

Belk Building

Construction

Is Progressing

Work is progressing on Belk-Tyler's new store at Carolina East Mall with the opening of the Belk facility set for Aug. 1, according to Greenville Banks, general manager.

Banks said that work on the large new facility has "progressed well" since last fall's ground breaking and he noted that the exterior phase of construction is "just about finished."

The Belk-Tyler spokesman pointed out that fixture installations on the interior should begin soon and the firm will begin receiving merchandise on June 15.

The Mall store contains approximately 130,000 square feet, Banks reported, and involves one-story construction. The present downtown store, in contrast, contains some 40,000 square feet.

The additional room at the new store off NC 11, he said, will result in a "greatly expanded" merchandise mix as well as the inclusion of several new features. Merchandising will be by life style, it was noted.

The new Belk-Tyler will have a beauty parlor, travel agency, garden shop, and interior decorator studio, as well as a wine and cheese area. The wine and cheese section, interior decorating area and also a silver and china department will be featured in an area utilizing the Williamsburg shop concept, Banks pointed out.

Disaster Teams Eye Rail Crash Fumes Geo. Meany

By MATT BOKOR
Associated Press Writer
CRESTVIEW, Fla. (AP) — While wary Civil Defense workers sniffed the morning winds to see if toxic fumes from derailed tankers were shifting toward town, a railroad disaster team readied for the first closehand look at broken cars that had wrecked a day before. Civil Defense officials worried that the chlorine-laden winds might begin drifting toward Crestview, forcing the evacuation of its approximately 10,000 residents. The accident was four miles west of town.

"We're prepared to move everybody out (from Crestview) when it's felt necessary, but of course we don't know what's going to develop," said Sgt. Roy Parker of the Okaloosa County Sheriff's Department.

"We're smelling chlorine gas now," Parker said from the sheriff's department in Crestview.

The disaster team, hazardous-material experts brought in by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad from Jacksonville, was going to try to walk to the jumbled pile of tankers, inspect the damage and see what could be done, said Tom Nichols, county Civil Defense director. He said the team would then come back out to confer with local officials.

Only then would the team return to the cars and begin trying to seal the leaks and ruptures, he said. Actual wreck-clearing work would be put off until the danger is gone.

The officials already had expanded the evacuation area once today. They moved it to within 1½ miles of this Florida Panhandle city in the wake of the Sunday derailment involving some two dozen cars, almost all carrying dangerous chemicals.

About six or seven additional families joined at least 4,500 persons who were evacuated from their homes Sunday.

Those who were evacuated previously spent the night in emergency shelters. Officials said the additional evacuations were ordered after winds shifted and brought chlorine fumes closer to town.

"Chlorine gas is starting to smell pretty bad — burning noses," said Civil Defense spokeswoman LaVern Blocker.

The official command post — where authorities from numerous law enforcement agencies and the Civil Defense were monitoring the situation — also was moved closer to the city because of the wind shift.

Crestview residents were then put on alert.

Sunday night officials had said they were hoping the toxic gases would dissipate by morning, but the shifting winds did not cooperate.

Nichols estimated late Sunday that 4,500 to 5,000 persons had left homes or campsites in the 80-square-mile evacuation area, which included several villages and about half of Blackwater River State Forest.

Two tankers filled with anhydrous ammonia and one filled with acetone were leaking, Barrow said. He explained that emergency crews planned to let the cars drain themselves rather than risk trying to plug the leaks.

A federal Environmental Protection Agency official said tank cars contained anhydrous ammonia, sulfur, acetone, phenol, methanol, carbolic acid and liquid chlorine.

An estimated 22 cars toppled off the track Sunday morning after clearing a wood and steel trestle spanning the Yellow River.

"Some of the cars are burned so bad you can't tell how many are off the tracks," said Air Force Major David Krebs, who surveyed the scene from an Air Force reconnaissance plane.

P&G Acquires Large Tract Next To Plant

Procter & Gamble Co. has purchased approximately 121 acres of land located immediately adjacent to and west of the company's present plant site on the Old Creek Road.

Robert Griffin, manager of the Greenville plant, said that the property involves a main tract of some 110 acres on the north side of Old Creek Road (State Road 1529) and an additional ten and a half acres across the highway.

The purchase, made from the Fleming family, involved a price of $665,000, according to the property deed filed at the courthouse. The deed listed Van C. Fleming Jr. on behalf of the Fleming family.

Griffin, noting that the tract actually touches three highway corridors, said that the property has frontage on the Old Creek Road and the far western boundary involves roughly 500 feet of frontage on N. Green Street bordering the Prepshirt Co. property. The property also touches State Road 1528, he mentioned.

The plant manager explained that Procter & Gamble has "no immediate plans" to use the property but he added that in time the company would expect to develop the tract.

"The property became available," Griffin added, pointing out that Procter & Gamble felt it was in the "long term best interest" of the company to acquire the land.

Procter & Gamble is currently involved in a major expansion at the present plant site which will bring the total plant size to some 26 acres.

WASHINGTON (AP) — AFLCIO President George Meany urged American workers today "to be the eyes and ears for the administration's inflation fighters" by monitoring price increases around the country.

Meany and Alfred E. Kahn, the president's anti-inflation adviser, were the keynote speakers at a rally to kick off the labor federation's "Operation Price Watch."

In a text prepared for delivery to several hundred labor leaders at a Washington hotel, Meany pledged, "We're going to provide the consumers' view — the view from the wrong side of the cash register."

Kahn's job, Meany said, would be to determine "which price increases meet the convoluted guidelines and which are ripoffs."

The labor chief said he hopes the price monitoring would prove the voluntary guidelines, which limit wage and price increases in an effort to stem inflation, are not working and thamandatory controls are needed.

Meany said the AFL-CIO effort would be coordinated in Washington, where union workers "will compile the results, make them public and make them available to Mr. Kahn."

Joining the AFL-CIO in the price watch is a recently formed coalition of 60 labor, consumer, minority and senior citizens groups called COIN (Consumers Opposed to Inflation in the Necessities). The crusade was announced last week by Kahn and Esther Peterson, the president's special assistant for consumer affairs.

Its targets are rapidly rising prices for food, housing, fuel and medical care — which together make up more than 70 percent of the average family's expenditures.

Mrs. Peterson's staff has begun publishing a monthly "Buying Alert" to "assist consumers in using their buying power to help combat inflation."

Kahn, meanwhile, predicts citizen involvement will help shore up the government's voluntary wage and price controls.

"As much as everyone dislikes inflation," he said, "there is no organized constituency to combat it." Citizen involvement in price monitoring, he said, could tap consumers' "interest, frustration and anger" and create that constituency.

The last voluntary mass effort to fight inflation — former President Gerald R. Ford's highly publicized Whip Inflation Now campaign, or WIN — ended in disarray during the steep 1974-75 price spiral.

The government's tighter monetary policy and wageprice monitoring instituted last fall have so far failed to slow inflation, up at a 15 percent annual rate in February.

Amin's Forces Fight Invaders

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Tanzanian and Ugandan exile invaders held off a major weekend drive on Entebbe airport by fresh Ugandan troops brought in by President Idi Amin from his northwestern homeland, exile sources said today.

Several reliable exile sources, quoting witnesses to the battle, said Amin's reinforcements, backed by tanks and armored cars, attacked the invaders five miles south of Kampala in a bid to recapture the airport, 21 miles south of the capital, which fell to the invaders last week.

The battle began Saturday and continued Sunday, the informants said. One exile said Amin's troops suffered their heaviest casualties of the war and lost some of their armored vehicles. He gave no account of the invaders' losses.

Residents of capital reported seeing large numbers of new Ugandan troops in Kampala today. They were said to be from the "Rhino" or Bondo Battalion, which was based in Amin's native West Nile province and had seen no earlier action in the Uganda-Tanzanian war.

The estimated 7,000 Tanzanian and exile troops had been reported in the southern and western outskirts of Kampala since early last week.

MOLES

I have a problem. We have moles in our yard. They are tearing our yard all up, and we would like to know what we can use to get rid of the pests. B.O.

Most complaints about moles concern their causing unsightly ridges in lawns, tunneling, and damaging garden plants and ornamental shrubs. Many persons throughout Pitt County are having the same problem, said Sam Uzzell, Agriculture Extension Agent for Pitt County.

"As far as control is concerned, you would be better to use a spring-type trap," suggested Uzzell. Such traps can be purchased at most hardware stores and cost about $3 each. He pointed out that it's illegal to poison moles in North Carolina.

"Moles feed on earthworms and beetle larvae or grubs," said Uzzell. "If you can eliminate the food source, the moles must leave."

Uzzell explained that in order to do that, one would have to use the proper chemical.

"Diazinon or dylox or prolox, which you can get at most garden centers or hardware centers, are such chemicals," said Uzzell. "These are granular materials. You cast the chemicals out on the ground and then water them in."

"If there is a severe infestation of moles or grubs, it might be well to spray with milky disease spores (bacterial material which causes a disease of the grubs)," added Uzzell. "And if there are high levels of grubs in the soil, the material will be effective for several years."

According to the "Zoology Notes" of the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service, the eastern mole is found throughout N.C. and is the probable culprit when lawns or gardens are damaged. Like the two other types of moles, the hairy-tailed and star-nosed moles, the eastern mole has a tremendous appetite and will consume nearly its own weight in food daily. However, the mole in this state is more of a nuisance than a source of economic loss.

Persons who should still have problems with moles after they have tried the various control can call the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service, 758-1196.

Garwood Says His Home Town Still Recognizable

By HANK LOWENKRON
Associated Press Writer
ADAMS, Ind. (AP) — The faces had changed a bit but the small one-story homes and the local swimming hole known as Clifty Creek were just the way Garwood remembered them after more than 13 years in Vietnam. "I was glad my hometown hasn't changed," said Garwood, who returned to this rural southeastern Indiana community, with its combination post office-gas station, over the weekend. "There's no place like home."

"The roads are still there. People are still the same," he said in an interview Sunday while relaxing with family and friends in his father's mobile home, located alongside railroad tracks seldom used any more.

There were no parades or parties for Garwood, but the welcome was warm, especially when he and his family walked to Palm Sunday services at Mount Moriah Baptist Church.

"We had a little more (people) than usual," said the Rev. Harry F. Cooke, "because we counted all the cameramen and newsmen." Cooke said he had no idea Garwood was coming until members of the news media arrived and asked if they could use their cameras during the service.

"I didn't plan anything special. My Palm Sunday message was prepared to emphasize forgiveness and it certainly tied in with today's situation," he said.

Garwood, who faces charges of desertion and collaborating with the Vietnamese communists, was reported missing in Vietnam in September 1965. He returned to the United States on March 25 and began a convalescent leave Saturday, when his father, Jack, and other members of the family picked him up at the Great Lakes Naval Training Center, north of Chicago.

Cooke said he regarded Garwood's homecoming as a miracle. "We all prayed, and our prayers have been answered that Bobby is here today," he said.

Garwood went to the front of the church as a sign of re-emphasizing his commitment to God, Cooke said. Then other members of the community welcomed him home and exchanged greetings with the family.

"It's been a long time, a long road home," Garwood said in the interview. "There's lots of catching up to do."

Garwood said he wants to relax, visit friends and relatives and get re-acquainted with the simple things in life. Among the simple things he enjoyed Sunday were some "good old country cooking" of bacon and eggs for breakfast and an afternoon beer. "I'm only going to have a few beers. I've got to get used to them again," he said.

He said he's anxious to get in some fishing at Clifty Creek, where he fished and swam as a boy, and he plans Easter Sunday visits to the graves of his mother, who died while he was listed as a POW, his grandmother and a niece.

John Wayne Expected Upstage The Nominees

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Oscar nominees hoping to be in the floodlights at the Los Angeles Music Center tonight during the 51st Academy Awards are likely to be upstaged — not by each other but by John Wayne.

The Academy Award-winner for "True Grit" 10 years ago was scheduled to appear at the end of the telecast to announce the best picture of 1978.

Wayne, 71, whose history in Hollywood predates the Motion Picture Academy, will be making his first public appearance since cancer surgery three months ago.

Presenters range from Cary Grant and Lauren Bacall to Robin Williams and Brooke Shields. NBC's Johnny Carson will make an unaccustomed appearance on ABC as master of ceremonies for the show, which starts at 7 p.m. PST.

"The Deer Hunter" and "Heaven Can Wait," both with nine nominations, were generally considered favorites for best picture, with "Coming Home" — with eight nominations — also a possibility. "An Unmarried Woman" and "Midnight Express" were also nominated for the year's best film.

If "Heaven Can Wait" scores a sweep, Warren Beatty could be the first person to win Oscars in four categories. He is nominated as best actor, producer, co-writer and co-director.

For the first time in recent memory, all of the nominated songs will be delivered by those who sang them for the films. The performers: Debby Boone, Barry Manilow, Johnny Mathis and Jane Oliver, Olivia Newton-John and Donna Summer. Sammy Davis Jr. and Steve Lawrence will sing a medley of hit movie songs not nominated for Oscars.

No-shows among acting contenders, a blight in some recent years, should be minimal. Of the 10 nominated actresses, only Ingrid Bergman has declined to appear. The Swedish actress, who could be the first person to win four acting Oscars, was reported to be starting a new film in Europe. She was nominated for the film, "Autumn Sonata."

Others vying for best actress of 1978 were Ellen Burstyn, "Same Time, Next Year;" Jill Clayburgh, "An Unmarried Woman;" Jane Fonda, "Coming Home," and Geraldine Page, "Interiors."

Of the candidates for best actor, only Robert De Niro, nominated for "The Deer Hunter," was a doubtful arrival. He told Haley he was too nervous to sit through the ceremonies, whereupon the producer offered to allow De Niro to remain backstage.

Besides Beatty, the other candidates for best actor who have agreed to appear were Gary Bussey, "The Buddy Holly Story;" Laurence Olivier, "The Boys from Brazil," and Jon Voight, "Coming Home."

Jack Warden of "Heaven Can Wait" was the only contender for supporting actor who declined an invitation. Other nominated include Bruce Dern, "Coming Home;" Richard Farnsworth, "Comes A Horseman;" John Hurt, "Midnight Express;" and Christopher Walken, "The Deer Hunter."

Nominated in the best supporting actress category were Dyan Cannon, "Heaven Can Wait;" Penelope Milford, "Coming Home;" Maggie Smith, "California Suite;" Maureen Stapleton, "Interiors," and Meryl Streep, "The Deer Hunter."

Critical Year For The Stabilization Program

The year 1979 is a critical one for Stabilization, the program by which tobacco growers receive price support loans. The voluntary four-leaf program is designed to avoid further additions to the stabilization stocks of down-stalk tobacco.

According to L. Gaylon Ambrose, associate agricultural extension agent, growers need to weigh the advantages and disadvantages in participating in the four-leaf program.

Lower leaves are more difficult to harvest, with hand priming demanding stooping and handling more leaves per pound of cured tobacco than on the upstalk leaf. If lower leaves are machine harvested, there can be more damage to the harvester with bottom leaves, according to Ambrose. Therefore, participating in the four-leaf program would eliminate harvesting of the troublesome leaves.

Ambrose also pointed out that upstalk tobacco is easier to cure, with lower stalk tobacco more likely to contract barn rot than upstalk leaf.

Higher prices may be expected for upstalk tobacco under present demand conditions. Ambrose pointed out that the difference in expected price for upstalk tobacco would be more than adequate to produce replacement upstalk tobacco for any loss in poundage from not harvesting the four bottom leaves.

Some disadvantages in not harvesting the four bottom leaves would include a tightening of the peak load on harvest labor and machinery use. However, since the effective quota in Pitt County is down 15 percent from 1978, extra investment in barns and machinery is not likely to be required.

According to Ambrose, a grower may not receive an opportunity to market during the earliest sales if he does not harvest the bottom four leaves.

