

SALT Summit In Vienna On June 15

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter and Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev will meet for the first time at a summit conference from June 15 to 18 in Vienna to sign their new SALT II treaty to cap the nuclear arms race, it was announced today.

The announcement was made by Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski. Agreement on the treaty between the superpowers was announced earlier this week.

A White House official, asking not to be identified by name, said it is hoped the summit conference will set in motion a regular series of meetings between U.S. and Soviet leaders.

The official said Carter and Brezhnev will review and clarify some of the issues in the new arms pact during their meeting in the Austrian capital.

Such a review, the official said, is "unavoidable."

The official was asked if the United States had complained to the Soviet Union about missile tests in recent weeks that might have involved coded signals substantially defeating U.S. verification efforts.

The White House official replied that there were a number of meetings between U.S. and Soviet officials concerning the encrypting of missile test signals and "matters of the sort you raise were discussed."

He declined to characterize the U.S. position as a complaint and said American officials were satisfied that coding problems had been solved in the final agreement.

Gasoline Rationing Plan Is Turned Back In House

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — House leaders are blaming the stunning defeat of President Carter's standby gasoline-rationing plan on confusion over which Americans would have gotten the most fuel under its provisions.

After several days of intense White House lobbying on Capitol Hill, the House voted 246-159 Thursday night to kill the rationing plan under which Americans would have needed coupons to buy gasoline during a national fuel emergency.

Disregarding an impassioned appeal from House

Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill that "this is the only plan you'll have," the Democratic-controlled House handed Carter a bitter setback.

"Many Americans felt this was a plan to implement rationing," said House Whip John Brademas, D-Ind., "even though the bill would only have given Carter standby authority."

In addition, Brademas said last-minute changes to the plan made by the White House to win votes needed in the Senate led to fears in the House that some drivers would have ended up with a disproportionate share of a

Firm Will Sue HUD On Transaction Of Parcel

By TOM BAINES

The law firm of a member of the City Council intends to file a lawsuit in federal court to compel the Department of Housing and Urban Development to approve a property transaction involving the firm, it was reported at last night's Council session.

Attorney Mack Howard of the firm of Howard, Vincent & Duffus here informed the Council that he had learned HUD had turned down a request to approve a transfer of interest in a downtown parcel to H.V. & D partnership due to the appearance of a conflict of interest since partner Charles Vincent is a Council member.

The Council was acting on the matter last night as the Redevelopment Commission requested approval of a resolution transferring interest in Disposal Parcel W-1 in the Central Business District from T & C Co. (Clarence Tugwell and Louis Clark) to H.V. & (Howard, Vincent and Duffus), subject to HUD's approval. The Redevelopment Com-

Thoroughfare Priority Plan Approved By City

The City Council adopted a resolution setting priorities, as recommended by the city's planning and engineering departments with changes suggested by the Planning Commission, for presentation on May 23 at the N.C. Board of Transportation's public hearing on the seven-year highway improvement program.

The priority list, designating five key thoroughfare improvement projects here, will be presented by local representatives at the upcoming hearing in Carteret County.

All parties involved in the priority selections were in apparent agreement on the number one item to be recommended to D.O.T. as US 264 and proposed western bypass improvements topped the list.

The remaining four items in order of priority ranking, including the changes recommended by the planning members in a special call session last night, include:

Commencement Crowds Filled Minges Coliseum

By WILLIAM H. SHIRES
Director, ECU News Bureau

The skies were gray, and the grass soaking wet this morning, so the 70th annual commencement exercise for graduating students of East Carolina University was held inside Minges Coliseum.

Approximately 2,550 graduates filed into the Coliseum shortly before 10 a.m. as an overflow audience of parents, relatives, and friends filled to overflow the 6,000 seating capacity of the building. Graduates and faculty representatives sat on chairs provided in the event the graduation exercise had to be moved indoors.

The processional of graduates was followed by faculty members and the platform party, led by Professor Marguerite Perry, chairperson of the Department of Foreign Languages and Literature, who carried the silver mace known as the Trustees Mace.

The invocation was given by Baylus Milton Francis, president of the senior class.

In his remarks to graduates and the audience, Chancellor Thomas Brewer noted it was a glorious spring day even with the weather the way it was.

The graduating class, Dr. Brewer commented, is one which has experienced "the zest for all that life has to offer."

Brewer pointed out that this year's class spans a large age range, from 20 to 60. One graduate, unidentified, was first admitted to East Carolina in 1937. Some 400 of the graduating members entered studies here more than five years ago, and Brewer noted that the average age of graduates was a little older than usual.

"This graduating class is special," Brewer said, adding it is the first for him, "representing the new charge of ECU which is the attainment of excellence," and that it also represents "a bridge between the former administration and my own."

Brewer paid tribute to Vice-Chancellor Dr. Robert Holt and Dr. Edwin Monroe, who have been charged with new responsibilities, and recognized members of the Board of Trustees present, including chairman Troy W. Pate, Jr. of Goldsboro.

In his keynote address to the graduating class, Dr. John M. Howell, ECU Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs, described ECU as an institution built on a "firmly constructed foundation" which is a "notable achievement of the past decades."

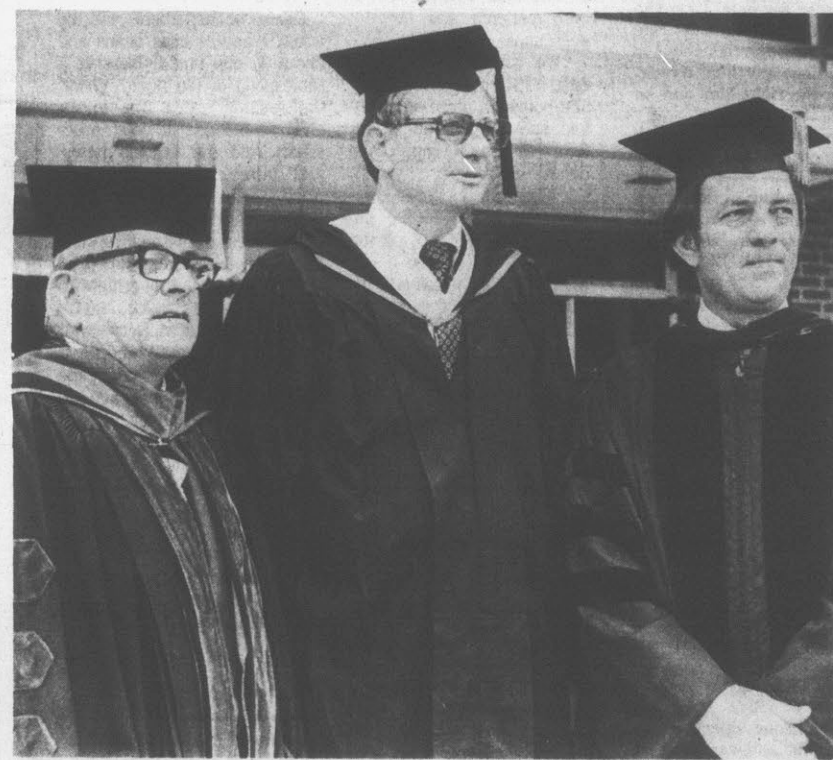

"The goal of new horizons of excellence would be inconceivable without this past history," Howell said.

Howell took sharp issue with a recent critical report by the Carnegie Council on Policy Studies in Higher Education which, he said, "suggests a collapse of institutions of higher learning and strikes at the fabric of community in universities . . . and society in general."

He told the graduates "you are accused" of being prone to "cheating and destruction of property, of declining interest in education, and of greater interest in grades and degree handles."

"I do not share the negative evaluations of the 1970s college generation," Howell said. "You have absorbed the

'Rehab Nurse' Enjoys Personal Involvement

By CINDY BROOME

Debra Kennington, Rehabilitation Nursing Coordinator at the Regional Rehabilitation Center, Pitt Memorial Hospital, often wishes she had more time for her patients. Her duties as coordinator require a lot of time doing paperwork, attending meetings, planning new programs and answering a busy telephone.

After graduating from the School of Nursing, East Carolina University in 1976, Kennington worked at the Mental Health Center before becoming a staff nurse at Pitt Memorial.

To more readily identify where nurses work, staff nursing and rehabilitation (rehab) staff nursing personnel are distinguished in hospital jargon as nursing

"up there" and "down here."

"Up there" refers to the twin towers of the hospital, each of which houses three floors of patients.

"Down here, we deal in longer term nursing," Kennington explained. "People who have suffered from strokes or spinal cord injuries are with us for maybe a month or more while up there, a tonsillectomy patient is here for two to three days."

Kennington said she prefers rehab nursing because she enjoys being more personally involved with the patients, whereas "up there" the patients come and go more rapidly than in the rehab center.

Patients Encouraged

Patients are encouraged to visit the day room, a brightly lighted, colorful room with tables, sofas, and a television set. They may eat there if they wish, or just socialize with other patients.

"You might think it's not a big thing to enter a room with a lot of people in it when you're first adjusting to a handicap, but it is," Kennington said. "It's a big thing."

Patients spend a lot of time in physical and occupational therapy, according to Kennington, strengthening their muscles and learning to adapt to living at home when their hospital stay is completed.

Kitchens, for example, can pose many difficulties for wheelchair patients. Washing dishes becomes practically impossible. Therapists are sent to the patients' homes to help make any necessary adjustments before the patient returns home. Home modifications are often made. The area under the sink is opened, for instance, and wheelchair patients can roll right up to the sink.

In addition to visiting the day room, patients often retreat to the recreation room where they may read from a wide variety of magazines, or from a selection of books which are checked out from Sheppard Memorial Library.

Nurses Trained

When the hospital was opened in April, 1977, rehab nurses participated in a program in which they spent the entire day in wheelchairs. Although Kennington was working on the medical floor at that time and did not participate, she said that some of her colleagues did and that they found it much harder to steer a wheelchair than they had thought. Today, rehab nurses participate in a mini-series of training which prepares them to work in the rehab center.

Two volunteers were pushing a cart down the hospital corridor near the recreation room. The cart contained a selection of candy and toilet articles sold to both patients and hospital personnel.

"We call this the 'goody cart,'" Kennington smiled. She bought a piece of candy and spoke again about patients as she unwrapped the candy.

"There are lots of frustrations for many of the patients," she said. "A person can dwell all day on a lost arm, but it's not going to bring it back."

She paused. "I try to put myself in the patient's place to see what it's like in his situation."

When asked if she feels that some patients sometimes resent the nurses, or others because they have both legs and arms, Kennington hesitated, then answered. "Well... yes," she answered, then added. "You don't know how they're going to react."

Kennington considers helping the patient reach his highest level of independence her greatest challenge.

"Sometimes patients want to be dependent," she said, adding that in some cases the patient's family must be separated from the patient to allow the patient to gain his independence.

"You must allow him to do things for himself," she declared. She's happy when the patient accepts his disability and begins to adjust to life, for example, without an arm.

In response to the question of what is the most difficult part of her job, Kennington studied for a moment, then smiled. "I don't really know.

Former Mother Hater Wiser Now

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am almost 20, and for nearly five years I have carried one of your columns in my wallet. It is so worn I can scarcely read it, but it has done me more good than any single thing I've ever read. Please reprint it, Abby, for girls who need the advice as much today as I did then. I am enclosing the column. I am the girl who wrote the letter signed MOTHER HATER.

Sincerely yours
WISER NOW

DEAR WISER: Yes, I'll reprint the column. Here it is:

DEAR ABBY: You will probably think I am a monster, but I am a girl of 14, and I hate my parents. Especially my mother.

She is so old-fashioned it's pitiful. She wants to pick out all my clothes and tell me how to wear my hair. I am the only girl in our crowd who doesn't wear eye makeup. She won't let me go in cars with boys. All she worries about is my reputation, and I swear I haven't done anything wrong. She is killing my chances to go with the right kids and be popular.

Don't tell me to talk it over with her because she will only give me a long lecture on this bull about how it's all for my "own good!"

I would like to be able to tell her things, but, heck, I don't want to get killed. I hate to sneak behind her back, but I have no choice. I sure wish I had a different mother.

MOTHER HATER

DEAR MOTHER HATER: Girls your age, who feel as you do, regard all adults as the enemy. Perhaps a letter from a girl your age with a different point of view on the same subject will help you more than any advice I could offer.

DEAR ABBY: I am 14 and think more girls my age should appreciate mothers who love them enough to care about what they do. I feel sorry for young girls my age whose mothers let them go in cars with boys, and wear eye makeup and hairdos that are too old for them.

