also help patients express their feelings and promote non-verbal dialogue.

Music chosen by the patients is played throughout the hour-long, twice weekly sessions, which begin with warm-up exercises. They can include stretching, shaking, swinging and contracting the body's limbs.

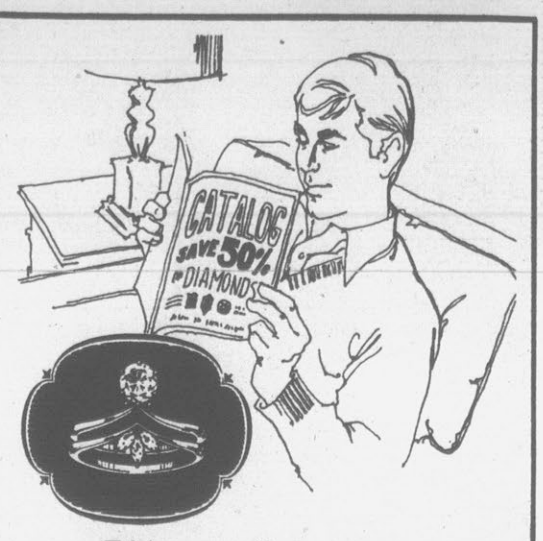

Choose Pillows With Care

NEWARK, Del. (AP) — Pillows cared for properly will last many years, so it is wise to buy good quality and select them carefully, advises University of Delaware extension home economist Jean Cranston.

Down pillows are the softest, she points out. Blended feather and down pillows come in different combinations: the higher the percentage of feathers, the firmer the pillow. Pillows filled entirely with feathers or synthetics are apt to be firmest.

In addition to selecting the filling and firmness you want, you can also choose from three basic sizes: standard, queen and king. Whatever pillow you choose, it should be odorless, resilient and free from lumps.

Almost all bed pillows manufactured today can be machine-washed and dried, with the exception of kapok.

Up Heart Rate

CHICAGO (UPI) — Night terrors — a form of nightmare — can increase heart beat from 60-80 beats per minute to 170 or more in a few minutes, say sleep experts at a Chicago mattress manufacturer. Such terrors occur most often in 3-to 5-year-olds, but can continue into adulthood, and there is no sure way of preventing them, the experts add.

Engagements Announced

MISS LOIS JEANETTE DAIL. . .is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Earl Dail of Fountain, who announce her engagement to Bruce Irvin Oakley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Marl Oakley of Farmville. The wedding will take place June 24.

MISS PAMELA LOU EDMONDSON. . .is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Mahlon Edmondson of Bethel, who announce her engagement to James Edward Buckthal, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Edward Buckthal of Clinton. The wedding will take place May 26.

Children's Books...

Miss Frank is a widow with two children and nine grandchildren. She kept her own name when she married in 1923. Her husband, Henry Jacobs, was a mechanical engineer.

Each member reads an estimated four to six books a week apiece. If discussion grows heated, several other members will read the controversial book(s) before a decision is reached on listing them in the catalog.

Miss Frank said committee members who review children's cookbooks "have to know both cookbooks and children."

"Some have material that is dangerous for children to use. Some are way beyond their ability and their interest.

"A book may look as if it is intended for 6-year-olds but be more suitable for 15-year-olds.

"Another thing we watch carefully is do-it-yourself and make-it-yourself books," she said, because some of them also use material children should not.

Occasionally, the committee writes a publisher to suggest certain pages with dangerous material be deleted. She recalled one book with a magic trick involving a string noose that required considerable dexterity to make. The string could strangle a child if not done correctly, she added.

Miss Frank said the committee also writes a publisher when it finds a bad racial slur.

"There's much less of that than there used to be," she said, but you still get a book occasionally that refers to American Indians as "savages," for example.

Miss Frank said her first big job was with the National Child Labor Committee when it was working for a national child labor law.

In retrospect, she sees the law as necessary — "Children were being exploited" — but "it isn't so good, really." It required them to go to school one day a week while working and no good employer would hire them for a good job on that basis, she said.

Asked what books she likes to give children, she named two by Wanda Ga'g, "Millions of Cats" and "The Funny Thing," and Margaret Wise Brown's "Goodnight Moon" for preschoolers and two Dr. Seuss books, "Horton Hatched the Egg" and Horton Hears a Who" for 5-year-olds.

"The outstanding book of recent times is E.B. White's 'Charlotte's Web,'" she said, adding emphatically, "not 'Stuart Little.' I think it is very traumatic for children.

"Some children I know have reacted badly to it, and I found it repellent."

The title character in "Stuart Little" is a mouse born to a woman. Miss Frank said she knew one child who had nightmares for weeks after reading it. The child's mother was pregnant at the time.

She said older children today are reading Tolkien and C.S. Lewis books but, "I feel they're not getting all they could out of them. Tolkien is very religious. His books are about the struggle between good and evil.

"'The Hobbit' is really the only one I feel is a children's book. Still, there are horrifying incidents in it that I cannot read."

She said the committee did not list "The Hobbit" when the first American edition was published in 1966, "but today I think we would."

She also is not convinced that because children like a book, it's good for them. Maybe a questionable book is not going to damage them for life, she added, "but it isn't going to do something positive for them," as she feels books should.

Jessica Johnston Was Married Saturday

Miss Jessica Irene Johnston of Greenville and John Shimer Jr. of Kinston were united in marriage Saturday at 6:30 p.m. in the Red Oak Christian Church, Greenville. The Rev. Johnny Maurice, pastor of Arthur Christian Church, and the Rev. Carl Jones, pastor of St. Mary's Episcopal Church, Kinston, officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Johnston Jr. of Greenville. The bridegroom is the stepson of Mrs. Raye C. Shimer of Kinston and son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Shimer Sr.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, wore a full length gown of white qiana crepe, styled with an empire waist and keyhole neckline, accented with Venise lace and seed pearls. The long tapered sleeves featured motifs of matching lace, while the skirt of the dress was designed with a chapel train. The bride wore a chapel length mantilla attached to a Juliet cap of Venise lace and seed pearls and carried a cascade bouquet of white roses, silk stephanotis, snowdrift pom pons, gypsophilia and garden greenery.

Mrs. Doug Johnston of Greenville, sister-in-law of the bride, served as matron of honor. She chose a full length, nile green qiana gown, designed with a blouson top, capelet sleeves and full accordian pleats. She wore a flower headpiece and carried a brass hurricane lantern with a single lighted taper, surrounded by mixed spring flowers.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Dane Miller of Edmonton, Ky, sister of the bridegroom, Miss Deborah Shimer of Kinston, sister of the bridegroom, Miss Sandra Stoddard of Barhamsville, Va., Miss Amanda McLawhorn of Raleigh, and Miss Cindy McLawhorn of Greenville, both cousins of the bride. The attendants selected dresses similarly styled to the honor attendant's in emerald green and wore flower headpieces. The attendants carried brass hurricane lanterns with tapers and mixed spring flowrs.

Miss Shannon Johnston of Bell Arthur, niece of the bride, served as flower girl. She wore a white sata-peau formal length gown with tuck bib and long full sleeves. The bodice of the dress featured a lace ruffle and square neck, while the skirt was accented with a full ruffle and tie sash. She wore a flower headpiece and carried a white wicker basket of mixed spring flowers.

William Brame of Kinston, organist, and Mrs. Everett Wells of Wallace, soloist, presented the wedding music. Mrs. Wells sang "The Wedding Prayer" and "The Song of Ruth."

Robert Parrott of Kinston served as best man. Ushers included Doug Johnston of Greenville, Tim and Glenn Johnston of Bell Arthur, all brothers of the bride, Dane Miller of Edmonton, Ky., brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Alton Sugg of Kinston, stepbrother of the bridegroom, and Ray Shimer of Kinston, cousin of the bridegroom.

The mother of the bride chose a mauve qiana formal length gown with a cowl neckline. The stepmother of the bridegroom selected a dusty rose formal gown of sheer silesta with blouson bodice. Both mothers were presented orchid corsages. Mrs. James Lewis of Greenville served as director of the wedding.

The bride's parents entertained at a reception in the church fellowship hall following the ceremony, hosted by Mrs. Robert Padgett. The reception table was covered with a white linen cloth and centered with a silver epergne of mixed spring flowers and lighted tapers. The three-tier wedding cake was served by Mrs. William Powell of Greenville, and Mrs. Bruce Grice of Goldsboro, aunts of the bride. Mrs. Charles R. Shimer of Kinston and Mrs. Norman Hendrix of Greensboro, aunts of the bridegroom, served punch. Miss Nora Baker of Farmville presided over the register, placed on a table covered in lace cloth and featuring a brass hurricane lamp, a single taper and spring flowers. The bridal portrait stood beside the table. Goodbyes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McCaskill.

The bride chose a white pastora knit dress for traveling. After a wedding trip to Copper Mountain, Colo., the couple will reside in Kinston.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University with a degree in business and distributive education. She is working toward a master's degree in education at ECU. The bridegroom is a graduate of ECU with a degree in general business. He is a junior partner of United Surplus Company, Ace Hardware and Garden Center, Kinston.

An after-rehearsal dinner was given Friday night at the Kinston Country Club for the wedding party and guests. Hosts and hostesses were Mrs. Raye Shimer, stepmother of the bridegroom, the Rev. and Mrs. Dane Miller, brother-in-law and sister of the bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Shimer and Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Clarence Shimer, aunts and uncles of the bridegroom.

A wedding breakfast was held Saturday by Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Parrott and Mr. and Mrs. Simon Sitterson of Kinston.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

In the beginning, there was a credit card.

I slipped it into my billfold and every time I went to that particular department store, I handed it to the salesperson and she stamped it and gave it back.

In time, I had a dozen of them or so rattling around in my purse. Then came a general charge card that was to do away with all the little ones, followed by a more sophisticated one that I could use in Europe and Asia if I ever got there.

Then my bank came out with one that had my picture laminated on it. This was followed by one that guaranteed to the world that I was good for $25 even if I was caught naked without my other charge cards.

Today, I have 135 pieces of laminated identification in my handbag. It has turned into an awesome responsibility just keeping track of them. Sometimes, I have terrible dreams where I go into a department store, open my handbag and my credit cards are gone. All I have is cash.

You cannot imagine how choked up I got this week when through the mail came "THE NOTHING CARD." It's put out by a company in Loveland, Colo., and is touted as "the card to end all credit cards."

Frankly, I regard the NOTHING CARD as a way out of the economic pits. The card buys nothing. Therefore, you owe nothing at the end of the month, have no monthly statements, no finance charges, no computer errors, no letters or mailgrams or phone cards threatening to take it away and no travel magazines.

It'll take a little getting used to — not paying for food that you ate 30 days ago or going now and paying now — but the rewards are worth noting. Once Americans put aside as much as they want to spend and pay in cash, prices will go down, business will give you the money instead of the card company and according to the brochure, "People will buy fewer lamps with hula dancer bases."

My husband is crazy about the NOTHING CARD. He says it's safer than Traveler's Checks, buys what we can afford and besides, Millard Fillmore photographs well.

He won't let me leave home without it.

No Longer Using Pen Name

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeature Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Julie Ellis is happy to have her own identity back, after writing 146 books during 15 years under eight different names.

"Publishers want a certain name for a certain category of book," explained the author of Gothics, mysteries, suspense stories, historical and contemporary novels, family sagas and non-fiction books. "It's upsetting to a reader who expects a Gothic to find it's a mystery."

So the paperback originals Ms. Ellis produced went out under her various pseudonyms, according to type of book. Recently, however, she has been writing hardcover novels under her own name. The latest, "The Hampton Heritage," is the story of a wealthy family, cotton mill owners in Atlanta. She is already at work on its sequel, her 151st book.

JULIE ELLIS

"I've been through my apprenticeship and it was time to change," she explained in an interview of her switch to writing under her own name. "But paperbacks for writers of the '50s and '60s were a way to acquire facility; they've been our training ground, as pulps were in the '30s and '40s for an earlier generation of writers."

Among her pseudonyms are Julie Marvin, her maiden name; Susan Marvin — "my daughter is Susan"; Susan Richard — "my son is Richard"; Richard Marvin; Pat Bentley — "we were talking about cars that day"; Linda Michaels — "out of a hat"; Alison Lord; and Jeffrey Lord — "the publisher wanted a man's name and I liked Lord."

"I'm very relieved not to have so many names any more," she said. "Now the only names I need to worry about are the characters' names. With them I like to reflect the period and the place I'm writing about.

"I'm big on research and big on authenticity," declares the petite blonde writer, who is 5-foot-1 "when I stand up straight" and weighs 92 pounds.

The Columbus, Ga., native went to Atlanta three times to research "The Hampton Heritage," talking to Georgia historians and receiving what she says was valuable assistance from the Georgia Historical

Wed Saturday, Will Live In Farmville

The First Presbyterian Church was the scene of the double ring ceremony of Janet Ruth DePue and David Charles Bryan Saturday at 2 p.m.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Richard Rhea Gammon. A program of organ music was presented by Dr. E. Robert Irwin. Amy and Ben Ramsaur sang "The Wedding Prayer," "The Wedding Song," "You Light Up My Life" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Elkanah Custer DePue of Millburn, N. J., and the late Mr. Depue. She was given in marriage by her mother and escorted by her cousin, Stanley Cartwright.

The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Gaynelle H. Bryan of Goldsboro, and the late Mr. James Lacy Bryan.

Mrs. Caroline B. Sutton of Kinston was matron of honor and the maid of honor was Angela Gay Bryan of Thomasville, daughter of the bridegroom. Bridesmaids were Miss Sandra Ruth Fisher of Greenville, and Miss Jewel Kay Watson of New Bern.

David Charles Bryan Jr. of Thomasville, son of the bridegroom, was best man and ushers included Edward Lee Bryan of Goldsboro, James Lacy Bryan Jr. of Greensboro, brothers of the bridegroom, and Lamar Long of Gastonia.

The bride wore a gown of white chiffon over peau de soie and Venise lace fashioned with a high Victorian neckline featuring Venise lace motifs surrounding a cutout neckline. The V-waistline was topped by matching lace motifs. The sheer bishop sleeves were trimmed with lace appliques finished with a trimming of lace on the cuffs. The full skirt featured a ruffle at the hemline and extended into a chapel length train.

Her chapel length mantilla was edged in matching Venise lace and she carried a semi-carried formal bouquet of white miniature carnations, white sweetheart roses and shrimp miniature carnations tied with white velvet.

The attendants wore shrimp qiana gowns styled with a blouson bodice, empire waistline and accordian pleated skirt. They each carried a nosegay of white daisies and shrimp miniature carnations tied with shrimp velvet.

The mother of the bride wore a formal length gown in medium blue and a white carnation corsage. The mother of the bridegroom was attired in a mint green formal length gown with white carnations.

The refreshment table was covered with a green cloth overlaid with white lace and centered with an arrangement of mixed flowers and a silver candelabra holding white candles.

The couple will live in Farmville after a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va.

The bride is a graduate of Millburn High School, Millburn, N. J., and received her B.S. and M.S.H.E. in foods and nutrition, ECU. She is a lecturer and clinical coordinator in the coordinated undergraduate program in general dietetics, School of Home Economics, ECU. The bridegroom graduated from Goldsboro High School and is operations manager, B. F. Goodrich Co., Wilson.

Society and public library.

"When the publishers were pressing for books I sometimes did two or three a month," she recalls. "It's really a first draft you're giving them and I didn't like to do that."

Now her books go through three drafts, and she spends about a year on each book.

"I start with an outline to see where it's going," she says, "but sometimes research will send me out on a different track. The characters change as I go along, and I like to see them grow. When it comes to women, I like an independent woman who is ahead of her time."

Ms. Ellis has five electric typewriters and one manual — "in case the lights go out" — in her Manhattan apartment, where she lives with her 19-year-old son and 17-year-old daughter, both in college.

"Thank heaven my daughter learned to type," she says. "She's the only one who can read my writing. I have inserts in my inserts and things written up in the corner. It's really a jumble."

The author keeps strict hours because she feels the discipline is important, writing six hours a day and doing research in the evenings.

Ms. Ellis has worked off-Broadway as an actress, producer and writer and has also written for radio and television, but she prefers print, "where you're in more control. The problems of pleasing the director and the cast are avoided with a book. You're not at the mercy of so many temperaments."

She is never at a loss for plot ideas, she says, often getting up in the middle of the night to jot notes on a pad she keeps by her bed.

"I can be walking down the street and something will pop into my head," she says. "I have plots to keep me busy for the next 20 years blocked out."

Shower

Mrs. Martha W. Flowers was honored at a stork shower Tuesday, Feb. 27, at the home of Mrs. Dixie Souther. Other hostesses included Mrs. Barbara Williams and Mrs. Bonnie Singleton.

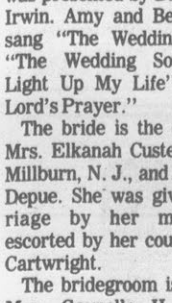

The yellow and white color scheme was carried out in cake squares, refreshments and other decorations. The mother-to-be was presented a corsage of silk flowers on a macrame love knot, along with other gifts.

The hostesses presented Mrs. Flowers with a portable baby crib.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

When Pam Edmondson and Jimmy Buckthal met at the Governor's School of North Carolina in 1973, they never dreamed it would lead to their coming marriage May 26 in the Bethel Baptist Church.

The couple began dating during their junior year at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She was a member of Alpha Chi Omega sorority and he was vice president of Delta Upsilon fraternity.

Pam is presently a first year law student at Wake Forest University Law School. Jimmy is a quality-control chemist for Central Carolina Farmers, Inc., Durham.

Her parents are Col. and Mrs. James Stuart McCormick of Colorado Springs, Col. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. Bonnie T. McCormick of Ayden.

She is working with children in occupational therapy from the ages of six weeks to six years to regain use of their hands. She says the hospital is modern and beautiful. It is solely for children with orthopedic and muscular diseases and those born with various deformities.

After three months there her next internship is in Alburgur Cogane, N. M.

Karen Casey, Mr. Foss Wed

MRS. MICHAEL LEWIS FOSS

GRIFTON — Miss Karen Louise Casey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Don Casey Jr., and Michael Lewis Foss, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lewis Foss, were united in marriage Saturday 5 p.m. at the First Baptist Church.

The Rev. Herbert Gravely of Southern Pines, former pastor of the bride, and the Rev. Kenneth Townsend, the bride's pastor at Saint Marks Episcopal Church, officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The two ministers presented Holy Communion for the bridal couple and families at a 10 a.m. service Saturday at St. Marks' as part of the wedding ceremony.

Prior to the wedding, a program of nuptial music was presented by Tony Carraway, organist, and Mrs. John Gray, soloist. Mrs. Gray sang "The Wedding Song."

The church was decorated with altar vases of mixed bouquets of snapdragons, daisies and greenery. Twin brass candlesticks held lighted white cathedral candles. Two tree candelabra were placed on each side of the chancel.

Daniel Albritton served as cross bearer. Acolytes were Chris Smith, nephew of the bridegroom, and David Houston.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore her mother's wedding gown, designed and made by the mother. The white swiss organdie over taffeta gown featured a fitted bodice and scooped neckline with bertha collar. A band of silk flowers encircled the waist, with short puffed sleeves edged in a self-double ruffle. The full skirt and detachable train were edged at the hemline in a double ruffle. The bride wore a two-tier veil of silk illusion edged in chantilly lace caught in a bandeau of white silk handmade roses and baby's breath. She carried a prayerbook covered with lace, with sprays of white silk roses and baby's breath centered with a corsage of white daisies. She wore a diamond necklace, given to her by her maternal aunt.

Donna Casey, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. She chose a formal gown of coral silk crepe with a blouson top, lace insert at the front of the neckline and spaghetti straps. A chiffon capelet with a mandarin collar was worn with the outfit, which featured a accordian pleated skirt and cord belt. She wore a matching silk rose and baby's breath bandeau and carried a single long-stemmed Tiffany rose tied with matching ribbons.

Bridesmaids were Stella Britt Mitchell, Rhonda Nobles, both cousins of the bride, Susan Kornegay of Virginia Beach, Va., and Teresa Winbon of Auburn, Ala. They chose gowns identical to the honor attendant's in sea foam green and carried single roses.

Miss Amy Cray Hardison served as miniature bride. She selected a white organdie gown similar to the bride's and carried a white basket of daisies.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers included Glenn Tucker, Mike Hudson, Dennis Foss and Wayne De Boise of Dunn, both cousins of the bridegroom. Brad De Boise of Dunn, cousin of the bridegroom, served as ring bearer.

Mrs. Casey chose a formal length gown of bermuda sea lace knit for her daughter's wedding. She wore a corsage of white daisies. The bridegroom's mother wore a long beige qiana sleeveless gown with a cowl neckline and matching jacket. She also wore a white daisy corsage. Mrs. W. D. Casey of Grantham and Mrs. Emma Foss of Mount Olive, paternal grandmothers, were presented white daisy corsage.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside in Grifton.

The bride is a graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School and is a student at Pitt Technical Institute. The bridegroom, a graduate of Grifton High School, attended East Carolina University. He is employed by the Bryant Electrical Co., High Point.

The parents of the bridegroom entertained at a rehearsal dinner at King's Restaurant, Kinston. A cake cutting followed the rehearsal with Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Kornegay of Virginia Beach, Va., and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Winbon of Fremont, god parents of the bride, as hosts.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle

CRYPTOQUIP 3-3

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — VERNAL ICE THAW INFLICTED HIGH, SWIRLING RIVER FLOODS.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: G equals D

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, MAR. 4, 1979

Your Daily HOROSCOPE
from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day when you are likely to be nervous, restless and excitable, but it's a good day and evening if you control any errant impulses. Deal in constructive issues instead of negative ones.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A good time to study personal affairs and to make plans for improvement. Steer clear of persons with doubtful morals.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Look at monetary matters more calmly and know how to handle them more intelligently in the future. Be logical.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Know what your personal aims are and how best to gain them without fanfare. Not a good day for entertainment.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Your personal aims seem difficult to get now, but if you go after them quietly, you can soon gain them. Be wise.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Don't depend on friends today for help in gaining your aims, since they are preoccupied with own affairs. Get the rest you need.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Good day to plan your outside activities for the future. Concentrate on how to be more productive in your line of endeavor.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You are anxious to go after new goals, but take more time for planning before you do so. Contact a loyal friend for advice you need.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Plan to be more efficient in your regular routines and receive greater benefits. Maintain harmony in the home.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) News of currents events could be upsetting, but take them in your stride since there is little you can do about them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Plan your work schedule more wisely and you can then follow through in an efficient manner. Express happiness.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You can accomplish much of a personal nature now that couldn't be done during the regular work week.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't make matters worse at home by harping on what it is you don't like. Instead, be calm and strive for harmony.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will easily see who is at fault in any arguments and can patch things up cleverly. Teach to complete whatever has once been started. Sports are good in order to build up the physical stamina and develop a sense of fair play.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, MARCH 5, 1979

GENERAL TENDENCIES: It is likely that promises will be broken at this time, or it will be difficult to carry through with them as you wish. Be prepared to make whatever revisions may be necessary.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Don't argue if others speak thoughtlessly and you avoid trouble. Be happy with friends and kin in the evening.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Doublecheck where monetary matters are concerned and be sure of what you are doing. Study finances well before you consider any plans for investment.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have to be overly conscientious in handling personal matters during the day, but later all eases up. Don't argue with good friends over trifles.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Dispose of trifling problems early so that you have more time for important matters. Finish important work and then turn your attention to romantic matters.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Avoid friends until evening at which time you can have a fine social time. You find it difficult to gain your aims now, but later you make up for lost time.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) It is important that you follow every rule and regulation that applies to you. Pay bills on time and improve your credit rating.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study new projects well before you delve into them. Try to be less prejudiced and get along better with others. Take no risks with big sums of money.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Keep your end of any bargains you make. Try to come to a better understanding with partners. Be more willing to help in handling home problems.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Wait until late in the day before trying to cement better relations with associates. Handle public responsibilities wisely. Take some time for social pleasure and meet interesting people.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Make work plans for the week early. Listen to what fellow workers have to gripe about and then gain their cooperation by being fair, understanding.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Morning is not a good time for entertainment, but later you can have a wonderful time. Make sure your home is in fine order. Don't neglect to pay vital bills.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Evening is best time to make decisions regarding home matters and then you get good results. A problem arises which should be solved immediately.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will understand how to solve prolems, arguments well because of the logical bent in this nature. Slant education along lines of the law, engineering, psychiatry for best results throughout the lifetime. Teach early to complete whatever has been started so that your child does not become a mere dabbler and accomplish little.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you ma of your life is largely up to you!

Police Horses Given Training

DETROIT (UPI) — Police scout cars may have several gears, but they can't compete with the horses of the Detroit Police Mounted Division. They have all the regular moves, plus sideways and pivot capability.

Besides, "Nobody stops a scout car and pets it," says Lt. Patrick Muscat, head of the mounted division.

Formed in 1893, the mounties' division controls traffic in congested areas and patrols city parks. Each of the unit's 70 men takes an eight-week training course in the care and riding of his steed.

Horses train three to six months, learning basic gaits, how to walk sideways and backwards, how to pivot and stand still while a rider writes a ticket.

Police trainers also fire blanks and fireworks at the horses and put them through heavy traffic and smoke to get them used to urban working conditions.

Nostalgia And Nature Trend

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. (UPI) — Nostalgia and nature are strong trends in home accessories from a Traverse City manufacturer, says decorating consultant Mary Ann Wills. Among its new designs are four deep-dimensional plaques, each depicting a turn-of-the-century scene from everyday life: a general store with potbellied stove, a blacksmith shop, a barber shop and a train station with a collie dog guarding luggage, a ticket window, a baggage room sign and a station clock. The company's new clocks include some decorated with real dried flowers, grains and moss.

Money Shortage Hits Highway Beautification Try

By HOWARD BENEDICT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Along the nation's interstate and primary highways there are 197,791 signs and billboards the government would like to get rid of and 10,608 junkyards it would like to see screened. But some states aren't cooperating, and even if they did, Uncle Sam hasn't got the money to pay for the removal.

As a result, America's highway beautification program, launched with fanfare in 1965 by President Lyndon Johnson and his wife, Lady Bird, is in trouble.