There could be some loss of flexibility when growing conditions are not known by the May 1 sign-up deadline. If a grower's full quota is not sold, it can be carried over to next year's effective quota.

(Related articles on the four-leaf program will be included in the Tuesday and Wednesday editions of "The Daily Reflector.")

Revival Series Begins Tonight

Revival services will begin Monday, April 9, 7:30 p.m., at St. Matthews F. W. B. Church, with the Rev. Tyrone Turnage as visiting minister.

The following choirs will participate: Tuesday, St. Luke Choir; Wednesday, No. 5 Mt. Calvary Choir; Thursday, Echoes of Calvary; Friday, Tyrone Turnage Gospel Choir, Aurora.

The Rev. Hattie Mae Cobb, pastor, invites the public to attend.

Defense Share Of Dollar Dips

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chunk of the American taxpayers' federal tax dollar that goes for military-related expenditures has been declining since the Vietnam war years, according to a Michigan research group.

Employment Research Associates said in a new study that about two-thirds of the federal income taxes that the average American family paid in the 1960s and through much of this decade went to the military. The group also found that the percentage has been shrinking, from 68 percent during the war years to 50 percent in 1976. The study, released Sunday, is in sharp contrast to government figures which say that 23 cents of every dollar of revenue last year went to defense spending.

Seek Donations For Guerrillas

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A group of black Philadelphia lawyers and judges has been urged to make financial contributions to guerrilla movements in southern Africa.

The suggestion was made at the Barristers Association's Workshop on African Affairs by Irv Davis, a representative of the New York-based Pan-African Skills Bank, which supports guerrilla movements in Rhodesia and South Africa. "For $40 you can support a guerrilla fighter for one year," Davis said Saturday in urging contributions to an organization called Support for Freedom Fighters.

Longest Prison Sentences By Judges Of Eastern District

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP) — Federal judges in North Carolina's eastern district gave the longest prison sentences in the nation during fiscal 1977, according to a study conducted by the U. S. General Accounting Office.

During the 12-month period ended in June 1977, the average sentence in the U. S. District Court eastern district was eight years and two months. This was more than twice the national average of three years and nine months.

In North Carolina's middle district federal court the average sentence was three years and one month, and in the western district it was four years and six months.

Thomas P. McNamara of Raleigh, chief prosecutor in the eastern district during the first part of fiscal 1977, said Judge John D. Larkins Jr., of Trenton, handled most of the criminal cases.

The district's other judges during 1976-77 were Judge Algernon L. Butler and Judge Franklin T. Dupree Jr. Butler died last September. Larkins and Dupree declined comment on the GAO study.

The GAO report was critical of the disparity it found in the handling of federal court cases across the country. The report said there was "uncontrolled discretion" throughout the federal judicial system, especially among judges and U. S. attorneys.

Widely varying sentences for defendants of similar backgrounds who are convicted of the same crime "raise doubts about the fairness of the system," the report said.

The average sentence in the 94 federal judicial districts ranged from the high in North Carolina's eastern district to less than one year in the district of New Hampshire.

McNamara, offering a possible explanation of the eastern district's average, observed that Larkins was tough on bank robbery and drug cases. "He would give 20 years just like that" for bank robbery, McNamara said.

During the 1976-77 fiscal period, the eastern district convicted more than twice as many bank robbers as were convicted in the other two districts combined — 40 as compared with 18 in the middle district and 17 in the western district.

Farmers Study Parity Efforts

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Farmers from 23 states Sunday discussed the mechanics of formally organizing the American Agricultural Movement to help them obtain parity in farm prices.

Delegates to the meeting decided to inform their state groups of the organization proposals and meet again in May to vote on a charter.

The farmers tentatively agreed to set up a network of state organizations with an office at Washington. Farmers would pay $200 annual dues divided equally between the state and national organizations.

Tom Kersey, a farmer from Unadilla, Ga., estimated the national organization would need at least $3 million for its first year of operation. The national office would lobby Congress.

The incorporated American Agricultural Movement would be different from the Farm Bureau, Kersey said, because only landowners and farmers would be allowed membership.

"In our state the largest Farm Bureau chapter is in Atlanta, and there aren't any farmers there," he said.

Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton told the farmers they should establish a presence at Washington and demand a cabinet-level spokesman in the U.S. Department of Agriculture who would support efficient family farms.

"The Agriculture Department is the only department in the federal government which apparently is supposed to have divided loyalties. If someone has to tell you something you don't want to hear, it shouldn't be the secretary of agriculture," he said.

The department favored agri-business when the Republicans were in power, Clinton said. "President Carter was elected with a different sort of tack," he said.

Old Friendship Is Still Alive

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) — A friendship between a former American soldier and a little Dutch girl is still alive 35 years later.

When he was stationed in Maastricht, Holland, in 1944, Stephen Fedorko befriended a 9-year-old girl. She was hungry, and Fedorko fed her C-rations.

When he left Holland, he left without saying goodbye, but the girl, whose own father was killed in the war and who regarded Fedorko as something of a substitute father, never forgot him.

She tracked him down through the U.S. Embassy in 1972 and ever since they have been in touch.

Recently, the girl, Marika Janssen, visited Fedorko and his family with her husband, Matthew, and their daughter, Patricia.

Grand Prairie City Council proclaimed the Janssens honorary citizens. The Janssens gave the city tulip bulbs from Holland to be planted in city parks.

Miss Dail, Mr. Bowen Marry Sunday Afternoon

The wedding ceremony of Judy Elizabeth Dail and Michael Thomas Bowen was solemnized Sunday afternoon at three o'clock at the Bethany Free Will Baptist Church by the Rev. C. L. Patrick.

A program of music was presented by Mrs. Andrea Norris, organist, Mrs. Louise Wainwright, pianist, and Emerson Hobgood, vocalist. The wedding was directed by Mrs. Ruggie Gooding.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Jolly Dail of Rt. 1, Winterville, was given in marriage by her father. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Bowen of Rt. 1, Ayden.

Miss Liz McKeon of Charlotte was honor attendant and bridesmaids included Mrs. James M. Booth of Franklin, Va., and Mrs. David Kent Allen of Winterville, sisters of the bride, Miss Ruth Brown and Miss Wanda Winchester, both of Charlotte, and Miss Deidre Davenport of Grifton. The junior bridesmaid was Lea Beaman of Henderson.

Honorary bridesmaids included Miss Candy Orrell and Miss Karen Hutchins of Winston-Salem, Miss Pam Hardee of Ayden, Mrs. Eddie Gilbert of Rutherfordton, Mrs. Greg Humble of Burlington, Miss Nancy Campbell of Charlotte, and Miss Luellen Whitener of Statesville. They wore pastel floor length gowns and carried daisies.

The bride wore a floor length gown with a chapel train of chiffon and beaded re-embroidered alencon lace. The fitted bodice of alencon lace, re-embroidered with seed pearls and crystals, featured a Queen Anne neckline, natural waist, full length bishop sleeves cuffed with alencon lace etched with seed pearls and crystals. The full length layed chiffon skirt extended into a chapel train. Motifs of beaded lace appliqued the chapel train.

The bride chose an elbow length mantilla of silk illusion bordered with alencon lace and carried a cascade of white roses, daisies, gypsophila and springerii fern.

The honor attendant wore a seaspray floor length silesta gown trimmed with Venice lace. The sleeveless blouson bodice featured a V-neckline outlined with Venice lace and a gathered full length skirt. She carried a wicker basket of rainbow mixed blooms. The attendants were dressed identical to the honor attendant and carried wicker baskets. They wore seaspray colored daisies in their hair.

The best man was father of the bridegroom and ushers were Rusty Edwards of Ormondsville, L. F. Worthington and Jolly Dail of Winterville, Gary Harris and Jerry Leggett of Greenville, and Bobby Daniels of Farmville.

The couple will reside at Rt. 1, Winterville, after a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach and Charleston, S.C.

The bride attended Appalachian State University and received a B.S. degree in education. She was a member of Kappa Delta sorority. The bridegroom attended Pitt Technical Institute.

Following the ceremony, the bride's parents entertained at a reception in the church fellowship hall.

The refreshment table was covered in white linen edged with lace. The centerpiece featured a silver epergne filled with mixed spring flowers and white tapers. Potted plants and hanging baskets were also used.

An after-rehearsal dinner was held Saturday evening at the Ramada Inn hosted by the bridegroom's parents. Guests included the wedding party, family and out-of-town guests. The bridal couple presented gifts to their wedding party.

CAPTURE THE FEELING... of old and new with this filet-crochet set. Shawl and shell have a flower motif.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Touches of the Victorian era show up in today's crochet fashions with a bright now and new look. The gentle, feminine flair of the past combines with the easy care of today's yarns — a perfect blending of past and present.

The flower motif on the front of the shell and back of the shawl are created simply with blocks of double crochet — a technique known as filet crochet. The instructions for making these airy, dainty fashions are for sizes 8 through 14.

To obtain instructions, send your request for Leaflet No. BU-4872 with $1.00 and a long, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector," P. O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order kits, containing the instruction leaflet plus Bucilla Perlette yarn, by sending check or money order to Pat Trexler at the same address. Send $13.50 for shawl kit, $7.50 for shell kit in size 8, $9.50 for shell kit in sizes 10 and 12 or $11.50 for shell kit in size 14. Please specify your choice of white, beige, Wedgewood blue or spearmint green.

All too often the self-taught beginner is afraid to try anything but the most basic crochet or knit stitches. This is really a shame because it is so limiting and many fascinating pattern stitches are quite simple.

Filet crochet is a good example of this. The background for this type of work is a simple "fishnet" stitch, combining double-crochet and chain stitches.

To make a practice piece, use any yarn and hook you have handy and chain 21 stitches. Work a double crochet in the fifth chain from the hook. (Chain 1, skip one stitch of the foundation chain and double crochet in the next stitch of the foundation chain.) Repeat the steps within the parentheses seven times more.

For Row 2, chain 4, make a double crochet in the second double crochet of the previous row, chain 1. Now, work a double crochet in each double crochet of

Humphrey-Ward Vows Spoken

The marriage of Miss Teresa Ann Ward and Stacey Wendell Humphrey was solemnized Sunday at 2:00 p.m. in the Black Jack Pentecostal Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Nathan Hanchey officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Ray Ward of Grimesland. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Hugh Humphrey of Greenville.

The altar of the church was centered with a bridal basket of mixed spring flowers, accented by a crescent candelabra. On each side were two floral nine branched candelabras backed with stands of wedding palm. Family pews were marked with white satin bows.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of white organza over white peau de soie designed with a Queen Anne neckline with a high collar encircled with chantilly lace beaded with pearls. Appliques of lace were featured over the empire bodice and the waistline. The full bishop sleeves were trimmed with matching lace. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel length train were enhanced by a double ruffled flounce at the hemline topped by a row of scalloped chantilly lace that extended up the back of the gown to a Dior bow at the waistline. She wore an elbow length mantilla edged in chantilly lace with a gathered beaded motif at center front. She carried a colonial bouquet of American Beauty red roses and daisies, interspersed with baby's breath and tied with blue satin streamers.

Miss Annette Porter of Winterville was maid of honor. She wore a formal gown of pink floral organza fashioned with a with a ruffled capelet and flounce hem that attached to the center back with a ruffle effect. She carried a single rose accented with baby's breath and satin streamers.

Andrew Humphrey served as his son's best man. Ushers were Gil Cameron, cousin of the bride from Washington, and Jerry Dixon of Grimesland.

Nuptial music was provided by Miss Cindy Hardee of Ayden.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Ward chose a street length floral dress of giana. Mrs. Humphrey selected a street length dress of blue giana. Both wore matching accessories and corsages of white cymbidium orchids. The grandmothers, Mrs. Lester Ward and Mrs. Claudie Hunter, were remembered with white carnation corsages.

Following the ceremony, the parents of the bride entertained at a reception held in the church fellowship hall. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Lester Ward and invited to the refreshment table which was covered with a white damask cloth and centered with an arrangement of mixed spring flowers flanked by burning tapers.

After the bridal couple cut the traditional first slice of cake, Mrs. Mary Dixon served and Mrs. Nell Cameron, aunt of the bride, poured punch. Mrs. Betty Fornes and Mrs. Barbara Tynch assisted in serving. Miss Angela Porter presided at the bridal registry.

Following the rehearsal Saturday night, parents of the bridegroom entertained the wedding party and friends with an after-rehearsal party in the fellowship hall of the church.

The bride and bridegroom are graduates of D. H. Conley High School. The bride is employed at Stanadyne in Washington and the bridegroom is employed with Harris Supermarket No. 2 in Greenville. After a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, the couple will reside in Washington.

Miss Garrett Named Member

RALEIGH — Martha Elizabeth Garrett, of Greenville, has been named a member of the "Cold Cuts," a washboard band musical group at St. Mary's College here.

The Cold Cuts perform on and off campus throughout the year and members are chosen by audition.

Miss Garrett is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Garrett and is a college sophomore.

Women's Club Officers Named

New officers were named at the Wednesday meeting of the St. Peter's Women's Club.

Named were Ann Reese, president, Eleanor Close, vice president, Mary Vojtecky, secretary, and Ann Elmer, treasurer.

The officers will be installed next month.

President Bobbie Parsons conducted the meeting. It was announced the Women's Club will hold a day of prayer Sept. 14. The women will prepare refreshments for the participants in the Special Olympics April 11.

Members were reminded of a wine and cheese sharing to be held at the church after Holy Thursday Mass.

Being A Grandfather Isn't Grand To Him

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY — Our 16-year-old daughter recently married a boy my husband doesn't approve of, but she was pregnant at the time and it seemed the best solution. (She didn't tell us she was pregnant until it was too late to do anything about it.)

The baby was born three months after they were married. It was a little boy, so they named him after my husband, hoping it would soften him up, but it didn't work. Our son-in-law is going to college and working, too, trying to make something of himself, but my husband hates him. He's still so upset over the whole business he hasn't even gone to see the baby yet. I go often, but I have to go alone.

Abby, I think my husband is acting like a stinker, but there's nothing I can do about it. Do you have any suggestions for getting him to forgive those kids and start acting like a grandfather? (Don't tell me to lock him out of the bedroom.) He would break down the door.

NEW GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: Quit begging your husband to forgive the kids and start acting like a grandfather. Unless he's a terminal stinker with a heart of stone, eventually he'll come around. And if he doesn't — it's his loss.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 17-year-old boy who has been reading your column faithfully for years. I've seen many letters from girls asking how to say "no" to a boy without losing him permanently, but I've never seen a letter from a boy asking the same question about girls, so here goes:

I am tall and considered good-looking by most people. My problem is that, on dates, girls sometimes want me to go farther than I know I should for the good of both of us.

How can I say "no" without making a fool of myself? Abby, I have discovered that the boy is not always the aggressor, so how about lending a helping hand to us guys by printing this letter and your answer?

BUDDY IN BELOIT

DEAR BUDDY: You have answered your own question very intelligently. At the appropriate time, say, "We have gone as far as we are going — for the good of both of us." (And if you make a "fool" of yourself with that statement, I know a lot of fine young women who are looking for the kind of "fool" you are.)

Prices To Force Conserving

President Carter unveiled his new energy plan in a nationwide address Thursday night . . . and the consumer has to swallow hard.

The clear message from the president is that Americans will be paying more for gas, because price controls on domestic crude oil will be phased out beginning June 1. It is almost a certainty that this will be done, because the president already has the power to do so.

The action, of course, will mean big new profits for the oil interests, something the president hopes to offset with a new 50 percent windfall profits tax on oil. The tax is by no means certain, since it must be approved by Congress where oil is powerful.

Will the plan work? Almost surely it will eventually. As the cost of gasoline rises Americans will have to drive less, because they won't be able to afford the higher priced gas. This is unpalatable to a nation which has geared its whole way of life to individual transportation, but it is a hard fact that all of us will have to face. We will adjust in various ways, including buying smaller, less comfortable cars for gas economy, and carefully planning our trips to get the most efficient use of the high priced gas.

