No Immediate Relief Seen By Local Area Oil Jobbers

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Seven major oil jobbers in the Greenville area last week indicated they see no improvement in the gas situation in the months ahead and generally suggested that motorists be as conservative as possible in an effort to prevent the re-occurance of waiting lines at gas pumps.

Two of the jobbers, W. L. Allen Oil Co. which distributes Gulf projects, and Carawan Oil Co, distributors for Exxon, reported their allocation this month at 90 per cent of the amount sold in May 1978, while the other jobbers — Leon L. Moore Oil Co. (Citgo), Blount Petroleum Co. (Texaco), Quality Oil Co. (Shell), Moore-King-Sullivan (Union 76), and Sutton's Service Center (American) — reported their gas allocation at 80 per cent.

A wider variation was reported for diesel fuel (kerosene and home heating oils) allocations. W. L. Allen reported they were under no allocation, while Quality and Moore reported a 50 per cent allocation on diesel fuel. Carawan, Blount, and Moore-King-Sullivan reported an allocation of 80 per cent, while Sutton's reported an 85 per cent allocation.

If you are a farmer depending on diesel fuel and gasoline to run tractors and trucks, you probably won't have any problem, the companies indicated. Farmers, they said, are allotted all the fuel they need, and so far, there has been no problem in meeting their needs.

It's the general public that may have problems.

"Folks are just going to have to conserve," Leon Moore said, projecting spot shortages periodically, although no stations serviced by his firm have had to curtail operations so far.

W. L. Allen predicted, "it's going to be tight around the last week of each month," as monthly allocations are used up, but so far, he said none of the stations serviced by his firm have been forced to restrict their sales.

Ferrell Blount, commenting on curtailed operations this summer said, "I'll just about guarantee it," although he said the problem for his customers is not that critical now. "I'm at the point that mine (allocation) now is running real close. If they cut anymore, I'll have to cut back."

Charles Gaskins of Quality Oil, said, "I don't see it getting any better for the remainder of the summer.

"We have at least one station curtailing operations by closing Wednesday afternoons and shortening their hours throughout the rest of the week."

He explained, "What they (stations) generally do is look at their sales through the 15th (of each month) and see how they are running. They make some arrangements about closing or whatever it takes to supply gas for the rest of the month.

"Nothing is certain anymore. That's the worst thing of all...the uncertainty."

"We can avoid," lines, "if we keep things moving... if we watch it closely," Ralph Sullivan of Moore-King-Sullivan theorized. "Most people take a projected look," at the end of each month and, "more or less ration it out," the next month in order to prevent running out. "Surely at the end of the month it's going to give out," if sales are not watched, he noted.

All gasoline, he said is, "allocated. "There's no gas lying around. The Department of Energy is going to see to that."

But even if there is no problem getting fuel to run cars and trucks...even if there are no lines, the motoring public will pay a higher price.

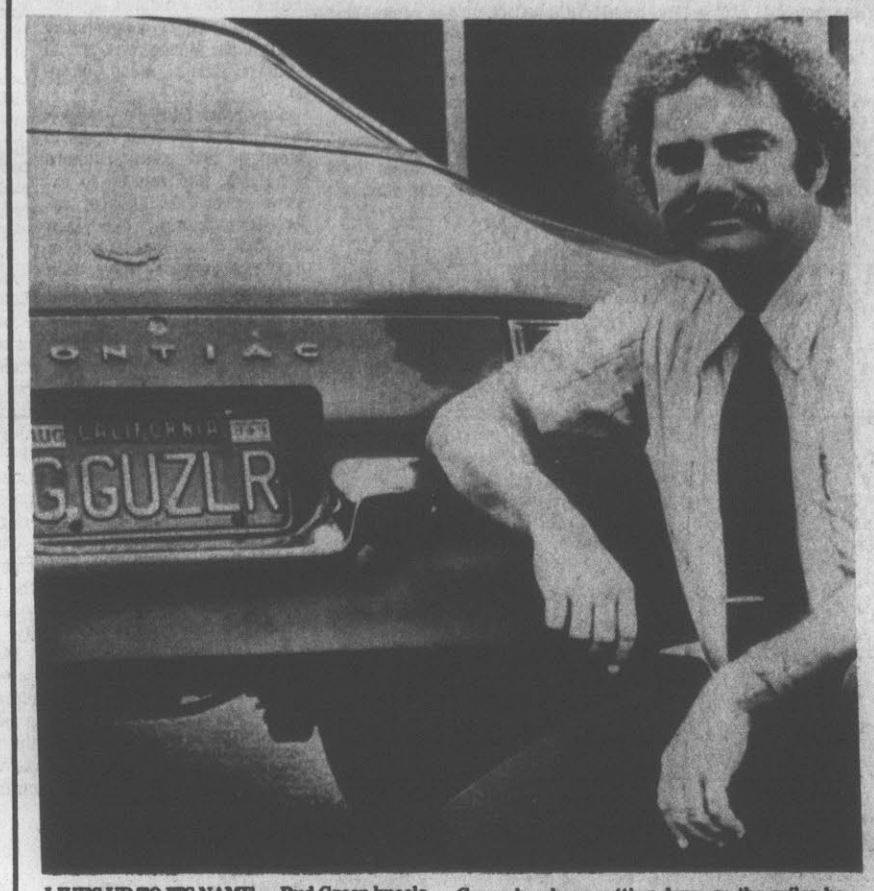
Price increases, Gaskins said, are, "coming in about two or three cents per gallon per month," and purchasers can, "expect that to continue," although he noted, "we've got the same margin of profit we had roughly 10 years ago."

Sullivan said his firm and most other distributors simply track increases in their costs to their customers so, "we maintain our profit margin."

Service stations are allowed to price their sales to customers 10 cents above their cost.

Moore projected that, "most major oil companies will be discontinuing leaded premium gas within the next year. It will be phased out completely''' he said, because all new cars are being made to use unleaded fuels.

Older cars, he said, can be tuned to use leaded regular or unleaded gasoline.



LIVES UP TO ITS NAME — Bud Green kneels by his car and the personalized license plate that brings laughs from service station attendants in Los Angeles. Since the fuel crunch, Green has been cutting down on the miles he drives, but says his 11-mile-a-gallon 1970 Firebird is still a "guzzler." (AP Laserphoto)

Dole, Helms Spoke At GOP Convention

By ELIOT BRENNER

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The nation must not misinterpret critical Republican questions about the Salt II pact as a sign of warmongering, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., said Saturday.

The GOP presidential hopeful told more than 1,000 delegates at the North Carolina GOP Convention that "the last thing we should do as Republicans is make it a partisan issue. It's too important for that."

While Dole skipped over the "warmonger" phrase in his prepared text, he told reporters later, "I can see that. I hope it doesn't come to that.

"There's going to be an effort — I assume we can't avoid it — by the Carter administration to put the best face on it and make it seem that anyone who opposes it wants to heat up the arms race and spend a lot of money and increase the tension of the Soviets," he said.

"On the other hand," Dole added, "there's always the temptation for Democrats and Republicans who don't agree with Carter to say 'Well, they're selling out to the Soviets.' If we can sort of build a foundation for responsible discussion of it, we might learn a lot, accomodate some of the objections. Carter might make some accomodations and we might all vote for it. I voted for Salt I."

Dole, the GOP's vice presidential candidate in 1976, said he has not made up his mind how he will vote on the pact. A few minutes after Dole spoke, convention delegates approved a resolution equating a vote for the treaty with "a vote against a strong national defense."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., had told the delegates he wanted Congress on a "Saltfree diet."

Dole, who entered the GOP race a week ago, said he did not want "to see the Republican Party trying to gut the Salt agreement before we even have it. A lot of people in this country hunger for peace and would like to slow down the arms race."

In a news conference, Dole said he named former state GOP Chairman Robert Shaw of Greensboro as his North Carolina campaign manager. He said Shaw was instrumennal in his selection as former President Gerald Ford's 1976 running mate.

In convention developments, a challenge to state GOP Chairman Jack Lee from within the conservative wing was avoided when Gilbert Lee Boger withdrew as a candidate against Lee. Boger has been critical of Lee, claiming he let the North Carolina Congressional Club run by Helms and other GOP conservatives dominate the party affairs.

Helms, in his remarks to the delegates, urged an end to infighting that has wrecked the party in recent years.

We have what may be a divine challenge to get our act together, to lay aside the temptation of internal bickering, what well may be superficial partisanship,"

"I don't know about you, but I am willing to work with anybody, anybody who wants to set America straight again."

Stockpiling By Industry May Have Aggravated Shortage

By ROZ LISTON
United Press International

Industry may have aggravated the nation's gasoline shortage by stockpiling oil as early as January on advance information of widespread scarcity at the pump this spring, authoritative sources said Saturday.

"At least one state energy office warned heavy and light industry in January to top off their storage tanks because that state expected oil shortages in April or May when the heavy driving season usually begins," a petroleum expert told UPI.

"Long before the public became aware of any gasoline scarcity, industry had made the prudent decision to fill its tanks as a hedge against unemployment," he said.

"Industry has immeasurable storage capacity and its drawdown on the oil companies' already tight inventories meant motorists had less gasoline than other users."

As Americans braced for a gas-short Memorial Day weekend, officials said thousands of New England homes could be without heating oil next winter unless the nation curbed its passion for summer driving.

Illinois, Massachusetts and Utah enforced the 55 mph speed limit to conserve dwindling gasoline supplies, the Nevada legislature debated purchasing gasoline on foreign markets to reverse a 40 percent slump in the Las Vegas tourist business, and New Jersey said it would require a minimum gas purchase of $10 per car if all else failed to stem motorist demand.

The so-called "California Syndrome" moved into high gear this weekend. Many California stations said they had no gas left to pump and would be forced to ignore Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.'s executive order requiring larger dealers to stay open either Saturday or Sunday to sustain the state's odd-even day rationing plan.

The public, fearful that California's mile-long gas lines and frantic buying would spread to other states, harbored suspicions that the oil companies were withholding gasoline in the hopes of getting steeper prices.

President Carter, who is predicting a 5 percent shortage in gasoline supplies this summer, ordered the Energy Department to audit the oil industry.

The Federal Trade Commission, in turn, was taking a sharp look at Energy Department rules governing the oil companies that might be partly to blame for the fuel crisis in California.

"For an oil company to hold back product is economically absurd," said a New York spokesman for the American Petroleum Institute, the oil industry trade association. "A company could never recover the costs of storing oil while continuing to pay its employees."

As pressure mounted on President Carter to find an instant solution to the gasoline question, the fact that a shortage existed was abundantly clear in widespread service station closings, diesel fuel outages and an upsurge in mass transit riders.

The reasons behind the motorist's hardships were far more difficult to pinpoint.

In late February the Energy User News — a publication widely subscribed to by industry — reported that the Ohio Department of Energy was "quietly notifying" 38 trade organizations representing businesses highly dependent on petroleum products to keep oil tanks full because of anticipated shortages.

"Imagine the impact of this on light and heavy industry," one observer said. "Those 38 trade associations in Ohio have affiliates all over the country."

The Ohio Energy Department warning was issued just after Iran, which had supplied 10 percent of the United States' foreign oil, turned off its oil taps during the height of the revolution that toppled the shah.

The Iranian disruption in oil output created a global oil shortage, sent U.S. oil companies scrambling for other sources of crude, and prompted OPEC to leapfrog prices in what is still an all-out seller's market.

"We did notify a number of trade organizations back in January to alert their membership to a possible shortfall of industrial fuel," a spokesman for the Ohio Energy Department said.

"We have no way of tracking what the companies did, but they probably topped off their tanks this year in the belief that fuel costs would increase," he said. "Companies have been reluctant to do so in previous years because that meant tying up dead money."

Ohio, the distribution center for Sears, J.C. Penney, K Mart and Montgomery Ward and the home of many industries, has had no shortage of industrial fuel, he said.

The Ohio Manufacturers Association put the state Energy Department warning in a newsletter to its 1,300 members, the Ohio Energy Department spokesman said, "but I don't know if our large manufacturers notified plants in other states."

Several other state energy offices said they had not urged local industry to tank up because such a move could have created a shortage.

In Washington, an official of the Department of Energy's regulatory arm confirmed there were indications that industry had topped off its tanks long before motorists began topping off theirs.

It is almost impossible for the Department of Energy or the oil companies to measure how much oil has been stored

Pitt Demos Elect Officers

By LYNN CAVERLY
Reflector Staff Writer

Dr. Thomas B. Brewer, Chancellor, East Carolina University, was the guest speaker at the annual convention of the Pitt Democratic Convention held Saturday in the District Courtroom of the Pitt County Courthouse.

Dr. Brewer urged the democrats to "avoid professional politics and professional politicians" and had praise for the United States political system.

Election of new officers highlighted the convention. Elected officers for the coming year are: Chairman, George Saleeby of Grifton; 1st Vice-Chairman, Katherine Lewis of Pactolus; 2nd Vice-Chairman, John Bizzell (re-elected); 3rd Vice-Chairman, Bill Brinson; Secretary, Judy Donnalley (re-elected); and Treasurer, Pat Higgins (re-elected).

Saleeby will automatically represent Pitt County on the state Democratic Executive Committee. Other newly elected members to the committee are Ann Burks, Henry Ogelsby, Willie Mae Carney and John Taylor.

Robin Cratch, a rising senior at ECU majoring in Political Science, was the recipient of the Sam Manning Scholarship. The scholarship is provided by the Young Democrats Club in memorium of Manning who was active in the local Democratic Party.

A resolution supporting House Bill 1135, which would alleviate discriminating employment practices in the state, and would allow instances of alleged discrimination to be dealt with on a state basis rather than referring them to the federal government as is currently the course of action, was approved by the convention.

Legislators Pay Hike Approved

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — A little-noticed bill giving state legislators a 5 percent pay hike beginning in 1981 has been approved by the General Assembly's budget subcommittee.

The measure, which would raise the average legislator's pay from $6,000 to $6,300 a year and the house speaker's pay from $12,000 to $12,600 a year, moved out of the special appropriations panel Friday as part of a package of provisions to the proposed state budget.

No Telephones Til Renovation

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — State Correction Secretary Amos Reed says inmates at Central Prison can't be given increased access to telephones until the prison is renovated — a process that will take at least three years.

In response to a recommendation for expanded telephone access from the state Inmate Grievance Commission, Reed said the department "respectfully declines to consider a short-range telephone program for inmates."

But he said officials will study the possibility of a long-range program to increase phone privileges after a major renovation of the prison is completed.

Public Meetings On Refineries

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Public meetings will be held to discuss issues that will be included in environmental impact statements on two oil refineries proposed for Southeastern North Carolina, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has announced.

The corps will hold meetings in Bolivia Tuesday and in Raleigh Wednesday to determine the scope of issues that will be included in the impact statement for a refinery proposed for Brunswick County.

A meeting will be held June 21 at Morehead City on the impact statement for a refinery proposed for Carteret County.

Electrocution Ordered For Two

By THOMAS E. SLAUGHTER
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A grim dance with death has begun in Florida, the state with more death row inmates than any other, and capital punishment foes say a double execution set for Wednesday could mark the widespread resumption of state-ordered executions.

Meanwhile, attorneys for condemned killers John A. Spenkelink and Willie Jasper Darden, have begun a frantic search for a court to halt the electrocutions, which are scheduled to begin shortly after sunrise Wednesday.

Spenkelink, 30, who is white, was convicted for the Feb. 4, 1973 killing of a traveling companion, Joseph Szymankiewicz, an Ohio parole violator who was found shot to death in a Tallahassee motel room. Darden, 45, who is black, was convicted for the Sept. 8, 1973 shooting of Lakeland, Fla., furniture store owner James Turman.

Florida's death chair, "Old Smokey," has not been used since 1964. Ironically, that last execution 15 years ago also was a double execution and one of the men was white, the other black.

If either Spenkelink or Darden actually is executed Wednesday they would become the nation's first death row inmates to be executed against their will in 12 years since Louis Jose Monge was put to death on June 2, 1967 in Colorado.

Gary Mark Gilmore was executed by a Utah firing squad in January 1977, but Gilmore steadfastly had refused to exercise several avenues of appeal open to him. Since then only two other men — one of them Spenkelink — have been near execution.

Former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew signed a death warrant for Spenkelink on Sept. 12, 1977 and Spenkelink came within three days of execution before a federal judge in Tallahassee stayed the execution, pending completion of a new round of federal appeals.

But the spotlight shifted back to Florida Friday when Gov. Bob Graham signed the two death warrants. Under Florida law, the governor designates the week in which an execution is to be held and the superintendent of the Florida State Prison, near the north Florida town of Starke, sets the actual day and time of execution.

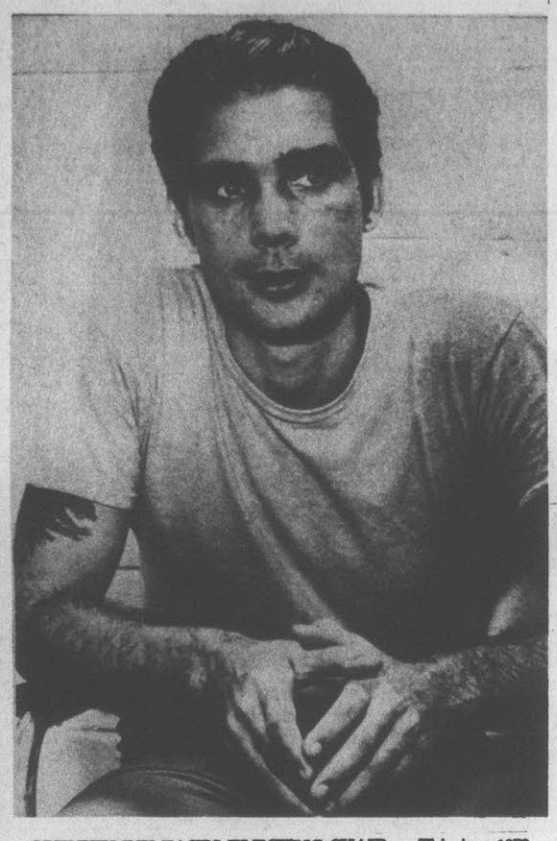
In this case, Graham designated the week which began at noon Friday as the execution week and Superintendent David H. Brierton set the executions to begin at 7 a.m. Wednesday. Spenkelink will be executed first and then Darden.

But the two cases are in vastly different legal postures. Spenkelink has exhausted virtually every legal appeal available to him; the U.S. Supreme Court has refused to hear his case four times. Darden, however, has several avenues of appeal still open. Attorneys for both men immediately began pursuing those remaining appeals on Friday after Graham signed the warrants.

Spenkelink's attorneys filed a request for a stay of execution Saturday morning with the Florida Supreme Court. They asked the justices to block the execution until they have ruled on a pending appeal challenging his conviction and sentence. Darden's attorneys filed a similar request for a stay of execution late Friday afternoon and plan to file additional challenges in federal court Monday.

Justice Ben Overton said the court would begin considering the two requests Monday and would give them a high priority.

Meanwhile, death penalty opponents worry that execution of either of the men would trigger a new round of executions in the United States and in Florida, where there are 132 persons on death row.



SPENKELINK FACES ELECTRIC CHAIR — This is a 1978 file photograph of John A. Spenkelink made during an AP personal interview while Spenkelink sat on Florida's death row at Florida State Prison, Tallahassee. Spenkelink's death warrante was signed by Gov. Bob Graham Friday and Spenkelink will probably be electrocuted early next Wednesday. (AP Laserphoto)

Plane Crash Takes Toll Of Six Lives

MASSAPEQUA, N.Y. (UPI) — A small private plane slammed into a house early Saturday morning and burst into flames, killing four people aboard and a couple in the home.

Nassau County police identified the couple as Clifford Ellis, 58, and his wife, Eileen, 54.

The victims in the plane were Theodore Wigand, 43, his wife Geraldine, 42, and their daughter, Yvonne, 19, and the pilot Vincent Hipp, 41, of Deer Park. The Wigands of East Meadow, N.Y. were flying to the college graduation of their daughter, Linda, in Oswego in upstate New York.

"We have no indication at this time as to the cause," said Herbert Banks, an air safety investigator for the National Transportation Safety Board at Kennedy International Airport.

But witnesses in the neighborhood said the plane had been circling the area for several minutes before the crash and the sound of the engine indicated the pilot was having trouble maintaining power.

Officials said the plane, a blue and white Cessna 182, took off in fog and a light rain from Zahn's Airport in Farmingdale, N.Y., at 7:02 a.m..

Record Number Of Commuters Riding Amtrak

YOU CAN"T BUCK CITY HALL — Jerry Cohen, left, who rode his horse into Beverly Hills, Calif., and hitched it to one of the parking meters answers officer Brian McGlynn who is filling out a field report or warning telling Cohen about an ordinance that prohibits animals on the street Friday. Cohen said he would ask City Hall to suspend the ordinance as a step toward easing the gas shortage. (AP Laserphoto)

Amtrak, besieged by thousands of new customers who fear gasoline shortages, is running trains at near-full capacity in every section of the country and is particularly hard-pressed in Southern California.

The Los Angeles-San Diego trains are so full that more than 100 passengers had to stand in the aisles one day last week. Amtrak projects it will carry 120,000 passengers this month on the run, just 5,000 shy of the record set during World War II.

Throughout the nation, reservations are booked weeks in advance and a UPI spot survey showed it took up to two hours to get through to some reservations desks.

More trains are being rushed into service and Amtrak is hiring additional personnel to try to cope with the crunch before Amtrak's usually busy summer season starts on Memorial Day.

New York reservations manager Ken Karchinski said, "The agents are going off the wall because we cannot answer the telephone. Most of our long distance trains are either sold out or up to capacity for the next two weeks."

"We're busy as hell," said a ticket clerk in Denver. "We're sold out everyday. We're bombed out for Memorial Day."

"Our phones are very busy," said San Antonio reservations manager Lester Noble. "Some people try as long as two days to get through."

But Southern California, where gasoline is a rare commodity these days, is the busiest for Amtrak.

"We've put everything we've got on," said Bill Kennedy, acting terminal manager at Los Angeles' Union Station. "A lot of the trains (to San Diego) are standing room only and some have been so full there is no more room to stand.

"And we're getting lots of sellout conditions going north and east too," Kennedy said.

Joseph Vranich, spokesman for Amtrak in Washington, said Amtrak's telephone volume has "skyrocketed."

"Last week there were 1,365,592 telephone calls through our toll-free lines, compared to 366,454 calls placed during the same week last year," Vranich said. "Of course, there is just no way we can handle it."

Amtrak has suspended its national advertising and is beginning to receive the first of 284 new railroad cars being built.

"The area where we're under the greatest pressure is California. The run between New York City and Albany is tight. Chicago is definitely noticable (in increased traffic) but it is under control.

"... Long distance trains in the East for the next two weeks are booked up to 50 percent of capacity. In the Midwest, they are running at 66 percent and then you get out to the West and you get 79 percent. It's not supposed to be like this during the month of May."

Vranich said the reasons are the "gasoline worries" and the United Airlines strike, which, he said, accounts for about 15 percent of Amtrak's increased bookings.

New Rioting In Iran

By SAJID RIZVI

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Government supporters swinging clubs and sticks clashed with screaming crowds of dissident youths at a huge opposition rally in central Tehran Saturday night. Several people were reported injured.

In Southern Iran, Arab militiamen demanding autonomy for Iran's oil-rich south rejected a governnent order to surrender their weapons and vacate their bases.

In Tehran, a group of government supporters shouting "Islam is victorious! Communism is destroyed!" rushed into the crowd of an estimated 50,000 youths attending the demonstration for press freedom as it was about to disperse after dark.

Witnesses said the attackers used clubs and staves to attack the youths, several of whom were injured.

Chaos prevailed as the huge mass of angry youths chased the attackers, witnesses said.

The demonstration was called by the opposition National Democratic Front that has condemned "undemocratic actions" since the revolution that brought Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini to power in mid-february.

Crowds of young men and women jammed the campus of Tehran university and its soccer field to endorse a strongly worded resolution critical of Khomeini's Islamic regime.

The demonstrators shouted "death to fascism!" and slogans condemning censorship, imprisonment of dissidents including leftists since the revolution.

A resolution passed at the gathering said the government had adopted a "policy of silence" in the face "of autocratic measures."

The resolution ended with the slogan, "fascism will not triumph, it is freedom which will win."

Duke To Run

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — David Duke, the 28-year-old leader of the Ku Klux Klan in America, said Saturday he is going to run in the North Carolina presidential primary next year as a Democrat.

Duke, from Louisiana, said he plans to run in 11 other states also.

by industry, however, because a vast network of jobbers handles the distribution of most oil supplies.

But an oil analyst who asked not to be identified said jobbers have been swamped with orders from commercial customers since early this year.

"Jobbers have had an unprecedented increase in requests from industry for oil products that are critical to jobs and the efficiency of the country," he said.

"The gasoline shortage includes industry's unknown tankage," the analyst said.

"The oil companies were forced to allocate gasoline supplies because of industry's exceptional drawdown from their stocks."

At the end of April the companies' crude oil, gasoline and home-heating oil stocks had fallen sharply from year-earlier levels, according to API figures.

In May the oil companies slashed gasoline deliveries far below March and April allocations because of uncertainty over how much new Department of Energy regulations granting increased supplies to certain users would bite into existing inventories.

To Stand By Proposed Raise

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Senate appropriations chairman says he doesn't care what President Carter's chief inflation-fighter says, he'll stick by a proposed pay-raise package for state employees and teachers.

Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, said, "The way they described it and what's been done in other states, we feel it's within the (anti-inflation) guidelines."

"It's a matter of interpretation. I can interpret the English language just as good as they can. Now what (Alfred) Kahn says, I don't know," he said Friday.

Kahn, chairman of the president's Council on Wage and Price Stability, attacked the proposals in a prepared statement in Washington hours after a legislative subcommittee voted to approve a $200 cash bonus for state employees.

Kahn said the giving the bonus violates the intent of federal wage guidelines.

The bonus would be given in addition to the package originally proposed by Gov. Jim Hunt. That package calls for a 5 percent across-the-board pay raise and 2 percent in fringe benefits.

A spokesman for Hunt said the governor would not support the legislative payproposal.

Focus On Med Cost

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Attention will be focused on doctors' fees in the fight to hold down the increase in medical costs, a spokesman for a committee formed to help medical-cost containment said Friday.

But the president of the North Carolina Medical Society said rising expenses will make it difficult to stop the increases in charges to patients.

The Health Care Cost Containment Committee, which has been working with hospitals across the state to help reduce the rate of increase of hospital costs, met Thursday in Durham.

Spokesman Thomas A. Rose, president of N. C. Blue Cross and Blue Shield, said the committee believes the 16.5 percent increase in hospital costs in 1977 can be reduced to 11.5 percent this year. He said attention will now be focused on the doctor's office.

Possibilities In School Sale

While the negotiations are still very much in the preliminary stage, the possibility of the university purchasing the Rose High School property has interesting potential.

If the move were ever made, of course the city schools would have to build a new high school, and that in itself might not be bad.

Rose presently doesn't have enough space for athletic fields and the school faces the need for developing its own football field now that Ficklen is so large it swallows up a high school football crowd.

The Rose site has also become more congested as the area was surrounded by ever spreading residential and commercial areas.

The location, on the other hand, would be perfectly suited to use by the university. It is adjacent to the present campus and its classrooms would be suitable for college courses. The gym could readily be put to use in the university intermural programs, and vocational areas might be used by the School of Technology.

The main problem in such an exchange would be money. The city school system would have to receive enough for the campus to make it feasible

The university doesn't have any money at present to purchase the Rose property. To obtain it capital improvements requests will have to be made which must move through the UNC Board of Governors, the Advisory Budget Commission and finally the State Legislature. That takes considerable time.

All of that is not easy, but certainly the possibilities of the exchange by the city schools and the university exits. Such a move was one of the possibilities this newspaper suggested some months ago as a solution to the Rose High ground space problems.

There are other approaches, of course, but it is rare that an exchange such as this could be negotiated to the benefit of two public entities.

Nothing is decided yet, and the planning has no effect on more immediate things — the June 8 bond issue, or possible merger of city and county schools. Clearly, however, the city school officials and university representatives should continue these negotiations with the attitude that it can be worked out.

Overseas Trade Helped

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Tar Heel businessmen who would like to do business overseas but need to get answers to their questions can get help from a state agency now in operation.

The International Trade Center is located at Research Triangle Park near Raleigh in a building owned by the University of North Carolina.

The staff is carrying out research projects designed to help boost North Carolina exports, and collecting information and statistics to help the business community.

A newsletter on North Carolina World Trade, and development of a statewide language bank to identify a network of translators to assist in handling foreign papers and visitors are among these efforts.

The state now ranks eighth nationally as an agricultural exporter, and 13th nationally in export of manufactured oods. North Carolina ranks first as the major exporter in the Southeast.

Total export dollar volume is currently at $3.1 billion, and specialists estimate that each million dollars in exports creates between 35 and 60 jobs, depending upon the particular product.

Farmers, Too

Farm exports appear to be a growing market for North Carolina, and a recent publication from the state's Agricultural Experiment Station at N.C. State University calls attention to this activity.

The average U.S. farm worker now produces for 56 people: 42 living in America and 14 in other countries.

Agricultural research is credited with bringing about the situation in which only five percent of Americans live on farms now, but produce enough food to supply this entire nation of 215 million people, and export enough to feed millions more overseas.

Cars

As North Carolina moves to stagger registration of motor vehicles to relieve the long lines and waiting which occur each year at license plate time, the state's Department of Transportation has come up with an interesting historical bit of information.

BILL NOBLITT

The first registration of automobiles was required by the General Assembly in 1909, and every car owner had to file his name, address, and description of the vehicle with the Secretary of State.

An identifying number was issued and the owner had to make his own auto tag displaying that number. In the first year, 1,600 vehicles were registered.

Current registration is over 4.5 million vehicles.

Unemployed

While the nation's unemployment rate remains high, many jobs go begging.

The North Carolina Job Service offices across the state conducted a survey which revealed a shortage of trained and experienced crafts workers in automotive mechanics, machinist, maintenance mechanic, carpenter, tool and die maker, electrician, bricklayer, sewing machine repair, millwright, diesel mechanic, heating or air-conditioning mechanic, and plumber or pipefitter.

It takes about two years to train for work in these fields, and the agency predicts continuing shortages for years. These fields also hold the best potential for an individual to run his own shop, the specialists say.

As for money, the survey shows pay may be lower than that for professional and managerial people at the outset, lifetime figures show that craftsmen often equal or exceed the white collar set in the long run.

Sunday Morning Notes

Dogs can be Man's best friend. They are loyal, devoted pets in most cases, and they can serve as protection for a family or individual.

Dogs can also create anxious moments, as a bicycling group found out last weekend.

The group had started up a little-used road when they heard dogs barking and fighting up ahead. They stopped and observed two large dogs in a vicious fight.

The bicyclists turned around and prepared to leave. One of the dogs was clearly a tough one — the junk yard dog variety — and he quickly got the advantage over the other.

The second dog wanted no more of it and headed down the road toward the bikers. The group stopped and stood still as the two dogs ran by. The aggressive dog caught the other and delivered a bite.

The second dog's instincts told him that the people on the bicycles might offer him some protection and he heeled and started toward them.

It was a tense situation for the humans as the dogs halted near them, both by this salivating.

The bicyclists tried to move slowly away again, but the aggressive animal gave the second dog another bite and it moved with the humans it saw as protectors.

It was clear at that point, at least, neither dog intended to attack the humans, but a sudden outburst of fighting and a misplaced bite could have meant injury to any of them.

There was a stand-off period for a time with the bikers hesitant to move and the aggressive dog holding off his attack.

It was only resolved when the owner of one of the dogs rushed up and pulled the animal away from the fight.

The relieved bicyclists quickly departed for more peaceful surroundings.

Jerry Green, editor and publisher of the Snow Hill "Standard-Laconic" dropped by the office. He is getting around after being hit by a paralyzing, but temporary condition, about eight months ago.

Jerry said he has been passing the time quite well as he recuperates.

"I sit in my yard and count squirrels," he said. It wasn't too taxing "until one day two squirrels showed up," he chuckled.

That could be overdoing it.

Other Editors Say Nary A Protest

(Washington Daily News)

It was said recently that the professional protesters have never stood up and protested the treatment Idi Amin gave to thousands of helpless victims in Uganda.

How many of these unfortunate people he sent to their deaths, we shall never know. But somehow our American protesters have been too busy protesting the high price of meat or the use of nuclear power — be it good or bad — to think about or to engage in any feelings toward human life.

And in Iran today where aging Ayatollah Khomeini is making an epidemic out of political murdering, not one soul that we know of among the professional protesters such as Jane Fonda, her husband, Tom Hayden, or the pediatrician, Dr. Benjamin Spock, all forever protesting something, have uttered one word that we have seen or heard about the long string of political murders in Iran. And as of right now the number has almost reached 200. And on a recent "big day" Khomeini took the lives of 21 people. How brutal it all seems!

Yet we sit back and allow Jane Fonda to be given great acting parts and to become an award winner, We express great admiration for her without stopping to think that she stands for all that seems to us to be very anti-American. We put her up on a pedestal and we tell thouse about us "see here is a great actress". She is great surely in her own right, but her greatness there is surely diluted with us when her protests become anti-American in tone and content.

If we as Americans would make it more difficult for her, then the movie moguls and politicians would get a message they seem ever so slow in hearing; and it is time they heard that message.

We look out yonder and we wonder where this string of killings will stop in Iran. We wonder how a man who professes first to be a religious leader can allow such murders to take place.

To take others out and shoot them as if they were animals is just not our way of dealing with a situation. Again, if Fonda, Hayden and Spock wish to let off some steam in their continuing protests, why are they so silent in the face of organized murder? We must also wonder how long it will take civilized governments such as ours in this America to begin entering strong protests against what is happening there. Human life is precious wherever it is found.

And if we keep quiet forever while human life is being taken on political crosses, we become in a real sense Pontius Pilates who prefer to wash our hands of the picture rather than face up to it.

Phone Change Looms

By MICHAEL J. CONLON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — No matter where you live, the day may be coming when you pay for your local telephone call by the same method as you're charged for long-distance — by how long and how often you talk.

The industry contends the approach is only fair: People who use the telephone the most should pay more, and those who hardly ever lift the receiver should pay less.

Opponents of the approach say it's deceptive because it is touted as a voluntary option to current flat rate billing. In reality, they say, flat rate billing will eventually get so expensive that it will disappear and everyone will be left with the pay-by-the-call system.

The local measured approach is not new. New York City, for example, has had a message unit system for years based on the amount of time the user is on the telephone. Chicago has

THE INSIDE REPORT

Politics Of Rationing

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Energy James Schlesinger was in Reno, Nev. while the administration's standby rationing plan was being unsuccessfully sold to the House, pointing up the truth about this latest confrontation between president and Congress: It had little to do with energy, much to do with politics.

Rationing would help neither the production of more energy nor the consuming of less. The plan sent Congress was not intended for spot shortages that suddenly sprouted in California. Indeed, the procedure under which it went to Capitol Hill was originally intended as a Democratic trap for a Republican president.

For these reasons, Schlesinger recommended against going to the mat with Congress on a proposal basically irrelevant to the nation's energy problem. The president and his men thought otherwise. "The feeling was," confided one insider, "that we had to demonstrate leadership on some issue."

Carter advisers believe he has done just that. They think Carter looked strong, Congress weak, even though the proposal would have accomplished nothing now or in the foreseeable future except to grant standby authority of a kind traditionally unpalatable in this country. If this is a victory, it is doubtful Jimmy Carter can afford many more.

The history of the confrontation that left the president outraged begins with the Energy Act of 1975. One provision called for President Ford to submit a standby gasoline rationing plan, designed for an emergency of wartime proportions, by mid-1976 for approval by both houses of Congress. Viewing this as a Democratic trap to snare the embattled Republican president, the White House ordered the federal energy office to do nothing.

A lameduck Ford finally submitted a rationing plan in January 1977, but it was ignored in expectation that the new Democratic president would submit his own. Over the next 28 months, however, no plan was submitted or, apparently, even contemplated — not until the Iranian revolution.

With reduced crude oil supplies and escalated demand inducing panic and gasoline lines in California, there was

Strength For Today

SUGAR-COATED REALITY

A euphemism is a figure of speech by which a word or phrase, more agreeable or less offensive, is substituted for one more accurately descriptive of what is really meant. In other words, it is an attempt to make an unpleasant truth appear pleasant.

We create euphemisms to shield us from disconcerting realities. We can always find something that will spare our feelings, save our faces, allow us to maintain our self-respect no matter how mean and unworthy our conduct may be. People lie and call it tact; they steal and call it shrewdness; they commit adultery and call it love; they act in an unscrupulous manner and call their actions ambition; they lose their tempers and call their uncontrolled passion righteous indignation; they storm at other people's religion and call it fidelity to their own faith.

When we sin, we avert our faces and try to think up some good, plausible euphemism. The ugly fact is too bitter to swallow without a thick sugar coating.

Save With A Better System

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — What should American industry do after having spent in recent years $70 billion a year for office information systems, only to find that office productivity has barely increased at all?

Spend more. Yes, more, says Harvey Poppel of Booz, Allen & Hamilton. Spend more, and within 10 years the potential savings will be hundreds of billions of dollars a year. He stakes his future on it.

Laggard office productivity, he states, is not the fault of machines — the typewriters, copiers, computers and mail and telephone devices. The problem, he says, is one of proper usage, a management problem.

Office automation, says Poppel, whose background at the big consulting firm is in both management and technology, has been applied mainly to clerical procedures, where the savings potential is relatively low.

Now, he maintains, industry must automate the professional and management areas, where savings could be enormous but where the target is more elusive, one of the reasons it has been ignored to now.

"In fact, our projections show that with better professional-level productivity, the gross savings to U.S. business could amount to more than $300 million annually by 1980," he states.

Numbers of that size talk. Financed by technology producers and users, Booz, Allen has begun a 10-month study to document its estimates, "to make a case that will stand the scrutiny of the business executive."

Those are the words of Poppel, senior vice president, who says he has done enough limited, specific studies to feel confident in making this larger one. He would not have taken the step five years ago, he said.

Since then technology has improved. "I've watched it ripen to a point where it can do most of the things we feel need to be done," he said.

Among initial supporters of the study are American Telephone & Telegraph, International Business Machines, International Telephone & Telegraph, and Xerox, potential beneficiaries as both makers and users.

Their interest was sharpened by those earlier studies hinting at the possibilities.

That, for instance, up to 50 percent of business travel might be eliminated by "tele-conferencing."

Or that professionals often don't do what they're paid for, such as to analyze and communicate, but instead spend it in search of data that should be available at the touch of a button.

So much time is also spent seeking and absorbing information from print, or telephoning, or sitting in informational meetings that it leaves only 30 percent of time for analysis, Poppel has determined.

How incongruous, he thinks, that there has been such an enormous growth in clerical systems — high-speed copiers, computers, "smart" telephone systems, memory typewriters — and so little for professionals.

Observations From Editorial Columns

An Effective Reminder

When driver's license renewal time rolls around, the first thing most people do is to get a handbook from the nearest State Highway Patrol station — a smart move since the handbook is revised regularly to reflect changes in the state's motor vehicle laws.

The handbooks are distributed without charge, with recipients asked to return them when they take the driver's test.

Only about one in 10 is returned; and this has created such a shortage that there are not always enough to give out to those who request them, according to Jerry Barnes, an examiner in the Durham licensing office.

The solution appears to be simple. Each person who takes a handbook out of the licensing office should be charged a fee, to be refunded when the handbook is returned. The fee should be small enough not to cause undue hardship but large enough to be worth getting back.

