No New Developments In The UNC-HEW Battle

By The Associated Press
No new developments were reported Saturday in the desegregation dispute between the University of North Carolina and the federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The university failed to reach a settlement Friday with HEW, and the university Board of Governors put further negotiations in the hands of its attorneys. It also gave the attorneys the power to file suit if negotiations failed.

Negotiations were to continue in Washington, and university president William C. Friday referred all questions Saturday to the attorneys. However, Charles Morgan Jr., the Washington lawyer hired by the board, could not be reached for comment. Gov. Jim Hunt also could not be reached for comment.

Hanging in the balance is the $89 million the 16-campus university system receives annually from the federal government.

HEW secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. announced Friday that he will begin a limited predominantly white and black cutoff of the money on May 2.

But the board also authorized Morgan to file legal action against Califano to try to block the cutoff. The schools could lose as much as $20 million through the limited cutoff, officials said.

The issue of eliminating program duplication on mostly white and historically-black campuses presented the major stumbling block Friday, Hunt said. The university regards the duplication issue as a question of control over the university system.

Hunt had offered to ask the General Assembly for $40 million to finance improvements at the system's five predominantly black campuses. With the $30 million already appropriated for those campuses, that amounted to $70 million for new programs and buildings, Friday said.

Hunt said Friday that he supported the university's position in the dispute. University officials have insisted that they will not give in to demands by HEW demands to end duplication of programs on nearby predominantly white and black campuses.

Califano said Friday that he was disappointed the university and HEW could not reach agreement. "I still consider a negotiated settlement to be far more desirable than litigation," he said in a prepared statement.

Voter Turnout Poses Dilemma

By NAT GIBSON
SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — The high turnout during this week's black majority rule election in Rhodesia has created a major dilemma for British and American policy makers in southern Africa.

More than 60 percent of the estimated 2.8 million voters of all races cast ballots endorsing a solution devised by the "internal" black and white leaders without benefit of Western support.

The outcome was particularly harsh for the American and British administrations. Both vigorously lobbied against the vote taking place, saying the balloting excluded the Soviet-backed black nationalist guerrillas and would not end a six-year guerrilla war.

But Rhodesian politicians now say that whether the West likes it or not, Rhodesia has launched itself toward the creation of a black-dominated government.

The West must either recognize the new regime as a political reality and hope for the best or deny its existence and prolong the civil war, the politicians say.

If Western leaders opt for the new regime and lift trade sanctions against Rhodesia, it could hurt their influence in other African states and with the various Soviet-backed guerrilla movements operating in southern Africa.

Western nations, the politicians note, has been trying to woo Angola and Mozambique, which are resting uneasily under Soviet influence. Recognizing the new black regime in Rhodesia would not help the effort.

By contrast, non-recognition would leave the U.S. and Britain jointly backing the Soviet-backed Patriotic Front's guerrilla campaign to impose a one-party socialist state by force.

"This is a recipe for civil war and death on a grand scale that could only strengthen Soviet influence in the region to the detriment of the West," one Rhodesian official said.

Before the voting there was a faint hope the leaders of the Patriotic Front, a fragile coalition based on rival tribes, could be drawn into negotiations, proposed by the United States and Britain, that would lead to an internationally supervised election.

Unless there is a dramatic change by the "internal" black leaders, however, the U.S.-British proposal is now dead. As the vote climbed past the point of an absolute majority, they made it clear they did not plan to give up the power they have achieved by the ballot no matter how hard the Western powers argue for it.

Methodist Bishop Abel Muzorewa said Patriotic Front leaders Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe could come home, but only under an amnesty "just like any other terrorists."

Norfolk Has Port Problems

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The president of a Norfolk-based travel agency says the city's poor docking facilities for passenger ships could chase cruise ships and their millions of dollars in business to other ports.

Richard O'Leary, of Cruise International told the Virginia Port Authority Friday the facilities are an embarrassment and are becoming the laughing stock of the cruise industry.

He asked the authority to get Norfolk International Terminals to rescind its year-old ban on letting the cruise ships use its piers for baggage-handling and ground transportation.

Passenger vessels since then have been docking at Lamberts Point and moving luggage through U.S. Customs at the City Arena, an arrangement O'Leary said has resulted in costly and embarrassing delays to passengers and shipping lines.

He read the authority letters from two shipping firms calling the recent moorings of the Mardi Gras and the Queen Elizabeth II at Lamberts Point the worst disembarkations in company history.

NIT officials have said the passenger traffic interferes with freight operations at Norfolk's largest general-cargo terminal.

All the authority could give O'Leary was a promise to "continue to work on this problem."

He said he will take his case to the Norfolk City Council this week and then to the governor's office if necessary.

New Flood Dangers

By United Press International
Heavy rains touched off deadly new floods in parts of South Texas Saturday and the devastating floodwaters of the Pearl River consumed more homes and businesses in southern Mississippi, forcing new evacuations.

Emergency crews in Minnesota and North Dakota raced to shore up dikes against the worst flooding of the century.

Heavy rains struck the San Antonio, Texas, area late Friday and early Saturday. Three people — including a 1-year-old child — were killed when their car was swept into a creek bed from a low-water crossing.

Civil Defense officials in flood-weary Houston, Conroe and Beaumont, Texas, Saturday were optimistic they had seen the last of thunderstorms that left large areas of the cities under water and forced thousands of persons from their homes.

Floodwaters slowly receded in Houston, brought to a standstill by the floods, and in Conroe, where 1,000 persons were driven from their homes. Officials in Conroe said preliminary estimates indicated the flood caused $30 million to $50 million in damage.

In Beaumont, automobiles were washed away and water sloshed through about 150 homes.

In Hardin County, north of Beaumont, homes were flooded and creeks and bayous were overflowing.

"It's pretty bad," a Hardin County sheriff's department spokesman said. "It's mainly around Lumberton and Sour Lake."

In Mississippi, the flooding Pearl River forced another 700 persons from their homes in the Columbia area and workers cut two 200-foot gaps in a highway bypass to relieve backwater pressure in the southern area of the city.

The latest evacuation brought to as least 4,200 the number of people forced to flee their homes in the Pearl River Valley of Marion County.

Rain complicated evacuation efforts and threatened to add to flood problems.

At least 25,000 have been forced from their homes in Mississippi since torrential rains pushed the Pearl and other streams over their banks. Most of the evacuations occurred in the capital city of Jackson. Floodwaters were receding Saturday in Jackson as the high water moved downstream.

Emergency crews in Minnesota and North Dakota piled up sandbags to protect towns from the rising Red River of the North, which is the border between the two states. The river was flowing at its highest level of the century Saturday and was still rising.

Heavy volunteers at East Grand Forks, Minn., worked to add three feet of sandbags to the dikes along the rushing river. Officials said hundreds of high school students and citizen volunteers worked through the night in an effort to beat the expected crest of 49.6 feet on Monday — more than 2½ feet above the capacity of the man-made dikes.

Across the river in North Dakota, Grand Forks Mayor C.P. O'Neil ordered an emergency evacuation of 70 homes on the city's North Side.

The river poured into low-lying areas and covered thousands of acres of farmland in Minnesota and North Dakota.

Downpours in northwestern Illinois and east central Oklahoma also threatened to push rivers and streams over their banks but no evacuations were ordered.

Claims Delay In Airport Radar

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (UPI) — Members of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization at Smith-Reynolds Airport claim installation of a needed radar system has been delayed because it would mean the controllers would get higher pay.

Federal Aviation Administration officials have denied the charge that the situation at Smith-Reynolds is similar to that at a San Diego airport last fall, when two planes collided in flight and killed 144 people.

They also said the system, which gives a microwave relay link between the Triad's regional airport and Smith-Reynolds, hasn't been installed because a vital component was missing.

Pat Hines, president of PATCO's Winston-Salem chapter, said Friday the equipment for the radar system has been stored in boxes at the airport terminal for more than a year.

"The radar system should be installed in Winston-Salem to provide a substantially safer operation and it should be installed now before any type of tragic accident happens," he said.

"There is a large potential for that same situation as what happened in San Diego."

But Jack Barker of the FAA's regional office in Atlanta said that's not true.

"Not having it doesn't take away aviation safety ... but it is an extra thing controllers can use," he said.

The new system would relay the radar pattern from the regional airport to Smith-Reynolds. The Forsyth County Airport Commission had requested the system in 1975 and didn't get FAA approval for the system until 1976.

"Now, there is no way to really know where the planes are until we pick them up on the binoculars," Hines said. "A phone call to Greensboro can take 20 to 30 seconds, and an airliner can go a long way in that amount of time."

The FAA has said "unanticipated procurement delays" caused the installation date of the equipment to be moved from May to November in 1978.

Helms Advocates Prayers In Schools, Balanced Budget

By STUART MORGAN
Reflector Staff Writer
Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., was the guest speaker Friday evening at a dinner sponsored by the North Carolina Congressional Club in the Greenville American Legion Hall.

Other guests attending the dinner honoring Helms were Dr. Leo Jenkins, Dr. I. Beverly Lake, and ECU Chancellor Thomas B. Brewer.

Among issues discussed by the senator were a return of voluntary prayer to public schools, a balanced federal budget, foreign policy, and Salt II.

Recently, Helms proposed an amendment to overturn the Supreme Court's ban on voluntary prayer. Also, the senator has repeatedly introduced legislation to require Congress to balance the federal budget in order to stop inflation.

"Americans should unite to put prayer back in schools," said Senator Helms. "I intend to press the issue until this bill passes. We have got to get back to the fundamentals of this country."

"We must practice the faith of our fathers," added Senator Helms. "Our founding fathers were not ashamed or embarrassed to pray to God," Helms added, saying that what America needs is a "spiritual rebirth."

"We must balance the federal budget," said Senator Helms. Blaming "fat cat bureaucrats" for the state of the present federal budget, Helms said he still backs the bill for a balanced federal budget he pushed for in 1973.

He added that today's problem with inflation was created by too many persons failing to practice the fundamental principles of the U.S. Constitution.

"The people being zapped by inflation are the average hard-working Americans who are struggling to make ends meet," said Senator Helms, pointing out that since last year, the average price of an automobile has increased by $600 and the average price of a home by $3,000.

"The federal government is not going to solve the problem, because they are the problem," added Senator Helms.

Concerning foreign policy, Helms said the U.S. should stop "kicking our friends in the teeth and getting-up with communist countries." He pointed out Taiwan as an example, and added that a country does not make friends by using "dollar diplomacy."

In addition, Helms said "hundreds and thousands of tax dollars" are being spent today persuading Americans that Salt II is the solution to the nuclear arms race. The senator also added that Americans were duped by Salt I.

"With our declining defense position, we couldn't afford to be duped by communism," said Helms. "The United States should consider a 'salt free' diet."

For today's energy problem, the senator blamed federal government controls, explaining that the "big oil companies can cope with red tape and controls, but that the small fuel producers are hurting," Helms added that "the federal government should let the free enterprise system work."

Later, Helms announced that the UNC Board of Trustees voted Friday to go to court over the current conflict with HEW.

The senator also said he plans a filibuster if a tax on tobacco submitted by Sen. John Danforth, R-Miss., reaches Congress. Helms asked the audience, "Why wasn't there one for alcohol?"

Concerning HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano, Helms said "he's a revolving bad news Joe." Senator Helms added, "I still think we should have kept the Panama Canal and sent them Califano."

Larkins To Retire

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Chief U.S. Eastern District Judge John D. Larkins Jr. has informed President Carter he will retire June 8, just short of 18 years after his appointment by President John F. Kennedy.

Larkins' letter to the president is no surprise since June 8 is Larkins' 70th birthday, and he has said previously that he would step down on that date. In his letter, Larkins asked that he be allowed to continue as a senior district judge, a semi-retirement status which would allow him hear cases part-time.

District Judge Franklin T. Dupree Jr. will succeed Larkins as chief judge, and the president will appoint someone to fill the vacancy. By tradition that will be someone recommended by U.S. Sen. Bob Morgan, D-N.C.

The staff of the Eastern District is planning a ceremony to be held in the federal courtroom in New Bern June 8. A portrait honoring Larkins for his service will be unveiled.

Among persons that have been mentioned to replace Larkins are U.S. Attorney George M. Anderson of Raleigh, former Superior Court Judge Winifred T. Wells of Wallace, Superior Court Judge Robert Rouse of Farmville, Superior Court Judge Maurice Braswell of Fayetteville, former Superior Court Judge Marvin Blount of Greenville, Raleigh lawyer Robert Spearman, Cumberland County lawyer Earl Britt and Mount Olive lawyer George Kornegay.

First District Republicans Held Convention Saturday

By STUART MORGAN
Reflector Staff Writer
The Biennial Republican Convention of the First Congressional District, representing 21 counties, was held 2 p.m. Satur-

SAFE AND UNHARMED — Iowa Governor Robert Ray is shown at his desk about two hours after a man was arrested on the steps of the Iowa Statehouse. day in the Pitt County Court-house. During yesterday's convention, Mack Howard of Greenville was reelected as chairman of the First Congressional District, narrowly defeating Mrs. Patric Dorsey of New Bern 72 to 63.

Afterwards, Dorsey was elected as district vice-chairman by a two-third's acclamation of the delegates present, and Miss Nancy Barwick of Kinston was elected as the district's secretary-treasurer, also by a two-third's acclamation.

In addition, six persons were elected by acclamation to serve as members of the Republican State Executive Committee. The newly elected committee members are: Carl Tilghman of Beaufort, John R. Poole of Kinston, Herb Lee of Greenville, Dewey Wells of Elizabeth City, Steve Rader of Washington, and J.W. Lynn of the outer banks area.

In response to a recent move to close Coast Guard stations at night at Cape Lookout and Hobucken, delegates of yesterday's convention passed a resolution opposing such a move.

According to Howard, Republicans are against federal spending, however, the first district delegates passed the resolution realizing that the federal forces at those two Coast Guard stations help save lives.

Following a proposal for a resolution by Howard to consider Sen. Jesse Helms as a favorite son candidate for the 1980 presidential election, a discussion developed among the delegates.

However, despite opposition led by Dr. John East, ECU political science professor, the proposal was withdrawn due to concern by many of the delegates that such an action at this time would defeat the purpose of the N.C. primary election process.

Nevertheless, it was the sentiment of the delegates that Helms should consider being a favorite-son candidate at a later date.

"Some persons thought this would obstruct the primary," said East, explaining that those delegates opposing the proposal did so believing that the senator's presence as a favorite-son candidate at this time would prevent a fair and legitimate primary election.

"I thought it was a way to compliment Jesse Helms—it would have just been encouragement," added East.

In defending the resolution before its defeat, East said, "Helms as a favorite-son candidate in the 1980 presidential race could enhance what clout the N.C. delegation will have at the Republican National Convention to be held in Detroit, Michigan."

Howard later announced that the State Republican Convention will be held May 18-19 at the State Civic Center in Raleigh and explained that its purpose will be to elect state officers for the Republican Party.

Following the announcement, East encouraged the delegates to attend the convention to help raise funds.

HEW Appears To Back Away

Once again North Carolina has found that it simply can't reach agreement with the Carter administration on a plan for higher education improvements.

Gov. Hunt was prepared to ask the taxpayers to give up $40 million in tax rebates with the funds to be used for improvements on the predominately black campuses of the state.

Late last week there were published reports that Department of Health, Education and Welfare Sec. Joseph Califano was agreeable to accepting the plan. Regrettably when the UNC Board of Governors met Friday morning, President William Friday had to report that, while it appeared at one time agreement was near, HEW had changed its position and no agreement was in sight.

There was, of course, nothing new in this. Previously the UNC System had felt it was near agreement with HEW, only to have the big and powerful agency back off and make new demands.

The controversy has long since moved away from the original concept racial integration of North Carolina campuses. Unless some miraculous new sense of values develops within the Carter administration the question can only now move to the courts.

The issue, however also has to increasingly worry all the other states. HEW's handling of this matter has to concern every citizen of every state, for what HEW can do to harm higher education in North Carolina it will be able to do in any other state it chooses.

"Now, just 'cause you've been decontrolled, doesn't mean I'm gonna let y'all run away, y'hear? Y'hear...?"

Practical Side To Population Count

A city-wide population survey is underway — and it has nothing to do with pride in increasing the numbers of citizens who live within the city limits.

The population count can mean additional dollars to the city in obtaining additional funds through state distribution of tax revenues.

Powell Bill funds for street improvements, for instance, include as a part of the distribution formula a per capita amount.

Cooperation in the population survey can more dollars in state distribution and correspondingly less in local taxes.

Big N.C. TV-Film Agency

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — More than $4 million is being spent each year by state government to grind out motion picture and television productions. And that has nothing to do with the state-owned Univ. of North Carolina Television Network.

Mostly, the productions are training films, featuring various and sundry political leaders talking "face-to-face" with their employees about the importance of governmental service, and bureaucrats attempting to explain what it is that they are doing in their jobs.

Gov. Jim Hunt is pushing a proposal to bring all state production facilities under one roof; creating a giant Agency for Public Telecommunications (APT) which, he says, will provide "state and local agencies with information about the location of facilities and the most cost-effective means of production ... and operate a media production center."

Why is a central agency and production center needed?

"Just last year, state government spent more than $4 million on productions facilities and personnel Yet there is still no coordinated, high-quality production facility."

A Great Need

"We have a great need for training films, public health programs and educational programs, travel promotion films and historical documentation," Hunt says.

As it is, each agency has its own equipment and "great ideas about what new and expensive additional equipment it needs," the governor added.

An obvious danger inherent in a super-TV studio for politicians and high-level bureaucrats is that it would be used to crank out propaganda and self-promotional material.

Could a would-be candidate practice his "media presence" and also turn out for distribution to willing local television stations promotional material subtly designed to enhance his position in the race? Would a state agency use similar techniques to "sell" the public on questionable programs?

There's no doubt in Hunt's mind, nor in the mind of Herbert Hyde, now secretary of Crime Control and Public Safety who chaired the study commission which has proposed the agency, that such could happen — and worse.

But there are already laws against this, and the public and press will be on guard against abuse, the two officials believe.

Student Decline

Much has been said of late about the student enrollment decline in the public schools. A look at the actual figures can prove enlightening.

The decline actually began in 1969 with a slight drop.

Enrollment peaked the previous year at 1,177,476. Figures show "average daily membership", the measure regularly used officially.

Then in 1973, the public school kindergarten program began on a limited basis and enrollment jumped 1.31 percent to reverse four years of decline to a low point of 1,138,429.

Enrollment continued to increase for four years, reaching a new peak of 1,183,191 in school year 1976-77; with all five-year-olds in kindergarten. Then the decline started anew, and enrollment this year is 1,158,493.

Projections show a steady decline ahead as families grow smaller despite overall statewide population increases. By 1980-81 the total should be 1,121,285, including kindergartners.

The reduction has meant the loss of 236 teacher jobs this year, and another 896 in 1979-80.

Sunday Morning Notes

Computerism is changing our society.

Recently a local business received a quarterly report on its Social Security account.

It read: "Statement of adjustment to your account."

"Balance due on account before adjustment, $0.00"

"Adjustment computation 'Interest charged, .02.'"

Apparently the computer, or somebody had second thoughts, though. The final entry was: Balance Due, None."

You'll be all right," a friend told the businessman, "until you get a notice of a $100 penalty for non-payment of the two cents."

Someone we know called a friend to invite her to a cook out recently.

The phone was answered and there was some small talk followed by the invitation.

"Sorry," the person called said, "I've got something else to do."

That ended the conversation, and the caller hung up, a little puzzled at the reply.

Later he saw his friend, mentioned he had called her the night before and expressed regret.

The girl looked surprised. "You didn't call me," she said, "not unless I answered in my sleep."

The caller went back and checked. He had written down and called a wrong number.

Anyway it turned out the right person came to the cookout.

Young children are more aware about what goes on in newspaper offices than one might think.

For instance, an elementary group from W. H. Robinson School toured "The Daily Reflector" offices recently.

They had lots of questions like:

"Where's Clark Kent?" "Where is Mr. White's office (editor of the fictional 'Daily Planet')?"

"Where is Lois Lane?"

Well, we would produce Superman for visiting school groups, but the phone booths they are making these days are just not fit for changing costumes.

Adding To The Harm

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six months after they went into effect, President Carter's anti-inflation guidelines are beginning to suffer from the same kind of credibility problem that scuttled Gerald Ford's WIN program in 1974.

Ford's Whip Inflation Now campaign became a national joke as people soon realized that WIN buttons and letters from school children were not enough to keep prices from rising. The program was quickly forgotten as the nation sank into a deep recession.

Carter's wage and price guidelines, which were announced with considerable fanfare last October, also have

SALT-Sellers' Backfire

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — The

nearly completed SALT II treaty has stimulated so much political spending by the Carter administration to assure its Senate ratification that a congressional backlash has been triggered with dangerous implications for both the president and his treaty.

At issue is not President Carter's unquestioned right to seek public approval of the new strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT). The issue is whether in his zeal to make SALT palatable, he will oversell the product, overspend federal tax dollars to finance his super-sell and fuel the backlash already started.

The super-selling galvanized Barry Goldwater, a senator not easily provoked to wrath these days, last December after he had received manifold complaints about administration tactics. He asked the General Accounting Office (GAO), a watchdog of Congress, for details. On March 16 Goldwater got an earful.

Since last June 29, when the administration kicked off its national campaign, lobbying for SALT cost over $100,000 a month (through December), the GAO told Goldwater in a private March 16 letter. For travel alone by officials of the State Department, the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA) and the Defense Department, the six-month bill was $76,230.

At the administration's first pro-SALT "conference," held June 29 at Racine, Wis., 17 administration officials (12 from the State Department) were on hand. Giving briefings, handing out pamphlets and videotaping questions and answers, they began building the pro-SALT portfolio. The ratio was one federal official for each 17 participants.

What upset not only Goldwater but many other politicians of both parties who have doubts about SALT II was the administration's effort to "pack" the Racine meeting. Although the leading citizens present could not be identified with Jimmy Carter, known foes of SALT were not invited.

The growing anger of senators not in the pro-SALT bloc raises a future threat to tax-financed lobbying that involves transporting high officials back and forth across the country, high-cost communications gear and empty desks left here in Washington. An invitation for just such a hint of congressional action to limit a president's open-ended use of tax-money came in a 1977 U.S. District Court decision.

Throwing out a case brought against Carter for using public funds to lobby Illinois legislators for passage of the equal rights amendment, the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Illinois held that "it may offend a sense of fairness especially of persons (who) differ" with the president to let the White House run a massive lobbying campaign. Nevertheless, "this is a matter properly in the hands of Congress," not the judicial branch.

The pro-SALT campaign is centered in the White House under Gerald R. Fushoon, Carter's image-maker, and Hamilton Jordan, his top

THE AVERAGE LAYMAN

The Epistle of John is addressed to a certain Gaius. He does not appear to have held a place of outstanding importance in the early Christian church, yet we have a very vivid profile of him.

Gaius was an average, Christian layman. The writer of the epistle speaks of him as being sound in the faith, sincere and intent on putting his faith into practice.

There cannot be much doubt why this man's character is set forth in the New Testament. Gaius was the common, garden variety of man upon whose consecrated efforts the church had to rely in getting started. And that consecrated layman is still the body and soul of the modern Christian church. He is usually not an intellectual, nor is he a person of high station in life. He is neither rich nor poor. But he knows what he believes, he practices what he professes, he treats his fellow man with abundant kindness. Gaius, the average layman — 1,000 years ago, and now.

The Institutional Reserves

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Ask a stockbroker these days why he or she is bullish on the market outlook, and chances are you will get something about "institutional cash reserves" for an answer.

The institutions in question are the nation's pension funds, bank trust departments, insurance companies, mutual funds and other such places where large pools of money tend to collect.

In recent years, New York Stock Exchange figures show that institutions have accounted for more than half the total dollar value of stocks bought and sold on the Big Board.

Because of their very size, and because of legal constraints requiring them to be "prudent," most institutions operate under a different set of circumstances than those that typically confront the individual investor of modest means.

But it is considered a good idea for any follower of the stock market to keep an eye on these elephants of the investment jungle, if only to be standing in a safe place should they start a stampede.

One common measure of the mood of institutional money managers is the percentage of their assets they are keeping in "cash" — which in the jargon of the business refers not to nickels, dimes and quarters stored in a vault somewhere, but to short-term money-market securities such as Treasury bills.

Traditionally, the institutions have used these money-market securities as a sort of parking place for money, where it can earn interest while they decide when and where to invest it for the longer term.

In theory, the more cash they have in reserve at any given time, the greater the potential future demand for stocks. And right now those reserves are very large.

Thus the Value Line Investment Survey, the country's largest investment advisory service, argues, "The combination of the widely agreed-upon cheapness of stocks, coupled with the enormous cash reserves known to be awaiting the 'right moment' to begin to return to the equities market, puts pressure on the holders of cash reserves not to miss the boat."

Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith analysts noted that mutual funds had 13.3 percent of their assets in cash as of February. That stood as the largest percentage since a 13.5 percent figure in September 1974, just before the end of a severe bear market.

"Further buying interest could come from the nation's pension funds, which have been accumulating new money at a $20 billion annual rate," the brokerage firm said.

"In 1978 these funds placed only 9 percent of their new money into equities (vs. 20 percent to 50 percent in recent years), further reducing the portion of their assets in stocks to 52 percent from the 1972 high of 73 percent."

Little Shift On Abortion

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — Despite the bitter clashes in recent years between pro- and anti-abortion forces, the U.S. public's basic attitudes remain virtually unchanged.

In the latest Gallup survey, 54 percent believe that abortion should be "legal only under certain circumstances," while about one-fifth (22 percent) feel that abortion should be "legal under all circumstances" and a like proportion (19 percent) say it should be "illegal under all circumstances."

As the following table shows, current attitudes closely parallel those recorded in 1977 and 1975.

"Do you think abortions should be legal under any circumstances, legal under only certain circumstances, or illegal in all circumstances?"

Trend On Views On Abortion
	1975	1977	1979
Legal under all circumstances	21%	22%	22%
Legal only under certain circumstances	54	55	54
Illegal under all circumstances	22	19	19
No opinion	3	4	5

Circumstances, Time Frame

To further determine the attitudes of those who would allow abortions under certain circumstances, this group was handed a card listing six of the most commonly cited situations in which abortions take place and asked under which they would allow an abortion in each of the three trimesters of pregnancy.

The results indicate that both the particular circumstances and the stage of pregnancy contribute importantly to attitudes on this issue.

For example, a majority of this group would allow an abortion during the first three months if the woman's life is endangered (78 percent), if the woman's mental health is endangered (59 percent), or if the pregnancy is a result of rape or incest (53 percent).

Fewer say they would permit the operation during the first three months when there is a chance the baby will be born deformed (44 percent) or when the woman might suffer severe physical health damage (42 percent).

The fact that the prospective parents cannot afford to have the child is found to be the least defensible grounds on which to have an abortion (15 percent).

The percentage citing each of these circumstances as justifying an abortion declines, however, as the stages of pregnancy advance so that in the second and third trimesters a majority would make abortions legal only to save the life of the mother.

Here is the question asked of those who said they would make abortions legal under certain circumstances:

"Now, thinking about the first three months of pregnancy (the second three months, the third three months), under which of these circumstances (respondents were handed a card with six circumstances listed) do you think abortions should be legal?"

Here are the results by all three trimesters:

Grounds For Abortion (Based on those who would allow abortions under certain circumstances)
	First trimester	Second trimester	Third trimester
1. When the woman's life is endangered.	78%	66%	59%
2. When the woman's mental health is endangered.	59	32	19
3. Where the pregnancy is a result of rape or incest.	53	46	33
4. When there is a chance the baby will be born deformed.	44	37	28
5. When the woman may suffer severe physical health damage.	42	31	22
6. If the family cannot afford to have the child.	15	6	4

Catholic/Protestant Views

Although the Roman Catholic Church officially opposes abortion under all circumstances, many Roman Catholics oppose the church line on this issue. In fact, Catholic views are generally in line with those of Protestants.

Here's how the views of Catholics and Protestants compare:

	Protestants	Catholics
Legal under all circumstances	20%	17%
Legal under certain circumstances	59	52
Illegal under all circumstances	17	25
No opinion	4	6

The results reported today are based on 1,534 personal interviews with adults, 18 and older, in more than 300 scientifically selected localities during the period Feb. 23-26.

White House aide. But the men running around the country selling SALT are in the State Department and at ACDA. Those two agencies, according to the GAO report, spent $595,351 in the last few months of 1978.

SALT II spending in 1979 will dwarf that figure. Indeed, tax-paid lobbying for SALT will outdistance any other lobbying campaign for any congressional enactment in history. Whereas the heavy national lobbying for the Marshall Plan a generation ago was mostly privately financed, most SALT-selling has been coming out of tax funds.

So mobilized is the State Department in pushing SALT that diplomats abroad report back on anti-SALT statements by foreign politicians. In a confidential telegram to Secretary of State Cyrus Vance several weeks ago, U.S. Ambassador Kingman Brewster quoted at length from a debate in the House of Commons during which Conservative leader Margaret Thatcher asked hostile questions about SALT. Brewster then commented on the danger of this to the treaty: "Mrs. Thatcher's question reflects growing awareness in the Conservative party of SALT as a political issue and is evidence of the impact which the U.S. debate is beginning to have in Britain." When that telegram was shown to one pro-SALT U.S. politician, he asked sarcastically: "Is SALT going to persuade Carter to weigh in against Thatcher and the Conservatives in the (May 3)

British election?"

A second classified message from Brewster's embassy outlined a major U.S. SALT-selling project in Britain: "Encourage U.K. (United Kingdom) opinion leaders who support SALT to make their views known effectively. Seek to reassure those who entertain SALT reservations... (and) dampen echoes of the simplistic and rhetorical elements raised in the U.S. debate."

That reference to the Senate's anti-SALT bloc will not win converts to Carter's side. Nor will free spending of tax dollars convert senators who are at least as dedicated and sincere in their opposition to SALT as Jimmy Carter is in his support.

As I Recall It

Best-Kept Secret: Appointing Frank Graham

By NOEL YANCEY

(Noel Yancey retired recently after 39 years of covering North Carolina news for the Associated Press. In this column, he retells some of the big stories he recalls.)

When Gov. W. Kerr Scott appointed Frank Graham, the dedicated, liberal president of the University of North Carolina to a seat in the U.S. Senate, it caught everyone by surprise. The Raleigh News and Observer described it as "perhaps the greatest political surprise in the history of the state."

Scott had let the suspense build up for nearly three weeks following the death of Sen. J. Melville Broughton on March 6, 1949 before he filled the vacancy by appointing the 62-year-old idealistic educator to the post.

Scott had quieted some of the speculation when he stated he would have no part of a scheme under which he would resign as governor with the understanding the Lt. Gov. H.P. Taylor would appoint Scott to the Senate.

"The people of North Carolina have given me a definite assignment," the Haw River dairy farmer-governor said. "I would not take advantage of a state and national tragedy to further any personal advantage."

Next Goldsboro attorney Kenneth Royall, who was then serving in Washington as Army secretary ended speculation that he might get the post. Royall said he did not want the Senate seat and would not accept.

Still, there were plenty of patriots who were both ready, willing and eager to serve. Scott said the campaign in their behalf became so intense and the telephone calls so numerous that he took the phone off the hook at his Haw River home.

The governor received more than 4,000 telegrams and hundreds of letters and phone calls as he pondered his decision and the newspapers engaged in speculation.

Those prominently mentioned included L.P. McLendon, a highly successful Greensboro attorney and a Scott advisor; former congressman and senator William B. Umstead of Durham, who was later to become governor; State Democratic Chairman Capus Waynick, a former High Point editor who was also a close Scott advisor. In fact, a host of others were mentioned in the speculation without mentioning Graham.

These included K. Mayne Albright, Raleigh attorney and unsuccessful candidate for governor; Saxaphaw industrialist B. Everett Jordan who was later to win appointment to the Senate from Gov. Luther Hodges; U.S. Comptroller Lindsay Warren; former Lt. Gov. Wilkins P. Horton of Pittsboro; Willis Smith of Raleigh, former president of the American Bar Association; State Rep. Fred Royster of Henderson, a tobacco warehouseman; former State Sen. Wade Barber of Chatham County; Congressman Harold D. Cooley; Robert Lee Humber of Greenville, leader of the World Federalists; Dr. Clarence Poe, editor of the Progressive Farmer; and Agriculture Commissioner L.Y. Ballentine.

After the Burlington Times-News, which had some claim to inside knowledge because it was published in Scott's home county, predicted that the appointment would go to McLendon, the Greensboro lawyer said he would be glad to accept. But it was not to be. Scott had other ideas; but he seemed to enjoy the pressure and there was speculation he would let it continue until the General Assembly moved his legislative program along toward passage.

Finally, Scott selected the O. Max Gardner Award dinner at Chapel Hill to make his announcement and end the suspense. He rose before an audience of 700 persons, most of whom were associates and friends of Graham, to make his announcement that "the next senator from North Carolina will be Dr. Frank Graham."

The governor's words were greeted by thunderous applause and brought from Graham the comment that it was "the most difficult decision of my life to leave the institution and the people who have been part of my life for more than 40 years."

Probably none of those present dreamt that Graham would lose his Senate seat a few months later to Smith in one of the bitterest and most divisive campaigns in state history.

But that's another story.

OF COURSE THERE'S ALWAYS OLD RELIABLE!

The Parental Role And Judicial Role Similar

Being a parent is a lot like being a judge. A parent must deal with suits and counter-suits between children, she must pass sentence on youthful offenders, and above all, she must distinguish between the spirit and the letter of the law.

This is the downfall of most parents. They just naturally assume that when they make a rule, the kids understand what they mean. But there is no more literal-minded creature on this earth than a child. If the rules aren't spelled out to the last letter, it's not the spirit of the law that guides the interpretation; it's what suits the kid's convenience. And the result is rarely what the parent had in mind.

For instance, when an adult says, "Put your toys away," she means in the toy box and on the shelves. For a child, this means pushing everything under the bed.

"Wash your hands" means full water pressure and soap to an adult. To a child, it means sticking each hand under a leaky faucet, running them along the walls until he reaches the kitchen, and then drying them on the tablecloth.

When an adult says, "Hang up your coat," she means, "Put the coat on a hanger in the closet." A kid fits the hood over the nearest doorknob.

A child interprets, "Don't throw the trash out of the car window," as "Stuff it down the crack in the back seat." "Don't stick your fingers in your nose" means "Use your thumb instead."

An adult might say, "If I read you one more story before you go to bed, you've got to promise me not to fuss." The fact that the child solemnly nods his head up and down simply indicates that he has no intention of fussing until the story is over. Then there's the universally misunderstood question, "Do you need to go to the bathroom?" To Mom, the answer "no" means that the kid can make it through two hours of shopping without an emergency. But what the child actually means is, "No, I can still walk without crossing my legs."

What really will throw a parent for a loop, though, is to find that this kind of literalness is not confined to children. Grandparents suffer from it, too. I discovered this when Meg's grandmother baked a big chocolate cake for one of our visits. Meg's hand gravitated toward it the minute she walked in the door.

"Now, Meg, don't you lay a finger on that cake," Phillip said.

Meg promptly put her hands behind her. And just as promptly she leaned over and took a hefty bite out of the middle of the cake.

Phillip started toward her, but his mother grabbed his arm. "Leave her alone," she said. "You only told her not to put her fingers on it."

Facing South

Island's Guardian Of Natural Environment

CUMBERLAND ISLAND, Ga. — Of all the environmental protection causes dear to the collective hearts of the nation's loose but ardent coalition of conservationists, probably none ranks higher on the leave-it-alone list than a Georgia coastal island 18 miles long by one to two miles wide.

And no stout-hearted defender of the environment could be more compelling than the chateau of Cumberland, Lucy Carnegie Ferguson, known about her insular turf as "Miss Lucy."

Cumberland Island, largest and most southerly of the string of islands along Georgia's coast, has been home to Miss Lucy all her 80 years.

The first time I saw Miss Lucy was in 1972, about the time the National Park Service acquired a major portion of Cumberland's 22,000 acres. She was standing at her gate, a nondescript black dog at her feet, dressed in a red bandanna-print shirt and denim skirt, sneakers dusted with island sand, soft gray hair braided and secured in a bun. A widow, Miss Lucy is slender and deceptively fragile of appearance.

Fragile she is not, as islanders and Park Service people alike will tell you.

I had journeyed to Cumberland with friends who wanted to buy quail from Miss Lucy for their motel restaurant on Jekyll Island, about an hour away by boat along the intercoastal waterway. We found her living simply in an old two-story frame house that serves as her private retreat from Greyfield, her childhood home now known as Greyfield Inn, the island's only public lodgings. She was raising quail and other fowl to feed Greyfield guests and sell to mainland restaurants. Corn was growing in her front yard.

Miss Lucy spoke with mixed emotions about the future of her island home. The serenity of the island had been threatened in the 1960s when a resort developer planned a posh resort for Cumberland. Instead, Cumberland came into the hands of the Park Service. It was still pristinely beautiful as a result of the long, watchful guardianship of the Carnegies and the other 25 or so island residents who had kept the island blessedly free from the beer cans and gum wrappers, burger joints and golf courses of civilization.

Now, with the other islanders, Miss Lucy both lauds and frets over the Park Service's plans for the future. The praise-worthy goal they have established here embodies something of a paradox: (1) Cumberland Island should be preserved in all its sun-blessed splendor, and (2) Cumberland Island should be experienced and enjoyed by the public. The Park Service finds itself often at odds with island residents, most notably Miss Lucy. Outspoken and fiercely in-

Jerry And Linda Break Boredom Of Disasters

BY JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — The country owes a debt to Jerry Brown. In the midst of natural disasters, manmade calamities and the unmitigated horrors of Idi Amin, the governor's African holiday with rock star Linda Ronstadt provides a great moment for aging copy editors and a nice break for everyone else.

The rim man hasn't been born who doesn't yearn, all his life, for just one opportunity to use the word "paramour" in 48-point bold. "Brown and Paramour Traveled by Press." The sheer exhilaration of such a headline makes up for years of writing heads on the budget resolution. On behalf of the copy desks of the nation, Governor, thank you.

As for the rest of us, we drown in serious stuff. The governor and his dear friend have rescued us, temporarily, from the energy crisis, the machinations of OPEC and the stupefying statistics of arms limitation. When La Ronstadt posed with the python, a million popeyed spectators slapped their knees and snickered.

To be sure, to the extent that presidential politics is serious business, the African tryst (another rim man's word) has its serious aspect. Will the safari spoil Jerry Brown? Has the governor of California forfeited his chance for the White House in order to gambol in the veldt with the woman he loves? Stay tuned. Meanwhile, await the Gallup Poll.

It would be interesting to see what Dr. Gallup might come up with. My guess, for what it may be worth, is that the governor has indeed done himself in. He already had acquired a national reputation for general flakiness, recently enhanced by his spinning-jenny convolutions on limited spending. If my surmise is correct, a large majority of the people will regard this African adventure as a palpable insult to conventional moral values. More voters will be shocked than amused.

But I could be quite wrong. The analogy that comes immediately to mind stems from the presidential campaign of 1884. The Democratic nominee was Grover Cleveland, 47, former governor of New York. On July 21, the Buffalo Evening Telegram spread across page one a copy editor's finest hour. "A Terrible Tale," the headline read. "A Dark Chapter in a Public Man's History. The Pitiful Story of Maria Halpin and Governor Cleveland's Son."

To his credit, Cleveland at once affirmed the account. He had indeed entered into an illicit relationship with the Widow Halpin and the boy was his own. In "The Glorious Burden," historian Stefan Lorant voices a flat judgment: "Had the story been known before the convention, Cleveland could not have been nominated. And had it been made public some time later — nearer to voting day — he would have lost the election."

Charles A. Dana in the New York Sun thought the scandal would prove fatal to Cleveland's chances: "We do not believe that the American people will knowingly elect to the presidency a coarse debauchee who would bring his harlots with him to Washington and hire lodgings for them convenient to the White House."

As it turned out, of course, the voters had to weigh the private sins of Cleveland against the public corruption of Republican James G. Blaine. Just before election day, Blaine blundered by depicting Cleveland as the candidate of "rum, Romanism and rebellion." Cleveland carried New York State by a thousand votes; it was enough to put him in the White House.

Nearly a century has passed since that campaign. We have been enlightened, in a manner of speaking, by the scholarly researches of Kinsey, Masters, Johnson and Hefner. The Census Bureau, deadpan, reported 1.1 million out-of-wedlock couples in 1970, twice the number of 1960. Popular magazines matter-of-factly cover the illegitimate offspring of the famous. We know that divorce is no longer a critical factor in presidential politics; Adlai Stevenson, Nelson Rockefeller, Ronald Reagan and Betty Ford have shown that. At the lower level of the House and Senate, the voters regularly re-elect luses, drunks and rogues.

The presidency, I think, is different. However tolerant the people may be of sexual fun and games in other areas, they probably will draw a line at the White House. The most urbane sophisticate, I submit, wants a First Lady in the White House and not a Dear Friend.

BIG PUPPY. — Ray Hardison gets a real workout when he takes Sam for a walk. Sam, owned by Kenneth Thornton, is a seven months old Samoyed dog, a breed whose origin is northern Russia. Thornton says the half-grown dog is one of the purest of all breeds and is used as the lead dog in sled-dog teams. The big puppy will gain about 30 more pounds before reaching full maturity. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

AF Academy Anniversary

By DAVID CRARY
Associated Press Writer
AIR FORCE ACADEMY,
Colo. (AP) — In the mid 1950s, when a fledgling United States Air Force Academy was trying its wings, some officials in Washington predicted the advent of the guided missile would make the school obsolete.

Twenty-five years and many missiles later, the academy is flourishing. And today, its 4,100 cadets parade in dress uniform during an official commemoration of the school's first quarter-century.

Events and problems impossible to foresee have influenced the academy over those years — Vietnam, women cadets, cheating scandals. The lapse of time has overtaken even "Tail-End Charlie" — seniors no longer are told which of their classmates has the lowest grades.

Nonetheless, academy officials say their primary goal — producing a quality pool of potential career Air Force officers — remains unchanged and has been met.

"A lot of initial planning went into the academy," Brig. Gen. Thomas Richards, the commandant of cadets, said in an interview this week. "We had good role models in West Point and Annapolis, and we learned from them. In all, I think it's been a very, very smooth expansion."

The academy was authorized by Congress in April 1954, and the first 300 cadets enrolled the next summer at temporary facilities at Lowry Air Force Base near Denver.

Lt. Gen. K.L. Tallman, now the academy's superintendent, was a training officer at the Lowry-based academy in 1956 when cadets slept in wooden World War II barracks and Air Force junior officers lived in the dorms to fill the role of hard-nosed upper classmen.

"Even then I thought it was going to grow to the stature of the other service academies," Tallman said. "There was a great deal of support from everybody associated with the Air Force and very little dissension. The major commands around the country spoiled us and treated visiting cadets like generals."

In August 1958, the academy moved to its permanent campus to a slope of the Rocky Mountain foothills 60 miles south of Denver near Colorado Springs. Its football team played in the Cotton Bowl that year, an early pinnacle for a program that has seen hard times in the last five seasons. Later came the only full-scale war in the academy's history, the fighting in Southeast Asia which took the lives of about 130 graduates.

"The influence of Vietnam certainly wasn't positive," said Richards, who was on the academy staff in from 1969 until 1972 on a previous assignment. "The whole anti-war movement caused the cadets to question what they and their government were doing."

Perhaps the most momentous change, in the eyes of many students came on June 29, 1976, when the first women cadets enrolled. There now are more than 200 women in the 4,100-student cadet wing and much of the resentment which accompanied the arrival has dissipated.

The academy has not been immune to controversies. In 1973, academy officials had to rebut charges that a dozen or more cadets were injured while undergoing "torture" at a mock prisoner-of-war camp.

Cheating scandals have been exposed, including one in 1965 when 109 cadets were dismissed. Reports of drug abuse have surfaced regularly since the late 1960s.

And a sampling of cadet views indicated there still are reservations about the lack of time "to be by oneself," and the difficulties of maintaining a satisfying social life.

The academy's attrition rate, averaging nearly 40 percent for each entering class, has long been a subject of concern. The class of 1975 lost a record 46 percent of its members during its four-year stint.

However, Richards and Tallman cited several recent changes aimed at improving cadet motivation, such as offering greater leeway to cadets in scheduling their activities and giving more responsibility to upperclassmen.

"It would have a positive fall-out if the attrition rate were lowered," Richards said. "We would like to keep as many people as possible who meet our standards, but not the ones who don't."

In pursuit of their goals, academy administrator said they seek a proper blend of academic and military training.

"To have a mix which is satisfactory is not too difficult," said Brig. Gen. William Orth, dean of the faculty. "But to tune that mix for the best possible development of our cadets is a continuing challenge. By the time you can measure their performance as officers, you are many years downstream."

Although tributes are abundant as the academy celebrates its 25th anniversary, the academy encountered some flak from outside sources in its early days. A Yale University professor, Charles Fenton, in 1955 described the academy as an "excellent high school." And, when first unveiled, the architectural design for the academy chapel was denounced as too futuristic.

The academy's curriculum now offers 23 majors and has produced 20 Rhodes scholars. And the chapel, with its 17 metal spires jutting skyward against Pikes Peak, is the academy's principal tourist attraction.

Living With Deadly Snakes A Harrowing Venture

By CYNTHIA STEVENS
Associated Press Writer
HARTEBESPOORT, South

Africa (AP) — Peter Snyman says his bid to set a record for living in a den of deadly snakes has left him a nervous wreck.

As of today, he still has 22 days to go to break the 36-day mark.

"I've already had a violent nervous reaction," Snyman said, speaking slowly and swinging his eyes back and forth across the gravel floor in search of his 24 poisonous companions.

He says part of his challenge is finding out the extent of his self-control under constant emotional strain, like when the serpents crawl over him or curl up to him to bask in his warmth.

One morning at 4 o'clock he awoke and found a 12-foot black mamba on his stomach in a striking position — neck rigid and mouth open.

The reptile obviously had some of them," said the beard-disturbed by his eyelids opening so he "spread his hood eyes bright through a pair of and watched me for 15 minutes," Snyman said from his cot at the Hartbeespoort Snake Park, about 65 miles northwest of Johannesburg.

"I guess he was giving me the once over by trying to figure out what I was," said Snyman, who for 18 months trained in keeping still to prepare for his ordeal.

"It may sound strange but I feel affectionately towards some of them," said the beard-ed 25-year-old carpenter, his eyes bright through a pair of dark-rimmed glasses despite only two or three hours of uneasy sleep a day.

He said he would try to beat by four days the record set by fellow South African Trevor Kruger in 1975.

Snyman moved carefully to the arm of a nearby chair and in slow motion grabbed a hand-dling stick to remove a deadly puff-adder that had crawled into the center of his bed.

"I didn't realize what I had taken on until recently when the black mambas started giving me trouble," Snyman said.

His arm accidentally knocked one that had secretly slithered behind him and prepared to strike, but apparently reconsidered when the man froze.

He said the mambas are more aggressive than the puff-adders, Egyptian cobras and boomslangs in the 8-by-10 foot room, but all the reptile inmates could kill him if the anti-venom serum failed to work in time.

Mamba venom in a major artery kills in 30 seconds to five minutes, so a panic button was installed above his bed. The button summons a doctor who is on call round-the-clock. But to hit the panic button, Snyman would have to move fast, and that could mean more bites.

He's allowed out of the cage a total of 30 minutes every 24 hours. During the breaks he showers and changes clothes.

dependent, she does not hesitate to make her feelings known.

Miss Lucy's fabled streak of independence may be an inheritance from her grandfather, Thomas Carnegie (brother of Andrew), who in the 1880s built Dungeness, an improbable turreted Scotch castle of 59 rooms, set in splendid solitude on Cumberland. Dungeness burned in 1901, and its successor fell a victim to arson in 1959.

