

Experts Fear Contamination

Warn Reactor May Be Junked

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Congressional experts warned today that the Three Mile Island nuclear reactor may be so contaminated by radiation that it may have to be junked. Local authorities said some schools were reopening and some of the estimated 50,000 to 250,000 residents who fled the area were returning.

Nuclear Regulatory Commission officials said the dangerous hydrogen bubble inside the reactor was continuing to shrink today, but worried that vital instruments might fail because of intense radiation — making it impossible to measure conditions inside the reactor.

Sheriff William Livingston of Dauphin County said he had heard "one or two reports of looting, but we have this kind of thing all the time. There's nothing special in it."

In Middletown, the city closest to the plant, Mayor Robert

Reid told a reporter: "I gave my police instructions that if they see any looters, shoot them."

In Washington, Sen. Gary Hart, chairman of the Public Works subcommittee on nuclear regulation, said "it might be more expensive to clean up the plant than it was to build it. It might be a $1 billion mausoleum." The $1 billion figure is generally used as the cost of the entire facility, which includes two reactors.

Rep. Morris K. Udall, chairman of the House energy subcommittee, said the contamination inside the containment building was "unprecedented in the history of nuclear power" and was "so bad it will be months before any possible cleanup can begin, if indeed a cleanup is possible."

"Nobody's seen those fuel rods, that's the trouble," Udall said. "You can't open up the top of the reactor and look in, it's just too badly contaminated in there."

But an NRC spokesman in Harrisburg said: "Our feeling is that it's too early to say what the situation will be," about the reactor's future. A decontamination expert was summoned from Washington to examine the damage to the reactor and its instruments.

Pre-school children and pregnant women were still being kept at least five miles away from Three Mile Island, and public schools in a 10-mile radius remained closed. But Catholic schools reopened today and public schools outside the five-mile circle were to reopen Wednesday.

"People we haven't seen for a couple of days are back," says J.E. Krug, manager of Sears and Roebuck store here. He said 25 percent of his workforce was absent Monday, but many had returned today.

Preparing 3 Other Sites

New Solid Waste Site Opened

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Commissioners, at a noon ceremony at Bethel yesterday, opened the county's fifth solid waste container site, designed to provide residents a place to dispose of their solid waste without having to drive to the county landfill.

In addition to the Bethel site, which will also serve as a transfer site for the Town of Bethel's collection trucks, other one operational include sites on the County Home Road near Bell's Fork, at the old county landfill on the Stantonsburg Road just West of Greenville, the Farmville transfer site, and a container site at the landfill gate behind Greenwood Cemetery in Greenville.

County Manager Reginald Gray told commissioners that work is under way on three other sites — including a site near Stokes on N.C. 903, a site between Grimesland and Simpson on secondary road 1763, and the Falkland site, located at the intersection of N.C. 43 and the Belvoir road — is under way.

Gray noted that, "no work at all," has been done at the Sheldermine site, and said the county has, "not been able to locate a site," in the Ayden-Grifton area.

Commissioners authorized the purchase of a used state motor grader at a cost not to exceed $5,500, for use in construction of the solid waste container sites and their

Tiny Turnout

Only a fraction of the registered voters in Greenville had visited the polls by 10 a.m. today to indicate their preferences on the $24 million utility bond issues.

Margaret Register, Pitt Board of Elections supervisor, said that reports from seven of the nine local precincts indicated a turnout for the first three and a half hours of just over 200 voters.

Some 11,766 Greenville citizens were registered and eligible to vote in today's referendum, she mentioned.

The precinct reports included: Greenville One (VFW Hut), six votes; Five (American Legion Building), 42 votes; Six (Fifth Street Fire Station), 19 votes; Seven (Elm Street Gym), 42 votes; Eight (Willis Building), 34 votes; Nine (Gardner Fire Station), 51 votes; and Ten (Aycock School), 30 votes.

Next Talks In The Sinai

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat and Prime Minister Menachem Begin agreed today to meet again next month, in Egypt's Sinai Desert and Israel's Negev, and to keep up their peace effort in defiance of the vehement opposition of other Arab leaders.

With Sadat nodding assent beside him, Begin announced after a conference with his host that they will meet next in El Arish, the capital of Sinai, on May 27, the day after Israel gives up that city on the Mediterranean coast as the first step in its three-year withdrawal from the Sinai Peninsula.

Begin said later that day he and Sadat would go by helicopter to Beersheba, the capital of Israel's Negev Desert adjoining Sinai, for more talks.

The prime minister said at these meetings they would declare the borders between Egypt and Israel open and would open an air corridor from Cairo to Israel's Ben-Gurion Airport.

"President Sadat and I have promised each other to continue our direct contacts so that progress is also made in the future," said Begin. "We decided that after so long a period of state of war, nations can make peace and, more than that, can establish friendship and good neighborliness."

Begin also announced that Israeli and Egyptian cabinet ministers will open talks in five weeks on the crucial question of autonomous self-rule for the 1.1 million Palestinians of the occupied Gaza Strip and West Bank of the Jordan River.

These talks will be held alternately in El Arish and Beersheba, he said.

The two leaders said they also decided that after the Egyptian Parliament ratifies the peace treaty Monday or Tuesday, Acting Foreign Minister Butros Ghali of Egypt will bring the document to Jerusalem, and Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan will fly to Cairo with the ratified Israeli copy of the treaty.

Begin said before he returned to Jerusalem today, he and Sadat would telephone President Carter and tell him about their meeting.

"We established friendship between the two nations," said the Israeli leader. "Now there is real friendship between the people of Israel and the people of Egypt. This is more important than anything else. This will decide the future."

Egypt's capital responded with increasing friendliness to Begin today.

D.C. Bill Has Boggled Down

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — A bill endorsing the proposition of granting the District of Columbia voting members in Congress has bogged down in the Legislature and may be dead, for this year at least.

In the House, Democrats failed to garner enough votes Monday to bring the bill up for debate. In the Senate, where the measure had been scheduled for a vote, sponsors said the measure had lost several backers and appeared unlikely to pass.

The proposition must be approved by at least 38 states by August 1985, in order to become law.

Funds Studied By School Board

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Consideration of ways in which possible bond monies can be used, and an in-depth scrutiny of the proposed Current Expense budget for the 1979-1980 school year preoccupied members of the Greenville Board of Education information meeting Monday night.

Although no action is taken at these monthly information meetings, the board expressed a consensus of priorities that have been outlined for use of bond money that would amount to $2,813,130. This is the share of the proposed $9 million school bond money that would go to Greenville schools; the remaining $6,186,870 would go to Pitt County Schools. A public referendum on the bond issue will be held June 8.

Four basic projects have received agreement by school board members as major proposed expenditures for the bond monies. These are:

Project I — Renovation/Replacement of heat and air conditioning system at E. B. Aycock Junior High School, 110,000 square feet at $4.50 per square foot, — $495,000; plus engineer's fee, $49,500, for a total of $544,500.

Project II — Reorganization and upgrading of physical education and athletic fields for the city schools, $350,000.

Originally directed to improvements and facilities at Aycock, board members agree that the best approach is to set aside the $350,000 to be used either at Aycock, Rose or the Middle School as a beginning phase of what would hopefully be a continuing program of providing needed athletic facilities within the city school system.

Project III — Provision of additional classrooms at Greenville Middle School, $795,300; and an auto mechanics shop at J. H. Rose High School, $209,000, for a total of $1,004,300.

In consideration of this project, discussion included the factors of maintaining the school for grades six and seven and also for the possibility of changing the concept of open classrooms to a more enclosed type of structure for the proposed 14 new classrooms. In this regard, board members are in agreement that if necessary, about $43,000 would be pulled from Project IV to be used as architectural fees for the added expense of a new design plan should a decision be made later to go to a closed classrooms concept.

Project IV — Auditorium at J. H. Rose High School designed to seat between 800 and 1,000 persons — at a cost of $1,000 per seat for a total of $914,300. (This is the project subject to a reduction of 40 to 50 seats if the $43,000 for Middle School is eventually pulled from this project).

The four projects outlined above would total the $2,813,130 in bond monies that would go to the Greenville City schools in the event of successful passage of the $9 million June 8 bond issue referendum.

Current Expense Budget — More than two hours were spent by board members analyzing items in the proposed 1979-1980 Current Expense portion of the budget.

The budget proposal of more than 100 pages (of which 19 pages to date have been revised) represents an overall current expense budget proposal of $2,268,749.

A breakdown by major categories of sources of revenue shows that of the eight million plus total, $4,789,708 would be funded from the state public school fund; $828,594 would come from various federal grant funds; and $2,650,447 would come from three sources — $2,012,908 from county appropriation, $477,699 from state sources of a local nature, and $5,000 from a federal impact area grant.

At this time the budget is in a shape-up stage, and more revisions are due before a final estimate is arrived at to be voted on and then presented to the county commissioners.

Urging Aid To Victims

WASHINGTON (AP) — North Carolina Attorney General Rufus Edmisten urged Congress today to approve legislation that would provide federal funds to help states compensate crime victims.

Edmisten told the House Subcommittee on Criminal Justice that the North Carolina General Assembly is considering a Victim's Compensation Act that would provide up to $10,000 to victims of crime, provided that federal assistance is available.

"Crime victims are often victimized twice, once by the criminal and once by the justice system," Edmisten said in remarks prepared for delivery before the subcommittee.

"This victim's Compensation Bill is a recognition of the importance of active and willing victim participation in our criminal justice system," he said. "The success we in law enforcement have in deterring, detecting and prosecuting crime rests largely on the cooperation of the victim."

Under the legislation under consideration by Congress, the federal government would pay 25 percent of the costs of state programs to compensate crime victims.

Back To Face 100 Warrants

Two persons sought by the Pitt County Sheriff's Department on over 100 warrants for worthless checks were arrested this past weekend in South Carolina.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that Barbara W. Ross of Box 1025, Winterville, and McDavis Wells of Rt. 2, Box 515, Greenville, were arrested in Sumter, S.C. on Pitt warrants and after waiving extradition, were returned Sunday to Pitt County.

Ross is charged on 52 worthless check counts and Wells on 53 counts, the sheriff said. The charges stemmed from incidents dating back to last November, he added.

Hearings were scheduled for today in District Court here.

According to the sheriff, Ross and McDavis are also wanted by authorities in Wake, Edgecombe, Lenoir and Beaufort Counties.

Reports Only Four City Housing Units Vacant

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Four units out of 642 operated by the Housing Authority were vacant at the end of March, according to the tenant occupancy report for the month submitted at Monday night's meeting.

The report, prepared by Sallye Streeter, director of tenant affairs, indicated that overall rent average for the 642 units was $75.39.

Individual averages for the various developments included: NC 22-1 (Meadowbrook), $70.19; NC 22-2 (Kearney Park), $78.37; NC 22-3 (Moyewood), $73.51; NC 22-4 (Moyewood), $75.73; NC 22-5 (Hopkins Park), $62.09; and NC 22-6 (Newtown), $72.53.

Mrs. Streeter noted in her report that annual reexaminations have begun in the Newtown development and inspections are underway in Moyewood and Kearney Park. The new Hopkins Park units will be placed on the yearly examination schedule, she reported.

Joe Laney, executive director, said that a bond underwriting firm is still pursuing the search for a buyer for the unrated bond sale on the proposed 60-unit mid-rise housing project for the elderly off Third Street.

Laney said that the underwriting firm submitted to the Authority the first draft of a descriptive circular on the Section Eight project, describing in detail what the project involves, the budget, information regarding the Housing Authority and other general material. The circular will be distributed to prospective buyers.

The director added that the underwriters have located a prospective buyer and the Greenville project is being considered along with several other Section Eight proposals.

In another matter, Laney discussed with commissioners the proposed housing assistance plan for the city covering the three-year fiscal period commencing in July and running through 1982. The plan was submitted by the city as part of its Community Development application for fiscal year 1980.

Laney noted that the plan indicates three-year goals for low and moderate income family housing needs.

Based on a Postal Service survey conducted last November, there are a total of 12,287 dwelling units in the city, the plan reports. The city estimates that of the total housing units, 10,266 are standard and 2,021 are substandard. Laney said the vacancy rate among the standard units is only 1.8 percent.

According to the assistance plan, it is estimated that there are 2,854 low income households in need of housing assistance and it is projected that three-year assistance for homeowners will be aided by some 400 units provided through public housing, new construction, rehabilitation loans, and CD loans and grants. Rentor assistance needs over the three-year period should be provided through new construction from both the public and private sector, assistance payments for relocation, and rehabilitation of existing units.

Currently, there are 942 low income housing units available in the city, including 642 operated by the Housing Authority.

FEEDBACK

NOT A LOCAL FIRM

The firm mentioned in a Mar. 19 Hotline item as not following through on printing placemats for which it had sold advertisements was not a local firm. This clarification is made at the request of Creative Concepts Inc., a local firm that does sell this kind of advertising. The firm mentioned was not Creative Concepts nor any other firm headquartered in the immediate area.

David Poston, manager of the Western Steer Steak House, who requested the appeal, says he still has not heard from several of the merchants who placed ads for the placemats to be used in his restaurant. He would like to hear from them so he can go ahead with the printing of the mats, he indicated. His phone number is 752-1204.

GREAT SUCCESS!

Ellis and Tony Banks, who conducted a yard and bake sale at Rose High School last Saturday to benefit Hack and Denise Hackney, former Greenville area residents who were injured in a wreck in Florida, report a booming success. "We made over $900!" Mrs. Banks said. "People were so nice. Many brought baked and yard sale goods, and many paid more than they needed to for what they bought. I've always thought people were basically good, but now I know it!"

The Banks report that the Hackneys will soon be returning to North Carolina. Hack is still comatose, they say, but is able, his doctors say, to be moved by airplane to a hospital in Greensboro, where his parents live. Denise, who is out of the hospital, but still having daily physical therapy, will live with his family and go for treatment daily at the same hospital. It is hoped that, if air transportation can be arranged for, the couple can be moved this week.

SOLD TO THE MAN WITH $861,000—Claude Monet's 1837 painting of a railway bridge over the river Seine at Argenteuil, was sold at Sotheby's salesroom Monday for $861,000 to an anonymous European buyer. The painting was one of 16 owned by California collector Sydney Barlow, which brought a total of $4,836,000 during a sale of impressionist and modern works. The $861,000 represents a 545 percent increase in the price of the Monet since it was last sold in 1963. (AP Laserphoto)

Mother Of Condemned Inmate Appeals To A Federal Judge

Seek Odorless Water Supply

WILLIAMSTON — Members of the Williamston Town Board are seeking ways to eliminate a strong fragrance that has infiltrated into the local water supply. At the board's April meeting on Monday night, Jim Higdon of Greenville reported that the problem comes from the presence of hydrogen sulfide gas created by sulfur bacteria in the water supply.