President Carter didn't include a penny for the program in his fiscal 1980 budget, after earmarking $13.1 million for it this year.

Richard W. Moeller of the Federal Highway Administration said the Office of Management and Budget decided not to seek funds in 1980 because it wanted a complete reassessment of the program.

"We're contemplating a series of public hearings on the program, and we hope soon to appoint an advisory committee to analyze and give direction," said Moeller, chief of the agency's junkyard and outdoor advertising branch. "The committee would include industry representatives, environmentalists, highway users, consumers and others."

He said the lack of 1980 budget money doesn't mean the project will come to an immediate halt.

"We have about $65 million in the pipeline in some form or another, mostly funds that have been allocated to states for the removal of outdoor advertising signs and the screening of junkyards," he said. "Some states could operate for five years with money already alloted to them; others don't have much."

Moeller said that in 1978 states asked for $52 million for highway beautification, "but I had only $9.5 million to give out."

The concept started in 1958 as a voluntary program, with states receiving an incentive of one-half of one percent of their federal highway funds if they controlled advertising signs within 660 feet of interstate highways.

But only about half the states participated, and in 1965, prodded by Johnson and his wife and over the objection of the outdoor ad industry, Congress passed the Highway Beautification Act.

The act extended billboard control to other primary federal highways and to junkyards and offered incentives for landscaping around highways. States not complying could lose 10 percent of federal highway money.

Signs along the designated highways were allowed only in areas zoned commercial or industrial and junkyards only in industrial areas.

The act also said "just compensation" must be paid to those whose signs were removed and those who screened junkyards. However, many local governments claimed authority in this area and did not offer compensation. A 1976 amendment to the act required local governments to make such payments — which are provided by the federal government.

How is compensation determined?

"It's the same as evaluating real estate," Moeller said. "We appraise the structure, the site, the number of cars which pass by and the fair market value."

He said payment could range from $50 for a small sign to several thousand for an elaborate electronic billboard, with the nationwide average about $2,000 for each.

So far only four states have had federal highway money withheld because of non-compliance, and three, New York, Alabama and Oklahoma, had the funds restored when they quickly came into compliance.

The government withheld $4.08 million from South Dakota in fiscal 1978 and $4.298 million in 1979. Last November, Transportation Secretary Brock Adams ruled South Dakota could not recover the 1978 funds but that the 1979 money would be restored if the South Dakota legislature acts to put the state in compliance by March 31.

The legislature now has two bills before it, one calling for fairly strict compliance, the other for minimum compliance. Moeller has discussed the minimum compliance bill with South Dakota officials, and said it appears it might pass federal muster.

The state claims its tourist industry — centered on the Badlands and Black Hills — requires outdoor advertising. Under minimum standards, it would be able to maintain directional and official signs for tourist attractions and to space them reasonably close together.

Under the just compensation plan, 98,215 signs have been removed from beside highways nationwide, but 197,791 remain. Only 1,413 of 12,953 junkyards have been shielded.

Several states, including Florida, Georgia, Wisconsin, Missouri and Tennessee, do not have good records, Moeller said. He added that even if they wanted to improve, there is no money to pay the compensation.

"If I proposed penalizing Missouri, for example, and Missouri said give me $5 million, I do not have the funds to give Missouri," Moeller said.

How much federal money would it take to remove all noncomplying signs and screen all junkyards? "At least $52 million a year," Moeller replied.

Sen. Robert T. Stafford, R-Vt., has proposed legislation to let states decide if they want to be involved in highway beautification, and Moeller said this will be discussed as part of the reassessment.

"It would help us in one way," he said. "States that did not want to cooperate could get out. That would leave more money to spend on states interested in highway esthetics.

Hamlet 'Alive' On Weekends

JOHNSON'S CROSSING, Fla. (AP) — Folks go through Johnson's Crossing regularly without realizing it exists. On weekdays, that is.

Monday through Friday, it's just a hamlet in an unincorporated section of Florida's Putnam County. There's no landmark to make it stand out from the rolling hills, lakes, red clay and scrub pines along State Road 20 west of Palatka.

But on weekends it's a different place.

William Simmons saw all this and wondered why.

So Simmons, a University of Florida sociology student, singled out the place for a study to determine what brings people back week after week.

"All the social life of that community is on that corner where the tree is," said Simmons.

"One of the first goals of my research was to discover what makes Johnson's Crossing a community," he said. "In anthropology, we say communities are based on politics, economics, education, family and religion.

"But in this community there's no political unit involved. These people didn't even vote for a hundred years, from 1872 to 1974. Anyway, there are only 710 voters in the whole area, so it doesn't have much political clout."

He said he found no economic structure either, and what little farming goes on is at bare subsistence level.

"People work in the clay mines in Edgar or go to Gainesville, 24 miles away, to work at the University of Florida," Simmons said.

The researcher said most Johnson's Crossing folks didn't move to Gainesville because they liked the comfort of family and friends when work was done. They believe a small community is better and safer.

Children from Johnson's Crossing and the nearby small town of Johnson are bused to Melrose or Interlachen schools.

Simmons said it had taken a while for him to gain acceptance into the kitchens, card games and talk of the area.

"I studied this place for a year and a half, coming nearly every weekend, before people started opening up to me," he said.

Eventually, he learned that strong blood ties are behind the close-knit community and that its weekend visitors are relatives.

"Everybody's related to somebody else," Simmons said. "I felt the society was very closed."

Exploring North Carolina

Exploring The Villages of North Carolina, 117 pages, $5.95; North Carolina, A Camera Profile, 110 pages, $4.95; and Exploring The Country Inns of North Carolina, 55 pages, $4.95. All by Faris Jane Corey, with illustrations by Philip Moose and Kate Russell Forbes. Chapel Hill, The Provincial Press.

These three paperback books on North Carolina bring to a total of six the vignette type exploring books on the state written (or in the case of "Camera," compiled) by Tar Heel native Faris Jane Corey. (The other three are "Exploring The Seacoast of North Carolina," "Exploring The Mountains of North Carolina;" and "North Carolina Firsts.")

Author Corey, teacher and writer, has made something of a career in sharing her enthusiasm about North Carolina in these small books (all of a standard six by 11 inches format).

As a person who loves to photograph the varied scenery of North Carolina, my preference is understandably for the "picture book" of the six — "North Carolina, A Camera Profile." In this volume, Corey has assembled a splendid array of black and white photographs drawn from the camera work of 40 photographers. This collection touches the pulse of the state, from timeless nature studies of sand dunes and shrouded mountains to the excitement of last year's basketball game.

People and fine old homes, tourists and horses, snow scenes and summer's greenery, fox-hunting and a display of jars of honey, are all here. It's a fine pictorial record to go back to time after time, and an ideal gift to anyone outside or inside our own beloved boundaries.

— Twenty-three villages have been chosen for "Exploring The Villages of North Carolina." Although only six are in the eastern part of the state — Bath, Ocracoke, Murfreesboro, Halifax, Southport and Calabash — it would be hard to argue with Corey's choice of nine villages of western North Carolina; These are fascinating places on any count, and Corey has a knack for showing the known and unknown faces of these places — what the tourist sees on a quick trip , and the greater fulfilment of "exploring" leisurely. An instance is the Indian village of Cherokee . . . "Visitors expecting a colorful bivouac of tepees will be disappointed . . And . . . Real Indians are around. Some Cherokees even make a business of posing in costumes for photographers . . . in elaborate Sioux war bonnets because Cherokee headdresses are not spectacular."

Thus, Corey's keen sense of the pleasures afforded takes into account the lower keyed realities of meeting the demands of what tourists expect — and the sensible approach to making a living, all of which adds the refreshing zest of insight that bundles of Chamber of Commerce literature can never provide.

"Exploring The Villages" is helped immensely by the incisive sketches of a native mountain artist, Philip Moose.

Another good example of fascinating tidbits is her revelation of one of the secrets of the growing popularity of seafood eateries in the coastal village of Calabash. "Flour and lard explain the seafood's popularity . . . "we fry everything in pure lard. That preserves all the taste of the fish." (A quote from one of the cooks in the village.)

— "Exploring The Country Inns of North Carolina," expectedly, delves into Tar Heel inns that specialize in eating.

Chances are this volume will have more limited appeal than the other five — not because of the author's presentation, but simply that the possibilities of exploring in family groups with a carload of kids with dirty faces or on limited funds are a bit more restrictive in this category.

While not the last word on the areas covered, these pictorial-guides are excellent starting points for whetting interest in the whole spectrum of what North Carolina has to offer

Chances are these volumes can be found at your local bookstore — if not, they can be ordered directly from: The Provincial Press , Box 2311, Chapel Hill, N. C., 27514. For mail orders, add 45 cents to the cost of each volume for postage and handling.

QUALITY

The New 4-Door Accord

THE NEW HONDAS.
At Bob Barbour Honda, you'll find a lot of reasons to be impressed. First, there are the exciting automobiles from Honda. Quality automobiles, solid, well-built, and affordable. Pictured above is Honda's brand new entry: the Accord 4-door. It has all the advantages of the regular Accord, plus more room and easier access. And, like all the Honda models for 1979, it's simple to drive, simple to own, and simple to enjoy.

OUR FINE USED CARS.
Quality describes our used cars, too. Bob Barbour Honda offers you a better selection of dependable late model used cars than you'll find anywhere else.

SERVICE TO MATCH.
Our service department will impress you, too, because it shows our commitment to stand behind the quality products we sell. Frank Quinn, our parts and service director would like an opportunity to talk with you personally when you visit us.

IT ADDS UP TO THIS:
In every way. . .new cars, used cars, parts and service. . .we're committed to be a quality dealer.

HOME WARRANTY

In today's competitive and expensive marketplace, home warranties are becoming increasingly important to both seller and buyer. We offer the National Home Warranty plan, one of the best available - which provides a one year warranty to the new owner, plus covers the seller during the entire marketing period! No premium payment required unless the house is sold, and the cost is very reasonable for the protection offered.

If you are considering selling your home, I urge you to fully-evaluate the advantages of a warranted sale. Please feel free to call us for further information or assistance.

For Week Of March 4 - March 10, 1979

Two New Comedy Series Air

Two sparkling new comedy series, "Stockard Channing in Just Friends" and "The Mary Tyler Moore Hour," premiere Sunday, March 4, on CBS-TV.

Channing, whose portrayal of an impish teenager in the hit movie, "Grease," quickly won her a large following of fans, stars as an adventurous young woman, estranged from her husband, who is determined to make it on her own and heads for a new life in Los Angeles.

Co-starring in "Stockard Channing in Just Friends" (9:30 to 10 p.m.) is Sydney Goldsmith, with Lawrence Pressman guest starring.

"The Mary Tyler Moore Show" (10 to 11 p.m.), which utilizes a "show-within-a-show" format, evolves around television personality Mary McKinnon and the ordinary problems that crop up in her life each week.

At the network, Mary McKinnon's associates include her producer, Harry Sinclair (Michael Lombard) her long-time secretary-companion, Irish Chapman (Joyce Van Patten), and the inevitable studio page and "gofer," Kenneth Christy (Michael Keaton).

Each segment will feature top-caliber guest stars, always appearing as themselves.

In the opening of the premiere episode, there is an air of hysteria prevalent. The guest star of the week has been stricken with an illness and, with only two days before taping, a replacement must be found. After a series of suggestions and phone calls, Lucille Ball is located at a chic Beverly Hills boutique, and, reluctantly, Mary agrees to try to sign the redoubtable comedinne for the show. Off she goes to Beverly Hills, and a series of hilarious happenings involving cups of Irish coffee and its heady ingredient. Lucy is agreeable, but first they must get Mike Douglas to release her as his co-host of the week. So off to "The Mike Douglas Show" go the two, happy, giggly, over-Irish-coffeed stars.

Can there be such a creature as a 'new' Mary Tyler Moore? You can't help but wonder. After seven years as a devoted housewife on "The Dick Van Dyke Show" and an additional seven as an independent single woman on her own show, she headed toward a variety show last fall and bombed. The show was so bad that CBS quickly removed it from their schedule after a few weeks.

Now she's coming back, in a series the network has labeled a 'combination of comedy and variety.' Here's hoping this one catches on, because Mary Tyler Moore is one of the medium's most respected entertainers.

Two new comedy series premiere on CBS-TV, Sunday, March 4. Stockard Channing stars in "Stockard Channing in Just Friends" (9:30-10 p.m.) followed by "The Mary Tyler Moore Hour" (10-11 p.m.).

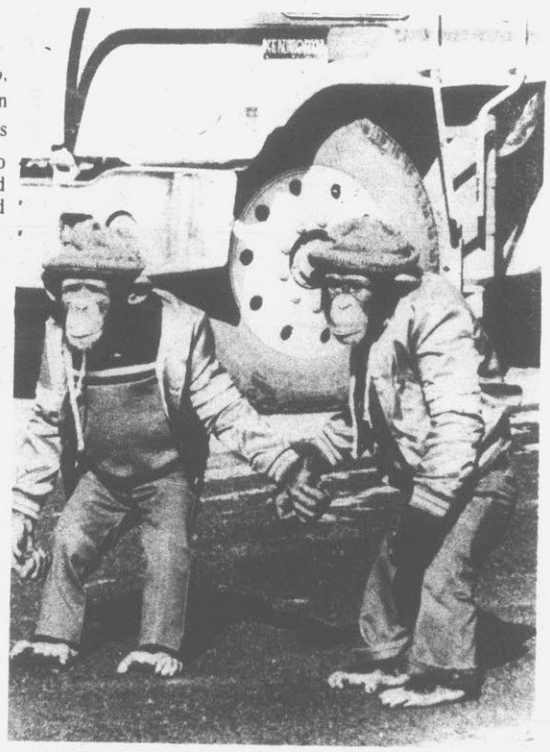

Monkeyshines For Real In 'BJ And The Bear'

In NBC's exciting new trucking series "BJ and the Bear" (Saturdays, 9 to 10 p.m.), it's all right if the star makes a monkey out of his co-star. In fact, you won't hear a word of complaint from the co-star, because he already is a monkey — a chimpanzee, to be exact.

His real name is Sam, and he plays the part of "Bear," a friendly but mischievious chimp named for Alabama football coach Bear Bryant. Bear is a constant companion for Billie Joe McKay (series star Greg Evigan), an ex-P.O.W. turned independent trucker who hauls any load for a dollar-and-a-half a mile, no questions asked — long as it's legal.

Sam is trained by Marvin Downey, an animal trainer who has worked with lions on "The Bionic Woman," rats on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and leopards on "The Incredible Hulk." Marvin also trains Sam's stunt chimp, Jimmy. Both chimps are just over four years old, but Jimmy is more outgoing than Sam.

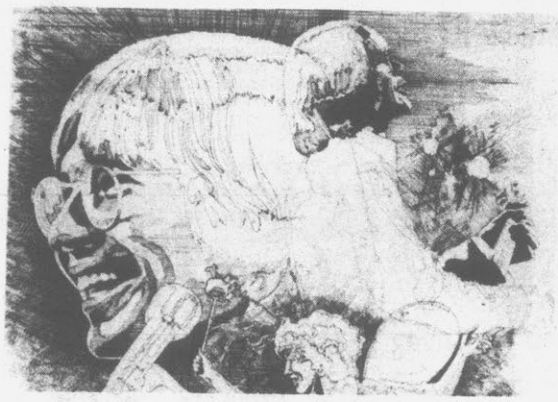

"Sam is an excellent chimp, and his disposition is better than the average chimp, which makes him easier to train. But he's also quiet and shy, so when rugged stunt work is required, we send in Jimmy."

STUNT CHIMP - Sam (r), who stars as Bear in the exciting new trucking series "BJ and the Bear" (Saturdays, 9-10 p.m. on NBC-TV), is no fool. When rugged stunt work is required, he sends in his stunt double, Jimmy, to do the tough stuff. Greg Evigan stars as BJ.

Image Is O.K. For Denver

Picture in your mind, if you can, John Denver as a shy, ill-at-ease teenager. Not easy, is it? But it's true, and there is a lesson to be learned in how he evolved from a painfully shy youth to the self-confident, highly popular entertainer he is today.

"John Denver and the Ladies," an all-singing, all-dancing, all-laughing special on Thursday, March 8 (8:30-9:30 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

"I was very shy and so ill-at-ease when I was a teenager, and those growing pains were extremely real to me. All I had was my music. I floundered around — tried first one thing and then another.

"Then, one day I came to the realization that the only thing I had to offer was myself. Nothing else worked for me. And it's that way today."

Unique about Denver's followers is the fact that there is no specific age group turned on by his music. He quite frankly admits that this fact "amazes" him.

"I'm very innocent in this," he says, "and I really don't understand why. I guess it's because of the songs I write and the songs I sing. I try to write about things that I am interested in, things people are interested in. If I can really get through to a person with a song, then I'm happy."

It is difficult to picture Denver anywhere other than his beloved Rocky Mountains, but he leaves them behind and heads for sunny California when he hosts "John Denver and the Ladies," a music and comedy special airing on ABC-TV Thursday, March 8 (8:30 to 9:30 p.m.). Those particular ladies are five of the most exciting and talented women in the country — Valerie Harper, Cheryl Tiegs, Tina Turner, Erma Bombeck and Cheryl Ladd.

Role Is Major Break

Lisa Eilbacher, who has been acting in commercials or films since she was six years old, gets her first major break in the title role of "The Ordeal of Patty Hearst," which airs as an "ABC Sunday Night Movie" special, March 4 (8 to 11 p.m.).

Lisa Eilbacher stars as Patty Hearst in this recreation of the famous "Tania" photograph in front of the Symbionese Liberation Army symbol in "The Ordeal of Patty Hearst" on "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," March 4 (8-11 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

She lost out to her sister on her first try for a spot on an Andy Williams show — their mother had sent them both on the interview, feeling (rightly) that one of them was bound to get it. Soon, Lisa got a job doing toy commercials, and a year later made her acting bow in "Wagon Train."

One of three girls, Lisa also has a younger brother.

Ali MacGraw and Nick Nolte are among the performers who will serve as presenters at the 51st Annual Awards Presentation of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

Keystone Comedy In Reverse

"It's a Keystone comedy in reverse," said Dick Van Dyke about Walt Disney's movie, "Never a Dull Moment."

"On the set we jokingly subtitled it 'The Keystone Crooks,' because the visual comedy is so similar to Mack Sennett's work; the difference being that the major characters are gangsters instead of policemen."

An actor becomes intangled in a mob's scheme to rob a New York museum in the movie making its television debut on "The Wonderful World of Disney," Sunday, March 4 from 7 to 9 p.m. on NBC-TV.

"I've always been an admirer of Sennett because he rediscovered slapstick in the early twenties. His comedies were imitated a lot, but no one ever came close," said Van Dyke.

"In a Keystone comedy, the cops are always involved in a long-winded chase, mugging all the way with a great number of sight gags; and the finale would be a fall, shove, kick or push into an ocean or something."

"In 'Never a Dull Moment,' the chase is there and loads of visual gags, topped off with everybody getting drenched," continued Van Dyke.

Van Dyke, whose show business career spans 25 years, became an entertainer by accident. While growing up in Danville, Ill., his theatrical inclinations were limited to some high school clowning around.

"Danville always makes me think of the author Booth Tarkington," he said. "It was a real small-town life. Little houses on the street. My father was a traveling salesman. I guess we were poor, it was the Depression, and there wasn't any money, but I never knew it until I was a teenager and my mother told me."

After World War II, Van Dyke opened an advertising agency that later went bankrupt. He eventually signed on to entertain at a nightclub, gradually making his way to New York and Broadway.

"When Stanley first asked me to play this part," recalled Van Dyke, "I said to him, 'You must be crazy. This is serious stuff and I'm a comedian.' I told Stanley I was putting myself totally in his hands because I didn't want the blame if the thing was a failure."

Robert Redford Stars

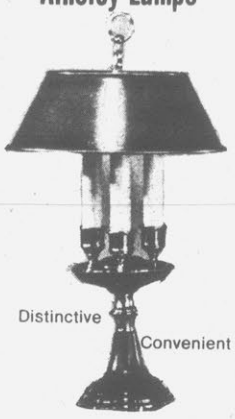

Robert Redford stars as a disillusioned ex-soldier who turns his back on civilization in the 1830s to become a fur trapper in the wilds of the Rocky Mountains in "Jeremiah Johnson," an adventure drama to be rebroadcast on NBC-TV's "The Big Event" Sunday, March 4 (8 to 10 p.m.). The late Will Geer co-stars.

Johnson travels into the vast, rugged Rocky Mountain range with virtually none of the skills necessary for his survival. He barely escapes starvation in the sub-zero cold. In a fortuitous meeting with an aged grizzly hunter named Bear Claw (Geer), the veteran mountaineer takes Johnson to his cabin and — in time — teaches the inexperienced young man to skin a bear, sleep on coals, hunt and trap, and deal with — or avoid — the Indians.

This education gives Johnson the basic tools he needs for survival. Soon he takes an Indian wife and adopts a son. But he's not quite out of the woods yet, as he discovers when a series of events nearly results in his undoing.

Hughes Will Star In World Premiere Movie

Esteemed actor Bernard Hughes, who won the 1978 Tony Award as Best Actor for his performance in the current Broadway hit "Da," will star in the title role in "Father Brown, Detective," a World Premiere movie and program development project, which will be presented on NBC-TV March 19.

Hughes portrays a New York City parish priest who has a penchant for getting into crime solving, a practice that often causes him to neglect church matters, much to the dismay of his superiors.

Cast in principal supporting roles in the feature are Kay Lenz as Carol Bain, a young woman who befriends the priest and comes to rely heavily on him; George Hearn as Msgr. Kerrigan, Fr. Brown's immediate superior; Michael McGuire as Lt. Bellamy of the New York Police; and Robert Schenkkan as Fr. Wembley, Fr. Brown's young assistant.

Hughes recently starred in the title role of the comedy series "Doc." Coincidentally, he had the semi-recurring role of a priest in the TV series "All in the Family." He also played Bob Newhart's father in a recurring role on the "Bob Newhart Show."

Hughes has had the lead role in "Da" since the play's Broadway opening last May. He immediately earned the lavish praise of critics for his performance. In addition to Hughes's Best Actor award, "Da" won a Tony for Best Play in 1978.

Centered Around Fantasies

"Billy," CBS-TV's new half-hour series (Mondays, 8 to 8:30 p.m.), centers around a young man's wildly incredible fantasy world.

Steve Guttenberg stars in the title role as 19-year-old Billy Fisher, a mortuary employee whose "Walter Mitty" flights of fantasy keep getting tangled up with the hard realities of his home and office life.

Also starring are James Gallery as Billy's frustrated father, George Fisher, who no doubt loves his eccentric son but still calls him a "liar"; Peggy Pope as his mother, Alice, who defends her imaginative son by suggesting that he "exaggerates a little"; and Paula Trueman as his grandmother, who sums up Billy's behavior in two words, "He's nuts!"

Michael Alaimo also stars as Mr. Shadrack, Billy's employer, and Bruce Tarkington as his fellow employee and good friends, Arthur Milliken.

Lord To Produce

After eleven years as the star of "Hawaii Five-O," currently the longest-running dramatic series on television, Jack Lord will embark upon his first independent production venture as the executive producer and director of "M Station: Hawaii," a two-hour movie special and series pilot for CBS-TV.

Based upon an original concept by Lord, the project will be centered around an independent oceanic research and engineering facility.

Nobody Asks Her Question

What's the one question nobody ever asks Elizabeth Montgomery during an interview?

"Nobody ever asks me what I like to do when I'm not working," says Montgomery, who, currently is not working after finishing "Jennifer: A Woman's Story," airing March 5 (9 to 11 p.m.), on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies."

She stars as a widow striving to make a new life for herself, who becomes involved in a bitter power struggle for control of her late husband's company.

OK, what do you like to do when you're not working?

"I love to read. I like to draw. I love to dance, which I will do when nobody's looking. Either disco or not. Disco's terrific. But I dance by myself sometimes at home.

"I love to go to the races," she continued. "I love horse races. I haven't played tennis for awhile, but I used to play tennis a lot."

One problem, she says, is gearing down to a lesiure-time mood after several weeks of long, demanding days on the set. "All of a sudden when you get a day off you say ahhh, I'm going to really enjoy sleeping late. But unfortunately, I've got a buzzer in my head that still goes off at 4:30 in the morning.

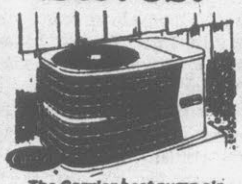

"But when I can I like to sleep late and do the New York Times crossword puzzle. I'm not particularly good at them, I just love them.

"I also love to read," says Elizabeth. "I usually spend a lot of time reading and looking for material. And even that's exciting.

Elizabeth Montgomery stars as a widow striving to make a new life for herself after her husband dies in "Jennifer: A Woman's Story," on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies," March 5 (9-11 p.m.).

CBS Reports On Unions

CBS Reports: "Inside the Union" is a close and unconventional look at the labor movement today as it is experienced and seen by the members of Local 1010 of the United Steelworkers — the biggest local in one of the biggest and most powerful unions in America — representing the work force at Inland Steel in East Chicago, Ind.

Produced and written by Irv Drasnin, and anchored by George Herman, the program will be broadcast Tuesday, March 6 (8 to 9 p.m.).

Drasin and Herman found a struggle between Local 1010 and the International leadership, headed by its president, Lloyd McBride, over such fundamental issues as democracy in the union, including the right to ratify contracts and the right to strike. The rank-and-file want a greater voice in the negotiation decisions and the negotiating process. The broadcast follows the battle from East Chicago to Atlantic City, where the union held its international convention in Sept., 1978.

There, Local 1010's 'dissidents' are repeatedly voted down and overrules in their attempts to change union policy. McBride argues that his administration is "a good machine, a clean machine" that has made workers in basic steel the "highest paid industrial workers in the country."

There are also union conflicts back at the mill, employer of 20,000 (18,000 union members), and producer of 213,000 tons of steel daily. A union meeting opens with the announcement that "we have lost a brother," a steelworker killed in a mill accident. Workers describe life there as "dangerous, hot, dusty, noisy, depressing . . . like being on another planet." Some call it "hell on earth," where "production comes first, safety last," and where workers are regarded as "their tool to be used." 'Their' refers to Inland Steel, whose officials would not talk to CBS News about the union.

