Arabs Plan No U.S. Sanctions

By GEORGE A. KRIMSKY
Associated Press Writer

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Arab leaders will impose at least a partial economic boycott against Egypt but will not impose sanctions against the United States at the Baghdad conference, official sources reported today.

Despite a call from Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat for economic war against the United States, the sources said the ministers meeting here have neither the authority nor the inclination to impose sanctions against any country except Egypt.

The delegates showed little enthusiasm for Arafat's call for sanctions against the United States because it sponsored the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

Foreign ministers of 16 Arab countries, meeting to plan retaliatory action against Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israel, listened impassively Tuesday as the Palestine Liberation Organization's chief told them they should not sell oil to the United States or buy from it because President Carter "plotted this conspiracy."

"It is taken for granted that Sadat's regime will be punished, but don't just hit the tail of the snake, hit the head of the snake, the United States," said Arafat.

"I urge you to make an oil boycott against the United States. I urge you to make a trade boycott of the United States. I urge you to make a petrodollar boycott of the United States."

"We should stop buying big American cars and other products. If you move your petrodollars around, several huge American companies would collapse."

Iraqi Vice President Saddam Hussein Warneji seconded the demand for anti-Americans measures. But the applause at the end of Arafat's impassioned speech was light, and the key minister at the meeting, Prince Saud Al-Faisal of Saudi Arabia, did not join in it.

Tests And NCAE Dates Conflicting

By REBECCA BUFFALO
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Education voted Tuesday for teachers to work with school principals and county Director of Testing and Research John McKnight in applying for professional leave to attend the statewide NCAE convention April 5-7.

The vote was made after hearing statements from NCAE spokesperson Arlene Murphy and McKnight.

According to Ms. Murphy, a teacher at Wellcome Middle School, conflict arose over teachers receiving leave on April 5, since several achievement tests will be administered throughout county schools April 3-6. Delegates would be unable to administer the tests if at the convention at the final date.

"We do prefer to do our testing, but as NCAE delegates, we also like to be professional," said Ms. Murphy.

According to McKnight, calendar dates for the standardized achievement testing were made statewide, with testing results to be sent to state offices April 14.

"My reason for denial is a matter of priority," said McKnight of the loss of leave. "Data from these tests are more and more an aid in decisions made for children's schooling."

According to county ACT president Annette McRae, the county is allowed 25 delegates to the convention, but only 18 so far have been able to work out the desired leave.

Superintendent Ott Alford asked the teachers present if there could be other teachers not involved in testing that could serve as delegates.

"I hate to change the testing schedule for 9,000 students for seven teachers," said McKnight.

ACT President McRae also requested input from the board in the change in teacher workdays as a result in the resolution of the lost snow days.

According to McRae, ACT had worked on the 1978-79 calendar, but was not consulted when the calendar was rearranged as a cause of the delay in opening schools this past summer.

"ACT has been blamed for the new calendar," said McRae, noting that the organization had had no input into the matter.

Board Chairman Mark Owens requested that Superintendent Alford check the resolved calendar to make sure teachers were not working over the allotted number of days, and report back to the board and Mrs. McRae at the Tuesday, April 2, regular board session.

The board tabled action on approving April 26 as the date for a spring dance at Ayden-Grifton High School.

According to Superintendent Alford, the board set March 9 in 1978 as a proposed county-wide Prom Day for the four county high schools. North Pitt held its Junior-Senior dance this year on March 9.

Board member William Earl House made a motion to deny permission for Ayden-Grifton to have the dance, noting that North Pitt had followed the board's direction in having its prom in March 9.

A spokesman from North Pitt stated that the students at North Pitt had worked hard to meet the March 9 date, and would probably feel it unfair if other schools were allowed to have the dance on a different day.

Board member Dr. J. O. Carson felt that it would not be unfair to have dances throughout the year.

The board decided to table the motion until more had

Denies 'Specific' Spending Terms

By The Associated Press

A federal official has disputed statements by University of North Carolina President William C. Friday that the government wants UNC to spend $120 million to upgrade its predominantly black colleges.

David S. Tatel, director of the civil rights office of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, said the federal government has never specifically told North Carolina how much money it should spend on the black campuses.

Friday confirmed that the $120 million figure was UNC's, but said it was based on HEW proposals.

Tatel said Tuesday that what Friday describes as "proposals" put forward by HEW were actually "examples" of what UNC might do for the schools in order to satisfy HEW.

Friday and UNC Vice President Raymond C. Dawson said the 16-campus system had arrived at the $120-million figure by adding all the items listed by HEW during a meeting between the two groups on March 8.

Although Tatel said HEW had not specified a dollar amount, federal officials have said privately they wanted UNC to spend $90 million over a five-year period.

HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. announced Monday that UNC's latest desegregation plan was unacceptable, threatening to make North Carolina the first state to lose federal funds for higher education under the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

The UNC system receives about $89 million a year in federal money, and Califano said he would begin a selective cutback of money to the university if an agreement has not been reached within 30 days of his announcement Monday.

SUNDAY CLOSING?

I would like to know if I can buy gas coming back from Washington, D. C. Sunday. A. H.

Vann Mills of the Carolina Motor Club said a survey just done by his organization shows no problem at most stations across North and South Carolina. He could not answer specifically about Virginia, but said he is advising travelers who are members of his organization to "go ahead, but plan ahead."

"Sandy" in the Richmond office of the AAA travel assistance organization said that her office has had no reports of Sunday closings of service stations in Virginia. A survey of such stations for the Easter holidays is underway, she added.

BAKE AND YARD SALE

A bake and yard sale to benefit "Hack" and Denise Hackney, former Pitt County residents who were critically injured in a wreck in Florida, will be held Saturday from 6:30 a. m. "until" at Rose High School.

Persons having items they'd like to donate for the sale may call Ellis or Tony Banks, 756-7877.

The Banks report that response to the recent Hotline appeal for donations for the Hackneys was gratifying. About $1000 has been donated by people of this area, they indicated.

Marijuana Crop Is Picked Up

FARMVILLE — A homemade cold frame containing between 100 and 125 marijuana plants was picked up by the Farmville Police Department Tuesday about 1 p. m.

Police Chief Ron Cooper said the department has been watching the plants grow for about a month in a wooded section near Claremont Subdivision here. The plants were being tended in a wood frame filled with soil and covered with clear plastic. Investigation continues, Chief Cooper indicated.

Reactor Shut Down By Cooling Pump's Failure

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) —

A water pump used to cool the reactor at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant broke down today, and authorities said some radiated steam escaped into the atmosphere before the building could be sealed. Authorities said there were no injuries and the radiation outside was not considered dangerous.

Officials at the plant, located on an island on the Susquehanna River about 10 miles southeast of the state capital here, declared a "general emergency" when the accident occurred at 4 a. m.

Residents near the plant were not evacuated, according to Judy Botvin, a spokeswoman for the plant.

Blaine Fabian, spokesman for Metropolitan Edison, one of the consortium of utilities that runs the plant, said a valve in the pressure steam system blew out.

Fabian said the accident automatically shut down the reactor, but some of the radiated steam vented into the atmosphere before the building was sealed.

He said the radiation level inside the building was higher than normal, but said there were no injuries.

The radiation level outside was also higher than normal, but not at a level considered dangerous to health, Fabian said.

State Police spokesman James Cox said that Metropolitan Edison officials had requested a state police helicopter "that will carry a monitoring team." He said he did not know what would be monitored.

Bids Acted On By City Council This Morning

The City Council, meeting in a special call session this morning, approved two bids for supplies for the Young Adult Conservation Corps program of the Recreation and Parks Department.

Council members also approved an amendment to the 1978-79 city budget's general fund.

A bid in the amount of $17,386 submitted by Eastern Fence Co. for materials to fence in the area around the ponds off Mumford Road was approved. Everett Fence Builders and C & S Fence Co. offered bids of $18,845 and $18,973, respectively.

The Council also approved the bid of Miracle Recreation Equipment Co. in the amount of $22,651 for lumber supplies for the YACC concession and restroom building scheduled for the river property project. W. H. Porter Inc. and John W. Taylor Associates offered bids of $22,776 and $22,840, respectively.

The fencing and lumber materials will be purchased with funds remaining from the initial $200,000 YACC federal grant, approved for the Recreation and Parks Department by the U.S. Forestry Service and Department of Agriculture.

The budget amendment accepts a $240,000 grant for placement in the YACC account of the general fund. Interest and other charges on the original $200,000 grant bring the total appropriation under the amendment to $244,000.

It was pointed out that the new grant money will be available for the April 1 through Sept. 30 period.

Jobless Up

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Employment Security Commission reported Tuesday that the unemployment rate in North Carolina rose .2 percent in February.

Although the jobless rate rose from 4.8 percent in January to 5 percent in February, North Carolina fared better than the national rate of 5.8 percent. Preliminary figures show that the number of unemployed increased from 128,700 to 134,800 between January and February, while total employment was up from 2,528,300 to 2,538,200.

According to analysts for the Employment Security Commission, seasonal factors played a key role in the state's employment picture — including 1,000 layoffs in tobacco manufacturing plants as work in stemmeries was completed and 800 layoffs in the construction industry because of the unusually heavy snowfall in February.

Small counties in the east and west, most of them still largely rural, continued to experience double-digit unemployment. Tyrrell County reported a 15.9 percent unemployment rate.

The larger counties of Durham, Forsyth, Mecklenburg, Orange and Wake had jobless rates below 4 percent, while populous Guilford's rate was only 4.1 percent.

Sadat, Begin Looking For Treaty Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the ink barely dry on a new Middle East peace treaty, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin are appealing to Congress for loans and grants to bolster the fragile peace.

In separate meetings with senators and congressmen, the two leaders warned Tuesday of outside threats to their region in a pitch for military aid.

They also discussed the difficult issue of what to do with the Palestinians.

After their talks, House Democratic Leader Jim Wright of Texas predicted Congress would approve the administration's proposed $4.5 billion package of loans and grants to the two countries.

But Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee said he had made no decision on whether to support the program.

Begin was scheduled today to join Vice President Walter F. Mondale at a luncheon of the Israel-U.S. Business Council in New York.

Meanwhile, Defense Secretary Harold Brown released the texts of letters of agreement with the two countries concerning aid over the next three years.

The letters confirmed reports that Israel is to receive $3 billion and Egypt half that sum.

Brown said Americans will actually be providing only $800 million. The remaining money will be loaned to the two countries to be repaid over 30 years at current interest rates.

Dr. John Horne Planning Retire

Dr. JOHN H. HORNE

By WILLIAM A. SHIRES
ECU News Bureau

Dr. John H. (Jack) Horne is retiring this spring after nearly 20 years as Dean of Admissions of East Carolina University, to pursue his many hobbies and at the same time maintain a lifelong interest in young people preparing themselves well to go to college.

"I'll keep busy," says the trim, slim and always active educator-administrator, a familiar figure with wavy white hair, much loved and respected both on the campus and in Greenville.

"I'll golf, fish, do some traveling, raise flowers, redo the house inside and outside, repair furniture which I have collected, and read," says Horne, who turns the traditional retirement age of 65 this month. "I've been piddling with these hobbies, but never had the time to do them."

Working with prospective students knocking hopefully at East Carolina's doors has been the chief occupier of Horne's time for the past two decades during which the term most frequently applied to the school was "rapidly" (Continued on page 16)

Advised To Bring Children Home

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Last summer I found a pair of worn pantyhose under the seat of my husband's pickup truck. When I asked him whose they were and what they were doing there, he said they were probably mine and he uses them to clean his windshield.

I knew they weren't mine because I don't wear that kind, but I let it go to avoid a fight.

I forgot all about the incident until yesterday when I came across a pair of fancy panties in the glove compartment of his pickup. I knew for sure they weren't mine because this pair had "Friday" on them.

Now I'm really suspicious. Be a pal and print this, Abby. I want that chick who's been fooling around with my husband to know what happened to "Friday."

SUSIE IN SPOKANE

DEAR SUSIE: If your husband continues picking up in his pickup he should warn his friends to pick up after themselves. Daily—Monday through Sunday!

DEAR ABBY: When people yawn, does it mean they're tired or sleepy? Or is it a sign that they are bored?

G IN TUSCALOOSA, ALA.

DEAR G.: It can be either or both. It's usually an involuntary opening of the mouth when you wish others would shut theirs.

DEAR ABBY: I have two teenagers, 14 and 16. Their father and I divorced five years ago and remarried. For years, the children have been begging me to let them live with their father because they felt that their stepfather and I were too strict. Also, their real father promised them the moon.

Last year, I let them go on the condition that they keep their grades up (both were honor students) and continue their confirmation classes.

Well, they are flunking in school and practically dropped out of confirmation class. (They also let four years of music lessons go down the drain.)

I know they prefer living with their father because he doesn't discipline them at all. When they came home, my daughter had so much makeup on I hardly recognized her.

Should I let them go back with their father, or should I insist that they stay with me until they finish high school? My husband has been a wonderful stepfather, although they never showed him the proper respect. He is willing to have them back if I say so.

I know it will be difficult if they return, but I hate to see them ruin their lives because I know they will regret it later.

Please advise me.

MOM

DEAR MOM: Bring them home. Their grades alone are sufficient to justify it. These are important years. They desperately need a firm hand, guidance and discipline. They'll thank you later. And if they don't, at least you'll know that you did all you could for them.

Parents Can Help Make Game Safer

NEW YORK (AP) — Parents of young baseball players can help prevent injuries by making sure that all equipment passes a safety check and that the child is in good physical condition before "spring training" begins, says a man who has been associated with professional baseball for 26 years.

The advice comes from Sparky Anderson, one-time player, and former manager of the Cincinnati Reds, who is national spokesman for "Pitch, Hit & Run," major-league baseball's official youth program.

Anderson says parents can set a few ground rules concerning equipment to help cut down on common injuries:

—The webbing of the glove, which receives most of the impact from a thrown or batted ball, should be checked regularly for worn or torn lacing. A tight webbing will prevent the ball from coming through and hitting the player in the face.

—The bat should be of the proper size and weight for the youngster's age to avoid strain on the arms and shoulders. A sporting-goods retailer, physical-education instructor or Little League coach can help make the right selection.

—As with off-the-field shoes, baseball footwear should be properly fitted to prevent ankle and foot injuries. Cleats, which bear the player's full weight, should be checked regularly.

—If a youngster wears eyeglasses, an eye doctor should be consulted about whether special shatter-proof lenses are needed.

The youth program, sponsored by Burger King Corp., is supported by the National Recreation and Park Association and by the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports, which gives these conditioning tips:

—Make sure children get into shape gradually, exercising hard enough to make the effort worthwhile, increasing exercise at a comfortable pace and starting a regular routine of muscle-building situps and pushups and a running or jogging program.

Anderson adds: —Parents should tell a child that arm strain can be prevented through proper warm-ups. A player should begin by playing catch with a teammate standing 8-10 feet away. The distance can be increased as the arm loosens.

—Sliding into a base is a major cause of baseball injuries. Parents should emphasize that sliding should be practiced on a soft, smooth surface and under the guidance of an instructor.

Pitch, Hit & Run is a national competition open to all boys and girls, 9-12. Participants compete in three areas: throwing at a target, hitting for distance and running against the clock from home plate to first

SNACK CRACKERS

Boxes and boxes of snack crackers add up to a lot of money, but very little to eat.

So you might want to make your own snack crackers. Here's how.

Take a box of ordinary soda crackers and separate into squares on a cookie sheet. Brush either with melted margarine, melted butter or slightly diluted egg white.

Top with seasoned salt, poppy seeds, sesame seeds, parmesan cheese or any other flavoring you especially like. Toast until slightly brown in a 400-degree oven.

You can make other shapes by using refrigerator biscuits that come in a tube. Cut each biscuit into four pieces, roll into a ball or into a bread stick and tie in a knot. Then coat with either margarine or egg white, and top with seeds or seasonings. Sesame or poppy seeds, garlic salt or vegetable flakes are some toppings to try.

Another easy bread stick is made by cutting strips of bread then dipping in melted margarine or butter. Put on any desired topping; and toast in the oven, turning once to brown sides.

Not only are these snack crackers great for guests—but they make inexpensive treats for your family all year long.

Heavy Impact

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina economy would take a beating if a threatened statewide truckers' strike is called, business and labor officials said Tuesday.

The state ports at Wilmington and Morehead City and independent grocers and merchants would feel the biggest impact, the officials said.

Members of the state's three Teamsters Union locals voted last weekend to call a strike against the trucking industry if a new contract is not reached by this Saturday. The union's three-year contract with the industry expires at midnight Saturday.

"A strike would be catastrophic," said William A. Greene, executive director of the North Carolina Ports Authority. "The trucking industry has an awfully large impact on the ports of Morehead City and Wilmington."

Thompson Greenwood, executive vice president of the state merchants association, said in two or three weeks, a strike "would have a real serious effect, particularly in grocery stores."

Would Keep Army Reports Failure Outer Banks Enlist Enough Women

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt said Tuesday he is opposed to federal purchase of any more land along the Outer Banks.

Hunt issued that statement after an hour-long meeting with Currituck County commissioners who were afraid a remote section of their county would become a national wildlife refuge without access needed for development.

The Fish and Wildlife Service of the Department of the Interior recently announced that it was considering buying all or part of the 23-mile-long Currituck Banks. The service said it has $4.12 million in funds to acquire land in the Atlantic Coast barrier islands as well as appropriations from Congress.

Currituck officials have said they favor an access road for the Currituck Banks to connect the remote town of Corolla with roads in Dare County and to allow orderly development. Hunt has asked an aide to investigate whether condemnation legislation would allow construction of the road.

The governor also said the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development would consult with federal officials about the Department of Interior's intentions for the area.

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time, the Army is failing to enlist enough women to meet its recruiting objective. Army officials alarmed at the development say there may be major problems in maintaining an all-volunteer force if the trend continues.

The latest Army recruiting figures, obtained by The Associated Press, show that the Army reached only 72.6 percent of its goal for women recruits in the first half of the 1979 fiscal year.

As of Monday, the Army had signed up only 5,950 women. This was 2,250 fewer than planned for the six months beginning last Oct. 1.

Officials are unable to explain the reasons for the downturn.

Comparable Air Force, Navy and Marine recruiting statistics for this fiscal year were not available.

The commissioners had complained that the federal government had not kept them informed of its plans for the Currituck Banks area.

Some officers think the Army may eventually have to relax admission standards for women, which are higher than those required of male volunteers, to attain the recruiting goal.

Defense sources, who asked to remain anonymous, said the downward trend apparently began late in the 1978 fiscal year and has deepened since then. At the end of the first three months of this fiscal year, they said, the Army had made 86 percent of its objective for the period.