Higdon's recommendation is to chlorinate the town's water supply. The board will consider Higdon's recommendation and come to a decision on what action to take at a later date.

Successful bidder for construction of a six-foot fence at the new Williamston Fire Station was Whitehurst and Sons of Greenville for that firm's bid of $1,090.

Changes to the personnel ordinance were adopted. Under the changes, the town will not be required to pay social security taxes on sick or personal leave time of town employees. This action was taken on the advice of the town's consultant, the MICA firm of Durham.

Approval was given for Henry Leggett, Executive Director of Williamston Housing Authority, to file an application for an additional 50 units of low-rental housing.

In other actions, $1,065 was approved as funds for a janitor at the Senior Citizens office for a three-month period; Bobby McClees was elected chairman of the Recreation Commission to succeed Rv. Jim Horton, who resigned; and annexation of the Santree Retirement House west of Williamston was approved.

MOBILE, Ala. (AP)—The mother of condemned inmate John Louis Evans III, overruling his often-stated plea for death in the electric chair on Friday, has appealed to a federal judge to block the execution.

U.S. District Court Judge W.B. Hand was scheduled to review the petition at 4 p.m. today.

Evans, who repeatedly has said he prefers death to a lifetime of imprisonment, reportedly was distraught when he first learned the appeal would be filed but was "quite calm" about it Monday.

"He was quiet. He was much calmer. He spent the day writing. He has no fear," said Rev. Kevin Duignan, a Catholic priest in Altmore who has befriended Evans and spent part of Monday with him on Death Row at Holman Prison.

Duignan said Evans understands his mother's desire in the appeal but nevertheless opposes the petition. He said Evans spent much of Monday drafting a final statement to the press to be given Wednesday.

The petition, which identified the mother as Betty Evans of Beaumont, Texas, was filed for her late Monday by attorney John Carroll of the Southern Poverty Law Center in Montgomery. Carroll previously represented Evans.

The mother was not present when Carroll filed the court papers.

The petition argues that the electrocution should be blocked on grounds of error in Evans' trial and the unconstitutionality of Alabama's death penalty law.

It also alleges that Evans is "incapable of maintaining the proceeding himself or of protecting his own federal constitutional rights not to be subjected to the illegal sentence of death."

If no court intervenes, Evans will become the first inmate executed in America since Gary Gilmore died before a Utah firing squad on Jan. 17, 1977.

Gilmore, like Evans, refused to appeal his death sentence. Gilmore's mother appealed in vain to have the U.S. Supreme Court block the execution pending review of the case. Carroll, however, said Monday there were differences in the court petitions filed in the Gilmore and Evans cases.

"There are lots of legal grounds not foreclosed by the Gilmore case," said Carroll.

The petition from Evans' mother argues that Alabama's 1975 death penalty law, which was used to convict Evans of robbery-murder, is unconstitutional. The U.S. Supreme Court has not as yet ruled on the legality of the state's law.

The petition also contends that the trial judge, while defining the charge of murder for the jury, erred by failing to define the related charge of robbery.

The petition did not elaborate on the reference to Evans' capacity to handle the legal appeal available to him.

No Libbers In The Class

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Deborah Hyatt wants equal pay for equal work, but she still likes a car door opened for her now and then.

Miss Hyatt, a 23-year-old Waynesville resident, joined Medina Styles, 21, of Bryson City at the ungodly hour of 5 a.m. Monday for the first day of training at the Highway Patrol's Basic School.

There were 45 male cadets on hand, but reporters weren't interested in them.

"Equal pay for equal work, yes," said Miss Hyatt. "But all the rest of the stuff, no. I'm not here on any crusade."

Added Miss Styles, "It doesn't matter if I'm the 50th or the first. It's something I wanted to do, and I'm going to do it."

The women, garbed in blue jeans, tee shirts and sneakers, began their day with calisthenics and followed the exercise with classroom work.

Miss Hyatt said there is no way to tell how she would react to a tense situation involving the use of deadly force.

"Each situation would be different, so it would be hard to say how we would react," she said.

Maj. D.R. Emory said the women will participate in the same training program as the men who hope to become highway patrol troopers. He said the two will receive no preferential treatment in the 16-week, 700-hour course.

Emory said both women met the same requirements as the male cadets, including an in-depth background investigation and satisfactory performance on occupational aptitude, vision and physical examinations.

Plant Preparing Issue Emission Control Order

FARMVILLE — The State's Environmental Management Commission has announced its intent to issue a Special Order by Consent to Collins and Aikman Corp. here which is currently operating in violation of North Carolina's air pollution control requirements.

The proposed order would require Collins and Aikman to achieve compliance with the pollution control standards by July 1.

Jerry Clayton of the Environmental Management Commission's enforcement and emergency response branch said in Raleigh today that a notice of violation was sent to Collins and Aikman in October 1978. He noted that the violation involved the "control of visible emissions...the amount of visible smoke" coming from the plant, located on U.S. 264 at the southern edge of the town.

Clayton noted that the Special Order by Consent, which was "negotiated" with officials of the company, requires Collins and Aikman to install mist eliminators or other equipment to control the emissions.

Persons wishing to comment on the proposed order, or those wishing to request a public hearing on the order may submit written statements or requests to H. Vance Holt, Acting Coordinator, Enforcement and Emergency Response, Division of Environmental Management, P. O. Box 27687, Raleigh, N.C. 27611.

Persons requesting a public hearing should, in addition to the written request, submit a statement supporting the need for a hearing and a brief summary of the information intended to be offered at such a hearing.

Any requests for a hearing should be within 15 days, while any comments on the proposed order should be made within 30 days.

Long Agenda Of Minor Items At Board Meet

WILLIAMSTON — Martin County Commissioners at the April meeting on Monday faced a long agenda of minor items, with no major action taken.

Among items considered and action taken were:

— A request by the County School Board for funds to purchase an advance supply of 85,000 gallons of No. 2 fuel was considered. The board asked the school board to look for funds in the current school budget.

— Approved $2,580 for the Senior Citizens outreach program provided the director, Betty Griffin, would accept the funds from a CETA slot.

— Decided that a request for a donation to help foot the bill for foreign students who will be visiting Martin County did not warrant use of tax money.

— Directed the county attorney to check out the ownership of a house and to further check on lease arrangements of the house, near Oak City, as a rural health planning center for the Mid-East Commission.

— Approved April 15 as the final date of listing property for taxes before the 15 percent penalty for late listing would take effect. This provides a cut-off date for the earlier extension from the last day of January.

— Approved a motion to let bids for a garbage truck; and also approved a motion to advertise bids for a septic tank, a well, and yard work at No. 90 station on the Jamesville highway, a place used for voter registration and other community activities.

— Appointed attorney Regina Moore to fill the unexpired term of William Griffin on the Tideland Mental Health Board.

The tax collector reported that as of the end of March, 93.46 percent of taxes had been collected, and that relief orders had been carried out in the several cases of double listing.

Arrest Trio For Larceny

Three persons have been arrested by Pitt County deputies following investigation of a March 17 break-in at facilities owned by the N.C. Department of Transportation on N. Green Street.

Two of the three, according to Sheriff Ralph Tyson, were charged with felonious breaking and entering of the D.O.T. facilities and larceny of seven truck tires that were stored there.

Sheriff Tyson said that Dennis Earl Person, 20, of Rt. 2, Box 156, Robersonville, and Bonnie Mitchell Purvis, 20, of Rt. 2, Box 155, Robersonville, were charged on the breaking, entering and larceny counts.

The sheriff said that Jennis Floyd Coggins Jr. of Rt. 4, Box 4-B, Greenville was charged with receiving stolen property in connection with the incident. Coggins, Sheriff Tyson said, allegedly received five tires valued at $1,000.

Bond for each of the three was set at $500.

Drug Case Being Tried

Motions were being heard in Pitt County Superior Court this morning in connection with the trial of Rebecca Keith Ledford on drug-law violation charges.

Mrs. Ledford and her husband, Hugh Wesley Ledford, were charged after Greenville Police, assisted by agents of the State Bureau of Investigation and Drug Enforcement Administration agents found between $500,000 and $750,000 worth of cocaine, $7,500 worth of marijuana, and $5,050 in cash in their 2505B Dickinson Ave. home November 9, 1978.

Officers found three pounds of cocaine, 12 pounds of marijuana, 10 pounds of marijuana seed, and the cash, during the search.

One motion being heard by the court this morning was a to dismiss the charges against Mrs. Ledford under the state's speedy trial law, indicating the state had failed to give her a speedy trial.

The charges against Mr. Ledford were also scheduled for trial in Superior Court this week.

According to the "Wall Street Journal," liberation of women has brought about an increase in the number of men who shop for groceries.

This, in turn, has loused up the advertising campaigns. Men obviously buy products for different reasons than women.

Offhand, I'd guess that men don't get too choked up about whether their wives would prefer dressing to potatoes, get fussy about peanut butter for their children, or care much if their cats danced all the way to dinner.

If someone offered my husband $50 for his old shirt in a laundromat, he'd throw in his entire closet.

Dear Abby

Battered Wife Finds New Life

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I just left a shelter for abused women and I'm starting a new job and a new life.

Abby, please tell women who are being abused by their men that there IS help, but they can't do it alone.

Get to a shelter where you're safe! Take your children with you. Don't call him. He'll only put out his hooks to get you to come back. You'll hear his same promises to get counseling or go to A.A., which will promptly be forgotten once you're home and under his control again. He didn't get that way overnight, and he won't change overnight either. Or in a week. Or a month.

Don't let your children grow up thinking this is a normal way of life. Children of abusers become abusers themselves. Don't believe that a bad father is better than no father at all.

The end of battering is death, either of the body or of the soul. There's help out there. Get it before it's too late!

I spend more than an hour each morning driving my child to a day care center and then driving to work. I'm up before 6 a.m. and drop into bed exhausted every night. But it's worth it. I'm now free of abuse and beginning to enjoy life again. Women, memorize the phone number of the shelter for abused women!

FREE AT LAST IN ANCHORAGE, ALASKA

DEAR FREE: Unfortunately, there is not a shelter for abused women in every community—but I hope one day there will be.

DEAR ABBY: You missed the boat when MIDGE asked if she should tell her cigar-smoking, pot-bellied suitor she'd marry him if he quit smoking and got rid of his pot. You said, "Take him as he is, or not at all."

When a man is courting a woman, he will do anything to win her. Any suggestions she makes to him during the courtship will be considered "suggestions for improvement." After they're married, it's called "nagging."

Please reconsider.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

DEAR ONE: True. Some men will do anything to win a woman, but after he's won her, he reverts to his old ways. Somehow I can't see a cigar-smoking man who loves to eat give up such notoriously addictive habits permanently.

DEAR ABBY: Every time I hear some ninny say "congratulations" to a girl who has become engaged or married I want to scream.

Don't they know that it is not proper to congratulate the girl? They're supposed to congratulate the MAN, and wish the girl luck.

Please put this in your column, Abby. I'm sure a lot of people could use the information.

A FRIEND IN ALAMOGORDO, N.M.

DEAR FRIEND: True, one congratulates the man and wishes the girl luck. But in many instances, it's the GIRL who deserves the congratulations and the MAN who needs the luck.

DEAR ABBY: I discovered quite by accident that one of my children has an entirely different blood type than mine. I made some inquiries and have been informed that it is not possible for me to be this boy's father. Obviously my wife has been unfaithful to me.

After more than 12 years of a fairly happy marriage, I am at a loss as to what I should do.

Should I confront my wife with this and demand that she tell me the whole story? Or since there is nothing I can do about it now, should I keep my mouth shut and try to live with this very disturbing knowledge?

SHOCKED AND UNDECIDED

DEAR SHOCKED: You have been misinformed. It IS possible for a child to have an entirely different blood type than the father. So unless you have more conclusive evidence to support your suspicions, the word from here is cool it, Dad.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "ARIES IN MANHATTAN": There is no substitute for brains. The next best thing is silence.

Wedding bells in your future? Whether your lifestyle is bridal gown or blue jeans, Abby lays it all out for you in her booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

see Robert Conrad put a can of Tidy Bowl on his shoulder and challenge you to "Knock it off! I dare you!" Or a man who mixes a pitcher of Kool-Aid and says to his kids, "You only go around once in this life and you might just as well go around with all the gusto you can get!"

Until this happens, men are just going to be content getting a cheap thrill out of squeezing the you-know-what with Mr. Whipple.

Is There An Easter Bunny?

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: I am 6 years old. Some of my friends say there is no Easter Bunny.

Mama says, "Ask Cecily. If you see it in her column it's so."

Please tell me the truth. Is there an Easter Bunny? — KERI.

DEAR KERI: On Easter Sunday some young children, waking to find marvelous colored eggs, believe the Easter Bunny brought them. But often their friends scoff at the idea.

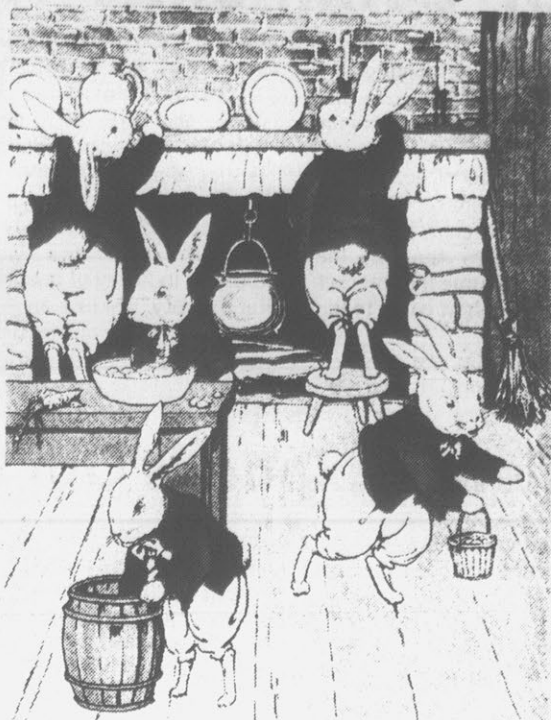

Is there a real Easter Bunny? You might as well ask: Is there a real Peter Rabbit?

Peter Rabbit was the creation of a gifted lady named Beatrix Potter. She wrote a story about him called "The Tale of Peter Rabbit" and painted some enchanting pictures to illustrate it.

That was over 75 years ago — long, long before you were born — and yet today Peter Rabbit is still with us. So are his mother; his sisters, Flopsy, Mopsy and Cotton-tail; and Mr. McGregor, in whose garden Peter lost a shoe in a cabbage patch. Peter Rabbit will go on living as long as there is an English language.

