There was a regular business meeting of the Poe Society on February 14, 1920.

The meeting was called to order by the president; the roll was called and the minutes read and approved.

Reports were given as follows: Poster Committee, that poster for that meeting had been made by volunteers; Flower Bed Committee that scarlet sage and peonies had been ordered for bed. Sweeping Committee, that Mrs. Beckwith was not satisfied with work done by girls. It was suggested by miss Blagly that we race in sweeping halls the cleanest and also as we received ten dollars a week for this work we should feel our responsibility and do our work to the best of our ability. The secretary reported that the marshals had been approved by Mr. Wright. The president told us that General Faison was unable to come at the appointed time on account of sickness but that he might come later.

The meeting was then turned over to the program Committee who had arranged a debate.

While the judges were making their decision miss Christine Evans played several selections on the piano. During this interlude a Challenge from the Lanier Society was brought up. Challenging the Poe Society to a debate for the Loving Cup on the query: "Resolved That Industrial Disputes should be settled by Compulsory Arbitration". The Poe Society decided on the affirmative side of the question and accepted the challenge.