As for the huge profits which the price increases will generate for oil interests, we, the public, must make it clear to Congress that exorbitant profits will not be tolerated and that the nation's natural resources cannot be used to squeeze the last penny out of our society. The windfall tax is clearly in order.

Much of the remainder of the program outlined by the president involves voluntary action. That part will work only insofar as individuals are economically squeezed to make it work . . . and with the rapid escalation of oil costs there will be plenty of incentive for that.

Inflation Pressures In Deregulation

If we accept the contention that deregulation of domestic oil prices is necessary to cut the use of oil products, we, at the same time, have to recognize that deregulation is going to be disastrous for any anti-inflation program.

The cost of everything we use is going to be affected. Air travel costs will increase and electric rates will probably soar.

The main redeeming factor will be that a great new research and business frontier will be opened to develop new energy sources. With costs of conventional oil so high, solar, wind, coal and oil shale development will be more attractive. We must move in the development of alternate energy sources.

Tar Heels Not Bad Off

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Consistently ranking at the bottom nationally in manufacturing wages paid doesn't necessarily mean that North Carolinians are all that bad off.

If things are really that bad, then how come so many people are leaving the overcrowded, over-worked, over-dirty industrial areas of the Midwest and North to live in this state?

In fact, says a Research Triangle Institute social behavior specialist, low average manufacturing wage levels do not necessarily imply low levels of economic well-being for Tar Heels.

The reasons are several, and Dr. Alvin M. Cruze explored the subject at length recently at a Raleigh seminar on the economy jointly sponsored by the three universities in the Triangle area, and the research institute.

Average manufacturing wages apply only to just over one-third of the state's working people, leaving out a majority of the work force, Cruze finds.

More Income

When all wages and earnings are totaled to provide a per capita income then, "our per capita personal income ranking among the states has always been significantly better than our ranking in average manufacturing wages," Cruze said.

In 1977, North Carolina ranked 40th in per capita income, which, while still low, is ahead of Tennessee, Utah, Vermont and many others which ranked above us in manufacturing wages.

Another factor is that more women work in North Carolina than the national average, providing more two-wage-earner families. Also, many people earn additional income by working longer hours or at other jobs. "If more than one member of a family participates in the labor force, the total wages or earnings available to the family may be somewhat higher than that which is implied by the low wage level. This is exactly what is happening in North Carolina," Cruze reports.

He does not find that situation entirely desirable since a working mother may decrease the family's well-being at home, but that is an individual choice.

BILL NOBLITT

Another major factor is that wage levels tend to be positively correlated with city size, for numerous reasons: higher cost of living, congestion, transportation.

North Carolina has no truly large metropolitan area relative to those found in more heavily concentrated industrial sections. Also, Cruze explores the skill and training levels of available workers to note that wages are based on numerous productivity variables.

More Fun

His most interesting observation is that the idea that "only money counts as a measure of an individual's well-being" is a myth. Reality shows that this is not necessarily the case, Cruze finds.

"We all have different tastes and preferences and some of us choose to engage in occupations or to reside in certain areas where we earn less money than we might in an alternative setting.

"In essence, we trade the pleasures of these settings and situations for higher earnings opportunities. We are seeing evidence that this tradeoff is being made by individuals in North Carolina . . . individuals are coming or returning to North Carolina for its relatively uncrowded cities its recreational opportunities, weather and other factors, rather than for higher income opportunities."

It's All Very Simple

WASHINGTON — What makes the public in this country the best informed in the world is that we have so many "experts" who can be called upon when we are faced with a problem. Whenever I get confused about oil I seek out Prof. Heinrich Applebaum, who heads the Fossil Fuel Think Tank at the Seven Sisters Institute of Technology.

"Professor, is there really a serious gasoline shortage in the United States brought about by a cutoff of oil supplies from Iran?"

"Yes, there is."

"That's bad," I said.

"Au contraire," he said, "that's good because, according to the CIA, despite the shortfall from Iran, gasoline production for January and February was up by 4 percent over the previous year."

"Then it is possible the oil companies manufactured the crisis so they could raise prices and make windfall profits?"

"That is the conclusion some people have come to. But without the incentive of higher prices the oil companies would be unable to supply the needs of the consumer for the rest of the year. The companies need these windfall profits to drill for new oil."

"How do you feel about decontrolling domestic oil prices?"

"I don't feel good about it."

"Then you are against it?"

"Not necessarily. If you decontrol oil prices the price of gasoline will go up at the pump, and this could lead to much-needed conservation in this country, which everyone agrees is necessary."

"That's good," I said.

"It's good if it works, but the problem is that the American people will pay whatever it takes to feed their cars, even if it means giving up feeding their families. A dollar-a-gallon gas doesn't seem to frighten people as much as it did a few years ago. But we do know it will play a major role in upping inflation."

"That's bad!" I said.

"No one likes high inflation, but by pushing up the price, we will be able to afford to process shale oil and recover other fuel that up until now was unprofitable, thus making us more self-sufficient than we are today."

ART BUCHWALD

"That's good," I said. "How do you feel about closing gasoline stations on weekends?"

"No one likes to see a gasoline station closed at any time, particularly when the gauge on your car is near empty, but it could save millions of gallons of gasoline — but then again it couldn't."

"I beg your pardon?"

"If you close gasoline stations on weekends everyone will start topping up their tanks during the weekdays so they will always be full. This could use up more gasoline than we would save by weekend closings."

"That's bad," I said. "Should we blame the OPEC countries for the sorry mess we're in now?"

"I don't see anything wrong with blaming them as opposed, for example, to those countries that don't export any oil. At the same time we should not forget the environmentalists who have prevented the building of refineries, which the oil companies have insisted is responsible for shortages of gasoline, particularly the unleaded kind."

"So on the basis of all your studies and projections where are we now?"

"Exactly where I said we should be at this stage of the game except for certain uncertain variables, such as James Schlesinger's pipe, which I forgot to feed into my computer."

A High Stakes Debate

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A high-stakes debate is under way among the government's top economic policy-makers on whether to further tighten the screws on the economy in an effort to halt inflation.

The outcome could influence not only the trend of inflation. A miscalculation could cost Americans thousands, if not millions, of jobs.

It could make the difference among a deep recession, a slight recession, or no recession at all.

The key policy-maker arguing for new actions to slow the economy is Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, who favors more cuts in government spending and another boost in interest rates, which already are at record highs.

Resisting Blumenthal is Chairman G. William Miller of the Federal Reserve Board, which would have to engineer the rise in interest rates. Miller argues that interest rates are already high enough to do the job, and worries that an additional increase risks a serious recession.

Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps and Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, both economists, share Miller's views, while Chairman Charles L. Schultz of the President's Council of Economic Advisers is described as neutral, but "leaning" toward the Blumenthal argument.

After discounting for the influence of the individual policymakers — with Blumenthal considered to have the most — one high-ranking administration official, who favors the Treasury secretary's position, says nobody is winning for the moment.

"It's about even right now," he said. "That may mean a stalemate." Ultimately, President Carter

THE INSIDE REPORT

Supports Nuclear Option

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — In the privacy of the White House, Jimmy Carter has put the Three Mile Island power plant accident and the surrounding hysteria into proper perspective with blunt language seldom heard from him by the public — and not likely to be heard in connection with nuclear power.

President Carter met with cabinet officers and other advisers Tuesday morning for finishing touches on his energy message, only two days after he had gone to Pennsylvania. He was confident of his facts, and of this conclusion: an airline passenger receives more radiation than the president had in inspecting the plant, but the news media was responsible for whipping up a frenzy. Carter left no doubt he still regards nuclear power as an indispensable energy option.

But the energy speech worked over that morning at the White House contained no such plain talk. It is simply not Carter's style to publicly confront political difficulty, and key political advisers will urge him not to further alienate his party's left wing. Therein may lie much of what is wrong with the Carter presidency.

Actually, Carter always has been ambivalent on nuclear power. On the one hand the former naval atomic specialist has seen the necessity for a strong nuclear arm to the nation's energy program. On the other hand, the party politician seeking to mollify the Democratic left wing has been chary about offending anti-nuclear activists.

But behind the scenes lately, the president has been resolving these contradictions in favor of the nuclear option. While important aides want to avoid clashing with anti-nuclear activists, Carter demonstrated a much different attitude when he joined his senior associates for the energy meeting at 9 a.m. Tuesday.

Unburdened by the indigestible prose of a committee-written speech, the president used the crisp diction of an engineer with the facts in hand. He had been only 1,000 feet from the disabled core of the Three Mile Island reactor

Sunday, said Carter, and had received less than one-third the radiation of a passenger on a commercial jetliner flying through the stratosphere.

What about Trade Ambassador Robert Strauss, someone asked, flying across the Atlantic on the high-priced Concorde? Even worse, replied Carter, adding that a casual encounter with X-rays in a doctor's office generates far more radiation than his visit to Pennsylvania.

Why then all the fuss? The president told his advisers he holds media coverage, particularly television, largely responsible for widespread public anxiety. Among adjectives used Tuesday morning in referring to this coverage were "exaggerated," "irresponsible" and "outrageous."

Moreover, the president and cabinet members agree that if the anti-nuclear movement capitalizes on this opportunity, the calamitous ef-

Other Editors Say A $700,000 Coach

(The Raleigh Times)

By now those of us who like to think we live in a sane world are pretty inured against the shock of the big money shenanigans inside the insane world of college and pro sports.

But we must admit that the University of Colorado tested our composure when it let it be known that it would shell out $500,000 to buy up the remaining contract of New England Patriots Coach Chuck Fairbanks so he would be free to coach the Colorado football team. In addition to that, it has promised Fairbanks a $45,000 salary plus "extras" which will boost his annual income to $200,000.

The whole thing is almost incredible. We don't blame the Patriots for not letting Fairbanks off scot free. After all, coaches aren't shy about insisting on being paid for remaining contracts when they are let go. Turn about is fair play.

But where is the University of Colorado's sense of values, and where is it getting all that money? There must be gold in them thar hills, sure 'nough.

How many University of Colorado faculty members draw $45,000, not to mention fringe benefits up to $200,000? The salary of the President of the United States is only $200,000. The University has undeniably put the country on notice that its priority, at least for the moment, big-time football.

To Coach Fairbanks go our condolences. With $700,000 worth of pressure riding on him when the season opens next fall, he'll be lucky if he has presence of mind enough to know which side of the stadium to sit on. And what if the Buffalos should lose their opener? Or, God forbid, suffer a losing season?

Don't they still have vigilantes and lynching out there?

The Weapon Is Buying Power

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Want to fight inflation? Your best weapon is your own buying power.

Government and industry spokesmen agree that the way consumers spend their money will have a lot to do with what happens to prices.

"I believe the American people will have to change some of their patterns of living," said Esther Peterson, special assistant to the president for consumer affairs.

The spotlight now is on food and fuel, but you can save money on everything from medical care to credit if you shop carefully.

"People really can get good value if they shop intelligently," said Midge Shubow, an aide to Mrs. Peterson. "Go back to basics . . . Take advantage of unit pricing . . . You have a responsibility and the store has a responsibility and one doesn't work without the other."

Mrs. Peterson added: "We know that supermarkets are arranged for attractive impulse buying. It's a real test for us to go through there and have a list and hold it tight . . . Let's have educated consumers and let's watch the advertising . . . The best way to get rid of a product (that is a poor value) is to leave it on the shelf."

The Office of Consumer Affairs puts out "A Consumer's Shopping List of Inflation Fighting Ideas," available, at no charge, from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 625G, Pueblo, Colo., 81009. Here are some of the tips:

—Check the newspaper for sales before you shop. Compare advertised prices with regular ones; not all advertised items are actually on sale. There are usually fewer specials at the beginning of the month; change your shopping patterns to take advantage of lower prices.

—Use coupons wisely. You won't save money if you use a coupon to buy something you would otherwise skip. Check prices of house brands or "no frills" items with those of national brands. Even with a coupon, the national brand may be more expensive.

—Find out if your home needs insulation. You could save 20 to 30 percent on utility bills. Remember: Insulation helps keep you cool in summer as well as warm in winter. If you can't afford insulation, consider caulking and weatherstripping windows and doors.

—Obey the speed limit. Most automobiles get about 20 percent better mileage on the highway at 55 mph than they do at 70 mph. With gasoline nearing $1 a gallon, you'll save money by slowing down.

—Prepaid group medical practices and Health Maintenance Organizations (HMOs) may cut doctors' bills. You pay a monthly fee and get treatment when you need it. Ask questions. If your doctor recommends surgery and it's not essential, get a second opinion.

—Shop around for credit. All lenders are not alike. Be wary of overdraft accounts that allow you to write checks for more than your balance. Each overdraft is a loan and you'll have to pay interest.

REMEMBER THE GOOD

Two men in the Book of Acts bear the name Ananias. One was a liar, the other a saint. God struck the liar Ananias dead. He accorded the other Ananias the honor of receiving a commission directly from heaven to baptize Saul of Tarsus, heal him of his blindness, and receive him into the fellowship of the Christian church.

Few people recall St. Ananias. But everybody who has read the Scriptures remembers Ananias the liar. Why is it that we continue to remember evil about people and can so quickly forget all the good about them? The memory of scandals goes on year after year, but the good that people do often goes unnoticed, or is quickly forgotten.

Perhaps one reason is that we are fallen creatures and are like loaded dice — with a propensity toward evil. This does not mean that we have no good in us; it merely shows how quickly the good can be overshadowed by the evil.

Homeless By Twister

CAMDEN, Ark. (AP) — A tornado ripped through this southern Arkansas community, injuring at least 27 persons, inflicting heavy damage along a five-mile-long path and leaving hundreds homeless, authorities said.

"Where it hit here, it hit bad," said Ouachita County Sheriff Garner Robertson. "Lots of houses had nothing left but the slab."

The tornado destroyed about 75 homes Sunday night and severely damaged a shopping center, a school and another 75 homes, said Trooper Jerry Bradshaw, a state police spokesman.

Some looting occurred at the shopping center before authorities arrived, Bradshaw said. About 20 state troopers and 35 members of the Arkansas National Guard patrolled the area to prevent further looting.

Authorities estimated that damage would amount to millions of dollars. In Little Rock, Gov. Bill Clinton declared Camden — a town of 16,000 — a disaster area, making affected residents eligible for special assistance.

At least 19 other persons were injured when tornadoes hit in other parts of the state, authorities said. In Hamburg, in southeastern Arkansas, 17 persons were injured.

A tornado also touched down Sunday in Mount Olive, La., destroying a house trailer, and slightly injuring its two residents, authorities reported.

Fear Returns After Sundown

By PEGGY WALSH
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Children play now in the park. Joggers run down the tree-lined streets. But the tranquil atmosphere lasts only as long as the sun in the middle-class neighborhood terrorized a year ago by a strangler who killed seven elderly women.

When darkness falls, residents still live in fear.

It has been almost a year since the "Columbus Strangler" claimed his seventh victim, 61-year-old Janet Cofer, a first-grade teacher.

Police are no closer than a year ago to solving the crimes. But the passing of time hasn't made residents of the area complacent.

Daisy Tucker, 66, says she's just as careful now as she was on Sept. 16, 1977, when the body of the first victim, Ferne Jackson, 60, was found strangled with a stocking.

"I was a free person before," said Mrs. Tucker, who lives alone, only three blocks from the Jackson home. "But the stranglings have changed my whole lifestyle. I never go out at night."

Mrs. Tucker was one of the few persons who would agree to discuss the stranglings, six of which took place within a one-mile area. The last victim, Mrs. Cofer, lived about two miles away.

Several women refused to open the doors of their modest porch-front homes when asked to discuss the slayings. Others said memories of the grisly murders were too fresh. Others said they were simply afraid.

But Mrs. Tucker, who well remembers the initial panic surrounding the slayings, talked freely about the fear and the changes in her life since the slayings abruptly stopped on April 20, 1978.