Yes, Keri, there is an Easter Bunny — just as there is a Peter Rabbit. You can tell your friends that the Easter Bunny came into being because some people wanted to give small girls and boys a special taste of joy on Easter Sunday. The Easter Bunny sprang from a lovely thing called imagination, and from the good feelings fathers and mothers and grandparents and aunts and uncles have for children. Although you can't see or touch imagination and feelings, they are just as real as eggs and cabbage patches.

As far as I know, Beatrix Potter never told whether Peter Rabbit colored eggs for Easter. But I believe he did — with red cabbage leaves and brown onion skins from Mr. McGregor's garden. — CECILY.

HUNTING FOR EASTER EGGS—As pictured by Helen Frances Lyon in the 1920s. From the culinary print collection of AP Food Editor Cecily Brownstone.

BUNNY-STYLE EASTER EGGS

Warm 2 large white eggs under the hot water tap. Put them in a 1½-quart saucepan. Tear off 3 large dark red leaves from the outside of a red cabbage head and tear each leaf in half. Cover the eggs with the leaves and add 3 cups hot tap water. Simmer for 30 minutes, uncovered. (The eggs will still be white.) Cover the saucepan and let stand at room temperature for 2 hours. The eggs will turn a beautiful mottled blue.

Follow the previous directions but instead of red cabbage leaves, use a big handful of brown onion skins and 3½ cups water. (The onion skins will float.) After simmering, the eggs will look pale orange; after letting them stand 2 hours they will turn a handsome terra-cotta color. The onion water can be used to color 2 more eggs in the same way.

Room For Communist Trade

A couple of decades back there was a general abhorrence to trading with communists nations. Now, however, we are coming to recognize that communist societies represent large markets for capitalist-made goods.

Oscar K. Moore, ECU professor of economics, pointed out at a tobacco symposium recently that the rate of increase in tobacco consumption is greater in communist countries than in the capitalist world. Thus we can assume that market growth for U.S. grown tobacco might come in the communist countries.

A publication from Tiffany & Co. we received recently noted that there is only one economic system and that is capitalism.

"Russia, China, America and all others operate under the capitalistic system, no matter what they call it," the publication said. "The difference is that in some countries the capital is owned by the government, and in others by private individuals or groups of private individuals."

We are convinced that the privately owned tobacco industry of our nation can produce a better quality product more efficiently, and even take advantage of the demand for the product in communist dominated societies.

Today's Science Expands Our Universe

The wondrous expanse that we on earth call the Universe is continually unfolding to us through scientific advancement.

Last week a photo was transmitted of the skies taken with an x-ray telescope. A huge burst in the scene was identified as a quasar, whose x-ray sources probably started 10 billion years ago. It was a fascinating view of the heavens through the x-rays that our eyes cannot normally see. The vastness of the Universe is gradually being revealed to us.

Loopholes In Sentencing

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — A legislative proposal to establish a "Fair Sentencing System" in North Carolina's criminal law is being called a "Fair-to-Middling Sentencing System" by its critics and lukewarm supporters.

If the purpose was, as originally conceived by its backers, to bring certainty and swiftness of punishment to wrongdoers, then the measure finally produced by the administration of Gov. Jim Hunt appears to fall short.

Court Administrator Bert Montague speaks neither praise nor condemnation for the proposal, although he would certainly fall in the category of those who do not favor the changes.

"No one has yet shown that the idea is great. Similar measures have only been tried in two or three other states, and that just recently."

"But at the same time, no one has shown that our present system is working so well, and in light of that we can't really pick up this new one", Montague said.

Montague's position of closeness to justices of the Supreme Court and Appeals Court generally means he reflects the attitudes of those bodies.

Labels

The brief history of change in the names used to label the proposition help to illustrate what has happened to sentencing reform.

As originally conceived several years back by the Commission on Corrections and Sentencing chaired by former State Senator Eddie Knox of Charlotte, the approach was labeled "Fixed Sentencing". The object was to rigidly classify crimes and resulting sentences, taking away in large measure the discretion of court officials in handing out punishment.

The judges and district attorneys reacted strongly against that, as did defense lawyers who saw their bargaining tools slipping away.

Resulting was a proposal called "Presumptive Sentencing" which sought a middle ground at which crimes would be classified and the proper punishment "presumed" to be a certain sentence. To deviate from that presumptive sentence, the court would have to put down in writing the reasons, and an automatic appeals court review of all felony trials was built into that approach.

BILL
NOBLITT

Again, objections carried the measure into further study rather than legislative consideration, including opposition from interests concerned with the present parole system. Either approach would have eliminated paroles in favor of a time certain which the prisoner must serve.

Some opposition also resulted from the fact that in fixing certain sentences to be served completely, most sentences were actually reduced in length. The rationale for that: present sentences are overly long since parole can occur after one-fourth. The judges satisfy public demand for stiff sentences, while also satisfying family and friends who want short terms.

Change
From the months of behind-scene debate and in-fighting has finally emerged the proposal now in the hands of the General Assembly, labeled Fair Sentencing.

Gov. Jim Hunt set the stage for the need of sentencing reform, and paved the way for the new proposal in his crime message to the General Assembly earlier this year.

"Disrespect for our courts ... results from the lack of fairness and certainty in our criminal sentencing I called North Carolina's system of sentencing a public lottery. I believe that even more strongly today. Neither lawbreakers nor lawabiders can respect a system that gives one man 20 years for manslaughter and another man six months in similar circumstances," Hunt said.

The discretionary system was based on the theory that sentencing was for rehabilitation, and when that was accomplished the prisoner should be freed.

"In North Carolina, and throughout the nation, those theories have not proved out in practice," Hunt observed, in calling for fair and swift punishment. — More tomorrow

UNINVITED VACATION COUNSELOR!

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Untouchable Incumbents

WASHINGTON — A House committee completed hearings last week on an innocent little bill to amend the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971. The bill might more accurately be titled the Incumbents' Protection Act of 1979, for that is its primary purpose — to make the untouchable incumbent even less touchable than he has been before.

The ostensible aim of the bill, sponsored chiefly by Abner Mikva of Illinois, is to provide for the payment of public funds to candidates for the House of Representatives in general elections. The bill would not apply to primaries, and it would not apply to races for the Senate (Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts has a bill in the upper chamber for that purpose).

It is hard to quarrel with the theory behind the bill. The theory is that by limiting individual contributions to not more than $1,000, and by limiting a candidate's total expenditures (including federal matching money) to $195,000, the pernicious influence of fat cats and influence peddlers could be reduced. Sweetness and light would prevail; the principles of right conduct would triumph, and confidence would be restored in the honesty and integrity of the House.

But there is more to this proposition than meets the eye. Without challenging the purity of Mikva's intentions, it has to be observed that the effect of his proposal would be to buy further political insurance for incumbent members of the House — and these pampered darlings are marvelously comfy as it is.

A year or so ago, Americans for Democratic Action made a study of the advantages of incumbency. At public expense, a sitting representative is provided with staff, with office equipment, with stationery and supplies, with a handsome budget for long-distance telephone calls. An incumbent gets a home office, also staffed at public expense. He has the use of cut-rate radio and TV studios. His newsletter, praising his achievements, is mailed at public expense. He travels to and from his district at public expense. All told, said the ADA, an incumbent begins his run for re-election with a $567,000 advantage over a challenger.

That is not all. The incumbent has an enormous, incalculable advantage over the typical challenger: The incumbent is news and the challenger often is not news. The incumbent is constantly voting, speaking, posing for photographs. An analyst for the Heritage Foundation observes that this intangible asset of newsworthiness is probably "worth more than all the other benefits put together."

Given these circumstances, it is no wonder that Democrats who dominate both House and Senate look with favor upon any law that would stifle their opposition. It is equally understandable that Bill Brock, Republican national chairman, would regard the Mikva bill as a stroke of deliberate discrimination against the GOP.

Writing in the current issue of Commonsense, Brock pours it on. Public financing of congressional elections "will deal the final death blow to our two-party system." The scheme would be impossible to administer; (Continued on page 5)

Summit Health Hurdle

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter and Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev could meet at a summit as early as next month if the Kremlin approves American proposals to remove the last roadblock to a new strategic arms limitation treaty.

Word from Moscow is expected by the end of the week.

But the two leaders might not meet in Washington, where Brezhnev, burdened at 72 by several ailments, would have to endure tiring ceremonies and dinners.

On several occasions during the protracted negotiations, the Soviets hinted that Brezhnev would also find a long trip difficult. As a result, a summit might be held in Hawaii or Alaska.

The last two U.S.-Soviet summits were in 1974 in Moscow and Vladivostok in Siberia. The Carter administration feels it is now Brezhnev's turn to come to this country and is opposed to a signing at a neutral point, such as Geneva, Switzerland.

Reports that Brezhnev's health is failing began circulating Friday.

American doctors were rumored to be rushing to his bedside, but the State Department contacted several prominent physicians and said it found no substance to the reports.

As for the treaty itself, the one major hurdle left involves verification — how to know if the other side is cheating.

Specifically, the administration is concerned that the Russians may be encoding missile testing data beamed to earth by Soviet rockets.

This could make it more difficult to deduce, for instance, if land-based missiles were being (Continued on page 5)

40 Years Ago Today

April 3, 1939

Agreeing with Representative Page of Bladen County, in his statement that "the people of North Carolina don't think the members of the general assembly are worth the money they are now paid," the house Monday defeated the proposal, 46 to 44, to submit a constitutional amendment for increased pay.

Offered some time ago by Representative Mallison of Pamlico County, the bill would have authorized an amendment to increase pay of General Assembly members from $600 for the session to $900, and to increase the pay of presiding officers to $1,000. It was debated at length Saturday, but a vote was dodged when it was discovered that there were not as many as three-fifths of the house members present. That vote was required for passage of the bill.

The best argument against the matter was made by Representative Ross of Randolph County, who said "this is not the way to amend the constitution." He pointed to the ill fortune which has followed the amendments adopted recently, and suggested the idea of a regular constitutional convention to revamp the whole basic law of the state. He said he believed the pay increase amendment to be ill-considered.

THE INSIDE REPORT

The Backstage Struggle

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Secretary of Energy James Schlesinger betrayed undeniable satisfaction early last week when he informed oil industry lobbyists that President Carter's "first option" on energy, unveiled to them a few days earlier, had been shot down by Democratic senators.

The satisfaction stemmed from Schlesinger's opposition to that "first option," making decontrol of crude oil prices dependent on a massive oil severance tax, which would wipe out the benefits of decontrol. For months he has been fighting backstage with the White House over energy. Schlesinger has argued that significant decontrol is essential for national security to expand the supply of energy; many Carter political advisers fear it may be the last straw alienating the liberal community.

With Carter's delayed energy message now nearly finished, Schlesinger has scored a limited victory. The decontrol plan is less thorough than Schlesinger would prefer in removing Uncle Sam's heavy hand from energy production, but it goes well beyond the desires of White House staffers.

It is remarkable that, after more than two years in office, Carter has spent the last two weeks still seeking an energy strategy. Even more remarkable is Schlesinger's new role as decontroller-in-chief.

The pipe-smoking Dr. Schlesinger remains the butt of fuzzy-bureaucrat jokes at businessmen's conventions. He is still a candidate for lynching in Texas, where Gov. William Clements (his arch-enemy and former deputy at the Pentagon) poisons the well. Contrary to this largely uninformed hostility, Schlesinger has cast off his former role of puritanical conservationist and has recognized the necessity for promoting energy production.

"I think Schlesinger has gotten religion late in life," one well-informed oil lobbyist told us. Indeed, the energy secretary has helped educate the president and his staff, attributing oil shortages to massive government interference which began in response to the 1973 Arab oil boycott. Thus, Schlesinger's erstwhile critics in big oil now support him; the political left, led by Sen. George McGovern, demands a new secretary of energy.

Oil lobbyists, accordingly, were unpleasantly surprised by the "first option" presented to them March 23 by presidential aide Stuart Eizenstat. The good news was that the president would totally decontrol oil prices. The overriding bad news was that decontrol would depend on congressional passage of a $3-a-barrel oil severance tax to recapture "windfall" profits.

Eizenstat suggested that this revenue could go into the social security fund, in effect making the tax permanent. The lobbyists, taking out their pocket computers, figured that the feds would be taking out in taxes four times as much from the producers as they were putting back in higher prices. The supposed incentive to greater production was chimerical.

Trade ambassador Robert Stauss privately had advised that Congress was no more inclined to an oil tax now than when it rejected previous Carter proposals. The White House went ahead anyway, becoming convinced of the futility only after varied Democratic senators said no. Prominent among them was Sen. Russell Long of Louisiana, chairman of the Finance Committee.

It was then that Schlesinger reported back to the oil in-

Other Editors Say Repercussions

(Henderson Daily Dispatch)

Fortunately, the accident at the nuclear power plant near Harrisburg, Pa., was not serious, and, according to reports, did not release enough fallout to be a threat to residents of the area. It is the first mishap of the kind to occur, and was checked before it might have intensified.

The more serious phase of the incident is the potential effect it may have on nuclear power development. No fatalities occurred, but thousands of residents were frightened, even alarmed, over the accident. It could strengthen opposition to nuclear progress elsewhere in the country, even in North Carolina.

Massive precautions were taken immediately after the release of radioactive gas at the Harrisburg plant. No evacuation was ordered, only that people were advised to stay within their homes. Some were moved away temporarily, however, until assured that all danger, minimal though it was, is past.

What happened seems to be relatively without harm and not serious enough to create panic or even a threat to projects under construction. It may not justify halting work in progress.

Despite this minor incident, nuclear power is still the best hope for increased electrical energy output. Immediate measures taken at the Harrisburg plant were a precaution. Certainly the incident will intensify safety steps on the part of power companies.

The accident was unfortunate, both as to its implications in the immediate area and as to its effect on future developments. To the extent it might be a warning, there will be urgent precautions. No one is willing to risk more serious mishaps.

'Fair Profit' Needs Defining

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — As senators debate whether the Council on Wage and Price Stability should live or die, their constituents ponder over an issue the council never managed to clarify: What is a fair profit?

The question has been the grist of countless discussions in colleges, churches, union halls and boardrooms too, but often on a philosophical level. The Council sought to make it practical definition.

Whether it satisfied itself on that score is one matter, but in communicating the message it seems to have failed. Workers, managers and government officials continue to use their own interpretations.

The Council's formula called for companies to hold price increases in 1979 to one-half percentage point less than their average annual rate of increases during 1976-1977, unless their costs rose uncontrollably.

Right there the troubles began. While the administration declared that business had given overwhelming approval, its proclamation might have been overly enthusiastic. Many businesses withheld their overt support.

The AFL-CIO went to court, challenging the administration's right to deny contracts to businesses that failed to comply. And the Teamsters, in contract negotiations, seemed to pay no mind at all.

But the real confusion developed when the administration sought to apply its theoretical formula to the practical situation and found it didn't always fit. A fair profit couldn't be so simply described.