But while the union rank-and-file may be divided over various issues, there is a consensus that things have improved vastly since the beginning of the steelworkers union some 40 years ago. As one steelworker tells Herman, "it isn't all peaches and cream for anybody, but they have come a long way from where they were back in those days."

Historical perspective is provided by newsreels and by the personal accounts of two Local 1010 veterans of "The Memorial Day Massacre" on 1937, one chapter in the steelworkers' violent history; and through quotes — still relevent to the struggle today between so-called "Big Labor" and "Big Business" — from Carl Sandburg's 1920 poem, "Smoke and Steel."

Hitchcock Film Airs

Alfred Hitchcocks's film classic, "Notorious," starring Cary Grant and Ingrid Bergman, will be rebroadcast Tuesday, March 6 (12:30 a.m.), as "The CBS Late Movie."

Claude Rains, Louis Calhern and Leopoldine Konstantin are also featured in this taut drama of love and international intrigue.

A government agent named Devlin (Grant), crashes a cocktail party being given by the notorious Alicia Huberman (Bergman), whose father was convicted of treason against the United States.

Discovering that Alicia is loyal to the United States, Devlin reveals his identity and proposes that Alicia go as his assistant to Rio de Janiero to help smoke out a post-war plot against the United States. Alicia, who has begun to fall in love with Devlin, consents to go and use her beauty and reputation to infiltrate the plotters.

Afraid of Sebastian, Alicia is not interested in marrying him. However, at the request of Devlin's chief (Calhern), she sacrifices herself and her love for Devlin, and consents to marry Sebastian.

Continuing A Tradition

"I'm proud of my mother," says Anne Lockhart of "Battlestar Galactica," but I did tell her that my days as June Lockhart's daughter are numbered and that her days as Anne Lockhart's mother are just beginning."

Anne quickly points out that her remarks are made with "A tradition of love and respect" because similar words have been used through four generations of acting Lockharts by each member early in his or her performing career. Summing it all up, Anne says, "It's just sort of our way of letting the family know that some day we'll make them proud of us."

'Grizzly' Sued

A Utah animal trainer and film-maker has filed suit against Schick-Sunn Classic Productions for $10 million over the company's "The Life and Time of Grizzly Adams."

Dick Robinson claims that he conceived the idea for the story and actually made a film based on it in conjunction with Sunn, but it was never released. He maintains that the company's later film and TV series was based on his project.

Elke Sommer Set

Elke Sommer has been signed to guest star in "Stunt Seven," a two-hour adventure pilot for CBS-TV.

Palm Trees Are A 'No No' For Manager

"The biggest enemy of every location manager is — palm trees!"

There are other things that bother location manager David Lawson, such as traffic noise, airplanes and vapor trails in the sky.

For the past two years Lawson has been scouting locations for the production of NBC-TV's "Studs Lonigan," and last summer concluded the selection of 18 sites.

Lawson says: "Trying to find areas in Southern California that look like Chicago in the late teens and early 1920s is not easy. Every time you turn around there's usually a palm tree. Then you have the street signs that must be taken down. If I'm looking for an old apartment, I try to rent a back one because there's less street noise.

"It's difficult doing a period show in Los Angeles unless you're doing one that's actually set here. You also want to keep away from freeways; too much noise. And since we move on wheels, we sometimes turn down a particular location if there isn't enough room to park our vehicles."

Like all good location scouters, David tries to have more than one choice to show the director. The latter has final approval.

"We do all kinds of things," David continues, "like making the financial arrangements, getting the necessary city permits and smoothing over any problems with the people involved.

"There is a trend now to use more locations because it saves production money. Construction costs are so high, it costs less to find a suitable site and film there.

"Also, there are a lot of empty office buildings in the downtown skid row section of Los Angeles and many studios, like a back lot. People are moving out of the buildings and they're solid, built with character and give a film or a TV show a good look."

SEEKING TREASURE - Bo Svenson stars as an American explorer in search of a treasure and seeks clues to its location from an Amazon queen (Anita Ekberg), in "Gold of the Amazon Women," on "The Big Event" Tuesday, March 6 (9-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

'Studs Lonigan' Airs As Miniseries On NBC

"Studs Lonigan," James T. Farrell's once-banned classic American trilogy of novels about the boyhood-to-manhood struggles of an Irish-American lad in rough-edged Chicago following World War I (the story was considered too racy for the era in which it was published), will be telecast as a miniseries on NBC. The first segment of the three-part presentation will air Wednesday, March 7 (9 to 11 p.m.), and continue Wednesdays, March 14 and 21.

Those who haven't read the literary classic will have the opportunity to see the work come to life. The characters are raw reflections of their ethnic backgrounds and the triumphant, yet tragic, times in which they lived. The people — proud, bigoted, often profane — are a passionate and realistic echo of urban America as it used to be. The trilogy has been generally acknowledged as a superb portrayal of the times.

Harry Hamlin stars in the agonizing title role of the youth who spends his life in the melting pot that was Chicago following World War I and through the Great Depression. This, Hamlin's television debut, closely follows his film debut in the current motion picture hit "Movie Movie." Charles Durning and Colleen Dewhurst star as Lonigan's parents.

Also starring in the miniseries that follows Lonigan from age 15 through 29 are Brad Dourif, Lisa Pelikan, Diana Scarwid, John Friedrich, Devon Ericson, Jessica Harper, Dolph Sweet, Sam Weisman and David Wilson.

In the initial episode, young Studs (Dan Shor) prepares for high school and discusses his future with his street gang and members of his family. Parental expectation is high for Studs, but the street-tough youth fends off most offers of help. While eliminating all chances for success, Studs manages to destroy relationships with all who come in contact with him. Lucy (Pelikan) becomes the girl of his dreams, the person he thinks most about, particularly when things are not going well, as is often the case.

The Studs Lonigan trilogy consists of novels published in sequence: "Young Lonigan" (1932); "The Young Manhood of Studs Lonigan" (1934); and "Judgement Day" (1935). The public's acceptance of these works has come a long way since the first book in the trilogy was published.

Series Follows Two During First Year

Leigh McCloskey and Cindy Grover star as Billy Baker and Joanna Huffman, a young couple facing contemporary problems on the age-old rocky road to romance, in "Married: The First Year," airing on CBS-TV Wednesdays, (8 to 9 p.m.).

The series also stars Claudette Nevins, Martha Scott, Christine Belford, Stanley Grover and K Callan as the couple's respective families.

Billy and Joanna are determined to get married, despite the disapproval of both families. Everyone feels the two are too young to take the marital plunge (Joanna is a high school senior and Billy just a few years older). Another objection, unvoiced but present, nevertheless, is that the two come from different financial and social backgrounds.

Joanna's upper-middle-class family is represented by her divorced parents (Nevins and Joshua Bryant), her maternal grandparents (Scott and Pitt Herbert), a young single aunt (Belford), plus her father's new wife (Constance McCashin), and her paternal grandfather (Henry Wilcoxon).

Billy's family, comprised of his parents (Callan and Stanley Grover), sisters and brothers, is smaller than Joanna's, but in their own way, they're strong and united.

Cindy Grover cut her acting teeth in the daytime drama "Love of Life," and she most recently appeared in the motion picture "Jaws II" and as William Holden's daughter in "Network." Miss Grover comes by her talent naturally — her father, Stanley Grover — who plays her father-in-law in the series — has a background which includes Broadway ("Company," "Mr. President," "Thirteen Daughters," and "Time Remembered" with Richard Burton and Helen Hayes), as well as regional theater and television. He appeared with his daughter in "Love of Life," as well as "Secret Storm," "Love Is a Many Splendored Thing" and "Edge of Night."

Aniston Joins The Cast Of 'Search'

John Aniston, who portrayed Eddie Aleata on "Love of Life," has joined the "Search For Tomorrow" cast in the role of Martin tourneur. Martin is General Sentell's son and Travis' uncle. He is known as the black sheep of the family, however.

Four Get 'Letters'

Lew Ayres, Mike Farrell, Margaret Hamilton and Gail Strickland have been signed to appear in "Letters From Frank," a two-hour movie to air on CBS.

'Strangers' Cast

Ford Rainey, Donald Moffat and Royal Dano have joined the cast of "Strangers: The Story of a Mother and Daughter."

The television movie starring Bette Davis and Gena Rowlands is now in production for CBS.

To Host Awards

Dick Van Dyke, who can be a very funny man, says he hasn't the faintest idea what makes people laugh:

"I don't think anyone knows what makes an audience laugh. I've read a lot on the subject, but have formed absolutely no personal theories."

Van Dyke, who will host "The Fifth Annual People's Choice Awards," Thursday, March 8 (9 to 11 p.m. on CBS-TV), has been yanking laughs out of people ever since he was doing a pantomime comedy routine to a Spike Jones record. He had just arrived in Hollywood and had landed a few jobs in small clubs. It was 1948.

Well, almost always yanking laughs. "There were times, lots of them, when people just didn't think I was funny," he recalls. "Worse still, they didn't even pay attention."

And times could be tough. Once, Van Dyke's wife, Marge (they were high school sweethearts), had to go to the hospital. The same day, the couple were evicted. "The landlord had been patient, but he couldn't let us stay forever." Dick had $88. The hospital bill was $88.76.

Sweeter times were coming. Crank up the time machine a bit, and you find Dick starring, by way of Broadway ("Bye Bye Birdie"), in "The Dick Van Dyke Show." In the early sixties, the show was consistently in the top 10.

"Some psychologists seem to think that comedians appeal to inferior feelings," says Van Dyke. According to this, people feel good when they get a chance to laugh at someone acting more foolish than they do. Another theory holds that audiences have a trace of sadism that makes them feel happy about the mix-ups comedians have to suffer through.

"Well, let me tell you, I've faced some audiences that seemed pretty sadistic, but I really don't agree with the theory. I think it's a mistake even to try to figure out the definition of comedy. You could lose your sense of humor in the attempt."

And, To Dick Van Dyke, that wouldn't be something to laugh about.

HOLLYWOOD — BARBRA STREISAND turned more than a few heads when she parked in a no-parking zone just a few steps away from a Beverly Hills gift shop, where she dashed in, made a purchase and dashed out. She also managed to drive away in her Rolls Royce just minutes before a police car made its way through the heavy afternoon traffic.

Viewers of NBC's new "MRS. COLOMBO" series who have kept an eye on daytime's "Ryan's Hope" will certainly recognize TV's newest lady detective. KATE MULGREW starred in the daytime drama for two-and-a-half years and confides she was more than a bit reluctant to leave New York for a nighttime series. The 17-hour work days is just one reason!

With so many former live-in girlfriends filing suit against the likes of LEE MARVIN, MICK JAGGER and FLIP WILSON, it's understandable why JOHN TRAVOLTA's current love, Marilu Henner, remains firmly implanted in her Hollywood apartment. They may be vacationing together this Spring, but their homes are two different places.

BURT REYNOLDS and SALLY FIELD are said to have had a lover's spat, and as yet neither is making an effort to kiss and make up.

ANNE LOCKHART, the newest addition to "BATTLESTAR GALACTICA," doesn't admit it often, but she's not a high school graduate. Illness during her junior year in high school forced her to take her 11th year of education twice, and before she completed her senior year, she quit. Nevertheless, she still has promised her mom, JUNE, that she'll complete the California efficiency exam one of these days to get the diploma.

CISSY KING isn't waving flags about it, but she's constantly at the side of WILLIAM BISCEGLIA, whom avid college football fans will remember as the fullback at the University of Alabama the year JOHNNY MUSSO was an All-American tailback.

While ABC continues to win the ratings war for the current TV year, at least five shows that have been winners will not return for the next season, including "WELCOME BACK, KOTTER," "STARSKY & HUTCH" and "WHAT'S HAPPENING."

Singer NEIL DIAMOND is coping as best he can with a problem so many super stars face at least once in their career, an impersonator. Someone's been making the rounds ordering various items, signing restaurant checks, etc., as Neil. The singer has contacted police.

Film Acquisition

Walt Disney Studios has made its first film acquisition in 20 years, securing the distribution rights to "Take Down," a PG-rated film.

The movie, about the sport of wrestling at the college level, stars Edward Herrmann and Kathleen Lloyd.

Cassidy, Purl Star

Shaun Cassidy and Linda Purl will star in "A Very Special Love," a two-hour drama to air on ABC-TV.

Problem Explored

Beau Bridges portrays a broken man whose American Dream has collapsed through divorce and who fears losing his children to another man in "The Child Stealer," an original two-hour dramatic movie airing Friday, March 9 (9 p.m.), on ABC-TV. Overcome by jealousy, he decides his only recourse is to abduct his two young daughters and flee the state.

Kidnapping of children by their divorced parents is a current social problem rapidly on the increase, with an estimated 100,000 cases of child stealing a year, according to local, state and federal agencies dealing with this subject. And Bridges attributes the emotion of love as the reason.

"Love is such a strong emotion that it can cause a person to become irrational and do almost anything. 'The Child Stealer' is the story of two people who, because of fears, are unable to communicate. David (Bridges' character) fears the loss of his children and his own spirit of the child within him — leaving him terribly frightened of being left alone.

"People do everything because of love, both negative and positive, and unfortunately, because a parent panics, the children become the innocent victims."

Although admittedly very emotional like his character in "The Child Stealer," Bridges sees his own personal life very together and maintains a secure relationship with his two young sons.

"That's not to say I would never behave like David. Under the right circumstances, I would probably do anything short of murder to be with the people I love."

Beau chose to do the drama because it was a story worth telling. And he found that the role reaffirmed the importance of children in his life.

"I love kids and I love working with them. Having children on the set is important in this business because I think it brings everything into perspective. All of us have a little bit of the child still within us and being with children, laughing and pretending, allows us to be a child again. And after all, the basis for acting is to make believe and pretend."

Co-starring with Bridges as his ex-wife, Jan, is Blair Brown. David Groh is seen as Jack Farnham, who falls in love with Jan, and Cristina Raines plays Karen, the new love interest in David's life. Portraying the two young daughters are Lauri Hendler as Andrea and Tracey Gold as Pam.

New Game Show

Don Segall has been signed to write and produce "Celebrity Charades," a new half-hour syndicated comedy game show hosted by ventriloquist Jay Johnson and Squeaky.

'Uptown' Is Star-Studded

A stellar cast — including more than a dozen of today's most prominent entertainers — will star on NBC-TV in "Uptown," a new two-hour musical-comedy history of Harlem's famed Apollo Theatre. The special will be hosted by Natalie Cole, Lou Rawls, Ben Vereen and Flip Wilson, and will headline Bunny Briggs, Cab Calloway, Billy Eckstine, Gladys Knight and the Pips, The Mighty Clouds of Joy, Nipsey Russell, Doc Severinsen, Sandman Sims, The Temptations and Sarah Vaughan, and Jack Albertson as the late Frank Schiffman, owner of the New York theatre. An air date for "Uptown" will be announced.

The Apollo featured many of the leading singers, dancers, and comedians of the past 40 years whose fame has transcended the barriers of race, from Fats Waller, Billie Holliday and Pigmeat Markhan to Lou Rawls, Gladys Night and Flip Wilson. The theatre also treated its predominantly black audiences to performances by such popular white headliners as Harry James, Benny Goodman, Charlie Barnett, Buddy Rich, Doc Severinsen, Bobby Darin and Buddy Holly.

The program will consist of a progression of musical-variety acts, with the co-hosts reflecting its major elements: Cole and the great ladies of the Apollo; Wilson and the comedians; Rawls and the great bands and singers; and Vereen and the dancing men. There will also be vignettes with Albertson, as Schiffman, capturing the story behind the scenes.

Burton Moves On

Robert Burton, who died as Mel on "The Doctors" recently, appeared the same day on "One Life to Live" as Bob Faulkner, the assistant defense attorney for murder suspect Victoria Riley.

Michele Will Tell

Q: Is Liberace married? D. JACKSON, MT. OLIVE, N.C.

A: The flamboyant entertainer has somehow mangaged to escape the bonds of matrimony, which probably attests to the fact that he has brains as well as talent.

Q: Tell me something about Chuck Barris — birthdate; marriage; kids, etc. Where can I write to him? P. McKENZIE, ST. PAUL'S, N.C.

A: Barris was born June 3, 1929, in Philadelphia. While in college, he was on the All-East lacrosse team and was listed in "Who's Who in American Universities." He started out with NBC but later went out on his own and developed several shows, most of them successful ('Dating Game,' 'Newlywed Game,' 'Family Game' etc.). Barris is divorced, has a 16-year-old daughter, and lives in West Los Angeles, Calif. His address is : 1313 N. Vine, Los Angeles, Ca. 90028

Q: How did Shaun Cassidy get into show business? When will "The Hardy Boys" be coming back to TV? CLARICE, LITTLETON, N.C.

A: You might say that Shaun was 'born' into show business — his mother is Shirley Jones and his father, the late Jack Cassidy. Shaun made his first recording after high school graduation in 1976 — "Morning Girl" — and within two years he was an internationally known actor, singer and composer. As for 'Hardy Boys,' the show was cancelled and won't be coming back.

Q: How far did "Hee Haw's" Junior Samples go in school? G. BUCHANAN, HICKORY, N.C.

A: Prior to his TV debut on "Hee Haw," Junior never got beyond the fifth grade. The overall comedian and teller-of-tall tales lived all his life in the hill country around Cumming, Ga., working as a farmer, sawmill hand and carpenter. He won overnight fame when the show premiered.

Q: Since Dolly Parton always wears a wig, can you tell me if she is bald? Or does she have any hair at all? J. HENDERSON, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: The status of Dolly's real hair is a deep, dark (?) secret, and the foxy lady intends to keep it that way!

Q: Who played the hired gunman named Frank in a recent episode of "How the West Was Won"? J. GRAY, LEXINGTON, N.C.

A: Jared Martin, who has been on-screen since the mid-60s, played Frank Grayson.

Things Are Settling Down

'Tarheelia' is back to normal.

That's Chapel Hill to all those folks who either live north of the Mason-Dixon line or who may not have heard of Dean Smith and his band of blue-clad miracle workers.

And that's only possible if you have never heard of college basketball.

RICK YONAKER is one of the reasons the University of North Carolina Tar Heels have secured a berth in the first round of the NCAA playoffs, televised Saturday, March 10 at 1:30 p.m. on NBC-TV.

The Tar Heels of the University of North Carolina, one of the most consistent entries in the NCAA playoffs over the past 20 years, hope to make it back into the playoffs again this year.

NBC will televise first-round games Saturday, March 10 (2 p.m.).

A lot of people feared that the basketball team would suffer the same fate. After all, didn't the Heels lose All-America guard Phil Ford to graduation? Ford directed the most potent offensive and strategic weapon the UNC team has; namely, the four-corners offense.

But Smith always manages to get the most of his players, and this season has been no exception. Suddenly, Mike O'Koren has emerged as a bonafide, first-team All-America candidate.

Then there is forward Al Wood, who has become one of the most feared defensive players in the nation. Another one is Rich Yonaker, the guy at center who always seems to play his best when the chips are down.

Rich, a 6-9 junior from Euclid, Ohio, was pressed into starting duty as a freshman when Tommy Legarde suffered an injury. He started 11 of the final 13 games that season, scoring 117 points and grabbing 79 rebounds over the span.

Rich underwent knee surgery in the off-season to assure a 100% performance for 1978-79.

This year, Rich is averaging 7.9 per game and is one of the main reasons the Tar Heels have been able to maintain their incredible record in the ACC.

For the 12th year in a row, the Heels finished either first or second in the conference. Now they hope to prove to the rest of the NCAA world that they deserve their high national ranking.

The Teen Scene

MARIE OSMOND may have politely said 'No' to ANDY GIBB's persistent efforts for a date, but she's not finding it easy to reject those roses that have been arriving with Andy's signature almost daily.

DONNA SUMMER, while grateful and elated over her GRAMMY AWARD, says she won't be totally satisfied until the Music Academy has a disco music category among its awards. And naturally, she says her biggest satisfaction would come from being the very first winner in that category.

Apparently it's true that SHAUN CASSIDY and long-time girl ANN PENNINGTON have gone their separate ways. Shaun is being a gentleman and not offering any comment, but as production comes to an end on his TV movie, "A VERY SPECIAL LOVE," insiders note that Ann has yet to visit the set.

That new house LEIF GARRETT recently purchased for his mom, his sister and himself, was previously owned by singer NIGEL OLSON ("Dancin' Shoes"). Leif's spent little time at the new residence, though, since he just returned from still another Australian promotional tour, during which he constantly wore the new $700 black leather jacket he also just bought for himself.

In the first two weeks of its premiere, ABC's "MAKING IT" has almost surpassed "MORK & MINDY" in the amount of fan mail arriving from all over the country.

Busy Hiatus

Conrad Bain doesn't plan to rest during his hiatus from "Diff'rent Strokes." Once the series stops filming for the season, Conrad will go before the cameras to portray heart transplant pioneer Dr. Christiaan Barnard in "The Man of the Heart."

Following this feature film, Conrad will begin work on his portrayal of retired hockey coach Les Patrick, who came out of retirement to play the goalie for the N.Y. Rangers, leading them to a Stanley Cup. The project is tentatively titled "The Old Man in the Net."

Wishes Come True

Butterfly McQueen — who appeared as Prissy in "Gone With the Wind" — stars as a fairy godmother who pops up on a television screen to grant secret wishes to a girl in Harlem in "The Seven Wishes of Joanna Peabody." This magical tale of wishes that sometimes come too true will air on the "ABC Weekend Specials" series Saturday, March 10 (12-noon to 12:30 p.m.).

Joanna Peabody (Star-Shemah), at age 12, feels that she has more than her share of problems: an older sister who nags her, a baby brother who babbles constantly, seemingly endless household chores and a wardrobe restricted to hand-me-down clothes — all the hardships that make life a trial at 12.

Then, one magic morning, "Aunt Thelma" (McQueen) suddenly appears on Joanna's TV screen to say: "I'm your official Special Spirit, come from the Special Spirit place to watch over you and give you something nice."

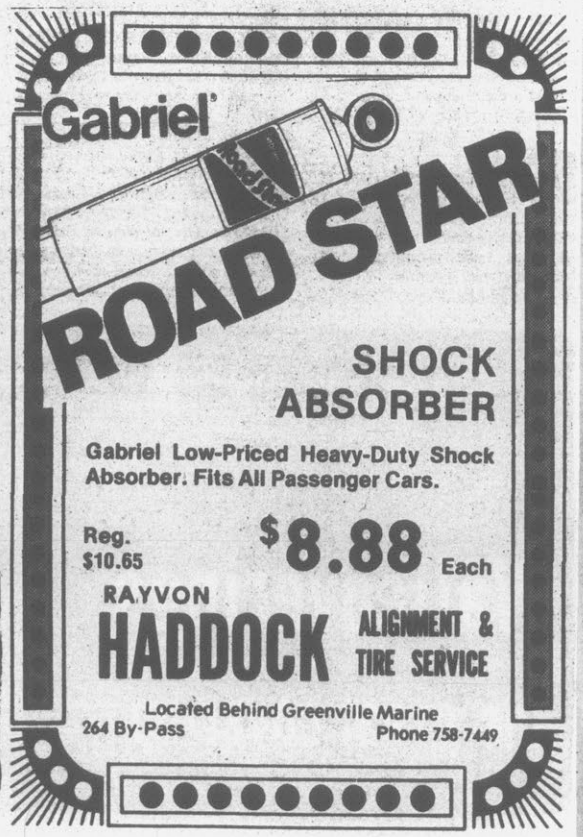

The "something nice" Aunt Thelma has to offer is seven wishes, three of which Joanna wastes without realizing what she is doing.

'Joker' Spinoff

Production has begun on "Joker, Joker, Joker," a weekly children's version of "The Joker's Wild."

Hard Work Is Paying Off

Whenever you mention the Duke Blue Devils to an ardent fan or a follower of ACC action, you usually get the names of Gene Banks, Mike Gminski or Jim Spanarkel bantered around. And why not? After all, the three are responsbile for the superb season the Devils had last year. The Duke trio are also all potential All-Americas.

KENNY DENNARD of the Duke Blue Devils plays on a team surrounded by superstars, - Mike Gminski, Gene Banks and Jim Spanarkel. Duke will try to secure a berth in the regionals when they meet an opponent in the first round of the NCAA playoffs, Saturday, March 10 (2 p.m. on NBC-TV).

But there are a lot of other people on the Devil roster who contribute to the fame and fortune of that mania known as "Devils Fever." One of those is sophomore Kenny Dennard.

The Devils hope to make it back into the NCAA playoffs, which begin Saturday, March 10 (2 p.m.), on NBC-TV.

Few people notice the invaluable contributions Dennard has made in two seasons with the Devils. He has started every game since he arrived on the Durham campus, so coach Bill Foster obviously knows the value of the 6-7 King, N.C., native.

He was the leading floor shooter as a rookie on the team with a 55.1 average and was fourth on the team in assists with 72. Kenny scored in 33 of 34 games the Devils played in, and further showed his versatility by pulling down at least one rebound in every game.

One of the things that Dennard set out to do when this season began was to get more consistency with his outside shot. He has a good touch, but tends to alter his shooting motion after he fires up a couple of misses. Foster worked hard with his young forward in order to get the shot more consistent, and Dennard has learned not to change his shooting motion.

The rest of the Devils have had some problems getting their act together. After starting off playing the kind of ball worthy of their number one ranking, Duke fell in back-to-back games against Ohio State and Rutgers. Then they put together a winning streak before falling to North Carolina in the ACC.

Now the Devils want desperately to get back into the NCAA playoffs, but they may have to settle for an NCAA berth via an ACC championship in the tourney.

One of the areas that the Devils are not too strong in is their bench. They will have to get more consistent play out of their subs if they hope to make it back into the NCAA finals.

Players like the unsung Kenny Dennard will help to cement the starters into the kind of fighting unit that will again challenge for the ACC title and national honors.