"They told us if this levels off, some of the women would get complacent," said Mrs. Tucker. "But I've never gotten careless. I got a dog and I keep it inside. I've had security precautions taken."

Police officials admit their frustration in the case, which is unique in the recent history of this West Georgia city of 175,000. But they emphasize that the case is still a "top priority."

"We're assuming he's still here and assuming he's still alive," said David Hopkins, a spokesman for the Columbus

Police Department.

At the height of the investigation, 50 to 60 local and state police officers patrolled the Wynnton Road area, stopping passersby and noting any changes that might indicate the strangler had struck again. Between 30 and 35 investigators followed up leads.

Thirteen investigators remain on the special task force. The street patrols continue with help from nearby Georgia State Patrol posts. About $100,000 in rewards have been offered for information leading to the conviction of the strangler, $70,000 of that from the state.

Computer records at the police department show that 16,500 individuals have been interviewed in connection with the case. The number includes potential witnesses, suspects and neighbors. Some, said Hopkins, have been questioned from 10 to 20 times.

Two Injured In Reception Sunday Wrecks

Evans-Novak . . .

fects on energy would dwarf the impact of the Iranian revolution. U.S. nuclear power — on line, under construction and planned — amounts to 5 million barrels of oil a day, the entire production of pre-revolutionary Iran.

The president then turned to his energy speech, which contained little on this subject and referred to energy produced by "fission and fusion," a mouthful difficult for Carter or anybody else to pronounce. It was explained that this was a euphemism for "nuclear," which quickly has become politically taboo. Rather than impose a tongue-twister on the president, the dreaded word "nuclear" was substituted.

The energy message was supposed to include much more than the mere word "nuclear". Secretary of Energy James Schlesinger had made progress on two fronts: first, in convincing the nuclear power industry to drop its insistence on fast breeder reactors and go along with the president on light water reactors; second, in whittling away at the president's political inhibitions over nuclear power.

Even after the Pennsylvania accident, Schlesinger insisted that plans to ease licensing of nuclear power plants must go forward. "That was not very smart," commented a presidential aide, suggesting that Schlesinger once more revealed his political naivete. One senior White House aide, apparently unaware of the president's views, told us the problem was not exaggeration by TV but cover-up by the power company.

These murmurs reflect the new lease on life the Pennsylvania accident has given Ralph Nader, Jane Fonda and Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. in fighting nuclear power. Tim Hagen, the aggressive young Democratic chairman of Cuyahoga County, Ohio (leveland), has gone anti-nuclear for the first time. Morley Winograd, the sensible Michigan Democratic chairman, told us he doubts his state party will any longer block anti-nuclear resolutions.

Even nuclear advocates in the administration acknowledge that the president, as a party politician, cannot ignore these political currents and probably should tread cautiously. But those currents might well be reversed if Carter were to speak to the public as he did to his advisers. It might even amend the public perception of his leadership.

Two Sunday morning collisions resulted in two persons being injured and an estimated $8,400 property damage, Greenville Police reported today.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 1:50 a.m. mishap on 14th Street, 152 feet East of the Osceola Drive intersection involving a car driven by Jarvis Lee Campbell 18, of 702 Hooker Rd.

Investigators reported the Campbell car, traveling West of 14th Street, ran off the road as it rounded a curve, struck a utility pole wire and two bushes, then struck a car parked in a yard at 1415 East 14th St., causing the parked car to flip end-over-end and come to rest on its side.

The Campbell car then crossed to the opposite side of the street and struck a bush in a yard at 1412 East 14th St., where it came to rest.

According to police, Campbell was knocked unconscious in the wreck and a passenger in the vehicle then drove the car to a Windy Ridge apartment from which aid for Campbell was called.

Investigators estimated damage to the Campbell car at $2,000 and set damage to the parked car struck by the Campbell vehicle — a car owned by Sandra Ann Lamonica of Greenville — at $4,000.

Police said two other cars parked at 1415 East 14th Street, one owned by Randy Ray Jones of Route 3, Greenville, and the other owned by Thomas David Oliver of B-1A Highland Trailer Pk., suffered an estimated $100 damage each when struck by the debris from the collision with the guy wire and the Lamonica car.

Other damage from the incident included $200 damage to the guy wire, $400 damage to the yard at 1415 East 14th St., $150 damage to the yard 1417 East 14th, $200 damage to the yard at 1413 East 14th., and $150 damage to the yard at 1412 East 14th St.

Campbell was charged with careless and reckless driving by investigators.

George Christopher Knight of 1601 Oaklawn Ave. was reported injured when his car collided with a parked auto owned by Herbert Raymond Carlton of 1735 Beaumont Dr. about 12:15 a.m.

Officers, who said the mishap occurred on Beaumont Drive about a tenth of a mile West of the North Overlook Drive intersection, set damage to the Knight car at $500 and placed damage to the Carlton auto at $600.

TERRORIST HUNT

ROME (AP) — Anti-terrorist squads have made raids in five Italian cities, arresting 16 persons and issuing warrants for 22 others, police said. Those arrested Sunday were charged with subversive association and participating in armed bands.

Following the 11 a. m. Psalm Sunday service at Our Redeemer Lutheran Church here, Pastor Graham Nahouse and his wife, Nancy, were honored at a reception celebrating the pastor's 10th anniversary.

Pastor Nahouse preached his first sermon in Greenville Arp. 19, 1969, after having served four years as pastor of Nazareth Lutheran Church, Rural Hall.

In recognition of the pastor's 10 years' service, the congregation contributed to a money tree designed by Elizabeth Jester and presented by Kirk Maness, president of the congregation. Since the pastor's ministry began in Greenville, the church has grown in membership and participation in the worship service has doubled. The pastor thanked the congregation for its ministry to him, noting that his own state has increased from bachelorhood to his marriage with Nancy Fritz, a member of the congregation, to expected fatherhood.

The reception was held at the church and was prepared by the members of Lutheran Church Women, chaired by Lois Thalaker.

Require More Cargo Planes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government would have to make big purchases of new cargo planes if it wanted to reduce the time it would take to deploy the Army's two lightest divisions to the Persian Gulf, a new study says.

The report by the Congressional Budget Office found that it could take as long as 26 days to deploy the 82nd Airborne and the 101st Airmobile to the gulf area, with forces at their present level. The report took no stand on the desirability of sending U.S. forces to the Mideast. But its conclusions would have a bearing on any decision for U.S. armed intervention to protect oil imports in that area.

Arrest Suspect After Shootout; Five Dead

By ROBERT LEE ZIMMER
Associated Press Writer

PAXTON, Ill. (AP) — After a day-long manhunt, police said they captured a man charged with murder in a bloody shootout in which five persons, including two police officers, died.

The suspect, Monroe Lampkin, 43, was captured without resistance Sunday night on a state highway just east of Paxton, said Les Pauley, a spokesman for the Illinois Department of Law Enforcement.

Lampkin, who had been shot in the wrist, was captured about three miles from the site of the Saturday night gunfight, Pauley said.

The suspect fled on foot after the battle, in which a state trooper, the trooper's brother-in-law, a Paxton policeman and two of Lampkin's brothers were killed. A murder warrant was issued Sunday, and police spent the day following a two-mile trail of blood through farmlands near this east-central Illinois town.

Authorities had thought that Lampkin was armed, but he was carrying no weapon when he was arrested by two Paxton police officers acting on a tip from a citizen, Pauley said.

Lampkin was taken to Paxton Community Hospital and was to be transferred later to the Ford County Jail, Pauley said.

State Trooper Michael McCarter, 32, one of those killed in the shootout, stopped four speeding cars Saturday night, investigators said. They said about 30 rounds were fired in the shooting that followed.

Authorities found three pistols in the two Lampkin vehicles and a high-powered rifle near the body of one of the brothers. Another was carrying about $1,700 in cash, police said, but no motive was established for the shooting spree.

Clyde Lampkin, 48, of Gary, Ind., was arrested at the scene Saturday night and charged with violation of weapons statutes. He was being held in the county jail.

McCarter apparently was shot first, investigators said. Paxton patrolman William Caisse, 32, came to McCarter's aid and was slain. Donald Vice, 43, the trooper's brother-in-law, had been riding in McCarter's car and also was shot to death, police said.

During the shootout, Cleveland Lampkin, 46, and Davis Lampkin, 32, were killed, and Paxton patrolman Larry Hale, 27, was wounded, police said.

will have to decide the issue.

The problem in a nutshell is that despite record high interest rates, the economy expanded at a rapid 6.9 percent annual rate in the final quarter of 1978, much higher than the Carter administration expected or wanted.

A rapidly expanding economy increases demand for goods and services, thereby putting upward pressure on prices. Both Blumenthal and Alfred Kahn, the administration's top inflation fighter, now are blaming an overheated economy for the latest outbreak of inflation.

Consumer prices increased 1.2 percent in February, the worst monthly rise in 4½ years. Wholesale prices have increased so far this year at a 14.1 percent annual rate, nearly double the administration's overall inflation target for the year of 7.4 percent.

The question now is whether the economy is continuing to grow too fast. All agree some slowing has occurred, but Blumenthal doesn't think it is enough.

The high-ranking administration official, who asked not to be named, said confidentially that further slowing is needed "even if it risks a sharper slowdown," referring to a recession, which many economists already think is a foregone conclusion later this year.

If there is going to be an error in an economic policy, he said in an interview, "We ought to err on the side of fighting inflation. If we don't do that, the chance of the wage and price program working is impossible."

Salute Industry In Week-Long Event

"Salute to Pitt County Industry Week" will be held Apr. 22-28, according to Gene Taylor, Chairman of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce Salute to Industry Committee.

The purpose of the week-long event is to make the citizens of Pitt County aware of the importance of industry to the county, Taylor said. The Salute Week will include plant tours open to the public and informational tours for students.

Participating will be WNC-TV, The Daily Reflector, Burroughs Wellcome, Eaton Corporation, Fieldcrest Mills, Grady White Boats, Procter and Gamble, and North American Fiberglass. An estimated 800

Pitt County students, 450 Greenville City Schools students, and 75 Pitt Technical Institute students will take part in the school tours of the industries.

More information concerning the schedules of public tours and information about the firms participating will be published in "The Daily Reflector" prior to Apr. 22.

Membership Up For Methodists

RALEIGH — Net membership among United Methodists in eastern North Carolina has increased according to a report received here by Bishop Robert M. Black.

The North Carolina Conference of The United Methodist Church, which encompasses the eastern 56 counties of the state, now includes 212,280 persons in 847 churches. This is a net increase of 397 persons over 1977.

Innocent Pleas By Smith Bagley And 4

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Smith W. Bagley, a former president of the Washington Group Inc. textile conglomerate, pleaded innocent today to charges of conspiring to inflate the price of the corporation's stock, to defraud participants in the company's pension plan and to misapply bank funds.

Bagley, heir to the R. J. Reynolds tobacco fortune and a personal friend of President Carter, and four others were indicted by a federal grand jury March 14 on the charges.

All five defendants entered pleas of innocent today at an arraignment in U.S. District Court.

The other four defendants are James R. Gilley, also a former president of Washington Group; Dewey W. Chapple, former head of Northwestern Bank in Winston-Salem; William F. Thomas, a vice president of Interstate Securities Inc. in Winston-Salem; and Shirley M. Grubb, former secretary to Bagley.

The 11-count indictment stemmed from a year-long investigation by the FBI.

Bagley, a husky, curly-haired 44-year-old resident of Washington, stood silently with his hands clasped in front of him and his jaw muscles visibly tensing as his attorney, William Osteen, told U.S. District Judge Eugene Gordon that Bagley pleaded innocent.

Bagley was accompanied to the arraignment by Osteen and three other attorneys. Chapple was without an attorney, but he told Gordon he planned to hire on in the near future.

Osteen asked Gordon to delay the trial until after Labor Day because of the large amount of material defense attorneys must sift through before handling the complicated financial case.

Osteen estimated that the government has compiled 75,000 pages of documents that may enter into the case and interviewed more than 100 witnesses who may have to be questioned by defense lawyers.

Gordon did not immediately set a trial date.

U.S. Attorney H.M. "Mickey" Michaux Jr. has estimated that the trial may last as long as six weeks, but Gordon drew laughter from the attorneys when he said, "I'm gonna prove him wrong in that."

Bagley and Gilley served as president of the Washington

Group before the company filed in 1977 for reorganization and protection by the federal bankruptcy court.

The indictments list a series of transactions from Feb. 1, 1974, to April 15, 1975, while Bagley was president and Gilley was vice president. They accuse the five defendants of misapplying Northwestern Bank funds and defrauding company employees by mismanaging profit-sharing and stock-purchase funds.

The maximum penalty for conviction on the conspiracy charges against the five is a fine of $10,000 or five years in prison or both.

Conviction on the violation of the securities law, with which all five are charged, carries a maximum penalty of a $10,000 fine or five years in prison or both.

23 Injured

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — Twenty-three persons were injured Sunday in a four-vehicle accident on North Carolina 11 about a mile and a half south of Kinston, authorities said.

Four ambulances took the injured to Lenoir Memorial Hospital, where eight were admitted. All were reported in satisfactory condition today.

Authorities said a car driven by Sally Deaver of Deep Run was making a left turn into a private driveway when it was hit from the rear by another auto driven by Archie Davis of Kinston.

The impact knocked Mrs. Deaver's car into the path of a pickup truck driven by Robert Edward Burch of Kinston and carrying 10 people, including several children. The truck was then hit from the rear by another car driven by Myrtle Woodward.

Davis and Woodward were charged with failure to reduce speed.

Warrant Issued For Break-In

FARMVILLE — The Farmville Police Department has obtained a warrant for the arrest of a Farmville youth charged with a Jan. 16 breaking and entering.

Robert Earl Milligan, 16, is being sought in connection with the Jan. 16 breaking and entering at Mashburn Plumbing Company, 202 S. May Street here. Two shotguns were taken, the Police Chief Ron Cooper said. The warrant was obtained Apr. 6 and Milligan has not been located, he indicated.

Arrested For ABC Violation

FARMVILLE — Farmville Police have arrested Mrs. Sue Williams of 408 S. George Street on charges of possession of more than one gallon of tax-paid liquor for the purpose of resale.

The search of the Williams home was made Sunday at 8:05 a. m. by Officers Ken Godwin, John Ellis, Dave Davis and Clinton Ridenhour, Police Chief Ron Cooper said.

Investigating A Break-In

The Pitt County Sheriff's Department is investigating a Sunday night break-in at Warren's Farm Supply located on NC 903 (Stokes Highway).

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that the firm indicated that nothing was missing following the incident, which was reported to the Sheriff's Department at 9:12 p.m.

According to the sheriff, entrance to the business was apparently gained through the fertilizer storage area and then the office area of the facility was entered. He added that an estimated $50 in damages was sustained to the office door.

A burglar alarm was triggered in the break-in, he said.

Awarded $5,000

In Rental Suit

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A West Hartford woman has been awarded $5,000 in a suit contending that her landlord's rental policies deprived her of the benefits of having black and Hispanic neighbors.

The woman, Florence Maski, who is white, was awarded the money by a Superior Court jury last week. The landlord, Oscar Carnelli, had been accused of discouraging or preventing some persons to rent an apartment in his 54-unit complex. Ms. Maski did not allege that anyone had been denied an apartment because of race.

Senate Argues Court Powers

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Congress prepares for its Easter recess, the Senate is debating whether federal courts should have the power to strike down state laws on voluntary public school prayers.

The Senate has already approved an amendment to remove the issue from federal court jurisdiction.

But a reconsideration of last week's action, by which the Senate voted 47 to 37 for an amendment by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., to narrow the courts' jurisdiction, was awaited today.

His amendment was attached to an administration-backed bill establishing a Cabinet-level Education Department.

Sponsors of the reconsideration, who believe the school prayer amendment jeopardizes the education bill's chances, were gathering support for a move to shift the amendment to a different piece of legislation.