Most people simply forget to bring the handbook along when they apply for a license. There's nothing like a little financial incentive to jog a lagging memory. — The Durham Sun

Check The Private Sector

The argument in Raleigh today is just how much of an increase in pay should be appropriated by the General Assembly for the next two years.

Governor Hunt wants to hold the increases to the guidelines suggested by President Carter.

State employees, including teachers, want more than that.

House Speaker Carl Stewart now indicates he may come up with a figure higher than that recommended by the governor.

In setting pay for state employees, the General Assembly would do well to compare state jobs and benefits with those comparable positions in the private sector in this state.

If state pay is below that for comparable jobs in private business and industry, then perhaps higher adjustments should be made in the interest of catching up.

On the other hand, if state positions are paying more than private jobs, then increases should be scaled down to bring state workers' pay and benefits more in like with those of people in the private sector. — Goldsboro News-Argus had a variation of the same system. Most of the country, however, has been on a flat rate system for local calls.

American Telephone and Telegraph says the system — called local measured service — is being offered in one form or another in most states. About 50 percent of the Bell system's business customers have it and about 13 percent of the firm's residential customers, a spokesman said.

"It's a matter of fairness," he added. "At the present time low and moderate users of telephone service are in effect subsidizing higher users because they all pay under flat rate service the same amount.

"Optional measured service gives the customer a chance to select the kind of service that appears to be most useful and best for him or her," he added. "In a time of rising prices, it enables them to select a service where, by the way they use their fones, they can control the amount they pay."

He added that a random survey earlier this year showed 20 percent of Bell's local customers make 50 percent of all local calls, while another 20 percent make only 5 percent of all the calls.

One person who has been raising questions about the trend is Lee Richardson, an assistant to Esther Peterson, President Carter's consumer adviser.

"It's not really voluntary," he said in an interview. "It's being promoted in a voluntary way and I feel that's deceptive.

"People who benefit, people who use the telephone less, will switch in an effort to try to cut the bills. And they can cut the bills to varying degrees," Richardson said. "But that means the telephone company gets less revenue.

"What they have to do then is raise the flat rate. The result is that they will price flat rate out of the market because the people remaining on it will be higher and higher users. It would start a spiral," he said.

Richardson said he believes the telephone industry wants to get rid of flat rate entirely. If that's what they want, he added, "They ought to be up front about it. But they won't admit it publicly."

The ATT spokesman said, "We don't expect that flat rate service is going to be terminated within the immediate future. As for long-range prospects, that will depend on the customers and what they indicate they want."

Richardson also questions the measured service approach because "it introduces uncertainty for consumers. The companies haven't educated us. Very few people have any idea how much they use the telephone.

"In a time of inflation that's just not what we need," he added. "There's already enough uncertainty. And if you have a 16-year-old daughter like I do, you just don't know what your bill is going to be."

a demand for Carter not to just sit there but do something. Schlesinger suggested submitting the stand-by rationing scheme due by statute three years ago.

Rationing had not been thought about much, so the plan of Carter's Department of Energy was mighty like the plan of Ford's federal energy office. It was identical in being totally unrelated to the panic on California freeways and in failing either to produce or conserve a single extra gallon. What could trigger its use? Short of war, nothing less than a calamitous cutoff of crude oil supplies from the Persian Gulf.

Consequently, Schlesinger urged against any great public drive for a standby plan which, even if approved, could be vetoed by either house if and when actually invoked. He also suggested submitting the plan to Congress take-it-or-leave-it with no attempts at logrolling. But the White House was thinking of leadership imagery, and the modest plan was transmogrified into the key for unraveling the energy tangle.

For the first of Carter's many energy battles in Congress, Schlesinger was absent (not cancelling a speech to an oil producers convention in Reno). Although his own lobbying has been criticized, he could scarcely have matched the incompetence level by the White House in guiding the rationing plan.

After the plan was revised to suit individual senators, it was presented to House members two hours before the vote May 10. "I frankly did not want to oppose a rationing plan," one Democratic congressman told us. "But I couldn't figure out what the devil was in this one." He voted no, unlobbied by House Democratic leaders. It was among the most feeble Carter efforts in Congress.

So, congressmen were scarcely ready for the president's emotional condemnation of Congress May 11, unmatched since Richard Nixon denounced the Senate for rejecting a Supreme Court appointment. Carter's aides rejoiced in his firm stand, even though his reaction dwarfed the importance of the plan. "This transcends energy, and goes to the question of leadership," one of the president's men explained to us.

White House aides believe that here the president is on the right side and Congress on the wrong side. That may be correct now, but it assumes the public will be up in arms over failure to adopt a plan that does nothing for the present, provides no extra gasoline for the future and, if ever actually used, would prove massively unpopular. That is thin fuel indeed to power the regeneration of Jimmy Carter as a masterful national leader.

As I Recall It

The Worst Traffic Accident N.C. Ever Knew

By NOEL YANCEY

(Noel Yancey, recently retired after 39 years of covering North Carolina news for the Associated Press. In this column he retells some of the big stories he recalls.)

The worst truck wreck in U.S. history occurred at a highway intersection nine miles north of Fayetteville on June 6, 1957. A flatbed truck laden with 41 migrant farm workers pulled onto highway U.S. 301 in the path of a potato-hauling tractor trailer. Twenty-one of the truck passengers were killed and 17 others were injured.

"It looked like a big ball of fire," sand a truck driver who saw the wreck in his rear-view mirror.

"I heard someone yell, 'look-out!' " said Willie Solomon, a migrant worker from Florence, S.C., who was aboard the truck. "I grabbed a rail overhead and swung out. I was thrown out when the trucks crashed.

"I flew through the air and hit the top of the truck. It was kinda like a dream. People were lying all over the place, then some people came up and helped. The truck was burning and they was hollering. I seen one (person) falling out of the cab. He was afire."

Solomon looked at his feet. His shoes were gone. They had been knocked from his feet by the force of the impact. He suffered only a minor injury.

Bessie Smith who lived nearby heard the sound of the collision which occurred about 7:15 a.m. and went to the scene.

"Somebody kept hollering, 'God! Jesus! Please, Jesus!' There was one (person) under the truck and one was pulling at him. Some of them sat in the road. There was fire all over," she said.

The collision hurled driver Tom Junior Mackey and migrant crew chief Lewis Wesley, both of Pahokee, Fla., to their deaths.

Gilbert Robert Peters Jr., 25, of Wapwallopen, Pa., driver of the tractor-trailer, was hospitalized at Fayetteville with minor injuries. He told Trooper R.C. Prigden of Fayetteville that the migrant truck pulled from the side road into the path of his rig which skidded 147 feet before striking the other vehicle. The tractor trailer turned on its side and blocked 301 for several hours.

A survivor said the migrants were en route from Mount Olive to Dunn to pick beans. Their ranks included men, women and children from several states.

A coroner's jury which convened at Fayetteville several days after the crash ruled that the wreck was caused by negligence on the part of young Mackey, driver of the migrant truck.

It was by far the worst traffic accident in North Carolina history. Highway Patrol records indicated that the previous record death toll in a single accident occurred Dec. 3, 1944 in Burke County when 10 young people were killed.

At that time it was the worst truck wreck in U.S. history; and probably still is, for all that I know. Up to that time the worst truck wreck in history took 19 lives. It occurred in Texas.

By coincidence, only five days after the wreck near Fayetteville, 12 farm workers were killed and five others injured near Rocky Ford, Colorado when a light truck jammed with 17 farm workers was struck by a train. That was the worst traffic accident in Colorado history.

Early Training By A Sage Of Tender Years

By GAIL MICHAELS

HARTSVILLE, S.C. — She was three years my senior and one of those small, wiry little girls with bright eyes and a quick wit. Her tongue could be sharp — but she was born knowing that discretion is essential to survival.

Early on, she adopted me. We were the youngest of a large Georgia family and the novelty of children had worn off. I was her slave, companion, handyman, guinea pig, and sentry. She was my teacher, disciplinarian and protector.

I owe most of my pre-school education to Ouida. She taught me the important lessons of life — how to tie my shoes and the difference between a bow and a hard knot. She showed me the way to make pigs out of maypops and matches. She knew how to dam up a branch and make a wading pool and how to catch a June bug on a summer's day and tie a string to its leg and listen to it hum.

She knew which berries to eat and which ones made you sick to the stomach. She told me that mushrooms couldn't be trusted — to leave all of them alone. She knew pennyroyal would keep the gnats away and she first introduced me to the delightful smell of sweet shrubs deep in the woods.

She warned me to watch out for nettles, backsaddles, wasps, bees, hornets, bulls, setting hens, old wells, quicksand and snakes.

Ouida taught me the important differences between a white lie and a black one. She showed me how to notch a sweet gum tree and make chewing gum from the sap, and how to make a toothbrush from blackgum twigs; how to recognize and use rabbit tobacco; how to cause a mean dog to turn tail by running toward it, opening and closing an umbrella.

Her reprimands were usually sufficient to keep me in line, but now and then it took a shove or a slap on the rump, or a rap on the head with her sharp, bony little knuckles. She never allowed anyone else to touch me outside of a fair fight. She reserved that right for herself.

We had visitors one day and it was my sister who made the daring proposal that we, our niece and a little neighbor girl take off our clothes and run up and down Cedar Creek buck naked. She was our leader and we followed squealing and splashing — and it was here I made the amazing discovery that all little girls look exactly alike from the neck down. This was a very important part of my education.

One cold winter's day — a day I'll never forget — I was sitting before an open fire perched on a straight chair, my shoe heels holding my feet on the top rung. I stared into the fire, my skinny legs encased in black ribbed stockings, eating a sausage in a biscut.

My sister was on the floor, sewing together some bits of cloth for a quilt covering. When I had eaten to the point where the sausage expired and the bread continued, I threw the remaining crescent-shaped crust into the fire. The explosion that erupted from my sister, that sage of tender years, would not have been greater had the bread been TNT.

"Don't you know it's a sin to burn bread!" she shouted with all the conviction and fervor of an aroused Baptist.

I knew I was in for a lecture that would curl my toes.

"You never burn anything that some creature can eat! You should throw it outdoors so a bird, cat, dog, or chicken can eat it! It's a bad sin to waste anything to eat!"

Realizing that my soul was in jeopardy, I asked, choking out the words, if she thought I was going to hell for this fresh sin.

She saw my anxious face and relented — just a little. "Naw — I guess not this time. You didn't know what you were doing and God won't hold it against you. But don't ever do it again or He will!"

All of this happened a long, long time ago. We are scattered now — our family — but the old homeplace is still there, tracked over with age and peeling. It housed the yesterday that shaped me for today — a place, a boyhood — and my sister Ouida. She knew everything.

Practicalities Vanish As Vanity Takes Over

Little girls learn early that a woman's hair is her crowning glory. Meg wants long hair so badly that she wears a blanket over her head and pretends.

Now, I've done nothing to encourage this yearning. In fact, I've gone out of my way to extol the virtues of short hair. I won't even pet an unclipped poodle in front of her.

I prefer short hair on children for the same reason I keep brown towels in my bathroom. I am a practical woman. When Meg picks up a piece of fried chicken, then runs her fingers through her hair, I can wash her hair and dry it in 15 minutes. It takes 15 minutes just to comb the tangles out of long hair. Then there's the plaiting, the stuck gum, the disappearing barrettes. I refuse to bother with them. When I had a baby, I had no intention of becoming a slave to a hair bow, especially not for the sake of mere vanity. So I keep dragging Meg to the hairdresser in spite of her protests. And I keep trying to turn her not inconsiderable vanity to my own advantage.

"You look beautiful in short hair," I told her. "You have such a sweet little pixie face, like Aunt Gail. You need a pixie haircut like Aunt Gail.

" I want long hair like Aunt Marty," she said stubbornly. "I want long hair like you."

"But your hair is prettier than mine."

She gave me a good look over. "Yes, your hair is not very pretty, is it?"

A kid like her keeps a mother in her place. I almost had my hair cut, too. I decided against it though. It's not that I'm vain; it's that I'm cheap. The only reason I pay someone to cut Meg's hair is that the one time I tried to cut it, she looked like she had stuck her head in a food processor. That's when Phillip intervened and said that if short hair was a must, so was the beauty parlor.

Meg was still protesting when I hoisted her into the barber's chair. And when the hair stylist first came toward her with the plastic cape, Meg screamed and shook her head violently. Then she caught sight of herself in the mirror. A transformation began to take place. Her frown turned to a look of interest. The hairdresser had enough savvy to begin cutting immediately.

It wasn't long before her head first turned to one side and then to the other to get a good view of herself. The only problem that the haridresser had was in making her bend her head and take her eyes off the mirror long enough to get the back even.

So when she disappeared while I was paying the bill, it didn't take any great power of deduction to figure out that she would be in the bathroom admiring her lovely blond tresses.

Sure enough, I found her in front of the full-length mirror just inside the bathroom door. She was brushing her hair with a toilet bowl brush.

Short hair has its problems, too.

For The Welfare Of All, Don't Push The 96th

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — John Randolph of Roanoke once defined the cardinal principle of statecraft. It was: Never needlessly to disturb a thing at rest. The brilliant Virginian would have loved the 96th Congress.

Happily for the Republic, this has been the most do-nothing Congress since Harry Truman complained about the 80th in 1948. Look at the record.

This Congress convened on January 3, and did nothing constructive for the rest of the month. Exhausted by their labors, the members took a needed 10-day rest in February. They came back to work on February 20, putzed around in March and then once again departed for a 10-day recess to take the waters.

Both houses will be in session for the next few days, but they will find surcease from labor over Memorial Day. They will work (in a manner of speaking) between June 5 and June 28, whereupon they will flee to the mountains and rivers for 10 days observing the glorious Fourth. Back in the pits on July 10, they will perform at top speed through August 2 — and nothing more will be seen of them until September 5. At some point in October, they will quit for the year, and the liberties of the people for a time will be secure.

This chronological accounting of a congressman's year is a bit unfair, of course; for members of the House and Senate are constantly occupied with political responsibilities. They put in more hours at their jobs than most of us in private life. Even so, it is remarkable that over the first four months of this year, the Senate met on only 43 days and the House on only 47. In this period members introduced 5,700 bills and resolutions — and most of these measures have never been seen or heard of again.

Consider, if you please, the 96th's record of production. It is admirable. Through April 30, the two houses had approved precisely eight bills and one joint resolution. One of the eight public bills granted the president a week's delay in transmitting his annual economic report. Another act provided for the sale of certain silver dollars. A third related to the privacy of financial records, a fourth to the federal courts of Illinois. The fifth act routinely increased the debt limit, the sixth had something to do with tariffs, the seventh concerned budget authority, and the eighth dealt with relations with Taiwan. The single joint resolution reaffirmed our commitment to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

That is the crop.

There will be those, fuming and fretting, who will look at this meager harvest of legislation and conclude that the members are not earning their $57,500 annual pay. Not so! If we are to make quantitative judgments upon the Congress, surely the accolades should be awarded not for the greatest output, but for the smallest. "Beware of energetic governments," cried Jefferson. "They are always oppressive."

When James Buckley of New York was in the Senate, he had a great idea. He proposed that in odd-numbered years the Congress refuse to pass any laws at all, save only to appropriate funds and to meet true national emergencies. The year would be spent chiefly in committee hearings, in the contemplation of good books, in travel that broadened the mind. Following a year of education and reflection, the Congress would return to Washington for its second session prepared to vote upon the handful of bills still thought to justify debate.

The Buckley Plan never caught on, but it had great merit. Ours is the most law-bound society in the history of mankind. We drown in laws, we sink in seas of rules and regulations. The most serious national ailment is the legislative itch, and it is not only the Congress that legislates; the regulatory agencies and the federal judges are constantly scratching, too. When we are not legislating, we are litigating. One day our currency will abandon old mottoes for a new one: Sue 'em.

Let us therefore exhort the do-nothing Ninety-Sixth to continue along its commendable course. Don't just do something, sit there! For every new law that may be enacted, let one old one be repealed! Remember Carlyle's observation that the happiest hours of mankind are recorded on the blank pages of history, and through the processes of industrious non-production let us keep those pages blank.

GARWOOD CASE COULD TAKE WEEKS — Marine PFC Robert Garwood, right, who returned to Camp Legeune in Jacksonville earlier this week, may have a long wait as the military decides whether he will face a court-martial on allegations of desertion and collaboration with the enemy in Vietnam. Garwood's military attorney, Capt. Dale W. Miller, left, and Legeune Base Commanding General, Brig. Gen. David B. Baker, center, will play major roles in the Garwood case. (AP Laserphoto)

Long Case For Garwood

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Robert Russell Garwood is a loose end in the post-Vietnam War mending of American emotions.

The memories and attitudes of that far-away war have been tucked away by many — neatly by some, painfully by others. But the case of this 33-year-old Marine private may undo all of that.

Garwood reported to Camp Lejeune in eastern North Carolina last week to await the military's decision on whether he will face a court-martial on allegations of desertion and collaboration with the enemy in Vietnam. Garwood could possibly become the second American serviceman since the Civil War to be executed for desertion.

If a court-martial is held, Garwood will publicly account for nearly 14 years that he spent in Vietnam. Prosecution witnesses will relive their versions of the incidents and situations that led to the allegations against Garwood.

The 38,000 Marines at Camp Lejeune, and probably all other Americans familiar with Garwood's case, are polarized, seeing Garwood as either a culprit, a victim or, simply, a survivor.

There are some who have already labeled him a traitor, a coward. There are others, including some Marines, who take a different attitude.

"In war, seeing your friends killed, how can anybody say how their mind would react if they had been there?" declared Pfc. Nicholas Serrano, 19, of New York City, a resident of the motel-like barracks where Garwood has been assigned.

"He fought for his survival. What else is there to life than survival?"

Garwood has not yet been tried, and he denies accusations that he helped North Vietnames guards interrogate American prisoners, or that he voluntarily stayed in Vietnam.

But many, like Serrano, who express sympathy with Garwood, underline their words with an assumption that there was something wrong with Garwood's actions in Vietnam.

It was a 19-year-old Marine jeep driver, Bobby Garwood to his friends, who vanished on Sept. 28, 1965.

It was a rarely smiling, enigmatic man who ended a 30-day convalescent leave and returned a few minutes before midnight last Monday to a world of crisp uniforms, crew cuts and razor-sharp salutes.

He spends his working days as a postal clerk in an office on the base. He shares a barracks room with two other enlisted Marines, both of whom say they see Garwood as just another Marine, innocent of any charges until proven guilty.

Military authorities are investigating allegations against him by interviewing former prisoners of war.

—That Garwood deserted.

—That he solicited other Americans to throw down their weapons and refuse to fight.

—That he aided the enemy.

—That he committed misconduct as a prisoner of war.

—That he attempted to cause insubordination, disloyalty and refusal of duty among fellow POWs.

Conviction on either the desertion or aiding the enemy allegations could bring a death penalty. Since the Civil War only one American soldier has been shot for desertion.

A 24-year-old Army private named Eddie Slovik was executed for desertion in World War II on Jan. 31, 1945.

Garwood contends he was captured by the Vietnamese and taken into custody only after shooting two of the enemy.

But there is that 14-year period, as yet unexplained by Garwood or his attorneys.

On the advice of his attorneys, Garwood has stopped talking with reporters. But he may have given a clue to one aspect of his defense in an interview with Japanese newsmen before he left his father's home in Adams, Ind., to report for duty.

"What the POWs saw, they were supposed to see," he said. "They did not see anything they were not supposed to see."

The conclusion of the military's investigation is just the first step in Garwood's case. After a review of that investigation, a decision will be made whether to convene the military equivalent of a grand jury for further investigation and interviews with witnesses.

The results of that probe will go to Camp Lejeune's commanding general, who will decide to order a court-martial on all or some of the charges, or dismiss all or some of the allegations.

The man who will make that decision is Brig. Gen. David B. Barker, a 49-year-old veteran of combat in Korea and Vietnam who stays in Marine trim by occasionally running the 10-mile round trip from his office to Lejeune's main gate.

Barker will not discuss the Garwood case because of his potential involvement. And the Marines officially take a neutral position, exemplified by a public affairs officer who quickly corrected a reporter's use of the word captured to describe Garwood's case.

"He disappeared," the officer said.

Garwood's efforts to blend into the green-uniformed Marines at Camp Lejeune are hampered by two things — his strange-sounding accent and his age. There are few 33-year-old privates in the Marines.

Unlike other POWs, who advanced in rank during their captivity, Garwood's rating was frozen at private first class in 1967, two years after his disappearance.

The Marine Corps says succintly that the commandant of the corps ordered the action because "information from a variety of sources available at the time ... raised serious questions about Garwood's behavior while in the hands of the enemy."

Garwood is currently earning the standard $467.40 per month paid to privates first class. He stands to collect more than $146,000 in back pay, but that could be wiped out if he is convicted of the allegations against him.

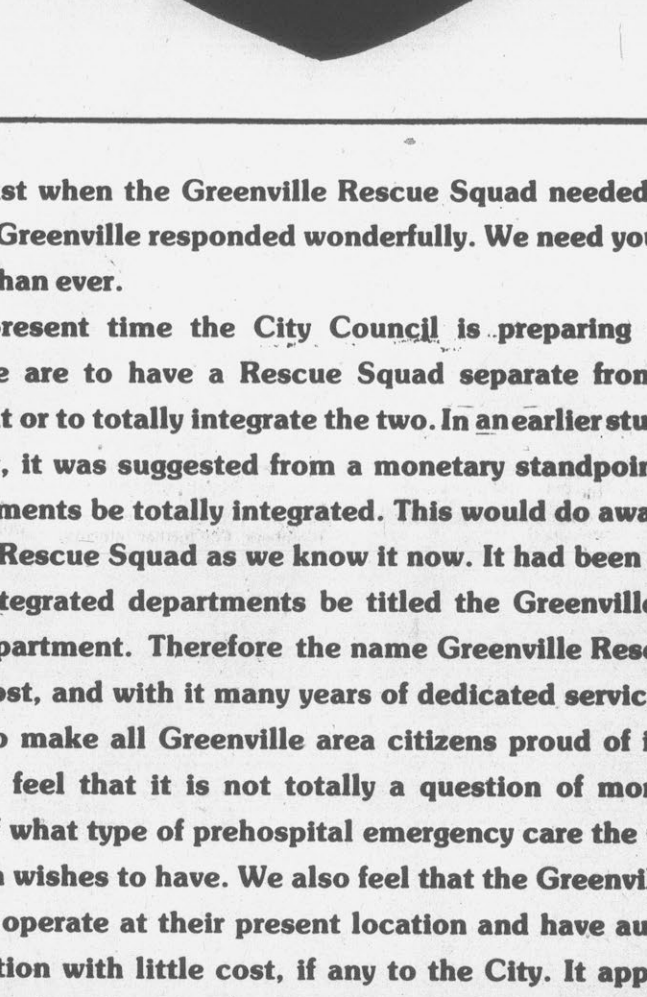
Three Time World Champion Greenville Rescue Squad Dissolved???



In the past when the Greenville Rescue Squad needed help, the citizens of Greenville responded wonderfully. We need your support now more than ever.

At the present time the City Council is preparing to decide whether we are to have a Rescue Squad separate from the Fire Department or to totally integrate the two. In an earlier study paid for by the City, it was suggested from a monetary standpoint that the two departments be totally integrated. This would do away with the Greenville Rescue Squad as we know it now. It had been suggested that the integrated departments be titled the Greenville Fire and Rescue Department. Therefore the name Greenville Rescue Squad would be lost, and with it many years of dedicated service that was put forth to make all Greenville area citizens proud of its Rescue Squad. We feel that it is not totally a question of money, but a question of what type of prehospital emergency care the Greenville area citizen wishes to have. We also feel that the Greenville Rescue Squad can operate at their present location and have autonomous administration with little cost, if any to the City. It appears to us that the question of money continuously arises but not once has the Greenville Rescue Squad asked the City for money to separate the two departments. In fact, we have offered to raise all monies needed to separate the two departments. We feel that with total integration of the two departments, the service to the citizens will suffer now and even more so in the future.

It is hard for us to understand how one man can perform two jobs at once or how he or she can perform either adequately. At the present time the Greenville Fire Department does an outstanding job and so does the Greenville Rescue Squad and it would be detrimental to all concerned it by integrating the two, either or both should suffer. We feel that both departments have earned the right to go its separate way to a more progressive service for all concerned. We feel that an issue of this magnitude should be put to the public and allow the very ones who it concerns to cast their vote.

In conclusion, the time has arisen for the Citizens of Greenville and Pitt County to stand up and let your views be heard on this issue.

The future of the Greenville Rescue Squad is in your hands and we feel like, as in the past, that the citizens of Greenville and Pitt County will act responsively to our mutual needs.

National Public Works Week Being Observed In Greenville

ERIAL VIEW...of the Public Works Depart- ment located on Third Street shows the equip- ment and offices of the department.

The observance of "National Public Works Week" in Greenville began Friday, May 18 and will last through Saturday, May 26, as proclaimed by Mayor Percy Cox and Governor Jim Hunt.

In signing the proclamation, Mayor Cox called upon all citizens and civic organizations to acquaint themselves with the problems involved in providing our public works and to recognize the contributions which public works officials make everyday to our health, safety and comfort.

Governor Hunt's proclamation stated that "public works services provided in our community are an integral part of our citizens' everyday lives."

According to Mayo Allen, Director of the Greenville Public Works Department, the department has seven operating divisions — Administrative, Sanitation, Streets Maintenance, Signs and Paint, Cemetery, Garage and Transportation. The seven divisions employ 149 personnel.

Allen, who serves as the President of the N.C. Public Works Association, said that local public works departments are being recognized for their services to municipalities this week.

"Greenville has grown at a rapid rate over the past several years. As Greenville has increased in population, more businesses, shopping centers, duplex apartments, new subdivisions, expanded city limits due to annexations and new 400 bed hospital have emerged," said Allen.

"Due to such rapid growth, the Public Works Department has greatly increased its workload," he added.

The Garage Division maintains approximately 182 city-owned vehicles and/or equipment. The Sanitation Division has increased its garbage services, front curbside trash services, leaf collection, fulltime rodent and mosquito control services, city and industrial refuse container services, litter patrol and dead animal pickup services.

The Street Maintenance Division has over 120 miles of city streets to be maintained including resurfacing, utility cut repairs, new or replaced curb and gutter, new or replaced sidewalks, street tree maintenance, storm sewer and drainage installation and maintenance, and grass cutting along right-of-ways.

The Traffic Signs and Paint Division has been assigned the responsibility of cleaning and painting approximately 875 refuse containers with the possibility of 100 more being added during the 1979-80 budget year. This division also paints city vehicles and signs.

The Transit Division operates the Greenville Area Transit (GREAT). Ridership has increased from 9,082 in August 1976 to 17,612 in April 1979.

The Administration Division is responsible for reports, requisitions, budgeting, personnel, record-keeping, payroll preparation and other office responsibilities.

In November 1978, voters of Greenville approved a $1.9 million bond issue to construct a new Public Works facility.

The city's architect is presently preparing specifications for the facility, and invitations to bid should be sent out in June.

The new facility, according to Allen, will better accommodate the seven divisions of the Public Works Department.

All of the seven divisions working together continue to strive to provide quality public works services for the citizens of Greenville.

Can Operate Reactors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Enough safety improvements have been made for Duke Power Co. to operate its three Oconee Nuclear Station reactors at Lake Keowee, S.C., the Nuclear Regulatory Commission said Friday.

"We are satisfied with the commission's decision," said William S. Lee, Duke president. "It's reconfirmed what we've said all along and assures that we won't have power shortages this summer."

Following staff recommendations, the commission Friday said some atomic power plants shut down for improvements after the Three Mile Island accident can resume operation, including Oconee.

Carl Horn Jr., Duke's board chairman, said he was gratified by the decision, especially since all the reactors will be available to meet summer power demands.

Agree On 1980 Target Budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate negotiators are agreed on a 1980 target budget that would cut President Carter's proposed deficit by $5.4 billion and lead to a balanced budget in 1981.

The compromise, reached late Friday, calls for spending $532 billion in fiscal 1980 with a $23 billion deficit. It will be considered by the full House and Senate next week.

The $23 billion deficit figure for the bookkeeping year beginning Oct. 1 would be the lowest federal deficit since 1974 and well under the president's 1980 deficit goal of $28.4 billion. The congressional outlay figure, however, is very close to Carter's $532.3 billion request.

1979 Spoleto Festival Events Listed

CHARLESTON, S. C. — Spoleto Festival, U.S.A., America's most comprehensive festival of the arts, will present its third annual season in historic Charleston beginning Friday, May 25, to continue through June 10.

James T. Kearney, General Manager, has announced that the 17-day festival will open with a new production of Domenico Cimarosa's "Il Marito Disperator" (The Desperate Husband). This will be the first staging of the Italian composer's opera 18th century Italian composer's opera in the U.S.

The second major operatic offering is to be a new production of "The Medium," by Gian Carlo Menotti. Menotti is the festival's Founder and Artistic Director.

Other major events scheduled for the 1979 Festival are:

— A world premiere by English playwright Beverly Cross, entitled "Hayworth." This is a dramatic recital depicting the lives of the Bronte sisters and will be presented at the Dock Street Theater under the direction of Clifford Williams.

— Christopher Keen, Music Director of Spoleto, will conduct a Rachmaninoff Gala at Gaillard Auditorium. The program will feature Russian pianist Mark Zeltser. Other musical events will also focus on the music of Rachmaninoff.

— The Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater will make its Festival debut, offering three separate programs. Also in dance will be a debut by Ballet Repertory Company, and two additional companies — the Bill Evans Company and Douglas Norwich and Dancers will perform. All dance events will be held in Gaillard Auditorium.

— In response to a heavy demand for tickets to the Noon Chamber Music Concerts, the Festival is increasing the number of performances to a total of 30 concerts. To be given at the Dock Street Theater, the concerts will be under the co-direction of Paula Robison and Scott Nickrenz with Charles Wadsworth as host. In addition, chamber music soloists will be heard in recitals each week-end at the Garden Theater.

— Jazz will return to Spoleto Festival U.S.A. with the Left-Bank Jazz Society under the direction of Bill Moore.

— The mini-festivals will be repeated this year in a new form as "Piccolo Spoleto," which will feature young talent from the Southeastern states in a wide variety of activities including children's theater, mime and poetry reading.

— Additional events will include lectures, art exhibits of contemporary Italian and American painters and sculptors, and a film retrospective entitled "Roberto Rossellini — A Vision of History," including most of the director's films.

The Gala Finale will be on the grounds of Middleton Place Plantation, with this year's program of music and fireworks devoted to the American composer George Gershwin.

Duke Sets Drama Classes

DURHAM — Three performers well known on and off Broadway, on television and in the movies will conduct master classes in acting as part of Duke University's summer theater program.

They are John Lithgow, winner of a Tony Award for his performance in David Storey's "The Changing Room;" Nancy Merchand, the newspaper publisher on the "Lou Grant" television show; and Estelle Parsons, winner of an Academy Award for best supporting actress in "Bonnie and Clyde."

Dr. John Clum, head of the Duke drama program, said Lithgow would arrive May 21 and spend several days working with students. He will be followed the second week by Ms. Marchand and the next week by Ms. Parsons.

Clum said he hopes to arrange some public discussion sessions with the performers.

The summer sessions will run July 15.

Offerings besides the acting classes include modern French theater, taught by Dr. Wallace Fowlie, American film, taught by Clum; drama criticisms taught by Dr. Kenneth Reardon, and acting and directing for television, taught by Barner Kellman, staff director for the daytime television drama, "Another World."

Clum said openings in the master classes will be available to area residents with theatrical experience.

Hospitality House Today

A beloved Southern theme, that of "Showboat," is the centerpiece of Kay Currie's "Hospitality House" program today. Ms. Currie's program airs from noon until 12:30 today over WITN-TV, Channel 7.

The entire half hour will be devoted to an outdoor setting featuring musical numbers by Jerome Kern, and Oscar Hammerstein II from the musical "Showboat," adapted from Edna Ferber's novel of the same name.

The production numbers feature singers Diane Pettrillo, Emily Weil, Autry Lewis, Bobbie Anderson, Evangeline Raiford, accompanied by pianist Nola Peele, under the direction of Lee Brown and Dr. Ron Taylor. The cast is from the newly opened Center Stage Theater in Goldsboro, which will be presenting the musical May 24-26 and June 1-2.

A Book Of America's Religions

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The "religions" of America have become a vast, miscellaneous swarm, ranging from the historically rooted faiths to the new and strangely exotic ones.

Among the many peculiar brands:

The "Discordian Society" worshipping Eris, the goddess of chaos, and dedicated to anarchy; the "Psychedelic Venus Church" idolizing drugs and sex; the "Never Dies" who maintain they are endlessly reincarnated with their same identities.

"I haven't verified whether they've been able to pull that one off," says the Rev. Dr. J. Gordon Melton, a United Methodist minister who is probably the most widely and directly informed expert on the nation's modern religious potpourri.

"We've got all kinds," he says. "A lot of them have been hidden."

He's spent the last 16 years in research, mingling with witches' covens, combing occult publications and ads, checking out Satanists, Druids, Flying-Saucer believers and others around the country, gathering facts about their lifestyles, organizations and ideas.

It's like "detective" work, he notes in the foreword of his two-volume, 1,200-page "The Encyclopedia of American Religions," published this spring by McGrath Publishing Company, Wilmington, N.C.

The compilation, the most comprehensive, modern summary yet amassed of religious groups in this country, their concepts and methods, deals with 1,203 of them, five times more than the 223 listed in standard directories.

Of the total, he says more than half, about 700 to 800 of them, have been started since 1965, mostly in the early 1970's, with the rest being mainly in the Protestant, Catholic, Orthodox and Jewish traditions.

The regular bodies, as well as the unfamiliar ones, are included. Of the little-known, unconventional groups, he said in an interview:

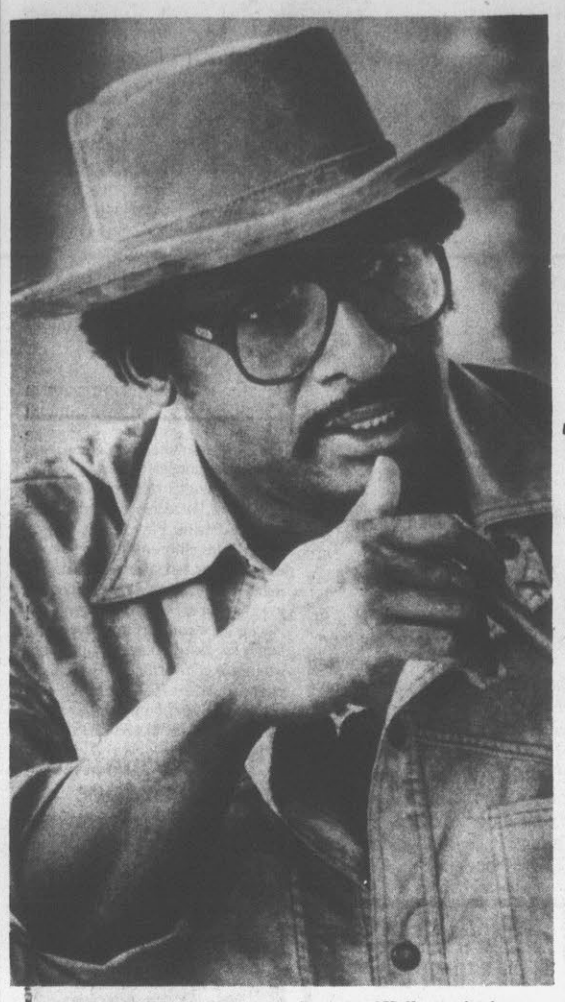
"A number of them are very shallow, religiously off base and don't offer members anything beyond friends to get together with. Most of these will die out.

"There's very definitely some deception in some of them, but it surprised me there's not more of it since it's such a lucrative field. So many people are guillible and have never worked through their dependency problems."

However, Melton, 36, who also is pastor of Evanston's Emmanuel United Methodist Church, takes a carefully objective position in his descriptions of the various groups, avoiding any personal evaluations or condemnations.

He said a "new push" of religious proliferation characterized the early 1970's. Such periods occur cyclically about every 25 years, he said, typically accompanied by economic pinch, high birth rates and in the wake of social stresses, such as the late 1960's.

But the latest surge of religiosity now has passed, he said, and most of the new groups stopped growing about a year ago, with many of them declining.



ARTIST COMES HOME — Ernie Barnes of Hollywood relaxes on his mother's front porch in Durham. When he left in 1960, it was to play professional football. He is back for an exhibit of his paintings, which opens today at the North Carolina Museum of Art in Raleigh. The public is invited to see the show between 2 and 5 p.m. today. (AP Laserphoto)

The Lifestyles Of Monks

By ROBIN STAFFORD

ROME (UPI) — "Monks play cards," says American artist Stanley Roseman.

That was only one surprise in 10 months of peering behind the walls of 35 monasteries in 11 European countries, says Roseman, whose works have been acquired by American museums, Britain's Queen Elizabeth II and Pope John Paul II.

More surprising is that Roseman, 33, was allowed inside the cloistered walls. Only half the 60 monasteries and convents approached by Roseman's friend and manager Ronald Davis even bothered to reply.

"And a dozen of those were negative," said Davis.

At the monastery of Montecassino, perched 1,700 feet up in the mountains between Rome and Naples and rebuilt after destruction by Allied bombs in World War II, the pair appeared personally after getting no answer to their letter.

The Benedictine abbot wouldn't let them in. "You must leave," said his cowled secretary.

"I don't say this as any criticism," said Roseman. "Monks are entitled to protect their isolated way of life if they so choose. I only say this to illustrate the two trends we found in the monasteries we visited — or tried to visit. Some were very open. Some were unapproachable."

The two men were welcomed by the Benedictine abbot of St. Augustines at Ramsgate, England, Dom Gilbert Jones. He gave them sound advice:

"You will find that there are good monks and bad monks. We are not all saints."

Roseman found monks playing cards at St. Paulus Abbey in Holland and promptly drew them in chalks on grey and beige paper.

In all he made 400 sketches of the monks and nuns he visited in preparation for an exhibition to commemorate next year's 1,500th anniversary of the birth of St. Benedict, the founder of Western monasticism, who established the Montecassino abbey in 529.

Roseman said of the card-playing monks: "It rather surprised me that they should play anything competitive like cards when their whole life is geared to equality in poverty and brotherhood."

Some monasteries still do not permit television or radio.

Roseman and Davis were presented to Pope John Paul on March 21, and gave him a sketch of a friar playing an oboe at the abbey of Tyniec in the pontiff's native Poland.

Roseman is not a Roman Catholic. He is Jewish. But the presence of a non-Christian among the monks, sharing their sparse food, sleeping in their cells and rising at prayer times as early as 3:15 a.m., seemed to present no problems.

Benedictine monk Thomas Matus of the Camaldoli monastery in Italy wrote:

"Stanley's Jewish background does not really make much difference. In fact, a group of Jewish craftsmen who had been driven out of the Papal States at the beginning of the 17th century were welcomed here at Camaldoli and helped to build a new refectory for the monks.

"Stanley Roseman seems to be quite devoid of prejudice either in favor or against monks. He shows me as I am, warts and all. His images of me and my fellow monks shatter any complacent self-image I might have and they leave me much freer to look at my life."

Roseman and Davis also visited the Pannonhalma abbey in Hungary, which with Tyniec in Poland they believe are the only two monasteries that still exist in Eastern Europe.

Roseman, a native New Yorker, undertook his pilgrimage because he says artists should portray people in their natural surroundings.

His earlier work includes drawings made while living for months with the clowns of the Ringling Bros., Barnum and Bailey circuses. The drawings have since been acquired by London's Victoria and Albert Museum. His sketches of the Saami people of Lapland are now in Queen Elizabeth II's collection.