That became evident when the White House itself ignored the guidelines and fell back on subjective terms that had always clouded rather than clarified the issue. Outraged, it blasted fourth quarter profits.

Alfred Kahn, council chairman, called the increases a catastrophe. Hamilton Jordan called them excessive. Since many of the increases were well within guidelines, their outbursts further muddled matters.

As matters stand, nobody seems to know what a fair profit is. A dozen different ways to report them have been discovered. There is no agreement on which to use. There is no agreement that profits are up.

Without agreement, the guidelines inevitably are undermined. And for the Council to go further, to say what companies can and cannot earn, is to turn the private sector over to government dictate.

Perhaps the most glaring misunderstanding about the seasonally adjusted 9.6 percent increase in fourth-quarter profits (over the fourth quarter of 1977) was in failing to observe the reasons why.

As business points out, much of the profits resulted not from price increases but from more effective production; increased productivity is considered the most anti-inflationary tool available to the economy.

HE TURNED THE TIDE OF HISTORY

One of the most astonishing facts of history is that Jesus of Nazareth made the lasting impression upon the world that He did.

He had a public career of only some three years. He wrote no books or articles. He held no public office; he commanded no armies; he lived in an out-of-the-way corner of the world; and he traveled never more than 150 miles from his birthplace.

Yet time is dated from his birth. Christian and non-Christian alike confess that this Jesus is the most important figure in world history.

What was the source of this incredible triumph? First, his perfect character. Second, his ability to speak straight to the deepest needs of the human heart. But most important, he was God's only begotten son. As the incarnation of God's power, wisdom, and love, he exercised an indescribable power over the hearts of men and women.

Carter Campaign Given Good Marks By Federal Auditors

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A Federal Election Commission audit gives Jimmy Carter's 1976 presidential primary campaign good marks despite a special Justice Department probe into Carter's family peanut business and its alleged connections to the campaign.

"Except for the matters specifically noted in this report, the audit disclosed that the Committee for Jimmy Carter conducted its activities in conformity with the Federal Election Campaign Act," the final FEC audit report said.

The report released Monday listed several discrepancies in the campaign committee's bookkeeping and reporting practices, including a $1,950 civil penalty paid for scrambling its bank accounts, but it showed no serious violations.

Meanwhile, an independent special counsel appointed by Attorney General Griffin B. Bell is examining the Carter family peanut business, including allegations that some money from bank loans to the business found its way into the campaign coffers.

The FEC's final report on Carter's primary campaign does not mention any peanut business money going to the campaign, indicating the federal auditors found no such connection. A commission spokesman said no irregularities were found in bank loans directly to the committee.

The Justice Department said Monday that Paul J. Curran, the special counsel, had not seen the FEC's audit report.

Curran's investigation is focused on charges that there was double collateral used and late repayment of nearly $7 million in loans made by the National Bank of Georgia to the Carter peanut warehouse in 1976 and 1977.

The bank was headed at the time by Carter's former federal budget director, Bert Lance, who resigned from the administration amid charges of banking irregularities.

Sharon Snyder, FEC assistant press secretary, said the commission only looked into bank loan arrangements made with the committee.

Ms. Snyder said the FEC auditors did not directly investigate loans to the warehouse because it found no unaccounted for funds on the committee books which might have come from such a source.

The only reference to the campaign's banking practices in the audit said the committee had failed to report to the FEC all the banks in which it had funds.

Orders A Re-Evaluation Plan Microwave Class April 4

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt ordered state officials Monday to re-evaluate the state's plan for dealing with nuclear power plant accidents.

Hunt's action came in the wake of a nuclear power plant accident at the Three Mile Island plant near Harrisburg, Pa., and the possibility that more than 500,000 persons may have to be evacuated.

The governor told Herbert L. Hyde, secretary of crime control and public safety, to "be sure we are prepared to respond to any similar situation," said Stephanie Bass, Hunt's assistant press secretary.

Dayne H. Brown, chief of the state's radiation protection section, said his agency would work with the Division of Civil Preparedness in Hyde's department to re-evaluate state plans.

A microwave class will be held at the Agricultural Extension Office, 203 W. Third St., here Wednesday at 7 p.m.

The class will cover how to use a microwave oven including eggs and the browning dish.

The class will be conducted by Miss Addie R. Gore, home economics extension agent.

it is a waste of the taxpayer's money. The expenditure limits, he argues, are especially invidious, for they effectively limit challengers only. The "extravagant perquisites" of an incumbent are not counted toward the expenditure ceiling.

Brock raises another objection also, and this one is fundamental: A limit on campaign expenditures, because it limits free speech, violates the First Amendment. This was what the Supreme Court held in an earlier test of the act relating to presidential campaigns. Brock contends that Congress cannot now slip around the high court's ruling by imposing limits as a condition for receiving public funds.

The Committee on House Administration (17 Democrats, nine Republicans) presumably will report the Mikva bill, but the record of recent Congresses indicates that the measure will have rough going on the floor. Republicans oppose it almost unanimously; many Southern Democrats, safe in their one-party districts, want no part of a bill to finance Republican challengers. Others believe, with Brock, that the bill inevitably would promote third-party and single-issue candidates. The bill, in my own view, is a bummer. I hope the whole House shoots it down.

What the president is now about to propose is that he gradually decontrol oil prices, accompanied by — but not dependent on — an oil tax proposal to Congress. Its revenue would go, as described by one presidential aide, "to buy groceries for poor people." But the tax would be written by Congress, which more likely would follow Sen. Long's advice and plow the revenue back into the oil industry for exploration. Carter could decry any or all of this, but the necessary decontrol would begin no matter what Congress did about the tax.

Such an outcome is viewed by Carter's young aides as somewhere between bitter necessity and political folly. Still adhering to the liberal dogma that regulation is good for you, these White House staffers see Schlesinger as a demonic force possessing the president. When liberal energy lobbyist James Flug turned up at the White House the other day as the Ghost of Christmas Future prophesying doom for the decontrolling president, aides were only too eager to be frightened.

Jimmy Carter is more comfortable denouncing obscene profits than expanding them. But while kicking and screaming a little, he at least recognizes that the energy problem never can be solved while the government shackles energy producers. For this, Schlesinger must be credited by businessmen who have so long reviled him.

armed with more than the 10 warheads each the treaty would permit.

There is also an unsolved problem of delineating what constitutes a new missile system.

The two sides have tentatively agreed that each could deploy only one new weapons system under the treaty, which would end in 1985.

But the two nations have not resolved how much of a change could be made in an existing missile without the alteration counting as a new system.

The United States has taken the position that a change in size, power or other major characteristic of more than 5 percent represents a new weapon.

But the Russians, believed to be interested in developing a mobile missile and a smaller and more accurate replacement for their heavy, land-based SS-11 missile, want additional leeway.

Otto Passman, Nixon To Visit

MONROE, La. (AP) — Former U.S. Rep. Otto Passman, found innocent of accepting bribes, says he and former President Richard Nixon have agreed to exchange visits.

"I'm going to visit him in California in a few weeks and he's coming to Monroe later," said Passman, 78, following his acquittal on the charges arising from alleged congressional influence-buying by Korean businessman Tongsun Park.

Nixon called Passman shortly after the verdict was announced.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is expected in the forecast period until Wednesday morning from Arkansas and southern Missouri to the mid-Atlantic and Northeast. Showers are forecast for the Southeast. Warmer weather is due in the Plains but most of the nation is expected to be cool. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press
The weatherman said rain-coats and umbrellas would be in big demand today, and possibly in more demand in some places Wednesday.

A slow moving cold front pressing through the North Carolina Piedmont this morning triggered showers and a few thunderstorms. The front was expected to stall along the coast later in the day and work itself back north as a warm front on Wednesday.

The wind flow at the upper levels of the atmosphere continues from the southwest. This circulation will carry warm winds over the cooler air near the surface, producing an ideal situation for rain. The unsettled and rainy period will linger through most of Wednesday.

The rains started over the mountains Monday and spread into the Piedmont by late evening and early this morning.

Before the rainy period ends from the west on Wednesday most sections of the state will have had measurable rainfall with locally heavy amounts over and near the mountains on Wednesday.

Temperatures Monday varied considerably with the thickness of the clouds. Brisk southwest winds helped push temperatures again into the low and mid 80s over many areas of the state.

The Raleigh-Durham Airport had one of the warmest readings with 83 degrees. Charlotte had a high of 74, while in the mountains Boone had a cool 51 degrees for the day's high. Even Grandfather Mountain was warmer with a high of 57.

Optimistic In Teamster Strike

By The Associated Press
An official of North Carolina's largest Teamsters local says he is optimistic over the chances for an early settlement of a strike that has idled about 10,000 union truck drivers in the state.

R.V. Durham, president of the Kernersville-based Local 391, said he would not be surprised if the nationwide series of "selective strikes" by the Teamsters and lockouts by the trucking industry are over by the weekend.

He said that when contract negotiations between the union and trucking industry broke down last weekend negotiations "were very, very close. I would say if negotiations start Thursday, there is no reason it couldn't be cleared up by the weekend."

Consumers in North Carolina have felt no immediate effect from the strike, but a spokesman for a major grocery store chain said that could change in about two weeks.

Negotiations between the Teamsters and federal mediators failed on Sunday. The terminals of 16 carriers in the state were targeted for picketing.

"It's hard to measure how much of an effect it would have," said Tim Smith, a vice president of the Salisbury-based Food Town chain. He said the effects may be felt in about two weeks.

Spokesmen for grocery stores around the state said canned goods and paper, products would become scarce first if the strike continued. Produce and meats would be affected to a lesser degree because they are hauled primarily by independent carriers.

In High Point, an official of the Southern Furniture Manufacturers Association said 50-60 percent of the trucks used in delivering samples to the furniture market are company-owned. The Southern Furniture Market opens April 19.

"If push comes to shove, the companies with their own trucks could get their merchandise here, especially those with within a 300-mile radius of High Point," said Doug Brackett, secretary of the association.

Jim D. Wright, secretary-treasurer of the Charlotte-based Local 71, said the selective picketing would be an effective tool for the Teamsters.

"In effect, as far as transportation, it's as if the Teamsters struck nationwide," Wright said.

He said about 1,200 members of the Charlotte local were affected.

A spokesman for the 10,000-member Local 391, which includes Raleigh, Durham, Greensboro and Winston-Salem, refused to say how many of its members had joined the strike. About 1,500 of Local 61's 2,000 members had joined the strike, according to President John H. Nestlerode.

Local 61 includes members from the areas in and around Cherryville and Shelby.

Trucking companies in North Carolina selected by the Teamsters to be struck include:

Arkansas Best, Branch Motor Express, Carolina Freight Carriers, Consolidated Freight Ways, East Texas Motor Freight, Jones Motor, Mason and Dixon, McLean Trucking, Pilot Freight Carriers, Roadway Express, Ryder Truck Lines, Smith Transfer Corp., Spector Freight, Transcon Lines, Yellow Freight System and Pacific Intermountain Express.

Vacation Colleges Are Open To General Public

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Thousands of American families are spending summer vacations studying everything from European history to the human brain.

They skip traditional holiday sites like the seashore and move into college dormitories to take advantage of programs that mix education and entertainment for both adults and children.

Most vacation colleges are sponsored by alumni associations, but are open to the general public as well as to graduates. Individual programs vary, but most feature lectures and seminars in the mornings and leave afternoons free for cultural or other leisure activities.

Here is a look at some typical vacation colleges:

The Cornell Alumni University expects 1,000 adults and 500 children to enroll in courses over a six-week period beginning July 1.

Cornell is offering three major courses and a series of workshops. The major courses — each of which lasts a week — are: "Wills, Trusts & Strategy for Estate Building," "Without God, Why Should I be Good?," "The Greek Enlightenment;" and "People, Beasts and Machines: What Does It Mean to Be Human." There is a special program for youngsters 3 to 12, as well as courses for teenagers.

Tuition for adults is $230 per course; most workshops are free. The tuition includes accommodations in the dormitory (two to a room), meals and materials. Rooms with private baths are available at an additional charge. The fee for children is $135 per week. For information, contact Cornell Alumni University, 626B Thurston Ave., Ithaca, N.Y., 14850.

The University of Oregon

sponsors two programs — the Family Vacation College, July 15-20 and the Grace Graham Vacation College, for adults and high-school-age children only, Aug. 12-19.

The topic for adults in the family program will be: "Intimacy: Communications and the Relationship Process." The charge for adults is $175; the fee for children 5 to 18 is $70 and the cost for youngsters under 4 is $35. Prices include dormitory accommodations and cafeteria-style meals.

The Grace Graham college will offer two courses: "The Human Brain: Nature's Defense Against Stress?" and "Paradoxes of Social Life."

The basic fee, covering room, board, tuition and some entertainment activities is $240 for a private room and $230 for a shared room. Information is available from Vacation College, Summer Session Office, University of Oregon, Eugene, Ore., 97403.

Fire House Is Ruled Fire Trap

DOLGEVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — The local fire house has had its general insurance policy canceled because it failed to meet minimum safety requirements, according to the insurer.

Members of the village board received word at a meeting Monday evening that Worcester Insurance Co. had canceled the policy for the Alfred Dolge Fire House. The firm cited such things as poorly installed electrical fixtures and poor circuitry in announcing the cancellation.

The board members asked the fire inspector to look into the matter.

Special Olympics Here Wednesday, April 11

The sixth annual Greenville Special Olympics Spring Games, hosted by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department and East Carolina University, will be held Wednesday, April 11, at the East Carolina University track, Bunting Field, from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.

A total of 450 Special Olympians, representing 20 Greenville and Pitt County Schools, as well as the Eastern Carolina Sheltered Workshop, A.D.A.P., EARTH, and TEACCH are preparing for the Wednesday event.

Participants will compete in ten track and field events, including the 50 yard dash, 220 yard run, 440 yard run, high jump, tennis ball throw, standing broad jump and wheelchair race.

In addition, athletes will be able to compete in the soccer skills competition and two frisbee-disc events this year.

Competitors will be selected to attend the area and state spring games. Some participants may even be chosen to compete in the Fourth International Special Olympics Summer Games at the University of New York, Brockport, N. Y., in August.

A total of 56 Greenville Special Olympians will attend the Area 1 games to be held in Greenville, Saturday, April 28. Twenty-eight athletes will attend the state Special Olympics Spring Games in Laurinburg June 1-3.

The Greenville Special Olympics is a part of Special Olympics, Inc., founded by the Joseph P. Kennedy Foundation. Sponsors for the 1979 Greenville Special Olympics include McDonalds, the Knights of Columbus, H. L. Hodges and Company, the Pitt County Association for Retarded Citizens, the Greenville Civilians, WOOW Radio and the American Legion.