Exciting Series Returns

Cheryl Tiegs and Peter Beard have a brush with death photographing charging elephants while in Kenya to investigate alleged wildlife mismanagement. Jan-Michael Vincent and Deborah Raffin become two of the first Americans to dive on Cuba's Cayman Trench. Jack and Margaux Hemingway canoe remote jungle rivers with the primitive Makintare Indians. Singer Tanya Tucker and writer Tom McGuane join a wild horse roundup in Wyoming and examine the controversy surrounding these animals. Top woman climber Beverly Johnson and Everest climber Rick Ridgeway conquer a 4,000-foot spire towering above the Amazon jungle. These are a few of the highlights as the ABC Sports' award-winning series, "The American Sportsman," returns for its 15th season.

The season premiere, airing Saturday, March 10 (2:30 to 3:30 p.m.), will be the first of four successive Saturday programs in the same time slot. The next five programs will be aired on successive Sundays, starting April 8.

Curt Gowdy returns as host of the only network series dealing with outdoor pursuits and conservation. Gowdy himself participates in the more traditional outdoor activities of hunting and fishing. In Ireland, he hunts pheasant with Tom Seaver; in Oregon, he fishes for steelhead with William Conrad, and in Alaska, he battles Arctic char, grayling and salmon with veteran Dub Taylor.

The series' crews have been to every continent (even now they're making their first trip to the vast Antarctica), logging over a quarter of a million miles in search of the ultimate in outdoor experiences.

In an encore presentation, the award-winning "The Spirit of '78: Flight of Double Eagle II" will tell the dramatic on-the-scene story of the first successful crossing of the Atlantic Ocean by balloon.

Charles Bronson No Longer Carries Chip

"I'm really a bum at heart," confesses Charles Bronson, star of "Death Wish," airing on CBS-TV Saturday, March 10 (9 to 11 p.m.). "And I'm not really a tough guy. I'm much nicer today than I've ever been, because I've learned to control my temper in the last few years."

Bronson admits that he carried around a "real chip on my shoulder" for many years. "But today, I don't want any trouble with anyone. That means I certainly don't want to give anyone any trouble — and it means I certainly am not going to let anyone give me any trouble. I'm no longer afraid of anything or anyone."

The rugged actor credits his hobby, painting, for a lot of the peaceful state he's now existing in. "Thanks to my painting, I've been able to see life from more than one viewpoint. It's helped me balance things out, find an inner peace."

His paintings can best be described as extraordinary, and are the scenes of things he's done, seen and lived. Many are paintings of childhood experiences.

Bronson was one of 15 children who lived in poverty in the Pennsylvania coal-mining hills. He watched his father choke to death and later replaced him in the mines, working 16 hours a day when he was just 10-years old.

He doesn't like to talk about how much he's making, except to admit that the sum is "unbelievable." What he does like to talk about are the things that mean the most to him — his family, and the time he spends with them.

"I'd much rather be at home with my family, sitting in my den, painting, going for long walks than in front of a camera."

Are there any secret wishes or desires yet unfulfilled in the life of Charles Bronson?

"Yes!" he exclaims with a laugh. "Someday I want to make just one movie where I wear a tuxedo and act just like Cary Grant from the opening scene to the closing one."

Joe & Becky

Will they get their money's worth?

Only if they consider these essential tips and the value of brick...

Along with two million other Americans this year, Joe and Becky Moore are buying their first home — the single most important purchase to be made in their lifetime. Owning their own home will develop a sense of responsibility and pride in ownership in Joe and Becky and will also determine a stake in their community. If they buy wisely, they'll enjoy a sound investment in personal happiness and financial security. If not, they'll find themselves divested of both income and emotions trying to live in and maintain a home that just does not live up to appearances and expectations.

To minimize this risk Joe and Becky are following a thorough, well-thought-out plan in buying their home. As novice home buyers, the prospects of buying a house at first seem overwhelming as they contemplate what appears to be a long and complicated process. Yet, regardless of the pitfalls that can beset the inexperienced, they know a few precautionary measures can go a long way in insuring a smooth and successful purchase. Outlined here is the step-by-step strategy Joe and Becky are using to make sure they get their money's worth.

WRITE A DETAILED LIST of specific needs and tastes in terms of the style and quality of a home you prefer, including floor plans, location, lot size, and neighborhood. Consider the location of schools, supermarkets, businesses, and highways from your home. If husband and wife both work, determine how much time each of you can devote to the upkeep of a home. Owning a home means responsibility, dedication, and time. If upkeep of a home is not your favorite pastime, make sure to include low maintenance on your list from the outset. Remember, give attention to every possible detail that could affect your happiness in a new home. Obtain an inexpensive notebook to record your list, owner's name, location, list price, and features of homes that appeal to you. Don't rely on memory.

KNOW WHAT YOU CAN AFFORD. Talk with your banker. He can help you determine the down payment needed and the monthly payments you can afford. This will save much time and energy by limiting your search only to houses you can seriously consider. Savings and Loan Associations, commercial banks, and mortgage brokers all provide excellent counseling services. Determine whether you are looking to economize or not. It may be worthwhile initially to invest money in a home that is more practical and which has a good resale value later on rather than one which is highly decorative.

HUD recommends two ways to determine your ability to meet house payments:

a) The price of a home should not exceed two to two-and-one-half times your annual family income. A young couple should stay on the low side of this estimate, unless income is substantial and job prospects are good.

b) A homeowner should not pay more than 25% of his gross monthly income for expenses such as principal, interest, taxes, and insurance, and should not pay more than 33% of gross monthly income for mortgage, heat, utilities, repair and maintenance. Most of all, don't overlook additional expenses for upkeep and repair to maintain your home in a comfortable, attractive condition that will be a credit to your neighborhood and which will increase its resale value later on.

TAKE TIME TO SHOP. Use your "shopping list" and price range to look for a house that is the most economically suitable to your particular needs and lifestyle.

- Compare the alternatives. And call on experts if you are unsure you are getting the best buy for your money. Visit your local brick dealer or manufacturer, they'd be glad to help you. Being in a hurry puts you at the seller's advantage and may cause you to make costly oversights.
- Housing demands are greatest and prices more competitive in the spring and summer seasons but the best bargains can be gotten in the fall and winter months.
- Don't buy a house that is priced significantly higher than other homes in the immediate vicinity. Individual house values in a given area tend to gravitate toward the average home value. If this is substantially lower than the value of your home, it will tend to depreciate its value.
- Question your realtor. Ask him from the beginning which properties are his listings and which belong to other firms. Since a realtor's commission is higher on properties listed by his own firm, he may be reluctant to show other properties. If so, contact the appropriate listing realtor.

EVALUATE THE LOCATION. Experts agree that location is one of the most important parts of a home's value and should be thoroughly evaluated before buying. Is the house located in the type of neighborhood you want to live in? How far will you have to drive to get to work? Are shopping areas near by? Does the area have a good school district? Are you in a high-level noise area?

Real estate trends affecting the home's value are also important. What are the general resale values of homes in the neighborhood? What are the long- and short-term trends in property values and property taxes? Do local zoning laws adequately protect the home owner? Will industrial or commercial developments or changes in highway and street routings affect the value of this property?

All these considerations can be just as important to your happiness and investment as the house itself and are crucial in evaluating the current and future value of a home. Don't get in a hurry!

EVALUATE YOUR RESALE POTENTIAL. Assuming that like most young people Joe and Becky plan to trade for a larger home as their family's needs and financial circumstances change, the resale potential of a new home is a crucial consideration. No matter how much their equity grows on paper, it means very little unless they can find another buyer. In addition to paying the right price for a quality home in a good location, they must also consider how well their individual choice will coincide with that of potential buyers in the future.

A recent survey indicates that the most popular style among young couples is the three-bedroom split-level with an oversized garage. A fireplace is the most wanted extra, with a strong preference for upgraded amenities in the kitchen and master bath. Furthermore, a majority indicated that the family room was not necessary if the house has a den. This reflects many young couples' decision not to have large families.

Fortunately, Joe and Becky probably share many of these same preferences. Yet, if a house plan strays too far from the norm, the difficulty of resale should be seriously evaluated before purchasing. Look carefully at some of the "trends" in building today. What will that "soaring, vertical style of natural wood siding" look like in five years unless it is carefully maintained.

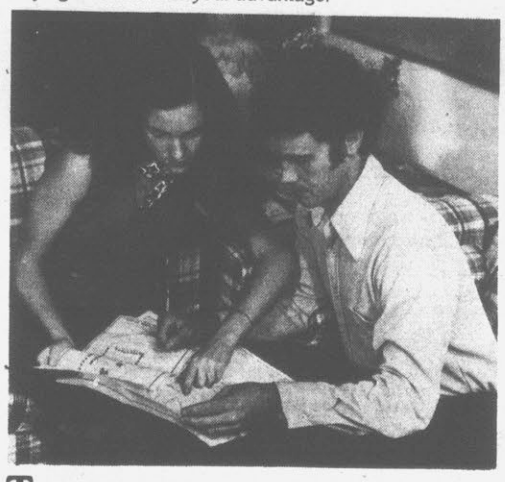

Brick homes on the other hand are noted for their great resale value. Realtors know the value of brick and emphasize it to their buyers. A home which requires less money spent on fuel costs will leave more money available for mortgage payments. And when a home is maintenance free with little money invested in upkeep, buyers notice and take advantage of a good purchase.

Since brick is fire resistant and safer to live in, fire insurance is lower for a brick home. And, in addition to conserving energy, requiring little maintenance, and having a greater safety factor, brick homes keep their original beauty longer. A lot longer than wood homes. Without the time and money invested in repainting every few years.

When it comes time to move on to your next brick home, remember brick will sell the house faster. And for more money. It's a fact many home appraisal handbooks allow a 5% to 7% higher resale value on a brick home.

Joe & Becky

EVALUATE PRICE. If the house you are considering meets all of the above criteria, you are ready to make a bid. In addition to the seller's price, you should obtain an independent appraiser's value of the house. You should also find out the duplication cost for a similar home. (A phone call to a reputable contractor will help you determine this cost.) Finally, you should compare the seller's price with the price being asked for similar homes in the area. Check the classified ads in your newspaper for comparison. Based on these findings you can be reasonably sure you will be making a fair bid. By buying brick with its low maintenance, energy savings, and durable construction, you'll be sure you're getting your money's worth in a home. But don't hurry. The pressure to "sign now" is a sales tactic. Remember, you'll spend many years in this home — and you're in control of the buying situation. Use your advantage!

TIPS ON FINANCING AND CLOSING. While some actually pay more, most people purchase a home by making a downpayment of approximately 10% of the cost of the home to a lender or seller. The lender provides the cash to buy the house. The remainder of monies owed is paid off through a mortgage, a special legal document obligating the borrower to repay the mortgage under certain terms and conditions. Monthly mortgage payments consist of principal, interest, taxes, and property insurance. Another way to purchase a home is to assume and agree to pay the remaining mortgage debt on the home for sale. Listed below are some tips to keep in mind as you explore the financial requirements involved in purchasing a home.

- Be sure you have established credit before borrowing for a home.
- Shop for a mortgage. This can be as important as shopping for the house itself. Mortgage loans can be obtained from savings banks, commercial banks, savings and loan associations, mortgage bankers, and insurance companies. Shop around, compare all mortgage lenders in your area. Don't grab the first mortgage you can find. Even a ¼% difference in interest can save you a lot of money over the course of twenty years. Find out who offers the terms best suited to your individual requirements ... and take your time.
- Make sure you have the necessary cash deposit when you decide to buy. This is the seller's proof of your commitment to purchase.
- Consider the services of a real estate attorney. Because of the complex nature of the purchasing process, a good lawyer will often save you money. Not only can he help you arrange a mortgage, but he can also save you from the "fine print" traps in a home contract and make sure your title of ownership is clear. Good legal counsel is advisable.
- Get a firm estimate of closing costs. Closing costs refer to the charges paid for obtaining the mortgage loan and transferring the real estate title. These costs can range from a few hundred dollars to well over a thousand. Find out exactly what you must pay for and how much of it must be paid for in advance. Some developer/realtors tell you they pay the closing costs. Make sure you understand what costs this includes ... and get it in writing. But if closing costs are your responsibility, they may vary with different lenders so it will pay to shop around.

DETERMINE OPERATING AND MAINTENANCE COSTS. In addition to monthly mortgage, tax, and insurance payments, maintenance costs and utility bills are key factors to consider. Also, get a good estimate of "extra" costs. Not only will you be buying a house, but you'll have to pay to move in it. Experts agree that most people spend about 10% of the cost of a house on such items as new furniture, lighting fixtures, draperies, kitchen equipment and carpets.

With a house in reasonably good condition, yearly maintenance costs may run 1% to 2% of the home's value. These costs will vary, however. The upkeep on a brick home, for instance, is cheaper than for a frame or stucco house of the same design because there's no repainting or replacing with brick. Before buying, be sure to get a reasonable estimate of maintenance costs.

The soaring cost of energy also demands special attention. The various kinds of walls: frame, brick, hardboard and aluminum siding, all have a direct effect on energy costs. It is a fact that a brick home with the standard amount of insulation used in home building today, is the most efficient home for energy savings.

Brick quality saves and keeps on saving for the life of your home in maintenance, energy consumption, and insurance rates. A brick home may be heated and cooled with smaller capacity systems than frame homes — a great saving in initial construction and in replacement costs later.

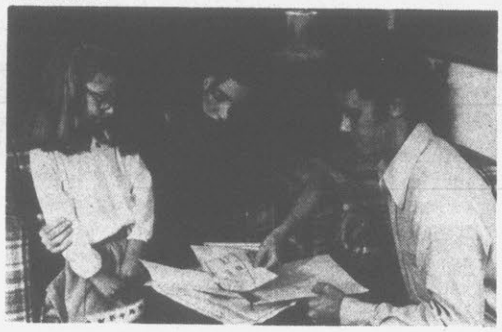

Just remember, the more weight in an insulated wall, the more savings realized in fuel and energy costs. The average wall of a frame home is about 5¼" thick and weighs less than 10 pounds per square foot. A brick cavity wall is about 10" thick and weighs about 80 pounds per square foot.

Building a frame home instead of brick saves about six hundred dollars initial construction costs and around five dollars per month on mortgage payments. Sounds good, doesn't it? But all of that and more goes immediately to cover the extra costs of maintenance and energy. For the "more expensive" brick home, the combined mortgage, energy and maintenance costs are considerably less per month than for the "cheaper" frame house.

Brick homes provide even further savings in fire insurance, about 2 to 3 dollars per month. Insurance companies know that that the possibility of destruction by fire in frame construction is much greater than a brick cavity wall. Therefore, the higher the risk — the higher the cost.

Another factor to keep in mind about a brick home is that it takes less personal time to maintain. You won't have to paint it every 2-3 years and you won't have to replace it as you would with less sound products like wood. Painting of a non-brick house can amount to $800-$900 every three or four years — or $5,600-$6,300 over the life of a 30-year mortgage.

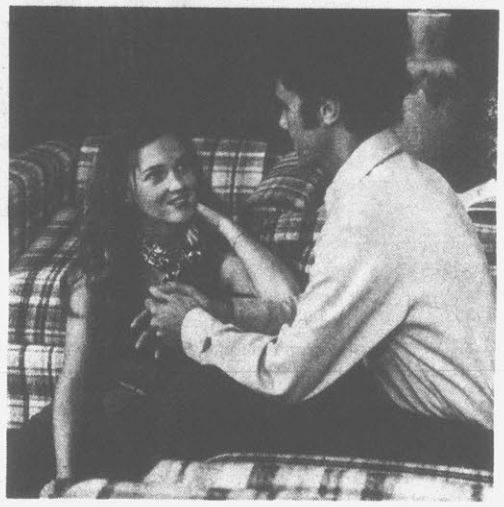

It's important to consider building with brick if you are concerned about keeping maintenance and fuel bills at their lowest.

WORKING WITH A REALTOR. When you use a realtor, be sure you have a proper understanding. Forthright communication is essential from the beginning, and can prevent unexpected and costly misunderstandings.

The realtors and developers you meet are good sources of information, but in most cases, you must dig it out yourself. See Ten Questions to Ask Your Realtor on page 4 for questions and answers to consider and question your realtor about before you finally decide to purchase a particular house.

In today's economy, buying the right house is a good investment by any standard. Property values in most communities are rising at an annual rate between 5 and 10 percent annually. The key is to buy the right house. And the value of a brick house comes from the impression it makes, which reflects the intentions of the owners. An intention to be proud, permanent residents with a concern for quality that will reflect on family, neighbors, and the community. By planning and purchasing carefully, Joe and Becky can build a secure investment and a hedge against inflation. In other words, they will get their money's worth and more ... if they plan carefully and buy wisely.

Be Creative with Brick!

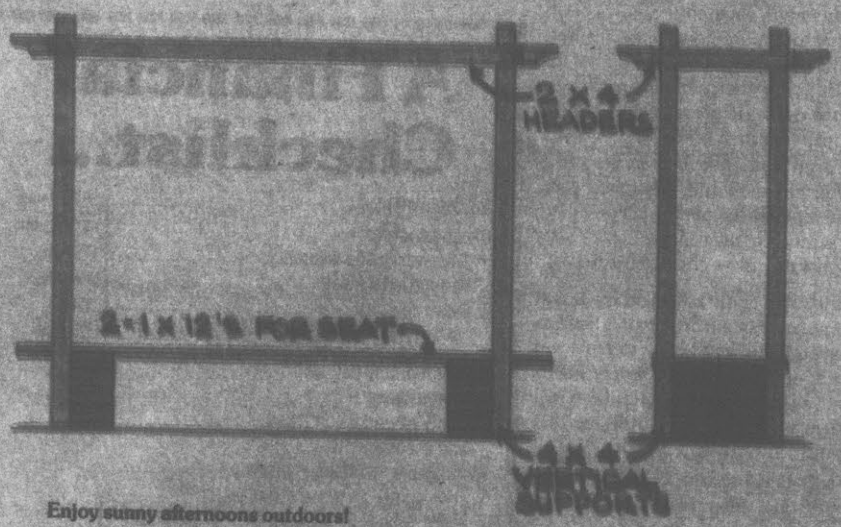

Here are some creative ideas for outdoor projects in brick you can build yourself. They're so easy, anyone can do it! These new, inventive home fixtures will naturally enhance the beauty of your home. And, you'll have the added benefit of using them with no maintenance or replacement for a long time to come.

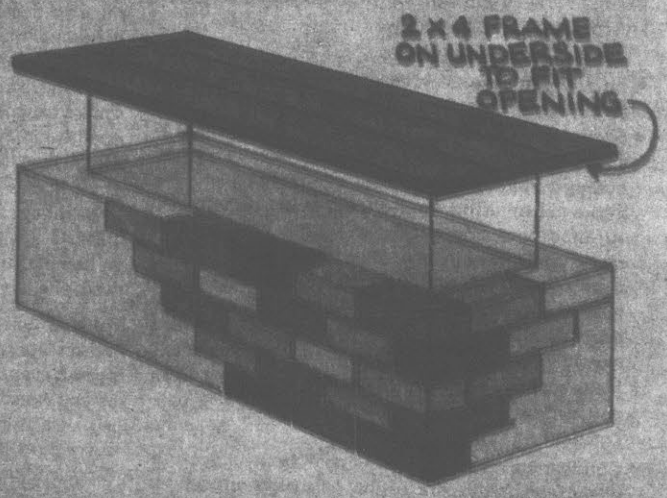

Make your own zigzag garden bench.
It's easy to build, and you decide on the colors and patterns for the bench. You can even contrast it with mortarless brick designs for the surrounding pavement. Use your imagination! Add planter areas if you like.

Make a barbecue a permanent fixture, don't worry about rust or storage.
With a brick barbecue, food tastes better, stays hot longer and prepares easier. You know what your needs are when cooking for family and friends so build extra room to store a variety of different dishes and keep them hot longer. A brick barbecue blends naturally with the environment and you'll never have to replace it.

Enjoy sunny afternoons outdoors!
This simply designed brick gazebo combines a solid brick base with a redwood seat and posts. If you want to be different, make brick columns for support or add variety by enclosing three sides with a wood trellis. Use this project to decorate your yard even further by hanging fern and spider planters from the top of the trellis. It's a natural work of art right in your own backyard.

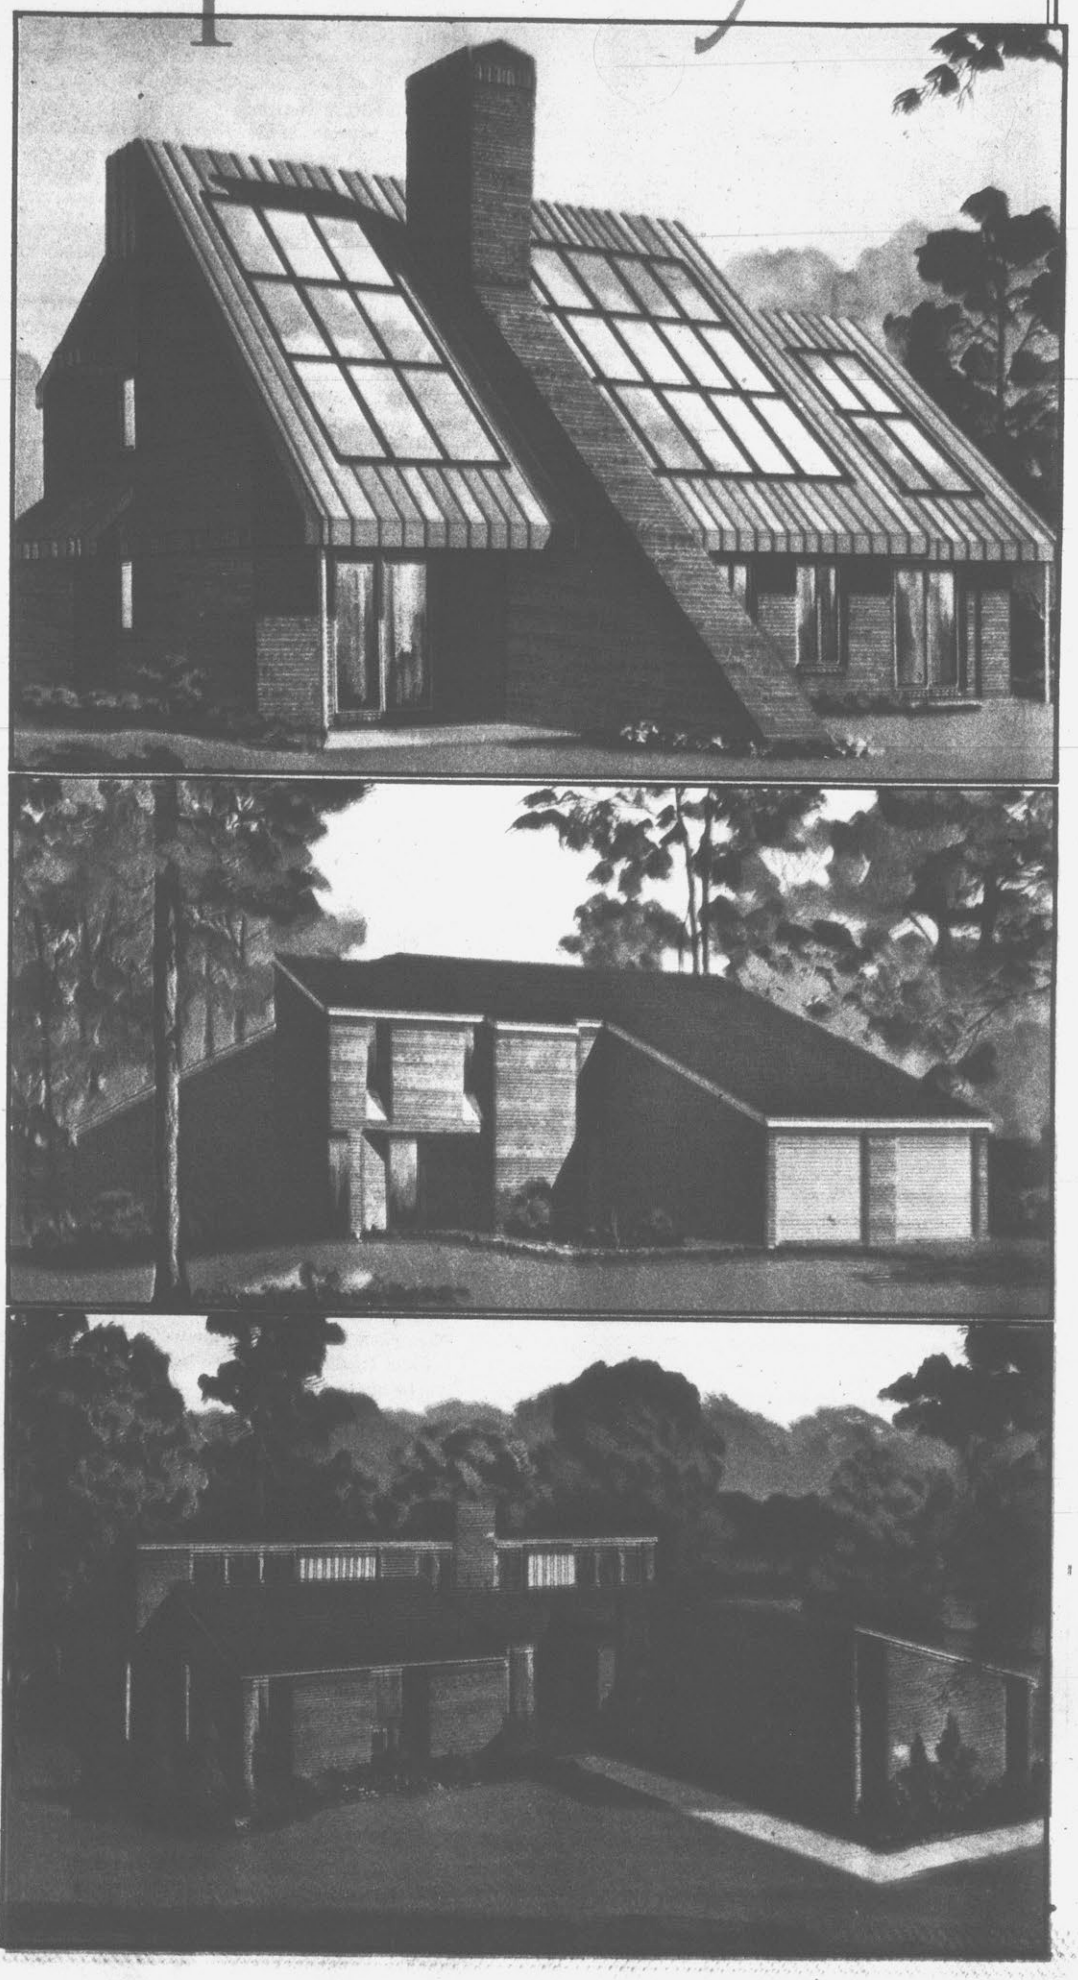

Are you forever trying to locate missing garden tools?
End your search by constructing our latest brick idea — the brick garden tool hide-a-way. This handy hide-a-way is designed to store and protect garden tools. You'll know where to find them every time. And when you're not removing tools, it serves as an attractive garden bench when the wooden seat is in place. You can complete this tool shelter and bench in one day — it's that easy to make.