The Supreme Court outlawed mandatory school prayer in 1962 and 1963, saying it violated the constitutional principle of church-state separation. Helms' amendment, if voted into law, would have the effect of overturning the Supreme Court action.

Discussing school prayer, President Carter last week told editors and broadcast news directors he thinks the government "ought to stay out of the prayer business."

Although refusing to say specifically what he thinks of Helms' amendment, he said he feels prayer "should be a private matter between a person and God."

Carter said he agrees with the Supreme Court's ruling that, under the Constitution, a pupil should feel no constraint to pray while in public school.

In other Capitol Hill action this week, the House was resuming debate on a $4.2 billion international development bill, one of the largest sources of foreign aid.

A $1.6 billion aid package was included for Israel, Egypt and other Mideast nations.

Sponsors of the legislation anticipated a move to cut $500 million from their proposal, but without cutting aid to the Middle East.

Congress this week is also continuing its investigation of the Three Mile Island nuclear accident as a Senate Environment and Public Works sub-

Utilities Meet

The Greenville Utilities Commission will meet Tuesday night at 7:30 in the board room of the utilities building.

Items on the agenda include a report on last week's bond referendum during which voters approved issuing $24 million in bonds to finance water, sewer and electric system improvements, consideration of bids for replacement of the roof on the utilities building as well as for an electric fork lift truck, electric transformers, valves and fittings, paving at the GUC operations center, and for construction of a sewer line along Patrick Run to the University Medical Park.

The commission will also consider an amendment to the seasonal rate schedule for bulk tobacco barn users. The proposed amendment, based on Virginia Electric and Power Company rate increases, would increase the average cost per kilowatt-hour by 1.8 cents and mean the average cost of curing a pound of tobacco would be about 3.75 cents.

Mixed Drink Issue Still Sees Assembly Haggling

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's 70-year ban on mixed drink was ended by the General Assembly last year, but haggling over the often-emotional issue has continued unabated this session.

Six counties and a dozen cities have approved liquor-by-the-drink in local referendums in less than a year since the narrow legislative decision. And already, wets and dries have found problems with the new liquor law and have introduced a wide range of bills aimed at fixing them.

Indicating that feelings still run deep on mixed drink legislation, perhaps the most significant of the proposed changes ran into a wall of opposition on the House floor last week. Its sponsor was forced to make a hasty retreat back to committee in hopes of waiting out his foes.

The measure, introduced by Rep. Clyde Auman, D-Moore, would let cities and towns that are within county-wide Alcohol Beverage Control systems hold their own liquor-by-the-drink referendums if the county has rejected mixed drinks or refused to call a vote on the issue.

Auman introduced it to correct a unique problem in his area. Tourist-dependent Pinehurst can't hold a mixed drink referendum because it is not an incorporated city and is not part of a county-wide liquor system.

But the bill also would be effective statewide and would open the door for any city or town in which the county turned down drinks — or appears likely that it would — to circumvent that vote.

Rep. Hartwell Campbell, D-Wilson, is a conservative easterner and frequent opponent of liquor bills, but his support for liquor by the drink in 1978 was crucial to its passage. He blasts Auman's bill as a betrayal by pro-drink legislators.

"This bill is a fulfillment of what those who opposed liquor-by-the-drink said would happen," Campbell said. "It makes those of us who supported that bill come up with egg on our face."

Campbell has special cause to worry, as Auman's measure could have a direct and immediate effect on his hometown. Wilson County rejected mixed drinks this year, and Auman's legislation would allow the city of Wilson to hold its own vote — where chances of passage, some believe, might be better without the rural vote.

"It would emasculate the wishes of the people," Campbell said.

Only three counties — Wilson, Alamance and Dare — have so far rejected mixed drinks county-wide and could be affected by the legislation. But a report issued last week by the Institute of Government said as many as 40 counties are potentially affected by the bill.

Campbell says he would support a bill allowing only Pinehurst to vote and not having statewide impact. But so far Auman has had the quiet support of a number of legislators who'd like to see the bill include their cities, too.

Rep. Jim Morgan, D-Guilford, head of the House ABC Committee, only winks when asked why he wants Auman's bill as it is. But he acknowledges the measure is being watched with interest in areas such as Nags Head, a beach town that, if it voted on its own, might overcome rural reservations and reverse the Dare County rejection of mixed drinks.

And it's being watched in Cumberland County, where Fayetteville would be able to vote in drinks without a county-wide vote or the necessity of setting up its own municipal ABC system — another method of obtaining a drink referendum.

Drug Informant Is Not Amused

WRIGHTSVILLE BEACH, N.C. (AP) — Last summer, a tee shirt with the legend "Don't Shoot Me — I'm Not Wade Bailey" was worn as a joke by some young people. Bailey, a paid U.S. Customs Service drug informant, was not amused.

"I wish I hadn't gotten involved in the whole damn thing," said the 33-year-old Bailey. "Had I to do it over again, the white hats and the black hats could go at it without me. Now I have to take the comments from every dirt-ball hippie down on the beach that knows who I am."

Bailey has received a $10,000 reward in one drug case and, as a key witness, he helped the federal government win guilty pleas or convictions of 24 people, including two of his former classmates at New Hanover High School.

No one has taken a shot at Bailey, although the father of one convicted smuggler was found guilty last year of intimidating the government witness by telling him he was "a dead S.O.B."

He acknowledged that he received $50,000 from the pot smugglers whom he later testified against, in addition to the $10,000 federal reward. His information and testimony helped convict 15 men who were involved in smuggling 11 tons of marijuana in 1977 from a ship.

The Raleigh News and Observer has quoted sources as saying Bailey made an additional $65,000 in that case by keeping 500 pounds from the seizure, an act for which he won federal immunity.

"Once I told my father that I ought to go ahead and change my name to 'Paid Government Informant.' But I think maybe that should be 'Underpaid Government Informant' instead. It's just not worth it," Bailey said.

The government at one time offered Bailey a new identity as part of its witness relocation program, but he refused.

"I said, 'Thanks but no thanks.' I did what I did in New Hanover County and if they're gonna blow me up, they can blow me up in New Hanover County."

A dead cat hung on his automobile and a dead pigeon under the windshield are dismissed as nothing more than pranks by Bailey.

"Anybody that's going to do anything to you is not going to give you a calling card," he said.

At Least 10 Road Deaths

By The Associated Press
Ten persons were killed in traffic accidents in North Carolina during the weekend, according to the Highway Patrol, which said this year's toll has climbed to 348 deaths, 21 fewer than in the comparable period last year.

Victims included two children who were fatally injured in McDowell County Saturday. Laddonna Robinette, 9, and Gloria Ann Moody, 13, were killed when the car they were riding in collided with another car at a highway intersection.

Richard Wayne Rhodes, 16, of Lincolnton, was killed Sunday when his car was struck at a railway crossing on a rural road four miles east of Lincolnton.

Reginald Leon Little 26, of Greensboro, a student at North Carolina A&T State University, was killed Saturday when his car crossed the center line and collided head-on with a tow truck pulling a tractor-trailer truck, the patrol said.

Two persons were killed Friday when the car in which they were riding ran off N. C. 242 in Johnston County and struck a utility pole. The dead were identified as Ronald Lee Allen, 22, of Benson, and Rex Lyndell Sorrell, 25, of Coats.

A Greensboro woman, Linda Lee Shoe, 35, was killed Friday when she was struck by a car on U. S. 421 in Randolph County.

Vicky Lynn Phelps, 24, of Greenville, was killed Saturday when her car ran off N. C. 33 near Grimesland and overturned.

Joe C. Dause, 79, of Henderson, was fatally injured Saturday when he was struck by a car on U. S. 1 near Henderson.

Albert Sutton Moss, 29, of Shelby, was fatally injured Saturday when his car collided with another car on a rural road in Cleveland County.

HSA Meeting Set Thursday

The Project Review Committee of the Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency will meet Thursday, April 26, at 7 p.m. in the Willis Building located at First and Reade Streets.

Agenda items will include proposed uses of federal funds at Pitt County Mental Health Center, REAL Crisis Intervention, Inc., and Wilson-Greene Mental Health Center.

The funds are for the Hughes Fund which are to be used in alcohol and drug related programs. The public is invited to attend this meeting.

Jogging Jimmy Skips Marathon

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — President Carter says he thinks he is too old to enter a marathon race, even though he jogged 3½ miles from his mountaintop retreat to a state park and then scaled rocks to the top of waterfalls.

Wearing a dark blue jogging suit, the president and his 11-year-old daughter, Amy, walked up the large rocks Sunday toward the tip of the falls as Rosalynn Carter, her hair pinned up, sat on a rock at the base.

Carter skipped across a shallow creek on rocks and briefly greeted a small crowd that had gathered to watch him.

After the brief outing at Cunningham Falls State Park, he and his family ended their three-day holiday here and returned to Washington.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gave ground today, pausing after the rally of the past several weeks.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up almost 60 points since early March, dropped back 3.46 to 872.23 by noon today.

Losers outnumbered gainers by a 7-4 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

By the end of last week, analysts said, the recent rally seemed to be fading a bit, and they noted some apparent feeling among investors today that the market was due for a "rest."

Revive Old Tax To Restore Old Window Glass

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Hartford's Old State House, one of the most important historical landmarks in America, will be restored to its original grandeur in time for rededication ceremonies on May 19, thanks in part to the revival of an 18th century tax gimmick.

When work on America's oldest state capitol building was begun more than a year ago, the funds available were too limited to complete restoration of the fine 1796 federal building designed by Charles Bulfinch. Then, one of the funding committee members remembered the colonial tax on window glass.

The committee decided that if each of the businesses with a total of 2,753 windows overlooking the Old State House were to pay a $5.00 annual "viewing tax" per window, the revenue would help defray the cost of landscaping the grounds.

To avoid risk of another revolution, it was suggested that the tax be voluntary. Business leaders were approached and most responded enthusiastically to the idea.

Wheel War On The Bikepaths

By CYNTHIA KADONAGA
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Life in the fast lane has turned into a wheel war between speeding bicyclists and roller skaters battling for space along Los Angeles bikepaths.

With increasing numbers of skaters, officials are working to reduce traffic jams along the city's two largest bikepaths. Hearings were held last week at Sepulveda Basin and Venice Beach, where skaters are clashing with cyclists over who has the right of way.

"The problem is getting worse," said a spokesman for City Councilman Pat Russell. "It's not even the peak of summer yet — I'd hate to think of what the situation will be like in July."

Cyclists contend that roving bands of skaters are causing the congestion.

"People who roller skate tend to move in packs of up to seven across," Glenn Bailey of Northridge said. "They ride side by side, and fill up the path. Most of the time, they act like the bike path is their facility, and

Anti-Nuclear Protest Assails 'Fission Folly'

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer
HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Hoisting hand-made signs reading "No Nukes Is Good Nukes," 1,000 people demonstrated on the steps of Pennsylvania's Capitol while engineers tried to decontaminate a simmering reactor at Three Mile Island.

Pennsylvania Gov. Dick Thornburgh was expected to announce today whether he will lift his 10-day-old advisory that pregnant women and preschool children stay at least five miles from the crippled nuclear plant.

"He's just waiting for a little bit longer period of further sustained progress," press secretary Paul Critchlow said Sunday night.

He said Joseph Hendrie, chairman of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, and NRC operations chief Harold Denton told Thornburgh Sunday night that conditions were safe enough to lift the advisory soon.

Engineers worked Sunday to plug radiation leaks at the reactor, a contaminated cauldron that won't be brought to a cold shutdown for at least five more days. Cold shutdown is the point at which temperatures in the reactor fall below the boiling point of water, and there is no more risk of the reactor going out of control.

Meanwhile, in voices echoed at 10 other weekend demonstrations nationwide, angry and frightened neighbors of the disabled nuclear reactor chanted "No Nukes! No Nukes!" at a rally on the state Capitol steps.

The near-disaster fresh in their minds and their attention riveted on speakers from as far away as West Germany, the 1,000 protesters gathered on an overcast Palm Sunday to conduct the plant's "last rites."

"We come here not to praise Three Mile Island but to bury it," said William Vastine, coordinator of Three Mile Island Alert, an anti-nuclear organization.

"We are no longer going to put up with this kind of fission folly," added Vastine, whose group opposed Metropolitan Edison's construction of the atomic plant and arranged the rally.

Things were much quieter at the plant site, where workers used chemicals to immobilize radioactive iodine contaminating waste water in an auxiliary building.

Other anti-nuclear protests were held Sunday in Groton, Conn.; San Francisco; Seattle; Los Angeles; Phoenix; Bloomington, Ind.; Ithaca, N.Y.; Brooksville, Fla.; Lancaster, Pa., and Toms River, N.J.

Exotic, Unique Items In Demand

SAUSALITO, Calif. (UPI) — The 100 most exotic and unique properties for sale internationally are being sought for a "coffee-table" type book.

Properties chosen to date include two Canadian deals: a trading post with a seaplane base and a weather station and a big game hunting business with 3,000 square miles of hunting rights. There's also a bird watchers' paradise in Mexico, an island in Antigua, a Canary Islands volcano, an entire town in Oregon, an Ohio castle, a miniature Grand Canyon in Nevada, hot springs in several western states, a Costa Rican jungle, a Jamaican nudist resort and an Argentinian mountain chalet.

The book is a joint effort between the publisher, David Wallechinsky, and Rare Earth Real Estate, Inc. of Sausalito. Wallechinsky is best known as the author of "The People's Almanac," "The Book of Lists," and "What Really Happened to the Class of '65."

Ginseng-Use A Health Hazard

CHICAGO (AP) — Prolonged use of the herb ginseng, used by an estimated 5 million to 6 million Americans, poses some health hazards, according to a new study.

Dr. Ronald K. Siegel, of the department of psychiatry and biobehavioral sciences at the University of California school of medicine in Los Angeles, reports in the April 13 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association on a study of 133 users of ginseng over a period of two years.

Most of the long-term users in his study reported stimulation and arousal, and a number of them experienced hypertension, nervousness, sleeplessness, skin eruptions and morning diarrhea. A few reported swelling, and four women had menstrual problems. Twenty-two had hypertension.

More Displayed Taste For Beer

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — About 1,000 persons turned out for a weekend benefit concert for the legalization of marijuana, but most displayed more of a taste for beer than for the illegal weed.

Musicians were paid with money donated anonymously by marijuana smokers. The main speaker was Gainesville lawyer Jeffrey Meldon, state coordinator for the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws. "It's not going to go away, despite any legislation passed against it," Meldon said, referring to a bill signed in Tallahassee Friday to impose mandatory prison sentences on marijuana traffickers.

Pact Vote For Pan-Am

WASHINGTON (AP) — Flight attendants for Pan American World Airways will be voting in the next few weeks on a tentative labor agreement that ended a brief walkout Sunday morning.

Negotiators for Pan Am and the Independent Union of Flight Attendants came to terms on a new contract after a series of marathon bargaining sessions with federal mediators.

The 4½-hour walkout disrupted some flights in Europe, airline officials said. No U.S. operations were affected, they said. Scattered picketing was reported at a handful of airports.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed.

Richard Drake, the union's national strike director, predicted the agreement would be approved by the union's 4,500 members.

"We're very pleased with it (the agreement)," he said. "It's a good contract."

Pan Am attendants have been working without a contract since their independent union was formed 17 months ago.

Meanwhile, no new negotiations are scheduled between United Airlines and its striking machinists union. United, the nation's largest air carrier, has cancelled all flights through April 16 and laid off several thousand non-striking workers.

FINAL AMENDMENT TO THE COMPREHENSIVE ANNUAL SERVICES PLAN FOR TITLE XX STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA

The Final Comprehensive Annual Services Plan for social services under Title XX of the Federal Social Security Act is hereby amended to reflect the projected expenditure of additional federal funds received by North Carolina for FY 79.