The latest available figures indicate the Army also is falling short again in recruiting young male volunteers. As of March 19, the Army had signed up about 39,000 men since the beginning of the 1979 fiscal year, or 94 percent of its objective.

Military manpower experts have warned that recruiting problems for the regular forces — as well as for the chronically understrength reserves — will become more severe in coming years because the population of young men between ages 17 and 21 is projected to decline by 15 percent over the next decade.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown and manpower officials have stressed they will depend on increasing the number of women in uniform to help close the numbers gap, which looms because of the decreasing pool of military-aged young men.

According to current plans, the armed services would increase from 117,000 enlisted women last year to 208,000 in 1984. The Army share of this is supposed to increase from 50,000 last year to 80,000 by the end of the period.

Governor Was Quick To Act

Last Friday the Pitt Board of County Commissioners appealed to Gov. Hunt for assistance in getting the application for a bed tower addition to Pitt County Memorial Hospital unscathed.

Help wasn't long in coming. On Monday the governor's office announced that he had ordered an exception to the N. C. health care plan. Construction of additional beds for a teaching hospital would be allowed under the exception.

Since Pitt Memorial is the clinical facility for the ECU medical school, and the state will be funding the bed tower addition because of the affiliation, the action seems to remove the problem.

The spokesman cautioned, however, that Department of Health, Education and Welfare approval will be required and "we don't know how long that will take."

We would anticipate that HEW would understand that a newly developing teaching hospital, essential to the development of the new medical school, is a special situation. If so, HEW should move promptly.

Regardless, no one can say that Gov. Hunt failed to act swiftly to correct a situation that could have created real problems for both the county and the state. That is something we appreciate.

Stand By For More Expensive Living

It appears at this writing, that OPEC nations will move up a projected nine percent increase in the price of crude oil.

The move, of course, will increase the cost of petroleum products throughout the world, including the United States.

Thus we can get ready for further increases in the price of gas, heating oil and, indeed, everything we use.

There is one simple answer, of course, and that is more efficient use of our energy resources so we can become independent of foreign oil supplies.

Third Category Of Law

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Add a new category to the traditional two fields of law — civil and criminal.

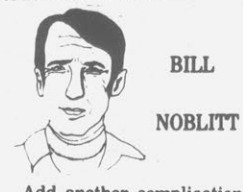

"The practice of public law can properly be recognized along with civil practice and criminal practice as a special area of law which identifies with attorneys who do this kind of work," says North Carolina Attorney General Rufus L. Edmisten.

Complicated
Today, Edmisten notes in an article in North Carolina CountyLines published by the Association of County Commissioners, traditional areas of law have been changed by government activities. A property purchase, for instance, no longer is a simple transfer of title, but often involves zoning, subdivision regulations, building code practices, and such.

"The number of public law clients is large...One must include not only Boards of County Commissioners but also its appointed authorities and commissions: for example — housing authorities, water and sewer authorities, planning commissions, hospital boards, and many others," Edmisten said.

From that point, the matter gets even more complicated.

"Each member of each board views the attorney as his attorney. To get the true number of boards and agencies, multiply by the number of individual members."

BILL NOBLITT

Add another complication. "Even then you are not through. Behind each board there are not only elected officials but there are professional administrators."

"They each place their own unique demands...When the governing board is pushed for one interpretation of a duty or authority, the administrator is also trying to use the attorney to achieve what he sees, from his own professional viewpoint, as the best interest of the city. Attorneys are, of course, in the middle."

Arguments
Then, the various appointed authorities and commissions get at odds with other bodies. Consider the rash of fights between local school boards and county commissioners over budget matters.

Public law, Edmisten finds, is complex, growing in demand, and subject to financial limitations on local governments to pay for the service.

Yet when modern governmental dealings are considered and the numbers of suits reviewed, it is plain that public law practice will have a growing impact on the lives of all taxpayers.

INSIDE REPORT

Kennedy The Chairman

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — While the somnolence prevailing in Congress so far this year turned into early weekend torpor last Friday morning, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's Judiciary Committee was holding a hearing on anti-conglomerate merger legislation — one of 31 meetings by the committee in 20 working days.

Congress generally has settled into a Tuesday-through-Thursday regimen that reflects the public's lowered expectations from government. But not Ted Kennedy. In his first two months as chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, he has managed to stack it with his supporters, revise its internal procedures and establish himself as the hairshirt of big business.

The worst fears of businessmen have been realized all too quickly. What functioned as a sleepy-time plantation for 23 years, under the chairmanship of just retired Sen. James O. Eastland of Mississippi, is now a bastion of liberal activism. Even if the political mood is for tightening the public purse, that does not stop Kennedy from raiding corporate pocketbooks.

This revolutionary change in the way business is conducted in Washington can be understood only if the Judiciary Committee's role under Big Jim Eastland the past generation is appreciated. While it long ago failed as a graveyard for civil rights legislation, in 1978 it was still the Siberia to which anti-business legislation was sent for a living death.

Kennedy started this year by making sure Eastland and his old lieutenant, the late Sen. James Allen of Alabama, were not replaced by other conservatives. Kennedy twisted the rules so that his Harvard buddy and political ally, Sen. John Culver of Iowa, did not have to give up his Judiciary seat because of other committee assignments.

The new chairman then made sure that liberals Patrick Leahy of Vermont and Max Baucus of Montana were voted on the committee and that pro-oil industry Sen. David Boren of Oklahoma was kept off. The committee's token conservative Democrat is Alabama's Howell Heflin, beneficiary of Kennedy's help in January to get the committee seat.

Having stacked the committee's membership, Chairman Teddy proceeded to change the rules that Eastland employed to make sure little or nothing was done. The lack of quorum, formerly used to kill liberal measures, is ended by the new authorization of proxies for absent senators. No longer can one senator filibuster the committee; 10 senators on the 17-member committee can now close debate.

It may well be that the committee has met more often in Kennedy's 66 days than in Eastland's 23 years. Business lobbyists grumble that the committee's senior Republican, Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, is no match for Kennedy. Republicans have not even tried to prevent two and sometimes three hearings scheduled in a single day.

To complete the transformation, Kennedy has 59 committee staffers under his direction including a good many bright new ones (a sample: Stephen Breyer, a renowned Harvard law professor and antitrust expert). The thrust is indeed aimed at big business, causing meetings of worried lobbyists around town.

Most hand-wringing concerns Kennedy's bill to prohibit conglomerate mergers between firms with more than $2 billion in assets or sales (endorsed by the Justice Department but, oddly, not yet by the Carter administration as such). However, what may menace corporate board rooms most is the so-called Illinois Brick Bill, to overturn a Supreme Court decision so that parties who are not direct purchasers could collect damages from an antitrust violator.

Illinois Brick is viewed by business lobbyists as the essence of Kennedy's real attitude toward business, which they considered concealed by his deregulation rhetoric. Their one asset is Kennedy's notorious losing record on the Senate floor.

Even fellow Democratic senators say his presence in support of a measure automatically loses 20 to 30 votes.

Freshman senators were surprised by Kennedy's stentorian, table-pounding style in Senate debate March 14 when his effort to stop President Carter's health budget rescissions failed. But the vote of 55 to 32 was close on an issue where Republicans and Carter presumably were allied. Could Kennedy's rising presence in the Senate as a powerful committee chairman with 16 years seniority be translated into Senate

Jupiter Studying Earth

WASHINGTON — It may have been incredible coincidence or it could have been planned, but at the very moment the people here sent Voyager I out into space to photograph the planet Jupiter, Jovians launched their own photographic satellite to take pictures of the planet Earth.

While U.S. scientists are studying the photos relayed on this planet, the Jovian scientists are busy analyzing the shots from their spacecraft.

They are as startled at what they have discovered about Earth as we are at what we have learned about Jupiter.

our planet are being pored over and debated.

The one question the Jovians are trying to decide, based on the data they have received, is whether there is life on Earth. Unfortunately, the first pictures that came back were taken of Los Angeles and showed a gray, dirty blanket over the area.

To the editor:

Nobel Prize-winning economist Milton Friedman knows that taxes can be cut if taxpayers organize! He said recently: "The sweeping inventory of Proposition 13 (the Jarvis-Gann constitutional amendment to cut property taxes and limit their future growth) will be heard throughout the land. Despite a massive campaign against Proposition 13 by the Establishment — the governor, most members of the legislature, state employees and their unions, especially the teachers' organizations, and some segments of big business; despite the use of scare tactics, including notices to teachers of automatic dismissal on passage of Jarvis-Gann, advance local budgets threatening drastic cuts in police and fire protection, and whatever other portents of catastrophe desperate feeders at the public trough could devise, the public refused to be bamboozled this time, as they had been so often before while watching taxes mount and governmental services deteriorate. This time, the scare tactics simply produced a backlash.

"Candidates for political office have seldom found it profitable to promise lower spending and lower taxes. They have found it far more profitable to put together coalitions of special-interest groups, promising each a juicy government handout while talking in vague generalities or not at all about how the handouts were to be financed. Jarvis-Gann means that the political market may have changed. When everybody is getting goodies financed by everybody else and the costs mount and mount, everybody — or at least a majority — may come to recognize that all could benefit by a mutual cutback. And the cynical purchase of special-interest votes can no longer be readily concealed behind the pretense of serving the public interest. The populace is coming to recognize that throwing government money at problems has a way of making them worse, not better; that people are likely to get more out of spending their own money than out of turning it over to bureaucrats to spend for them."

"It would be impossible for anyone to live under that dark, dirty cloud," one Jovian scientist declared.

Another disagreed. "Living things can adjust to any environment. I don't think we should come to any conclusions based on just one photograph."

Another photo came back revealing a large white cover in the area of Chicago (named after the Jovian scientist Max Chicago, who discovered it with a telescope he had set up at the University of Io). "It could be snow," Max told his colleagues.

"What is snow?" the other scientists wanted to know.

"I'm not sure, but it looks like it's been there for years. It may have been caused by two Earth storms colliding with each other. It's obvious nothing human could survive in that climate."

The third picture was one zeroing in on the area around Pittsburgh. The scientists were intrigued by it. Sam Pittsburgh, the scientist for whom the place was named, said:

"It seems there are man-made roads down there, but what do you make of the giant

Consumer Movement Failures

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — It has had some success, as in educating the amateur shopper to the clever techniques of the professional marketer, but the consumer movement has had its abject failures too.

It has been unable to do much about prices, for example, although that prospect was a powerful thrust when the movement built steam a dozen or more years ago.

There were attempts to exert pressure. Homemakers boycotted grocery stores. They swore off red meat. They bought Brand X rather than name brands. They searched their neighborhoods for weekly specials.

None of these techniques persisted long, even though newly emerged experts, self-styled, belabored the obvious in books, programs and seminars, often at great profit to themselves but little to society.

Prices rose, and are rising. Educated to the ways of the marketplace, the consumer began to realize it was difficult to beat it, no matter what technique was used.

Boycott the grocer? Not when the consumer's new consciousness told him and her that the grocer was probably making less than one cent on a dollar of sales. Less than the delivery boy made.

Avoid red meat? For oneself the discipline could be imposed, but not for the children. But the discipline usually broke down.

Brand X? Mothers found they could upgrade such brands through skillful kitchen work. But not those women out working to ease the financial burden; they couldn't spend the time.

Shopping the neighborhood specials? Sure, you still can save food money but it usually comes out of another budget category. Working women don't have the time. And gasoline is too expensive these days.

One positive thing can be said of the consumer movement: It has produced wiser shoppers. But there is a dispiriting consequence too: It is the knowledge of how difficult it is to cut costs.

Could it be this realization that has caused so many former budget cutters to become big spenders instead, adding pressure to prices instead of removing it as they once so idealistically sought to do?

Today's consumer is well named, being the devourer of mammoth amounts of goods and services. Price seems to be no obstacle, and neither does wallet. If the paycheck doesn't cover it, the credit card will.

So aggressive, so acquisitive have consumers become that they have made fools of economists. The economists said the buying couldn't continue; they said it a year ago. They're saying it again.

But the economists also are re-evaluating the American consumer.

Few have answers but many have notions. They speculate: Has the consumer become so despairing as to feel that it doesn't matter anymore because tomorrow might be worse?

Might it be that the consumer has been outmarketed again by, for example, the promoters of credit cards?

Or could the answer be that the consumer is really on top of it all, doing what he and she feels is the only way to preserve what they earn, by converting the paycheck into goods as fast as they can?

British Enjoy April 1

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
RIDGEFIELD, CONN. (AP)

— Since April 1 falls on a Sunday this year, there won't be as many calls as previously for Mrs. Sharkey and Ms. Perch at the Aquarium, and the switchboard at the Botanical Gardens may not be besieged with inquiries for Theresa Greene.

With offices closed for the day, executive types won't be returning from a long lunch to find messages on their desks urging them promptly to return the calls of these very important people who visit only one day of the year.

Things may gang agley, however, at the country club and the town recreational facility. The net may suddenly collapse on the tennis court or the judge's chair topple over on one shortened leg. The hole will be too small to receive the golf ball or the flagpole on the green may flutter a pair of lacy briefs. Someone will have stitched up the netting beneath the basketball hoop or introduced bubblebath salts into the swimming pool.

The April Fool joke is alive and sick as ever, which is probably why T.S. Eliot called it the cruellest month. He was an American, from St. Louis, working in a London bank and no doubt couldn't abide the British sense of humor. Some droll chap probably nailed his galoshes to the wardrobe floor or put a live guppy in the pocket of his waistcoat. Perhaps they asked him to phone Vicky or Al immediately for an important personal message, and the number turned out to be the Victoria and Albert Museum.

The British go absolutely bonkers on April Fools' Day. The big London newspapers outdo themselves and each other in trying to hoax their readers. A few years back, on April 1, the august Guardian put out an entire special section purporting to be an economic report on a tiny island republic in the Indian Ocean, which had lately gained its independence but actually existed only in the glib minds of the subscribers.

Bodoni was the capital of these mythical islands, "shaped like a semicolon," which should have provided the first clues to the joke, since all proper names in the article, even the leaders of the ruling military junta, were common printing terms.

It was all jolly good fun, rather like the "Not The New York Times" parody newspaper that appeared during last October's pressmen's strike and perhaps fooled some New Yorkers into thinking that the Roman Catholic Church had elected a Pope John Paul John Paul I who died after 19 minutes in office.

From a spectator viewpoint, there is a lot to be said for the practical joke as a morale builder and a tension reliever in our hypertense society.

Pasting a dollar bill to the floor and watching the office miser discreetly try to kick it under his desk can make your whole week any April 1. An audience is a must, of course, for this type of humbling playlet, and the more elaborate the joke, the better the enjoyment all around, except for the victim.

Strength For Today

VALUE OF PRAYER

Jesus, praying in Gethsemane, constitutes one of the high points in the gospel narrative.

Every time Jesus had something hard to do, and disconcerting to confront, he resorted to prayer. When he had a great choice to make, he struggled for hours in prayer. Sometimes these prayers seem to have been brief; at other times he prayed for long periods, and once through the entire night.

These circumstances lead us to see that Jesus won the outstanding battles of his life on the field of prayer. He never tired of urging men to be constant in their devotions. He knew that it worked.

If it meant so much to him, — the perfect one, the only being ever to be in complete accord with the Divine Will — how much more can it mean to us! Life's greatest battles can be won on no other field. Life's overwhelming problems are solved in no other light. Life's weaknesses are supplanted by no other power.

Craig Phillips Opposes Non-Public School Bills

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Saying certain groups of North Carolina school children would not get an equal educational opportunity, state Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips Tuesday urged legislators to reject two bills that would remove non-public schools from State Board of Education regulations.

The bills, which would set up separate, more lenient regulations for the state's Christian schools and other non-public schools, were approved by the Senate last week and sent to the House for consideration.

The bills, one of which deals with the church-affiliated schools and the second with other non-public schools, would remove the schools from the stricter board regulations some have been fighting for the past year.

Phillips mailed all 120 House members a letter Tuesday saying passage of either bill would raise serious policy and administrative issues.

"Each would set aside a group of the state's youth and deprive them of the state's protection and assurance of equal opportunity," Phillips wrote.

He said the proposed legislation would make the state compulsory attendance law impossible to administer. The bills say the compulsory attendance law is satisfied if the child attends the school. But no attendance reports would be required.

The schools have been fighting requirements that they file annual operational reports, hire certified teachers and give the state competency test. They say these requirements are an infringement of their freedom of religion.

But state education officials have said they are necessary to ensure that all children in North Carolina get an equal education opportunity.

Phillips said the board's decision to include non-public schools in the state minimum competency test program was "an equal protection decision."

"Requiring a minimum competency score of students for graduation cannot be maintained if students are allowed to elect out of this requirement," he wrote.

The proposed legislation would require the schools to give a minimum skills test but it could be one of their own choosing.

State educators said last week they would call for a public hearing on the two bills before the House acts. The bills are now in the House Education Committee.

black craters that are pockmarked all over them?"

"Those were caused by meteorites, dummy. Apparently the Earth is being bombarded with meteorites from the sky, and since they've been hitting the Earth in straight lines, you think they're roads."

"They're bigger than meteorite holes. Maybe they are dead potholes," Sam said.

"If your theory is correct, then no human life could possibly move about in such a forbidding atmosphere."

Another color photograph came in of the Mississippi River, which showed up on the print as dark brown.

"Could that be water?" someone asked.

"Water is blue," was the scornful reply. "Who ever heard of brown water?"

"Maybe Earth has something different in its water than we do."

"You're out of your gourd. Human life cannot survive on brown water. Nothing could live in that."

"Gentlemen, I think it's too early to be certain. Here is a photograph of the Las Vegas area. Since Dr. Irving Las Vegas discovered it, perhaps he can tell us what he makes of it."

Dr. Las Vegas looked at the photo. "If I didn't know any better I would say it looks like a pizza of neon lights."

"That's out of the question," a Jovian biologist said. "No human being would put up neon lights in the middle of the desert. There has to be another explanation. Maybe they're tiny stars which are just burning out."

The final photo came back revealing, in beautiful detail, large golden arches.

The scientists were aghast. "Oh, by Jupiter. Don't tell me they've got them down there, too!"

It is sufficient to transform nervous tremors into the palsy for corporate America. One Senate Republican insider told us he wants Kennedy elected president because "he can do less damage down at the White House than he can from the Judiciary Committee." He was only half joking.

Annexation?

HAVELOCK, N.C. (AP) — This small Craven County town is studying the possibility of annexing the U.S. Marine Corps Air Station at Cherry Point.

The town — which grew up around the main gate of the base — would almost triple if annexation of the 11-725-acre air station is carried out. The city has a population of about 4,500 and about 16,000 acres. The station has about 8,400 residents.

City Administrator Charles Blankenship said Tuesday annexation could mean an increase of up to 40 percent in revenue from sources such as beer and wine taxes and sales taxes. It would also mean an increase in state and federal funds distributed on the basis of population, Blankenship said.