Lost Colony Featured

RALEIGH — The Lost Colony dramatic pageant in Dare County will be featured in a segment of "In Search of" this fall, according to Mrs. Lois Winstead, coordinator of North Carolina's Office of Motion Picture Development.

The syndicated television shows features investigations of phenomena and unusual historical events, with Leonard Nimoy as narrator.

In April, the production company spent three days in Dare County shooting the Lost Colony program, in which Dare County area residents were used as actors and sources for historical background. The show is produced by the Alan Landsburg Production Company and directed by Nick Webster of California.

The North Carolina Office of Motion Picture Development serves as a clearing-house for information to assist and promote movie and television productions in the state.

New Vesak Dance

WINSTON-SALEM — Internationally known choreographer Norbert Vesak is now in residency with the North Carolina Dance Theater to create a new ballet for the company's performance repertoire.

Tentatively entitled "Meadow Dances," the new work for 12 company dances will be set to Joseph Canteloube's "Chants d'Auvergne,: and will be about 20 minutes in length. Scenery and costumes are being designed by Robert-Glay LaRose, creative associate to Vesal for the past 15 years.

This will be the third ballet by Vesak to be included in the repertoire of the N.C. Dance Theater. The other two are "A Time of Windbells" and "The Grey Goose of Silence."

The slang term "limey" — used for Englishmen — originated with the British Navy's inclusion of lime juice, to prevent scurvy, in ships' provisions for long voyages.

Deadline

GREENSBORO — Registration deadline has been extended until June 1 for entries in the sculpture competition and exhibition for North Carolina artists sponsored by the Dept. of Art at UNC-Greensboro.

Interested artists are to call 379-5371 for more details.

Annual Rose High Student Art Show Currently At Art Center

AN ACRYLIC PAINTING . . . by student Jerry Hardy

Students of the Extended Day School at Agnes Fullilove have joined students of Rose High School to bring to Greenville an exhibit of teen-age art. The annual spring show is now on view at the Greenville Art Center.

Understandably more restrained than the exuberant art of younger children, both in color and context, there's still a full measure of color and excitement in this fine show.

Woven wall hangings, a considerable number of sawed and assembled wood pieces (some as sculpture, others mounted on a backing and used as wall pieces), batik, acrylic paintings of landscapes and portraits, pencil and ink drawings, linoleum prints, patterned designs, sculpture, ceramics, and plaster sculptures are among the wide variety of media utilized by the students.

Something new seems to be showing up this year — several fashion designs in ink washes, and there's also a small example of needlework, and a fine small collograph.

In the realm of fantasy, Susanne Williams has a couple of intricately drawn landscapes full of strange, exotic creatures, human and animal. Tony Parker's large, starkly simple painting conveys exceptional power for a student work. The brilliantly hued abstraction by Daniel Mayo, a mixed media work, is a painting that earlier got all the way to the national level in a competition for young artists; and Jason Bone's watercolor, stiff in design, yet reveals a youthful mastery in placing areas of glowing cerises, lavenders, creams, blues and golds.

The annual city high school show can be seen daily Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Like all school shows, the exhibition time is limited, so those interested in seeing it should do so soon.

Plot Against Pigeons

OAKLAND (AP) — Big plastic owls didn't work, so the Bay Area Rapid Transit District has purchased 144 brown and black rubber snakes in an effort to chase pigeons away from some suburban stations.

For the time being, the snakes are in place only at the Pleasant Hill station. But if they work, officials say they also will be distributed at El Cerrito, Walnut Creek, San Leandro and Daly City.

The problem is not so much the pigeons themselves, but their droppings, which litter the affected stations and occasionally hit an unsuspecting passenger.

Great hope was placed in the owls when they were installed last year. They were retired recently — heavily crusted with droppings.

On Emoting Lucidly

EDITOR'S NOTE — In the immediate environs is a homo sapien with a penchant for syntax who would be appreciative if the masses would emote in a manner that evokes lucidity. In other words, here's an English professor who wants us to say what we mean.

By MARK CRANE
Associated Press Writer

GLASSBORO, N.J. (AP) — Richard Mitchell says he would rather strangle than educate the "birdbrains" on college faculties who bastardize his beloved English language.

As printer, editor and chief copy boy of The Underground Grammarian — a four-page broadsheet that oozes with biting satire and occasional venom — Mitchell regularly disembowels college presidents, deans and national leaders who violate the mother tongue in written form.

No one is immune from the wrath of his newsletter, printed in Mitchell's basement on a 72-year-old Chandler & Price printing press and sent to 1,800 subscribers nine times a year.

In a recent issue, Mitchell gave Glassboro State College President Mark Chamberlain an "F" for an internal memo.

"I have tenure, a smart mouth and I'm hard to stop," Mitchell said. "So I don't worry. Besides, the college likes the publicity."

But the 49-year-old Glassboro professor isn't so much interested in pedantry or split infinitives as he is enraged by professionals who evade responsibility for what they say. To Mitchell, poor English isn't just hard on the ears. It's downright immoral.

When Mitchell speaks of sociologists or educators, he doesn't say the words. He spits them out with disgust.

Those professionals use words like "individualized learning station" when they mean to say "desk," Mitchell says.

"You can be perfectly clear and logical saying 'dese' and 'dose.' But professors who are paid by taxpayers and write things like 'delay should not be allowed to take place' when what they mean to say is 'hurry;' or 'uneasiness should be settled' when they mean to say 'don't worry,' should be kicked out. Period."

Mitchell enjoys making outrageous statements, but he's serious about the political consequences of bad English.

"We boast of freedom of thought in America," he says. "But what does freedom of thought mean if the majority of people can't put two sentences together in some logical sequence?..."

Mitchell fears America is becoming a nation of illiterates and — where education is bilingual — illiterates in two languages.

He believes we are spending "twice as much as we should be" on education, and he welcomes the day when schools go back to teaching "reading, writing and ciphering.

"But if you cut the school budget in half, districts would probably fire teachers and hire more curriculum coordinators. The federal government rewards dodges and gimmicks with grants. If someone did a study showing that kids would be interested in reading if we showed re-runs of 'Mod Squad' in the classrooms, the government would pour millions into the program."

Mitchell's favorite example of "evasive English" is of an education professor at Montclair State College who recently wrote in The New York Times: "The pre-school years have been recognized as being important formulative years."

Mitchell wrote in The Grammarian: "He probably means 'formative,' but no matter. The important thing is the grotesque contortion by which he escapes having to say that preschool years are formative. It matters not all to the 'professional' that what he has to say is obvious and banal and widely enough known that it needs no saying; he still finds a way to evade responsibility for having said it."

Mitchell says his colleague's mind is working wickedly — although probably not intentionally — because of the bureaucratic age.

"This man doesn't want to get blamed for anything. When I read Thomas Jefferson, there is someone talking to me. He takes a stand. When you read documents coming out of schools or government, you begin to realize that nobody's home. The buck stops nowhere. It falls in the cracks of the language."

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Linda M. Stancill

Hitler and World War II provide the background for several new books at the library.

CHILDREN OF THE HOLOCAUST by Helen Epstein tells the sometimes tragic, sometimes triumphant story of the sons and daughters born to survivors of Hitler's concentration camps. Epstein, born to survivors of Auschwitz and Terezin, relates her own private quest to come to terms with her parents' past, a past that despite her parents' efforts to protect her, had become her own. She spent three years in Israel visiting other children of survivors and those who had suffered losses during the war. She presents the story of Gabriela Korda who was forced to maintain a double identity for most of her life — an Aryan Protestant while attending her German-language school, a Jew in the privacy of her home. Other stories include Yehudah Cohen, for whom the Sixth Day War took on an urgent personal meaning and Tomas, the young Czechoslovakian who had never known his father until he emigrated to Israel and found himself caught in a bizarre family tragedy rooted in the trauma of the concentration camp.

In ON TRIAL AT NUREMBERG, Airey Neave presents a unique account of personal interviews with war criminals. Neave, chosen to work for the British War Crimes Executive Team in 1945, had been in Germany before and during the war. He knew firsthand how the Gestapo treated POWs and he was one of the first prisoners to escape from Colditz. Neave was chosen to serve the historic indictments on the captured Nazi leaders, to act as their legal advisor for choosing counsel and to hear evidence concerning the criminality of various Nazi organizations. Thirty years after the yearlong trial, Neave offers his personal impressions of the defendants, judges and verdicts in the "greatest trial in History" in this impassioned intimate account which encapsulates the horror and the Allied attempt for justice of the Second World War.

A novel of ingenious reprisal for Holocaust war crimes is Irving R. Cohen's THE PASSOVER COMMANDO. A barroom confession of war crimes a German committed as a young man against Jewish prisoners angers those who have a deep personal sense of the Jewish past. Revenge takes the form of a game in a contempory version of the plagues that Jehovah sent to Pharaoh. As the German fights back with plagues of his own, the game becomes serious and the Commando become disturbed and divided as they realize they have not come to terms with the final and most dreadful plague, the slaying of the Firstborn. The confrontation gets increasingly ugly as the deadly game moves toward a dreadful climax.

HAMMERSTRIKE, Walter Winward's novel of World War II, tells how captured Germans lived, how they were treated, what they did and thought, and how they tried to escape. This dramatic account of a secret event that might have changed the outcome of the war involves a plan for a mass escape of German POWs from Britain and embodies Hitler's hopes of throwing British security into disarray at a crucial moment in the war.

Aycock Teacher Handicap Volunteer

National Handicapped Week has been observed the past week in Greenville, with one non-handicapped person agreeing to find out what it's like to be confined to a wheelchair.

Van Latham, a math teacher at Aycock Junior High School, carried out his teaching duties and also remained in the chair at his home after school hours.

Latham's volunteer act highlighted the week in which citizens at local, state and national level are called on to be aware of and to try to understand special problems of the handicapped.

June Shough, Regional Director of the Northeast Regional Office of the Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults of North Carolina, Inc., mentioned some of the basic programs to assist handicapped available in the 21-county area comprising the Northeast Regional area.

"We have two summer camps for the handicapped," she said. "One is at Camp Easter in the Pines at Southern Pines, and the other is Camp Sertona near Winston-Salem in Stokes County."

Also, the regional office assists needy handicapped persons in the purchase of equipment and has some items available for loan on a short period basis.

"We have recreational programs and if anyone is interested they can check for details," she added. (The phone number is 758-3230).

The annual mailing of Easter Seals is one means of funding the program. Other means are neighbor-to-neighbor collections by volunteers, and the holding of special events such as road races and a skate-a-thon.

Taught Math With Paper Helicopters

The air was full of airplanes — paper helicopters, that is — last week at South Greenville Elementary School as sixth graders tested the flight capabilities of their creations made to prove mathematical functions.

Students of Mrs. Dunn's sixth grade, working with the assistance of guidance counselor Frank O'Neal and Child development specialist Neal Harris, discovered that the old problem of learning math could be up-to-date pleasure.

Each of the approximately 30 students applied skills they are learning in math studies, things like using a ruler, figuring out fractions and measurements, to follow a blueprint and make their own flying paper flying machine.

"I don't think any of us realized the kids would enjoy the lesson as much as they did," O'Neal said. "Our medium of instruction, a paper plane, was fairly unusual, but everything else was part of a standard math lesson.

It's almost like they designed a checking plan just for me.

If all of us were in the same financial boat, a single checking plan might do nicely for everyone.

But, of course, we're not. That's why Planters offers so many different kinds of checking accounts.

Some people like the idea of writing unlimited checks but don't like the idea of paying for them. So Planters came up with several ways to avoid monthly service charges. One is to maintain a $200 minimum or $500 average balance in checking. Another is simply to keep $200 in savings.

Other people only write a few checks a month, say two or three. For them, Planters designed Budget Checking, with a simple per check charge and no worries about minimum or average balances.

Nobody likes the idea of overdrafts. So Planters also offers Check Credit, overdraft protection that lets you write a check for more than you have in the bank and know it's covered.

Finally, for anyone who likes the idea of earning interest on all their money, there's Saver's Checking. With checks covered automatically by transfers from savings to checking.

Planters National Bank. We make a lot of different checking plans that make a lot of sense.

Preakness Finish--Simply Spectacular

Replied Meyerhoff: "It wasn't fantastic. It was spectacular."

Indeed it was. Spectacular Bid simply ran away from four 3-year-old rivals at Pimlico and added a victory in the $235,300 Preakness to his triumph in the Kentuckky Derby.

He did it with the second-fastest clocking in the 104-year history of the race, completing the mile and three-sixteenths in 1:541-5. That was just a fifth of a second off the track and stakes record set by Canonero II in 1971.

"He did it all," said trainer Bud Delp after watching Bid beat Golden Act by 5½ lengths.

"He's a great horse. I've been saying it all along. Now you fellows can say it," he told the news media. "The race was over at the half-mile post."

Jockey Ronnie Franklin had Spectacular Bid at high gear with a half mile to go and he took the lead from General Assembly entering the final turn.

Franklin, the 19-year-old who had been criticized for some of his rides on Bid, kept the colt outside all the way.

Delp said he thought Angel Cordero on Screen King wanted Franklin to come inside as he did in the trouble-plagued Florida Derby. When asked what would have happened if Franklin had gone inside, Delp snapped, "That's a dumb question. I don't talk to dummies."

Franklin, who thought Bid could have broken the record if he had been pushed in the stretch, said Screen King forced him wide on the turn and in the backstretch. But Cordero said Bid came in on Screen King on the backstretch and "hit me hard enough to cut up my horse."

Screen King and Cordero helped delay Spectacular Bid's victory from becoming official. The stewards held an inquiry concerning Screen King and Flying Paster in the upper stretch but decided to let the order of finish stand. That was Screen King, followed by Flying Paster and General Assembly, the son of Secretariat, who had been runner-up in the Derby.

The four colts who chased Spectacular Bid Saturday all had been beaten by him in the Derby. Two or three of them might try him again in the Belmont Stakes when Spectacular Bid tries to become thoroughbred racing's third Triple Crown winner in three years.

Franklin and Delp don't care who rides against him in the Belmont. "We're a cinch for the Triple Crown," said the confident Franklin.

The Bid's 12th straight victory before a "home" crowd of 72,607 made him the sport's 24th millionaire.

He earned $165,300 to boost his career bankroll to $1,123,587 on a record of 14 wins and a second in 16 starts.

Spectacular Bid's margin of victory was five lengths over Golden Act, the Derby thirdplace finisher who was four lengths in front of Screen King. Flying Paster was another 1½ lengths back.

Spectacular Bid, owned by Harry, Teresa and Tom Meyerhoff, paid $2.20 and $2.20. It equaled the lowest Preakness payoff set by Citation in 1948.

The exacta of Spectacular Bid and Golden Act paid $15.80.

Flying Paster, ridden by Don Pierce, and Derby runnerup General Assembly, ridden by Laffit Pincay Jr., broke quickly out of the gate and ran as a pair down the stretch the first time and into the backstretch. General Assembly held a narrow lead.

General Assembly was still in front and Flying Paster was second with about a half-mile to go. But Franklin had Spectacular Bid moving on the outside and he charged into the lead shortly after entering the turn. The race was over and the crowd sensed it, cheering Bid's name.

It was sort of a hometown victory because the Meyerhoffs, Franklin and trainer Bud Delp are all Marylanders. Bid was born in Kentucky, but he made and won the first two starts of his career at Pimlico.

The roar increased as Spectacular Bid shot through the stretch and it continued until Franklin, smiling broadly, brought the gun-metal gray colt back to the winner's circle.

The fractions in this second-swiftest Preakness were 222-5 seconds after the first quarter-mile, 464-5 after the half, 1:103-5 after three-quarters and 1:35 after the mile.

The victory is sure to earn the son of Bold Bidder-Spectacular the respect he so richly deserves.

Orioles Nip Blue Jays, 4-3

TORONTO (AP) — Lee May hit a two-run homer and Rick Dempsey drove home the deciding run with an eighth-inning double that gave Jim Palmer and the Baltimore Orioles a 4-3 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays Saturday.

Palmer, 5-2, limited the Blue Jays to eight hits before Tim Stoddard bailed him out in the eighth inning. Winless Tom Underwood absorbed his sixth loss.

The Orioles opened the scoring in the first inning, getting a run on shortstop Alfredo Griffin's throwing error. The Blue Jays tied it 1-1 in the third when Rick Cerone drove in Al Woods with a single to center field.

May put Baltimore back into the lead in the fifth inning when he followed Ken Singleton's single with his eighth homer, over the 375-foot sign in left-center. The Orioles made it 4-1 in the eighth when Kiko Garcia walked and Dempsey doubled him home.

The Blue Jays cut the margin to one run in the bottom of the eighth on Roy Howell's two-run double that chased Palmer. Stoddard took over and squelched the threat, then Don Stanhouse replaced Stoddard in the ninth.

Remy, Lynn Lead Way As Bosox Slip Past New York By 4-3

By DAVE O'HARA

BOSTON (AP) — Little second baseman Jerry Remy and slugging outfielder Fred Lynn came through with the deciding hits, then took turns praising teammates for other contributions in the Boston Red Sox's 4-3 victory over the New York Yankees Saturday.

Remy, who had six assists and started four double plays behind Boston starter Chuck Rainey, saluted the rookie right-hander, who was knocked out in the seventh inning. Lynn, who had two doubles and a single and two RBIs, took time out to praise reliever Dick Drago, who was summoned from the bullpen to end the game by striking out Thurman Munson with the tying run on first.

"Rainey throws a sinker ball and when he gets a man on first he'll look for the double play," Remy said. "They were all routine grounders, but this was a different game — very tight, where every run you score is important."

"This was a pretty exciting game, going down to the wire," Lynn said after Drago collected his fifth save of the season. "Dick just reared back and said, 'Here it is, hit it.' Munson didn't have much of a chance on that pitch."

Remy drove in the tying run in the seventh. Then, with two outs, he scored on Fred Lynn's third hit of the game.

The Red Sox bounced back after the Yankees had edged in front 3-2 with a pair of runs in the top of the seventh on Graig Nettles' pop single to shallow center.

Dwight Evans started the Boston seventh by beating out a high topper down the third base line. Gary Allenson sacrificed and Remy followed with a line-single to center, driving in Evans.

Remy took third on an infield out and scored as Lynn, who had two doubles earlier, ripped a single to right.

Boston relief specialist Bill Campbell, still trying to come back from arm problems which plagued him throughout 1978, replaced rookie Chuck Rainey in the seventh and picked up his second victory in three decisions. Dick Drago relieved him in the ninth after Roy White's two-out single and got his fifth save. New York starter Ed Figueroa, 3-5, took the loss, giving up 11 hits.

Veteran umpires Marty Springstead, Vic Voltaggio, Joe Brinkman and Larry McCoy were given a standing ovation in their first appearance of the year after the settlement of the major league umpires' dispute.

The first beef with the returning umpires occurred in the third inning. Lynn doubled and tried to go to third as Nettles threw out Rice. Voltaggio called Lynn out on Chris Chambliss' return throw to Nettles at third. Lynn and the Red Sox protested strenuously — to no avail.

The Red Sox jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first inning. Remy led off with a single, but was picked off immediately by Figueroa. Rick Burleson whacked a single off Figueroa's leg and took second when the pitcher made a wild throw to first. Lynn lined a double to right, scoring Burleson, then he scored on a single by Jim Rice.

The Yankees, who had at least one baserunner in every inning except the eighth, picked up a run in the fifth on consecutive singles by Mickey Rivers, White and Thurman Munson.

Singles by Bucky Dent and Rivers chased Rainey in the seventh. After White sacrificed, Munson was walked intentionally by Campbell and Nettles followed with his single.

Then the Red Sox rebounded, snapping New York's six-game winning streak here that started with a four-game series last September, continued with the dramatic 5-4 American League East playoff victory Oct. and ended Friday night with the Yanks' 10-0 romp.

The nationally televised game, which drew a packed crowd of 33,224, was played in a steady drizzle.

Rooker's Return Is Happy One

CHICAGO (AP) — Pittsburgh's Jim Rooker baffled Chicago for eight innings Saturday in his 1979 debut and the Pirates rode Dave Parker's first-inning home run to a 3-0 victory over the Cubs.

Rooker hadn't pitched since March 18, when he suffered a swollen left elbow during an exhibition game. He faced the minimum number of batters through the first eight innings but needed relief help after Ted Sizemore singled and Sam Mejias walked.

Enrique Romo walked Bobby Murcer to load the bases with one out, but Mike Vail fouled out, then Grant Jackson picked up his fifth save, getting Bill Buckner to end the game with grounder to second.

Rooker gave up a singles to Ivan DeJesus in the first inning and Dave Kingman in the eighth. DeJesus was cut down attempting to steal. Kingman led off the fifth by drawing a walk but was erased when Steve Ontiveros hit into a double play. The Cubs didn't have another base runner until Kingman led off the eighth with a single, but Ontiveros again hit into a double play.

Parker's homer, his sixth, came off Mike Krukow, 1-3, with two outs in the first. The Pirates added two runs in the eighth on a pair of walks, a run-scoring single by John Milner and a wild pitch by reliever Willie Hernandez which enabled Omar Moreno to score from third.

Drivers Scramble To Make Indy 500 Field

By JERRY GARRETT
AP Motorsports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — "Bumpee" Tom Bigelow roared back into the field with a dramatic run, Jerry Sneva put Neil Bonnett's car safely into the lineup and Hurley Haywood searched desperately to find out what went wrong for him Saturday in the third round of qualifying for the May 27 Indianapolis 500.

The light rain that interrupted time trials earlier in the day gave way to hot, hazy sunshine, and the session ended up an unusually busy one.

Bigelow had to use his backup car, originally set aside for Gary Bettenhausen, to get back into the 33-car field after Sneva's masterful run bumped him out.

It was the fourth car for the Sherman Armstrong team to complete a qualification attempt for the $1 million race. Bigelow's run Saturday of 186.722 mph topped the averages of his teammates, rookie Howdy Holmes' 185.864 and Janet Guthrie's 185.720. It was better than five seconds faster over the 10-mile trial than his original run last week at 181.928 mph.

"I have to thank Gary Bettenhausen for helping us set this car up. I took it out Thursday and ran three laps, and then Gary took it out and made some changes. They worked," Bigelow said.

Sneva made his run in the experimental AMC-powered Spirit without benefit of any practice, other than his warmup laps before taking the green flag.

"I'n. a little taller than Neil, and I had trouble fitting in his seat," said Sneva. "On the first lap my toe got caught with the accelerator pedal down. I couldn't get it free, so I finally just left it floored all the way around."

Meanwhile, a bitterly disappointed Haywood and his crew searched for what cost them the fastest run of the day and the best speed this side of the front row.

The 31-year-old Haywood, the only man to win both the LeMans and Daytona 24-hour endurance races, is making his Indianapolis circuit debut here and was the first to try to qualify Saturday. He put on quite a show — for a while.

Haywood's last warm-up lap and first lap under the timing clocks were both over 190 mph. Only the front row qualifiers, Rick Mears, Tom Sneva and Al Unser, ran faster.

But on his second timed lap, something went awry with his Lightning racer's motor.

The speed dropped to 182.741 mph on the second official lap, then plunged to 178.288 mph on the third. His crew waved off the run.

"The motor just started to fade. The handling went terribly wrong, too," Haywood said. "I wanted the crew to start the run a lap earlier than they did, but I couldn't signal them."

Crew chief Mike Devin immediately began tearing down the Offenhauser engine, trying to locate the problem and fix it, right in the qualifying line.

"With the threat of rain, we couldn't take the chance of losing our place in line by taking it into the garage to work on it," Devin said.

Fans, Players Cheer Umpires' Return...For A While Anyway

By The Associated Press

Most of major league baseball's 52 umpires returned to work Saturday — to the applause of the fans and the cheers of the majority of players and managers.

"I'm sure glad to see them back," Herman Franks, manager of the Chicago Cubs, said at Wrigley Field, where umpires John Kibler, Nick Colosi, Terry Tata and Gerry Crawford were given a rousing ovation by the crowd of more than 20,000 prior to the Cubs' game against the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The umpires had been on strike since the outset of spring training in a contract dispute with the owners. The dispute ended Friday when the two parties signed a new three-year contract, worth an estimated $2.5 million to the umpires.

While the regulars were not working, they were replaced by crews consisting mostly of college and sandlot umpires. Recently, the substitutes had come under a barrage of criticism, and that was one reason the veterans were welcomed back.

"I know I have to watch myself or I won't be around very long," said Franks. "I've gotten used to using all kinds of language against those other umpires because they wouldn't throw you out of a game."

"Hurrah," said Cubs pitcher Ken Holtzman upon seeing the regulars back on the job.

"Great," commented Pirates slugger Willie Stargell.

Stargell, however, also had praise for the fill-in umps.

"You have to give the other guys credit because they did the best job they could under very difficult circumstances," he said.

Meanwhile, at Fenway Park in Boston, veterans Marty Springstead, Larry McCoy, Joe Brinkman and Vic Voltaggio received a standing ovation when they were introduced prior to the Red Sox game against the New York Yankees.

However, it didn't take long for Boston Manager Don Zimmer and the fans to become disenchanted with them.

Zimmer charged out of the dugout and argued with Voltaggio when the umpire called Fred Lynn out on a close play at third base in the third inning, a call booed by the crowd.

At Toronto, the regulars were not in attendance for the Blue Jays' game against the Baltimore Orioles, leaving the work still in the hands of four umpires who worked during the strike — Rich Panas, Mike Fitzpatrick, Joe Sawchuk and Al Contant.

Similarly, the Reds reported that the crew of umpires assigned to their weekend series with the Los Angeles Dodgers wouldn't make it until Sunday because travel connections to Cincinnati were not possible.

Norris Sparks Indian Victory

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Sports Writer

CLEVELAND (AP) — Jim Norris drove in five runs with a pair of homers Saturday to spark the Cleveland Indians to a 6-0 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Rich Waits, 5-3, combined with relievers Don Hood and Dan Stillner to stop the Tigers on four hits. The Indians jumped on Detroit starter Jack Morris, 1-1, for all their runs on nine hits.

Cleveland scored three runs in the fourth inning. Paul Dade, who had three hits and scored twice, led off with a single, stole second and went to third on catcher Lance Parrish's throwing error.

Rick Manning's sacrifice fly scored Dade for the first run, Andre Thornton followed with a single and Norris lined his first homer of the season into the right field seats.

The Jaycees jumped ahead with a run in the first inning. Maury Harris singled and David Lee walked. Jordy Smith singled, scoring Harris.

The Kiwanis came back with two in the third, but the Jaycees added three in their half of the inning for a 4-2 lead. The Kiwanis struck for five more in the fifth, regaining the lead, 7-4, but it was their scoring in the sixth that won it.

Van Alston led off the sixth with a home run for an 8-4 lead, and Scott Davis followed with a double. He moved up on an out and scored on a passed ball.

The Jaycees rallied for four in the bottom of the sixth, but fell one short.

Alston led the Kiwanis hitting with two, while Harris, Smith and Ken Butler each had two for the Jaycees. The Kiwanis are now 1-2, while the Jaycees are 1-3.

First Federal 7, Moose 1

First Federal rolled to a 7-1 victory over the hapless Moose yesterday in the Tar Heel Little League.

First Federal got all it needed in the second inning, scoring twice. Brian Joyner singled and moved up on two wild pitches, scoring on an error. Rodney Harris walked, moved up on Derek Dickers single and a wild pitch, and scored when Darrell Best grounded out.

First Federal scored one more in the third and four in the fourth.

The lone Moose run came in the fifth. Charlie Littleton tripled and scored on an error.

The Moose got only three hits off Tyrone Barrett. Joyner and Dickens each had two hits, one of Dickens' a solo homer in the fourth.

Optimists 9, Union Carbide 0

The Optimists rolled to a 9-0 victory over Union Carbide in the North State Little League yesterday.

Doyle Kirkland hurled a three-hitter in the shutout for the Optimists, who are now 2-2. Union Carbide fell to 1-3.

The Optimists got all they needed in the first inning, scoring a single run. Kirkland walked, stole second and took third on a wild pitch. He scored when Gary Scott grounded out.

The Optimists added two more in the third and six in the fourth. They, too, got only three hits off loser Duane Roeser, but took better advantage of walks and errors in the win.

Wellcome 1, Pepsi-Cola 0

Wellcome ran its record to 3-1 in the Tar Heel Little League with a 1-0 victory over Pepsi-Cola yesterday.

Pepsi is also 3-1 now.

Tray Fuqua and Terry Warren combined for a one-hitter against Pepsi, with the lone hit coming in the fifth inning, a double by Kendall Phillips off Fuqua.

Lee Cox went five innings for Pepsi, allowing only one hit before giving way in the sixth to Phillips, who allowed two hits and the lone run.

Fuqua led off the sixth for Wellcome with a walk and Cedric Hines and Tommy Warren followed with singles, loading the bases. Scott Carawan then walked, forcing in Fuqua with the game-winning run.

Hines had two of the three Wellcome hits.

Big Value Drugs 5, Exchange 4

Big Value Drugs remained unbeaten in the Tar Heel Little League with a 5-4 win over the Exchange yesterday

Big Value scored its first run in the top of the first. Steve Wall reached on an error, coming around on three wild pitches.

The Exchange came back with a run in the bottom of the first. Doug Bray was hit by a pitch and moved up when Billy Michel reached on a fielder's choice. An error allowed Bray to come the rest of the way, tieing it at 1-1.

Big Value picked up another in the third and one in the fourth.

But the winning runs came in the fifth. Eric Jarman walked and Wall singled. Both moved up on a wild pitch, and an error allowed Jarman to score. Wall then scored on a wild pitch.

The Exchange rallied for three in the bottom of the inning, but fell one short.

Sterling Edwards led Big Value with two hits, while Jim Hall had two for Exchange. Les Turner was the winning pitcher.

Error Kills Met Hopes

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Richie Hebner's bases-loaded, two-out fielding error in the 12th inning opened the floodgates and allowed St. Louis six unearned runs as the Cardinals whipped the New York Mets 9-4 Saturday.

Lou Brock had a two-run single in the 12th and Ken Oberkfell, Keith Hernandez and Ted Simmons added RBI singles.

Reliever Dwight Bernard, 0-1, started the inning for the Mets. He allowed a leadoff single to Simmons. After a sacrifice bunt, he walked Tony Scott intentionally. One out later, reliever Jessie Orosco walked pinch-hitter Rgoer Freed to load the bases and set the stage for Hebner's error on a hard grounder by pinch-hitter George Hendrick.

Brock, Oberkfell, Hernandez and Simmons then hit successive singles, as the Cards sent 12 men to the plate in the inning.

Darold Knowles, 2-0, the third of four Cardinal pitchers, was the winner with 11-3 innings of relief. Will McEnaney finished up, permitting the final New York run on an RBI single by Willie Montanez.

Happy New Leader

Geiberger's 64 Gives Him Four-Shot Lead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Al Geiberger, who has a history of playing his best on long, hard golf courses, came from 4 strokes off the pace with a 6-under-par 64 and swept into a 4-shot lead Saturday in the third round of the $300,000 Colonial National Invitation Tournament.

Geiberger, a soft-spoken 41-year-old veteran, took command of this prestigious event with a 201 total, 9 shots under par on the famed old Colonial Country Club course, a 7,134-yard layout on the banks of the Trinity River and one of the toughest the touring pros encounter all season.

"This is the first time in a long while that I've been abie to say I've putted well. "I didn't have nearly the fear over the putts that I've had lately," admitted Geiberger, who had a poor season last year following surgery early in the year. "I'm really glad I haven't been in contention for a while, because I would have made a fool of myself."

He was anything but that on this bright, breezy day as he escaped without a bogey and left the field straggling in his wake.

While it's been some time between victories, it wasn't an unusual performance for Geiberger. A surprising number of his 11 career triumphs have come on extremely difficult courses, such as this one.

He won the Tournament Players Championship here in 1975. He won the American Golf Championship and the PGA national title on the vast, awesome Firestone course. He won the Tournament of Champions on tough, sprawling La Costa.

And his last victory, of course, came in 1977 at Memphis, when he fired that all-time PGA Tour record round of 59.

But Barry Jaeckel, who came on to take second going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $54,000 first prize, insisted Geiberger's lead is not secure.

"Oh, sure, I'd like to be Al, holding a 4-shot lead," he said. "But any lead under 5 strokes can be made up on this golf course. Al's gonna be tough to catch. He's got a lot of confidence. That's obvious.

"But, unless there's a really big wind, I think we're going to have a dogfight out there tomorrow."

Leonard Thompson, who enjoyed a 3-stroke lead starting the day's play, struggled to a 73 that left him in third at 206, 5 strokes behind Geiberger.

Jim Colbert, Gene Littler and Dr. Gil Morgan were next at 207. Colbert matched Geiberger's 64 — a single stroke off the course record — Littler shot 67 and Morgan had 71.

Masters champ Fuzzy Zoeller topped the group at 208, 2 under par, after a round of 70. Also at that figure were D.A. Weibring, who shot 69, and Grier Jones, 72.

Tom Watson, the year's leading money-winnr, finally got untracked with a 65 that left him at 209 and all but out of contention. He had it 6 under par for the day before three-putting the final hole.

"There's an awful lot of guys between men and the top," said Watson, the only three-time winner of the year. "The only chance I'd have is if there's a big wind and I put a very low number on the board."

Nancy Lopez Moves Into One-Stroke Lead

By GARY MYERS
AP Sports Writer

CLIFTON, N.J. (AP) — Defending champion Nancy Lopez shot an erratic 3-under-par 70 Saturday to take a 1-shot lead over veteran Mickey Wright and Kathy Ahern after two rounds of the $100,000 LPGA tournament at the Upper Montclair Country Club.

The 22-year-old Lopez has a two-round total of 143 going into Sunday's final round at the par-73, 6,327-yard course. Lopez managed seven birdies but also succumbed to the wet course with four bogeys.

She opened the round with three straight birdies before play was halted during a driving rainstorm. The delay — lasting 20 minutes — was the second of the day. The first one suspended play for 2½ hours.

After the rain stopped, Lopez bogeyed two of the next three holes. The rest of her round included four more birdies and two more bogeys.

Wright was tied after the first round with Ahern at 70. The 44-year-old Wright, who holds the LPGA record with 82 career victories, including 13 in one year, shot a 1-over 74 Saturday. Ahern also shot a 74 for a two-round score of 144.

Beth Daniel and Jo Ann Washam are tied at 145, two shots back.

"I started off real well," Lopez said. "But then we paused and it threw me off. I wasn't concentrating real well after the delay. It was up and down after the first three holes.

"I hate the weather, but everyone has got to play in it, so why not enjoy it and let everyone else complain," she added.

Lopez, who set the tour on its ear last year with nine victories, will be shooting for her fourth victory of the year Sunday. She will be paired in the final round with Wright, who is aiming for her first tour victory since the 1973 Dinah Shore Classic.

"I don't know Mickey Wright very well; I've only played with her once or twice. She is one heck of a lady," Lopez said.

Lopez, who set a record last year with five consecutive victories, feels she is at the top of her game right now.

"Those five weeks, it was just easy, everything was falling into place," she said. "Right now, I'm hitting the ball very well."

A's Snap Loss Skein

OAKLAND (AP) — Jeff Newman homered and drove in four runs as the Oakland A's broke an eight-game losing streak Saturday, scoring two more runs than they did during the entire slump in defeating the Milwaukee Brewers 12-4.

Newman hit a solo shot in the A's three-run first inning off loser Moose Haas, 2-3. Newman drove in three more runs with a single and two sacrifice flies while Rob Picciolo hit his first home run of the season in the fourth inning. The A's' five-run fourth equaled their biggest inning of the season.

The Oakland outburst enabled John Henry Johnson, who had dropped his first six decisions, to earn his first victory.

Record Set In Women's 5,000 Meter At Durham

By DAN LOHWASSER

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — Jan Merrill of Connecticut College set an American record in the women's 5,000-meter run with a time of 15:33.78 Saturday at an invitational meet at Duke University.

Merrill, ranked as America's best in the women's 3,000 and two-mile, broke the record of 15:35.5 set last year by Kathy Mills of Penn State in Knoxville, Tenn.

Joan Benoit of Bowdoin College, the women's champion at the Boston Marathon this year, finished second at 15:43.08. She was followed by Cindy Bremmer of Wisconsin at 15:47.66 and Duke's Ellison Goodall at 16:03.88.

"This was the best 5,000 field ever in the United States," said Merrill, who left the stadium quickly after the event. "I was very pleased with the race. It was the best competition I've ever been in. The American women are coming fast and we need more long races for the women."

In other events, 1976 Olympic champion Edwin Moses of Pomona Beach, Calif., approached his world record of 47.45 seconds in the 400 intermediate hurdles with a time of 47.69. It was the first time of under 48 seconds recorded in the event this year.

The featured event, the men's 100 dash, was won by Steve Williams of New London, Conn., with a time of 10.49 seconds, well off the 9.95 world record time some meet officials predicted could fall at Duke's Wallace-Wade Stadium.

In the 400 hurdles Moses finished a good 10 yards ahead of a field that included Auburn University's James Walker, whose 48.48 last week in the Southeastern Conference meet had been the year's best time in the event.

Walker finished second in 48.99 followed by Olympic silver medalist Mike Shine of the U.S Army at 50.23 and Karl Williams of the University of Virginia at 50.54.

"I could have run a (world) record if I had wanted to," said Moses, who holds a physics degree from Morehead University. "There's no need to this time of year; I'm not even training that hard."

Moses said he is aiming for the World Cup competition, the AAU championships and the Pan-American Games this fall, but he indicated a record may wait for the 1980 Olympics in Moscow.

"I have to be running full speed in August and September so I just don't want to run that hard now," Moses said. "I want to save the bulk of my running for the 1980s. If I do set a record I might do it by accident."

The men's 100 dash field was considered one of the best of the 1979 track season. It included Harvey Glance of Auburn and Steve Riddick of Philadelphia, both members of the 1976 gold medal-winning 400 relay team.

Glance finished second with at 10.51, followed by Riddick at 10.53 and John Christian at 10.55.

While the times in the event were well off the best 1979 mark of 10.11 by Silvo Leonard of Cuba, Williams said the field deserved its pre-meet hype.

Waltrip Puts 'Dolly' On Pole

By LARRY SIDDONS
Associated Press Writer

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip, diving a Chevrolet named in honor of buxom country-western singer Dolly Parton, wasted little time Saturday in winning the pole position for the Mason-Dixon 500 stock car race.

The second driver to take to the track as the rain-delayed qualifying began, Waltrip blistered the mile oval at Dover Downs International Speedway at a near-record speed of 136.013 mph.

It was the third time in the last four weeks that Waltrip, NASCAR's top driver so far this season, has won the pole position in the green-and-white race car he named after Miss Parton because "she was made to run up front."

"Dolly's a hot lady," said Waltrip, referring to his car's recent performance.

Starting next to the Charlotte, N.C., driver in Sunday's National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing Grand National event will be Buddy Baker, who had the the second-fastest qualifying time of 135.992 mph in his Chevy.

Third in qualifying, which was rained out Friday and delayed briefly again Saturday by showers, was Bobby Allison, the winner of last September's Delaware 500 here. Allison drove his Ford at a qualifying speed of 135.567 mph.

Fourth spot on the grid went to Terry LaBonte, in another Chevy, at 135.358 mph, with Neil Bonnett, in a Mercury, fifth at 135.348 mph.

Waltrip's speed was about a half-mile an hour slower than the track record for qualifying, set by David Peason in 1975.

But it was the first 136 mph-plus clocking at Dover Downs since Richard Petty did it in May 1977, tied for the third-fastest qualifying time in the track's history and was considerably faster than Baker's 135.452 mph pole-winning speed of a year ago.