Today its ghostly brick chimneys tower over the ruins of a gymnasium, a great swimming pool, vintage automobiles rusting away in decaying barns. All bespeak a rarefied ambience of upper-class elegance, of butlers and guarded propriety. But, "the house wasn't like that at all," says Miss Lucy. "It was full of children and laughter and fun."

Today the primal bounty belonging to Cumberland's privately-owned past — the 18-mile stretch of white sand, the soaring gulls, the wild horses, the ancient forests of spectral moss-shrouded oaks — is available for all the world to enjoy. There has been considerable dispute, however, between the Park Service and the island's protectors as to what constitutes an excessive number of visitors. They are welcome — but how many sandal-clad feet can Cumberland bear before some ineffable quality of unspoiled wilderness slips away, never to return?

Public hearings have been scheduled to air the Park Service's plan for managing the National Seashore — including a recommendation that over half of the National Seashore area be protected as wilderness. Thus far, visitation has been strictly controlled, but there is talk of a new point of embarkation on the mainland which would shorten the present 45-minute ferry ride, enabling the transportation of a growing number of visitors.

fallen on hard times, in part because inflation has gotten worse.

But Carter never promised all the guidelines would work. The credibility problem has arisen because the administration has said they are working in instances where they clearly are not.

Furthermore, it has failed to follow through — or think through — some of the things it said it would do.

The recent Teamsters settlement is only one example, although a big one. The administration claimed that a 30 percent increase over three years met the 7 percent a year wage guideline.

To make that claim, it bent the guidelines in all sorts of ways to make the Teamsters contract fit. This was in contrast to Carter's statement in October that if violations of the guidelines occurred "the government will respond — using the tools of government authority and public opinion."

There are other examples of administration actions undermining the program's credibility:

—Carter announced a plan for inflation insurance for workers who cooperate with the guidelines, but the plan was not well thought-out and the administration did not push it very hard with Congress. It is now a dead issue.

—Carter said the government would withhold government contracts from businesses that violate the guidelines, even though the administration knew it would be on questionable legal ground. It has not yet withheld a contract, and the plan is being challenged in the courts.

—Alfred Kahn, the president's chief inflation adviser, said the administration would list the names of companies that defied the guidelines. And although he said a month ago such a listing was imminent, no names have been forthcoming.

Arthur Burns, former chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, said nobody is fooled by claims such as the one that the Teamsters settlement was within the guidelines. "It means distrust in government, which is already great, becomes stronger still."

Burns said it would be better for the administration to admit the settlement had exceeded the guidelines and to urge other unions to do better. The guidelines have been respected in many other union settlements.

When he announced the guidelines last October, Carter asked people not to "ridicule them" and give them a chance to work. But it is the administration's own conduct in running the program that could invite ridicule.

CORNER OF GREENVILLE AND ARLINGTON BOULEVARDS

The Woes Of A Man Who Didn't Want More Pay

By ROSALIND ROSSI
CHICAGO (UPI) — Andrew Bavas is saying goodbye to Uncle Sam, red tape, and a $43,000-a-year job — as soon as he can find the right form.

Bavas, 49, made what he said may have been an "unprecedented" move last November by trying to refuse a $1,272 pay raise from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Now the department has tried to transfer him to a lower-paying job — a move he said Saturday may be punishment for his attempt to refuse the raise.

So, he is trying to quit. In reality, he has quit. He just hasn't found the proper form for submitting his resignation. When offered the raise, he said his $43,000 annual salary was enough and that he didn't need more. But HEW officials told him Civil Service law made it impossible for him to refuse the raise. In fact, no one at HEW could ever remember anyone trying to turn one down.

HEW ordered him transferred as of April 30 to a lesser-paying HEW job in Philadelphia — at an $8,000 pay cut. He said he will write a letter of resignation — because he can't find an official form — and put it in the mail Monday.

"The attempt to transfer me to Philadelphia could be punitive," Bavas said. "I was not offered any other job in the Chicago regional office — the largest region, population-wise. It's a little hard for me to believe a job ... was not open."

"I think my inability to turn down the raise is just symptomatic of how the bureaucracy has just institutionalized inflation and also, over the years, has been able to institutionalize itself."

"A lot of people in the country should think for a while. Maybe we've institutionalized greed and maybe we should think about trying to curb inflation by trying to curb our own greed."

Bavas' job title alone is a bureaucratic mind-boggler. He said he worked for the federal government as associate director for intergovernmental relations at Northwestern University's Center for Urban Affairs and was listed by HEW as an assistant regional director for planning and evaluation. Bavas said he intends to seek another job in the local sector, where he can have "some sense of involvement, a hands-on thing with people."

Justice Dept. Says Evidence Ignored In Wilmington 10 Case

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Justice Department said Friday that a U.S. magistrate ignored critical evidence when he recommended against overturning the convictions of the Wilmington 10.

In a response filed in U.S. District Court, the department said U.S. Magistrate Logan D. Howell "ignored critical evidence, used inconsistent methods of analysis and relied in many instances on the very testimony whose credibility was being challenged" in last month's decision.

The case is now before U.S. District Judge Franklin T. Dupree Jr.

The government, in an unusual legal move, entered the case last November as a friend of the court on the side of the defendants.

The nine black men and one white woman were convicted in 1972 of firebombing a Wilmington grocery store during racial unrest.

The Rev. Ben Chavis is the only one of the 10 still jailed. He attends Duke Divinity School on a study-release program and becomes eligible for parole in January.

The Justice Department filed a 25-page response to Howell's recommendation Friday in Dupree's court. Much of the department's response focused on testimony by the state's chief witness, Allen Hall, during the 1972 trial. He testified that each of the defendants took part in the fire-bombing of Mike's Grocery Store on Feb. 6, 1971.

The department said Howell failed to consider questions concerning Hall's reliability as a witness.

Hall recanted his testimony after the trial 1971 trial.

The department also criticized the conduct of prosecutor James Stroud, who it said "did nothing to rectify the testimony of his key witness (Hall) regarding those omissions about which Hall nonetheless testified falsely and which were or should have been known to Stroud."

Gov. Jim Hunt reduced the sentences of the 10 in January 1978, but he said he was convinced they had a fair trial.

URNS DOWN RAISE — Andrew Bavas, a $40,000-a-year employee with the Dept. of Health, Education, and Welfare, has a morning cup of coffee in his Chicago home. In November, when Bavas learned he would receive a $1,272 pay raise, he tried to turn it down. In February he was told he could not refuse the pay hike and that he was being transferred, his grade level was being reduced and his salary would be cut. Bavas says he wants to stay in Chicago and come May 1 he'll be looking for a new job. (AP Laserphoto)

Routine Disposal For Dangerous Chemicals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans routinely dispose of toxic chemicals even more dangerous than radioactive nuclear wastes, which can be disposed of with fewer problems than some believe, an Energy Department study says.

The report released Friday says the best way to dispose of nuclear wastes is simply to bury them in rock or salt formations. "Long-term risk is not a decisive factor," the study said.

However, the report added that the Energy Department intends to "exhibit neutrality regarding nuclear growth" and would therefore have no comment on whether new nuclear plants should be banned until a safe disposal system is decided upon.

The study said some "toxic non-radioactive chemicals now being handled routinely by society" pose more risk than the nuclear wastes. Those chemicals include arsenic, chlorine, barium and ammonia, the report said.

Commercial nuclear plants have been producing radioactive wastes for 25 years and theories of what to do with them range from burying them at sea to launching them into space.

The Energy Department report said the wastes are not much of a risk to the public and suggested they can be gotten rid of safely in a number of ways. But it said burying them in rock or salt formations "has an edge over other options."

Other ways of disposing of the wastes included burial after chemical treatment, burial in deep holes, mixing wastes with cement and dropping them in deep wells, burial under the ocean floor, burial in arctic or antarctic ice or rocketing them into space toward the sun.

The study said that using the current "status of technology" indicates burial in salt or rock formations is the best method, while "space disposal" is the least favorable. But in terms of long-term safety, it said space disposal was considered best.

Presently, the used fuel rods, which are radioactive, normally are stored in cooling ponds at the reactors where they were used.

The report said a "mechanically safe repository can be designed in several types of rocks" as well as salt deposits, but that each has its own potential problems.

For example, the heat generated by nuclear waste will cause stress in rock and "the significance of these stresses is uncertain." On the question of using salt deposits, it noted that "the thermal properties ... are excellent compared to granite and basalt, but its strength and thermal expansion properties are inferior."

It said more study was needed to determine whether salt formations or rock formations would be best.

Beware The Jimson Weed

EVANSTON, Ill. (UPI) — Ingestion of a plant found in Illinois and the Southwest, often called the "loco weed," may lead to delirium, coma and death, a group of researchers say.

A group of physicians from the William Beaumont Army Medical Center in El Paso, Texas, said the plant — the Jimson weed — is becoming a popular drug form among adolescents but injection of the plant may be fatal.

Hallucinogenic drugs are found in all parts of the Jimson weed, the researchers reported in the April issue of the American Academy of Pediatrics monthly magazine, Pediatrics.

The plant commonly is found in southwestern states, North Carolina, Virginia and Illinois. Animals who have ingested the plant have been seen to behave bizarrely, the article said.

The physicians said 29 young patients have been hospitalized following ingestion of the plant. Symptoms included hallucinations, disorientation, combative behavior, increased heart rate, high blood pressure, above normal temperature and urinary retention, requiring catheterization of the patients. Injection of the plant also may lead to liver dysfunction, the physicians said.

The "altered mental state" that results from injection of the weed may last for several days and may require hospitalization, they said.

The plant — d. stramonium — also is known as "devil's weed," "devil's apple," "stink-weed" and "green dragon."

Tattoo Investment

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Harry Tupis wears a tattoo that may make him rich one day, if he outlives 30 other men.

Fresh out of the Navy in 1947, he and a group of seamen were spending some back pay in a California bar when someone suggested they make an investment for the future, Tupis said.

The idea was for everyone to put $100 in a trust fund that would be left in a California bank to grow with interest over the years, he said.

The money would be collected by the member of the group who lived longest. And rather than do anything so mundane as sign a contract, they agreed a tattoo would be used to identify the members of the group.

Forty-five men threw in $100 each and lined up outside a tattoo parlor, Tupis recalled. Of the original group, 31 are alive now, Tupis said.

Only 21 on that night back in 1947 when it all started, Tupis is the youngest member of the group and figures he has a good chance to collect the money, now totaling more than $50,000.

Duke Power Wants Rate Increase

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Duke Power Co. and its wholesale electric customers have filed with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission an agreement for Duke to increase its wholesale rates.

But Duke's 55 wholesale customers — primarily municipal electric systems and rural cooperatives in the Piedmont area of North Carolina and South Carolina — won't be paying more money. In fact, they'll get a refund.

The reason is that Duke has been charging its wholesale customers increased rates since a rate-hike request was filed in June 1978. The original request was for 9.4 percent, which would bring in about $15.3 million annually to Duke.

Tentative OK For Nuclear Station

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Despite protests by the Carolina Environmental Study Group, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission has given Duke Power Co. tentative approval to begin operating Duke's McGuire Nuclear Station next year.

The $1.1 billion plant is located 17 miles northwest of Charlotte on Lake Norman.

In a 114-page decision made public Thursday, the NRC Licensing Board rejected claims by the anti-nuclear group seeking to halt construction of the plant.

The board said objections raised by the study group were not substantial enough to prevent issuing Duke an operating license.

CHECKING HIS SCHEDULE . . . A young onlooker at the annual Grifton Shad Festival parade checks the information booklet to see what's on tap Saturday afternoon

ENJOYING THE OUTDOORS . . . was the theme of this float, sponsored by members of Ayden's Girl Scout Troop No. 483.

Shad Festival, 1979

GRIFTON — "Enjoying the Outdoors," the theme of the ninth annual Grifton Shad Festival, was taken seriously by both young and old alike Saturday as persons from across eastern North Carolina flocked to the town to fish, eat, play and just watch the world go by.

The Saturday events were kicked off at 7:30 a.m. with the Bass Fishing Tournament. According to George Rhem, co-chairman of the event, a boat manned by M. D. Dunn and Marvin Banks, both of Kinston, brought in the largest catch of bass, with a total weight of 12 pounds, one ounce. Twenty-nine boats, with two persons apiece, participated in the event. The largest individual bass was caught by Ivy C. Hunnings, with a weight of five pounds, three ounces.

Viewers lined around Queen St. early in the morning to hear speakers Dr. Thomas Brewer, chancellor of East Carolina University, and Chief Edison Mount Pleasant, tribe historian for the Tuscarora Indian Reservation, Niagara Falls, N. Y.

Mayor Dave Bosley and Grifton resident Henry Oglesby introduced the speakers, as well as recognized Pitt County and Lenoir County dignitaries.

"Nothing captures the feeling of the eastern flatlands like the Grifton Shad Festival," said Dr. Brewer. He told the crowds that East Carolina was planning its own festival for the fall, known as the "Currituck Sound Mosquito Festival."

"We're going to train the mosquitoes to attack objects dressed in Carolina blue," said Brewer. "Then we're going to take them to Chapel Hill for our football game there."

Chief Mount Pleasant spoke in the native Tuscarora tongue, telling the people how glad he and his wife were to be at the Shad Festival.

A parade featuring bands from across eastern North Carolina, clowns, queens, floats and something called a "Shad Monster" rolled by the speakers' stand where Lee Kanipe of WITN-TV and Etsil Gordon of WNCT-TV, parade judges, made their final tally.

Mayor Bosley and 1979 Shad Festival Queen Jo Lynn Herring presented the awards, with the West Craven High School band taking the "Best Band" honors. The Mayor's Award went to a float by the Grifton Girl Scouts, with other float honors going to Horton Engineering and the Ayden Girl Scouts.

Crowds milled about in the high 70's weather, eating fried shad and shad stew, riding rides, and watching square dancing and clogging exhibitions given by area performers.

A horseshoe tournament, various games, and the culmination of a week-long softball tournament held many persons' attention, while others visited the Grifton Civic Center to observe the arts and crafts display.

Becky Costello of Ayden won first place in the student drawing division for her painting of an eagle. Other winners were:

Maxine Harker, photography; June Lambert, graphics; Maxine Harker, drawing; Janie Mae Mewborn, painting. All works were judged by Susan Parrott, resident artist, Kinston Arts Council.

Saturday night, a pancake eating contest and supper and street dance attracted participants.

Today, the culmination of the Grifton Shad Festival Golf Tournament, a canoe race, archery tournament and skateboard events will be featured, with the Civic Center still holding the crafts sales and art displays in the afternoon. A baseball game between the Grifton Reds and the Lenoir County Stars, as well as a radio-controlled model airplane show will close the day's events.

Winners

SHAD QUEEN — Jo Lynn Herring, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Herring, sponsored by Gerri's Gift Shop.

FIRST RUNNER-UP — Sandra Weatherman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Weatherman, sponsored by H and H Drug.

MISS CONGENIALITY — Jean Thomas, daughter of Mr. Benjamin Thomas Jr. and Mrs. Dot Hammick, sponsored by Smokey Joe's Cafe.

Interior Design House Grand Opening Today

READY FOR FINAL TOUCHES . . . Four of the seven seniors involved in the Interior Design House project, "A Step Above" take a short break after unloading potted plants from

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

The house at 504 East 9th Street is by any odds the house in Greenville that undergoes more changes than any other. Once a year in the spring it is the subject of a thorough redesign, as graduating seniors of the Interior Design Dept. of the ECU School of Art address themselves to a thematic project which serves as their senior show.

This year, seven seniors — Alan Cain, Randy Hight, Gaile Keith, Karen Schadt, Leigh Smith, Mary Charles Stevens, and Beth Worth — have concentrated on lighting and use of space in multi-levels in a contemporary setting. The project is appropriately entitled "A Step Above," as steps — up and down — constitute a major factor in the design.

Prior planning, design, the physical work to make structural changes, and the selection and placement of lights and materials has all been the handiwork of the seven. Muted lighting is achieved through use of an attractively designed skylight in the Great Room, the principal room in the project, and concealed tubular lighting at floor levels.

An unusual feature is the absence of moveable furniture and lighting fixtures — with the exception of several sturdy, floor cushions.

Angled walls are used to good effect, and what could be excessive starkness is relieved by the use of well chosen pictures.

"A Step Above" opens for public visitation at noon today, and will be open each day through April 29 from noon until 8 p.m. There is no admission fee, and the public is encouraged to visit the Interior Design house, which this year is in its seventh round of transformation.

Melvin Stanforth, chairman of the Interior Design Dept. of the School of Art, is the advisor to students on the project.

In conjunction with the design project, a guest speaker, Jim Frederickson of Cleveland, Ohio, will give a lecture, "New Trends in Lighting" at 11 a.m. Friday, April 27 in Room 1326, Leo W. Jenkins Fine Arts Center. Interior designers from Greenville, High Point and Greensboro will be special guests on Friday, and will attend a luncheon given by Chancellor and Mrs. Thomas Brewer.

Greensboro Concerts For Village People And Tom Jones In May

GREENSBORO — A disco group and a singer, both popular in the entertainment world, are scheduled to be in May concerts at the Greensboro Coliseum during May.

On Thursday, May 10, Village People, a disco group out of Greenwich Village, will perform in the Coliseum at 8 p.m. The six male performers include a Raleigh native, Randy Jones. Their single record "Y.M.C.A." has been a current best seller, and a new record, "In The Navy" is moving up rapidly. Their album, "Cruisin'" has been on the best selling charts for 26 weeks.

Tickets for Village People are priced at $9 and $8.

On Friday, May 18, singer Tom Jones will be in a concert at 8 p.m. Jones has played to audiences in the U.S., in France, Japan, from South Africa to Canada and has made extensive recordings. His more successful albums include "What A Night" and "Say You'll Stay Until Tomorrow."

Tickets for the Tom Jones concert are priced at $12, $10 and $8. Tickets for both shows are available by calling 294-2140.

Full Week Of Recitals

The coming week is a full one for recitals by students of the School of Music, East Carolina University, with recitals scheduled every day from today through Friday. All recitals, unless otherwise noted, will take place in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on campus. All are free, and the public is invited to attend.

— Today, 3:15 p.m. — Susan Gwen Beck, organist, will perform at First Presbyterian Church, corner Elm and 14th streets. For her program, she has listed Bach's "Fantasia in G Major" and "Prelude in B minor;" Stanley's "Trumpet Voluntary;" Franck's "Pastorale;" and four works by Jean Langlais. She will be assisted by Richard Duncan on the Stanley composition.

— Monday, 7:30 p.m. — Joint Graduate recital, Richard Holly, percussionist, and Christy Wadzeck, flute. Works to be played by Holly are Miyoshi's "Torse III;" Stout's "Two Mexican Dances;" "Sonata en Ut" by Lollit; "Sonatine" by Saccan;" Ingolf Dahl's "Duetto Concertante for flute and percussion;" and the performer's composition, "Sonata for Tympani." Information on selections to be performed by Ms. Wadzeck is not available.

— Monday, 9 p.m. — Joint senior recital, voice students Terry Leggett and Tony King. Ms. Leggett will perform selections by Daniel Pinkham, Richard Strauss, Anton von Webern, Gerald Finzi, and two duets with King — Faure's "Pieuvres d'Or" and "A Dialogue on a Kiss" by Lawes. For his program, King will sing three Brahms songs; two songs by Massenet including "Elegie;" three Vaughan Williams songs; and "Largo al factum" from "The Barber of Seville" by Rossini. Ms. Leggett will be accompanied by Alisia Wetherington, and King will be accompanied by Stan Benton.

— Tuesday, 7:30 p.m. — Graduate recital, Michael Gill, percussionist. He will be assisted by Anne Gunn, soprano, Kent Love, Kathy George and Donna Southall, marimbas, and Eddie Asten, percussion. Selections for his recital are: Murray

Houllif's "Four Verses for Timpani;" Raymond Heible's "Three Preludes for Marimba;" "Lanterns and Candlelight" by Barney Childs; "No. 9 Zyklus" by Stockhausen; G. H. Green's "Jovial Jasper;" and J. Green's "Xylophonia."

— Wednesday, 7:30 p.m. — Joint senior recital, Joy Hinsley, piano and Sara Neal Johnston, clarinet. Together, the two will perform the finale movement of Poulenc's "Sextour" assisted by Alan Winter, French horn, Susie Beck, flute, Terri Svec, oboe, and Ardis Harrar, bassoon. For her program, Ms. Hinsley will play Chopin's "Nocturne in F-flat minor;" Soler's "Sonata in D" and Debussy's "Children's Corner Suite." Ms. Johnston will perform Manovich's "Concerto for Clarinet and Piano;" "5 Pieces for Clarinet alone, I-vigorous" by William Smith; Debussy's "Premiere Rhapsody;" and the finale of Poulenc's "Sextour III." She will be accompanied by George Stone, and Philip Stokes, piano; Susan Beck, flute; Ardis Harrar, bassoon; Terri Svec, oboe; and Allan Winter, horn.

— Wednesday, 9 p.m. — Joint senior recital, John Wheeler, trombone and Jerry Walters, saxophone. No details available.

— Thursday, 7:30 p.m. — Joint senior recital, Denise Dupree, piano and Holley Hicks, viola.

Ms. Dupree's program consists of J. S. Bach's "French Suite No. 6 in E major;" Bela Bartok's "Mikrokosmos, Vol. 6;" and Schumann's "Drei Romanzen." Ms. Hicks will perform Antonio Vivaldi's "Concerto in E minor for Viola and Piano" and Edward Grieg's "Ballad." She will be accompanied by Rhem Bell.

— Thursday, 9 p.m. — Joint recital, Steve Walence and Elizabeth Smart, voice. For his part of the program, Walence, a tenor, has listed three Strauss songs, three by Duparc, Wolf's "Heb auf dein blondes Haupt;" "Here I Stand" from Stravinsky's "The Rake's Progress;" and Bizet's "La Fleur que tu m'avais jetee" from "Carmen." For her program, Ms. Smart will sing two Brahms songs, two by Britten, Debussy's "Nuit d'etoiles;" a Strauss song, Paladilhe's "Psyche;" an aria from Ponchielli's "La Gioconda;" and Gibbs' "When I Was One-and-Twenty." Lorene Caraway is piano accompanist for the two performers.

— Friday, 7:30 p.m. — Junior piano recital, Harcourt Reasoner Burns, III. Burns has listed five compositions for his program — "Prelude in D major" and "Prelude in G sharp minor" by Rachmaninoff; Ginastera's "Creole Dance Suite;" Mozart's "Sonata in A minor;" and Chopin's "Ballade in G minor."

— Friday, 9 p.m. — Harvey Stokes, senior composition recital. No details available.

Broussard Chapel Hill Soloist

GEORGE BROUSSARD... trombonist and faculty member of the School of Music, ECU, is guest soloist with the UNC-CH Jazz Ensemble in a 4 p.m. concert today in Hill Hall Auditorium on the Chapel Hill campus. (ECU News Bureau Photo)

CHAPEL HILL — George Broussard, trombonist and faculty member of the School of Music, East Carolina University, will be guest soloist with the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill Jazz Ensemble at the ensemble's spring concert today.

The concert will be at 4 p.m. in Hill Hall Auditorium on the Chapel Hill campus. Broussard will be featured in the performance of five arrangements, and his appearance is through the courtesy of the Bach Division of the Selmer Co.

The five pieces in which Broussard will be soloist are: two John LaBarbera arrangements, "Somewhere Along The Way" and "Tiger of San Pedro;" Sammy Nestico's "Tall Cotton;" Randy Purcell's arrangement of "The Way We Were;" and George West's adaptation of "Star Dust."

A member of the ECU faculty since 1972, Broussard has performed with a number of popular and symphonic bands, including Bob Crosby's band and the Chicago Civic Orchestra.

3 Win In Competition

Three voice students in the East Carolina University School of Music were winners in a recent competition sponsored by the North Carolina chapter of the National Association of Teachers of Singing in Greensboro.

Voice students Anne Gunn of Durham and Ira Jacobs, III, of Wilmington, both sophomores, won first place in their respective categories.

Williams Lear of Kannapolis won second place in his category.

As winners in the state competition, the three will have an opportunity to compete in the Regional NATS Competition at Shenandoah Conservatory, Winchester, Va., later this month.

Wahl-Coates Students To Present Opera

Englebert Humperdinck's beloved children's opera, "Hansel and Gretel" is being presented by 70 students of three third grade classes at Wahl-Coates School at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, April 26, with three performances to be given at the school for students on Wednesday, April 25.

Students in the cast are drawn from the classes of Rita Griffith, Elizabeth Taylor, and Peggy Taylor.

Jo Ann Moore is director, Gloria Hines accompanies on piano, and Karen Peters assists on piano.

In the well known story involving a brother and sister, their parents and the naughty old witch who lives deep in a forest, Jason Dohm plays Hansel, the brother; Arielle Sturz is the sister, Gretel; Roger Brunson is cast as the father; Tammy Crowell as the mother; and Wendy Mair has the role of the witch.

The two readers who narrate the action are Christopher Marks and Stewart Coulter. In the role of angels are Jennifer Lucht, Jennifer Brown, Tiffany Ebron, Pamela Chamberlain, Jessica Hales, Bridgett Nolan and Julie Parks.

Gingerbread boys are Jay Carrawan, Brian Gee, Mark Reid, Anthony Johnson, Michael Taylor, and Marty Tschetter.

Technical staff among the students are Bennett Blount, gong; Tripp Andrews and Jasper Pitt, curtain; Barry Padgett, lights; and Jerry Conklin and Carlton Phillips, props.

Set designs are by Mrs. Norma Gray and set decorations were made by Sue Lanier's classes.

A total of 53 boys and girls form the choir which supports the lead players.

For the benefit of other students at Wahl-Coates, three performances will be given on Wednesday — at 10:30, 11 and 11:30 a.m.

The 7:30 p.m. performance on Thursday is a presentation for the Wahl-Coates PTA, and interested persons are welcome to see the opera at this time. There is no admission charge.

Wind Ensemble Concert Tonight

The annual Spring Concert of the Symphonic Wind Ensemble of the School of Music, East Carolina, will take place at 8:15 p.m. today in Wright Auditorium. There is no admission fee, and the public is invited to attend.

Herbert L. Carter is conductor, and for today's program he will be assisted by guest conductors Joseph Distefano and Harold Jones. All three are faculty members of the School of Music.

Dottie Jo Knight, mezzo-soprano, an ECU graduate now a music teacher in the Greenville City Schools, is guest soloist.

Five compositions have been listed for the annual spring concert. The program opens with Alexander Lithgow's "Invercargill" as arranged by L. P. Laurendeau. Next is "Fetes" from "Three Noctures" by Claude Debussy, arranged by W. A. Schaefer, followed by four pieces from Karel Husa's "Music For Prague, 1968."

Other selections are Richard Strauss' "Serenade in E-flat major" and "Three Japanese Dances;" "Dance with Penons," "Mourning Dance," and "Dances with Swords," by Bernard Rogers.

Choral Festival At Rose High Tuesday

The Second Annual Greenville City Schools Choral Festival will be presented at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, April 24 in the gymnasium at J. H. Rose High School.

The individual choirs will sing selections, with the finale to be all 500 singers joining in to sing the Wilhousky arrangement of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Groups participating in the festival are: The Combined Elementary Chorus directed by Betty Boyd, Zenora Hopkins and JoAnn Moore; the Middle School Chorus directed by Johnny Wooten; the Aycock Junior High School Chorus, Linda Hawn, director; and the J. H. Rose High School Advanced Ensemble, Concert Choir and Sophomore Chorus, Patricia Hiss, director. Karen Wheeler and Gloria Hines are accompanists.

The public is invited and parents are encouraged to bring children to this hour-long concert. There is no admission charged.

Dance Festival Campaign On

DURHAM — The campaign to gather support for the American Dance Festival, a newly-formed organization created to bring Festival events into North Carolina, is now underway.

Persons interested in joining the association are to call 684-6402.

The Festival will take place June 16-July 28.

Studies Turtles In Costa Rica

ECU News Bureau
PLAYA GRANDE BEACH, COSTA RICA — It is three o'clock in the morning but 15 students from East Carolina University, carrying flashlights and cameras, are very wide awake awaiting a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to observe what happens on this country's Turtle Beach.

From the nearby ocean, through the white-capped, pounding surf, come giant Leather-back female turtles. In semi-darkness of the starry night, the aquatic reptiles dig holes in the white sand and there lay their eggs — 50 to 75 in number, each larger than a ping pong ball. They are creamy colored with a leathery covering.

After the eggs are deposited, the turtles cover the holes carefully and crawl back to the ocean from whence they came — an age old ritual of reproduction which may or may not assure the continuation of the species.

Leatherback turtles are threatened with extinction because the eggs, although concealed beneath the sand, are sought by predators and because, when the eggs hatch, voracious predators prey on the baby turtles as they emerge and try to make it to the sea.

It is estimated that only one of every 150 eggs laid is hatched into a turtle that survives the predators — reptiles, birds, animals, and men — who lie in wait.

The Leatherbacks are the largest turtles in the world — the adult females observed by the ECU students here are more than five feet in length and three and a half feet across. Males are even larger.

The nocturnal visit to "Turtle Beach" at Playa Grande was a highlight of the spring semester program for ECU students now nearing completion of their studies in this Central American republic. The class has included visits to five Pacific Ocean beaches in the northwestern part of the country to study unique features.

At Cochel Beach, they found not the expected sandy beach but rather a shell beach, composed of compact layers of small, multi-colored shells. Also, the students and their director-instructor, Dr. Robert E. Cramer, ECU professor of Geography, went by boat into a salt water estuary to visit one of the few giant red mangrove forests in the world.

This virgin forest on the coast of Costa Rica has trees over 80 meters in height and is the home of monkeys, thousands of colorful birds, and aquatic life. Hundreds of channels penetrate the forest, most of which have never been explored. There is no detailed map of the area, Cramer said.

The ECU students will be completing their semester here at the end of April and after a brief visit in neighboring Guatemala will return to North Carolina.

This is the sixth year that ECU has sent students to study in Costa Rica. Plans are being made for a similar Costa Rica program in January, 1980, Cramer said.

Hospitality House

WASHINGTON — Local and Oriental subjects are being discussed on Kay Currie's "Hospitality House" from noon til 1 p.m. today over WITN-TV Channel 7.

To mark Foster Parent Month in April, Bonnie Broadwell, a social service worker with the Craven County Dept. of Social Services, discusses factors relative to being a foster parent. Another guest is Ronald Sawyer of Creswell, president of the Open Door Christian Ministry.

Karen Schadt of East Carolina University talks about the 1979 project for students of Interior Design, the decoration of a house on Greenville's Ninth Street.

Men's fashions is the subject of a film which highlights the new, colorful designer look for men's wear.

The Orient factor is presented by Dr. Alan Johnson, chairman of the Speaker's Bureau, Westlyan College, Rocky Mt. Dr. Johnson gives details on a trip to China which leaves in July and for which there is still available space for interested persons.

In the kitchen, local food is presented in the preparation of ground beef by the butcher; and the Oriental touch is provided by Pat Reid cooking pork with a wok.

Show Of Treasures Opens At NCMA Today

RALEIGH — Objects of gold, jade, rubies, and other precious metals by craftsmen over the centuries from many cultures are being shown in a new show opening today at the North Carolina Museum of Art, Raleigh.

The exhibition, entitled "Treasures from the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts: Featuring the Faberge Collection," has items from Russia, ancient Greece and Rome, ancient and more recent China, Japan, India, South America, Italy, Flanders, France, England, Germany, and the United States.

Among outstanding treasures in the show are a Peter Carl Faberge's celebrated Easter egg; a 3,500 year-old Chinese jade knife; and a 20th century Tiffany letter rack.

From Japan comes a negoro lacquer sake pot, a bronze sword guard with silver and gold inlay, and a gold fan painting.

Objects from India and Nepal include jeweled daggers, ornate jewelry and boxes, and two bronze Buddhas, representing arts of the 11th through the 18th centuries.

American pieces in the show number a Paul Revere silver cider pitcher from 1804, silver by John Coney and Daniel Hinchman, and a pair of 19th century brass candlesticks.

"Treasures from the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts" will be on view on the Museum's third floor from today through June 3. The Museum is at 107 E. Morgan Street, and admission is free. Hours are 10 to 5 Tuesday through Saturday, and 2 to 6 on Sunday.

BIG HITS COMING NEXT! "NORMA RAE"-"GLACIER FOX"

ECU Annual Student Art Show At Gray Gallery

VISUAL ADVICE . . . Rita Earley's sculpture in clay, wood, and fiber tells a moral tale in an innovative manner. She has entitled this colorful assemblage of mermaids and two cowboys clustered around a bar "Don't Let Your Sons Grow Up To Be Cowboys."

There's one time a year when the space in Gray Gallery on campus at East Carolina University is packed in with art. That's the annual Student Show, with undergraduates and graduates represented in every conceivable media.

The 1979 Student Show now on view (through May 4) is a carnival of many different things in art — some excellent, and all of it worth seeing by anyone interested in the scope of young art, 1979.

This year's show has lots of fabrics (or fiber art if you prefer that term). There's silkscreened quilts of silky material in radiant colors, sweaters, capes, wall hangings, pillows, decorator pieces. Susie Rhew alternates ceramic tiles and padded material in a quilt under glass in a square table.

Another striking use of ceramics, wood, and cloth is Rita Earley's mermaids and two cowboys (or their legs rather) in a plush arrangement of white and valentine red (see photograph this page). Karen Bruce presents a shallow box stacked with hundreds of delicate, waffle-thin rectangles of white ceramic pieces.

Citing the female artists once more, they seem to have the lead in creating jewelry in this show, with a good selection of pieces that are cast fabricated in sterling, copper and in some instances including stones.

Paintings and graphics are also well represented. Several large, bold paintings are handsome — Anthony Eder's "Going to Rio de Janeiro" with an assertive area of white; Jamie Bernstein's rugged painting partially entitled "Hot Stuff," and a lyrically fine painting by Robin Singleton, "Prelude" in which the artist uses subtle greens, whites, and browns enlivened by three small bouquets of color.

"Stephen's Chance," a watercolor by Jean Everett combines a sensuous washes with broad areas of untouched paper that works well, and Kimri Lomason's pencil and watercolor "autobiographical" illustration of hands within a surreal setting is pleasing.

A fine example of the popular mixed media technique is James Jordan's "Take Five." Spots of many colors against a field of yellow, softly brushed circles, a bit of newspaper and an envelope fragment with stamps are effectively combined.

One of the surprises in the show is the presence of wood walking sticks — by Tim Pinkham, Eric Thiele and Eric Nordgren. Among items in the commercial art field, Patricia Bartley has an attractive scale model of a florist shop.

One puzzle — In the enclosed case next to a piece of pottery by John Lombardi is the stub of a cigar. Is it possible a certain faculty painter was standing by when the case was closed?

The examples cited here are only an indication of the pleasures to be found in this big annual show. It's an opportunity to see lots of variety under one roof.

Samuel Johnson Wins Halifax Day Award

HALIFAX — Samuel Johnson, president of the Historic Hamilton Commission, Inc. in Martin County, was one of three winners of awards for work in and support of historic preservation in North Carolina, in a ceremony held in Halifax on April 12.

Johnson received the award for his work in the historic preservation activity on the Roanoke River side of Hamilton.

The Tobacco History Corporation received the Halifax Day award for the contributions of the Corporation toward the development of the Duke Homestead State Historic Site.

Attorney General Rufus Edmisten was the third recipient of an award, being recognized for his work in organization of preservation conferences, and for his efforts toward saving Raleigh's historic Dodd-Hinsdale House.

Sidewalk Art Show Winners

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

"Recess," a black and white intaglio print by Ed Midgett, took the best-in-show award at the annual Greenville Sidewalk Art Show held Saturday at the Greenville Art Center.

Juror Michael Brantley, head of Educational Services of the North Carolina Museum of Art, Raleigh, said the show was one of outstanding quality and interest.

Large crowds of viewers were on hand early after the show's 10 a.m. opening, and later the numbers became smaller as people headed for the Shad Festival or an afternoon on some nearby beach.

Craftsmen demonstrated use of spinning wheels and looms, woodworking and pottery tools, and children congregated around the table where balloons were filled with helium.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Louise Wilkerson Perry

Among the many nonfiction titles published this year are several which offer a sampling of the best of entertaining factual reading.

OYSTERVILLE is the fascinating story of four families who settled up and down the East Coast of America three centuries ago and later migrated West. From Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and Kentucky, they took Conestoga Wagons across the prairies, unaware that destiny would eventually bring them to a coast overlooking the North Pacific Ocean, where they would meet in the tiny settlement of Oyster-ville in the territory of Washington. Drawing on historic documents and letters author Willard Espy affectionately reconstructs his own personal past giving us a rich and revealing account of a time when the United States was being shaped and expanded.

On a rainy spring day Tom Helms hitches a ride home from college. The car skids off the road and down an embankment; Tom comes to rest on the roof of the car, the vertebrae in his neck shattered, fragments of bone lodged against his spinal cord. When he awakens in a hospital, he finds himself paralyzed. This begins AGAINST ALL ODDS by Tom Helms, the story of how a young man defies the crushing odds of a broken neck to walk away from quadriplegia, expending tremendous energy and concentration just to make one muscle in his body respond to his prompting. Tom Helms was born in Concord, North Carolina and currently lives in Raleigh where he is an employment counselor for the state.

ALINE by Carole Klein is a biography of Aline Bernstein, notorious because of the eight-year liason with Thomas Wolfe, which began on his twenty-fifth birthday, when she was almost forty-five. The daughter of a well-known actor, she was already famous as a theatrical designer with a tolerant banker husband. This biography is not only the story of an extraordinary woman but of a fascinating period: the twenties, thirties, forties, and early fifties in the New York world of arts and letters. Ms. Klein has had access to the unpublished correspondence of Thomas Wolfe and Aline Bernstein and gives us a book filled with color, glamour, heartbreak, and love.

Accepts Art Gifts

RALEIGH — A number of gifts of art, including a rare lifesize wooden male figure from Egypt, have been given to the N. C. Museum of Art. The gifts, along with several important purchases, were accepted for the Museum collection by the N. C. Art Commission at its quarterly meeting on Thursday, March 29.

In addition to the more than 4,000 year old Egyptian work, two anonymous gifts were accepted — one, a North American Indian wooden totem pole dating before 1902, from the Northwest coast; and a John James Audubon lithograph of a mallard duck, which makes the Audubon portfolio "The Birds of America" complete.

Other gifts accepted include a George Cochran Lambdin oil painting, "The Dead Wife," a 17th century ink drawing attributed to Massimo Stanzione; and "Alba," a wood and metal piece by the contemporary Spanish artist Manuel Rivera.

Works purchased with funds from the N. C. Art Society and the National Endowment for the Arts include the watercolor and folded paper "Linear Series Diminutive Folded No. 50" by Yvonne Pickering, and four photographs by Joyce Tennessee Choen.

A contemporary brass Hanukkah Menorah by Ludwig Wolpert was purchased with funds from the Judaic Art Fund.

RUSSIAN ART
MADISON, Wis. (AP) — "The Art of Russia, 1800-1850" will be on view at the Elvehjem Museum of Art through May 6. The show includes 154 works of art.

MANTEO — Rock Kershaw, assistant general manager of the Roanoke Island Historical Association, has announced a lengthened season and an enlarged faculty for the summer 1979 session.

Dates for the Arts Camp are July 1 through August 3, Mondays through Fridays, from 9 to 3:30 daily. Dance, drama, and the visual arts will be taught. Chorus, piano and theory, and puppetry have been added for this season.

Greenville native Gwen Spear, a member of the Old Dominion University dance department, will teach ballet. Judy Crump of Atlanta will teach jazz and ballet, and Frank Holder of the Frank Holder Dance Company, Greensboro, will work with young children and beginning dancers.

Graciela Binaghi, artist in residence in South Carolina, will head the drama division.

In visual arts, three artists will be teaching — Maureen Trotto, head of the arts program, and Johnny Mizell and Vernessa Riley.

Cathy Combs of the music faculty of UNC-Chapel Hill will offer private piano lessons and will teach a music theory class. Choral instructions will be taught by Craig Price, and the choral class will be a part of the daily instruction for all students.

Ages for applicants are seven through seventeen. The cost per camper per week is $34, making the five-week camp cost total $170 per person. Additional members of one family receive lower rates. A reservation fee of $25 must accompany reservations.

For further information write The Lost Colony, Manteo, N. C., 27954.

Starving Artists Show On April 28

Artists and craftsmen in the Greenville area are invited to be participants in the Third Annual Starving Artists Show to be held from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, April 28 on the downtown mall.

The show, sponsored by the Downtown Greenville Association, is coordinated by Barbara Shell. There is no entry fee and all types of art and craft will be accepted. Artists so wishing will be permitted and are encouraged to be ready to demonstrate techniques applicable to their particular art.

Items are to be exhibited and will also be for sale. Among media expected to be represented are drawings, prints, paintings, ceramics, leatherware, jewelry, wood crafts and textiles.

Members of the Coastal Carolina Fiber Guild will have a demonstration of fiber art, and there will also be potters and leatherworkers on hand.

All entries are to be registered at The Silver Thread, 218 East Fifth Street by Thursday, April 26. Persons wanting more information are to telephone 752-3601.

Festival Of Words

BOONE — A gathering of creative and professional writers will take place Monday through Thursday (April 23-26) as Appalachian State University hosts the Festival of the Written Word in Whitener Hall auditorium.

Festival participants will include novelist John Gardner; poet Diane Wakoski; literary critic Stanley Fish; news service director Mac Sherman Harris; sports writer Lennox Rawlings; writing teacher John Butler; freelance writer Peggy VanDyke; and P. Lal of Calcutta, India, founder of the Writer's Workshop.

The Festival is open to all persons interested in creative writing. Sessions will be held Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at 4 p.m. and at 8 p.m. with a dinner at 6 p.m. in the Chancellor's Dining Room with P. Lal as the featured speaker.

For more information, contact Thomas McLaughlin, Dept. of English, Appalachian State University, Boone, N. C., 28608 or phone (704) 262-2155.

Pirates Rally To Quench Flames, 6-5

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina University played Indian giver with Liberty Baptist Saturday afternoon, giving the Flames the game on a silver platter and then snatching it back from them in the shadow of victory.

The Pirates came up with three runs in the bottom of the ninth to pull off a 6-5 victory over the Flames, and giving the Bucs a two-game sweep of the Lynchburg, Va., team.

Six errors by the Pirates in the sixth through eighth innings had allowed the Flames to come up with five runs, four of them unearned, erasing an early 2-0 Pirate lead.

The victory was the 20th of the year for the Pirates, who have dropped 14 games, while Liberty Baptist was falling to 21-7 on the year.

Rick Ramey came on in relief to claim the victory on the mound, his fourth in eight decisions. Reliever Doug Smith was the loser, getting his first decision on the year.

Bobby Patterson had started for the Pirates and had been practically untouchable through the first five innings as he sailed along with a 2-0 lead. He allowed one hit in the first inning, then promptly picked off the runner. He didn't allow another baserunner until the fifth with two outs, when he walked a Flame. Then, in the sixth and seventh, he helped himself along giving up three runs to lose the lead, although only one of them was earned.

Davis Harris (6-0) was the starter for the Flames, but was quickly jerked in the seventh after allowing a two-out homer and a bunt single.

The Pirates had a threat in the first when two reached on an error and a single with two away. Again in the second, the Pirates put a runner in scoring position as Mike Sage led off with a walk and was balked to second. But a fly-out and a double play following another walk ended the frame.

Finally, in the third, the Pirates got the first of three home runs in the game, and took the lead. Billy Best singled to left with one down, and Butch Davis followed that up with a round-tripper to left, giving the Pirates a 2-0 lead.

In the fifth, the Pirates had another chance, when Davis tripled with two away, but died at third.

Held in check for five innings, the Flames got an unearned run in the sixth. Richard DeWitt was hit by a pitch and Brian Metzgar reached when his sacrifice bunt was errored. Both were sacrificed up, and an infield out by Peter Guy scored DeWitt.

The seventh saw Patterson chased, along with reliever Bill Wilder, as the Flames came up with three to take a 4-2 lead. Sid Bream led off with a double to left center. He was sacrificed to third and Lee Guetterman reached on an error, scoring the tying run. Tom DeWitt was hit by Wilder in his first try, and Richard DeWitt singled to left. The ball was kicked by Davis on the fielding try, and Guetterman came in on the play, with Tom DeWitt taking third. He scored when Metzgar again reached on an errored sacrifice attempt.

The Pirates rallied for one in the bottom of the seventh. That came on a solo home run hit by Bob Neff, cutting the lead to 4-3.

Liberty Baptist added what it thought would be an insurance run in the eighth. Guy reached on an error and was safe at second when Dean Powell's grounder was errored on the throw to the base. Bream reached on a fielder's choice and Tom Sweat hit a sacrifice fly to left, scoring Guy.

But the Pirates didn't die, and a leadoff home run by Rick Derechailo was the spark they needed to get going. That brought the Pirates to within one.

Jerry Carraway then walked, and Smith came in place of Chris Miller on the mound. He got Mike Sorrell on a pop-up on a bunt attempt, but Neff beat out a ball to deep short. Best followed with a single to center, scoring Carraway with the tying run.

The Flames chose to walk Davis to set up a force at any base, and nearly pulled it off. Macon Moye grounded back to short, but Davis was able to take out the second baseman, preventing any attempt at the double play as Neff crossed the plate with the winning run.

"I thought I was going to lose my mind," Coach Monte Little said. "When we started throwing the ball all over the field. I just couldn't believe it. But we came back and that's what counts."

Best finished the day with three hits, while Neff and Davis each had a pair. Liberty Baptist got only three hits, two off Patterson and one off Wilder. Only one walk, by Patterson, was awarded, although both Patterson and Wilder hit batters.

East Carolina travels to Rocky Mount on Monday to meet N.C. Wesleyan, coached by former ECU assistant Tony Guzzo. The Bucs return home Tuesday to face Virginia Wesleyan at 7:30 p.m.

Nothing New In Bargaining

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Negotiators for the umpires association and major league baseball met here Saturday but no details were revealed.

The league presidents, Lee MacPhail of the American and Chub Feeney of the National, issued a statement which said they met with Richie Phillips, counsel to the umpires. "Both sides indicated a strong desire to settle the dispute and will schedule more meetings in the near future," the statement said.

Phillips confirmed the meeting had been held and said another meeting would be held but he wouldn't say when or where.

Phillips canceled a scheduled appearance in Boston where members of his association and other unions picketed outside of Fenway Park before the game between the Red Sox and Kansas City Royals.

Earlier Saturday, Phillips refused to discuss the status of the contract dispute which has kept regular umpires on the sidelines since the start of spring training.

Nehemiah-Led Maryland Gains Its Twenty-Fifth Track Title

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Renaldo Nehemiah captured the 100-meter and the 200-meter dashes and anchored Maryland's 400-meter relay team as the Terps won their 25th team title at the Atlantic Coast Conference Track and Field Championships Saturday.

The sophomore from Scotch Plains, N.J., won the 100 with a time of 10.2 seconds, one-tenth of a second faster than he ran in Friday's trials. In the 200-meter event, he had a hand-clocked time of 20.3.

Nehemiah, who holds the world record in the 110-meter high hurdles, an event he did not enter in the ACC meet, brought the Terps from third place to first with his final leg in the 400-meter relay. Maryland's time of 40.2 seconds was a meet record. Nehemiah won the Robert A. Fetzer Award as the meet's top performer.