Marine Corps officials have neither endorsed nor proposed the plan, pending further review.

Only Want The Toadstool Back

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Briley received a concrete toadstool to decorate their yard during the 30th anniversary party given them by their children last Aug. 7.

Feb. 19 of this year their home burned and all the belongings they'd accumulated in 30 years of marriage burned—every personal item they owned, except that concrete mushroom.

So when they moved in with the family of their son, Steve Briley, of Rt. 10, Box 310 Greenville until they could move a mobile home to the site of their burned home, they took the toadstool along. They were afraid someone would steal it if they left it at the fire site.

On the morning of Mar. 12, Mrs. Briley believes, she heard the front doorbell of her son's home ring. She was slow getting to the door, she said, and as she arrived there she saw a white-haired woman heave the heavy "mushroom" into a blue car she believes to have been a Chevrolet. "I couldn't get her license number," she said, "and I was so amazed I didn't think fast enough to go on out and try precipitate the return of the toadstool. It can be left in the yard of their son from which it was removed with no questions asked. Anyone having information about its whereabouts is asked to call the Brileys at 758-3014.

Controlled By Spoken Commands

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Talking to doors, windows, and wheelchairs may seem strange, but, according to Gayle F. Miner, a Brigham Young University electrical-engineering professor, his new voice-actuation device will actually make them listen.

Miner's device, which consists of a little box weighing less than 5 pounds and stuffed full of electronic circuitry, allows people to give commands to their doors, windows and television sets, just to name a few.

When hooked up to a microphone and electrically wired to various household items, it is programmed to control the items according to voice commands.

It works, Miner explains, by detecting the first two dominant frequencies of the voice. With the help of a circular moving windshield-wiper-arm-type mechanism, the two frequencies are matched with what has already been programmed into the device.

"When the arm finds the match," Miner says, "electricity is allowed to flow through the arm and the wire to an outlet, which could be a television set or a window, for example."

"With a voice-actuation device," he adds, "people who are bedridden or wheelchair-bound can open doors, turn on television sets, raise their beds, or do anything that is connected to the device. The applications are almost limitless."

Miner explains that the programming is done by taping certain words or sounds made by the person, then matching the sounds with various commands.

"For example, the word 'stop' could be used to turn off the television set," Miner says. "In that case, the device would be programmed to respond to the 'st' sound in the word. Even when words are used, it still focuses on one particular sound within the word."

Because of this need for just one sound, Miner feels that people with speech problems, who have a difficult time forming words, will find the device especially helpful. As long as the user can make sounds that the apparatus can be programmed with, Miner explains, the voice-actuator can be used.

"Anyone who can talk or make sounds can use it," Miner says, "because it is programmed to respond to certain sounds, in the distinct way they are made by the user."

Miner acknowledges that memorizing different sounds might be difficult, but he feels that if the sound is matched to a word that is normally used with the object, such as saying "up" to raise window or "on" to turn on a television set, then the memorization would not be a problem.

What if the person accidentally makes the sound of says a word with the sound in it?

"The device is set so the sound must be made slowly and distinctly," he points out. "This was done to prevent someone from just talking at a regular rate and accidentally triggering the action. Also, the sound must be loud and distinct enough for the sound to be picked up."

Another important emergency measure, says Miner, is the automatic shut-off.

"Any loud noise will stop the device and cease a response to all commands," Miner explains. "This would be especially useful in a dangerous situation, such as a person getting caught in a lathe. In that case, a scream or some other loud noise would automatically stop the lathe."

The fact that Miner's voice-actuator is not restricted to bedridden patients would make it useful for many people, he believes.

"Even lazy people will be able to use it to save themselves from getting up to close the window, turn off the television set, or perform any number of time-consuming duties," Miner says.

Miner notes that the implications of using the contrivance to increase productivity and assure worker safety are great. One application is as a control for wheelchairs.

"On a wheelchair, the device works just like the 'joy stick' (the manual control stick on the arm of an electric wheelchair)," Miner explains. "In fact, it even fits into the same plug."

The microphone would rest on the arm of the wheelchair and extend to a few inches from the person's mouth, Miner says. Thus, the user could command the wheelchair to go forward, back up, turn, or stop.

Mudslides, Flooding In Rain Storm

By The Associated Press
Mudslides, flooding, and more than two inches of rain were left behind by the first thrust of a blustery Pacific storm as it moved into southern California.

And forecasts for today warned that Tuesday's deluge could be repeated along with heavy snows in the northern Rockies as a second front pushes southward.

Midwesterners, meanwhile, were watching the storm closely, hoping for an extended break in the wet weather that would allow their swollen rivers to continue receding.

Winter storm watches were posted for northern parts of Wyoming, Colorado, Montana, Utah, Nevada and California. A traveler's advisory was issued for North Dakota, where snow and freezing rain was expected.

At Los Angeles Civic Center Tuesday, the rain measured 2.08 inches. Pasadena had a 24-hour rain total of 3.22 inches, and amounts near two inches were recorded at Santa Barbara, Long Beach, Santa Ana and Ontario.

Gale-like winds and high seas knocked an oil tanker off course as it was leaving Los Angeles Harbor early Tuesday. The 1,000-foot vessel smashed into the dock and hit a ferryboat, severing a fuel oil line.

Rock and mudslides closed down some canyon roads and police reported a 16-car pileup on the Hollywood Freeway.

In the Midwest, muddy floodwaters from the Illinois and Rock rivers prevented more than 2,000 people from returning to their homes, according to the Red Cross.

Officials said it could be more than a week before most of the homeless would be able to return.

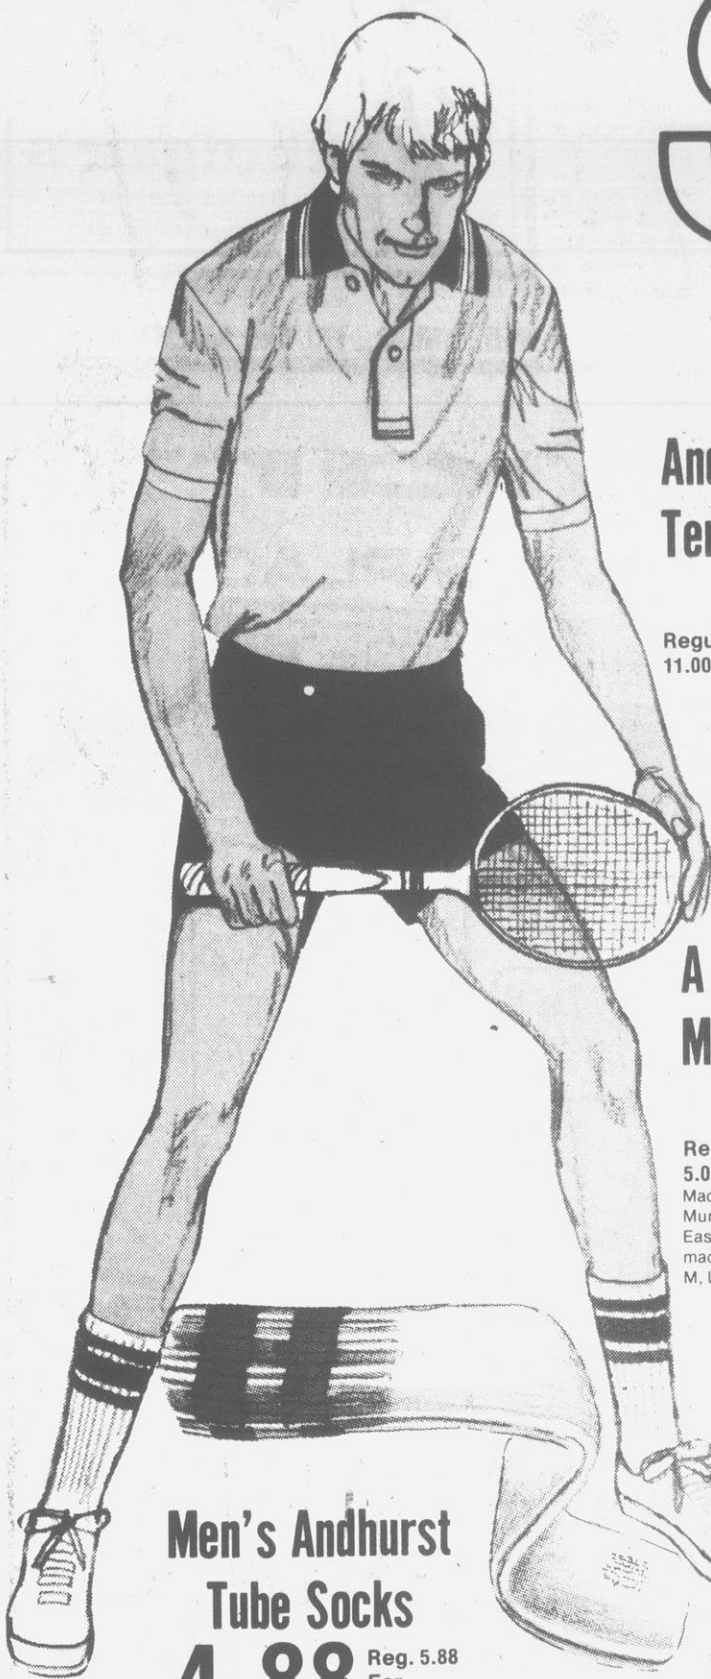

Sections of Illinois farmland were underwater, and several roads were closed as the water streamed along a 9-mile section of the low-lying highway between Hardin and Kampsville.

The war against a week of flooding moved at a slower pace upstream where the swollen Illinois continued to recede. At Peoria, the river stood at 27.4 feet Tuesday, less than 10 feet above flood stage, and it was expected to drop another two feet by Thursday, according to the National Weather Service.

Elsewhere around the country, snow changing to rain was expected from the Ohio Valley through the northern plains.

Temperatures around the nation early today ranged from 11 in Bradford, Pa., to 72 in McAllen, Texas.

Two-Day Effort Raised $200,000 For Boys' Club

In an intensive two day effort on Monday and Tuesday, three Greenville men raised $200,000 in pledges for the fund to build a new Boys' Club home in Greenville.

Working as Development Council Members of the Advanced Gifts Group, the three — R.

W. (Wally) Howard, Jack Minges, and W. M. (Booger) Scales, gathered pledges from local businessmen and agencies amounting to $200,000.

"This brings our total to over $300,000," Chet Emerson, executive director of the Boys' Club, commented. "It's terrific, and I must say amazing, to realize how quickly these three men added that amount in pledges to the fund."

"I wish to thank all those who have pledged, and to say we appreciate greatly their response. I'm sorry we didn't have time to see more people," Minges said. "However, there will be other people calling on those not yet reached, and we hope they too will show their generosity."

Howard noted "the response of the community was, as usual, absolutely outstanding. It certainly is a credit to the community that the three of us in two days could raise this amount for a worthy cause."

"There's been an unbelievable enthusiasm," Scales said. "Nobody's turned us down, they've all come across beautifully."

Austin Britt is chairman of the campaign to raise $500,000 to construct a new Boys' Club building for the Boys' Club of Pitt County, Inc. The drive officially opened March 8, and in less than three weeks since that date three-fifths of the goal of $500,000 has already been pledged.

Interested in more information is urged to contact the campaign headquarters, telephone 756-7505.

Random Police Checks Barred

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court says police may not arbitrarily stop your auto for a license or registration check if there's no reason to believe you're breaking any law.

Such haphazard stops of persons not suspected of committing any crime or traffic violation is an unconstitutional invasion of privacy, the court said Tuesday in an 8-1 ruling.

The ruling invalidates a Delaware law giving police broad discretion in choosing which cars to stop for routine spot checks and calls into question the validity of similar practices in many other states.

However, the decision gives little encouragement to drivers without valid licenses or those who never got around to renewing their clunker's registration.

In writing for the court, Justice Byron R. White stressed that Delaware and other states are free to develop "methods for spot checks that involve less intrusion or that do not involve the unconstrained exercise of discretion."

For example, he suggested police might stop all traffic at roadblock-type stops. Two other justices suggested police might stop every 10th car that passes a certain point.

Those practices would eliminate the possibility that a particular police officer might stop only cars driven by blacks, or teen-agers, or senior citizens.

Justice William H. Rehnquist dissented. He said the court's belief that many cars stopped is better than one car stopped appeared based not on constitutional matters but on the old adage "misery loves company."

In separate decisions Tuesday, the court:

—Sidestepped potentially far-reaching issues in a racial bias case from Los Angeles that offered the justices an opportunity to examine racial quotas in hiring. The court voted 5-4 that a case involving the recruitment of blacks and Hispanics for the Los Angeles County Fire Department no longer is a live controversy.

—Ruled unanimously that the government has no implied right of way on privately owned lands granted in the past to the nation's railroads. The decision in a Wyoming test case affects property rights on 150 million acres of land in Western states.

N.C. House Tentatively Votes Minimum Pay Hike

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state House tentatively approved a measure Tuesday that would raise the state's minimum wage to $2.75 an hour, an increase of 25 cents.

The bill was approved by a vote of 88-19, but final House action was delayed until at least today.

The House approved the measure after turning back attempts to raise the rate further and after removing a provision that would have excluded 16-year-olds and 17-year-olds from the minimum wage benefits.

"North Carolina's average wage is 49th in the nation," said Rep. Ernest Messer, D-Haywood, who led the fight to raise the wage even higher. "People in North Carolina deserve better than that."

If the increase is implemented, North Carolina's minimum wage will still remain below the federal rate of $2.90 an hour. The federal minimum, which covers most private business employees, automatically rises to $3.10 in 1980 and $3.75 in 1981.

The North Carolina minimum wage affects about 230,000 people not covered by federal law. Of that number, 30,000 are currently earning the minimum amount and stand to get a raise from the legislation, according to Rep. John Jordan, D-Alamance, the bill's sponsor.

The state's minimum now excludes those under 16 years of age. Jordan's bill would have raised that exclusion to 18. But Messer's amendment to include 16- and 17-year-olds was approved 57-50.

"People will use sweatshop labor if you let them use it," he said. "We say put young people to work and they'll stay out of meanness, yet we let everyone take advantage of them."

A legislator who favored raising the age limit was Rep. Eugene Merritt, D-NewHanover. "There're not very many 16- and 17-year-olds that are worth that amount," he said.

In other legislative business:

Ticket Scalping
The House Judiciary I Committee approved a bill which would legalize service charges on tickets to events such as concerts and sporting meets.

The measure would legalize the small 25- and 50-cent service charges that facilities in Greensboro, Raleigh and Fayetteville are now levying.

The bill, which now goes to the full House, would also make the scalping of tickets to any event a violation of the law.

Current North Carolina law prohibits scalping of tickets to sporting events and musical concerts. Some of the state's coliseums and convention centers are violating the state's ticket-scalping law by levying a small service charge on tickets to such events.

The bill, introduced by Rep. Mary Seymour, D-Guilford, would make it against the law to scalp, or charge more than the face value, for tickets to any events at coliseums and conventions centers.

With the way the law is written now, charging anything more than the face value of a ticket or the price printed on it, is in violation of the scalping regulation.

Rep. Bill McMillan, D-Iredell, failed in an attempt to amend the bill to include a maximum amount for the service charge.

If the bill is enacted it would go into effect Oct. 1.

Alcohol Cutoff
A Senate committee rejected a move by the House to further restrict the hours that beer and mixed drinks may be sold in North Carolina.

The Senate Alcoholic Beverage Committee gave its approval to a proposal making minor changes in state liquor laws that the House passed earlier. But the committee eliminated a section inserted by the House that would have restricted the hours when alcoholic beverages may be sold.

Current state law permits the sale of beer and wine until 1 a.m. during Eastern Standard Time and until 2 a.m. during Eastern Daylight Time.

The bill was originally designed to set a uniform cutoff time of 2 a.m. throughout the year. But when the bill came before the House earlier this month, the deadline was changed to 1 a.m.

The Senate committee amended the House-approved bill so that the current hours of sales — until 2 a.m. during daylight savings time and until 1 a.m. during winter months — would be retained. The measure now goes to the full Senate for action.

Beaches
The House Finance Committee approved a bill that would allow the towns of Carolina Beach and Wrightsville Beach to charge an additional 1 percent sales tax. The towns want the tax to raise money to fight beach erosion.

The bill now goes to the full House for consideration and must be ratified by the voters in the two towns if approved by the legislature.

Taxes
A House finance subcommittee dealing with income-tax bills has given its approval to a bill that would exempt persons age 75 or older from the state income tax.

The bill now joins the multitude of other tax proposals before the full House Finance Committee.

Child Care
The House finance subcommittee also sent the full committee a bill that would simplify the procedure for filing income-tax deductions for child-care costs.

The bill would bring the state's child-care deductions in line with federal regulations and remove the current income limitation for the deductions. A person or couple with an income of $24,000 or more cannot deduct child-care costs under present law.

Sex Discrimination
Rep. Martin Lancaster, D-Wayne, filed two bills Tuesday that would eliminate certain laws that discriminate on the basis of sex.

The first would equalize the right to income, possession and control of property owned jointly by married persons. As the law now stands, the husband is entitled to the control, use, possession, rents, income and profits of jointly owned real estate.

The second bill would equalize the disposal of property left when one spouse kills the other. State law says that if a wife kills her husband, half of their jointly owned property passes to the husband's estate and half remains with her during her lifetime.

TOM POGUE STUDIOS IS SOMETHING ELSE

Today, the major concern in pictures is price. At Tom Pogue Studios, the major concern is quality.

Today, the biggest share of the picture market is held by a few big companies that work in the big discount store chains. This creates a rapid turnover in their camera operators. It also means that with a few weeks training, a new employee is -presto- a photographer.

In order to "keep it simple" the big chains have chosen a lighting system with one light over the camera. This gives a flat evenly lighted picture. Tom Pogue Studios uses a multiple lighting system to produce the famous Rembrandt lighting pattern. This same lighting technique is used by famous portrait painters.

To cut costs, the biggest company of all uses a cheaper imported paper, Tom Pogue Studios uses Kodak, the world's leader. Tom Pogue prints his pictures one at a time by the slower projection method, while others use the multiple lens clusters and package print them up to nine at a time. The quality shows it.

Most of the low priced packages are sold sight unseen, take them or leave them. Tom Pogue Studios shows you proofs with a variety of poses that can even include the popular double exposure fantasies. You choose the pose that fits your need.

Tom Pogue Studios is coming to Greenville at the Western Auto Tuesday, April 3 for one day only. To introduce everyone to their finer portraits they are having an introductory price sale. You can buy one 16 by 20 color portrait in a semi-glossy finish plus two 8 by 10's lifetime finish, all three portraits bust vignette style, for only $6.95.