I am not allowed to go on car dates until I am 16. My mother helps me select my clothes. I wear no makeup to school, and only a little on special occasions. My mother has lived a lot longer than I have, and I have learned from experience that when she forbids me to do something, she always has a good reason for it. I am thankful that I have a mother who loves me enough to raise me right.

FOURTEEN AND LUCKY

DEAR ABBY: Where can I get silicone injections to enlarge my breasts? I live in Pennsylvania and was told that injections are illegal in this state. In which states are they legal?

I wanted silicone implants but they are too expensive for me.

Also, do I have to prove I'm 18 before a doctor will mess around with me?

Sign me "Flat as a board" or...

A CARPENTER'S DREAM

DEAR DREAM: Silicon INJECTIONS are illegal in every state of the U.S.A. No physician will "mess around" with a minor. It's a major offense.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a man who smiles a lot in his sleep?

HIS WIFE

DEAR WIFE: He's lucky. He could TALK in his sleep.

Garbanzo Dip: Mideast Snack

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

It took a long time for Hummus bi Tahini, a traditional Mideast dip, to catch on all over the United States.

The first recipe for it I encountered appeared in a 1950 cookbook. The next one in a cookbook published in the 1960s. Like a lot of other cooks, I didn't get around to trying recipes for Hummus bi Tahini until the 1970s.

Recipes for Hummus bi Tahini always call for pureed cooked garbanzos (chick peas), lemon juice, garlic, salt and pepper. Up to now, the recipes I have used have also called for sesame oil or sesame paste. Both oil and paste can be found in shops stocking Mideast foods and in some supermarkets and health-food stores. They can also be mail-ordered.

Claudia Rosen in her "A Book of Middle Eastern Food" describes tahini as "a paste made from sesame meal." The cans of tahini I buy in New York City are labeled "ground hulled sesame seeds" and the contents are pasty. The tahini has to be stirred before using it, because the oil gathers at the top. After the can has been opened, the tahini seems to keep indefinitely in the refrigerator.

Just last week we tried something new in my test kitchen. We made Hummus bi Tahini, but instead of using sesame oil or tahini, we added toasted ground sesame seeds. The result was so good we are passing along the recipe. (Sesame seeds are widely available; for this recipe you'll need to toast them.) Served as a dip for the Mideast bread called pita, this Hummus bi Tahini makes great snacktime fare.

MIDDLE-EASTERN GARBANZO DIP
(Hummus bi Tahini)
16-ounce can garbanzos (chick peas)
1-3rd cup toasted sesame seeds, Note follows
½ teaspoon salt
1-3rd cup lemon juice
1 large clove garlic (or more), peeled and crushed
1 tablespoon olive oil
Pita

Drain beans; there will be about 1 and ¾ cups beans and about ¾ cup liquid. Reserve 1 tablespoon of the liquid. Grind the sesame seeds fine in an electric blender or food processor. Add the drained beans and puree. Add salt, lemon juice, garlic, olive oil and the 1 tablespoon reserved bean liquid; process until smooth. Turn into 1 or 2 screwtop jars and cover tightly. Chill overnight to allow flavors to blend and to have the dip stiffen. Serve with Pita (cut into small wedges if you like) for dipping. (Heat the Pita according to package directions.) Makes about 1¾ cups dip.

Note: you can spread untoasted sesame seeds in a small (about 8-by 6-inch) shallow pan and toast them in a preheated 300-degree oven stirring often, until they are golden colored — 5 to 8 minutes. Or you can spread them in a 9-

I guess I'd have to think a long time about that. But," she said emphatically, "the rewards outweigh the difficulties."

Warns Moratorium On Nuclear Plants 'Fatal'

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Bill Lee, president of Duke Power Co., said Thursday that a permanent moratorium on construction and operation of nuclear power plants would drive the utility out of business.

Lee said the accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant has led to a "de facto moratorium" on issuance of permits for construction of nuclear plants. He said officials of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission are too busy investigating the accident to evaluate permit applications.

He said a permanent shut-down of all nuclear plants would bring about "a great institution of change."

"Duke Power wouldn't stay in business," Lee said. "We would black out this summer."

Lee also said Duke has completed NRC-ordered safety improvements at its Oconee nuclear station near Seneca, S.C., but that he fears NRC staffers will delay approval of the work because they are so busy investigating the Three Mile Island accident.

Unless the improvements are approved by Saturday, Duke will have to shut down one of three units at the Oconee plant then. Another unit currently is closed for refueling and is not expected to be back in operation until next month.

The NRC ordered all nuclear plants, including the Oconee facility, designed by Babcock and Wilcox to make the improvements. Babcock and Wilcox designed the reactor system at Three Mile Island.

Lee said the improvements at all three Oconee units were completed on Tuesday and the proper reports were sent to Washington.

"I'd hate to see these reactors shut down at a cost of $800,000 a day because of a bureaucratic holdup," he said.

Duke closed one unit at Oconee on April 28, and it will remain closed for several more weeks for refueling. Although improvements to the other two units were made without shutdowns, Duke had previously agreed to close one unit on May 12 and another May 19 to perform the work. Unless NRC officials approve the work that has been done, the two units will have to be closed as scheduled.

A spokesman for Duke said in Charlotte that Lee went to Washington today to press NRC officials to complete the paperwork for approval of the improvements made at Oconee before Saturday so the unit will not have to be shut down.

The spokesman, Alex Coffin, said NRC inspectors had given tentative approval to the work but agency officials in Washington had to complete the process.

Meanwhile, the Research Triangle Group of the Sierra Club has issued a newsletter urging support for a resolution calling on Carolina Power and Light Co. to close its Brunswick nuclear plant and halt construction of the Shearon Harris plant in Wake County.

The group said in a newsletter that the resolution will be introduced at a CP&L shareholders meeting in Raleigh next Wednesday calling for the moratorium. It said the propos will be presented by Kenneth J. Durant of Black Mountain, owner of 200 shares of CP&L stock, and by two others.

Wreck Killed One; 3 Hurt

ROCKY MOUNT — One person was killed and three others injured in a one-car wreck on N.C. 43 about 5.2 miles South of here yesterday, about 3:15 p.m.

Highway Patrolman Douglas Parvin said Cheryl Elaine Webb, 17 of Rocky Mount, the driver of the car, was killed in the collision.

Miss Webb's sister, Jennifer Carol Webb, 16, her brother Russell Allen Webb, 14, and 14-year-old James Bass of Rocky Mount, were all injured.

Trooper Parvin said the Webb car was traveling toward Rocky Mount and passed another car in a curve. It was raining, the officer said, and the rear tires on the Webb car were slick.

As the Webb car tried to merge back into the right-hand lane, the vehicle went out of control, slid sideways and hit a concrete bridge railing at the drivers door, the officer explained.

Booster Club's Success Noted

Under the leadership of four area chairmen, the North Pitt High School Booster Club raised almost $4,500 through a recent barbeque dinner.

The chairmen, Pauline Tucker, Frank Hemingway, Jack Edwards and Sam Bowers, worked along with approximately 50 community persons, as well as students and school personnel with the dinner plans.

Patrons of the school donated 19 pigs, 500 pounds of cabbage, and 450 pounds of potatoes, as well as cookers and gas. Proceeds will go to support school activities. Josh Potter, principal, thanked all involved for their support with the dinner.

ed. According to the Patrolman, the force of the impact broke the car in half.

Parvin said the driver and her brother were thrown from the vehicle as the front portion of the car left the roadway and landed in the creek. The rear half of the car, he said, became airborne, turned over several times, and landed on its top in the center of the roadway.

Trooper Parvin said traffic on N.C. 43 was tied up in both directions for about 30 minutes until the wreckage could be cleared.

He noted that the injured were taken to Edgecombe County General Hospital for treatment.

Likes Laughs

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Doug McGee decided he no longer would change the price signs at his service station since the price of gasoline is heading ever upward.

He drew up a sign reading "???" a gallon, but state officials don't think it's funny.

The state Department of Agriculture has ordered McGee to remove the sign. Officials in the agency's Division of Weights and Measures say the question marks could be mistaken for 7s, leading customers to believe they can buy gas for 77.9 cents a gallon.

McGee disagrees. "Anybody who thinks those question marks look like 7s needs new glasses or shouldn't be driving anyway," he says.

McGee's attorney, Kip Stitz, says he is studying the weights and measures laws, "but if they should take any action to force Doug to take the sign down, we'll try to get an injunction."

McGee also tried to lighten the heart of weary motorists during the 1973 gas crunch.

At that time he had a sign in front of his station which read, "Buggy Axles Greased, Horses Shod."

Community Support Is Secret

There seems to be a general feeling that the things government does about a problem never work. That is not always true, but it is understandable that there is so much doubt about Department of Health, Education and Welfare efforts to desegregate higher education in North Carolina.

What will work—There is a sure fire approach to problems in a democracy which almost always gets positive results — and that is a people generated solution to a given problem.

One of the phenomenons of the post World War II period in the nation has been the rise of regional universities. Small teachers colleges have become diverse universities having strong positive influence on their areas in almost all of the states.

These schools grew to serve the needs of the people because there was a clear need and because community leaders, school supporters and average citizens saw the need and set out to fulfill it.

If that has occurred many times in the past few decades, think what could be accomplished on the historically black campuses of our state, if the area leaders were to put all their efforts behind these schools to help them reach their full potential?

Elizabeth City State University and Fayetteville State University both have large areas of the state to which they could be of great service.

If it were announced tomorrow that a new state university campus were being established in almost any city, the news would be greeted with overwhelming joy. Yet, these two schools already exist in population centers with the nearest predominately white campuses many miles away.

What is needed is community financial commitment and the developing of a feeling among whites that the universities are good places to get their educations. These things won't come because of any edict from HEW or the federal courts. They won't come solely because the state throws "new money" at the problem. They will come only with universal community support.

Rain Or Shine, Undampened Spirits

Some 2,500 ECU graduates received final advice from Vice Chancellor John M. Howell this morning at the 70th commencement program on the campus.

As this is written there exists the possibility that it will be a wet day. We doubt, however . . . rain or shine . . . that the spirits of these new graduates will be dampened.

We wish them all well, as they go out to carry out the ECU motto of service to their state, nation and all mankind.

Public Owns The Agencies

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The refreshing notion that a governmental agency exists to serve the people and not its own needs has been explored in detail by Asheville Police Chief Melvin L. Tucker.

The results ought to be required reading for every public employee in North Carolina. While Chief Tucker talks specifically about police departments, his words apply equally to schools, hospitals, elected officials — to all governmental operations.

A police department is a publically supported operation and "does not exist to serve its own needs but instead exists to serve the community," Tucker feels.

Agencies that don't open their doors fully to the public "have found themselves the victims of attacks by both the public and the news media. In many cases, due to lack of concern by the government units about the public's right to know about their tax-supported operations, these attacks have been justified," the chief reports.

Serving the community involves several concepts:

No Job
Without the community the agency wouldn't exist; Public contact is critical to knowing what problems exist, what solutions appear; what programs or projects might be needed.

The public has a right to know fully about all activities, goals, plans, successes, and failures;

News media are also servants of the public and have "both a right and an obligation to report on the operation of the Police Department and the conduct of its officers," Tucker says.

Traditional police administration has been concerned with how to control the flow of information. This, Tucker satates, "has not aided the agency or the community served."

"In order to operate with public support the confidence of the public must be gained. The practice of refusing to comment on important issues, or attempting to deny access to information that the public is concerned about serves only to reinforce the belief held by a large block of the public that the police cannot be trusted, or at the very least, are afraid to admit what they are doing."

BILL NOBLITT

The public is the greatest enemy or the greatest ally to any public administrator. "The difference in friend or foe will be determined by the actions of the police agency. An open atmosphere, in these skeptical times, is an effective way of gaining the support of an often alienated public."

Tucker, chief at Asheville since the first of 1978 was formerly chief at Hickory, was director of public safety and police in Morristown, Tenn., and is a former special agent with the FBI.

How Much
The proper attitude on handling information, he feels, is to determine how much can be released legally rather than how much can be withheld. "The more knowledge about the agency that can be presented to the public . . . the more responsive and effective the agency will be," he reasons. An open door shows nothing to hide; a closed door shows a fear of public knowledge.

"Rather than having a fear the public will learn too much about the police department, the police administrator should have a greater fear that the public will not learn enough."

Chief Tucker's comments were published in the April issue of "Southern City", a publication of the North Carolina League of Municipalities.