Maryland had a team total of 212 points. In second place, Virginia had 101.5. The rest of the standings were Georgia Tech, 86; North Carolina State, 75.5; North Carolina, 67; Clemson, 50; Duke, 21 and Wake Forest, 6.

Wayne Miller of North Carolina set an individual record of 46.77 seconds in the 400-meter run. That time bettered the ACC mark of 47.06, which he set in Friday's trials.

Virginia's Greg Canty successfully defended his title in the 800 meters and set a new record of 1:48.5. That broke the record time of 1:49.59 he set last year.

Dennis Ivory of Maryland won the triple jump for the third straight year with a record leap of 53-0 3/4. Other than Nehemiah, he was the only multiple winner of the meet. He captured the long jump for the third time in four years Friday with a distance of 7.40 meters.

Chargers Defeated

KINSTON — Hosting Kinston defeated Ayden-Grifton, 4-1, last night to claim third place in the Kinston Invitational Tournament. Richlands and Beddingfield played later for the championship.

Kinston got all it needed in the first inning, scoring three runs. Wade singled and Gooding reached on a two-base error. Hill singled in Wade, and Briley's single brought in Gooding. Head then singled in Hill for the 3-0 lead.

Ayden-Grifton came back with its only run in the fifth. Clayton McLawhorn singled and moved to third on an error on the play. Chris Phillips grounded out, scoring McLawhorn.

The other Kinston run came in the bottom of the fifth.

Ipock of Kinston limited Ayden-Grifton to only one hit, while striking out seven and walking two.

Ayden-Grifton, now 2-11, travels to Southwest Edgecombe on Tuesday.

ECU Inks JC Cager

East Carolina women's basketball coach Cathy Andruzzi announced the signing of Laurie Sikes, a 5-6 guard from Marietta, Ga., to a grant-in-aid to attend ECU next year.

Sikes, a point guard noted for her passing skills, averaged 14.1 points during her career at Peace Junior College in Raleigh and will enroll as a junior next fall at East Carolina. She led the Green Giants in assists last year.

"Laurie is one of the top junior college guards in the country," said Andruzzi, who completed an 18-11 season in her initial year with the Pirates last winter.

"She has a great deal of experience and should add a lot to our backcourt. We play a running game and like to use pressure defense, both areas where Laurie excels."

The signing is the first for the Lady Pirates so far this spring.

Lady Pirates Claim ASU Tourney Crown

BOONE — East Carolina University's women's softball team came up with a fine birthday present for their coach, Alita Dillon, Saturday afternoon. They presented her with the Appalachian State Invitational Tournament championship.

The Lady Pirates had to go two games in the double elimination tournament's finals to get it done, losing to Western Carolina, 6-4, in the first game, then taking the second, 1-0, to earn the title.

East Carolina had moved into the finals as the lone unbeaten in the tournament.

The Pirates scored an unearned run on a sacrifice fly by Shirley Brown in the first inning of the championship game and made it hold up for the win after the Catamounts had rallied for the 6-4 decision in the first game. Appalachian, 7-3, in a morning game to reach the finals.

In the sixth inning of the first game with the Pirates leading 3-2, Beth Crisp singled and scored on Pam McMahan's home run to boost the Catamounts to a 4-3 edge. Another run scored on an error and Catamount pitcher Kerry Cooke singled in another as Western Carolina plated four runs to claim the win.

East Carolina had taken the lead on a three-run homer by Robin Faggart in the fourth inning.

The victory boosted the Pirates to a 16-12 record for the season, which comes to an end on Monday with a 3 p.m. doubleheader at Methodist. The Lady Pirates then will participate in the North Carolina ALAW Tournament at Graham, starting April 28.

Six members of the Pirate team were named to the all-tournament team, including Most Valuable Player in the tournament shortstop Mary Powell.

Others included outfielders Kim Holmes, Shirley Brown and Robin Faggart, first baseman Teresa Whitley and pitcher Mary Bryan Carlyle. Western Carolina outfielder Donna Minter, third baseman Marlene Vinson, second baseman Pam McMahan and catcher Beth Crisp rounded out the selections.

NORFOLK, Va. — East Carolina enjoyed its most successful day of the outdoor track season with an impressive showing in the Norfolk State Relays, winning three relays and two individual events.

The Pirates captured the mile relay in 3:17.4 with Bobby Phillips, Terry Perry, Carlton Bell and Otis Melvin passing the baton and gaining a comfortable win.

Phillips, Warren Days, Anthony Fields and Melvin combined to win the 880-yard relay in 1:26.9, while Perry, Days, Carter Suggs and Bill Miller carried the Pirates to the win in the sprint medley relay in 3:26.3.

The Pirates also placed second to Norfolk State in the 440-yard relay with a 41.8 seconds clocking. The hosts won in 41.0 seconds.

Marvin Rankins won the open 120-yard high hurdles in 14.1 seconds with teammate Valentino Robinson second in 14.2. Antoine Holloman took second in the collegiate highs at 14.55 seconds, an event won by Dennis Bowles of Virginia State in 14.50 seconds.

Miller won the open mile run for the Pirates in 4:17.0, and Russell Parker cleared 6-7 in the open high jump to place third.

Lynn Slaps Seventh Homer As Red Sox Overpower Kansas City

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Fred Lynn extended his hitting streak to 10 games with his seventh homer and Jim Rice and Dwight Evans contributed long shots Saturday, powering the Boston Red Sox to a 10-4 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Despite a massive picket line set up by major league baseball's absent umpires, a crowd of 34,196 packed Fenway Park for the nationally televised game.

Lynn, Rice, Evans and Jerry Remy drove in two runs apiece for the American League East-leading Red Sox. Starter Bob Stanley and relievers Bill Campbell and Tom Burgmeier combined to check the Royals on six hits. Stanley, 1-1, a 15-game winner as a prime reliever last year, earned the victory, with help from Campbell in the seventh.

Lynn, who got an RBI with a bases-loaded walk in the third inning, lined a shot into the screen at left center for his homer starting the fifth. Rice, the AL's most valuable player in 1978, homered with one out in the seventh and doubled in the eighth. With four consecutive singles Friday and a single, sacrifice fly and a walk, the home run and double gave Rice seven straight hits.

After Rice's homer, Carl Yastrzemski stole second, moved to third on an infield out and scored on an error. Evans followed with his third homer, a drive into the center field bleachers.

Kansas City starter Larry Gura, 1-2, took the loss. Gura gave up five runs, including Lynn's homer, before being replaced by Steve Busby, making his first appearance since last September 30. Busby, still trying to come back from arm surgery in 1976, was tagged for four runs, including the homers by Rice and Evans.

Watson Clings To Three-Stroke Lead

By BOB GREEN

RANCHO LA COSTA, Calif. (AP) — Front-running Tom Watson dropped a 6-foot par putt on the final hole and, with a hard-won round of 70, retained a 3-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $300,000 Tournament of Champions.

Watson, the leader all the way in this exclusive event that brings together only the winners of PGA Tour titles from the last 12 months, had a 54-hole total of 205, 11 strokes under par on the 6,889-yard La Costa Country Club course.

Smooth Jerry Pate scored eight birdies on the way to a spectacular, 7-under-par 65 — the best round of the tournament and only one off the course record — to move into a tie for second at 208.

He shared the second spot with cross-handed putter Bruce Lietzke, who had a third round 70 in the warm, sunny, windy weather.

They appeared to be the only men in the select field of 28 champions with any chance of catching Watson, who led by one at the end of the first round, and by 3 at the end of 36 holes.

It was 4 more shots back to Larry Nelson and Lee Trevino, tied at 212, 7 strokes back of Watson. Trevino matched par 72 in the third round and Nelson, who scored an eagle-3, shot 68.

Lee Elder and Tom Kite were at 213. Elder birdied his last three holes for a 68. Kite had the same.

Gary Player of South Africa, the defending champion, was the only other man under par for three rounds. The little man in black shot a 74 — despite great difficulty with short putts — and was at 2-under 214.

"Gary just couldn't buy a putt," said Lietzke, his playing partner.

Jack Nicklaus, a five-time winner of this event, took himself out of title contention with a fat 77. He played the last four holes 4 over par and finished the day with a 221 total. U.S. Open champ Andy North was 71-222 and Fuzzy Zoeller, who beat Watson in a playoff for the Masters crown last week, shot 74-223.

Watson, the outstanding player in the game over the last two seasons and the leading money-winner this year, said he was lucky to retain the lead.

"My short iron game has been very good," he said. "I've scrambled extremely well, and I've been fortunate. It seems every time I hit it off line, it ends up in a good position."

"But if I don't start hitting it in the fairway, and if I don't continue to get good breaks, I'll be in trouble."

"I'd just better start hitting it in the fairway. It's a simple as that," he said.

Watson hit only six fairways this day and seemed to be in constant trouble.

In all, he was in six bunkers and hit two trees.

But his game around the greens kept him in it. His lead twice dwindled to a single shot, but each time he was able to stretch it out again. He made a 10-footer for a bogey on the fifth hole, saved par with a 20-footer on the 13th after hitting a tree limb there, and made a key save on the last hole after going from fairway bunker to greenside bunker.

Lietzke moved up on him first, closing to within one shot before thrashing his way to a double bogey-6 on the sixth hole where he missed the green with his second shot, failed to get it out of the deep rough with his third and finally got it on the putting surface in 4.

Next came Pate's spectacular effort. Playing well in front of Watson, he turned in 33, birdied the 11th and 12th and then closed to within one with birdie putts of 15 and 6 feet on the 14th and 15th holes.

Watson, however, pulled away again with a pair of 15 foot birdie putts on the 15th and 16th and just missed from a shorter distance on the 17th.

The tournament is sponsored by Mutual of New York.

Sundberg Paces Rangers, 5-0

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Sundberg drove in four runs to back the six-hit pitching of Ferguson Jenkins as the Texas Rangers defeated the New York Yankees 5-0 Saturday.

It was Jenkins' 45th career shutout.

Sundberg, who had only four RBIs in his first 10 games this season, tripled in two runs off New York starter and loser Catfish Hunter, 0-1, in a three-run third inning. He drove in another with a fourth-inning sacrifice fly and collected his fourth RBI with a single after Oscar Gamble's double off reliever Ken Clay in the eighth.

Jenkins, 4-0, notched his 18th American League shutout after surviving his biggest threat in the first inning when Mickey Rivers led off with a triple on the first pitch. After two infield outs, Jenkins walked Reggie Jackson but induced Graig Nettles to hit into an inning-ending force play.

In the second, Richie Zisk and Gamble opened with singles against Hunter and both scored when Sundberg tripled to deep center. Pat Putnam's sacrifice fly then scored Sundberg. Hunter allowed an unearned run in the fourth when Zisk walked, Gamble singled for the second of his three hits and both advanced on an error by right-fielder Jackson. Zisk scored on Sundberg's sacrifice fly.

Texas' final run came in the eighth after Clay relieved Hunter. Gamble doubled to deep right center and Sundberg singled to right.

Rampants Slip By Jaguars For Title

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer
Rose High survived a seventh-inning scare Friday night to defeat Farmville Central 4-3 and capture the championship of the Greenville-Pitt Baseball Tournament at Guy Smith Stadium.

Rampant starting pitcher Mike Williams and struck out the final batter.

D. H. Conley defeated Washington 6-4 to capture third place in the tournament, while New Bern downed Wilson Fike 2-1 for fifth-place honors.

Farmville 3
Williams held the Jaguars to just one hit in 6½ innings, but it took Winstead's save to finally put the Jaguars away.

The Rampants' smoke-throwing senior had control problems the entire night, walking 13 batters, while striking out 12. With Rose ahead 4-2 going into the final frame, Williams walked three of the first four Farmville batters and left the game with a 2-0 count on another after two out.

Rose coach Ronald Vincent brought in Winstead, who threw a strike and then a ball, forcing in a run. He struck out the next batter, however, to end the game.

"We like to keep 'em close," Vincent kidded after the game. "I'm pleased with the way we played the entire tournament. We were very aggressive and played well defensively."

Vincent admitted it was a tough situation for Winstead, but that he had confidence in his junior hurler. "We brought Lindsey in in a couple of situations like that last year. I knew he could do the job."

The Rampant coach said

Williams had problems closing his shoulder down on his pitches and blamed the difficulty on the fact that he hadn't taken the mound in over a week.

Sophomore Mark Douglas started in place of injured shortstop Ronnie Chapman, who was hurt in Thursday night's win over Conley, and did a real good job, Vincent said. Another Rampant, Mark Shank, was named the tournament's most valuable player.

Mike Campbell's two-run homer opened the Rampant scoring in the second inning. Will Barrett led off the frame with a base hit and was sacrificed to second by Williams. Ca bell then slammed the first pitch over the fence in left-center for the first homer of his high school career and a 2-0 Rose lead.

The Rampants tacked two more runs on that margin in the next frame when Skip Topping walked with two out, courtesy runner Robert Morehead went to second on a passed ball, Barrett got an infield hit and Williams doubled up the middle, scoring both runners.

The Jaguars loaded the bases in the fourth, but didn't score until the next inning. Clark May and Billy McLawhorn led off with walks, May going to third on a pickoff error.

The pair teamed up for a perfect double steal with May coming home and McLawhorn followed in Philip Gordon's infield out.

Two Farmville runners reached base in the sixth, but Williams pitched himself out of the difficulty. He needed help in the seventh, however.

Greg Hardison led off the bottom of the final frame with a walk, but the next batter, Allen Moore, was called out for offensive interference. He popped up to Rampant first baseman Will Sanderson, but ran into the fielder in a violent collision down the first base line and was ejected from the game.

Williams then walked Gordon and Lewis Yelverton before getting a strikeout. He delivered three straight balls to Jaguar pitcher Ted Johnson with the bases loaded before Vincent brought Winstead in.

He delivered the fourth ball to Johnson, pushing Hardison across' but struck out the next batter to end the game and gain a save.

Williams raised his record to 6-1 with the victory, while Rose is now 11-1. The Jaguars are 8-6 on the year.

Washington 4

Curtis Spencer's two-run double in the fifth and two-run homer in the sixth paced the Vikings to a 6-4 victory over Washington and third place in the tournament.

For Viking coach Walter Claybrook, any type of win would have been fine after his team was beaten 17-3 by Rose the night before. "After last night, I'd say a win of any kind is good."

"I thought we were sort of dead the first three or four innings, probably because of last night. But then we sort of got going."

Neither team showed much offense until the fourth inning. In the top of the frame, Micah Dixon walked and Ben Wilson singled for Conley. Spencer followed with a double to left that scored both runners.

He went to third on Mike Edens' base hit and then scored on an error on a double steal attempt. Edens came in when Carl Arnold got a double to left.

The Pam-Pack scored three of its runs in the bottom of the frame. With one out, Drew Roberson singled and Bobby Parker and Larry Woolard walked. Vann Parker's sacrifice fly scored Roberson and Les Woolard singled to plate Larry Woolard and Parker.

In the top of the fifth, Dixon doubled with one away, and after another out, Spencer lost a ball over the center field fence to make it 6-3.

The final Pam-Pack run came in the seventh, and three men were left on base when the final out was made. Lonnie Harris walked with one out and beat the throw to second on Tighe Crooks' fielder's choice. Neal Prater singled to load the bases, and after an out, Drew Roberson hit a fielder's choice, but Harris beat the throw home. The final batter struck out.

Viking pitcher Ben Wilson got the win in relief of Jeff Allen, his seventh in eight decisions. Conley is now 8-5, while Washington is 8-4.

Claybrook praised the jobs of both his pitchers, as well as shortstop Micah Dixon, who is playing the best ball of his career, the coach said.

All-Tourney Selections

Champion Rose High placed three players on the Pitt-Greenville All-Tournament team, while runner-up Farmville Central had two. Rampant right fielder Mark Shank was named most valuable player.

Rose first baseman Will Sanderson and pitcher Lindsey Winstead were named to the elite team along with Shank, while Farmville shortstop Billy McLawhorn and right fielder Allen Corbett were also picked.

Four other teams had one player tabbed for the squad, first baseman Ken Jones from New Bern, first baseman Ricky Matthews from Fike, catcher Drew Roberson from Washington and shortstop Micah Dixon from Conley.

DUCKS UNLIMITED OFFICIALS announced recently that its nationwide fund-raising efforts during 1978 generated a record of more than $16 million to save critical North American waterfowl breeding habitat.

Executive Vice President Dale E. Whitesell said he was pleased with the efforts of the 1,200 DU committees and 285,000 members, but added the fight is not over.

"I can't help but feel apprehensive when I consider the stakes involved in the Canadian wetlands habitat race. I think there are far too many conservationists in this country who just don't realize that 70 per cent of North America's waterfowl are produced in Canada's prairie wetlands habitat."

Whitesell said the $11.1 million Canadian dollars which DU spent in Canada last year resulted in the completion of 122 wetland projects encompassing 101,643 acres and 552 new miles of nesting shoreline.

He also pointed out that the money raised last year pushed the organization's 41-year total to $88 million. "I'll admit that $88 million sounds like a lot of money when you first think of how much money it should take to keep wild waterfowl flying from one year to the next," he said.

"But what spooks me about where we really stand in the Canadian habitat race stems from the federal money being spent right here in our backyard. The U.S. government is spending $20 million a year just to acquire—not develop—wetlands in our production."

"At this rate, conservationists should be spending a staggering $70 million annually in Canada where 70 per cent of North America's waterfowl production takes place. DU is wagering, in short, a private-sector-funded fight in a ring of government-sized proportions."

Fishermen Qualify For Finals

Four local fishermen, members of the Tar River Bassmasters, qualified for the North Carolina State Bass Federation finals to be held in June on Lake Wylie near Charlotte.

The four, Ed McFall, Vick Tart, Dave Rogers and Ed Hicks, were among 60 qualifiers from the eastern region tournament held on the Pamlico River recently. About 200 people competed in that event.

McFall is the defending state champion.

Bunt Sign Off, McCovey Singles In Winning Run For San Francisco

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

For two pitches, San Francisco Manager Joe Altobelli flashed the bunt sign to Willie McCovey. Then he came to his senses — and Willie came through.

Jack Clark, who had led off the bottom of the ninth inning Friday night with a routine grounder to Bill Russell, was on second base, compliments of the Los Angeles shortstop's throwing error. Then the 41-year-old McCovey, making his first start of the season, stroled to the plate.

Dodgers Manager Tom LaSorda made no move to walk him intentionally, so Altobelli, the Giants' manager, made his first move, signaling McCovey to sacrifice Clark to third.

"He's given me the bunt sign more times than all my other managers combined," McCovey said. "I was ready to bunt — but I can't guarantee you how good it would have been...He's the kind of manager who would order a bunt no matter who was up there. But I figure I'm a dead put hitter and have two chances to get the runner to third — by hitting the ball to the right side or to the outfield."

"This may sound like I'm second-guessing the manager, but I'm not."

The first two pitches were outside. McCovey didn't offer at them. Meanwhile, Altobelli was second-guessing himself. "It's a tough thing to have anyone with as many clutch hits in his career bunt," he said. "A lot of things went through my mind and after two balls I took the sign off."

McCovey promptly lined the next pitch to right field for a single. Clark steamed around third and barely beat Gary Thomasson's throw home for the tie-breaking run and the 3-2 victory.

Asked if he practiced his bunting very often, McCovey replied: "If you had 505 home runs, would you?"

Padres 7, Braves 4

Jerry Turner's two-run homer in the fourth inning and two-run single in the eighth and Gene Tenace's two-run homer in the sixth gave San Diego's Randy Jones the cushion he needed to go the distance against Atlanta. Dale Murphy had a homer and a sacrifice fly for the Braves.

Astros 5, Pirates 4

In the bottom of the 10th inning, Pittsburgh's Phil Garner made a picture-perfect stop of leadoff batter Craig Reynolds' smash down the third base line. Then Garner threw the ball into right field.

When Reynolds stopped running, he was standing next to Garner on third base. And a few minutes later he scored the winning run on Jeff Leonard's fly ball to boost Houston past the Pirates.

Cubs 8, Expos 5

Dave Kingman hit the eighth grand-slam homer of his career in the third inning to help Chicago beat the Expos.

With one out and one on in the third, Scott Thompson doubled and Bill Buckner was given an intentional walk before

Reds 10, Cards 3

Ken Griffey's single, double and home run — which raised his batting average to .400 — and solo homers by Johnny Bench and Dan Driessen led Cincinnati's 18-hit assault against St. Louis.

Phils 8, Mets 0

Unbeaten Dick Ruthven scattered five New York hits for his third victory and Philadelphia's fifth in a row.

Hawks' Streak Ended

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

The Washington Bullets are back in command — and the Philadelphia 76ers and Los Angeles Lakers are back in contention — in the National Basketball Association playoffs.

Mitch Kupchak scored five points in a 2½-minute stretch of the fourth quarter to help Washington beat the Atlanta Hawks 89-77 Friday night. The victory snapped Atlanta's 17-game homecourt winning streak, gave the Bullets a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven series and regained their homecourt advantage for the set.

Philadelphia, which lost its first two games at San Antonio, bounced back at home by beating the Spurs 123-115 behind 39 points by Julius Erving and a big fourth quarter by Darryl Dawkins.

Los Angeles, which lost twice at Seattle earlier this week, came home and outscored the Sonics 11-5 in overtime to win 118-112 as center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 32 points and blocked six shots.

In the other second-round playoff game, the Kansas City Kings clobbered the Phoenix Suns 111-91 to even that series at one victory apiece.

All four series resume Sunday.

Kupchak's points came as the Bullets pulled away from a 69-69 tie with an 12-4 burst late in the final period. Elvin Hayes led the Bullets with 19 points and 14 rebounds.

"It wasn't an easy win," said Dick Motta, coach of the Bullets. "My armpits are clear down to my belly button now."

"We beat ourselves in our own gym with only 77 points, 37 percent shooting and 20 turnovers," said Hubie Brown, coach of the Hawks. "I'm so exasperated. Going on the road doesn't mean anything to them. They are a proven team."

In the regular season, Atlanta's 34-7 home record was the best in the NBA — but Washington's 23-18 road record was also the best in the league.

The 76ers outscored the Spurs 12-2 at the start of the fourth quarter to lead 99-90. San Antonio rallied to reduce the margin to 107-105 with 3:52 remaining on a pair of free throws by James Silas, who scored 32 points in the game.

The 6-foot-11½ Dawkins, who had contributed only four points through the first three periods, suddenly got hot and personally outscored San Antonio 10-4 to put the game out of reach. Dawkins had 14 points and seven rebounds in the final period. Erving shot 15 of 23 from the field and nine of 12 from the foul line. In addition, he gave Dawkins a pep talk at halftime.

Abdul-Jabbar and Ron Boone each sank two free throws with four seconds left in the five-minute overtime to clinch the Lakers' victory.

The Sonics trailed 114-112 when Dennis Johnson missed a 20-footer from the left corner. Abdul-Jabbar grabbed the rebound and was fouled with four seconds to go. A technical foul on John Johnson gave Boone his first shot, and the second came when the Sonics called an illegal timeout. Abdul-Jabbar, meanwhile, sank the two personals.

The Lakers had rallied from a six-point deficit in the final 1:55 of regulation play. After Dennis Johnson's 20-foot jumper gave the Sonics a 105-99 lead, Los Angeles scored the next eight points, the final two on an Abdul-Jabbar skyhook, to go ahead 107-105 with 35 seconds remaining.

Gus Williams' jumper with 19 seconds to play evened it at 107-107 and Jamaal Wilkes of the Lakers missed an off-balance 20-footer at the buzzer.

Kansas City guard Otis Birdsong scored 13 of his 23 points in the first quarter as the Kings raced to a 35-21 lead over Phoenix, which never got closer than eight points after that. The Kings shot 58 percent from the field in the first quarter and 51 percent for the game and committed just 14 turnovers to 28 by Phoenix.

Knights Bow To Bethel, 7-2

Bethel Academy gained a 7-2 victory over Greenville Christian Academy in a Friday baseball game.

Greenville scored first, getting a run in the first. George Griner reached on an error and Troy Hudson singled. A hit by Sammy Harris scored Griner.

Bethel came back with two in the third. Beard singled and scored on a double by Power. Williams then doubled in Power.

In the fourth, Greenville scored again to tie it at 2-2. David Williams and Harris both reached on errors, and a single by Patrick Langley scored Williams.

But Bethel came back with three in the fifth to put the game away. Paul reached on an error and Stallings walked. Lovick doubled in Paul, and a hit by Dawson scored Stallings and Lovick.

Power and Williams each had two for Bethel, while Hudson and Harris had two hits each for Greenville.

The Knights, now 4-5, play host to Calvary Academy on Monday.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Championship Auto Racing Teams organization, which last week threatened to withhold all of its entries from the Indianapolis 500, now will have to fight to get its biggest names into the $1 million May 27 classic.

The U.S. Auto Club rejected six of CART's Indy entries Friday, saying that they comprised the "nucleus of a concerted effort to be harmful to auto racing...more specifically, to USAC and the Indianapolis Motor Speedway."

Pat Patrick, president of CART and head of one of the six racing teams, said the USAC action was designed to destroy CART and vowed to continue the battle.

He did not say what steps CART would take. CART broke away from USAC late last year in a dispute over control of championship racing. CART wanted equal voice with USAC in making and enforcing its rules.

Last week, as the deadline for the entry for the 500 approached, CART threatened to boycott the race and stage another $1 million race on the same day. USAC and the Speedway refused to back down, and Patrick submitted 44 CART entries two days before the deadline.

The week-long standoff ended Friday when USAC notified the six CART teams that their combined 19 entries had been rejected because they were "not in good standing with USAC."

The six CART teams own the cars driven by Al and Bobby Unser, Johnny Rutherford and Gordon Johncock, all former Indy 500 winners, plus Rick Mears, Mike Mosley and Steve Krisiloff.

USAC's Paul Reinhard said the action was "not taken to be vindictive. We didn't take the action against the whole (CART) group. Each case was judged separately. The board felt that these six people had been taking action that was not good for racing in general, the Speedway and USAC."

The CART teams affected were Penske Racing Inc., of Reading, Pa.; Patrick Racing Team Inc., of Indianapolis; Team McLaren, Ltd. of Livonia, Mich.; Fletcher Racing Team of Phoenix, Ariz.; Chaparral Racing Ltd. of Midland, Texas; and Dan Gurney and Teddy Yip of Santa Ana, Calif.

All of the CART owners and drivers were in Atlanta for practice and qualifications for a CART-sanctioned race on Sunday.

Patrick, in a prepared statement following a CART meeting there Friday night, said he was "disappointed at USAC's latest action," which he said "rejects the efforts of these six teams through many years of helping to build motor racing to what it is today."

"It shows complete disregard for the fans who have purchased tickets," Patrick continued. "It shows complete disregard for the sponsors who have helped make the Indianapolis 500 the great sporting spectacle it is today."

Greene Central Dumps Cougars

PINETOPS — Greene Central's Rams remained unbeaten in the Eastern Carolina baseball ranks with a 13-6 win over Southwest Edgecombe Friday.

The Rams scored two in the top of the first to take the lead with Al Murray getting one of the runs with a triple, and scoring the other himself.

Bruce Rhodes tied it up in the bottom of the inning with a two-run single, but the Rams went back out in front, this time for good, with three in the second.

Murray provided two more with a two-run homer in the fourth, and the Rams added two more in the fifth before getting four in the sixth. Relief pitcher Jerry Goff had a two-run homer in the sixth.

The win gives the Rams a 10-5 overall record and an 8-0 conference mark.

They are idle until Friday, when they travel to Farmville Central.

Bullets Get Win

PANTEGO — Jamesville High School's girls' softball team rolled to an 11-5 victory over Pantego Friday evening.

Jamesville took the lead for good with two runs in the first and added three in the second, one in the third and four in the fourth before getting one last one in the seventh.

Pantego picked up one in the second and four in the third.

Sylvia Hardison hurled the victory while Kelly Hardison paced the Lady Bullet hitting with two. M. Adams and D. Rhodes each had two hits for Pantego.

Jamesville is now 4-2 and travels to Bear Grass on Monday.

Orioles Don't Like Caldwell's Dirty Looks

BY KEN RAPPOPORT
 AP Sports Writer

Mike Caldwell stares at batters after they hit home runs off him because "he likes to remember them." Now he'll have good reason to remember Ken Singleton — and not only for what he did, but what he said.

Not only did Singleton blast a tie-breaking homer off the Milwaukee pitcher in the fifth inning Friday night to lead the Baltimore Orioles to a 6-3 triumph, he also applied a needle:

"He sure must remember a lot of guys," said Singleton after hearing of Caldwell's practice.

The pitcher had an explanation for his sharp looks. "I do it for three reasons," said the Milwaukee pitcher. "I make sure the batter touches every base, I want to remember who hit the ball and I don't want to just stand out on the mound and sulk."

Caldwell's dirty looks have stirred up a fuss among the Orioles — who had complained when the pitcher did the same thing after an Eddie Murray home run last week in Milwaukee.

"Kenny (Singleton) gave me a vicious look like I was going to jump him or something, and that's OK," said Caldwell. "Maybe he'll think I'm going to throw at him next time."

In other American League action, the California Angels defeated the Oakland A's 7-4; the New York Yankees defeated the Texas Rangers 5-3; the Boston Red Sox stopped the Kansas City Royals 9-2; the Detroit Tigers beat the Toronto Blue Jays 7-2 and the Chicago White Sox turned back the Cleveland Indians 4-2 in 10 innings. The Seattle-Minnesota game was postponed because of cold weather.

Angels 7, A's 4
 Rod Carew had three hits and drove in two runs and Willie Mays Aikens blasted a home run to lead California over Oakland, the Angels' ninth straight victory. The Angels sewed it up with a three-run fifth keyed by Carew's RBI single.

Yankees 5, Rangers 3
 Thurman Munson hit a pair of run-scoring singles and Ed Figueroa and Dick Tidrow combined on a four-hitter to pace New York over Texas. Sensational fielding plays by third baseman Graig Nettles and center fielder Mickey Rivers helped Figueroa spin a no-hitter until Al Oliver drilled a run-scoring double in the sixth.

Red Sox 9, Royals 2
 Carl Yastrzemski drove in three runs with his 386th career homer, a single and a double to lead Boston over Kansas City. Yastrzemski, who will be 40 in August, also drew an intentional walk as the Red Sox gained the victory behind the stout relief pitching of Andy Hassler.

Tigers 7, Blue Jays 2
 Detroit's Milt Wilcox celebrated his 29th birthday with a six-hitter and got plenty of hitting support while coasting past Toronto. Lou Whitaker blasted a leadoff homer in the Detroit third and teammate Mark Wagner unloaded a three-run shot in the sixth off ex-Tiger Dave Lemaczkyk.

White Sox 4, Indians 2
 Claudell Washington's 10th-inning single sent pinch-runner Harry Chappas racing home and Cleveland catcher Ron Pruitt missed the tag at the plate, breaking a tie and leading Chicago over Cleveland.

Bertie In 3-2 Win

WINDSOR — Bertie High School pushed over a run in the tenth inning to nip Williamston, 3-2, in a girls' softball game yesterday.

Williamston and Bertie both scored single runs in the first and fourth innings for a 1-1 and a 2-2 deadlock. That was finally broken in the tenth when Amy Russell hit a bases-loaded sacrifice fly to score the winning run.

Mary Lou Hoggard got the victory. Wadsworth, White and Cobb each had two hits for Bertie, while Sharon Speller, JoAnna Lilley and Sherri Singleton each had a pair for Williamston.

Williamston is now 5-3 overall and plays host to Ahoskie on Tuesday.

FARMVILLE — A public meeting on the proposed construction of the U.S. 264 connector East of Farmville is scheduled for May 8.

N.C. Department of Transportation staff members will receive comments and answer questions on the proposed 3.4 mile long project connecting the existing U.S. 264 by-pass at Farmville to the proposed U.S. 264 freeway, from 2 p.m. until 9 p.m. in the Colonial Room at the East Federal Savings and Loan building here.

The project was approved by the State Board of Transportation in March as part of the Wilson-Greenville freeway project.

Further information concerning the proposed connector may be secured from T. L. Waters, manager of the Planning and Research Branch, Division of Highways, N.C. DOT, P.O. Box 25201, Raleigh, N.C. 27611.

Dr. Sheps Will Keynote Forum

RALEIGH — Dr. Cecil Sheps of Chapel Hill will be the keynote speaker at the Annual Forum of the North Carolina Conference for Social Service Tuesday, April 24, at the Raleigh Woman's Club.

Dr. Sheps is currently professor of Social Medicine in the University of North Carolina School of Medicine and served for six years as University Vice Chancellor for Health Services prior to his return to teaching in 1977.

"Issues of the Eighties" will be the topic of the annual conference, with afternoon workshops sessions on such topics as in-home services for older adults and proposed revisions to the Juvenile Justice Code.

Dr. John R. Ball, of the Allied Health and Social Professions Department of East Carolina University, is a member of the Conference's Board of Directors.

NCAE Meeting Wednesday

There will be a NCAE countywide teachers' meeting Wednesday, April 25, 4:15 p.m., at Wellcome Middle School.

Pitt County Schools Assistant Superintendent and Director of Curriculum and Pupil Personnel Kathryn Lewis will discuss curriculum Bernard Haselrig, PCS Assistant Superintendent and Title One Director, will discuss the Title One program, while Leck Keeter, Assistant Superintendent and Personnel Director, will discuss longevity.

The second session will feature a NCAE delegate report by Ms. Arlene Murphy, with nominations and voting for N. E. A. county delegates.

UNC-TV Network Meeting Here

Representatives from the UNC-TV Network will hold a public meeting at the Ramada Inn in Greenville at 2 p.m. Wednesday, April 25.

Interested persons will be provided an opportunity to learn how to get better reception of WUNK-TV, Channel 25, and to ask questions about the statewide public television network.

Dr. George Bair, director of Educational Television, will chair a panel of network personnel that will include Alan MacIntyre, director of engineering, Mary Leaver, director of Audience Services, Bob Royster, director of Programming and Operations and Walter Johnson, WUNK engineer.

Named Honor Society Alternate

The director of National Association of Secondary School Principals announces that Paula K. Morris, Rt. 6, and a senior at North Pitt High School, has been named an alternate for the National Honor Society scholarship.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Morris. She is president of the senior class and attended Governor's School in 1978. She is also a cheerleader and president of the school's Honor Society.

Environmental Poetry

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — At the poetic urging of state Rep. Nancie Fadeley, Oregon lawmakers have voted to require that state-owned vehicles be fueled by gasohol as soon as it becomes economically feasible.

The lawmakers voted 48-3 Friday to require at least 10 percent of the fuel be either ethanol or methanol combined with gasoline.

Ethanol and methanol are produced from processed wood wastes, potatoes, corn, grain, sugar beets and other organic materials.

Ms. Fadeley bolstered her argument with the following verse:

"Fill 'er up with garbage
Fill 'er up with slash
Fill 'er up with spuds and grain
And save our country's cash.

We can even use our sewage
To brew our gasohol
And in August and September
We'll add tons of grass-seed straw.

There's a moral in this message
When all is said and done:
Why should we buy from OPEC

PLAN YOUR HOME

Cozy Design Maximizes Space

TWO BEDROOM PLAN IDEAL STARTER HOME

By Jerry Bishop

For the small family that needs no more than two bedrooms, the Brookhill shows a design that blends cozy comfort with a wise use of space. In only 1043 sq. ft. of living area, the plan fashions two bedrooms and bath as well as a kitchen and laundry combination, living room, and family room.

An attractive addition to any neighborhood, the Brookhill boasts an exterior trimmed in brick, with decorative gables that add interest to the roof. An overhang shields the entry porch from weather and helps guard the front-facing living room from the glare of the sun.

An entry is partitioned alongside the living room and coat closet placed at one end. This arrangement welcomes guests and at the same time detours muddy footprints directly to the family room beyond.

Measuring a full 16 by 14, the living room opts for formality, with natural light provided by the small-paned front window. At rear, the family room answers the need of active children. It is large and furnished with built-in storage and garage entry. Sliding glass doors to the terrace link indoor and outdoor space as well as serving to visually enlarge the room.

For effortless food preparation, the adjacent corridor

Kitchen is ready to serve the family room or terrace. The open planning concept used here is especially useful if there are young children to be supervised. The terrace, too, is a natural choice for children's play.

The kitchen is edged by a laundry area and storage closet, and, for convenience, a broom closet is included. Additional storage is offered in the double garage.

Sleeping space is reached from the living room and is set at right of living areas. Two closets bedrooms are cleaved by a full bath, and a linen closet is tucked in the hallway.

For small families or as a starter home, the Brookhill offers a wealth of living space in its 1043 sq. ft. area.

Q. — I have been given a second-hand, portable, saber saw. It is in good condition and seems to work very well. I really don't know how I did without one all these years. However, I am having some difficulty cutting perfectly round circles. Is there some knack to this?

A. — Not especially. Just buy a circle-cutting attachment.

Q. — In buying a house, I noticed while shopping around that some houses which seemed far less livable than others were priced much higher. Since I had never looked at older houses before with the intention of purchasing one, I was somewhat surprised. Is there some way to determine why such unexplainable differences exist?

A. — In nearly all cases, when a house appears to be, as you put it, "less livable" than others yet has a higher price, it is because of the neighborhood. An old house, greatly in need of repair, may cost far more in one neighborhood than a new house of comparable size in another. Many persons seeking a different residence will confine their house hunting to a single, particular neighborhood because they decided ahead of time, for whatever reason, that they wanted to live there.

Q. — After pricing some new bedroom bureaus, we decided to bring an old one upstairs from the basement and refinish it. It is very dirty and messy. If we clean it with denatured alcohol, as a neighbor suggests, can we then go ahead with a varnish remover or will the alcohol react with the chemical in the remover? And, of course, are we correct in using denatured alcohol in the first place?

A. — Denatured alcohol is often used for that purpose. I recall using it myself years ago and following it with a varnish remover — without any bad effects. If the remover is of the flammable or volatile type, try to use it outdoors. If not, be sure there is complete ventilation and no pilot lights or other flames in the area. Better yet, use one of the types that are less likely to cause trouble indoors. To back up a bit, it is often advisable to wash the old furniture with some lukewarm water and a mild detergent, rinsing it and drying it quickly and thoroughly before using the alcohol.

Sometimes Treasures To Be Found In The Dumps

By BARBARA BASLER
AP Newsfeatures
 Dorothy Parker is never happier than when she is down in the dumps.
 That's because Mrs. Parker has decorated her whole house with items found in the dump, under the garbage and on the sidewalks.

And in her new book, "Ms. Pinchpenny's Guide to Interior Decorating," Mrs. Parker shows the reader how the old, the broken and the obsolete can be turned into useful, even tasteful treasures.

While Mrs. Parker is a firm believer in old materials, she has little use for old, clichéd gimmicks. Putting candles in chianti bottles and turning wooden coffee mills into lamps is not her idea of the innovative use of discards.

"These 'conversions' are just other forms of hackneyed triteness," her book maintains.

"Sometimes," she warns, "even the scavenger" or do-it-yourselfer lacks imagination in his decoration. He uses everything he finds or makes precisely as it is intended."

In the Parker home, then, that coffee grinder may end up as a coat-hook, while those candles stand in old coils of wire or blocks of cork.

If those ideas seem odd, they don't stand out in the Parker guide — not in a book where a section of picket fence serves as a headboard, a plastic dish-drainer holds office files, and a welcome mat serves as a bathroom rug.

"If you want to become an amateur interior designer on a tight budget, loosen up your notion of what things are for," the guide advises.

And remember, the book adds, you can change not only the function of a piece of junk but also the junk itself. Don't pass up an item just because it doesn't fit your decorating scheme perfectly. Remember that color, finish or covering can be changed, and most damage can be repaired.

Indeed, according to Mrs. Parker, the damage to cast-offs is often minimal. She says Americans have an odd, even disturbing propensity for throwing away furniture and knick-knacks with only one piece missing, "and the piece is usually not all that vital or irreplaceable."

A perfectly good upholstered chair, for example, may be put out for the trashman simply because it lacks one four-inch leg, which is no big project to replace, she points out.

Of course, useful items may be found not only in your neighbor's trash, but in your own, as well, the guide says. An old bedspread may become new curtains, and an aged tablecloth can be turned into pillowcases or a mattress cover for a baby's bed.

And for Mrs. Parker herself, "a length of burnt-orange twill has been a cape, a pillow sham, a blouse, and, finally, a collection of pot holders."

The guide teaches that ingenuity may be used not only to create but to camouflage, and so for Mrs. Parker, an imperfection is an invitation. For instance, if floorboards are rotted in one spot, rather than putting down a new floor, pull up the rotted section. Next sink a window box or metal trough into the hole. Either of these can be used to hold plants or a collection of shells and rocks, the guide advises.

In her book, Mrs. Parker tells the reader how to apply a scavenger's skills to furnish, decorate and maintain every room in the house. Additionally, each chapter is sprinkled with how-to guides that teach the reader to build everything from a bunk bed to a sofa.

And, of course, if the reader wants to know how to make a chair out of a pickle barrel, or a lamp out of two cinders, the step-by-step instructions are here.

Answers Timely
Gardening Questions

Q. Each year I plant a row of spinach and each year it goes to seed. What am I doing wrong? (Mrs. L.H., Rocky Mount)

A. You are most likely waiting too late to plant it. Spinach is a cool season crop, and it will go to seed after the weather warms up. Spinach should be planted in early March in the Rocky Mount area. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Q. The soil around my new house is mostly clay. What can I do to make it suitable for roses? (G.C., Durham)

A. Roses must have good drainage. You can improve the condition of your soil by adding sand and organic matter or topsoil. But the most important thing you can do is to set your roses on a mound that is several inches higher than the surrounding soil. After mounding, mulch with four to six inches of pine straw. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. Could you tell me how to treat my mimosa tree for webworm infestation? (M.K., Chapel Hill)

A. Always try to use a "mechanical" method first in controlling webworms and other leaf-feeding insects, such as bagworms and tent caterpillars. Try to disrupt the web with a long pole. Pull it down if possible and destroy it. Pesticides — Orthene, Sevin and diazinon — are available to control webworms but they are not easy to use. You must be able to get the pesticide spray inside the web where the worms are. Unfortunately, there are no systemic-type pesticides that can be applied to the soil in order to control worms in the leaves. (Jim Baker, extension entomologist)

Q. Worms get into my cantaloupes. Is there any way that I can stop them? (T.V., Hickory)

A. Your problem most likely is the pickleworm, which attacks cantaloupes, squash and cucumbers. The worms develop from eggs which are laid in the blossoms. Spray at weekly intervals with Sevin, beginning about the first of July. Follow directions on the Sevin container. Wait until late afternoon or until bees have stopped working each day before spraying. (Ken Sorensen, extension entomologist)

Greenville Observes Volunteer Week

The week of April 22-28 is National Volunteer Week and locally, Mayor Percy R. Cox has proclaimed this time as Greenville Volunteer Week.

"Anyone, young or old, rich or poor, can be a volunteer and reap the rich rewards that come from doing for others as well as from improving one's own skills and widening one's horizons," Mayor Cox comments in his proclamation.

Noting that the City of Greenville "has instituted a special office, Volunteer Greenville, to facilitate the placement of volunteers so that their time and efforts can best be given," Mayor Cox adds "I urge that all citizens of our City observe this week by calling Volunteer Greenville and pledging to devote a few hours each week and more, if possible, give aid to some needy individual or cause."

The Greenville Volunteer Office is located at 2000 Cedar Lane and the program coordinator is Mrs. Nancy Harrington. The number to call is 752-4137, extension 262.

Americans have long been noted for their concern for fellow citizens, and in recent years this has become expressed in a more organized manner to better channel volunteer efforts into a pattern to fit the growing complexity of life styles.

In the nation's early history, voluntary efforts were made primarily in exchange of manpower — for helping neighbors build houses and barns, harvest crops, and tend the sick.

In more recent history, the focus has been on volunteer acts to lend a helping hand to the sick, the elderly, the handicapped, and the lonely, in efforts to make life for people with special needs a little easier.

not been impressed by the "let someone else do it" syndrome," Mrs. Harrington commented. "They are people who care, and are willing to make that little extra effort to do something for their neighbors and their community."

College To Hold Forums

KINSTON — "Human Values and Economic Realities" will be the topic of three forums to be hosted by Lenoir Community College, April 24, May 1 and May 8. All sessions will be held in the LCC auditorium at 8 p.m.

The program will be assisted by a grant from the North Carolina Humanities Committee, a program of the National Endowment for the Humanities.

The April 24 session will deal with the topic on the national level, with speakers Dr. Harry West of North Carolina State University and Dr. John Agresto of the National Humanities Center, Research Triangle Park. The two speakers will explore the conflict between American values and economic problems on the national level.

A representative of the Bureau of Human Rights, Washington, D. C. and Frank Gaskill, product superintendent, E. I. duPont de Nemours, Kinston, will speak on the broadened topic on the international level on May 1.

The May 7 session will feature Dr. C. E. Daye of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and Dr. Helen Crisp, Department of Human Resources, Raleigh, speaking on the resolution of values on the local level.

The forum is the sixth in a continuing series of programs hosted by LCC.

Todd Scholarship Fund Has Reached $20,000

ECU News Bureau
The Richard Cecil Todd and Claudia Pennock Todd Scholarship fund at East Carolina University has reached a $20,000 milestone.

Dr. Todd, a retired professor of history at ECU, and his wife annually match funds for the scholarship raised by Tau Chapter of Phi Sigma Pi national honor fraternity. This year, Tau chapter raised $1,220 and checks from the fraternity and the Todds were presented to the ECU Foundation which administers the scholarship fund account. The latest contributions raise the account total to $20,000.

Interest drawn from the account is presented annually to two members of the fraternity. To qualify, the students must exemplify the fraternity's standards of scholarship, leadership and fellowship.

Phi Sigma Pi is East Carolina University's oldest fraternal organization and has been consistently recognized as the most outstanding chapter in the nation. It was founded by Dr. Todd in 1950.

Bobby Christiansen of Greensboro is the chapter's Todd Scholarship chairman.

PROCLAIMS GRANGE WEEK

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Hunt has proclaimed the week of April 24-28 as "Grange Week" in North Carolina in honor of the state organization's 50th anniversary.

Appointed To Travel Program

Mrs. Carrie Oakley, a medical-social counselor with the Pitt County Schools, has been appointed by the American Institute for Foreign Study to accompany a group of students on a travel program abroad.

According to Mrs. Oakley, there are places still available in the group and interested students or parents may contact her at 2541 Memorial Dr., Greenville, for more information.

Court Suits Seek Unite Adopted Child, Mother

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Joyce Anderson was just 16 when she "got in trouble," as they said in those days. Joyce quit her job in Evansville, Ind., and returned to Albuquerque, N.M.

On May 27, when she was 17, Joyce gave birth to a girl, an infant she would cradle ever so briefly. It was 1947 then, and adoption seemed her only option. But she knew that someday she would try to find her daughter. She chose the name Sandra Iline, figuring an unusual middle name might help.

Her baby was just six months old when Joyce began the search, a search that would take her 31 years and require the help of an adoptee registry — a clearing house adopted children and natural parents can write to with all the information they have and hope the person they are seeking has done the same.

The half-dozen or so registries in the United States are the newest tool available to adoptees in search of their roots. Although some were started in the early 1970s, they are just now beginning to work as volume increases. Many of the nation's 5 million adoptees are getting more vocal in demanding the right to know their parentage — a right that state laws and adoption agencies traditionally denied.

An estimated 170 adoptee activist groups operate today — but only a few nationwide. A newspaper called Adoption Format & Digest is being published, legislatures are being asked to change the laws, books and studies are pouring out and the courts are being asked if adoptees have a constitutional right to records that may tell them who gave them life. A conference is scheduled early next month in Washington to discuss the many issues.