Have some ideas of your own? Talk to the folks at your local brick company. They'll be glad to help you plan and build all these projects, and more. Want some more suggestions for creative and decorative projects? Write or call B.A.N.C., The Brick Association of North Carolina, for some booklets on Brick Ideas: "Mortarless Sidewalks, Walkways, Plazas," "Brick Paving," "Interior Brick Flooring," and "Walls and Fences." These booklets are illustrated and are yours free. After you receive them, talk to your local brick company. They'll help you get started — creatively.

BRICK Contemporary...

. . . the practical approach to beauty!

Are you looking for a building material combining today's trend for style and economy?

Contemporary builders and buyers alike have found BRICK to be the answer. It's efficient, durable, flexible and beautiful!

Blending modern aesthetic principles with a growing concern for economy and versatility, contemporary brick homes are designed to suit the changing needs of today's homeowners. These homes are designed to make maximum use of both energy and space and also keep maintenance and utility costs to a minimum. A must for all homebuyers concerned with rising inflation.

In light of soaring fuel costs, energy-efficiency is the number one prerequisite for any modern home. And these energy-saving qualities abound in brick. In a comparative study involving two identically designed homes (one of wood, one of brick) in the $60,000 price range, the quality brick home costs an average of $360 a year less in insurance, utilities, and maintenance.

Moreover, brick won't rust or warp, and never needs painting. And it can't be eaten by termites. It's virtually maintenance free — an important consideration when using the soaring sweeps and variety of geometric forms characteristic of many contemporary designs. Maintaining these designs would be extremely costly using other materials. Yet with brick, the contemporary homeowner can actually save money and have the time to devote to other activities.

Adaptability? Just another great feature of brick well suited to the angular forms of contemporary styles. In addition to its structural strength and flexibility, brick comes in a variety of textures and colors which architects can imaginatively craft in different bonds and patterns. Beautifully natural earth tones can be made to blend, contrast, or harmonize with each home's particular style and environment.

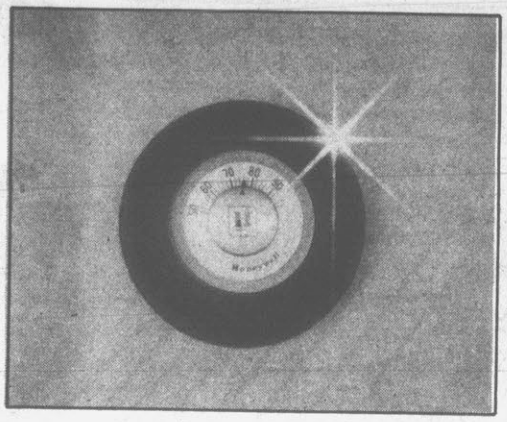

Safety and appreciation of investment vitally concern contemporary homebuyers as well as the aesthetic, functional, and economic aspects of a contemporary home design. Here again, brick is the solution.

Brick is fire resistant, so the insurance premiums for a brick home are lower than those for a frame home of comparable size.

And since brick actually grows more beautiful with age, it offers a unique resale advantage — a 5% to 7% higher value for a 20-year-old brick home than for homes built of most other materials.

It is no wonder ... with all these advantages homebuilders and buyers are thinking in terms of BRICK — the contemporary way to build.

Ten Questions to ask your realtor

1. Is the home insulated? What is the best insulated wall for energy conservation?
A brick cavity wall is two walls of brick, separated by an air space of 2 to 2½ inches. This space is the perfect place for insulation, since any insulation performs better behind dense materials like brick. An insulated brick cavity wall can reduce your heating and cooling bills considerably. The added bonus is that the cavity wall provides the possibility of beautiful interior brick walls, automatically, and economically.

2. How important is the homeowner's warranty?
When purchasing your home, find out the time period for the Home Owner's Warranty. In all new homes this is particularly important because it gives you protection against initially unnoticeable construction defects.

3. Doesn't brick have a higher safety factor than wood? Isn't there a difference between insurance rates on a frame home and a brick home?

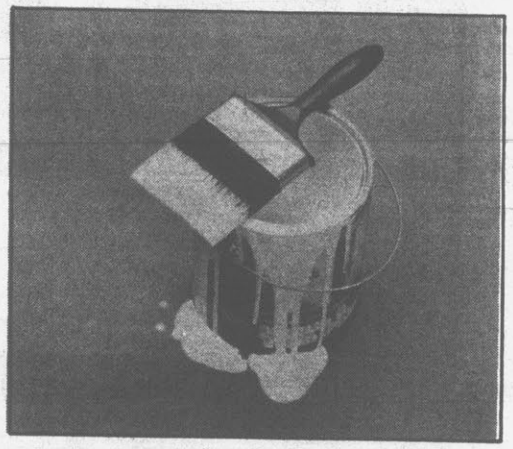

Brick is the safest building material you can use in your home. When you think of brick, however, do not limit its use to outside walls only. Brick is used inside too — for interior walls, floors, and fireplaces. Masonry walls provide an ideal barrier against the spread of fire and also maintain structural integrity during a fire. According to a recent "Fire Protection Planning Report," "Frequently concrete and masonry suffer little more than superficial damage in a fire and can readily be restored to use." This means safety for your family as well as for firefighters. Added to this, fire insurance rates are lower for brick homes.

4. Isn't the resale value on a brick home generally higher than a frame home?
Yes, this is true. A brick home does not suffer from the wear and tear a frame home does. Therefore, it doesn't depreciate in value like a frame home. Nor does it require a lot of money or time for the maintenance (repainting and replacing deteriorating wood) needed on a wood home. And, of course, fire safety and energy conservation are additional factors influencing a higher resale value. Realtors, aware of the value of a brick home, sell brick homes faster, too.

5. How often does a frame home have to be painted?
Two factors influencing the frequency of repainting a home are: (a) the quality of the paint; and (b) the average climate. With the moist climate found in the southern states and with the inexpensive paints now used, repainting of a frame home can be as frequent as annually. On the average, however, repainting will probably be necessary every 3-4 years.

6. What should I know about a fireplace?
When looking at homes, it's important not to settle for simply knowing the house comes with a fireplace. Here are some features to look for in a fireplace. Check the location. Some fireplaces are located at the end of a home, but the best position is on an interior wall to obtain the benefit of heat radiating inside the house. Is the firebox made of masonry or metal? It's a fact that maximum warmth comes from a completely masonry firebox and a masonry firebox will not deteriorate. Also, make sure the fireplace has a damper in working order to control and slow down air flow, thereby improving the efficiency of combustion. Does the fireplace have a glass firescreen? In these energy-saving times, glass firescreens have become very popular because they reduce the amount of warm air escaping through the chimney. If the fireplace presently does not have a glass screen, check to be sure one could be added later on.

7. What can I expect in yearly maintenance costs for a frame home and a brick home?
Yearly maintenance costs on a frame home may run from 1% to 2% of the home's value. It varies depending on the condition of the home at the time of purchase. With brick, however, there is no repainting or replacing, so maintenance costs should be considerably lower.

8. On a frame home, what should I know about exterior paint jobs?
Examine the paint job closely. Is the paint (a) peeling or blistering; (b) are there tiny cracks; and (c) is there chalking or powdering? Peeling or blistering occurs when wood walls are poorly insulated and too much heat escapes through the walls. Ask when the house was last painted. If the answer is less than four years, there is a general problem of trapped moisture. If you find tiny cracks, this indicates insufficient drying time between coats and sanding, priming, and repainting are necessary. Also, place your hand on the wall and see if it picks up powder (chalking). Chalking will protect your walls, but can be hosed off at any time.

9. Is it really necessary to check a house for termites?
By all means. Termites are known to cause costly damage throughout the U.S., but particularly in the southern states. Termite inspections are even required before certain home mortgages can be obtained. Check for termite mud tunnels around the foundations of the house. Also, if you've seen termites swarming out of the ground near the house, it's another definite sign of infestation. A termite inspector will check out a home for you. Make sure he is reliable and ask questions if you don't understand his report.

10. What are the important features to examine in searching for the right house?
Be prepared to examine floors, roof, walls, electrical service, windows and doors, insulation, heating and cooling, gutters, storage, water and sewer and lot drainage. These features play an important role in your decision to buy and, if in satisfactory condition, can save you money in unexpected repair bills later.

Siding vs. Brick

A structural & economic comparison

Good construction is essential for avoiding decay, termites, or other structural deficiencies. Unfortunately, construction practices are sometimes not the best and as a result, houses often fail to outlive their mortgages without costly repairs. Termite damage and control exceed 500 million dollars in the U. S. according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture. And although estimates of losses to wood decay are not available, they are probably as high as those for termites.

Inspection is vital therefore for older frame houses and recommended for new ones before buying. A qualified appraiser should inspect all structural and design aspects of the house, including the foundation walls, floors, ceilings, and roof. He should also inspect the heating and cooling system, electrical system, sewer system, plumbing, and drainage. It is advisable to use a professional inspector and to request a written report of his findings. This report can become a valuable tool in final negotiations. If you can't afford a professional inspection or prefer to do your own, George Hoffman tells you how to inspect a house in Don't Go Buy Appearances, copyright 1975.

In any event, it's important for you as a homebuyer to be aware of construction alternatives. Mother Nature is a relentless force and from the moment of completion of a home, she begins the unyielding process of reclaiming all material man builds with. The fight is endless and man's ingenuity has made her job harder but, we know that in the long run, Mother Nature always wins. Being aware of some of the differences in wood, hardboard, plywood, aluminum siding, and brick as building materials will enable you to make a wise buying decision. In considering the most popular materials used in building, it's important to determine which construction material can best withstand Mother Nature's incessant weathering and structural deterioration.

Wood Siding. One of the products used by our ancestors in settling America was wood. But the pioneers made use of the whole log, providing protection and warmth through mass. As soon as possible though they began to saw those logs into boards and wood siding has gotten progressively thinner over the years. The average wood siding home today uses a plank ⅝" or less thick and usually 4, 6 or 8 inches wide.

Protection for the wood siding home is usually gotten from stain, paint or so-called water repellant coatings. Currently popular in siding homes is the natural wood look, through the use of stains or water repellant coatings. Stains offer varying degrees of weather protection but they are subject to fading and blotching as the pigments are bleached by sunlight, oxygen and normal weathering. When paints are used, the normal preparation is one primer and two finish coats. Repainting should be done every 3 or 4 years to protect the appearance and durability of the siding. Initial costs for wood siding in-place and finished by painting or staining have increased dramatically in the last few years.

Hardboard Siding. Hardboard is made from wood by-products: fibers and binders produced with the texture of regular or beaded lap siding, vertically grooved siding panels and shake shingle siding. Hardboard siding comes in 16-foot lengths, in 9 and 12-inch widths.

The biggest problem with hardboard seems to be moisture. The result generally is swelling, delamination or general disintegration. A vapor barrier must be installed over the interior studs to prevent condensation. While most hardboard comes factory primed, most manufacturers recommend that it be painted as soon as possible. Hardboard siding is easily damaged during installation when nails are driven too far. The primed surface is broken and seldom repaired with putty.

As with wood, hardboard must be kept well painted. If postponed too long, mildew forms and causes new paint to peel.

Plywood Siding. Plywood siding is manufactured in various textures, thicknesses, finishes and veneers, fir being the most common. It is recommended by the manufacturers that this siding be stored carefully and the edges sealed and finished immediately after installation. This protective finish must be maintained throughout the life of this material. Clear preservative or semi-transparent stains must be reapplied every 12-24 months. Opaque stains, every 3-5 years.

Plywood panels are available in 4′ wide sections and are usually 8′ high. Most plywood does not have a factory-applied finish. All plywood siding should be exterior grade. The cost varies with the veneer and type of panel. Plywood siding requires a plumb and true stud wall with no irregularities or bows. Studs must be provided at all side joints and horizontal blocking on all end joints.

Aluminum Siding. Aluminum siding is manufactured in a wide range of quality. The cheapest is extremely thin and may be bent or dented with the slightest impact. The best grades are usually of a thicker sheet and backed with insulation. Some of the claims of aluminum siding manufacturers are that it is "maintenance free, has an attractive, permanent finish, is safe and is fire resistant." Actually, aluminum siding should be washed down once a year. Overhang areas are particularly problem areas because rainwater does not wash down these sections. Once painted, aluminum siding must be repainted every 2-3 years. It also dents easily in hailstorms or when hit accidentally by balls or rocks. Sunlight fades aluminum siding and it also has a tendency to "wave," causing highlights and shadow spots on the wall.

Aluminum siding is an excellent conductor of electricity and should be properly grounded. Insurance rates on aluminum siding are the same as for wood.

Aluminum is not a good insulator. Its very nature provides for rapid passage of heat and cold.

Neither is it a good thermal storage material. The insulated backing on the better grades lowers the "U" value (it's ability to retain heat or cooling) somewhat, the very nature of aluminum provides for rapid escape of heating or cooling.

Brick. Here's where brick comes in. Around for 9,000 years, brick moved us from caves and tents to houses, provided us with a method of expression in arches and vaults, and prevented fire and bombing destruction in cities where buildings were made of brick. An indicator of good taste and status for 9,000 years, brick continues to maintain its reputation for lasting quality.

Storing heat in the winter and keeping out heat in the summer are other advantages of brick you will want to seriously consider. Brick has what's known as a high "thermal time lag." An insulated brick wall takes up to eight hours to transfer unwanted heat to the inside of your house. An insulated wood wall, on the other hand, transfers this heat in about an hour or two. So that in the summer, heat doesn't penetrate a brick wall until the cooler evening hours have arrived.

In winter, the process reverses — by the time a brick wall collects cold air, the sun's rays have begun to warm it and release the cold back to the outside. Thus temperatures inside your brick home remain relatively constant. This principle, then, buys valuable time for your heating and cooling systems. In contrast, the lighter-weight wall with equal insulation transfers temperatures in a shorter amount of time — far from enough time for you to take advantage of the natural temperature changes of the day. So with lightweight walls, your heating and cooling systems end up working harder, and you pay more.

Furthermore, brick comes in yellow, gray, brown, and hundreds of other colors. And, it can be constructed in a combination of walls, bonds, glazes, and joints creating a variety of textures and styles.

When you're looking at homes, remember the advantages of brick and buy quality. It'll be worth it in terms of looks, time, and money later on.

...the Brick-O-Lator in fireplace.

Hottest Innovation in Home Heating!

Burned up about rising fuel costs?

Wish a fireplace would do more than just warm hands? For a lot less than the high costs you now spend for home heating, there's a new fireplace that will do more.
A lot more.

A supplemental heating system

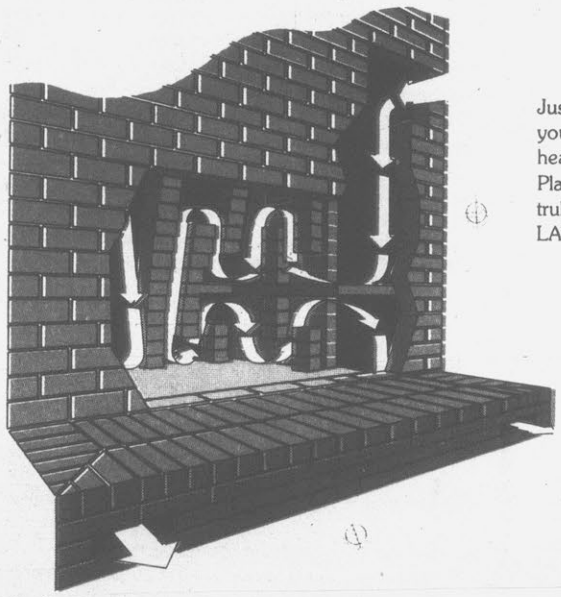

It's not just a fireplace, but a supplemental heating system. Just released on the market, it's durable, practically designed, and economical in every way!

How does the system work? The BRICK-O-LATOR fireplace redistributes air heated from your fireplace through air grilles to all corners of a room, making it possible for a homeowner to turn down the major heating system, or temporarily turn it off. Think of the savings! Especially in the fall or later winter months when it's unnecessary to waste energy by turning your entire heating system on.

Moreover, the enjoyment of a fireplace will be many times greater knowing the fire is functional as well as decorative ... knowing you've reduced your home heating costs considerably.

Scientifically engineered

Soundly engineered and proven, this revolutionary concept in a fireplace heating system operates on a simple, forced-air furnace principle, which makes it possible to take 30°F air and raise its temperature to over 100°F approximately an hour after the fire is ignited.

As illustrated, two intake fans located above the firebox on each side of the fireplace draw in room air, forcing it into heat-exchange chambers located behind the firebox walls.

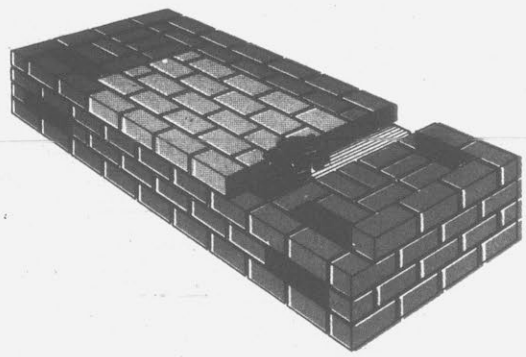

These fans are thermostatically controlled so you just choose a particular temperature setting and the fans automatically start each time the temperature drops. Also, notice how the heat chambers are solidly incorporated in the brick fireplace construction. This is extremely important because the BRICK-O-LATOR design is subtlely taking advantage of utilizing the heat which is already retained in the firebrick. Masonry fireplaces are known to radiate heat back into the fire much more efficiently than metal fireboxes. It's practically designed in brick and it's permanent.

Once inside the heat-exchange chambers, the air passes a series of carefully constructed brick baffles. These quality brick baffles slow down the room air pulled in by the fans and heat it.

This heated air moves from the upper chamber to the lower chamber through another series of baffles. Then the heated air is forced into the room through ducts located on the front or the sides of the hearth near the floor. This way the warm air heats the coldest part of the room first — and all you have to do is sit back and enjoy the sensation of warm air circulating all around the room. It is also possible to introduce the warm air from the BRICK-O-LATOR into an additional insulated duct to another room close by.

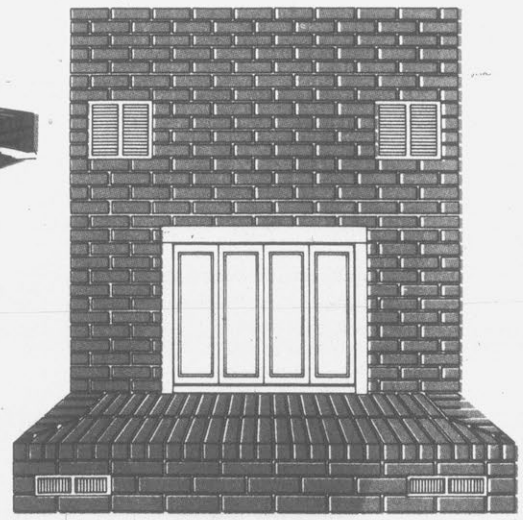

Outside air for combustion and draft

For maximum energy conservation with the BRICK-O-LATOR fireplace, outside air is brought into the firebox through the adjustable vent shown below. This fresh air supply keeps the fireplace from taking heated air from the room for combustion and draft and it practically eliminates the possibility of a smoking fireplace.

Just think ... for years to come you'll sit snugly before your BRICK-O-LATOR fireplace as your fall and winter heating bills reduce to ashes.

Plan ahead now to intensify your home heating with a truly functional, attractive, and cost effective BRICK-O-LATOR fireplace.

Get details and blueprints of the BRICK-O-LATOR fireplace from your local brick company, building supply dealer, or contact the Brick Association of North Carolina.

Learn the Ancient Art of Bricklaying

Now you too can learn to lay brick and build your own brick project with skill and pride. Special courses in Bricklaying are being offered periodically by technical institutes and community colleges for do-it-yourself study. In these classes the homeowner is taught the basic fundamentals of bricklaying, use of tools of the trade and is given the opportunity to learn by "doing" with bricks and mortar.

As a result, hundreds of homeowners are improving the appearance and value of their homes with such brick projects as patios, walkways, walls and outdoor cookers. Most of these courses are available in the evening. Why don't you call your local technical institute or community college? A new program will probably be starting soon.

The Brick Association of North Carolina has, for over a quarter century, worked cooperatively with the Trade and Industrial Education Division of the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction to train young people in the art of bricklaying. As a result of these efforts, North Carolina today has the biggest (and best) High School Bricklaying Program in the Nation. Currently, there are approximately 180 programs with nearly 6,000 students enrolled.

The graduates of these programs are well schooled in the fundamentals of the trade and most have had considerable on-the-job experience. They continue their education as apprentices with a masonry contractor.

This program of trade training, together with the Nation's largest brick production, enables tar heels to use more brick per capita than any place in the United States and to build better with brick in North Carolina — "The Brick Capital of the Nation."

Brick Paving

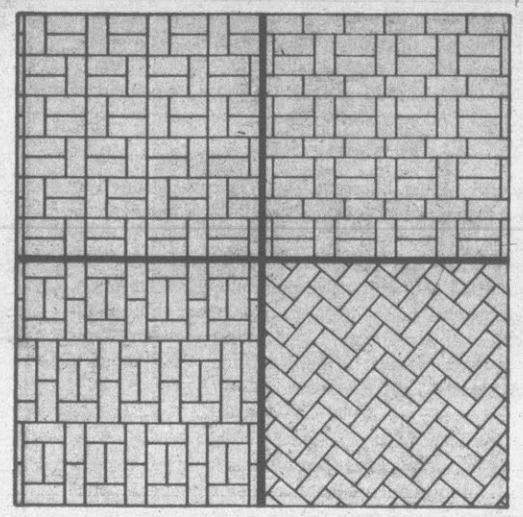

Paving outdoors with brick offers many advantages. Brick is not affected by salt in winter so your pavement will always be in good condition. Also, brick makes utility and other underground repairs easy. Just pick out bricks, stack, make repairs, and then return them to their original place.

Moreover, brick will give you greater design flexibility for sidewalks and curbing. Add to the beauty and pleasure of your home with a brick terrace or walk.

Brick Flooring

In addition to enhancing a home's beauty with a natural, earthy decorative look, brick floors are practical. They last longer, remain in excellent condition, and require no maintenance when properly coated.

"Mortarless" flooring is a type of flooring wherein no mortar is used in the design, and joints normally found between bricks are reduced to fine thin lines. It provides a uniform and continuous expression, softly blending with room furnishings and emphasizing other architectural qualities. Color and brick texture variations also make possible many creative bond patterns.

Sealing of mortarless brick flooring is extremely important. The sealing material locks, or seals sand in the joints and also provides an impervious finish to the entire floor. Often two or more coats are required, depending on the brick's absorption factor.

"Mortared" flooring on the other hand, is placed with conventional mortar joints separating individual flooring units. The mortar joints may be designed to blend or to present a contrast. Many patterns may be created with the careful use of brick and mortar, brick color, texture and size, jointing and surface applied finishes.

Since water is used in the setting bed and mortar, it may take several weeks after completion for the floor to dry and hence be ready for coating. Before coating occurs, however, several coating manufacturers suggest that concrete and masonry floors be first cleaned with a mild "acid wash" to remove laitance and to neutralize the normal alkalinity of cement mortars.

Some Statistics on Brick

Nine billion bricks are produced annually according to the United States Bureau of Commerce.

65% of all the brick in the world goes into housing while 35% goes into commercial, industrial, and institutional constructions.

With computerized automated manufacturing facilities, brick companies can produce up to one million bricks per day.

The first brick building in America was the Dutch West India Company building on Manhatten Island, built in 1663.

Hot Flash

London, 1666

Ignoring King James I's law which stated that all new homes be built with brick because of the proximity of timber homes and the increasing risk of fire, Londoners succumbed to the devastating rage of the Great London Fire in 1666. A year after the Great Plague, the fire flared for four days, miraculously taking only a dozen lives, but destroying 13,200 homes, 95 Parish Churches and chapels, and thousands of manuscripts.

After many intense investigations for the cause of the Great Fire, Papist, Quaker, Huguenot, and witch plots were set aside. At last it was established that the First Cause of the fire was God Almighty. Several second causes for accomplishing His Will were also evident, these being the carelessness of baker Farriner of Pudding Lane, "the solitariness and darkness of the night, the disposition of old and ruinuous buildings, the narrowness of the streets, the abundance of combustible and bituminous matter, the foregoing summer extraordinarily hot and dry, a violent easterly wind, and the want of engines and water."

Taking advantage of the wonderful opportunity to reconstruct the Great City of London, many famous London architects quickly submitted plans for building a new and Ideal City to make London "one of the most pleasant and agreeable places in the world." All grand attempts at Utopia building were soon abandoned, however, when the urgent need for reconstruction came to the fore. Victims needed housing right away and London needed to resume meeting its worldwide commercial and manufacturing obligations at once.

Charles II thereby posthaste issued a Royal Proclamation "to banish forever the old City of plaster and timber." The Proclamation read as follows: "The woeful experience in this late heavy visitation hath sufficiently convinced all men of the pernicious consequences which have attended the building with timber, and even with stone itself, and the notable benefit of brick, which in so many places hath resisted and even extinguished the Fire: and we do hereby declare our express will and pleasure, that no man whatsoever shall presume to erect any house or building, great or small, but of brick and stone . . . ."

Soon the building of the city of brick was underway. New sources of brick materials were discovered and housing was standardized to simplify design, save on supplies, and speed up the rebuilding process. Quickly and efficiently, the new "red-brick and stone Renaissance City" emerged from the once desolate wastes of London.