The League of Municipalities, an organization of local governments from across the state, has been the leading lobbyist in this session of the General Assembly — along with the Association of County Commissioners — opposed to revised "Open Meeting Laws" providing more public access to governmental activities.

Thatcher Ires Feminists

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — The British general election last week made Margaret Thatcher the first woman government leader in Britain and Europe.

But it also reduced the number of women in the House of Commons from 27 to 19. And to the chagrin of Britain's feminist movement, the victorious Conservative Party's woman leader appointed no women to senior Cabinet posts.

Leaders of Britain's feminist organizations say they like neither Mrs. Thatcher, with her publicly stressed image of housewife as well as politician, nor her right-wing politics with its threat of public spending cuts they claim will be hardest on low-income women.

However, they mourn far more the defeat of several women Labor Party members of Parliament than the fact that only three of Mrs. Thatcher's 65 junior Cabinet ministers are women.

The state-funded Equal Opportunities Commission takes a happier view than militant feminists.

"We are delighted a woman has been appointed to the highest office in the land," says commission spokeswoman Roberta Vincent-Emery.

"Given there are hardly any women in Parliament, women are also doing rather well in the new Cabinet. The fact is it seems to be extremely difficult for women to get into politics."

Jenny Earl, director of Rights for Women, one of Britain's sprinkling of feminist movements, feels differently.

"Margaret Thatcher as prime minister does not represent anything progressive as far as we are concerned, and in a sense it could be actually dangerous because she plays on being a housewife," she said.

"She doesn't want to antagonize women or make them feel guilty about not working so she constantly stresses the women's role in the home — one quite evidently she does not fancy for herself."

"Women have always been housewives and mothers. Our fight is to give them opportunities — and equal opportunities — to work."

"If there's anybody left who thinks women are useful only for washing dishes, Mrs. Thatcher's appointment might be a help in influencing them to the contrary, but that's about all."

In the election, more than BALM FOR CHILDREN?

"There is a balm in Gilead, to heal the sin-sick soul." So sang the choir at the morning service, and when we came out of the church a little boy who had been with us inquired, "What kind of a bomb was it in Gilead? Was it an atomic bomb?"

The little boy's response reminds us again of our intense preoccupation with destruction. In any other generation a little boy who did not know what "Balm of Gilead" was would probably have ignored the matter. But today even the children think about atomic bombs.

Psychologists tell us that inculcating anxiety into young children can be very traumatic, and leave life-long scars. Therefore, should we suppress all mention of atomic destruction in order to avoid this eventually? Probably not; children may have to learn to live in an age with more tension in this regard than even ours. But we can remind the children that the race in the past has survived crises just as threatening as anything we face today.

Babcock, Or Wilcox?

(Messrs. Babcock and Wilcox, the founders of the nuclear design and construction firm that today bears their names, both died in the last century. If they were alive today, here's what might have happened.)

WASHINGTON — As the builders of the Three Mile Island nuclear energy complex, Babcock and Wilcox have become household names.

The question people are asking is, who was to blame for the Three Mile Island incident — Babcock or Wilcox? Rumor has it that Babcock and Wilcox aren't talking to each other. They used to work in the same office, with their drafting boards facing each other, singing and joking all day long. But after the Harrisburg flap the friendship chilled and the men had a bitter fight, at which time each pointed the finger of guilt at the other.

"I told you we should have put in an automatic valve in case the primary cooling system failed," Babcock said.

Other Editors Say A Bill With Merit

(Washington Daily News)

We have a rather strange system in North Carolina of electing our Superior Court judges.

We nominate them by party in the judicial districts but then we elect them statewide. And in the case of most judges not one percent of the voters of a given district know the candidates. And so very many of them go to the polls and are called upon to cast ballots for candidates they have never even heard of before.

Now a bill is before the General Assembly, already approved by committee, which would let individual judicial districts both nominate and elect Superior Court judges. This bill ought to be passed. It has a great deal of merit.

In years gone by two lines of argument have been set forth. Democrats have pointed out often that Superior Court judges serve all over the state and that voters all over the state ought to have the responsibility and right to elect them.

Republicans have argued that electing such judges statewide has been done for the purpose of making sure that no Republican judges are elected. They argue that if judicial districts elect Superior court judges, some of them surely will be Republicans.

As a Democrat, this editor must look upon this issue in terms of what he considers to be right, wise, and practical. We do not like the idea of going to the polls and voting for people we do not know and some we have never heard of before. The real test is not whether one is a Democrat or Republican in this case. The real test revolves around the ability of candidates running for judge.

In our own judicial district, we will know the candidates and have opportunity to talk with them. Judicial candidates just do not go out on the political trail and campaign as most other candidates do. They consider it rather "unjudicial."

We believe that nomination and election of judges by judicial districts will help improve our judicial system in North Carolina. We are not worried about electing or defeating candidates because of party affiliation. We are thinking in terms of the qualifications of the candidates and the knowledge of these qualifications by the individual voters of our state. As a Democrat, so long as this party nominates good candidates, let the record speak for itself.

The proposal has great merit. It is our hope that it shall become law in North Carolina.

ART BUCHWALD

"I did have an automatic cooling system, but you vetoed it because you said a manual valve was less expensive," Wilcox retorted.

"When did I say that?"

"When we were eating in the cafeteria. I remember it well because you said if we were going to bring it in for $100 million, there was no sense throwing money away on a redundant valve."

Babcock bristled. "I never said any such thing. I told you to do anything you wanted to as long as it made you happy."

Wilcox said angrily, "While we're on the subject, how come you didn't know anything about the chance of a hydrogen bubble forming when the coolant was turned off?"

"I knew about the hydrogen bubble problem. I told you about it at your daughter's wedding, and you said 'Don't bother me with such details. I'm having a good time.'"

Wilcox said, "You told me there was one chance in a million that a hydrogen bubble could form if the reactor overheated. You were always lousy at figuring odds."

Babcock retorted, "Next

Outfoxed At The Dinner Table

By GAIL MICHAELS
I often ask myself why my three year old still wears a bib. I used to think she was just a little slow in developing her fine motor coordination. But she can knot a shoelace so expertly that we once had to cut a pair of shoes apart.

She can climb a refrigerator like a human fly and hang onto the handles with her toes as she raids the cookie jar. She can even build a block tower in the middle of my bed, with me in it. She just can't get a spoonful of soup to her mouth without spilling half first.

I've come to the conclusion that she does it to spite me. She does it because I'm a mean old-fashioned mother who makes her eat at least two bites of each vegetable before she can get down from the table. She does it because I will not allow her to eat ice cream from her bowl like a cat. She does it because after she has licked all the butter off her bread, I make her eat the bread, too.

She never gets anything to her mouth intact for the same reason that she never closes her mouth when she chews — and for the same reason that she blows bubbles in her milk at the beginning of each meal — and for the same reason that, if she's eating something she can't easily drop, she puts the entire helping in her mouth at one time. She does it because she's going to make sure that, if I'm not going to let her exist on a diet of butter and sugar, I'm going to suffer as much as she does.

There really needs to be a good book written on this subject. I'm sick of picking up magazines and seeing smug little blurbs instructing mothers not to make their tables into battlegrounds.

What are the alternatives? I can't just wait for her to eat. Meg has hidden fatty deposits that medical science hasn't even dreamed about. She could give Dick Gregory points on fasting.

And she keeps developing new table tactics so fast that I can't keep up with her. My attempts are all futile. The other evening as we sat down to the table, I tried to anticipate the evening's maneuver by saying, "Now, I don't want to hear you say 'Yuk' tonight, do you hear? If that's the only comment you can make about the food, then you'd better just keep your mouth shut."

"Yum, yum, yum," she said.

Phillip and I looked at each other warily. We had been fooled by a similar tactic once before.

"Yum, yum, yum," she said again, poking her green

Open Road Awaits

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
SHIRLEY, ARK. (AP) — Barreling down the superslab in a purtied-up 4-wheeler the other day, I thought of Walt Whitman and his "Song of the Open Road."

A century ago this most original poet and ex-newspaperman sang of America's great beauty and diversity:

"You road I enter upon and look around, I believe you are not all that is here, I believe that much unseen is also here . . . I swear to you there are divine things more beautiful than words can tell."

Well, I hadn't missed it. It's still out there, that other America, that rich, rolling unique everyday land beyond the scope of the nightly news and the morning headlines, that world of ordinary but most extraordinary people who plant their mail boxes at places like Pee Dee, Desha, Bald Knob and Oil Trough.

In a modern song of the open road, the words to distill this diversity would be harder than ever to come by — in fact, a special vocabulary might have to be mastered.

"How's it looking over your donkey?" a squall of radio static clarified itself into an incoherent sentence just as we passed a flea market named "House of Prayer."

The driver of the rug-upholstered van in which I was riding reached for his microphone on the dashboard and allowed that it was "looking good all the way to the Rock, 'cepting for a big bad bear sitting by Exit 14. He's taking pictures, so smile real pretty when you go by."

Now if your handle was "Ink-Stained Wretch" (favored by newspaper folk) or "Land Baron" (most likely a real estate agent) or "Bionic Peanut — the Six Million Dollar Goober" (an affluent farmer), you would have no trouble with the translation.

You would know straight off that looking back over our shoulder (actually "donkey" connotes a more posterior portion of the anatomy) at the road we had just passed over, the superslab — the Interstate — was clear of problems all the way to Little Rock, except for a state trooper manning a radar trap at Exit 14. Smile pretty was an injunction to get within the speed limit. This is CB talk, the specialized language of citizen's band radio that is used these days to sing of America's traumas and splendors.

Up front in the van, where we sat in high backed swivel chairs and had individual rings to park our cans of Dr. Pepper, my driver-guide pointed out the passing scenic delights of the Ozarks. Wild turkey and quail pecking away along the road shoulder, farmers selling fresh strawberries from the back of pick-up trucks, a blizzard of dogwood blossoms painting imaginary ski slopes on a cloud-shadowed hillside. The Sunday morning circle of pick-up trucks around each and every of the many Baptist churches and missions along the way.

"It's the dream of every boy and girl in Arkansas," my troubador of the open road informed me, "to own a pickup truck with silk screen picture on the rear window, a rifle over the back seat and a CB radio on the dashboard."

House Panel Puts Off Reconsidering Divorce Bill

By SHARON BOND
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A

House panel adjourned Thursday before taking action on reconsideration of a bill that would cut in half the required separation period for a divorce in North Carolina.

The committee had put its stamp of approval on the bill earlier, but last minute opposition by church leaders Monday caused the bill to be taken off the House floor and re-referred to committee after the full House had already given it tentative approval.

Action on the bill was stalled when committee member Rep. Henry Frye, D-Guilford, offered an amendment to increase the waiting time to nine months. No action was taken on the amendment.

The bill, which has already cleared the Senate, would cut the separation period from one year to six months.

It won approval easily in the Senate and the House Constitutional Amendments Committee.

trailer truck driver, rogered in to ask directions to Shaky City, which I learned was San Francisco.

Before we could answer, a girl manning a base station at a truck stop farther up the road told him which exit to take, wished him "blue skies and green lights" and by way of drumming up some business invited him to "stop by and have some coffee with us."

She was only soliciting restaurant customers, but it reminded me that a while back the New York State troopers abruptly curtailed the ministrations of some enterprising young ladies who were operating in the Port Jervis area under the CB handles of "Tons of Fun," "Chocolate Kisses" and "Joy to the World." As Walt Whitman noted long ago, the song of the open road can have some mighty earthy lyrics.

"Good buddy," I am told, no longer is the standard greeting for fellow wayfarers, unless you happen to be a consenting adult pursuing an alternate life-style that a while ago would have got you in big trouble with Smoky Bear, County Mounty and Local Yokel, as the various eschelon of police are called.

A few miles out of Shirley, Ark., the state police radio squawked with a poignant drama of highway robbery:

"Be on the lookout for a blue pickup with Utah plates taken from in front of a diner in Shirley..."

"When did the driver first miss it?"

"When he went outside to get in it."

Eighteen wheelers, superior creatures, often can be quite rude to ordinary four wheelers in passenger cars. "Get off the air and go back to dirty phone calls, we need a bear report," a trucker intruded on some 4-wheelers who were discussing available facilities for a ton-200, the call of nature.

Coming out of Bald Knob, we spotted our first "fraidy hole," which is not in any CB dictionary. It is pure Arkansasauce for a tornado shelter.

"Fraidy holes," said my guide, pointing to a chimney without any house attached, "are for people who are afraid of tornadoes."