Joyce Anderson's search had been futile until she read about Adoptee's Liberty Movement Association (ALMA) and its national registry. She had tried the channels and hit closed doors and sealed records.

Joyce had moved to California, but she always felt her Sandra Iline was still in Albuquerque. She spent $3,000 on private investigators, considered getting a job in the records department and several times thought of taking a front-page ad in the Albuquerque newspaper.

Joyce had married twice, bore another daughter, opened a real estate business in Mission Viejo. Life was pretty good.

But each year on May 27 she wondered if a special little girl was loved. Was she getting a nice birthday present? Sometimes, she even wondered: Was she still alive?

A year passed after Joyce registered with ALMA. Nothing.

Then a young woman in Albuquerque, a woman now named Pam Bell, read about the registry. She was searching for her mother.

"I couldn't imagine how they could find my mother. Then, I thought, I had already spent over $1,000 on long distance calls and attorney fees, what's another $25?" She dropped it in the mail.

Two weeks later, Reg Niles, a genealogist and ALMA staff member, was catching up on registrations, cross-filing information onto 3-by-5 index cards. Everything clicked.

"We've got a match," he told Florence Fisher, ALMA president.

Ms. Fisher called Albuquerque and told Pam Bell that her mother was now named Joyce Lee Santiago, that she lived in Mission Viejo, and, yes, she was looking for her daughter.

Mrs. Santiago was at work that afternoon when the phone rang and a voice she had last heard as an infant's cry said: "This is Pam Bell. You may know me better as Sandra Iline."

The issue of an adoptee's right to know runs directly into the right to privacy. Records are sealed so the paths of the natural parents and adoptive parents don't cross. Some mothers want to forget their past. Some adoptees are perfectly content not to know. But what about the children who are not?

Jean Paton pioneered adoptive activism in 1954 when she founded Orphan Voyage in Cedaredge, Colo., but Florence Fisher, who founded ALMA in 1971, popularized the movement. She wrote a book about her own 20-year quest, "The Search for Anna Fisher." She told anyone who would listen that the adopted child, once an adult, has a constitutional right to know his beginnings.

She was told she was neurotic to care so strongly about whose genes she was carrying, that she was undermining the whole adoption system.

She continued to speak. As other activist groups sprung up, stories of reunions began to appear in newspapers.

People began to listen. The two largest groups are the New York-based ALMA, with 32 chapters in 30 states, and Yesterday's Children, based in Evanston, Ill., and led by Donna Cullom, also an adoptee.

Yesterday's Children filed the first major lawsuit in 1975, contending that it was unconstitutional to deny adoptees knowledge of their roots. The suit, filed in federal court, was relegated to the state courts and lost but is now on appeal.

ALMA filed in 1977 and also lost but managed to stay in the federal courts. Oral arguments were made before a three-judge federal appeals court on March 19. A ruling is pending.

ALMA started keeping files on members in 1971. The first match was in 1973 and since then, ALMA says, there have been more than 200.

"We are starting to average one a week. Recently, we got two in one night. Anyone can say he has a registry, but we have the volume to make it work," Ms. Fisher says. ALMA has more than 140,000 names on file — mostly adoptees, but mothers, fathers, grandparents and siblings also have written.

Niles, the genealogist, spends four hours a night at ALMA headquarters poring over letters and forms and another 12 hours on weekends.

Besides the obvious information — name, date, birthplace — Niles has such entries as "crooked little finger at birth," "dumped out of car by two men," "left under stairway."

All of the cross-indexing is necessary since an adoptee frequently has only partial, or perhaps erroneous, information. The registry promises nothing. Both parties must enter before it will work and, even then, they may enter years apart.

Recently, an increasing number of fathers have joined, many searching for illegitimate children. "We have some well-known names in that file," says Niles.

Tracers Company of America, a detective agency that specializes in missing persons, recently started a registry and says it has about 100,000 names on file. Yesterday's Children says it has 12,000 names, and International Soundex Registry in Carson City, Nev., says it has about 6,000 names but soon will have more when some 62 activist groups begin funneling into it.

Soundex, headed by Emma Vilardi, is free; Tracers charges $25 and ALMA and Yesterday's Children charge $25 to register and annual membership fees of $20 and $25, respectively.

Most of the registries are non-profit, self-help groups, but Ed Goldfader, president of Tra-cers, says he's a professional who's in it for profit.

Yesterday's Children and ALMA have financial problems stemming from court costs and, in the case of Yesterday's Children, lobbying of the Illinois Legislature.

Many adoptive parents resent the searches.

One young woman who found her birth mother said her adoptive mother took it as a personal rejection. "I had to convince her I was not looking for a mother."

Cyril C. Means Jr., a New York Law School professor and attorney for ALMA's class-action suit, says there's no state today where adoptees can legally get all three crucial documents: birth certificate, court record, adoption agency record. Records should remain sealed only until an adoptee comes of age, he says. After that, they discriminate against adoptees by denying them knowledge of their identity, depriving them of medical information and by creating a danger of unwitting incest.

Running Is Fun For Fernando Puente

By REBECCA BUFFALO

Reflector Staff Writer

For Fernando Puente, running eight to ten miles a day is enjoyment, not a chore. That frame of mind came in handy when the 25-year old ECU medical student recently participated in the 83rd Boston Marathon. More than 7,800 qualifiers, 517 of them women, tried to cover the 26 miles and 385 yards which comprise the marathon course.

Puente, a native of Central America, has been running since 1968, including in his experience a stint with the Flushing, N. Y. High School track team. However, Tony, as he's known to his friends, was too busy to participate in other organized track events during his undergraduate studies in biology at ECU.

"I'm just a fun runner," says Puente of his avocation.

"I just run whenever I feel like it. I don't want any pressure on me to run."

Puente has run in races in Lynchburg, Va. and Charleston, W. Va., and has completed marathons in Washington, D. C., and New York City. He used his time of two hours and 48 minutes from Washington, D. C. to qualify in the Boston event.

The two months before the Boston race, Puente averaged approximately 100 miles a week to serve as training. He alternated weeks of long, slow running with fast speed-work and roadwork to increase his stamina for those famous Boston hills.

"We left Friday and got to Boston Saturday," said Puente. "My wife, Carol, and I rode around Sunday night so I could get the feel of the course."

However, Puente did not run any Friday, Saturday or Sunday. His only plan of attack was to eat a "lot of carbohydrates" and turn in at 11 p.m. Sunday to make the 8:30 a.m. Monday bus which would carry participants to beginning of the course.

"I was really excited Monday," said Puente. "I couldn't believe I was there."

When the starting gun went off, Puente found himself with all the other runners, each trying to make his/her own room to run. Puente, like many others, paced his running for the first ten to 15 miles to save energy for the hilly section of the course.

"I was feeling really good when I hit the hills," Puente remembers. "I was so psyched up, they really didn't bother me that much."

According to Puente, the drizzling, 40 degree weather was "perfect for me." He finished the course in two hours and 43 minutes. Bill Rodgers broke his own record to win the Marathon again with a finishing time of two hours, nine minutes and 27 seconds.

The Boston event was the last such race that Puente will compete in, due to his studies as a second-year medical student at East Carolina University.

However, Puente won't quit running. He and his wife, Carol, a teacher at Sam Bundy School, Farmville, both run, she averaging around six miles, with Puente doing a daily allotment of eight to ten miles.

What does Puente suggest for a runner interested in going toward distance running?

"Just take it step by step, and build up slowly," he explained. "But most important, let running be an enjoyment, not a job."

Appeals For Red Cross

Andy Warren, chairman of the Pitt Chapter of the American Red Cross, issued an appeal to area citizens to make a contribution to the Red Cross disaster relief fund.

Warren said the national agency has indicated that the tornadoes and floods that have struck 12 of the midwest, southern and southwestern states over the past two weeks have resulted in the Red Cross depleting its disaster budget for 1978-79.

According to Warren, disaster expenses incurred nationwide by the Red Cross for the July 1 of 1978 to April 1 of this year period total some $13.8 million. Estimated expenses in Texas, Mississippi and other states struck by disasters will total another $3.5 million.

Warren noted that national figures indicate that the budget for 1978-79 was $15.3 million, creating an over-expenditure situation as a result of the recent disasters.

The chapter spokesman said that citizens wishing to make a contribution should contact the local Red Cross office at 752-4222 or mail donations in care of the Pitt Red Cross.

Initiated Into Phi Beta Kappa

CHAPEL HILL — Five Pitt County students were initiated Thursday into the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, the nation's highest scholastic honorary society.

Mitchell Kyle Barnes, Virginia Lynn Gantt and Susan Anne Pacenta, all of Greenville, were inducted during the Thursday ceremonies. Robert Joel Dunn of Winterville and Anthony Glenn Carraway of Grifton were also initiated.

Countywide Picnic Friday

The Pitt County Farm Bureau, in observance of Farm Bureau Day, is sponsoring a county-wide picnic at 7:30 p.m. Friday, April 27.

A program and entertainment will be held following the picnic. The events will be held at the Farm Bureau Building, 264 By-pass.

Interested people should call the Farm Bureau Office, 756-3165, by Tuesday for additional information.

Test-Tube Breakthrough In The World Of Truffles

SAINT MAIXANT, France (UPI) — "Man has measured the skies, discovered vehicles, invented the steam engine, but he still cannot make a truffle grow," lamented the cookbook, "Dictionnaire de Cuisine", in 1836.

That is no longer true. After 20 years of research, government agronomist Jean Grente has developed a test tube truffle that may revive France's ailing industry and delight gourmets and gourmands with money enough to afford what many call "black diamonds."

Truffles are the fruit of an underground mushroom. French truffles are brownish-black, pungent, lumpy fungi that grow naturally next to the roots of oak, birch, hazel or linden trees in lime-rich soil.

They range in size from golf ball to grapefruit. They taste of roots and earth. Slices are eaten raw with buttered bread and in salads or cooked in meats, sauces or pates or between the skin and flesh of chicken.

Gourmets have searched since Roman times for ways to raise truffles domestically.

Now Grente has succeeded, but he said his new method probably will not lower the astronomical prices significantly because "there is so much demand."

Raw truffles sold in France this year for 1,200 francs a kilogram (about $300 for 2.2 pounds) and up.

A New York City specialty shop advertised them for about $25 an ounce.

"But our new system can raise production, so more can be sold," Grente said in an interview. He is head of the plant pathology station at France's National Institute of Agronomic Research in Clermont-Ferrand.

The institute announced the success of Grente's experiments after a farmer in central France harvested 20 truffles from beneath pre-seeded oak trees bought from the Lalanne Nursery, licensed by the institute to grow and sell seedlings.

The first pre-seeded trees began producing within four years, compared to 15-20 years in nature.

The nursery now has five greenhouses of year-old trees. At least one million must be planted to give France the 250 tons of truffles annually it needs for canning, plus restaurants and consumers with the income to afford the raw variety. The Grente team's first experiments in planting cultures next to oak trees "rarely worked because the soil is full of bacteria and insects which rejected the spores," he said.

They then sterilized the soil and planted truffle spores and seedling trees. A fuzzy mass developed, connecting the tree roots with the spores and growing "like a marriage," Grente said.

The test tube truffle was a timely development. The 1978-79 harvest was the smallest in recorded French history — about 15 tons, compared with the 50-ton postwar average, and 2,000 tons in the 19th century.

Truffle production in France has dropped several times. Once during World War I, when farmers went into military service without telling their wives how to tend truffled trees. The men kept the knowledge secret so they could sell the fungi without bringing home the money.

Production also dropped when France redeveloped forests after World War II. Truffles in pates then were more likely slivers of black olive or even old rubber. "There has been some fraud," Grente said.

Pate de foie gras (liver paste) used to contain 5 to 10 percent truffles and meat sauces, 5 percent. Now the ratio is 1 percent.

The tastiest, most expensive truffle is the black variety of France's Perigord region. It was thought to have aphrodisiac qualities and was served to kings so they would have children.

A Perigord restaurant that has truffles baked in coals on its menu had none to serve during the past November-February season.

"Truffles are scarce and the price is terrible," the restaurateur said. "This dish used to be about 50 francs ($12). This year it would have cost double."

So she served a salad of cabbage, carrots, chicken and slices of canned truffle instead.

To make up for the gap she added a cheaper French specialty that never suffers a shortage: chocolate "truffles," balls of solid chocolate rolled in cocoa powder to imitate the earth clinging to the real thing. France has no plans at the moment to export its domesticated truffles.

Grente said the nation is not against sharing the secret "but a financial agreement would have to be negotiated. And it's not just a matter of buying the plants, but in tending them." And in the Perigord region, Jean Rebiere, president of the 1,500-member Dordogne Truffle Growers' Syndicate, said he and his friends have planted dozens of the pre-truffled trees. He has harvested a few truffles, he added, and, "We are making comparative tests."

TRUFFLES — To some gourmets, truffles are a gastronomic delight beyond words and very nearly beyond price. In Todaro Bros. food store (New York), the handful of truffles weigh about one pound. French black truffles have been selling for $20 an ounce, the Italian whites go for $22.50 an ounce. The 3-ounce jar sells for $61.95. (UPI Photo)

Research In U.S. Isn't Promising

By ROBERTA ULRICH CORVALLIS, Ore. (UPI) — To some gourmets, truffles are an almost mystic experience, a gastronomic delight beyond words and very nearly beyond price.

To Edward J. Trione, an Oregon State University professor and botanist, truffles are just another fungus that should be subject to scientific breeding and commercial growing as mushrooms are.

Trione's attitude won OSU a $35,000 grant from a pair of Santa Rosa, Calif., bankers who want to adapt high-quality truffles to West Coast conditions and speed up their growth.

A truffle is the fruit of a fungus that grows on tree roots. It provides nutrients for the tree and the tree provides nutrients for the fungus.

In an interview, Trione said the project began when Henry Trione (no relation) and Ralph Stone of Santa Rosa ate truffles during a trip to Europe. When they returned home, they started looking for truffles in America.

"Although truffles are reported in the United States, there are none of high gourmet quality," banker Trione said. So the two Californians set up a conference, complete with a hefty supply of the $400-a-pound delicacy. They invited half-a-dozen speakers, including the professor.

Then they gave OSU the grant for two years of research.

Tom Michaels, a graduate student in botany, was the principal researcher, with advice from Trione and another professor, James Trappe.

With less than a year remaining of the grant period, Trione is hoping for a renewal because, he said, "We haven't made as much progress as we had hoped."

He is convinced that development of a high quality truffle is "a realistic goal that can be accomplished."

The professor is aware of the recently announced French accomplishment: test tube spores grown in a laboratory and transplanted to tree seedlings. He said OSU's aim is to produce large numbers of spores that would grow truffles much faster than the French have been able to do. With their pre-seeded trees, the French have cut production time from 15-20 years in the wild to four years for domesticated ones.

The OSU team is also trying to develop a truffle that will grow on native trees such as filberts.

"We approached the filbert growers and asked them how they'd like to pick hazel nuts off the top and truffles off the bottom," Trione said.

Reading Device For The Blind Now Available

READING MACHINE—Martha Klingelhafer, a teacher at the DeVeaux School in Toledo, Ohio, works with student Scott Parker, who is learning to use an Optacon, a machine furnished by the U.S. Office of Education, which allows persons with sight problems to read printed material.

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Students in a program for the visually impaired at DeVeaux School are learning to use a machine that lets them read virtually everything a sighted person can read.

The system is based on type ordinarily used and is not related to Braille — a system of raised dots that translate to letters and words.

The machine uses a tiny camera-like device that activates a small bed of rods as it scans printed material. The students read by feeling the rods vibrate. For practice reading purposes the machine projects the letters and words onto a visual screen for the teacher.

The machine, called Optacon, is provided by the U.S. Office of Education for teachers who attend a workshop on its use. The machine is also supplied to visually handicapped persons who learn to use it.

To the untrained "reader," the machine makes a buzz which causes a tingling in the fingertip. But to a blind or partially sighted person with a keen sense of touch it opens a new world by allowing him to read printed material through patterns made by the vibrating rods.

DeVeaux, a school at the University of Toledo, has two machines because two teachers attended a workshop on its use last summer.

The teachers, Judy Mascho and Martha Klingelhafer, say a student should be able to read Braille before starting to learn to use the machine. They said that although the letters were different, the learning techniques would be the same for each approach.

In the case of a totally blind person, they said mastery of the system required that the standard alphabet be learned first.

Mrs. Mascho said the machine could operate at up to 80 words a minute or as slow as six words a minute.

"But if they get to 20 to 30 they'll be doing well," Mrs. Mascho said.

Two students started learning to use the equipment as soon as it was delivered in late October. The teachers say it may take a year of study before they qualify for their own machines, which are valued at about $3,000 apiece.

The two teachers say the Optacon equipment will not replace the Braille system of reading since it would require carrying the machinery around. It is also believed that not all persons can learn the system. Mrs. Mascho said the system could be used as a supplement where Braille is not readily available.

She also said it helped teachers present certain kinds of material, such as mathematical charts and tables that are difficult to use with blind children.

Business Notes

LOAN OFFICER

John Finch, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Finch of Greenville, has begun duties as loan officer of Home Savings and Loan Association of Washington (N.C.), according to Thomas A. Vann, president.

Vann said that Finch will assist in the overall administration of the association, with direct responsibility for the lending functions and overall administration of the Loan Department.

Finch, a graduate of East Carolina University, was employed by Branch Banking and Trust Co. prior to joining the Washington firm. He is married to the former Pamela Kaye Turnage of Greenville.

NAME CHANGE

Joe Johnson, manager of the Jewel Box at 410 Evans Street here, announced that effective April 23, the name of the store will be changed from Jewel Box to Carlyle & Co.

Johnson, noting that the store has been in operation for 25 years, said that management will continue to operate the store with the same staff and all existing Jewel Box charge accounts and layaways will be honored as usual.

Carlyle & Co. and Jewel Box are part of a multi-store group of retail jewelers founded in 1922, it was mentioned. The company now operates stores from New Hampshire to Texas, including locations in Raleigh, Durham, Charlotte, Goldsboro, Kinston, Greensboro, Winston-Salem and Fayetteville.

CASH DIVIDEND

The board of directors of First Union Corp. declared the regular quarterly cash dividend of 23 cents a share, payable June 15 to shareholders of record May 15.

First Union, whose principal subsidiaries are First Union National Bank and Cameron-Brown Co., operates a bank in Farmville.

SALES CAMPAIGN

Home Security Life Insurance Co. announced that five members of its Greenville staff were winners in the company's annual vacation special sales campaign.

Winning vacations at Myrtle Beach were Effie Corbett, sales manager, and sales agents Shirley Miller and Jerry Leonard. Ron Crisp and Bob Braxton received gift certificates as winners on other levels of the campaign.

Campaign qualifiers were required to rank in the top 50 in the company, it was noted.

FIRST VIEWING

Ann Finley, owner-manager of Advertising Exhibits Studio announced that the firm's first set of completed ads is ready for viewing.

The owner reported that the ads will appear on both of the company's viewing machines, located at the Pipeline Restaurant and at the Pitt-Greenville Airport.

GAINS REPORTED

Planters National Bank's income before securities transactions for the first quarter of 1979 totaled $184,977, a 35.9 percent increase over the year earlier period.

James B. Powers, PNB chairman and president, said that net income for the period was $790,407, up 33.7 percent over the $591,146 reported for the first quarter of 1978.

Powers said that Planters' record first quarter performance follows the most successful earnings year in the bank's history. In 1978, Planters' earnings per share before securities transactions were $2.93, up 25.8 percent from 1977. Net income showed a 23.2 percent growth, with a $2.87 per share figure.

32ND YEAR

J. Alfred Smith, service manager with Smith Electric Co. at 415 Evans Street, recently celebrated his 32nd year with the company, according to W. S. Corbett, who recently purchased the firm.

Corbett commended Smith, who has attended various White Westinghouse service schools, for his service record during his tenure with the company since April 13, 1947.

Corbett said that Smith Electric Co. has been in continuous operation here since 1918. The firm, he added, offers the White Westinghouse line of home appliances and also services any other major brand of appliance.

CREDIT FELL

According to weekly figures released by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, bank credit at 19 large commercial banks in the Fifth District fell $240,889,000 in the week ended April 11, lowering bank credit outstanding to a level of $28,110,114,000.

Total loans, adjusted — total loans exclusive of loans to other banks — declined $332,240,000, while total investments expanded to $91,351,000.

Private demand deposits grew $158,410,000, while time and savings deposits, exclusive of accounts in excess of $100,000, rose $28,570,000. Negotiable Certificates of Deposit and other large time deposits declined $17,632,000.

Included in the Fifth District are North Carolina, Virginia, South Carolina, Maryland, the District of Columbia, and most of West Virginia.

NEW BUSINESS

The opening of the Greenville office of Arts Specialty Advertising at 200 E. Greenville Boulevard was announced by Jane Brown, owner.

Mrs. Brown, who noted that the firm is a subsidiary of Arts Specialty Advertising of Raleigh, said that the business represents some 68 different companies and offers over 10,000 items through catalog custom ordering.

The owner added that the firm offers items ranging from toys and restaurant accessories to items for industry and business to use in advertising purposes or for schools and clubs to use in fund raising.

She added that her husband, Whit Brown, is a partner in the firm, which operates Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m.

SEMINAR PLANNED

McMahan, Forbes and Co. announced that it will conduct a one-day seminar in Raleigh on Wednesday for the company's clients, which include East Federal Savings and Loan Association of Kinston.

The Raleigh consulting firm said that the purpose of the seminar is to provide technical information on providing and marketing tax-advantaged savings programs such as pension and profit-sharing plans, individual retirement accounts, Keogh plans, governmental deferred compensation and other tax-advantaged products.

East Federal has an office in Greenville.

ROOM DIVIDER SCREEN. . . is used in the family home in the mountains and was quilted in 24 different designs by Mrs. Clemens, who also uses it as a teaching tool in her basic quilting classes.

Quilting Began Long Ago—Custom Lives On

"Quilts were given for marriages and births. In grandmother's day, a young girl was expected to start married life with at least 13 quilts — 12 were to be practical and used for everyday, the 13th was for show, beautiful, impractical and usually done by the bride herself to advertise her talents. They were called wedding quilts," said Mrs. Kay Clemens of Greenville, who teaches quilting.

In discussing the history of quilts, Mrs. Clemens continued, "The oldest 'living' example of quilting is a trio of quilts made in Sicily about 1392. They are made in raised quilting or trapunto with a very intricate design. Knights in shining armor wore quilted vests and padding underneath.

"Quilted garments and coverlets were used mainly for warmth in northern Europe. By the 17th and 18th centuries, quilting was enjoying a heyday in Europe and was in fashion on everything from underwear to upholstery. American colonists brought with them only a few samples of quilted art, but they had many memories and made their quilts from homegrown flax and wool from their sheep. This combination of linen and wool became known as linsey-woolsey. These early coverlets were either white or dyed deep colors using the dyes of nature."

As the country grew to the west, patterns went along and many new ones were born. Today there are over 7,000 patterns and some of these may have as many as six different names and some as many as six different varieties including baby blocks or six point star, grandmother's flower garden, cherry basket, astor, eight point star, drunkard's path, sun bonnet Sue, nine patch, grandmother's fan, stamp basket, pin wheel, block in block, maple leaf, orange peel, log cabin, etc.

"Calico prints were the most popular after cotton came along and is still the most popular fabric among the purist quilter today, but it's harder to find. Flour and feed bags were made of cotton prints and grabbed up by the women as soon they they were empty because they had a usable print.

"By the start of the 20th century, most quilts were pieced on the sewing machine. With the increase of mass production in industry, the popularity of hand-made quilts began to dwindle. Women found more to occupy their time than sit at home and stitch. Quilts and blankets could be bought cheaply in the stores. From World War II until the late 1960s and early 1970s, there was a lull but now there is a rebirth in hand quilting with many new ideas for wall hangings and garments," commented Mrs. Clemens.

Mrs. Clemens has a collection of quilts made by her grandmother, who made over 60 that were divided among her family. "It wasn't until the resurgence of quilting when I realized the value of my heritage."

Mrs. Clemens gave a recent demonstration on lap quilting at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office. She teaches a class in lap quilting, co-sponsored by Pitt Technical Institute and the Greenville Recreation-Parks Department. She recently started a class in basic quilting in her home.

Mrs. Clemens started taking classes locally after moving here from Florida. She is the mother of five children and her husband, Donald, teaches at East Carolina University.

"When organizing my time, I place my family and church work first and then my hobbies. Quilting is number one, but I also enjoy studying nature, music and sewing, which I do for my children.

"I don't have a favorite pattern — whatever I am working on is my favorite. There are no set rules in quilting — whatever you like is right for you," she concluded.

Text And Photos By Rosalie Trotman

BEAR PAW PATTERN. . . quilt is being made by Mrs. Clemens as a graduation gift for her daughter, Peggy. Here she is adding the border to the quilt which is made with 1,910 pieces. Mrs. Clemens is assisted by another daughter, Becky.

Barbara Walters: 'Happier Without The Anchor Spot'

By JOAN HANAUER
UPI Television Writer
NEW YORK (UPI) — Barbara Walters is the first woman to be a former network news anchor.

She's never been busier or happier — except when she reads occasional premature reports of her professional demise.

And the ABC World News, which now has an all-male troika of anchors and Barbara Walters as an unclassified whatchamacallit, has never enjoyed higher ratings — primarily at the expense of the NBC Nightly News, her old network.

It was just three years ago this month that Miss Walters, then the reigning monarch of morning television on NBC's "Today" show, decided to abdicate and join Harry Reasoner at ABC, to become the first woman anchor on a nighttime network news show.

The decision touched off a flurry of publicity about her $1 million contract, and about Reasoner's hostility. Rumors about her demands for hairdressers and limousines masked the fact that Miss Walters has always been one of the hardest-working people in broadcast news.

Last June Boone Arledge, ABC's new president of news and sports, restructured the show in an attempt to find a competitive format. Miss Walters retired from the anchor spot with a sigh of relief. Looking back on her two-year anchor ordeal she said in an interview:

"The first year was just such hell. I realize now there wasn't any possibility of our succeeding under those circumstances.

"I really had no idea how strongly Harry felt. He had told that to everybody but it had not been communicated to me — nor should it have been. I know it sounds crazy, but I'm the opposite of paranoid — I never took anything Harry said personally; I understood his pain. "By the end of the second year, Harry and I had settled into a mellow relationship of almost sympathy for each other.

"It's funny — he came back here to see someone the day it was announced that Patty Hearst's sentence was commuted. I got the first interview with her and Harry sent a message up that said, 'Good job.' I thought, Oh, where were you when I needed you!"

Other problems that first year included a lack of direction for the show, and the fact that ABC had fewer affiliates than the other networks and therefore fewer viewers and lower ratings.

The second year Miss Walters considered a time of consolidation. Looking back at the anchor spot she said:

"I'll tell you what an anchor is and what an anchor isn't, because it has certain inherent rights. When Boone changed the format of the World News, he said we're not going to have anchors — we're going to put these men out into the field.

"It just simply doesn't work. Everybody can't be in the field all the time. Somebody has to be the glue of the program. And there are all those stories that you can't do in the field. So what happens to us now is that we have three anchors, which in some ways is terrific and in some ways has its own problems. And we have me.

"An anchor is a very handy title, and it's still the title that has the connotation of being the head of the program. And the anchor also never has to worry about what he's going to do that night because he can come in and it'll be written for him. He can write it himself if he wants to, but he doesn't have to. It's an enormous relief."

Now Miss Walters appears on "Issues and Answers" eight times a year, appears several times a week on the World News, with interviews and with reporter's notebook background reports, does at least four specials a year, which get excellent Nielsen ratings — and tears around the world following the news for the big interviews that have become her trademark.

"What I find difficult is to be constantly self-creating, getting the idea, getting the guest. Every day you have to kill another giant. Each story takes so much time. To do 2½ minutes can take an entire day to edit. And there's all the homework."

She is amused to find Walter Cronkite and John Chancellor coming out from behind their anchor desks to follow her. She says her competition literally followed her to Morocco when she was trying for an interview with the deposed Shah of Iran and she had to take a vacation trip to Paris to throw them off the track. Then she doubled back to Morocco and interviewed the Shah.

Her schedule can be killing — one week recently on Sunday she interviewed Israeli foreign minister Moshe Dayan on "Issues and Answers," on Monday she joined Frank Reynolds in covering the signing of the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty, did the only interview Egyptian President Anwar Sadat granted on his trip to Washington and that night covered the state dinner. Tuesday she did the only interview granted by Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin. Wednesday she returned to New York to conduct a satellite interview with King Hussein of Jordan and Friday she appeared on the World News with a Middle East reporter's notebook.

The following week she was preparing to leave for California to work on her May special on the people who make you laugh and smile — George Burns, Mary Tyler Moore, Rob Reiner and Penny Marshall, and Richard Pryor.

"You can't keep up that pace," she said, but added then every time she tried to cut down, she read reports (Continued on page C-2)

Seamstress Strives To Please

By JOYCE EVANS

For more than a decade, Hattie Moore Simms has sewn for people from the Greenville and East Carolina University community.

Despite a bout with polio at three years old, she has become a professional seamstress.

Many children died with polio during this time, but Hattie survived. "I believe the Lord pulled me through," she said. An occasional smile or soft laughter is very much a part of Hattie.

With braces on both legs and crutches, she has made the most of her life. But Hattie admits she often wonders what her life would've been like had she not had polio. "Maybe I would've been . . ." she said, listing several occupations that interest her.

She did not allow her handicap to keep her from achieving a goal. She entered first grade at six years old like other first graders and her school years were good in terms of academic ability.

She became interested in home economics during high school, especially sewing. "That's probably because sewing came really easy for me," she added. She won a medal in home economics and graduated from high school in 1959.

To fulfill a dream, she entered A & T University at Greensboro and majored in tailoring. The Vocational Rehabilitation office provided her tuition and fees.

Hattie completed the first year of college and started the second year, then dropped out because of bad weather conditions. "There were several big snows and I couldn't get out. When I finally came home, I never went back," she said. She now lives with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Moore, in Ayden.

Then in 1962, Vocational Rehabilitation purchased her a sewing machine with button-hole making attachment. She makes every effort to improve her craft. "It's a thing I do for a living, but I really like to do it. Pleasing the customer and pleasing myself are important," she added.

"She sews well and people asked me where I bought outfits that she had made for me," said Betty Boyd, an East Carolina University staff member, is a former customer of Hattie's.

"Where'd you get that pretty outfit?," asked a friend at a party. "Hattie made it," the other lady replied.

Traveling is foreign to Hattie, but she knows much about various geographical areas. This she attributes to avid reading.

Referring to her college days, she remembers that life for the handicapped person was not good then. "I ran into a lot of architectural barriers at school. They're more considerate of the handicapped now. They (college advisors) did arrange classes for me on first floor," she remembered.

When asked if she faced other problems relating to society during her earlier years, she said things are worse now. Earlier people were curious but they never made fun of her. But now, some adults make unkind remarks and constantly remind her that she's handicapped even though she couldn't forget, according to Hattie. "I know persons with handicapped children and they tell me their children are treated badly by other children," she added.

In a yellow composition book, Hattie keeps a record of all her customers. She records measurements for the entire body to assure a perfect fit.

Hattie's reputation rests solidly on her effort to acquire a professional look for the garments she sews. Word-of-mouth among friends, family and business acquaintances is publicity for her work.

PLEASING THE CUSTOMER. . . and Ayden seamstress, Hattie Moore Simms.

Hominy Casserole Salad
Ambrosia Coffee

HOMINY CASSEROLE
Easy and foolproof.
16-ounce can white or golden hominy
1/2 cup regular hominy grits
1 teaspoon salt
4 ounces sharp cheddar cheese, shredded medium-fine
4-ounce can or jar pimiento, drained and slivered

Drain hominy and reserve; add enough water to the hominy liquid to make 2 cups; bring to a boil. Stir in grits and salt; simmer, covered, until thickened and liquid is absorbed — about 10 minutes. Remove from heat. Stir in reserved hominy, about 3/4 of the cheese and the pimiento. Turn into a buttered round 1-quart casserole (about 6 1/2 by 2 1/2 inches). Sprinkle with remaining cheese. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until bubbling hot — 25 to 30 minutes. Let stand at room temperature for 10 minutes or so before serving. Makes 4 to 6 servings. Adapted from "The Flavor of the South" by Jeanne A. Voltz (Double-day).

Barbara Walters...

that her career was slumping. "If I'm not on every night, I read about fast-fading Barbara Walters, now that she's no longer an anchor."

"My problem is that I'm too busy and I find it too much."

"What do I give up? I don't want to give up 'Issues and Answers' — 'Issues and Answers' enables me to do the longer interviews. I can't give up the specials — don't want to. I don't want to give up our own instant specials, the big interviews. Maybe the answer is not to be on the news so much."

"Then I have to face the fact that there are people who will say, 'Ah-ha, she's not on tonight.'"

She describes herself as "much happier" to be without the anchor spot, but she's admittedly overly sensitive about the anchor situation.

"I get very upset when I read, 'Ah-ha, she's not anchoring, therefore she hasn't made it, and maybe some other woman will come along and anchor and show her.' Well, boy, I hope so. I hope there will be another woman anchoring, but I won't feel that means I didn't make it, any more than if Tom Snyder were to take over the 'Today' show or the evening news, it would mean the guys before him were no good."

Miss Walters feels she must overcome her thin skin, do less and take whatever comment comes along. One reason is her personal life.

"I went to my child's school this morning," Miss Walters, who has been a divorcee for some years, explained. "I was away when she had her midterm report. She's 10 and needs help with her homework. Her teachers complain that she doesn't watch the news and that she's less well informed than a lot of kids. Why doesn't she watch the news? Because Mommy's not home the way most mommies and daddys are, sitting and watching the news. I'm not there to watch it with her and she's a little embarrassed by me. I think I want to be home a little more."

Miss Walters used to gripe about the early morning hours on the 'Today' show, but at least that was a regular schedule.

"I now go out very little," she said. "There used to be a time when I would go because I was so pleased to be invited, and because I thought it was a good way to keep up one's contacts. You're not born with contacts and I didn't inherit them."

"Now when I'm in New York, I'm home almost every night."

The television news star pays a price for her fame and fortune — willingly but wistfully, as she said:

"I don't see friends, and I miss that — I really do. I miss never having that kind of lunch or an hour to go shopping. I love to talk on the phone and I don't have time."

"I like all the things that are supposed to be very shallow. I'm very lazy — compulsive, but lazy. If I didn't work, I would sleep late, eat a lot, see my friends, gossip, shop. I don't do any of that. I think if there's anything I miss the most, it's to have a day in which I get up and say, I've got nothing to do today."

do today."

Would she consider remarrying? Miss Walters, whose escort lately has been Columbia Pictures chief Sy Weintraub, repeated the question musingly and replied, "I'm not getting married this week. Until recently I would automatically have said no. Most women in this business are not married — it's very tough for a man. I just would have said it would have been too hard."

"I don't say that now because I've come a long way. I've been divorced for quite a while. I'm not a kid anymore and I probably wouldn't have the kind of husband you have when you're 20 and both of you do the housework. But I think if I did get married, knowing what it takes to make a marriage work — I would have to make some major decisions in my career."

Lucky Number For Runaways

1979 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Because I read in your column about that toll-free number, which allows runaway kids to call and let their parents know they are OK, I re-established contact with my parents, went home and had the most wonderful Easter in my life. (I'm a 19-year-old boy who dropped out of school and hit the road 15 months ago.)

Will you please run that item again, Abby?

LUCKY IN ILLINOIS

DEAR LUCKY: With pleasure: Runaways, dial 800-231-6946. An operator will telephone your parents anywhere in the U.S. and convey a message from you. ("I'm alive, don't worry about me" is typical.)

There will be no lecturing or counseling. Your call will not be traced, and the only question asked of you will be: "Do you need anything?" If you do, you'll be told where you can obtain it free. No attempt will be made to bring you home, regardless of your age.

Runaways, please forget the past and call that toll-free number now. Let somebody know you are alive. You will sleep better tonight, and so will they.

P.S. This wonderful program originated in Texas and has been adopted by 37 states! It's staffed by volunteers, including some grateful runaways who have come home.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "NAMELESS IN EVANSVILLE, IND.": You are mistaken, sir. To quote Harry Bridges: "No man was every born a Jew-hater, and Negro-hater or any other kind of hater. Nature refuses to be involved in such suicidal practices."

The teen years are the questioning years. Abby has the answers to all your questions in her booklet, "What Teenagers Want to Know." Enclose $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope.

GOLDEN CHICKEN

A variation of a popular recipe.

3 to 3½-pound frying chicken
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
10¾-ounce can condensed golden mushroom soup, undiluted ½ cup dry white wine mixed with ¼ cup water
¼ teaspoon sugar
Cut up chicken so there are 2 legs, 2 thighs, 2 wings, 2 breast halves; use bony pack parts for stock. In a 10-inch skillet in the hot oil, thoroughly brown chicken; remove. Tip the skillet and with the tip of a tablespoon, carefully skim off excess fat. Add the soup and ¼ cup of the wine mixture to the skillet; over low heat with a wooden spoon, stir to get up drippings; replace chicken in skillet. Cover and simmer, shaking pan and lifting chicken occasionally to keep from sticking, until tender — about 30 minutes. Remove chicken to warm serving platter; stir remaining wine mixture and sugar into sauce; reheat and pour over chicken. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Case Of Missing Sugar Box

By CECILY BROWNSTONE,
Associated Press Food Editor

A recipe for a special pound cake has been reposing in my files for years. It was given to me by my friend, the late Elsie Masterton.

Elsie did the cooking for the Vermont inn she and her husband owned as well as for a restaurant on the Florida Keys which they ran for a few seasons. It was at the Florida restaurant that I tasted her special pound cake. It had just been baked and looked handsome on a dessert cart, its golden-brown exterior sprinkled with confectioners' sugar. Elsie offered it with strawberries and cream.

Since this was a recipe Elsie had never included in any of the cookbooks she wrote, she scribbled it down for me: "Cream 3 sticks margarine, 1 box powdered sugar. Add 6 eggs. Fill powdered sugar box with flour. Little lemon and vanilla. Bake in spring form. 350 degrees — 1 hour."

By the time I got around to trying the recipe, the makers of the sugar Elsie used had changed the dimensions of the box in which it had previously been packaged. The empty box was no longer an accurate measure for the flour. A friend gave me a similar recipe with flour measurement by the cup, but it didn't produce a cake like Elsie's. Recently I got the urge to work on Elsie's original recipe. After baking the cake a couple of times —varying the cup measurement of flour and using an electric mixer — we solved the case of the missing sugar box. The following recipe is the result and, if memory serves, produces a cake close to Elsie's.

SUGAR-BOX POUND CAKE
1½ cups (3 one-quarter pound sticks) butter or margarine, at room temperature
1-pound box confectioners' sugar
6 large eggs
2½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon vanilla
1 tablespoon lemon juice

In large bowl of electric mixer thoroughly beat butter. Gradually beat in confectioners' sugar until mixture is light and fluffy. At medium speed beat in eggs, one at a time, for 1 minute after each addition; beat in flour, in about 4 additions, until blended each time. Beat in vanilla and lemon juice. Turn into a greased and floured 10-inch angelcake pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 1 hour. Place cake in pan on rack to cool for about 5 minutes; loosen edges and turn out on rack; leave bottom side up and cool completely. Thinly slice the cake the first day it is baked and serve "as is" or with fruit. After storage the cake will be drier, so cut the slices fairly thick, toast and

German Clubs Have Anniversary

The 50th anniversary ball of the German Clubs of Greenville was staged Saturday evening at Keel's Warehouse. Music for the black tie dinner-dance was provided by the Duke Ellington orchestra, directed by Mercer Ellington.

"The Junior and Senior Clubs host a joint dance during the year and they started making plans for this event two years ago," said Mrs. I. J. Edwards Jr., president of the senior club.

German is the word for an elaborate kind of dance and eastern North Carolina has demonstrated the meaning going back to the June Germans held in warehouses in Rocky Mount for numerous years. After several couples had enjoyed a good time at one of these dances, they started considering forming a German Club in Greenville.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Hannah, one of the couples at the party, were instrumental in getting the charter group to form a ladies membership German Club in the late 1920's. "We didn't keep many written minutes then, we just had a wonderful time planning the dances, having the preceding supper parties and dancing to good music," said Mrs. Graham Flanagan Sr.

The women met for the first meeting at the home of Mrs. J. B. James and it is thought she was the first president. Charter members attending last night were Mrs. Joseph Bowen, Mrs. S. M. Crisp, Mrs. J. S. Ficklen, Mrs. Flanagan, Mrs. Hannah, Mrs. Walter Harrington, Mrs. J. B. Kittrell Sr., Mrs. T. I. Wagner and Mrs. Ruth Whichard.

Approximately 35 past presidents were also there. "A Greenville group, either husband or wife was native to the area, began the German Club. As Greenville attracted an increasing number of newcomers, the membership was increased. After consideration, it was concluded the most effective way was to divide the club into two groups according to age, the seniors and juniors. Each club has two separate dinner-dances and one joint dance a year; therefore it's appropriate the two clubs celebrate the 50th year with a gala ball," added Mrs. W. S. Corbitt Jr.

Mrs. Charles Stevens and Mrs. William Monroe, senior and junior members respectively served as overall ball co-chairmen. They were assisted by the following:

Guests lists: Mrs. William Hudson, Mrs. David Whichard, Mrs. Dave Middleton and Mrs. Norwood Whitehurst; Reservations, Mrs. W. W. Brown, Mrs. George Coffman, Mrs. William Brewer and Mrs. John Winstead Jr.; Music, Mrs. Charles Gaskins, Mrs. Harold Thomas and Mrs. Laurence Perkins; Program, Mrs. Edwards and Mrs. Fred Mattox; Warehouse, Mrs. Ed Warren and Mrs. Roger Mann; Refreshments, Mrs. Ed Turcotte, Mrs. Howard Waldrop, Mrs. Beverly Reid and Mrs. Eric Fearrington; Publicity, Mrs. W. S. Corbitt Jr.; Decorations, Mrs. J. Knott Proctor Jr., Mrs. Sam White, Mrs. Frank Layne, Mrs. Al Ferguson, Mrs. Jack Whichard, Mrs. Percy Pair, Mrs. Gene Lanier, Mrs. Andy Warren, Mrs. Joe Davis, Mrs. Donald Taylor and Mrs. Leon Moore.

Current officers of the clubs are: President, Mrs. Edwards, Vice President, Mrs. Stevens; Secretary, Mrs. W. H. Watson; and Treasurer, Mrs. Reid Hooper, seniors.

Juniors, President, Mrs. Mattox, Vice President, Mrs. Monroe, Secretary, Mrs. Walter Perkins, and Treasurer, Mrs. Richard Evans.

Rome-Milan Fashion In Forefront

By JOANNE WINSHIP
MILAN (UPI) — Italian fashion has come a long way since the 1950s when the shows were all in Florence and the industry was completely unorganized.

All this was changed in 1962 with the formation of the Camera Nazionale dell'Alta Moda Italiana (National Council of Italian High Fashion) by the designers themselves who support the organization with annual dues.

Since the advent of the Camera, the annual fashion couture shows have shifted to Rome and ready-to-wear found its home in Milan. According to Mario Goracci, secretary-general of the Camera, some 52 houses had formal shows here last month during the six days of the semi-annual market week, while countless lesser houses showed informally in hotel rooms or showrooms.

"Membership tripled since the Camera's inception and is growing every year," Goracci said.

Italian fashion has assumed in recent years a position of importance equal to Paris. Retailers from as far away as Hong Kong, Japan, Australia and Hawaii come to Milan the last week in March for the fall-winter showings and the first week in October for the spring-summer showings. Many of these buyers continue on to seasonal showings in London, Paris and New York, but Milan is first.

The functions of the Camera are many and varied — from protecting the interests of the designers to deciding the dates and schedules of the shows. For this, they work closely with the Chambre Syndicale in Paris, French fashion's similar organization. Between them they determine the dates for the rest of the international fashion world to follow.

Members of the Camera include designers of women's and men's clothes, shirts, shoes, handbags, scarves and all sorts of accessories. However, only those who manufacture in Italy are eligible to belong. Foreign designers may belong if they produce and manufacture in Italy, such as New York's Geoffrey Beene and Tokyo's Issey Miyake.

The Camera prepares the show calendars, the lists of every house whether they show formally or not, and supplies the names and addresses and complete and accurate schedules and locations for each collection. It issues identification and accreditation cards that must be carried by retailers and press.

It secures show invitations, which are mandatory, for those accredited that don't know the designers personally, and it informs the designers and houses of the names of all stores and buyers from all over the world, as well as lists of every journalist and photographer and his or her affiliation.

It is also the clearing house for every conceivable problem that may arise for both designers and clients.

The Camera has priority with the hotel rooms, and in the past few years of political unrest in Italy, has forced the hotels — especially the Principe e Savoia and the Palace, where many of the shows are held — to double the number of security guards during the week of shows. Both city and government officials have cooperated with the Camera by supplying special emergency police called Pant-era (Panthers) who are stationed in front of the hotels and other locations where shows are held.

Can you believe it? It's only been a month since I last saw "The Wizard of Oz" on television and already I am having withdrawal symptoms.

I see the Tin Man's face in every oil can, the Yellow Brick Road in my kitchen wax build-up, and the Wicked Witch in every store where I am trying to cash a check with only one ID.

Since "The Wizard of Oz" was filmed in 1939, it has been on television 21 times. Do you know what that means? It means Dorothy's clothes have come back into style six times and are currently "in" again.

I take nothing away from the mystical land of Oz. It is a beautiful children's story that should be seen by generations for years to come.

I am only saying that after nearly a quarter of a century of viewing it, you get a little strange.

The first time I saw the movie, I was beside myself with the horror of the tornado hitting Dorothy's simple farmhouse in Kansas. How I shrieked and screamed in suspense when I saw her little bed turn and spiral toward the unknown.

By the eighth time I had seen it, I was able to ignore Dorothy's screams that the sky is falling in around her and, in fact, left the room to check a cake of yeast in the refrigerator to see if it had expired.

By the 16th time I saw "The Wizard of Oz," I did a curious thing. I actually applauded when the tornado sucked up Toto and yelled to the Wicked Witch, "Go for it!" I don't know why I did that.

My kids have a polite way of putting it. They say I am "over the rainbow," no longer have a childlike faith in goodness, or want to see anything from 1939 that looks better than I do.

That just isn't true. I love the classics and hope they'll be with us for a long time. But somehow, I dread the day when "Gone with the Wind" is being shown for the 97th time and as I watch Melanie writhe in the pain of childbirth while Atlanta is under siege, I yell at the set, "You think you got troubles now, Bunkie, wait until that ride in the buckboard back to Tara!"

I'll know the magic is gone.

The 28th annual Secretaries Week is being observed today through Saturday. Secretaries Day has been set for Wednesday. The week is sponsored by the National Secretaries Association (International). Events to mark the occasion have been planned locally by the Greenville

Mrs. Mollie Weaver

Chapter of NSA, according to Nila Bland, member of the Secretaries Week Committee.

A tea is planned for today and a luncheon will be held at the Greenville Country Club at 12:30 p.m. Wednesday. Approximately 200 secretaries and their bosses are expected to attend.

The luncheon speaker will be Mrs. Mollie Weaver, CPS, C.A.M. of Greensboro. She is 1978 graduate of the University of Richmond, summa cum laude, and was inducted into Phi Alpha Theta, Eta Sigma Phi and Phi Beta Kappa. Mrs. Weaver became a Certified Professional Secretary in 1963 and a Certified Administrative Manager in 1976. She has served as president of the Greensboro Chapter and president of the North Carolina Division of NSA. She was international coordinator of the Future Secretaries Department from 1972-75.