"We've impoved at every track this year," said Waltrip, who has never won at Dover Downs. "Maybe we'll win this thing."

If Waltrip does win the 500-mile event, with a record purse of $148,525, he would break somewhat of a jinx on pole-position starters here.

Of the 18 NASCAR Grand National events run at Dover, just four have been won by the pole sitter, and none of the fastest qualifiers have made it to victory lane since Cale Yarborough in the 1976 Delaware 500.

Morning Wins Event

WILSON — Roanoke High School's Chris Morning took first place in the high jump in the Regional High School Track meet Friday at Wilson, and shared in the establishment of a new regional record in the process.

Two other area athletes qualified along with Morning for this week's State Meet, to be held Friday.

Morning leaped 6 feet, 10 inches to win the high jump, and nosed out another competitor with fewest misses as he also cleared 6-10, the two sharing in the setting of the new regional record.

D.H. Conley's Bernard Hill finished third in the long jump with a leap of 22 feet, 8¾ inches, and qualified for the state meet in that event.

Greene Central's Melvin Bynum took third place in the triple jump, leaping 45 feet, 2¾ inches, and will also make the field for the state event.

San Diego Chicken Gets Many Offers

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Ted "The Chicken" Giannoulas, fired after five years over ownership of the chicken suit, Friday said his flock of new offers include one to perform at Japan's All-Star game.

"It was a feeler from Japanese baseball in general," said Giannoulas, adding that he plans to "do something abroad this summer."

The 24-year-old San Diego native is the subject of a bidding war by dozens of organizations and businesses — including four American major league baseball teams.

Barred by a court order from wearing the chicken suit, Giannoulas has won an international audience for his hysterial antics at sports events.

He has a May 29th appearance in Superior Court to determine whether a temporary restraining order will be dropped, allowing him to continue his chicken career. He has been at odds with KGB radio, sponsor of the chicken.

The San Diego Padres have approached him about changing his identity to a parrot. But Giannoulas said he would prefer remaining a chicken, unless the court permanently forbids him from performing in the colorful big-beaked suit.

"I see myself pulling the chicken suit out of the closet at age 65," he said.

He said about 20 radio and television stations from around the country have contacted him, as well as three National Basketball Association clubs, the baseball teams and several restaurant chains.

Ted Turner, owner of the Atlanta Braves and Atlanta Hawks, "has been circling like a chicken hawk" with an attractive offer, said Giannoulas.

"He's just waiting to swoop." Giannoulas said he wants to stay in San Diego because it is home "and the sports teams in this city are about ready to take off. I'd like to be a part of that."

A week ago, the new KGB chicken was greeted by a barrage of boos from 43,000 Padres fans.

"San Diego isn't ready to accept a bogus bird," said Giannoulas.

If the court lifts the restraining order, he said he would welcome a duel with the new bird on the block.

"It would be like the World Football League taking on the National Football League. May the best bird win," chirped the 5-foot-4 Giannoulas.

Vida Blue In Losing Rut

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Coming into Atlanta Stadium can mess up any pitcher's head. But Vida Blue says his was that way long before he faced the Braves Friday night.

Blue, who won his first four games for San Francisco this year, has been hit hard and his record has slipped to 6-4. Dale Murphy of Atlanta hit him the hardest with two of his three home runs that drove in five runs and carried the Braves to a 6-4 victory over the Giants. Bob Horner also homered off Blue.

In the rest of the National League it was Houston 3, San Diego 2; Pittsburgh 9, Chicago 5; Montreal 5, Philadelphia 3, and Cincinnati 7, Los Angeles 6. St. Louis at New York was rained out.

"I'm just in a rut and I've got to get out of it," said Blue. "I don't think I'm thinking right. Right now I'm just expecting bad things to happen. Murphy's hot now. The ball probably looks 10 times as big to him.

"This stadium is worse than Fenway Park, because in all three sections of the park here the ball will carry," Blue said, comparing Atlanta's home-run heaven with Boston's bandbox and its famed Green Monster wall in left field. "At least at Fenway you only have to worry about a couple of spots.

Astros 3, Padres 2

Joe Niekro's four-hitter and Jose Cruz's tie-breaking single in the eighth inning carried Houston past Rollie Finger and the Padres. Cruz got his blooper after Craig Reynolds beat out a bunt and Enos Cabell got an infield single.

"None of the three hits would have broken a pane of glass," muttered Fingers, the loser. "A bunt single, an infield hit and a broken-bat hit — put it all together and it spells 'L'."

Pirates 9, Cubs 5

Chicago, a 23-22 loser to Philadelphia on Thursday, gave up a mere nine runs to the Pirates as Willie Stargell hit a two-run homer and Dave Parker and Steve Nicosia had solo shots.

Expos 5, Phils 3

Andre Dawson capped a three-run seventh inning with a two-run homer to give the Expos their victory in Philadelphia.

Dick Ruthven was shooting for his seventh victory and, with a 3-1 lead going into the seventh, seemed to have it secured. But Ellis Valentine doubled and came around on grounders by Larry Parrish and Chris Speier.

Reds 7, Dodgers 6

Farmville Nips Ayden-Grifton

LITTLEFIELD — Farmville Central nipped Ayden-Grifton, 3-1, in a nine-inning baseball game Friday that closed out the season for both teams.

Farmville Central scored first in the game, getting a run in the fourth inning. Jeff Joyner singled and Tony Eason walked. Ted Johnson reached on an error, loading the bases. Alan Corbett then hit a sacrifice fly, scoring Joyner for a 1-0 lead.

Ayden-Grifton came back in the sixth inning, scoring a run to tie it up. Ed Coley singled and Chris Strickland walked. David Smith also walked, loading the bases. The next batter hit into a double play, getting Coley at the plate, but a double by Clayton McLawhorn brought in Strickland to knot it up.

It stayed tied until the ninth, when the Jaguars pushed over two more to win it. Billy McLawhorn reached on a two-base error, and Greg Hardison also reached on a misplay, then stole second. Alan Moore reached on a fielder's choice, scoring McLawhorn, and Lewis Yelverton hit a sacrifice fly to score Hardison.

McLawhorn led Farmville with two hits, while no one for the Chargers had more than one.

ELEVEN OF THE 15 citizens who spoke at the recent public meeting on the proposed reopening of Mattamuskeet National Wildlife Refuge to public duck hunting voiced opposition to the plan, according to Refuge Manager Steve Frick.

A total of 67 persons attended the meeting, at which the hunting proposal was presented. The proposal calls for public hunting in a limited portion of the refuge for several days each week during the waterfowl season.

Only 55 of that total represented the general public, the remainder representing various government agencies. Of the 15 who made verbal comments, only four favored the proposal with the rest opposing the entire plan or one or more aspects of it.

Frick said the state Wildlife Resources Commission went on record as favoring the proposal.

Written comments are welcome, Frick said, and he urged interested persons to send their opinions to Mattamuskeet National Wildlife Refuge, P. O. Box N-2, Swanquarter, N. C. 27805. Friday is the deadline for written comments.

These comments, along with tapes of the recent public hearing, will be evaluated and a decision made on the proposal in the next three or four weeks, Frick said.

LOCAL WILDLIFE ARTISTS might want to consider entering the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service's Duck Stamp design contest.

Since the early 1970's interest in wildlife art has increased dramatically and many artists describe the duck stamp competition as being the most lucrative prize in the art world.

Prints of the picture chosen for use on a federal duck stamp almost always skyrocket in value and to be chosen as a duck stamp artist is as big a reputation-builder as winning the Masters in golf.

Details on the contest are available from the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Office of Public Affairs, Washington, D. C. 20240.

Channel markers were recently placed in the White Oak River from the Highway 24 bridge at Swansboro to Hancock Point by the N. C. Wildlife Resources Commission's division of boating.

Finding the channel in the lower White Oak River has long been a problem, even for commercial fishermen who use the river almost every day. The red and black buoys marking the channel were placed at low tide with the assistance of local fishermen.

"The channel will still be extremely shallow even at high tide, so people boating on the river should use caution," said Roy Lanier, a boating technician. "The channel is very tricky to follow, but by going slowly and keeping the red buoys at the right side when going upstream, boaters should be able to navigate the channel.

Lanier also said the channel shifts frequently, so it will be monitored continuously and the buoys will be moved frequently. "We hope this will help the boating public. Even though the channel is now marked, boaters should exercise caution because in some cases the channel is only about three feet deep."

Bullets Nip Spurs, Gain NBA Finals

By TOM SEPPY
AP Sports Writer

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — When the chips were down, Bobby Dandridge knew it was up to him to make the shot that would enable the Washington Bullets to defend their NBA championship against the Seattle SuperSonics.

"It makes you feel good that you are capable of shooting that shot," said Dandridge after the Bullets defeated the San Antonio Spurs 107-105 Friday night to win the best-of-seven Eastern Conference final series 4-3.

"I was working for the best possible shot. I knew they would try to double me if I went back into the center so I just put it up."

Dandridge, the Bullets' high scorer with 37 points, hit a 12-foot jumper from the right base line with just eight seconds left to lift Washington into the championship round against Seattle, the same team the Bullets defeated for the title in seven games a year ago.

The best-of-seven championship series opens Sunday in the Capital Centre, with Game 2 here Thursday. The following two games will be played in Seattle May 27 and May 29.

"It's a shame either team had to lose that thing," said Washington Coach Dick Motta, whose club rallied from a 10-point fourth-quarter deficit. "They played this series good enough to win. This may have been two of my most difficult weeks in basketball."

However, San Antonio Coach Doug Moe, as he did on Wednesday night, blasted the referees, particularly John Vanak.

"We had it and they took it away from us," he said of the referees. "The calls he (Vanak) made stole the game from us. Vanak gave them the game. Calls you just don't make, he was making for them. They took the heart out of us."

Motta said it was tough mentally being down in the series 3-1 and "in the back of your mind you know you're the better basketball team."

In winning, Washington became only the third team in the NBA's 33-year history to overcome a 3-1 deficit to win a seven-game series. The others were Boston in 1968 and Los Angeles in 1970.

Asked about the final Dandridge shot, Motta said, "Bobby had the ball and we told the rest of the guys to get out of the way. It was just what we had been doing all year long."

However, San Antonio still had time for another shot. Elvin Hayes, who had 25 points and seven blocked shots, rejected a short jumper by the Spurs' James Silas. The ball went to Larry Kenon but Dandridge stole it as the clock ran out.

"San Antonio usually goes to Silas on the last play, especially when Gervin is hot," said Dandridge, who guarded Gervin the last seven minutes. "I just fronted Gervin and tried to keep the ball away from him."

Gervin, who scored 42 points even though he was shut out in the first quarter, said simply: "It's summertime for me. It's all over. Go talk to the winners."

Rain Meant Disappointment And Change In Plans For Neil Bonnett

By LARRY SIDDONS
Associated Press Writer

DOVER, Del. (AP) — For Neil Bonnett, the rain meant more than just a day's delay in qualifying for the Mason-Dixon 500 stock car race. It also ended a dream.

Bonnett, a veteran of the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing's Grand National Circuit had hoped to gain a good spot for the Dover Downs International Speedway event in opening-day qualifying Friday, then fly to Indiana for today's qualifying for the Indianapolis 500.

But a steady rain forced NASCAR officials to call off Friday's qualifying and practice here, and Bonnett decided not to try for a one-day "double" 800 miles apart.

"It just turned out to be a time factor," said Bonnett as he sat in the rear of his cruise truck and watched the rain fall.

"I had planned to run here Sunday, qualify for Indy and skip the (NASCAR) World 600 (at Charlotte Motor Speedway the same day as Indianapolis)," he continued. "Now, it looks like I'll be running at Charlotte."

With Friday's session rained out, all spots in the field were to be filled today. Ordinarily at Dover, the pole and No. 2 starting spots are secured in Friday runs, with the rest of the field settled either with Saturday runs or non-front row winning times of Friday.

With quick air travel, Bonnett possibly could have hit both Dover and Indianapolis today, or gone to Indiana and hoped for rain to wash out a second day of qualifying here. There was a chance of rain in the forecast.

But Bonnett, from Hueytown, Ala., said that was not worth the risk.

"I can't go to Indy and take a chance that the weather will clear here," he said. "Then I could be shutout both places."

Wellcome 5, Moose 0

Wellcome pushed over four runs in the fourth inning and gained a 5-0 Tar Heel Little League victory over the Moose Friday.

The Wellcome team got its first run in the third. Russell Vines tripled and scored on Patrick Kanetze's ground out.

The other four came in the fourth. Traye Fuqua singled and Cedric Hines got a hit. Both moved up on a passed ball, and an error on the play scored Fuqua. Tommy Warren reached on an error, scoring Hines, and Warren stole second. Vines reached on a two-base error, and a hit by Kanetze scored both runners.

No one had more than one hit for either team, with Lark Weatherington hurling a three-hitter in the victory.

Yanks Take Show To Boston: It's A Hit

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The New York Yankees opened in Boston with a hit performance.

"I'm just glad that when you get beat by 10 runs it only counts one game instead of three," said Boston Manager Don Zimmer after a 10-0 rout by the world champions Friday night.

It was the first meeting for the Yankees and Red Sox since last fall's dramatic American League East playoff, and New York's margin this time was far more pronounced than that tingling 5-4 victory. This time, the Yankees made it easy for themselves by blasting out 17 hits.

"There's not much sense talking about it because we didn't get any runs," said a dispirited Zimmer. "It's over with — we'll just have to start again tomorrow."

Jim Beattie was one of the Yankee stars this time, hurling a four-hitter. The performance was considerably more satisfying to the young right-hander than his showing in Fenway Park last June, when he was shelled by the heavy-hitting Boston team.

"Even though I bombed here last June and shipped back to the minor leagues for a while, I like playing here," said Beattie, a former Dartmouth College star. "It's sort of like pitching at home because all my family lives close by."

In the other American League games, California turned back Chicago 7-3; Minnesota trimmed Kansas City 10-6 in 10 innings; Baltimore edged Toronto 7-6 in 11 innings; Detroit stopped Cleveland 5-3; Milwaukee blanked Oakland 8-0 and Seattle hammered Texas 13-5.

Reggie Jackson capped a three-run fifth inning with a bases-loaded, ground-rule double to key the Yankee victory. Former Yankee Mike Torrez, the loser in last year's playoff game, was cuffed around once again by his old teammates. Torrez was tagged for 10 hits before being replaced in the eighth, when the Yankees scored four insurance runs.

New York's Bucky Dent, who hit a three-run homer in last year's playoff game, was booed by many in the crowd of 33,694 at Fenway when he first came to bat against Torrez. But it apparently didn't bother him.

Angels 7, White Sox 3

Frank Tanana overcame a shaky start to earn his first victory in nearly a month, combining with Mark Clear on a seven-hitter as California beat Chicago.

Tanana, 3-3, who hadn't won since April 20 and hadn't pitched for 12 days because of a pulled groin muscle, settled down after allowing hits to four of the first five batters he faced.

Tanana was removed because of a blister on his pitching hand after giving up six hits in 51-3 innings. Clear came on at that point and held the White Sox to one hit the rest of the way to earn his third save.

Twins 10, Royals 6

Hosken Powell capped a four-run 10th inning with a two-run single to lead Minnesota over Kansas City. Royals relief ace Al Hrabosky issued two bases-loaded walks before Powell's hit.

Hrabosky relieved rookie Renie Martin with one out and runners at first and second. He then walked Butch Wynegar, Bobby Randall and John Castino before Powell, who had four hits, delivered. Hot-handed Mike Marshall set the Royals down in order in the 10th to gain his seventh victory of the young season.

Orioles 7, Blue Jays 6

Al Bumbry's single in the 11th inning scored Eddie Murray from second base with the winning run as Baltimore defeated Toronto. Murray, who scored three runs in the game, walked with one out in the 11th and advanced to second on a wild pitch by loser Dave Friesleben.

Bumbry, who entered the game as a defensive replacement in the 10th, drove in the winning run in his only time at bat.

Tigers 5, Indians 3

Mark Wagner's two-run double in the ninth inning led Detroit over Cleveland. Wagner came into the game when Lou Whitaker was ejected for arguing an umpire's call in the fifth and hit a line drive into the left-center field gap to break a 3-3 tie.

Brewers 8, A's 0

Left-hander Bill Travers fired a three-hitter as Milwaukee beat Oakland and handed the A's their eighth straight loss. Cecil Cooper knocked in three runs with two singles and a bases-loaded walk and Paul Molitor belted a double and homer to pace the winners.

Oakland's Mickey Klutts, Rob Picciolo and Manager Jim Marshall all were evicted from the game for arguing with the umpires at the beginning of the eighth inning.

Mariners 13, Rangers 5

Larry Cox drove in five runs with a double and a single to lead Seattle over Texas. Cox's bases-loaded double capped the Mariners' five-run sixth after his two-run single in the fifth gave Seattle the lead for good.

Seattle had 13 hits and seven walks against Steve Comer and three Ranger relief pitchers.

Aycock In Final Win

E.B. Aycock Junior High School wound up its 1979 baseball season with a 9-0 victory over Wilson Fike yesterday.

Roger Williams tossed a no-hitter in the abbreviated 4½ inning game. He struck out 13 of the 15 batters he faced.

Sammy Hodges led the Aycock hitting with two.

PATERNO AWARDS

UNIVERSITY PARK, PA. (AP) — Coach Joe Paterno of the Penn State football team was disappointed in his dream of a national title last year when the Nittany Lions lost to Alabama, 14-7, in the Sugar Bowl.

But Paterno won a lot of other rewards. He was named Coach of the Year by the American Football Coaches Association, and by the Football Writers Association. Paterno was also voted the Joseph M. Sheehan Award by the New York Football Writers and Coach of the year in NCAA Division 1-A by ABC-TV and Chevrolet. Finally, Joe was named Coach of the Year by the Washington Touchdown Club.

U.S. Coastal Areas Vulnerable To Hurricanes

By KATHY MARTIN
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — It may be called Sam instead of Camille, but experts say if a major storm strikes vulnerable U.S. coastal areas during this year's Atlantic hurricane season, thousands of lives could be lost.

"If the right storm — or the wrong storm — occurs this summer in the right or wrong place, the loss of life could be greater than the 6,000 killed in Galveston" in 1900, says Dr. Neal Frank, director of the National Hurricane Center here.

The hurricane threat will hang over the Gulf and Atlantic coasts from June through November, when ocean temperatures rise enough to fuel the raging masses of wind and water.

The 1979 season marks the first time men's names — among them Bob, Sam, Henri and Juan — will alternate with the women's names traditionally applied to Atlantic storms. Male names were bestowed on Pacific storms last year.

The Galveston, Texas, hurricane has been called the worst natural disaster in U.S. history and Frank says population trends have set the stage for an even greater catastrophe.

"We've got a real people problem along the coastline today," he says.

Population grew more than three times faster along the seaboard than in the nation as a whole between 1960 and 1970, and that trend is continuing, according to John R. Hope, the center's senior hurricane specialist.

Frank and others agree the problem is not only the number but the nature of people.

"People just don't respect the devastation that can occur in a major hurricane," he says.

"Up until the time the damn things hit they're not interested. They could care less," said John Buchanan, disaster preparedness coordinator for South Florida.

"Once it hits, they scream like wounded apes," he said. "Six months later they're telling stories about what a great storm it was."

Another major worry for the officials is complacency among people who have been on the fringes of a hurricane and think they know what they're in for.

"They say 'I have survived,' but they really didn't experience the full wrath of the storm," said Wade Guice, civil defense director for Harrison County, Miss. His area has been hit by several hurricanes over the years and lost 132 lives to Camille in 1969.

"There was no excuse for losing any, but there were just some of our folks who couldn't believe that it would be worse than the '47 storm," he says.

Camille packed winds in excess of 155 mph and created a 24-foot storm surge — a massive dome of water that bulldozes ashore with the storm and is blamed for nine of every 10 hurricane deaths.

Camille killed 256 and destroyed $1.4 billion worth of property, primarily along the Mississippi and Louisiana Gulf coast.

"Had Camille hit New Orleans head on," says Guice, "It could easily have taken a quarter of a million lives."

New Orleans, Norfolk, Va., Galveston, the islands in Florida's Tampa Bay and the Florida Keys are among the areas Frank says are ripe for disaster because of dense population, low-lying land and uncertain escape routes.

Frank says he's worried too about coastal islands, including President Carter's vacation spot, Sea Island, Ga., that are undergoing rapid and costly development.

He calls them "places that could be literally swept away by a severe hurricane."

Frank and Hope say forecasting hurricanes is an imprecise business, in part because of the erratic nature of the storms.

"They're like gals," says Buchanan. "They have you going one way, dancing a tango, and the next thing you know you've bought the farm."

Once the hurricane center warns that a storm is expected to strike land, the job of clearing the potential path of destruction falls to local officials.

"We're very well prepared," says Buchanan, whose district includes the Florida Keys.

"I think the city is as ready as it ever was. We go through hurricane scares every year," says John Coward, New Orleans' acting deputy director of civil defense.

Guice says Mississippi's Harrison County is "the most hurricane-prepared community in the world and we're not prepared enough. I don't think a community can ever be prepared enough — not for a storm like Camille."

At the bottom line is the willingness of individuals to cooperate with evacuation efforts and other emergency measures.

"It's a very heavy weight you carry sometimes," Frank says.

"You try to get people to respond and you know if they could just take a simple action like getting in their car and getting out at the time you told them to do it, it might save their lives," he says.

"It's a very tragic experience to go along the coastline and see how many people are not going to respond."

Train Buff Is One-Man Crew

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Frank Pollock is the president of a railroad. He's also the chief engineer, the main mechanic, the oiler and the man who occasionally sweeps out the place.

He was 57 when he up and quit his job as a sewing-machine salesman and bought himself some trains and track. Real trains and track.

Pollock has five miles of used track, a diesel engine, a couple of coaches and a steam locomotive in his one-man Florida Central Railroad.

Pollock, now 65, bought the tracks, the diesel and two cars in Oklahoma in the early 1970s and operated a profitable freight run, serving 17 businesses along his short route.

Then he ran the now-defunct Orange Belt Line Railroad in Pasco County, ferrying tourists along the scenic passenger run.

Recently, he was polishing and tuning, getting ready for a trek from Tampa to Brooksville, Fla., to make his film debut for public television, which is doing a story about a couple traveling to Florida at the turn of the century.

Like most kids, Pollock was fascinated with trains. But for him the romance never ended. He says he even still has his first toy engine.

While he worked as a salesman he visited train buffs and railroad companies in the areas where his job took him.

"Every time I got a chance I'd visit the railroad installations," he says. "That's how I got my operating experience."

Eight years ago he decided to try to turn his railroading hobby into a serious venture.

He tried first to buy some idle track from Seaboard Coastline Railroad. But he says the company refused, saying he wasn't qualified enough to operate a train.

He kept hunting and gradually his search took him to Oklahoma.

Now, Seaboard is planning to sell nearly 200 miles of track within the next three or four years and he's going to try again.

He hopes to set up his own excursion line in West-Central Florida using his two coaches, one built in the 1920s and the other in the '30s, and his 1925 steam engine. The Tampa chapter of the National Railway Historical Society has a baggage car, built 60 years ago, which it is turning into a club car and snack bar for Pollock.

"What's the difference between men and boys?" asks Pollock with another smile. "The size and cost of their toys."

The Bernecrest

Porch Skirts Stately Traditional

By Jerry Bishop

Reminiscent of graceful homes of the past, the Bernecrest, a two story traditional, is fronted by a long porch, both decorative and functional, that serves to emphasize the space within.

In all, the design calls for four bedrooms, two and one half baths, formal and informal living areas, breezeway, double garage, and outdoor storage.

The facade is in keeping with traditional roots, right down to the shuttered windows and porch rails. Inside, the emphasis is on the contemporary amenities.

Entry foyer and hallway both move traffic and separate formal living areas from informal and service areas. Guests can hang their coats in the entry closet, then proceed to the living room at right. The living room and connecting formal dining room are charming and well-windowed and virtually free of cross-traffic. For convenience, a powder room edges the dining room.

Informal areas take in the sizable family room, a 10-ft. breakfast room, kitchen, and utility room. The family room, over 16 ft. in length, merits an outside entry and adjoins the kitchen/breakfast room at rear. Besides the U-shaped meal preparation area, this complex includes a pantry and sliding glass doors to the deck at rear.

Well-located next to the breezeway for double duty as a mud room, the utility room shows a built-in closet and space for laundry equipment. Outdoor storage borders the area.

Upstairs, four comfortably large bedrooms enjoy ample closet space. Two full baths are shown.

Decorating Needs Much Planning - Like A Trip

By BARBARA BASLER
AP Newsfeatures

According to one expert, decorating a house or apartment is a lot like planning a trip — if you do it right.

"When you plan a trip you don't begin by listing the restaurants you want to try. You begin by planning where you want to go and how much it will cost to get there," says architect and designer E. Lee Kennedy.

But too often, Kennedy says, the do-it-yourself decorator begins in the middle and doesn't like where he ends.

"He'll begin by spotting a terrific fabric and he'll take it home. Then he'll see a great-looking chair and buy it. That's piecemeal decorating," Kennedy says, "and in the end it usually produces disappointing results."

In fact, he says, piecemeal decorating often stops short of real decorating because you've spent all you can afford to spend, and your rooms still aren't finished.

Kennedy recently taught a course on budget decorating at the Parsons School of Design in New York. And while his course was aimed at apartment dwellers, his advice can help anyone who wants to achieve a pleasing decor on a limited budget.

For the do-it-yourself decorator, Kennedy recommends "planning the overall direction you want to go — the general style and feel and mood you want to achieve in each room."

Then sit down and decide just how much money you can afford to spend on your decorating project.

The next step is to decide how to budget your money to achieve the results you want. And, according to Kennedy, "For anyone on a limited budget, the trick is to put the money where it shows, and skimp where it doesn't show."

If you are decorating an entire house or apartment, Kennedy says to avoid spending in the kitchen and bathroom.

"Both these rooms can eat up a budget, and you will have very little to show for your investment," he warns. "Tile, for example, is very expensive, and kitchen cabinets can cost anywhere from $1,000 to $5,000."

And so, Kennedy says, the budget-minded should postpone major work in these rooms, and skimp. "Paint the old kitchen cabinets, and get a do-it-yourself tile-painting kit," he advises.

In a living room, den or bedroom, watch the walls, windows and lighting, he says. All of these can make important contributions to the look and feel of a room, and they can be spruced up inexpensively.

"Paint is one of the most cost-effective ways to decorate," the designer says. "Anyone can paint a room, and a paint job gives any room a new, fresh look instantly."

Windows, Kennedy says, are important because they give a room a finished look. So allow money for bamboo blinds, sheer curtains or some patterned fabric you can hem and use as curtains.

Because lighting fixtures can help set the tone of a room, Kennedy recommends replacing old, ugly fixtures with any of the new, inexpensive styles now available.

"You can install a new fixture yourself, and even a paper lantern fixture can be effective," he says.

Furniture, then, is your big budget decorating item, and Kennedy suggests a lopsided furniture budget that calls for investing most of your money in a few good, expensive pieces. "If you spread your furniture money equally among all pieces," he explains, "you wind up with a bargain-basement look."

Kennedy's advice is to "take your money and buy a good sofa and rug, or a fine coffee table and chairs, and mix these with some inexpensive pieces. That way, you're spending your money where it shows, and creating a room that will have some style and elegance."

In the bedroom, Kennedy says, the same spend-it-where-it-shows principle holds true." But in the bedroom, I would put most of my money in a good bedspread or quilt, and in curtains. These will do the most to enhance the other pieces in the room."

Play Ancient Instruments

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Back when violins were just street instruments, every family who could afford it had a chest of viols — the aristocratic instruments of their day.

"They were used for 500 years," explains Julea Stad Chapline, leader of the Philadelphia-based Society of Ancient Instruments.

"The modern instruments have only been used for the past 200 years."

The society, the oldest group of its kind in the world, is celebrating its 50th anniversary, and it's still almost all in the family.

Fascinated with older musical instruments, Mrs. Chapline's parents, Ben and Flora Stad, studied in Paris, learning how to play the viol d'amore and harpsichord.

Their son, Maurice, learned viola da gamba, as did Flora's brother, Josef Smit.

Meanwhile, Jo Brodo, godfather to several Stad children, took up a pardessus de viole, and together, these five dedicated musicians made up the original group, formed in 1929. Brodo and Smith were also longtime members of the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Even a small hole in a screen can be troublesome, especially during certain times of the year in certain areas.

Mosquitoes and other insects have an uncanny way of finding even the tiniest opening and communicating that information to others of their kind.

While it is possible to take an old piece of screening and attach it so that it covers the hole, it is much easier — and usually neater — to buy a ready-made patch in a hardware store. The patch won't be entirely invisible, but it won't be an eyesore and it definitely will prevent the entrance of unwelcome visitors.

If the hole is very small and you don't have a patch on hand, it can be covered effectively with a little adhesive, especially the household cement type. Merely spread it across the opening and allow it to dry without too much fussing around. If it's anywhere near eye level, it will be noticeable, but it's a quick solution in an emergency.

Should the repaired area be in some inconspicuous corner of the screen and you wish to let it remain, the cement will stay in place for a long time.

When a screen is in such bad shape that it needs replacement, the procedure is not as difficult as some persons imagine. The work can be done by anyone who merely observes how the screening was put in place originally. There are two things that should be known, however, to get a good result. One is that, when the mesh is held in place with a flexible spline material, usually rope-like plastic but sometimes rubber, the job becomes easier with the use of a small tool that has one or two wheels on it. Just tell the hardware dealer from whom you buy the mesh that you want the tool that sets the splining material in place.

The other thing you should know is a little trick for getting the new screening to fit tightly when splining is not used. Lay the frame on a sturdy flat surface. Place a board about one-inch thick under each end of the frame. Fasten clamps on the frame at the center.

You will know it is correct when both ends of the frame are slightly higher than the center. Now attach the mesh, using either staples or nails, preferably staples. There is no need to stretch the mesh, since it will become taut as soon as you remove the clamps. Trim the ragged edges and replace the moulding.

In buying screening, allow an extra inch or two on each side. Also, you probably will want to use the same kind of mesh that was there in the first place so that it will match the other windows and doors. If you aren't sure whether it is aluminum or fiberglass or whatever, take a piece of it with you to the hardware store.

(Do-it-yourselfers will get much help from Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

Sixty Years To Make Mosaics

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — There are more than 100 million chips of glass and marble in the mosaics which cover the walls, domes, arches and ceilings of much of the St. Louis Cathedral.

The mosaics took 60 years to complete and 26 different artists had a hand in designing them. They cover a total of about 70,000 square feet, an area equal to more than one and one-half acres.

The work includes 10 panels depicting the life of Louis IX of France, for whom the Catholic church is named.

Great Wealth Commonplace Among U.S. Senators

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Danforth has his millions in cereal and dog food, and John Heinz has his in soup, pickles and ketchup.

Bill Bradley still draws $122,000 a year from his old professional basketball team, the New York Knicks, and has extensive holdings in the municipal bond market.

Financial statements released Friday reveal 19 senators with assets above $1 million and 18 others with personal wealth that could total that much and more.

The fortunes run the gamut of American industry, from Danforth's holdings in Ralston-Purina to Heinz's share in the H.J. Heinz Co. to Lloyd Bentsen's extensive land holdings and stock portfolio to Nancy Kassebaum's holdings in broadcast properties.

The disclosures were made under a law requiring members of Congress, Cabinet members, U.S. Supreme Court justices and other high-ranking officials to reveal their assets and liabilities.

The forms do not pinpoint a senator's exact wealth but show a range of how small or large assets and liabilities could be.

Although the Senate has long been known as a rich man's club, not all its members are wealthy.

Sen. Donald Stewart, D-Ala., listed assets of $355,000 to $890,000, but said his liabilities are between $505,000 and $1.1 million. Sen. Spark Matsunaga, D-Hawaii, showed assets of $56,500 and liabilities of between $15,000 and $50,000.

Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., said he still owes Yale Law School $808 on a loan. He listed assets totaling $199,000 and liabilities of $150,000.

Heinz of Pennsylvania and Danforth of Missouri, both Republicans, appear close rivals for the title of richest man in the Senate.

Heinz listed his assets at between $11.2 million and $19.7 million, but said he had trust funds whose value he does not know.

Danforth said his assets total between $6.9 million and $17.2 million.

Danforth said he has no liabilities. Heinz listed liabilities of between $1.3 million and $2.8 million.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., listed assets of $1.3 million to $3 million, but he also has large holdings in blind trusts of unknown size.

Bradley, a freshman Democratic senator from New Jersey, listed assets between $1.1 million and $3.1 million.

Warner, a Virginia Republican, said his assets total between $5.8 million and $12.7 million, including a home valued up to $1 million in the fashionable Georgetown section of Washington.

Bentsen's wealth is largely in real estate, including three separate pieces of property in Texas, each valued at between $250,000 to $500,000, and a residence in Washington D.C. of equal value.

Ms. Kassebaum, elected to the Senate last fall from Kansas, listed assets of between $2.1 million and $4.3 million, with broadcast properties in excess of $1 million and mineral rights of between $250,000 and $500,000.

In 1935, Hitler renounced the Treaty of Versailles and ordered Germany's remilitarization.

SENATOR MAX BAUCUS, Democrat-Montana, hopes to become the first U.S. senator to finish a full marathon. The 37-year old senator has been in training since February. (AP Laserphoto)

Mental Health Program Airs

WNCT radio's "Mental Health Matters" will feature a discussion 1:06 p.m. Sunday on the Alcohol and Drug Education Program in Pitt County and Greenville City Schools. John Maye, instructor of the program, will explain his role in the prevention of drug and alcohol problems.

Maye's education as related to the Pitt County Mental Health Center will also be covered. In addition to class presentations, Maye offers individual and small group counseling at the request of school counselors or principals.

When it is determined that a student needs additional assistance with a drug or alcohol problem, a recommendation may be made to the school counselor that the student be referred to that center.

Mailbox Week

"Mailbox Improvement Week," will be observed May 21-26, and Greenville Postmaster H. Lloyd Mills urges all local customers to paint and repair unkempt or damaged mail receptacles, in town and on rural routes.

"Customers should be sure their boxes provide adequate protection to the mail and are easily reached by carriers to help speed collection and delivery of their mail," said Mills.

According to the local postmaster, a variety of approved commercial mailbox designs are available for use with decorative posts, and persons preferring customized ma mailboxes may check with the Greenville Post Office to insure that the boxes meet specifications and requirements.

In Iran, Men And Women Gather Separately

SEPARATION OF THE SEXES — would seem to be the custom in Iran, judging from these photographs of recent events. At left Kurdish rally participants listen to speeches supporting Palestinian causes. At right, thousands of Iranian women take part in a nationwide celebration of Women's Day Thursday on the grounds of Tehran University. The women are clad in Chadur, the traditional Islamic cover. Narita Airport Limps Along

By ANDREW HORVAT
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — One year after a heavily guarded opening ceremony, the bitterly-contested Narita International Airport still limps along on on a single runway without a planned fuel pipeline or efficient transportation to downtown Tokyo, 41 miles away.

Last May more than 20,000 demonstrators fighting to block the opening of the airport battled 13,000 police called in to protect the $2.5 billion airfield. Six persons have died, four of them policemen, in 12 years of pitched battles between airport opponents and police.

Opposition to the airport came from local farmers who were forced to sell some of the land to the government for airport construction, environmentalists opposed to the fuel pipeline and radicals taking advantage of the dispute to promote their anti-government crusade.

On the first anniversary Sunday of the start of service, Airport Authority representatives will hold yet another in a series of lectures intended to assure nearby residents that the jet fuel pipeline planned more than a decade ago is safe.

The lack of sufficient jet fuel effectively prevents the new airport from handling significantly more flights than the old Haneda Airport it replaced for international service. Airport authorities announced late last month that 6.4 percent more flights used Narita than Haneda on Tokyo Bay.

Meanwhile, the Japanese government is engaging in a diplomatic holding action with the nations of 33 carriers who had been promised landing rights once the new airport was opened.

But even if residents along the right of way agree to the jet fuel pipeline — most of which has been rerouted to run under a riverbed — there are still more than 100 farmers holding out on 17 plots of land scattered over an area intended for two additional runways.

Quick Zip And It's Named

WASHINGTON (AP) — Whitcomb L. Judson, a Chicago engineer, filed the first patent for a "slide fastener" in 1883, but it failed to capture the public's fancy mainly because it tended to catch on things or spring open at disquieting moments in alarming places.

It wasn't until 20 years later that the zipper became dependable when a Swede, Dr. Gideon Sundback, attached the matching metal locks to a flexible backing, according to IPO Inc., a non-profit public educational group dedicated to preserving the patent system as an incentive to innovation and creativity.

The name "Zipper" was coined in 1926 when Gilbert Frankau, a novelist, is reported to have exclaimed at a promotion luncheon "Zip! It's closed! Zip! It's open!" But it was Schiaparelli in 1930 who decided that the zipper was proper and fashionable for women's clothing, reports IPO.

Check Cars For Safety

NEW YORK (AP) — While the outside of your car may look fit enough for all the hazards of the road, that doesn't mean the inside is, warns Joseph W. James, who spent 20 years as an engineer with a major automobile manufacturer.

He suggests a five-minute internal check. First, sit in the driver's seat and make sure it's adjusted to your normal driving position, says James, now president of National Car Rental System. Take a look around for any cracks in the windshield or anything blocking your vision. Adjust your rear-view and side-view mirrors.

Next, check the seat belts. Do they fit properly? The seat-belt retractor should take up the slack in the belt. Look for possible frayed spots the belt might have developed from catching on a door or seat back — a weak spot on a seat belt could fail in an accident.

Turn the ignition switch on, but don't start the car. Grab the steering wheel with both hands and turn the wheel left and right gently. There should be very little free "play" in the wheel.

With the ignition still on, all warning lights should be on. Look at the dashboard and make sure all the instruments and warning lights are working.

Now start the car. Check to see if the warning lights go out once the car is started. With the possible exception of the seat-belt warning, which will stay on if the seat belts aren't fastened, they should.

Make sure the car is in park and the parking brake is on. Now step on the brake pedal firmly. It should go down about half-way and stop. If it feels spongy or continues to go down to the floor, have the brakes checked at once.

Wants Vietnam Veterans To Get More Respect

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Americans must separate "the war from the warrior," and give Vietnam veterans the respect they deserve, the head of the Veterans Administration says.

Max Cleland, administrator of veterans affairs who lost two legs and an arm in Vietnam, praised Chattanooga's huge Armed Forces Day celebration and parade. He said such demonstrations are badly needed to show support and respect for veterans and military men at a time of flagging patriotic fervor.

"They need to have some respect for what they gave to this nation," Cleland told a news conference prior to a noon banquet Friday at which he was featured speaker. "The public has had a hard time separating their bad feeling for the war from the men who fought there."

He described Vietnam veterans as "young men and women who kept their faith while all about them were losing it."

Cleland, at 36 the youngest man to head the VA, said he hoped a number of recent highly publicized books and movies on Vietnam veterans "signals a desire by the American public to take a fresh look at those who served in that war."

In his speech, he plugged "Vietnam Veterans Week" which will be observed this year for the first time.

"This will be a one-time opportunity for the people of the United States to put aside their conviction about the war itself and pay tribute to the people who were called upon to fight it," he said.

"The veterans of the Vietnam War never had a tickertape parade. They were not often considered heroes. In fact, by many they were considered coconspirators in some terrible escapade. No wonder today they are 'silent' veterans, usually neither visible nor willing to openly discuss the war. No wonder so many of them feel confused, even guilty."

Cleland said President Carter's administration is pushing for legislation to establish comprehensive readjustment counseling for Vietnam veterans and their families.