As it was to Walt Whitman, the song of the open road on the lips of everyday folks comes across loud and clear, barring a little static, as a manifesto to the ordinary man; the "divine average," as the poet called it, that lights up a language.

mittee the first time through. The bill's sponsor, Sen. Jim Edwards, D-Caldwell, said he agreed to the bill being sent back to the House panel because he didn't want any of the opponents to say it had not been fully aired.

During Thursday's meeting, Bishop Thomas Fraser of the Episcopal Diocese of North Carolina urged committee members to defeat the bill, saying it would "set the stage for easy divorce and remarriage."

But Edwards and private citizens spoke for the bill, saying a lengthy separation period only adds to the bitterness in a broken marriage.

Edwards refused to see the delay and the Frye amendment as a setback for his bill. He said he felt the committee would send the bill back to the floor to be voted up or down there.

you're going to tell me I was responsible for all the radioactive water being dumped into the auxiliary building."

Wilcox said, "You were in charge of radioactive water. I was in charge of pumps."

"Your pumps didn't work, Wilcox. That's why my radioactive water spilled all over the place."

"My pumps worked perfectly. It was the gauges you designed which made it impossible for the Three Mile engineers to guess that the reactor wasn't getting any water."

Babcock said, "You never complained about my gauges before. You told the Three Mile Island people I was the best gauge designer in the business."

"When you weren't drinking," Wilcox replied.

"Oh, so now we're getting personal. Where were you the day we put in the fuel rods? At the Holiday Inn with your secretary, watching the Stanley Cup playoffs?"

"That's a lie, Babcock, and you know it. I was at the Holiday Inn working on the vent valves which, incidentally, worked where we needed them."

Babcock fumed, "I never told you this before, but I hated every moment I worked with you. You're a slob, Wilcox. You leave blueprints all over the place, you can't even draw a containment structure without blotting half the paper, and not once in all the years I've known you have you ever hung up your raincoat."

Wilcox shouted, "I'm a slob? Who kept dropping uranium pellets on the floor, which I was always slipping on? You make me sick."

"Okay, I think it's time we take separate offices. It's obvious we can never design another nuclear plant together again."

"It suits me," Wilcox said. "I won't be here when you get back. You can have custody of the Three Mile Island plant, but I get weekend visiting rights."

"Here's the gold Geiger counter you gave me for Christmas, Wilcox. You know what you can do with it."

In other legislative developments Thursday:

Bottle Bill

A bill that would require a 5-cent deposit on drink containers was endorsed Thursday by the Christian Action League, a leading opponent of alcohol in North Carolina.

League president William A. Wallace, a Baptist minister, said the group believes the bottle bill would be effective in eliminating litter in North Carolina.

The bill, introduced by Rep. Dave Diamond, D-Surry, as a means for cleaning up the state, is now before a House judiciary subcommittee. It has been rewritten to require a statewide referendum on the question if it is approved by the legislature.

Domestic Violence

The Senate was expected to give final consideration today to concurrence on a number of House amendments to Gov. Jim Hunt's domestic violence bill.

The Senate has already approved the main bill and sent it to the House, where it was approved after a number of amendments were added. Now the Senate must concur on those amendments, which it did tentatively Thursday.

The bill spells out law-enforcement officers' responsibilities in dealing with domestic disputes. It would require them to respond to domestic calls if help is requested.

But one of the amendments added by the House would allow law enforcement officers to use their own judgment in responding to repeat calls from the same residence within a 48-hour period, after they have responded to the first call.

Education
A proposal to limit members of the state Board of Education to two consecutive eight-year terms won approval in the House and was sent to the Senate.

The provision was an amendment to a bill that would allow no more than three teachers or other school employees to serve on the state board at any one time.

Insurance

A bill that would increase the minimum required auto-liability insurance from $15,000 to $20,000 won tentative approval in the House. The measure would increase the average auto insurance premium by about $3, according to sponsor, Rep. Paul Pulley, D-Durham.

Pulley said the increase was needed because of inflated hospital and auto repair costs. He said expenses from auto accidents now sometimes exceed the amount of liability insurance most motorists carry.

Tranquilizers
Final House approval was given to a bill that would require pharmacists to place a warning label on tranquilizer bottles when ordered to do so by the prescribing physician.

The label would warn of the potential harm of mixing alcohol with the drugs. The measure now goes to the Senate.

New Bills
New legislation filed Thursday included:

—A constitutional amendment to lower the minimum age for holding elective office in North Carolina from 21 to 18.

—A bill to place $2 of the $10 additional tax on a gallon of liquor sold through mixed drinks in the state's general fund, instead of in county or municipal ABC systems.

—Proposals to set aside 4 percent of the state's general fund as a "rainy day" fund for emergencies, and to set up a special emergency maintenance fund for state facilities.

—A bill to make Pitt Technical Institute a community college.

Secular Salvation In Running

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Puffing, sweating, their faces flushed and strained, the joggers pound along the sidewalks and paths in swelling profusion. Subconsciously, they're trying to get away from that over-taking crunch of age and years, says a Michigan State University professor, the Rev. Dr. Fred Graham, a long-time jogger himself.

They're "running scared," he adds. "It's an irrational response to a subconscious anxiety."

He says that the underlying, subconscious motive is to stave off the debilities of old age and terminal helplessness — a striving for a sort of "secular salvation."

"It's hopeless, of course," he said in an interview. "It won't work. The running can't make much final difference. But fancying that it will is the subconscious motivation, the hidden anxiety."

There's a bit of self-deception in it, he said. "We tend to hide the real motive from consciousness and pretend it's something else — such as to keep in shape or to be strong."

Graham, professor of religious studies who has researched the psychology of the jogging phenomenon, questioned about 100 runners over a five-year period, analyzing their fantasies while running and reasons for doing it.

Graham concluded that the deeper, subconscious drive was fear of what he calls "thana-tech," coined from a combination of the Greek word for death, "thanatos," and "tech" for modern medical technology which can extend life in terminal, incapacitated states.

Noting that the running craze began to get popular about eight years ago at the same time "thanatech" began to have real impact, he said, "Running makes it seem, at least, that it will be a long time before senility and decay sets in."

He said the determination to "run until I drop" displays a quest for a kind of "instrumented salvation" in a modern atmosphere which tends to see human life as mechanically self-determined.

Graham, 48, a pioneer jogger who started the habit 16 years ago, long before it became popular, and who runs three to five miles each noontime, said concern about terminal helplessness is what actually keeps all types of runners on the move.

"Modern medical technology has put this anxiety right up there with basic human anxieties about death, guilt, meaninglessness and loneliness," he said.

He said the anxiety-driven "irrational" aspects of running to ward off terminal incapacity show up in various ways, such as runners who become highly irritable if unable to keep a regular date with road or track.

Others prolong respiratory ailments by refusing to rest a few days from running, he said, or become fanatics about keeping it up and develop crippling leg or foot problems.

"If you go into it freely with your eyes and mind open, without compulsions about it and don't allow it to take you over and deceive you as a conquest of old age and death, it can be healthy both for body and spirit."

New York City Suburb Slayings Start Police Hunt

MOTHER IN SHOCK — Screaming “My son, oh no! Not my son!” Mrs. Corydon Sperry throws her arms around her husband after being told by police that her son Christopher, 21, and the family governess had been killed during an apparent robbery in the family’s home in the New York City suburb of Bedford. BEDFORD, N.Y. (AP) — The bizarre slayings of four persons, including a former U.S. undersecretary of state, at two neighboring estates had authorities searching door-to-door in this affluent New York City suburb for other possible victims.

“We’re just hoping we won’t find any more bodies,” said police officer Joseph Fuchs of the Bedford Hills Police Department.

“I don’t know what’s happening here. We’ve had robberies before, but no one’s ever been hurt,” sobbed an unidentified neighbor of Charles Frankel, who served as undersecretary of state and educational and cultural affairs from 1965-67.

The bodies of Frankel, 61, and his wife, Helen, were found Thursday afternoon in the bedroom of their home, one block from the Corydon Sperry estate, where earlier in the day, Christopher R. Sperry, 21, and 82-year-old Nettie MacCormack, his governess, were found dead, bound and gagged in separate upstairs bedrooms, police said.

Sperry and Miss MacCormack, who had been with the Sperry family for two generations, were found early Thursday by a maid who ran screaming to a neighbor’s home.

Thomas Facelle, acting Westchester County district attorney, called the killings “the most bizarre homicides in my experience,” but declined to say whether he thought they were related.

All the victims had been shot in the head, police said, and one detective described the two sets of slayings as “an exact replay.”

Officers checked for other possible victims at 70 homes in the vicinity Thursday, and said they would continue looking today in an effort to cover all homes in the 40-square-mile village.

About 2½ hours after the first bodies were discovered at the Sperry house, a sports car registered to the family was found abandoned in Brooklyn, with jewelry, bank books owned by the governess with deposits totaling about $80,000, about a dozen family credit cards, and a safe that had been burned open with a torch.

The elder Sperry is with the Wall Street brokerage firm of Stillman, Maynard and Co. He and his wife, who had spent the night in their Manhattan apartment, arrived here after being informed of the murders. Three younger children, Mark, Cassandra, and Corky, also were not home at the time of the slayings.

Upon hearing of Christopher’s death, Mrs. Sperry collapsed in sobs. “My son, oh no! Not my son!” she cried.

Frankel had been Old Dominion professor of philosophy and public affairs since 1970 at Columbia University. He also was president of the National Humanities Center at Research Triangle Park, N.C.

Frankel and his wife, the former Helen Beatrice Lehman, 61, were discovered after their son, Carl, reported to police that he was unable to reach them by telephone.

Bedford, population 16,000, is a wealthy Westchester County community of large homes and estates. Town ordinances require at least four acres of property for each house.

The Sperry estate consists of a white clapboard house, surrounded by a stone wall and shaded by large oak trees. It has a swimming pool, a caretaker’s cottage and a large barn.

“Burglaries are not uncommon up here because people do a lot of traveling,” said one Bedford police officer. “But this is a different matter. It’s really strange.”

The National Humanities Center, which Frankel helped establish, was envisioned as a place where the world’s most outstanding scholars could study. The center was started at the urging of a number of prominent scholars and was dedicated last month.

In an recent interview with The Associated Press at Raleigh, Frankel said, “Obviously, one of its functions is to provide an ideal place for good people to do thinking and writing and research.

“I want to encourage them to reach the public. Scholars are citizens and should think of their jobs in that light.”

Interest Rate Increased On U.S. Savings Bonds

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The government has increased the interest rate on U.S. Savings Bonds for the first time in 5½ years, meaning extra money for millions of Americans.

The increase announced Thursday takes effect June 1 and raises the interest rate from 6 percent to 6½ percent on bonds held to maturity.

Carolyn M. Johnston, director of public affairs for the Savings Bond Division of the Treasury Department, said that statisticians were still calculating what the increase would mean in dollars and cents to individual bond holders.

In general terms, however, she said that holders of Series E bonds will be able to collect more when the bonds reach maturity; if you buy a $25 bond, you will get more than $25 when it reaches maturity. Holders of Series H bonds, meanwhile, will get an increase in the semi-annual payments they receive. Bondholders do not have to do anything to get the extra interest; it is automatic.

Ms. Johnston said the raise means the government will have to pay about $400 million in additional interest each year on the nearly $81 billion worth of bonds held by some 25 million American families.

The interest rate on Savings Bonds has not been increased since Dec. 1, 1973, and critics have charged that the bonds represented a poor investment for small savers who saw their interest eaten up by inflation and who could earn more money elsewhere.

“Interest rates in general have been rising,” Ms. Johnston said. The increase “keeps it (the Savings Bond) more competitive.”

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A speeding charge against a Fayetteville man was dismissed by a Cumberland County District Court judge this week because a radar reading was not considered sufficient evidence to convict him.

The ruling follows a Florida judge’s ruling this week that police radar has not been proved reliable. The Dade County, Fla., judge ruled Monday that radar clockings cannot be used in evidence against 80 accused speeders.

District Court Judge Derb S. Carter said Thursday he dismissed the speeding charge — 47 mph in a 35-mph zone — because the officer was not able to back up the reading with his testimony.

Carter said he did not view his ruling as setting precedent, and said it applied only to that particular case.

However, the case spotlights the apparent policy in North Carolina of not relying on radar rulings alone.

North Carolina Attorney General Rufus Edmisten told Highway Patrol officials and lawmen this week that radar should be used with additional testimony by the arresting officer.