The National Secretaries Association (International) is a professional organization of secretaries, whose purpose is to elevate the standards of the secretarial profession. The Greenville Chapter was organized in 1973. Members have the opportunity for continued education through NSA sponsored courses and workshops.

The local chapter sponsors a Future Secretaries Association Chapter at Pitt Technical Institute and a Certified Professional Secretary program.

The NSA's sponsorship of Secretaries Week is two-fold: to remind secretaries of their responsibilities to their profession and to bring recognition to secretaries for their role in various professions.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, APRIL 22, 1979

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The morning is no time to make changes or to get involved in any legal or restricting matters or conditions from the past. The remainder of the day and evening finds you in a charged electric atmosphere when you are able to raise your level of activities to a new high.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You do not find it easy to gain your aims in the morning, but later all goes smoothly. Listen to what a good adviser has to suggest and follow the best ideas.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You have things to do so postpone social fun with friends until afternoon. A group meeting in the evening is also good, so be sure to attend. Arrive on time and don't stay out too late.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Do nothing that can jeopardize the esteem of a good friend in the morning; later you gain benefits from this person. Plan how to expand where your work is concerned.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Straighten out some past problem and then seek out new worthwhile interests. You can make fine acquaintances after lunch.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Good day to get into reports and statements and iron out any errors in them. Plan to improve your credit rating in some way.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) An annoying partner is best contacted in the afternoon when the aspects are better for reaching better understanding. Situation arises in the morning that can be best handled later in the day.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You find it hard to get going on some unfinished work. Don't worry about this lackadaisical feeling as it soon passes.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Handle any obligations you may have early and then out for recreation. Any creative work you started can now be completed easily.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Do nothing that will disturb the accord at home. You can entertain at home with good results in the evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Take care you do not irk a friend in the morning. Drive with care and get much done. Avoid one who has ulterior motives.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You could make mistakes where money is concerned if you don't become alert early in the day. Study property and see where any repairs are needed. Plan to make them soon.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Use optimism otherwise you look at the world with a jaundiced eye and could be most unhappy. Get personal affairs in order and then get about socially and lift your spirits.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, APR. 23, 1979

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day and evening when you have considerable charm and magnetic radiation, and you can make rapid progress toward gaining your goals in life. A good time to make plans for the future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Contact those from whom you want support to gain your desired goals. The evening can be most ideal with the one you love.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Good day for sociability, so contact good friends early and set up appointments to see them. Take no risks with your money.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Fine day for civic work that could be helpful to you and others in your community. Gain the favor of influential person and get ahead.

Silenced By Marconi Death

WASHINGTON (AP) — Guglielmo Marconi, inventor of the wireless, was only 21 when he discovered messages could be transmitted without the use of wires.

One of Marconi's life objectives was to create a system of communications capable of operating with complete reliability from any point on earth, according to IPO, Inc., a non-profit group dedicated to preserving the patent system.

When Marconi died in 1937, wireless stations throughout the world closed for two minutes.

Filed Papers On Birth Of Son

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Mark Hill, an attorney, has chronicled the birth of his new baby boy in typical lawyer fashion — by filing legal papers.

An unusual "Notice of Arrival" was filed in the office of Tarrant County Clerk Madrin Huffman, announcing the birth of James Kilgore Hill.

The papers, which will be permanently on file with the county clerk's office, give details about the baby's birth.

"At 8 pounds, 1½ ounces, he's heavy enough, for sports or play or other stuff — 19½ inches, long and rough," one section reads.

Condominium Craze Is Changing Life In Chicago

By CAROLYN CURIEL
and
ED LION

CHICAGO (UPI) — An urban revolution is blowing across the Windy City that may forever change the face of the nation's second largest metropolis.

It is conversion of rental apartments to condominiums. Recently it has taken on such a frenzied pace some have begun calling the phenomenon "condomania."

"It's among the hottest things in real estate today," said a Chicago real estate expert.

"And the profits can be great." But the squeeze to fork up and buy or move out, on the elderly in particular, has brought cries of anguish and regulatory curbs on the process here and in other cities to which the condo conversion craze is spreading.

The move to conversions has prompted regulatory moves in such cities as New York, Washington, San Francisco and a temporary moratorium in Seattle, industry sources said.

Still, crashing an almost exclusive bastion of cooperatives, one firm has moved to convert a 122-unit building on New York's Park Avenue. And there have been recent condo conversions in Boston, Denver and Miami.

Chicago and Los Angeles are considered the hottest U.S. condo markets. Like Seattle, Houston has had many condo conversions in recent years.

The big bucks — up to 20 percent return on investment — mainly are reaped by condo converters and their syndicates of backers. The developers buy buildings and sell them apartment-by-apartment to residents and other investors.

With the price of condo apartments now appreciating up to 15 percent yearly on the Chicago's hot market, a condo is an A-1 investment for economically stable upper middle-class apartment dwellers.

Apartment building owners like to sell their structures for conversion. While the boom lasts they can make 30 percent more than they would for selling the same building in a non-condo hotspot.

But for others — the elderly and those just making ends meet — conversion can mean domestic terror and a life in limbo.

"Why can't they just leave people alone?" asked one agitated woman as she rode a bus through a high-rise apartment complex about to go to condo. "They (converters) can live up to 100 and not spend all their money."

The pace of condo conversion in Chicago's posh lakefront areas has been steadily increasing the last few years. But this year condos became the talk of the town with an announcement that Sandburg Village, Chicago's largest apartment complex, will be put on the condo market. The announcement of what will be the largest conversion in U.S. real estate history transformed "condomania" into a political hot potato in the middle of the city's mayoral campaign.

With the backing of Jane Byrne, later elected as Chicago's first woman mayor, the council clamped a 40-day moratorium on new conversion plans. And Mrs. Byrne unveiled a tough package of proposals to control the mushrooming phenomena.

A federal judge temporarily blocked the council's action but not before apartment owners acted swiftly. Up and down the lakefront residents found in their mailboxes announcements that their apartments may go condo.

"The condo craze is here and they all tried to beat the moratorium," said a condo-control activist. "Mailboxes were just full of notices of intent."

The first phase of the conversion will involve nearly half of Sandburg's 2,600 high-rise, townhouse and studio units.

"A lot of people just don't know what to do," said Regan Burke from her two-bedroom Sandburg Village apartment. "I'm in such a tizzy, everything's up in the air."

Ms. Burke has filed a class action suit against developers and the city to squelch Sandburg's impending conversion. The suit charges the conversion should be stopped on grounds the complex came about partially with the help of public funds earmarked to foster rental housing.

Some tenants fear if their apartments go condo and they buy, their combined mortgage payments, monthly maintenance assessments and other costs will far outstrip their present rents.

One tenant leader, Marian Strauss, estimated 70 percent of Sandburg's tenants are not inclined to buy. But with the rental squeeze in the area brought about by the conversion, they may be forced to, she said.

"We're worried because we may have no choice," she said. "And I always like to think that a person's home is his castle."

For all the heated opposition, developers and condo backers say the concept of apartment ownership is one of the best medicines for the city. "It's hard to understand what all the uproar is about," said a spokesman for Harold L. Miller, mastermind of the Sandburg conversion. "Condos are a way of life in Europe. It's about time they arrived here."

Miller said the conversion of Sandburg will stabilize and improve the area and he expects the first block of condos to be sold in 60 days. He said about half of the tenants will buy but he would not discuss profits he will reap from it.

Miller recognized the plight of displaced tenants and said he is taking special measures to reduce their numbers. His public relations spokesmen call it "conversion with conscience."

"I asked myself several years ago how would my parents react to it (conversion)?" Miller said. "I realized it would have been a traumatic problem for them. They weren't rich people. My wife and I decided then that any condominium that didn't generate enough profit to help the elderly wasn't worth it."

So Miller plans to set aside 10 percent of Sandburg for rental to the elderly and special hardship cases for another two years.

Another condo czar, Richard Stein, said resident ownership of apartments leads to improved neighborhoods and is a financial shot in the arm for many residents.

"When people own apartments they're kept up nicer. They stabilize the neighborhoods," he said. "Condos have been around since the time of the Greeks. And now their time has come here."

"Regarding ownership it's one of the few ways to keep up with inflation. It's a reliable hedge in these times of rampant inflation."

"There are tax benefits to owning your own apartment too. Later on you have something to show for yourself — because you built up equity."

"In many cases overall its cheaper than rent and you own the apartment. Why should people just keep throwing away rent checks?"

Stein conceded there is the problem of condo victims and "discommodation," but he said the No. 1 enemy is inflation — not condo conversion.

"A lot of people in a time of rampant inflation are going to have to downgrade their housing if they are on fixed income levels," he said. "They couldn't afford higher rents and since landlords often can't make ends meet, rents would be hiked."

Stein doesn't buy the argument people buy condos because they feel caught in a crunch and said the condo is a highly-sought abode.

"We had one apartment with 655 units that sold out in five weeks, mostly to tenants, and there was a long waiting list also from outsiders," Stein said. "No one is holding a gun to anyone's head."

In 1970 only 3,000 units had been converted to condos, compared with 40,000 units today, said Pierre DeVise, University of Illinois housing expert. But that only accounts for 5 percent of the city's units, he said.

"Certainly there's an explosion," he said, "but it still only affects a small percentage of housing in certain prime areas."

DeVise traced Chicago condos to 1964 in Chicago's South Side Hyde Park community.

"They're a method to stabilize neighborhoods. And it was a way to guard against minority influx and keep neighborhoods good for the middle class."

DeVise said now, however, condos are having a different effect on the city.

"Some of the middle class is being squeezed out from the good areas because of them. They will polarize Chicago more — make it more a city of the rich and poor."

"For the most part condos are good for the city, it has helped slow the white flight and stabilize areas."

But he warned of the danger of "overdoing a good thing" by over extending the market to the point condo demand slackens, prices fall and owners have problems selling.

This Sunday Is Their Easter

NEW YORK (AP) — Eastern Orthodox Christians celebrate Easter this Sunday, a week later than the date observed in western churches.

The timing difference results from Orthodox's adherence to a 4th century ecumenical decree by the Council of Nicaea that Easter must always be after the Jewish Passover, which did not end this year until Thursday.

New Interest In Age-Mixing

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Interest is rising in the churches in the educational value of group experiences involving all ages, United Methodist educators report.

A meeting of 32 of them from across the country said church members are increasingly interested in such mixed-ages events as family nights, suppers, picnics, holiday celebrations, joint vacation church school, short-term combined classes, worship, weddings and even funerals.

New Twist For This Passover

NEW YORK (AP) — Passover, which ended Thursday, had a new twist for Jews this year.

While the holiday commemorates their ancient flight from Egypt, this time many Jews are returning to the land of the pharaohs as tourists following the new peace treaty between Israel and Egypt.

The American Jewish Congress, one of various organizations offering tours to Egypt, said 300 people have signed up for tours, the first of which is to depart April 26.

Sees An Advantage In Owning Condominium

By FRED T. FERGUSON

NEW YORK (UPI) — Why are condominium conversions becoming popular and how do they compare with cooperatives?

James Dowden, executive vice president of the Washington-based Community Associations Institute, a trade group of condo developers and owners, first explains the difference between a condo and a coop.

"In a cooperative, you are buying shares in a corporation which owns the building and, by virtue of owning shares, you acquire rights to use a unit and pay your share of the mortgage and maintenance."

"In a condominium, you purchase a unit. You own it outright. And you own a share in everything else that is used by all the people (in the development or building). You actually have a mortgage on your unit. And, by virtue of being an owner, you are a member of an association which maintains the common property and you pay your share of that."

"In a coop, you have one mortgage and — let's say there are 100 units — 100 people are helping to pay off that mortgage."

"In a condo, there are 100 mortgages but no mortgage on the common grounds."

The key advantage of condo's over coops has generally been in financing mortgages although some states, such as California where condo's are big, have recently changed or are considering changes to their laws to facilitate refinancing for coop owners.

"In a condo," Dowden says, "generally, you can take the mortgage for your unit and walk down to a savings and loan association and refinance it. Or you can take out a new mortgage for a new condo, just as if you were the owner of a one-family home."

"You have a coop and you want to sell your unit," Dowden says. "Generally, the buyer has to come up with much more cash and have security to buy your stock. In most states, the lender isn't permitted to take stock as security."

In New York, where there have been many conversions of private apartment buildings to cooperatives but few to condominiums, state law has been more favorable to the cooperative route.

While Dowden finds there is an increase in activity in coops in California as a result of that state's new law permitting lenders to finance resale purchase of coops, he expects the same to apply in reverse for condos in New York.

On behalf of condos, he says there are more significant tax advantages to condo ownership than to coop ownership.

"It's your own mortgage and you have the mortgage interest deduction and the property deduction. In a coop, you have write offs but the amounts are considerably different."

The coop deductions will generally be less, according to Dowden. Because of this and greater ease in refinancing, he says, "If there are two 100-unit identical buildings in Washington, and one is a condo and one a coop, the condo units will tend to sell for a higher price and will generally appreciate faster because they are more marketable."

Jenn-Air's Grill-Range puts the sizzling, outdoor flavor you love into steaks, chops, chicken...

Any meat you prepare on a Jenn-Air tastes better because Jenn-Air's exclusive Char-Flavor grill cooks juicy, outdoor flavor into every bite. Permanent "Flavor Rocks" turn natural juices into curls of smoke that delicately bathe the meat as it grills. Smoke and odors are then quietly whisked away by the powerful built-in surface ventilation system. The result is meat that is golden brown on the outside, tender, hot and juicy on the inside. And, a kitchen that remains clean and fresh! Jenn-Air lets you do a lot more than grilling, too, with an array of deluxe accessories. Love the taste of meat grilled to char-flavored perfection? New San Francisco Mayor Experienced In Gloom

By LIDIA WASOWICZ
SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Dianne Feinstein had only to draw on her personal experiences to lead a city numbed with tragedy out of its gloom.

Few realized it but the poised civic figure in her familiar business suit with a bow tie spoke for herself, too, as she stepped forth last Nov. 29 to announce to a stunned populace that Mayor George Moscone and city Supervisor Harvey Milk had been murdered.

Seven months before, Mrs. Feinstein had lost her husband of 16 years to cancer, the same disease that claimed her father three years earlier. She summoned the same note of carrying on now.

"The spirit of this city is one of promise and hope, of progress, of generosity, of love, tolerance and forgiveness," she said. "If today's vision of the city is clouded and if our spirits are numbed, tomorrow's future can be a bright one."

At the time the city was still reeling from the mass suicide-murders in Guyana of the Rev. Jim Jones' San Francisco-based Peoples Temple followers. With the deaths nine days later of the popular Moscone and Supervisor Milk, a leader of the city's large homosexual community, Mrs. Feinstein, to whom the job of mayor then fell, was the lone public figure with an uplifting word.

It was Moscone's murder — allegedly at the hands of a former colleague on the Board of Supervisors, Dan White — that placed her in the office she had twice vainly sought at the polls. As president of the 11-member governing board, she was first in the line of succession.

She will be the city's first woman mayor at least until January 1980 and if she runs for re-election is given the best chance of winning from among the present crop of likely candidates.

The tragedies, both the city's and her own, proved "very sobering, serious events," she said in an interview spiced with the same optimism with which she rallied her city four months ago.

"I think this is the first time that I've ever seen the city in a mood that does not want political warfare," she said. "I sense wherever I go what people want is a renaissance, a rebirth, a putting back together of government."

Her bright, blue-gray eyes radiating energy, Mrs. Feinstein talked of a "revitalization mission" — both for herself and the city.

As for herself, she confirmed that, at age 45, she will take another husband soon, investment banker Richard Blum, 43, and showed off a sparkling ruby and diamond engagement ring.

No date has been set for the religious ceremony, but it will follow the wedding of her daughter by her first brief marriage to attorney Jack Berman. Katherine Anne, 21, will marry building contractor Scott Morrison in July.

As for the city — and further proof of the bond she envisions between self and job — the watchword of the stamp she hopes to leave is family.

"It's a help to have someone with you; it's a very rewarding thing to have a family."

Likewise, "I'd like to see San Francisco remain an open, tolerant city, a city that has respect for the views of others, a city for families to grow up in. I have a strong belief a city without children can't survive. We need to inject that family-oriented component into our goals."

To do that, the mayor has called for the completion of 300 low-income, "family-oriented" housing units in the southeast part of the city, for "strengthening our residential-commercial strip areas," for new parks.

"We also need to develop more family oriented entertainment in San Francisco so that families have the incentive to fight escalating land costs and remain here because the quality of life remains so rich."

San Francisco has a strong artistic and cultural heritage, the backbone of a city's vibrancy, she said.

"It is rapidly, if it hasn't become already, the No. 1 showplace for art in this country. The opera, ballet and symphony playing to standing-room-only crowds are a sign of a healthy environment."

"But I'd like to see more of the entertainment go back to entertainment which is of interest to families."

The goal of making San Francisco into a family city, she admitted, is of Herculean proportions. She says she has the energy to do it.

"Families, it's true, have left. San Francisco has always been a transient city. We're almost 70 percent renters, and renters by their very nature tend to be transient. Also about 22 percent of our population is above age 60. So the goal has to be to encourage San Francisco to become a place for families."

That, among other things, says the mayor, means supporting and improving the school system.

"We need a system which teaches youngsters reading, writing and arithmetic, which doesn't promote them unless they pass the curriculum and which doesn't graduate them unless they qualify for graduation," she said.

And it means freeing the streets of crime.

"The first thing is to get additional police to the Tenderloin, the second to do something about the inundation of parolees," said Mrs. Feinstein, who upon becoming mayor announced the clean-up of the rundown Tenderloin district would be of top priority.

A Coro Foundation internship set young Dianne's path after her 1955 graduation from Stanford — where she was student body vice president.

She went on to work for the California Industrial Welfare Commission, to serve on the

Van-Pooling By Firm Saves Gallons Of Fuel

By JO-ANNE BYRNE
ST. PAUL, Minn. (UPI) — With a day of reckoning fast approaching on fuel consumption, many companies worldwide are becoming more concerned about getting their people to work.

One answer to the employee transportation problem was conceived at 3M Co. even before the Arab oil embargo in 1973. It has been going strong ever since.

Robert Owens, a 3M senior transportation engineer, created the Commute-A-Van program because of parking congestion at the company's complex in suburban Maplewood. The oil embargo, he said, just gave it a push.

Now, 100 vans are in operation at 3M, Minnesota's largest employer. The vans service 1,200 employees, mostly in the St. Paul-Minneapolis area. There also are vans making the 70-mile trip daily to and from Pine City and Balsam Lake, Wis.

The vans carry a minimum of nine passengers. Most of the time they are full with 12. A few carry 15. As incentives, volunteer van drivers, who choose their own passengers and routes, get the use of the vehicle, 3M garage services and the option to buy the vehicle in the future.

Owens said operation of the vans in 7 years has saved more than 1.1 million gallons of gasoline. It has removed from the atmosphere a seven-year total of 301 tons of auto exhaust emissions.

The program eliminated use of 750 vehicles, he said, and resulted in an estimated capital savings of $2.75 million for parking facilities.

Owens and Helen Sever, program administrator, have received thousands of inquiries from companies requesting information on the van pooling concept and assistance in setting up their own programs.

It also creates a strong element of pride in employees who feel they are contributing to the conservation effort. Also, Owens said, it has reduced tardiness at 3M.

Share-A-Van is Owens' newest ride pooling venture, and is designed for 3M employees who live within 2½ miles of the company. The Commute-A-Van program proved too expensive for employees living close to 3M, so Owens said "we got the idea of using paid drivers to give these close-in employees door-to-door service at a reasonable cost."

He said the key to success in this project is that with staggered work hours at 3M, "we can get two or three round trips from each van every morning and evening."

Both Owens and Mrs. Sever will be speakers at a van pooling conference sponsored by the National Association of Van Pool Operators scheduled April 25-27 in Denver.

Therapist Will Be Radio Guest

She will discuss her work with Pitt County youngsters at the Farmville Developmental Day Care Center, the Winterville Ayden-Grifton-Greenville Developmental Day Care Center, and at the United Cerebral Palsy Center. Evaluation, therapy, and maintenance are aspects of her job that she will talk about during the radio interview, she said.

Caesarian Class Set Thursday

A Caesarian child birth class will be held Thursday, April 26, at 7:30 p.m. in the Physical Therapy Department at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

All expectant parents are welcome, whether they anticipate Ceasrean birth or not.

"The country is faced with an energy crisis," Owens said, "so we need to use what we've got today, taking advantage of an excellent state and highway system. It is something the private sector of business and industry can do for themselves. It can be done easily, and it works."

About 200 companies are using the van pooling system now, Owens said, and energy companies almost without exception have adopted it.

"Invariably the ones that do well," he said, "are the ones in which top management is committed and supportive such as Coors (beer) in Colorado."

He cited other successful applications of the idea at Prudential Life Insurance Co. in Newark, N.J., and many companies in the Bell system. Companies making inquiries about the program recently include McDonalds and Kraft Foods.

Companies have moved out of the downtown areas, Owens said, and it is "no longer feasible to rely on a subway or a 50-passenger bus to transport employees."

Pooling rides can serve as a conservation measure and be a social event at the same time.

Pope Planning Visit Mysterious Black Madonna

MONASTERY'S TREASURE — Worshipers in the chapel of the 14th century Jasna Gora monastery pray before the rarely-unveiled portrait of the Black Madonna. Pope John Paul II will visit the monastery in June to show his special devotion to Poland's most sacred icon. (UPI Photo)

By SYLVANA FOA
CZESTOCHOWA, Poland (UPI) — The gold bejeweled panel rose slowly to reveal the fragile little-girl face and sad almond-shaped eyes of the Black Madonna of Czestochowa. Most of the 200 pilgrims at the "unveiling" in the chapel in the 14th century monastery of Jasna Gora fell to their knees. Many wept openly.

The mysterious black madonna of Czestochow is the most sacred icon in Poland. It is also one of the most haunting and beautiful works of religious art in the world.

Pope John Paul II, a strong advocate of the cult of the Virgin Mary, will travel to the hilltop monastery in June to show his special devotion to Poland's most sacred icon.

He will visit the monastery in June to show his special devotion to Poland's most sacred icon.

early Egyptian christian. Legend, however, says the madonna was painted by the apostle Luke himself and kept hidden in Jerusalem for 500 years before traveling to Poland by way of Istanbul.

The madonna's coloring is also a mystery. Some argue that the madonna and the tiny child she holds were originally painted white but turned black suddenly — one of the first miracles attributed to the painting.

Others, including many art historians, believe the madonna is one of the rare black madonnas still extant. Many of the madonnas painted in the earliest centuries of Christianity were black, according to historians, and it wasn't until the Renaissance that it became popular to give the Mother of Christ the features of a Florentine maiden.

Whatever her history, Polish Catholics attribute many miracles to it.

"We have six volumes of archives containing 1,500 cases of miracles testified to by people who prayed to the black madonna," said Brother Jerzy.

"A few years ago a paralyzed man suddenly became well and told everyone it was the black madonna who cured him. So the authorities locked him up in an insane asylum for six months."

"In the communist world there can be no miracles," he sighed. "A few weeks ago something else happened," added another monk. "We don't speak about it as the authorities might jump on the person it happened to — but it was a real miracle."

Brother Jerzy dug a huge ledger of correspondence records from the archives. "In 1978 we received 66,625 postcards and letters thanking the Virgin Mary for her intervention," he said. "Of those, 92 people thanked Mary for their conversion and 887 for saving their lives."

Thousands of pilgrims leave votive offerings for the black madonna and the walls of her chapel are thick with pearl, coral and amber necklaces, gold pocket watches and bracelets and little tin school badges.

Besides the gold panel "veil," the painting is also protected by a cover of rich brocade robes sparkling with a treasure of emeralds, diamonds and rubies and a priceless gold crown.

"Princesses and queens from all over the world gave their jewels for the robes," said Brother Jerzy. "They are perhaps the most valuable religious objects in Europe."

Frequent attacks on the monastery — none successful — have considerably enhanced the madonna's reputation.

When monks repulsed a siege by Swedish hordes in 1655, the black madonna was given credit. She was crowned "Queen of Poland."

She was recrowned after Casimir Pulaski held off persistent Russian attackers between 1769 and 1772. Pulaski later went to the United States to fight in the Revolutionary War and became known as "the father of the American cavalry."

Poles say the Black Madonna prevented the Germans from overrunning the monastery during both World War I and II.

A banner on the monastery ramparts awaits the visit of Pope John Paul: "Queen of Poland, you have defended our nation for 600 years."

Major Role Played By Philadelphia Mounties

By WALTER PUTNAM
Associated Press Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — If Mayor Frank Rizzo held a full inspection of Philadelphia's police force, the roll call would have to include names like "Just Jesse," "Gomer" and "Kyber Rifle."

They're members of the mounted police unit, which at 148 strong has replaced New York City as the largest in the nation, says a spokesman for the department, Charles Turner.

From a list of about 100 officers requesting mounted training, about 10 are chosen each year, says Turner, an inspector with the mounted training and services division.

Many of the officers chosen have little or no riding experience, he says, because the division likes to train men to ride without having to break any bad habits.

Leroy Patterson, who's been a mounted officer for about three years, says he asked for the duty because he thought it would be a challenge.

"I had never been on a horse before, and I thought it would be the best training in the world," he says. "And it was."

Officer Rich Crockett says

there's a special rapport between a rider and his mount that attracts some men to the field. "With a car, you work for eight hours and then turn it over to somebody else," Crockett says. "With a horse it's just you and him. You know his faults and he knows yours."

Added to this is the rapport with people on patrol, the officers say. "People are more quick to accept you," Patterson says. "Everybody likes horses, essentially."

"You're halfway between a beat cop and a car cop," Crockett adds, "because you're more mobile, yet you can talk to the people. Whereas in a car, you're closed up behind the car windows."

New York once had the largest mounted police unit, but, for financial and other reasons, the city's police force is down from a peak of 300 mounts to about 75, says Capt. William Falcone of the mounted unit.

Philadelphia's mounted patrol has tripled since Rizzo, a former police commissioner, became mayor in 1972.

A mounted officer can see more and move faster than an officer on foot, Turner says. If he spots a disturbance, while racing to the scene he can see the number of people involved and determine whether weapons are being used. And he's not exhausted on arrival.

The mounted officer is more of a crime deterrent, Turner says, because of his increased visibility.

The horses are used extensively whenever crowds gather, such as for sporting events. "Since they've been patrolling at games, we've drastically reduced burglaries from autos," Turner says.

A good mount, broken in for riding, costs $800 to $1,000, Turner says. They're quartered at several city-owned stables. It costs the city about $3 a day to care for them, he says.

Included in the 10-week training program for the horses is "harassment week," during which they are exposed to firecrackers, sirens, smoke bombs, umbrellas popping open, and a simulated protest demonstration, with men waving placards and shouting.

The riders chosen for them must meet several requirements, including a weight of no more than 180 pounds, no old injuries that could be jarred by riding, and a desire for mounted training only, not just a transfer from foot patrol.

Alternatives To Oil, Nuclear Power Are Studied

By LeROY POPE
UPI Business Writer
NEW YORK (UPI) — Although the short-term outlook is for high-priced and scarce fuel throughout the world, there are several promising long-range prospects for alternatives to petroleum.

All will take time and the impact of the radiation leak at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant near Harrisburg, Pa., could greatly diminish the hope of abundant nuclear power to save oil.

Many persons today do not remember how atomic power, as it then was called, was hailed enthusiastically in the late 1940s as promising an era of world plenty. Little was known then by the public about the ecological hazards of atomic power. It was popularly believed it would be employed to power ships, railway locotives and even motor trucks. The U.S. government spent a huge sum in a vain effort to build an atomic powered airplane.

An abundance of electricity from nuclear plants also was expected to result in the production of huge quantities of chemical fertilizer to raise the world's food output.

That hope never was realized. Nuclear power proved far more expensive and hazardous than originally anticipated and although hundreds of atomic power plants have been built there is serious opposition to building more.

The present nuclear plants produce energy by fission. They consume substantial amounts of processed uranium and uranium ore has risen greatly in price since the crisis created by the 1973 Arab oil embargo.

There are two theoretical ways of producing nuclear energy in larger amounts than the atomic fuel consumed. One is the fast breeder reactor. France, Germany and the Soviet Union are pushing steadily ahead with that but President Carter has curtailed American development of the fast breeder because of fears the production of plutonium might proliferate and find its way into hydrogen bombs.

The other is nuclear fusion, the opposite of fission. Much fusion research is going on and, every now and then, some scientific team says it has made a breakthrough that may lead to fusion, "the ultimate source of power." Nevertheless, scientific consensus is that fusion is at least 30 to 50 years away, if it ever is realized.

Just last month, a new possibility for an almost unlimited source of energy was reported. A Miami company, Solar Reactor Corp., said that, after two years of work on a virtually accidental invention by Roland Scragg, it had succeeded in running three small engines on a hydrogen-chlorine reaction set off by ultraviolet light instead of heat.

The significance here is that the company said the hydrogen-chlorine reaction could occur in the engine in a closed loop — no continuous fuel source other than the ultraviolet light, which is unlimited. But the company admitted it does not fully understand how Scragg's invention works and that much more work must be done to prove its commercial feasibility.

Hydrogen, which is abundant in ocean and fresh water, is theoretically a practically unlimited source of energy. But although many have tried, no one yet has found a way to produce hydrogen commercially at a significantly smaller cost than the energy put into extracting it. Hydrogen is used extensively in many chemical and industrial processes. Much of it comes as a by-product of the manufacture of chlorine.

Solar energy, of course, is unlimited for the earth as a whole but the distribution of the sun's hot rays over the globe is not ideal for concentration to produce large amounts at any one spot. So it is difficult to achieve economies of scale in producing solar energy.

A great deal already has been accomplished with solar energy, particularly in space and water heating and cooking. Small photovoltaic panels convert enough sunlight directly into electricity to charge storage batteries on yachts and at remote homes. But at present it appears that solar energy derived from the heat or infrared end of the electromagnetic spectrum will continue to be feasible only in small units.

And the solar energy business has been hampered by the sale of some solar home water heating units that simply did not work well enough to pay for themselves in the promised time.

A Finnish company has been working in the United States in the past year seeking to demonstrate the availability of a large number of small hydroelectric power sites in the country, but it generally is conceded there are few if any sites left in the country for large hydroelectric dams.

Windmills also have been improved in design and several companies are building them with federal government help on research. Many small towns and farms clearly could get most of their power needs from the winds.

Geothermal energy, natural steam and the boiling water in the geopressed thermal belt extending some miles back across the deep south from the Gulf of Mexico and out under the Gulf's waters, are another potentially big source of energy that will take a lot of research and hard work to tap on a big scale.

Several companies are working on this with scientists at a Texas university branch at Galveston, and electric utilities in California and other states are producing substantial amounts of power from natural steam.

One of the most abundant energy possibilities, but probably the most remote, is sea thermal energy, postulated in the early 1920s by the French scientist Georges Claude, and proved by him a few years later in a large experiment at Matanzas Bay, Cuba.

The difference in temperature between warm water at the surface of the sea and cold water brought up by gravity from 2,000 feet or more produces low pressure steam. Claude used this steam to generate electricity successfully. Many oceanographers and physicists have investigated Claude's findings and believe they have significant ultimate potential.

Natural gas is a form of petroleum yet, economically speaking, it is an alternative to crude oil and the American Gas Association says it believes the United States has by no means yet realized its total potential as a producer of gas while Mexico and Canada are big gas producers.

Hydraulic fragmentation underground of gas deposits hitherto considered too difficult and expensive to mine alone could greatly increase the supply, the association says. The gas producers have contended that unwise political decisions on pricing have prevented the finding of new gas supplies.

The gasification and liquefaction of coal to produce pipeline grade gas and synthetic motor fuel will play a big role eventually in solving America's energy problems. There's nothing new about this, it has been done around the world for years. Hitler's Wehrmacht operated in World War II mainly on gasoline made from coal and before the vast development of natural gas starting in the 1920s virtually all household and industrial gas was made from coal.

But the BTU content of both gas and liquid fuels has to be much higher today than 40 years ago and that is what makes the new coal gasifying and liquefying programs so expensive.

The American Gas Association said a great deal depends on the Great Plains Coal Gasification Project in North Dakota of five companies under the leadership of American Natural Resources Corp., which is supposed to be in operation in the latter 1980s.

After a number of costly prototype projects, it will be the first large scale American commercial high BTU coal gas plant.

The gas association said the Great Plains project had been delayed by a hangup over government guarantees for the large loans the companies had to take out. The reluctance of lenders to advance money with government guaranty was based on concern about how the new coal gas would be priced in competition with domestic and imported natural gas.

The most immediate relief very probably will be a supplement to oil rather than an outright alternative — alcohol-gasoline mixes for motor fuel. Brazil already is requiring the use of fuels with 20 percent alcohol and in the past year a number of experiments have begun in the

Hosting Area Science Pupils

ECU News Bureau
Advanced science students from 10 eastern North Carolina high schools will participate in an April 27 honors seminar at East Carolina University.

The seminar, sponsored by ECU and the Eastern N.C. Science Teaching Resource Cooperative, will feature special sessions in biology, chemistry and physics.

Coordinating the event is Dr. Paul Varlashkin of the ECU Department of Physics.

Each student may attend two seminar sessions conducted by members of the ECU faculty, one in the morning and another in the afternoon, and will receive a special certificate in recognition of his or her participation.

The annual honor seminar is available to talented students nominated by high schools who belong to the Eastern N.C. Science Teaching Resource Cooperative.

The 10 schools and their cooperative representatives are:

Hunt High School (Linda Jordan), Fike High School (Betty Abernathy) and Beddingfield High School (Jessie Jones, Wilson; Conley High School (Nancy Evans) and Rose High School (Virginia Reed), Greenville;

Eastern Wayne High School (Gloria Shackelford); Williamston High School (Jeanne Balton); Tarboro Senior High School (Patsy White); Ayden-Grifton High School (Evelyn Finch) and Farmville Central High School (W.C. Vick).

A Change In Life For Ex-Basketballer Bill Bradley

EDITOR'S NOTE — Bill Bradley's introspective book on his professional basketball career was titled "Life on the Run." It's not very different for Bradley now as a freshman senator from New Jersey. On and off elevators, down corridors, from committee room to Senate floor, Bradley remains on the run. Here's what one day is like.

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Someone once described Bill Bradley's mode of dress as "Robert Hall prep." For 10 years, he earned his living in basketball shorts, but when he reports to work this Monday his uniform is wrinkled gray suit, blue shirt, red dotted tie, scruffy black shoes.

He looks sleepy. One eyebrow is cocked in perpetual curiosity. There is a shadow of a beard.

He was up at 5 in Denville, N.J., for the air commute to Washington, leaving behind his 2-year-old daughter and his wife, Ernestine Schlant, who teaches comparative literature at Montclair State College and will remain in New Jersey at least for the academic year.

Bradley has coffee, juice and a sweet roll on the plane. He reads the Newark Star-Ledger and talks shop with his seatmate, the regional director of the Federal Trade Commission. By 8:30, he's in his office considering something that's been troubling him: the furniture.

In 10 weeks in the Senate, Bradley, 6 feet 5, hasn't found a place to sit comfortably. In the Senate chamber, he straddles his schoolboy desk. At hearings, his knees rap against the curved bench. In his office, his legs collide with the back of the desk.

So when the powers of seniority ordered him moved to another office, he directed office manager Rich Yurko to find a long, narrow table instead of a desk. Rich has done it over the weekend, and this Monday morning, Bradley tests his table-desk. He sits, stretches his legs toward the center of the floor. He is satisfied.

The Democratic senator from New Jersey was born in Crystal City, Mo., son of a Republican banker who kept a picture of Herbert Hoover on the wall during the Depression. Basketball was his life. He played for Princeton, twice was named an all-American, won an Olympic gold medal, was a Rhodes scholar, then became a New York Knickerbocker.

From the start he was one of the National Basketball Association's highest-paid players and in 10 years he became a millionaire.

In 1977, he quit the NBA and ran for his first public office, the Senate. In the primary he easily beat the party's choice for the nomination and in the general election defeated a conservative Republican.

It's to be an important day. Bradley is chairman of the subcommittee on revenue sharing, intergovernmental revenue impact and economic problems — and he's conducting his first hearing. The witness will be Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal. The matter will be a bill to provide "emergency targeted federal aid to economically distressed communities."

In a cost-cutting era, the measure has become the White House's only effort to cushion cities against a recession. New Jersey is crowded with worn-out cities vulnerable in a downturn.

Bradley hurries down a hall, into an elevator, through a basement tunnel, up an elevator and off on the wrong floor. He gets back on, finally reaching a kleig-lit hearing room. Before his own hearing, he wants to put in an appearance at a session of the Energy Committee, where Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger is to testify.

Bradley is early. No other senator is there. Neither is Schlesinger.

Down the corridor, into an elevator, through the basement, onto another elevator, off on the wrong floor, again. On again — and again the first senator at the hearing.

Into a side room. In a leather chair, legs stretched, he studies a briefing book. He peers through a door at the assembling crowd. Bradley has 33 people on his payroll. Many are in the audience.

His press secretary summons Bradley for an interview with New Jersey Public Television. "How does it feel to chair your first hearing?" he's asked. "Ask me in a few hours," Bradley says, frowning. Then he talks about what the bill will mean to New Jersey.

Blumenthal arrives with a big entourage. He shakes hands with Bradley and lights a cigar. Bradley, still the only senator at the hearing, raps the gavel. Blumenthal summarizes a long statement.

At 10:07 a.m., Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., arrives, sliding into a seat next to Bradley. At 10:10, Sens. David Durenberger, R-Minn., and John Danforth, R-Mo., arrive. At 10:20, Sen. John Chaffee, R-R.I., arrives.

Bradley questions Blumenthal about how much the administration is willing to put into the program. Last year, it was $1.3 billion. This year, it's only $250 million. On this, Blumenthal is inflexible.

The questioning ends and Blumenthal rises to leave. So do his aides. Bradley asks, "Is that the staff of the Treasury going?" And, to his fellow senators: "No wonder he's so well prepared."

James Conway, mayor of St. Louis, is next. Then an economist testifies, and a banker. The TV lights blink out.

Then Mayor Thomas F.X. Smith of Jersey City comes on.

"We have one point of commonality, senator," he says, "your being one of the great New York Knickerbockers and I being one of the worst."

Smith played half a season for the Knicks in 1951.

The mayor introduces some emotion to the dry facts and figures. He shouts his case.

The hearing ends at 1:25 p.m. Bradley takes Smith to lunch in the Senate dining room, then they go to the gallery, where they watch a debate on the disposition of real estate owned by Taiwan.

At 3:15, Bradley is in his office. A bell rings, a vote. Bradley rides the subway car to the Capitol for the vote on an amendment to a Taiwan real-estate bill. He hasn't had much exercise. One day, he says, he ran three flights of stairs and found himself winded.

So he started jogging a mile three times a week. He tried the pool in the Senate gym, which, he says, isn't worthy of its reputation as posh: "Half as good as the Newark Y."

He spends about an hour in the Senate and cloakroom, learning from senators what happened at the Energy Committee meeting.

Hands in pockets, he engages Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, in intense conversation. Metzenbaum is calling for the removal of Schlesinger as secretary of energy. He wants to enlist Bradley. But a few days later, when a handful of senators make dump-Schlesinger speeches, Bradley isn't among them.

For the next few hours, Bradley closets himself with people hired to help him be a senator. Their chief function is to gather information.

First, there's an analysis of the morning's hearing. The staff thinks it went well. Press secretary Dick Lerner, sitting on the floor, ticks off the media it attracted: "The wires, the (Washington) Post and the Star, the New York Times, some Jersey reporters, CBS. You're not going to do much better than that."

Someone mocks Smith's emotional style. But Bradley says that in a hearing filled with bloodless jargon, Smith introduced a human touch.

Bradley talks about the campaign for Schlesinger's head. Schlesinger may be a bad administrator, he says, but if that's so, it's Jimmy Carter's problem.

Aide Joan Hunziker comes in to report on the Energy Committee meeting. Bradley wants to know exactly how many days' oil supply America has in reserve; how long could it last in an embargo. He asks someone to call a committee expert for the answer.

Martha Darling, who watches the Finance Committee for Bradley, is next. They talk in legislative shorthand; there are many references to "Section 301." She leaves and administrative assistant Marcia Aroff marches in, carrying a clipboard.

They talk about the week's schedule in Washington, and the weekend's in New Jersey.

He has been at his desk more than two hours now and has reached a decision. The situation is better but still not perfect.

He summons Rich Yurko. He's sitting too low, he says. He feels like he must look up at everyone.

He stands.

"Rich," he says, "I want a higher chair, and a hard chair and one of those hard platforms you put on your carpet under your desk."

Yurko says he'll see what he can do.

Preparing Study Of Inflation

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — A national study of the impact of inflation on a major U.S. industry group will be performed by a research team from the University of Michigan.

The team will make a year-long study of the impact of inflation on the 32,000-firm wholesaling industry, whose gross sales total some $500 billion a year.

Headed by Professor Thomas G. Gies, chairman of finance at the U-M Graduate School of Business Administration, the research team will explore the effects of inflation on sales, internal costs, liquidity, capital positions and tax liability.

The project is designed to analyze for the first time the results of the 1973-78 inflation on a major business sector. It will be conducted under a grant from the National Association of Wholesalers.

SARGE I CAN'T EAT MY MASHED POTATOES, DO YOU WANT THEM?
DID YOU TOUCH THEM?
I HAD ONE BITE.
SHOW ME WHERE.
RIGHT THERE.
HMM... I WONDER IF GRAY KILLS GERMS.

PEANUTS

DIANA, YOU'VE ALRIGHT?
PECULIAR, MAY I SAY THAT'S A MOMENT?
DARLING, TAKE ME INTO THE CAVE, I THINK I'M STARTING TO LABOR.
TALK ABOUT A MOMENT!

PEANUTS

FRANK & ERNIE'S KWIKI-FIX GARAGE
A-HA! HERE'S YOUR PROBLEM, SIR... YOUR SHOE'S CAUGHT IN THE FAN BELT.

A Man's Home Is His Castle...

ARE YOU LOOKING FOR A NEW CASTLE, BY ANY CHANCE? Let our competent sales staff assist you in the selection of a new home from these proud beauties!

$30,000—at Pamlico Beach, this neat 2-bedroom vacation cottage is just what you have probably been talking about for your new hide-away. Fishing/boat pier has a screen-enclosed room for those lazy evenings on the water. Great!

$32,500—on Camelot Drive, a perfect starter home for the newlyweds, the small family, or the family whose children are grown and on their own. 3 bedrooms, 1½ baths. We'll pay discount points and closing costs, too!

$32,900—an EXCLUSIVE with our firm, this darling cottage could be just the thing for the young family! 3 bedrooms, 1 bath, detached garage, living room with fireplace...and just right for your budget.

$35,500—also an EXCLUSIVE with us, this could easily be the right spot in your house-hunting day, for it's located in the ECU area; older, well-constructed, with 2 baths, 3 bedrooms, central air, living room with fireplace, cozy kitchen with pantry, it won't last long. Being redecorated.

$38,500—ECU vicinity. Reconditioned to nearly-new condition, this home offers 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, 2 fireplaces, living room, dining room, large attic.

$40,000—EXCLUSIVE. Traditional styling, with 2 bedrooms, 1 bath, carpeted living and dining rooms, Florida room, kitchen and breakfast room, awaiting your inspection.

$43,900—GRIFTON. Lots of room, pretty lot, lots of outside storage, lots of what you are looking for in a new 3 bedroom home. Let us talk with you about this home today.

$46,900—Eastwood Subdivision. 3, possibly 4 bedrooms, 2 baths, clean as a pin and with a new heat pump and roof, you'll love the tall pines that accent the yard. Modern ranch styling and 100 x 200 lot.

$46,900—Tuckahoe Subdivision. New carpeting accent the handsome interior of this 3 bedroom home. 2 baths, living room, breakfast-kitchen combination, 1 car enclosed garage and a possible loan assumption make this home even more attractive!

$47,500—EXCLUSIVE! Presently used as a business location, this home can serve both purposes for you. With over 2,000 square feet, carport and garage, 2 baths, 3 bedrooms, entry hall, dining and living rooms, think of the money you'll save not having to keep up a separate business location! Jon Day will be glad to fill you in on the particulars.

$48,900—WESTHAVEN. An unusual but most attractive interior treatment will appeal to you in this pretty ranch-style home. Great room, dining room, breakfast room blended with neat kitchen; 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, single garage. Lovely lot, City schools. Price includes many extra features that will appeal to you.

$51,700—On a corner lot, fenced back yard, you'll find this handsome brick veneer 3 bedroom home waiting for you to fall in love with it. Living room with fireplace, den with fireplace, 3 car garage.

$52,500—If you like traditional styling, you'll LOVE this listing! Its appearance is so deceptive - you think small, but realize this home is really LARGE! 1½ stories, with 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, 2 heat pumps for efficiency and economy in heating and cooling, it also offers entry hall, dining room, den with fireplace, and kitchen with dinette nook. Over 1,750 square feet to enjoy once you've moved in and gotten settled.

$52,900—NEW LISTING. 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, entry hall, separate dining and living rooms, kitchen combination, oodles of closets, attic, carport, in a pretty, well-established neighborhood, screened-in porch for summer enjoyment.

$52,900—GRIFTON. Four bedrooms, 2½ baths, den/kitchen, living and dining room, entry hall, double garage, sloping yard with tall trees compliment this pretty home.

$53,900—NEW LISTING. 4 bedrooms, 2 baths. Over 1,800 square feet of Southern Comfort, with separate living and dining rooms, entry hall, fireplace in living room. One-car garage, floored attic for extra storage.

$57,000—LAKE ELLSWORTH. Garrison styling kept in immaculate condition by its present owners. 2 stories, with heat pump for economy; 4 bedrooms, 2½ baths, entry hall, formal living and dining rooms, den with fireplace.

$57,500—East 10th Street location, Zoned "Highway Commercial", this 3 bedroom, 1½ bath brick veneer home would make a good office location for you. Talk with Dick Evans, REALTOR, for further information.

$59,900—CHERRY OAKS. Ranch style, with over 1,800 square feet of pleasant, stylish living space; offering 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, living/dining room combination, den, fireplace, 11 x 19 kitchen, single garage. So much to offer for your enjoyment.

$62,500—NEW LISTING IN COLLEGE COURT! Over 2,000 square feet, large, roomy ranch style home offering 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, single garage, entry hall, formal dining room, living room, and on with fireplace. Extra large lot, too, make for great living.

$64,000—TUCKER ESTATES. A pretty Williamsburg if there ever was one! Stately, formal in tone, but ever so enjoyable. See its 3 large bedrooms, 2 roomy baths, gracious den with fireplace; combination breakfast/dining room, formal living and dining rooms, entry hall, and ample closet space.

$67,500—TUCKER ESTATES. Elegant French Provincial style, brand new, and waiting for you to discover its pleasant surroundings. Its entry hall leads to the formal living and dining rooms and the Texas - sized family room with fireplace and sliding glass doors; butcher-block decorated kitchen has pantry and dinette nook; 3 ample bedrooms with a preponderance of walk-in closet space; utility closet in hall for convenience. So pretty, and ready to move right into. Call us for an appointment.

$66,500—CHERRY OAKS. Contemporary, clean lines, just plain handsome. You think the outside's pretty, just wait 'til you discover the beautiful, artistically decorated interior! Colors only a daring decorator would use that will flatter any type furniture its new owner would care to use. 3 bedrooms, 2 large baths, parquet entry hall, sunken Great room with fireplace; formal dining room, "L"-shaped kitchen with dinette area; utility room; double paneled garage; deck, and fully enclosed backyard.