Pay the photographer $2.95 down payment plus $1 sitting fee. Then look at your proofs and enjoy the feeling of going first class at budget prices.

How N.C. Congressmen Voted

By Roll Call Report
WASHINGTON — Here's how area House members were recorded on major roll call votes March 15 through March 21. There were no Senate votes.

HOUSE
WAGE COUNCIL — The House passed, 242 for and 175 against, a bill (HR 2283) extending the life of the Council on Wage and Price Stability for one year, increasing the council's annual budget to $8.48 million and expanding its staff from 39 to 233. The council, a White House adjunct, monitors President Carter's wage and price guidelines. It lacks authority to impose wage and price controls. The bill was sent to the Senate.

Rep. William Moorhead, D-Pa., a supporter, said: "A vote against this bill amounts to throwing up your hands in despair—or else putting all your chips on a very restrictive fiscal and monetary policy with all of the accompanying risks or recession or worse. To me the choice seems very clear."

Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., an opponent, said: "Only in the wonderland that is the Congress...could we possibly think we are addressing the problem of inflation by not only extending...an agency that is virtually useless and ought to be abolished, but by increasing its budget by 300 per cent... and its staff from 39 permanent employees to 233."

Members voting "yea" wanted to keep the Council on Wage and Price Stability in operation.

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, Ike Andrews, D-4, and James Martin, R-9, voted "nay."

COMMITTEE OVERLAP — The House voted, 208 for and 200 against, to create a "select committee" whose mission is to examine the House committee structure and recommend ways to make it less cumbersome. With an estimated annual budget of $500,000, the new panel will address the problem of overlapping jurisdictions that makes it difficult for the House to hone in on national problems such as energy and inflation. In recent years the House has made similar attempts at streamlining itself, but with little success.

Rep. Richard Bolling, D-Mo., a supporter, said "I hope" that as a result of the select committee's work "we may have a more efficient committee structure." Opponents generally thought this new committee was itself an example of the bureaucratic overlapping it seeks to combat. "Why do we need to create a new committee to do exactly the same things we gave the Committee on Rules more money to do less than two weeks ago?"

asked Rep. Dan Lungren, R-Calif.

Members voting "yea" favored creation of a special committee on committees. Jones, Whitley, Andrews, Preyer, Rose, Hefner, Martin and Broyhill voted "yea." Fountain, Neal and Gudger voted "nay."

BALANCED BUDGET — In a vote of 201 for and 199 against, the House decided to not allow a budget-balancing amendment to be offered to the debt ceiling bill. The effect of the vote was to turn away the proposed amendment, which sought to require Congress to balance the federal budget beginning in fiscal 1981, unless by a two-thirds majority Congress permitted a deficit in a given fiscal year. This vote came prior to passage of HR 2534, which raised the national debt ceiling to $830 billion through September. HR 2534 was sent to the Senate.

Members voting "yea" argued that the debt-ceiling bill was the improper vehicle for a balanced-budget amendment. Rep. Joseph Fisher, D-Va., said "the correct way to deal with (a balanced budget) is in connection with the budget resolution, and even more, in connection with the appropriation measures...."

Rep. James Jones, R-Okla., who voted "nay," said: "The only way an alcoholic can become sober and stay sober...is to put a cork in the bottle and quit drinking."

Members voting "nay" wanted an opportunity to offer their budget-balancing amendment to the debt ceiling bill.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer and Hefner voted "yea."

Martin and Broyhill voted "nay." Rose did not vote.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are expected for the period until Thursday morning from the central Gulf into the Midwest and for most of the East. Snow is due from the southern Plains to the Great Lakes and showers for the Pacific Northwest coast. Snow is expected for Montana. Warm weather will prevail in the Southeast but most of the country will be cool. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press
A mixture of sunshine and clouds was forecast for North Carolina today, but warmer weather is on the way. A warm front is expected to move across the state Thursday, bringing southerly winds and warmer air, and plenty of sunshine. The warmer temperatures will last into the weekend. Temperatures today were expected to range from the upper 50s to the upper 60s. Thursday's readings are expected to range mostly in the 70s and similar highs should prevail through the weekend.

A cold front that will be slowly moving through the Mississippi Valley Thursday and Friday will bring a threat of showers over the mountains Thursday and other western sections over the weekend.

An area of weak low pressure moved east from Tennessee Tuesday, spreading cloudiness across the western and northern sections of the state. First Boone had a dusting of light snow. Then light rain spread from the mountains into the northern Piedmont.

High temperatures Tuesday were varied, ranging from the 40s in the northwest mountains, to the 50s in the southern mountains and across the northern Piedmont to the coast. The southern Piedmont east to the south coast had highs in the 60s.

New Bern had one of the day's warmest readings with 67 degrees.

Marvins' Case Winding Down

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After 11 weeks of tears and accusations, lawyers for Lee Marvin and Michelle Triola Marvin have rested their cases with the former lovers giving final testimony in a Hollywood-style trial that is far from over.

Still ahead are legal briefs and final arguments in the battle over Marvin's millions.

But for the stars of the courtroom drama — the 55-year-old actor and the 46-year-old former cabaret singer who added Marvin's name to her own — Tuesday's testimony ended a struggle to resurrect bitter memories of a love affair that soured nine years ago.

"It was worth it," said Miss Marvin, who sued Marvin for a $1.8 million, half the fortune he accumulated during the six years they lived together.

Miss Marvin, who frequently wept over the baring of lurid scenes in open court, said the precedent set by her lawsuit would help unmarried couples everywhere.

"I think that now people going into relationships such as I had — people living together and sharing their lives — will give it a lot of thought," she said.

The California Supreme

Allen attributed the shift to increased lumber, tobacco and container business, and said it could have the port breaking even next year.

Also at the meeting, the SPA approved expenditures of nearly $500,000 for work on facilities at the Morehead City port — including an extension of one shed, construction of another and replacement of a sprinkler system.

Authority members and officials discussed a walkout incident on the Morehead City dock Sunday night, which has led to the firing of one cargo crane operator and the impending dismissal of a second operator.

R.F. Goins, director of the Morehead City Port, said the walkout stemmed from a disagreement over how much pay the two operators were entitled to for work Sunday night.

The walkout left 18 containers of cargo sitting on the Morehead City dock while the ship scheduled to carry the containers "sailed into the night," State Ports Authority Chairman Thomas F. Taft said Tuesday.

The operators were not identified. Taft said one of the men had already been fired and the other one would be officially dismissed if he returned to work. Declaring the walkout was an "event of drastic consequence," Taft said it could leave a bad impression with shipping companies.

"Sunday night was a blow to everything we're trying to do at Morehead City and both ports, for that matter," he said, referring to Wilmington, the state's other port.

Last year, the Ports Authority approved moving the $2.6 million containerized cargo crane from Morehead City to Wilmington, with the decision based on figures which showed a lack of business at Morehead City.

Morehead City supporters tried to get the decision reversed.

But Leonard Safrit, a member of the Morehead City Port Committee who attended the meeting Tuesday said it was too late to halt the moving of the crane.

"That particular crane is gone," Safrit said after the meeting. "There's no way on God's green earth to keep it."

But Safrit offered the Authority projected figures of containerized cargo activity at Morehead which were higher than figures from a Ports Authority study last year.

"We're not trying to get a crane. If we get more containerized business, then the crane will follow," Safrit said after the meeting.

He said improvements at Morehead City, approved by the Ports Authority Tuesday, would help business because they should eliminate some of the overcrowding at Morehead City during times when tobacco shipments flood the port.

Clean-Up Day Set By Pitt Farm Bureau Bd.

Saturday, March 31, has been designated as "Clean Up Day" by the Pitt County Farm Bureau Women as announced Tuesday at a meeting of the Pitt County Farm Bureau Board of Directors.

According to Mrs. Wilbur Worthington, member of the women's committee, the group is concerned about the litter on the county rural roads.

"The broken bottles and tin cans, which will soon be hidden in the grass on the shoulders of the road, could cause serious accidents to joggers, bicyclists and many other people," said Mrs. Worthington.

Special guests at the dinner meeting included Judge Robert Wheeler, Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson, C. W. Snell of the North Carolina Department of Transportation, Willie Pate of the Pitt County Health Department and the Pitt County Board of Commissioners.

According to Judge Wheeler, the North Carolina law declares that a $200 per day fine can be levied against any litterer, as long as the litter remains on the road. Pate added that the Health Department has a full-time employee to track down litterers.

Sheriff Tyson noted that county deputies had been encouraged to enforce the litter law. Snell reported that $60 million tax dollars went toward cleaning up the highways last year. He added that an education program is needed to teach persons that littering is expensive.

Reginald Gray of the Pitt County Commissioners reported that when the county project is complete, a total of 21 dump sites will be offered to Pitt County citizens.

The Farm Bureau Women will solicit the help of all interested area citizens in participating in the county-wide clean up project Saturday.

Early Presidential Primary Is Killed

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —

North Carolina's 1980 presidential primary will not be among the earliest in the nation or even in the South.

The state House overwhelmingly rejected Tuesday a measure that would have made North Carolina's primary one of the first, voting 85-24 to kill a bill that would have moved the primary date to March.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. David Diamond, D-Surry, would have separated the presidential primary from the primary elections for state offices — such as governor, U.S. Senate and Congress.

But the bill's defeat means the state's presidential primary will be held with the other primary elections, scheduled for the first Tuesday after the first Monday in May.

The March date, Diamond argued, would have made North Carolina the first southern state to hold its primary election, and would have given North Carolina more influence in the 1980 nominations.

It would cause campaign money to be spent inside the state, and would have forced candidates to be staked out early on local issues, such as tobacco, he said.

"If it's in May, I question

what effect it will have at all," said Diamond.

But the measure was opposed by those who said the cost of a separate primary — at least $725,000 — was too high, and that voters would rather decide all the races at the same time.

"I think we ought to be concerned about getting as large a turnout as we can," said Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir.

Rep. Ernest Messer, D-Haywood, said an earlier presidential primary would make it more difficult for legislative and statewide candidates to raise money.

"We're hurting ourselves if we do this," said Rep. Ernest Messer, D-Haywood. "North Carolina more than paid for the last primary. It did put money in circulation, but it put it in the wrong pockets."

In 1976, North Carolina held its presidential vote in March and its primary for statewide offices in August. The summer vote proved unpopular among legislators, however, and the date was switched back to May by the 1977 legislature.

In the 1976 primary, North Carolina proved pivotal in boosting Ronald Reagan's nomination hopes by giving him a victory over then-President Ford. And it gave President Carter a southern victory over George Wallace.

North Carolina's first presidential primary was held in 1972, when Wallace defeated former Gov. Terry Sanford.

Even with a May primary, North Carolina will still be an early southern state in the presidential sweepstakes, said Rep. Martin Lancaster, D-Wayne. There are currently 10 states scheduled to have primaries earlier than the May date, and 16 after it, he said.

Of the earlier ones, Lancaster said, Florida is the only southern state.

Ingram Raps New Bill On Regulation

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —

State Insurance Commissioner John Ingram Tuesday objected to a bill on regulation of life insurance companies only a few hours after he had adopted rules that would do virtually the same thing the legislation would.

Ingram told a Senate legislation panel that the bill they approved Tuesday was less consumer-oriented than the regulations he had adopted.

Both proposals require life insurance companies to provide customers with information comparing their policies with others on the market.

The committee unanimously gave the proposed bill a favorable report and sent it to the Senate floor, despite a request by Ingram and Deputy Commissioner Ken Brown that the bill be considered at a public hearing and by an insurance subcommittee.

The bill was introduced by Sen. Bob Wynne, D-Wake. Brown said that although the proposed legislation does not contain specific language prohibiting the commissioner from adopting his own regulations, it will prevent the enforcement of those regulations if enacted.

"You have to go on the assumption that if they enact a statute that sets forth how a particular thing should be done, and the commissioner implements regulations, an injunction would be sought by companies to prevent him from enforcing the regulations," Brown said.

Wynne said his bill is patterned after a policy adopted by the National Association of Insurance Commissioners that has been accepted in 19 states.

Both proposals require companies to furnish a buyer's guide with comparative information on relative costs of policies offered by various companies. Both also require agents to give buyers 10 days to cancel a policy at no cost.

At a news conference earlier Tuesday, Ingram said his rules would make North Carolina a pioneer in the field of insurance regulation.

But industry spokesman came out in favor of Wynne's bill, saying that since it is modeled after the regulations adopted by the national association, it would give uniformity to the life insurance regulations.

Says Prices Trail Trend

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) —

Prices of gasoline have not even kept up with inflation during the past four years, according to an official of the North Carolina Energy Institute.

Dr. James Bresee, director of the institute at the Research Triangle Park, added that the fuel situation is not going to get any better soon.

"The world shortage is real," he said. "And even if it isn't, the people who control the resources believe it is and that's important."

Bresee said the United States "out of sheer prudence" needs to expect the worst to happen in the fuel crisis.

"Our energy policy ought to be based on resiliency," he said. "If we assume there is a lot of oil, that the energy crisis is all a hoax, and we're wrong, it could be devastating."

"If we assume we do not have much and we're wrong, it's a very pleasant surprise," he said.

The transition in the United States to a new economy based on more expensive petroleum and other fuels is painful, Bresee added. But he said progress is being made and there are signs for hope in the future.

The nation's yearly percent of growth in total energy used dropped from an average of 5.3 percent annually between 1950 and 1973 to 2.6 percent in 1977 and 1.8 percent last year.

"We need to shoot for 2 percent or under in total energy use per year in total energy use," Bresee said.

Awards Earned By Pitt's Young GOP

WINSTON-SALEM — The Pitt County Young Republican Club received several awards at the annual convention of the North Carolina Federation of Young Republicans held there this past weekend.

The Pitt Young Republican group was first runner-up for Best Club of the Year honors, while the Pitt club chairman, Jackie Speight, was named the 1978-1979 Club Chairman of the Year.

Speight was elected chairman of the club in 1978 and is currently serving his second term. In addition to his duties as head of the Pitt club, Speight also served as First District director.

The county's secretary, Mrs. Harriet W. Speight was named the 1978-1979 Young Republican Women of the Year. She was an active member of the Wake County Young Republican Club for a number of years before moving to Pitt County, and served as chairman of the 1978 NCFYR Platform Convention.

Oklahoma's Republican Congressman Mickie Edwards was the featured speaker at the awards banquet. Other guests included N.C. Republican Party chairman Jack Lee, Republican members of the N.C. General Assembly, and several members of the National Young Republican Committee.

Pitt Teen Dems Capture Honors

APEX — The Pitt County Teen Democrats won several honors this weekend at the state annual spring convention here.

Chapter members Gigi Branch and Hannah Taft were voted as two of the top ten Teen Dems in the state.

Chapter member Jane Welborn won a $250 scholarship as first place honors for her essay, "The North Carolina Democratic Heritage."

Teresa Little was elected as secretary of the state association, with Michael Brohawn as first district chairman.

The county chapter also won the attendance award.

Gov. James B. Hunt spoke at a luncheon Saturday. Former Governors Terry Sanford and Bob Scott were guests at a banquet Saturday night.

Pursues A Balanced Federal Budget Requirement

JAMES DAVIDSON has been trying for five years to get the Constitution amended to require a balanced budget. He believes the 34 states needed to trigger a convention will be achieved this year. (UPI Photo)

By DONALD H. MAY
WASHINGTON (UPI) — James Davidson sees his labor of love — getting the constitution amended to require a balanced federal budget — as something like releasing the handbrake of a car parked on a hill: “It’s going to roll and gather momentum.”

Davidson, founder and chairman of the National Taxpayers Union, was a somewhat lonely voice when he began pursuing this goal five years ago — “I had to really flog people to get them to support the notion.”

Now 28 states have called for a constitutional convention to write a budget-balancing amendment. Davidson believes the 34 states needed to trigger a convention will be achieved this year, and toward that he is working 16 hours a day.

This momentum is in a sense “inevitable,” he told UPI, because federal deficits (which have occurred in all but eight of the years since 1930) are “impoverishing” the American people, and the people are determined to fight back.

“Many of America’s

economic problems — inflation, instability, low productivity — can be traced to chronic deficit spending by the federal government,” NTU said in a recent newspaper advertisement, adding that deficits have “helped erode the value of the dollar.”

As a result of inflation, it said, the average family’s real income after taxes and inflation has declined in the last decade.

“What’s more, inflation, caused largely by deficit-spending, has pushed Americans into higher and higher tax brackets — dramatically increasing the tax burden...”

In a recent article, Davidson added that a balanced budget would force reduction of government waste and keep federal borrowing from competing with private credit so as to raise interest rates.

Requiring a balanced budget, he said, would “preserve the civic virtues of democracy” because “these cannot be maintained through long-protracted inflation.”

budget during a recession would make the recession worse.

Davidson replies that most deficits of the last 50 years have not resulted from efforts to ward off recession: “We mostly had imbalance anyway. It was not because of the political vision of our leaders. They will never say we’re going into a recession.”

Charles Schultze, chairman of the president’s Council of Economic Advisers, calls a balanced budget requirement “a charade” in which bureaucrats would put more programs in special categories outside the budget.

Davidson says his critics can’t have it “both ways” — claiming a mandatory balanced budget would be meaningless and also that it would be a “straitjacket.”

“The whole free world is teetering at the brink of a financial crisis brought on by this fiscal and monetary irresponsibility which has its roots in the desire of Congress to spend more than it can afford,” Davidson told UPI, “and unless we bring this house into order, establish responsibility here, we are going to have a tremendous crisis, which I think will really shake the foundation of the republic and the western world.”

Denmark Could Also Be Known As 'Jensenland'

EDITOR’S NOTE — Ole Duus only wrote this story because his name is Ole Duus. It’s not Jensen, Nielsen or Hansen. In fact, not a “sen” anywhere. That makes him pretty unusual among his Danish countrymen. It also means he probably won’t get to be prime minister.

By OLE DUUS
Associated Press Writer
COPENHAGEN (AP) — “What’s in a name?” is a good question not to ask in Denmark. The answer is “not much,” especially if you’re a bill collector, a postman, or, heaven help you, looking for someone named Jensen.

Consider these national bursts of nominal originality: —Half this nation of 5 million share 14 family names. —Sixty percent of Danish names end in “sen.” —There are only 85,000 family names in the whole country.

The Copenhagen telephone book is of enormous help. Let’s say you wanted to look up a Jensen, Hansen or Nielsen. There are 32,000 of each.

It’s a national problem the government has been trying to solve since the late 19th century, when there were 9,000 family names for 2.5 million Danes. Problems arise. The mailman in a small Jutland village could not possibly know which of the five Carl Petersens the sender meant. So the postmaster forced the villagers to name the streets and assign house numbers for the first time.

It’s also led to some inventive titles that have followed their bearers to the graves. Tombstones mark the final resting place of “Mr. Managing Director Jensen,” lest he be confused with “Mr. Unskilled Worker Jensen.”