The arresting officer is expected to testify as to the apparent speed of the vehicle, or other relative observations, according to a spokesman for the state attorney general’s office.

For this reason, the official

Radar Evidence Not Sufficient

said, highway patrolmen are required to have one year’s experience with the Highway Patrol before they are allowed to use radar in speed detection.

In the Fayetteville case, Hubert N. Woody, of Rt. 9, Fayetteville, was ticketed by Officer J.R. Horne of the Fayetteville Police Department.

Horne testified at Wednesday’s District Court hearing in the case that he noticed Woody’s car while he checked the speed of cars in front and behind it.

Horne testified he did not form an opinion about the speed of the Woody vehicle, but ticketed him based on the radar reading of 47 mph.

Carter said he felt the radar reading was not sufficient in the Woody case without the officer’s testimony and ordered the case “non-suited” at the close of the state’s presentation of evidence.

Carter said the officer did not observe the Woody vehicle long enough to form a separate opinion as to the car’s speed.

The Florida judge’s ruling came after a three-week hearing when the judge held that the reliability of radar presently used “has not been established.”

Fayetteville Police Chief Danny Dixon said the Florida decision would have no effect on his department’s use of radar to catch speeders.

RICHARD H. LAING
Richard H. Laing, a creative artist, scholar and educator, was named dean of the School of Art.

Laing, 47, has served as chairperson of the Art Department of Edinboro State College in Edinboro, Pa., since 1972. He previously headed the art department at Ball State University in Muncie, Ind., from 1968 to 1972.

The appointment was announced by Dr. John M. Howell, vice chancellor of Academic Affairs. Howell said, "The East Carolina University School of Art is nationally known as a school that produces creative artists. In the search for dean, the faculty and the university administration held foremost as their goal the appointment of a creative artist who already had successful experience as an administrator."

Laing succeeds the late Wellington B. (Bud) Gray who headed the School of Art for 21 years, prior to his death in November, 1977.

In addition to teaching and administrative experience,

Laing is a versatile artist in his own right with some 35 exhibitions of drawings, watercolors, designs and sculptures and a number of publications, including a book on art education now in progress.

He holds memberships in the Pennsylvania Art Education Assn., the North Central Art Assn., the College Art Assn., and the National Art Assn.

He holds the doctorate in education from the Pennsylvania State University. He received the B.S. Ed. degree from Eastern Michigan University and the MA in 1960 from Wayne State University, Detroit.

His appointment at ECU as dean and permanently tenured professor of art is effective July 1.

WALTER M. BORTZ, III
Walter M. Bortz, III will become new director of admissions for ECU, effective June 15.

Howell said Bortz is "eminently qualified to administer the recruiting effort that will be required to carry East Carolina University into its next stage of development."

Bortz, 34, has been dean of admissions, Texas Christian University, Fort Worth, Tex., for the past three years.

At ECU, Bortz will succeed Dr. John H. Horne, who is retiring this spring.

Bortz attended The Kiski School, Saltburg, Pa., and the College of Wooster, Wooster, Ohio, and received a B.S. degree in Biology from Bethany College. He also attended Harvard University and did graduate work at West Virginia University and at TCU.

At present, Bortz is one of six regionally appointed members of the 19 member College Entrance Examination Board Council on Entrance Services.

He serves as a member of the College Scholarship Service, the national and regional associations of College Admissions Counselors and the state, regional and national associations of College Registrars and Admissions Officers.

Boulevard to Farmville Boulevard;
— Evans Street improvements from Tenth Street to Cannon's Crossroads (State Road 1708);

— Arlington Boulevard from Hooker Road to NC 43 north and also extension of Arlington to NC 43 south; and — Dickinson Avenue improvements from Eighth Street to West End Circle.

Planning Commission chairman E. E. Howell pointed out that in recommending the Evans Street improvements out to Cannon's Crossroads, it was felt that the extended corridor would allow citizens living in the outer areas of Greenville to get to their homes "without problems." Howell said that the planning members agreed that the solution to traffic problems was not to channel traffic flow in the area to Greenville Boulevard and stop it there with an end to Evans improvements.

The initial recommendation by the city's planning and engineering personnel was to improve Evans from Tenth to the boulevard.

Bobby Roberson, the city's planning director, said commission members also suggested that several other construction and improvement items be considered, including: NC 33 from Greenville Boulevard to Pinewood Cemetery; Brownlea Drive extension from 14th Street to First Street (the city had recommended Brownlea improvements to Tenth); First Street from Warren to Greenville Boulevard; Red Banks Road from Arlington Boulevard to Memorial Drive; Pitt-Green Street improvements; and the four-laning of NC 43 south from Red Banks Road to Bells Fork.

Howell said that the planning board realized that trains constitute a traffic movement problem here and he said that members are in agreement that planning should be given to underpass or overpass possibilities at the railroad crossings.

The new 264 Bypass should be limited access, it was agreed, as well as a limited access NC 11 Bypass to connect with the existing 264 with the ultimate objective of having a new bypass around the city.

Mayor Percy Cox thanked the planning board members for their time and interest in the thoroughfare priority planning. He also commended the board for "good thinking" on suggesting the changes in the priority projects.

The top five priority items were recommended by the planning and engineering staffs following review of the various projects contained in the Thoroughfare Plan, which was adopted recently by the Council. The priority recommendations, according to Roberson, were based upon present development trends, anticipated needs, and statistical analysis of D.O.T. projected traffic volumes.

The Council also received last night a resolution submitted by the Thoroughfare Task Force of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce supporting the adoption of the priority list by the Council. Bill McDonald, task force chairman, also asked that consideration be given to salvaging local trees in planning for street improvements.

Cox urged that as many people from the area as possible attend the May 23 hearing to indicate local support of the highway improvement projects.

Wine Scandal

DIJON, France (AP) — Burgundy vintor Bernard Noel Grivelet, accused of putting exclusive labels on ordinary wine to be exported to the United States, has been formally charged with fraud, officials said today.

Grivelet is expected to respond shortly to the charges in the wine scandal, which investigators claim represents an attempted fraud of at least $250,000.

The Burgundy wine growers' association, the national institute that controls wine labelling and a national growers' association have all joined the case, developed by government wine inspectors.

Grivelet allegedly bottled cheap blends of "vin ordinaire" under such prestigious labels as Morey-St. Denis, Chambolle-Musigny and Chambertin Blos de Beze, all of which are expensive and distilled from a single type of grape.

Teachers And N.C. Legislators Meet

Representatives of the East Carolina Federation of Teachers (AFL-CIO), acting as spokesmen for faculties of the University of North Carolina system, met with members of the General Assembly Tuesday, seeking legislative support for university faculty members and libraries.

"Inflation is simply devastating the budgets of our university libraries and our faculties, Dr. Robert Hursey Jr., a Department of Mathematics faculty member at East Carolina University and president of the ECU Federation of Teachers told the legislators.

"The situation is so dismal," Hursey said, "that library subscriptions to many essential journals are being curtailed, book acquisitions are down, and faculty members continue to suffer an unprecedented loss of purchasing power which is destined to further erode their morale."

Hursey continued, "on the matter of faculty salaries, we college teachers still suffer gross inequities as compared to most State employees," explaining that there is no salary minimum for attained academic rank, no guaranteed salary increments accompanying promotions, and no longevity pay.

Pediatrician Is Here To Speak For Children

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
Dr. Edwin L. Kendig, president of the American Academy of Pediatrics, is in Greenville today "to speak up for children."

Dr. Edwin L. Kendig

Dr. Kendig, who is one of the speakers during the East Carolina University School of Medicine Second Annual Pediatrics Day being held at Pitt Co. Memorial Hospital, said the Academy has always sought to look out for the health and welfare of children. Therefore, he said, it is opportune for the Academy to take an active role in the year-long celebration of the United Nations-sponsored "International Year of the Child." Actually, he said, the Academy's public education effort probably will be in high gear for two years, because next year will mark the 50th anniversary of the Academy and speaking for children will continue as its primary effort.

The Academy is using sophisticated methods like doctor-training session in public relations, contracting with public relations firms, and concerted efforts at having pediatricians in every community in the 50 states and Puerto Rico to do all they can to use the media to reach the American people with information that will better the lives of infants, children, and adolescents, he indicated.

The four emphasis areas, Dr. Kendig said, are immunization — to overcome public apathy and have every child in the nation protected against seven childhood diseases for which there is now readily available vaccine; nutrition — to educate people to know that good nutrition is a means to a better life from conception and before to old age, and also to make good, nutritious food more available to women and children who cannot afford it; accident prevention — to educate the public as to how children can be protected against bicycle, auto, water, home and other type accidents. (Auto accidents, for instance, Dr. Kendig said, are the No. 1 killers of children in the nation and Tennessee now has a model law to provide for the restraintment of all children 40 pounds and under for their protection while riding in a motor vehicle.); health education — The aim here is to have well-qualified health educators in all the schools of the nations helping children truly understand how to protect their own health and avoid medical problems by good nutrition, avoidance of accidents, alcohol, other drugs, smoking, and venereal disease. The International Year of the Child messages are being presented, Dr. Kendig said, not only via the media, but in the schools and in pediatric offices and clinics around the nation.

"At first we thought," he said, "that we would try to help out with child health problems in some of the underdeveloped nations of the world. But then UNESCO made it clear that each medical community in each nation should seek to improve the health of its own children. So this is what the Academy is doing."

"We may not ever know all the results, but any seed of understanding planted does bear some fruit. Some Americans are already benefitting from our efforts, I'm sure."

Dr. Kendig is Professor of Pediatrics at the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond.

Others on the Pediatrics Day program today include Dr. Donal Dunphy, professor of pediatrics at the UNC-CH School of Medicine, and Dr. Victor C. Vaughan, professor of pediatrics at Temple University.

Rationing Plan...

limited supply.

"It is difficult for members to approve something they don't feel they can count on," he said.

O'Neill likened the issue to the 1938 congressional debate over implementing the national military draft, which was in place when World War II began three years later.

The majority leader said that in a major energy crisis the president would need a rationing plan.

He appealed to colleagues to put aside questions of how much gasoline their own districts would receive if rationing were invoked.

Carter declined immediate comment, but Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of a House Energy subcommittee, said it was unlikely the president would try to find another rationing plan acceptable to Congress.

A White House spokesman said Carter would comment on the situation today.

While Carter could send a new plan to Congress, the one voted on Thursday faced a Friday deadline for action and there is no legal requirement for him to fashion a new plan.

The rationing proposal originated with a 1975 law which required the president to propose various standby measures for use in case of a major cutoff of foreign oil imports such as the 1974 Arab oil embargo.

Carter made concessions to senators from rural states Wednesday, agreeing to base allocation of gasoline during an emergency on the amount used in each state in past years.

The rationing plan cleared the Senate Wednesday 58-39. But there was fear among White House officials that the compromise approved by the Senate would simultaneously lose votes in the House, which has stronger urban interests.

California House members — bitter over what they said was administration inaction in solving already-existing gasoline lines in their state — complained that their constituents would lose gasoline under the compromise agreed to in the Senate. Similar complaints were heard from Pennsylvania.

Draft Registration Bill Moving To House For Vote

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Boys reaching age 16 this year will have to register as potential draftees when they turn 18 if a measure approved by the House Armed Services Committee becomes law.

The committee voted 30-4 Thursday to renew draft registration starting Jan. 1, 1981, but there is no indication whether the full Congress will go along.

The House may act as early as next week on the registration provision, which is contained in a $42 billion weapons authorization bill. The overall bill was approved by the committee, 35-2.

The draft itself would remain suspended even if the registration provision becomes law. The measure under consideration would require young men to merely register so mobilization would be speeded up in case the draft is ever reinstated for a war or emergency.

However, a House Armed Services subcommittee plans hearings within the next two months on a proposal to go one step further and draft up to 200,000 men a year into the Army Individual Ready Reserve.

The measure approved by the committee Thursday would require the president to register men who turn 18 after Dec. 31, 1980.

Although it specifies that men be registered, the measure also requires the president to recommend to Congress how a registration system should be carried out and, as part of that, whether women should be included.

Global Weather Experiment Changing The Maps

GLOBAL WEATHER — An aircrewman stands in the door of a specially equipped aircraft used to drop a new type of weather buoy which measure the air pressure and air and water temperature, gather other information, and radio it by satellite to meteorologists. (AP Laserphoto)

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Global Weather Experiment, an international information-gathering program first expected to offer only long-term benefits, is already transforming weather maps in Australia and pointing the way for improved U.S. forecasts.