The final amendment differs from the proposed amendment in two respects. First, the proposed amendment included only the initial program allocations made to Title XX providers. The final amendment, however, indicates how many clients will be served and how many dollars will be spent for each eligibility category in each county for each service. Second, during the comment period several providers indicated that they would not be able to spend the funds available to them. As a result, reallocations were made to those agencies which exhibited a need for funds in addition to their initial allocation. Therefore, the projected expenditures in the final amendment reflect the reallocations rather than the initial allocations listed in the proposed amendment.

The effective date of the amendment is April 9, 1979.

Bucs Snap Senators' String

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina struck for four runs in the first two innings and went on to hand Davis & Elkins College its first defeat of the season last night, 6-2.

The Senators came into the game with a perfect 8-0 record, but couldn't push past the Pirates, who took advantage of early errors by the West Virginia club.

"We needed to have soccer shoes on," Coach Monte Little said, "the way we kicked it around out there. But we won and that's the important thing."

East Carolina hurler Rick

Ramey went the distance, and had a no-hitter going until the fifth inning when John Evans slapped a two-out double for the first blow. Both teams finished up with six hits.

The Pirates pushed into the lead in the bottom of the first, scoring three runs. Mike Sorrell reached on the first D&E error and Billy Best beat out a bunt down the third base line. Both moved up on a wild pitch and Butch Davis singled past the drawn in infield to score Sorrell. Macon Moye walked and Raymie Styons hit a sacrifice fly to right, scoring Best and moving Davis to third. Moye then took off for second and purposely allowed himself to get caught in a rundown, with Davis coming home during the chase.

The Pirates added their fourth run in the second inning. Rick Derechailo walked to open the frame and stole second. Sorrell reached on another error and still another on Best's grounder allowed Derechailo to score.

Max Raynor doubled with two away in the third, but was thrown out trying to stretch it to a triple.

The Pirates were then held off base until the sixth when they got their final two runs. Moye led off the sixth with a walk, and after one was out, Raynor cracked the ball out of the park in deep right center, some 390 feet from home.

Only one other Pirate got as far as second as Bob Neff singled and stole second in the seventh, but got no further.

The Senators threatened with men at second in the first five innings, but none got further. All either reached on errors or fielder's choices except for a walk in the fourth and the double in the fifth.

Finally, in the seventh, Davis & Elkins broke the ice and pushed over their two runs. Ken Girt singled to deep second and Mike Ryan came on to run for him. Gary Deutsch singled to right and Buck Cecil walked, loading the bases. A sacrifice fly brought in Ryan, and an error on the relay allowed Deutsch to come around also.

Davis & Elkins tried to rally once more in the ninth, getting two singles after two outs, but an infield bouncer to short ended the game.

Raynor was the lone Pirate to have two hits, while Evans had a couple for the Senators.

The victory raised the Pirate record to 14-10, while the Senators now fall to 8-1.

East Carolina plays host to the University of North Carolina tonight at 7:30 p.m., and will entertain UNC-Wilmington on Tuesday at 7:30.

Waltrip Nips Petty In Rebel

Wheels Fly

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Five years ago, Richard Petty said of a fast but erratic young Darrell Waltrip: "It'll take him about five years to really learn the ropes on this circuit. When he does, though, he'll be tough to beat."

Petty's words came back to haunt him Sunday as Waltrip brought his car home a length ahead of Petty in one of the most thrilling wheel-to-wheel duels in the history of Darlington International Raceway. Donnie Allison was third in a photo finish.

"I didn't appreciate Richard's words then," the 32-year-old Waltrip admitted. "I was a young hothead then. I thought, 'Richard Petty, who's he to talk about me? What does he know?'"

"It sort of hurt then. But I'll tell you I appreciate it more now with every race. I'm still learning things, and I think back five years ago to how wet I still was behind the ears and it makes me think."

As for now, the outspoken Waltrip said, "I feel I'm the best driver I could possibly be at this point in my career."

Waltrip said it was a privilege to do some "old-fashioned South Carolina wheel-to-wheel racing with the king," Richard Petty.

"It was a classic. It really was. Fifty or sixty years from now, I'll remember this one. It must have been something to watch from the stands. It sure was exciting in the car," he said. "I never once thought Richard would try to wreck me, or try anything dirty. It was clean all the way. It's a privilege to race against someone like that."

"You know on that last lap, we never touched. We did a couple of other times though. I can remember one very clearly. We locked our cars together in a turn, and I had to back off. But each time I'd wave at him or he'd wave at me, you know, like to say, 'It's all right. We're just racing. Let's go.'"

Petty, whose 780 career Grand National starts are a record, said the competition was the closest in recent memory.

"It was real tense racing. About as tense as I can remember. It must have been a good show," he said.

Donnie Allison, who trailed the leaders by a wide margin throughout, tried to make it a three-way fight at the end.

"Towards the end, I was just running as hard as I could. I wasn't thinking about anything else. Something happened to my car early that slowed it down. I could run with Darrell pretty good early on," said the pole position starter. "The fans really got their money's worth. I can't believe the competition in Grand National racing right now."

"I'd buy a ticket to see this stuff."

Reds Get Untracked

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

It took the Cincinnati Reds four games to get untracked without Pete Rose. After 2½ games, Philadelphia still hasn't won with him — but at least the Phils are on the right track.

Cincinnati, which had lost its first three games to San Francisco, used Rick Auerbach's pinch-double and Joe Morgan's run-scoring single in the 10th inning for a 7-6 victory over the Giants Sunday.

The Phillies, who have shown only occasional bursts of punch in this young season, had dropped their first two games to St. Louis. They were on their way to a victory over the Cardinals Sunday when the rain dampened their spirits. But because of a new rule, they'll be able to keep their 3-2 sixth-inning lead when the teams resume play June 29, so at least they're a little more than halfway to a victory.

Phils 3, Cards 2

Suspended

"You like to win them all, but you can't do anything about two that you didn't," said Rose. "When the ball club starts scoring runs, we'll win." He's doing his part, hitting .300 so far.

Larry Bowa, set up the Phils' go-ahead run with a sixth-inning single. Mike Schmidt doubled to break a 2-2 tie.

Astros 2, Braves 0

If knuckleballer Joe Niekro had any thoughts of matching

Houston teammate Ken Forsch's feat of becoming part of a no-hit brother act, Atlanta's Jerry Royster dispelled them in a hurry with a leadoff single. But Niekro settled down and allowed only four hits the rest of the way.

Expos 5, Pirates 4

Willie Stargell became Pittsburgh's all-time extra-base hit king with 870 as he hit a two-run homer that pushed him past Honus Wagner.

Dodgers 6, Padres 5

Rookie Rick Sutcliffe pitched five innings of three-hit shutout relief and picked up his first major league victory.

Saturday's Purple-Gold game left those Pirate fans who are offensive minded satisfied, but for those like Pat Dye who believe that victory runs on defense, it was not a happy day.

Dye is concerned about the lack of defensive spunk shown this spring, and hopes that it is just because of the injuries which have hampered his team. In Saturday's game, for instance, both of the starting defensive ends, Clifford Williams and John Morris were sidelined with injuries, along with second string backup, Rocky Butler. In addition, both of the probable starting linebackers, Mike Brewington and Jeffrey Warren didn't see action because of hurts. Taking those four out of the lineup is a big blow to any defense.

For the offense, however, things looked good. All three of the first string running backs had good days, and Dye feels that the three, Theodore Sutton, Sam Harrell and Anthony Collins, are winners. He's also pleased with the running of Mike Hawkins, calling him a winner also. And while a couple of others may also fall into that role before the first game, Jessie Hilton looks like he could be headed for stardom.

Leander Green is back at quarterback, and Dye may have found some help for him in the person of Aaron Stewart. The red-shirted freshman had some problems with fumbles early in the game, but came on to run the ball for 72 yards in just 11 carries, a smart six-plus yard average.

Dye hopes to have a potent offense in the fall, and it looks like he has the makings for it.

But the coach believes that his defense is the key, and he's going to be taking a close look at how things go when the team reports in in August.

Signing Week For Basketball

This is the week that national letters-of-intent may be signed by basketball prospects across the country.

New East Carolina coach Dave Odom said he really doesn't expect to sign anyone this week, but isn't worried about it. "I don't think too many players will sign this week anyway" he said.

Odom told us last week that he hopes to bring in about four players. Two of them would be guard types, hopefully a point guard and a "big" guard. The other two, he hopes, will be post-type players who can play either in the center position or move outside to the big forward slot.

Right now, the pivot post is somewhat critical. Al Tyson is the only returning center, and has said he might go elsewhere. Tom Szymanski won't become eligible until after the end of the first semester.

So getting one or two big men will be an important step for Odom in the building of his program for the school.

Kings Get First Division Title

By ALEX SACHARE

AP Sports Writer

The Kansas City Kings capped their remarkable comeback season Sunday by winning their first National Basketball Association division title in 27 years and earning a week's vacation.

The Kings beat the Indiana Pacers 107-101 to win the Midwest Division with a 48-34 record, finishing one game ahead of Denver and 17 games ahead of their record of a year ago, when they tied Indiana for last place in the division.

By winning, the Kings earned a bye through the best-of-three first round of the playoffs, which begin Tuesday night with Los Angeles at Denver and Portland at Phoenix.

The San Antonio Spurs also gained a bye after beating the Cleveland Cavaliers 117-101 Sunday to win the Central Division championship.

The Eastern Conference first-rounders begin Wednesday night, with New Jersey at Philadelphia and Atlanta at Houston. Those pairings were not set until the final day of the season, when the Philadelphia 76ers edged the Denver Nuggets 112-111 and the Houston Rockets beat the Washington Bullets 112-102.

In other NBA regular-season finales Sunday, the Boston Celtics beat the New Jersey Nets 127-101, the Golden State Warriors trimmed the Seattle SuperSonics 89-86, the Los Angeles Lakers beat the Phoenix Suns 111-103 and the Chicago Bulls topped the Detroit Pistons 117-107.

The last time the Kings won a division title was 1952, when the club was located in Rochester, N.Y. and nicknamed the Royals.

Kansas City Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said many factors were involved in his team's success, but he gave special credit to rookie Phil Ford, who led the club in steals and assists and averaged 16 points per game.

"A lot of guys turned it around — they just got tired of losing," said Fitzsimmons. "But Ford is everything I expected he would be. He is the finest point guard in the league."

Angels 7, Mariners 5

Dan Ford knocked in three runs with two homers and a double and Carney Lansford's double in the eighth scored the winning run as California beat Seattle.

Royals 8, Blue Jays 3

Paul Splittorf pitched a five-hitter and George Brett collected four hits and scored three runs as Kansas City beat Toronto.

Twins 3, A's 1

Geoff Zahn pitched a three-hitter as Minnesota beat the A's and sweep a season-opening, three-game series.

Red Sox 7, Indians 6

Jim Rice scored on Jack Brohamer's infield out in the 12th inning, lifting Boston over Cleveland.

White Sox 5, Orioles 1

Rick Wortham and Lerrin LaGrow combined on a three-hitter as Chicago defeated Baltimore. An RBI single in the first by Chet Lemon and a run-scoring hit by Greg Pryor in the fifth provided the White Sox with all the runs they needed.

Royals 8, Blue Jays 3

Paul Splittorf pitched a five-hitter and George Brett collected four hits and scored three runs as Kansas City beat Toronto.

Celtics Seek Return To Past Years Of Glory

BOSTON (AP) — After months of turmoil and the most disastrous season in 33 years in the National Basketball Association, the Boston Celtics are looking for a new low-key ownership, a new coach and, hopefully, All-American Larry Bird to restore fallen pride.

The Celtics, missing the playoffs for the second year in a row with 13 NBA championship flags hanging from the Boston Garden rafters, ended a 29-53 campaign Sunday with a 127-101 romp over the New Jersey Nets.

Then, veteran center Dave Cowens, who became player-coach when Tom Sanders was fired last November, announced he was dropping the coaching position to concentrate on playing.

Cowens dropped the bombshell even as Bird was in another corner of the dressing room for a quick visit that wound up a weekend trip to Boston before he returned to Indiana State University.

Earlier, Harry Mangurian, a multi-millionaire businessman-sportsman who has been virtually a silent partner in ownership of the Celtics, said the "deal is all set" for him to acquire flamboyant John Y. Brown's 50 per cent share of the club at a meeting in Louisville, Ky. today.

Bird, the nation's college Player of the Year, was drafted by Boston last June. He was given a whirlwind tour of the city by his attorney, Bob Woolf,

Deny Public Money Is Goal For N.C. Arena

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Public money would not be required to build a 25,000-seat sports arena in North Carolina, according to the co-chairman of the Sports Arena Study Commission.

"We don't visualize that the taxpayers would have to pay for this," said Rep. Allen Barbee, D-Nash, co-chairman of the group set up by the legislature to study the feasibility of the project.

The arena idea is being pushed by some legislators and other influential citizens, including former Gov. Terry Sanford, now president of Duke University. At Sanford's request, about 30 leaders of government and business met last week at Research Triangle Park to discuss the feasibility of building such an arena.

The conferees agreed to the appointment of a 12-member steering committee to study financial arrangements of other major indoor sports facilities around the country.

Where a North Carolina arena would be built if it is decided the project would be feasible is very much up in the air. Certainly areas given much consideration would include the Research Triangle area, Charlotte or the Greensboro-Winston-Salem-High Point area.

An idea being discussed is to have each of the Big Four schools — Duke, North Carolina, N.C. State and Wake Forest — play three home basketball games a season in the sports arena.

How the athletic departments of the four schools would react to the proposal is an unanswered question, although at least one athletic director has said he sees no conflict between the arena proposal and his school's plans.

The University of North Carolina is planning an 18,000-seat athletic center on campus, but Bill Cobey, the UNC athletic director, has described the university project and the arena proposal as "separate projects."

"I don't see them as being in opposition," Cobey said. "There's always a possibility that we would play some games there (at an off-campus arena). There's no way to make a commitment right now."

To finance the proposed arena, Barbee said "we would be looking at bonds, a re-investment trust, revenue bonds that would be paid off by the revenue from the arena and other methods of funding."

Jealousy Is Next Resort

SEATTLE (AP) — Keepers have imported a mate on a breeder loan, consulted an analyst and tried electric prodders, but after 13 years at the Woodland Park Zoo, Gertie is still childless.

So keepers trying to get the 5,000-pound hippo to mate are trying an old tactic — jealousy.

Kubwa San, a male hippo who came to Seattle three years ago on breeder loan from a Portland, Ore., animal trainer, was supposed to spark a flame in Gertie. But Gertie seemed to regard her younger and smaller suitor as more of a son than a lover.

Barbara Sleeper, Gertie's analyst from the University of Washington Graduate School of Psychology, said the zoo tried everything to get the hippos to show affection for one another.

At first, as a means of introduction, they slept next to each other at night — but in separate quarters.

But when the two got together, "at times Gertie was just mean," Ms. Sleeper recalled. "She would chase him and the keepers would chase her with electric prodders."

The zoo is now seeking $500 to import a young female that would either hit it off with Kubwa San, or spur Gertie into a fit of jealousy that could lead to passion.

Members of the Camp Fire organization recently held a "Hippo Watch" at the zoo to help raise money for the new hippo. They hope to have enough by the end of the month.

Woman' Pets

Ordered To Go

NEW YORK (AP) — Dolores Novel has lost a Housing Court appeal and must leave the Beacon Hotel, taking her pets with her.

City public health officials who inspected the woman's room there in September discovered "one live turkey, two ducks, approximately 17 cats and maybe more, one rabbit, four live turtles in a bathtub and one animal resembling a dog or fox."

The inspection was ordered after neighbors complained of unusual odors.

Pope Upholds Rule Of Celibacy For Priests

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer
VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II upheld mandatory celibacy for Roman Catholic priests today and said the priesthood cannot be renounced because of the difficulties and sacrifices asked. In a strong reaffirmation of the 1,500-year-old ban on marriage for priests, the pontiff said his church commits itself to maintaining priestly celibacy

"as a particular gift for the kingdom of God." He rejected attempts to "secularize" the priesthood, saying: "Those who call for the secularization of priestly life and applaud its various manifestations will undoubtedly abandon us when we succumb to temptation. We shall then cease to be necessary and popular."