$69,900—TUCKER ESTATES. Southern Traditional - style ranch room; elegant exterior, ever so pretty floor plan, which has been kept clean as a pin by its former owners. 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, formal entry hall, 12½ x 11 dining room, 12½ x 16 formal living room; 15 x 16½ kitchen (that's huge, folks!) 8½ x 8 utility room. Double garage; ground-level patio with barbecue grill...room and comfort at its best, and on a cul-de-sac for quiet and privacy. City school districts, too. Call us now on this one.

$76,900—GRIFTON. A Texas-sized home here in North Carolina that will please the large family or folks who just plain like a lot of room. Over 4,000 square feet under one roof; split heating and cooling systems, 6 (make that 7 if you want) bedrooms, 3½ baths, 11½ x 15 formal entry hall, 16 x 29 living room, dining room, 17 x 21 rec room; 16 x 31 family room; Heatilator-type fireplace, and a 17 x 21 kitchen. Intercome system, too. In real good condition, in a pretty subdivision, and in a hurry for its new owners. We'd love to "show and sell" this home to you in the next couple of days or so. Call us.

$79,500—A few minutes outside of Greenville will lead you to County living in style. This pretty brick veneer ranch home personifies quiet and peaceful enjoyment with its 3 bedrooms,

TV

For Week Of April 22 - April 28, 1979

The 'Horror King' Comes To TV

Vincent Price and his actress-wife, Coral Browne, star as a ghostly couple who act as host and hostess on board a phantom train that transports people into a past of their choosing, in "Time Express," new series premiering Thursday, April 26 (8-9 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Known to movie fans as the "King of Horror," Vincent Price now sheds his masks and strange, foreboding ways to don a completely new role for "Time Express." The new dramatic weekly series, which premieres Thursday, April 26 (8 p.m.) on CBS-TV, also stars Price's wife, Coral Browne. The couple will portray a charming, unfathomable couple who travel as host and hostess aboard a mysterious train that transports its passengers into the past.

Guest starring in the premiere episode are the husband-and-wife comedy team of Jerry Stiller and Anne Meara, James MacArthur and Pamela Toll.

Like all the passengers on the ghostly "Time Express," Stiller and Miss Meara portray a couple who travel back through time to a period where a turning point was made in their lives. They are offered a second chance to relive the experience, this time changing a momentous decision in an attempt to alter the subsequent course of events.

Stiller portrays a tycoon, Eddy Chernoff, who boards the train to get back to a day in 1969 and relive it by giving away two million dollars. Miss Meara plays his wife who goes along for the ride.

MacArthur plays Dr. Mark Toland, whose goal in boarding the unique mode of transportation is to return to 1967 and try to trace the whereabouts of the only person who is capable of saving the life of his wife (played by Miss Toll), who has contracted a fatal, present-time illness.

James Reynolds also stars in the series as the train's conductor, William Phipps, as its engineer, and Woodrow Parfrey, as its ticket clerk.

Susan's Tall Dilemma

VARIETY SHOWCASE — Singer-actress-dancer Susan Anton stars in "Presenting Susan Anton," four hour-long musical shows designed to spotlight her many talents, beginning Thursday, April 26 (10 p.m.) on NBC.

When a girl is 5-foot, 11-inches tall, it's a fair bet that her early teens were an unhappy time, and statuesque Susan Anton, star of NBC-TV's new musical show, "Presenting Susan Anton" (premiering Thursday, April 26, 10 to 11 p.m.), is no exception.

"I was insecure about my height in those days. I felt awkward, unattractive and even unfeminine. It seemed to me I was a stick, the kind who didn't fit in with everyone else. Then one day I realized there was absolutely nothing wrong with being tall. It was the way I was and I'd better be proud of it and just carry it with confidence, because there was nothing I could do to change it."

Her total acceptance of her height was first reflected when Susan won the title "Miss Redlands" and if there was any doubt in her mind about acceptance despite her height, it should have been dispersed when she was runner-up for "Miss America" in 1970.

Wasn't An Easy Leap

"The leap from the sports arena into show business was not an easy one to make," says Dorothy Hamill, starring in "Dorothy Hamill's Corner of the Sky," airing Monday, April 23 (8 to 9 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Dorothy Hamill soars over the ice of Lake Placid in "Dorothy Hamill's Corner of the Sky," a special hour of music and comedy, Monday, April 23 (8 p.m.) on ABC.

ice skating, is one of the few that the public also embraces as a spectacle. In fact, I've been able to grow as a skater since retiring from competition," admitted the former Olympic and World Skating Champion who won a gold medal at the 1976 Olympics in Innsbruck.

"I find that I prefer professional skating. I'm not bound anymore by the need to please a panel of judges looking for extremely precise and rigid requirements. Now I'm free to express myself more with my skating, and do things I couldn't dare try when practicing for the Olympics."

Dorothy notes, "Audiences seem to enjoy my new, more ambitious routines as much as I enjoy performing them. The public has been really wonderful; I can sense that they're behind me."

Public response has proved to be an even greater spur to Dorothy's striving for excellence — greater than her quest for Olympic honors. "I'm a perfectionist," admits Dorothy. "I like to be best at whatever I do, be it cooking or skating."

No Laughs This Time

"She's a feisty lady," says Carol Burnett as she described Peg Mullen, the woman she portrays in "Friendly Fire," airing Sunday, April 22 (8 to 11 p.m.), as an "ABC Theatre" special presentation.

Co-starring with Carol is Ned Beatty as her husband, Gene, an Iowa farmer who joined with his wife to search for the truth of what actually happened to their son Michael, who was reported killed by the "friendly fire" of United States artillery in Vietnam.

The powerful drama is based on the critically acclaimed book by C.D.B. Bryan who heard of the Mullens' fight and became closely involved with them. Sam Waterston plays the role of Bryan in the film.

"It's a heartbreaking incident," Carol says about the story. "I think it's one of the best scripts I have ever read and that it will touch a lot of people in this country."

It was a year ago that Carol finished the last show of her variety series, and she thought she would take things easy for some time. That was not to be.

"I have gone from one project to another," she says, "and I found myself frequently working 12-hour days. I never did that on my own show."

Carol was one of the stars in "A Wedding" and she is presently appearing in another new film, "Health." In addition to "Friendly Fire," she has starred in two other television dramas and a musical special.

About "Friendly Fire" and "The Tenth Month," an upcoming television film, Carol says, "They are both serious dramas and 180 degrees from anything I've done before."

She amends this a bit, however, by saying with a slight edge to her normally pleasant voice that it does irritate her a bit if interviewers ask if these roles are "a challenge and a breakthrough."

"When columnists talk to a dramatic actor who is doing comedy, they don't ask about the new challenge to his career," she says. "Some people seem to think that comedy is easier than drama. That's just not so."

Carol was all set for a nine-week vacation when the script of "Friendly Fire" arrived. "I couldn't resist it," she says. "I told my husband (Joe Hamilton) that I had to do it."

Disney Features Indian Folklore

For "The Legend of the Boy and the Eagle," airing Sunday, April 22 (7 to 8 p.m.), on "The Wonderful World of Disney," director-photographer Jack Couffer captured authentic scenes of the Hopi Pueblo Indians and their rituals that had never before been filmed.

The Hopi nation had not allowed pictures to be taken of their people since the late 1920s because of an invasion of curious, camera-prying tourists that turned the Indians against all forms of photography. Practically nothing had been recorded of the Hopis on film since then.

Only through the special intercession of White Bear Fredericks, a prominent elder in the village of Oraibi, Arizona, and a close friend of Couffer's, did the director obtain permission to film the Hopi's way of life and their famous Eagle dance.

Couffer explains why he was allowed this exclusive opportunity: "White Bear wisely felt that precious little had been done in the past to bring a better understanding of the life and customs of his people to the white man. The Hopis do not want to be photographed as curiosities and that's why a sign outside each village reads: 'No camera allowed.' White Bear was able to convince them that we intended to show them with dignity and spirit. And once they realized this, they went out of their way to co-operate."

Athletic Efforts Rewarded

In 1972, the United States suffered several embarrassing moments in the Olympic Games, which made it quite clear that the U.S. Olympic program was not in very good condition.

Bob Seagren's pole was taken away from him the day of the event, Rick DeMont wasn't allowed to swim his last event because he took a drug he wasn't quite sure about and the United States lost to the Soviets in a controversial basketball game. There were other mishaps as well, and most of them were caused by misinformation, ignorance or a lack of coaching leadership — all of which have no place in the Olympics.

When the American delegation returned home, a group of athletes went to Washington and lobbied against the state of the Olympic program. One of the lobbyists was Donna de Varona, Olympic gold medalist in 1964 and now an NBC Sportscaster.

The athletes' efforts were rewarded in 1975, when President Ford organized a Commission on Olympic Sports to investigate the problems. One of its members was de Varona.

Commenting on the investigation, de Varona says: "We went into every single sport and talked to athletes, coaches, administrators, everybody we possibly could. We put that in a study — it's the finest study ever done in amateur sports. It goes into detail on every sport and its particular problems.

"We came up with a concept of how to reorganize sports in America; it's like restructuring a major business. We passed the legislation last Congress, so we've seen the start of it."

De Varona has long been active in amateur sports, and is an eloquent spokesperson in behalf of non-professional athletes. In 1960, at 13, she was the youngest member of the U.S. Olympic Team, and four years later she won a gold medal in the 400-meter individual medley. She set 18 World Swimming records between 1960 and '65, but has made an even greater contribution to amateur sports with her constant efforts to improve conditions in the United States.

Now thousands of young people have been collecting money in observance of Olympathon '79 Week, and NBC capped off their efforts with a variety show featuring entertainers and athletes.

"I think it's a great precept," says de Varona, who has attended every Olympic since 1960 and will be on hand to present television coverage of the 1980 Games in Moscow. "NBC is saying that big business owes a responsibility to the kids' parents who spend their last dimes on training. We're paying them back for their effort in some small way."

Hot-Shot On Ice

Dana Plato, who plays Conrad Bain's daughter, Kimberly, on the hit series, "Diff'rent Strokes," was aiming for a shot at Olympics competition in ice skating when her acting career suddenly started blooming. "I still keep practicing, but of course I don't have the time now to enter competition," she says.

A New Song On 'WKRP'

Though it's not really a music show, country-and-western star Hoyt Axton has chosen "WKRP In Cincinnati" as the vehicle for the public introduction of his newest song, "Della and the Dealer."

Axton will sing the number as guest star of the episode airing Monday, April 23 (9:30 p.m. on CBS-TV). In it, he portrays O.J. Watson, a West Virginia childhood sweetheart of lovely Jennifer Marlowe (played by series co-star Loni Anderson), who arrives in Cincinnati expecting Jennifer to live up to her earlier promise to marry him.

Country boy O.J., who is also determined to become a big-time singer, has brought his guitar along, and in the course of the story he does some pickin' and singin' that turns out to be "Della and the Dealer." Axton wrote, published, produced and recorded the song, which has not yet hit the market.

Axton is probably best known

"In spite of the fact that he's a clergyman, he is fallible to a high degree. I think that's one of the most attractive traits to the man," says Barnard Hughes as he traces an outline of Father Brown, the character he portrays in "Sanctuary of Fear." The World Premiere movie, also a program development project, will be telecast on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies," April 23 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Hughes says the Father Brown person a is "if not cynical, at least a man who has a titled look at the foibles of the human animal." It is how Hughes intends to continued playing the crime-solving priest if the initial project leads to a series, as had been hinted.

Hughes says he has known and been fond of the original "Father Brown, Detective" short stories of English author G.K. Chesterton — on which the feature is based — since his high school days. "There's a whole generation of my age and younger to whom Father Brown is just as familiar as Columbo is to the young people." In "Sanctuary," it is believed to be the first time he has been placed in a New York City setting.

According to Hughes, the production is tinged with a certain wry comedy "because of the innate qualities in Father Brown. He is a man who can make decisions when decisions have to be made, but that's almost always in his role as the detective. When he is Father Brown, priest..."

To hear the church hierarchy in the film tell it, Father Brown, priest, leaves a bit to be desired. Hear his immediate superior, Msgr. Kerrigan: "You're a religious man, Father Brown, but not cut out to be the shepherd of a flock." Or, "I'm still waiting to see your parish books. Books! Double-entry books! Not a shoe — box full of receipts and some hen-tracks on shopping bags!"

Barnard Hughes, stars as Father Brown, a crime-solving clergyman in "Sanctuary of Fear," on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies," April 23 (9-11 p.m.).

One knows that Father Brown, priest, means well. All the more to endear him to Barnard Hughes. "The contrast in the character has made him germane to whatever decade you're in. The contrast is what has made the character such a strong favorite for over 50 years." And, in this new version, an added dimension. "Being a New York priest, he'd have to be street-wise as well."

"Any show that you do about New York, why New York is one of the stars of the show. There's nothing that conveys that excitement, that beat, as much as to get out on the streets of New York and shoot a show. The great thing about doing it here is that there's no substitute for it."

No substitute either for the inevitable touch of class that has come to be associated with Barnard Hughes, consummate actor.

'The Deserter' Airs

Bekim Fehmiu (l) and Richard Crenna star in "The Deserter," on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies," April 24 (9-11 p.m.).

John Huston, Richard Crenna, Bekim Fehmiu, Chuck Connors, and Ricardo Montalban star in "The Deserter," the story of a renegade soldier's one-man war of revenge, to be rebroadcast on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies," April 24 (9 to 11 p.m.).

The Southwest Territories, 1886: Leading a cavalry patrol, Capt. Victor Kaleb (Fehmiu) comes across a devastated white settlement, where he finds the body of his wife, killed during an Apache raid. Enraged and contemptuous of the Army's callous attitude toward the murder, Kaleb deserts and embarks on a private vendetta against the Apaches.

Two years later, a general devises a plan to attack the Apache chief in his almost impenetrable mountain stronghold. Knowing that Kaleb is most familiar with Apache tactics, the general sends a patrol into the desert to find him. The revengeful Kaleb agrees, and leads the commandos on the deadly mission.

Houston portrays Gen. Miles; Crenna, Maj. Brown; Connors, Reynolds; Montalban, Metchai; Slim Pickens, Tattinger.

Helen Reddy Has Special Underway

Helen Reddy, award-winning singing star-composer-actress who has been described as popular music's "superstar songstress," will be joined by Jane Fonda and Elliott Gould on "Helen Reddy's First NBC Special," slated to air soon.

The special marks a return to the network for Reddy, who headlined an acclaimed series on the network in the summer of 1973. In addition, she has been a guest host of "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson" and was the first permanent host of "The Midnight Special" in 1975-76.

People magazine heralded Reddy as the quintessential "superstar songstress" of pop music (Jan. 23, 1978). She is the recipient of a Grammy as Best Female Singer of the Year (1973) and a Georgie from AGVA (1975), and was voted Number One Female Vocalist for singles and albums by Billboard, Cashbox and Record World two years in a row (1973, 1974). She has 10 Gold Albums and three Platinums, and is currently recording her 14th LP for Capitol Records for release in May.

Fonda, starring in the current hit theatrical release, "The China Syndrome," received several honors for her acting in "Coming Home" before winning the Best Actress Oscar April 9. She won the Los Angeles Film Critics Award as Best Actress for that film and for the body of her work, plus the Golden Globe Film Favorite. She received her Actress in 1971 for her first Academy Award as Best performance in "Klute."

Scar Winners Team Up

IN PURSUIT OF JUSTICE — Oscar winners John Wayne and Katherine Hepburn star in "Rooster Cogburn," a drama about a sheriff and a minister's daughter who team to track down a band of outlaws, on NBC-TV's "The Big Event," Sunday, April 22 (8-10 p.m.).

The inspired teaming of John Wayne and Katherine Hepburn for the first time in their long careers adds a certain degree of cachet to "Rooster Cogburn," a western drama to be rebroadcast on NBC-TV's "The Big Event," Sunday, April 22 (8 to 10 p.m.). Wayne reprises his "True Grit" role (the performance for which he won the Best Actor Oscar in 1969) as a cantankerous but effective lawman.

Wayne stars as Deputy Marshal Cogburn, who is relieved of his badge when a district judge decides that he is effective, but a little too rambunctious for a territory settling down to peaceful ways.

He is temporarily reinstated, however, when a gang of ornery desperadoes, led by Hawk (Richard Jordan), ambush a cavalry detachment and make off with a wagon-load of nitroglycerine which they intend to use in a bank holdup. The judge even promises Cogburn a $2,000 reward and full reinstatement if the mission is successful.

Arriving at the fort where the stolen material was to be delivered, Cogburn finds the the outlaws have preceded him and devastated the outpost. The two survivors who remain are Eula Goodnight (Hepburn), a God-fearing, hard-driving Yankee missionary who is intent on tracking down the gang to avenge the murder of her Pastor father, and Wolf (Richard Romancito), a young Indian boy.

Career Skyrockets

"The Bastard," volume one of the American Bicentennial Series/The Kent Family Chronicles, airs Monday and Tuesday, April 23-24, (9-11 p.m. both nights) on Channel 11. The eight novels comprising this series carry the story of an American family from its beginning in Revolutionary times to the 200th anniversary of the republic.

Starring in the title role is Andrew Stevens. The Bastard is actually a young Frenchman, Phillippe Charboneau, who seeks to claim his rightful inheritance as the son of a British nobleman. Literally in flight for his life from the nobleman's family, he sails to Colonial America where he becomes involved in the struggle for independence, and changes his name to Philip Kent in the process.

In the span of just one year, the career of Andrew Stevens has skyrocketed to the point that he now is one of the hottest young actors in Hollywood.

Stevens admits the role was "challenging," and describes Philip as "an underdog who is constantly striving for survival, and he is a hero, an Errol Flynn and Douglas Fairbanks in a younger form whose cause eventually becomes American Independence."

Bob Barker will host the Miss U.S.A. Beauty Pageant April 30 in Biloxi, Miss., and also the daytime Emmy Awards from New York City May 17.

Thomas Wolfe's Novel

Lee Grant, Chris Sarandon and Hurd Hatfield star in "You Can't Go Home Again," a two-hour special based on the Thomas Wolfe novel about a struggling young writer romantically involved with an older, successful married woman at a time when America and the world face a collapse of values, financial ruin and impending war. Others appearing in the drama, airing Wednesday, April 25 (9 p.m.) on CBS-TV, are Tammy Grimes, Christopher Murney, Roland Winters, Paul Sparer and Malachy McCourt.

The story of George Webber (Sarandon), in many ways paralleling the story of its author, the great American novelist Thomas Wolfe, takes place in a period from disillusionment of the Depression to the emergence of the menacing Nazi Horror.

But, as the story begins, Webber is less concerned with the state of the world than with his personal problems. Two things matter most to the young Southerner, his ambition to be a successful novelist and his affair with Esther Jack (Grant), an older woman, a successful stage designer and married. Esther has been his muse, companion and guardian angel, as well as his lover, during the difficult years he has struggled for recognition. Finally, with Esther's help and encouragement, Webber is to meet Foxhall Edwards (Hatfield), the nation's top editor, who is interested in publishing the young man's first novel.

Webber is brought down from his elation by the news of the death of the aunt who raised him. He returns to Libya Hill, the mountain town where he was raised, for her funeral, but instead of the sleepy hamlet, the refuge from the strife and injustice of the big city that he remembers nostalgically, he finds a frenzied hive of activity. Everyone is a millionaire, on paper at least, but the greed and corruption underneath this false prosperity is soon to reveal itself, as Libya Hill stands poised on the brink of disaster.

The phenomenon is repeated back in the city where Esther waits for him. Their stormy relationship resumes, clouded over by Webber's worries about the critical and public reaction to his novel.

Webber flees to Europe, encountering for the first time the sweet fruits of literary fame. But there is more he encounters. His beloved Germany is being twisted into an evil caricature by Hitler's followers, oblivious to the moral horror around them.

Stripped of his refuges and romantic delusions, Webber is forced to take stock of his life, his country and his world, returning physically and mentally battered, but carrying an urgent message to the people he loves.

He's Red Hot And In Prime Time

It's taken more than a dozen years, but Fred Willard is finally an overnight success. And Willard, a cult favorite because of his role as the dim-witted Jerry Hubbard on the satiric talk show "Fernwood 2Night," is loving every minute of it.

"Things are going great," he said, during a break in the taping of NBC-TV's "Real People." "I mean, some terrific offers are coming in and people are actually standing in line to see me perform at clubs."

Willard is one of the regular co-hosts on "Real People," a fast-paced new humor magazine airing on Wednesdays (8 to 9 p.m.).

"Real People" is a nice change of pace," Willard says. "Up till now — even though I love the Jerry Hubbard character — I've usually played a second banana who gets his comeuppance at the end."

"On this show I'm more like a reporter traveling around the country interviewing unusual people at some really strange events."

Willard, a comic actor who starred in Chicago at the Second City Playhouse, later joined the Ace Trucking Company and landed minor roles in movies, television and commercials. For a few months he was a regular on the short-lived series, "Sirota's Court."

After all the years of paying his dues, lightning finally struck when he teamed with Martin Mull on "Fernwood 2Night," which later became "America 2Night."

Other co-hosts of "Real People" are Jimmy Breslin, best-selling author and syndicated columnist, and Washington-based satirist Mark Russell.

Breslin will be on hand every week to spin a tale about Marvin the Torch, Fat Thomas, or one of the many other fascinating characters he meets in the bars and back alleys of his native New York City.

An award-winning journalist for over 20 years, Breslin has had a string of best-selling books, including "The Gang Who Couldn't Shoot Straight," "Can't Anybody Here Play This Game," and "How the Good Guys Finally Won."

Lord Awaiting Verdict

Conflict has always been an inherent part of "Hawaii Five-O" segments because it is essential, and story values have consistently been given the highest priorities.

"Five-O" even survived the antiviolenence crackdown, and series star Jack Lord says: "The whole ambience of the show belies violence. You find that in the streets of San Francisco and New York, not in Hawaii. This is not a police show. It's an anthology with McGarrett involved emotionally in every story — that's the difference."

Now Lord is anxiously awaiting word from CBS-TV about the future of the show, and whether or not he will continue to stamp out island crime for another season.

"There comes a time in your life when you want to do other things," he remarks, adding, "I am under contract to CBS for one more year. If it is renewed, next year would be my last. I love the show and I love playing McGarrett, but enough is enough. There are other things I want to do."

What are these other things? "I would like to turn to production as well as acting. I would like to do movies for TV as well as theatrical features."

Lord's "would like" has already become a reality of sorts with the formation of his production company, Lord & Lady Prods., and he has produced a new pilot, "M Station: Hawaii."

Lord became involved in production several years ago, after the death of Leonard Freeman, creator/executive producer of "Five-O." "At that point, I worked on the budget, without my credit."

Been Promoted

Harrison Page has been promoted. Page, a regular cast member of "Supertrain," is no longer the train's porter. He has been promoted to Passengers Relations Officer.

To Fly His Own

If panelist F. Lee Bailey wants to fly his own helicopter to NBC-TV's Burbank Calif., studios for the taping of "Whodunnit?," he can land just a few feet from the studio entrances at the network's heliport.

I had to learn about production to survive," he observes.

It was a natural step to eventually form his own company, and he is now developing other properties and looking for scripts. "I am particularly interested in scripts for movies and TV show, especially long forms," he says.

HOLLYWOOD — If all the crew members of "CHARLIE'S ANGELS" who say they'll not return for the new season follow through with their plans, Spelling-Goldberg Productions has a big job ahead of it. A growing number of behind-the-scenes personnel are saying they don't want to go back to a job where they hear very few 'good-mornings' and 'thank-yous' from the cast.

CHERYL TIEGS' estranged husband, STAN DRAGOTI, has a new roommate in the person of TONY CURTIS, who is separated from his wife, LESLIE. However, unlike the Dragotis, Tony and Leslie are working to solve their differences.

Contrary to some reports, AUDRA LINDLEY did not sit at home alone and in tears the night "THE ROPERS" debuted. Her ex-husband and close friend, JAMES WHITMORE, joined her and some friends to watch the premiere.

Now that almost all of the TV series are on hiatus, it's vacation time and the stars are traveling throughout the world, despite fuel shortages and airline strikes. However, the most popular gathering is Hawaii, where in recent weeks as many as 20 TV stars vacationed in an attempt to get away from it all!

Production on FARRAH FAWCETT MAJORS' upcoming film, "SATURN 3," was shut down for the biggest part of a week while on location in England, because the actress contracted tonsillitis.

Overheard when a publicist from ABC arrived at CBS Television City where two ABC shows were taped was a publicist from CBS asking, "Which of your hit shows are you visiting today?"

After months of speculation, STEVE CARLSON and GAIL RAMSEY of "GENERAL HOSPITAL" will tie the knot May 6. Steve plays Dr. Gary Lansing while Gail is Susan Moore on the daytime serial.

An added note about GAIL — professionally she is now GAIL RAE, a stage name she chose to separate her professional life from her private life. Besides, Rae is her sister's name.

VICTORIA PRINCIPAL will return for a new season of "DAL-LAS" with a new name of her own, but it won't be seen on screen. Victoria is engaged to be married to actor CHRISTOPHER SKINNER, and they hope to tie the knot by early summer.

"B.J. & THE BEAR" spent its last two weeks of production in Los Angeles, the first time the cast and crew had worked at home since the first of the year! All previous shows were filmed on location.

Strange Hobby!

"Taxi" star Andy Kaufman has a most unusual hobby. Every Monday night he goes to a Los Angeles restaurant, the Posh Bagel, and works as a busboy. He says he gets his 'kicks' when he refuses tips from stunned customers.

Emotions Do Run High

As wedding dates rapidly approach, engaged couples and their families are caught in a whirlwind of emotional crises — past loves, parental pressure and social and financial obligations — in "With This Ring," airing as "The ABC Friday Night Movie," April 27 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Starring are Tony Bill, Tom Bosley, Diana Canova, Barbara Cason, Joyce DeWitt, John Forsythe, Scott Hyland, Donny Most, Dick Van Patten, Betty White and Deborah White.

Van Patten stars as Alvin Andrews, a hard-working middle-aged man who is ashamed to confess to his wife and daughter that he cannot afford the lavish reception they have planned. Cason is cast as his wife, Canova his daughter, and Most portrays the prospective son-in-law.

Jilly Weston and Tom Burkhardt (DeWitt and Hyland) find their engagement jeopardized by faces from the past. Bill stars as a determined ex-lover hoping to recapture Jilly's affection, and Peter Jason, Charles Thomas Murphy and Howard George co-star as Tom's old fraternity brothers trying to relieve their high-flying college days.

Meanwhile, wealthy Evelyn Harris (Betty White), the estranged wife of Gen. Albert Harris (Forsythe), is busily preparing her daughter's wedding reception, determined to make it the social event of the season. Afraid of exposing the deep feelings they still have for one another, the prominent couple are reunited by the common bond of the daughter's impending marriage.

Mary Frances Crosby co-stars as their daughter, helplessly watching as her parents arrange a wedding and a future she does not want.

As their walk to the altar brings each family one step closer to the institution of marriage, they are ably assisted by the catering director and his assistant (Bosley and Deborah White) of the large, metropolitan hotel where wedded bliss usually is equated with stuffed pheasants, catered canapes and a twelve-piece orchestra. Emotions rise and fall, and the director and his assistant suddenly find themselves playing chief counsel, hard-hearted heavy and hesitant guardian angel.

'On Tour' With Boston Symphony

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's historic tour of China last month will be the subject of CBS Reports: "The Boston Goes to China" Friday, April 27 (10 to 11 p.m.).

Correspondent Ed Bradley, who serves as the broadcast's anchor, producer Andrew Lack and executive producer Howard Stringer led the eight-man team that covered the Orchestra's triumphant week-long tour of Shanghai, Peking (including the Forbidden City and BSO conductor Seiji Ozawa's birthplace, nearby), the Great Wall, and the surrounding countryside.

The team's members were the only television journalists on the trip, and the broadcast is America's first in-depth look at China since the normalization of relations.

In addition to covering the various concerts, rehearsals and master classes (held by BSO instrumentalists with their Chinese counterparts), the broadcast features interviews with ordinary Chinese citizens, with the new U.S. Ambassador to China in 1920, was jailed during the Cultural Revolution, and who offers a startling American's eye-view of China before, during and after the ascendancy of Mao Tse-Tung. Mao's successor, Teng Hsiao-p'ing, is seen at a banquet for the BSO in Peking.

The program captures the new and relatively limited atmosphere of freedom some Chinese are now enjoying. In Shanghai, outside the concert hall, a group of Chinese youths protest the lack of jobs in the city, and their forced movement to the countryside.

The broadcast also features a look at Shanghai's Poster Wall and the Democracy Wall in Peking, where there was a message to President Carter praising modernization, but warning against Westernization, and a visit to a primitive glass factory outside Shanghai, where the factory manager complains about problems in manufacturing, and talks of more trade, more U.S. technology, and — once again — politics, under a stern portrait of Mao.

"The Boston Goes to China" climaxes with portions of the combined concert of the Boston Symphony with the Peking Philharmonic, with Ozawa leading them through a rousing rendition of "Stars and Stripes Forever." The finale brought the crowd of 18,000 Chinese — a cross section of Chinese society, lured by the first Western music in more than 30 years, and 30-cent tickets — to their feet, applauding and shouting.

Michele Will Tell

Q: I'd like some information about actor Leigh McCloskey. Also, his address. L. CURLIN, WILSON, N.C.

A: Leigh, still in his 20s, has had remarkable success in his brief professional career. Television credits include "Rich Man, Poor Man," "Phyllis," a recurring role in "Executive Suite," and several TV movies, including "Dawn, Portrait of a Teenage Runaway" and its sequel, "Alexander: Other Side of Dawn." Leigh, a native Californian who has thus far escaped the clutches of those gorgeous California gals, says his sparetime interests include painting, sketching and sculpture. Write to him c/o Screen Actors' Guild, 7750 Sunset Blvd., Hollywood, Calif. 90046.

Q: Who played the parts of Bertha and Simon Haley in "Roots: The Next Generations"? Where do I write to them? B. McMILLAN, SUPPLY, N.C.

A: Irene Cara and Dorian Harewood. Irene has been an actress-singer for 14 of her 19 years. She was on Broadway at the age of nine; at 15 she starred in her first movie, "Aaron Loves Angels," and at 16 she was the singing star of her second movie, "Sparkle." Dorian, from Dayton, Ohio, started out on Broadway, then came to Hollywood where he has starred in several TV movies and specials. Write to them c/o ABC-TV, 1330 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Q: My husband and I would like the address of Durk Pearson, a recent guest on Merv Griffin's show who said he has a product which will prevent baldness. A. PIGLIACAMPO, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: Pearson's address is: P.O. Box 942, Palos Verdes Estates, Calif. 90274.

Q: What series did Richard Egan star in? C. DEEVER, WOODRUFF, S.C.

A: Egan starred as Jim Redigo, a rugged ranch foreman in "Empire" (1962-'64), then in "Redigo," a spin-off that lasted only three months. TV guest roles keep Egan principally occupied now. Generally inactive in movies since 1971, he says it's "because I won't accept parts that would embarrass my kids."

Q: Who plays Ray on "Dallas," and please tell me something about him. C. FAOUR, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: Steve Kanaly, whose acting career was launched at the end of a gun. He's not a hold-up artist, but a former manager of several trap and skeet shooting clubs. Steve's customers who were in the film industry encouraged him to try his hand as an actor because of his rugged good looks. He has appeared in many films and TV shows and is now portraying Ray Krebbs, the Ewings' foreman on "Dallas."

Lasorda Looking For Pennant

For Tom Lasorda, the man who bleeds Dodger-blue, the last two Major League baseball seasons have been like a Shakespearean tragedy. Twice his Los Angeles Dodgers have been in the trough. Twice they have failed to drink.

But this is a new season, and the ubiquitous skipper — who would go to the ends of the earth preaching the gospel of Dodger-blue — is looking for his team to capture another National League title and get another crack at the World Series.

The Dodgers have a chance to show citizens of the Big Apple why they have been picked by most observers to repeat in the NL-West Division when they take on the youthful New York Mets

Saturday, April 28 (1:15 p.m.), on NBC-TV's "Game of the Week."

In the back-up game, the St. Louis Cardinals meet the Cincinnati Reds.

After 23 years in the LA organization, Lasorda saw his lifelong dream come true when he became the manager of the parent club. He has gone so far as to urge Dodger owner Walter O'Malley to put the LA schedule on his tombstone — "when I'm dead and gone."

While waiting for a chance to get the head job, Lasorda turned down three bonafide offers to manage other Major League club. "I just didn't see myself loving another team," he admitted. "That would be like loving another woman, and I've been married to Jo for 26 years. I told the Dodgers I loved them for 27 years, and when they named me manager, they said they loved me."

But the man who has guided his troops to two consecutive National League titles may be harder pressed to get the LA house in order. Gone are key stopper Tommy John and crucial designated-hitter Lee Lac.

But the west coast team has jumped out to a quick start in their bid to get another crack at a World Series title. And the San Francisco Giants, who were leading the pack last year until their pitching went sour, look ready to take another crack at their Southern foes.

The Cincinnati Reds, despite lacking much experience and depth in the pitching ranks, may also lay claim to the title if some of their young hurlers come around. They still have one of the toughest batting orders, even without Pete Rose. What they need are some young arms to go along with veteran Tom Seaver.

St. Louis sports some of the best young players in the Majors: Gary Templeton, Keith Hernandez and Jerry Mumphrey, to name a few, but they went into a tailspin last year, for seemingly inexplicable reasons. Now they are trying to come back, and the Reds are hoping to break their offensive weapons.

'Schoolhouse Rock' Expands Lineup

A lineup of outstanding children's programming, including an expansion of "Schoolhouse Rock," will be presented this fall on ABC-TV.

"Schoolhouse Rock," the acclaimed animated musical children's information series, is adding three new segments, among them the animated film, "Them Not-So-Dry Bones." Segments of the series that are returning include "America Rock," "Grammar Rock," "Multiplication Rock" and "Science Rock."

Among the other programs that will be airing are "Kids Are People Too," "Messages" (health and nutrition), and the children's advice column, "Dear Alex & Annie." There will also be new productions of "Afterschool Specials" and "Weekend Specials" and the inclusion of consumer education tips for children within new Saturday morning programs.

Three new "Messages," the 30 and 60-second animated announcements which provide children with useful tips about establishing and maintaining healthful habits, will bring the total number of these public messages currently on the air to 11.

This fall, ABC will schedule no less than 30 seconds of nutrition, health and safety, or consumer information spots per half hour. Beginning in January, the number of spots will increase when the network cuts back on commercial time.

"Dear Alex & Annie," the first musical advice column-of-the-air, which premiered last fall, will return with more problem-solving information for adolescents and pre-adolescent viewers.

The Teen Scene

LEIF GARRETT will be one of the participants on ABC's "BATTLE OF THE NETWORK STARS," tentatively scheduled to air Monday, May 7. Among others who'll take part in the show are VALERIE BERTINELLI of "ONE DAY AT A TIME" and "THE HULK" himself, LOU FERRIGNO.

Though DENISE MILLER lives in New Jersey, some of her income from the short-lived "MAKIN' IT" and her recent TV movie, "SOONER OR LATER" has gone toward the down payment on a condo in Hollywood so she'll not have to live in hotels or rented apartments during her frequent trips to the west coast.

ERIK ESTRADA has become so renown for his disco dancing talent that he's actually receiving requests from many Hollywood favorites for lessons. The idea has suggested the proposal that Erik host a Hollywood disco TV special in which many familiar faces would showcase their dancing talent.

Don't be surprised if TONY DANZA's young son shows up in at least one segment of "TAXI" next season. MARK DANZA did an impromptu off-camera scene with JUDD HIRSCH recently, and it was apparent to everyone that he's got a lot of his dad's talent.

ROBIN WILLIAMS will bring his comedy to the public in his first record album, to be recorded before a studio audience and released on Casablanca Records.

WILLIE AAMES and PARADISE will be announcing soon their plans to begin their first concert tour. Details are being worked out because Willie will have to be written out of at least one segment of "EIGHT IS ENOUGH."

Defending champion Gary Player, now in his 22nd year on the PGA Tour, heads an outstanding field of golfers competing for the $54,000 first prize in the 1979 Tournament of Champions. NBC will telecast the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday, April 21 and 22 (4 to 6 p.m. both days), from La Costa Country Club in Carlsbad, Calif.

No one on the tour has the little South African's capacity for work. At 5-foot 8-inches and 146 pounds, Player continually strives to eliminate anything that might interfere with attaining his objectives, and his discipline and tenacity are legend.

Player's victory in last year's Tournament of Champions came a week after he captured the Masters Tournament, his first win in nearly four years. His durability comes into clear perspective when you consider that this Master victory made him only the fourth golfer in history to have won PGA Tour events 20 or more years apart. The others are Sam Snead (29 years), Gene Littler (23 years) and Don January (20 years).

A millionaire in career earnings, he won both the Masters and the Tournament of Champions by making up seven strokes on the final day. He made it three victories in a row by coming from three strokes back in the last round of the Houston Open.

You could reasonably wonder what this man might really accomplish if he did not have to contend with a jet lag. The trip from Player's home in Johannesburg to New York consists of 10,000 miles and 17 hours. This accounts for a large part of the 5.5 million air miles he estimates he has logged during his golfing career.

'3 On 3' Returns On CBS

CBS Sports' version of "Three on Three," the halfcourt basketball game played for years in gyms and school yards, returns Sunday, April 22 (1 to 1:30 p.m.).

In this version of the game, a current National Basketball Association star, a past NBA star, and a show business celebrity are matched against similar opponents. Eight teams of stars will be seen in a single elimination tournament for seven straight Sundays, preceding the network's coverage of the NBA playoffs and world championship series.

The games consist of two eight-minute halves, with running time, and are officiated by NBA referees Ed Rush and Darell Garretson. To insure action, a 15-second clock was installed, with a team losing possession if it fails to shoot within that time frame.

Also, the celebrity on each team is there to compete, not just pass the ball inbounds. During each possession, the celebrity must handle the ball within a 20-foot shooting area of the basket, and any successful shot made by a celebrity beyond 15 feet is worth three points.

In the first competition, the teams consists of David Thompson, Pat Boone, Dave DeBuschere, Calvin Murphy, William Devane and Tom Van Arsdale.

Van Arsdale is from Indianapolis, where his name is synonymous with dedication and class.

'American Sportsman' Will Air

In the Portuguese colony of Macau, 40 miles from Hong Kong, 17 men whose names are among the most famous in the auto racing circle, compete in "The Race of Giants"; basketball star Bill Walton travels to Mindanao in the Philippines to search for the rarest of bird species, the monkey-eating eagle; and in an encore presentation, Robert Duvall descends the upper Ganges River of India in a rubber raft on "The American Sportsman," airing Sunday April 22 (3:30 to 4:30 p.m.), on ABC-TV.

Jackie Stewart, three time

World Driving Champion, lends his wit and knowledge to the commentary on "The Race of Giants" in Macau. Although not a competitor in the race, Stewart rolls a car for the first time in his career while taking a trial run for ABC cameras. Fortunately, he was uninjured. Some great names of racing, including Stirling Moss, Phil Hill, Dan Gurney, Jack Brabham and Dennis Hulme, plus still active drivers Bobby Unser and Jackie Ickx, have an old-timers get-together. Each man drives an identically prepared 1.6 liter Ford Escort and courses through the winding streets of Macau at speeds of up to 115 miles per hour.

Walton and four founders of the Film Research for an Endangered Environment (FREE) go to Mindanao to investigate what is being done to save the largest and most powerful eagle in the world, the monkey-eating eagle. The four men from FREE periodically worked and lived in the Philippines during the past two years, attempting to preserve the eagle by improving its habitat and its breeding.

Only 50 to 100 pairs of the mighty birds are still in existence because encroaching logging companies have increasingly cut down areas of rain forest where the eagles live. While in Mindanao, Walton climbs trees to view the nesting places of the eagles.

He travels to their breeding grounds and then ends his trip to the Philippines by interviewing President Marcos about possible methods to save the monkey-eating eagle.

Actor Robert Duvall survives a harrowing rubber raft trip down the Ganges River of India while fighting off treacherous rapids. Only three weeks before Duvall's trip, two members of a Czechoslovakian team died in their attempt to tame the identical stretch of river. Duvall's group, which includes leader Lute Herstad and oarsman Ken Warren, is the first to successfully span the headwaters of the Ganges.

During the ten-day trip, Duvall almost drowns when he is thrown from the raft, and the raft itself is nearly destroyed in the raging waters.

Susan's First

Susan Anton, the gorgeous blonde who is starring in NBC-TV's new quartet of musical shows aptly titled "Presenting Susan Anton," recently completed her first record album for Columbia Records.

Now she has just been invited to appear as a guest soloist with the Buffalo Symphony in November, 1979. "It will be the first time I've ever sung with 42 musicians," she says excitedly, "and what we'll do is expand the orchestra charts I use in my nightclub arrangements."

Movie Based On Novel

"I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings," a new television movie based on the best-selling Maya Angelou autobiography, will air on "The CBS Saturday Night Movies," April 28 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Paul Benjamin, Diahann Carroll, Rudy Dee, Roger E. Mosley, Esther Rolle and Madge Sinclair star, and co-starring are Sonny Jim Gaines and Art Evans. Constance Good and John M. Driver are introduced in the drama about a bright, sensitive black girl who finds poetry and much pain in the South as she is growing up in the Depression years.

The film was adapted by Leonora Thuna and Maya Angelou, author of the book which has been hailed as a work that "quietly and gracefully portrays and pays tribute to the courage, dignity and endurance of the small, rural Southern black community... of the 1930s."

Rolle portrays Momma, a proud, respected owner of the general store in the small town of Stamps, Ark., who takes on the job of rearing her two grandchildren, Maya (played by newcomer Constance Good) and Bailey Jr. (Driver) when their parents' marriage ends in divorce. She brings them up with pride and dignity, her "great brooding love" touching their lives. She also agonizes over the bitter fact that she cannot shelter them from the fierce prejudice that rages throughout the South during that era.

Carroll plays the role of the children's sophisticated mother, and Dee portrays their elegant maternal grandmother. Both live in a more affluent atmosphere in St. Louis, where the children are taken by their father (Mosley) and left to adjust to an entirely different style. Benjamin portrays Mr. Freeman, one of Maya's mother friends, who sexually assaults the child, traumatizing her into silence.

Sinclair portrays a perceptive teacher in Stamps, who molds and encourages her students and helps to make "caged birds sing."

Esther Rolle, familiar to television audiences for her role as Florida Evans on "Good Times," noted recently that her childhood was happy, compared to Maya Angelou's.

"My mother was an all-around lady. She was warm, very firm and good, and I tried to put some of her qualities into Florida Evans and well as into Momma.

"If Mom were still alive, I would spoil her rotten," she exclaimed. "The one big thing she wanted to do was travel, but couldn't because there were 18 children in the family. If it were possible today, I'd send her to all of the places she had ever dreamed of going."

NEVER NEEDS PAINT!

Premium Solid Vinyl Siding is solid all the way through. It is not laminated or painted, and is not a veneer so there's nothing to wear off or come apart. While scratches show on "Coated" siding, they are not apparent on Vinyl siding because the color is clear through.

IS REMARKABLY TOUGH!

Premium Solid Vinyl Siding resists denting from the hail, rocks, baseballs, lawn mowers and other objects that mar your home's appearance. It installs easily over any other siding material with concealed nails.

DEFIES THE ELEMENTS!

Premium Solid Vinyl Siding does not conduct heat or cold. This means it stays cool in summer and warm in winter. Vinyl does not retain moisture like wood. And, it will not "magnify" rain or hail sounds, or pop and crackle with temperature changes.

ADDS SOLID BEAUTY!

Premium Solid Vinyl Siding gives your home that always "freshly painted look" with the deep shadow lines of traditional wood design. Incredibly durable . . . It won't rust, rot, corrode, flake or scale . . . and termites won't touch it.

Food: cheap if you can afford it.

FOR WILLIAM T. BOEHM, leader, Food Economics, National Economic Analysis Division, U.S. Department of Agriculture

It's reported that American consumers throw away 20 percent of the food they buy. Any suggestions as to how this waste can be stopped? — Mrs. G.D. Kent, Lansing, Mich.

● The Federal Government has been concerned about this problem in its National School Lunch Program for years. In fact, there are several studies now underway, each experimenting with various ways to reduce food waste. But what happens in America's homes is another matter. Some food is wasted because it is not properly cared for or prepared. But a great deal is wasted because food is now relatively inexpensive for a large proportion of our population. A recent U.S. Government study shows that Americans with incomes over $30,000 per year spend less than 10 percent on food.

FOR CAROL BURNETT, entertainer

Why have you stopped dyeing your hair, after its being red all these years? — I.R., Tupelo, Miss.

● When I made my stage debut in Once Upon a Mattress, in 1959, the critics preferred to call me "that redhead," instead of Carol Burnett. I figured if I didn't stay red, they'd never remember who I was, so that's why I've been various shades of orange, rust and red ever since. When my TV show ended last year, I stopped. I was kind of curious to see what my natural color was after all these years.

FOR MAURICE SENDAK, illustrator-artist

Please settle an argument I'm having with a friend. I say that pop-up books for children stifle their imagination; she says they're stimulating. Who's right? — S.L., Bangor, Maine

● Your friend is. I do not think that pop-ups — touch-and-feel type books — deprive children of anything. I adored the pop-ups of the 30's as a youngster. They stimulated my imagination and added a dimension to lackluster stories. The creative child is not easily robbed of his talent.

FOR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS, psychologist and author of How to Get Whatever You Want Out of Life

Is there a sure-fire way to get people to like you? — Mary Mulligan, Flint, Mich.

● There certainly is. The surest way is to ask for a favor, a very small one. If you ask for a big favor and the person refuses, he or she will feel guilty and will end up staying away from you. If the person does you a big favor, you'll be the resentful one, because you'll wind up feeling obligated. But a small favor will put people on your side forever.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Why doesn't my favorite actor, Henry Fonda, take it easy, in view of his heart condition and the fact that he can certainly afford to forgo his huge acting paychecks? — G.B., Anderson, S.C.

● Fonda declares he'll call it quits when he has a hundred movies under his belt. (He just finished The Greatest Battle, his 86th.) His first, A Farmer Takes a Wife, was in 1935. Why does he keep hammering away? In Hank's own words: "No matter how many movies I make, I still think of myself as a stage actor. And the only reason I keep making films is to be able to pay my taxes and bills, so that I can afford to go back to Broadway. If I'm in a Broadway play that's successful, I could get $5,000 a week. When I do a movie, I can get 50 times that for a few weeks' work." He adds wryly, "I don't mind poverty — as long as I can earn the necessary money to support it."

Only 14 more films to go.

FOR DICK CAVETT, talk-show host

You're always making references to your lack of height. Are you really that unhappy about it? Would your career have turned out differently, were you taller? — J.R., Twin Falls, Idaho ● Except for my most recent obsession, that I could have been a professional basketball player, I doubt it. Most of my earlier "shortness" jokes simply filled a need for a comic crutch — or should I say hook — to hang jokes on. I'm not that short (5' 6 3/4"). I tower over Joel Grey by several inches.

FOR EILEEN FULTON, star of As the World Turns

In what ways are you like Lisa, the scheming, promiscuous character you play on the show? — R.S., Norwich, Conn.

● We both have a sense of humor (Lisa, I guess, needs one. How else could she have survived four marriages, 32 lovers and two nervous breakdowns?). She is intuitive, and she loves kids. I don't have any children, but I feel as though my two young brothers are my own. You see, Mom waited until I was old enough to be a free baby sitter.

FOR HOWARD STEIN, discothèque owner

Seems to me that discos are killing the art of conversation. What do you have to say? — J.A., Asbury, N.Y.

● The art of conversation is not dead. Although temporarily postponed, take it from me it's alive and well. The primary function of a disco is to transport one into fantasy land, away from the thoughts and pressures of a working day. However, the regulars who attend such places know the quiet corners and niches where conversation is as stimulating as the lights and sounds.

