the Society, this year. Several other names were suggested to the Society that we try to secure as speakers.

The president suggested that the Society appoint a certain date on which we attempt to have some great speaker address us each year. The date November 11 was suggested but the matter was left open for discussion at our next meeting.

As this was the time for election of Marshals - nominations were in order. First for Chief and next her four assistant Ruth Dean was elected chief and Nell Pappendick, Annie Laurie Baucom, Margaret Hayes and Linda Warren, assistant.

The Critic Commended the Society for the big improvement made in conduct since our last meeting but said there 'was still room for improvement'. She also called attention to the Members of various committees that they were expected to ~~call~~ attend meetings posted by their Chairman.

There being no further business to come before the Society, the meeting was turned over to the Program Committe who had prepared a program on the order of a Minstrel

The meeting adjourned.

Helen Bohnson Sec
Poe Society.

There was a regular business meeting of the Poe Society on January 27th 1920 in the Auditorium. It was decided that the program be given first. The program consisted of an interpretation of Tennyson's "The Lady of Shalott."