John Paul set forth his views in a 35-page pastoral letter to all priests of the Roman Catholic church and a separate eight-page letter to the church's bishops. They were issued for Holy Thursday, later this week, when the pope has called on all priests present in Rome to join him in Mass in St. Peter's Basilica "to manifest the communion of all priests with the bishop of Rome."

The pontiff acknowledged the shortage of priests in certain parts of the world and that priests "are expected to have a care and commitment which are far greater and different from any lay person." But he urged the bishops to "do everything in your power to ensure" that priests remain faithful to their vows.

He also made clear that he wants the bishops to be tough in dealing with requests for dispensations from priestly vows.

"One must think of all these things especially at moments of crisis, and not have recourse to a dispensation, understood as an 'administrative intervention,' as though in fact it were not, on the contrary, a matter of profound question of conscience and a test of humanity."

The celibacy rule is believed to be a main cause for the defection of priests, which has increased from about 1,000 in 1965 to an annual rate of about 4,000, or 1 percent of the world's 400,000 priests. It is estimated that more than 8,000 priests in the United States have resigned since 1965.

By THOMAS KENT
Associated Press Writer
TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Islamic courts kept their firing squads busy over the weekend, sending 10 members of the ousted royal regime to their deaths.

Tehran Radio reported two generals, a former cabinet minister who also headed the Iranian news service, and a senior police constable were executed early today. Tehran newspapers reported six others were executed Sunday, but the government radio confirmed only three of them.

This raised the confirmed total of executions to 80, including 17 army and police generals, in the two months since Khomeini's forces ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

With more than 5,000 other former officials, army officers and policemen in jail awaiting trial, the government rejected criticism from the U.S. State Department and other foreign quarters of the execution Saturday of former Prime Minister Amir Abbas Hoveida, who headed the shah's government for 13 years.

Deputy Prime Minister Abbas Amir-Entezam told a news conference the governments that protested the execution of Hoveida were the ones that profited most from his policies. He said the former prime minister was a "socially undesirable person, corrupt to the core, who should have been punished."

The State Department said the U.S. government deplored the execution because "internationally accepted standards for open and fair trials" had not been observed. The French and Dutch governments were among others protesting.

Tehran Radio said those executed today were Dr. Manuchehr Azmun, 49, who had been minister of labor under Abbas, a provincial governor and the chief of Pars, the government news agency; Gen. Amir Hosein Rabi, a former commander of the air force; Gen. Mohammad Ali Khajehuri, who headed a section of the army general staff; and a senior police constable identified only as Balili who was convicted of killing people in a public bath.

Tehran Radio reported that crowds demonstrated Saturday in Qum, the holy city that is Khomeini's headquarters, to express their approval of the execution of Hoveida. And a crowd in Tehran demanded that his body not be buried in the city's main cemetery because hundreds killed in the struggle against the shah are buried there.

Secret Service Studies Stress

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Secret Service wants to find out if its agents are suffering from stress as a result of their jobs.

The agency, which watches over the well-being of the president and his family, has authorized a study of the impact of job-related stress on the lives and families of 1,200 agents around the country. "We have grown and taken on additional responsibilities," said Jack Warner, head of public affairs for the agency. "We are hiring younger personnel who have busy work schedules. Now seemed to be the time to see if we do have certain stress problems."

Veteran Policeman Becoming A Priest

BRISTOL, Conn. (AP) — Thomas A. Bonacum admits it's "kind of strange," but the 18-year police veteran will soon become Father Bonacum.

The 60-year-old former police officer decided after leaving the State Police Academy in 1975 to become a Roman Catholic priest, partly to fulfill an ambition he had as a child and partly to cope with changes in his life.

"My wife died in 1973," he said. "As a result of that I was trying to develop a new lifestyle, deal with a new freedom that was thrust on me, so to speak. After about a year, I had a yearning to go back to my youth."

At 15, Bonacum had considered going into the priesthood. At 56, he finally did it.

"I was advised by some of my friends who are priests, 'Don't fight it, give it a try,'" he said.

Bonacum spent 18 years in the Ansonia, Conn., police force before leaving in 1970 as a sergeant. He then began teaching at the Municipal Training School of the police academy, where he lectured on law and rules of evidence.

After deciding to try the priesthood, Bonacum went to the Catholic seminary in the Hartford archdiocese. Instead of being turned away as too old, Bonacum said, he was told his career switch might be a good idea.

"So I went to the seminary in Weston (Mass.) and they put me through the wringer for four days."

That interview also went well and Bonacum was off to the Pope John XXIII Seminary for the next several years. This spring he will get his master of divinity degree and has just been ordained as a priest at the Church of the Assumption in Ansonia, a town he saw as a cop for nearly two decades.

"It was a hectic row to hoe, believe me," he said in a telephone interview. "I was always a critic of priests," he added. "I felt that I got involved in my religion rather deeply, and it didn't take much after I found out I was acceptable to really get involved in (the priesthood)."

"The life of a policeman can be quite the opposite of a priest," Bonacum said. But he added that he'd often been sought out because he was the priest-to-be who had raised a family and been a cop — experiences that give him a unique perspective as a priest.

His four children weren't completely taken aback to learn their father was making a career switch from policeman to priest, but it took some getting used to, he said.

About this time each year, local beachcombers begin collecting shells to be given to summer tourists with an Ocean City decal attached as a promotional and goodwill gesture. Residents who bring in at least 10 "respectable" shells receive certificates naming them honorary beachcombers.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Funny thing about Oscar night. It is the movies' big evening out, but the affair is so perfectly suited as a television special it could have been dreamed up by a network programming executive.

Oscar is television's biggest star. Tonight, the little fellow will be on more than half the television sets in America; more than 60 million will admire his pageant. It will probably be the most-watched entertainment show of the year.

It's the movies' night out, perhaps, but television will decide who sits up front and who gets shuffled to yonder reaches of the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion, television will decide how long the thing lasts and how it is presented. This evening's host is Johnny Carson, Mr. Television himself; he whose experience with movies was one bit part in the early 1960s.

One thing television can't control, though, is the behavior of the movie people once they get on stage. And this, I would guess, is part of what makes the Academy Awards television special so much fun.

It is also what makes Marty Pasetta think about opening a bait shop in Pascagoula, Mississippi. Marty doesn't think it's fun when streakers zip across the stage or when Indian princesses take to discing on behalf of absent movie stars.

Pasetta has directed the Oscar television show for eight years. "It is like," he says, "sitting on a hornet's nest."

Pasetta's enemy is time, and time's agents in this little war are long-winded winners. But these are movie people, this is their night. What do they care of the peculiar demands of a television special?

"We try to be on time, especially for the East Coast," Pasetta says. "We don't even go on there until 10 o'clock, so we're heroes if we can do this show in 2½ hours. But doing it on time is very difficult because of this fact we have with people and their acceptance speeches. The winners get up there and talk for an awful length of time, they talk and say nothing. Most of the time, anyway."

This year, Pasetta took precautions. He directed his staff to contact every nominee in every category and to ask the potential winners how long their acceptance speeches would be. "This way, we're forcing them to prepare something," he says. "If they tell us it's three minutes, we say we just don't have the airtime."

With the saved time, Pasetta plans a lot of Carson jokes, more than 300 clips from nominated films and, hopefully, an appearance by John Wayne. But Pasetta knows it's a strange evening, an intense crowd. His precautions notwithstanding, he'll expect, as usual, the unexpected.

Can't Resist Ratings Strategy

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — As a former network program executive, Perry Lafferty still has an itch to plot ratings strategy.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, APR. 10, 1979

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The morning is fine for working out the details of whatever has been left undone and to organize your efforts to get more accomplished in the future. Conditions break in your favor.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Contact helps early for work you have to do. Take time to improve health before seeing friends for recreation later in day.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Schedule your work so you can reach the peak of efficiency. You can be most creative now, so get into the spirit of things.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Know what it is that family members expect of you and aim to please. Handle important business early in the day.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Go after the information you need early in the day for best results. Use common sense in business dealings.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Morning should be devoted to business matters. Plan how to have more security in the future. Avoid one who is too talkative.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Put new ideas to work without delay. Show that you are progressive thinking and very logical. Advance through right channels.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study your aims in life and take steps to achieve them. Get good suggestions from an adviser you like and trust.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Contact those friends early for whatever it is you have in mind and then get right down to work enthusiastically.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Handle business affairs early in the day so you will have time for personal matters later. Handle your money wisely.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Make plans to put new ideas to work and then consult a higher-up for the support you need. Be logical.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Complete unfinished duties at hand and then look into new interests that could result in greater success. Be wise.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Ideal morning to make new arrangements with associates and then carry through with obligations you have assumed.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have every opportunity to get a good education and should be taught the importance of such, and then there can be much success. Give good religious training to strengthen the will and bring happiness.

talked a few days after the premiere of the hour-long, Sunday-night variety show on CBS.

Lafferty, a tall, thin man who produced "The Danny Kaye Show" before an 11-year stint at CBS, said, "You have to play the game of ratings strategy. On her first night Mary was up against the Patty Hearst movie and a Robert Redford movie. I thought we'd get a 31 share. We got 30."

He predicted that for the second week, when NBC would air "Weekend" and ABC the second part of a "Starsky and Hutch" feature, the show would do better.

In fact, the show improved by only a point — to 31.

This is Miss Moore's second attempt at a variety show this season. The first, "Mary," folded after three appearances. It was a standard variety show with a large repertory cast.

Her new show is a "show within a show," the concept that Jack Benny used so well for years. It's about the backstage life of TV variety show star Mary McKinnon — mostly comedy, with the singing and dancing coming when she and her guests rehearse or tape a number.

On "Mary," she appeared as herself. On her latest show, she appears as a character.

Regulars include Harry Sinclair as her producer, Joyce Van Patten as her secretary and companion, and Michael Keaton, a holdover from the first show, as the studio page and go-fer.

The first thing Lafferty did was look at all the tapes of the "Mary" show. As an old friend of Miss Moore and her husband, Grant Tinker, he had also been present at the taping of the first show.

"A few years ago I suggested this idea for the show we're now doing," he said. "But she didn't want to do it. She didn't want to play another character. She wanted to be Mary Tyler Moore. I think that's why the show failed."

"The audience wanted to see her inside a character. She's not the same outside a character, just as Carroll O'Connor's not the same outside of Archie Bunker. The audience saw her as Laura Petrie for five years on 'The Dick Van Dyke Show' and as Mary Richards for seven years on 'The Mary Tyler Moore Show.' The audience likes that lady, but they didn't accept her as Mary Tyler Moore."

Says Alcoholic Carries A Rage

SOUTH KINGSTOWN, R.I. (AP) — Actress Mercedes McCambridge says the underlying cause of alcoholism is universal rage.

Miss McCambridge, a recovered alcoholic, said rage is not always hidden deep inside a person; sometimes it's close to the surface.

"That's how I was able to play the voice of the demon in 'The Exorcist.' I just let all of my rage come out," she said during a series of lectures at

Swedish Medal Is Among Loot

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Viveca Lindfors says she has put a message on her telephone answering machine just for burglars, telling them "no use coming here, it's all gone."

Thieves broke into her East Side townhouse Saturday night and stole silverware, ornaments and a rarely awarded Swedish royal medal, Miss Lindfors told police.

The Swedish-born actress said Sunday that the stolen medal was the Wasa Order, a 2-inch gold and enamel cross awarded her four years ago. The medal is supposed to be returned on the death of the recipient.

The order is bestowed infrequently outside of Sweden, said Miss Lindfors, who began acting in films here in 1947 and became a U.S. citizen in 1950.

Miss Lindfors discovered the robbery on returning from a performance of her one-woman show, "I Am A Woman," with which she has toured off and on since 1973.

The University of Rhode Island. "All you need is a half-hour with any alcoholic and you can find out the exact moment that his rage began," she said.

"It's the essential loneliness in all of us that accounts for the rage and frustration of our times," she said.

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦AQJ75 ♥4 ♦AJ10 ♦AQJ9
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 2 ♦ Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—If partner has as little as the two black kings for his two-over-one response, a small slam is a virtual certainty. Add the ace of hearts and you could easily have a grand slam. Since a jump to four clubs doesn't come close to expressing the trick-taking power of your hand, we suggest you first make a jump shift to three diamonds, followed by a vigorous raise in clubs.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable,
you hold:
♦AKQJ97 ♥6 ♦AQ109 ♦63
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with three hearts. What do you bid now?
A.—Your hand is too strong for a mere competitive bid of three spades, for you need to find partner with only the king of diamonds to make game a laydown. Jump to four spades.
Don't worry about missing a slam. You have made a strong bid and, if partner has enough for you to make twelve tricks, he won't pass.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦9862 ♥7 ♦AK765 ♦KQ6
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South

1 ♦ 2 ♥ Dble. ?
What action do you take?
A.—Unless you know something about your partner that we don't, pass. If partner has anything resembling his bid, your minor-suit strength should make eight tricks a shoo-in. Any rescue activities on your part border on the absurd.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♥AKJ1076 ♦K92 ♦A843
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♦ 2 ♦ ?
What do you bid now?

A.—The time to cue-bid is not yet at hand. The first thing you want to do is impress partner with the power of your heart suit, and the way to do that is to make a jump shift to three hearts. You can cue-bid your spade void at your next turn, followed by any additional cue-bids you feel appropriate to investigate grand slam possibilities.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable,
you hold:
♦AKQJ109 ♥AK9 ♦6 ♦743
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 3 ♦ Pass
3 ♦ Pass 4 ♦ Pass
4 ♥ Pass 5 ♦ Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Enough of this pussyfooting around. If you are playing rubber bridge, bid seven spades and collect your 150 honors. If you are playing duplicate, bid seven no trump because it is the higher scoring contract. Partner must surely be able to contribute five top tricks to your eight in either contract.

Q.6—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦2 ♥AQ93 ♦7653 ♦K965
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♦ 2 ♦ ?
What action do you take?

A.—Double. We are not enamored with a penalty double with four low trumps, but what other choice do you have? A pass would be pusillanimous indeed, while a response in either of your four-card suits would be a distinct overstatement of the offensive potential of your hand. In view of your shortness in partner's suit, you have excellent defensive prospects, so the double might easily yield a 500-point profit.

Q.7—As South, vulnerable,
you hold:
♦Q105 ♥QJ75 ♦A3 ♦9832
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass 1 ♦ Dble. Pass
1 ♥ Pass 4 ♥ Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Partner must have a very powerful hand indeed to jump to game opposite what could be a yearborough with only three hearts. Since you were close to a jump response to the takeout double, slam is a definite possibility. Signal your ambitions to partner by cue-bidding five diamonds.

Q.8—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦KQJ ♥Q10952 ♦KJ93 ♦Q
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass Pass 2 NT Pass
3 ♥ Pass 4 ♦ Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Partner's four club bid is what is known in the trade as an "advance cue-bid." It agrees hearts as trumps and shows a maximum two no trump opening bid. With what should be 38 points between the two hands, we wouldn't blame you if you simply leaped to a grand slam.

However, it cannot cost to check on aces first via Blackwood, then bid seven no trump if partner shows four so as to collect an additional 150 points for honors.

No Bank Loan, So They Built Home

RAISING A HOME — James and Denise Driggers gather wood to help heat the home they built with their

RAEFORD, N.C. (AP) — The day when people could raise their homes with their own hands and sweat seemed to have disappeared from the American scene with the last pioneers.

But then along came James and Denise Driggers, who with a plot of land, a $5,000 loan and sheer stubborn determination, built their own home in two years.

"If you really want to do it, it can be done," said Denise Driggers, looking country-comfortable in her overalls and a plaid flannel shirt.