But the computer has got their number — if not their names — straight. All Danes now have a personal registration number, without which one cannot open a bank account or see a doctor.

The irony of all this is that the Danes became the Jensens, Nielsens more or less by mistake. Originally, they had a rich tradition of individualized Viking surnames, many unfit for translation. But for those with only a smattering of Anglo-Saxon, meet Harold Bluetooth, Magnus Wagarse and good old Ragnvald Longtwaddle.

But the Danes were slower than other Europeans in establishing regular family names and took to convenient patronymics, making the son of Jens a Jensen, and the Neil kid a Neilsen.

Then the bureaucrats took over to bring administrative order to a growing mess of surnames that everybody was inventing. A royal baptismal ordinance in 1828 made it compulsory for all children to be given a lasting family name.

Trouble was, most rural vicars got that all wrong. They insisted on patronymics — the “sens” — although any name was eligible. Nobody cared much, however, since the unofficial name — the inventive one — was still what counted in the villages.

In 1856, a government decree said all family names given since 1828 must be lasting for all future generations. Suddenly, tens of thousands of Danes were stuck with what they had considered inconsequential patronymics.

The Danes had become Jensens and Nielsens for good.

Gordon Alboe of the Name Research Institute of the University of Copenhagen is lobbying for a name-law reform that would allow Danes to take any name already borne by more than 100 living Danes or the name of any Danish place.

But he’s doubtful it would do much good.

“The enormity of the project rules out an investigation into why so few Danes use the opportunities to individualize their names,” Alboe said. “My own suspicion is that many would like to but fear that friends and relatives would call them snobs.”

The prime minister is a plain Joergensen and in a 20-member cabinet he has two Hansens and two Jensens, along with an Andersen, an Olsen, a Christiansen, a Jacobsen, a Mathiasen and a Heinsen.

Chairman Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, of the Senate Budget Committee, opposes any flat requirement for a balanced budget.

One trouble, Muskie said in a recent speech, is that “constitutional amendments can’t balance the economy.”

When unemployment rises only one percentage point, he said, $20 billion automatically is added to the deficit through lost taxes and increased aid to individuals. Muskie said President Gerald Ford pledged a $9 billion deficit for 1975, but in three months a recession forced him to raise his estimate to $35 billion.

President Carter proposes a $29 billion deficit in 1980. But Muskie said a $29 billion spending cut wouldn’t balance that budget because the economic effects would reduce tax receipts. It would take a $45 billion cut to balance the 1980 budget, he said, and cost more than a million jobs.

(Davidson says his proposal would phase in a balanced budget over several years.)

Vice President Walter Mondale told a group of mayors the nation had balanced budgets in the 1920s and this “busted millions of farmers, millions of business people and ... put millions of Americans out of work.”

“There are times,” Mondale said, “when we need a deficit in order to stimulate this nation’s economy.”

Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal says a balanced budget requirement would put economic planners in a “straitjacket.”

Alice Rivlin, director of the Congressional Budget Office, said cutting spending or raising taxes to balance a WARRENSVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Quadraplegic artist Edgar Bailey says, “Drawing now makes me feel like I have a hand. It’s a good feeling.”

Bailey, 35, who has been bed-ridden for 20 years, has developed a technique of drawing with a pen or pencil held in his teeth.

An avid sports fan, Bailey had hopes of a career as a boxer before he fell from a roof and broke his neck and back, losing the use of his arms and legs. Now he does portraits of sports figures. He has also done landscapes and still-life works.

“I’m never satisfied with my work,” Bailey said. “I always think I can do better.”

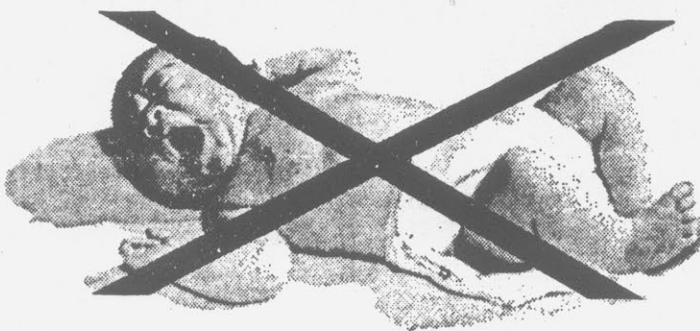

But he has had several showings and has sold a number of works.

For the past seven years he has been a resident of the Sunny Acres Nursing Facility in this Cleveland suburb. He said he had begun his art career when he had become bored at one of the many nursing homes where he has lived.

“Before I came here to Sunny Acres, I was at a nursing home that had no windows in my room, no television or radio,” he said. “I asked a nurse to give me a pencil and paper so I could write a letter.”

“I couldn’t think of anything to write so I started scribbling a tree. A couple of people told me it looked nice and that’s when it started.”

To Lecture On Africa

Dr. Robert Burger, Dept. of Anthropology, East Carolina University, will be guest lecturer in the next of the ongoing series of “Great Decisions Lectures” at ECU.

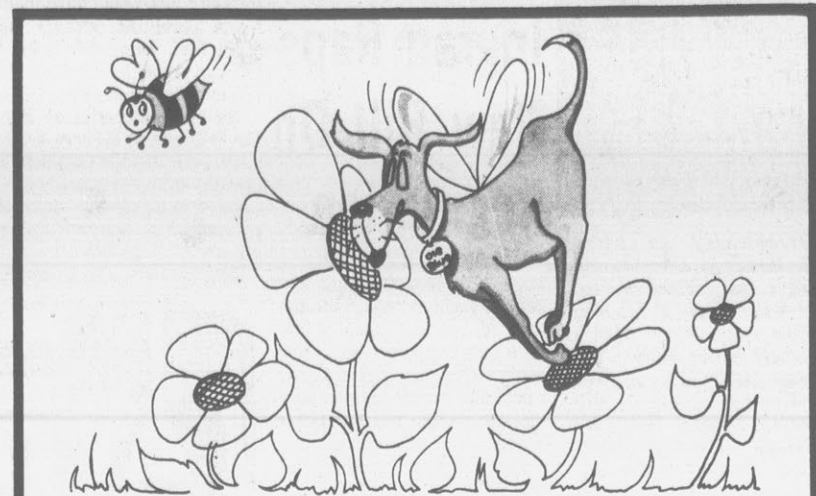

The lecture will begin at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, March 29 and will be held in Room 210 of the Belk Building (Allied Health Center near Pitt Plaza).

“Black Africa: More Weight in U.S. Policy Scales” is to be Dr. Burger’s topic. He will touch on recent developments such as that until 1975, when Soviet-armed Cuban poured into newly independent Angola, the U.S. had generally given low priority to black Africa. Since then, the expanding Soviet-Cuban role from Angola to the Horn has fixed the attention of U.S. policymakers on Africa’s own problems as well as its significance in the world power balance.

The public is invited to attend this and other lectures in the series, and there is no admission charged.

Importing More Champagne

NEW YORK (UPI) — Americans apparently are sipping more bubbly than ever. The French champagne industry says 1978 exports to the United States in 1978 broke all previous records. Exports last year were 7.169 million bottles, a 48.5 percent increase over 1977. The Champagne News & Information Bureau says a 20 percent increase occurred in 1977 and a 40.5 percent increase in 1978.

U.S. Not A Party To Complex Peace Agreement

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — With the historic Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty about to be signed, here are some questions and answers on the historic pact, which Jimmy Carter, Anwar Sadat and Menachem Begin will initial Monday.

Q: What, exactly, is the treaty?

A: The treaty is a package that returns the Sinai to Egypt in return for peace and diplomatic relations with Israel. It also commits the two sides to try to solve the Palestinian problem under the Camp David framework.

The package includes a 10-article treaty of peace, with three "annexes." The first annex sets the withdrawal schedule for Israeli forces and limits Egyptian troops allowed back into the Sinai; the second consists of maps of the area; the third spells out the types of normal relations, such as airline flights, the two will have.

In addition, there is a side letter, in which Israel and Egypt agree to negotiate continually and in good faith on the autonomy plan for the West Bank and Gaza Strip, with the "goal" of completing the negotiations within a year.

One side document says that Egypt, after satisfying its domestic needs, has to accept bids from Israel for its Sinai oil.

There are also "minutes of understanding" in which the two sides agree to interpretations of the articles in the treaty.

Q: Is the United States a party to the treaty?

A: No. It is being signed in Washington partly because of the U.S. role in negotiating it and partly because it is a "neutral site" acceptable to both Israel and Egypt.

Q: Are there any other agreements in this package?

A: There will be a "memorandum of assurances" related to, but not part of, the treaty. In it, the United States will guarantee Israel a 15-year supply of oil in case Israel is unable to obtain it on the world market; it will also give Israel assurances of political support if the treaty is broken.

Q: Are there any secret agreements?

A: The administration says not; unlike the 1975 memo with Israel, this year's will be made public when it is completed.

Q: How much will the package cost the United States?

A: No definite figure is available. Israel will get $2.2 billion in loans and $800 million in grants to pay for its withdrawal from the Sinai. The United States normally does not require Israel to repay all of its loans.

Egypt may get $1.5 billion to $2 billion in military aid, with the mix of grants and loans undecided. In addition, there will likely be an economic development program for Egypt, perhaps with support from Western Europe and Japan, of undetermined cost.

Q: Why did it take so long after Camp David to negotiate this treaty?

A: The main reason was Egypt's desire to make the treaty contingent on a satisfactory solution to the West Bank and Gaza Strip Palestinian autonomy negotiations. Israel resisted, and President Carter had to visit the two countries to get them to compromise.

Q: Has Egypt's insistence on the tie impressed other Arab nations?

A: If it has, they have not said so publicly. They have been critical of Egypt's position ever since Camp David. Basically, they say Egypt has made a "separate deal" and betrayed the Arab cause.

It has removed the largest Arab nation as a military threat to Israel, without getting guarantees in return that the Arabs will get back the West Bank, Gaza or East Jerusalem and that the Palestinians will be entitled to form a state.

One key Arab leader, King Hussein of Jordan, is supposed to help represent the Palestinians in the autonomy negotiations. He has refused, saying he is certain the Camp David process will not work.

Other Arab states, led by Iraq and Syria, are calling for an Arab summit to consider sanctions against Egypt for signing the treaty.

The administration has been telling these Arabs not to foreclose their options; it is saying that the Camp David process, while it has no guarantees, in the long run is their only practical alternative.

Q: What happens next?

A: Within a month, Egypt and Israel are supposed to start negotiations on electing a Palestinian council for the West Bank and Gaza, and on what its authority should be. They have vowed to try to finish those talks within a year.

The Camp David framework envisions that elected council becoming the local governing body for the two areas, with Israeli troops pulled back into specified areas.

After five years, it expects that the parties involved will agree on the ultimate status of the territories.

Meanwhile, Israel is supposed to start a three-year withdrawal from the Sinai. At certain points during that time, ambassadors are to be exchanged and economic and cultural exchanges start.

Q: Will the plan work?

A: Administration officials say they don't know. The negotiators will have to settle issues which have bedeviled the region for 30 years.

For example, do the Arabs in East Jerusalem get to vote for the autonomy plan? If they do, does that imply that East Jerusalem is part of the West Bank? Israel insists that it is Israeli land and can never be returned.

And what happens to Israel's settlements? What about water rights? What about lands the Arabs feel have been illegally taken from them by the Israelis since 1967? What if the Palestine Liberation Organization enforces a boycott? What if it insists on participating and Israel refuses?

Q: What if it fails?
A: Again, no one knows. Some have suggested that it is highly unlikely that the negotiators will reach agreement by the end of a year. If they do not, the entire peace process, including the treaty, would be jeopardized.

At that point, according to the annexes, Egypt would have regained about two-thirds of the Sinai, including its oil fields. And each government would have to weigh its option for itself.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

A Case of Precocious Puberty

I have noticed that my 11-year-old boy seems to be prematurely developed. I don't want to call this to his attention and make him feel he is different from other boys his age. However, my wife and I are concerned about this. We don't know how to handle it. Should we just ignore it? — Mr. T.P., Minn.

Dear Mr. P.:

There are, of course, many variations in the maturation process of children. Some show evidence of sexual development at an earlier age than others.

However, it is relatively simple to have your son tested to be sure there is no underlying hormonal imbalance to account for this unusual, if not rare, physical precociousness. Laboratory studies, X-rays of the skull and the long bones, steroid evaluation and hormone balance can give evidence of any abnormality that may exist. If any unusual findings become evident, the underlying cause can be pinpointed, and corrective measures instituted.

If your son's precocious puberty lies within the range of normalcy, your doctor can help direct your approach to a discussion with your son so the boy will not be self-conscious of any differences between him and his age-group peers.

I have a deviated septum of the nose. I'm afraid to have the operation to correct it because I worry that it will change the shape of my nose. Can a deviation be corrected without an operation? — Miss Y.R., Del.

Dear Miss R.:

The nasal septum divides one side of the nose from the other. Rarely, if ever, do doctors find that a septum is completely straight. In other words, almost everybody has a slight deviation of the septum.

"Why, then, should the septum ever be operated on?" you may well ask. When the nasal septum is so deviated that it presses on other vital structures of the nose (turbinates), or when the deviation interferes with comfortable breathing, there may be a clear-cut indication for surgery.

Sometimes, patients who have allergic reactions in the nose develop swelling of the nasal tissue. This, in combination with a deviated septum, may virtually block the nose and make breathing very difficult.

The front of the nasal septum is made up of cartilage. The back portion is made up of a thin, flat bone. It is impossible to change the position of the nasal septum without surgery. For cartilage bounces back to its original position. Therefore, no non-surgical manipulation can straighten it.

The operation, known as a "sub-mucous resection" of the nose, will not affect the outward appearance of the nose in any way.

Fall Off Truck Lucky For Pig

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Petunia the Pig met her good fortune by falling off a truck on its way to the stockyards.

The policemen who found the 250-pound pig couldn't find the owner, so they took her to an animal hospital. Still no one claimed her and she was offered for sale at an auction.

Lloyd Moorhead, a veterinary technician at the hospital, found a soft spot in his heart for the pig.

"The fall off the truck was enough trauma for her," he said. "She's had enough misfortune."

He bid $113.50 and was awarded the pig.

He keeps her on the farm of another hospital employee. "She'll live happily ever after," he said.

MYSTERY SOLVED

Keepers who drained the pool found the reason — three sharks and a knife fish had apparently been dumped in by mistake when they were fingerlings.

growing." And rapid growth of ECU into a major, diversified university in terms of an enrollment of more than 12,500, faculty, facilities and programs indeed has been spectacular. Twenty years ago, for example, the combined offices of the director of admissions and registrar of then East Carolina Teachers College (ECTC) handled only about 1,800 admissions applications per year. This year, not counting the graduate schools, applications for admission total more than 10,000.

The baby booms which followed World War II and Korea were big contributing factors to the college enrollment pressure of the 60s and early 70s, Horne said.

"When it came, 18 and 19 years later the colleges were not equipped for it. They didn't have the dorms. Students were looking for any school which had the space for them," he said. And limited space continues to be a problem.

"The goal is to achieve a happy medium between quality and quantity," he says.

Horne also notes other factors. There is a "greatly different clientele today," he says. "Financial aid is available and has made a tremendous difference in enabling people to go to college."

"For someone who wants to go to college, if he will prepare himself in high school there's no reason in the world he cannot get a college education this day and time. Preparing himself is the key."

Horne, himself a teacher and professor for 44 years — tenured as a full professor in education — believes that today's "average" student doesn't have the "background in math, reading and grammar" of those of a few years ago.

"Certainly my interest in young people preparing for college and preparing well will not be diminished," Horne said. "It's a lifelong interest."

Recently he attended an occasion at Grainger High School in Kinston, N.C., and found the meeting in a third floor room. "It was the same room that housed the old chemistry lab where I began teaching, in chemistry and physics, and urging scholarship back in 1936," he recalls.

Born in Rocky Mount and raised in Spencer, N.C., Horne attended the University of Chicago and holds AB, MA and EdD degrees from UNC-Chapel Hill. He taught at Grainger for six years, at Polkton in Anson County for one year, served as principal at Grainger for 10 years and joined the East Carolina faculty as associate professor of education in 1957. In 1963, he became Dean of Admissions and the Office of Registrar was separated from Admissions.

been heard from Ayden-Grifton, as well as D. H. Conley.

It was noted during the discussion that the students at Ayden-Grifton were holding the dance to raise funds for paving the parking lot.

Associate Superintendent Tom Craft and School Finance Officer Dan Thomas presented a tentative current expense budget for fiscal year 1979-80 totaling $5,760,677. The total reflects a $668,126.63 difference from the 1978-79 total of $5,092,550.37.

A supporting maintenance request totaling $464,350 was recorded as a separate entity, earmarking funds for maintenance and repairs for all of the county schools.

Much discussion was heard over a separate "Plan B" budget, which would cover enrichment programs, some instructional materials, supplies, and in-service and staff development.

A figure of $31,300 set for remediation purposes in the "Plan B" budget was questioned by board members. According to Assistant Superintendent Kathryn Lewis, the item would probably be omitted in the final budget, since state monies would cover the remediation expenses.

Personnel should receive a seven percent increase in salary under the tentative budget, with increments for some elementary and high school teachers.

The board expressed a desire to increase the maintenance staff, with trainees to be hired under the present three head maintenance personnel.

A figure of $35,460 was noted in the budget to make up for the elimination of instructional fee charges for grades K-3, as set by the board in the regular March meeting.

According to Associate Superintendent Craft, the board has completed visitation of county schools. He asked members Tuesday to set priorities for the capital outlay budget to be discussed April 3.

Further work and possible finalization will be held on the current expense budget for 1979-80 at the Tuesday, April 3 meeting.

two children — John Jr., a Laurinburg attorney recently named one of five "Outstanding Young Men in North Carolina," by the Jaycees, and daughter, Ann, of New Orleans, La.

The Hornes will continue to make their home in Greenville. "We've lived in eastern North Carolina for 40 years or more — with the exception of World War II (Horne landed in Normandy June 6, 1944 and won six campaign stars, other decorations including the Bronze Star, Silver Star and Purple Heart) — and we see no reason to move away to Florida, or somewhere. Our friends are here."

So is East Carolina University and the young people the Hornes love.

"I'd like to see East Carolina with a multi-million dollar scholarship fund — 10 million — the proceeds of which would be used for academic scholarships — a million dollars a year. Think what could be done," he says.

Tributes to Horne were voiced by ECU Chancellor Thomas B. Brewer and by Dr. John M. Howell, Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs.