The Parade of Athletes and opening ceremonies for the 1979 area event will begin Wednesday at 9:30 a.m., with competition scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. All parents, principals, teachers and friends of Special Olympics are invited to attend the games.

Save'em For The Purple Finch

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Looking for an excuse to stop fighting the dandelions in your lawn and keep the too neat neighbors off your back at the same time? Tell 'em your saving them for the purple finch.

Dr. Edward Geibert of the University of Wisconsin said Monday that his study of songbirds found that "where dandelions were allowed to bloom ... and then go to seed, the birds were predominantly purple finches." He said well manicured lawns draw mostly starlings.

Geibert, who was at the 35th annual Northeast Fish and Wildlife Conference, offered another excuse to quit grooming your lawn altogether. The neighbors may not care for it, but the mourning dove will be your friend for life.

Wins Hearing On Conviction

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — James Edward Brunson, whom the Fayetteville police chief says is innocent of a 1972 slaying for which he was convicted, will apparently get a hearing soon on a challenge of the conviction.

Superior Court Judge Coy E. Brewer Jr. said in a telephone interview from Fayetteville Monday that he would schedule a hearing by the end of the week on the challenge.

Fayetteville attorney James D. Little filed a request last September for a hearing to gauge whether Brunson should be freed or granted a new trial in the killing of Vanessa Dale Lewis.

Miss Lewis was found on Feb. 22, 1972, in a burned-out shack near the elementary school to which she had been walking. Her head had been shattered with a carpenter's hammer and autopsy reports indicated she had been raped. She died shortly after she was found.

Fayetteville Police Chief Danny K. Dixon has said he believes that Brunson is innocent of the slaying of Miss Lewis.

A key prosecution witness has told detectives that he lied when he identified James Brunson as the killer. Robert Carmichael said in a statement that he watched Lee Junior Brunson, James's older brother, commit the crime, according to Little's petition filed in Cumberland County Superior Court. Carmichael's revised statement passed a lie detector test. James Brunson has passed eight lie detector tests during the six years he has spent in prison, the petition said.

Fencing A Rolls Is 'Hard Part'

ROYAL OAK, Mich. (AP) — It's one thing to steal a Rolls-Royce, and quite another to fence one.

Two would-be Rolls thieves abandoned their efforts to get the car out of a dealer's lot in this Detroit suburb when they couldn't smash through a steel fence, police said.

Officers surrounded the lot early Sunday when they saw the 1974 cream-and-brown Rolls piled into the fence.

A 20-year-old man was caught running from the lot, and another man was arrested in a nearby car bogged down in mud, said Sgt. Henry Hartfelder. Both will face burglary and car theft charges, he said.

At a nearby dealership last week, a car had been driven off by thieves who ran through a fence, Hartfelder said.

"This time, though, the fence held," said Hartfelder. "Fence 1, Rolls 0."

State House Refused Vote On Marijuana Measure

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Supporters of a bill that would relax North Carolina's marijuana penalties say their measure is still alive, despite refusal by the state House to vote on it.

The bill, which would broaden misdemeanor possession of marijuana to include amounts up to eight ounces, was sent to a second judiciary committee for study in the face of strong opposition on the House floor Monday night.

Rep. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg, chairman of the panel that now gets the marijuana bill, said the action probably saved the measure from defeat by the full House.

Sponsored by Rep. Al Adams, the bill would make it a misdemeanor punishable by up to two years in prison and a $2,000 fine to possess between one ounce and eight ounces of the illegal weed.

It would apply a similar sanction for possession of up to 10 live plants, and prevent prosecution on charges of manufacturing marijuana for that number of plants.

Two years ago the General Assembly reduced the penalties for possession of up to an ounce of marijuana, making it a misdemeanor punishable by a $100 fine and not more than 30 days in jail.

Adams said the bill was sought by the N.C. District Attorneys Association, because there is currently no middle-range for sentencing. Possession of more than one ounce is now a felony, carrying a possible sentence of five years in prison.

"The D.A.'s have been continuing cases, waiting on this bill to pass," Adams said. "The D.A.'s are unable to plea bargain and reduce down when they've got over an ounce. They want an intermediate penalty."

As introduced, the bill would have made it a misdemeanor to possess up to a pound of the substance, but that was changed in another judiciary committee.

The bill was opposed by a number of House conservatives before the delaying vote.

"I've not seen very many addicts unless they've started out on something else, and usually that start is marijuana," said Rep. Barney Paul Woodard, D-Johnston, a pharmacist. "I think illegal use of drugs and crime go hand in hand."

Rep. Horton Rountree, D-Pitt, who sought the delay, said he may seek to reduce the bill further in committee. "This might go too far," he said. "It might need to be tougher than that."

In other legislative action:

Larceny
The Senate reversed itself, reviving a bill it had killed by a single vote last week. The measure would raise from $200 to $400 the minimum value required for a felony larceny. Now, theft of amounts less than $200 is a misdemeanor, and defendants are tried in district courts rather than superior courts.

Sen. Julian Allsbrook, D-Halifax, won the reversal and had the bill sent back to his committee. Backers said they expected to compromise on a $300 limit.

Tests
A public hearing has been set for Thursday on the state's required minimum competency tests. The tests, ordered by the 1977 legislature, are a requirement for high school graduation.

The Senate Education Committee will hold the 11 a.m.

hearing in the Legislative Building.

Scalpels
The House voted tentative approval of a bill that would rewrite the state's scalping law. Its aim is to legalize a practice already in use in some places, in which persons selling tickets to events add a small service charge to the price of the ticket.

The bill was approved 68-45, with final House action delayed until at least today.

Colleges
The House voted overwhelmingly to approve and send the Senate a bill that would rewrite most of the state laws governing community colleges. The bill does not make any substantive changes in law.

New Generation
The House held up action on a bill pushed by Gov. Jim Hunt, laying down broad state policies for services to children. It's aimed at Hunt's theme, "Raising a New Generation."

Rep. Hartwell Campbell, D-Wilson, who represents Hunt's district, opposed the bill, saying a provision ensuring opportunity for all children could cost the state "vast sums."

"I realize I may have the bill explained to me better by one of my constituents," he quipped.

Scott Flays At Hunt Leadership

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Former Gov. Robert W. Scott, still smarting from his unsuccessful bid for the presidency of the state's community college system, is challenging the leadership of the Hunt administration.

"I am troubled mainly because I see a leadership that practices the politics of retrenchment," Scott said in an address Monday night to a public information officers seminar sponsored by the N.C. Association of Government Information Officers.

"Just where are our priorities, anyway? And where is the leadership to stand up — articulate what our priorities should be and lead our state forward?"

Scott, co-chairman of the federal Appalachian Regional Commission and North Carolina governor from 1969-1973, never mentioned Gov. Jim Hunt or any political leaders by name in his thinly veiled remarks.

He said politicians are trying to outdo each other in rolling back taxes, which he labeled as nothing more than a politically expedient move.

"To reduce taxes or to offer rebates in a time like this may be smart politics temporarily, but it is neither wise nor smart in the long run," Scott said.

"... I think they are reacting, as anyone can do, instead of acting, as true leaders should do."

Scott wanted the presidency of the state's community college system, but he was passed over in favor of Larry Blake, the head of a college in Canada. Hunt did not attempt to intervene on Scott's behalf.

"When I accepted this invitation to speak tonight, I thought I would be addressing you as president of the community college system," Scott said. "But a funny thing happened to me along the way that put me in the position of the governor's competency test."

Scott added fuel to speculation that he may seek a public office in North Carolina. "I must admit I like calling North Carolina home," he said.

State Moves To Lethal Injection

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — New Mexico's new death penalty law, which becomes effective July 1, replaces the gas chamber with lethal injections and provides that people convicted of a capital crime will receive a second trial to determine punishment.

Gov. Bruce King signed the law Friday, replacing one that was ruled unconstitutional in 1976.

Checkmate. The plastic check that tells everybody you're somebody.

When you want to buy something, it can seem like your check's not worth the paper it's printed on. You have to show a driver's license, credit cards, give phone numbers—sometimes even your thumbprint.

All this is not only inconvenient, it can be downright embarrassing. That's why NCNB is introducing Checkmate, the plastic check. It lets you use your NCNB Checking Account just as easily as you use a Visa Card.

The Checkmate card goes through an imprinter just like a credit card. You sign your name, get a receipt. And you're on your way. It's that simple.

You can use Checkmate wherever you see a Visa sign, at 2½ million places, all over town, all over the country and even all over the world. What's more, you can also "cash a check" at any NCNB Banking Machine across North Carolina.

So, if you have a Checking Account with us, ask us about adding Checkmate. If you don't have an NCNB Checking Account, come see us. Soon.

NCNB Checkmate. It's the kind of service that you'd expect from the bank that wants to be the best in the neighborhood.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced broadly today, recouping some of the losses of the past two sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 11.52 points Friday and Monday, rose 4.85 to 860.10 by noon today.

Gainers outpaced losers by more than a 2-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts noted that concern over the situation at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant near Harrisburg, Pa., where an accident occurred last week, began to abate during Monday's session.

They said the market also benefited today from continued strength in the dollar in foreign exchange, and anticipation of an energy message from President Carter later this week.

Carter is expected to call, among other things, for steps to decontrol domestic oil prices.

General Public Utilities, which owns the Three Mile Island plant, fell 1 1/4 to 15, trading for the first time since last Friday morning.

But some of the other nuclear-industry stocks that had sold off sharply Friday and Monday stabilized. Kerr-McGee gained 7/8 to 49 1/2 and J. Ray McDermott rose 3/4 to 19 1/2.

Macmillan Inc. was up 3/4 to 16 1/2. The publishing company hired the investment banking firm of Lehman Brothers, Kuhn Loeb to advise it in the event of a takeover bid or other merger possibility.

maintenance.
 Some 21 container sites are scheduled for construction throughout the county as part of the Solid Waste Disposal plan. Commissioners hope to have all of the sites operational by the end of 1979.

The containers, which are emptied twice each week, are 22 feet long, eight feet wide, and eight feet high. Drive-up ramps at the sites give residents easy access to the large boxes.

In other business yesterday, the board approved a request by the Greenville Jaycees for permission for a fireworks display July 4, agreed to give further study to a request by the City of Greenville for extension of extra territorial jurisdiction in an area West of the city, and decided to consider further a request for a variance from the county's subdivision ordinance for the Holly Ridge Subdivision.

County engineer and acting planner Charles Holliday said developers of Holly Ridge, located about five miles East of Greenville on N.C. 33, wanted a 16-foot wide paved road leading into the area to remain a private road.

The subdivision ordinance calls for a 20-foot wide paved road on a 60-foot-right-of-way, which would allow for state maintenance. Holliday noted that the current 16-foot wide road is on a 32-foot-wide right-of-way.

The engineer added, however, that developers have indicated they would be willing to dedicate a 60-foot right-of-way, although they don't want the road included in the State highway system.

Holliday said the subdivision at present includes eight lots, ranging in size from three to five acres, located on the Tar River. The lots, the engineer told the board, will sell from $30,000 to $40,000 each.

Jail Delivery?

The Pitt County Sheriff's Department has charged a Winterville man with possession of marijuana with intent to sale and deliver and with attempting to deliver a controlled substance to prisoners in the Pitt Jail.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that Wilbur Lee Ellis of 542 Hillcrest Avenue, Winterville, was charged March 31 with attempting to deliver marijuana to inmates at the county jail.

Ellis, the sheriff said, had been convicted on Jan. 15 of forgery and sentenced to serve 29 weekends in jail.

Sheriff Tyson noted that his department also charged Ellis with damaging and destroying property at the jail in a March 25 incident.

Total bond for Ellis was set at $2,000.

Ugandans Say Camps Shelled

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Tanzanian gunners shelled four Ugandan military camps flanking the capital of Kampala and killed 24 Libyan soldiers and 15 Ugandan troops at one of the outposts, Ugandan exiles said today.

They said a Ugandan soldier who fled the camp at Namusuka, six miles south of Kampala on the road to Entebbe, told them long-range Tanzanian artillery shelled the camp Monday night, causing the casualties.

Exiles also reported the Tanzanians shelled a camp at Mutundwe, five miles southwest of Kampala, at Bombo, north of Kampala and home of the Malire Mechanized Battalion, and at Mukomo, east of the capital on the Kampala-Jinja road. Details were not available.

Listeners to Radio Uganda short-wave broadcasts in Nairobi noted the radio's signal often was fading and scheduled newscasts were being canceled.

An engineer contacted in Kampala said the transmitting facilities were still intact, but fewer and fewer staffers were reporting for work. "I am the only one on the whole floor now," the engineer said.

President Idi Amin made a public appearance Monday in Jinja, Uganda's second largest city, after a Tanzanian air attack, ordered frightened workers back to their jobs and claimed one of the two air raiders was shot down.

The Ugandan strongman in a broadcast Monday night also claimed the MIG-21 jets which Tanzania got from the Soviet Union or China were American-made and flown by "Israelis and their agents."

Residents of Jinja, 50 miles east of Kampala, reported two Tanzanian MiGs dropped three bombs alongside the Libyan Arab Uganda Bank, wounding 15 persons but doing little damage, and then flew off.

The sources, who were reached by telephone, said townspeople were startled when Amin, who had not been seen in public for some days, arrived at an open-air bus terminal and told frightened employees to get back to work.

Condemned Still Debating Open Meetings

VATICAN CITY (AP) — In the first such move in 10 years, the Vatican today condemned a book written by a French Dominican priest on the grounds it violates Church teaching and God's revelations.

An announcement by the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, the former Holy Office, said the decision has been approved by Pope John Paul II.

The book put under review by the powerful congregation, which deals with the protection of matters of faith and morals, is entitled "Quand Je dis Dieu" — When I say God — by the Rev. Jacques Pohier. It was published in 1977.

The congregation said that after careful examination of what it called the errors contained in the book Pohier was "asked to publicly retract his opinions" last year.

Instead, the congregation said, Pohier replied "limiting himself to give insufficient clarifications," while failing to admit the allegedly erroneous points in the book.

Vatican observers said it was the first time the congregation issued such a condemnation since the reorganization of the Holy Office in 1969.

The congregation listed as errors the author's negation of Christ's corporal resurrection, eternal life and "true learning" for men contained in the Holy Scriptures.

Thumbs Down On Agency

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has refused to breathe life into the Renegotiation Board, a government agency that regularly turned a profit while monitoring government contracts.

The Senate voted 56-28 Monday against a measure to con-

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Senate committee rejected today a subcommittee amendment to the open meetings bill that would have allowed government bodies to take action on land acquisition deals in secret sessions.

The Senate Judiciary III Committee voted 3-2 to reject the subcommittee recommendation for an amendment that was sought by the N.C. League of Municipalities, the association of city and town governments.