Conversations in space.

FOR ROBERT E. EDELSON, Project Manager, The Search for Extraterrestrial Intelligence, Jet Propulsion Laboratory

If you are able to detect a signal sent from intelligent life on another planet, how do you intend to conduct communication between us? — Mrs. Dee Davis, Baytown, Texas

● The distances between the stars are very great. A signal sent to even the star nearest to our sun would be in transit for over four years. The nearest intelligent beings are probably so far away that hundreds of years would be consumed in the signals' travel time. As Carl Sagan has said, this is hardly a "snappy conversation." Thus, even if we replied immediately, we would be on the receiving-end-only for a very long time. And it would be best for us to first seek to understand what the other party is telling us so that a considered decision could be made as to whether we should reply, and how.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

● Princess Stephanie, 13, couldn't care less about being out of the limelight. In fact, she enjoys it. She's a tomboy, in love with blue jeans, not silks and satins. Her favorite spot in the exclusive convent school she attends in Paris is the playground — where she works out at football (taught to her by brother Albert). She prefers sports to academics, and her awards and honors for tennis, riding, swimming seem to outnumber those obtained in the classroom. Pretty soon a decision will be made as to whether Stephanie completes her education in England or France. She is described by teachers and friends as "easy to teach" and "popular."

Frank Edwards/Fotos Int'l

Princess Stephanie, tomboy.

FOR PAM DAWBER, star of ABC-TV's Mork & Mindy

I hear you're giving your producers heart attacks because you've taken up a dangerous sport. What is it? — B.P., Fort Collins, Colo.

● Unless you consider roller-skating "dangerous," you've got it all wrong. Robin Williams (Mork) whetted my appetite, and that led me to find out that lots of my friends are into roller-skating. So I took it up, too, and keep it up every week at the beach. My producers aren't tearing their hair out because I'm very careful and don't take any chances.

FOR DICK VAN PATTEN, star of ABC-TV's Eight is Enough

Are you as strict a parent in real life as you are on the show? — Mrs. L. Mills, Hobart, Ind.

● My sons are not paragons of virtue, but, even so, they're good boys, and I never had to use any strong-arm stuff with them. They're now grown (Vincent, 21; Jimmy, 22; Nels, 23), but when they were young we shared the same interests so we could spend time together. Any time we had differences, we sat down and discussed them quietly.

FOR PETE MARAVICH, New Orleans Jazz

● Athletes who are known for their defense passing and rebounding are generally winners, and play on winning teams, so, they get recognition. For example, Paul Silas (now with the Seattle Supersonics and before that, Boston Celtics) is a defensive specialist and a rebounder, and most of the teams he plays on are winners.

FOR MELISSA GILBERT, costar of NBC-TV's Little House on the Prairie

Is it true that your show-business family pushed you into show business against your will? — T.R., Galveston, Texas

● Had they tried to stop me, I think I would have pushed them out of the way in order to do what I wanted to do! My folks did nothing to persuade or dissuade me. I'm doing this because I love it. If I wanted to, I could quit all this right now and just go back to normal, but I really do love it.

FOR JOHN BORNEMAN, Condor naturalist, National Audubon Society

What bird is the most valuable to man — and the least? — S.P., Casper, Wyo.

● That's a hard one to answer. All birds are valuable to man as members of the community of living things that help maintain a biological "balance." Some birds, however, like the red winged blackbird, feed on crop-destroying insects and larva in the summer months but become "bad guys" when they shift their diet to seed crops.

FOR JOHN NEWLAND, host of TV's The Next Step Beyond

Have you or your wife ever experienced a moving psychic experience? — M.F. Green Bay, Wis.

● Unfortunately, no. I don't have any psychic abilities. I'm just a believer. I guess when guys stepped on the moon it made everything a bit more plausible. We get a lot of unsolicited anecdotes to investigate and verify. My wife, Areta, thinks we're full of baloney. She's great in business, but in the area of the psychic she's scared to death.

PRO AND CON

Are Autopsies Still A Vital Diagnostic Tool?

PRO Dr. John Prutting, Internist, President of the Advancement of Medical Knowledge

The autopsy is vital for the evaluation of new surgical techniques; to tell the value of new, potent, often hazardous drugs; for the discovery of new diseases (such as Legionnaire's) and in legal cases to eliminate speculation in the courtroom. Additionally, the autopsy is needed to evaluate costly diagnostic tests and procedures. Autopsy studies throughout the world compared with pre-death clinical diagnoses show a 30-50 percent lack of correlation! With an increase in the use of autopsy, physicians gain more insight into the incidence of disease — the key to diagnostic medicine. Ultimately the length of hospital stay and the use of expensive diagnostic equipment will be lessened.

CON Dr. Lester S. King, retired pathologist, author, The Philosophy of Medicine

Originally the autopsy was the chief research tool in medicine and the means for establishing medical diagnoses. In the past 30 years scientific advances, especially in biochemistry, have provided new, subtle methods for confirming diagnoses, while publishable research now depends on the use of sophisticated apparatus. Knowledge derived from the autopsy suffers from diminishing returns as new methods offer quicker rewards to ambitious pathologists. The autopsy has become routine, a chore for junior personnel, no longer attractive to leaders in the field who gain their reputation (and promotions) through research that uses other techniques. Nobody really wants autopsies at present.

DON'T BE AFRAID OF CLONES, THEY MAY SAVE YOUR LIFE

By Isaac Asimov

If an adult had a bad heart or pancreas, or had lost a limb, some of his skin cells might be cloned to grow a replacement.

In the last year or so, the matter of cloning has been much in the news and has caused considerable controversy.

Cloning is not new, however. It is as old as life, and man has known about it as long as he has been cultivating plants. A clone is an organism that has been produced from another organism without the intervention of sex.

A bacterium can divide over and over to produce any number of additional bacteria. All those bacteria are clones of the first. A twig of a tree can be planted and may develop roots and branches and become a new tree. It is a clone. (In fact, the word "clone" is Greek for "twig.") A starfish can be torn into several pieces, and those may be thrown back into the water. Each piece will then grow into a complete starfish and all will be clones of the original.

The more complex animals do not form clones. They reproduce sexually. Females produce egg cells and males produce sperm cells, each of these containing a half-set of chromosomes. A sperm and egg combine to form a fertilized egg cell that contains a whole set of chromosomes, half from the female and half from the male. The fertilized egg cell then divides and redivides and eventually forms a new organism. Such a new organism, born of sexual combination, has two parents and is not a clone.

Sometimes, though, a fertilized egg divides in two, and the two new cells come apart. Each of the separated cells then goes on to divide and redivide and form a whole organism. This can happen in the case of human beings, too, and identical twins result — same sex, same appearance, same chromosomes. Each of the identical twins is the clone of the other.

As a fertilized egg divides and redivides, individual cells lose the ability of giving rise to a complete organism if separated. Each cell that forms from a fertilized egg retains copies of the original chromosomes, but those begin to be modified by outside influences. Some parts of the chromosomes are blocked, others are stimulated. In the end we have skin cells, liver cells, heart cells, kidney cells, lung cells and so on, all with the same chromosomes, but each having them differently specialized. All are so specialized they can't divide to form a new individual. Some are so specialized they can't divide at all.

In each body cell, the chromosomes are contained in a small portion called the nucleus, which is separated from the rest of the cell by a membrane. Suppose you separate this nucleus from the body cell and transfer it to an egg cell whose own nucleus has been removed. Under the influence of the material in the egg cell, the genes in the nucleus of the body cell are unblocked. Now the egg cell can divide and redivide to form an organism — one in which the chromosomes come from the person (male or female) who donated the cell nucleus. We have a clone of the donor. with the identical chromosomes, sex, appearance.

Can it be done?

It has been done in some animals. In the early 1960's, clones were produced from the cells of tadpoles, and in 1975 from skin cells of an adult frog.

Can it be done with animals closer to the human being than a frog is? With mammals, such as rats or rabbits? Can it be done with human beings?

So far it hasn't been done. Mammals have egg cells that are considerably smaller than frog eggs and that are more delicate and easily damaged. What's more, a frog egg can be put back in the water and allowed to develop there, but a human egg must be inserted into a female and allowed to develop in her womb.

In March 1978, David Rorvik published a book, In His Image, which purports to tell the story of the cloning of a man, but people in the field simply do not take it seriously. The state of the art, they all agree, is not up to such a feat, and they are certain the book is a hoax,

Yet biologists are sure that some day they will be able to clone mammals, and even human beings. In that case, there are questions we might ask. Is cloning good or evil, is it right or wrong, is it useful or is it dangerous?

In coming to a decision we have to know what cloning can and can't do. Some people have the idea that clones offer a gateway to personal immortality, for instance, and want it for that reason.

Not so! A clone is not you. A clone would only be an identical twin brother or sister, born late in your life, and it would have his or her own distinct personality and identity. Suppose there are identical twin brothers (or sisters) born in the usual way. If one of them dies, the dead one does not live on in the twin even though both have the same chromosomes. The dead one is dead — and so it will be if you are cloned.

Some people think that cloning is dangerous because it will enable aggressive governments to produce hordes of docile people of subnormal intelligence to serve as laborers or soldiers. This is a useless fear. No nation ever found it difficult to collect peasants or soldiers even without cloning, and it is far cheaper to produce them normally than by cloning.

Remember that a clone is not only hard to produce but that it takes just as long to produce a clone as an ordinary human being. A clone must start as an egg, be nurtured for nine months in some woman's body and then take the usual 18 years to be old enough to vote or fight.

Well, then, how about using clones to reproduce genius? We can alway use additional Einsteins, Picassos, Beethovens or Tolstoys. If such great people have children in the ordinary way, their chromosomes are mixed with those of their mates.

Isaac Asimov is associate professor of biochemistry at the Boston University School of Medicine and is the author of 200 books.

Few things in life are as dependable as genuine Bell phones.

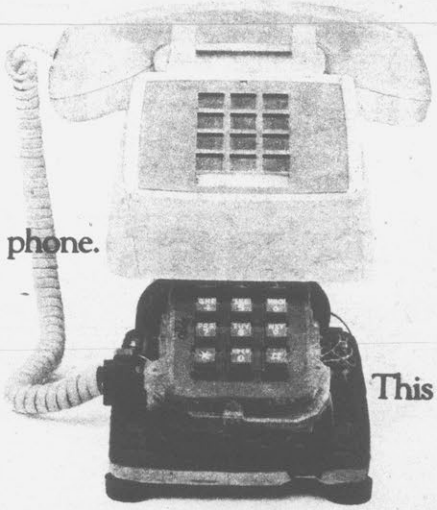

In fact, people have been taking them for granted for over 100 years.

Bell telephones come in all kinds of colors, shapes and sizes. And you can choose some very convenient custom calling services, too.

Whether the phone you choose is fun or functional on the outside, you'll get genuine Bell quality on the inside.

CLONING CLONING CLONING CLONING

and the combination may not represent quite the genius of the one parent. If we clone genius, on the other hand, we have new individuals with the precise chromosomes of that genius.

Will we then have 50 geniuses who can produce the great works of art, literature or science of the original? Very likely not, since human beings are not the product of their chromosomes alone. In cloning, a nucleus must be put into an egg cell and then into a womb, and the matter in the egg cell and the nature of the womb will have its influence.

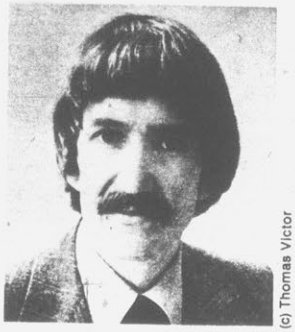

Then, too, the clones are born anywhere between 30 and 50 years after the person who is being cloned was born. Everything has changed in the interval. The clone will not be presented with the same opportunities and the same obstacles that the original was or be part of the same society. Each will go its own way, and not a single one may duplicate the genius of the original.

In that case, of what value is cloning?

Well, biologists do many experiments on mice, rats, guineapigs, monkeys and other animals in order to gain information that might be applicable to human beings. The experiments give us important information on nutrition, on medicine, on behavior.

One of the possible confusions about such experiments is that different animals of the same species have somewhat different chromosomes and may respond differently because of that. If different rats, for instance, are subjected to different conditions and react differently, is the difference in reaction caused by the difference in conditions or by differences in the chromosomes? We can't be sure.

If, however, we were to clone a rat over and over, we might have 50 rats with identical chromosomes, and if we experiment with them, we know that the difference in reaction would have to be caused by the difference in the conditions.

(c) Thomas Victor

Again, suppose we develop methods for removing or altering a particular piece of a chromosome and want to compare two rats so as to see what that one little change will do. If the rats have different chromosomes to begin with, introducing one little change might not yield clear-cut results. If we make use of clones in which all the rats have identical chromosomes and then introduce a small change in one rat, a different small change in another rat and so on, our knowledge of just how chromosomes do their job will surely leap ahead rapidly.

Then, too, there are many species in the world that are now endangered; whose numbers have grown so low we are not sure they will survive much longer. Cloning may be a solution — a way of producing more of them using, if necessary, females of an allied, more numerous species as host-mothers.

It has even been suggested that when a frozen mammoth is discovered in the icy soil of Siberia, some cells might still be alive enough to be cloned. An elephant egg cell might be used to house the mammoth nucleus, and an elephant might nurture the clone in her womb so that, after two years, the elephant might give birth to the first living mammoth the world will have seen in at least ten-thousand years.

Human clones might be treated in the same way. It might be useful to experiment with human clones in order to gain theoretical knowledge concerning nutrition, medicine and psychology. Experiments with human clones, however, involve such serious ethical questions that it is doubtful whether they can be carried through — or should be carried through.

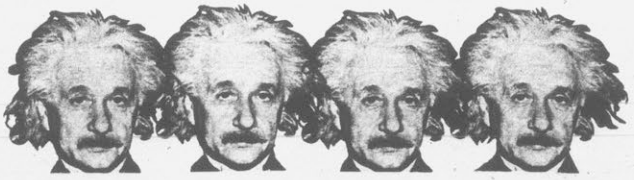

There is one application of human clones that may be hard to resist, however.

By working with clones of the lower animals, we might learn how to develop mammalian embryos in laboratory equipment without the use of a woman's womb. We might learn how it is that an embryo's cells develop and how they specialized into different organs. We might learn how to treat embryos in such a way as to alter the normal development and cause them to give rise to a heart, in particular, with everything else vestigial; or lung; or a kidney; or a leg. Perhaps if the developing embryo is forced in that direction alone, a full-sized adult organ might be developed in, let us say, a year.

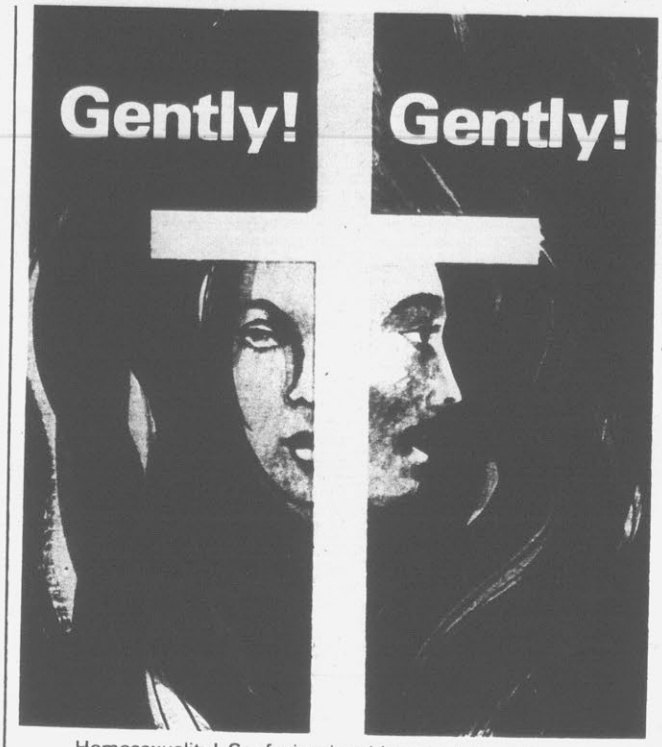

If, then, the time were to come when an adult found he had a limping heart or fading pancreas or a leg that had been lost in an accident, some of his skin cells might be cloned to grow a replacement.

An ordinary organ transplant from an ordinary donor is often rejected by the very body that can't live without it because the transplant has a chromosomal makeup different from that of the body. An organ replacement built up out of the body's own cells would have the same chromosomal makeup as the body, and the body would not reject what is, after all, its own.

A clone may not make you immortal, but it could, in this way, at least extend your life by giving you the equivalent of a spare heart or kidney or whatever. FW

Homosexuality! Confusion is widespread about its nature, origin, dynamics and morality. Some have convinced themselves that the "gay" life is the good life. But a much larger group of homosexuals—men and women—does not find this to be true. They are unhappy, fearful, guilt-ridden, isolated. At times, they feel abandoned even by God.

For these and for others who would like to understand and help them, we have asked an expert to write a pamphlet on the nature of homosexuality and on some practical help that can be offered them in their quest for spiritual and mental peace. There is no self-righteous preaching here. Only an effort to reach out—gently, gently—in a Christlike way to try to understand and help.

Homosexuals, parents, concerned friends—all can profit by the information and advice. Write today for your free copy of "Pastoral Care and the Homosexual." No one will call on you.

HOW TO EXERCISE THE PAINLESS WAY

By Dan Carlinsky

If you're like most Americans, you don't use your body very much. From electric toothbrushes to automatic garage-door openers, taking the easy route has become "the smart way," a sign of affluence, a way of life. And it's killing us.

In surveys, nearly half of all adult Americans admit to doing no exercise, period. Of those who say they do exercise, many don't work out nearly enough and many others. . .well, let's say they exaggerate a little.

So despite the warnings of doctors and of the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports, the majority of us are simply letting ourselves go to pot.

But if you're not sports-oriented or turned on by calisthenics, you probably find exercise about as appealing as emptying the garbage. You know it's good for you to use your muscles and make your blood run a little faster, but getting out of the chair and actually doing something is another story.

Now, our grandparents didn't have to take a "Y" course in exercising or jog around the block before breakfast. They "exercised" all day long.

They brushed their teeth with arm power, not electric power. They opened the barn door with a couple of healthy tugs, not with a push of a button. They did things the hard way. And a lot more of them went through old age feeling better than a lot of us in our middle years.

If you walk briskly for just 20 blocks a day you can lose several pounds within a year.

Today, even if you hate exercising, you can give your body at least some of the taxing it needs by doing some things the hard way.

Here are some suggestions:

- Switch, wherever possible, from the car to a bike, an adult tricycle or your feet. If you must drive or take the bus to work or go shopping, don't motor all the way. Park or get off the bus several blocks early and walk. If you walk briskly for just 20 blocks a day you can lose several pounds over the course of a year, and you'll be helping your heart build up a reserve for times of real stress.
- Use the stairs. Take the elevator or escalator a few flights, hoof the rest. Even walking down the stairs is good exercise because you're working to counter gravity. (One study shows that people in two-story homes live longer than those in ranch houses or simplex apartments; daily stair-climbing helps their hearts.)
- Get rid of your TV's remote-control unit. Hide it if necessary.
- Put away the electric mixer. Beat, blend and chop the way Grandma did — by hand.
- Retire that garage full of labor savers: power mower, snow blower, electric hedge trimmers. Rehabilitate your old-fashioned models: they save fuel because the only energy they use is yours.
- You don't have to go down to the river to wash clothes, but if you have a yard, forgo the dryer and hang your clothes on a line in the fresh air. You'll stretch and bend, and your clothes will smell fresher.
- Around the house, do routine things with gusto. High-step from room to room, like a drum majorette. Balance on alternate legs while you're putting on socks and tying shoelaces. Don't just stoop to pick up after the kids: do a couple of deep-knee bends or even set your feet apart and swing your arms down the way you once did in gym class, with a "1-2-3-4!"
- Learn to use those 30-second blank spots that occur in everybody's day: waiting for the toast to pop, sitting through a red light or a TV commercial, waiting for your phone call to go through. Suck in your stomach hard for six seconds at a time, sit with your feet straight out, roll your head in slow circles or do a few exaggerated shoulder shrugs. Anything is better than just slouching there.

Use your imagination to think up other ways to put your body to use. Assuming, of course, that you've checked out as being in good health, the general rule is: "Don't lie when you can sit, don't sit when you can stand, don't stand when you can walk, don't walk when you can run." Applied conscientiously — but within reason — the rule is a good one.

One man, who holds a sedentary office job, says at first it wasn't easy to readjust his lifestyle but he's glad he did. "Now, if I have a business appointment," he says, "I leave 15 minutes early and walk instead of grabbing a cab. I use a manual mower on my lawn. I've even disconnected my extension phones so that I have to run upstairs to the bedroom every time the phone rings. I haven't given up all the modern comforts, of course, but I've gone back to the basics in a lot of areas, and I really feel healthier for it."

A busy career woman has a couple of inventive approaches. In the office, she keeps her phone on a table across from her desk: she must get up to answer calls and always conducts conversations standing, while she does stretching exercises. At home, she purposely stores frequently used kitchen items on high shelves, so she has to stretch to retrieve them. "It's amazing," she says, "how inventive you sometimes have to be to overcome the easy life."

Doing things the hard way doesn't have to be tough on you. In fact, it can be exhilarating in a way that the easy way never can be. And if you make physical activity part of your way of life you won't ever be moved to say, as Jimmy Durante once did to fitness proponent Jack La Lanne, "If I'd known I was gonna live this long, I woulda taken better care of myself!" PEOPLE QUIZ/By John E. Gibson

WHAT MAKES A GOOD PARENT?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. The more time you spend with your children, the greater the assurance that they'll grow up to be happy and emotionally well adjusted.

2. Children who set fires tend to have bad relationships with their fathers.

3. Women are happier being mothers than husbands are being fathers.

4. Children can and do drive their parents crazy — but most parents don't realize why.

ANSWERS

1. False. You can spend all the time in the world with your child and still not have it pay off in terms of the child's well-being and a happily adjusted personality. What counts is how well you are able to relate to the child, how well you can empathize, and how close a relationship you establish. A new study completed by a team of University of Michigan researchers provides further evidence that "it's not the amount, but the quality of time spent with the parent that counts most in the child's social development."

2. True. Boston University's School of Education research confirmed this in studies that revealed a definite trend among fire-setting children toward "increased negative paternal perceptions," and the tendency to regard their fathers as hostile figures they had difficulty relating to.

3. True. Results of studies at St. George's Hospital Medical School (London) showed that "contentment and motherhood were more strongly associated in the minds of wives than contentment and fatherhood in the minds of husbands." Men, it was found, were likely to associate fatherhood with masculinity, whereas femininity and motherhood were conceptually independent. It is noted that the findings support the traditional differences between male and female viewpoints re parenthood.

4. True. A team of behavioral scientists at the Institute of Group Psychotherapy (Los Angeles) made a study of how and why children sometimes "drive their parents crazy." Their findings: infants and young children automatically utilize 'crazy-making' behavior (tactics designed to throw the parent off balance) in an attempt to limit the overwhelming power of the adults on whom they depend for everything. The capacity to drive parents crazy is used by youngsters to equalize power, to simply have fun, to get attention and to punish parents. "The effectiveness of limiting the impact power of parents by crazy-making tactics is picked up early in infancy and perfected throughout life as a means of survival." FW

REMOVE HAIR FOREVER

You can now remove undesirable hair PERMANENTLY in the privacy of your own home. DECORATING IDEAS FROM THE STARS

How to arrange what you have and how to use space – large or small

By Rosalyn Abrevaya and Peer Oppenheimer

Celebrities are just as eager to create an environment that spells "home" as the rest of us. Bonnie Franklin, of the popular TV series One Day at a Time, Lorne Greene of TV's Battlestar Galactica and the Pat Boones share some of the dilemma and delight involved in turning their houses into homes.

Bonnie Franklin knew that, when she recently moved into her new house nestled in the hills of Encino, she needed a place where she could relax after a hectic day ("I love to curl up in front of a good fire!") yet still enjoy the garden she couldn't have in New York. She also needed a place where she could look after her accounts, memorize scripts, record, play back tapes and keep her files.

Problem: When Bonnie first saw the house, she realized the smallest room had possibilities: it had a wall of windows that faced the garden and the fireplace she wanted. But storage space was nil.

Solution: Brighten the room with white walls. Bring in the freshness of outside greenery with a pale-green shag carpet and a scattering of living plants. Select rattan furniture for an airy, outdoorsy feeling. A large glass top turns a rattan table into a working desk. Placing it in front of the windows provides light and the garden view Bonnie wanted, yet allows her to work snugly in front of the fireplace in cooler months. A closet is split to become three separate storage units, each with its own door. The bottom one serves to store wood for the fire.

Bonnie happily combines chrome and leather with brick and New England charm, blends memorabilia on the walls and shelves with selected antiques she hunts for at auctions — such as the rocking horse in the corner. With things she likes about her, the room has become a statement of her own personality and her own very private world.

When Lorne Greene and his wife Nancy looked for a house 14 years ago, Nancy wanted one that had pearllike Capiz shell light fixtures. Both insisted on plenty of room to entertain friends. They found such a place in Manderville Canyon, surrounded by its own small woods.

Problem: As is the case for most people, their find wasn't perfect. It had two major drawbacks: there was no dining room, and the living room was a cavernous space 40 feet long and 16 feet high with an aloofness contrary to the quiet comfort they sought.

Solution: Darken the blond wood of the walls to enclose the room with friendliness. It took 16 coats of stain before Nancy was satisfied with the rich earth tone. Then, to create a relaxing atmosphere, Nancy carried the warmth of mellow autumn colors throughout the whole room. Oversized lamps and upholstered furniture fill the space comfortably with room to spare for the organ and grand piano that Lorne loves to listen to. Daughter Gillian, 11, is fast becoming an accomplished pianist. Completing the conversation area was most difficult until Lorne and Nancy spotted an irregular slab of beautiful Amalfi marble at a Los Angeles marble works. Nancy took one look and said, "That's perfect for a coffee table!"

Design Line Phones by The Bell System

It sits on its specially made, irregular base — creating not only a usable center for guests to gather around, but a focal point of interest with imbedded ancient sea life exposed in its polished surface.

