It was moved that the election of the new president be put off until an adjourned meeting at 6.30 Monday evening.

The meeting adjourned and practiced yells until 8:00 O'clock - when the annual Inter-Society Debate was held between the Sidney Lanier Society and the Edgar Allan Poe Society. The Poes sat on the East side of the Assembly Hall under their colors red and white and the Laniers on the West side under their green and gold. The Stage was beautifully decorated with pennants from the Societies and ferns and the Loving Cup (under dis cussion) tied with Poe Colors.

At eight oclock amid cheers from both Societies, the marshals led the debaters to the Stage — misses Helen Watson and Myrtle Rice, negative on the West and misses Helen Bahnson and Helen Croom, affirmative on the East. Misses Maupin and Larkington presided.

The debate was very close; Mr. Wilson was called on to deliver the decision of the Judges. After holding the audience in suspense for quite a while, he presented the Cup to the Affirmative — the Poes had won - two to one - and the red and white still waves over the Cup!