In addition, some aircraft are able to save fuel and avoid storms thanks to information being gathered in the experiment.

"Real time benefits were never expected, however, Australia has come up with some," said Dr. Rex J. Fleming of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

More than 140 countries are involved in the weather experiment, which got under way in December using satellites, ships, buoys, balloons, ground stations and aircraft in an information-gathering process that Fleming termed a "logistical nightmare."

Both the immediate benefits to Australia and the potential ones for the United States derive from the success of the drifting buoys being used in the weather experiment.

Aviation benefits, on the other hand, come from weather information automatically taken by equipment installed in some wide-body jets and radioed back via satellite.

The measurements are taken eight times each hour, and officials at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration report that frequently this can be relayed to subsequent flights, permitting the aircraft to take advantage of favorable winds and avoid storm areas.

The specially equipped aircraft are used primarily on tropical and Southern Hemisphere routes where few weather observations are normally available. The drifting buoys were put into service in the Southern Hemisphere because there is so much water in that area, and little land on which to locate weather observing stations.

These buoys measure the air pressure and air and water temperature, gather other information, and radio it by satellite.

"Opinions from meteorologists are that the buoy data have considerably improved the analyses over the oceanic areas and led to improved predictions," James Rasmussen of the World Meteorological Organization said of the Australian experience.

The buoys had not been widely used previously, and those that were deployed often failed in the violent ocean environment. But new types of buoys dropped from aircraft seem to have eased that problem.

Fleming said the new buoys had now been demonstrated "as a cost-effective operational system."

While it was originally planned to store the buoy information and use it in a later analysis of world weather, the Australians instead made arrangements to get it quickly and use it in their forecasts.

It was found that earlier information obtained from satellites had not been wholly accurate; oceanic storm systems turn out to be much more violent and ocean currents south of Australia much stronger than was previously known.

Satellites, which are also an important part of the weather experiment, had been able to locate storms, but determining their strength had been somewhat speculative, the experts reported.

Similar use of drifting buoys in the North Pacific could have an important bearing on weather forecasts in the United States, Fleming speculated.

"We can put buoys in the Northern Hemisphere and improve our U.S. forecasts from a day to several days," said Fleming, "and potentially, by measuring sea-surface temperatures, we may be able to learn about their effect on seasonal changes."

The northern Pacific has a major effect on weather in the United States, particularly the western states, generating the storms that bring rain to California, Oregon and Washington.

Currently conditions there are monitored by ships, aircraft and satellites, but the buoys could provide more accurate and detailed information, possibly at a lower cost, Fleming indicated.

Scientists have speculated that immense pools of unusually warm and cold water in the North Pacific may have an impact on U.S. climate. The pools, discovered in 1957, are 600 to 1,200 miles across and a few degrees warmer or cooler than normal for water in their location.

While a few degrees doesn't sound like much, it involves massive amounts of heat with this much water, and some scientists speculate that the pools, anomalies, influence fact is.

A buoy system, Fleming said, could help scientists determine if this is true and what the effect is.

Regional Easter Seal Meet Held

Easter Seal Society Regional Representative June Shough announced her resignation, effective June 15, during a meeting of the ESS Regional Council Monday evening.

Shough reported on fund-raising and special events. She said nearly $32,000 has been raised and that the goal for the year is $37,000. The fiscal year ends in August, she said, and she expects that the goal will be reached before time for her resignation.

The neighbor-to-neighbor campaign, still in progress, has reaped $10,335 so far, she said.

Shough said the regional office has an extra $10,000 to spend from the Title XX program before the end of the month. Service provided under the Title XX program is for low-income people, she said. Service may include transportation for therapy, purchase of orthopedic equipment, or payment for therapy.

Easter Seal is recruiting campers for this year's camp program, it was announced. Persons who are physically or mentally handicapped and interested in attending camp should call the Easter Seal Society, 758-3230. Title XX helps with the cost of camp, but, if a person is ineligible for this help, other methods may be used. "If a child is not eligible for Title XX, we find businesses and other organizations that are willing to contribute for the support of campers," Shough said.

Handicapped Awareness Week is set for May 13-19. Vann Latham will sit in a wheelchair to come to know and demonstrate some of the problems of handicapped persons, it was decided. Latham will be interviewed on WITN's "Almanac" program at 6:30 a. m. Tuesday.

Small Business Week Proclaimed

Gov. James Hunt has declared the week of May 13 as Small Business Week in North Carolina.

Events scheduled during the week include a Government Procurement Conference in Raleigh on May 15 for owners of small businesses, and the announcement by Hunt of the state Small Businessman of the Year.

The award will be presented at 11:30 a.m. at the conference, scheduled to be held at the Jane S. McKimmon Center, and Sen. Robert Morgan will speak at 1 p.m.

Hunt reported that there are 97,000 businesses in the state with less than 100 employees. He said that approximately one half of all business employees in the state are employed with the firms.

In designating the week, the governor pointed out that, "While large business and industrial firms have developed in our state, or have expanded into

Dividends For Peanut Growers To Be Issued

ROCKY MOUNT — Several million dollars in dividends will soon be distributed to North Carolina and Virginia growers, according to Joe S. Sugg, executive secretary, North Carolina Peanut Growers Association.

All peanut growers who placed peanuts in the additional pools last fall or sold peanuts on the immediate buy-back provision were informed that the Peanut Growers Cooperative Marketing Association has liquidated all of the pools' assets and are in the final stages of computing the proceeds for each pool. Distribution of the dividends is expected to be made in the near future.

These checks will be mailed directly to each producer entitled to said dividends. There has been considerable misunderstanding about the operation of the different pools, which first came into being with the new legislation regulating marketing during the past year, according to peanut officials.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market inched higher today despite several reports by influential business organizations predicting a recession during the second half of 1979.

At noon, with losers about even with gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up .86 at 29.78. NYSE volume rose to 1.13 million shares in the first two hours of trading from 10.22 million at noon Thursday.

The Business Council, composed of top corporate executives, predicted a brief recession would strike during the second half. But Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal said the Carter administration still expects a recession will be avoided.

Citibank said a recession will begin "in the next few months." The downturn will be distinctly worse than those of 1960 or 1970, but "not nearly as bad" as the recession of 1973-1975, it said.

Merrill Lynch Economics' analysts said, meanwhile, Federal Reserve credit-tightening actions may ensure "a recession by year-end."

Sears, Roebuck led the NYSE most-active and was unchanged at 19 1/2. A 269,600-share block changed hands at that price. Electronics issues were higher, with Texas Instruments gaining 1/4 to 80 and National Semiconductor up 1/4 to 20 1/2. Union Oil lost 1/4 to 66 and British Petroleum dropped 1/4 to 23 1/2.

General Public Utilities dropped 1/4 to 9. The Three Mile Island nuclear power complex owner lost a bid for higher rates in Pennsylvania.

Among gaming industry issues, Bally added 1/4 to 63 1/2, while Resorts International class A rose 1/4 to 38 1/2 on the American Stock Exchange. Auto Train gained 1 1/2 to 6 on the Amex. The company transports cars and drivers by train between Florida and the North, and said business has gained due to the current gasoline shortage.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index fell .02 to 55.43; the American Stock Exchange's market value index rose .63 to 176.32.

INDUSTRIALIST DIES

CLEVELAND (AP) — Billionaire industrialist Cyrus Eaton, who at one time or another held controlling interest in such companies as Goodyear Tire and Rubber, and Republic Steel, died Wednesday at age 95.

Firm Suing HUD...

of Third and Washington Streets, to the law firm and recommended Council concurrence.

Howard pointed out last night that HUD, specifically the Greensboro area office, had offered the firm several options in regard to the property transfer action. Howard said the options were unacceptable.

The attorney said the partnership could request a waiver of regulations that imply that a public official may not have a personal interest in property in an urban renewal area, but he said the firm was told the waiver would have to be requested from the secretary of HUD in Washington, D.C. Howard added the firm was also told that if Vincent resigned from the Council the transfer of property interest would be approved.

Howard told the Council that his firm only had "one real option." He said that the firm intended to file the lawsuit in federal court to force HUD to approve the transfer. He said that other parcels have been bought from the Redevelopment Commission by other members of the Council and HUD did not block approval in those cases.

Council member Mildred McGrath recalled that the other sale involving a member of the Council involved a competitive bid situation. In the transaction involving the law firm, bids were not taken but the transfer was negotiated between the two companies.

Joe Laney, executive director of the Redevelopment

Commission, said the transfer of interest had not been turned down but the question at the moment involved just what level of authority could grant the waiver.

Laney said that the real problem involved the legal counsel at the Greensboro area office. He said a change in counsels has taken place and the new staff member has indicated that while a waiver is possible, it will have to be approved in Washington. The former counsel's interpretation of such matters, Laney said, was that if a Council member had an interest in such a property transaction, it could constitute a possible conflict of interest and HUD would have the right to question and review the transaction. According to Laney, the counsel also said the area office could grant the waiver in such matters.

The Redevelopment Commission official said such waivers have been granted on previous occasions by the area office and have been backed by the Atlanta regional office of HUD.

Laney offered the services of the Redevelopment Commission to push the request for a waiver through the area office.

Howard said Vincent "went so far as to prepare his resignation" from the Council but the law firm "prevailed upon him not to submit it." He said Vincent's rights would be violated if he were compelled to resign.

Vincent was excused from voting on the transfer of interest resolution and did not take part in the discussion.

Referring to prospects for today's graduates, Howell said "You are the last of the post-war baby boom and you are wise to think of a crowded job market in a changing nation and uncertain world."

He concluded his graduation address by avowing that "this university will not slip into a moral crisis of easy grades, inconsequential programs and a complacent faculty and administration."

RECEIVED DEGREE

BUIES CREEK — Benjamin Norman Thompson of Winterville was one of 83 students of the Campbell College Charter Law School to be awarded at Juris Doctor degree during commencement exercises at the school Monday.

"It is going to be uphill all the way," he said.

Herbert Carter, faculty member of the School of Music, conducted the ECU Wind Ensemble in a program of concert music prior to the procession.

Following conferral of degrees by Chancellor Brewer and the benediction by Dr. Holt, the Ensemble played the recessional, Elgar's well known "Pomp and Circumstance" and William Walton's "Crown Imperial."

IN APPRECIATION

We would like to express our thanks to the doctors and nurses of Pitt Memorial Hospital and all of our friends everywhere for every deed of kindness, the visits, cards, food, flowers, and most of all, the prayers during the loss of our loved one. May God bless everyone.

Jerry Narron Lets John Do His Thing

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer
Give Jerry Narron credit — the rookie catcher of the New York Yankees knows when to butt out.

Narron made his second major league start Thursday, filling in behind the plate as regular catcher Thurman Munson took a turn as designated hitter. On the mound was Tommy

John, the crafty 36-year-old veteran for whom the New York Yankees spent $1.75 million on the free agent market next winter. Narron had the great good sense to let John, a veteran of 457 major league games over 17 seasons, do his thing. The result was an artful seven-hitter as the Yankees beat the Seattle Mariners 8-1 and the unbeaten

John became the major leagues' first seven-game winner. "I let John call most of the game," said Narron. "It's not hard for any catcher to catch Tommy John."

In other American League games, Cleveland beat Milwaukee 8-1, California defeated Boston 5-3, Baltimore downed Oakland 3-1 and Chicago defeated Kansas City 5-2.

John gave up a run in the first inning on Tom Paciorek's 410-foot triple, but Yankee lead-off man Mickey Rivers got it right back by slamming the first pitch from Mariners starter Odell Jones into the right-field stands.

Reggie Jackson added a run-scoring single later in the first, the seventh game in a row in which Jackson has driven in at least one run.

Indians 8, Brewers 1
Eric Wilkins and Don Hood combined for a five-hitter as Cleveland beat the Brewers, putting the game away with five runs in the eighth inning. Ron Pruitt drove in three runs, two of them on a double in the eighth.

Angels 5, Red Sox 3

Brian Downing hit a two-run homer, a double and a single, Rod Carew, Carney Lansford and Rick Miller doubled and Don Baylor had three singles to lead California's 12-hit attack against the Red Sox.

Jim Rice hit his fifth homer of the year for Boston, which kept the score close by killing a seventh-inning threat with a triple play. With Carew on second and Baylor on first, second baseman Jerry Remy snared Joe Rudi's liner and flipped to shortstop Rick Burleson to double up Carew, then and Burleson threw to first to nail Baylor.