"I have known Dr. Horne during the entire time he has been at ECU, and our associations have been varied. For four years, I was also an admissions officer as I was serving as dean of the graduate school. I have interacted with him as a fellow professor and as his immediate administrative superior. In all of these relationships, he has been an extraordinarily satisfactory colleague. He has been in tune with the growth of ECU in the past and he has contributed immeasurably to the progress which has been realized," Howell said.

Brewer said, "During my first year at East Carolina, Dr. Horne completely captured my confidence and gained my deep appreciation for the many contributions he has made to this institution. He has played a unique role in helping build East Carolina into a major diversified university."

Journalist Is Speaker

"Newsweek" Magazine Deputy Chief of the Washington Bureau James Doyle spoke to East Carolina University journalism students and faculty Tuesday.

The Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist described his ascension from junior reporter of the Boston Globe to his present post on the "Newsweek" Washington staff. He discussed the rights of a journalist in judicial matters and the function of the media as "a fourth branch of government."

He told the students, "At present there are about 64,000 journalism undergraduates, but there are fewer than 64,000 journalism jobs in the United States, total, and turnover is very slight, so most journalists have to begin their careers on smaller newspapers. My first jobs with the 'Globe' were not very rewarding, but I don't regret them. I learned a lot about people and human relations."

Doyle explained the effects of "Newsweek" as an agenda-setting medium. "The cover of 'Newsweek' is usually the center of people's consciousness during the particular week and it can be the topic of conversation in bars and restaurants around the U. S. The cover is a story in itself."

Raised Drinking Age Is Put Off

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A state legislator who sponsored legislation to raise the drinking age in Tennessee to 21 from 18 says drinkers of all ages should be licensed.

The House Finance Committee decided Tuesday to put off consideration of the bill proposed by Rep. Lois DeBerry, who says drinkers could get their license after passing a written and oral test administered by county clerks — and paying $3.

Loan, Grant

The Farmers Home Administration has approved a loan and grant funds for the Stokes Regional Water Corp. that will add 46,926 feet of line to the present water distribution system and almost double the number of users.

FHA spokesman Harry Jarvis said an $83,500 grant and a $92,000 loan to the Stokes water corporation will extend the system and bring the cost of water to residents of the area down.

The extension will add 97 customers, bringing the total number of users to 178.

The Stokes system was installed after a $75,000 loan and a $67,000 grant was approved by FHA in November 1973.

Jarvis said the Stokes Regional Water Corp. is "owned by the users," and said it is, "a business that citizens in that area conduct themselves."

Williams One-Hits Hunt In 1-0 Win

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

WILSON — Mike Williams hurled a one-hitter at Wilson Hunt High School for the Rose High School Rampants yesterday, and an unearned run lifted the Rampants to a 1-0 victory.

The win opened up the 1979 Division I season for the Rampants, and got them away to a good start.

"I've very happy to get this one," Coach Ronald Vincent said. "Hunt is one of the better teams in the league and to get them on the road is a good win for us."

Williams never allowed a runner past second base, and only three reached that far. He walked four batters and struck out five.

The lone hit came in the second inning as Mike Wells led off with a shot up the middle to become Hunt's first baserunner. He moved to second on an out, but died there.

Another Warrior reached in the third, on a two-out error, moving to second on the play. In the sixth, Charles Simpson led off with a walk and was sacrificed to second, but also died there.

In contrast, Hunt's Robert Simpson hurled a fine game too, giving up four hits, walking three and striking out ten.

"You won't find many high school games with pitching like this," Vincent pointed out. Both teams did well, but I've got to be very pleased with our defense.

Ronnie (Chapman) made an outstanding play that got us out of trouble once, and Junior (Neal) did a good job with several plays at third. Hunt is a fine team, and Simpson is a very good pitcher. But even with ten strikeouts I think our guys came up to the plate aggressive and swung the bats well."

Rose had several chances to score, but it wasn't until the sixth that they got the game's only run. In the first, back-to-back singles by Mark Shank and Chapman put two on, but a double play ended the inning. A leadoff walk and an out put a man on second in the second, but he got no further.

The best chance came in the sixth. Will Sanderson and Joey Mattheis both walked, and Mike Williams and Robert Morehead both reached on fielder's choices, the former being errored, loading the bases with none out. But the latter got Sanderson at the plate, and two strikeouts followed to get Hunt out of that jam.

In the sixth, however, the Rampants got the telling run. With two down, Neal singled up the middle and Charles Daise went in to run for him, moving to third when Sanderson singled to center. Sanderson then took off for second as Simpson was in the middle of his stretch. Simpson whirled and threw to second, but the ball was errored, and Daise scampered home with the run.

The victory lifts the Rampants to a 4-0-1 overall mark and a 1-0 conference record. Hunt dropped to 5-2 overall and 0-1 in the league.

Aycock In Opening Win

KINSTON — E.B. Aycock Junior High School opened its 1979 baseball season with a 7-2 victory over Kinston.

Roger Williams hurled a one-hitter at Kinston, striking out 12 and walking two.

Thompson, Rountree Try For Team Spots

Two members of the East Carolina University women's basketball team will be in Knoxville, Tenn., this weekend seeking spots on the United States team that will represent the country in the FIBA World Championship this spring and the Pan-American Games this summer.

Rosie Thompson, who led the Pirates in scoring and rebounding this year, and Lydia Rountree, their top point guard, will be seeking spots on the teams that will represent the US.

The 8th FIBA World Championships will be held in Seoul, Korea, on April 27 through May 13, and the Pan American Games will be in Puerto Rico on July 1-15.

"We are really proud to have Rosie and Lydia representing East Carolina in these trials," Cathy Andruzzi, ECU women's basketball coach, said. "They both had very good seasons this year and are looking forward to going to the trials in Knoxville."

Thompson, an All-Stater, had her best season, and is the top woman scorer in ECU history, with still another to go. She led both the state and region in scoring this year.

"Nationally, Rosie is very underrated, but there is no question about her abilities," Andruzzi said. "However, the people don't know that much about Rosie because there has been a failure to recognize her abilities through a failure of publicity. She's definitely been overlooked."

The 5-10 junior from Blounts Creek was the leading scorer, rebounder and free throw shooter in the state as well as being the top scorer and second leading rebounder in Region II of the AIAW.

Rountree was the second leading scorer behind Thompson this year, and broke the school's season assist record with 109.

"These games to us represent some of the advances we are making towards our women's basketball program at ECU," Andruzzi said. "Having the opportunity to compete in these trials gives our athletes the chance of competing with the best in the country and having a chance to represent the United States in international events."

The tryouts will be held this weekend at the University of Tennessee.

State Takes Two From ECU

RALEIGH — N.C. State swept a softball doubleheader from East Carolina Tuesday afternoon, taking the opener 16-0 and then winning the nightcap 6-1 to remain unbeaten.

The Pirates, unable to get untracked in the first game, advanced only one runner past second base. Theresa Whitley hit safely in both of her trips to the plate in the shortened game with a single and a double.

The Wolfpack bunched 10 of its 17 hits in the second inning when it scored seven times. Amy Carter opened the seven-inning frame with a triple and scored on Ann Keith's single. Two more singles loaded the bases and the sacks remained full as individual runs scored on subsequent singles and a sacrifice fly.

Keith's bases-loaded triple highlighted another seven-run outburst in the third for the Wolfpack.

The Pirates, now 4-5, took the early lead in the second game when pitcher Mary Bryan Carlyle walked, moved to third on a single by catcher Jan McVeigh and scored on an infield out by Mary Powell. Four other runners advanced to second in the game for ECU, but could not reach third.

The Wolfpack tied the game in the third when three singles led to a run and then scored three in the fourth and two more in the fifth. The Pirates will host St. Augustine's at 3 p.m. Thursday in a doubleheader.

HOLLYWOOD — A four-run rally with two out in the bottom of the seventh allowed D. H. Conley to overcome some early pitching difficulties and slip past Ayden-Grifton 6-5 yesterday afternoon.

The Vikes, who used three pitchers in the first four innings, gave up five runs before Ben Wilson took the mound to calm things down. He came in with the score 5-2, held the Chargers to just one hit the rest of the way and got a key hit in the seventh to knock in two runs and keep the late rally alive.

"Ben came in, and again his leadership and experience showed," said Conley coach Walter Claybrook after the game. It was the second game in a row in which Wilson keyed the Vikes to a victory late in the game.

"Until we get some pitchers who throw strikes like he (Wilson) does, we'll have trouble. Our other pitchers just weren't getting the ball across. The other two pitchers have got to work as hard as Ben. I think they'll come around, but they've got to push themselves."

Mike Edens started the game on the mound for Conley and his troubles began almost immediately. After getting an out, he walked Ed Coley and David Smith. Jolly Dail reached on a fielder's choice as Smith was thrown out at second and Chris Phillips knocked in courtesy runners Mike McLawhorn and

The Chargers got another run in the second as Clayton McLawhorn got a base on balls, went to second on an infield hit by Bernard Ricciarelli and scored when Coley singled to left.

The problems continued for Conley in the third. Edens allowed Dail to single to left and walked Phillips before Claybrook removed him in favor of Jeff Allen. Allen walked the first three batters he faced, Hector Lewis, Vic Settiff and Chris Strickland, scoring courtesy runner Newton and Phillips.

With the bases loaded, Edens struck out two batters and forced a third to fly out to left to end the inning. But Wilson came in after Edens walked two of the first three batters in the fourth and put out the fire, causing the first batter he faced to hit into a double play.

All of the Conley runs came in the first and last innings. With two away in the first, Carl Arnold singled to right and scored on a double by Wilson. Curtis Spencer knocked in Wilson with a triple to fenceless left field.

The Vikes had only two other runners in scoring position until the seventh, but then they took advantage of an obviously tired Dail. With one out, Dixon Page singled up the middle and Sammy Tucker walked. After another out, Arnold loaded the bases with a base hit laced into right field.

"I was real proud of the way we came back," said Claybrook, whose team is now 4-3 overall and 2-2 in the Eastern Carolina Conference. "I was proud of the way we put the pressure on them in the last inning; we sure didn't do it before that."

Claybrook added, "I know it was a tough loss for Allan (Wilson), the Ayden-Grifton coach" and his guys because they played a real good game. But I was proud for our guys because we finally were able to get the timely hit. Everybody kept it going."

Wilson said, "We played better than we did last week. I thought we played well enough to win today. That seems to be our story this year—we can't win the close ones."

Of Spencer's game winning hit, "Wilson commented, 'Another couple of steps, and it could have gone the other way.' The Chargers fell to 1-4 overall and 0-3 in the ECC with the loss.

Spencer had a 3-4 day for the Vikings, while Wilson was 2-3 and Arnold 2-4. None of the Charger batters had more than one hit.

Leagues Make Plans As Judge Refuses Back-To-Work Order

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The baseball season opens a week from today, but the major league umpires may not be around to holler, "Plaayy bawll!"

A federal judge Tuesday ruled that he had no authority to order them to go to work, adding, "There is no question in my mind they are entitled to bargain as individuals."

The 51 umpires who work for both the National and American leagues have yet to sign their 1979 contracts and report to spring training.

They want more money and have hired an attorney to get it. Many have threatened to retire from baseball if the pot isn't sweetened considerably.

"We will have to make plans," AL President Lee MacPhail said after the decision. "If these umpires don't want to work for us, we'll have to find umpires who do. We have no present plans to change our offers. The season will open on time."

The umpires' lawyer, Richie Phillips, replied that, if the major leagues do replace the umpires, "they will try to foist an inferior product on the baseball world."

NL President Chub Feeney declined comment.

The rhubarb between baseball and the men who rule the diamonds goes back to the spring of 1978 when the umpires began grumbling that what was in their written, basic agreement wasn't what they agreed to verbally.

They demanded 21 improvements in the collective bargaining pact to compensate, then on Aug. 25 called a one-day strike. The dispute went to court and last Sept. 25 U.S. District Court Judge Joseph McGlynn issued a preliminary injunction prohibiting any further work stoppage until the matter was resolved.

There were no further walkouts during the 1978 season, but it didn't mollify the steamed-up umpires. To a man, they hired their union's counsel — Phillips — to represent them on an individual basis.

And, to a man, Phillips told them not to sign their 1979 individual contracts until they got what they wanted.

Back to court they went, this time to debate a motion filed by major league baseball to find this year's non-working umpires in violation of the judge's September injunction involving the collective bargaining agreement.

"Your motion is denied,"

Peach Bowl Nixes Holiday

ATLANTA (AP) — Peach Bowl officials have told CBS-TV they won't play their game on Christmas Day again, even if it means losing a national television contract.

Officials said the Christmas date was responsible for low ticket sales in 1978 and almost cost the bowl its NCAA certification.

"We are saying no to Christmas Day, not CBS," Peach Bowl Executive Director George Crumley said Tuesday. "We are very happy with our relationship with CBS, except for the playing date. We feel it's extremely important that the game be played on another day, preferably Dec. 24 or 31. We especially like Dec. 31 at 3 p.m."

But CBS appears firm in maintaining the Christmas work. I have no authority to find them in violation of my injunction because the circumstances are not the same."

"The likelihood of our scheduling a game on Dec. 24 or 31 is practically nil," said Carl Lindemann, senior vice president of CBS-TV Sports.

The Peach Bowl was put on national television for the first time last year after CBS convinced officials to schedule the Purdue-Georgia Tech contest on Christmas Day.

The game drew a large television audience, but a small crowd at the stadium. Only 33,947 tickets were sold, and there were more than 13,000 no-shows.

The Peach Bowl had to sell 24,149 tickets locally — 40 percent of Atlanta Stadium capacity — or lose its NCAA certification, and only a last-minute solicitation campaign saved the bowl.

Greene Central Takes 3rd Win

STANHOPE — Greene Central kept its winning streak in the Eastern Carolina Conference alive with a 7-2 victory over Southern Nash yesterday.

The Rams are now 3-4 overall and 3-0 in the league.

Greene Central started the scoring in the top of the first getting a run. Jimbo Fulghum walked and Al Murray singled him to third. He scored when Donald Shaw grounded out.

Southern came back with one in the bottom of the first. Stuart Griffin, Wayne Grady, Frankie Brown and Stacey Overman all walked, forcing in a run.

In the second, the Rams took the lead for good, as Jeff Scott homered with none on.

Scott again homered in the fourth, also a solo blast, making it 3-1. The Rams added three more in the fifth to put it out of reach. Greg Holmes singled and Fulghum got a hit. A passed ball scored Holmes and Murray reached on an error. An out advanced both runners, and they scored on successive passed balls.

Both teams scored single runs in the seventh inning.

Scott, Murray and Shaw each had two hits to lead the Rams.

Underground Life After A Tornado

GREENWICH, Ohio (AP) — When a tornado blew his mobile home apart last June, Jim Kurtz accelerated plans to build an underground house on his nearly two-acre lot.

The Kurtz family of four, who had been living in the mobile unit with less than 500 square feet of floor space, now have 2,100 square feet in a three-bedroom, ranch-style home.

Revitalize Old Covent Garden

By KIRSTEN O. LUNDBERG
LONDON (UPI) — A decayed but famed corner of London is being massively and excitingly revitalized, but the renovation may leave Covent Garden with little of the local flavor that helped make it famous.

"It's the obscenity of land values that is doing this to us," said Jim Moynihan, a full-time employee of a vigorous campaign to keep the famous area from becoming just another urban renewal project.

Covent Garden is the 100-acre central London area which once housed the famous fruit and vegetable market. Eliza Doolittle sold her flowers under the church portico in the Shaw play that became "My Fair Lady."

Since the market moved, Covent Garden has sprouted scores of shops, dozens of restaurants and a few nightclubs.

"But Covent Garden needs to have people living in it, and not just millionaires," Moynihan said in an interview. "Owners would rather keep buildings empty than rent to normal income tenants. So 60 percent of the buildings are standing empty, rotting."

Moynihan is an official of the Covent Garden Community Association. Its opponent in the village-size area, boasting the Covent Garden Opera House and crooked streets crisscrossed nightly by theatregoers, is the Greater London Council, London's local parliament.

The community association is rallying the local population of 2,800 against being driven out by higher property values and loss of employment and services.

There used to be a German grocery just up the street from the association's headquarters. Now it's a chic copperware shop. The Liza Doolittle boutique, where a blouse sells for $80, rubs shoulders with the Brahms and Liszt wine bar, crowded with late-night drinkers in silver lame and blue jeans.

Covent Garden's own residents can buy Paris fashions or have their hair cut by exclusive "hair designers" without leaving the neighborhood. But they have trouble buying a loaf of bread or a cut of meat.

The association charges the London council, instead of promoting local interests as promised in 1978, is giving more and more zoning to bistros, high-priced boutiques and the inevitable office buildings.

The area's life, the association says, will all be imported. The organization's three full-time employees work from a one-room office where bluejeaned volunteers are surrounded by piles of papers, leaflets, files and empty tea cups.

"We're not against development of the area along commercial lines," said Moynihan. "That's already happened. What we're asking is that it be made more suitable for living in at the same time."

"We say fix up housing, bring in light industry like bookbinders, kitemakers, carpenters and watchmakers — and subsidize the rents of shops that cater to the resident population."

The association is fighting back with a resident-run slum renewal program that seeks out decrepit properties before the authorities do. It will build gardens, organize an annual local festival, and work on property-use projects for local buildings — like Jubilee Hall.

The former market hall, built in 1897 to commemorate Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee, reopened in February 1978 as a sports facility financed through funds raised by local groups. It serves 1,200 people a week — sports clubs, school groups, people working and living in central London.

The reclamation work may ensure the center's survival despite city plans to supplant the building in 1982 with offices, shops, housing and a parking lot.

The city also has sponsored a series of gardens on vacant sites destined for offices. A Japanese water garden fell victim to the bulldozers, but there is a new Italian garden in the central piazza and other little pieces of green amid the concrete. Playgrounds, walkways and summertime concert areas, five in all, have become a feature of the area.

Kurtz was at work as a mason when the storm hit June 26, a week after he had started a business of his own. Mrs. Kurtz and the children huddled in the bathtub while the storm shoved their home around and finally sucked it into exploding pieces.

"The little girl got a scratch on her nose but nobody was really hurt," Kurtz said. "They crawled out of the wreckage, jumped in the pickup truck and drove to a neighbor's house."

Kurtz said the new house measured 30 by 75 feet. "It's all underground except for the roof. We have to go upstairs to get out and I put two entrances on the place," he said.

"I still want to add an enclosed patio to one side, and we have plans for a swimming pool. I'd like a greenhouse in that area, too," Kurtz said.

Without heat or air conditioning, the house — with masonry walls and cement floor — would stay at a constant 58 degrees.

Kurtz said he had built a fireplace at one end of the house and put a wood stove at the other end, plus electric baseboard panels for heat.

He said the fireplace and stove furnished most of the heat and the electric panels are seldom turned on.