Where to dine was solved by turning one end of the huge room into a dining room, separated physically by folding screens and mentally by the library table behind the couch and the high-backed, carved dining chairs that were brought back from The Ponderosa, Lorne's Arizona ranch house named for his home in his previous TV hit, Bonanza.

Ironically, the very thing that initially triggered the Greenes' purchase of the house the Capiz shell fixtures — had to go. Lorne said, "Even if you like something, if it doesn't fit into the overall feeling you want and is disruptive, eliminate it!"

Seventeen years ago when Shirley and Pat Boone bought their Beverly Hills house, they needed one room which could withstand the assault of their four lively daughters and could be adapted to their family's changing needs.

Problem: The den was too small. What they needed was an informal place large enough for the youngsters to play in, space for the family's pool table, a dining table big enough for family and friends, plus a place to sit and talk, listen to music or watch TV.

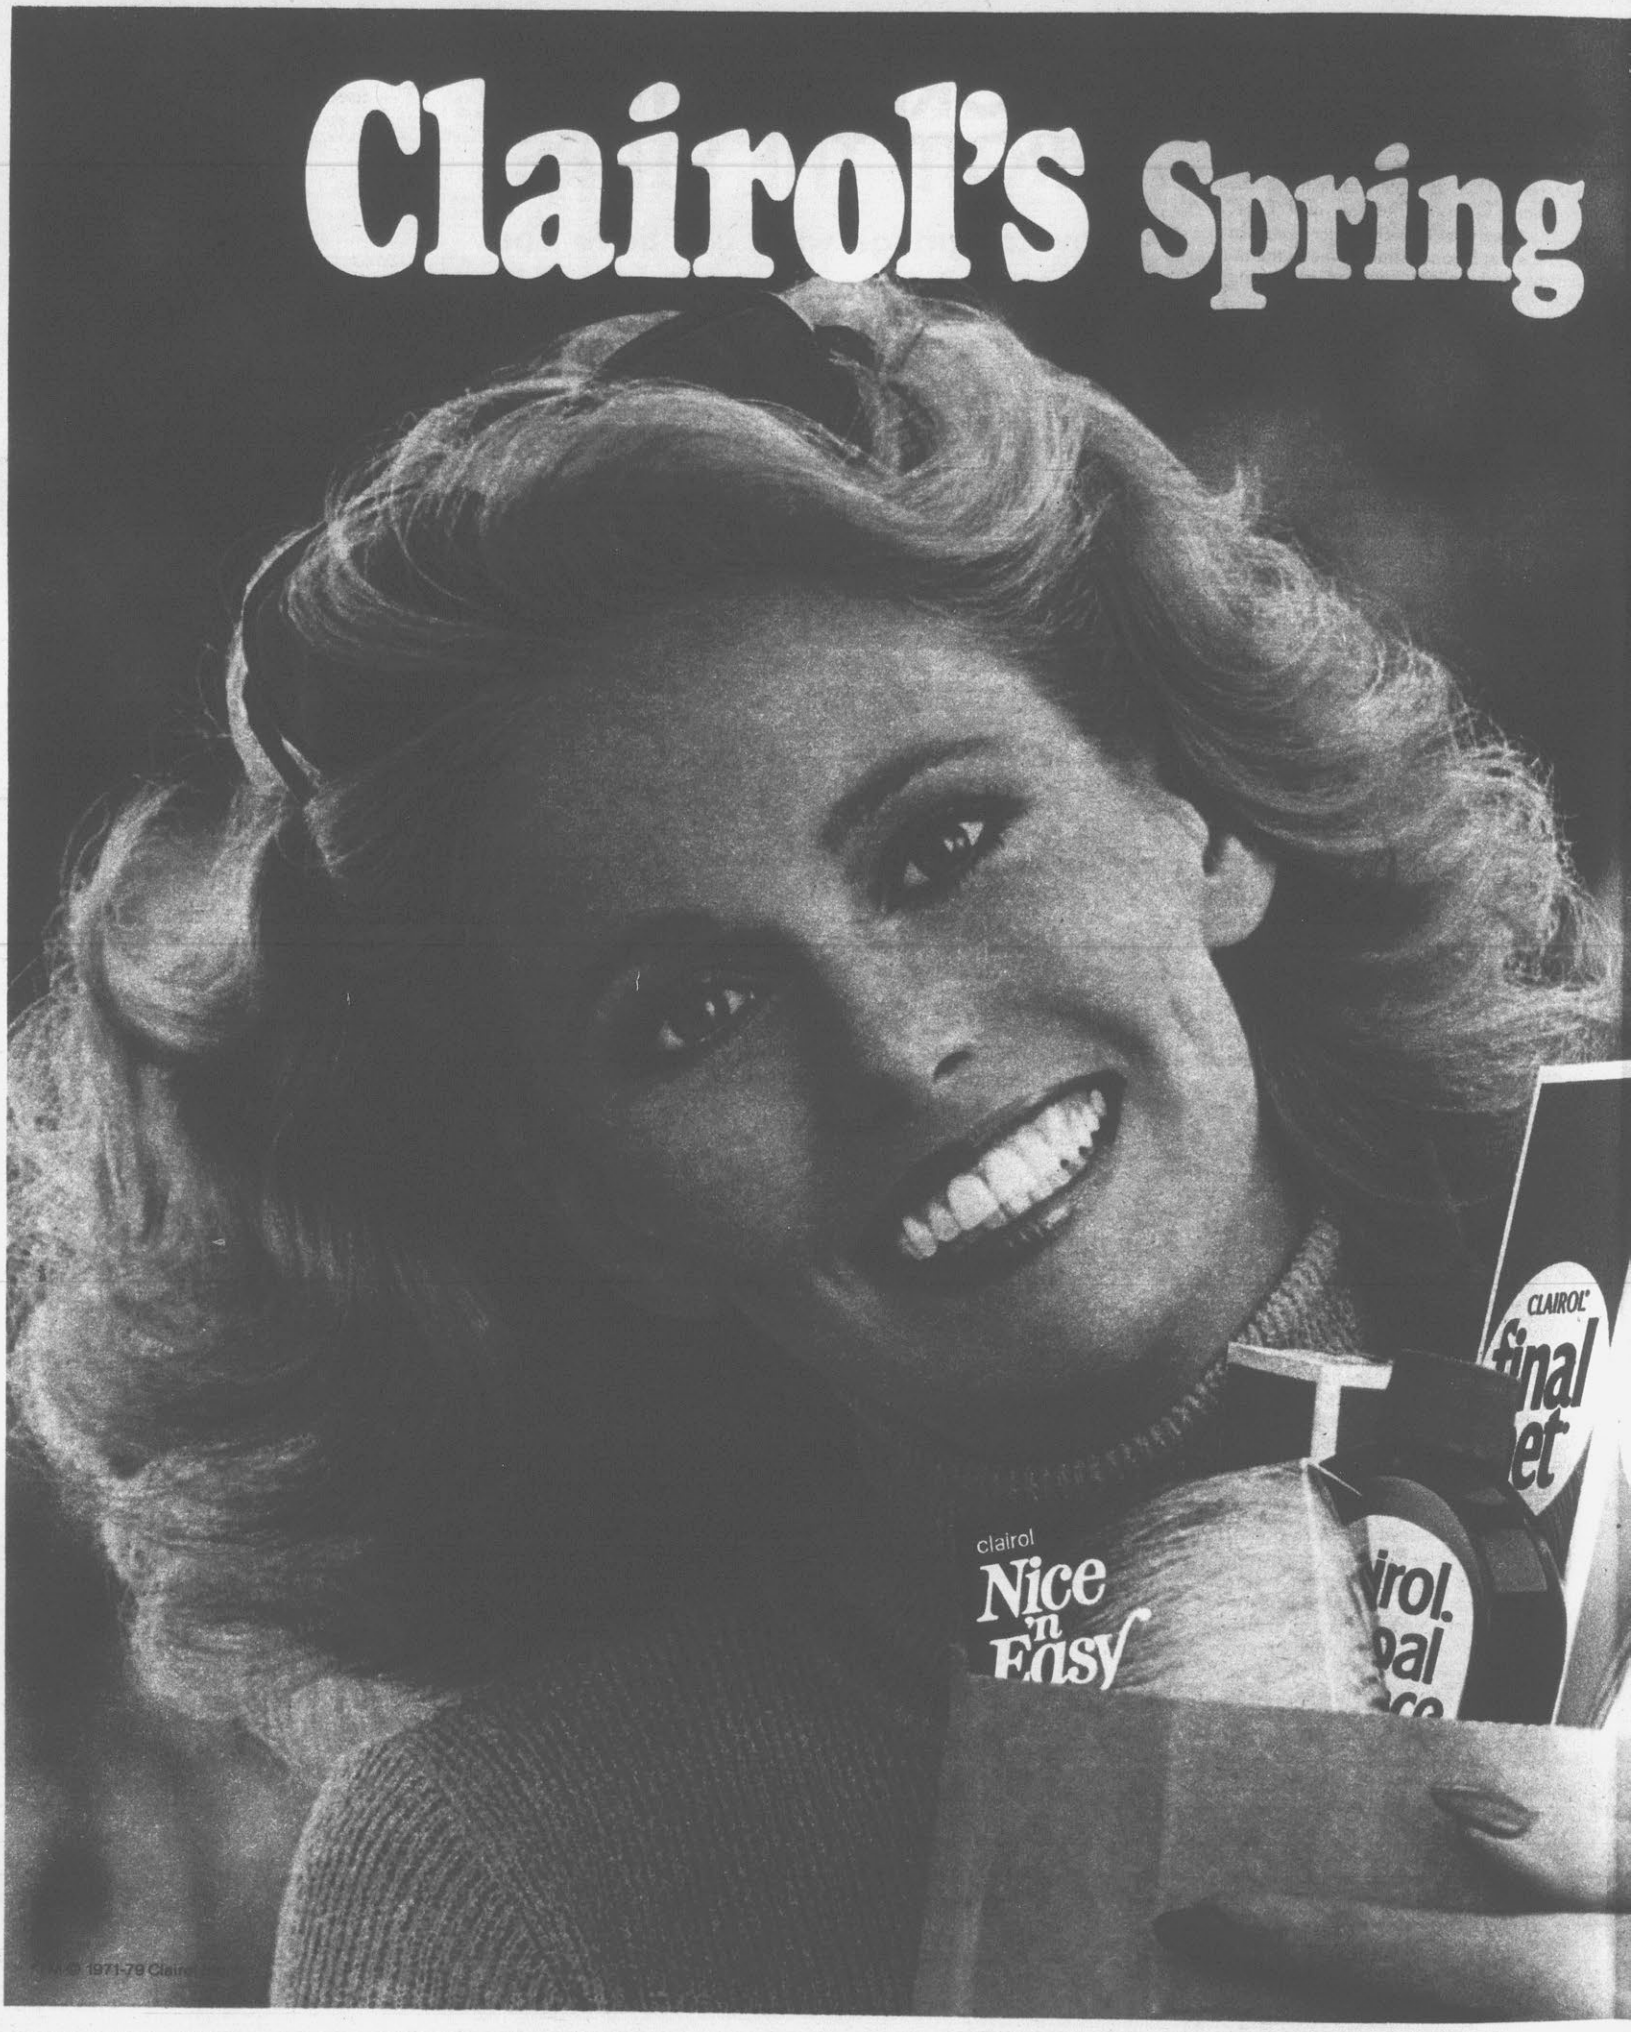

Solution: The Boones converted their back porch. The roof was extended in a half-moon shape, and the area enclosed with windows so that the room still seemed part of the yard and the pool. Window seats provided plenty of places to sit with lots of storage space beneath them.

With an eye to the day when their daughters would marry (Cherry and Lindy have) and there would be grandchildren (Lindy has two youngsters), a dining table was built large enough to accommodate 12 captain's chairs. Shirley remembered how her mother had to cut a table in two in order to get it into a certain room, so she had her table made in four pie-shaped wedges that interlock perfectly into one complete unit. She made a red leather-looking vinyl cover for it. An oversized lazy susan in the middle solves the serving problem. The table light over the center is an old incinerator which Shirley found, had sandblasted and painted. The red lamp is a milk can she found at a flea market.

A "picnic bar" in the corner by the kitchen door does double duty as a serving aid and a place for quick snacks.

An intimate corner was formed by laying an area rug over the vinyl brick floor and placing two couches in front of the fireplace that was the original outdoor barbecue. More built-in seats provide more handy storage space.

"We wanted an American feeling in this room," Shirley said, "without being flamboyant about it. For instance, the ceiling is powder blue, the stitching on the white couches is a darker blue, and the accent pieces are red. The rug is a series of red, white and light blue rows of yarn. When I ordered it, the rug man threw up his hands and said it sounded awful. But the end result is so subtle and works so well, it is now part of the company's regular line. I think people should remember that professional decorators are not always right. After all, you are living in your house, not they." FW

POPULAR, PRACTICAL HAMBURGER IS VERSATILE MENU MAKER

By Marilyn Hansen

Always a handy solution to "what to serve for dinner," ground beef can be presented in many winning ways. One of our recipes might be just the right thing for your family dinner tonight.

THREE-LAYER MACARONI CASSEROLE

- 8 ozs. elbow macaroni
- 2 qts. boiling water
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 2 cups milk
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
- 1 cup sour cream
- 2 tablespoons butter or magarine
- 1 medium green pepper, chopped
- 1 cup chopped onion
- 1 clove garlic, crushed
- 1 lb. ground beef
- 1 can (15 ozs.) tomato sauce
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon sugar
- ¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
- 3 slices bread
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- Seasoned salt

1. Cook elbow macaroni in 2 qts. boiling water, to which 2 teaspoons salt have been added, about 8 minutes or until just tender; drain.

2. In medium saucepan, melt 2 tablespoons butter, stir in flour smoothly. Add milk and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture comes to a boil.

3. Allow sauce to cool slightly, season with 1 teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon ground black pepper. Add sour cream. Beat with wire whisk until smooth.

5. Stir in tomato sauce, salt, sugar, pepper and parsley. Simmer 10 minutes.

6. Remove crusts from bread and discard. Cut bread into small cubes.

7. Melt 2 tablespoons butter in skillet; add bread cubes and stir until evenly coated.

8. In 2-qt. greased casserole, layer macaroni, ⅓ of sour cream sauce and meat sauce. Repeat layers ending with sour cream sauce. Top with buttered crumbs. Sprinkle with seasoned salt.

9. Bake in preheated 350°F. oven for 40 to 50 minutes or until bubbly.

10. Allow casserole to settle 5 minutes, then serve. Makes 6 servings

BAKED SPAGHETTI

- ½ lb. spaghetti
- Boiling water
- Salt
- 1 lb. ground beef
- ½ cup chopped onion
- ½ teaspoon basil leaves, crushed
- ¼ teaspoon thyme leaves, crushed
- 1 large clove garlic, minced
- 1 tablespoon salad oil
- 2 can (10¾ ozs. each) condensed tomato soup
- 1 can (6 ozs.) tomato paste
- 2 soup cans water
- ½ cups grated Parmesan cheese
- 2 teaspoons salt
- ¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
- 1 medium bay leaf
- ½ lb. spaghetti, cooked

1. Cook spaghetti in boiling, salted water according to package directions until just tender; drain.

2. In large saucepan, brown beef and cook onion with basil, thyme and garlic in oil until tender. Stir in soup, tomato paste, water, ¼ cup cheese, salt, pepper and bay leaf. Cook over low heat 15 minutes; stir occasionally.

3. Remove bay leaf from sauce. Combine sauce with spaghetti. Pour into 2-qt. shallow baking dish (12- × 8- × 2"). Sprinkle with remaining cheese. Bake at 350°F. for 25 minutes or until hot; stir before serving. Serve with additional Parmesan cheese.

Makes about 8 cups; 4 to 6 servings

MEATBALLS STROGANOFF

- 3 tablespoons finely chopped onion
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 4 tablespoons milk
- 2 cups fresh bread cubes
- 2 teaspoons salt
- ½ teaspoon ground black pepper
- ½ teaspoon thyme leaves
- ¼ teaspoon ground cloves
- 2 lbs. ground beef
- 1 tablespoon liquid gravy seasoning
- 1 tablespoon red wine
- 1 can (10½ ozs.) condensed beef bouillon
- 2½ tablespoons butter or margarine
- 2½ tablespoons flour
- ½ cup red wine
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon dried dill weed
- Several twists freshly ground black pepper
- 1 teaspoon liquid gravy seasoning
- ½ cup sour cream

1. In large bowl, beat together onion, eggs, milk, bread cubes, salt, pepper, thyme and cloves.

2. Add meat and blend well, using a large spoon or your own well-scrubbed hands.

3. Shape into meat balls about the size of a walnut and roll in mixture of gravy seasoning and wine.

4. Place meatballs on shallow roasting pan and bake in preheated 375°F. oven for 15 minutes or until done.

5. Place meatballs in casserole; cover and keep warm.

6. Pour bouillon into roasting pan and bring to boil on top of range, stirring to loosen all browned bits. Reserve.

7. In medium saucepan, melt butter, stir in flour smoothly. Add reserved bouillon, wine, salt, dill, pepper and gravy seasoning. Heat to boiling, stirring constantly.

8. Add sour cream and beat in with wire whisk until thoroughly blended. Heat just to boiling point; pour over meatballs. Serve with hot buttered noodles or rice.

Makes 6 servings

Editor's Note: If you like, shape these meatballs the size of an acorn; bake 10 minutes and use with Stroganoff sauce for cocktails.

QUICKIE ALMOND TACOS

- ¾ cup slivered almonds
- 1 tablespoon vegetable oil
- 1 lb. lean ground beef
- 1 medium onion, cut into wedges
- 1 medium zucchini, sliced
- ¼ cup diced green chiles
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 1 teaspoon oregano, crumbled
- ½ teaspoon thyme, crumbled
- 10 taco shells
- 1 can (8 ozs.) taco sauce

1. Sauté almonds in oil in skillet, stirring until light gold.

2. Crumble beef into skillet over almonds. Add onion, zucchini, chiles, salt, pepper, oregano and thyme. Cook, stirring, until meat is cooked through.

3. Spoon into taco shells, allowing ½ cup filling for each one. Serve with additional almonds, grated cheese and heated taco sauce. Makes 10 tacos

Quickie Almond Tacos — Microwave Oven Preparation

Crumble beef into 2-qt. rectangular Pyrex baking dish. Top with almonds. Sprinkle with oil, salt, pepper, oregano and thyme. Layer onion, zucchini and chiles on top. Cook, uncovered, in microwave oven at high power for 4 minutes. Stir and cook 3 minutes longer. Serve in taco shells as in conventional method.

HERB AND WINE BURGERS

- 1 lb., ground beef, preferably ½ lb. ground round and ½ lb. ground chuck
- 2 tablespoons red wine
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon prepared mustard
- Several twists freshly ground black pepper
- ¼ teaspoon tarragon leaves
- ¼ teaspoon chervil leaves
- ⅛ teaspoon thyme leaves
- ⅛ teaspoon ground allspice
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped onion or shallots
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
- 1 loaf Italian bread
- 4 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
- 1 clove garlic, crushed
- 1 cup red wine
- 1 bouillon cube, crushed
- Few twists freshly ground black pepper
- 2 teaspoons butter or margarine
- Crisp lettuce leaves
- Cherry tomatoes

1. Mix ground beef lightly with 2 tablespoons red wine, salt, mustard, pepper, tarragon, chervil, thyme, allspice, onion and parsley. Shape into four oval-shaped patties, about 1-inch thick.

2. Slice Italian bread in half, lengthwise. Cut crosswise, making 4 double slices. Combine butter and garlic; spread on cut sides of bread.

3. In small saucepan, combine red wine, bouillon, pepper; heat to boiling, stirring to dissolve bouillon. Swirl in butter until melted.

4. Broil patties about 5 minutes, 4 inches from source of heat. Turn, broil about 3 minutes or until as done as you like. Given times are for medium doneness.

5. After turning patties, toast garlic bread at the same time. Watch carefully so as not to overbrown.

6. Place patties on toasted garlic bread, pouring a little wine sauce over each. Top with second slice of garlic toast. Garnish with lettuce leaves and cherry tomatoes. Serve promptly. Makes 4 servings

STRESS CAN BE GOOD FOR YOU

By Laurence Cherry

The word stress crops up so often in conversation that not many of us realize that it was "discovered" only about 40 years ago. The unknown young scientist who coined the term was Dr. Hans Selye, who used it to describe how our bodies respond to all the ups and downs of daily life. Since then, the Hungarian-born Dr. Selye has become the renowned head of the International Institute of Stress Research at the University of Montreal, and scientists all over the world are busy exploring how stress affects our lives.

Possibly the most important thing that they've discovered is that stress is a good thing — even necessary for our well-being. "Unfortunately, there's much confusion about what stress actually is," says Dr. Selye. "Stress is the body's response to any demand placed on it, whether pleasant or not. Sitting in a dentist's chair is stressful, but so is exchanging a passionate kiss with a lover — after all, your breathing quickens, your heartbeat soars. And yet who in the world would forgo such a pleasurable pastime simply because of the stress involved? Our aim shouldn't be to avoid stress completely but to learn how to recognize our own response to stress and then to try to live our lives accordingly."

What should you do if you find yourself suffering from too much stress? The traditional antidotes are taking tranquilizers or drinking something alcoholic, but neither works for long and each has side effects; also, most stress experts are skeptical about the value of the new "stress pills" appearing on the market. Even much-publicized transcendental meditation seems to help some people but not others and, according to some experts, may even be unwise for a few individuals. "There are actually people who suffer from too little stress, who need more activity in their lives," says Selye.

One way to cope with stress, researchers in England have found, is to exercise regularly. The best exercises, investigators report, are swimming, bicycling and a very gradual program of calisthenics.

But most experts feel there's an equally important way of handling stress, one that involves taking a different attitude toward the events that happen in your life. Attitude, after all, determines how we perceive any experience, and adopting the right one can convert a negative stress into a positive one — a "eustress." "For example," says Dr. Selye, "I doubt if anyone, even a person with a naturally high-stress threshold, could endure my busy schedule unless he took as favorable a view of the work as I do."

Selye believes that the cultivation of this optimistic kind of attitude toward life has helped him combat stress in other ways. "Imitate the sundial's way, count only the pleasant days. I find I've learned to quickly forget unpleasant incidents and not to carry a grudge for long," he says. "After all, we have only a limited capital of energy to resist stress, and it would be silly to waste it on pointless anger or hatred."

Dr. Selye disagrees with those who say we suffer more stress than our ancestors; our era is no more an "age of anxiety" than any other in human history, he says. But he does believe that one type of social stress has increased in our time: the loss of goals, a kind of spiritual sickness that he feels has become an epidemic, particularly among the young, and largely accounts for the rising incidence of violence, alcoholism and drugs around the world. The researcher first began to consider the problem when he noticed its effect on his children and their friends. They seemed to be purposelessly drifting, unsure of what to do with themselves or their lives — a situation he calls one of the most stressful imaginable.

Partly to help them, he devised a "recipe" for handling stress.

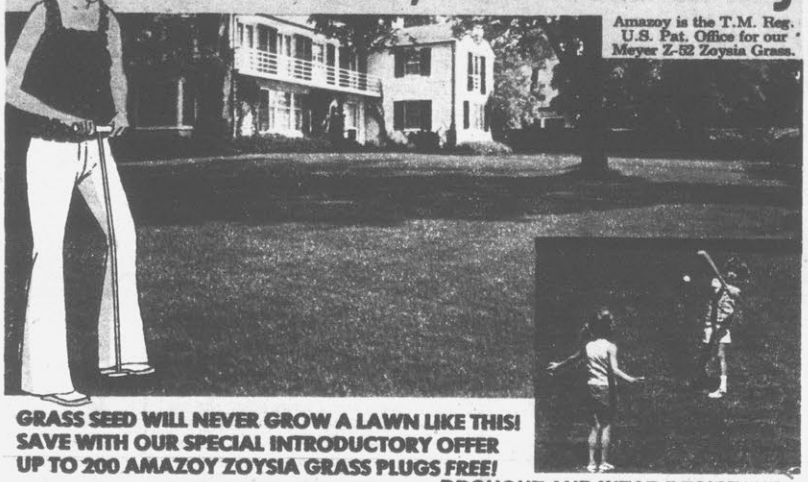

- First, seek your own stress level. Decide whether you're a turtle or racehorse, and don't be ashamed to live your life accordingly. If it's genuinely your nature to pursue high-stress activities, for example, continue with them; you probably thrive on them.
- Choose your goals and make sure that they're really your own and not foisted on you by overhelpful teachers or parents. For example, Selye points out, he truly wanted to be a scientist; otherwise he's sure he would have succumbed to the pressures of his work. "I've seen too many cases of doctors who really wanted to be musicians or office clerks who really wanted to be plumbers or carpenters not to realize how much stress is involved in trying to live out choices others have made for you," he says.
- Thirdly and most importantly, Selye advises patients to adopt a new code of behavior: to look out for themselves by being necessary to others. "I've always advised people not to worry so much about saving money or climbing the next rung on the career ladder," he says. "Much more importantly, they should work at making sure they're useful by acquiring as much competence in their chosen fields as they can — their ultimate protection no matter what the future holds in store and something that will protect them from the worst of all modern social stresses, purposelessness."

But doesn't this advice overlook the fact that most of us are not indispensable? After all, how many of us can be so useful to those around us?

"We all can," Selye answers. "You can work at being a good teacher, a good baker, a good neighbor. And striving to make yourself ever more useful and necessary is an aim that you can safely pursue throughout your whole life and one that will help you to ward off the worst consequences of stress." Lady Plugs In Zoysia Grass Saves Time, Work & Money

Amazoy is the T.M. Reg. U.S. Pat. Office for our Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass.

GRASS SEED WILL NEVER GROW A LAWN LIKE THIS! SAVE WITH OUR SPECIAL INTRODUCTORY OFFER UP TO 200 AMAZOY ZOYSIA GRASS PLUGS FREE!

By Jack T. Johnson, Agronomist

Every year I see people pour more and more money into their lawns. They dig, fertilize and lime. They rake it all in. They scatter their seed and roll and water it.