The full committee's vote keeps that section of the bill in the same form as was approved by the House. Under it, a board could consider land purchase or lease arrangements in closed sessions but must take its final action in an open session.

Lobbyists for local governments and county commissioners had sought the amendment, saying taking action in public could cause the price of land to be raised once the board's intentions were known.

Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, chairman of the panel, said the public had a right to know about the deals before they were completed. And he said boards could approve land options in secret to set the price, then take final action on the purchase in public.

"Dealing in land options is an answer to this," he said. The panel held up final action on the full bill, however, until at least Thursday.

It also held off final approval on another subcommittee recommendation to allow governments to charge a $10 fee to persons who ask for notice of special meetings.

Barnes said he had reservations because it would access a fee on the public but exempt the news media, and asked committee counsel Paul Stock to study the provision for constitutional questions.

Barnes also said the provision could hold up the bill's passage because the fee requirement would force the entire legislation be sent to a finance committee.

"I'd rather there be no fee at all," he said.

continue the agency. Opponents of the board charged it was a wartime anachronism that moved too slowly and laid too heavy a bureaucratic burden on government contractors.

Rams Owner Drowns In Florida

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Carroll Rosenbloom, the Los Angeles Rams' owner who drowned while vacationing in Florida, was known by his friends and associates as a shrewd businessman, a rebel, and a man "who never left any stone unturned as far as helping people."

Rosenbloom, 72, drowned

Monday after he was dragged out to sea by a heavy undertow in Golden Beach, Fla., police said.

One of the National Football League's most visible and controversial team owners during the league's past three decades of remarkable growth in prominence, Rosenbloom owned the Baltimore Colts from 1953 until early in 1972. Then he traded them outright for the Rams in a unique sports deal.

"Carroll Rosenbloom played a major role in the growth and success of the National Football League, both through the performance of the teams he produced and through his active participation in the league's decision-making processes," said NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle, who had more than a couple of run-ins with the feisty Rosenbloom.

Rosenbloom and his wife, Georgia, were staying at a rented house in the exclusive Miami-area resort city of Golden Beach. Police Chief William Henrikson said officers were called after Rosenbloom was dragged out to sea by the undertow.

Rosenbloom, a Baltimore native whose love of the beach influenced his decision to move to Los Angeles, wasn't one to tip-toe around controversy or avoid confrontations.

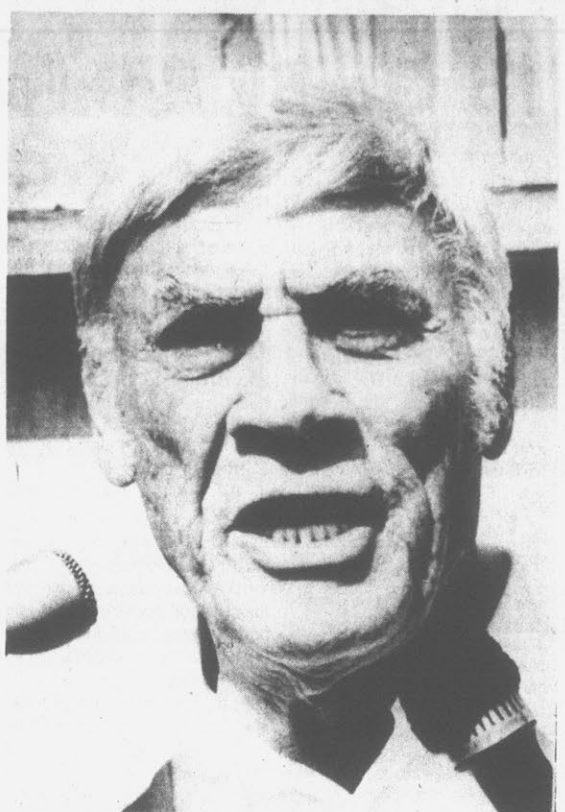

In 1963, an investigation cleared Rosenbloom of charges of betting on pro football games, but the episode strained his relationship with Rozelle.

In 1970, after Rosenbloom and Colts' Coach Don Shula had a dispute and Shula went to the Miami Dolphins, the Baltimore owner accused Miami of tampering. In 1975, Rosenbloom was fined by Rozelle for criticizing game officials. A year later, the owner accused the commissioner with deliberately scheduling a Rams' game at the start of Yom Kippur, the holiest Jewish holiday.

Rosenbloom, a former half-back and baseball pitcher at Penn., was known as a fierce competitor, and his NFL teams were markedly successful. The Colts had the league's best overall record from 1958-71, and won the Super Bowl his final season as owner. The Rams won six consecutive division titles, but failed each time to survive the playoffs — a source of great disappointment for Rosenbloom.

He was the major stockholder in Warner Communications and had oil drilling interests, but Rosenbloom's first love was football. "That other stuff is no fun," he said.

Rosenbloom is survived by son Steve, 34, whose title with the Rams is special assistant to the president; sons Daniel and Chip; and daughters Lucia and Mrs. Suzanne Irwin, in addition to his wife. Funeral arrangements are pending.

Rampants Trim Washington

Rose High School's boys' track team captured the mile relay, the final event of the afternoon, to edge past Washington High School yesterday, 75% to 65%.

The Pam Pack actually won more individual events than did the Rampants, taking eight to six for Rose. But the Rampants swept all three relays, and that proved the big difference in the afternoon. Rose had no double winners during the day, while William Boyd of Washington won the high and low hurdles and tied for first in the long jump. A. Smith won both the 100 and the 220 for the Pack.

Heels Outlast Pirates, 9-8

CHAPEL HILL — A furious five-run rally in the ninth inning fell one run short yesterday as North Carolina edged East Carolina 9-8 in a college baseball game.

The Pirates, now 11-10, took a brief 3-1 lead in the fourth on Rick Derechailo's three-run homer to left, but trailed going into the final inning, 9-3.

In the ninth, left fielder Raymie Styons opened with a double, right fielder Macon Moye walked and so did designated hitter Butch Davis. Steve Streater came in in relief of starter Bill Musser at that point, but walked pinch hitter Max Raynor to score Styons.

Derechailo hit a grounder to third and Moye was forced at the plate for the first out. Third baseman Jerry Carraway singled to right, scoring Davis and Raynor. Second baseman Bob Neff singled home Derechailo, making the score 9-7. Mike Sorrell popped up to third for the second out.

Center fielder Billy Best singled to right center to score Carraway with the eighth run, sending Neff to third. Greg Norris then relieved Streater, getting Styons to ground to short, forcing Best for the final out.

North Carolina, now 17-11, scored a single tally in the fourth on a single by Jim Atkinson, a stolen base and a single by Kevin Cadell.

Owners Draw Line; Umpires Are Goats

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer
Baseball's bigwigs have drawn the economic line at last, and the poor souls who happened to wind up on the wrong side of it are the umpires.

Tired of paying large-sized player salaries, the result of contracts that they inflicted upon themselves with some old fashioned, hard-headed, rather dumb bargaining, baseball has decided to take a stand. Oh, not against the players. No, no. The players wouldn't stand still for that. No patsies there. The target the bosses chose were the umpires, who have dared, at last, to ask for their share of the pie.

It's fine with the men who run the sport that there are benchwarmers with $100,000 contracts earning more than twice the salary of the highest paid umpire. Benchwarmers are, after all, players and in The New Baseball, you just don't mess with the players. Fooling with them is like tugging on Superman's cape. It is ill-advised and it gets you nothing.

Conley Takes Track Victory

FARMVILLE — D.H. Conley's track team squeezed past Farmville Central in a three-way track meet held at Farmville yesterday.

The Vikings finished the afternoon with 89 points, while hosting Farmville had 64.

Ayden-Grifton was a distant third with 24 points.

Overall, Conley took first place in eight individual events, while Farmville won four and Ayden-Grifton took one. Farmville and A-G tied for first in another event. The Jaguars took two of the three relays, while the other went to Conley.

Bernard Hill of Conley was a triple winner, taking the long jump, the 440 and the 220. Jeff Credle added the mile and 880 for the Vikings. Donald Freeman won three events for Farmville including the triple jump, the high hurdles and the low hurdles.

Summary:

Parker Taking Up Right Where He Left Off Last Year With Bat

By The Associated Press
Dave Parker calls himself the best player in the National League, and the way he's hitting these days that would be hard to dispute.

Baseball's highest paid player has been the terror of the Grapefruit Circuit with nine home runs, including two Monday to help the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Minnesota Twins 7-6.

Parker, last year's Most Valuable Player in the NL who signed a $900,000-a-year contract in the off-season, belted his most recent homers against Minnesota starter Geoff Zahn in the first and seventh innings.

In addition, the big Pirate outfielder broke a 6-6 tie in the ninth inning when he tagged reliever Mike Marshall with an RBI base hit.

The loss by the Minnesota "A" squad was the second by a Twins' team Monday. The Minnesota "B" team was beaten 2-0 by the Houston Astros as James Rodney Richard and Gary Williams combined on a four-hitter.

Elsewhere, Phil Niekro allowed three hits in seven innings in his final tuneup for his season-opening start Friday, helping the Atlanta Braves defeat the Kansas City Royals 2-1.

George Hendrick's bases-loaded single climaxed a two-run rally in the ninth as the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Montreal Expos 2-1. The Cards' rally was triggered by Lou Brock with his second hit of the game.

Jerry Narron hit a one-out homer in the bottom of the ninth inning, leading the New York Yankees to a 2-1 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Butch Hobson drove in the tie-breaking run with a sacrifice fly in the eighth inning, lifting the Boston Red Sox to a 7-6 decision over the Philadelphia Phillies. Bill Nahorodny drove in five runs with a pair of homers to lead the Chicago White Sox to a 12-10 decision over the Texas Rangers.

Home runs by Ed Kranepool,

Ron Hodges and Elliott Maddox paced a 17-hit attack as the New York Mets routed the Toronto Blue Jays 11-4. Jerry Martin's RBI single in the ninth inning gave the Chicago Cubs a 3-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Toby Harrah's ninth-inning sacrifice fly, his third RBI of the game, gave the Cleveland Indians an 8-7 triumph over the Oakland A's. Steve Kemp's three-run homer led the Detroit Tigers over the Cincinnati Reds 5-1.

Don Baylor and Rance Mulliniks drove in two runs each as the California Angels scored an 11-9 decision over the San Diego Padres. San Francisco topped Los Angeles 6-4 as Roger Metzger squeeze bunted the winning run home.

Fairbanks Given Okay To Go By Patriots

BOSTON (AP) — It took more than three months, but after one of the most bitter and expensive legal wrangles in the history of the National Football League, the University of Colorado has ransomed Chuck Fairbanks from the New England Patriots.

It was a costly settlement reached Monday. The university agreed to pay the Patriots for the services of Fairbanks, who had four years left on his NFL contract at $150,000 a season.

Fairbanks will take over as the Colorado coach in time for spring practice this Saturday, and the Patriots will name a new coach within two weeks.

Fairbanks' general managerial duties likely will be offered to Patriots player personnel director Frank "Bucko" Kilroy.

The settlement was negotiated with the help of two NFL owners, the late Carroll Rosenbloom of the Los Angeles Rams and Bud Adams of the Houston Oilers.

Tragically, Rosenbloom, who initiated settlement talks with Colorado football boosters five weeks ago, drowned a few hours before the settlement was disclosed.

"This period has been one of uncertainty ... headaches and heartaches," Patriots owner William H. Sullivan said, referring to the 3½ months of the Fairbanks controversy.

"I'm relieved. I don't want to say that we have won. Let's just say that our position was justified," Sullivan said.

"We have stood up for the sanctity of a contract. If we hadn't, we would have set a pattern for players and coaches."

Both sides refused to divulge the terms of the settlement, which freed Fairbanks to take the job he accepted initially last Dec. 18. However, speculation was that Colorado agreed to absolve the Patriots of several hundred thousand dollars in deferred compensation owed to Fairbanks.

Dickey Dickey, acting head football coach at Colorado, will be offensive coordinator under Fairbanks, while Fairbanks' Patriots aides — offensive coordinator Ron Erhardt and defensive coordinator Hank Bullough — were rated frontrunners to take over the NFL team. Erhardt was believed to have the best shot, although Sullivan refused to speculate.

If terms of Fairbanks' Colorado contract remain the same as when he was offered the job, the former University of Oklahoma coach will be paid at least $150,000 a year, including salary and fringes.

Lieberman Honored As The Top Woman Basketball Player In U.S.

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — Nancy Lieberman has never regretted the times she sneaked out of the house and went down to the playground to rough it up with the boys.

"I never played against girls until I got in high school," says the 5-foot-10 All America point-guard, honored Monday night as the best woman player in college basketball.

"My parents hated it when they found out I was the one jumping up and putting finger marks all over the ceiling. The guys all resented me at first and my girl friends were envious. You have to take a lot of abuse but it was worth it."

Now, Nancy says, boys who used to yell "Tomboy, why don't you play someplace else?" greet her with a friendly, "Hello, Nancy — gee, we caught you on the tube. You're great."

A statuesque redhead, Miss Lieberman is the 1979 winner of the Wade Trophy, symbolizing No. 1 in the women's collegiate sport. A 20-year-old junior, she led the Old Dominion team of Norfolk, Va., to a 35-1 record and the national championship. Her contributions included a 17.4-point scoring average, 254 assists, 144 steals and 276 rebounds.

She was a combination of Larry Bird and Earvin "Magic" Johnson, so talented that Uncle Sam will build his 1980 Olympic team around her and Carol Blazejowski of Montclair State. Carol won the award last year.

Nancy is not discouraged over the slow public acceptance of women's basketball while the female gender is thriving in individual sports, such as tennis and golf.

Chris Evert collected another $100,000 for a weekend of tennis Sunday while Nancy Lopez, on a rival TV screen, missed in a bid for her third straight women's golf crown, losing in a rare five-woman playoff in a $150,000 tournament.

"Each year women's sports have made greater strides," Nancy said. "More doors are being opened to women athletes in every field. They are making more money and generating more excitement."

"Women's basketball is the quickest growing of all team sports. It is 100 times bigger than it was five years ago. At Norfolk, we often play to sell-out crowds."

This spectator appeal has not yet spilled over to the incipient pro game in the Women's Basketball League. Salaries in the 10-team league are said to range from $2,800 to $7,500 on some teams. Karen Logan of the New Jersey Gems is the highest paid at a reported $21,000. Salaries in the men's National Basketball Association average more than $125,000 with big name players drawing down $500,000 to $800,000.

Nancy and Carol both are looking to professional careers after the 1980 Olympics in Moscow, but they won't come cheaply.

"Olympic exposure should enhance our value," Lieberman said. "I don't think $21,000 would get either of us."

Nancy said Title IX, the law dictating equal athletic privileges for women in colleges, had done much to raise the status of women's sports but the greatest credit goes to dowager tennis queen Billie Jean King.