A presidentially ordered study of Vietnam veterans, he said, "tells a tale of two veterans."

The majority, he said, returned from service to become well adjusted, productive members of society. The rest, he said, have continuing readjustment problems.

"A larger number of severely wounded veterans survived Vietnam, and the rehabilitation problems were unprecedented," Cleland said. "But the psychological impact posed the greatest problem. The frustrating nature of jungle warfare, the trauma of combat, the fast pace of change in the America they returned to — all took their toll on those who served.

"Severe depression, alcohol and drug dependence and other forms of social inadaptability are the symptoms of continuing, complex emotional problems."

Lighthouse Preservation Measures

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt called Friday for the preservation of the Cape Lookout Lighthouse, which is in danger of falling into the water because of erosion.

However, Hunt stopped short of endorsing multi-million dollar erosion-control measures that have been considered by the federal government.

Hunt, in a letter to the National Parks Service, said state agencies were committed to action to prevent the loss of the 120-year-old lighthouse.

But he said he was "not necessarily recommending the expenditure of additional tax dollars" to control erosion at the site.

Miss Manning, Mr. McNeal Speak Vows

ASHEVILLE — Miss Jenny Susan Manning and James Bruce McNeal were united in marriage Saturday at 7:00 p.m. in the First Christian Church here. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Manning Jr. of Greenville and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Bruce McNeal of Asheville.

The Rev. Jack Daniell, pastor of the bridegroom, officiated at the double ring, candlelight ceremony. A program of wedding music was rendered by Corey Sims, organist, Doug Edward, Phil Cocke and John McNeal, guitarists.

The church was decorated with an arrangement of white gladioli, fuji mums, daisies and baby's breath flanked by cathedral candelabra. Spiral candelabra were placed on either side of the altar and a background of palms completed the setting. A prie-dieu was placed in front of the communion table.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white matte jersey fashioned with a wedding band neckline and front vent with bishop sleeves. The shirred waist featured a cummerbund and the A-line skirt fell into a chapel length train. Her fingertip length mantilla veil, with a border of re-embroidered alencon lace, was fashioned to a lace covered cap. She carried a cascade of white gladioli, daisies and baby's breath with yellow statice and greenery.

Miss Faye Manning of Greenville, sister of the bride, was honor attendant. She wore a two-piece formal gown of seafoam green embroidered eyelet. The loose fitting top gathered into a shaped neckline band with a self-bow trim. The dirndl skirt ended in a scalloped hemline ruffle. She carried a bouquet of violets and daisies with greenery streamers.

Bridesmaids included Miss Dianne Manning, sister of the bride, Miss Claudia Manning and Miss Amanda Manning, cousins of the bride, all of Greenville, and Miss Jennifer McNeal of Asheville, sister of the bridegroom. Their dresses were identical to that of the honor attendant in sky blue and daffodil yellow. They carried identical flowers.

The bridegroom's father was best man and ushers included John McNeal, brother of the bridegroom, of Texas Christian University, Tommy Manning of Greenville, brother of the bride, Brad Rutledge of Statesville, and Tom Zenker of Asheville.

The bride's mother wore a formal gown of mauve pink qiana and the mother of the bridegroom selected a formal gown of blue. The bride's grandmother, Mrs. J. T. Manning Sr. of Greenville, and Mrs. Myrtle Williams of Elizabethton, Tenn., grandmother of the bridegroom, and mothers wore white gamalia corsages.

Miss Katherine Lowery of Trenton, aunt of the bride, presided at the guest register and Mrs. Jack Daniell of Asheville directed the ceremony.

The bride graduated from Rose High School, Greenville, and the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. She attended the University of Colorado at Boulder for graduate study and is on the teaching staff of Asheville High School. The bridegroom is a graduate of Asheville High School and Appalachian State University. He teaches at Randolph Elementary School.

Following the ceremony, the bride's parents entertained at a reception held in the fellowship hall of the church. Mr. and Mrs. Robert McNeal of Fairfax, Va., and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Taylor Sr. of Kinston greeted guests.

The bridal and cake tables were covered with handmade embroidered cutwork cloths with scalloped embroidered edges. An arrangement of snapdragons, daisies and baby's breath flanked by burning tapers centered the table.

After the couple cut the traditional first slice of the wedding cake, it was served by Mrs. Sandy Newlin of Reidsville and Mrs. Kay Davis of Kinston. Mrs. Marsha Holmes of Madison and Mrs. Brenda Taylor of Kinston poured punch. Assisting in serving were Miss Verna Belle Lowery of Trenton, Mrs. Waddell Manning of Greenville, Mrs. R. C. May Jr. of Raleigh, Mrs. Adron Skinner of Trenton and Mrs. Keith Williams of Kinston.

The marriage of Eleanor Catherine Barrett and Edward Earl Holland Jr. was solemnized Saturday afternoon at two o'clock in Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church. The double ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. James Bailey.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Edward Earl Holland Sr. and Mr. and Mrs. Barney Hayes Barrett, all of Greenville.

A program of organ music was presented by Mickey Terry, organist, and Mrs. L. Todd Pair sang "The Wedding Song," "In His Care" and "The Wedding Prayer."

The bride was given in marriage by her father and her maid of honor was Cynthia Anderson of Greenville. Bridesmaids included Miss Cheryl Riggs and Miss Tina Holland of Greenville, cousin of the bridegroom, Miss Marianne Vick of Albemarle, Mrs. Barney H. Barrett III of Ayden, sister-in-law of the bride, Miss Aylce Eskridge and Miss Carolyn Eskridge of Raleigh, cousins of the bride.

Joseph Scheipers of Charlotte served as best man. Ushers were Kim Tavasso, Greg Holland, cousin of the bridegroom, Peter West Jr., William Barrett, all of Greenville, and Barney H. Barrett III of Ayden, both brothers of the bride, and Kenneth Heverly of Emerald Isle.

The bride wore a gown of white satin fashioned with a scooped neckline, fitted empire bodice and long fitted sleeves. The neckline was framed with a scalloped border of pearled alencon lace, extending down the bodice to enhance the waistline. The sleeves of English net, with alencon lace applique, tapered to calla points at the wrist with a closing of traditional bridal buttons. The full A-line skirt draped floor length with an applique of pearled lace across the front and a border of lace at the hemlime that flowed into a full chapel train.

Her chapel length veil of white illusion was bordered in an applique of alencon lace to the fingertips. She carried a colonial bouquet of yellow roses, white daisies and gypsophilia accented with ivy.

The attendants wore formal length gowns of maize yellow chiffon designed with a portrait neckline. The blouson bodice featured short split sleeves with the waistline encircled with a rope-tie sash from which fell the full flared skirt. Each carried a colonial bouquet of white daisies, yellow miniature carnations, accented with ivy and gypsophilia tied with yellow satin ribbons.

The mother of the bride wore a light blue chiffon formal length gown with long flowing sleeves. The mother of the bridegroom selected a carnation pink crepe full length dress with a boat neckline and long full sleeves. Both mothers wore a white orchid corsage.

A garden reception was held following the wedding at the home of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Beeler Eskridge of Raleigh, aunt and uncle of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Hamil Carey of Loudon, Tenn., cousins of the bride, assisted.

A champagne brunch was held in honor of the couple at the Ramada Inn Saturday morning given by friends of the bridegroom.

Couple Honored On Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Ward of Greenville were honored Sunday at a 40th wedding anniversary reception given by their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. James Earl Ward of Macon.

Red Sweetheart roses and white baby carnations were used in decorating. Miss Connie Briley of Stokes poured punch and Mrs. Gene Harris of Greenville cut the cake. Both are nieces of Mrs. Ward.

Mr. and Mrs. Ward were married May 10, 1939.

Miss Robin Moore Weds John S. Smith

The marriage of Robin Blanche Moore and John Sheldon Smith was solemnized Saturday afternoon at three o'clock in the Immanuel Baptist Church. The Rev. Gene Adams and the Rev. Alley Laymon of Wilmington, uncle of the bridegroom, performed the double ring ceremony.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Gibbs Moore of Greenville, the bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore her mother's original formal length wedding gown of ivory slipper satin fashioned with a high rolled neckline with satin piping. The bodice was styled with a sheer yoke of imported English net outlined in ruffled imported French chantilly lace. Self-fabric covered buttons extended from the neckline past the waistline at center back closure, and the long fitted sleeves were finished at the cuff with calla points and covered button closure. The gathered skirt was enhanced by draped flounces trimmed at the hemline with French chantilly lace that extended around the chapel length train. An underskirt repeated the matching lace trim.

She wore a fingertip length veil edged in French chantilly lace held in place by a semi Juliet cap overlaid in matching lace. She carried a semi-cascade formal bouquet of Jappett white orchids, sonia roses and sprays of English ivy tied with ivory satin.

A program of wedding music was presented by Anita Bowman, organist; Ivey Heath, soloist, uncle of the bride; and Mary Jo White, flutist.

The maid of honor was Elizabeth Moore of Greenville, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Lisa Heath of Fayetteville, cousin of the bride Sandi Smith of Apex, sister of the bridegroom, Molly Ferrell of Winston-Salem, Susan Summerell of Fayetteville and Kim Vick and Jackie Robinson of Greenville.

Honorary bridesmaids were Dana Crabtree of Raleigh, Mitzi Walker of Rowland and Deborah Lambeth of Greenville.

The bridegroom's father served as best man and ushers were Alan Smith of Apex, brother of the bridegroom; Johnston Laymon of Wilmington, cousin of the bridegroom; Brad Tunell and George Sevier of Cary, George Moore of Edenton and Greg Giblin of Charlotte.

The bridesmaids wore formal length gowns of nectarine silesta designed with a draped cowl neckline with the empire bodice extending to open split short sleeves. The waistline was styled with an attached narrow sash from which extended long self-fabric ties. The skirt was designed with a flared styling. The bridesmaids carried natural woven fireside baskets with sonia roses, miniature carnations and daisies tied with sonia satin bows with long streamers.

The mother of the bride carried an orchid corsage and the mother of the bridegroom carried a white orchid. Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Stairs, grandmothers of the bridegroom, were given white orchid corsages.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall which was decorated with spring flowers and greenery. The refreshment table was centered with an arrangement designed in a silver candelabra with snapdragons, sonia roses, miniature carnations and baby's breath. The cloth was semi-garlanded with springerii fern, and on the bride's table was a decorated tiered wedding cake.

The couple will live in Apex after a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, S.C.

The bride is a graduate of Peace College and is presently a senior at Meredith College. The bridegroom is a senior at North Carolina State University where he is a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity.

A wedding breakfast was held Saturday morning at the Ramada Inn given by relatives and friends of the bridal couple.

Miss Tolbert, Mr. Lupton Wed

HENDERSON — The Church of the Holy Innocents was the scene of the Saturday, 1 p.m., wedding ceremony uniting Miss Tracy Lee Tolbert of Raleigh and Carlyle Lorain Lupton Jr. of Greenville. The Rev. John W. B. Davis performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of the late John Ray Tolbert and Mrs. Grady Tyler Tharrington. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Carlyle Lorain Lupton of Greenville.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, John Bowie Tolbert, wore a formal white chiffon gown with a modified high neckline and opening, featuring a fitted bodice, trimmed in lace and dotted with pearls. The bishop sleeves featured English knit wrists of Venise lace. The dress was accented by a watteau chapel train. The bride wore a cathedral length veil of imported English illusion with an embroidered daisy pattern, flowing from a lace-covered Juliet headpiece. She carried a spring bouquet of daisies, yellow roses and pastel flowers.

Honor attendant was Miss Hunter Davis of Aspen, Colo. She wore a pastel yellow gown, with empire waist and cap sleeves. She carried an arrangement of daisies and pastel flowers.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Barbara McKinley of Batesville, Va., sister of the bride, Miss Heidi Ward of Washington, and Mrs. Holly Lupton of Greenville, sister-in-law of the bridegroom. They wore dresses identical to the honor attendant's and caried daisies with pastel floweres.

Miss Margaretta Frazier of Henderson, flower girl, carried a spring bouquet of daisies and pastel flowers.

The father of the bridegroom served as his son's best man. Ushers included Brian Williamson of Proctorville, Ohio, Leon Lupton of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, and Bobby Thomas of Greenville. Ring bearer was L. G. Frazier III of Henderson.

A reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Frazier Jr. of Henderson. The bride's table featured an arrangement of pastel early summer flowers.

Following a trip to the Virgin Islands, the couple will reside in Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of Ashley Hall, Charleston, S. C., and attended Sullins College, Bristol, Va.; the American Academy of Dramatics, New York City; and Hardbarger Business College, Raleigh. She was formerly employed by the "Raleigh Spectator" as a sales representative. The bridegroom, a graduate of East Carolina University, is employed by C. L. Lupton Co., of Greenville.

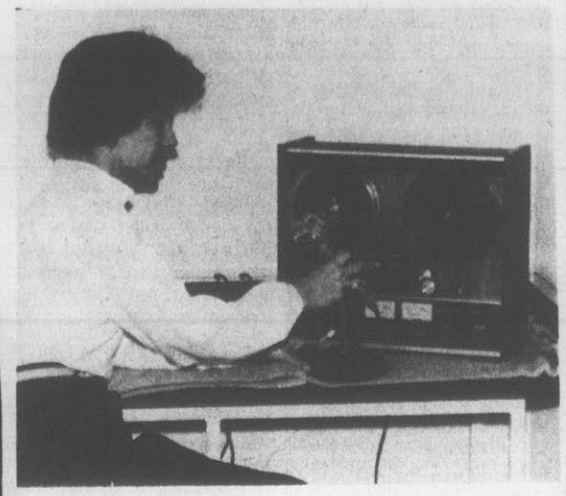
On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

"Though much time, effort, concentration and perseverance go into volunteer narrating, there are rewards," said Nancy Harrington who is recruiting persons to do taping for blind and handicapped persons.

"The narrator can take pride in knowing he has done a worthwhile job well. Also, knowing one has enriched the lives of millions of handicapped persons who have a limited access to the reading world is self-satisfying to the volunteer and gratifying to the reader," she added. Mrs. Harrington is coordinator of Volunteer Greenville.

After the initial interview with Mrs. Harrington, the potential reader auditions for the program. The three to five minute tape has to include narrative and dialogue. The audition tape is sent to the North Carolina Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped, Raleigh. Here the audition is reviewed by specialists and accepted or rejected. The reader is given three opportunities to pass an audition. The results are sent directly to the volunteer.



TAPING MACHINE. . .is readied by Nancy Harrington.

"Most of the books the state library is trying to get taped are those written by North Carolina authors and books about the Tar Heel state. The recorded books are available to blind and physically handicapped persons throughout the state," Mrs. Harrington pointed out.

She works with the state library and the taping equipment here and technical assistance are provided by the state facility.

A beginning narrator is given either a historical pamphlet, juvenile title; low-vocabulary, high-interest title; or other short pieces to read. Once the narrator has established himself as a narrator who reads well and can handle his machine properly, he is given more difficult material according to his various interests and reading capabilities. "Most people are slightly shocked the first time they hear their voice on a tape recording," continued Mrs. Harrington.

Here in Greenville, Mrs. Harrington is seeking persons interested in becoming readers. Her Volunteer Greenville office is located in the new Recreation and Parks Administrative Building. Volunteer Greenville is a city program for recruitment and referrals in almost any area of need.

Children Feel 'Disgraced'

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: After 51 years of marriage, our father has left our mother! They've had their fights over the years but we never thought it would come to this.

Now that this has come out, everybody is saying they knew about dad and this nurse all along. Dad is 79 and mother is 77. Mother is so humiliated that she hasn't been out of the house since dad left.

What do you think of this mess? How can we get dad to come to his senses and come back to mother? It's the talk of the town.

DISGRACED IN LONG ISLAND

DEAR DISGRACED: Stay out of it. And you needn't feel "disgraced." A person can disgrace only himself.

DEAR ABBY: Do all marriages go stale after 25 years? Ours has. My husband and I don't seem to have much to talk to each other about anymore. We used to talk about our kids, but now that they're grown and gone, we're out of conversation.

I have no major complaints, Abby, but the old excitement is gone. We watch a lot of television and read, and we do have friends, but when we're alone together it's dull. We even sleep in separate bedrooms now.

Is there some way to recapture that old magic? I don't expect him to chase me around the bedroom like he did 20 years ago, but we're much too young for rocking chairs.

We still love each other, but . . .

THE SONG HAS ENDED

DEAR SONG: I highly recommend MARRIAGE ENCOUNTER. It's a weekend course in how to revitalize a ho-hum marriage. It first came to my attention when several enthusiastic readers (some married over 40 years!) wrote to tell me that the experience had improved their marriages enormously!

I checked it out and found it to be a legitimate, church-sponsored program. Nothing kinky or far out. For more information, inquire at your church or synagogue.

DEAR ABBY: Among my acquaintances is a 66-year-old widow who has suddenly announced that a "distant cousin" has come from Canada to live with her.

She claims he is her age (he looks much younger) and recently lost his wife.

This friend says she feels much more secure with a man in the house. She owns her own home, they drive her car, and all he seems to do is drive her around and help with the household chores. She claims they share expenses, but I heard from a reliable source that her bills are still paid by HER personal check.

Her home has only two bedrooms. One she had converted into a sewing room. After her "cousin" moved in, I noticed that the sewing room is still a sewing room, which means they both share her bedroom.

When people ask if they have plans for marriage, she laughs and says, "We are cousins!"

What do you make of this setup?

FRIENDLY NEIGHBOR

DEAR NEIGHBOR: I think every 66-year-old widow should be so lucky. Now, what's YOUR problem?

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I live in a very respectable neighborhood and, although our children are still toddlers, we are deeply concerned about the rise of juvenile delinquency among younsters from "better" homes.

All around us, minors—some as young as 10—have been convicted of violent crimes. They include armed robbery, beating up the elderly and handicapped, knifing and even rape.

Abby, these kids have never known hunger, poverty or discrimination. They come from respectable homes and have gone to the best schools. Yet more and more children from the so-called privileged class are turning to crime and violence.

Why?

CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED: Basically, it's lack of discipline. (Discipline, meaning "to teach"—not necessarily "to punish.")

For a better understanding of this growing social problem, get the May issue of PARENTS' magazine and read "Bad Kids," by Lori N. Andrews, a Chicago lawyer. It will open your eyes!

She says, "Unfortunately, only after a child has committed a violent crime are the roots of his behavior explored. A peek inside the middle-class home will reveal a child who lives with two adults—but has no real parents."

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I love the story about the Burbank appliance dealer who was having a tough time getting rid of discarded appliances. He kept putting them in the alley but there wasn't a service organization or a city truck in the world that would pick them up.

Finally, he got a brainstorm. He marked a price on them and by the end of the day they were all stolen.

Sometimes, when you can't beat the system, you just have to work within its confines. I found that out long ago with children. The only way we could get one of the kids to wash and wax the car was to let him have it for a date.

To get the lawn mowed, we invested in a riding mower. They killed one another for the chance to cut the grass. When my daughter's bedroom became a fire hazard, all I had to do was say, "Why don't you have a slumber party?" Within hours, she had brought it up to health standards.

It was sneaky, but I used to move leftovers by putting a note on them saying, "DO NOT TOUCH. THIS IS FOR THE PARTY."

The other day I was at the phone when I noted a message scribbled in my husband's handwriting: "Carpers 6 p.m. dinner, Wednesday."

I remembered the Carpers. Her first name was either Bambi, Popah, Cupcake, Sleepy, Happy, Sneezy — or one of the dwarfs. I couldn't remember which. I was at her house once and felt like a fool when I ate a strawberry in a small dish in her bathroom and it was soap.

Well, I wasn't going to be caught with my decor down when they came to dinner. I set about replacing light bulbs in every room in the house, bought live plants where before there had been death and brownness. Cleared off the countertop. Took the ironing board down, bought a set of matching glasses and took all the empty shampoo bottles out of the shower.

I brought in the sled from the porch, scratched a "THIS HOUSE IS BEING PATROLLED BY A TWO-YEAR-OLD" decal off my kitchen window and took a manger scene out of the bookcase.

My husband looked around and said, "I forgot to tell you. We're invited to the Carpers' for dinner Wednesday."

I had been beaten at my own game.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be able to solve problems of all kinds and should have the education bent along troubleshooting lines. Teach to be objective for best results and to avoid a martyr complex.

Among Finalists In Journalism Event

SAN FRANCISCO — The son of a Greenville couple received a $500 scholarship award here as a finalist in the William Randolph Hearst Foundation's Journalism Awards Program.

Don Franklin Schlienz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Schlienz, was presented the scholarship award and a bronze medallion as one of eight finalist in the program, which is held in cooperation with the American Association of Schools and Departments of Journalism.

Schlienz, competing from California State University of Fresno, qualified for the finals by receiving two scholarships during the scholastic year in monthly competition. He received $400 for a fourth place award and $300 for a fifth place citation during the earlier competition.

In reaching the final eight, Schlienz competed with students from 72 colleges and universities throughout the country for the journalism awards. Matching grants are made to journalism schools of the awards recipients.

California State University at Fresno finished third in the 1979 Intercollegiate Writing Competition, based on the number of judging points awarded to each school.

A graduate of Rose High School, Schlienz served three years in the Navy before resuming his formal education at San Diego City College and California State University at Fresno.

Cold Air Used To Heat Homes

YORK, Pa. (UPI) — They're using cold air to heat homes.

It's done with heat pumps that extract heat from below-freezing air. The process, which has been in use to cut heating bills for large industrial and commercial buildings now is available for homes in compact computer-controlled models which can save up to one-third electric home heating costs, according to Borg-Warner the pump manufacturer.

Skilled Workers Wanted; Thousands Of Jobs Open

By PETER M. ZOLLMAN
United Press International

A beefy, leathered man in a white hardhat stands next to a welder, stares into the television camera and shouts: "If you're a shipbuilder who's damned good at your job and proud of it, I'd like to talk to you!"

Just like the Marines, who always are looking for "a few good men," Louisiana shipbuilders and dozens of other companies around the country in a wide range of businesses have thousands of jobs begging to be filled.

Skilled workers are in great demand.

"The supply of skilled workers is likely to remain tight through most of 1979," according to the economic newsletter of Chicago's Continental Bank which made the prediction despite a forecast that the overall rate of unemployment "could go up somewhat in the rest of this year."

Shipbuilders, legal secretaries, engineers, aerospace workers, bricklayers, nurses, machinists, mechanics, bricklayers, even "poultry eviscerators;" somewhere in the country there is an acute shortage of these and other workers.

The problem is so bad that companies import employees with particular skills from overseas. And at least one company decided to locate a plant overseas because it could not find enough trained employees in the United States.

Take the case of Halter Marine Services, Inc., which runs the television commercial seeking shipbuilders. The commercial touts Halter's high pay and benefits and offers a toll-free number for potential employees to call.

Halter began running the commercial, and others, after it couldn't find enough workers to keep its shipyard in Pierre Part, La., going.

"Everybody says there's 6 percent, 7 percent unemployment. But those people don't have the skills to fill the jobs," said Leonard Morgan, Halter personnel director.

"It's a 'Catch 22.' They're unemployed, we have jobs and we should be able to fill those jobs with those people. I wish it was that simple," Morgan said. "The problem is those people aren't qualified. They need training."

Centronics Data Computer Corp. in Hudson, N.H., employs 2,000 people and has 125 vacant jobs in another field where job shortages abound — computer technicians and programmers. It decided to build a plant employing 1,000 people in Ireland because it couldn't find enough workers in New Hampshire.

"New Hampshire is just about pumped dry for people, especially in the southern part of the state," said Richard Leven, Centronics industrial relations director.

Coleman Co., a sporting goods manufacturer, is located in Wichita, Kan., one of the tightest labor markets in the country. Coleman recently decided to build an $8 million canoe and plastic goods factory in New Braunfels, Texas, because it could not keep workers in its Kansas plants from leaving for better-paying jobs in Wichita's aircraft industry.

In the Pacific Northwest, tool and die makers are in such short supply that one company asked the Washington State Employment Service for permission to import a worker from Norway. Another firm requested 12 bricklayers from Canada.

The shortage of skilled workers has become so critical in some areas that state officials are curtailing efforts to lure industries to relocate in their area.

"Anybody who wanted to locate a manufacturing establishment here now should have his head examined," said James J. Archey of the Southern New Hampshire Association of Commerce and Industry.

Seymour Colman of Beech Aircraft in Wichita said Kansas aircraft companies will need 14,000 new employees within five years. But he, too, suggested his state stop trying to attract new industry.

"It is almost un-American to say to outside industry that we don't want them in our state," he told a meeting of Kansas economists. "But all we're saying is we ought to take care of the industries we already have rather than dilute the already minuscule labor force."

The shortages have caused some unusual variations in advertising.

Hughes Aircraft Co. in Los Angeles hired an airplane to fly over crowded beaches last Memorial Day towing a banner that said: "Hughes Needs Engineers." Company officials said later the idea failed to help recruitment.

But another aerospace manufacturer, Northrop Corp., had success running TV commercials and radio spots for engineers during the World Series.

Halter Marine's toll-free number and television commercials are backed by large display ads in newspaper sports sections, listing the types of jobs available and the pay.

Perhaps the most bizarre recruiting effort came in Wichita, where the Chamber of Commerce estimates 1,500 openings are available for skilled workers.

KLEO Radio disc jockey Ken Clifford sat in a Beech Bonanza A-36 parked downtown for more than 80 hours last November, urging listeners to call the station or the chamber with names of skilled people who might want to relocate.

More than 500 names were collected. Each person was sent an information packet by the chamber and a letter from Mayor Connie Peters advising them of current job openings.

"Local employers expect 10,000 new jobs by year-end 1980," she wrote.

Sometimes recruiters work against their own company — such as the Boeing Co., which needs machinists and engineers at its Wichita plant. It also needs them in Seattle, along with computer specialists, design engineers and tool and die makers.

Wichita runs one recruiting campaign; Seattle, another.

Raids on other companies for skilled employees are common, though few firms admit them.

Companies occasionally offer bonuses, either to the new employee directly or as finder's fees for the person who recommends a new employee. Other times, companies offer whopping relocation payments to lure new workers.

Solar Turbines International, a turbine engine manufacturer in San Diego, offered $500 to any of its employees who recommended a new machine operator. Only two people responded.

Northrop Corp. in Los Angeles has a similar program, with bonuses ranging from $100 to $1,000.

Warm climates, fringe benefits and other intangibles play a big part in some recruiting drives.

Judy Flachsbart, a nursing recruiter for Huntington Memorial Hospital in Pasadena, Calif., flew to Chicago in the middle of a bitter cold winter. She interviewed 70 job prospects after her hospital took out an advertisement in a Chicago newspaper. The ad showed a rose and said simply: "In Pasadena, roses bloom year-round."

Rockwell International tried instead to appeal to the pride and imagination of job prospects.

"What aerospace work could be more prestigious than design and development of spaceships for the world's first reusable space transportation system?" one Rockwell ad said. "Rockwell's space systems group is making a name for itself. We invite you to do likewise."

But the shortages have done little to increase pay scales.

"You can outbid someone else — but this is not a good way because it's liable to come back and bite you," said Dave Franson of Cessna Aircraft Co. in Wichita, which is the No. 1 employer in Kansas with a payroll of more than 14,000.

"The other (way to recruit) is to hire people who want to work and train them for the skills you need," Franson said. "That's what we've been doing."

Other companies echoed Franson's remarks. Bidding wars are clearly unpopular.

"Even if you raise wages, the shortage is still there," said Louis M. Whitney, a personnel official with the General Dynamics Convair division in San Diego.

Businesses also hesitate to operate expensive training programs.

One reason is turnover, particularly in fields where openings are plentiful.

Beech Aircraft Corp. in Wichita hired 2,800 new employees last year and trained 4,000 in its own education programs, but finished with a net gain of only 800 employees.

Ingalls Shipyards in Pascagoula, Miss., was another company that had trouble with a training program.

"In four years, we spent about $5 million on entry-level training for thousands of unskilled and under-skilled people in order to meet our manpower requirements," said Jerry St. Pe, vice president of industrial relations.

Then the bottom dropped out in defense spending on ships. Ingalls laid off more than 6,000 employees in 18 months and expects to lay off another 6,000.

Avondale Shipyards Inc., Louisiana's No. 1 private employer with about 16,000 employees statewide, spent $1.5 million last year to operate its vocational school.

"We have almost tripled our training capability," said Avondale personnel administrator John Chantrey. "The name of the game is retention. Once you get them — once you invest a certain amount of training in them — you want to keep them."

Reducing standards in hiring new employees is one way companies cope with the shortages. Another is through liberal use of overtime, which acts as a form of pay increase. Some companies allow longer time lags than they once did between the time a job opens up and it is filled.

If more skilled workers were hired, more unskilled and semi-skilled workers would be, too. Take, for example, the aircraft industry.

"Any time you put skilled aircraft workers on the job, you need support personnel," said Tony Cantafio of Northrop Corp. "It spills over into the community, too.

"For example, there's a need near us for service station people and people who work in department stores. It's a multiplier effect."

Aerospace executives say shortages of skilled workers have not disrupted production. Lead time built into planning schedules and production contracts compensates for the shortages.

A Lot Of People Seek Profit In Sale Of One Calf

By TENA ANDERSEN
Associated Press Writer

CHAMBERLAIN, S.D. (AP) — Half a dozen people will try to make a profit on a baby calf in its 18-month life, from birth to the supermarket meat counter.

A full-grown steer provides meat and by-products valued at about $1,150, out of which must come the costs of feeding, transporting and processing it — along with hoped-for profit at each step.

The president of one large meat packing company claims he is losing money on beef, and supermarkets say they are only breaking even on it.

But these are prosperous days for the rancher.

"I would not apologize for the price of meat," said Bob Healey, a Chamberlain rancher. "Cattle are just getting to the level where they should be. Ranchers have to have profit incentive or we'll just say to hell with it."

Many ranchers called it quits five years ago when prices were low. Drought in the next three years decimated feed supplies and more ranchers sold off their herds. The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates beef supplies will be far below demand for at least two years.

But ranchers make the most money these days on a calf, investing about $360 until the day it leaves its mother's side. At prices earlier this week, they stand to make about $80 a head at that stage.

Here are Healy's costs to raise one weaned calf: Yearly taxes, interest and depreciation on one cow, $99.52; feed, $193.00; breeding and veterinary services $22.00; marketing and transportation $10.00; buildings and equipment, $10.95; and $25 for his labor at $5 an hour for a total of $360.47.

"I'd need 81 cents a pound for a 440-pound calf to break even — figuring a 100 percent calf crop. And you can't count on every cow having a calf or all of them living," he said. On Monday, calves sold for about $1 a pound.

Healey's calf sells for $440 to another rancher called a backgrounder, who spends $80 to raise the animal to 650 pounds. And he can sell it to a feedlot for $559, turning a $39 profit.

The feeder spends $147 fattening the steer to 1,000-pound market weight and sells it for about $715, making $9 a head.

Jim Woster of the Sioux Falls Stockyards, the nation's third-largest livestock market, said the high beef demand is profitable for the rancher but low supply hurts the processor.

"Feeders want to point the finger at the packer and say, 'Boy!, they're really raking it in,'" Woster said. "But really, they're losing money on cattle kills to the point that some of them are closing down."

John Morrell and Co., one of the five largest meat packers in the nation, has no plans to close down. But its president, Donald Slotkin, said the cattle operation is losing money.

"The farmer is making a lot of money on his cattle right now with low prices for feed grain and record high prices for cattle. But at the time we need the cattle the most to meet consumer demand, they're holding cattle back for breeding," Slotkin said.

Morrell's kills cattle at 10 of its 17 plants nationwide with the slaughter rate down 60 percent in recent weeks.

"We don't project ourselves as a friend of the farmer or of the consumer. We don't like to see these high prices either. It gets to the point where people won't buy beef anymore," Slotkin said.

On Monday, Morrell's could buy Healey's 1,000-pound steer in Sioux Falls for $715. Only about 600 pounds of edible meat is left after slaughter and that sells wholesale for about $1.12 a pound or $672.

Morrell's also sells the waste products — blood, bone, hide, organs — for about $113 for each 1,000-pound animal.

That leaves the packer a slim $70 to pay for labor and equipment and to turn a profit.

Transportation increases the cost to $1.14 a pound by the time the 600-pound carcass reaches a Midwestern grocery store. It costs another 2 cents a pound to truck the meat to either coast.

Gary Wasson, meat manager at a Hinky Dinky supermarket in Sioux Falls, said about 30 percent of the carcass is useless.

"We trim off the fat and bone and sell it to a rendering company for 3 cents a pound," he said. That nets the store $4.50 an animal.

Healey's steer is now 450 pounds of meat and — after accounting for what's trimmed away — each pound is worth $1.51. Wasson said the average price for all beef cuts under cellophane, often represented by the price of round steak, has been about $2.30 a pound.

That gives the grocery store 79 cents a pound to cover costs and make a profit.

"Someone did a survey once that showed most people think our profit is 20-30 percent. Actually, our store nets only 1.5 percent to 2 percent on the dollar," Wasson said.

Sale prices for beef are often below the store's cost, he said.

"This is the big thing the consumer does't know," he said. "So many people are living off the price of beef."

Ready For His Gas-Saving Device

By MICHAEL FLYNN

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — John O. de Yeiser, 84, figures the burgeoning gasoline crisis may mean he'll yet live to see widespread use of a gasoline-saving device he invented in the early years of the automobile.

About the size of a cigarette lighter, all the gadget does is deliver a measured flow of water into the combustion chamber of an automobile engine.

But the result, de Yeiser contends — with independent supporting evidence — is a boost of as much as 30 percent in both gasoline mileage and engine power. Along the way, the device also substantially reduces pollution, he says.

For more than half a century, de Yeiser has attempted to spark commercial interest in his device, used successfully on World War II fighter planes and bombers to increase engine power.

Finally, a Southern California firm in the business of developing and marketing energy-saving devices has conducted new testing.

Preliminary results: de Yeiser's estimate of 30 percent better mileage may be conservative.

The device was tested this month on a station wagon whose 440-horsepower engine had been delivering about 13 miles per gallon on the highway.

"The results were astounding," said Charles Hindley, a Long Beach attorney who represents the firm which did the testing. "We got more than 20 miles per gallon on two different tests. But we can't believe that and want to do somne more testing."

Here's how the device works: hoses attached to it lead to a water container, to the vacuum line between the manifold and the distributor and to the carburetor.

"The water is metered to deliver the correct amount of water for the load and speed of the engine — one drop per second at idle speed," de Yeiser explained in an interview.

"The water increases in volume about 2,000 times under that intense heat and that expansion boosts the cylinder-head pressure, bringing about the increased gasoline mileage and power."

If his invention can do all that he claims, why hasn't the auto industry beaten a path to his door?

"I approached a couple of auto firms soon after I patented it in 1916," de Yeiser said. "Their response was 'we have engineers ... when we need something, they'll develop it for us.'" He's steered clear of them since then.

De Yeiser built 1,000 of the gadgets in his home a few years ago and gave them to acquiantances to test on their own cars.

"I did it as a means of advertising the effectiveness of the thing. But I learned something about people — if they get something for nothing, they think that's what it's worth. I don't think most of them even installed the devices on their cars."

De Yeiser did test the device himself on several occasions, including a 68,000-mile-test on a Volkswagen, and said he found an average increase in mileage of about 30 percent.

The water-injection device is only one of many accomplishments of the elderly inventor, whose glasses, white hair and snowy goatee give him the appearance of a Kentucky colonel or a John Steinbeck.

In the early 1920s he put the first radio station west of the Mississippi on the air, helped develop the coaxial cable and telephone answering and recording equipment and worked up his own theory on the basics of electricity. In addition, he practiced law for 30 years.

De Yeiser developed the gas-saving device to reduce the carbon buildup in the engine of his Model-T Ford. He reckoned that steam in the combustion chamber would help dislodge the carbon.

By chance, he said, that he discovered it increased mileage and power.

After a recent talk show interview, de Yeiser said he was deluged with calls from people interested in acquiring one.

PTI Advisory Body Weighs Programs

The Advisory Committee of the Architectural Drafting Technology Curriculum met recently at Pitt Technical Institute to discuss innovations for developing more "practicality" in student work and projects and to provide insight into new developments in the fields of architecture, engineering and construction.

Those members present included architects Ronald Webb from Rocky Mount and John Hickman from Kinston. Phil Dickerson of the firm Dickerson-Adams and Associates, engineers, and Bob Stroud of Triangle Engineering, both of Greenville, represented the engineering area. Bobby Boyd of Boyd and Associates, and Tom Chapin of Chapin and Associates, Greenville contractors, as well as George Pope, Wimco, Inc., Washington, were also in attendance.

The Advisory Committee is responsible for helping to provide guidelines for development of courses in the Architectural Technology Program.

Deserves A In Arithmetic

SEATTLE (UPI) — One part of the complex system that guides a new Navy torpedo to its target deserves an A in arithmetic. The device, called an array processor, manufacturered by Honeywell, can multiply two five-digit numbers and come up with the right answer in 177 billionths of a second.

Old Man Tenney Lost Private War Against I-91

EDITOR'S NOTE — Interstate highways lace the land, hurrying people somewhere, everywhere. This is a story about I-91 and a man who wanted to go nowhere.

By NANCY SHULINS
Associated Press Writer

ASCUTNEY, Vt. (AP) — The flames were hot enough to melt the blue plastic bubble on a police cruiser parked nearby.

The people watched and waited, hoping they'd see him stumble out of the woods or emerge from the barn, charred and dusty and mad as hell, waving his fist at the bulldozers and trucks.

But when the old man's dogs tried to dig their way into the burning farmhouse, the people knew.

"I was born here and I'll die here," he'd vowed.

Romaine Tenney, 64, as stubborn a Yankee as God ever made, had tried to fight an army of bulldozers with a pitchfork. When he saw he couldn't win, he did what he had to.

Today, 15 years later, regulars at Ascutney's general store still talk of Old Man Tenney and the summer the bulldozers chewed through the hill, clearing the way for Interstate 91.

The memory is not something to be shared with outsiders. But the images remain, easily triggered by the sound of a dog's mournful howl. Or the sight of an old farmer walking stiffly toward town.

A film of dust coated the village that summer, clinging to windowsills, furniture and the people themselves.

The thunder of bulldozers and heavy trucks began at sunrise and continued till dark, as the ribbon of dirt that would become I-91 inched northward through Vermont.

In 1964, people did not denounce progress — they made way for it.

Today, his sister-in-law, Peggy, and others who knew the village as it was then still talk of Old Man Tenney. This is what they remember.

The 75-acre farm was 78 years old when Myron Tenney bought it in 1892, the year he and his bride boarded their sleigh for the trip down from Mendon Mountain.

It was on the Ascutney hillside where the Tenneys raised their nine children, and where Romaine Tenney was born.

Romaine, a bachelor, stayed on with four dogs, three cats, two horses and 20 cows. Only World War II took him away from home.

He farmed with horses and hayed with a pitchfork. He would not drive a car; his hatred for engines was too great.

The sight of him ambling across the bridge that spanned the Connecticut River to Claremont was so familiar that most days he got a ride right away. If no one stopped, he walked the six miles into town, too proud to hitchhike, too stubborn to ask.

By the time "The Highway" was finished, it would replace old, winding Route 5. And it would meet Route 31 in Ascutney, in a cloverleaf that would bisect Old Man Tenney's place.

At first, he complained about the bulldozers in the same offhand way he cursed his arthritis, electricity and Daylight Savings Time.

His first line of defense was to ignore them, a tack he'd used successfully to combat other irritations. His neighbors knew he'd be exactly one hour late for six months of the year, just as they knew he'd light his house with kerosene and fuel his stove with wood.

The state people who came to see him used words he didn't understand. Old Man Tenney didn't know what eminent domain meant. But whatever it was, he was having none of it.