Angry and depressed after 16 area banks and loan companies had repeatedly turned them down for a modest home loan, they decided to build their own house with the help of one carpenter and a loan from the Rockfish Credit Union.

Now a 1,700-square-foot, barned house sits on a wooded hill-top lot in Rockfish, halfway between Raeford and Fayetteville, a monument to their grit and hard work.

The two-story house is still unfinished. Its rustic, slab-pine interior and old-fashioned wooden stoves may seem a little primitive to some.

But it is a solid, spacious house, reflecting the ingenuity and skill of its youthful owners.

"I've never driven a nail before," said Mrs. Driggers. Her husband, a civil service employee at Fort Bragg, was equally unskilled with a hammer and saw.

But after a year of hearing "no" from banks, savings and loan companies, mortgage firms and government agencies in Fayetteville, Raeford and Southern Pines, they decided to build their own home just to show people it could be done.

"We were so depressed it is hard to describe," Mrs. Driggers said.

"We went from one loan office to another and were refused an interview, were laughed at and were told it was impossible to build the house we wanted for less than $45,000," said Mrs. Driggers.

During the year they spent plodding from bank to loan company, they were working hard clearing their lot of pine trees and scrub oaks by hand with a pick and an ax.

"We've touched every part of this place, just the two of us," said Mrs. Driggers.

Finally, they decided they would have to build their house with the only money available — the $5,000 loan from Rockfish Credit Union.

Then their luck began to change. They found Jack DeWitt, a local carpenter who liked the Driggers' determination. He agreed to help them build their house and get it under a roof for $6,000.

DeWitt laid the foundation, and then he and Driggers joined in doing the work on the rest of the house.

"He was very, very understanding. He sort of took my husband on as an apprentice and taught him as they built the house," Mrs. Driggers explained.

After four months of measuring, sawing and nailing all day long, they finally had the house closed in under an old-fashioned tin roof.

Once the house had walls, a roof, plumbing and electricity, DeWitt left the Driggers to finish it on their own.

While her husband was busy with the exterior, Denise Driggers was inside cutting pine boards for rough-hewn paneling for the walls, laying linoleum in the kitchen and painting the walls.

A few trips to the local junkyard turned up a handsome, old porcelain tub and sink for $20.

The toilet was an even better bargain. It was given to them on condition that they also take two pregnant cats.

A handsome wood stove was salvaged from a junk pile in an old tobacco barn, polished until it looked like new, and placed in the kitchen.

"We want this to look like a country house with lots of wood, old sinks and tubs and eventually a porch around the house," Mrs. Driggers said.

The couple estimates their finished house will have cost them $16,000.

"We learned not to go to banks anymore. We actually want to thank them for turning down our loan, because now we have our house without any mortgages, excessive interest rates and pages and pages of paperwork," said Mrs. Driggers.

But she admits that building her own house is not something she'd want to tackle every day. "I couldn't go through it all again. It's been a lot of work," she said. And another six months of work is hanging over the couple before they can call their house finished.

"It would be nice to sit down and have it all finished," said Denise Driggers, looking wistfully around the uncompleted living room.

"Sometimes I sit back and still can't believe we did it. We want to let the people know what is possible in this world."

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Deafness and Hearing Aids

I am 56. I've known for a long time that I can't hear well. I've resisted getting a hearing aid, but now I know something must be done about it. Are there different kinds of deafness? Can they all be helped by a hearing aid? And how do I choose the right hearing aid? — Mr. S.I., Ga. Dear Mr. I.:

There are two major types of deafness. One is the "conductive" loss of hearing. The other is the "perceptive," or "nerve," type of hearing loss. Perhaps if you understand each type of deafness you might get a clearer picture of your problem.

When somebody talks or when you listen to music, sound waves enter the outer ear and produce hundreds of vibrations of the eardrum. Then, by way of three tiny bones (ossicles), the hammer, the anvil and the stirrup, sound is brought to the inner ear.

Now, in a remarkable way, the mechanical sound waves are changed into electrical vibrations. These are then carried to the brain, through the nerve of hearing ("auditory" nerve). When these vibrations reach the brain, the sound is recognized as speech, music or various types of noise.

The first type of hearing loss, the "conductive" form, occurs when there is any interference with sound from the time it enters the outer ear until it is changed into electrical vibrations in the inner ear.

The second, or "nerve" type of deafness, is caused by any condition that affects the electrical impulses in the inner ear, in the nerve of hearing or in the brain.

In most instances, the diagnosis of the type of hearing loss can be made with just the use of a set of tuning forks. An instrument, the audiometer, can add valuable information, especially when there is a particularly difficult problem.

Many people can hear sounds, but cannot accurately discriminate the spoken word. This, too, can be studied with complex equipment.

After all the tests are in, it is possible to decide if a patient has a conductive hearing loss, a sensory-neural hearing loss or a combination of both.

The conductive hearing loss, sometimes due to a condition called "otosclerosis," can be dramatically helped by the stapedectomy operation. When surgery is not indicated or not wanted, a hearing aid can show dramatic benefits.

This is not as readily possible with patients who have severe nerve damage. Yet even those can be given the advantage of additional hearing by a properly fitted hearing aid.

Actually, there is only one accurate way of determining the benefits of a hearing aid. That is, by using it as a trial over a reasonable period of time. Your own ear specialist can refer you to the manufacturer or the distributor of an excellent hearing aid. Be sure to consult your doctor before purchasing the instrument.

Non-Writer Osborn Is Author Popular Novels

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor

NEW YORK (AP) —John Jay Osborn Jr. now looks back more in amusement than in anger at how his writing career almost ended before it began.

"I'd always wanted to write," the 32-year-old Osborn recalls. "So, when I was a freshman in college I turned in a poem. The teacher read it and told me, 'That's the worst poem I've ever seen. Don't write anymore.'"

But the year passed, Osborn found himself in Harvard Law School, and he began to write again.

He explains: "It was the idea that I was a lawyer and not a writer that let me write again. It lifted a tremendous psychological burden from me."

"I think of myself as a lawyer who writes. If I thought of myself as a writer I would be carrying a great load which would make it impossible to write. I'd probably try to write the great American novel and fail, because I know Hemingway is better. But knowing that I'm a lawyer allows me to write."

Now the soft-spoken, boyish-looking Osborn has three novels to his credit: "The Paper Chase," "The Only Thing I've Done Wrong," and, most recently, "The Associates."

In the first, he says, he tried to show how life is in law school as well as to explain unreciprocated relationships — the student-teacher relationship. "You see, the students know everything there is to know about the professor, but the professor knows little or nothing about the students because there are so many of them."

Osborn grew up in the San Francisco area and his second novel deals with growing up in California.

In the third, "The Associates," he says, "the main thing I'm trying to say is that the myth of the Wall Street lawyer as an all-knowing, super-intelligent being is not right. They are just as flaky and strange as anyone else, and that's not a bad thing."

Osborn says he began the highly popular "The Paper

Chase" during his third year in law school. "It was a painstaking process," he recalls. "I finished about 40 pages of it that year, then I took those pages to a publisher and they bought it. It took me about a year to finish the book."

After graduation, Osborn clerked for a Federal Circuit Court of Appeals judge in Philadelphia, then worked as an associate in a New York Wall Street law firm for about four years, and most recently taught at the University of Miami Law School.

Now Osborn, who lives in New York with his doctor wife and their young child, handles a few individual clients, but plans to return to teaching next year.

"Teaching is ideal for writing," he says. "It gives you the time to both write and teach. They go together beautifully."

Osborn has written for film and television in connection with "The Paper Chase." "I collaborated on the movie script," he says, "and I wrote a lot of dialogue. I think the movie was true to the book."

"I wrote several scripts for the TV series of 'Paper Chase,' and I rewrote a number of others. I love that series — it has no sex, no violence and the characters want to do something important with their lives."

Of these various forms of writing, he prefers "novels to anything. Novels are all yours. Movies are nice but you have to depend on others to make the thing work. As for TV, it's hard to be good because of the time limits imposed. It's an impossible schedule."

Osborn says he currently has a book in mind that he's been thinking about for a year.

"It's a family saga about the Hudson River," he reveals. "I only write what I know about, and I know about this really well."

Farm Scene

By LEROY JAMES

County Extension Chairman
The maintenance of optimum soil pH is the number one soil fertility consideration for soybeans in North Carolina.

Under acid soil conditions, uptake of critical plant growth nutrients is reduced, while others may be taken up by the plant in toxic quantities.

Under slightly alkaline conditions, certain element deficiencies may occur in some soils. Therefore, even if soils are adequately fertilized, soybean yields may be reduced with less than ideal soil pH conditions.

Soybeans grow best at a soil pH of 5.7 to 6.2. If below this optimum range, lime is usually used to raise the pH and to supply calcium and/or magnesium for plant growth.

Dolomitic limes and calcitic limes are the two most common types of limes sold. Dolomitic lime contains magnesium and calcium, while calcitic lime contains only calcium.

If a soil test report indicates a low pH and a low magnesium level, dolomitic lime should be used, however, if the pH is low and the rating for magnesium is medium or high, one can use either calcitic or dolomitic lime.

Availability, cost of lime, materials containing calcium and magnesium should also be considered when selecting the right type of lime.

What does a low pH mean to the soybean plant? At a low soil pH, manganese and aluminum are easily taken up by the plants, even to toxic levels. Manganese toxicity, particularly at a pH of 5.0 or less, causes a crinkling of the leaves and a stunted appearance.

Aluminum toxicity, however, interferes with root growth and function, causing reduced uptake of critical plant nutrients such as phosphorus and calcium.

Perhaps the most critical effect of a low soil pH is the possibility of a molybdenum deficiency. Molybdenum is a very important constituent of the nitrogen-fixing process conducted by the Rhizobium Japonicum bacteria in the root nodules. With low molybdenum uptake, the bacteria functions poorly in fixing nitrogen, if at all. This, of course, may result in the yellowing and overall poor growth of the plants.

Humane Soc. Plans Drive

The need for a shelter to provide temporary aid for animals needing homes was discussed by Pitt County Humane Society Pres. Elizabeth Savage during the April meeting of the Society, held Saturday at the Greenville Women's Club Building.

Treasurer Evelyn Beasley read the quarterly financial report.

Telephone Committee Chairman Dr. Emily Farnham distributed bulletins and postals on the drive against the slaughter of seals.

Membership Chairman Ralph Cottam discussed ways and means to sign up new members.

A discussion about the fund drive program during "Be Kind To Animals' Week," beginning May 6 was held. There will be a pre-drive flea market sale at the new fairgrounds building Saturday, May 5. Members who wish to help that day are invited to phone Pres. Savage, 756-4867, or Tres. Evelyn Beasley, 752-5794. Members are invited to donate cakes for a bake sale to be held in conjunction with the flea market.

Gregory Savage was welcomed as a new member.

Marijuana, Liquor Before The House

By Sam D. Bundy
N. C. House of Representatives
Whiskey and marijuana took center stage in the House this week.

A bill by Rep. Clyde Auman of Moore County would allow towns within a county ABC system to vote separately on liquor-by-the-drink, even though it had already been defeated countywide. Much opposition arose and five counties asked to be permitted to withdraw. On motion of the sponsor, the bill was returned to the ABC committee to see what else they could come up with.

Rep. Allen Adams introduced a bill that would permit possession of eight ounces of marijuana, instead of an ounce, and still be a misdemeanor. This one was sent to a Judiciary Committee pronto. I could not detect much support on the floor of the House for this kind of thing.

Things are moving at a faster pace — sessions are becoming longer. Bills are still being dropped in the hopper. Bills introduced to date are 1101 in the House and 659 in the Senate for a total of 1760.

The social event of the week was at the Royal Villa on Thursday night when members of the General Assembly were invited to a dinner meeting in connection with a stateside Principals' Conference. It was a pleasure and privilege to see and sit with about 25 principals and assistant principals from Pitt and Greene Counties.

See you next week.

Spelling Bee

The 11th annual Pitt County School Countywide Spelling Bee will be held Tuesday at Ayden Middle School.

All schools having grades four through eight are expected to participate in grade-level contest and in a final contest, from which will evolve a county champion.

Registration is from 8:30 to 9:14 a. m., with grade-level contest beginning at 9:15. The public is invited to attend.

TOBACCO GROWERS!

HELP SAVE THE SUPPORT PROGRAM AND BOOST YOUR PROFITS TOO!

Do your part by marketing only good-quality upstalk tobacco.

Leave low-quality primings and nondescript leaves in the field. The Flue-Cured Stabilization Co-op already has about a two-year supply of downstalk tobacco. Unless these stocks are reduced, losses could occur which would jeopardize the support program.

In 1978, upstalk grades averaged $1.41 per pound. Downstalk averaged 38 cents less—only $1.03 per pound.

Help yourself and save the program too—participate in the "Four-Leaf" program.

Sign up to qualify for 10 percent more acreage if you need it. But, whether you sign up or not, leave those bottom leaves in the field!

Entered Hospital To Shoot His Wife

GREENSBORO, N. C. (AP) — The husband of a Gibsonville woman entered the emergency room of a Greensboro hospital Saturday night and shot his estranged wife repeatedly after shooting her several times earlier at a night spot, police said.

Detective Allen Travis said Wilhemina Turner, 27, was reported in stable condition today at Moses Cone Hospital. Her husband, David Thomas Turner, 32, of Rt. 2, McLeansville, was held in Guilford County jail under $100,000 bond.

Turner was charged with two counts of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill and one misdemeanor assault on a female.

"My understanding is she was shot 11 times, but the doctor says eight or nine," said Travis, who explained that some wounds could be bullet exit wounds.

Travis said Turner told police he loved his wife and shot her several times when he discovered her with another man at a nightclub shortly before midnight Saturday.

The man then took Turner's wife to the hospital, with Turner following, Travis said. "He just barged in behind them and started shooting again," the detective said.

Travis said Turner was convicted of killing his wife in Winston-Salem in 1971, and had served six years of a 25-year sentence for that conviction.

Third Street School PTA will hold a general meeting Thursday at 7:30 p. m. in the Media Center.

Marlee Terry's third grade class will present the play, "Hansel and Gretel," under the direction of Jo Ann Moore.

The 75th anniversary of the Greenville City Schools will be honored.

Regards Bonds As Inefficient

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government could lose billions of dollars because of the growing use of tax-exempt state and local bonds to finance low-interest home mortgages, says the chairman of the House Banking Committee.

Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., called the bonds "a costly and inefficient form of subsidy at best." He made his comments Sunday as he released a Congressional Budget Office report on the bonds. The study found that 50 localities in 12 states have issued more than $1.6 billion in tax-exempt bonds for single-family home mortgages since last July. The tax exemption will cost the government $340 million in lost revenue in the 1980 fiscal year, the report said.

A LOT GOES INTO A GOOD SWIFT KICK.

You can "buy" fertilizer just about anywhere. But because we're soil service specialists, we make the extra effort to make sure you get the results in increased yields you expect. We'll come to your farm and help you with your soil samples. Then when the results are in, we'll program the right Certified Harvest King® recommendations to your soil and then handle spreading. We're also available throughout the life of your crops to recommend and provide the farm chemicals you need to control unwanted weeds and pests.

"In three years of growing under stress conditions, Calcium Nitrate has made the difference between crop failure and a successful year."

Ennis and Jerry Byrd
Orum, North Carolina

The Byrd family farms 40 acres of tobacco and 260 acres of corn and beans. They started with Calcium Nitrate in 1970 and have stayed with it ever since. Mr. Byrd tells why. "We liked Calcium Nitrate's fast action right from the start. You could see the crop feeding right away, and could also tell that Calcium Nitrate does its job and then is through. It won't hold tobacco green in the field over an extended period of time which was a problem with our former fertilizer. The last three years we've used Calcium Nitrate in liquid solution when the crop was too big to cultivate; it really works out well. I figure that during 3 years of growing under bad, stress conditions, Calcium Nitrate increased my profit 50 percent!"