"Billie Jean was out front all the way," she said. "Before people knew about Title IX, she was screaming for equal prize money. She made herself heard."

Nancy gravitated naturally to sports. At age 10, instead of jumping rope and playing hopscotch, she was breaking into the boys' football, basketball and baseball games on the playground near her home in Far Rockaway, Queens.

"I got a lot of bumps and bruises — and a lot of ribbing at first," she recalled. "Sometimes I would stay on the concrete court for 12 hours a day. I wasn't as big as the guys and couldn't jump as high, so I had to work twice as hard."

"Pretty soon, the guys, choosing up sides, started saying, 'We'll take Nancy.' I even played as the only girl on a man's Y team. I wore jeans and a tee shirt. I was a regular tomboy. I learned all the moves. Now my mom says she wouldn't erase my fingerprints off the ceiling for anything."

NASCAR Lifts Probations

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The National Stock Car Racing Commission, citing "the best interest of stock car racing," has lifted the three-month probations of drivers Cale Yarborough and Donnie Allison.

NASCAR had reprimanded the drivers Feb. 20 for bumping their cars on the final lap of the Daytona 500 last month.

"Lifting these probations, at this time, is in the best interest of stock car racing," the commission said in a statement Monday. It functions as an appeals body for the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing.

Yarborough had appealed the probation handed down by NASCAR's competition Director Bill Gazaway.

The commission's announcement said three members met in Atlanta last Wednesday to consider Yarborough's appeal. Commission Chairman Bob Smith of Daytona Beach said the vote to end the probation was taken by telephone Monday. He said the commission has 11 members but any three can hear a case.

The appeal was heard by Smith, Ken Clapp of San Jose, Calif. and Ralph Ouderkirk of Palatine Bridge, N.Y. In its announcement, the commission said it acted after "reviewing the testimony and taking into consideration the subsequent conduct of the competitors."

Smith declined to elaborate on the decision. "The release contains the entire statement of the commission," he said.

Yarborough and Allison were fighting for the lead of the Daytona 500 when both cars began bumping just a half-mile from the finish. The two cars spun out and Richard Petty shot past to win the race.

Allison and Yarborough hurled insults at each other, then blows. Allison's brother, Bobby, stopped his car and joined the fight, photos of the event showed.

The three were fined $6,000 apiece for fighting. But $5,000 of each fine was later eliminated for good behavior.

Ironically, the probation was lifted a day after Yarborough, who has wrecked three of his last seven races, was blamed by Buddy Baker for a wreck that knocked both out of the $110,000 Southeastern 500 Grand National race at Bristol, Tenn.

Gibson Faces Md. Charge

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — University of Maryland star senior Larry Gibson, who is in Hawaii preparing for the all-star basketball game, faces a court appearance May 1 on charges of breaking and entering and malicious destruction of property.

Gibson, who was released on his own recognizance, was arrested about 3 a.m. Friday after campus police received a call about two individuals crawling through a window of Shoemaker Hall on the College Park campus. The building houses the university's guidance counseling center.

Terps basketball coach Lefty Driesell seemed to shrug off the arrest when he was contacted Monday.

"Boys will be boys," Driesell said. "I know he wasn't stealing or anything. It must have been a joke or prank."

"I think he might have been fooling around with some fraternity boys or something. All they got him for was breaking out a screen," Driesell said.

After Gibson's arrest was made public Monday, campus police refused to identify him as the Terps' basketball star. But the home address in Baltimore listed for the suspect is the same as Gibson's listed address.

A campus police spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said Gibson was the only person arrested during the incident despite the reported sightings of two persons entering Shoemaker Hall.

Gibson was unavailable for comment Monday. University athletic officials, who said they did not know anything about the incident, said Gibson had left the campus Monday for Hawaii to play in an all-star game there.

UNC Faces Yankees

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Monte DeRatt hopes to avenge the Red Sox's playoff loss last year to New York when he faces the world champion Yankees today in an exhibition game.

But DeRatt says he'll be happy if the Yanks don't humiliate him in front of a sellout crowd at Boshamer Stadium.

"I'll probably try to stick with more junk and off-speed stuff," said DeRatt as he mulled his pitching strategy. "Try to get them to pop up or ground out — but mainly just try to get them to keep the ball in the park."

DeRatt, 2-1, was scheduled to pitch the first three innings while New York has elected to start veteran Ed Figueroa, who was 20-9 last year.

New York opens the regular season at home on Thursday. After DeRatt's fling, Tar Heel coach Mike Roberts plans to use Blaine Smith or David Kirk in the middle innings and finish with Greg Norris.

"I've thought a lot about it," DeRatt said. "But I think it's every boy's dream to pitch against the Yankees, or any professional team for that matter. I know there's a possibility that every time I throw the ball they can hit it out."

DeRatt said he's a Boston fan who died a little that dark day last fall when New York used the Red Sox as their final stepping stone to the American League pennant. But DeRatt admits he idolizes some of the Yankees, including Ron Guidry, Catfish Hunter, Reggie Jackson and Graig Nettles.

Park Begins A New Daily

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — Park Newspapers Inc. announced the launching of a new daily newspaper in northeastern Oklahoma Monday.

The newspaper is The Daily Ledger of Broken Arrow, where Park acquired the twice-weekly Broken Arrow Ledger on March 1. The Daily Ledger is an afternoon newspaper published Monday-Friday.

"The Broken Arrow area is one of the fastest growing in the state," said Roy H. Park, owner of the newspaper group. "It needs and deserves its own daily newspaper."

The Daily Ledger is the 13th daily newspaper in the Park group, which operates 37 publications, seven television stations and 14 radio stations, plus outdoor advertising and real estate companies in 16 states.

A team of editorial, advertising and circulation executives from other Park newspapers has been assigned temporarily to Broken Arrow, Park said.

The news-gathering staff has been enlarged and The Daily Ledger has become a member of the Associated Press. In addition to the Broken Arrow newspaper, Park acquired three weekly publications in the area — the Bixby Bulletin, the Jenks Journal and Tulsa's Southside Times.

The group, which currently has 18,900 paid circulation, is being managed by L.L. Massey, 30, a San Angelo, Texas, native with 13 years experience in journalism in Texas.

Both Overturned

GREENTOWN, Ind. (AP) — A semitrailer truck loaded with steel slammed into the rear of a school bus carrying more than 40 pupils near here today, injuring at least 16 students and the two drivers, authorities said.

Both the bus and truck overturned. One student was listed in critical but stable condition at Howard County Hospital in Kokomo, said Mary Erickson, the day supervisor. Another student was admitted to the hospital and was in satisfactory condition.

Most of the other injuries were believed to be fractures and cuts from flying glass, authorities said.

State police Sgt. Richard Jones said 40 to 50 students were on the bus, from the Eastern School Corporation in Howard County.

Investigators said the accident occurred shortly before 8 a.m. EST as the bus was slowing to make a right turn off U.S. 35 just east of here.

Greentown is in north-central Indiana, about 50 miles north of Indianapolis.

ECU To Host Math Contest

ECU News Bureau

Approximately 1,200 mathematics students from 85 junior and senior high schools, public and private, in 33 eastern North Carolina counties will participate in the second annual high school mathematics contest at East Carolina University April 5.

Suing College For Back Pay

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A former financial officer of the financially troubled Durham College has filed suit against the school for back pay.

James Reid Jr. contends in his suit against the two-year, predominantly black institution that when he resigned his post in August 1978, he was owed $1,400 in pay for several months' work.

The suit asks for payment of $2,793.

At the time of Reid's resignation, the college had been unable to pay many of its employees for several months.

James Hill, college president, said Monday that the school does owe Reid some of the money but has paid some of it.

At one time, the school had debts of about $100,000. The debts are down to about $50,000, Hill said.

By NORMAN D. SANDLER

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — Doug Snyder either will be hailed as an energy-era savior or branded a modern-day snake oil salesman.

For several years, Snyder has directed the Iowa Development Commission's promotion of Iowa's farm commodities to prospective buyers at home and abroad.

But what has propelled him, albeit reluctantly, into the limelight is his involvement with Gasohol, a gasoline-alcohol mixture he views as the fuel of the future — a cure for low farm prices and insecurity of the nation's petroleum supplies. Evidence of Snyder's success is plentiful.

A marketing test last year has mushroomed into a 250-outlet Gasohol sales network. Iowa has become the country's leading Gasohol state and in the international lineup ranks only behind Brazil.

The Gasohol trademark was coined in 1974 in Nebraska, which undertook the first large-scale testing now used to tout Gasohol's virtues. The sales pitch is almost patriotic.

One bushel of corn can produce 2.6 gallons of ethanol, which when combined with 23.4 gallons of gasoline yields 26 gallons of Gasohol.

Across the Farm Belt, "gasoholics" maintain rural Americans can invest in their own economic well-being by choosing higher-priced Gasohol over unleaded gasoline. They say everyone wins — grain producers, drivers who claim their cars run smoother and consumers who can cut the nation's oil imports by $4.5 billion a year.

"We've got a real problem right now on the energy front and this could be the answer," Snyder said. "Gasohol is a fuel whose time has come. We're talking about a renewable fuel source and we feel if we can produce the energy here, we won't have to rely on anyone else."

Too good to be true? Perhaps. The jury is still out. Critics warn Gasohol's cost-effectiveness is obscured by intense promotional efforts pitching Gasohol from a parochial viewpoint to an unsuspecting public.

The result has been a standoff between "gasoholics" and a large segment of the scientific community, which insists Gasohol:

- Is nothing new, having been marketed under a variety of names in the past, usually during periods of low farm prices;
- Will not significantly affect the demand for corn or any other grain used in the production of alcohol;
- Never can be cost-competitive with gasoline without hefty tax subsidies now provided by the state and federal governments;
- Is a sham from an energy utilization standpoint, since it produces less energy than is consumed in its production.

"I'm not going to say anything as inflammatory as people have been sold a bill of goods, but I think if these people (Gasohol advocates) knew a little more about the whole project, they'd look at it differently," said chemical engineer Peter Reilly, one of Gasohol's most vocal and formidable opponents.

"All in all, it just looks like the use of alcohol in motor fuels is not going to do what these people say it will and it certainly won't do anything for the farm economy. If anything, it's going to harm it."

Reilly, a faculty member at Iowa State University, has come under fire from farm-state politicians and gasoholics who accuse him of being paid off by oil companies seeking Gasohol's failure.

But Reilly, while complaining he is "feeling like the bad news bear, telling people what they don't want to hear," is not alone.

Nearly every land-grant college in the Farm Belt has undertaken Gasohol-related research. The emerging consensus, drawn from Purdue, North Dakota State, South Dakota State, Kansas State and other institutions, parallels Reilly's finding: the use of corn-derived alcohol in fuel is an inefficient and ineffective way of raising grain prices or achieving energy self-sufficiency.

Overshadowing the balance-sheet equations and economic projections offered by Reilly and his colleagues, however, are emotion, speculation and the "common sense" offered by gasoholics.

Snyder, for example, does not question the mathematics. His contention is calculations of Gasohol's economic potential suffer from a faulty assumption: that age-old alcohol production techniques that now make Gasohol prohibitively expensive will not improve.

"In the past, American industry has always responded to a need," he said. "I think we've opened up a new door to technology and if we keep that market open, we can come up with a more efficient process than we have now."

"There are concepts on Gasohol coming out the walls. One of those, just one, might be the key that unlocks the whole thing."

Snyder's hopes are not borne out by experience.

Cloud Cray Jr., president of Midwest Solvents, Inc., said his plant in Atchison, Kan., considered one of the most efficient ethanol production facilities in the world, has not been able to achieve economics necessary to drop the price of Gasohol to within sufficient range of gasoline.

While gasoholics contended the gap will narrow with higher gasoline prices, economists noted oil influences all facets of the economy. As oil prices jump, they said, so too will the cost of alcohol.

The fundamental questions about Gasohol's acceptance fall into three categories:

—Price: There is little disagreement Gasohol will be more expensive than gasoline, but predictions conflict on what will happen as minor technological advances are achieved and gasoline prices rise.

—Impact on the farm economy: Gasohol's potential benefits to farmers are being questioned by the Illinois Farm Bureau. Recent economic studies indicate moving corn into alcohol production would have little impact on demand and even if it did, the rise would push the cost of Gasohol upward.

More ominously, a study at Iowa State predicted full-scale corn-based Gasohol production would have an inflationary effect on corn prices, depress soybean prices and send meat prices skyrocketing. Although corn is regarded as an infeasible source of ethanol, the prospects brighten with the use of sweet sorghum, forest residue or sugar beets.

—Cost: Since Jan. 1, Gasohol has been exempted from the federal 4-cent a gallon fuel tax and from state fuel taxes in a number of states, including Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota. Reilly said a full scale push to replace one-tenth of the nation's gasoline with gasohol could run the country into $1.3 billion a year in subsidies, while gasoholics are reticent about setting a deadline for having the mixture "stand on its own."

The scientific guru of the Gasohol movement is William A. Scheller, head of University of Nebraska's department of chemical engineering who also was a partner in a business that hoped to land a $15 million federal grant to build a 20 million gallon-a-year ethanol plant.

Scheller's economics are favorable to Gasohol, projecting a $27 million plant with $4 million working capital could yield annual income of $31.3 million. But these figures assume sweet sorghum, not corn, is used as the grain derivative, adding additional weight to the case against corn-based fuel production.

The numbers battle was summed up by the Department of Agricultural Economics at the University of Missouri: "Truly, a layman can find himself lost in the maze of information now being distributed. The crux of the matter seems to be that grain is too valuable a source and fermentation too clumsy a process to make Gasohol practical."

Amid the bickering, one fact cannot be overlooked — Gasohol is selling.

Iowa alone will lose an estimated $3 million in tax revenues on tax-exempt Gasohol sales in excess of 40 million gallons this year.

The strong consumer demand, fostered by promises of improved farm income led one official of the Department of Energy to remark:

"There are sufficient unanswered questions and lack of balanced and objective assessment that any national policy decision made in the near future would likely be based more on emotions and self-serving interests than on logical rationale."

The DOE is spending more than $10 million on alcohol-related research and the USDA is underwriting loans for pilot production plants. Still, even Snyder is somewhat apprehensive about Gasohol's future.

"Five years from now we may look back and say this was the greatest hoola-hoop of the century," he said. "But with the potential that's there and the situation we're in, we dare not pass it up at this point in time."

Bring-On-The-Clone Film Fails To Terrify Like A Frankenstein

Reject Plaintiff Against NBC

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Broadcasting Co. did not violate the fairness doctrine in its broadcast of the miniseries "Holocaust," the Federal Communications Commission says.

The FCC turned aside Monday a complaint that the network had unfairly portrayed "a controversial issue of public importance" in its series on the extermination of 6 million Jews during World War II. Freidrich P. Berg, corresponding secretary of an organization calling itself the Ridgewood Group, alleged the fairness doctrine required the network to present the viewpoint that there "did not exist a German policy of extermination during World War II."

