There was a regular meeting of the Poe Society, in the Auditorium on February 28, 1920. The house was called to order and the minutes read an approved. Miss Neola Spivey took the oath of allegiance and became a member of the Society.

The treasurer reported $236.54 in the treasury.

Miss Graham suggested that we write General Faison again as the quarantine will soon be lifted.

The president announced that the time of the next meeting had been changed with the Y. W. C. A. and would be held next Saturday evening and that the fourth Saturday in March would be time for the inter-Society debate.

The meeting was then turned over to the Entertainment Committee who had prepared an interesting program.

After the program the matter of continuing the sweeping of halls was discussed and voted upon. The decision of the Society was to stop sweeping the Halls at the end of the term if Mrs. Beckwith could secure maids.

The Critic reported very favorable conduct in Society but thought we should carry over our behavior into other things. That the behavior of the Student Body had been criticized.

There being no further business the meeting adjourned.