Orioles 3, A's 1
Gary Roenicke's seventh homer of the season was Baltimore's game-winning run, putting the Orioles up 2-0 in the fourth inning against John Johnson, 0-5.

Meanwhile, Dennis Martinez stopped the A's on three hits. "Martinez really goes after them," Orioles Manager Earl Weaver said. "He's got all four pitches and he knows how to use them."

White Sox 5, Royals 2
Claudell Washington hit a homer in the first inning and a triple to set up a run in the sixth, then singled to trigger a three-run eighth that carried the White Sox past Kansas City.

After Washington's single in the eighth, his fourth straight hit, Chet Lemon walked and Eric Soderholm, Rusty Torres and Wayne Nordhagen delivered run-scoring singles.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — While other drivers were predicting what it will take to win the pole position in Saturday's opening day of qualifications for the Indianapolis 500, crafty A.J. Foyt Jr. was doing his thinking on the track.

Foyt, who wasn't among 27 drivers in a survey that indicated it will take 191-plus mph to sit on the pole, cranked out the hot lap at 194.890 mph on the 2.12 mile oval. It was the second straight day that Foyt, 44, took high speed honors.

Foyt, the only man to win here four times, had a 194.007 on Wednesday — his first day on the track this month.

The drivers' survey predicted a four-lap average speed between 188.9 mph and 194.7 to win the pole, the inside spot on the front row that goes to the fastest driver on the first day of qualifications.

That speed would be about 11 mph hour slower than the record 202.156 by Tom Sneva in 1978 when he won the pole for a second straight year.

However, slower speeds are expected this year due to a decision by the U.S. Auto Club to lower the allowable manifold pressure to 50 inches for the bigger eight-cylinder engines which have dominated the race in recent years.

"You're running with a lot less horsepower, so it makes sense that you're going to be going slower," said Sneva, who is struggling this year in the mid-180s range in his effort to become the first driver to win the pole three straight years.

Only five drivers have topped 190 in the first six days of practice. Rick Mears, who started on the front row as a rookie in 1978, has been in that club three straight day, with a top of 193.5.

Defending champion Al Unser, a three-time winner here who swept last year's three 500 mile events, had a 193.382 Wednesday.

Danny Ongais, joined the select group with a 193.133 Thursday, and two-time Indy 500 winner Johnny Rutherford posted a 191.083 in a Thursday workout.

The driver's survey also predicted a four-lap average of 178.317 mph to make the 33-car race. Last year it took 187.266.

So far this year, 29 cars have been above 180 in practice. Today was the final full day of practice before Saturday, and another good day of sunshine which has covered the track for most of the week was predicted.

However, the national weather service was predicting a 70 percent chance of showers for Saturday.

Auburn Handed Watson, Despite Rain, Turns In Hot Round In Nelson Classic

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Auburn University President Harry Philpott scheduled a 9 a.m. news conference today to discuss the school's probation for a series of football and basketball recruiting violations.

Philpott said National Collegiate Athletic Association rules prevented the school from commenting until today.

The NCAA probation announced in Mission, Kan., Thursday cited Auburn for 18 violations.

The football team was banned from postseason competition and appearances in televised NCAA games through the 1980-81 season.

The basketball team was barred from postseason play or televised games during the coming season.

The NCAA said the probationary period ends April 24, 1981.

Auburn, under the NCAA enforcement program's show cause provision has disassociated itself from two former football coaches and will not accept recruiting help from seven representatives of its athletic interests during the probationary period.

The chairman of the Committee on Infractions, Charles Alan Wright, said the group found in its investigation "a pattern of deliberate violations on the part of certain representatives of the university's athletic interests."

Wright commended Auburn for its presentation of facts to the NCAA and its promise to prevent a recurrence of the violations.

The violations, dating to 1974, cited 21 instances of improper football recruiting practices and 11 cases in basketball. Also listed was one instance of improper aid to a football player already at Auburn.

The NCAA committee listed several cases in which a prospective football or basketball player was offered clothing, money or an automobile to attend Auburn. A player was offered all three in at least two cases, the committee said.

In another case, a football player was offered cash and his mother a washing machine, money and round-trip air fare between her home and Auburn.

Other violations listed by the committee included paying transportation costs for prospective athletes, free or reduced rates for others to attend a sports camp operated by a former basketball coach, unauthorized tryouts, more than the NCAA limit of three personal recruiting contacts with prospective athletes and improper publicity about the signing of a football player to a conference letter of intent.

The NCAA said a football player already at Auburn was improperly provided clothing by a representative of the school's athletic interests.

In addition, the NCAA cited Auburn for erroneously stating it was in compliance with NCAA legislation in 1974 through 1977.

DALLAS (AP) — Tom Watson, pursuing his third tournament victory of the year, was one par away from the first-round lead today in the $300,000 Byron Nelson Golf Classic.

Rain halted the first round Thursday with 39 players, including Watson, still on the 6,993-yard Preston Trail layout on Dallas' north side.

Larry Nelson was in the clubhouse with a 5-under-par 65, with George Burns at 66 and the trio of Brad Bryant, Lanny Wadkins and Morris Hatalsky at 67. Arnold Palmer was among a quartet at 68.

Watson, playing the back nine first, was 1-under-par coming into No. 18. Then he sank putts of 15, 18 and 8 feet for consecutive birdies, made a 15-footer on No. 4 to move into a tie with Nelson, then took the lead after hitting a 9-iron to within three feet of the pin on the 431-yard sixth hole.

Watson, who won this tournament a year ago, was looking over a six-foot birdie putt at the par-3 eighth hole when officials sounded the sirens. His putt slid off to the side, and he took his par and headed in.

The last 13 threesomes were scheduled to finish their rounds before the start of today's second round. The last groups had four holes to play.

Bob Gilder, playing in the second threesome behind Watson, was at 4-under when the rain stopped the action. He was one over at the turn, but birdied Nos. 1, 2, 3, 6 and 7 to move into contention.

"I hit a lot of good shots today, and I'm certainly happy about the way I was playing," said Watson, 1979's leading money winner with $232,674.

In his victories in the Heritage Classic, which he won by five strokes, and the Tournament of Champions, which he won by six shots, Watson led from start to finish. He was second in four other tournaments.

He was hoping for a par or better on his last hole today to give him his best competitive round of the year. His previous bests were two rounds of 65 in the Heritage.

Birdie Smiles

Tom Watson smiles after sinking a birdie putt on the sixth hole during the first round of the Byron Nelson Golf Classic in Dallas Thursday. The defending champion was the apparent leader after negotiating the first 17 holes in six-under-par. The first round was stopped because of rain. (AP Laserphoto)

Post After Second Win

ATLANTA (AP) — Sandra Post, the No. 3 money winner on this year's Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, hopes to claim her second victory of the season in a $100,000 event beginning today on the Brookfield West Country Club course.

Post has earned $76,758 so far this year and could move into the No. 1 money spot by claiming the $15,000 first prize, since top winner Nancy Lopez with $88,475 and JoAnne Carner in second place with $83,350, are not competing over the hilly, 6,353-yard, par 73 layout.

"I don't worry about anybody else in the field," Post said Thursday. "I've won when they've all been there. Whenever I play, I give it my best. Sometimes I can't get it all together, however."

Post said she bypassed last week's LPGA event and "just piddled around" at her condominium in Florida.

Her only 1979 tour victory came in the Dinah Shore Winner's Circle early in the year following a pair of second place finishes in earlier tournaments.

With Lopez and Carner, who was injured in a motorcycle accident at her Florida home last week, out of the field, Post ranks along with Jane Blalock as favorites in the 54-hole event.

Blalock already owns three tour triumphs this season and has two Atlanta victories to her credit, although both of those tournaments were played at a different course.

Janet Coles, who won last year's Atlanta event in a sudden death playoff with Hollis Stacy and Gloria Ehret, is back to defend, but has not been enjoying a good season.

Stacy, a former Atlanta winner, also ranks among the top contenders along with Pat Bradley and Donna Horton White, who has finished second once and third twice in her last three outings.

The tournament is sponsored by Michelob beer.

Delaware Park race track has a main track, a grass course, a steeplechase course, a training track, and a schooling course for jumpers.

Waltrip Likes Using Caution Flag Moves

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Like professional football coaches, most Grand National stock car drivers go into a race like Saturday's Music City 420 with a game plan.

Some try to win by posting the fastest qualifying times to gain forward starting positions. Others, with slower cars, hitchhike by "drafting," or being tucked along behind in the vacuum created by bigger, faster cars. Then, at a critical point in the race, they'll "sling" themselves by to gain position.

Still others, like Darrell Waltrip, the current NASCAR Grand National leader in points and money earned, use the caution flag to their advantage. When the yellow flag goes up, speeds go down and drivers are required to maintain their positions.

"There are lots of ways to make a caution flag work for you in a race," Waltrip said. "But using it at the right time is really nothing more than a guess."

Waltrip, 32, from Franklin, Tenn., says, however, that you can make a pretty educated guess about when a yellow flag is due to fly.

"It happens when your equipment is on the ragged edge — engines low on oil, radiators short of water, tires wearing smooth," he said in a telephone interview. "A driver spins out. The yellow flag goes up."

"Then you can pit without losing position. Pit under the green flag and you can figure to lose one to two laps on your competition."

Waltrip, going into the Music City 420, obviously knows how to use the strategem well. He has won two of 10 races so far during this 31-race NASCAR season and he has finished second in three others. With his hometown advantage — he has won more than 60 races on the .596-mile Nashville oval — he has to be ranked as one of the favorites.

Another with the odds and the momentum on his side is Bobby Allison, fresh off his win last week at the Grand National stock car race at Talladega, Ala.

It has been a 10-year drought for Ford drivers at the Nashville International Speedway. A Ford hasn't won a top circuit NASCAR event here since Richard Petty was first to take the checkered flag at the 1969 Nashville 420. Allison, however, drives a Ford Thunderbird — and he says he's due.

"Bud Moore and our crew have put in a lot of work on the short track car," Allison said, "and I think you just might see a Ford back in the victory lane at Nashville."

Qualifying runs begin tonight for the first 10 positions and continues Saturday.

Nelson, like Watson, had a bogey-free round. He had birdies on Nos. 2, 5, 11, 15 and 17.

"I kinda scraped around on the front side, but I played a little better on the back side."

"I picked a lot of right clubs today. I used the wrong club only once, or maybe I hit badly with the right club then. I never had a bad lie, and I chipped well."

Jim Dent, who led the first two rounds of last year's tournament, was one of many, including Lee Trevino, at even-par 70.

MOM UNDERSTOOD
NEW YORK (AP) — Amy Alcott, one of the players on the women's professional golf circuit, credits a lot of her success to her mother.

"I was lucky, I didn't have a Little League Mom," Amy said. "She used to tell me she didn't care if I shot 66 or 88, as long as I was having fun."

Messersmith Finds Numbers He Likes

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

For Andy Messersmith, all the numbers were wrong. The earned-run average was far too high and the batting average was a flat zero.

Then the New York Mets showed up.

Messersmith, in his second tour with Los Angeles, hadn't pitched a complete game in two years and a shutout in three. He was working on both Thursday night until Lee Mazzilli pounced on a fat sixth-inning fastball for a home run.

After the seventh inning, Messersmith was gone — but only for safety's sake. His numbers were impressive: six hits allowed and four strikeouts chalked up on the mound and a pair of hits, including a two-run double, at the plate.

And the most impressive number was the score: Los Angeles 14, New York 1.

In the rest of the National League it was Montreal 3, San Francisco 0; Philadelphia 3, San Diego 2; St. Louis 3, Houston 1, and, in a game suspended after nine innings, Cincinnati 7, Chicago 7.

Expos 3, Giants 0

Rodney Scott displaced veteran Dave Cash as Montreal's second baseman because of his glove, not his bat. But against the Giants he hit his first home run in 718 at-bats (292 games) in the majors.

"It was a bonus," he said.

The homer came off rookie Phil Nasti. "He hung one to the smallest guy in the park," moaned Giants Manager Joe Altobelli. Meanwhile, Steve Rogers stymied San Francisco on three hits.

Phillies 3, Padres 2

Pitcher Nino Espinosa drove in a run, offsetting the fifth career homer of 40-year-old Padres hurler Gaylord Perry, as Philadelphia chalked up its 19th victory in the last 23 games and the seventh straight on the road.

Espinosa, who hit an RBI grounder in the second inning, scattered six hits before Ron Reed took over in the eighth.

Pete Rose's double and Greg Luzinski's single drove in the Phil's other runs.