Birds love it! Seeds which aren't washed away by rain give them a feast. But some seed grows, and soon it's time to weed, water and mow, mow . . . until summer comes to burn the lawn into hay, or crabgrass and diseases infest it.

That's what happens to ordinary grass, but not to Amazoy Zoysia.

"MOWED IT 2 TIMES," WRITES WOMAN

For example, Mrs. M. R. Mitter writes me how her lawn ". . . is the envy of all who see it. When everybody's lawns around here are brown from drought ours just stays as green as ever. I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in . . . Last summer we had it mowed (2) times. Another thing, we never have to pull any weeds — it's just wonderful!"

And from Iowa came word that the state's largest Men's Garden Club picked a Zoysia lawn as the "top lawn — nearly perfect" in its area. Yet this lawn had been watered only once all summer up to August!

Cuts Your Work, Saves You Money

Your deep-rooted, established Amazoy lawn saves you time and money in many ways. It never needs replacement . . . ends re-seeding forever. Fertilizing and watering (water costs money, too) are rarely if ever needed. It ends the need for crabgrass killers permanently. It cuts pushing a noisy mower in the blistering sun by 2/3.

CHOKES OUT CRABGRASS

Thick rich, luxurious Amazoy grows into a carpet of grass that chokes out crabgrass and weeds all summer long. It will NOT winter kill. Goes off its green color after killing frost, regains fresh new beauty every Spring — a true perennial!

For Slopes, Play Areas, Bare Spots

Your Own Supply of Plug Transplants

Established Amazoy gives you Zoysia plugs to plant in other areas as desired!

NO SEED, NO SOD!

There's no seed that produces winter-hardy Meyer Zoysia. Sod of ordinary grass brings with it the problems of seed, like weeds, diseases, burning out, other ills.

Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass Was Perfected by U.S. Govt.; Released in Cooperation With U.S Golf Assoc. as a superior grass.

Order guaranteed Amazoy now, get your bonus plugs FREE. Your order will be delivered at earliest correct time for planting in your area.

We ship all orders the same day grass is taken from the soil, shipping/handling charge collect via most economical means.

DROUGHT AND WEAR RESISTANT

Amazoy lawns take cookouts and parties — children playing on it won't hurt it, or themselves! Stays green right thru scorching heat and drought!

NO NEED TO RIP OUT PRESENT GRASS PLUG AMAZOY INTO OLD LAWN, NEW GROUND OR NURSERY AREA

Just set Amazoy plugs into holes in ground like a cork in a bottle. Plant 1 foot apart, checkerboard style.

When planted in existing lawn areas plugs will spread to drive out old, unwanted growth, including weeds. Easy planting instructions with order.

PATENTED STEP-ON PLUGGER IS ..... FREE WITH ORDERS OF 600 PLUGS OR MORE

Amazoy exclusive! No one else can offer you this patented 2-way plugger. Saves bending, time, work. Light, rugged, invaluable for transplanting. Cuts away competing growth as it digs plug holes

Every Plug Guaranteed to Grow In Your Area • In Your Soil

- AMAZOY WON'T WINTER KILL—has survived temperatures 30° below zero!
- AMAZOY WON'T HEAT KILL—when other grasses burn out, Amazoy remains green and lovely!

Plug Amazoy into an entire lawn or problem areas. Plug it into poor soil. "builder's soil," clay or even salty, sandy beach areas. I guarantee every plug to grow . . . from part shade to full sun! Any plug failing to grow in 45 days replaced FREE. Since we're hardly in business for the fun of it, you know we're 100% sure of our product.

If it isn't Amazoy, you're not getting the plugs that made Zoysia famous.

WHY WE NEED HEROES IN OUR LIVES

Elvis Presley, hero to three generations.

Barbara Jordan, an ex-congresswoman.

1977 Nobel Prize winner, Dr. Rosalyn Yalow.

Wide World

By Jean Rosenbaum

Every age and every generation has its heroes. Some are shared by centuries of people as our great religious figures have been. They transcend time and place in their universal appeal. Jesus, who was both a historical person and a mystical one, has been the essence of such worship. This can be seen today in the widespread popularity of the current evangelical movement. Other heroes remain popular throughout generations because they appeal to certain basic desires in each person. The explorers Christopher Columbus, Lewis and Clark and Robert Peary became long-time heroes because they did what most people only could dream of doing. Other heroes may span two to three generations. Elvis Presley was and is a hero of that sort — appealing to grandmothers, mothers and daughters.

But whatever field you choose your heroes from, heroes are important. Your choice can affect the way you make decisions and take action.

In psychiatry, we call the choosing of heroes a selection of "ego ideal." All people have an image of what they think they ought to be or what they would like to become.

Heroes can be used as models for successful living. The philosophy and practices of important public figures may become the inspiration for hundreds of people. So-called "captains of industry" were heroes in the days of Horatio Alger. John D. Rockefeller, Andrew Carnegie and J.P. Morgan were familiar hero figures to aspiring young people in the past. With today's impersonal, multinational corporate structures, hero worship has had to be transferred to lesser beings or to the ubiquitous computers.

Children and young people naturally seek out heroes. Their first heroes are in their immediate family. It may be the father, mother, older brother or sister or other close relative; as the child grows and goes out into the world, his horizon is expanded through new contacts at school, through learning to read and through movies and television. Heroes may now be taken from the ranks of teachers, older students, athletes, actors and from both fiction and history.

While sex lines may be somewhat blurred in the choosing of heroes, there are several outstanding women who serve as ego ideals for girls. Barbara Jordan has become a model for many and so has Rosalyn Yalow, the scientist who shared in the 1977 Nobel Prize for medicine.

There are obviously both good and bad things about heroes drawn from the worlds of entertainment and fiction. Television presents us daily with a wide variety of possible choices. By bringing into our homes the creators of contemporary culture, it also shows us the negative sides of some of the more popular idols. The attitudes toward drugs, alcohol, pregnancy, marriage and family as expressed by characters or by public figures affect the mores of many viewers.

Fiction has, to some degree, been supplanted by other art forms as a source of heroes. It is difficult to imagine young people today being driven to suicide because of the actions and philosophy of a fictional character, yet the 18th-century book The Sorrows of Young Werther by Goethe was responsible for a wave of suicides among young romantics who took Werther as their model.

The rock star and the country music star have become heroes to a new generation who prefer watching and listening to reading lengthy books. Instant culture has given us instant heroes like John Travolta, the Fonz and Shaun Cassidy. Depending upon their philosophies, these stars either do or do not make good choices for heroes.

The impact of the wrong choices of heroes can be disastrous. An individual's personal development can be stunted. In the 30's, a whole nation accepted Hitler as their hero, and the tragic consequences of that choice were global. Today we still find young people and adults who worship power and turn, for example, to the neo-Nazi parties for their heroes.

A hero who advocates or uses violence produces followers who naturally try to emulate his deeds. A leading sports figure may hit a reporter on the head but that is not an heroic act. The unfortunate conclusion so often reached is: "if he can do it, so can I!" This is a psychology relied upon by gang leaders; from those who lead the small neighborhood gang to those who lead in organized crime.

There are guidelines for making good choices of heroes. Ask yourself these questions:

1. Is (or was) my hero a man or woman of strong character?

2. Is my hero a person who commands respect?

3. Does my hero contribute in some positive way to those who know about him or her?

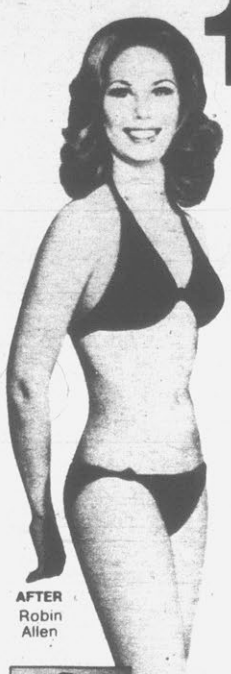

4. Am I inspired in a positive way by my hero?

5. Has my life changed for the better by my choice of hero?

"YES" answers indicate that you have made a wise choice: "NO" answers mean you should take a second look at your hero; make a better choice.

Your hero, whether it is a real person or a fictional one, a well-known public figure or the person down the street, can be an inspiration and influence on your life. We all need heroes to look up to, to reach out to and to copy. And, by the same token, we in turn can, in some ways, become heroes to other people. FW

SLIM-SKINS™ THE ONLY REDUCER THAT GUARANTEES YOU MUST LOSE 9 TO 18 INCHES FROM YOUR WAIST, ABDOMEN, HIPS AND THIGHS IN JUST 3 DAYS – WITHOUT DIETING – OR YOUR MONEY BACK!

THE SLIM-SKINS EXPERIENCE

BEFORE:

Robin Allen about to try Slim-Skins for the first time and discover how–without any dieting–Slim-Skins can take off excess inches up to 7 times faster than any other method including diet pills and crash diets.
Before measurements:
Waist: 27⅛"; Tummy: 33⅛"; Hips: 38⅜"; Thighs: 22¾".

Robin slips on her Slim-Skins –snaps the universal adapter to her vacuum cleaner and turns it on. Just 10 minutes of the rhythmic motions of the Slim-Skins "Permanent Inch Reduction" program and 15 minutes of pure relaxation––as the excess inches disappear like magic.

AFTER:

The Slim-Skins come off and instantly Robin knows why Slim-Skins is called 'the world's fastest slenderizer'–and her measurement losses immediately reflect the sudden and dramatic improvement in the appearance of her figure.
After measurements:
Waist: 22¼"; Tummy: 27½"; Hips: 35⅛"; Thighs: 19⅜".

TOTAL INCH LOSS: 19¾" TOTAL TIME: 25 MIN.

From coast to coast hundreds of thousands of users are discovering that Slim-Skins is indeed the world's fastest slenderizer taking off excess inches up to 7 times faster than diet pills, crash diets or any other method they have ever tried.

DOCTOR TESTED. Over 4" from each thigh–8" from tummy–7" from waist–and 3½" from hips: these are just some of the fantastic inch losses achieved by Slim-Skins users in just one to three days on a special slimming test conducted by a prominent American physician: losses 7 times faster than with diet pills or the leading 'fat burn' diet.

FANTASTIC INCH LOSS WITHOUT DIET. Developed in Europe, the sensational Slim-Skins are now achieving slenderizing results far beyond the scope of other reducing products. And Slim-Skins takes off the excess inches where you need to lose them, without dieting–and won't leave you with loose, flabby skin as 'crash diets' do. With Slim-Skins, as you lose inches, your body becomes tighter, sleeker, firmer and more shapely. And yet the Slim-Skins work so amazingly fast that you can actually measure the difference in just 25 minutes.

INCHES DISAPPEAR OR YOUR MONEY BACK. Slim-Skins is a new slenderizing concept that combines with your own vacuum cleaner to create a super new inch reducer so far ahead of its time that it reduces excess inches 7 times faster than 'crash diets.' Just step into the Slim-Skins; snap the attached hose to your vacuum cleaner with the universal adapter–which fits any make vacuum cleaner–and turn on your machine. Instantly the Slim-Skins seem to come alive with a delightful reducing action on every single inch of your body from beltline to knees. Not every user may experience the same degree of inch loss but you must lose a total of 9 to 18 inches on your waist, abdomen, hips and thighs in just 3 days or your money back.

A NEW TRIPUCKA ON THE NOTRE DAME CAMPUS

By Mark Goodman

Notre Dame. Luck o' the Irish. Win one for the Gipper. Go, Go, Go; Fight, Fight, Fight. Cheer, cheer for old....even when you step onto the campus on a frigid Thursday morning, without a cheerleader or a tuba in sight, you're certain you can hear that song reverberating across the playing fields of South Bend. That, and the echo of gridiron names: Dorias, Rockne, Gipp himself, Bertelli, Lujack, Tripucka...Ah, but a new pantheon of Irish heroes has emerged in recent years, and they do not play in the ancient and sacred stadium but on the hardwood court of the spanking new Convention Center. They have names like Carr, Shumate, Dantley Knight, Tripucka...

That's right, young Kelly Tripucka, son of Frank, the legendary quarterback of the 1948 national champion football team. This particular 6 ft. 7 in., 215-lb. son (there are five more boys and a daughter, crackerjack athletes all) bounded into national prominence as a freshman last year with a whirlwind round of performances that led Notre Dame to the NCAA finals in St. Louis for the first time in the school's history. He was named Most Valuable Player in the nationally televised game against Marquette that clinched an NCAA bid for Kelly's mother and father Frank, the legendary Notre Dame quarterback.

Garden Discovery Breakthrough!
Harvest Bumper Crops of

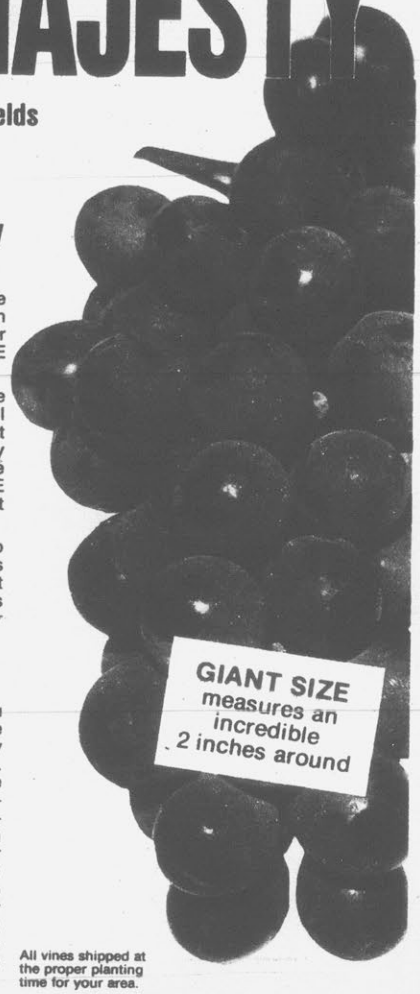

GIANT Seed-less GRAPES

So Large You Can Slice Em!

'BLUE MAJESTY'

- Extremely productive — Yields up to 35 lbs. of fruit from a single mature plant.
- Completely Seedless.
- Particularly hardy — Easily survives sub-zero winters.

At last it's here! A special variety of grape that produces fruit so big and plump with juice, that just to look at them makes your mouth water. And best of all — the "BLUE MAJESTY" is totally seedless!

Just imagine...eating succulent, giant-size "BLUE MAJESTY" grapes by the handful right off the vine...making quart after quart of delicious grape jams and jellies...actually pressing your own "family wine" just like folks used to...and all WITHOUT THOSE BOTHERSOME SEEDS that can make it such a chore!

Yes, those tiny, bitter seeds that used to spoil the pure enjoyment of eating grapes are gone. Now you can serve them in fruit salads, use them as topping on ice creams and desserts and you'll never have another pesky seed get in the way again!

A LIFE-TIME INVESTMENT IN ENJOYMENT

As if the "BLUE MAJESTY" didn't give you enough with their exceptional sweet taste and their over-size fruit...they are probably the easiest grapes to grow we've ever seen. Even novice gardeners can get showcase results. The "BLUE MAJESTY" is exceptionally hardy. They just laugh at bitter winters only to burst forth in the next season with even more clusters of lucious fruit for you to harvest. The grapes that you plant on your property this Spring will continue to bear fruit for your children and for all your grandchildren for the next 100 years. It's no wonder that people considered their grape vines a legacy to be passed on with pride from generation to generation.

DON'T MISS OUT OUR SUPPLY IS LIMITED

Don't confuse the "BLUE MAJESTY" with those seedless varieties that produce tasteless, undersize fruit. The "BLUE MAJESTY" is in a class by itself — truly the most "perfect" grape we have ever offered for sale.

And they're in such demand that we expect a flood of orders from nurseries, growers and home gardeners like yourself. But our supply is limited, that's why it's important that you order now — so you can be sure that you'll have "BLUE MAJESTY" vines growing in your back yard this season.

YOUR SATISFACTION GUARANTEE
All plants we ship are live, healthy vines with a well developed root system ready to burst forth in vigorous growth as soon as they are planted in your garden. We unconditionally guarantee their performance or simply return your vines any time within the first 9 months after purchase for a prompt replacement or a full refund of your purchase price — whichever you prefer.

TRIPUCKA

the Irish as well as to the all-Midwest Regional team in the opening rounds of the NCAA. Former Marquette coach Al McGuire called him "one of the three best freshman players I've ever seen."

Such encomiums didn't cut much ice back home in Essex Falls, N.J. The Tripuckas know a thing or two about keeping any single head from swelling out of kilter. Kelly's father, a husky, good-humored president of a beer distribution firm, disapproved on principle. "I still don't like the idea of freshmen playing varsity ball," he said at his home last spring. "It's a case of too much, too soon. Fortunately, Kelly had the ability and maturity to cope with it."

That maturity was bred into Kelly early. As the sixth of seven children in as combative a family as the nation has produced since the Kennedy clan, Kelly quickly learned he had to butt heads with the big boys or butt out. Just take a look at the family credentials: Tracy set the all-time scoring record at Lafayette, and Todd was not far behind; Mark, the only football player in the bunch, quarterbacked at the University of Massachusetts; T.K. (Timothy) starred on the Fordham court last year, and Chris is now a starting forward at West Essex High.

"Everyone picked on Kelly," Todd recalls. "He was the littlest and had to take everything we gave him." Just imagine the level of competition on the driveway court behind that house. Fortunately, Frank was an arbiter worthy of his children's steel. "It would start casually enough," he remembers. "You know, 'You fouled me,' 'No I didn't,' 'Yes, you did,' that sort of thing. I had to go out there with a stick and break things up."

Sitting in the Notre Dame gym before the final practice in preparation for last December's critical game against UCLA, Kelly, now a settled sophomore, laughs at the memory. "I used to cry a lot," he confesses. "But there's no doubt it helped me develop faster."

No doubt. Before he was a sophomore at Bloomfield Township High (attended by his father and older brothers and sister) he was outshining his brothers in the tough, predominantly black summer league in East Orange, N.J. At Bloomfield High he made All-American twice in basketball, starred in soccer and set school records for the high jump and javelin throw.

College coaches lay in wait for him in bushes, like Nately's concubine in Catch-22. Tripucka père dearly wanted at least one son to go to Notre Dame (Heather, Tracy's twin, attended St. Mary's, Notre Dame's sister school), but wisely stayed out of The Chase. Kelly made up his own mind and never regretted it for a moment. A friendly, outgoing youngster, highly popular with schoolmates on and off the court, he found none of the problems that often accompany a legend's son onto a big-league campus — especially Notre Dame.

"It's been great," he says. "Because I was better known than most incoming students, it gave me a chance to meet a lot of people. I think I've reacted to the limelight well — after all, I went through it on a smaller scale in high school. Frankly, watching my brothers helped me a lot. The trick is not to worry about it. Tell you the truth, it's kinda nice being in the limelight."

You might infer, correctly, that Kelly, who will be 20 this month, is something of an urban-cured ham — another family trait. Before last year's Fordham game in New York City — where Tracy was coaching and T.K. playing — Kelly received a note from his brother, the coach. It read: "Dear best freshman basketball player in the country: I hope you don't feel too bad when we beat you in two weeks." Fordham had no hope of that, but the family in the grandstand was treated to some highly unserious high jinks when Kelly and T.K. scrapped for loose balls on the court.

The family also was there for the deadly serious NCAA semi-final game against Duke in March 1978, which the Irish lost 90-88 in the final seconds.

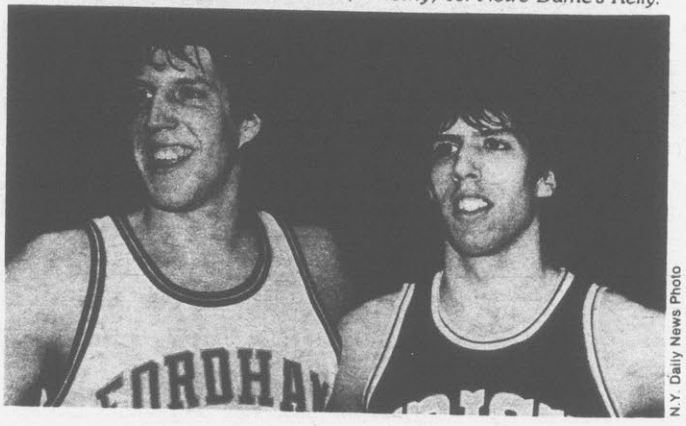

Kelly took that loss in admirable, wait-til-next-year stride. Sure enough, he's matured quickly as a soft-shooting, hard-rebounding forward. Two days after I left him he lead his team to a sweet 81-78 victory against UCLA before a sellout crowd in Los Angeles' Pauley Pavilion.

Kelly's immediate goal, naturally, is to be part of the first Notre Dame NCAA basketball championship. He's much more liable to gain that than the coveted family single-game scoring title. That is held by Heather, who once scored 57 points in a game at St. Mary's.

But he'll try for that, too. FW

Mark Goodman is a free-lance writer who is nearing the completion of a book about the legendary Princeton football star, Hobey Baker.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Exaggerated Generation Gap?

Many young people believe their parents are significantly more conservative than they really are says a six-year study by a University of Oklahoma sociologist. In guessing their parents' views on subjects ranging from welfare to marijuana, the young people exaggerated their parents' conservatism on seven out of nine issues. On some issues, in fact, the parents' views were only slightly more traditional than their children's says the study's director, Alan Acock.

Acock observes that the young people also assumed — incorrectly — that their parents would agree on most subjects. "We actually found a surprising amount of independence," he says.

After comparing the parents' attitudes with those of their children, Acock says he discovered that the mother's views were a better predictor of the youngsters' attitudes in areas such as politics and economics, while the father tended to be more influential in areas like religion — just the opposite of what had previously been believed.

Psychology Goes To The Dogs

Just about everyone's heard of the human potential movement. But are you ready for the Canine Potential Movement?

It all started with a California physical therapist, Robert Pritchard, who treats his patients with a deep-pressure massage called Rolfing. Apparently some of his clients were so pleased with the treatments that they wanted their pets to get in on the act, and Pritchard recently agreed to include dogs in his practice.

Not only does Rolfing do wonders for dogs who've been injured or diseased, Pritchard claims, but he's discovered that dogs are "much easier patients" than humans. That's because Rolfing can be rather painful and Pritchard says dogs seem to accept pain as a part of life, unlike humans, who try to avoid it.

The pooches' patience is not without its rewards, however — Pritchard charges only $30 for a dog session instead of the $40 fee for humans. He also says the dogs get off cheaper in the long run because they don't need as many treatments.

Are In-Laws Really Outlaws?

"In-laws can be one of the greatest blessings — or one of the greatest curses — any marriage has," says Dr. Joseph S. Rowland, a University of Alabama expert on family life. "Take mothers-in-law, for example. They are probably the most joked about member of the American family, but there is little evidence that they can ruin a marriage."

Rowland says that in-law differences most often tend to arise between the wife and her husband's mother, so if the couple must live with parents, it's better to move into her home rather than his.

There tend to be three periods of greatest in-law problems, Rowland says: just before or after the couple marries, when the couple's first child arrives and when the couple's parents have to be looked after. "Many parents can keep their hands off a marriage, but they can't stand to see their grandchildren raised wrong — that is, differently from the way they would have done it," he says.

Many problems between in-laws could be prevented if everyone entered the relationship with a positive attitude, Rowland believes. "It's been said," he observes, "that if people treated their in-laws half as well as they do the average person on the street, there would be far fewer problems."

And for those who are still doubting Thomases, Rowland says that some people eventually become closer to their in-laws than their own parents!

Shopping-Center Scholars

Next time you run down to the local shopping center, how about picking up a few college credits? That's just what Indiana residents are doing as part of a new "Learn and Shop" program begun by Indiana University at four Indianapolis shopping centers.

"We found that there were a large number of people who couldn't come to campus," says Kenneth Beckly, a university spokesman.

Through its division of continuing studies and Weekend College, the university is offering shoppers a choice of 26 credit courses. If interest is sufficient, Beckly says, students may eventually be able to earn an undergraduate degree without setting foot on campus. And talk about one-stop shopping — the students may even register and buy their books at the instruction sites.

Indiana University

Lifestyles

Television: Women and minorities may have come a long way in the last few years — but not on television, says the United States Civil Rights Commission. The commission recently charged that minorities and women continue to be cast on television in stereotyped ways and that they are underemployed in the television industry. For example, the commission reports that women comprised only 27.7 percent of the prime time dramatic characters. And among the 10 roles they most commonly played, none was a well-paying professional or managerial occupation.

Food. This year Americans will spend as much on eating and drinking away from home as last year's United States military budget predicts the National Restaurant Association. This whopping tab of $105 billion, an increase of 9.8 percent from the amount spent last year, breaks down to nearly $1,850 for the average family of four. Surprisingly, only a third will be spent at fast-food restaurants.

Medicine: The dramatic decline in the number of tonsillectomies in the United States has resulted in an oversupply of throat surgeons says the Harvard Medical School. As the per capita rate of tonsillectomies declined 44% between 1968-1975, both the workload and income of ear, nose and throat specialists have been reduced.

"Guard It Wisely"

YOUR OWN PROUD FAMILY NAME!

YOU GOT IT FROM YOUR FATHER,
IT WAS ALL HE HAD TO GIVE.
SO IT'S YOURS TO USE AND CHERISH,
FOR AS LONG AS YOU MAY LIVE.
IF YOU LOSE THE WATCH HE GAVE YOU,
IT CAN ALWAYS BE REPLACED.
BUT A BLACK MARK ON YOUR NAME, SON,
CAN NEVER BE ERASED.
IT WAS CLEAN THE DAY YOU TOOK IT,
AND A WORTHY NAME TO BEAR.
WHEN HE GOT IT FROM HIS FATHER,
THERE WAS NO DISHONOR THERE.
SO MAKE SURE YOU GUARD IT WISELY,
AFTER ALL IS SAID AND DONE,
YOU'LL BE GLAD THE NAME IS SPOTLESS,
WHEN YOU GIVE IT TO YOUR SON.

Handsome Plaque has your family name engraved above an inspirational verse. Beautifully inscribed on rich antique-goldtone plate—then mounted on 8½" x 4½" walnut finish hardwood plaque . . . it's truly a meaningful gift for a worthy son! Twin hanging rings. Specify family name.

☐ Family Name Plaque (P-98723) $1.99