Scarlet Letter." Good thing, too. You can watch one of these and miss "The Darker Side of Terror" on CBS.

This little monster movie is about as terrifying as Captain Kangaroo. It tries to modernize the Frankenstein theme, but instead of a slow-footed monster we get a pop-eyed clone.

It goes something like this: An old university professor, Ray Milland, calls his young protegee into his secret laboratory (with a lot of bubbling and other science noises) to show him the culmination of his life's work. It's a human fetus in a plastic baggie suspended in a tank of liquid. A clone.

Our young hero, Professor Paul Corwin (Robert Forster), tells Milland it's not right to make clones.

"I will not be shackled by timid men," Milland responds. Anyway, Milland tells his young friend, "It's you." Milland says he swiped one of Paul's blood cells to make the clone. Paul doesn't like this.

"Damn you doctor and everything you've done here," Paul refuses to help at first, but when an oily colleague gets promoted ahead of him, he's mad enough to ... that's right, mad enough to join Milland in this wild scheme. Well, Paul saves the little clone when the two scientists learn their secret lab is going to be torn down for a new gym. Why, we'll just have to speed up the development process, they reason.

They shoot something into the kid and the thing has become a 35-year-old man. He emerges an exact duplicate of Professor Paul.

They give the clone a speeded-up course on everything he missed out on in his bag, and they're ready to present him to the world when he bolts. He wanted to be his own man, it seems.

The clone wanders into a disco, where a pretty student of Paul's mistakes the clone for Paul. They drive to a secluded spot and are about to clone around a little when ...

See, the clone has this problem. When he gets excited, his left eye gets real big and turns white. Well, the shapely coed gets him excited and his eye gets big and white and she screams and ... you can guess the rest.

All of this, needless to say, has consumed much of Paul's time. His lovely wife, Adrienne Barbeau, has found certain needs going unfulfilled. This bothers her enough to confront her husband.

"Paul, is there another woman?"

Well, not exactly Adrienne. There's another Paul. He doesn't tell her that, though, which allows for some close calls involving the clone and Adrienne. The clone kills a few more folks and in the end, there's a fight-to-the-death between the lookalikes.

This movie may serve a higher purpose, though. Maybe the other networks will get a look at it and forget about clone movies.

Margaret Trudeau Tells Suicide Try

TORONTO (AP) — Margaret Trudeau says her husband, Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliot Trudeau, once encouraged her to visit a lover to end the affair and that she once attempted suicide because of it.

Mrs. Trudeau disclosed in her memoirs that she tried to plunge a kitchen knife into her chest after Trudeau accused her of being unfaithful. She said he told her: "You are sick."

The Toronto newspaper, the Star, reported Monday in the first excerpts of a week-long serialization of the book "Beyond Reason" that Mrs. Trudeau said she fell madly in love with a "high-powered American" at a tennis tournament in New York.

When her husband confronted her with being unfaithful, Mrs. Trudeau wrote, she screamed, "Okay! I've fallen in love!" She said she grabbed a knife and attempted to stab herself, overcome with guilt.

She said in the book that Trudeau followed her psychiatrist's advice and allowed her to fly to the United States for a brief meeting with the man, who she described as a "Southerner," to bring an end to the affair, but the relationship did not end.

There is a deep-rooted prejudice against the use of conventions among certain groups of bridge players. "I don't need any of these newfangled ideas," is the common argument. "I play them as I see them."

While it is true that conventions can become the master instead of the servant, it is also true that a complete disregard of conventional methods deprives that player of certain weapons that are indispensable to success. No amount of common sense, no amount of logic can solve specific problems for which these conventions are designed.

Today's hand provides a striking illustration of that point. South became declarer at a contract of six no trump on an auction that was certainly reasonable. North held an opening bid opposite a partner who not only opened but jumped, so there had to be a chance for slam. North's bid of four no trump was not Blackwood but a natural slam invitation, and South's acceptance was justified on the strength of his good six-card suit and top controls.

East's double of the slam in modern methods was a "Lightner Double," calling for the lead of dummy's first-bid suit. Note that, with a spade lead, declarer hasn't the slightest chance. But West was one of those players who "plays them as I see them," and he chose the "safe" lead of the jack of clubs.

Declarer played low from dummy and East quite properly ducked, since rising with the ace would have given declarer two club tricks and his contract. Declarer realized that East had to have the king of spades for his double, and he probably was marked with the ace of clubs as well. Since the spade finesse was futile, declarer cashed three top hearts, discarding a spade from his hand, then ran six diamonds.

All hands were reduced to three cards. Dummy held the ace-queen of spades and queen of clubs, and East was forced down to the king-eight of spades and ace of clubs. Now declarer simply exited with a club. East was forced to win the ace and lead into dummy's spade tenace, and the slam rolled home.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Lena Pepitone, who started working for Miss Monroe in 1957, quotes the actress as calling the Kennedy brothers "cute" and saying she liked them because they were "funny and smart."

"But I remember her insisting, 'They're not my type. They're boys,'" Ms. Pepitone says in the May issue of Playboy magazine.

Ms. Pepitone said the actress told her John Kennedy did not act like a president when he was around her. "He was always telling her dirty jokes, pinching her and squeezing her ...," the former maid said.

Miss Monroe met the Kennedys through actor Peter Lawford, who was married to a Kennedy sister, Ms. Pepitone said.

The article was excerpted from a Simon & Schuster book, "Marilyn Monroe Confidential," to be published this month.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is no time to let yourself feel abused by any sort of condition that does not work out to your satisfaction. Keep objectives in view and do nothing that anyone else could take exception to.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Don't stir up trouble at home by bringing up moot points, but try to please kin more. Avoid one who has an eye on your assets. Home is best bet this evening.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Use care in motion whether indoors or outdoors, walking, driving. Try not to criticize regular associates and keep poised, peaceful. Spend evening quietly at home.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You think you could better a situation by spending extra money, but it could only make things worse for you. Build up your savings account for some possible needs later.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You think you are not getting a fair shake in life, but keep this to yourself, since you get little sympathy from others. Evening is fine for social fun, but don't spend unwisely.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You feel frustrated about situations you can do little about, so be sure you maintain equilibrium or you make matters worse. Consult a good adviser and you solve a vexing problem wisely tomorrow.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Treat friends with kid gloves today, since atmospheric conditions have them all feeling irritated. Avoid group meetings if you can.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't jeopardize reputation in any way or you get into trouble with one who has power over you. Show admiration for a bigwig instead of trying to criticize. Be careful with credit.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have new ideas that need further study before putting them in operation. Avoid one whose experience is radically different from your own. Take more interest in civic affairs.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Make sure you carry through with obligations at hand and get them out of the way quickly. Not a good day to have a heart-to-heart talk with mate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Do nothing that can irk an associate or you soon lose him. Get into civic work that will build your reputation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have problems at work that seem difficult to solve, but objective thinking will do so easily. Try not to criticize co-workers and get more cooperation from them.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Take care you do not spend too much money for anything today or tonight. Encourage mate more and get fine response. Be very candid about something that is bothering you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have every ability at whatever has to do with troubleshooting of all kinds. Slant education along such lines and permit to solve problems early in life for best results, but teach to remain impersonal.

'Critical Look' At N.C. Nuke Plant Safety Rules

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The public staff of the North Carolina Utilities Commission plans to take "a more critical look" at safety precautions for nuclear generating plants here, in light of the accident at a nuclear reactor near Harrisburg, Pa.

Hugh Wells, executive director of the commission's public staff, said the series of breakdowns leading to radiation leaks at the Three Mile Island plant have prompted his staff to begin a review of North Carolina's nuclear power use and needs.

"The whole episode is just very 'disturbing,'" said Wells, who has supported increased reliance on nuclear generating plants in North Carolina. "We have a heavy commitment to nuclear power in this state. It is an economical source of energy."

Wells, in an interview Monday, said his staff is looking into three major questions:

—What will North Carolina do for electricity if similarities between the Pennsylvania plant and three Duke Power Co. nuclear plants lead to a shutdown or reduction at the Duke facilities?

—What kind of plans are needed in the event a similar emergency ever occurred here?

—What further safety factors should be built into future nuclear use and included in the staff's forecast of future electrical needs due to be published next month?

Duke's three generating plants at Oconee, S.C. use nuclear reactor equipment designed and built by the Babcock & Wilcox Co. of Virginia, the same company that built the Three Mile Island plant.

Federal officials said a hydrogen bubble in the generator of the Three Mile Island plant had been substantially reduced in size, leading them to optimism that problems at the facility could be solved without a disaster.

A Nuclear Regulatory Commission spokesman said they were not planning to order a shutdown of similar nuclear facilities. But Wells said the staff is concerned, nonetheless, that if a shutdown or reduction is later ordered for the Oconee facility, North Carolina's electric supply could be affected.

"We're doing a lot of review right now," Wells said. "What if Oconee is closed down? We're looking at our immediate power situation in North Carolina."

"If the Three Mile Island station goes completely, that raises some questions I don't think any of us have been prepared to confront," he added.

Much of Duke's electricity sold in North Carolina comes from the South Carolina nuclear plants. Duke currently generates about 25 percent of its total supply from those nuclear facilities, Wells said, and about three-fourths of Duke's total power is sold in North Carolina.

Should the Oconee plants be closed or reduced, Wells said, "It would affect Duke's ability to meet its critical load. We can't ignore that possibility. Hopefully, it's remote."

A team of nuclear specialists from Duke Power Co. has been sent to the Three Mile Island facility to participate in efforts to control the potentially explosive gas bubble caught inside the crippled reactor, Wells said.

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., said Sunday he would propose all nuclear plants using the Babcock & Wilcox equipment be ordered to downgrade operations by as much as 50 percent.

None of the nuclear facilities in use or under construction in North Carolina use the Babcock & Wilcox equipment, Wells said. The only one in use now is Carolina Power & Light Co.'s Brunswick plant near Southport.

The first of two more Duke Power Co. nuclear plants in Iredell County is due to come on line next year but is of a different design, also, Wells said. Another CP&L nuclear plant is being constructed in Wake County near Raleigh, and two more Duke plants are under construction just across the state line in York County and Cherokee counties, South Carolina.

In another development Monday, Rep. Steve Neal, D-N.C., urged the Atomic Safety and Licensing Board to delay licensing Duke Power Co.'s Perkins nuclear plant in Davie County until questions about the Three Mile Island plant are answered.

In telegram to James R. Yore, chairman of the licensing board, Neal asked that the board not give its approval to the project "until all questions of nuclear safety" are answered.

The board is currently reviewing plans for the Perkins project and is expected to make a decision within 30 days, Neal said.

"Right now, there are some questions that need to be answered," he said. "What was not supposed to happen did happen in Pennsylvania. It has aroused grave doubts about the safety of nuclear power plants, and public distrust of the nuclear licensing and regulatory process."

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Why You Open Wide and Say, 'Ah'

The beginning of any medical examination starts with the age-old instruction, "Stick out your tongue and say, 'Ah.' " One reader asks what the doctor sees on the tongue and what information can he possibly obtain from such a quick look.

It delights me to hear from those readers who have a real interest in medicine and in the way a doctor completes his examination.

The appearance of the tongue, its color, size, moisture and line markings all tell a medical tale that, in many instances, points the way to an exact diagnosis. A wealth of information is gleaned from examining the tongue and often predates general tests and studies that are subsequently made.

Nutritional deficiencies, infections, allergies, tumors, birth abnormalities and even heavy metal poisoning cause changes in the appearance of the tongue.

A red, strawberry tongue is almost always characteristic of scarlet fever. A smooth, magenta-colored tongue suggests the possibility of a vitamin D deficiency. A black tongue is often associated with a fungus infection following the prolonged use of antibiotics. A white cloud over the tongue and lining of the cheeks is characteristic of "thrush," another type of fungus infection. "Leukoplakia" are white patches sometimes seen on the tongue and inner cheek of people who smoke pipes, cigars or cigarettes. Irritation of the tongue is often seen in people who, by habit, "chew" on their tongue.

A severe allergy may cause a sudden marked swelling of the tongue. This is known as "angio-neurotic edema." It is not, as the name suggests, a neurotic or psychological disturbance, but rather an important physical symptom associated with allergy.

Occasionally, there are deep furrows in the tongue. These are usually of no special significance. The condition is referred to as "geographic tongue."

The tongue is said to be the mirror that reflects many other general medical conditions. For example, when a patient is dehydrated and badly needs fluid, the tongue becomes dry and parched and is one of the best indicators of the need to replenish fluid.

The "coated" tongue is probably more familiar to the layman who almost invariably looks at his tongue and uses this as an index of his state of health. To many, the coated tongue represents a guide as to whether bowel functioning is normal. Far too much credence is given to the coated tongue as an accurate indication of good health.

It's surprising how often children, adolescents and adults overreact when the doctor uses a tongue depressor. This, undoubtedly, is a throwback to early childhood experiences when the child was forcibly made to open his mouth by having the stick "jammed" down his throat. Today, with better psychological insight, children respond more readily when there are a few extra moments of patience with this procedure.

The tongue speaks its own tale of importance, in disease and in health.

Hunt Satisfied Over PCB Plan

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt says he is satisfied that in-place treatment of toxic PCBs along 210 miles of North Carolina highways is a safe method of disposing of the chemical.

The governor said Monday he will probably opt for the in-place treatment of the PCBs, which are suspected cancer-causing agents. However, federal authorities would have to approve of the method.

A final decision from Hunt is expected this week.

Hunt's announcement followed a meeting with Herbert L. Hyde, secretary of crime control and public safety. Hyde has had a number of options under scrutiny since December, with the in-place treatment gaining the most public acceptance.

Transformer oil laced with the PCBs was sprayed along the shoulders of the roadways last summer. Three New York men and two Raleigh men have been charged in the case.

"I am satisfied that in-place treatment is safe," Hunt said. "It does result in PCBs being bound to the carbon, so that it will not move into the food chain and be dangerous."

State officials have conducted two tests of the in-place treatment method.

"We cannot make a final decision until the (Environmental Protection Agency) rules on this method," Hunt said. "That ruling is due under federal law by May 7. If that method is approved, I feel that would probably be the best solution, but I will have further discussions with local officials before making a final decision."

Another option is scraping up the estimated 10,000 truckloads of contaminated dirt and burying it at a Warren County site. That proposal has met stiff and heated opposition from area residents.

The cost of hauling the tainted soil to a federally approved dump in Alabama is nearly prohibitive.

Hyde said the tests showed the in-place carbon treatment to be safe and effective. It would cost about $600,000 and could be completed in two to three weeks.

The costs of the other methods range as high as $10 million and could take as long as five months.