Cards 3, Astros 1

Keith Hernandez singled, Ted Simmons delivered an RBI double, then Simmons scored on George Hendrick's single in the seventh inning to help St. Louis beat J.R. Richard and hand the Astros their fifth loss in seven games.

Bob Sykes, who went the first 71-3 innings, Darold Knowles and Mark Littell combined on a five-hitter for the Cardinals.

Reds 7, Cubs 7 (tie)

Homers by the Cubs' Barry Foote, Ted Sizemore and Dave Kingman and the Reds' Dave Concepcion highlighted the nine innings in Chicago that ended with the teams knotted 7-7.

The game was suspended — to be resumed when the Reds visit the Cubs again on July 23 — to let the Cubs catch a flight to Houston.

Spurs Hope Bullets Will Test Lead Theory

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — San Antonio Coach Doug Moe says he hopes the Washington Bullets will allow the Spurs to race to a big lead tonight so Bullets Coach Dick Motta can test one of his theories.

"I've never seen San Antonio really hold the lead in the big pressure games," Motta said as the Bullets practiced here Thursday for Friday night's fourth game of the NBA Eastern Conference championship series.

The defending NBA champion Bullets are down 2-1 after a late rally fell short here Wednesday night and the Spurs held on for a 116-114 victory. The Spurs had led by as many as 14 points midway through the fourth quarter.

Motta was on hand here in the previous series when the Spurs blew an 18-point second-quarter lead before beating Philadelphia in the seventh game. The Washington coach says the Spurs get a "rattled run" in their eyes when they run to a big early lead. That look, Motta says, usually leads to a Spurs scoring drought.

But Moe doesn't put much stock in the "look" theory.

"I hope he gets a chance to prove he's right. We want to be in that position," he said.

"It was encouraging that we lost the (14-point) lead but we didn't lose the game. I'll be glad to give them a shot at coming back again — if they'll be nice enough to let us win again."

Motta was not pleased with the big lead the Spurs mounted Wednesday night. But he said the Bullets apparently needed the shock of a big deficit to wake them up.

"It was like someone lifted a veil off of us. It was like night and day. You could see the bodies come to life," he said.

Both coaches look for more backboard brutality when the series resumes. The lightweight Spurs, who usually run from a fight, surprised the Bullets with a tough inside game Wednesday night. They held Bullets center Wes Unseld — who owned the offensive boards earlier in the series — to six offensive rebounds.

"Unseld knows how to do it without drawing a lot of attention to himself," Spurs center Billy Paultz said. Paultz and forward Mark Olberding battled Unseld inside in Game 3.

Moe said his heart skipped a beat when Unseld and slender Spurs forward Coby Dietrick went after a loose ball Wednesday night. Both players wound up on the floor — with Unseld seemingly pinning Dietrick under his massive frame.

"I thought Coby was dead," Moe said.

Neither coach expects many changes for tonight's game. Moe says the Spurs will look for the fast break and try to stay in the physical battle. Motta says his team always has been able to do just about whatever it wanted against San Antonio.

"We can get the shot we want against this team. We get it where we want it and when we want it. Now we just have to hit it," he said.

For the Bullets, he said, this year's playoffs are much different from last year's title season. "It's a different philosophy when you're supposed to win than when you hope to win."

Stewart Says N.C. Can Provide Larger Pay Raise

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — House Speaker Carl Stewart sided with teachers and state employees Thursday, saying North Carolina can give them a larger pay raise than the one proposed by Gov. Jim Hunt and still not exceed federal wage controls.

Stewart, after meeting in Washington with White House Council on Wage and Price Stability leaders, said President Carter's voluntary wage guidelines are flexible enough to allow a larger salary increase than the 7 percent pay and fringe benefit package Hunt has backed.

The development left Hunt alone in support for the smaller pay raise among the state's top three executive and legislative leaders. Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green had earlier backed a move for a 9 percent package.

Hunt press secretary Gary Pearce refused to comment on Stewart's meeting and said the governor would not respond until he met with Stewart.

"We have concluded that there is far more flexibility in the guidelines than we had earlier believed," Stewart said after the meeting.

"The consensus of our meeting is that we will be able to place more dollars in the hands of our teachers and state employees than we have presently budgeted and still adhere to the presidential guidelines."

Stewart did not propose an alternative to Hunt's recommendation for a 5 percent salary increase plus two percent in new fringe benefits. But Stewart aide Russell Clay said the speaker would propose several alternatives for a larger pay increase before legislative appropriations committees, possibly today.

Groups representing teachers and state employees are pressing for a salary increase amounting to at least 7 percent plus two percent in additional fringe benefits, making a 9 percent total package.

But Hunt, who proposed his smaller pay raise package in his biennial state-budget package, has said that amount would be in violation of the voluntary anti-inflation guidelines.

"He's determined they can do more than that," Clay said, referring to the Hunt proposal.

Stewart's support for a larger pay increase comes at a crucial time. A joint House and Senate subcommittee meets today and over the weekend and is expected to draw up a final budget proposal to present to the full committee next week.

A preliminary budget estimate prepared by money-committee leaders last week had earmarked money for pay raises that would cover Hunt's recommendation but did not leave an excess amount for a larger increase.

Legislators said a larger increase could be written into the budget through several methods, however. Among the options, legislators said, were to postpone for a year a $40 million tax cut plan or delay a $40 million request for improvements on the five predominantly black University of North Carolina campuses.

Stewart met in Washington with Barry Bosworth, director of the the White House council. With Stewart were House appropriations leaders and two staff members.

It seems that the green baize of the card table can have much the same effect as snow. How else can you explain the sudden blindness that overtakes players at crucial moments in the play of the hand?

We have no serious quarrel with the way the auction progressed. In view of his jump shift, South's decision to bid the grand slam was, perhaps, a trifle aggressive. However, we would have been inclined to go the whole hog with the North hand, so we cannot fault the final contract.

Declarer won the opening club lead with the ace and immediately drew trumps in three rounds. He then proceeded to play out the spades, in the hope that the suit would break evenly, which would enable him to get two diamond discards from dummy. When this failed to materialize, declarer ruffed a spade in dummy and now had to fall back on the diamond finesse. Unfortunately, West had the queen and declarer was down one.

This hand did not depend on the spade break or a diamond finesse. In the absence of really bad breaks, the contract was more or less a cinch, and we are sure that declarer would have made the hand had he been sitting in the North seat with the South hand as dummy.

Note that North's trumps are all masters, and that suggests a dummy reversal. After winning the ace of clubs, declarer should immediately ruff a club in his hand. He then cashes the ace of trumps and overtakes the queen of hearts with the king to see how the trumps divide. When they behave in a friendly manner, declarer can almost claim the hand.

He ruffs dummy's last club with his last trump, then crosses to the table with the king of spades to draw the remaining trump, discarding a diamond from his hand. The ace of spades is cashed and, when both defenders follow, the contract is ironclad. Declarer ruffs a spade to establish the suit, re-enters his hand with the ace of diamonds and discards dummy's two remaining low diamonds on the queen-seven of spades. Dummy's king of diamonds is the last—and fulfilling—trick.

Businessmen Told 'Recession' May Ease Inflation

By EILEEN ALT POWELL
Associated Press Writer
HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — Inflation should begin easing as the economy slides into a "moderate, brief" recession in the second half of the year, according to economic consultants for a prestigious group of businessmen.

The analysis released today at the semi-annual meeting of the Business Council was more pessimistic than the group's previous quarterly reports.

ter administration insistence that a recession can be avoided as inflation is brought in check by tighter money and budget policies and the voluntary wage and price guidelines.

The report to the council, which is made up of board chairmen and chief executive officers of 100 major U.S. corporations, predicts the economy will decline for six to eight months before turning up again.

"I think the consensus was (that) this is what we need, this is what we are moving into," Clifton C. Garvin Jr., chairman of Exxon Corp., said in remarks prepared for his introduction of the report. "It's not all that bad."

Garvin said he preferred the term "downturn" to "recession" but admitted "it's a little more severe than people had anticipated."

As recently as February, the consultants had been predicting only a moderate decline in the nation's economy. But even that was a sharp contrast to its prediction last fall that the economy would expand this year by 2½ percent, about the same as President Carter's prediction.

The new Business Council forecast calls for the nation's output to decline "roughly 1 percent" over two to three quarters beginning at mid-year.

A recession is commonly defined as a contraction in economic growth for at least two consecutive quarters.

The Council said, however, that this year's recession would be no worse than the 1969-1970 recession, "the mildest of the post-war period." By contrast, there was a 6 percent drop in output during the severe 1974-75 recession.

On inflation, the council agrees with the administration that "the worst of the current price surge is already behind us." It expects the rate of inflation to slow from an annual pace above 10 percent in the first quarter to an annual rate in the final quarter of 7.5 percent.

Still, it said, "Consumer prices will be 9½ percent higher this year than last and just over 7½ percent higher in 1980 than 1979."

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal earlier this week said the government "screwed up" on earlier inflation projections and suggested a revised target of 8½ percent for this year.

Garvin said some reasons for the more pessimistic projection include the decline in housing construction and in consumer purchasing.

"The consultants find reasons, however, for projecting no more than a moderate, brief, recession," he said in a written statement. Garvin did not expand on those reasons.

The predictions, likely to get close attention from the administration because of the prestige of the group, also say:

—The nation's Gross National Product the fourth quarter of this year will be 0.6 percent above the fourth quarter of 1978. The Carter administration has predicted 2.2 percent.

—The unemployment rate will rise about 1 percentage point from the first quarter's 5.7 percent rate.

—The majority view is that interest rates have not yet peaked," the report said. Most interest rates already are at record levels.

In other economic developments Thursday:

—Commerce Department officials said the nation's retail sales edged up a half percentage point in April, despite a 2 percent drop in auto purchases. One official said the news indicated the economy "is hardly bubbling over." Sales of non-durable goods — such as food and drugs — rose 1 percent, while sales of durable goods stayed virtually the same.

—State Department officials said recent figures showing a sharp increase in U.S. imports of Japanese automobiles could undercut the favorable impression Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira made on his recent visit here. Until this week, trends in U.S.-Japanese trade this year had been highly favorable, with both countries predicting a sizeable decrease in the $11.6 billion deficit the United States had last year.

City Counted Three Collisions Thursday

An estimated $6,300 property damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Heaviest damage, according to police, resulted from a 3:30 p.m. collision at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Center Street, involving cars driven by Milton Morey Swain of Atlantic Beach, Cecil Benjamin Adams Jr. of Route 2, Greenville, and Sam Taylor Jr. of Route 1, Bethel.

Officers estimated damage to the Swain car at $2,500, and said an estimated $500 damage resulted to each of the other two vehicles.

Investigators charged Charles Owen Stancil of 1006 Hooker Rd. with failing to yield the right of way after the car he was driving collided with a truck operated by Cleveland Earl Cox of Route 1, Grimesland, about 4:44 p.m. at the intersection of Greene Street and Airport Road.

Officers said a hubcap from the Stancil car struck a car driven by Alton Thomas Cogdell of 112 Woodside Dr., while the right rear wheel from the Stancil vehicle, which came off the car, struck a car driven by Clayton Earl Clemons of Route 5, Greenville.

Damage from the mishap was set at $1,000 to the Stancil car, $500 to the Cox truck, $25 to the Cogdell car and $75 to the Clemons vehicle.

Jessica Bea Boyd of Route 1, Pinetown was reported injured when the car she was driving collided with a car driven by Ruben Craig Grant of Branche's Trailer Pk. about 1:48 p.m. on Memorial Drive, 175 feet South of the Dexter Street intersection.

Damage from the mishap was estimated at $400 to the Boyd vehicle and $800 to the Grant car.

Mishap Kills Grifton Boy

GRIFTON — Leonard Whitfield James Jr., an 11-year old from Grifton, died Thursday in Pitt Memorial Hospital as a result of injuries received when he was struck by a tractor-trailer Wednesday while riding his bicycle on N. C. 118, east of Grifton.

According to the Highway Patrol officials in Greenville, James was struck by a tractor-trailer driven by Ronald Clark Allen of Belhaven when he rode his bicycle into the highway from a driveway. The accident occurred late Wednesday afternoon.

Allen's vehicle was in the process of passing a truck driven by Franklin E. Best of Ayden, according to officials. Best swerved his truck off the road and struck a utility pole to avoid hitting James. James, whose family had recently moved to Grifton, was a fourth grade student at Ayden Elementary School.

Highway patrol officials termed the accident "unavoidable to the motorist" and no charges were filed.