"Right now we've got $8,000 in the house. That doesn't count the lot. I bought this 1.7-acre lot about five years ago for this purpose."

"We just didn't get started building until the tornado."

The couple salvaged two chairs, a clothes washer and dryer and a TV set from their trailer home.

"Things are getting better now," Mrs. Kurtz said. "Things are getting settled. The kids love it. They're happy and better behaved."

Outside, Kurtz left one grim reminder of the storm — a wrecked cooking stove sitting in the open some distance from their home.

Panama Is Advancing Toward Canal Takeover

By ALFONSO CHARDY
PANAMA CITY, Panama (UPI) — Graffiti in red paint — "This year we enter the Zone" — have turned up on Panama City walls, anticipating the transfer of the U.S. Canal Zone to Panama Oct. 1.

With them comes sudden concern over whether Panamanians will be able to run the zone and insure smooth operation of the Panama Canal, which remains in U.S. hands until the eve of the 21st century.

As the historic transfer date approaches, attention centers on when Congress will pass the implementing legislation and what plans Panama is drafting to operate the zone.

Western diplomats here fear Panama-U.S. relations, improved to the point of brotherly understanding with the ratification of the treaties last year, may sink to dangerous levels again should the legislation be snagged.

The legislation calls for creation of a commission to run the canal — replacing the old U.S.-run Panama Canal Co. — and payments to Panama from waterway tolls.

T-Day, as Zonians call it, means a turnover of the American-governed 533-square-mile Canal Zone which slashes Panama in two and includes the tiny communities of Balboa and Cristobal, as American as the suburbs of Indianapolis.

The division between Panama City and Balboa is like the U.S.-Mexican border between Ciudad Juarez and El Paso, Texas.

With the zone go the ports, a railroad system linking the Pacific and Atlantic sides of the isthmus, supermarket-like commissaries, roads and sections of military bases.

The United States will permanently retain the right to military intervention to keep the canal open.

Administration officials and U.S. diplomats seem confident nothing will prevent the treaties from taking effect. But diplomatic sources say some conservative congressmen originally opposed to the treaties, grudgingly ratified by the Senate last year, may vote against legislation needed to implement the pacts.

In early January Panama and the United States began preparations for the transition by signing three agreements — one to vacate the old zone cemetery, one for a prisoner exchange treaty similar to that signed with Mexico for drug traffickers, and one that gives Panama responsibility for all air traffic control.

Americans buried in the old Zone cemetery will be moved to a special section of Corozal cemetery on Panama's Pacific side, to be run in perpetuity by the U.S. Battle Monuments Commission.

American workers — those who keep their jobs and choose to stay — can still shop and mail letters in U.S. military PXs which will operate for another five years at 13 American military bases that will be phased out by the end of the century. But most facilities such as supermarket-like commissaries, post offices, roads, ports and a railroad become Panamanian Oct. 1.

American and Panamanian policemen will patrol the zone together for 30 months until Panama acquires full police rights.

Both countries seem anxious that American workers stay on to train Panamanians to run the zone. A feared exodus of American workers after the treaties were ratified did not occur and no mass departure is foreseen for October. But many Americans may leave unless they are guaranteed labor protection.

Concern that Panamanians may have trouble maintaining the canal, used by some 13,000 ships a year, stems from the fact they traditionally were restricted from holding top zone jobs.

"We certainly want to keep the top American technicians to help us run it," says a source close to the Panamanian government. "We will continue to pay them their high salaries to train our people."

"But we certainly don't want to keep Americans who only run vending machines or drive buses. Panamanians can certainly do that."

Panamanian trainees already have taken their places beside American workers at key installations, government sources said. And Panama is pressing canal officials to give Panamanians a chance to run some operations now, a move the Americans are said to be resisting until the treaties come into force.

No one yet knows where workers' salaries will come from after Oct. 1 if the legislation is not ready. Under the treaties the United States is to pay Panama $50 million to $60 million a year for zone services, including $10 million for garbage collection and keeping the zone's lawns neatly trimmed.

U.S. Ambassador to Panama Ambler Moss is optimistic that Congress won't allow Canal Zone funds to run out. "I don't think that's going to happen because the obligation is clear under international law. I hardly think we are going to default our international obligations," he said in an interview.

"An awful lot of workers will wonder what labor rules are going to be, what wages, conditions and benefits. If (the legislation) is not decided early in the game, this will cause skepticism, and unrest and difficulties as people wonder how they'll plan their lives. Surely a lot of people would get uneasy."

James O'Donnell, 50, president of the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 14, who has become the zone's No. 1 labor spokesman, says unless labor legislation is passed, many workers may abandon their jobs in a massive walkout, shutting down the strategic waterway.

"If the implementing legislation does not go through it means the (U.S.) government didn't live up to its part of the bargain," O'Donnell said.

Under the treaties, about 4,000 of 14,000 jobs will be eliminated, 3,500 of them held by Americans. Canal Co. officials say 262 workers quit last year, 20 more than in 1977.

Panamanians regard any suggestion they may be incapable of running the zone as humiliating, treasonous and racist. But they recognize their lack of qualified technicians in a nation of only 1.8 million inhabitants.

At a news conference with visiting Army Secretary Clifford Alexander, the Panamanian director of the recently-created Panama Canal Authority, Gabriel Lewis Galindo, angrily denied rumors that Panama would seek a postponement of the Oct. 1 transfer date because it was not ready to take on the job.

Not all Panamanians look forward to the end of U.S. rule over the zone.

Mrs. Hilda Castillo, 50, who lives in a crowded, run-down complex of wooden tenement houses across from a main zone entrance, would rather the Americans stayed.

"We have no skilled people in Panama," she said in the stifling one-room apartment where she lives with her husband and four small daughters. "It'll be a mess."

Other Panamanians believe their government will reserve the zone for the rich or families of government officials. Some Panamanians already have begun house-hunting in the zone.

One big question is how well Panama will run the waterway's ports and railroad.

"This is where the Panamanians will have to demonstrate to the world whether they can do the job," said a diplomat who asked anonymity. "Those are the main areas of concern to the United States."

There is talk that Panama ask a third country or private firms abroad to help run the facilities immediately after the changeover.

Snorer Needs Understanding; Cure Uncertain

By GRETA TILLEY
The Greensboro Record
GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Owls do it when snoozing and tigers do it too. Taxi drivers do it, but only on slow nights.

coln Room and Sir Winston Churchill did it, loudly, in the stateroom aboard ship.

A&T basketball coach Gene Littles did it once and his wife got tickled. When she told him in the morning, he was embarrased. A beer-drinking man in Silver Springs, Md., did it once and got clubbed headside with a billy stick. His wife was convicted of assault.

Senator Robert Morgan says he doesn't but his wife says he does. Art shop owner Ginny Dolan said she didn't but her husband said she did, and mini-taped her to prove it.

When Guilford Sheriff Paul Gibson does it, the walls tremble and Mrs. Gibson lies awake. When Mrs. Charlie Justice does it, Choo-Choo (who doesn't) rolls her over. If Congressman Richardson Preyer does it, nobody has complained.

Bennett College President Isaac Miller does it, gently, but only when he's tired. Indians aren't supposed to do it but that is a myth — Lonnie Revels does it and so does his wife.

Governor Jim Hunt, predictably, does not.

Dear Abby may not snore, but plenty of her readers do. So do their husbands and wives.
One distressed bride wrote that since her marriage, she had been having nightmares about the mooring cows that once chased her across a pasture.
Hubby's snoring, it seems,
brought back the memory.
How, she pleaded, does a woman sleep with a man who snores?

When Winston-Salem State
basketball coach Bighouse Gaines snores, wife Clara knocks him and he stops. When Matthew's Grill owner Minas

Dascalakis snores, Rena gives him a mild shake. U.S. Magistrate Herman Smith gets a poke in the ribs and, "Turn over, honey," from wife Tommie Lou. But she waited to be sure their marriage was safe before trying it.

Abby's readers recommend more aggressive measures.
Tape his mouth shut, says one, because nobody snores while breathing through the nose.
Sew a baseball into the back of his pajamas, says another, so he can't sleep on his back. The most practical suggestion came from a reader prescribing two large whole cloves of garlic, a large glass of buttermilk, a raw egg and a pinch of pepper, taken before retiring. No snoring guaranteed.

No sleeping either.
In his book on snoring, Dr.
Marcus H. Boulware says nonsnorers may be forced to make the adjustment. If ear plugs or sleep-inducing devices (such as the Vermont remedy — one tablespoon of honey before bed) fail, try beating the snorer to sleep. If separate bedrooms are the only answer, Boulware strongly urges communication by telephone.

He does not recommend chin straps, mouth dams or divorce, even in Reno, since snoring by itself isn't a legal ground. Psy-choanalysis, if you're rich and willing, is chancy. Only one out of 100,000 are cured.

Alan Rothfeld, member of the UNC School of Medicine's pulmonary division, describes it as a series of sounds made while inhaling and exhaling, caused by obstructions in the respiratory tract. "Actually," he says,
"it's the back of the tongue that seems to do it. It gets in the way."

Besides the blows and bags, snoring can bring tremendous worry. Studies have found recently that apnea, a halt in breathing, usually temporary, sometimes happens during snoring. In severe cases this can be dangerous, even causing death. Dr. Rothfeld stresses this is rare.

all the time saying their husbands stop breathing at night. I don't think that is usually a cause for alarm. It's not uncommon for people to stop breathing for short times, maybe 10 seconds or so, without realizing it."

The March issue of the New England Journal of Medicine reports that oxygen levels dropped in 20 of the 30 men monitored during one night's sleep, with no serious side effects. (Few women experience this.)

stacks, snores and can't stay awake during the day, it might help to see a doctor. The usual medicine is diet and no more cigarettes. "In roughly half the cases, this works," Dr. Rothfeld says. "A million drugs have been tried without much success. The ultimate treatment is a tracheotomy, a sure cure, but surgeons are reluctant to do it on heavy people because of complications.

can be fixed with simple surgery by an ear-nose-throat doctor, though other problems usually are involved before this surgery is suggested.

cape the scalp but not the doghouse, it may be a long night if Brutus is already asleep. Cats, chimps and ca-

ones, are notorious snorers. It is essential that snorers maintain their self-esteem.

One-Room School Still A Winner In Nebraska

SIDNEY, Neb. (UPI) — In the age of nuclear power, computer technology and space travel, the one-room schoolhouse is only a memory in many parts of the country.

But not in Nebraska, where 431 of the nation's remaining 1,111 one-room, multi-grade schoolhouses are located.

At a time when many elementary school classes range in size from 20 to 40 students, the one-room school has retained an often overlooked feature: individual attention for the children.

One example is Nancy
Sunol, a Nebraska Panhandle town 10 miles from Sidney.
Nine students, ages 5 to 11, attend her classes.

"Any child has to learn more in an individualized situation," Mrs. DeArmen says. "Even if you aren't the greatest teacher in the world, the fact that you have so much more time for each child is a definite advantage."

She has developed instruction programs for each child. That's was a chore, she said, but she wouldn't teach any other way.
She doesn't share the concern many other educators and parents voice about children's reading problems. Her District 39 students read better than the norm for their grade level.

reads at least at a fifth to sixth grade level and I've had to switch several of the first graders to a second grade text book," she said.

Mrs. DeArmen emphasizes reading skills, using both conventional teaching tools and innovative methods such as learning centers — small, isolated areas where students work independently.

"Children learn much more readily if they are interested in learning and challenged by it," she says. "The learning center, if used properly, can do both of these things. The children truly enjoy learning."

"The newspaper is a particularly good tool," she says,
"because it's such a part of daily life, it's a life-long text."
So, in the Snoop for News center, students read local newspapers to develop reading and vocabulary skills.

The teacher also reads aloud to her pupils and has them read silently for 15 minutes a day to try to show them "how much fun reading is."

"When silent reading first started, I heard of a lot of complaints that 15 minutes of reading was just too long," she said. "Now they want more time."

Her students use the dictionary extensively to develop word skills. That led to creation of a game called the fantastic frog race.

In the Better Letter Center, they practice writing skills by composing personal and business letters.

In the Puppet Center, they are exposed to literature, write their own plays and make puppets.

One afternoon is reserved for the Cooking Center, where students learn to make orange juice, pizza, milk shakes and fruit salad.

At the Netherlands Center, they read about that country and view money and artifacts Mrs. DeArmen brought back from The Netherlands, after teaching three years at the United States Overseas School
there. She and her husband,

Paul, and their children,
Heather, 8, and Ryan, 3, now live in Sidney, where DeArmen is district conservationist for the Soil Conservation Service.

Mrs. DeArmen is a strong believer in the efficiency and effectiveness of the individualized learning approach. She has taught in both large and small schools and thinks larger, nonrural schools have "limitations because of class size and an incredible amount of work."

"Here it's so much easier and I have a lot of fun teaching. I always try to think of new and different ways to encourage the children to learn, and that's a little more difficult with a larger class size."

Mouse Fearless In Its Quest

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) —
The Birmingham police say a mouse with a taste for marijuana is fearless in its quest to get at the supply stored in the narcotics office as evidence.

The antics of the mouse have earned it the name of "C-Bo," a slang for Colombian marijuana.

Lt. J.E. Bibb said officer Pat
Curry had pulled out his desk
drawer recently and discovered
C-Bo chewing on a bag of evidence.

"We had to run C-Bo away from the marijuana," said Bibb. "It was comical, really.
There Curry was, armed with a .41 magnum, running from a little ole gray mouse."

Do you remember the parable of the village idiot? After the best intellects of the community had failed to find any trace of a missing dog, the lad produced the animal with little apparent effort. When asked to account for his lightning success, he replied bluntly, "I thought to myself, where would I go if I were a dog? Well, that's where I went and there he was!"

It seems he would have had little difficulty in solving the problem that faced East on this deal. Just how difficult it can be to spot even the most obvious was proved by the postmortem.

South became declarer at a contract of three no trump via an auction that might or might not meet with your approval. West led his fourth-best heart, declarer played low from dummy and East had to decide whether to go up with the king or finesse the nine. Those who blindly follow the doctrine of "third hand high" would have had no difficulty, but East, a player of considerable experience, emerged from his prolonged huddle with the nine. Thereupon, declarer rattled off nine tricks without giving a thought to the spade finesse.

At the autopsy, the local experts were divided about the wisdom of East's play of the nine. They advanced the argument that, had the opening lead been from the jack, the nine would have forced the ace whereas the king would have given declarer two tricks in the suit. Naturally, if the lead was from the ace, it was obligatory to go up with the king since, if the two of hearts was an honest card, declarer could hold no more than a doubleton in the suit.

The pundits then considered whether it was more likely that West or South held the ace of hearts, and their conclusion was that South won on that score because of his no trump rebid. Had they followed the example of the village idiot, it would have been obvious that the king was the correct play.

Place yourself in the position of declarer. If you had ace and a low heart, which card would you play from dummy at trick one? Obviously the queen, since that would be your only chance to win two tricks. Thus, declarer's failure to play the queen of hearts on the opening lead marks West with the ace.

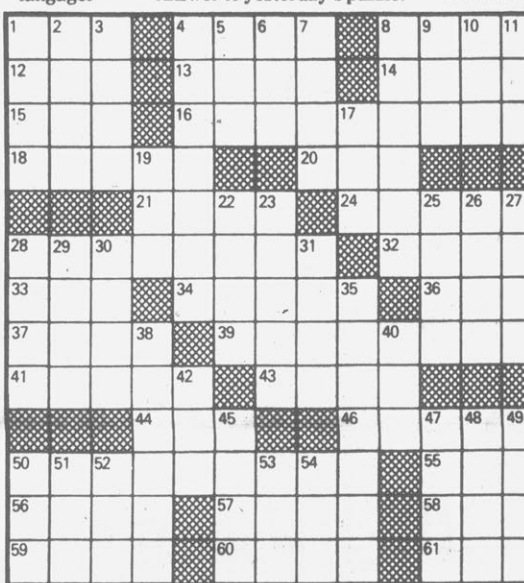

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. NBC's Resident Critic Gripes With The Network's Approval

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Everybody grumbles about his boss now and then (except me), usually outside of the office and in very hushed tones. But can you imagine grumbling about your company's product on national television? And getting paid for it?

Ron Hendren does, and his company loves him for it (claims to, anyway). Hendren is the television critic for NBC's "Today" show. He's the first TV critic to run a carping concession on the network level, a sign that television is finally recognizing its own importance.

It's a ticky dilemma for the networks, running a huge entertainment business alongside its huge news operation. How can the news end of a network analyze TV entertainment without appearing to hype its own shows or badmouth those of the other networks?

Just doing it, which is what NBC has done with Hendren and what CBS does on its "Sunday Morning" show with Jeff Greenfield.

Hendren, who'd been doing a critic-at-large number for NBC's Washington, D.C. affiliate before "Today" beckoned, says:

"It's almost irresponsible for a major news operation—television, newspapers, whatever—to ignore what's going on in an industry with that kind of impact. It's such an all-pervasive medium, terribly important in the lives of millions of Americans."

Hendren says he doesn't feel pressures from NBC to hype network shows (although for others on "Today," it's a common practice), and indeed, he blasts NBC awfully with the fervor he levels at other networks' bombs.

One such display of Hendren honesty recently caused a minor brouhaha at the NBC affiliates meeting in Las Vegas. An affiliate complained that Hendren not only panned the NBC movie "Charleston," but recommended that viewers change channels and watch a show on CBS.

Network executives tend to display greater affection for affiliates than for TV critics, and this affiliate was assured that the recalcitrant Hendren had been spoken to and wouldn't repeat his offense.

When other reporters heard of this, there was much snickering and cries of, "Yeah, sure, I told you so." But Hendren says nobody ever spoke to him about his advice to switch channels and, in fact, his occasional taking to task of NBC programs has not mellowed a bit.

NBC President Fred Silverman, who hired Hendren, said in a recent interview:

"We hired him on one basis—that if we're going to have a critic, we're going to allow him to be a critic. If he doesn't like our shows, then he has every right to say it. What's the sense of having a critic if you shackle him?"

Well, welcome, Ron

Hendren, Jeff Greenfield, and others who may be waiting in the wings. Pull up a chair, and grumble awhile.

Still Paces The Nielsen Ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — Ten of the 23 programs on ABC's prime-time schedule for the week ending March 25 were repeats, and the No. 1 television network was still a runaway winner in the ratings competition, figures from A.C. Nielsen Co. show.

ABC's rating for the week was 21.6, followed by CBS at 19.2 and NBC at 14. It was ABC's 11th week in a row in first place.

The networks say the rating means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 21.6 percent of the homes in the country with television were tuned to ABC. Five of ABC's reruns finished in Nielsen's Top 10, including No. 1 "Three's Company," runner-up "Mork and Mindy" and "Laverne and Shirley" in third place.