In June 1964, they offered him $10,600 for his property, and he shook his head.

Two months later, a Woodstock court jury upped the figure to $13,600. Still, the old man refused.

Tenney's family investigated having the house moved out of the highway's path and called an out-of-town construction company.

It can't be done, they said. The house is too old to move.

On Friday, Sept. 11, the sheriff came with a court order, four helpers and two trucks to remove Romaine Tenney's possessions.

The old man watched as the small crew went to work in his shed, taking out the tools and harnesses and piling them on a knoll a hundred yards away.

That night, Emerson and Peggy Tenney dropped by. At his request, they took him to Claremont to do his shopping.

Later, he unpacked his provisions and bade his brother and sister-in-law good night, assuring them he had what he needed.

On his way home past Old Man Tenney's place that night, Howard Fitch of Ascutney noticed something was wrong. The interior of the house emitted a strange glow. So did the barn. And so did the pile of tools and harnesses stacked on the knoll.

Fitch raced to the fire station and pulled the alarm. But the men could do little more than round up the animals and keep the flames from spreading.

On Sept. 23, a memorial service was held for Romaine Tenney.

Fifteen years later, Peggy Tenney climbs the uneven terrain of the Ascutney hillside. From her vantage point, she watches the traffic that spills from the off-ramp of the highway below.

A pile of bricks, Tenny's shed, is barely visible in the brush.

"It's not hard to understand why he did what he did," she said. "He couldn't part with any of it — it was his life."

A memorial marker the state promised was forgotten, and the Tenney Road sign was stolen by vandals.

But there's something else that bothers Peggy Tenney, she says.

"Nobody ever said they were sorry."

TOM BATIUK

Since "Funky" first became syndicated in 1972, its popularity has skyrocketed. "Funky" features the humorous absurdities and incongruities of the classroom.

Fan letters from teachers and students alike indicate they identify with the cast of characters: Funky— the average student representing 60 per cent of today's kids, Les—the "conservative square", Roland—the way-out element, Livinia—today's liberated girl, Mr. Goodsite—the do-good counselor of Three O'Clock High, and others...including a talking computer.

Cartoonist Tom Batiuk is becoming one of the top comic strip artists in the country. A former teacher himself, Batiuk, tries to observe students and teachers in action at least twice a week for inspiration for "Funky".

"I am amazed as I look at the kids at school," Batiuk says, "I keep seeing my characters over and over."

Exercise Class Begins Monday

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department announces two new women's exercises classes. Beginning the week of May 21, morning classes will be held Monday and Wednesdays at 8:30 a.m. in the Elm Street Center.

History Of Jarvis Church A Stimulating Journal

History of Jarvis Church. By Wyatt Brown. Edited by Dr. John D. Ebbs. Greenville, N. C. Printed by Edwards & Broughton, Raleigh, N.C. Hardcover, 200 pages, illustrated with photographs. $10.00. (Available at the Jarvis Church office, or in bookstores in town and on campus).

All too often, locally written histories of churches, organizations, towns and families are about as dull as last year's telephone directories. Not so this volume, which bears the full title "Early Methodism in Greenville, North Carolina, and a History of the Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church."

Several years spent by Wyatt Brown in gathering material covering not only the facts central to Jarvis and its predecessor churches, but Methodism in Pitt and surrounding counties, has assured a measure of local color and interest far surpassing what would normally be expected in a book of this kind.

Brown is a veteran writer who knows the value of entertaining as well as informing readers. What could have been deadening chunks of names, dates, and budgets are skillfully interspersed with material of a more stimulating nature.

In the long span of years covered by this history (1782 on into the 1970s), many changes have taken place. Yet certain salient factors relevant to Methodism — and to other Protestant denominations — are revealed as having basically remained consistent.

The itinerant nature of periodically assigning ministers to new charges is still a dominant procedure in the Methodist Church. Methodism's stand against strong drink, though softened to some extent in recent years, is even now a significant consideration.

At all times, the long shadow of stern old John Wesley hovers over any action that could conceivably smack of excess— whether such excesses are emotional or deal with lesser matters like mode of dress and strict observance of prescribed social behavior.

Brown records several instances when the Puritanical element has surfaced in firm expressions of disapproval — over the fine horse and saddle of a circuit riding preacher; the style of gallouses worn by one minister; and not so very long ago, criticism of a minister for his impropriety in wearing an informal cap.

Cycles are clearly discernible. Throughout nearly 200 years there have been alternating times of embracing and shunning evangelistic fervor — periods in which spirited revivals were much in favor; and times when such manifestations of exuberance were distinctly looked upon with disfavor.

Jarvis, and its two predecessor churches in Greenville, both named St. Pauls, seem to have had a knack for becoming burdened by financial obligations at the peak of prosperous years immediately preceding a cycle of lean years.

Paradoxically, this unfortunate tendency in each instance proved eventually to be the instrument that served to rouse the membership from legarthy into a period of renewed vitality, determination, and growth.

An experience of Gothic coloration and one of the strangest sidelights in the history of Jarvis came about as a result of one of its financial obligations. When the great crash of 1929 came, an amount of $7,500 was owed to a recluse family of three spinster sisters and their simple-minded bachelor brother.

Unidentified except as living in a rural area between "Clay Root Neck and Pitch Kittle Crick," this family, who lived in poverty-stricken surroundings, was said to be obsessed with gold.

Hoping that the sight of gold, instead of the usual paper money would induce the country hoarders to make some discount on the sizeable payment, this rich metal was procured and taken by a church committee to the family.

At the house, when a churchman suggested that the proceedings for payment begin with a prayer, one of the sisters promptly answered: "You all do the payin'; we'll do our own prayin'."

Evidence is also found of the familiar condescension outsiders have heaped upon eastern North Carolinians. As early as 1797, Joseph Caldwell, a native of New Jersey and a professor at the University of North Carolina wrote: "Religion in New Jersey has public respect and support, but in North Carolina, particularly in that part that lies east of us, everyone believes that the first step he ought to take to rise into respectability is to disavow, as often and publicly as he can, all regard for the leading doctrines of the scriptures."

Another barb frequenty cast at Greenville was that it was a place more noted for its saloons than for its churches. In 1841 it was reported: "Liquor drinking was considered an essential element in the life of the people."

Lest readers of this review might get an erroneous idea of the scope of this history of Jarvis Church, it needs be noted that the major portion of the book does indeed deal directly with factual information on Methodism and the three Methodist structures that have served in different eras as the downtown Methodist Church in Greenville.

The first St. Pauls was built in 1833 in what is now a part of Cherry Hill Cemetery. "It was a modest forty by sixty foot chapel," simply constructed without adornments.

The second St. Pauls was built in 1879, a much grander wood structure measuring 50 by 100 feet and located along the south side of Second Street and the east side of Greene Street. For years, members of the church were disturbed that there was no door in the wall behind the pulpit. Eventually, this omission was satisfied by painting in a simulated door on the wall. A number of years passed too before a steeple and bell were added to the church.

With the building of the second St. Pauls, the first St. Pauls was dismantled, the materials floated by boat downriver, and carried overland to Simpson where it was used to build a church there.

As time passed and Greenville and St. Pauls' congregation grew, plans were made to purchase land and build a new church. The day chosen for the dedication, March 10, 1907, was a big event in Greenville, and townspeople were astir with excitement. The elation was considerably heightened by the announcement two days prior to the dedication that Greenville had been selected as the site to locate East Carolina Teachers Training School.

Jarvis Memorial was also the first of Greenville's Methodist churches not to provide the traditional upstairs gallery for the use of blacks.

Brown's history of the church admirably covers developments in the church as well as issues and events outside the church that affected the fortunes of the two St. Pauls and Jarvis — the dark days of the Civil War and the bitter days of Reconstruction; depresssion years that periodically hard hit the rural South dependent on an agricultural economy, particularly cotton and tobacco; World War I and the grievous epidemic of flu that followed; and the Great Depresssion of the 1930s.

Curiously, comparatively few details are provided about the effect that World War II must have had on the church and the community. This is one of the few disappointments in this book.

The vital role women played in keeping alive the church is amply demonstrated. Until fairly recent years, the faithfulness and support by women far outweighed that of the fewer in number male membership.

The work of the First Auxiliary of the Women's Foreign Mission Society and the Local Missionary Society Auxiliary; the rise and growth of the Sunday School and youth activities, are all fully documented.

Ministers and outstanding lay leaders, many of them colorful characters, are the subjects of extensive personal sketches. Recent developments, such as the founding of two additional Methodist Churches in Greenville, St. James and Holy Trinity, to accommodate the overflow at Jarvis, are duly recorded.

Wyatt Brown and his editor, Dr. John D. Ebbs, have succeeded in creating a document that substantially adds to the knowledge of the poeple, events and history of the Greenville area. They have achieved this with grace, humor, and clarity.

This is a volume worthy of a widespread audience, a book to enjoy and to keep as an excellent reference to nearly 200 years of local history in the making since the first hardy circuit rider rode in to bring the Methodist message.

Winterville Native Sue Ellen Hunsucker Bridgers

WINTERVILLE — "I always expected to be a writer and I believe I'll keep on writing for many years to come. I've had periods when I didn't write and, during those times, I didn't feel complete," nationally recognized writer Sue Ellen Hunsucker Bridgers said.

Mrs. Bridgers who grew up in Winterville, was here last week to visit her parents, Wayland and Bett Hunsucker. A party for the autographing of her new book, "Altogether Now," was held at the Woodrack Gallery here Monday.

"Altogether Now" was published earlier this year by Knopf Publishing Company of New York and has been bought by Bantam Books for paperback publication in April, 1980.

Mrs. Bridgers' first novel, "Home Before Dark," published in 1976, has enjoyed phenomenal success. It was bought first by Redbook Magazine, then by Knopf, then by Bantam, and finally by Reader's Digest Condensed Books. A Japanese-language version came out only recently.

"I stumbled into making 'Home Before Dark' a novel," Mrs. Bridgers said. "It began as a short story, but just wouldn't remain compact. My husband, Ben, told me the reason I wasn't satisfied with it was because it needed to be expanded."

Ben Bridgers, an attorney who practices in Sylva in western North Carolina, is, according to his wife, "a wonderful live-in editor." The two met at East Carolina College when he was an English instructor and she was an undergraduate English major.

"We were married after my junior year at ECC," she said, "and were in the Air Force for four years. By the time we got out of service, we had two children, Elizabeth, who's now 15, and Jane, who's 13. Sean, who's now 11, was born while Ben was in Law School in Chapel Hill."

Those early child-rearing years were lean years literally, Mrs. Bridgers recalled. "I didn't write anything for five years. I tried very hard to be a super-mom, plus I kept other people's children for extra money. It was only during our last year in Chapel Hill that I started experimenting to see if I still remembered how to write. The first story I sent off won a prize in the Atlantic Christian College "Crucible" contest and was the encouragement I needed to keep on."

During that year and in succeeding years in Sylva, Mrs. Bridgers went on to publish in "Redbook," "Ingenue," and a number of other periodicals. She sent "Home Before Dark" to the fiction editor of "Redbook," she said, not because she expected it to be published there, but for advice from one who had become a friend about where it should be submitted. "Redbook" departed from its standing policy and bought it for a novel-length feature.

"I know I've been lucky," Mrs. Bridgers said. "I have had so little trouble getting my work published that I don't even know all the do's and don't's for breaking into the markets.

"I'm lucky, too," she went on, "that I don't feel pressured to write. I'm fairly disciplined while I am writing something, but then I can take a break for weeks at a time. I don't feel compulsive about it and I don't ever want to. I probably won't write all this summer, but then I'll start working hard at it in September.

"The third way I'm lucky is to have a supportive husband and unimpressed children. Ben has always thought writing was a worthwhile thing to do and he would, even if I weren't publishing. The children don't see what I do as all that special. I'm just Mom."

Mrs. Bridgers said she thinks through her novels in terms of chapters. "I conceive a chapter and then I compose it at the typewriter and then I rewrite and polish it. At least that's what I did with 'Altogether Now,' and what I think I'll do from now on. 'Home Before Dark,' because it grew out of a short story, I polished in great chunks.

"I set great store by each chapter. Something happens in each of my chapters and, in a sense, each can stand alone.

"Not a word I've ever written is sacred," she said. "Every sentence is subject to change, yet I've never written anything that I'm ashamed of. Everything has been the best I was capable of at the time."

She shared a technique that she finds helpful: "I polish by reading what I've written out loud. That way I can actually hear how the words flow and what the rhythm is. Sometimes I even read aloud to my husband and my daughter. I can judge by their reactions whether I'm conveying the feeling I wish to."

Mrs. Bridgers said of her academic background at Winterville High School, "No one could have had any better preparation for a writing career than I got under my English teachers, Helen Collins and Willie Gray Mallison."

She got her college degree in English after her family moved to Sylva, Mrs. Bridgers said, at Western Carolina University, where she now teaches some creative writing courses. And she's in demand as a speaker at writers', librarians' and English teachers' conferences throughout the nation.

"I attend all of these I can," she said, "because it's necessary for the promotion of my books and is encouraged by my publisher. But my publishers understand that I have children at home and can't always be at their beck and call. They know I probably have years ahead when my children are grown when I will be more free to travel."

Mrs. Bridgers said she epouses no causes or philosophies in her writing and that her writing is not autobiographical. "Of course, everyone puts his or her own ideas and experiences into writing," she said, "but my main objective is to convey human feelings. I don't try to teach and I don't try to convert. I just like to tell a good story."

The Complete Guide To Adventures In Travel

1979 Worldwide Adventure Travel Guide. Bob Citron, Executive Editor and Publisher, Constance Balint, Editor. Published by American Adventurers Association, Seattle, Washington (distributed by Random House, Inc.). 608 pages, paper, $9.95.

Most guide books to places to see and things to do while on vacation or during that dream month or year away from work deal with travel and activities achievable by most anyone from eight to eighty.

For the vacationer/traveler with more than a dash of intrepidity, "Worldwide Adventure Travel Guide" offers literally thousands (3,000 in fact) adventure trips that provide the provocation of physical challenges combined with the pleasure of travel and seeing new things on our planet.

This hefty book, with numerous black and white photographs, is a revelation of the tremendous scope of choices open to travelers today, with the emphasis on outdoors.

Using a practical format that helpfully groups activites into major categories — "Land Adventures;" "Air Adventures;" "Water Adventures;" and "Underwater Adventures," the editors have then subdivided these major headings into specific types of travel/adventures — i.e., wildlife safaris, horsepacking, hang gliding, canoeing, houseboating, etc.

Further carrying out the approach of ease in locating desired material, places to visit for each type of adventure is presented in alphabetical sequence. Thus, in "River Rafting" under the major heading "Water Adventures," rafting trips are listed for Africa, Asia, Australasia, Canada, Central America, etc.

Factual information is one of the key virtues of this guide. Dates and seasons when events are open, the latest available data on costs, whom to contact for arrangements, special equipment needed, are provided along with compact descriptions of major sights and scenery.

Members of a 14-day river rafting expedition along the Mayan Waterways of Guatemala, for example, can expect to find "myriad species of tropical wildlife such as eagles, toucans, howler monkeys and scarlet macaws; . . . with time also "to explore the ancient Mayan jungle cities along the river, including Yaxchilan and Piedras Negras."

Inclusion of newer and growing fields of adventure are amply represented, like "Research Expeditions," and "Overlanding" — long journeys such as ones on the London-to-Kathmandu route "at a cost as little as $15 a day including food, lodging, and all transportation."

Whatever your out with nature Dreamer's Holiday or travel and adventure fantasy, chances are you will find yours somewhere in the 1979 edition of "Adventure Travel Guide" — whether it's exploring caves, cattle driving, or houseboating in placid waters beneath the Himalayas in remote Srinagar.

One word of caution. Unless you have an exceptionally large pocket, this volume will not fit. It's better suited for a knapsack or briefcase.

For those who have no immediate plans to travel, the "Worldwide Adventure Travel Guide" makes a fine reference book or one simply to browse through and speculate on future plans.

Thoughts From 'Tar Heel Poetry' Editor

Text By Susan Prevatte

The Spring 1979 edition of "Tar River Poetry" (TRP) is an "exciting issue," according to editor Dr. Peter Makuck, who says "the tone and mood are not morose and bleak. There are some bouyant poems, some humorous poems, and several are satirical."

The East Carolina University English professor mentioned poet Robert Lowell's contention that poetry is a "lost cause" for the public. Makuck explained that "some people think poetry is too abstract. I think they really mean it's too concrete, they don't let themselves go and experience it. It deals with what you can see and feel and taste, like photographs."

Dr. Makuck took over the editorship of "Tar River Poetry" last fall. One of his first decisions was to initiate expansion of the magazine to include non-regional, as well as regional, poets.

"We're trying to improve the quality of poetry offered to our subscribers," he stated. Makuck opened the magazine to submissions from all over the country and receives 15 to 20 poems a day. But TRP still retains some "original regional quality," he said, "with local poets featured.

"Good poetry isn't totally objective, there finally are some standards," he observed. "Good poetry has certain discernible qualities. It makes maximum use of figurative language, and what is said emerges from the drama of the imagery. What it says has a greater impact because it emerges subtly, rather than in the form of direct statements."

Makuck notes that TRP has received some very fine reviews, and that a growing number of university libraries and individuals subscribe. The "Winston-Salem Journal" has called "Tar River Poetry" the best-edited and most professional-looking literary magazine in the state, Makuck said.

Teaching Creativity

Dr. Makuck teaches several poetry and creative writing courses at ECU. "I don't think you can really teach writing," he commented. "You can't teach the raw materials — human experience, motivation, imagination. You can't teach inspiration.

"What someone like me does in a class is to make students aware of the various possibilities that are open to them, and answer serious questions about form.

"The function of a creative writing teacher is to be an encourager. I'm not saying become a mindless cheerleader, but encourage and tell the students what they're doing well and what they're not doing well."

Makuck's own sensitivity to language had its origins in Connecticut. "As a kid," he said, "I heard Polish from my grandparents. And as an altar boy I was fascinated by the two different languages which were both used in saying the Lord's Prayer, Latin and English."

He studied Latin for four years and later took a double major, French and Latin. His mastery of French paid off when Makuck won a Fulbright Scholarship to write and teach in France.

Until he "learned the ropes," Makuck commented, editing "Tar River Poetry" and heading the ECU Poetry Forum resulted in decreased production of his own poems, stories and a novel he is working on.

His task was lightened by the addition of four advisory editors to the TRP staff. The advisory editors read manuscripts and select poetry by a committee decision. "The group shares a remarkable affinity in deciding what to use," Makuck said.

The ECU poetry publication, originally named "Tar River Poets" and the ECU Poetry Forum for local poets were founded by Vernon Ward in 1960. The change of name of the publication to "Tar River Poetry" took place in 1978.

The poetry volumes printed in the ECU Print Shop are published twice yearly, in the fall and spring. "It has entered what market men call a growth period," Dr. Makuck said. He added that another innovation is the addition of a book review section which has been added to the format.

Chilly To Retarded Residents

EDITOR'S NOTE — Group homes could provide an autonomy that mentally retarded adults don't have living with family or in large institutions. The money is there to build them, and there are plenty of people to live in them. But it isn't easy to find a neighborhood to welcome them.

By MARC WILSON
Associated Press Writer

McHENRY, Ill. (AP) — Robbie Pierce was born nearly 23 years ago with mongolism, but he learned a lesson one winter's day that not everyone in town can accept — that he has rights.

The lesson came as he and his father, Bill Pierce, rode in an old pickup truck along an icy road to a neighboring town. On the outskirts, men were picketing a small plant.

"They're on strike," Pierce told his son. "That means they're protesting their working conditions and pay and won't work until things are improved. All Americans have a right to demand betterment."

At first, Robbie looked puzzled, then he smiled and laughed. That night at home in rural McHenry County, he gathered cardboard and sticks and asked his dad how to spell strike. He made several signs.

"I expected a labor insurrection at the workshop (where Robbie works) the next day," the elder Pierce said. "It hasn't happened yet. But I think Robbie is ready to stand up for his rights."

But the extent of Robbie's rights, and of others like him, is in dispute — especially when it concerns his functioning in society.

"It's the latest battle in the civil rights war, to get the retarded integrated into the community, living more independently," says Max Addison of The National Association For Retarded Citizens. "So far, the retarded are losing."

Robbie is one of 109 moderately-retarded adults in the county who are elgible to move into a "group home" that the McHenry County Association for the Mentally Retarded wants to build.

The association bought a vacant lot in one of McHenry's best neighborhoods to build a one-story brick group home for 11 moderately retarded adults.

The federal Department of Housing and Urban Development said it was a perfect site — close to transportation, shopping, recreation and houses of worship. HUD would lend money to build the group home and give rent subsidies to help repay the loan.

But local and state zoning laws make no mention of such projects, so the city zoning board was asked for a special use permit to build in the single-family area. Notices were mailed to area residents.

Neighbors hired a lawyer to block construction. Sixty-seven persons signed a petition opposing the group home.

"I'll never feel the same about my neighbors again," said Kathy Alvary, one resident who welcomed the group home.

At the zoning hearing on the variance request, Mrs. Alvary was the only neighbor to speak for the group home.

"One thing I tried to say is that all these people (neighbors) have unfounded fears," she said. "One neighbor said it was inappropriate to build such a home in a grade school neighborhood. My God, these retarded people aren't monsters. I tried to tell them that the group home would really enhance the children's experience."

David Mack of the HUD office in Chicago says several attempts have been made to build group homes in Illinois since federal funding became available in 1976, but local opposition prevailed.

Casmir Ziolkowski of HUD in Washington says attempts to build group homes "have been generally unsuccessfui all over the country. Most of the time, it's impossible to get zoning. Where the zoning is OK, there's still a great deal of opposition...

"It's the same story every place. Everyone wants adequate housing for the mentally handicapped, but they don't want it in their neighborhood," Ziolkowski says.

The request for the variance came before the city zoning board last March. It was rejected the zoning variance, 5-0, and the City Council upheld the ruling.

Opponents of the home in McHenry are reluctant to discuss it, but Bea Newkirk, one of the neighbors who circulated the petition, says, "We have no lack of compassion for the cause. It's just that we want to keep the neighborhood the way it is."

Tips On Water-Saving From A Professional

By ED LION

FRANKLIN PARK, Ill. (UPI) — The average family could cut water consumption by up to 30 percent by making a few adjustments on plumbing fixtures and following simple conservation measures.

That's the opinion of Charles Allen, a plumbing equipment manufacturer in the Chicago suburb of Franklin Park.

"There's a lot of room for savings because we use excessive amounts," Allen said in an interview. "All it takes is some public awareness."

Allen, who is president of Sloan Valve Co., said the same measures that save a precious resource also save money.

He said water could become a "critical problem" in the future in some areas of the country — including Arizona, California and parts of the Pacific Northwest — because of either short supplies or inadequate treatment facilities. He said this could mean higher water prices for consumers.

"Generally, the price of water hasn't gone up drastically so it might not be as visual to the American public as the fuel crisis, and there is not much concern," he said.

"For instance, some estimates say if our facilities remain stable by the year 2000, our use of water will exceed our ability to supply it."

Allen said a 1976 study showed a household with one toilet, two faucets and one shower could cut 66 gallons of water consumption by 25 percent by using $7.58 of plumbing equipment.

"And with a few extra measures, I don't think there would be any problems getting an additional 5 or 10 percent in savings."

The study by the Environmental Protection Agency said 66 gallons could be saved with a plastic dam ($3.68) to cut water use in toilets, two aerators ($1.50 each) to cut water flow in faucets and one flow control device (90 cents) for showerheads.

The EPA estimated annual savings would total $42.32 — taking into account water cost, sewage rates and energy rates for hot water.

Allen said residents of Marin County, Calif., cut water use during a recent drought by 40 to 50 percent with the help of a packet of water-saving equipment, an educational campaign, water cutback regulations and fines.

He said plumbing equipment manufacturers are designing new water saving equipment.

For example, new faucets, toilets and showerheads are designed to use less water than older ones, and plumbing equipment manufacturers have helped local authorities develop conservation codes.

Allen recommended other conservation measures:

—Keep a bottle of drinking water in the refrigerator so you don't have to let the tap run until the water is cold.

—Turn the water off while shaving and brushing teeth; shaving with a running faucet uses about 20 gallons.

—Stopper the sink or use a dishpan when washing dishes: you could save 30 gallons per meal.

NO COMPENSATION

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) says it won't be among U.S. religious bodies receiving compensation for property confiscated in China 30 years ago because such property was turned over to Chinese members in 1950.

GARDEN CLINIC

N.C. State University Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. I have heard that a plastic film mulch should not be used on late planted vegetables in North Carolina. Why? (H.W., Nashville)

A. The intensity of sunlight is so high by late spring that the soil beneath the plastic will be too hot for best plant growth. This is especially true with small plants that do not shade much of the film surface. An organic mulch like compost, leaves or sawdust may be a better choice in late spring or summer. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Q. The tips of my azalea leaves are beginning to curl up lengthwise. Is something wrong? (Mrs. P.K., Hillsborough)

A. Cold injury or too much fertilizer could cause the symptoms you describe. Cold injury causes the bark on the branches to split and peel away from the wood. Prune out such branches. Azaleas are shallow rooted plants. Instead of fertilizing them heavily at one time, make several light applications. Spread the fertilizer evenly over the rooting area. (R.K. Jones, extension plant pathologist)

Q. I've been chopping down the same sweetgum trees for five years. New growth continues to appear on the stumps. Any suggestions? (P.D., Carrboro)

A. Resprouting stumps can be controlled by using a herbicide called Ammate X. Label instructions recommend a ratio of 3.5 to 5 pounds of Ammate per gallon of water. Soak freshly cut stumps thoroughly to prevent sprouting. Be sure to wet the outer growth ring area. For stumps under two inches in diameter, sprinkle the crystals directly on the stump. (Rick Hamilton, extension forest resources specialist)

Q. How does one identify male and female acuba plants? (Mrs. M.Q., Wilmington)

A. The most obvious way is to look for berries, which are found on female plants. Also, different varieties have a specific sex. For example, Acuba Japonica crassifolia is a male plant. Acuba Japonica grandis is a female plant. Acuba Japonica varigata has both male and female clones. Ask your garden center operator about these specific varieties. If you plant a male and female variety, put them close together to ensure good berry production. Also, plant your acuba in partial shade. Full sun burns the leaves. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticulturist)

Watergate Is Background For Film

A slender, bespectacled man walked into the brightly lighted set on Stage 3 at the CBS film lot in California last November and declared, "The Oval Office looks the same, down to the rug on the floor."

So it was that John Dean, one of the central Watergate figures and author of the book, "Blind Ambition," vouched for the authentic look of a key set used in the production of the dramatic special, "Blind Ambition." The drama, based on the respective personal accounts of Dean and his wife, Maureen, of their "White House years," his view of the Watergate crisis and how it affected both of them, will air in four consecutive broadcasts Sunday, May 20 (8 to 10 p.m.), Monday, May 21, Tuesday, May 22, and Wednesday, May 23 (9 to 11 p.m. each night), on CBS-TV.

Martin Sheen stars in the role of John Dean, supported by a host of co-stars, including Theresa Russell as Maureen, Ed Flanders as Charles Shaffer (Dean's attorney), Graham Jarvis as John Erlichman, Lawrence Pressman as H.R. Haldeman, John Randolph as John Mitchell, and Rip Torn as Richard Nixon.

The film, which spans the period from May 1970 through January 1975, was shot in 82 days, the first 15 of them in and around Washington, D.C., where the story began and ended.

"This film is not just a Watergate account, it's also the romantic story of two people who fall in love, with Watergate as the background," said Sheen.

"Dean was a rather romantic guy," added Sheen, who had met with the author in California, prior to filming.

Martin Sheen and Theresa Russell star as John and Maureen Dean, in "Blind Ambition," a major eight-hour dramatic special based on the best seller of that title and the book "Mo," to air Sunday, May 20 (8-10 p.m.) and Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, May 21, 22 and 23 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Manilow Will Sing The Songs

Can you imagine Barry Manilow AND John Denver on television at the same time . . . on the same show? It's true. These two superstars join voices for the first time when Barry welcomes John as his sole guest on "The Third Barry Manilow Special," airing Wednesday, May 23 (9 to 10 p.m.), on ABC-TV.

Of course, if either of the talented performers just stood before the camera and sang their hits, the hour would be a most memorable one. But, with both of them on one show, it's almost too much to comprehend.

As with his other specials, Barry co-produced and co-wrote this one, and this behind-the-scenes involvement is an aspect of his multi-faceted career that he enjoys tremendously.

"The most fun I have is when I'm involved in the creative process of whatever I'm doing," says Barry. "I get such a 'high' when I'm producing — whether it's my own show or for somebody else. I have the best time doing my specials, and I really never want them to be over.

"The performing — which is still a brand new thing for me — is delicious. It's invigorating and very rewarding. But, if the day comes and it no longer works for me, I would be just as happy in the background.

"I love arranging. In fact, this is what I wanted to be in the very beginning when I was studying at Juilliard.

"Someday, I hope I'll be in the position to help other singers with their arrangements, their recordings and television specials.

On Wednesday's all-music show, Barry will perform a string of his hits, including "Ready to Take a Chance Again," "Somewhere in the Night," "Weekend in New England," "Even Now," "Copacabana," and a song from his next album, "Why Don't We Try a Slow Dance?"

John Denver will sing his current hit, "What's On Your Mind?" and duo several Everly Brothers hits with Barry. In addition, Barry will be featured in a seven-minute production number centered on the different ways his hit record, "I Write the Songs," might have been done in a host of big-studio musicals.

Barry Manilow salutes the elegance and the glamour of the great nightclub days in "The 3rd Barry Manilow Special," a new hour of music on ABC-TV, Wednesday, May 23 (9-10 p.m.).

She's A Bit Older, A Whole Lot Wiser

Barbara Hershey, a little bit older and a whole lot wiser, is once again back on the road to Hollywood stardom.

Barbara, the talented young actress who caused quite a stir by changing her name to Seagull, looks back on that controversial time and frankly admits "I was very naive."

She is more than willing to talk about the past, but she hopes it doesn't get in the way of helping her to establish a future.

"I took the name Seagull after a very personal and profound experience," she recalls, "but I destroyed whatever meaning it may have had by telling the story over and over again.

"Unfortunately, I did a lot of my growing up in public, and the publicity just got out of control. My career naturally suffered because people started thinking of me more as a personality than as an actress."

Today, with all that behind her and with a renewed sense of dedication to her craft, Barbara feels she is doing the finest work of her career.

A timely example is her stunning performance — opposite David Niven and Michael York — in "A Man Called Intrepid," a suspense-filled miniseries airing on NBC-TV Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, May 20-22 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Speaking of her 'Intrepid' role, Barbara says: "It was a real career breakthrough because I'm finally getting to play a more mature, multi-dimensional woman."

Armed with little more than personal respect for a challenging script, Barbara undertook the demanding role of Madelaine, a true-life World War II spy, who was dropped alone behind enemy lines and captured by German forces.

A Night At The Lido

"You're always a little bit apprehensive about working with someone for the first time," says singer Tom Jones, "but working with Shirley MacLaine for the first time has just been marvelous. She's very professional and a lot of fun. She doesn't take the show business side of life too seriously . . . we got along very well together."

The fun and professionalism involved in two performers working together for the first time will be in evidence when Jones appears as guest star on "Shirley MacLaine at the Lido." The special, filmed at the famous Paris cabaret, will be broadcast Sunday, May 20 (10 to 11 p.m.), on CBS-TV. Shirley's other guests will be the Lido's world-renowned Les Bluebell Girls and Kelly Boy Dancers. There will also be a rare glimpse behind-the-scenes when cameras go backstage and Shirley talks informally with some of the dancers.

Contrary to popular opinion, there are no French girls among the more than 50 female dancers who appear regularly at the Lido.

The club's creative director for the past 31 years, Miss Bluebell, explains why: "It is basically a height factor. I believe I can sincerely say that I was the first person to start utilizing 6' tall girls dancing in groups (the girls at the Lido range in height from 5'8" to 6'2"). Traditionally, we've found that in looking for tall girls with some degree of classic dancing backgrounds, we've had to turn to Great Britian, the Scandanavian countries, and the United States. At present, there are 11 Americans performing in the cast of the Lido.

"Naturally," Miss Bluebell continued, "we were all very excited when Miss MacLaine came to Paris to do her show. I was delighted and honored to be working with her, the way she works, going full out on something — three, four, six times — that's really what a star is all about."

Onstage at Paris' world famous Lido cabaret, Shirley MacLaine struts her stuff, in her hour-long entertainment special, "Shirley MacLaine at the Lido," Sunday, May 20 (10 p.m.) on CBS.

'You Just Won't Believe It' Show

The dazzling feats you'll see on "The New and Spectacular Guinness Book of World Records" you will find difficult to believe. For 'openers,' there's a motorcyclist who jumps two 55-foot trucks placed end to end. Then, another 'you won't believe' will be a man escaping from a straitjacket while dangling 200 feet in the air from a helicopter. Senior citizens will gasp with wonder when a 75-year-old diver plunges into 12 1/4 inches — that's right, inches, not feet — of water. The special will be broadcast Sunday, May 20 (8 to 9 p.m.), on ABC-TV, and hosting the mind-boggling event will be Gavin MacLeod ("The Love Boat"), Richard Hatch ("Battlestar Galactica") and Lani O'Grady ("Eight Is Enough").

Here are other exciting — or amusing — facts and acts aiming for inclusion in the world-famed book of wonders:

Don Cook will don a 'beard' of approximately 35,000 live bees.

A record-breaking chorus line of 528 tap dancers, ranging in age from 4 to 85.

The first underwater duet, in formal evening wear, will be performed by Mark Gottlieb on the aqualin and his sister, Karen, on the hydrogen.

Steve McPeak and Farrell Hettig will compete for a record in the steep wire walk on a wire angled at 41 degrees to a 57-foot tower.

Strongmen Bill Jones and Franco Columbu will compete in blowing up a hot water bottle until it bursts.

Twenty-seven Frisbee experts will try to keep a Frisbee spinning until each person has had a turn at it.

Steve McPeak will attempt to walk on stilts that measure 25 feet, ankle to ground.

And, to top it all off, Joel Nelson will display the world's longest car — his car, incidentally — that contains a microwave oven, refrigerator, safe, four telephones, a conference table, two TV sets, wet bar and a chauffeur who stands 6-feet 5-inches in her high heels!

Marciano Special

An hour-long television special about the life of the late undefeated heavyweight champ Rocky Marciano, "The Immortal Champion," will be available for syndication in September.

Kirk Douglas narrates the special and a number of other celebrities will appear in cameo roles. Among them are Muhammad Ali, Tom Harmon, Jerry Lewis, Debbie Reynolds, Danny Thomas, Joey Bishop, Jimmy Durante, Bob Hope, Dean Martin, Bob Stack and Jonathan Winters.

Also featured will be actual fight footage acquired from "The Greatest Fights of the Century."

HAVE YOU CONSIDERED?
Do you suffer from hay fever and summer allergies? It's a downright nuisance isn't it?
If you can't determine the source of your allergy, here's a possibility you may not have considered. Is your carpet really clean? Sometimes people neglect upkeep of their carpets, and mildew and moss (no kidding, "moss"!) actually get a foot-hold within carpet's fibers.
Take a tip. Try cleaning your carpet thoroughly, or replace it entirely, if it needs be, with a mildew/moss resistant carpet from your carpet store.

This Is A Vacation?

Barbara Feldon, Maureen McCormick, Priscilla Barnes, Michael Brandon and Andrea Marcovicci (l to r) find themselves lost in a hostile land when they wander too far away from a remote vacation resort in "Vacation in Hell," suspenseful drama to air on "The ABC Monday Night Movie," May 21 (9-11 p.m.).

A dream vacation at an exotic tropical resort becomes a terrifying nightmare when four beautiful women and a man become lost in a remote jungle and find themselves in a desperate struggle for survival in "A Vacation in Hell," a tense drama airing as "The ABC Monday Night Movie" May 21 (9 to 11 p.m.).

In the feature, visitors flock to Club Horizon seeking an escape from their daily lives. For Alan (Brandon), the club is the ideal place to perfect his macho charms. In an attempt to be alone with a beautiful girl, Denise (Barnes), Alan suggests a boat trip to a remote part of the island. Denise accepts but, to Alan's chagrin brings along three other women: Barbara (Marcovicci), a stern manhater who earlier rejected Alan; Evelyn (Feldon), a mature woman trying to act like a teenager; and her daughter, Margaret (McCormick), a teenager trying to act like a mature woman. Alan runs the boat aground and the group is soon lost in a remote jungle. Desperately, they seek a way back to the resort, but when Alan is severely wounded, he finds he must depend on the women for survival.

Human Sexuality Explored On CBS

The fourth informational special in the Emmy Award-winning 'Body Human' series, "The Body Human: The Sexes," will be broadcast Monday, May 21 (8 to 9 p.m.), on CBS-TV. The program is an exploration of the wonder and mystique of human sexuality from prenatal infancy to advanced age, focusing on the intense personal dramas of four real people confronted by different breakdowns in the flawless, intricate internal sexual system.

Utilizing the most sophisticated photographic techniques, 'The Sexes' provides a view, never before seen, of the vast mechanism of the human sexual system. It shows how sexuality begins in early embryonic life with the brain wiring signaling every cell, imprinting basic sexual instincts that will ultimately determine the sex for which the fetus was programmed by genes at the instant of conception.

The first real-life drama concerns Robin Flanagan, a 29-year-old wife and physical education teacher from Spring Valley, Calif., who, in the prime of her child-bearing years, is unable to conceive because of a mysterious Fallopian tubal blockage. Viewers are able to observe the delicate surgery, performed to make her motherhood possible, through the eyes of her surgeon.

Another real-life drama unfolds with a small child named Paula, whose brain wiring and hormones misfired, for not as yet understood reasons, during her pre-natal months. At birth, the child's body cells had the genetic imprint of a boy but the anatomy was closer to that of a girl. Relatively simple surgery provided Paula with the body of a little girl, and the proper female hormones are expected to embellish her physical development.

Allied Espionage Network Formed

Michael York stars with David Niven and Barbara Hershey in "A Man Called Intrepid," a six-hour miniseries detailing the formation of an Allied espionage network during World War II. The drama, inspired by William Stevenson's best-selling account of actual covert operations in Europe, will be broadcast on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" May 21, "The Big Event" Tuesday, May 22, and "NBC Novels For Television" Wednesday, May 23 (9 to 11 p.m. each night).

Paul Harding, Flora Robson, Peter Gilmore, Renee Asherson and Gayle Hunnicutt also star in the production, which was filmed entirely on location in England, Norway and Canada.

Occasionally, an acting career provides the opportunity to see the many countries while working, which the actors involved with 'Intrepid' did, to a somewhat small degree.

York, a native of England, has also starred in motion pictures filmed in America, India, Ireland, Tunisia, Germany, Japan and the Virgin Islands.

"One thing about filmmaking is that you get to the oddest locations. In fact, it is a marvelous way to get to know a place. You are working with local people and for a period of time, lasting up to several weeks, you become a part of the community."

So, when the opportunity came along to star as a young movie scenic designer whose talents are put to work in the war effort, York, a resident of Monaco, was pleased to take the role; it allowed him to return to England for several weeks, as well as to travel to Canada and Norway for additional shooting.

Looks Like Erlichman

Graham Jarvis as John Erlichman, Rip Torn as Richard Nixon and Lawrence Pressman as H.R. Haldeman are among the major stars of "Blind Ambition," on CBS this week.

During the televised Senate investigation into Watergate several years ago, actor Graham Jarvis sat before his TV almost speechless in realizing that he not only resembled John Erlichman, but that they had similar mannerisms.