PRO Rep. Elliott H. Levitas, (D. Ga.)

The problem is who makes the laws, elected representatives or unelected bureaucrats? The rules promulgated by unelected bureaucrats (to execute laws) have the same effect as laws passed by the Congress. Since Congress should be responsible for the laws under our Constitution, it ought to have the right to veto "laws" issued by bureaucrats who don't have to run for office. It is a question of accountability. The Congress is accountable to the American people. Bureaucrats are not. If we want to reduce the number of regulations, make them sensible and workable, within the intent of the Congressionally-passed legislation, then the Congressional veto is the way for us to do it.

PRO AND CON

Should Congress Have Veto Power Over All Federal Regulations?

CON Frances A. Zwenig, staff attorney, Congress Watch

Legislative veto is the newest snake oil that politicians are peddling to consumers. It would give wealthy and well-organized special interests one more opportunity to lobby Congress, while creating the false impression that the agencies are under control. Congress can barely keep up with the 7,000 bills introduced each year: it is irresponsible for a member to promise constituents he or she can review tens of thousands of agency decisions. Legislative veto is unworkable — and unconstitutional. Congress should give agencies far less discretion and pass carefully structured new laws. As one Congressman admitted: "legislative veto is a confession of weakness — that Congress hasn't done its job right."

WHEN CHILDREN LEAVE HOME, WHAT'S A MOTHER TO DO?

By Stephanie Brush

Patricia Scott found herself walking around her kitchen one fall day with no clear idea of what she'd been doing for the past three hours. Always an active, vital person with plenty of work to fill her day, Patricia found this situation quite odd and quite unexpected. "You see, I was used to the idea that I ought to be doing something, but I realized my last big 'responsibility' had just walked out the door." Patricia is in her mid-50's and has raised three children, giving them the proverbial sweat, toil and tears that a mother gives; not to mention 25 very good years of her life. But the youngest one went away to college this year. Patricia says that her children are the best people she knows. "But the new sensation I had in my kitchen that day, odd though it was, felt absolutely terrific. I'm finally getting a rest. And enjoying it enormously." And no one in the world could say she doesn't deserve it.

A while ago there was a myth making the rounds called "the story of the empty nest." It went something like this: "A mama bird had a nest of adorable baby birds whom she loved more than anything in the world. And then one day they flew away and the mama bird had nothing. She was all alone and very sad." No one is quite sure where the story got started, but it is most decidedly fiction. Someone somewhere decided it was an accepted fact that a mother should feel a sense of "loss" when her children move away — that such a disruption of her life pattern should send her into crying fits, an abyss of depression or worse.

But the whole idea of a long-term "empty-nest syndrome," according to Dr. Margot Tallmer, who teaches the Psychology of Aging at Hunter College in New York, is sheer fabrication. "It stands to reason," says Dr. Tallmer, "that a woman's 50's should be the best years of her life. There's usually more money in the home. A woman is free to pursue her interests full-time — to travel, to work, to re-enroll at a university." And though the idea hasn't been fully understood, Margaret Mead reported a pronounced spurt of creativity occurring in women on the far side of their childbearing years. Similarly, psychologists Marjorie Fiske Lowenthal and David Chiriboga have called the postparenting years ones of "high morale."

Jeri Pondel of Des Plaines, Ill., has three sons, all either married or away at college. During the boys' formative years, Jeri was fairly active in her husband's contracting and real-estate business. Jeri herself never finished college. But six months after her youngest left home, Jeri enrolled at a local junior college and got her real-estate license. "My husband and I are closer than we ever have been," she says. "And this is the best part: one day I said to my husband, 'I think we could use a change of scene.' And two days later we were in Florida. Do you think we could have done that with the three boys at home?" The sentiment is echoed over and over again by women across the country: "I love my kids, but there comes a time to sit back and enjoy the fruits of my labor." Such a time is not only necessary, but inevitable.

How, then, did such an idea as "empty-nest blues" get started? "Losing" one's children is transition, and no major transition is easy — at least not at first. Dr. Bernice Neugarten of the University of Chicago explains: "Transition means change, and change always means stress. Any adaptation in the life cycle is difficult to handle. Women almost always adjust quickly, but at first they experience a mixed bag of feelings."

Barbara Hayes noticed herself going into a slump at work one summer. Her youngest was due to go on a study program to Europe that fall. The day young Susan was packing her suitcase, Barbara suddenly disappeared into the bathroom, emerging two hours later red-eyed and subdued. "I hadn't prepared myself emotionally for the break," she said, "and it suddenly hit me like a ton of bricks."

Marie Roche, who lives in New York, was likewise caught emotionally offguard — and three times as hard. Marie is the mother of triplets. They all left home at the same time. "What I miss," she says, "are the days when there were five of us at the dinner table. We're a very close family. We'd discuss everything. And suddenly it was just my husband and me. And a house full of empty rooms."

Every mother faces that houseful of empty rooms differently. Dr. Neugarten reminds us, "In this country today, 50 percent of the women in their 50's are members of the work force. Either they've been there all along or just rejoined it. They simply don't have time to sit around moping."

There's an unprecedented interest in recreational sports among young women in their 50's at the present time. Barbara, who dried her tears when her daughter went to Europe, determinedly dug a tennis racket out of her closet and set out for the courts. "All my life I thought I was the most uncoordinated person in the world," she says. "I don't know what ever gave me that idea. I've been amazing my instructor. I've been amazing my husband. I've been amazing myself." Marie, the triplets' mother, has recently been filling one of her "empty rooms" with bowling trophies. And for no reasons known to science, she suddenly dances the hustle better than her 19-year-old nephew.

University files across the country are bulging with new enrollments by women in their 50's. Their appetite for learning is voracious. The Human Relations Center of the New School for Social Research in New York estimates that 60 to 70 percent of its enrollment consists of women past childbearing years, and offers such subjects as Getting Back to Work, Regaining Self Confidence, and Risking Change.

And as change almost always seems to be for the better for women in the nest-clearing stage, what about men? It's a phase often more than a little poignant for fathers. It's not uncommon for a work-worn papa to look up from his desk one day and realize his child is on the way out the door for good. "I was at dinner with my son one night," recalls a father, "and I suddenly reminded him of some little silly game we played when he was a kid. Suddenly it seemed terribly important that he remember it. But he didn't have any idea of what I was talking about. And it bothered me for quite a while. I'm still not sure why."

But just as in a mother's case, a father's nostalgia pangs are temporary in a healthy family. "You talk about the 'plight' of the middle-aged man," says Dr. Neugarten. "The media's been going on and on about the so-called 'midlife crisis.' But it's nothing but a stereotype. And people sit there and wait for something awful to happen, and when it doesn't they say, 'Oh my God. I missed my midlife crisis. I must be abnormal.'"

The 50's are a time for tranquility, for the pursuit of long-abandoned dreams, and for late (always better than never) blooming. And after all — the mothering instinct never really dies — it just turns into the grandmothering one. "I'd certainly like grandchildren," admits Jeri; then hesitantly, "But it's up to my children to decide." "I'd love them," says Barbara. "It'd be great for the time when I feel wistful about having my daughters young again." "Better," says Marie. "You get to choose your own hours." Marie, who so far only has one grandchild, baby-sits once a week at her bowling alley, just to be near the young. "Grandmothers aren't just 'nice,'" says Dr. Tallmer. "Their presence has been required by evolution. Yes, the grandmother role has always been revered by society, but it goes somewhat deeper than that. Before there were 'experts' on the subject of child-rearing, grandmothers were the only source available. 'What does this cough mean? Ask Grandma.' 'Why does Bobby do that to his thumb? Ask Grandma.' It's a pattern of survival which predates Dr. Spock by several thousand years."

To paraphrase the Bible, "to everything there is a season," including a time to let go. As one mother says, "The job of a mother is to provide a framework in which a human being can grow. And the long-term goal of a mother is to work herself out of a job." A mother always finds out whether she's done her job well.

"I do a lot of lecturing on middle age all around the country," says Dr. Neugarten. "And at every lecture, I say, 'It's not really a 'problem' when your children grow up and leave home. It's a problem when your children grow up and don't leave home.' And I always get a round of applause."

Viva Juan Pablo!

The death of Pope Paul VI; the election of John Paul I and his untimely death; the appearance of John Paul II, the first non-Italian pope in centuries, a man of many languages and talents, equally at home with delighted Romans and enthusiastic Mexicans—such are the news items that have turned the world's attention again to the Vatican and the papacy.

Watching this turn of events, many persons have found a new interest in the role of the man whom Catholics call the Holy Father. How do Catholics understand his place in the Church? How do they see his relationship to Christ and to Peter? What is true and what is false in popular concepts of papal infallibility?

If you share this interest in the papacy, you may want to read our pamphlet, "The Papacy: Expression of God's Love" (Revised edition). Write for your free copy today. No one will call on you.

BARGAINING FOR LIVES: THE DEADLY GAMBLE OF HOSTAGE NEGOTIATION

By L.B. Taylor Jr.

A little over two years ago, three groups of gunmen armed with rifles, shotguns and machetes burst into three separate buildings in Washington, D.C., and held 139 terrified hostages captive. Fear spread through the nation's capital as the gunmen, members of a religious splinter sect, threatened mass bloodshed unless a long list of their demands was met.

• Last year in San Francisco, seven innocent shoppers were seized and held captive by two heavily armed robbers who were caught holding up a supermarket. An uneasy stand-off existed for several hours when police surrounded the busy market.

• In New York City, a deranged man barricaded himself in a small apartment and aimed a revolver at the head of a five-year-old girl hostage for 30 tense hours as police stood by helplessly.

Astonishingly, the 139 hostages in Washington, the seven shoppers in San Francisco and the little girl in New York all were either released or rescued — and all the gunmen were apprehended — without a single shot being fired or anyone being injured.

These three cases, and dozens of others like them that occur every year in the United States, were resolved through a relatively new strategic tactic now employed by more than 400 law-enforcement agencies across the nation. It is called hostage negotiations.

Simply, it involves handling potentially explosive situations by bargaining rather than using force; by applying logic and common sense instead of bullets and tear gas.

With the disturbing rise of terrorist activities throughout the world during the past decade, hostage negotiation is a timely and necessary idea.

Its origins in the U.S. were triggered by the tragedy at the 1972 summer Olympic Games in Munich, Germany, when 11 Israeli athletes were murdered by Arab terrorists after police stormed the hostage-takers.

To avert such a catastrophe here, police departments and

Hanafi terrorists went off to jail after kidnapping 139 in Washington. A 39-hour talk with police broke down their resolve.

After 30 hours of talking, New York City police freed 5-year-old Avril Kinsler from a deranged gunman.

such Federal agencies as the F.B.I. studied the problem and began seeking alternate solutions to hostage confrontations.

Emphasis centered on non-violent means as opposed to the use of brute force, widely practiced in European and other countries.

One of the persons generally credited with developing crisis negotiating techniques is Dr. Harvey Schlossberg, a New York City detective with a Ph.D. degree in clinical psychology.

His research determined that hostage-takers generally fall into three main categories: the professional criminal who has his or her escape blocked during the commission of a crime; the psychotic with an undetermined motive; and the terrorist or fanatic with a cause.

Schlossberg's primary objective was to save lives — of hostages, law-enforcement officers and hostage-takers. In searching for effective ways to ease anxieties and tensions in highly emotional situations, he came to the conclusion that the best means was through talk.

Schlossberg reasoned that time is the most important single factor working for police in a crisis. And the first positive step in any negotiations, he decided, is opening up a conversation between the person or persons holding people and the law officers in charge at the scene.

"As a general rule, the more time the felon spends with the Spectacular FLOWERING CHERRY-HEDGE bursts into a Living Wall of Bloom. Then Loads Itself Down with Thousands of Mouth-watering Cherries Just Begging to be Picked!

Who says cherries are almost impossible to grow? What with special spraying and feeding, pruning and pampering it's no wonder you almost had to be an expert to get a decent crop of fruit! And the wait — why it takes years and years for a cherry tree to bear a single piece of fruit!

NOW YOU CAN HARVEST THOUSANDS OF CHERRIES WITHOUT EVEN PLANTING A TREE

It's here! A garden sensation that has to be one of the most exciting horticulture discoveries of the century. The FLOWERING CHERRY-HEDGE... an amazing plant that produces thousands of plump, mouth-watering cherries starting the very next season after planting. Yes, you'll be rewarded with basketfuls of luscious fruit... more than enough to enjoy by the bowlful with plenty left over for pies, jams and preserves so you can enjoy your Cherry Harvest all 12 months of the year!

A LIVING WALL OF BLOOMS UNLIKE ANY YOU'VE EVER SEEN

Your bumper crop of delicious fruit is only half the story of this spectacular gift of nature. Each Spring The FLOWERING CHERRY-HEDGE erupts into a living wall of color — smothering itself from top to bottom with masses of breathtaking pink blossoms. HOSTAGES hostage, the less likely he is to take the hostage's life because they become acquainted and develop feelings for one another," Schlossberg says.

This is called a "positive transference of feelings," based on the assumption that it is harder for a person to kill or harm someone he knows, rather than a total stranger.

The passage of time also gives police an opportunity to prepare better, and increases the chances that the hostage-taker may make a mistake that could lead to capture or surrender.

"We try talking, talking and more talking. We try to bore them to tears," says Capt. Frank Bolz, who heads the New York City Police Department's hostage negotiating units.

Bolz says a good deal of the effort involves common sense and the ability to think quickly and adapt to fast-changing situations, such as hostage-takers' sudden demands for transportation to move from one site to another.

"We have certain set rules, however," he points out. "For one thing, you do not give weapons or ammunition to hostage-takers. Also, you do not exchange prisoners. And most of all, you never exchange a police officer for a hostage."

Bernie Thompson is a top F.B.I. negotiator.

Bernie Thompson, one of the F.B.I.'s most experienced negotiators, believes the first half hour or so of any hostage-holding incident is definitely the most crucial.

"This is the time when the criminal is most likely to act violently because he fears for his life," Thompson says. "Everything is fever-pitched. It's not the time to press in any way. So you try to be low-key, to defuse things from a panic state to a more stable one."

"You try to reassure the criminal that no one is going to rush in after him. Once he has been stabilized to the point he can be engaged in conversation," Thompson says, "and realizes he has not been attacked or rushed, the negotiator then attempts to establish a basis for trust between him and the hostage-taker.

"To accomplish this, you don't make false promises. You have to negotiate from a position of good faith. You're trying to establish credibility to convince the person you are sincere in what you are doing. If you misrepresent anything, it probably will come back to haunt you."

Thompson says he tries to relate to the person as someone with dignity, whose current problems have led him to what he feels are logical actions.

"I'm willing to hear what his concerns are, to provide him with a way out, a way to save face. The last thing I want to do is to make him panic, and I work on the assumption he will not take lives unless he's forced into it."

Schlossberg concurs: "All of these people holding hostages have problems of one kind or another," he says. "The key is to recognize this and not to close off all possible solutions to that problem."

Bolz, Thompson and others believe conversation serves not only to calm and stabilize the hostage-taker but also to wear him down.

"Wearing a man down means giving him enough time to become physically tired and emotionally subdued, so that he sees clearly that his best chance to resolve his crisis is to let his hostages go and, finally, to surrender," says Thompson.

In the Washington siege, for example, Assistant Police Chief Robert Rabe conversed for 39 hours without so much as a nap before the captors' fury was diluted and their resolve was broken.

In the New York case involving the little girl, Bolz took advantage of a gunman's weariness — after 30 hours of off-and-on-talking — to snatch the five-year-old girl to safety as food was being brought into the barricaded apartment.

"Over the years, the New York City Police Department hostage negotiations team has done well in excess of 400 jobs," says Schlossberg. "We haven't lost a hostage or a policeman or a perpetrator since the negotiations got underway."

No lives have been lost in San Francisco, either, since special teams have been in operation there. "Those of us involved in hostage negotiation are deeply committed to the concept," says Lt. Richard Klapp, who heads this section for the San Francisco Police Department.

"We feel that it has added a new dimension to law-enforcement's capability to deal effectively with the most violent situations."

Bernie Thompson of the F.B.I. believes that in a democracy, hostage-takers must be negotiated with — not because of their rights but because of the rights of their victims, the hostages.

"Negotiation is the most compassionate, most humane and the most professional way to handle crisis situations," says Lt. Klapp seriously. "We know that we have saved lives, and that is the way we know we have to go."

Surprising New Research On How Men And Women Differ

Though many of the traditional social differences between men and women have been erased, scientific evidence indicates that there are still a substantial number of differences between the way men's and women's brains and nervous systems function. According to research studies gathered together by two neuropsychologists at Stanford University:

Women are more sensitive to taste and touch, see better at night, and have keener hearing, although they are less able to tolerate loud sounds.

Men have better daytime vision, faster reaction times, are more easily distracted by novelty and more willing to explore a new environment. They are less sensitive than women to extreme heat, but more sensitive to extreme cold.

Women seem to be able to make quicker decisions, are more skilled in expressing themselves verbally, and are better equipped to handle tasks requiring manual dexterity.

Men play rougher in childhood, and are more interested in playing with objects such as pots, cans and boxes than with traditional toys. Men have better depth perception and grasp spatial relationships more quickly, giving them an advantage in mechanical and mathematical work.

Women are more interested in people than in things, and, from earliest childhood, they have more empathy in emotional and social situations. Perhaps because of this, they seem better able to remember names and faces. And is there any truth to "women's intuition"? According to the experts, women do catch subliminal messages faster and more accurately than men.

What Dinnertime Talk Reveals About Your Family

In some families, dinnertime is the time for a pleasant exchange of news and opinions among parents and children. In other families, dinnertime is a tense experience during which youngsters are expected to be silent while Father hands down decisions on everything from politics to allowances to punishments for misbehavior. Some families dine together every night, perhaps with linen and silver and candles on the table. Other families eat helterskelter and on the run, with family members arriving and leaving at different times.

Do these family dinnertime customs take shape by chance, by habit, or do they arise out of basic factors in family life? In recent years, counselors and therapists have increasingly come to the opinion that what happens at the dinner table reflects attitudes and behavior that prevail through the family's daily life. Unconscious feelings about family relationships are unwittingly acted out there, say the experts.

For most families, dinner is the one time during the day when everyone is together. How this time is used is likely to mirror the larger patterns of family behavior. Here are some guidelines that illustrate ways in which dinnertime habits can reveal family strengths and weaknesses:

• Do parents eat with their children, or separately? For many families the answer is dictated by circumstances — the ages of the youngsters, parents' work schedules. But when parents can make a choice based on feelings, their decision often reveals basic attitudes. For example, some parents willingly accept the minor annoyances of dining with children (noise, dropped food, interruptions, squabbles) for the rewards of a shared experience. "If it weren't for the dinner hour I'd never get to know what my kids are thinking or feeling," one man said. Other parents always dine without their children — the sign, some counselors say, of emotional withdrawal.

• Does dinnertime conversation revolve around the news of the day or personal events? Does each person get a chance to talk, or does one person monopolize the conversation? Is dinner the time when Mother recaps the children's misbehavior and Dad disciplines?

• Does one parent or the other insist that the children eat with him or her? That may mask a marital conflict, with one parent using the children as a buffer — a living barrier between the spouses.

• Is food used to control a spouse or a child? Making a youngster "clean the plate," or eat a disliked food, can be a subtle form of punishment or sign of hostility. One therapist tells of a woman who served tasteless meals to her husband whenever he did something to displease her.

The significance of dinnertime habits is not overly difficult to analyze. If a family meal is a pleasant experience for all, it strengthens the love and concern that made it possible in the first place. But if a dinner table is used as a courtroom or battlefield, meals will only intensify family conflicts. The important thing, family counselors say, is for families to try to become aware of these dinnertime patterns. If we can recognize and identify them, it is possible to change the negatives and reinforce the positives. Moreover, if children find family dinners enjoyable, it will be easier for them to have pleasant dinnertimes with their families when they are grown. fw

YOUR STRONG POINTS COULD SCARE OFF EMPLOYERS

By Shirley Sloan Fader

Surprisingly, such work habits as "loyalty" or "conscientiousness" or even "likability" can sometimes prevent you from getting the job you want. Many companies are adopting hiring practices based on the theories of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute's School of Management. RPI says you will fail at a job if you are weak in even one personality trait needed for that job — regardless of other strengths. And for some jobs, "loyalty," "conscientiousness" and "likability" are considered weaknesses.

For example, employers with major problems to solve won't hire the very "loyal" applicant. The employers fear that very loyal employees will avoid finding solutions that might require organizational changes. The "conscientious" person might be rejected as being unlikely to have the imagination needed to reorganize work for greater efficiency. As for people with a strong need to be liked — "likability" — they will not be offered an executive position that may require them to make unpopular decisions.

In the same way, your aggressiveness, ambition and even your intelligence can sometimes count against you. Dr. Arthur A. Witkin, chief psychologist of Personnel Sciences Center of New York, explains that employers will be reluctant to hire anyone who is too intelligent for the job involved. They believe these employees would rapidly grow bored and restless. They're "overqualified." Aggressiveness, too, can be an asset or drawback, depending on the job you're applying for. Says Dr. Witkin, "If you want a job managing a group of taxi drivers, you need high aggressiveness. But that same amount of aggressiveness in a job managing a group of accountants will turn into oversupervision and will antagonize everyone."

The overall message is clear. Before you describe yourself in a job application or interview, analyze what characteristics an employer might want for that work. If you don't have them, forget the job. You'd be unhappy in it. But if you have the necessary characteristics, make sure the interviewer knows it. FW

TEN BEST CAMPING TRIPS IN NORTH AMERICA

By Chuck Cadieux

FAMILY WEEKLY asked me to pick the 10 best camping trips in North America and Mexico. Forty-seven years of camping on our continent has given me knowledge enough to recommend 500, but not wisdom enough to choose only 10. With or without wisdom, here are my top 10 choices.

1. CARAVANAS DE MEXICO

Drive your recreational vehicle to El Paso, then to Chihuahua City and onto a chartered train! At a leisurely 20 m.p.h., your private rig will carry you to the West Coast at Los Mochis. Stops en route will allow you to visit Franciscan missions of the 1600's, tall pine forests, Tarahumara Indian caves, to 9,000 feet over the Sierra Madres and down to the bottom of the awesome Barranca del Cobre. De-training at Los Mochis, you'll tour port city Topolobampo, then drive to Mazatlan — a fishing and shopping paradise. Return trip follows Highway #15 through Guaymas and Hermosillo to exit Mexico at Nogales. Tour available September-April. Best is the rail part — you need no gas, and you don't have to drive.

2. VANCOUVER ISLAND

Accessible by ferries from British Columbia's Vancouver or Washington's Port Angeles, the island is a paradise for campers, anglers and photographers. Excellent provincial parks provide bases for exploration trips to Kelsey Bay — jump-off for Alaska; to fishing villages Tofino and Ucluelet on the West Coast; to Cathedral Grove with its immense trees; to Campbell River for salmon; to Duncan to shop for Cowichan wool sweaters. Save three days for the capital city, Victoria is a bit of Olde England, where roses bloom on Christmas Day.

3. THE OUTER BANKS

North Carolina is protected from the Atlantic by sandy islands: Hatteras, Bodie, Ocracoke and the uninhabited Portsmouth and Core Banks. The national park campground at Buxton is in the shadow of Hatteras Lighthouse which warned mariners of Diamond Shoals. Free ferries take you on to Ocracoke — a town (where Blackbeard holed up) that got along without a bar, jail, doctor or hospital for 300 years. You'll eat delicious seafood — and catch it yourself.

Visit the Wright Memorial of the first manned flight and the quaint boat-building village of Wanchese. Surf, sand, sea, sun and wonderful people — North Carolina's Outer Banks.

4. COLONIAL VIRGINIA

Tidewater Virginia's great beauty is steeped in American history. Start at Yorktown, where the Revolution really ended; then to Jamestown, ill-fated first permanent English settlement in our land; to restored Colonial Williamsburg, where democracy began in our nation — don't miss the interpretive movie that will illuminate your visit. Through Richmond, once the Confederacy's capital to Monticello, home of Thomas Jefferson; then up the Blue Ridge Mountain highway to Mount Vernon, George Washington's home and on to our Nation's capital city. Campgrounds are plentiful, but near Washington, camp outside and ride express buses in.

5. YELLOWSTONE PARK

No list of camping trips can omit Yellowstone National Park. Geysers, mountains, lakes, wildlife seen close up, trout-fishing, hiking trails, back-packing excursions: Yellowstone has them all to a greater degree than any other park — but it also has crowds.

Go in September if you possibly can. Insects are fewer, and you'll escape the traffic jams of summer. There's a chance of meeting cold days, but that is expected all year round, for Yellowstone is high altitude. If you have to go during June through August, seek out camping spots early in the day.

6. HIGH UP IN MEXICO

Mexico City is cooler in August than Chicago because of its altitude. You'll find the nights cool and the days comfortable — when it's broiling back home. Bring birth certificate and car title when you cross at Laredo. Drive directly to Saltillo to reach the cool highlands.

Route yourself through San Miguel de Allende's famed art colony; through Dolores Hidalgo, where Mexico's struggle for independence began; through Guanajuato, show-place of Spanish colonial architecture; to Queretaro, where Emperor Maximilian lost his crown and his life; to Mexico City itself. Fourteen million people make up this exciting cosmopolitan city. Visit the Gardens of Xochimilco, Chapultepec Park, the Olympic Village, the exciting shops and restaurants of the Zona Rosa, the amazing ruins of Teotihuacan and the greatest museum in the Western Hemisphere — the Museo Antropologica.

7. PUEBLOS AND PINES

English, Spanish and Indian cultures collide in northern New Mexico to form one of our top tourist attractions. Start by visiting Santo Domingo — an island of Indian culture in a sea of Anglos — then an hour's drive north to Santa Fe, which boasted a civic opera and symphony orchestra a century before Chicago built its first log cabin. Visit the Palace of the Governors, shop for silver and turquoise from the craftsmen who made it; visit the nation's oldest church and La Escalera Famosa. Cool campsites in the Carson and Santa Fe National Forests will be your headquarters for side trips to Pecos National Monument; to Bandelier, with its carved stone lions; to the ancient pueblos of Nambe, Tesuque, Pojoaque, San Ildefonso and Santa Clara; to Los Alamos, where the atom bomb was secretly developed; or to the multistoried Taos Pueblo.

8. DUTCH TO FRENCH

Starting at York or Lancaster, tour the Pennsylvania Dutch land, through rich farmland and villages named Intercourse, Blue Ball and Paradise — a land where the tractor never replaced the horse. Drive slowly to safeguard horse-drawn carriages of the industrious Amish and Mennonite people. Eat at Stoltzfus's family-style restaurant — but go only when you've got a big appetite!

Then go north through back-country Pennsylvania and upstate New York to the Thousand Island Bridge and on into Quebec's Verendrye Provincial Park, your northern terminus for camping in an uncrowded land of clean water, clear skies and abundant wildlife. Time this trip just right, and you'll be there to enjoy the spectacular fall foliage.

9. CANADA'S ROCKY MOUNTAINS

Jasper, Banff, Yoho, Glacier and Mt.

National Park Service Photograph

Yellowstone National Park is full of mountains, geysers, wildlife — and people, unless you camp there in September.

Revelstoke parks are easily reached over excellent highways and offer unmatched mountain scenery, abundant wildlife, cool, sunny days, good fishing in streams milky from glacial melt. You can go sledding in July — on glacial ice that is thousands of years old and ride chair lifts up for incomparable views.

10. VACATION WITH THE NAVAJO

Start at the only place in the U.S. where four states' borders meet at a common point (New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado and Utah). Head west on Highway #160 to Monument Valley, a landscape of immense sandstone pillars eroded into weird shapes by the winds of this harsh land. You'll be on the Navajo Indian reservation, which is bigger than Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Connecticut combined and the home for 140,000 Navajo people who have provided campground facilities in their cool, pine-clad high country. Visit ruins of the "Anasazi," the old ones who preceded the Navajos. Don't miss Canyon de Chelly National Monument and see the lesser-known Hopi towns of Oraibi or Moenkopi.

To the west and north lies Lake Powell, where boat tours can show you much of its 1,800-mile shoreline — where the water may be 400 feet deep beneath you and the canyon walls tower 200 feet above you in tiger-striped red and beige walls of rock.

To the south and east lie the old Navajo trading posts, the Meteor Crater, the Navajo rug weavers' auction at Crownpoint. June through October is the best time to camp in the tall pines.

The JOY of CAMPING

HEARTY FOODS FOR APPETITES AS BIG AS ALL OUTDOORS

By Marilyn Hansen

There's nothing like talking around a campfire at night and sharing the day's experiences. And there's nothing like getting the real low-down on camping and cooking from the folks who really do it.

The largest state organization of conservation clubs is MUCC (Michigan United Conservation Clubs), with headquarters in Lansing, Mich. The group is an affiliate of the National Wildlife Federation.

Tom Washington is executive director of MUCC, and we talked at length by phone. "Camping and living-off-the-land experiences started with membership in the Boy Scouts — and I went through all the chairs of scouting, eventually becoming a scoutmaster.

"Back in high school in Dearborn, Mich., I frequently went on survival-type excursions, taking a few basic provisions from home and finding the remainder by living off the land and 'making do.' It naturally followed that I became an expert wildlife hunter and fisherman. I love to eat wild game and freshly caught fish, so I learned how to prepare them. I've cooked everything, from grouse to ground hogs!

"I've actually cooked out from the arctic to the equator, backpacking, canoeing and camping out; primarily tent camping. The cooking equipment you need varies with the kind of camping you are going to do. Equipment has gotten more sophisticated. There are now even gas camping ovens available, fueled by white gas or propane.

Also at Michigan United Conservation Clubs, we found Teri Littrell, who is Environmental Education Coordinator.

Truly an outdoorswoman, Teri now alternates between regular tent-camping and backpacking trips with her nine-year-old son, Russ. He has grown and developed his outdoors skills almost from birth, as Teri took him on his first camping trip when he was only six weeks old.

Cooking is not a big part of their camping experience, as they prefer to eat simply, bringing such things as packaged ramen noodles, packaged macaroni and cheese dinners and raisins and nuts.

The Littrells love to sleep out, and one of their special camping sites is Isle Royale National Park, Lake Superior, Mich.

I asked Teri whether she and Russ have developed any special skills as a result of camping. Teri quickly replied, "We depend on each other. We have learned survival skills by camping out in the fall in way-below-zero temperatures. It gets pretty cold out there! I myself have learned to be more patient and adjust to Russ's pace because he is so little."

Russ told me that one of the things that he likes best about camping is putting up the tent. He advises campers to bring dry mixes, like pancake mix, and cold drink mixes. Also, Russ says, "Bring extra matches, and don't forget a flashlight."

RUSS LITRELL'S PANCAKE SYRUP

- 1 cup water
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 cup brown sugar, packed
- ¼ teaspoon maple flavoring or black walnut flavoring

1. Combine water, sugar and brown sugar in a saucepan. Cook over medium heat, stirring until sugar dissolves.

2. Let mixture boil slowly, uncovered, over low heat for five minutes. Add maple flavoring.

Makes 2 cups

HOT CHILI CORN CAKE

- 1 pkg. (8½ ozs.) corn-muffin mix
- 2 cans (15 ozs.) chili without beans
- 1 pkg. (8 ozs.) process cheese, cubed
- 1 cup chopped onion

1. Preheat oven to 350°F. Prepare corn-muffin mix as package label directs.

2. Pour batter into greased 8 x 8 x 2-inch pan. Bake about 25 to 30 minutes or until done.

3. Heat chili in saucepan, stirring until mixture comes to a boil. Stir in cheese cubes; heat until cheese is almost completely melted.

4. Cut corn bread into large squares, place on serving plates. Spoon chili cheese sauce over corn bread and top with a sprinkle of onion, if desired.

Makes 6 servings

CAMPERS' OATMEAL

Individual packets (1-oz. size) instant oatmeal

Raisins, chopped, dried prunes or apricots

Chopped almonds or walnuts

Milk

Brown sugar

1. Prepare oatmeal according to package label directions in individual bowls.

2. Stir in raisins and nuts, about a tablespoon of each per serving. Serve with milk and brown sugar as desired.

Make number servings desired

LUMBERJACK SOUP

- 1 can (20 ozs.) cannellini (white kidney beans)
- 1 can (1 lb.) mixed vegetables, undrained
- 1 can (10½ ozs.) beef bouillon
- 1 can (10½ ozs.) tomato soup
- 1 soup can water

3 knockwurst, sliced, or 4 frankfurters, sliced

- 1 tablespoon parsley flakes
- ¼ teaspoon garlic chips or powder
- ¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
- ½ teaspoon Italian herb seasoning
- ½ cup dry red wine
- 6 slices Italian bread, toasted
- 6 slices Swiss cheese

1. In 3-to-4-quart saucepan, combine cannellini, mixed vegetables, beef bouillon, tomato soup, water, knockwurst, parsley flakes, garlic chips, pepper, Italian herb seasoning and red wine.

2. Stir and heat mixture to boiling. Reduce heat and simmer, covered, 15 minutes.

3. Pour into an ovenproof 3-qt. casserole. Top with 6 slices toasted Italian bread. Cover bread with cheese slices. Place in broiler and heat until cheese is melted.

Makes 6 servings

HOT PACKET BUNS

- 1 can (12 ozs.) luncheon meat
- 1 can (10½ ozs.) cream of mushroom soup
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1 teaspoon prepared mustard
- Dash freshly-ground black pepper
- ½ cup well-drained sauerkraut
- 6 to 8 slices American process cheese
- 6 to 8 hamburger buns

1. Coarsely chop luncheon meat. In medium bowl, combine luncheon meat, mushroom soup, Worcestershire sauce, mustard, pepper and sauerkraut. Mix well.

2. Spoon mixture evenly onto 6 to 8 hamburger buns. Top with a slice of cheese and cover with top of bun.

3. Wrap each filled bun in a square of heavy-duty foil. Seal tightly with a double fold across top and sides.

4. Heat on grill for 15 to 20 minutes, turning once. Or place on cookie sheet and bake in a preheated 400°F. oven for 15 to 20 minutes, turning once.

Makes 6 to 8 servings

BEEFY GRILLE

- 1 can (4¾ ozs.) roast beef spread
- 2 tablespoons chopped scallions
- 2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
- 2 tablespoons chopped zucchini
- 2 pita breads, split
- 4 slices tomato
- 4 slices Swiss cheese (3" square)

1. In a small bowl, combine roast beef spread, scallions, green pepper and zucchini.

2. Spread mixture on pita. Top with a slice of tomato and cheese. Wrap securely in aluminum foil.

3. Heat, in foil, over outdoor grill until cheese is melted.

Makes 4 sandwiches

BACKPACKERS' SUPERBARS

- ½ cup butter or margarine
- ¾ cup brown sugar, packed
- ½ cup quick-cooking oats
- ½ cup unsifted whole wheat flour
- ½ cup unsifted all-purpose flour
- ¼ cup toasted wheat germ
- 2 teaspoons grated orange rind
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup whole blanched almonds
- ¼ cup raisins
- ½ cup flaked coconut
- ½ cup semi-sweet chocolate bits

1. In medium bowl of electric mixer, beat butter with ½ cup of the brown sugar until soft and blended.

2. At low speed beat in oats, whole wheat and all-purpose flours, wheat germ and orange rind. Pat into an ungreased 8 x 8 x 2-inch square pan.

3. Mix eggs, almonds, raisins, coconut, chocolate bits and remaining ¼ cup brown sugar; pour over the base and spread evenly.

4. Bake in preheated 350°F. oven about 30 to 35 minutes or until almonds are golden brown.

5. Cool, then cut into 12 bars or squares; wrap with plastic film to keep moist.

Makes 12 bars

YOU CAN WIN $100 FOR YOUR RECIPE!

We are so pleased with the overwhelming success of our Neighbors' Recipe Exchange that we are now introducing a contest for the best entries and will offer prizes of $100, $50 and $25. The contestants' recipes must be postmarked between March 11 and April 29. The recipes will be judged for their originality and taste appeal by three nationally known cooks, and the winners will be announced in our July Cookbook feature. National Smoker Study:

Merit Taste Eases Low Tar Decision.

'Enriched Flavor'TM tobacco proving real alternative to high tar smoking.

How difficult is it for smokers of high tar cigarettes to make a switch to a lower tar brand? Recent nationwide research confirms MERIT flavor makes the low tar decision easy.

Confirmed: 85% of MERIT smokers say it was an "easy switch" from high tar brands.

Confirmed: 9 out of 10 MERIT smokers not considering other brands.

Confirmed: Overwhelming majority of MERIT smokers say their former high tar brands weren't missed!

And in interviews conducted among thousands of smokers:

Confirmed: Majority of smokers rate MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading high tar cigarettes tested! Cigarettes having up to twice the tar.

Confirmed: Majority of smokers confirm taste satisfaction of low tar MERIT.

MERIT has proven conclusively that it not only delivers the flavor of high tar brands—but continues to satisfy!

This ability to satisfy over long periods of time could be the most important evidence to date that MERIT science has produced what it claims: The first real taste alternative for high tar smokers.

The JOY of KIDS TAKE CAMPING TO CAMP LIKE DUCKS TO WATER

By Ginny Ade

On camping trips, children seldom complain about having nothing to do. They respond well to nature — the smell of the earth and flowers, the feel of pine needles underfoot, the endless enchantment of nature's creatures. They respond well to other small campers, too.

Children under 10 are gregarious, and soon after arriving at a campground they begin making friends with children in the next campsite. They learn quickly about things to do, and games to play. And if a campground has a lake or swimming pool, the kids are clamoring to get into their swimsuits before Dad can even get the trailer parked.

Since camp activities for kids vary widely according to the season, the locale and the type of campground, advance planning is a good idea. In spring, the wise parent takes along treated nylon ponchos or rain suits and boots that slide on easily, for each child. Outfitted against the rain, children and parents can go walking in the woods to view the glistening world of the forest, where new spring wildflowers are unfolding and leaves are turning bright green.

Camping parents also know that spring rains may last more than one day. So they take along games like Monopoly that take a long time to play. Scrabble is another game that keeps several children occupied at a time when they are confined to the camper. Older children enjoy jigsaw puzzles or books, and for small fry, you might bring along bits of cloth, paper, tape, scissors and crayons, to create funny-face or animal collages.

Sometimes campgrounds offer unique activities of their own. A campground close to a sugar camp, for example, allows children to watch the sap dripping into buckets hung on the trees, and later maple syrup and candy being made. And communities near sugar camps often have special festivals which include tasty pancake and sausage breakfasts, in which camping families can participate.

While national forests offer swimming, boating and hiking, state parks often have bikes to rent, saddle horses for hire and beautiful bridle trails. At a new Horse Park near Lexington, Kentucky, visitors can ride horses over special trails, tour the park in horse-drawn antique carriages, browse through a horse museum, and observe horses involved in every type of sport, from steeple-chase to rodeo exhibitions. There is a campground at the park, too.

But if your kids like hiking better than riding, be on the lookout for self-guided nature trails found in national and state parks and forests. Children like them because they can hike at their own pace, stopping at each marked point of interest.

If these outdoor activities don't fill the bill, there are special events to interest children, too. All children love pageantry, and many outdoor theater presentations are found in or near national or state parks. These are usually historical dramas of early pioneer life that bring the area's history to life. Various Indian tribes also perform ceremonial dances at national parks or on land where they now operate a number of campgrounds. At the Badlands National Monument campground of South Dakota, for example, Indians perform ceremonial dances at dusk, and invite children and their parents to join the dance circle.

Private campgrounds offer special attractions, too. A campground that just opened close to Miami Beach has a swimming pool, heated health spa with Jacuzzi, shuffleboard courts, horseshoe courts, Bocci courts, a recreation building and a children's playground. And other campgrounds may have pool tables, pinball machines, jukeboxes and even lending libraries.

A campground north of Chesapeake Bay Bridge Tunnel near Cape Charles, Virginia, gets kids involved in the life of the bay. It has three piers where kids can dig for clams and catch fish and crabs. This campground also has a miniature golf course, a roller rink and three swimming pools.

Other private campgrounds offer educational experiences. For example, there's one built around the trenches of an old battlefield at Harpers Ferry, Virginia, that brings Civil War history alive, particularly for children who are studying it at school. Another, in the beautiful Catskill mountains, has a trench of Herkimer diamonds to interest kids in becoming rock hounds. And a campground near Gregory, South Carolina, has a ruby mine where valuable gems are really found. A teenager mined a ruby recently that was worth $25,000.

City-raised children can even experience farm activities and learn about farm animals through a new kind of camping. There are farms and working ranches in the U.S. and Canada where farmers and ranchers take in paying guests. Some of them have campsites. An excellent book, Country Vacations U.S.A., lists the places. (Write Farm and Ranch Vacations, Inc., 36 East 57th Street, New York, NY 10022.)

Rural families, on the other hand, often like to vacation in a big city to expose their children to science, art, space museums and historic shrines. A few cities, including Baltimore and San Francisco, have recreation vehicle parks downtown to make sightseeing easy.

For campsites and suggestions, contact the state tourist office in the region that interests you. KOA — Kampgrounds of America — may be reached at P.O. Box 30558, Billings, Mt. 59114.

The JOY of CAMPING

By J. Wandres

Imagine four families, each owning a different kind of recreation vehicle (RV).

One owns a four-wheel-drive truck with nothing more than a mattress and sleeping bags thrown into the back of the covered-over pickup and a Coleman stove that attaches to the tailgate. On any weekend this young couple heads into the wilderness along old logging roads and sets up camp by the side of a roaring mountain stream, perhaps to hunt or fish or enjoy nature.

A second family in its sleek mini-motor home makes a rendezvous with dozens of RVers at a trailer park in a town near the U.S.-Mexican border. Then, in a caravan, they cross the border into Mexico and head south to Chihuahua, where a special train portages them and their RV's through the fabled Copper Canyon to the Gulf of California. From there, they caravan leisurely south along Mexico's "Riviera," enjoying the rugged scenery as well as planned side trips.

Another family owns a travel trailer, which they tow behind their estate wagon. When the urge moves them they hit the road for a two- or three-week vacation, stopping every other night or so in a different campground. In these, they hook up their rig to water, electricity and sewer lines. They see sights on and off the beaten track and make scores of new friends wherever they stop. And when they get home, they discover they've spent only two-thirds of what the vacation would have cost if they'd stayed in a resort hotel.

The fourth family has taken recreation vehicle-camping to its ultimate: they've bought a condominium campground a few hours' drive from the city where the husband works and rented their house for the summer. And, while the family enjoys all the recreational activities, the husband commutes to the city and back.

These four families are just a few of the more than six million American families who own and enjoy camping in their recreation vehicles. It is a family activity that grows in popularity each year because there's an RV for just about any kind of camping and a place for almost any vehicle.

Here are four ways you may enjoy yourselves.

Wilderness-camping. There is no such thing as "open" land. You may not see the fences and boundaries, but all property nonetheless is owned by someone. If you're out in the country, a stop at the nearest house or a call to a local town clerk will let you know who owns the property and whether it may be camped on.

Unfortunately the National Park Service prohibits RV-camping in its wilderness and forest preserve areas.

J. Wandres reports extensively on camping and the joys of outdoor life.

SEEING AMERICA FIRST-CLASS: 6 MILLION FAMILIES CAN'T BE WRONG

(This is why they are called "wilderness.") And in some national parks, such as Yosemite, the Park Service is reducing the number of spaces available for RV's. In those that do permit RV-camping, the sites usually include a fireplace and wood. Water is available, usually at a central location, along with facilities for dumping an RV's sanitary holding tanks. Fees run from $2 to $5 per night, but the length of stay may be limited during high-use periods.

For real wilderness-camping try the forests owned by the giant lumber companies such as Georgia-Pacific, Weyerhaeuser and Potlatch. In many areas not actively being tree-farmed, the woods are honeycombed with logging trails, but, of course, there are no services provided. In Maine, Georgia-Pacific has provided boat to-know-you suppers before, during and at the end of the two-week trip. Each trailer owner pays for the portage on the special flatcar train that goes through the Copper Canyon.

Campground and "barebones" camping. There are more than 13,000 campgrounds designed especially for recreation vehicles. Many are operated by such nationwide chains as Kampgrounds of America (KOA) and Jellystone Campgrounds. They are listed and evaluated in numerous directories such as those published by Woodall's Publishing Co. and Trailer Life Publishing Co. Each listing tells the price and what services are available and any restrictions concerning pets and children (Some RV campgrounds are for persons 52 and over — they're quieter).

Condominium-camping offers numerous advantages over staying in campgrounds. Some of these are:

- Potential for earning income (to offset monthly payments) by renting out the site when not in use by the owner.
- Control over the operation of the condominium association through an owner-controlled board of directors (once the developer has turned the place over to the owners).
- Better physical security through police patrol and restricted-access gates.
- Planned activities for adults and children, thus freeing the parents from having to "baby-sit" their children when they, too, want to have fun or relax.
- Campsites larger than in RV camp-

Caravanning. Just as it's more fun to see a show with someone else or a group of people, it can be more fun to go motor-camping in a caravan. This can be yourself and another family or two, who pick and more-or-less follow a planned route and schedule. Or it can be a tour sponsored by one of the dozen or so clubs organized for RVers. Some of these clubs are open to all campers; others are restricted to the owners of a particular brand of RV.

On a sponsored tour, such as the Mexican Piggyback Adventure, which Coachmen Industries runs each year for its owner club members, caravanners pay a $55 registration fee. This entitles them to prearranged RV campground accommodations in Mexico at a discount, optional guided day trips en route, free get-

For those campers who eschew the structured campgrounds, preferring "barebones" camping, there are considerable savings and somewhat more freedom to come and go. Barebones campers will pull into any parking lot or roadside rest. It's free, but you take a chance on what you'll find.

Condominium-camping. As the cost of RV-camping goes up (along with everything else) more RVers are buying a campsite in a condominium development. These provide year-round, no-worry access to their own get-away-from-it-all place in the sun. And because the land and improvements in these developments usually go up in value, the campsite can be seen as a potential investment.

Condominium campgrounds are now offered by at least two nationwide companies, Jellystone Campgrounds, Ltd., and Outdoor Resorts of America, Inc., grounds (up to 40 by 80 feet), permitting installation of larger, park-model RV's for comfortable, semi-permanent living.

• Year-round storage for the RV when not in use.

• Great savings on RV campground fees when traveling, through membership in the camp coast-to-coast program. In this, you stay at the condominium sites of RVers who are on the road, while they stay in your site when you're traveling.

Condominium campsites sell on the average from $4,000 to $7,000 but go for as much as $20,000 for deluxe lakefront sites. This is paid for over a seven- to 10-year term at interest rates averaging 12 percent. Banks, however, have not been terribly eager to finance the purchase of condominium campsites, even if "developed," because of the questionable dealing by some condominium developers. (continued)

When America Goes Camping ... America Goes Coachmen!

There's a lot waiting out there for you, America, and there's not a better way to enjoy it than in a new Coachmen Recreational Vehicle.

You don't have to worry about today's scarcity of hotel rooms—simply take your accommodations with you. You aren't bothered by today's crowded, over-booked airplanes—go where you want to, when you want to. You don't have to queue up at a fast-food joint—enjoy regional gourmet specialties from your own galley.

For 1979 Coachmen offers you an exciting, all new lineup of RVs. RVs that you helped design. Months before the first prototypes were built Coachmen asked hundreds of RV users what they liked and disliked about RVs as well as their eating, sleeping and traveling needs. And the result of our "Livability Study"? A complete line of RVs that give you comfort with good taste and the reliability of quality Coachmen construction.