NBC, at the same time, suffered quite the opposite fate. The network's top-rated show, "Little House on the Prairie," was ranked 16th, and "Harris and Company" starring Bernie Casey, in its prime-time debut, was rated last among 66 programs broadcast during the week.

ABC also scored again with new series — "13 Queens Boulevard," "Angie" and "The Ropers" among the first dozen in the ratings. Meanwhile, four shows introduced by NBC after the first of the year — "Sweepstakes," "Cliffhangers," "Mrs. Columbo" and "Turnabout" — were among the 12 least-watched.

The rating for "Three's Company" was 31.3. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, 31.3 percent saw at least part of the program.

CBS's best for the week was "60 Minutes," fourth in the ratings, and "Little House on the Prairie," No. 16, was tops for NBC.

Three of the five lowest-rated programs were on NBC, No. 62 Big Event "Superstunt II," No. 65 "Weekend" and No. 66 "Harris and Company." CBS's "Married: The First Year" was 63rd, and a rerun of "What's Happening" on ABC was 64th.

Statewide Symposium

ECU News Bureau
A statewide symposium for medical and pre-dental students was hosted by East Carolina University here recently.

The event took place at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Purpose of the symposium, cosponsored by the ECU chapter of Phi Epsilon Delta honor society, was to help students become familiar with ECU's new medical school, exchange ideas, and learn the admission procedure and requirements of the state's medical schools.

Keynote speaker at the event was Dr. James Mathis, chairman of psychiatry in the ECU School of Medicine, whose topic was "Medicine: Where We Are, Where We Are Going."

Also appearing on the program were Dr. Thomas Brewer, ECU Chancellor; Dr. William Aupus, dean of the ECU School of Medicine; Evelyn McCarthy and Charles Barrier of the UNC-Chapel Hill School of Medicine; Dennis Hoban, Ira Smith and Patricia Kube of the Bowman Gray School of Medicine; Drs. Abie Metcalfe and Dean Hayek of the ECU School of Medicine; Dr. Sydney Osterhout of the Duke University School of Medicine; and Stephen Bridges, vice-president of ECU's chapter Alpha Epsilon Delta.

In 1776, Benjamin Franklin arrived in Paris to seek aid for the American Revolution.

Gas shortages may be on way

IT'S TIME FOR SERIOUS FUEL ECONOMY ...

Reprint from Greensboro Record Fri., Feb. 23rd

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is predicting motorists could find gasoline in short supply this summer due to the Iranian revolution and that it will cost at least three to four cents more a gallon than now.

Energy Secretary James R.

Schlesinger told a House committee Thursday that unless Iranian production is restored quickly, there will be a gas shortage of "noticeable" severity during the summer driving season.

Dentist Has Clinic For Retarded

By ROSEMARY ARMAO
COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Society will forgive you for not being too bright — but not for looking weird.

Scores of programs have been developed to teach the mentally retarded and the handicapped skills needed to function in society. But little attention has been paid to the "packaging," says Dr. Edward S. Sterling of Ohio State University's Nisonger Center for Mental Retardation.

Sterling is head of a dentistry clinic for the retarded, one of about 40 federally funded clinics in the country that aim to teach future dentists how to deal with handicapped patients.

He expects dentists in community practice to see more and more such patients as the push continues to get them out of institutions and into America's mainstream.

Jack-o-lantern smiles and decayed teeth can set a retarded person apart even more readily than faulty speech or confusion, Sterling said in an interview.

"We had one young man I remember in the clinic. Jimmy was about 20 and never responded to anything. Talking to him was like talking to a wall. He had no upper teeth and we made him a bridge."

"That first day we fitted him, I'll never forget, we were walking down a hall and one of the girls in the office said 'Hi, Jimmy.' He stopped, put his arm around her and flashed this big grin. After that he was completely changed."

Except for a higher incidence of gum problems, he said, the retarded don't have unique dental troubles. But they are less likely to be treated, in or out of an institution.

Inside, he said "you find a double standard ... There's a lack of resources, so a cavity that would be filled in your mouth means a tooth will be pulled there."

Rushed ward personnel often don't have the time to adequately brush — much less floss and rinse — the teeth of patients who can't help themselves.

Sterling also said little effort has been made to teach the retarded who are newly released from institutions how to "hook up with community dental care programs in the first place and how to get them to keep coming."

He said his clinic is working on such a program with Columbus State Institute.

He said dental care for the retarded who are not institutionalized also tends to be neglected.

"Faced with all the major problems of a retarded child, parents may lose sight of the more mundane matters like cavities," Sterling said. "It's like pediatricians say: parents will forgive you for overlooking a heart murmur — but not a foot that is turning in."

Parents are often even more protective of handicapped than of normal children. Sterling said one mother recently insisted her son be completely anesthetized before the drilling began.

"She had heard him yelling in the chair, not an unusual thing for any child in a dentist's chair. I asked her how he usually responded to new situations and she said by yelling. Of course, he didn't need a general anesthesia but she was sure he wouldn't be able to take it. She's never called back. That boy was the one who suffered."

"Actually, I've had so-called normal children pull things in this office I've never had to worry about retarded children doing," said Sterling, recalling a bright little girl who tried dodging an examination by successfully chatting, vomiting and fainting.

The biggest single problem in dental treatment of the retarded "is fear — fear on the part of the professional" because of traditional dental schooling and because the average dentist lacks exposure to handicapped patients.

Sterling said schooling consists of "lectures on syndromes I have known, accompanied by slides of bizarre and strange-looking adults, or else lectures on the theme of all the things that can go wrong if I touch a handicapped person."

The clinic he heads treats about 3,000 handicapped patients annually without special equipment or extraordinary techniques.

"... as students (there) get involved, they come away feeling more confident — more confident with the normal population, too."

Maryland Tobacco Grown As It Was In The Colonial Years

By SUSAN GARLAND
WHITE PLAINS, Md. (UPI) — When Wallace Jenkins tops, strips, grades and cures his six acres of tobacco in Southern Maryland, he uses the same methods employed by English settlers more than 300 years ago.

Jenkins, 65, works his farm alone, except during the harvest, when he hires three or four laborers. His only farm machinery is a seed planter, used in the spring. The rest is done painstakingly, by hand. In the summer, Jenkins alone removes the top leaves for better growing. At harvest, he and his helpers cut nearly 40,000 stalks by hand and place them on sticks to hang in the barn to air cure. In the winter, the leaves are stripped from the stalks by hand and tied in bundles of 30, graded by feel and color.

Growing Maryland tobacco is back-breaking, time-consuming work — it requires 230 man-hours per acre, compared to about three for corn. It's not that Jenkins is an old-fashioned man who disdains modern machinery. He — and the rest of Maryland's tobacco farmers — don't have any choice.

"Maryland tobacco defies mechanization," explained Dr. Charles McKee, state tobacco extension director.

The high quality of Maryland tobacco is another reason for the careful handling described by state agriculture spokesman Anthony Evans as "putting diapers on a baby."

Maryland's tobacco is known in the trade as Type 32 — a special variety esteemed for its mild flavor, even-burning and low tar and nicotine. In 1974, the U.S. Department of Agriculture estimated that 2 percent of an "average domestic cigarette" contained Type 32.

About 40 percent of Maryland's tobacco crop is sold abroad and it is especially prized in Switzerland. Shipments are also sent to Belgium, Luxembourg and West Germany.

Maryland tobacco grower must eschew machinery in favor of labor with his hands and back. It's different in states farther to the south, where most tobacco is flue-cured, meaning that the leaves can be pulled from the stalk as opposed to cutting the whole stalk.

A machine has been developed to harvest flue-cured tobacco, which is often grown on large farms, but nothing marketable has been created for Maryland's air-cured tobacco, despite efforts by scientists in the United States and abroad.

It is a vicious cycle. The machines are not marketable because the farms are small. And the farms are small because of the lack of machinery.

"Growing Maryland tobacco is extremely labor intensive work," Evans said. "Most of the farms are family operations — sons, daughters, uncle and a handful of laborers. It's traditional in a large part. The tobacco is very special and has to be handled more carefully than other tobacco."

Jenkins likes the feeling of independence that farming without machines gives him. He said buying machinery would put him "in the hole for a long time."

Growing Maryland tobacco may require more labor than other crops, but it is also more profitable, Jenkins said he and his wife "can make a living" on their six acres, which have been in the family since the 19th century.

Maryland tobacco is considered elite, but its place in the state's agricultural economy has steadily declined since the 1600s.

Tobacco so dominated the Maryland economy in colonial times that settlers used it as currency. During the mid-17th century, there was so much tobacco that the Maryland Assembly required growers to plant at least two acres of corn. At one time, tobacco growing was banned as a means of

By CHERYL ARVIDSON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Seventy years ago, agitation for the election of U.S. senators by the people instead of state legislatures reached a peak. But the Senate balked at a constitutional amendment providing direct election of its membership.

Advocates of a popularly-elected Senate decided to try to bypass the traditional method of amending the Constitution. They petitioned Congress for a convention under the constitutional provision that says "on the application of the legislatures of two-thirds of the several states, Congress shall call a convention for proposing amendments."

At the point when only one more state was needed to activate the provision, the direct election amendment was approved by the traditional process: two-thirds votes of approval in the House and Senate followed by majority vote ratification by three-fourths of the legislatures.

Even though the convention method of amendment has been available since the Constitution was written (by a constitutional convention), all 26 amendments approved since then have started in Congress.

Ratification by three-fourths of the legislatures also would be a requirement for any amendments proposed by a constitutional convention. But beyond that, there is little agreement among legal scholars about the ground rules of the convention method of amendment.

There is debate on virtually every point — from which state petitions will be counted toward the required 34 to the system of voting to be used by a convention.

About 400 petitions for a constitutional convention on various topics have been approved by legislatures over the years.

cutting production and deflating the market. But over the years other crops took precedence. Now, only five counties produce tobacco on family farms.

Congress came closest to having to face the issue in recent times in the mid 1960s when 33 states sought to overturn the Supreme Court's "One-Man, One-Vote" decision on legislative reapportionment.

The 33rd request for a convention was approved in 1967. Would Congress would still be bound to call a convention if a 34th state asked for it now? Some scholars say petitions on a single topic are valid forever; others say a reasonable time limit should apply.

Other "close calls" have included an effort to repeal the 16th Amendment authorizing income taxes launched by 28 states between 1939 and 1955; and a convention call to prevent polygamy passed by 27 states between 1907 and 1915.

Now, the drives for amendments requiring a balanced federal budget and outlawing abortion have constitutional scholars and legal experts squirming.

So far, 28 states have asked for a convention on the general topic of a balanced budget, 14 on abortion.

The budget proposals vary widely in detail. Some states include the wording of an amendment they want considered; others just ask for a convention on a balanced budget. One petition forwarded to the Senate asks for a convention to limit the growth of federal spending.

"The question that would have to be faced at some point is, are all those to be counted in the same pot?" said Kevin Faley, chief counsel for the Senate Constitution Subcommittee, which is collecting state petitions.

Other questions of procedure — how delegates would be chosen, whether an amendment should be passed by a simple majority or a two-thirds vote of the convention, whether each state will get only one vote as was the case in 1787 or whether voting should be weighted according to population — are also up in the air.

But the biggest controversy is over limiting a convention to a single topic. Liberals and conservatives alike fear there is no way, even by law, to guard against a "runaway convention."

"It would put the Constitution back on the drawing board where every radical crackpot or special interest group would have a chance to write the supreme law of the land," said Howard Jarvis, the author of California's Proposition 13 that began the so-called "taxpayers' revolt."

The Senate has passed bills twice that would spell out procedures for a constitutional convention, including limiting the convention to a single topic. The House has never acted.

Legislation has been introduced in both the House and Senate again this year. But it is unlikely that it will be considered unless the magic number of 34 is reached.

"We've been closer before, quite closer before," Faley said. "Each state becomes tougher and tougher as you get closer. On a controversial issue like this and the ERA, you may get a lot of states real fast, but it becomes tougher to get those extra few states you need, so you can't automatically make the assumption that it is going to happen."

If one Congress passed rules anticipating a successful convention drive, some lawyers argue those rules would be binding only if that Congress is in session when the 34th petition is counted.

Even if Congress passed a set of procedural rules and convened a convention, some experts believe the convention delegates could change those rules. Their contention hinges on the fact that for the purpose of proposing amendments, a convention is every bit as powerful constitutionally as the Congress.

Remodeled Market Opening Thursday

Harris Supermarkets announced that a grand opening will be held Thursday at the Memorial Drive store to show customers the new sandwich shop and results of recent remodeling.

Store manager Kenneth Foy said that although the store expanded in several areas, the key change involves the sandwich shop, which features short order items for take-out service.

Duff Harris, supervisor of the shop, reported that in addition to short order items, ice cream and also popcorn and peanuts will be offered in the new section.

The remodeling, according to Foy, has increased shelf space throughout the store, with expansions noted in the meat department and also wine department. He said the meat section features a 109-foot meat counter.

Regular store hours are from 8 a.m. until 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 9 a.m. until 7 p.m. on Sundays. Sandwich shop hours are from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m. Monday through Saturday with limited hours on Sunday.

Golden Age In Mines Is Unachieved

By MARTHA BRYSON HODEL
Associated Press Writer
CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP)

—As coal mine owners and union leaders settled a bitter, winter-long strike last March, they had no way of knowing that the strife-torn coal industry would be so different, yet so much the same a year later.

Before the 110-day strike, mine owners said wildcat strikes were strangling production. Spurred by support from President Carter for greatly increased coal production, mine operators said the industry could approach a golden age if only the labor force could be stabilized.

The operators have gotten their wish — members of the United Mine Workers union have cut wildcat striking by 90 percent, according to industry sources. But the golden age has not arrived.

Thousands of Appalachian miners still sit home; their employers are unable to sell coal. Thousands of others are desperately trying to make up for the months they spent idle last summer when a strike by railroad clerks stopped coal trains.

"We deserve a spot in the sun and we haven't gotten it," said Joseph Brennan, president of the Bituminous Coal Operators Association.

"Labor-management relations have been a bane in the past," said one industry spokesman, who asked to remain anonymous. "But there's no need to worry about labor-management relations when no one's working."

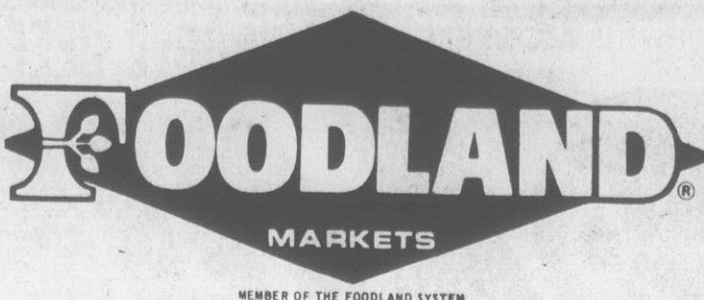

One of the main goals of the BCOA was to obtain permission to install production incentive plans. The operators said they were concerned about the declining productivity of the UMW miner — productivity that dropped from a peak of 5.61 tons per man-day in 1969 to 9.1 tons per man-day in 1976. The operators got an incentive proviso. It apparently has caused little discord, mostly because the operators have failed to use it.

According to Ed Gilbert, UMW international safety director, only "about 42" of the approximately 6,000 mines covered under the contract have implemented production incentives.

Westmoreland Coal Co., a major producer, was one company that did not make use of the incentive provision. The company's reason gives an insight into why the golden age has not arrived for the Appalachia coal industry.

"With market conditions so poor, we thought it was sort of foolish to institute a plan that would end up with us over-producing," said Steve Anderson, director of communications for the company.

South Africa and Australia now are exporting steam coal to U.S. ports in the Gulf of Mexico, according to Carl Bagge, president of the National Coal Association. "It's largely because they can deliver it at lower prices than U.S. coal."

Honor Soc. Initiates 12

ECU News Bureau
Twelve pre-medical/pre-dental students at East Carolina University have been initiated as members of the N. C. Epsilon chapter of Alpha Epsilon Delta honor society for pre-medical and pre-dental students.

The initiates were honored at a recent banquet, at which the speaker was Dr. William Laupus, dean of the ECU School of Medicine.

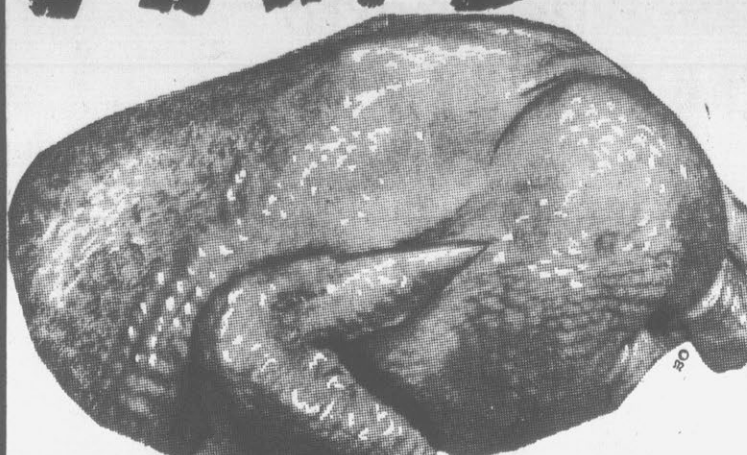

Founded in 1926, Alpha Epsilon Delta now has 50,000 members in more than 120 chapters throughout the U.S. and Canada, and is affiliated with the American Association for the Advancement of Science and the American Council on Education.

Membership is open to students planning careers in medicine or dentistry who have superior records of academic achievement.

Purpose of the society is to encourage excellence in pre-medical and pre-dental scholarship, stimulate appreciation of the importance of pre-medical education and promote cooperation and contacts between medical and pre-medical students and educators.

A&P Proudly Presents Hearthside Garden Festival HANDPAINTED STONEWARE

As refreshing as a breath of country air, the new Garden Festival stoneware dinnerware brings the beauty of bouquets of fresh flowers to your table. The exquisite handpainted artistry has been inspired by the joy of seeing blossoms blooming in a woodland garden. Light honey-colored backgrounds add a natural elegance that bring out all the subtle tones and vivid colors of the sun kissed flowers. Bordered rims add a highlight of subtle formality; the hallmark of the finest dinnerware. A dramatic new coupe shape and sculptured design of completer pieces achieve an elegance that is subtle and enduring. Every piece is reinforced by high temperature firing that assures resistance to chipping, breaking and fading; lets this dinnerware retain its refreshing new look use after use, washing after washing. 4 green onions and tops, sliced
5 slices bacon, diced
2 tablespoons wine vinegar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 coarsely chopped hard-cooked egg
Wash spinach, discarding stems. Pat dry on paper towels, then tear in bite-size pieces in bowl. Add onions and sprinkle with pepper. Refrigerate until chilled through.