"From that moment on," the actor says, "I always wanted to portray him in a project that had some true significance."

This week, Graham gets his wish as he stars as Erlichman in the CBS special "Blind Ambition," based on John Dean's best-seller.

"I really had no interest in meeting Erlichman before I did this project," Jarvis admits openly, before he adds, "but now I would. If I could ask him but one question it'd be what he knows about the connection between Richard Nixon and Patrick Gray.

"However, as Dean's book and his film says, there are a lot of unanswered questions even now about the whole Watergate coverup. Some of those may never be answered, partly due to national security and partly because I don't think there's one single person who knows every single answer."

What the film does, says Graham, is "make you kind of shake your head in disbelief at moments. But, at the same time, it gives a person the insight into something that happened at the highest level of our government that only Dean was able to tell."

As for Erlichman, Graham says, "It's my interpretation that he was the most personable of the Nixon, Haldeman and Erlichman trio.

Rip Torn and Lawrence Pressman portray the other members of the trio, and both did more than just look the part.

Pressman spent countless hours researching his Haldeman role by reading some 10 books, scrutinizing two Mike Wallace interviews with Haldeman, watching pertinent tapes of Watergate testimony, and talking with Dean about his recollections of Haldeman during his White House days.

"My talks with Dean were very instructional," said Pressman, "in that he helped me greatly with his keen observations about Haldeman's general demeanor.

"The more accurate you are with the facts about a character, the more you can let your imagination run with those spontaneous creative insights that come to you in the moment of playing the role. If you're well prepared, you know that you're on solid ground and you can trust your instincts."

Mitchum Stars As Ex-Con

A small-time hoodlum who only wants to spend the rest of his life peacefully — and out of jail — finds that everybody wants to be his friend for a price, and that price could be his life, in "The Friends of Eddie Coyle." This deadly game of steal and tell airs as "The ABC Tuesday Movie of the Week" May 22 (11:30 p.m.).

Robert Mitchum stars as the good-hearted ex-con who is trapped into becoming an informant because he knows his family will have to go on welfare if he is sent to prison again. Critic Judith Crist said, "Mitchum gives a taut and terse portrait of the hood...Eddie Coyle is done with perfection of casting from top to bottom, so authentic a sense of time and place."

Martin's New Pact

Dean Martin, who has been with NBC-TV since 1948, has signed a new exclusive three-year contract with the network.

The new agreement includes the continuation of Martin's annual Christmas special, several other variety specials and a "Best of Dean Martin Roasts."

The Deans' View Of Watergate

"Blind Ambition," the combination of the dramatic love story of John and Maureen Dean and the inside look at events surrounding Dean's time as counsel to President Nixon, is airing this week on CBS-TV. It focuses on their experiences and changes of outlook at the Watergate crisis unfolded, altering their personal lives.

PART I (Sunday, May 20) begins with Dean's meeting with attorney Charles Shaffer on March 31, 1973, in Washington, D.C. Dean called the meeting to convince Shaffer to represent him as counsel by explaining all he knows about the events leading up to and following the Watergate incident. Then, in flashback form, the Deans' recollections of the events that transpired from May 1970 through June 19, 1972, are covered. Among highlights are Dean's appointment as counsel to the President and his handling of a variety of requests made by the President. Also included are Dean's Los Angeles meeting with Maureen, an event that begins their tumultuous romance; the death of J. Edgar Hoover, a crisis in Dean's relationship with "Mo," and his being called back to Washington because of a Washington Post story that five men were arrested for breaking into the Democratic National Committee Headquarters in the Watergate. Part I concludes with the revelation to Dean by Hugh Sloan that he personally passed some large bundles of cash to G. Gordon Liddy.

PART II (Monday, May 21) dramatically presents the Deans' account of the period of time from May 2, 1972, through Dec. 31, 1972, beginning with a traumatic break in Dean's relationship with Maureen. Meanwhile, the implications of the break-in continue to mount and present problems for the White House staff. The Justice Department announces indictments against the alleged Watergate burglars and Howard Hunt and Liddy. In the midst of his official duties, Dean calls "Mo" and proposes marriage, and the two are married. Part II concludes with another Washington Post story reporting that a Key Nixon aide has been named as contact for Donald Segretti's sabotage activities and the death of Howard Hunt's wife in a plane crash.

PART III (Tuesday, May 22) covers the Deans' recollections from January 1973 through April '73. The Watergate defendants plead guilty. Pressures are applied for Dean to testify before the Senate Watergate Committee; Shaffer advises Dean that he's guilty of conspiring to obstruct justice; Dean forces a private meeting with Nixon.

PART IV (Wednesday, May 23) focuses on the Deans' view of the period from April 15, 1973, through Jan. 8, 1975. Dean's meetings with Nixon reveal their deteriorating relationship that leads to his being fired. The special concludes with Shaffer's call to Dean, who is being held at Fort Holabird, to inform him that Sirica has ordered his release.

Civil War Serves As Background

A young Southern beauty brutalized by months of physical and emotional abuse in a Civil War prison run by Union soldiers is determined to rebuild her life, aided by a cache of gold and the love of a handsome young officer in "Love's Savage Fury," airing as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie" May 20 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Laurel Taggart is the apple of the eye of plantation owner Lyle Taggart, but their sumptuous life is interrupted by Civil War. Time takes its toll on the Southern cause and the Confederacy is about to die. In a desperate effort, the people contribute all their personal gold in a "last chance gold fund" that is buried in Taggart mansion. The Union Army descends on the area and Laurel is sent off to prison after rebuffing a bluecoat officer's amorous advances.

The prison women resent the uppity Laurel, but she becomes hardened in a hurry in the dog-eat-dog squalor. She finds Jewel, the black slave girl she grew up with, and other inmates including Dolby, a former brothel madam; Prostie, a prostitute; Opal, a tough black girl; and the handsome Confederate Lt. Zach Willis. The prison camp is run by Commander Marston and prison physician Dr. Tighe. Laurel devises a plot to escape, submitting to the repugnant Sgt. Weed to effect the scheme, and plans to use the hidden gold and the love and broad shoulders of Zach to rebuild the plantation.

Weaver Beat The Odds

When an actor quits a television series, it's presumably to go on to bigger and better things, but for most of them it's a ticket to obscurity. A handful have beaten the odds, but most wind up toiling as free-lancers for far less than what they earned as series regulars.

Dennis Weaver is one of the few who gambled and won, after quitting his role as Chester in "Gunsmoke" in 1963. But even though he is busier than ever today, the actor reflects: "The statistics are against it. I would not recommend leaving a series unless you are in it nine years," he says with a grin, the obvious point being that very few series are on that long.

Weaver has since starred in three series and had starring roles in a number of top-rated television movies and miniseries. Now he is starring in "A Cry for Justice," a new NBC-TV "Police Story" movie to telecast Wednesday, May 23 (9 to 11 p.m.).

In the drama, Weaver portrays Bently, an investigator who tirelessly reexamines evidence in a cop-shooting incident in which the wrong men were convicted. Robert Culp co-stars as Price, Bently's flashy, headline-grabbing partner.

Larry Hagman, Diana Muldaur, Don Mitchell, Bruce Glover, Sharon Acker and Robby Weaver (Dennis' son) are also in the cast.

Overshadowed for years by Price, his flamboyant partner, the dedicated Bently quietly fumes about being the team's neglected workhorse; Price seems to have an effortless knack for showing up in the right place, at the right time and in the right camera angle. When they are assigned to investigate the shooting of a patrolman, Bently is outraged at Price's cavalier disregard for reliable information and his jockeying for a quick conviction — and another notch in his belt.

Bently's interest in the case is revived two years later when he receives a confession that indicates two other now-imprisoned bank robbers might have been involved. Anxious to shatter the ringing departmental adage, "The price is right," he tediously sifts through files and courtroom protocol hoping to find the guilty men and reverse an unjust verdict.

Co-Host Barbour Likes The Critics

Many performers rarely have a nice word to say about critics, but John Barbour thinks they're terrific.

Why? Because Barbour, a resident co-host on NBC-TV's new humor magazine, "Real People" (Wednesdays, 8 to 9 p.m.), also happens to be a popular West Coast film reviewer and social satirist.

Barbour, a former Emmy-winning critic-at-large for KNBC, the NBC television station in Los Angeles, believes his background as a writer, talk-show host and stand-up comedian gives him a unique perspective on the way things really work in Hollywood.

"The reason so much criticism is negative is because it's done so poorly. And that's unfortunate. There's a great need for good criticism because nobody in the industry wants to tell anybody the truth."

Ironically, Barbour says he never reads any reviews of his performances. "No critic could be as rough on me as I am on myself. Like most performers, I know in my guts whether I've been good or bad."

If asked, could Barbour give an objective review of "Real People," the show in which he's professionally involved?

"As a critic I never try to be objective. To be really honest you must be totally subjective. And, being totally subjective, I think 'Real People' is one of the few American shows good enough for the British to steal."

Walter Signed

Barry Manilow's 'Singular' Aspect

When "The 3rd Barry Manilow Special" airs May 23 on ABC-TV (9 to 10 p.m.), one thing will be immediately evident: there will be only one guest star — John Denver. And there is sound reasoning for that on Manilow's part, as he is quick to explain.

"There has always been only one guest star on my shows," says the perenially popular Barry. "The first show had Penny Marshall (from 'Laverne & Shirley'). The second starred Ray Charles. Now there is John Denver."

And why Denver?

"Because I admire what he's about professionally," says Manilow. "I like his singing and his choice of material. I feel he's a real class act. And, he added with a smile, "it can't hurt the ratings, can it?"

"Because," Barry explains with sincerity, "I have a lot of music to do and, quite simply, there is not time for more than one guest. There are a lot of people out there who wait all year long to see what I'm going to do during that hour.

Gets A Coveted Role

Richard Chamberlain, internationally acclaimed as a Shakespearean actor as well as for his television and film performances, will play the coveted role of Blackthorne in "Shogun," the television adaptation of James Clavell's best-selling novel, to be produced entirely in Japan by Paramount as a 12-hour miniseries for presentation on NBC during the 1980-81 season.

At a news conference attended by Japanese Consul-General Wataru Miyakawa, author Clavell and NBC and Paramount officials, NBC's Deanna Barkley said that "Shogun" is planned for presentation after the completion of the network's coverage of the 1980 Summer Olympics in Moscow.

Filming of the story of passion and intrigue set against the conflict of East-meets-West in 17th century Japan will begin June 4.

The character Chamberlain portrays, John Blackthorne, is a sea captain who dreams of being the first Englishman to circumnavigate the globe. But he and his crew are shipwrecked in Japan during a violent storm. There they find themselves in a totally alien environment, the captives of warring Samurai, locked in a deadly struggle over who should be Shogun — the supreme military dictator.

Chamberlain became one of television's biggest stars during his six years in the title role of the "Dr. Kildare" series. He went on to establish himself as an outstanding stage actor in a series of major productions.

He became the first actor from America since John Barrymore to play "Hamlet" in England, and British critics lavishly praised his performance.

He recently starred as Alexander McKeag in the miniseries "Centennial" and also starred in the television productions of "The Count of Monte Cristo" and "The Man in the Iron Mask."

Pike's Peek

BY CHARLIE PIKE
PFA Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD — When NBC announced its new Fall schedule, the West Coast publicity office didn't have a publicist assigned to the "MRS. COLOMBO" series, convinced it was now history. However, FRED SILVERMAN's insistence that it be renewed under the title "KATE COLOMBO," not only changed that but it stunned most everyone into realizing in just what high esteem Silverman obviously holds series star KATE MULGREW.

Apparently it's 'unofficially official' that ROBIN WILLIAMS and his wife, Valerie, are separated and discussing the possibility of making it permanent.

It was at JAMES MacARTHUR's request that he'll not be back for the twelfth season of CBS' "HAWAII FIVE-O." The personable actor has utilized his decade in the show and living in Hawaii into establishing several successful businesses. But more than that, Jim thought it was simply time for a change.

There's a whole lot of speculation on how JEAN STAPLETON's absence from "ARCHIE BUNKER" is going to be handled, especially since Jean will make a couple of guest appearances in the new concept which will star CARROLL O'CONNOR principally on his own. However, at the moment, the speculation is just that, since no scripts have been written.

Isn't it true that at least one of "CHARLIE'S ANGELS" couldn't be happier that KATE JACKSON won't be back this next season? CHERYL LADD is keeping her lips sealed, but there are those who insist that she's quite relieved to see the change made.

Now that LYNDA CARTER is no longer obligated to "WONDER WOMAN," it shouldn't be too long before word comes that she and hubby RON SAMUELS are going to be parents for the first time.

Once again, NBC was unable to come to terms with SHAUN CASSIDY for the premise of his own TV series. The contract between the actor/singer and the network seems to be all but discarded.

Predictably and seemingly with some justification, the folks at "GENERAL HOSPITAL" were more than a tad disappointed when no one from the daytime serial was nominated for a daytime Emmy Award. Of course, NBC's "DAYS OF OUR LIVES" received several nominations, as did CBS' "THE YOUNG & THE RESTLESS". With 'Hospital' being the highest-rated soap originating from the West Coast, it would seem that something isn't quite right.

Mayor Is Loved

David Huddleston stars as Mayor Cooper in "Hizzonner," a limited-run comedy series currently airing on NBC-TV Thursdays (8 to 8:30 p.m.).

Cooper, mayor of a mid-western city, is in many ways a throwback to mayor Fiorello La Guardia of New York City and Mayor Daley of Chicago in the way he loves his city and makes it work. He is in turn, loved by its citizenry.

McGavin To Star

Darren McGavin will star in "Home Again," an MTM Productions comedy pilot for NBC-TV. Also in the cast are Dick Sargent, Patricia Barry, Peter Jurasik and Alexandra Stoddart.

Tables Turned On Don

Bobby Quinn directs like Frank Sinatra keeps time — by snapping his fingers. But sometimes things happen so fast on "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson" he barely has time for even one snap.

Quinn was thinking about the time when, in the middle of a 'Tonight Show' taping, Johnny decided to go 'live' into the next studio where Don Rickles was rehearsing.

"Johnny returned to the show," Quinn recalled, "the day after Don Rickles was a guest host. Shortly after the telecast began, Johnny noticed his cigarette box was broken. He asked aloud who broke it. Ed McMahon told him Rickles had.

"Johnny asked if Don was rehearsing across the hall and when he learned that Rickles was, he said something to the effect, 'Let's go across the hall.'

"We took a portable light and with Johnny leading the way, using a microphone with a long cord, we moved across the hall and right smack in the middle of Don's rehearsal.

"Rickles, for one of the rare times in his professional life, was speechless. He knew Johnny was on the air and at first he just couldn't see how he was in this other studio. And Johnny let him have it about the broken cigarette box. He was almost doing a Rickles routine — but this time to Rickles!"

Garson Honored

Trouble, Odds Heavy

A free-wheeling young man finds romance and more racing action than he bargained for when he takes his supercharged set of wheels to the open road for a gear-grinding run against heavy odds in "Hot Rod," a premiere movie starring Gregg Henry ("Rich Man, Poor Man") and Grant Goodeve ("Eight Is Enough"), which will air as "The ABC Friday Night Movie," May 25 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Brian Edison (Henry) dreams of rebuilding his car's supercharged engine and entering the upcoming National Drag Racing Championships. His plans don't allow for coming head-to-head with T.L. Munn, the tyrannical "Root Beer King" of rural Lyons, Calif., whose son also has entered the races.

Munn does everything in his power to harass Brian, including setting Lyons' corrupt police chief on Brian's trail.

The cast also stars Goodeve as Sonny, Pernell Roberts as Sheriff Marsden, Robin Mattson as Jenny and Robert Culp as T.L. Munn. Co-starring are Royce Applegate as Hurricane, Topo Swope as Sprout, Ed Begley, Jr. as Clay, Bruce M. Fisher as Cannonball, Erik Holland as Barry Hogue and Julie Gibson as Violet.

Gregg Henry roars into a small town - and into a peck of trouble - in "Hot Rod," an adventure story of racing and romance on the "ABC Friday Night Movie," May 25 (9-11 p.m.).

Michele Will Tell

A: Now in her 50s, Mona ia married to L.A. businessman Jack Ellis, and is a dedicated homemaker these days. She has no further dreams of movie glory, and exercises her artistic talents via canvas and brush — painting portraits and landscapes.

Q: Will you please give me some information about Fess Parker? J. JOHNSON, HICKORY, N.C.

A: Parker, who made two of America's pioneer heroes, Davy Crockett and Daniel Boone, come alive again for our times, is a native Texan. A neck injury in college ended his dreams of an athletic career, and he switched to history and law. However, a chance meeting with the late actor Adolphe Menjou led him into drama. In addition to his frontier roles on television and in several movies, Fess has recorded an album.

Q: Why didn't Tina Louis play 'Ginger' on "The Castaways on Gilligan's Island"? What is she doing now? K. SIGMON, NEWTON, N.C.

A: Tina's many commitments kept her from rejoining the cast. She has a very busy life with her TV commercials, appearances on game shows and talk shows, and starring roles in feature films.

Q: Is it true that "Battlestar Galactica" may be back on another network? L. PONS, VALDESE, N.C.

A: A rumor is floating around that NBC's Fred Silverman was 'overheard' discussing this possibility, but there's been no confirmation.

Q: Why did the writers of "Dallas" start re-runs so quickly and leave viewers up in the air? I'm FURIOUS! 'BEA' IN FLORENCE, S.C.

A: Don't be mad. Be GLAD that the series has been renewed, and you won't have to stay 'up in the air' but for just a few months. P.S. Writers just LOVE to do that!

Four Days And One Infant

Four boys with the energy of 20 increase the membership of their neighborhood gang — devoted to stickball and generally harmless mischief — by one when they 'adopt' an abandoned baby girl in "The Baby With Four Fathers." The comedy of big-city childhood in the 1940s will air on the "ABC Weekend Specials" series Saturday, May 26 (12-noon to 12:30 p.m.).

The Loring Place Gang is made up of Billy D'Amico, the 11-year-old 'brains' of the group; 'Baldy' Egan, the rough-and-tumble 'older guy' (he's 12); Vinnie 'The Doctor,' who fears no man (or boy) and is already destined for the medical profession; and 'Horse,' who fears every man, woman and child in the neighborhood, but is a terrific guy anyway.

Slipping past their natural enemy — Paddy O'Brien, the night watchman (Rex Everhart), who foolishly thinks he can keep them off the private property he is protecting — the boys go exploring in an abandoned church on an island in the East River and find something a lot more exciting than pirate gold: a baby that nobody seems to want.

Should they notify the police, making themselves heroes and staying out of trouble . . . and condeming the baby — their baby — to an orphanage? As they used to say in the '40s — fat chance!

Golfs' Memorial Tournament

the Memorial Tournament 1979

This year's Memorial Tournament, played at Muirfield Village Golf Club, is dedicated to champion golfer Gene Sarazen. CBS will televise third-round play Saturday, May 26 (3:30-5 p.m.).

If past performances mean anything, the 1979 edition of the Memorial Tournament at Muirfield Village Golf Club could have the same look and end results of the Masters completed several weeks ago.

Following the first three Memorial events, Jack Nicklaus and Fuzzy Zoeller rank 1-2 at Muirfield and lurking close behind are Tom Watson, Jerry Pate, Lee Trevino and Bruce Lietzke.

All six of these players, along with every other 1979 PGA Tour winner, will be in attendance for the Memorial Tournament, and CBS will televise the third-round play Saturday, May 26 (3:30 to 5 p.m.).

Nicklaus leads the list of past Memorial performances, having played the previous three events in three under par with an average finish of 4.3 and one victory, in 1977. Zoeller has played in the last two tournaments, finishing one under par with third and fifth place efforts. Nicklaus, who in addition to the victory has tied for eighth and fourth, and Zoeller are the only two players to conclude their Memorial appearances with under par totals.

Each year, the Memorial Tournament honors a champion golfer, and the 1979 honoree is Gene Sarazen, the first golfer to capture four major championships including back-to-back victories at the 1932 United States and British Opens. He won seven major championships and 63 various titles.

Sarazen was born on Feb. 27, 1902, in Harrison, N.Y. The son of an immigrant Italian carpenter-contractor, he became a caddie at the age of eight and began to make golf his career eight years later. Among the smallest of the great players at 5-foot 5-inches and 145 lbs., he was also one of the strongest and fittest as evidenced by the duration of his playing career — an all-time record.

Always a strong promoter of golf and good causes, Sarazen made one particular contribution to the welfare of ordinary golfers the world over that might be the greatest of any champion. In the winter of 1931-32, he struggled for months to apply a principle of aerodynamics to a pitching club to improve his bunker play. He succeeded, giving golf the sand-iron — and thereby perhaps taking more heartache out of the game for average players than any man in history.

Although officially retired from tournament golf, Gene Sarazen continues to play the game regularly for fun with friends at his home in Marco Island, Fla., where he retired after many years of farming in New England and New York State. Reports are that, at age 76, he is rarely much over par, and frequently under it for nine or so holes.

The Teen Scene

If JIMMY McNICHOL's new CBS series, "WE'RE CRUISIN'," makes it in the ratings early in the new season so that it's still around for the second half of the season when "FAMILY" returns to ABC, it'll be the second time inside three years that Jim and sister KRISTY will have series on primetime at the same time.

LEIF GARRETT really wasn't disappointed that his variety show didn't make it as a series. He's currently on tour in Spain and will star in his first major film later this summer. He also has tours planned that promise to keep him busy until beyond this time next year anyway!

GREG EVIGAN may be one of Hollywood's most handsome bachelors, but he's not necessarily an available bachelor. His steady girl is named PAM, a singer/dancer who lives in New York.

Early reports from the location of "THE BOY WHO DRANK TOO MUCH" has it that both LANCE KERWIN and SCOTT BAIO have been so stunned to learn just how serious teen-age alcoholism is that both will be making public service messages warning their peers about the problem.

Apparently, VALERIE BERTINELLI and her off-screen — as well as on-screen boyfriend — SCOTT COLOMBY, have broken up and gone their separate ways. What'll happen if Scott is called upon for a guest appearance on "ONE DAY AT A TIME" is anybody's guess.

Despite rumors to the contrary, "ANGIE" star DONNA PESCOW says she and actor MARK HARMON are just friends, not sweethearts.

The Big Day Is Approaching

Memorial Day weekend is fast approaching and, as race fans everywhere know, that is synonymous with the running of the Indianapolis 500. The major car race in the United States, if not the world, is one of the classic legends of American sports.

A.J. Foyt, the only four-time winner in the history of the Indy 500, will be back for the 22nd straight time, and he will be driving a Parnelli VPJ-Cosworth. The legendary Texan is, without question, the most renowned name in auto racing today.

It all began for A.J. back when he was only three years old. That's when his father, Tony — a racer himself — gave his son a blood-red toy racer. By his mid-teens, A.J. was driving motorcyles, midgets, Indy cars and stockers on dirt, asphalt, backwood and big tracks. In other words, all he needed was a set of wheels. He would find the time and the place to race.

A.J. went to Lamar High School in Houston and, before he graduated, he had made his professional racing debut at Houston's Playland Park.

Now in his forties, Foyt drives his crew and himself to the point of exhaustion: sometimes he'll abruptly fire a mechanic in the dark of night. "Racing is still my business, and like anything else, there is no room for errors, either by the driver or his crew," Foyt says.

He still enjoys being on the track. "The name of the game is being happy. And I'm happiest when my car is performing well, when you know that the crew and yourself have put everything together right."

On Sunday, May 20 (6 to 7 p.m.), ABC Sports will air a special program featuring live coverage of the final day of Time Trials, known as "Bumping Day."

Bumping Day refers to last-ditch efforts of drivers who have not qualified for the field of 33. "bumping" the slowest of the qualifiers in the previous Time Trials. The tension that builds up in the closing minutes of the final day of Time Trials is a unique, human drama.

The Indianapolis 500 will offer prize money in excess of $1 million, and a projected attendance estimate predicts that there will be 300,000 spectators at the storied Indianapolis Motor Speedway for the all-important race.

Miller Scripting

Herman Miller will write a two-hour pilot for a projected series entitled "The Nightingales." The project deals with medical teams of the U.S. Military Airlift Command, which operates flying hospitals for the emergeney transportation of seriously ill or injured persons throughout the world.

Rights Acquired

Rights were acquired during the principal photography of the film for a figure in the $3 million range.

No air date has been given at this time.

Thompson Plays 3-On-3

Denver Nugget teammates David Thompson and George McGinnis find themselves on opposing sides when CBS Sports broadcasts the first semi-final match of "Three on Three," Sunday, May 20 (1 to 1:30 p.m.).

Teaming with Thompson, the former North Carolina State star, is singer Pat Boone and former Phoenix Sun standout Tom Van Arsdale. McGinnis is joined by actor Kevin Dobson and the coach of the New Jersey Nets, Kevin Loughery.

To reach this level in the competition, Thompson's squad defeated a team composed of the Houston Rockets' Calvin Murphy, former New York Knicks' great Dave DeBusschere, and actor William Devane. McGinnis' club advanced by defeating the team of Doug Collins (Philadelphia 76ers) former Baltimore Bullet star Gus Johnson, and the versatile performer Ben Vereen.

While a student at N. C. State, Thompson made every All-American team possible with his fantastic performances. And yet, it was his college coach, Norman Sloan, who gave him the best honor of all when he said: "God didn't give many players David's talent, but He didn't give any others the personality and humility to go with it, like He did David. He will be one of the greatest."

Thompson wound up being the NBA's number one draft pick. However, he chose the clean air of Denver and the ABA to the too-few dollars of the NBA's Atlanta Hawks.

Many people credit the $3-million signing of Thompson as the wedge which, along with Julius Erving, allowed the ABA to merge with the NBA.

The youngest of 11 children, Thompson grew up as a barefoot farmboy shooting at baskets nailed to trees in the cotton country of Shelby, N.C., and he hasn't forgotten his family.

"The first thing I wanted to do was something for my family," he says. "I have strong family ties. They have done a lot for me, and I want them to be comfortable. I have been willing to provide any extravagance they might want. I have 10 brothers and sisters and a truckload of nieces and nephews. And as I got more popular, I gained more relatives."

David Thompson finds himself opposing his Denver Nugget teammate George McGinnis in the first semi-final match of CBS Sports' "Three on Three" Sunday, May 20 (1 to 1:30 p.m.).

Winkler And Stallone Star

Henry Winkler and Sylvester Stallone, two "new faces" shining under ducktail haircuts, made their movie debuts in "The Lords of Flatbush," a nostalgic comedy of good-hearted young hoodlums which will air on "The CBS Saturday Night Movies," May 26 (9:30 to 11 p.m.).

Winkler, with the same grease job and black leather upholstery that helped make him a television star as Fonzie in "Happy Days," and Stallone — puzzled as to how he can raise several thousand dollars for a wedding ring (he was not yet a contender for the heavyweight boxing championship) — are reluctant students at a Brooklyn high school in 1957. Along with their two pals, played by Perry King and Paul Mace, they make up a small but select "social athletic club" ("we play a little pool, bust a few heads") called The Lords of Flatbush. Their social and athletic activity is mainly composed of "trading hits" in the candy store, harmonizing on streetcorners, dodging marriage (not always successfully) and generally "hanging out." None is destined for Harvard or corporate power.

Susan Blakely, who has since achieved her own stardom in "Rich Man, Poor Man," is one of the teenage pleated-skirt-with-a-poodle queens who inspire the Lords to such heights of gallantry as stealing a car (only temporarily) for a drive-in movie trip.

The concerns of the Lords are those of the "trouble-free" teen years (which seem slightly more troubled than the Hundred Years War while they're going on) — girls' parents who know the boys aren't good enough for their little girls, star athletes who are good enough; close and undying friendships among the boys that will die along with their acne, and the ever-present deadly danger of growing up.

Other teenage queens who lead the Lords onward and downward are Maria Smith and Renee Paris (regal gumchewers romantically named Frannie Malincanico and Annie Yuckamenelli).

Lord Honored

Jack Lord, star of "Hawaii Five-O," has been named "Citizen of the Year" by the Tripler Army Medical Center in Hawaii for its annual Federal Day awards program.

The special award goes to private citizens "for contributions to the federal community."

An organizer of the annual "Salute to Hospitalized Veterans" for the past six years, Lord this year arranged for more than 90 celebrities and dignitaries to participate in the "No Greater Love" program for hospitalized veterans.

Presentation of the Federal Day awards will be made this week at a luncheon in Honolulu.

How To Make A Good Marriage Better

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

Without imports there would be disaster.

FOR ROBERT BERGLAND, Secretary of Agriculture

What agricultural products must the U.S. import? —E.T., Goldsboro, N.C.

● More than half of what we import are commodities not grown here commercially, such as coffee, cocoa beans, bananas, rubber, spices, tea, chocolate. Many countries rely very heavily on their sales to the U.S. — Central and South America, Spain, Poland, Yugoslavia, Turkey, Malaysia, Australia and others. If we stopped importing agricultural products, including those that compete with our own production, it would be disastrous to the economies of dozens of countries. By the same token, if all world markets were closed to our farm exports, well over one million Americans would be thrown out of work, one-third of our productive cropland would be idled, the national balance of payments would suffer an additional $10-$12 billion deficit, and domestic food prices would rise.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

● We don't know about "painfully," but it's true that she's bashful. All those who worked with her on Just You and Me Kid (including co-star George Burns) report that she's not particularly verbal, is extremely reserved and is far from the worldly and sophisticated youngster they thought she'd be. Brooke's mom has to push her to mix with kids her own age (13) because she hates making overtures lest they think she's pushy. One day, the director of Just You and Me Kid could not get Brooke to wipe a worried look off her face. He thought she was wrestling with the way the scene should be played. She wasn't. She was far more concerned at the moment with an imminent history test. As well as learning her lines, she also had to memorize schoolwork, a problem that the grown-up actors didn't have.

Schoolgirl Brooke—the bashful beauty.

FOR ADRIENNE BARBEAU, actress

Why have you been turning down so many TV roles lately? —S.K., Canton, Ohio

● Last January, John (director John Carpenter) and I got married — which came as a great surprise to me because I never thought I would, or wanted to, take the plunge. I feel strongly about taking off on location for extended periods of time. Right now, I don't fancy the idea of being away from John, and a lot of the stuff I've said "no" to involved a long separation from him.

FOR BARRY MANILOW, composer-recording star

Who is Heather Nelson, to whom you dedicated your album, "Even Now"? —M.A., Austin, Texas

● She was the 11-year-old daughter of a very close friend. Heather died when I was in the middle of cutting this album. Right before her death, my dog, Bagel, became a mom. I promised Heather that when she got better she could have one of the puppies. The last thing that she saw before she died was a picture of the puppy, propped up by the lamp beside her bed.

FOR STUART GROUT, Executive Vice President, Seeing Eye, Inc.

Why is it that only one breed of dog can be used as "seeing eyes? What about the St. Bernards? And how many dogs have you trained? —N.I., Cheyenne, Wyo.

● The German shepherd is often perceived as "The Seeing Eye" dog because it was the first breed used by the school. The school now trains Labrador and golden retrievers and some mixed breeds, too. The St. Bernard is too large for guide work. We have trained some 7,500 dogs.

FOR KAREN LOGAN, Women's Basketball League

Why do TV sports announcers sometimes irritate you? —Vera Lloyd, Boise, Idaho

● The most upsetting thing about female sports announcers is their lack of knowledge on the subject they're discussing, which means they don't conduct an intelligent interview. Consequently, they tend to make you appear as unversed in your sport as they are. On the other hand, many male announcers usually know the subject matter, but seldom take it seriously. Women's athletics are still a joke to them.

FOR ANN COMPTON, correspondent, ABC-TV News

Is there any danger attached to your work? T.R., Richmond, Ind.

● Well...we've considered asking for combat pay for hair-raising helicopter rides through mountain winds to get our video tape to a satellite ground station; for running at breakneck pace amid a rampaging herd of television mini-cams and technicians to catch a Presidential motorcade; or for being caught in the cross-fire of stage egg rolls during a food rebellion on a Carter campaign charter flight in 1976.

FOR JOHN GABRIEL, star of ABC-TV's Ryan's Hope

Have you picked up any medical knowledge from your role of a doctor? —L.W., Staunton, Va.

● For example, my "wife" developed an aneurism, which is a sac formed by local enlargement of the weakened wall of an artery, and one child was delivered with hydrocephalus, which is an increase in the fluid in the brain. With all this knowledge, though — since I lost my first "wife" during an operation on the show — my real-life kids won't even let me put Mercurochrome on their cuts.

PRO AND CON

Should There Be Direct Election of the President?

PRO Senator Birch Bayh (D.-Indiana)

The United States has been playing "electoral roulette" with its method of choosing the President and Vice President. Under the Electoral College, it is possible for a candidate to win the popular vote election and yet not be elected President (this has happened three times in our history). Moreover, due to the distribution of electoral votes to states, a citizen's vote cast in Indiana, for example, which can influence 13 electoral votes, does not carry as much weight as one cast in California, which can influence 45 electoral votes. Finally, candidates ignore states where they are far behind or ahead. Direct election is the way of insuring that the candidate winning the most votes wins.

CON Senator Orrin G. Hatch (R.-Utah)

Do you want a President who carried none of the states and only 41 percent of the vote nationwide? Or a President who swept the 10 largest states of the northeast but received few votes in the other 40? And what of a President confirmed only after bitterly disputed recounts, tainted by charges of massive vote fraud? All three scenarios could take place if we abolish our Constitution's Electoral College and replace it with Senator Bayh's direct election system. We would soon find our elections turned into chaotic battles fought mainly in the few large states. Regional and one-issue candidates would confuse voters seeking a clear choice between candidates representing nationwide constituencies.

DISCO SWEEPS THE NATION

By Bruce Pollock

A once-staid supper club in suburban Westport, Conn., now has lines around the block, since the owners converted a portion of the upstairs dining area into a disco.

The previously placid home of "the mellow sound" on New York City radio, WKTU, suddenly switched to an all-disco format last summer, and within months became the number-one rated station in the market.

In Chicago, in Phoenix, in Los Angeles, in Boston and other cities, hordes of hustling kids in three-piece suits and party dresses jump their afternoons away at teen and kiddie discos that are, in most cases, adult discos by night.

Within the space of two years Saturday Night Fever has gone from cult to craze to epidemic, with discos springing up in bowling alleys, shopping centers, roller rinks. Disco is taking over society and the society pages, and becoming a catch-all panacea for a nation's collective physical, emotional and psychological ills. And what was until then a formless, imitative decade has now been shot with life, and given an identity. Its citizens, liberated at last from the shadow of Woodstock, have received a name of their own: The Disco Generation.

"I think a lot of it has to do with the social implications of the day," says Ray Caviano, the president of his own Warner Brothers-funded disco record label, RFC. "We're not on a civil rights kick, the Vietnam war isn't an issue, we've been through our Timothy Leary soul-searching. Music in those days was more conducive to statements than to rhythm. Now people are dancing and escaping and having a good time. At the disco you're part of the entertainment. There's an emotional outpouring which keeps you coming back for more."

Arriving in a decade of body-awareness, physical fitness and beautiful people, disco seems perfectly wedded to the times. Merged with exploding American technological know-how, the disco may also be the ultimate arena for musical expression. That is why performers like the Bee Gees, Mick Jagger, Rod Stewart and even Dolly Parton are finding they can increase their appeal, if not establish totally new careers, by tapping into this vast and growing market.

"It's a new way of making records," says Stash Furman, one of the founders of the mobile disco operation, Disco Van 2000. "The bass dominates instead of the voice and guitar. You don't have great lyrics, but it's a great feeling. Once you get out on the dance floor with the music and the lights going, you can't think of anything else, there's nothing else in your mind. You get carried away by the music, the good feelings. It becomes contagious."

So contagious, in fact, that there are, at last count, some 37 million people currently shaking their assorted "groove things" at approximately 10,000 discos all across the country. "Disco, as far as we're concerned, hasn't started yet," says Furman. "We're into a dance cycle right now. People don't want to be observers, they want to participate. You go to a disco, you're the star."

Bob Bielk / Asbury Park Press

F.P.G.

America's last all-out disco craze occurred in 1962 when Chubby Checker brought greasers, street people and politician's wives together in cramped quarters to undulate to the Twist tempo. But the euphoria of those disco-goers was shattered by the Kennedy assassination, leading to a more somber, introspective music. Even the arrival of the Beatles early in 1964 couldn't fully reactivate our dancing feet. Today's disco renaissance, with its seething African rhythms and lush European orchestrations, its high-profile celebrity hangouts and state-of-the-art light and sound systems, owes its existence primarily to the trend-setting East Coast, where many thrive on what has been described as the "Primal Scream Disco Moment." Whether it's the unsubtle ministrations of Donna Summer or Barry White, the funky, rambling digressions of Isaac Hayes or the string-laden disco sonatas of France's Jean-Marc Cerrone, the music of the disco is a clear, loud and pointed antithesis of the moody messages of just a decade ago. As Caviano says: "There are no blues at the disco, that's the key."

Beyond antithesis, though, beyond escape, the disco experience has quite a bit more going for it. "From a psychological point of view, a disco is an enormously saturated, affective environment, one that's designed to create a tremendously high level of emotional response," says science writer Stewart Kranz, author of Science & Technology & the Arts. "You can't even walk through one without getting wound up. It creates a very powerful psychological inducement for fantasy, and for getting rid of your aggressions."

Like the multimedia hardware powering its engine, the disco runs on several levels at once, providing a wide variety of stimuli for its patrons. "It's the type of activity that can satisfy many needs at the same time, that's why it's so popular," says Dr. David Sheskin, an associate professor of psychology at Western Connecticut State College in Danbury. "It's a way to be competent at something and get the respect of one's peers. It relates to status, power, looking good. It definitely fulfills exhibitionistic and sensual needs, which can be acted out at the disco. Some people are much less inhibited on the dance floor than they are in the bedroom."

The disco can be a self-contained, self-centered unit, conjuring its own set of rules, rituals and mores. Billy Brazier, one of the owners of Bunyan's, the supper club/disco in Westport, comments: "Here a single guy might bump into a single girl, spend two hours with her, dancing and having a drink or two, and when they part it's 'bye, see you here next week, and nothing seems to be expected. Whereas if a guy sat at the bar downstairs talking with a girl for two hours, buying her drinks, then it would be pretty much assumed that they would walk out together."

As the relentless beat churns higher and higher, diehard fans and recent converts are wondering, how long can it last? Is disco just a momentary passion, thrust into the spotlight by media hungry for novelty? Or is it destined to become the major entertainment form for the 80's, uniting fad, fashion and fantasy into a cross-cultural melting pot?

While optimists are rushing to install mirrored balls, Xenon strobes and programmed lights in their own homes to recapture that Saturday Night Fever ambiance, others are not so smug. "It'll probably burn itself out very quickly, because too many people are jumping on the bandwagon," asserts Scott Anderson, editor of Disco News, an industry newsletter. "A lot of clubs will fold because of poor management. A lot of radio stations will do really well and then start to fall apart."

Whatever its ultimate fate a year or two down the road, disco now seems to be draining fans and performers from the ranks of rock 'n' roll almost daily. Everyone is eager to hook into the latest music-and-lifestyle movement. Even Scott Anderson admits the end is not yet in sight. "Like anything in the music business," he says, "it'll climax, and then there'll be a saturation point. That's when it really sells, on the way down after it's gotten to the top. The sell-through is where the big money is.

"On those terms, disco is only just now breaking into the Top 40." FW

FOR DONNA SUMMER, IT'S A LONG, HOT SEASON

Scavullo/Casablanca Records

She's had five solid-gold albums, and a string of chart-busting disco singles. She had a prominent role in the disco film, Thank God It's Friday, and she'll have her own TV special in September. She even has her signature on a line of customized disco fabrics. And there's a Grammy on her mantelpiece for her rendition of "Last Dance." So why is Donna Summer, sometimes known as the Queen of Disco, suffering from an identity problem?