Sleek and aerodynamically-designed exteriors. Family-tough interiors that are easy to care for. Models that let you see the wide open spaces outside while enjoying the wide open spaces inside. Comfortable and efficient kitchens, remarkably roomy baths, lights where you want 'em and plenty of inside and outside storage. And remember all Coachmen RVs are backed by the famous "Buck-Stopper" service from hundreds of happy-to-serve-you dealers all over North America.

Write today or visit your local Coachmen dealer and take a closer look at the line you helped design. Coachmen '79. The Name to Remember in Recreational Vehicles.

THE FRIENDLINESS OF THE LONG-DISTANCE CAMPER

By Jack McClintock

Camping isn't what it used to be, some say, what with mobile campers and propane stoves and all the other hardware that gets between the camper and the nature he presumably set forth to commune with.

But one thing hasn't changed, and that is the sociability and companionship of the campground.

Those late afternoons when, after a long day on the highway or the trail, you've made camp and arranged for dinner and are ready to relax, people start drifting toward the friendliest-looking campfire, offering drinks or talk, sharing snacks and tales of the day's adventures as the sun goes down.

It's the best time of the camping day, perhaps, or at least a close second to early-morning smells of bacon and coffee beside a stream in the woods with the mist rising. It's a chance to meet people without pressure, a chance to get acquainted with folks whose lives you wouldn't ordinarily touch. The normal separateness of American life is lifted in a campground. The doctor is at ease for a while with the maintenance man, and the young have something to say to (and to hear from) the old. It is a kind of all-in-the-same-boat neighborliness seldom found outside marinas and campgrounds.

Once in a while, true friendships are made that way. We still get Christmas cards from people we met camping in the wilds of Arkansas eight years ago, with news of the aging dog and of children we've never seen and probably never will. But more frequently, it is just a chance meeting and some agreeable talk for a while, with no strings attached.

There are, of course, practical aspects. We camped once, the first time we ever had camped, in fact, in the Florida Keys. A gusty tropical squall blew up. We had not provided ourselves with extra tent ropes. From the next tent came a pleasant gray-haired man with a hammer, a spool of cord and spare tent pegs. With a grin but hardly a word, he pegged our tent down snugly. Then he accepted a drink and invited us, on a forthcoming trip to Quebec, to look him up. He happened to be in charge of promotion for camping in Quebec, he said, and would show us around the province. He probably saved our tent that afternoon, and six months later he made our Quebec visit more fun than it would have been.

Some people go camping to avoid people, not to meet them — an understandable and valid motive. But most seem to be friendly, and some are almost professionally so. There is scarcely a campground where you don't see a recreational vehicle occupied by a cheery couple who have set up a sign outside: "Stan and Dot and Peewee, Cleveland, USA," with perhaps an American flag fluttering somewhere nearby. (Peewee is the inevitable chihuahua or terrier, of course, and the sign constitutes a kind of invitation.)

There is something about getting away from your roots. At home you are somebody in particular, identified with a job, a neighborhood, perhaps with a social class. But camping, you are on your own. When you need a helping hand or see a chance to offer one or just want someone to share a cup of coffee around the firelight, it makes little difference who you are. You've got at least the campfire in common, and the fact that you chose to be in that place at that time. In this respect, too, campers are like yachtsmen who meet in foreign ports.

If you camp for a long time — as we did once for a year — this can have its frustrating aspects. You are constantly retelling your autobiography, establishing some footing with new people and never finding those comfortable moments of simply sitting quietly with old friends who know who you are. But on shorter trips, nothing is more refreshing than hearing some stranger's tale and opinions and telling your own to someone else.

As camping grows more popular, some aspects of this are lost, sad to say. Years ago, no true yachtsman would throw anything over the side that wasn't organic — and now the oceans are filled with beer cans. The same is true of camping. Thoughtless people camp, too. Those who bring radios and televisions to the woods and drown out the birds and the silence. Those who don't restrain their pets. Those who litter. Those who carry a bit of sundown sociability too far into the night — and too loudly.

The more primitive the campground, it sometimes seems, the more true neighborliness there is. And the more classlessness there is. In those vast campgrounds with facility hookups you get all kinds, and campers there are de facto segregated by income level: tenters (who in the yachtsman simile are like sailors) here, and recreational vehicle drivers (like powerboatmen) there, where the hookups are. And camping itself has become more specialized. Backpackers and hikers scorn the vehicle people, the vehicle people wouldn't dream of walking a dozen miles a day when they could drive and have ice when they got there. But when they all arrive at a campground, they want nothing so much as a shower, and that's plenty to start a conversation with.

And you can pretty much rely on a fellow camper for help when you need it. I can testify to that.

There we were, camped in the high country in Montana, 50 miles from the nearest town. We had a half tank of gas — just enough to get there but not to get back until the money order arrived. We had eaten all the food — all the beans, all the coldcuts, all the popcorn — and were reduced to trying to bake bread in the campfire (which came out a bit heavy, but delicious). We had another day to wait, and frankly we were a little hungry.

Just then a jeep came rumbling through with two camper-fishermen aboard. They had just spent the day stalking trout in the Yellowstone River and had tales to tell. It was a fine conversation. And the trout, fried in the last of the bacon grease, were fine, too.

The JOY of CAMPING

A SAFETY CHECK-LIST FOR A HAPPIER TRIP

By Susan Hayden

Theoretically, at least, camping out is just as safe as staying home — maybe even safer. There's no traffic — well, almost none — the air is cleaner, and you're miles away from the household hazards that cause most accidents. But camping can present some unfamiliar dangers, and it's wise, as the Boy Scouts say, to be prepared. Here are some basic safety principles, including reminders of what you'll need in an emergency.

Do Your Homework. It's vital, experienced campers say, to do some research before you leave. You'll want to know about anything that would make your trip less pleasant, so take the time and trouble to learn something about the area you'll be visiting. Are the mosquitoes bad in summer? Is there a danger of rock slides or floods? Are there poisonous snakes? What kinds of animals roam the woods? Get some maps and any brochures available. If you're camping in a state or national park, get a copy of the regulations.

Tell Someone Where You're Going.

Just as important as your own preparation is letting someone know where you're going and when you expect to be back. The National Park Service advises that you let a ranger know where you plan to explore. This is especially important because the ranger will not only know where to look if you don't get back as expected, but he'll also be able to warn you of any current dangers — floods or rock slides, for instance — or tell you whether the trail is more difficult than you might assume.

Never Go It Alone. This is a basic principle of camping safety. Always take a companion, even if you're only going for a short hike. If you sprain your ankle — or worse — someone must go for help.

Know Your Own Limits. The National Park Service warns that strenuous exertion in extremes of temperature or altitude can be dangerous if you're not accustomed to such exercise. It's also important to recognize your own fears. Do heights make you nervous? Do you chill or tire easily? Don't be tempted to take on a situation that looks even a little threatening.

Keep Your Distance from Wild Animals. Even the cutest little chipmunk in the woods can be dangerous. In the West, diseases like rabies and pneumonic plague (bubonic plague in humans) are so common among wildlife that there's no way to eradicate them. So admire the animals, but don't try to pet them.

Know Your Emergency Needs. Most of the injuries that occur to campers are as minor and as common as those that happen around the house, but because camping usually means being out of reach of a telephone or miles from the nearest hospital, knowing what to do in an emergency is vital. You'll need a first-aid kit as well as an assortment of medications.

The kit itself should include bandage strips, sterile gauze pads, adhesive tape and gauze bandages. You'll need some cotton balls, liquid soap, alcohol and pre-moistened towelettes for cleaning cuts or burns. Other essentials are scissors, a thermometer, a flashlight, needles (sterilize to remove splinters), tweezers, moleskin for blisters and a chemical ice pack.

The medications should include aspirin and drugs for diarrhea, nausea and vomiting, heartburn, indigestion and constipation as well as a decongestant for colds. Don't forget suntan lotion and a sunburn ointment; an ointment for insect bites and stings, and mild burns; and an antibiotic ointment available without prescription for cuts or abrasions that may become infected.

If you venture into areas where there are poisonous snakes, you'll need a snakebite kit, and you'll have to learn how to use it.

And should you get lost, trapped or injured, the most important thing to remember is to stay calm and stay put. The standard distress signal is three of anything — fires, shots or blasts on a whistle. Make yourself comfortable and wait to be rescued. It shouldn't be long — if you've remembered to tell someone where you were going and when you'd be back. FW

Take a Honda to camp this summer.

Trolling, trail-blazing or relaxing by the fire, how does Honda fit into your camping picture?

1. Honda CT70. This small, compact, versatile trail bike is just right for little pathfinders. It comes with a 72 cc four-stroke OHC engine, three-speed transmission, automatic clutch and weighs just 156.4 pounds dry.

2. Honda CT90. The world's most popular trail bike. Light, maneuverable, easy to handle and a real pack horse. Four-stroke 89.5 cc OHC engine. Dual-range four-speed transmission with automatic clutch. Weighs just 198.5 pounds dry. Street legal, too.

3. Honda ATC®110. The go-almost-anywhere Honda. Giant low-pressure knobby tires take you through shallow streams, over sand dunes, even on hard-packed snow.

4. Honda ATC®70. Honda's ATC for smaller riders comes with a reliable 72 cc four-stroke engine, an automatic clutch, even a throttle adjuster to limit speed.

5. Honda Odyssey.™ More than a dune buggy, it's a dirt, sand, shallow mud, hard-packed snow and general all-around fun buggy rolled into one. Powered by a two-stroke 248 cc single-cylinder engine.

6. Honda BF75 Outboard Motor. Whisper-quiet four-stroke power. 7.5 hp with 60-watt DC charging coil. No pre-mixing of gas and oil required and the fuel line disconnects with ease. Available in short- and long-shaft versions. Economical to operate.

7. Honda BF100 Outboard Motor. Same as the BF75 in a more powerful 9.9-hp model.

8. Honda EM400 Generator. Ideal campsite power source. Only 39 pounds, but packs a 400-watt AC wallop (max. rating). Plus 12 volts DC for battery charging. Runs about 4 hours on a half gallon of gas.

Check out our campsite collection at your Honda motorcycle or Power Products dealer. Just for the fun of it.

EYES RIGHT? THEY MIRROR YOUR HEALTH

By Paula Dranov

Romantically speaking, our eyes may be the mirrors of our souls. It's a poetic thought. But doctors approach the eyes with more practical considerations in mind. To them, the eyes are windows to the body and a source of valuable clues to undiagnosed illnesses that often have nothing to do with how well we see.

Symptoms of diseases, from arteriosclerosis to hypertension to diabetes, can show up in the eyes. How they look from the outside may give doctors a rough idea of what ails you. But it's the inside as seen through an ophthalmoscope that reveals problems you may not know you have.

The light from the ophthalmoscope illuminates the blood vessels of the retina — the immediate instrument of vision — as well as the head of the optic nerve that connects the retina to the brain. It also illuminates a tiny spot called the macula, which is responsible for our central vision, and through which we distinguish detail both close at hand and at a distance. Abnormalities in any of these structures can be an indication of serious disease.

The most threatening of the illnesses that affects the eye is diabetes. One of its most serious complications is retinal disease, which is one of the leading causes of blindness.

A doctor's first clue to diabetes may be damage to the blood vessels in the eyes. The disease itself affects circulation by causing degeneration of the lining and walls of the blood vessels and eventually leading to hemorrhages. It also can cause temporary blurring of vision due to increased sugar in the blood and the ocular fluid. Other early-warning signs of the disease may be cataracts or even iritis, inflammation of the iris.

The worst of these eye problems, retinal disease, can't be reversed, but doctors say it may be slowed or even arrested with proper control of the diabetes — a carefully supervised diet and medication.

Another disease that can be diagnosed via the eyes is arteriosclerosis, hardening of the arteries. This eventually happens to everyone, although not everyone suffers as a result. When the arteries of the eyes are affected, vision can be impaired.

There's not much that can be done about arteriosclerosis, once it develops.

High blood pressure is another serious condition that can be diagnosed during an eye examination, although it's usually detected before symptoms appear in the eyes. However, should doctors see narrowing of the retinal arteries and other changes in the blood vessels of the eyes, it's usually time to do something about the blood pressure. Once pressure is lowered, the eye symptoms frequently disappear completely.

A doctor can learn a great deal from your eyes even before looking inside. By feeling the eyeballs through the lid, the physician may determine that they're too soft — a sign of dehydration or severe vitamin A deficiency — or too hard, a symptom of glaucoma. The color of the inside of the lower lid may be evidence of anemia if it's too pale, and a white ring around the cornea, common in older people, may mean a cholesterol metabolism disorder if it is seen in someone under 40.

The appearance of the eyes can also be clues to thyroid disease. Signs of an overactive thyroid include very prominent eyes or eyes that are unusually wide open. An underactive thyroid may cause puffiness of the eyelids. Kidney disease can have the same effect.

And then, of course, there are the telltale signs our eyes reveal about our personal habits and state of mind. Blood-shot eyes may mean fatigue, an infection or eyestrain — or too much drinking. If your eyes are swollen, the doctor may ask why you've been crying. And, if they're bruised, who won the fight? FW

GRASS SEED WILL NEVER GROW A LAWN LIKE THIS—DROUGHT & WEAR RESISTANT! Amazoy lawns take cook-outs, parties. Children playing on it won't hurt it or themselves! Stays green right thru scorching heat and drought!

Lady Plugs In Zoysia Grass Saves Time, Work & Money

SPECIAL INTRODUCTORY OFFER. UP TO 200 AMAZOY ZOYSIA GRASS PLUGS FREE

By Jack T. Johnson, Agronomist

Every year I see people pour more and more money into their lawns. They dig, fertilize and lime. They rake it all in.

Amazoy is the Trade Mark Registered U.S. Patent Office for our Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass

They scatter their seed and roll and water it.

Birds love it! Seeds which aren't washed away by rain give them a feast. But some seed grows, and soon it's time to weed, water and mow, mow . . . until summer comes to burn the lawn into hay, or crabgrass and diseases infest it.

That's what happens to ordinary grass, but not to Amazoy Zoysia.

"MOWED IT 2 TIMES," WRITES WOMAN

For example, Mrs. M. R. Mitter writes me how her lawn ". . . is the envy of all who see it. When everybody's lawns around here are brown from drought ours just stays as green as ever. I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in. . . . Last summer we had it mowed (2) times. Another thing, we never have to pull any weeds—it's just wonderful!"

And from Iowa came word that the state's largest Men's Garden Club picked a Zoysia lawn as the "top lawn—nearly perfect" in its area. Yet this lawn had been watered only once all summer up to August!

CHOKES OUT CRABGRASS

Thick, rich, luxurious Amazoy grows into a carpet of grass that chokes out crabgrass and weeds all summer long. It will NOT winter-kill. Goes off its green color after killing frost, regains fresh new beauty every Spring—a true perennial!

DON'T BE MISLED! THERE IS ONLY ONE AMAZOY

Amazoy plugs are taken from genuine Z-52 Meyer Zoysia . . . guaranteed winter-hardened for 3 full years under the supervision of trained agronomists. Over a HALF-BILLION plugs sold (outsells the others 10 to 1)! So don't take chances with inferior plugs. Accept No Substitute for Amazoy Zoysia! If it isn't Amazoy, you're not getting the plugs that made Zoysia famous.

FOR SLOPES, PLAY AREAS, BARE SPOTS

End erosion of slopes with Amazoy. Perfect answer for hard-to-cover spots, play-worn areas.

NO NEED TO RIP OUT PRESENT GRASS PLUG AMAZOY INTO OLD LAWN, NEW GROUND OR NURSERY AREA

Just set Amazoy plugs into holes in ground like a cork in a bottle. Plant 1 foot apart, checkerboard style.

When planted in existing lawn areas plugs will spread to drive out old, unwanted growth, including weeds—from part shade to full sun. Easy planting instructions with order.

YOUR OWN SUPPLY OF PLUG TRANSPLANTS

Established Amazoy gives you Zoysia plugs to plant in other areas as desired!

PATENTED STEP-ON PLUGGER IS . . . FREE WITH ORDERS OF 600 PLUGS OR MORE

Amazoy exclusive! No one else can offer you this patented 2-way plugger. Saves bending, time, work. Light, rugged, invaluable for transplanting. Cuts away competing growth as it digs plug holes.

Every Plug Guaranteed to Grow In Your Area • In Your Soil

- AMAZOY WON'T WINTER-KILL—has survived temperatures 30° below zero!
- AMAZOY WON'T HEAT-KILL—when other grasses burn out, Amazoy remains green and lovely.

Plug Amazoy into an entire lawn or problem areas. Plug it into poor soil, "builders soil", clay or even salty, sandy beach areas. I guarantee every plug, regardless. Any plug failing to grow in 45 days replaced FREE. Since we're hardly in business for the fun of it, you know we're 100% sure of our product!

CUTS YOUR WORK, SAVES YOUR MONEY

Your deep-rooted, established Amazoy lawn saves you time and money in many ways. It never needs replacement . . . ends re-seeding forever. Fertilizing and watering (water costs money, too) are rarely if ever needed. It ends the need for crabgrass killers permanently. It cuts pushing a noisy mower in the blistering sun by ½.

NO SEED, NO SOD!

There's no seed that produces winter-hardy Meyer Zoysia. Sod of ordinary grass brings with it the problems of seed-like weeds, diseases, burning out, other ills.

Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass was perfected by U.S. Gov't. Released in cooperation with U.S. Golf Assoc. as a superior grass.

Order guaranteed Amazoy now, get your bonus plugs FREE. Your order will be delivered at earliest correct time for planting in your area.

We ship all orders the same day grass is taken from the soil, shipping/handling charge collect via most economical means.

MOTHERS AND BABIES: WHO'S RAISING WHOM?

H. Armstrong Roberts

By Maryann Bucknum Brinley

The crowd at the hospital nursery window parted ever so slightly to let me pass through. It was my first visiting-hour venture down the maternity ward hall to peer through the glass and point out my son, Zachary, to anxious admirers. Fixing my face against the pane, I was startled by the number of new babies. Obviously, it had been a busy Mother's Day weekend in obstetrics. However, my real surprise came as my eyes scanned the rows of plastic baby baskets looking for Zachary.

Only hours and days old, each newborn was so strikingly dissimilar from the next one. Bald, hairy, howling, cooing, snoring, they were as much individuals as the mothers, fathers, friends and relatives on the other side of the window. What I didn't realize at that point was that my child, born with a temperament, a personality and preferences about eating, sleeping and socializing would have as much impact on me as I had on him.

For years, the child-rearing professionals have been arguing the "nurture versus nature" theory. In the nurture camp are those who believe that babies are born blank, or nearly so. According to their way of thinking, parents — especially that primary care-giver whose name is Mom — fill in the finer points of their child's humanity through their nurturing, for better or for worse. People like Sigmund Freud and psychologists B.F. Skinner and John B. Watson fall into this category. Watson once boasted, "Give me a dozen infants and I'll guarantee to make any one of them a doctor, a lawyer, artist, merchant..." To make matters even more frightening, he also insisted, "At three years of age, the child's whole emotional life plan has been laid down, his emotional disposition set..."

Meanwhile, camped on the other side of this theoretical war are those people who feel that heredity is probably the single-most important factor in the making of a man or woman. Though few psychiatrists, psychologists or students of human nature are strictly entrenched in either point of view — nature or nurture — Dr. Julius Segal, public information director of the National Institute of Mental Health and author of a wonderful new book, A Child's Journey: Forces That Shape The Lives of Our Young, explains the natural notion best: "Some doctors suggested that the child receives the entire emotional and mental history of both parents at conception, leaving virtually no room for individual personality development."

Studies done over the past 20 years have turned up all manner of remarkable, though predictable, results, most of which support neither side entirely. However, what is beginning to be seen as more and more plausible is that babies are far from blank at birth.

Watching and working with hundreds of newborns at Albert Einstein College of Medicine about 15 years ago, psychiatrist Wagner Bridger discovered part of what I had noticed on that first glimpse of the hospital nursery. Not only are all babies different, but each of their responses to broad-ranging stimuli — rocking, noises, light, for example — were constant for a single baby, time after time. (While a flashing light might have made one cry, the newborn next door may have blinked and looked blissfully on.)

Though it is nice to know that my son won't be able to blame me totally for what life brings him, I am bothered by the fact that far too few studies have lent an open ear or a clear eye toward me, and what's happened since this offspring of mine has sprung forth. Oh, some of the researchers have watched me, the mother, but they have almost always limited their glimpses to a quick one-way question: how was I interacting with my child? Yet, Dr. Segal and other experts now conclude, "What's going on is not simply the shaping of the child by the parents, but also the shaping of the parents by the child."

I could have told Segal that when Zach was only six weeks old — or possibly even sooner.

My son, who woke most nights last summer at 1:30, went back to sleep at 3:00, was up again at 5:30 in the morning and maybe back down an hour or so later, was molding my method of mothering far more forcefully than I had ever dreamed. Meanwhile, across town, my friend Carmel, whose daughter was born a few weeks before Zachary, had been dreaming in real slumber from 9 until 5, thanks to a sweet-natured child.

Months before either of us had faced the reality of motherhood, Carmel and I had held similar hopes, fears and agreements about parenting, in theory. In practice, I had learned what a difference a few days' sleep makes.

Maryann Brinley is particularly interested in reporting on family life and its problems.

MAKE BEAUTIFUL FRAME-UPS

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

Display favorite pictures in a multiphoto frame.

Put the family snapshots on display! That's the trend these days, and the new multiphoto frames, popular items in stores throughout the country, have shown that it's possible to give even the smallest snapshots importance by grouping them together in one large frame.

The best thing about these frames is that you can so easily make your own. There are dozens of possible variations, and sawing wood or bending metal is not required. Two pieces of cardboard (a cut-up box or the back of a writing tablet will do) and some adhesive-backed paper are the only materials you will need. For an elegant look, use velvet to cover the cardboard or try pieces of suede for a rich-looking frame suitable for an office or den. Whatever materials you use, whatever the size or shape of the frame, however many photos it holds, the basic directions remain the same.

The frames are so lightweight that a pull-can tab taped to the back is all that is needed for hanging. A tabletop version can be made by attaching a cardboard easel or by placing the frame on an easel made from a drapery hook.

Other on-the-wall frames can be made by using an entire box instead of just cardboard pieces. Parts of potato-chip containers make three-dimensional frames that can be displayed together. Even a single photo can look significant when placed in a fabric frame.

So get out the family snapshots and do something with them. Decorate a hallway, staircase or bedroom wall. Put them on a tabletop or a desk. Put them any place you please. You may be surprised at how even small snapshots neatly framed and attractively grouped can spark up your home.

Bottoms of potato-chip containers are used to create 3-dimensional frames.

HOW NEWSPAPERS AFFECT PEOPLE EVERY DAY

For the nation's 1,764 daily newspapers, presenting news fairly is basic. But all too often, before the news can be given, it has to be pried from reluctant sources. This calls for alertness and tenacity, as well as for confronting the conflicts between freedom of the press and concepts of privacy.

Another service is that of a newspaper's leadership in its community. By presenting facts about a town's problem and galvanizing citizens toward a purposeful solution, a newspaper can make a real contribution to community life.

Thousands of stories that serve communities well are published annually in Family Weekly newspapers. Here are four such stories from the past year.

CIA EYE ON KGB IN BAY SLAYING

This was the Wilmington News-Journal headline that broke the bizarre story of the mysterious death of the Central Intelligence Agency's John Paisley in Chesapeake Bay. His body was found October 1, 1978. The boat which he had been sailing was found abandoned.

The first story broke in the News-Journal October 10 and was to be followed by a series of probing articles bylined by Joe Trento and Richard Sandza. There were many questions to be answered, and, incredibly, there was a three-months' delay before other newspapers began to ask questions.

Trento and Sandza dug into the Paisley story. The C.I.A. announced that the agent was a retired, low-level employee. The News-Journal found otherwise. Paisley was not only active, but a high-level man, privy to secrets that could be compromising. The C.I.A. denied this. Paisley was identified by fingerprints. The C.I.A. denied having any.

Much evidence points to the fact that John Paisley was active in the C.I.A. at the time of his death. So was he murdered by an enemy? Was the enemy the dreaded KGB, the Russian secret apparatus? Did the KGB accomplish its mission? Or was Paisley a suicide as ruled by the F.B.I.?

The News-Journal is still pursuing the story, as are many other newspapers now. But still a wonderment is the fact that the News-Journal's searing headline was a lone banner for three months before others joined in and investigative reporting began.

TEXAS REPORTER SPURS EXPOSE

Reporter Jim Wood of the San Antonio Express broke a critical conflict-of-interest story last October when he charged in a lead article that City Council members received free tickets to home games of the San Antonio Spurs, a National Basketball Association team, from the team's management. Because the Spurs play in an arena owned by the city, the free tickets valued at $670 per year presented a question of conflict of interest.

Denials came quickly. The charges were loud and plaintive. The Express was picking on the councilmen. The motivation was political. But while Wood was working on the story, one council member returned his ticket. And as the story developed, all the rest did, too.

The issue was submitted to a Citizens' Committee, and the Express followed with editorials and a series of stories on ethics codes in general. The Committee finally recommended two ordinances which members of Common Cause, the citizens' lobby, called the strictest ordinances in the state.

One ordinance forbade Council members to accept gifts worth $150 or more, and required them to report gifts of more than $20. It also prohibited public officials from using city property or employees for their benefit.

A second ordinance required City Council members to list their sources of income, on the assumption that the public should know the financial consideration affecting a member's actions.

These ordinances were approved.

CIVIC PRIDE REVIVED IN LORAIN, OHIO

What do you do when your town is deteriorating? When it is caught up in technological change and shifting buying habits? When Washington is no longer a cornucopia of funding, and, besides, you want your own efforts and direction to prevail?

The Lorain Journal mulled this over and initiated a Lorain Bootstrap drive. The purpose: to stay the death of one more industrial town, at least; and to give it new life, at best.

Pushing a drive in this direction, the Journal formed a group of civic leaders to make something happen. It called in bankers and industrialists, private organizations and women civic leaders, to plan their town's salvation.

During 1978, $6 million in private funds were poured into downtown Lorain. With the help of city officials, parking and traffic-flow problems are also being improved.

The women's group pushed the refurbishing of the magnificent Palace Theater in downtown Lorain and have made it a viable civic center. On March 19, Rosalynn Carter came to Lorain and paid tribute to the volunteers who created the center through dint of hard work and a dedicated sense of purpose and of will.

"New Lorain," as the combined effort has been called, is headed up by James Lonergan, vice president and general manager of the Journal.

Irving Leibowitz, who is editor of the Journal, said, "The industrial town's plight is still with us." But he emphasizes, "We care."

MAINE PAPER TESTS STATE'S ACCESS LAW

The Bangor Daily News' managing editor, Marshall Stone, noted in one of his columns that "... the press is not very popular. One of the reasons for our lack of popularity is the shifting sands on which we try to build our house."

The shifting sands in the case of the Daily News is the State of Maine's Access Law, which provides that records be open to inspection by the public. Like so much legislation, the Federal Freedom of Information Act and similar state laws are more honored in the breach.

The Daily News, along with other Maine newspapers, has had an ongoing controversy with public officials, especially the police, about opening — and keeping open — pertinent records for the public's inspection.

The News has been in the forefront of the controversy, and out of it has come a set of guidelines from the state's Attorney General, Joseph E. Brennan, prepared for the various police departments. "If we find departments which are in non-compliance with the law," Attorney General Brennan said, "we will try to resolve the difficulty. If necessary, we will prosecute any violations of the law."

As the News sees it, the press should be a solid defender of the rights of the people, rights that are under constant threat of erosion.

The News believes the battle is being won. When reporters probed into the records of many agencies, they found cooperation generally favorable. Only about nine of 111 agencies have denied public access to their records.

FIVE PERSONS, ONE BODY

By Robert S. Nagey

Christy is an attractive, friendly 19-year-old girl with long, wavy blonde hair and a warm smile. She is sitting in a chair, looking directly at the camera. She is wearing a light-colored, short-sleeved top. Her hands are resting on her lap. She has a confident and pleasant expression.

"She has acknowledged us, but she hasn't accepted us," says one of Christy's personalities. "When she accepts us as part of herself, the integration process will be complete, and we will work the same."

WEST COAST REPORTER WINS FAMILY WEEKLY AWARD

In November 1977, Family Weekly invited the editors and publishers of the newspapers that carry this magazine to submit ideas for articles that would appeal to its nationwide readership. Every author would be paid the usual freelance rates, and, in addition, the author of the best of the published articles would receive an additional $500. Among the hundreds of ideas submitted, a number were expanded into articles which have been appearing approximately once a month for the past year.

As the competition drew to a close, three well-respected men in the field of journalism were asked to choose the article which merited the final award. The judges were Osborn Elliott, former editor of Newsweek and now dean of Columbia's School of Journalism; Fulton Oursler Jr., managing editor of Reader's Digest; and Wilfrid Sheed, well-known writer, whose recent novel, Transatlantic Blues, was issued in paperback.

The winning piece was by Robert Nagey, a staff reporter for the Progress-Bulletin, a newspaper located in Pomona, Calif. His article, entitled "Five Persons, One Body," told the story of a 19-year-old girl with a case of multiple personalities. Basing his work on interviews with the girl and her therapists, Nagey described the characteristics of each personality, how they interact with one another and the circumstances which can trigger the change.

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

HOW HAPPY ARE YOU?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. The happier you are, the less sleep you need.
2. Creative work is conducive to individual happiness.
3. Happy people view time in a completely different way from those who are unhappy.
4. Money can buy unhappiness and result in a life style that distorts values and promotes personality conflicts, but lack of money is likely to make you feel much worse.
5. Most unhappiness is caused by the things that happen to us — the pressures, frustrations, disappointments and upsets that are part and parcel of normal, everyday living.
6. While most of us are engaged in the pursuit of happiness, some people are just as actively engaged in the pursuit of unhappiness.

ANSWERS

1. True. Studies conducted by investigators from Boston State Hospital's Sleep and Dream Laboratory of variable sleep in hundreds of men and women in urban, suburban and university communities have yielded interesting findings, reported as follows: relatively happy persons, with a habit of keeping busy and not worrying about problems, were found to be associated with a decreased sleep requirement. On the other hand, subjects given to worry, depression, certain kinds of stress and increases in the pressures of mental work, tended to require significantly longer periods of sleep.
2. True. In a study of the relationship of creativity to happiness reported by the Creative Education Foundation, it is observed in summarizing the findings that "The creative person is not just the great artist, or writer or inventor. He is the individual who uses his imagination to find effective solutions to his day-to-day problems. His creativity helps him avoid boredom, overcome his disabilities and laugh at life. He is likely to have financial security, self-confidence and satisfying personal relationships. He is, in short, a happier person."
3. True. In a University of Minnesota study of the Inner Experience and Incentives in People's Lives, findings are cited showing that happy people view time as "... something that may be employed in the projection and realization of their goals and purposes. Their time is filled, scheduled and planned." On the other hand, it was found that unhappy persons "express a feeling of passive subjection to time ... Their time is unfilled; they shy away from long-term responsibilities; they keep the future open and uncommitted; they are ready for anything, but prepared for nothing."

4. True. In their definitive treatise on the psychology of Money Madness, psychologists Herb Goldberg and Robert T. Lewis evaluate the results of leading researchers which "... do not show that money actually buys happiness but suggest that the lack of money may in many cases contribute to unhappiness ... that within certain limits it is also likely that most people are happier with money than without." It is concluded, however, that there is no evidence which indicates that, beyond a given level, happiness increases proportionately with an increase in wealth. It was also found that possessing a personality "... which includes a healthy self-respect and self-confidence is most likely the causative factor which produces both happiness and an adequate but realistic supply of money."

5. False. A University of Michigan study of the factors that affect us emotionally and cause us to feel the way we do found otherwise. In laboratory experiments subjects were helped to banish feelings of unhappiness, to reduce anxiety symptoms such as cold hands, tension headaches and insomnia by thinking relaxing thoughts. Similarly, it is pointed out, anyone can learn to cope with unpleasant weather, personal disappointments and one's mistakes by focusing on the positive aspects of a given circumstance. It is concluded in summarizing the findings that "Most unhappiness is caused by internal thoughts, not external events."

6. True. Studies conducted by behavioral scientists from Cornell University and the Payne Whitney Clinic, of the motivations of persons engaged in the pursuit of unhappiness, show that in many cases people actively resist efforts to relieve their feelings of unhappiness and depression because they cherish the secondary gains that they provide. There are many ways in which chronically unhappy persons achieve gratification. For example, it is pointed out that, by insisting that they are unloved and unappreciated, such persons "... almost force others around them to contradict these sentiments and refute their accusations." And it is noted that the condition which enables them to exploit the kindness and attentiveness of others, shirk responsibilities and avoid the demands of interpersonal interaction, may be so gratifying to the individual that he will strenuously resist efforts to relieve his carefully nurtured state of unhappiness and depression. As long as he can get mileage out of his negative attitude and outlook — exaggerating his failures and ignoring his successes — he isn't likely to relinquish the gloomy glasses that he looks at the world through. Fw

THROUGH A CHILD'S EYES

When my seven-year-old granddaughter came to visit me, she told me about all the friends she had at school. But there was one little boy named Chris she didn't like. I asked her why. "Because," she replied, "at recess time he always chases me." Then she added, "He chases everybody." "Well," I told her, "little boys chase little girls, and they will probably chase you until one catches you and marries you." My granddaughter looked up at me doubtfully and shrugged. "Well, all right, but only till recess is over."

Now! To Trim Pounds & Inches F-A-S-T, Shed Fluid F-A-S-T, Throw Away Diets; Toss out Pills, Get Rid of Exercisers, Gadgets; instead...

Reduce While You Sleep!

Slumbertrim™—Sensational Night Time Reducing Garment Slims You While You Sleep.
Works Up To 10 Times Faster Than Leading Crash Diets. Wake Up Tomorrow Morning
Up To 7 Pounds Lighter, Up To 3½ Inches Slimmer Overall!

Here's sensational reducing news! Science has developed the fastest, easiest way yet to slash pounds, trim inches. Up to 10 times faster than the leading crash diets. So simple, so easy you do it while you sleep.

That's right! They've gone and developed a night time reducing garment that works with such amazing speed and effectiveness you actually wake up the next morning up to 7 pounds lighter, up to 3½ inches slimmer overall without diets or changing your eating habits, without dangerous drugs, or exhausting exercise.

Called SLUMBERTRIM, it's an amazingly effective reducing garment that you wear to bed (for all or just part of the night) to automatically shrink inches, reduce pounds by shedding fluid from waist, hips, thighs, tummy and derriere. And do it faster and easier than any of the "fast-methods" and with none of the bother.

Go to bed, enjoy a refreshing night's sleep—and wake up the next morning a belt notch lighter, a dress size or two slimmer without suffering, without dieting, without changing your normal eating habits. Instead of days (or even weeks) of constant, intense effort SLUMBERTRIM gives you significant inch and girth reductions in a fraction of the time.

Just think of it! The most important slimming discovery ever! Compared to other methods that have you starving and straining just to "nudge off" a meager inch or two from your midsection; this must be the fastest, most effective, most enjoyable discovery ever. It's certainly the easiest!

Instead of skipping meals, instead of punishing yourself with rigid systems, instead of going about totally frustrated, and depressed, here's all you do:

At night—just before bedtime slip into SLUMBERTRIM. LET IT DO ALL THE WORK FOR YOU AND WAKE UP TOMORROW MORNING POUNDS AND INCHES LIGHTER. All the difficult "skinnying down" has been done for you... while you sleep.

Dramatic Consumer Study Shows

Slumbertrim Reduces You 10 Times Faster, 10 Times Easier Than Fastest Crash Diets

So effective is SLUMBERTRIM's automatic weight-loss action that, when checked by an independent testing laboratory, a consumer panel of both men and women enjoyed both inch and fluid losses 10 times faster, 10 times easier than the leading crash diet. Subjects who never counted a calorie, (much less starved, or exercised), reported dramatic overnight results. To give you an idea of SLUMBERTRIM's automatic inch and fluid reducing effectiveness, here are a few of the results taken from this startling report:

Panelist B: 7 POUNDS LOST OVERNIGHT

Panelist E: 6 POUNDS LOST OVERNIGHT

Panelist G: 5 POUNDS LOST OVERNIGHT

The delighted panelists absolutely adored SLUMBERTRIM's fabulous results. Here's why.

The leading crash diets (that require lots of effort and even more starving) claim you lose up to a dress size within 7 to 10 days. SLUMBERTRIM's study showed that you needn't suffer anywhere near that length of time. Instead, quickly, easily, temporarily trim inches, reduce fluid during just one night's wear... or even less.

More Inches Gone In One Evening Than Days Or Weeks Of Endless Suffering With Ordinary Slimming Methods

It's true. You can lose more inches and fluid in one evening than with days (or even weeks) of ordinary reducing methods. To give you a clearer picture of SLUMBERTRIM's amazing effectiveness, here are inch losses recorded after just one evening's wear:

SLUMBERTRIM OVERNIGHT LOSSES

Panelist B: 3½ INCHES GONE

(Waist 1½", Hips 1", Tummy 1")

Panelist D: 3 INCHES GONE

(Tummy 1½", Hips ½", Thighs 1")

Panelist E: 3 INCHES GONE

(Tummy 1", Hips ½", Thighs 1½")

(Average Loss for all panelists participating:
OVER 2 INCHES OVERALL)

That's just the start. After only 5 evenings, here are even more amazing results recorded on thrilled and delighted panelists:

SLUMBERTRIM LOSSES

AFTER 5 NIGHTS

Panelist A: 5 POUNDS

LIGHTER, 8 INCHES SLIMMER

(Waist 4", Tummy 1½", Hips 1½", Thighs 1")

6½ INCHES SLIMMER

(Waist 2", Tummy 1", Hips 1½", Thighs 2")

Panelist D: 7 POUNDS LIGHTER,

4 INCHES SLIMMER

(Waist 1", Tummy 1", Hips 1", Thighs 1")

Panelist E: 6 POUNDS LIGHTER,

5 INCHES SLIMMER

(Waist 1", Tummy 2", Hips 1", Thighs 1½")

(Average Loss for all panelists participating:
OVER 5 INCHES OVERALL)

Automatically Shrinks "Mid-Section"
Helps You Wake Up The Next Morning
Pounds Lighter And Inches Slimmer

Slip into SLUMBERTRIM at bedtime. And you are on your way to the most exciting, most exhilarating, most enjoyable slimming experience of your life. Its special design double layer fabric: (The inner layer: non-porous special thermal liner; the outer: polyester) creates a "thermal-sauna-like" effect. It gently (and automatically) stimulates your mid-section (where garment is worn) into releasing fluid from thighs, hips, tummy, waist, etc. The result: without deliberate effort on your part, you wake up tomorrow morning pounds lighter, inches slimmer. What a really clever way to lose girth and inches.

Science has long known that as much as 75% of our total weight is composed of fluids. So isn't it sensible to temporarily rid yourself of fluid and automatically shrink down in girth, automatically slim down in inches?

The result: down comes the bloat; down comes the bulk... as you wake up the very next morning up to 2 dress sizes smaller—a belt notch or two slimmer—and pounds lighter on your scale! Yes SLUMBERTRIM's the ideal temporary way to super-fast inch losses by using it periodically when you want to shrink tummy, hips, thighs, etc., without the rigors of diets, without the dangers of drugs. In a word, you wake up: shapelier!

It works in only a fraction of the usual reducing time, and it's a thousand times more fun. So, we come to this very important question:

Why Kill Yourself With Brutal Exercises...
Why Strain With Punishing Diets, When You Can Enjoy Dramatic Inch Losses Overnight?

Naturally how much you lose depends on your own physiology. Losses vary from individual to individual; no two people will ever lose exactly alike as the study revealed. Some will enjoy greater than average reductions... others somewhat less. But SLUMBERTRIM PROMISES YOU THESE IMPORTANT BENEFITS: 1) You will thrill to overnight losses without brutal exercises, without punishing regimen. 2) You will lose girth and inches faster than with any of the so-called "fast-methods". 3) You are UNCONDITIONALLY GUARANTEED RESULTS OR YOUR MONEY BACK.

Be Slimmer, Trimmer, Shapelier Overnight—Results Guaranteed—Or It Costs You Nothing!

Try this amazing night time reducing garment entirely without risk! You prove every lost pound, test every lost inch in the privacy of your home without risking one single penny.

Send for SLUMBERTRIM today. If you don't lose pounds overnight, if you don't shrink down inches overnight from waist, thighs, hips, tummy, derriere, etc.,—without diets, drugs or exercisers—then you've risked nothing.

Yes, SLUMBERTRIM must please and delight you in every way; it must trim pounds, reduce inches effortlessly and automatically or return anytime within 21 days for a full refund of your purchase price (less only postage & handling charges). No questions will be asked, ever. You are the sole judge. So why be uncomfortable and unhappy another day when SLUMBERTRIM makes slimming so simple, so easy. Remember: results are guaranteed or your money back. What could be fairer? Use the No Risk Coupon.

Satisfactory Offers

Satisfaction is rarely guaranteed, but it seems that most Americans buying home appliances have little to complain about. A nationwide survey conducted by William Wilke and Peter Dickson, two professors at the University of Florida, revealed that only 2 percent of the people interviewed were dissatisfied with their recent appliance purchase. The study, supported by the Marketing Science Institute, came up with some other surprising information. According to Dickson, "Women select 40 percent of all home appliances on their own. In 50 percent of the cases, the decision is a joint one, made by husband and wife. Husbands purchase only 10 percent of the machines alone." And, says Dickson, most people rely on other people, not printed matter, for their information. "Despite what everyone says about salesmen, 40 percent of the women who buy appliances find them the most useful source of information about the product."

Outdoor Schooling

With spring in the air, most kids are itching to get out of school and into the outdoors. But the outdoors is the classroom for the 20 students of the National Audubon Society Expedition Institute who spend their academic year traveling around the country in a yellow bus, studying a myriad of subjects. The Expedition Institute is run by Michael and Diana Cohen and Frank Trocco, who encourage their students to "use the environment as an educational tool, and as a teacher."

The school's curriculum consists of subjects that students usually take in high school or during their early years in college, but the classes don't have names like Biology 101 and English 213. Anthropology and historic restoration might be studied at an archeological dig in Arizona, while a New England apple orchard could provide the spot for an impromptu lesson in plant science. Certain subjects must be covered, and travel is planned accordingly, but the curriculum changes with the weather, the resources and the students' interests. Credit for the year can be arranged through a pupil's home school, and Lesley College in Cambridge, Mass., offers credit to its master's degree students who choose to you are buying has been packaged in recycled paperboard (cardboard).

Getting people to support paper recycling as a part of their everyday life is the motivation behind "Gray Is Beautiful," a program aimed at creating a consumer demand for recycled paper and sponsored by the Recycled Paperboard Division of the American Paper Institute. "Millions of tons of old cardboard and newspapers are abandoned to landfill areas each year; these materials could be used to make paperboard, if consumers make a point of demanding that packaging be made of recycled paper," says Cynthia Burke-Stein, an environmental affairs consultant for the Paper Institute.

In addition to buying items packaged in recycled paperboard, Ms. Stein suggests that you buy products wrapped in paper, since paper can be reused. And show the community you care by asking your store manager to think "recycled packaging" the next time stock must be ordered.

Catch That Ball

Having a mitt that "fits like a glove" is important to every professional baseball player, and many prefer to have their custom-made. This year, those players just walked off the diamond and into the "factory," a mobile home specially outfitted with a leather workshop by Mizuno of Japan, a sporting goods manufacturer. Inside the factory on wheels, Novuyoshi "Yoshi" Isubota, a master glove-maker with 30 years of experience, repaired and crafted made-to-order gloves for many of the major league players. Yoshi and the van traveled to every major league training camp during the spring season introducing Mizuno baseball gloves to the big-timers.

Lifestyles

Records. Novels by J.R.R. Tolkien were the most asked-for books in American libraries this past year, and their popularity among both adult and child audiences continues to grow. The tales make perfect read-aloud stories, as Tolkien himself proved in 1952, when he made some casual recordings of The Hobbit and The Lord of the Rings. At the time, he was depressed because The Lord of the Rings, which had taken him 14 years to complete, had been rejected by leading publishers in both England and the U.S. Now the tapes have been made public, and recordings are available from Caedmon Records.

Television. On April 22 ABC Theatre will feature Friendly Fire, starring Carol Burnett and Ned Beatty. Friendly Fire is the true story of Peg and Gene Mullen, parents of a young soldier killed in Vietnam, and their search to find out about the circumstances of their son's death.

Retirement. More than half of today's employees would prefer to continue working past their normal retirement age, says a Harris poll sponsored by Johnson & Higgins, an employee benefit consulting and actuarial firm. According to the study, 71 percent of the self-employed want to continue working for as long as they are able, compared with 53 percent of salaried workers and 42 percent of hourly wage workers.

More. For that extra measure of satisfaction.

More offers you an extra measure of satisfaction.

Because More's got the great taste you want in a cigarette. Taste that satisfies. Taste that makes More a truly enjoyable smoking experience.

And you get extra satisfaction from More's 120 mm length which lets you enjoy all that great taste even longer.

More also has the style that could only come from a long, slim, brown cigarette.

Once you get More satisfaction, you'll never accept anything less.

"GUARD IT WISELY"

YOUR OWN PROUD FAMILY NAME!

YOU GOT IT FROM YOUR FATHER,
IT WAS ALL HE HAD TO GIVE.
SO IT'S YOURS TO USE AND CHERISH, FOR AS LONG AS YOU MAY LIVE.
IF YOU LOSE THE WATCH HE GAVE YOU,
IT CAN ALWAYS BE REPLACED.
BUT A BLACK MARK ON YOUR NAME, SON, CAN NEVER BE ERASED.
IT WAS CLEAN THE DAY YOU TOOK IT,
AND A WORTHY NAME TO BEAR,
WHEN HE GOT IT FROM HIS FATHER,
THERE WAS NO DISHONOR THERE.
SO MAKE SURE YOU GUARD IT WISELY,
AFTER ALL IS SAID AND DONE,
YOU'LL BE GLAD THE NAME IS SPOTLESS,
WHEN YOU GIVE IT TO YOUR SON.

Handsome Plaque has your family name engraved above an inspirational verse. Beautifully inscribed on rich antique-goldtone plate—then mounted on 8 1/2" x 4 1/2" walnut finish hardwood plaque... it's truly a meaningful gift for a worthy son! Twin hanging rings. Specify family name.

TIGER

by BUD BLAKE

Our Story: SIR GAWAIN CALLED ARN, HIS SQUIRE, TO ARM AND PREPARE FOR A QUEST. IT SEEMS A BANDIT GANG CAME IN FORCE AND TOOK POSSESSION OF THE CASTLE WHILE THE OWNER, LORD CONDON, WAS AWAY. THEIR WAY LEADS NORTH THROUGH THE MENDIP HILLS TO WALES.

PRINCE ARN HAS BEEN SIR GAWAIN'S SQUIRE FOR MORE THAN A YEAR. HE HAS BEEN KEPT BUSY, FOR GAWAIN IS ALWAYS SEEKING ADVENTURE, AND VOLUNTEERS FOR EVERY QUEST.

THE ARMORY IN CAMELOT, MORNING: SIR FITZTHUMPET AND HIS SON DON THE PRACTICE PADS FOR THEIR DAILY EXERCISE. THE OLD KNIGHT DESIRES TO SHOW HIS SON HE IS STILL THE BEST.

AT FIRST HIS WEIGHT AND EXPERIENCE GIVE THE OLD KNIGHT THE ADVANTAGE, BUT HE SOON TIRES AND HAS TO TAKE HIS WHACKS FROM EDWIN.

EACH MORNING THE BALCONY IN THE ARMORY IS FILLED WITH WATCHERS AS THE TWO STRIVE TO SEE WHO IS MASTER.