"I don't want to be categorized as a singer," Donna asserted from Los Angeles, where she's been putting the final touches on her sixth album, to be titled Bad Girls. "Any artist could make a disco record. Any artist can do country & western. There's no reason why more people don't just sing what they want to sing. That's what I'm trying to do, because I love music, period. I love disco music, but I also love rock 'n' roll, country, jazz, gospel, and I especially love classical music. I don't want to eliminate all of those things from my life because I am now a disco singer. I will incorporate them, and try to educate the audience to like some of the things I like."

Educating her audience should begin with the release of the new album, on which most of the above forms of music will be showcased. It will continue when Donna brings her act to Las Vegas. And it will perhaps culminate on national television. "I will definitely have a lot of influence on the show," Donna stated. "I am actively involved in everything that I do, otherwise I don't get involved. If I'm doing a Donna Summer special, it's got to be a reflection of me."

Another reflection of Donna is her devotion to her family. Her five-year-old daughter, Mimi, recently appeared with her on the International Year of the Child telecast for UNICEF, to which she donated the royalties for "Mimi's Song," from her Live and More album. Currently, Donna is producing an album by a group called Sunshine, comprised of her four younger sisters: "It's a project I wanted to work on for years."

Born in Boston approximately 30 years ago, Donna had to journey to Munich to find recognition as a singer and an actress, appearing there in the German version of Hair. Through the auspices of top European producers Giorgio Moroder and Pete Bellotte, she was soon a Continental sensation, and international disco fame was but a "Love to Love You, Baby" away. It is ironic, then, that the current disco epidemic, signaled by her own highly prized Grammy, might pave the way for Donna to resume her acting career.

"If I'm going to act, I'm going to really act," she said, noting that she's already considering five or six offers. "It's going to be a serious role, or a comedy role. Something that will make people view me as an actress, and not just as a singer in a movie."

With offers for future projects pouring in, Donna Summer is in the morning-after stage of her "overnight success" — made possible by years of unheralded labor. "I'm torn 20 ways just trying to take everything in," she said. "Finishing my album, doing my sisters' album, getting ready to go on the road, and all of the other things (the TV special, the line of fabrics, the movie offers). And I'm still trying to be a girlfriend, a mother, a friend. It gets kind of maddening. I'm a very busy person. I like to be creative on a number of levels, and it's hard to do it all, but I'm going to try.

"I guess this is where every artist wants to be in his life," she conceded wearily. "In a fairly secure place, so you can say, 'I don't feel like doing this now.' Or, 'I don't have to go on the road if I don't want to.' When you can get to that place, it's a wonderful feeling."

HOW TO MAKE A GOOD MARRIAGE BETTER

By Marilyn Murray Willison

Illustrations / Doris Ettlinger

In an age in which divorce seems to strike someone in every family; in which the home is a stopping-off place for changing clothes between engagements; in which children are regarded as an unnecessary infringement on individual freedoms, a growing number of people are trying to change the prevailing negative attitudes about marriage, home and family. These people are the one million Americans who have participated in a Marriage Encounter weekend.

Ten different religions (including Catholic, Jewish and Protestant sects) in all 50 states offer secularized versions of the Marriage Encounter program — a program designed to remind people that matrimony is a sacred and serious union. In light of the self-centered attitudes that characterize what Tom Wolfe has dubbed the "Me Generation," one might think that an organization dedicated to the arts of compromise, communication and perseverance would flounder. Nothing could be further from the truth, as Encounter veterans testify.

Frank and Barbara learned more about each other in three days of a Marriage Encounter than they'd learned in 26 years of marriage.

- Eugene had been married to Joan for 16 years when they attended a Marriage Encounter weekend near their Pennsylvania home. "It was critical for me to find importance in who I am — rather than in what I do for a living and what I own. The weekend brought all this into focus — how we were living parallel lives, how our priorities were wrong, how we were unable to share ourselves with each other. Marriage Encounter gave us the tools to turn our relationship around."
- Al and Marge of Louisiana found, "We'd been living in the same house, yet doing our own things, and not very involved with each other. On our Encounter we discovered that adapting from ME to WE was interesting and rewarding."
- Frank and Barbara of Ohio said, "We learned more about each other in three days than we had in 26 years of marriage. It's beautiful."
- Kit and Ken of California said, "We've made each other the most important person in our lives. Now we no longer need to compete in jobs or anything else."

These comments may sound like phrases from romantic novels, but statements like them are being voiced all across the country by people who have rediscovered each other through Marriage Encounter.

Encounter weekends usually involve around 20 couples, three "lead" couples and a religious leader — priest, rabbi or minister. The weekend is structured around two goals: helping each person to get to know himself better, and then helping spouses to get to know each other better.

To accomplish both aims, couples listen to presentations from Encounter leaders on thought-provoking topics. To get participants in touch with their own feelings, for example, leaders might first discuss such questions as, "What are your favorite childhood memories?" or, "What do you really want to get out of life?" Leaders are often frank in talking about their own experiences and feelings.

Kit and Ken no longer feel so driven about their careers, now that they've "made each other the most important person in our lives."

then send participants back to their rooms to think of and write down their own responses to the questions.

Once personal feelings have been explored, participants are encouraged to work towards a meaningful dialogue with their spouses. The leaders again give presentations, this time on such marriage-related topics as, "How do I feel when I hurt you?" or, "What feelings do I find most difficult to share with you?" Again, participants return to their rooms and write down their thoughts. Afterwards, they are encouraged to share what they have written with their spouses, in the privacy of each couple's room. It is time set aside for husband and wife to grow closer through a new kind of sharing.

To keep from raising couples' unrealistic hopes, Marriage Encounter doesn't claim to help problem marriages. There is no magic way, Encounter spokesmen say, to change a drastically mismatched relationship. Dull but satisfactory marriages are more easily helped by an Encounter weekend than bad ones. In that spirit, Marriage Encounter is heralded as a 44-hour program for people who have a good marriage but want to make it better. Apparently, many modern couples want to do just that. Begun in Spain in the early 60's, Marriage Encounter has grown to include five continents and 30 countries around the world — all without the benefit of advertising.

In this country, couples meet in former retreat houses, motels, or any meeting place that allows couples to eat, meet, and enjoy the privacy needed for the movement's dialogues. Unlike other forms of self-help or therapy, no fee is required. Participating couples pay whatever they feel they can afford and want to contribute. Some return more than once, for follow-up sessions. The movement now includes sessions for engaged couples, too.

For those who cry that marriage and the family are bygone aspects of American life, the Marriage Encounter movement serves as a quiet reminder that old-fashioned values are slowly making a comeback. The Marriage Encounter motto — "Making good marriages better — making better marriages great" — just might be the antidote to the growing trend of unrewarding relationships, divorce and uprooted families. If it is not the answer, it is, at least, a beginning. FW

Family Report

By Norman Lobsenz

Shifting Work Shifts Strain Family Life

Millions of wage earners work at jobs that require them to rotate their work shifts at regular intervals. Now psychologists at the Stanford Research Institute say that constantly changing job schedules — from day shift to night shift to "overnight" shift (that grim stretch from midnight to dawn) — can have seriously damaging results.

Studies of nearly 3,000 employees showed that those who changed their working hours every few weeks or so had more accidents, more illnesses, more sexual problems. They also reported a higher incidence of alcoholism, insomnia and family conflicts. Nor does it help to stay on a rotating shift pattern for long periods of time to "get accustomed" to it. The longer a person works on this kind of a schedule, say the researchers, the more likely he or she is to suffer these results.

Part of the problem is due, obviously, to disturbances in sleeping and eating patterns, and to difficulties in meshing the social and domestic lives of family members. But according to Dr. Donald Tasto, psychologist in charge of the research study, the basic problem lies in the disruption of crucial biological rhythms. "When a person inverts the sleep cycle by 180 degrees," he says, "it takes three to four weeks for the daily rhythms of the body to become synchronized again." But for workers on rotating shifts, these rhythms are likely to be upset just when they begin to stabilize.

Not much can be done to counteract the effect of shifting biological rhythms. The best suggestions include: special efforts to create a quiet and dark sleeping environment for night-shift workers who must rest during the day; special attention to nutrition; and, perhaps most important of all, an understanding spouse.

When A Spouse Loses Weight, A Marriage Can Lose, Too

Family counselors have long surmised that when one partner in a marriage undergoes a great change, either for better or for worse, the stability of the marriage itself may be in danger. New evidence to support that theory comes from a recent study of marriages in which one of the spouses went from being vastly overweight to being reasonably slender. According to psychiatrists from the Universities of Wisconsin and Kentucky who interviewed a number of such couples, most of the marriages either broke up or were going through a considerable amount of turmoil.

Before the loss of weight, the experts said, couples were held together by their jointly shared feelings of social insecurity and low self-esteem, due in large part to the obesity of one of the spouses. With the weight loss, however, the newly thin partner became more self-confident, developed a sense of greater self-worth, and felt less emotionally dependent on the spouse. With a more attractive physical appearance, the formerly fat partner became more interested in sex — a threatening development, in most instances, for the other partner, who tended to grow jealous and apprehensive. (One husband took a second, night-time job to avoid his wife's new sexual demands; three others became impotent). One slimmed-down husband set out to improve his professional and social life, leading his wife to worry that he would eventually leave her. Some formerly obese wives, who had rarely left home because of their appearances, began taking outside jobs and leaving the housework to their spouses.

Counselors say most couples faced with such a change will adjust to it. But if possible, it's wiser to prepare emotionally for a major marital change by discussing it with a doctor or a family therapist. FW

DAN RATHER WOULD PREFER TO BE AT HOME

By Betsy Carter

The offices of the preeminent news magazine show ought to be housed in palatial splendor, but the home of 60 Minutes is tucked away like an afterthought in the recesses of the CBS News Building. These quarters hardly seem large enough to contain some of the largest egos in television. In fact, they are downright Spartan.

In one cubicle, no larger than a waiting room, resides Dan Rather, one of the four co-editors of the 10-year-old news show. Sporting a custom-tailored, pinstriped suit and his crisp, courtly manners, Rather sits in front of a floor-to-ceiling map of the world. To hear the 47-year-old reporter tell it, however, he is actually on top of the world. "This job is as close to heaven as I expect to get," he says with a slight hominy-grits drawl.

Indeed, in a business where colleagues would just as soon cut your throat as shake your hand and where office gossip is the sustaining manna, Rather has always been something of an alien. "I don't have the eye or stomach for gossip," says Rather, whose colleagues sometimes mistake reserve for standoffishness. Nor is he given to on-the-set bantering. "Television doesn't come naturally to me," he says. "Whenever I'm on, it takes a lot of concentration for me to do what I do. There is no time for fooling around."

Television may not come naturally to Rather, but in a sense he is perfectly made for TV. He is a scrupulous, competitive reporter, admired by colleagues for his hard-nosed and intelligent probing. Besides, he has the good looks of a soap opera hero. His gun-metal eyes, coal-black hair with puffs of gray and impressive east-to-west grin transmit very pleasantly over a TV screen. Even more important, Rather is believable. He has that elusive mix of earnestness and integrity that rank him as a high six-figure communicator.

If Rather has finally reached his nirvana, the road to heaven has not exactly been lined with lilies. Instead, his angels have been searing ambition, unfailing persistence and more luck than could fit on the head of a pin.

Rather was born in Wharton, Texas, and remains steeped in that state's tradition of pride and loyalty. He is fond of saying that "There is nothing like a dose of Texas for out-of-control egos," and often he and his wife Jean recharge with a week in their home state.

The son of a ditch digger, he worked his way through Sam Houston Teacher's College by taking odd jobs on oil rigs and at gas stations before landing a position on a local radio station.

Much of Rather's career has been marked by adversity — not his own. In 1960, for example, after he had been working for the CBS Houston affiliate KHOU-TV for a year, Hurricane Carla swooped down on the coast of Texas and swept reporter Rather into the national limelight. On assignment at the site of the weather bureau's radar equipment on Galveston Island, Rather was literally marooned for three days with his camera crew. Their eye-to-eye coverage of the storm's impact received round-the-clock air play and won the state's Sigma Delta Chi Award for distinguished journalism. It also catapulted Rather to the job of network correspondent.

His first assignment was Dallas. Rather was there on November 22, 1963, when President Kennedy was shot. Continuous television coverage seemed to comfort the country with electronic sanity, and Rather's steady, composed reportage during those days did much to calm the grieving nation. Two months after the assassination, Rather moved north to take up his new post as CBS White House correspondent.

These were heady years for Rather, who was amassing national television exposure, newly accorded celebrity status and long days, even months, on the run away from his family. With a wife and two young children at home, Rather realizes, in retrospect, that he was investing in his career at tremendous personal costs.

With her husband on the road at least nine months out of the year, Jean Rather had to be ready to pack and move at the whim of a network — never mind raise two children, Daniel and Robin. Somehow, she also found time to become an accomplished painter and dedicated tennis pro as well. "If Jean resented me during those times, she never let me know," says Dan gratefully.

Television careers are strewn with broken marriages, and Dan credits his wife for keeping the Rathers off the casualty list. "We've been married for 23 years," he says. "The record says that someone had to work very hard at it — I credit Jean with the work."

The Rathers met when both were working at a local Texas radio station. Neither had even been out of Texas, and both of them grew up very fast together. "Jean knows me better than anyone else. She always knew how badly I wanted to do what I was doing. Her attitude was, 'If he does what he wants to do, it's up to me to keep us all together.' There's no way I would have put up with what she did. I wouldn't have blamed her if she said, 'Whoa, there is so much I'm going to take, and no more.'"

Jean didn't even say 'whoa' to her son's peculiar passion for exotic animals. When Dan Jr. was an adolescent, he developed a fondness for reptiles and amphibians and housed many of their species in the family's basement. At one point, the Rather livestock included two iguanas (one that matured to 5 feet, another to 3½ feet), several horned toads, a king snake, an indigo and a boa. "Jean was very tolerant of all this," laughs Dan. "The only place she drew the line was with the boa that had to be fed live animals." Jean insisted that Dan feed him only when she and Robin were out.

Still, being the children of a TV star was not all fun and horned toads for the Rather kids. It's not easy trying to explain to very little children why their father is never home. Jean Rather solved the problem by telling her kids that in frontier families, the father had to go where the buffalo roamed and leave the family for a while. "Your father is a buffalo hunter," she would tell her children.

The big-time buffalo hunter is actually "a workaholic, consumed by what I do." And that leaves little time for playing Daddy. In The Camera Never Blinks, written with Mickey Herskowitz, Rather painfully recalls a night when he popped in on little Dan and a playmate. "Who's that?" he heard the friend ask. "That was Dan Rather," answered little Dan.

Nor was it easy on the Rather kids when their father found himself high on President Nixon's enemies list. Several times they bore the brunt for what others regarded as their father's insubordination to the President. "That was a low time for us," says Rather. "There was this sense of walking over a tremendous lake of ice with the knowledge that any moment the ice would crack and each step was your last. When we finally got all the way across, we looked back and wondered how the hell it could have all happened — it took a long time to recover from that."

Fortunately, the Rathers have not always treaded on thin ice. "The up side of my work is that I've made a good living," says Rather. "We are a blessed family — to use an archaic word that we often use at home. We have a good spiritual and material life."

The family lives comfortably on Manhattan's East Side. Robin, 19, attends Tufts University, where she carries a double major in French and sociology. Her goal is to become a physical therapist. Dan, 18, is in his first year at Columbia and seems to be interested in classical literature. While journalism schools around them are teeming with potential Woodwards, Bernsteins and Rathers, neither of the correspondent's children shows any interest in pursuing Dan's career.

The fact that his profession has recently taken on a patina of glamour and glitter confounds Rather. Completely at ease interviewing anybody from a neo-nazi to a head of state, he simply gets tongue-tied when would-be fans grab him at airports or accost him on the street. "I tend to tighten up and get nervous. It's the one situation in life in which I'm uncomfortable," he says. "My ego is located solely in my reporting, not in having people run up and recognize me."

But beneath the bourbon-smooth voice and schoolboy sincerity, Rather is like a champagne cork ready to pop. It shows itself as indignation on 60 Minutes, where he relishes revealing wrongdoing in high places.

And it sputters forth as fury when his professionalism is questioned. After a White House stint marked by querulous exchanges with President Nixon, Rather was made anchorman of CBS Reports. From there, he hosted the network's short-lived Who's Who? and then was assigned to 60 Minutes.

To hear the fruit flies of the trade tell it, the contest for the successor to Walter Cronkite on the evening news has always been between Rather and correspondent Roger Mudd. Could the network be letting Rather ripen in his current job until the anchor chair is vacant?

"Bullfeathers!" fumes Rather. "60 Minutes is certainly not a rehabilitation center for me. I wouldn't turn down the anchor if they gave it to me, but I'm prideful enough to think I could do any job in this business. Besides, from what people around here have told me, Roger's got it — there is no contest."

Maybe not. But then why is Dan Rather off and running 110 hours a week? FW

Dan gives Jean credit for holding the family together, against "terrific odds."

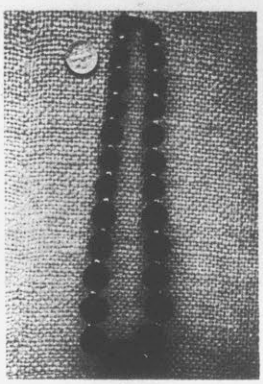
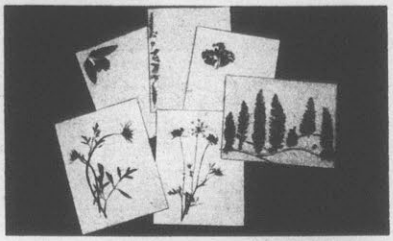
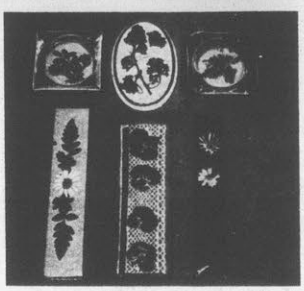
CREATE SUMMERTIME TREASURES







Clockwise: Make a necklace of rose petals or use dried weeds, leaves or flowers to decorate note paper, bookmarks and ash trays.

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

Weeds and seeds, flowers and leaves, all are nature's summer bounty.

Rose petals gathered from the backyard can be used to make a scented necklace that will retain its fragrance for years. The petals are picked after the full beauty of the flowers has been appreciated, then ground into a pulp and shaped into beads. Bright reds and pinks deepen to almost black in a dramatic color change.

Attractive and unusual jewelry can also be made by stringing dipped and dyed cantaloupe seeds. Food coloring is all that's needed to turn them every color of the rainbow. Then string them along with watermelon seeds for accent. Add orange seeds for variety. Mix in all-spice or stick cinnamon. The combination and design possibilities are unlimited.

For a unique and totally mystifying necklace that will change color by itself, use diced and dried raw potatoes. It will keep everybody wondering how you got the string through the pretty "stones." You'll have to try it to believe it.

Lovely gifts or appointments for your home can be made with flowers and leaves gathered from the yard. Even weeds can be used to make decorative plaques or unusual bookmarks. Plain writing paper can be turned into distinctive stationery, and inexpensive ash trays can be transformed into pretty pin dishes. Candles imbedded with pansies or clover leaves or Queen Anne's lace make beautiful one-of-a-kind gifts. The materials needed are a sponge, glue and a bar of paraffin.

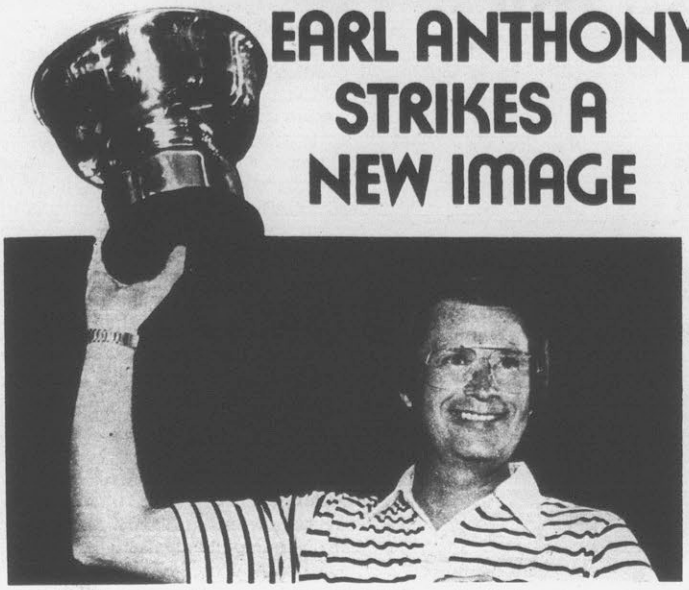
SUPERBOWLER EARL ANTHONY STRIKES A NEW IMAGE



Losing his crewcut hasn't cut into Earl Anthony's winning ways on tour.

By Barry Wilner

When an athlete tries to alter his image, public acceptance comes grudgingly — if at all. Terry Bradshaw still is troubled by a rep as a "dumb jock," for example, even though he is the only man to quarterback three Super Bowl winners.

One man who had no trouble getting the fans to accept his new image, however, is bowling's Earl Anthony. When you go from being overweight and ultraconservative to looking thin and modern, you're bound to be noticed.

That Anthony succeeded with his dull image in the first place is a credit to his skills as a bowler.

"It doesn't matter so much what you look like on the tour," he says. "If you can bowl, you'll do all right."

He is not one of your bred-in-the-cradle superstars. In fact, after an abortive attempt at the Professional Bowlers' Association tour in 1963 — "I didn't win a penny" — it was seven more years before Earl tried professional bowling again, at the age of 32.

Earl worked as a clerk in a grocery firm in Tacoma, Wash., for those seven years while honing his game. He bowled against better bowlers for money, sometimes losing $40 or $50. "Before I came back on the tour," he notes, "I practiced 250 games a week for three years."

In 1970 he returned to the tour. He had bowled well in the ABC Masters (a nationwide nontour event), which boosted his confidence: "I knew it was then or never, so I decided it would be then."

Earl would never be a grocery clerk again. In the mid-70's he turned pro, and won three straight bowler-of-the-year titles, in 1974, '75 and '76. In 1975 he became the first bowler to earn $100,000 in a season, after falling $415 short the previous season. In 1976 he won $110,833.

He captured six tour titles in 1974, set a PBA record for seven titles the next year and six more in 1976. Anthony won more money and titles than any man in bowling history. He was a smooth, methodical athlete — and oh, so dull.

Hardly a candidate for a heart attack.

But the constant grind of the year-round bowling tour and the pressures of a failing marriage — he was divorced last year — took its toll on Earl.

After his heart attack, Earl missed two months of the tour. When he returned to play in the Waukegan (Ill.) Open, he was nervous, but finished third. "One of the most gratifying tournaments of my career," he calls that return engagement. Since then, Earl has come all the way back to his winning ways, placing first in the Long Island Open in March.

Earl had begun losing weight, modernizing his wardrobe and styling his hair even before the heart attack. Now at 180 pounds, he is some 35 pounds under his former playing weight. His white shirts, dark pants and crewcut are gone. Once compared by the media to Tom Landry, the Dallas Cowboys' "Mr. Drab," he's chased for endorsements today.

Now a leader on the PBA circuit, serving as the association's vice president, Earl readily voices his views on bowling's status in the sports world. Golf and tennis, the two other major individual sports, offer far more in purses.

"We have to educate sponsors to the fact that bowling is a big-time sport with a large following. More than 50 million people bowl," he says. "But golf is associated with country clubs and it has the big-money atmosphere. So does tennis. We still have a big selling job to do, but we've come pretty far."

So, obviously, has Earl Anthony. FW

DRIVING TIPS FOR A SAFER TRIP

By Richard Wolkomir

You're driving down a highway when — abruptly — a car coming the other way swerves straight at you. In an emergency like this, do you really know what to do? For the answers to this and other driving emergencies we checked with the U.S. Department of Transportation, state police departments and other driving experts for their recommendations.

If the road is open, lightly tap the pedal. If it doesn't release, try toeing it up or have a passenger pull it up by hand. Don't reach down to try pulling it yourself — keep your eyes on the road.

If you must stop rapidly, turn the ignition to "off", not to "lock," which probably will freeze your steering wheel. Press the brake.

Brakes Fail. You start down a hill, but when you press the brake, your foot goes to the floor.

Most newer cars have separate braking systems so that only half your brakes are apt to go at a time. If your brake warning light comes on, test to see if you have some braking power left. If you do, proceed slowly to a service station.

But if your brakes fail completely, try pumping the pedal to build pressure. If that fails, switch your automatic transmission to a lower range or shift down with a manual transmission. Pull on the emergency or parking brake. Still moving? Sideswipe anything that will help slow you. Dented metal can be fixed.

Take your foot off the accelerator and carefully turn the wheel in the same direction the car is skidding. Meanwhile, rapidly pump the brakes — jamming them on will worsen the skid. When control returns, straighten out.

Steering Fails. Suddenly the wheel feels loose in your hands.

Stop, quickly. Cars could hit you from behind, so blow your horn, switch on emergency flashers, blink headlights, give hand signals that you're stopping.

Go to the right. Brake hard. Blow your horn, flash your lights. Go into the ditch or even off the road. Bumping a car traveling behind you in your direction, turning over off the shoulder... anything is better than a head-on crash.

Blowout. A tire blows, the steering turns mushy.

Grip the wheel firmly and brake gently. Crawl ahead to even ground; better to ruin a flat tire by driving on it than to change a tire on uneven ground.

Take your foot from the accelerator. Slowly brake — a panic stop risks a rear-end collision. By scrunching down, you may be able to see ahead through the crack at the bottom of your upraised hood. Or put your head out the side window to see. Switch on your flasher and hand signal to other drivers that you're stopping. Pull to the side.

If your car is momentarily floating, water pressure will make opening the door impossible. Roll down a window and crawl out. Power windows will quickly short out in water, so open them fast. If the windows are stuck, don't panic — water flowing into the car will equalize pressures so you can open the doors.

Hydroplaning. On a rainy day, your car's front wheels seem to float free of the road. They're hydroplaning, skating atop the layer of moisture on the road.

Take your foot off the accelerator. Keep the steering wheel steady. But don't jam on your brakes — it could trigger a spin. As your car slows, the hydroplaning will stop. FW

VEGETABLE-STUFFED ARTICHOKES

- 4 artichokes
- ¼ cup butter or margarine

- ¼ cup chopped celery
- ¼ lb. fresh mushrooms, chopped

4. In large skillet, melt butter. Add carrots, onion and celery, cook until vegetables are tender.

5. Add mushrooms, 1 teaspoon salt, pepper, lemon juice and dill. Cook until mushrooms are tender, about 5 minutes.

6. Sprinkle remaining ½ teaspoon salt over cavities of artichokes. Place ⅓ cup mixture in the center of each artichoke.

7. Place in baking pan; add water to cover bottom of pan. Cover with foil and bake in 375°F. oven 45 minutes. Makes 4 servings inches water to boiling; add lime slices, 1 teaspoon salt and artichokes.

3. In large saucepan or kettle, bring 3

4. Heat to boiling; reduce heat and simmer, uncovered, 30 to 40 minutes, until stem end of artichokes are tender when pierced with a fork and leaves pull easily from the base. Turn upside down to drain.

5. In large bowl, combine oil, vinegar, lime rind and juice, parsley, basil and remaining 1 teaspoon salt; mix well.

6. Add artichokes; spoon marinade over. Refrigerate 6 hours or overnight, if possible. Spoon marinade over artichokes occasionally. Makes 4 servings

2. Stand artichokes upright in deep saucepan. Pour in 1½-inches boiling water. Add 1 thick lemon slice and ¼ teaspoon salt for each artichoke.

3. Cover and cook about 30 minutes or until an outside leaf pulls off easily. Using 2 large spoons, remove artichokes. Drain upside-down. Serve hot with melted butter or hollandaise sauce, or cool with Caper Sauce as desired. Make desired amount

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

DO YOU LIKE YOURSELF?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. People with low self-esteem often get that way because of self-defeating concepts that may have little basis in fact.

2. The more attractive a person is, the higher his self-esteem is likely to be.

3. There is a special reason why good looks alone won't increase your self-esteem.

4. The way you sign your name tells how you feel about yourself.

5. There are other interesting things that reveal how well you like yourself — or to what extent you are not on the best of terms with yourself.

ANSWERS

1. True. National Institute of Public Health studies show that many people are lacking in self-esteem because of an unrealistic attitude toward themselves caused by the discrepancy between their ideal self-image and their actual self-image. Their ideal image sets such unreachable objectives that when they consistently fail to achieve them, they begin to downgrade themselves. And University of Florida studies show that a good opinion of oneself — and a charitable attitude toward occasional faults or frailties — tends to go hand-in-hand with good personality adjustment. A person who is too hard on himself isn't likely to give others a break, either. And a person who isn't on good terms with himself isn't apt to be on good terms with others.

2. False. University of Maryland studies reveal an interesting and unexpected finding. It is pointed out that, since attractive people are so much more likely to get favorable feedback from others and since they seem to be more effective and highly valued in so many situations, one would think that physically attractive individuals have, on the average, greater self-esteem than their less-attractive counterparts. This, however, was found to be far from the case. Results of this and other studies are cited in which self-esteem measures were obtained from hundreds of subjects whose physical attractiveness had been evaluated, and the results failed to reveal any relationship between people's attractiveness and how well they thought of themselves.

3. True. As the University of Maryland investigators observe, attractive people tend to find criticism more painful — i.e., take it more seriously. While less-attractive persons can write off unfavorable feedback as in part due to their unprepossessing appearance rather than their personalities or their abilities ("He is biased against me"), attractive individuals have to contend with being negatively evaluated in spite of their good looks ("If, despite my desirability, he says I'm not competent or 'with it,' I must be really awful"). And it is pointed out that "While beautiful people get more praise than do other people, praise is taken more seriously by the latter. The end result is similar self-esteem levels for the two groups."

4. True. A Guilford College (N.C.) study summarizes the results of research on the relationship between the amount of space a person uses in signing his name and his personality attributes: In general, these studies have produced a consistent set of findings, all pointing to a positive relationship between the size of one's signature and one's status, one's self-esteem and even one's temporary feelings of success or failure.

5. True. In psychological studies at Austin Peay State University (Tenn.), students were given three sheets of 8½ × 11-inch white paper with one of three words, MAN, WOMAN, MYSELF written on each sheet, and a No. 2 pencil and eraser. They were instructed "to draw the picture that belongs on each page," and not to draw stick figures or profiles. Results: "Subjects high in self-esteem drew significantly taller and larger area figures than did those of low self-esteem." The investigators note that these significant, positive relationships support previous findings that the size of the figure drawn reflects the level of self-esteem. FW

"Glass" your car!

Available only as a service by new car dealers for $100-$200. Now do it yourself in less than an hour for only $29.95.
(16 oz. bottle, enough for 3 cars.)

The elements vs. your once beautiful car...You've probably experienced it. Your treasured, shiny new automobile gradually fades and dulls. The once brilliant finish turns chalky and washed out. Even hours of waxing and buffing can't recapture that new car look...Until this new chemical science discovery...

Never wax your car again...GloSeal* is not anything like a simple wax or polish. It is actually a miracle polymer glass formulation serving as a powerful sealant and a beautiful exterior finish. When applied lightly to your car's finish and chrome its exclusive Electromolecular Action literally fuses it to the surface, locking in luster and a brilliant shine, almost laminating itself to your car for years...shutting out harmful sun, rain, pollution, salt, detergents and other elements that normally ruin the appearance and value of your car.

GloSeal* with PolyGlass* makes standard waxes and polishes obsolete!

Prevents oxidation from starting on new cars...and actually removes it from used models! GloSeal* is literally a Glass Shield that becomes part of your car's finish. Your new car's paint is simply not allowed to oxidize... for 3 Years! Then PolyGlass* it again for years more of protection. If your car is not new, GloSeal* will actually remove the oxidation, add gloss, and stop further oxidation for 1 year before you need to apply again. It is similar to covering your car with a non-penetrable coat of polyurethane.

Enamel spray paint can't even get through the clear glass shield...When this new professional automotive product is demonstrated to car dealers the "spray paint test" is used. GloSeal* is applied to a car's hood. After it dries it is wiped off and a can of enamel spray paint is sprayed directly on it, along with Magic Marker and other solvents. Then the observers are astonished as all of these are wiped off the hood with a mere cloth. Nothing, not even dirt and dust can adhere to the surface!

*Trademark

No rubbing, labor or buffing equipment needed... GloSeal* goes on easily and quickly. You wipe it on with a cloth, let it dry, and then wipe it off. It takes only a few minutes — less than an hour. The main ingredients are Polyglass* another substance similar to Teflon®, and a minimal amount of silicone to ease in wiping it on. (Also highly recommended for boats and airplanes). Between washes you need only wipe your car with a damp cloth to reactivate its brilliant dirt and dust-repelling shine.

The incredible GloSeal* "Brilliance Guarantee"... If after using it, you are not pleased for any reason, return the unused portion within 2 weeks of receipt for a prompt refund of the entire purchase price. Further, if GloSeal* does not protect your new car for 3 years or your used car (90 days old or more) for 1 year, write and tell us. We'll take your word for it, and return your small investment on a pro-rated basis. However, due to the extraordinary quality of this fully-tested product, we are confident that this would not be likely. (Note: GloSeal* is 100% safe to use — it can also be removed with mineral spirits).

QUIPS & QUOTES

CUT UP

When for guests we've roast chicken or turkey,
I'm a little bit cocky and perky.
You see, I'm the carver, the slicer,
And I don't know a job that is nicer.

The legs and the wings I first sever,
And say to myself, "That was clever."
Then I carve with great deftness and quickness
The white meat to just the right thickness.

My ego begins now to burgeon,
And I think of myself as a surgeon,
Except that the fowl — upper, nether —
I'll not have to sew back together.
—Richard Armour

HOLDOUTS

With rigid persistence,
Displaying what's called
Pockets of resistance.

Our next-door neighbor is a very discouraged dieter. The other day she said wistfully, "If I knew what makes the Tower of Pisa lean, I'd take some." —Dorothea Kent

THROUGH A CHILD'S EYES

We have a darling three-year-old granddaughter whose father is making the military his career. I've always believed there's too much "service" talk in the home. One evening our sleepy little granddaughter had just said her prayers; her eyes were drooping before the magic moment of sleep, and she asked quietly, "Grandma, what rank is Heavenly Father?"

WHAT IN THE WORLD

A New Twist On Dentistry

Going to the dentist is usually not much fun, or so most of us think. The belief is so strong, in fact, that last year 54 percent of all Americans avoided going at all. In an effort to make a trip to the dentist as pleasant and quick as possible, Drs. Jerrold Heller and Richard Bernstein created Dental World, a complete dental hospital in Garden City, Long Island.

"Many people don't go to the dentist because the work that needs doing often means they'll have to return, and this costs both time and money," says Dr. Heller. "Here at Dental World we have all our own labs and the latest equipment. Because we don't send things out, our costs are lower, our patients save time, and we can maintain control over the quality of our product."

While waiting for work to be completed in the lab, patients might watch a movie in the 50-seat theater or listen to music.

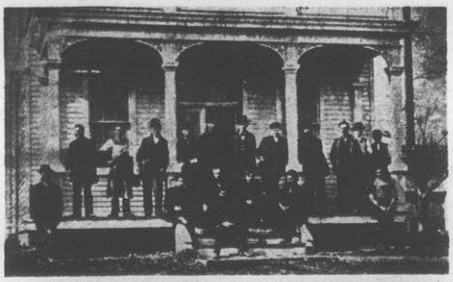
Nancy Crampton

Those with children can take advantage of a supervised playroom where toys and movies teach kids about preventing tooth decay. "Our concept is the dentistry of the future," says Dr. Heller, but it's here right now.

Dieting For Your Heart

A report issued by the American Heart Assoc. says that reducing cholesterol levels in the blood from infancy on would be more effective in preventing coronary artery disease than starting the process at age 40. Cholesterol is a waxy substance that accumulates in the blood vessels and reduces the blood flow, resulting in a condition called atherosclerosis. Since it is found only in animal-based products, a diet in which polyunsaturated fats such as corn oil are used will help keep cholesterol levels down. Dietary habits aimed at preventing cholesterol are something many doctors feel are best learned in childhood.

Living History



In 1879 Thomas Edison succeeded in inventing the light bulb in his laboratory in Menlo Park, N.J. (top right). The laboratory still exists and looks just as it did when Edison was experimenting there; it is not, however, in Menlo Park. Fifty years ago, Henry Ford, an unabashed admirer of Edison, moved the entire complex of six buildings to Dearborn, Mich., where they formed the core of Greenfield Village, now the home of 85 historic buildings. (The laboratory today, bottom right.)

Ford's dream was to preserve "history...as it was lived," and visitors can see artisans practicing crafts such as weaving, blacksmithing and tinsmithing. Here, also, are the homes of Noah Webster and Wilbur and Orville Wright. The only motor vehicles allowed are period pieces such as the Model A and the Model T. Also on the grounds is the Henry Ford Museum, a building that looks like a combination of Philadelphia's Independence Hall, Carpenter's Hall and City Hall. Ford copied the buildings after the Philadelphia city fathers declined to move Independence Hall to Dearborn!

Solar Power

"Solar energy is really the most viable renewable resource available today," says Dean Price, a Georgetown University architect. And to prove their commitment to the solar way of life, the university is planning to build a $27 million intercultural center that will be the largest solar-operated building in the world.

"We're trying to orchestrate our university's building plan so that it's a model of efficient energy use. This building is part of a larger, integrated community energy system designed to illustrate that solar is a feasible and practical answer to our energy needs," says Price.

"Although its primary use will be to serve the university, the center's energy will be available to serve the community as a standby source in cases of emergency," explained Price. "It's important to begin cutting back on our dependence on oil now, and what we're trying to do is get some of these renewable resource energy systems really going. There will come a time, in the not-too-far-off future, when we can rely exclusively on solar energy." So, let the sun shine in.

Poison Prevention

Children learn by experimenting, but in some cases their curiosity can be dangerous. Every year, nearly 10 million children in the U.S. accidentally ingest poison; for some, the results are fatal.

According to Dr. Anthony Temple, president of the American Assoc. of Poison Control Centers, many of the "poisons" are substances that few adults would consider dangerous. Plants, household cleaning products and vitamin and mineral combinations are three of the most common causes of poisoning.

"Eighty percent of our cases involve children, and the peak age is one or two," says the doctor. "And we've found that three out of four times a child gets into a product while the parent is using it."

Dr. Temple suggests that parents keep the number of the local poison control center posted by the phone, and recommends that parents not treat their child until they have received instructions from the center, since poisons require specific antidotes.

Lifestyles

Employment. American workers are receiving an average of $4,700 in employee benefits annually, says a study conducted by the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. In a survey of 748 companies, the Chamber found that for each hour on the job employees receive $2.26 in "fringe benefits" such as holiday and vacation pay, pension contributions and health and life insurance. Textile companies and hospitals are among the lower-paying industries, while petroleum and insurance companies rated high.

Family Life. A recent Harris poll indicates that most American men are more interested in home and hearth than in the swinging bachelor life. Sixty-three percent of the men questioned felt that "family life" was of prime importance, and 74 percent said that "sharing life with another person" was something they wanted to do.

Travel. If you plan to visit Washington D.C., this summer, take a tour of the Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum. There, the history of aerial technology is on display, from the Wright brothers' first plane to the Apollo spacecrafts. Also on exhibit is a film called "Living Planet," a giant-screen extravaganza on the wonders of the planet earth.
